Yard waste will be picked up Sept. 11 as normally scheduled.

Soldier Show — The 1995 Army Soldier Show will arrive at Fort Benning Sept. 2 for free performances at Sand Hill Theater No. 3.

A 2 p.m. performance will be exclusively for Infantry Training Brigade soldiers; a 7 p.m. performance will be open to all military members, retirees, Department of Defense civilians and their families. For more information, call 545-3909 or 545-1248.

Preschool — Patch Preschool still has openings for the 1995-1996 school year.

Children must be 3 by Sept. 1 and fully toilet trained to be admitted. The child must be registered at Central Registration prior to enrolling.

For information, call 687-2404.

Cub Scouts — All boys attending White Elementary School, grades 1 to 5, interested in joining Cub Scouts (returning scouts, those transferring in from other packs or first-time scouts) are invited to the Pack 271 Back-to-School Round-Up Tuesday at 7 p.m. in the White Elementary School cafeteria.

For more information, call Jay P. Byrne, cub master, at 687-5964.

Girl Scouts — Girl Scout registration will take place Thursday from 6 to 8 p.m. at Faith Middle School. Cost of registration is $6 per person.

The Fort Benning Girl Scouts are also in need of volunteers to help fill the following position: assistant service unit director, leaders, co-leaders, publicity, area coordinator, cookie manager, special events and other troop positions.

For more information, call Barbara Singleton at 689-7627.

Warrant officers' meeting — The Fort Benning Chapter "Forever Forward" will have its monthly meeting Sept. 6 at the Fort Benning Officers' Club from noon to 1 p.m.

All members are requested to attend, and nonmembers are invited. The agenda will include installation of new officers.

For more information, call Chief Warrant Officer 4 Jerry Hanchett at 544-7123 or 544-6005 or Chief Warrant Officer 3 Ted Walker at 689-4949.

Bodybuilding entertainment — The Sports Branch is seeking volunteer entertainment for a 15- to 20-minute intermission during the 1995 Fort Benning Open Bodybuilding Championships.

This year's event promises to be even more successful than last year's with the event opening its doors to the civilian sector as well. Spectatorship is expected to increase to more than 500 with more than 40 competitors.

If you would like to go public with your talent, call Christopher Winterman at 544-1747 or Leon Johnson at 685-9555. No preferences for a certain type of entertainment have been established. References and screening may be requested.

Watch found — A watch was found recently in the east parking lot of Infantry Hall, Building 4.

For more information, call Spc. Carl Box at 545-2218 or come by Room 111 in Infantry Hall.

Bowling league — The Officers' Wives' Club Bowling League starts its season Sept. 21. Bowlers of all experience levels are invited to join. The only requirement is OWC membership.

For more information, call Debbie Sittnick at 682-8715.

Explorer Scout Program — Law Enforcement Post 988, sponsored by the Military Police Activity, is looking for more members. If you know of a boy or girl interested in a law enforcement career or who just want to learn more about law enforcement, call Staff Sgt. Donnie Lucas at 545-1146. This program is open to anyone on or off post. Adult assistant leaders are welcome.

Boy Scouts need volunteers — The Fort Benning-Pataula District Boy Scouts of America experienced a loss of youth membership and adult volunteer leaders. Numerous positions are available, such as assistant cubmasters and scoutmasters, district committee members in training, programs, activities, publicity, camping and "at large" members who serve to coordinate specific events such as Christmas tree sales, fishing rodeo or Fall Campree.

If interested in volunteering, call Lt. Col. Mark S. Cloth at 544-3901 or 682-4440. For detailed information about scouting activities, call Frank Evans, at 327-2634.

Wives' club — The International Wives' Club invites interested persons to come and visit every first Tuesday of the month at Building 2462, Collins Loop, Soldiers' Plaza, for coffee, cake and information.

For more information, call Olga Kelly at 687-6471 or Andrea Pitts at 687-6937.

Tot Town offers programs — Tot Town Child Development Center opens at 5:30 a.m. Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays to accommodate children during physical training. Reservations are important, but drop-ins are welcome.

Tot Town is also open late Friday nights closest to pay days.

Reservations may be made by contacting Tot Town. Reservations can be made two weeks to 24 hours in advance. Call 689-8698 or 689-8772 for reservations or information.

Waiting spouses' support group — A waiting spouses' support group has been formed. The group is open to all spouses whose sponsors have departed for unaccompanied tours. The group meets at the Family Unit Network Center, Building 359.

Call the FUN Center, 545-5602, to sign up for one of the two group sessions.

OWC piano lessons — The Officers' Wives' Club School of Performing Arts offers piano lessons for ages 4 through adult. Lessons are available Monday though Friday for 30 to 45 minutes. For information, call 687-3537 or call Diane Swiecickz at 297-6524.

AA — The Fort Benning Alcoholics Anonymous group meets every Monday, Thursday and Saturday at 7 p.m. in the basement of the DCA, Building 241.

Until that day comes, however, Snoke needs all the labels, boxes and lids everyone can spare. Instead of throwing away the label with the can, she urged, slip the label off and save it as you'd save coupons, bringing it to the Commissary next shopping trip. Same with boxes, lids, UPC symbols and cash register tapes.

"Even one (label) can make a difference," Snoke said.

Officers' Wives' Club to host Olympic speaker

Officers' Wives' Club

With Columbus hosting the Olympic softball games next year and Atlanta hosting the '96 Summer Olympic, the Officers' Wives' Club has adopted the Olympics as its theme this year.

Carmen Cavezza, executive director of Columbus '96, will be the guest speaker for the club's luncheon at 11 a.m. Sept. 20 at the Officers' Club Regimental Room.

All officers' wives are invited. The social hour begins at 11 a.m. with entertainment from the Infantry Band. The host unit this month is the School of the Americas.

Lunch begins at 11:30 a.m. with a menu choice of either: Southwestern salad, rolls, tea, coffee and strawberry cheesecake for $8; or shrimp fettuccine, salad, rolls, tea, coffee and strawberry cheesecake for $14.

Reservations are to be made by noon Sept. 15. For reservations, call Brooke Gorski at 682-4913 if your last name begins with A through L; M through Z call Lori Bohnstedt at 682-8495.

Bohnstedt will also be taking reservations in Spanish, and there will be a Spanish interpreter at the luncheon.

Army youth gather to discuss issues

Fort Benning Youth Services

One hundred-sixty representatives from 65 installations and seven countries met Aug. 6 to 12 at the Rock Eagle 4-H Center in Eatonton, Ga., to provide senior Army leadership with the top issues facing Army youth worldwide. The top issues were as follows:

1. Teen center (tie)
2. Teen pregnancy (tie)
3. Teen employment
4. Improve facilities
5. Military Police harassment

Aaron Bauknight represented Fort Benning. Bauknight is a 15-year-old entering Columbus High School liberal arts magnet program this fall. He attended William H. Spencer High School where he played football, basketball and ran track. Bauknight was elected president of the freshman class and voted as "Mr. Freshman" for the 1994-95 school year while maintaining a 3.83 grade-point average.

In addition to developing key youth issues, participants were taught leadership and communication skills and were trained in the Army Family Action Plan process. Two representatives for the group, Christiaan Royer from Wurzburg, Germany, and Misha Charles from Selfridge Air National Guard Base, Mich., were elected to represent the Army youth worldwide at the Army Family Action Plan Conference Oct. 23 to 27 in Tyson's Corner, Va.

Quintella Thorn, recreation specialist at Fort Benning, will be working with local youth to develop action plans to help resolve one or possibly more of these top issues at our installation.

For more information on how you can assist with Army youth issues, contact Thorn at 545-7945 or stop by Youth Services, Building 1056.

Blood drive

Pfc. George M. Petts III waits as American Red Cross phlebotomist Amelia Lewis performs her duties during a blood drive Aug. 18. Petts is with Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 75th Ranger Regiment, and said he donates whenever he can. The B+ donor was among the relatively small number of donors to turn out for the drive, conducted at Infantry Hall.

ask the judge

Office of the Staff Judge Advocate

Q: I recently purchased a used car from a person who is not a soldier. When I went to register the vehicle in Georgia, tax office personnel told me that I needed to pay the ad valorem tax. I showed them the serviceman's affidavit that I picked up at the Staff Judge Advocate office, but they still said I owed the tax. I thought that all I had to do is show the affidavit and I would not have to pay the tax. I ended up paying more than $200 in tax. Can the state do this?

A: You are correct when you state that typically service members do not have to pay ad valorem tax on their vehicles. This exemption from tax is based upon more than just filling out an affidavit.

In order to qualify for the exemption from taxation, a soldier must show that the vehicle was properly registered, titled, all taxes had been paid in the former state of residence, that the vehicle is solely owned by the service member and that they are not a domiciliary of the state of Georgia. Domicile is defined as the place where a person has his true, fixed, permanent home and principal establishment, and to which whenever he is absent he has the intention of returning.

Domicile is a legal concept that can best be described with an example. Let's say that you were living in the state of Ohio before you came on active duty. You have parents and family in Ohio and you intend to go back to Ohio after you leave the service. You are a domiciliary of the state of Ohio. Now let's take the same facts as before, but you buy a house in Columbus, Ga., you register to vote in Georgia, and you decide you want to retire and live in beautiful Columbus, Ga. You now are a domiciliary of Georgia.

As long as you meet the described requirements, than you are entitled to the exemption and you must complete the service member's affidavit available from the Legal Assistance Division of the Office of the Staff Judge Advocate. In order to complete the affidavit, you need to bring your military ID card and a copy of an end of the month leave and earnings statement dated in the last 90 days.

In your case, assuming you have met the above described requirements, in order to register the vehicle and get license plates, you still must pay the tax on the vehicle. The Official Code of Georgia Section 48-5-471 states that the ad valorem taxes are due on the first of January and are payable within the first four months of the year depending on the first letter of the owner's last name, or sooner if the vehicle is sold. When you purchased the vehicle, the tax was already owed and the state had a lien on the vehicle to collect the taxes. You cannot get license plates until you pay the tax. If the taxes had already been paid by the current owner, then you would not have had to pay the tax. You may want to attempt to collect the amount of the tax from the person who sold you the vehicle. When you purchase your next used car, you should attempt to negotiate the deal so that the seller pays the ad valorem tax. Insist on written proof that the vehicle had been registered and that the ad valorem tax had been paid.

Should you have any questions about this or other legal matters, you may make an appointment to speak with an attorney in the Legal Assistance Division, located at Building 5, Main Post, corner of Vibbert and Sigerfoos. The phone number is 545-3281 or 545-3282.

Military Police Activity

This week's hot topic is loud music—the kind of music that vibrates your windows to the staccato beat of the bass. Music so loud that you are unable to converse with a fellow passenger. Music so loud that you can't hear the sirens from an approaching emergency vehicle. Music so loud you have to listen, even if it's not your favorite singer. Post policy memorandom No. 94-64 prohibits the playing of music that can be heard more than 15 feet away.

The following entries were extracted from the Fort Benning Military Police Blotters. Such entries may be incomplete and do not determine the guilt or innocence of any person.

• A sergeant first class and spouse were charged with larceny of nonappropriated fund property after removing items from a display shelf in a store hiding them in a diaper bag. They then exited the store without rendering proper payment.

TAKE A BITE OUT OF CRIME®

The Military Police apprehended them and transported them to the MP station where they were further processed, issued identification card suspension orders, suspension of post exchange privilege orders and released on their own recognizance.

• A civilian was charged with reckless driving when he was observed improperly changing lanes and traveling at speeds in excess of 90 mph causing several motorists to take emergency actions to avoid collisions.

He then tried to exit the road and make a u-turn to reenter the road when he was apprehended and transported to the Military Police station where he was further processed and released.

Other activities include 10 traffic accidents, one case of driving under the influence, one case of shoplifting and seven cases of larceny.

Remember to help "Make Our Post The Best — Give Crime Arrest." Report any activity that seems wrong or out of place to the Military Police Station at 545-5223 or 545-5224 or the "Crime In Progress" line at 545-5222.

Claims coverage changes

By George R. Smawley
Office of the Staff Judge Advocate

The U.S. Army claims system provides limited coverage for losses that occur in government quarters when the loss or damage is due to fire, flood, hurricane or other unusual occurrences, including theft and vandalism. The legal authority for such payments, the Personnel Claims Act, is a gratuitous payment statute which is not intended to be a substitute for private insurance.

As a general rule, after Sept. 1 the government will only reimburse losses that occur at quarters. Vandalism and theft that occur elsewhere on the installation will no longer be considered. Some of the exceptions to this rule include losses to a vehicle used for the convenience of the government, and vehicle losses in areas where the command has directed they be parked pursuant to a deployment, etc.

It is important for service members residing in government quarters to understand that the limited protection offered by the Personnel Claims Act is usually insufficient to fully reimburse them for their losses.

Consequently, the Claims Office strongly recommends that service members consider purchasing renters insurance from a private insurance company. In this way, the service member will have the benefit of both the Personnel Claims Act as well as any additional coverage that a commercial policy would provide.

In addition, property is subject to annual depreciation rates that can run as high as 30 percent for clothing, 20 percent for toys including Nintendo and Sega Genesis game systems and 10 percent for televisions and electronics. That means that for every dress or pair of jeans that is two years old, the government may pay as little as 40 percent of the amount required to replace them. Many private insurance plans, on the other hand, will pay the full replacement cost.

While the tragedy of a substantial loss due to fire, flood, burglary or other unusual occurrence is impossible to predict, individuals can plan ahead and protect themselves against such losses for as little as $20 a month with a renters insurance policy. Examiners at the Claims Office have dealt with individuals with and without this added protection; those with supplemental insurance invariably receive greater compensation for their loss.

For more information, call the Fort Benning Claims Office, Office of the Staff Judge Advocate, at 545-2285.

Keep eye on elders during summer

Georgia Department of Human Resources

As the heat wave continues, public health authorities are urging people to check on their aging parents or elderly neighbors.

Seniors are the group most often affected by extreme weather conditions. They may experience heat stroke and other physical problems. Those who live on limited incomes may not have air conditioning or access to a fan.

Many local governments and non-profit agencies have made special efforts to help the elderly in their communities during this severe weather. Anyone who knows a senior citizen needing assistance dealing with the heat should call the national Elder Care Locator at (800) 677-1116 to get a number for the local Area Agency on Aging (AAA).

The AAA can provide resources and information to help senior citizens beat the heat.

MACH nurse recognized for excellence

Martin Army Community Hospital

Martin Army Community Hospital presented one of its nurses with the 1995 Nurse of the Year Award during the recent National Nurses Week.

Robert G. Knight, who received the award, has been instrumental in the hospital's automation, quality improvement, disease prevention and patient education programs, said Sgt. Lynn McPhatten, noncommissioned officer in charge of the Pediatric Clinic.

He worked extensively to revise and edit the Pediatric Medical Adviser, which is a handbook for parents, McPhatten said.

Robert G. Knight is the Martin Army Community Hospital 1995 nurse of the year.

Knight retired from the Army in 1984 after 22 years, and he entered civil service Dec. 7, 1987.

Martin Army Community Hospital is proud of Knight and congratulates him on this award that recognizes his talent, motivation, innovation and clinical excellence, said Lt. Col. Roger Strickland, officer in charge of the Pediatric Clinic.

Fort Benning personnel receive certification

Directorate of Contracting

Two Fort Benning civilian employees recently passed the examination for the certified associate contract manager's designation.

Benjamin F. Maxham and Sandra D. Mack prepared for the examination by attending a series of seminars from November through February given by the Follow Me Chapter of the National Contract Management Association

Maxham is currently assigned to the Directorate of Combat Development and Mack works with the Directorate of Contracting. .

The test was given in April. It consisted of a six-hour session covering questions on all aspects of the federal acquisition regulation.

The certification is a nationally recognized testament of expertise and experience in contracting and acquisition. It signifies a level of proficiency that places Maxham and Mack on a level above most of the 6,000 Army civilians currently in the contracting series.

The presentation of the actual certifications will take place in early fall at the local chapter meeting.

Promotion Sunday — The Fort Benning Sunday School will observe Promotion Sunday this Sunday morning. All Sunday School students will report to their regular classes at 9:30 a.m., and during the hour, those being promoted will receive their promotion certificates and will be escorted to their new classes.

The Fort Benning Sunday School welcomes anyone desiring to learn more about the Bible and about the "Good News." New students may register in Building 2517 on Sunday mornings or may call the Religious Education Center, 545-4715, during the week to register.

Spanish Mass — The Spanish Mass that was conducted at the Main Post Catholic Chapel at 1 p.m. Sundays will now be conducted at 10:30 a.m. Sundays at Regimental Road Chapel.

The non-Spanish Mass formerly conducted at the Regimental Road Chapel is discontinued. For more information, call 545-1452.

Spiritual weekend — Plans are progressing for the Spiritual Fitness Weekend, Sept. 8 to 10. Services will be at 7 p.m. each evening in Marshall Auditorium.

Chaplain "Sonny" Moore, assigned as Protestant cadets chaplain at the U.S. Military Academy, is recognized throughout the Army as a dynamic speaker and has had varied experience as a civilian pastor as well as a chaplain.

Curtis Bridgeman, who will provide a blend of traditional and contemporary gospel music, has an extensive background in music study, performance and recording. He currently sings with the Voices of Liberty at Disney World in Orlando, Fla.

Outdoor Mass — The Catholic community of Fort Benning will celebrate an outdoor Mass and parish breakfast Sept. 10 at 10 a.m. The Mass will be celebrated at Gowdy Field on Main Post, followed by breakfast at the Field of Four Chaplains.

For more information, call 545-3461 or 544-9019.

Lunch-hour Bible study — A lunch-hour Bible study and fellowship will be Wednesdays at noon at the U.S. Army Infantry School, Infantry Hall, Building 4, Room 453. The Bible study is open to all soldiers and civilians. Bring a sack lunch.

For information, call 545-4622.

Adult study — A new subject of study for adults, titled "God's Principles of Finance," will begin Sunday at 9:30 a.m. at the Fort Benning Sunday School.

The class will meet in Building 2521.

For more information, call Steve Russell at 561-3348 or Bill Putman at 545-4715.

Chapel jobs — The Fort Benning Chaplain Office is interviewing for contractors for pianists, organists, watchcare workers, bus drivers, parish coordinators, custodians, choir directors and a cantor.

Interested personnel can call Staff Sgt. Phyllis Swinson at 545-1934.

Sunday School — Sunday School is located in the Religious Education Center, Building 2517, and continues through the summer.

Classes are for 2-year-olds through adults. Free child care is available at Sunday School for children younger than 2 whose parents are either attending or teaching classes.

If you need bus transportation, call the Religious Education Center, Monday through Friday at 545-4715.

Musician needed — A musician is needed for Soldiers' Chapel at Sand Hill. Applicant must be able to play traditional and contemporary music for a 9 a.m. choir rehearsal and 9:45 a.m. Protestant worship service. Interested personnel should contact Chaplain Williams at 544-0102.

Pianist or organist needed — A pianist or organist is needed for the Spanish Protestant service at Sightseeing Road Chapel.

Musicians who are interested can contact Staff Sgt. Phyllis Swinson at 545-1934.

Protestant worship service — The Martin Army Community Hospital general Protestant service times are now Sundays at 6 p.m. The MACH Chapel is located next to the Army and Air Force Exchange Service in the basement of the hospital.

Chaplains ready to assume roles as counselors

By Lisa M. Hibbert
Bayonet staff writer

Sometimes in life people may have problems and decide to seek the counsel of the clergy.

Up until now Fort Benning was limited in the counseling services that it had to offer.

This changed when the Family Life Chaplain Center, in conjunction with Columbus College and the Pastoral Institute, developed a master's degrees program in family and marital counseling

Six chaplains — Maj. Philip T. Guistwite, Maj. Ted W. Nichols, Maj. Richard D. King, Capt. Wilbert C. Harrison, Capt. Randy P. Holmes and Capt. Johnny D. Messer — conducted more than 400 client contact hours of pastoral, marriage and family therapy for soldiers and family members at Fort Benning in order to graduate at The Infantry Center Chapel Aug. 16.

"Before now, the chaplains had to go to Fort Riley, which is a part of FORSCOM (Forces Command)," said Chaplain (Col.) Calvin H. Sydnor III, Training and Doctrine Command staff chaplain. "The program here is a first for TRADOC."

The chaplains learned how to conduct confidential counseling sessions from their classes at Columbus College and the Pastoral Institute.

Through hands-on-training at the Family Life Center, the chaplains were able to benefit from the four two-way mirrors, five cameras, seven conference rooms and the set of clay figurines called "little guys" that express individual emotions.

"Fort Benning provided housing on post and supplied the students with logistical material," said Chaplain (Lt. Col.) Robert R. Davidson, director of the U.S. Army Family Life Chaplain Training Program. "The Department of the Army covers the majority of the expenses."

By providing certified family and marital counseling here, each chaplain that completed the program saves the Civilian Health and Medical Program of the Uniformed Services $41,000 and saves soldiers $6,600 in out-of-pocket expense.

"To round off the gender of the staff, two female students from Columbus College will be interning at the Family Life Center," Davidson said. "Auburn University will have a male student who will intern here also."

"Through the training we provide here, it helps the students as well as the center to get better and better," Davidson said.

USAMU soldier wins rifle nationals

By Marlene Tikal
U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit

Of the 1,221 marksmen taking positions on the firing line at Camp Perry, Ohio, only one could emerge as the National Service Rifle Champion.

Understandably then, it's easy to see why Spc. Tobie Tomlinson of the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit's Service Rifle Team was slightly skeptical as he donned his shooting gear — a heavy sweatshirt layered by a 15-pound canvas jacket that absorbed his heartbeat and steadied his aim — in preparation to test his shooting skills.

As Tomlinson figured, the competition was tough. The Marine Corps, Navy, Coast Guard, Air Force and civilian shooting teams had all assembled their finest marksmen. Even Tomlinson's teammates — Sgt. 1st Class Kenneth Gill, the 1994 National Service Rifle champion; Sgt. Lewis Tippie, the National Long-Range Service Rifle champion; and Sgt. Lance Dement, the Colt Cup Match winner, to name a few, were preparing to battle for the title.

But what Tomlinson didn't realize at that moment, and wouldn't know until the end of the four-day-long competition, was that he was the toughest of them all, that through perseverance and having faith in his abilities, he was to become the 1995 National Service Rifle champion.

If Tomlinson — a soft-spoken 23-year-old strawberry blond with a quick smile and easy-going temperament that's atypical of most hard-driven professional marksmen — seemed the unlikely hero, it's something he readily admits.

"I can't say that I was the best shooter out there," Tomlinson said. "I just made the least mistakes."

That's quite an admission for the Jackson, Miss., native, who, before enlisting in the Army in 1991, had won many service rifle competitions in and around his hometown. But, after Tomlinson became a member of the elite USAMU Service Rifle Team, he discovered the competition grew harder and the expectations got higher.

Spc. Tobie Tomlinson of the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit's Service Rifle Team trains in preparation for the Nationals at Camp Perry, Ohio.

"We drive our shooters because we want them to win," Staff Sgt. Carl Dooley, a Service Rifle Team coach, said. "It's a lot of pressure on them."

It's a lot of pressure not only magnified in the day-to-day doings at the USAMU, but on the many roads the Service Rifle Team travels down to participate in any number of matches in any town, anywhere in the nation.

While on home base, team members spend an average of eight hours per day, five days per week, on the range honing their skills. Through trial and error, coaching and a little positive reinforcement each marksman is polished to within a razor's edge of his abilities.

Those abilities are then tested as the Service Rifle Team takes to the road, traveling to regional competitions, some as near as Okeechobee, Fla., others as far as Twenty-nine Palms, Calif.

Then it's back to the USAMU, where a little bit more polish — and a little bit more shine later — the Service Rifle Team is prepared for a competition as significant as the Nationals at Camp Perry.

"We train all year-round in preparation for this competition," Tomlinson said. "The Nationals are what makes or breaks us as shooters."

In Tomlinson's case, the Nationals proved to be, so far, the pinnacle of his career. For despite his pre-Army performance, competitively, he lagged behind his USAMU teammates — winning matches here and there, but not making the one shot that propelled him into expert-marksman status.

Therefore, another reason for Tomlinson's skepticism.

"There was no time (during the competition) that I thought I would become the 1995 National Service Rifle Champion," Tomlinson said. "I was just concentrating on doing the best I could."

Tomlinson's best, which didn't win him any of the three 800 Aggregates that comprise the Nationals, was good enough to win him the greater glory.

"I fired consistently well in all three events," Tomlinson said. "So while someone else won the individual matches, and then turned around and didn't fire as well in the other matches, I had the highest overall score."

It was the highest score that won Tomlinson the highest honor. Not only from his teammates, who were full of pride for their unlikely hero, but from all those, like Tomlinson, who try, fall short of the mark and try again — only to triumph in the end.

Pros have problems

By Brian R. Voller
Bayonet staff writer

We all know, despite how television may make it appear, that professional athletes are as human as every other person.

So knowing this, we should also know that athletes are bound to screw up now and then — whether it be with the law or with the sport. But recently it has come to my attention that some athletes, who have really screwed up everything, are still being heralded as true sports heroes.

The most recent being the ever brutish Mike Tyson.

If you don't know already, Tyson showed Peter McNeeley what a true boxer can do to a loud-mouthed nobody by beating McNeeley's face through the back of his head.

What I'm concerned about is why Tyson was ever allowed back into the ring in the first place. The man was found guilty of rape and sentenced to prison. Why should we watch Tyson get paid $25 million to fight after he committed a felony?

If I had children, I wouldn't want them watching the news night after night, listening to the radio or, heaven forbid, watching the fight and hearing the sportscasters putting Tyson on a pedestal.

True, he is one of the greatest fighters to ever live, but he was also found guilty of an unspeakable act of violence. The man should not be allowed to fight professionally anymore. Let him go hang with the rest of his rapist buddies struggling to get work because of the felony conviction on their records.

The other so called sports hero, and this one I can't figure out for the life of me, is Darryl Strawberry. How many chances do the major leagues want to give this guy anyway? He is a drug-happy loser, and he shouldn't be allowed to step into a baseball stadium much less get himself a nice juicy paycheck before he checks back into rehab again.

Unlike Tyson, Strawberry can't boast about a strong comeback to old greatness. Since his return to the playing field, he has been mediocre at best.

If the pros want to keep Strawberry around, I can't stop them, but I would at least like to know why. Pete Rose, who was truly a great baseball player, got blackballed off the face of baseball for illegal gambling. Is severe drug abuse not in the same league with gambling, if not worse?

Tyson and Strawberry are being given chances they shouldn't be given. They have proved that they shouldn't be allowed to be in the public eye any longer. Yet, they still have their multi-million dollar contracts to drool over, and they still have legions of fans who want to see them.

The worst aspect of this chaos comes from the children. Unfortunately, we live in a society where children have very few people to look up to anymore. It's the professional athletes who are more and more becoming the role model for our youth. Isn't it sad that these men are giving the children so little to look up to anymore.

At least Mickey Mantle gave us something to think about before he died. After years of alcoholism, it took death to make him realize this statement, "To all the kids out there, play like me; don't be like me."

Exactly.

Cruise-A-Matics place third in Atlanta

By Brian R. Voller
Bayonet staff writer

The Cruise-A-Matics Rugby team placed third in its final sevens tournament of the summer in Atlanta, Aug. 12.

The Cruise-A-Matics, which is a combination of military personnel and civilians from the surrounding Columbus area, went to the Atlanta tournament and brought home three wins and one loss.

The tournament began with a strong performance by the Cruise-A-Matics as they soundly beat the Atlanta Renegades.

From there they went on to beat the Cherry Point team, which was a team made up mostly of Marines.

Kevin Hyneman, Company D, 4th Ranger Training Battalion company commander, said the mix of the rangers on the Cruise-A-Matics and the Marines on Cherry Point made for the most physical game of the tournament.

"We played hard, and we played to win," Hyneman said. "The rangers on our team wouldn't fall to the Marines so we ended up pounding each other for a while. We turned out to be the better team and walked away with a hard-fought victory."

The third game put the Cruise-A-Matics on the field with Old White II, who fell to the same end as the first two teams the Cruise-A-Matics played.

It wasn't until the semifinal match that the Cruise-A-Matics suffered their first defeat. They faced the sister team of their previous win, Old White I.

"Old White I was a really strong team," Hyneman said. "They went out and they played a much better game then we did."

The entire tournament was won by the Bristol Team out of England, which is currently touring the southeast United States.

Hyneman said he believes the Cruise-A-Matics had their best game of the summer season.

"We played pretty well considering this is technically our off season," Hyneman said. "We showed that we are ready for the upcoming fifteens (15-player) season, and I think we'll do really well."

The style of rugby the Cruise-A-Matics have been playing this summer is called sevens play. It differs from the regular game of rugby because it is played with seven people on a side instead of 15.

Sevens play is a quicker style of playing because it is played on the same size field as normal rugby.

The Cruise-A-Matics will begin their regular season tournament play Sept. 9 in Atlanta. They will be facing the Atlanta Renegades once again.

SF officer chosen for Armed Forces Triathlon Team

U.S. Army Special Operations Command

FORT BRAGG, N.C. — Capt. Michael Hagen, Army Special Forces at the U.S. Army Special Forces Command at Fort Bragg, N.C., was the only Army male to be chosen for the Armed Forces Triathlon Team during the military triathlon championship in Hammond, Ind., in July.

Hagen has been competing in triathlons for six years, and he said he contributes his success to the work ethics and time management skills he has learned in the Army.

For the military triathletes who competed, this race determined the team to represent the United States at the Council of International Military Sports Triathlon Championships in Rome Sept. 12. Only the top five males and three females can make the team.

The triathlon consisted of an 11.5-kilometer swim, 40-kilometer bike ride and 10-kilometer run.

"We arrived in Hammond, Ind., after a 15-hour, two-day drive from Fayetteville, N.C.," Hagen's wife, Eva, said. "This was the qualifying race for the world military championship in Rome. You can imagine how nervous and determined most athletes were."

> "He didn't even realize he had finished fifth. It took several minutes for him to grasp the significance of the race."
> — Eva Hagan
> Wife of Capt. Michael Hagan

The race started with the first wave reserved for the military triathletes. The first event called on the athletes to swim in Wolf Lake where Hagen finished in seventh place, completing the first transition in 24:16.

"Form is the most important thing about swimming," Hagen said. "I did not feel strong during the swim and bike."

The 40-kilometer bike course was over a six-lane freeway through the industrial areas of northwest Indiana. Losing more time during the bicycle leg, he dropped back to 15th place, 10 places back from the position he needed to qualify for the U.S. team. Hagen completed the bicycle and second transition in 1:02:47.

"Bicycling is my worst event, which is more than half the race. I focus on quality not quantity when I train on my bike," Hagen said.

The 10-kilometer run is Hagen's strongest event and the foundation for his start into triathlons. He passed 10 people during his 34:43 run time, and crossed the finish line in fifth place with a total time of 2:01:43.

"Mike was delirious and near heat exhaustion, at the end of the race," Eva said. "He did not realize he had finished fifth. It took several minutes for him to grasp the significance of the race."

The International Military Triathlon Championship will be part of the World Military games this year. The games take place every four years before the Olympics. The Council of international Military Sport organizes the games consisting of 7,000 athletes from 78 countries worldwide.

Army 10-Milers prepare for Washington DC competition

By Brian R. Voller
Bayonet staff writer

The Sports Branch, Community Recreation Division, is preparing to send two teams, one male and one female, to the Army 10-Miler Oct. 15 in Washington, D.C., to represent Fort Benning.

Each team will consist of five members, who will be selected during a qualification period. One alternate will be selected for each team in case of emergency dropouts.

The race will begin at the Pentagon. Runners will proceed across the Potomac River into Washington, D.C., through the Potomac River Parks, then back across the Potomac River to finish at the Pentagon.

More than 300 military units and installations and 6,400 runners are expected to compete. Fort Benning teams have won this event twice in the last four years.

The Army 10-Miler is sponsored by the Army Recreation Services and the Association of the United States Army.

Analyzing water key to catch

By Earl Bentz and Steve Price
Outboard Marine Corporation

"Catching bass isn't really the difficult part. What's hard is finding them, and the best way I've learned to do that is by analyzing the water," said Larry Nixon, a former guide, winner of more than $1 million in professional tournament prizes and a member of the Evinrude Outboards Pro Staff.

"There are many things to consider when you analyze water," he said. "These things can actually change during a day. Your mind has to act like a computer, constantly considering input about the conditions you're fishing."

Among the most important factors Nixon said he considers when he is analyzing water are clarity, depth, cover and the shoreline.

"The shoreline or the banks are especially important," Nixon said. "Because, the more irregularities along that shore, the more likely bass will be using it. Bass do not utilize straight, featureless banks unless that is all that's available.

"They prefer cuts, points, riprap, logs, culverts, nearby creek bends, stumps, changes in rock, anything that changes or is different from its surroundings; and the more variety of things you can find, the better your chances of locating bass."

A major reason irregular shorelines are important to bass is because they're also important to baitfish, Nixon said. Practically all freshwater baitfish are shallow water oriented because they find both food and shelter in the nooks and crannies of an irregular bank.

"And, as every bass fisherman knows, when baitfish are present in an area, bass are not far behind," said Nixon.

The Arkansas angler also said he believes water clarity is an important consideration when looking for bass.

"When water is dingy or murky, bass will be more shallow," Nixon said. "In clear water the fish will be deeper, and they won't be around the shorelines unless there is abundant cover, such as a lot of logs and brush," Nixon said.

Another thing Nixon cautioned anglers to be aware of during the warm weather months is what is known as an algae bloom. This is when plankton reproduces and becomes so thick the water changes to a deep greenish color and has what appears to be sediment floating in it.

"A certain amount of algae or plankton is necessary to support the food chain for baitfish," Nixon said. "When too much plankton is present, it's usually time to move to a different part of the lake because fishing won't be that good there."

Top-water lures increase strikes

By Earl Bentz and Steve Price
Outboard Marine Corporation

When anglers have to fish in muddy water, most choose either a spinnerbait or jig, but occasionally topwater lures bring surprising results, Guy Eaker, professional bass tournament angler said.

"Muddy water usually means rising water, and when the water rises, bass rise with it," Eaker said. "Which makes a surface lure like a buzz bait or popper a good lure choice."

Eaker, a former guide on South Carolina's Santee-Cooper lakes, remembers one particular week on those lakes when he broke not only lines but also rods battling monster bass.

"In muddy water, lures that have a lot of vibration generally produce the best," he said. "Normally, anglers use spinnerbaits, because they're fishing pretty thick cover and those lures are relatively weedless.

"Buzz baits are not quite as weedless, but they do create a lot of commotion. Bass don't have any trouble finding them."

Eaker also suggested anglers consider using a popper or chugger top-water lure in muddy water conditions.

"One of my favorite places to use a lure like this is on points or shorelines that have become muddy because of boat traffic," Eaker said. "I'll make a cast into the muddy water and work the lure out to where the water becomes a little more clear."

Eaker said it's important to work poppers and chuggers with a lot of action so bass can locate them, since the fish can't locate the lures by sight.

"If there is visible cover, such as bushes or stumps, you'll normally do better by working your lures close to them, too, just as you would if the water were clear," he said.

Even in extremely high, flooding muddy water, bass will hit topwater lures, the South Carolina pro continues. One of the best places to look for fish under these conditions is around vegetation, especially large grass beds.

"I believe the vegetation helps filter some of the silt out of the water so the bass can breathe a little easier," he said. "A spinnerbait may catch these bass, but a topwater lure will.

"The advantage you have with a surface lure like a buzz bait is that very few fishermen will be using one, so the bass probably won't be conditioned to seeing it."

Colored lures not necessary for catching big fish

By Earl Bentz and Steve Price
Outboard Marine corporation

If you've ever wondered why bass often seem to show a preference for one lure color over another, professional tournament angler Randy Dearman said he has some advice — stop worrying about it.

"One of the gentlemen fishermen absolutely insisted on using a strawberry colored worm," Dearman said. "While the other chose a black-grape color that I'd been having a lot of success using.

"The client using the strawberry worm caught a six-pound bass on his second cast, the largest fish any of us caught all day, but it was the only fish he caught on that lure color.

"We caught about 20 bass on the black-grape plastic worms before he finally changed colors."

Normally, Dearman said, anglers chose brighter lure colors in dingy and off-colored water, and darker or more natural colors in clear water.

"This is a good basic rule to follow, but it doesn't always make sense," Dearman said. "For example, chartreuse is one of the most popular and effective colors for both spinnerbaits and crankbaits, but it isn't a natural color at all.

"Are the bass hitting chartreuse lures because they really prefer that color, or are they hitting because it's the only color we're using?"

For many anglers, Dearman said, lure color is based on confidence which is extremely important in fishing. The confidence is not so much in the color, however, but in the lure itself.

"I think the more experience a bass fisherman has, the more he tends to move in this direction," Dearman said. "His color selection tends to be the natural colors that more closely approximate those of the bait the lure is imitating.

"In East Texas in the spring, for example, we use a lot of red lures because the lures we're using then imitate crawfish, which are red. At other times and with other lures we'll use silvers and golds that resemble shad."

Dearman said he is one of the first to acknowledge, however, that bass do have good eyesight and that they can distinguish different colors. This has also been proven in laboratory tests conducted by University of Oklahoma biologist Dr. Loren Hill.

"Even when the bass can see our lures well, there are still times they appear to want a particular color," Dearman said. "There is no real explanation for it.

"That's why manufacturers make lures in so many different colors, and why fishermen buy them."

Citizen soldiers take on Officer Candidacy School

By Pam Newbern
3rd Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment

The 40 officer candidates had a blast.

Literally.

As simulated grenades and artillery fell around them, the members of Company A, 3rd Battalion (Officer Candidate School), 11th Infantry Regiment, were forced to defend their perimeter and evacuate several severely wounded soldiers.

It was all part of Capstone, the last field exercise facing the class before its graduation Aug. 16.

Between Aug. 5 and 9, the candidates — all members of the National Guard or Reserve — endured everything their training, assessment and counseling officers and noncommissioned officers could throw at them (including simulated grenades). The five-day exercise was conducted at sites near Detrow Hill on central Fort Benning.

During the exercise, the candidates conducted reconnaissance at proposed defensive sites and beat off several "attacks" from the opposing forces.

"It's a culmination of the 10-week training cycle," said candidate Thomas Mehl, Michigan National Guard. "We've all looked forward to it with mixed emotions. It symbolizes the end of our training to become second lieutenants. We want to get it over with. It's a passing."

Candidate Don Brewer II, Washington State National Guard, said the training gave him an opportunity to learn about different aspects of the Army. Much of the training OCS candidates receive is focused on infantry skills.

"Most of us are not branched infantry," he said as he helped dig a three-man fighting position. "It gives us a whole different prospective."

The candidates found themselves having to react constantly during the exercise. Sleep was almost nonexistent at times, as the candidates moved from site to site, set up their defensive perimeter and fought off attacks.

One such attack took place on the final morning of the exercise, shortly after dawn. The opposing forces, 4th Platoon, Co. B, 3rd Bn., 11th Inf. Regt., conducted a raid while the TAC officers and noncommissioned officers hit the candidates with a fireworks display of simulated grenades, artillery and smoke canisters.

Between the smoke and the constant shrill sound of the simulators, it was sometimes hard to determine who was friend and who was foe. The attacking platoon found itself breaching a concertina wire obstacle and trading blank fire with the securely-dug-in members of Co. A. Members of both forces wore multiple integrated laser engagement system gear, a computerized laser system that allows students to be "shot" with lasers without incurring real injuries.

The members of Co. A were able to defend their perimeter against their attackers and conduct a consolidation and reorganization — at least until the sound of a TAC's whistle brought the battle to a hault.

In between attacks, the students found themselves learning a great deal about all aspects of infantry life — including how to eat.

"We're learning how to eat tactically," said Jill Ford of the Alabama National Guard. "It's like shifts. We're pulling security while we're trying to eat."

Eating wasn't the only skill being perfected by the candidates.

"We're learning something about tactics," said candidate Christopher French, of the 10th Mountain Division, Fort Drum, N.Y. "We're learning about how you'd want to set up your defense the way you do."

Sgt. 1st Class Wade Turks, Co. A, TAC NCO, took part in a "casualty evacuation" during the exercise. As the TACs threw simulated grenades at the candidates' fighting positions, other candidates became "casualties," complete with realistic burns and wounds.

The exercise was designed to teach the students how to react to indirect fire and to test their abilities to evacuate casualties," Turks said.

Carrying "casualty cards" that described their injuries, the candidates found themselves coping with everything from severe burns to protruding intestines.

"You're developing your leadership skills in a war situation," said Lawonia Goldman, of the Arkansas National Guard. "You're getting the physical conditioning suitable for battle."

While the candidates alternately sweated or were soaked by what was apparently a mandatory thunderstorm, other personnel manned the battalion's Combat Trains Command Post. Among them were several second lieutenants, who had recently graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point. They were waiting for their Infantry Officer Basic Course to begin, and were able to help during the Capstone exercise.

The lieutenants found themselves keeping track of ammunition, radio batteries, updating personnel, equipment and weather charts, and generally making sure all elements of the exercise were able to communicate via a radio net.

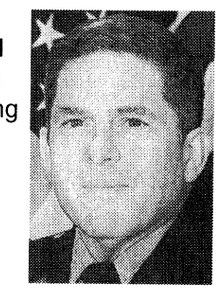
"I'm enjoying myself," said 2nd Lt. Ted Zeunik, who was manning the CTCP with 2nd Lt. Chris Hockenberry. "It's interesting to see what OCS is all about."

Ultimately, Capstone was the final field examination for the 40 members of Co. A.

"Capstone allows TACs to fulfill all three components of what it is to be a TAC," said Capt. Steven H. Goodroad, company commander. He said the components are "teaching tactics and techniques, assessing leadership potential and skills learned, and counseling officer candidates throughout a free-play, Combat Training field leadership exercise."

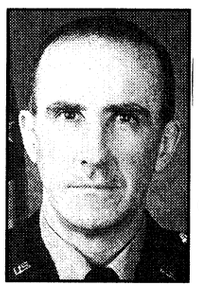
CHANGE OF COMMAND

DENTAC to have new leader



USAIC Public Affairs Office

The U.S. Army Dental Activity Command at Fort Benning will conduct a change-of-command ceremony at 10 a.m. Wednesday in front of the Love Dental Clinic.



Assuming command of all dental activities on post is Col. Craig A. Moore. The outgoing commander is Col. Richard A. Nurnberg.

Moore, from Bristol, Pa., graduated from the University of Delaware in 1968. In 1972, upon graduation from Temple University School of Dental Medicine and the Medical Officer Basic Course, he was assigned to Fort Huachuca, Ariz., as a dental officer.

He returned to private practice in 1974, remaining active with the Army Reserve. Moore returned to active duty in 1977, attended the Medical Officer Advanced Course in 1981 and completed a two-year residency at Fort Hood, Texas. He commanded the U.S. Army Dental Activity at Fort Leavenworth, Kan., and is an honor graduate of the U.S. Army Command and General Staff College. Other assignments include Fort Dix, N.J., Belgium and Alexandria, Va.

Col. Richard A. Nurnberg is the outgoing DENTAC commander

Col. Craig A. Moore is the incoming DENTAC commander

Moore and his wife, Arlene, have two daughters, Michelle and Megan, and one son., Michael.

Nurnberg, originally from Millburn, N.J., graduated from Bates College in 1963. After graduating from Tufts University, School of Dental Medicine, in 1967, he attended the Medical Officers Basic Course. He is also a graduate of the Medical Officers Advanced Course and the U.S. Army Command and General Staff College, where he was on the Commandant's List.

He commanded the Dental Activity at Forts Rucker, Ala., Dix, N.J. and Ord, Calif.

He and his wife, Karen, have two sons, Craig and David.

Infantrymen to compete for EIB

By Lori Egan
Bayonet staff writer

The Expert Infantryman Badge Test, hosted by the 29th Infantry Regiment, will be at Burroughs Range Sept. 18 to 29.

Training for the EIB test will be Sept. 11 to 15.

The EIB is an individual award presented to soldiers who meet the required criteria during a sanctioned test.

Soldiers must demonstrate their abilities in common tasks and advanced infantrymen's skills, including call for fire, first aid, marksmanship skills and the grenade throw.

Candidates for the badge will participate in hand-to-hand combat, a 12-mile road march, day and night land navigation and an Army physical fitness test among other things.

This year more than 600 are tentatively scheduled to test for the badge, which is the reason for the two-week test period, Sgt. 1st Class Michael Speer, assistant operations sergeant, 29th Infantry Regiment, said.

Last year, 214 soldiers registered for the test and only 23 received the badge.

"When I took the test in '88, 385 tried to earn the badge, but only three did," Speer said.

The test is open to anyone in the 11 and 18 series career management field.

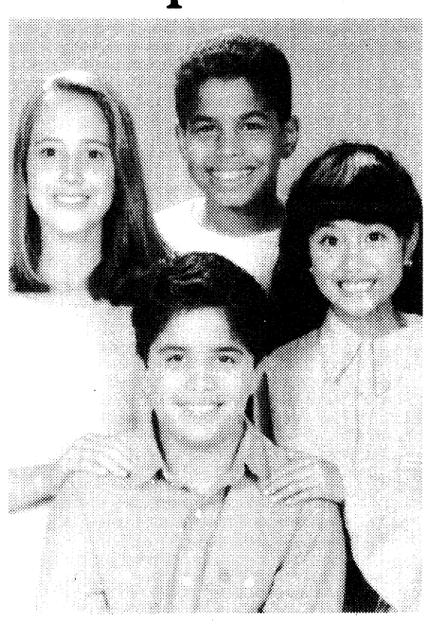
During the 12-mile road march Sept. 19 and 26, Jamestown Road will be closed from Goodluck Road to Sunshine Road 5 to 10 a.m.

The award ceremony will be Sept. 29 at 11 a.m.

OCS reserve cadets donate time and energy

By Pam Newbern
3rd Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment

When the members of Reserve Component 1-95 left Fort Benning after graduation from Officer Candidate School Aug. 16, they took with them more than their new second lieutenants gold bars.



They also took with them the memory of helping the local Boy Scouts.

As their class project, the members of Company A, 3rd Battalion (OCS), 11th Infantry Regiment, spent July 22 building two bridges at Russ Pond developing and improving a nature trail and disassembling an old pier.

Capt. Steven H. Goodroad, company commander, expressed satisfaction with the project.

"RC 1-95's class project, the Russ Pond Boy Scout Camp trail work, was both fun and fulfilling," he said. "From a schoolhouse perspective, it was another opportunity to implement the troop-leading procedures, yet we had a great time doing it."

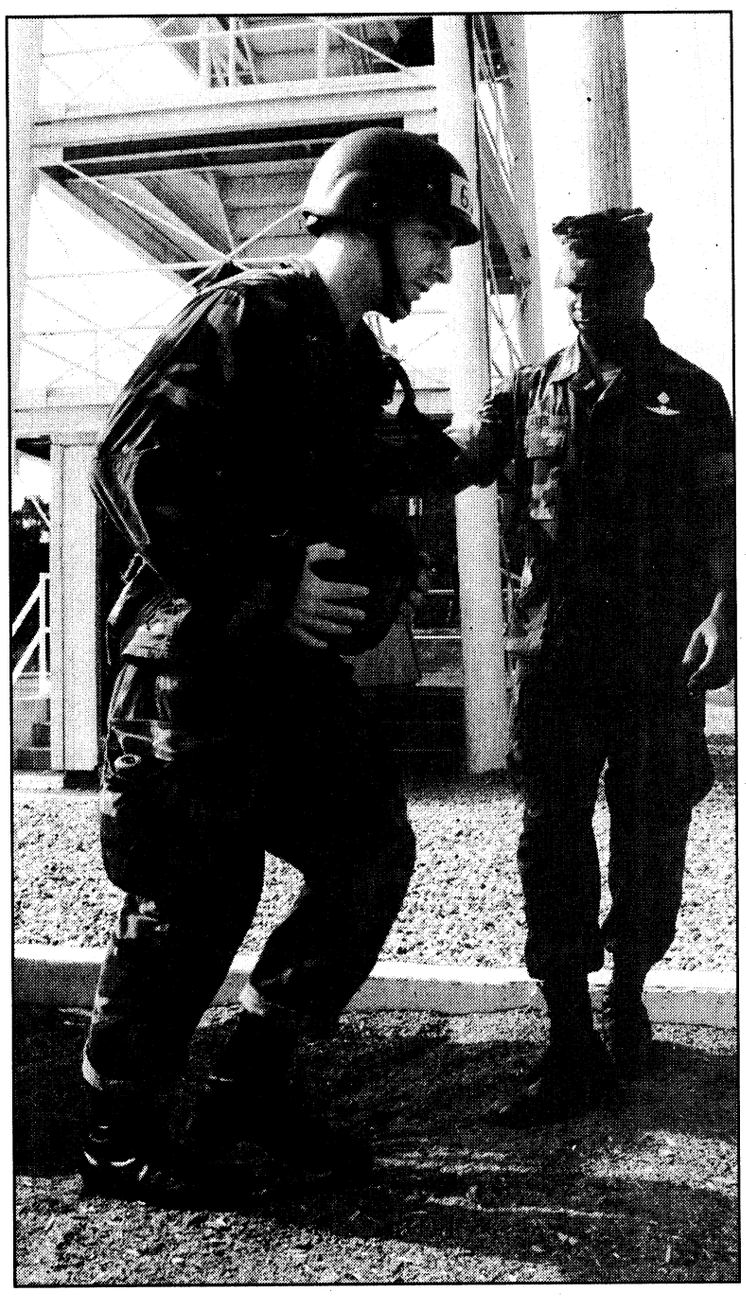
Marine instructors take flight

By Shannon Day
Special to The Bayonet©

The Airborne School has made great strides in making its multiservice students feel more at home with the addition of one Air Force and four Marine instructors.

"We train Army, Navy, Air Force and Marines," said Command Sgt. Maj. William Cox, command sergeant major, 1st Battalion (Airborne), 507th Infantry, 11th Infantry Regiment. "I think it will be nice for the students to see some instructors from their own services."

The school has always had slots on the table of distribution and allowances for four instructors each from the Marines, Air Force and Navy; Cox said. The Army had been filling those slots up until now.



"What we did was ask our sister services to send us some troops to fill those on board and one Air Force (instructor) in transit."

Several of the Marines volunteered to be assigned to the school, including Marine Staff Sgt. Jim Jakes, Company B, 1st Bn. (Airborne) , 507th Inf.

"A friend of mine had orders to come here," Jakes said. "Columbus is my hometown, so as soon as I heard about the slots, I asked if I could trade. Here I am," Cox said.

Marine Staff Sgt. James C. Holt, Co. C., 1st Bn. (Airborne), 507th Inf., who is on his second tour attached to the Army, also volunteered for the assignment.

"I have about 15 years in service, and I have spent almost half of that time with the Army," Holt said. "There is a lot I enjoy about both services. Although I am a Marine, I have to say the Army has always treated me good."

Shannon Day/Special to The Bayonet

Marine Staff Sgt. Jim Jakes, Company B, 1st Bn. (Airborne), 507th Infantry, corrects a student's body position as the student simulates jumping out of an airplane.

Holt, who has more than 2,000 (static lines and free fall) jumps to his credit, has also been through the Army Pathfinder School, the Special Forces School and the Ranger School.

"We have really had to adjust our thinking here," said Marine Gunnery Sgt. Jeffrey A. Snow, Co. A, 1st Bn. (Airborne), 507th Inf.

He said he is used to sergeants who have been airborne for eight or 10 years and really know what they are doing. At the school, they have to teach students the airborne basics.

Cox said the addition of the Marine instructors is working out very well.

"These guys are enthusiastic and eager to learn," he said. "Every time I see them, they are hard at work."

New commander takes charge of OCS

3rd Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment

A new commander took charge of the 3rd Battalion (Officer Candidate School), 11th Infantry Regiment, Aug. 11 during a ceremony on York Field.

Lt. Col. Scott L. Armbrister replaced Lt. Col. Donald B. Chung, who was in charge of the unit for two years.

"People say that OCS has changed, and I would not deny that," Chung said. "But OCS has retained its high standards and its graduates have been very successful at their officer basic courses. The real difference is the attempt to change one's lifestyle to one that fosters self-discipline, motivation, responsibility and development."

His new assignment will be with the Training and Doctrine Command Headquarters at Fort Monroe, Va. Prior to serving as the commander of OCS, Chung served as the manpower analyst with the Program Analysis and Evaluation Directorate, Office of the Army Chief of Staff, at the Pentagon. He also served as a battalion executive officer and brigade logistics officer with the 1st Cavalry Division at Fort Hood, Texas. Chung's assignments as a company-grade officer included tours with the 25th Infantry Division in Hawaii and the 1st Cavalry Division.

Armbrister, who graduated from OCS as the honor leadership graduate in 1978, said that he was "absolutely thrilled to be back at the 'Home of the Infantry' and that Fort Benning is truly a great place to soldier."

"As a former proud graduate, I am humbled by being given the responsibility to command America's Army Officer Candidate Program," he said. "If the outstanding candidates standing in formation today are an example of candidates to follow during my watch as commander, my job will be an easy one."

Prior to his assignment at Fort Benning, Armbrister was assigned at the Office of the Deputy Chief of Staff for Operations and Training in Washington, D.C. He also served as an inspector general and aide-de-camp for the commanding general with the 2nd U.S. Army at Fort Gillem, Ga.

Armbrister's prior assignments include a tour in Korea as the war plans officer with the Combined Field Army, and as a battalion and brigade logistics officer with the 5th Infantry Division at Fort Polk, La., and Fort Hood.

Armbrister's company-grade assignments included a tour at the Fort Benning Infantry Mortar Leader's Course as the branch chief of the Fire Direction Center Division, and a 54-week tour of duty along the Korean demilitarized zone.

OCS designates honorary colonel, sergeant major

In addition to the traditional battalion change of command ceremony Aug. 11 at York Field, the members of the 3rd Battalion (Officer Candidate School), 11th Infantry, formally recognized two long time friends of OCS.

Medal of honor winner retired Col. Robert T. Nett and the late retired 1st Sgt. Clicon G. Hobbs were recognized as the honorary battalion commander and battalion command sergeant major of 3rd Battalion during the change of command ceremony between Lt. Col. Donald B. Chung and Lt. Col. Scott L. Armbrister.

Nett participated in the ceremony during the passing of the guidon. Hobbs was represented by his wife, Corine, who received a scrap book containing his service records, military accommodations and biographical sketch.

Nett distinguished himself with more than 30 years of service to the Army. He attended OCS in 1942 and earned the Medal of Honor in 1944 while commanding a rifle company in the Pacific Theater.

Nett served as a South Korean training company commander and did classified work for Gen. Douglas McArthur's Far East Headquarters during the Korean War. Nett also served in Vietnam as an advisor to the Vietnamese 2nd Infantry Division. He later served with the 11th Air Assault (Test) Division, commanded the Officer Candidate School and was the Chief of Reserve Affairs for Europe, the Middle East and Africa.

Hobbs served with distinction for more than 20 years and had a long affiliation with OCS. He enlisted in 1941 and served in Panama, New Guinea and New Britain. He returned to the United States and worked with the Fort Riley, Kan., OCS program. He was severely wounded in the Korean War in 1953 while serving with the 32nd Infantry Regiment.

Hobbs returned to Fort Benning where he was a member of the Physical Fitness and Drill Committee of OCS, and served as the noncommissioned officer in charge of writing Field Manual 22-1, Drill and Ceremonies.

After serving in Europe and Fort McClellan, Ala. Hobbs again returned to OCS until he was assigned to Fort Hood where he retired as a first sergeant in 1962. Hobbs died in January 1992, and the 1st Sgt. Clifton G. Hobbs OCS Challenge Award was dedicated in April to honor his memory and service.

SOA adds peace to program

By Judith Ginder
School of the Americas

As the world changes, so does the School of the Americas. Constantly concerned about maintaining democracy in the Western Hemisphere and the role that SOA plays in it, the school has developed a new course, to begin Saturday.

Peace Operations is a five-week course open to officers, second lieutenant through major, and their civilian counterparts. The main purpose is to teach the tactics, techniques and procedures related to operations other than war, said Maj. German Rivera, SOA Combat Support Detachment commander.

It has combined the efforts of all the divisions at the School of the Americas, Rivera said. Its different classes will be taught by all levels at the school — by noncommissioned officers, officers and civilians.

As with all other SOA courses, human rights issues will be incorporated throughout. Students will learn about intelligence gathering, civil affairs, psychological operations, logistics, preventive medicine, public affairs and engineering and how they relate to operations other than war. Students will also study the legal aspects of peacekeeping operations, the United Nations and other regional groups, Rivera said.

"As the military organizations of the world play a larger role in peacekeeping operations, officers will have a more extensive interfacing with civilian governments and nonprofit organizations," said Lt. Col. Richard Wampler, SOA chief of staff. "Keeping this in mind, we must teach students how to apply their military skills to nontactical situation."

Rivera said that Peace Operations will have a two-day staff exercise, in which students will take part in a mock peacekeeping operation. Another highlight will be a two-day seminar with guest lecturers speaking about their own peacekeeping experiences.

"We want to draw people together to learn from everyone's past experiences to improve future operations," Wampler said.

Latin American countries are already involved in peacekeeping operations around the world, but there has been no centralized training for it in Latin America, he said.

SOA 2000, an inter-agency working group, noted the lack and decided that it made sense for the training to take place at SOA, Wampler said. The group includes the State Department, the Office of the Secretary of Defense, Headquarters of the Army, U.S. Army Southern Command, U.S. Army Training and Doctrine Command and the School of the Americas. All of these agencies have combined roles in Latin America.

"Our hope is with the knowledge gain from this course, Latin American will be able to become involved in more peace operations throughout the world," Wampler said.

H&R BLOCK INCOME TAX COURSE
STARTS SEPTEMBER 9, 1995
Thousands of people learn how to prepare income tax returns from H&R Block and then earn money as income tax preparers. H&R Block, the world's largest income tax preparation service, offers its Income Tax Course, starting September 9, 1995. Morning, evening and Saturday classes are available.
Experienced instructors teach tax law, theory and application. Classroom discussion and practice problems provide students with a thorough understanding of each tax topic included in the course. Students learn how to handle increasingly complex income tax situations as the course progresses.
Ideal for people who want to increase their tax knowledge, the course teaches students how to save money on their taxes and also prepares them for a rewarding career.
The affordable fee includes textbooks and supplies. Graduates receive Certificates of Achievement and continuing education units (CEU's). Qualified graduates of the course may be offered job interviews with H&R Block, but are under no obligation to accept employment.
Those interested in more information about the H&R Block Income Tax Course may contact the H&R Block office at Simons Plaza Shopping Center, 2511 Airport Thruway, Columbus, Georgia.

TIPS FOR MAKING YOUR AD MORE EFFECTIVE

- Start Your ad with the item you are selling, service you are offering, or job title you are looking to hire.
- Be descriptive. The more information you provide to the reader, the better the responses will be to your ad.
- Use bold type, white space of decorative characters such as stars, to bring attention to your ad.
- Run your ad for an ample length of time. Remember, as soon as you get results, you can cancel at any time .
- Always include the price of your item.

Connecticut — Exceptional Opportunities
Physical Therapists and PTAs, staff opportunities . . .
The Hospital of Saint Raphael, a 500-bed community teaching hospital, is located in an attractive coastal New England city enriched by a diverse lifestyle. Our rapidly expanding services in inpatient medicine have created exceptional opportunities for highly motivated physical therapists and PTAs to join our professional team. To qualify, you must be licensed, or eligible for licensing in Connecticut.
By choosing to work in a large teaching hospital with a varied caseload, you will have the opportunity to build your clinical skills and enhance your medical knowledge. You will work three-month rotations which include orthopedics, wound care, rehabilitation, outpatient physical therapy and general medical/surgical care. Our three-level clinical ladder and clinical specialist positions assure you that your career will move forward at Saint Raphael's. We are on the leading edge of technologies, with an aggressive treatment program and state-of-the art equipment in a modern setting.
Inpatient Senior PT - Ortho
This a terrific position for a dynamic physical therapist who is up to the challenge of running a busy orthopedic floor. You must be motivated, well organized, possess strong interpersonal skills and enjoy being a leader. You will be responsible for the clinical care, daily operation and long-term planning for the PT component of our growing orthopedic floor. We do a high volume of total joint replacement surgery as well as spine, ACL and general orthopedic procedures.
Saint Raphael's offers:
• Sign-on bonus • Competitive salary, continually monitored
• Exceptional benefits • Tuition reimbursement
• Continuing education
Don't miss out on these great opportunities. For further information call: Peggy Dillinger, Recruitment Manager, 1-800-533-5546 or 1-203-789-3577. Or send your resume to her. We encourage diversity and are proud to be an equal opportunity employer,M/F/D/V. We are a smoke-free facility.

Volume 53, Number 34 — Published in the interest of the Fort Benning, Ga., community — Sept. 1, 1995

FEW ends in success

By Lisa M. Hibbert
Bayonet staff writer

The Federal Women's Program Committee hosted the 20th Federal Employees' Week Aug. 21 through 25.

The week's activities focused on the theme, "Vision Year 2000: Strategies for Survival in the Work Place."

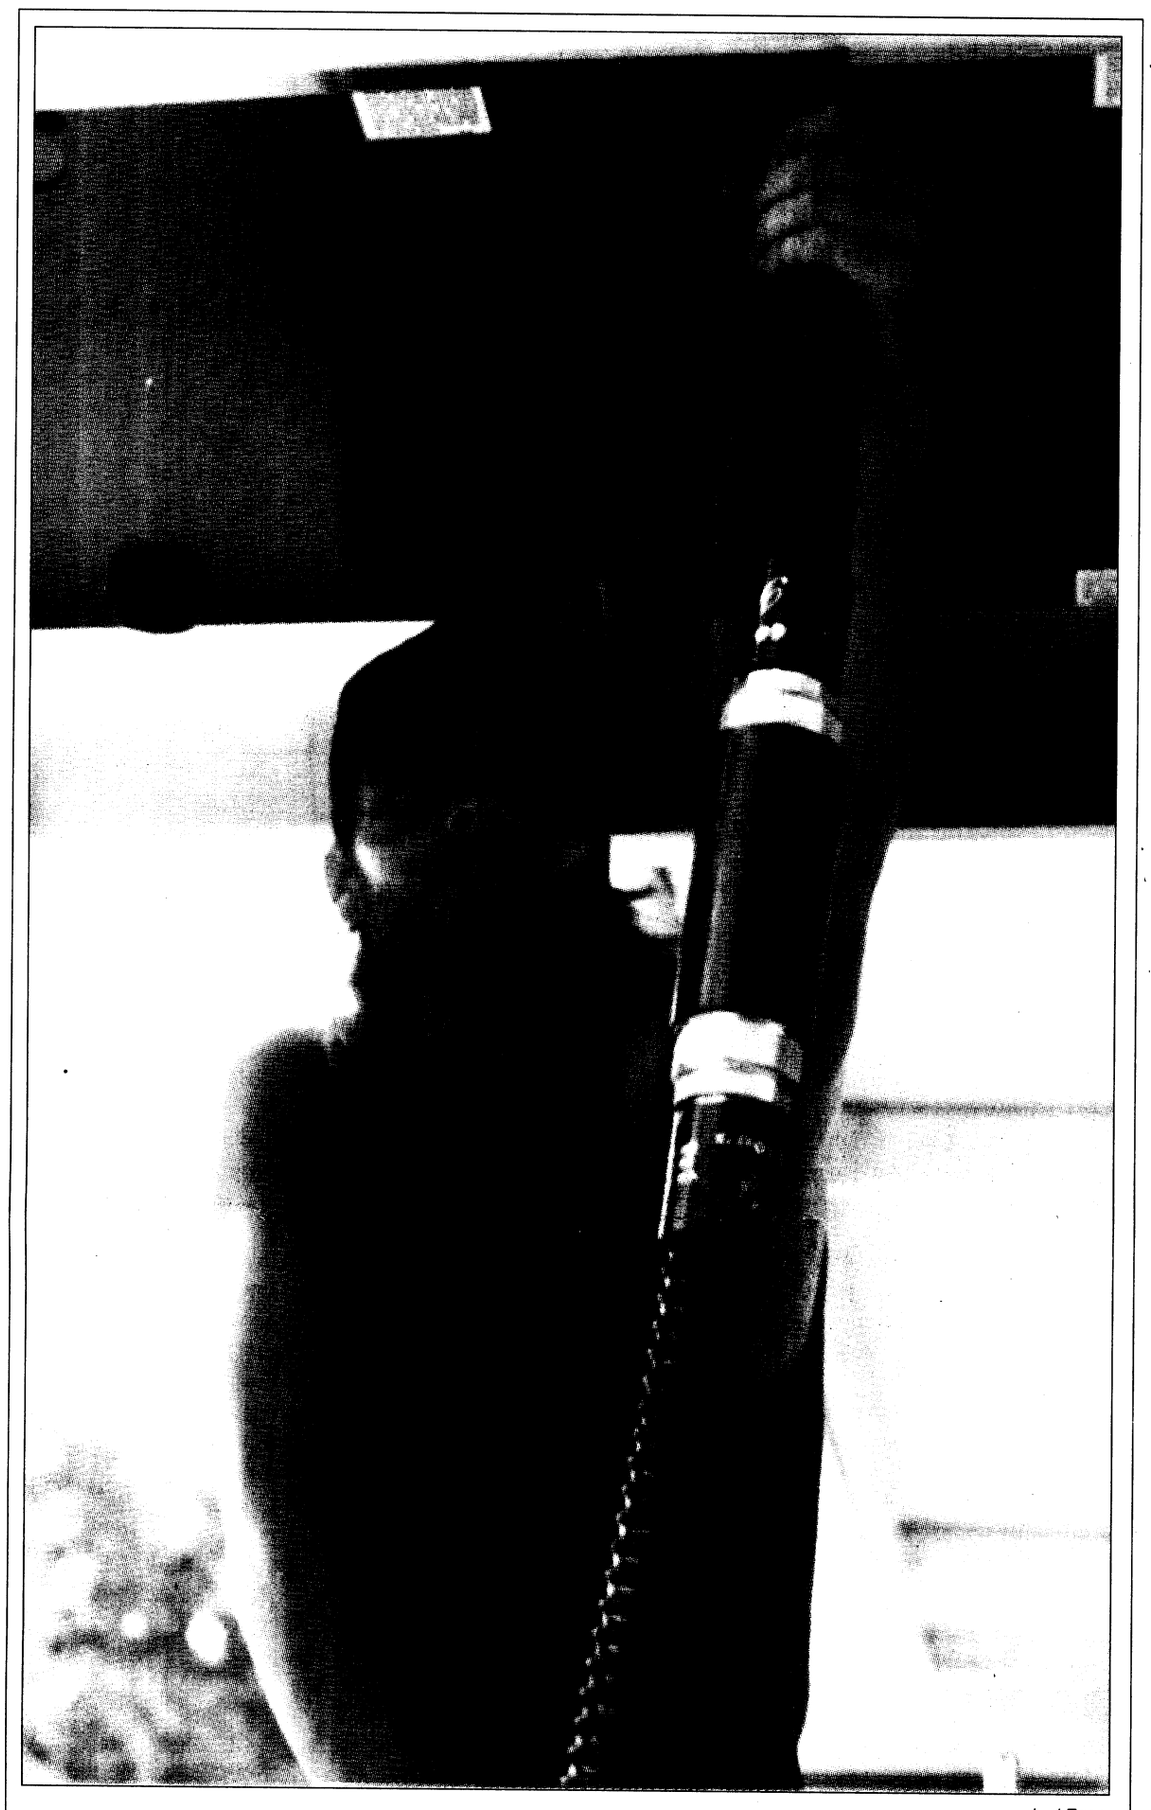
Nine sessions emphasized the skills needed to accomplish the various tasks expected in the high-tech environment of the 21st century.

Seminar topics ranged from health, nutrition and weight control to how to achieve career satisfaction.

During the class on developing a positive self-esteem, facilitator Carolyn Seals, education specialist at Directorate of Community Activities, gave some useful pointers.

Seals instructed participants to greet others, learn to accept compliments and use eye contact. Seals also encouraged questioning and disagreement — it's OK to disagree.

The sessions averaged more than 50 people and were open to both military and civilian employees.



Labor Day to affect business hours

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Most military and civilian personnel at Fort Benning will observe Labor Day, Monday, and soldiers will have a training holiday today. Several on-post activities will have reduced hours.

- Fort Benning Schools will be closed Labor Day.
- The Commissary will be closed Labor Day and Tuesday.
- The Main Mall Post Exchange will be open from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. Sept. 1 and from 10 a.m. to 7 p.m. Labor Day.
- The Custer Terrace Shoppette will be open from 11 a.m. to 8 p.m. today and from 11 a.m. to 6 p.m. Labor Day.
- The Mini Mall Shoppette is open 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. both days.
- There will be no refuse and recycle collection Labor Day.

For complete listing, see Page B-1

Finishing touches

Tommy Tibbs, an employee of Charter South, one of the contractors working on the renovation of Army and Air Force Exchange Service's Main Mall Auto Pride Service Center, attaches a hose to the gasoline tank at the service center. The project, which began in January, has involved replacing all the underground tanks and installing new gasoline dispensers. The station is scheduled to open Sept. 26, according to Ned Murata, manager of the center.

3/24th begins return home

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Nearly 1,100 soldiers from the 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division, have returned from the National Training Center, Fort Irwin, Calif. since Wednesday.

More than 3,400 "Sledgehammer" Brigade soldiers will arrive aboard eight charter flights at Lawson Army Airfield through Sunday.

The brigade has been training in the California desert for more than three weeks.

Training rotations at the National Training Center test combat battalions and brigades during rigorous conditions closely simulating actual combat. Travel to and from the training center approximates requirements during an actual combat deployment.

Training highlights included force-on-force situational training exercises in which soldiers in infantry and tank companies performed offensive and defensive operations as part of a task-organized combined arms force.

5001 fund benefits AFAP

Contributions to Army Family Action Plan aid quality of life on post

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet©

Improving the quality of life on Fort Benning is one way that donations to the 5001 fund help post residents, said Michelle Aldridge, Army Family Action Plan coordinator.

The 5001 fund is part of the annual Combined Federal Campaign, a fund drive that allows federal employees to donate to various charities beginning Oct. 2 and continuing through Nov. 15.

The 5001 fund, which is overseen by the Soldier and Family Support Association, is the only CFC organization devoted entirely to the Fort Benning community.

Aldridge said it would be difficult, if not impossible, to host the post's annual AFAP symposium without support from the 5001 fund.

"Other CFC organizations are worthy, but 5001 is the only organization that truly benefits the total Army community of Fort Benning," she said. "With many charities you might not ever directly see the results of your donation, but with 5001 you see exactly where your money is going."

> "Other CFC organizations are worthy, but 5001 is the only organization that truly benefits the total Army community of Fort Benning."
> — Michelle Aldridge
> Army Family Action Plan coordinator

The AFAP symposium is an annual forum that allows members of the total Army community, from family members to soldiers of all ranks to officers to post directors, to meet, discuss and resolve issues pertaining to the quality of life on post.

"This is the best forum of its kind that I know of," Aldridge said. "The issues discussed are issues that people are really concerned about.

"They are issues that affect the community as a whole," she said.

Aldridge said the forum truly achieves results.

The issues discussed in the forum are forwarded to the post commander for resolution or are passed on to Training and Doctrine Command or Department of the Army Headquarters if necessary, she said.

Every issue is either resolved or deemed unattainable, Aldridge said.

Past issues included discussions on including a birthing room at Martin Army Community Hospital, rates for permanent change of station moves and the transfer of GI Bill funds to family members when the spouse has died.

"A lot of good things have come about because of AFAP, both at the local and national levels," Aldridge said. "The increase in life insurance for service members, for example, was an AFAP issue."

"Anyone who supports 5001 is supporting their fellow soldiers and family members," Aldridge said. "If more people would donate to 5001, then even more could be done to benefit the Fort Benning community, from more programs to expanded services."

Aldridge said donors to the 5001 fund have the assurance that their money is going into the local post community for improvements.

"When you get right down to it, I think people would rather help their own communities than have it go somewhere where they will never see the results."

In addition to the AFAP symposium, the 5001 fund benefits youth and handicap programs, Santa's Castle, Army Community Service, volunteer programs, Red Cross, lending closet, food locker, Boy and Girl Scouts, community improvement programs and others.

Soldiers and Department of Defense civilians will be able to pledge their donations beginning Oct. 2 through designated personnel in their office or units.

Editor's note: The Bayonet will be publishing stories on other organizations that benefit from the 5001 Fund.

EO recognizes women's equality

By Lisa M. Hibbert
Bayonet staff writer

The Equal Opportunity Office hosted a Women's Equality Day luncheon Aug. 25 at the Main NCO Club in conjunction with the 75th anniversary of the 19th amendment, which gave women the right to vote.

The festivities began with a film that documented the history of women's suffrage movement to the mid 1980s. The film showed the advances that women have made from voting rights to advancements in the work force.

Sgt. 1st Class Beverly R. Riley, E.O. noncommissioned officer in charge. opened the program and read a message from Maj. Gen. John W. Hendrix, Post Commanding General.

Col. Gregory C. Camp, U.S. Army Infantry Center chief of staff, also made remarks.

He talked about how instrumental civilian women and female soldiers are on and off of Fort Benning — like in the Somalia and Haiti campaigns.

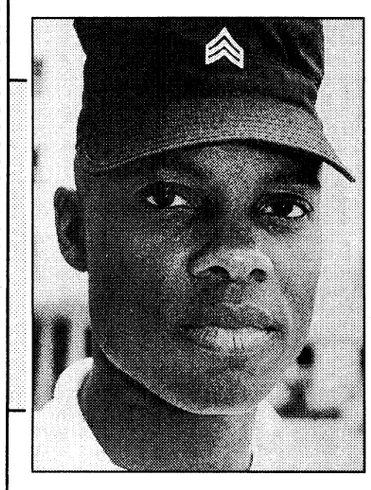
Camp introduced the speaker as an "excellent role model who is extremely interested in the professional interests of everyone."

The guest speaker for the day was Col. Roslyn D. Booker, chief, Department of Nursing, Martin Army Community Hospital.

Booker's theme was "What do we need to do to make people aware of the skills that we have and not just our gender — preparing for success."

"Success is based on learning the rules," Booker said. "If you're going to win, you must learn them and learn how to execute them better than anybody else."

She also talked about learning the unwritten rules. "The rules dictate when the game starts, how many time outs there are and what exactly the job is," Booker said. "Unwritten rules determine the starting line up and who sits on the bench."

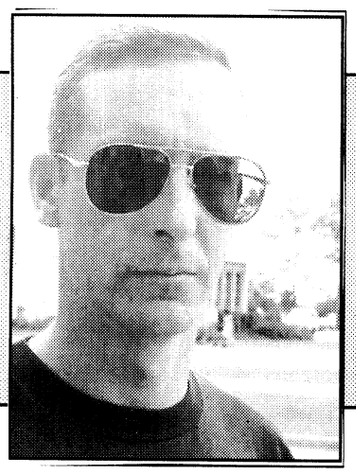


Booker said that you should "deem who is successful and emulate that characteristic — to the extent possible — into your own personality."

She also gave five ways to become a success.

- Start with the end in mind — establish goals.
- Become proactive — take initiative and make things happen.
- Put first things first — set priorities.
- Develop a win/win attitude.
- Make a commitment to continuous improvement — the greatest asset that you have.

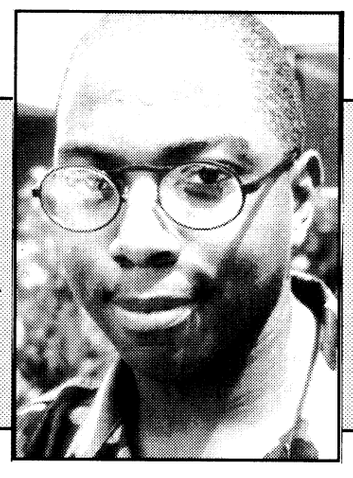
VARIOUS VOICES



What do you think about the bagger program at the Commissary?

Sgt. James D. Maxwell, U.S. Army Infantry Center Military Police Company — "I think it is a great opportunity for young kids to experience working before they have to get out there and get a real job."

Christa M. Dyer, family member — "I think it is a good program. I worked for the Commissary for 10 years. I think it gives kids a chance to make a little money."



Master Sgt. Stuart A. Norman, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment — "I think it's a good idea. I was an Air Force brat and a bagger when I was 13. I think it is a needed customer support function. The customer doesn't pay anything beyond the tip."

Mykell L. Messman, family member — "It's a good program, but then people feel obligated to tip and I don't think that is fair. I think it makes the customer feel bad if they can't tip. Sometimes people forget to write their checks for more than the amount (of their groceries.)"

Karen D. Snyder, family member — "I don't think they should have to pay for their own uniforms. Someone said they would earn it back in one day, and I don't think that's possible."

Spc. Rod D. Hardy, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 2nd Battalion, 18th Infantry — "I think the baggers should work for tips. It inspires the baggers to work a little bit harder if they get tips rather than a salary, they'll hustle more."

Command group stresses holiday safety

Every Labor Day weekend the highways are crowded with people enjoying the last summer holiday of the year. Unfortunately, traffic accidents reach their peak during this holiday.

To combat this danger, I am asking supervisors to inspect soldiers' privately owned vehicles before the holiday and brief soldiers and employees about water and driving safety. Stress the following positive actions in your briefings:

• Sober swimming in authorized and supervised areas.

• Arranging schedules for alert and sober driving.

• Following all traffic laws, especially the speed limit.

• Encouraging the use of seat belts.

• Testing the condition of vehicles, such as brakes, lights, horns, etc.

• Yielding to the less capable driver.

Labor Day weekend is an extremely high risk period. I expect every commander and director to be personally involved in all safety activities. We must protect our soldiers, civilians and family members.

— Maj. Gen. John W. Hendrix
Commanding General

Bicyclists have "rules of the road" to follow, just like motorists. These rules include keeping to the right of the road, riding with traffic and riding single file. All traffic signals, signs and devices must be obeyed. Bicycles should not be ridden in areas usually reserved for pedestrians, such as running tracks.

The following is required for cyclists on Fort Benning roads:

• Cyclists must wear highly visible, reflective vests and protective helmets that have been approved by either the Snell Memorial Foundation or the American National Standard Institute.

• Riders should ensure their bicycles have good reflectors, front and rear. In addition, bicycles ridden at night will be equipped with headlights and taillights visible from a distance of 300 feet.

• Children between the ages of 1 and 4 should be in a passenger seat for bike rides and infants under the age of 1 year are prohibited from riding on a bicycle.

• A passenger seat for everyone riding on a bicycle. Riding on the handle bars is prohibited.

Readers question Commissary policy about baggers' uniforms

I would like to correctly reply to Yvette Lattimore, the person who asked about bagger uniforms.

First, the colors will be light blue and dark blue, not white and blue. Since she asked, I believe she should be told the truth.

Benjamin Wainwright was incorrect in a few areas. He stated "The cost for two pairs of pants, two shirts, a smock and a hat does run as high as $73." He didn't include the price of the smock in that total, as he would leave you to believe, although the smock is optional.

The $73 will only buy the hat, two smaller-size shirts and pants. For those needing larger sizes, it's $2 more per piece. The total would be as high as approximately $80.

He neglected to mention shorts for those who wear them are an additional $17.81 each and it costs approximately $8 each to have hemmed if you need that done. The total can easily exceed $73, for two sets.

Purchasing just two sets also means washing every other night. It would be practical and more convenient to have more than two sets, thus an added expense.

Don't you think Wainwright has more than two suits so he doesn't have to run to the dry cleaners every other night? He originally told us the hats would be $3; they turned out to be $5. At the time we were told we'd be buying new hats, our old hats were less than a year old. We paid $7.50 for them, some baggers bought two, so they had $15 invested. Now, those hats will no longer be good.

Wainwright said, "A good bagger will recoup that amount in one to two days work," (referring to the $73.) The baggers have tried to explain to him that we don't make that in one day, normally not even in two days.

I am considered a good bagger. I am polite to all customers, I arrive on time, I only take a 15-minute lunch, and I don't take smoke or soda breaks. I stay on the counters trying to get my outs. The least I made was $12 one day. I average $20 to $25 a day, not $73 or even $36.50 as Wainwright believed.

If we did make that, I, and several other baggers would not be working two jobs, and be quitting or have already quit their bagging jobs.

$73 a day would be great pay. I'd stay. $36.50 a day would be great. I'd stay. We don't make that in eight hours.

I have bagged at other Commissaries and made more money there. The bagger system here allows for more baggers thus eliminating that possibility. Generally you come in from a carry-out and wait on the wall to get a spot on a counter. Ever notice all the baggers lined up on the wall? We're waiting for a turn to get on a counter.

Most customers are unaware that the full-time baggers pay the head bagger $1.50 a day. He, like us, is not an employee and receives no pay check. After paying the $1.50, adding your gas, bus or taxi fare, and baby-sitting money for those who do, your bring home can easily be less than $20 daily. Even without subtracting those factors your bring home can still be less than $20.

At less than $100 a week, I and several others couldn't justify spending approximately two to three weeks pay on a new uniform color, simply because Wainwright wanted it.

Wainwright said, "It is our opinion that if our employees dress sharply, they will feel and act better about themselves and as a result will provide better service to our customers. Therefore, we do not think it unreasonable to make uniforms a condition of employment."

If he really believes this, then why aren't all employees in a uniform so they can provide that "better service" he speaks of. Wainwright evidently doesn't realize that a customer will receive the same kind of service whether a bagger is dressed in black and white or light blue and dark blue.

This is the only Commissary I have bagged at that even required a full uniform. If it is as Wainwright states and provides better service, then why don't all Commissaries have uniforms?

An article a while back in The Bayonet had one bagger (out of 180 baggers) stating she had once made $76. Not every day, but once. I made $52 once, on a payday, and I stayed longer than 10 hours. That's less than $5 an hour! A lot of us couldn't believe what she said.

Myself and other baggers, average tip is not $2, but $1. Perhaps she was ashamed to admit to anything less. Even on a 12-hour day, it would be really hard to make the $73 Wainwright mentions. A bagger would have to take no lunch or breaks, get one customer every 15 minutes and each tip would need to be $1.50, that is rarely possible.

Perhaps Wainwright could spend an hour or longer with a bagger watching us bag correctly, being polite to the customer, and see what we really make. He would be surprised. Only then will he stop informing people incorrectly.

It's not that we are against uniforms. The point is that we already have several uniforms in the current colors. To buy new colors when we don't need, want or can't afford them, is a waste of hard-earned money.

— Name withheld

I have made a summary of the growing problems that appear in the Commissary in which I work.

The number one reason why Benjamin Wainwright claims part-time baggers need to change uniforms is they come to work sloppy and unclean and their pants are too large and baggy. Wainwright explained to the baggers at a meeting that it was the general's decision for the uniform change. The general knows nothing of the situation.

Most cashiers are extremely hard workers. They will go out of their way for both the customer and bagger, but some refuse to work. Some cashiers sit down for as long as a half-hour. When it's busy they talk. They get up to $8 an hour. Is this what your tax dollars are for? One cashier was angry at me. The customer wanted me to take their groceries out. She said to me, "You want to get in trouble already, don't you."

I am only doing my job!

— Name withheld

The new uniforms for Fort Benning Commissary baggers are pretty. However, I totally disagree with the price. One cap and one pair of trousers (with alterations) are approximately $40 including the shirt. Baggers make approximately $25 to $30 per day minus $1.50 to the head bagger and two assistants, transportation two ways plus one or two meals. Net income is $15 or $20 per day. There is not enough for such expensive uniforms.

Secondly, baggers are not authorized to use the bathrooms in the Commissary, even in an emergency. This needs to be investigated.

Thirdly, baggers are not authorized (allowed) to use any telephone in the Commissary. This includes the pay phones. In an emergency, baggers may use the courtesy phone. This also needs to be looked at.

— Name withheld

As a bagger I would like to correct Benjamin Wainwright in a few areas. I have never made $73 in one day. If you combine two days, a very few times I have made $73, if I worked more than my eight hours.

I hold two jobs because I was unable to meet my financial obligations working only at the Commissary. I have had my gas turned off since April. When baggers complained about the high cost for just one uniform, (approximately $40) Wainwright told us to vote on the issue. We voted and the outcome was to remain black and white. Wainwright totally disregarded our voting, and his way was kept.

Regardless of what I make a day, that doesn't justify a new uniform color when it is not needed.

— Name withheld

I would like to respond to statement made by Benjamin Wainwright, Fort Benning Commissary officer.

My daughter used to work at the Commissary as a bagger. Before she started to work there, she was required to buy two black pants and two white shirts and a black hat in order to be presentable and in uniform with the rest of the baggers. Well, let me tell you, we paid a total of $75 just for the black pants, hat and white shirts, and this not adding a good pair of sport "walking" shoes for the baggers who spend all their shift time walking and on their feet.

Well, after she had worked as a bagger at the Commissary for a month and a half, she still had not made enough to recoup the $75 invested in the uniform and hat required by Wainwright and, yes, she hustles, as acknowledged by some of her customers, yet some of those same customers paid her sometimes a $1 for a cart full, or like one time she only got a quarter.

So this job was a total disappointment for her and a very expensive one for us, the parents, who are trying to support our daughter's first job.

Now I know that Wainwright has a great salary, so he sits on his high horse and just dictates what the baggers should wear if they want to continue working at the Commissary. Where or how does he figure that a good bagger can recoup the $73 that they have to spend for a new uniform in a day or two?

If Wainwright wants to keep the appearances to make him look good, he should do something to support the baggers at least by requesting through the Army Community channels, funds to buy or rent uniforms, that in turn can be signed out to the baggers, just like the Army does to soldiers with their TA-50 (field gear), so don't say it cannot be done.

I invite all our Commissary customers to respond and support our baggers by writing to Wainwright and show him the way.

TRADOC cdr stresses Labor Day safety

TRADOC News Service

FORT MONROE, Va. — Commanders throughout Training and Doctrine Command have been urged to take the safety message directly to the soldiers in hopes of keeping the accidental death toll down over the Labor Day holiday.

"As Labor Day approaches, continue to press your force protection efforts," Gen. William W. Hartzog, TRADOC commander, told them. "Your personal commitment and that of your commanders and leaders is essential and will make a difference."

There have been 39 accidental deaths in TRADOC so far in fiscal 1995... Motor vehicle accidents continue to be the leading cause of deaths

There have been 39 accidental deaths in TRADOC so far in fiscal 1995.

Motor vehicle accidents continue to be the leading cause of deaths; a nonappropriated fund civilian employee and 13 soldiers have died in privately owned passenger vehicle accidents. Five other soldiers died in motorcycle accidents and four in military vehicle accidents.

The primary contributing factors in all of the vehicle deaths have been fatigue and excessive speed for driving conditions, according to Dave Prentice, of the TRADOC safety office.

"Soldiers are simply overextending themselves," Prentice said. "Then when driving conditions change, they don't have time to react because they're going too fast."

Circumstances that were major causes of driving accidents in the past — alcohol and not wearing safety belts — played small parts in the fatalities.

Other accidental deaths in fiscal 1995 occurred during training or were work-related.

With one month remaining in the fiscal year, the fatality total exceeds last year's figure of 26.

Veterans of atomic tests eligible for compensation

Department of Veterans Affairs

WASHINGTON — Veterans subjected to atomic tests may be eligible for compensation as a result of a rule recently published in the Federal Register.

The Department of Veterans Affairs recently published in the Federal Register a rule implementing legislation enacted in November that extends presumptive service-connection and compensation to U.S. veterans who suffer from certain diseases that may be a result of radiation exposure they received while participating in atmospheric nuclear weapons tests conducted by countries other than the United States.

"Since 1988, veterans who were similarly involved in weapons tests performed by the U.S. government have been eligible on a presumptive basis for disability compensation as a result of their service," said VA Secretary Jesse Brown. "The same eligibility rules now apply to U.S. veterans who were exposed to radiation during tests conducted by other countries."

Previously, veterans qualified for disability compensation only if they participated in atmospheric nuclear tests as part of the U.S. nuclear weapons testing program or in the American occupation of Hiroshima or Nagasaki, Japan, and suffer from certain diseases that may be attributable to ionizing radiation exposure.

VA will ask the Department of Defense to assist in obtaining dates and sites of tests conducted by other countries and in identifying U.S. military personnel who participated in the tests.

Veterans or their survivors who may want to file claims as a result of participation in foreign atmospheric nuclear tests are urged to contact the nearest VA regional office by calling (800) 827-1000 for information and assistance.

690th to conduct change of command

The 690th Medical Company will have a change of command ceremony 9 a.m. Sept. 15 on Roberts Field. If inclement weather conditions occur, the ceremony will be at the Audie Murphy Gym at 9:30 a.m. the same day.

Retreat ceremony to be Wednesday

The commanding general's monthly retreat ceremony will be Wednesday at 4 p.m. on York Field in front of Infantry Hall. All are welcome to attend. For more information, call 545-3816 or 545-1132.

Self-Help Store to close for holiday

The Self-Help Store, Loan Equipment Section and Venetian Blind and Shade Shop will be closed Saturday for the Labor Day holiday and reopen at 8:30 a.m. Tuesday.

Controlled burning set

Controlled burning of woodland and range areas will take place Saturday through Sept. 9.

If weather permits, the following compartments may be affected: A-6, D-6, E-5, I-3, I-4, K-7, M-7, V-3, W-3 and X-1.

People using these areas for recreation must leave before 9:30 a.m. daily.

Training units using compartments next to these areas are reminded to exercise caution while traveling in these areas because of the potential for reduced visibility.

For more information, call 544-6206.

Siren system to be tested first Saturdays

The installation siren system will be tested at noon the first Saturday of each month. Units and activities listed will monitor siren testing and notify the field officer of the day and their staff duty officer at 545-5135 or 545-5245 within 30 minutes after each test and report the operational status of the sirens. Sirens will not be tested in the event of bad weather.

The following is a list of units and activities and their siren locations:

OCS selection board to convene Sept. 26

A recent message from Personnel Command announced the next OCS selection board has been scheduled for Sept. 26 to 29. Applications must arrive at PERSCOM by Sept. 15. There will be no exceptions. Applications must arrive in AG, Personnel Operations Division, Building 2619, not later than today to allow time for each applicant to appear before a local board.

For administrative support and application forms, contact Marie Lee, Adjutant General's Office, Personnel Operations and Services Division at 545-3341 or 545-4702.

Buick Challenge needs volunteers

Volunteers are needed to serve as marshals on the 11th hole at Callaway Gardens during the Buick Challenge. The tournament will be Sept. 28 to Oct. 1.

To volunteer or for information, call Richard McDowell at 545-2211.

Housing operating in summer hours

The Directorate of Public Works Housing Division, Furnishing Management Branch, will operate at its summer operating hours through Sept. 29.

The operating hours are 7 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. Monday through Friday. The office will close for lunch from noon to 12:30 p.m.

For information, call 545-6713.

Sand Hill TMP fuel station closed temp

The Sand Hill Transportation Motor Pool will be closed until Sept. 30 for renovation of the fuel tanks.

The Main Post fuel station will be fully operational. All vehicles serviced at the Sand Hill fuel station will receive fuel from Main Post. For more information, call 545-3018.

Taxi service to end

Effective Oct. 1, the military taxi service will be discontinued at Fort Benning. Activities must rely on internal assets for transportation of personal or package delivery.

For information, call 545-3018.

Runners have priority during PT hours

Formations and individual runners have priority of movement on Fort Benning during the established physical training hours of 6 to 7:30 a.m. Monday through Friday. Formation running is not authorized on sidewalks throughout the installation. Units must use roadways, and proper safety equipment must be worn and operational.

Individual runners and walkers may use the sidewalks and also are required to wear proper reflective clothing or road guard vests.

Speed limit during PT hours is 15 mph and 10 mph when passing individuals and troop formations.

Speakers wanted

The Public Affairs Office is recruiting volunteers to join its Speakers Bureau to speak before local and surrounding area civic organizations.

If you are military or civilian and have a unique subject you are an expert on, be it military history or horticulture, call Brad Castleberry at 545-2238.

Mayors' Council to meet third Weds

Mayors' Council meetings with the installation staff will take place the third Wednesday of each month at 9:30 a.m. in Infantry Hall, Room 550. If your designated representative is unable to attend, an alternate must be provided. You will be notified in advance of any changes or cancellations. Meeting dates are Sept. 20, Oct. 18 and Nov. 15.

Appointments needed for AER help

Army Emergency Relief processes clients requests for assistance on an appointment basis. Clients should have all required paperwork completed for their appointment.

If an appointment cannot be kept, call 545-2536 or 545-7517 to allow the time to be used by someone else.

Hours of operation are 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday. Emergency travel funds may be obtained during nonoperating hours by calling the USAIC staff duty officer or staff duty non-commissioned officer at 545-2218.

Army Learning Ctr offers free courses

The Army Learning Center located in Building 2611, Soldiers' Plaza, offers a variety of free courses through computer-based instructional system.

Subjects covered include mathematics, professional development, technical, science, military related, personal computer tutorials, computers and data processing, management, preparation for college-level exams and preparation for college entrance exams. A complete listing of topics is available at the learning center.

Users can access the system via modem from work or home 24 hours a day, seven days a week.

All active duty service members, family members, retired military, Army and Air Force Exchange Service personnel, nonappropriated fund personnel, Department of the Army civilians, Reserves and National Guard are authorized use of the Army Learning Center.

The Learning Center hours are 7 a.m. to noon and 1 to 4 p.m. Monday through Friday. The telephone number is 545-1436.

Retirement planning videos available

The Retirement Services Office, Building 2635, has the following videotapes available: "Are you Prepared For Your Military Retirement?" (this video will assist in the planning of military retirement) and "Making the Right Decision — The Survivor Benefit Plan."

To ensure that the tapes are available, call in advance at 545-2541 or 545-5369.

ACAP offers developmental program

Army Career and Alumni Program

The Fort Benning Regional Army Career and Alumni Program Office is sponsoring a Skill Development Program to provide training opportunities to soldiers, civilians and family members who transition from the Army. However, the Electronics Engineering Technology program is available to any interested parties in the civilian and military community.

The Department of Electronics Engineering Technology at the Columbus Technical Institute is in the process of advisement and pre-registration for new students entering the Electronics Engineering Technology program in the Fall Quarter. The fall quarter at Columbus Tech begins Oct. 3.

The Department of Electronics Engineering Technology offers a two-year associate degree program with a major in Electronics Engineering Technology. The 114 credit hour program is a planned sequence of carefully developed, college-level courses designed to prepare students to work in the field of electronics engineering technology. The program of study emphasizes the application of scientific, mathematical and engineering knowledge and methods combined with technical skills in support of engineering activities.

The faculty consists of graduate-level electrical engineers with both industrial and professional engineering experience. The faculty "is dedicated to balancing the needs of the student with that of potential employers," said Ray Mercer, electronics engineering instructor, Columbus Technical Institute. While the Georgia Board of Technical and Adult Education provides standards for the electronics engineering technology program, an important influence is local industry. The committee works together to chart the focus and future of the program to meet the needs of the workplace.

One of the key advantages of an education at Columbus Tech is the cost. The cost of tuition for the EET program is $21 per credit hour, up to a maximum of $2,525 per quarter for a full-time student. Financial assistance is available through Pell, JPTA, Hope and VA.

"There is not another school or college in the Chattahoochee Valley area where a student can receive a high-tech, college-level accredited program at such a reasonable cost," Mercer said.

Potential students interested in obtaining further information about the Electronics Engineering Technology program at Columbus Technical Institute can contact Mercer at 649-1820.

Transition Assistance Classes

Army Career and Alumni Program

If you're getting out the military, the Army Career and Alumni Program is available to help you make the transition.

All service members getting out of or retiring from the military must process through the Army Career and Alumni Program's Transition Assistance Office, Building 2617, Soldiers' Plaza, before attending a Transition Assistance Program class in Infantry Hall.

The National Defense Authorization Act Fiscal 1991, Public Law 101-510 states that soldiers within 180 days of expiration term of service are required to attend a Transition Assistance Program class.

Classes are given in three-day blocks and are scheduled throughout the year.

Classes are in Classroom 30, Infantry Hall, from 7:45 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

For more information, call 545-7020 or 545-7009.

Documenting past can help future

By Elsie Jackson
Army Career and Alumni Program

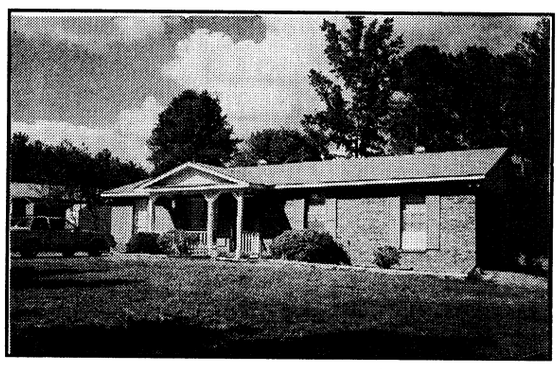
Your military experience and training may be invaluable assets in a civilian career, but only if you can communicate your abilities to a prospective employer.

If you are planning to use a resume to get your message across, your DD Form 2586 (Verification of Military Experience and Training) can be a very useful tool.

VMET statements list military job experiences and training histories, recommended civilian college credit information and any civilian equivalent job titles. They are provided to separating and retiring soldiers who have served a minimum of 180 days on active duty.

If you are separating, you should receive your VMET statement automatically, at your unit mailing address, about 150 days from your separation date. If you are within 30 days of your separation date and have not received this document or separated between Oct. 1, 1990, and Sept. 14, 1992, you will need to call or write to: PRC, Inc., ATTN: VMET, Suite 401, 2900 Eisenhower Ave., Alexandria, Va. 22314, (800) 258-8638.

VMET documents have proven themselves to be useful for enlisted soldiers and warrant officers. It has been less useful for commissioned officers because officers lack accurate duty descriptions and VMET is an automated document. Because of this, the Army has temporarily suspended automatic VMET distribution for commissioned officers.



In the near future, modified versions of the VMET will be issued to commissioned officers. The modified VMET will show military training histories, combining Officer Record Briefs and officer evaluation reports to provide a picture of an officer's training, skills and experience.

Don't confuse your VMET document with an Army or American Council on Education Registry Transcript System AARTS transcript. AARTS transcripts are records of your active duty military education experiences, including training for which you may receive college credits. Of course, acceptance of credit recommendations will depend on the policies and procedures of the school you choose to attend.

If a college or university accepts AARTS credit recommendations, and those credits are awarded on their official college transcript, AARTS credit recommendations may be applied toward Army promotion points.

Besides helping you get college credits, an AARTS transcript can supplement your resume, giving prospective employers a clearer picture of the skills you learned in the Army.

Acquisition Corps seeks civilians

Army News Service

WASHINGTON — The Army Acquisition Corps is inviting Army civilians, grades General Schedule/General Management-14 and above in permanent positions, to join the AAC.

This invitation includes those individuals who are not serving in acquisition critical positions but meet the basic criteria listed below.

Nominees must have at least 48 months of on-the-job acquisition experience. This experience is specific and is defined in the Deopartment of the Army Acquisition Certification Guidebook.

Experience must agree with that contained in the Official Personnel File.

Nominees must hold a baccalaureate degree and:

• 24 semester credit hours (or equivalent) from the following disciplines: accounting, business finance, law, contracts, Purchasing, economics, industrial management, marketing, quantitative methods, and organization and management, or;

• At least 24 semester credit hours (or equivalent) from an accredited institution of higher education in the applicant's career field and at least 12 semester credit hours (or equivalent) from among the disciplines listed above.

This requirement is not applicable to an employee who had at least 10 years of acquisition experience prior to Oct. 1, 1991.

Employees serving in acquisition positions as of Oct. 1, 1991, who do not have 10 years of acquisition experience may meet the management education standard by equivalency examination.

The Defense Activity for Non-traditional Education Support will be used for this purpose. Applicants may use any non-duplicating combination for academic credit and examination credit to equal the required number of semester hours.

Employees must have completed all mandatory courses through Level II in their acquisition career field as prescribed in the current Defense Acquisition University catalog (1994-1995, Volume III). Individuals certified at level III in any ACF, regardless of present acquisition position code, will satisfy the mandatory level II training requirement for accession purposes.

Individuals applying for AAC membership not assigned to identified acquisition workforce positions, will use the level II training requirements. In such situations, the application should be supplemented with completed fulfillment package, including DD Form 2518, to document training gained through experience or education.

One year of pursuing a program of acquisition training or education may be counted toward fulfilling any of the preceding experience criteria.

Waivers may be considered, however, any shortfall in requirements must be compensated by exceptional performance and "significant potential for advancement to levels of greater responsibility and authority, based on demonstrated analytical and decision making capabilities, job performance and qualifying experience."

Organizations that determine a waiver to be in the best interest of the AAC may initiate a request on DD Form 2588.

This form requires endorsement by a general officer, or equivalent, in the individual's chain of command and should be forwarded to the office of the DACM, SARD-ZAC, Pentagon, for further resolution by the Army Acquisition Career Program Board.

Nominees must include the following when applying for membership:

• AAC Automated Application data diskette.

• Two printouts from the AUTOAPP DATA.

• Certification of application completeness and accuracy.

• AAC Mobility Agreement.

• Agreement to remain in Federal Service. (Required only of current incumbents of DACM-Designated critical acquisition positions.) Registrants must request a copy of this form when picking up the regular application from the Civilian Personnel Office.

Applications must be received by Sept. 22 in the Personnel and Employment Service-Washington, Training and Career Management Division, 6800 Army Pentagon, Washington, D.C. 20310-6800.

Upon completion of this accession process, the AAC will change its policy on referral of candidates for vacant critical acquisition positions. Lateral referral to grade GS-14 and promotion to grade GS-15 and above will be limited to members of the AAC. AAC Personnel Operations Letter No. 3, procedures, will still apply for promotion to GS-14 CAPS until completion of accession opportunity for GS-13 population to be determined in fiscal 96.

For additional information and a copy of the AUTOAPP diskette and to receive a copy of the mobility agreement, contact the local Directorate of Civilian Personnel office.

First lady of WAC dies

Army News Service

WASHINGTON — A memorial service was conducted at Fort Myer's Memorial Chapel Aug. 24 for Oveta Culp Hobby, the first leader of the Women's Army Corps during World War II. She died Aug. 16 at her home in Houston, Texas, at age 90.

The first woman to earn the rank of Army colonel, Hobby headed up the Women's Auxiliary Army Corps, on its formation in May 14, 1942, with the backing of President Franklin and Eleanor Roosevelt. The WAAC soon became the Women's Army Corps, a part of, no longer auxiliary to, the Army.

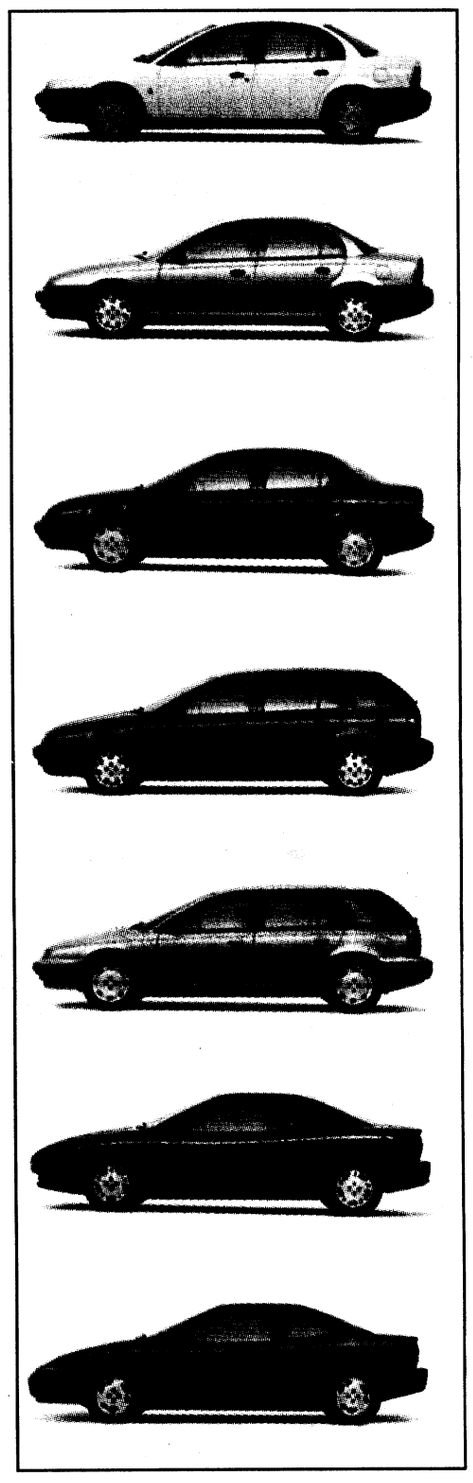
Hobby also served 31 months as secretary of Health, Education and Welfare, the first to head up that cabinet-level agency, and only the second woman to hold a cabinet position.

She attended Texas' Baylor College. And at age 20, she became parliamentarian of the Texas House of Representatives, where she served the legislature from 1926 to 1931. From that experienc, Hobby wrote a book on parliamentary law called, "Mr. Chairman."

During the early 1930s, she held many positions at the Houston Post as journalist and editor, until she was named executive vice president of the newspaper in 1938. Her husband, William Pettus Hobby, was publisher of the newspaper and a former governor of Texas from 1917 to 1921.

With all of her experience, Hobby was "drafted" by the War Department to set up a women's section in the Bureau of Public Relations that dealt with the concerns of mothers and wives of wartime draftees. Army Chief of Staff Gen. George Catlett Marshall was reportedly so impressed with Hobby that he persuaded her to get the stalled WAAC legislation through Congress.

It was then that she was asked to serve as the WAAC's first director.



From there, she had the very difficult task of establishing the WAAC organization with only one female civilian assistant. The other various agencies of the War Department that were asked to give their assistance did not have the experience or the attitudes to deal with matters concerning women.

1996 SATURN LINEUP
So what makes a Saturn different? Well, our cars are different for pretty much the same reason our company is different - a lot of things that add up to one big one. When it comes to cars, the big one for us is value, and the definition of that is relatively simple. Reliability - the kind you've come to expect from the Japanese. Performance - the kind we all admire in the Europeans. And courtesy - the homespun family way of doing business everybody wishes the world hadn't outgrown. If this is your definition, too, then hey, a very warm welcome to this, Saturn's 1996 model year.

#1 IN THE WORLD!!
Every year J.D. Power and Associates conducts a survey of new car buyers to see how they liked the way they were treated by their salesperson. While Saturn has always ranked right up there with some pretty expensive luxury cars, this year we're proud to say, for the first time ever, we were ranked "best overall." (Just thought you might like to know - we were sure excited about it!) J.D. COMMUNITY

SECTION B

Donna S. Budjenska/Special to The Bayonet

Staff Sgt. T. Gray Given, Property Room supervisor, examines a prosthetic arm that has gone unclaimed for several months.

Military Police Property Room stores post's lost and found

By Donna S. Budjenska
Special to The Bayonet©

If you've lost anything — your wallet, identification card, jacket, bicycle, prosthetic limb — don't despair, the Military Police Activity Property Room might have it.

Staff Sgt. T. Gray Given, Property Room supervisor, wants people to know about the room and check with him before going to the trouble and expense of replacing lost items.

"I've come to realize the community doesn't know we exist," Given said. "I have a phone and it hasn't rung except for my wife to call me.

"I have too much property here with too much sentimental value for them not to want it back."

Given recently took over as supervisor and is committed to reuniting lost items with their owners. And, he said, it doesn't matter where an item was lost; even if you misplaced your purse in uptown Columbus, if it contained something linking you with Fort Benning it could have been turned in to the Military Police.

By far, the bulk of property turned in is comprised of wallets (often with money still in them), ID cards and purses. Numerous bicycles are also turned in or picked up by Military Police.

Some of the more unusual items Given's dealt with are scrapbooks, lingerie and a prosthetic arm. Military articles, including weapons, are also waiting to be claimed.

Given said even items lost in field training have been turned in, a hopeful thought for soldiers facing a hefty charge for replacing lost items. Again, Given urged everyone to check with him first before assuming something's "gone the way of Clementine."

If you call about a missing item, be sure you know whether the item was stolen or lost (it makes a difference to the Military Police) and when, Given said. Also, be able to give a detailed description of the item and any identifying characteristics, such as serial number, color, size, brand, etc. Often, Given said, people don't even know that much about things they're missing. He said he goes so far as to videotape, photograph and write down serial numbers of every item in his own home. That's extreme, he admits, but his years in crime prevention have led him to such cautiousness.

> "I have a phone and it hasn't rung except for my wife to call me."
> — Staff Sgt. T. Gray Given
> MP Property Room supervisor

After 45 days, items in the Property Room are destroyed or turned over to Defense Reutilization and Marketing Office. ID cards are given to the ID card section. Given said he'll even try to return bank cards to the issuing bank.

But he'd rather give those items back to the folks who lost them.

"We very diligently try to take care of people's property," he said. "If they lose something, contact us, and we'll try to take care of them as best we can."

The Property Room is on the second floor of the Military Police Activity Building, at the corner of Edwards Street and Wold Avenue. The telephone number is 545-7055 or 545-1889; call between 9 a.m. and 5 p.m. weekdays.

Personal property security essential

By Donna S. Budjenska
Special to The Bayonet©

Bicycles are turned in so frequently to the Military Police Activity Property Room that its supervisor, Staff Sgt. T. Gray Given, and his predecessor, Staff Sgt. John Meister, said they want people be more cautious about their property.

Too often, they said, people think securing a bicycle to itself or to a short pole or just leaving in their own driveway in quarters is enough. They have, however, collected enough bicycles in their basement storeroom to know that's not the case.

Secure bicycles, lawnmowers, anything and everything kept outdoors to an immovable object with a heavy-duty chain and lock, Given said. Record the item's serial number and where that number is located. Bicycles often have numerous serial numbers in various places, Meister said; be sure you know which one you've recorded. They also suggested engraving your driver's license number and state under the frame of the bicycle.

The same careful accounting of possessions should extend to items inside your home as well, they said. The more information you can provide the Military Police if something comes up missing, the better. Every item turned in to them contains a voucher detailing where it was found, when it was found and what, if it was a purse, for example, was inside it when found. If no one successfully claims an item within 45 days, it's destroyed or turned over to Defense Reutilization and Marketing Office to be sold.

For more information or to report a missing or stolen item, call Given at 545-7055 or 545-1889 from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. weekdays, or go by the Military Police Activity Building, Building 215.

Partners for Alternative Language Service

By Judith Ginder
School of the Americas

They know what it feels like.

That's really why teen-age sons and daughters of School of the Americas guest instructors and students volunteer their time at White Elementary School.

Hernan Rocha, who will be starting his senior year at Spencer High School in September, said that the looks on the children's faces were all too familiar.

"I remember when my family first got to Fort Benning, I didn't speak any English. There wasn't anyone to help me and I really felt alone," said Rocha.

Luckily, there is now a program on post called PALS — Partners for Alternative Language Service. High school students and adults can volunteer for the program, said Janet Wynn, White Elementary School principal.

"The first two weeks are the most difficult for the kids to adjust to," Wynn said. "Having one of the PALS shadow a student for a couple of weeks makes the whole transition smoother."

After two weeks, teachers decide if the students who have a PAL still need one. Usually, Wynn said, PALS aren't necessary for much longer than that.

She said they were very lucky this year that the high school students were able to help and that the elementary students seemed to feel pretty comfortable with the teens.

Rocha said he liked helping the children.

"Sure it takes up some of my time, but it does mean a lot to these kids to have someone understand exactly what they are saying," he said.

community briefs

ON POST

Holiday waste collection — There will be no yard waste collection at Fort Benning housing areas Monday, Labor Day.

Yard waste will be picked up Sept. 11 as normally scheduled.

Soldier Show — The 1995 Army Soldier Show will arrive at Fort Benning Saturday for free performances at Sand Hill Theater No. 3.

A 2 p.m. performance will be exclusively for Infantry Training Brigade soldiers; a 7 p.m. performance will be open to all military members, retirees, Department of Defense civilians and their families. For more information, call 545-3909 or 545-1248.

Preschool — Patch Preschool still has openings for the 1995-1996 school year.

Children must be 3 by today and fully toilet trained to be admitted. The child must be registered at Central Registration prior to enrolling.

For information, call 687-2404.

Warrant officers' meeting — The Fort Benning Chapter "Forever Forward" will have its monthly meeting Wednesday at the Fort Benning Officers' Club from noon to 1 p.m.

All members are requested to attend, and nonmembers are invited. The agenda will include installation of new officers.

For more information, call Chief Warrant Officer 4 Jerry Hanchett at 544-7123 or 544-6005 or Chief Warrant Officer 3 Ted Walker at 689-4949.

Bodybuilding entertainment — The Sports Branch is seeking volunteer entertainment for a 15- to 20-minute intermission during the 1995 Fort Benning Open Bodybuilding Championships Oct. 14.

This year's event promises to be even more successful than last year's with the event opening its doors to the civilian sector as well. Spectatorship is expected to increase to more than 500 with more than 40 competitors.

If you would like to go public with your talent, call Christopher Winterman at 544-1747 or Leon Johnson at 685-9555. No preferences for a certain type of entertainment have been established. References and screening may be requested.

Learning center — The Army Learning Center is offering free courses in math, computers, science, management, college preparatory exams, etc. Users can dial-up from work or home, 24 hours a day, seven days a week, for computer-based instruction.

A free access disk can be obtained at the ALC. For a complete listing of courses or for more information, call 545-1436. The Army Learning Center is located in Building 2611, Soldiers' Plaza.

Dinner dance — The Chattahoochee Valley Chapter of The Retired Officer Association will host a dinner dance at 7 p.m. Sept. 9 at the Supper Club in the Fort Benning Officers' Club.

Retired Lt. Col. Edward S. Gryczynski from TROA National Headquarters in Washington D.C. will be the guest speaker and will discuss the future of medical care.

George Corradino and "The Notables" will provide music. The buffet is $18 per person. Deadline for reservations is Thursday; for reservations, call Chet Alderfer at 322-4622; Ollie Smith at 687-4218; Biff Hadden at 561-8988; or Jim Forsythe at 563-0635.

Explorer Scout Program — Law Enforcement Post 988, sponsored by the Military Police Activity, is looking for more members. If you know of a boy or girl interested in a law enforcement career or who just want to learn more about law enforcement, call Staff Sgt. Donnie Lucas at 545-1146. This program is open to anyone on or off post. Adult assistant leaders are welcome.

Management program — The Fort Benning Management Association will continue to sponsor more management programs on a monthly basis. The next program will be 11:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. Sept. 21 at the Officers' Club.

The awarding of academic scholarships to students seeking a business or management degree will be the highlight of the program.

Boy Scouts need volunteers — The Fort Benning-Pataula District Boy Scouts of America experienced a loss of youth membership and adult volunteer leaders. Numerous positions are available, such as assistant cubmasters and scoutmasters, district committee members in training, programs, activities, publicity, camping and "at large" members who serve to coordinate specific events such as Christmas tree sales, fishing rodeo or Fall Campree.

If interested in volunteering, call Lt. Col. Mark S. Cloth at 544-3901 or 682-4440. For detailed information about scouting activities, call Frank Evans at 327-2634.

Tot Town offers programs — Tot Town Child Development Center opens at 5:30 a.m. Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays to accommodate children during physical training. Reservations are important, but drop-ins are welcome.

Tot Town is also open late Friday nights closest to pay days.

Reservations may be made by contacting Tot Town. Reservations can be made two weeks to 24 hours in advance. Call 689-8698 or 689-8772 for reservations or information.

Waiting spouses' support group — A waiting spouses' support group has been formed. The group is open to all spouses whose sponsors have departed for unaccompanied tours. The group meets at the Family Unit Network Center, Building 359.

Call the FUN Center, 545-5602, to sign up for one of the two group sessions.

Watch found — A watch was found recently in the east parking lot of Infantry Hall, Building 4.

For more information, call Spc. Carl Box at 545-2218 or come by Room 111 in Infantry Hall.

OWC piano lessons — The Officers' Wives' Club School of Performing Arts offers piano lessons for ages 4 through adult. Lessons are available Monday though Friday for 30 to 45 minutes. For information, call 687-3537 or call Diane Swiecickz at 297-6524.

AA — The Fort Benning Alcoholics Anonymous group meets every Monday, Thursday and Saturday at 7 p.m. in the basement of the DCA, Building 241.

OFF POST

Immunization clinic — The Columbus Health Department announces extended clinic hours, from 5 to 7 p.m., for immunizations and for hearing, vision and dental examinations.

The dates for the extended hours are Wednesday and Sept. 11.

The General Clinic is located at 2100 Comer Avenue, next to the Three Arts Theatre.

Tutors needed — Combined Communities of South Columbus, Inc., is seeking volunteer teachers and aides for its School Year Tutorial Program.

The program is located at Eastway School and Davis School, and classes will be conducted 10 a.m. to noon Saturdays beginning Sept. 9.

For more information, call Lonnie Jackson at 687-5357, Daisy Honor at 687-8808, or the CCSC, Inc., office at 321-9596.

You might prefer to be nestled in our woodlands, or perched along a rolling fairway. Either way, if protection from the world's demands appeals to you, so will StillWaters. We're a 2,200 acre master-planned community poised on the shores of Lake Martin. Here, peaceful waters lure all who love boating, fishing, and simple tranquility. And there is much more – one championship golf course and another under construction. A full-service marina. Biking and walking paths. Tennis. Restaurants. All easily accessible from your choice of lots – interior woodland, golf course, or lakefront on Lake Martin.

Luxurious Linkside Homes From $115,000.

Directly overlooking The Legend golf course, our single-family Linkside Homes range from 1,250 to 1,700 square feet and are priced from $115,000 to $150,000. Spacious floor plans emphasize fairway views, first-floor master suites with walk-in closets and roomy baths, and ample second bedrooms for guests or home office. Three floor plans and three elevations combine to form nine distinct styles. With the number of homesites limited to protect StillWaters' pristine environment, these homes clearly offer a rare lifestyle and excellent investment opportunity.
Far And Away Lake Martin's Finest Address.

Golf Colony Villas From $59,900.
One of the greatest values at StillWaters is our Golf Colony Villas. They're available with one, two or three bedrooms. Features include individual entrance balconies, screened private porches, large master bedrooms with walk-in closets, eat-in kitchens, and beautiful fairway views. Contemporary design is complemented by traditional touches and natural-colored, low-maintenance exteriors that blend with StillWaters' wooded terrain. Golf Colony delivers StillWaters with ease and affordability.

Free Introductory Golf Membership.
To introduce you to our golf course facilities, we're offering a free six-month membership with the purchase of a Golf Colony Villa or Linkside Home. Both our existing George Cobb course and Kurt Sandness-designed course now under construction wind through valleys and over beautiful rolling hills.
To claim your new home at StillWaters, now is the time to act. To arrange for a visit or for more information, please call 800/687-3732 or 205/825-7021, ext. 340. Models are open daily, and we're looking forward to showing you how life can be at Lake Martin's finest address.

Liaisons voice community needs

By Michael Hubanks
Special to The Bayonet©

Imagine: one day you walk out onto the playground of your housing area and discover that some of the equipment is damaged. One month later, you discover the same play equipment is still damaged. You wonder to whom you can voice your opinion.

If you live in post housing, one of the areas of contact is your local mayor. Shelley Marley, president of the Community Life Mayor's Association, said she adamantly believes that the mayors serve as liaisons between the residents of the community and all the agencies on Fort Benning.

"We voice the concerns of the community to the people who need to know about it," Marley said.

Fort Benning is one of many military installations that have a mayor's program. It is a private organization governed by constitutions and by-laws.

Each housing area has a volunteer mayor who distributes a newsletter to inform housing residents and has quarterly "town hall" meetings in which they try to find solutions to problems.

"We try to work issues at the lower levels," said Jennifer Morgan, the Community Life officer and director of the CLMA. Morgan said she believes the Mayor's Association tries to set improvements.

The mayors work in conjunction with the Directorate of Public Works and other post agencies in order to help improve the quality of life for soldiers and family members in military housing.

The mayor's program is not a substitute for the military police or area coordinators. "We don't handle domestic disputes. Your Military Police and area coordinator are the initial contact for these problems, but they do work close with the mayor's program," said Marley.

The program works uniquely in that issues that cannot be solved at a low level are brought to the Mayor's Council. From there, the problem is taken higher until a solution or compromise can be reached.

The program's support comes not only from the residents themselves but also from assistance from post commanders, including Col. Richard Rutledge, garrison commander, and Maj. James "Chuck" Walls, garrison executive officer. The true "building blocks," Morgan said, are the mayors and volunteers who come together to get a job done.

If you are interested in finding out more information about the volunteer Mayor's Council or if you want to volunteer your time, call Morgan at 545-5931 or Marley at 685-1508.

Mayoral elections at a glance

When: Sept. 20 and 21

Where: Voting will take place at each Community Life center. The centers will have extended hours those two days, 8 a.m. to 6 p.m.

How: Ballots will be out before each election (usually one week). There will also be ballots at each Community Life center. There is one vote per person.

Other: For more information, contact Jennifer Morgan at 545-5931 or 545-5246 or Shelley Marley at 685-1805.

Vet clinic expands schedule

Veterinary Treatment Facility

The Veterinary Treatment Facility has announced its expanded appointment schedule.

The facility's new civilian technician, Jenny Greer, made this possible. She is a graduate from Snead Junior College.

The treatment facility is located at Building 265, 10th Mountain Division Road; the telephone number is 545-4444.

The clinic is by appointment only from 8 to 11:30 a.m. and noon to 3 p.m. Monday through Friday, and closed Wednesday afternoon for training and the last working day of each month for inventory.

IOBC lieutenants work to improve conditions for man's best friends

2nd Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment

The Infantry Officers Basic Course, 4th Platoon, Company A, 2nd Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment, performed eight hours of volunteer work at the Muscogee County Humane Society Aug. 20.

It was the first time the Humane Society received help of this size from a Fort Benning infantry unit, according to Betty Schroeder, Humane Society president. The shelter is normally open on Sundays, but it closed for the volunteer work to be accomplished.

"It was pretty cool getting together with the guys and helping out the Humane Society. We have a dog and cat at home so it was fun seeing the animals," said 2nd Lt. Aurie Richards.

The 43 lieutenants divided into six work teams to accomplish much needed maintenance at the Humane Society Center. These teams painted the dog and cat kennels, repaired light fixtures, constructed the foundation for two sidewalks going to the side entrance of the Humane Society and rebuilt a cinderblock wall between the sidewalks and a ramp leading to a storage shed.

The lieutenants were able to keep all animals cool and under control while they performed their volunteer work.

"I enjoyed it because it was a worthy cause, and it helped to build team spirit between the community and the Army," 2nd Lt. Daniel O'Neal said.

Schroeder complimented the lieutenants on the great amount of work they were able to accomplish in such a short period of time.

The Muscogee County Humane Society is a shelter and adoption agency for cats and dogs within the county run through private donations.

Fort Benning school board members begin fall meetings

By Donna S. Budjenska
Special to The Bayonet©

The Fort Benning School Board had its first meeting of the 1995-1996 school year Monday.

The six school board members present discussed the school lunchroom fund, lack of participation in the breakfast program and the lowering enrollment.

Dr. Dell Karr, superintendent, gave her report regarding the schools' status in terms of renovations, staff development and instructional programs.

Alice Skinner, director of logistics for the schools, reported the loss of $6,826 in the school lunchroom fund for July, a loss she said was expected during summertime. The year-to-date loss totals $33,427, while the current fund equity is $98,825.

The school lunchroom fund is a nonappropriated fund and part of the installation Morale, Welfare and Recreation fund, Skinner said. Money in the account is generated from breakfast and lunch sales and United States Department of Agriculture reimbursements. Money also earns interest from account investments.

The board discussed the lack of participation in the breakfast program by Faith Middle School's and Dexter Elementary School's students. While most schools report normal breakfast sales, Dexter's and Faith's turnout have been poor so far. Board members gave ideas for improving sales and making the program profitable in those schools.

Karr noted the decrease in enrollment, down by 337 students from fall 1994.

The next school board meeting is Sept. 25, 1 p.m., at the schools administration building.

Other school board members present were Chief of Staff Col. Gregory Camp, president; Rhoda Zerger, Dexter representative; Col. David Brown, Faith; Kris Holcombe, Loyd; Shelia Long, Stowers; Adrienne Porter, White; Col. Richard Rutledge, schools officer, Dr. Richard Skinner, assistant superintendent for budget and personnel; and Allan Day, human resource site manager.

ask the judge

By Michael H. Lane
Office of the Staff Judge Advocate

Q: I am about to retire, am 41 years of age and in good health. My wife and I are discussing whether I should sign up for the Survivor Benefit Plan when I retire. The SBP deduction will be 6.5 percent of my retired pay or about $130 per month.

A financial advisor says I should forget SBP and that I would be better off to use the $130 per month to purchase term insurance together with a mutual fund plan. What do you say?

A: In a sense, you are asking me to predict the future. If we knew exactly when you would die, and whether this would be a service connected death or not, then the choice would be easier. For example, SBP is unnecessary for a person whose spouse dies of service-connected causes. This person will receive dependency and indemnity compensation at no cost, together with Social Security. If we know that the spouse will die first, we need not worry about insurance on your pension. But we do not know, so we deal with probabilities.

According to most Department of Defense experts and several private actuarial studies, there is no commercial alternative available which compares to the Survivor Benefit Plan.

The SBP plan pays an inflation-adjusted monthly income to your eligible survivors, to replace the loss of your retirement pay at your death. This payment is tied to the cost of living and is always increasing, just as retirement pay did. For your spouse's life, no matter how long, SBP and Social Security are combined to ensure that your spouse will receive about 55 percent of your retirement pay. Experience suggests that spouses whose husbands did not take out SBP often have severe financial difficulties after death of the retiree. This extra money may make the difference between hardship and sufficiency.

There are many fine investment and insurance programs, and if they all ran according to the sales presentations, there is no doubt that they would be superior. If you should die within a few years of retirement, for example, and if the rate of return on investments is high enough, it may be possible to recreate the same amount of money over time as SBP could provide. The trouble is that real life is not as neat as a sales chart. Stock and bond prices rise and fall. Interest rates fluctuate. The risk of loss in such cases is on the spouse, not the mutual fund company.

Also, it is likely that you will live past age 65 and that your spouse will live a number of years after your death. If your spouse should live for 25 years after your death, there are very few mutual funds that could cover the SBP payment amount.

Third, insurance or mutual fund payments are not indexed to inflation. The federal annuity cost of living raises greatly increase the actual monthly payment your spouse receives under SBP at any age. For example, if your retirement pay is to be $2,000 now, a 5 percent COLA increase over 20 years results in a monthly payment of $1,857 per month at the 35 percent level, plus Social Security. Even if future COLA increases are lower, the advantage is with SBP over time. For most persons at your age, SBP is a wise choice.

There is no solution that is appropriate in every situation, and SBP is not for everyone. However, it provides a financial safety net for the spouse not available elsewhere.

The Legal Assistance Office, Building 5, is available to assist you in these and other matters by appointment. Office hours are 8 a.m. to 5 p.m.; the telephone number is 545-3282.

crime watch

Military Police Activity

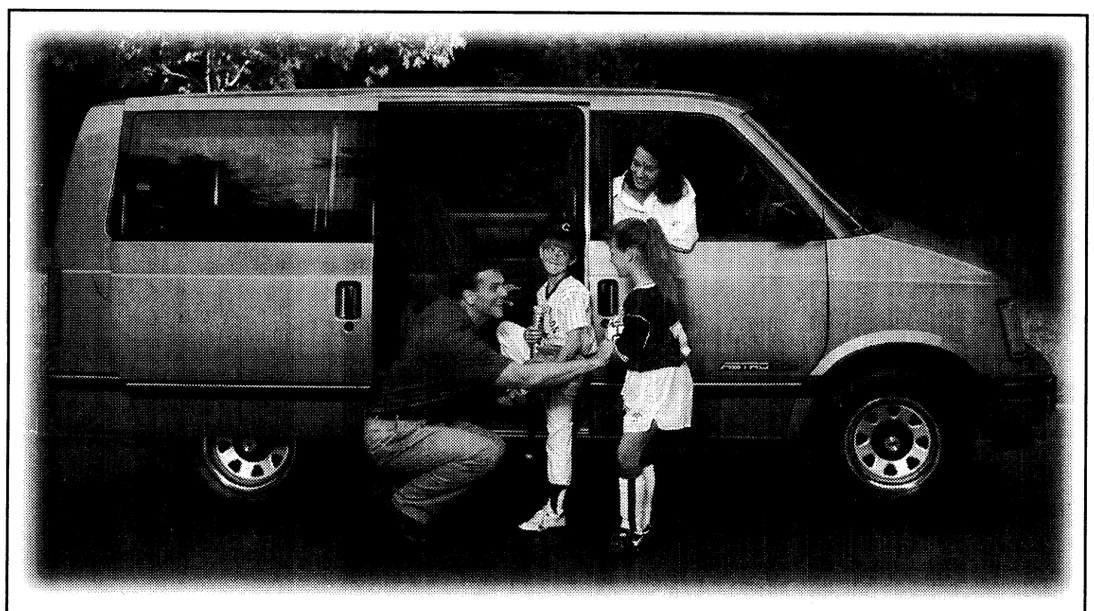
TAKE A BITE OUT OF CRIME

This week's hot topic concerns the 15 mph school speed zones.

On Aug. 22, Fort Benning schools opened their doors for the 1995-96 school year. There will be an increased amount of children walking along the roadways in the morning and afternoons, and in efforts to protect these children, a 15 mph speed zone is in effect in the immediate areas surrounding the schools. The school zones are enforced by Military Police radar patrols Monday through Friday from 7:30 to 9 a.m. and Monday, Wednesday and Friday from 2 to 2:45 p.m., and Tuesday 12:50 to 2:30 p.m. At selected intersections, crossing guards are placed to assist children to and from school.

The following entries were extracted from the Fort Benning Military Police blotters. Such entries may be incomplete and do not determine the guilt or innocence of any person.

• A specialist was escorted to the Military Police station by his unit for a command-directed breathalyzer test. The soldier was administered a breathalyzer test resulting in a positive reading and was charged with being drunk on duty. The specialist was further processed and released to his unit.



• A civilian was charged with carrying a weapon on a federal installation. The civilian's vehicle was observed in a dark parking lot by the MPs. When the MPs approached the vehicle, they observed a handgun between the seats of the vehicle. The individual was apprehended and taken to the MP station where he was processed, issued post ejection orders and escorted to the post boundaries.

Other activities included three cases of driving under the influence of alcohol, eight traffic accidents, 12 cases of larceny and four cases of shoplifting.

Remember to help "Make Our Post The Best — Give Crime Arrest." Report any activity that seems wrong or out of place to the Military Police at 545-5223 or 545-5224 or the "Crime In Progress" line at 545-5222.

God's recipe fulfills spiritual hunger

reflections

We all love to see new and creative recipes during the summertime. In fact, we love to think about new ways of preparing food anytime during the year.

After graduating from Ranger School I prepared one of my favorite meals, ready-to-eat recipes for my wife. Somehow the MRE treat didn't quite taste the same at home as it did in the field.

I guess it is natural to think so much about food. We can't live without physical food, and most people eat two to three meals a day to give them nourishment.

It wasn't any different for the children of Israel. After Moses helped them escape from Egypt and their many years of bondage, they found themselves in the wilderness without any food. They began to complain that at least in Egypt they had plenty to eat.

But God demonstrated his great love and care for them by providing them 'manna' every morning. It was a bread-like substance that formed as flakes on the ground, and God provided exactly the amount they needed every day for 40 years.

Boy, talk about a challenge to come up with new recipes for meals. In the book of Kings I, God shows his love for Elijah on one occasion by having ravens feed him, and another time an angel of the Lord fed him cakes of bread for a 40-day journey. (The origin of angel food cake?)

God has shown his willingness over and over again to meet our physical need for food. But there is a hunger that is greater than our need for physical food. We can fill our bellies, like going to an all-you-can-eat buffet, but still have a yearning for something higher and deeper. This is a spiritual hunger, and we all have it.

Once again, God has met this need. Christ Jesus called himself the "Bread of God" or the "Bread of life." Bread has always been the symbol of life, and Christ came to reveal God to the world and demonstrate spiritual life with all that it includes. This spiritual life is available to all.

The following recipe is one we can follow to nourish our spiritual life, which actually is life itself: Take the Bread of Life (Christ) mixed with a dose of hunger and thirst after righteousness ("Blessed are they which do hunger and thirst after righteousness for they shall be filled." Matthew 5:6), plus a morning ration of God's word ("man does not live by bread only, but by every word that proceeds from the mouth of God." Deuteronomy 8:3), followed by living what we have received ("My meat/food is to do the will of him that sent me." John 4:34). (KJV)

This recipe will satisfy the biggest hunger in your household and should fall within everyone's budget.

Revival brings guest speaker, musician

USAIC Chaplain Office

The USAIC Chaplain Office is sponsoring a revival at Marshall Auditorium at 7 p.m Sept. 8 through 10 .

The keynote speaker will be Chaplain (Maj.) "Sonny" Moore from the U.S. Military Academy, at West Point, N.Y.

Curtis Bridgeman will bring a blend of traditional and contemporary gospel music as the featured solo artist.

Though a relative new comer to the concert arena, this young man inspires and delights audiences with musical artistry, according to the chaplain's office.

"My heart's desire is to be an empty vessel which the spirit of the Lord can fill for his pleasure and glory," Bridgeman said. "I want to be a witness through the gift he has given me."

H&R BLOCK INCOME TAX COURSE
STARTS SEPTEMBER 9, 1995

Thousands of people learn how to prepare income tax returns from H&R Block and then earn money as income tax preparers. H&R Block, the world's largest income tax preparation service, offers its Income Tax Course, starting September 9, 1995. Morning, evening and Saturday classes are available.

Experienced instructors teach tax law, theory and application. Classroom discussion and practice problems provide students with a thorough understanding of each tax topic included in the course. Students learn how to handle increasingly complex income tax situations as the course progresses.

Ideal for people who want to increase their tax knowledge, the course teaches students how to save money on their taxes and also prepares them for a rewarding career.

The affordable fee includes textbooks and supplies. Graduates receive Certificates of Achievement and continuing education units (CEU's). Qualified graduates of the course may be offered job interviews with H&R Block, but are under no obligation to accept employment.

Those interested in more information about the H&R Block Income Tax Course may contact the H&R Block office at Simons Plaza Shopping Center, 2511 Airport Thruway, Columbus, Georgia.

Post teacher makes grade

Fort Benning Schools

Dr. Wanda H. Person, media specialist at Wilson School, was selected as a state winner in the 1995 Technology and Learning Teacher of the Year program, sponsored by Microsoft. Her entry was chosen over all others in the state as exemplary of innovative teaching with technology.

In the spring, Person was successful in setting up the first electronic bulletin board within the Fort Benning School System. As with Prodigy and America On-line, the bulletin board offers users a variety of services from turning in homework assignments to a group-student chat. This concept of incorporating technology into improving the quality of education proved to be the winning entry for the state of Georgia.

Person will be receiving several software titles from Microsoft as well as recognition in the September issue of Technology and Learning magazine. From the prestigious group of state winners, a national winner will be chosen later this summer. She has received letters from both Linda Schrenko, state superintendent of schools as well as Gov. Zell Miller congratulating her for making Georgia's students the best they can be.

Fort Benning graduates 7 DENTAC residents

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet©

The Army welcomed seven new graduates of the advanced education program in general dentistry Tuesday in a ceremony at the National Infantry Museum.

The program, conducted by the Fort Benning Dental Activity, is a one year post-doctoral program that provides professional education to selected dental officers during their first year of active duty and includes comprehensive training in all major specialty areas of dental practice.

This year's graduates included Capts. M. Paul Anderson, Thomas A. Jarrett, Rick A. Morlen, Randolph J. Nartea, Shannon M. Pye, L. Tyler Sumner and Erik H. Wells.

"You represent the future of the Dental Corps," said Col. Richard A. Nurnberg, DENTAC commander. "You are the ambassadors of Fort Benning and of the training program here, which this year was accredited by the American Dental Association."

Maj. Gen. John Cuddy, chief of the Army Dental Corps, was on hand to extend his personal congratulations to each graduate and to deliver a graduation address.

"Each of you today is a pioneer," Cuddy said, "a pioneer in one of the Army health care's most challenging eras. The benefits of the training you have received here will serve you well."

"Something very, very good has happened here," said Col. Thomas Richardson, director of the residency program, "for out of this intense human experience you have emerged ready. You are ready and worthy to take your rightful place as our colleagues. You are ready to become a vital part of this proud legacy of excellence and service which are the legacy of the Army Dental Corps."

In addition to the presentation of certificates to the graduating class, Lt. Col. Leander Lanier, chief of endodontics, was recognized as the Mentor of the Year for his outstanding dedication in the training of this year's residents.

The Fort Benning Dental Activity conducts the residency program in accordance with guidelines from the Council on Dental Education of the American Dental Association and the Surgeon General, Department of the Army.

The students receive training in endodontics, orthodontics, periodontics, pediatric dentistry, prosthodontics, general dentistry and outpatient oral surgery at the Love Dental Clinic and training in operating procedures at the Hospital Dental Clinic.

Youth football tackles preseason

By Brian R. Voller
Bayonet staff writer

Youth footballers began their preseason training camp August 21 on Blue Field and will continue until Sept. 1.

The training camp drew more than 180 children and several curious parents to watch their children prepare for the gridiron.

"The camp is designed to physically and mentally prepare the kids for the season," John Peeler, youth football coordinator and head coach of the Vikings, said: "A lot of the kids have had the summer off, and we're here to prepare them."

The youth football league is separated into three age groups; the 9- to 12-year-olds; the 13- to 15-year-olds; and the 6- to 8-year-olds, who only play flag football and are not required to attend the football camp.

The youth attending the camp are put through several drills designed to enhance their basic skills, Peeler said.

"There are five basic drills the kids are doing improve their skills and help condition them for the season," Peeler said. "The drills help the kids and help us to identify the players' strong points early."

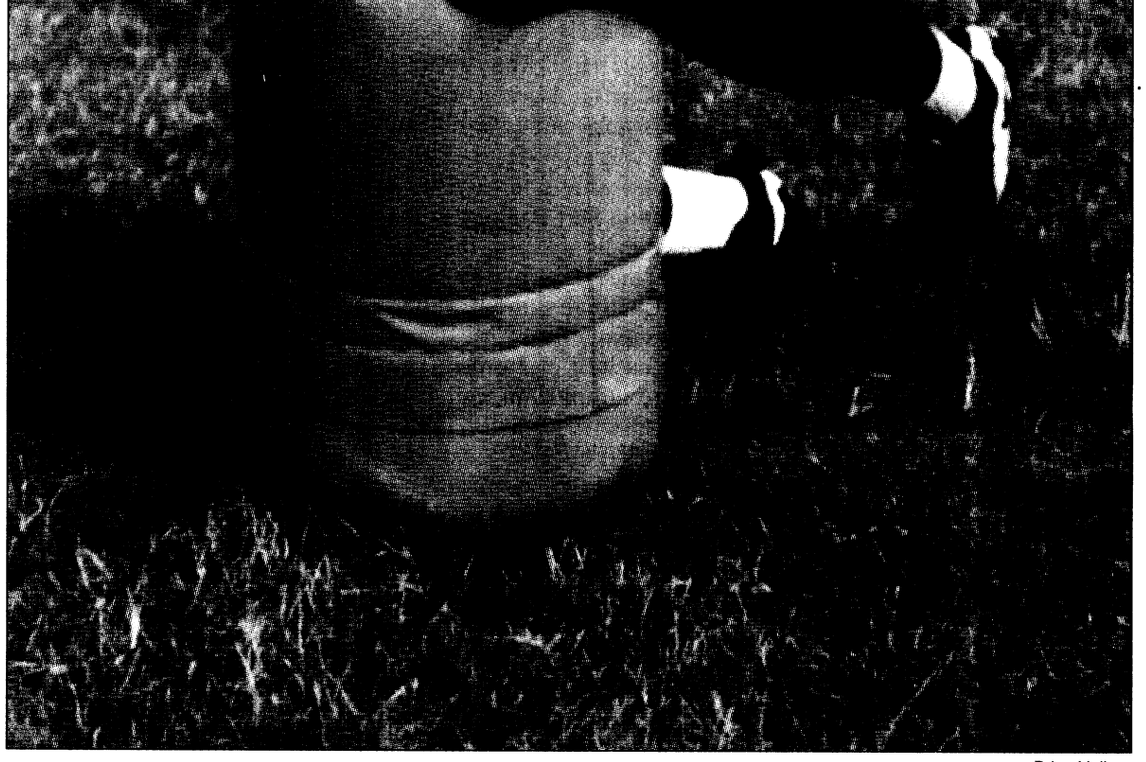
The first is a running drill where a player has to high step through tires and then weave in and out of cones . The running drill is designed to test the player's agility and his coordination while running with a ball.

The next drill is a passing drill where the youth again weaves in and out of cones. During the drill one of the coaches throws him two passes, one when he is at a medium distance and another when he is going long.

After that, they move on to another passing drill where the coaches can evaluate potential quarterbacks by having the players throw to each other.

The linemen get a piece of the action with the blocking drill. Here the players hit a blocking dummy, roll on the ground and get up to hit the next tackling dummy.

Finally, the last drill tests the future defensive backs' agility with a reaction drill. A coach holds a football in front of the player and whatever direction the coach points the ball the player has to move in that direction.



Peeler said the player and parent response has been positive thus far.

"Total, we have 210 kids signed up to play in the league," Peeler said. "The number of kids is a lot higher then we've had in years past. Plus, the parents are out there to see their kid's first experience with a sport."

The cost of signing players up varies with rank and membership in youth activities. The cost is $15 for one child, $25 for two children and $30 for three or more children for members who are staff sergeant or above, and $12, $20 and $26 respectively for sergeants and below.

For non-members the price is increased by $5.

The cost includes all uniforms and essential equipment. All extra equipment, such as forearm pads, blocking gloves and shoes must be purchased at the parents' expense.

SIMPLY SPORTS

College beats pros

By Brian R. Voller
Bayonet staff writer

The first sporting event ever televised was a college football game. During those grand old days there were no professional sports teams in football, and the college games where the big draw.

"Papa Bear" George Hallas had a dream: to start a sporting league in which the great college players could continue to do what they do best. This was the birth of the National Football League.

Hallas' dream became a beautiful reality, but unfortunately it's all gone down hill from there. Professional football is now dominated by money-hungry contract fanatics who care nothing about the sport.

The only true place to see what a real football game looks like is to watch the good old National College Athletics Association.

Granted, I'll give you the argument that most of the players in the NCAA are future contract fanatics, but while they play in college they play hard to get those contracts.

There is also the addition of the National Title and the Heisman Trophy that adds to the game. Players in college have more to play for than the pros.

When a player goes pro he ceases to care what team he plays for, he just wants that paycheck. The loyalty level of the college teams is extraordinary. If you went to a player on Notre Dame and asked him to play for Penn State, I can almost guarantee he would sooner die than make that move.

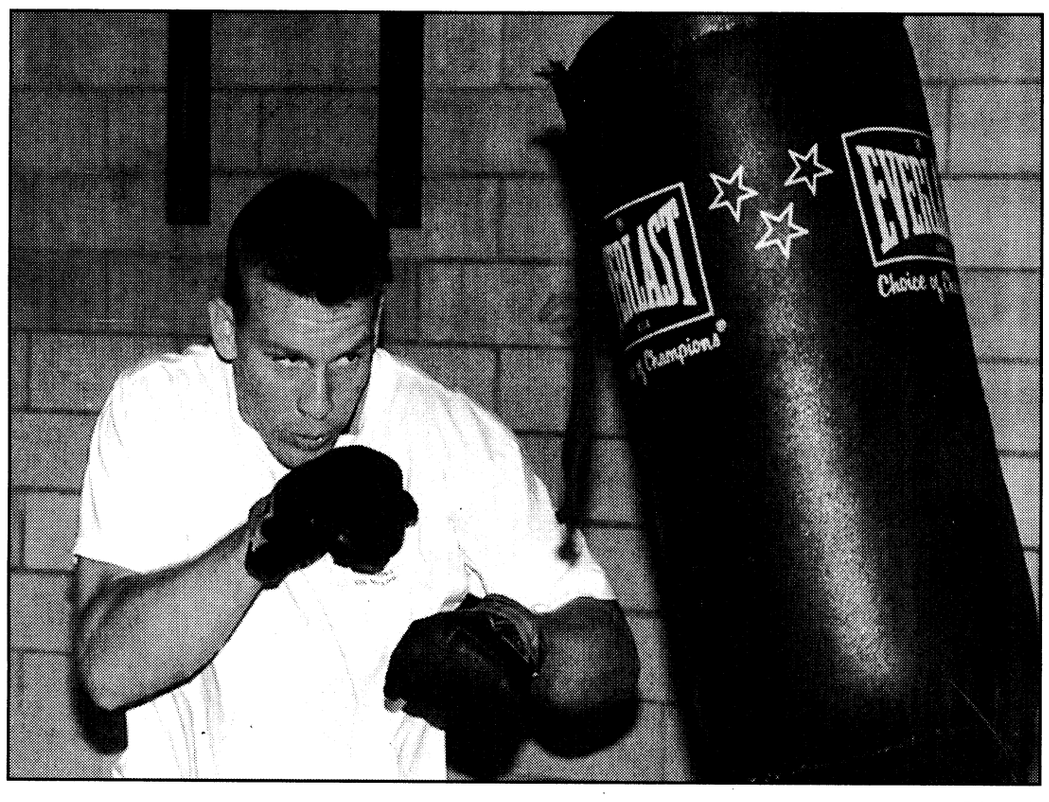
Another difference, and I don't fault the coaches for this, is there is almost no player-coach loyalty in the pros. The owners of the teams give a coach two years to win big; if they don't, the coach gets fired, and they move on to a new coach.

Where are the Lou Holtzes, the Bobby Bowdens or the Joe Paternos? There aren't any grand names we can remember in the pros anymore. Heck, we're lucky if we even know who the coaches are anymore.

Don't get me wrong: coaches like Don Shula, Mike Ditka and Vince Lombardi were all great coaches, but the trend seems to be moving away from keeping coaches. They're becoming as recyclable as aluminum cans.

There are also the classic rivalry games that make college sports so special. Games like Notre Dame vs. Penn State, Florida State vs. Miami or UCLA vs. USC. These are games where the rivalry is as old as the game of football, and the players go out there to truly dominate and hurt the other team.

In the Pros we used to have some classic rivalries to watch, but now it seems there's nothing to look forward to except Chicago vs. Greenbay. But even that classic rivalry doesn't match the power of the college games.



In the long run I think professional sports are going to suffer major audience drain because of the price increases that keep occurring. Major league baseball almost shot itself in the foot with its brief little strike.

When the smoke clears and the pros are left licking their wounds, there will still be the college teams playing their hearts out for the real rewards of sports. The rewards that come with saying, "I gave my all."

Deeper, darker water aids bass fishing

By Earl Bentz and Steve Price
Outboard Marine Corporation

"In the summer, the first question I want to answer about locating bass is their depth."

That's the opinion of Ken Cook, and it's an opinion he said is shared by most pros across the country. In the summer, learning the proper depth is the real key to catching bass.

"Because of the way the eye of a bass is constructed, the fish can see very well in dim light," Cook said. "Thus, you have to think of darker, shady places for the fish."

Because water quality normally determines water clarity, Cook said he studies the amount of algae in the water and checks lure visibility.

"When I'm trying to determine how deep bass are, I'll drop a white spinnerbait into the water and see how deep it is before it disappears," Cook said. "Then I double that distance to get an approximate depth of where the bass are."

Cook emphasizes that water clarity is not the same in all parts of a lake. In the summer, the lower, deeper portion of an impoundment will normally be clearer than the upper portion.

"This is one reason many fishermen head to the far upper reaches of the lake where it actually turns back into a river," Cook explains. "The water is more dingy so the bass are not nearly as deep."

Depth also determines which lures Cook uses for summer bass.

"Basically, I want anything that imitates a shad, because that's the primary summer food of bass," he said. "What's important is to make sure that the lure effectively covers the depth the bass are using."

Merrill's Platoon carries on

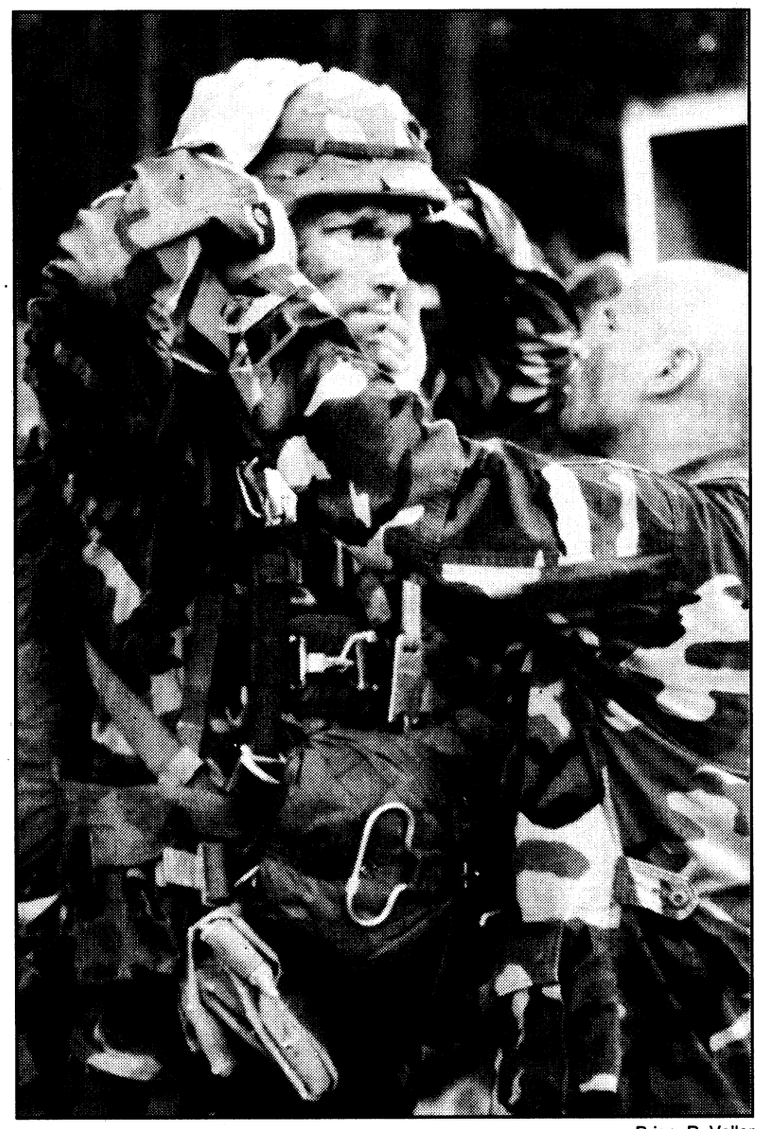
By Brian R. Voller
Bayonet staff writer

The "Merrill's Marauders," 475th Infantry, were a group of volunteer soldiers from the 5th, 154th and 33rd Infantry regiments, who were engaged in combat in the South Pacific during World War II.

From February to May 1944, the Marauders worked closely with the Chinese 22nd and 38th divisions in an attempt to recover northern Burma and clear the way for the construction of Ledo Road.

The Marauders fought in five major and 30 minor engagements and defeated the veteran soldiers of the Japanese 18th Division.

After their work in Burma, the Marauders 475th was disbanded in August 1944.



Today there is no Merrill's Marauders, but the "Merrill's Platoon" on Fort Benning is one of the main support areas for the Ranger Training Brigade.

"The main job of the Merrill's Platoon is to insert (by parachute) into the ranger training areas and assist in the training of the ranger students," said Sgt 1st Class Dominick Giampietro, platoon sergeant. "When we're not assisting the RTB, we're conducting regular infantry tactics and procedures."

Currently, the Merrill's Platoon is made up of 13 ranger-qualified infantry soldiers and six infantry jumpmasters.

Aug. 21, Merrill's Platoon conducted a training exercise that was designed to test its skills when attacked. The Merrill's Platoon is generally the aggressor force, but during this training event they were aggressed.

"We are usually the aggressive force when we train with the RTB," Giampietro said. "A training event like this is designed to see how we react to being hit by an opposing force."

Brian R. Voller

Sgt. 1st Class Dominick Giampietro performs jumpmaster personnel inspection on Spc. Jason W. Benham prior to a helicopter insertion Aug. 21.

The training began at Camp Rogers where the operation orders were organized and the troop-leading procedures were developed.

From there, the platoon moved to a brief safety check with Giampietro discussing the proper procedures for a night air drop.

The actual assault began with a night parachute insertion by helicopter on Arkman Drop Zone. Part of the night jump also included a high-altitude, low-opening jump done by special forces soldiers out of Fort Bragg, N.C.

After the jump, the platoon did a tactical movement southward where they engaged in a battle drill. At the end of the exercise, the platoon conducted an after-action report of the night's training.

"Our training is 12 hours of planning for a four-hour mission," Giampietro said. "We strive to keep ourselves at the highest state of readiness by doing training like this."

First Lt. Mark E. Townsend, platoon leader and company executive officer, said the Merrill's Platoon takes great pride in its history and its mission.

"We have really tough training in this platoon and very high discipline," Townsend said.

"We may never equal the level of the original Merrill's Marauders, but these are different times and we make our contribution differently. We try to emulate them. They're our heroes."

OCS to induct 46 into Hall of Fame

USAIC Public Affairs Office

The Officer Candidate School will induct past OCS graduates into its Hall of Fame Sept. 8 at 11 a.m. in Marshall Auditorium, Infantry Hall.

Induction into the OCS Hall of Fame is the single highest honor that OCS can bestow upon its graduates. This year marks the 37th anniversary of the OCS Hall of Fame. Forty-six OCS graduates have been nominated and are scheduled to be inducted into the Hall of Fame this year. Inductees include one major general, four brigadier generals, 38 colonels, one posthumous Medal of Honor recipient and two civilians.

An officer selected for the Hall of Fame induction must have been commissioned from the Officer Candidate School at Fort Benning or the Ground General School at Fort Riley, Kan., and accomplished one of the following:

- Awarded the Medal of Honor (regardless of rank)
- Attained the rank of colonel
- Been elected or appointed to an office of prominence in national or state government
- Been recognized and recommended by the commandant of the Infantry School for outstanding service.

More than 1,720 graduates have been inducted into the OCS Hall of Fame, including 33 Medal of Honor recipients, 115 brigadier generals, 98 major generals, 20 lieutenant generals, three generals and 94 distinguished civilians who have graduated from OCS. Other officers have been promoted to general officer subsequent to their induction.

Brig. Gen. Burt S. Tackaberry, deputy commanding general, U.S. Army Aviation Center, Fort Rucker, Ala., is the guest speaker for the ceremony. Tackaberry, his father, retired Lt. Gen. Thomas H. Tackaberry, and his twin brother, Col. Keif S. Tackaberry, are OCS graduates and have been inducted into the OCS Hall of Fame.

IOBC students shoot it out during exercise

By Paul P. Kronenberger
2nd Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment

"Incoming, 12 o'clock, 200 meters," is echoed by the platoon of second lieutenants during its first platoon live-fire exercise at Griswold Range.

During the morning of Aug. 16, the Infantry Officer Basic Course students of Company B, 2nd Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment, conducted a platoon level live-fire exercise using the skills of fire and maneuver.

This live-fire exercise is the first in a series of platoon-level exercises where IOBC students will learn how to develop leadership abilities under combat conditions, said Maj. Lorenzo Smith, Co. B commander. Some of the rehearsals included weapon drills, reacting to enemy contact and leader assessments of the situation. After two days of rehearsals, each platoon was ready to put its training to the test.

One of the leader assessments came from 2nd Lt. Ryan Dillon, who was one of the assault element squad leaders.

"I felt that it was a great opportunity to gain confidence in our fellow lieutenants in using live ammunition with fire and maneuver," he said.

Smith said, "All four platoons conducted their live-fire exercise with the spirit and vigor of successful infantry leaders."

In addition to the live-fire exercise, Company B conducted an advanced land navigation test Aug. 17 that lasted 11 hours. The advanced land navigation test began in the evening and ended on the next morning. A few training enhancers included the distance between the points and the use of opposing forces. Teams of two students marched through the woodline with a rucksack, load carrying equipment and their personal weapon for approximately 15 kilometers. The opposing forces patrolled near the road and trail systems for the navigation teams. The OPFOR scanned the wood line and aggressed the teams with an observer or controller device that is used with the Multiple Integrated Laser Engagement System.

"This provided realistic and demanding training for the IOBC students," said Capt. Dean Weiler, 1st Platoon trainer. "All of the training that the infantry lieutenants received this week enhanced their abilities to lead and provide for platoon or infantryman in battle."

SOA officers get a close look at ITB

By Judith Ginder
School of the Americas

Students from the School of the Americas Officer Training Management Course visited the place where it all begins for U.S. Army infantrymen, the Infantry Training Brigade, Aug. 24.

The five-week course trains officers, second lieutenant through major, to plan, execute and administer small-unit training. The course also teaches students how to develop training programs and to instruct. The SOA group got to see what infantry training at Fort Benning is all about.

"We have the job of turning ordinary citizens first into soldiers, then into infantrymen," said Lt. Col. Robert Radcliffe, ITB deputy commander.

Radcliffe talked to the Latin American officers about how ITB makes soldiers out of the young men who go through basic training here. He also spoke at length about the role that the drill sergeant plays in this.

"The noncommissioned officer here — the drill sergeant — is the key to the success of the training at ITB," Radcliffe said.

He stressed that drill sergeants conduct all training and that they have a great deal of responsibility. After Radcliffe briefed the students, they toured the 30th Adjutant General Reception Battalion and other training areas at ITB.

Argentina Maj. Adalberto Ferreyra, director of the SOA Officer Training Management Course, said one of the benefits Latin American students receive at SOA is seeing the kind of training that takes place at Fort Benning.

"Studying about U.S. training is one thing," he said, "but having the opportunity to see it first-hand puts it more into perspective for the students."

OCS inducts past graduates into

Hall of Fame

USAIC Public Affairs Office

The Officer Candidate School is inducting OCS graduates into its Hall of Fame today in Marshall Auditorium, Infantry Hall.

Induction into the OCS Hall of Fame is the single highest honor that OCS can bestow upon its graduates. This year marks the 37th anniversary of the OCS Hall of Fame. Forty-six OCS graduates have been nominated and are scheduled to be inducted into the Hall of Fame this year. Inductees include one major general, four brigadier generals, 38 colonels, one posthumous Medal of Honor recipient and two civilians.

An officer selected for the Hall of Fame induction must have been commissioned from the Officer Candidate School at Fort Benning or the Ground General School at Fort Riley, Kan., and accomplished one of the following:

- Awarded the Medal of Honor (regardless of rank)
- Attained the rank of colonel while serving on active duty or duty in a Reserve component
- Been elected or appointed to an office of prominence in national or state government
- Or been recognized and recommended by the commandant of the Infantry School for outstanding service.

More than 1,720 graduates have been inducted into the OCS Hall of Fame, including 33 Medal of Honor recipients, 115 brigadier generals, 98 major generals, 20 lieutenant generals, three generals and 94 distinguished civilians who have graduated from OCS. Other officers have been promoted to general officer subsequent to their induction.

Maj. Gen. Stephen Siegfried, an OCS graduate and currently assigned to the Office of the Chief of Staff, United States Army, Washington, D.C., is the guest speaker. He previously commanded the Infantry Training Brigade at Fort Benning.

Computer network aids in government contracting

By Shannon Day
Special to The Bayonet©

The government has implemented a more efficient and user friendly way to bid on its contracts.

Interested bidders will access the Federal Acquisition Computer Network, which is similar to Internet in the private sector, according to Charlene Cowman, chief, Support Division, Directorate of Contracting.

"What this means is that for many of our purchases between $2,500 and $100,000, we can now receive bids through an electronic bulletin board called an Electronic Data Interchange," she said.

Businesses from all over the United States who subscribe to a Value Added Network (a third party that will connect them through to the bid bulletin board) will have an opportunity to bid on government contracts posted on EDI.

"This will speed up many of the contracting procedures, and should eventually result in a paperless process," Cowman said. "The time required to award bids should decrease due to the speed in which electronic bids are transmitted and received."

"What used to take three months to purchase may now only take two weeks," she added.

Start-up costs for businesses are estimated at $1,500 plus $30 to $100 per month to subscribe to a VAN.

Businesses that have questions about using the electronic bulletin board/EDI can contact Cowman at 545-1945, or Roy Leggitt at the Columbus College Procurement Technical Assistance Center at 569-3088.

AAFES recalls 1000s of food dehydrators

USAIC Public Affairs Office

DALLAS — The Army and Air Force Exchange Service is recalling thousands of American Harvest food dehydrators manufactured between Jan. 1 and July 12, 1995.

The food dehydrators could experience a locked rotor malfunction presenting a potential fire hazard. The three Snackmaster models being recalled are the 2200/FD-30, 2400/FD-50 and 2400T/FD-50T. The serial numbers on the bottom of the base of the recalled appliances have 59 as the first two digits with B, C, D, F, G, H, or J as the third digit, and ZB, ZC, ZF, or ZH as the fourth and fifth digits.

The recall also includes Snackmaster dehydrators with white or cream colored base covers that have been serviced since October 1994.

The Snackmaster Jr. FD-20, and Gardenmaster FD-1000 are not affected by this recall.

All customers should stop using the recalled dehydrators and should call American Harvest at (800) 288-4545 between 7:30 a.m. and 4:30 p.m. Central Time. American Harvest will provide free pickup and repair of the food dehydrators.

Home at last!

Soldiers from the 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division, file off an airplane at Lawson Army Airfield, Aug. 31. Nearly 3,400 soldiers from 3rd Bde., 24th Inf. Division, returned from the National Training Center at Fort Irwin, Calif., this weekend. The brigade had been training there for more than three weeks. The training involves force-on-force situational training exercises in which soldiers performed offensive and defensive operations.

POW-MIA Recognition Day

JTF-Full Accounting cdr to speak at day's event

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Brig. Gen. Charles R. Viale, commander of the Joint Task Force-Full Accounting, is this year's speaker at Fort Benning's Prisoner of War - Missing in Action Recognition Day observance Sept. 15 at 2 p.m. in Infantry Hall's Marshall Auditorium.

The POW-MIA observance provides an opportunity for the U.S. Army Infantry Center to recognize and pay tribute to all former American POWs and those still missing and their families.

Viale's Joint Task Force, located at Camp H. M. Smith, Hawaii, works to resolve the cases of unaccounted for Americans.

Viale served as an infantryman with the 1st Infantry Division for three years before receiving his regular Army commission through the ROTC program at San Jose State College in 1968. Since then, Viale has served in a number of command and staff assignments.

Viale initially served as a platoon leader with both the 82nd Airborne Division and the 25th Infantry Division in Vietnam.

He returned to Vietnam in 1971 and commanded Company C, 1st Battalion, 501st Infantry, 101st Airborne Division, and Company D, 3rd Battalion, 21st Infantry, 196th Light Infantry Brigade.

Viale also commanded the 42nd Company, 4th Airborne Training Battalion, Fort Benning; the Iron Mountain, Michigan Recruiting Area; U.N. Command Security Force, Panmunjom, Korea; 2nd Infantry Training Brigade and the U.S. Army Infantry Training Center, Fort Benning; and was assistant division commander, 6th Infantry Division (Light), Fort Wainwright, Alaska. He has commanded the Joint Task Force-Full Accounting since July 7, 1994.

157th USAR inactivates

USAIC Public Affairs Office

The last organized infantry unit on the rolls of the U.S. Army Reserve inactivated Thursday at the National Infantry Museum.

Brig. Gen. Eddie Zyko, commanding general of the 157th Infantry Brigade, assisted by Command Sgt. Maj. George Longwell, command sergeant major of the 157th, passed the colors of the brigade to Col. Gregory Camp, chief of staff of the U.S. Army Infantry Center.

The subordinate battalions, two infantry, one armor and support units, were inactivated at their home stations in late August.

The 157th was originally constituted in August 1917 as an element of the 79th Division during World War I, and again mobilized for World War II service with the 79th Division. The unit became a separate brigade in 1962. It has been located at Upper Darby, and later, at Horsham, Penn.

The colors will be on display at the National Infantry Museum.

EIB training, testing begins this week

By Lori Egan
Bayonet staff writer

Training for the Expert Infantryman Badge Test, sponsored by the 29th Infantry Regiment, begins Monday through Sept. 16 at Burroughs Range.

Testing for the EIB test will be Sept. 18 to 22.

The EIB is an individual award presented to soldiers who meet the required criteria during a sanctioned test. Soldiers must demonstrate their abilities in common tasks and advanced infantryman's skills.

The test is open to everyone in the 11 and 18 series career management field.

During the 12-mile road march Sept. 21 and 22, Jamestown Road will be closed from Goodluck Road to Sunshine Road 5 to 10 a.m.

The award ceremony will be Sept. 22 at 11 a.m.

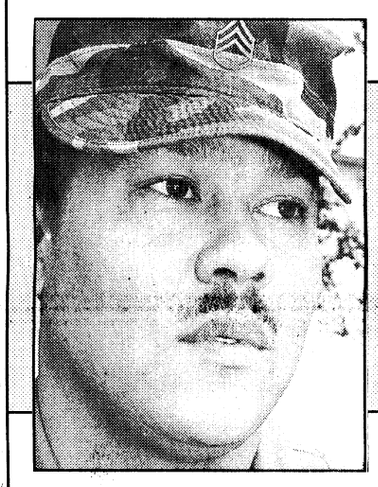
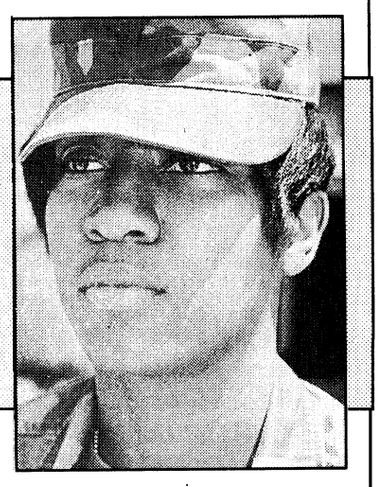
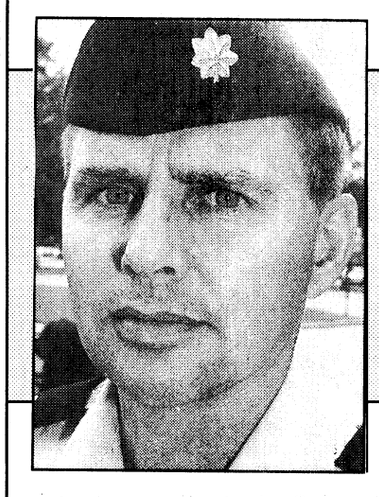
VARIOUS VOICES



What are your views on women in combat?



Pfc. Holly M. Walton, U.S. Army Medical Department Activity — "I personally wouldn't want to (be in combat.) But if there is a woman who can meet the standards, let her do it."



Retired Sgt. 1st Class Wilson L. Brown — "I don't think women should be in combat. Physically, women aren't built for infantry."

Staff Sgt. Hector M. Andrades, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment — "If they can pull their weight, let them go ahead and do it."

Spc. Donna M. Davis, Company E, 1st Battalion, 50th Infantry — "If a woman wants to be there then she should have that right and choice. With proper training, she should be just as efficient as a man. We're all soldiers."

Lt. Col. Robert C. Dubay, U.S. Army Medical Department Activity — "I think there are certain jobs out there in the field that women can do just as well as men can do. Women are very capable of doing the jobs men are capable of doing."

Female patriotism, equality still abused by society

By Patricia A. Long
The Fort Dix Post

Women in the military; women in combat — it has become the phraseology of the '90s. It has become the hot topic. Debated politically, militarily and around the kitchen table — the question is do they belong? Can they carry their weight? Should they be allowed to fight for their country?

Women have been fighting for social, economic and political equality for years — and the military has certainly not been immune to the dispute. The struggle to accord equal status to women and lift barriers in the workplace and on the battlefield is explosive.

Although the struggle continues, I would like to think it is finally making progress, albeit slowly.

A major step forward was the revocation of the "risk rule" in 1994 that barred women from assignment to Army combat units. Thousands of career fields are now available in combat support and combat service support fields to women who successfully complete training. In 1993, the Air Force opened air combat positions to women, and the Navy began lifting bans against women serving on combat ships.

This long-awaited implementation of a gender-neutral workplace is finally offering women a chance to prove to themselves, and others, they can meet the standards, which is really what persevering and succeeding in the military environment is all about — maintaining the standards in one's professional and personal life.

Unfortunately, those standards and the tenuous position women have attained in the military continue to be subjected to ridicule and contempt by civilian and military personnel. Perpetuated by uninformed, biased media and political cronies, the male vs. female distinctions project an image of incompetence and feebleness on the part of female soldiers.

> "A woman in uniform not only accepts the responsibility of defending this country with her life, she also has to defend her honor and ability to do so against a narrow-minded system."
> — Patricia A. Long
> The Fort Dix Post

This view is far from the reality of serving in the armed forces, which women have done throughout history.

How can one dispute the legendary prowess of females such as Catherine the Great and Queen Isabella as great commanders, and the famous heroine Joan of Arc? History has established several conflicts in which women have disguised themselves and fought alongside men. Their proficiency as warriors was not questioned. Yet, take off the camouflage, and their worthiness becomes diminished because of gender — not ability.

This is the situation women continue to encounter today. Only the means of punishment and control have changed. Instead of beheading, imprisonment or expatriation, their efforts and accomplishments are demeaned and maligned in full view of society by unenlightened media, dubious politicians and narrow-minded military officials.

Exploitation of these fallacies is, all too often, based on personal opinion rather than hard facts of past or current history and is continually capitalized upon to reach an ulterior motive. Accountability for one's actions should not only lie with military personnel, but those in the dangerous position of influencing American sentiment must also be culpable for their deeds. Experience, verifiable facts and impartiality used to have an integral position in the journalistic tradecraft. Today the name of the game is big business and power, sensationalism and money. What happened to truth?

Even as we move closer to the 21st century, female patriotism and equality continue to be abused. One journalist recently compared feminism to McCarthyism and routinely spouts unsubstantiated "politically correct" attitudes regarding an organization perceived through others' experiences. This is only one example of the continued exploitation of a situation that can and does work; there are many others. This is ultimately what antifeministic politicians and military officials also need to recognize. The system, though far from perfect, is in place. Policy has been implemented; and its success has, and will, continue to be documented.

A woman in uniform not only accepts the responsibility of defending this country with her life, she also has to defend her honor and ability to do so against a narrow-minded system. It is time for the cave-dwelling minority which continues advocating outdated, biased opinions regarding women in the military to wake up and pay tribute to the sacrifices made by these individuals.

Everyone has a responsibility to guarantee progress so this great nation lives up to its heritage "...that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their creator with certain unalienable rights..."

dial 545-boss

Dial 545-BOSS is the commander's action line for soldiers, family members and civilians to call when they have problems or complaints that can't be resolved elsewhere.

While it is not a substitute for the chain of command or for agencies established to provide assistance, the line offers another means of communication between Fort Benning's community and commanders.

The Bayonet features some of the calls that may benefit other members of the Fort Benning community.

Call: I would like to know why the air conditioning is being turned off when it's so hot out?

Garrison commander's response: The Fort Benning budget has been dramatically decreased this last year. These budget cuts have caused us to relook ways we operate so that we can continue to train soldiers and run our installation within our assigned budget.

When the operating budget was approved last year, the commanding general approved air- conditioning curtailments in an effort to stretch post dollars as far as possible.

Electrical curtailment is the method in which Fort Benning cuts back on electrical power usage during peak demand hours in exchange for lower year-round energy rates from our primary electrical supplier, Georgia Power Company. The managing of our post electrical loads reduces our electrical bill by more than $1 million per year.

Post occupants can help lessen electrical costs by being thrifty in the use of electrical power at all times throughout the year. It has become more important than ever to turn off unneeded lights and appliances. Prudent use of electricity will ensure potentially less curtailments.

We regret the inconvenience caused as a result of this policy. We ask for your patience and understanding during this time, so that we will have funds to provide air conditioning throughout the summer.

Col. Richard L. Rutledge
Garrison commander

Call: My tour of duty starts at 9 a.m. I can't drop off my son at Patch School until 9:15 a.m. My wife works odd hours. Can arrangements be made so that I can drop my son off in time to be at work by 9 a.m.?

Fort Benning Early Childhood Development Center's response: The Fort Benning Early Childhood Development Center is a private, part-day preschool operating with permission at Fort Benning.

Patch Preschool is strictly a school and not a day-care center, with stated opening and closing hours. The school does not offer before- or after-school care as part of its program. This information is clearly stated in the Parent Handbook under Section XI General Information, Subsection A, Hours.

Tot Town provides a van service to and from Patch each day; contact Tot Town and make arrangements to drop off your son there and have the van bring him to school.

Call: My yard and sidewalk is flooded and I want to know if something can be done to remove the water.

Directorate of Public Works' response:

A drain pipe was installed, the sidewalk was rerouted and the yard was landscaped to prevent further flooding of property and sidewalk.

Call: The mirror used to aid safe traffic flow at the corner of Wold and Anderson needs to be replaced because it is cracked and rusted and does not give a good reflection, therefore posing a safety risk. It is impossible to see traffic until it is about 50 yards away.

Military Police Activity's response:

The intersection and the mirror in question were reviewed and it was determined that the mirror needs to be replaced. The MPA is working with the Directorate of Public Works to replace the mirror.

Call: The screen doors for the front and back of our quarters are missing. The Directorate of Public Works told me it would not install any screen doors. I noticed that all the other houses in my housing area have screen doors.

Directorate of Public Works' response: An engineer with the Housing Division spoke with the caller on two occasions concerning this situation and both times she said the DPW shops were going to replace the screen door on the rear but refused to replace the one on the front door. He explained that since there is a screen door on the enclosed front screened porch, there was no longer a need for another screen door at the front door. He also explained to the caller that due to a reduction in maintenance funds, DPW is not replacing the screen door on the front door; as front screen doors become unserviceable, they are being removed.

DoD prepares to shut down Oct. 1

By Patrick Swan
Army News Service

WASHINGTON — The Department of Defense is preparing to shut down operations Oct. 1 if its annual appropriation is not passed into law, says DoD's chief financial officer.

John Hamre, DoD comptroller, explained contingency plans for a DoD shut down during an Aug. 30 round-table discussion with service journalists.

Twice in the past 20 years Congress has not approved a DoD appropriation before Oct. 1. If that happens this year, DoD is preparing to close all government operations not essential to the safety of people and property against imminent threat.

"I want to emphasize ... this is a serious possibility, but we should not overreact to it." Hamre said. "Everybody knows this would be an extreme situation, and we have had very few of them ... I don't believe this will be a long-term condition, because people will understand how serious and disruptive it is."

Hamre explained that in most cases, Congress isn't reticent about providing appropriations, but that there is a broader dispute between the president and the Congress about priorities.

That dispute keeps them from agreeing to proceed. When both parties reach an appropriations impasse at the beginning of a new fiscal year, federal law dictates that government departments must close: DoD is not permitted to spend money it doesn't have.

"We never felt in the past that we were going to be without funds for a long enough period where we had to have any detailed contingency plans," Hamre said. "... Hopefully good planning is going to keep us from ever having to execute the plan. It is never our goal to try to execute this plan. Our goal is to be ready so we can do an honest and capable and coherent job if we have to, but it is our fervent hope we do not have to do that."

Hamre said Secretary of Defense William J. Perry gave specific instructions that will enable DoD to carry out any contingency operation that might come up during a shut-down period.

DoD has established a steering committee with representatives from each of the defense agencies, military departments and the intelligence community, Hamre said. Members are to identify activities that should be continued because they fall in the safety category. They are expected to report to Perry by Sept. 15. Perry will then review and receive the plan and either approve it or amend it.

"I have spent this week talking to representatives on the Hill," Hamre said. "... I believe it is there sincere hope that this (shut down) does not happen. It is my personal view if we are all honest and up front about the implications of it, that the disruption will be apparent and we will seek to avoid it at all costs."

Hamre said Perry has two top priorities. One is to ensure the military's warfighting capability. The second is to be open to all DoD personnel and to be as "fair as possible within the limits of the law."

Hamre outlined three categories of DoD operations that would not be required to shut down. The first is operations that involve life and property in a direct sense. These include medical services, air traffic control, utility and power systems and police and firefighters on installations.

The second category involves spendable cash reserves. Hamre said funds provided in prior years may be spent. Revolving activities, such as those at shipyards and depots, may remain open. Nonappropriated fund activities will also not be affected.

Research and development funds appropriated in prior years but not spent may continue. Trust funds may be spent for retirement and annuity benefits.

The third category of exemptions involve ongoing military activities and contingency plants for potential military activities. A Joint Chiefs of Staff planning cell is to identify those activities and operations that will continue through other financing authority until appropriations are approved.

Whom will lack of appropriation affect?

By Patrick Swan
Army News Service

WASHINGTON — If the Department of Defense shuts down Oct. 1 for lack of a congressional appropriation, what effect will it have on active and retired DoD military and civilian personnel?

In the case of active duty military personnel, DoD's comptroller, John Hamre, told service reporters Aug. 30 they will not be furloughed if a government shut down occurs. In addition, they would be paid for their work; just when remains an open question.

"Military personnel, because of their legal status, are entitled to be paid and there is no question they will be paid when we receive an appropriation," Hamre said. "Until we do get an appropriation, we would not be able to actually write the checks. But people will be paid for their duty time."

Hamre said it depends on when DoD gets its appropriation from the Congress that the president signs into law.

Military personnel who do show up for work may be required to perform different jobs, Hamre said.

"We may need some of the military personnel, for example, to help us support some of the non-appropriated fund activities, such as the athletic facilities," he said.

Hamre said that DoD would not be able to pay allotments until it has an appropriation that allows it to pay the salary period.

"We will do everything we can, and I will communicate with the banks, and ask them to understand the circumstances that we're in," Hamre said. "We will do everything within our power so that people are not penalized by this disruption."

In the case of DoD civilians who must show up for work, Hamre said, DoD may have to get permission, after the fact, to pay them. He said there is "no doubt in my mind that Congress will give us that authority."

The status of DoD civilians deemed "nonessential" is not so clear, Hamre said.

"We do not know who are 'nonessential civilians' until we see the details of a plan being worked out by a special DoD steering committee," Hamre said.

DoD civilians who do not fall into one of three exemption categories are not allowed to work, he said.

Female cdr speaks on role of women

Infantry Training Brigade

Women's Equality Day was established in 1973 by Presidential order. Typically it is celebrated Aug. 26 to commemorate the ratification of the 19th Amendment, which gave women the right to vote

Lt. Col. Deborah A. Kissel, commander of the 30th Adjutant General Battalion (Reception), delivered a speech to an audience of all ranks at the Sand Hill Recreation Center auditorium to commemorate Women's Equality Day, Aug. 26.

Kissel's title speech centered around the critical role women have played during times of crisis throughout the nation's history. Mary Ludwig Hays ("Molly Pitcher"), Harriet Tubman, Clara Barton and others were praised for their courage and ingenuity during the formative years of the nation.

"These are but a few of the instances where vanguard opportunities were presented for women to serve," Kissel remarked.

According to Kissel, the greatest obstacle that faced women in military service had been the tendency for women to be relegated to less functional roles once a crisis had past. Kissel then noted the various milestones achieved since the second World War, such as the opening of OCS and West Point to females, which have resulted in significant progress.

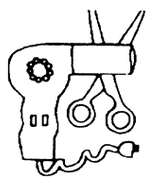
Kissel was optimistic concerning the current status of women in the service.

"Women in the military, and federal service as a whole, are very fortunate because we have achieved equality at a pace much faster than the remainder of our society," she noted.

After the speech, questions were fielded as part of a general discussion on the topic. Kissel supported women in military academies that are funded by federal tax money, and also said that it is inevitable that the United States will one day have a woman as president.

More controversial issues, such as women in the infantry, would have to be supported by society as a whole before becoming a reality, however.

"Changes come slow but come hard," she noted.



Kissel is only the second female to command within the Infantry Training Brigade.

Women's Equality Day was established in 1973 by presidential order. Typically it is celebrated Aug. 26, to commemorate the ratification of the 19th Amendment on the same day in 1920, which gave women the right to vote.

CGSC to be offered

The Command and General Staff Officer Course will be offered in Columbus beginning in October. This course will be presented by instructors of the 108th Division at the Army Reserve Center on Macon Road in Columbus. All majors and above in the active component, Reserve component, and the National Guard are eligible. Also, promotable captains are eligible if they are Combined Arms Services and Staff School graduates. This is the same course offered in residence at Fort Leavenworth, Kan.

For more information, call 291-4536 and leave a message.

Controlled burning set

Controlled burning of woodland and range areas will take place Monday through Sept. 17.

If weather permits, the following compartments may be affected: A-6, D-6, E-5, I-3, I-4, K-7, M-7, V-3, W-3 and X-1.

Burning will occur in pine stands within these compartments to enhance endangered species habitat and training areas. People using these areas for recreation must leave before 9:30 a.m. daily.

Training units using compartments next to these areas are reminded to exercise caution while traveling in these areas because of the potential for reduced visibility.

For information, call 544-6206.

690th to conduct change of command

The 690th Medical Company will have a change of command ceremony 9 a.m. Sept. 15 on Roberts Field. If inclement weather conditions occur, the ceremony will be at the Audie Murphy Gym at 9:30 a.m. the same day.

OCS selection board to convene Sept. 26

A recent message from Personnel Command announced the next OCS selection board has been scheduled for Sept. 26 to 29. Applications must arrive at PERSCOM by Sept. 15. There will be no exceptions. Applications must arrive in AG, Personnel Operations Division, Building 2619, not later than today to allow time for each applicant to appear before a local board.

For administrative support and application forms, contact Marie Lee, Adjutant General's Office, Personnel Operations and Services Division at 545-3341 or 545-4702.

Buick Challenge needs volunteers

Volunteers are needed to serve as marshals on the 11th hole at Callaway Gardens during the Buick Challenge. The tournament will be Sept. 28 to Oct. 1.

Housing operating at summer hours

The Directorate of Public Works Housing Division, Furnishing Management Branch, will operate at its summer operating hours through Sept. 29.

The operating hours are 7 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. Monday through Friday. The office will close for lunch from noon to 12:30 p.m.

For information, call 545-6713.

Sand Hill TMP fuel station closed temp

The Sand Hill Transportation Motor Pool will be closed until Sept. 30 for renovation of the fuel tanks.

The Main Post fuel station will be fully operational. All vehicles serviced at the Sand Hill fuel station will receive fuel from Main Post. For more information, call 545-3018.

Taxi service to end

Effective Oct. 1, the military taxi service will be discontinued at Fort Benning. Activities must rely on internal assets for transportation of personnel or package delivery.

For information, call 545-3018.

Runners have priority during PT hours

Formations and individual runners have priority of movement on Fort Benning during the established physical training hours of 6 to 7:30 a.m. Monday through Friday. Formation running is not authorized on sidewalks throughout the installation. Units must use roadways, and proper safety equipment must be worn and operational.

Individual runners and walkers may use the sidewalks and also are required to wear proper reflective clothing or road guard vests.

Speed limit during PT hours is 15 mph and 10 mph when passing individuals and troop formations.

Mayors' Council to meet third Weds

Mayors' Council meetings with the installation staff will take place the third Wednesday of each month at 9:30 a.m. in Infantry Hall, Room 550. If your designated representative is unable to attend, an alternate must be provided. You will be notified in advance of any changes or cancellations. Meeting dates are Sept. 20, Oct. 18 and Nov. 15.

Siren system to be tested first Saturdays

The installation siren system will be tested at noon the first Saturday of each month. Units and activities listed will monitor siren testing and notify the field officer of the day and their staff duty officer at 545-5135 or 545-5245 within 30 minutes after each test and report the operational status of the sirens. Sirens will not be tested in the event of bad weather.

The following is a list of units and activities and their siren locations:

- Infantry Training Brigade — Sand Hill, 12th Street and Scott Avenue
- 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division — Kelley Hill
- 36th Engineer Group — Indianhead Road, 1900 Block
- Ranger Training Brigade — Harmony Church, Hourglass Road

TRADOC creates Reinvention Center

TRADOC News Service

Reinvention Center status gives TRADOC certain authorities — 'tools' — to implement Strategic Plan 1995, Training and Doctrine Command commander Gen. William W. Hartzog's vision of what TRADOC must do to create Force XXI.

FORT MONROE, Va. — Training and Doctrine Command has been made a Reinvention Center to give it more power to create the Army of the 21st Century — Force XXI.

"Reinvention Center authority provides us an opportunity to change the way we change by eliminating barriers," said Gen. William W. Hartzog, TRADOC commander. "Elimination of these barriers will immediately benefit the Army as TRADOC continues to reinvent the Army to meet the challenges of the 21st century."

Hartzog also said that TRADOC's mission as architect of the future ensures it will be where the Army is reinvented.

Togo West, secretary of the Army, designated TRADOC a Reinvention Center.

"When Vice President (Al) Gore established the National Performance Review with provisions for reinvention laboratories and centers, his intent was to create opportunities to experiment with innovative business practices to improve the efficiency and effectiveness of the federal government," West said. "The challenge you (TRADOC) are undertaking is significant, but it has the potential for long-term payoffs not only within America's Army, but also across the Department of Defense."

TRADOC is the second Army agency to be designated a Reinvention Center. Forces Command became a reinvention center last year.

"FORSCOM's reinvention center efforts are about reinvention of installations, how you build power-protection platforms," said Dave Lyon, leader of TRADOC's futures group which spearheaded the command's efforts to gain center status. "TRADOC must answer the bigger question — how do you reinvent the Army?"

Reinvention Center status gives TRADOC certain authorities — "tools" — to implement Strategic Plan 1995, Hartzog's vision of what TRADOC must do to create Force XXI.

Among the "barriers" which Hartzog said stand in the way of meeting plan objectives are outmoded regulations. As a Reinvention Center, TRADOC will have the authority to waive most Army and DoD regulations, except those that affect individuals' rights, equal opportunity and those based on federal law.

For directives based on federal law, Reinvention Center authority allows TRADOC to go to Congress for relief directly through DoD's Office of Legislative Liaison. Previously, such action required approval from the secretaries of the Army and defense.

Lyon cites one Army regulation that is typical of many currently in force. It requires doctrine writers to allow a review time of at least 60 days for each manuscript, specifies the number of copies and specifies the form on which comments must be written.

"The doctrine writers have developed a totally electronic process," Lyon said. "They E-mail it to the reviewers, and reviewers send changes back again by E-mail.

"They've reduced the cycle time to get a piece of doctrine out by 85 percent."

Hartzog has designated four reinvention laboratories under the Reinvention Center umbrella. They are the organizations of the TRADOC deputy chiefs of staff for training, doctrine, combat development and base operations support. Each deputy chief of staff is also a laboratory commander.

The general said other labs may be formed as reinvention efforts progress.

"The lab commanders are charged to follow the Strategic Plan and change the way we change by taking informed risks where appropriate, cutting red tape, listening to customers, empowering employees and getting back to basics," Hartzog said.

"These are the tenets of the National Performance Review that is charged to reinvent government, and the Army is part of that reinvention."

TRADOC has been reinventing the Army since it was formed in 1973. It has led the way with equipment development, organizational design, doctrine and training soldiers for a changing Army.

Two years ago the command began reengineering itself to make it possible to design the future Army, and train soldiers and future leaders for that Army with fewer dollars and people.

Battlefield laboratories are probably TRADOC's most noted creation to arise from reengineering. The labs, which are now reinvention laboratories, were designed to experiment with new equipment, technologies, doctrine and organizational design for each of five battlefield "dynamics." They also helped shorten the procurement cycle for certain equipment.

Advanced warfighting experiments evolved from the battle labs concept. AWEs are now laying the groundwork for Force XXI.

TRADOC also led the Army in initiatives that improved living and working conditions for soldiers, civilian employees and families on installations.

"It is important that people understand that reinvention is not just another program," said Toni Wainwright, TRADOC's acting deputy chief of staff for base operations support and creator of the futures group. "We can make real progress for TRADOC, the Army and the country as a Reinvention Center.

"There may be some naysayers out there, but individuals are really empowered to make a difference," she said.

Veterans Affairs

Program ensures accuracy

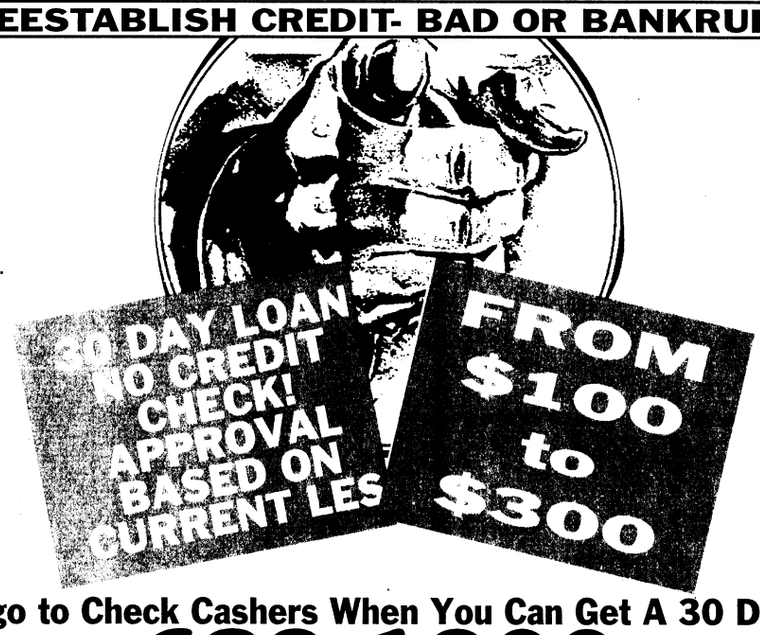
Department of Veterans Affairs

The Department of Veterans Affairs has initiated a national cytopathology proficiency program — the first of its kind in the United States — to ensure the accuracy of lab test evaluations and the delivery of high quality care to veterans.

The program stems from a provision of the Clinical Laboratory Improvement Amendments of 1988, enacted to address the concerns about the quality of lab tests and evaluations, which requires controlled Pap smear evaluations and mandated yearly proficiency testing of health-care personnel who examine Pap smears.

VA, which is not subject to the legislation's provisions, developed and published its own Laboratory Testing Standards, and its cytopathology proficiency program includes all types of cytology specimens, in addition to Pap smears.

More than 600 VA cytopathologists are required to participate in the program, which is administered by the VA Medical Center in Ann Arbor, Mich.



The program is unique in that participants see actual case material with glass slides prepared and stained identical to those used in clinical cases obtained from 10 VA Cytopathology Centers of Excellence. Complete clinical histories and followup documents of patients' conditions are provided.

While nearly all cytopathology evaluations in the private sector are made by cytotechnologists in private laboratories, all evaluations in VA are made by pathologists.

The Armed Forces Institute of Pathology maintains the slide collection, mailing 16 slides each year to participants on a quarterly basis.

U.S. Army Criminal Investigation Command

• The 86th Military Police Detachment is conducting an investigation concerning the theft of personal stereo equipment from a secured 1983 red Ford Mustang.

The equipment was stolen between 1 a.m. and 12:30 p.m., Aug. 13 from a parking lot, adjacent to Building 2831.

The stolen equipment included an AM/FM compact disc player, two pairs of speakers, an equalizer, a crossover and two amps. The value of the stolen stereo equipment is $2,410. No suspects have been identified.

Anyone having information concerning this investigation can contact Special Agent Kelly S. McCrate at 545-4981 or 545-2414, or the Military Police at 545-5222 or 545-5223.

• CID is seeking information concerning a larceny of private property which took place between 2 and 11:30 a.m. July 26 and 27 in the parking lot of Building 3425 on Fort Benning. Someone entered a 1994 Hyundai Excel and removed stereo equipment.

Anyone with information should contact the CID office at 545-5237 or the Military Police.

• CID is currently investigating a larceny of private property that occurred in on-post quarters and two thefts.

July 9, between the hours of 9 p.m. and 10:15 p.m., someone, by unknown means, entered the quarters of 143-B McGrath St. The intruder(s) pried open a window and stole various parachuting and camera equipment valued at $3,914.

Investigation continues by the Fort Benning CID.

Anyone with information concerning this crime can contact the Fort Benning Military Police or McCrate.

One theft involves a Suzuki GSXR 750 WP, motorcycle. The motorcycle had Georgia license plate No. MS-6020. The motorcycle was last seen parked adjacent to Building 4711-B Harmony Church June 7.

CID is offering a $25 reward for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the perpetrator of this crime. This reward will expire Oct. 13.

Anyone having information concerning this investigation can contact Special Agent John M. Pavia at 545-3257 or the Military Police at 545-5222.

The other theft involves a 1988 blue Pontiac Firebird. The vehicle was stolen between 10:30 a.m. June 26 and 9:30 a.m. June 30 from a parking lot adjacent to Building 9013 on Kelley Hill.

The vehicle was subsequently recovered when it was located just south of the Eddy Bridge on Fort Benning where it had been left abandoned. No suspects have been identified.

Anyone having information concerning this investigation can contact McCrate or the Military Police.

• CID is also offering a $250 reward for information concerning the theft of a hand-held General Electric radio, model No. MPA SCAN, serial No. 1399472. The radio was taken from a high mobility, multipurpose wheeled vehicle, which was parked adjacent to Building 9000, Kelley Hill.

Anyone with information should contact the Fort Benning Military Police or Special Agent Reginald Ray, Fort Benning resident agency USACIDC, at 545-5239 or 545-3259.

This reward offer will expire June 14.

The identity of anyone providing information on any of these cases will be kept in the strictest confidence.

Army buries diplomats killed in Bosnia

Army News Service

WASHINGTON — The death Aug. 19 of three American diplomats traveling to war-stricken Sarajevo with new proposals for peace will not bring an end to the U.S. Balkan initiative.

This message from the Clinton Administration was made even as the nation mourned the deaths and the Military District of Washington handled funerals and memorial services at Arlington National Cemetery and Fort Myer, Va.

The three died when the French armored personnel carrier in which they were riding slipped off a muddy and treacherously unstable mountain road and down a 300-foot ravine, exploding on impact. They were part of a U.S. mission aimed at exploiting the changed conditions brought by Serbian setbacks in the Croatian region of Kraijina. They were en route from Zagreb, Croatia, to Sarajevo, Bosnia.

Deputy Assistant Secretary of State Robert C. Frasure, 53, the special presidential envoy to the former Yugoslavia, was one of those who died. He had crafted the outlines of a possible settlement whereby Serb-dominated Yugoslavia would extend recognition to Croatia and Bosnia-Herzegovina, whose withdrawal from Yugoslavia had precipitated ethnic strife. In turn, economic sanctions that had been imposed against Yugoslavia in 1992 would be lifted. Details of the plan had been discussed with all parties except the rebel Bosnian Serbs.

Frasure was buried Aug. 26 at Arlington National Cemetery.

After the service, the White House announced that the peace mission ... was instructed to return to Yugoslavia Aug. 27 "to continue the search for peace"

Joseph J. Kruzel, deputy assistant secretary of defense for European and NATO affairs, and Air Force Col. Samuel Nelson Drew, a National Security Council aide, were interred Aug. 24 in the cemetery.

All three were memorialized Aug. 23 at a service in Fort Myer's Memorial Chapel. President Bill Clinton cut short a vacation to attend the service at which he eulogized the three as "peacemakers who gave their lives seeking for others the blessings we Americans hold dear and too often take for granted." He awarded the Presidential Citizens Medal posthumously to the three, all married and having children.

The sorrow brought by their passing "reminds of the suffering" they sought to alleviate, Clinton said, asking that the cause in which they died be carried forward. After the service, the White House announced that the peace mission, led by Assistant Secretary of State Richard Holbrooke, was instructed to return to Yugoslavia Aug. 27 "to continue the search for peace."

Named to the mission were Roberts Owen, the Bosnian Federation arbitrator who will become the senior adviser to the the secretary of state on the former Yugoslavia; Brig. Gen. Donald Kerrick, director of the National Military Intelligence Center at DoD and now on temporary detail to the National Security Council; James Pardew, director of the Balkan Task Force at the State Department; and Christopher Hill, office director for the South-Central European Affairs Section at State.

"The group will continue the diplomatic effort begun two weeks ago to seize the opportunity for a negotiated settlement in the Balkans," the announcement read. "There can be no more fitting tribute to our colleagues than to persist with new vigor the efforts for which they gave their lives."

Congress voted earlier this year to unilaterally lift the arms embargo the United Nations imposed on the former Yugoslav republics, a measure opposed by the administration and vetoed by Clinton. Failure of the current peace initiative and overturning of Clinton's veto could bring those countries furnishing U.N. peace-keeping troops in the Balkans to withdraw them. The United States is pledged to help in any such withdrawal.

SECDEF responds to Congress report

Army News Service

WASHINGTON — Secretary of Defense William J. Perry released his response to Congress Aug. 25 on the report of the Commission on Roles and Missions of the Armed Forces.

Perry noted, "The commission has performed a significant service to the nation" and that "its recommendations ... will assist the Department of Defense in meeting many of the challenges of the early 21st century."

Perry said he evaluated the commission report in terms of how the recommendations help him deal with the main challenges facing the Department of Defense — maintaining readiness, enhancing joint military capabilities, sustaining needed forces and ensuring U.S. forces are equipped with modern, capable weapons.

Many of the commission's recommendations helped to resolve these challenges and Perry directed they be implemented immediately. This was especially true of the commission's central recommendation to improve further the effectiveness of unified military operations by improving joint training and joint doctrine. It was true also for the recommendation to create an integrated C4I architecture.

In several cases, Perry noted that while the commission's recommendations support his goals for the DoD, more detailed review is needed to develop plans for implementation. This applies primarily to the commission's outsourcing initiatives. As a result, over the coming months DoD will develop detailed plans for outsourcing depot maintenance and material supply management activities. It also will investigate outsourcing opportunities for medical care, family housing, finance and accounting, data center operations, education and training, and base management and infrastructure.

"The commission has performed a significant service to the nation ... its recommendations ... will assist (DoD) in meeting many of the challenges of the early 21st century."

— William J. Perry
Secretary of Defense

In most remaining areas, Perry said he believed additional study is needed before an informed decision can be made. He has asked for detailed reviews on deep attack forces, Reserve Component forces, the Unified Command Plan, operational support aircraft and restructuring the military department staffs.

Results of these studies will be provided to Perry over the coming months.

1996 SATURN LINEUP
So what makes a Saturn different? Well, our cars are different for pretty much the same reason our company is different - a lot of things that add up to one big one. When it comes to cars, the big one for us is value, and the definition of that is relatively simple. Reliability - the kind you've come to expect from the Japanese. Performance - the kind we all admire in the Europeans. And courtesy - the homespun family way of doing business everybody wishes the world hadn't outgrown. If this is your definition, too, then hey, a very warm welcome to this, Saturn's 1996 model year.

#1 IN THE WORLD!!
Every year J.D. Power and Associates conducts a survey of new car buyers to see how they liked the way they were treated by their salesperson. While Saturn has always ranked right up there with some pretty expensive luxury cars, this year we're proud to say, for the first time ever, we were ranked "best overall." (Just thought you might like to know - we were sure excited about it!) J.D. Power and Associates 1995 Sales Satisfaction Study based on a toal of 38,961 consumer responses. ©1995 Saturn Corporation.

Soldier Show wows Benning audience

By Donna S. Budjenska
Special to The Bayonet©

Nearly bringing the house down with their shouts, infantry trainees roared their appreciation for performers in the 1995 Army Soldier Show Saturday evening at Sand Hill Theater No. 3.

Reaching decibel levels of 142 (No joke — judges measured the crowd response with a decibel meter), soldiers from four basic training companies joined family members in welcoming the 16 performers and countless crew members to Fort Benning.

The performers, meanwhile, put on a show that rocked the theater to its rafters. Ninety minutes of pop, country, gospel, vintage '40s and even children's songs satisfied nearly every musical taste.

"I was surprised at the amount of talent," said Pvt. 1 Robert Vuittonet, Company D, 2nd Battalion, 54th Infantry Regiment.

"It just goes to show you how professional today's soldiers really are," said family member Nancy Miller. "Not only are they the best at what they do (at their jobs), but they are also extremely multi-talented."

Crowd karaoke

The crowd sang along to nearly every song, with "All I Wanna Do (Is Have Some Fun)" by Sheryl Crow becoming the evening's anthem. When they weren't singing themselves, soldiers were often either whistling, hooting or hollering at their favorite female performers.

They didn't chintz on showing their support for the male performers, though. Clapping or singing along with the men, too, the crowd proved to be fair and vocal.

Cast members took note of the crowd's attitude, too. "This has been the best response we've had," said Spc. Anthony Toves Barcinas from Fort Carson, Colo. "People sang along with almost every song.

"To feel that onstage makes us all that much more happy to perform. We appreciate them coming here."

Lighting engineer Spc. Brian Essad, from Fort Campbell, Ky., seconded Barcinas' comments. Noting the tremendous, consistent crowd noise, he said, "The sound foremen were complaining they couldn't hear their microphones because the trainees were so loud."

> "Not only are they the best at what they do (at their jobs), but they are also extremely multi-talented."

Everybody's happy

Family members' responses weren't overlooked, either, even though they were seated in the middle of the camouflage-clad audience. Children danced gleefully during songs from "The Lion King," and Miller espied certain female audience members fanning themselves with their programs during the male performers' particularly sensuous songs.

Swooning and whistling aside, everyone seemed to have a good time at the Soldier Show. Col. Gregory C. Camp, chief of staff, gave the performers a plaque of appreciation and received one from the Army Community and Family Support Center, which supports the Soldier Show.

Say goodbye

At show's end, after the crowd filed out, cast and crew together began breaking down the set and loading their 18-wheelers for their trip to the next stop, Redstone Arsenal, Ala.

The Soldier Show cast members do more than sing, dance and travel. Their military occupational specialties range from chaplain's assistant and computer systems analyst to Apache helicopter mechanic and crew chief to signal intelligence analyst.

Soldiers joined the show by auditioning in December. Those selected as performers and crew members were assigned to the U.S. Army Community and Family Support Center at Fort Belvoir, Va., where they began training and rehearsals. Their tour began in May, and their stop at Fort Benning marks the three-fourth's point.

In addition to Alaska and Korea, the 1995 Soldier Show has toured posts in, among other states, Maryland, California, New York, Texas, Arizona and Kansas. Sites still to come on its itinerary include Kentucky, North and South Carolina, Pennsylvania and Virginia.

In addition to Barcinas, Soldier Show performers include Spc. Shawn A. Boksan, Carlisle Barracks, Pa.; Sgt. Michael Brooks, Heidelberg, Germany; Pfc. Sheri Davis, Fort Gordon; Staff Sgt. Robert Dyer, Fort Belvoir; Spc. Scott Francis, Heidelberg; Spc. Dory G. Frazier, Korea; Sfc. Danny C. Hambrick, Fort Lee, Va.; 2nd Lt. Tamika Charzette Keys, Fort Knox, Ky.; 1st Lt. Molly M. McHenney, Fort Hood, Texas; Pfc. Belinda J. Parraz, Fort Riley, Kan.; Spc. Petra Lea Powell, Fort Rucker, Ala.; Spc. America Styles, Fort Belvoir; Sfc. Cheryl Welch, Fort Hood; Spc. Dennis D. Whitfield, Fort Polk, La.; and Spc. Lakeshia Lashant Young, Fort Hood.

Teddies

offer comfort to traumatized tots

By Shannon Day
Special to The Bayonet©

TIC Federal Credit Union has teamed up with the Fort Benning Military Police in an attempt to bring a little cheer to traumatized children.

The TIC, which is a member of the Chattahoochee Valley Chapter of Credit Unions, donated to the MPs 65 teddy bears, which will be handed out to children who have been hurt — either emotionally or physically.

"We are going to put these bears in cars that will most likely come in contact with children, such as traffic investigators and MPs who respond to domestic violence calls," said Master Sgt. Eddie C. Cosby, noncommissioned officer in charge, Law Enforcement Operations.

"It is going to benefit us tremendously because we have many MPs who are not necessarily trained to comfort young children," he said.

"I think the crisis bears will serve as a good ice breaker."

The bears wear a T-shirt with a "Hand in Hand" logo printed on them. This theme is part of a statewide campaign sponsored by credit unions.

"Although we sponsor the program, the bears are purchased through private donation," said Janet W. Davis, president, TIC Federal Credit Unions. "Each bear costs $5.

"Donations to the program can be given to any employee of the TIC, who have all been designated as official bear campaign people," she said. "They will make sure the money will get where it is supposed to go."

The Chattahoochee Valley Chapter of Credit Unions has donated more than 400 crisis bears to law enforcement officials and medical personnel throughout the Columbus area.

"What we are basically trying to do is provide children in need with a friend," Davis said.

Teen works for gold with bluebird box project

By Libby Burtner
Special to The Bayonet

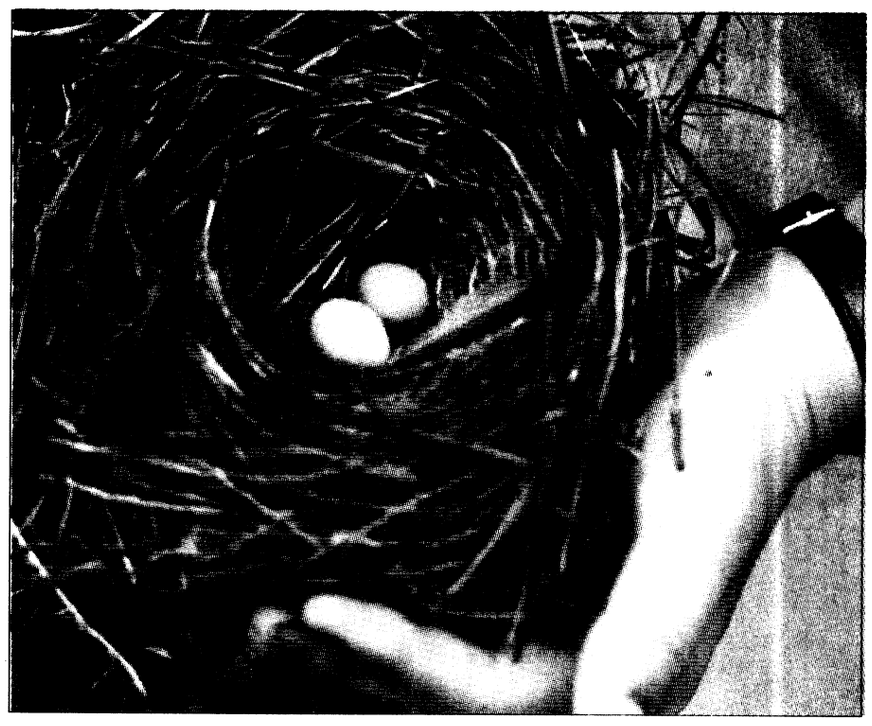
Going for the Gold! Most of us think of the soon-to-arrive Olympics when we hear those words, but Cindy Cole, a senior at Spencer High School, thinks of the highest award in Girl Scouts, the Gold Award. Equivalent to the rank of Eagle Scout in Boy Scouting, the Gold Award is a hard-earned achievement.

As part of her project to complete the requirements for the Gold Award, Cole has been a volunteer through the Department of Public Works' Fish and Wildlife Section monitoring the bluebird population on post. Jeff Brooks, wildlife biologist at Fish and Wildlife, said the post is divided into four bluebird trails with boxes located along each trail for the birds to nest in. Cole had two of those trails, monitoring them weekly for a period of two months.

"She did an excellent job for us," Brooks said.

One of her trails was on Main Post. She rode her bike on this route, which took about an hour for each week's visit. She checked each of the nine boxes on this trail to see if they were being used for nesting and, if so, counted the number of eggs, kept track of the number of fledglings and cleaned out old nesting material.

Cole said every time she cleaned out a box it seemed there would be a new nest with eggs when she went back the next week. Bluebirds will lay two to three clutches a year, building a new nest each time.



Cole reported the bluebirds are "user friendly," allowing her to check the nests without any repercussions to the eggs or fledglings. She recounted one time she was checking a box and discovered a mother sitting on her eggs. "She moved just enough for me to see the eggs," Cole said. "I think they got used to me."

Why all the fuss? Brooks said the bluebird population has decreased about 90 percent since the 1930s. He cited the change in agriculture as one main reason for a loss of habitat for the bluebirds. When small farms were the norm, there were many fences separating land from one owner to the other. The fence posts would rot out, making a great habitat for the cavity nesting bluebirds. When small farms were phased out by larger ones, fewer fences were used, therefore fewer nesting sites. The posts are also not used by bluebirds if they have been treated.

In order to offer attractive housing for the bluebirds, Fort Benning has about 91 bluebird boxes. They are usually around four feet off the ground, near open grassy fields where the main diet of the bluebirds, insects, abound. If information provided by volunteers such as Cole shows the boxes aren't being used, then they are moved.

ON POST

Bodybuilding entertainment — The Sports Branch is seeking volunteer entertainment for a 15- to 20-minute intermission during the 1995 Fort Benning Open Bodybuilding Championships Oct. 14.

This year's event promises to be even more successful than last year's with the event opening its doors to the civilian sector as well. Spectatorship is expected to increase to more than 500 with more than 40 competitors.

If you would like to go public with your talent, call Christopher Winterman at 544-1747 or Leon Johnson at 685-9555. No preferences for a certain type of entertainment have been established. References and screening may be requested.

Learning center — The Army Learning Center is offering free courses in math, computers, science, management, college preparatory exams, etc. Users can dial up from work or home, 24 hours a day, seven days a week, for computer-based instruction.

A free access disk can be obtained at the ALC. For a complete listing of courses or for more information, call 545-1436. The Army Learning Center is located in Building 2611, Soldiers' Plaza.

Explorer Scout Program — Law Enforcement Post 988, sponsored by the Military Police Activity, is looking for more members. If you know of a boy or girl interested in a law enforcement career or who just want to learn more about law enforcement, call Staff Sgt. Donnie Lucas at 545-1146. This program is open to anyone on or off post. Adult assistant leaders are welcome.

Management program — The Fort Benning Management Association will continue to sponsor more management programs on a monthly basis. The next program will be 11:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. Sept. 21 at the Officers' Club.

The awarding of academic scholarships to students seeking a business or management degree will be the highlight of the program.

Boy Scouts of America — The Fort Benning Boy Scouts of America will hold its sign up for all units of the Boy Scouts located on Fort Benning Thursday at 6:30 p.m. at Faith Middle School Auditorium. Boys in the first grade or age 7 are eligible to join the Tiger Cubs; grades two to five can join the Cub Scouts as a Wolf, Bear or WEBELO. Boy Scouts Troops are for boys in grade six or above. The Explorer is for both boys and girls age 14 and above.

Scouting gives parents an opportunity to provide their children with a safe, structured, nurturing environment. This environment fosters the initiative to learn and discover while instilling strong values and morals. Scouting also promotes activities which lead to personal responsibility and high self-esteem.

Boys who sign up this fall will have the opportunity to meet, and get an autograph and photograph with, Harvey Glance at a date to be announced later. Glance is a 1976 Olympic gold-medal winner. Also each new Scout will receive a choice of a Pog, Yo-Yo, waterproof lanyard or some other token.

For more information, call Frank Evans at 327-2634.

Tot Town offers programs — Tot Town Child Development Center opens at 5:30 a.m. Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays to accommodate children during physical training. Reservations are important, but drop-ins are welcome.

Tot Town is also open late Friday nights closest to pay days.

Reservations may be made by contacting Tot Town. Reservations can be made two weeks to 24 hours in advance. Call 689-8698 or 689-8772 for reservations or information.

Waiting spouses' support group — A waiting spouses' support group has been formed. The group is open to all spouses whose sponsors have departed for unaccompanied tours. The group meets at the Family Unit Network Center, Building 359.

Call the FUN Center, 545-5602, to sign up for one of the two group sessions.

Watch found — A watch was found recently in the east parking lot of Infantry Hall, Building 4.

For more information, call Spc. Carl Box at 545-2218 or come by Room 111 in Infantry Hall.

Army chief of staff presents top drill sergeant award

Amy News Service

WASHINGTON — Calling them "what is rightabout the quality of soldiers today," Gen. Dennis J. Reimer presented awards to the top active and Reserve component drill sergeants in an Aug. 30 ceremony.

Sgt. 1st Class Anita Jordan, of Fort Jackson, S.C., and Staff Sgt. Bruce Clark, of the Army Reserve's 100th Division (Training) at Fort Knox, Ky., were named the best from a field of 24 noncommissioend officers representing active and reserve training units around the country at Fort Monroe May 12.

Speaking to assembled general officers and senior NCOs from his Pentagon office, Reimer, Army Chief of Staff, said, "All of us in the Army are very proud." He said the ceremony represents the strength of the Army — active and Reserve Component soldiers working toward a common purpose.

"Everybody has always said that the NCO is the backbone of the Army," Reimer said. "Most people who served in the military will tell you in their heart of hearts that it was the drill sergeants who made a difference in their lives. That is why it is good be able to recognize two outstanding soldiers today.

Jordan is the second woman to have won the drill sergeant honors. Two years ago, Staff Sgt. Jill J. Henderson, then of Fort McClellan, Ala., became the first.

When Jordan graduated from high school in Charlotte, N.C., she said she was spoiled, with no goals or motivation. She had a vague feeling that she "wanted to do something and be somebody," however. In that search, she joined the Army in September 1981.

Unfortunately, basic and advanced individual training did not change her attitude. Then she became a squad leader.

"I enjoyed leading and motivating others to do the right thing," Jordan said. "It seemed to come so naturally and I began to feel at home."

When she attended her advanced NCO course in 1993, she became impressed with the former drill sergeants among her classmates.

"There was one in particular. She was really sharp," Jordan said. "I knew the Drill Sergeants School could probably train me to be that way, too."

Even though she made the commandant's list at drill sergeant school, Jordan said she felt overwhelmed when she received her first trainees at Fort Jackson.

"There were 62 soldiers looking to me for guidance. I felt there was not enough time in the day to perform everything that had to be accomplished," she said. "There were days that I was so exhausted and began to wonder where I would ever get the energy. "But I quickly realized my energy came from the privates themselves. They looked to me to motivate them and I knew then that I could not let them down."

The results she achieved with her trainees led to her selection as an instructor at the Fort Jackson Drill Sergeants School.

"There's only a slight difference in training drill sergeants instead of privates," Jordan said. "But you have to be a lot more sharp at the school because you're training other NCOs."

Clark also trains drill sergeants at the 100th Division Drill Sergeants Academy at Fort Knox.

"I don't take anything for granted. Everything's got to be thought out in advance. That's the difference in training drill sergeants. More professionalism among the students," he said.

Clark joined the Army Reserve on the split option in February 1986 while a high school junior. Originally a supply specialist, he has since become an M1 armor crewman.

The professionalism and competence of his AIT drill sergeant inspired him to go "on the trail." At the Fort Knox Drill Sergeant School in 1989, he found further motivation.

In his civilian life, Clark works in real estate with his family. He earned a bachelor of arts in political science in 1992 from Morehead (Ky.) State University. He is now awaiting the results of his application to attend Chase Law School in Highland Heights, Ky.

Clark said he plans to remain a drill sergeant for a couple more years. After that he wants to be assigned to a line unit where he can perform in his primary military occupational specialty.

In the Drill Sergeant of the Year competition at Fort Monroe, Staff Sgt. Timothy P. Dunnigan, Fort McClellan, was the active component runner-up. Staff Sgt. Brian J. Mullin, 76th Training Division, Hartford, Conn., was runner-up in the Reserve Component category.

New chicken pox vaccine wards off childhood illness

Egleston Children's Hospital

In the best of cases, chicken pox is uncomfortable for children and expensive and inconvenient for working parents, who must arrange care for sick children home from school or day care for four to six days. In the worst of cases, chicken pox is much more serious.

"Every year; about 10,000 children are hospitalized for complications from chicken pox. About 100 of them die, usually from infections that occur when bacteria enter the body through the sores on the skin," according to Dr. Harry Keyserling, infectious disease specialist at Egleston Children's Hospital at Emory University in Atlanta. "The 5 percent or so of people who manage to avoid contracting the disease as young children can have much more serious cases of the illness if they get it after the age of 13."

Now there is a way to prevent most children from ever getting chicken pox, thanks to a new chicken pox vaccine licensed in the United States in March and available now at many pediatricians' offices. One dose of the vaccine is recommended for all healthy children at 12 months of age. Older children who haven't had chicken pox should receive the vaccine. If they are over the age of 12, they need a second dose four to eight weeks later. (The vaccine is also recommended for adults who haven't had chicken pox.)

By protecting children over age 1, the vaccine will also help prevent spread of chicken pox to babies under 1, who are too young to receive the vaccine, but in whom the disease can become quite serious. The vaccine usually costs between $55 and $65.

The chicken pox vaccine is among the latest results of immunization research that promise more protection for children in the future. (A new vaccine for hepatitis A, recommended for children who will be traveling overseas, has also recently become available.)

For example, a vaccine for rotavirus, which causes vomiting and diarrhea leading to many hospitalizations for dehydration each year, may be available in a few years, according to Keyserling. New vaccines for respiratory syncytial virus, a leading cause of winter and spring pediatric hospital admissions, and pneumococcal infections, which can lead to ear infections, meningitis and pneumonia, may also be on the horizon.

State law requires children to be immunized against nine childhood diseases that could hurt, disable or kill before they enter school or, in some cases, day care. And immunization against a few of these diseases is also required for older children. Parents are urged to have their children vaccinated at the youngest ages possible, however, because these diseases can strike children of all ages. (The chicken pox vaccine is not required by law but is strongly advised.)

With beginning of academic year, parents again have to decide on their children

Staying home sick

Egleston Children's Hospital

How do you know if your child is too sick to go to school or day care? It's a question parents wrestle with all the time, according to Dr. Harry Keyserling, Egleston infectious disease specialist, at Egleston Children's Hospital at Emory University. Pediatricians and pediatric nurses treat many children who become sick as a result of "catching it" at school or day care.

According to Keyserling, some of the most common illnesses children are exposed to in school include upper respiratory viral infections, including respiratory syneytial virus and influenza; gastrointestinal viral infections, including rotavirus; and bacterial infections such as strep throat. It is important to teach your school-age children to cover their noses and mouths when sneezing or coughing, to wash their hands before eating and to wash their hands before and after going to the bathroom.

In general, there are two reasons to keep children home from school or day care — when they are contagious and when they simply feel too sick to face the demands of the day.

"When making a decision about a child's illness, parents have to balance common sense and concern for the child with what's realistic," said Nancy Travis, director of the Egleston Children's Health Centers. "You can't expect a sick child to function all day, but you also can't realistically keep a child at home every time he has a cold. Some kids would be home three-fourths of the year!

"Some parents of older kids worry their children will miss important school work, and almost all working parents worry because when their kids are sick it means time missed from work," said Travis. "There are very few resources available to provide daytime care for sick children."

Travis offers the following tips:

• If your infant is under 3 months old and is running a fever, keep the child home, and call your doctor for advice.

• If you think your child may have a contagious illness, contact your doctor. An office visit may be necessary to make a diagnosis and begin treatment. If the child has a contagious disease, ask your doctor when you can send the child back to school or day care. If antibiotics are given for a bacterial infection like strep throat, the child is usually considered contagious for 24 hours after treatment has begun. If the child has a virus, he or she is generally considered contagious until the fever is gone.

• If your child has vomiting or diarrhea, he or she is generally considered contagious until the vomiting stops, the child has no fever and the child has control over his or her bowel movements.

• Like adults, children have different tolerances for sickness. Given the same illness, some are able to function fine while others ar miserable. Observe your child for changes in behavior, like decreased activity, sluggishness or loss of appetite. These are clues that the child may be ill. If in doubt about the seriousness of an illness, call your doctor.

• Remember that children are amazingly resilient. The child who vomited in the middle of the night may feel great by morning. If there are no symptoms in the morning, it may be fine to send him or her to school.

• If you opt to send the child to school or day care when he or she seems on the "borderline" of being ill, it's a good idea to let the teacher know and to be easily accessible during the day in case the child's condition worsens.

Orthodontic care covered

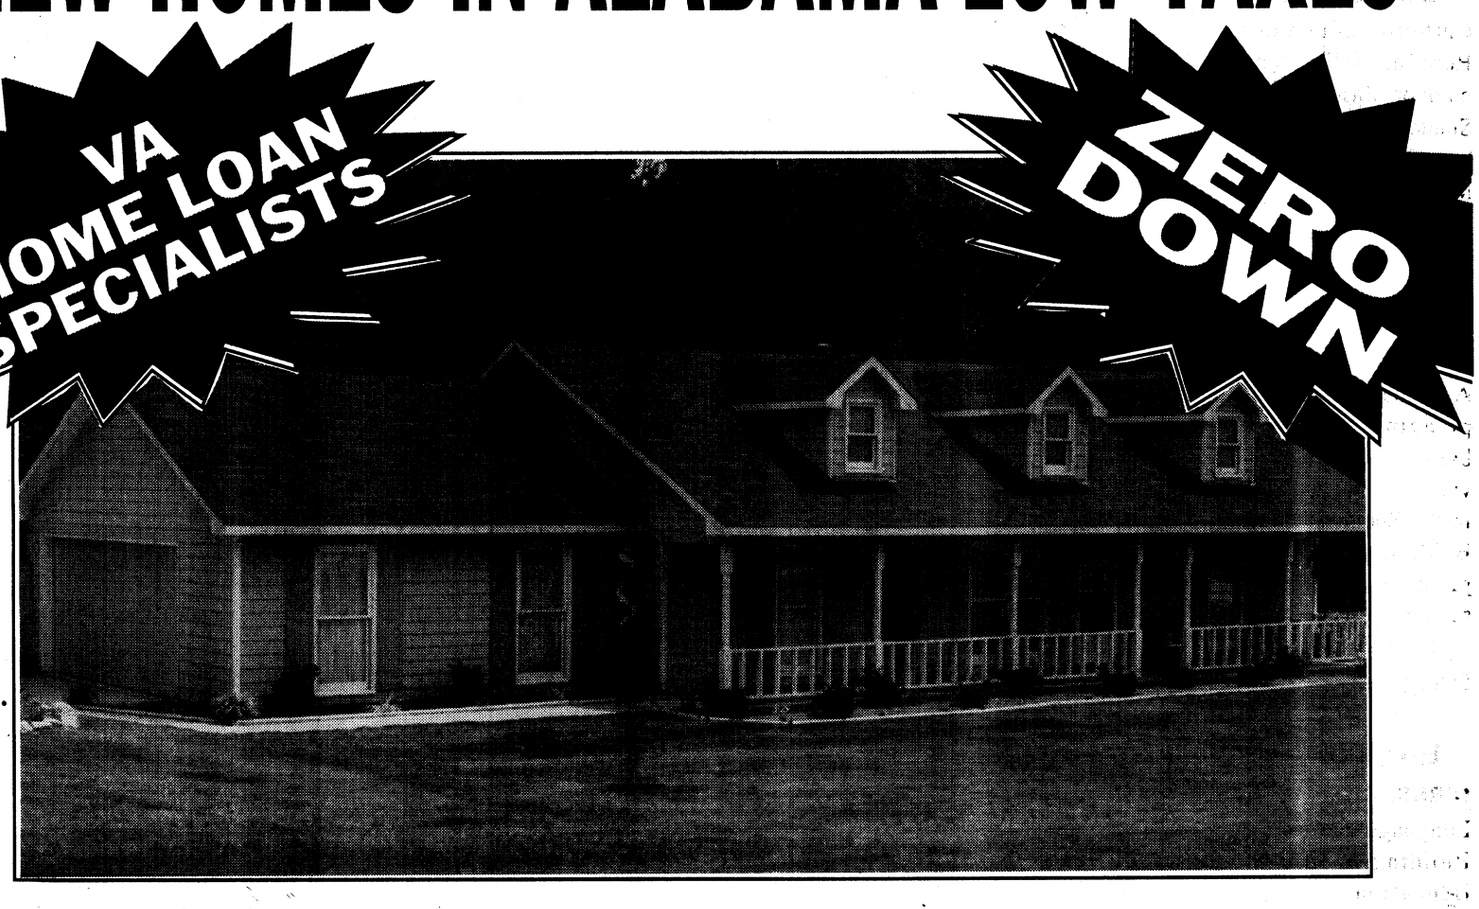
TRICARE - Active Duty Family Member Dental Plan

An attractive smile is more than eye-catching. It's likely to be an indicator of good dental health. And fortunately for many of us, orthodontic treatment can provide the healthy smiles that result from the proper alignment of teeth, lips and jaws.

Family members through age 18 enrolled in TRICARE-Active Duty Family Member Dental Plan or FMDP (Formerly Dependents Dental Plan) are eligible for orthodontic services up to a lifetime maximum of $1,200 per family member. Most orthodontic services are covered at 50 percent up to this maximum, including x-rays, casts (models) and appliances (braces, retainers, etc.).

The actual cost of orthodontic treatment varies depending on the severity of the problem, complexity and length of treatment. It's a good idea to ask the dentist to request a pretreatment estimate — called predetermination — from Delta. You will then receive an estimate of how much FMDP will pay and how much you will be responsible for paying.

Since orthodontic treatment usually extends over many months, payments are handled differently than for other kinds of dental services. Typically an initial payment is made at the time that bands or other appliances are placed in the mouth; then monthly progress payments are made based on the estimated length of treatment. If treatment is already in progress when a family member becomes eligible for FMDP coverage, the initial banding fee is not payable, but monthly progress payments may be, depending on enrollment dates and months of treatment remaining.



For more information about FMDP orthodontic coverage, contact the health benefits advisor in the Civilian Health and Medical Plan of the Uniformed Services office at your installation or call FMDP Customer Service at (800) 337-9991.

Labor Day reflection honors workers

By Carl Young Jr.
36th Engineer Group

reflections

I feel a kinship with our laborers for I will always be one. I worked my way through college and seminary, in steel mills and on automobile assembly lines respectively. The work was, at times, extremely difficult.

The steel mills were hot and dirty. A red hot steel slab would come out of the furnace every 90 seconds and roll down the line through the machinery to be made into a six foot high coil.

The coil would come out of a roller to a converter belt and we had to write the item and order numbers on it before it cooled. Then the coil was banded, by hand, with a thin metal strap, and a crane would stack the coils in another section of the building. In the summer, the heat couldn't escape the building.

Winter was worse. A red-hot coil would come out every minute. While we waited for the next coil we experienced the harsh Ohio winter. One minute we were freezing cold, while the next we faced unbearable heat. Still, this was our job and we did it.

While in the seminary working on the automobile assembly line, my job was to place sealer on the left front seam of the car as it moved down the line.

My hands would swell so much that at the end of the day, I couldn't close them. When I inquired about this, I was told that swelling and pain were an expected part of the job.

This is why we celebrated Labor Day. Millions of men and women labor every day just to allow us to have a higher quality of life. These workers are the foundation of our society. They are more than factory workers; they are the laborers who pick our fruits and vegetables and those who stock our stores.

They are the soldiers who pull guard duty or work in the motor pools or work throughout the night repairing a road. Through their efforts we are able to complete our missions and enjoy a measure of comfort and security.

Saint John wrote in the ninth chapter of his gospel, "I must work the works of him that sent me ..." (John 9:14) KJV believes that each of us has a work to accomplish.

The desire to work is rooted in the very being of man. After God created man he placed him in the Garden of Eden to work it and care for it. Paul wrote in II Thessalonians that if any would not work, he should not eat.

Some of us took time off from work to celebrate Labor Day. Others used the time to prepare for the beginning of the school year. Without a doubt, soldiers were on duty.

If in the midst of all your activities you paused to look around, you saw the greatness of America — our laborers.

RELIGIOUS EDUCATION MONTH

Postwide activities offer opportunities to learn

By Bill Putman
USAIC Chaplain Office

reflections

September is observed as Religious Education Month throughout the United States, including the armed forces.

What is religious education, and why do we emphasize it? Webster's New Collegiate Dictionary defines education as "the action or process of educating or of being educated." Consequently, we understand that religious education is education in religion. As in other fields of study, the process of being educated or of learning all there is about a subject is never finished, although we can reach various levels in our study.

In religious education, one can specialize in learning about specific doctrines of his faith group or he can specialize in study and interpretation of the Bible, the Torah, the Koran or any combination of studies. Therefore, it is easy to understand that there is a great difference between worship and religious education.

In attending worship services, we go to worship — any religious education obtained is a bonus. In religious education, we strive to learn. We are told in II Timothy 2:15, "Study to show thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth." KJV

Many Protestants think of religious education as Sunday School and that Sunday School is only for children.

Some of the many religious education activities available at Fort Benning include Sunday School for all ages, Protestant Women of the Chapel, Protestant Youth of the Chapel, Vacation Bible School, Children's Church, Confirmation Classes, retreats, Bible studies in chapels, units, and in homes, conducted by various groups include chaplains, Officers' Christian Fellowship, Christian Military Fellowship, aviators, and others.

Truly, there is something for everyone! If you don't know where to find the type of study you're looking for, ask your unit chaplain.

Of greater importance is the fact that all the activities listed above offer opportunities for volunteer workers. You don't have to take a back seat and be quiet. You may contribute your talents in the areas to which your abilities are best suited.

How and when did religious education begin? Probably the first accounts of religious education is in the second chapter of Genesis when God told Adam what he could and could not eat. From that time on, there are numerous account of religious education. The Ten Commandments are a perfect example of religious education, again, presented by the greatest instructor.

A later account of religious education is in Luke 2:41-49, where we read of Jesus in the temple in Jerusalem at age 12. Some of Jesus' last recorded words, which are found in Matthew 28:19-20, concern religious education: Go ye therefore, and teach all nations .... Teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you... KJV

chapel notes

Outdoor Mass — The Catholic community of Fort Benning will celebrate its first outdoor Mass and parish breakfast Sunday at 10 a.m. The Mass will be celebrated at Gowdy Field on Main Post, followed by breakfast at the Field of Four Chaplains.

For more information, call 545-3461 or 544-9019.

Prebaptism classes — A prebaptism class for parents planning to have their child baptized in the Catholic church will be conducted Sunday at 1 p.m. in the Religious Education Center, Building 2522. The prebaptism program is based on a three-session cycle.

To register, cal Phil Reilly at 545-5508.

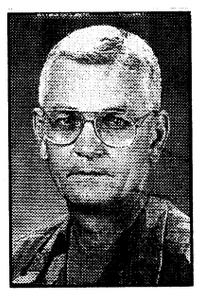
English language classes — English as a Second Language classes will resume in Building 2522 at the Religious Education Center at 9:30 a.m. Tuesday.

Four levels are taught, from beginning through grammar, composition and conversation. All personnel are welcome. Classes are free as is childcare; however, students are asked to purchase their textbooks, which are available at the classes.

Classes are two hours long each Tuesday through the school year. To register, call Bill Putman, 545-4715, or register at the first class.

PWOC activities — Protestant Women of the Chapel will begin its Fall Bible Studies Thursday. Classes will be from 9:30 to 11:45 a.m. Classes offered are "Teach Me Your Ways" by Kay Arthur; "Loving Your Husband" by Cynthia Heald; "Growing Strong in God's Family," a 10-week basic disciple course; and "In Christ," a study about Christ taken directly from the Bible.

All meetings begin in Building 2521 at the Religious Education Center, located at the intersection of Indianhead Road and Thorson Street. Childcare is free in Building 2517. All are invited to attend, and a special invitation is extended to those new to Fort Benning.



For more information, call Peggy Tesdahl at 689-9709 or Mary Parker at 682-5859.

RCIA meetings — Classes for the Rite of Christian Initiation for Adults will meet Sept. 17 at 10:10 a.m. at Dexter Elementary School. Anyone desiring to learn more about the Catholic faith is invited to attend.

Team members and sponsors are still needed. Please contact Phil Reilly, 545-5508, or Rich Wampler, 545-4731.

Revival features USMA speaker

USAIC Chaplain Office

Chaplain (Maj.) Alvin "Sonny" Moore is the featured speaker at the Spiritual Fitness Weekend.

Chaplain (Maj.) Alvin "Sonny" Moore, the Protestant cadet chaplain at the U. S. Military Academy will be the featured speaker at Fort Benning's "Spiritual Fitness Weekend" today through Sunday.

The special services, which will be conducted in Marshall Auditorium, will begin at 7 p.m. each evening. Also featured will be Curtis Bridgeman and several area choirs to present special music each night.

Prior to his current assignment, Moore served at Fort Riley, Kan.; Aschaffenburg, Germany; Fort Campbell, Ky.; and Fort Bragg, N.C.

Moore said, "The most challenging and fulfilling ministry was during Desert Shield/Desert Storm, when 90 soldiers from the aviation brigade received Christ as their personal savior and were baptized in the desert."

"The Fort Benning chaplains and the chapel congregations are praying and trusting God to bring revival to the soldiers and families at Fort Benning," said Chaplain (Col.) Herbert E. Kitchens, U.S. Army Infantry Center Chaplain. "I would like to extend a personal invitation to all members of our community to come and share in this exciting opportunity."

For more information, call 545-2288 or 545-2050 or talk to your unit chaplain.

Bluebird: Scout goes for gold

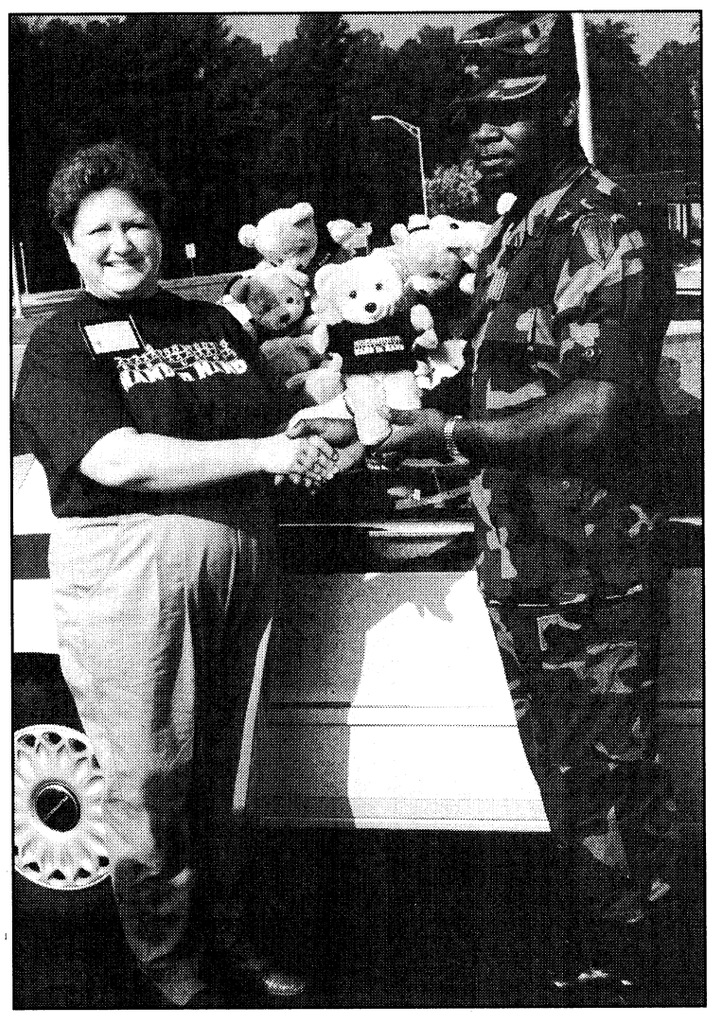
to nest. They may check out several before the female decides on just the right one. The need for it to be just right doesn't end there.

The boxes have specific dimensions and needs. Cole dragged an old nesting box out of her garage and pointed to the entrance hole that was enlarged by other birds. Bluebird houses specify a 1 l/2- inch-diameter entrance hole because it allows the bluebirds in but not other competing species. Cole lifted up one side of the box, attached to the roof with hinges, allowing her to check the nest without much disruption. She also pointed out the ventilation holes on the bottom so the house doesn't get too hot and added that these holes should not be too large or snakes, one of the bluebirds' predators, will have easy access. Despite all the precautions and attention to detail, there have been some losses.

Part of Cole's job was to report any damaged boxes or dead birds. She found three boxes damaged and had them replaced. She also discovered some birds she thinks were killed by fire ants, perhaps drawn to the nest initially by the odor of a broken egg. The ants swarmed and killed the baby birds, and in one case an adult female. "That was hard, finding that when opening a box," she says, but for the most part the project was one she fell in love with.



Her friends and family shared her enthusiasm. Her parents helped by driving her to the second trail around Lawson Airfield where 13 boxes are located. "My brother helped by taking pictures, and my grandparents sent me information." Cole's enthusiasm for her project was infectious.

"Even my friends thought it was a really cool project. A lot of girls my age drop out of Scouts because they don't want to be stereotyped as a Girl Scout," she said. "But even they supported me on this."

Cole's Scout leader, Inge Mason, is proud of the work her Senior Scouts have done. "The girls have done without other things they'd like to do in order to work on this award," she said. Inge said Cole came up with this project by herself. "I just suggested some agencies they could call."

Cole called the Natural Resources Branch of DPW for a project she could be involved in at would help wildlife. The bluebird project sounded interesting, so she took it on. She laughed and said, "When I first started this project I knew nothing about bluebirds."

Now, she's an expert. Through her research, reading, interviews and hands-on experience, Cole has gone from student to teacher. Her chances for the highest honor in Girls Scouts look to be as good as gold.

NCOs beat Commanders

By Brian R. Voller
Bayonet staff writer

The head honchos of Fort Benning squared off in an offensive explosion when the Sergeants Major took on the Commanders Aug. 31 at Gowdy Field.

The game began on a slow note with the first inning seeing minimal action. The Sergeants Major pushed two runs across the plate, while the Commanders made three quick outs.

The second inning brought the first signs of offensive power when Command Sgt. Maj. George D. Conrad smashed a damaging triple that put three runs up on the scoreboard.

The Sergeants Major also showed their defensive as they held the Commanders down with no runs.

Neither team scored during the third inning.

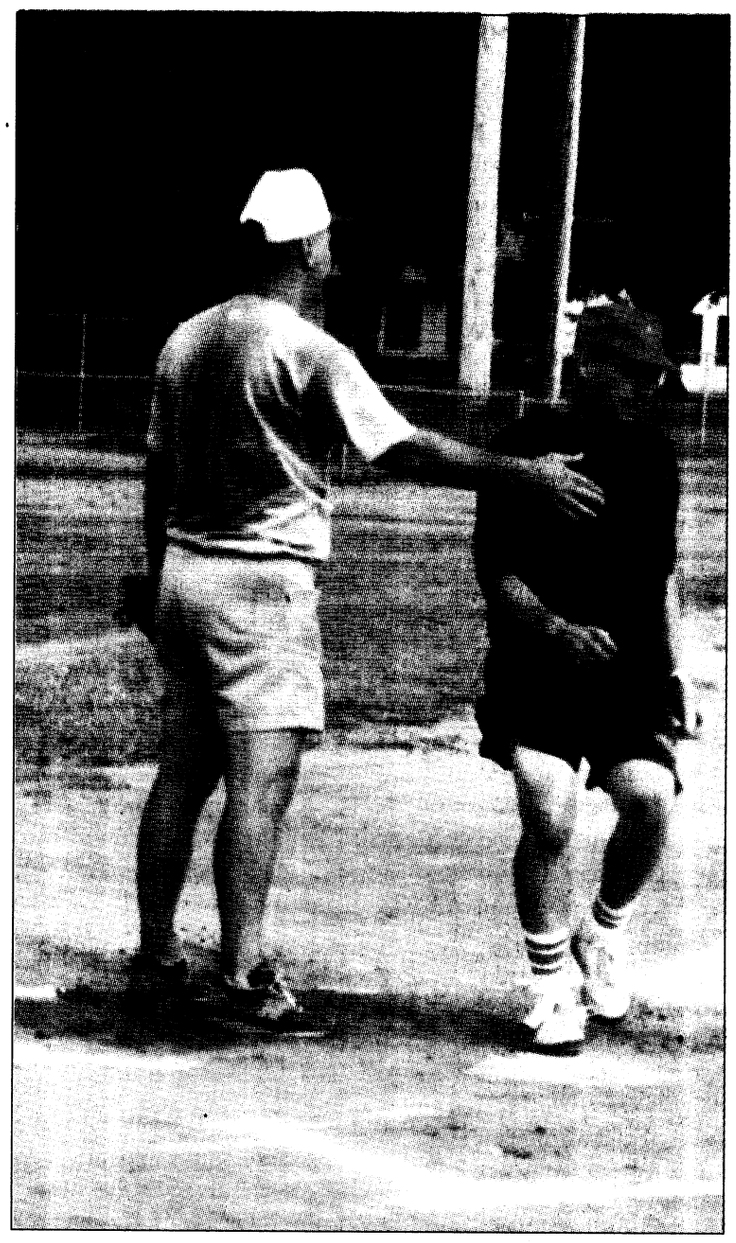
In the fourth, the Commanders showed why they get paid the big bucks by scoring their first five runs. The Commanders then moved into striking distance for the lead being down by only two points 7-5.

The close game was short lived though because the Sergeants Major blew away Major Gen. John W. Hendrix, who was pitching for the Commanders. Sgt. Major Lee Coates tripled in the fifth, while 1st Sgt. Charles Higgins showed speed around the bases with an in-the-park home run.

The Commanders stepped up once again and answered with four runs to close within 3 runs going into the sixth.

At the top of the sixth inning, the Sergeants Major put on a hitting demonstration and put the commanders behind for good.

Both Higgins and Command Sgt. Maj. Gregory Crocket sent the ball long for in-the-park home runs, and Crocket returned to the plate and launched a triple to make the score 25-9.



Defensivley, the Sergeants Major stuffed the Commanders. A quick first base out then a double play between second baseman Crocket to first baseman Command Sgt. Maj. William Cox sent the commanders into the seventh inning down, 25-9.

The Commanders tried a new strategy in the seventh by pulling Hendrix from the pitchers mound, but the Sergeants Major were on fire. Command Sgts. Maj. Bill Kagee and Gary Hurley both took the ball downtown for the final two runs the Sergeants Major would score.

Despite a valiant effort by the Commanders to score eight more runs, the final outcome fell in favor of the Sergeants Major, 29-17.

"They just out hit us plain and simple," Hendrix said. "We would have done better if we could have hit the ball like they did.

"All in all though, it was fun to get out here and play."

Cheerleaders battle stereotypes in Youth Sports summer camp

By Brian R. Voller
Bayonet staff writer

"Cheerleading has long dealt with the stereotype that it's just a bunch of pretty girls on the sidelines," said "Jimbo" Davis, Columbus College cheerleading coach.

"We're trying to teach people that cheerleading is a viable sport and that it's not as easy as it looks."

Youth Sports in cooperation with Columbus College conducted a cheerleading camp for girls ages 6 to 15 Aug. 28 through Sept. 1 to teach Fort Benning's cheerleaders just that.

The camp was instructed by Davis and members of the Columbus College Cheerleading Team.

Davis said the camp is designed to help the cheerleaders learn voice projection, to teach them proper movements with the cheers and to teach them three cheers per night.

"We're not trying to teach them really long and lengthy cheers," Davis said. "We just want them to learn some simpler cheers so they get some audience participation."

Despite how young most of the girls participating in the camp were, Davis said he thinks it's a good time for them to look ahead to the future.

"At this age there are no competitions for the cheerleaders to get into," Davis said. "But when they start getting into the middle school, cheerleading teams start to compete at the national level."

Davis said competitions of this nature can be as rewarding in college scholarship money as sports like football or basketball.

"When the cheerleaders are at this age it's a good time to teach them good habits," Davis said. "The more we teach them now the better their chances of getting a scholarship to college later on."

Along with the image of cheerleaders being just pretty girls, Davis said he would also like to break the image of cheerleading being just for girls.

"Right now, my team is made up of 16 cheerleaders," Davis said. "We are at equal strength, eight girls and eight guys."

Linda Laine, Youth Sports director, said all youth programs are co-ed and males are invited to participate.

"I would like it very much if we could get more males to try for cheerleading," Laine said. "Unfortunately males don't want to try out for the cheerleading teams because they think it's for girls."

Cheerleading on Fort Benning is currently only for the support of the sporting teams, but Laine said she is still open for suggestion.

"Right now we have nothing planned for cheerleading competitions," Laine said. "But I wouldn't mind seeing competitions, or maybe an end-of-the-season show featuring the cheerleaders."

Reader disagrees with Voller's view on football

Regarding Brian Voller's Sept. 1 Column "College beats Pros," I must say I haven't read such misguided and error-filled arguments since my subscription to "The Congressional Record" expired over 20 years ago.

Allow me to set the record straight on a few matters. The first televised sporting event may well have been a college football game as Voller states, but I doubt it could have occurred prior to the invention of television itself.

Professional football was being played as early as 1919 (the Green Bay Packers were active then); television didn't come along until the late '40s. Although the college game existed in some form well before the advent of the NFL, Voller is wrong to say that a college football game was televised before there were professional sports teams in football.

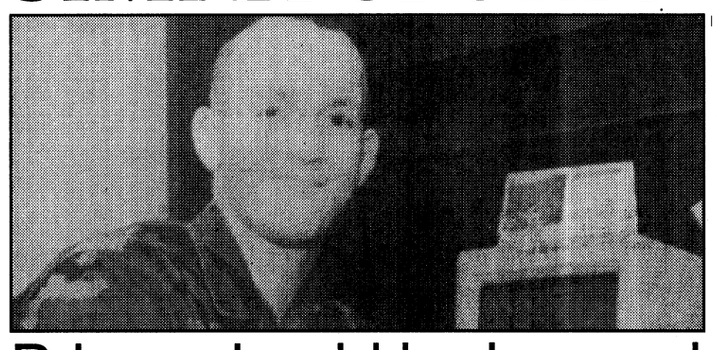
Also, the last time I watched a college football game, the teams were affiliated with the National Collegiate Athletic Association, not the "National College Athletics Association" cited by Voller.

As for his comments about the "National Title" and the Heismann Trophy, they are very hard to take seriously. There is no "National Title" in college ball, just a vote (several votes actually) taken by a bunch of guys who don't play the game. In contrast, the NFL settles the issue of a national champion the way it ought to be settled, on the playing field, head to head. We call this game the "Super Bowl," Voller. You should watch for it in January.

The Heismann Trophy? Who cares? When was the last time a "Hype-man" trophy winner did anything in the NFL?

I have no beef with anyone who thinks college football is great, because it really is. But for me, it simply doesn't compare with the excitement and drama of the NFL.

These are the best football players in the world; stronger, faster and more skilled than those who are still in college. Every year, NFL training camps are full of guys who had to buy their own bus tickets to camp for a shot at glory. The veterans know they have to beat these guys out or lose their jobs.



It's incredibly competitive, unbelievably intense, and more dangerous than anything you or I will do short of combat. You simply can't play football at the college or pro level by just going through the motions. You've got to go all out or you'll get killed.

The proof of all this is on the football field every Sunday afternoon in the fall. I saw it again just last Sunday in the Georgia Dome, where my upstart Carolina Panthers surprised an over-confident Falcons team (They must have read Voller's comments in The Bayonet about the Panthers having nothing) and took them down to the wire and past it, into overtime. The Notre Dame vs. Northwestern game the day before had nothing on that one, I tell you (Except, alas, the outcome was much better I must admit).

The bottom line is this — football is America's game, and no matter what level it's played on it takes guts, determination and incredible intensity. Anyone who watches the pro game and thinks the players aren't giving it their all doesn't know what he's looking at. Of course, anyone who ranks Mike Ditka up there with Don Shula and Vince Lombardi as great coaches, probably hasn't seen much of the NFL anyway.

Prices should be lowered

By Brian R. Voller
Bayonet staff writer

I can remember when I was young and my Grandpa would take my brother and me to Wrigley Field to watch the Cubs play.

Those were the days when Wrigley had no lights, Ryan Sandberg was the main player, the Cubs still stunk and the tickets cost $15.

Recently something happened that made me feel sick to my stomach. I called my brother and asked him to purchase some Blackhawks tickets for when I come home during Thanksgiving. He called me back and said one ticket would cost me $32, for the cheap seats!

What is going on at the professional sporting arenas? Year after year the prices keep getting higher and higher, and it's not to match inflation.

I'm not just talking about the price of tickets either. If you're going to go to a professional sporting event you'd better eat first. The price of a hot dog, a refreshing beverage and some peanuts could cost you as much as $12.

I could be wrong, but couldn't you buy that same amount of food at the grocery store for $5? Plus, if you get it at the grocery store it's going to taste better; some of the food I've had at stadiums was nothing short of awful.

The lowest form of cutting corners I've seen thus far from a stadium happened in my beloved home town of Chicago. Instead of charging fans $3.75 for a full can of beer, the stadium now puts a backpack on the vendors, which is essentially a walking keg. The vendors are now charging the fans $3.75 for a cup full of foam.

Another problem is the price of souvenirs. I feel bad for parents these days who try to take their children to the ball game and end up spending well over a $100. A day at the baseball diamond should not cost that much.

This is basically what it all boils down to. The stadiums have to charge outrageous prices to keep up with soaring salaries in the players' contracts, but it's not the fans who should be paying for their overblown egos; it should be the teams themselves.

If you're smart you'll continue to do what I do by watching the games on TV. I plan to continue watching the games for free in the comfort of my own home, that is, until they try to start charging me to watch the games on TV.

The best thing you can do to show your children a good time at a sporting event is take them to see the Columbus Stars, the RedStixx or some other minor league or college sporting team.

You can go there for under your gross yearly income, and you can continue to allow your children to benefit from all the good things sports have to offer.

Instructors compete for Blackhat of the Year

By Shannon Day
Special to The Bayonet©

Every regiment or command picks a noncommissioned officer and soldier of the year, but how many regiments set up rigorous competitions to evaluate their instructors?

The 1st Battalion (Airborne), 507th Infantry, 11th Infantry Regiment, has such a competition each year, called the 'Blackhat of the Year.'

This year Staff Sgt. Frank G. West, airborne instructor, Company C., 1st. Bn., 507th Inf., has won this title.

"He is truly a professional noncommissioned officer," Sgt. 1st Class Jaye Phillippi, competition coordinator, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 1st. Bn., 507th Inf. "He put forth a lot of effort before he was even selected to compete."

West entered the Army in 1984 and spent nine years assigned to the 82nd Airborne Division. He then spent a year in Korea in the demilitarized zone. He has been an airborne instructor with the 1st Bn., 507th, for two years.

"It's a great honor to be an airborne instructor because there aren't many of them," West said. "To me, being chosen as Blackhat of the Year means I am an example of what an airborne instructor should be, know and do."

The competitors were tested in several areas, according to West.

"We had to instruct the class we teach to the airborne students in front of several evaluators," he said.

They also had to take a physical training test, go through an oral board and then the evaluators chose a task from the common skills manual. The competitors had about an hour to prepare a class on the task, and then teach it to the students.

It was a close competition, according to Phillippi.

"There were 140 points possible in all, and only two-tenths of a point separated second and third place," he said.

Second place went to Staff Sgt. Robert M. Groom, jumpmaster, HHC, 1st. Bn., 507th Inf.

Coming in behind Grooms was Staff Sgt. Robert Shawlinski, Co. D., 1st. Bn., 507th Inf.

West, who had been instructing basic airborne students, is going to move to the jump branch and become a master trainer. He will be evaluating instructors on their teaching techniques.

New masks more comfortable, allow for easier breathing

By Bernadette Lanstrum
28th PAD, Northwest Guardian

Anyone who's tried to run up a hill wearing an M17 protective mask will probably say he was gasping for air by the time he reached the top.

Those days of reaching muscle failure while trying to breathe are over, according to I Corps Chemical officials.

After trying to replace the M17 for approximately 15 years, the Army is fielding the M40 and M40Al protective mask. Tracked vehicle crews will use the M42 and M42A I masks.

One advantage of the M40 mask is the nose cup and eyelenses are closer to the face, allowing for a better field of view, according to Capt. Michael Brouillette, I Corps Chemical Section, Fort Lewis, Wash.

Soldiers in some units received their masks earlier than others, and 3 percent of them were uncomfortable with the new fit.

To alleviate this problem, the Department of the Army fielded the M40Al, which features a softer nose cup. Other than that, there is no difference between the two masks, nor is one superior to the other.

"Nothing mechanically is different," Brouillette said. "What's important is that soldiers who have the M40s are not being given the M40Als. The M40s are not inferior; they're exactly the same."

Another improvement offered by the new masks is the external canister-type filter. This will make it easier for soldiers to replace the filters in a contaminated environment, Brouillette said.

With the M17, soldiers had to hold their breath long enough to take the mask off, replace the filters and put the mask back on. Now, they only have to unscrew the old canister and screw in the new canister.

The new masks also provide better airflow, which should make it easier for units to train in.

"I've worn the M40, and it's like not wearing a mask," Brouillette said. "There's a much better airflow."

A new head harness with a bigger pad, helps keep the mask fit, which is important because the canisters are heavier than the filters on the M17.

The M40 and M42 also have one filter instead of training filters and wartime filters like the M17, Brouillette said. The new masks are equipped with M40 hoods, which can be replaced with contingency hoods when units deploy.

Gas chamber relegated to history

By Bernadette Lanstrum
28th PAD, Northwest Guardian

Memories of the gas chamber often elicit pictures of soldiers drooling, gagging and coughing while they try to spit out their name and Social Security numbers after breaking the seal on their protective masks.

Soon, however, those memories could become relics as mask validation systems gradually take the place of the infamous gas chamber.

Currently being fielded, the new systems are devices that attach to the mask and fine-tune the fit by taking air samples from inside and outside the mask. When the soldier has a proper fit, the system gives a green light.

"I'm really excited about the mask validation system," said Capt. Michael Brouillete, I Corps Chemical Section, Fort Lewis, Wash. "It was a tremendous process to get it fielded."

NTC training includes media role players

3rd Brigade's commander gets realistic combat training media style at NTC

By Thomas Johnson
The Patriot Public Affairs

NATIONAL TRAINING CENTER, Calif. — Realism envelopes soldiers of the 3rd Brigade Combat Team the moment they arrive here. No longer does training at NTC only involve the two weeks in the maneuver box. Now soldiers are thrust into a realistic scenario based on past military conflicts.

Helping to drive that realism is a new team of public affairs and video personnel who role play as the civilian media.

"Media on the battlefield is the reality of any situation in which we (the military) find ourselves," said Capt. James Cassella, senior public affairs trainer and chief of the NTC Visual Information. "Media on the battlefield training is important to any soldier anywhere. It's an integral part now of every rotation at the National Training Center."

Soldiers are not merely on lookers to this training. Many are engulfed in the situation, including 3rd Brigade Commander Col. Steven Schook, who was interviewed by Cassella and his team of media role players.

The scenario-driven training at NTC, including the media on the battlefield, give soldiers an invaluable experience that will help them should they find themselves in real similar situations.

"This is an opportunity to get smart on operations other than war. And some things we have not had an opportunity to work on much," Schook said. "This is the perfect environment for it. (NTC) creates the situations, they've got the scenario ... the media play, the additional new missions that we have to look into. And we're learning a lot of lessons on this," he said.

"The main objective of training here remains the same. Obviously, (media on the battlefield training) is not the primary focus here, our primary focus is to train how to fight and win war on the maneuver battlefield. But the media's going to be there and we've got the be prepared to deal with it."

Several other soldiers dealt with reporters from the International News Network, NTC's fictitious broadcast news service. Public affairs training offered by the brigade S-1 Maj. Scott A. Henry prepared them on how to deal with media — mock or real.

Spec. William Tandy, Service Battery, 4th Battalion, 41st Field Artillery said he wishes he was given this training a long time ago.

"When I went to Saudi Arabia, I got off the plane and a (reporter) asked me one simple question. And I was not expecting any of it. We didn't know there would be media there. I said what came out of my mouth and got lucky. But if I would have known then, what I've had training on today and last night, I'd probably had better answers and been able to put myself in better perspective," he said.

The media role players dress in civilian attire, use real video cameras and microphones, and aggressively pursue a story much like the real thing. Cassella said this helps prepare soldiers and staff to better handle real media in the future.

"The thing we try to teach here is that the media can be negotiated like terrain — to your advantage or disadvantage. And we try to coach a positive approach to the media, the American public's right to know consistent with operational security, and the fact that it doesn't have to be a difficult thing to do if you've got a plan," he added.

The video shot by the role-playing cameraman doesn't go to waste. It is sent live back to NTC Operations Center where it can be viewed by training personnel or others. In addition, the footage is compiled into mock newscasts so they can be used to drive a training discussion during after action reviews.

"We do mock media reports that drive the realism of the scenario. And it's really interesting to see the reaction when units see something that drives the realism, a crisis if you will," Cassella said.

With the information era firmly upon us, the need to encompass training such as media on the battlefield takes on greater importance. Using the media to positively tell the Army story helps with troop morale, public support and opinion, and most importantly sends a message of strong U.S. resolve to the enemy that the best trained military is there and ready when called upon.

586th trains West Pointers at Stillwater

By 1st Lt.. R. Shawn Elliot
586th Engineer Company

Stillwater Lake is located approximately six miles southeast of The United States Military Academy, West Point. Stillwater's routine incorporates no more than a foggy early morning wakeup from a ten-foot john boat and trolling motor, a few casual afternoon sunbathers and early lights out from a picturesque sunset reflection, broken by no more than the ripple of horseflies or falling leaves.

At 5:30 a.m. July 20 though, eighteen members of First Platoon, 586th Engineer Company and four MKII Bridge Erection Boats with 1,696 unbridled horses of diesel power, gave the lake a jolting wakeup. That day, and almost every day following, until Aug. 12, the River Rats and the cadets they trained did not allow Stillwater Lake to live according to its namesake.

For eight weeks during the summer, cadets move away from the pomp, circumstance and parade fields of garrison to the rigors, challenges, and Hooah of "the field". The eight-week period, known as cadet Field Training (CFT), is the first time that West Point cadets are exposed to the real Army. The purpose of CFT is to train 3rd class cadets in individual and collective small unit skills and prepare them to serve as corporals in the Corps of cadets. The 10th Mountain Division, who habitually supports the training, gives yearlings (3rd class cadets, sophomores) wide spectrum of the combined arms team. This training includes two, 12-hour days of Engineer training for every cadet.

Annually, the 586th Engineer Company is tasked to training on a wide spectrum of the combined arms team. This training includes two, twelve-hour days of engineer training for every cadet.

The 586th Engineer Company is tasked to augment the Task Force's engineer element with a portion of a ribbon bridge platoon. The platoon leader, 1st Lt. Shawn Elliott and the platoon sergeant, Staff Sgt. Wendell Barksdale prepared the unit to spend approximately four weeks exposing cadets to ribbon-bridging assets and capabilities. Though the cadets were flooded with the technical details of the equipment, the goal at the site was to understand how engineers, specifically bridge units, provide mobility on the battlefield. This was achieved by training more than 1,300 cadets from the class of 1998 on free launching an interior bay, the capabilities of an MKII BEB, and constructing a four float raft in accordance with Army Training Evaluation Program standards.

Soldiers from the rank of private to staff sergeant took the opportunity to give instruction to the cadets. Sgt. Bradley Hilton and Sgt. Mitchell Doss assisted by Spec. Michael Davis and Spec. Robert Gonzales, were the primary instructors for the BEB familiarization classes. Their classes consisted of several minutes of maneuvers and explaining the major boat components and how they functioned. The finale was a high -speed power stop that jettisoned a 10-foot high wall of water over the boat, drenching everything in its path.

Dripping wet, the cadets moved to the class on free launching an interior bay. Here Spec. Donald Baustian, Pvt. Vincent Moses, Spec. Phillip Spight, and Spec. Andrew Smith took turns teaching the basics of bridge bays and the ten steps required to prepare the bay. As part of their instruction, cadets prepared the bay for launch.

The final task at the Ribbon Bridge site, cadets were taught how to construct a four-float raft and then conducted a timed and evaluated build. The mission training plan standard for constructing a four float raft is twelve minutes. The average build time for the cadets was 5 minutes 30 seconds. The superior times can be credited not only to the motivation of the cadets, but the exceptional instruction on the raft. Sgt. Jack Haight, the primary instructor on the site and Sgt. Darin Fowler used every trick of the trade to train and entertain the yearlings.

Not only did the cadets learn, the sergeants crosstrained junior soldiers from the platoon. By the end of the deployment, Pvt. Rene Ramon, Pfc. Jeffery Serafini, and Pfc. Jacob Lenz were giving the classes. Two of the squads they trained still hold the overall best build time of four minutes, 26 seconds.

These exceptional training results could not have happened without behind the scenes operations. Maintenance and safety were the critical operations that allowed training to continue. Pfc. Bronson Hollifield, a qualified lifeguard, oversaw water safety operations on the site while operating the safety boat. Spec. James Gildon and Spec. Ryan Jones, the mechanics, maintained equipment readiness at all times.

The deployment to West Point was an outstanding opportunity. An opportunity, though, that would not have been possible without the assistance of the 10th Transportation Battalion from Fort Eustis, Virginia. The deployment and recovery missions alike were three day exercises for the 586th. The exercise consisted of convoys to Fort Stewart and Charleston, South Carolina and port operations at the MTMC Terminal. The exercises employed 18, M945 Bride Transporters, four MKII BEB, two High-Mobility Multi-purpose Wheeled Vehicle, a Heavy-Expanded Mobility Tactical Truck fueler, a HEMMT wrecker, and two M1008 contact trucks. At port, this engineer equipment was loaded onto Army LCU-2000s (Landing Craft, Utility). Four soldiers serving as supercargo cruised with the equipment up the Atlantic coast and the Hudson River to the academy . The redeployment was conducted in the same manner, but the vessel used was an Army Logistic Support Vessel.

The deployment was not just all work and no play for the soldiers of 1st Platoon, 586th. The soldiers took advantage of additional training at USMA's Leadership Reaction Course, the Water Confidence Obstacle Course and the Slide for Life. The platoon also conducted bridge crewman skills training on the Hudson River. This provided an excellent chance to operate the boats on navigable waters as well as work in an environment other than the Chattahoochee River. Soldiers were able to take weekend trips to New York City and nearby historical areas, and toured the Academy.

The Military Academy will continue to train its cadets, and as long as it does there will be a requirement for the 586th to train them on ribbon assets. In the future there will be the opportunity for different soldiers to gain the experience that first platoon reaped this year.

1st Bn 11th Inf Regt changes command at York

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Command of the 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment, changed hands Sept. 7, during a 9 a.m. ceremony on York Field in front of Infantry Hall.

The 1st Battalion is the largest battalion on Fort Benning with a daily strength in excess of 2,000 personnel, 1,300 of whom are permanent party personnel who are assigned as special and directorate staff for the Infantry School and Infantry Center. More than 500 students attend the Infantry Officer Advanced Course at any given time.

Lt. Col. Richard G. Kaiura, most recently assigned as the operations officer for the Northern Edge 95 exercise control group at Fort Greely, Alaska, will take command from Lt. Col. Florian K. Rothbrust.

Kaiura, a 1976 U.S. Military Academy graduate, has served with the 9th Infantry Division, at Fort Lewis, Wash.; the 8th Infantry Division in Germany where he commanded a company in the 2nd Battalion, 13th Infantry Regiment; and the 1st Infantry Division at Fort Riley, Kan., and during operations Desert Shield and Desert Storm. He has served with the 6th Infantry Division in Alaska and has previously served at Fort Benning with the U.S. Army Research Institute.

Kaiura and his wife, Diane, have two children.

Rothbrust, a native of Heidelberg, Germany, will be assigned as the deputy brigade commander, 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division. He is married to the former Gabriella Fracasso of Vicenza, Italy. They have two children.

DENTAC gets new commander at Love

By Lori Egan
Bayonet staff writer

The U.S. Army Dental Activity changed commanders during a ceremony Aug. 30 at Love Dental Clinic.

Col. Craig A. Moore took command of DENTAC from outgoing Commander Col. Richard A. Nurnberg.

Maj. Gen. John W. Hendrix, Fort Benning's commanding general, was the guest speaker at the ceremony.

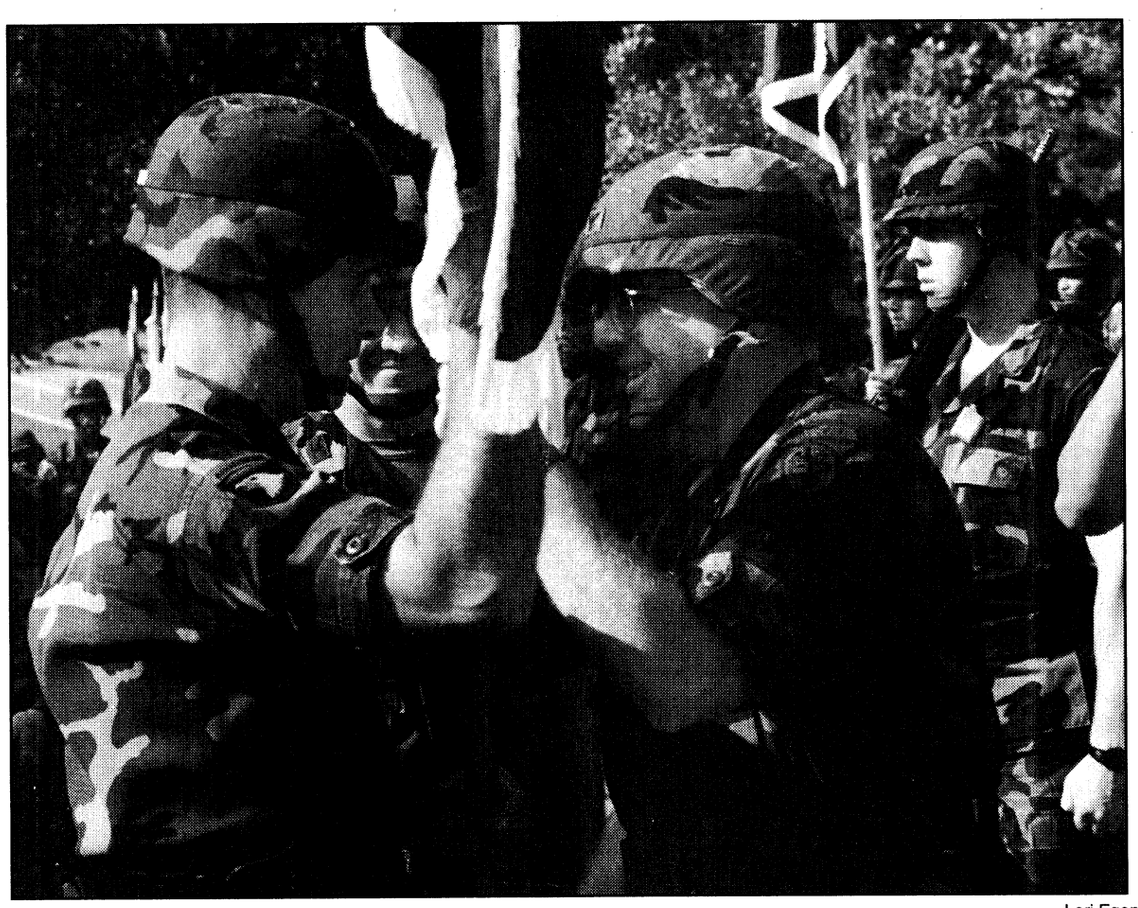
Hendrix welcomed Moore by telling him that there is something really special about DENTAC, about Fort Benning and about the tri-community.

"You are about to take command in the best possible soldier-civilian environment," Hendrix said. "We are and you are now part of that, the best Army installation in the world."

Hendrix said that being the best installation in the Army gets harder every year.

Hendrix concluded his remarks by saying he hoped that this would be the most exciting assignment for Moore.

Moore said he wanted three things to happen with this command: DENTAC to continue to offer outstanding service; for the unit to have fun; and to have fun himself.



After relinquishing command to Moore, Nurnberg said the accomplishments achieved during his tenure were due to the DENTAC staff.

"It was great to go out as a member of a championship team," Nurnberg said.

Hendrix commended Nurnberg on a distinguished career and great service to the country.

Moore's awards and decorations include the Meritorious Service Medal with two oak leaf clusters, the Army Commendation Medal, the Army Achievement Medal, the Overseas Service Ribbon, the National Defense Service Medal with second award, Army Service Ribbon, the German Armed Forces Proficiency Badge in silver and the German Sports Badge in gold.

Moore and his wife, Arlene, have three children, Michelle, Megan and Michael.

Lori Egan

Col. Richard A. Nurnberg, outgoing DENTAC commander, passes the guidon to Maj. Gen. John W. Hendrix, post commander during the DENTAC change of command ceremony while incoming commander Col. Craig A. Moore waits to receive it. Nurnberg will continue to work at DENTAC until he retires in July.

Nurnberg's awards and decorations include the Legion of Merit, the Meritorious Service Medal with four oak leaf clusters, the Army Commendation Medal, the Overseas Service Ribbon with the numeral two device, the National Defense Service Medal with bronze star device, Army Service Ribbon, the Armed Forces Expeditionary Medal and the Army Superior Unit Award.

Nurnberg and his wife, Karen, have two sons, Craig and David.

Nurnberg will continue to work at DENTAC until he retires in July.

THE NEXT TIME YOU DRIVE TO ATLANTA TO CATCH A FLIGHT. . .
ATTACH THIS TO YOUR WINDOW!

Some folks think that to get the cheapest airfare or the best airline connection, it's necessary to drive to Atlanta. Leaving Columbus two hours early to make the 100 mile drive, parking their car in a suburb of Harris County, fighting the crowds, catching a train and finding any one of hundreds of departure gates, and then being faced with the same grim process on their return, doesn't seem to deter the cost-conscious traveller in his quest to find the absolute lowest fare.

BIG SPENDER ON BOARD

Columbus Now Has
"THE HOMEFIELD ADVANTAGE"
There are now five air carriers serving Columbus, providing a total of 40 arrivals and departures daily, with more flights expected to be added as the traffic increases. More carriers and more flights also mean more destinations, improved service and more competitive fares.

NORTHWEST Airlink · DELTA · USAir EXPRESS · AMR American Eagle / American Airlines

So next time you make your travel plans, contact your travel agent and compare fares. Then think about that four hour round-trip drive to and from Atlanta and see if it's really worth the extra effort. Shop around, you'll soon realize that a Columbus departure gives you. . .
THE HOMEFIELD ADVANTAGE.

FORT BENNING HISTORY BOOK

published to commemorate

FORT BENNING'S 75th ANNIVERSARY

Fort Benning recently celebrated its 75th Anniversary, and The Bayonet published a special edition to coincide with the celebration. Soon after the special edition of the paper was published, we began looking at the information about Fort Benning that we had collected and decided that it was simply too good to leave it just in newspaper form.

We knew the book would be interesting and informative. The next step was to make it as attractive as possible. An experienced layout and design firm was hired, and they have done an absolutely superb job. You will enjoy thumbing through its pages for years to come. You will also be proud to put it in a prominent place at home for friends to enjoy, or at work for your customers to see. And , if you're looking for a gift for a retiree, or a friend who may have served at Fort Benning and is no longer here, there's no better way to remind them of your lasting friendship.

Published by the contract printer of Fort Benning's authorized newspaper, The Bayonet, the hardcover book, protected by a beautiful full-color dust cover, has 168-pages and is filled with more than 200 photos. The book includes detailed timelines of significant events that have shaped Fort Benning, and overview of the post's involvement in World War II, Korea, Viet Nam, and a variety of stories that round out the post's interesting history.

It is the perfect "coffee table" and is a 'must have' for anyone who has been stationed at Fort Benning. It's a book that will be a lasting memento of the winner of the 1994 Commander In Chief's Award signifying it as...

"The Best Army Installation in the World!"

Dear Customer,

We, here at Gilland-Wyant, would like to once again thank you for your business. We consider our customers to be our greatest asset and we will strive to continue to please you long after the sale.

We have a very simple business philosophy. "Earning your business for life" is our motto and we fully intend to live up to it. Unlike the traditional image of a car dealer, Gilland-Wyant doesn't try to make a bundle of cash on your initial sale. While everyone knows that a profit is what it takes to stay in business, we feel that by making a great deal now, the next time you decide to purchase a vehicle, we will be your first choice and we will make another great deal. Also, anyone else you tell about us can buy a car or truck and also get a great deal, and all in all, we get to (1) Make you happy, (2) Stay in business, and (3) Feel good about ourselves. (How many car dealers can say that?).

From the Management to the Service Department to the Sales Team, everyone here is dedicated to solving any problem you may have or answer any questions you may wish to ask. While we feel that you should expect almost no problems from your new car, if for any reason something should decide to act improper, our repair technicians pride themselves on returning even the smallest item on your vehicle to perfect condition.

Again, Thank You for your business, and enjoy your new vehicle.

Loud music

gets bad rap on post

By Lori Egan
Bayonet staff writer

Loud music in cars, housing areas and barracks on post is on its way out — at least if the Fort Benning Military Police Activity has its way.

That's because the MPA has recently stepped up enforcement of the post regulation regarding loud music, U.S. Army Infantry Center Policy Memorandum 94-64.

According to the policy, music that can be heard farther than 15 feet from a vehicle is in violation of Policy 94-64. Also if the music can be heard farther than 100 feet from the car, the violator can be charged under the Georgia Code 40-6-14.

Capt. Michael C. Nason, chief, Law Enforcement Operations, said this policy also applies to the barracks and the housing areas. The housing areas and barracks are governed by Garrison Regulation 210-5.

Quite a few drivers have recently been pulled over for violation of this policy, Nason said, and many of them are unaware of the post policy. There are no warning tickets being given to drivers and violation of Georgia Code means a fine of $25.

The biggest problem area is the Main Post's Marchant Street between the airborne barracks and Burger King during the weekends, because people like to ride around with their windows down when the weather is nice, Nason said. The peak hours of noise are from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m., Nason continued.

The policy is being enforced to promote goodwill and a general order of discipline, Nason said.

"Most people find (loud music) aggravating especially in the housing areas, which are generally peaceful," Nason said.

The MPs on scene keep an informational worksheet with the name, unit, time and location of the stop," Nason said. "These worksheets help us determine the units that are the habitual offenders."

"During the traffic stop, the soldiers are asked if they are aware of this policy," Nason said. "The majority of them reply 'no they are not aware of the policy.'

"We are soliciting the support of the commanders and the sergeants major, trying to get the word out to the soldiers because this is the post policy , and we all need to support this policy," Nason said.

Top educator visits

Dr. Lillian Gonzalez, director of Department of Defense Education Activity and chief executive officer for the Department of Defense Dependent Schools and Section 6 Schools, talks with students at Dexter School during her visit to Fort Benning Schools Tuesday. Gonzalez sat in on a Dexter student's presentation on Brazil. The top educator oversees approximately 95,000 students in 293 schools across 15 foreign countries and approximately 39,000 students in 64 schools in seven states. See story on Page B-1.

OCS inducts 45 into hall of fame

By Lisa M. Hibbert
Bayonet staff writer

The Officer Candidate School inducted 45 graduates into the OCS Hall of Fame Sept. 8 at Marshall Auditorium in Infantry Hall, Building 4.

Maj. Gen. Richard S. Siegfried, former deputy inspector general, Office of the Secretary of the Army, Washington, D.C., was the guest speaker for the program.

Siegfried, a 1963 graduate of OCS said he was honored to be there.

"(I am) glad to have the opportunity to meet the OCS graduates who have served our Army so finely.

"Inside an OCS graduate there is something special about those of us who have served in the ranks," Siegfried said. "We've been there, we've been where soldiers walk and shoot. Congratulations to you (inductees) ... what a privilege to be recognized."

Retired Maj. Bennie E. Young, one of the inductees into the Hall of Fame, said he was surprised that he was considered.

"I had no idea I was being considered, but it is very inspiring," Young said. "It is the right retribution for coming out of Vietnam."

Young is one of three below the rank of colonel who were inducted into the Hall of Fame.

Siegfried said that it was "nice to come back to something considered home. "I spent six months here back when I started my career (as an officer)," he said.

Assisting Siegfried in presenting the awards were Maj. Gen. John W. Hendrix, commanding general; Lt. Col. Scott L. Armbrister, 3rd Battalion (OCS), 11th Infantry Regiment, commander; Col. John P. Lewis, 11th Inf. Regt. commander; and OCS Sgt. Maj. Darryl Powell.

In order to be inducted to the Hall of Fame, officers must have been commissioned from the Officer Candidate School at Fort Benning or the Ground General School at Fort Riley, Kan., and accomplished one of the following:

- Awarded the Medal of Honor (regardless of rank)
- Attained the rank of colonel while serving on active duty or duty in a Reserve Component
- Been elected or appointed to an office of prominence in national or state government
- Or been recognized and recommended by the commandant of the Infantry School for outstanding service.

FUND-RAISER

5001 benefits youth sports

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet©

When the Combined Federal Campaign kicks off Oct. 2, contributors can earmark their donations to help only Fort Benning agencies by marking 5001 on their pledge forms.

Linda Lane, Youth Activities Center sports director, said Fort Benning's youth sports programs are funded almost entirely by donations to 5001.

"With the cutting of funds and downsizing of the Army, 5001 has been a lifesaver to the youth sports program," Lane said.

Lane said the center received $14,000 this year, which was used in part to purchase new uniforms, refurbish all of the football helmets and purchase paint for marking athletic fields.

"Many people do not realize the enormous costs involved in buying and maintaining uniforms and equipment, especially in a program of this size," she said. "The total really starts to add up. The 5001 fund covers nearly all of our sports expenses."

Although most of the 5001 fund is used for the sports programs, which include football, soccer, basketball, baseball, T-ball, softball, swimming, tennis and karate, the money generated is sometimes used to cover the expenses of other activities, such as the recent Back to School Bash, Lane said.

"Because the 5001 fund helps us meet our biggest expenses, we are able to keep registration costs lower," she said. "We have one of the lowest costing sports programs in Training and Doctrine Command, and this is due to 5001."

> "We try to maintain a relaxed atmosphere with a variety of interesting activities. The centers are places where post youth can relax, have fun and get rid of stress."
> — Linda Lane
> Youth Activities Center sports director

Lane said the post's youth activities centers are important to maintaining a high quality of life for post residents. "It's important that our youth get wholesome recreation, so that they aren't out doing other things," she said.

"We try to maintain a relaxed atmosphere with a variety of interesting activities. The centers are places where post youth can relax, have fun and get rid of stress."

"The purpose of the Fort Benning Youth Center program is to provide your children with a variety of programs designed with the child's welfare in mind," said Alan Stewart, director of Community Activities. "We make every effort to develop young minds and bodies, promote good sportsmanship and offer wholesome leisure time activities."

Lane said donating to the 5001 fund is an excellent way for post residents to see their money used to improve their quality of life.

"If they want to see 5001 at work, all they have to do is go over to one of the sports fields on Saturday morning," Lane said.

The 5001 fund, which is overseen by the Soldier and Family Support Association, helps support numerous post agencies and services, including youth and handicap programs, Santa's Castle, volunteer services, lending closet, food locker, Army Community Service, Red Cross, family support groups, community improvement, Boy and Girl Scouts and others.

Colin Powell interview to air on ABC tonight

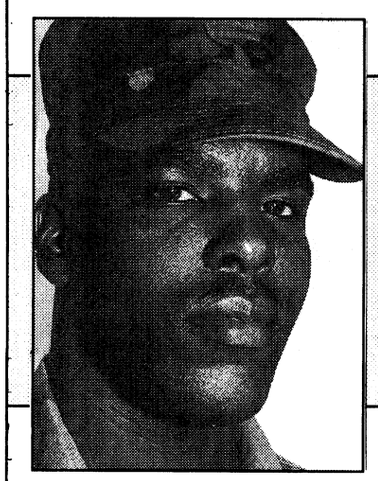
By Lisa M. Hibbert
Bayonet staff writer

The interview of retired Gen. Colin Powell by Barbara Walters that was partially filmed at Fort Benning June 28 will air tonight at 10 on ABC's "20/20."

Part of the interview was filmed in three different locations on post — the Airborne Memorial, Eubanks Field and the Infantry Museum with a short take at the Infantryman's Statue in front of Infantry Hall.

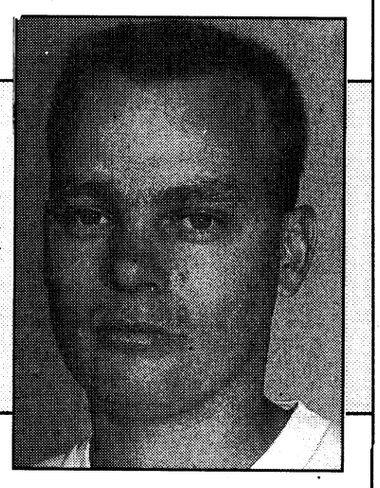
Other locations for this interview were Jamaica and Brooklyn, N.Y.

Sources say Powell chose Fort Benning as one of the sites for the interview because he was a former infantryman who served at Fort Benning, and he said he spent several "enjoyable" years here.



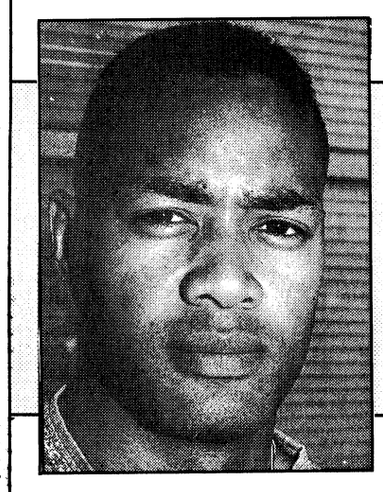
Powell served as the 12th chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff from Oct. 1, 1989, to Sept. 30, 1993, under Presidents George Bush and Bill Clinton.

Powell retired from the Army Sept. 30, 1993. He was the recipient of the 1994 Doughboy Award, which is the top infantry honor.

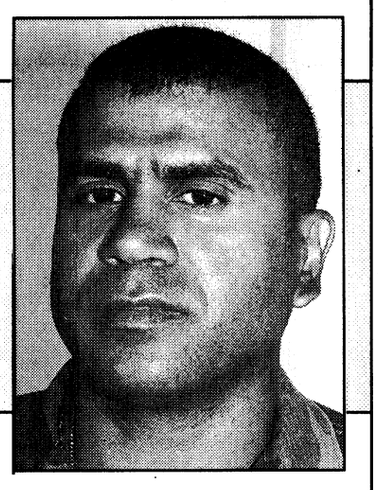


Powell's interview coincides with the release of his book, "My American Journey."

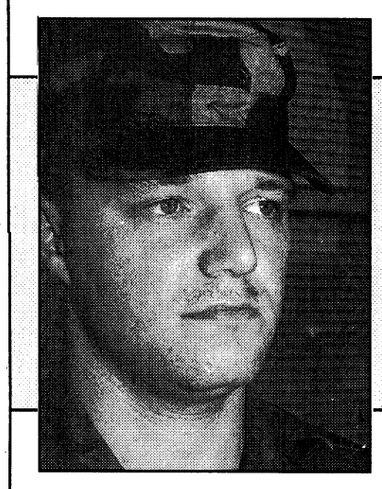
VARIOUS VOICES



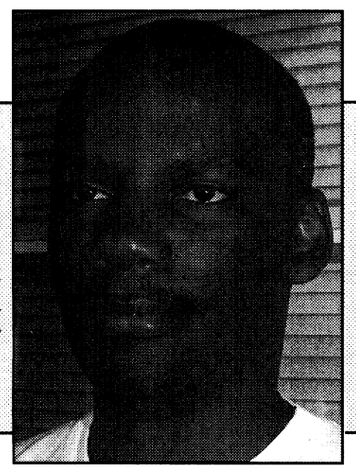
How should housing be distributed equitably on this post?



Spc. Anthony J. Clark, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 2nd Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment — "I think it should depend on the number of family members and the urgency of the situation. It should be done on a case-by-case basis. People who did hardship tours and single parents should be a priority."



Staff Sgt. Paul W. Wilson, Company C, 2nd Battalion, 54th Infantry — "I think the lower enlisted should have priority on housing because they can't afford to live off post."



Warrant Officer Rudolfo B. Lane, Company C, 3rd Ranger Battalion — "If quarters are available, let people move in right away if they are adequate. I've seen houses sit empty for more than a year."

Master Sgt. Angel L. Flores, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 29th Infantry Regiment — "It should be first come, first serve. The quality of the noncommissioned officers housing I've seen is bad. Officer housing is better than enlisted housing. For the best post in the Army, it's a disgrace that people live in such old houses."

Sgt. Chris S. Petosky, 608th Ordnance Company — "I think it is fair for the lower enlisted ranks, but not all quarters are equal. Some don't have garbage disposals or dishwashers. And quarters stay vacant for too long."

Ernest E. Spinks, family member — "I think housing should go to the lower enlisted before the higher-ranking NCOs because they can afford to live off post. But for a private, married with a child and a nonworking spouse, it is harder for him to pay for off-post housing."

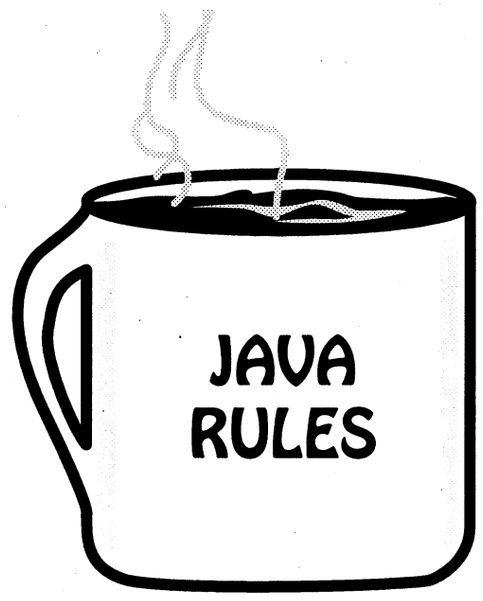
Visitor broods over coffee

By Karl Weisel
Hessen Herald



WASHINGTON (Army News Service) — When did coffee become such a sought-after commodity in the United States?

From a time when it was hard to find a decent cup of java or glass of beer in many parts of the country, suddenly there are oodles of varieties of strong, flavorful coffees and micro-brewed beers. What gives?

Could it be the baby boomer generation has finally grown up and settled down, said farewell to their drugs of choice in the '60s and '70s and has demanded better quality legal fare?

While that may sound farfetched, it seems strange that after years of dishwater coffee and tasteless brews, the United States is brimming over with coffee shops offering any number of fresh grinds and ever more exotic beers (or ales, stouts, etc. as they are so fashionably known).

Naturally, this fascination seems to have taken hold most forcefully on the West Coast. On a recent trip to San Francisco and Seattle, this visitor was percolated by the espresso phenomenon. While coffee bars in supermarkets did not seem that unusual, what did seem strange was the word "espresso" plastered on everything from farm supply stores to gas stations, car workshops to magazine stands. Apparently, it is hard to make a move — purchase a tractor, get a haircut, fill up the tank — without being reassured that strong coffee is close at hand. Everything seems to come with espresso.

It's not hard to see why piping hot caffeine has captivated the West Coast city crowd — many of whom are transplanted yuppies on the go from dawn until dusk, speed-dialing car telephones while stuck in freeway traffic — but what about the rest of the country? It's hard to imagine the stereotypical grizzled farmhand sipping ever so daintily from a tiny cup of espresso while waiting for the seed and fertilizer to be wrung up. Maybe it's just a sign of the times.

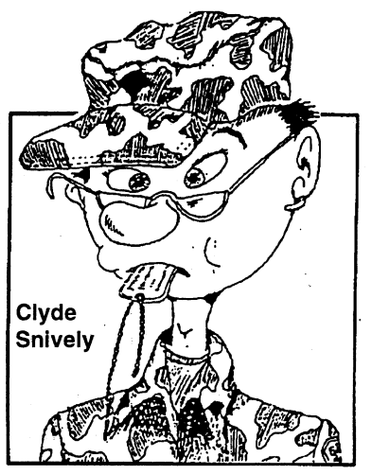
Finally, during these more politically correct, sensitive '90s it's OK for a couple of guys to go out on a big Friday night and share their feelings over cappuccino. Judging from the night life in San Francisco, that would certainly seem to be the case (or did I miss something?).

Coffee is also extremely popular in airports. While Starbucks seems to have taken over most of the country, coffee shops and portable vendors of many names compete for space in all major terminals. As impractical as it seems — combining lots of coffee with being crammed into an uncomfortable airline seat for many hours — there's no denying its popularity. But then again, flying is a lot like spending time in the hospital — people keep waking you up — to eat, drink, take things or fill out forms.

Of course at those establishments where free refills come without being asked for, the old variety coffee is still being offered. Naturally — it's cheaper.

Decent coffee and beer are making a comeback in the United States for one reason or another. Perhaps it's simply a case of the baby boomer generation finally "just saying no" — to the tasteless swill that came before.

Fort Benning turns down the volume



By Clyde Snively
Bayonet columnist

This column is brought to you because we took the test and failed.

Every night, the field officer of the day prowls the barracks and gathering places on Fort Benning and asks questions about different subjects to see if we are "getting the word."

Last week, the question dealt with the post regulation involving noise. And we didn't know the answer.

We didn't know that if we are making noise (some of us call it playing music) that can be heard more than 15 feet away from the source (boom box?) we can be cited for violating the reg.

Of course if we really got it cranked up to impress our buds (how dumb we are? or how badly we want to go deaf?), to where it can be heard more than 100 feet away, then we can be fined (on post or off) because then we're violating state law.

The fine is $25, a small price to pay to listen to boomba da boomba da boomba da, over and over and over.

Seems to me we could just as easily go to the Atlanta airport and listen to planes taking off and landing. At least at the airport there's more variety in the sounds. But then maybe not. If deafness is our pursuit, the airport might be the slower way to go about it.

I mean, why is it that those with the most powerful sound systems only play three notes over and over? Is this a sensual thing where they like to feel the sound waves blasting through their bodies, turning their stomachs into a quivering mass of jelly?

Have you ever been behind one of those boom boxes on wheels and watched the sides of the car heave in and out as it played boomba da boomba da boomba da?

So like, if the sound waves can do that to whatever it is that cars are made out of nowadays, what's that doing to our systems?

What's it doing to those little tiny bones in our ears?

There are two things in life I don't want to lose, that's seeing and hearing because you can't grow new ears or new eyes. Once they're gone, they're gone.

So why mess with sound volumes that can leave you deaf for life?

Baggers get kudos from customer

By Rich McDowell
Public Affairs officer

commentary

Despite the doom and gloom tone of the recent letters to the editor forecasting the end of the world because the baggers would need to buy uniforms, all seems to be quite well at the Commissary.

First, the baggers look quite sharp in their new uniforms. But even more important is the air of customer service that seems to exude from all of them.

I was especially impressed by bagger 281. Not only did he eagerly wave me to his station, but he greeted me with a handshake then proceeded to present a miniature copy of the Commissary schedule his wife had printed up on the home computer.

Here was a bagger that made sure I had a fulfilling shopping experience.

We commend the baggers who are making the most of a decision that they might not have whole-heartedly supported, and we commend Ben Wainwright and his staff for sticking to what they knew was right and best for everyone.

What is often forgotten when it comes to baggers is that baggers are not Commissary employees, yet it's up to Wainwright and others to manage them.

Now, if someone could just do something about all those wrong-way travelers who snarl the aisles by trying to travel upstream.

Proclamation

Sept. 15 to Oct 15 is proclaimed Hispanic Heritage Month at Fort Benning to recognize the contributions of Hispanic Americans. This year's theme is "Hispanics Defending America."

The military and civilian contributions of Hispanic Americans reflect a deep commitment to the principles of freedom and democracy that are the strengths of the United States.

The Hispanic community has given us generals, admirals, philosophers, statesmen, musicians, athletes and Nobel Prize-winning scientists. The various Hispanic cultures continue to contribute significantly to our American society.

I encourage everyone at Fort Benning and in surrounding communities to participate in this observance through the planned activities by units, staff and other agencies.

School of the Americas

Spicy dishes, dancers in bright, spangly costumes and lively music will greet visitors when the School of the Americas presents its annual Open House and "Cena Tipica."

The fiesta is conducted every year in September, in honor of Hispanic Heritage Month.

The public is invited to SOA's Open House at the Fort Benning Officers' Club, in the Supper Club Annex, Sept. 22 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. Past Open Houses have proven to be popular in the Columbus community.

Last year, more than 1,000 children from local schools got a cultural lesson from the event. Booths displayed crafts, artwork and costumes from 18 different countries.

Also on hand were brochures, jewelry, videos, foreign currency and a soldier in his army's full dress uniform.

Cena Tipica will be Sept. 23 at the Officers' Club Swimming Pool and Supper Club areas, 4:30 p.m. to 2 a.m.

Literally "typical dinner," the fiesta presents traditional music, dances and food of the Latin American nations represented at SOA.

The evening will include a Parade of Nations, cultural presentations, a buffet dinner and a dance. Attendance at this event is limited to SOA personnel and special guests.

va q&a

Department of Veterans Affairs

Q: Does the federal government operate retirement homes for veterans? If so, can I have information to contact one?

A: Veterans may be eligible to live in two retirement homes run by the Armed Forces Retirement Home, an independent federal agency. For information, write to the Admissions Office, U.S. Soldiers' and Airmen's Home, Washington, D.C. 20317, or call (800) 422-9988; or write to the U.S. Naval Home, 1800 Beach Drive, Gulfport, Miss. 39507, or call (800) 322-3527.

Q: As a World War II veteran, am I eligible for nursing home care managed by the Department of Veterans Affairs?

A: VA nursing home care is provided for veterans who are not in need of hospital care but who require nursing care and related psycho-social services in an institutional setting. VA may, but is not mandated to, provide nursing home care if space and resources are available in VA facilities.

Q: Is there a priority of eligibility for admission to a VA nursing home?

A: Yes. Veterans with a service-connected disability are given first priority for nursing home care.

Q: Does VA pay for private nursing home care?

A: In some instances, veterans who need nursing home care may be transferred at VA expense to private nursing homes from VA medical centers, VA nursing homes, or VA domiciliaries, which provide rehabilitative and long-term health maintenance for veterans who require minimal medical care but do not need the skilled nursing services provided in nursing homes. Care in a private nursing home authorized by VA normally cannot exceed six months.

Q: I currently pay my VA insurance premium each month. Would there be any benefit to paying the premium on an annual or semi-annual basis?

A: Yes. There is a discount for premiums paid in advance, and the Secretary of Veterans Affairs recently approved a regulation which increased the discount to 7.5 percent. The new rate, which took effect Dec. 16, 1991, for policies with prefixes V, RS, W, J or JP, applies to premiums paid in advance — quarterly, semi-annually or annually.

U.S. Army Criminal Investigation Command

The U.S. Army Criminal Investigation Command is seeking information on the following:

• The U.S. Army CID Command is conducting an investigation into the death of Takashi Moore March 2. Moore was found by a Military Police Patrol at approximately 4:30 a.m. March 2 alongside Highway 27, adjacent to the 8th Division Road Overpass. Moore had suffered several large abrasions to his upper body and died as a result of massive head injuries.

Suspect

The suspect is described as a light-complexioned black man, 30 to 34 years of age, 150 to 160 pounds. He was armed with a semi-automatic pistol and is considered dangerous.

If you have information regarding this incident, call the Fort Benning MP station at 545-5222 or 545-5223, or Special Agent Robin Avery, USACIDC, at 545-5272 or 545-3984.

• June 6, between 8 a.m. and 4:30 p.m., someone entered quarters 136-C Baker St. through the back door and stole 24 World War II coins, jewelry and $100. A $250 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest and conviction of whoever is responsible.

• Between 7:30 a.m. and 11 p.m. Aug. 22, someone removed jewelry and a Panasonic camcorder from Room 9, Building 36, Guest Quarters on Fort Benning. A $250 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest and conviction of whoever is responsible.

• Between 6 p.m. Aug. 14 and 4 p.m. Aug. 16, someone removed a 1995 Kawasaki 900ZX Jet Ski and trailer from the Lemon Lot, on Main Post. A $250 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest and conviction of whoever is responsible.

• The U.S. Army CID Command is seeking information concerning a larceny of private property that took place between 2 and 11:30 a.m. July 26 and 27 in the parking lot of Building 3425. Someone entered a 1994 Hyundai Excel and removed stereo equipment.

• The 86th Military Police Detachment is conducting an investigation concerning the theft of personal stereo equipment from a secured 1983 red Ford Mustang.

The equipment was stolen between 1 a.m. and 12:30 p.m., Aug. 13 from a parking lot, adjacent to Building 2831.

The stolen equipment included an AM/FM compact disc player; two pairs of speakers, an equalizer; a crossover and two amps. The value of the stolen stereo equipment is $2,410. No suspects have been identified.

Anyone having information concerning this investigation can call Special Agent Kelly S. McCrate at 545-4981 or the Military Police.

• It is requested that anyone with information concerning these incidents call the CID Office at 545-5237 or 545-4986 or the Military Police at 545-5222.

The identity of anyone providing information will be kept in the strictest confidence.

Building 35, Ridgway Hall, is named in honor of Gen. Matthew B. Ridgway, a former Army chief of staff.

Ridgway Hall has important past

By Judith Ginder
School of the Americas

In the center of the "Home of the Infantry" sits a big, pink building that's seen a lot of history.

Ridgway Hall, whose construction began in 1934, housed the post headquarters and the U.S. Army Infantry School for almost 30 years. Now home to the School of the Americas, the building is a very important part of the Main Post Historic District, said John Brent of the Directorate of Public Works.

Infantrymen trained here for battle during World War II, the Korean War and the Vietnam War. Nineteen commandants served the Infantry School while it was located at Ridgway Hall.

During this pivotal time, innovations introduced into the Army included the birth of the Officer Candidate School, the development of airborne and ranger training and the realization of mechanized infantry.

In 1964, the post headquarters and Infantry School moved out of Ridgway and into newly erected Infantry Hall, Building 4. The Main Post Historic District, of which Building 35 is a part, was recommended for consideration as a National Historic Registered Landmark in the early 1980s.

In 1984, the School of the Americas moved from Panama to Fort Benning and eight years later adopted the building as its home. The building wasn't known as Ridgway Hall until April 1994, when it was dedicated in honor of Gen. Matthew B. Ridgway, a former Army chief of staff.

In the late 1980s, the former Infantry School, along with many other buildings in the area, were in great need of a facelift. When work began in this historic district, architects renovated surrounding structures to complement the Spanish style of Ridgway Hall, said Ken Holloway, chief of Real Property Master Planning.

Holloway also stated that special care was taken to keep original doorways and molding to maintain the historic fabric of the buildings.

The work between 1989 and 1992 included building Meloy Hall and renovating Building 35, as well as refurbishing the Military Clothing and Sales Store, the Officers' Club and the Unaccompanied Officer and Enlisted Quarters.

Since this coincided with SOA moving on post, there seems to be some confusion in the community, as to why renovations were begun, Holloway said.

Holloway explained that most of that period's construction was for the installation's needs. Only the renovation of Ridgway Hall and the building of a small storage facility were for the School of the Americas. He also said that the unaccompanied quarters were in very bad shape and didn't meet Fort Benning's housing standards — hence their improvements.

"The construction and costs of the unaccompanied officers' quarters were not because of the School of the Americas' move to Fort Benning," Holloway said.

In fact, very few SOA personnel have used these quarters, and currently only one U.S. officer from SOA lives there, said Pat Burns of post billeting. She said Latin American students at the school do not stay at the unaccompanied quarters but in the barracks or at Olson Hall.

Minor renovations continue with the Army Field Printing Plant, located next to Military Clothing and Sales. Planners expect work to be finished soon, completing the effort to restore Fort Benning's historic district to its former splendor.

Delta Force to conduct briefings

The Delta Force Team will conduct general orientation briefings starting Oct. 2 at 1 p.m. and Oct. 3 through 5 twice daily at 9 a.m. and 1 p.m. in Infantry Hall, Classroom 21.

Physical fitness qualification test will be administered Oct. 6 on Stewart-Watson Field at 7 a.m. Immediately following the test, a 100-meter swim test will be administered at Briant Wells pool.

Uniform for the PFQT (including the 100-meter swim test) is battle dress uniform and combat boots.

Music can get you fines or post ejection

The post regulations regarding loud music can be found in USAIC Policy Memorandum 94-64 and Georgia Code 40-6-14.

USAIC Policy memorandum 94-64 states music should not be able to be heard more than 15 feet from a vehicle. Military personnel who violate this policy can be cited for violating Article 92, UCMJ.

All others who violate the 15-foot rule will be asked to turn their music down. Noncompliance can result in post ejection or a breach of peace violation.

According to Georgia Code 40-6-14, music that can be heard more than 100 feet from a vehicle is punishable with a $25 fine.

For information, call 545-5915 or 4376.

No claims to be paid after Wednesday

The Claims Office of the Office of the Staff Judge Advocate will cease paying all personnel claims (household goods, vandalism, etc.) Wednesday.

All claims received after that date will be held in abeyance until the Claims Office receives its fiscal '96 expenditure allowance from the U.S. Army Claims Service.

Because there is no way of knowing when the fiscal '96 money will be available, individuals who wish to be paid in September should ensure that their completed claims are submitted to the Claims Office not later than Wednesday.

For more information, call the Claims Office at 545-2286.

CGSC to be offered

The Command and General Staff Officer Course will be offered in Columbus beginning in October.

This course will be presented by instructors of the 108th Division at the Army Reserve Center on Macon Road in Columbus.

All majors and above in the active component, Reserve component, and the National Guard are eligible. Also, promotable captains are eligible if they are Combined Arms Services and Staff School graduates. This is the same course offered in residence at Fort Leavenworth, Kan.

For more information, call 291-4536 and leave a message.

Controlled burning set

Controlled burning of woodland and range areas will take place through Sept. 24.

If weather permits, the following compartments may be affected: D-6, E-5, I-3, I-4 and K-7.

Burning will occur in pine stands within these compartments to enhance endangered species habitat and training areas. People using these areas for recreation must leave before 9:30 a.m. daily.

Training units are reminded to exercise caution in these areas. For more information, call 544-6206.

Documents can help separating soldiers

By Elsie Jackson
Army Career and Alumni Program

Your military experience and training may be invaluable assets in a civilian career, but only if you can communicate your abilities to a prospective employer

Your military experience and training may be invaluable assets in a civilian career, but only if you can communicate your abilities to a prospective employer.

If you are planning to use a resume to get your message across, your DD Form 2586 (Verification of Military Experience and Training) can be a very useful tool.

VMET statements list military job experiences and training histories, recommended civilian college credit information and any civilian equivalent job titles. They are provided to separating and retiring soldiers who have served a minimum of 180 days on active duty.

If you are separating, you should receive your VMET statement automatically, at your unit mailing address, about 150 days from your separation date. If you are within 30 days of your separation date and have not received this document or separated between Oct. 1, 1990, and Sept. 14, 1992, you will need to call or write to: PRC, Inc., ATTN: VMET, Suite 401, 2900 Eisenhower Ave., Alexandria, Va. 22314, (800) 258-8638.

VMET documents have proven themselves to be useful for enlisted soldiers and warrant officers. It has been less useful for commissioned officers because officers lack accurate duty descriptions and VMET is an automated document. Because of this, the Army has temporarily suspended automatic VMET distribution for commissioned officers.

In the near future, modified versions of the VMET will be issued to commissioned officers. The modified VMET will show military training histories, combining Officer Record Briefs and officer evaluation reports to provide a picture of an officer's training, skills and experience.

Don't confuse your VMET document with an Army or American Council on Education Registry Transcript System AARTS transcript. AARTS transcripts are records of your active duty military education experiences, including training for which you may receive college credits. Of course, acceptance of credit recommendations will depend on the policies and procedures of the school you choose to attend.

If a college or university accepts AARTS credit recommendations, and those credits are awarded on their official college transcript, AARTS credit recommendations may be applied toward Army promotion points.

Besides helping you get college credits, an AARTS transcript can supplement your resume, giving prospective employers a clearer picture of the skills you learned in the Army.

Three kinds of learning are recognized on an AARTS transcript — successful completion of formal service school courses (longer than 45 hours), successfully held military occupational specialties and passing scores in college-level tests such as the Scholastic Aptitude Test, College Level Examination Program and American College Testing Program.

All enlisted soldiers and veterans with a basic active service date on or after Oct. 1, 1981, may receive an AARTS transcript. Requests may be made through the Army Education Center.

For more information on VMET, ask your Army Career and Alumni Program counselor, Soldiers' Plaza, Building 2617, or call 545-4892 and 545-7009.

Transition Assistance Classes

Army Career and Alumni Program

If you're getting out the military, the Army Career and Alumni Program is available to help you make the transition.

All service members getting out of or retiring from the military must process through the Army Career and Alumni Program's Transition Assistance Office, Building 2617, Soldiers' Plaza, before attending a Transition Assistance Program class in Infantry Hall.

The National Defense Authorization Act Fiscal 1991, Public Law 101-510 states that soldiers within 180 days of expiration term of service are required to attend a Transition Assistance Program class.

Classes are given in three-day blocks and are scheduled throughout the year.

Classes are in Classroom 30, Infantry Hall, from 7:45 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

For more information, call 545-7020 or 545-7009.

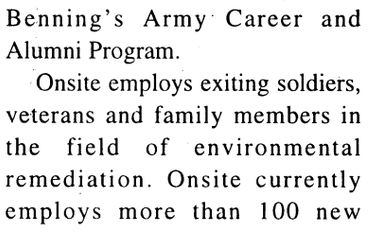
Employment opportunities are available

By Mary Allen
Army Career and Alumni Program

Onsite Environmental Staffing continues to provide employment opportunities for soldiers getting out of the military through Fort Benning's Army Career and Alumni Program.

Onsite employs exiting soldiers, veterans and family members in the field of environmental remediation. Onsite currently employs more than 100 new workers per week worldwide.

A soldier can train at Fort Benning and then work in the area of his or her choice. Starting wages at Onsite range from $9 to $15 per hour depending on a soldier's skills.



A benefit package is also offered to include a 401K plan and dental and health insurance.

Soldiers can use skills learned in the Army to earn a higher starting wage. Heavy equipment operators are in demand at Onsite, as are field technicians, soil and water samplers and people with commercial driver's license.

Onsite offers a 40-hour training course at a cost of $250 per person. A training course will be conducted from through Thursday at the Main NCO Club.

For more information about employment and training, contact Vince Catanzaro at (800) 807-0454.

Persons interested in meeting with an Onsite representative and to sign up for a training course at Fort Benning can contact the ACAP Job Assistance Center 545-2308 or 545-2309.

Hunters learn post policies

Natural Resources personnel discuss current policies and procedures and proposed changes that may help in the post's efforts to maintain its natural resources

By Brian R. Voller
Bayonet staff writer

The Commanding General's Council for Natural Resources conducted an open meeting Monday in Classroom 7 of Infantry Hall.

The meeting was designed to give hunters of Fort Benning information on the wildlife of Fort Benning and the steps being taken to maintain Fort Benning timber.

Col. Michael Tesdahl, the president of the advisory council, began the meeting by stating the council is only an advisory to the commander, and that this meeting is for the hunters to voice their opinions and give ideas.

Tesdahl then turned the meeting over to Pete Swidereck, wildlife supervisor of Fort Benning, who discussed with the hunters the programs being proposed to improve Fort Benning's natural resources.

One of the subjects discussed by Swidereck was the protection and upkeep of Fort Benning timber.

"The two primary concerns of the Natural Resources Branch is Southern pine beetle suppression and timber thinning operations." Swidereck said.

Currently, Swidereck said, Georgia is one of the worst areas hit by the pine beetle. He also said Fort Benning is being infected by the pine beetle.

"This little tiny beetle is about the size of a pencil tip,"Swidereck said. "But this beetle is capable of killing the largest pine tree in a forest."

The current method of stopping the pine beetle used by Fort Benning is called a salvage cut, Swidereck said. There's been a total of almost 300 hundred outbreaks on Fort Benning of the outhern pine beetle, he said.

The other program being conducted by the Natural Resource Branch is timber thinning.

"Basically what thinning is, is taking out some trees and leaving others," Swidereck said. "At Fort Benning we basically thin from below. We normally take out the inferior trees, those that are the suppressed or diseased trees."

Swidereck said the thinning of the inferior trees causes less competition and allows for the stronger trees to absorb all the nutrients and grow.

It also allows for the trees to become more resilient to infections such as the pine beetle.

Thinning of the timber also aides in the protection of some of Fort Benning's endangered species. Animals such as the red-cockaded woodpecker and the gopher tortoise, benefit from the timber thinning.

"The red-cockaded woodpecker needs open areas to survive," Swidereck said. "The woodpecker normally stays in a small family group of seven or eight birds. This family lives in an area of about five acres and doesn't fly very far.

"We have to thin in order to improve the habitat for this woodpecker."

The gopher tortoise also benefits from thinning, Swidereck said, because its primary food sources need sunlight to grow.

"We need to get more sunlight to the ground by removing some of the trees," Swidereck said. "By letting some of the sunlight to the ground, it stimulates vegetation growth for the gopher tortoise to feed on."

The other aspect discussed by Swidereck was the controlled burning on Fort Benning.

The primary goal of controlled burning is to reduce the hard wood growth that grows between the floor of the forest and the tops of the trees, Swidereck said.

The midsection is extremely dense; and, while it may look like there is a lot of food for animals there is not. There is no sunlight getting into this area, which leaves no food for the animals to eat.

Swidereck said the controlled burning also stimulates growth by causing some fire dependent species to seed, and it replenishes the land and stimulates growth.

Swidereck said currently there are not enough funds to implement all the projects he would like to pay for, but he is requesting financial assistance to aid in the upkeep of Fort Benning's natural resources.

Post water usage to be curtailed

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Curtailment of water usage will be in effect from Sept 25 through 29 because of construction modifications on the Fort Benning Water Treatment plant.

The water plant, with a normal capacity of 12 million gallons of water per day, requires one-half of the treatment plant to be shut down during this period, reducing output to 6 million gallons per day. Present demand averages 7.4 million gallons per day.

To maintain water pressure, consumption must be reduced by 20 percent or 1.4 million gallons per day.

The following are water restrictions for water usage during the five days from Sept. 25 to 29:

- All car washes and military vehicle wash facilities are to be closed (except for Kelley Hill vehicle wash facility which uses pond water).
- No lawn or grass watering or car washing
- All personnel are requested to use the minimum amount of water possible for household uses.
- Swimming pools will not be filled or topped off.

Additional information may be obtained by contacting the Energy and Utilities Division, Directorate of Public Works, at 545-7003.

Let your fingers do the walking with Health Touch

By Shannon Day
Special to The Bayonet©

Martin Army Community Hospital has implemented a user-friendly computer called "Health Touch" to assist patients in keeping current on their medications and various health topics.

The Health Touch computer is updated quarterly with the latest information on more than 5,000 different drugs and 5,000 health-related topics, which range from skin care to sleep problems.

"The trend over the last 10 years is that people have become more educated about their bodies and question what their doctors tell them," said Maj. Antonio F. Reyes, chief, outpatient pharmacy, MACH.

"We feel education is the key here," Reyes said. "Studies have shown that many adverse reactions to medications are caused by lack of information. This program is one tool that can help remedy that."

Reyes said no experience with computers is necessary to operate Health Touch.

"All you have to do is touch the screen to select the type of information you want," he said. "You don't have to push any buttons."

First-time user of Health Touch, Robert L. Brook, a retiree, agrees the system is easy to use.

"I wanted some information about diabetes, and I haven't had any problems getting it so far," Brook said. "I think the program is a great idea."

Health Touch also boasts two unique capabilities.

"Latin-American patients can choose to read the information in Spanish," Reyes said. "It also has an option which presents the information in large print to aid people with seeing problems."

The Health Touch system is located next to the outpatient pharmacy in the main entrance of the hospital.

Larger than life?

Retired Col. Bernie Quick, former Fort Benning chief of staff and president of Uptown Columbus Inc., stands by a tyrannosaurus rex head at a preview of the "Dinosaurs Alive" exhibit, coming to Columbus Oct. 1 to Dec. 30. The life-like, full- and half-size robotic prehistoric creatures were created by Dinamation Dinosaurs, and the tour is sponsored in conjunction with Uptown Columbus Inc. The exhibit will be located on the historic riverfront in a 10,000-square-foot building furnished by the W.C. Bradley Company and adjacent to the Convention and Visitors Bureau. This exhibit has toured throughout the world, including shows in Moscow and Japan. Hours of the exhibit will be from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Mondays through Saturdays and noon to 5 p.m. Sundays. Cost will be $3.50 for adults, $3 for children 18 and under and $2.25 for schools and groups. For more information on the "Dinosaurs Alive" exhibit, call (800) 716-DINO.

Activities kick off Hispanic Heritage Month

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Today through Oct. 15 marks the observance of Hispanic Heritage Month.

A wide variety of events have been planned to give participants a taste — literally — of Hispanic culture and cuisine.

A partial list of activities, and whether they're open to the public or intended for the enjoyment of the individual unit, follows:

- Today through Oct. 15, Traveling Display, "Hispanics Defending America," premiering at Building 17, sponsored by 11th Infantry Regiment;
- Today, Hispanic luncheon and display, sponsored by Ranger Training Brigade at its dining facility;
- Today, Hispanic meal, sponsored by 2nd Battalion, 54th Inf. Regt.;
- Saturday, Gowdy Field Softball Tournament, open to the public and beginning at 9 a.m.;
- Monday, Hispanic Heritage Show, sponsored by 30th Adjutant General Bn., Inf. Tng. Bde., at Sand Hill;
- Tuesday, Hispanic lunch, open to the public at a cost of $7.25 and sponsored by 2nd Bn., 29th Inf. Regt., dining facility at Harmony Church;
- Thursday, 4 p.m., Hispanic dancing, open to the public and sponsored by 29th Inf. Regt. at Kelley Hill Recreation Center;
- Thursday, Hispanic lunch, sponsored by 36th Engineer Group dining facility.

DoDDS chief visits Fort Benning schools

Michael Hubanks/Special to The Bayonet

Dr. Lillian Gonzalez (center, back row) visits with Dexter Elementary School Principal Vicki Rogers (left) and Fort Benning schools' director of Staff Development, Gail Wilson, during her tour of schools Tuesday. Her student ambassadors who guided her through the school during the tour were Allison Kadesch (left), Lauren Burke, Emily Gorski and Victor Lopez.

Tour highlights educators' vision, mission

By Donna S. Budjenska
Special to The Bayonet©

With a particular interest in technology, mathematics, parental involvement and shared decision making, worldwide Department of Defense educators, parents, students, commanders and community leaders have in the last year crafted a "Community Strategic Plan" for the DoD Education Activity.

Dr. Lillian Gonzalez's Tuesday tour of five Fort Benning schools was partly to get a picture of how stateside schools are meeting the plan's goals. Gonzalez, director of DoDEA, took office in September 1994, and since then she's spearheaded a DoDEA-wide effort to formulate clear goals and improve its more than 350 schools.

"We are committed to establishing a worldwide educational system by simultaneously raising the standards of learning, affording greater autonomy at the local school level and creating increased accountability for student success," Gonzalez said.

The vision statement which came out of those brainstorming sessions reads, in part, "Unbound by traditional school concepts of time, location and age requirements, DoDEA provides all students with vast opportunities for learning and civic involvement. The entire DoDEA community shares the responsibility for building the academic success of each student."

The mission statement says, "The entire DoDEA community provides a world-class educational program that inspires and prepares all students in military communities around the world for success in a dynamic global environment."

Other issues of concern to leadership teams involved in drafting the statements were early childhood and environmental education and foreign languages, according to Dr. Dell Karr, superintendent of Fort Benning schools. Now that the vision and mission statements are finalized, Karr said, another goal is to communicate those goals to the entire community.

By Donna S. Budjenska
Special to The Bayonet©

Barely taller than some of the student ambassadors escorting her through the schools, Dr. Lillian Gonzalez, director of the Department of Defense Education Activity, visited Fort Benning Tuesday.

"Those children are just so incredible," she said at the end of the day. "I'm impressed with the teachers, the principals — just overall."

A petite woman, Gonzalez fills some large shoes. As DoDEA director, she is also the chief executive officer for DoD Dependents Schools and DoD Domestic Dependent Elementary and Secondary Schools. DoDEA is also the policy-making office for the Continuing, Adult and Postsecondary Education program.

In other words, she's overall in charge of the educational needs of more than 130,000 students in more than 350 schools worldwide.

Gonzalez visited Stowers, White, Dexter and Wilson elementary schools and Faith Middle School during her morning tour. She also met with Dr. Dell Karr, superintendent of Fort Benning schools, and members of the school board.

Primarily, though, she seemed interested in talking with and learning from students themselves. Visiting a math class at Stowers, she sat next to a student on a low-slung chair. Other students relaxed on couches, mini-trampolines, elevated desks or bathtubs — wherever they were comfortable studying math. "I was not taught math like this," she said.

"This is a great classroom; can I stay?" she asked. (The students said yes.)

Making sure she was at eye level with the students she talked with, Gonzalez exuded a sense of familiarity and friendliness that was infectious.

"It was impressive to see how tuned in to kids she is," said Gail Wilson, director of staff development for Fort Benning Schools.

Karr said Gonzalez seemed extremely positive about what she saw. "She said we should be extremely proud of our schools," Karr said. "She talked about her own pride in being associated with our schools."

Proximity and time dictated the schools selected for touring, Karr explained. "I really wished we could have gotten to all the schools, because we're so proud of all our schools."

The principals of Loyd and McBride schools were able to meet with Gonzalez in the afternoon.

Gonzalez saw Stowers' hands-on science lessons, automated cafeteria and early childhood lessons; and White's new IBM computer lab (with computers donated by Martin Army Community Hospital), extension labs where students can go for tutoring and enrichment and a parent room, where parents can volunteer to augment classroom lessons.

She also appeared on Dexter's WDEX closed-circuit television show, where she was given a framed DoDEA mission statement, and saw the Learning Media Center. She witnessed Virginia Wilcox's third-grade class as it went on-line with National Aeronautics and Space Administration scientists.

At Faith, Gonzalez visited the media center, art and physical education classes and the band; and at Wilson school she saw a kindergarten class, computer lab and the media center, where a bulletin board lets parents and teachers interface via computer.

ON POST

Engineer meeting — The September meeting of the Society of American Military Engineers will be Thursday at 11:30 a.m. at the Skeet Club on Hook Range and will consist of an overview of Army Marksmanship Unit activities, a demonstration of international skeet competition and an opportunity to try your skill at skeet shooting. The activities will be conducted by Robert Aylward, Deputy of the USAMU.

Corrections training — A representative from the Florida Department of Corrections will be at Fort Benning to provide information regarding the upcoming training program. The representative will be located in Building 2613, Soldiers' Plaza, from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. today to answer questions and take applications for the training. Classes are tentatively scheduled to begin Monday.

For more information, call 682-1223.

Town Hall meeting — There will be an East Main Post Town Hall Meeting Thursday, 7 p.m., at Dexter Elementary School, 99 Yeager Ave.

Discuss your concerns and comments with representatives from the garrison commander's office, Directorate of Public Works, Directorate of Public Safety, Community Recreation Division, Officers' Club and other post agencies.

Call 685-0479 or 682-4723 by Tuesday to let East Main Post mayors know you're coming.

Learning center — The Army Learning Center, located in Building 2611, Soldiers' Plaza, offers a wide variety of courses that are free and self-paced. Ability to type or knowledge of computers is not required. Topics include science, mathematics, adult literacy, test preparation, General Equivalency Diploma, management, computers and data processing and personal computer tutorials. A dial-up capability allows users to remotely access the cyber-based instructional system from the work or home terminal 24 hours a day, 7 days a week. An IBM-compatible terminal with a graphics card, a modem and access disk are needed. The free access disk can be obtained at the Learning Center. You will need to bring a blank replacement disk with you.

All active duty, retired military, Army and Air Force Exchange Service, nonappropriated fund personnel, Reserves and National Guard are authorized use of the Army Learning Center. The telephone number is 545-1436; the hours of operation are Monday through Friday, 7 a.m. to noon and 1 to 4 p.m.

Blood pressure screening — The Community Health Nurse is offering blood pressure screening at the Main Post Exchange Mall from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Sept. 22, Oct. 27, Nov. 17 and Dec. 15. For more information, call Epy Melendez at Community Health Nursing at 545-4041.

Bodybuilding entertainment — The Sports Branch is seeking volunteer entertainment for a 15- to 20-minute intermission during the 1995 Fort Benning Open Bodybuilding Championships Oct. 14.

This year's event promises to be even more successful than last year's with the event opening its doors to the civilian sector as well. Spectatorship is expected to increase to more than 500 with more than 40 competitors.

If you would like to go public with your talent, call Christopher Winterman at 544-1747 or Leon Johnson at 685-9555. No preferences for a certain type of entertainment have been established. References and screening may be requested.

Explorer Scout Program — Law Enforcement Post 988, sponsored by the Military Police Activity, is looking for more members. If you know of a boy or girl interested in a law enforcement career or who just wants to learn more about law enforcement, call Staff Sgt. Donnie Lucas at 545-1146. This program is open to anyone on or off post. Adult assistant leaders are welcome.

Management program — The Fort Benning Management Association will continue to sponsor more management programs on a monthly basis. The next program will be 11:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. Thursday at the Officers' Club.

The awarding of academic scholarships to students seeking a business or management degree will be the highlight of the program.

Costa Rican official visits, studies SOA curriculum

By Saralynne Snell
School of the Americas

One of Costa Rica's most powerful women came to Fort Benning Aug. 28 to visit the School of the Americas.

Laura Chinchilla Miranda, vice minister of training for the Costa Rican Department of Public Safety, was interested in SOA's curriculum.

"We have sent almost 3,000 men to be trained at the School of the Americas," Chinchilla said. "I am in charge of all the police training programs in Costa Rica, so for me, it was very important to know what is happening here.

"Also, in the last years, it has been interesting, because there have been many changes in the world context," she said. "Now that we don't have the Cold War, we would like to know what you are teaching to our people. And I feel very satisfied with the changes you are introducing into the curriculum."

Realistic training

She explained that one thing she likes is the use of realistic scenarios in training. For example, in the Civil-Military Operations Course, students plan humanitarian assistance for natural disasters, such as floods.

"And you also are introducing something that is very important in Latin America, which is the relationship between the political power and the army," Chinchilla said.

Rising democracies

SOA stresses that military forces must fall under the command of civil governments. Twenty years ago, all Latin American countries were under some sort of dictatorship. Today, all but Cuba are democracies, and SOA officials say the school had a part in this conversion.

Unlike other nations that send students to SOA, Costa Rica doesn't have an army per se. Instead, there's a national police force — La Guardia Civil — which focuses on internal security. Some people refer to this as "super police," because it carries some missions and doctrine in common with military forces.

"It is a police that had to face some problems related with war situations on the borders of our country," Chinchilla said, "so it was necessary to train our police in some military skills."

But she wants to ensure that the Costa Rican police remain police and do not become, in fact, soldiers.

Professional development

Furthermore, she wants to develop the professionalism of the force.

SOA answers that need, said the school's assistant commandant, Costa Rican Col. Walter Navarro. Many of SOA's courses provide training in civil-military operations, peace-keeping, logistics, ecology and counter-narcotics.

Fighting the drug war

As police, the Costa Rican force isn't limited in the drug war, as U.S. troops are constitutionally bound from police functions. But raids and arrests aren't going to solve the world's narcotic problems, Chinchilla said.

"It's a very complicated problem. You find economic considerations, social considerations," Chinchilla said. "You find the corruption, which is probably the big obstacle to fight narcotics in Latin America. And you find the culture a problem, which is the people who are consuming the drugs — if you are going to have a demand, you are going to have it offered.

"I think that the military probably is one of the ways to fight the narcotics, but we should invest in prevention a lot," Chinchilla said.

Award recognizes community service

Department of the Army

The Department of the Army announces its participation in the Government Employees Insurance Military Service Award Program for 1995.

This program recognizes military enlisted members from each of the military services for their contributions to military or civilian communities in any one of the following three areas:

- Drug and alcohol prevention
- Fire prevention and fire safety
- Traffic safety and accident prevention

Soldiers selected for recognition by Headquarters DA and the GEICO selection committee will receive a plaque and a $2,500 cash award to recognize the significance of their accomplishments.

Additionally, GEICO will cover the cost of transportation and lodging for the soldier and spouse to attend a recognition ceremony in Washington, D.C., in March or April. Winners will be granted permissive temporary duty in accordance with Army Regulation 600-8-10.

Specialists through command sergeants major with four or more years of active duty service are eligible. Nominee must have retainability on active duty through Sept. 30, 1997.

The program includes the Army National Guard and the Army Reserve; their nominations will flow through the National Guard Branch or the Office of the Chief of Army Reserve to the DA Awards Branch.

The period of service for this award is Oct. 1 through Sept. 30. However, activities for which nominations are made may span several years prior, be on-going or may have been accomplished completely in the prior year.

Each nomination packet must include the following:

- Narrative — limited to one single-spaced, typewritten page with a one-inch left margin. It should state facts and clearly outline specific accomplishments, on or off duty, that describe how the military or civilian community has benefited.
- Biography — limited to two single-spaced, typewritten pages. Include address; office telephone number (commercial and DSN); and a brief biographical sketch of the nominee to include family, military history and military and civilian education and awards.
- Photograph — One color, glossy 8x10 inch photograph, head and shoulder view without headgear of the nominee in Class A uniform.

Proposed citations are not required. Classified material and posthumous awards will not be accepted. Nominations must be submitted in original and three copies. Nomination packets submitted in fancy binders, document protectors, tabs and notebooks are not acceptable.

There is no limit to the number of nominations that may be forwarded for consideration.

Basic cover letters must be signed by the soldier's commander and forwarded through the chain of command to their respective major command for endorsement. MACOMS will consolidate nomination packets and forward them to HQ, Personnel Command (TAPC-PDA).

For National Guard, submit nominations through command channels and state adjutants general and CNGB. NGB-ARP-PE will consolidate packets and forward them to HQ, PERSCOM (TAPC-PDA).

For heads of DA staff agencies, submit completed nomination packets with personal endorsement directly to HQ, PERSCOM (TAPC-PDA).

All nominations must arrive at HQ, PERSCOM (TAPC-PDA), 200 Stovall St., Alexandria, Va. 22332-0471 by Nov. 1.

Mayoral elections give community residents voice

Community Life Office

Postwide community mayoral elections will be conducted Wednesday and Thursday.

Residents within each of the six communities can volunteer as candidates for mayor or vice mayor. Candidates should be strongly committed to enhancing the quality of life for Fort Benning residents and able to devote time and energy to that task.

Mayors are key members of the Fort Benning community. They participate in community development and facilitate master planning. As members of the Mayors Council, they meet regularly with representatives from each of the staff agencies to explore ways to improve the quality of life within their communities.

Mayors also attend and provide input to the Quality of Life Performance Improvement Council and recommendations to the Installation Morale, Welfare, Recreation Advisory Council and Board of Directors.

If you need more information, call your Community Life noncommissioned officer or Jennifer Morgan, Community Life officer, at 545-5931 or 545-5246.

Wives' Club welcomes Olympic speaker

Officers' Wives' Club

The Officers' Wives' Club has adopted the Olympics as its theme this year.

Carmen Cavezza, executive director of Columbus '96, will be the guest speaker for the club's luncheon at 11 a.m. Wednesday at the Officers' Club Regimental Room.

All officers' wives are invited. Social hour begins at 11 a.m., and lunch begins at 11:30 with a menu choice of either: Southwestern salad, rolls, tea, coffee and strawberry cheesecake for $8; or shrimp fettuccine, salad, rolls, tea, coffee and strawberry cheesecake for $14.

Reservations are to be made by noon, Sept. 15. If your last name begins with A through L, call Brooke Gorski at 682-4913; M through Z call Lori Bohnstedt at 682-8495.

Huntsville's Space and Rocket Center offers fun, education

The Army Flier, Fort Rucker, Ala.

It's a trip down memory lane for those of us who remember the Alan Shepard and John Glenn beginnings of men in space ... it's a chance to see where it all got started and see where it's all headed.

If you're burned out on the idea of going to Six Flags or Disney, an alternative destination for a fun (and even educational) weekend getaway is the Space and Rocket Center in Huntsville, Ala. If you've seen the movie "Apollo 13," perhaps you've had a renewal of interest in the space program as so many have.

Huntsville is located east of Interstate 65 in north Alabama. The Space and Rocket Center is billed as the "Earth's largest space museum" and is well worth spending a full day exploring. The Space and Rocket Center museum is a hands-on approach to the high technology that the space program has generated.

Hands-on always means high fun for the children in your family. There are buttons to push, handles to pull and switches to switch. You'll get a chance to fire a model rocket engine, take the controls of a moon lander, control a gyro chair and stack cubes with a robotic arm. All the history-making spacecraft are there — Apollo, Gemini, Saturn rockets — and you will even have the chance to sit in the Gemini and Apollo capsule seats and get the feel of a space capsule in the earlier days of the space program.

It's a trip down memory lane for those of us who remember the Alan Shepard and John Glenn beginnings of men in space. For those children who were born into a ready-made space generation, it's a chance to see where it all got started and see where it's all headed.

There is a special exhibit entitled "Man and The Moon: The Apollo Years." This exhibit takes you on a mission-by-mission recount of the Apollo program. There is a replica of the moon base featuring a lunar module and rover. Also on display is the quarantine unit where Apollo 11 and 12 astronauts were housed upon their return from the moon. According to the personnel at the Space and Rocket Center, this exhibit houses the largest collection of Apollo hardware on earth.

Once you are finished looking at the interior of the museum you can head outside to Rocket Park, where, many full-sized rockets are on display. There is a "Pathfinder," which is a full-size model of the Space Shuttle; this was built by NASA in 1977 and used as an orbiter simulator for facility testing in Huntsville during the development of the shuttle. The Space Center is home for the nation's only full-scale Space Shuttle exhibit.

Also located outside are some simulated space attractions you can experience yourself. There is a space walker where you can jump and bounce as if you were on the moon, balanced and counter-weighted to offset gravity. You'll bounce more than 30 feet above rocket park before touching down. You can experience the force of "3 G's" in the Lunar Odyssey Centrifuge, which accelerates the force of gravity three times or about what Space Shuttle astronauts feel during a launch into space. The Journey to Jupiter will put you aboard a simulated Space Shuttle futuristic mission to Jupiter. This is a multi-media presentation which rumbles and roars as you are launched into space.

You'll get a chance to view one of the OMNIMAX movies as part of your visit. One of the films is "Speed," which puts you in the driver's seat as you fly with the Blue Angels, hang ten on a surf board in the Pacific surf and experience a shuttle launch. The other two OMNIMAX films to choose from include "The Dream is Alive," which was filmed by astronauts aboard actual Space Shuttle missions, and "Blue Planet," which takes an environmental view of the Earth from a vantage point 200 miles high.

The tour of the Marshall Space Flight Center is interesting. You'll get a peek into the model prototypes of the Space Station program projected for the 1990s. Depending on what day of the week you visit the center, certain areas are restricted from the tour because of on-going testing.

One of the treats of visiting the Space and Rocket Center in the summer is seeing all the Space Campers walking around in their blue flight suits with patches galore and notebooks under their arms.

Space Camp, which opened in 1982, was designed to encourage young people to pursue careers in science, technology and aerospace industries by giving them a first-hand introduction to the work being done in the space program.

Admission to the Space and Rocket Center includes the Space Museum, Rocket and Shuttle Parks, the OMNIMAX film and the bus tour of NASA's Marshall Space Flight Center.

Lori Egan

Kathryn Doran, Directorate of Logistics, was honored as the Civilian Employee of the Month of June by Commanding General, Maj. Gen. John W. Hendrix.

High school student gets scholarship

Federal Employee Education and Assistance Fund

The daughter of an employee of the Directorate of Civilian Personnel has been awarded a $500 college scholarship by the Federal Employee Committee, headquartered in Atlanta.

Courtney Creek, a Columbus High School graduate and daughter of Sheryl Creek, a management--employee relations specialit at DCD, recieved the award.

In announcing the scholarship, one of 14 granted in the Southeast, federal employee education and association fund Regional Chairwoman Carol A. Gaudin said, "The scholarship selection panel was particularly impressed with Courtney's academic record and her contribution to her community."

The FEEA scholarship awards are based on merit, and applicants are judged on four items requested: an essay; a recommendation; awards and activities, and grades. Applicants must have a minimum grade point average of 3.0 on a 4.0 scale and plan to enroll in a two or four year post-secondary, graduate or post-graduate program.

FEEA's scholarships, funded in part by the Blue Cross and Blue Shield Federal Employee Program, are granted the active federal sponsor (the applicants or the federal employee who is the parent or spouse of the applicant.) must have a minimum of three years of federal service.

Creek plans to use the scholarship to help fund her education as she enters Yale University, New Haven., Conn., this fall.

Gaudin, an FEEA volunteer who serves as regional director of the U.S. Labor Departments Office of Federal Contract Compliance Programs, Atlanta, explained that the scholarship program is only a part of FEEA's activities. The fund also provides emergency financial assistance and arrange student loans for federal employees and their families.

Gaudin added that more than 90 percent of FEEA's support comes from federal employee contributions during the annual Combined Federal Campaign.

"I urge all federal employees to help their fellow workers in need," she said. "They can do that by designating CFC contributions to the FEEA."

ITB produces a new class of Infantry

Infantry Training Brigade

The soldiers in Company C, 2nd Battalion, 58th Infantry Regiment, graduated from One Station Unit Training Sept. 8 at Kanell Field, and Hill.

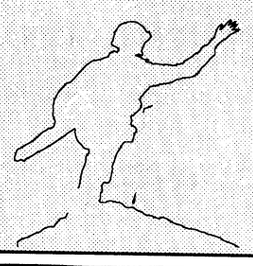
Retired Lt. Gen. Billy M. Thomas, whose son was among the graduates, attended the ceremony. The general inspected the troops and provided remarks.

"It's a great day to be a soldier, but it's a better day to be an infantryman," he said.

The ceremony opened with a demonstration of modern infantry tactics. A Bradley Fighting Vehicle was supplied by Company E, 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment.

Company C provided its own infantry squad, lead by Staff Sgt. Ronald Carter, drill sergeant, 1st Platoon, Co. C, 2nd Bn., 58th Inf. Regt. The soldiers fixed bayonets and maneuvered through a smoke screen while Bradleys were on the scene.

During the ceremony, two soldiers received special recognition. Spc. Blue Huber was the distinguished honor graduate and Staff Sgt. Julio Cruz of 3rd Platoon was named Drill Sergeant of the Cycle.



"These are the best (OSUT) soldiers I've seen yet," said Staff Sgt. Steven A. Phillips, drill sergeant, 4th Platoon, Co. C, 2nd Bn., 58th Inf. Regt.

Capt. Doyle F. Scott, commander, Co. C, 2nd Bn, 58th Inf. Regt. said he was also impressed with the class. "Overall, it was a great cycle," Scott said. "The soldiers were motivated and overcame the intense heat."

Summer heat can sap physical, spiritual health

By John R. Houser
Martin Army Community Hospital

reflections

This summer's high heat and humidity have affected the physical health of both young and old alike. As I visit patients at Martin Army Community Hospital, my heart goes out to our retirees and their spouses who have chronic lung and heart problems.

They suffer greatly under this summer's oppressive heat. Some have even succumbed to the extra stress that the weather has placed upon their weakened frames. Others are confined to only indoor activities.

It is also sad to visit with our active duty soldiers who have suffered various heat-related problems. They are devastated by these injuries and the resulting changes that take place in their military careers.

As I counsel and pray with these patients and others who are receiving care at our hospital, I am reminded time and again that there are ways to prevent or lessen the physical effects of natural occurrences such as this summer's weather. Six of these ways are:

• Discontinue or avoid unhealthy habits — Many of the patients I visit smoke too much, drink too much (alcoholic beverages), eat too much and over medicate themselves (they go beyond the doctor's prescribed course of care). Moderation or abstinence is an important key to a long and healthy life. This is especially true in situations where the body is strained due to weather-related circumstances.

• Control your stress levels — It is a proven fact that stress can lead to various heart and lung disorders. Don't take on more than you can handle. And, definitely don't take responsibility for someone else's failures and shortcomings.

• Be smart and don't take unnecessary risks —Avoid unnecessary risks, especially during natural events such as a heat wave. Exercise early or late. Running in the afternoon is dangerous, especially when temperatures exceed 95 degrees. Limit your outdoor activity. Use a little extra air conditioning. Spend some quality time with your family at home out of the heat.

• Perform daily mental check-ups — Perform an attitude check. Remind yourself of how lucky you are to be an American. Remind yourself of how fortunate you are to be alive in these exciting times. Remind yourself that you are a valuable person and someone with whom the world will have to deal. Remind yourself that you are created in God's image. A healthy mental status can assist your body in coping with extreme climactic condition.

• Take time to laugh and enjoy your life — Laughter is to faith what worry is to fear. Laughter brings good results, whereas worry can only produce a negative product. Enjoy life, have fun and do your best to help someone who isn't enjoying life.

• Establish and maintain a strong relationship with Jesus Christ — Most importantly, establish a close relationship with the one who created you. Jesus Christ is waiting to be your best friend. He is waiting to assist you with your needs. He is waiting to bring an extra dimension of strength and vitality to your physical, mental and spiritual person.

The psalmist writes in Psalm 91:14-16: "Because he loves me, says the Lord, I will rescue him; I will protect him, for he acknowledges my name. I will call upon me, and I will answer him; I will be with him in trouble, I will deliver him and honor him. With long life will I satisfy him and show him my salvation."

As hospital chaplain, I have one strong desire for you. I pray that I never meet you this summer as a heat casualty on my visitation rounds at the hospital. Practice these six ways of healthy living. If you do, chances are my desire will come true!

Liturgical music enhances Catholic worship

By Phil Reilly
USAIC Chaplain Office

In the Catholic Church, liturgical music is referred to a music used in public worship of the Church. It is used in conjunction with the celebration of the Eucharist, the other sacramental rites, Benediction and the Liturgy of the Hours. Liturgical music, or what is called church music, is to be distinguished, therefore, from more general terms such as sacred, religious or spiritual music.

The Catholic Church, from its very beginning, has been concerned with the music of worship and has exercised efforts to bar music that is inappropriate and to promote music of a kind that gives glory to God, lifts up the worshipper to God and creates a real sense of community.

The early Christians in their gatherings for worship adopted Jewish psalmody. The music of those early centuries was strictly vocal in character and sung by one voice. All musical instruments were associated with pagan rites and therefore were rejected by the early church fathers.

This monody, or chant, varied greatly within the ever-widening Christian community. Gregory the Great attempted to bring order into the liturgical chants and eventually brought about a Roman Chant tradition.

The use of the term Gregorian Chant dates back to the ninth century, the era from which the first traces of music in its present forms are derived.

Modern concern with liturgical music began with Pope Pius X, who laid down as norms for Church music holiness, true art and universality (1903). Pius X recommended the principal use of Gregorian Chants and of sacred polyphony but also approved modern compositions.

These and certain other instructions, such as the encouragement of music instruction in schools and seminaries, and the high moral standards to be expected of persons involved in liturgical music were repeated in the documents "Worship of the Divine" (1928) of Pope Pius XI, the "Teaching of Sacred Music" (1955) and the "Instruction on Sacred Music and Sacred Liturgy" (1958) of Pope Pius XII.

As a result of the Second Vatican Council (1962-1965), more flexibility and freedom have been granted to liturgists and musicians to encourage greater creativity and fuller participation in the mystery of faith.

What will happen to Catholic Church music in the future depends upon the acceptance of the current guidance by musicians and all others involved.

In the words of the "Constitution on the Sacred Liturgy," the music must "add delight to prayer, foster unity of mind and confer greater solemnity on the sacred rites."

Lay organization offers religious education

By Phil Reilly
USAIC Chaplain Office

Confraternity of Christian Doctrine is a lay organization established in 1571 for the purpose of offering religious education to Catholic children, youth and adults.

In 1905, Pope Pius X began a modern revival and expansion of the program when his directive that CCD be established in every parish was incorporated into Canon law. A decree of Vatican Council II reaffirmed the directive, and today the CCD in the United States has become the "basic cell of catechetical activity." It includes numerous new developments outside the school system from the parish to national levels.

In 1969, CCD became a division of the department of education of the U.S. Catholic conference. According to recent figures, some 6 million children participate in the programs.

The Catholic bishops of the United States have declared the third Sunday of September as Catechetical Sunday. On this Sunday, parishes throughout the United States will provide a commissioning service for parish catechetical ministers.

The rite takes place in the presence of the parish community and involves a public recognition and support of those who perform the fundamental tasks: to proclaim Christ's message, to participate in efforts to develop community, to lead people to worship and prayer and to motivate them to serve others.

Office trends changing as telecommuting increases

By Salli Olds
AT&T

Have you ever considered working from home? You will. That is, if recent trends in telecommuting are any indication.

The traditional office model is undergoing a '90s-style facelift as companies respond to workplace issues such as improving the environment, decreasing overhead costs, increasing productivity, balancing work and personal lives and even preparing for disaster recovery.

According to a 1994 American Information User Survey of 2,000 U.S. households and 400 on-line households, the number of part and full-time telecommuters in the United States reached 9.1 million, up from 7.6 million reported by LNK Resources in 1993. That equates to a 20 percent annual growth rate.

If you are considering telecommuting, the first thing to do is evaluate whether or not your job can be performed in a telework environment. Ask yourself these four questions: Does my job have tasks that can be done from a remote work location? Can I do my job without relying exclusively on resources at a centralized work location, or can I access those resources from a remote location? Does my job have clearly defined work objectives? Can face-to-face contacts be scheduled in advance?

Once you have assessed your job, take a close look at yourself. Telecommuting may mean working alone one or more days per week. For some people, solitude is energizing and the lack of interruptions means doing more work in less time. For others, it can spark a sense of isolation. Assessing your personal qualities will help you determine your ability to adapt to a telecommuting work arrangement. You should be positive, self-motivated, results motivated, be a strong communicator, require minimal supervision, be flexible and well organized, be focused on job goals and objectives, be able to establish priorities and manage time well, and be successful in current and prior positions.

For all of its appeal, telecommuting has drawbacks. To avoid some common pitfalls take precautionary steps.

Set up adequate work space. Your dining room table might be okay if you work at home once a year, but if you plan to do it on a regular basis, designate an area strictly devoted to work. You also need access to the kinds of business tools and technology necessary to perform your job. Are you willing to provide your own equipment if your employer does not assist with setting up a home office?

Consider whether or not there are other members of your household who might object to your using part of your home as an office. Also, will you feel comfortable maintaining boundaries when it comes to interruptions from family and friends during work hours? Remember, even if your office is at home, you are at work. Be prepared to keep existing childcare and eldercare arrangements.

Possibly the most important consideration is the relationship you have with your supervisor. Is he or she supportive of telecommuting? To avoid misunderstandings be sure to have some kind of written agreement — whether it's a standard company agreement or one you compose yourself — describing what hours you will be working, the kind of work you will be performing and the results by which you will be measured.

"Telecommute America! Discover a New Workplace" is a joint effort of government, nonprofit and corporate entities aimed at encouraging workers in the United States and employers to try telework alternatives the week of Oct. 23 to 27. The program will highlight five alternative work styles:

• Home-based telecommuters — employees or independent contractors who work from home during business hours one or more days a week, using a combination of computing and communications technology to stay productive and connected to their office and clients;

• Work-at-home entrepreneurs — self-employed individuals who operate a business from their home utilizing computing and communications technology to enhance their productivity;

• Remote call center agents — employees who can receive and handle customer calls from homebased offices instead of corporate-center locations;

• Virtual office — which allows business people to be equipped with portable computers and communications devices to travel and work anywhere, anytime; and

• Telework centers and satellite offices — which allow people who work in locations closer to home, giving them much shorter commutes.

To help you get acquainted with these new approaches, organizers are distributing free "how-to participate" brochures, offering a comprehensive telework guide and providing information via a toll-free telephone number, (800) TELEWEEK (800) 835-3933.

ask the judge

Staff Judge Advocate Office

Q: I don't know about you, but for me, it invariably happens at dinnertime. I've just taken a bite of the best lasagna in the world (my wife's), and the telephone rings. It's a salesperson, and this rude person who has just interrupted my dinner won't take no for an answer. I must be firm and equally rude, and simply hang up. This is "telemarketing," and some of it is used to perpetrate out and out fraud. How can you avoid the pitfalls many of these calls represent?

A: Perhaps the first and best common sense solution is to simply decide that you will never buy or commit to anything as a result of a telephone solicitation. Many people find it difficult to say "no" in the face of high pressure sales pitches, promises, and offers of freebies and prizes, but it can be done. However, let's suppose that you are interested in the product or service being pitched over the phone. Unless you know exactly who you're dealing with, you should, at the very least, ask the salesperson to send written information about the product or service before you commit. Additionally, you may wish to consider checking with the Better Business Bureau or other consumer protection organizations prior to committing to a purchase.

Telemarketing companies often resort to offers of prizes in order to induce the consumer to purchase goods or services. For example, vacation resorts may offer a "free" trip to the resort, where your only obligation is to attend a sales presentation during the trip. At first blush, this may seem like an attractive offer (a little two or three day vacation, I'll attend the presentation and just say "no"). Be aware that the "free" trip probably won't cover many of the costs involved, such as transportation, food and the like. You should make sure you know whether a prize is subject to any limitations or restrictions. More importantly, if a telephone promotion ever requires you to pay a fee for a "free" prize, don't do it. Finally, never give out information about your banking accounts or credit cards.

Fortunately, beginning Dec. 31, a new set of federal rules governing telemarketing sales will take effect. These rules will make it illegal for a telemarketer to call you if you have previously indicated that you do not wish to be called. Calling times will be restricted to the hours between 8 a.m. and 9 p.m. Telemarketers will be required to give you specific information about the company they represent, the goods or services they are selling and of the fact that it is a sales call before they begin the sales pitch itself.

Before you pay, telemarketers must tell you the cost of the goods, restrictions on getting them or using them and whether or not the sale is final or if payment is nonrefundable. In prize promotions, they must tell you the odds of winning, that no purchase is necessary to win and of any restrictions or conditions in receiving the prize.

Victims' assistance

Post agencies coordinate to smooth aid process

By George R. Smawley
Office of the Staff Judge Advocate

Today, America is 12 times more violent than it was 25 years ago. We have learned and relearned of the ever-present disbelief that confounds and confronts victims when they realize they have been violated. Words such as "stunned," "shocked" and "dazed" pepper the vocabulary of victims.

Many of us have experienced or been exposed to the confusion and frustration faced by victims when they can not understand what is happening or how to seek help, even when it is available.

In an effort to help victims of crime access the services and resources available to them, the Office of the Staff Judge Advocate has initiated the Fort Benning Victim and Witness Assistance Program.

This program is a coordinated effort by several agencies, including the Office of the Staff Judge Advocate, the Chaplains Family Life Center, Social Work Services, the Directorate of Public Safety and the Criminal Investigation Division.

The multidisciplinary agencies involved in the Victim and Witness Assistance Program are dedicated to helping all victims of crime, including those involving domestic violence, sexual assault and larceny, take advantage of the benefits available through service providers at Fort Benning and the local community. These benefits include legal advice, counseling, short-term financial assistance and information on compensation through the Claims Office and the Georgia Victims Compensation Fund.

Under the provisions of the "Victims' Rights and Restitution Act of 1990," crime victims have the following rights:

• To be treated with dignity and fairness

• To be reasonably protected from offenders

• To confer with the attorney for the government and to a have the military justice system explained

• To be notified of all court proceedings

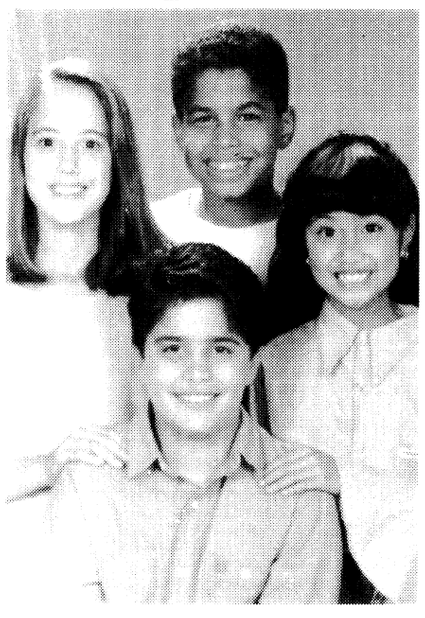
• To be present at all public court proceedings

• To receive all available financial restitution

• To information regarding conviction, sentencing, imprisonment and release from prison.

The purpose of this act is make certain that victims and witnesses of crime do not become lost in the criminal justice system and that they be treated with dignity and understanding. Particular attention will be paid to victims of serious, violent crimes, including child abuse, domestic violence and sexual misconduct.

In terms of the military justice system, assistance begins at the time of arrest and continues through the pretrial, trial, sentencing and confinement phases.



The idea is to make the victim understand that they are an important part of the system and that the military community will do everything within its power to alleviate and mitigate the trauma of victimization.

For more information, individuals may contact any one of the organizations mentioned above for assistance or call the Victim/Witness Liaison Officer directly at 545-7842 or 545-1574.

Interest

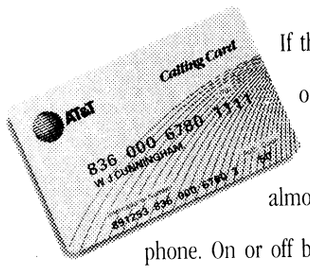
increases in home mortgage refinancing

Columbus Better Business Bureau

Given the low mortgage interest rates that are now available, many homeowners are considering refinancing their home mortgage.

To help you decide if refinancing is for you and to help you prepare to approach a financial institution, the Better Business Bureau offers these tips.

When you refinance your mortgage, you pay off your original mortgage and sign a new loan. With a new loan, you can incur many of the same costs you paid to get your original mortgage. These can include settlement costs, discount points and other fees.



Before you go through the expense of refinancing, check the interest rates to make sure they have dropped to a level that makes refinancing worthwhile. Conventional wisdom states that a two or three percent difference between the rate on your current mortgage and the new rate over a period of time — generally several years — (difference) usually offsets the costs you must pay at closing. The ultimate amount you may save depends on many factors, including your total refinancing cost, whether you sell your home in the near future and the effects of refinancing on your tax situation.

If you decide to refinance, shop around by calling several lending institutions to ask what interest and fees they charge. Remember, you don't have to refinance your mortgage with the same lender that provided your original mortgage. Also, check with your Better Business Bureau for a liability report on the lending institution you're considering, Marcotte said.

Do some homework. Gather all the information and documentation you're likely to need for a phone or face-to-face interview — credit account number and addresses; bank account numbers and addresses and tax returns from the last two years. If there is any indication of credit problems on your credit report (late loan payments, etc.), be prepared to fully explain the situation. Working cooperatively with your lending institution and carefully analyzing your financial situation can help you determine if refinancing is the right step for you.

You can use it from any phone, it gets you home in seconds, and best of all, it weighs almost nothing.

If there's one calling card that can keep up with the pace of Army life, it's the AT&T Card. It works almost anywhere there's a phone. On or off base, in the States or abroad. Shooters stress safety during night match

By Brian R. Voller
Bayonet staff writer

Safety was the emphasis at the Bad Moon Rising Night Tactical Pistol Match conducted by the Fort Benning Rifle and Pistol Club Saturday at English Range.

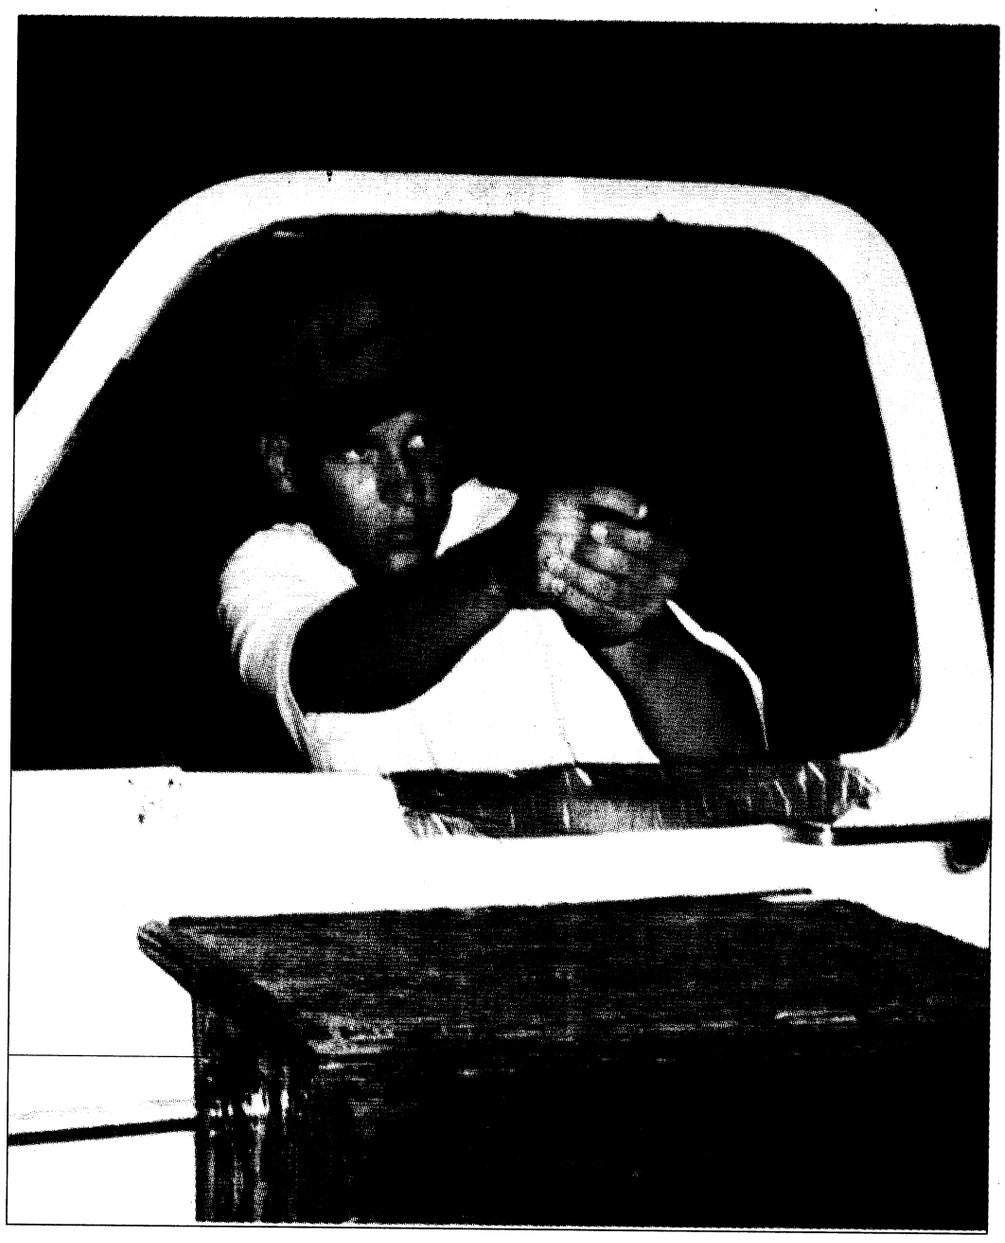
"We are, as far as I know, the only club that runs night pistol competitions," said Jim Graham, manager of the pistol club. "The main reason we can run pistol matches like this is because we emphasis safety."

The top firer of the competition was Morris Lewark with a score of 134, a time of 49.81 and a hit factor of 2.690. In second place was Paul Ford with a score of 117, a time of 52.80 and a hit factor of 2.216. The third-place finisher was Richard Bass with a score of 121, a time of 54.55 and a hit factor of 2.214.

The night-fire match involved three stations designed to test the firers' skills at beating time and engaging targets in limited or no light.

The first station was a mock set-up of a vehicle door. The competitors sit in a chair with their weapons on a table outside the vehicle window. The competitor must engage three cardboard targets with no lighting assistance.

After the three targets are engaged, the competitor must reload the pistol with arms outside the window, and then engage five steel targets.



"We oversee reloading of the weapon to ensure the safety standards are high during this event," Graham said. "We force the firer to reload the weapon outside the window to ensure that the weapon is constantly pointing down range."

The next station involves the competitors firing at shaded targets with the assistance of a flashlight.

The targets are spray painted black on one side to make the targets harder to hit. The firers are told prior to the competition that every hit in the black areas of the targets are considered misses.

Also, the different hit areas on the targets are worth different point totals. For hits registered in the head and mid-torso, 5 points. For hits just outside the torso, the firer receives 3 points; and for hits outside those two regions, the firer receives a miss.

The final portion of the match involves the firers engaging targets in a standing position and a prone unsupported position. This firing point is strictly natural light. The firers are not allowed any assistance to help them fire.

Brian R.Voller

Karl Mueller, Company B, 3rd Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment, takes aim during the vehicle door simulation of the Night Tactical Pistol Match.

"The biggest thing we stress is safety on these matches," said Graham. "For instance, the International Practical Shooting Convention states that steel targets should be at least 11 meters away from the firers. This to protect the firer from bullet casing ricocheting.

"We keep the steel targets at least 15 meters away; that's just the way I do it to ensure safety."

The Fort Benning Pistol Club also forbids the use of alcoholic beverages during competition.

During the safety briefing given by Safety Officer Frank Speights, he told firers if any range officer detects the smell of alcohol on the breath of a firer, he or she would be escorted off the range. He also said range personnel would arrange for the competitor to be driven home safely.

The next scheduled tactical match will be at English Range Oct. 7 at 10 a.m. This competition will include the second running of the Stress Fire Competition.

Buick Challenge tourney hosts 1995 'Military Day'

USAIC Public Affairs Office

The Buick Challenge is hosting a "Military Day" Sept. 29 at Callaway Gardens.

Bob Berry, executive director of the Buick Challenge, made the announcement at an Association of the United States Army board of directors meeting.

He and AUSA chapter President Steve Butler, read a proclamation declaring Sept. 29, 1995, "military day" at the Buick Challenge.

What this means for all members of the armed forces, including family members, retirees and Reservists, is they will only need to show a military identification card to be admitted to Friday's round of golf.

Retired Lt. Gen. Ben Register, who conceived of the idea, said he hopes to reach people in all branches of the armed services, to include Reservists, living in Alabama, Georgia and Florida. "It's another way of saying, 'thank you for what you do for us,'" he said.

Berry noted that this year's field is the best in the 26-year history of the tournament. He said some of golf's top players have signed to play. They include last year's champion, Steve Elkington as well as such notables as Greg Norman, John Daly, Paul Azinger, Mark Calcavecchia, Fred Couples, Ben Crenshaw, Jim Gallagher, Scott Hoch, Lee Janzen, Davis Love III, Billy Mayfair, Jeff Maggert, Hal Sutton and Payne Stewart.

In addition to seeing championship golf, military members and their families will have a chance to win prizes set aside specifically for them.

These prizes include vacation trips to Atlanta and Florida, a television set, mountain bike, scuba lessons and cash.

For more information, contact the Fort Benning AUSA office at 689-3272.

Hunters prepare for season

By Brian R. Voller
Bayonet staff writer

Increases in the prices of hunting and fishing licenses and season dates and bag limits were some of the main topics discussed during the Commanding General's Advisory Council for Natural Resources open meeting Monday.

The price increases are being proposed to help assist the Natural Resources Branch pay for some of the new programs to improve Fort Benning's Natural Resources.

The price increases are only proposed increases and haven't been officially implemented.

"Currently the Natural Resources Branch is searching for alternative sources of funding," said Jeff Brooks, Natural Resources Branch biologist. "As of right now, we have no positive source of funding including the price increases."

Brooks said an official ruling on the price changes will be made by today.

There are several different types of hunting authorized on Fort Benning.

Still hunting, which includes both tree stand hunting and ground hunting, involves the hunter picking a potentially productive area and sitting there and waiting. Of all the different types of hunting, Brooks said, tree stand hunting is the most popular for deer hunting.

Another type of hunting allowed on Fort Benning is stalking. Stalking involves the hunter moving freely through the woods and finding the animals.

For hunting smaller game, some hunters prefer using hunting dogs. The dogs find the smaller animals and flush them out of their hiding spots so the hunter can shoot them.

The final method of hunting used on Fort Benning is hunting from a boat. In order for a hunter to hunt from a boat the boat cannot be under power and must drift under natural power.

Season dates

The following are the Georgia season dates and bag limits:

Deer (archery - either sex): Saturday through Oct. 20. (see end)

Deer (firearms - buck only): Oct. 21 through 27; Nov. 27 to Dec 25. (see end)

Deer (firearms - either sex): Oct. 28 through Nov. 26; Dec. 26 through Jan. 7. (see end)

Dove (North of U.S. Highway 280): through Oct. 1; Nov. 23 through 25; Dec. 10 through Jan. 15. Bag limits are 12 per day; possession 24.

Dove (South of U.S. Highway 280): Sept. 23 through Oct. 22; Nov. 23 through 25; Dec. 10 through Jan. 15. Bag limits are 12 per day; possession 24.

Rabbit: Nov. 18 through Feb. 29. Bag limits are 12 per day; possession 12.

Squirrel: Through Feb. 29. Bag limits are 12 per day; possession 12.

Quail: Nov. 18 through Feb. 29. Bag limits are 12 per day; possession 12.

Turkey: March 23 through May 15. Bag limits are three per season.

Crow: Nov. 4 through Feb. 29. Bag limits are 12 per day.

Bobcat: Dec. 1 through Feb. 15. There are no bag limits.

Fox: Dec. 1 through Feb. 15. There are no bag limits.

Opossum: Oct. 15 through Feb. 15. There are no bag limits.

Raccoon: Oct. 15 through Feb. 15. Bag limits are one per day.

Coyote: Through Feb. 29; March 23 through May 15. There are no bag limits.

Waterfowl, snipe and woodcock: Dates and bag limits are not available at this time but will coincide with state season and bag limits.

Deer (Limits): The maximum number of deer that may be killed by any person by any method on the Fort Benning reservation (Georgia and Alabama) shall be five, of which at least three must be does. Does and button bucks can only be harvested on dates when either sex hunting is authorized. Under no condition, shall any person take more than two antlered bucks during the entire season. No more than one deer per day may be taken in Alabama. On the Georgia side of the reservation, hunters who possess Georgia deer must tag all deer at the place of kill. Tags one or two (not antlerless only tags) must be used to tag antlered bucks.

Deer (shotgun areas): According to U.S. Army Infantry Center Regulation 210-2. Installation Hunting and Fishing Regulation, March 28, 1994, deer may be harvested with centerfire rifle, muzzleloader, handgun, shotgun or bow. However, some compartments are designated for bow or shotgun with slugs only.

Dove (Shooting hours): In Georgia, daily shooting hours will be noon until sunset on opening day in both zones and half an hour before sunrise to sunset for the remainder of the season. Hunting on managed, numbered dove fields during the first split season will be managed by Natural Resources Management Branch, Department of Public Works, to ensure that each field will be shot on specific days (Saturdays, Sundays, Wednesdays and federal holidays).

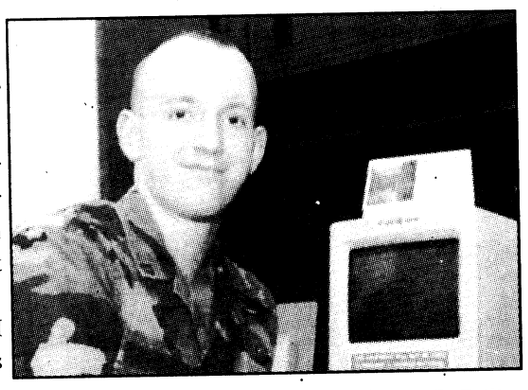
Turkey: The maximum number of turkeys that may be killed by any person on the Fort Benning Reservation (Alabama or Georgia) shall be three. Only gobblers may be killed.

Bobcat and fox: (Georgia) No shooting of bobcats or foxes during daylight hours. Dog hunting and hunting with small game firearms (as defined in the Georgia Department of Natural Resources, 1995 through 1996 Hunting Season and Regulations) at night by hunters using manual calls is allowed.

(Alabama)Bobcats and foxes may be taken during daylight hours only. Firearms may be used only in areas of and during dates of turkey and firearms deer season. Bow and arrows may be used only in areas of and during dates of archery season for deer and turkey. No weapon may be used when hunting with dogs. Running of dogs during daylight hours or after 3 a.m. during and in areas of spring turkey season is prohibited.

Waterfowl: Steel shot size BB or smaller is required for all waterfowl hunting. No lead shot may be in possession.

For a list of areas where hunting is conducted or for a map of the areas contact Tim Brown, manager of Outdoor Recreation, at 544-3504.



"The Hunting and Fishing Overlay" book costs $2, and lists all the hunting areas on Fort Benning.

Information regarding daily openings and closings can by found at Building 1707, Harmony Church deer check station, the Provost Marshal's Office or Kelley Hill Gym. The hunting and fishing information sheet lists the daily openings and closings.

For more information regarding the season dates or bag information, contact Brooks, or the Natural Resource Branch, at 544-6206 or 544-7319.

Ripkin proves all is not lost in baseball

By Brian R. Voller
Bayonet staff writer

SIMPLY SPORTS

In the past few weeks, it has probably become apparent that I don't particularly care for professional athletes, and I really don't care for professional baseball players. They have proven time and time again that baseball is not what it used to be.

The Major Leagues have gotten so bad that I started to believe baseball was slowly losing its place as the national past time. The long, overdrawn player strike and owner lockout was a travesty of American sports.

Sept. 7, I had an experience that made me believe there is still hope for baseball and professional sports as a whole. Never in my life of watching sports have I been so moved than when Cal Ripkin Jr. surpassed Lou Gehrig's consecutive games records with 2,131 games.

In 1939, Gehrig set his record of 2,130 consecutive games. Fifty-six years later, Ripkin broke a record that some people considered unbreakable. It is a record that is a testament to the kind of athlete professional sports need more of.

Ripkin is truly an American hero who deserves all the grandure and admiration he' s been receiving the past weak.

The reason I have such high admiration for Ripkin goes far beyond the fact that he's played in more consecutive games than any other man in history. No, the reason I admire him so much is that he turned the limelight from himself and directed it back to the fans.

When it became official that Ripkin had surpassed Gehrig's record, Camden Yards in Baltimore became the happiest place on the planet. Then when Ripkin took off and made his victory lap around the field, it was evident to me that his love for the fans of Baltimore was as strong as his love for baseball.

Ripkin did not give the appearance I suspect a lot of other players in the Major Leagues may have given. Ripkin gave the appearance of a man who appreciated not just a few but every single fan in that stadium.

Ripkin reinforced my views with some of things he said after the game when the city of Baltimore paid homage to him. He stood up on the podium and said, "All I've ever wanted to be was a ballplayer in this city. The only thing I've ever done during my whole career was try to conduct myself on and off the field like an Oriole should conduct himself."

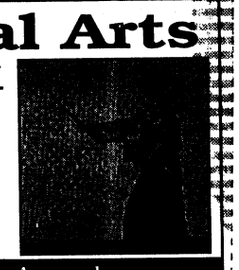
I think a lot of professional athletes and the game of baseball can learn a lot from this man. It is also my opinion that Ripkin may have saved the game of baseball. He has pride in what he does and did, he doesn't have conceit.

It apparent to me that if there is anyone playing professional sports who can hold an air on conceit, it's Ripkin. But as I watched him being honored and I watched thousands of fan pack the streets to cheer for him, the only thing I kept seeing was a man overwhelmed by the situation.

A couple weeks back I said professional athletes aren't the positive role models they used to be. Now I'm going to retract that statement and say that Ripkin is the kind of athlete everyone can look up to.

Bayonet sports page needs weekly volunteers

USAIC Public Affairs Office



The Bayonet sports page is looking for Athletes of the Week, or guest pickers for the weekly Benning Line.

The Athlete of the Week is a special section which recognizes the accomplishments of Fort Benning athletes.

The weekly Benning Line is a football prediction box that is currently running in The Bayonet. Each week the regular pickers and one guest picker predict the winners of five National Football League games and four National Collegiate Athletic Association games.

Anyone wishing to nominate an athlete for Athlete of the Week, or wishing to be a guest picker for the weekly Benning Line can contact Brian Voller at 545-3272.

Ten-miler team — The Sports Branch, Community Recreation Division, is preparing to send two teams, one male and one female, to the Army 10-miler Oct. 15 in Washington, D.C., to represent Fort Benning.

Each team will consist of five members, who will be selected during a qualification period. One alternate will be selected for each team in case of emergency dropouts.

The qualifier run will be conducted at the Santiago Fitness Center, Building 3350, Saturday at 7:30 a.m.

Anyone interested in representing Fort Benning at the Army 10-miler needs to finish in the top of his or her respective groups.

The qualifier will be open to family members, retirees and Department of Defense civilians. For more information, call 545-3050, 545-2980 or 545-6380 or contact Hazel Henry at the Santiago Fitness Center at 544-9595 or 544 9486.

Hunter's Zero Day — The U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit is hosting Hunter's Zero Day Oct. 1 and 14 from 8 a.m. to 1 p.m. at English Range.

The event is designed to help sportsmen zero their weapons for the upcoming hunting season. All those who possess a license to hunt on the Fort Benning installation are welcome to attend the free event.

Hearing and eye protection are required.

For more information, call Sgt. 1st Class Michael Delk at 545-3855 during business hours, and 563-4501 after 5 p.m.

Three-on-three b-ball — A three-on-three basketball tournament will be Saturday at 10 a.m. at the following housing areas:

Area 1: Davis Hill, Bouton Heights, area 2: McGraw Manor, area 3: Custer Terrace, area 4: Main Post, area 5: McDaniel Manor and area 6: Indianhead Terrace.

Each housing area will play games to 11 points with the top two teams from each housing area participating in the championship game Sept. 23 at Briant Wells Gym.

The championship game will be played to 15 points with the first-, second- and third-place teams receiving individual trophies. The housing area of the first-place team will receive the team trophy for the Youth Center.

Team rosters must be submitted to Sgt. 1st Class Thomas Smith at the U.S. Army Infantry Center Military Police Company, Building 17.

The ages for any team will be 12 to 16 year old and living in the their respective housing areas.

For more information contact Smith or Larry Webb at 545-1741 or 545-3025.

RANGERS UNDERGO TESTING

Army researches effect of physical, mental nutrient enhancer

Ruth J. Spaller

Sgt. Michael W. Moore, a volunteer from the 75th Ranger Regiment, has his oxygen consumption levels monitored during testing of a nutrient that may enhance athletic performance.

By Ruth J. Spaller
USAIC Public Affairs Office

In a gym turned laboratory in Infantry Hall, 18 volunteers from the 75th Ranger Regiment are helping Army researchers test the effects of a nutrient that may enhance physical and mental performance.

By undergoing a series of strenuous tests, the rangers are helping to determine if choline, a natural, food-derived nutrient, will be an ingredient included in an energy bar being developed for soldiers' field rations by the Food Engineering Directorate at Natick Laboratories, Mass.

"We're looking for nutrients to put in rations to help performance," said Lt. Col. John P. Warber, a research dietitian with the U.S. Army Research Institute of Environmental Medicine in Natick. Past studies of choline have indicated that it "may have some positive effect on energy levels and reducing fatigue," he said.

The testing going on in the gym is basically a "controlled lab study" on the effects of choline, Warber said, with the rangers going through a six-hour routine of "militarily relevant" tasks.

Testing

They start on a treadmill with the equivalent of a 20-kilometer road march, carrying a 65-pound rucksack and walking at 3 1/2 mph on a 3 percent grade.

After that, they do a run to exhaustion on a treadmill, then as many 100-pound squats as they can at a set pace to a set depth. Then they shoot on a computer-simulated rifle range to check their levels of concentration and control after being physically depleted.

They go through the routine twice — once after having a choline drink (researchers are using a liquid now because it's easiest to work with), and once after having a placebo drink, without knowing which they are drinking.

Their blood is drawn both before and after the tests to check the levels of choline, and the rangers are monitored throughout the test for their heart rates and oxygen consumption levels.

To check their mental alertness, the rangers undergo short term memory and vigilance tests while on the treadmill.

For the vigilance test, a white dot periodically appears on the screen of a laptop computer set up in front of the treadmill and the rangers have to hit a button on the keyboard as soon as they see it.

Spatial and short-term memory is similarly tested with the rangers picking out patterns of red and green grid squares after having time to memorize them.

Being tested

Two hours into the road march portion of the test, Sgt. Michael W. Moore said it was not really difficult to be a test subject.

"The mental aspect of road marching and running is the same," he said. "The scientific part is not in our equation."

But the scientific part does play a significant role, he said.

"It's hard to run with that darn snorkel in your mouth and your nose pinched off," he said, referring to the oxygen-intake measuring device the subjects wear during the last five minutes of each hour on the treadmill.

Moore said he volunteered to be a test subject as a way to find out better ways to improve his physical and mental capabilities.

While he hopes the choline testing will show positive results, Moore said, he doesn't rely on performance-enhancing products. He mostly drinks water during and after workouts, he said, and only occasionally drinks sports drinks. "There's just so many on the market."

Results

Finding out what really works is a big part of the reason the 75th Ranger Regiment is cooperating with the study, according to Capt. Michael L. Place, the regimental surgeon.

"If you go down to (any health food store,) they will sell you anything — amino acids to pure sugar bars — and it's all supposed to be performance enhancing. But there's no good medical literature that supports any of that," Place said.

"Our guys are at the level of college and professional athletes in terms of physical conditioning," Place said. "They're so into fitness, they'll go down and spend their own money on that kind of product, so a study like this is really of natural interest to the soldiers in this unit."

If choline does work, it's something that rangers — who often carry heavy loads for a long period of time and then need to be alert to carry out their missions after that physical exertion — can benefit from, Place said.

If it doesn't work, "We can tell them to save their money," he said.

"If it works well, (this study) could be beneficial to everybody," Place said. "It will benefit the rangers as well as the rest of the Army."

Bradley instructor improves vehicles

By Lisa M. Hibbert
Bayonet staff writer

The Bradley gunner has been inside his vehicle along with the rest of the crew for two weeks.

He's getting tired of looking through the eye piece because whenever the vehicle goes over some rough terrain, he hits his head.

Luckily the eyepiece should no longer be problem thanks to the idea of Staff Sgt. David R. Rogers, Bradley instructor, 2nd Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment

In November, when the Improved Bradley Acquisition System project began seeking for ways to improve the Bradley, Rogers came up with an idea for a sliding browpad assembly.

"I didn't think they (Material Development) would take me seriously," Rogers said. "I described my idea to them, and when they called me back to view a sketch of my idea, I was surprised and pleased."

Material Development went to subject matter experts — Bradley instructors — when they were looking for ways to create a user-friendly vehicle said Lt. Col. William I. Nichols, IBAS project manager, Red Stone Arsenal, Ala.

Rogers' browpad allows for a customized focus and is made of a malleable, padded metal that conforms to a person's head to provide comfort, Rogers said

"It improves comfort, reduces fatigue and makes for a more combat-ready effectiveness," Nichols said.

The browpad can even be used comfortably with a combat vehicle crewmen's helmet, Nichols said.

Currently, there is no browpad in the Bradley vehicles. Gunners would have to move their head from one eye piece to another. Now the assembly allows them to just slide back and forth freely.

Also, there was no padding, which meant that when the Bradley is out in rough terrain, the gunner would often bump his head on the sight piece. Since the new design will be padded and malleable, this should not happen anymore, Rogers said.

In a combat situation, a Bradley crew may spend weeks at a time inside the vehicle.

"This design will give the gunner greater comfort without interrupting vehicle movement," Nichols said.

Since the designers were able to come up with solutions to the Bradley comfort problem early, they were able to save money.

"Being able to do a lot of the changes on paper (instead of actually building and rebuilding the system) helped to save a significant amount of money."

A prototype assembly will appear in 1996 and is expected to be equipped in all Bradley's by fiscal 2000.

While Rogers did not receive a monetary award for his idea, he will receive something better. The idea that he created has been officially named the Rogers' Sliding Browpad Assembly.

TRADOC honors developer of Gulf War doctrine

By James A. Caldwell
TRADOC

FORT MONROE, Va. — The Training and Doctrine Command honored the general credited with developing the Airland Battle doctrine that led to success in the Gulf War in 1991 Sept. 8.

The TRADOC headquarters auditorium was dedicated in memory of Maj. Gen. Donald R. Morelli, who from 1979 to 1982, was TRADOC's first deputy chief of staff for doctrine. He served in that position again from 1983 to 84.

"I think his courage, both his professional courage because he sold ideas that were not easily sold and his personal courage to do that at a time of his life when it was very difficult for him and his general service to this nation, will be remembered," Gen. William W. Hartzog, TRADOC commander, said at the ceremony.

"We want to make this place and Maj. Gen. Don Morelli permanent members of the TRADOC military and civilian family."

Morelli worked tirelessly to have airland battle adopted by the United States and its allies. He said that accomplishment would be "the fulfillment of my life's mission."

During his second tour at TRADOC, he had contracted cancer. But he lived to see the concepts of initiative and deep attack accepted by both the Army and Air Force.

NATO also implemented them into its follow-on forces attack doctrine. Many observers said the operational tenets convinced the Soviet Union that any Warsaw Pact offensive against Western Europe would fail.

Morelli died in June 1984, three months after he retired from the Army.

Buick Challenge to feature day for Military

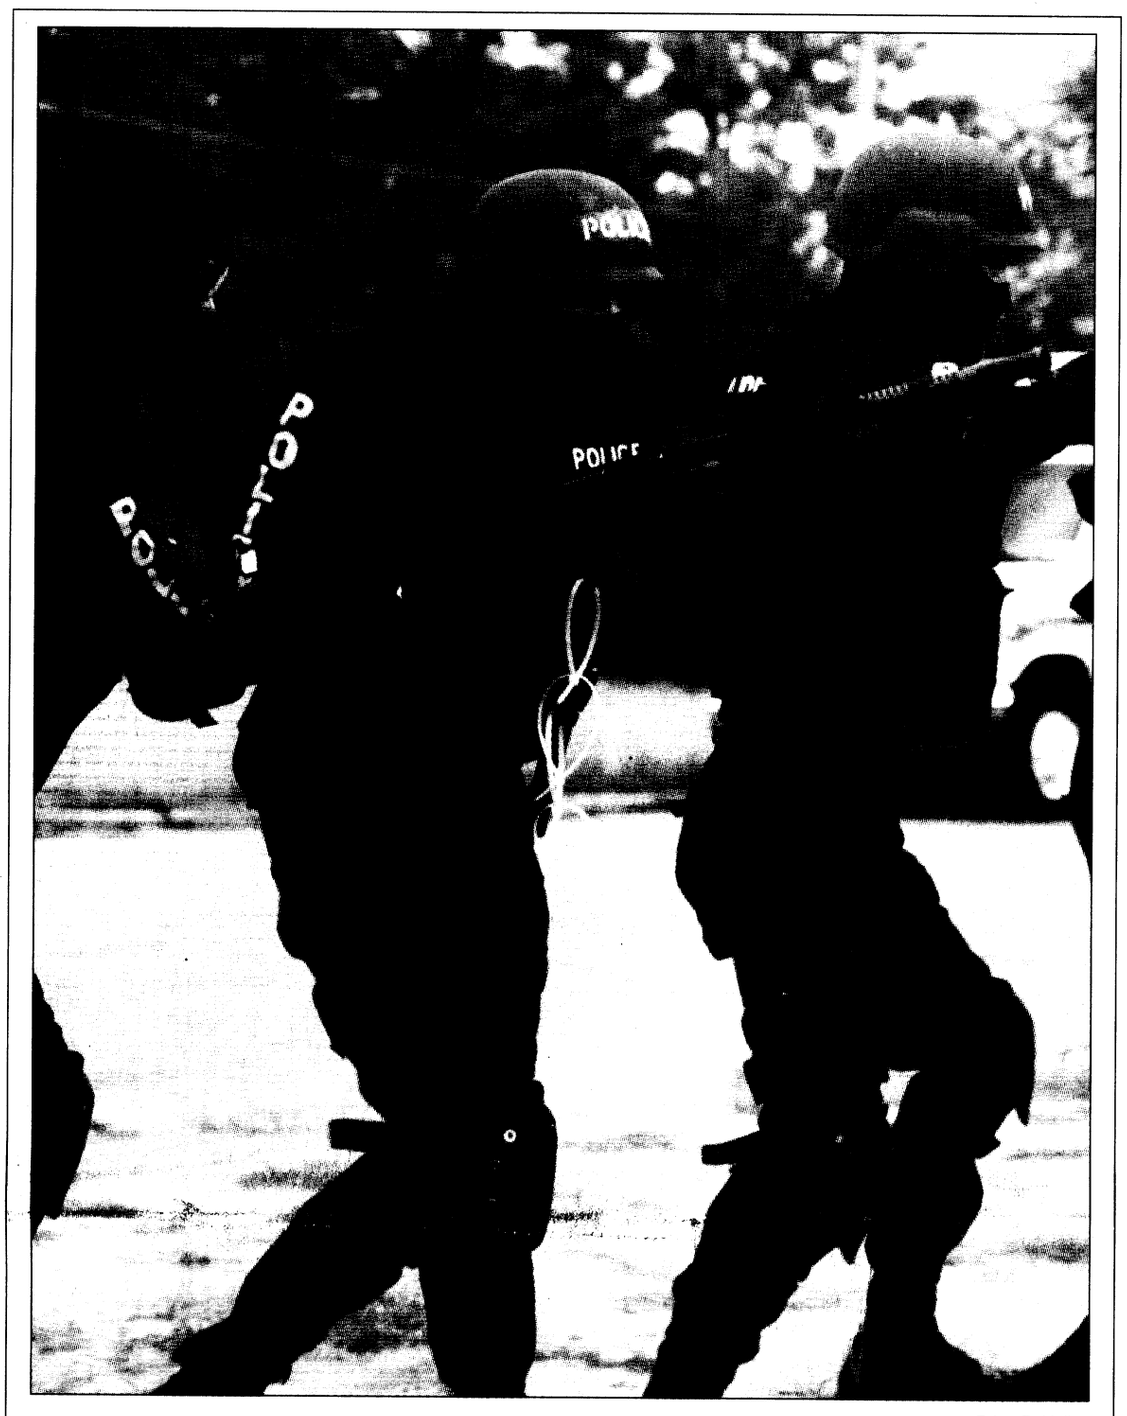
USAIC Public Affairs Office

Some 3,000 soldiers, family members and members of the Fort Benning work force are expected to take advantage of the Association of the United States Army- sponsored "Military Day" at the Buick Challenge Sept. 29 at Callaway Gardens.

They will be joined by retirees, members of the National Guard and reservists who are invited to attend free of charge.

Retired Lt. Gen. Ben Register, president of AUSA, who conceived the idea, said he hopes to reach people in all branches of the armed services, to include reservists, living and serving in Alabama, Georgia and Florida.

"It's another way of saying, 'thank you for what you do for us,'" he said.



In addition to seeing some of the top golfers on the tour competing for the $1 million purse, military members and their family members will be eligible for special prizes that were donated for the event.

These prizes include vacation trips to Atlanta and Florida, a television set, mountain bike, scuba lessons and cash.

In addition to premier golf and competing for prizes, the 11th Infantry Regiment and 36th Engineer Group are planning to serve barbecue from a tent.

The sous chef for this will be the 11th Regimental Commander Col. John Lewis.

Mass casualty

Martin Army Community Hospital and the Military Police Activity's Special Reaction Team participate in a joint mass casualty exercise Sept. 14 in the Harmony Church area. The team conducted a simulated terrorist crisis, while hospital personnel conducted a mass casualty evacuation. The scenario involved a hostage situation and was designed to provide soldiers training in real-life tragedies. See photo feature on Page B-4.

US shooting team brings home gold

By Rhonda A. Syler
U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit

ROME — The U.S. military shooting team brought home one-third of the U.S. Armed Forces Team's medals from the 1995 International Military Sports Council World Games recently conducted in Rome.

The team, comprised mostly of U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit sharpshooters, captured three individual and team Gold Medals, two individual Silvers and two Bronze.

The Polytronic Trophy, awarded to the shooter with the highest aggregate score from two individual events, was presented to Maj. Stephen Goff, USAMU shooter, last week during the closing activities reception for the shooting venue.

Goff, 37, took home the Bronze in the 300-meter military rapid fire match with a score of 555 out of 600. Adding that score to his Gold-medal score in the 300-meter standard rifle event earned him enough points to emerge from the games with the overall highest score of 1,131.

Goff proved victorious despite the difficult weather conditions. "It's been a grueling match with high winds which affect the accuracy of the shots. There hasn't been a day out here that's been easy," Goff said.

Goff, a National Guardsman activated to train for the Olympics, said he is excited to be back in the game.

"I'm glad I'm back in the Army this year and shooting CISM (Counseil Internationale du Sports Militaire)," he said. "CISM has been a great experience for high level competition training as I prepare for the Olympics. I really appreciate all the U.S. delegation and our sponsor AT&T have done to make the games possible."

Airman 1st Class Deena Wigger captured the first Gold of the 1995 World Military Games winning women's 50-meter prone rifle competition beating Korean sharpshooter Hyun Ah Kong on a tie-breaker with a score of 592 out of a possible 600.

Capt. Glenn Dubis, a member of the USAMU, won Silver in 300-meter military rapid fire with a 560, losing the Gold to Swedish shooter Michael Olsson on a tie-breaker.

"If you've got to take a Silver Medal, it (losing on a tie-breaker rules) is a good way to take it." Dubis said. "Today's Gold and Silver are basically equal."

Dubis, 36, thought he performed well. "There are a few shots I'd like to take back, but overall I gave a good performance."

Army Cadet Ed Suarez, 28, scored a 587 out of 600 coming within two points of the current CISM record-seizing second place behind Austrian pistol shooter Giovanni Bossi.

The U.S. Rifle Team placed third in the 300-meter standard rifle then won the Gold in the 300-meter military rapid fire. The team, comprised entirely of USAMU soldiers, went into the 300-meter military rapid fire competition with a 25-point lead. After the second day of competition, the U.S. marksmen only dropped the lead by one point by beating the Norway team 2,224 to 2,200.

The team returned to the states to begin training and preparing for the fall National Team Selection matches in October.

MISSING LOVED ONES

Post remembers POWs, MIAs

By Lisa M. Hibbert
Bayonet staff writer

Imagine having to find the remains of soldiers so that you can inform their families that the missing service members are indeed dead or alive.

One problem is finding a body when it's not known where it is. Another is finding enough of the remains to be able to identify them.

Those were two of the topics discussed at a program Sept. 15 in Marshall Auditorium to remember prisoners of war and those missing in action.

"Finding the remains of POWs and MIAs is difficult because you have to figure out where people were buried," said Brig. Gen. Charles R. Viale, commander, Joint Task Force-Full Accounting.

"Those captured are hard to find," Viale said. "They were buried along the side of the road in the night and their captors do not always remember where they buried them."

Viale said that the task force gets most of its information from former enemy veterans.

Viale is responsible for finding the remains of prisoners of war and soldiers missing in action in the Southeast Asia region. Unfortunately, they have not found anyone alive in that region.

To date, the task force has recovered 534 remains in Vietnam, 15 in Laos, 13 in Cambodia and five in China.

> "While we may consider giving up our lives for our country, very few of us picture what it would be like as a prisoner of war."
> — Brig. Gen. Charles R. Viale
> Commander, Joint Task Force-Full Accounting

"There is a bond shared between all soldiers," Viale said. "Soldiers make a commitment to never leave the field without their buddy. While we may consider giving up our lives for our country, very few of us picture what it would be like as a prisoner of war."

At the conclusion of the presentation, 30 black-and-white slides of soldiers who will never see this country again were flashed across the screen while "Bring Him Home" played in the background.

Anyone interested in making an inquiry about a service member missing in action can call (808) 477-5401.

Conference focuses on fitness for the soldier

By Lisa M. Hibbert
Bayonet staff writer

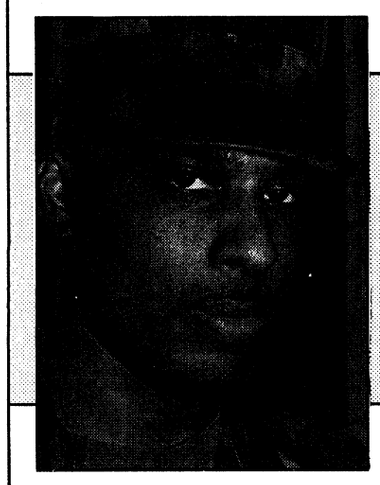
At a conference hosted by the U.S. Army Physical Fitness School Sept. 14 and 15, representatives from several Army research and development agencies came together to discuss battle-focused physical training for the 21st century soldier.

The major objective of the conference was to focus on the research implications of human performance and discuss the human dimensions of Force XXI, according to Lt. Col. Jeanne M. Picariello, commandant of the Physical Fitness School.

Presentations were given by representatives from various posts ranging from Fort Hood, Texas to Fort Benning and round table discussions were encouraged at the end of each session. Topics ranged from land warrior, digitized soldier to a fitness training unit update.

The "couch-potato generation is here; they are among us," said Brig. Gen. Robert T. Clark, Fort Benning's deputy commanding general, at the conference introductory session (update and battle focus physical training workshop.)

Conferenceparticipants threw out questions as they brain-stormed and debated, searching for ways to transform the couch potatoes into combat-ready soldiers.

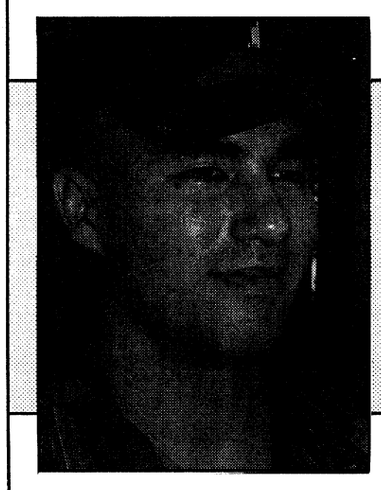


Staff Sgt. Bernard Milock, instructor at the fitness training unit , Infantry Training Brigade, talked about the challenge of getting initial entry level soldiers physically conditioned in 13 weeks.

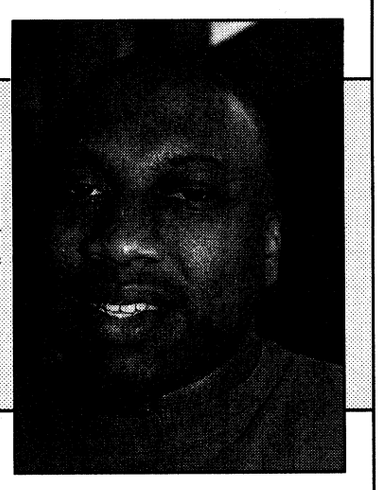
One of the highlights of the conference was the U.S. Army Physical Fitness Test Update Study, 1995 Data workshop.

Participants discussed lowering the score for the two-mile run in certain age groups, increasing the number of sit-ups and reducing the number of push-ups for women.

VARIOUS VOICES



What changes have you made to have a healthier lifestyle?



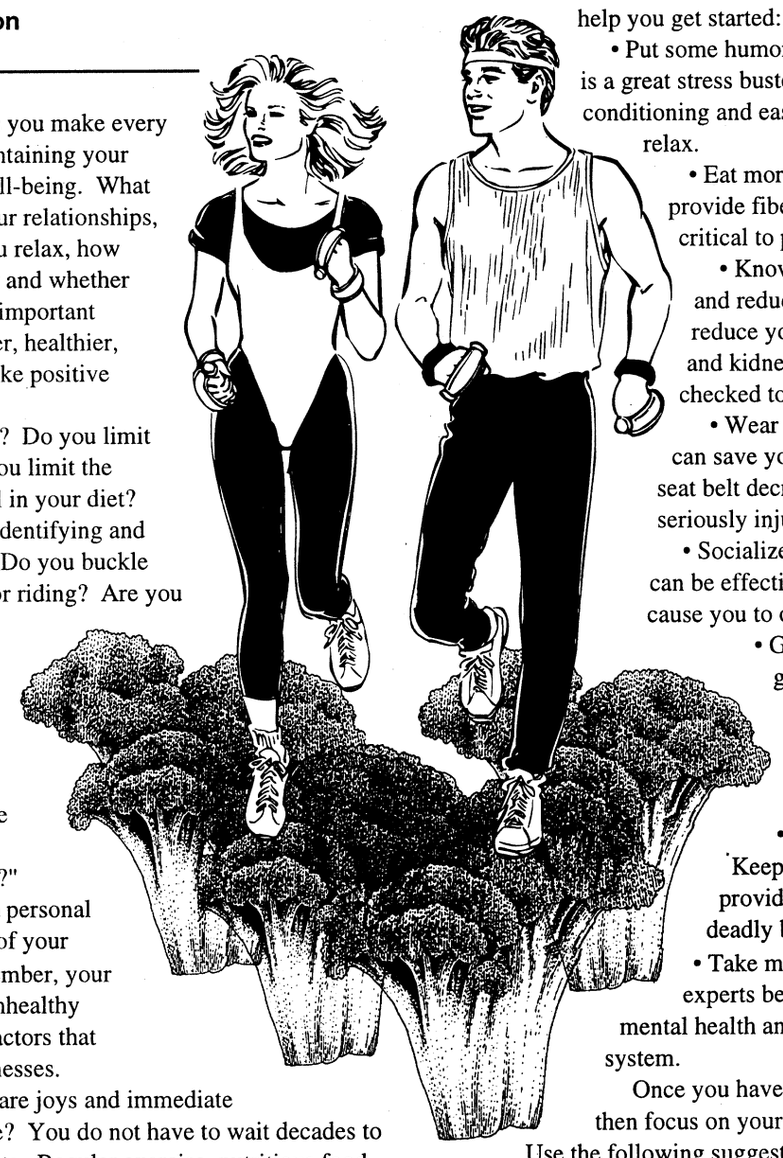
Staff Sgt. Phillip Ruiz, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 29th Infantry Regiment — "I watch what I eat and try to eat well-balanced meals."

Heather A. Strickland, family member — "I quit smoking and drinking."

1st Lt. Martin S. Young, Company D, 2nd Battalion, 18th Infantry Regiment — "I really haven't made any changes. I don't smoke and drink, and I eat my vegetables."

Sgt. 1st Class Kevin R. Robertson, Fort Stewart, Ga. — "I've been exercising, running more and eating better."

Eleanor J. Buckner, civilian employee — "I would have a healthier lifestyle (if I could stay) away from people who smoke."



Rita D. Ghent, family member — "My husband has just left for Korea. I've decided to lose 30 pounds while he is gone and to stop smoking on Oct. 1, cold turkey. I've already started to walk more and drink more water and less (soda)."

Lifestyle choices are key

By Adeline G. Washington
Army News Service

The lifestyle choices you make every day are key to maintaining your health and total well-being. What you eat, how you manage your relationships, your exercise habits, how you relax, how often you wear your seat belt and whether you use drugs or alcohol are important lifestyle choices. For a longer, healthier, happier and active life — make positive choices.

Do you exercise regularly? Do you limit your intake of alcohol? Do you limit the amount of fat and cholesterol in your diet? Do you have techniques for identifying and handling stress in your life? Do you buckle your seat belt when driving or riding? Are you healthier than you were five years ago?

If you answered "no" to any of these questions, then you are denying yourself the joys and benefits that come from making healthy lifestyle choices. If this is true, ask yourself, "What do I do now?"

The first step is to make a personal commitment to take control of your health and life. Always remember, your lifestyle choices do count; unhealthy choices create various risk factors that contribute to preventable illnesses.

Did you know that there are joys and immediate rewards of a healthy lifestyle? You do not have to wait decades to see the benefits of your efforts. Regular exercise, nutritious food, weight maintenance and stress management will enhance your life.

You will feel better and be more productive immediately. Your self-image will escalate and so will your personal joy of living.

Research has proved that vigorous exercise causes your body to secrete hormones that act as mood elevators. The good news is these "happy hormones" last for up to 18 hours.

You have probably experienced times when the challenge to lose weight, quit smoking or exercise more was just too much for you. Keep in mind that you are not expected to change your lifestyle overnight. In fact, attempting too many changes at once is probably the quickest way to discouragement and failure. Take one step at a time.

With this is mind, you are ready to focus on some small efforts that will protect and improve your health and total well-being. And guess what?

You do not have to give up anything. The following suggestions can help you get started:

- Put some humor into your life; laugh more. A good laugh is a great stress buster. Laughing even provides some muscle conditioning and eases tension as your muscles tighten and relax.
- Eat more fruits and vegetables. These foods provide fiber and disease-fighting nutrients. They are critical to preserving your health.
- Know your blood pressure. Early identification and reduction of high blood pressure can help reduce your risk of heart disease, stroke, diabetes and kidney disease, so have your blood pressure checked to make sure it is normal.
- Wear your seat belts. Wearing your seat belt can save your life. Research shows that using your seat belt decreases your chances of being killed or seriously injured by more than half, at any speed.
- Socialize and talk to others more. These activities can be effective stress busters. Remember, stress can cause you to overeat or increase your alcohol intake.
- Get seven to eight hours of sleep a night. A good night's sleep helps to control stress. Research shows that two out of three people who report that they are in excellent to good health say that they get the recommended amount of sleep.
- Keep your immunizations up to date. Keeping your immunizations up to date provides you protection from several potentially deadly but preventable diseases.
- Take more time to do things you enjoy. Medical experts believe having fun is essential to sound mental health and may actually help to boost your immune system.

Once you have success with these small efforts, you can then focus on your bigger goals of changing "old habits."

Use the following suggestions to assist you in developing a healthy lifestyle:

- Start small; identify one problem area at a time.
- It must be important to you.
- You must want to change this habit.
- You must build confidence that you can change.
- Develop an action plan and proceed gradually.
- Make it enjoyable and fun.
- Expect setbacks; they are OK. Just be aware of the causes and keep moving.
- Maintain, maintain, maintain! Assess your progress, make new plans and renew your enthusiasm and commitment.

Opportunity is now! You must remember that your health and well-being depend on what you do or don't do for yourself. It is your personal responsibility. Therefore, if you want to live a longer, healthier, happier and active life, the choice is yours.

How to get your news in The Bayonet

Editor's note: Many people call us with questions about how to get their information in the paper or with erroneous information about deadlines, so we have compiled the following for your information.

Our mission

The Bayonet is here to serve you — our audience. Our mission is to provide timely, accurate and truthful information that supports Army goals and directives.

We get a lot of feedback from readers, and we appreciate your letters, story ideas and comments. We appreciate the positive comments, and we do our best to address the negative ones.

As Fort Benning's authorized newspaper, we are dedicated to giving you the most complete coverage possible. In order to do this, we rely on members of our audience to keep us informed about their units' or directorates' activities.

Requesting coverage

The staff of The Bayonet enjoys covering newsworthy events on post that are timely and pertinent to our readers. Some events we cover include brigade-level changes of command, changes in post policies or procedures and other postwide events.

We don't have enough personnel to cover everything on post, so we focus on the events that affect most of the post.

Also due to our limited number of personnel, we prefer that coverage requests be submitted at least two weeks in advance.

Some events we do not send a reporter to cover are parties, dinners, dining events, dances, balls, teas, coffees, club and organization meetings and elections, award presentations, changes of command below the brigade level, check presentations and group photos.

The frequency of such events on post and small number of photojournalists on The Bayonet staff prohibits us from covering these sorts of events.

Also, Army Regulation 360-81, which governs the production and content of Army newspapers, states covering such events is not a function of the post newspaper or the Public Affairs Office.

If you need a photographer to record events for official purposes, call the Training and Audiovisual Support Center's photo lab at 545-4417.

Deadlines

Film, photos, stories, letters to the editor and other news items intended for The Bayonet must arrive in our office no later than noon Friday prior to the next week's publication.

Also, you may leave stories, film, photos for publication in The Bayonet's drop box located in the Information Office, Room 111, Infantry Hall, Building 4. The deadline for items left in the drop box is noon Friday, also.

Copy must be typed and doubled-spaced, except for letters to the editor which may be handwritten. Everything else must be typed. Typed copy is easier for us to edit, easier for our typesetter and results in fewer errors.

Use civilian dates, times, the name of the building as well as the building number. You may include the street or road if desired. Also, be sure to include the first and last names of all individuals mentioned in the story, and spell out all acronyms on first reference.

If you submit an announcement for post briefs or community briefs, check it when it appears in The Bayonet. Then, if you must resubmit it at a later date, submit it as it ran in the paper.

You may fax briefs or announcements only. However, we need the original typewritten copy of stories (anything longer than one page).

Story ideas, submission

If you believe you have a good story idea and want to write the story yourself, call us to see if we're interested. If you don't want to write the story, call us and we'll arrange a time for you to talk with a reporter.

We reserve the right to edit all stories for publication, and we cannot guarantee if or when submitted stories will appear in the paper. Stories that are submitted after the deadline will be published in the next week's paper.

Stringers

Stringers are people belonging to various units who write about and take photos of unit activities for The Bayonet.

Without stringers, our coverage of unit activities would be decreased. Unit commanders who would like to arrange for a stringer should call The Bayonet's command information officer at 545-2201.

Corrections

We strive for accuracy, so if we make a error, we will correct it in the next edition of The Bayonet. Call us at 545-2201.

Ed Ruffner, a representative of the Service Corps of Retired Executives, talks to representatives from the Better Opportunities for Single Soldiers program.

Retired execs 'score' with BOSS

By Ruth J. Spaller
USAIC Public Affairs Office

Fort Benning's Better Opportunities for Single Soldiers program has teamed up with a community organization that can provide "better opportunities" for all soldiers.

The Columbus chapter of the Service Corps of Retired Executives, hosted 13 representatives from the BOSS program Sept. 15 in the first of what both groups hope to make a series of quarterly meetings.

SCORE is a nonprofit association sponsored by the Small Business Administration. The group is made up of volunteer business executives who provide free counseling and advice to people starting small businesses.

The idea of putting the two groups together was "to take the youth, energy and motivation of the BOSS representatives and put that together with the experience and knowledge of people — successful business professionals — who've been there and done it," said Garrison Sgt. Maj. Steven B. Chittum, who oversees the BOSS program.

The two groups talked about what SCORE can do for soldiers looking to start their own businesses, as well as how to improve the business aspect of the BOSS program itself.

Ed Ruffner, former general manager of J.C. Penney, equated being a BOSS representative to being a sales representative.

"Enthusiasm will build the world," Ruffner told the soldiers. "You can't sell anything you don't believe in."

The BOSS representatives said they gained great insight into business opportunities.

"Our conference with SCORE is only one of many better opportunities that we are able to experience as BOSS representatives," said Spc. Michael James, BOSS president. "This is the type of program that can build an even stronger BOSS council.

Other SCORE members who offered advice at the meeting were Carey Brinson, a certified public accountant with Brinson, Kebler and Davidson; Ken Deaton, a certified public accountant with Robinson and Grimes; Paul Morrison, president of J. Smith Lanier; Lawrence Rosenstrauch, an attorney; and Albert Thompson, a superior court judge.

The BOSS program plans to open future meetings to all soldiers interested in starting a small business, regardless of marital status, Chittum said.

"The relationship between these two organizations allows for a tremendous window of opportunity," said Stacey Morecraft, Single Soldier Living Community coordinator. "The SCORE chapter offers various insights into individual advancement as well as program development."

The BOSS program will also continue to forge community ties with an upcoming Rotary Career Day, when single soldiers will accompany Columbus Rotary Club members for a "day at the office" program and a "Single Soldier Day" at City Hall.

Trucking firms to recruit applicants

More than 20 trucking firms will be on site Saturday in the Soldiers' Plaza parking lot from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. to recruit soldiers, civilians and family members for driver positions. Experience is not necessary and free refreshments will be served.

Delta Force to conduct briefings in October

The Delta Force Team will conduct general orientation briefings starting Oct. 2 at 1 p.m. and Oct. 3 through 5 twice daily at 9 a.m. and 1 p.m. in Infantry Hall, Classroom 21.

Physical fitness qualification test will be administered Oct. 6 on Stewart-Watson Field at 7 a.m. Immediately following the test, a 100-meter swim test will be administered at Briant Wells pool.

Uniform for the PFQT (including the 100-meter swim test) is battle dress uniform and combat boots.

Controlled burning set

Controlled burning of woodland and range areas will take place Monday through Sept. 30.

If weather permits, the following compartments may be affected: D-6, E-5, I-3, I-4 and K-7. Burning will occur in pine stands within these compartments. People using these areas must leave before 9:30 a.m. Training units using compartments next to these areas are reminded to exercise caution while traveling in these areas. For information, call 544-6206.

Fort Benning to honor Native Americans

The U.S. Army Infantry Center will observe Native American Heritage Month in November. A planning meeting is scheduled for Tuesday at 10 a.m. in Building 2515.

The Equal Opportunity Office is asking all units and activities to send a representative to the meeting.

For more information, call 545-3196 or 545-6665.

Taxi service to end

Effective Oct. 1, the military taxi service will be discontinued at Fort Benning. Activities must rely on internal assets for transportation of personnel or package delivery. For information, call 545-3018.

CGSC to be offered

The Command and General Staff Officer Course will be offered in Columbus beginning in October.

This course will be presented by instructors of the 108th Division at the Army Reserve Center on Macon Road in Columbus.

All majors and above in the active component, Reserve Component, and the National Guard are eligible. Also, promotable captains are eligible if they are Combined Arms Services and Staff School graduates. This is the same course offered in residence at Fort Leavenworth, Kan. For information, call 291-4536 and leave a message.

Name: Spc. Timothy D. Ragel
Position: Better Opportunities for Single Soldiers Program representative
Unit: 4th Ranger Training Battalion
Military occupational specialty: 91B1V
Job Title: Ranger medic
Years on the job: Two years
Hometown: Portland, Ore.

What were your reasons for joining the Army? I wanted a challenge and wanted to see if I could be all I could be.

What were your reasons for choosing your MOS? I've always had a passion for helping people. Being a medic in the Army is an awesome experience, especially when a fellow soldier comes to you broken and you're able to help put him right back on his feet.

What person has most influenced your military career? Sgt. 1st Class William P. Franklin has pushed me to grow in developing my potential. Sgt. 1st Class Woodrow Jarrett has influenced me by his strong morals. Staff Sgt. Kevin A. Tillman spends a lot of time caring for soldiers and has helped me countless amount of times. Sgt. Miguel Reyna influenced me most with his high standards and always looked out for the welfare of his men at all cost.

What are your career plans? To be all I can be — and, when I can't run, jump and put on a ruck, I'll go be a building contractor and make myself a white picket fence.

What do you think about the BOSS program and why is it important? The BOSS program on Fort Benning Army is the best in the Army. BOSS has linked the chain of command to single soldiers and their issues.

What have you accomplished as the BOSS representative for your unit? My chain of command has "led the way" in the quality of life for single soldiers. Soldiers have brought issues to the chain of command through BOSS; and, more importantly, they have made suggestions to the soldiers on improvements.

In your opinion, how can the individual soldier get involved in the BOSS program? A soldier with a special interest should ask the BOSS rep for information, look at the Morale, Welfare and Recreation pamphlet or call 545-6500.

What specifically has the BOSS program done to help the soldiers in your unit? The link with the chain of command has been the key to our BOSS program. Together we have accomplished many things. The single soldiers of Headquarters and Headquarters Detachment and their noncommissioned officer support channel remodeled some living quarters utilizing the U-Do-It program. They installed wall-to-wall carpet and wallpaper in every room, new paint, a privacy fence, patio with a barbecue and a volleyball court. The day room has cable television, two video games, a foosball table and a bar. The single cadre members have periodic spraying for bugs. They will also put their hammers to work on a new deck off the day room shortly with many more improvements in the coordination phase.

What others have to say about you: Spc. Ragel is self-motivated and a has positive attitude. He has accomplished much in his short time in the military .

Environmental degree program available

Army Career and Alumni Program

Qualified Department of Defense military and civilian personnel who have been displaced because of base closings and realignments can now participate in a program offered by the Environmental Protection Agency's Hazardous Substance Research Centers Program in cooperation with DoD.

Participants can earn bachelor's or advanced degrees while working on research and technology transfer projects that address hazardous substance problems shared by DoD and other federal facilities.

Managing hazardous substances is an important environmental issue facing the country. Since 1980, more than 40,000 hazardous waste sites have been discovered, more than 1,000,000 underground storage tanks are estimated to be leaking, and more than 250,000 industrial and waste storage or treatment facilities are subject to permit requirements of the Resource Conservation and Recovery Act.

Recognizing these problems, Congress created the Environmental Education Opportunities Program of DoD to establish and support a multi-year HSRC program nicknamed R2D2 (Research and Reeducation for Displaced DoD).

R2D2 candidates must first gain admission to one of the HSRC universities and the academic program of choice, based upon their own credentials and university admission requirements. Once admitted to the university, they must apply to the relevant HSRC.

Those accepted into the R2D2 program will receive tuition reimbursement and financial support in the form of research or teaching assistantships. They may also serve a practicum or internship with industry or a regulatory agency. In addition, they will receive specialized training in, for example, environmental laws and regulations and OSHA hazardous site safety. Students will be expected to complete a course of study, generally culminating in an academic degree.

The R2D2 program began accepting students in January. For more information, contact Dr. Stan Grant at the Great Plains-Rocky Mountain HSRC, the national R2D2 coordinator; or contact Elsie Jackson at the Army Career and Alumni Program office at 545-7009.

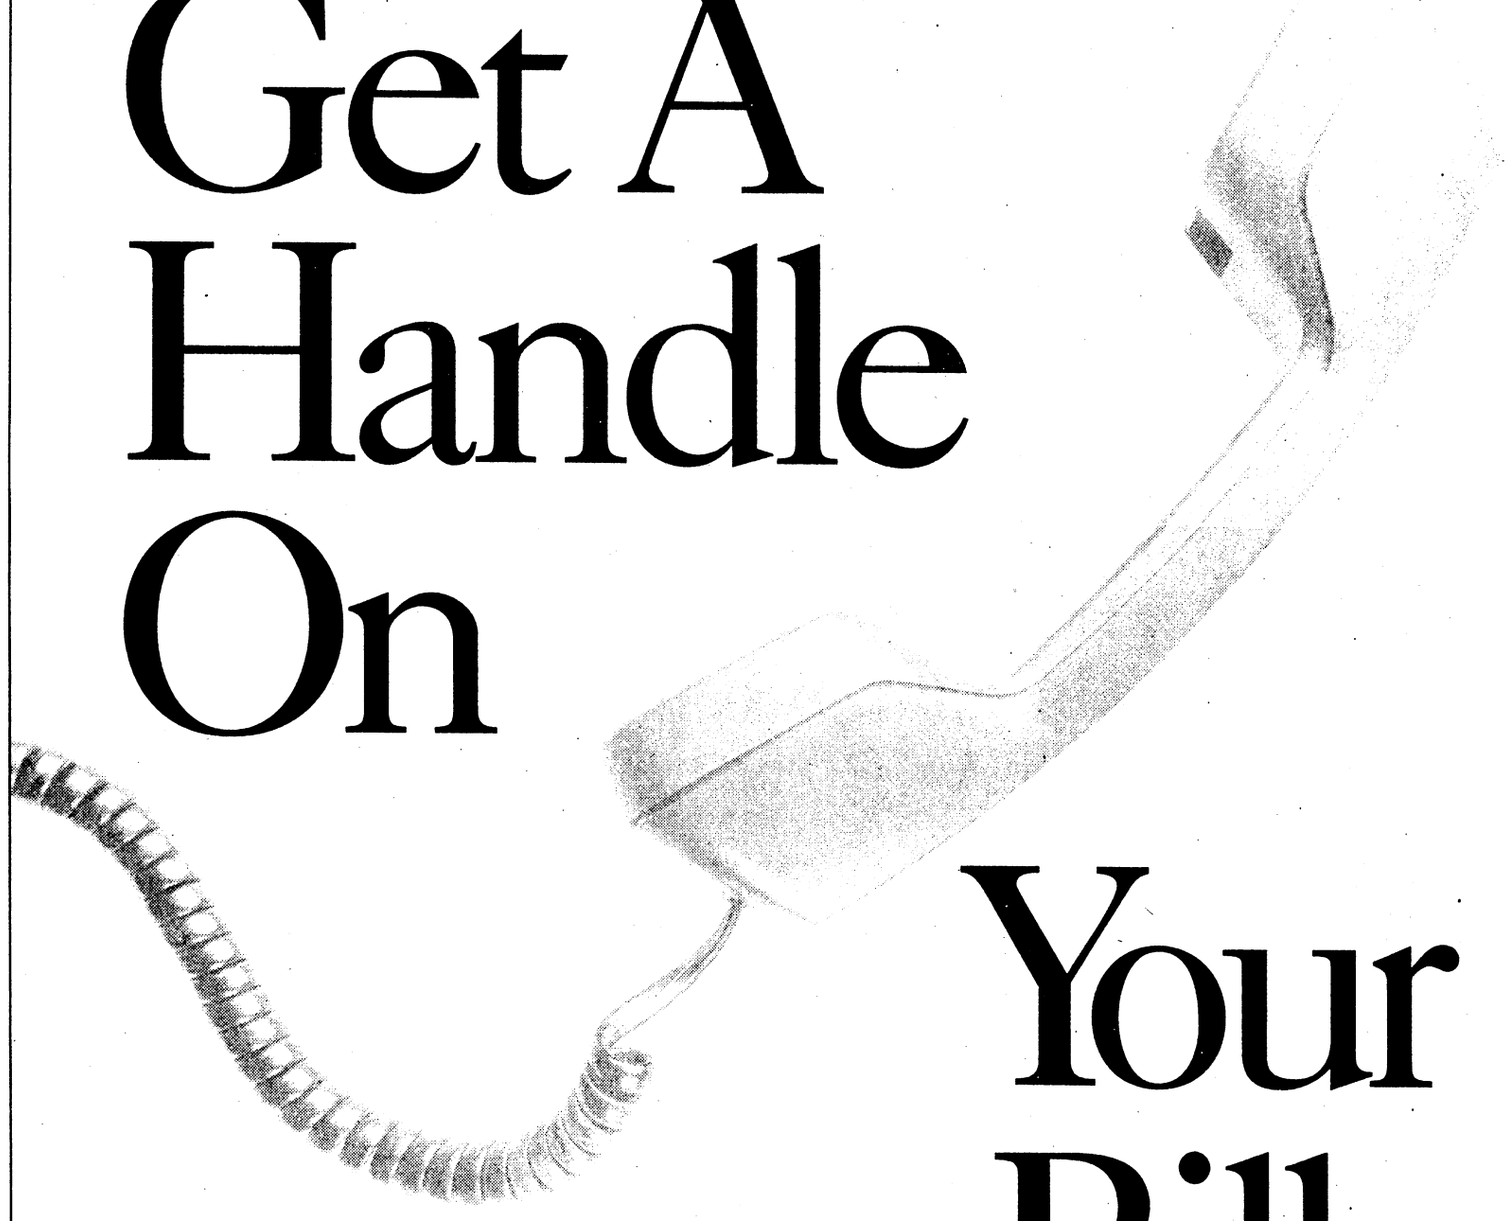
Safety concerns

In-line skating is increasingly popular but may also be dangerous, particularly if safety equipment isn't used. The following policy is designated to provide a safe environment for in-line skaters:

Post policy

In-line skating is allowed anywhere on the installation where the posted speed limit is under 25 mph, except on the following roads: 10th Division Road, Dixie Road, Sightseeing Road from Dixie to Sunshine Road, Sunshine Road, Lumpkin Road from Dixie to Custer Road, Custer Road from Benning to Eisenhower Exchange and Marne Road.

In addition, when using a facility or area normally used for other purposes, in-line skaters must give right of way to patrons using the facility for its intended purpose.



At a minimum, in-line skaters should wear a helmet, knee pads, elbow pads and reflective vest. Skaters will also not use headphones.

Other guidelines include: keeping to the right of the road with the flow of traffic, keeping in single file and obeying traffic signals, signs and devices including posted speed limits.

In-line skating is also not allowed from sundown to sunup.

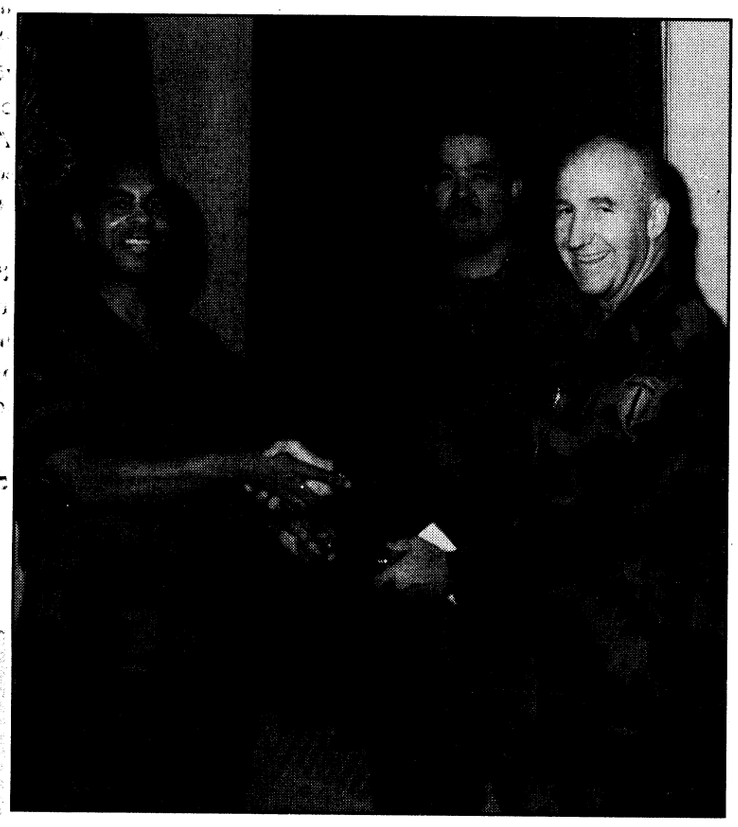
CB&T's New Bill Payer

No stamps. No envelopes. No slips of paper to enclose. Just a touch tone phone, a CB&T checking account and a VISA Check Card — the fastest, easiest and safest way to pay almost any bill.



Bill Payer works like this. When you sign up, you list the companies you want paid - utilities, mortgage holders, credit card companies, even individuals you pay on a regular basis. CB&T makes the arrangements and sends you a packet with easy-to-follow instructions telling you how to access the system and set up your payment schedule. Fixed payments like mortgage and car payments can be sent automatically each month. For other payments, you simply dial the number, listen and follow directions. It's totally secure, available 24 hours a day and only you can activate the service, so you're always in control.

Bill Payer is only the first of a full list of convenient electronic banking services CB&T will be making available to its customers very soon. So pick up the phone and call your nearest CB&T office for complete details. It's a great way to handle all your bill paying needs.

What were your reasons for joining civil service? I joined civil service because I wanted to get in a career field that would enable me to broaden my horizons.

Define your work ethic. I believe in doing what's right because eventually right will prevail.

What person has most influenced your career? My father was the most influential person in my career because he taught me how to get along with people without compromising my beliefs or principles. Also, Carl McDonald, my supervisor in the Directorate of Resources Management, was influential in my career because he was a professional, upright person who believed in everyone doing their job.

If you were your supervisor for a day, what improvements would you make? If I were supervisor for a day, I would make sure that all employees are treated the same and make sure the workload is distributed equally. I would afford team leadership that would enhance ideas, leading to desired results to our customers.

What are your career plans? My career plan is to achieve the highest level of employment afforded through civil service.

What others have to say: Ms. Bowers is a team employer. She focuses on the end product and the success of the division. She is a willing worker who diligently keeps chipping away at the monumental tasks at hand until they are manageable.

afap update

Directorate of Community Activities

As part of the ongoing commitment to improve the quality of life for the Total Army Family, recent Army Family Action Plan issues have been resolved by post officials.

The AFAP is the management tool used to implement issues and give policy guidance. It identifies concerns of the Army family, determines actions required and assigns responsibility to implement actions to resolve the issues.

The most recent AFAP symposium was conducted in April. Since that time, installation agencies have worked to resolve many of the issues addressed at the symposium.

Delegates attending the symposium addressed many concerns. Each week, those concerns and the measures taken to resolve those concerns will be presented.

Issue:

A skating rink would provide a needed recreational outlet for the total Army family.

Agency response:

• A contracted Department of the Army survey was completed in the early fall of 1994. The response numbers do not show a strong desire for a skating rink on post. Specifically, military spouses, choosing from a selection of 63 items in terms of preferences, ranked skating as number 47. The entire sample to include active duty, civilians and retirees ranked skating preferences as number 55 of 63 selections.

• As a matter of information, the parking area behind Meloy Hall, Building 6, is blocked off with safety cones over the weekend for roller and in-line skating.

• Apparently, much of the skating rink market has turned to in-line skating as the preferred alternative to your standard skate rink. The Riverwalk and other initiatives are addressing this need to a large degree.

Issue:

The Officers' Club is currently offering Sunday brunch to all ranks. Open the club to everyone one day per week for Family Night.

Agency response:

• Opening the Officers' Club to all ranks one evening a week for family night is not practical. There are too many conflicting social activities scheduled during the evening hours.

Issue:

Most of the post's leaders and workers are leaving with no one to replace them.

Agency response:

• Recruitment is ongoing for volunteer vacancies. To recruit potential volunteers, volunteer agencies must submit vacancies. All volunteer agencies are requested to submit vacancies on the Volunteer Agency Request Form, which can be obtained from the Family Unit Network Center. Once the request form is submitted, appropriate recruiting action can be taken.

• Requests for volunteers will be published through all available medial channels.

• The Volunteer Management Council meets on a regular basis to assess volunteer needs.

Issue:

A support group is needed to help single parents in transition to prepare for deployments. We have family support groups for married military families. Why not expand it to single parent families?

Agency response:

• It is true that single parents, as well as married families, must be prepared for separations. It is also true that family support groups provide an avenue of support for married families. They also provide the same support to single parents. Family support group membership is not limited only to family members of married soldiers. Membership can consist of retirees, single soldiers, fiancees, relatives, etc. (anyone interested in donating time and services in support of soldiers and families). If a family support group exists in your unit and you would like to see more involvement by single soldiers, inform the group of your concerns. Family support groups welcome the opportunity to include single soldiers in their activities. A wide variety of services are available to support groups to help ease the transition for both single and married soldiers as well as their family members.

Issue:

Hourly care is such a valuable service. Fort Benning needs to keep this program available.

Agency response:

• Child Development Services is currently operating the Tot Town facility until a contract with a new vendor can be negotiated. Other options for providing hourly care are also being explored.

ask the judge

Staff Judge Advocate's Office

Q: I ordered a knife and scissor set through the mail. The advertisement for the set came with my credit card statement and stated the scissors could cut through tin without damaging the blades. I used the scissors to cut a tin can, and they did not stay sharp. I ordered the set with my credit card, but my statement reported the knife and scissors set purchase and another purchase that I did not make. What can I do to get my money back from the set and from the false charge on my account?

A. When shopping by telephone or mail, you should know that certain Federal Laws nd Regulations protect your ights. The Federal Trade Commission Mail or Telephone Order Rule covers goods you order by mail, telephone, computer and facsimile machine. If you pay by credit card, you also get protection under the Fair Credit Billing Act.

When you use your credit card for purchases by phone, mail or in the store, you are protected by the FCBA. If you find a billing error on your monthly credit or charge card statement, you may dispute the charge and withhold payment on the disputed amount during the dispute period.

If you decide to dispute the charge, you must follow these steps. You still must pay for any part of the bill that is not disputed, including finance charges on the undisputed amount.

To be protected by the FCBA you must write to the creditor at the special address indicated on the monthly statement for "billing inquiries." Include your name, address and credit card number, and describe the billing error. Your letter must reach the creditor within 60 days after the first bill containing the error was mailed to you.

If you bought an unsatisfactory product, you also may dispute the charge for that product and withhold payment on the disputed amount during the dispute period. To take advantage of this protection regarding the quality of goods, you must: have bought the item in your home state or within 100 miles of your current billing address; have charged an amount in excess of $50; and first make a good faith effort to resolve the dispute with the seller.

There are certain exceptions to this protection. If you have problems such as these, first try to resolve your dispute with the company. If that doesn't work, contact the Better Business Bureau in your area or near the company. Call 324-0712 for the Columbus area BBB, or call your local post office and ask for the inspector-in-charge.

In your case, you are covered by the FCBA because the product you purchased was sold to you through your creditor. Therefore, the above process will work.

For more information, call the Legal Assistance Division, Building 5, at 545-3281 or 545-3282.

EMPLOYEE JETS TO CHINA

Lavonda Forbes attends U.S.-China Joint Conference on Women's Issues

By Libby Burtner
Special correspondent

Lavonda Forbes shows one of the Beijing newspapers she collected while on her visit to China's capital.

Photos by Libby Burtner

Lavonda Forbes was able to visit Beijing's Forbidden City during her recent visit to China to attend a women's issues conference.

When Lavonda Forbes, computer systems programmer for the Directorate of Information Management, first received her invitation to attend the U.S.-China Joint Conference on Women's Issues, she took a look at the cost and filed the invitation in the circular file. It just wasn't possible.

But the idea kept running around in her head. Wouldn't it be great to travel to China? Wouldn't it be wonderful to be part of this historic conference and meet women in China? She dreamed of the possibilities.

Starting in January of this year while most of us were making our usual resolutions, Forbes resolved to make this dream a reality. It was Beijing or bust!

Eight months later, she flew to San Francisco to catch her 12-hour flight to Beijing to start the trip of a lifetime, which included staying at a four-star hotel and eating at the Hard Rock Cafe.

Just how did she manage to get from Columbus to Beijing, China? Her invitation to attend the conference had been extended from the Citizen Ambassador Program of People to People international. Forbes explained this program was first formed in 1956 by President Dwight D.Eisenhower. Originally supervised by the State Department, it evolved into a nonpolitical, private-sector organization promoting workers to meet their counterparts from different countries. Forbes put up the money for the trip while People to People helped with paperwork such as securing a Chinese visa for her passport.

Forbes said she feels she was invited because she's worked on women's issues for years through the American Association of University Women. She continues that work as a representative for Fort Benning's Federal Women's Program.

Forbes had to choose a session focus from a field of 11 subjects ranging from sports to medicine. In order to meet her peers, Forbes, one of 500 women from the United States, chose "Women in the Workforce" as her focus subject.

At the conference, Chinese and American women alternated their presentations while interpreters helped get the messages across to everyone. Forbes said she especially enjoyed hearing how one Chinese woman, a boiler repair expert, faced and dealt with discrimination from her male co-workers. Although the men didn't like working with a woman, they did like the work she could do.

In addition to the presentations, site visits were planned to give each group of women a chance to visit factories, hospitals, schools or other institutions that related to their session topic. Forbes' session allowed her to visit the Beijing Institute of Technology. The students weren't in school yet, but Forbes and her fellow citizen ambassadors were able to talk to the computer science professors.

Forbes, a computer whiz, said she was amazed to discover that her Chinese counterparts do their programming in English. "It's hard enough in your own language," Forbes said. "I can't imagine doing it in a language other than your own." After the American women asked their questions, the Chinese professors had their turn.

They wanted to know if college students could change their majors. Forbes laughed as she recounted the story, saying she told them "all the time."

"Chinese students don't have this liberty. Although four out of five of the professors they talked to said they chose their own careers, this choice was based on testing that allowed them to enter those fields," she said. "If you don't do well on the test, you have to look at other careers. One of the professors reported that her father had chosen her career for her.

"If I got anything out of this conference, it was to appreciate the freedoms we have in this country," Forbes said. "I appreciate everything about America after being there."

She found the people she met to be warm, open and friendly. The young tour guide she had in her group spoke perfect English and loved Americans. A picture Forbes took of her teen-aged guide looks like a picture of any American teen: a grin from ear to ear and an oversized T-shirt sporting those most famous of American ambassadors, Mickey and Minnie Mouse!

Now what about that trip to the Hard Rock Cafe? There really is one in Beijing! Forbes reported the local cuisine was wonderful but asked, "Can you imagine Chinese food for eight days straight?" In order to give themselves a respite, she and some colleagues hopped in a cab and found the famous cafe, where they indulged in some good old American hamburgers and fries. There is also a five-story McDonald's in Beijing.

The Women's Issues Conference Forbes attended was the first of three, the next being the Nongovernmental Organizations Conference, the last being the fourth World Conference on Women where First Lady Hillary Rodham Clinton spoke. Forbes only attended the opening ceremonies for the Nongovernmental Organizations Conference. She said it was like the opening ceremonies for the Olympics, with performers of all kinds who had worked on their parts for over a year. Judging from the way her face lighted up when she talked about it, the ceremony was wonderful.

The trip opened Forbes' eyes to not only the international community but also to her desire to travel sooner rather than later. She had always planned to travel when she retired, but she said she doesn't want to wait that long. She wants to go while she has the energy.

Listening to all she accomplished on this eight-day conference, there doesn't seem to be any lack of energy on her part. Turning a dream into a reality, Forbes was part of history in China in 1995.

Not too bad for a trip that

Heritage month's activities continue

By Donna S. Budjenska
Special to The Bayonet©

For those who've wondered why Hispanic Heritage Month begins mid-month, here's the reason:

Five out of 24 Latin American countries celebrate their independence Sept. 15: Costa Rica, El Salvador, Guatemala, Honduras and Nicaragua. Mexico celebrates its independence Sept. 16; Chile, Sept. 18; and Belize, Sept. 21.

This bit of trivia came from Chaplain George Gonzalez, who presented a brief lecture on Latin and South American culture at Monday's Hispanic Heritage Show at the 30th Adjutant General Battalion auditorium.

Joining him at the program were more than a dozen dancers from Compania Tropical Latina, a troupe performing traditional dances from throughout Latin America and Spain.

Though the crowd was small, it was enthusiastic. Clapping and cheering for the dancers, attendees stayed after to partake of the spread of typical Latin American foods provided by 30th AG personnel.

The gathering was one of many activities organized to observe Hispanic Heritage Month. Luncheons, dance performances and other programs will continue through Oct. 15.

Fort Benning schools will observe Hispanic Heritage month also. Planned are displays, assemblies, fiestas, research projects, maracas-making and Spanish songs and games.

A partial list of activities, and whether they're open to the public or intended for the enjoyment of the individual unit, follows:

• Today, 9 a.m. to 6 p.m., School of the Americas Open House at the Officers' Club Supper Club Annex. Open to the public, the Open House features crafts, artwork and costumes from 18 countries;

• Saturday, Cena Tipica, sponsored by School of the Americas;

• Sept. 29, Hispanic pot luck, sponsored by 2nd Battalion, 58th Infantry Regiment;

• Oct. 5, Hispanic luncheon, sponsored by the 29th Inf. Regt. dining facility;

• Oct. 5, Hispanic luncheon, open to the public at a cost of $7.25 and sponsored by 2nd Bn., 18th Inf. Regt.;

• Oct. 6, 7 p.m., Hispanic dance and lessons, open to youth ages 6 to 12 at the Youth Service Center, Building 1056;

• Oct. 6, Hispanic lunch, sponsored by 3rd Bn., 75th Ranger Regt.;

Shaira Morales performs a traditional Cuban dance at Monday's Hispanic Heritage Show.

• Oct. 12, Hispanic lunch, sponsored by 36th Engineer Group dining facility;

• Oct. 12, Hispanic lunch, sponsored by Martin Army Community Hospital;

• Oct. 13, 11 a.m., Hispanic observance at Marshall Auditorium, sponsored by the 36th Eng. Grp.

Pregnancy PT

Soldiers maintain physical fitness while pregnant

By Lisa M. Hibbert
Bayonet staff writer

When a soldier gets pregnant, she is often viewed as a loss to her unit — she does modified physical training, she's not deployable — she does not always appear to be a contributing member of the unit.

Army commanders would like to see the soldier resume her original role as soon as possible — her job (if she is temporarily not working in it), her level of fitness and, of course, deployability.

The Army does place a heavy emphasis on being physically fit and combat ready for all soldiers, and even though a soldier is pregnant, she is still expected to remain fit.

But being pregnant itself should be motivation enough to get female soldiers exercising.

According to Maj. Joann E. Hollandsworth, chief, Community Health Nursing, Martin Army Community Hospital, research shows that exercise during pregnancy has a host of benefits, but a woman should consult her physician before beginning any physical training program while pregnant.

"Some of the benefits are: it relieves fatigue, gives an energy boost, helps with morning sickness, reduces constipation, lowers risk of hypertension, helps to change self-image, improves self-esteem and self-confidence, has been proven to decrease labor pains, shorten labor and usually decreases hospital stay," Hollandsworth said.

The benefits for the Army are that exercise increases postpartum fitness, lowers health costs and helps to transition the soldier back to a combat-ready level more quickly.

Soldiers should work out by doing low- or non-impact aerobic activity on a regular basis on a shock-absorbent surface, said Sgt. Paula LeBov, master fitness trainer instructor, U.S. Army Physical Fitness School.

"It important to do a five- to seven-minute warm up and cool down, drink plenty of water and increase calorie requirements to meet energy requirements," LeBov said. "Also, the heart rate should be monitored, and perceived exertion — how hard the soldier feels she is working — should also be measured."

LeBov and Hollandsworth talked about the benefits of water aerobics. Water's buoyancy allows the woman to move freely, without the restraints that would normally be on her if she were on land.

The only problem with this is that it's hard to tell when the body begins to sweat and overheat, said Hollandsworth.

As pregnancy advances, the types of exercises that a woman can do will change.

"While modified push-ups and sit-ups (crunches) can be done in the first trimester, they cannot be done later," Hollandsworth said.

For example, sit-ups cannot be done past the fourth month because when a woman lies on her back, all of the weight she is carrying up front will shift onto her bladder and a major vein — stopping the flow of blood to the brain.

One thing that women should definitely watch out for when exercising is overheating.

"While the mother's body can sweat, the baby has no type of cooling system and can become overheated," Hollandsworth said.

To date, there is no Armywide program that is recommended for pregnant soldiers to follow. However, programs are being conducted at Fort Bliss, Texas; Fort Lee, Va.; Fort Bragg, N.C.; and in Korea. One is even being tested at Fort Benning, at the 36th Engineer Group.

"One of the benefits of working out with other pregnant soldiers is you get a built-in support system," said Hollandsworth, who is overseeing this program. "Since many of the soldiers are far away from home, it is good for them to be around other women who can identify with what they are going through."

ON POST

School board meeting —The next meeting of the Fort Benning Schools' school board will be Monday at 1 p.m. in the Fort Benning Schools administrative building conference room, 201 Custer Road, Building 2670. Copies of the agenda will be in the schools after noon, today.

If you wish to attend this meeting, call Rhonda Mobley at 545-2500.

Learning center — The Army Learning Center, located in Building 2611, Soldiers' Plaza, offers a wide variety of courses that are free and self-paced. Ability to type or knowledge of computers is not required. Topics include science, mathematics, adult literacy, test preparation, General Equivalency Diploma, management, computers and data processing and personal computer tutorials.

A dial-up capability allows users to remotely access the cyber-based instructional system from work or home terminals 24 hours a day, seven days a week. An IBM-compatible terminal with a graphics card, a modem and access disk are needed. The free access disk can be obtained at the Learning Center. You will need to bring a blank replacement disk with you.

All active duty, retired military, Army and Air Force Exchange Service, nonappropriated fund, Reserves and National Guard personnel are authorized to use the Army Learning Center. The telephone number is 545-1436; the hours of operation are Monday through Friday, 7 a.m. to noon and 1 to 4 p.m.

Blood pressure screening — The community health nurses are offering blood pressure screening at the Post Exchange at the Main Mall from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. today, Oct. 27, Nov. 17 and Dec. 15.

For more information, call Epy Melendez at Community Health Nursing at 545-4041.

Bodybuilding entertainment — The Sports Branch is seeking volunteer entertainers to present a 15- to 20-minute show during intermission at the 1995 Fort Benning Open Bodybuilding Championships Oct. 14.

This year's event will be open to civilians as well. Spectatorship is expected to increase to more than 500 with more than 40 competitors.

If you would like to participate, call Christopher Winterman at 544-1747 or Leon Johnson at 685-9555. No preferences for a certain type of entertainment have been established. References and screening may be requested.

Explorer Scout Program — Law Enforcement Post 988, sponsored by the Military Police Activity, is looking for more members. If you know of a boy or girl interested in a law enforcement career or who just wants to learn more about law enforcement, call Staff Sgt. Donnie Lucas at 545-1146. This program is open to anyone on or off post. Adult assistant leaders are welcome.

Boy Scouts of America — The Boy Scouts of America organization at Fort Benning needs a senior grade volunteer to act as district commissioner. The commissioner helps coordinate training and events for all the Boy Scouts and Cub Scouts on Fort Benning.

The position does require some scouting experience, but desire to serve is just as important. A commissioner is needed within the next few weeks.

Call Bill Patterson at 545-1515 for more information.

Watch found — A watch was found in the east parking lot of Infantry Hall, Building 4.

For more information, call Spc. Carl Box at 545-2218 or come by Room 111 in Infantry Hall.

Girl Scouts — Girls 6 to 17 years old can still register for Girl Scouts. Anyone who registers before Sept. 29 can receive the Early Bird patch. Cost of registration is $6.

Volunteers are needed and welcomed for several positions. For more information, call Barbara Singleton at 689-7627.

AA — The Fort Benning Alcoholics Anonymous group meets every Monday, Thursday and Saturday at 7 p.m. in the basement of the Directorate of Community Activities, Building 241.

Professional development — Warrant officers and bosses may attend an officer professional development brief on the officer evaluation report at the Officers' Club Oct. 4, noon to 1 p.m.

For more information, call Chief Warrant Officer 3 Ted Walker at 689-4949 or Warrant Officer 1 Lewis Wilson at 545-1113 or 545-5637.

Car wash — Warrant officers and family members are having a car wash Saturday from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. at Advance Auto Parts, located on Exit 3, off Interstate 185, across from the Krystal.

For more information, call Chief Warrant Officer 3 Ted Walker at 689-4949 or Warrant Officer 1 Lewis Wilson at 545-1113 or 545-5637.

Proceeds will go to the Forever Forward Warrant Officer Chapter.

OFF POST

Autism support group — The Autism Support Group will have its next meeting Tuesday, 6:30 p.m., at Epworth United Methodist Church, 2400 Devonshire Drive, Columbus. Baby-sitting is provided.

For more information, call Art Clark, 568-3038; Martha Conklin, 576-4256; or Kim Owens, 324-6112.

ESL classes — Do you need English as a Second Language? Come to MCD Tillinghurst High School at the corner of Buena Vista and Morris Roads. The classes are free and run throughout the year on Tuesday and Thursday nights from 6 to 9 p.m.

Students are placed in classes according to their level of need. There are competent teachers and 10 computers to help with vocabulary, pronunciation, spelling, grammar and everyday conversation.

Come register and attend class any Tuesday or Thursday night. For more information, call Myrtle Chalkley, 545-4539.

PTSA meeting — W.H. Spencer High School Parent-Teacher-Student Association will have a meeting Oct. 10, 7 p.m., in the school auditorium. Membership cards will be available from 6:30 to 7 p.m. Call Ruth Cole at 685-9783 or Michelle Terry at 682-0377 for more information.

Vet Treatment Facility offers telephone appointment line

Veterinary Treatment Facility

The Veterinary Treatment Facility provides outpatient services to privately owned animals of active and retired military and their family members.

Services include those required to effectively prevent and control infectious animal diseases. These services include vaccinations, heartworm and feline leukemia tests, post registration, Columbus city permits, veterinary health and foreign travel certificates, pet adoption and stray impoundment.

For a surrender fee and when kennel space allows, unwanted pets are accepted for adoption. Euthanasia and disposal services are also available.

Mondays beginning at 8 a.m., telephone calls will be accepted to schedule appointments for the following work week. Professional services are provided by appointment only.

Sick call appointments for health certificates and treatment of contagious diseases are made Monday mornings for that same Thursday. Animals requiring extensive medical care, hospitalization or after-duty emergency care will be referred to a civilian veterinary hospital.

New extended hours should help meet the veterinary needs for your pet. The new hours are: Monday, Tuesday, Thursday and Friday — 8 to 11:30 a.m. and noon to 3 p.m.; Wednesday — 8 to 11:30 a.m. Closed the last working day of the month for inventory.

OWC calls for donation requests

Officers' Wives' Club

The Officers' Wives' Club is making plans for charitable contributions.

Over the years, the OWC has given out scholarships and donations to many private, non-profit organizations. To receive a donation, requests should be submitted to and approved by the OWC board of directors.

This year, the majority of the welfare funds will be disbursed during the organization's November and April board of directors' meetings. Requests for November disbursement must be received no later than Nov. 1, and the April deadline is April 1.

Organizations submitting requests should include the following information: amount of money requested; total amount of money needed; specific purpose of money requested; fund-raising efforts; other organizations from which money is being requested; number of military members affected; name and telephone number of the point of contact.

Submit requests to: Officers' Wives' Club of Fort Benning, P.O. Box 51978, Fort Benning, Ga. 31995-1978.

For more information, call Steffani Dyer at 685-1364.

Mass casualty

trains MPs, MACH for real-life tragedies

By Brian R. Voller
Bayonet staff writer

Sixty basic training soldiers covered with blood, screaming in agony with limbs severed and open head wounds. Six terrorists who had taken control of a Fort Benning compound and are ready to kill on a moment's notice. The Military Police's Special Reaction Team dressed in black, moving in to take out the terrorists.

These were all elements of a mass casualty exercise conducted by Martin Army Community Hospital and the SRT Sept. 14 at the hospital and Harmony Church.

The exercise scenario involved a hostage situation with a group of terrorists attacking a training barracks. MPs were called out to the site where they established a perimeter and requested SRT assistance.

The scene involved six terrorists and an unknown number of hostages. After negotiations were attempted, the decision was made to send in the SRT.

"The SRT is a special reaction team that is called when more than normal MP response is needed," said Capt. Michael C. Nason, assistant law enforcement operations officer. "The team is trained in conjunction with MP training at Fort McClellan, Ala."

The SRT began its portion of the exercise with a briefing in which it established its plan for assaulting the barracks where the hostages were being held.

After the briefing, the team moved out to a position to seize the barracks and attack the terrorist. Moving in a file formation, the first SRT member forced his way through a window, and the rest of the SRT members followed.

Within minutes, the SRT regained the barracks and seized the terrorists. The only casualty was a hostage who was killed by one of the terrorists. The other hostage was rescued.

"The SRT portion of the training went very well for us," Naser said. "After each exercise, we conducted an after-action review to evaluate the SRT performance and to fix things that went wrong."

After the MPs finished their training portion, MACH began its section of the training with the mass casualty evacuation.

"We do training of this kind to test our emergency preparedness plan," said 1st Lt. Samantha Hinchman, MACH public affairs officer. "There is an emergency preparedness plan for all of Fort Benning. The mass casualty exercise helps us prepare for an actual emergency."

Col. Gerald M. Cross, medical corps officer and commander of MACH, said the hospital needs to be prepared for anything because mass casualty situations can arise at any time on a military installation.

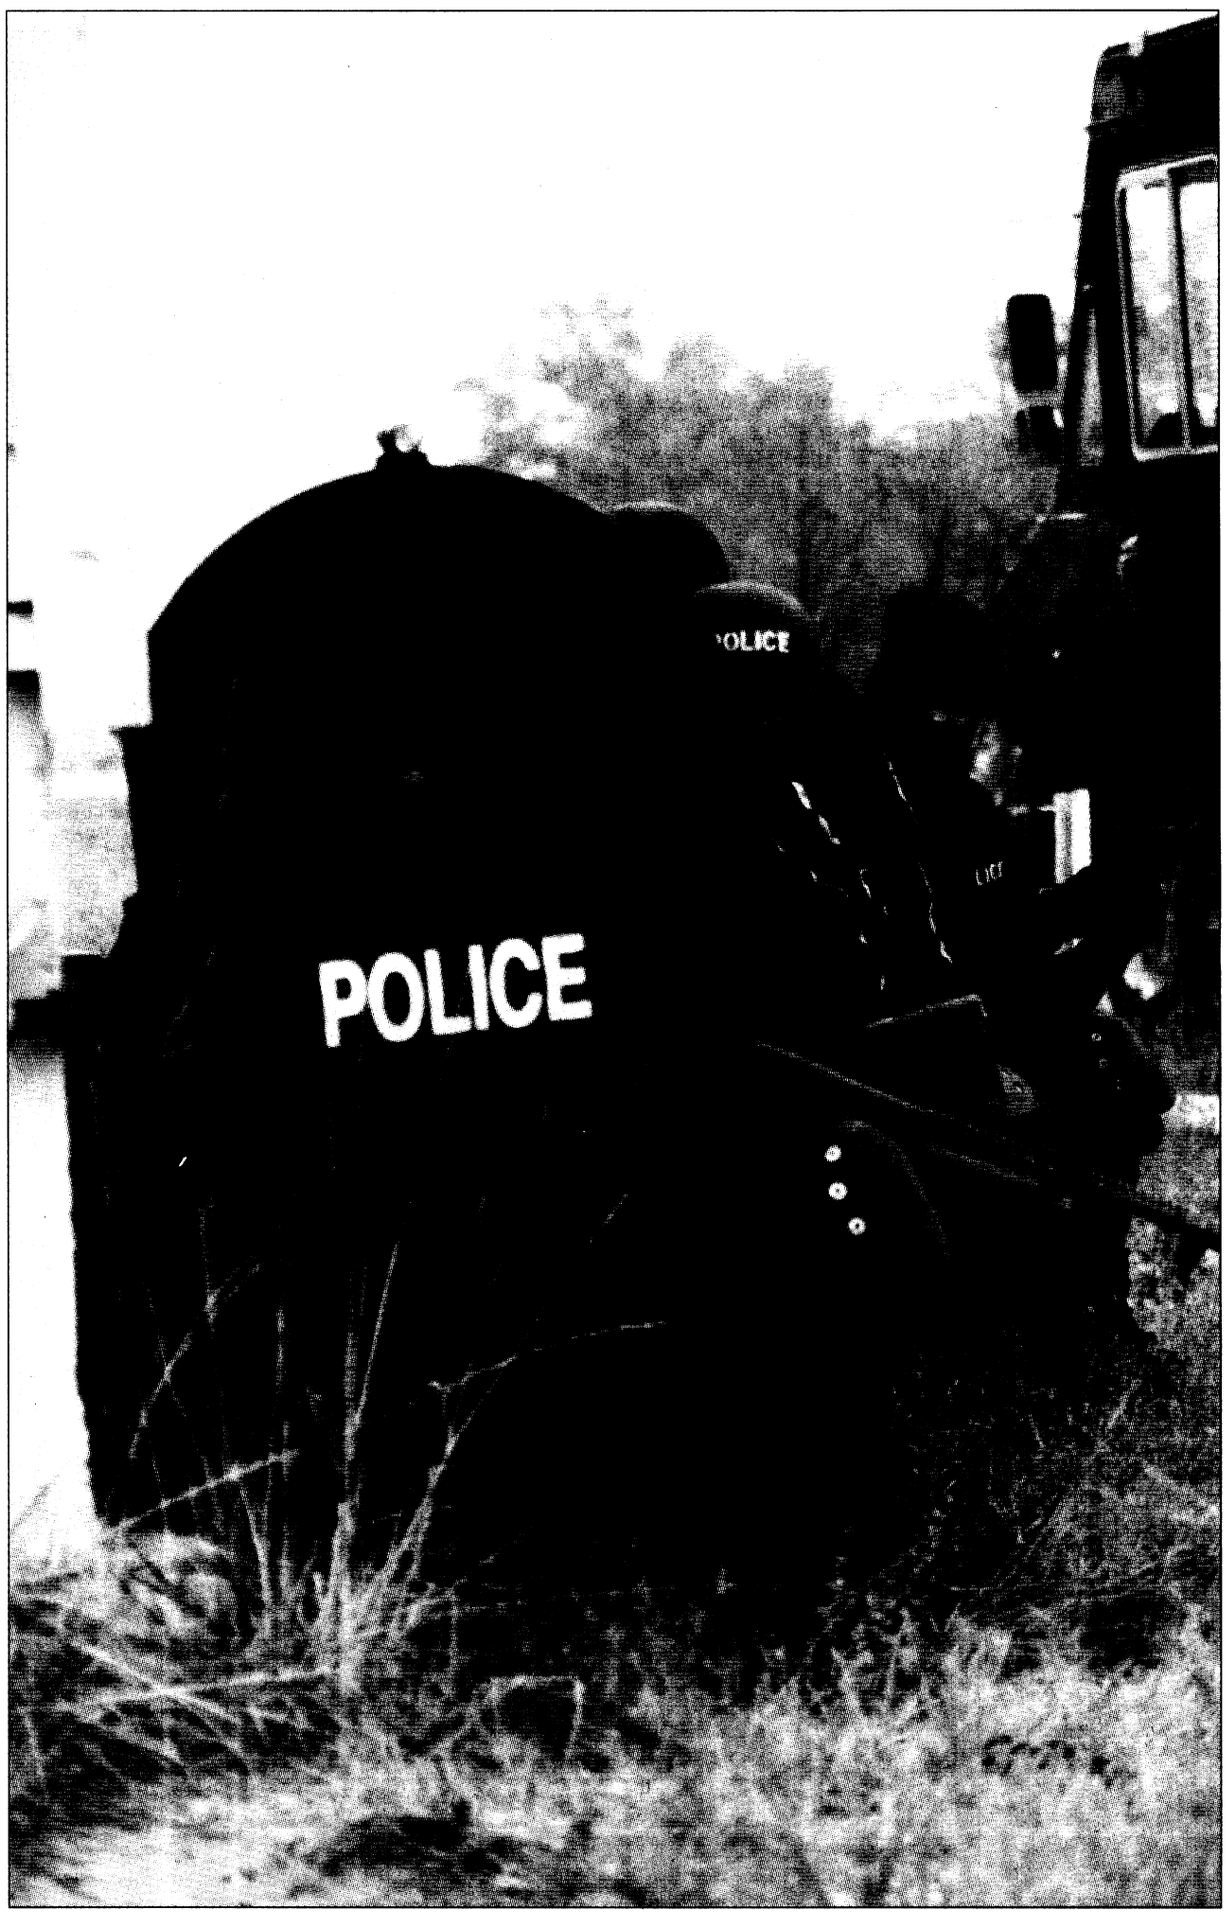
"On a military post like Fort Benning, it is essential to be prepared for an emergency like this," said Cross. "We have to maintain a state of readiness perhaps even higher than civilian hospitals do."

The hospital's scenario involved 60 casualties who were wounded during an explosion and after the terrorists grew restless and began shooting.

Basic training soldiers from the 30th Adjutant General (Reception) Battalion were brought in to perform the role of the casualties.

Teams from the Emergency Medical Service and Fire Department were called to respond to the mass casualty scenario. When they arrived on the scene, EMS personnel evaluated the casualties and prepared them for mass evacuation from the hostage sight.

Casualties were judged by the extent of their injuries and then placed on the proper modes of transportation. Helicopters, from the 498th Medical Company (Air Ambulance), and ambulances from Fort Bennings' EMS, Columbus' EMS, MEDLIFE and LIFESTAR were all utilized to rush the casualties to the emergency room. The Columbus Medical Center also played a role, receiving eight simulated patients.



Along with EMS and hospital training of the mass casualty exercise, the SRT and public affairs scenarios were added to the training.

"We were trying to expand the training to more of the outside agencies that would be involved in a mass casualty situation," Hinchman said. "The more realistic we make the training, the better results we get when an event actually occurs."

An after-action report was conducted by the hospital as well to evaluate the positive and negative findings of the exercise.

Lt. Col. David L. Maness, deputy commander for clinical services, said the exercise was successful and necessary to improve the hospital.

"It keeps the hospital ready, and it gets people thinking about the necessary steps that need to be taken to run an effective hospital," Maness said. "The training provides us with a real-world scenario for us to plan and judge by and respond to those emergency situations."

The Special Reaction Team scans an area before overtaking a simulated terrorist stronghold.

An SRT member guards one of the captured terrorists.

Both the SRT training and the casualty evacuation training were designed to be as realistic as possible.

Rosh Hashana marks time of remembrance

By Phillip F. Wright
75th Ranger Regiment

If someone asked you if you knew what the High Holy Days were, what would you say? Most people have heard of Rosh Hashanah and Yom Kippur. These are the two most important days in the Jewish calendar.

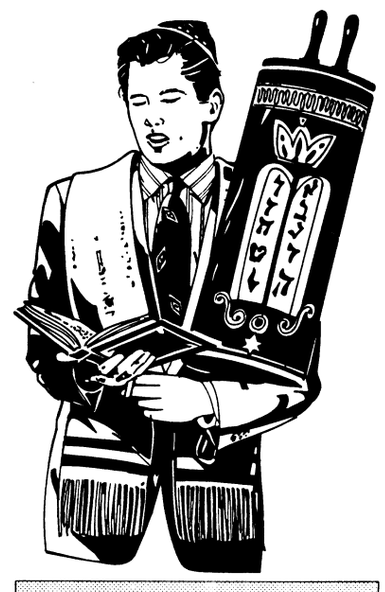
The more we know about various cultures and religions, the more we can understand about those who serve next to us. This is true if we are not familiar with some different beliefs and practices of those we work with or our neighbors. Rosh Hashanah is the topic of this religious information article.

Rosh Hashanah is Hebrew for beginning of the year, also known as the Jewish New Year. It is celebrated on the first and second days of the Jewish month of Tishri (falling in September or October) by Orthodox and Conservative Jews outside Israel. The Reform and Israeli Jews celebrate on the first day alone. This observance begins the 10 Penitential Days, ending with Yom Kippur. Yom Kippur is the most solemn day of the Jewish calendar. This period is a celebration of the beginning of the New Year and an intense striving to atone for the mistakes of the past year.

The Bible mentions Rosh Hashanah only as a day of remembrance and of the sounding of the ram's horn. These two characteristics of the day, interwoven with the theme of the proclamation of God's kingship, became the major components of the New Year's observance in later Judaism. These two aspects of the faith have an emphasis in the liturgy by the repetition of verses of remembrance. These are the verses that speak of the sovereignty of God and the verses that mention the ram's horn.

These two thoughts represent two different aspects in Jewish life. The first is the representation of the sense of continuing creation and development of the world. This aspect is one emphasized on this anniversary of creation. The Jewish people believe that good and evil actions greatly influence the future. Since God is sovereign, the people celebrate the fact that God remembers. The authors of the scriptures accomplish this through recalling the meritorious acts of the Hebrew patriarchs Abraham, Isaac and Jacob and emulating their holiness as a path to redemption.

Indeed, the most prominent scriptural passage in the Rosh Hashanah liturgy is that of the binding of Isaac, which forms the portion from the Torah designated for the reading on that day. This passage leads into the theme of the ram's horn. In the synagogue, the shofar sounds, a wind instrument made from a ram's horn. The ram's horn represents the horn of the animal sacrificed in Isaac's stead.



reflections

Early peoples often made noise at the New Year to drive away demons. The Jewish people took this pagan practice and turned it into the meaningful prefiguring of the moment when God would come and destroy the evil in the world. The sound of the ram's horn would also illustrate the coming of God with the whirlwinds. In the sovereignty verses, this is the moment that God will be king over all the Earth, just as he is now king over those who accept him in a renewal of commitment on Rosh Hashanah.

Whether you are Jewish or not, the idea of making a new commitment to God is a great illustration of your faith in God's faithfulness to his people. May you experience his peace as you seek his leading for your life.

Jewish holy days represent days of awe

By Chana Timoner

reflections

The High Holy Days, properly called the "Days of Awe" in Hebrew, are fast approaching. They consist of two days of Rosh Hashanah (Head of the Year), an 11-day period of sincere introspection, and culminate in Yom Kippur, the Day of Atonement. This year, the first evening service for Rosh Hashanah is Sunday. Unlike the new year for most cultures, the themes for High Holy Days are repentance, judgment and atonement.

This period is a time for each Jew to look seriously into his or her own heart to see what he or she might have done better in the past year and what could be done better in the coming year. It is always a difficult task to try to look into one's own forest to discern the diseased trees. We need to become cognizant of the ways that we have failed — failed others, failed God and failed ourselves.

This introspection is meant to lead from remorse for the harm we have done to attempts at restitution when possible and to turning away from our past selves to better selves who will act differently in the coming year. We are meant to renew ourselves, not just to make empty resolutions that we will never keep. Not the same old self one year older and less wise.

This process of change is a difficult one, hence the rabbis began it well in advance of Yom Kippur so as to leave plenty of time to accomplish it.

During the month of Elul, which began about three weeks ago, we begin to examine our lives and our relationships. The Rosh Hashanah comes with its blast of the shofar (ram's horn) meant to awaken our slumbering soul to the passage of time and to not only what we have done but, more importantly, to what we could do with our lives.

The new year gives us a chance to renew our individual covenants with God, with the Jewish people and with our dear ones.

All this preparation is aimed toward the nadir of this time period, Yom Kippur. That is the day on which we almost ceaselessly pray for forgiveness of our transgressions, renewal of our souls and the bond with the Holy One.

The tradition uses the image of a contest — one of life and death — for the Yom Kippur liturgy. That is, all human beings will be judged as to "who shall live and who shall die" in the coming year. Some see this imagery as symbolic; the more traditional see it as literal. In any case, these images confront us with our mortality and warn us that the time for (teshuvah) repentance is now.

This process of repentance will hopefully culminate in forgiveness — our forgiving those who have hurt us, others forgiving us and, finally, God forgiving us. It is literally the process of atoning for our sins that allows us to become at one with God and the rest of humanity.

Assumptions about God blur spiritual vision

By Timothy S. Mallard
2nd Battalion, 18th Infantry Regiment

reflections

Vision is such a critical part of our physical abilities and such a wonderful gift. What we see directs where we go, whom we avoid or move toward, what we eat and what we read. Vision can change, requiring us to wear glasses, or it can be lost permanently, requiring us to rely on our other senses.

We can have vision without our eyes, however — a vision of spirit, which comes through a relationship with God. Like physical sight, this vision also can become blurred and may need new focus.

I remember a woman in my former church who suffered from such fuzzy spiritual vision. No seat was acceptable except the one in which she sat. No hymn was beautiful except the one she helped the organist choose. No sin was forgivable except the one she chose to forgive.

As a young pastor trying to get our congregation going, I asked everyone to change places in the pews one Sunday morning; all did with some fun, except this woman, who sulked as she walked to her new seat. I remember asking the organist to pick up the pace on a particular hymn and receiving this woman's icy stare who liked this hymn to be played more slowly. I remember the thundering silence this woman sent my way after I inadvertently forgot to include her home on my rounds of visitation and how she refused to come to church for several months.

I had no problem forgiving this woman for any of these shortcomings, for Christ continually forgives me of my own. Yet when I tried to tell her my thoughts, she never spoke to me again.

You see, her problem was that she confused what she saw of God with God. The two are not necessarily the same. We often, especially as we become more involved in church and get into a routine, assume that our vision of God is who God is. Yet to make such an assumption is to suffer a stigmatism in our spiritual vision and to risk not seeing God in all his glory.

In the Old Testament, we read that Jeremiah stood at the doors of the Temple and entreated the priests and people: "Do not trust in deceptive words and say, 'This is the temple of the Lord, the temple of the Lord, the temple of the Lord.'" (Jer. 7:4 NAS) You see, the people had become so used to their religious routine they became comfortable in their vision of God and assumed the way they knew God was all there was to know. Jeremiah was attempting to help these people see that their vision of God was incomplete.

God is so much greater than most of us are willing to admit. Like the blind men on the Jericho road (Matt. 20:29-34), we all are spiritually blind and often don't realize that God is right there in our lives wishing to be seen.

Be forewarned that God forces no one to do anything; he will not make you see him. He may wait patiently for you to realize that you are blind and ask for sight, but he will not, without your faith, make you see that he is always there or that there is more of him to see than you can possibly take in even in your whole lifetime.

We, like those blind beggars, must first recognize our need for spiritual sight and God's ability and willingness to give us that vision.

We must also realize, however, that the gift of spiritual vision is not simply for our benefit. God knows that those truly blind to him who are made to see are so grateful that their sight becomes a testimony to God's power and a call to discipleship.

The beggars did not sit back down in the dirt once they saw; they recognized who it was that healed them, got up and followed our Lord down the road. Doubtless, everywhere they went they shared their story.

Perhaps that's where my former church member went wrong; maybe she forgot how precious her spiritual sight was and thus lost her ability to see.

My prayer is that we understand our blindness, recognize that only God can help us see him and tell others how he has helped us to see.

Consistent training renews body and faith

By Robert W. Thompson
Family Life Center

Practice might not make perfect, but it allows us opportunities to progress.

reflections

What a pain. The diagnostic physical training test at the start of my advanced course. I was out of shape, no mistake about it! I had allowed the overseas shorttimer's blahs to rob my motivation. A long permanent change of station move and leave during Christmas didn't help any, either.

The two-mile run was especially rough. After the first mile, I felt just as tired as I normally do when I finish two. The second one was torture — heart hammering, lungs heaving, legs listlessly swapping the lead. Weeks without exercise took their toll.

Fall is often a time of spiritual renewal and revival in many faiths. Jewish persons observe Rosh Hashanah, Muslims celebrate Ramadan. At Fort Benning, both the Catholic and Protestant communities have sponsored programs to revitalize their groups. A statement from Scripture seems fitting in this atmosphere: "Let us run with perseverance the race that is set before us (Hebrews 12:1).

My road back to good physical shape during my advanced course is the same kind of road we travel in our spiritual journey. In both cases, grunting and groaning are good for something. The statement from Hebrews prods us to view our journey as spiritual PT.

PT brings results slowly, doesn't it? It's gradual. We cannot exercise hard one day and expect to be stronger the next. A hard workout brings sore muscles the next day. It feels as if PT hurts us rather than helps.

Spiritual results develop slowly, too. Results don't pop into our hearts and souls full-grown. That's why Scriptures often refer to spiritual progress as "fruit." Producing fruit takes time.

PT results also require repetition. In order for our hearts, lungs and muscles to get stronger, we must perform basic body movements over and over. Running is an obvious example. How many of you who run or jog regularly ever feel bored with it? The repeated action of running (and pushups and situps, for that matter!) bores a lot of us, especially in our present culture of action and adventure.

Spiritual results require repetition, too. If I am working to improve my anger or self-control, for instance, how will I know I'm improving unless I have to face my anger or a chance to control myself? Practice might not make perfect, but it allows us opportunities to progress.

PT is also painful. Especially vigorous PT. If I had kept up with PT overseas, that diagnostic test would not have hurt as much. But there are no shortcuts in PT. Within reasonable limits, the hurting helps. No pain, no gain.

When in your life has a tough time made you strong inside? Tough times tend to do one of two things to us: make us better or make us bitter. The difference depends on what we want to gain from the tough time.

After my painfully poor showing in my diagnostic PT test at advanced course, I did PT regularly and vigorously. My effort paid off when I took the test "for record."

This fall while many faiths remember and renew, "let us run with perseverance the race that is set before us." The results are gradual, sometimes boring, too often painful, but we become stronger in the process. Grunting and groaning give us growing.

For as the writer of Hebrews stated, "Lift up your tired hands, then, and strengthen your trembling knees! Keep walking on straight paths, so that the lame foot may not be disabled, but instead be healed" (Hebrews 12:12-13).

Survival course — A Rosh Hashanah and High Holy Days Survival workshop will be conducted Sunday at 9:45 a.m. at the Regimental Chapel, Sand Hill.

All are welcome to attend; the course is designed for you if you don't know whether to stand or sit; what the shofar (ram's horn) means; what all those Hebrew prayers are about; what page to be on in the prayer book; why all those prayers have to be in Hebrew; if attending Sabbath is enough; why is it so boring and why do we bother?

Refreshments will be served. For more information, call Rabbi Chana Timoner at 545-5378.

CCD classes — The Catholic Sunday School Confraternity of Christian Doctrine program is conducted Sundays at 10:10 a.m. in Dexter School. Classes are conducted for preschool children through senior high.

Registration is at the Main Post Catholic Chapel.

Citizen soldiers shoot it out

By Melanie K. Patterson
314th Public Affairs Detachment

The Skill At Arms Challenge, scheduled to be an annual event, took place for the first time this year at Fort Benning. The U.S. Army Reserve Small Arms Training Team from Fort McClellan, Ala., (which will beofficially activated Oct. 16) hosted SAAC '95.

Master Sgt. Jerry Montgomery, Operations Sergeant for the SATT, explained the purpose of the Skill-At-Arms Challenge.

"We train Army Reserve soldiers from other units to instruct small-arms training," he said. "Then they go back to their home units and pass on the instruction."

The long-term goal is to improve the small-arms training programs in the units and, by doing that, to improve the shooting skills of Reserve soldiers.

Soldiers from all 48 continental states and Puerto Rico, representing every Regional Support Command and the 65th Army Reserve Command, participated in SAAC '95, conducted from Sept. 9 to Sunday. The first three days consisted primarily of classroom training and simulated range operations, "a condensed version of the Battle Focused Instructor Course, using marksmanship as the subject matter material." The following four days the soldiers were on the ranges, practicing what they learned in the classroom.

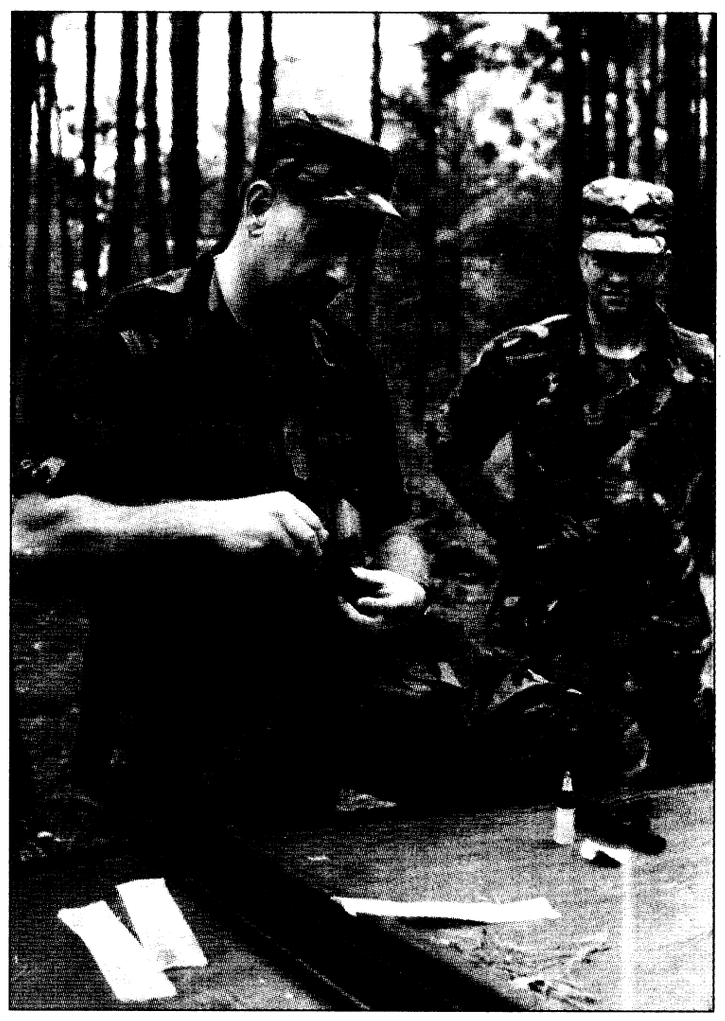
All participants in SAAC '95 were Army Reservists. Master Sgt. Valerie J. Atkins, non-commissioned officer in charge of instruction for SAAC '95, coordinated the activities of 56 instructors, including 12 instructors from the team, 37 from the international and service weapons teams and seven from the 65th ARCOM in Puerto Rico. The 245 student instructors were reservists chosen by their individual units to participate for annual training.

One issue these soldiers were taught to take back to their units was the importance of soldier survivability. A poster seen throughout post states, "Consider each rifle loaded. Never trust memory." Another poster, with rows of crosses representing soldiers' tombstones, reads, "Let no man's soul cry out 'Had I the proper training ....'"

In the classes the instructors asked, "Who is responsible for safety?" In unison, the students responded, "Everyone!"

After six days of being drilled with these basic lessons in the classroom and on the range, the student instructors had a chance to test what they learned.

Each primary instructor chose the top student instructor to advance to the next level in a selection process for overall top instructor. The student gave two 15- to 20-minute lessons from the M-16 or M-9 course of instruction. The first lesson was given to other student instructors with primary instructors from another class evaluating. The second lesson was presented to a panel of eight senior instructors serving as the students and evaluators.



Awards were given to the top student instructors — the Army Commendation Medal for the first-place winner, the Army Achievement Medal for the second-place winner and Letters of Commendation for the soldiers who place third through 24th.

Also, excellence-in-competition matches were scheduled for Saturday. This event was conducted in accordance with Army Regulation 350-6, Armywide Small Arms Competitive Marksmanship, and provided an opportunity for soldiers to earn points toward permanent Army marksmanship awards (died rifleman and distinguished pistol shot).

When the instruction and practice on the range ended, when the awards presented and the Army reservists at their home units, SAAC '95 was officially over and the real test began: training the reservists who did not participate in the exercise. Will this operation be a success? Next year's qualification will tell.

314th Public Affairs Detachment

The porch was almost deserted when Sgt. 1st Class Ruby E. Fox sat on the wooden floor, crossed one leg over the other and leaned against the railing as she sipped lukewarm water out of a foam cup. Several people walked over to Fox to talk when they were on break. Her smile turned no one away. It suggested she had all the time in the world.

Fox is one of the senior instructors at the Skills At Arms Challenge at Fort Benning. She was chosen to participate in this operation because she had earned a reputation for being one of the U.S. Army Reserve's finest marksmen. She proved this by becoming an Olympic Silver Medalist in 1984 in the Ladies-Sport Pistol event, being on the U.S. Olympic Team in 1988 and 1992, winning a Gold Medal in the Pan American Games in 1987 and winning the National Women's Championship 14 times.

Several things have contributed to Fox's accomplishments. She receives support from her husband and from the all reserve pistol team, where "no one on the team would let me fail" she said. Fox's attitude also affects her shooting career, as well as her impact as an instructor and a role model. As an instructor, she believes that her job is to motivate.

"There are no minimum requirements," she said.

"There are maximum requirements. We give 100 percent to our instruction and expect the same."

Staying motivated is also a big part of her job. She does this by being on teams that support her and by "finding the good in people." Fox just turned fifty and seems thrilled about it. "I love being 50. It's great!"

The Train The Trainer teaching method, or T3 training, is also a source of motivation for Fox. T3 training is where instructors teach others to be instructors. In the case of SAAC 95, the student instructors are learning to teach marksmanship.

The T3 training method is based on open-ended questions, or questions that don't have simple yes or no answers. Fox said she is motivated by this because it encourages the students to think and draw their own conclusions and make their own decisions.

One of Fox's biggest decisions, joining the military, was made in 1975.

"The best people who were shooting and winning were Army reservists," she said. "I wanted to associate with those people. The only way you can learn to win is to be around people who win."

That was her reason for enlisting in the Army Reserve. "Because they were good," she said.

Reservists meet arms challenge

By Dennis Calvin
314th Public Affairs Detachment

The Skill at Arms Challenge, Sept. 9 through Saturday at Fort Benning, involved 245 Army Reservists and 56 instructors.

The event was planned and operated by the U.S. Army Reserve Small Arms Training Team of Fort McClellan, Ala., a new unit that will be officially activated Oct. 16.

According to the commander, Col. Samuol E. Durham, it is the first time U.S. Army Reserve soldiers will be able to focus exclusively on marksmanship.

"Our intent is to take a USAR soldier and, through a series of training techniques, provide that soldier with the skills to plan, develop and run a progressive unit marksmanship program at home station," Durham said.

Army reservists from 48 states and Puerto Rico were in attendance, representing 10 regional support commands and one Army Reserve command. Students receive training in the operation and fire of both the M-16A2 rifle and the M-9 9mm pistol. Each student must then teach a class on some aspect of the operation and fire of the M-16 and M-9 pistol.

According to Master Sgt. Jerry Montgomery, operations plans sergeant for the Small Arms Training Team, the purpose of the unit is to train reservists as marksmanship instructors. These soldiers then go back to their individual units and instruct their fellow soldiers in marksmanship. The overall goal is to raise the qualification scores for Reserve units.

Staff Sgt. Randy Scott, a student from Company B, 841st Engineer Battalion in Orlando, Fla., said the training was "impressive," and that the instructors put out a lot of information. Scott said he believed the training could help his unit bring up its qualification scores.

Since the Skill at Arms Challenge is an event that is scheduled to take place on an annual basis, more Army reservists will be receiving this type of training and taking this knowledge back to their respective units. As a result, units will increase their marksmanship scores making them combat ready and proficient in a soldier's basic skill marksmanship.

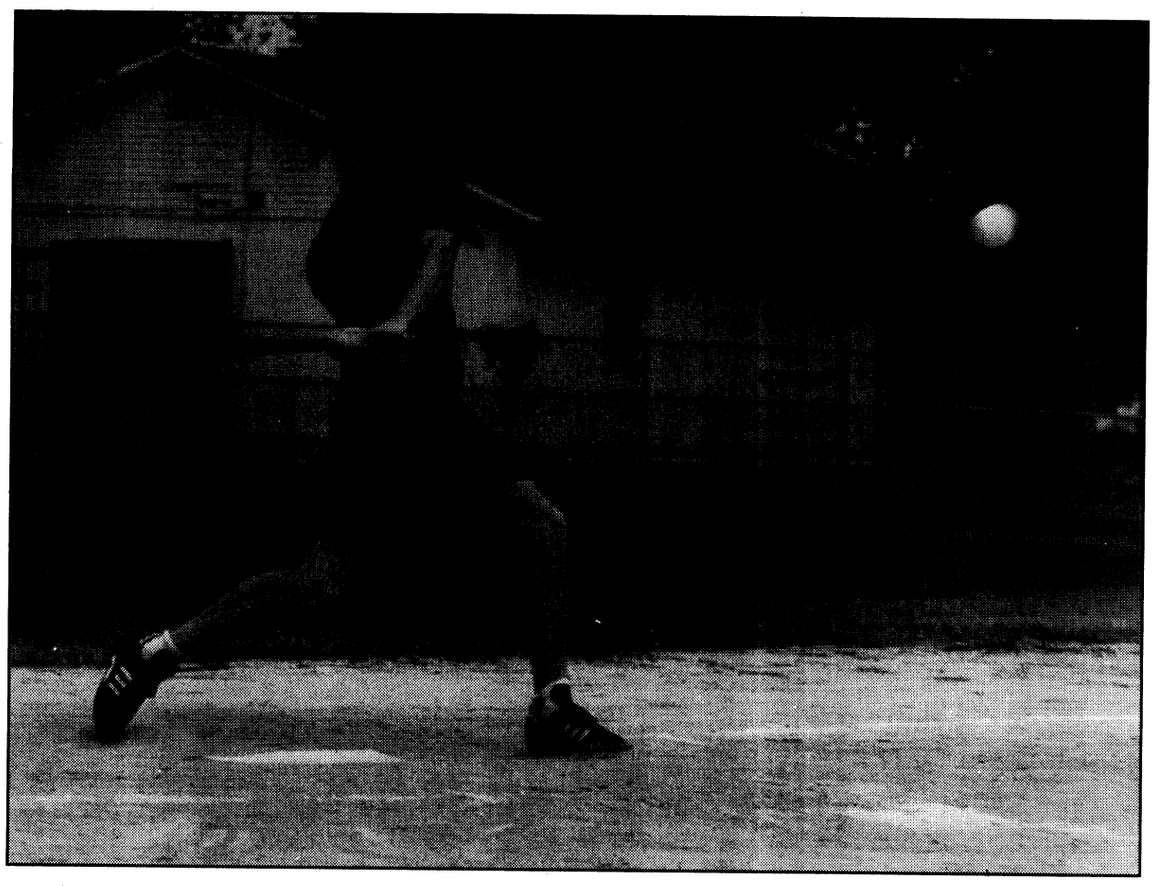
ITB defeats SOA 12-9 in Hispanic Heritage Month Softball

By Brian R. Voller
Bayonet staff writer

The Infantry Training Brigade defeated the School of the Americas 12-9 Saturday, winning the Hispanic Heritage Softball Tournament at Gowdy Field.

In celebration of Hispanic Heritage Month, teams from around Fort Benning gathered to compete in the tournament.



Game one pitted the School of the Americas against the 11th Infantry Regiment. SOA took a 11-7 win, defeating the 11th Inf. Regt. in seven innings despite trailing the first four innings.

The second game put the 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment, on the field against the Military Police Activity. The final score was MPA 10, 1st Bn., 29th, 5.

The afternoon games started with Henry Caro Non-commissioned Officers Academy taking on SOA. Once again SOA was on the winning side, crushing NCOA by a massive deficit 22-11. The victory guaranteed SOA a spot in the championship game.

Regular game play ended with the MPA facing the ITB. The ITB dominated the game, holding MPA to just three runs. The ITB took the game 14-3 and moved on to the championship game against SOA.

The championship game was a classic, with neither team ever holding a commanding lead or complete control of the game.

Brian R Voller

Kevin Haynes, from the Infantry Training Brigade prepares to swing through a pitch during the Hispanic Heritage Month Softball Tournament.

The ITB's defense controlled the start of the game by holding the team from SOA to no runs in the first inning. The bottom of the first belong to ITB's offense, which scored four runs that put it on top 4-0.

The second and third innings saw very little action with neither team scoring any runs in the second inning, and both teams putting up a single point in the third.

The fourth inning was another dead heat with both teams sending five players across the plate, putting ITB on top with all the points it would need to take the championship 10-6.

SOA owned the fifth, refusing to give up and closing the gap by holding the ITB to zero runs. Also, the team brought in three more runs. The fifth inning ended with ITB narrowly on top 10-9.

The runs scored by SOA were the last runs it would score in the ball game. ITB took the game in seven innings 12-9.

"I felt that the whole team played outstanding today," said Cesar Rodriguez, team captain of the ITB team. "It was a total team effort. Everyone played well and was dedicated to supporting Hispanic Heritage Month."

Luis Cruz, team captain for SOA, said he was very happy with his team's performance, despite the fact that they really wanted to win because most of the team is Hispanic.

"We've been trying to win this trophy and win the whole tournament for some time now," Cruz said. "It's disappointing that we lost, but the team did well and I'm proud of how hard they played and the time they sacrificed to try and put together a winning team."

"All the teams gave us good games to watch today," said Paul Horton, Equal Opportunity advisor for the Infantry Training Brigade. "Also Fred Woods took the time to help organize all of this, and he donated the trophies so we could reward the teams' performance."

USAMU battles for gold at World Military Games

By Marlene Tikal
USAMU Public Affairs Office

ROME — Standing on the parade field of the Olympic stadium in Rome is an honor few athletes will ever achieve.

For the 16 members of the U.S. Armed Forces Shooting Team competing at the International Military Sports Council World Games that moment in time — when the cheering of the crowds echoed amid the giant sculpted forms of ancient athletes standing witness to years of athletic accomplishment — might seem the pinnacle of a rewarding marksmanship career.

But, in truth, the opening ceremony of the World Military Games is the turning point for the U.S. shooters. The majority of the marksmen on the U.S. Shooting Team are from USAMU, with others from the U.S. Navy, Marine Corps and Air Force.

It wasn't luck, but skill and determination that brought these shooters to Italy to compete against military marksmen from 22 countries, said Maj. Richard Hawkins, team captain for the U.S. Shooting Team.

"The first thing to keep in mind is these are all excellent shooters to begin with," he said. They are, in fact, the cream of the crop of shooters from each service who were chosen to participate in a three-day tryout at Fort Benning in March.

During the tryouts, more than 15 shooters competed for limited slots on any of the four teams: Men's 300-meter rifle team, women's 50-meter rifle team, men's pistol and women's pistol.

The tryout is rigorous and demanding, Hawkins said. For example the men's rifle team fires a 300-meter high-power rifle with a lot of kick that takes strength as well as skill.

"Basically, it's a high power rifle that's equivalent to shooting a hunting rifle," Hawkins said.

Once the team was chosen, despite the branch of service, the shooters train together as a team in preparation for the games.

While training with the members of different service is a first for some of the team members, the marksmen find they have more similarities than differences.

"Before we trained together almost daily," 1st Lt. Allana Stewart of the women's rifle team said. Then they learned that they are all proud to be servicemembers no matter what service they represent.

With that spirit of pride, the marksmen plan to bring home the gold.

LaVoie Boys take 1st round in 3-on-3

By Pam Newbern
Special correspondent

Raymond Saddler was all ready to play basketball Saturday.

The outgoing spokesman of the "LaVoie Boys" basketball team, Saddler and his teammates, Jeff Thompson and JaMart Hill, were ready for action Saturday in the 3-on-3 basketball tournament, sponsored by the Military Police Activity.

The LaVoie Boys ultimately won the tournament and were one of several teams from Indianhead Terrace that took part in the tournament.

"I felt like I was going to win," said Saddler, who sported bright white socks with Mickey Mouse logos. "My team (and I) were going to go all the way."

Organized by Sgt. 1st Class Thomas J. Smith Jr., the tournament included 21 teams — 19 from Indianhead Terrace and two from Bouton Heights.

"It's all about getting to know the kids," said Smith, who works as an MP. "The only thing they had to do was show up."

Investigator Larry Webb, noncommissioned officer of the Military Police Investigation Section, said the tournament was conducted for youths 12 to 16.

"We want the kids to realize cops are not out to bust them," he said. "We want the parents to get out and support them."

Smith agreed, saying, "All police are not out there to harass children. We're trying to assist in community

Smith provided funds for refreshments and trophies for the teams.

The three members of "The Squad" were more interested in winning than anything else during the tournament at Indianhead Terrace.

"I came out last year and got a second place trophy," said Robert Johnson, a student at Spencer High School. "I heard about (this tournament) from one of my friends."

The other members of "The Squad" are Kurt Alexander and Troy Adams, who said he was taking part in the tournament "just to hang out with my friends."

Wade Pettigrrew, a member of the "Dog Pound" said he was taking part to "show everybody our skills." The other team members in the Dog Pound were Treandos Thorton and Tyrone Greenidge.

Each housing area played games to 11 points. The top two teams from each housing area will play in a championship game Saturday at Briant Wells Gym.

First place went to the"LaVoie Boys," followed by "Bouton Heights," and third, "Indianhead".

USAMU soldier takes international rifle competition

By Marlene Tikal
USAMU Public Affairs Office

ROME — A U.S. Army soldier emerged Sunday as the 300-meter standard rifle champion, beating Maj. Vladimir Lvov of Russia by 3 points in the 1995 International Military Sports Council World Games.

Maj. Stephen Goff assigned to the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit International Rifle Team, bested 48 competitors representing the militaries of 24 countries with a score of 576 out of a possible 600.

Four other USAMU shooters — Capts. Matthew Suggs, Webster Wright and Glenn Dubis and Sgt. Thomas Tamas — competed in individual matches placing fifth, 14th, 17th and 42nd respectively.

"I've been to a number of games," Goff said, "and each year it seems as though the competition grows tougher and tougher."

However, none proved tougher than Goff, who trains daily under coach Bill Krilling.

"The strenuous training I receive at the Marksmanship Unit has definitely helped," Goff said. Especially since the 300-meter course was extremely difficult with high winds reducing the shooters' accuracy by blowing the rounds slightly off course. Yet, enduring the difficulties of the course was worth if for Goff, who said he was too tired to express his happiness with winning.

"It's definitely been a long day," Goff said. "But, if I had to, I'd do it all again."

In other competition Sunday, the U.S. rifle team placed third in 300-meter standard rifle. In men's 25-meter center fire pistol, Army National Guardsman Cadet Ed Suarez took 10th place falling from the top place finisher by only seven points. The women's pistol team shot Sport Pistol with the U.S. team finishing 10th. In individual sport pistol competition, the results are Air Force Tech Sgt. Barbara Holterman, 26th; Army Cpl. Amy Szarenski, 31st; and Navy musician Catheryn Callahan, 36th.

Buick Challenge poses difficulties for golfers, spectators

USAIC Public Affairs Office

More than a 1,000 soldiers, family members and post civilians are expected to flock to Callaway Gardens for Military Day at the Buick Challenge, Sept. 29.

For the novice spectator, here are some guidelines to help make attending the tournament more enjoyable.

First, the operative word is "quiet."

Professional golfers don't have the same nerves of steel as those who play the Follow Me Golf Course with drivers going by, honking horns in the middle of back swings or the ice cream man driving around and around playing the same tune over and over.

Those around the greens and tee boxes will be reminded of this by the marshals who have "hush y'all signs" that they raise as the golfer addresses his ball or prepares to putt.

However, for those lining a fairway, there may be no marshals, so spectators need to be aware of what the golfer is doing.

Those who continue to talk or make noise at the very least can expect a dirty look from the caddy or the golfer. Persistent noise could win a quick trip out off the course.

Also if a ball comes your way, try and avoid it; never consider a golf ball "lost."

We who play at Fort Benning find lost golf balls all over the course. Pros rarely lose golf balls because they don't want to lose strokes.

Leave your cameras, video and still, at home. If you want to take pictures of the pros, go on Monday or Wednesday. Once the tournament starts, the only cameras allowed on the course are those belonging to media members.

Nor should you expect to bring a cooler onto the course. These too are banned.

Tournament play on Friday begins at 7:45 a.m. on holes 1 and 10 and will probably end around 6 p.m.

You do not need to spend the entire day on the course, but should stay just long enough to see some good golf and enjoy yourself.

For some people, that means parking on one of the tee-boxes for the entire time they are there. They like to watch pros hit golf balls nearly 300 yards (or farther).

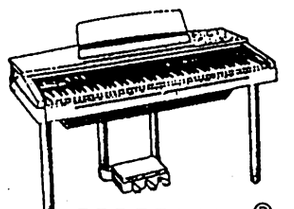
Others enjoy hanging around a green to watch pros make 50 foot putts and miss 12 inch ones--there are often more of the latter since the greens at Callaway are often quite undulating.

Some spectators line the fairway, waiting to see a player hit the ball out of the rough or from behind a tree. These are the same people who rubber neck at traffic accidents, but hey, you gotta do what you gotta do.

Then there are those who have favorites and become part of the galley, following that player from hole to hole. Those who are especially loyal will walk the entire course (about five miles) with one player. Others will hopscotch from one to another.

The way to find out when your player is teeing off, is to get a program or clip it out of the newspaper. There are also scoreboards posted throughout the course that tell you what hole your player is on and what his score is.

Another way is to estimate where he is, by taking his starting time and hole (first or 10th), figure 10 minutes per hole. This will probably put you ahead of the player since it takes a little longer than 10 minutes per hole, but this is a good estimate.



But beware, the Mountain Course at Callaway is huge and unless you're a good orienteerer, you could get lost as you seek to find short cuts to other holes.

Also, make sure you don't inadvertently cross a fairway as a golfer is preparing to hit his next shot at best you might get hit; at worse, you could distract him.

Remember, we're getting in free and while we have access to the entire course, there are areas that are by-invitation-only or require a pass.

Finally, for souvenir hunters, you'll need to buy them. The place to do that is when you first enter the course (or just as you leave).

If you want to be up close and personal, go on Monday or Wednesday (there is no admission charge on those days). Also, if you go on Wednesday, if one of the golfers looks especially familiar, it could very well be our own commanding general.

Sounds and plays like a grand.. easy to move, affordable, exclusively at...

HISPANIC HERITAGE MONTH

Dance troupe displays culture

By Libby Burtner
Special correspondent

Kelley Hill Recreation Center exploded with color, excitement, music and dance when La Compania Tropical Latina hit the stage Sept. 21.

From an elegant Panamanian headdress (tembleques), which is made from fish scales, to Carmen Miranda's fruit-on-the-head attire, countries throughout Latin America and Spain were represented by native dress and dance. Swirling skirts responding to fast tempos of music often had the crowd clapping and cheering.

The bright smiles, abundant energy and talent are brought on stage by the Hispanic youth from the Fort Benning and Columbus area. Most of the performers range in age from 3 years to college-aged students; however, there are a few adult members.

Yabel Valdes, one of the group's organizers, said all the performers are either Puerto Rican or Panamanian, but they learn the dances from a variety of Latin America countries. She said she admired the time students sacrifice for practice and performances and is proud of them.

What motivates these students to spend time learning dance when academics, sports and just hanging out are competing for their time?

When a group of teen-agers were asked that question, Jose Vazquez, who has been dancing two years, said, "I dance because of my culture."

Sheila Reyes, a student at Spencer High who has been dancing since she was 9 years old, echoed his feelings, saying, "It keeps our culture alive." Heads all around nodded in agreement.

Close behind this patriotism is fun. They all agreed they enjoy learning and performing the dances. Still, there is a lot of work involved and not just by the performers.

Back stage several women work to make things happen. Valdes has the help of Maria Sol Reyes and Raquel Gonzalez. They help with overall organization, dance instruction, music coordination during performances and keeping track of 40-plus young people, no easy task in itself.

Many of the costumes were sewn by Mansal Ortiz to keep expenses down. Some of the native dresses are just too expensive, such as the pullera from Panama. The pullera, hand stitched, combined with the tembleques and gold jewelry, would cost around $5,000. Ortiz's sewing allowed the girls to have beautiful gowns they otherwise could not have afforded.

The planning of the costumes is evident in every dance, but especially in the Puerto Rican dance, where the color of the cummerbunds and bow ties of the men match the color of the young women's gowns. Each gown is a different color so there is a rainbow on stage.

Aricela Frye, whose daughter performs with the company, said La Compania is really a group effort. Different families pitch in with transportation costs and many of them cook Hispanic dishes to take and share when they perform. Their willingness to reach out and share is also the way they recruit new dancers. Mothers call friends and neighbors to see who might be interested. The students themselves seek new members, as well.

Sol Reyes said the dancing is a tradition passed on to the next generation. It is a way to carry on their culture. Judging from the performances, they have done a good job passing on not just the dancing but their love for country.

5001 fund supports post community

By Shannon Day
Special to The Bayonet©

The Combined Federal Campaign will kick off Monday, and, with so many charities to choose from, it's hard to know which one is most needy and has a low overhead cost so more money will be spent on what the charity was created to do.

Many people worry the money they donate will be used to line some pricey spokesperson's pocket, and the needy may only see a quarter of every dollar they donate.

If this is a concern, then consider donating to the 5001 designation, which is the Soldiers and Family Support Association here at Fort Benning.

The association is nonprofit and supports numerous volunteer organizations on post such as Girl Scouts, Boy Scouts, Army Community Services, Youth Activities, Patch Preschool, the Volunteer Resource Center, the Community Life Mayor's Association, the Leadership Seminar Association and Santa's Castle.

"What happens is the money comes into our association; then we ask the subassociations to submit requests for monies," said Col. Galen B. Jackman, president, Soldiers and Family Support Association. "From there, we draw up a budget and allocate monies based on the needs of the associations."

Jackman said they also maintain a small reserve in case any of the associations need emergency money during the year, such as the emergency food locker at ACS running out of food.

Although the association helps fund all of these organizations, each year the largest portion of their money is awarded to Youth Activities to help families defray the costs of enrolling their children in activities, according to Jackman.

"If anyone wanted to see results of what 5001 does, (he or she) should go down to the football and soccer fields on a Saturday morning and see the number of children participating in sports," he said. "It is significantly cheaper for parents to enroll their children in sports here on Fort Benning than it is in Columbus because of the monies we donate."

At a glance

What: Code 5001, part of the Combined Federal Campaign

Purpose The only CFC organization devoted entirely to the Fort Benning community

Agencies to benefit: The fund helps support post organizations and services, including youth and handicap programs, Santa's Castle, volunteer services, lending closet, food locker, Army Community Service, Red Cross, family support groups, community improvement, Boy and Girl Scouts and others.

The 5001 fund also pays for child care for people who want to volunteer at some of these organizations but can't because of day-care expenses.

The list of services 5001 subsidizes is virtually endless, he said.

One unique thing about 5001 is that none of the money is used to pay any bureaucrats or paper-pushers, according to Jackman.

"Everything we get comes back to the organizations," he said. "There is no 'trickle-down' effect. Once we get the money, we pump it out as fast as we can."

A common misconception people have about these organizations is that they are primarily funded by the Army, when in reality, they're funded largely through CFC and private donation, he added.

"As we have begun to downsize in the Army and money has gotten tighter, the more we have to rely on volunteers and contributions to keep the quality of life up," he said.

"If a person wants to directly support the activities for soldiers, for soldier's families, to include Army children, without money trickling though a maze of bureaucracy, the best way to do that is to donate to the 5001 designation during CFC," Jackman said.

Mayors to take office

Residents elect new community leaders

By Donna S. Budjenska
Special to The Bayonet©

Never let it be said there is no democracy on Fort Benning.

Post residents have exercised their rights, and last week they chose mayors and a vice mayor to represent them.

Housing area residents had the opportunity to cast their votes Sept. 20 and 21 at their area Community Life centers. Ballots were delivered to all quarters, and write-in candidates were accepted, according to Jennifer Morgan, Community Life officer for the Directorate of Community Activities.

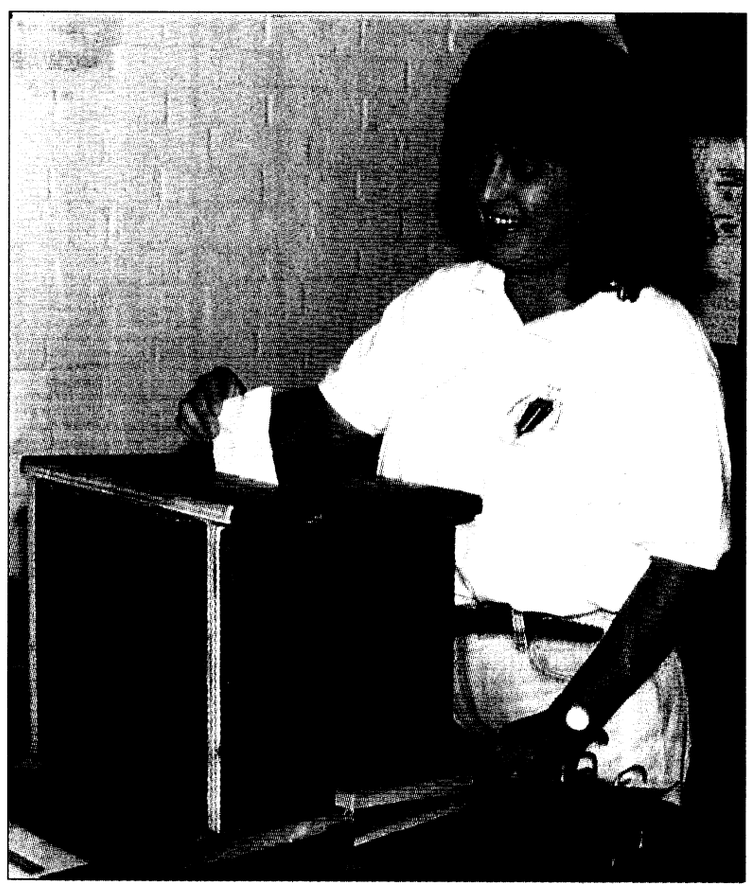
Mayors ran unopposed, Morgan said, and for the most part were re-elected to a consecutive term.

The newly elected community mayors are:

• Bouton Heights-Davis Hill — Angela Rizzo, 29-A Doane Loop

• Custer-Upatoi-Battle Park — Mollie Herman, 417-B Craig Drive; vice mayor, Donna Pruitt, 804-A Terry Drive.

• East Main Post — Shawna O'Neil, 110 Zuckerman Ave.



• Indianhead Terrace — Shelley Marley, 106 McAfee St.

• McGraw Manor — Corinna Manning, 138-C Magrath St.; vice mayor, Becky Murphy, 140-E Magrath St.

• West Main Post — Jackie Mumpower, 946-A Gillespie St.

Mayors and vice mayors are elected to a one-year term and represent their communities at Community Life meetings, where officials postwide come together to discuss and provide solutions for problems relating to Fort Benning quality of life.

Anyone interested in learning more about the Community Life Mayor's Program can contact Morgan at 545-5931.

OPINION

VARIOUS VOICES

What improvements would you like to see in television programming?

Andrea H. Collins, family member — "I would like to see more movies, nice old movies like the ones Doris Day starred in."

Amanda S. Mullins, 11, family member — "There needs to be less violence, and take off Barney!"

Ayisat M. Kaffo, family member — "More educational programs and then more music in those programs because when my daughter sings what she's heard, I know she's learning it."

2nd Lt. Eugene L. Schantz 3rd Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment — "I'd like to see (fewer) brainless sitcoms."

Jennifer L. Meadows, civilian employee — "I watch TV all the time. I pretty much like it the way it is."

Spec. Raquel M. Garcia, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment — "I'd like to see more educational programs, especially for kids, and less violence because we certainly don't need that on TV."

TV not for children anym

By Lori Egan
Bayonet staff writer

The other day a co-worker and I were talking about television, and in particular Saturday morning television. She wanted to know why I don't let my 3-year-old watch cartoons.

She said watching Saturday morning cartoons was one of her favorite things to do as a child.

Didn't I watch cartoons when I was a child? Wasn't I depriving my child of one of the basic rights children have?

I did watch Saturday morning TV when I was growing up. But TV was different then. When I was growing up, I had the choice of one television channel, not 12 or more.

Programming was different when I was a child, and so was the advertising.

Today many different ideas and values are presented on TV. But some are not necessarily the ideas and values that are appropriate for a 3-year-old.

I want my child to learn about how to get along with other people, how to share, how to cross the street and other things we adults typically take for granted that our children know.

A program that teaches these types of things and appeals to children is Barney & Friends. Barney works for me. I know many parents think the only good Barney is a dead Barney. But what is wrong with a program that encourages children to talk about their feelings, to share and to brush their teeth? I love to hear my daughter sing about not letting the water run while she brushes her teeth.

Another great children's program is Reading Rainbow. This show both entertains and informs children about anything and everything.

After watching an episode about whales, my daughter has wanted to check the books featured on the show out of the library.

> "When I was a child, TV didn't necessarily have any more redeeming social value than it has today, but it also didn't have any bare butts."

commentary

Unfortunately, books featured on Reading Rainbow are always checked out of the library.

This Saturday morning I turned on the television to see if it had changed from what I remembered of it. It hadn't.

I used to watch Saturday morning TV to get ideas for my Christmas list. This gene was inherited by my daughter. She was more interested in telling me what toy she wanted after each commercial than in any of the actual programs on TV. After what seemed like hours of "I want this toy" or "Pleeeaaase can I have the doll who really drinks out of a bottle and burps" or "I reallllly neeeed it" I turned off the TV.

Mighty Morphin Power Rangers is a popular Saturday morning show with children. My daughter recognizes the characters and even hums the theme song. I don't know where she learned it; she's not allowed to watch the show.

I've heard it said this is a positive show for children, where good triumphs though it is violent. I don't wa think it is OK to hit someone ju thinks she is right and the othe

Many children don't have th decide what is an age-appropri what is not. That is the parent' child's.

Most of the parents I know compromised with their childre Children today have extensive collections. This way parents they have some control over w watch on TV.

I think TV has the ability to people. Much of today's progr violence, sex, profane language nudity on prime time.

When I was a child, TV did have any more redeeming soci has today, but it also didn't hav "Golly gee" was about as profa the only sex was a good morni kitchen.

I was a child during the Vie family watched the war on the remember parental warnings w news footage was particularly parents then had a choice; they out of the room, let us listen to but not watch the footage, or m talked about what we saw.

Most often we were sent fro were children, and my parents children should be children an the worries of adulthood.

I agree. I have the right to daughter watches and doesn't television.

And when she's grown, her morning memories won't be of cartoon but of playing quietly bed with her stuffed animals, r to them while I pretend to slee

Dial 545-BOSS is the commander's action line for soldiers, family members and civilians to call when they have problems or complaints that can't be resolved elsewhere.

While it is not a substitute for the chain of command or for agencies established to provide assistance, the line offers another means of communication between Fort Benning's community and commanders.

The Bayonet features some of the calls that may benefit other members of the Fort Benning community.

Directorate of Community Activities' response: The 5 percent franchise fee is a standard part of all new cable contracts, both military and civilian. Both Fort Gordon, Ga., and Fort Hood, Texas, have cable contracts with a franchise fee as well as the four cable companies in Columbus.

The franchise fee is used to monitor the contract from the perspective of the individual subscriber. It pays for the cost of providing quality assurance in researching and initiating corrective action, if required, for complaints or concerns about cable television service or installation. Illegal parking really makes reader mad

There is illegal parking in front of the Post Exchange and Commissary.

Drivers are parking and leaving their vehicles unattended, drivers are parking at Commissary exits and having the bagger load their vehicles whether it is raining or not.

This situation has been ignored by the Military Police and is still being ignored. These situations create a serious problem for the Fire Department in fire suppression and its effort in rescue operations.

I recommend the curb in front of the Post Exchange and Commissary be painted yellow and install signs stating "Fire Lane — No parking at any time." The signs should be mounted on metal posts.

The MPs should be instructed to strictly enforce this.

— Retired Sgt. 1st Class Chester A. Bush

Thank you for the opportunity to respond to your letter and to clarify the issue of illegal parking at the PX and Commissary Mall. Your concerns for fire safety and the welfare of the patrons at the mall are appreciated.

After researching your questions with the PX, Commissary, Directorate of Public Safety and Directorate of Public Works, I found the areas you are speaking of currently designated as loading and unloading zones. The management at the Post Exchange indicated the current loading zones are customer-oriented and should not be used for parking purposes.

The Directorate of Public Safety, Traffic Division, has been contacted and will continue to monitor. Unattended vehicles or vehicles parked in the loading zone will be ticketed.

— Garrison Sgt. Maj. Steven G. Chittum

Reserved parking precedence questioned

I frequently shop at the Commissary and Exchange Mall, and it is a privilege I highly value. The Fort Benning mall is among the best of anywhere I have ever shopped. I enjoy shopping there.

However, I'm dismayed every time I drive by the reserved parking for the post commander, general officers, colonels, sergeant major and chief warrant officer 4 and 5s. The chain of command is followed down the line as it should be until one reaches the sergeant major.

While I have the utmost respect for anyone who has reached the rank of sergeant major, I have often wondered why the chief warrant officer 4 and 5's sign does not follow the chain of command.

My question is, is there a reason for this, or oversight?

Self Help: Platoon of volunteer soldiers help 11th Regt.

By Richard Brill and Shannon Day
Special to The Bayonet©

The 11th Infantry Regiment has created a team of soldier specialists to tackle the unit's Self-Help, U-DO-IT projects.

The new Repair and Utilities Self-Help Platoon consists of about 15 soldiers who were selected for their painting and carpentry skills, said Command Sgt. Maj. Joe Heckard, regimental command sergeant major.

"You would be surprised how many soldiers have those kinds of skills," he said. "It's proof of the versatility of today's soldier and a great asset to the regiment."

Heckard said the idea for the platoon was inspired by the Better Opportunities for Single Soldiers program as a way to improve the quality of life of the regiment's soldiers.

"We put out the call for soldiers with light construction skills, so the renovations would take as little supervision as possible," he said. "We got a great response. All of the soldiers in the platoon are volunteers."

The unit first sergeants are tasked with providing a prioritized list of projects that need to be done to regimental headquarters, Heckard said. By the time the platoon has finished renovations, they will have repainted and recarpeted 88 barracks rooms, repainted the halls and kitchens in the barracks and put new furniture in the day rooms.

The soldiers who live in the rooms pitch in and help as well, he said.

"It's great they are finally recognizing the single soldier," said Cpl. Kenneth B. Coaxum, technical supply specialist, 11th Inf. Regt., whose room is being redone by the platoon. "It really shows how much the Army has advanced.

"I think it will make training less stressful to come home to a room with a homey atmosphere," Coaxum said.

"The soldiers are happy to undertake these projects because they know that they are creating a better quality of life for themselves," he said. "They also understand that the budget for barracks repair is tight and that by doing the work themselves, they are saving the Army money and creating something they can be proud of."

Heckard said the formation of the Self-Help Platoon has been good for the regiment's morale.

"The formation of the platoon has shown soldiers that the command climate is concerned with their living conditions and wants to give them the means to improve their quality of life."

Heckard said the platoon has done an absolutely professional job.

"These guys do really good work," he said. "From the looks of it, you would think professionals were doing the job."

profile in excellence

Name: Spc. Michael E. Will
Position: Better Opportunities for Single Soldiers Program representative
Unit: Infantry Training Brigade
MOS: 71M, Chaplain Assistant
Job Title: Regimental Chapel NCOIC
Years on the job: 3 years
Hometown: Ashland, Ohio

What were your reasons for joining the Army?
A desire to spend time serving my country, in following a family full of service members, as well as to better prepare myself for college.

What were your reasons for choosing your MOS?
I thought it would be more spiritual! My father also served as a chaplain's assistant in Vietnam.

What person has most influenced your military career?
Philip L. Futoran, my chaplain from overseas.

If you were the sergeant major of the Army for a day, what improvements would you make? I would encourage less politicking and more soldiering. Make training a little more strenuous and difficult.

What are your future career plans? To attend college and play football en route to seminary to pursue the ministry.

What do you think about the BOSS program and why is it important? I think the BOSS program is becoming more efficient and effective each day as it continues to change and improve. It is important for the single soldier as it provides a voice through which to carry his or her concerns.

What have you accomplished as the BOSS representative for your unit? Not enough! I've just begun to bring my command into better communication with Main Post; however, there is much more to be accomplished.

In your opinion, how can the individual soldier get involved in the BOSS program?
Just ask! Find out who your unit BOSS rep is and be available. Anyone who comes to BOSS with an open mind can be successfully involved.

What specifically has the BOSS program done to help the soldiers in your unit?
It has promoted barracks renovations and improvements that are ongoing, as well as provided events for single soldiers.

What others have to say about you: Organized, dedicated, motivated. Providing a new fervor and vitality for the Infantry Training Brigade BOSS and Single Soldier Living Community programs.

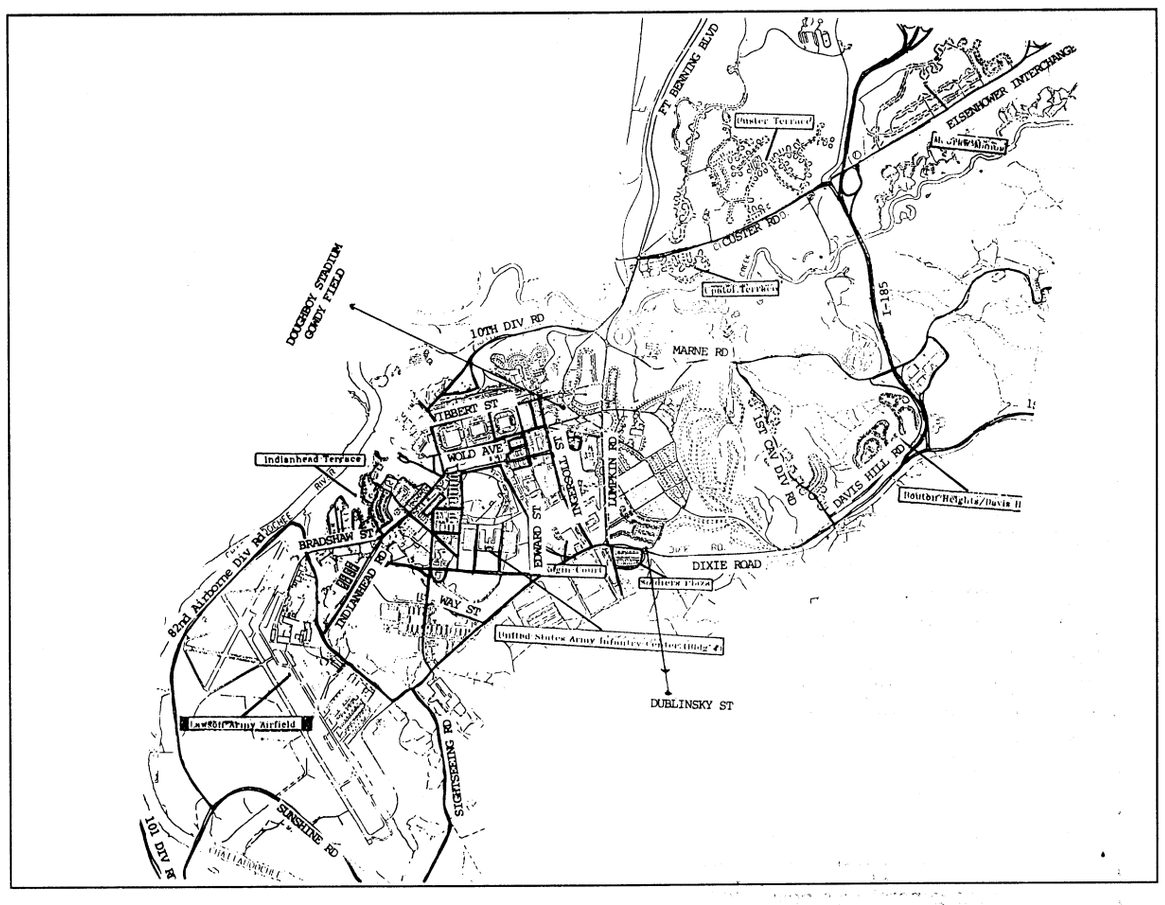
Speed limit during PT is 15 mph

USAIC Public Affairs Office

The speed limit on Main Post during the established physical training hours (6 to 7:30 a.m.) Monday through Friday is 15 mph.

The speed limit when passing individual runners or formations is 10 mph. Both have priority on post during the stated hours, according to a post policy. The following roads are exempt from the new speed limits because all running is banned on those roads.



Posted speed limits remain in effect on these roads:

- 10th Division Road
- Dixie Road, except the portion from Sightseeing Road (Sandy Patch) to Lawson Army Airfield
- Sunshine Road
- Lumpkin Road from Dixie Road to Custer Road
- Custer Road from Benning Road to Eisenhower Exchange

Also, the 82nd Airborne Division Road from Sunshine Road to Bradshaw Road will be closed to traffic from 6 to 7:30 a.m. Monday through Friday for use by formations and individual runners. Kelley Hill is completely closed to traffic during this time.

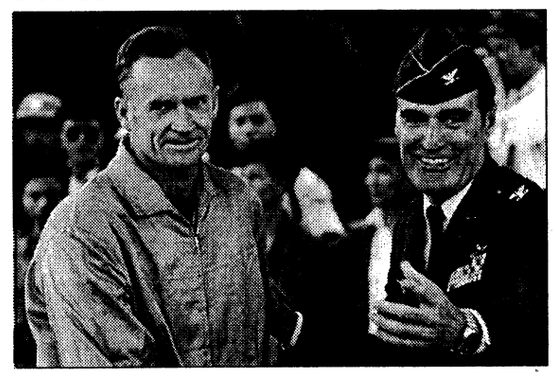
The speed limit is 15 mph on Sand Hill Monday to Saturday from 5:30 to 7 a.m.

Also, 11th Airborne Division Road on Sand Hill is permanently closed.

Veterans Affairs Office to reduce paperwork

Department of Veterans Affairs

The Department of Veterans Affairs is reducing the intake paperwork required for a veteran's application to receive VA medical care, cutting the number of pages from four to one.



The streamlined process is expected to save veterans time and aggravation by requiring only basic information, with VA relying more on data already recorded in VA computer systems or gathering additional information in later stages of care when and if it is required, such as an admission to inpatient care.

Currently, the veteran must provide considerable information each time he or she comes in for care, including redundant or overlapping information gathered among components of the application forms package.

The replacement of the lengthy form and its components with the new Form 10-10T bearing minimal data-set needs for initial processing of patients is part of VA's streamlining under the federal "government reinvention" initiative.

VA annually provides care through more than a million hospitalizations and more than 25 million outpatient visits.

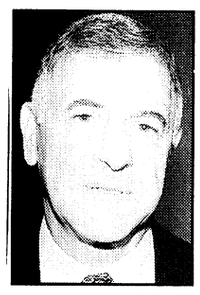
Olympics leader calls for community involvement, concern

By Donna S. Budjenska
Special to The Bayonet©

Citing the opportunity for Columbus to become the softball capital of the world, Carmen Cavezza, executive director of Columbus '96, sounded the call for community involvement in the Olympic softball venue at his speech to the Fort Benning Officers' Wives' Club Sept. 20.

"This is a tri-community affair — including Columbus, Phenix City and Fort Benning," Cavezza said. "We don't want to deprive anybody of the opportunity to serve."

Cavezza said he is indebted to Fort Benning for its support. The retired lieutenant general was post commander from 1989 to 1991, and his involvement with Fort Benning hasn't waned since his departure from the military.



One way Fort Benning is helping is in housing the 164 softball players competing in the seven-day venue. Henry Hall, located off Vibbert Avenue, will be the local "Olympic Village," offering private rooms complete with bath, telephone and microwave for each athlete.

As Columbus '96's executive director, Cavezza speaks to many groups on and off post to garner support for the local Olympic competition.

"This is the first time the summer games have been held east of the Mississippi River," Cavezza said. "It's a great opportunity for us to be part of the Olympic effort."

He estimated 25,000 people would travel to or stay in Columbus during the softball competitions, bringing with them $25.7 million to spend locally.

Thousands will be booking hotel and motel rooms, but with only 2,500 rooms available, other means of accommodating tourists are being explored. One such avenue Cavezza detailed was having residents house travelers in their homes for a pre-established fee.

Columbus '96, a nonprofit corporation established to support the 1996 Olympics, is actively seeking volunteers to help with housing and in a myriad of other ways. Cavezza urged those who have ideas or questions to contact him at 660-1996.

Cavezza also described the type of competition the Olympic softball games bring.

"Fast-pitch softball is baseball rules applied to softball," he explained. "The ball's pitched at 75 to 85 mph.

"Can you imagine being 40 feet away having that ball come burning in?"

After the games have been played and the crowds disappeared, Columbus still has the opportunity to keep itself in the world's eye, Cavezza said.

"When the Olympics are over, we can sit back or take advantage of everything we already have in place," he said. "Why not be the softball capital of the world? We've set our sights on that."

Special to The Bayonet©

The Fort Benning School Board met Monday at the schools' administration building.

The board approved the School Lunchroom Fund for August, reported by Schools Director of Logistics Alice Skinner. The fund's losses for August totaled $19,429, which includes atypical expenditures such as employee bonuses, printing costs and Loyd School clean-up costs.

Year-to-date losses for the fund total $52,856, while the current fund equity is $79,699.

One factor affecting the School Lunchroom Fund is the drop in enrollment. According to Dr. Dell Karr, superintendent, the total number of students enrolled as of Sept. 22 was 2,946, compared with 3,200 at the same time last year.

Another item on the agenda included Strategic Plan Goals for School Year 1995-1996, which Karr outlined. Benchmarks for achieving the goals, set by the Department of Defense Education Activity, include the following, to be accomplished by the year 2000:

• All students in grades four, eight and 11 will be expected to demonstrate technological proficiency as measured by an electronic portfolio assessment;

• Student learning in math should increase at all levels of achievement. The percentage of students in grades three, five, seven, nine and 11 scoring at or above the 76th percentile should increase by 10 percent; those students scoring between the 51st and 75th percentile, inclusive, should increase by 10 percent; and those scoring at or below the 25th percentile should be reduced by 20 percent of the 1990 percentage as measured by a standardized achievement test;

• DoDEA will implement and evaluate the effects of a tiered, multi-faceted home-school partnership program;

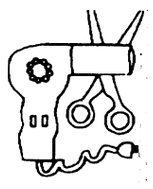
• All schools will be expected to have functioning school improvement teams and will, in partnership with representatives from all DoDEA constituencies, have a shared decision-making process in place. Success will be measured by monitoring the quality of school improvement efforts and program documentation.

After Karr briefed board members on the benchmarks, Jerry Christy, curriculum coordinator, addressed the schools' use of the Internet computer network.

Supplemental software is being used to filter material from the Internet that is inappropriate in a classroom setting. Every reasonable precaution is being taken to make this resource as beneficial as possible.

Christy and Dr. Judy Archer, curriculum coordinator, discussed improvement plans based on data from the Iowa Test of Basic Skills.

The Fort Benning Schools' emphasis will be on math, and a "Math for Life" curriculum will demonstrate how math is useful and applicable outside of the classroom walls.



The ultimate goal of the planned multi-faceted approach will be to prioritize problem solving as the major emphasis of math instruction, they stressed.

Richard Skinner, assistant superintendent for budget and personnel, presented the fiscal 1996 target budget, $19,412,000, which the board approved.

Others attending Monday's meeting were Chief of Staff Col. Gregory Camp, president; Chaplain (Maj.) Robert Thompson, board chaplain; Rhoda Zerger, Dexter Elementary School representative; Col. William David Brown, Faith Middle School; Staff Sgt. John Perdue, McBride Elementary School; Staff Sgt. Ricardo Linton, Wilson Elementary School; Col. Richard Rutledge, schools officer; Lt. Col. Stephanie Willson, attorney; and Allan Day, human resources site manager.

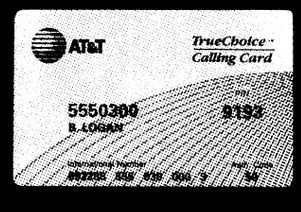
AER offering scholarships

Army Emergency Relief

Soldiers with college-aged children may wonder how they can afford education costs. Many people don't realize that part of the answer may be found from Army Emergency Relief.

The AER provides financial assistance through scholarships. To qualify for financial assistance through AER, students must be enrolled, accepted or pending acceptance as a full-time student, for the entire academic year in post-secondary educational institutions approved by the U.S. Department of Education.

To be eligible for an AER scholarship, a student must be: unmarried, a U.S. citizen or permanent U.S. resident, under the age of 22 on June 1 preceding the beginning of the school year for which the scholarship is requested, and an authorized family member of an active duty, retired or deceased soldier. Scholarships are awarded based on financial need, academic achievement, and individual accomplishments.



Students who are awarded scholarships must reapply each year. Students must be in good academic standing, minimum cumulative grade point average of 2.0 to receive scholarships. The application is simple. By requiring students to reapply each year, AER can monitor the progress they are making.

As part of the application, students must submit a family financial analysis and an essay describing their goals and accomplishments. Applications must be submitted by March 1 for the upcoming academic year. Initial applications request forms are available at AER, Building 2643, Soldiers' Plaza. Hours are 8 a.m. to 5 p.m., Monday through Friday. Students will be notified in mid-May whether they will receive a scholarship.

EIB: Gotta have it!

By Lori Egan

The Expert Infantryman Badge means something different to those who have trained for it and qualified and something else to those who have trained for it and haven't qualified yet for the badge, despite all the training.

Last week, testing for the EIB began after a week of formal training.

In order to train and then test for the EIB, the soldier must pass an Army physical fitness test and qualify expert with an M-16A1 or M-16A2.

Candidates for the EIB must then complete a range of tasks, including day and night land navigation, employing hand grenades and a 12-mile road march.

"The hardest tasks for me are communications, the individual movement technique and throwing the hand grenade," said Staff Sgt. Erik C. Petterson, Company B, 4th Ranger Training Battalion. This was Petterson's fourth attempt to qualify for the EIB.

"I keep trying because it's an honor; it shows you've achieved proficiency in your (military occupational speciality), that you are an expert infantryman."

More than 200 candidates tested for the EIB Sept. 18 to 22, the first week. Only 44 qualified for the badge during the first week of testing, said Sgt. 1st Class Mickey L. Barnes, Company C, 2nd Battalion, 58th Infantry Regiment, one of the site testers.

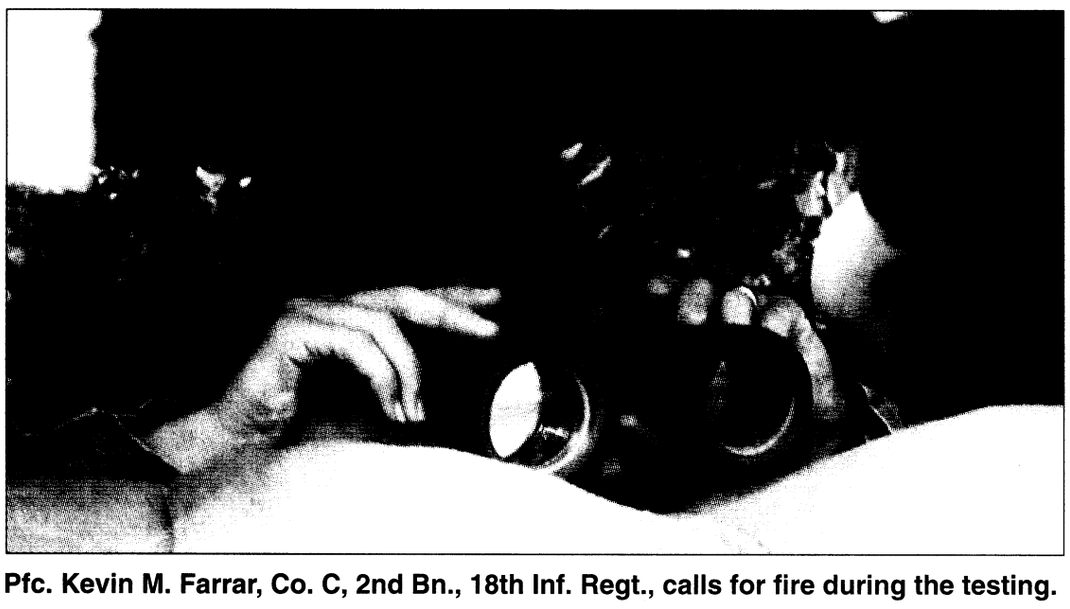
The second week of testing began on Sunday with the APFT and concluded Thursday with the EIB award ceremony at Burroughs Range. One hundred and eight candidates started the second week, and only 13 earned the badge, said Sgt. Maj. Wayne K. Uhden, operations and training sergeant major, 29th Inf. Regt. The 29th Infantry hosted the EIB this year.

This is a hard badge to earn, especially for the younger enlisted soldiers, Barnes said.

"They've had only a couple opportunities to put in place the basic training they've received," he said.

"Land navigation is one of the hardest events for the candidates because when you go to the field, it's the officers and senior noncommissioned officers who navigate; the junior guys don't navigate much," Barnes said.

The EIB is all about training, said Staff Sgt. Alan W. Austin, Co. B, 2nd Bn., 58th Inf. Regt., another site tester.



"I've been training for it for four weeks; you gotta have it in your heart," said Spc. Chris J. Gregory, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 2nd Bn., 11th Inf. Regt.

"I want my EIB," Gregory said.

"This is a hard course — it's physically and mentally challenging," said Spc. William M. Miller, Co. A, 2nd Bn., 29th Inf. Regt.

"The EIB tests a combination of the candidate's self-confidence and professional skill," said Uhden.

"The EIB helps to show your proficiency, especially if you're a second lieutenant," said 2nd Lt. Patrick M. Duggan, Co. D, 2nd Bn., 58th Inf. Regt. "They won't take you seriously in the infantry world without the EIB or a Ranger Tab."

Pfc. Kevin M. Farrar, Co. C, 2nd Bn., 18th Inf. Regt., calls for fire during the testing.

EIB candidate faces difficult odds, prevails

By Lori Egan
Bayonet staff writer

Imagine training and testing for the Expert Infantry Badge year after year, time after time. Finally, on your 10th attempt at earning the badge, everything is going OK; then your father dies.

This is exactly what happened to Staff Sgt. Robert Bennett, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 29th Infantry Regiment.

During the first week of testing, after completing two-thirds, Bennett had to return home to bury his father. He returned in order to start the testing process over again along with the second group of EIB candidates.

Bennett earned the EIB on his 10th attempt under adverse circumstances.

The test requires the candidates to remember so many nitpicky things, it's easy for soldiers to forget one little item that will cause them to fail, said Sgt. 1st Class Mickey L. Barnes, Company C, 2nd Battalion, 58th Infantry Regiment.

"It's amazing that he was able to complete the testing with all he was going through," said Nelson McGahee, training specialist for the 29th Inf. Regt.

"He is a very intense, hard-core person, and this just proves how much he really wanted to earn the EIB," McGahee said.

Sgt. 1st Class Kent A. Grosshans, Co. A, 2nd Bn., 29th Inf. Regt., gives the land navigation briefing for the day part of the test.

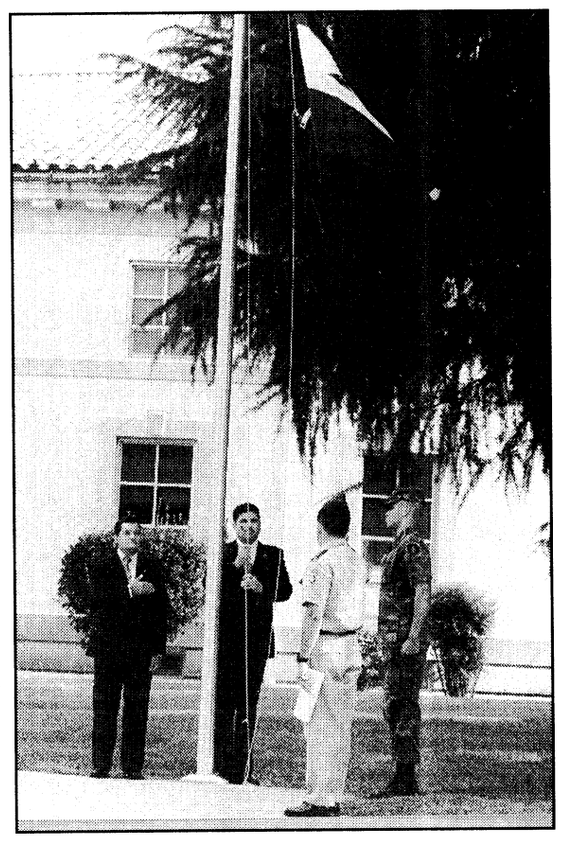
SOA flies Nicaraguan flag again

School of the Americas

Nicaragua's flag flies at the U.S. Army School of the Americas once more, for the first time in 17 years.



The royal-blue and white banner joined the U.S. flag and the 18 other flags from Latin America Sept. 15, in a ceremony led by Costa Rican Col. Walter Navarro, assistant school commandant. Every day, SOA raises the colors of each nation that sends students to study here. And recently, two Nicaraguan civilians joined the SOA student body.

SOA courses mirror U.S. Army programs, but the classes here are in Spanish. And now the school has a new course — Peace Operations. The five-week course covers human rights, the law, civil affairs, engineering, logistics and health in the unique arena of peacekeeping .

"We're trying to build teamwork and joint planning between civilians and the military," said Maj. German Rivera, course director.

The 21 Peace Operations students are from Bolivia, Brazil, Colombia, Costa Rica, Honduras, Nicaragua, El Salvador, Uruguay and Venezuela. The two ground-breaking Nicaraguans are Luis Adan Fley Gonzalez, vice-president of the National Resistance Party, and Alvaro Cermeno Castillo, advisor to the deputy minister of the presidency.

Fley said he's excited about his flag's return to SOA. "For 17 years, Nicaragua hasn't participated in the school," he said. "Now we're being included, and I'm glad."

Intl officers, NCOs contribute to U.S. Army

TRADOC News Service

FORT MONROE, Va. — A group of officers and noncommissioned officers at Fort Monroe are helping Training and Doctrine Command build the U.S. Army of the future — and they're not even Americans.

They are the representatives of 13 countries that maintain permanent liaison officers with the U.S. Army.

"It provides the opportunity to find out how other armies do business, and their organizational philosophy or training," said Lt. Col. Lance Jordan, commander of the TRADOC Field Element, which provides support to the LOs here and American LOs in other countries.

"The fact that there is a representative here from a particular nation provides a conduit for information flow."

Gen. William W. Hartzog, TRADOC commander, declared Sept. 20 as the first International Day to recognize the contributions these allied officers and NCOs make to the U.S. Army.

"(The ceremony) says that we are in one place at one time with common ideas and common thoughts and, indeed, we share them with each other," Hartzog said.

"We are headed into a time when ideas are very important. The world is extremely small and our allies and friends are more important every day. We are vital to each other and to global understanding

"I think this liaison program is an extraordinary one not only to our headquarters but to the United States Army and to our entire nation."

Netherlands army Col. Nanne Le Grand is the senior ranking officer among the LOs. He sees that position as "just being a help" to other LOs in adjusting to America and their jobs.

"My work here I see as working for both armies," Le Grand said. "What it means, I try to improve the information exchange between my army and the U.S. Army. I also try to improve cooperation."

Le Grand recently escorted a group of top Dutch research and development specialists to the Battle Command Battle Laboratories at Fort Leavenworth, Kan., and Fort Huachuca, Ariz. In the near future he will lead a party of Dutch officers to U.S. Army installations and facilities where work is being done to digitize the Army.

"The reason for the whole visit is to put together a report for our chief of the army staff to advise him on how to go forward on digitization," he said.

Le Grand recalled one instance where he was able to help the U.S. Army.

"When the U.S. Army changed through the bottom-up review to a smaller Army much more dependent on reserve forces, there was a question to the LOs, 'How does your army go about stocking your equipment and your spare parts to make them readily moveable?'" he said.

For 25 years the Netherlands army has been "drystocking" materiel so that sensitive equipment such as computers remains useable.

"Within four weeks I had a report here, in English, with pictures in it so they could see and read what's going on in the Netherlands," Le Grand said.

The colonel is a one-man operation and realizes that he cannot investigate and contribute to every issue affecting the two armies.

The largest LO organization at TRADOC is the German contingent, with two officers and three NCOs.

"We have a special case here," said Col. Helmut Fischer. "This is why I have a little staff."

As the senior German LO to Headquarters TRADOC, Fischer commands all the other German Army liaison officers throughout TRADOC. There is a German LO at each TRADOC installation where German soldiers train. A German army NCO is also on the faculty of the U.S. Army Sergeants Major Academy at Fort Bliss, Texas.

There are 33 U.S. Army officers performing similar duties with the armies of England, Turkey, Spain, Korea, Japan, Italy, Israel, Germany, France and Canada. Army LOs are also attached to the U.S. Marine Corps and Air Force.

The International Army Programs Directorate conducts military-to-military contacts with countries of the former Soviet Union, Latin America and the Pacific — 37 during the past year. It also coordinates TRADOC's involvement with NATO and the American, British, Canadian and Australian Armies Programs.

Feed the children

Founder and President Larry Jones

...with love.

It takes more than food to give a child self respect and hope. It takes the compassionate hands of love providing both food for the body and food for the inner spirit. For the past 16 years we have been committed to one mission . . . feed the children with help and hope. It's the kind of feeding we do best!

Last year we distributed more than 40 million pounds of food and other essential commodities. Over 80% was delivered right here in America.

By designating your contribution to Feed The Children you'll be investing in the future of our society . . . our children.

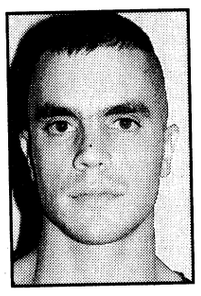
Soldiers graduate

By Scott Tenczar
Infantry Training Brigade



The soldiers in Company B, 2nd Battalion, 58th Infantry Regiment, graduated from one station unit training Sept. 15 at Kanell Field, Sand Hill.

Col. Gregory C. Camp, chief of staff, U.S. Army Infantry Center, was present to inspect the troops and provide remarks.

Camp praised the soldiers' families for supporting their sons during their transition into the Army as well as the cadre of Co. B for training the nation's newest line of infantrymen. Camp also praised the graduating soldiers for their commitment to the principle that freedom is not free.

During the ceremony, two soldiers received special recognition. Pfc. Ramon D. Sellers was the distinguished honor graduate, and Staff Sgt. Clifford G. Phillips was named drill sergeant of the cycle.

profile in excellence

Name: Staff Sgt. Brian T. Severino

Award or recognition: Fort Benning Noncommissioned Officer of the Quarter

MOS: 11B3V, Infantry ranger (airborne)

Unit: Company B, 4th Ranger Training Battalion

Years on the job: eight years in service, two years instructor

What were your reasons for joining the Army?
I had always wanted to join the Army.

Define your style of leadership.
I base my leadership style on the situation.

What person has most influenced your career?
Sgt. 1st Class Michael Huffman. He always pushed me to excel. I wouldn't be here if it were not for him.

If you were sergeant major of the Army for a day, what improvements would you make?
I would restructure all the Army's training programs, from basic training to all schools, in order to produce the best and most disciplined soldier.

What were your reasons for becoming an instructor?
I wanted to be able to have a part in teaching some of America's best.

Describe a memorable moment in your career.
Graduating from Ranger School was the greatest day in my career.

What are your future career plans?
I plan to retire as the sergeant major of the Army.

What others have to say about you:
Staff Sgt. Severino is one of the most respected NCOs in the 4th RTB. His devotion to mission accomplishment, self-determination and a realistic concern for soldiers make him one of the best in today's Army.

New honorary officer inducted at ITB battalion

By Scott A. Tenczar
Infantry Training Brigade

The 1st Battalion, 38th Infantry Regiment, has installed retired Col. Reginald "Jim" Hinton as its new honorary regimental colonel.

In an investiture ceremony Sept. 16, the official orders were read declaring Maj. Gen. John W. Hendrix's appointment of Hinton to the position. Hinton was nominated for the position by his predecessor, retired Maj. Gen. Warren G. Hodges. He will serve a three-year tenure that is renewable for an additional three years.

During the ceremony, Hinton affixed the regiment's battle streamers to the colors in tribute to the regiment's history. He was assisted by Command Sgt. Maj. Phillip H. Hafler and several soldiers wearing uniforms reminiscent of World Wars I and II and the Korean War. They represented those soldiers who served in the 38th Infantry Regiment when the battle streamers were awarded.

Hinton's role is to serve as a guide and mentor for the current generation of "The Rock of the Marne" soldiers. With more than 30 years of active service, he represents a living example of the regiment's achievements and provides a vital link with the past. Hinton's affiliation with the 38th Infantry dates back to the Korean War, where he served in the regiment as a heavy tank company commander, battalion executive officer and battalion commander.

In addition to his service in Korea, Hinton's career includes wartime service in World War II as an antitank platoon leader and company commander, as well as in Vietnam where he was the director for Psychological Operations, Headquarters, Military Assistance Command. Between wars Hinton served in a variety of command and staff positions in such varied locations as Austria; Fort Riley, Kan.; Norfolk, Va.; London; MacDill Air Force Base, Fla.; and Fort Campbell, Ky.

In his remarks, Hinton stressed the need for leaders to experiment and go beyond the book solution in solving problems. Providing advice in this capacity is where Hinton said he believes he can be of the most service.

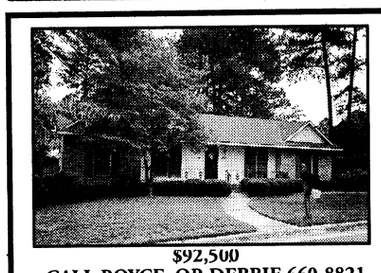
"Many things about leadership, and soldiering in general, are not always contained in manuals or other publications or presented in class but are passed on through experience and necessity," he remarked.

Beyond this, Hinton will strive to do his duty, stating:

"I am very pleased to follow in the footsteps of my good friend General Hodges as your honorary colonel and only hope that I may be able to make suitable contributions ... to the furtherance of the heraldry, support of the regiment and association with this unit, the 1st Battalion of the 38th."

The officers and men of the 1st Bn., 38th Inf. Regt. said they were likewise delighted to have such an experienced and decorated soldier associated with them.

"We are all proud and deeply honored to have Colonel Hinton, an outstanding soldier and great American, as the honorary colonel of the 38th Infantry Regiment," said Lt. Col. Kevin Connors, who commands the battalion.



Hinton's awards and decorations include: Silver Star with two oak leaf clusters, Legion of Merit with oak leaf cluster, the Bronze Star Medal with two oak leaf clusters and valor device, the Purple Heart with two oak leaf clusters and the Combat Infantryman Badge with one star.

507th receives award

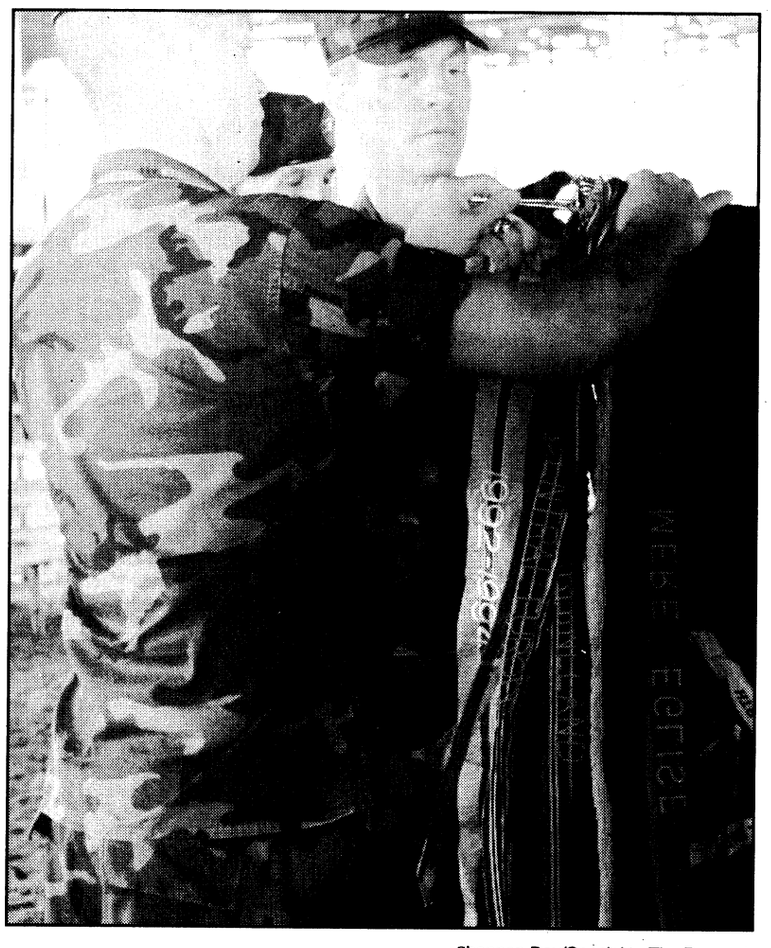
By Shannon Day
Special to The Bayonet©

In spite of the gloomy rain and gray skies Sept. 14, shining pride was evident on the faces of the soldiers assigned to the 1st Battalion (Airborne), 507th Infantry, 11th Infantry Regiment.

They waited in formation to be presented an award of high caliber that recognizes the elite — the Army Superior Unit Award.

The battalion was presented the award by Lt. Gen. Leonard D. Holder Jr., commander, U.S. Army Combined Arms Center and Fort Leavenworth, Kan. for the outstanding meritorious performance during peacetime of a difficult and challenging mission.

"You have earned (this award) many times over," Holder said.



From Oct. 1, 1992, to March 30, 1994, the battalion facilitated safe and efficient training for all airborne, pathfinder and jumpmaster students to standard, according to Holder.

"Your performance has been, for years, virtually flawless," Holder said.

Col. John Lewis, commander, 11th Inf. Regt., said he was not at all surprised by the award.

He said the battalion has always led the way with positive leadership, training to standard and caring for the soldier.

"What they do, they do extremely well," Lewis said.

BOSS Process Action Team Vision and Goals

Vision: The U.S. Army Infantry Center and Fort Benning is the best installation in the U.S. Army; and, as the premiere installation, it will implement and execute the best single soldier quality of life program in the Army.

Goals:

- Provide soldiers the best possible quality of life in single soldier quarters and living communities.
- Provide single soldiers a wide variety of well-planned, well-attended social and recreational activities.
- Develop a financial plan that provides for effective management of existing funds and generates a profit at the end of the fiscal year.
- Increase community involvement and volunteer service opportunities for single soldiers who wish to do so.
- Publicize all single soldier activities and promote the BOSS program.
- Provide professional development training for all BOSS representatives that will make them more effective in accomplishing the BOSS mission and in carrying out their specific duties and responsibilities.
- Sustain and improve the existing components of the post BOSS program.

BOSS announces vision, goals

By John W. Peeler
Garrison Commander's Office

Many questions are asked every day about what the BOSS program is and what the purpose and goals of the program are.

The answers to these questions are clearly defined by post BOSS President Spc. Michael James.

"The purpose of BOSS is to provide the best possible quality of life for all assigned single soldiers," he said. "My vision is for Fort Benning to have the best BOSS program in the United States Army.

"By setting goals, following through and getting the support of the chain of command, we will have the best Single Soldier Quality of Life program the Army has ever seen," James said.

James said he believes that the fielding of Fort Benning's single soldier quality of life regulation, U.S. Army Infantry Center Regulation 600-19; training of BOSS representatives; movement of the BOSS office to Infantry Hall and the addition of the Single Soldier Program Manager Spc. Stacey Morecraft have been instrumental to the success of the program to date.

Another innovative move toward continued success of the program has been the establishment of the BOSS process action team. The team has established seven goals for the upcoming fiscal year.

The team includes the 13 major subordinate commands' BOSS representatives; BOSS president; Single Soldier program manager; post command sergeant major; Garrison sergeant major; and Directorate of Community Activities, Directorate of Public Works and Army and Air Force Exchange Service representatives.

"During this fiscal year, our challenge is to fully integrate the BOSS program into every command, at every level and provide every single soldier the best quality of life possible," James said. "The mark of our success will be when our seven goals are realized through a fully developed, supported and resourced program in each major subordinate command spearheaded by the command team and BOSS representatives."

James said he is excited about the award money offered by the Single Soldier Living Community program from Training and Doctrine Command.

"To be able to compete for monies that will directly affect the way single soldiers live is a great opportunity for us to capitalize on," said Morecraft, the Single Soldier Quality of Life program manager.

"We will need everyone — single soldiers and (members of the) chain of command — involved to show who has the best program, and I know we have all the support to do it," Morecraft said.

To find out how you can become active in the BOSS program, contact your major subordinate command BOSS representative or call James at 545-6800.

Olympians
visit post schools, help students reach for Gold

By Shannon Day
Special to The Bayonet©

In America today, parents send their grade-school children off to school knowing the youngsters may encounter many distractions from their education, such as drugs and alcohol.

Parents watch reports on the evening news about a student shooting another student at a neighboring school and silently thank God it didn't happen at their child's school.

With such sobering problems in schools, it isn't always easy for children to stay focused on the gold at the end of the education rainbow.

Several Olympic Gold Medalists have teamed up with area businesses on a "keep reaching for the stars" campaign to show children that hard work and determination does pay off in the end — although the road to success can be a bumpy ride.

The Olympians traveled to the seven Fort Benning schools Sept. 20 and 21 and delivered messages on goal-setting and self-esteem.

Pablo Morales, who won two Gold Medals swimming in the 1992 Olympic Games and two Silver Medals in the 1984 Olympics, recounted the story of how it took him 20 years to realize his dream of a Gold Medal.

"I first realized I wanted a Gold Medal when I was 7," Morales told Faith Middle School students. "I was watching the Olympics on television, and I decided that was what I wanted to do."

His parents enrolled him in swim lessons.

He told the children in order to pass his first class, he had to be able to complete 17 tasks. He failed three times and even brought his beginning-swim-lesson report

Home fire safety awareness could help prevent tragedy

By Lori Egan
Bayonet staff writer

It was a long, hard day at work. When you got home you threw the clothes in the dryer and put dinner in the microwave. You turned on the nightly news and popped the top of your favorite beverage. Relaxing on the couch, you fell asleep.

Next thing you know, you awaken in a smoke-filled house, coughing, your lungs screaming for clean air as the smoke detector is screaming for attention.

You're lucky. The smoke detector worked — it woke you up. The major damage is smoke and to the clothes dryer, which had a short.

Each year fires in the home kill or injure thousands of people and cause hundreds of millions of dollars in property loss.

Since January, more than $80,000 worth of damage has resulted from reported fires in Fort Benning quarters, according to Brown.

October has been designated Fire Prevention Month with a theme of "watch what you heat." Anyone can visit the Main Post and Custer Road fire stations at any time during the month, seven days a week, 24 hours a day, said Hollis Brown, Directorate of Public Safety fire protection specialist.

During fire prevention week, which is Oct. 8 to 14, firefighters will visit schools to demonstrate the proper procedures to evacuate a burning home, Brown said.

The Fort Benning Fire Department has scheduled several events during the week to emphasize the importance of fire prevention to include a fire safety display at Infantry Hall and open house at all post fire stations.

Brown and Regis Beighley, U.S. Army Infantry Center safety manager, provided fire safety and prevention tips.

Most fire deaths occur between 11 p.m. and 6 a.m. while people are asleep, Brown said.

And a fire doubles in size every two minutes, Beighley said.

It's important for all people to know that if they are on fire: stop, drop and roll to put the flames out, he continued.

Residents, no matter where they live, should have a 2 1/2 pound ABC fire extinguisher, which is capable of putting out many types of home fires, Beighley said.

Brown said the fire department is willing to come to on-post quarters to conduct fire safety inspections, pointing out to residents potential hazards and how to correct them.

One thing Brown, Beighley and all the literature they provided stressed is the necessity for a fire alarm — one that works. Electric alarms should have a battery back up.

A good time to check alarms is when you reset clocks for daylight savings time in the fall and spring. Weak or dead batteries should be replaced, and extra smoke alarms can be installed in strategic locations.

For more information on fire safety, call Beighley at 545-3267 or Brown at 544-4613.

Following fire prevention tips can contribute to home safety

Infantry Branch Safety Office

• Check smoke detectors monthly. Vacuum detectors to prevent dust build up.

• Keep the number to the fire department near the telephone. Note that 911 works from all telephones.

• Practice fire evacuation plans.

• Keep stairways and walkways clear. Do not leave anything that could block your escape path. Be sure all exits are easily operable from the inside.

• Never leave an open flame unattended. Completely put out barbecues and fireplaces.

• Don't smoke in bed or when drowsy. Use a metal container to dump cigarette ashes.

• Always turn off electrical appliances when not in use. A towel can fall onto the stove, or an iron can be pulled off the ironing board.

• Avoid using multiple outlets. Use only one extension cord per appliance or ensure the proper size cord is used.

• Check electrical cords for frays, nicks or cuts. If the insulation is starting to wear thin on an extension cord, replace it.

• Never place cords underneath rugs, through doorways or do anything else that will build up heat from the flowing current. Electrical cords generate heat that could cause a fire.

• Never store combustibles (paper, clothes, etc.) on or around major appliances, such as, water heaters, stoves, microwave ovens and furnaces.

• Store flammable items in approved containers and in a place separate from the living areas.

• Charcoal briquettes can ignite spontaneously and should be kept in their original container and sealed. Separate charcoal from paper, clothing, flammable liquids, etc.

Cena Tipica draws crowd

By Judith Ginder
School of the Americas

The sounds of salsa filled the Officers' Club Sunday during the School of the Americas' annual Cena Tipica celebration.

Although SOA promotes Hispanic events throughout the year, the largest, Cena Tipica, comes during Hispanic Heritage Month. Literally "typical dinner," this year's party included a display of nations where each of the 18 Latin American countries at SOA set up booths displaying costumes, jewelry, artwork and handicrafts.

"All of the booths looked great this year; there were so many interesting things to look at," said Spc. Norma Jandrew, SOA supply clerk.

During the "typical dinner," guests got a chance to taste many different types of foods.

"The dinner tonight was a combination of several countries' styles of food," said Sgt. Pierka Jackson, SOA supply sergeant. "Panama, Puerto Rico, Mexico all of these were represented in the dinner."

The event of the evening, however, besides all of the great food, was the dancing by people from the different countries. Dressed in traditional costumes, they danced to the favorite tunes of their nations.

After the Spanish-style dinner and performances were over, the real dancing began. All were welcome to dance the night away to popular Latin American music, as well as to some American music. Young and old, experienced and inexperienced flooded the dance floor.

The day before, about 700 students from area schools came to the Officers' Club for the SOA Hispanic Culture Day. The students come every year to meet members of the Latin American community and to learn more about other nations. The students also visit the country booths and get to ask questions about the nations.

"The kids always enjoy speaking to people from the different countries when they come out for the SOA Culture Day," said Cecilia Alexander, SOA international military student officer.

Some 600 people were present for this year's Cena Tipica.

MILITARY APPRECIATION DAYS

Chattahoochee Valley Fair to open Oct 6

By Donna S. Budjenska
Special to The Bayonet©

Mark your calendars: the Chattahoochee Valley Fair is coming to Columbus.

Rides, agricultural shows, food vendors and a warehouse full of exhibits are available at special rates to active duty military identification card holders on both Sundays of the fair, which opens Oct. 6 and continues through Oct. 15.

Oct. 8 and 15 those active duty ID card holders pay a $3 gate fee, not the usual $5 for adults, said Elaine DeMarco, general manager.

During the week, the gates open at 9 a.m., while the carnival opens at 2 p.m. On Oct. 14, the carnival begins at noon, while both Sundays it opens at 1 p.m.

Other special gate rates can be had, too, DeMarco said. Advance tickets are available at CB&T Bank locations for $4.25 for adults; and tickets for youth ages 6 to 13 are $2 at the gate or $1.50 in advance. Children under 6 can enter free.

On Sundays, students with a school-affiliated club card pay half price.

One of the biggest bargains of the carnival, DeMarco said, is the wrist-stamp. On Oct. 9, 11, 12 and 15, carnival goers can have their wrists stamped for $12, and that allows them to enjoy all the rides from open until close without having to buy individual tickets for each ride.

The Chattahoochee Valley Fair will be located off Blanchard Boulevard, between Victory Drive and Jackson Street. It is the 78th annual such event.

Exhibits include a flower show, and professional arts and crafts. The main draw though, DeMarco said, is the agricultural competitions that involve 27 counties in Georgia and Alabama.

"You can spend a long day just going through the exhibits," DeMarco said.

If exhibit-going heightens your appetite, more than 22 religious, civic and fraternal organizations will have food concessions.

For more information about the Chattahoochee Valley Fair, call DeMarco at 324-7166.

Council food drive benefits ACS

By Michael E. Hubanks
Special correspondent

The Junior Officers' Council of Martin Army Community Hospital kicked off its year-long food drive Monday in the hospital's main lobby. The proceeds from this food drive benefit Army Community Service.

"The idea behind the food drive," said 2nd Lt. Charles Flowe, co-chair of the Junior Officers' Council, "is to broaden the Junior Officers' Council's function to one of an organization that is aware of the community's needs."

The food drive is unique in that it is not limited to a specific holiday. The drive is expanded to possibly include clothing and toys when the season arrives with a need in that area.

The Junior Officers' Council is an organization for junior officers in Medical Department Activity, Dental Activities and Veterinary Services to come together and meet each other — especially for new officers.

Food Drive at a glance

What: Junior Officers' Council year-long food drive to benefit ACS

Where: Martin Army Community Hospital Main Lobby

Information: call Capt. Nicole Bartley at 545-4444 or 2nd Lt. Charles Flowe at 544-1234

"Our goal is to get more junior officers involved in the Junior Officers' Council because the council has a wide range of people who do a lot for the community," Flowe said.

One main thing the organization does is teach new officers how to focus on the needs of the Army as well as how to succeed.

The Junior Officers' Council also has committees through which it works to accomplish many things, including: a public education and service committee, speakers committee and a social committee.

If you are a junior officer in MEDDAC, DENTAC or Veterinary Services and interested in joining or volunteering your time, contact Capt. Nicole Bartley, chairperson, at 545-4444; or Flowe at 544-1234 or watch the MEDDAC bulletin for upcoming events.

community briefs

ON POST

Trash collection — Refuse and recyclables will be picked up as normally scheduled in family housing areas Tuesday through Friday. However, there will be no yard waste collection at Fort Benning housing areas Oct. 9. The yard waste will be picked up Oct. 16 as normally scheduled.

For more information, call the Construction Inspection Branch at the Directorate of Public Works, 545-4749.

Police ball — The 54th Military Police Anniversary Ball will be Thursday 6 p.m. at the Officers' Club Supper Club. Reservation deadline is today.

Tickets are $17.50, and attire is dress blues for military, semi-formal for civilians. Photography is available.

For more information or to make a reservation, call 545-3044 or 545-3239.

Warrant officers briefing — Active duty, reserve and retired warrant officers may attend an officer professional development briefing on the noncommissioned officers evaluation report at the Officers' Club Nov. 1, noon to 1 p.m.

For more information, call Chief Warrant Officer 3 Ted Walker at 689-4949 or Warrant Officer 1 Lewis Wilson at 214-0783.

Wives' association — The Warrant Officers' Wives' Association will install its new officers Thursday at 7 p.m. at the Officers' Club Normandy Room. All warrant officers' wives are invited.

For more information, call Pamela Wade, 689-8343.

Support training — Family support group training for leaders and family support group volunteers of the 36th Engineer Group will be conducted Wednesday from 7 to 9 p.m. at the Family Unit Network Center, Building 359.

This training will cover topics such as organizing and structuring family support groups, fund-raisers, newsletters, authorized support, etc. Training is open to commanders, first sergeants, family support group leaders and volunteers. Call to confirm attendance.

Additional training classes are scheduled for Oct. 6 and 19, from 9 a.m. to noon and are open to commanders, first sergeants, family support group leaders and volunteers from other units.

For more information, call the FUN Center at 545-5246.

Commissary discounts — In October, the Commissary will be giving shoppers a discount on major manufacturers products, and, based on sales, a contribution will be made to the American Red Cross to support its services to the armed forces.

Military families wishing to support American Red Cross may do so by purchasing specially marked products throughout the Commissary during October. All the money raised will be used in the military community.

For more information, call 544-2213 or 545-5194.

Learning center — The Army Learning Center, located in Building 2611, Soldiers' Plaza, offers a wide variety of courses that are free and self-paced. Ability to type or knowledge of computers is not required. Topics include science, mathematics, adult literacy, test preparation, General Equivalency Diploma, management, computers and data processing and personal computer tutorials.

A dial-up capability allows users to remotely access the cyber-based instructional system from work or home terminals 24 hours a day, seven days a week. An IBM-compatible terminal with a graphics card, a modem and access disk are needed. The free access disk can be obtained at the Learning Center. You will need to bring a blank replacement disk with you.

All active duty, retired military, Army and Air Force Exchange Service, nonappropriated fund, Reserves and National Guard personnel are authorized to use the Army Learning Center.

The telephone number is 545-1436; the hours of operation are Monday through Friday, 7 a.m. to noon and 1 to 4 p.m.

Police recruiting — The Atlanta Police Department is recruiting again for additional officers.

Briefings will be at the Job Assistance Center in Building 2634, located in Soldiers' Plaza. These briefings will be at 9 a.m., 11 a.m. and 1:30 p.m. Applications will be distributed following the briefings.

Personnel will be available to answer questions and assist in completing the application. The hiring process can take six to 12 months.

Call the JAC at 545-2308 or 545-2309 to be scheduled.

Boy Scouts of America — The Boy Scouts of America organization at Fort Benning needs a senior-grade volunteer to act as district commissioner. The commissioner helps coordinate training and events for all the Boy Scouts and Cub Scouts on Fort Benning.

The position does require some scouting experience, but desire to serve is just as important. A commissioner is needed within the next few weeks.

Call Bill Patterson at 545-1515 for more information.

Membership cards — Youth Services annual membership cards became available Sept. 18. Beginning Sunday, membership and registration will be required for all children who participate in any YS program or activity or utilize the facilities. The cost per membership will be $20 per year, per family.

This requirement will work in much the same way as registration into other programs on the installation, such as Child Development Services.

This fee will alleviate the member and non-member fees that were offered last year; however, as always the additional fees associated with particular sports activities and lessons will continue to cover the specific materials or equipment required.

The additional fees are not new, and since all youth will be required to register and become members of YS, the additional fees assessed will be the same for all individuals participating in the same program or activity, for example, football, soccer, baseball, piano lessons, dance lessons, etc.

For more information, call Lamar Caldwell at 545-3070 or 545-3913.

AER college assistance — Soldiers with college-aged children often wonder how they can afford education costs. Many don't realize that part of the answer may be found from Army Emergency Relief.

AER provides financial assistance through scholarships. To qualify for financial assistance through AER, students must be enrolled, accepted or pending acceptance as a full-time student for the entire academic year in post-secondary educational institutions approved by the U.S. Department of Education.

Scholarships are awarded based on financial need, academic achievement and individual accomplishments.

Applications must be received by March 1 for the upcoming academic year.

For more information, stop by and visit AER, Building 2643, Soldiers' Plaza, 8 a.m. to 5 p.m., Monday through Friday.

Domestic violence — October is Domestic Violence Prevention Month at Fort Benning and Armywide. A display will be set up at the Army Community Services Building, 2643, during the month. Promotional items and brochures will be available for families.

For more information, call Rebecca Welch, Family Advocacy Program manager at 545-6969 or 545-5516.

AA — The Fort Benning Alcoholics Anonymous group meets every Monday, Thursday and Saturday at 7 p.m. in the basement of the Directorate of Community Activities, Building 241.

Professional development — Warrant officers and bosses may attend an officer professional development brief on the officer evaluation report at the Officers' Club Wednesday, noon to 1 p.m.

For more information, call Chief Warrant Officer 3 Ted Walker at 689-4949 or Warrant Officer 1 Lewis Wilson at 545-1113 or 545-5637.

OFF POST

Car wash — A car wash to support Santa's Castle will be Oct. 14, 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., at the NCOA Building, 2029 South Lumpkin Road, Columbus. Charges will be $3 for automobiles, $4 for trucks and $5 for vans.

ESL classes — Do you need English as a second language? Come to Tillinghurst High School at the corner of Buena Vista and Morris roads. The classes are free and run throughout the year Tuesdays and Thursdays from 6 to 9 p.m.

Students are placed in classes according to their level of need. There are competent teachers and 10 computers to help with vocabulary, pronunciation, spelling, grammar and everyday conversation.

For more information, call Myrtle Chalkley at 545-4539.

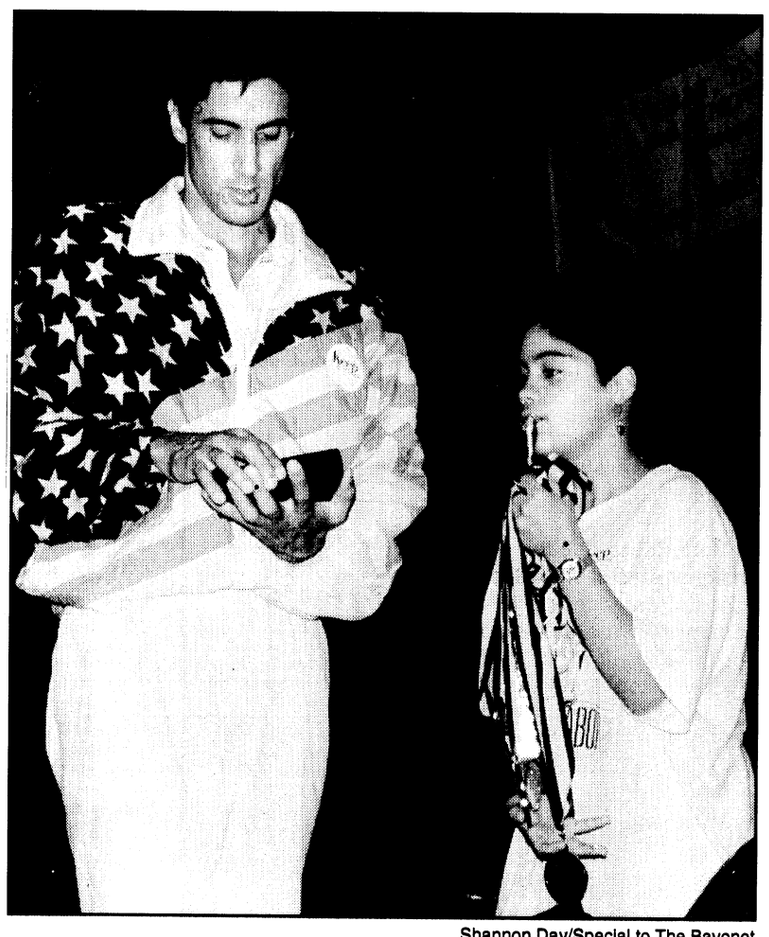
card to prove it.

He told the children how he focused on the tasks he couldn't do, and each time he passed more of them, until he passed them all on his fourth try.



"What I did was set a series of short-term goals," Morales said. "Sometimes it was tough to get up in the morning. I had to focus. I thought about my goals every day."

After 20 years, he achieved his dream.

"You can't even describe the feeling of achieving a lifelong goal," Morales said.

Other medalists speaking at the Fort Benning schools included John Naber, who won four Gold Medals, one Silver Medal and broke four world records swimming in the 1976 Olympics; Greg Barton, the first American to win an Olympic Gold Medal in kayaking; Nicole Haislett, who captured three Gold Medals in the 1992 Olympics; and Dave Wottle, who won a Gold Medal in the 800-meter run in the 1972 Olympics.

"This program has been great for the students," said Elaine Perkins, public information spokeswoman, Fort Benning Schools. "They have been learning about the athletes before (the Olympians) got here, and now they will get a chance to meet an Olympic Gold Medalist."

Shriners conduct screening

Columbus-Fort Benning Shrine Club

The Columbus-Fort Benning Shrine Club will conduct an "off-premises Screening Clinic" at the Shrine Club, 3202 Edgewood Road, Columbus, Saturday from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m.

There will also be a clinic in Macon at the Al Sihah Temple, 645 Poplar St., Oct. 7 from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m.

The purpose of these clinics is to locate children who have problems of the bone joints or muscles and children who have been burned.

Many families do not know where to turn for help for their children and are really frightened by the possible cost of corrective surgery and treatment. The Shrine Hospitals were established to help crippled and burned children regardless of income or status. The Shriners stand ready to help any child up to age 18, who can be treated by our hospitals at no cost to the families or legal guardians.

The 19 orthopedic Shriners Hospitals for Crippled Children treat children with problems such as scoliosis (curvature of the spine), osteogenesis imperfecta (brittle bone disease), clubfoot, dislocated hips, leg length discrepancies and other orthopedic problems. The three Shriners Burn Institutes help children who have been severely burned and children needing reconstructive or plastic surgery as a result of healed burns.

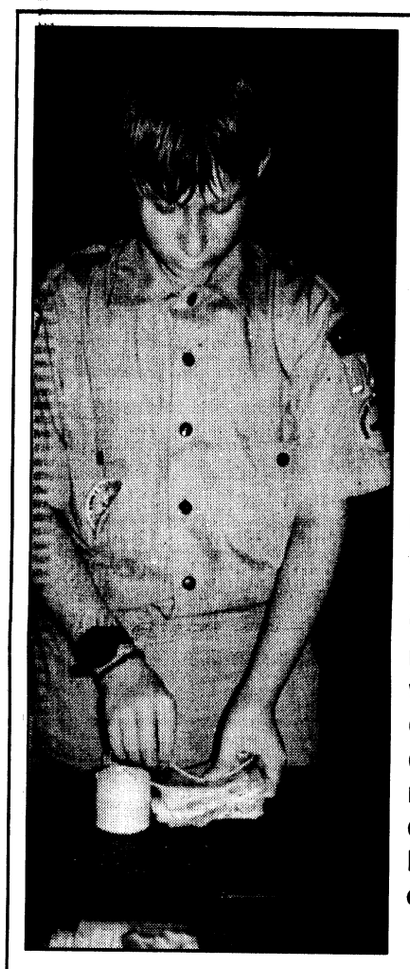
Additionally, three of the orthopedic Shriners Hospitals house special spinal cord injury units, which provide rehabilitative care and treatment to children recovering from spinal cord injuries. At all 22 Shriners Hospitals, children may be accepted for treatment up through their 18th birthday, regardless of their race, religion or relationship to a Shriner.

To date, Shriners Hospitals have helped more than 488,000 children build better lives.

For information, contact any Shriner or call the Columbus-Fort Benning Shrine Club at 561-5448 or the Al Sihah Temple in Macon at (912) 743-6386.

Radio control flyers soar again

Columbus-Fort Benning R/C Flyers Association Inc.



Plan for a free and exciting, fun-filled Saturday for your entire family by attending the Columbus-Fort Benning Radio Control Flyers Association "Fall Fly-In and Swap Meet" Oct. 7 from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. at the club's flying field near Fort Mitchell, Ala.

The club expects to have about 60 radio control pilots from Alabama, Georgia, Tennessee and Florida registered to fly more than 100 airplanes, helicopters, gliders and sky divers throughout the day.

The models will range from small aircraft with 18-inch wingspans weighing less than two pounds to a 100-pound, four-engine, giant-scale replica of a B-29 Woreld War II bomber with a 16-foot wings. Airspeeds will vary from about 5 to more than 100 mph. The highly skilled pilots will perform some unbelievable acrobatic maneuvers throughout the day.

A highlight of the all-day airshow will be flight demonstrations by the giant-scale B-29 bomber followed by sky diving exhibitions by radio controlled, scale-model jumpers at noon and 2 p.m. Many pilots and vendors will have new and used aircraft, engines, and other radio controlled related items on display for sale or trade.

Wrap it up

Mark Worth, 13, bundles Campbell's soup labels as part of his troop's community service project. Troop 127, Chattahoochee Council Boy Scouts, helped Debbie Snoke and others involved in a drive to collect labels to earn free playground equipment to be assembled near Russ Pond. The program, sponsored by Campbell's Soups, also rewards label collectors with computers and other education- and child-oriented equipment. There is a similar drive ongoing at Dexter Elementary School to earn computers.

Upcoming bazaar benefits community

Officers' Wives' Club

The Fort Benning Officers' Wives' Club invites everyone to the '95 Benning Bazaar — "A Red, White and Blue Christmas" — Nov. 4 from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. at Lawson Army Airfield, Hanger 2486.

This year more than 50 vendors will be on hand selling various items, such as baskets, angels, wood crafts, jewelry, calligraphy, dolls, stained glass, artwork, collectibles plus much more.

Food vendors and activities for children round out the bazaar's offerings.

The bazaar is open to the public; admission is $2 and children under 12 will be admitted free. All proceeds from the bazaar benefit the Fort Benning OWC Welfare and Scholarship fund for the tri-community area.

Yom Kippur a time for repentance, reconciliation

By Kenneth R. Williams
Infantry Training Brigade

reflections

When was the last time you took a long look at yourself?

I mean a good, close self-examination. Did you like what you saw? This attitude of soul-searching and repentance characterizes the 10-day period of penitence, prayer and fasting between Rosh Hashanah (Jewish New Year) and Yom Kippur, or the Day of Atonement, the most solemn day on the Jewish religious calendar. The Day of Atonement is the conclusion of the period of introspection.

On the Day of Atonement, in Biblical times, sacrifice was made for the sins of the nation of Israel. In the Torah (the Pentateuch) we read, "This is to be a lasting ordinance for you: On the 10th day of the seventh month you must deny yourselves and not do any work — whether native-born or an alien living among you because on this day atonement will be made for you, to cleanse you. Then, before the Lord, you will be clean from all your sins.' (Lev. 16:29-30. NIV) The Day of Atonement is a day of confession, forgiveness, and receiving "at-one-ment" with and from God.

The feast and celebration of the Day of Atonement is comprised of four elements, as described in Lev. 23:27-28.

First, it is to be a holy gathering before the Lord. The Yom Kippur celebration is a time when God's people enter into his presence as a whole. Individuals recognize that they belong to the community of God's people. As a nation, God's people are called to give an accounting of themselves, to draw near to his throne of mercy and to give him their undivided attention. God desires to demonstrate his power, love, mercy and forgiveness to his people.

Second, they were to "humble their souls." This was explained by later tradition to indicate fasting and repentance. Israelites understood that this was a day of mourning for their sins. The seriousness of this requirement is reiterated in Lev. 23 29: "If there is any person who will not humble himself on this same day, he shall be cut off from his people."

The great rabbinic fathers discussed the meaning of "afflict your souls." They agreed that affliction would need to be something in moderation and something that pertained to all human beings. Food is the answer. It is also considered improper to have unnecessary physical comforts such as marital relations. The wearing of any items made out of leather is forbidden because on Yom Kippur we realize that animals are made to suffer so that we can eat and have leather products.

Third, the people ceased from all labor. The Day of Atonement is a time of rest. The Bible describes Yom Kippur as the "Sabbath of Sabbaths," with "Sabbath" meaning a ceasing of labor. It is a day free from distractions, allowing one to focus totally on one's relationship with God and others. The prohibition against any form of labor was so serious in early times that the punishment was death.

Fourth, the main focus of the Day of Atonement in Biblical times was the ritual sacrifice performed by the high priest. The high priest represented the people before God, and as such he offered sacrifice for the sins of the nation. The high priest would select two identical goats and cast lots to determine which goat would be sacrificed. After sacrificing one of the goats, he sprinkled its blood on the altar. Then, the high priest would place his hands on the head of the other goat while confessing the sins of the people. The live goat, called the "scapegoat" (for "escape goat"), was then taken into the wilderness and pushed off a cliff. This sacrificial ritual symbolized the removal and cleansing of sin of the entire nation.

After the destruction of the Temple in Jerusalem in 70 A.D., sacrifice could no longer be carried out. Since that time, it is assumed that the day of Yom Kippur itself atones for Israel's sins. Whether or not sacrifice is made is not the issue. Emphasis is placed on instruction from the Talmud which states, "All Israel is responsible for one-another." When sincere repentance is made, God "remembers their sin no more." This Day of Atonement centers on reconciliation between man and man as well as man and God.

Today, many counselors are saying much of our emotional stress is because of unresolved conflict and unforgiveness in our lives. Who in your life do you need to forgive? From whom do you need to ask forgiveness? Why not take some time to enter into God's presence, do some soul searching and ask God's forgiveness. Ask him to help you forgive others. Reconcile yourself to all the people in your life.

Miracles may come if they're awaited expectantly

By John R. Houser
Martin Army Community Hospital

reflections

I recently attended a farewell dinner for four Army Nurse Corps officers from Martin Army Community Hospital. As the evening progressed, the individuals at our table entered into a lively discussion concerning the relationship of spirituality to holistic health care.

Eventually this conversation focused upon the subject of miracles and modern medicine. I was asked if I had ever seen a miracle (God working supernaturally bringing healing to a physical body that has an incurable medical condition). I said I had done extensive documentation on six cases where the miraculous could have occurred.

I then asked a doctor if he had ever seen a miracle. The doctor replied: "Chaplain, I would like to believe in miracles. But I've just never seen one." To this I quickly replied, "Maybe you're not looking for one!"

This incident reminded me of the ocean flounder — a type of fish that spends its whole adult life on its side, looking up for something edible to pass over its head. It believes that sooner or later, something good to eat is going to come into its sight and striking range. It waits expectantly, half buried in the soft ocean sand. Eventually, its wait pays off. A school of mullet or shiners swim over its position, and the rest is history.

In all my years of ocean fishing, I've never caught a hungry, half-starved, depressed flounder. They have always been the picture of health and vitality.

But what are you looking for today. Are you looking for trouble? Are you looking for a reason to divorce your mate? Are you looking for the doctor to find an incurable or untreatable illness in your body? Are you looking for a mediocre relationship with Christ?

Or, are you looking for stability, success, happiness in marriage, excellent physical health and an active and strong relationship with Christ?

I urge you to be like the flounder ... always expecting good to come into your path. I urge you to be like this hospital chaplain ... always expecting a miracle to come your way.

World Communion Sunday observed Oct 1

The first Sunday of October is World Communion Sunday.

reflections

It's a 24-hour period during which Christians all over the world take the sacrament of the Lord's Supper. The Lord's Supper is an outward expression, taking the bread and the wine, of an inward reality of Christ living in a Christian's heart. The Christian is spiritually nourished as an individual person and as a member of the body of Christ on Earth.

Here are excerpts from "Of the Imitation of Christ" written by Thomas a Kempis 500 years ago.

"You ought to go back to the Fountain of grace and divine mercy, to the Fountain of goodness and of all purity.

"Do not omit the holy communion for every small vexation and trouble, but rather proceed at once to confess your sins, and cheerfully forgive others all their offenses (Matt. 5:24). And if you have offended any, humbly crave pardon and God will readily forgive you.

"How happy is he and how acceptable to God, who so lives, and in such purity guards his conscience, that he is prepared and well disposed to communicate even every day, if it were in his power, and he might do it without others taking notice!

"If a person sometimes abstains out of humility, or by reason of some lawful cause preventing him, he is to be commended for his reverence. But if a drowsiness have crept over him, he must stir up himself, and do what lies in him, and the Lord will assist his desire, because of his good will, which is what God chiefly regards. But when he is lawfully hindered he will yet always have a good will, and a pious intention to communicate.

"For it is in the power of any devout person every day and every hour profitably and without hindrance to draw near to the spiritual communion of Christ. And yet on certain days and at times appointed, he ought to observe sacramentally, with affectionate reverence, and rather seek the honor and glory of God, than his own comfort."

New library section has religious titles

USAIC Chaplain Office

A section in the Sayers Memorial Library has been set aside to house religious books and videos provided by the Fort Benning ministry team for use by the Fort Benning community. Beginning Sunday, these items may be checked out for use through normal library procedures.

Each week, as space allows, this page will include a review of books and videos that are available.

Books:

"The Truths We Must Believe," by Dr. Chris Thurman

This companion volume to his bestseller, "The Lies We Believe," presents Thurman's 12 timeless principles that can lead you to greater emotional and spiritual health by helping you overcome self-defeating behaviors and attitudes that bind your marriage, faith and daily living.

"Restoring Relationships with Your Adult Children," by Karen O'Connor

Does it seem only yesterday that you brought that bundle of joy home from the hospital? Well, now that little "bundle" is an adult who may often seem like a stranger, O'Connor can help with those distant, strained, or even hostile interactions with your adult child. The key, she writes, is learning to relate to your grown children in a way that's more sensitive than assertive, more spiritual than custodial and more nurturing than managing.

She gives you five tools for rebuilding relationships and shows you how to avoid the dysfunctional roles parents often fall into.

Videos:

"So, Stick a Geranium in Your Hat and Be Happy!"

She brought you "splashes of joy" and "life's little sparkles." She showed you how to get rid of those "gloomees" for good. And now the Geranium Lady personally brings you her special blend of humor and encouragement. In this video, Barbara Johnson candidly shares how she was brought to despair through tragic family circumstances — and how God's grace led her back to joy.

"Molder of Dreams"

Guy Doud had a difficult childhood. But despite the odds he faced, he rose to become the winner of the 1986 National Teacher of the Year Award — and more importantly, a molder of dreams for the children he taught. This touching, often humorous film (starring Doud as himself) will inspire you to positively affect the lives of those around you, too.

Tips help make lunches healthful

Egleston Children's Hospital

Pondering what to pack in your child's lunchbox?

Egleston Children's Hospital at Emory University nutritionist Margaret Neely says lay off the chips and gooey desserts and sneak in some high-energy, low-fat foods.

"Lunch provides at least one-third of a child's nutrition each day," said the children's food guru, "so you'd better make the nutrients count."

Neely said good lunchtime nutrition is like money in the bank.

"You want a good return on your investment. Don't fill your children up with junk and fatty foods just to make their stomachs full. Give them sustained energy in return for the lunches you pack."

Children get prolonged energy from complex carbohydrates — pastas, whole grains, breads and crackers. And they definitely need protein found in yogurt, milk, cheese and sandwich meat.

The most important lunchtime tip Neely has to offer is this: variety is the spice of lunch.

"The best way to make sure your child gets the nutrients he or she needs is by offering a broad menu. Don't send the same old sandwich every day — adults get burned out on food, too."

Children can be turned onto raw veggies if they're dunked into no-fat dips. Munching on bite-sized foods with a sandwich is fun, but an a la carte item needn't be potato chips chock-full of fat. Celery filled with pimento cheese and chopped into tiny nuggets is a winning alternative to chips.

To top off your child's nutritional noontime fare, toss in an occasional sweet treat such as fat-free pudding or a low-fat cookie.

Neely advises overly conscientious parents that not every lunch has to be perfect. What's important is that lunches be perfectly palatable to our finicky eater's ever-changing palate.

Suggestions for brown baggers pack nutritional punch

To ensure your child gets the nutrients he or she needs at lunch, Egleston Children's Hospital's nutritionist, Margaret Neely, said to plan ahead.

While developing a lunch time plan, Neely suggested keeping a few things in mind:

• Broaden your child's taste for nutritional foods by varying the menu from week to week.

• Include your child in the planning process. With a little bit of compromising, together you can come up with a lunch that is nutritious and is guaranteed to be eaten.

• Make the contents fun. Surprise your young eater with colored plastic wrap or foods cut into shapes.

Neely offered the following lunch menus:

Monday — Traditional sandwich, preferably with lean meat and whole grain bread; cheese strips or "string" cheese; and plums cut into wedges.

Tuesday — Miniature lunch in a box — multiple food items placed in a sectioned airtight container. Contents may include lean ham cut into triangles, a variety of cheeses in fun shapes (use small cookie cutters), whole wheat crackers, grapes pulled from the stems and a small carton of yogurt.

Wednesday — Stuffed sandwich using pita bread and sneaking in lettuce, chopped celery, diced tomatoes and other vegetables along with tuna or chicken salad. Serve with light popcorn and fat-free pudding.

Thursday— Hot meal, which could be leftover chicken casserole or a low-fat pasta dish from a can. Serve with raw vegetables and a fat-free dip.

Friday — Free for all. Ask your child to plan the menu. He or she might choose to repeat a favorite meal from earlier in the week or decide to take part in a "special" meal from the school cafeteria, such as pizza.

ask the judge

By Francisco A. Vila
Staff Judge Advocate's Office

Q: Recently, I left my car at a mechanic's shop for repairs. The repairs took about a week, and when I went to pick up my car, I discovered that it had been broken into and the radio stolen. What can I do about this? Is the shop liable?

A: When you leave your car with a mechanic under these circumstances, you and the mechanic have entered into what is known as a "bailment." You have "bailed" your property to the mechanic, which gives rise to certain duties on the mechanic's part with respect to the care and safekeeping of the vehicle.

Generally speaking, a person in receipt of bailed property is required to use "ordinary care and diligence" in keeping the property safe and secure while in his or her possession. The definition of "ordinary care and diligence" is based on what a reasonable person would do or not do under the same circumstances. Thus, it will vary depending on the circumstances of each case. For example, if you, as the mechanic, know from experience that the area in which your shop is located is subject to a lot of vandalism, theft and the like, you probably would take more precautions to protect property than someone located in an area of low crime. However, bear in mind that no one can absolutely guarantee that theft or vandalism won't occur; all one can do is take reasonable precautions.

Before leaving valuable property in the care of another, it would be wise to inquire about the measures that will be taken to ensure safekeeping. Be aware that some shops will attempt to limit their liability by placing disclaiming language on work orders or other paperwork associated with the job. You should ask about the policy of the shop on this. If you don't like what you hear, consider taking your vehicle elsewhere. If it is possible to remove valuable property from your vehicle before leaving it, do so.

If a theft does occur, make sure that a police report is made. Sometimes, the theft is an inside job, and you will want to know if a police investigation bears this out. Theft by an employee of the shop is not the "ordinary care and diligence" to which you are entitled.

If you have questions concerning this, you can contact the Legal Assistance Division for an appointment to speak to an attorney at 545-3281.

afap update

Directorate of Community Activities

As part of the ongoing commitment to improve the quality of life for the total Army family, recent Army Family Action Plan issues have been resolved by post officials.

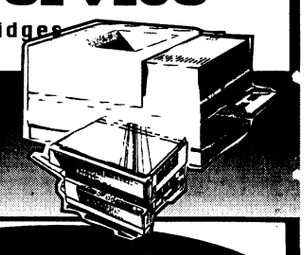
The AFAP is the management tool used to implement issues and give policy guidance. It identifies concerns of the Army family, determines actions required and assigns responsibility to implement actions to resolve the issues.

The most recent AFAP symposium was conducted in April. Since that time, installation agencies have worked to resolve many of the issues addressed at the symposium.

Delegates attending the symposium addressed many concerns. Each week, those concerns and the measures taken to resolve those concerns will be presented.

Issue:

There are no educational - physical skills classes for exceptional family members with learning and physical disabilities. Yes, the parents are responsible for the child, but they too experience "burn out."



Agency response:

• Providing a tutorial system to teach exceptional children is not a part of the overall mission of Army Community Service (Exceptional Family Member Program). However, EFMP can and does act as a referral resource agency to assist in matters relating to children and adults with specific handicapping conditions. Accordingly, programs for exceptional children (learning disabled, intellectually disabled, behavior or emotional disorders, speech impaired, etc.) are offered primarily within the Fort Benning Schools. The needs of some children may require additional services provided through programs available in the Columbus area. In addition, Student Support Teams consisting of classroom teachers, special education teachers, administrators, counselors, nurses, parents, etc., meet regularly to plan and implement educational strategies for students experiencing difficulty in any part of their school program. Parents with concern about their child's educational performance may refer their child to the Student Support Team by contacting the classroom teacher.

• Volunteers cannot be made to come into the home to help relieve parents. In addition, EFMP has to consider the possibility of exposure to liability suits. However, this service is already in place and is known as "Respite Care." This service is provided by professionals thru Child Development Services.

• Stress classes are already in place at Fort Benning and are available through the ACS Education Trainer Coordinator and the Alcohol and Drug Counseling Center. In addition, an EFMP Education Forum is offered quarterly to provide information and to alleviate stress as it relates to parents with a special needs child. The forum highlights civilian resources available to individuals with handicapping conditions and acts as an advocate base.

Athletes compete in Benning Summer Biathlon

By Brian R. Voller
Bayonet staff writer

The Fort Benning Summer Biathlon, conducted Sunday at English Range, delivered the action but failed to deliver in the summer category.

The top finishers in the female category were Allana Balkam in first place with a time of 29:00, Jackie Flood in second place with a time of 29:32 and Ashleah Bechtel in third place with a time of 31:53.

The top male finishers were Bobby McCready in first place with a time of 22:09, Tony Cox in second place with a time of 22:20 and Randall Pierce in third place with a time of 22:31.

Forty athletes gathered at the starting line early in the morning in 50-degree temperatures to compete in the biathlon, an event that consists of both running and marksmanship.

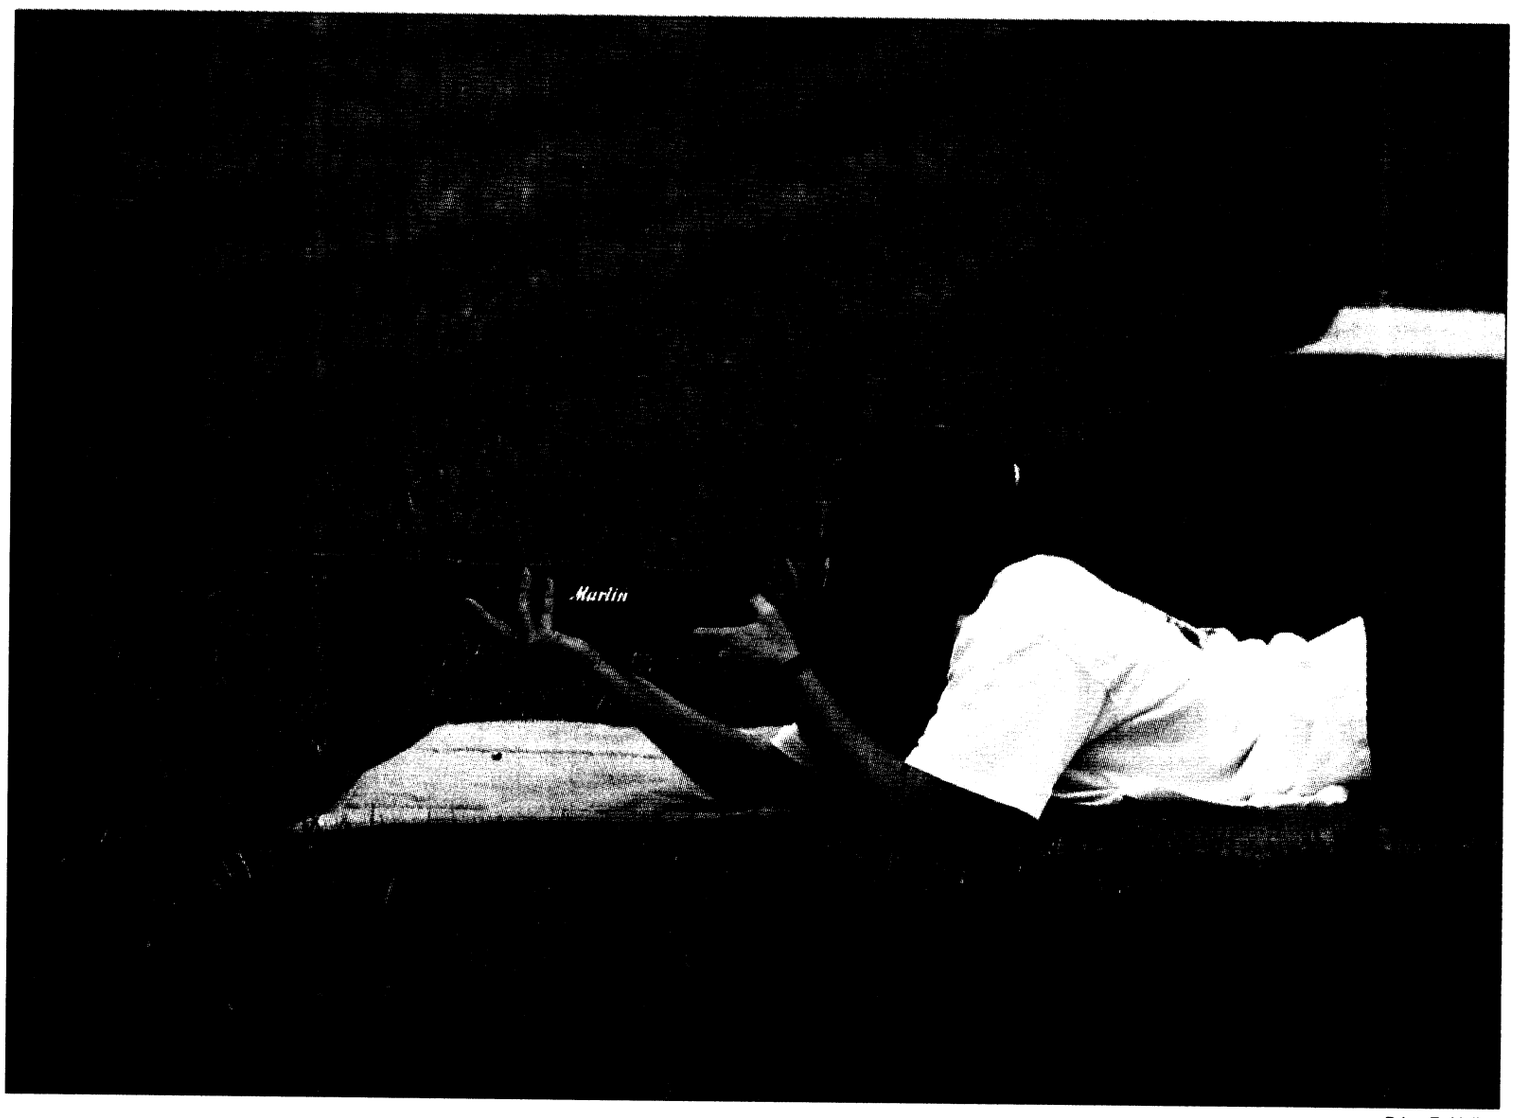
The race began with the No. 1 and No. 2 runners being started on the first one-mile loop. Every two minutes after the initial start, two more runners started on the first mile.

After the athletes completed the first mile, they were sent to a firing point where members of the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit were waiting with rifles. Each athlete was given five rounds to hit five targets while firing in the prone position.

Upon completing the first firing point, the athletes then took off on the second one mile loop of the biathlon. After they finished that mile, the athletes again moved into a firing position and received five rounds for five targets, but this time the athletes were required to fire while standing.

The competition ended with another full-mile loop to the finish line.

Athletes varied from experienced biathlon competitors to athletes competing in their first biathlon.



"This is my first time running in a biathlon, but it's my third year running cross country for my high school," said Trey Keadle, the top finisher in the male 10- to 19-year-old category. "Some friends and I decided it might be fun to run in a biathlon since we all run cross country and we like to go hunting."

One of the most experienced runners of the competition was Cox, who said he's been competing in biathlons for more than three years and that he enjoys the skill and the concentration of biathlons.

"It's a fun sport to do; it teaches you to control during the run and control during the shooting," Cox said. "A big part of it is doing it for the fun of it. It gives you more challenge than just your average road race."

The top finishers in the different age categories were as follows:

Males 14-19:
Fourth place: James DeRose, 43:27
Third place: Shane Grove, 27:09
Second place: Jake Andrews, 23:42
First place: Keadle, 22:59

Brian R. Voller

Ashleah Bechtel, who finished third in the competition, prepares to fire in the prone postition at five steel targets during the Fort Benning Summer Biathlon.

Males 20-29:
Fourth place: Renee Gomez, 23:39
Third place: Kame Kaneshiro, 23:34
Second place: Brad Reed, 22:51
First place: Rob Hamel, 22:50

Females 30-39:
Third place: Suzanna Harkins 38:09
Second place: Jean Essex, 32:44
First place: Jennifer Merkle, 32:37

Males 30-39:
Fourth place: Scott Merkle, 24:38
Third place: Mike Magee, 23:48
Second place: Clayton Edens, 23:20
First place: Scott Saxton, 23:01

Males 40-49:
Third place: Robert McGuirk, 32:59
Second place: Barry Flood, 31:55
First place: Dan VanBrunt, 24:24

Males 50-59:
First place: Nick Wigelius, 34:34

Males 60 plus:

USAMU takes top honors at games

By Marlene Tikal
USAMU Public Affairs Office

ROME — Two U.S. Army marksmanship unit soldiers and one Airman representing th U.S. Conseil International du Sport Militaire shooting team took top places Sept. 14 in the first day of International Rifle competition.

Airman 1st Class Deena Wigger captured the first Gold of the 1995 World Military Games, winning the women's 50-meter prone rifle competition, placing her in the finals.

> "... I feel certain the U.S. team will finish close to, if not at the top of, this competition."
> — Maj. Stephen Goff
> USAMU

Maj. Stephen Goff trailed just one point behind the first place finisher, Capt. Christian Planer of the Austrian team with a score of 572 out of a possible 600 points during first relay competition, placing him in the finals.

Capt. Matthew Suggs took third place in the second relay with a score of 562, also placing him in the finals.

The men's 300-meter slowfire competition concluded Sept. 16 after the remaining two relays had been fired, providing more possibilities for U.S. shooters to compete in the finals, especially with contenders like the reigning World Military Rifle Champion and two-time Olympian Capt. Glenn Dubis.

"At this time, I feel certain the U.S. team will finish close to, if not at the top of, this competition," Goff said. The U.S. team is currently holding steady in 1st place four points up on the Russian team.

"The U.S. team is solid and strong," according to Bill Krilling, U.S. CISM Rifle Team coach. "We have five very accomplished and skilled marksmen who are seasoned CISM competitors carrying us along. Marksmen Goff, Suggs and Dubis are accompanied by Olympians and Pan Am Gold medalists Sgt. Tommy Tamas and Capt. Webster Wright."

However, the USAMU marksmen are careful to temper confidence with caution as they are competing against not just traditionally strong shooters from Russia and Switzerland, but against world class marksman from 49 nations.

"All of the countries have sent their finest marksmen to compete in the World Military Games. So, obviously, we're up against some pretty talented competition," Suggs said.

And, if the competition wasn't enough to contend with, there are always problems from the weather to overcome.

"These marksmen are firing under extreme conditions," said Krilling.

High winds, which make it difficult for the shooter to maintain steady positions while firing in a standing and kneeling position, throw the rounds slightly off target. As a result, most of the shooter's scores have dropped significantly, Krilling said. Goff confirmed this when he said his score fell 10 points below his average.

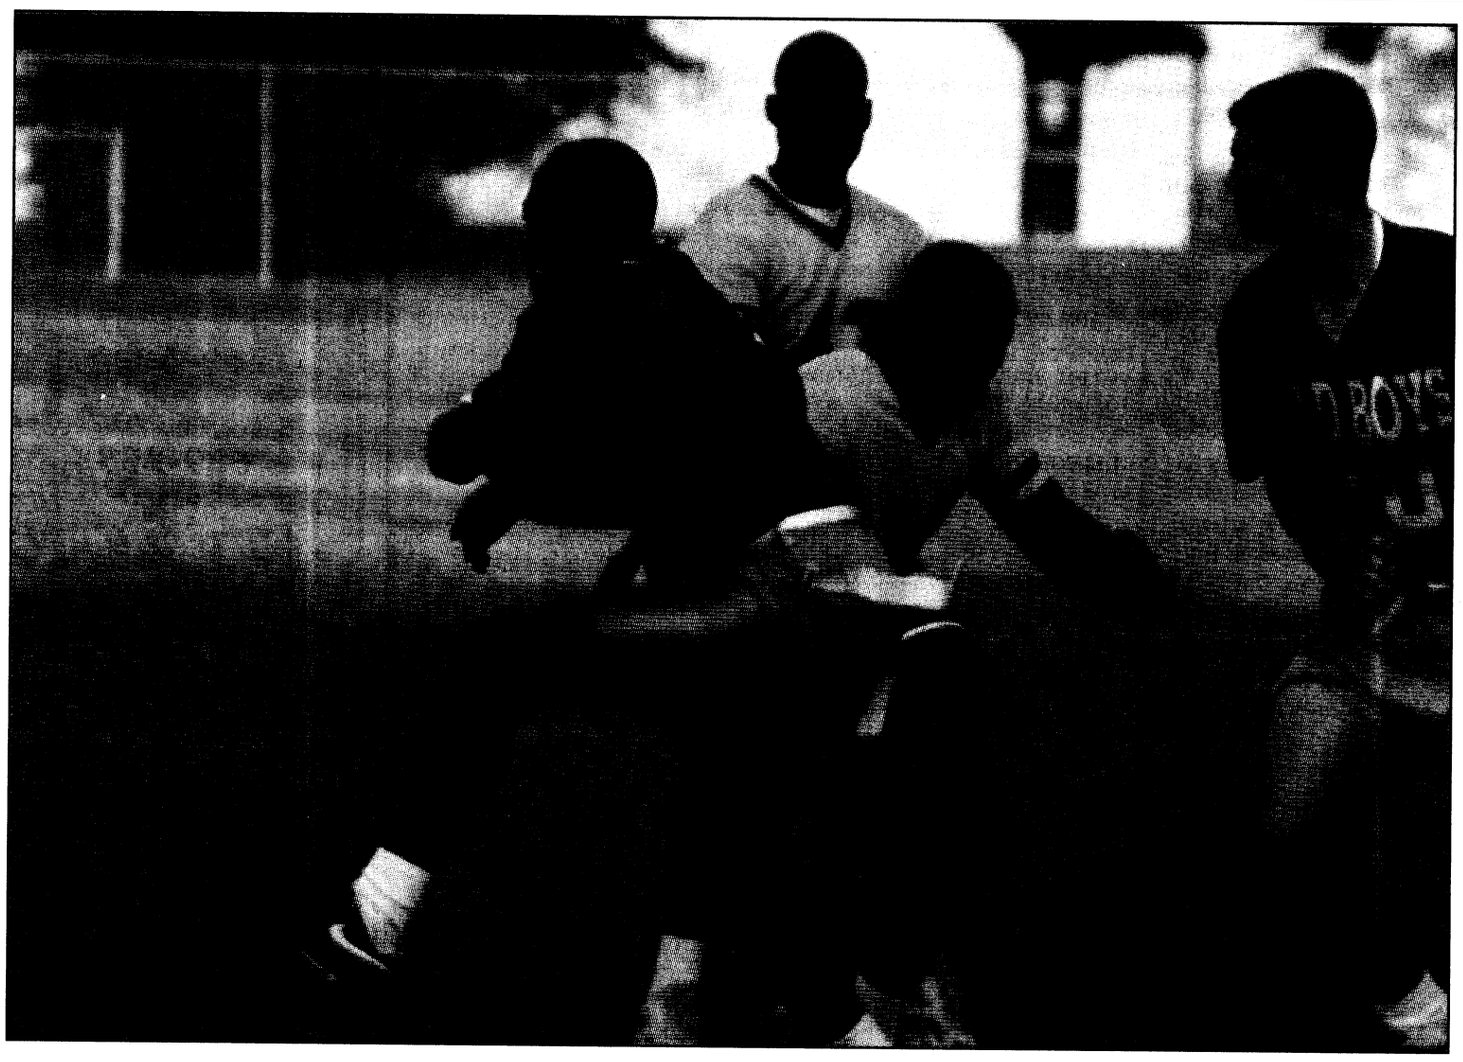
Youth footballers begin regular season

By John W. Peeler
Special correspondent

Youth services football kicked off its season Sept. 23 on a cold, rainy day on Blue Field with the Eagles scoring a 28-6 victory over the Seminoles.

The Seminoles won the coin toss but were unable to move the ball on their first possession with the Eagles taking over the ball when the Seminoles were unable to convert on a fourth down play.

The Eagles scored on their first possession by puching in a 9-yard touchdown run from running back Edwin Jackson. The Seminoles hurt themselves by giving up 29 costly penalty yards to the Eagle offense. The conversion attempt failed and the Eagles led the game 6-0.



The Seminoles came up short once again failing to move the ball on their next possession and were forced to turn over the the ball to the Eagles. Immediately the Eagles capitalized on the field position opening up a hole for running back Keneke Burkes, allowing him to scamper 40 yards for another touchdown. The conversion attempt was good and the Eagles quickly took a 14-0 lead.

The Seminoles responded with their own ground game after recovering a fumble. Seminoles running back Preston Hall answered Burkes touchdown run by rambling 53 yards for a touchdown of his own. The conversion attempt failed and left the Seminoles trailing 14-6.

The two teams continued battling into the third quarter with penalty yards plaguing the Seminoles, moving them from their 48-yard line back inside the 20-yard line, forcing them to punt. Eagles punt returner Jackson fielded the ball on the 30-yard line and raced down the sideline to his second touchdown of the game. Burkes added the two-point conversion and the Eagles took a commanding 22-6 lead.

The Seminoles continued their problems with getting on track by turning over the ball on downs. The Eagles put the game away on a fourth-down call. Quarterback Matt McCall hooked up with tight end Brian McClay for a touchdown on a 48-yard catch and run. The conversion attempt failed, but the Eagles still walked away with a 28-6 victory.

The Eagles have a week off with the Seminoles taking on the Dolphins in their next outing.

Golfers compete in benefit tournament

By Karen Taylor
Special Correspondent

The Follow Me golf course hosted a golf tournament Saturday to benefit the Santa's Castle charity fund.

The benefit tournament was organized by Staff Sgt. Timothy Hancomand and Capt. Kenneth Kelly, both of the 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment.

The top three teams each received trophies, but according to 1st Bn., 29th Inf. Regt., Commander Lt. Col. Robert Kissel, "The real winners of the tournament are the children who benefit from Santa's Castle."

Despite the inclement weather, the golfers continued through frequent downpours, thunder and lightning. The golfers raised $945 for Santa's Castle.

Santa's Castle benefits soldiers' families during the holidays by collecting and restoring gifts for the children whose parents cannot afford to provide an abundant Christmas.

To make donations to Santa's Castle, contact Tina Warren at 545-1233.

USAMU breaks records at national competition

U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit

Perhaps inspired by the record-breaking heat, soldiers from the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit did some record breaking of their own this summer.

In a stunning victory, the USAMU marksmen shot a score of 1,980 out of a total possible 2,000 and established a new service record in the National Match Course Team Championship at the Virginia Regionals in Quantico, Va.

The win is remarkable because the marksmen used modified M-16s, a rifle thought until recently to be substandard to the rifles commonly used in competition. The former service rifle record was set in 1981 by the U.S. Marine Corps using the M-14. Despite prevalent belief that the M-16 could never be used successfully in competition, the USAMU devoted itself to the Army's weapon of choice and has proven how successful it can be.

"The USAMU has worked hard the past two years to successfully convert to the M-16," said Robert Aylward, deputy commander of the USAMU. "The former team record, set in 1981, was one of the longest standing and well-respected records. To beat such a record shows that the M-16 is here to stay."

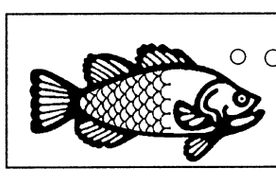
In another competition this summer, the USAMU Service Rifle Team won big, sweeping the 1995 National Matches at Camp Perry, Ohio.

In the Infantry Trophy Team Match, the team coached by Sgt. 1st Class Michael Delk and Staff Sgt. Carl Dooley placed first with a score of 1,404, followed by the team under Sgt. 1st Class Richard Remily and Staff Sgt. Gary Estes that shot a 1,398. Both scores blasted the former national match record of 1,375, with the first-place score standing as the new national record. The third-place team from the U.S. Marine Corps was more than 200 points behind.

Shooters on the winning team were Sgt. 1st Class Kenneth Gill, Sgt. 1st Class John Chubb, Sgt. Lewis Tippie, Sgt. Bruce McCauley, Cpl. Kevin McMahon and Spc. Tobie Tomlinson. The second-place team consisted of Staff Sgt. Rand Bentson, Sgt. Steven Armstrong, Sgt. Lance Dement, Cpl. Grant Singley, Spc. Norman Anderson and Spc. Barry Coleman.

For the first time in 11 years, Army shooters won the National Trophy Team Match. The team coached by Remily and lead by Dooley shot 2,951, a new record for competition. The shooters and their scores were Bentson with 497, Coleman with 489, Gill with 486, McMahon with 497, Boyd with 491 and Dement with 491. McMahon also claimed the high individual competitor in the team match. Bentson won the Forces Command trophy, while Coleman was awarded the Stark Trophy.

In the Enlisted Men's Team Match National Service Rifle Championships, Remily's team once again placed first with a score of 1,959, almost nine points above the second place Marines.



In the 1,000-yard Ironsight Match, Delk and coach Dooley lead Maj. Richard Hawkins, Gill, Staff Sgt. Kenneth Jones, Dement, Chubb and Boyd to victory with a score of 1,185.

Gill also claimed a trophy for the second consecutive year, winning the McCann Trophy. The trophy is awarded for the top scorer in the rapid fire aggregate, which is composed of six separate matches.

"The performances at Camp Perry are amazing and a credit to m new USAMU head coach, Frank Briggs," said D.I. Boyd, USAMU Chief of Competition.

"The shooters worked as a team to prove again that former Commander Col. Lory M. Johnson's decision to use the M16 was the right decision. There should be no doubt in anyone's mind after this year's record setting performances that the M16 rifle is now the dominant service rifle on the range."

Celebrations get benched in college

By Brian R. Voller
Bayonet staff writer

SIMPLY SPORTS

Every year one of the biggest stories to hit the sports pages across America concerns the changes in the rules made by different sports authorities.

In the past, we've seen such changes as the illegal defense in basketball, addition of the two-point conversion to pro football and, my favorite, the ever-popular instant replay.

This year, the National Collegiate Athletic Association added what I consider the most stupid rule in football history. This rule is called the celebration rule.

According to the celebration rule, any team caught celebrating after a touchdown or interception or essentially anything else good will be penalized 15 yards.

The problem is that it doesn't exactly establish what celebrating is. So, it's left to the zebra stripes on the field to determine if a team is celebrating or not.

This lack of detail leads to big problems when a celebration penalty is called. During the Florida State vs. Clemson game, a Clemson player got penalized for "high stepping" into the end zone. But on the next drive, a Florida State player scored a touchdown and gave fans high fives. He received no penalty. This caused the Clemson coach to turn into a rabid dog.

This lack of consistency is going to lead to bad blood between coaches and referees. The 15-yard penalty is generally awarded after a touchdown. That means the 15 yards are tacked onto the kickoff. This almost assures the opposing team good field position for the start of their next drive.

If there is anything that is going to ruin a touchdown, it's having an additional 15 yards given to the other team. Referees have a hard enough time deciding whether a touchdown was scored or not in the first place. The celebration rule just adds to the problems.

Despite what the world may think, referees are not the worst people on the earth, and they're not completly incompetent. They have one of the hardest jobs in the history of man. Imagine going to work every day knowing that 29,000 people hate your guts. This celebration rule justs adds to the crowds hatred of the referees.

A couple of weeks ago when Florida played Tennessee, the celebration rule was called for no reason. Ike Hilliard of Florida outran the entire Tennessee team for a touchdown. As he entered the end zone, he pointed at one of the Volunteers, and a split second later the referee threw his flag. Why?

To me this is not taunting or celebrating or for that matter poor sportsmanship. He simply beat the Volunteers into the end zone. There is nothing wrong with a little playfulness on the field.

This is my big question. Why does college football need this rule to begin with?

Are the players in college sports so emotionally scarred by celebrating that they need to be protected from it? Are the big, bad, defensive tackles holding each other on the sidelines because a running back "high-stepped" into the end zone? This rule makes it seem as if college ballplayers are big sissy boys.

These players work hard to get into the end zone, and they deserve to be able to celebrate an interception or a big completion. It's part of the game — which brings me to another point — this celebration rule really cuts back on a lot of things that add to college football. Taunting or saying "in your face" are aspects that make for a hard-hitting game. Some games are won because one team intimidated the other into failure.

Football is 100 percent aggression; there is no other way to look at it. The people making the rules in football need to let the players go out there and play. Picky little rules like this will only hold the players back from their full potential.

The bottom line — the celebration rule stinks. These are big boys playing a big-boy game. If they can't handle the taunting or the celebrating, they don't need to be on the field. Hopefully, the NCAA will figure this out and send the celebration rule to the same trash bin as the instant replay.

Beat your chest; it's hunting season

By Glenn A. Johnson
Fort Bliss , Texas, Monitor

commentary

In a recent issue of The Monitor there is a very nice story about dove hunting in Texas. That article said that any person hunting doves cannot use a shotgun above 10-gauge.

This got me thinking; I know how big a dove is and how large a hole a 10-gauge shotgun can make. This doesn't seem particularly fair, or practical.

Now, before all you hunters get your bright orange vests and tiger-stripe cammos in a knot, let me say that I think hunting is a fine sport.

There is nothing like the feel of downing an unsuspecting animal, stripping it of its skin/feathers and charring its flesh over an open fire. It's manly, it's primordial — by God it's American.

However, it could be just me, but I think we really need to even the odds a little better. I mean, where is the challenge in shooting a dove with a 10-gauge shotgun? Or worse yet, shooting a 60-pound deer with a Winchester .308 from 100 yards away? It just seems like overkill.

Maybe that kind of thing is sport to some, but to me it just seems sneaky.

A lot of other cultures still hunt like man was intended, with bravery and skill. I've seen Eskimos hunt a three-ton walrus with a knife and a harpoon, and I've seen South American natives hunt jaguars with blowguns. Now that type of hunting takes some skill. They don't have $1,000 Gortex camouflage outfits or 50x scopes attached to Weatherby rifles; it's just them and a few killer beasties.

So, what I propose is that we have similar laws for hunting established here in the good ol' U.S. of A.

First: The only thing hunters can wear is buckskin pants and moccasins (mud for camouflage is optional).

Secondly: For birds and small game, including deer under 75 pounds, hunters must use a sling or their bare hands and a knife with a blade no longer than four inches.

For game over 75 pounds, hunters may use a knife four inches or longer and a spear. And finally, for carnivorous game such as lions, tigers and bears, oh my, the hunter gets a loin cloth and his or her choice of large sharp sticks or pointed rocks. Believe me, if you can kill a bear with a sharp stick, you really are a hunter.

Finally: If you kill something you have to use every bit. Either eat it, wear it or make something from it. No more of that trophy hunting garbage.

You want a head hanging on the wall, you had better be prepared to scrounge up a recipe for pancreas and spleen gumbo or something and then be willing to hang your new opossum coat and squirrel-hide briefcase off of the tusks.

I heard a great description of hunting once: Pretend that you are playing catch with a baseball with your best friend. Only he has his back to you and doesn't know he's playing. Then, you throw the ball as hard as you can at his head.

I say get back to nature, get back to the basics and hunt like the real homosapiens of yore, with all the skill and brutality that God intended us.

No more Clan of the Easy Chair. No more reaching out and touching some dumb animal from 150 yards — save that for war. Get right in there and satisfy those primordial urges. That is, if you don't mind the risk and mess.

Bodybuilding championship to be conducted

By Brian R. Voller
Bayonet staff writer

The 12 Annual Bodybuilding Championship will be conducted at the Main NCO Club Oct. 14.

Weigh-ins will take place from 9 a.m. to 11 a.m. Oct. 14 at the Main NCO Club. Prejudging will begin with the women at noon, followed by the men at 12:30 p.m.

The competition categories for men are light weight (up to 160 pounds), middle weight (161 to 185 pounds) and heavy weight (186 pounds and above).

The categories for women are light weight (up to 125 pounds) and heavy weight (126 pounds and above).

Additional categories include Mr. and Ms. Fort Benning (restricted to Fort Benning personnel) and male and female masters (35 years and older).

The contest is open to all active duty personnel, Department of Defense civilians, retirees and family members; a one guest policy per military identification is eligible.

Awards will be presented to the top three finishers in all classes, plus the top two in the 35 and over age group. The registration fee is $25 and an additional $10 for crossover.

Entry deadline must be postmarked by today, late entry fee will be an additional $10. Registration sites are the Infantry Hall Fitness Center and the Sports Office at Doughboy Field.

Contestants must supply their own music on a cassette tape. Music must be no more than 90 seconds in length and must start at the beginning of the tape with no other music on the tape.

Cost for admission will be $2 per person for the prejudging competition and $5 per person for the finals competition.

Shallow water provides easier fishing

By Earl Bentz and Steve Price
Outboard Marine Corporation

"The lake may contain more than 100,000 acres and stretch 40 or 50 miles from end to end, but I'll probably only fish one or two tributary creeks."

That's the technique former world bass fishing champion Guido Hibdon uses when he's competing in national bass tournaments, and it's a technique anyone can use to find bass on strange water in a short time.

"I study a good lake map and pick one area of the lake just two to three miles long and concentrate there," Hibdon said.

Hibdon's area must meet certain requirements, he said, regardless of the time of year. The primary requirement is that it have two to four tributary creeks, because if he locates bass in one he wants to be able to duplicate the conditions nearby.

"The area I choose also has to have a lot of cover and structure available," Hibdon said. "I'll look for vegetation, boat docks, deep channels, points, flats or standing timber.

"These are all places bass can and will utilize, and I'll fish them all, but if they're close to each other I won't have to spend all my time running from place to place."

Hibdon said he also looks for subtle things his competition might miss. These include small cuts and channels hardly wide enough for his boat or secondary points within a cove or tributary that have deep water nearby.

Hibdon said he also likes using light line and small lures, a tactic shunned by most other anglers in big tournaments.

"Small lures always bring more strikes that larger ones," Hibdon said. "That means I will have more chances to boat bass than the other fishermen. I will probably lose more fish because of the light line, but I'll also land more, simple because I do have more opportunities."

10-Miler team prepares for D.C.

By Brian R. Voller
Bayonet staff writer

The Sports Branch, Community Recreation Division, conducted its Army 10-Miler team qualification run Sept. 16 at Santiago Fitness Center.

The team is preparing to represent Fort Benning at the Army 10-Miler competition Oct. 15 in Washington D.C.

Each team consists of five members, who were selected during the Fort Benning qualification run.

The members of this year's men's 10-Miler team are:

• Spc. Samuel Bobbitt, 26, U.S. Army Physical Fitness School. Bobbitt finished first in the overall competition with a time of 51:38.

• 2nd Lt. Rodger D. Knedel, 25, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 2nd Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment. Knedel finished in the second spot with a time of 56:06.

• Maj. David M. Millet, 32, 1st Bn., 11th Inf. Regt. Millet finished third with a time of 56:13.

• Sgt. 1st Class Lloyd McDonald, 39, Headquarters and Headquarters Detachment, Noncommissioned Officer Academy. Mc Donald finished fourth with an overall time of 56:44.

"Our strengths lie in that our second-, third- and fourth-place runners are all really close in times."

— Spc. Samuel Bobbitt
Fort Benning 10-Miler team

• Pvt. 2 Eric Corbett, 21, Company C, 3rd Bn., 75th Ranger Regt. Corbett finished fifth and took the final male slot for the 10-Miler team with a time of 1:01:11.

"Our strengths lie in that our second-, third- and fourth-place runners are all really close in times," Bobbitt said. "This race relies more on time than on place. If we all have a good day and we run hard, we should put out a good showing for Fort Benning."

Millet said he feels the men's team will benefit most from their past experiences competing in the Army 10-Miler.

"This is the fourth year I've run for Fort Benning in the Army 10-Miler," Millet said. "Bobbit, Knedel and McDonald have all competed in past 10-milers. Our overall experience will help us in D.C. I think the team we have will finish in the top three pretty easily."

The members of this year's female 10-Miler team are:

• Sgt. Sonia Lewis, 29, Co. B, 1st Bn. (Airborne), 507th Inf., 11th Inf. Regt. Lewis took the top female spot and the 10th overall spot with a time of 1:08:55.

• Capt. Millie Daniels, 39, 36th Engineer Group. Daniels finished second in the female category and 12th overall with a time of 1:10:44.

• Spc. Catherine Callahan, 23, 63rd Combat Support Equipment, 36th Eng. Grp. Callahan finished third and 14th overall with a time of 1:14:46.

• Capt. Carol Anderson, HHC 36th Eng. Grp., and

• 1st Lt. Yolanda Turner, 586th Eng. Grp., qualified for the 10-Miler team, with times taken at events other than the 10-Miler qualification run.

Daniels said the female 10-Miler team has been working out together, and they have added some training elements they learned they needed from last year.

"This year we've been training on more rolling hills than we did last year," Daniels said. "We've been running on these hills and going on 17-18 mile runs together. We been doing this to train for the Army 10-Miler and the Marine Corps Marathon, which we will run back to back with each other.

"I think we're better prepared this year than last year. Last year Callahan ran with shin splints; this year she's healed up nicely. I predict our top four will all finish under 1:10."

Daniels said the team's time trials were better this year than last years times, and she said she feels the Fort Benning is ready for the competition.

Dream teams return in hockey at '98 Olympics

By Brian R. Voller
Bayonet staff writer

SIMPLY SPORTS

One of the longest running debates in professional sports was whether professional athletes should be allowed to participate in the Olympic Games.

When the decision was finally made to allow professionals into the Olympics, the United States created the unforgettable Dream Team in basketball. The Dream Team went on to completely destroy the other teams by ridiculously large numbers.

This year, the National Hockey League decided it, too, would allow its athlete to compete in the Olympic Games in Nagano, Japan, in 1998, by postponing their regular season play from Feb. 9 to 24.

Of course, this decision will no doubt lead people to believe that the United States will create another Dream Team in hockey — one that will embarrass other countries and bring home another gold medal.

Don't be so certain. If you look closely at the players who now compete in the NHL, it becomes clear that not all of them are U.S. citizens. In fact, I think it's safe to assume that most of the league is now made up of players from other countries who have been drafted by NHL teams.

So what does this mean for the fate of a Dream Team in the hockey world? Well, to be perfectly honest, there will be a dream team for the United States; and there will be one in Canada, and in the Czech Republic and one in Russia. Basically, the only thing the professional players are going to add to the Olympics is another level of play.

Some good things the U.S. team can look forward to include "The Great One." Wayne Gretsky will put on an American uniform if he decides he is going to play. Gretsky is originally a citizen of Canada, but he became a United States citizen a couple of years ago.

Also, the United States gets to keep Brett Hull of the St. Louis Blues and Jeremy Roenick of the Chicago Blackhawks. Both of these players will add strong offense to an American dream team. Hull and Roenick are pretty decent bets to participate on an American dream team.

One of the problems the United States can look forward to is the fact that most of the top players in the world would play for other teams. Patrick Roy will be tending goal elsewhere, and Mario Lemieux will shed his Pittsburgh Penguins jersey to take on the United States.

I think the Olympic games will turn into the NHL all-star game for 1998, except the players will be out for blood. Teams from all over the world are going to come together to play each other's dream teams. Canada is going to come in with one of the best teams ever organized for an Olympic Games.

The addition of professional hockey players to the Olympics is going to be a welcome change and a strong addition to games that could be considered a little bit boring.

But the best aspect of the addition of the professionals is the level of competition it's going to bring. It's one thing to have NHL teams playing each other for their teams, but when you have them playing each other for their countries — look out.

The Dream Team in basketball was cool and interesting to watch the first time, but I think the constant destruction of the other teams will get boring fast.

There isn't a country in the world that can play at the same level as the U.S. dream teams. The addition of hockey professionals is more interesting because it will bring some of the most memorable Olympic Games the world has seen in a long time.

SOA defeats 2/18 in soccer championship

By Marc G..Turchin
USAIC Public Affairs Office

The School of the Americas defeated 2nd Battalion, 18th Infantry Regiment, 2-0 in the final game of the 1995 Fort Benning soccer season at Roberts Field Sept. 28.

This game was the culmination of a four-team, single elimination, round robin tournament.

Only the top four teams at the end of the regular season were entered into the season tournament.

The season champion, 29th Inf. Regt., was pitted against the fourth place team, 2nd Bn., 18th Inf. Regt., in the first semi-final game. In a huge upset, 2nd Bn., 18th Inf. Regt., whipped the 29th Inf. Regt. 3-1.

In the second semi-final game, SOA slammed 3rd Bn., 75th Ranger Regt., by the same score, 3-1. Both games were played Sept. 26.

The scene was set to distinguish who was the best.

The different styles of soccer were evident from the opening kick-off. SOA played the short pass, with players making runs to and from the ball, which the Latin American countries are known for. The team from 2nd Bn., 18th Inf. Regt., played the traditional American version of kick the ball high and long and run and get under it. Both teams played their style well, but one team had to win.

For 25 or so minutes, both SOA and 2nd Bn., 18th Inf. Regt., battled back and forth to put the ball into the net. SOA put more shots on goal than their opponent, but still the score stood at 0-0.

Right before halftime, SOA got on the scoreboard with a rocket shot by Mario S. Chinchilla. He had a defender on his back, and the goalkeeper charging, then he sliced the ball into the left corner of the goal. The half ended with the score 1-0.

The second half started with the players from 2nd Bn., 18th Inf. Regt., showing great enthusiasm and making things happen, but they came up short on the attempts to score.

Almost midway through the second half, Claudio Meier headed a crossing shot from the left winger into the back of the net for the second and final score of the night.

SOA then turned their game from an offensive to a defensive one to protect their lead. Second Bn., 18th Inf. Regt., had a few chances to get a score near the end of the game but were unsuccessful. The final whistle blew with SOA victorious.

After the game, the team members shook hands, and trophies were handed out to both teams.

Here is a listing of the final standings for the season and tournament:

USAMU continues sweep

U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit

The U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit's Service Rifle Team continues to sweep competition across the country, taking four state titles in three weeks.

Two teams from the USAMU went two different directions to win state championships for the U.S. Army concurrently in the Florida State Championship in Okeechobee, Fla., and the Tennessee State Championship in Oakridge, Tenn., Sept. 9 and 10. The next weekend, Sept. 16 and 17, the teams met in San Antonio, Texas, to take the Texas State Championship. Then it was on to Georgia to win the title at home.

The USAMU team competing in Florida blasted the Marine Corps team by 15 points with a 1,970 out of 2,000 possible points. The team, comprised of Staff Sgt. Rand Bentson, Spc. Tobie Tomlinson, Spc. Barry Coleman and Sgt. Lew Tippie, was lead by team captain, Sgt. Bruce McCauley, and team coach Staff Sgt. Carl Dooley.

In Tennessee, the USAMU Service Rifle Team won with a 1,971. The team members were Sgt. 1st Class John Chubb, Sgt. 1st Class Kenneth Gill, Sgt. Steve Armstrong and Sgt. Charles Coffey, lead by team captain Sgt. 1st Class Michael Delk and team coach Staff Sgt. Gary Estes.

"The Texas match was brutal," Tippie said. "The wind started picking up at the 300-yard line and was brutal once we got to the 600."

Yet the two USAMU service rifle teams took the top two places in the championship. The team lead by Dooley took the championship with a 1,953 with the second place team lead by Remily following closely behind with a 1,942.

Dooley's team racked up the championship at Fort Benning with a score of 1,963. Again Remily's team took second with a 1,938 then."

In individual competition, Tippie captured the Texas state title beating USAMU teammate McCauley by only one point with a score 784 of a possible 800.

"It came down to the last shot of the match," Tippie said. "He had me beat until the end."

In Florida, Coleman emerged victorious as the Florida state individual champion with a score of 791 of 800. In Tennessee and Georgia, USAMU sharpshooters took second and third in individual competition. Gill won second in the Tennessee championship on a tie-breaker over teammate Chubb with a score of 983 out of 1,000. At Fort Benning, Tippie beat teammate Spc. Norm Anderson by only one point with a score of 789.

The teams just came off a two-week break from competition after a dynamite summer season, Dooley said. "Splitting the team up to go to different matches can be really tough — but they came out on top again.

"The team has performed very well," Dooley said. "They are really coming together; their confidence is up."

Now it's back to training for the Mini-Interservice in December. "The team is eager to continue to compete and win," Dooley said.

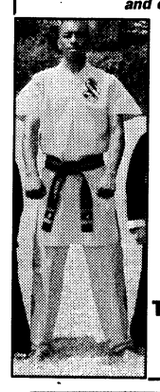
Water level can help you locate bass

By Earl Bentz and Steve Price
Outboard Marine Corporation

No matter how large or small the lake bass tournament pro Randy Dearman is fishing, 100 acres or 100,000 acres, the shoreline is the first thing that tells him where to begin looking for bass.

"What I try to determine immediately is whether the water level is rising or falling," said Dearman. "That will be the first major key that helps pinpoint bass, and a quick glance at the shoreline normally shows you what the water is doing."

If the lake level is rising, continued Dearman, the bass will move up into shallow water. If the lake level is falling, the bass will move out toward deeper water.



"This occurs everywhere in any lake including the tributary creeks, the bays and the main lake," he said. "The more drastic the water level change, the faster the bass will re-locate."

When the water is falling, the previous water line will usually be visible along the shoreline, especially on trees and rocks. When the water is rising, this water line will not be present. If the lake level appears to be holding steady, Dearman said he may put a stick in the ground at the water level, or he will note the level on a particularly prominent rock that he can check each day.

Dearman said he believes baitfish may be the first to move shallow when the lake level is rising because they can take advantage of the newly flooded cover. Bass move shallow to feed on the baitfish as well as on other foods that get washed into the lake.

"Another thing that happens is that water closest to the shore may actually be the clearest, especially if vegetation is present," Dearman said. "Bass do not particularly like extremely muddy water."

Fast-rising water will not only move bass quickly but also long distances. When the water level is dropping, bass move to the first available cover or structure, such as bushes, standing timber, ditches or channel breaks.

afap update

Directorate of Community Activities

The Army Family Action Plan is the management tool used to implement issues and give policy guidance on Army quality of life. It identifies concerns of the Army family, determines actions required and assigns responsibility to implement actions to resolve the issues.

Since the most recent AFAP symposium in April, installation agencies have worked to resolve many of the issues raised.

Issue:

Family members who are working in temporary jobs are unable to get into the office to check the job list Thursday or Friday.

Agency response: Because of the cut backs in federal funds, the extensive number of job listings and the inability to prescreen clients (which is a major request from private sector employers), it is necessary for the clients to come into the office to check the job list.

Issue:

Sponsors are often relied on to provide information to the spouses. Information does not reach the spouses. As a result, spouses do not attend the orientation briefings and other activities.

Agency response:

• Sponsors have a responsibility to provide family members with necessary information to ensure family preparedness. However, sponsors are not the only avenue utilized to ensure family members receive information. Many other media forms are used to disseminate information (i.e., newsletters, marquees, The Bayonet, the Fort Benning channel and civilian newspapers).

• Any Family Support Group that would like to have a speaker address their group can contact the agency directly or contact the family support group coordinator for assistance. Installation agencies can provide resource speakers, and there are many different subjects that may be of interest to FSGs that may be addressed by installation agencies.

Issue:

Child Development Services needs to provide more vacation for children enrolled in day care. Two weeks isn't enough for the whole year.

Agency response:

• Guidance on the vacation time for children enrolled in the Department of Army's Child Development Services Program is received from HQDA. However, the two weeks of free vacation provided by CDS exceeds the available services provided in the civilian community.

• To continue to provide quality services, it would not be economically feasible to extend the vacation time without charge. We would not be able to afford the same level of quality now provided.

For additional information, contact the AFAP Coordinator at 545-5246

Domestic violence

Cases in military number in the thousands, but awareness may help break the cycle

By Becky Welch
Army Community Services Family Advocacy Program

commentary

Recent statistics show that four out of five reports of domestic violence in the military are substantiated. Annually, more than 16,000 cases are handled in the military.

These sad statistics hide the extent of the harm that is occurring. It is still true, despite efforts to improve public awareness, that many families trapped in the cycle of violence remain silent.

The harm does not stop at the married couple. Approximately half of batterers also intentionally injure their children physically or sexually. Additionally, research shows that children who witness violence in their homes (even through the walls) are adversely impacted in a variety of ways.

October 1995 marks Domestic Violence Prevention Month at Fort Benning and Armywide. But the campaign to prevent domestic violence can and must be a year-round concern. Without a communitywide commitment to end the violence in our homes, we will only find ourselves back here a year from now measuring the hurt.

The violence must stop. Not only are our families threatened, but the fundamental mission of readiness is being undermined. Batterers who fail to come forward for assistance are causing a great burden on families and on the service.

We are beginning to recognize that prevention is the key. First, we need to prevent violence from continuing. Second, we need to recognize that every military couple lives under the risks that can, if not addressed, put families at higher risk for battering. Finally, prevention will be successful when the entire community understands that family violence is unacceptable and that positive support for couples and families is what is needed.

Prevention of this kind takes partnership. That partnership must include leadership, the helping system, the media, all military and civilian personnel and their families. As Family Advocacy Program manager at Fort Benning, I am calling on everyone to take the lead. Get involved in the move to prevent domestic violence. I urge anyone who wants this campaign to work to call the Family Advocacy Office (545-3344) for prevention information and referral.

A display will be set up at Building 2643 during the month of October. Promotional items and brochures will be free to military families. The resources are out there. Use them.

I am working to make every home violence free. What are you doing?

Safety seat savvy gives infants needed support

Georgia Department of Human Resources

Infants riding in child safety seats should face rearward until they are one year old, according to the American Academy of Pediatrics.

"This recommendation is based on the infant's need to have critical neck and head support that could help him survive an accident," says Virginia Davis Floyd, M.D., director of Family Health Services for the Georgia Department of Human Resources Division of Public Health. "After age one, the seat can be turned around to face forward. The child should continue to use a safety seat until age three. And remember, if the car has a passenger side air bag, the infant's seat should be installed in the back seat of the car."

In the past, child safety experts recommended that infant car safety seats face rearward for the first six months of the child's life.

Dear John,
You asked me about a good transmission shop, so I'm recommending: Generic Transmission in Phenix City. They're only ten minutes from post--You'll save money, and most important of all: You'll have peace of mind.
The owner, Jimmy, is as honest as they come, and does quality work. The number is: 297-1767, so call him now. Glad to help.
Regards, Al

"We've got something to smile about."
We're all smiles at NovaCare. Although working for an industry leader is definitely something to sing about...watching your patient improve can really make your heart fill with joy. Just ask Michael.
"As a therapist, there are certain things I expect to get back from the job. Things like gratification. A sense of achievement. Seeing a patient smile with their eyes. Luckily, I get all of this and more with Novacare. I've worked in other environments, but never seen a group of people who are collectively more dedicated than the professionals at NovaCare. You may wonder why smiles are so important to me. The answer is simple. It's the reason I became a therapist in the first place."
You'll smile about our compensation package, too. At Novacare, we realize that as a therapist, you have a lot of choices. That's why we strive to become the right choice for you. We'll make it worth your while with generous vacation allowances, solidly competitive salaries, and medical benefits that begin when you do.
To find out more about current opportunities in AL, GA, SC or TN, simply call Carla Wright at 1-800-394-5997. For FL, KY, LA or MS, call Keith Frein at 1-800-633-0880. EOE.

Hurricane cleanup

It was early morning Oct. 3 when the 17th Air Support Operations Squadron, C Flight, at Lawson Army Airfield got the official word: Hurricane Opal was on her way.

After hearing from the National Hurricane Center, Capt. Curtis Winstead, flight commander, and his crew started tracking the storm's progress, giving the Emergency Operations Center in Infantry Hall a heads up.

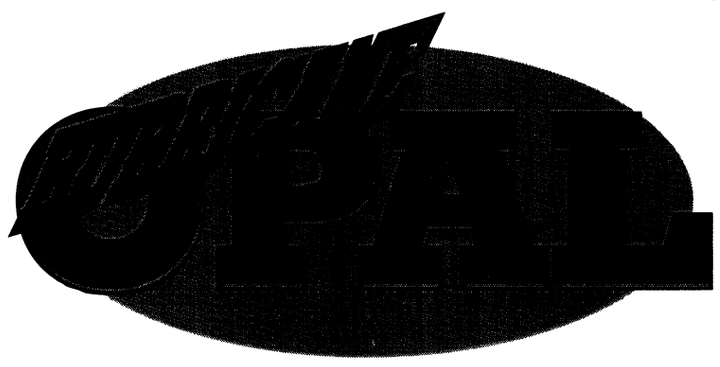
By 8 a.m. the next day, Winstead was briefing Post Commanding General Maj. Gen. John W. Hendrix and all brigade commanders: "Expect winds from 50 to 70 knots (about 58 to 80 mph) to occur between midnight and 2 a.m. Oct. 5."

At that point, the directorates of Public Works, Logistics, Transportation and Community Activities, the Adjutant General and others whom Winstead called "major players" began initiating their own emergency operations; for many agencies, that involved calling in works crews to stay past regular business hours to prepare for the anticipated cleanup.

Hendrix ordered all non-essential personnel home; and all over post, hatches were battened down.

The weather squadron's predictions bore out. Airman Greg Adams was the observer that night, and he went out into the storm every 20 minutes to take full readings: wind speed, temperature, barometric pressure. After winds knocked out power to the station's sensor equipment, Senior Airman Todd M. Landeche headed out, manual wind-speed reader in hand, to measure the forces that Opal was bringing to bear on Fort Benning. On the runway, Landeche measured a wind speed of 64 mph at 12:10 a.m. Oct. 5.

"The winds could well have been higher than 53 knots (about 64 mph)," he said. "We didn't have constant information (from the sensors) like we usually do."



Meanwhile, those winds, whatever their speed, were taking their toll on the post's power supply. Roy Bethel, chief of the Energy and Utility division of DPW, said crews were out the night of the 4th, trying to restore power as it was interrupted.

"Then it got unsafe," he said, "and we pulled crews back in — and we waited."

That's what many of the crews did. And their wait was not unrewarded with plenty of work. As daylight dawned Oct. 5, cleanup began in earnest.

Bethel's crews, totaling more than 50 people, had assistance in coping with downed power lines: from

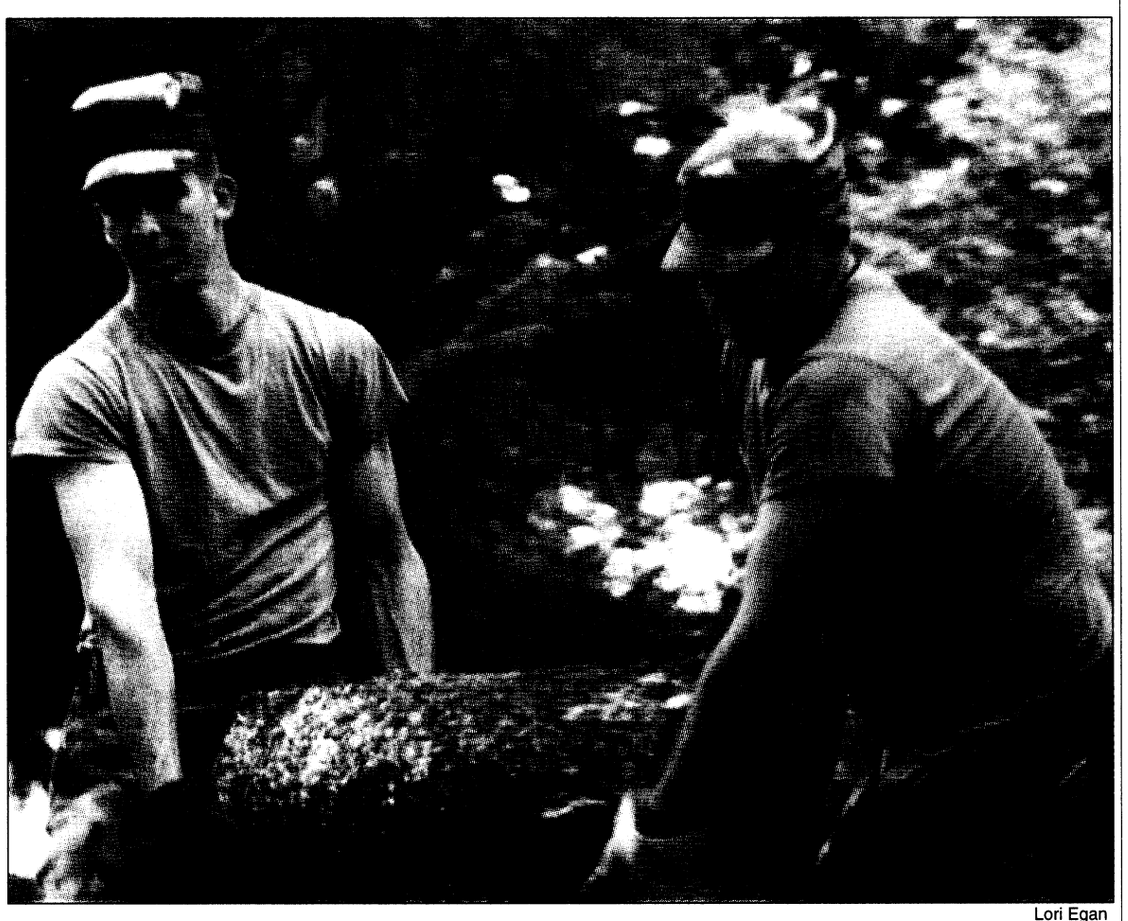
If the shredded leaves stuck to your car didn't convince you of the force of Hurricane Opal's winds, perhaps the abundance of fallen trees, downed utility lines and the wreckage of the Main Post car wash did.

Opal's tour of Fort Benning last week wreaked some significant havoc on post and in the surrounding communities, though her fury was watered down considerably from what those along the Florida coast experienced. On post, only four homes sustained significant damage (though numerous others sustained minor damage), and only minor injuries were reported — two military policemen were struck by a falling tree, and two Directorate of Public Works personnel were injured during cleanup despite wearing safety equipment.

The inconvenience of having no electricity, cable or telephone service was short lived; and even the tree-limb strewn streets were cleaned up in relatively short order.

Hurricane Opal did leave a definite mark, though. She wrapped bleachers on Simpson Range around a tree and overturned latrines on McAndrews Range. She ripped traffic and street lights from their perches and wrenched street signs from their posts. Mostly, though, she seemed to focus her energies on trees, soaking them and the soil they stood in until the weight of the tree and the sogginess of the soil made the pushiness of the winds an irresistible force.

The quick response to Hurricane Opal's devastation is a testament to the DPW crews and the Emergency Operations Center's planning. Residents also tackled the cleanup without delay — in some neighborhoods, by late afternoon Oct. 5 it looked only as though a rainshower had passed through.



Of course, some folks had more damage to contend with. The Quijano family in East Main Post had an enormous tree wrenched from the soil and toppled across their driveway; on its way down, the tree took with it a section of the sidewalk, several utility poles and a majority of the neighborhood's power supply.

The Belleau family, which lives just a few blocks away, experienced a different sort of toppling, as the 60-plus mph winds overturned their storage shed, leaving their belongings to the rains for soaking.

"Didn't hear a thing," said Chief Warrant Officer 3 Roger Belleau. "I could sleep, well, through a hurricane."

The assistant adjutant general expressed his relief for his having maintained a renter's insurance policy, something he advised others to do.

The mood the day after the storm was almost festive, with families out in their yards or taking leisurely walks — taking advantage of the clear fall weather and the fact they didn't have it so bad.

R.J. Roldan, his brother Ricardo and their friend Matthew Connor said they were enjoying the early vacation from school. "But the thing is," said R.J., "we don't get to watch TV."

Work crews certainly didn't get a day off. In fact, crews from DPW Buildings and Grounds started putting their chain saws and front-end loaders to use the night of the hurricane, clearing thoroughfares and hauling away Mother Nature's debris.

"The work hasn't really started," said DPW tree crew member Ben Holston early Oct. 5. Readying his chain saw to take on another tree on Lumpkin Road, Holston said he hadn't been home all night and didn't know if his own home was OK.

DPW implements yard waste composting program on post

Directorate of Public Works

Fort Benning will begin a yard waste composting program effective Saturday.

Post residents will be able to collect leaves, grass clippings, small limbs and branches less than one inch in diameter and less than three feet long and place them alongside the curb in garbage bags.

A private contractor will pick up the material and deliver it to the post's composting facility near Lawson Army Airfield where the yard waste will be converted to compost and mulch. Larger tree parts will be picked up by the Directorate of Public Works as needed.

According to Walter Nichols, manager of the DPW Solid Waste Program, the composting of yard waste allows it to be converted into a useful product and will save the post money.

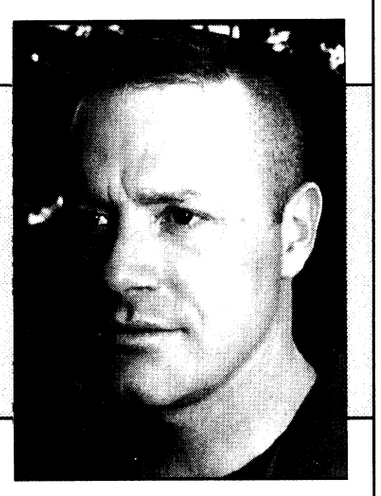
"Yard waste composting will minimize solid waste disposal cost and problems," he said. "About 20 percent of Army family housing waste is yard waste. This waste can be used as a mulch in flower beds or as a soil conditioner on erosion control projects."

Yard waste for family housing will continue to be picked up by a private contractor on Mondays, Nichols said. Georgia's approval of a yard waste composting facility will not permit materials other than yard waste to be composted.

Family housing residents must ensure that only yard waste is placed out for the Monday yard-waste pickup. The collection crew will not pick up bags containing any material that is not yard waste.

If the container is rejected because it contains material other than yard waste, the contaminated materials should be removed and the remaining yard waste set out the following Monday.

"Support of the yard waste composting program will contribute to a cleaner and safer environment," Nichols said. "We are confident that the Fort Benning community will provide the support and make this undertaking a success."



Residents who have questions can contact Nichols at 545-1007.

Bayonet staff pulls through storm

By Donna S. Budjenska

commentary

So why, you may be wondering, is The Bayonet just now printing articles about Hurricane Opal and her Fort Benning visit? Why weren't we on the ball last week?

There is a simple answer: As a weekly publication it's difficult for The Bayonet to run last-minute, hot-off-the-presses type stories. Under normal circumstances, most of the page layout and design is done Tuesday and Wednesday. Thursday morning is spent making a final check for corrections before the pages are sent to Montgomery, Ala., for printing. Occasionally, coverage of an event occurring late in the week, close to to press time and way past deadline makes it in, but that is only after considerable advance planning and late hours. In the face of an approaching hurricane, that sort of effort is impractical.

Oct. 4, as Maj. Gen. John W. Hendrix, post commanding general, ordered all non-essential personnel to head home, The Bayonet staff pored over layouts, making editing changes and corrections normally done on Thursdays.

Not knowing how Opal's onslaught would affect Fort Benning and the paper's publishing schedule, the editor and staff readied stories and photographs already planned for that Friday's edition for printing on a compressed timeline. The Oct. 6 edition was, in essence, produced a day ahead of schedule, without notice, to make it ready to ship to Montgomery for printing.

The main Bayonet office, located in Room 601 of Infantry Hall, is where stories are written and pages designed. At the South Lumpkin Road office, advertising is designed and inserted. From that office, final layouts are prepared; and the contract personnel drives to Montgomery to oversee production. After the press run, the copies are brought back to the Columbus-Fort Benning area for delivery. That that sequence evolved without delay last week was a tribute to the staff in Fort Benning, Columbus and Montgomery.

The Bayonet is one of post's command information sources and, as such, works diligently to keep the Fort Benning community in the know. Hurricane or no, it'll take a beatin' and keep on readin'.

Being prepared never gets old

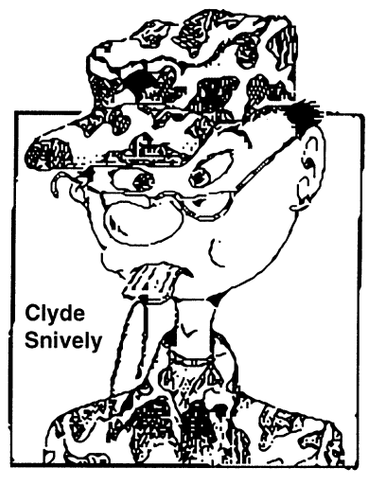
commentary

Being from the West Coast, I'd never done the hurricane routine before.

Earthquakes, yes. Hurricanes and tornadoes, no.

So when the crack forecasters from the Air Force weather station here came on line to let us know that Hurricane Opal was heading our way, I really wasn't sure what to expect.

But I did know that no matter what happened, to survive, I needed food.



So I called Emma and gave her a warning order: "Buy food."

Emma got to the local super-market about the same time as the rest of Columbus.

She knew what she wanted. Or she did until she saw what all the other shoppers were putting into their carts — bottled water, flashlights, batteries, canned meats.

Figuring they knew what they were doing, Emma did the same. bottled water, flashlights, batteries, canned meats. As she was rolling up to the check-out counter she realized she didn't know what size of battery she needed and that she didn't like canned meats.

So she dove back into the human morass to drop off all her unwanted or misunderstood items.

She then went about picking up frozen meats until she realized that if the power went off, if the meat didn't spoil, she still would have no way to cook it — I can picture myself trying to barbecue pork chops with 60-knot winds blowing me off the back porch.

Fortunately, our power was off for only a matter of minutes, so the Snively family survived in good order.

By the way, we did keep the bottled water; and, since then, we've made a list of battery sizes the portable radio and flashlight take. We now have matches for our candles.

I did pass on the plywood for the windows and the portable generators. So I think we are ready for the next hurricane, which even now is brewing up trouble in the Atlantic.

I think I'll continue to pray a lot. They say God cares for fools.

Dial 545-BOSS is the commander's action line for soldiers, family members and civilians to call when they have problems or complaints that can't be resolved elsewhere.

While it is not a substitute for the chain of command or for agencies established to provide assistance, the line offers another means of communication between Fort Benning's community and commanders.

The Bayonet features some of the calls that may benefit other members of the Fort Benning community.

Call: There are too many power outages on Main Post, and it is very damaging for the computers. I would like to know if something can be done about these power outages.

Directorate of Public Works response: In the last few months, Fort Benning had numerous small storms that have caused electrical lines to touch and tree limbs to swing into the electrical lines. This causes a short circuit and frequently throws a breaker at the electrical substation. Also, the buildings in the 2800 block of Fort Benning have obsolete electrical panels and wiring. A project to upgrade the electrical components for these buildings is currently being advertised for bid and will be let subject to availability of funds. The electrical upgrade should alleviate some of the isolated recurrent power outages in the 2800 block.

Call: I am concerned with speeders on Dublinsky Street, particularly at lunch time. Motorists ignore the stop signs and do not observe the 15 mph speed limit. MPs have been called.

Directorate of Public Safety response:

The caller was contacted in reference to concerns over speeders in the area and was informed that there would be an increase in MP activity throughout the area. The caller was told that other areas in the vicinity would also be targeted, such as Baltzell, 1st Division Road and the golf course, so the MPs may not be visible on Dublinsky Street on a daily basis.

Call: It is unfair to tell all the people that have had lockers (in the shower room of Building 4) for years that they have to give them up.

Community Recreation Division response:

James Brown, Physical Activities Branch, Community Recreation Division, contacted the caller and explained the facility policy regarding locker usage in both the men's and women's restroom and shower area. Per standard operating procedures, Field Houses/Fitness Centers/Outdoor Facilities, Annex A; Rules and regulations, dated July 8, 1994, "Absolutely no padlocks will be left on lockers overnight. Padlocks left on lockers overnight will be cut off the next morning without further notice."

Brown told the caller that this policy was being enforced in all Physical Activities Branch facilities because it gives more customers the opportunity to secure their belongings in the restroom and shower area while they work out.

Call: Tot Town used to provide after-school care. They need another after-school care provider because Patch preschool charges about $300 for before- and after-school care even if you only use the after-school care. The homecare providers want to charge $40 a week. This is too much to have to pay when your child will only be there after school for about an hour.

Latchkey director response: Kathy Callen-Rondeau, Latchkey director, contacted the caller concerning her complaint and found that the caller had received incorrect information about options for after-school care. She explained the school-age program, certified family child care homes, Tot Town hourly care and Red Cross-trained teenage baby sitters and also explained the upcoming expansion of service.

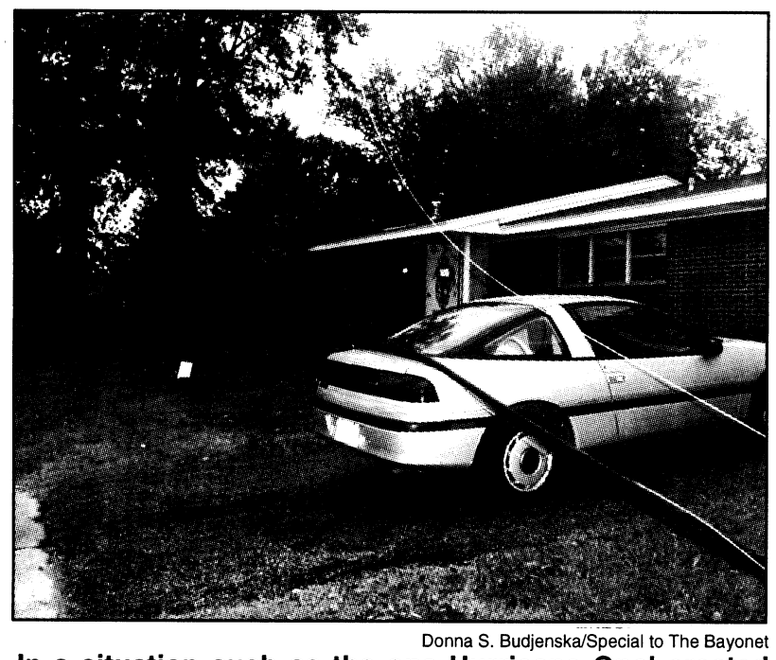
Hurricane teaches safety lesson

By Donna S. Budjenska
Special to The Bayonet©

Hurricane Opal left in her wake not only tree-strewn neighborhoods and snaking utility lines but also a host of lessons for those willing to learn.



The most important lesson may have been: Stay away from downed power lines. Period.

"Never assume that a wire is not energized, even if it looks like a telephone or cable television wire," said Regis Beighley, U.S. Army Infantry Center safety manager.

"During a storm, wires get crossed," he said. Even if a wire looks like it is well-insulated or is no longer connected to any power source, it could be crossed with a "live" wire somewhere up the line where you can't see.

Don't take any chances, Beighley said.

Some families in East Main Post neighborhoods took advantage of the many visual aids proffered by Opal. Pointing to utility wires lying on the ground, parents warned their children never to touch wires in such a condition.

Donna S. Budjenska/Special to The Bayonet

In a situation such as the one Hurricane Opal created here, the best thing to do is call authorities and wait — don't even think about touching either the wires or the car.

Beighley offered more information:

• Electricity from a downed wire will use you to get to the ground if you come in contact with it.

If a live power line falls, stay away from it and call for help.

• If the line hits your vehicle while you're in it, stay inside. If a fire starts, jump out, being sure not to touch the vehicle and the ground at the same time.

• If the line is touching your vehicle in a driveway or parking area, don't touch the vehicle until the line has been removed by a professional skilled in dealing with power lines.

• Although instinct may tell you to grab at someone who is being shocked to remove them from the source of electrical current, this type of hasty action could cost you your life.

Turn off the power first, or use a nonconducting tool such as rope or dry wooden stick to move the person.

Cleanup: Agencies join forces

support units, two crews from Fort Stewart, local contract electric companies and a team from Georgia Power. Their primary focus was removing downed lines from family housing areas, billets and ranges. (Bethel said Tuesday that all traffic lights should be repaired by week's end but that street lights would require several more days.)

Meanwhile, the snarl of fallen trees was being dealt with. "We had roughly 40 people working just on trees," said Tom Robertson, chief of Buildings and Grounds for DPW. His crews, augmented by units from the 36th Engineer Group, cleared roadways and residential areas of downed trees: the 63rd Eng. Co. (Combat Support Equipment) and 586th Assault Float Bridge Co. alone hauled 198 five-ton loads and 58 20-ton loads of debris on the 5th and 6th.

Paul Yates, director of Information Management, said DOIM crews worked with the non-tactical radio system, government message traffic and, perhaps their biggest undertaking, telephone service.

"When trees fell here on post, they didn't pull lines down from above — their roots pulled up telephone lines from below, where many of our lines are," Yates said.

Some telephone cables are snaked above ground, but, Yates said, the majority of problems people on post faced with interrupted telephone service were related to the power outage, not phone cables. "With many newer telephones, the telephone itself requires power," he explained. "With an older, P.O.T. (plain, old telephone), you could just plug it into the jack, and it would probably work even if the power's out."

Fort Benning's clean-up reach extended across state lines. A power crew from Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 13th Corps Support Battalion, 36th Eng. Grp., deployed to Camp Rudder, Fla., to assist with generator support for family housing, barracks and base exchange.

"We were very much needed," said Sgt. Barry Jackson, noncommissioned officer in charge of the crew. "They were very isolated and needed our support." He and his eight-man crew stayed until power was restored Oct. 7.

The efforts of these and other agencies and units, too numerous to be detailed here but still significant in their contributions, enabled Fort Benning and Camp Rudder to rebound quickly from a real mess.

(Editor's note: 1st Lt. Natalie Butler, 63rd Engineer Company [Combat Support Equipment], contributed to this report.)

Opal: Leaves her mark on post

Sightseeing Road, Harmony Church, Sand Hill — all over post."

Crews from on-post agencies worked hand-in-hand with off-post contractors to fix the damages as quickly as possible. Many downed trees had utility lines or street lights entwined in them, and that necessitated waiting for electric crews to arrive to determine whether or not wires were "hot" — still live with potentially lethal electricity.

"This is a pretty good mess," said Jim Welch of Skyline Electric Inc. of Smiths Station, Ala., which was assisting with the aftermath of the Quijano's toppled tree Oct. 5. "You've got all your utilities down — power, telephone, cable.... We've been working since 11 o'clock last night (dealing on similar problems)."

By now, though, Fort Benning's neighborhoods and "business district" are fairly well restored to pre-Opal conditions. Downed trees still dot the landscape here and there, and doubtless the training areas are a mess. But post agencies and residents have combined forces to quickly bounce back from a hurricane-induced mess that, thankfully, wasn't as bad as it could have been.

profile in excellence

Name: Pfc. Sally Ann Talbott
Position: Better Opportunities for Single Soldiers Program representative
Unit: U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit
MOS: 57F Mortuary Affairs Specialist
Job Title: Service Pistol shooter USAMU
Years on the job: One year
Hometown: Buckhannon, W.V.

What were your reasons for joining the Army?
To shoot for the U.S. Army marksmanship unit.

What were your reasons for choosing your MOS?
I was interested in maybe becoming a mortician or a forensic specialist and wanted some insight.

What person has most influenced your military career?
Staff Sgt. William Boyne.

If you were the sergeant major of the Army for a day, what improvements would you make? Have more unit integration functions.

What are your future career plans? To become the women's national champion.

What do you think about the BOSS program and why is it important? It has helped soldiers to be treated more equal and not to be treated differently because they are not married or live in the barracks.

What have you accomplished as the BOSS representative for your unit? I am new to this position, but I represent my unit to the best of my ability.

In your opinion, how can the individual soldier get involved in the BOSS program?
Find out who their company level or major subordinate command level representatives are.

What specifically has the BOSS program done to help the soldiers in your unit?
My company has already complied with USAIC regulation 600-19.

What others have to say about you: She's a highly motivated nation record breaker; she's very talented.

— Pfc. Armando Ayala

MP Detachment to host open house

Martin Army Community will have an Open House for the MACH Military Police Detachment today from 11 a.m. to noon.

The open house will be in the circle outside of the Emergency Department. For information call 544-3397.

USAREC selection board to convene

A centralized selection board will convene Oct. 24 to consider eligible lieutenant colonels and promotable majors for assignments to command U.S. Army Recruiting Command battalions projected to become vacant during fiscal 1996. Battalions projected to be vacant in the following areas:

Baltimore, Md.; Brunswick, Maine; Syracuse, N.Y.; Pittsburgh, Pa.; Atlanta; Columbia, S.C.; Miami and Tampa, Fla.; Montgomery, Ala.; Raleigh, N.C.; Chicago, Ill.; Columbus, Ohio; Minneapolis, Minn.; Houston and San Antonio, Texas; Denver, Colo.; Portland, Ore.; Sacramento, Calif.; and Salt Lake City, Utah.

Officers eligibility criteria applies equally to male and female officers for all USAREC battalion command positions. Officers interested should immediately contact their respective career manager.

Officers who desire to compete are encouraged to review their official military personnel file and officer record brief immediately.

For more information, call Capt. Glenn Goldman at Defense Satellite Network at 221-5166 or Klaus Bourne at 545-4103 or 545-4522.

SF recruiters to visit

A Special Forces recruiter will be visiting Fort Benning today to conduct briefings for officers and enlisted soldiers, to administer the Special Forces physical training test and swim tests (enlisted personnel) and accept applications for Special Forces training and assignments.

Briefings will be conducted at Infantry Hall, Classroom 59 at 10:30 a.m. and 1 p.m. daily. Briefings will be approximately 1 hour in duration. Special Forces physical training tests will be administered on Stewart Watson Field (in front of Infantry Hall) today from 7 to 9 a.m.

Swim test will be at Bryant Wells Gymnasium, Building 933, from 8 to 10 a.m.

Vets dedicate parkway

American veterans of every war and every branch of service were honored in a Columbus Government Center ceremony Monday that included the unveiling of the newly named Veterans Parkway.

Col. Gregory C. Camp, Fort Benning's chief of staff, was numbered among the attendees from the installation, which also included the members of the Infantry Band and a Fort Benning color guard.

Camp delivered an address near the Eternal Flame Memorial at the Government Center on behalf of Commanding General Maj. Gen. John W. Hendrix in honor of all veterans, past and present.

"We must be inspired to pay our debt in kind," Camp said. "And how do we pay that debt? By helping to secure the promise of a bright future for Americans yet to be born, because that's what our veterans did for us."

America's soldiers, sailors, airmen and Marines have lived up to the most important duty — that of protecting the nation and the rights of its citizens, Camp said.

"The veterans of this nation form a vital part of our heritage," he said. "You and I stand here today in freedom because of the many sacrifices our veterans have made throughout our nations history."

Camp also took the opportunity to complement the soldiers of today's Army.

"We have in today's Army the very highest quality soldiers," Camp said. "They are well-trained and well-equipped. They are intelligent and very well-educated and dedicated to accomplishing the mission at hand. They will hold the torch passed to them by U.S. veterans. They cannot and will not fail the legacy of these, the greatest of all citizens — veterans."

The ceremony climaxed with a procession of all attendants, led by the Infantry Band, to Veterans Parkway for the unveiling of a new street sign by Columbus Mayor Bobby Peters. Veterans Parkway has replaces the streets previously known as Fourth Avenue, the Beallwood Connector and Hamilton Road.

HURRICANE OPAL

Damage claims may take some time for settlement

Staff Judge Advocate's Office

Claims for vehicles or personal property in government quarters or offices that was damaged as a result of Hurricane Opal will be processed and adjudicated based on individual circumstances and according to Army Regulation 27-20 and Department of the Army Pamphlet 27-162.

Types of damage for which claims may be filed

Damage caused by high winds, falling trees, heavy rains, flooding or losses of electric power before, during or after Hurricane Opal may be the proper subject of a claim.

Typical damage includes vehicles scratched, dented and destroyed; personal property such as fences, dog houses, lawn furniture and storage buildings; damaged electrical or electronic items; and damaged or soiled items. Items valued at more than $100 should include an estimate of repair or a statement that repair or cleaning is not feasible.

Time frames

Claims may be filed at any time up to two years following the damage, but filing sooner is better.

Each claim will be adjudicated against the standards in the regulations, and the full allowed amount will be paid.

Private insurance

All claimants must file and settle with their private insurance company, if they have one, before their claims may be approved for payment.

Claimants should explain this policy to their private insurance companies and provide the insurance company with any and all information requested.

Amounts not covered by insurance, such as deductibles, or amounts in excess of coverage, may then be the basis for a claim at the Judge Advocate General's Office.

When to expect payment

Fort Benning has no control over the time of payment after approval of claim. Claims are paid by check by the Orlando, Fla., Defense Finance and Accounting Service center.

The normal time for receipt of the check is two to four weeks. Because of the number of claims resulting from Hurricane Opal at several military installations, payment times may be longer than normal.

For more specific information about claims for damage to your property, call 545-2285 or DSN 835-2285 or come to Building 5, Winship Hall, between 8 a.m. and 4 p.m., Monday through Friday.

Center, briefing welcome new soldiers

Adjutant General's Office

All newly arriving soldiers inprocess at the Welcome Center located in Building 2608, Soldiers' Plaza.

The Welcome Center is open from 6 a.m. to midnight Monday through Friday; 8 a.m. to 10 p.m. Saturday; 2 p.m. to midnight Sunday.

When a soldier signs in at the Welcome Center, an initial interview is conducted to determine what services the soldier needs in order to inprocess.

A personalized inprocessing schedule is given to each soldier. The next day, the soldier attends a welcome orientation.

The welcome orientation is an informational briefing given by members of the military community. During the briefing, information is provided about the following:

- Better Opportunities for Single Soldiers Program
- Army Community Service
- Housing
- Finance
- Medical
- Dental
- Drugs
- Alcohol.

This welcome orientation briefing is mandatory for all sergeants first class and below and optional for master sergeants or first sergeants and above as outlined in U.S. Army Infantry Center Regulation 612-1.

The welcome orientation is conducted Monday through Friday in Building 2622, Soldiers' Plaza, from 8 a.m. to noon.

For more information, contact Sgt. 1st Class Tyrone Fuller at 545-2010 or 545-1307.

U.S. Army Criminal Investigation Command

The U.S. Army Criminal Investigation Command is seeking information regarding the following:

• Takashi Moore was found dead March 2 by a Military Police patrol at approximately 4:30 a.m. alongside Highway 27, adjacent to the 8th Division Road Overpass. Moore had suffered several large abrasions to his upper body and died as a result of massive head injuries.

If you have information regarding this incident, contact the Fort Benning MP station at 545-5222 or 545-5223, or Special Agent Robin Avery, USACIDC, at 545-5272 or 545-3984.

• An unknown thief entered quarters at 136-C Baker St. through the back door June 6 between 8 a.m. and 4:30 p.m. and stole 24 World War II coins, jewelry and $100. A reward of $250 is offered for information leading to the arrest and conviction of whoever is responsible.

• An unknown individual removed jewelry and a Panasonic camcorder from Room 9, Building 36, Guest Quarters on Fort Benning between 7:30 a.m. and 11 p.m. Aug. 22. A reward of $250 is offered for information leading to the arrest and conviction of whoever is responsible.

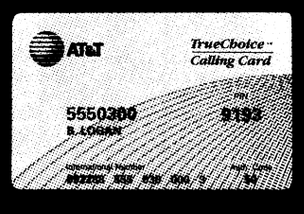
• Someone removed a 1995 Kawasaki 900ZX Jet Ski and trailer from the Lemon Lot on Main Post between Aug. 14 and Aug. 16. A reward of $250 is offered for information leading to the arrest and conviction of whoever is responsible.

• A larceny of private property took place between 2 and 11:30 a.m. July 26 and 27 in the parking lot of Building 3425. Someone entered a 1994 Hyundai Excel and removed stereo equipment.

• The 86th Military Police Detachment is conducting an investigation concerning the theft of personal stereo equipment from a secured 1983 red Ford Mustang.

The equipment was stolen between 1 a.m. and 12:30 p.m., Aug. 13 from a parking lot adjacent to Building 2831.

The stolen equipment included an AM/FM compact disc player, two pairs of speakers, an equalizer, a crossover and two amps. The value of the stolen stereo equipment is $2,410. No suspects have been identified.



The assistance of the local community is requested to identify and apprehend these individuals. The identity of anyone providing information will be kept in the strictest confidence.

Anyone having information concerning any of these incidents investigation can call the CID Office at 545-5237 or 545-4986 or the Military Police Station at 545-5222 or 545-5223.

LET THE GAMES BEGIN

Olympians triumph at Faith's field day

By Donna S. Budjenska
Special to The Bayonet©

Strains of the Olympic theme music wafted through the crisp morning air as athletes lined up behind their country's flag.

Parading proudly into the stadium, the competitors waved to the crowd and chatted excitedly amongst themselves. They were, after all, competing in their first Olympic games.

And they were, after all, only in the sixth, seventh or eighth grade.

Faith Middle School hosted its Olympics kick-off Sept. 29 at Doughboy Stadium. All 766 students participated, either by marching in the opening ceremonial parade, competing in the 10 track and field events or cheering on their classmates.

Students represented six countries: the United States, Australia, Germany, Greece, Japan and New Zealand. Bearing banners and, in some cases, headgear of their country (the Greeks sported olive-branch wreaths and their banner read, "The Original Olympics — others are just copies"), the students seemed eager to commence the ultimate "field day."

Thematic approach

The Olympic theme was complete, down to Miguel Spencer, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 29th Infantry Regiment, running into the stadium bearing a flaming torch. Spencer is an Olympic hopeful and will try out for the U.S. wrestling team in early 1996.

Spencer gave the torch to Edward Crook Jr., an Olympic Gold medalist who competed in the 1960 Olympics in Rome. The middleweight-division boxing champion, who spent 30 years in the Army and lives in Columbus, lighted the eternal flame.

After an introductory speech by Faith principal Beth Middlemiss, Carmen Cavezza, Columbus '96 executive director, addressed the throng.

Cavezza told students how impressed he was with their demonstration of respect to the U.S. flag as the host country's national anthem was played. Urging them to continue setting the example, he declared, "Let the games begin!"

Competition

Competitions included the 60- and 100-meter dash, the 100-, 200- and 400-meter relay, mile run, shot put, high jump, long jump and the sprint medley.

"Our teams have been working pretty hard to prepare," said Amber Thomas, a sixth-grader representing Japan. "Our whole school has."

Students prepared not only physically but also mentally, since this event was a continuation of a team-teaching approach to the Olympics. "Japan's" students, for example, in their science class examined why Japan has so many earthquakes (the islands sit on three major plates); and in their math class, they made codfish windsocks to study currents.

The track and field events, though, were the day's focus, and competitors didn't disappoint.

Eighth-grader Eugene Hall, 14, launched an astonishing 15 feet, 11 inches on the long jump — not bad for someone who's never done it before.

Taking first place on the event and representing New Zealand, Hall said he plays basketball and that perhaps his vertical leap helped his horizontal leap.

Close behind him was Cory Conegie of the United States, whose 14-foot, 1 1/2-inch jump took second place. The eighth-grader said he'd jumped before, but only in playing around. "I'll probably get into track and field," he said.

Hall and Conegie were among the many winners that day. The first-, second-, and third-place winners of each event, in each grade, of each sex, triumphed and were granted the appropriate awards at day's end.

Lunch at the stadium topped off a day filled with beautiful weather, excitement, competition, the thrill of victory and the agony of defeat — all in the presence of a real Olympian.

Valley fair opens today in Columbus

By Donna S. Budjenska
Special to The Bayonet©

The Chattahoochee Valley Fair opens today in Columbus.

Rides, agricultural shows, food vendors and exhibits are available at special rates to active duty military identification card holders on both Sundays of the fair, which continues through Oct. 15.

Sunday and Oct. 15, active duty ID card holders pay a $3 gate fee, not the usual $5 for adults, said Elaine DeMarco, general manager.

During the week, the gates open at 9 a.m., while the carnival opens at 2 p.m. On Oct. 14, the carnival begins at noon, while both Sundays it opens at 1 p.m.

Other special gate rates can be had, too, DeMarco said. Advance tickets are available at CB&T Bank locations for $4.25 for adults; and tickets for youth ages 6 to 13 are $2 at the gate or $1.50 in advance. Children under 6 can enter free.

On Sundays, students with a school-affiliated club card pay half price.

One of the biggest bargains of the carnival, DeMarco said, is the wrist-stamp. Monday, Wednesday and Thursday and Oct. 15, carnival goers can have their wrists stamped for $12, and that allows them to enjoy all the rides from open until close without having to buy individual tickets for each ride.

The Chattahoochee Valley Fair will be located off Blanchard Boulevard, between Victory Drive and Jackson Street.

If exhibit-going heightens your appetite, more than 22 religious, civic and fraternal organizations will have food concessions.

For more information, call DeMarco at 324-7166.

Assistant commandant continues family tradition

By Lisa M. Hibbert
Bayonet staff writer

Mission: To oversee all infantry training on post, such as the Ranger and Airborne schools, the Noncommissioned Officers Academy, the basic and advanced infantry officer courses and one station unit training.

This is the mission of Brig. Gen. Robert T. Clark, assistant commandant of the Infantry School and post deputy commander.

Clark assumed his current position June 26 in a ceremony on York Field.

He comes to Fort Benning from Schofield Barracks, Hawaii, where he was the assistant division commander for Operations of the 25th Infantry Division (Light).

Clark replaced Brig. Gen. John J. Maher III who went to command the 25th Inf. Div. (Light) at Schofield Barracks, Hawaii.

As he reclined his 6-foot body in a chair in his office, Clark spoke quietly and confidently about the Army today.

"There are three things that make our Army the best in the world and have allowed us to change from post Vietnam to what we are today," Clark said.

"(One) We are the best equipped Army. We have the most sophisticated weapons because we invested in technology and development.

"(Two) We have the best training and war fighting doctrine," Clark said. "We have dramatically improved our training and our tactical proficiencies which gave us overwhelming victories in Panama and Desert Storm.

Brig. Gen. Robert T. Clark, assistant commandant of the U.S. Army Infantry School and post deputy commanding general, comes from a long line of military professionals.

"(Three) The people. The soldier in the unit today is the smartest we have ever had and the most physically fit, and they're all volunteers," Clark said.

When Clark discussed his accomplishments, he ranked his family as first as far as his personal life — even though his son does attend Texas A&M, rival school to Clark's alma mater, Texas Tech University.

"My greatest personal accomplishment is having two great kids — one a senior in college and one the mother of my first grandchild," Clark said.

"My greatest professional accomplishment is being able to influence younger soldiers in a positive way," Clark said.

"As you grow older in the Army, you tend to run into more people whom you've served with in the past and who have gone on to accomplish things, and it's a good feeling to

'Appreciation day' huge success

The Association of the U.S. Army-sponsored military appreciation day at the Buick Challenge last week was a huge success.

More than 3,000 soldiers, Fort Benning civilians and family members took advantage of the free admission to see championship golf at its finest.

We at Fort Benning are fortunate to have such an active chapter of AUSA, a chapter always on the lookout for programs and activities to benefit our soldiers.

For instance, not only did AUSA arrange for free admission to the golf tournament, but it also rounded up several excellent gifts to be used as door prizes for our soldiers.

Steve Butler, this year's AUSA president, and retired Lt. Gen. Ben Register, who conceived of the idea of having military appreciation day, are certainly to be commended for their superb efforts.

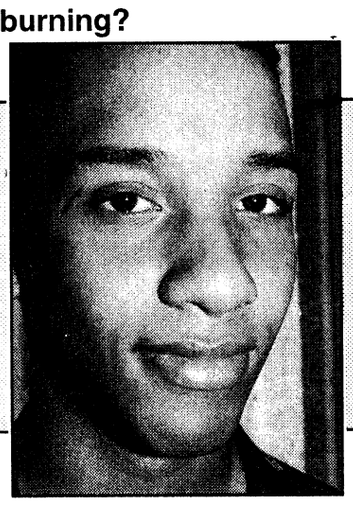
They epitomize AUSA's efforts of taking care of soldiers.

We are also fortunate to have a civilian work force that can respond to our needs. In this case, our Directorate of Logistics provided the buses to transport our soldiers to Callaway Gardens and back to Fort Benning.

Our thanks also extend to the executives of the Buick Challenge and Callaway Gardens who opened the tournament to our soldiers.

Of course, many of our soldiers and civilians helped make the tournament a success by serving as volunteers during the tournament's run.

These men and women took leave to play key roles in running the tournament and not only manned Fort Benning's 11th hole, but assisted other organizations in manning their holes.



My thanks to these men and women for being so civic minded by volunteering their time and talents to this event.

By helping in the community, everyone benefits and that's why Fort Benning is the best installation in the U.S. Army and the best place to be a soldier.

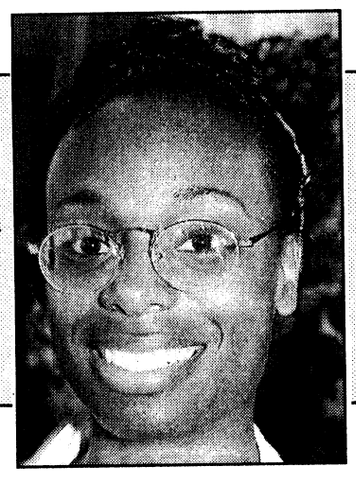
VARIOUS VOICES

How do you feel about the proposed constitutional amendment to prohibit flag burning?



Cpl. Felix J. Carrasco, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 1st Battalion (Airborne), 507th Infantry, 11th Infantry Regiment — "I don't think anyone should burn the flag."

Shirley A. Tenette, family member — "I think they should stop it. I don't think you should burn the flag but be proud of it instead!"

Sgt. 1st Class Anthony L. Gordon, HHC, 1st Bn (ABN), 507th Inf., 11th Inf. Regt., — "I don't think the flag should be burned at all. It's what we stand for."

Sgt. Anissa R. Johnson, Student Detachment, U.S. Army Medical Department Activity — "I think flag burning is guaranteed as part of the First Amendment. I wouldn't do it, but it is part of an individual's rights."

Spc. Jason L. Irwin, HHC, 1st Bn., 18th Inf. Regt. — "We need the amendment."

Anita I. Gransberry, family member — "I agree with it. I think they should stop flag burning."

'Old Glory' is made for saluting, not burning

By Greg Markley
The Sentinel, Fort Drum, N.Y.

commentary

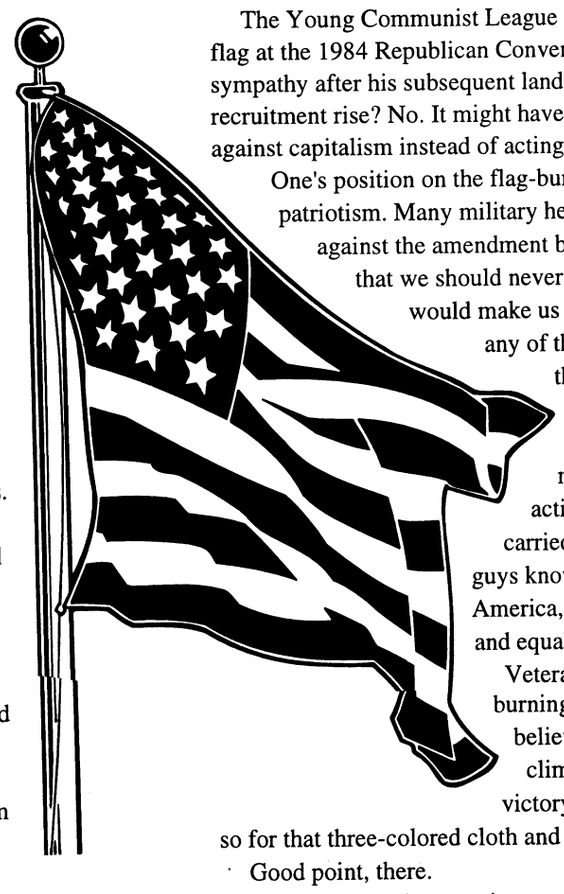
Lord Byron once said that "Whoever doesn't love his own country, loves nothing."

Dissidents worldwide oppose their countries' leaders but not their fellow countrymen. And so it is in America. It's like your mother — you may dislike her actions sometimes, but her heart is always pure.

And so we enter a hot topic — whether the burning of an American flag, the ultimate symbol of our free lifestyle, warrants locking up the flamethrower. Is this symbol so dear to us that no one should destroy it, even as part of the free expression guaranteed by the First Amendment?

There are strong intellectual arguments against enlarging the Constitution in this way, and there is concern that banning flag burning will encourage extremists to push for curtailment of more civil liberties.

But, and no apologies, this debate touches how most of us feel deep down about our greatest national symbol being torched.



It just isn't right.

The more vocal opponents of the 28th Amendment, which would ban flag desecration, say it would make heroes of convicted flag burners, turn them into honored political prisoners. Maybe at first, but then they would become just like any other criminal — forgotten.

As for outlawing flag burning as a prelude to Nazism — if we are so close that one small amendment would push us over, then Heaven help us!

Free speech is genuinely important, so we should not impede it often. But we are talking about flag burnings that occur only a handful of times a year, and most are not for political expression, but cheap thrills.

The disgruntled Vietnam veteran whose flag burning in 1966 led to the original antiflag ruling is unusual; his complaint of vets' mistreatment was worthy of attention, but not in this way. Surely this battle survivor could have found a better way to touch the raw nerves of his fellow citizens without soiling his own reputation.

The Young Communist League member who burned the American flag at the 1984 Republican Convention received much scorn and some sympathy after his subsequent landmark court case. But did his group's recruitment rise? No. It might have, had he given a rousing speech against capitalism instead of acting like a temperamental 2-year-old.

One's position on the flag-burning issue is in no way a litmus test of patriotism. Many military heroes and other stalwart citizens are against the amendment because they say the flag itself signifies that we should never forbid any free expression. Those who would make us less than patriotic if we disagree with any of their views are much more dangerous than people who burn flags, believe me.

The flag is debased when it looks down on a meeting of paranoid militia "fighters" planning un-American activities. The flag is disgraced when it's carried by hateful Ku Klux Klansmen; these guys know nothing about the true colors of America, which are multi-culturalism, tolerance and equal opportunity.

Veterans are especially upset about the burning of the American flag because they believe it was the standard that made them climb whatever hills lay between them and victory. They believe that those who died did so for that three-colored cloth and all it meant to them.

Good point, there.

As soldiers we have various motivating forces (our spouses, our children, our good name, our squad, our individualism, our God). In the end, we follow a flag into battle because it encompasses all those values we cherish.

To see some ingrate destroy that flag on a whim, after all we and our dead and crippled buddies did for it, is disgusting.

It just isn't right.

dial 545-boss

Dial 545-BOSS is the commander's action line for soldiers, family members and civilians to call when they have problems or complaints that can't be resolved elsewhere.

While it is not a substitute for the chain of command or for agencies established to provide assistance, the line offers another means of communication between Fort Benning's community and commanders.

The Bayonet features some of the calls that may benefit other members of the Fort Benning community.

Call: I am very upset that my husband was not allowed to clear post until he paid our telephone bill that was not due for at least two more weeks.

Utility Coordination Center's response:

The following clearance procedures apply to departing soldiers, whether or not the soldier had signed a Utility Coordination Center waiver.

A soldier leaving Fort Benning comes to the center, where personnel will call the four utility companies to give disconnect notices and get estimated final bill amounts if services are being disconnected. If services are to continue, the current bill amounts are obtained. Current bills must be paid prior to clearing.

These procedures are in accordance with the post's memorandum of understanding with the four utility companies.

Call: When I called in April, I was told I could not get post housing, so I put down a $300 deposit for an apartment off post. When I arrived at Fort Benning, I was given quarters because I am an Infantry Officer Advanced Course student. I have asked for help in getting my deposit back, but I do not think much effort is being made to help me.

Community Homefinding Referral and Relocation Services Office's response:

One of the missions of the this office is to provide customers with up-to-date information with emphasis on locating adequate, affordable housing.

In April, the office sent out welcome packets to students attending the IOAC Class 4-95, with an in-processing date of June 5. In this packet, students were told that there were no dedicated quarters available, so they could make living arrangements off post.

In May, the commanding general made the decision to dedicate a number of quarters for IOAC students, beginning with this class.

If the caller contacted officials at the CHRRS Office during the month of April, they did in fact state there were no government quarters available based on the information they had at the time.

Had the caller contacted the office again or the IOAC company commander upon his arrival at Fort Benning, he would have been given up-to-date information.

In all Army permanent change of station orders, it specifically states, "You are required to report to the Family Housing/Housing Referral Office serving your new duty station before you make arrangements for renting, leasing or purchasing any off-post housing."

Through research, the office found that 90 percent of the IOAC students were living in apartments off post. There were several married students living there who preferred to live in government quarters.

The office was successful in getting several students out of their leases; however, the apartment complex management said its home office will not release anyone else from their lease because it would lose money.

Unfortunately, this decision had been made before the caller arrived at Fort Benning.

Reader thinks Army helps its own

During company runs on Fridays, I often cut up with soldiers as I run. I point out to them as the rain hits them in the face that the military cares so much about them it requires they be out there running. I point out that IBM and Xerox employees are allowed to get fat and die of heart disease. Only the Army cares.

Something happened yesterday, however, that really drove this point home. I was visiting the Legal Assistance Division of the Office of the Staff Judge Advocate. Sgt. 1st Class Dywaine Robinson was manning the desk as it was lunch hour. A woman came into the office and was very upset about a legal situation. Robinson took the time to listen to the woman. He was very understanding and helpful.

This lady was at the Staff Judge Advocate office because she expected help. She got it. An NCO there not only cared about her situation but was there for the purpose of helping. Had the lady's husband been employed by GM, she would not have visited their legal department for help. Corporate lawyers would have politely sent her away and contacted security to ensure she left the building.

Perhaps this sounds like a reenlistment pitch. It is. No other employer I know is so concerned with housing, health, morale activities, family life and other issues unrelated to the office as the U.S. Army. We all realize the Army can be demanding. However, most civilian jobs are just as demanding but do not give back more than a paycheck. It's something to think about if you are approaching experation term of service.

Stretching limits

Staff Sgt. Brian Waggett, an instructor with the leadership branch of the Combined Arms and Tactics Directorate, watches while Crystal Pendleton, a junior at Carver High School, pushes a board out to make a bridge in one of the obstacles on the Leaders Reaction Course. Pendleton was one of 45 members of the Youth Leadership Columbus program to visit Fort Benning Sept. 22 and experience first-hand what soldiers do at Fort Benning.

NCO corps to focus on safety

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet©

The noncommissioned officer corps is the key to unit and soldier safety, said Fort Benning's top sergeants major.

As a reflection of their belief, they've created the U.S. Army Infantry Center Sergeants Major Risk Management Process Action Team to reinforce the NCO's role in promoting good safety habits.

"Our goal is to reduce the number of injuries to Fort Benning soldiers by reinforcing the role of the noncommissioned officer in all aspects of safety," said Sgt. Maj. Steven G. Chittum, garrison sergeant major, who, along with Sgt. Maj. Sam B. Spears, U.S. Army Infantry School command sergeant major, co-chairs the team.

The team chairman is Command Sgt. Maj. George Conrad, USAIC command sergeant major. The members include the unit command sergeants major of all post major subordinate commands and tenant organizations.

"The purpose of the team is to assist the commander with force protection efforts," Conrad said.

> "Our goal is to reduce the number of injuries to Fort Benning soldiers by reinforcing the role of the noncommissioned officer in all aspects of safety."
> — Sgt. Maj. Steven G. Chittum
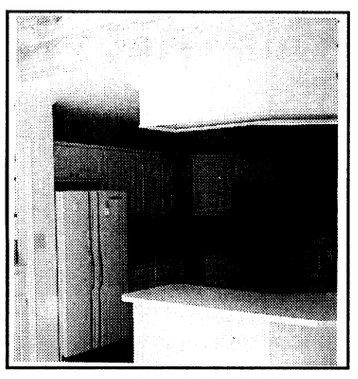
> Garrison sergeant major

"The key to unit and soldier safety is the NCO corps. Identifying and eliminating risk, training to standard, enforcement of proper maintenance procedures and operation of equipment and observing safe practices begin with and are sustained by the NCO."

The team will meet quarterly on a formal basis, Conrad said. Also, each post organization will form a mini-team consisting of the unit first sergeants and chaired by the senior sergeant major.

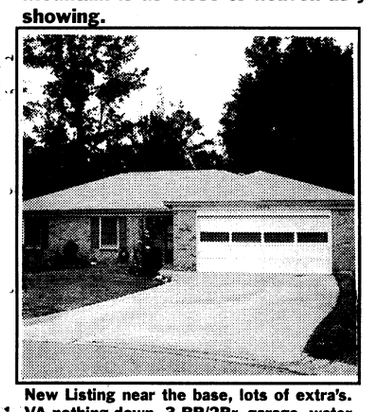
"Team members will provide monthly updates on their organization's safety incentives and programs," Conrad said. "The updates will include a summary of lessons learned from recent trends identified during safety inspections, accidents and near misses."

The team is currently working to develop six key safety processes and to develop objectives for the installation NCO corps to accomplish, Chittum said. Also, an action plan will be developed by the start of each fiscal year, he said.



"This may seem like a lot, but it is not a jump through hoops, reinvent the wheel sort of thing," Chittum said. "This is just a formal way to remind NCOs that they play a key role in fostering safety."

Each major subordinate command will be required to host an NCO-sponsored "safety day" sometime within the next four quarters, Chittum said. Also, units can use the Directorate of Public Safety to set up accident prevention, safety awareness and recreation safety programs.



"Regular safety briefings and holiday inspection of vehicles are also important," he said. "Units should also develop a strong incentive awards program and develop systems to correct deficiencies as they are identified.

"The NCO corp has the responsibility to take care of soldiers," he said. "We do a good job already, but there is always room for improvement. Leaders change, soldiers change, equipment changes, procedures and techniques change; but, the danger of an accident does not change. The NCO corps must stay focused on safety as a routine part of daily operations."

Instructor at home with horses

By Judith Ginder
School of the Americas

Every evening you'll find him either with the horses or helping others master the art of dressage — formal horseback riding, usually used in shows.

Chilean Lt. Col. Jorge Dowling, a School of the Americas guest instructor, gives dressage lessons daily at the Fort Benning Hunt Club. Dowling, who has been riding since he was 8 years old, teaches strategy for the SOA Command and General Staff Course. Before coming to SOA, he served as the battalion commander of the Chilean Military Academy.

The Chilean Army has a large cavalry. His father, who is now a retired general of the Chilean Army, encouraged Dowling to ride at a young age. He said that when he was a boy, he took a year-long course that prepares riders for competition.

"Riding is a sport," Dowling said. "When I was in Chile, I represented my army in civilian competitions.

"All of the people that I've met at the club really seem to enjoy the horses and riding," he said. "I hope that by teaching others to ride, the students will feel the same way that I do about horses."

Lt. Col. Kelly Cook, 29th Infantry Regiment and also president of the Fort Benning Hunt Club, said the members are lucky to have Dowling involved.

> "I hope that by teaching others to ride, the students will feel the same way that I do about horses."
> — Lt. Col. Jorge Dowling
> SOA guest instructor

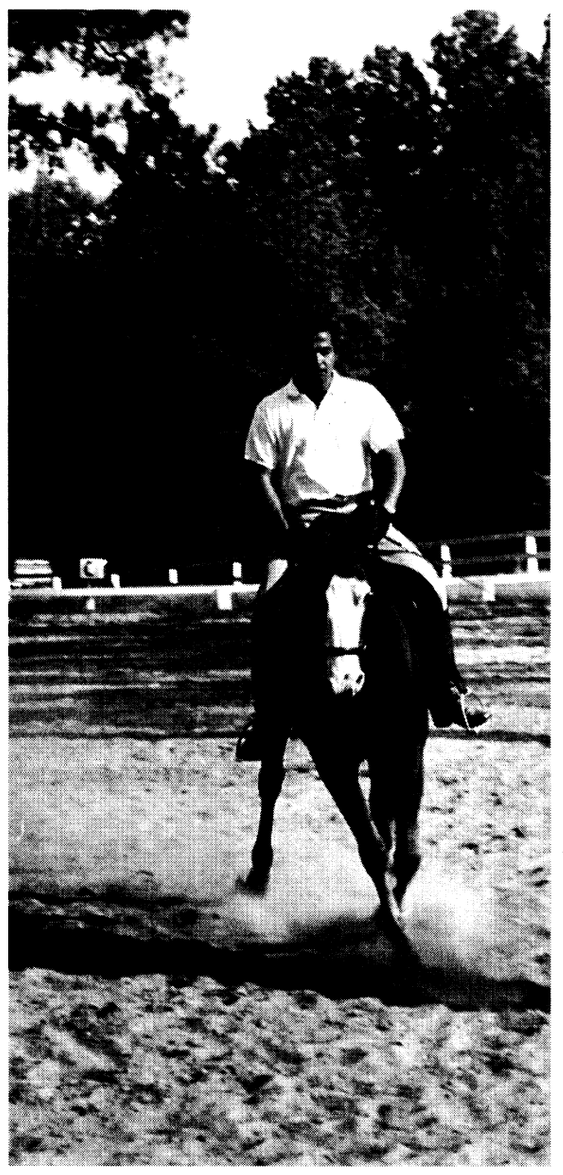
"He is such a godsend — he has so much experience," Cook said.

What Dowling does is formal show riding. He's been giving lessons in Chile for almost 15 years.

"He's very willing to give of his time and at no expense to the rider," Cook said.

Dowling said when you first learn to ride, you should begin with dressage. There are usually about a half-dozen people in his classes, and Dowling said students need to be able to handle the basics of dressage before they can move on to jumping and cross-country riding.

He said he's always loved horses, and that's why he volunteers his time to give others riding lessons.



"I like to wake up in the morning and ride — it's a great feeling," Dowling said. "Besides being relaxing, it's also good exercise."

Cook said that most Army posts have boarding stables and a strong interest in both English and Western horseback riding. Some members ride for pleasure while others show their horses in competitions.

"Horses have always been part of the heritage of the Army," Cook said. "Having a facility like this on post is also part of the Army tradition that started with the cavalry."

The Fort Benning Hunt Club is open to all military personnel and their guests. The facility can accommodate many breeds of horses for boarding, and anyone with a military identification card can board horses there. While dressage lessons from Dowling are at no charge, other lessons from Hunt Club personnel are $12 an hour for members and $20 an hour for nonmembers. The Hunt Club is open Monday through Saturday, 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

For more information about the Fort Benning Hunt Club, contact Linda Fuller at 689-3945.

Army and Air Force Exchange Service

To help prevent delinquency on Deferred Payment Plan and Uniform Clothing DPP accounts and dishonored checks, military and civilian personnel must outprocess with Army and Air Force Exchange Service before changing duty stations.

The quickest and most assured method of updating personal data is for customers to take the following to their local exchange customer service desk:

•One copy of permanent change of station orders

•New "unit" and "home" addresses and telephone numbers.

Additional options for updating personal data include: mailing in a free postage-paid change of address card, available at the PX cashier's counter; or calling in the information to the exchange at th new duty station.

Other AAFES accounts to update before relocating include: rain checks, layaways, special orders, equipment rental and unclaimed property sold by concessionaires.

CLARK: Asst commandant continues tradition

know that you've had an impact on their development."

When asked if he had any words of wisdom for those aspiring to obtain his rank, Clark said that obtaining rank should never be one's goal.

"Think of this profession in terms of what you can contribute," Clark said."If you just view a career as what rank you can achieve, you shouldn't be here. What you do in uniform benefits the country.

"The satisfaction you get is the satisfaction in knowing you contributed to the defense of this country," Clark said "You're contributing, and you're making a difference with your life. What counts is influencing people with your life and doing a job that is really important."

The general's face lighted up as he talked about his family's impact upon his military career. His brown eyes seemed happy behind his silver, square-framed glasses and his smile was almost boyish.

"Both of my grandfathers were in the military," Clark said.

"My paternal grandfather, Col. H.A. Clark, was a medical doctor who retired after 38 years of service, and my maternal grandfather, Brig. Gen Joeseph M. Tully, was a cavalry officer who retired after 37 years of service," Clark said.

"My father, Col. H.A. Clark Jr., was also in the military. Initially he was commissioned in the horse cavalry in 1939, but he branch transferred to the infantry after World War II. He served 31 years.

"I grew up an Army brat. I lived at Fort Benning for 10 years when my father was stationed here on two different occasions. I went to Don C. Faith Middle School; I learned how to play golf on the Follow Me Golf Course; and I played little league (baseball) on the fields here.

"I was born into the Army. I always wanted to be an Army officer like my father," Clark said.

Clark is not the only sibling in his immediate family to follow in his father's footsteps. He has one brother who is a lieutenant colonel in the Air Force and one brother who is an infantry major in the Army.

Looking towards the future, Clark said that he would probably retire within the next ten years and move to Tennessee.

"I plan to go wherever the Army sends me next," Clark said. "After that, I want to retire in Clarksville, Tenn., raise horses, and spend time with my family and grandchildren."

"Being in the military, you don't always get to spend a lot of time with your family," Clark said.

Clark was a 1970 graduate of Texas Tech where he was commissioned and awarded a bachelor of arts degree in history. He later earned a master of science degree in political science from Auburn University.

His military education includes the Infantry Officer Basic Course, Infantry Officer Advanced Course, Air Command and Staff College, New Zealand Army Staff and Tactics Course and the National War College. Clark served in a variety of assignments that he said prepared him for his current assignment.

Clark served in Vietnam as a rifle platoon leader and company executive officer with the 1st Cavalry Division. He was then assigned to the 9th Infantry Division at Fort Lewis, Wash., where he commanded a rifle company. He also commanded a rifle company in the 25th Inf. Div. at Schofield Barracks before becoming a battalion operations officer.

Clark was stationed at the Pentagon as a staff officer in the Office of the Deputy Chief of Staff for Operations and Plans and then became the aide to the chief of staff of the Army.

Clark was assigned to the 101st Airborne Division (Air Assault), Fort Campbell, Ky., where he commanded the 3rd Battalion, 327th Infantry, and later commanded the 3rd Brigade of the 101st, during Operations Desert Shield and Desert Storm. After command, he became the division chief of staff.

va q&a

Department of Veterans Affairs

Q: Does a Department of Veterans Affairs home loan entitlement provide cash to the veteran?

A: No. The amount of entitlement relates only to the amount VA will guarantee the lender against loss. The one exception is that Native American veterans are entitled to a direct home loan for up to $80,000 to purchase, construct or improve dwellings located on trust lands.

Q: What happens if I fail to make the payments on my home loan guaranteed by VA?

A: Failure to make payments on the loan may lead to foreclosure, the loss of your home and, in some cases, a debt to the government for which you would be held responsible. If you find yourself in financial difficulty, please contact your loan holder to discuss the problem and make arrangements to bring your loan current. If additional assistance or advice is required, you should contact VA.

Q: I used my VA-guaranteed home loan benefit years ago. Can I become eligible again and purchase another home with a VA-guaranteed loan?

A: Your entitlement to a VA-guaranteed home loan can be restored if you have sold the home you previously bought and the VA loan has been paid in full.

Your eligibility also can be restored if you have sold your home to a qualified veteran buyer who substituted his or her entitlement for yours.

Q: Are members of the Reserves or National Guard eligible for VA-guaranteed loans?

A: Reservists or National Guard members are eligible if they complete at least six years of service in the Selected Reserves or National Guard. After completing six years, they must either still be serving in a component of the Reserves or have received an honorable discharge.

Reservists or National Guard members also are eligible for VA-guaranteed loans if they have at least 91 days of active-duty service during wartime. Loan guarantee eligibility for reservists expires Oct. 28, 1999.

Worksite fire safety merits awareness

By Donna S. Budjenska
Special to The Bayonet©

Keeping their homes fire safe seems to be a priority for many families, who, at a minimum, have a working smoke alarm.

But fire safety and prevention at the worksite should also be of concern, say Regis Beighley, U.S. Army Infantry Center safety manager, and Hollis Brown, Directorate of Public Safety fire protection specialist.

Monday begins Fire Prevention Week, and while many activities are geared toward youngsters to educate them about fire safety issues, Beighley and Brown said the potentiality of fires at work deserves equal consideration.

As with home protection, worksite fire safety is largely a matter of prevention. Knowing how to avoid potentially hazardous situations and what to do if a fire breaks out could save lives.

Prevention

According to Beighley, industrial fires can be caused by a variety of hazards, including unprotected or faulty equipment, unsafe storage of combustible materials, inadequate ventilation, failure to follow established safety guidelines (such as smoking in restricted areas), inattention, human error and arson.

Recognizing and correcting fire hazards and knowing your company's safety procedures can contribute to worksite fire safety.

Concrete steps can also be taken to avoid hazardous situations:

- Keep equipment and machinery clean and in good operating condition.
- Make sure all electrical equipment is protected.
- Never overload circuits.
- Store flammable or combustible materials in appropriate containers away from heat sources.
- Keep work and refuse areas clean and free of debris.
- Dispose of flammables according to established safety guidelines.
- Never leave open flames unattended.
- Use caution when operating welding and other spark-producing equipment.
- Clean (if appropriate) or report all spills.
- Report suspicious persons to security or managers.
- Keep fire exits and escape routes clear and well marked.
- Know where alarm boxes are located.

Tent fires

Brown and Beighley mentioned a fire hazard unique to military training: tent fires.

"They're a problem," Brown said, "because people are using the wrong fuel or heaters in tents."

A simple way to combat such potential hazards, he said, is to simply use the appropriate fuel and heaters. Unit safety officers should be able to advise soldiers about the proper types to use, Beighley said.

In case of fire

If the worst happens, knowing how to react could prevent a bad situation from getting worse.

Many small, self-contained fires can be safely extinguished on the spot. However, if you're in doubt as to the seriousness of the fire, sound the fire alarm immediately and begin evacuating the building.

Know where fire alarm boxes are located, and know the locations of established escape routes.

If you're certain a small fire doesn't pose an immediate threat to you or the surrounding area, you may be able to put it out with the appropriate fire extinguisher. Be sure the extinguisher you are about

Pvt. 1 Bryan Bohall of Company B, 1st Battalion, 50th Infantry Regiment, is baptized in the Sand Hill swimming pool during a Sunday morning service by Chaplain (Capt.) Ken Williams, battalion chaplain, 1st Bn., 50th Inf. Regt.

REVIVAL RESOLUTIONS

Soldiers commit to Christ, participate in mass baptism

By Lisa M. Hibbert
Bayonet staff writer

Of more than 330 Infantry Training Brigade soldiers who attended a Protestant revival service Sept. 10, 86 made a commitment to Christ, and 36 were baptized in the Sand Hill swimming pool Sunday.

Chaplain (Maj.) Alvin "Sonny" Moore, Protestant chaplain at the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, N.Y., was the guest speaker at the revival service.

Supporters lined the perimeter of the pool as they watched their battle buddies take a plunge of faith.

As an ice-breaker, Chaplain (Capt.) Ken Williams of the 1st Battalion, 50th Infantry Regiment, who performed the service, began by announcing the scores of the football games, filling in the trainees, who have no connection with the outside world, on what they were missing.

At the call to worship and in response to the chaplain's "This is the day that the Lord has made" statement, more than 70 soldiers said, "Let us rejoice and be glad in it."

With the cloudy-gray sky as a backdrop, the soldiers sat outside singing Christian songs, such as "How Majestic is Your Name," "Majesty" and "Because He Lives."

Pvt.1 Christopher Mullinax of Company B, 1st Bn, 50th Inf. Regt., sang a solo called "So Beautiful." He received a rousing "hooah" from his fellow soldiers.

When Williams began the baptism ceremony, he, along with the 35 candidates, went into the pool at the same time.

When Williams asked Pvt.1 Hobart VanBuren of Co. B, 1st Bn, 50th Inf. Regt., if he believed that Christ had died for him and rose again on the third day, VanBuren responded, "With all of my heart, Chaplain."

Of the remaining 51 soldiers who made professions of faith, some will be baptized at their home churches and some were unable to be baptized because of medical reasons.

Callaway's Challenge hosts military appreciation

By Lisa M. Hibbert
Bayonet staff writer

Hundreds of active duty, Reservists and retired military, along with their families, accepted the challenge, the Buick Challenge that is, when Callaway Gardens opened its doors with a military appreciation day Sept. 29.

For most, the thrill was in the golf tournament with big-name players in action; but, for others, it was the simple things in life like a leisurely talk on the telephone.

That's right — while thousands of people surrounded the greens trying to get glimpses of the action, the pay phones were the highlight of the trip for many of the basic training soldiers from the Infantry Training Brigade who made the journey to Callaway.

Some were concerned that concession prices would be a detriment to the One Station Unit Training Soldiers enjoying the tourney.

One soldier, when asked about paying $3 for a soft drink, said, "I'd pay five dollars for a Coke; we can't get them at all on Sand Hill."

Other soldiers "discovered" the caddies' soft drink machine, which dispensed sodas for 75 cents.

Paying for pricey food at the Challenge was not a problem for everybody. In fact, some didn't have to pay for food at all. That's because the 11th Infantry Regiment teamed up with the 36th Engineer Group to sponsor a cookout by the beach pavilion at Callaway.

Soldiers in uniform weren't the only ones representing the military. Mike Stevens, who hit his drive into the woods on the right of the 11th hole and from there hit it into the woods on the left, noted that he was playing military golf — right, left.

"Hush y'all" signs let crowds know to stay quiet at the Buick Challenge golf tournament.

"But that's only fitting since this is the military's hole," Stevens told his caddy.

Fort Benning furnished more than 65 marshals to man that hole during the tournament.

Apropos of the Buick Challenge being in Georgia, the crowd-information signs that the marshals raised that traditionally say something like "quiet," had "hush y'all" written on them. And while everyone knew "hush y'all" meant keep quiet, it was not really understood that it meant keep still.

One of the caddies had apparently served in the military. Although soldiers stopped talking when the "hush y'all" signs were held up, they didn't necessarily stop walking. Seeing his pro being distracted from putting by all the Trash collection will take place as scheduled Tuesday through Friday. No yard waste will be picked up Monday, but it will be picked up the following Monday as normally scheduled. All other schedules remain unchanged. For more information, call 545-4749.

community briefs

ON POST

Trash collection — Refuse and recyclables will be picked up as normally scheduled in family housing areas Tuesday through Friday. However, there will be no yard waste collection in Fort Benning housing areas Monday. The yard waste will be picked up Oct. 16 as normally scheduled.

For more information, call the Construction Inspection Branch of the Directorate of Public Works at 545-4749.

Dexter fall festival — Dexter Elementary School will have a fall festival Oct. 14 from 1 to 5 p.m. at the school's playground.

A spacewalk, train rides, cotton candy, funnel cakes, face painting, opportunity drawings, Military Police and fire department displays and Binky the Clown are some of the planned attractions.

For more information, call Tammy Wisher at 682-9018 or Dexter at 545-3424.

Military discount — A limited number of 50 percent discount flyers for the musical "Miss Saigon," playing Oct. 22 to 29 at the Atlanta Civic Center, are available at Carlson Wagonlit Travel Office at the Main Mall. Sign ups for bus transportation are available. Stop by Carlson Wagonlit or call 682-0433 for more information.

Warrant officers briefing — Active duty, reserve and retired warrant officers may attend an officer professional development briefing on the noncommissioned officers evaluation report at the Officers' Club Nov. 1 from noon to 1 p.m.

For more information, call Chief Warrant Officer 3 Ted Walker at 689-4949 or Warrant Officer 1 Lewis Wilson at 214-0783.

Blood drive — The American Red Cross is sponsoring a blood drive at Fort Benning Oct. 13 from 9:30 a.m. to 3 p.m. in Building 4, Classroom 4.

The Red Cross needs to collect more than 1,000 units of blood every weekday just to meet the day-to-day needs of hospitals. Because blood has a life span of only about 42 days, the Red Cross can't stockpile supplies.

Support group training — Family support group training for commanders, first sergeants, family support group leaders and volunteers is slated for today and Oct. 19 from 9 a.m. to noon at the Family Unit Network.

This training will cover topics such as organizing and structuring family support groups, fund-raisers, newsletters, authorized support, etc. Training is open to commanders, first sergeants, family support group leaders and volunteers. Call to confirm attendance.

For more information, call the FUN Center at 545-5246.

Commissary discounts — In October, the Commissary will be giving shoppers a discount on major manufacturers products, and, based on sales, a contribution will be made to the American Red Cross to support its services to the armed forces.

For more information, call 544-3213 or 545-5194.

Learning center — The Army Learning Center, located in Building 2611, Soldiers' Plaza, offers a wide variety of courses that are free and self-paced. Ability to type or knowledge of computers is not required. Topics include science, mathematics, adult literacy, test preparation, General Equivalency Diploma, management, computers and data processing and personal computer tutorials.

A dial-up capability allows users to remotely access the cyber-based instructional system from work or home terminals 24 hours a day, seven days a week. An IBM-compatible terminal with a graphics card, a modem and access disk are needed. The free access disk can be obtained at the Learning Center. You will need to bring a blank replacement disk with you.

All active duty, retired military, Army and Air Force Exchange Service, nonappropriated fund, Reserves and National Guard personnel are authorized to use the Army Learning Center.

The telephone number is 545-1436; the hours of operation are Monday through Friday, 7 a.m. to noon and 1 to 4 p.m.

Police recruiting — The Atlanta Police Department is recruiting again for additional officers.

Briefings will be Oct. 26 at the Job Assistance Center in Building 2634, located in Soldiers' Plaza. These briefings will be at 9 a.m., 11 a.m. and 1:30 p.m. Applications will be distributed following the briefings.

Personnel will be available to answer questions and assist in completing the application. The hiring process can take six to 12 months.

Call the JAC at 545-2308 or 545-2309 to be scheduled.

Membership cards — Youth Services annual membership cards became available Sept. 18. Membership and registration are required for all children who participate in any YS program or activity or utilize the facilities. The cost per membership will be $20 per year, per family.

This requirement will work in much the same way as registration into other programs on the installation, such as Child Development Services.

This fee will alleviate the member and non-member fees that were offered last year; however, as always the additional fees associated with particular sports activities and lessons will continue to cover the specific materials or equipment required.

The additional fees are not new, and since all youth will be required to register and become members of YS, the additional fees assessed will be the same for all individuals participating in the same program or activity, for example, football, soccer, baseball, piano lessons, dance lessons, etc.

For more information, call Lamar Caldwell at 545-3070 or 545-3913.

AER college assistance — Soldiers with college-aged children often wonder how they can afford education costs. Many don't realize that part of the answer may be found from Army Emergency Relief.

AER provides financial assistance through scholarships. To qualify for financial assistance through AER, students must be enrolled, accepted or pending acceptance as a full-time student for the entire academic year in post-secondary educational institutions approved by the U.S. Department of Education.

Scholarships are awarded based on financial need, academic achievement and individual accomplishments.

Applications must be received by March 1 for the upcoming academic year.

For more information, stop by and visit AER, Building 2643, Soldiers' Plaza, 8 a.m. to 5 p.m., Monday through Friday.

Book signing — Military techno-thriller author Bob Mayer will be at the Main Mall today and Saturday from 9 a.m. to 7 p.m. and Sunday from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. to autograph copies of his Special Forces novels "Eyes of the Hammer," "Dragon Sim-13," "Synbat" and his latest release, "Cut Out."

Mayer will also have his "Fiction Writer's Toolkit: A Guide to Writing Novels and Getting Published" available for sale.

OFF POST

Indian cultures festival — The Sixth annual Festival of Southeastern Indian Cultures will be Oct. 13 to 15 at Columbus College.

This community event, which will feature dance demonstrations, crafts, jewelry, games, customs and food, needs many volunteers.

If you would like to help with at least four hours of your time, call Lavonda Forbes at 324-7440 and leave your name and telephone number.

Car wash — A car wash to support Santa's Castle will be Oct. 14 from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. at the NCOA Building, 2029 South Lumpkin Road, Columbus. Charges will be $3 for automobiles, $4 for trucks and $5 for vans.

ESL classes — Do you need English as a second language? Come to Tillinghurst High School at the corner of Buena Vista and Morris roads. The classes are free and run throughout the year Tuesdays and Thursdays from 6 to 9 p.m.

Students are placed in classes according to their level of need. There are competent teachers and 10 computers to help with vocabulary, pronunciation, spelling, grammar and everyday conversation.

For more information, call Myrtle Chalkley at 545-4539.

PTSA meeting — W.H. Spencer High School Parent-Teacher-Student Association will have a meeting Tuesday, 7 p.m., in the school auditorium.

Membership cards will be available from 6:30 to 7 p.m.

Call Ruth Cole at 685-9783 or Michelle Terry at 682-0377 for more information.

Helping the hooch — Keep Columbus Beautiful is sponsoring "Help the Hooch," a river clean-up day to tidy the banks of the Chattahoochee River, Oct. 21 beginning at 9 a.m.

Volunteers of all ages are needed, and a volunteer thank-you party will conclude the clean-up day at noon.

Halloween

trick-or-treating hours, regulations set

Infantry Branch Safety Office

Halloween "trick or treating" will be in effect from 6 to 8 p.m. Oct. 31. The is the only day trick or treating is permitted.

Activities for trick or treating are limited to children under 13 years old. Preschool children must be accompanied by an older person (14 years or older).

Limit trick or treating only to the housing area in which the participants reside, and approach only residences with lighted entry ways.

Light-colored, fire resistant costumes, short enough to prevent tripping, should be worn by children. Costumes can be marked with reflective tape or "glow" spray paint so they can pick up auto headlights and other lights.

Observe all basic safety precautions. Use sidewalks and crosswalks; don't cut through yards. Look in all directions before walking across the street.

Wear masks or head coverings that do not restrict vision. Use colorful facial makeup as much as possible.

Ensure pet owners take measures to prevent pets from being a nuisance or a menace to children. Caution children about the wrongs of vandalism and causing damage to the property of others.

Ensure children carry flashlights after dark. If a child carries a pumpkin, it should be lit with a battery device, not a candle.

Never let your child eat anything until you have inspected the treats. Give your child a full meal before he or she goes trick or treating.

Day delights RTB families

By Bradley K. Nelson
4th Ranger Training Battalion

Members of the 4th Ranger Training Battalion took a day off from their busy schedule and enjoyed the Labor Day holiday with a battalion family day Sept. 2. Members of the battalion began gathering at 9 a.m. to kick off family day at the Uchee Creek Recreation center.

Games and activities for the children included a water balloon toss, egg toss, face painting and the popular space walk. Other special activities included pontoon boat rides down the Chattahoochee River, swimming at the Uchee Creek pool and basketball and volleyball games.

A special visit by Eakmo the Clown thrilled the children as he performed a magic show for children and parents alike. Eakmo performed many tricks, including pulling a rabbit from a hat.

'Night Out' on the horizon

By Scott A. Tenczar
Infantry Training Brigade

The spouses of Infantry Training Brigade soldiers will be having their annual "Night Out" Oct. 16 at the Sand Hill NCO Club. Traditionally, spouses within the ITB get together at least once a year to catch up on the times, make new acquaintances and simply socialize and have fun.

This year's event will include a socializing period starting at 6:30 p.m., followed by dinner at 7 p.m. The night will conclude with bingo starting at 8:30 p.m. Each battalion is contributing two gifts for the bingo match. All proceeds from the night will go to an on-post charity that supports women and children.

Considerable time and effort have gone into making this year's get together the best that it can be. Spouses from each battalion have banded together to form a committee of up to 20 representatives. Heading up the effort are Chris Brooks and Chris Hurley, the wives of the brigade commander and command sergeant major, respectively.

Brooks said she is especially excited about the opportunity to meet many of the new spouses within the ITB.

Wives' club luncheon brings out denim best

Officers' Wives' Club

The Thrift Shop, sponsored by OWC, brings in approximately $250,000 a year. OWC uses these profits to benefit the Fort Benning community by providing scholarships and in giving donations to various community projects.

In support of the Thrift Shop, the October OWC luncheon on Oct. 18 at the Officers' Club Regimental Room will feature fashion modeling of clothes from the Thrift Shop. The luncheon will begin at 11 a.m. The cost is $8.

All women who attend the luncheon are encouraged to wear their favorite blue jeans or denim outfit and to bring an item for the Army Community Service food locker. Reservations are to be made by noon Oct. 13.

When making reservations, let the club know if you will be attending for the first time or if you will be bringing a guest.

To make reservations, call Brooke Gorski at 682-4913 or Lorie Bohnstedt at 682-8495.

Program trains Army spouses

By Mary Allen
Army Career and Alumni Program

Do you want to learn more about the role of a spouse in the Army community? Now multi-phased skills training is being taught through the Army Family Team Building Program.

This program is designed to teach spouses how to prepare for deployments and other day-to-day challenges that exist within the Army community.

AFTB teachers are volunteers who have been specially trained and who have received a specific tailored job description and credit for their volunteer hours.

Through AFTB training, spouses are empowered with the tools on how to function at their highest level in any military life situation with minimal outside support.

As a result of this training, personal and family readiness will improve and overall strengthen the quality of life and Army readiness within the Army family.

AFTB training consists of three levels: Level 1 is designed for Army spouses with less than five years of experience with the Army community or for those who would like a refresher course.

Level II is designed for spouses who have been living the Army lifestyle for 5 to 10 years. Level III is projected to begin in the spring of 1996.

Listed below is a schedule of classes:

Level I: (Building 359, Family Unit Network Center)

Wednesday — 9 a.m. to 1 p.m.
Nov. 9 — 6 to 10 p.m.

Level II: (Building 2624, Army Family Team Building, Soldiers' Plaza)

Oct. 17 — 9 to 11 a.m.
Oct. 19 — 7 to 9 p.m.
Oct. 24 — 9 to 11 a.m.
Nov. 16 — 6 to 9 p.m.
Nov. 21 — 9 a.m. to 9 p.m.

For information or to make reservations for classes, contact the Family Unit Network Center at 545-5602.

Bus tour available

Army Career and Alumni Program

A free installation bus tour, sponsored by the Directorate of Military Personnel/Adjutant General and the Adjutant General Replacement Detachment, is available to all incoming soldiers, family members and Department of the Army civilians.

The purpose of the tour is to explain the services available on post, identify the location of various activities and to assist families in networking within the military community.

The tour begins and ends at the Welcome Center, Building 2607, Soldiers' Plaza, every Monday through Friday from 8 to 10:30 a.m.

Incoming military personnel are automatically scheduled for this tour during their initial inprocessing. Family members and civilians can participate on a walk-in basis.

The tour bus schedule consists of Morale, Welfare and Recreation Activities, unit locations, Army and Air Force Exchange Service and Commissary facilities and military and civilian customer service areas. Proper attire is required.

For more information, contact Sgt. 1st Class Tyrone Fuller at 545-2010 or 545-1307.

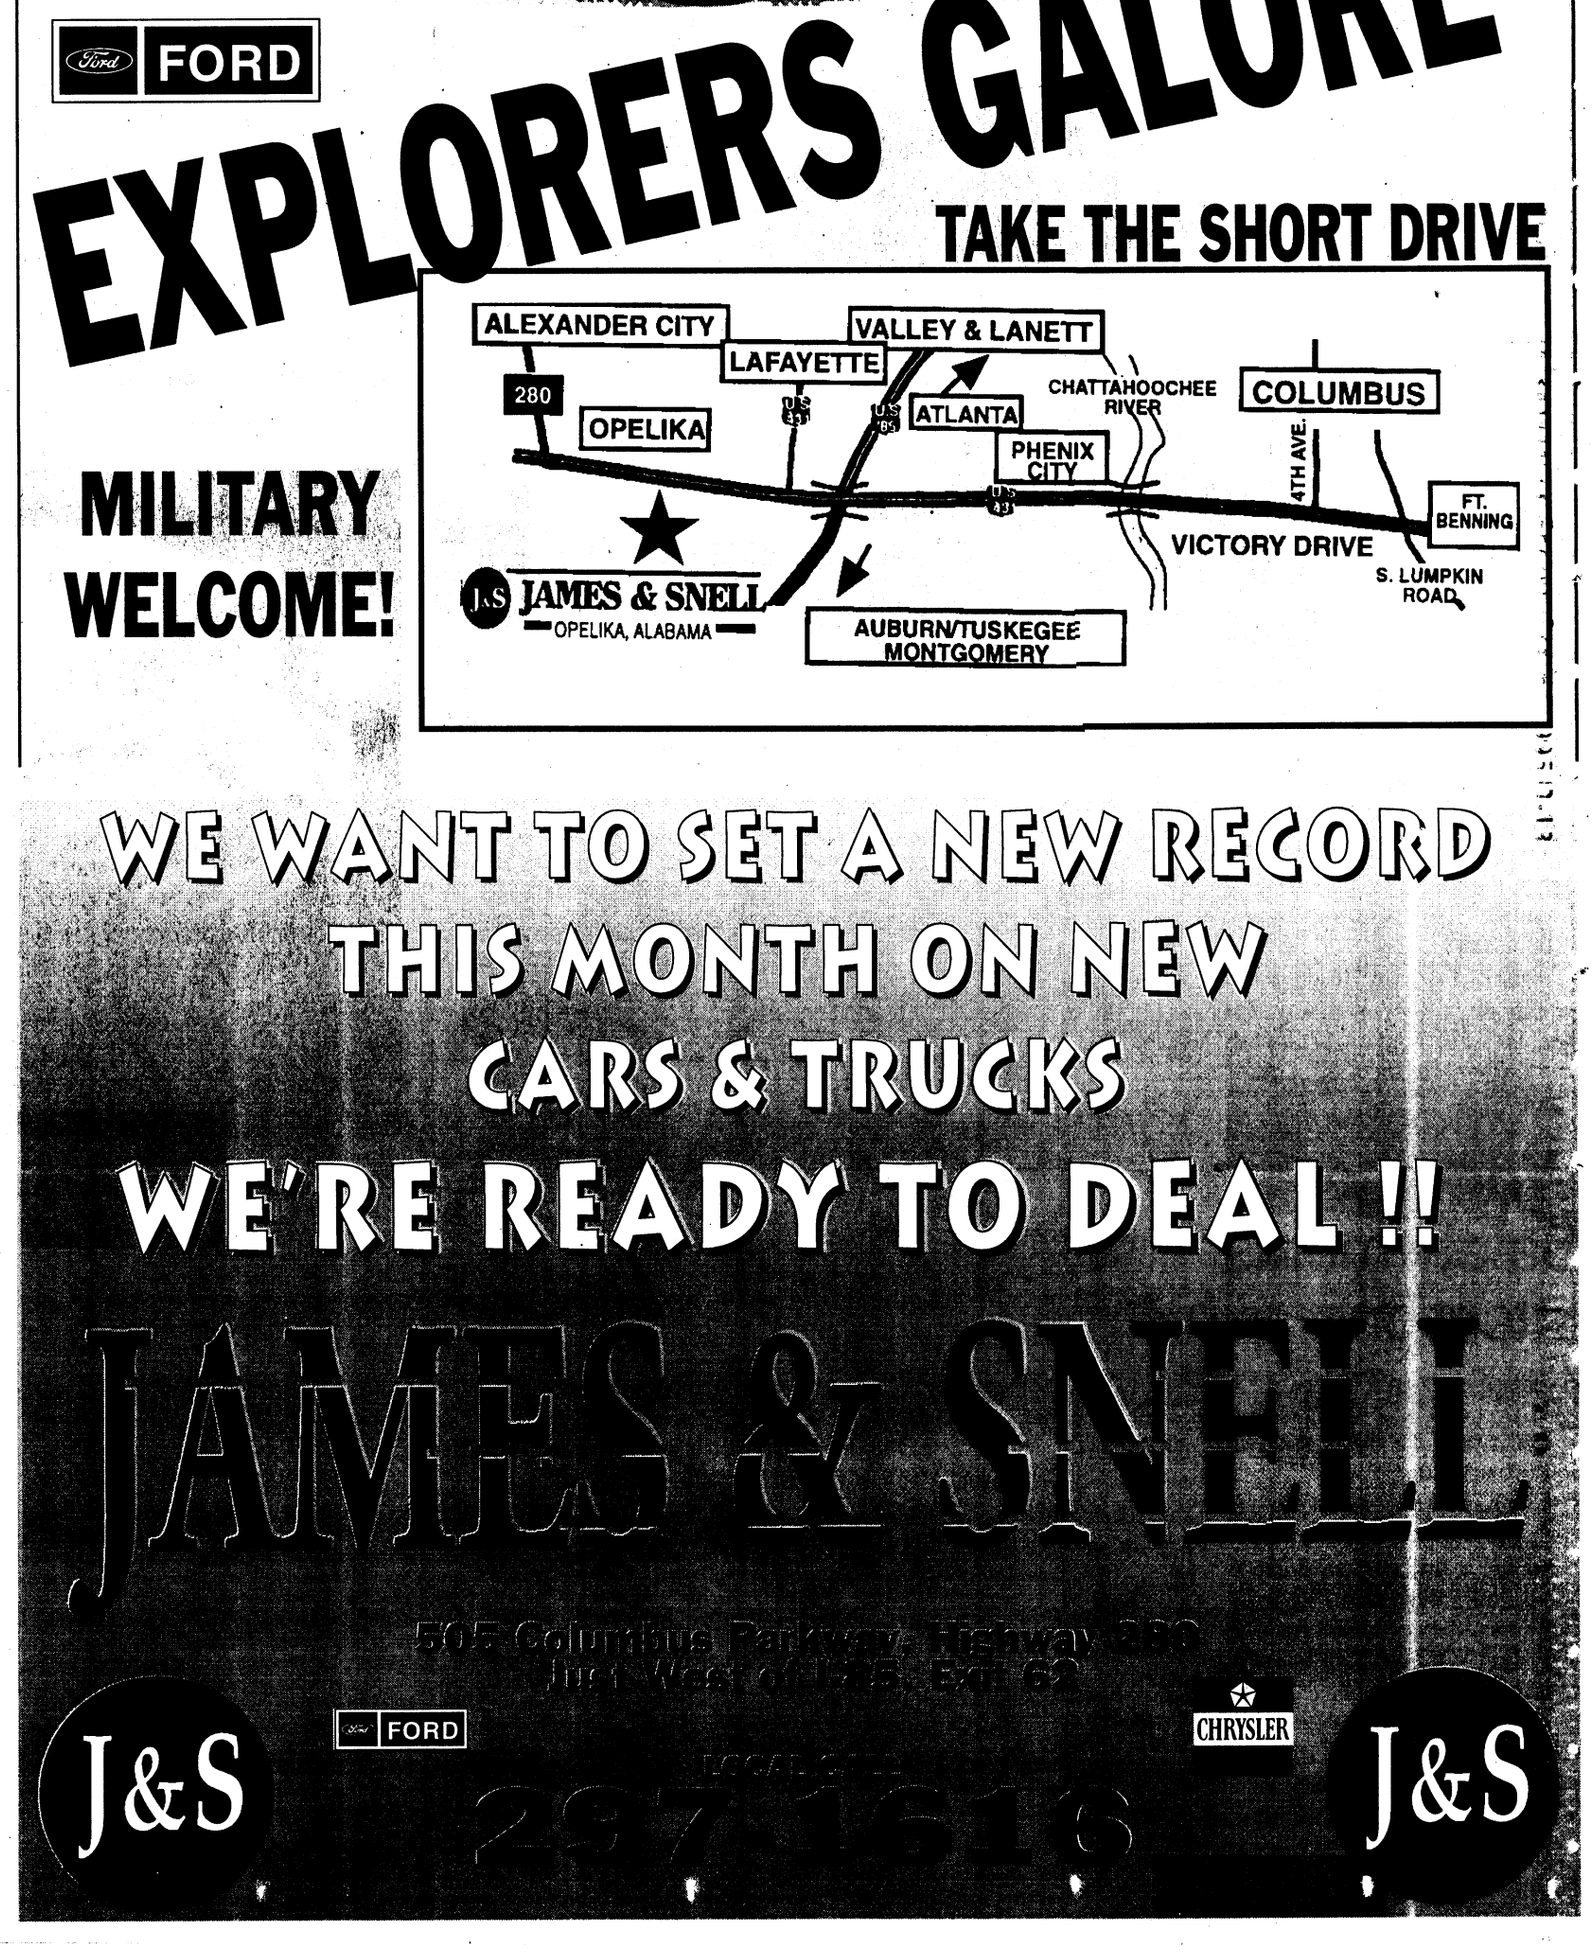
Transition Assistance Classes

Army Career and Alumni Program

If you're getting out the military, the Army Career and Alumni Program is available to help you make the transition.

All service members getting out of or retiring from the military must process through the Army Career and Alumni Program's Transition Assistance Office, Building 2617, Soldiers' Plaza, before attending a Transition Assistance Program class in Infantry Hall.

The National Defense Authorization Act Fiscal 1991, Public Law 101-510 states that soldiers within 180 days of expiration term of service are required to attend a Transition Assistance Program class.



Classes are given in three-day blocks and are scheduled throughout the year.

Classes are in Classroom 30, Infantry Hall, from 7:45 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

For more information, call 545-7020 or 545-7009.

Date	Type of Class
Oct. 16 to 18	Retirement
Oct. 23 to 25	ETS
Oct. 30 to Nov. 1	ETS
Nov. 6 to 8	ETS
Nov. 27 to 29	ETS

Chilean cadets get crash course from US Army

By Judith Ginder
School of the Americas

More than 160 cadets from the Chilean Military Academy spent the week of Sept. 23 through 28 training at the School of the Americas.

Getting a quick taste of almost everything a person can do at Fort Benning is what the SOA familiarization course is all about.

"These students get a quick orientation into the training that is given at SOA," said Capt. Jorge Swank, a SOA tactics officer.

During the five-day course, the cadets trained practically non-stop — from a physical training formation at 5:30 a.m. formation until after dark. They fast-roped out of helicopters, took part in airborne training and went through the Darby Queen confidence course.

> "The training that we've had here is unbelievable. Hopefully, ... I'll have the opportunity to come back."
> — Fernando Fuentes
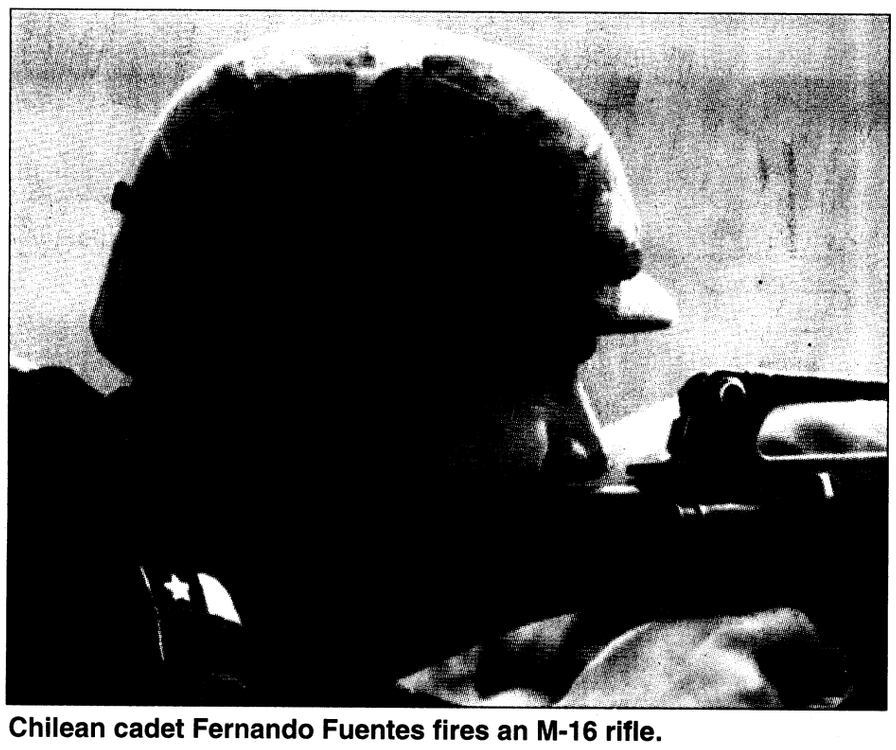
> Chilean cadet

They learned how to clear and secure a town for peacekeeping operations at the military operations on urbanized terrain facility. And if that wasn't enough, they toured the Infantry Museum and various other sites in Columbus.

"This is a very busy week for them," Swank said. "They've gone from one thing right into the next."

About 65 of the cadets also earned U.S. Army Airborne wings.



While waiting impatiently to have a turn fast-roping, Chilean cadet Fernando Fuentes said he couldn't believe all of the things that he and his fellow cadets had been doing all week.

"The training that we've had here is unbelievable," Fuentes said. "Hopefully, after I'm out of the academy, I'll have the opportunity to come back for longer course."

IOAC students, German officers pay visit to Civil War battle site

By Mark A. Viney
Infantry Officer Advanced Course

Fifteen officers from the Infantry Officer Advanced Course hosted an equal number of German Army officers on a staff ride to Gettysburg, Pa.

The purpose of the staff ride was for officers of both nations to gain an appreciation for the timeless principles of warfare by studying their application on an actual battlefield.

For the American officers, the visit to Gettysburg was an in-depth extension of the tactical instruction they had received previously in IOAC.

For the American officers, the visit to Gettysburg was an in-depth extension of the tactical instruction they had previously received in IOAC

The American officers participating in the staff ride were students from IOAC Class 4-95. The German participants were all recent graduates of their nation's comparable Company Commander's Course.

The American-German staff ride program began about two years ago. Former Army Chief of Staff Gordon A. Sullivan and his German Army counterpart conceived the program as a means to foster U.S.-German military relations and to incorporate the lessons of previous wars into the leadership training of both armies.

The Combined Arms and Tactics Directorate, which sponsored the staff ride, selected the battlefield at Gettysburg for study because its well-preserved condition lends itself to use as an open-air classroom.

The American participants departed Fort Benning Sept. 4 for the seven-day staff ride. They flew to Washington, D.C., and met their German guests at Dulles International Airport.

With a few hours available before the Germans arrived, the Americans took the opportunity to visit another Civil War battlefield located at nearby Manassas,Va. Presentations by National Park Service rangers and visitor center displays helped the American officers gain an appreciation for the two separate battles fought there in July 1861 and August 1862.

The group reached their accommodations at the Pennsylvania National Guard Armory in Gettysburg later that afternoon. Training began immediately with a series of background briefings to orient the Germans on the American Civil War.

After a presentation of the war's major events leading up to the battle of Gettysburg, the American officers provided detailed discussions on such topics as Civil War weaponry, tactics and logistics. This instruction lasted well into the night, but that didn't seem to bother the Germans who adjusted well to the eight-hour time difference.

"Surprisingly, (the Germans) were extremely knowledgeable about our Civil War," said Capt. Brett Mott.

On the morning of Sept. 5, the officers began their three-day study of the battlefield at the visitor's center, which is operated by the National Park Service. There, the group observed the "Electric Map" presentation, which uses a three-dimensional diorama to present a bird's eye overview of the battle of Gettysburg. Afterward, the group viewed the tremendous collection of Civil War uniforms, weapons and equipment on display.

The officers spent that afternoon in discussions at McPherson's Ridge, Seminary Ridge, Oak Hill and Cemetery Hill — all scenes of fighting on the first day of battle.

The small, rural town of Gettysburg and the surrounding countryside look much as they did in July 1863 when the most decisive battle of the American Civil War was fought there. Several officers said that observing the actual battlefield in person forced them to alter their pre-conceived ideas about the battle.

The second day of the staff ride began atop an observation tower at the southern end of the battlefield. Highlights of the day's study included discussions at Devil's Den, Little Round Top, the Wheatfield, the Peach Orchard, Culp's Hill and Cemetery Hill — all scenes of heavy fighting on the second day of battle.

The third and final day of the staff ride began with a physical training run across the ground covered in Pickett's Charge. The group returned to the same area later that morning and discussed the events of the third day of battle. The battlefield tour concluded with a visit to the "Cyclorama," located in the visitor's center. This huge, circular painting depicts the battle at its height during Pickett's Charge.

The final afternoon in Gettysburg was left open for the officers to spend as they wished. Most used the time to visit the several museums in the area and to shop for souvenirs.

During their four evenings in Gettysburg, the German and American officers got to know each other through friendly games of soccer and other activities.

The officers departed Gettysburg early on the morning of Sept. 8. They traveled to Washington, D.C. and toured the Pentagon and Arlington National Cemetery. The group spent the final two nights of the trip in guest housing at Fort Meade, Md.

After dinner on their final evening together as a group, the Germans and Americans exchanged plaques in commemoration of the time well spent together.

The officers spent the final day of the trip touring the museums, monuments and other attractions of Washington, D.C., on their own.

ITB develops new, lower profile fighting position

By Scott Tenczar
Infantry Training Brigade

The Infantry Training Brigade has developed a new, lower-profile fighting position to be used by infantry units.

The new style fighting position will increase a defending unit's ability to remain concealed, thus reducing the enemy's ability to circumvent defensive positions and allowing the defending unit to engage the enemy from a safer distance.

The idea for the lower-profile fighting position originated with Col. Johnny W. Brooks, commander of the ITB. Brooks' concern is that technological advances in optics and weaponry will render defending units using the standard, higher-profile fighting positions ineffective or vulnerable.

With Brooks' guidance, commanders and non-commissioned officers within the ITB set about developing versions of the new position.

The cadre of Company A, 1st Battalion, 19th Infantry, developed the final version. Capt. Robert M. Smith, Co. A commander, in conjunction with key NCOs, developed the low-profile concept into a reality.

While retaining a full 18 inches of overhead cover, the low-profile fighting position extends only 12 inches above ground, as opposed to 26 inches for standard positions.

The remaining six inches are "built down" into the ground. Also, instead of stopping at armpit level as in standard positions, the low-profile position is dug down to the level of a soldier's chin.

Visibility is provided by firing platforms, dug eight inches deep, that allow soldiers to lean forward and cover their defensive sectors without exposing their head and shoulders.

The position can be modified to suit all types of terrain. A "totally built-down" version for desert conditions employs a full 18 inches of overhead cover but does not extend beyond ground level. A "modified built-up" version for hilly terrain extends 18 inches above ground and uses a gradual front slope to blend with the natural slope of the hill. Also, a low-profile position for the M-60 machine gun has been developed.

In Co. A exercises, platoons have been able to prepare defenses with low-profile positions in roughly the same time as platoons digging standard positions.

With the low-profile fighting position as the new standard at ITB, the current thrust is to spread the concept Armywide.

TRADOC is key to changing Army, Reimer says

TRADOC News Service

FORT MONROE, Va. — "When you get into trying to change an army, really the key headquarters is TRADOC (Training and Doctrine Command)," said Gen. Dennis J. Reimer, Army chief of staff.

"Training is the most important thing we do during peacetime. Therefore, Training and Doctrine Command is a terribly important command for us."

Reimer made his first visit to TRADOC headquarters Sept. 25, since becoming chief of staff in July.

"You've got to feel good about not only what they're doing, but the people who are doing it," he said. He predicted that TRADOC's budget would not fluctuate greatly in the future, but he wants to be sure the command gets "the most out of each of those dollars."

Greater efficiency is one of Reimer's goals during his tenure as chief of staff. However, Army leaders should "put emphasis on people" while looking for new technologies and efficiency in operations.

"What we're striving for is the correct balance between taking care of people and providing the technology that they will need to do their jobs in the 21st century," Reimer said.

He also wants to discontinue restricting some deployment duties to certain military occupational specialties.

"For example, you have now in Guantanamo Bay infantry companies that are guarding the Cuban refugees ... as opposed to military police," Reimer said. He also pointed out the 2nd Armored Cavalry Regiment, Fort Polk, La., has spelled infantry forces in Haiti.

However, some units are so unique that only they can do certain jobs, he said. The 7th Transportation Group, Fort Eustis, Va., is one. The group, or parts of it, have deployed for Operations Desert Shield and Storm and every operation other than war since then to operate marine port facilities.

"The 7th Transportation Group — they're really a national treasure," Reimer said. "We can't control the missions we get ... and that's why we keep going back to units like the 7th."

Reimer said he believes that soldiers aren't bothered as much by justifiable deployments as when commanders wait until Friday afternoon to tell them they're working Saturday.

"We're about 70 percent married right now, and so we've got to be very considerate of the families," he said. "I think we're making some real efforts to improve the predictability for soldiers and their families."

TRADOC may play a role in providing predictability and decreasing turbulence in unit turnover, the general said.

That predictability and "adequate quality of life" for families is one of Reimer's primary goals. Leadership has to fight to retain the current retirement system, medical benefits and pay raises for soldiers, the general said.

Living conditions will be improved for single soldiers as well, but not "as fast as everybody wants it to be."

The Army's share of the defense budget is about $60 billion, he said. To become more efficient, the Army has to examine how the money is spent and find ways to reduce costs.

An example he cites of how the Army could reduce costs is to reduce the time between when a unit orders supplies or equipment and when the order is shipped. Millions of dollars can be saved for each day the shipping time is reduced.

"This is where we want to work with civilian industry," Reimer said. "What we'd like to do is benchmark our operation against the best that we can find out there in the civilian world and try to become as good as they are.

"We're going to continue to work with TRADOC and other major commands to make the Army as efficient as we possibly can. That's the key to our future."

Laity Sunday honors lay ministry contributions

By Anibal Cruz-Baez
School of the Americas

Sunday is designated Laity Sunday. In observance, I wish to take this opportunity to discuss the importance of lay ministry and how the laity can and does contribute.

How can I work to spread the gospel or become an ambassador or witness for Christ? How can I lead others to him? How can I show them that Christ makes a difference? There are ways to work, witness, lead and to prove that Christ is the difference.

As Christians, we must minister by utilizing our God-given attributes in our relationships with other people. Some of the attributes seem to be essential ingredients of a Christian, clergy or lay person.

• Laughter — Wherever Christ really means something to people, there is joy and gladness of heart that cannot be masked by a dour disposition or a sour countenance. Christ came to set people free from darkness, gloomy thoughts and from a negative approach to life and people. The person who is going to commend Jesus Christ to me is the person in whose face I can see that Jesus Christ has made a difference. ("Rejoice in the Lord ... " Phillipians. 4:4).

If you are really in love with Christ, tell your face about it. Remember to smile, to be cheerful and pleasant. Laughter can ease a lot of life's tension. Lay persons can spread the gospel by relating to people cheerfully.

reflections

• Listening — Listening will complement our witnessing if Christ has really liberated us from self-preoccupation so that we can relate meaningfully to others. Christ spent a lot of his time listening to people. Sometimes we are so eager to propagandize our point of view that we really could care less what the other fellow is thinking or saying. We are interested in talking, not listening. Some of the most effective work takes place when a Christian practices the art of listening — listening to the other fellow's problems, needs and ideas.

• Loyalty — Loyalty in the Christian community means believing that we should all be one in Christ, loyal to our church (chapel community), to the denomination of which we are members, to the church at large, to the cause of Christ, to our Christian heritage and to fellow Christians. I do not mean blind loyalty. Rather, I mean the kind of loyalty that does not indulge in irresponsible talk or pretend that one side of a story is all there is to tell.

If we are loyal to people and the traditions to which we belong in this Christian community, we will help create a freer atmosphere where there is less suspicion and fear. It will make possible more open communication between conflicting points of view. It will help to build up people. This is part of our Christian duty.

• Love — The loving person is one who can laugh, listen and is loyal. Love is the sovereign virtue from which all others spring. Anyone that attaches the name "Christian" to himself or herself and has not love is not only a noisy gong and a clanging cymbal but also a mockery and a sham. Christianity is about love. "Love one another with brotherly affection." (Romans 12:10) "Make love your aim." (I Corinthians 14:1)

Love goes beyond just liking the other fellow. Love means building a bridge to him even if you do not like him. Anyone who brings love to others will help them cross the frontier from death to life and acquit himself or herself of his or her Christianresponsibility in spreading the gospel.

Thank you, lay leaders, for sharing your laughter, listening, loyalty and love. Thank you for doing so when visiting others and when serving in a worship service. Your assistance in preparing for the service, distributing bulletins, welcoming people, reading, singing in the choir, ushering and meeting to plan programs are all greatly needed and appreciated. Thank you for walking the extra mile and carrying the load.

Jewish festival Sukkot a precursor to Thanksgiving

By Tom Wheatley
Ranger Training Brigade

Very soon, we will be planning for our American celebration of Thanksgiving. Turkeys will be on display in the stores, and schools will be putting up scenes of native Americans and pilgrims gathering for the "first Thanksgiving."

This celebration of ours is actually patterned after the Jewish festival of tabernacles or booths called Sukkot. During this festival or feast, the people celebrated the good harvest. They gave thanks for it and all the material blessings God had provided. They recognized that God's sheltering hand had protected them during the year and his providence watched over them always.

Is it any wonder then that when our pilgrim fathers of America wanted to give thanks for whatever food they had and for divine guidance across stormy seas to a new land, they chose this festival of tabernacles as their model?

reflections

In Leviticus 23:34 to 43, God tells Moses: "On the 15th day of this seventh month is the feast of tabernacles for seven days unto the Lord. On the first day shall be a holy convocation. You shall do no manner of servile work. On the 15th day when you have gathered in the fruits of the land, you shall keep the feast of the Lord seven days.

"And you shall take you on the first day the fruit of goodly trees, branches of palm trees, and boughs of thick trees, and willows of the brook, and you shall rejoice before the Lord your God seven days. You shall dwell in booths seven days ... that all your generations know that I made the children of Israel to dwell in booths, when I brought them out of the land of Egypt: I am the Lord your God."

The symbolism involved in this celebration is powerful, and we a11 would do well to learn from it. The expression of gratitude for God's protection is demonstrated by the sukkah, or festive booth, while thanks for God's blessings is shown by the plant offerings.

The booth, or sukkah, is a small hut covered by branches instead of a firm roof. It may be decorated by fruits, flowers, and wall coverings to make it attractive but it is the roof that matters.

Man steps out of the protection of his home, places himself beneath the starry sky and feels perfectly protected, for God is his guardian. In ancient Israel, the harvest celebration took place in such huts, and today every congregation has at least one sukkah at the synagogue where the people assemble to break bread and give thanks.

Along with the thanks for divine protection goes gratitude for divine blessings, expressed in the cluster of special plants — a citron, a branch of the date palm, myrtles, and willows of the brook — brought to the temple.

These plants represent all the types of vegetation brought forth by the Earth. This collection of plants is waved during the recital of the hallel, the psalms of thanksgiving (Psalms 113 to 118).

As the Psalms are recited, the branches are pointed in a different direction of the compass to show that from every direction God's blessings have come. He is everywhere and to be thanked in every direction.

The festival concludes with great rejoicing as the people have thanksgiving in their hearts — certain of God's protection and willing to be his witnesses, ready to step into the dark wintery months of the year, knowing that they will emerge from winter's night into a new spring, for God is with them.

This year when you prepare for Thanksgiving, you may want to include some of these physical spiritual symbols of God's ever-present blessings and protection into your day.

USAIS chief of staff to retire

By Shannon Day
Special to The Bayonet©

A man who has dedicated 28 years of his life to military service will be honored today at 4 p.m. at a ceremony on York Field.

That man is Col. Joseph C. Windle, chief of staff, U.S. Army Infantry School. He will retire from active duty Dec. 1.

Windle was commissioned as a second lieutenant in the Infantry Branch in 1967, after completing a bachelor of science degree in education at Auburn University in Alabama.

He said he believes the Army offered him many opportunities to do and see things he wouldn't have had if he had not joined the military.

"I come from a small town - Reeltown, Ala.," he said. "There were only 19 people in my (high school) graduating class. I believe most of my classmates are still there. The Army gave me opportunities not available through any other source."

During the course of his career, Windle served in Panama, Vietnam and Korea.

His awards include the Legion of Merit with two oak leaf clusters, Bronze Star Medal, Meritorious Service Medal with five oak leaf clusters, Purple Heart, Army Commendation Medal with two oak leaf clusters, Vietnam Honor Medal First Class and the Vietnam Cross of Gallantry Unit Citation with palm.

He has seen numerous advances in the Army since 1967.

"I have seen many changes, most for the better, in terms of the quality of the soldier, soldier readiness and unit readiness," he said.

One of the largest changes in the Army he saw was the growth and quality of the noncommissioned officer corps after the Vietnam War.

"Our noncommissioned officer corps is the envy of every army around the world," he said.

"At each of my assignments I have been honored to serve with some of the best officers, noncommissioned officers and soldiers serving in our Army," Windle said. "It has been a real privilege.

"The great Army we talk about is a reality," he continued. "I am proud to have been a part of it and proud to have been an infantryman."

Although serving with outstanding soldiers made his assignments easier, he said he couldn't have made it without the support of his wife, Jessica, and son, Scott.

After he retires, Windle will become the commandant of the Lyman Ward Military Academy in Camp Hill, Ala., which is about 15 miles from his hometown.

"We are ready to embark on a new adventure," Windle said.

A PERSONAL LOOK

Name: Col. Joseph C. Windle

Title: Chief of Staff, U.S. Army Infantry School

Contracting employee receives recognition

Directorate of Contracting

The installation's small and disadvantaged business utilization specialist was recently recognized by the U.S. Department of Commerce, Minority Business Development Agency and the Columbus Minority Business Development Center for contributions to the community.

Robert L. Battle of the Directorate of Contracting was officially recognized at the Minority Enterprise Appreciation Week Awards Breakfast Sept. 22.

This is the second time that Battle has received this award. It is given for outstanding support and advice provided to minority businesses to increase the level of participation of minority businesses in government contract awards.

Battle also has the responsibility to support and nurture minority business as part of the installation's small business program.

Through his efforts, Fort Benning has awarded contracts totaling more than $5.5 million to minority businesses through June 30. This equates to 13 percent of the post's total contract awards. The assigned goal from the Training and Doctrine Command i 5 percent.

HISPANIC HERITAGE MONTH

Exec encourages Hispanics to succeed through hard work

By Evelyn D. Harris
American Forces Information Service

Gibson LeBoeuf is the only Hispanic career Senior Executive Service member in the Navy Department. But LeBoeuf, born and raised in Puerto Rico to a Louisiana-born "Cajun" father and a Puerto Rican mother, is working hard to change that.

LeBoeuf, a mechanical engineer with more than 25 years' experience with nuclear submarines and ballistic missile systems, is the Navy Chair at the Defense Systems Management College, Fort Belvoir, Va. He serves as a professor of program management and is the senior liaison between the college and the Navy Department, advising the college on the latest Navy acquisition policies, practices and trends.

In addition, he encourages Hispanics to succeed.

"When I'm asked for advice on achieving success," LeBoeuf said, "I tell people: There is no substitute for hard work. Someone else may be smarter, but no one else should work harder — it's the only factor you can control for yourself.

"Education is also important," he said. "In addition to obtaining academic degrees, you should continue to educate yourself by reading literature written by people from many different backgrounds to enrich your perspective on life."

He most often reads books on management and leadership but enjoys Spanish poetry and Tom Clancy thrillers for relaxation.

LeBoeuf suggests being the first to volunteer for assignments to broaden one's experience. "When they needed someone to go to the Naval Shipyard at Bremerton, Wash., I volunteered," he said. "I knew I would need field experience to give me credibility in a management position back in Washington, D.C.

"I also regularly volunteered for sea trials — which some of the others didn't like because of the long hours and time away from home. But for me, it's still exciting to be in a submarine while it is doing dives and other maneuvers."

LeBoeuf further broadened his experience for a year working for the 102nd Congress as a senior legislative fellow working defense issues on the staff of Wyoming Sen. Malcolm Wallop.

"This gave me an insight into the workings of Congress that are invaluable to me as a member of the Navy's civilian management team," he said. Immediately following his experience on Capitol Hill, he was appointed Navy Chair at the college.

LeBoeuf decided to go to college in the United States, picking the University of Detroit because it had a co-op program. "That meant it took five years to get my degree, but I'm glad I did it," he said. "I learned a lot working for the Ford Motor Co."

LeBoeuf received his bachelor of science degree in mechanical engineering in 1969. As a senior he received so many job offers that he wrote down his key factors for a job on an index card and rated all the offers.

"The private firms would fly us to their headquarters, take us out to dinner and really roll out the red carpet," he said. "Then a recruiter for the Navy Department came to campus and said he couldn't pay our plane fare to Washington, but he urged us to come if we wanted important work. My buddy and I got in his Volkswagon bug and drove to Washington.

"On my card, I put interesting work first, location second and pay third," he said. "All the other jobs beat the Navy by a mile on pay, and some on location. But I decided the Navy offered me a lot of responsibility right from the start and the chance to work with submarines — so that's what I chose. I haven't regretted it."

He began his career with the Naval Sea Systems Command as a project engineer in 1969. He received numerous awards for his work with the Polaris, Poseidon and Trident submarine programs. He earned a graduate certificate in Engineering Management from American University in 1974, and completed the Harvard Advanced Management Program in 1985.

LeBoeuf was appointed to the SES in 1982. He said he became more active in Hispanic organizations in 1990 when Navy Secretary H. Lawrence Garrett III established a council aimed at increasing Hispanic representation in the Navy.

"The secretary of the Navy set a goal of raising Hispanic representation in the department to five percent by 1992. We didn't make that, but we're now up to four percent.

"That's regardless of grade, — we could meet the goal if we hired Hispanics at the GS1 level, but I'd like to see more reaching higher grades. By contrast, the private sector is eight percent Hispanic."

LeBoeuf said Secretary of the Navy, John H. Dalton, is committed to improving Hispanic representation and supports the regular visits LeBoeuf makes to advise component heads on achieving it.

"In order to have more Hispanics in the SES, we have to have more in grades 15, 14 and 13 to form a pipeline," LeBoeuf said. "For example, I'll point out to a component head that of the 4,000 grade 13s in his organization, only 80 of them are Hispanic. I make suggestions for how to improve the ratio, but I don't tell him how to do his job. I prepare a detailed scorecard showing who holds what grades.

"Then I say, 'I'll be back.'

"I tell him that when I come back, if there are still only 80 Hispanics out of 4,000, I'll believe him if he said he couldn't promote any more. But if there are 4,500 grade 13s, and only 80 of them are Hispanic, we'll both know something is wrong.

"The Hispanic Employment Program Managers are mostly in the grade 9-12 range, so they don't have the access to the admirals that someone in the SES would. But if they help recruiters, they can have some impact on the entry-level hires. I tell the HEPMs it is their job to push up and my job to push down. Together, we'll achieve progress."

Domestic violence affects entire family

Abuse is not limited to any social stratum; many women are assaulted or killed at the hands of their male partners

Army Community Service

Domestic violence occurs among all sectors of society. It happens to people of all racial, economic and religious groups.

In this country, a woman is more likely to be assaulted, injured, raped or killed by a male partner than by any other type of assailant. Domestic violence is believed to be the most common yet least reported crime in our nation. An estimated 3 to 4 million American women are beaten each year by their husbands or partners. Domestic violence is indeed a serious national problem that affects not only individual victims but the entire community as well.

October has been declared National Spouse Abuse Prevention Month to increase the community's awareness of domestic violence.

Effect of domestic violence on children

• In homes where domestic violence occurs, children are at high risk of suffering physical abuse themselves. Regardless of whether children are physically abused, the emotional effects of witnessing domestic violence are very similar to the psychological trauma associated with being a victim of child abuse.

• Children in homes where domestic violence occurs are physically abused or seriously neglected at a rate 1,500 percent higher than the national average of cases reported in the general population.

• Children may "indirectly" receive injuries when household items are thrown or weapons are used. Infants may by injured if being held by their mother when the batterer strikes out.

• Children from violent homes have higher risks of alcohol or drug abuse and juvenile delinquency.

Possible signs of a batterer

• A batterer is often extremely jealous and possessive.

• A batterer's anger is frequently disproportionate to the problem that arises.

• The batterer's anger is often displaced and exaggerated, with the objects of violence often small animals and property as well as family members.

• The batterer often describes the alcohol abuse as the cause of the battering.

• The batterer blames the battered woman for the violence and the alcohol and other drug abuse.

• The batterer has ineffectively or not dealt with her or his abuse as a child.

• The batterer has hit or been abusive with a partner in the past.

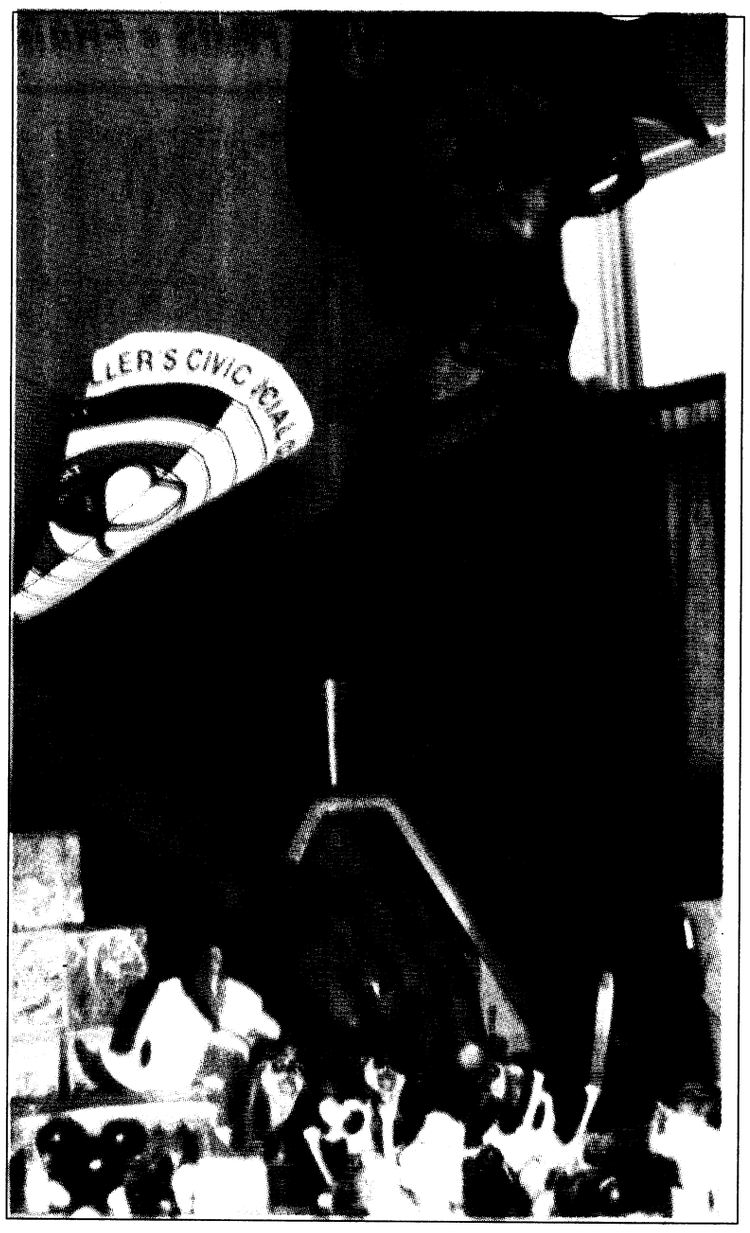
Possible signs of a battered woman

• She is frightened of her partner's temper.

• She is often compliant in order not to excite the batterer.

• She apologizes for her partner's behavior.

• She drinks heavily or uses other drugs to cope with the violent situation.



• She has visible bruises or other temporary or permanent injuries without appropriate explanation.

If you, or someone you know, is involved in a domestic violence situation, call for help. The violence rarely stops without outside intervention.

The Army Community Service Family Advocacy Office will have a display set up in Building 2643 throughout the month with information on ways to prevent domestic violence and to strengthen relationships.

For additional information, call Becky Welch, Family Advocacy Program manager, at 545-6969 or 545-5516. Free sports water bottles will be given out to promote awareness.

Post prepares for Christmas giving

Lisa M. Hibbert

Controllers Civic and Social Club member retired Sgt. 1st Class Potiphar Miles cleans and checks toys at Santa's Castle.

By Lisa M. Hibbert
Bayonet staff writer

Bringing Christmas cheer to soldiers and their families is the mission of Santa's Castle, located in Soldiers' Plaza.

Santa's Castle volunteers restore used toys and solicit as many new toys as possible in time for Christmas so that they may be distributed to needy families.

Santa's Castle is a private organization that operates completely from donations of time and money. It receives no assistance from the Department of the Army, and it relies on the help of volunteers to perform the leg work, said Gabriella Rothbrust, acting chairwoman of Santa's Castle.

The group that was there Sept. 30 was the Controllers Civic and Social Club of Columbus.

The Controllers is an organization that was established in the 1980s to help people in the community who are less fortunate, said retired Command Sgt. Maj. Eddie Roberts, president.

"Fort Benning does a lot for Columbus, and this is our way of giving something back," Roberts said. "We chose Santa's Castle because there are a lot of soldiers on post who don't make a lot of money and can use the help of a place like this.

"Also, we want to issue a challenge to all of the other organizations in the community to come out and volunteer their time also," Roberts said.

Santa's Castle would not be able to function without the help of volunteers, said Rothbrust. There isn't anybody who works there that is in a paid slot. The whole organization is run completely by volunteers, Rothbrust said.

The five main volunteers spend a lot of time doing paperwork such as sending out more than 350 letters to solicit funds. They often work after hours and use their own supplies to accomplish the mission.

Volunteers also assist with soliciting funds and actually going to the stores to buy the toys.

"We get most our money from unit donations, the Enlisted Wives' Club and the Officers' Wives' Club," Rothbrust said.

One problem is that a portion of the money raised goes to assist with child-care payments for the volunteers' children. "If we didn't do that, we would never be able to get any volunteers," Rothbrust said.

While some find it difficult to volunteer even a few hours, Rothbrust said she loves being a volunteer.

"I consider myself a happy person, and I try to share what I have," Rothbrust said. "It's a good feeling to give something and not expect anything in return — only in giving do you receive."

Soldier eligibility is based on income and determined by unit commanders who turn the names over to Santa's Castle, Rothbrust said.

Last year Santa's Castle gave away more than 1,700 toys to more than 1,100 children.

Santa's Castle is open Mondays, Wednesdays, Thursdays from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. as well as the second and fourth Saturday in the month.

Those interested in volunteering may call Rothbrust at 545-1233.

ACS, local agencies observe National Consumers Week with workshops

Army Community Service

The Army Community Service Consumer Affairs and Financial Assistance Program will present five workshops during National Consumers Week, Oct. 22 to 28.

This observance is coordinated annually by the U.S. Office of Consumer Affairs to raise the level of consumer awareness among all Americans.

The theme this year is "Service, it's your right!" This theme supports President Bill Clinton's message that when providing products or services — or remedying consumer products or needs — suppliers, be they business enterprises or government agencies, are obliged to make every effort to ensure they meet the quality and performance levels claimed for them. Consumers are entitled to courtesy, convenience and responsiveness.

The military affairs sub-committee of the Columbus Chamber of Commerce has initiated a tri-community action plan to ensure soldiers are an integral part of the community. Under that plan, the financial institutions on the installation have joined with the Consumer Affairs and Financial Assistance Program of ACS to provide a series of workshops during National Consumers Week.

Oct. 23 from 7 to 9 p.m., TIC Federal Credit Union will conduct a workshop on "Car Buying Secrets"; Oct. 24 from 7 to 9 p.m. Columbus Bank and Trust Company-Synovus will host a workshop on "Ready, Set, Go to Investments". Oct. 25, 7 to 9 p.m., Fort Benning personnel will present a workshop on "Consumer Rights," and Oct. 26 from 7 to 9 p.m. First Union National Bank will conduct a workshop on "Home Buying Strategies." Seminars conclude Oct. 27 with an "All About Insurance" workshop presented by representatives from the Georgia Insurance Commissioner's Office.

Reservations are required for all workshops and are due by Oct. 20. To register, call ACS at 545-7517 or 545-4043 or go by the ACS office, Building 2643 in Soldiers' Plaza.

All workshops will be conducted in the Family Unit Network Building, Building 359.

community briefs

ON POST

Blood drive — The American Red Cross is sponsoring a blood drive today from 9:30 a.m. to 3 p.m. in Building 4, Classroom 4.

The Red Cross needs to collect more than 1,000 units of blood every weekday just to meet the day-to-day needs of hospitals. Because blood has a life span of only about 42 days, the Red Cross can't stockpile supplies.

Dexter fall festival — Dexter Elementary School will have a fall festival Saturday from 1 to 5 p.m. at the school's playground.

A spacewalk, train rides, cotton candy, funnel cakes, face painting, opportunity drawings, Military Police and fire department displays and Binky the Clown are some of the planned attractions.

For more information, call Tammy Wisher at 682-9018 or Dexter at 545-3424.

Military discount — A limited number of 50 percent discount flyers for the musical "Miss Saigon," playing Oct. 22 to 29 at the Atlanta Civic Center, are available at Carlson Wagonlit Travel Office at the Main Mall. Sign ups for bus transportation are available. Stop by Carlson Wagonlit or call 682-0433 for more information.

Support group training — Family support group training for commanders, first sergeants, family support group leaders and volunteers is slated for Thursday from 9 a.m. to noon at the Family Unit Network Center.

This training will cover topics such as organizing and structuring family support groups, fund-raisers, newsletters, authorized support, etc. Training is open to commanders, first sergeants, family support group leaders and volunteers. Call to confirm attendance.

For more information, call the FUN Center at 545-5246.

Club luncheon — The Officers' Wives' Club next luncheon will be Wednesday at the Officers' Club Regimental Room. All women attending are encouraged to wear their favorite blue jeans or denim outfit and to bring an item for the Army Community Service food locker.

Social hour begins at 11 a.m., and lunch begins at 11:30. Cost is $8 for the pasta and salad bar.

Reservations must be made by noon today. To make reservations, call Brooke Gorski at 682-4913 if your last name starts with A-L or Lorie Bohnstedt at 682-8495 if your last name starts with M-Z. Lorie also takes reservations in Spanish.

Haunted house — The 1st Battalion (Airborne), 507th Infantry, 11th Infantry Regiment, invites families to come to a Halloween haunted house Oct. 20, 21 and 30 from 6 to 9 p.m.

It will be located in Building 2409 at Lawson Army Airfield.

Cost of entry is one new toy per family to be donated to Santa's Castle.

For more information, call 545-1312.

Youth tumbling — Youth Services will be taking registration for tumbling classes starting Monday. Classes will begin in November and are open to youth ages 3 to 12 who are family members of active duty and retired military and Department of Defense civilians.

Sign-ups will be taken Monday through Friday from 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. at Youth Services, Building 1056.

For more information, call 545-3070.

Food locker — The Army Community Service is soliciting for organizations and activities to conduct food drives for the emergency food locker. ACS provides food to needy families in the community. As the Thanksgiving and Christmas seasons approach, holiday food baskets and non-perishable items are provided to needy soldiers and families in post units. The Food Locker must be replenished to meet continuing daily and holiday requirements.

For more information call 545-2536, 545-4043 or 545-7517.

Star Gazers club — All Fort Benning students are invited to join the Star Gazers Club, which will meet Oct. 26 from 7:30 to 8:30 p.m. at the playground near the corner of Davis Hill and First Cavalry Division roads.

Adult or parental supervision is required. Dress comfortably, and bring flashlights — red or blue lens preferred — and binoculars or telescopes if available.

There will be free star maps and drawings for prizes.

For more information, call Mike McGowan at 544-2312.

Commissary discounts — In October, the Commissary will be giving shoppers a discount on major manufacturers products, and, based on sales, a contribution will be made to the American Red Cross to support its services to the armed forces.

For more information, call 544-3213 or 545-5194.

OWC welfare requests — The Officers' Wives' Club of Fort Benning is a charitable organization that gives back to its community. Over the years, the OWC has given out scholarships and donations to many private, nonprofit organizations. To receive a donation, requests need to be submitted and approved by the OWC Board of Directors.

This year the majority of welfare funds will be disbursed during the November and April OWC board of Directors' meetings. Requests for November disbursement must ne received no later than Nov. 1, and the April deadline is no later than April 1, 1996.

Should your organization wish to submit a request, include the following information:

- The amount of money requested
- The total amount of money needed
- Specific purpose of money requested
- Fund-raising efforts
- Other organizations from which you are requesting funds
- Number of military affected
- The name and telephone number of your point of contact

Submit requests to the Officers' Wives' Club of Fort Benning, P.O. Box 51978, Fort Benning, Ga. 31905-1978.

For more information, call Steffani Dyer at 685-1364.

Police recruiting — The Atlanta Police Department is recruiting again for additional officers.

Briefings will be Oct. 26 at the Job Assistance Center in Building 2634, located in Soldiers' Plaza. These briefings will be at 9 a.m., 11 a.m. and 1:30 p.m. Applications will be distributed following the briefings.

Personnel will be available to answer questions and assist in completing the application. The hiring process can take six to 12 months.

Call the JAC at 545-2308 or 545-2309 to be scheduled.

Membership cards — Youth Services annual membership cards became available Sept. 18. Membership and registration are required for all children who participate in any YS program or activity or utilize the facilities. The cost per membership will be $20 per year, per family.

For more information, call Lamar Caldwell at 545-3070 or 545-3913.

AER college assistance — Soldiers with college-aged children often wonder how they can afford education costs. Many don't realize that part of the answer may be found from Army Emergency Relief.

AER provides financial assistance through scholarships. To qualify for financial assistance through AER, students must be enrolled, accepted or pending acceptance as a full-time student for the entire academic year in post-secondary educational institutions approved by the U.S. Department of Education.

Scholarships are awarded based on financial need, academic achievement and individual accomplishments.

Applications must be received by March 1 for the upcoming academic year.

For more information, stop by and visit AER, Building 2643, Soldiers' Plaza, 8 a.m. to 5 p.m., Monday through Friday.

OFF POST

Indian cultures festival — The Sixth annual Festival of Southeastern Indian Cultures will be today through Sunday at Columbus College.

This community event, which will feature dance demonstrations, crafts, jewelry, games, customs and food, needs many volunteers.

Trick or treat

Hours, regulations set for Halloween observance

Infantry Branch Safety Office

Halloween "trick or treating" will be in effect from 6 to 8 p.m., Oct. 31. The is the only day trick or treating is permitted.

Activities for trick or treating are limited to children under 13 years old. Preschool children must be accompanied by an older person (14 years or older).

Limit trick or treating only to the housing area in which the participants reside, and approach only residences with lighted entry ways.

Light-colored, fire resistant costumes, short enough to prevent tripping, should be worn by children. Costumes can be marked with reflective tape or "glow" spray paint so they can pick up auto headlights and other lights.

Observe all basic safety precautions. Use sidewalks and crosswalks; don't cut through yards. Look in all directions before walking across the street.

Wear masks or head coverings that do not restrict vision. Use colorful facial makeup as much as possible.

Prevent pets from being a nuisance or a menace to children. Caution children about the wrongs of vandalism and causing damage to the property of others.

Ensure children carry flashlights after dark. If a child carries a pumpkin, it should be lighted with a battery device, not a candle.

Never let your child eat anything until you have inspected the treats. Give your child a full meal before he or she goes trick or treating.

ITB sponsors ACOE landscape screen for McGraw Manor

By Scott A. Tenczar
Infantry Training Brigade

The Infantry Training Brigade has sponsored an Army Community of Excellence-funded landscape screen along Custer Road. When completed, the landscape screen will extend for one mile along the rear of the McGraw Manor housing area providing privacy for residents whose backyards border Custer Road. Work is expected to take 60 days to complete.

ACOE funds became available after Fort Benning was selected as the best military post for 1994. As the parent organization for the McGraw Manor housing area, the Infantry Training Brigade acted in the interests of residents who have long requested a privacy screen along Custer Road. Leading the effort is Lendon "Earl" Antley, the ITB project coordinator.

"This project will provide an attractive, natural privacy screen for the McGraw Manor residents that border Custer Road. The landscape architect has selected fast-growing native plants that will reach maturity in about two years," Antley said

The screen will consist of 126 trees interspersed with 1,033 bushes in a bed of pine straw. All trees used in the project will have a minimum height of six feet at the time of planting.

"We feel this will give the residents a nicer-looking backyard and still provide the privacy they need," Antley said.

The residents of McGraw Manor are encouraged to take an active role in the upkeep of the project. It is hoped that families will "adopt a plant" and ensure that the plants are consistently watered.

Virtual reality comes to post

By Lori Egan
Bayonet staff writer

Fort Benning soldiers are using their infantry skills to help with the development and demonstration of a computerized network of manned simulators by participating in an anti-armor advanced technology demonstration.

The purpose of the simulators is to help the Army test and buy the necessary weapons for the 21st century, said Bill McLaughlin, operations research analyst.

Soldiers from 2nd Battalion, 18th Infantry Regiment, 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division, and the 29th Infantry Regiment, are manning the simulators.

The simulators are a next-generation Bradley Fighting Vehicle, located in Warren, Mich., and line-of-sight antitank and non-line-of-sight antitank missile systems located at Fort Benning's land warrior test bed.

An M-1A2 Abrams tank simulator has already been tested and added to the computer bank and is being computer generated for this testing, McLaughlin said.

The idea behind the simulators is to give the form, fit and function of the vehicles, he said.

The testing takes place on a computer generated, virtual battlefield.

In the testing scenario, the soldiers react to real-world situations; they're able to tell if the target in the distance is a friend or foe, McLaughlin said.

The soldiers' reactions to the environment are incorporated into the results and are the purpose for the test, he said.

"We have high-quality soldiers — thinking soldiers — who have a lot of good ideas," McLaughlin said. "With this networked system, we can capture their reactions to a war-like situation while they are training on these systems.

"With this system we have incorporated the man in the loop who can consciously decide to observe or engage or pass the information back to his commander," McLaughlin said.

The LOSAT is a weapon of the future, which if accepted could be ready by the year 2002, he said.

LOSAT has a high rate of fire and rapid target engagement at short and extended ranges. Its lethality overmatches armor targets, bunkers and helicopters. It is part of the early entry force, is C-130 transportable and designed to improve light force survivability, McLaughlin said.

The NLOS is a modified high-mobility, multi-purpose, wheeled vehicle that has a six- or eight-pack of missiles loaded on it.

The missiles are fiber optically guided and relay actual video images to the gunner in the HMMWV so that he can watch and actually guide the missile to the target, he said.

The missile has the capability to fly approximately 15 kilometers and is designed to destroy armored vehicles that are not in visual range, McLaughlin said.

The only information that the soldiers in the NLOS get is the target is at a certain grid. They can then guide the missile to the target, McLaughlin said.

"It's wild," said Sgt. Kenneth A. Slater, Company B, 2nd Bn, 29th Inf. Regt., a gunner participating in testing the simulator. "It can't be classified as a direct or indirect fire weapon because it ends up as both."

ITB runs together for unity

By Andre Sison
Infantry Training Brigade

From the streets of the Infantry Training Brigade came the roaring sound of cadences as nearly 2,000 cadre members and trainees participated in the ITB War Eagle Run Oct.2.

Led by Brigade Commander Col. Johnny Brooks, soldiers from ITB's headquarters section, Drill Sergeant School and six training battalions conquered the hilly three-mile course circling Sand Hill.

The entire formation, made up of participants wearing commemorative infantry blue T-shirts, stretched more than a mile long.

Although the conditions for the run were hot and humid, many of the soldiers, especially the trainees, seemed to enjoy the camaraderie.

"It was real inspiring to see the whole brigade out there working together," said Pvt.1 Joseph Guthrie, Company D, 1st Battalion, 19th Infantry Regiment.

War Eagle runs are conducted biannually for the purpose of building esprit de corps and, "a chance for everyone to get together," Brooks said.

Fort Benning names 1995's best

A specialist from 988th MP Co. is Soldier of Year

By Shannon Day
Special to The Bayonet ©

Fort Benning has just chosen its 1995 Soldier of the Year. He is Spc. Carey A. Paul, military policeman, 988th Military Police Company. He is the first MP to ever win the title of Post Soldier of the Year.

Paul joined the Army Sept. 18, 1992, after being involved in the Civil Air Patrol and Junior Reserve Officer Training Corps in high school.

"It was the natural thing to do." he said. "It's all I've ever known since I was a kid."

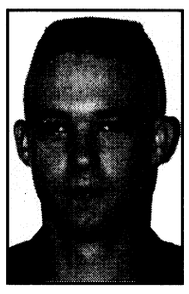
He said his father, Theodore Dennis Paul, who has been a great influence in his life, fought in the Vietnam War. His father always told him it was an honor to serve his country when Paul was growing up.

He began his ascent to Post Soldier of the Year with his company's Soldier of the Month board.

He and his team leader, Ralph Gallegos, 988th MP Co., began to study together.

"We have been winning boards together ever since," Paul said.

Gallegos began to work with him after Paul returned from a deployment to Haiti in January.



"Since then, he has come a long way," Gallegos said. "He's an outstanding soldier. He will make a good leader."

Becoming a leader is exactly what Paul plans to do.

"I plan to make a career of the Army." Paul said. "There are so many things I enjoy about the Army — discipline, respect. I want to get as far and as high as I can."

Paul is still working toward that goal. He is preparing for the MP of the Year board, which will be held at Fort Benning next week.

A PERSONAL LOOK

Name: Spc. Carey A. Paul

Title: Military policeman

Education: Working toward a bachelor's degree in business and general education

Family: Mandy (wife)

Deputy secretary discusses quality of life

By Jim Garamone
American Forces Information Service

The Department of Defense has three priorities over the next few years, and critics who say it cannot do all three don't understand the problem, Deputy Defense Secretary John White said.

White, who succeeded John Deutch in May, said DoD's priorities are quality of life, readiness and modernization. He considers them complementary. He said a good quality of life promotes readiness. Further, he believes modernization also plays to quality of life.

"You cannot have good quality of life for professional people, who take pride in what they do, unless they are ready — that means trained — and unless they are well-equipped — that means modernization," White said.

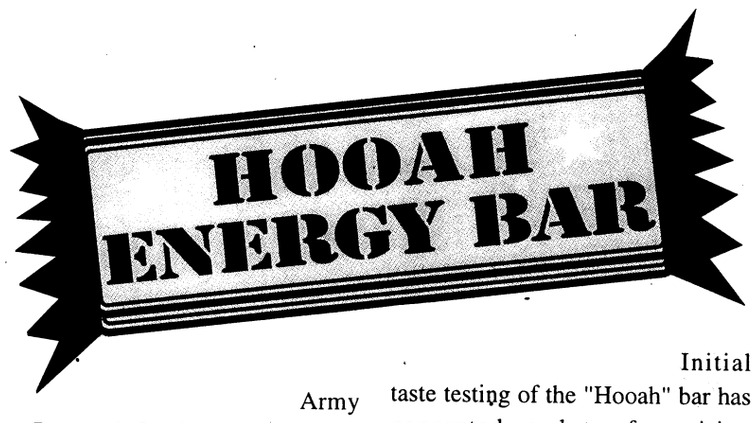
Quality of life issues dominated a recent interview White gave military journalists. He said the military is making progress on the many initiatives Defense Secretary William Perry proposed.

White spoke about the family housing initiative, saying it was moving along in Congress. "We've received excellent support for the housing initiative," he said. It gives DoD the flexibility to bring private sector contractors, expertise and solutions to bear on the military family housing problem.

He said there will be a follow-on proposal to improve housing for single service members. "There is such a follow-on, but I can't tell when it will be ready," he said. "It's a complicated problem because we have barracks and other living quarters for single service people from all over the lot — from high quality to unacceptable. (The problem) varies by service, and I have spoken with the chiefs on solutions."

White has made a commitment to get out of the Pentagon and gather information directly from service members. "We need to continue to hear from service people what it is they want," he said. "It doesn't do (DoD) any good to do programs that we think are good. It only does us good if (the programs) are what service members want and need."

Personnel tempo, or perstempo, is another concern for White. Perstempo refers to the amount of time service members are deployed away from their home stations. "We want to make sure we don't overextend our service people in what they are called upon to do," he said. "As the Army and Air Force is relocated in the states, we must look at it as a part of readiness," he said. "It's complicated because perstempo is different for different units and for different occupations. We're very sensitive to this issue, and we've met with the (regional) commanders in chief and the chiefs on this issue."



White said with the military personnel drawdown nearing the end, he doesn't see a change of emphasis away from quality of life issues. "In a drawdown, you need to pay particular attention to quality of life," he said. "But the issue won't go away. With quality of life you have to stay continually on top, because if you get it wrong, it's very difficult and expensive to get it right again."

Congress has proposed changes to the military retirement system, but White urges caution. "We've just received the proposal and will examine it," he said. "Tampering with military retirement is of great concern and should be done carefully. Anytime I hear someone say 'We've got this new idea that will save money by changing the way we do calculations,' I immediately become concerned that this may be the wrong move."

Another quality of life area White is concerned with is military medical care. "(Medical care) is part (of service members') compensation; it's part of their whole life in terms of their families," he said. "We're trying hard through the TRICARE program to expand the (medical care) choices service people have and the availability and access (of those services).

"The medical system has to evolve over time just as it does in the civilian sector," he said. "TRICARE is our attempt to get out in front and make that happen. It's an area I intend to spend a lot of time with because it's important and it's complicated."

'Hooah' bar packed with Energy

By Jonathan H. Young
U.S. Army Systems Command

NATICK, Mass. — Despite sounds of "Hooah" echoing throughout the Army, many still have not heard of the "Hooah" bar.

Currently under development at the U.S. Army Soldier Systems Command in Natick, Mass., the "Hooah" bar is a nutritious booster snack intended to increase energy and improve performance. Similar to commercially available energy bars, the "Hooah" bar is intended to provide a burst of energy in a nutritious compact bar.

"Experts haven't agreed on the performance enhancing capabilities of commercial bars," said Gerald A. Darsch of SSCOM. With help from the scientists at the U.S. Army Research Institute of Environmental Medicine, SSCOM food scientists did an extensive literature search to find out which food ingredients, in the proper combination, would have a positive impact on soldier performance.

What they came up with helped SSCOM food scientists develop the Hooah bar. The bar is a five-inch by two-inch bar that comes in three flavors: fruit, banana and chocolate. The banana-flavored bar consists of five different sugars along with the addition of plenty of carbohydrates. One bar provides 220 calories and two grams of fat.

Initial taste testing of the "Hooah" bar has generated a lot of positive feedback. It has been likened to a Bit-O-Honey candy and described as chewy and grainy. Some felt that it was fine for field food but wouldn't seek it out in stores.

"Nutritional or not, if soldiers don't like the taste of the 'Hooah' bar and don't eat it, it doesn't do them or us any good," said Darsch. SSCOM nutritionists are still tinkering with the "Hooah" bar, hoping to match function with flavor. When they get it right, someone will surely shout "Hooah!" and express their "can-do" attitude.

498th passes aircraft safety check

By Tracy O. Wyatt
498th Medical Company

Aircraft systems and parts were inspected or tested at the 498th Medical Company (Air Ambulance) during the Forces Command aviation resources management survey Sept. 11.

The survey is a thorough evaluation of all aviation resources in units with Army aircraft or with aviation missions.

The evaluation examined aviation operations; maintenance; petroleum, oil and lubricants; safety; standardization; aviation life support systems; training flying hour program; budget; survivability; and aviation medicine.

The purpose of the survey is to provide the commander and the unit leadership with a thorough assessment of the unit's aviation resources and management systems against the published Army aviation standards. Also, the expertise of the survey team teaches, trains and mentors the soldiers in the unit.

If the survey was not enough, Fort Rucker's Directorate of Evaluation and Standardization was also present. This team came up from the "Home of Army Aviation" to evaluate the unit's aviation standardization program. The team gave numerous no-notice check rides to the instructor pilots, aviators and crew members and ensured that standing operating procedures and documentation were in accordance with Army standards.

All areas were found either satisfactory or commendable in the survey. Out of the 15 areas of evaluation, 13 were satisfactory.

Twelve soldiers were given impact Army Achievement Medals, three received 36th Engineer Group coins and three received 56th Evacuation Battalion coins for their effort.

"(We received support) from our higher head-quarters, the 56th Evacuation Battalion, 36th Engineer Group (C), XVIII Airborne Corps and installation support from the Directorate of Operations and Training and the Directorate of Logistics and all other supporting agencies," said Maj. Tracy O. Wyatt, commander of the 498th Medical Co.

"We can all rest well knowing we're ready for our peacetime support mission and ready to deploy and support soldiers in war," Wyatt said.

Promotable captains eligible for early out

Army News Service

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Army captains who are eligible for promotion to major who currently have, or will have at least 15, but fewer than 20 years of active federal service on or before Aug. 31, 1996, are now eligible to apply for early retirement regardless of specialty.

According to Lt. Col. Mike Molosso, chief of Officer Sustainment Development Branch, office of the deputy chief of staff for personnel at the Pentagon, this category opened Sept. 19, with the release of the fiscal year 95 major promotion board and will remain open until March 1, 1996.

According to a Department of the Army message, the requested retirement date can be no earlier than 90 days from the date of application.

All officers who attain 15 years of active federal service prior to April 1, 1996, must retire no later than April 1, 1996.

Officers who attain 15 years of active federal service between April 1 and 30, 1996, must retire no later than May 1, 1996.

Officers who attain 15 years of active federal service between May 1 and 31, 1996, must retire no later than June 1, 1996. Officers who attain 15 years of active federal service between June 1 and 30, 1996, must retire no later than July 1, 1996. Officers who attain 15 years of active federal service between July 1 and 31, 1996, must retire no later than Aug. 1, 1996. Officers who attain 15 years of active federal service between Aug. 1 and 31, 1996, must retire no later than Sept. 1, 1996.

Only captains with more than 15 years of service who become one-time nonselect as a result of the fiscal year 95 major promotion board are eligible to apply under this category.

Two-time nonselect captains as a result of the fiscal year 95 major promotion board are not eligible to apply for early retirement and will be separated with separation pay (if otherwise eligible).

One-time nonselect captains from the recently released major's list who are qualified and desire early retirement must physically apply to receive it.

While the Army recognizes that accelerated retirement dates may impose hardships on some officers, funding shortfalls in the military personnel, Army, account make this action unavoidable.

SEASON OF SUKKOT

Simchat Torah marks end, beginning of annual reading cycle

By Steve Bounds
Infantry Training Brigade

reflections

Simchat Torah (literally the rejoicing of the Torah) is the Jewish holiday at the end of the season of Sukkot. The holiday is of post biblical origin. It marks the end and the beginning of the annual cycle of reading the Torah.

The word "torah" is sometimes translated as "the Law." Perhaps the word "teaching" would capture the fuller meaning. In a narrow sense, the Torah is the first five books of the Bible written by Moses, which are sometimes referred to as the pentateuch. In a broader sense, Torah may also refer to the rest of Hebrew Scriptures as well as ancient rabbinic writings. The Torah is central to Jewish life, history, folklore and ethics, as well as being a symbol of the Jewish relationship to God.

Each week a portion of the Torah is read in the synagogue. The entire Torah is read throughout each year. On Simchat Torah, the last chapter of the last book of the Torah — Deuteronomy — is read. This is followed by reading the first chapter of the first book — Genesis. The ceremony is known as the "rejoicing of the Torah."

On the eve of Simchat Torah, the celebration in the synagogue begins with a processional. The scrolls of the Torah are removed from the ark and paraded around the synagogue. The congregation chants prayers, sings hymns and shouts praises to God and his Torah. The people reach to touch and kiss the Torah as it passes. The small children follow behind the people carrying the Torah with flags. There is much singing and dancing as this is a joyous occasion.

On the morning of Simchat Torah, the person who reads the last of Deuteronomy is called the "Hatan Torah" or the "Bridegroom of the Torah." The one who reads Genesis is called the "Hatan Bereshit" or the "Bridegroom of the Beginning."

History of 'whipping boy' not one to continue in modern times

By Robert R. Davidson
USAIC Chaplain Office

reflections

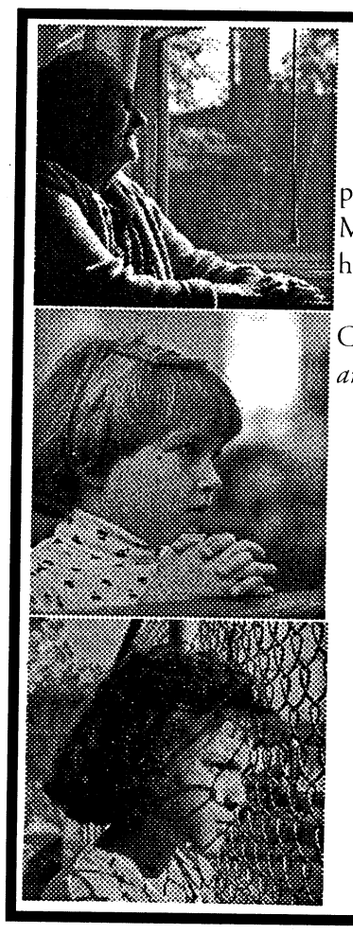
Have you ever heard someone referred to as a "whipping boy" and wondered what the word meant? According to the dictionary, it means "someone who takes the blame for another's mistakes." Originally, though, it had a more sinister meaning.

In the Middle Ages, primarily in England and Europe, the sons of kings and other powerful people were taught at home by tutors.

Lessons were harsh and demanding, as was the discipline. From a very young age these boys learned to read, write and speak not only their own language but Latin and Greek as well. They learned mathematics, astronomy, history, geography and religion. They also learned poetry, dancing, music, riding and hunting and how to behave as gentlemen.

The long school days began with morning prayers while it was still dark, and the lessons lasted until evening. Whippings were administered frequently since the people of that time thought that if a boy couldn't or wouldn't learn, he should be beaten until he did.

By law no one could lay a hand on the son of the king on penalty of his life. How then could he be punished if he misbehaved or refused to learn? The answer: They found someone to stand in his place and take his punishment — a whipping boy! A boy from a poor home would be hired to sit beside the prince during his lessons. If the prince misbehaved, the boy received the punishment. The teachers believed that when the prince saw someone else being whipped for what he had done, he would be sorry and resolve to do better.



It is shocking that parents would allow their child to be used like this, but for them it was the only means they had of seeing their child fed, sheltered and given an education.

Next month is Child Abuse Awareness Month. The shame of our society and culture is that we still have not learned that abuse is abuse.

However, there is hope for our culture. Christians believe that Christ became a "whipping boy" for us by taking the punishment for our sins. The prophet Isaiah said, "He was wounded for our transgressions, he was bruised for our iniquities" (Isa. 53:5). He took the punishment that we deserve in order that we might be treated as he deserves.

Jesus Christ agreed to take our punishment for us — he loves us so much that he died for us and will come and take us to live with him forever. Christ became our hope. Do you have this hope?

"Testaments of Love," by Leon Morris

Do you really know what the Bible means by the word "love?" In this study, Morris moves beyond cultural and personal biases to examine various Hebrew and Greek forms of this word. He concludes that love is the basis for God's dealing with us and shows how we can demonstrate more authentic biblical love within and without the Christian community.

"The Bible Violence and the Sacred," by James G. Williams

Williams examines Rene Girard's revolutionary theory that contends that religions bolster civilization through sanctioned violence against outsiders and scapegoats. Williams traces patterns in Scripture that fit the thesis, but he also shows how the Bible provides vital resources for countering its own "mythology of violence."

God's word brings more reward than riches

By Robert Blessing
2nd Battalion, 69th Armor Regiment

reflections

IBM down from 114 to 89 in one month — no way to finance my Mercedes-Benz if I sell now. Boy, I sure wanted that fuel-injected marvel. What more could you ask for? It would fit in well with that new house with the great view of the river.

Well, I've been working extra hours in the office and taking the boss out for drinks. Maybe I'll get that promotion I've been dreaming of for years and then can get that car and house. That will give the family all the security we need. Then we can begin thinking about a cabin at Panama City and finally enjoy the good life.

"A sower went to sow his seed; and, as he sowed ... some fell among the thorns; and the thorns grew with it and choked it ... Now the parable is this: The seed is the word of God ... As for that which fell among the thorns, they are those who hear; but as they go their way they are choked by the cares and riches and pleasures of life, and their fruit does not mature." (Matthew 13, RSV).

What is the "word of God" that is choked out? The Greek word logos, translated "word," denotes an expression of reality, not just a name for an object. The word of God is the expression of God in our lives. Jesus Christ is the fully revealed word. He is the one who makes clear to us who God is and what God asks of us. This word is the source of all Christian life.

The seed is the word of God being planted in our lives, and our lives are the fields the seed is planted in. The seed germinates and grows and produces fruit.

The cares and riches and pleasures of this life choke or crowd out God's word. Living for these things — just plain living with these things — can crowd out of our lives what the word of God can give us. His word brings forth eternal fruit: love, joy, peace, patience, kindness, goodness, faithfulness, gentleness and self-control.

When we allow ourselves to be taken away by temporary things, they choke out our relationship with God. They become a master for us, and Jesus warns that we cannot serve two masters.

"Seek first God's kingdom and his righteousness, and all these things shall be yours as well." To seek him, we must take time to get to know him through prayer, Bible study and Christian fellowship. We might not get the glory of the world and its approval, but we shall have all we need with peace, his approval and his love..

Pain relief

can be found through spiritual growth in faith

By Harry C. Huey Jr.
2nd Battalion, 58th Infantry Regiment

"Sir, I really enjoyed your service last Sunday. It made me feel a lot better."

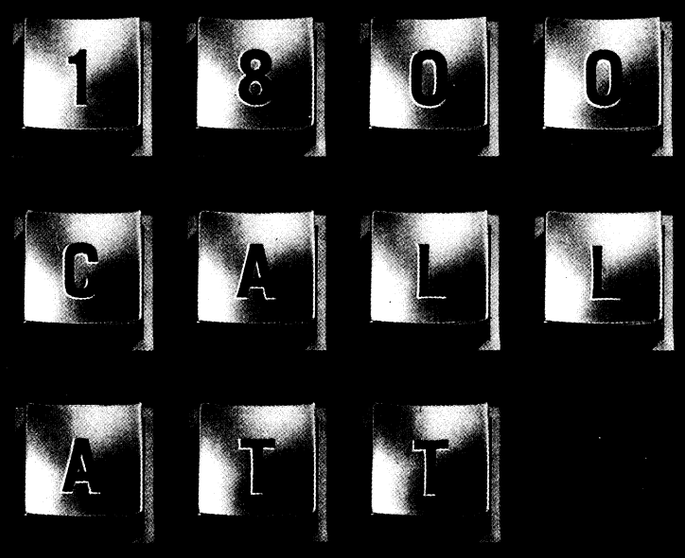
As a chaplain in a basic training unit, I often hear that remark. I wince each time a soldier tells me that. There is great temptation to take such a statement as a compliment.

However, that well-meant remark is much more an indication of a dangerous trend in the United States rather than words of encouragement for a hard-working pastor.

reflections

That dangerous trend is the American demand for immediate relief of pain. In our society, many things are obtained instantaneously. No one likes to hurt, whether that hurt is physical, emotional or mental.

As creatures made in the image of God, we weren't designed to hurt. The desire for relief from pain is a legitimate yearning. That yearning to feel better becomes dangerous when it develops into a demand for immediate relief that overrides all else — including our calling to love God and to love others.



Life is painful. It is difficult. At times, we become convinced we cannot go on. People we love die. Marriages fall apart. Friends let us down. Finances grow thin. We suffer bitter disappointments. Sometimes the hurt seems like it will never stop.

We cry out to God, "Will this ever end?!" We yearn for relief. At this point, we must wrestle with the reality that God's purpose is not to make us feel better. Instead, his purpose is to draw us to himself, to remake us in the image of his son, and to magnify his grace. Suffering is often the forge in which God refines us and accomplishes his purpose.

We come to know God better as we become more dependent upon him. Suffering forces us to acknowledge our helplessness. Pain forces us to rely upon God's grace to live and to sustain us. Through that process we come to know God more intimately. Through that process, we are broken and reshaped in the image of Christ, the suffering servant. Through that process, God's grace is magnified.

This is a scary proposition, but let us not seek to avoid pain and suffering. We should not go out looking for it, but when it does come, let us not avoid it. Instead, let us embrace suffering as a unique way for God to accomplish his purpose in our lives.

Top flight airman to retire

By Shannon Day
Special to The Bayonet ©

After more than 30 years of service to his country, Air Force Col. Henry "Chick" Eagle III, senior Air Force representative to the Infantry Center, will retire Dec. 1.

"This retirement symbolizes the end of a very significant part of my life — all the way from my college days until now," Eagle said.

He was commissioned as a second lieutenant in the Air Force through the Reserve Officer Training Corps June 6, 1965. He was awarded his wings in December 1966 after attending Undergraduate Pilot Training at Craig Air Force Base, in Selma, Ala.

He said the reason he joined the Air Force was because he wanted to fly aircraft, like his father, who flew in the Army Air Corps during World War II.

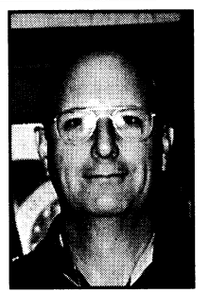
"There is nothing like the freedom and power of being up above everything," Eagle said. "All pilots love the thrill of flying."

While in training in Alabama, he met and married his wife, Shelby, a native of Heflin, Ala.

During his career, Eagle flew numerous types of aircraft, but his favorite has always been the F-106, which is a single-seat and single-engine Mach 2 Fighter Interceptor.

"I flew the F-106 in the early '70s," he said. "Out of everything I have flown, I always felt it fit my personality best."

He flew fighter aircraft in the Vietnam War, Korea, Panama and numerous stateside locations. He is a command pilot with more than 3,700 hours of flying time.



His awards include the Distinguished Flying Cross with three oak leaf clusters, Defense Meritorious Service Medal, USAF Meritorious Service Medal with three oak leaf clusters, Air Medal with 12 oak leaf clusters, Joint Service Commendation Medal and the USAF Commendation Medal with two oak leaf clusters.

"I have thoroughly enjoyed my career in the Air Force," he said. "While assigned to Fort Benning, my goal has been to improve the quality of Air Force support for the Infantry soldier. I am honored and feel fortunate that my career comes to a close at Fort Benning."

Although Eagle is retiring, he plans to stay in Columbus with his family and be an active participant in the military community. He said he is also looking forward to participating in civic activities, while looking for a rewarding follow-on career.

"My first priority is to get my family squared away in Columbus, conduct a job search and play a little golf." he said. "I'm not looking to rush into any second career. When I do choose one, I want it to be something I can do the rest of my life and not for just a few years."

Shooters test tactical skills

By Brian R. Voller
Bayonet staff writer

Tactical training and the return of the stress-fire match came together Saturday when the Fort Benning Rifle and Pistol club conducted a tactical pistol match at English Range.

The top three finishers in the men's division of the competition were; Jay Christy in first place with a score of 144, a time of 34.45 and a hit factor of 4.180. James Odom was in second place with a score of 144, a time of 37.72 and a hit factor of 3.818; and Patrick O'Hara took the third place spot with a score of 159, a time of 47.60 and a hit factor of 3.340.

The top three finishers in the female category were: Alexandra Smith in the first place spot with a score of 124, a time of 81.04 and a hit factor of 1.530; Ethel Russel in second with a score of 98, a time of 86.99 and a hit factor of 1.127; and Marilyn Stull in third with a score of 83, a time of 136.56 and a hit factor of .608.

The second running of the stress-fire competition was also conducted during the tactical match, and the top three finishers in the stress-fire match were: Robert Arserio finished first with a hit factor of .939. Karl Mueller finished in the second place spot with a hit factor of .764. Steven Kersten finished in the final spot with a hit factor of .609.

The tactical firing portion of the competition consisted of three separate firing positions. The first firing position consisted of firing from the standing position and firing from the kneeling position.

The second firing position was called strong hand, weak hand. The competitors had to fire six shots at steel targets with their strong hand; then they had to switch hands and fire six shots with their weak hand.

"This part of the match really tests your skills with firing a weapon," said Jim Graham, manager of the pistol club. "It doesn't matter which targets you engage first; but it is very difficult to shoot with one hand. Then when you have to shoot with your weak hand, it becomes very stressful."

The final firing point consisted of the firers engaging targets through a mock window frame.

"At this station, you are going to be limited on how you can engage the targets," Graham said. "It doesn't matter if you stand or sit or kneel, your arms have to be through the window, which forces you to adjust to engage the targets."

The stress-fire competition, which was conducted after the tactical match, combined a group of elements that were designed to test the competitors' skills.

The stress-fire match included several firing positions designed to increase the difficulty level and lower the shooter's scores.

The first portion of the stress-fire match had the shooter running with a medical bag that weighed 40 pounds. After dropping the medical bag, the shooters had to run a short obstacle course while they were being engaged by Lenny Jones, the paint ball gunner.

After completing the obstacle course, the shooters had to load a 9mm pistol and engage paper and steel targets in front of them. From there, the shooters moved on to the identification section of the match where they had to match an index card with a picture on it to the proper targets in front of them. After engaging the targets, the shooters had to hit eight steel targets. For every target the shooter missed, Jones had the same number of shots to attempt to hit the competitor while they moved to the final foxhole.

In the final fox hole, the shooters had to choose the correct size of round to load into a magazine for a modified AK-47 rifle. After loading the rifle the shooters had to engage the steel targets in front of them.

"This competition is different from most tactical matches because it is a more action-oriented type of competition," Graham said. "This type of thing is physically tough. You have to concentrate on what you're doing."

Drug tests improve '98 Olympic games

By Brian R. Voller
Bayonet staff writer

This past weekend the Olympic Committee studied measures to implement an unannounced drug testing policy. The big reason for the move to have this unannounced drug testing is the recent rash of positive drug tests from the Chinese women's swim team.

According to an article in USA Today, since 1990, 19 Chinese swimmers have tested positive for illegal drug use. Two of those swimmers, Yang Aihua and Lu Bin, had won world titles the month before their failed tests.

A lot of people in the Olympics are complaining about the unannounced drug testing; but, as far as I'm concerned, it's the only way to go. Drug use in the Olympics, or in any sporting event, is the wrong answer. There is no place for it in the sporting world.

My clearest recollection about drugs interfering with a sporting event goes back to when Ben Johnson of the Canadian track and field team tested positive for steroid use. Has anyone heard anything from Ben Johnson lately? Nope. He was blackballed out of the sporting world, and that's exactly where he belongs.

Another classic case of a steroid junkie who made big press was the colorful linebacker for the Seattle Seahawks — Brian Bosworth. The "Boz" started an epidemic of kids shaving funky designs into their heads and wearing crazy sunglasses. That was until the genius hurt his shoulder and then tested positive for steroids. As in the case of Johnson, Bosworth ended up only with memories of a very short-lived movie career.

This brings me to the point of this article. Mandatory drug testing has been a part of the sporting world for many years, but the big problem is that for every one drug test there are a hundred ways for people to get around them. These tests are made even less productive when the athletes and the coaches get up to 48 hours' notice before the test. Forty-eight hours is just enough time to hire some guy off the street to do his duty in the bathroom stall for a major athlete.

Also, while the rock heads who are dumb enough to take steroids don't have a whole lot of brain power, they do have enough money to pay off a lot of people. I have a strange feeling that the people who conduct drug testing are not always on the up and up. Their hands have been greased so much, Jiffy Lube hires them to do oil changes.

This new testing eliminates many of the problems that come with the two-day notice system. The athletes, coaches and testers don't know who's going to be tested or when the testing is going to be conducted. This forces the athletes to stay clean or take their chances with being disqualified. If they're going to be drug slugs, they're going to have to pay the consequences.

It basically boils down to the fact that steroid use is cheating, plain and simple. And according to the rule book of every sport ever made in the history of sports — cheating is bad!

Racquetball players go head to head in tournament

By Brian R. Voller
Bayonet staff writer

The Fort Benning Sports Office conducted a double elimination racquetball tournament Sept. 30 and Oct. 1 at The Audie Murphy Fitness Center.

There were two main divisions for the men, "open" and "B" groups, and there was an "open" division for women. This was also the first time the tournament conducted a "mixed doubles" division along with the two standard groups.

The winners of the men's "open" division were:

Champion: Phillip Penberton
Second place: Fale Fatu
Third place: Christopher Winterman

"I started off kind of slow, which was really frustrating," Winterman said. "But as the tournament went on, I felt my game improved. I'm pretty happy with the way I played."

"I started off kind of slow, which was really frustrating. But as the game went on, I felt my game improved."

— Christopher Winterman
Third place finisher

Winterman also said the tournament participation was much better this year than last year.

The winners of the men's "B" division were:

Champion: William Randall
Second place: Stanley Davis
Third place: Ben Marino

The winners of the Women's "open" division were:

Champion: Nancey Hadley
Second place: Teresa Goodman
Third place: Faafentai Fatu

The winners of the Mixed Doubles were:

Champion: Nancy Hadley and Fale Fatu
Second place: Faafentai Fatu and Ben Marino

The tournament was conducted in a double-elimination format.

The Men's open division, which was for the higher caliber players, had five competitors participating; the Men's "B" division, which was for novice players, had 15 competitors, the Women's "Open" Division had six competitors; and the mixed doubles competition had a total of four teams competing.

"I thought it was a good tournament as far as the competition was concerned," Winterman said. "Most of the people competed in the "B" division, not in the open class; but they all came out there to win."

Army rugby team sweeps tourney

USAIC Public Affairs Office

The Army rugby team showed no mercy by sweeping the Interservice Rugby Tournament conducted at the Pensacola Naval Air Station Sept. 7 through 9.

The Army rugby team went undefeated through five matches to take the tournament for the second time beating the Marine Corps team 49-0.

Three rugby players from Fort Benning were selected for the Army team. William Gilmore, John Murphy and Kevin Hyneman were selected to compete with the team.

"We had a real good side this year," Hyneman said. "A lot of Army units supported rugby this year. We had quite a bit of talent show up. We had depth at every position, which allowed us to have fresh legs every match."

Results from the tournament were as follows:

Conventional antifreeze a danger to pets

Veterinary Services

Properly used and installed, antifreeze presents little problem for pets. But if carelessly installed, improperly disposed of or leaking from cars or truck, conventional antifreeze can be dangerous to pets.

Antifreeze causes thousands of needless pet deaths in the United State annually. Animals seem to be attracted to antifreeze because of its taste. As little as two ounces can kill a dog, and only one teaspoon is enough to poison a cat. The toxic ingredient that makes conventional antifreeze a dancer to pets is ethylene glycol. Antifreeze can be hazards to children too.

The toxic reaction is fast-acting. If the owners suspect the pet to have ingested ethylene glycol, they should contact a veterinarian immediately. Signs of ethylene glycol poisoning in pets include excessive thirst and urination, lack of coordination, weakness, nausea, tremors, vomiting, rapid breathing an heart ate, convulsions, crystals in urine, diarrhea and paralysis. The pet would be unable to urinate in the final stage of ethylene glycol poisoning.

Veterinary treatment would involve inducing vomiting, feeding the pet activated charcoal to absorb or neutralize the ethylene glycol and intravenous fluid therapy. Pets rarely survive poisoning because the owners may not recognize that pets are seriously ill until it is too late.

Prevention, therefore, is the best antidote:

• Keep pets indoors while changing cars' antifreeze; wipe up and wash away any spills.

• Keep antifreeze in original containers, sealed and labeled "new or "used".

• Check with local environmental authorities for proper disposal methods or recycling centers.

• Walk dogs on leashes, and supervise them closely when they are outdoors.

• Try to use the new antifreezes formulated with propylene glycol, which are safer for pets, children and wildlife in the environment.

• If a pet is suspected of having ingested ethylene glycol, rush the animal to a veterinarian. Do not wait for signs of toxicity to appear.

• Keep the telephone number or a local veterinary hospital near the phone in case of emergencies.

Kittens: Curiosity can harm felines unless owners take care

Veterinary Services

Kittens are lively and curious, which can lead them into serious trouble unless the owner takes preventive measures. A kitten has a lower vantage point than humans and may be attracted to things the owner does not see while standing.

It's almost impossible to completely kitten proof a home, but for the kitten's safety, here are some suggestions.:

• Securely screen all windows to help prevent falls and keep kittens off balconies, upper porches and high decks.

• Securely store cleaning supplies, bleach, paint, pesticides, medications and antifreeze.

• Remove poisonous plants or hang out of kittens reach. Some plants poisonous to cats include amaryllis, azalea, holly, mistletoe, morning glory, oleander, poinsettia, rubber plant and weeping fig.

• Keep toilet lids down. Kittens may play in the water, and the lid could close and trap them; also, toilet bowl cleaners are harmful if swallowed.

• Never give your kitten any medication without first consulting a veterinarian. Among the drugs dangerous to kittens are aspirin, acetaminophen, diet pills and tranquilizers.

• Keep sewing supplies out of kittens reach. Buttons, needles, pins and threads can hurt its mouth or internal organs if swallowed.

Q. I have been offered the opportunity to participate in a sales organization that offers exciting possibilities of extra income for our family. The plan involves selling household and cosmetic products to friends and neighbors and bringing in others to join the sales group as well. The business sounds good. What do you say?

A. The plan you describe sounds like what is known as a "pyramid scheme." There are legal and illegal pyramid schemes, but they all work something like this: A person is solicited to sign up as a sales agent for a company. That person is expected to sign up new recruits to sell and recruit others, and each person shares commissions from sales with each higher level of the sales group. It is called a pyramid because the person at the top collects from the second level and below. The second level persons collect from the third level and so forth.

Anecdotes about the big money made by those at the top of the group or pyramid help recruit others at meetings featuring tales of big money. The recruit is invited to the meeting, usually paid for by all the members of the organization who have brought someone.

The bigger the pyramid gets, those at the bottom are usually doomed to disappointment. Instead of big money, they lose fees paid for kits, sales materials or products and end up with products they cannot sell.

As earlier noted, when a plan involves the actual selling of a bona fide product or service, it is not an illegal pyramid scheme. Even if legal, the operation is not for everyone.

The major financial rewards in most cases are not based upon actual sales of product but upon the commissions they can make on sales of all the agents they recruit. All recruited agents are offered the same promise. Not all will be rewarded equally.

There is another danger for military personnel. The Department of Defense Ethics Regulation, DoD 5500.7-R, prohibits certain conduct common in pyramid sales operations. Chapter 2-2 provides that."A DoD employee shall not knowingly solicit or make solicited sales to DoD personnel who are junior in rank, grade or position, or to the family members of such personnel, on or off duty..."

Military personnel who violate this regulation by selling or soliciting junior personnel or their families can be disciplined administratively or judicially. Efficiency reports, bars to reenlistment or courts-martial are clear possibilities.

Illegal pyramid operations have been the source of complaints to state regulators.

Before deciding to invest in a pyramid-type operation, think about the amount of the investment, the amount you can afford to lose, and try to talk with others who may have tried the plan. Also, consider the solicitation limits for military personnel. You may make an appointment to discuss the matter with a Legal Assistance attorney. The Legal Assistance Office number is (706) 545-3282.

"We've got something to smile about."

We're all smiles at NovaCare. Although working for an industry leader is definitely something to sing about...watching your patient improve can really make your heart fill with joy. Just ask Michael.

"As a therapist, there are certain things I expect to get back from the job. Things like gratification. A sense of achievement. Seeing a patient smile with their eyes. Luckily, I get all of this and more with Novacare. I've worked in other environments, but never seen a group of people who are collectively more dedicated than the professionals at NovaCare. You may wonder why smiles are so important to me. The answer is simple. It's the reason I became a therapist in the first place."

You'll smile about our compensation package, too. At Novacare, we realize that as a therapist, you have a lot of choices. That's why we strive to become the right choice for you. We'll make it worth your while with generous vacation allowances, solidly competitive salaries, and medical benefits that begin when you do.

Campaign calls for commitment to being DRUG FREE

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet©

During the 1995 Red Ribbon Campaign, Monday through Oct. 31, post residents can demonstrate their commitments to a drug-free lifestyle by wearing a red ribbon.

The Columbus-Phenix City and Fort Benning campaign will kick off Monday with a ribbon-tying ceremony at the grand staircase of the Columbus Riverwalk at 9 a.m.

The ceremony will include keynote speaker Jim Wetherington, Columbus chief of police; remarks by Col. Ronnie Alton, Fort Benning's director of Public Safety; and a symbolic joining of Columbus and Phenix City with a red ribbon across the Chattahoochee River to symbolize the combined community effort.

The Red Ribbon Campaign is an annual, week-long, national educational campaign that emphasizes the importance of eliminating illegal drugs from schools, workplaces and communities.

At Fort Benning, Community Life offices and schools will be stepping up their effort to distribute educational materials during the campaign.

"The focus is really on the youth," said Al Curry, Alcohol and Drug Abuse Prevention and Control Program education coordinator.

"In the local area there has been an upsurge in inhalant abuse and in the abuse of marijuana by children and teenagers," he continued. "It is important now more than ever that we educate our youth about the reality of drugs and alcohol."

Curry said any post organizations or individuals desiring information, educational materials or red ribbons can call 545-4993.

Don't be fooled into thinking that drugs can't affect military families and personnel, Curry said.

"The problem is not restricted to the civilian community," Curry said. "We may be isolated from the civilian community, but we are not isolated from the drug problem."

"The drug problem knows no bounds," said Sgt. Darryel Johnson, primary instructor. "It's a global problem."

Curry encouraged post parents to help make their communities drug free by educating themselves and their children about drug abuse.

"The education of our youth is key to making communities drug free," he said.

'Bee'-gazing

Stephan T. Payton, a fourth-grade student at Edward A. White Elementary School, examines bees in a bee hive with a magnifying glass. The bee hive is a living teaching aid in the school's Learning Media Center. The hive was set up by Owen T. Ditchfield, media specialist at the school. Ditchfield keeps the bees as a hobby and has set up a hive in each place he has taught for the last 18 years. Ditchfield said he believes children learn best from hands-on experience. The flu is coming, the flu is coming!

Martin Army Community Hospital

The 1995-96 flu season is approaching fast, and flu shots will soon be available at Martin Army Community Hospital's Immunization Clinic as well as at all family practice and troop medical clinics.

According to Maj. Joann Hollandsworth, chief, Community Health Nursing, influenza or "the flu" produces fever, sore throat and a cough that can last for four to five days. It is caused by a group of viruses that are closely related, she said.

"The flu season begins as early as October and lasts through March," she said. "Because it has caused many epidemics in the United States in this century, it is important for people to get shots. It continues to be a very common reason for clinic and emergency room visits during the fall and winter."

The flu vaccine is effective and protects against three different types of influenza viruses but must be given each year in order to ensure protection, she said. An annual vaccination is important because the viruses that cause the flu change from year to year, she said.

The vaccine is required for all active duty personnel.

Pregnant women may receive the vaccine in certain situations, but they should discuss this with their physician first.

Others who should receive the vaccine are:

•Adults age 65 and over.

•Adults and children with chronic medical problems such as diabetes, respiratory and heart diseases.

Preparation, planning key to weathering storm

By Lisa M. Hibbert
Bayonet staff writer

The post has established a siren system to notify people about inclement weather

Hurricane Opal struck Fort Benning last week, and a lot of people were caught unprepared. Proper planning for your home, knowing where to get news and how the post siren system works can assist in making a scary situation not so scary.

When preparing your home, certain items should be kept on hand in case a storm approaches suddenly said Booker T. Henry, plans specialist, Directorate of Threat and Safety.

According to U.S. Army Infantry Center Pamphlet No. 500-1, which addresses emergency procedures, the suggested items are: blankets and pillows; flashlights and extra batteries; a small bar of soap; a first aid kit; a manual can opener; paperback books and magazines; cosmetics; a roll of toilet paper; prescription medication; a transistor radio; change of clothing (seasonal); sanitary napkins; towel and washcloth; paper cups; playing cards, checkers or dominoes; disposable diapers, bottles, nipples and an adequate supply of formula.

In the event of a tornado warning, residents should immediately return to their quarters and stay off the streets, as serious injuries often occur as a result of glass, signs and other debris falling.

For home preparation, the pamphlet suggests securely fastening awnings, doors and shutters. Secure loose items that could be blown loose and cause damage. Have temporary lighting methods available in case of power failure.

Telephones should be kept free so that they may be used in the event of an emergency.

When the storm strikes and you are in your home, the basement is the safest place to be, Henry said. "If you do not have one, remain on the ground floor and avoid sitting or standing in line with any windows. Also, since storms tend to come from the southwest, if you have a hallway in your home, stay in the northeast section of it," he said.

"Get underneath heavy furniture so that nothing can hit you (in case debris begins to fall)," Henry said.

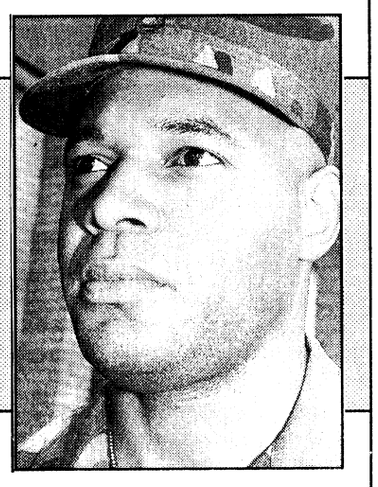
When power fails, news can be obtained from radios as to the current weather conditions. Heed radio and television warnings if power is still on.

The post has established its own system of letting people know what is going on through the use of sirens and codes. There is a siren in each of the housing areas on post; and, in the event of an actual emergency, an alarm will sound to alert the post of weather warnings. The codes represent the type of situation that is pending.

A code black is a weather warning and means that tornadoes or steady winds in excess of 63 mph or sustained gusts of 69 mph are forecast to occur within an hour. The siren will sound steady for five minutes.

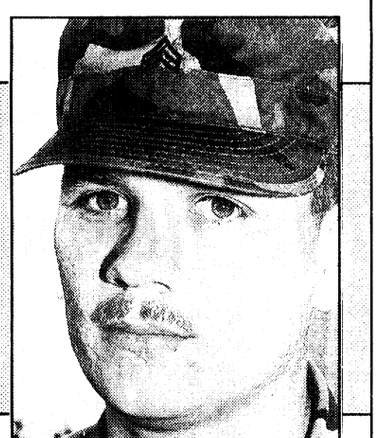
A code green means that a storm accompanied by winds in excess of 51 mph is forecast to occur within an hour. No siren will sound.

The all-clear code means that severe danger has passed. A series of three, steady two-minute sounds interrupted by two silent periods of one minute each will be heard.



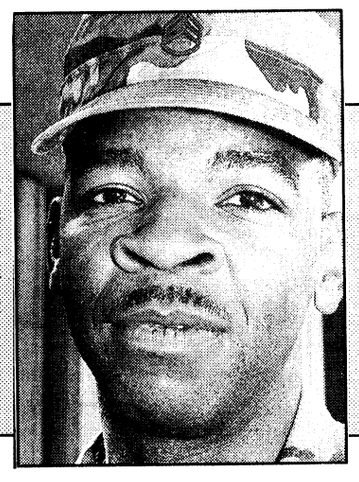
VARIOUS VOICES

What do you think is the most ridiculous Army acronym?



Spc. Jorene R. Wolf-Ha, Company B, 324th Forward Support Battalion, 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division (Mechanized) — "There are thousands of them, and none of them make sense. The Army uses acronyms for everything, but I never remember what they are, like BASD and DEROS. What do they mean?"

Sgt. 1st Class Tony A. Foster, Company A, 4th Battalion, 41st Field Artillery, 3rd Bde., 24th Inf. Div. (Mech.) — "Most of them are generally pretty good, for what I know. ASAP (as soon as possible) is good and SOP (standard operating procedures) is understandable."



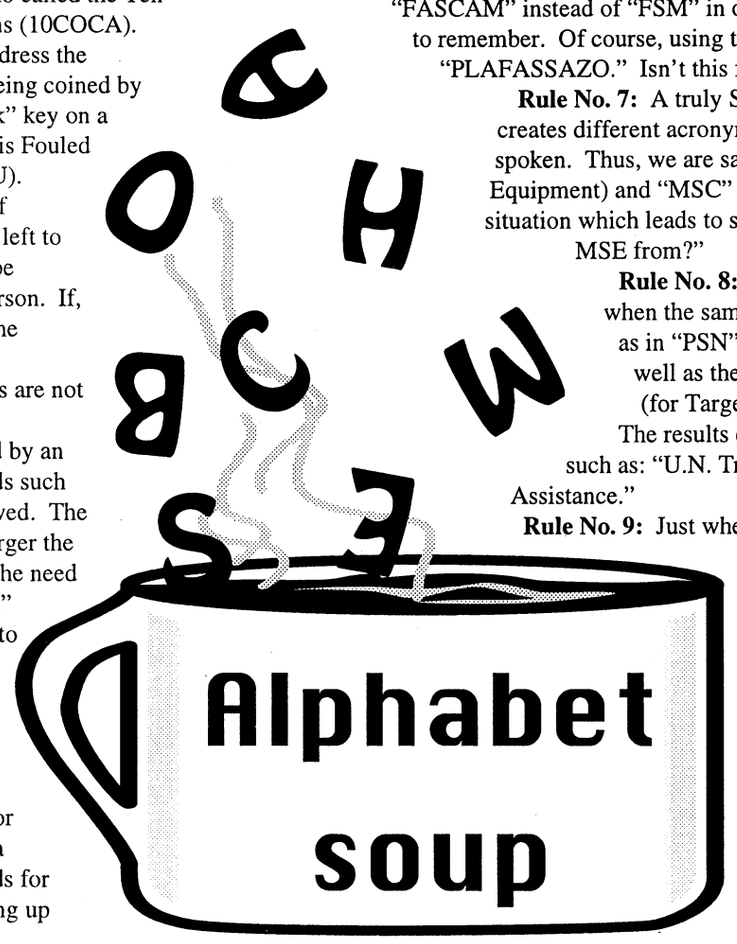
Sgt. Wesley W. Negus, Company C, 1st Battalion, 18th Infantry Regiment, 3rd Bde., 24th Inf. Div. (Mech.) — "The only one I don't understand very well is ADAPCP (Alcohol and Drug Abuse Prevention and Control Program.)"

Sgt. James J. Parks, Company C, 1st Bn, 18th Inf. Regt., 3rd Bde., 24th Inf. Div. (Mech.) — "I guess it would be hooah, because it can mean anything and nothing at all, all at the same time."

Capt. William L. Stone, Company B, 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment — "There are millions of them; FSB (Forward Support Battalion) because they aren't forward and they don't support."

Staff Sgt. Maurice D. Kearney, Headquarters and Headquarters Battery, 4th Bn., 41st FA, 3rd Bde., 24th Inf. Div. (Mech.) — "Hooah — it can mean anything, it can get you out of trouble, but it also shows motivation."

Interviews and photos by Spc. Lori Egan. To suggest future topics or questions for Various Voices or to volunteer your opinion on upcoming questions, call 545-2201.



10 commandments on how to create acronyms (10COHTCA)

By C. Michael Segaloff
Test and Experimentation Command

commentary

FORT SILL, Okla. — Because of the recent proliferation of amateurs in the growing field of Acronym Creation Activities (ACA), the recently formed Defense Acronym Watchdog Group (DAWG) has issued a manifesto called the Ten Commandments of Creating Acronyms (10COCA).

The communique is designed to address the problems associated with acronyms being coined by any ninny who can find the "caps-lock" key on a keyboard, resulting in a situation that is Fouled Up Even More Than Usual (FUEMTU). DAWG maintains that the Creation Of Military Acronyms (COMA) is better left to professionals and should never, ever be attempted at home by an untrained person. If, however, an emergency need arises, the following rules should be observed:

Rule No. 1: Single letter acronyms are not allowed.

Rule No. 2: No words represented by an acronym may be monosyllabic. Words such as "big" or "gun" are simply not allowed. The reason for this of course, is that the larger the replaced words, the more reasonable the need for the acronym seems. Thus, "MOS," while hardly a space-saver compared to "job," seems positively utilitarian compared to "Military Occupational Specialty."

Rule No. 3: The acronym must contain at least one totally made-up word, such as "non-interoperability" or "digitizationing." DAWG publishes a dictionary of 80,000 nonexistent words for those who experience problems making up their own.

Rule No. 4: Throw in a number whenever you can. For example, "C3I" (for Command Control Communications & Intelligence) quickly became one of the most popular acronyms ever coined because it saved millions of keystrokes by eliminating those other two "Cs." Whenever possible, use Roman numerals, which add class at little or no additional cost. Create ambiguity by making normal capital letters look like Roman numerals, such as in "ASCII" (American Standard Code for Information Exchange) and "HIV" (Human Immunodeficiency Virus). Conversely, you can also make numbers look like letters, as in "CLII" (Class II).

Rule No. 5: When a resulting acronym turns out to be a dirty word or is otherwise socially unacceptable, play with the letters until you get something that will pass in polite company. Thus, the artillery acronym for Ammunition Storage Site becomes "AMSS."

Rule No. 6: Always try to include an Acronym Within An Acronym (AWAA). One example that comes to mind is "PFSZ," for Planned FASCAM Safety Zone. FASCAM, for the uninitiated, stands for "FAmily of SCAtterable Mines." (Imagine the Field Artillery's surprise at learning that "FA" stood for "FAmily.") The acronym was coined "FASCAM" instead of "FSM" in order to phoneticize it, making it easier to remember. Of course, using the same technique on "PFSZ" gives us "PLAFASSAZO." Isn't this fun?

Rule No. 7: A truly Sadistic Acronym Professional (SAP) creates different acronyms that sound exactly alike when spoken. Thus, we are saddled with "MSE" (Mobile Subscriber Equipment) and "MSC" (Major Subordinate Command), a situation which leads to such questions as "Which MSC is your MSE from?"

Rule No. 8: Additional confusion may be reaped when the same acronym is used for different words, as in "PSN" (for Packet Switching Network as well as the abbreviation for "Position") and "TA" (for Target Acquisition and Tuition Assistance). The results could conceivably lead to headlines such as: "U.N. Troops Target Serbs With Tuition Assistance."

Rule No. 9: Just when folks start thinking they may have a handle on your acronyms, toss in a few foreign ones, like "ATLAS" (Automatisation des Tirs et des Liaisons de l'Artillerie Sol). Finding out that the explanation is even more cryptic than the acronym itself will teach any nosy busybodies to ask questions.

Rule No. 10: Your acronym should be clever, witty or punny and have a sense of historical perspective to it. For example, in 1941, the office of the Naval Commander in Chief, U.S. Fleet at Pearl Harbor, had a sign out front with this acronym proudly displayed: "CINC U.S. FLEET." It is unknown whether the Japanese ever had the chance to see the sign before doing so.

The Defense Acronym Watchdog Group (DAWG) emphasizes the inherent dangers that go with the "willy-nilly" creation of acronyms without proper safeguards and equipment. According to the group's monthly publication, the Acronymical Bulletin of New Or Rehabilitated Mnemonics (ABNORM), a potentially unsafe acronym is created every 30 seconds somewhere in the United States (US).

For more information, contact your Military Acronym Screening, Selection & Establishment Unit Representative (MASSEUR).

Editor's note: Segaloff is assigned as a Research Test and Evaluation NCO (RTENCO) at TEXCOM (Test and Experimentation Command), Fire Support Test Directorate, (FSTD), Fort Sill (FS).

How to get your news in The Bayonet

Editor's note: Many people call us with questions about how to get their information in the paper or with erroneous information about deadlines, so we have compiled the following for your information.

Our mission

The Bayonet is here to serve you — our audience. Our mission is to provide timely, accurate and truthful information that supports Army goals and directives.

As Fort Benning's authorized newspaper, we are dedicated to giving you the most complete coverage possible. In order to do this, we rely on members of our audience to keep us informed about their units' or directorates' activities.

Requesting coverage of news events

The staff of The Bayonet enjoys covering newsworthy events on post that are timely and pertinent to our readers. Some events we cover include brigade-level changes of command, changes in post policies or procedures and other postwide events.

We don't have enough personnel to cover everything on post, so we focus on the events that affect most of the post.

Also, because of our limited number of personnel, we prefer that coverage requests be submitted at least two weeks in advance.

Deadlines

Film, photos, stories, letters to the editor and other news items intended for The Bayonet must arrive in our office no later than noon Friday prior to the next week's publication.

Also, you may leave stories, film or photos for publication in The Bayonet's drop box located in the Information Office, Room 111, Infantry Hall, Building 4. The deadline for items left in the drop box is noon Friday, also.

Copy must be typed and doubled-spaced, except for letters to the editor which may be handwritten. Everything else must be typed. It is easier for us to edit, easier for our typesetter and results in fewer errors.

Use civilian dates and times and include the first and last names of all individuals mentioned in the story, and spell out all acronyms on first reference.

You may fax briefs or announcements only. We do need the original typewritten copy of stories.

Program's staff thanks family for donation

In memory of their son Joshua, Lt. Col. Gary and Chong Ok Gumm graciously acknowledged (the post's) Early Intervention Service Office by donating a pediatric wheelchair and other miscellaneous items.

These generous gifts were given to further the development and well-being of other special needs children enrolled in the Early Intervention program.

It is with deepest sympathy and regret that we say good-bye to the Gumm family, who has moved to the Washington, D.C., area.

Joshua will always be dear to our hearts and forever in our thoughts and prayers.

Patch Preschool clarifies its services, charges

I would like to clarify a response given in the Oct. 13 column pertaining to Patch Preschool charging about $300 for before- and after-school care.

Patch Preschool does not (and never did) provide before- and after-school child care. We solely offer a part-day preschool program for 3- and 4-year-olds. Our tuition is determined by the sponsor's income level.

While we share the building with the latchkey before- and after-school child care program, we are in no way affiliated with them.

Thank you for the opportunity to straighten out this issue.

• Military Clothing Sales, Tuesday, 6 p.m.

• Mini Mall Sports Store, Thursday, 7 p.m.

• Shoppette and Class Six, Oct. 30, 6 p.m.

Facilities will resume normal operating hours the next day following the closing day.

USAREC selection board to convene

A centralized selection board will convene Wednesday to consider eligible lieutenant colonels and promotable majors for assignments to command U.S. Army Recruiting Command battalions projected to become vacant during fiscal 1996. Battalions projected to be vacant in the following areas:

Baltimore, Md.; Brunswick, Maine; Syracuse, N.Y.; Pittsburgh, Pa.; Atlanta; Columbia, S.C.; Miami and Tampa, Fla.; Montgomery, Ala.; Raleigh, N.C.; Chicago, Ill.; Columbus, Ohio; Minneapolis, Minn.; Houston and San Antonio, Texas; Denver, Colo.; Portland, Ore.; Sacramento, Calif.; and Salt Lake City, Utah.

Officers eligibility criteria applies equally to male and female officers for all USAREC battalion command positions. Officers interested should immediately contact their respective career manager.

Officers who desire to compete are encouraged to review their official military personnel file and officer record brief immediately.

For more information, call Capt. Glenn Goldman at Defense Satellite Network at 221-5166 or Klaus Bourne at 545-4103 or 545-4522.

Furniture issue ends

The Furnishings Management Branch, Housing Division, of the Directorate of Public Works, will no longer provide family housing type furniture to military personnel and their families.

The only exception to this policy is general officers, foreign and liaison officers, post command sergeant major and School of the Americas foreign instructor personnel.

This policy is in accordance with Army Regulation 210-50, Chapter 10. The office is open from 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., weekdays. The office is closed for lunch from noon to 12:30 p.m.

For more information, call Bob Wilson at 545-6713.

USAIS demolition permit class set

A demolition permit class will be conducted by the Mobility and Survivability Branch at Infantry Hall, Building 4, Classroom 22, today from 8 a.m. to noon.

Units must submit a memo with name, rank and social security number of personnel that will attend the class to: Mobility and Survivability Branch, Combined Arms and Tactics Directorate, Infantry Hall, Room 331, or fax 545-7500.

The class is restricted to 50 students. For more information, call Sgt. Willie Higdon at 545-3819.

Battle Park changes admittance policy

Effective immediately, housing at Battle Park is now open to all Department of Defense civilians, nonappropriated fund employees, retired DoD civilians and military personnel.

To apply, take verification of employment or copy of identification card to Building 2621 in Soldiers' Plaza, or contact Anna Wilson at 545-3921 or Battle Park homes at 689-1282.

MCSS to exchange tight BDU shirts

Army military clothing sales stores will accept exchanges on certain battle dress uniform shirts, following a pattern redesign that causes sleeves to be too tight when rolled.

While the flaw has been corrected for future procurement, soldiers in possession of improperly fitting BDU coats can exchange them, at no cost, until Saturday.

Soldiers are encouraged to try on the coat before purchasing, ensuring a comfortable fit when sleeves are rolled, officials said.

Returned coats must be in serviceable condition.

CGSC to be offered

The Command and General Staff Officer Course will be offered in Columbus beginning in October.

This course will be presented by instructors of the 108th Division at the Army Reserve Center on Macon Road in Columbus.

All majors and above in the active component, Reserve Component, and the National Guard are eligible. Also, promotable captains are eligible if they are Combined Arms Services and Staff School graduates. This is the same course offered in residence at Fort Leavenworth, Kan.

For information, call 291-4536 and leave a message.

Loud music can get you fines on post

The post regulations regarding loud music can be found in USAIC Policy Memorandum 94-64 and Georgia Code 40-6-14.

USAIC Policy memorandum 94-64 states music should not be able to be heard more than 15 feet from a vehicle. Military personnel who violate this policy can be cited for violating Article 92, UCMJ.

All others who violate the 15-foot rule will be asked to turn their music down. Noncompliance can result in post ejection or a breach of peace violation.

According to Georgia Code 40-6-14, music that can be heard more than 100 feet from a vehicle is punishable with a $25 fine.

For more information, call 545-5915 or 4376.

Cadences needed for Jody call book

The author who compiled and edited volumes I and II of "Cadences: The Jody Call Book" is looking for new material for a third volume.

Cadences can relate to location, particular mission or world events. The author is particularly interested in any cadences relating to Operations Desert Shield and Storm, Somalia or Haiti. Cadences will not be included if they are obscene.

Either the individual contributor, unit or post will be credited for any Jodies used.

Any Fort Benning soldier who would like to submit cadences can send them to: Sandee Johnson, 7502 Jade Drive S.W., Tacoma, Wash. 98498.

Speakers wanted

The Public Affairs Office is recruiting volunteers to join its Speakers Bureau to speak before local and surrounding area civic organizations.

If you are military or civilian and have a unique subject you are an expert on, be it military history or horticulture, call Brad Castleberry at 545-2238.

Main NCO Club offers good quality, affordability

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet©

Fort Benning's Main NCO Club has much to offer, according to Garrison Command Sergeant Major Steve Chittum.

Chittum is encouraging the noncommissioned officers corp to take advantage of what the Main NCO Club has to offer.

It's no coincidence, he said, that the best installation in the Army also has one of the best club systems as well.

"The Fort Benning NCO club offers an outstanding variety of food and drink in a pleasant atmosphere and at a good price," Chittum said. "It is a place the NCO corps should consider not only for recreation but for official functions as well, such as dining-ins and professional development sessions."

Chittum said he cannot overemphasize that the NCO club is for all NCOs.

"The club does not cater to one group or another," he said. "However, the club must make a profit and will reflect the desires and interests of those who are using the club. If the club doesn't meet your needs, it's because you're not using it."

Chittum said club manager Jimmy Stewart is committed to the Fort Benning NCO corps.

"We are fortunate to have him on board," Chittum said. "He is committed to quality service and is open to ideas about improving the club. Chances are, if a suggestion is affordable, legal and at all possible, he will give it a try."

Stewart said October is a great month to buy a membership card because there is no cover charge for membership card holders in October.

Stewart also said the club has been approved by the Department of the Army to open a concept restaurant slated for completion in April. "Reggi's Beverage Company" will be a bar-and-grill style restaurant similar to popular civilian chain restaurants.

According to Chittum, club members enjoy numerous benefits and activities, including discounts, Boss Night, Friday night disco, check-cashing privileges and more.

"At $4 per month, or $40 per year, club membership is very affordable," he said. "I encourage NCOs to purchase memberships for periods of time longer than a month because it gives the club the flexibility to offer more and better services."

Stewart said Boss Night, usually featured the second Friday of each month, is an excellent way to check out what the club has to offer.

"Membership holders can bring their boss, whether enlisted, soldier or civilians , for free and enjoy great food, music and companionship," he said.

Chittum said the club cannot improve if those in charge don't know what NCOs want.

"We are re-energizing the NCO club council to include staff sergeants, sergeants first class and master sergeants," Chittum said. "This council meets regularly with the club manager and wants to hear any suggestions, complaints or ideas that you have."

As an example of how the club is a reflection of NCO community, Chittum said the Better Opportunities for Single Soldiers quarterly breakfast will be held there.

"We want this breakfast to be on par with the civilian awards breakfast, to include participation by top officers and NCOs."

Chittum said NCOs should support their club.

"More and more posts are consolidating their individual clubs into one community club," Chittum said. "This is not Fort Benning's intention because each individual club here is an outstanding asset and value to the post.

"The NCO club is truly an outstanding asset that contributes to the comraderie and morale of the Fort Benning NCO corps," he said. "Let's make the club a reflection of the same pride and professionalism that is the hallmark of the NCO."

Energy

Individual efforts can make difference

Energy Branch

Fort Benning spends $16 million each year for electricity, gas and heating fuels. On average, the post's electric bill is $28,400 per day. If this seems like a lot of money, that's because it is a lot of money.

October is Energy Awareness Month. This is the time to reflect on how much energy costs and what can be done to conserve it. If each individual could cut his or her energy consumption by only 1 percent, this would equate to $160,000 a year in savings, said Mark J. Fincher, chief, Energy Branch, Department of of Public Works. This can be done by turning lights off when not in use and resetting thermostats when you leave your office and home.

"These actions over one year would prevent the emission of more than 160 million tons of pollutants into the air (carbon dioxide, sulfur dioxide and nitrous oxides)," Fincher said.

The Energy Office is pursuing several methods to lower energy usage and cost. Most recently the post's gas supplier was able to obtain cost reductions from his suppliers, which is saving Fort Benning $1,000,000 per year for two consecutive years.

There are also several federal energy programs that fund energy reduction projects. Fort Benning has asked for more than $12 million to fund projects ranging from light fixture replacements to air-conditioning equipment replacement.

With today's technology, almost everything available consumes less energy, Fincher said. Cars gets better gas mileage, light bulbs put out more light per watt, and electric motors are more efficient.

"These products with higher efficiencies give us the opportunity to shop for products that can save us considerable amount of money both at home and at work," he said.

An example is the compact fluorescent lamps that are being sold in ever-increasing quantities. Although compact fluorescent lamps are more costly initially to purchase, they last more than 10 times as long as an incandescent bulb and save about two-thirds the electricity an incandescent would use.

"Another area where energy saving has made great strides in the last 10 years is in residential air-conditioning," Fincher said. The units sold now, on average, are about 30 percent more efficient than those sold in 1985. However, to use the minimum amount of energy, the filters must be kept clean. Also, the thermostat should be set at the minimum temperature that will keep you comfortable, he said.

The reduction in energy consumption has a collaborative effect elsewhere. Besides the obvious result of avoiding spending money now for energy and utilizing this money for other needs, energy users also produce less pollution and decrease the need for new power generation.

During Energy Awareness Month reflect on what you can do as your share in the conservation effort, and make energy conservation a year-round habit, Fincher said.

Post commander thanks honorees

By Lori Egan
Bayonet staff writer

Soldiers and civilians were honored Oct. 10 at York Field during the monthly Command Retreat Ceremony hosted by Maj. Gen. John W. Hendrix, post commanding general.

Those honored were:

• Sgt. 1st Class Mavis R. Conley-Brooks, Company A, 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment, received the Army Commendation Medal for providing mouth-to-mouth resuscitation to a cardiac arrest victim at the Briant Wells Field House.

• Eddie Willis, Directorate of Public Safety, received the Commander's Award for Civilian Service for helping Brooks try to resuscitate a cardiac arrest victim.

• Pfc. Robert M. Ruhlen, Co. B, 3rd Bn., 75th Ranger Regt., received the Army Commendation Medal for delivering a neighbor's baby and initiating life-saving steps to save the baby's life when the umbilical cord became wrapped around the baby's neck.

• Sgt. Kevin G. Rast, Co. C, 317th Engineer Bn., 3rd Brigade, 24th Inf. Division (Mechanized), received the Department of the Army's Certificate of Achievement for being named Fort Benning's Noncommissioned Officer of the Year.

• Spc. Carey Paul, 988th Military Police Co., received the Department of the Army's Certificate of Achievement as Fort Benning's Soldier of the Year.

• Lt. Col. Deborah Kissel, 30th Adjutant General (Reception) Bn., accepted a Community of Excellence Award for the volunteer hours the battalion performed at Santa's Castle.

• Helen D. Butterfield, supervisory occupational health nurse at Martin Army Community Hospital, received the Meritorious Civilian Service Award for 18 years of exemplary service.

• Dr. Sam and Donna Rice, International Student Training Detachment, received the Commander's Award for Public Service for their contributions as civilian volunteers.

• Valerie Austin, Family Unit Network Center, received a Certificate of Achievement as the volunteer of the month.

• Lorrain J. Vickery, Directorate of Logistics, received a Department of the Army Certificate of Commendation for being the civilian employee of the month.

• Glenda T. Oliver, Force Status Section, Operations, Plans and Mobilization division, Directorate of Operations and Training, received an Infantry Center Certificate of Achievement for being the quality employee of the month.

• Dr. Wanda Person, Fort Benning Schools, received a Certificate of Achievement for being selected as a state winner in the 1995 Technology and Learning Teacher of the Year program.

• Sanford Parr, Training and Doctrine Command Anti-Tank System manager, received the Daedalian award for major contributions to the development of an aerospace weapon system.

• Susan Gilmore, McGraw Manor Community mayor, received a Certificate of Appreciation for being a volunteer community mayor.

• Harry Jackson, former mayor of Columbus; Dr. Frank Brown, Association of the United States Army, Columbus-Fort Benning chapter president from September 1994 to July 1995; Jack and Jean Harron, AUSA supporters; and Ray Lopez, School of the Americas supporter received Fort Benning mementos for their contributions to Fort Benning.

After passing out all the awards, Hendrix thanked the honorees for their contributions.

It is humbling to learn about the contributions these honorees have made to Fort Benning, Hendrix said.

Each one has contributed so much to the post and the tri-community, he said.

"I hope the honorees will continue to bless us with their service," Hendrix said. "Thank you. Hooah."

COMMUNITY

Program helps families help themselves

Family Advocacy Program

The cornerstones of the Family Advocacy Program's prevention mission are building community support and providing programs and services that positively influence individuals, couples and families to prevent conditions that stimulate family violence from developing.

Child and spouse abuse are complex social problems with multiple causes. There is no one explanation or solution. Strengthening and stabilizing relationships is an underlying approach to preventing distress, spouse abuse and divorce.

Rebecca Welch, Family Advocacy Program Manager, said that one way to meet the challenge is to teach positive communication as the essential ingredient in the maintenance and enhancement of adult relationships. Despite everyone's best efforts to promote self-reliance and prevention through education, information and early referral, incidents of family violence still occur.

She said a spouse-abuse situation may begin with relatively minor acts of aggression (shoving, pushing, wrestling and hitting) and then escalate into a more serious incident involving the use of weapons or the threatening of life. This is why prevention is so important. Welch stressed the point that prevention of family violence depends heavily on early referral, support, education and information.

Soldiers and their family members need to know that the Family Advocacy Program and services are developed to provide information, promote awareness, teach skills, create support networks and coordinate treatment.

Through working with families, Welch has found that soldiers avoid the chain of command and family advocacy in times of personal need because they believe the myth that involvement with FAP will adversely affect their careers. Soldiers should be reassured that the command recognizes that everyone experiences hard times and may need additional support at different

Take a timeout — improve your marriage

Couples disagree on a wide variety of subjects. Sometimes tension builds to the point where violence may erupt. If you feel you are about to become abusive, try taking a timeout instead. In sporting activities, teams use timeouts to regroup and re-focus. A timeout is not avoiding a conflict or a disagreement, it is temporarily removing yourself from the situation until you have had a chance to calm down and think.

Pick a time when you and your spouse are not angry to establish the ground rules for using timeout in your relationship:

- Either partner can call a timeout.
- Decide who will stay with the children.
- How you will signal a timeout. (Making the T-sign; "I need to take a timeout.")
- Agree to acknowledge the timeout when called.

Decide when to call a timeout:

- When you recognize you are getting out of control.
- When your body gets tense or feels like it will explode.
- When you feel yourself getting physically or verbally aggressive.
- When winning the argument is your sole focus.

PROTECT AND DEFEND PREVENT DOMESTIC VIOLENCE

Fort Benning olympian still golden

By Donna S. Budjenska
Special to The Bayonet©

The 1960 medal winner promotes inspirational aspects of athletic competition as he recounts his own will to succeed

Fort Benning has an Olympian in its midst.

Edward Crook, now retired after 30 years in the military plus ensuing civil service, is a Gold-medal winning boxer who competed for the United States — via the Army — in the 1960 Rome Olympics.

Now he resides in Columbus with his wife, Fannie, herself a Columbus native, and volunteers for the Atlanta Committee for the Olympic Games, traveling throughout the state with other Olympians residing in Georgia as a way to promote the Games to young people.

"I think that everyone from the little youngsters on up can get a lot of inspiration from the Olympics," Crook said. "They can learn that whatever their wishes, they can accomplish them; they just have to get on the right highway to their goals and steer away from negative things."

That's not idle propaganda, either: Crook has lived those words.

As a young graduate-to-be from the Infantry Officer Candidate School in 1952, Crook was denied his commission, he said, because his father was accused of being a Communist.

Instead of becoming bitter, Crook decided to become the best enlisted infantryman he could be. He completed basic training at Fort Jackson, S.C, then was stationed at Fort Benning until 1956, when he transferred to Berlin for four years.

During his time here and in Berlin, he participated on Army sports teams, playing baseball, football (for the Doughboys here) and boxing.

"At that time, sports were real big in the military," Crook said. "So if you could play football or baseball or could box, you were on the post team."

Crook could definitely box, maintaining his status as Golden Gloves champ in the middleweight division for the Alabama, Georgia and Tennessee region, making the All-Army team and winning the interservice championship. Those victories enabled him to try out for the 1960 U.S. Olympic team.

He made it and, as a sergeant first class, went to Rome to represent the United States at the Olympics alongside Cassius Clay (Muhammad Ali), Wilbur McClure and other competitors.

The 1960 Games were not Crook's first Olympic endeavor, however. He attempted to make the 1956 boxing team but broke his hand knocking out his No. 1-ranked opponent. That didn't slow him down long; and he regrouped, resume training and fought his way back to become the 1960 Olympic middleweight-division Gold medal winner.

"They gave me another stripe after that," Crook said laughingly, recalling his subsequent promotion to first sergeant.

Crook hasn't attended an Olympics since, though he stayed involved with the world of sports. "I loved baseball and football," he said, "Boxing was not a thing I looked forward to.

"I never considered going pro," he continued, "because I grew up in a boxing town (Detroit) and didn't like the way boxers turned out after being pro.

"They couldn't think for themselves because of all the knocks and dings they took to their heads."

Instead, Crook rose through the ranks of the noncommissioned officer corps, coaching boxing for the Army and serving at Fort Campbell, Ky., and yet again at Fort Benning. He retired as a command sergeant major in 1980 after 30 years of service.

Then he worked as a civilian employee on post and for the postal service, retiring altogether in 1992.

Crook now volunteers his time and energies for ACOG. (He had to apply for tickets for the 1996 Games in Atlanta just like everyone else, though, because his ACOG participation comes with no such fringe benefits.)

He continues working out (at Santiago Fitness Center), traveling for ACOG and enjoying his Olympic memories without living in the past. When he speaks of the Games, whether reminiscing about his own experiences or enthusing about future Olympics, he stresses the positive nature of the event and its potential for young people. He also stresses the need to compete with a clean body.

"The spirit of the Olympics is a reality," he said. "You look at all the countries in the Olympics and all the athletes they send. They believe in it, and that belief has got to be real or those athletes wouldn't be there.

"We have to do the right things if we want to win," he continued, speaking of people preparing to participate in the Olympics or in the larger arena of life.

"The right thing is not taking drugs (including performance-enhancing drugs such as steroids) and the like."

Elementary students abuzz over live bee hive

Shannon Day/Special to The Bayonet

Jessica P. Richards, a fourth-grade student at White Elementary School, observes bees in a real bee hive the school has set up in its learning media center.

By Shannon Day
Special to The Bayonet©

Students at White Elementary School are buzzing with excitement over one of the school's most effective teaching aid — a live bee hive full of busy bees.

"In the whole school system, it's probably the most effective teaching aid I have seen," said Owen T. Ditchfield, media specialist, White Elementary School. "We have kids from kindergarten all the way through college come to see the bees."

Ditchfield, who keeps bees as a hobby, has established a hive for children to observe everywhere he has taught for the past 18 years.

The observation bee hive, home to several thousand bees, is encased in glass. It has a pipe running outside, so the bees can get out and feed themselves.

Even with the bees buzzing around outside the school, there hasn't really been a problem with stings. According to Ditchfield, there is good reason for that.

In his class, Ditchfield teaches the students that the bees will not sting unless they feel they are being attacked.

"If a bee does sting someone and they swat it, the bee will give off a smell," he said. "Other bees can track the smell and will attack whatever killed the other bee."

Generally, he said, the bees are pretty gentle.

Learning about the bees has eased the fear of many students. In fact, Ditchfield said the hive has sparked their interest in insects.

"They are fun to look at," said Stephan T. Payton, a fourth-grader at White. "I have collected a whole jar full of them at home. I have also checked out books on insects. I think they have made me more interested in science."

Doug C. Ferdinande, another fourth-grade student at the school, said he goes to the library every day to look at the bees.

"I think they have helped me improve my grades on insects," Ferdinande said. "They are neat to learn about."

"They are really hairy," said fourth-grader Courtney L. Johnson. "I like them, especially the queen bee."

Ditchfield teaches the children about the three types of bees and about the job each type has.

The first type is the queen bee. There is one queen bee per hive. Her function is to make new bees, and she will spend two or three years laying up to 2,000 eggs per day.

The second type is the drone. These are male bees whose only function in life is to mate with the queen.

The third type is the worker bee. They help haul dead bees out of the hive, collect pollen, produce wax to build the hive, feed honey and pollen to the bee larvae, feed and

Trick or treat

Hours set for Halloween observance

Infantry Branch Safety Office

Halloween "trick or treating" will be in effect from 6 to 8 p.m. Oct. 31. The is the only day trick or treating is permitted.

Activities for trick or treating are limited to children under 13 years old. Preschool children must be accompanied by an older person (14 years or older).

Limit trick or treating only to the housing area in which the participants reside, and approach only residences with lighted entry ways.

Light-colored, fire resistant costumes, short enough to prevent tripping, should be worn by children. Costumes can be marked with reflective tape or "glow" spray paint so they can pick up auto headlights and other lights.

Observe all basic safety precautions. Use sidewalks and crosswalks; don't cut through yards. Look in all directions before walking across the street.

Wear masks or head coverings that do not restrict vision. Use colorful facial makeup as much as possible.

Prevent pets from being a nuisance or a menace to children. Caution children about the wrongs of vandalism and causing damage to the property of others.

Ensure children carry flashlights after dark. If a child carries a pumpkin, it should be lighted with a battery device, not a candle.

Never let your child eat anything until you have inspected the treats. Give your child a full meal before he or she goes trick or treating.

Labels enhance education facilities

By Shannon Day
Special to The Bayonet©

Families with children at Dexter Elementary School have teamed up with the Fort Benning Commissary and Campbell's Soup in an effort to improve their students' education.

As part of Campbell's "Labels for Education" campaign, the company is giving the Commissary soup-label vouchers for all of the Campbell's products the consumers purchase. In turn, the Commissary is giving these vouchers to Dexter Elementary School Parent-Teacher Organization.

The students are also collecting the labels off of the products and turning them into the PTO.

What's the point of all this? The PTO can redeem the label vouchers from the Commissary and the labels the children have collected at Campbell's for much needed classroom equipment and supplies.

"Many people have the misconception that the only eligible products are Campbell's Soup and Franco-American products," said Alice Rzeszutko, PTO second vice president. "There are many different brands that count."

Eligible products include items made by Campbell's Soup; Marie's Dressings, Dips and Glazes; Swanson products; V8 Vegetable Juice; Open Pit Barbecue Sauce; Early California Olives; Franco-American products; Sanwa soups; Vlasic products; Pepperidge Farm products; and Prego products.

Last year, the PTO collected 15,000 labels and asked Dexter teachers what teaching aids were really needed but were beyond the budget. Teachers came up with ideas and submitted them to the PTO, which then voted on what supplies to order based on need and how many children would benefit from the purchase.

Last year, the school received a bulletin board, electronic equipment, computer programs, a big screen projector, basketballs and live butterflies.

"This program has really helped out with all of the budget cutbacks," said Shawna O'Neil, PTO vice president. "The PTO has had to pick up a lot of the slack. We could not afford these things without this program."

This year, the Commissary has already donated 27,800 vouchers, based on last year's Campbell's products sales. The students have also collected about 2,000 labels so far and are still collecting.

To help the school, just purchase any of the above-mentioned products at the Commissary. Many of these brands will be on sale during the next few months.

Labels from the items can also be given to any Fort Benning school student. Each school is having an individual label drive to help purchase much-needed supplies and enhance students' education experience at Fort Benning schools.

Old cars help kidney cause

National Kidney Foundation of Georgia

Getting rid of an old car you no longer have use for can be stressful.

The National Kidney Foundation of Georgia's Car Contribution Campaign program can help reduce the stress of selling a vehicle while giving the donor a chance to directly assist more than 6,000 kidney dialysis and hundreds of transplant patients in Georgia.

You can donate your used car, truck motor home or motor cycle to the foundation and receive a valuable tax deduction. It's a year-round program, so the opportunity is there when the need arises.

The vehicles are sold at a dealer auction and the donor is mailed a receipt from the sale and a deed of gift. Consult a tax adviser as to how to use this document for tax purposes.

points in their lives. It is important to know that the command prefers to assist soldiers and families early on rather than having the soldier hide it until the situation becomes a crisis.

Soldiers and family members can support the FAP mission by knowing when and how to ask for help and by following through on recommendations. This shows the command that soldiers are willing to take responsibility for personal behavior.

Resources are out there for families. Asking for help when you have a problem does not mean that you are a weak person. It goes to prove that you are a strong person, wanting things to work out for you and those involved in the situation. Reality in the military is that strong families support strong soldiers!

ABUZZ: Bees highlight live learning experience groom the queen, guard the hive from intruders and scout out new pollen sources.

"The worker bees will go to the source and have to visit 200 blossoms to fill their internal cavity with nectar," Ditchfield said. "This amount of nectar will make one-five-thousandth of an ounce of honey."

While the bee is collecting pollen, it is also processing the nectar inside its body, beginning the honey-making process. The worker bees work outside from dawn to dusk and inside the hive at night. After six weeks, the worker bee's wings are worn out.

"When we say 'busy as a bee,' this is what we mean," he said.

While the children are engrossed in the busy bees and having fun, Ditchfield said he takes satisfaction that the children will retain most of what they learn.

"I believe children learn best from hands-on experience with living things," he said. "Many teachers (at White Elementary School) take that approach. It makes learning more effective and meaningful."

CB&T's New Bill Payer

No stamps. No envelopes. No slips of paper to enclose. Just a touch tone phone, a CB&T checking account and a VISA Check Card — the fastest, easiest and safest way to pay almost any bill.

Bill Payer works like this. When you sign up, you list the companies you want paid - utilities, mortgage holders, credit card companies, even individuals you pay on a regular basis. CB&T makes the arrangements and sends you a packet with easy-to-follow instructions telling you how to access the system and set up your payment schedule. Fixed payments like mortgage and car payments can be sent automatically each month. For other payments, you simply dial the number, listen and follow directions. It's totally secure, available 24 hours a day and only you can activate the service, so you're always in control.

3 Month Money Back Guarantee

Bill Payer is only the first of a full list of convenient electronic banking services CB&T will be making available to its customers very soon. So pick up the phone and call your nearest CB&T office for complete details. It's a great way to handle all your bill paying needs.

NCO digs deep to win top spot

By Shannon Day
Special to The Bayonet©

After a tough competition between several highly skilled noncommissioned officers, Fort Benning has chosen the 1995 NCO of the Year.

He is Sgt. Kevin G. Rast, combat earthmover operator, Company C, 317th Engineer Battalion, 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division (Mechanized).

Attaining the title was not easy.

Rast said he joined the Army five years ago to better himself as a person and to serve his country.

"I feel like I can progress faster here than in the civilian world," he said. "I enjoy my job and working with people from all walks of life."

He said he chose his military occupational specialty because he knew he would enjoy working with tracked vehicles and demolitions.

"I started with the battalion noncommissioned officer of the month board," he said. "I studied training and study manuals. As I worked my way up to the post NCO of the Year, each board helped me prepare better for the next one.

"The secret to these boards is to be confident in yourself," he said. "Don't be intimidated by competitors."

As Rast worked his way up the board ladder, he was fortunate enough to have a supportive chain of command.

"My whole chain of command has been supportive, especially my first sergeant." Rast said. "He really did a lot to help me train and prepare."

Co. C 1st Sgt. Nelson Slaughter said Rast is an NCO of the highest quality.

"He has mastered the art of technical and tactical skills any NCO must possess to be a true leader," Slaughter said. "His work ethics are proven by his accomplishments."

Rast's company commander, Capt. Alan M. Dodd, agrees with Slaughter.

He's a great NCO," Dodd said. "He brings a lot of credit to the unit. He enforces high standards and keeps his platoon going."

Rast said he likes the Army so much that he is going to make it a career.

His goal is to someday become the sergeant major of the Army.

Rast is currently preparing for the Forces Command NCO of the Year Board.

Hondurans attend logistics course

By Judith Ginder
School of the Americas

The logistical support of a combat mission is sometimes overlooked, and that's a good thing. That just means the job's getting done.

To teach Latin American cadets U.S. Army logistics system and its procedures, the School of the Americas offers the four-week Cadet Logistic Orientation Course. Honduran cadets are going through the session now at SOA.

Training covers combat logistical support, supply, maintenance, transportation and medical support, said Staff Sgt. Jose Rodriguez, SOA instructor.

Basic to logistics is how to handle and keep track of supplies. The basics students learn include issue and storage and how to prepare and maintain supply records, which is a very important part of the course, Rodriguez said.

Students learn about safety, security and amnesty programs in ammunition management, he said. They also learn how to organize a unit's motor movement and what it takes to move people and equipment effectively.

The highlight of this course is a one-day tour of the U.S. Marine Corps Logistics Base at Albany, Ga., said Staff Sgt. Carlos Rivera, SOA instructor. Students get "the big picture" of logistics while visiting one of the Marines' largest such facilities in the United States. There is a depot on base, a one-stop shop where every kind of supply for peacetime and war is kept, Rivera said.

Then the students joined a group of Marines in a mock amphibious assault, acting as the logistical support. The exercise gives the cadets practical training that they might not otherwise get in their home country. Touring the facilities in Albany shows the cadets how the U.S. military handles logistics.

With all this instruction under their belts, these Honduran cadets can return home better prepared to support their troops, Rodriguez said. And who knows? Maybe they'll do their job so well, they too may be ignored by those they support, he said.

3/24 flies to Fort Stewart for live-fire exercise

Soldiers move out in an emergency deployment exercise

By Lisa M. Hibbert
Bayonet staff writer

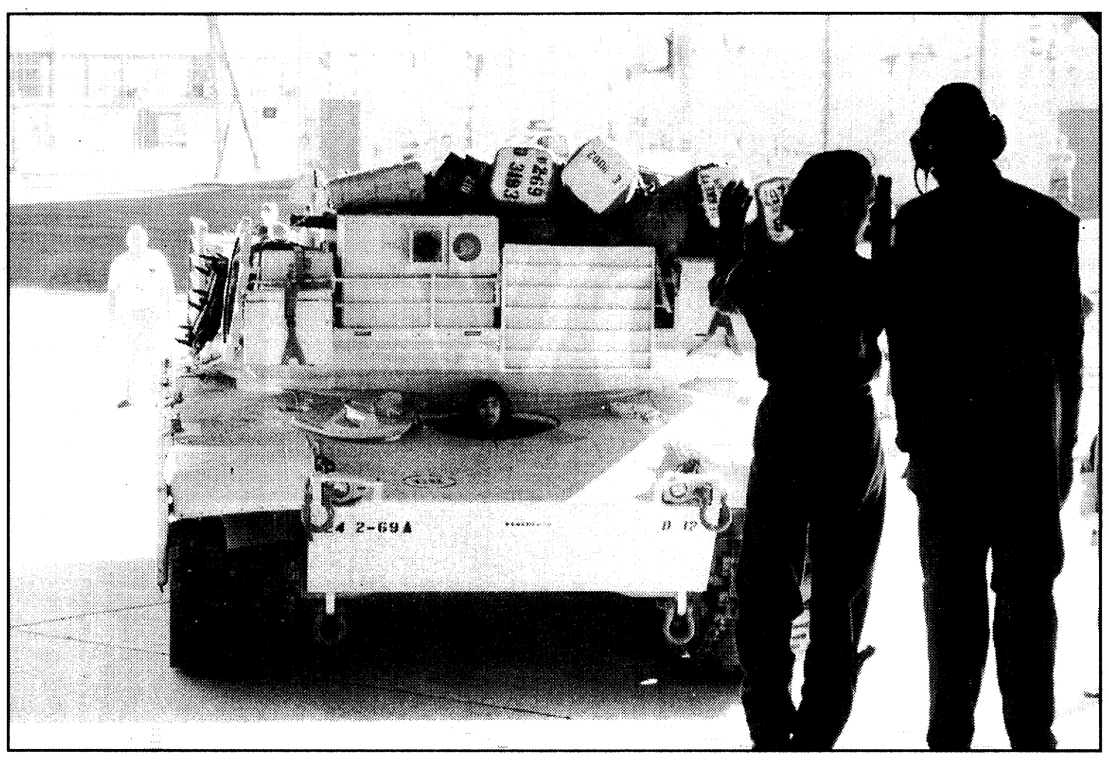
Soldiers from the 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division (Mechanized), participated in an emergency deployment readiness exercise which began Monday when soldiers were first notified they were on alert.

The purpose of the exercise was to test the division's ability to assemble a company-sized element, fly it to a location and conduct a live-fire mission. During the exercise, the soldiers were not alerted until it was time to deploy.

Tuesday morning, packed and ready-to-move soldiers from Company D, 2nd Battalion, 69th Armor Regiment, arrived at Lawson Army Airfield where they met the C-17 aircrafts that were ready to transport them to Hunter Army Airfield, Savannah, Ga.

This marked the first time that the C-17 ever landed at Fort Benning, said Capt. Timothy J. Pike, commander, Co. D, who also talked about the company's readiness standing. The C-17 is the Air Forces's latest transport aircraft, designed to complement aging C-141 and C5 aircrafts, and is noted for its ability to carry great loads and land and take off on short runways.

"Everything is going as the checklist calls," Pike said. "When you're the exercise-ready company, you have to be prepared to go at any time."



The 437th Air Lift Wing, Charleston Air Force Base, S.C., provided the aircrafts that were scheduled to arrive at Hunter by noon. Three aircrafts were used to conduct a total of six flights that continued throughout the day.

Equipment such as the M-1 Abrams was loaded onto the aircrafts, and the teams that used the equipment were able to fly along side of it in the C-17.

"After the soldiers fly into Hunter, they will (move) to trains which will (carry) them to Fort Stewart for the live-fire exercise," said Brig. Gen. Joseph R. Inge, assistant division commander, support, 2nd Infantry Division (Mechanized), Fort Stewart, Ga.

As part of the exercise, the division's artillery brigade will conduct training loading the C-17s at Hunter. Also, the artillery unit will practice loading the Paladin, the Army's newest and most modern artillery weapon. The Paladin, a self-propelled howitzer, fires 155mm ammunition.

The soldiers and equipment are scheduled to arrive back at Fort Benning today.

Faith has power to reduce mountains to molehills

By Robert A. Wildeman
USAIC Chaplain Office

reflections

Are you familiar with the phrase "Don't make a mountain out of a molehill?"

Maybe a better question is, has it ever happened to you? If so, what effect did it have on you and your attitude toward yourself, your spouse, your family, your job and your relationship to your God? It's a frustrating, defeating, even depressing way to live, isn't it?

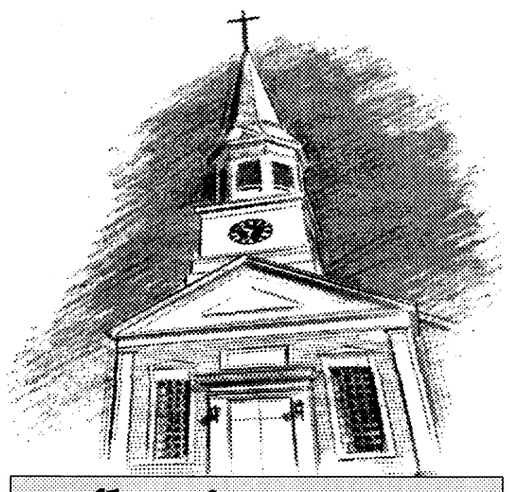
I know, because it just happened to me.

I was the project officer for a recent revival. I was up to my neck in details and last-minute changes. I went to visit Sgt. Maj. Steve Chittum, the garrison sergeant major, to ask him to give his testimony. As we discussed plans for the weekend, he noticed I was really frustrated. He said to me: "Chaplain, you know Satan really likes it when we get all wrapped up like you are. He loves to make mountains out of these molehills, because they block our view of the glory of God and rob us of our joy." He went on, "God wants to reverse that process and turn those mountains into molehills. He wants us to see his glory in the Lord Jesus Christ." We prayed together, and I left his office a renewed person.

Maybe you're saying, "Gee I'm glad for you, chaplain, but are you going to keep the answer that you found to yourself?"

The answer is no secret; it's right in the Bible. Let's look at two places where I found it. Please notice that what ties the verses together is the reference to mountains.

In Isaiah 40:3-5, God said "... every mountain and hill shall be made low ... And the glory of the Lord will be revealed, and all mankind together will see it ..." (NIV) This prophecy was fulfilled in the preaching of John the Baptist as he preached that the people needed to repent so they could receive Jesus Christ. God doesn't want us to be depressed and defeated. It's his will that our mountains become molehills, so we can see and trust Jesus Christ as our Savior and experience his joy.



In Matthew 17:20, Jesus makes a remarkable statement to his disciples after they had failed to cast a demon out of a young boy. The disciples asked him why they had failed, and he said, "Because you have so little faith. I tell you the truth, if you have faith as small as a mustard seed, you can say to this mountain, 'Move from here to there.' and it will move. Nothing will be impossible for you." (NIV)

What is the key that unlocks God's power to reverse the process and remove my mountains and yours? It's faith. Notice it's not the amount of our faith — it's the quality of our faith. It's not how much we believe, but whom we believe in. When we are down and depressed, Jesus says repent of your sin, believe and you can flatten (move) the mountain that's blocking your view of God's glory.

Jesus said we can turn our mountains into molehills. All we have to do is repent of our sin of disbelief and claim the power that both God our father and Jesus Christ our savior make for us. God bless you as you claim the power of God in your life each day. God wants us to live in the light

United effort results in limitless potential

By Pat Coté
1st Battalion, 19th Infantry Regiment

reflections

When people and nations come together in a unified effort, the potential is limitless.

When we combine our resources and our gifts for a common good, it is no secret that people united in solidarity and supporting one another have a strength and tenacity unknown to those who act alone.

Exodus 17:8-13 portrays this principle so clearly. Suddenly and without provocation, the ancient Israelites were attacked by the warring Amalekites. Panic began to permeate the Israelite camp as they pondered the outcome. Moses, the religious leader, realized that he had a crisis on his hands, and he enacted a plan.

Moses' plan at first glance seemed strange. He directed Joshua, the young military leader, to choose some men and go out to fight the Amalekites. While this was happening, Moses stood on the top of a hill, visible to all, with the staff of God raised in his hands. The story goes that as long as Moses held up his hands, the Israelites had the military advantage, but whenever his arms would lower because of fatigue, the Amalekites would gain the advantage.

Sensing this precarious predicament, Aaron and Hur (two men who had accompanied Moses to the top of the hill) brought a stone over for Moses to rest on, and then each — one on one side and one on the other— held up a hand of Moses, infusing faith within the people, as Joshua overcame the Amalekite army. Together, they were able to easily accomplish what was proving to be impossible for one.

This account is all the more profound when you realize who was leading Moses into this action; namely, Almighty God. This is the God who called the world into creation just by his word, who turned the Nile River into blood, who dispensed the plagues against Egypt, who parted the Red Sea, who brought forth water from rocks, who performed miracle after miracle on behalf of the Israelites.

Why did he not give Moses the strength to accomplish this feat on his own? He was providing a pattern for us to replicate and follow — working in unity and support of one another.

People today may not be fighting Amalekites, but their battles are raging just as strongly and are just as threatening. People may not be called to stand on a hill holding up a staff of God, but they need to realize that it is just as important to combine efforts to infuse faith and hope within the world.

chapel notes

Custer Terrace installation — Chaplain (Capt.) Timothy S. Mallard will be installed 11 a.m. Sunday as the new pastor of Custer Terrace Chapel.

Starting soon at the chapel will be a children's church program, certified child care during worship and a family advent program for the Christmas season. There will also be a Christmas eve candlelight service at 7:30 p.m.

Mass change — Effective immediately, the Mass formerly celebrated at 9 a.m. Sundays at the Main Post Catholic Chapel will be at 8:45 a.m.

CCD time change — Confraternity of Christian Doctrine classes will be conducted from 10:10 to 11:15 a.m. Sundays at Dexter Elementary School.

RCIA meetings — Classes for the Rite of Christian Initiation for Adults meet Sundays at 10:10 a.m. at Dexter Elementary School. Anyone who would like to learn more about the Catholic faith is invited to attend.

Understanding child within helps adults with daily living

By John W. Wilson
Family Life Chaplain Ministry Center

reflections

We find these words in Matthew 19:14: "Let the little children come to me, do not hinder them, for the kingdom of heaven belongs to such as these." Many sermons have been preached from this passage about faith, trust and relationship. I think it can also be used to call our attention to a part of each of us we often neglect, "the child within us."

There has been discussion over the years about the effect of heredity and environment upon our behavior and life. Or to put it another way, our childhood directs our adult life. Research studies and just plain common sense confirm the truth. Adults are a product of their childhood. Genetics, nutrition, family and environment all join together to set the course of our lives.

From our first breath to our last, part of us will always be the child within. Unfortunately, we forget who we are. We fail to notice the difference between the child and childish behavior in ourselves. We can often point it out in others but not in ourselves.

We grow bigger and older and, hopefully, wiser; but, we never leave all of our childhood behind. Some of us cling to behaviors that destroy others. Some bury the delights and joys of childhood until life becomes hopelessly mired in the mud. We should just stop, make "mud pies" and laugh awhile. Better still would be to understand who we are, to take the child and the man or woman hand in hand, together, through life.

The challenge is to go back to the child and know the "kingdom" you are a part of. The good and the bad, the joy and the sadness of childhood and youth are part and parcel of who you are today. If you ignore either side, the good or the bad, your world, your "kingdom," will be lopsided and off balance.

Unless you restore or keep the balance your life will become like a wobbly tire. If you have ever watched someone rolling a spare tire, you may be able to visualize it. At first the tire goes straight and true. Then it begins to lose speed and wobble back and forth. Unless it is pushed again, the tire will eventually fall over, rock around a few times and the settle flat. Sometimes our lives need that corrective push to straighten out the past or empower the present.

The sneaky part of the dilemma is that we are all affected whether we realize it or not. Some of us just don't wobble as visibly because the starting push was stronger or our course had fewer bumps. But we all carry the potential wobble within us because we were all children.

Take some time, no matter how old you are, to meet yourself. Touch the child inside no matter how deep it might have hidden. Reach out to the good and never lose it. Find the hurts and bruises and let them heal. Don't pass on the hidden hurting child in you to your children, your spouse or your workplace.

The family system we grew up in is replicated in our daily living. For better or for worse, it is there. The past is just that, the past. It cannot be changed. We are in the present. The present can be changed. The future does not have to match the past, but the change takes awareness and effort.

Look honestly at yourself. Look back to the child you are now, inside. Do you see the same childlike feelings and actions being played out before you?

To adapt a quote from history, "Those who fail to meet their child are doomed to play the role over again." Failure to know your inner child could be painful, "childish."

Fall brings time for slower pace

reflections

We are in the season known as fall. After a hot and blistering summer, it's much easier to breathe. The climactic conditions are changing as well as the spiritual conditions. We are getting ready for Thanksgiving, Hanukkah and Christmas.

So many current affairs still absorb our attention. After more than a year of an extremely intriguing trial, the jury in Los Angeles reached a verdict, pronouncing the innocence of 0. J. Simpson.

Another significant event this month was the visit of Pope John Paul II to the United States. He met with leaders of the nation and spoke to millions sharing his rich gospel experience.

Moreover, we experienced the wrath of Hurricane Opal. This October can truly be called one of the most eventful months of the year.

So, we are in the fall. The days are shorter; the nights are longer; but all of that can be a sign of hope. It helps family members to be closer to each other.

There is more time for prayer. The classical maxim of spiritual life says: The family that prays together stays together. It is difficult to imagine the functioning of a good family without prayer.

The presence of God is visible in a special way in the family that prays and worships in a congregation of believers.

It also brings unity and a sense of peace in spite of the frustrations and anxiety of the world. Many preachers use the example of two people who are committed to each other. Even being busy, they find time for each other. They do it because they feel the importance of the other person. They recognize the contribution of that person to their happiness and well being.

God is certainly the most important person in our lives. He is the God of love. That's why we talk to him, because love cannot exist without talk. Just as we eat bread to nourish our bodies, we have to have spiritual nourishment that can be drawn from prayer — prayer from the heart.

Fall, then, can be transformed into a religious reflection on the deeper sense of our existence and the world around us. Prayer may become a wonderful tool to achieve that state of mind that enables us to see things in a better perspective. It might be a challenging experience but also a joyful one — an experience of change and openness toward the world of new spiritual horizons.

"The Evangelical Movement," by Mark Ellingsen

Ellingsen compares the views of the evangelical movement with the Protestant Church. He challenges both to grow in understanding and cooperation by suggesting that mainline churches pursue a new strategy of openness toward evangelicals whose concern for sanctification, biblical revelation, and evangelism has the power to jolt the mainline church from its doldrums.

"The End of Strife," by David Loades

This collection of 14 creative historical essays — 11 in English, two in French, and one in German — explores the attitudes of Christians in the face of death, the reconciliation of confessional differences and various aspects of spirituality. The essays originated as papers presented at the Colloquium of the Commission Internationale d' Histoire Ecclesiastique Comparee held at Durham England in 1981.

"Little House on the Prairie Premiere Move"

Dirt-poor and alone, the Ingalls family moves from the woods of Wisconsin to the plains of Kansas and faces the dangers of an untamed wilderness.

"Christy"

When Christy Huddleston (Kellie Martain of "Life Goes On") leaves her comfortable city life for the forbidding backwoods of Cutters Gap, she has no idea of the challenges, hardship and danger that await her. As she struggles to overcome the obstacles of ignorance and mistrust, one by one each family begins to reach out and accept her. And Christy, in turn, discovers the value that the townspeople place on their simple way of life, their mountain pride and their indomitable spirit. Filmed in the majestic Smoky Mountains of Tennessee, this captivating production also stars Tyne Daly and Tess Harper.

Muscular bodies take center stage at Fort Benning championship

Brian R. Voller

Paula Lebov shows off the muscular physique that won her the lightweight women's division, the overall winner award and the title of Ms. Fort Benning during the Fort Benning Open Bodybuilding championship conducted Saturday at the Main NCO Club. Lebov hasn't competed in a bodybuilding competition for five years, but her regular workouts in both muscle strength and cardiovascular training helped her win the competition.

Tiny swim suits and oiled-up muscles were the main attractions at the 1995 Fort Benning Open Bodybuilding Championship conducted by the Sports office Saturday at the Main NCO club.

The night competition was combined with both military and civilian entertainers who performed their acts during the intermissions. Some of the night's entertainment included the Officers' Club's "Hot Steppers"; Ms. Florida Fitness Leisha Dillard; Mike Russel, a professional bodybuilder who did a guest routine; and the Gold's Gym aerobics team.

Randy Watson and Paula Lebov took home both the overall winner prizes and the Mr. and Ms. Fort Benning titles.

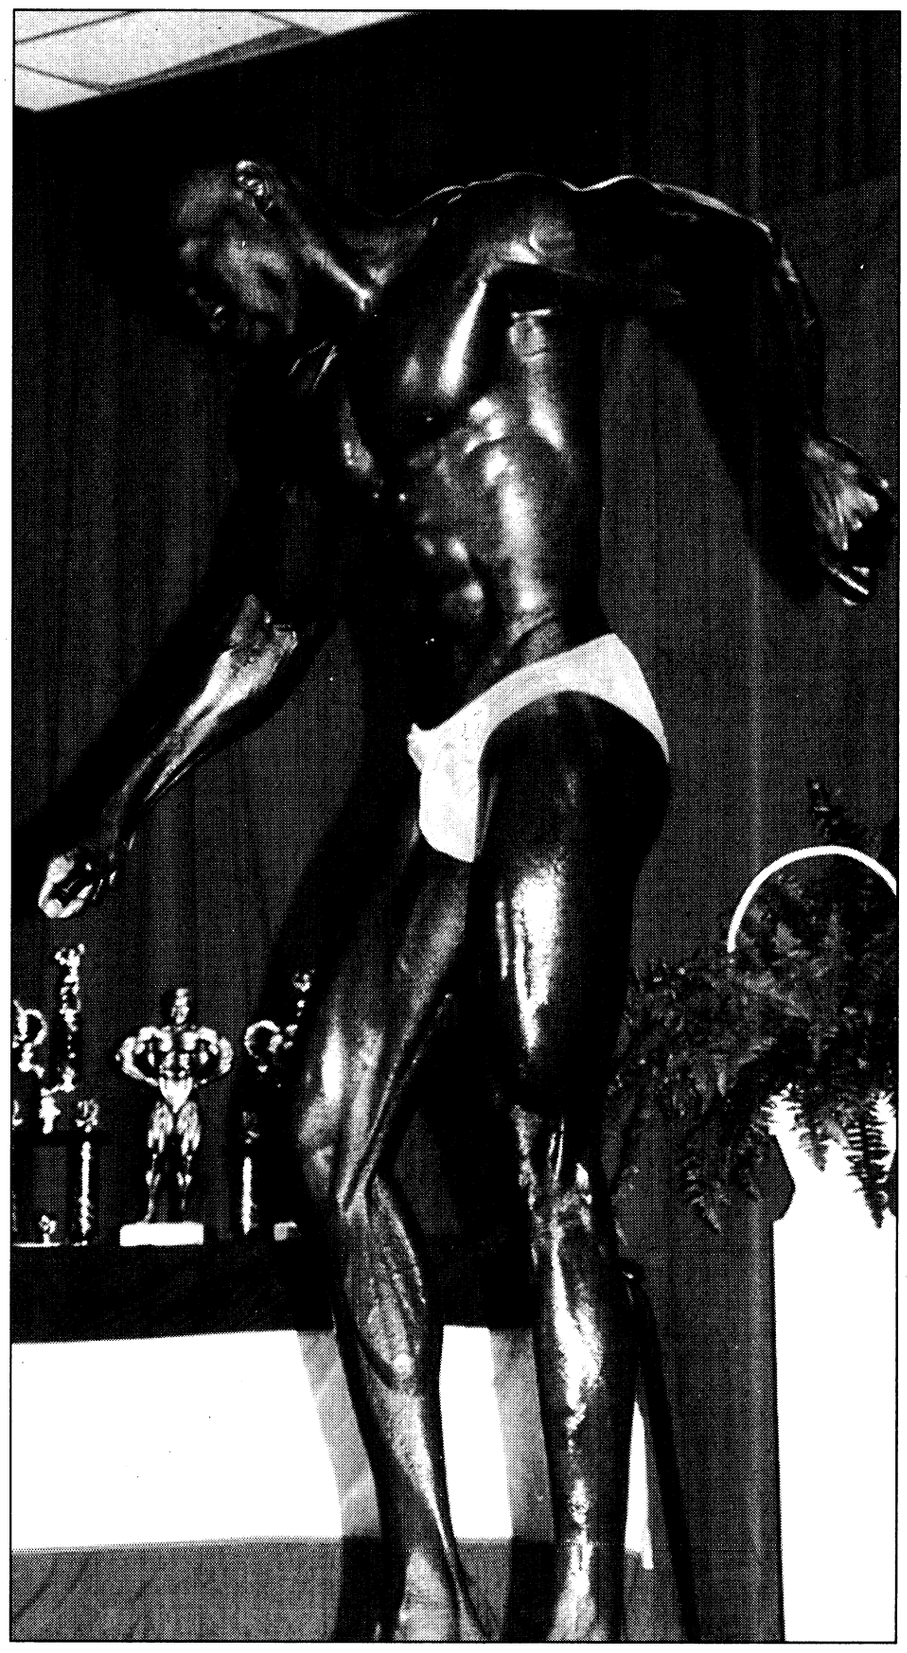
After "The Hot Steppers" demonstration started the show, the competition began as all of the bodybuilding competitors took the stage to give the audience a sneak peek at the night's competition.

From there the lightweight women's competition began with a pose down between Katherine Plouder and Lebov. Lebov took the 125-pound-and-up category to start her list of awards for the night.

Lebov said it had been years since she last competed and that she didn't initially plan on being a competitive bodybuilder.

"I was only in one other show, and that was five years ago," Lebov said. "I started weight training in college as more of a stress reliever, and my body responded real nicely to the weight training. I got turned on by it, so I decided to become competitive."

In preparation for the competition, Lebov said she worked out with weights and did cardiovascular training.



"I train one time during the day with the weights five days a week," Lebov said. "That includes doing cardiovascular training two times a day."

The women's heavyweight competition followed, and it brought to the stage Denise Marshall in her first competition and the winner of the weight class, Christy Mitchell, who also took the award for best posing routine.

Mitchell responded with a different style of training than most bodybuilders.

After the first intermission, the men's competition started with the lightweight division. John Frazer took the weight class, beating out Ken Starks. Frazer also finished the competition with the best posing routine award.

The men's middleweight division followed the lightweights. Watson took the stage and beat out French Noe to take the weight class.

Brian R. Voller

Mr. Fort Benning, middleweight winner and overall men's winner Randy Watson performs his winning routine.

Watson said years of watching other people compete in bodybuilding competitions made him want to start competing.

"I've been competing for about five years on the circuit," Watson said. "Before I started competing I went to a lot of shows, and I said to myself, 'I can do that.'"

After the guest poser performed during an intermission, the competition moved on to the heavyweight category. Coley Reeves finished in first place, followed by Jimmy Watkins in second and Jameel Wahid in third. Reeves also took the top spot in the men's master's division in which he was the only competitor.

For the male and female pose down, it was clear that the more than 100 people in the audience had their favorites and that the judges agreed, giving, Lebov and Watson the titles as Mr. and Ms. Fort Benning.

The master of ceremonies for the competition was Leon Johnson, who said the quality of the competition was much better than past competitions.

"It was a great show; this was one of the best shows we've ever had here at Fort Benning," Johnson said. "The competitors were really high quality — we didn't get a lot of quantity, but they had great quality and they gave us more than our money's worth."

USAMU zeros weapons

By Marlene Tikal
USAMU Public Affairs Office

Whether a sure shot or not, hunters on Fort Benning stand a lot better chance of "bagging the big one" with a properly zeroed weapon.

Realizing the need, soldiers of the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit provided the service by hosting Hunter's Zero Day Oct. 1 and 14.

The purpose of the event is to prepare the more than 800 hunters registered on the installation for the opening of deer season Saturday, said Sgt. 1st Class Michael Delk, Hunter's Zero Day organizer.

Aid provided hunters during this annual event is twofold.

Not only are weapons zeroed, but they are also inspected upon request by USAMU gunsmiths to ensure the weapon's safety.

"Believe it or not," said gunsmith Sgt. Robert Dewitt, "the biggest safety problem we see is people using the wrong caliber ammunition for their weapon."

Amazing as it may sound, according to Dewitt, it's easy for hunters to sometime lose track of their ammunition and try to use the wrong round in the wrong weapon.

"The reason being," Dewitt said, "is that most hunters have several weapons. Occasionally, they use ammunition belonging to another weapon."

For some people, it's an easy mistake that can lead to big problems, the biggest being that the wrong caliber round can get lodged in the barrel and cause the weapon to explode.

"When that happens, people get hurt — and that's the main thing we want to prevent," Dewitt said.

And that's something hunters are all for — ensuring they can enjoy their spot with a minimum safety risk.

Capt. Bobby Dodd of the 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment, has been hunting on Fort Benning for three years now.

Even though this is the first time Dodd has taken advantage of Hunter's Zero Day, he said he believes USAMU soldiers provide an excellent opportunity through the event.

"These soldiers are the experts," he said. "Not only do they ensure the weapons hunters take to the field are safe, but they also ensure they are accurate. And that I'm sure is going to make me a better hunter this year."

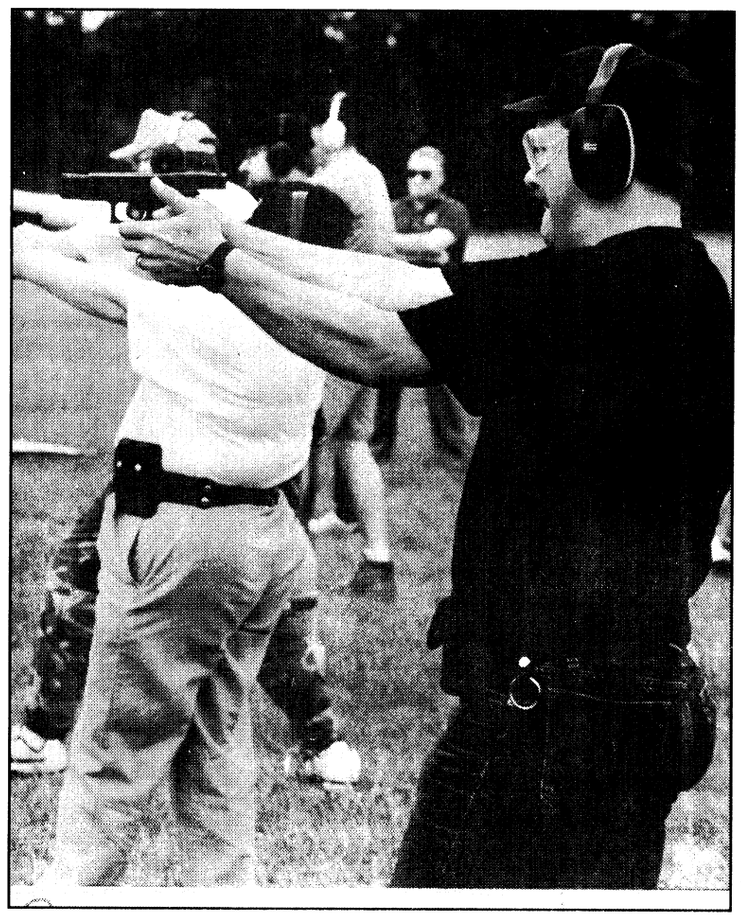
Those hunters who have not had their weapons zeroed for this season can still do so through the Fort Benning Rifle and Pistol Club. For information, call 689-3371.

Military, civilians receive weapons instruction at Pistol School

By Brian R. Voller
Bayonet staff writer

The Fort Benning Rifle and Pistol Club, in conjunction with Glock Inc., conducted a three-day firearms instructor workshop Oct. 10 to 13 at English Range. The course was designed to help law enforcement officials and concerned civilian and military personnel improve their skills with a 9mm pistol and learn how to become qualified armorers.

"This is really two courses combined into one," said Charles T. Miller, firearms instructor. "The first part of the course was the armorers' course; that was a one-day preventative maintenance course.



"The course is designed to be used as a familiarization with the pistol. We teach techniques that we feel are the best techniques for use with the pistol."

The armorers' portion of the course included an overview of the pistol, which informed attendees of the differences between the automatic pistol and the revolver. It also gave lessons on proper care of the weapon and lessons on reloading, clearing stoppages and the proper way to engage multiple targets.

The second day of the workshop was designed to improve the firers' skills during live firing. Miller taught the students different firing positions, such the kneeling position. He also instructed the students in different real-world applications including ultraclose firing techniques.

"I think the most important thing the students get from this class is being able to safely and efficiently operate and fire the pistol," Miller said. "We try to show the simplest techniques to use with the pistol, but they're the best techniques and the most effective. We don't try to get fancy — there's nothing fancy about it."

The final day of the workshop included how to deal with stress while firing and how to instruct other people in the use of the 9mm. The firers also qualified with the pistol.

Brian R. Voller

William Danforth practices rapid fire techniques during the three-day firearms instructor workshop.

"The course is mainly designed for law enforcement people or for firearms instructors, the idea being to supply a department with the training for their firearms instructor so that the department knows how to use the pistol," Miller said.

"A lot of departments changed from a revolver to the semi-automatic pistol, and they really have no idea on how to use them." he said. "We try to show them the proper way to use the pistol safely."

Morris Lewark, a civilian taking the course, said he enjoyed the class because of the variety of skills taught and the thoroughness of the whole course.

"I like how this course was run," Lewark said. "I get a feeling of thoroughness because of the variety of lessons being taught. The instructor teaches a lot of information in a very general way so it's all easy to retain."

Dana Farley, a member of the Military Police Activity, said he was impressed the timeliness of the instruction and the caliber of people taking the course.

"So far, the training has been outstanding," Farley said. "The instruction is good, and it's really up to date. I also like the caliber of people taking the course. There are people from the military, people from the department of corrections and the Columbus police force."

Jim Graham, manager of the Rifle and Pistol Club, said the best advantage of this course is that it helps instruct people in the safest techniques in using the 9mm.

"There are a lot of people out there just doing this," Graham said. "So what we bring to Fort Benning with this course is quality instruction. The course is a very well-thought-of course, and it is beneficial to every one who takes it."

Equipment key to success in bass fishing

By Earl Bentz and Steve Price
Outboard Marine Corporation

Veteran bass tournament pro Mickey Bruce recently finished third in the 1995 Bass Masters Classic, his ninth appearance in the annual world championship of bass fishing, and to him the key to qualifying for the prestigious event has been equipment dependability.

"When I'm in a tournament my success depends on being able to travel anywhere on a lake I need to go to catch fish," Bruce said. "With the competition as close as it is today, one bad tournament can keep you out of the championship."

Bruce said casual observers to bass fishing have little understanding of the stress and strain professional equipment must endure.

"It isn't unusual to put 500 miles on a boat and outboard during a week-long tournament," Bruce said, "especially on some of the big lakes we fish.

This past year in national competition was one of Bruce's best, in which he recorded a win in one national event and a runner-up finish in another. His prize winnings were more than $80,000.

"My outboard started every single time I turned the key, and my trolling motor never missed a beat," Bruce said. "but I can name anglers in each of the 12 tournaments I fished who had problems, and it cost them dearly.

"The problem is that if you're more than about 15 minutes late for a weigh-in, you forfeit that day's catch, and losing just one day can eventually keep you out of the championship. It happens to someone every year."

ask the judge

Staff Judge Advocate's Office

Q: I have just transferred to Fort Benning, and I am looking for a property in town. I have heard many stories about landlords who refuse to return your security deposit when you move. I have also heard that it is not uncommon for landlords to charge you more than your security deposit to repair so-called damages to property.

How can I best protect myself from these landlords?

A: The best way to protect yourself from these types of problems is to thoroughly document all the pre-existing damage to the rental property before you move in.

Georgia law requires that landlords who own more than ten units or are professional property managers conduct a pre-move inspection to determine if the rental property is in any way damaged. Usually, the landlord will simply give you a standard form, tell you to list any damages and ask you to return the list to the leasing office.

A word of advice: FILL OUT THE FORM! Far too many tenants do not take the time to properly complete the form and return it to the landlord.

Consequently, when the landlord withholds the security deposit for "damages" to the property after you move out, there is no way to dispute the claim, other than to pit your word against his or hers.

If you take the time to thoroughly inspect the property and fill out the form, it could save you an enormous amount of trouble down the road. You may also want to take pictures of or video tape the property documenting pre-existing damage. Make sure you keep a copy of the form and have the landlord sign your copy.

Once you move out of the property, the landlord must conduct an inspection within three business days and compile a comprehensive list of damages that he or she plans to offset with your security deposit. The landlord may only charge you for damages, beyond normal wear and tear, that did not exist when you moved in.

As the former tenant, you have the right to inspect the property within five business days of termination to determine if is accurate. If the list is not accurate, you must write a statement to that effect and submit it to the landlord immediately.

Assuming the property is substantially in the same shape as when you moved in, the landlord must return your deposit within 30 days. A completed pre-move inspection sheet helps prevent charges for damage that existed prior to your occupancy.

In Georgia, a detailed inspection sheet signed by both you and the landlord is conclusive proof as to the condition of the property at the time you moved in.

But what do you do if the landlord still will not return your security deposit, despite your "conclusive" proof? If the landlord still refuses to return your security deposit, or, worse, charges you more than your security deposit, to repair pre-existing damage to the property, you may file a suit in small-claims court to recover your money.

Georgia law allows you to recover three times the amount of the security deposit if it is determined by the judge that any portion of the security deposit was wrongfully withheld.

If you decide that this course of action is necessary, you should make an appointment with an attorney in the Legal Assistance Division of the Office of the Staff Judge Advocate to discuss the steps needed to represent yourself in this matter. You may make an appointment by calling 545-3281 or 545-3282 on Fridays between 8:30 a.m. and 4:30 p.m.

Lupus widespread but relatively unknown

Lupus Foundation of America Inc.

Stopping smoking, using condoms, exercising or eating a proper diet may prevent some diseases — but not lupus.

Lupus is a chronic autoimmune disease that can affect virtually any organ in the body.

The immune system of a person with lupus produces antibodies that attack healthy tissue instead of protecting it against foreign invaders such as infection and viruses.

More people have lupus than AIDS, cerebral palsy, multiple sclerosis, sickle-cell anemia and cystic fibrosis combined.

Lupus affects 1.42 million people in the United States; that's one out of every 185 Americans. Yet lupus is not as well known as any one of these diseases.

The majority of those affected by lupus are adult women. Current statistics indicate that lupus affects adult women 10-15 times more frequently than men, and numbers are greater among African Americans and Latinos.

The Lupus Foundation of America is the largest voluntary organization in the world dedicated to providing patient services and supports lupus education and research to find the cause of and cure for lupus.

Education is the key. For more information about lupus please contact the Columbus Georgia Chapter LFA, Inc. (706) 571-8950.

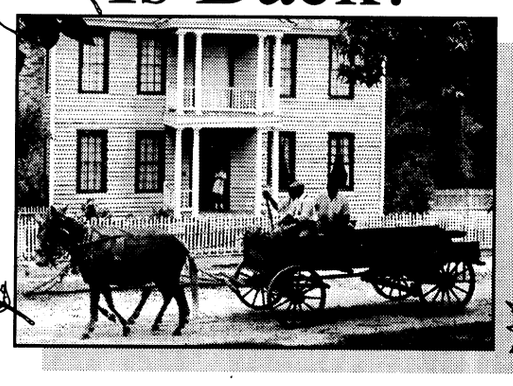
"We've got something to smile about."

We're all smiles at NovaCare. Although working for an industry leader is definitely something to sing about...watching your patient improve can really make your heart fill with joy. Just ask Michael.

"As a therapist, there are certain things I expect to get back from the job. Things like gratification. A sense of achievement. Seeing a patient smile with their eyes. Luckily, I get all of this and more with Novacare. I've worked in other environments, but never seen a group of people who are collectively more dedicated than the professionals at NovaCare. You may wonder why smiles are so important to me. The answer is simple. It's the reason I became a therapist in the first place."



You'll smile about our compensation package, too. At Novacare, we realize that as a therapist, you have a lot of choices. That's why we strive to become the right choice for you. We'll make it worth your while with generous vacation allowances, solidly competitive salaries, and medical benefits that begin when you do.

To find out more about current opportunities in AL, GA, SC or TN, simply call Carla Wright at 1-800-394-5997. For FL, KY, LA or MS, call Keith Frein at 1-800-633-0880. EOE.

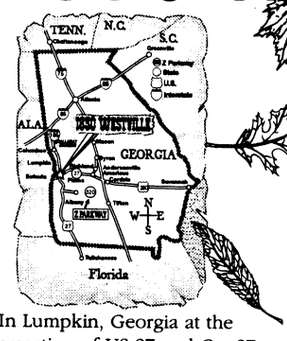
The Village Fair Is Back!

Come Any Way You Can.



The Fair Of 1850

October 12-November 12
Fun for the whole family.

Just down the road a little village is celebrating the season in a very special way. Historic 1850 Westville is filling the month with demonstrations of harvest time activities from long ago. There will be cane grinding and syrup-making and the village craftsmen and artisans will be stocking their shelves for the winter. Plus, the last remaining antebellum animal powered cotton gin will be in operation at various times. It's authentic Westville's Fair of 1850. Bring the whole family. You'll love all you learn.

$1.00 OFF COUPON
Coupon good for $1.00 off regular Adult and Senior admission at 1850 Westville during the Fair of 1850. Limit one coupon per person.

1850 WESTVILLE
History Comes Alive

In Lumpkin, Georgia at the intersection of US 27 and Ga. 27

1850 Westville is a private, non-profit educational museum.
Open 10am-5pm daily and 1pm-5pm on Sunday.
Closed on most Mondays.
Admission is $7 for adults, $6 for senior citizens and military and $3 for students.
For group rates and additional information, call (912)838-6310.

Energy

Waste not, want not

Directorate of Public Works Energy Branch

The first step in any major effort to conserve energy is to ensure the right attitude toward energy consumption within the community.

"Conserving energy does not mean depriving yourself of comforts and conveniences," said Mark Fincher, chief of the Energy Branch, Directorate of Public Works. "It simply means guarding against waste; being aware of the inefficient ways electricity, gas and water can be used; and doing something about it."

Fort Benning has 4,082 family housing units, 3,428 buildings and about 20 million square feet of heated and air-conditioned space. Electricity for heating and cooling a single family housing unit can cost from $600 to $2,400 in a year, depending upon the type of equipment used, the construction of the house and the amount of care each resident takes to conserve energy, Fincher said.

Water heaters

Water heating accounts for about 20 percent of the energy used in a home. An electric water heater for a family of four costs about $315 to operate each year. Because water heaters consume such a large percentage of household energy, they provide a great opportunity to cut energy waste.

Water heated above 120 degrees not only wastes energy but is also considered a safety hazard in that it can burn or scald. Fincher said DPW Preventive Maintenance personnel can check the water temperature in housing units to ensure it isn't set too high.

Clothes washers

Washing clothes uses the largest amount of hot water, Fincher said. Energy use can be cut substantially by using cold water when possible along with washing full loads and using short cycles. This saves time and money and is also easier on fabrics, he said.

Dishwashers

Dishwashers also use a large amount of hot water — about 15 gallons per load. Fincher suggested filling the dishwasher as full as possible without blocking the spray arm, making sure dishes have been scraped and rinsed well. This, he said, will make using the rinse and hold cycle unnecessary; that cycle in itself uses three to seven gallons of hot water.

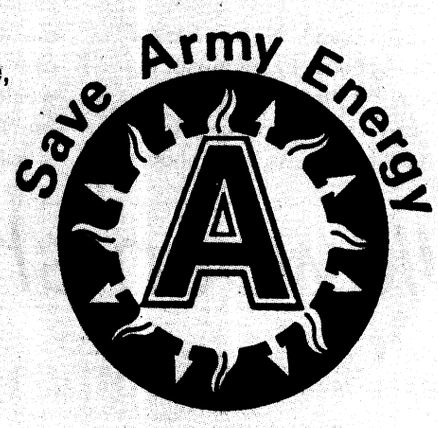
If you can, Fincher said, try to use the dishwasher once a day, as this will generally use less hot water than it takes to wash dishes by hand three times a day.

Bathroom water consumption

Hot water used in the bathroom can also be lessened, Fincher said. Taking a shower rather than a bath is more energy efficient. Don't leave water running while you're shaving or brushing your teeth.

Fix those drips

Dripping faucets and leaky pipes also waste water. A faucet dripping at a rate of 90 drops per minute wastes about 1,000 gallons of water annually.



Usually this problem can be corrected simply by replacing a washer. Washers are issued at Self Help, Building 385, Vibbert Avenue. If this does not do the trick, Fincher said, DPW Preventive Maintenance can help. Broken water lines and water heaters should be reported to the Work Order Section at 545-2135.

These are only a few solutions to consider when planning your new energy-saving strategies. "Each of us living or working on post has an obligation to practice energy saving in our day-to-day activities," Fincher said. "As a team, we can achieve our energy goals."

For more information about any energy-related subjects, call the Energy Branch at 545-4652 or 545-7928.

Energy awareness week saving ideas for winter

- Set thermostats at a reasonable temperature; the standard is 78 degrees in the summer and 68 degrees in the winter.
- Turn off unnecessary lights and appliances.
- Change the filters in heating and air-conditioning units. This also has the added benefit of improving air quality for breathing.
- When possible, wash clothes in cold water instead of hot to reduce water-heating usage.

- Running only a full dishwasher can cut back on hot water usage because it won't be used as often. Don't forget to scrape dishes as clean as possible prior to washing to avoid re-rinsing dishes.
- Be frugal with running water while brushing teeth or shaving. Turn water off if it's not being used.

FRIGHT NIGHT

Post children prepare to trick or treat

Infantry Branch Safety Office

Halloween trick or treating will be in effect from 6 to 8 p.m. Tuesday. This is the only day trick or treating is permitted.

Activities for trick or treating are limited to children under 13 years old. Pre-school children must be accompanied by an older person (14 years or older).

Limit trick or treating only to the housing area in which the participants reside, and approach only residences with lighted entry ways.

Observe all basic safety precautions. Ensure children carry flashlights after dark. If a child carries a pumpkin, it should be lighted with a battery device, not a candle.

Never let your child eat anything until you have inspected the treats. Martin Army Community Hospital's Radiology Department will be X-raying candy from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m. Tuesday as a free service. Parents should be advised that only metallic objects can be identified on X-ray.

For more information about candy X-raying, call 544-3409 or 544-3402.

Ethnic observances mark Native American Month

By Lisa M. Hibbert
Bayonet staff writer

November is Native American Month, and the Equal Opportunity Office is promoting several special ethnic observances designed to enhance cross-cultural awareness among all soldiers, civilians and their families.

Events for the month are as follows:

The Fort Benning Equal Opportunity Office will host a Native American Month luncheon Nov. 9 at the Main NCO Club from 11:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. Russell Begaye, linguist, former research assistant and Indian law and history instructor at the University of California at Los Angeles, will be the guest speaker. Begaye is currently director of the Home Mission Board.

For more information, call Sgt. 1st Class Beverly Riley at 545-3196.

The Infantry Training Brigade will sponsor a luncheon at the Sand Hill NCO Club Nov. 17 from 11:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. The guest speaker will be Christopher Hamilton, Fort Benning archeologist, Environmental Management Division, DPW. For more information, call Sgt. 1st Class Paul Horton at 544-9656.

Patch Pre-School will have a Native American Thanksgiving Day Fest Nov. 20 and 21. The students will study Native American culture with hands on activities, books and crafts. Children will help prepare a meal for themselves and their parents and will dress up as pilgrims and Native Americans. They will also be making Harvest bags and headbands.

For more information, call Pat Finley at 687-2404.

Youth Services will sponsor a drawing contest for children ages 6 to 12 in honor of Native American Month. All art must be submitted no later than Nov. 15 to be eligible. Winners will be announced Nov. 22.

For more information, call Qunitella Thorn at 545-7945.

Static displays will be set up at Uchee Creek, Infantry Hall and various units on post.

Army prepares for 21st century with advanced warfighting experiments

By April N. Olsen
USAIC Public Affairs Office

In an attempt to build the most lethal, survivable and cost-effective force for the 21st century, the Army is staging another installment of Advanced Warfighting Experiments Nov. 4-23 at the Joint Readiness Training Center, Fort Polk, La.

Fort Benning's Dismounted Battlespace Battle Lab is responsible for the overall planning and conduct of the AWE, dubbed Warrior Focus.

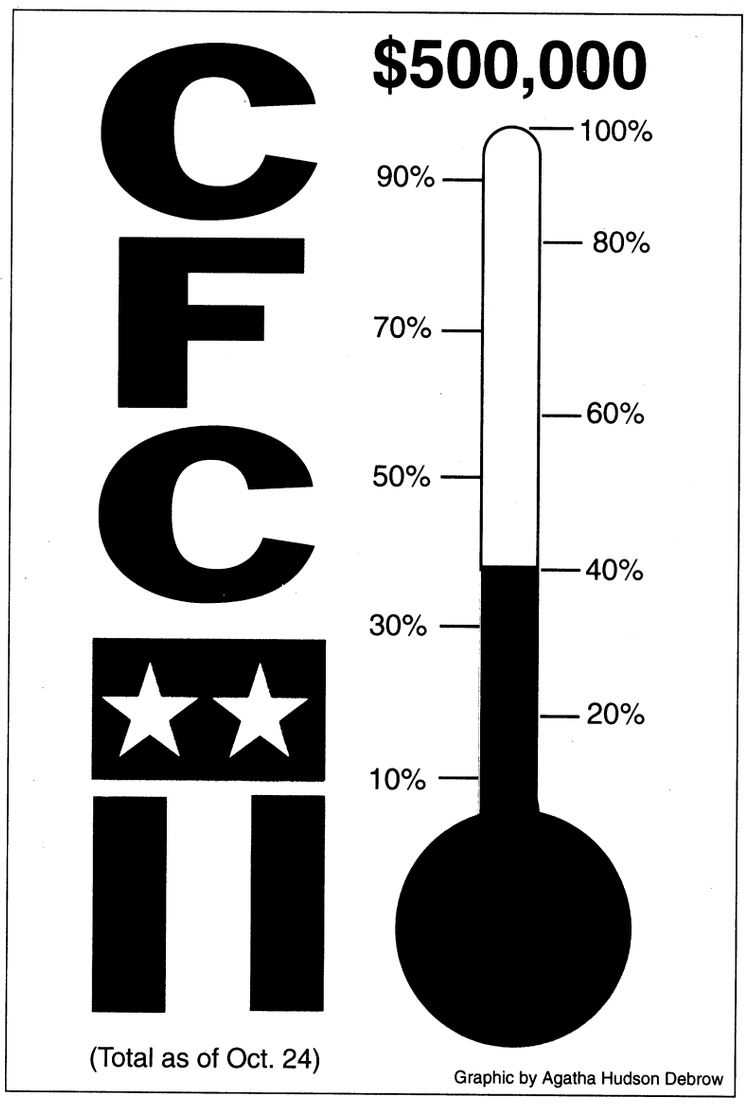
Training and Doctrine Command and Forces Command will conduct Warrior Focus in order to examine the battlefield impacts of digital communication and "Own the Night" capabilities on the Battlefield Operating Systems.

According to an exercise directive released by DBBL, Warrior Focus will determine whether or not increases in lethality, survivability and operating tempo will result from integrating new technologies and equipment into a digitized force.

Army Battle Labs are trying to harness the power of information by linking soldiers, equipment and command and control systems across the breadth and depth of the battlefield.

The directive stated the labs will try to determine if digital linkages will increase the capability of units to mass greater combat power more quickly than an opponent and at the same time be more dispersed increasing their survivability.

More accurate access to intelligence, through digital linkages, will provide units at all levels a better idea as to where the enemy is and what his capabilities are



DBBL expects digital linkages, coupled with enhanced OTN capabilities, to help get direct and indirect fires on the target more rapidly.

More accurate access to intelligence, through digital linkages, will provide units at all levels a better idea as to where the enemy is and what his capabilities are, lessening the vulnerability of friendly forces and increasing the capability to apply greater combat power at the decisive place and time.

In a meeting called to explain his strategic plan for TRADOC, Gen. William W. Hartzog, TRADOC commander, said experiences at the National Training Center demonstrate that 60 percent of information a commander bases a decision on comes from personal observation or field reports. Maps, battle plans and other printed material provide another 20 percent. The final 20 percent is personal intuition, he said.

Today, commanders can be sure of where 50 percent of their soldiers are and where

Is Oct. 31 pagan or partytime?

By Shannon Day
Special to The Bayonet©

commentary

It truly amazes me how much our popular present-day holidays have lost their original meaning. Easter, Christmas and especially Halloween are the big ones.

As a child, I remember coloring eggs while anticipating Peter Cottontail's arrival and hoping I would get more candy than my little sister. After all, I was older and bigger.

Even amidst my selfish thoughts, I still knew what Easter was all about — the crucifixion and resurrection of Jesus Christ. It is a religious holiday we celebrated by going to a sunrise service at our church.

Let's move on to the other big Christian holiday, Christmas. How did the birth of Jesus ever turn into a celebration in which some obese geriatric squeezes himself down a little chimney to give us presents? I remember being very stressed as a child because I was afraid Santa would get burned and wouldn't leave any gifts. Although presents were my main concern, I do remember freezing my bare feet every Christmas Eve when we all went outside to look for the Christmas Star. I knew the real meaning of that holiday also.

This brings me to Halloween. What is this holiday all about anyway? Why do we dress our kids up like monsters and send them out to beg for candy? What are its origins, and why do we still observe it?

I decided to ask around. No one I asked here knows. Neither does my family or my history professor. "It used to be called All Hallow's Eve, and it was an evening for people to ward off evil spirits," was about the best answer I could get.

I consulted my trusty set of Britannica encyclopedias. They were only a little more helpful.

According to Britannica, Oct. 31 coincided with the Celtic festival of Sambain in ancient England and Ireland. It was also the eve of the new year in Celtic and Anglo-Saxon times.

Huge bonfires were set on hilltops to ward away evil spirits. (I don't know about you, but if I thought I was going to be visited by an evil spirit, the last thing I would do is light a big fire to show it the way.)

Dead souls were supposed to revisit their homes on this day. (If I thought any of my dead relatives were going to show up for dinner, I would go out to eat — preferably in another state.)

On this day, the help of the devil was actually sought to divine the fate of marriages, luck, health and death.

All of this coincided with the Christian festival of All Hallow's Eve. The pagan observances began to have an influence on the festival until Halloween finally developed into a secular observance. It no longer had a religious connection.

Immigrants introduced many Halloween customs to America in the late 19th century — mainly young men breaking windows, overturning sheds and outhouses. (Gross, who would want to knock over a port-a-potty for fun?)

At this point, the occasion somehow developed into an observance by small children. Parents began to dress them in costumes and go from door to door demanding a trick or a treat.

So why are we still celebrating Halloween? Certainly not to ward off evil spirits. The only evil spirits parents have to worry about today are those that hide broken glass and needles in the candy they send their kids out to beg for.

My personal theory is that it is a celebration for the parents. I know that just once a year I enjoy seeing my son dressed up as the little demon he so reminds me of after he has been screaming in the check-out line at the Commissary for 25 minutes.

Plus, I get to confiscate my share of the plunder when he gets home. Why not? My mom used to do it to us. As soon as the Snickers or Butterfingers came out of our bag, they went into Mom's secret sweets stash. We never saw them again.

Neighborhood Halloween parties can be a safer option. Fall lends itself to some great party games. My personal favorite is where the parents put a bunch of apples in a big tub of water and watch their children try to fish one out with their teeth. Or there is the one we always played at parties when I was a child. Suspend several powdered doughnuts by strings from a tree branch. Line the kids up, and see who can eat theirs first without using their hands or letting it drop to the ground. Who is really being entertained here?

Although I am no closer to the meaning of Halloween as we know it, at least I am done with this article. Now I can finish my son's Halloween costume.

Halloween should be safe and fun

By Lori Egan
Bayonet staff writer

commentary

What exactly is the significance of Halloween? Why do we celebrate it? I don't know — we've always done it.

So just because we've always done it means we need to continue with the celebration? That follows the same logic that my mother never agreed with; which is, if someone jumps off a bridge, are you going to follow? I used to hate hearing her say that when I was child, but I guess I listened.

Halloween has progressively gotten worse and worse as the years go by. When I was a child, hooliganism was a problem but not the problem it is today.

Today parents need to worry about drug-laced candy, drive-by shootings and other horrors.

Today we tell our children not to talk to strangers and not to take candy from strangers. We start telling them when they are babies and continue to talk to them about the danger of a stranger taking them, offering them candy in order to lure them into a trap of some sort.

Why is it on one day we forget the rules and the risks? Why do we allow our children to walk up and down the streets in costumes, knock on doors and ask for candy?

Some parents have told me that the risk is mitigated because we live on an Army post and because they always accompany their children.

I've been told by some parents that they allow their children to trick or treat only in their own neighborhood.

As a child, my brothers and sisters were only allowed to trick or treat in our own neighborhood and only go to the houses where we knew the people. It is amazing how big our neighborhood became and how many people we knew on Halloween.

My memories of Halloween include how cute we looked in the Halloween costumes but how cold it was when we went out to trick or treat.

Another thing I remember is bigger kids stealing my little sister's bag of candy when we were finally old enough to go out without mom.

And then were the times when we had to run from kids who were throwing eggs and rotten tomatoes at cars (and anything else that struck their fancy) and toilet papering houses.

I also remember the trouble I got into when I came home with a dozen eggs purchased for the Halloween festivities. Mom confiscated them for Sunday's breakfast and grounded me.

The next year I had to stay in and answer the door, ooh and aah over the costumes and put up with my friends knocking and running.

My best memories of Halloween are from when I was in grade school. We had costume parades, dunked for apples and played games.

My husband and I have decided to let our daughter pass out the candy as the neighborhood children come and ring the bell. This is what our family tradition will be while she is still a preschooler. She won't be missing out on any of the candy because she'll be doling it out, piece by piece. Last year she ate as much as she handed out. And she didn't miss out on anything.

After she reaches grade school, we'll have Halloween parties for her friends at our house. There will be pumpkin decorating, bobbing for apples and maybe even a costume contest.

And we won't have the worry of wondering where our child is and whether or not someone is giving her candy laced with some hallucinogen or an apple with a razor blade.

Let the Halloween party continue as is

USAIC Public Affairs Office

commentary

What is in question here? Halloween? For those people who think this is some sort of an evil or bad holiday, get over it!

I can remember dressing up for Halloween and going door to door gathering candy for hours upon hours. Those are great memories. So where's the problem?

I think children should be able to keep with the long tradition of getting candy. When did it start? I don't know. But I do know as a child I loved the month of October just because of Halloween.

Just because this holiday may involve witches and devils doesn't mean people are worshiping the devil. Hey, it's a costume, not a human sacrifice to the devil.

Nor does it mean the people celebrating are devil worshipers.

It just so happens that ghosts, ghouls and devils conjure up scary thoughts. That is the whole idea in my mind — have fun and be scary.

You know what really gets me? Where were all these people 15 years ago when I was younger? There were never any of these complaints back then.

Why all of a sudden is there such a worry about devil worshiping? Nothing against having religion in your life, but it's usually those highly religious types who make all this fuss. Again I say, get a life!

To me, those people are closed-minded and have no right to tell other people what to do. If they don't want their children to celebrate Halloween, fine. But keep your opinions to yourself — the millions of us who enjoy this holiday are tired of hearing you. Maybe if you tried to incorporate Halloween into your lives, you might actually like it. Halloween can be scary and fun.

Now that I'm a little older (though I may not act like it), I understand the dangers of the yearly ritual. But, the child in me says, oh well, go ahead and get some!

Parents worry about the dangers of candy that's been tampered with or the chance of their child being kidnapped. That is truly understandable. But, if parents would take the proper precautions, these worries may be put to ease.

I say go out with the kids and check the candy. This also allows you to protect the children from strangers, and it gives families an opportunity to spend more time together. Considering the Army life, this may be a welcome night to enjoy.

This is a time when the child inside all of us can come out and be seen, or not seen, depending on how good your costume is.

Halloween is a most important holiday. It has a different meaning for everyone. For me, it brings back memories of trick or treating with my family. That is something that I really miss because my family is hardly ever together. But, I still have my memories.

Drug-free campaign kicks off in style

Representatives from post, area begin observance

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet©

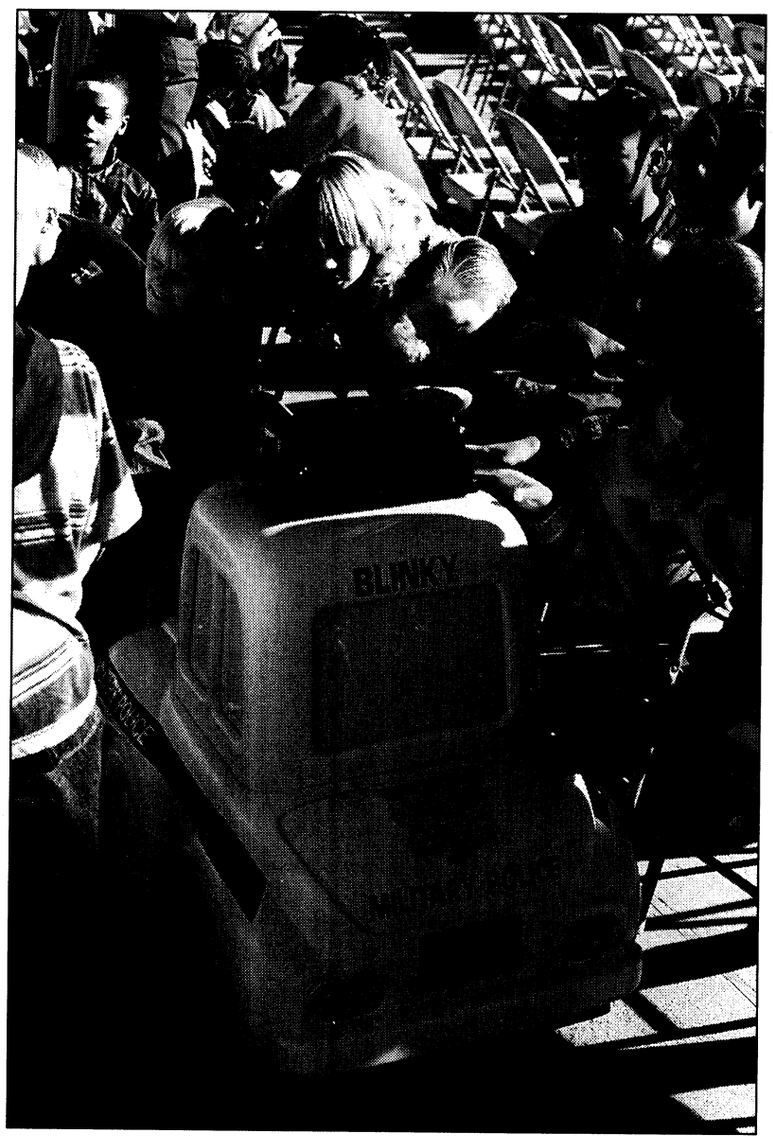
The 1995 Red Ribbon campaign, a national anti-drug educational effort, kicked off Monday at the grand staircase of the Columbus Riverwalk.

The event, sponsored in part by Fort Benning's Alcohol and Drug Abuse Prevention and Control Program, was attended by Fort Benning personnel, including Al Curry, ADAPCP education coordinator; Sgt. 1st Class Darryel Johnson, ADAPCP primary instructor; McGruff the Crime Dog; Provost Marshall Col. Ronnie D. Alton; and Staff Sgt. William Meeks of the Physical Security office of the Directorate of Public Safety, who delighted the crowd with "Blinky," a comical remote controlled Military Police car complete with blinking eyes, flashing lights and siren.

Both McGruff the Crime Dog and Blinky were provided courtesy of DPS.

On behalf of Maj. Gen. John W. Hendrix, Fort Benning commanding general, Alton expressed his enthusiasm for the teamwork displayed by Fort Benning, Columbus and Phenix City in the campaign against illegal drug use.

"This is a significant occasion and one that we in law enforcement and the military hold in high esteem," Alton said. "For the tri-community of Columbus, Phenix City and Fort Benning, the Red Ribbon campaign is symbolic of unity and a desire to make these communities drug free."



The Red Ribbon campaign runs through Tuesday on Fort Benning. The goal of the campaign is the promotion of drug-free, healthy lifestyles for individuals, families and communities, Curry said.

The Red Ribbon campaign was started in 1985 after Enrique Camarena, an agent with the U.S. Drug Enforcement Agency, was tortured to death by drug traffickers in Mexico. According to Curry, the red ribbon began to be used to symbolize efforts to reduce the demand for and use of illegal drugs.

Residents of all communities are encouraged to wear a red ribbon on their clothing or to tie one to their automobile antennas as a symbol of their drug-free commitment, he said.

"We are proud that Fort Benning can work closely with Columbus and Phenix City to fight drug abuse," Curry said.

"This is the perfect opportunity for post residents to demonstrate their commitments to drug-free lifestyles. Illegal drugs are not just in the civilian community — they are everywhere."

Academy rep to visit post

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet©

Capt. James Brandon of the U.S. Military Academy at West Point will be on post today to give an information briefing about the U.S. Military Academy at West Point and the U.S. Military Academy Preparatory School from 9 a.m. to noon in Infantry Hall's Classroom 5.

According to Elaine Livingston, chief of the staff, education and training branch of the Army Education Office, Brandon will be available after the briefing to talk with interested soldiers and answer questions. Brochures on both schools will also be available, she said.

Livingston said the prep school, located at Fort Monmouth, N.J., is responsible for the largest number of admissions to the Military Academy at West Point.

The preparatory school provides appropriate academic, military and physical training for entry into the academy and includes an intensive review of mathematics and English and an introduction to computer literacy.

To be eligible for admission, prospective candidates must be unmarried U.S. citizens with no legal obligation to support dependents. In addition, they must be high school graduates and must not be 21 years of age prior to July 1 of the year entering the prep school.

Candidates should also be of high moral character and have a sincere interest in attending West Point and becoming an Army officer, Livingston said.

She encourages all soldiers who have demonstrated leadership in the ranks and who have good academic performance in a college preparatory high school curriculum who desire to further their education and become Army officers to attend the briefing.

For more information, contact Livingston at 545-6114.

Social Security, SSI benefits increase

Social Security Administration

Social security commissioner Shirley S. Chater announced that Social Security and Supplemental Security Income benefits will increase 2.6 percent, beginning with the payments that Social Security beneficiaries receive Jan. 3 and SSI recipients receive Dec. 29. The automatic cost-of living adjustment is made annually.

For Social Security beneficiaries, the average monthly benefit amount for all retired workers will rise from $702 to $720. The maximum federal SSI monthly payments to an individual will rise from $458 to $470.

For a couple, the maximum federal SSI payment will rise from $687 to $705.

Social Security and SSI benefits increase automatically each year based on the rise in the Consumer Price Index for urban wage earners and clerical workers from the third quarter of one year through the corresponding period of the next. This year's increase in the CPI-W was 2.6 percent.

CID seeks info about stolen Corvette

Between Aug. 10 and 13 someone stole a 1984 purple Corvette from the parking lot adjacent to Building 4470, Harmony Church. On Aug. 16, the vehicle was found destroyed by fire in Palm Beach, Fla.

The assistance of the local community is being requested in an effort to identify and apprehend the perpetrator(s). It is requested that anyone with information concerning this incident contact the Criminal Investigation Division Office at 545-4986 or the Military Police at 545-5222.

The identity of anyone providing information will be kept in the strictest confidence.

AAFES facilities to close for upgrades

The following facilities will close on the following dates for retail point of sales cash register upgrades.

• Shoppette and Class Six, Monday, 6 p.m.

Facilities will resume normal operating hours the next day following the closing day.

Furniture issue ends

The Furnishings Management Branch, Housing Division, of the Directorate of Public Works, will no longer provide family housing type furniture to military personnel and their families.

The only exception to this policy is general officers, foreign and liaison officers, post command sergeant major and School of the Americas foreign instructor personnel.

This policy is in accordance with Army Regulation 210-50, Chapter 10. The office is open from 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., weekdays. The office is closed for lunch from noon to 12:30 p.m.

For more information, call Bob Wilson at 545-6713.

Battle Park changes admittance policy

Effective immediately, housing at Battle Park is now open to all Department of Defense civilians, nonappropriated fund employees, retired DoD civilians and military personnel.

To apply, take verification of employment or copy of identification card to Building 2621 in Soldiers' Plaza, or contact Anna Wilson at 545-3921 or Battle Park homes at 689-1282.

CGSC to be offered

The Command and General Staff Officer Course will be offered in Columbus beginning this month.

This course will be presented by instructors of the 108th Division at the Army Reserve Center on Macon Road in Columbus.

All majors and above in the active component, Reserve Component and the National Guard are eligible. Also, promotable captains are eligible if they are Combined Arms Services and Staff School graduates. This is the same course offered in residence at Fort Leavenworth, Kan.

For information, call 291-4536 and leave a message.

Loud music can get you fines on post

The post regulations regarding loud music can be found in USAIC Policy Memorandum 94-64 and Georgia Code 40-6-14.

USAIC Policy memorandum 94-64 states music should not be able to be heard more than 15 feet from a vehicle. Military personnel who violate this policy can be cited for violating Article 92, UCMJ.

All others who violate the 15-foot rule will be asked to turn their music down. Noncompliance can result in post ejection or a breach of peace violation.

According to Georgia Code 40-6-14, music that can be heard more than 100 feet from a vehicle is punishable with a $25 fine.

For more information, call 545-5915 or 4376.

Cadences needed for Jody call book

The author who compiled and edited volumes I and II of "Cadences: The Jody Call Book" is looking for new material for a third volume.

Cadences can relate to location, particular mission or world events. The author is particularly interested in any cadences relating to Operations Desert Shield and Storm, Somalia or Haiti. Cadences will not be included if they are obscene.

Either the individual contributor, unit or post will be credited for any Jodies used.

Any Fort Benning soldier who would like to submit cadences can send them to: Sandee Johnson, 7502 Jade Drive S.W., Tacoma, Wash. 98498.

Speakers wanted

The Public Affairs Office is recruiting volunteers to join its Speakers Bureau to speak before local and surrounding area civic organizations.

If you are military or civilian and have a unique subject you are an expert on, be it military history or horticulture, call Brad Castleberry at 545-2238.

Runners have priority during PT hours

Formations and individual runners have priority of movement on Fort Benning during the established physical training hours of 6 to 7:30 a.m. Monday through Friday. Formation running is not authorized on sidewalks throughout the installation. Units must use roadways, and proper safety equipment must be worn and operational.

Individual runners and walkers may use the sidewalks and also are required to wear proper reflective clothing or road guard vests.

Speed limit during PT hours is 15 mph and 10 mph when passing individuals and troop formations.

Mayors' Council to meet third Weds

Mayors' Council meetings with the installation staff will take place the third Wednesday of each month at 9:30 a.m. in Infantry Hall, Room 550.

If your designated representative is unable to attend, an alternate must be provided. You will be notified in advance of any changes or cancellations. The next meeting date is Nov. 15.

Taxi contractor is American Cab Co

The only authorized taxi company to pick up passengers on Fort Benning is American Cab Company.

The company's phone number is 689-6367.

for the record

In the Oct. 20 issue of "The Bayonet," Darryel Johnson was incorrectly identified as a sergeant in a story on Page A-1 headlined "Drug Free." Johnson, who is the primary instructor for the Fort Benning Alcohol and Drug Abuse Prevention and Control Program, is actually a sergeant first class.

WARFIGHTING: Prepares Army for 21st century

only half of the enemy is. Hartzog said in the Army of 2015, commanders will know where all of their soldiers are and where about 90 percent of the enemy is located.

There will still be a human element in future battle command. Soldiers will not become "cyber warriors" trained only to push buttons, Hartzog said.

"The most important thing in our business is the United States Army soldier," he said.

"I think what is important is a future in which the soldier understands the technology and uses it to do the job we ask him to do," Hartzog said.

Warrior Focus will include a digitally-equipped light infantry brigade from the 10th Mountain Division, Fort Drum, N.Y., and will test the digitization of a light battalion task force.

Fort Benning's 75th Ranger Regiment will provide a six-man Regimental Reconnaissance Detachment. Other support elements will be provided by the 41st Infantry, from the 2nd Armored Division at Fort Hood, Texas, and the 10th Special Forces Group, from Fort Carson, Colo.

Classes are conducted in Classroom 30, Infantry Hall, from 7:45 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

DoD Form 2586 useful tool in civilian job market

By Elsie Jackson
Army Career and Alumni Program

Your military experience and training may be invaluable assets in a civilian career — but only if you can communicate your abilities to a prospective employer.

If you are planning to use a resume to get your message across, your Department of Defense Form 2586 (Verification of Military Experience and Training) can be a useful tool.

VMET statements list military job experiences and training histories, recommended civilian college credit information and any civilian equivalent job titles. They are provided to separating and retiring soldiers who have served a minimum of 180 days on active duty.

If you are separating, you should receive your VMET statement automatically, at your unit mailing address, about 150 days from your separation date. If you are within 30 days of your separation date and have not received this document or separated between Oct. 1, 1990, and Sept. 14, 1992, you will need to call or write to: PRC, Inc., ATTN: VMET, Suite 401, 2900 Eisenhower Ave., Alexandria, Va. 22314, (800) 258-8638.

VMET documents have proven to be useful for enlisted soldiers and warrant officers. It has been less useful for commissioned officers because officers lack accurate duty descriptions and VMET is an automated document. Because of this, the Army has temporarily suspended automatic VMET distribution for commissioned officers.

In the near future, modified versions of the VMET will be issued to commissioned officers. The modified VMET will show military training histories, combining Officer Record Briefs and officer evaluation reports to provide a picture of an officer's training, skills and experience.

Don't confuse your VMET document with an Army or American Council on Education Registry Transcript System AARTS transcript. AARTS transcripts are records of your active duty military education experiences, including training for which you may receive college credits. Of course, acceptance of credit recommendations will depend on the policies and procedures of the school you choose to attend.

If a college or university accepts AARTS credit recommendations, and those credits are awarded on their official college transcript, AARTS credit recommendations may be applied toward Army promotion points.

Besides helping you get college credits, an AARTS transcript can supplement your resume, giving prospective employers a clearer picture of the skills you learned in the Army.

Three kinds of learning are recognized on an AARTS transcript — successful completion of formal service school courses (longer than 45 hours); successfully held military occupational specialties; and passing scores in college-level tests such as the Scholastic Aptitude Test, College Level Examination Program and American College Testing Program.

All enlisted soldiers and veterans with a basic active service date on or after Oct. 1, 1981, may receive an AARTS transcript. Requests may be made through the Army Education Center.

For more information on VMET, ask your Army Career and Alumni Program counselor, Soldiers' Plaza, Building 2617, or call 545-4892 and 545-7009.

Benning's AAFES offers satisfying foods

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet©

Looking for a convenient, affordable place for lunch?

Then look no further than Fort Benning, said John Bush, chief of Community Operations Division, Directorate of Community Activities.

According to Bush, the Fort Benning clubs offer convenience and a variety of selections that will please any palate. In addition, there are the Sand Hill exchange and bowling center snack bars, the Infantry Hall cafeteria, and the Army and Air Force Exchange operated establishments, which include Anthony's Pizza, Robin Hood Sandwich Shoppe and Royal Chopstix, which are located at the main Exchange, and Frank's Franks, located at the Mini-Mall and Soldiers' Plaza.

These establishments are open to anyone on post or who comes onto post, he added.

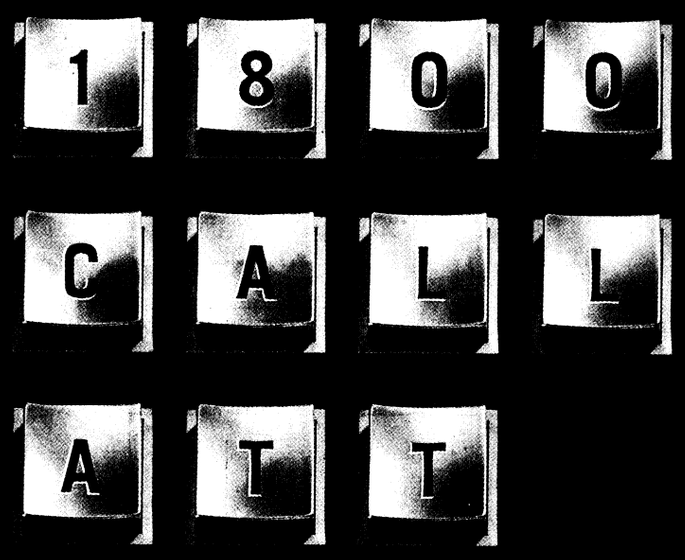
"All of the eating establishments, with the exception of Burger King, are operated by AAFES," Bush said. "This means that every time someone eats there, money goes back into the Morale, Welfare and Recreation fund for the improvement of the quality of life here on post."

In addition, the convenient locations make it easy to have an affordable lunch, whether sit-down or fast food, within a one-hour lunch break, he said.

Both the Officers' Club and the Main Post NCO Club offer full-service, cafeteria style lunches, including choice of entree, a variety of vegetables, bread and a salad bar. In addition, the Officers' Club offers a pasta bar and a cold sandwich bar with bread, cold cuts, lettuce and condiments.

Both clubs are open daily for lunch from 11:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. with the exception of the Officers' Club, which is closed on Monday, and the NCO Club, which is closed on Wednesday.

"On Monday, when the Officers' Club is closed for lunch, go on over to the NCO Club and get yourself a steak and baked potato at a lunchtime price," Bush said. "You can't beat that."



"We unconditionally guarantee everything we serve," said Dave Yates, Officers' Club manager. "Customer satisfaction is our main concern."

Bush also recommended the Follow Me Golf Course club house for lunch, which offers a variety of salads and lighter fare and also serves breakfast.

While not everyone may like everything, Bush and Yates said chances are there's something for everyone on post when it comes to lunch.

"We pride ourselves on our variety and quality service," Bush said. "Give Fort Benning a try for lunch and see if it's not what you're looking for."

Parents, teachers join forces for students

Christina Riley, a volunteer at McBride Elementary School, helps Michael P. Gladney, a first grader, with Geosafari Junior Phonics.

Attention all parents! National research supports the fact that student achievement is greater when parents become involved with their child's education.

Parental involvement is the single greatest factor contributing to a child's success in school, according to Gail Wilson, director of staff development, Fort Benning Schools.

"Parents and teachers are really co-partners in the learning process, working together to maximize success for the kids," she said.

To support this belief, the Fort Benning schools have each designed extensive volunteer programs to help meet the needs of the students and their parents at the individual schools.

"Stowers School, for example, has developed a VIP program in which twice a month the parents are invited to come in and participate in classroom activities with their child," she said.

"I remember going into a classroom at Stowers once and seeing a father in his uniform sitting on the floor with a group of little kids, holding a Teddy Ruxpin," Wilson said. "It's really neat to see the daddies in action."

"Loyd Elementary School has a 'Lunch-n-Learn' program," she said. "Our schools in general are very open to parents. We always encourage them to come in and eat with their child."

Most of the schools even try to accommodate parents who want to help but can't volunteer during the day. Dexter Elementary School lets parents collect information about a particular country and make games and activities to go along with it at home. Faith Middle School encourages parents to help with food drives throughout the year or send in baked goods for various activities. McBride Elementary School encourages parents to spend time at home reading to or with their children.

If parents do have the time to volunteer the Fort Benning Schools will pay for child care costs at Tot Town.

"Parents aren't the only volunteers we get," Wilson said. "We also see visiting grandparents and volunteers who don't have any children.

"It really does incredible things for the kids, because they know their parents support them," she said.

Last school year, volunteers spent 8,660 hours at Fort Benning schools. The list of volunteer activities is virtually endless, according to Wilson.

"We have found that Fort Benning parents are really giving of their time," Wilson said.

For more information about becoming a school volunteer, contact any Fort Benning school office or Gail Wilson at 545-8245.

CHILD ADVOCACY CENTER

Soldiers play for benefit

By Lori Egan
Bayonet staff writer

Several Fort Benning soldiers participated in a celebrity basketball tournament which benefited the Columbus Child Advocacy Center Oct. 19 at the Columbus High School Gymnasium.

Col. Steven P. Schook, commander, 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division (Mechanized); Col. Roy Trumble, commandant, School of the Americas; and Command Sgt. Maj. Vincent Sampson, command sergeant major, School of the Americas, played in the basketball game along with local dignitaries from the Columbus business community.

"The basketball game wasn't what I expected. I knew it was a celebrity game, but I was surprised to find out it wasn't a real game," Sampson said.

The rules of basketball were forgotten when the referees hit the court. When they blew their whistles, the player who had done something out of the norm was put into jail. The audience could pay to put someone in jail or bail him or her out of jail.

"It was the first time I put my wife in jail," said Trumble, Fort Benning's leading scorer of the game. "She served my time for me.

"The game wasn't your typical basketball game, but it was a lot of fun and good community relations. It was for a good cause and worth the time — I'd do it again," Trumble said.

After halftime, the game grew even more confusing when two basketballs, one beach ball, a clown and a player in an ape mask all took the court.

Moments later all players, except those in jail, were on the court. The referees pulled ears and blew whistles, which just added to the confusion.

"I had a lot of fun watching the game," said Command Sgt. Maj. Ken R. Sponsler, command sergeant major, 3rd Bde., 24th Inf. Div. (Mech.).

The final score was 58 to 53, with Kenny's Cool and Clean Team defeating Dayton's Demons of Disaster. The official scorekeeper, Capt. Sam Prophet of the Muscogee Sheriff's Department, confirmed Trumble's theory of payola when he said the final score was arrived at by bribes from both teams, in $10 and $20 increments.

It was appropriate that the military was there to help support such a worthy cause, Sponsler said.

"It means a lot to have players from Fort Benning here tonight," said Stanley E. Keene, president, board of directors for the Columbus Child Advocacy Center.

"They play an important role; they are a part of a community coming together to say, 'We do care.'

"Child abuse has no boundaries, no socio-economic borders — it happens everywhere, and we need the entire community's support to provide help to children who are victims of abuse.

"Our primary objective is to try to assist the victim and family through the healing process," Keene said.

"We wanted to do something different, something fun to raise money and awareness for the program," said Keene.

Carmike Cinemas, Inc. and the Housing Authority of Columbus, Georgia, sponsored the game to raise money for the Columbus Child Advocacy Center.

Reserve colonel enjoys life as cancer survivor

By Deborah D. Edwards
Special Correspondent

Military couples are used to the vagaries of assignments and promotions. Wesley and Patricia Anderson can thank the U.S. Army for their marriage, meeting at Fort Polk, La. in 1980. Wesley was at his first duty station, but Patricia had joined the National Guard as a major.

"I had too much rank for the guys to talk to me," she said. "But one lieutenant talked anyway and married the major!"

"Fort Polk is wilderness," Wesley said. "There are not too many people out there of the opposite sex. And Pat liked to read, so I knew we had at least one thing in common. I wanted someone who was logical and brainy, so I thought, 'Well, why not? All she can do is say no.' Patricia said 'yes' and went on to say 'I do.'"

They've come a long way together, to Germany, Kansas, Atlanta and most recently Fort Benning. Along the way, Patricia became a reservist, wanting to try some new pathways. She succeeded, albeit not in the way she expected. "In 1988 a self-breast exam saved my life," she said. "The surgeon I went to told me, "It doesn't feel like cancer" for four months, and the lump wasn't showing up on the mammogram. Of course, that's what I wanted to believe. But finally I insisted on a biopsy." Patricia's experience is similar to many women in both civilian and military clinics. One out of eight women in the United States will have a form of breast cancer. When detected and treated in early stages, 95 percent of these women survive. In the late stages, only five percent survive.

Patricia's cancer was treated with a double mastectomy and has not recurred. For Wesley the time of surgery was a fearful one. "The hard part was the worry about losing her. If she made it through that surgery, everything else would be minor," he said. Meanwhile the world moved on. Patricia confessed that "Desert Storm was good for me personally, because it took my mind off the cancer." Anderson served as Chief Nurse of a 400-bed hospital in Saudi Arabia. She left a month before her unit in order to set up the field hospital She said she found it both scary and exciting. Ten acres were used and marked out with engineer tape.

Vinyl hospital tents were lined up, ready to be "stuck together" with Velcro. The project required 400 people but began with 14. Pat remembered the sense of urgency found only in wartime. "The air war had started. The ground war was going to start any minute," she said. "We had to put it together, and we did it. The team spirit was incredible. By the time the mission became fully staffed it was chaotic. We served not only solders but POW and civilian Iraqis hurt in the uprising."

Wesley was serving in Desert Storm, too, at Headquarters, 1st Infantry Division. When the action ceased, the couple moved to Atlanta, where Wesley served in the Readiness Command. As chief Nurse, 818th Medical Brigade, Patricia advised six hospitals.

Wesley, a promotable major, is now the executive officer with the 36th Engineer Group at Fort Benning. Patricia, a colonel, R.N. and M.N., has been reassigned to the Office of the Surgeon General in Washington, D.C. There she is assistant to the Chief of the Army Nurse Corps, advising on the Reserves. "I go whenever and wherever they need me now, whether it's two days or two months." She is promotable to brigadier general and would be the only female serving in the Regiment bake sale supports Santa's Castle

By Lori Egan
Bayonet staff writer

Santa' s Castle received $400 from 1st Battalion, 50th Infantry Regiment, Family Support Group.

The money was raised when each of the battalion's four companies held a bake sale in order to make a donation to Santa's Castle.

Lt. Col. Drew Stanley, battalion commander, and Chaplain (Capt.) Ken Williams, battalion chaplain and FSG coordinator, presented the check to Santa's Castle's elves Denise Martin and Terri Mazure.

"Our goal is to raise as much awareness and money for Santa's Castle as possible," Williams said. "Other ideas we are considering to raise money include a toy drive and car washes."

"By having a toy drive, we're hoping that people will begin to think about Christmas giving now," Williams said.

But Santa's Castle needs more than just toys; they need volunteers too.

"We really need manpower to get the donated toys sorted and cleaned in time for the shopping season," said Heather Olson, another Santa's Castle volunteer.

Most of the donated toys are for preschoolers and elementary age children, Olson said.

"The shopping season begins Nov. 6 and lasts until Nov. 17, and we will be open every day beginning Monday," Martin said.

Regular applications were accepted until this Monday. Emergency applications will be reviewed as received; usually emergency applications come from soldiers and their families who have recently arrived at Fort Benning. The soldier's chain of command recommends the family to Santa's Castle, Williams said.

Telephone books

being recycled in Columbus area

Keep Columbus Beautiful Commission

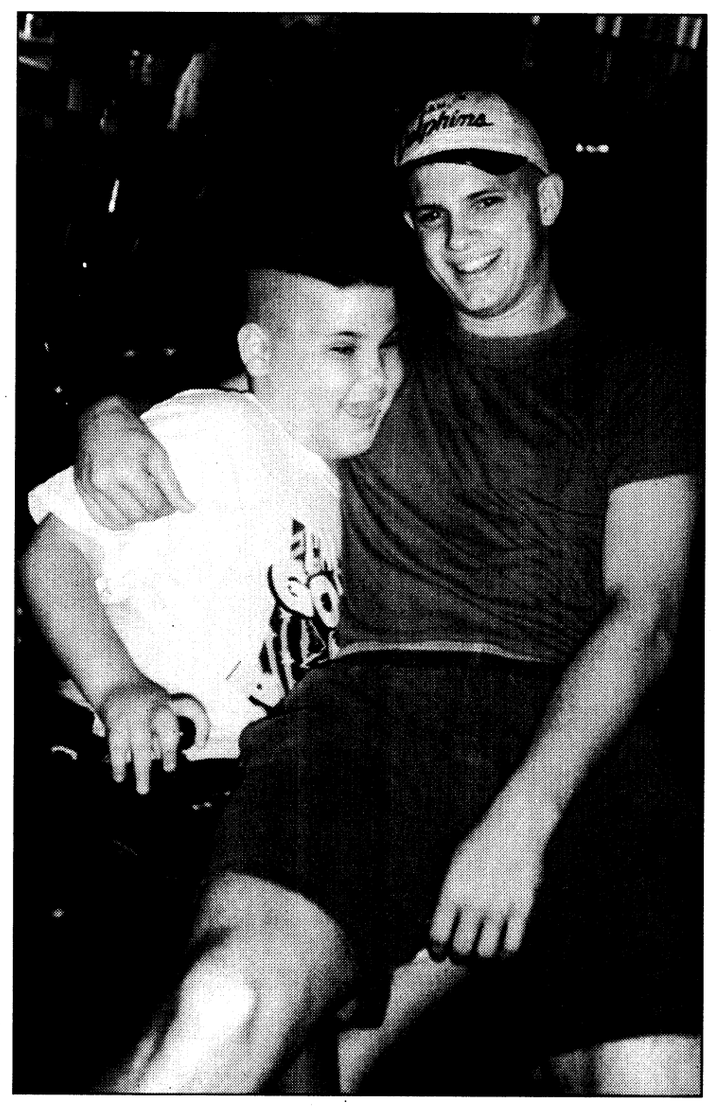
It is that time of year, again — time to recycle your old telephone books. Approximately 180,000 Bell South directories are distributed in the Columbus area each year. This year the Keep Columbus Beautiful Commission would like to recycle more than 50,000 books.

Citizens may recycle their books by taking them to any public school between now and Nov. 13. The Muscogee Council Parent Teacher Association is assisting with the project again this year by taking books to a central warehouse location to be counted and prepared for shipping.

All books will be sent to a recycler in Tennessee to be made into recycled newsprint. One hundred per cent of the telephone book is recyclable.

Bell South Advertising and Publishing and the local Bell South offices are, once again, partners in this project. They have assisted the committee in organizing the project and are offering an awards package worth $1,050 to schools with the highest participation rate.

First prize will be $350, second prize $250. Three third-place prizes of $150 will be distributed. Awards will be determined by the number of books per student that are recycled. All schools that have 100 percent participation will also receive a tree seedling to be planted on campus.



Once again a feature in this year's directory is "Real Consumer Tips." As a public service, Bell South has included a special Recycling Consumer Tips Section. Consumers may dial the numbers listed under the heading "Recycling Centers" to learn about telephone book recycling, residential recycling, business recycling and general recycling information.

Jessica Barrick, executive director of Keep Columbus Beautiful, said she is pleased with the cooperation and efforts of Bell South Advertising and Publishing, local Bell South offices, Department of Public Services, Muscogee Council P.T.A. and the schools.

"We anticipate another highly successful recycling effort this year," she said. "Bell South has really helped us communicate the program to all citizens, and the schools are all very excited about competing for the cash awards. I hope that we exceed last year's goal of 50,000 books!"

The Telephone Book Recycling Project is coordinated by the Keep Columbus Beautiful Commission, an affiliate of Keep America Beautiful Inc.

For more information, contact Barrick at 571-4937 or by fax at 571-4896.

SURVIVOR: Enjoys life after cancer

Col. Patricia Anderson is a survivor of breast cancer.

Reserves in that rank. "Rank is a big responsibility. Suddenly people listen more carefully to what I say. It's my opportunity to let more people know about detecting this killer," she said.

Patricia said she feels strongly about publicizing the facts about breast cancer. She said she grew frustrated at the lack of information available while dealing with the disease. As a nurse, she did her own research and soon wrote and published a book, "Breast Cancer: A Patient Guide." Her publishing company, Creative Health Services, is adding other health authors and publishing a "Breast Cancer News" monthly.

Patricia also volunteers with Reach to Recovery, survivors who visit other women who have just discovered their cancer. She is chair of the American Cancer Society's Breast Cancer Project.

Through it all, Wesley and Patricia have maintained a thriving, sure relationship. "We are alike, enjoying the same things like camping and the outdoors, and we tend to have the same train of thought about things," Wesley said.

"Breast Cancer: A Patient Guide" is available at (800) 507-BOOK. Breast Cancer News is available at 568-9006 or in Columbus at Greeting on the Hill and at A New You.

Enlisted, NCOs take the officer challenge

By Lisa M. Hibbert
Bayonet staff writer

Many may hear the call of the Officer Candidate School, but few are chosen. The challenge, however, comes after being chosen — it's in getting through the 14-week course.

In order to even apply to OCS you must first meet the basic criteria outlined in Army Regulation 351-5: Applicants must possess a General Technical score of 110 or higher; pass the Army Physical Fitness Test and meet height and weight standards as outlined in Army Regulation 600-9; have favorable a National Agency Check; have completed at least 60 semester hours of college study (except for a Medal of Honor or Distinguished Service Cross recipients); be of good moral character; and have no convictions by civil or military courts.

Before applying, applicants should evaluate their reasons for wanting to become an officer, said Capt. Steven H. Goodroad, Company A commander, OCS. Soldiers should try to become officers because they want to lead, not because they want to wear gold bars, he said.

After assuring that the criteria are met, soldiers must assemble a packet that must be submitted to Personnel Command as an application, Goodroad said. The packet will contain a Department of the Army photo, letters of recommendation, security clearance, as well as a few other DA forms.

When a complete application is received, soldiers will then be called to appear before a local board, Goodroad said. The board asks a variety of question that may range from soldiering to personal life in order to assess the capabilities of an applicant, he said.

Packets are then passed forward for a DA board in the Pentagon, where a reviewing board evaluates each packet said Maj. Joseph S. Przybyzewski, executive officer, OCS.

Soldiers are notified by DA whether or not they made it and, if so, to what branch they will be assigned.

Along with the notification letter, soldiers also receive a welcome packet that instructs them on what to bring to the course.

During the course soldiers are brought down to an equal level — no rank and no specialty tabs (such as airborne and ranger) are allowed, Goodroad said. This helps the candidates get established on an equal ground. The only thing that is allowed to be worn on the collar is the OCS insignia, Goodroad said.

Upon passing under the OCS arches and being known as a candidate, the rigorous schedule of being a candidate begins.

"The course is divided into three phases — basic, intermediate and senior," Goodroad said.

The basic phase is designed to establish a climate of discipline. A foundation for the status of the candidates is provided. Candidates learn the necessary training policies and how to perform them.

Classroom training and field exercises are the focus of the intermediate phase, which includes a tactical leaders course and a force-on-force small unit (platoon or squad-sized) operation with a focus on offensive maneuvers.

Bringing the candidates one step closer to being a 2nd lieutenant. — the goal of all OCS candidates — is the senior phase. The training in this phase focuses on professional development, leadership seminars and even some training at the Dismounted Battlespace Battle Lab.

"While the basic phase is very strict, candidates gain more and more privileges as they enter the senior phase," Goodroad said.

The course also provides the candidates with hands-on leadership training. The student company commander, executive officer, first sergeant, platoon leader, platoon sergeant and squad leader positions rotate throughout the class, Przybyzewski said.

For soldiers who want to become an officer, Przybyzewski said OCS is a great place to start.

"OCS provides the opportunity for enlisted soldiers to enter the officer ranks while on active duty," Przybyzewski said. "Some may become ineligible to attend West Point due to age requirements or cannot enter the Green to Gold program.

"I strongly feel that OCS is an ideal method to receive a commission," Przybyzewski said. "The Army receives an officer with the experience of a non-commissioned officer, and OCS is also one of the most effective means of commissioning," Przybyzewski said.

Sgt. Dana Bowman of the U.S. Army Golden Knights Parachute Team dives from a C-31A Friendship aircraft.

Leg loss is no disability for master jumper from the Golden Knights Parachute Team

Mark Taylor
The Casemate, Fort Monroe, Va.

He skydives. He snow-skis.

He water-skis. He runs. He cycles. He scuba-dives.

So when Sgt. 1st Class Dana Bowman says, "I don't consider myself disabled," you have no choice but to believe him — even if you know that less than two years ago, he lost both of his legs in a gruesome sky-diving accident.

Bowman even convinced a skeptical employer that he wasn't disabled: Last November, he became the first double amputee to re-enlist in the Army.

Bowman addressed the challenges faced by disabled Americans Oct. 13 in an appearance at Fort Monroe, Va., as the featured speaker for a ceremony observing National Disability Employment Awareness Month.

His message? "Disabled people can still perform in American society. I'm proof of that."

It's a message Bowman has been spreading a lot lately. He has recently been the focus of articles in "Sports Illustrated," "Outside" and "Reader's Digest" magazines. A book and screenplay are in the works.

Dateline NBC will air a segment that chronicles the life of the man who was recently selected by the Disabled American Veterans as their Outstanding Disabled Veteran of the Year.

It is an amazing story.

Bowman enlisted in the Army in 1981 and immediately distinguished himself from his peers. Initially a heavy-equipment operator, Bowman soon earned his shot at special operations training. He excelled, paving the way for a slot in the Army's grueling Ranger School, from which he graduated with honors in 1990. While a special forces weapons sergeant, Bowman earned a Bronze Star Medal for valor in combat.

In 1993, he was awarded another high honor — a coveted spot with the Golden Knights, a group that is to parachuting what the Blue Angels are to flying.

For his rookie season, Bowman was paired with Sgt. Jose Aguillon, a Golden Knight veteran entering his third year on the team. By Feb. 6, 1994, just weeks into the team's annual winter training in Yuma, Ariz., the two had become best friends.

On that day, Bowman was on top of the world. Literally. He was 12,500 feet above terra firma, preparing to launch himself from an airplane on yet another practice jump.

The men were to perform a move they'd already done about 50 times, the "Diamond Track." They would jump from opposite sides of the airplane, flying away from each other until they were a mile apart. Then they would turn around and fly back toward each other to close the diamond.

The men would reach speeds of 150 mph or more during the descent, with a closing speed of well over 200 mph. Aguillon, the veteran, was to make necessary course corrections. Bowman's role was "to hold what I had."

"We were supposed to cross safely at an altitude of between 3,500 and 4,500 feet." Bowman recalled. "We usually would pass about 20 feet from each other."

Not on this day. And by the time Aguillon tried to veer away, it was too late.

A head-on collision would have blasted both men to pulp. As it was, the glancing blow was extremely violent. Aguillon's right arm hit Bowman's legs, ripping one leg off just above the knee, the other off just below the knee. One of Bowman's legs fell to the ground. The other was caught on Aguillon's rigging.

Both men were knocked unconscious. The blow opened Bowman's chute. Aguillon's deployed automatically at 900 feet. He landed in a tree and, after several attempts to revive him failed, was pronounced dead.

2/69 tests skills at Table 8

By Brian R. Voller
Bayonet staff writer

Rows of tanks sat dormant with all of the members of their varied crews sitting on top of the tanks. Some of the crew members were simply talking while others were resting quietly in the afternoon sun, no small feat considering not more than 200 feet away a 120mm cannon shook the ground like an earthquake when it fired a round down range.

All the crew members resting on their tanks had two things in common: they were from Company B, 2nd Battalion, 69th Armor Regiment, and they were waiting for their chance to qualify during the Table Eight qualification conducted at Hastings Range Oct. 20.

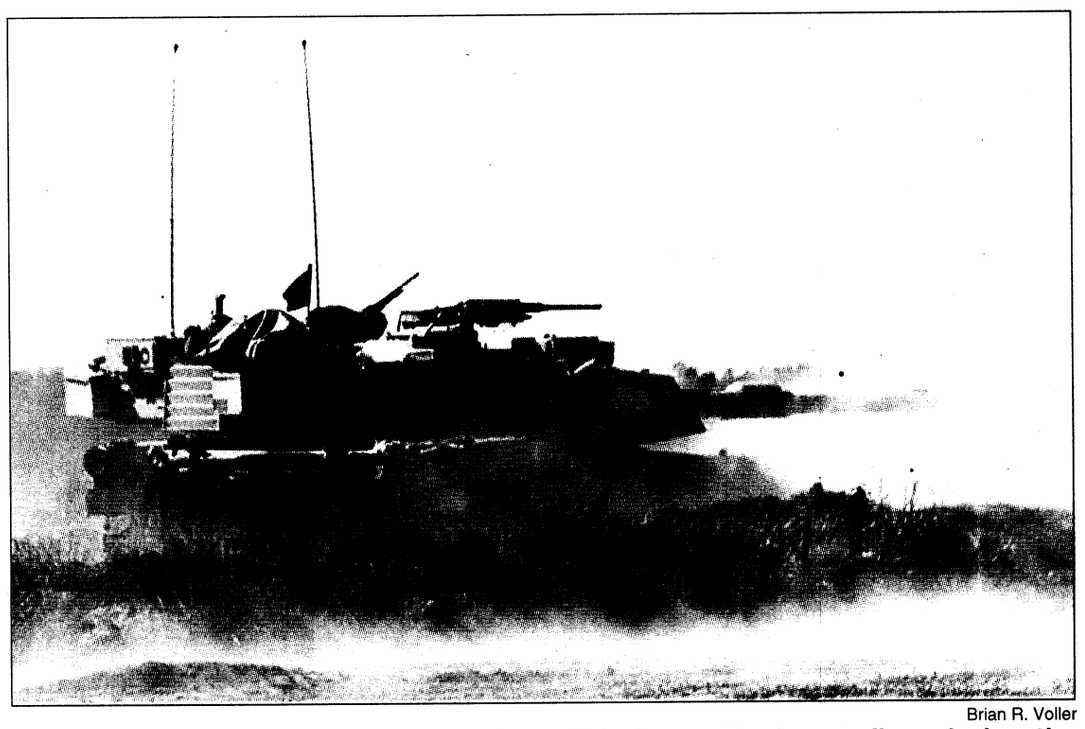
"Table Eight exercise is the highest level individual crew exercise during a sequence of events called gunnery tables, which test the skills of individual crew men, the tank crew and the platoon," said 1st Lt. Rob Purvis, 2nd Bn., 69th Armor Regt. adjutant. "Company D has won the Table Eight two times running, and the other companies are out to beat them. For the tankers it's one of the most competitive things they do."

During Table Eight the crews fire in 10 separate engagements during both day- and night-firing sequences. The targets are pop-up targets shaped like tanks or men, similar to a rifle range. The crew can score up to 100 points per engagement for a maximum of 1,000 points for a perfect score.

"You need a score of at least 700 points to qualify," said Purvis. "If a crew scores 700-799 points it's qualifying, 800-899 points is superior and 900-1,000 points is distinguished."

During Table Eight several different types of firing engagements are used, including one run where the gunner of the tank is removed and the crew must engage targets with only three crew members and the crews perform target engagements done while moving through the firing range and engagements of moving targets.

The type of tank 2nd Bn., 69th Armor Regt., used in qualifying on the Table Eight was the M-1A1 Abrams. The M-1A1 fires two different types of rounds from the 120mm smooth bore cannon. The main round fired is a sabot armor-piercing round, and the other type of round is a heat round used against light armored vehicles. The M-1A1 also carries two 7.62mm machine guns. One of the machine guns is ring mounted; the other is a coaxially mounted machine gun. The final piece of fire power is the tank commander's .50-caliber machine gun.



"The Abrams will reach a top speed of 45 mph," Purvis said. "It's fully capable of engaging a target at full speed at 2,000 meters away. The Abrams proved its effectiveness during Desert Storm when we really got to see what a devastating piece of machinery this weapon is."

Sgt. Scott Razo, the Company B commander's driver and former gunner, said the Abrams uses one of the most advanced targeting devices ever developed for a tank.

"What the gunner has is a laser range finder on the top of the 120mm cannon," Razo said. "When the gunner aims the cannon, the laser is shot out and then beamed back, giving the gunner all the information he needs to make a direct hit. The laser sight also allows the gunner to make the necessary adjustments when firing on the move."

Despite how long the tankers were out on Hastings Range, Purvis said Table Eight is something all the crews love to do.

"As a tanker you want to qualify as high as possible," Purvis said. "But as a company you really want that top spot so you can have bragging rights for a while, or at least until the next qualification in four months."

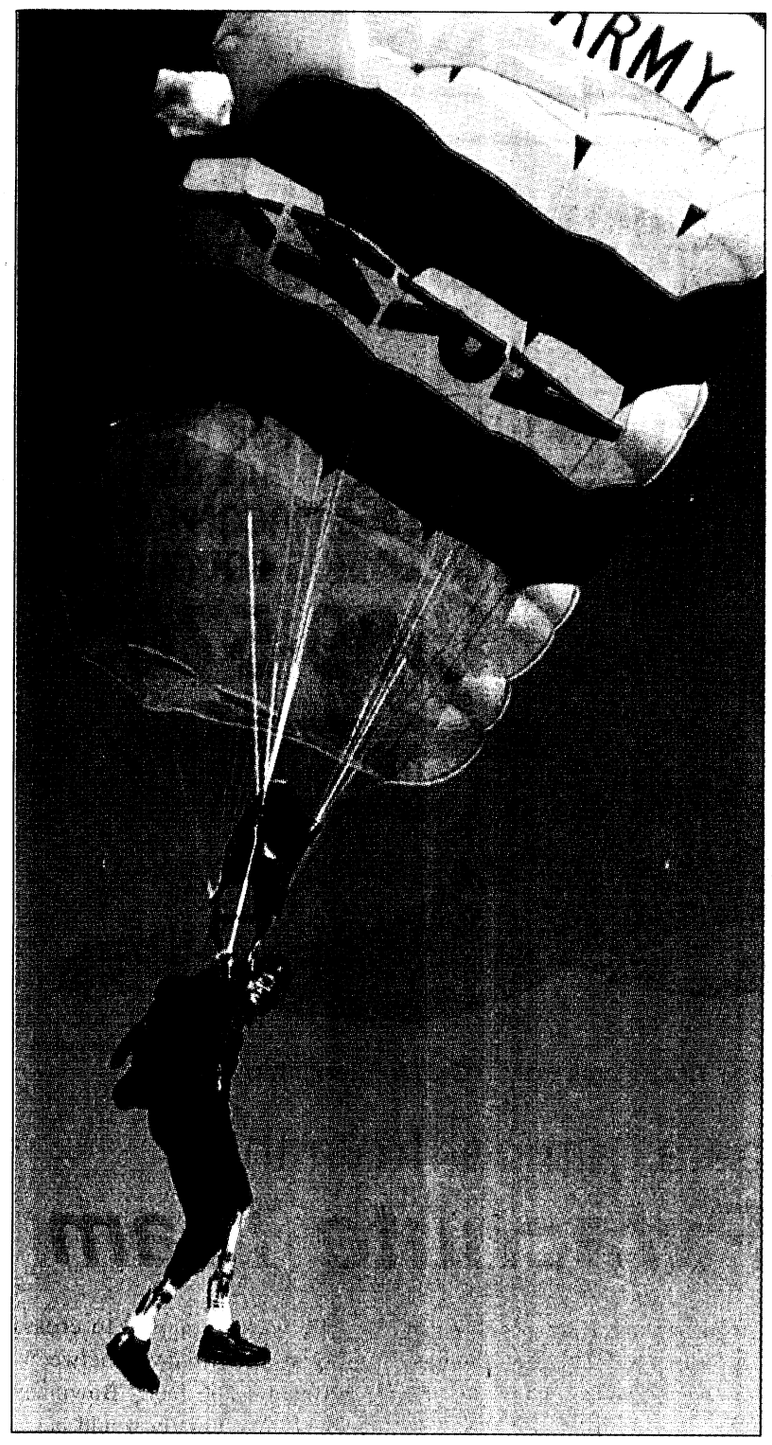
DA slows promotions to Spc



Adjutant General's Office

As a result of fiscal 1996 budgetary constraints and specialist overstrength, such as projected at 111 percent, two actions are initiated. First, accelerated (with waiver) advancements to specialist are temporarily suspended for a period of four months beginning Dec. 1. Second, the minimum time-in-service for advancement to specialist is permanently changed form 14 to 18 months.

The waiver zone will be 18 to 25 months for accelerated advancements and without waiver advancement will remain at 26 months. The exception to these criteria will be those soldiers with a contractual obligation be advanced to specialist in accordance with Army regulation 601-210.

Currently, the average pin-on time to specialist is 19.5 months. While we realize many of our soldiers are deserving of early advancements, budgetary constraints and Department of Defense guidance prevent these advancements. Advancement to specialist is a decentralized process. Commanders at all levels must enforce the new guidelines to avoid additional cost cutting measures in the future. This new guidance will be monitored at the Department of the Army level. Point of contact at DA is Sgt. Maj. Stoddard or Master Sgt. Murray at DSN 225-0986 or contact the local military personnel directorates at 545-4522 or 545-5816.

Courtesy photo

Double amputee Bowman glides to the earth while suspended from a U.S. Army Golden Knights Parachute Team parachute.

Bowman landed face-down in a parking lot. He was rushed by helicopter to a hospital, where doctors were able to stop internal and external bleeding. When he regained consciousness two days later, the team's assistant jump leader was at his side.

"I just wanted to find out what happened," Bowman recalled. "He leaned over and told me that I lost both legs and Jose was killed. It was a big shock."

But not big enough to keep Bowman down. Against his doctors' wishes, he left the hospital four days later to attend his friend's funeral.

And after being transferred to the Army's Walter Reed Medical Center, he continued on a rapid road to recovery. At the hospital, Bowman was an inspiration to other patients.

"I'd race them in the halls," he says. "Nobody could catch me."

Unhappy with his clunky prosthetics, Bowman went outside the Army, soon ending up at the New York offices of prosthetist Mike Joyce, head of Advanced Prosthetics and Orthotics, who outfitted Bowman with a pair of high-tech legs that would have made the bionic man jealous. He also enrolled Bowman in a running course.

"All we did for 10 days was learn how to run," said Bowman, who took to the class the same "never quit" attitude that he'd taken to Ranger school. At the end of 10 days, Bowman ran a mile as part of a relay team of amputees.

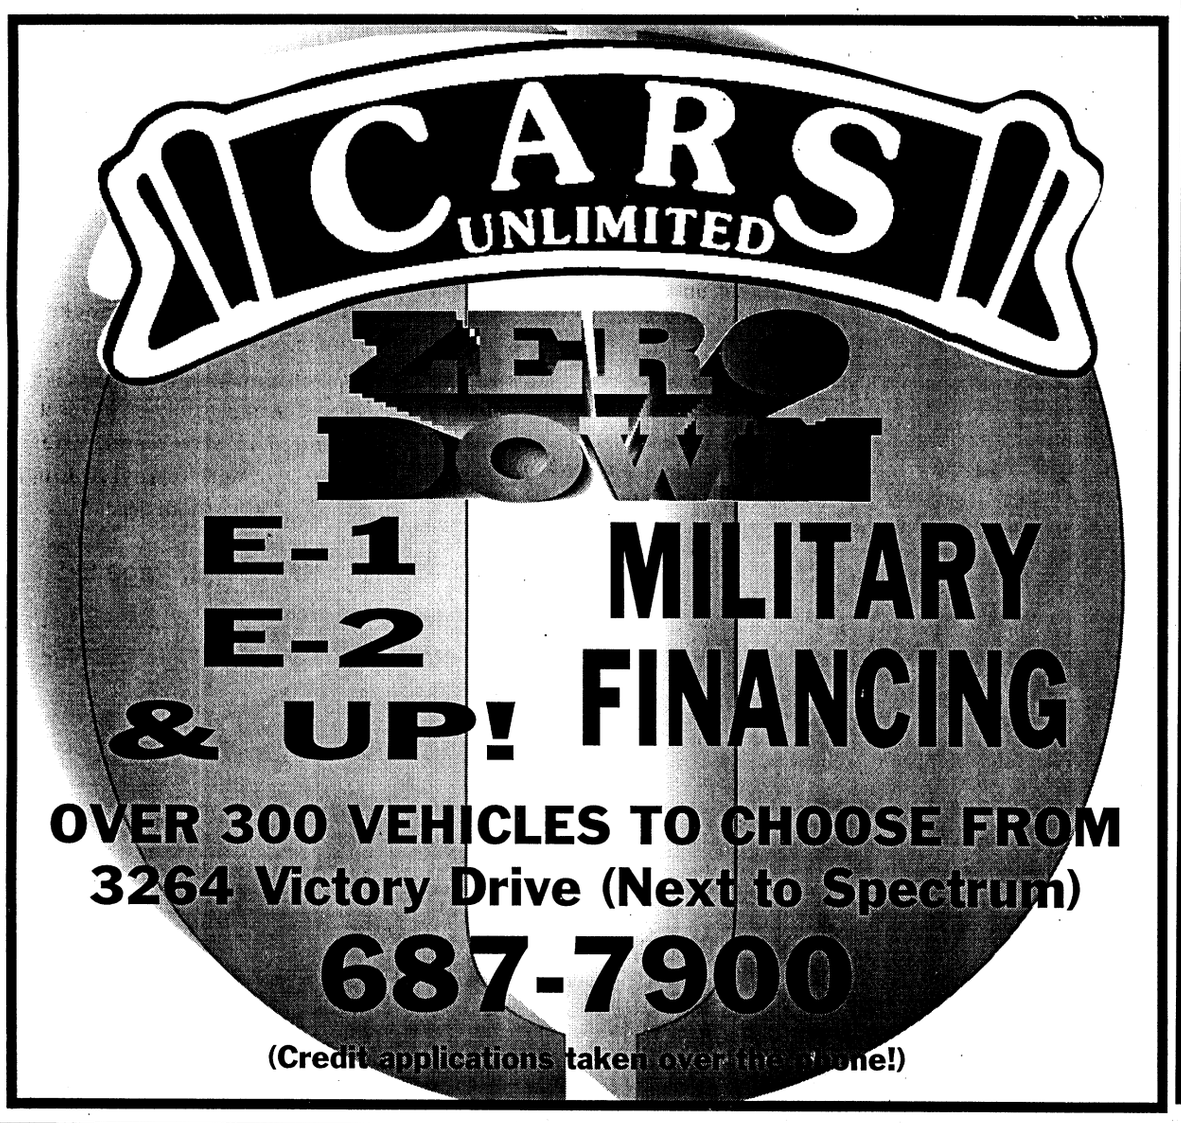
Bowman credits his family for being supportive and making possible his miraculous recovery (he does not include his wife, who left him not long after the accident). But they couldn't help him with what turned out to be his biggest challenge — trying to stay in the Army, which was trying to discharge him on a full disability pension.

Bowman wanted to prove that he really wasn't disabled. So, barely six months after the accident, he was in a plane with 16 buddies, preparing to jump at a fellow Golden Knight's wedding.

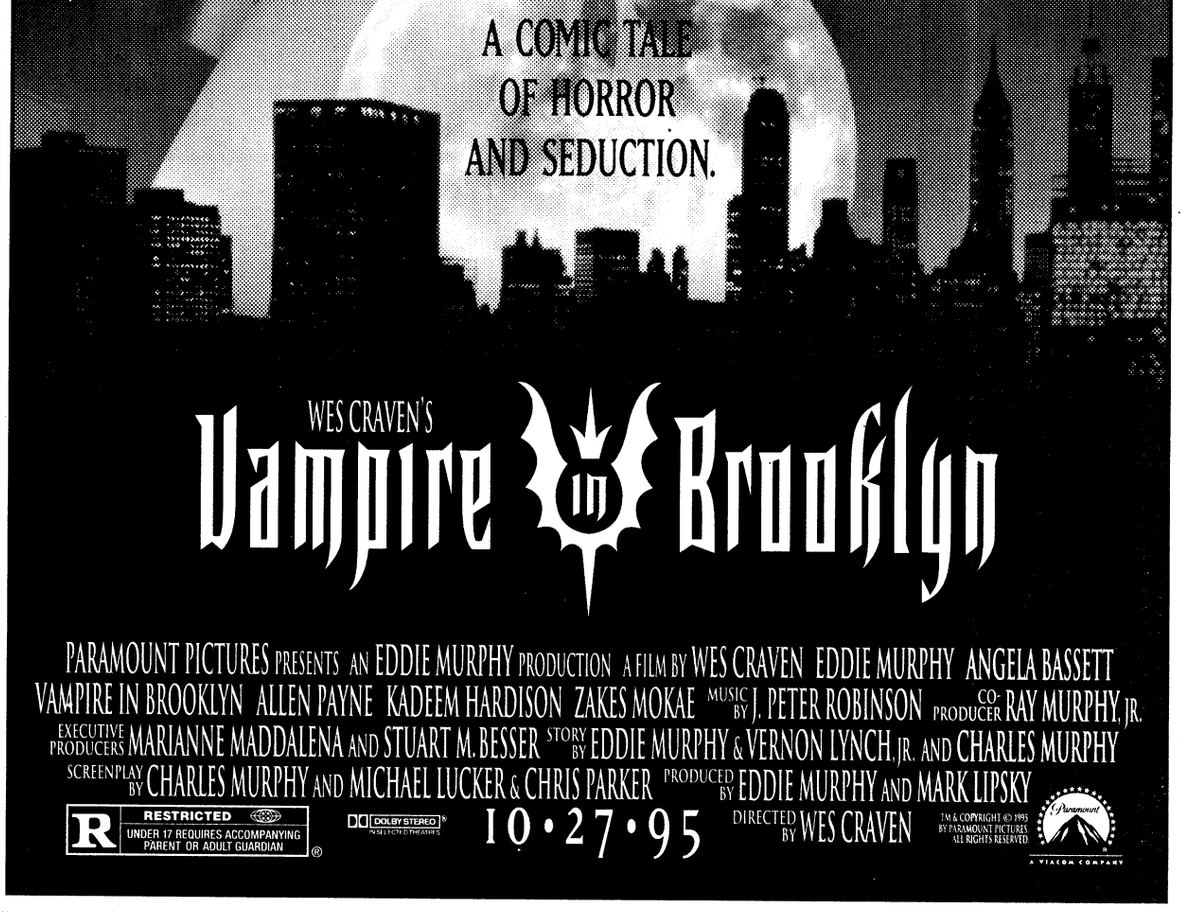
"I told my doctors I was going to jump, and they said, 'Yeah, yeah,'" said Bowman, chuckling.

He jumped, showing up at the hospital the next week with still and video pictures to prove it. Everyone was impressed, but not even the brass at Fort Bragg had the authority to re-enlist a double amputee.

So Bowman went straight to the top — the secretary of the Army.



"If you have the faith and will, anything is possible," Bowman said. He proved it on Nov. 4, 1994, 10 months after the horrific accident, when he was in a plane above Fort Bragg, pledging the next seven years of his life to the Army.



"My commander said if I was able to re-enlist, we'd do it in the air, and I held him to it," said Bowman, who is proud not to own a wheelchair or handicap license plates.

Today, Bowman remains with the Golden Knights. He is on full jump status and has done more than 100 jumps since the accident. But his main duty is as the group's assistant director of media relations.

On Feb. 6, 1994, Bowman couldn't have imagined how much his life was to change over the next 18 months. Now, he said he hopes his proactive approach to what some might call a disability will help motivate others not to let physical limitations get in the way of dreams.

"If you have a disability or a problem, there is always going to be someone there for you," he tells his audiences. "And if there isn't anyone there for you, I'll be there for you."

MOS: 88M10
Unit: 104th Transportation Company
Job title: Heavy wheeled vehicle operator
Years on the job: 1 year, 8 months

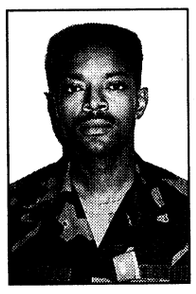
What were your reasons for joining the Army?
I joined the Army for the unique experiences that being a soldier provides, such as travel and meeting people from different backgrounds.

Define your style of leadership.
Lead by example and volunteer for tough assignments.

What person has most influenced your career?
After reading about and hearing Gen. Colin Powell speak, he has become a strong role model for me and the black community.

If you were sergeant major of the Army for a day, what improvements would you make?
I would improve the quality of living in the barracks by providing telephones, cable and separate bathrooms for each soldier's room.

What were your reasons for choosing your MOS?
I like driving. I think it's fun.



Describe a memorable moment in your career.
My greatest experience in the Army was when I went to Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, to be an interpreter and help the Haitian refugees.

What are your future career plans?
I want to go to college to get a degree in computer science.

What others have to say about you: Spc. Jean Louis is an extremely hard-working young soldier whose willingness to learn and dedication to mission accomplishment are unparalleled.

Years on the job: 17 years

What were your reasons for joining the Army?
I wanted to serve my country and get some experience in the communications field.

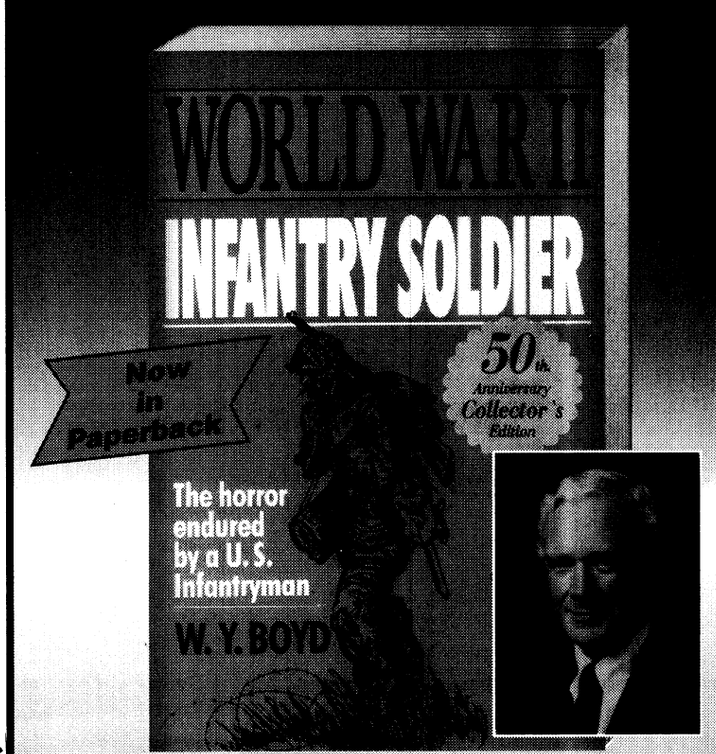
Define your style of leadership.
I would say delegative because I like to give the soldiers the opportunity to make decisions, which I think helps in their development.

What person has most influenced your career?
Retired Sgt. Maj. Eddie Roberts

If you were sergeant major of the Army for a day, what improvements would you make?
I would try to bring the NCO Corps closer together.

What were your reasons for becoming an instructor?
I wanted to share my experience and knowledge of tactical communications with other soldiers.

Describe a memorable moment in your career.
Basic training was very memorable. I was not familiar with the Army, and I didn't know what to expect.



What are your future career plans?
Finish my degree with Troy State.

What others have to say about you: I have only known Sgt. 1st Class Barnes a short time; however, I can already perceive him as a true professional. Barnes "gives a damn." He is willing to go the extra mile to ensure that his students leave here with a firm grasp of the subject matter he imparts. He is an all-around outstanding NCO.

Reformation Sunday challenges faithful to change

By Robert W. Thompson
Family Life Office

reflections

Reformation Sunday is big news in some churches. It denotes a kind of historical birthday for Protestants.

Its origins lay in the tremendous influence of a German professor and churchman, Martin Luther, who lived nearly 400 years ago. Luther issued a "protest" (hence the name Protestant) comprising 95 statements, which he attached to the front door of the church building at Wittenburg for all church-going persons to see.

He had no idea of the thunderstorm that would follow. His protest turned into an avalanche. He set out to reform his own church but inadvertently helped create others, starting with one named after him (an action he did not approve of). His protest and call to reform echoed throughout a country which, as historians know now, was ripe for change. Other men in earlier centuries and other lands had called for change, but the social, political and economic climates weren't ready. With Luther, all such needed forces worked together. And the rest is history. All churches have been affected, directly or indirectly, by Luther's original protest for change.

Change the church, Luther cried. That goal was useful in its day, for society accepted only one kind of church. In today's western nations, societies tend to accept many kinds. In the Army, chaplains come from about 100 different Christian faiths, as well as from the Jewish and Muslim faiths.

What might Luther cry today if he observed our churches? I'm guessing that he would say, not "change the church," but "change the world."

Change the world. There is much in our world that needs changing. A skim through any national news magazine confronts us with cruelty and suffering in many forms. We read about governments which treat people like parts of their self-serving machine or, worse, like useless obstacles. We gaze at the haunting specter of poverty and famine that kills thousands each day. We wince at reports on growing violence in our own country, hoping it won't touch us.

We wag our tongues at the death of morals among public leaders. A police officer admits to racist beliefs; a leader of a charities group siphons funds for personal use; television evangelists fall to the age-old sins of misusing sex and money.

And how innocent are we ourselves? We spend billions of dollars a year on pet food, cosmetics, clothes, eating out, entertainment of all kinds and new cars. We lead the world in personal debt (e.g., credit cards) while thousands die daily from lack of food. We watch movies and television shows laced with crude language and situations. We shy away from seeing our own sins.

"Change the world." Fine-tuning our theology is helpful, but helping hurting persons and cleaning up our own acts are vital.

I think the enemy which Luther would see today would not be a church with whom he disagrees but a world that needs God's mercy. I believe he would call us to reform our ways of living, to live up to the noble calling to which we have been summoned: "You are the salt of the earth. But if the salt has lost its taste, it is good for nothing.... You are the light of the world," (Matthew 5:13, 14).

Barely a month ago Jewish persons around the world observed Yom Kippur, one of their most special sacred events. It recalls the ancient and elaborate temple ceremonies which told Israelites that God forgives them of their sins. It is a day of reflecting on one's thoughts, feelings and actions. It is a day to confess one's need for God's grace and to commit again to living his way.

"Change the church ... Change the world." In a sense, the task is the same. For Luther or for any of us, reform must spring first from the personal level. May God stir us up for the task.

Hooray! It's Halloween. Children across America are going to collect enough candy to drive their mothers and fathers crazy for weeks with hyperactivity and cavities. Yet, it is an innocuous evening, isn't it?

Yes, but....

Halloween has become a rather sad day in our year because we seem to have lost the original meaning of the event. As with all feast days, there is something of extraordinary beauty and value in celebrating Nov. 1 as the feast of All Saints Day.

The exquisite value of this holy day is found in the meaning of who the saints were and what they stood for — role models extraordinaire!

Look at the majority of the individuals in the Bible. Adam and Eve, the various judges, kings Saul, David and Solomon and the apostles had several things in common. That common bond is worth thinking about. It is that none of them were perfect!

We look at a man whom God has named King David, for instance, and realize that he committed adultery with Bathseba, had Uriah murdered at the front lines, committed even more sin and, yet, almost beyond our comprehension — God forgives him again and again! Why? Why doesn't God get disgusted with him and let his kingship come to an end?

The answer to this question is what ties these biblical characters to every saint who ever lived. The answer is grace! Should we be amazed! No. It was not grace alone that did this. A careful reading of the texts will show that each time King David sinned, once he realized his error, he performed an act of true atonement. David was truly sorry for his sins and never committed the same one again.

The same is true for the saints, and this is exactly what makes them such wonderful role models. The saints were NOT extraordinary people! They were average, even below-average people who spent their lives sinning. But at one point in their lives, they came to understand and acknowledge the indescribable feeling of communing with God. They learned that sinners can be forgiven and that one act of true contrition can erase years of sinning.

This is the rich heritage of All Saints Day. This is what God gave to us as role models — totally human people who have brought God into their lives as partners. And we, being totally human, filled with faults and flaws, can also strive to make God our partner in every facet of our lives.

Prayer connects faithful to God's Image

By Vincent deP. Burns
Infantry Training Brigade

One of the great stories of the Old Testament is in Genesis 18 where Abraham bargains with God. The image the Scripture offers to us is Abraham standing toe to toe with God trying to save the city of Sodom. Abraham is confident his bargaining will have no negative repercussions. He reminds God of his justice and mercy and continues to negotiate with him until God agrees not to destroy the city.

reflections

Jesus often would find a place to be alone and pray and to talk with the Father and the Holy Spirit to help him understand his own mission in the world (Luke ll).

The disciples saw this. They wanted this familiarity with God, so they asked Christ to teach them to pray. Jesus responded by giving them what we call the Our Father or the Lord's Prayer.

Christ then followed through by telling the parable of the man who needed food to feed his visitor. The parable tells us the importance of being persistent in prayer, of persevering in continuing to bring our needs to the Father.

The point is not that God wants to play games with us or tease us by making us beg for what we want. No parent would do that. But Christ knows that one of the greatest qualities we can develop is perseverance in prayer. The more we pray, the more we connect with God, the more we are in touch with God, the more fully and effectively we live this human life.

Life is not complete unless we are addressing the spiritual dimension, and that translates into prayer. Christ understood that, and he wanted that fullness for us.

Our image of God has everything to do with the way we pray. Probably the last thing that God wants is for us to think of him as the harsh judge whom we have to beg to take care of us. Our scripture, our tradition and, it is hoped, our own personal experiences totally contradict that image.

If we think of God as a harsh judge and strict disciplinarian, someone who dares us to break a commandment or to step over a line so that he can punish us, then certainly that would affect the way we speak to him. There wouldn't be much motivation to speak to him at all, because it would be more of a negative experience than a positive one. We would be praying more out of fear than anything else.

There is a conclusion that can be drawn from this that might make some folks uncomfortable. The conclusion is this: If you don't like to pray, if you avoid prayer, don't take time to pray or don't think that prayer is important, it is because you have a wrong image of God.

If your image of God is either false, immature or somehow all messed up, naturally you really don't have any motivation to be in touch with this kind of God.

The Scripture passages (Genesis and Luke) are about two things: our image of God and perseverance in prayer, and they are mutually dependent.

Christ tried hard to present us an image of our God as a loving father who always knows the needs of his children, who provides for those needs and who yearns for a relationship with each one of us that is rooted in prayer. It is rooted in prayer in the sense of time spent alone with God and prayer in the sense of time spent with the community when it gathers to worship.

With that image of God, persevering in prayer is much more natural to us. Christ wants us to develop that virtue of being persistent in prayer, not so that we can influence God or get him to change his mind on something, but so that we can become the fully human people he wants us to be.

Perseverance in prayer doesn't change God; it changes us. Without an accurate and mature image of God, there is no motivation to pray. Unless we are persistent in our prayer, we lose our healthy image of God.

Benning boxing gets new look with female fighter

By Brian R. Voller
Bayonet staff writer

The two boxers' eyes meet as they enter the ring and prepare for battle. They dance around the ring, watching each other's every move, concentrating on the prefight game plan that will lead them to victory.

One boxer is different, with dark blonde hair, a medium build, light hazel-colored eyes and physical features like few in the boxing world have had before. This boxer is making history just by stepping in the ring even though the fight is just a practice session.

This boxer is Spc. Tara L. Sweda of Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 324th Forward Support Battalion, and she is the first female boxer in the history of Fort Benning.

The 5-foot-5-inch 21-year-old got her start on the Fort Benning boxing team when she and her roommate were joking about joining the team while working out at the Kelley Hill Fitness Center.

"I was just kidding around with my roommate one day about joining the team and being a boxer," Sweda said. "Then, one day Coach (Charles) Kirkland came up to me and said 'I hear you want to be a boxer.'

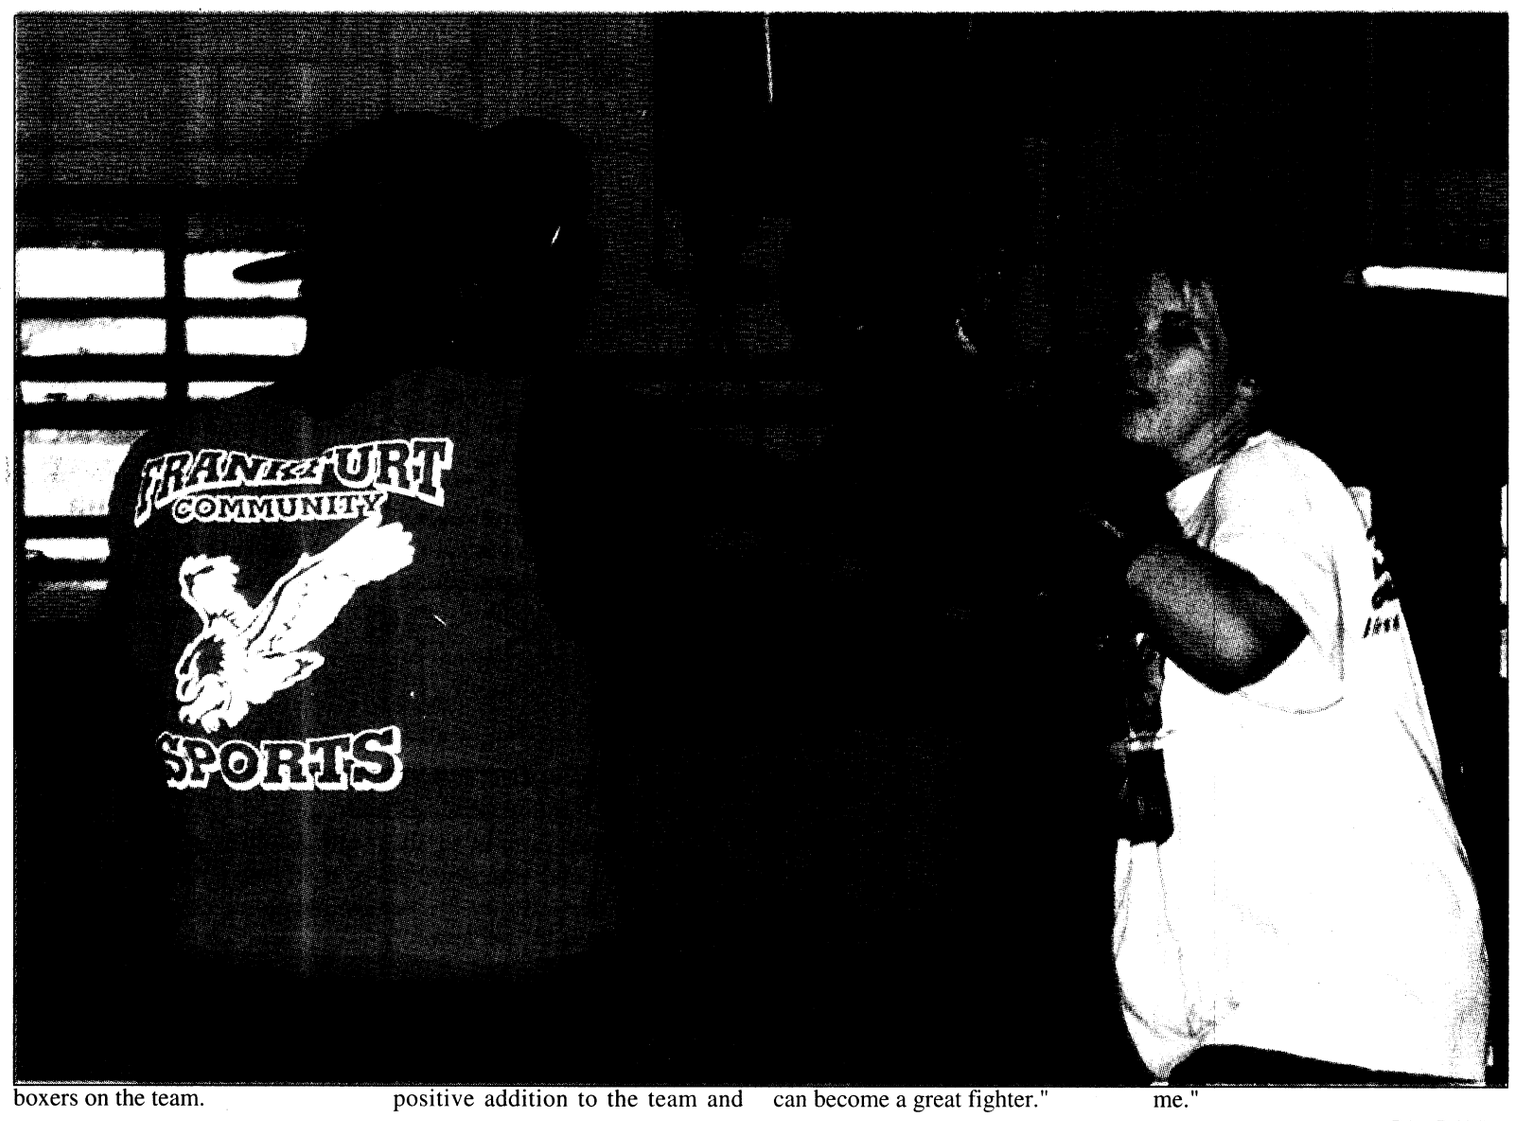
"At first I was like, 'No it wasn't me; I don't want to be a boxer.' But coach told me to come to the gym the next day and try out for the team," she said. "So I went to the gym, and coach smoked me the first day I was there."

Sweda said the experience of fighting in the gym was the first time she had ever really been in any kind of a fight before.

"I got into the ring and sparred with my roommate for my first sparring match," Sweda said. "At first she wouldn't hit me, but the first blow to the head was a big energy rush, and I started going all out."

Since that time Sweda has been training with the former all-male boxing team, and she is preparing for her first match.

"There is another female boxer in Washington State that coach is trying to get me a match with," Sweda said. "Right now, I'm a little out of practice because I've been in the field and on leave for a couple months; but, now that I'm back I'll be back in shape soon."



Kirkland said Sweda has the potential to be the first fully sanctioned, Army supported, champion female boxer in history.

"She's good; she hits real hard," Kirkland said. "Her right hand is as strong as my best fighters. Her ability thus far is untested, so it's totally up to her to go out there and fight. I know she has the talent and the desire to be a champion female boxer. If everything goes like we hope, she'll be a fully sanctioned female boxer and the champion."

Kirkland said Sweda has learned more in the time she has been coached by him than most of the fighters he's trained.

"She learns really quickly because she's not afraid to ask questions when she's training," Kirkland said. "If one of my guys gets punched in the head, he'll refuse to ask questions because he doesn't think that questions will help his fighting. If I'm sparring with her and I hit her in the head, she'll immediately ask why she got hit in the head. It has helped her excel very quickly."

Fighting with a bunch of guys is not a problem, Sweda said. They all support her and treat her as just one of the guys and one of the boxers on the team.

Brian R. Voller

Tara Sweda, the first female to box on the Fort Benning boxing team, works out with her coach, Charles Kirkland, in the Kelley Hill fitness center. Sweda said she hopes to be the first Army-sanctioned female boxer in history.

"At first I was getting my butt kicked, and I was almost ready to quit," Sweda said. "But the guys kept pushing me and kept telling me to keep fighting. They treat me the same as every other member of the team; and, when I step in the ring to fight, it helps me a lot."

Spc. Jose Mercado, Company A, 4th Battalion, 41st Field Artillery Regiment, said Sweda is a positive addition to the team and has the potential to be a great fighter.

"It feels good to have her on the team," Mercado said. "I think if she has her chance in the ring, she has the potential to be a great fighter. In the future I think it would be great to see her go to the Olympics. She's got the power and she's got the desire to be a champ; and, I think if her unit supports her, she can become a great fighter."

Although she is the first female fighter at Fort Benning, Sweda is not the first fighter in her family.

"My grandfather used to box a long time ago," Sweda said. "When I told my family, my Grandma yelled at me and told me I'd better not get my teeth knocked out. My whole life, everyone thought my brother would be the boxer; no one ever thought it was going to be me."

Currently, according to Kirkland, there are 20,000 female fighters nationwide. Of that 20,000, 8,000 are in Sweda's age group.

"I'd like to keep fighting if I can stay here at Fort Benning. But my platoon is disbanding in December," Sweda said. "My goal is to go on and be the champion; I just hope that I get the chance to try with coach."

USAMU takes top spot at Tall Pines Match

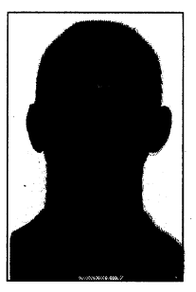
USAMU Public Affairs Office

The U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit took top spots during the Tall Pines Match shotgun competition Oct. 13-15 at Hook Range on Fort Benning.

The overall competition, which consisted of three events — skeet, trap, and double trap, drew competitors from Florida, Georgia and Alabama.

"We had a total of 16 shooters during the skeet match and a total of 18 shooters who participated in the trap matches," said Burl Branham, USAMU Shotgun Team coach.

Of those shooters, the USAMU marksmen placed in all but one of the top three positions for each event.



Spc. David Alcoriza emerged the double trap winner with a score of 139+45, which means he scored 139 points in the first round of competition and 45 points in the finals round. He was followed by Sgt. Terry Wentzel in second with a score of 136+44. Pfc. Walter Keever brought in the third-place finish with a score of 133+42. All scores are out of a total 150 points.

In trap competition, Sgt. Todd Graves finished first with a score of 179+25. Again, Alcoriza placed in the top three — missing second place by only one point — with a score of 176+24. Scores were based on a 200-point scale.

Sgt. Shawn Dulohery took first in skeet competition with a score of 189+22. Dulohery was followed by Graves, who had a score of 185+21. Spc. Joseph Buffa round out the top three with 180+24. Again, scores were based on a 200-point scale.
