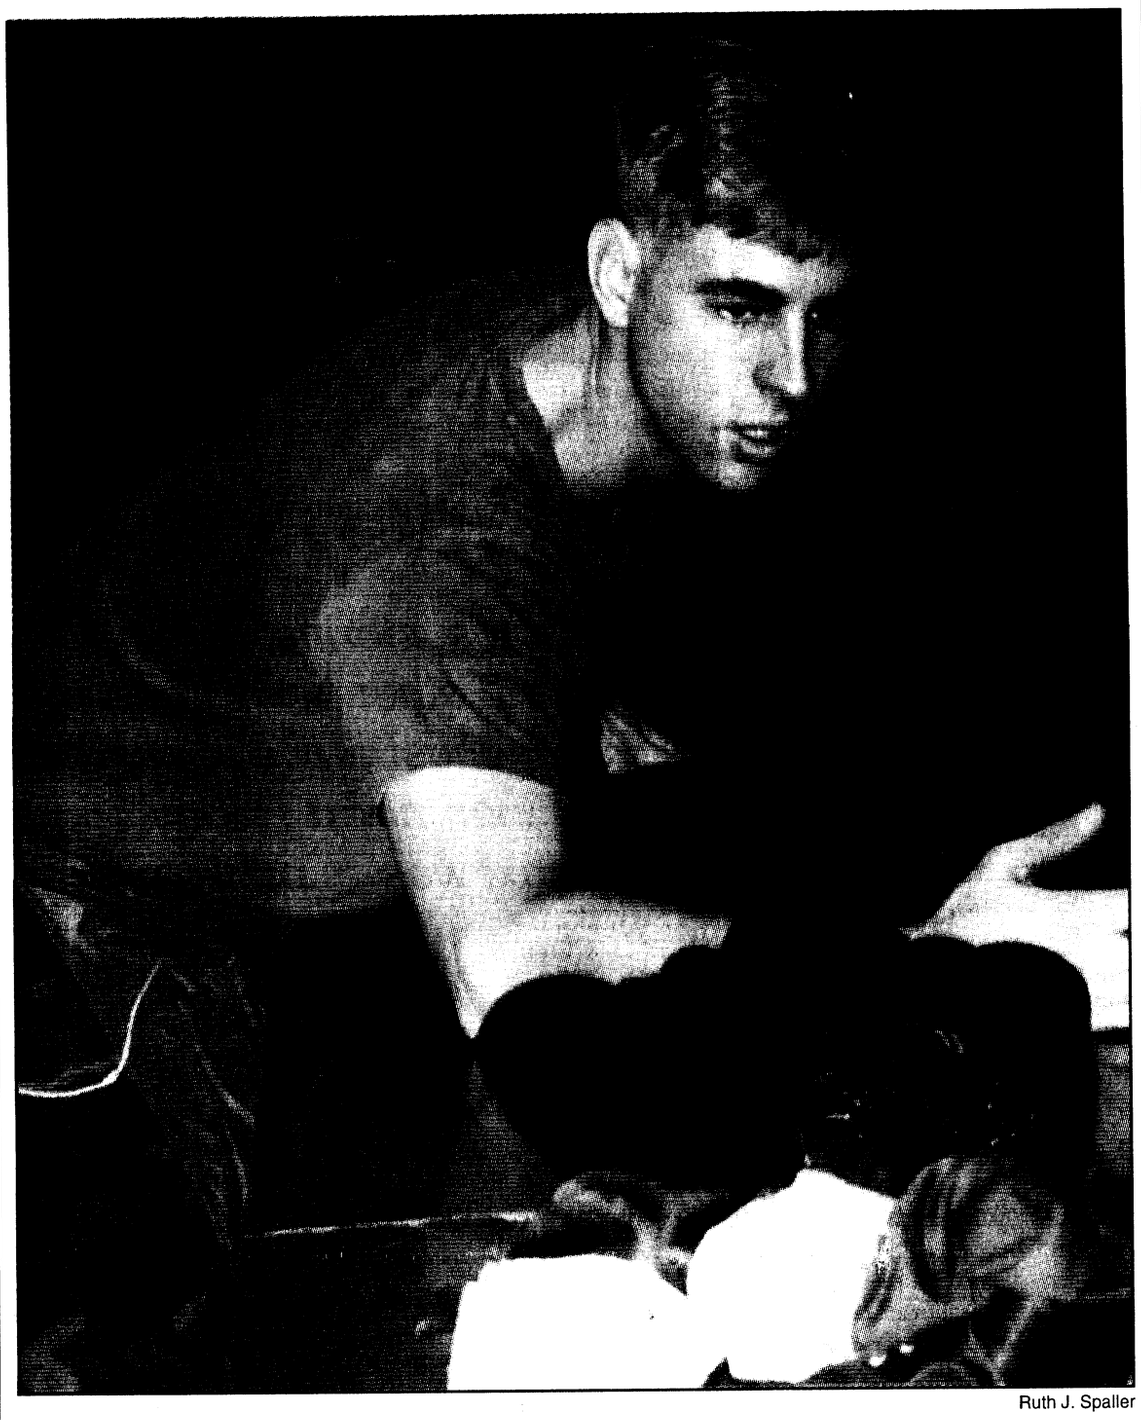
King celebration set Jan. 13

By Jan Wesner Childs
Special to The Bayonet©

The birthday of Martin Luther King Jr. will be celebrated with a ceremony Jan. 13.

The event starts at 11:30 a.m. in Infantry Hall's Marshall Auditorium.



Guest speaker will be James E. Love, director of Military Equal Opportunity for the Department of Defense.

Love is a retired Air Force lieutenant colonel and was the first black high school graduate from Wisconsin to attend the U.S. Air Force Academy.

The annual King celebration is sponsored by the Fort Benning Equal Opportunity Office and is coordinated by Sgt. 1st Class James Madison.

Madison said the celebration will include several highlights:

- Retired Sgt. Maj.Verray Caldwell will recite a compilation of King's speeches, ending with the famous "I have a dream" speech.
- Performances by the Finance Choir and the Singing Firemen and Company, a group of Fort Benning firefighters.
- Music from the Infantry Band.
- Introductions by commanding general Maj. Gen. John W. Hendrix.

Packing it pretty

Rigger Spc. James McGlade flattens out a parachute during the packing process. Fort Benning's riggers constantly keep in mind that someone's life depends on their doing their jobs correctly, indicated by their pledge, which begins "I will keep constantly in mind that until men grow wings, their parachutes must be dependable." Benning gears up for ACOE team

USAIC Public Affairs Office

For the third straight year, Fort Benning will be competing for the Commander-in-Chief's Award as the best Army installation in the world.

Fort Benning will be the first post to be visited by the Army Community of Excellence team in this year's competition.

The team is scheduled to arrive Sunday and will conduct post evaluations Monday through Wednesday.

Headed by Team Chief Lt. Col. Bob Lacey, this year's evaluator's and their respective areas include: Col. George C. Southworth, medical and dental services; Maj. Bob Desrosiers, military personnel services and the Army Career and Alumni Program; Dale Lynn, financial management; Tom Moore, housing; Tim Alderman, civilian personnel and the Army and Air Force Exchange Service; Kathy Reho, Morale, Welfare and Recreation, family support and chaplain services; William Wortley, safety and public affairs; Sten Hessmer, engineering services and facilities and environment; and Charles Taylor, logistics.

The post recently won first-place honors as the best extra-large installation in the Training and Doctrine Command and was just selected as a finalist in the Department of the Army competition.

In 1993, Fort Benning won the Chief of Staff of the Army Community of Excellence Award as the best large installation in the continental United States. In 1994, the post won the Commander-in-Chief's award and was recognized as the Army's best.

Fort Benning will again be competing in the large installation for the continental United States category against Fort Sill, Okla.

However, to win the best overall title, Fort Benning must defeat 11 other installations, which, in addition to Sill, include Fort Leavenworth, Kan., and Redstone Arsenal, Ala., in the medium category and Fort McCoy, Wis., and Tobyhanna Army Depot, Pa., in the small category.

The overseas installations include, in the large category, Schofield Barracks, Hawaii, and Youngsan, Korea, in the medium category, Forts Shafter, Hawaii, and Wainwright, Alaska, and in the small category, Camp Zama, Japan, and Kwajalein, an atoll in the Marshall Islands in the west Pacific.

"The support and cooperation demonstrated by the people in Phenix City and Columbus carried us over the top last year, just as I know it will this year," said Commanding General Maj. Gen. John W. Hendrix.

Post officials, who are expecting the closest competition ever, are looking for more of this support, which they say can be the difference between being the best post in the Army or an also-ran.

Camp Frank D. Merrill, located near Dahlonega, Ga., and home to the mountain phase of Ranger School, entered the ACOE competition in the special category and was awarded an honorable mention and $25,000 for its efforts.

The winner of the Commander-in-Chief's Award will receive $1 million. The winners in each category will receive $500,000 while runners-up get $110,000.

> "Excellent customer service is our hallmark."
> — Maj. Gen. John Hendrix
> Fort Benning's commanding general

Army Communities of Excellence awards are given yearly to Army installations for their efforts to provide support to soldiers, civilian workers, retirees and their families.

The program has several categories: large, medium and small continental United States installations and large, medium and small outside of continental United States installations.

Each category has two subdivisions: most improved for those installations that have made significant improvements in facilities and services and a special category for those Army agencies not located on a traditional post.

Also, there are also categories for selecting winners in the Army National Guard and the U.S. Army Reserve.

Hendrix said a true commitment to improving the quality of life of post residents is one of the reasons Fort Benning has been consistently honored for its efforts.

"My philosophy is simple: take care of our soldiers, their families, our retirees and the civilian work force while providing thorough training and leadership skills to our soldiers," he said. "Whether in uniform or not, all of us must be dedicated to the support of the soldier who accepts an unlimited liability contract. He or she is called to a lifestyle demanding the ultimate commitment — the willingness to lay down one's life in service to the country; therefore, we must provide the ultimate environment for community support."

According to Hendrix, the post motto, "I am the Infantry, Follow Me," exemplifies Fort Benning's commitment to excellence in training and customer service.

"As a team we are continually searching for ways to excel. The spirit of teamwork, that total commitment to continue providing the best possible services to our customers, and the compelling belief that the bond that makes us a team will never weaken," Hendrix said.

"We won the CINC award last year by actively drawing on the immense reserves of enthusiasm and ingenuity of that team — our people. By empowering them, trusting them to do the job, servicing them and taking care of them, they responded well beyond our imagined limits.

"Excellent customer service is our hallmark. That is why, year after year, we are among the top performers in the Army," he added.

Post's achievements make Benning a better place to be

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet©

Fort Benning residents will have yet another opportunity to celebrate excellence when the Army-level Army Communities of Excellence Team arrives Sunday to begin validating post facilities and services.

Sarah McLaney, post ACOE coordinator, said even though Fort Benning took top honors just last year, the post still has plenty of new accomplishments of which to be proud.

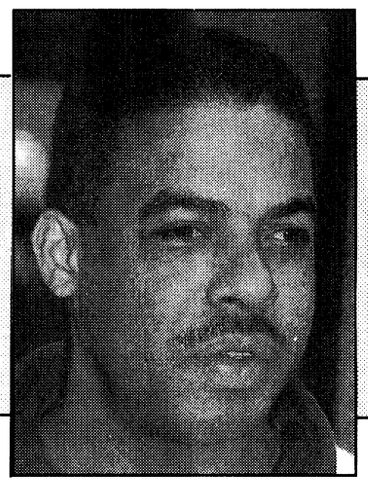
"At Fort Benning ACOE doesn't just mean improvements on the surface," she said. "It's a true commitment to excellence at all times by the entire post community. "There is a contagious feeling of enthusiasm across post that you can really feel," she said.

According to McLaney, these are some of the post's many accomplishments.

- Receiving the 1994 Commander-in-Chief's Award for the best Army installation in the world and winning three of four special category awards: best military personnel services; best Army Career and Alumni Program; best Morale, Welfare and Recreation and family support services; and best Better Opportunities for Single Soldiers program.

- Renovation of post ranges so all international shooting disciplines could be completed in time for the 1994 U.S.A. World Cup, an event which brought together more than 500 marksmen from 46 countries in a competition that had as its prize country quota slots for the 1996 Olympic Games. The post was also selected to host two national competitions in 1994 and 1995 and will be used as an official shooting training site for the 1996 Olympic Games.

- The completion of more than 16 projects for new or improved facilities including a $2.8 million, 60-unit guest house, a $3 million recreation facility for basic trainees, which includes a 400-seat auditorium, a snack bar, three television and movie rooms, a pool room, a table tennis room, eight sound modules for musicians, a video game room, a conference room and two large lounge areas.



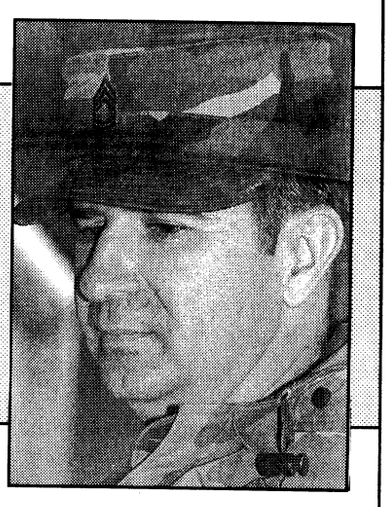
- The beginning of construction of an extension to the Columbus Riverwalk that will provide a nature walk and bicycle trail along the Chattahoochee River. The project is funded with past ACOE winnings.

- Implementation of an enhanced 911 system using state-of-the-art automation and computer-aided dispatch to enhance the effectiveness of the Military Police, Fire Department and emergency response medical services.

- Improvement of the post Central Issue Facility to include new issue and turn-in stations, customer dressing and rest rooms, a reception station, a shoe department, a customer waiting area and a cathedral ceiling.

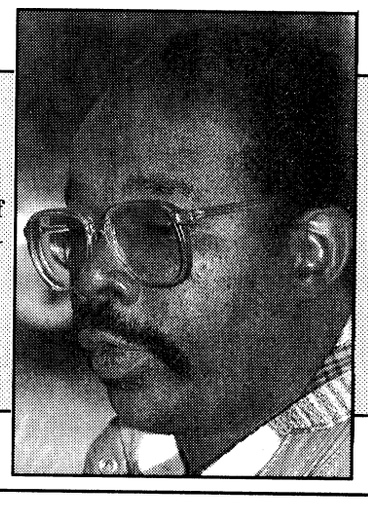
VARIOUS VOICES

What are your New Year's resolutions?



Staff Sgt. Jose A. Davila, Company A, 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment — "Try to be a better parent, to do more physical training and consume fewer calories."

2nd Lt. James D. Jackson, Company A, 2nd Battalion, 69th Armor Regiment — "To learn 1,000 new words. I read the dictionary every day, and I thought I'd learn 1,000 new words."



Denotra Taylor, 6, family member — "To be good at home and do even better at school."

Sgt. 1st Class James Norrisa, Company B, 324th Forward Support Battalion — "Right now I don't have any. In six months I will, when I retire."

Patty K. Lancaster, family member— "To get a new house."

Walter E. Walthall, retired staff sergeant. — "Make more money — get a better job."

Make resolutions attainable

By Clyde Snively
Bayonet columnist

commentary

The new year isn't even a week old and already the sound of breaking resolutions is deafening.

One resolution falling on top of another, just like a multi-car smashup on the interstate.

But you won't find my resolution lying in the heap of good intentions gone awry.

No sir, I made one resolution long ago and haven't broken it yet. That of course was to make no resolutions I couldn't keep. And since that was the only one I could keep, I kept it and made no more.

The problem with resolutions is people aim too high. They fool themselves into thinking they have more will power than they really do and once they make the first slip up, it's over.

Ya gotta start small, be humble.

For instance. If you're a smoker and want to quit, don't make a resolution to stop smoking. Promise yourself to give it up for one day. If you succeed, try for another day.

If you think you need more exercise, instead of resolving to work out everyday at the gym, promise to walk up one flight of stairs a day, or park at the far end of the parking lot wherever you go -- work, shopping or just malling.

Exercise seems to be addictive, the better shape you get into, the better you feel, so you want to do even more. So start small and let the force be with you.

What's true about quitting a bad habit and exercising is also true about dieting and weight loss.

You make a resolution to lose

20 pounds and you'll probably never see it happen, or, if you do, you'll probably gain it right back.

I would never set a weight loss goal unless Sgt. 1st Class I.M. Strack taped me and said, "Snively, you're six inches too short for your weight. You either gotta grow taller or lose some flab from around the mid-section."

Then I'd get busy losing weight.

But since that ain't the case, m mission would be to do something that didn't involve pain, like not having seconds, or eliminating french fries one day a week.

Hey, mighty oaks from puny acorns grow. If it works in nature, it's good enough for me.

Now if you're really serious about fitness, you can do what boss lady did. She went to one of the classes they offered through Civilian Personnel, made some life style adjustments, reduced stress, reduced weight and now is as fit as us kids (if she'd only quit smoking).

So anyway, that's Snively's guide to the remaining 51 weeks of the year. And if you think it's so much rubbish, check out my standings in the football picks ... dead last.

How to get your news in The Bayonet

Film, photos, stories, letters to the editor and other news items for publication must arrive in our office no later than noon Friday prior to the next week's publication

Editor's note: Many people call us with questions about how to get their information in the paper or with erroneous information about deadlines, so we have compiled the following for your information.

Our mission

The Bayonet is here to serve you — our audience. Our mission is to provide timely, accurate and truthful information that supports Army goals and directives.

We get a lot of feedback from readers, and we appreciate your letters, story ideas and comments. We appreciate the positive comments, and we do our best to address the negative ones.

As Fort Benning's authorized newspaper, we are dedicated to giving you the most complete coverage possible. In order to do this, we rely on members of our audience to keep us informed about their units' activities.

Requesting coverage of news events

The staff of The Bayonet enjoys covering newsworthy events on post that are timely and pertinent to our readers. Some events we cover include brigade-level changes of command, changes in post policies or procedures and other postwide events.

We don't have enough personnel to cover everything on post, so we focus on the events that affect most of the post.

Some events we do not send a reporter to cover are parties, dinners, dining events, dances, balls, teas, coffees, club and organization meetings and elections, award presentations, changes of command below the brigade level, check presentations and group photos.

The frequency of such events on post and small number of photojournalists on The Bayonet staff prohibits us from covering these sorts of events.

Also, Army Regulation 360-81, which governs the production and content of Department of the Army newspapers, states covering such events is not a function of the post newspaper or the Public Affairs Office.

If you need a photographer to record events for official purposes, call the Training and Audiovisual Support Center's photo lab at 545-4417.

Deadlines

Film, photos, stories, letters to the editor and other news items intended for The Bayonet must arrive in our office no later than noon Friday prior to the next week's publication. Also, you may leave stories, film, photos for publication in The Bayonet's drop box located in the Information Office, Room 111, Infantry Hall, Building 4. The publication deadline for items left in the drop box is noon Friday, also.

Copy must be typed and doubled-spaced, except for letters to the editor which may be handwritten. Everything else must be typed. Typed copy is easier for us to edit, easier for our typesetter and results in fewer errors.

Use civilian dates, times, the name of the building as well as the building number. You may include the street or road if desired. Also, be sure to include the first and last names of all individuals mentioned in the story, and spell out all acronyms on first reference.

If you submit an announcement for post briefs or community briefs, check it when it appears in The Bayonet. Then, if you must resubmit it at a later date, submit it as it ran in the paper.

Story ideas, submission

If you believe you have a good story idea and want to write the story yourself, call us to see if we're interested. If you don't want to write the story, call us and we'll arrange a time for you to talk with a reporter.

We reserve the right to edit all stories for publication, and we cannot guarantee if or when submitted stories will appear in the paper. Stories that are submitted after the deadline will be published in the next week's paper.

Stringers

Stringers are people belonging to various units who write about and take photos of unit activities for The Bayonet.

Without stringers, our coverage of unit activities would be decreased. Unit commanders who would like to arrange for a stringer should call The Bayonet's command information officer at 545-2201.

Stringers need not be trained or have experience as journalists; The Bayonet will provide training and materials including film and photo processing.

Letters

The Bayonet welcomes letters to the editor and readers' responses to the paper's content. Letters may be typed, or handwritten, and must include name and telephone number. Names may be withheld on request.

Photos

We will accept photos that are black and white glossy prints or color prints. We also accept black and-white and color negatives and color slides. We prefer action shots — people doing their jobs or interacting with other people. Head and shoulder shots of individuals are also acceptable.

Complaints

If you have a complaint, question or comment about The Bayonet, call the editor or the command information officer at 545-2201.

Corrections

We strive for accuracy, so if we make a error, we will correct it in the next edition of The Bayonet. Call us at 545-2201.

Adults should follow political correctness

So you're wondering about political correctness. My opinion is political correctness is for adults.

It seems that lately some adults have forgotten how to act civilized. Whoever started this political correctness thing wanted to make stricter guidelines in this society for parents to follow.

It's sad that we have political correctness floating around us now. Our society has changed. We parents have to set an example for our children.

I think that is what's wrong with children now. They had no example or no one to look up to growing up and what example they had wasn't a good one. You have parents who steal, do drugs, are violent and this is all happening in front of the kids.

So when a child takes a beer or when a child gets into fights, where has the child seen this behavior before?

About this other type of political correctness — "personhole," "snowperson" — you are looking at a very small group of extremists, so it's a very small chance you will run into one.

ID cards: New edition will fit in wallet, contains personal information

By Marc G. Turchin
Bayonet staff writer

Ever had to replace your identification card? Remember what it was like?

Long lines, name boards and computers going down are some of the problems from the past.

For those of you who need a new identification card because your old one is damaged, lost or expired, your new card will not be like your old one.

The new cards have more information than before and usually take less time to get, said Sgt. 1st Class Roger Woolfork, noncommissioned officer in charge of the Main Post Identification Card Section.

The new card has a tamper-proof laminate covering, a computer image of the person, a bar code on the back which contains the holder name, rank, Social Security number, height, weight, blood type and a random four-digit security code, Woolfork said. The security code is linked to a Department of Defense database and is used to determine whether or not the card is valid.

The card also features a holographic image, Woolfork said. In order to view the hologram, the card must be turned at a 90-degree vertical angle so that the front side of the card is up. At this angle, the image of the Great Seal of the United States layered over the letters "USA" can be seen. This hologram was chosen because it is transparent and will not take away from the photograph or obstruct data on the card when viewed at any angle, he said.

While the Identification Card Section will be printing out new cards, the old ones are still valid, Woolfork said. Those who do not need a new card will not be issued one.

The biggest difference between the old card and the new one is the process time.

The overall time for updating and issuing a new card is approximately 10 minutes, Woolfork said.

"It doesn't always take 10 minutes," he said.

With the automation installed, Woolfork said, there will be less waiting and less hassles.

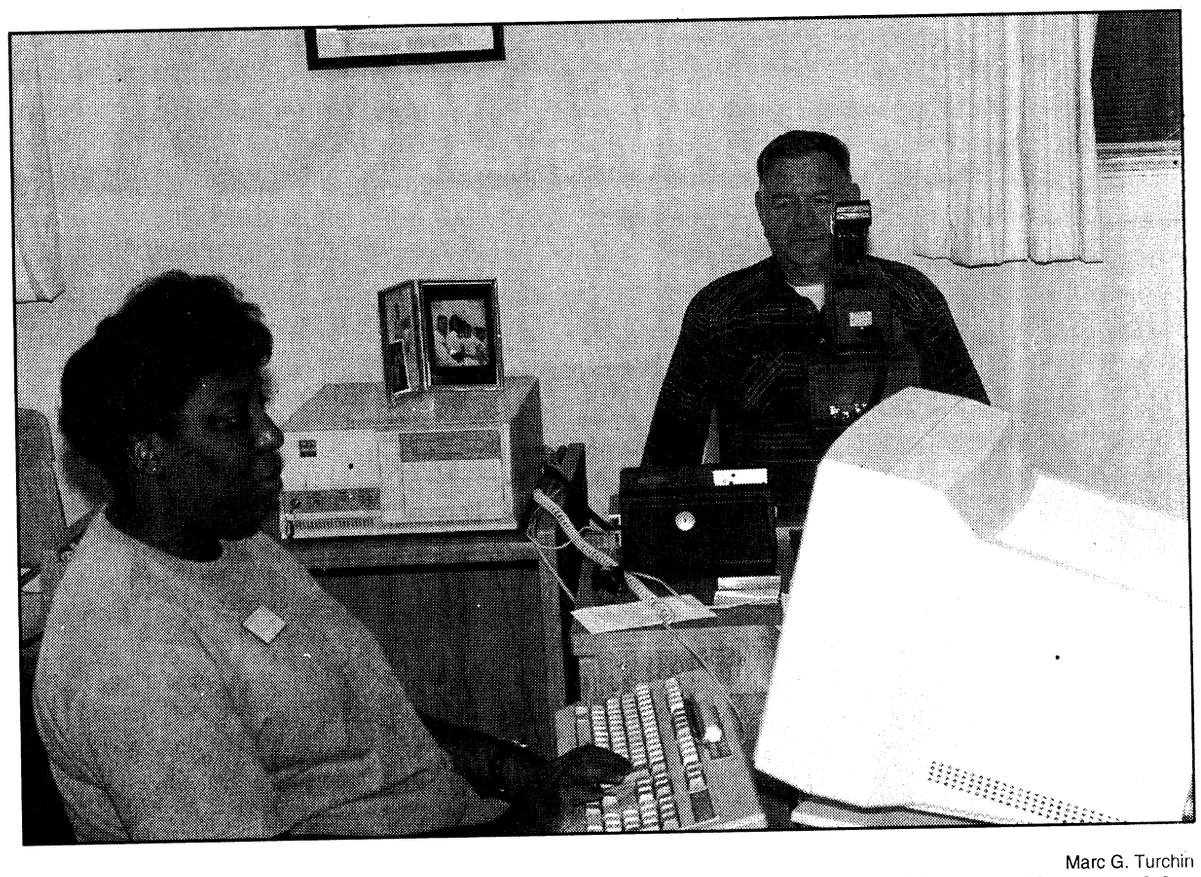
"It's real efficient," said Karen S. Jones, personnel identification clerk at the Identification Card Section.

She said there is less down time for the customer and the staff. "You get 'em in, you get 'em out. It's more streamlined."

Jones said that being able to work on one system the whole time speeds up the process.

With the new system, the use of name boards has been eliminated.

Name boards were considered a security feature to make tampering more difficult, Woolfork said. The new procedure eliminates the need for name boards because the computer has access to the database and prints the person's name on the card for you.



Another improvement is the size of the card. The identification card is the same size as a standard credit card and it fits easily in wallets.

These types of improvements and the new technology will allow the Army to plan for future uses.

One of those uses could be the ability to scan the card at the post exchange, Woolfork said. The scanner will tell the clerk if the card has expired or not, he said.

The Identification Card Section is located in Soldiers' Plaza in Building 2638. It is open from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday, Tuesday, Thursday and Friday, and from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. Wednesday. The section is closed Saturday and Sunday. Walk-ins are accepted but appointments are preferred. You can call for an appointment from 7:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Monday through Friday.

For more information, call Woolfork at 545-1411.

Trucking companies to offer job opportunities to soldiers

Job Assistance Center

Five major trucking companies will converge at the Job Assistance Center Jan. 13 from 9 a.m. to noon.

This Career Day, trucking companies and job seekers will have a chance to meet face-to-face to discuss employment opportunities. Attendees will have the chance to sit down with top trucking company recruiters and find out exactly what they have to offer.

Some trucking companies pay salaries while an individual completes a comprehensive training program.

First-year wages for inexperienced drivers are normally well above other entry-level jobs, officials said.

The Army Employer Network has more than 20 trucking firms that actively recruit soldiers getting out of the service. Additionally, the Transition Bulletin Board lists many driving positions on a daily basis. Accompanying this demand for drivers are requirements for mechanics, maintenance supervisors, dispatchers and terminal managers.

For information on qualifications and training, come to the JAC in Building 2634. You may sign up for this Career Day by coming by the Job Assistance Center or calling 545-2308 or 545-2309.

1994 in review

Benning is 'best' in world

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet©

Fort Benning was named the best Army installation in the world in 1994 in the Army Communities of Excellence competition, which, according to officials, was a fitting achievement for a post whose year was filled with accomplishments.

Post soldiers deployed to Haiti, Honduras, Southwest Asia and other places around the globe as the U.S. Army provided humanitarian and military assistance.

On post, Fort Benning enjoyed a year of ribbon cuttings, self-help projects, training programs and more throughout the year.

Soldiers get 'physical' in Upper Iowa University program

Course concentrates on developing fitness leadership

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet©

Upper Iowa University — Fort Benning's new off-duty education program is not yet a year old, but more than 100 students have already enrolled in its hands-on, mission-related physical readiness courses.

"We offer an associate of arts and bachelor of science (degrees) in physical education with a challenging but relevant fitness leadership emphasis," said Ed Thomas, program director. "Those who complete this program should be markedly more fit than when they begin."

According to Sgt. Maj. Donnie Carpenter of the U.S. Army Physical Fitness School, Upper Iowa University courses are valuable regardless of rank or military occupational specialty.

"This is a cutting-edge curriculum that's ideal for senior noncommissioned officers wishing to develop fitness leadership skills that can be marketed in the civilian community when they retire," Carpenter said.

Maj. Herbert Flora, executive officer to the special assistant to the commanding general, U.S. Army Reserve, said the program is attracting top-rate students. Flora already holds an undergraduate degree from another institution, but was so impressed with the courses offered by Upper Iowa that he enrolled in July.

"This is the kind of degree I have always wanted to pursue," Flora said. "The curriculum is a well-balanced combination of Army physical training doctrine and current innovations from the civilian sector. Most importantly, we get up on our feet and just do it."

First Sgt. Leon Johnson, Company B, 3rd Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment (Officer Candidate School), said he has heard many positive comments about the Upper Iowa program.

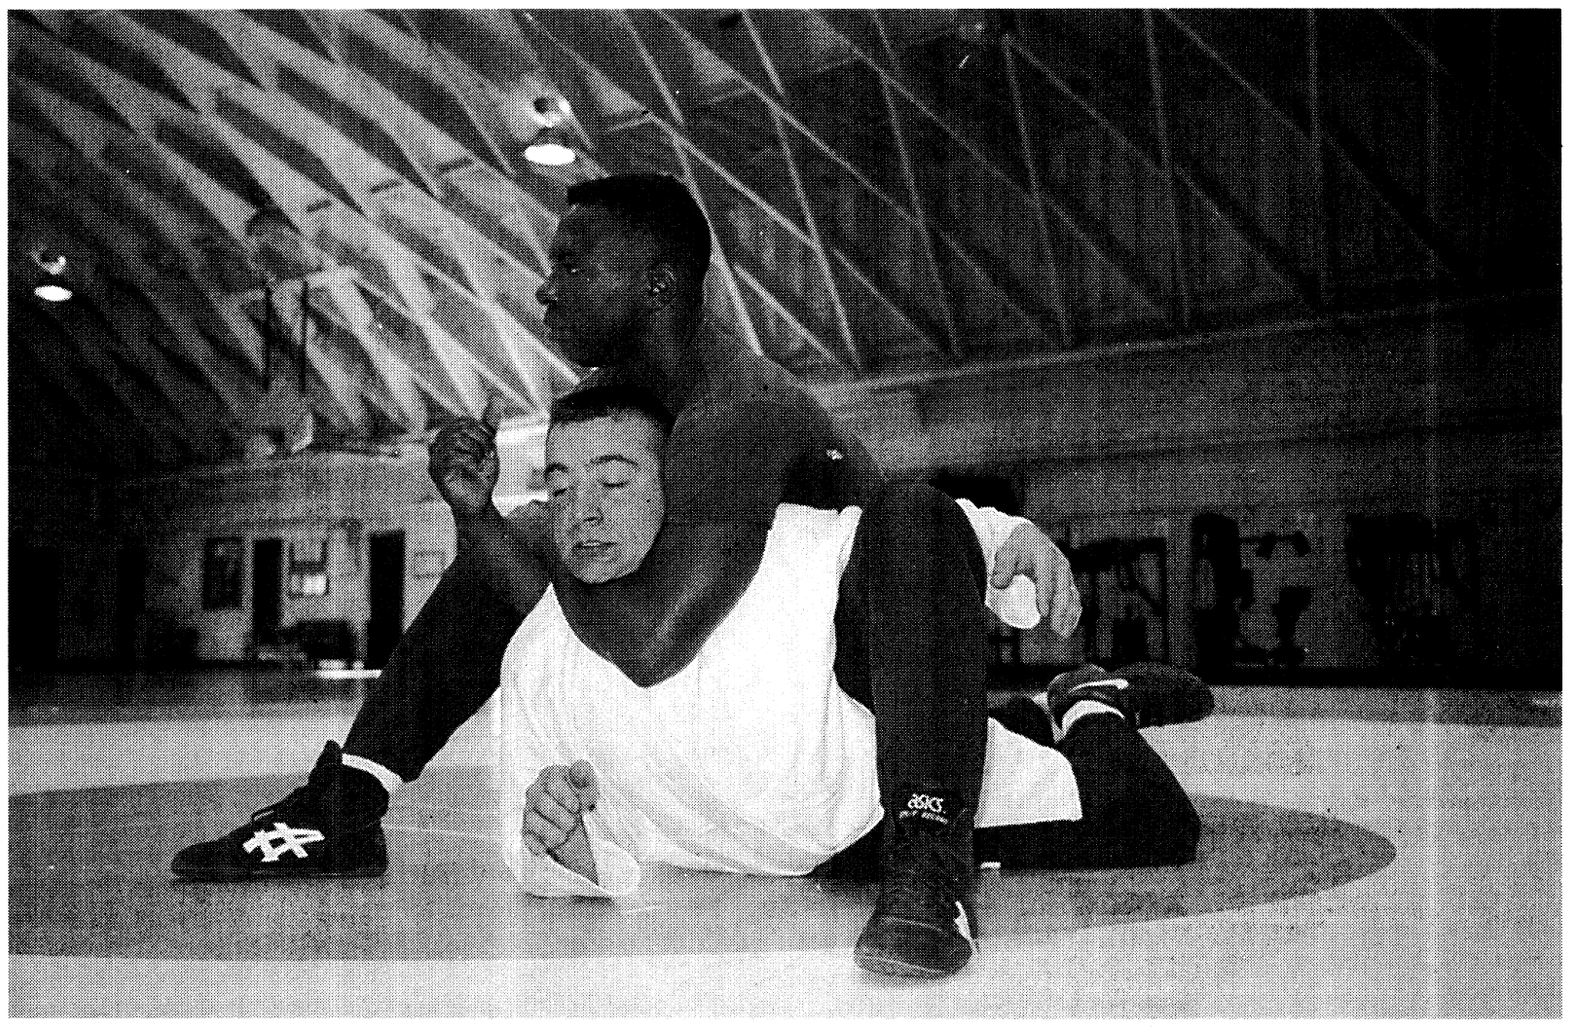
"Soldiers really appreciate the small classes and the individual attention and respect they receive from the Upper Iowa staff and faculty," Johnson said. "The program is a dynamic concept whose time has come."

The restorative and martial arts curriculum is designed to produce leaders who excel physically as well as intellectually, Thomas said.

"We offer action-oriented courses that develop both the body and the mind by focusing on physical training and combatives," he added.

Restorative arts are techniques that bring the body toward its optimal state of readiness. They include flexibility training, posture and relaxation, resistance exercise, first-aid, aquatics and aerobic training.

Martial arts are techniques that allow for appropriate responses to external aggression and include a variety of close quarter combat systems from both Eastern and Western traditions.



The restorative and martial arts components are complemented by traditional core and theoretical courses such as introduction to restorative and martial arts, foundations of conditioning, anatomy and physiology, exercise physiology, nutrition, human resource development and kinesiology, Thomas said.

Faculty members include cadre from the Fitness School. Steve Van Camp, director of the school's master fitness trainer course, teaches several subjects, including foundations of conditioning, which is modeled after the Fitness School course.

"The RAMA degree is a tremendous opportunity for the Fort Benning community," Van Camp said. "The curriculum begins with current Army physical training doctrine. From there we study and evaluate fitness concepts old and new that may well become tomorrow's physical training methodologies. For their efforts, students earn a post-secondary degree and gain expertise in an area that is immediately mission-relevant regardless of their military occupational specialty."

Active duty military, family members Department of Defense and Department of the Army personnel are eligible to enroll. Winter courses begin in mid-January and include introduction to RAMA, nutrition, posture and relaxation, aquatics, weapons (handgun), high-level wellness and medium-range combatives.

Registration continues through Jan. 13. For more information, call 685-9555, or visit the Upper Iowa University's Fort Benning office at Soldiers' Plaza, Building 2612.

Army Athletes of the Year

Lewis

Ridenour

January

• Post lands TKO in boxing tourney — The Fort Benning boxing team pounded out five straight wins to dominate the tournament at Kelley Hill Fitness Center Jan. 15.

Winners were Faustino Hernandez, Anthony Allen, David Williams, Brian Taylor and Yamar Resto Ferrer.

• Army names two Fort Benning soldiers athletes of the year — The Army has selected its athletes of the year, and both male and female honorees are Fort Benning soldiers.

Shon Lewis, a specialist with Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment, is the male athlete of the year after winning the national Greco-Roman wrestling title.

Rachel Ridenour, a sergeant with the 988th Military Police Company, was selected for the female honors.

Ridenour is an All-Army tae kwon do competitor who this year won the gold at both the Armed Forces Championships and the world Counseil International du Sport Militaire championships in Canada. Ridenour is the first U.S. soldier, male or female, to win the gold in that competition.

February

• Boxers "land jabs" at national championships — The fledgling Fort Benning Boxing Club recently competed Coors-Georgia USA Championship at the newly opened Holyfield Arena in Atlanta.

Although several team members won individual bouts, none was able to punch out a final in his weight division.

March

• Rock Steady captures basketball crown — The U.S. Army Infantry Center basketball tournament culminated in a 60-46 win by Rock Steady of the 608th Ordnance Company, 13th Combat Support Battalion, over the Gentlemen of Company B, 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment.

• Ranger sets record at USAIC Relays — One participant at the U.S. Army Infantry Center Relays ran his way into the record book.

Michael Raymond, 3rd Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment, set a new post record in the 3,000-meter run with a time of nine minutes, 9.06 seconds.

April

• Shooters go for gold in World Cup — The United States team took the Gold and Silver Medals at the World Cup USA hosted on Fort Benning by the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit. More than 400 athletes from 43 countries competed in various events during the championships.

May

• More than 1,700 participate in Festival of Running — Michael Raymond made post history by winning both the 5k and 10k runs at the Officers' Wives' Club Festival of Running May 14.

• Post athletes compete in Military Appreciation Week events — Boxing, wrestling, combat cross-country, tug-of-war, track and field events volleyball, soccer, softball, swimming and cycling were some of the events hosted local businesses and Association of the United States Army chapters to celebrate Military Appreciation Week.

June

• All-Army runner looks for "world-class" — what's 21, single, in the Army and very fast? Pfc. Sherri Reese, of 1st Battalion (Airborne), 507th infantry, 11th Infantry Regiment, has been a member of the All-Army Track and Field Team for the last two years. Reese hopes to be selected for the World-Class Athlete Program.

July

• Soldier helps Army win volleyball title — With his military career, coming to its end, Damon Dicus, a specialist with Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment, only wishes he had heard about the All-Army sports program sooner.

Dicus represented Fort Benning as the All-Army Volleyball Team served up a victory in the recent Armed Forces Championship at Camp LeJeune, N.C.

August

• Bandits become back-to-back champions — The 1994 USAIC women's softball championship came down to one game July 28 at Gowdy Field, with the Bandits holding up to win their second straight championship, this year defeating Down and Dirty 16-7.

• Law Dogs lock up Barbarians 13-11 — The 1994 USAIC men's softball championship at Gowdy Field Aug. 18 between the Law Dogs of the Military Police Activity and the Barbarians of Company E, 2nd Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment, was a never-say-die struggle to the very end. The Law Dogs had their day with a 13-11 win for their first post championship in more than 10 years.

September

• Runners qualify for Army 10-miler — Seven Fort Benning runners qualified for the Army 10-miler from the field of 24 hopefuls that gathered Sept. 17 at Santiago Fitness Center on Sand Hill.

Qualifiers are: Samuel Bobbitt, David Millet, Geri Foster, Gerald DeGaetano, Lloyd McDonald Jr., Michael D. Raymond and alternate Steve Lewis.

• Rangers host 'different' tourney — The 4th Ranger Training Battalion hosted a payday golf tournament Sept. 2 that gave the 107 participants a taste of ranger life.

Members of the 4th Bn. dressed in camouflage and gave "blocks of instruction" on the course. At one hole, for example, a ranger instructor supervised golfers tying a "round turn" knot with two half-hitches. Those who tied it correctly were allowed to move up 100 yards.

October

• Cruise-matics win home opener — The Columbus and Fort Benning rugby football club, the Cruise-matics, tarnished the Montgomery Yellowhammers 60-14 in the first home game of the season Oct. 8.

November

• Cougars prey on Road Dogs in post football championship — In a game that had the potential to be a barn-burner, the Cougars of Company C, 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment, used defense to become post champions Nov. 8 at Doughboy Stadium with a hard-fought 12-7 victory against the Road Dogs of the 104th Transportation Company, 36th Engineer Group.

December

Lures improve fishing

commentary

Bass anglers agree one of the keys to catching fish in today's often crowded lakes is using lures the fish haven't seen as often. In the winter months one lure few anglers try is a topwater plug.

"The most important thing to remember about using a topwater lure in cold water is that you really don't want to make a lot of commotion with it," said former fishing guide David Wharton of the Johnson Outboards Pro Staff.

"The bass are not as active, so you want to keep the lure in front of them as long as you can."

Wharton's favorite type of topwater lure is commonly known as a "twitch bait," a lure that floats at rest but which dives several inches underwater when moved.

"I like to make a cast, then let all the ripples die before I move the lure at all," he said. "Then I barely move it so the lure just noses underwater and comes back up. When the ripples die, I move it again.

"Just remember to move the lure real, real slow."

At times Wharton also uses chugger-type topwater lures in cold weather. These floating plugs generally feature a concave face that "chugs" or "pops" when twitched. Again, however, the key to attracting strikes is working the lure very slowly.

Bass frequently move into shallow water whenever a lake rises after rains, said the Johnson pro, even in the winter. This is the ideal time to fish a topwater lure, working it right along brushy shorelines where bass are likely to be searching for food.

"Another place to look for shallow bass in cold water is near vegetation, such as grasslines and mossbeds," said Wharton. "Thick vegetation attracts baitfish throughout the year, and the baitfish attract bass. If you see small minnows swimming near the surface, it's time to start using that topwater lure."

When he is fishing vegetation in cold weather, Wharton tries to find isolated patches rather than long beds because traditionally these seem to produce better action. Even a small patch of greenery a few yards away from a much larger bed is worth a few special casts.

A third place Wharton likes to fish is around rock riprap, especially near bridge crossings where there is a nearby deepwater channel.

Winter fish worth waiting for

By Earl Bentz and Steve Price
Outboard Marine Corporation

commentary

Randy Dearman remembers a day last winter when two of his friends braved icy temperatures, wind, and sleet to go bass fishing. The water temperature stood at 44 degrees, but they caught six bass over six pounds and lost another that probably weighed between 10 and 12 pounds.

"Winter fishing can be like that," said Dearman, who is a full-time professional fishing guide.

"I remember a tournament where the air temperature fell as low as five degrees but it still took nearly 50 pounds to win."

He said the thing to remember about cold weather fishing is to fish slowly and carefully.

"Because bass are cold-blooded, their body temperature matches that of the surrounding water," said Dearman, "and the colder their body temperature, the slower they react."

That means fishing very close to heavy cover, because that's where the fish will be located, Dearman said, and the best lure to fish slow and in cover is a jig with a pork trailer attached.

"A jig lets you use a pitching or flipping presentation that puts the lure right into the thickest brush and then leave it there," said the Johnson pro. "You can move it slowly up and down, shake it, or even hop it, but basically, you can work it in the same area.

"You also have to be thorough in your fishing. A bass may be positioned on one side of a bush, but he won't move to the other side to strike your lure. You have to put it in front of him, fishing all sides of that bush."

Dearman said not all winter bass will be in deep water, either. His two friends caught all their bass in water less than 10 feet deep.

"Deep water was located nearby," Dearman said, "but the fish were around cover in the shallow water. The heavier the cover, the more shallow the fish will be.

"My favorite winter cover is vegetation, but if I can't find hydrilla or moss, then I look for bushes, fallen trees, or even rocks. I know I won't get many strikes during a cold day on the water, but if I force myself to fish slowly and carefully, I'll certainly get enough action to make it worthwhile."

Soldiers compete in bowling tourney

By Jim Gallagher
Association of the United States Army

Teams from throughout post participated in the Operation Holiday Bowling Tournament, sponsored by the Association of the United States Army and B&B Beverage, at the Main Post Bowling Center Dec. 19, 20 and 21.

The Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment team, led by Staff Sgt. Clarence Harris, unseated last year's winner, the U.S. Army Medical Department Activity team, with a score of 7,723.

The MEDDAC team, led by Command Sgt. Maj. Hoyt Clark, finished second with a total score of 7,552.

Third place was captured by a team from the 29th Infantry Regiment's Bradley Fighting Vehicle New Equipment Training Team, led by Sgt. 1st Class Jose Diaz, with a score of 7,529.

Individual honors went to:

• Staff Sgt. Shirley Edwards, MEDDAC, who won female high series with a total score of 1,531

• 1st Lt. Jennifer Amos, 13th Corps Support Battalion, who won female high game with a score of 204

• Staff Sgt. Joe Tillman, HHC, 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment, who won male high series with a total score of 1,696

• Spc. Jason Derrico, 586th Engineer Company, who won male high game with a score of 254.

Retired Col. Burnet R. Quick, Fort Benning's former chief of staff and Operation Holiday Committee chairman, presented the awards at a ceremony the last day of the tournament.

Military Police Activity

The following entries were taken from the Fort Benning Military Police blotters from Dec. 8 to 14. Such entries may be incomplete and are not the adjudication of guilt or innocence of any person.

• A family member wife and a civilian were charged with theft by shoplifting at the Main Exchange. They were seen removing one ring each from the display shelf and placing them on their fingers; they then departed the store without rendering proper payment.

The two individuals were detained. Once the MPs arrived they were apprehended and searched; one subject was found to be in possession of a wristwatch that she failed to pay for in addition to the ring.

Both subjects were taken to the MP station where they were processed and issued ID card confiscation orders, suspension of post exchange privileges and released.

• A specialist was charged with carrying a concealed weapon and aggravated assault. The specialist was involved in a physical altercation with another soldier when he removed a knife from the back of his battle dress uniform and stabbed the soldier in the leg. The injured soldier was transported to Kelley Hill where he was treated and released. The soldier was cited for the above offenses, processed and released to his unit.

• A former service member was charged with larceny of government property when he continued to draw active duty pay and allowances, totaling $8,998.42 to which he was not entitled after separating from active duty. The subject admitted to receiving and spending the payments

• A juvenile was charged with theft by shoplifting at the Mini Mall Exchange. He was observed removing one cassette tape at the display case, hiding it and departing the store without rendering proper payment.

When asked to return to the security office he ran away and was caught in front of the post office. Upon arrival of the MPs, he was apprehended and taken to the station where he was processed, issued ID card confiscation orders, suspension of on-post exchange privileges and later released to his sponsor.

• A staff sergeant and his wife were charged with assault. He and his wife were involved in a verbal argument that escalated when he struck her on the side of her face with his hand, at which time she struck him with a plate.

Upon arrival of the MPs, the soldier and his wife were apprehended and taken to the station where they were processed and cited for the offense. The soldier was released to his unit and his wife was released on her own recognizance.

Other activities include l0 cases of driving under the influence of alcohol, 14 traffic accidents, 14 cases of larcenies and six cases of shoplifting reported at the exchange facilities.

ask the judge

Office of the Staff Judge Advocate

Q: I purchased an appliance locally and was furnished free warranty coverage on the purchase for a period of one year. What exactly is covered under a warranty, and how may I exercise my rights if the warranty is not honored?

A: A warranty is now a common part of retail business, but this was not always the case. Long ago, the rule in retail purchasing was "let the buyer beware" or "as is."

This has changed to the extent that most of us as consumers expect a warranty, and assume that there is a warranty on any new retail purchase. However, the terms of a warranty are not the same for all purchases, and there is more than one kind of warranty.

There are two major categories of warranty, known as express and implied. The express warranty is so called because it is usually spelled out in writing, and is either a full warranty or a limited warranty. Express written warranties are covered by federal law. Implied warranties are creations of state law and are of two types — the warranty of "marketability" and the warranty of "fitness for a particular purpose".

Express warranties are either full warranties or limited warranties. These are somewhat self-explanatory, but the full warranty has a specific meaning under federal law.

A full warranty means that a defective product will be repaired or replaced free, that the product will be repaired within a reasonable time period, that the warranty covers anyone who owns the product during the warranty period and that replacement or refund will be offered if the product cannot be repaired within a reasonable period of time. A limited warranty is by definition anything less than a full warranty.

An implied warranty of marketability means that a product is in proper condition for sale, and that it works for what it is intended, that is, there is nothing wrong with the product, and that it will work for a reasonable length of time. This is not expressly stated anywhere, but it is implied by the law. If an oven does not heat, or if it heats unevenly, it is not "marketable." Even if there were no express warranty, the manufacturer would have to repair this defect.

A warranty of fitness for a particular purpose is a special type of warranty that arises when a customer relies upon a seller's advice that the product can be used for a particular purpose. For example, if a seller advises that a particular washing machine will wash 20 pound loads of wash, and the buyer takes that advice and buys the machine, it must be able to wash 20 pound loads, or may be returned or replaced.

The warranties may work together in some cases. For example, a television set may have a limited warranty covering parts and labor on the picture tube for one year. However, a television lasts a considerable time. If the set does not work after one year, a warranty may be implied depending on the period that it is reasonable to expect the television set to work, and depending upon the defect.

Any time you have a warranty problem, you should seek to enlist the aid of the retailer first. If the retailer cannot or will not honor the warranty, the manufacturer is next. Then a complaint may be made to the Federal Trade Commission, the Better Business Bureau and the state attorney general's office.

It may also be possible to file suit in small claims court to enforce the warranty. Many times, the threat of action will encourage the retailer or manufacturer to assist you.

For general advice, the Legal Assistance Office, Building 5, is available to assist you in these and other matters by appointment. Office hours are 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. For more information, call the office of the Staff Judge Advocate at 545-3282.

FRANK R. LOYD SCHOOL

Displaced students prepare to board 'Starship'

By Jerrie Macintire
Special to The Bayonet©

When Loyd School students boarded their school buses this week for the first day back after the winter break, they found themselves in a different school but with the same teachers, classmates, computers and library books.

The students, who spent the first three months at Loyd School on Sante Fe Road, will complete the academic year at Building 3305, otherwise known as Kinsman Barracks on Sand Hill, according to Dell Karr, superintendent.

The barracks, known as a "starship" because it is self-contained with classrooms, dining and athletic facilities, will house the school until roof repairs are completed at the Loyd building.

Problems with a leaky roof forced the closing of the school Dec. 14, just before the holiday break, said Judy Gilliam, Loyd principal.

The moisture from the leaks caused mold to grow in some locations in the school. Hospital officials said the mold did not pose a health threat, but long exposure could lead to irritation if it remained unchecked.

The logistics of moving an entire school were enormous, according to Frank Calvano, assistant superintendent for curriculum.

"The fact that Building 3305 is a nice facility adds to the morale of the staff," he said.

The facility is a large, well-lighted, well-heated brick building with plenty of space for all the classrooms as well as library, cafeteria and even superb athletic facilities, Calvano said.

The only thing the military training facility lacked was an intercom system; school officials will use a walkie-talkie system to communicate in the large building, Gilliam said.

With personnel working some weekends and some vacation days during December, the move went smoothly, according to school officials. Soldiers from the Infantry Training Brigade who remained at Fort Benning during the holidays joined forces with the Directorate of Public Works, the Directorate of Logistics, and school officials in packing and moving the contents of the entire school.

"The support from Martin Army Hospital and the command group at Fort Benning were absolutely essential in making this a smooth transition to our new "'Starship Loyd,' " said Gilliam with a smile.

Jane O'Hern, who has taught at Loyd since it opened in 1959, agreed the move went well. As she methodically unpacked boxes in preparation for classes to start Thursday, O'Hern greeted visitors with a cheerful "Hello. Welcome to Loyd."

"The Loyd family is a very cohesive group of teachers. We work very well together. No matter what the facility, we just plan to provide the best education possible for our Loyd Panthers," she said.

Although O'Hern and her peers had encouraged students to take the unexpected move in stride, it was the well-traveled military youngsters who seemed most unaffected by the change, Gilliam said.

Jerrie Macintire/Special to The Bayonet

Doris Wamble, first-grade teacher at Loyd School unpacks boxes Wednesday while Dick Skinner, assistant superintendent for budget and personnel, moves a file cabinet. Teachers and administrative personnel wore blue jeans and rolled up their sleeves in a coordinated effort to put classrooms together before Thursday.

"Our students are old hands at moving. They gave advice to their teachers to let them know what to expect when the movers arrived," Gilliam said.

When classes resumed at the new location Thursday, students were greeted by faculty and staff wearing black fleece shirts that read, "Starship Loyd; We boldly go where no other school has gone before."

Although the students missed two days of school because of the logistics of the move, it will not result in lengthening of the academic year, officials said.

AMU:

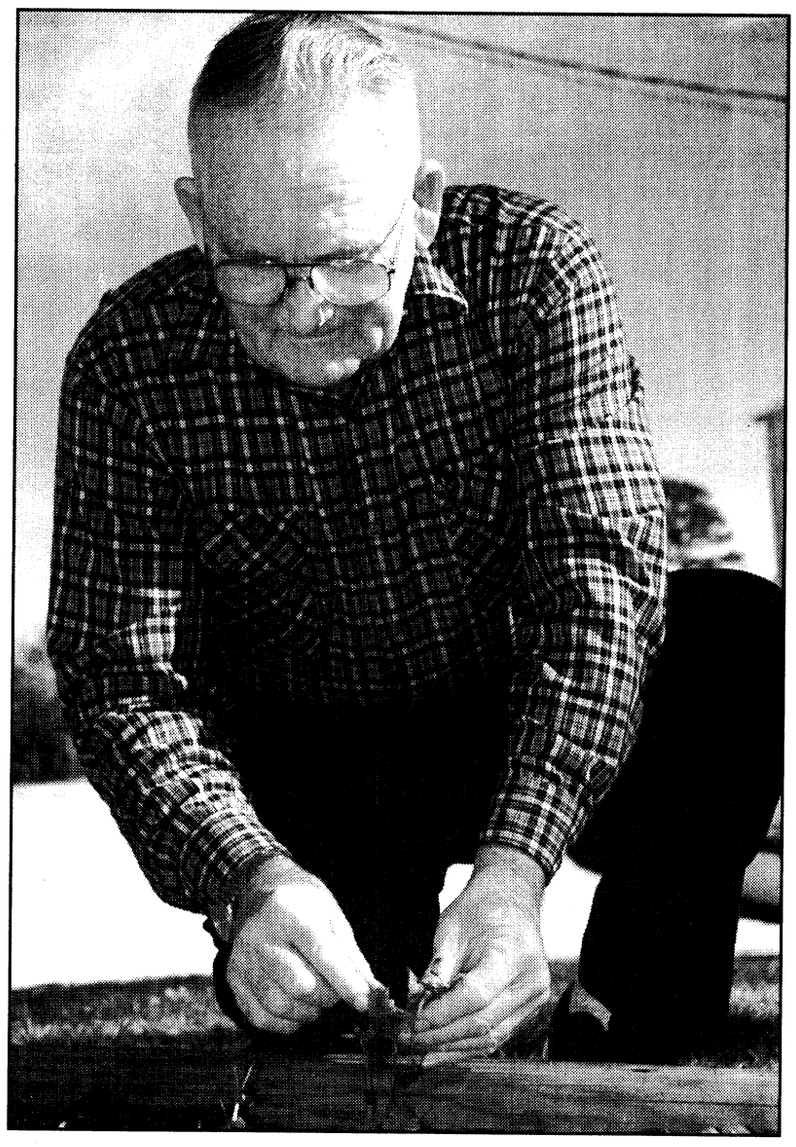
plant a flower, feed the deer

U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit

Building and repairing guns for the most elite Army shooters in the world isn't enough for a U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit gunsmith.

Shelva Smith, a small arms repairman, has taken up gardening during his lunch hour at the USAMU, and the Fort Benning deer appreciate it.

Trying to spruce up the scenery for the winter months, Smith brought in a flat of pansies and planted them behind the USAMU's Headquarters building. "Pansies are a winter flower," Smith explained.



But two days after the flowers were planted, Smith noticed that the blooms had disappeared. So other members of the unit got involved. Anne Pallotta, the USAMU secretary, brought in another flat of pansies — all with nice colorful blooms. Again the next day, the blooms were gone, snipped away.

"The deer had eaten them all," Smith said. "I learned that deer love pansies."

Smith, who has been with USAMU since 1967, doesn't proclaim to be a green thumb. "I just enjoy pretty flowers," he said. At his home in Seale, Ala., Smith has a large flower bed full of daisies and lilies. There the blooms see a full life. But at the USAMU the blooms are snatched as quickly as they are planted.

That's half the fun, according to Smith. "At times the guys will just sit on the back (stairwell) and watch the deer eat them. They'll eat the crabapples, too."

Other USAMU staff members agree. They found the whole situation quite entertaining. One morning a sign appeared that read, "Mr. Smith, please plant some more of the yummy red ones. Sincerely, FBG (Fort Benning, Georgia) deer." Smith does just that. Instead of fighting off deer, Smith has decided, at least for now, to continue to provide a colorful winter snack for his animal friends. On any given day, you can sit and watch the deer walk up to the flower bed and eat them.

EFMP to start education forum

By Jerrie Macintire
Special to The Bayonet©

In an effort to further enhance resources available to individuals with disabilities, the Exceptional Family Member Program is starting a regular education forum, which will feature lectures, support groups and seminars.

The first meeting of the Education Forum is scheduled for Jan. 18 from 11:30 a.m. until 1 p.m. and will feature Randall Paschal, president of Access, Inc., an association dedicated to helping individuals with disabilities live as independently as possible.

"This first meeting will focus on helping transition special needs adults into job situations," said Mark Mills, EFMP recreation specialist.

The lectures, scheduled for alternate months, will highlight civilian resources available to exceptional individuals, according to Mills.

Mills said he hoped to raise awareness of various resources available to special needs individuals while helping those with special needs find a place for themselves.

The forum, which will be offered every other month, will help special needs individuals in three ways, Mills said:

• The forums will provide access to professional care providers. Following lectures, participants may use the question-and-answer portion of the program to discuss problems associated with various disabilities.

• The forums will include others who live with exceptionalities. Individuals who have succeeded despite disabilities will discuss first-hand how they overcame obstacles and the methods they used. Guests will also discuss what agencies best served them.

• Access to EFMP personnel is another advantage to the forums, Mills said. Members of the EFMP staff will be on hand for questions and advice, and will welcome comments from participants.

"This is a chance to exchange input on program needs, what programs need change and ways to state concerns on issue and procedures," he stated.

To register for the first lecture at the Family Unit Network Center, Building 359, call Frances Howard, director of EFMP, or Mark Mills at 545-6969, 545-3344, or 545-5516.

Library offers resources for disabled

By Jerrie Macintire
Special to The Bayonet©

The Exceptional Family Member Program resource library has proved a valuable service in helping military families cope with disabilities, according to Mark Mills, EFMP recreation specialist.

Since its establishment six months ago, the library has had more than 2,000 users who have borrowed such items as books, recreational equipment and therapeutic devices to teach living skills, Mills said.

"We have had outstanding feedback from borrowers. They usually return for more information: I get repeat users all the time," he said.

Established to provide information, teaching aids and games to families of those enrolled in the EFMP, the resource library includes books such as "Educating Children with Multiple Disabilities," videos such as "Vision Exercise," and equipment like the "Dressing Board" which helps children learn how to tie laces, open and close snaps and operate zippers.

The resource library covers a "multitude of disabilities," Mills said.

The EFMP is a mandatory program designed to serve individuals who require special care for a disability, according to program director Frances Howard.

"The EFMP provides soldiers a means to identify special educational, medical, community support and housing needs," according to Howard.

As the Army downsizes and resources become more limited, early enrollment in the EFMP is more critical to meeting a family member's special needs, she said.

If family members have special needs, screening , enrollment and update of the EFMP documentation are mandatory requirements, she added.

Although soldiers have expressed concern that enrollment in the program will hurt their careers, Howard said participants will not be at a disadvantage.

"Enrollment in the EFMP is a discriminator in assignment location. It is not a discriminator in career management, selection, or promotion process," she said.

"The EFMP is essential to placing the right soldier with the right assignment, and at the same time balances the family's educational and medical needs, Howard said.

AAFES increases cost of movie tickets

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Effective Jan. 2, it costs a little more to attend movies at Army and Air Force Exchange Service theaters on post.

AAFES officials said the cost to see a first-run movie increased to $2.75 for adults and $1.50 for children. The move is in line with AAFES movie theaters worldwide.

Bob Maddin, AAFES sales vice president, said the price increase is the first for theaters in 10 years. Maddin said the price increase still allows patrons to watch feature films at a savings. The average ticket price at commercial theaters is $4.14, so "tickets at AAFES theaters are still a bargain," he said.

Mall Service Station to close for renovations

To reopen in April with credit-card operated pumps

By Jan Wesner Childs
Special to The Bayonet©

Gas pumps at the Mall Service Station are closed until at least April 26 so the facility can be renovated.

Work includes replacing aging underground fuel storage tanks and installing pumps that will accept credit cards.

"The tanks are very antiquated," James Kotani, retail business manager for the Fort Benning exchange, said Monday. "The new tanks are insulated in accordance with the latest federal environmental regulations."

Samuel Harris, chief of engineering for the Directorate of Public Works, said the tanks are being replaced because they have leaked and contaminated surrounding soil. The new tanks will be double-walled for better protection.

The project will cost about $1.1 million, he said. The contractor is R.J. Brown and Associates.

Besides being more environmentally sound, the revamped gas station will also be more user-friendly, Kotani said. The gas pumps will be equipped to take credit cards.

"It's going to enable customers to be able to use the credit card right at the pump," he said. "It's more convenient for the customers. It gives them flexibility."

The pumps will accept Visa, Mastercard and Discover cards, he added.

While the pumps and gas tanks are updated, AAFES will redo the interior and exterior decor of the facility.

The automotive store and service bays at the mall station will remain open during the renovations.

Operating hours at the Main Post Car Care Center, meanwhile, will be extended for customer convenience. It will be open from 7 a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday through Friday and 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday and Sunday.

All other post service stations will continue normal operations (see box).

FORT BENNING HISTORY BOOK
published to commemorate
FORT BENNING'S DIAMOND JUBILEE
1918 - 1993

History of Fort Benning

Fort Benning celebrated its 75th Anniversary last year, and The Bayonet published a special edition to coincide with the celebration. Soon after the special edition of the paper was published, we began looking at the information about Fort Benning that we had collected and decided that it was simply too good to leave it just in newspaper form.

We knew the book would be interesting and informative. The next step was to make it as attractive as possible. An experienced layout and design firm was hired, and they have done an absolutely superb job. You will enjoy thumbing through its pages for years to come. You will also be proud to put in a prominent place at home for friends to enjoy, or at work for your customers to see. And, if you're looking for gift for a retiree or a friend who may have served at Fort Benning and is no longer here, there's no better way to remind them of your friendship through the years.

The hardcover book has 168-pages and is filled with more than 200 photos. The book includes detailed timelines of significant events that have shaped Fort Benning, an overview of the post's involvement in World War II, Korea, Viet Nam, and Desert Shield/Storm, detailed information on the current major units, and a variety of stories and information that round out the post's colorful history.

It is a 'must have' for anyone who is part of Fort Benning's colorful history. It's a book that will be a lasting memento of the winner of the 1994 Commander In Chief's Award signifying it as. . .

"The Best Extra Large Army Post in the World!"

PARACHUTE RIGGERS ARE SURE — ALWAYS

By Ruth J. Spaller
Bayonet staff writer

More than 20,000 soldiers a year go through airborne training at Fort Benning.

Add to that number the more than 5,000 soldiers who jump with the 4th, 5th, 6th and 7th Ranger Training Battalions; the 3rd Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment; the School of the Americas; and Reservists and soldiers from outlying units who come here to participate in airborne operations — the final tally will give you the number of people who put their lives in the hands of the riggers who pack and maintain their parachutes.

The riggers of Company E, 1st Battalion (Airborne), 507th Infantry, 11th Infantry Regiment, are divided into four platoons, according to Capt. Glenn M. Kallgren, commander of the rigger company.

One is dedicated to packing parachutes, one is responsible for parachute maintenance and repair, one issues and keeps accountability of all parachutes used at Fort Benning, and one is dedicated to supporting the 75th Ranger Regiment (it is the only platoon in the 11th Infantry Regiment which regularly deploys).

Easily distinguishable by their bright red baseball caps with silver wings pinned on the front, the riggers live by a pledge that begins "I will keep constantly in mind that until men grow wings, their parachutes must be dependable," and ends "I will be sure always."

Not only is the pledge painted on the walls of the "pack shed," a large warehouse-like building lined with 30-foot-long counters on which parachutes are laid out to be packed, but it is ingrained, through training and constant monitoring, into the minds and the habits of the riggers who work there.

The parachute packing process is set up on a three-tier inspection system, Kallgren said. Each rigger performs seven checks at certain points in the packing process, which are double checked by a parachute inspector. The inspector monitors the whole process, then performs a final inspection at the end.

Riggers pack up to 25 parachutes a day — no more — to guarantee the quality of their work.

"We discourage 'racing,' " said parachute inspector Staff Sgt. Phil Kylestewa. "It's not the time that matters; it's the quality. We teach riggers not to get into bad habits, not to be be in a rush and not to cut corners."

Kylestewa, who has packed nearly 10,000 parachutes in 10 years as a rigger, admits that doing the same thing 25 times a day — day after day — can be "a little monotonous."

But he said he takes pride in packing a "pretty parachute," and he takes the responsibility of packing and inspecting parachutes very seriously.

"I take it as putting someone's life in my hands, and that's the greatest responsibility you can have in the military."

Riggers are taught this responsibility early. Before they graduate from Rigger School at Fort Lee, Va., all riggers, who must be airborne qualified, jump with a parachute they have packed themselves.

Also, each parachute has a small record book attached that the rigger who packs it signs when he or she is done.

"When they sign their names, they're signing off that they would jump that chute," Kallgren said .

"It's a big responsibility to put on a 19-year-old's shoulders. Day in and day out, this has to be perfect; there's no room for mistakes," he said.

Crossed lines or a parachute canopy that doesn't deploy properly in the air can mean serious injury or death.

But riggers are perfectionists by nature, said Sgt. Herschel L. Gillens, a squad leader at control and issue. "We have to be, because we jump the chutes we pack."

Knowing that the riggers pledge to stand by their own work reassures many jumpers.

"I know they jump their own chutes," said Airborne School student Spc. Michael Black, "so I'm sure they know what they're doing."

"The volume of parachutes we have packed without accidents speaks for itself," said Ranger Support Platoon sergeant Sgt. 1st Class Angel M. Marin.

Spc. Brian Buol, a rigger in the Ranger Support Platoon, packs a parachute used for high altitude, low opening jumps.

A rigger ties the parachute to the deployment bag with 80-pound break-away cord.

Haiti complex provides 5 training ranges

Unique range offers deployed soldiers opportunity to sustain skills

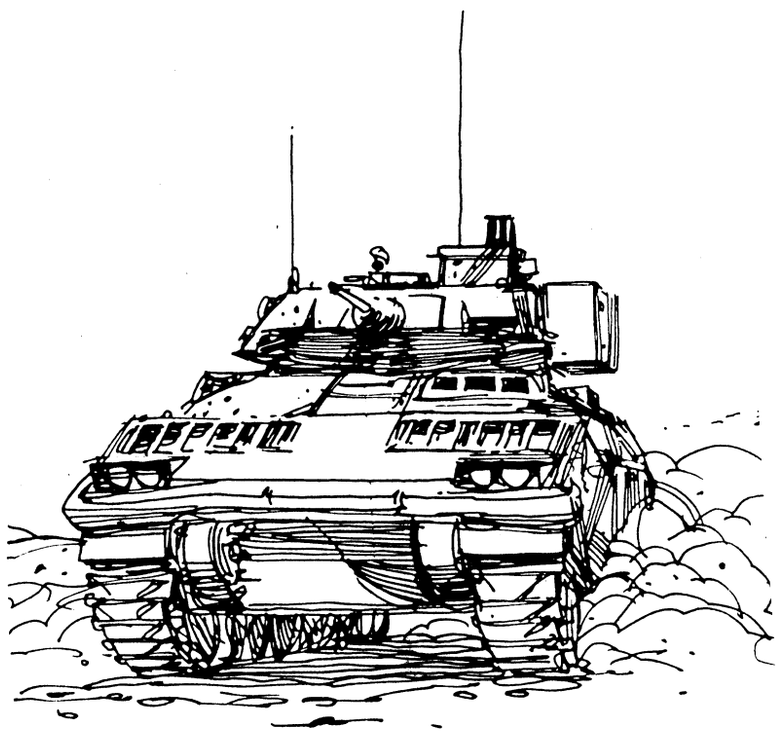
Army News Service

PORT AU PRINCE, Haiti — On a hot, breezy day alongside a turquoise lake the soldiers of the 1st Battalion, 87th Infantry, ready their weapons. The initial ready platoons will attack two objectives in a combined air assault and mechanized attack.

Two Cobra helicopters pop up to strafe the first objective. Mortars fire to soften the target. Four Blackhawk helicopters speed in to deliver the air assault force.

Where is this scenario playing out? The National Training Center at Fort Irwin, Calif.? Ranges at Fort Benning, Fort Drum, N.Y., or Fort Bragg, N.C.?

No, it is the Multi-Purpose Range Complex in Ganthier, Haiti. The complex includes five ranges designed for a wide variety of weapons, from 9mm pistols to 81mm mortars, from Cobra gunships to Bradley Fighting Vehicles.



The range was designed and built by Training and Doctrine Command's Combat Training Support Division of the Army Training Support Center, Fort Eustis, Va. Heavy equipment support came from the 52nd Engineer Battalion (Combat Heavy) from Fort Carson, Colo., and the 41st Engineer Battalion, Fort Drum.

With the live-fire exercise under way, the CTSD team worked on the marksmanship ranges for the M16 rifle. The team hires Haitian laborers to do the detailed digging around the target emplacements.

Every morning at 8, the team selects 25 workers from among 100 or so applicants. Maj. Michael Kallman said they hire a few of the hardest workers back every day, but generally they hire new applicants.

"Although it slows us down a little having to train new people every day, it seems more fair," said Kallman.

The Haitians earn 82 Haitian gourde, about $6, per day. That is about twice what the Haitian government pays its road crews and enough to feed a family of four for about 10 days. The annual per capita income in Haiti is about $150.

The complex includes five ranges designed for a wide variety of weapons, from 9mm pistols to 81mm mortars, from Cobra gunships to Bradley Fighting Vehicles

"Some people come from as far away as Croix des Bouquets, which is about 20 miles," said Maj. Stephen Ritz. "Some walk as far as 10 miles to get the job."

Kallman and Ritz are engineer officers in ATSC and were instrumental in designing and building the range. They have overseen the engineering aspects of the range from concept to reality.

Officers, noncommissioned officers, Department of the Army civilian employees and contractor support personnel comprise the CTSD team.

The range is unique in its design. The special challenge of building it was the lack of electricity at the site. All other Army ranges have some electrical support.

To meet this challenge, the ATSC team resurrected 25-year-old M1A1 target lifters from the scrap heap. The lifters normally operate on 110 volt AC current, so they converted them to operate on 12 volt DC current. The 12 volt current comes from no-maintenance gel cell batteries which are recharged using solar panels.

"The solar panel charges the battery for most of the day," said Staff Sgt. Johnny Redmond, noncommissioned officer in charge of targetry. The battery then stores the charge so it can operate even when the sun is not shining.

"The battery charger can take a direct hit by a bullet and continue to work," Redmond said.

Redmond said the CTSD mission is "actually placing the equipment into operation." That included consolidating all the pieces of range equipment at Fort Eustis, Va., and putting it together in the warehouse to see if it worked, before shipment to Haiti.

Another unique feature of this range is radio-controlled pop-up targets. All other Army ranges are hardwired for control of pop-ups, but that requires electricity. The handheld radio controllers were designed by contract and have a working range of up to two kilometers.

Jack Becker, Department of the Army civilian employee and 20-year Army veteran, estimates that this deployable range package costs about half of what a comparable hardwire range would cost.

The team deployed to Haiti for two weeks in November for site selection and preparation, then returned in December for about 10 days to install the targetry.

"This brings into view what we do back at CTSD in support of the front-line soldier," said Becker. "What we do supports the troops. That's what is important from the TRADOC perspective."

The range will be turned over to the 10th Mountain Division from Fort Drum.

"Prior to turning it over to the unit, we will make sure it is fully functional, give them some training on how it works and on proper care of the equipment," Redmond said.

The range will eventually be turned over to the 25th Infantry Division from Schofield Barracks, Hawaii. Schofield Barracks is the only other Army location using solar power on the range. Eventually, the range will probably come under the control of the United Nations Mission in Haiti. When the U.N. departs, the control for the range may revert to the Haitian government.

Besides live-fire exercises, the ranges allow deployed soldiers to qualify on individual weapons including the M-16 rifle, the 9mm pistol and the M203 grenade launcher.

The live-fire exercise proved the range's value to deployed units. "This is a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity," said Sgt. Greg Murry, a dismount platoon Leader with B Company, 3rd Battalion, 15th Infantry. "We've done about 30 training exercises since I've been here, and this is the best one yet. We rarely get to do any live-fire training, especially at this level."

"For being in Haiti, they did a real good job with this range. This exercise was good for skills sustainment," said Sgt. Tadd Icenogle, 1st Platoon squad leader from Company A, 1st Battalion, 87th Infantry. "It's good to have this range here to train on. We're getting better training here than we would be able to get this time of year at Fort Drum."

Award to honor contributors to ground warfighting capabilities

Adjutant General's Office

The Frederick M. Franks Jr. Award has been established by the U.S. Army Infantry Center to recognize individuals who make long-term contributions to the ground warfighting capabilities of the U.S. Army.

The award will be presented annually to an active duty or Reserve officer, noncommissioned officer, Depart-ment of the Army civilian or a leader in business and industry.

Additionally, this individual should have shown two or more of the following characteristics of duty performance during the year or years preceding the award:

- Offered a vision for the future of the mounted war-fighting force that significantly improved combat survivability, lethality, maneuverability or mobility
- Developed an innovation in equipment, materiel or doctrine that significantly enhanced the effectiveness of mounted elements of the combat arms
- Exemplified professional excellence in demeanor, correspondence and leadership on issues relevant to mounted warfare
- Revealed a love of soldiering through leadership skills, recognition of the sacrifice and achievements of subordinates and attention to the intent and directions of higher commanders.

Any individual can recommend another individual for the award.

Recommendations are submitted through the brigade level or equivalent military or civilian organizations, as appropriate, to Adjutant General Awards Section, Attention: ATZB-AGP.

Award packets must be received by March 1.

Fort Benning can only forward one nominee for consideration of the award. Therefore, all recommendations will be forwarded to the commanding general for decision on which nominee will be forwarded to the Fort Knox, Ky., award selection panel.

Nominations will be made in the form of a letter to the president of the panel, detailing the achievements of the nominee according to the criteria listed.

The period of eligibility is the calendar year.

Recommendation of an awardee will be made by the Franks Award Panel and forwarded to the chief of armor for final approval. The winner will be presented his or her award at the annual armor conference May 3.

Cost of the trip will be paid by the U.S. Army Armor School.

For more information, call the Adjutant General Awards Section at 545-2803 or 545-1576.

Cub Scout Pack 271

Cub Scout Pack 271 from White Elementary School conducted its Raingutter Regatta Nov. 29.

The race began at 7 p.m. with Trailblazer district commissioner, Capt. Mike Kozlik, judging the boats on original design and painting.

Assistant Cubmaster Maj. John H. Miller started off the competition with 40 boats in the race. It ended with a lot of wet decks and four boats as finalists.

First-place trophies were awarded to the winners of each den. First-, second- and third-place trophies were awarded to overall pack winners.

The winners of the Pack 271 Raingutter Regatta are:

Den winners

Tigers (first grade) James Manness

Wolf (second grade) David Jackman

Bear (third grade) Brandon Knapp

Webelos 1 (fourth grade) Jon Rutledge

Webelos 2 (fifth grade) Eric Burtner-Abt

First-place — Burtner-Abt

Second-place — Manness

Third-place — Knapp.

How To Recycle

Post housing residents may place recyclable materials in brown plastic bins for weekly curbside pickup.

Here is a list of the items that can and cannot be placed in the bin for recycling.

• Glass: Only the following can be recycled: soft drink, beer, juice, ketchup, wine, liquor and food containers. All caps and lids are to be removed and containers are to be rinsed out. Special care should be taken to avoid breaking glass when placing it in the recycling bin. Glass will be separated by color at the curb for processing at the Materials Recovery facility.

• Cans: Only aluminum and steel cans are accepted at this time. Cans must be rinsed out. Labels may remain on the cans.

• Plastic: All plastic materials containing the Recycling Triangle (Three Chasing Arrows) may be recycled. This includes soft drink bottles and milk jugs. Caps must be removed and may be placed in the recycling bin. All containers must be rinsed out.

•Paper: All paper products except used personal type materials may be recycled. These items should be placed in brown paper bags or bundled together and tied then placed beside the recycling bin.

NOTE: incidents whereby used personal items are placed for recycling is cause for rejection.

Cardboard: Pick-up of cardboard from moving will be coordinated directly with the Materials Recovery Facility, at 544-6142. Ask for the manager or leave a message containing your address, housing area, name and phone number.

Inert Waste: Tree limbs, grass clippings and leaves will be picked up on Mondays only. Clippings and leaves should be placed in a garbage can and tied or in a trash can with a lid.

Trash and recycle pickup schedule

Household trash and recycling will be collected once a week on the same day. If there is recyclable material mixed in with the trash can it will not be picked up until the following week, or until recyclables are separated.

We are servants not heroes

By Alex Brown
2nd Mobile Army Surgical Hospital

"Real-life heroes in a jaded world." This was the headline of a recent newspaper article describing the bravery of four Atlanta men who "got involved."

Risking personal safety, they tackled a car-jacker who attacked drivers, having already killed one. The article reports, "Their bravery may well have saved lives. They risked harm to themselves to protect others." Such inspiring words describe the heroic deeds of caring citizens who simply got involved.

The media reports such events because of the heroism. These men "risked their lives." This act has the makings of a movie. The article concludes, "although they resist anyone calling them heroes, their actions make them worthy of the label."

More than being heroes, these four men are servants. A hero is a mythological or legendary figure of great strength or ability — one who is admired for some achievement or certain qualities. If we label these men heroes, then there will be few such acts of others getting involved because we don't think of ourselves as heroes — at least we won't admit it. We call them servants.

What is a servant? Many will think of a slave or one in a lowly position. Chuck Swindoll gives some helpful Biblical insights on this concept of serving in his book, Improving Your Serve: The Art of Unselfish Living, (1981 Word Inc.).

A servant is one who does not hide the realness of his humanity. When it hurts, he says "ouch," admitting that he is not perfect. A servant is genuinely humble. He has nothing to prove and nothing to lose. He does not resist being accountable, nondefensive when confronted, and really wants to help others. A servant is absolutely honest — when no one is looking. A servant gives, forgives, and forgets the wrong committed against him. ("Write injuries in dust, benefits in marble")

There are servants all around us: a mother nursing her baby; father taking his children to school, practice, and don't forget rehearsal; a mess sergeant and cooks serving hungry, tired soldiers in the field in the cold, early morning; a soldier cleaning his weapon, serving his country; a teacher who years ago patiently tutored a struggling student who is today her personal physician; a neighbor who puts your garbage on the curb because you forgot. She watches your healthy child, while you rush the sick one to the hospital.

Notice the guy driving the tractor, mowing the grass, the same guy who blows the leaves in the fall — a servant. The first sergeant who gives water to a thirsty private — a servant. A parish council that prays and labors for the congregation — servants. Now that the budget has been drastically cut, servants are greatly needed.

Get involved. Serve someone

reflections

throughout all of the new year. Maybe you can't afford to buy a gift (the budget being as it is), but you can go and visit at the hospital, fix someone a meal, invite someone over, listen to a child. Serve someone and you will be in their eyes a hero. You will also be in good company.

"For even the Son of Man did not come to be served, but to serve, and to give his life a ransom for many." (Mark 10:45, NIV)

Columbus to present Southern Gospel Showcase

The Watkin's Group Inc.

The Watkin's Group Inc., in conjunction with It's All Good Entertainment Group, will present the fourth annual Southern Gospel Showcase in Columbus Feb. 11 at the Three Arts Theater at 7 p.m.

The Atlanta-based companies will be presenting talent from around the country in celebration of Black History Month.

Participants for the event will be coming from Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Louisiana and Ohio. Plus, voices from various Columbus churches will join together and perform as a mass choir.

A percentage of the proceeds will benefit the Columbus Shelter for Children and the the Watkin's Group Scholarship Fund.

The following performers will on hand for the event:

The Pinehill Youth for Christ (Phenix City)

The Lyles Family Singers (Phenix City)

The Capitol City Mass Choir (Montgomery, Ala.)

The Gospelettes (Havana, Fla.)

The Modern Gospelaires (Orlando, Fla.)

Bessie Bradley (Jonesboro, La.)

Cody (Cleveland, Ohio)

The goal of the Watkin's Group is to make Columbus the spotlight for this annual event.

Tickets will be $10 in advance, $8 for military, and $12.50 at the door.

For tickets and more information, contact Charlene L. LaDay, Columbus coordinator for the Watkin's Group.

Sex: Celebrate God's 'wonderful gift'

By Randy Homes
USAIC Chaplains' Office

reflections

Usually, God is the last thing on our minds when we think, talk or engage in sex. This comes as no surprise.

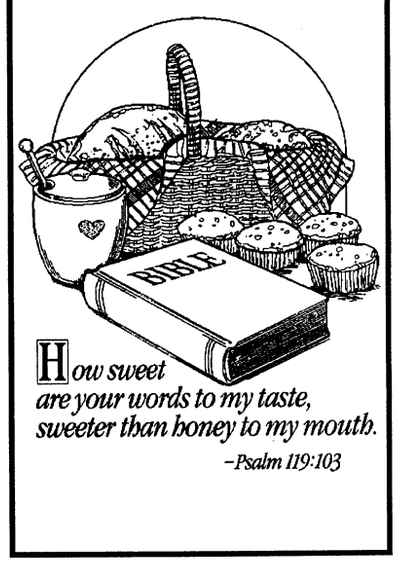
Since the events in the Garden of Eden, we have possessed a kind of schizophrenic thinking about God and sex. Many of us conclude that God and sex are like the proverbial oil and water — the two are in no way related and can never be mixed.

The way many people live, the separation between God and sex seems to be irreconcilable. Others silently hope the schism will never be bridged.

Unfortunately, the Christian church must bear the weight for much of the blame of the disassociation between God and sex. In its effort to emphasize the spiritual dimension of reality, the church neglected or even discredited the physical aspect of our beings.

A balanced understanding of the Bible liberates us to see our sexual nature as God's wonderful gift. Genesis tells us, "Male and female he created them..." and "The man and his wife were both naked and they felt no shame." The Song of Solomon celebrates sexuality when the lovers say to each other, "How much better is your love than wine."

The pleasure and beauty of sex point us to the undeniable order, complexity, balance and harmony of creation. The symmetrical and complementary differences between men and women indicate the existence of a loving Creator. Could it be that our sexual nature actually points us to God?



The Bible teaches all of creation, including sex, moves us to internally or intuitively know God exists. The Bible views sex as sacramental in that the act of sex is a sacred symbol of God's desire to live inside of us. It should not surprise us, then, that violating the sacredness of marital and monogamous sex carries with it devastating consequences.

Most people think of God's laws as repressive and constrictive. They think of God as some horrible character who tries to prevent people from having a good time. God is someone to avoid. His rules for living are things to ignore so you can have fun and really enjoy life.

Nothing is further from the truth. God's laws, particularly those regarding sex, are given not to rob us of pleasure. On the contrary, his principles provide us with the boundaries we need to protect us and keep us safe.

God knows the kind of mental, physical, emotional and relational pain people suffer when they misuse and abuse their bodies. He knows how unprincipled sex disrupts and destroys people's lives. Consequently, God gives us healthy guidelines to follow in order to get the most out of living. When we misuse our sexuality, we do not celebrate the best of life.

God wants us to celebrate sex as a special gift he gives us.

How sweet are your words to my taste, sweeter than honey to my mouth.
-Psalm 119:103

chapel notes

Protestant Women of the Chapel — Protestant Women of the Chapel will have a new Bible study starting Thursday.

The studies offered are "Experiencing God" by Henry Blackaby, "Walking with Christ" and "The Character of Christians" by Navigator Press, "What Happens When We Pray for Our Families" by Evelyn Christenson, "Becoming a Woman of Excellence" by Cynthia Heald and "Covenant" by Precepts Ministries.

The group meets every Thursday at 9:30 a.m. in Building 2527, located off Indianhead Road and Thorson Street. Child care is provided in the adjacent building. An evening study will also be offered if there is enough interest.

For more information, call Cindy Russell at 561-3348.

Communion classes — First Communion classes will begin Tuesday at 7 p.m. at the Religious Education Center. There will be a parent orientation meeting Jan. 3 at 7 p.m. Children in grades two through six are eligible to participate. Preregistration is encouraged. For more information, call 545-5508 or 545-3461.

Catholic community — Confirmation classes for adults will begin Jan. 22 at 1 p.m. in the Religious Education Center, Building 2522. Classes are for adults who have not been confirmed.

To register, call Phil Reilly at 545-5508 or the chapel at 545-1452.

Prayer breakfast — The Fort Benning National Prayer Breakfast will be Jan. 26 at 6:30 a.m. in the Supper Club at the Officers' Club. Chaplain (Col.) Calvin H. Syndor III, the Training and Doctrine Command chaplain, will be the guest speaker.

Tickets are $5.50. For more information, call Chaplain (Maj.) Carl Young at 544-7317 or see your unit chaplain.

Adult discussion group — The Catholic community will sponsor an adult discussion group each Sunday from 10:20 to 11:10 a.m. in the auditorium of Dexter School. Several topics will be discussed, and videos will be shown.

For information, call 545-5508.

Prebaptism class — Couples intending to have their child baptized in a Catholic church must attend a prebaptism class.

The next class is scheduled for Jan. 8 at 1 p.m. in the Religious Education Center, Building 2521.

Preregistration is encouraged. For information, call 545-5508.

Sunday School — Protestant Sunday School for all ages will meet every Sunday throughout the holiday season at 9:30 a.m at the Religious Education Center. For more information, call Bill Putman at 545-4715.

Christian initiation — The Rite of Christian Initiation will meet every Wednesday at 7 p.m. in Building 2522 to guide those interested in Catholicism to begin their gradual process of conversion or to provide information for practicing Catholics.

Advance registration is encouraged. For more information, call Phil Reilly at 545-5508 or the Main Post Catholic Chapel at 545-3461.

TIPS FOR MAKING YOUR AD MORE EFFECTIVE

- Start Your ad with the item you are selling, service you are offering, or job title you are looking to hire.
- Be descriptive. The more information you provide to the reader, the better the responses will be to your ad.
- Use bold type, white space of decorative characters such as stars, to bring attention to your ad.
- Run your ad for an ample length of time. Remember, as soon as you get results, you can cancel at any time .
- Always include the price of your item.

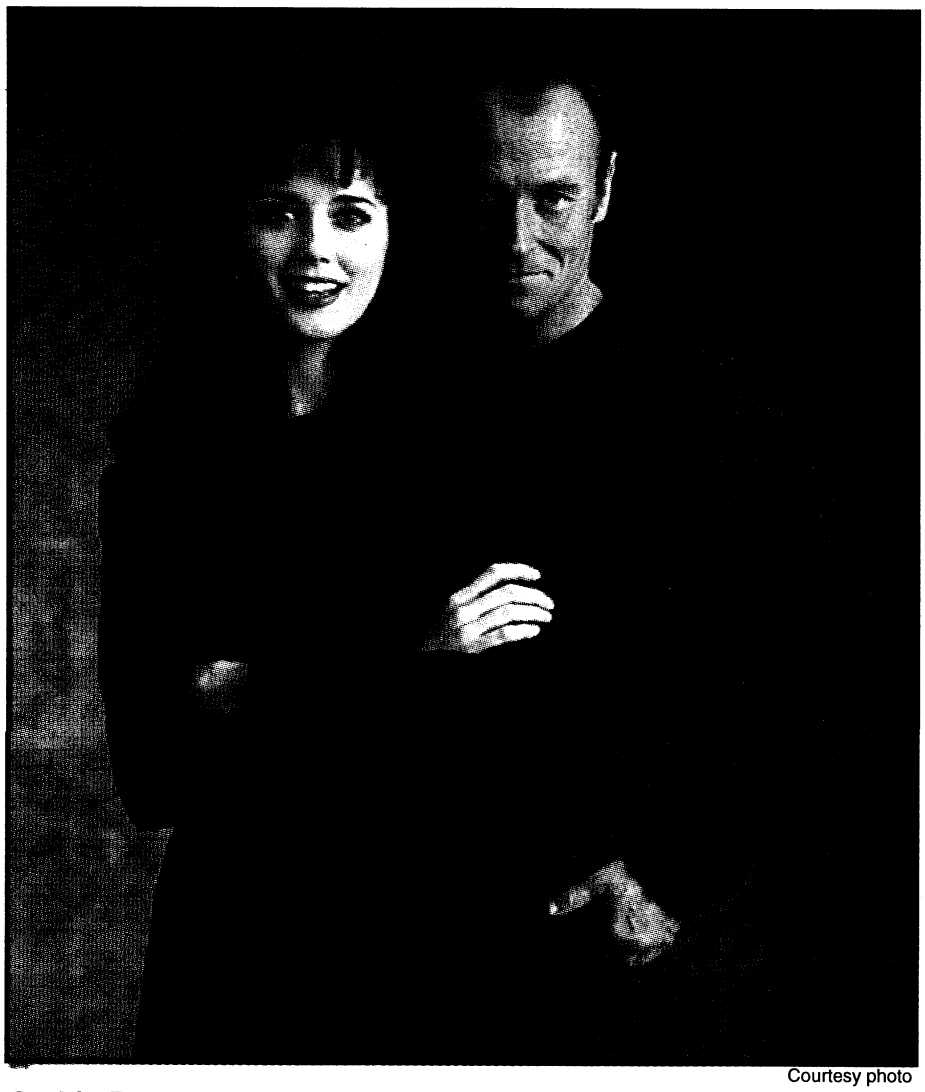
ABC comedy 'A Whole New Ballgame'

By Jay Bobbin
Tribune Media Services

For its female star, the new series "A Whole New Ballgame" has a rather literal title.



SPOTLIGHT

Premiering Monday on ABC, the comedy is the second show of the current season for Julia Campbell, one of several veterans of the now-defunct "Blue Skies," which was set in a mail-order-catalog company. Campell plays Meg O'Donnell, the general manager of a Milwaukee television station, who has to adjust quickly to the presence of the new sportscaster and self-assured baseball superstar Brent Sooner, portrayed by "L.A. Law" alumnus Corbin Bernsen, who had other plans for himself during the game's strike. His deal with his team's owner has resulted in the broadcasting job, and much to the displeasure of his new boss, the athlete is an immediate hit with viewers. She quickly deduces that she'll have to get used to him, while trying to resist his ample charisma.

Among the other holdovers from "Blue Skies" are co-stars Richard Kind and Stephen Tobolowsky — as the station's sales manager and weatherman, respectively — and executive producers John Peaslee and Judd Pillot, who previously worked on "Coach," now the lead-in for "A Whole New Ballgame."

"It was pretty surprising," said the friendly Campbell of her quick shift from one series into another, "because right before we went on hiatus, we were told that the network was really enthusiastic (about 'Blue Skies'). They wanted to bring on another character to provide another dimension, specifically for Ellie (Campbell's role), but the show ending never seemed like a possibility at all. We had also been informed that we held something like 92 percent of the male audience from 'Coach,' which was exactly what the network had wanted, so we thought we were doing OK." Still, Campbell allows that some problems were posed by regular pre-emptions in the Mountain time zone because of live ABC's "Monday Night Football" telecasts; "A Whole New Ballgame" won't face that hurdle, since the sports program has finished its season.

Campbell got word of the change in a meeting with the producers: "They said that 'Blue Skies' was no more, and that they were pitching another idea, and they'd know about it by the following Monday. It was four days of, 'I liked my job. I loved my character. NOW what are we gonna do?' It turned out that ABC picked up ('Ballgame') for 13 episodes, and that was even shocking to me. There was no script, so it was a 'blind' purchase." As "thrilled and flattered" as she was to land another series right on top of her previous one, Campbell also "felt bad" for her primary "Blue Skies" co-stars, the suddenly jobless Corey Parker and Matt Roth. "It was really a mixed bag for me. I don't know where (the decision) came from that the guys weren't staying, I just know that the network wanted to revamp the show."

Museum to feature African-American artist

Works focus on an interpretation of black life in the South, Harlem

The Columbus Museum

This survey of the career of one of the nation's central African-American painters of the 20th century includes work from throughout Johnson's career — from landscapes painted in France and Denmark during his student days to mature explorations, in a jazzy abstract style, of his memories of the rural South, Harlem dance halls and Army experiences in World War II.

Johnson (1901-1970) was born in Florence, S.C., but his youthful aspirations were unattainable in a segregated South. He moved to New York City in 1918, attending the prestigious National Academy of Design School. Excelling in painting, he received private support in 1926 for a year's study in France.

With the grant extended, he lived in Paris and later on the French Riviera until 1929. He returned to the United States and set up a studio in Harlem; but in 1930, he moved to Denmark where he married a Danish artist and lived for eight years.

Although landscape themes and portraiture had dominated his European years, when he returned to America in the late 1930s, Johnson began painting interpretations of black life in the rural South and in Harlem.

His inspiration and emotional sustenance came from the life around him, which he painted with poignancy and gentle wit.

He concentrated on African-American culture and captured the history, folklore, imagination, rhythm and spirit of his people. Johnson's mature works relate not only to the black experience in America but also to the complex and multi-faceted face of American modernism in art, literature and music just before and during World War II.

They attest to a time when Johnson and others recognized the significance of black America's contributions to American culture and the richness of African-American history.

In the 1940s, Johnson's life fell apart. A damaging fire in his loft, the death of his wife and the beginning of a debilitating mental illness ended his career. He spent the last 23 years of his life in a New York mental hospital.

When Johnson entered Central Islip State Hospital, his paintings were placed in storage. In 1956, the Harmon Foundation agreed to assume responsibility for more than 1,300 paintings, drawings and prints from throughout Johnson's career.

In 1967, when the Harmon Foundation ceased operations, the collection was transferred to the National Museum of American Art. An extensive conservation program was begun at the museum in 1989 and special exhibitions, such as this retrospective, have showcased his work since that time.

The exhibition was organized and circulated by the National Museum of American Art, Smithsonian Institution.

The Columbus Museum is located on Wynnton Road. Admission is free and hours are Tuesday through Saturday from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. and Sundays from 1 to 5 p.m. The museum is closed on Mondays and holidays.

COMMUNITIES OF EXCELLENCE

Fort Benning impresses ACOE team

By Ruth J. Spaller
Bayonet staff writer

Fort Benning, competing a third straight year for the Commander-in-Chief's Award as the best Army installation in the world, hosted the Army Communities of Excellence team Sunday through Thursday.

The members of the team visited and evaluated many post services and activities, including:

- Medical and dental services
- Military personnel services
- Army Career and Alumni Program
- Financial management
- Housing
- Civilian personnel
- Army and Air Force Exchange Service
- Morale, Welfare and Recreation
- Family support
- Chaplains' services
- Safety
- Public Affairs
- Engineering services
- Environment
- Logistics.

At a final meeting, the comments by members of the team about the activities they visited ranged from "fantastic programs," and "most comprehensive teamwork I've ever seen," to "a fine example of what can be done by soldiers, for soldiers."

Team Chief Lt. Col. Bob Lacey, said the things that will stick in his mind about Fort Benning are the partnership and cooperation between the community and military, the total quality of customer service that providers are giving to soldiers, family members, civilians and retirees here, and awards and recognition programs like Fort Benning's quarterly excellence breakfasts and the newly instituted command retreat ceremonies, which, he said, are "by far the best I have ever seen in the Army."

Marc G.Turchin

Maj. Gen. John W. Hendrix, commanding general, presents Fort Benning's trophy for best extra large installation in the Training and Doctrine Command to Sarah McLaney, ACOE coordinator, at the ACOE pep rally Jan. 6.

Fort Benning was the team's first stop on its tour of installations.

"Our visit here has been a very positive story," Lacey said Wednesday. "When we leave here tomorrow, going on to the next place, we're going to leave here saying you are winners in your own minds and in ours. I don't know how you are going to get much better than what you are now."

Army Communities of Excellence awards are given yearly to Army installations for their efforts to provide support to soldiers, civilian workers, retirees and their families.

The program has award categories for large, medium and small installations both in the United States and overseas, as well as one overall award.

Winners in each category are awarded $500,000 and the winner of the Commander-in-Chief's Award receives $1 million.

In 1994, Fort Benning won the Commander-in-Chief's Award, recognizing the post as the Army's best.

The post will be competing against Fort Sill, Okla., again this year in the best large installation category, as well as 15 other installations in the United States and overseas for the overall award.

"The hardest thing a winning installation can do is stay on top," Lacey said. "Everyone is using you as the benchmark for setting their standards; and, in order to remain out front when you're already at the top, you've got to find ways to continuously improve."

Did the team see improvements at Fort Benning this year? "Absolutely," Lacey said.

Winners of the Communities of Excellence awards will be announced in April.

Mall to undergo renovation

By Jan Wesner Childs
Special to The Bayonet©

The Post Exchange and some areas of the Main Mall are undergoing a $6 million renovation to better serve customers.

Mary Babbitt, general manager of Army and Air Force Exchange Service at Fort Benning, said the expansion will add 26,000 square feet of space to the PX and the mall. The facility now covers about 72,000 square feet.

"We'll be able to better serve customers," Babbitt said. "The mall will be reconfigured and refixtured."

The revamped mall will include a new food court and seating area. Babbitt said there may also be some new concessions.

The garden shop and outdoor children's play area at the PX will be enclosed and used for sales space, she said. The garden shop and play area will move to the back of the store.

"Almost every department in the store will be expanded," PX manager Mike Woodard said. "Because of the physical plant we now have, we cannot carry the amount of merchandise and the stock assortment that we need to satisfy our customers."

In addition, a new furniture store will be constructed adjacent to the Class Six store.

"We will be expanding the

Refill pharmacy to improve customer service

Karen S. Morarie
Bayonet staff writer

The Medical Department Activity officially opened its new refill pharmacy, located at the Main Mall, in a ribbon-cutting ceremony Tuesday.

Col. Michael Kussman, MEDDAC commander, welcomed the Army Communities of Excellence evaluation team members to the ceremony.

Each team member was given a hat emblazoned with REP, which Kussman said stands for MEDDAC's motto: Remain customer focused, Embrace change and Pursue excellence.

Maj. Gen. John W. Hendrix, commanding general, also spoke at the ribbon-cutting.

The new facility, Hendrix said, will enable Pharmacy Services to meet the medical needs of the community "more fully and more efficiently."

The refill pharmacy, according to Col. Errol L. Moran, chief of Pharmacy Services, will accomplish several goals, all of which are aimed at improving customer service.

Increased space, from 100 to 900 square feet, and increased stockage, from 800 to 1,200 items, will enable the refill facility to handle all refill needs, he said, amounting to an average of 1,000 prescriptions each day.

"We've combined the new pharmacy with a call-in system. We've had this (call-in system) for some time, but we've always felt it was never utilized to its capacity," he said.

By using the call-in system, Moran said, pharmacy patrons can cut their waiting time to virtually nothing, and still receive next-day service. The number to call for refills is 544-1352.

The automatic menu at this number will request the numbers of the prescriptions, which are located at the upper left-hand corner of the prescription labels. Patients will also need the last four digits of the sponsor's social security number.

Once the call is made, Moran said, patients can then pick up their prescriptions at the call-in counter beginning at 9 a.m. the following day. Walk-in patients may have to wait in line behind other patients, and will also have to wait for the medication to be dispensed. Patients are requested to bring their empty prescription bottles with them.

Although most prescriptions are refilled with a 30 days' supply, Moran said, soldiers going to the field or on temporary detached duty who need more than a month's supply of medication can still use the phone-in system.

"If you hold on the line instead of pressing '1', you can record a message explaining your circumstances," he said, "and the pharmacy will still refill your prescription."

Karen S. Morarie

Col. Michael Kussman, Maj. Gen. John W. Hendrix and Command Sgt. Maj. William H. Acebes officially open the new refill pharmacy.

Moran said the new pharmacy was designed to meet increased patient demand.

"The space we had previously — the little booth just outside the Commissary entrance — was just inadequate," Moran said. "We foresaw that the PRIMUS (Primary Care for the Uniformed Services) Clinic would be moving into the hospital, and we knew that would increase the prescription load by about 20 percent."

Moran said the new facility is not only larger than the old one, it provides a more pleasant, relaxed atmosphere for patients.

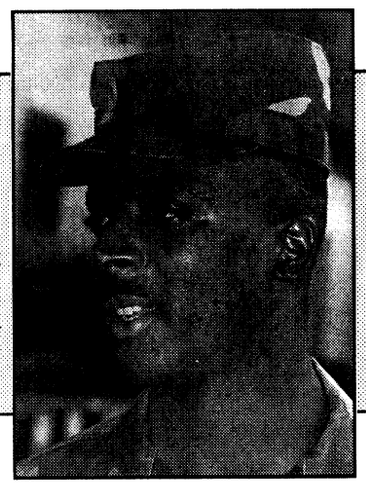
"There was always a lot of noise (at the old location), and it could be confusing," Moran said. "The new pharmacy is much quieter, and we think a nicer place for the patients."

The new facility is a glass-walled, self-contained room, complete with plants and upholstered chairs. It is located next to SatoTravel at the mall.

Hours of operation are from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday through Friday. The pharmacy will be closed Saturdays, Sundays and holidays.

VARIOUS VOICES

What are the qualities you look for in a leader or supervisor?



Maj. Edwin Passmore, Company A, School of the Americas — "The first thing (I look for) is competence, then fairness and honesty."

Spc. Jason T. Brooks, Company D, 1st Battalion, 18th Infantry Regiment — "(I look for) how they listen to their soldiers and understand where they're coming from."

Spc. Peter A. Arbeit, Headquarters and Headquarters Detachment, 324th Forward Support Battalion — "I'd have to say a little bit of compassion, knowledge, but not a dictator. (I look for) someone who is an all-around guy and asks around to hear other people's ideas."

Staff Sgt. Ronnie Jones, Headquarters and Headquarters Battalion, 4th Battalion, 41st Field Artillery Regiment — "(I look for) discipline, initiative, someone that can react at a moment's notice. Those are all important qualities in a first-line supervisor."

Airman William A. DeJesus, U.S. Air Force, 17th Air Support Operation Squadron — " (I look for) somebody who leads by example. Instead of just setting the standards, he lives by the standards. (I look for) someone who will do everything he expects someone else to do."

Capt. Merrill Cannon, Company B, 3rd Battalion, (Officer Candidate School) 11th Infantry Regiment — "I look at the far-range implications. I look for several things — duty, selfless service, desire to excel and genuine concern for soldiers. It's hard to narrow it down."

Leadership skills are innate

By Agatha Hudson Debrow
Bayonet editor

If you could zap your boss with any quality to make him or her a better boss, what would that quality be?

Would you zap him or her with integrity, better organizational skills or dependability? How about enthusiasm, decisiveness, honesty or a sense of humor? Still others may want their boss to be a team player, hard working, compassionate or flexible.

commentary

The soldiers I work with would probably want to zap me with punctuality (along with a few other things).

But, since I'm not punctual (most of the time) and since I lack certain other skills, does that mean I don't have what it takes?

Think about yourself for a moment. Do you have what it takes? Or, do you lack certain skills or are you weak in some areas?

You may feel you're the wrong color, live on the wrong side of town, don't know the right people or any of a number of other reasons you could come up with.

But, does the lack of these things or weaknesses in certain areas mean you don't have what it takes to be a successful leader?

The answer is an emphatic no. According to Zig Ziglar, a well-known motivational speaker who conducts seminars across the country, many of us already possess what it takes to be a leader.

And, it doesn't matter what job you're in — whether you are military or civilian — because the qualities that make one successful in a civilian job are the same ones that make one successful in the military.

At one of his recent seminars in Dallas, Texas, Ziglar asked more than 200 members of an audience made up of doctors, college professors, teachers, secretaries and others to list the qualities of a leader. Here is what they came up with:

> "If you don't like who and where you are, absolutely don't sweat it; you can change"
> — Zig Ziglar
> Motivational speaker

- Honesty, integrity, well organized, decisiveness, hard-working;
- Flexibility, sense of humor, dependability, loyalty, motivated, positive mental attitude;
- Faith, a student or learning abilities, dedicated, good communicator, fair, goal-oriented;
- Punctual, knowledgeable, courteous, compassionate, sincere;
- Disciplined, high self-esteem, courage, a risk-taker, a visionary, a teacher, authentic, patient, confident;
- Humble, good listener, team player, encourager, enthusiastic, responsible, possesses initiative, compassionate;
- Coachable, trustworthy and healthy.

After studying the list, do you believe anyone with these qualities would make a good employee as well as a good boss? Are these qualities you would like your spouse to possess? Are these qualities you would like the person to whom your spouse is married to possess? How about your children — would you like them to possess these qualities?

In your opinion, would someone who possesses these qualities make a good doctor? A good lawyer? A good politician?

If you answered yes (and I believe many of you did), you're saying these qualities of a leader are also the qualities we would like to see in our spouses, our children, our friends, our bosses and so on.

Agatha Hudson Debrow is working on developing her innate leadership abilities.

Ziglar said if you don't think you have what it takes to be a leader, you can change. You are what you are and where you are because of what has gone into your mind, he said. Therefore, you can change where you are and what you are by changing what goes in your mind.

Ziglar said the mind is the gateway to the heart. He said when he was 45 years old, he was broke and in debt; yet he had worked hard all of his life. "Failure is an event; not a person," he said.

"If you don't like who and where you are, absolutely don't sweat it," he said. "You can change."

And, he said, it is only when we change ourselves that we can have an impact on society.

"Stop blaming society, stop blaming the government, stop blaming it on the color of your skin, your height," he said.

The profound thing about all of this, according to Ziglar, is that these qualities can be taught. And, if they can be taught, they are skills. If they are skills, they can be learned. If they can be learned, each of us can learn them. That means, we all have a chance of becoming good leaders.

If you don't believe you have what it takes, read this story that was told by Ziglar:

In Beaumont, Texas, around the turn of the century, there was a depression and a drought and a man was selling his property to feed his family.

An oil salesman came along and told him he believed there was oil on his property. The salesman asked the man to let them drill for it. "If we discover any oil," the salesman said, "we'll pay you royalties on every barrel that is pumped out."

The man had nothing to lose — had a tremendous amount to gain — so he said OK.

In those days, the derricks were made of wood; and, when a good gusher came in, the force of it would destroy the derrick. The greater the gusher, the greater the destruction.

When this particular field came in, there was such an explosion, it obliterated the derrick. For the next 11 days, more than 100,000 barrels of oil were pumped from the well; in the first year, 18 million barrels were pumped.

The man became an instant millionaire — or did he?

The reality is the man had been a millionaire ever since he bought the property. But, until they discovered the oil, until they brought it to the surface, until they took it to the marketplace and cashed it in, from a practical standpoint, it had no value.

In other words, you can possess every one of the leadership qualities discussed in this article and deny their existence. And, as long as you do that, these qualities are not going to do you any good.

You want to be a leader? Stop denying that you have what it takes and develop your skills and use them to the best of your ability.

dial 545-boss

Dial 545-BOSS is the commander's action line for soldiers, family members and civilians to call when they have problems or complaints that can't be resolved elsewhere. The Bayonet features some of the calls that may benefit the community.

☎ Call: I have been calling in a work order for six or seven months for a street light that is out. There were almost two accidents and my husband was in an accident because that street is so dark you can't see.

Utilities Branch response: The exterior electric line crew checked a street light on Gaines Circle Nov. 9 and determined that the fixture needed to be replaced. A fixture was ordered Nov. 9 and received Nov. 29. The light was repaired Nov. 30.

Subsequently, the street light malfunctioned again and the line crew turned the photo cell, which regulates the on and off switch, 180 degrees so automobile headlights would not shine into it and switch the light off.

☎ Call: I was discharged from my job at the Arts and Crafts Center and I would like to know whom I can see to file a complaint. I have already used my chain of command with no results.

Arts and Crafts Center response: The caller was a nonappropriated fund flex (on-call) employee working at the Multicraft Center. That caller was released from the on-call position because on several occasions the caller was not available to work when required.

The Arts and Crafts manager contacted the caller Dec. 27 at 9 a.m. and discussed the chain of command that should be followed. He also informed the caller that he thought the best recourse would be to visit the Management Employee Relations Division of the Directorate of Civilian Personnel.

☎ Call: I have a complaint about an illegal divorce and another marriage that took place. I need some advice on what to do.

Legal Assistance Division response: A legal assistance attorney spoke with the caller. The caller alleges that her husband obtained a divorce from her in Muscogee County, without providing her with proper notification, and then remarried .

The divorce decree does not address the issues of child support or custody for the couple's minor child.

However, the soldier has initiated a $300 monthly allotment for the minor child and is complying with the support requirements of Army Regulation 608-99. If the caller wants the child support obligation to be incorporated into the divorce decree, she would have to hire a civilian attorney to challenge the Muscogee County divorce decree and to obtain a court order addressing the child support.

Commanding general sends thank you for ACOE efforts

The visit by the Army Community of Excellence Team this week was a huge success.

You, the soldiers and civilians of Fort Benning, set some awfully high standards for the rest of the posts to attain.

I can tell you, the team members were impressed. They raved about the people they met and the work you are doing to take care of our soldiers and family members.

I, too, was overwhelmed by your enthusiasm and the way you joined the team in celebrating excellence.

Once again, you proved there is no post like Fort Benning and no work force like Fort Benning's.

I thank each of you for your efforts. You put in 110 percent and it showed. Thank you for being the world's best.

The Fort Benning Safety Office has recognized five major units on post for "leading the way" in safety and reducing their annual accident rate by at least 25 percent.

Units that were honored are:

- 36th Engineer Group, with a 25 percent decrease, from 12 accidents to nine
- 11th Infantry Regiment, with a 29 percent decrease, from 91 accidents to 64
- Military Police Activity, with a 33 percent decrease, from three accidents to two
- School of the Americas, with a 75 percent decrease, from four accidents to one
- U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit, which maintained last year's zero-accident record.

Regis Beighley, safety manager, said the 11th Inf. Regt., particularly, has made a number of changes in its operations that have helped reduce training accidents in the unit.

"They've done a great job in reducing the number of airborne injuries," Beighley said. "They've emphasized safety both on duty and off. The ankle braces they're using now have really helped reduce injuries, as well."

Col. Walter Wojdakowski Jr., commander of the 11th Regt., said the unit's safety record is a result of the command emphasis on safety at all levels.

"Our first-line NCOs (noncommissioned officers) and officers always keep safety as first priority," he said. "They conduct all training, they're on the spot to see that nothing goes wrong in dangerous training situations, and the credit really goes to them."

In 1985, there were 523 accidents on post involving active duty soldiers, while in 1994 there were 201. Accidental fatalities among the soldier population have declined from 20 in 1985 to just one in the past year

Wojdakowski said battalion commanders and command sergeants major have emphasized safety in all areas, for soldiers off-duty as well as during duty hours.

"There's a really heightened awareness of safety in all areas, at all levels," he said.

According to MPA Safety NCO Sgt. 1st Class Frederick Robinson, the same can be said for his unit.

"In the MPA, everything we do is safety first," he said. "Whether soldiers are riding bikes with the COPS (Community Oriented Police Squad), or performing street duties, it's safety first. Our goal is no accidents — no training accidents, no road accidents, nothing."

The executive officer of the SOA School Battalion, Capt. Norberto R. Cintron, agreed that safety should be considered at all times.

"The command has emphasized safety not only at work, but in every aspect of our lives," Cintron said. "Our safety record is due to greater soldier awareness, leaders' involvement and attention to detail."

The U. S. Army Marksmanship Unit, which has suffered no accidents for at least the past two years, is extremely proud of its record, according to Deputy Commander Bob Aylward.

"Safety in the Marksmanship Unit is a paramount mission," he said. "In a unique unit like this, it has to be. All of the soldiers and civilians here take safety very seriously."

According to Beighley, the overall number of accidents and fatalities on post have decreased dramatically in the past 10 years.

In 1985, there were 523 accidents on post involving active duty soldiers, while in 1994 there were 201. Accidental fatalities among the soldier population have declined from 20 in 1985 to just one in the past year.

According to Beighley, the decrease comes mainly from the post population's awareness of safety.

"Performance to standards is one key thing (in the safety improvement)," he said. "People have an increased awareness — they notice hazards, and do something about them."

Beighley said there has also been a significant reduction in the number of accidents involving privately owned vehicles.

Beighley said the number of accidents, and the number of injuries, have been reduced by the use of seatbelts and by lowering the speed limits.

"The low speed limits on post, especially in the mornings, have had a lot to do" with decreasing the number of accidents, he said.

furniture, expanding the carpets, expanding the lamps," Babbitt said. "There's very restricted space right now."

She said AAFES decided to expand the Fort Benning facility because of the number of customers here and the types of items they buy.

AAFES classifies stores based on size and sales. Categories include "superstore," "A" and "B."

"Right now we're a superstore in a B-sized area," Babbitt said.

Work on the mall is expected to start in March and should take about 16 months, according to Babbitt.

She said there won't be any disruptions to shopping or parking during the construction.

employment opportunities

W.C. Bradley offering seasonal positions

Family members who are interested in production work can apply for seasonal positions available at W.C. Bradley Company in Columbus.

More than 200 jobs are available within the Char-Broil Division. The following positions are available: packers, assembly workers, forklift operators, press operators, paint line workers, screen print operators, painters and order workers (shipping).

Salaries range from $5.50 to $6.50 an hour. All shifts are available. Applicants must be at least 18 years of age. Individuals selected will begin working as soon as possible and conclude in June.

Applications are currently being accepted at the Georgia Department of Labor. Ask specifically for the W.C. Bradley, Char-Broil Division application.

W.C. Bradley is a large manufacturing company, and the Char-Broil Division makes grills, outdoor equipment and more.

For additional information and assistance, visit ACS FMEAP in Building 2643, Soldiers' Plaza.

Trucking firms recruiting today

Five major trucking companies will converge at the Job Assistance Center today from 9 a.m. to noon.

This Career Day, trucking companies and job seekers will have a chance to meet face-to-face to discuss employment opportunities. Attendees will have the chance to sit down with top trucking company recruiters and find out exactly what they have to offer.

Some trucking companies pay salaries while an individual completes a comprehensive training program.

First-year wages for inexperienced drivers are normally well above other entry-level jobs, officials said.

The Army Employer Network has more than 20 trucking firms that actively recruit soldiers getting out of the service.

Additionally, the Transition Bulletin Board lists many driving positions on a daily basis. Accompanying this demand for drivers are requirements for mechanics, maintenance supervisors, dispatchers and terminal managers.

For information on qualifications and training, come to the JAC in Building 2634. You may sign up for this Career Day by coming by the Job Assistance Center or calling 545-2308 or 545-2309.

Job Assistance Center to host recruiters

The Job Assistance Center, Building 2643 in Soldier's Plaza, is hosting representatives from Osmose Wood Preservatives Jan. 20 at 9 a.m. and 10:30 a.m. Representatives will be recruiting site managers and conducting briefings and interviews. Registration is requested.

For more information, call 545-2308 or 545-2309.

Post to honor MLK in celebration today

By Jan Wesner Childs
Special to The Bayonet

The birthday of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. will be celebrated with a ceremony today.

The event starts at 11:30 a.m. in Infantry Hall's Marshall Auditorium.

Guest speaker will be James E. Love, director of Military Equal Opportunity for the Department of Defense.

Love is a retired Air Force lieutenant colonel and was the first black high school graduate from Wisconsin to attend the U.S. Air Force Academy.

The celebration will include several highlights:

- Retired Sgt. Maj. Verray Caldwell will recite a compilation of King's speeches, ending with the famous "I have a dream" statement.
- Performances by the Finance Choir and the Singing Firemen and Company, a group of Fort Benning firefighters.
- Music from the Infantry Band.
- Introductions by Commanding General Maj. Gen. John W. Hendrix.

School of the Americas to get new commander today

By Judith Ginder
School of the Americas

The School of the Americas will get a new commander at a 10 a.m. ceremony today at Ridgway Hall.

Col. Roy R. Trumble replaces Col. Jose M. Alvarez, who has been at the School of the Americas for almost two years. Alvarez will retire after 25 years of service

Maj. Gen. John W. Hendrix, post commanding general, will be the reviewing officer and the reception will take place at the Officers' Club.

Before this assignment, Trumble served as the commander of the U.S. Military and Advisory Group in Peru. In addition to serving for more than 11 years in Latin America, Trumble has served in both infantry and Special Operations throughout his career.

As a Special Forces officer, Trumble was commissioned from the Infantry Officer Candidate School at Fort Benning in 1970.

Trumble was awarded a master's degree in journalism from the University of Kansas. His military education includes the Infantry Officer Advanced Course, the U.S. Command and General Staff College and the U.S. Army War College.

The Retired Officers Association installs new officers

The Retired Officers Association

The Chattahoochee Valley Chapter of The Retired Officers Association installed its newly elected officers and board of directors at its Christmas formal at the Fort Benning Officers' Club Supper Club Dec. 10.

The oath of office was administered by retired Col. Donald Stephens, TROA Georgia state president.

How To Recycle

Post housing residents may place recyclable materials in brown plastic bins for weekly curbside pickup.

Here is a list of the items that can and cannot be placed in the bin for recycling.

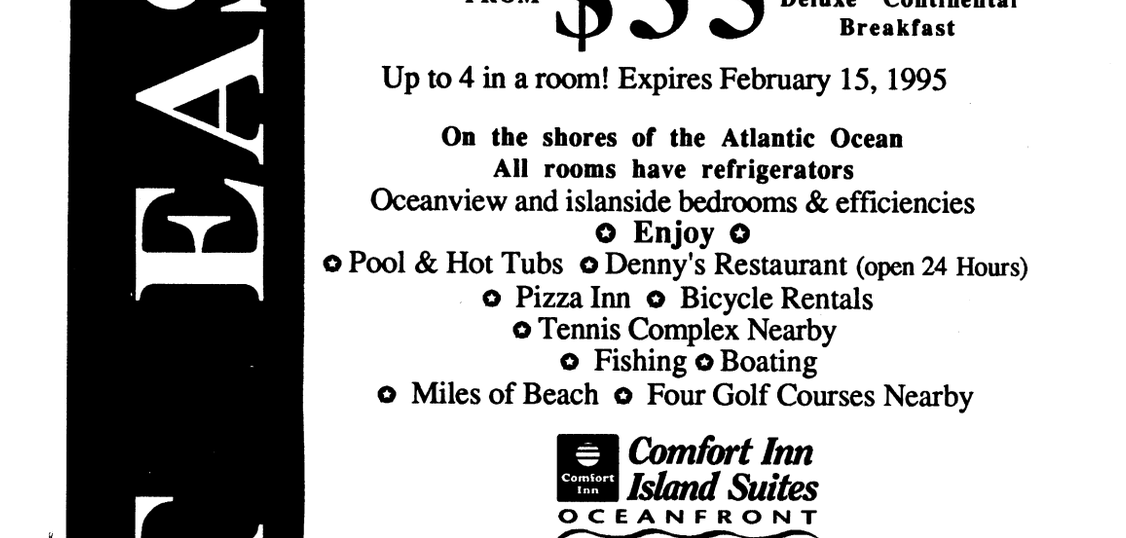
• Glass: Only the following can be recycled: soft drink, beer, juice, ketchup, wine, liquor and food containers. All caps and lids are to be removed and containers are to be rinsed out. Special care should be taken to avoid breaking glass when placing it in the recycling bin. Glass will be separated by color at the curb for processing at the Materials Recovery facility.

• Cans: Only aluminum and steel cans are accepted at this time. Cans must be rinsed out. Labels may remain on the cans.

• Plastic: All plastic materials containing the Recycling Triangle (Three Chasing Arrows) may be recycled. This includes soft drink bottles and milk jugs. Caps must be removed and may be placed in the recycling bin. All containers must be rinsed out.

•Paper: All paper products except used personal type materials may be recycled. These items should be placed in brown paper bags or bundled together and tied then placed beside the recycling bin.

NOTE: incidents whereby used personal items are placed for recycling is cause for rejection.



Cardboard: Pick-up of cardboard from moving will be coordinated directly with the Materials Recovery Facility, at 544-6142. Ask for the manager or leave a message containing your address, housing area, name and phone number.

Inert Waste: Tree limbs, grass clippings and leaves will be picked up on Mondays only. Clippings and leaves should be placed in a garbage can and tied or in a trash can with a lid.

Trash and recycle pickup schedule

Household trash and recycling will be collected once a week on the same day. If there is recyclable material mixed in with the trash can it will not be picked up until the following week, or until recyclables are separated.

New club to open for 'after hours'

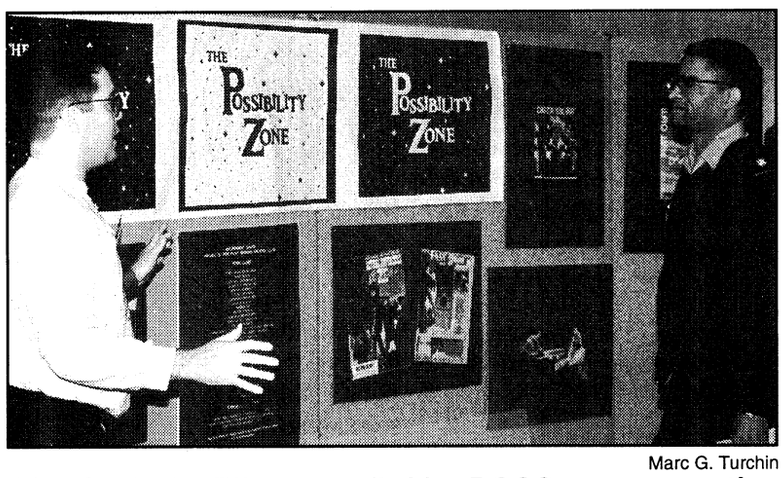
By Marc G. Turchin
Bayonet staff writer

Junior enlisted soldiers beware. You may never want to leave post again.

A new place on post will be opening soon that may have everything you need— food, drinks, live entertainment, music, dancing, high-tech video games and a lot more.

The new junior enlisted club, called Afterhours, is scheduled to open in mid-February. The club, which can hold more than 500 people, was visited by its first guests Wednesday morning when the Better Opportunities for Single Soldiers hosted a tour of the facilities.

The club is scheduled to be open during evening hours to soldiers with the rank of corporal and below, said John Bush, chief, Community Operations Division, Directorate of Community Activities. During daytime hours, he said, the club will be open to the community.



Afterhours offers one or two dance floors, depending on whether or not the movable, sound-proof wall is in place, Bush said. It has two separate full-service bars, a snack bar called Fast Dave's, a video arcade that will have more than 20 high-tech video games, a room with four pool tables and an outside patio where people can eat.

Some of the games that will be featured are Daytona USA, a driving game that can seat two; Killer Instinct; Fast Draw Showdown and Mortal Kombat II. The arcade room can hold up to 90 people.

On the opposite wall of the arcade is Fast Dave's snack bar.

The food emporium offers fast food items such as hamburgers, hot dogs and pizza. The sit-down, carry-out or drive-through diner also features chicken dinners. Other specialities on the menu include nachos, chicken wings and different sub-sandwiches.

"The drive-through restaurant is going to help a lot," said Spc. Christina L. Rapé, BOSS president. Afterhours will also feature food specials each month, she said.

Marc G. Turchin

Pfc. Garth E. Ellenburg (left), BOSS representative assistant, talks to Lt. Col. Bob Lacey, chief of the ACOE team, about the video games to be installed inside the club.

The restaurant is only one thing soldiers said they wanted in the new club.

Bush said soldiers wanted a place that "was absolutely away" from a military environment.

"They wanted a place where they could kick back and relax," he said.

He said surveys were done and feedback was taken from the monthly BOSS meetings to find out what the enlisted soldiers wanted in a club.

"They let us in on it (the planning) from the beginning," Rapé said. "I can remember coming in here with a hard hat on."

Rapé said she was concerned where the money came from to build the club because she didn't want the money for this project to be taken away from soldiers getting new barracks.

She said after checking into it, she found out the money came from profits made by post clubs. That money goes into the post Morale, Welfare and Recreation Fund.

"It's not Fort Benning money, it's not Army Communities of Excellence money, it's not soldiers' money — club money built this place," she said.

The club cost $1.8 million to build.

The cost of the club wasn't on the mind of Maj. Gen. John W. Hendrix, Fort Benning's commanding general, when he spoke to those who showed up for the tour. With his right hand in his pocket, he spoke as if he were talking to a long-time friend.

"Just look around you and imagine, for those of you who are old soldiers, what it would have been like when you were a young soldier to have a place like this," he said while turning his head and gazing at the size of the main activity room. "I was telling someone earlier, it would probably have been one step from dangerous." .

With construction almost complete, the installation of the facility's cooking, audio and video equipment is still left to do, Rapé said.

Bernice Smith, Afterhours manager, said, "I think the soldiers are going to love it."

Once the club opens, it will be open Wednesdays through Mondays. It will be closed Tuesdays for maintenance, Smith said. It may occasionally be open Tuesdays for special events.

The club's operating hours will be 7 to 11 p.m. on Sundays, Mondays, Wednesdays and Thursdays; Fridays and Saturdays, the club opens at 7 p.m, but the closing time has not been established.

Fast Dave's will open from 10:30 a.m to 11 p.m. The arcade will open at 11 a.m. and close to the community at 7 p.m., but will remain open during evening hours for club patrons.

Parking is on the north side of the club and across the street where the airborne snack bar building stands. The snack bar recently closed.

Counseling available for soldiers

Reserve Component

If you are a soldier separating from the Army, you are required to receive counseling from the Reserve Component's Transition Program.

The program is designed to assist eligible soldiers who are within 120 days of separation from the Army and want to find out more about the benefits of enlisting or transferring into the Reserve Components.

Some of these benefits include:

- Post Exchange and Commissary privileges
- Use of post facilities
- Continental United States Space "A" flights (also Puerto Rico, Guam, Hawaii and the Virgin Islands),
- Soldiers Group Life Insurance continuation
- Up to $5,000 in bonuses
- Up to $6,120 for continuing education
- Up to $10,000 of a student loan repayment
- Up to 100 percent tuition waived in some states.

All soldiers receive four days pay for one weekend's work.

The average Reserve Component soldier will serve 38 days annually with his or her unit, but will receive almost double the money they received on active duty for that same time period.

Contact a Reserve Component career counselor for more information. Soldiers in the 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division, can call 544-3131; everyone else can call 545-6759.

You can use it from any phone, it gets you home in seconds, and best of all, it weighs almost nothing.

If there's one calling card that can keep up with the pace of Army life, it's the AT&T Card. It works almost anywhere there's a phone. On or off base, in the States or abroad. It's cheaper than calling collect. And you don't even need phone service in your name to sign up for one. Making long distance calls easy is just the beginning. You can also use it to take advantage of calling discounts, or innovative services such as AT&T True Messages℠ and AT&T USADirect® Service. The AT&T Card. post briefs

Preventive Medicine Clinic to relocate

The Preventive Medicine Clinic will move to the Outpatient Clinic at Martin Army Community Hospital Monday.

Any health-care beneficiary with a possible sexually transmitted disease may come to the clinic and receive complete diagnostic testing and treatment.

The hours of the clinic will be 8 a.m. to noon Monday through Friday. Active duty personnel will receive priority and must sign in by 9:30 a.m. The new telephone number for the clinic is 544-3385.

Tax office to open

The Fort Benning Tax Office, which will be located in Building 2640 at Soldiers' Plaza, will open Jan. 31. Office hours will be 8:30 a.m. to 4 p.m., Monday through Friday.

Electronic tax filing will be available for most federal returns, and the office has many federal and state tax forms available.

Unit tax advisers have been appointed so soldiers with tax questions can see their unit tax advisers first.

SOA to change commanders today

Col. Roy R. Trumble will assume command of the School of the Americas in a ceremony at 10 a.m., today at Ridgway Hall.

Col. Jose M. Alvarez, commandant of the School of the Americas since March 1993, will retire after 25 years of service.

Trumble comes to the School of the Americas from Peru, where he was the commander of the Military Group. Maj. Gen. John W. Hendrix, post commanding general, will be the guest of honor.

Following the ceremony, there will be a reception at the Officers' Club.

PX gets new hours

The Post Exchange at the Main Mall has changed its operating hours. The new hours are Monday through Saturday from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. and Sunday from 10 a.m. to 7 p.m.

People using this area for recreation must leave before 9:30 a.m. daily.

Training units using compartments next to these areas may experience drift smoke and are reminded to exercise caution while traveling in these areas because of the potential for reduced visibility.

For information, call 544-6206.

Holiday trash pick up schedule announced

Trash and recycle collection in the family housing areas for next week will be picked up as scheduled Tuesday through Friday.

Inert waste, which includes tree limbs, grass clippings and leaves, will not be picked up Monday but will be picked up Jan. 23.

For information, call 545-4749.

Awards luncheon set

The civilian awards luncheon will be at the Supper Club at the Fort Benning Officers' Club Thursday from 11:30 a.m. to 1:15 p.m. The U.S. Army School of the Americas will serve as host.

OCS Board set

The next Officer Candidate School Selection Board is scheduled from Feb. 21 to 24. Cutoff date for the application to arrive at Personnel Command is Feb. 10.

Applications must arrive in AG, Personnel Operations Division, Building 2619, no later than today to allow sufficient time for each applicant to appear before a local board.

For more information, call 545-3341 or 545-4702.

Clothing sale set

The Installation Supply and Services Division will conduct a Code B Sale on the first Friday of every month from 7 a.m. to 2 p.m. in Building 224. The next sale is Feb. 3. Sales are limited to active duty only.

For more information, call 545-1972 or 545-7442.

1995 Green to Gold Scholarships here

The ROTC Green to Gold Scholarship packets for school year '95 have arrived at Columbus College. They are available for pick-up at the Columbus college office at Soldiers' Plaza, or in Room 123, Columbus College Faculty Office Building.

For more information, call 689-8668 at Soldiers' Plaza or 568-2058 at Columbus College. Interested soldiers should call to verify their eligibility for school year 1995 before picking up one.

For more information, call D.A. Wilson at 545-6559 or 545-3881.

Post, undergraduate programs offered

Personnel Command is recruiting promotable sergeants through nonpromotable master sergeants with a primary military occupational specialty of 96 or 98, a general technical score of 110 or higher and 15 semester hours or 25 quarter hours or more to participate in a program for advanced study in national intelligence organizations, collection management, production, collection and dissemination of national intelligence, intelligence analysis, indication and warning operations, and regional area studies.

For more information, call 545-1917 or 545-4702.

Instructors needed

The Henry Caro NCO Academy needs staff sergeants who maintain the high standards of the NCO corps as instructors for the primary leadership development course.

Applicants must:

- Want a challenging and demanding job
- Be physically fit
- Have military bearing and conduct, overall appearance above reproach
- Want to share knowledge and experience
- Develop junior leaders (lead by example)
- Work with other NCOs to build a cohesive team
- Have no profiles.

Only NCOs who are serious about working hard and giving 100 percent should inquire. Those interested can call Sgt. 1st Class Catherine P. Thomas at 545-3669 or 545-7381.

ID section implements two new programs

The Main Post Identification Card Section, Building 2638, is extending its hours. The section will be open from 7:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. on Monday, Tuesday, Thursday and Friday. On Wednesdays the section will be open from 7:30 a.m. to 6 p.m.

Appointments can be scheduled from 7:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. daily by calling 545-4068.

Walk-in customers will continue to be served as usual; however, to avoid long waits, walk-in customers are encouraged to avoid the hours of 11:30 a.m. to 1 p.m.

For more information call Sgt. 1st Class Roger Woolfork at 545-1411 or Capt. Steven Fischer at 545-4225 or 545-4227.

ALL-ARMY WRESTLING

Competitors grapple for team slots

Wrestle off to strengthen All-Army team

Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet©

With the 1996 Olympic Games a year and a half away, the All-Army Wrestling team is looking to strengthen its team and its grip on the wrestling community.

More than 100 wrestlers representing 13 teams from around the world have converged on Fort Benning for the All-Army Wrestle Off Thursday through Saturday at the Santiago Fitness Center on Sand Hill.

This competition is a means of selecting the best Army wrestlers to train and represent the Army at the Armed Forces Championships and other national and international competitions leading to the 1996 Olympics.

The All-Army team, as five-time defending Armed Forces champions, boast an already impressive inner core, and joining them will be the top selections from this competition.

The team already includes three national champions (Derrick Waldroup, Shon Lewis and Rodney Smith), one four-time national champion (Waldroup), four Army athletes of the year (Waldroup, Lewis, Smith and Martin Strmiska), one Armed Forces athlete of the year (Smith) and one Olympic medal winner (Smith, Bronze Medal 1992 Olympics), along with numerous Armed Forces champions.

All wrestle-off competitors will have to be on their toes to make the All-Army Trial Camp next week.

According to All-Army wrestling coach Tony Thomas this could be the team that sends more than one wrestler to the Olympic trials.

"We're young, strong and have plenty of experienced wrestlers on this team," said Thomas.

"If we stay healthy, I think this could be the best team the Army has ever had."

Editors note: Competition started Thursday at Santiago Fitness Center with Greco-Roman competition.

The Freestyle competition starts today at 1:30 p.m. with a second session at 6 p.m. Freestyle finals are Saturday at 2 p.m.

Full results of the All-Army Wrestle Off will appear in next week's Bayonet.

Scent, taste tempt bass

By Earl Bentz and Steve Price
Outboard Marine Corporation

Bass anglers aren't the only ones trying to tempt non-aggressive fish into striking. Lure manufacturers are, too.

That's why more and more firms are literally "cooking" taste and scent attractants into their soft plastic lures. These attractants, which often include natural oils of minnows and crawfish, are mixed into the plastic before injection into the lure-making mold.

"I believe taste plays a major role in the number of bass you actually catch," notes tournament angler Ken Cook of the Evinrude Outboards Pro Staff. "A good taste will cause a bass to hold your lure long enough to let you know you've had a strike and can set the hook.

"I still think sight is the primary sense that triggers a strike because seeing the lure is what first attracts bass. In really dingy or murky water, vibration and sound replace visibility so the fish 'feel' and 'hear' the lure's location.

"Then, if the bass smells the lures, if the olfactory nerves pick up a positive scent, it simply adds to the overall cumulative effect of the lure's attractiveness."

The new impregnated lures, which include plastic worms, lizards, imitation crawfish, and others have both taste and odor appeal, but Cook often adds even more scent attractant.

"I do it for two primary reasons," continues the Evinrude pro, who spent 10 years as a fisheries biologist before becoming a full time tournament angler. "First, putting an add-on scent attractant to the lure leaves a scent trail in the water as I make my retrieve. It may help attract a fish from some distance away that might not have otherwise been attracted to the lure.

"The second reason for putting on extra scent attractant is to help eliminate any human odor my hands may have left on the lure. Some human odors are definitely offensive to bass so anything you can do to minimize that effect is worth trying."

Cook has performed a number of experiments in the clear water stream that flows through his property to determine the effect of add-on scent attractants.

"I have thrown plastic crawfish into the creek and received no real interest from the bass," says Cook. "Then, I have thrown a real but dead crawfish in, and the bass eat it immediately, even though it did not move.

"Then, I have thrown in another plastic crawfish that I coated with one of the scent attractants, and the bass hit it immediately, too, In that case, at least, scent certainly appeared to be the deciding factor."

Love your heart run set

East Alabama Medical Center

The Heart Center of East Alabama at East Alabama Medical Center is hosting the annual "Love Your Heart Run" Feb. 25.

The event includes a one-mile run or walk and a 10K run, starting at 8 and 8:30 a.m., respectively.

Rifle Club starts off new year with bang

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet©

The Fort Benning Rifle and Pistol Club opened up the new year with a bang Saturday at English Range when 58 shooters participated in the first tactical match of the year.

Gregg Long took the top spot in the competitor class with a hit factor of 3.422, while Eric Woodson finished second at 3.019. Charles Rolling Jr. took third at 2.546.

Tom O'Flinn won the standard class with a score of 3.057. Trey Carmack took second at 2.456, and Kenneth Lucas finished third with a score of 2.433.

Daniel Reid held off Robert Rodriguez and Scott Morrison to capture the military class with a score of 2.228. Rodriguez finished second at 2.079 and Morrison third at 2.063.

In the female class, Carol Reynolds outshot Valerie Long 1.213 to 1.166 while Renee Austin finished third at 1.163.

John Cranfill won the high law enforcement award with a score of 2.4332.

The next match will start the spring tactical match series at Fort Benning and at the Cool Springs Gun Club in Roberta, Ga.

Fort Benning will host a match the first Saturday of each month, and the Cool Springs Gun Club will host a match on the third Sunday of each month beginning Feb. 4 at Fort Benning and Feb. 19 in Roberta.

Entry fee is $12 per match, $15 for late registration. Preregistration is strongly encouraged for the qualifying matches.

An invitational match is scheduled for June with time and place to be determined. To qualify, shooters must compete in six of the eight series matches.

For more information, contact Jim Graham at the Fort Benning Rifle and Pistol Club at 689-3371, George Morton at (912) 825-3946 or Jeff McDonald at (912) 922-5650.

Pros to share skills, techniques at weekend bass fishing institute

Educational Outreach Inc.

Six of America's top pros will be sharing their skills with participants in the Bass Fishing Techniques Institute to be hosted by Auburn University at the Lakepoint Resort State Park Lodge in Eufaula, Ala., Saturday and Sunday.

Instructors include the two-time BASS Angler of the Year Jimmy Houston, who is a 13-time BASS Masters Classic finalist and host of the television series "Jimmy Houston Outdoors."

Also instructing will be three BASS Masters Classic champions; Ken Cook, Robert Hamilton and George Cochran. Cook won the classic in 1991 and Hamilton won it in 1992. Cook is also a 10-time BASS Masters Classic finalist. Cochran won the title in 1987 and is 12-time BASS Masters Classic finalist.

One of America's leading authorities on using electronic equipment to locate bass, Danny Joe Humphrey, BASS Chapter Federation National Bass Fishing Champion and BASS Masters Classic finalist, will also be instructing, along with former professional bass guide and author Larry Columbo.

A multitude of topics will be covered. Each session will be tailored to the strengths of the particular instructor. In-depth instruction on plastic worms, spinnerbaits, crankbaits, topwater, ultra-light, flippin', pitchin', shakin' and all the other new techniques will be taught.

Each instructor will add his own special touches that give him the edge. Advanced sessions on bass behavior, using electronics, understanding color, pH, scent, theories of establishing multiple patterns within patterns and locating bass in seasonal situations will be covered. There will also be an opportunity to see many of the new 1995 tackle products.

In 1994, "Bass Fishing Techniques" was inducted into the National Freshwater Fishing Hall of Fame for contributions to education and conservation.

Saturday's activities will begin at 8 a.m. with on-site registration. After an orientation session, participants will attend six different workshop sessions with instructors Cook, Colombo and Humphrey.

Activities recess at 4 p.m., but participants are invited to attend informal "Think Tank" sessions with individual instructors until 4:45 p.m.

Sunday's activities will begin at 9 a.m. as instructors Houston, Hamilton and Cochran conduct an additional six sessions followed by another "Think Tank."

On site registration will begin one-hour before the program starts.

The resort is located 45 miles south of Columbus, seven miles north of Eufaula on U.S. 431.

Room reservations can be made at the Lakepoint Resort State Park Lodge by calling (800) 544-5253.

Military Police Activity

TAKE A BITE OUT OF CRIME®

The following entries were taken form the Fort Benning Military Police blotters from Dec. 14 to 21. Such entries may be incomplete and do not determine the guilt or innocence of any person.

• A sergeant was charged by the Columbus Police Department for driving under the influence of alcohol. The sergeant was seen passed out in his vehicle while attempting to use the drive-through lane at a local fast food restaurant. He was awakened by a police officer and asked to back out of the lane. The police smelled alcohol and administered a field sobriety test. The sergeant was transported to the Muscogee County Jail where he was given a breathalyzer test. The soldier was detained pending a Recorders' Court appearance.

• A second lieutenant was charged with driving under the influence of alcohol and excessive speeding. The lieutenant was traveling 69 mph in a 55 mph zone. When he was stopped by the Military Police, a strong odor of alcohol was detected. A field sobriety test was administered, and the lieutenant failed. The lieutenant was taken into custody and given a breathalyzer test. His post driving privileges were suspended and he was released to his unit.

• A family member and a civilian were charged with shoplifting at the Post Exchange at the Main Mall. They removed seven compact discs from the display shelf and placed the items in their shirts. Both subjects then exited the store without paying for the items. They were apprehended and detained until the Military Police arrived. Both individuals were transported to the Military Police station, where they were processed. One had identification card confiscation orders issued and the other had post ejection orders issued. Both were taken to the post boundaries and released on their own recognizance.

• A family member was charged with taking game from a baited area on Fort Benning. The subject was seen in possession of a bolt action .270-caliber rifle, hunting from a tree stand in an area that had been baited with corn. The individual was apprehended and admitted he had poured out a 50-pound bag of corn. He was cited and his rifle, hunter access pass and deer permit were confiscated.

• A first lieutenant was charged with larceny of government property, false official statement and fraud. The lieutenant submitted a false claim to finance when he filed a do-it yourself. He is suspected of putting his privately owned vehicle inside the rental truck along with his household goods to increase the amount of weight. Investigation continues by the Criminal Investigation Department.

Other activities on post included 13 cases of driving under the influence of alcohol, 21 traffic accidents, 16 cases of larcenies, and six cases of shoplifting reported at the main exchange facilities.

Remember to help "Make Our Post the Best — Give Crime Arrest." Report any activity that seems wrong or out of place to the military police at 545-5223 or 545-5224 or the "Crime in Progress" line at 545-5222.

ask the judge

Staff Judge Advocate's Office

Q: I've heard a lot about living wills and durable powers of attorney in the last few years. How are they different and what will they allow me to do?

A: Living wills and durable powers of attorney are both known more generally as advance medical directives. Each state has the power to write its own laws concerning advance medical directives and unfortunately, your options are different depending on where you live.

The most common advance medical directive is the living will. A living will allows you to give specific written instructions about the kind of life-sustaining medical treatment you do or do not want when you become unable to speak for yourself. Specifically, the Georgia Living Wills Act allows you to refuse tube feeding when you have been certified by two physicians to be in a terminal condition, a coma or in a persistent vegetative state, and that there is no reasonable expectation for improvement.

In Georgia, if you are 18 years of age or older and of sound mind, you may complete a living will. To be carried out, your living will must be given to your attending physician, you must no longer be able to speak for yourself and it must be determined by two physicians that you are in one of the conditions listed above.

If your attending physician fails or refuses to comply with your living will, he or she must advise your next of kin or legal guardian. In addition, your attending physician must then make a good faith attempt to transfer you to another physician who will honor your living will or permit your next of kin or legal guardian to do the same.

If you change your mind after making a living will you may revoke your living will at any time by destroying the document, by signing and dating a written revocation expressing your intent to revoke, or by having someone do it for you or by a verbal or nonverbal expression of your intent to revoke. You must also tell your attending physician that you have revoked your living will.

Another type of advance medical directive is the durable power of attorney. The Georgia Durable Power of Attorney of Health Care allows you to appoint someone to make medical decisions for you if you lose the ability to make such decisions yourself.

If you have someone to appoint, this is especially useful because it allows your agent to make medical decisions whenever you lose the ability to do so yourself, and is not limited to instructions regarding medical care at the end of life. If you decide that you want to appoint an agent, remember to keep that person and your health-care providers up to date with your wishes about medical treatment, especially if your medical condition changes.

You may contact the Legal Assistance Office at 545-3282 for more information on living wills or durable powers of attorney.

Teach children 'home alone' safety

Egleston Children's Hospital

Sooner or later your children may have to spend some time at home alone. You may have to go to the store or may be at work and cannot be there when your children come home from school.

The child safety experts at Egleston Children's Hospital recommend using the following guidelines to assure your children stay safe when they are home alone.

• Identify a safe neighbor for your children. A safe neighbor lives close by your home and will be able to assist your children if they need help.

• Review with your children the importance of checking the home before entering. Your home should look exactly the way it did when they left. If something is different, they should immediately go to a safe neighbor's home.

• Advise your children to keep their key with them at all times and in a safe place. If your child is wearing the key around his or her neck, it's best to tuck it inside his or her shirt.

• Teach your children not to show their key to anyone and not to give it to anyone to hold.

• Teach your children how to report emergencies to 911. Be sure they know their name, address and phone number.

• Examine your home and remove or lock up hazards. Maintain working smoke detectors.

• Teach your children to stop, drop and roll if their clothes catch on fire.

• Talk to your children about which appliances are safe to use and review with your children how to operate them.

• Provide healthy snacks for your children. They should not have to be cut or cooked, and should be easy to reach.

• Review with your children what to say to strangers on the telephone. Tell them to say their parents are busy and then offer to take a message.

• Let your children know that if the caller scares them, they should hang up and call you or a safe neighbor right away.

• Help your children respond if a stranger knocks on the door. Your children should never unlock the door. Teach your children to use the peephole and to always talk through the door. If it's a delivery, your children should tell the stranger to come back later.

If the stranger threatens your children, tell them to call 911.

• Provide safe, at-home activities and materials to occupy your children's time in a safe and creative way.

For more information about home alone safety or any other area of child safety, call Egleston Children's Hospital at 321-KIDS.

CONSTRUCTION

63rd engineers repairing collapsed road

Project to be completed in May

By Natalie M. Butler
63rd Combat Support Equipment

First Platoon of the 63d Engineer Company (Combat Support Equipment), 36th Engineer Group (Combat), has begun construction on 10th Division Road with a mission to replace the existing culvert approximately 50 feet below the road's surface while complying with soil conservation guidelines.

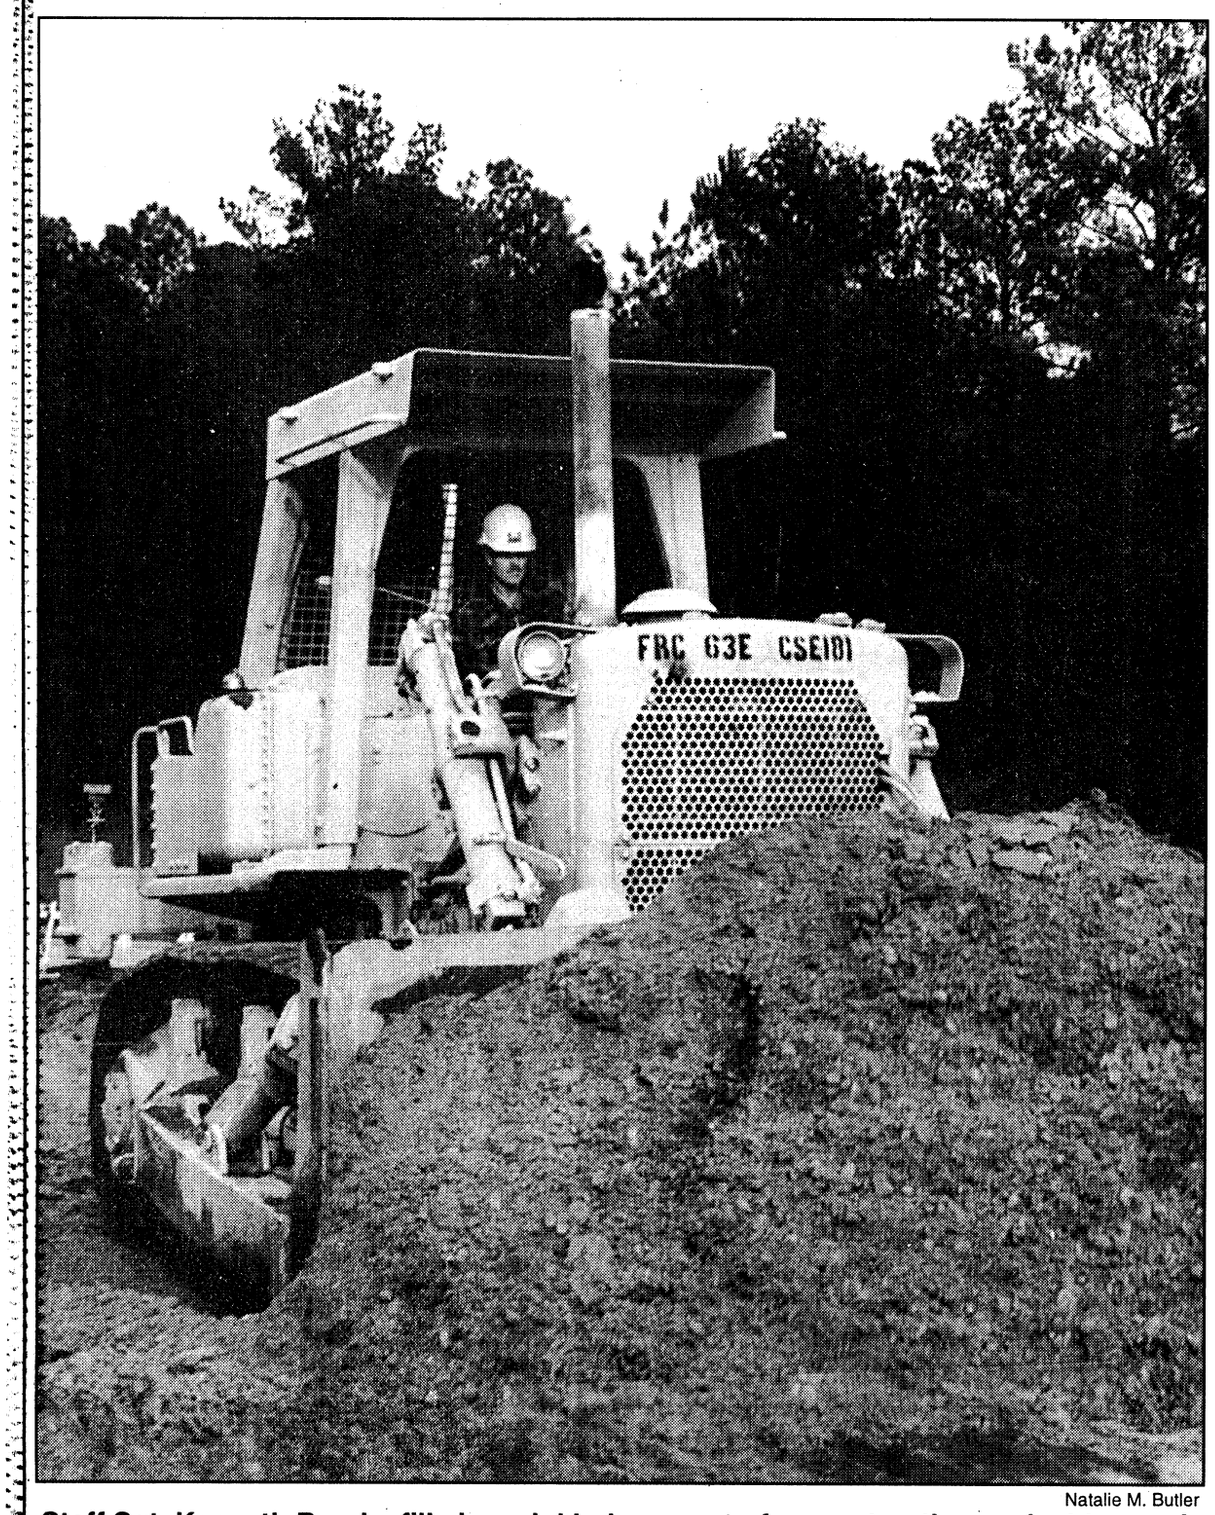
Last summer, the road collapsed, leaving a hole 44 feet deep and 40 feet wide. Because of budgeting constraints, Directorate of Public Works funding was not available until fiscal year 1995, delaying the start of the project until December.

The scope of the mission involves removing more than 88,000 cubic yards of dirt to reach the existing culvert; replacing the old culvert with a new one; constructing the inlet and outlet headwalls, which is where the water flows in and out; and then covering the top and compacting in six-inch layers of dirt until the original road height is reached.

The new culvert is 72 inches in diameter and 240 feet long. It replaces the existing one, which is 48 inches in diameter and the same length.

The 63rd will perform all work with the exception of constructing the headwalls, which are made of concrete forms.

DPW's Carpentry Section is scheduled to complete this task. The estimated project duration is 110 days; but, if favorable weather conditions prevail, the completion date could be at least 15 days sooner.



All unauthorized personnel must remain off the job site area on 10th Division Road until all construction is completed

Soldiers of the 63rd are motivated by the earthmovlng equipment experience that they will gain from this project, said Staff Sgt. Kenneth Roarke, noncommissioned officer in charge of the project.

"We'll get good training value from this project, especially in dozer, bucketloader and hauling operations," said Spc. George Youngs of 1st Platoon.

DPW and the 63rd Engineer Company officials stress that for safety reasons all unauthorized personnel must remain off the job site area on 10th Division Road until all construction is completed. All foot and vehicle traffic is prohibited.

The project is expected to be completed in May.

Natalie M. Butler

Fort Stewart sponsors 1995 training, testing

24th Infantry Division (Mechanized)

FORT STEWART, Ga. — The 24th Infantry Division (Mechanized) Division Support Command is hosting this year's Expert Field Medical Badge training and testing at Fort Stewart, Ga.

The goal of the EFMB is to recognize soldiers holding a medical military occupational specialty who demonstrate proficiency in both medical and common soldier skills.

The training and testing schedule is:

- Train the Trainer — Feb. 27 to March 4
- Candidate Training — April 17 to 22
- Candidate Testing — April 24 to 28
- Badge Award Ceremony — April 28.

All training and testing will be conducted at Camp Oliver. For information, contact the Division Medical Operations Center at (912) 767-4849 or DSN 870-4849 or 870-4744.

50 years ago this week ...

- U.S. forces began landing on Luzon at Lingayen Gulf in the Philippines. Gen. Tomoyuki Yamashita, who was in command of more than 160,000 Japanese troops, had decided not to contest the landing, instead intervening in strength after the first two days. There were continued Japanese air and Kamikaze attacks on American shipping.
- On the homefront, the Selective Service announced that it would increase the monthly quotas from 80,000 to 100,000 to meet replacement needs. Elsewhere, a ban on ornamental and display lighting went into effect as a fuel conservation measure except where gas or hydroelectric power was used without drawing on the coal supply.
- At Fort Benning, 1944 war bond sales reached $7,010,227.45. This includes both military and civilian contributions to include a loan to Uncle Sam from the children at the post school totalling $652.95.

New manual covers peacekeeping ops

TRADOC News Service

FORT MONROE, Va. — The Army has published its first field manual spelling out the principles of peacekeeping operations.

Field Manual 100-23, "Peace Operations," will be used as the basis for training soldiers and leaders in carrying out various peace operations around the world.

"With this manual, the Army continues the broadening of its post-Cold War doctrine, doctrine that is focused on warfighting, yet accommodates employment across the full range of operations," said Gen. William W. Hartzog, commander of Training and Doctrine Command.

Like all capstone doctrine produced by TRADOC, the manual is a guide for commanders to use and adapt to existing situations.

The manual describes three types of missions — support of diplomacy, peacekeeping and peace enforcement — but is primarily concerned with the latter two.

The fundamental difference between peacekeeping and peace enforcement is the use of applied military power. Peacekeeping troops are generally concerned with only maintaining truces. Peace enforcement involves more heavily armed troops who may have to use force or the threat of force to establish conditions in which peace may be achieved between warring factions.

In both cases, American troops must have a mandate set by a legitimate authority, such as the United Nations.

Most of the Army's recent peacekeeping missions have been part of United Nations or coalition operations. Peacekeeping, as it is known today, developed during the Cold War. Military forces could be inserted to maintain peace and prevent situations from becoming major conflicts.

The manual quotes former United Nations Secretary-General Dag Hammerskold: "Peacekeeping is not a soldier's job, but only a soldier can do it."

"The discipline, the responsiveness to a chain of command, the type of training that soldiers receive that enables them to fight and win wars applies to peace operations," said Rich Rinaldo, one of the writers of the manual.

Additionally, according to TRADOC doctrine developers, experience has shown that peacekeeping operations can quickly turn dangerous.

"Even if we had the resources to build peace operations forces only, I don't think that we would be discharging our responsibilities to protect the force or provide the national command authority the full range of options needed in today's environment by designing forces with limited capability," said Brig. Gen. Morris J. Boyd, TRADOC deputy chief of staff for doctrine.

"If you put a force in harm's way without all the tools, tactics, techniques and procedures and, most of all, soldiers and leaders capable of dealing with that situation, then you've been irresponsible."

The manual is based on principles contained in Chapter 13 of Field Manual 100-5, "Operations," the Army's chief warfighting doctrinal publication.

"American soldiers are there to help the people, to feed the hungry, to build bridges and hospitals. All these operations have always been part of the way we've operated."

— Lt. Col. Jim Harrison
Co-author Field Manual 100-23 "Peace Operations"

The chapter is titled "Operations Other Than War."

Most of the principles can apply to war, but two — restraint and legitimacy — are particularly applicable to peace operations. These deal with limiting the use of military power to protect civilian populations and treating all factions in disputes fairly and impartially.

Successful peace operations depend on soldiers' ability to adapt to local customs and political environments. Soldiers deployed on such missions receive extensive briefings on the areas and people they will be serving among and with. Soldiers are also made aware of the presence of news media during such missions.

But training for peace operations begins well before units are actually deployed. Peace operations training is included in leadership courses at all levels.

The new manual has been used to develop training scenarios at the Joint Readiness Training Center, Fort Polk, La.

"We have situational exercises which have varieties of situations which people have to react to," Rinaldo said. "We don't set up one situation and then have a by-rote response. We tend to do a lot of different situations that kind of keeps people on their toes."

Americans have a history of being able to adapt to varied situations, according to Lt. Col. Jim Harrison, the manual's co-author.

"If you look at the attitude of Americans, we've always been pretty independent," he said. "American soldiers like to help people — it's part of their nature.

"Even after the most intense combat situations we've had, American soldiers are there to help the people, to feed the hungry, to build bridges and hospitals. All these operations have always been part of the way we've operated."

The manual suggests that commanders develop and follow a campaign plan to help maintain the focus of operations. Considerations include the mandate, clearly defined objectives and plans for turning operations over to other forces. Those forces can be coalition partners or native organizations.

The campaign plan should also include clear command and control arrangements.

"As far as command of U.S. troops is concerned, our doctrine states that the chain of command from the lowest commander to the president of the United States will remain inviolate," Harrison said.

American units may be under the operational control of another country, but the manual states that the degree of OPCON must be agreed upon ahead of time. Command of U.S. forces rests with the American theater commander in chief.

In developing FM 100-23, doctrine writers used lessons learned from recent operations such as Restore Hope in Somalia and Provide Comfort in Iraq. Historical cases were used, as well, to include the 1900 Boxer Rebellion in China and the United Nations Operation in the Congo in 1960. Examples were also taken from the American Revolutionary War.

Doctrine writers also studied doctrine from Britain, Australia, Canada, New Zealand and other countries. The result is the first manual of its kind in the American military.

"Most of the existing international doctrine focuses more on traditional peacekeeping," Rinaldo said. "We, on the other hand, have expanded our doctrine to include all facets of peace operations."

This week's question: What is the goal of leadership assessment?

A. Develop technical and tactical leaders.
B. Develop professional and knowledgeable leaders.
C. Develop competent and confident leaders.
D. Develop professional and competent leaders.

Answer: C. Develop competent and confident leaders. The answer may be found in Field Manual 22-100, page 77.

profiles in excellence

Name: Joseph H. Seferian

Award or recognition: Manager of the Quarter
Unit or activity: Directorate of Logistics, Maintenance Division, Consol Equipment Pool
Job title: Electronics equipment mechanic supervisor and chief of Consol Equipment Pool
Years on the job: 2 1/2 at present position

What were your reasons for joining civil service?
Ability to carry over my nearly 11 years of active duty military time for retirement purposes, job security and the ability to stay associated with the U.S. Army.

Define your work ethic.
Bend over backward for my customers. Do the job the right way the first time.

What person has most influenced your career?
Lt. Col. Bob Hurley, my squadron commander when I was in Headquarters and Headquarters Troop, 7th Squadron (Attack Helicopter), 1st Cavalry, 6th Cav. Brigade (Air Combat), at Fort Hood, Texas, my last active duty assignment. I carried his attitude for command into civil service.

If you were your supervisor for a day, what improvements would you make?
Since as a branch chief I can't spend anything except Class IX funds, I would make improvements by releasing Maintenance Division funds for new locks on classroom doors, new camera security system at weapons pool, new bar code equipment, a new lawn tractor, new sound equipment for sound trucks and more eight-foot tables for customers, to name a few improvements.

Describe a memorable moment in your career.
I attended the awards ceremonies at the Pentagon earlier this year when Fort Benning received the Commander-in-Chief Award for Best Installation in the Army.

What are your future career plans?
Be the installation materiel maintenance officer or maybe even the Director of Logistics if I hang in long enough.

What others have to say :
"Mr. Seferian's efforts to improve the working conditions for his employees and to provide excellent service to his customers at the Infantry Training Brigade exceed those of his peers. Mr. Seferian's devotion to duty truly marks him along with all his employees as a team with the attitude of mission accomplishment, professionalism and customer satisfaction."

Award : Army Communities of Excellence Employee of the Quarter
Unit: Freight and Terminal Section, Movements Branch, Transportation Division, Directorate of Logistics Job Title: Transportation assistant
Years on the job: 17 years

What were your reasons for joining civil service?
Career decision.

Define your work ethic:
Communication and expression go a long way, but listening is just as important.

What person has most influenced your military career?
Jerry W. Newman, traffic manager, Transportation Division.

If you were supervisor for a day, what improvements would you make?
Personally, I would like to extend the work day to 10 hours and eliminate work on either Friday or Monday.

Describe a memorable moment is your career:
Being selected to receive the Community of Excellence Award for Customer Service Excellence and having it presented by Maj. Gen. John W. Hendrix.

What are your future plans?
Continue my stride toward upward mobility.

What others have to say :
"Mr. Hernandez's positive attitude and enthusiasm, as well as his extensive knowledge of subject and eagerness to perform his mission, are frequently commented on favorably by those he serves. He is a friendly, pleasant individual with a ready smile for customer and co-worker alike."

MILITARY MEMORABILIA

Officer donates WWI items to museum

IOAC instructor gives away rare uniform, memoirs, rifle

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet

From the Civil War to Vietnam, a Fort Benning captain has spent the greater part of his lifetime collecting military memorabilia from some of America's bloodiest and most dramatic conflicts.

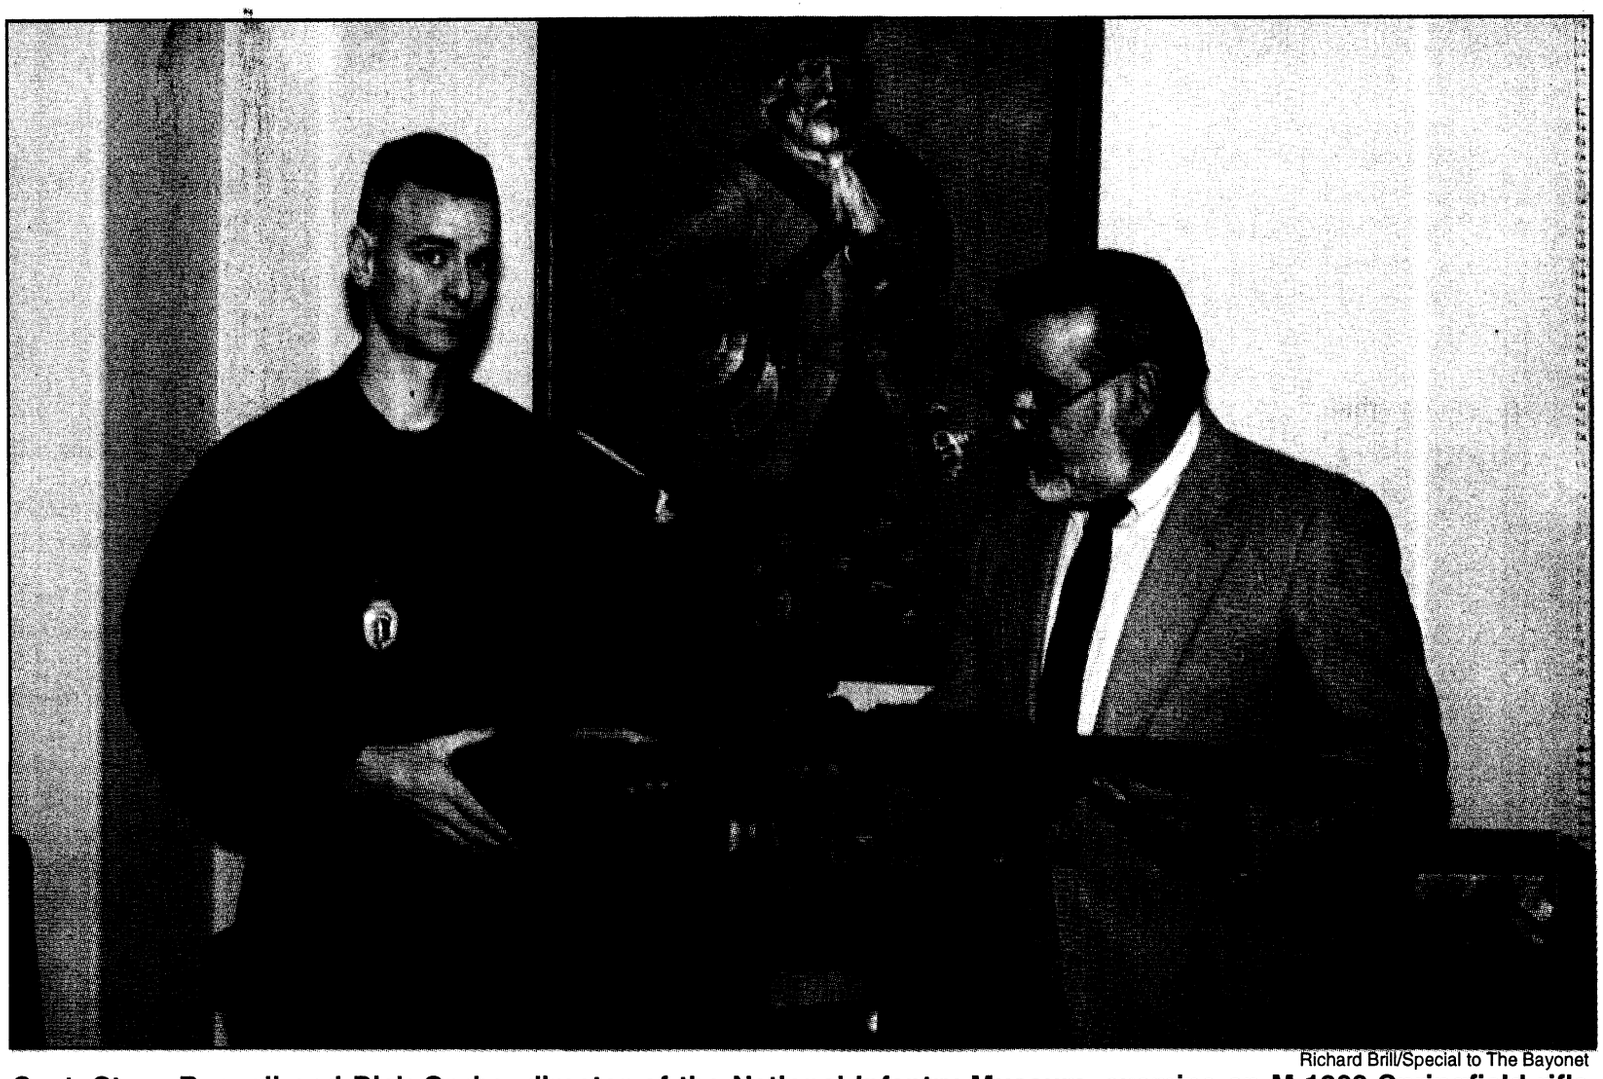
To help honor those who fought in World War I and to express his appreciation of the National Infantry Museum, he recently donated some rare World War I mementos, which will be added to the museum's collection.

Capt. Steve Russell, a small group instructor for the Infantry Officer Advanced Course, donated a uniform that belonged to Maj. Gen. David C. Shanks, commander of the port of the 16th Division in World War I; a copy of Shank's memoirs; and an M-1903 Springfield rifle with a telescopic site.

"These are not secondhand or duplicate items," Russell said. "These are my most valuable pieces — the first fruits of my collecting effort.

"These items really belong in the museum," he said. "In 21 years, I have collected more items than I possibly need. It doesn't bother me a bit to part with them. They belong here for others to enjoy."

Museum Director Dick Grube said Russell's pieces will handsomely complement the museum's existing World War I collection because of their one-of-a kind nature.



"These are valuable pieces that we do not already have," Grube said. "The uniform is unique because it belonged to a World War I division commander, of which there were only 75. Shanks was one of the senior officers of the war."

The M-1903 is remembered as the first regulation issue sniper rifle, Russell said. Only 4,500 were produced.

"A World War I captain, Herbert W. McBride, killed more than 300 of the enemy using this same type of sighting system," he said. "It was quite accurate."

Russell, who is from Oklahoma, has been a collector of military antiques since the age of 10 when a neighbor gave him an old Army helmet. Russell said his specialty is World War I, a conflict often overlooked by collectors, who tend to specialize heavily in World War II items and often in foreign military antiques, he said.

"I wanted to preserve the heritage of my own country," he said. "Our nation has a very proud history. World War I is a kind of forgotten war that has been overshadowed by other more recent conflicts, yet it was a period of great suffering marked by outstanding heroism and endurance from those involved."

Richard Brill/Special to The Bayonet

Capt. Steve Russell and Dick Grube, director of the National Infantry Museum, examine an M-1903 Springfield rifle donated to the museum by Russell.

Russell, who has worked on special projects for the museum since 1986 (his technical drawings enhance various museum displays), said the National Infantry Museum is the perfect home for the items he chose to donate.

"When it comes to what we possess, we can own our possessions or they can own us," Russell said. "It has given me great pleasure to own these items, but it gives me even greater pleasure to donate them to the museum. I encourage others to do the same, because with budget cuts the museum doesn't have a lot of money to purchase new items. Many of their best pieces are on display because of the hospitality of others."

Parent Academy

to provide tips on raising children

Fort Benning Schools

The Parent Academy, a weekend seminar for Fort Benning parents of children up to age 18, will take place at Faith School Feb. 24 and 25.

Last year, more than 300 parents attended the two-day seminar that covered parenting topics related to children ages newborn to 15. This year's Parent Academy will be expanded to include parenting issues from birth through high school.

The Parent Academy is free and is open to all Fort Benning parents and personnel. Free child care will also be provided for children aged 6 weeks to 11 years of age.

Space in the Parent Academy will be limited. Reservations will be required. These reservations will be taken on a first-come, first - served basis beginning Jan. 24 at the seven Fort Benning Schools and at the Fort Benning Schools Administration Office on Custer Road. Registration will take place from 8:15 to 9:15 a.m. each morning until all spaces are filled. No telephone reservations will be accepted.

The Parent Academy is built around topics identified by Fort Benning parents. More than 200 Fort Benning Schools' parents responded to a questionnaire last month. The Parent Academy sessions have been designed to cover the topics that were of greatest interest.

Barbara Coloroso, an internationally recognized speaker in the areas of parenting, discipline and nonviolent conflict resolution, will return to Fort Benning to share her knowledge and expertise.

Following a spaghetti supper Feb. 24, she will present a keynote address to kick off the academy sessions scheduled from 8 a.m. to noon Feb. 25.

On Saturday morning, parents will choose three sessions. Choices include such topics as discipline, chores, homework, encouraging creativity, technology, stages of development of middle school students, high school, college and career planning and many more.

Registration forms and information will be sent home with Fort Benning Schools' students Jan. 24.

Parents interested in attending the Parent Academy can either return the registration form with their child on Jan. 25 or come to any registration site to register during the registration times.

Those wishing to register who do not have a child in the Fort Benning Schools can pick up registration forms and materials at any registration site beginning Jan. 24, but registrations will not be accepted until Jan. 25.

The Parent Academy is being presented by the Fort Benning Schools, the Officers' Wives' Club and other community agencies.

Physician wins award

MACH doctor is named top Army internist

By Jerrie Macintire
Special to The Bayonet©

A physician at Martin Army Community Hospital recently received the Army's top award for achievement in internal medicine.

Dr. (Maj.) William J. Yost accepted the Robert H. Moser Award "for outstanding performance of duty as a general internist" from Dr. Arlene Zaloznik, governor of the U.S. Army Chapter of the American College of Physicians, at a ceremony in Washington, D.C.

> "Dr. Yost epitomizes commitment to academic excellence."
> — Lt. Col. Michael Kussman
> Hospital commander

The Moser Award recognizes the top internist in the entire Army Medical Department who provides daily patient care, said Lt. Col Robert Strickland, chief of the Department of Medicine at the hospital. .

"Dr. Yost consistently provides care to some of the most critically ill patients and establishes a genuine bond in the patient provider role inherent in only the finest of physicians," said Col. Michael Kussman, hospital commander.

"Dr. Yost epitomizes commitment to academic excellence and serves as an excellent role model and mentor for others," he said.

Colleagues agree, saying Yost excels as a teacher as well as clinician and performs his duties with enthusiasm, adhering to the highest medical standards while never losing touch with the humanitarian aspect of medicine.

Citing his "clinical competence, professionalism and humanistic values," Yost was highly deserving of the prestigious Moser Award, said Strickland.

"I never want to give up working with patients," said Yost, who plans to continue combining academic medicine (teaching) with patient care.

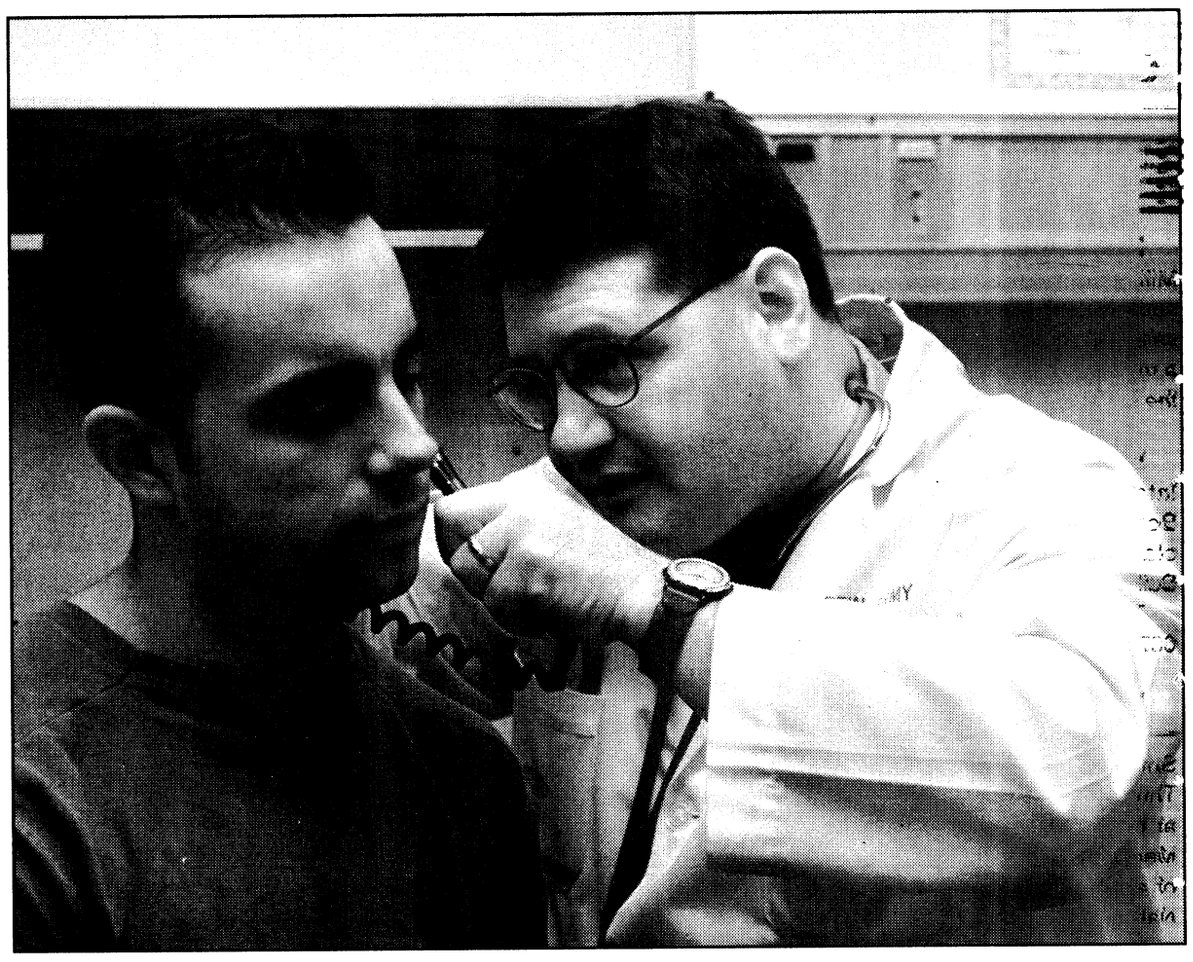
On a daily basis, Yost sees patients with a variety of medical problems ranging from heart disease to cancer to kidney failure.

Although Yost said he finds great satisfaction in helping patients, he also enjoys the time he spends with his family.

Yost and his "mini all-star team" (his children John, Charlie and Katie) frequently put the crisp weekend weather to good use by playing football with Yost as the quarterback.

In addition to football and a little bicycling, Yost and his wife, Rosemarie, spent a recent weekend immersed with helping children with school science projects.

"The whole house smelled like overripe bananas," said Yost, whose son was studying the effects of yeast on decomposition.

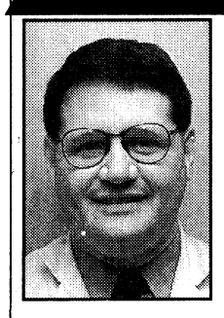


In his own home kitchen or in a high-tech laboratory, Yost is no stranger to research; the physician has a range of published articles to his credit and possesses "superior depth of knowledge and abilities to take on varied tasks," Strickland said.

In addition to the Moser Award, Yost was recognized as "Teacher of the Year" at MACH's Family Practice Department last year, and received the William R. Wilson Award for exceptional accomplishment in internal medicine while attending medical school at the University of Iowa. While there he was inducted into the Alpha Omega Alpha Medical Honor Society his junior year.

During his residency training at Walter Reed Army Medical Center in Washington, D.C., Yost was selected as chief resident of the program.

He attended undergraduate school at Iowa State University, and also received a doctor of veterinary medicine degree from that institution in 1983.



Yost has been at MACH since July 1992. While at the hospital, he has served as medical director of the Tuberculosis Clinic and chairman of the patient care evaluation committee. He has also served on other committees including the Quality Improvement Committee, the Department of Medicine Quality Improvement Committee, Risk Management Committee, Blood Product Utilization and Transfusion Committee and the Tumor Board.

Patch Preschool receives national accreditation

By Cathi Thomas
Patch Preschool

Patch Preschool recently received accreditation by the National Academy of Early Childhood Programs.

The academy recognizes outstanding Early Childhood Programs that meet national standards of quality.

Patch serves children from ages 3 to 4, according to its director, Kathy Crawford.

"Accreditation helps answer the question, 'What is a quality (child care, preschool, before and after school) program?' " said Marilyn Smith, executive director of the National Association for the Education of Young Children. "Most parents want to find the highest quality program for their young children; however, few parents know how to assess whether a program meets more than just the minimum standards required by state licensing."

The academy's standards were developed over a three-year period with input from thousands of educators and administrators from across the country.

In 1985, the first program was accredited by NAEYC. Now there are more than 2,500 programs from across the country, including U.S. military installations around the world, that have been accredited by the Academy.

"Accreditation is not meant to replace parents' on-site visits to centers as a means of selecting the program that best meets their child's needs," Smith said, "but accreditation does help parents recognize the varied components that should be present in a quality program."

To become accredited, Patch had to meet a variety of criteria related to providing a developmentally appropriate program for 3 to 4-year-olds. These criteria range from having a well-qualified and trained staff to meeting stringent health and safety standards. Also, the program must provide opportunities for parental involvement.

Accreditation includes an on-site study of the program by professional validators and final review by a three-member panel of commissioners who are experts in the field of early childhood educational.

If it affects Fort Benning, you'll read about first in THE BAYONET.

Terri's Florals Becomes Brooke's Florals

Terri Olson, owner of Brooke's Florals, holds her daughter Brooke in front of a billboard advertising their most popular offer.

Terri Olson
Brooke's Florals

Hi, I'm Terri, the original owner of Terri's Florals. It all started 23 years ago when I opened Terri's Florals and have been designing flowers since. Recently, we changed the business name to Brooke's Florals, named after our four-year-old daughter, to carry on my legacy in the florist business.

As a business woman, I have worked hard and long hours in order to purchase the property at 3707 Buena Vista Road. I can now say I'm the proud owner of this florist shop. We are also opening a new location at the corner of Manchester Expressway and Armour Road.

I am a native Columbusite who graduated from Pacelli High School in 1965. I am married to Cpt. (Ret.) Paul Olson who also assists me in the florist shops. Brooke, my daughter, helps me at home. She loves flowers and is always picking flowers out of my garden to give to me.

I am the first florist in Columbus to introduce the dozen roses, cash and carry, for $9.95. It was quite an innovative idea that I brought to the community for those impromptu buyers. Later, it was followed up by the second dozen roses for only $5, quite a steal! At this time of year, these roses make an excellent hostess gift.

Our flower shop was voted number one last year by the community in the Ledger-Enquirer Readers Choice Awards. We appreciate our loyal customers who have helped us achieve our success.

Our popularity which keeps us so busy with walk-in customers from the entire Fort Benning, Columbus and Phenix City areas is due to excellent prices, high quality flowers and customer service.

If you're going to be successful in business as a woman, you must work extremely hard, be perseverant and constantly innovative in your thinking.

My experience with co-sponsoring the Miss Georgia pageant, teaching the first floral school for novices in Columbus as well as winning many awards in garden clubs and exotic floral design clubs have helped me immensely.

Please visit our stores at 3707 Buena Vista Road and Manchester Expressway. Monday -Friday, 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. and Saturday, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Call us at 687-5400 or 321-1411, respectively. Look for our spectacular Valentine's prices: dozen roses, cash and carry, $19.95. Place your order early for Valentine's!

Columbus to present Southern Gospel Showcase

The Watkin's Group Inc.

The Watkin's Group Inc., in conjunction with It's All Good Entertainment Group, will present the fourth annual Southern Gospel Showcase in Columbus Feb. 11 at the Three Arts Theater at 7 p.m.

The Atlanta-based companies will be presenting talent from around the country in celebration of Black History Month.

Participants for the event will be coming from Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Louisiana and Ohio. Plus, singers from various Columbus churches will join together and perform as a mass choir.

A percentage of the proceeds will benefit the Columbus Shelter for Children and the Watkin's Group Scholarship Fund.

The following performers will be on hand for the event: The Pinehill Youth for Christ (Phenix City); The Lyles Family Singers (Phenix City); The Capitol City Mass Choir (Montgomery, Ala.); The Gospelettes (Havana, Fla.); The Modern Gospelaires (Orlando, Fla.); Bessie Bradley (Jonesboro, La.); Cody (Cleveland, Ohio); The Sheppard Drive Seventh Day Adventist Choir (Columbus, Ga.).

The goal of the Watkin's Group is to make Columbus the spotlight for this annual event.

Tickets will be $10 in advance and $12.50 at the door.

Military discount tickets will be available at Sol and Harry's Men's Store on Broadway and the New Life Christian Bookstore, off the 14th Street Bridge in Phenix City.

For tickets and more information, call Charlene L. LaDay, Columbus coordinator for the Watkin's Group, at 323-5467.

English classes — English language classes will begin Tuesday at the Religious Education Center, Building 2522. Classes will be from 9:30 to 11:30 a.m.

Classes are designed for foreign-born spouses of service members and personnel from the School of the Americas.

The goal is to give students the language skills necessary to function independently and do things like obtain a driver's license, go to the Commissary or hospital and communicate with friends and neighbors.

Classes are offered in four levels, and students are placed according to their proficiency in English. Classes are free and books are available for purchase at the classes.

Protestant Women of the Chapel — Protestant Women of the Chapel is offering the following Bible studies:

"Experiencing God" by Henry Blackaby, "Walking with Christ" and "The Character of Christians" by Navigator Press, "What Happens When We Pray for Our Families" by Evelyn Christenson, "Becoming a Woman of Excellence" by Cynthia Heald and "Covenant" by Precepts Ministries.

The group meets every Thursday at 9:30 a.m. in Building 2527, located off Indianhead Road and Thorson Street. Child care is provided in the adjacent building. An evening study will also be offered if there is enough interest.

For more information, call Cindy Russell at 561-3348.

Catholic community — Confirmation classes for adults will begin Jan. 22 at 1 p.m. in the Religious Education Center, Building 2522. Classes are for adults who have not been confirmed.

To register, call Phil Reilly at 545-5508 or the chapel at 545-1452.

reflections

Monday we celebrate the birthday of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., a great American hero. Had he lived, he would have been 66 years old. He died promoting unity and oneness of the peoples of the United States. His dream still needs to be dreamed and followed by us — his posterity. Especially is this so with the ever-increasing polarization of our different racial, ethnic, sexual and socioeconomic groups.

Our polarization is specifically seen in the negative attitudes shown toward legal and illegal immigrants who have come into our country the last few years. The biggest difference in immigrants who come into our country today vs. those who came in at Ellis Island, N.Y., (1892 to 1943) is the latter were primarily from Europe. They came to join a family and community that were established and successful. They would be a positive influence in our society and economy.

The new immigrants of today — primarily from Mexico, Haiti and Cuba — are a dispossessed people. They come with nothing — no education, no skills, no established successful community in which to enter and thrive.

Just this morning as I write this article, the news stated the governor of Florida sued the federal government because of more than $1 billion in support costs that the immigrants from Cuba and Haiti had inflicted upon Floridians.

I am sensitive to the economic burden placed upon society because of immigrants. However, at a deeper level and from Judeo-Christian teachings, God and Jesus would have us follow the teachings of Matthew 25:34-36 "Come you who are blessed by my Father; take your inheritance, the kingdom prepared for you since the creation of the world. For I was hungry and you gave me something to eat, I was thirsty and you gave me something to drink, I was a stranger and you invited me in, I needed clothes and you clothed me, I was sick and you looked after me, I was in prison, and you came to visit me." (NIV)

Perhaps in defense, we want to respond, "But let me help legal citizens who are dispossessed, not illegal immigrants!" Our thoughts reveal who and what we really are. In this case closed-minded and closed-hearted to the dispossessed.

My observation is that our society, which is primarily Christian (at least in affiliation), is becoming more inwardly polarized. I am for a more stricter adherence to Judeo-Christian ethics and morals. However, we must be careful that we do not exclude others in terms of our loving and caring for them — especially when this affects our pocketbook and our personal and social interaction among them.

It seems there still is a lot of bias, prejudice and discrimination in our hearts. This can be seen in the churches of the community. Although I have attended only a few; in most, there is only one race. Our society as well as churches and synagogues need to be more inclusive of persons of all races, ethnic groups and socioeconomic backgrounds.

Being in the military helps to "bridge this gap" as we strive to work together. Although I would note, we in the military are not dispossessed. We have jobs and a paycheck.

At the least we Christians need to do what Christ wants us to do. We must become literally involved in the life situation of the dispossessed in our community. We must follow the teachings of Matthew 25.

If, and when we do, we then could truly say, paraphrasing Colossians 3:11 — "Here there is no black or white, legal or illegal, uneducated, foreigner, tax paying or jobless, but Christ is all, and is in all."

If we practiced this, King could look down from heaven and say, "Free at last, free at last, thank God Almighty, I'm free at last."

TIPS FOR MAKING YOUR AD MORE EFFECTIVE

- Start Your ad with the item you are selling, service you are offering, or job title you are looking to hire.
- Be descriptive. The more information you provide to the reader, the better the responses will be to your ad.
- Use bold type, white space of decorative characters such as stars, to bring attention to your ad.
- Run your ad for an ample length of time. Remember, as soon as you get results, you can cancel at any time .
- Always include the price of your item.

THE NEXT TIME YOU DRIVE TO ATLANTA TO CATCH A FLIGHT. . . ATTACH THIS TO YOUR WINDOW!

Some folks think that to get the cheapest airfare or the best airline connection, it's necessary to drive to Atlanta. Leaving Columbus two hours early to make the 100 mile drive, parking their car in a suburb of Harris County, fighting the crowds, catching a train and finding any one of hundreds of departure gates, and then being faced with the same grim process on their return, doesn't seem to deter the cost-conscious traveller in his quest to find the absolute lowest fare.

Columbus Now Has
"THE HOMEFIELD ADVANTAGE"
There are now five air carriers serving Columbus, providing a total of 40 arrivals and departures daily, with more flights expected to be added as the traffic increases. More carriers and more flights also mean more destinations, improved service and more competitive fares.

ASA Your Delta connection
NORTHWEST Airlink
DELTA
AMR American Eagle American Airlines
USAir EXPRESS

So next time you make your travel plans, contact your travel agent and compare fares. Then think about that four hour round-trip drive to and from Atlanta and see if it's really worth the extra effort. Shop around, you'll soon realize that a Columbus departure gives you. . .
THE HOMEFIELD ADVANTAGE.

Don Adams gets 'Smart' again

By Jay Bobbin
Tribune Media Services

"Would you believe ... " that one of the classic comedy series of the 1960s has returned?

Though such shows of the past as "The Fugitive" and "The Addams Family" have served as springboards for hit movies in recent years, relatively few get full-fledged television revivals.

However, the latest to receive such treatment is the spy spoof "Get Smart," which made Don Adams the winner of three consecutive Emmys, and a legend in TV lore for his in-character use of such gadgets as a telephone hidden in one of his shoes.

Airing Sundays on Fox, the new update makes Maxwell Smart — the ex-Agent 86 — the chief of CONTROL, the organization that regularly engages in battle with the rival outfit KAOS to ensure that the balance of world power stays where it's supposed to be.

Barbara Feldon also reprises her role as "99," Max's former sleuthing partner who's now his wife (as well as a member of Congress), but much of the spotlight goes to two new co-stars: Andy Dick ("The Ben Stiller Show") as Max and 99's novice-detective son Zachary, and Elaine Hendrix as his attractive cohort, Agent 66.

While the new edition retains "Smart" co-creator Leonard Stern as executive consultant, it's mainly under the supervision of former "Roc" producer Vic Kaplan and the team of Michael DiGaetano and Lawrence Gay, who also are the writers of the current Sinbad movie comedy "Houseguest."

What: "Get Smart"
When: Monday on FOX

"It was the best job I ever had," said the friendly Adams of acting Smart, which explains why he also played the part in a 1980 feature film ("The Nude Bomb," which he now asserts he'd "like to forget") and a 1989 TV-movie ("Get Smart, Again!").

"Not only was there a lot of money and a certain fame involved, but it was fun to do," he said. "It was the only job I've ever had in my life that I couldn't wait to get to."

Despite his involvement in the new "Get Smart," Adams admits to having mixed feelings about it.

"It was never something that I jumped at, but in the final analysis, I agreed to do it with the hope it would come out all right," he said. "After doing 139 episodes (the first time), of which I thought at least a third were really great, it's hard to go back. A lot of people look at 'Get Smart' like it was slapstick, or broad comedy; I never considered it to be that, although I did do some physical comedy in it. I always thought of it as a satire. Nobody really realizes that 'Get Smart' is the only half-hour situation comedy that was done like a movie. All the rest were done with an audience in a studio with four cameras and two standing sets, while 'Get Smart' was done with one camera and big sets and outside locations."

ACOE team arrives, begins judging at Fort Benning

By Caejar A. Cox
USAIC Public Affairs Office

For the third straight year, Fort Benning is competing for the Commander-in-Chief's Award as the best Army installation in the world. The Army Communities of Excellence team kicked off the judging Monday, right here on Fort Benning.

Watch "Fort Benning Today" for highlights of the team's visit.

Fort Benning Commanding General Maj. Gen. John W. Hendrix conducted his second retreat ceremony on post Wednesday.

USAIC-TV Schedule

USAIC-TV operates 24 hours a day on post cable Channel 3.

Watch "Fort Benning Today" for highlights of the awards presentation.

The U.S. Army Infantry Center Command Information Channel announces post events and post movie listings, and it offers free classified advertisements on "Fort Benning Update," a community information service.

Anyone who lives on post and subscribes to Fort Benning Cable can watch USAIC-TV on Channel 3, 24 hours a day.

Anyone living off post can watch "Fort Benning Today" Monday mornings at 7:25, 7:55, 8:25 and 8:55 on WLTZ-TV 38.

Duke Ellington's granddaughter to choreograph, direct Springer's

'Sophisticated Ladies' in Feb

Paul R. Pierce
Springer Opera House

Duke Ellington's granddaughter will return to Columbus to direct the Springer's production of "Sophisticated Ladies," scheduled to open Feb. 23.

Mercedes Ellington directed last season's popular "Ain't Misbehavin' " at the Springer Opera House and has agreed to direct and choreograph the upcoming Broadway hit based on her grandfather's music.

Although Duke Ellington was one of America's most celebrated African-American musicians and bandleaders, the Springer will present "Sophisticated Ladies" with a multicultural cast of singers and dancers.

Dance styles in "Sophisticated Ladies" range from tap and jazz to ballet and ballroom. Ellington is casting eight principal players and eight ensemble performers.

"Sophisticated Ladies" features Duke Ellington favorites like "Take the 'A' Train," "Satin Doll" and "It Don't Mean a Thing If You Ain't Got That Swing."

"We're fortunate to have Mercedes joining the Springer artistic staff again this season," said artistic director Paul R. Pierce. "She is one of our country's foremost choreographers and directors, and it's natural for her to direct her grandfather's music at the Springer. We are all excited about her return to Columbus."

For ticket information on "Sophisticated Ladies," call the Springer Theatre at 324-1100.

Museum exhibit to open Feb. 5

The Columbus Museum

William H. Johnson: A Retrospective will open at the Columbus Museum Feb. 5.

This survey of the career of one of the nation's central African-American painters of the 20th century includes work from throughout Johnson's career — from landscapes painted in France and Denmark during his student days to explorations, in a jazzy abstract style, of his memories of the rural South, Harlem dance halls and Army experiences in World War II.

Johnson (1901-1970) was born in Florence, S.C., but his youthful aspirations were unattainable in a segregated South. He moved to New York City in 1918, attending the prestigious National Academy of Design School. Excelling in painting, he received private support in 1926 for a year's study in France.

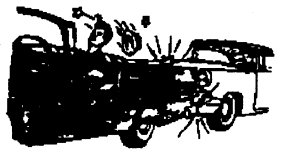
Works focus on an interpretation of black life in the South and in Harlem

Although landscape themes and portraiture had dominated his European years, when he returned to America in the late 1930s, Johnson began painting interpretations of black life in the rural South and in Harlem.

His inspiration and emotional sustenance came from the life around him, which he painted with poignancy and gentle wit.

He concentrated on African-American culture and captured the history, folklore, imagination, rhythm and spirit of his people. Johnson's mature works relate not only to the black experience in America but also to the complex and multi-faceted face of American modernism in art, literature and music just before and during World War II.

The exhibition was organized and circulated by the National Museum of American Art, Smithsonian Institution.



The Columbus Museum is located on Wynnton Road. Admission is free and hours are Tuesday through Saturday from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. and Sundays from 1 to 5 p.m. The museum is closed on Mondays and holidays.

For more information, call 649-0713.

Post detention facility to close by Feb. 28

By Karen S. Morarie
Bayonet staff writer

In the past, Fort Benning has seen the hanging of at least one military prisoner. Beginning soon, it won't even be housing them.

Fort Benning's Installation Detention Facility is scheduled to close Feb. 28 as part of the Department of the Army's restructuring of its correctional system.

Under the DA plan, most installations will close their facilities and begin sending prisoners to regional centers, according to Col. Ronnie D. Alton, provost marshal and director of Public Safety.

Alton said Training and Doctrine Command set the date for Fort Benning's facility to shut down after it was targeted for closure by DA.

Once the facility closes, there will be only two cells, located inside the Military Police station, available for detention. According to Alton, regulations allow prisoners to be kept in such cells for no more than 72 hours.

Soldiers pending trial and those awaiting post-trial review before beginning their sentences will have to be sent to other facilities. Alton said the review is usually a two- to three-week process.

Impact on post units

"In a way, (this action) is positive, because there just aren't as many crimes being committed in the Army as there used to be, and there aren't as many prisoners," Alton said. "Many facilities have low occupancy rates, and DA decided it would be more cost-effective to go to regional detention centers."

Units on Fort Benning, however, may find the new procedures fairly expensive. Soldiers will now be sent to either the Pensacola or Jacksonville, Fla., Naval air stations for detention, Alton said, and soldiers' units will bear the cost for transportation and temporary duty pay for prisoners, driver and guard.

"We recommend at least two people to accompany a prisoner," Alton said, which means paying for three people any time a prisoner is transported.

This could be particularly expensive when prisoners are sent elsewhere to await trial, brought back to Fort Benning for trial, and then sent on to Fort Knox, for one- to five-year sentences, or to Fort Leavenworth for long-term confinement, he said.

Alton said he's not entirely happy that the facility is closing. "We submitted a packet to TRADOC requesting to keep the facility open," he said, on the grounds that an on-post facility is more cost-effective and is also a convenience to commanders.

"Before, if (commanders) had 125 super soldiers and one poor soldier," he said, "they could get that soldier out of the way quickly. Now, they'll have to hold him at the unit until they can make arrangements," which could be bad for morale, Alton said.

Alton had hoped to keep the facility open as a regional center, he said; but, even with prisoners from five other installations in Georgia and Alabama, the facility averaged between 10 and 20 prisoners at a time.

Staff Sgt. Bernadette Fullwood, whose military occupational specialty is 95C, corrections specialist, has worked at the facility for three years. She, too, said she would like to see the facility remain open, partly to help maintain discipline.

Having the facility available, Fullwood said, gave commanders another option in dealing with relatively minor infractions by their soldiers.

"Soldiers were being sentenced for 30 days (following a court martial)," Fullwood said, "and they could be kept right here. Now, those soldiers will probably be put out (of the service), or they'll get a little Article 15 and a slap on the wrist."

Soldiers face changes

Sgt. 1st Class Rickey Williams, acting first sergeant of the Corrections Company, faces new duties, as do most of the soldiers assigned to the company. Williams, whose military occupational specialty is military police rather than corrections, will take on duties at MPA until his retirement in July.

Fullwood, along with other corrections specialists, will be reassigned to a new duty station once Fort Benning's facility closes. Her new assignment is at Fort Shafter, Hawaii.

Slots formerly belonging to corrections specialists will be filled by soldiers who will perform military police duties, Alton said.

Sgt. Vincent Andrews, a clerical specialist who has worked at the IDF for about nine months, will assume duties at the U. S. Army Medical Department Activity. He said he also has reservations about removing corrections from the post.

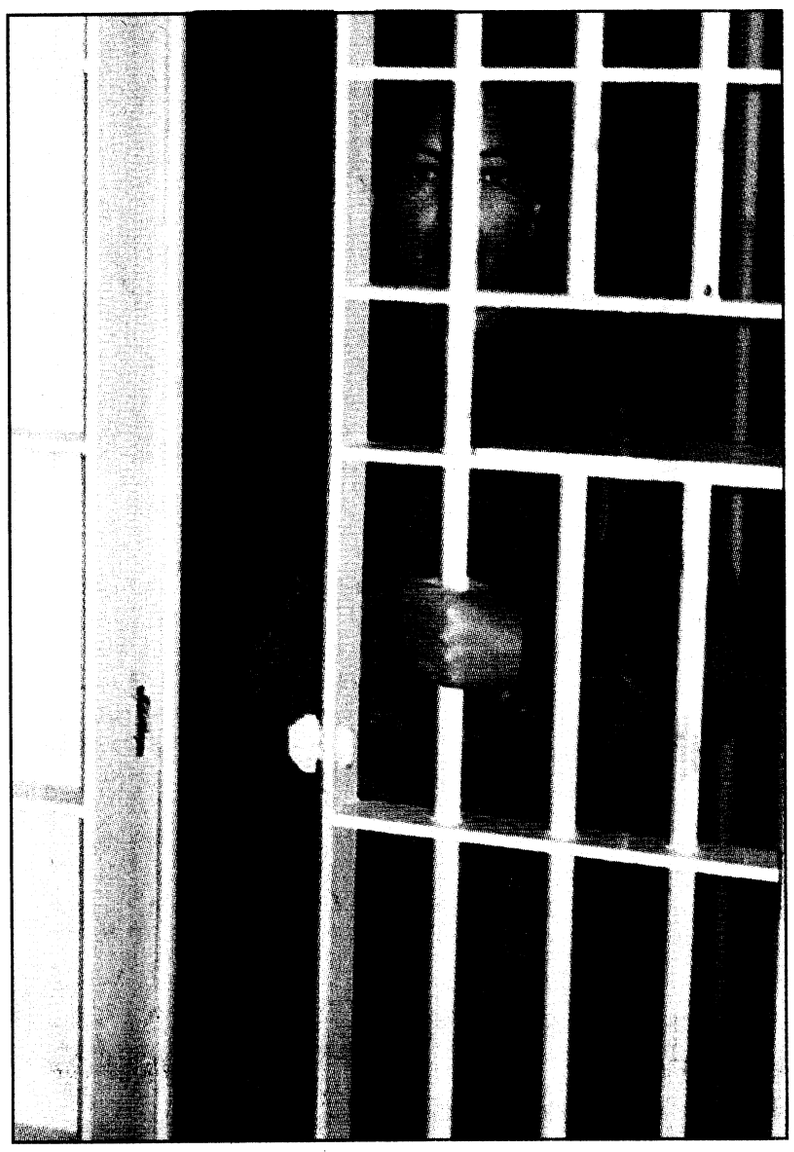
"They're going to encounter more problems, more bills," he said of the proposed new system. "It could be a real hardship for the units, having to pay those costs."

What's next?

Alton said the facility, which has been renovated with new fencing, heating and air conditioning system over the past few years, will be used for something, although the final decision has not yet been made.

Karen S. Morarie
These are only some of the keys used to maintain security at the facility.

"It (the building) is on the National Historic Register, so it can't just be torn down," he said.



Williams said he thinks the building will likely be used by the Military Police Activity in some capacity.

Alton pointed out the building has many amenities beyond the various prisoner cells; it boasts its own dispensary, chapel, weight room, library, kitchen, dining facility and break area.

Pfc. Cassaundra Wright, who has worked as a guard at the facility, said that while prisoners did have details and regulations, every effort was made to treat them fairly.

Wright said she especially admired the chaplain who normally performed services at the facility, Chaplain (Capt.) Marshall Peterson.

"He would make special trips to see the soldiers, especially if they were going to be shipped the next day," she said. "He was always available to counsel the prisoners — he's a very good man."

Karen S. Morarie
Pfc. Cassaundra Wright closes the door on an isolation cell at the Installation Detention Facility, which will close its doors Feb. 28.

Wright said prisoners were segregated both by sex and by rank. "Most of the ones here were pre-trial," she said, "so they were still active duty. They had to keep the high-and-tight, keep their uniforms sharp, and do PT (physical training) five days a week. We woke them up at 5 a.m., and they had set recreation hours, times to eat, and lights-out."

"It's like a ghost town in here now," Williams said, looking around the empty kitchen. "We shipped our last prisoner (Wednesday) morning, and we're not really expecting any more. We're planning to start cleaning out furniture and equipment sometime next week."

Post 'handling' hazardous waste

By Karen S. Morarie
Bayonet staff writer

A recent hazardous waste inspection by a state agency shows a "tremendous improvement in overall compliance" and about 80 percent fewer violations than in previous inspections.

Reginald Young, of the Georgia Environmental Protection Division, conducted the inspection Dec. 6 through 8.

Fort Benning is inspected regularly by both state and federal agencies. Hazardous waste inspections measure the post's compliance with regulations covering the handling, storage and disposal of wastes ranging from antifreeze and solvents to most kinds of paint.

Violations Young noted during his inspection all resulted from improper container management and included:

- Failure to label a drum containing hazardous paint waste
- Failure to put an accumulation start date on a full drum of hazardous paint waste
- Failure to keep waste containers closed and sealed when not in use.

As well as improvements in the post's overall compliance, Young noted specific improvements at Martin Army Community Hospital, the directorate of Logistics Maintenance Battery and Paint Shops, and the 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment Motor Pool.

Dr. Christine Gettys Hull, a Hazardous Waste Program manager with the Directorate of Public Works, said all violations noted in the last inspection have been corrected.

"There are always things we need to do," she said. "It's easy to get back out of compliance if the units aren't vigilant."

Hull said every unit that generates hazardous waste should have a person trained and responsible for its proper handling.

Mike Nuckols, another Hazardous Waste Program manager, said another inspection could occur at any time.

"The inspector literally walks into the office, and we drop everything," he said. "They're not scheduled ahead of time."

> "There are always things we need to do. It's easy to get back out of compliance if the units aren't vigilant."
> — Dr. Christine Gettys Hull
> Hazardous Waste Program manager

According to Garrison Commander Col. Richard L. Rutledge, increased compliance with hazardous waste regulations means not only a safer environment, but also more money that can be dedicated to the post's mission.

"The improvements are a result of the hard work and commitment made by the soldiers and civilians who are charged with managing their unit's or activity's hazardous waste," Rutledge said.

Hull said the improvement in unit representatives' awareness of hazardous waste management has been tremendous.

"It's very important that they maintain that awareness," she said. "Col. Rutledge has given us tremendous support" in maintaining command emphasis on compliance with the regulations, she said.

Improper waste management or otherwise failing to meet environmental regulations can result in fines ranging into millions of dollars, depending on the severity of the violation.

Nuckols said he and Hull visit units to conduct informal training, and the Environmental Management Division also gives periodic 40-hour training classes for interested soldiers and civilians requiring training.

For more information on hazardous waste management, call Hull or Nuckols at 545-4766.

Breakfast to feature soldiers' prayers

By Jan Wesner Childs
Special to The Bayonet©

Prayers written by soldiers will highlight the Fort Benning National Prayer Breakfast Thursday morning at the Officer's Club.

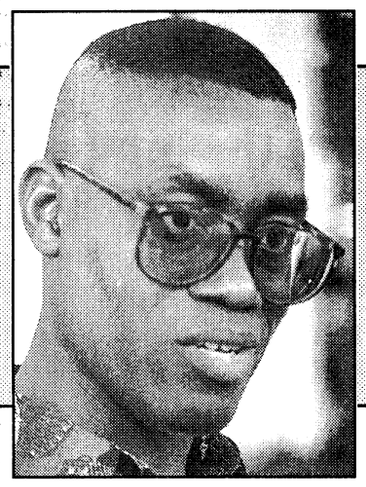
"In reality, there is no soldier who doesn't pray," Chaplain (Maj.) Carl Young, who's coordinating the event, said Friday. "You know the saying 'There are no atheists in a foxhole.' When things are going wrong we turn to God, and sometimes when things aren't going wrong we turn to God."

Various soldiers' prayers have been compiled into a book that will be handed out at the breakfast, he said.

Young said the prayers show how soldiers relate to God and how they deal with different events and crises.

The prayer breakfast is part of an annual program held across the nation, according to Young.

At Fort Benning, he said, the purpose of the event is to "praise and thank God for us as a nation."



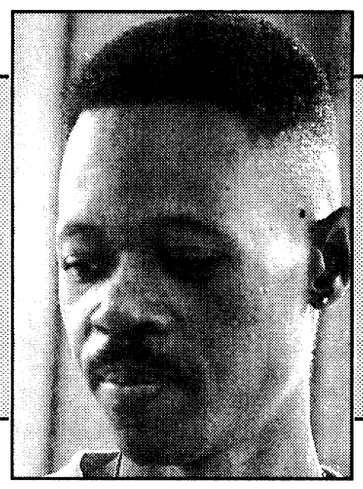
Chaplain (Col.) Calvin Sydnor III, Training and Doctrine Command Headquarters chaplain from Fort Monroe, Va., will be guest speaker for the breakfast.

The event will start at 6:30 a.m. Thursday at the Supper Club inside the Officer's Club. Tickets are $5.50 and are available from unit chaplains or the United States Army Infantry Center Chaplain's Office in Building 75.

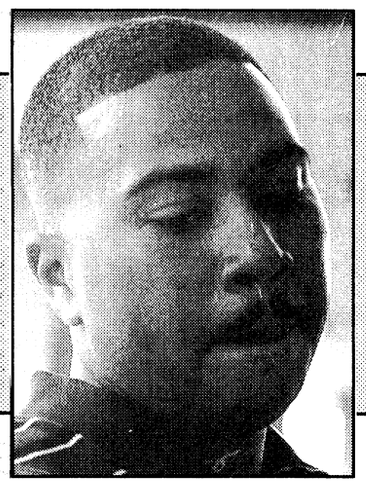
Young said 420 tickets were initially available, but are selling fast.

VARIOUS VOICES

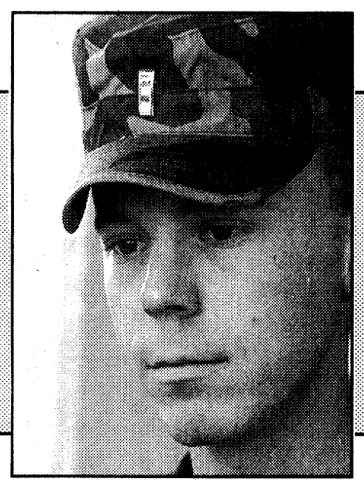
What issues would Martin Luther King focus on if he were alive today?



Donald L. Colley, retiree — "(I think) he would focus on making sure all Americans are treated the same."



2nd Lt. William S. Dinwiddie, Company C, 2nd Battalion (Infantry Officer Basic Course), 11th Infantry Regiment — "(I think) he would work against dissension between races. I think he would try to prevent things like the Los Angeles riots."



Pvt. 1 Andrew T. Douglas, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 1st Battalion, (Airborne), 507th Infantry, 11th Infantry Regiment — "(I think) he would still focus on racism issues because (racism) is still around, just not as much."

Capt. Edwin L. Hogan, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division (Mechanized) — "(I think) his main concern would probably be racism because it's still alive."

Spc. Jason O. Brown, 608th Ordnance Company — "(I think) he would focus on black-on-black crimes."

2nd Lt. Gary J. Creegan, Company C, 2nd Battalion, (Infantry Officer Basic Course), 11th Infantry Regiment — "(I think) he would focus on racial integration. It's around more than when he was alive."

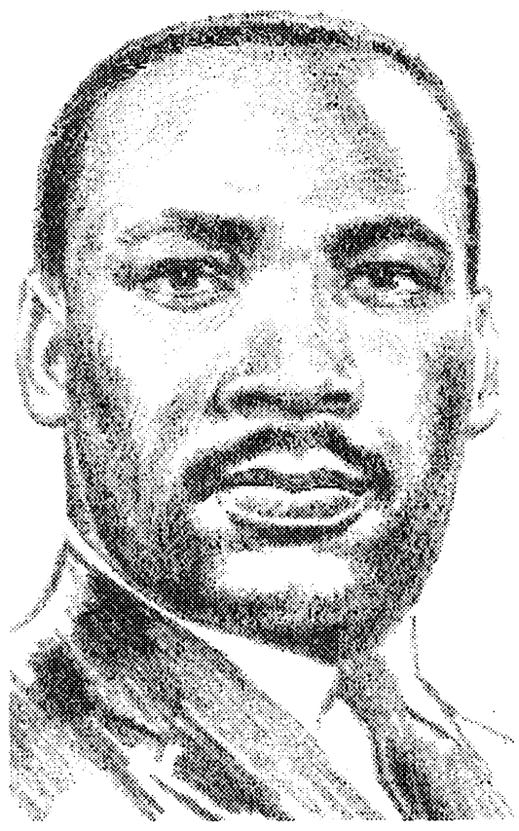
'I Have a Dream'

"I am happy to join with you today in what will go down in history as the greatest demonstration for freedom in the history of our nation.

"Five score years ago, a great American, in whose symbolic shadow we stand today, signed the Emancipation Proclamation. This momentous decree came as a great beacon light of hope to millions of Negro slaves who had been seared in the flames of withering injustice. It came as a joyous daybreak to end the long night of their captivity.

"But 100 years later, the Negro still is not free; 100 years later, the life of the Negro is still sadly crippled by the manacles of segregation and the chains of discrimination; 100 years later, the Negro lives in a lonely island of poverty in the midst of a vast ocean of material prosperity; 100 years later, the Negro is still languished in the corners of American society and finds himself in exile in his own land.



"So we've come here today to dramatize a shameful condition. In a sense we've come to our nation's capital to cash a check. When the architects of our republic wrote the magnificent words of the Constitution and the Declaration of Independence, they were signing a promissory note to which every American was to fall heir. This note was the promise that all men, yes, black men as well as white men, would be guaranteed the unalienable rights of life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness.

"It is obvious today that America has defaulted on this promissory note in so far as her citizens of color are concerned. Instead of honoring this sacred obligation, America has given the Negro people a bad check; a check which has come back marked 'insufficient funds.' We refuse to believe that there are insufficient funds in the great vaults of opportunity of this nation. And so we've come to cash this check, a check that will give us upon demand the riches of freedom and the security of justice.

"We have also come to this hallowed spot to remind America of the fierce urgency of now. This is no time to engage in the luxury of cooling off or to take the tranquilizing drug of gradualism. Now is the time to make real the promises of democracy; now is the time to rise from the dark and desolate valley of segregation to the sunlit path of racial justice; now is the time to lift our nation from the quicksands of racial injustice to the solid rock of brotherhood; now is the time to make justice a reality for all God's children. It would be fatal for the nation to overlook the urgency of the moment. This sweltering summer of the Negro's legitimate discontent will not pass until there is an invigorating autumn of freedom and equality.

"1963 is not an end, but a beginning. And those who hope that the Negro needed to blow off steam and will now be content, will have a rude awakening if the nation returns to business as usual. There will be neither rest nor tranquillity in America until the Negro is granted his citizenship rights. The whirlwinds of revolt will continue to shake the foundations of our nation until the bright day of justice emerges.

"But there is something that I must say to my people, who stand on the warm threshold which leads into the palace of justice. In the process of gaining our rightful place, we must not be guilty of wrongful deeds. Let us not seek to satisfy our thirst for freedom by drinking from the cup of bitterness and hatred. We must forever conduct our struggle on the high plain of dignity and discipline. We must not allow our creative protest to generate into physical violence. Again and again we must rise to the majestic heights of meeting physical force with soul force; and the marvelous new militancy, which has engulfed the Negro community, must not lead us to a distrust of all white people. For many of our white brothers, as evidenced by their presence here today, have come to realize that their destiny is tied with our destiny. And they have come to realize that their freedom is inextricably bound to our freedom. We cannot walk alone. And as we talk, we must make the pledge that we shall always march ahead. We cannot turn back.

> "I have a dream that one day this nation will rise up and live out the true meaning of its creed, 'We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal.'"

"There are those who are asking the devotees of civil rights, 'When will you be satisfied?' We can never be satisfied as long as the Negro is the victim of the unspeakable horrors of police brutality; we can never be satisfied as long as our bodies, heavy with the fatigue of travel, cannot gain lodging in the motels of the highways and the hotels of the cities; we cannot be satisfied as long as the Negro's basic mobility is from smaller ghetto to larger one; we can never be satisfied as long as our children are stripped of their selfhood and robbed of their dignity by signs stating 'For Whites Only'; we cannot be satisfied as long as the Negro in Mississippi cannot vote and the Negro in New York believes he has nothing for which to vote. No! No we are not satisfied and we will not be satisfied until 'justice rolls down like waters and righteousness like a mighty stream.'

"I am not unmindful that some of you have come here out of great trials and tribulations. Some of you have come fresh from narrow jail cells. Some of you have come from areas where your quest for freedom has left you battered by the storms of persecution and staggered by the winds of police brutality. You have been veterans of creative suffering. Continue to work with the faith that unearned suffering is redemptive. Go back to Mississippi. Go back to Alabama. Go back to South Carolina. Go back to Georgia. Go back to Louisiana. Go back to the slums and ghettos of our Northern cities, knowing that somehow this situation can and will be changed. Let us not wallow in the valley of despair.

"I say to you today, my friends, so even though we face the difficulties of today and tomorrow, I still have a dream. It is a dream deeply rooted in the American dream. I have a dream that one day this nation will rise up and live out the true meaning of its creed, 'We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal.' I have a dream that one day on the red hills of Georgia, sons of former slaves and the sons of former slave owners will be able to sit down together at the table of brotherhood. I have a dream that one day even the state of Mississippi, a state sweltering with the heat of injustice, sweltering with the heat of oppression, will be transformed into an oasis of freedom and justice. I have a dream that my four little children will one day live in a nation where they will not be judged by the color of their skin, but by the content of their character.

"I have a dream today!

"I have a dream that one day down in Alabama — with its vicious racists, with its governor having his lips dripping with the words of interposition and nullification — one day right there in Alabama, little black boys and black girls will be able to join hands with little white boys and white girls as sisters and brothers.

"I have a dream today!

"I have a dream that one day 'every valley shall be exalted and every hill and mountain shall be made low. The rough places will be made plain and the crooked places will be made straight, and the glory of the Lord shall be revealed, and all flesh shall see it together.'

"This is our hope. This is our faith that I go back to the South with. With this faith we shall be able to transform the jangling discords of our nation into a beautiful symphony of brotherhood. With this faith we will be able to work together, to pray together, to struggle together, to go to jail together, to stand up for freedom together, knowing we will be free one day. And this will be the day. This will be the day when all of God's children will be able to sing with new meaning, 'My country 'tis of thee, sweet land of liberty, of thee I sing. Land where my fathers died, land of the pilgrim's pride, from every mountainside, let freedom ring.' And if America is a great nation, this must become true.

"So let freedom ring from the prodigious hilltops of New Hampshire; let freedom ring from the mighty mountains of New York; let freedom ring from the snow-capped Rockies of Colorado; let freedom ring from the curvaceous slopes of California. But not only that. Let freedom ring from Stone Mountain of Georgia; let freedom ring from Lookout Mountain, Tennessee; let freedom ring from every hilltop and molehill of Mississippi. From every mountainside, let freedom ring.

"And when this happens, and when we allow freedom to ring, when we let it ring from every village and every hamlet, from every state and every city, we will all be able to speed up that day when all God's children, black men and white men, Jews and gentiles, Protestants and Catholics, will be able to join hands and sing in the words of the old Negro spiritual: 'Free at last. Free at last. Thank God Almighty, we are free at last .'"

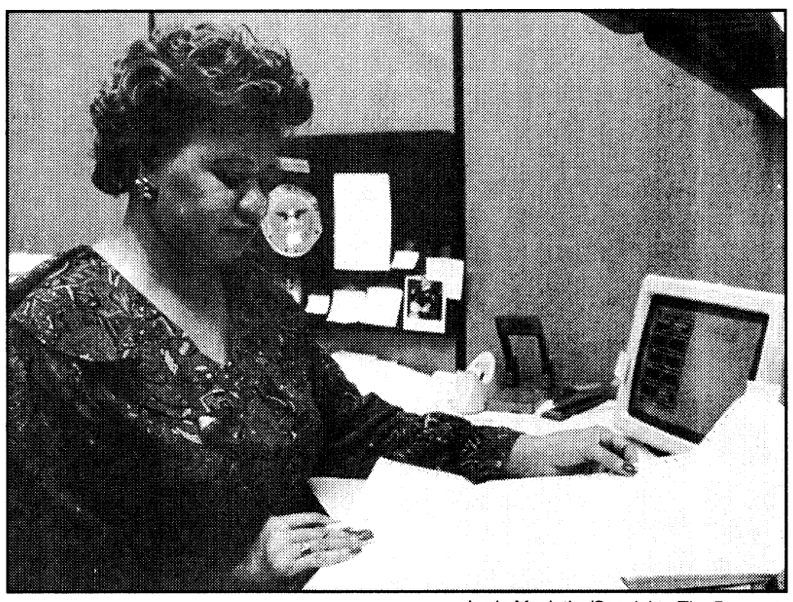
Civilian payroll office to relocate

By Jerrie Macintire
Special to The Bayonet©

Effective Jan. 22, the civilian payroll at Fort Benning will be transferred to the Defense Accounting Office in Charleston, S.C., as part of consolidation because of the standardizing and restructuring of the Defense Finance and Accounting Service, according to Pat Gilbert, payroll supervisor.

The transfer, which is the first part of a streamlining maneuver mandated by Congress, combines civilian payroll services of the Army, Navy and Air Force.



The second part of the consolidation will occur in July when the travel, funding and disbursements sections will be moved to Orlando.

These changes should not result in big differences in paycheck amounts or the ways in which employees receive their pay, said Ouida Newsom, functional representative of the Defense Civilian Pay System conversion.

"Employees will continue receiving their pay checks the same way as before, either at your home address or by bank deposit," she said.

Officials say some minor changes may be noted upon conversion to the Defense Civilian Pay System, such as minor changes in taxes, insurance deductions and post differentials, Gilbert said.

"We hope employees will not notice much of a change," Gilbert said.

Jerrie Macintire/Special to The Bayonet

Barbara McIntyre, payroll technician, validates the payroll listing balances for the conversion to the new system.

Civilians will begin receiving a new leave and earnings statement, which will be mailed to home addresses, with the pay period ending Feb. 4. Officials recommend employees retain an old leave and earning statement to compare with the new one to ensure it contains the proper information.

For those having questions about payroll after the conversion, a liaison officer will serve as an intermediary between the office in Charleston and the Fort Benning employees. That officer has not been named.

Some of the most frequently asked questions are as follows:

• How do I get my incentive bonus when I retire Jan. 31?

Officials said employees will receive bonuses just like payroll checks; they will be mailed to a home address or be transferred by bank draft.

• Who will I see about a payroll problem?

The Defense Accounting Office customer service representative, the liaison officer assigned to Fort Benning, will answer payroll questions. Problems with time will be answered by each employees timekeeper.

• Will the amount of my paycheck change?

There should only be minor changes, if any, in paycheck amounts. Some small changes may occur due to taxes, insurance, deductions and post differentials.

• How will I arrange for my current savings bond deduction?

Savings bond deductions will be automatically transferred over to Defense Civilian Pay System.

• What about my annual and sick leave?

The annual and sick leave beginning year balance will be carried over and will be the same as your current balances as reflected in the period that ended Jan 7.

However, the design of the conversion system will not provide for year to date annual and sick leave to be carried forward. Therefore, the year to date leave on your check will reflect leave for the new system only. To get accrued year to date leave information, employees must add the year to date data from the last leave and earnings statement to the Charleston leave and earnings statement.

• What about tax information?

Employees will receive two W-2 forms for 1995, one from the old pay system and one from the new pay system. Officials advise individuals to keep both forms, which will be required in filling out tax returns.

988th to return from Haiti

By Marc G. Turchin
Bayonet staff writer

The 988th Military Police Company is scheduled to return from Haiti Monday after spending four months in the Carribean nation.

All 150 soldiers that deployed are scheduled to return at that time.

While in Haiti, the company's mission was to "handle battlefield circulation and control, area security, detainee operations and law and order operations," said Capt. David F. Lewis, commander of the 988th, before the unit deployed.

DoD looks at military family issues

By Stephen Barrett
American Forces Information Service

DoD faces tough budget challenges in providing quality of life support to a reduced force, the chairman of the Joint Chiefs said.

Army Gen. John M. Shalikashvili, speaking before the recent National Military Family Association annual luncheon, said DoD must not erode the support it gives service members and families. He said DoD must find innovative ways to retain quality of life services within budget constraints.

"We are in a period in our budget where we have to set priorities," said Shalikashvili. "We have to protect what we have. I don't think the families out there or the soldiers out there would understand if we started sliding backwards."

The chairman said DoD must know where those budget resources will provide the greatest benefit. "We have to be very careful and very honest with each other," said Shalikashvili. "Otherwise, you will not be able to prioritize the few dollars we will have left for quality of life to apply against those new projects we need."

Service members can help find answers by looking for better ways to work and train

The association earlier honored Defense Secretary William Perry for outstanding support to military families. Shalikashvili cited Perry's recent $2.7 billion quality of life initiative. The six-year program pulls funds from DoD's modernization account and places them into family housing and quality of life programs.

"It would be wonderful if we could repeat what Secretary Perry did when he moved those $2.7 billion into quality of life programs," the general said. "But you know that is not possible. There are challenges we need to come to grip with together, and we need to find the answers in the smartest way that we can."

Shalikashvili said today's young service members can help find those answers by looking for better ways to work and train. The chairman doesn't want service members continuing a unit's established ways. "I want them, from the very first day they arrive, to question what is being done (at their units) and why," he said.

He urged service members to do this in a constructive way, adding it needs to be done to improve training, work areas and community support facilities. "If we don't, then Secretary Perry will be hard-pressed in the years to come to do what he did — to move money to what is clearly his priority, which are our extraordinary people. We simply can't afford to be doing the things the same way we used to."

Since the end of Desert Storm in 1991, DoD has cut thousands of military positions and closed hundreds of military installations. Shalikashvili said 80 percent of the drawdown is now complete, with the remaining cuts slated between now and 1997. He said the key to handling this force reduction is to keep in mind it's a matter of people, not numbers.

"We owe the same sort of concern, the same sort of helping hand to the very last one in this drawdown as we provided the first one," he said. "We owe this help to them and to the last person we relocated either into civilian life or to some other military post."

How To Recycle

Post housing residents may place recyclable materials in brown plastic bins for weekly curbside pickup.

Here is a list of the items that can and cannot be placed in the bin for recycling.

• Glass: Only the following can be recycled: soft drink, beer, juice, ketchup, wine, liquor and food containers. All caps and lids are to be removed and containers are to be rinsed out. Special care should be taken to avoid breaking glass when placing it in the recycling bin. Glass will be separated by color at the curb for processing at the Materials Recovery facility.

• Cans: Only aluminum and steel cans are accepted at this time. Cans must be rinsed out. Labels may remain on the cans.

• Plastic: All plastic materials containing the Recycling Triangle (Three Chasing Arrows) may be recycled. This includes soft drink bottles and milk jugs. Caps must be removed and may be placed in the recycling bin. All containers must be rinsed out.

• Paper: All paper products except used personal type materials may be recycled. These items should be placed in brown paper bags or bundled together and tied then placed beside the recycling bin.

NOTE: incidents whereby used personal items are placed for recycling is cause for rejection.

• Cardboard: Pick-up of cardboard from moving will be coordinated directly with the Materials Recovery Facility, at 544-6142. Ask for the manager or leave a message containing your address, housing area, name and phone number.

• Inert Waste: Tree limbs, grass clippings and leaves will be picked up on Mondays only. Clippings and leaves should be placed in a garbage can and tied or in a trash can with a lid.

Trash and recycle pickup schedule

Household trash and recycling will be collected once a week on the same day. If there is recyclable material mixed in with the trash can it will not be picked up until the following week, or until recyclables are separated.

Army Career and Alumni Program

Here are some of the most frequently asked questions about the Army Career and Alumni Program. The answers to these questions reflect the most current policies and positions.

For additional information or clarification about ACAP, call 545-4892 or 545-4913 or stop by Building 2617.

What is ACAP?

The Army Career and Alumni Program is designed to provide services and counseling to assure soldiers, Department of Army civilians and family members quality transition from military life to civilian life.

Why does the Army and the nation need ACAP?

ACAP provides transition service to departing personnel. It creates a recruiting multiplier. It establishes strong partnerships with the private sector.

ACAP allows career soldiers to concentrate on the Army mission because they know that when they need services, they will be available.

It reduces unemployment and other associated costs.

What benefits do members of the Army family, employers, and the nation at large derive from ACAP?

In addition to those above, the Army family leaves better prepared to make the transition into the civilian sector; employers receive a better trained and motivated employee with skills and abilities not generally available in the civilian sector; the nation receives individuals who will serve as role models and who are willing and able to contribute to the community at large.

If ACAP did not exist, what could fill the void?

There are many private sector companies who can supply these services, but they'll cost the individual between $1,000 and $10,000.

There are also many government agencies that supply some of the services (such as Army Community Services and the Department of Labor). ACAP ensures that these services are coordinated and directed towards those who need them.

There seems to be a large number of government agencies performing the same mission. What makes ACAP unique?

ACAP is designed specifically for members of the Department of Army; it's easily accessible; and it's an integral part of the Army's personnel system. These allow ACAP to give individualized and complete service to its clients.

The downsizing is projected to end in fiscal 1995. What are the plans for ACAP after it completes that mission?

ACAP is an enduring program; it has an important mission that will survive after the downsizing is completed. It adds an important dimension to an individual's productivity life cycle — to the Army, future employers and the nation.

What services are provided?

Every individual who visits ACAP first receives a needs assessment and an individual transition plan. Based on this appraisal, clients are then sent to the appropriate service providers who will assist them in their transition.

If they need job assistance, they will be sent to the Job Assistance Center where they will receive job search workshops and seminars, individual assistance and counseling, assistance with writing resumes and cover letters, and access to various job data base — including the Army Employer and Alumni Network.

Are there any plans to add, subtract or modify those services?

Yes. ACAP is continually evolving. We will alter our services as the needs of our clients change.

How much do those services cost the American taxpayer?

The fiscal 1992 budget for ACAP was $34.5 million, which comes out to about $243 a client.

Why should they be willing to pay that bill?

An individual who is prepared for the job search will more quickly find employment and will reduce the social welfare and unemployment rolls.

The smooth transition back into the civilian workplace will allow former military members to continue to contribute to the nation's economy as a whole and help make it more competitive in the global marketplace.

How much would those services cost individuals if they didn't use ACAP?

Such services can cost between $1,000 and $10,000. In fact, many outplacement services charge individuals about 15 percent of their annual salary in fees.

How is it different from the Defense Outplacement Referral System and the Transition Bulletin Board?

The Army Employer and Alumni Network lists employers that have expressed an interest in hiring Army alumni (listed by job type and location); the Defense Outplacement Referral System allows individuals to place a mini-resume on an employer-accessible network; and the Transition Bulletin Board provides actual job announcements and employment information from numerous government agencies and private sector employers.

Both DORS and TBB are Department of Defense automated referral programs and are available at all ACAP offices and selected ACS centers.

How many jobs have you gotten for transitioning Army personnel?

ACAP is not a placement service and does not get jobs for transitioning personnel. The Job Assistance Centers train personnel through seminars, workshops and individual counseling to confidently and competently seek and secure employment.

To whom do you provide services?

Soldiers who have had at least 180 days of continuous active service, Department of Army civilians, and family members of transitioning individuals. Individuals remain eligible for services for up to 60 days after their separation.

Federal hiring process made more direct

By Evelyn D. Harris
American Forces Information Service

One action eliminates registers, and the other eliminates reliance on a written test as a single examining methods and provides agencies with more examining options based on specific needs

The federal government lifted two barriers to federal entry-level hiring for professional and administrative occupations Nov. 20.

One action eliminates registers — the Office of Personnel Management's central lists used to refer job candidates to agencies needing to fill entry-level jobs. The other eliminates reliance on a written test as a single examining method and provides agencies with more examining options based on their specific needs.

The changes fulfill a recommendation of President Bill Clinton administration's National Performance Review, said OPM Director Jim King. He said he expects the changes to the Administrative Careers with America exams to result in a skilled, committed and diverse work force.

These exams replaced the old Professional and Administrative Career Examination four years ago, after court plaintiffs claimed the old test adversely affected minority hiring. The current exams cover 110 occupations, such as economist, criminal investigator and contract specialist. The exams are separated into six broad occupational groups. For example, one exam tests potential personnel, administrative and computer specialists, while another tests applicants for a wide variety of jobs in law enforcement and investigation.

Rosalie Cameron, deputy director of OPM's Office of Communications, said changes in the examination and register process address complaints by both employers and potential applicants. "For example, the test doesn't find out whether a potential Immigration and Naturalization Service agent had the ability to learn languages with ease," Cameron said. "It's important for agency officials to know such things about an applicant before they spend too much on training someone unsuited for the job."

Under the modified examination, applicants will apply for specific job openings rather than broad occupational groups. Taking a test will no longer be the compulsory first step in the examination process. Instead, applicants will complete surveys detailing their qualifications and experience and send these to OPM with a resume.

OPM will score the questionnaires to determine the most highly qualified candidates and then send hiring agencies a list of the best qualified applicants. In addition, agencies may require applicants to take a written test for specific occupations.

Agencies can still choose to use the Administrative Careers with America test or a test of their own design. Agencies also lost time and money from the registry system because they had to contact many applicants who were not interested in the positions offered, said Cameron.

"Meanwhile, potential employees who might have been interested languished on the register without knowing the jobs were available."

Job seekers can find out about available job openings by calling (912) 757-3000 or contacting their nearest OPM service center. The application questionnaires are straightforward and easy to complete, said officials. Applicants apply for specific job openings of interest to them in locations they wish to work.

Cameron said people who already have taken the test and whose names are on the central lists will receive a letter explaining they will have to apply for specific jobs in the future. She also stressed the government is hiring fewer people these days — only 21,489 employees came into the system in 1992, and fewer than those will start work in 1995.

Black History Month luncheon set Feb. 24

The Equal Opportunity Office will celebrate Black History Month with a luncheon Feb. 24 at 11:30 a.m. at the Main NCO Club.

This year's theme is "Reflections on 1895: Douglass, DuBois and Washington."

The luncheon tickets are $6 and the menu consists of fried chicken, pigs feet, jambalaya, collard greens, macaroni and cheese, candied yams, red beans, rice, cornbread, egg custard, sweet potato pie and iced tea.

Door prizes will be awarded. For ticket information, contact unit equal opportunity representatives or Sgt. 1st Class Rosalie Mascoe at 545-3198 or 545-3197.

AER to celebrate 53rd anniversary

Army Emergency Relief will celebrate 53 years of service Feb. 5, and Fort Benning's AER office will celebrate with a birthday cake Feb. 6 from 9 a.m. to noon at the Post Exchange at the Main Mall.

AER is a private nonprofit organization, incorporated in 1942 by the secretary of War and the Army chief of staff. AER's mission is to provide emergency financial assistance.

Visit the AER office in Building 2643, Soldiers' Plaza, or stop by the Post Exchange at the Main Mall Feb. 6 for a piece of birthday cake.

National Prayer Breakfast Thursday

The 1995 Fort Benning National Prayer Breakfast will be Thursday at 6:30 a.m. at the Supper Club, Fort Benning Officers' Club. Tickets are available from unit chaplains and from the USAIC Chaplain's Office, Building 75.

Because of the limited seating capacity, all tickets are on a first-come, first-served basis. The cost for the breakfast is $5.50.

Veterinary Services to host clinic Jan. 21

Veterinary Services will host a walk-in clinic Saturday from 8 a.m. to noon at the Veterinary Clinic on Main Post to enable pet owners to update vaccines and registration.

Services offered will be vaccinations for rabies, feline and canine distemper, feline infectious peritonitis, feline leukemia and kennel cough. Heartworm and leukemia testing and deworming will not be available.

Because of the large number of animals that will be waiting and the safety risk involved, parents are requested not to bring children under 12 to the clinic.

The clinic is located on Main Post in Building 265. For more information, call Sgt. Donna Wiedeburg at 545-5691.

Tax office to open

The Fort Benning Tax Office, which will be located in Building 2640 at Soldiers' Plaza, will open Jan. 31. Office hours will be 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., Monday through Friday.

Electronic tax filing will be available for most federal returns, and the office has many federal and state tax forms available.

Unit tax advisers have been appointed so soldiers with tax questions can see their unit tax advisers first.

PX gets new hours

The Post Exchange at the Main Mall has changed its operating hours. The new hours are Monday through Saturday from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. and Sunday from 10 a.m. to 7 p.m.

Controlled burning will take place next week

Controlled burning of woodland and range areas will take place through Jan. 28. If weather permits, the following compartments may be affected:

B-4, D-11, G-6, K-10, K-19, O-2, O-5, O-11, O-12, O-14, R-1, S-3, T-5, U-2, X-1 and Z-3.

People using this area for recreation must leave before 9:30 a.m. daily.

Training units using compartments next to these areas may experience drift smoke and are reminded to exercise caution while traveling in these areas because of the potential for reduced visibility.

For more information, call 544-6206.

1995 Green to Gold Scholarships here

The ROTC Green to Gold Scholarship packets for school year '95 have arrived at Columbus College. They are available for pick-up at the Columbus College office at Soldiers' Plaza, or in Room 123, Columbus College Faculty Office Building.

For more information, call 689-8668 at Soldiers' Plaza or 568-2058 at Columbus College. Interested soldiers should call to verify their eligibility for school year 1995 before picking up one.

For more information, call D.A. Wilson at 545-6559 or 545-3881.

Clothing sale set

The Installation Supply and Services Division will conduct a Code B Sale on the first Friday of every month from 7 a.m. to 2 p.m. in Building 224. The next sale is Feb. 3. Sales are limited to active duty only.

For more information, call 545-1972 or 545-7442.

Post, undergraduate programs offered

Personnel Command is recruiting promotable sergeants through nonpromotable master sergeants with a primary military occupational specialty of 96 or 98, a general technical score of 110 or higher and 15 semester hours or 25 quarter hours or more to participate in a program for advanced study in national intelligence organizations, collection management, production, collection and dissemination of national intelligence, intelligence analysis, indication and warning operations, and regional area studies.

For more information, call 545-1917 or 545-4702.

Instructors needed

The Henry Caro NCO Academy needs staff sergeants who maintain the high standards of the NCO corps as instructors for the primary leadership development course.

Applicants must:

- Want a challenging and demanding job
- Be physically fit
- Have military bearing and conduct, overall appearance above reproach
- Want to share knowledge and experience
- Develop junior leaders (lead by example)
- Work with other NCOs to build a cohesive team
- Have no profiles.

Only NCOs who are serious about working hard and giving 100 percent should inquire. Those interested can call Sgt. 1st Class Catherine P. Thomas at 545-3669 or 545-7381.

Command, general staff course available

The 3294th U.S. Army Reserve School on Macon Road in Columbus is offering the nonresident phase of the new four-phase Command and General Staff Office Course for the Reserve Component.

All active and Reserve majors and lieutenant colonels are eligible and all Reserve Component promotable captains are also eligible if they are Combined Arms and Services Staff School graduates.

Phase I, III and V (from the old course) will be offered if enrollment minimums are met. Classes are scheduled to meet for two hours on Monday nights at the 3294th.

All holidays are observed and a liberal make-up policy is recognized because of authorized absences (temporary duty, deployments, etc.)

For more information, call Maj. Herb Flora at 545-6469 or Lt. Col. Mike Smajd at 291-4538.

ID section implements two new programs

The Main Post Identification Card Section, Building 2638, has extended its hours. The section is open from 7:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. on Monday, Tuesday, Thursday and Friday. On Wednesdays the section will be open from 7:30 a.m. to 6 p.m.

Appointments can be scheduled from 7:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. daily by calling 545-4068.

Walk-in customers will continue to be served as usual; however, to avoid long waits, walk-in customers are encouraged to avoid the hours of 11:30 a.m. to 1 p.m.

For more information call Sgt. 1st Class Roger Woolfork at 545-1411 or Capt. Steven Fischer at 545-4225 or 545-4227.

VA reports improvements in processing benefits claims

Department of Veterans Affairs

The Department of Veterans Affairs is reporting large reductions in the average time it takes to process a veteran's benefits claim.

"We have laid the foundation to build a modern environment that will better serve America's veterans and their families," said VA Secretary Jesse Brown. "VA is near meeting or exceeding the performance standards we established when we set out to improve the timeliness of processing veterans' claims."

In late 1993, Brown approved the recommendations of a blue ribbon panel to resolve claims processing problems in VA regional offices.

The Veterans Benefits Administration is currently implementing those recommendations, which include the deployment of personal computers, local area computer networks, computer applications to support claims processing in VA's 58 regional offices, and the development of new business practices in the regional offices.

Brown said the improved processing times have enabled VA to lower its overall backlog of claims from 575,000 claims at the end of December 1993 to 470,000 at the end of September 1994.

At the end of November, the average time for VA regional office staff to process an original disability compensation claim was 173 days, down from a 212 day average at the end of May.

The time to process an original claim for disability pension was 104 days on Nov. 30, down from 124 at the end of May.

The average time it took to process a claim by the survivor of a veteran for dependency and indemnity compensation benefits was 109 days on Nov. 30 and 110 days at the end of May. VA was taking 55 days to process an original death pension claim on Nov. 30, as opposed to 66 days at the end of May.

Interim goals established by VA earlier this year were to process original disability compensation claims in 174 days by April 1995, original disability pension claims in 109 days by February 1995, original DIC claims in 94 days by February 1995 and original death pension claims in 64 days by October 1994.

VA has established final performance goals to be met by the end of fiscal year 1998. They call for a national average of 106 days to process an original disability compensation claim, 77 days for an original disability pension, 68 days for original DIC claims and 44 days for original death pension claims.

Wrestlers work to 'pin down' slots for trial camp, All-Army team

More than 100 wrestlers participated in the 1995 All-Army Wrestle Off at Santiago Fitness Center Jan. 9 through 14, but only a handful were selected to attend the All Army Trial Camp which is set to begin on post this week and run through March.

All-Army wrestling coach Sgt. 1st Class Tony Thomas spent Saturday evening selecting who would stay and who would go home.

"There was a lot of competition and that in itself helped to make the selections," Thomas said. "One of the main points I used to help make a selection was a competitor's work ethic and the determination not to quit in a match even if they were behind. I also tried to bring the guys who placed highest in both styles."

The styles Thomas referred to were Greco-Roman and freestyle. In Greco-Roman, the wrestlers are allowed to use only the upper portion of their bodies to gain an advantage on their opponent from the standing position. In freestyle, any part of of a competitors body can be used to earn points or a pin.

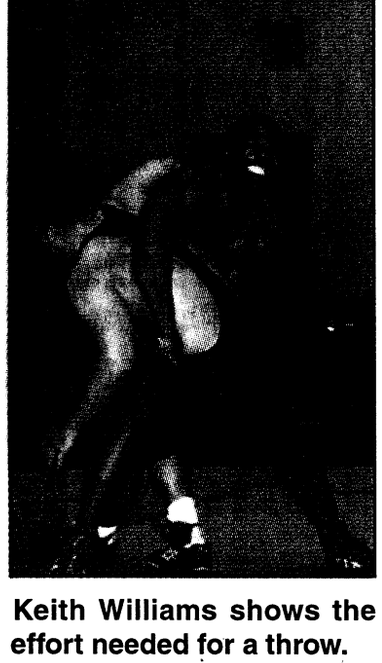
"This was a great tournament," said U.S. Army Europe wrestler Lon Passoff. "By bringing in everyone from around the world, you get a chance to see and wrestle against the best the Army has to offer. The hard part is the waiting."

For Passoff and many others, the wait ended at a banquet Saturday evening at the Main Post NCO Club — his name was not among those chosen.

The wrestlers who were chosen will now move on to the All-Army Trial Camp with hopes of making the cut at the wrestle off scheduled for March 2 through 4. That will determine who makes the All-Army team and wrestles in the Armed Forces championships at Colorado Springs, Colo., in April.

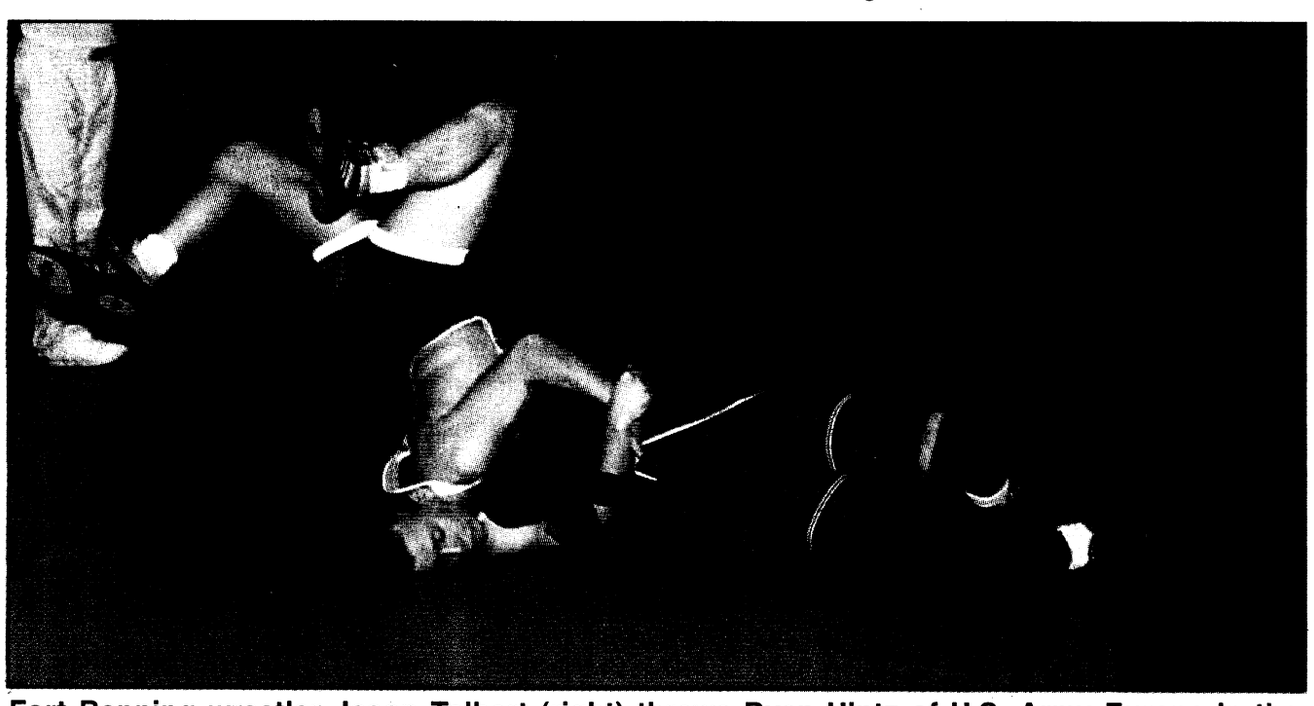
The wrestle off is a new concept started by the Department of the Army Sports Office, which eliminates the old version of selection by identifying soldiers from around the world and sending them directly to the Trial Camp.

According to Tom Hlavacek, a sports specialist with the World Class Athlete Program in Alexandria, Va., (20 Fort Benning wrestlers are now in this program) Forces Command could not put on a wrestling championship as it had done in the past because of the lack of funds, so the Department of the Army looked for another avenue to identify soldier/athletes for participation.



"I think it's been a meaningful competition. I think All-Army wrestling coach Tony Thomas has picked up some fine talent, especially in the lighter weight classes," Hlavacek said.

"Hopefully we will be seeing some of these athletes progressing into the World Class Athlete Program and moving on to the Olympic team for the 1996 Olympics in Atlanta. "



The wrestlers selected will be joining the rest of the All-Army wrestling team, which is made up of Jeffrey Green, Alexander Porcelli, Jerry Jackson, Edward Mitchell, Derrick Waldroup, Robert Allen, Shon Lewis, Anthony Amado, Brandon Dennington, Kenneth Owens, Keith Sieracki and Rodney Smith.

Muddy water offers fishing options

By Earl Bentz and Steve Price
Outboard Marine Corporation

commentary

This time of year, muddy water can be nearly as common as weekend cold fronts. Water the color of creamed coffee, however, does not mean it's time to postpone a fishing trip.

"When the water is muddy, it usually means it's rising, too, because of rain," said Texas guide Randy Dearman of the Johnson Outboards Pro Staff. "When this happens, the bass move shallow into the 'new' vegetation along the shoreline.

"I believe heavy mud and silt make breathing difficult for bass, and the vegetation helps filter the water. The shallows are also a good place for bass to find food."

Dearman said that in some lakes that stay dingy or muddy all year, the bass also stay shallow all year.

"When you have to fish this type of water, where you lose sight of your lure several inches below the surface, the most effective lures are often larger spinnerbaits, crankbaits, and jigs," Dearman said.

"You need a lure that moves a lot of water or creates a strong vibration so the bass can locate it. I like chartreuse as a color, and I also add rattles. All will help a bass find your lure under these conditions.

"You need to fish slowly and probably make repeated casts to the same target, but sooner or later the fish will hit."

The Johnson pro also suggests anglers faced with muddy water conditions move to the very backs of creeks because water there will clear the quickest. Not all creeks will be clear, but some usually will be.

"Many tributary creeks have some natural current that helps pull the muddy water out," he said, "and some will clear faster than others. Creeks with rocky or hard sand bottoms, for instance, will clear much faster than those with mud bottoms."

In a bass tournament on Lake of the Ozarks in Missouri, Dearman once motored more than 75 miles up the Osage River looking for a clear water tributary.

"Normally, you don't have to go that far," he said, "but those were unusual circumstances. Lake of the Ozarks rose more than four feet in just a few hours because of the heavy rain."

In clear creeks, Dearman's favorite lure choices are spinnerbaits, buzz baits, and plastic worms. He prefers to use smaller lures and fish them faster.

"I don't think bass actually leave creeks during high, muddy water," he said. "I do believe they become less active and they may remain that way for one or two days until conditions improve.

"As soon as conditions settle, and the creeks begin clearing, the bass start biting."

Military Police Activity

TAKE A BITE OUT OF CRIME®

The following entries are from the Fort Benning Military Police blotters from Jan. 4 to 10. Such entries may be incomplete and are not a judgement of the guilt or innocence of any person.

• This week's hot topic: Loyd Elementary School has moved to Kinsman Barracks, located in Sand Hill. Motorist are reminded that while traveling on 41st Infantry Regiment Road between 7:45 and 9 a.m. and again at 1 to 3:45 p.m., the speed limit is 15 mph. Personnel on Main Post conducting physical training between the hours of 6 and 7:30 a.m. have the right of way. Safety is everyone's concern, so let's give our runners a break.

• A specialist was charged with larceny of government property and forgery. The specialist entered an unsecured barracks room and removed various items of TA-50 along with two blank checks from another soldier. The government equipment was pawned and the checks were cashed to purchase pizza. The specialist was later apprehended and transported to the station, where he was processed and released to his unit. All government property was recovered.

• A specialist was charged by the Columbus Police Department for driving under the influence of alcohol and following too closely. He was following too closely and struck the rear of another vehicle. His speech was slurred and he smelled of alcohol. He was administered a field sobriety test, which he failed. The officer transported the specialist to the Muscogee County jail where he was given a breathalyzer test with a result of .18. This soldier also had several outstanding warrants for bad checks and was being held pending recorders court.

• A sergeant was charged with larceny of government property (funds). An anonymous tip was given in regards to a soldier receiving her basic allowance for quarters while continuing to live in government quarters for the past 13 months. This soldier was overpaid approximately $3,608.65 in funds. Investigation continues in this case.

• A specialist was charged by the Columbus Police Department for possession of a controlled substance (marijuana) and carrying a concealed weapon. The officer discovered approximately 1.5 grams of marijuana on the soldier. He was also in possession of a loaded .38-caliber pistol under the seat of his vehicle. This individual was arrested and transported to the Muscogee County jail pending recorders court.

• A former specialist was charged with larceny of government property, false official statement and fraud. While on active duty this soldier submitted a claim for a do-it-yourself move claiming that he moved 3,000 pounds of personal property from Fort Benning to Los Angeles, Calif. This soldier received $1,206.90 in funds. The following month he submitted another claim for 200 pounds of property. It was shown that this soldier lived in the barracks and never had that amount of property. Since he is no longer in the service the investigation has been handed over to the FBI.

• Other activities include two cases of driving under the influence of alcohol, 15 traffic accidents, 15 cases of larcenies, and one case of shoplifting reported at the main exchange facilities.

• Remember to help "Make Our Post The Best — Give Crime Arrest." Report any activity that seems wrong or out of place to the Military Police at 545-5223 or 545-5224 or the "Crime In Progress" line at 545-5222.

ask the judge

Staff Judge Advocate's Office

Q: If I have a complaint about the way I am being treated by a business in town, what course of action should I take? Should I seek an attorney's advice, should I contact the Better Business Bureau, or what?

A: The correct course of action will depend on the facts of the case. However, the most logical first step is to talk to the owner or manager of the business to see if the problem can be worked out.

A business can rise or fall on customer satisfaction; and, as a result, the people in charge of the business are many times going to go out of their way to resolve these disputes. You should enter into such discussions with an open mind and without being confrontational.

If direct contact with the business does not work, you may want to consider seeking help from outside agencies. Certainly, advice from an attorney may be appropriate to see if there are any legal avenues available to address the problem. Also, an attorney may be able to approach the business on your behalf, as your agent, to try to resolve the problem.

The Better Business Bureau is an agency that is designed to receive consumer complaints about businesses and act as an intermediary between the consumer and the business. After being notified in writing of a complaint by a consumer, the BBB will forward notice of the complaint to the business involved and request that the business respond with its side of the story.

While the BBB cannot force a business to resolve a complaint, many times the mere fact that the BBB is involved will induce the business to deal with the complaint in a more reasonable manner.

With respect to the military, you might also want to consider bringing your complaint to the attention of the installation Armed Forces Disciplinary Control Board.

The board has the authority, in appropriate cases, to declare a business that engages in business practices adverse to military personnel and their dependents off-limits to active duty personnel.

As with the BBB, the Armed Forces Disciplinary Control Board cannot force the business to address the particular complaint, but can pressure the business to adopt fair practices by proposing to impose the off-limits sanction.

You should note that the board is not a court of law and will only impose the off-limits sanction in clear cases of unfair practices.

As a rule, this normally means that the particular business has been the subject of repeated complaints which are well-founded.

If you have a complaint about business and question whether or not legal issues may be involved, you should seek an appointment with the Legal Assistance Division at 545-3281.

aer q&a

Army Emergency Relief

Q. What is Army Emergency Relief ?

A. AER is a private, nonprofit organization, incorporated in 1942 by the secretary of War and the Army chief of staff. AER's mission is to provide emergency financial assistance.

Q. Whom does AER help?

A. AER helps active duty soldiers, retirees and their family members, Army National Guard and Reserve soldiers on active duty for more than 30 days and their family members, and surviving spouses and orphans of soldiers who died on active duty or after they retired.

Q. What can AER do?

A. AER can help with emergency financial needs for food, emergency transportation (due to emergency leave), vehicle repair, funeral expenses, medical and dental expenses, certain expenses when pay has been lost or stolen and undergraduate level education scholarships based on financial need to children of active and retired soldiers.

Q. What can't AER do?

A. AER cannot help pay for nonessentials such as financing ordinary leave or vacation, paying fines or legal expenses, helping liquidate or consolidate debts, assisting with house purchase or home improvements, helping purchase, rent or lease a vehicle, covering bad checks or paying credit card bills.

Q. How do I find AER when I, or my family members, need help?

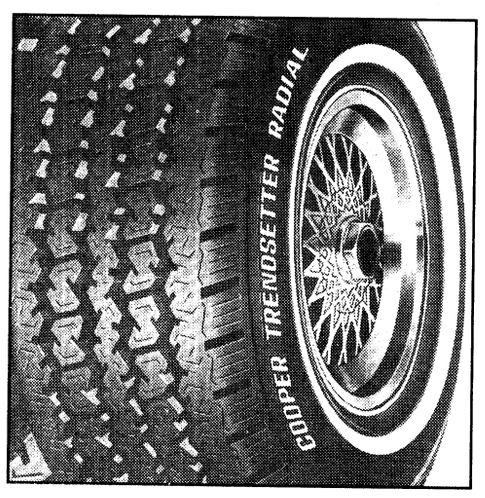
A. At Fort Benning, visit AER at Building 2643, Soldiers' Plaza, from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday. During nonduty hours (for emergency leave only), contact the U.S. Army Infantry Center staff duty officer at 545-2218. Away from Fort Benning, contact any AER section, American Red Cross, Air Force Aid Society, Navy-Marine Corps Relief Society or Coast Guard Mutual Assistance Office.

Q. When I visit AER for assistance, what documents should I bring with me?

A. Soldiers should bring their military identification card, most recent leave and earning statement, leave or permanent change of station orders, trustee letter for Chapter 13 if applicable and substantiating documentation such as car repair estimate, apartment or house rental agreement or utility bills.

Q. What type of assistance does AER offer?

A. AER offers free loans and grants, or part loan and part grant, if repayment of loan will cause undue hardship.



Q. Is there a dollar limit on AER help:

A. There is no limit on AER help. AER will help anyone who is eligible for AER assistance and has a valid emergency need.

FORT BENNING HISTORY BOOK

published to commemorate

FORT BENNING'S 75th ANNIVERSARY

Fort Benning recently celebrated its 75th Anniversary, and The Bayonet published a special edition to coincide with the celebration. Soon after the special edition of the paper was published, we began looking at the information about Fort Benning that we had collected and decided that it was simply too good to leave it just in newspaper form.

We knew the book would be interesting and informative. The next step was to make it as attractive as possible. An experienced layout and design firm was hired, and they have done an absolutely superb job. You will enjoy thumbing through its pages for years to come. You will also be proud to put in a prominent place at home for friends to enjoy, or at work for your customers to see. And, if you're looking for gift for a retiree, or a friend who may have served at Fort Benning and is no longer here, there's no better way to remind them of your lasting friendship.

Published by the contract printer of Fort Benning's authorized newspaper, The Bayonet, the hardcover book, protected by a beautiful full-color dust cover, has 168-pages and is filled with more than 200 photos. The book includes detailed timelines of significant events that have shaped Fort Benning, an overview of the post's involvement in World War II, Korea, Viet Nam, and Desert Shield/Storm, detailed information on the current major units, and a variety of stories that round out the post's interesting history.

It is the perfect "coffee table book" and is a 'must have' for anyone who has been stationed at Fort Benning. It's a book that will be a lasting memento of the winner of the 1994 Commander In Chief's Award signifying it as. . .

"The Best Army Installation in the World!"

Enlisted drawdown expands, VSI program deadline extended

TRADOC News Service

FORT MONROE, Va. — The number of participants for the enlisted early retirement and early release program has not met the fiscal year '95 goals necessary to avoid a reduction in forces.

In order to reach soldiers who may be interested in the programs, the application deadline has been extended to Jan. 31, with military occupational specialties OOR, 12B, 67T, 91C, 91K, 95B and 95C added to the list of applicable MOSs.

According to senior Training and Doctrine Command officials, this may well be the last year for monetary incentives

According to senior Training and Doctrine Command officials, this may well be the last year for monetary incentives. They are encouraging sergeants first class and staff sergeants in a nonpromotable status to apply if by June 30, they have more than 15 and 13 years of service, respectively.

In the early retirement program, a sergeant first class with 15 years would receive $716 a month, up to $999 a month with 19 years of service. A staff sergeant with 15 years could expect $640 a month, up to $886 a month with 19 years of service.

The lump-sum payment under the special separation benefit program for a sergeant first class with 15 years is approximately $54,000, up to $68,800 for 18 years. A staff sergeant with 13 years would receive $40,800, and up to $61,000 for 18 years.

The voluntary separation incentive allows for annual payments over a specific time period tied to years of service. For a sergeant first class with 15 years of service, the buy-out is roughly $9,000 for 30 years and can go as high as $11,400 for 36 years if the service member has 18 years of active service credit.

For a staff sergeant, the VSI for 13 years is $6,800 for 26 years and for the service member with 18 years the option is $10,100 for 36 years.

Soldiers interested in applying for any of the programs or finding out more information should contact their local personnel services center.

SCHOOL OF THE AMERICAS

Commandant ends 25-year career

By Judith Ginder
School of the Americas

Transitions are funny things. On one hand, it is always exciting to be moving into the future. On the other, there is a feeling of uncertainty.

Approximately 200 people were present Jan. 13 when the School of the Americas made the transition to a new leader. The school said farewell to Col. Jose M. Alvarez and welcomed Col. Roy R. Trumble in a change of command ceremony at Ridgway Hall.

After a brief statement about the School of the Americas by Maj. Gordon Martel, public affairs officer, Command Sgt. Maj. Vincent C. Sampson presented the unit's colors to Commanding General Maj. Gen. John W. Hendrix, Alvarez and Trumble in a symbolic transfer of authority.

Hendrix then presented Alvarez with the Legion of Merit award.

"There is a touch of sadness and a lot of pride in this room today," Hendrix said at the ceremony. He spoke about the United States' need to forge strong ties to all of the nations in the Americas in order to maintain Hemispheric security.

In addition, Hendrix said he felt that the School of the Americas has the most influential training in the Western Hemisphere.

During the two-year period Alvarez served as commandant of the School of the Americas, the school encountered a barrage of protests about the training that the Latin American soldiers received there.

Danielle Holliday

Col. Jose M. Alvarez (left), outgoing commandant of the School of the Americas, leads Commanding General Maj. Gen. John W. Hendrix and incoming commandant Col. Roy R. Trumble to the change of command ceremony.

"Alvarez's diplomatic skills were very evident during that period. He concentrated on the task at hand," Hendrix said.

"If I had but two words to associate with Col. Alvarez it would be 'mission accomplished,' " he said.

"The School of the Americas will never receive the credit that it deserves for the training that we do here everyday," said Alvarez. That however, said Alvarez, is something that we must continue to strive for.

"Today I am confident that I am turning the best unit over to Col. Trumble," Alvarez said.

"We must remember that we are not only a part of Fort Benning, but also a part of the city of Columbus and the United States," said Alvarez.

Alvarez began his career as an infantry officer in 1970 as a second lieutenant at Fort Benning. He said he felt that is was both appropriate and symbolic to end his 25-year Army career here.

Trumble said that as one of Alvarez's peers, he has always respected Alvarez and the work he has done.

He also said what a proud and happy day it was for him and his family.

As the Army band concluded the ceremony with "The Army Song," another transition had been completed, taking the School of the Americas into the future, without, of course, forgetting about the past.

VSI/SSB recipients restricted on DoD rehiring as civilians

By Stephen Barren
American Forces Information Service

Service members who receive Voluntary Separation Incentive and Special Separation Benefit payments now face losing them if hired by the Department of Defense after Oct. 1.

As part of the fiscal 1995 Defense Appropriations Act, members who separate with VSI or SSB forfeit those benefits if hired to DoD civilian positions within 180 days of separation. President Bill Clinton signed the act in September. The sanction applies to active duty members and full-time National Guardsmen.

Defense officials said Congress became concerned about possible unfairness. Some former service members took the special payments, separated and then returned as DoD civilians — to do the same jobs they had just left.

The law affects only those who separate and are hired after Sept. 30. Service members released from duty before Oct. 1 retain their VSI/SSB payments regardless when hired. All VSI/SSB recipients appointed to DoD civilian positions after the 180-day period passes also retain their separation bonuses.

Service members separating under VSI receive annual payments based on rank and time served. Those leaving under SSB receive a lump-sum payment, also based on rank and longevity. Under the provision, officials said, DoD will use "established debt collection procedures" to recover VSI/SSB payments from affected new hires.

DoD officials are currently developing guidance with the services. They are asking each service to add this policy to the written agreements service members sign before separation. This is to ensure service members know about the law before accepting VSI/SSB.

In addition, DoD is asking all civilian personnel offices to verify whether potential new hires are within the 180-day window. Local personnel offices will report affected applicants to their servicing finance offices.

The Defense Accounting and Finance Service will advise these new employees of the recoupment actions.

The services are developing procedures for handling problems. In the interim, service members studying VSI/SSB options and DoD civilian employment should check with both local transition assistance and civilian personnel offices for updates.

Captains' RIF slated for Feb 7 to 24

Army News Service

WASHINGTON — The Army will conduct a reduction-in-force board Feb. 7 to 24 to consider basic-branch captains for involuntary separation from service, according to personnel officials.

The RIF could affect as many as 583 officers, depending on the number of Voluntary Separation Incentive and Special Separation Benefit applications received by officer personnel managers.

The RIF could affect as many as 583 officers, depending on the number of Voluntary Separation Incentive and Special Separation Benefit applications received by officer personnel managers

Captains to be considered for RIF are those who:

- Have a date of rank between March 2, 1990, and March 1, 1991 (predominantly year group 1986)
- Have less that 14 years' active federal service as of Sept. 30, 1995
- Are not on a promotion list to the rank of major.

Exempt from RIF consideration and VSI/SSB eligibility are officers in the following understrength branches and functional areas: automation and acquisition (FA 53); aviation (BR 15); engineer (BR 21); military intelligence (BR 35); and officers who have completed training in operations research/systems analysis (FA 49) and research, development and acquisition (FA 51).

About 2,700 captains are subject to the RIF. Officials said these officers are encouraged to talk to their chain of command, mentors and career manager at U.S. Total Army Personnel Command for a file assessment before making a decision between selecting a voluntary incentive or remaining in the RIF population.

Officers selected by the RIF board must separate from service by Sept. 29. Those who choose a voluntary transition program may separate no later than Aug. 1 and no earlier than 90 days from the requested date of separation. The deadline for VSI/SSB applications is Jan. 27.

Captains who apply and are approved for voluntary separation prior the RIF board convene date will not be allowed to withdraw their request at a later date. Those who do not request voluntary separation and who are selected and approved for RIF may not subsequently request VSI or SSB.

The RIF board will review the official military personnel file of each eligible officer, the restricted portion of the personnel microfiche, the officer record brief, the official photograph and memoranda from eligible officers addressed to the president of the board. Officers can request a copy of their OMPF and ORB by writing to:

U.S. Total Army Personnel Command, Attn: TAPC-MSR-S (Selection Board Processing Unit), 200 Stovall St., Alexandria, Va. 22332-0444.

Officers approved by the secretary of the Army for involuntary separation will be formally notified by the first colonel-level commander in their chain of command and by personal memorandum from the adjutant general.

Officers who are involuntarily separated from active duty by RIF are entitled to involuntary separation pay provided they have completed at least six years of continuous active duty immediately prior to their separation.

Regular Army officers must request an appointment as a U.S. Army Reserve officer and agree to serve three years in the Ready Reserve, in addition to existing service obligations. Reserve officers must agree to retain their USAR appointments and serve an additional three years in the Ready Reserve.

For more information on the 1995 RIF and applying for VSI/SSB, officers should contact their local personnel service center.

world war II

50 years ago this week ...

- Soviet troops opened a winter offensive in south-central Poland and captured Warsaw more than five years after the Germans marched into the city. The Lublin Poles, a Polish unit fighting with the Red Army, helped to liberate the totally devastated city.
- The Germans were in full retreat from the Ardennes as the U.S. VII and XVIII Corps launched new attacks along the northern flank of the bulge in the Allied lines. Forces of the U.S. Third Army and British XXX Corps pushed from the south and linked up with First Army units in Houffalize, further reducing the German salient.
- At Fort Benning the 25-year veteran billiard champion Erwin Rudolph gave a demonstration at Service Club No.1. Rudolph exhibited the kind of billiards playing that won him the world pocket billiard title on five different occasions.

Staff College extends deadline

Army News Service

WASHINGTON — The application deadline for Army Management Staff College class 95-2 has been extended to Jan. 31, according to AMSC officials.

The course, held at Fort Belvoir, Va., runs from May 9 to Aug. 11.

Also for this class, the staff college is accepting civilians in grade General Schedule 11 with high potential for greater responsibility and leadership.

Normally, Army civilians must hold grades GS-13 or 14, be high-potential GS-12s, or be grade GS-15 with an exception to policy to attend.

The program is one of three 14-week courses AMSC holds for its resident program that graduates 600 students annually.

For more information on application procedures, contact your local civilian personnel office and the AMSC registrar's office at (703) 805-4756, 805-4757 or DSN 655-4756 or 655-4757.

CG honors individuals at ceremony

By Marc G. Turchin
Bayonet staff writer

Soldiers and civilians were honored for outstanding work at the commanding general's retreat ceremony January 11 on York Field.

Maj. Gen. John W. Hendrix, post commanding general, gave awards and certificates to 14 people who work on or off post.

Those people were:

• Chief Warrant Officer 3 Ronald E. Bucher — Department of the Army Certificate of Excellence on behalf of the Infantry Band for having performed more than 700 commitments during 1994, entertaining nearly 250,000 people.

• Jackie Kirkpatrick — Department of Army Certificate for being November's employee of the month

• Master Sgt. Thomas Lytle — Fort Benning Certificate of Appreciation for his support of the post and South Georgia Boy Scouts

• Staff Sgt. Daniel Patterson, Fire Capt. Sidney Martin, Fire Capt. John Smith and Nathan Bader — Fort Benning Certificate of Appreciation for their help in the search for a lost ranger during a recent airborne training operation recently

• Spc. Rebecca Rector — Fort Benning Certificate of Appreciation for being Medical and Dental Department Activities soldier of the year

• John Baggett — Fort Benning Certificate of Appreciation for his selection as recipient of the 1994 Department of the Army Director of Public Works Executive of the Year Award

• Alice Skinner and Judith Gilliam — Fort Benning Certificate of Appreciation for their efforts in temporarily relocating Loyd School while the school's roof undergoes repairs

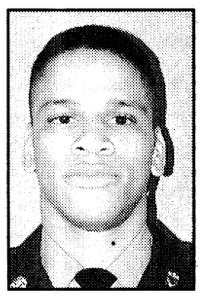
• Phenix City Mayor Sonny Coulter and Columbus Chamber of Commerce President Mike Gaymon — Special mementos of appreciation for their long-time contributions to the Fort Benning community.

Hendrix spoke to the crowd, which included the Army Communities of Excellence team, after presenting the awards.

He referred to Lt. Col. Bob Lacey, ACOE team chief, as a "man on the horns of a dilemma."

"Bob, how are you going to tell them? How are you going to tell all those other places that you go that there is no use competing because the competition is over?" Hendrix asked, as a round of applause echoed through the crowd.

Hendrix later explained why he hosts the retreat ceremonies.



"Our monthly retreat ceremonies (are) about sustaining excellence," Hendrix said. "(They) are to publicly recognize excellence, service, teamwork and to thank those members of the tri-community who support Fort Benning."

MARTIN LUTHER KING CELEBRATION

Strong EO programs essential, speaker says

Events honor MLK day

By Jan Wesner Childs
Special to The Bayonet©

A well-run equal opportunity program is essential to smooth race relations in any Army unit, according to a top military equal opportunity administrator.

James Love, deputy director of military equal opportunity for the Department of Defense, says a recent Congressional report showed that soldiers in units with strong equal opportunity programs are more satisfied with race relations and report fewer incidents of discrimination.

Love made the comments during a Jan. 13 ceremony in Marshall Auditorium marking Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.'s birthday.

"The most significant finding is that a commitment of leadership to equal opportunity is the primary determinant of the racial climate at any installation," Love told the crowd gathered for the event in Marshall Auditorium.

"What we're talking about quite honestly is an issue of leadership."

He said the study showed that most reports of racism in the military are subtle acts of discrimination that involve disciplinary procedures or career advancement. Also, senior military members reported more faith in the equal opportunity system.

Love was the keynote speaker at the annual King celebration, sponsored by the Fort Benning Equal Opportunity office. Highlights of the ceremony included performances by the Singing Firemen and Company and the Finance Choir, and a rendition of King's famous "I Have A Dream" speech by retired Sgt. Maj. Verray Caldwell.

Love praised King and noted the slain civil rights leader's accomplishments, including being the youngest person ever to win the Nobel Peace Prize.

"Although Dr. King is not with us physically, his spirit lives on," he said.

People need to remember King's example and look to their own backgrounds for inspiration, he said.

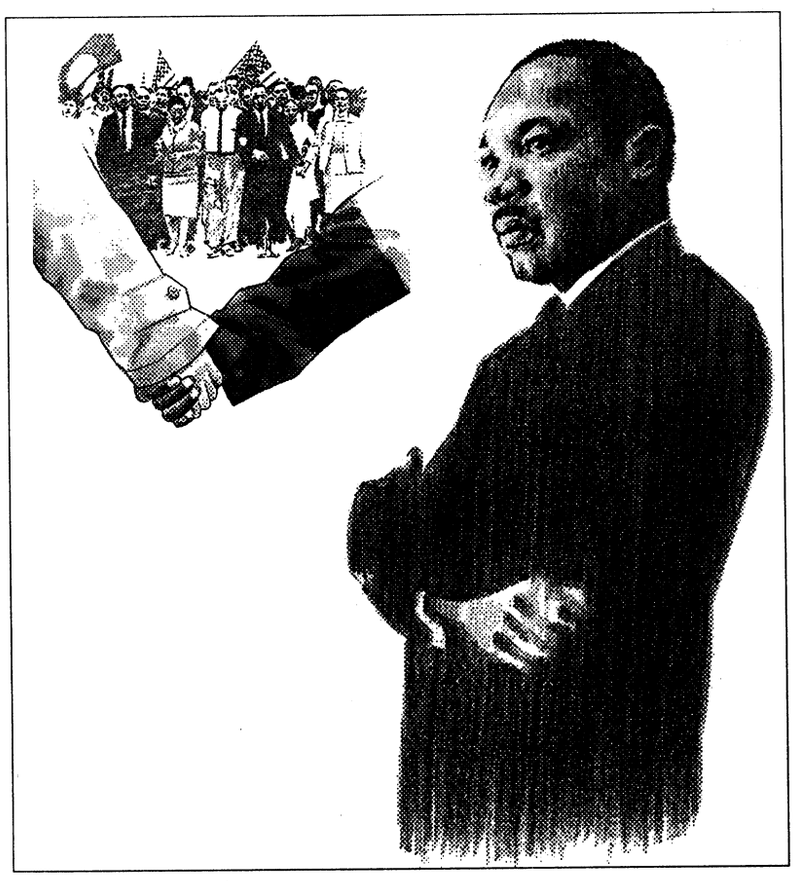
"You have to know where you're coming from, what are your roots," Love said.

He pointed out that very early human remains have been found in Africa, meaning there's a common bond between people of all colors.

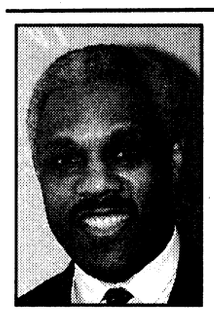
"In a sense, I guess that makes all of us African-Americans," Love said.

He praised the state of Georgia as "a place that was a battleground during the Civil War, but today houses no less than 10 historically black colleges."

Love also said the Army and Fort Benning have good equal opportunity programs, but they and the rest of the world still have work to do.



"Dr. King started this battle years ago and we're still fighting it today," Love said. "It's the kind of battle that requires vigilance."



He told the soldiers in the audience to picture fighting King's battles 35 years ago.

"Just imagine yourself serving in Dr. King's army during the '50s and '60s," Love said. "Imagine yourself with only one weapon — the strength not to fight back."

Fort Benning Commanding General Maj. Gen. John W. Hendrix told the audience that soldiers today are fighting for equal rights for the entire world.

"While the Cold War's over, the new world has its share of racial discord ... and divisiveness," Hendrix said.

> "Dr. King started this battle years ago and we're still fighting it today. It's the kind of battle that requires vigilance."

Schools choose essay winners

Fort Benning Schools

The Fort Benning Schools recently conducted their annual art and writing contest in honor of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. Following are the first-place entries:

Living the Dream: Let Freedom Ring

There was a man — a very good man — his name was Martin Luther King Sr. He had a son who idolized him, Martin Luther King Jr. He was a good boy and he had some white friends. During those days, blacks were discriminated against. They were treated like second-class citizens. Martin King was not happy with this. He could not play with his white friends. When he was on his way to school something happened to make him mad! He was told to get up from his seat and move to the back of the bus. His teacher got up, but he said no! His teacher persuaded him to move. Many people say that day was the beginning of his dream to be free, and to free all oppressed people. He grew up to be an honest, nice, All-american man.

Martin Luther King Jr. became a civil rights leader. He won the Nobel Peace Prize for promoting peace throughout the land. He wasn't looking for fame and fortune. King said, "I do not talk about my awards. I talk about how I was a drum major for freedom." One day he made a speech, called "I Have a Dream." Here is a part of that speech: "I have a dream that my four children will not be judged by the color of their skin but by the content of their character." That is the way all men should be judged. One day King was killed by James Earl Ray, but to this day we still remember what a courageous man he was.

Each day I live the dream when I enter my classroom and see a rainbow created by my classmates. I live the dream every time I go to the water fountain for a drink of water and don't see "Colored" or "White" written above. I live the dream each time I go to a restaurant and can sit down without being picked on.

The dream is still alive, and I will do everything to make sure that it continues. Dr. King gave his life so that we can enjoy all of the freedoms that we enjoy today. Because of Dr. King's unselfish acts, freedom will continue to ring from every mountain, every valley, every hamlet, and from every heart.

Martin Luther King Jr. was born on January 15, 1929, in Atlanta, Georgia. His father had the same name, except he was called Martin Luther King Sr. When Martin Luther King was young, his parents called him M.L.

Martin Luther King was a good student. he was able to finish high school two years early and he entered college at 15. He attended Morehouse College in Atlanta. He decided to become a minister just like his father. He learned to read at home before he was old enough to go to school.

Martin Luther King married Coretta Scott. They met at Boston University. He became a minister in Montgomery, Ala.

Martin Luther King saw many things wrong in our country. He was upset that white people could sit in the front seat of a bus and that black people had to sit in the back seat of a bus. He worked hard to change the laws to have all people sit wherever they wanted to on the bus.

In 1960, Martin Luther King moved back to Atlanta. This is when he decided to help lead peaceful marches for freedom.

Martin Luther King helped change many laws. Another law that he changed was for all people to share the same restaurants and hotels. He also helped change the law which allowed black people to drink from the same fountain as white people. Another special law he helped change allowed black children and white children to play with one another on the same playground. He also helped black children go to school with white children. Martin Luther King Jr. was a fair man who cared for all people, black and white.

When Martin Luther King Jr. spoke, many people would listen to him. They were black, as well as white. They were rich and poor people from all over the world. There were many people who helped Martin Luther King Jr. with his peaceful marches and who prayed for freedom and justice in our world.

One of his famous marches was held in Washington, D. C. in 1963. There were millions of people who came to listen to him speak. This is where Martin Luther King Jr. delivered his famous speech, "I Have a Dream." In his speech he tells us that people will not be judged by the color of their skin but for who they are as a person.

In 1964, Dr. Martin Luther King was awarded the Nobel Peace Prize. This is the highest honor a person can receive. Many people were proud and happy that this man received the award. People in the world knew how hard Martin Luther King Jr. worked to receive this honor.

In April, 1968, he led another march in Memphis, Tennessee. He planned to help change another law that would give the same amount of pay to both black and white garbage workers. A man by the name of James Earl Ray shot Martin Luther King Jr. in the head. Dr. King died on April 4, 1968. He was buried in Atlanta, Georgia. On his tombstone are some lines from his "I Have a Dream" speech. They say, "Free at last, free at last, thank God Almighty I'm free at last." People all over the world were angry and sad that this unfortunate experience happened to a great and wonderful person.

America is thankful for Martin Luther King Jr. and his journey for peace and equality among all people, black and white. When we look around and see children of all races playing together, going to the same school, and drinking from the same water fountain, it is important to remember who made this possible.

Living the Dream — Let Freedom Ring

I am glad that white people and black people can be friends. I think that people should be judged by the goodness in their hearts and not by their skin color. Don't you hate it when one person comes along and tells you that you can't be friends because of color? Me, too. If white people didn't like black people or black people didn't like white people, then I wouldn't have my wonderful teacher or my best friend, Curtis, because they are white and I am black. If I was white, I could not play with my friend Larry.

In the blink of an eye, a heartbeat, a roll of thunder ... You finally see clearly ...
The light, the truth and reality are blinding!
Before was darkness, and all was lost.
Then you realize — wrong — all this time.
Never truly understood ... until he came.
Out of the shadows. Into our thoughts.
The intensity of his words, the sweat on his brow, the sorrow in his voice ...
At that moment, we followed.
Hand in hand.
Together at last.

Martin Luther King Living the Dream — Let Freedom Ring

Martin Luther King was born in January 1929, but his life ended suddenly at the age of 39.
As a boy, Martin played with others,
until one day a friend's mother said,
their friendship could no longer be,
for reasons Martin could not see.
As he grew older, he would find the world was not what he had in mind.
Everywhere he looked there was separation between the people of our great nation.
He was against hate and violence,
and so his marches were made in silence.
Dr. Martin Luther King said, follow me to a land where people can live in peace and equality.
His words were so profound,
that to this day they are still around.
These words mean as much to us today as they did to the people of yesterday.

Dr. Martin Luther King

Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. lived from January 15, 1929 to 1968. Dr. King was born in Atlanta, Georgia, the son of a clergyman. After attending several colleges, he received a Ph.D. in theology. Dr. King had success in Montgomery. He was a leader of a struggle to fight for equal rights.

King urged followers to be nonviolent even when opponents insulted and threw rocks at him. He did not fight back. He said, "Show the foes Christian love. Do not let anyone make you hate him."

One of his famous speeches was, "I Have a Dream." When King led the way, black and white Americans worked together nonviolently for the cause of equal rights. While in action, the brave ones helped with segregation. In 1963, Rev. King led a march in Washington, D. C. Over 200,000 people were there. The reason for his march was to force Congress to pass a national civil rights law.

In 1968, Rev. King's work for justice and equality was cut short. In 1968, while getting ready to lead a march, King was shot and killed. He was only 39 years old. In his short period of life, Martin did more than any other American to advance the goal of civil rights. Dr. King was put in jail many times and stopped segregation.

Martin was a great man and a man of good sportsmanship. He had a dream and finally, his dream was accomplished.

Girl Scouts taking cookie orders

Concharty Council of Girl Scouts Inc.

Local area Girl Scouts are taking orders for Girl Scout cookies through Jan. 20. After that date, Girl Scouts will conduct booth sales in front of local businesses through Feb. 24.

This year a new no-fat cookie, cinnamon oatmeal raisin, will be offered along with seven other traditional varieties: thin mints, peanut butter sandwich, peanut butter patties, shortbread, lemon pastry cremes, caramel delites and strawberries and creme.

The cost of the cookies is $2.50 per box; and, with a minimum order of ten boxes, businesses can fax their order and have their cookies delivered. Just call (706)327-9689 to fax your order or call 327-2646 for more information.

The kickoff for cookie arrival is the 15th annual Barnett Bank Girl Scout Cookie Run at Weracoba Park in Columbus Jan. 28.

Races are for every member of the family from the Tot Trot to the five-mile run. All cookie sale profits benefit the Concharty Council of Girl Scouts Inc. whether it be directly through troop profit, or indirectly by meeting the council cost for programs including: council events, resident camp, maintenance of Camp Concharty and Camp Robert Lewis, volunteer training and many of the expenses.

Many troops set goals and develop a marketing plan that will allow them to reach their goals. Cookie profits afford troops an opportunity to travel, purchase uniforms and supplies, plan activities that will benefit needy organizations, or pay Girl Scout registration dues for the next year.

Concharty Council of Girl Scouts Inc. serves twelve counties in West Georgia and East Alabama: Muscogee, Marion, Harris, Talbot, Stewart, Webster, Chattahoochee, and Fort Benning in Georgia; and Lee, Russell, Macon, Barbour and Bullock in Alabama.

QUOTE

"I went in as a civilian and actually ended up in war zones."

31 years on the job has included overseas, stateside assignments

By Jan Wesner Childs
Special to The Bayonet©

Not many people can say they've been doing the same job for 31 years.

Henry Edgar, the new Red Cross station manager at Fort Benning, can.

"I got involved with the Red Cross when I was in Japan on assignment with my parents," Edgar said Jan. 13 at his new office.

Edgar's first job with the Red Cross was as a volunteer instructor. That was in 1963 when he was just 17 and his father was in the Air Force.

Edgar graduated from Troy State University a few years later and planned to go to work for JC Penney. But on his way to the interview, Edgar stopped at the Red Cross office in Atlanta and was hired as a paid full-time staff member.

Over the next 25 years, Edgar served all over the world. He went to Vietnam in 1971 and Saudi Arabia two decades later. He and four other Red Cross workers in Saudi Arabia were awarded the Bronze Star, an unusual honor for Red Cross personnel.

Edgar's overseas assignments also included Germany, England and, most recently, Turkey. His statewide posts were in places like Fort Bragg, N.C.; Fort Polk, La.; and Fort Benning. His second stint here started Dec. 17.

"In some cases, I have more assignments than many military people," Edgar said.

"I went in as a civilian and actually ended up in war zones," he said. "In fact my brother, who recently retired from the Air Force, said I'd been in more wars than him.

"I guess one of the benefits of being in the military or affiliated with the military is that you get to travel to all these places."

Edgar said he thinks his overseas assignments and the time spent in Vietnam and Saudi Arabia have helped him relate to the soldiers he serves. He knows how it feels to be separated from family and friends, and he knows what it's like to face uncertainty.

"I've served in four overseas assignments in the past 10 years," he said. "We have to be ready to go anywhere at any time."

In many cases Edgar's wife, Hien, and their daughter, Michelle, did not accompany him.

Edgar's own experiences growing up around the military helped him prepare for a Red Cross career.

"The Red Cross is really just an extension of the military family," he said. "They treat us as an integral part of the Army."

Edgar's parents are from Ozark, Ala., so that's where his roots are.

"Coming here was almost like coming home to me," he said.

The Red Cross' primary mission with the military is to help locate soldiers in case of a family emergency. A soldier's family can contact their local Red Cross chapter, and that chapter will contact the Red Cross at the soldier's post. If the soldier is on deployment, the Red Cross can track him or her down and deliver the message.

The organization also provides financial assistance for emergency leave and other needs, and works with disaster relief.

There are some special challenges working for the Red Cross at Fort Benning, according to Edgar.

"There are people who are relatively new in the service doing their training here," he said, "so it makes it difficult for them, being away from home and everything."

The organization in general also faces funding problems, Edgar said. The Red Cross is a non-profit organization that gets its support from donations and the Combined Federal Campaign.

Spiritual food can prevent starvation

By Bill Putman
USAIC Chaplains' Office

reflections

From time to time, we read about a millionaire recluse who is found dead from starvation. We read these accounts and say, "What a pity, the man must have had a mental problem to have that much money and not eat!"

We also read about people who lived before the times of compulsory education. Their parents did not allow them to go to school but required them to work to help support the family.

We think that sort of thing does not happen today in our advanced society. We have schools all around us. There is ample opportunity to get an education. We even give much credit to those who have the drive to work their way through college. We brag that anyone who wants an education can get it — if he or she tries.

However, there are thousands of people in Fort Benning, Columbus and Phenix City who are starving from the lack of religious education — even though there are many opportunities for it near them.

At Fort Benning, there are evening home Bible studies, Bible studies led by chaplains in unit areas, Women of the Chapel groups, youth groups, studies sponsored by Officers' Christian Fellowship and Christian Military Fellowship and there is Sunday School.

The Fort Benning Sunday School offers classes for ages 2 years through adult. The curriculum used for all classes from beginners through high school is designed to give a study of the entire Bible over a course of three years.

There are currently three classes for adults. The attendee may choose the class that best fills his or her needs. All soldiers and family members are welcome and encouraged to attend Sunday School. If transportation is a problem, call 545-4715 to arrange to be picked up at your home and brought to Sunday School.

The new year is a great time to continue your religious education. You do not know what you believe or why you believe it until you consider the options. Quit starving yourself and join the study of your choice this week.

Prayer breakfast set for Thursday on post

By Jaqueline Feagin
USAIC Chaplains' Office

The Unit Ministry team will sponsor a prayer breakfast in conjunction with the National Prayer Breakfast in Washington D.C. Thursday at 6:30 a.m. in the Supper Club at the Fort Benning Officers' Club.

The theme for this year's breakfast is "Conversations with God: Prayers of Our Soldiers." Prayers offered will be ones written especially for soldiers in different units, to include the Infantryman's Prayer.

Chaplain (Col.) Calvin H. Syndor III, the Training and Doctrine Command staff chaplain, will be the guest speaker. He earned a doctor of ministry degree and a master of divinity degree from Lexington Theological Seminary.

He has served as staff chaplain for the Intelligence and Security Command, European Command Area Support Group and VII Corps in Stuttgart, Germany.

His awards include the Bronze Star, the Meritorious Service Medal with five oak leaf clusters, the Army Commendation Medal, the National Defense Service Medal with star, the Southwest Asia Service Medal, the Kuwait Liberation Medal and the Overseas Service Ribbon.

For tickets to the breakfast, see your unit chaplain or call 545-2288.

Ready to quit? Remember Jesus' determination on the cross

By Pat Cote
USAIC Chaplains' Office

reflections

Have you ever felt like giving up? Throwing in the towel and walking away?

Several years ago, Simon and Garfunkel wrote a song about a poor boy who went to New York in pursuit of a long-held dream.

Although he had high hopes, he soon fell victim to the harshness of city life. It wasn't long before he was without money or friends. It's easy to picture him, dirty with worn clothes, looking for work and finding none.

He entertains thoughts of quitting. Going home. Giving up — something he never thought he would do. But just when he picks up the towel to throw it into the ring, he encounters a boxer. The words of the song go:

"In the clearing stands a boxer and a fighter by his trade, and he carries a reminder of every blow that laid him down or cut him till he cried out in his anger and shame — I am leaving, I am leaving, but the fighter still remains."

"The fighter still remains." There is something magnetic in that phrase. It rings with a trueness.

Those who can remain like a boxer are a rare breed. I don't necessarily mean win, I just mean remain. Hang in there. Finish. But unfortunately, very few of us do that. Our tendency is to stop before we cross the finish line.

Any chance I'm addressing you? If I am, I want to encourage you to remain. I want to encourage you to remember Jesus' determination on the cross. Jesus didn't quit, but don't think for a moment that he wasn't tempted to. That's why his words from the cross are splendid: "It is finished."

A cry of defeat? Hardly. Had his hands not been fastened down, I dare say that a triumphant fist would have punched the sky. This was a cry of completion, a cry of victory, a cry of fulfillment — yes, even a cry of relief. The fighter remained, and thank God that he did.

Are you close to quitting? Please don't do it. Are you weary of doing good? Roll up your sleeves and go at it again. Are you discouraged? Give it one more shot. Are you disappointed? Hang in there.

Remember, a finisher is not one with no wounds or weariness. Quite the contrary, he's like the boxer; he may be scarred and beaten, but he remains.

Let's endure. The promise is to those who remain to the end. "Blessed is the man who endures temptation, for when he has been approved, he will receive the crown of life which the Lord has promised to those who love him." (James 1:12)

Columbus to present Southern Gospel Showcase

The Watkin's Group Inc.

The Watkin's Group Inc., in conjunction with It's All Good Entertainment Group, will present the fourth annual Southern Gospel Showcase in Columbus Feb. 11 at the Three Arts Theater at 7 p.m.

The Atlanta-based companies will be presenting talent from around the country in celebration of Black History Month.

Participants for the event will be coming from Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Louisiana and Ohio. Plus, voices from various Columbus churches will join together and perform as a mass choir.

Tickets will be $10 in advance and $12.50 at the door.

Military discount tickets will be available at Sol and Harry's Men's Store on Broadway and the New Life Christian Bookstore, off the 14th Street Bridge in Phenix City.

For tickets and more information, contact Charlene L. LaDay, Columbus coordinator for the Watkin's Group, at 323-5467.

chapel notes

Support group — Adults molested as children will begin a support group Wednesday at 4 p.m. at the Family Life Center, Building 2606.

The group is open to military personnel and their family members. Anyone interested can call 545-1760 or 545-5301 for more information.

Bible study — A new Bible study titled "Genesis, The Book of Beginnings," is now offered at Fort Benning Sunday School in Building 2521, the Religious Education Center. This study is designed for adults and taught by Lt. Col. Bobby Little. The class meets from 9:30 to 10:30 a.m.

Topics for discussion are the beginning of man, marriage, sin, science and history, music and the arts; the beginning of relationships of God to man, man to God, man to man, family relationships; and much more. Everyone is encouraged to start the new year in the right way by attending this or other Bible studies.

For more information, contact Little at 685-1390 or Bill Putman at 545-4715.

Prayer breakfast — The 1995 Fort Benning National Prayer Breakfast will be Jan. 26 at 6:30 a.m. in the Supper Club at the Fort Benning Officers' Club.

Tickets are available from unit chaplains and from the USAIC Chaplain's Office, Building 75. Due to the limited seating capacity, all tickets are on a first-come, first-served basis. The cost for the breakfast is $5.50.

English classes — English language classes have begun at the Religious Education Center, Building 2522. Classes are from 9:30 to 11:30 a.m.

Classes are designed for foreign-born spouses of service members and personnel from the School of the Americas.

The goal is to give students the language skills necessary to function independently in the United Sates and do things like obtain a driver's license, go to the Commissary or hospital and communicate with friends and neighbors.

Classes are offered in four levels, and students are placed according to their proficiency in English. Classes are free and books are available for purchase at the classes.

Protestant Women of the Chapel — Protestant Women of the Chapel is offering the following Bible studies:

"Experiencing God" by Henry Blackaby, "Walking with Christ" and "The Character of Christians" by Navigator Press, "What Happens When We Pray for Our Families" by Evelyn Christenson, "Becoming a Woman of Excellence" by Cynthia Heald and "Covenant" by Precepts Ministries.

The group meets every Thursday at 9:30 a.m. in Building 2527, located off Indianhead Road and Thorson Street. Child care is provided in the adjacent building. An evening study will also be offered if there is enough interest.

For more information, call Cindy Russell at 561-3348.

Catholic community — Confirmation classes for adults will begin Sunday at 1 p.m. in the Religious Education Center, Building 2522. Classes are for adults who have not been confirmed.

To register, call Phil Reilly at 545-5508 or the chapel at 545-1452.

LEAVING THE ARMY? TAKE NOTE - THESE ARE REASONS THAT PEOPLE ARE NOT HIRED:

- Lack of planning for career - no purpose or goals
- Inadequate resume - does not communicate clearly
- Overbearing, overaggressive, conceited, "know-it-all"
- Lack of confidence & poise - nervousness
- Lack of "dressing for success"
- Lack of interest & enthusiasm - passive, indifferent
- Poor interviewing techniques - lack of selling ones' skills
- Uninformed about company
- Overemphasis on money - interest only in best dollar offer
- Asks no questions about the job

For more information on the job search process and how to increase your ability to get hired, please call the Job Assistance Center to meet with an Individual Career Counselor at 545-2308

Dunaway belongs to 'A Family Divided'

By Jay Bobbin
Tribune Media Services

A number of accomplished Oscar-winners have turned to TV lately for strong roles, and Faye Dunaway is among them.

SPOTLIGHT

Following her brief series debut in last season's CBS comedy "It Had to Be You," the veteran of such modern film classics as "Network" (her Academy Award-winning project), "Chinatown" and "Bonnie and Clyde" returns to her more typical dramatic turf in "A Family Divided," Sunday's new NBC story that casts her as a mother quite different from her "Mommie Dearest" portrait of Joan Crawford.

Dunaway's newest character is a woman who loves her son — played by Cameron Bancroft, who also appears in "Extreme," the new show premiering next Sunday after the Super Bowl on ABC — but fuels domestic tension by insisting that he confess to his role in a gang assault on a young woman, which resulted in the victim's death.

Her stance places her at sharp odds with her attorney husband (Stephen Collins, now a best-selling author as well as an actor in ventures such as the recent "Scarlett") — who believes that no good can come from the youth's admission to a crime of which he's already considered innocent by authorities.

"It's the kind of role that I look for, and that I've been trying to develop every which way," Dunaway said about her "Family Divided" part. She defends what's right in life, and it's hard to find that sometimes," she said. "It's nice to see a woman who's a housewife really able to fight for morality, and the difference about her is that she believes a person has to be accountable. But, she also knows that her son will be destroyed by this (situation) unless he faces it and unless he brings some kind of closure to it. It's easier not to do that and to just sort of skulk through life, but we don't really get away with anything if we're decent people. We have to live with the consequences."

What: "A Family Divided"
When: Sunday's on NBC

Though she's done other movies for television, including some she's also produced (such as the acclaimed cable film "Cold Sassy Tree"), Dunaway admits she still isn't used to a production pace that's exceedingly faster than that of most theatrical features.

"That is one of the things about the medium ... you'd love to have more time," she said. "Then again, it's good to work on a (tight) deadline, because it forces you not to take too much time and to really come up with what's needed.

"What I missed here was the preparation time, because I like to work on a role for four months ahead of time," she continued. "With this, we got the final script about a week or so before shooting began, with lots of dialogue changes. It's part of what makes TV exciting, though, because it is immediate. You have to sense that it's happening now, whereas movies are more leisurely and reflective looks at life. Television takes an issue and splits it open."

Post honors fallen civil rights leader in commemoration

By Caejar A. Cox
USAIC Public Affairs Office

The U.S. Army Infantry Center's Equal Opportunity Office and the Equal Employment Opportunity Office sponsored a commemoration ceremony Jan. 13 in honor of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., the fallen civil rights leader.

Retired Sgt. Maj. Verray Caldwell recited some of King's speeches, ending with his most famous, the "I Have a Dream" speech.

Watch "Fort Benning Today" to see highlights of this special program.

USAIC-TV Schedule

USAIC-TV operates 24 hours a day on post cable Channel 3.

The U.S. Army Infantry Center Command Information Channel announces post events and post movie listings, and it offers free classified advertisements on "Fort Benning Update," a community information service.

Anyone who lives on post and subscribes to Fort Benning Cable can watch USAIC-TV on Channel 3, 24 hours a day.

Anyone living off post can watch "Fort Benning Today" Monday mornings at 7:25, 7:55, 8:25 and 8:55 on WLTZ-TV 38.

Gorilla gets familiar with new Atlanta home

Zoo Atlanta

ATLANTA — "Ivan the gorilla" from the Pacific Northwest, has adjusted well to his new home at Zoo Atlanta," said Rita McManamon, senior vice president of Veterinary Service for the zoo.

"He is eating well and behaving like a healthy silverback gorilla," she said.

Ivan arrived in Atlanta Oct. 12 and began a three-month quarantine period. His two-room quarantine suite is adjacent to the zoo's gorilla holding facility, making it easy to progressively socialize Ivan.

Although Ivan cannot see other gorillas at this time, during the day while the gorillas are outside the opaque door covering the window separating him from the holding facility is opened. This allows him to look through the glass window and watch keepers performing their daily tasks.

Cindy Thorstad, senior veterinary technician and quarantine supervisor, said "Ivan is progressing well with his target and squeeze cage training. This training will help us give him routine veterinary care without the stress of tranquilization."

Ivan is owned by Woodland Park Zoological Gardens in Seattle, Wash. Zoo Atlanta officials said they hope he will be residing in the Ford African Rain Forest by spring.

'Higher Learning' teaches more than academics

By Marc G. Turchin
Bayonet staff writer

movie review

"Without struggle, there is no progress." This quote from Frederick Douglass, used in "Higher Learning" defines director John Singelton's message in the movie.

Throughout the motion picture, individuals of different races struggle to find their identities while getting a college education.

The story follows three new students at Columbus University.

Each has his or her own problems on campus at first; one is a stand-out track star who has an attitude, one is sort of an outcast who wanders the campus looking for a crowd to call his own and the other finds herself in trouble after hooking up with the "Greek" society.

From the start, the movie takes on a racial undertone, even before any real action takes place.

Minor instances involving white campus security officers and black college students show the viewers that prejudice is not dead.

The majority of the movie's content deals with how students are treated differently and how they look at themselves differently. The movie shows that when this happens in a negative way in today's society, people turn to violence.

Although it's not the theme, Singelton demonstrates, in more ways than one, the different ways people can be racist — from white officers choosing to confront a black student as a crime suspect instead of a white student to white Aryan Nation activists beating two gay students.

Racial prejudice, which causes most of the action in the movie, is shoved down your throat until you have trouble breathing during the flick. The problem is, that's what it may take for some people to realize what they are doing is wrong.

In spite of the larger racial problems on campus, it's the struggle between individual people with different colored skin that is the real theme.

Laurence Fishburne plays a political science professor who makes his students come up with their own political ideology to pass his class.

Each of the three students tackle tough decisions in his or her own way. This motion picture, sometimes in a disturbing way, shows the way we think and the decisions we make are not always the right ones.

A lot can be said about Singelton and his movies. He is not afraid to show the world what African-Americans go through and see on a day-to-day basis. He deserves respect for telling the truth, as he sees it but, at times, it's hard to believe.

"Higher Learning" (R)
Starring Laurence Fishburne, Omar Epps and Michael Rapaport. Directed by John Singelton.

Review

Story portrays college life in the '90s. Individuals of different races interact and tempers flare. Singelton proves that racism is alive and well in America.

988TH MP COMPANY

Soldiers return from Haiti

By Marc G. Turchin
Bayonet staff writer

Military police officers who at times faced armed rioters and a hostile environment during their deployment to Haiti, returned home Monday to the safe haven of cheers from post officials and tears of joy from friends and family.

The 988th Military Police Company flew home from Haiti on a commercial aircraft and landed at Lawson Army Airfield around 6:20 p.m.

The company has been deployed for four months in the heat of the Caribbean. As they walked off the airplane and into the frigid cold of central Georgia, some soldiers screamed "hooah." Some just crossed their arms on their chests to ward off the unexpected chill.

As the soldiers walked down the stairs from the aircraft, they were greeted by Col. Gregory C. Camp, post chief of staff, Col. Ronnie D. Alton, post provost marshal and Post Command Sgt. Maj. William H. Acebes.

Inside the hangar, Alton welcomed the military police officers home.

"Today we say welcome back knowing that the 988th did a ... terrific job in Haiti and accomplished their mission," Alton said.

"It's great to be home," said Capt. David F. Lewis, commander of the company. "I didn't think we'd ever get here."

While in Haiti, the 988th was responsible for a number of duties as part of the 519th Military Police Battalion from Fort Polk, La., said Master Sgt. James A. Nelson, operations sergeant for the 988th.

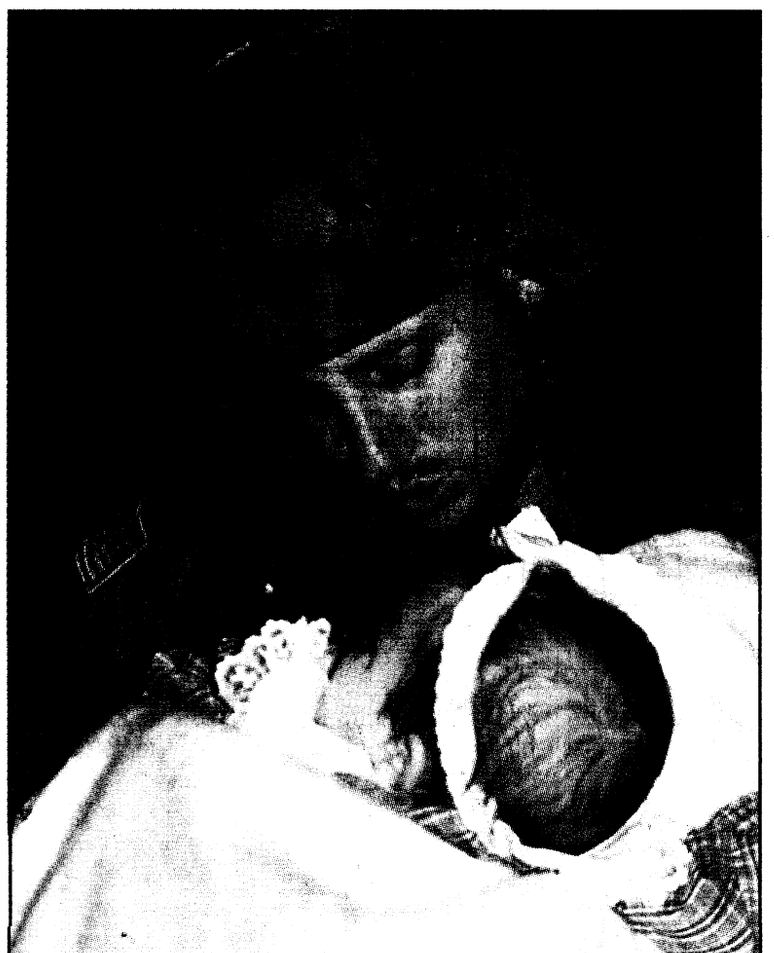
"Our main job there was escorts and security duties," Nelson said. Also, the MPs were given the task of retraining the Haitian police force and processing the returning Haitians from Guantanamo Bay, Cuba.

Some of the escorts they provided were for Lt. Gen. Raoul Cedras and his family when they were leaving the country and for President Jean-Bertrand Aristide when he arrived, Nelson said. According to Nelson, the 519th was also responsible for guarding the presidential palace and Aristide's living quarters.

Marc G. Turchin

Col. Ronnie D. Alton, post provost marshal, welcomes home a member of the 988th Military Police Company.

"We did the basic patrolling of the city of Port-au-Prince," Nelson said.



Lewis said while patrolling the streets, the MPs responded to incidents where shooting was involved; but, by the time they arrived at the scene, the shooting had already stopped.

When the soldiers' 12-hour shifts were over and the crowds died down in town, members of the 988th wound down by working out in a weight room, taking aerobics classes and relaxing on secured beaches.

A recreational center was built after about two months and soldiers were able to watch movies and play pool, said Pfc. Carl Lawson, military police officer with the 988th.

"We laid around, lifted weights and did a lot of (physical training)," Lawson said.

The morale of the company was great for the most part, according to Lewis. He said during the holidays it got sort of low, but they got a big lift when a three-pallet care package from the Family Unit Support Group, the Post Exchange, the Noncommissioned Officers Association and the Commissary arrived Dec. 23.

Marc G. Turchin

Cpl. William Bengel, military police officer with the 988th, says "hello" to his baby daughter Madelene, who is 4 1/2 months old, after arriving from Haiti.

Inside the pallets were candy, cookies and packages from family members. "We had a huge Christmas party in the barracks and handed all that out. It was great," Lewis said.

MPs warn:

Speeders, beware!

Karen S. Morarie
Bayonet staff writer

The Fort Benning Military Police have two words for drivers who speed on post: slow down.

With the 988th Military Police Company back from Haiti, bringing the complement of MPs on post up to strength, the Directorate of Public Safety is poised to begin a "saturation" attack on speeding.

According to Col. Ronnie D. Alton, provost marshal and director of Public Safety, MPs will be targeting speeders all over post, but particularly in the housing areas.

"We've had numerous complaints in the past few months from the housing areas," Alton said. "People use them as shortcuts or cut-throughs to avoid school zones ... (drivers) are just not obeying the signs."

Alton said the speeding problem is not isolated, but is occurring in all housing areas.

"I can stand in my front yard and watch, and the cars go by like it's a freeway," Alton said.

The word Alton uses to describe the tactic MPs will use to catch speeders is "saturation."

"Our intent will be to observe all drivers in a particular area," he said. "We will be looking for speeders, and we'll concentrate on the housing areas."

Alton said drivers have been observing "Operation Slowdown," the decreased speed limit during physical training hours, and he hopes to make drivers equally aware of speed limits at all other times.

The aim is not to write citations for everyone on post, Alton said, but rather to increase drivers' awareness of their speed.

"Our goal is to provide a safe and secure environment for personnel to live, work and play," Alton said. "We've had unseasonably warm weather this winter, and there have been a lot of children out playing. Speeding through housing areas puts those children in danger."

Alton said drivers shouldn't assume there's a "tolerance" or safety margin that enables them to drive above the speed limit.

"Drivers sometimes think if the speed limit is 30, they can drive around 35 and not get ticketed," Alton said. "That's not so. We've got sophisticated radar equipment, and it's very accurate. Don't rely on tolerances."

> "We will be looking for speeders, and we'll concentrate on the housing areas."
> — Col. Ronnie D. Alton
> Director of Public Safety

Sgt. 1st Class Eddie Cosby, noncommissioned officer in charge of Law Enforcement Operations, said the Military Police are equipped with 56 radar guns, and all incoming MPs are trained in their use by an in-house, state-certified radar instructor.

"A lot of times, people aren't even aware they're speeding," Cosby said. "Almost anybody will do it — if they're late to work, or have to pick up their kids, they'll step on the gas. Hopefully, (this program) will make them more conscious of how fast they're going."

Cosby said fines for speeding are $30 for those traveling less than 10 miles over the speed limit, $50 for 11 to 20 miles over the limit, and a mandatory court appearance with fines ranging up to $150 for those driving more than 20 miles over the limit.

Those cited for speeding in government vehicles, Cosby said, are subject to have points levied against their licenses. More than 12 points in a year can result in license suspension. Repeat offenders on post are subject to loss of post driving privileges, at the commander's discretion.

Staff Sgt. Robert Johnson, NCOIC of the Traffic Section, said the units have been very helpful in emphasizing the speed limit during PT hours. "They make it a part of inprocessing briefings," Johnson said. "We want to make people that aware of all the speed limits."

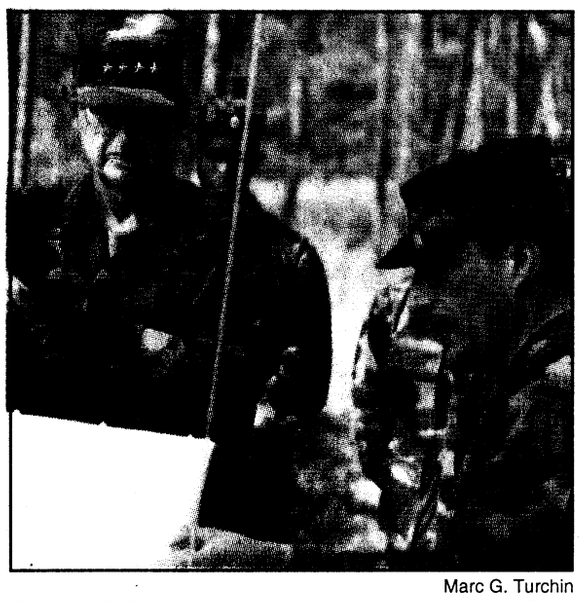
TRADOC commander visits post

By Marc G. Turchin
Bayonet staff writer

The new commander of Training and Doctrine Command visited Fort Benning Jan. 18 to review training taking place on post.

Gen. William W. Hartzog made his first visit to post since being named chief of TRADOC.



While here, Hartzog received briefings about the U.S. Army Infantry Center, the Dismounted Battlespace Battle Lab and the School of the Americas. He also witnessed One Station Unit Training soldiers during a training exercise at Sand Hill.

"I'll tell you what you guys do for me, " he said to the soldiers of Company D, 2nd Battalion, 54th Infantry Regiment, "you restore my spirit because you're what the infantry is all about."

Hartzog spent time talking to the soldiers involved with the exercise. He spoke about Fort Benning — past, present and future.

He said he has a lot of memories of Fort Benning, dating back to his first commissioned tour from 1963 to 1966.

"This is home," Hartzog said. "I've had three tours here and my family and I love it." Hartzog called Fort Benning one of his "favorite places in the world" and said he hoped to be a regular visitor.

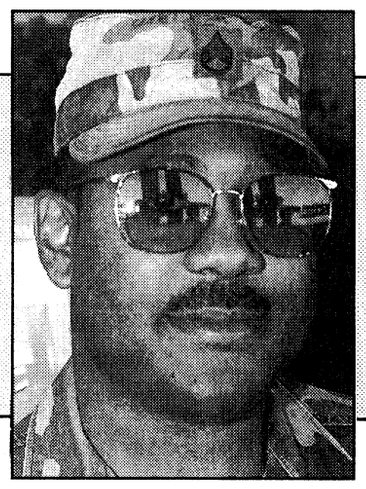
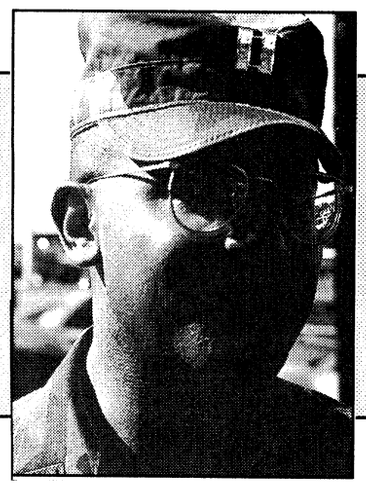
VARIOUS VOICES

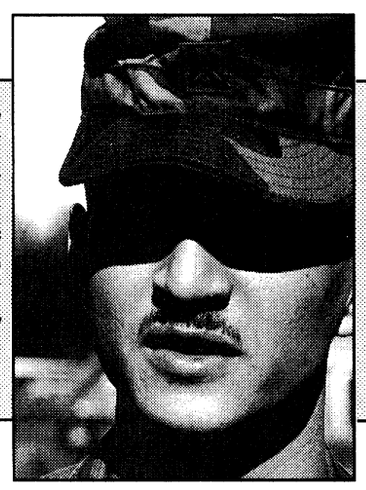


What do you dread most about the tax season?

Linda Scroggins, family member — "I dread paying taxes."



Sgt. 1st Class Dennis Patnode, Battery B, 4th Battalion, 41st Field Artillery Regiment — "I look forward to tax season so I can get my little refund and make plans on it."



Staff Sgt. Alvin W. Robinson, Company C, 2nd Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment, — "Basically what I hate about it is getting my W-2 form so late. I could've had my rapid refund by now."

Spc. Teresa Pepper, 324th Forward Support Battalion — "I dread when I have to pay — it's going to be different for me this year because I just got divorced."

Capt. Dwayne Norton, 324th Forward Support Battalion— "I really don't dread it, because I always get a refund."

Sgt. Luis Parras, Service Battery, 4th Battalion, 41st Field Artillery Regiment — "It's really hard on taxes now because they tax BAQ (basic allowance for quarters) and separate rats (basic allowance for subsistence) — that's the only thing I dread." (Editor's note: While BAQ and BAS aren't taxed, they count as income when determining the Earned Income Credit.)

Tax time

Only sure things in life are death, taxes

By Clyde Snively

commentary

Dragon lady reminded me that we are well into tax season. That's the bad news.

The good news is that most of us enlisted types should see some money coming back. She emphasized that point, "Don't let the government use your money; file early and get it back."

The super good news is that if forms are as foreign to you as they are to me, there's help.

The Staff Judge Advocate's office provides all sorts of help for people like me who can't add or follow instructions, for example, "If line B is larger than line A, but not as large as line C, go to line D, but if line B is equal to or less than line A, disregard line C and move to item 26, enter amount there."

Hey, I can go out and talk to people, take pictures, take notes, return to the office, turn on my computer and write a story.

But don't expect more of me.

The entire left side of my brain is dedicated to just surviving on the job. While the right side of my brain, unfortunately, was DOA — dead on arrival.

Nothing to be proud of, just a fact of life.

As a result, I have no mechanical aptitude. I have no form-filling-out ability and I sure can't do no math. Yet somehow, with the help of the tax counselors, I manage to get my form filled out.

In fact they do just about everything except sign my name.

What this means of course is that I'll have to stay in the Army and remain at a low enough rank so I can continue to use the EZ (hah!) tax form and get all that free help.

Which reminds me, why do Army dudes go to commercial tax firms for assistance? I know some do it because they think if they pay for something it must be better than free assistance.

Others do it because they're so hot to get their returns back, they file electronically. Well guess what, SJA does that too.

William O. Riley went downtown. He went there because the Army tax counselor said he was only entitled to a $46 return. William O. knew that was wrong, so he paid $35 for a commercial firm to fill out his form.

And guess what. They pretty much agreed with the Army guy, so William O's $46 turned out to be $11 after deducting the cost of his fee. Of course he can claim his $35 on next year's return.

Sucker.

By the way, don't forget you can get help with your state returns too. All those who think they don't need to file state, raise your hand.

Wrongo, BDU breath. You do.

You might be totally exempted (unless you're from some of those stingy states up in the Northeast who don't care if you live there or not, as long as you're a resident, you owe).

But once again, if you've got questions, you know whom to call.

By the way, I pity you people who have to file not only federal, but also Georgia and state of resident return.

Oh well, I guess that's the price of freedom.

Now if we could just lower the price of defending that freedom.

What your dentist wishes you knew about your mouth

commentary

The media seem to delight at Christmastime in asking your random soldier or family member on the street just what he or she might like for Christmas this time. You always get the standard answers like "peace on Earth" or a "new truck."

But I just don't ever seem to be in the right place to be asked questions like this. Or maybe somehow they know they shouldn't ask such open-ended questions to someone as unusual as a dentist. But if they did, I'd say without delay, "I wish for world peace and that everyone would know a few, important things about their oral health. "I'd also wish for a new truck, with four wheel drive, please."

Every day at work, I'm reminded that folks really don 't know fairly important things about their oral health. That once amazed me because I assumed that oral health would be important to everyone, and that everyone would want to do everything they could to stay healthy.

The furnace repairman from Housing finally put it in perspective for me. Now I must admit that I had known that I had a furnace, that it probably needed some maintenance now and then, and I guess I knew that things could go wrong with the furnace in a big way. But, I didn't ever think about my furnace until something started going wrong.

I guess I thought that I could ignore the furnace until it had a problem, then just get it fixed. The furnace repairman from Housing was not sympathetic.

"Have you ever heard of Preventive Maintenance?" he asked.

"Wasn't that a comic book?" I joked. I think he got it, but he didn't laugh.

"Can't you just fix it?" I asked.

He straightened up from his work and looked me right in the eye.

"I can fix the one that's broke, but I can't fix the one that's gone to his reward cause of gross neglect."

"Is this one ... gone?" I gulped.

"Yup, sure is," he said. "Gross neglect," he repeated.

"Yes sir, Colonel, we gonna have to shut you down here for, maybe, week or two..." he said, almost with satisfaction, like maybe I was getting what I deserved.

Silence fell upon us as he turned to tinker with the expired furnace, and I pondered the prospect of a really cold house. The weather channel had said that colder weather was on the way to Georgia.

"By the way, Colonel, where do you work here at Benning?" he asked.

"I'm a dentist," I answered.

"Well ... ain't that kinda special. I'da thought a guy like you would know all about prevention."

Which brings me to why I said that the repairman put this in perspective for me. You see, as the repairman scolded me for ignoring my furnace, it occurred to me that it probably is very much human nature to just forget about some things. Some things, like maybe your furnace (before it gets cold) and your oral health (before anything hurts) just aren't "front burner" issues for many of us.

That's why I'm writing this. And at last, I'm ready to tell you the most important thing that I, as a dentist, think you should know about your oral health.

It is this:

You can have a very serious problem with your oral health without ever having a hint that something is going wrong. No pain, no signs of disease visible to you, not a hint to alert you that you need to do something to intercept the process.

It seems that almost every day I have to tell someone they have a dental problem that is unsolvable without something drastic like extraction of a tooth or root canal treatment. We can deal with dental problems like tooth decay, gum disease and oral cancer quite successfully in their early stages. In their later stages, we can't.

Don't ever say to yourself, "I don't need a dental exam, because I'd know if I had a problem." Very often, you won't know while your problem is still solvable!

I've met a few people over the years who liked going to the dentist. They scared me, because that's just not normal. You normal folks should force yourself to see a dentist once a year, however, simply because the potential consequences of an undiagnosed problem are just too severe.

As I tell my patients every day, what may now be a situation that requires a relatively simple procedure will, at some point in time, need drastic measures that will very likely live up to some of the dental horror stories you may have heard.

So what would I, and my friend the furnace repairman, like for you to know? Preventive maintenance.

If you identify and deal with the little problems along the way, chances are you can avoid the big problems. Don't trust your mouth to always let you know that you have a problem. Get a dental exam every year.

Christmas has come and gone, and according to CNN and the foot of my Christmas tree, it doesn't look like my "world peace" or "new truck " wishes will be granted this year.

Now that I think about it, world peace was probably more likely than a new truck. But I'm happy and grateful for the opportunity to tell you the most important thing that you should know about your oral health.

Trust me on this, and have a great new year!

CSM: New garrison sergeant major will deal with quality of life

By Jan Wesner Childs
Special to The Bayonet©

Fort Benning's new garrison sergeant major considers himself an advocate for the post's soldiers, family members and civilian workers.

"All sergeants major are trainers, all sergeants major are leaders," Chittum said Monday. "All sergeants major also advise their commander on how policies and issues are affecting soldiers."

He said the sergeant major must be a voice for soldiers and family members.

Chittum assumed the job of garrison sergeant major in December. He is the senior enlisted adviser to the garrison commander, who serves as a sort of city manager for the post.

In his job, Chittum will deal with the quality of life issues that affect soldiers, family members and retirees — things such as housing, community relations, recreation facilities, benefits, services and soldier support.

"No. 1 is all of the programs concerning single soldiers," he said. "We have the greatest soldiers in the world; they deserve our best efforts to improve their living and working environment and off-duty time."

Next, Chittum will focus on family housing areas. Maintenance, occupant responsibilities, unit sponsorships and the area coordinators are all key factors, he said.

He'll work with civilian employees, too.

"I also believe one of my jobs is to be an advocate for the civilian workers — to let people know our civilians are dedicated and as loyal as any soldier."

Chittum said he'll strive to uphold Fort Benning's reputation as the best Army installation in the world.

"Obviously I'm looking forward to the challenges of my job," Chittum said.

"We're in a period of drawdown, of dwindling resources. How do you maintain a high quality of life for single and married soldiers and maintain the readiness of the force?"

Chittum brings a wealth of experience to the job. His previous assignment was as command sergeant major of the 10th Mountain Division Artillery at Fort Drum, N.Y. There he had to deal with constant deployments, including the mission in Somalia.

He has also served as the 1st Armored Division command sergeant major, command sergeant major of the military community of Ansbach, Germany, and in two battalion command sergeant major positions.

Also, Chittum has a strong personal connection to Fort Benning and the tri-community area.

He grew up in Columbus while his father, who he calls the greatest influence on his life, was in the Army. Chittum graduated from Baker High School in 1970 and enlisted in 1972.

"I joined the Army because of a desire to serve my country and follow in my father's footsteps," Chittum said.

"What's made me stay in is that I enjoy it. I like the pace, I like the atmosphere. I like the fact that in the military good work is rewarded."

His parents, William and Elizabeth Chittum, are retired in Columbus now, and the command sergeant major hopes to one day settle down here, too.

"I feel excited and fortunate to be here," he said.

Chittum, 42, is married and has two children, an 8-year-old boy and a 10-year-old girl.

Special Forces recruiters to visit

By Paul D. Nelson
Special Operations Command

FORT BRAGG, N.C. — Special Forces recruiters will be at Fort Benning today to brief interested soldiers, officers and enlisted, on the Special Forces career field.

Briefings will be in Building 4, Room 59 from 10:30 a.m. to 1 p.m.

Recruiters are currently looking for soldiers to attend the Special Forces Assessment and Selection Course scheduled for March and September. The course is a 21-day program to evaluate candidates' physical, mental and teamwork potential to make it through the Special Forces Assessment and Selection Course.

Specialists and corporals who have not attended the Primary Leadership Development course may still apply for the career field, according to Special Forces recruiters.

All candidates must pass physical fitness and swim tests given by SF recruiters. Unit PT and swim tests are no longer valid.

The uniform for the PT test is battledress and running shoes. The minimum overall score for the PT test is 220. The test consists of push-ups, sit-ups and a two-mile run, graded on the 17-to 21-year-old scale, regardless of age.

Candidates are also required to swim 50 meters in a pool wearing their uniform and boots with no time limit imposed.

Soldiers are encouraged to have an SF physical scheduled before the recruiting team's arrival, Copies of DA forms 2A and 2-1 should be brought to the briefings.

For more information or an application packet, call (910) 432-1818 or DSN 239-1818.

Service members in debt face involuntary allotments

By Stephen Barrett
American Forces Information Service

Service members with delinquent bills may find another entry on their pay vouchers — involuntary allotments to pay private creditors.

Military personnel who owe debts, whether to private individuals or businesses, may be subject to involuntary debt collection. This comes after Congress mandated change in Department of Defense regulations.

"We're not talking about every allegation of debt," said Navy Capt. Gerald Kirkpatrick. "We're talking about indebtedness adjudicated in a civilian court when the court determines the service member owes money."

Kirkpatrick, DoD's legal policy director, said Congress ordered these changes along with Hatch Act amendments passed last fall. Before the changes, effective Jan. 1, only those seeking child or spouse support could get involuntary allotments.

> "On the one hand the idea is to repay the debt in a reasonable amount of time. But on the other (it's) to make sure the service members have enough left in their pay ..."
> — Gerald Kirkpatrick
> DoD legal policy director

To collect debts, Kirkpatrick said, creditors must gain a court judgment against the service member before requesting the allotment. If the court rules against the service member, creditors can file with the Defense Finance and Accounting Service to request payment.

However, before the deduction starts, the application must go through the service member's commander to the member for response. If it's found that the request is legitimate, involuntary payments from the service member begin.

"However, it (the allotment) is not an automatic process," said Kirkpatrick. "The service member has a meaningful opportunity to respond to it (the application for an involuntary allotment) and to raise objections."

Kirkpatrick said ensuring procedural safeguards for service members is important to DoD. He said the new regulations include provisions for extensions of response time. This is critical when service members deploy, receive overseas assignments or have a classified duty where they can't respond to the application for involuntary allotment.

The regulations also protect service members from having too much taken from their "take home" pay. Only 25 percent of service members' pay, not including quarters and subsistence allowance, is subject to involuntary allotment.

"It's a matter of balance," said Kirkpatrick. "On the one hand the idea is to repay the debt in a reasonable amount of time. But on the other (it's) to make sure the service members have enough money left in their pay to meet the necessities of life."

Kirkpatrick added there may be more than one judgment creditor paid at a time, provided the total payments do not exceed 25 percent of take home pay.

In announcing the change Kirkpatrick said DoD is not trying to send a message to its forces, but rather implementing a law Congress passed. He said most service members have a very good record of paying their bills on time and in full.

However, he said, there were perceptions that federal civil service workers and service members receive shielding from mandated debt collections. "That has not been the case for many workers outside the federal sector," said Kirkpatrick, "and the law corrected that imbalance."

To help prevent indebtedness and involuntary allotments, Kirkpatrick advises service members keep accurate financial records and seek help from their unit financial counselors or legal assistance offices.

"Otherwise, if we as service members don't pay our just debts voluntarily, under this new law we may find the money comes out of our pay without our consent," he said.

Integrity of a photo can make a difference

By Jim Garamone
American Forces Information Service

What you see is what you get.

That's the bottom line for the new the Department of Defense policy on photo and video manipulation.

"Anything that weakens or casts doubt on the credibility of this imagery within or outside the Department of Defense will not be tolerated," according to the memorandum signed by Deputy Defense Secretary John Deutch.

"Images are extremely powerful," said Army Col. Jack Kehoe, director, Defense Visual Information. "Defense leaders often use images in the decision-making process. We have to ensure accuracy of these images — service members' lives literally could depend on this accuracy."

The growth of digital technology has significantly increased the ability to alter images, both still and video. Further, these alterations are seamless — that is, people can't tell that someone has changed an image.

Many editors have not resisted the temptation to "play" with an image. Time magazine darkened a mug shot of O.J. Simpson. National Geographic moved one of the Great Pyramids of Giza to make the photo more appealing. And anyone who has seen the movie "Forrest Gump" can attest to how real video alterations can appear.

The policy makes it illegal for DoD personnel to alter the intent or message of photos and video.

There are certain exceptions:

- Common photographic techniques such as dodging, burning, color balancing, spotting and contrast adjustment are not considered alterations.
- Obvious masking of portions of photographic images in support of security or criminal investigation requirements is allowed.
- Digital conversion and compression is authorized.
- Enhancement can be used for dramatic or narrative effect in education, recruiting, safety and training illustrations, provided the enhancements do not misrepresent the image and the text plainly states the image has been altered.

Commissary agency closes four stores

By Stephen Barrett
American Forces Information Service

The Defense Commissary Agency will close four stateside stores between January and April.

Agency officials closed stores at Fort Story, Va., and the Naval Weapons Station in Yorktown, Va., Jan. 1. The Pope Air Force Base, N.C., store closes Feb. 28 and the Fort Lesley J. McNair unit in Washington, April 1.

Commissary officials said these closings are a "one-shot deal" and do not reflect future trends toward more closings. Maj. Gen. Richard E. Beale Jr., agency director, said the closings help the agency stay within funding allocations.

"It's just good business sense to close those (commissaries), which are expensive to operate or need to be modernized," said Beale. He said by driving a few miles in a different direction, customers will encounter a more pleasant shopping experience. The benefits include a better product selection, enhanced service and larger facilities.

Officials closed the four stores based on low annual sales (less than $15 million), high operating costs and proximity (within 20 miles) to other commissaries. Other store closing considerations included construction and renovation projects, current and future active duty patronage, facility age and the ability for other stores to absorb added patrons.

Beale added that his agency's permanent employees at the four closing commissaries will receive vacant job positions at nearby stores.

Officials added the closings will save $2 million this year. These closings, along with retirements, closings under the Base Closure and Realignment Commission and other cost-saving initiatives, allow the agency to meet its fiscal 1995 budget.

New system in place to evaluate post facilities, services

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet©

Fort Benning is using a new grading system to comprehensively evaluate all of its facilities, services and environmental programs.

Known as the Installation Status Report, the grading system was adopted by all U.S. Army installations after preliminary testing last year. In the future, the system will be adopted Armywide.

According to Gary Conner, Fort Benning's ISR team leader, the ISR is similar to the Army's 2715 Unit Status Report, which is conducted monthly to assess a unit's readiness by grading its personnel and equipment.

The ISR, which will be conducted annually, will measure three areas of the installation — facilities, environment and services. Fort Benning is currently conducting the first phase, with more than 2,600 facilities to be evaluated.

"The system itself is actually easy to use," Conner said. "It's the large amount of information that has to be collected from a large number of facilities that creates a challenge."

For each facility, there exists a color-coded set of standards that indicate the facility's condition. A green rating indicates a facility in good condition, an amber rating indicates an adequate condition and red indicates a facility in poor condition.

Inspectors will follow a simple, preprinted, step-by-step score sheet to evaluate their particular areas. To assist the inspection process, each checklist includes pictorial representations of each color standard.

The ISR, which will be conducted annually, will measure three areas of the installation — facilities, environment and services. Fort Benning is currently conducting the first phase, with more than 2,600 facilities to be evaluated.

Conner said the standards are simple to follow. The inspector simply compares the conditions at the site with the indicators listed in a standards booklet that reflects established Armywide standards for that particular type of facility.

For example, when inspecting the sites and grounds of a family housing unit, the inspector looks for two off-street parking spaces with one covered, sidewalks on both sides of the street and buried electrical, telephone and cable wires. If the unit has all of these, it is rated green. If the landscaping is poorly developed, there is only one off-street parking space, the driveway is cracked or not paved and there are no sidewalks, the unit would receive a red rating.

After every facility is assigned a color rating, the scores are tabulated using a computer program to form an overall quality rating for each category of facilities. This score is called a C rating and can range from C-1, meaning nearly everything meets or exceeds the standards, to C-4, which means most items fall short of the standard.

The program will also estimate how much money it will cost to bring red facilities to amber and amber facilities to green. The collected information will then be forwarded to Training and Doctrine Command Headquarters and from there to Headquarters, Department of the Army.

The Fort Benning ISR team consists of representatives from the Directorate of Operations and Training (Gary Conners and Sue Otera), Directorate of Public Works (John Brent and Kathy Watts) and the Directorate of Resource Management (Sally Dudley).

"This is really a team project," Conners said. "The ISR involves or affects everyone on post."

Conner said that Phase II of the report, which involves the assessment of the post's compliance with federal, state and local environmental laws, is scheduled to be tested in March. Phase III will assess the standards of post services and should begin testing in August, Conner said.

Female instructors needed for school

The Fort Benning Drill Sergeant School needs female sergeants first class or staff sergeants who have served as drill sergeants in the last six years to be instructors.

Applicants must:

• Want a challenging and demanding job

• Be in excellent physical condition and have no profiles

• Have excellent military bearing, conduct and overall appearance

• Want to share knowledge and experience as a drill sergeant

• Develop new drill sergeants by leading by example.

Only those who are serious and willing to give 100 percent should inquire, officials said.

For more information, call Master Sgt. Jackie McGriff at 544-8176 or 544-8173.

Nurses to celebrate 94th birthday Thurs

The Army Nurse Corps will celebrate its 94th birthday Thursday. The events will begin at 6 p.m. with a social hour immediately followed by dinner at the Fort Benning Officers' Club.

A narrated slide presentation depicting the Army Nurse Corps; then and now will be conducted along with a video presentation.

The dress for military is the Army dress blues. The cost is $10 per person. Reply by Monday by calling 544-4218 or 544-8054.

Free tax preparation assistance available

Free assistance with tax form preparation by Legal Assistance Office personnel will be available at the Main Post Exchange Feb. 4 from 9:30 a.m to 1 p.m.

Individuals needing assistance should bring all paperwork and tax forms, officials said.

SSA to accept applications for SSNs

Every person age 1 or older must have a Social Security number before that person may be claimed as a dependent on a tax return, according to Staff Judge Advocate Office officials.

The Social Security Administration will accept applications for Social Security numbers Feb. 9 at 10 a.m. at the Main Post Chapel Center next to Doughboy Stadium. Applicants must bring a certified copy of the person's birth certificate and some other type of identification, such as school or shot records.

For more information, call 1st Lt. Michael Roberts at 545-4267.

Post School Board to meet Monday

The next meeting of the Fort Benning School Board will be noon Monday in the conference room of the Fort Benning Schools Administrative Building, Building 2670, 201 Custer Road.

Copies of the agenda are now available in the schools. If you would like to attend, call 545-2500.

Patterson Award ceremony scheduled

The Patterson Award will be presented at a ceremony in Marshall Auditorium, Infantry Hall, at 9:30 a.m. Feb. 10.

The award will be presented to 2nd Lt. Robert W. Kinder, who has been selected as the most outstanding infantry officer graduate of the Officer Candidate School and the Infantry Officer Basic Course.

The Patterson Award was established in 1952 by friends of Judge Robert P. Patterson, who set up a trust fund for the presentation on his behalf.

Feb. 12 will mark Patterson's 104th birthday and the 42nd year of the Patterson Award presentation.

Tax office to open

The Fort Benning Tax Office, which will be located in Building 2640 at Soldiers' Plaza, will open Tuesday. Office hours will be 8:30a.m. to 4 p.m., Monday through Friday.

Electronic tax filing will be available for most federal returns, and the office has many federal and state tax forms available.

Unit tax advisers have been appointed so soldiers with tax questions can see their unit tax advisers first.

Black History Month luncheon set

The Equal Opportunity Office will celebrate Black History Month with a luncheon Feb. 24 at 11:30 a.m. at the Main NCO Club.

This year's theme is "Reflections on 1895: Douglass, DuBois and Washington."

The luncheon tickets are $6 and the menu consists of fried chicken, pigs' feet, jambalaya, collard greens, macaroni and cheese, candied yams, red beans, rice, cornbread, egg custard, sweet potato pie and iced tea.

Stars take to gridiron

Columbus team features 13 Fort Benning players

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet©

For those of you who thought the football season would end with the Super Bowl, guess again.

The Columbus Stars will take to the gridiron starting with an exhibition game against the Dothan, Ala., Chiefs Saturday at Doughboy Stadium. Kickoff is 2 p.m.

The Stars, under the tutelage of head coach Tom Staton and new general manager Jeremiah Castille, hope to bring an exciting brand of minor league football to the Columbus, Fort Benning and Phenix City area. In fact, because of the renovations taking place at Memorial Stadium, the Stars will play all their home games at Garrett Stadium in Phenix City. (Games start at 7 p.m.)

If Castille's name rings a bell, it's because he played for eight years with the Denver Broncos of the National Football League as a defensive back.

"We are very fortunate to have Jeremiah as our general manager," Staton said. "In the past our GMs didn't know very much about football. With Jeremiah having been at the professional level, he knows what it takes to support a football team. The other GMs didn't know the work it entailed at the corporate level to get the job done."

Staton also noted that the coaching ranks had been realigned and some new faces were added to give the team the ability to give more individual instruction to the players.

Once again, Fort Benning soldiers will play a key role in the success or failure of the Stars; 13 soldiers from around post will be playing or coaching.

Last year's starting quarterback Jeff McCurrie, of Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 1st Battalion, 18th Infantry Regiment, will be battling third year player Eddie Mitchell and newcomer Dwight Washington of Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment, for the starting slot at quarterback.

"With the new acquisitions on the offensive side of the ball, we should be able to put some points on the board," McCurrie said. "The only area we might be a little weak in is the offensive line. Without one we can't win. Our defense is hitting just as hard as ever. In practice, they kick our butts most of the time."

The "Crunch Bunch" will once again be anchored by veteran linebackers Connie Burnham, also of HHC, 1st Bn., 11th Inf. Regt., Terrance Perry and Thomas Bryant.

Listed below are the military personnel who will be playing for the Stars.

Sgt. 1st Class Connie Burnham Jr., HHC, 1st Bn., 11th Inf. Regt., (linebacker)

Staff Sgt. Dwight Washington, HHC, 1st Bn., 11th Inf. Regt., (quarterback)

Staff Sgt. Arron Lewis, HHC, 1st Bn., 11th Inf. Regt., (defensive back)

Sgt. Jeff Siedel, HHC, 1st Bn., 18th Inf. Regt., 3rd Bde., 24th Inf. Div., (special teams coach)

Spc. Jeff McCurrie, HHC, 1st Bn., 18th Inf. Regt., 3rd Bde., 24th Inf. Div., (quarterback)

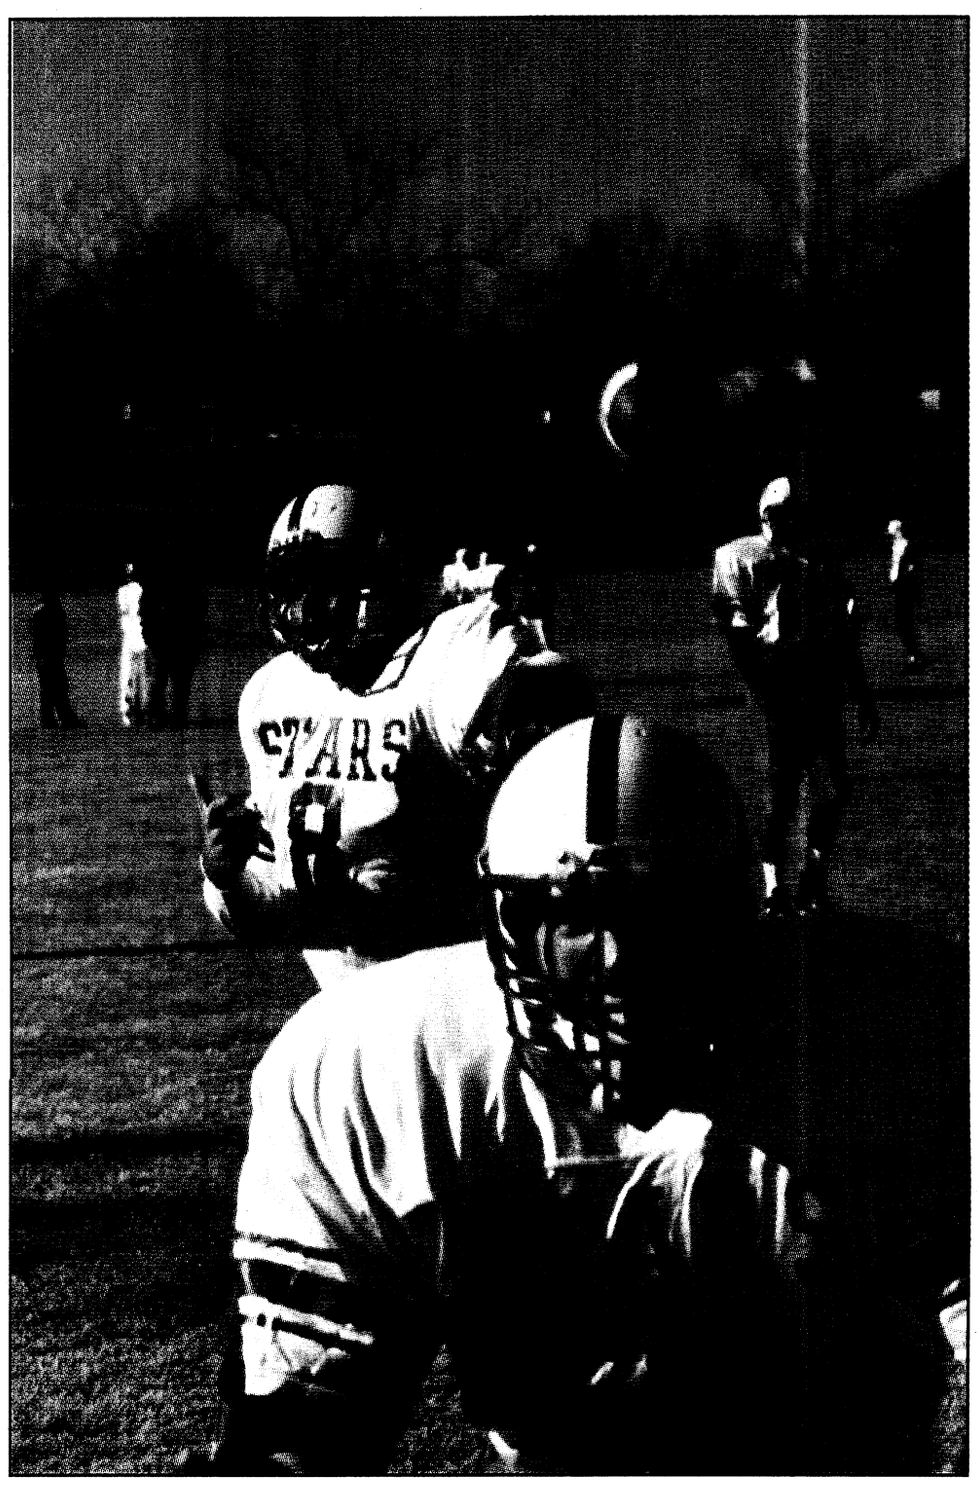
Pfc. Sean McEndree, HHC, 1st Bn., 18th Inf. Regt., 24th Inf. Div., (offensive line)

Spc. Albert Tate, Co. D, 1st Bn., 18th Inf. Regt., 3rd Bde., 24th Inf. Div., (tailback)

Sgt. Rayfield Parks, Co. D, 2nd Bn., 18th Inf. Regt., 3rd Bde., 24th Inf. Div., (wingback)

Spc. Noah McClinton, HHC, 36th Engineer Group (defensive back)

Pfc. Larry Walker, 586th Engineer Company (Assault Float Bridge), (offensive line)



Sgt. Dave Davis, HHC, 29th Inf. Regt., (tight end)

Spc. Barry Buford, Co. C, 3rd Bn., 75th Ranger Regt., (wing back)

Sgt. Milton Kamala, U.S. Army Medical Department Activity, (defensive back)

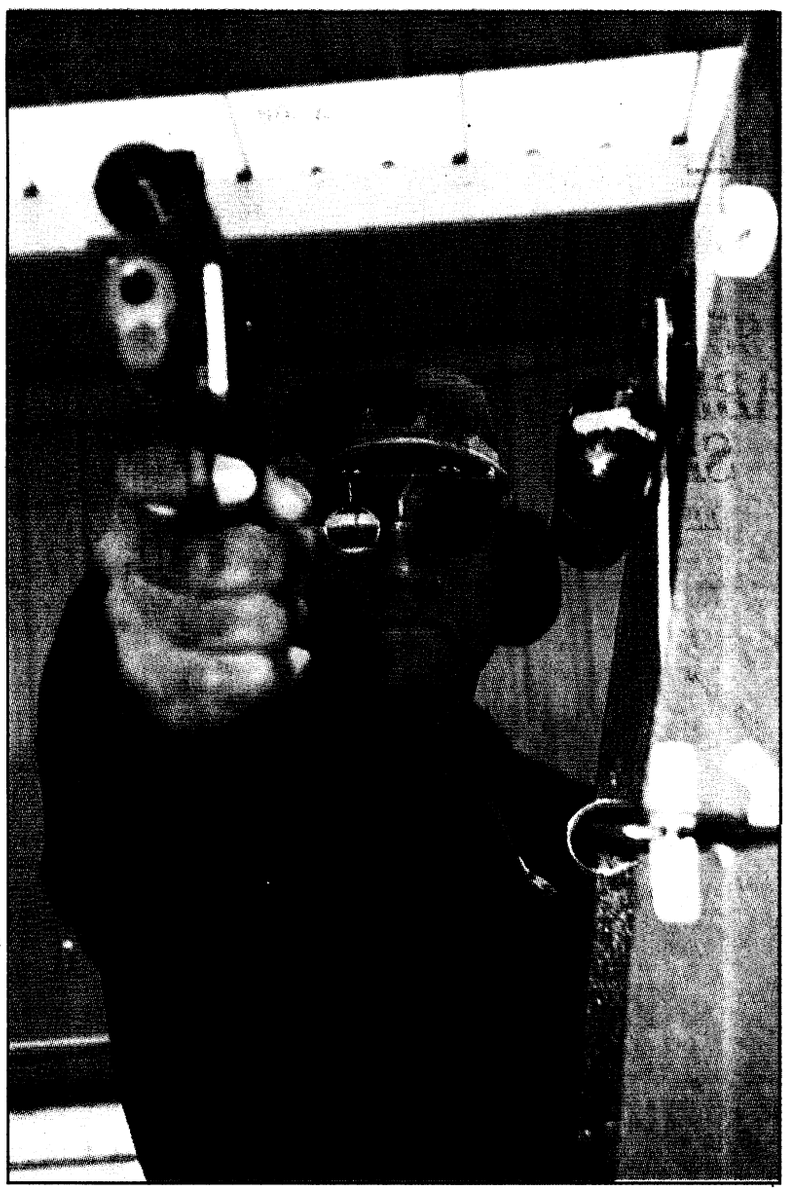
AMU team wins regional competition

By Marlene Tikal
U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit

The U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit's Service Pistol Team unseated the top-ranked U.S. Army Reserve Team in regional marksmanship competition during the West Coast Nationals recently in San Diego, Calif.

What was to be an opportunity to assess where USAMU marksmen stood with West Coast and Reserve competitors turned into a landslide win as victories were gained in all three events that comprise the nationals, said David L. Boyd, USAMU chief of competition.



The six-member USAMU team scored 1,186 in .22-caliber, 1,178 in center fire, and 1,174 in .45-caliber competitions based on a 1,200-point scale. The Reserve team followed with consecutive scores of 1,178, 1,175 and 1,173.

"Even though there were a number of teams there that participated in the nationals, the reservists were our main concern," Boyd said. The Reserve team has often dominated Service Pistol shooting matches and has also produced a number of top-quality marksmen — including the national champion for three of the last four years.

"On the other hand, we (USAMU) have been striving to improve the performance of Service Pistol for quite some time," Boyd said.

However, improvements in performance can be credited to individuals such as team member Sgt. Roger Jacobson, who put in extra effort during training in preparation for the competition.

"I had several problem areas with my shooting I had to work on to overcome," Jacobson said. So, in addition to the training program designed by USAMU Service Pistol Coach Jon Frazer, which included everything from practicing slow- and rapid-fire techniques to mental imaging, Jacobson tailored a training program for himself that helped him overcome these problem areas.

Sgt. 1st Class Roscoe Castle takes aim.

According to Jacobson, his past habit of releasing the trigger too rapidly had a detrimental effect on his accuracy. By practicing his breathing technique — which helped him relax and steady his hand — as well as his stance, Jacobson was able to achieve a smoother trigger release, which bolstered his performance at the nationals.

"All the hard work paid off," he said.

However, there are times when all the preparation in the world can't completely brace competitors for the unexpected.

Service Pistol team member Sgt. 1st Class Roscoe Castle discovered that in San Diego, when he found the trigger of his .45-caliber pistol was not depressing properly.

Castle realized it was still important for him to keep a positive attitude.

"I'd say the training I receive on a day-to-day basis helped me do that," Castle said. "So, while the problems I had were unexpected, they were not insurmountable."

Both Castle and Jacobson, along with fellow team members Master Sgt. Wesley Vaughn, Sgt. 1st Class Gary Marsh, Staff Sgt. Todd Schexnayder and Spc. Jon Eulette, discovered that fact — nothing is insurmountable.

"After all," Jacobson said, "the Reserve team couldn't stop us. But, I know we haven't heard the last of them."

And that's a certainty, as the two teams will meet again in July at the National Championships at Camp Perry, Ohio.

"Only next time," Jacobson said, "we'll be the team to beat."

36th Engineers play 3 games

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet©

The Fort Benning intramural basketball season is under way at the post fitness centers, with games being played Monday through Thursday.

Three games were played Monday night at Briant Wells Field House from the 36th Engineer Group.

In the first game of the evening, the Hit Squad of the 598th Maintenance Company, shot down the Dust Off crew from the 498th Medical Company, (Air Ambulance) 55-52 in overtime.

The Hit Squad overcame a halftime deficit of 27-23 on the strength of Ronald James' 17 points from the outside and the inside tandem of Terrell Harris (14 points) and Willie Tucker (11 points). The lead went back and forth throughout the second half with neither team holding more than a two point lead at anytime.

Dust Off led by forward David Penn's 21 points, Roderick Grannison's 15 and Kevin Shaw's 11 points stayed in the game despite having only five players for the night.

Dust Off even had a chance to win the game with a last second shot in regulation but Dale Sampson's three-point attempt with two seconds left on the clock was short of the mark.

In the overtime period, free throw shooting told the story. Sampson missed two free throws with less than a minute to play leaving Dust Off down by one 52-51. The Hit Squad on the other hand made three straight free throws, the last one by Derrick Sankfield with seven seconds left in overtime.

Game two of the night's tripleheader was forfeited by 2nd Mobile Army Surgical Hospital and Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 36th Engineer Group.

In the final tilt of the evening, the Third Base team from the 63rd Engineer Company threw out the Outcasts of the 690th Medical Company, 66-53.

In the first half sloppy play by both teams in the early going kept the scoring to a minimum. Third Base held the early lead 18-7 with five minutes to play in the half.

The Outcasts went on a 13-1 run in the final five minutes to take a 20-19 lead at the break. In the second half, Third Base attacked the basket on both ends of the court, building a 36-26 lead six minutes into the half with a 17-6 run. The Outcasts led by Phillip Smith's game high 27 points went down fighting. Robert Sales had 9 and Willie Hurd finished with 7 for the Outcasts.

Michael Jackson had 23 points for Third Base, with teammates Tommy Gipson chipping in 8 and William Cochran adding 7.

Instructional soccer will be available for children ages 4 and 5, regular soccer for youths ages 6 to 15, T-ball for ages 5 and 6, coach pitch for ages 7 to 8 and baseball for ages 9 to 15.

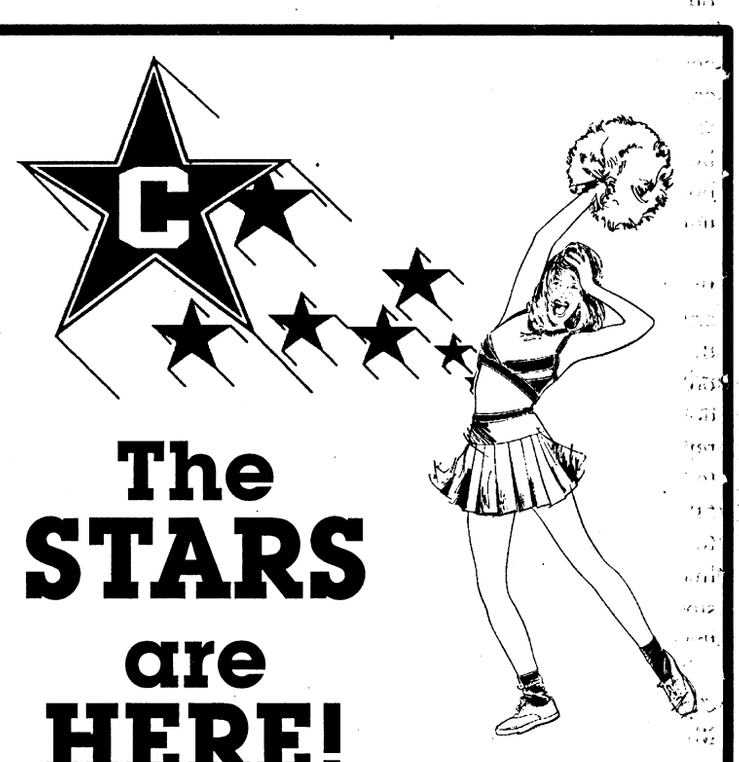
Youth Services will need coaches for the upcoming season. Individuals who are interested can stop by Building 1056, Monday through Friday, from 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. and fill out a coach's application.

Prospective coaches should have an interest in working with children. They must be willing to make a commitment to attending all scheduled practices and games. For more information, call 545-3070.

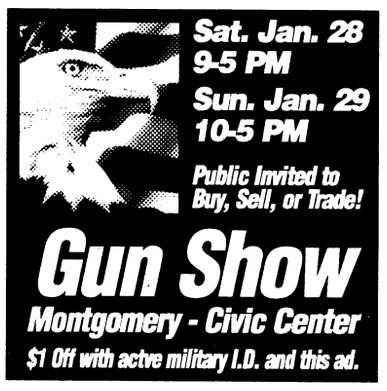
BASS club has monthly tournament

By Stephen Ward
Bass Anglers Sportsman Society

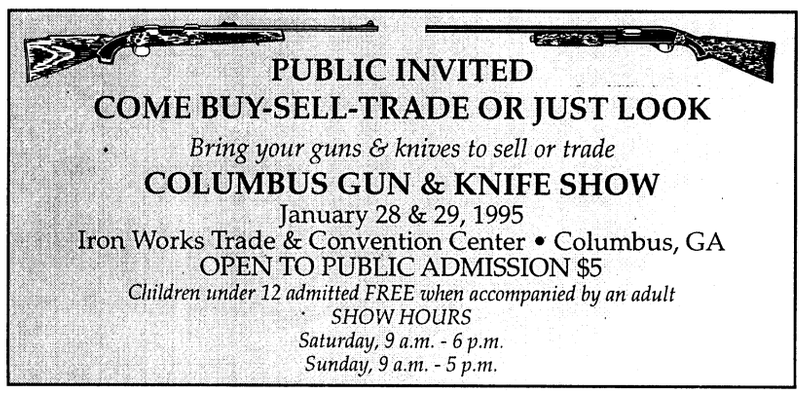
January is not thought to be the best time of year for bass fishing. This year, the Fort Benning Bass Anglers Sportsman Society Club spent a mild winter day conducting its monthly tournament at Lake Harding Jan. 15.



The anglers fished under partly cloudy skies with a slight wind later in the day. Water temperature was 52 to 53 degrees so the bass had to be fished slowly, but everyone hoped for the big one. With the storm front that passed through the local area the previous day, water clarity diminished to 18 inches at the best areas.



The results of the tournament were:



First place — David Moore with five fish for a total of 12 pounds 12 ounces.

Second place — Miguel Aviles with five fish for a total of 12 pounds 2 ounces

Third place — George Mendez with four fish for a total of 8 ponds 12 ounces.

crime watch

Military Police Activity

TAKE A BITE OUT OF CRIME®

The hot topic for the week is housebreaking. Several instances of housebreaking have occurred on post during the last few months. Many of these crimes occurred during daylight hours; and, in some cases, neighbors either saw or heard something out of the ordinary but did not call the Military Police.

The most effective deterrent to crime in the housing areas are neighbors watching out for each other. Even with the Community Oriented Police Squad continuously patrolling the housing areas 24 hours a day, seven days a week, the possibility of an MP being at the exact location of a break-in when it occurs is highly unlikely.

The community needs to assist the Military Police in fighting crime on Fort Benning. If you see or hear something out of the ordinary, regardless of what time of day it is, call the MP station and report it. It's far better for the MPs to respond and find that someone returned early from vacation than to receive a call a few days later that someone's possessions were stolen by someone who broke into their quarters.

The following entries were extracted from the Fort Benning Military Police blotters from Dec. 26 to Jan. 3. Such entries do not determine the guilt or innocence of any person.

• A specialist was charged with shoplifting at the Main Exchange. He was observed removing an automatic TV game switch from the display shelf and placing the item in his pocket. He then exited the store without paying. While in the common use area, the soldier was approached and detained until the MPs arrived. He was apprehended and taken to the MP station where he was processed and issued ID card confiscation orders and suspension of post exchange privileges. He was then released to his unit.

• A specialist and his wife were charged with assault and simple battery. He and his wife were involved in a verbal argument that escalated when he punched her several times; she in turn struck her husband and kicked him several times. Both individuals were apprehended and taken to the station where they were processed; he was released to his unit and she was released on her own recognizance.

• A specialist was charged by the Columbus Police Department with shoplifting and obstructing an officer. He was observed removing numerous items from a display shelf before exiting a store without paying. The soldier, attempting to flee the area, struggled with the officer. He was apprehended and taken to the Muscogee County Jail, cited and confined pending recorders court.

Other activities include 19 cases of driving under the influence of alcohol, eight traffic accidents, 22 cases of larceny, and seven cases of shoplifting reported at the Post Exchange facilities.

Remember to help "Make Our Post The Best — Give Crime Arrest." Report any activity that seems out of place to the military police at 545-5223 or 545-5224 or the "Crime•In Progress" line at 545-5222.

Army Emergency Relief

Q. What is Army Emergency Relief?

A. AER is a private, nonprofit organization, incorporated in 1942 by the secretary of War and the Army chief of staff. AER's mission is to provide emergency financial assistance.

Q. Whom does AER help?

A. AER helps active duty soldiers, retirees and their family members, Army National Guard and Reserve soldiers on active duty for more than 30 days and their family members, and surviving spouses and orphans of soldiers who died on active duty or after they retired.

Q. What can AER do?

A. AER can help with emergency financial needs for food, emergency transportation (due to emergency leave), vehicle repair, funeral expenses, medical and dental expenses, certain expenses when pay has been lost or stolen and undergraduate level education scholarships based on financial need to children of active and retired soldiers.

Q. What can't AER do?

A. AER cannot help pay for nonessentials such as financing ordinary leave or vacation, paying fines or legal expenses, helping liquidate or consolidate debts, assisting with house purchase or home improvements, helping purchase, rent or lease a vehicle, covering bad checks or paying credit card bills.

Q. How do I find AER when I, or my family members, need help?

A. At Fort Benning, visit AER at Building 2643, Soldiers' Plaza, from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday. During nonduty hours (for emergency leave only), contact the U.S. Army Infantry Center staff duty officer at 545-2218. Away from Fort Benning, contact any AER section, American Red Cross, Air Force Aid Society, Navy-Marine Corps Relief Society or Coast Guard.

ask the judge

By Michael H. Lane
Office of the Staff Judge Advocate

It's tax time again. Tuesday you should receive your 1994 W-2 forms with the January Leave and Earnings Statement. You will be looking for help with those taxes, and luckily, help is available. Army Community Services and the Office of the Staff Judge Advocate will operate the Fort Benning Tax Program. As this is being written, unit tax advisers are in training with Internal Revenue Service instructors to kick off the tax season.

Opening day for the Fort Benning Tax Program this year is Tuesday, and the office will remain open through April 14. The Tax Office, manned by ACS volunteers and unit tax advisers, will be located in Building 2640, Soldiers' Plaza, and will be open from 8:30 a.m. until 4 p.m. Monday through Friday excluding holidays.

Tax preparation of most tax returns will be offered, along with electronic filing of tax returns. As in prior years, there will be tax preparation days at the Main Post Exchange, where you can have your taxes done at that location. Dates this year are: Feb. 4, March 4 and April 8 from 9:30 a.m. to 1 p.m.

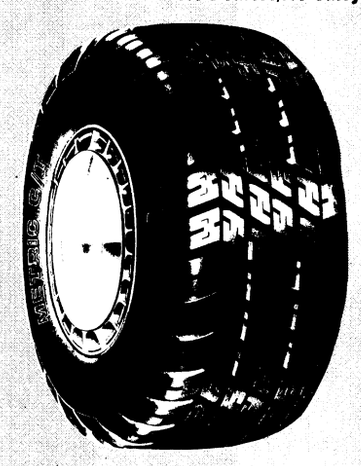
It is requested that you see your unit tax adviser first for tax assistance. If he or she cannot assist, you are, of course, welcome in the Tax Office.

When you come in for tax assistance, it is important that you bring all the important documents you will need for preparation of the tax return. The first requirement is that you have all W-2s from any jobs held in 1994. If you do not have W-2s, you will have to wait until at least Feb. 15 to use a Leave and Earnings Statement for tax preparation.

If filing a joint return, both taxpayers must be present to sign necessary forms, or the present spouse must have a power of attorney from the absent spouse. This will save a trip home to get the absent spouse's signature.

Social Security numbers for all children, as well as accurate information about any child care providers, will be a must. If you do not have a Social Security number for your child, it is strongly recommended that you apply for it as soon as possible. Failure to do so will delay any refund you may have coming to you, because all SSNs will be checked by IRS this year.

In order to make this convenient for Fort Benning soldiers, there will be a representative of the Social Security Administration at the Main Post Protestant Chapel Annex located next to Doughboy Stadium. Bring ID cards and birth certificates.



Finally, if you receive a state tax form, and you desire assistance with filing the state return, it will be helpful if you bring that form with you to the Tax Office. Although the Tax Office has requested forms from all states and Puerto Rico, only about 25 states have responded so far. Tax preparers will do their best to assist you.

The Tax Office is located in Soldiers' Plaza, Building 2640. For other assistance or questions about tax matters, call 545-4267.

DoD OKs medal for duty in Haiti

By Stephen Barrett
American Forces Information Service

Military personnel who served in or directly supported Operation Uphold Democracy in Haiti will receive the Armed Forces Expeditionary Medal.

Joint Chiefs of Staff Chairman Army Gen. John M. Shalikashvili authorized the award in late December. The award's opening date is Sept. 16, 1994 — the day initial deployments to Haiti began. No closing date is set.

The Department of Defense established the medal in 1958. It recognizes participation in three types of deployment: U.S. military operations, United Nations support and U.S. assistance operations for friendly foreign nations.

To qualify for the award, U.S. Those forces must either encounter foreign armed opposition or face possible hostile action by a foreign force.

The award is limited to Uphold Democracy participants who actually served within a roughly 300-square-mile operations area centered on Haiti. The geographical boundaries are 16 degrees 30 minutes north latitude, 21 degrees 25 minutes north latitude, 71 degrees 45 minutes west longitude, 76 degrees west longitude, excluding Cuba in the northwest corner.

Nearly 20,000 troops deployed to Port-au-Prince, Cap Haitian and other locations in and around Haiti. Most qualify for the award.

Personnel not assigned to specific guideline:

- Serve 30 consecutive days or 60 nonconsecutive days in the area of operation;
- Serve in combat or hazardous duty during the operation with armed opposition, whatever time in the area;
- Serve as an aircraft crew member flying regular missions in the operation area;
- Receive recommendation for the award from the service chief or commander of a unified command.

Service members have earned the award in 22 DoD operations since it was established.

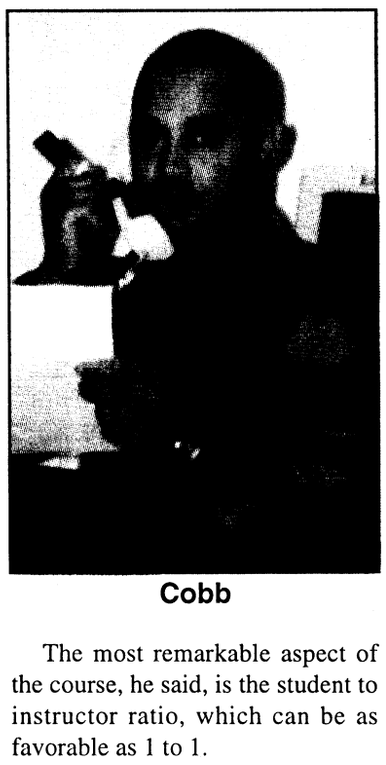
Aim center mass

A soldier from Company D, 2nd Battalion, 54th Infantry Regiment, takes aim while searching for a sniper as his platoon goes through training exercises in a remote area on post Jan. 18. During the exercise, the soldier's platoon was ambushed by a sniper platoon, while drill sergeants supervised.

CATD conducts precommand course

By Devinti M. Williams
29th Infantry Regiment



The Infantry Precommand Course is conducted at Fort Benning by the Combined Arms and Tactics Directorate to train brigade and battalion command designees on the most current infantry doctrine and equipment as well as prepare them for successful command.

The scope of instruction includes combined arms tactics, defensive and offensive operations, artillery operations, air defense, engineer operations, intelligence, logistics, battle analysis and combat air support along with various other topics pertaining to command.

Officers designated to receive command of mechanized units will attend a one week Bradley Fighting Vehicle module of instruction prior to the core Infantry Precommand Course.

Upon completion, these mechanized officers also attend the two week Infantry Precommand Course with the remaining officers, who are designated to receive command of light infantry units. The course graduates an average of 100 students yearly.

During an information gathering interview, Sgt. 1st Class Daniel Cobb, who is the course manager for the Infantry Precommand Course, highlighted what makes this course different from any other the students would have previously attended.

Cobb

The most remarkable aspect of the course, he said, is the student to instructor ratio, which can be as favorable as 1 to 1.

"Battalion command sergeants major are authorized and encouraged to attend the Infantry Precommand Course," Cobb said.

This helps to develop a more knowledgeable and balanced combat force for the future of the U.S. Army, he said.

Another interesting fact Cobb observed is the information sharing environment that the officers from different command experiences bring to the course.

However, he said, "They all leave agreeing on one thing — that the importance of troop welfare is paramount, because if the soldiers are not taken care of, the mission will not be accomplished."

SOA commandant reflects on what's ahead

By Judith Ginder
School of the Americas

In a change of command ceremony Jan. 13 at Ridgway Hall, Col. Roy R. Trumble became commandant of the School of the Americas.

In a recent interview these were his comments.

Q: Is there anything specific that you learned from your position as commander of the U.S. Military and Advisory Group in Peru that you will apply to the School of the Americas?

A: My appreciation for the Latin American environment has increased greatly from my 11 years in Latin America. From Peru, I gained a better understanding of embassy policies and procedures.

I realize that world politics impact how SOA accomplishes its mission, especially in this post Cold-War era. Because of my experience in Peru, I believe that SOA still plays a vital role in the Latin American region of the world.

Q: What expectations do you have of the noncommissioned officers and junior enlisted soldiers to help move SOA into a more positive public light?

A: By their very nature, U.S. Army NCOs are the most professional in the world. In the long run, people who disagree with the School of the Americas will come to understand what we do here.

The majority of the public knows that we teach U.S. Army doctrine — the only difference is that our training is in Spanish.

In this endeavor, the NCOs and junior enlisted soldiers of this unit always represent the School of the Americas well.

Public opinion is formed by what they say and do. Whether out in the community or at work, they are ambassadors of SOA.

There is no question in my mind that the consistent professional performance by soldiers in this unit will eventually sway public opinion.

Q: What expectations do you have of yourself as the commandant of the School of the Americas?

A: My objective for the next two years is for the School of the Americas to have a solid foundation for the future.

With the end of the Cold War, funding by the State Department has had a negative impact on all foreign training throughout the services.

I plan, in concert with hemispheric needs, to move forward with the SOA 2000 vision, to increase the number of students attending the school, and to maintain the quality and reputation of the School of the Americas.

Q: Do you believe there is a need for improvement of the human rights instruction in the courses at the School of the Americas?

A: Reviewing our human rights instruction is, of course, an ongoing process. The time spent in classroom instruction is just a small part of the SOA experience.

The real human rights instruction begins when students first arrive in the United States — taking in the entire U.S. experience .... things such as school and church activities.

The school now has a staff judge advocate on board who is constantly reviewing human rights training, adding to and modifying it as needed. The human rights training program at SOA is the best in the Army.

Q: How would you describe your leadership style?

A: I have been training soldiers for as long as I can remember and I love it. The soldiers and students can expect to see me in the classroom, out walking patrols in the field, taking part in cadre training and physical training.

I want to have fun while I'm at SOA — I want to be and will be involved here. My idea of fun is good solid training and a positive outlook.

sdt question of the week

By Alfredo Lezcano
2nd Battalion, 58th Infantry Regiment

Editor's note: To assist noncommissioned officers in preparing for their Self-Development Tests, The Bayonet publishes a series of questions weekly.

This week's question: How many leadership principles are there?

A. 10; B. 11; C. 12; D. 13

Answer: B. 11. The answer may be found in Field Manual 22-100, page 5.

50 years ago this week ...

- The Soviets made an important breakthrough in their offensive against the Germans in East Prussia. All Soviet fronts in Poland were moving forward despite German resistance. In Budapest, the Soviets took half of the city. The German war machine was beginning to crumble as the Red Army's advance began to pick up speed.

- U.S. planes unleashed a merciless assault on the withdrawing German Army as they continued their retreat from the Ardennes. The Bulge was now reduced to a five-mile strip as the U.S. Army took St. Vith.

- In Burma British commando forces carried out their fourth amphibious operation, landing on the Arakan coast four miles southwest of Kangaw to cut the enemy's escape route. Meanwhile, Chinese troops captured Wanting, eliminating the last Japanese resistance along the route to India through northern Burma.

- U.S. Navy carrier-based planes attacked Formosa, the Pescadores and Sakishima island groups, destroying 140 enemy aircraft.

- Douglas MacArthur's troops captured the Clark Field airstrips and nearby Fort Stotsenburg on Luzon. Elsewhere in the Philippines the important communication center of Tarlac was captured.

- At the White House, President Franklin Delano Roosevelt was sworn in for his fourth term in the smallest inauguration ceremony on record. In his inaugural address he pledged to work for victory and a sound and durable peace.

- At Fort Benning, a free concert to aid in the polio drive was conducted at the Main Post Theater. The "Music at Midnight" production was performed by Fort Benning's 334th ASF Band and the famed Reception Center Chorus. After the first nine days of the Fort Benning polio drive, $8,152 was raised.

Instructors of year named for 1994

By Marc G. Turchin
Bayonet staff writer

The 1994 Fort Benning instructors of the year were announced Dec. 12 during a ceremony at Infantry Hall.

Capt. Robert A. Rasch, Sgt. 1st Class Ralph I. Jackson and Staff Sgt. Mark A. Channer were selected as officer, senior enlisted and junior enlisted instructors of the year.

Rasch is an instructor at the Infantry Officer Basic Course. Jackson is the senior instructor at the Jumpmaster School and Channer is an instructor at the Basic Noncommissioned Officer Course.

All three winners received a $50 gift certificate to Sam's Wholesale Club, a plaque and warm-up jacket from the Fort Benning Chapter of the Association of the United States Army; awards from the Noncommissioned Officers Association; plaques from U.S. Cavalry; a $50 gift certificate from the Army and Air Force Exchange Service and a $25 gift certificate from Ranger Joe's. Rasch also received a $100 savings bond and a plaque from the Chattahoochee Valley Chapter of The Retired Officers Association.

Capt. Robert A. Rasch

Rasch, whose job it is to teach second lieutenants to become platoon leaders, said to be a good instructor you need to be "proficient as an instructor and as a person."

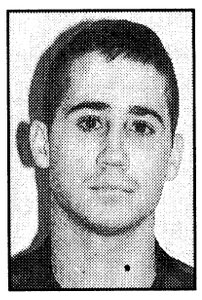
To do that, Rasch draws on his own personal experience — he remembers what it was like to be a new second lieutenant showing up for the Infantry Officer Basic Course.

"That helps me relate to the students," Rasch said.

At some places the student-to-cadre relationship has to be at some distance, but at IOBC, Rasch said, the students are looking for someone to be a role model.

"Again it's not just that instructor thing; it's that role model thing," he said.

As an instructor and role model, Rasch said the most rewarding aspect of his job is watching the transformation of his students. He said they come to the course not knowing what to expect and leave having full confidence in themselves to do their job.



"A brand new second lieutenant who shows up (and) can hardly put his uniform on straight, and (then) 16 weeks later watching that same lieutenant graduating, ready to be a platoon leader, that's rewarding," he said.

Sgt. 1st Class Ike Jackson

Jackson spends his days training Jumpmaster School students, which means the students, once qualified, will be responsible for everything from loading an aircraft to getting all the jumpers out safely. To do that, Jackson said instructors must be skilled in what they teach.

"If you have that good knowledge base to fall back on and prior experiences, I think you can teach from those," Jackson said.

Jackson credits the time he spent with 1st Battalion, 325th Airborne Infantry Regiment, and Jumpmaster School at Fort Bragg, NC., with giving him experience for his job today.

Capt. Robert A. Rasch is the officer instructor of the year.

"That better prepared me to pick up the role of instructor here," he said.

Being a jumpmaster instructor allows Jackson to travel to other posts in the world on mobile training team trips, during which instructors go to other airborne units and teach jumpmaster tactics.

Last year, Jackson made two trips to Italy and one trip to Alaska. He's scheduled to go to Fort Lewis, Wash., and Reno, Nev., in March.

"One of the interesting things (about) the course is being able to travel," Jackson said.

Staff Sgt. Mark A. Channer

Channer's job is to teach sergeants to be better NCOs at the Basic Noncommissioned Officer Course.

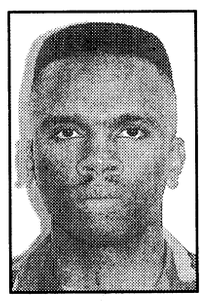
From leadership and training management to air-assault operations, Channer is involved in teaching sergeants to become quality staff sergeants, he said.

"We teach them basically infantry skills," Channer said.

Channer said one of the basics for teaching is caring.

"You have to care about what you are doing and care for your soldiers," he said.

He said he doesn't treat his students like students, he treats them as NCOs. One way of proving that is by giving them his home telephone number and allowing them to call anytime.



"I don't just care about them passing BNCOC, I care about what they want out of the Army," he said.

Without hesitation, Channer said the 5 1/2 years he spent on Kelley Hill with Company D, 2nd Battalion, 18th Infantry Regiment, best prepared him for the job he has today.

Sgt. 1st Class Ike Jackson is the senior enlisted instructor of the year.

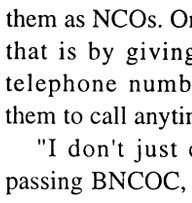
While a squad leader, he was once chosen by his battalion commander to lead his squad on an attack during a live-fire exercise. He said he remembers this as the biggest confidence builder of his military career.

Staff Sgt. Mark A. Channer is the junior enlisted instructor of the year.

"That gave me all the confidence in the world, and I'll never forget that," Channer said.

While with 2nd Bn., 18th Inf. Regt., Channer said he learned to "adapt and overcome" a lot because the unit was always on the go.

"If you can make it on Kelley Hill as an NCO, you can make it anywhere in the Army," he said.



That experience on Kelley Hill, Channer said, has given him the insight to learn things from the NCOs who come here from different units, both stateside and abroad, and take advantage of what they tell him.

"As an instructor, (you're) still learning. Just because you are an instructor doesn't mean you know all," Channer said.

He said listening, teaching and learning from the NCOs is the most interesting part of his job. This goes back to caring about what you are doing, he said.

"If I had my choice," Channer said, "there would be 36 honor graduates."

Candidates achieve more than commission at OCS

By James E. Brownlee
Officer Candidate School

The 3rd Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment (Officer Candidate School), marks a milestone in its history by graduating OCS Class 1-95 in Marshall Auditorium, Thursday.

This graduation marked the end of a cycle that began last October and ended with the commissioning of 110 of Company C's 129 original candidates.

Since their training began, the candidates of OCS Class 1-95 have reached many achievements. These accomplishments include completing the obstacle and confidence courses, the day and night land navigation courses, the Combat Lifesavers Course, the Leadership Reaction Course, the Tactical Leadership Course, a five-mile platoon run, a 12-mile company road march and the OCS challenge. These are just some of the requirements an officer candidate must complete while enrolled in the 14-week course.

To prepare for the physical challenges of OCS, many candidates said they began doing extra physical fitness months before their initial reporting date. The students said they realized in the first few days that putting forth that extra effort before coming to OCS really paid off considerably, especially when it came to doing early-morning PT and the rigors of daily training while in OCS.

"I began really intense training as soon as I received word that I had been accepted," said Senior Officer Candidate Michael D. White. "I began running at least two miles a day and lifting weights every other day to round out my program. I also did a five- to 10-mile road march once or twice a week beginning four weeks out."

As a class, the candidates performed well on their second diagnostic PT test, with a class average of 207 on the extended scale, with 67 of their classmates scoring 290 or better.

"Most of the candidates showed up here in top physical condition, therefore aiding in the progress of our PT program," said Lt. Col. Donald B. Chung, commandant of the Officer Candidate School. "Our goal, while conducting PT, is to continue the excellence from the beginning to the end."

Another factor during OCS is stress.

"Stress in OCS plays a big factor on your personal performance," said Senior Officer Candidate Michael I. Mahara. "So when I began to stress out, I took a deep breath and repeated to myself that this course will not last forever, and it will be over soon; that's how I beat it."

However, some candidates saw stress with a different view.

"While there is some natural stress that is associated with any school environment, the majority of stress here in OCS is self induced," said Senior officer candidate James E. Staton. "In this environment, the candidates try very hard to be something that they are not expected to be, thus bringing on the extra undo stress."

"Performing well under stress is (an) open category that is looked at harder than most, especially while attempting to meet task conditions to standards," said Capt. Donald E. Brown, commander of Company C.

Understanding the rigors of this course, candidates mentally and physically prepared themselves to meet the standards set before them.

Their achievements include placing second and third in the National Infantry Museum run and the contribution of over 300 work hours to the OCS yearly philanthropy, Santa's Castle.

"Our ultimate success lies within our program," Chung said. "Our program is the foundation to our success. Turning out top quality, competitive officers for today's Army is our goal."

Drivers

Before you separate from the service connect with a great career.

It's time for you to get in on a great career--even before you get out of the military. At J.B. Hunt, you can apply to be on the road with us for up to 6 months prior to separation. It's a professional career offering great pay, executive-style benefits and work to be proud of.

We'll help you get the training you need to get started. And, if you have previous military driving experience, we'll evaluate it for credit and a potentially higher starting salary. It all adds up to a career you should connect with right now! Please stop by and visit with our driver recruiter. Applications will be accepted. Bring any employment information.

ANTARCTIC EXPEDITION

Dexter students follow exploration via computer

Explorer reaches mtn summit 66 years after first visit to South Pole

By Jerrie Macintire
Special to The Bayonet©

As explorer Norman Vaughan hotly pursued a cold dream of scaling an icy peak in Antarctica, Dexter School third-graders followed his moves via satellite link and computer.

Thanks to the "real time" computer link, students were there when he suffered setbacks such as snow blindness and blizzards, and they were there when the dream became a reality and Vaughan successfully scaled the mountain named in his honor.

The Fort Benning youngsters wrapped up their three-year, on-line study of the adventure when school officials presented Vaughan with a book written by Dexter children during a recent national press conference in Washington, D.C.

Students wrote the book as a congratulations gift after 89-year-old Vaughan successfully scaled the 10,302-foot mountain. The third-graders, under the direction of teacher Virginia Wilcox, had followed the Antarctica explorers through an educational computer link with the Prodigy service, according to Jerry Christy, curriculum coordinator for science.

Christy, who initiated the interest in the Arctic exploration after personally meeting Vaughan in 1991, joined Wilcox and Dexter School Principal Vicki Rogers, in presenting him with the book, part of which was read during the press conference.

Vaughan's wife and exploration team member read a page from the book written by Maurice Perryman which stated, in part. "The important thing about Norman is he never gave up. He climbed his mountain."

Vaughan reached the summit of "his" mountain Dec. 16, 1994, 66 years after he first explored the frozen South Pole in 1929 with Adm. Richard Byrd.

"It was an exciting moment when he reached the summit, but I did have mixed emotions. It was a letdown in that this was the end of a wonderful adventure," Christy said.

As Vaughan and his team endured blizzards, wore mittens even during meals, and suffered snow blindness and dehydration, Dexter students followed his moves electronically while Wilcox used the adventure to weave together lessons in language arts, math, science and social studies.

For example, when Vaughan suffered a touch of snow blindness, Wilcox's students studied light reflection and refraction in science class and even designed goggles to combat eye strain brought on by the sun's glare.

The students learned a wealth of material from science to language arts to geography, Wilcox said.

"I learned that Antarctica is the only continent that can change shape," said third-grader Christian Deegan. He explained that the constant freezing of water into ice changes the contours of the continent.

"I loved teaching about Antarctica," Wilcox said. "This was such a good way to cover all subject areas."

The exploration also served as material for current events as students observed an adventure that will someday be history, Christy said.

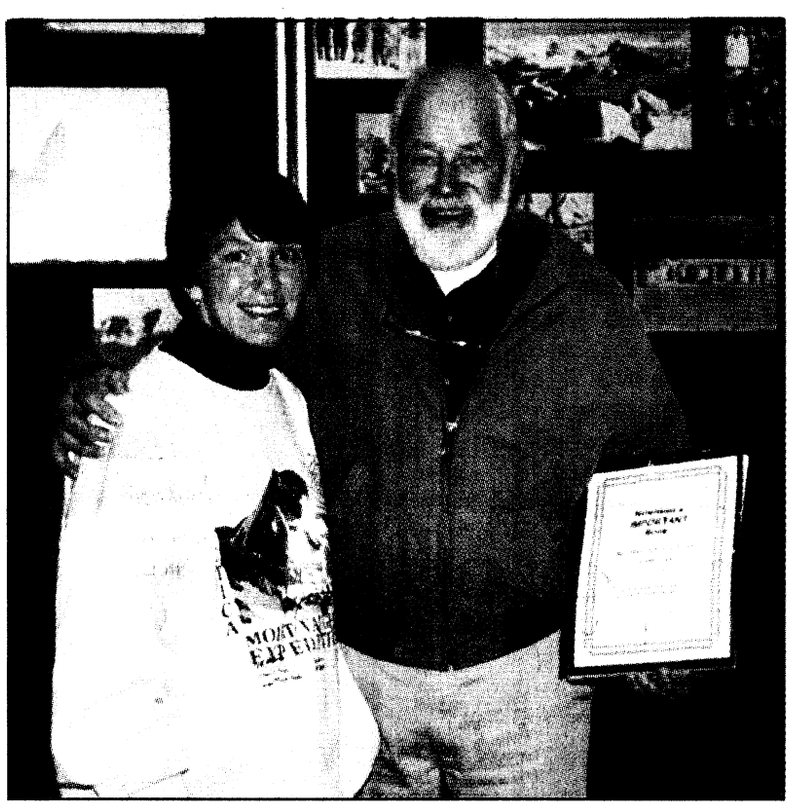
"It made us feel good to be part of it," Rogers said.

While in Washington for Vaughan's press conference, the Fort Benning educators were treated to a special tour of the nation's capital. In addition, they spent the day with Vaughan and his wife while touring the area.

Wilcox also received an autographed photo of Vaughan inscribed, "Virginia: Dare to Fail."

Wilcox said she would miss following Vaughan and his team of explorers as they provide lessons on "history in the making" for students.

This isn't the first time Vaughan has been involved in historic adventures; he chose the job of chief dog driver over a Harvard education as he signed on with Byrd's Antarctic exploration in 1929. It was during that adventure when Byrd saw the remote Queen Maud Mountain range and named peaks for his teammates.



Vaughan detailed this 1929 mission in a book "With Byrd at the Bottom of the World."

Following that famous expedition, Vaughan made dog teams and exploration his life; as a World War II soldier, he directed dog sled search and rescue missions including one involving 26 airmen trapped on the Greenland ice sheet.

Explorer Norman Vaughan and Dexter School teacher Virginia Wilcox display the book by Dexter School students at a press conference in Washington, D.C.

In addition to service as an Army colonel and historic explorer, Vaughan competed in the Iditarod dog sled race 13 times.

He is an author and archeologist who said, "Retirement doesn't necessarily mean spending your days in a rocking chair."

As Vaughan reached the summit of the mountain, he said by satellite telephone, "The mountain is spectacular. I can't imagine being in a more exciting place."

Vaughan's wife and team member Carolyn Muegge-Vaughan said, "The whole mountain was Norman's birthday cake, with the snow being the frosting."

The National Geographic Society, one sponsor of the expedition, will present a television special on the event April 2 at 9 p.m.

Explorer expresses appreciation atop Mount Vaughan in Antarctica

"By climbing this mountain for my 89th birthday, I dared to fail and met success. I have fulfilled a 65-year old dream.

I am grateful to the people who have put me here. I could never have gotten here without Carolyn, my wife, especially, who I am proud to say is standing beside me here now celebrating this moment. To my sponsors, to Vern Tejas and the Mount Vaughan Antarctic team here and at home, to all the volunteers and supporters, to friends world-wide and mostly to my family.

I am now ready for my next challenge.

A message I wish to bring to everyone is to dream big and "dare to fail."

This climb has been a tribute to Adm. Richard E. Byrd, Dr. Laurence McKinley Gould, and to my two good friends Edward E. Goodale and Freddy Crockett who drove dogs with me here in the Antarctic. Standing here on top of Mount Vaughan, we can see Mount Goodale to the north and Mount Crockett to the south. In 1929, we saw these mountains for the first time.

The climb is also in tribute to the tenacious spirit of the Antarctic sled dogs who never gave up. They have been my inspiration. Our dogs couldn't come this year. But Zippy is here to pay tribute to the end of the era of the sled dog in the Antarctic as set forth in the new protocol of the Antarctic treaty. Zippy (a stuffed toy husky) also commemorates the four dogs who wandered off after the crash of our DC-6 last year — Sticker, Magoo, Pudge and Pandy.

I will miss the dogs of the Antarctic. Goodbye you wonderful huskies. May your memory live forever in our hearts. You always did what was asked of you no matter how tough it was and often sacrificed your lives for man's quest at the bottom of the world. I salute you, and I toast a new era of worldwide scientific cooperation for the next 50 years here in the Antarctic. May it always stay pristine and become the world's greatest park!"

Parent Academy

to provide tips on raising children

Fort Benning Schools

The Parent Academy, a weekend seminar for Fort Benning parents of children up to age 18, will take place at Faith School Feb. 24 and 25.

Last year, more than 300 parents attended the two-day seminar that covered parenting topics related to children ages newborn to 15. This year's Parent Academy will be expanded to include parenting issues from birth through high school.

The Parent Academy is free and is open to all Fort Benning parents and personnel. Free child care will also be provided for children aged 6 weeks to 11 years of age.

Space in the Parent Academy will be limited. Reservations will be required. Reservations will be taken on a first-come, first -served basis and can be made at any one of the seven Fort Benning Schools and at the Fort Benning Schools Administration Office on Custer Road. Registration will take place from 8:15 to 9:15 a.m. each morning until all spaces are filled. No telephone reservations will be accepted.

The Parent Academy is built around topics identified by Fort Benning parents. More than 200 Fort Benning Schools' parents responded to a questionnaire last month. The Parent Academy sessions have been designed to cover the topics that were of greatest interest.

Barbara Coloroso, an internationally recognized speaker in the areas of parenting, discipline and nonviolent conflict resolution, will return to Fort Benning to share her knowledge and expertise.

Following a spaghetti supper Feb. 24, she will present a keynote address to kick off the academy sessions scheduled from 8 a.m. to noon Feb. 25.

Saturday morning, parents will choose three sessions. Choices include such topics as discipline, chores, homework, encouraging creativity, technology, stages of development of middle school students, high school, college and career planning and many more.

School's art program wins national award

By Jerrie Macintire
Special to The Bayonet©

The art program at Faith Middle School was nationally recognized recently for outstanding achievement, according to a news release by the National Art Education Association.

The NAEA Program Standards Award, one of the most prestigious awards a school can receive, recognizes the variety, quality of instruction and extracurricular activities of the Faith School art program under the direction of teacher Gloria Loar, according to Ken Stettes, assistant principal.

"The award is a well-deserved honor for Gloria Loar as well as Faith School, and it is reflective of the quality art program we have," Stettes said.

The art program at Faith follows an interdisciplinary teaching style which ties art to academic lessons, Loar said.

For example, while students study primitive Indians in history class, they find themselves up to their elbows in moist clay during art class as they recreate the ancient process of creative expression through functional pots. Students also study disciplines such as print making, painting and the craft of puppetry, she said.

Loar's classes just completed a study on puppet making for drama, and presented some classic plays including "Snow White" and "The Wizard of Oz" to some Fort Benning elementary students.

"Sharing this common experience enriches both the grade levels," said Loar, who appreciates the support for innovative programs such as this mutually beneficial affiliation between elementary and middle school students.

"The Fort Benning administration has always been supportive of arts and music. That's part of why I love working here," Loar said.

The NAEA, which presented the award as well as a walnut plaque to Faith School, uses the Principles and Standards for School Arts Programs publication to evaluation schools. The NAEA judges art programs across the nation in seven areas: organization, curriculum, personnel, scheduling, facilities, materials and equipment and budget.

NAEA President Mark Hansen said, "On behalf of the NAEA Board of Directors, I congratulate you, your administration, school board and the community and the students you so ably serve."

The NAEA Association, founded in 1947, is the largest professional art education association in the world. Members come from elementary and secondary schools, administrations, arts councils, museum educators and university professors throughout the United States and 66 foreign countries.

According to the NAEA, its mission is to advance art education through enhancing knowledge, professional development, services and leadership.

'Troops to Teachers' expands eligibility

By Stephen Barrett
American Forces Information Service

Thanks to the 1995 Defense Authorization Act, veterans discharged after Oct. 1, 1990, are now eligible for the Department of Defense's Teacher and Teacher's Aide Placement Program.

Program officials said the change allows thousands of service members discharged during the drawdown to apply for the Troops to Teachers program. Previously, the program was open only to members leaving the military after Jan. 19, 1994.

Normally service members have up to a year after discharge to apply for the program. However, military personnel discharged between Oct. 1, 1990, and Jan. 18, 1994, have until Oct. 5 to apply.

Troops to Teachers gives qualified applicants a chance to use their knowledge and military experience in teaching at America's elementary and secondary schools. Its goal is to help finance teacher certification training for departing service members, DoD and Department of Energy civilians and displaced defense contractor employees.

Once certified, these teachers and teacher's aides receive help finding jobs in schools serving low-income families with teacher shortages.

Service members must have six continuous years of active duty, an honorable discharge and at least a bachelor's degree to qualify for the teacher program. Teacher aide applicants must have an associate's degree to enroll. Military applicants not meeting education requirements at the time of separation may qualify by earning a degree within five years of separation.

Program officials said the change allows thousands of service members discharged during the drawdown to apply for the Troops to Teachers program

Civilians must face employment termination from the drawdown or a base closure. This includes not only DoD and Department of Energy employees, but also displaced scientists and engineers of defense contractors. They have 60 days following termination to apply.

DoD provides schools grants up to $50,000 for hiring participants for five consecutive years. Payments are annual and designed to help pay a new teacher's basic salary. The placement program augments schools needing teachers. However, program participants cannot replace teachers already employed, and there is no guarantee of further school employment.

Applications go through the Defense Activity for Nontraditional Education Support, better known as DANTES, in Pensacola, Fla., for review and placement. That activity looks for applicants strong in mathematics and science, but will not reject applicants from other educational specialties.

Qualified applicants may also receive a one-time stipend of up to $5,000. This stipend must offset teacher certification costs. In return, the participants must agree to accept five-year employment in a school serving low-income families.

Service members departing under the 15-year retirement, Voluntary Separation Incentive or Special Separation Benefit programs are ineligible for the stipend.

For more information, call (800) 452-6616.

SERMONS FROM SCIENCE

Analytical show offers religious beliefs

USAIC Chaplains' Office

Many people find the idea of science pointing to a creator difficult to swallow if not outright contradictory. Yet Dean Ortner's intent for Sermons from Science programs is to present clear, logical evidence for a creator who is involved in our daily lives.

Controlling more than 2,000 pounds of delicate scientific equipment, Ortner employs scientific principles to produce demonstrations such as metal floating in air, music played on a beam of light and a cry that shatters glass. However, Ortner points out, "This is not hocus-pocus; it is natural law, as discovered by science. I give a scientific demonstration, not a seance."

Ortner, who began taking university courses at age 15, has presented the Sermons from Science demonstrations at more than 600 U.S. military bases, as well as all three military academies, Camp David and some of the more remote outposts of Alaska. His science programs have won praise from U.S. military chaplains, base commanders and generals at military installations across the country.

The Sermons from Science programs have also been presented to standing-room-only crowds at the 1972 and 1976 Summer Olympic Games and at the San Francisco, Seattle, New York, Montreal and Spokane World's Fairs.

Of the 700 exhibits at the New York World's Fair, Time magazine selected Sermons from Science as one of the best in a listing of their choices for the top 20 attractions. In Montreal, the exhibit was ranked in the top five attractions for capacity crowds, and was asked by the mayor of Montreal to remain open after the fair closed.

The fascination with this program lies in the combination Sermons from Science offers. It is readily received by unchurched individuals because of today's intense appetite for scientific knowledge, and Ortner's approach of blending the Gospel with science conveys his message without giving the listener the idea he or she is sitting in a church service.

Ortner said his message is, "Natural and spiritual laws we cannot make. Neither can we alter them. We must discover, follow and obey them or suffer the consequences."

Ortner demonstrates this by standing on an electric coil and allowing 1 million volts of ultra-high frequency electricity to surge through his body. "No other illustration shows so vividly how one can be in tune or out of tune with God's physical laws," he said. "If you are not in tune with God's spiritual laws, you cannot tap into his source of power."

Sermons from Science stage demonstrations have entertained nearly 6 million people. Ortner's science programs provide demonstrations of the power and design of natural law.

Ortner presents the Sermons from Science series as an outreach of the Moody Bible Institute of Chicago. The platform demonstrations are continually updated. Ortner has been the principal lecturer since 1973. Many of the principles presented in the live demonstrations can be found in Sermons from Science films from the Moody Institute of Science, also an outreach of Moody Bible Institute.

Sermon to be conducted in Marshall Auditorium

USAIC Chaplains' Office

One of the more popular features of the Seattle, New York, Montreal and Spokane World's Fairs will be presented at Marshall Auditorium Feb. 12 through 15 at 7 p.m.

Armed with a stage full of scientific and electronic equipment, Dean Ortner, affiliated with the Moody Institute of Science, will present a series of science demonstrations called Sermons from Science.

A different program will be presented each of the four evenings, and the demonstrations will include music played on a beam of light, a voice modulated on a laser beam, and 1 million volts of electricity passing harmlessly through his body.

Ortner has a degree in biology from Moorhead State University and served on the faculty of North Dakota State University for three years in entomology while doing research in bio-nucleonics.

Admission to these demonstrations is open to the public without charge.

For information, contact Chaplain (Maj.) David Moran at 545-7513.

Spirit of Christmas lives on every day

By W.D. Smith
USAIC Chaplains' Office

reflections

More than a month has passed since Christmas. The season is a memory and our sense of peace on Earth, goodwill to mankind has passed as well. We began the day after New Year's breaking our resolutions and entrenching ourselves in our own defenses to protect our vulnerabilities and insecurities.

While we may wish to have the spirit of Christmas and the newness of the New Year with us all year long, the truth is that joy and peace are but a temporary moment in a hurting, frightened, lonely world. The question creeps through the closets of our mind, "Is this all there is ... to life?"

Wouldn't it be wonderful if everyone could follow the Biblical principle of loving your neighbor as yourself. The glitch is that we cannot love our neighbor since we do not know how to truly love ourselves.

That immature little boy or that adolescent girl is in all of us. Each of us can feel inadequate, valueless and insignificant. Each one of us builds our defense for these emotional hurts.

We may try constant performance and glorious achievements, but we can never perform and achieve enough to counter the thirst for self-worth. We may try love, pleasure, power or any number of things. Yet, we continue to fall short and our efforts are insufficient to fully validate our need for purpose.

The consequence of our activities is that we feel we cannot be ourselves, for being ourselves would expose who we really are and that is dangerous.

If we do not like who we are, then we believe others will not like us either. So we live with emotional defenses — defenses that not only cloud what others see, they prevent us from fully seeing others' hurts and feelings of inadequacy.

The result — we do not understand or love ourselves, and therefore we cannot understand or love others as well.

Let's go back and remind ourselves what Christmas is and what it is not. It is not about gifts under a tree or lively songs or bright decorations. God the father gave us the gift of his son — Jesus of Nazareth.

Jesus came as the Christ so that we might have life more abundantly than we can get from any other source. Jesus came not only to reunite us with God by paying for our sins, he came to give us a new meaning for life.

This new meaning for life accents our created values. We have purpose and are significant because he made us. This new meaning also accentuates God's love.

Because of Jesus the savior coming to Earth and dying for our sins, God forgives us, accepts us and wants us to accept him.

When we receive God's forgiveness and learn to accept ourselves, we can learn to accept and love others as we love ourselves.

This is the spirit of Christmas, and it can come any day of the year.

chapel notes

Protestant Women of the Chapel — Protestant Women of the Chapel is offering a variety of programs during February.

They begin Thursday with a special program, "Embrace the love of God," by Chris Sadler followed by Bible studies, "Experiencing God" by Blackaby, "Walking with Christ," by Navigator Press, "What happens when we pray for our families?" by Evelyn Christenson, "Becoming a woman of excellence," by Cynthia Heald and "Covenant" by Precepts Ministries.

The group will welcome Pat Cerjan, wife of retired Lt. Gen. Paul Cerjan, March 2, when she will lead a discussion on "The Christian military wife."

Cerjan will also stay for the PWOC retreat March 3 through 5 at Florence Marina.

The group meets every Thursday at 9:30 a.m. in Building 2527, located off Indianhead Road and Thorson Street.

For more information, call Cindy Russell at 561-3348.

Bible study — A new Bible study titled "Genesis, The Book of Beginnings," is now offered at Fort Benning Sunday School in Building 2521, the Religious Education Center. This study is designed for adults and taught by Lt. Col. Bobby Little. The class meets from 9:30 to 10:30 a.m.

Topics for discussion are the beginning of man, marriage, sin, science and history, music and the arts; the beginning of relationships of God to man, man to God, man to man, family relationships; and much more. Everyone is encouraged to start the new year in the right way by attending this or other Bible studies.

For information, call 685-1390 or 545-4715.

TAX GUIDE

SJA tax office to give free help

By Karen S. Morarie
Bayonet staff writer

Fort Benning's Tax Office, a free full-service tax assistance office for all military identification card holders, will open for business Tuesday.

The office will be located in Building 2640, Soldiers' Plaza, and will be open 8:30 a.m. to 4 p.m., Monday through Friday.

The office is being run by the Staff Judge Advocate's office, with tax preparer volunteers from Army Community Service.

Workers are expecting to file 5,000 to 6,000 returns this year, according to 1st Lt. Mike Roberts, the legal assistance officer in charge of the office. Most returns can be filed electronically, he said, and customers can save the $60 to $70 fees most civilian preparers charge for electronic returns.

"Most people can get their refunds in about 10 days," he said, "although the IRS won't guarantee it in under three weeks.

"We did more than 4,500 (returns) last year; and, with more volunteers and a bigger site, we expect to do more this year," he said. "The demand has always been there, but in the past, we haven't had the staff to help everyone who wanted it."

Roberts said the office will be staffed by three to five volunteers every day, and military members, family members and retirees can use the services on a walk-in basis.

Simple returns, such as the 1040EZ, can be processed in 10 to 15 minutes, Roberts said.

"That's for preparation," he said. "We can't predict the waiting time, because it depends on how many people are there. We're expecting our peak business to be in the first three to five weeks the office is open, so the wait will probably be longer then."

Roberts said the office can prepare virtually all returns, although extremely complex returns, such as those involving estate issues, will not be handled there.

"Those returns can take three to four hours to prepare," he said, "and we can better allocate our time to help more young soldiers with the simpler returns."

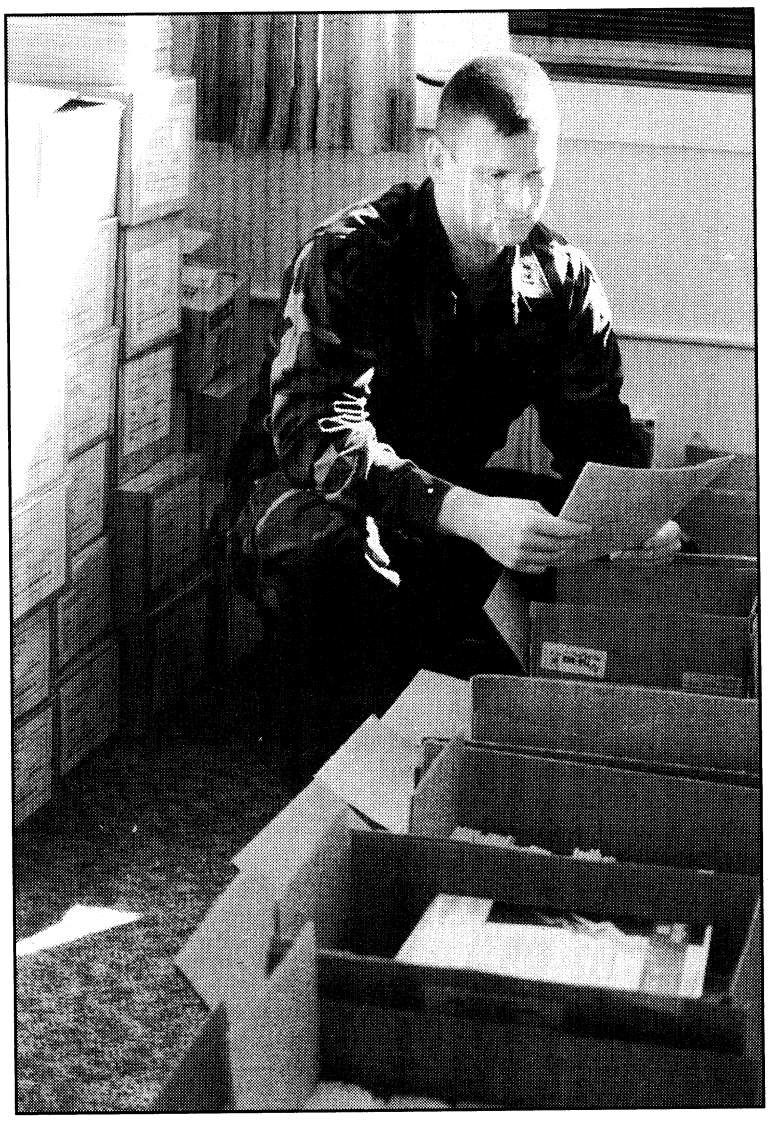
He suggested that people with extremely complicated returns could go to the weekend sessions of the tax office, which will take place from 9 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. at the Post Exchange at the Main Mall the first Saturday of each month through April.

"Those sessions will be staffed entirely by Legal Assistance attorneys," Roberts said, "who can answer more complex tax questions."

Those who expect a refund from their returns can choose to have the money deposited directly in their bank accounts, Roberts said.

Federal tax forms are available at the office, as are most state tax forms.

Roberts said documents customers should bring with them include:



- W-2 forms from all employers
- Form 1099 from banks showing interest earned
- Social Security numbers for every family member more than 1 year old, including a nonworking spouse
- Employer identification number or Social Security number and address of child-care provider (if applicable).
- Detailed itemized deductions
- Mortgage interest statement
- Power of attorney, if filing for absent soldier
- A copy of last year's federal income tax return, if available
- Bank name, branch and account number.

Those filing joint returns should bring their spouses with them, he said.

The IRS will not accept any returns using a Leave and Earnings Statement or end-of-year pay stub instead of W-2 until after Feb. 15, Roberts said.

"There were many people last year who filed fraudulent returns in the first few weeks of the tax season," he said, "although that wasn't a problem in the military. A lot of people were producing fraudulent end-of-year pay stubs on their computers."

Roberts said he encourages all soldiers to file, since many who would qualify for refunds often don't claim them.

Taxes for military may be especially complicated

American Forces Information Service

Figuring out your federal taxes can be confusing, Internal Revenue Service officials said, but it can be even more so if you are in the military.

With all of the various pays and allowances, along with moving, temporary duty, deductions and time spent in combat zones, doing your federal taxes could become a nightmare, said IRS officials. Some pays received are taxable, like re-enlistment bonuses and retirement pay, while others aren't, like clothing allowances and veterans benefits.

Generally, the following military pay is taxable, said IRS officials:

- Active duty pay
- Re-enlistment bonuses
- Reserve training pay
- Service academy pay
- Military retirement pay based on length of service or age
- Lump-sum payments upon separation or release to inactive duty
- Special pay for hazardous or foreign duty
- Pay received by retired personnel who are serving as instructors in Junior ROTC programs.

IRS officials said items generally not taxable include:

- Department of Veterans Affairs benefits
- Basic quarters allowance
- Variable housing allowance
- Basic allowance for subsistence
- Certain disability retirement pensions
- Uniform allowance
- Family separation pay
- Benefits under Servicemen's Group Life Insurance
- Forfeited pay, but not fines.

In addition, said IRS officials, the Persian Gulf area continues to be considered a combat zone. This affects federal taxes for service members stationed there during 1994, tax officials said. Under the tax law, enlisted members can exclude military pay from income, while officers can exclude the first $500 of pay per month. Also, additional time is allowed to file federal taxes. Specifics on the Desert Storm area are available in IRS Publication 945.

For more information or assistance on military pay and taxes, check with the unit or installation tax office, the local IRS office or call the IRS, toll-free (800) 829-1040.

Military Publications

The Internal Revenue Service offers two publication that deal solely with military members and their federal taxes. They are IRS Publication 3, Tax Information for Military Personnel; and Publication 945, Tax Information for Those Affected by Operation Desert Storm. For copies of these free publications, call toll-free (800) 829-3676 or write to:

Free Forms, Publications

The Internal Revenue Service publishes over 100 different brochures, each on a separate tax topic. Also, IRS offers forms to cover every tax action that you can think of.

IRS Publication 910, Guide to Free Tax Services, lists all available publications and forms, as well as tax assistance programs and where to go for help. For a free copy of the IRS's most popular publication, call toll-free (800) 829-3676 or write to:

Election Campaign

If you would like to contribute $3 to the 1996 presidential election campaign, all you have to do is mark the block on your federal tax return.

Internal Revenue Service officials stressed this does not affect your refund or any taxes owed. Also, any monies left over after the campaign, will be returned to the U.S. Treasury.

Change Your Address

Last year federal income tax refund checks worth $54 million couldn't be delivered because of incorrect addresses. This is up from $50 million in 1993.

Internal Revenue Service officials said this could be because of individuals moving and not providing their new addresses to IRS or putting the wrong addresses on their tax returns.

Let IRS know your new address, IRS officials said, because if they send you mail concerning your tax return or an audit at your old address and you haven't changed your file address, you are still liable.

An easy way to change your address with IRS is by filing IRS Form 8822, "Change of Address." For a free copy of the form, call toll-free (800) 829-3676.

1994 Tax Highlights

A number of tax changes took effect in 1994 that may affect your federal tax filing. These include major changes to the Earned Income Tax Credit, Social Security and equivalent Tier 1 railroad retirement benefits that may be taxed at a higher rate and moving expenses.

IRS Publication 553, "Highlights of 1994 Tax Changes," provides updated information and how it may affect you. For a free copy, call toll-free (800) 829-3676 or write to:

IRS
Forms Distribution Center
P.O. Box 25866
Richmond, VA 23289

Charitable Contributions

Changes in the tax laws affect how you claim charitable contributions, said Internal Revenue Service officials. One major change is that a canceled check is not acceptable for donations over $250, said IRS officials. You must also have written verification from the charity.

For more information on changes in charitable contributions and other areas affected by the tax law revisions, call toll-free (800) 829-3676 and request a free copy of IRS Publication 553, "Highlights of 1994 Tax Changes."

Benefits for Disabled

In some cases, certain benefits and tax credits are available for taxpayers and their families with disabilities.

Internal Revenue Service officials said things like work-related expenses and medical expenses may be deductible.

If you have specific questions, call toll-free (800) 829-1040. For a free copy of IRS Publication 907, "Tax Information for Persons with Disabilities", call toll-free (800) 829-3676 or write to:

IRS defines taxable income

American Forces Information Service

Salaries, unemployment compensation, tips and lottery winnings are considered income for federal tax purposes, said Internal Revenue Service officials. On the other hand, child support, military allowances and certain portions of Social Security benefits generally are not.

Exactly what constitutes taxable income can sometimes be confusing. What is considered income is more than just what you receive in your paycheck. For example, severance pay, barter income, death benefits in excess of $5,000, jury pay and income from illegal activities are taxable.

Taxable income includes:

- Wages, salaries, tips;
- Social Security benefits (above limitation);
- Royalties;
- Interest;
- Cancellation of debts by a financial institution, government agency or credit union;
- Cash and noncash prizes;
- Alimony;
- Certain state and local income tax refunds; and
- Recovery of items deducted in a previous year.

Exactly what constitutes taxable income can sometimes be confusing. What is considered income is more than just what you receive in your paycheck. For example, severance pay, barter income, death benefits in excess of $5,000, jury pay and income from illegal activities are taxable

Nontaxable income includes:

- Child support;
- Certain income earned overseas;
- Certain foster care payments;
- Interest on certain U.S. savings bonds, if used for educational purposes;
- Alimony, if not deducted by the payer; and
- Portions of Social Security, annuity and pension benefits.

For specific or additional information on taxable and nontaxable income, check with the local installation or unit tax office, or contact the nearest IRS office. Another option, said IRS officials, is to call the IRS assistance office at toll-free (800) 829-1040.

Individuals living overseas may want to check with the IRS office at the nearest U.S. embassy or consulate, or IRS' international assistance office in Washington at (202) 874-1460 or write to:

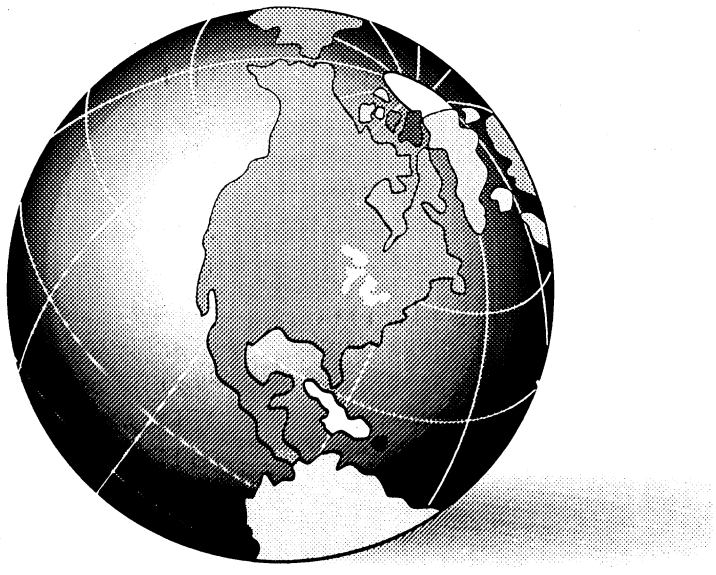
Help available for those living overseas



American Forces Information Service

Living and working overseas and have questions concerning your federal income tax?

Don't worry, said Internal Revenue Service officials. If the unit or installation tax assistance office can't help you, the U.S. embassy or consulate in the country where you are living may have an IRS office. If not, IRS has a special telephone number and address in the United States for personnel overseas.

In addition, IRS specialists travel to several foreign countries during the tax filing season to help people with their taxes, added IRS officials. This year, IRS tax assisters plan to visit about 140 cities in 60 different countries.

Individuals living abroad are usually given a two-month extension to file their federal tax returns, said IRS officials. However, whatever taxes are due should be paid by the April 17 deadline or penalties and interest begin accumulating on the amount owed.

An additional two-month extension may be granted case by case, said IRS officials. To request the second extension, IRS must receive Form 2688, "Application for Additional Extension of Time to File U.S. Individual Income Tax Return," by Aug. 15.

Specific information on extension policies is available through the installation tax office and IRS.

To ask specific tax questions, the IRS telephone number is (202) 874-1460 or write to:

IRS offers free pamphlets

American Forces Information Service

The Internal Revenue Service wants to make paying federal taxes as easy as possible. That's why it publishes more than 100 free pamphlets for your information.

Each publication covers one tax topic in depth, said IRS officials. Step-by-step instructions are included, when and wherever necessary. Some publications are available in Spanish.

Three booklets IRS recommended each taxpayer check before filing 1994 federal tax return are Publication 1, Your Rights as a Taxpayer; Publication 17, Your Federal Income Tax; and new this year, Publication 553, Highlights of 1994 Tax Changes.

Some of the most requested IRS publications include:

- Publication 3, Tax Information for Military Personnel
- Publication 334, Tax Guide for Small Business
- Publication 448, Federal Estate and Gift Taxes
- Publication 501, Exemptions, Standard Deduction and Filing Information;
- Publication 502, Medical and Dental Expenses
- Publication 503, Child and Dependent Care Credit
- Publication 504, Tax Information for Divorced or Separated Individuals
- Publication 505, Tax Withholding and Estimated Tax
- Publication 521, Moving Expenses
- Publication 523, Selling Your Home
- Publication 524, Credit for the Elderly or the Disabled
- Publication 525, Taxable and Nontaxable Income
- Publication 531, Reporting Income From Tips
- Publication 547, Nonbusiness Disasters, Casualties and Thefts
- Publication 554, Tax Information for Older Americans
- Publication 583, Taxpayers Starting a Business;
- Publication 584, Nonbusiness Disaster, Casualty and Theft Loss Workbook
- Publication 587, Business Use of Your Home
- Publication 590, Individual Retirement Arrangements
- Publication 596, Earned Income Credit
- Publication 901, United States Tax Treaties
- Publication 910, Guide to Free Tax Services
- Publication 919, Is My Withholding Correct for 1995?
- Publication 936, Home Mortgage Interest Deduction
- Publication 945, Tax Information for Those Affected by Operation Desert Storm.

Some publications may be available at installation tax offices, local libraries, post offices and banks.

Electronic return may be fastest route to your money

American Forces Information Service

The Internal Revenue Service offers several quick ways to file your federal tax returns.

Of course, said IRS officials, you can still file a paper return by mail, and if you're expecting a refund, receive it in about six weeks.

However, if you're looking for a faster way, technology offers several alternatives you can try, tax officials added. These range from electronic filing to easy-to-use personal computer tax programs.

Filing electronically offers a number of benefits, said IRS officials. Fewer mistakes, like math errors and missing schedules, are found because three separate checks for accuracy are made before processing begins. If mistakes are found, you will be notified within a few days so you can correct them. You can file early and wait until April 17 to pay any taxes due. Also, electronic filing gives you written confirmation IRS received your federal tax return.

You must use an IRS-accepted electronic filer to send your tax return to IRS. To protect you and prevent unauthorized access to tax information, IRS requires filers to use identification and authentication techniques, including passwords, said IRS officials. Also, tax professionals who use the electronic filing system must submit a set of fingerprints with their applications and authorize IRS to run a credit check.

Once you have selected an electronic filer, the information is transmitted to IRS. If the tax return is correct, it is accepted and stored on tape, and the Treasury Department finance centers receive refund information. They then process the refund checks or account deposits.

Tax preparer and electronic filing services and fees vary, depending on what you need and your location, said IRS officials. Some things to look for when shopping for a tax preparer or electronic filer:

• Choose a tax preparer who will be around months after you have filed and can answer any questions that may come up concerning your return.

• Avoid an individual who promises you a larger tax refund than other preparers can get you.

• Don't hire an individual who bases his fee on a percentage of your refund.

• Make sure you get a copy of everything that goes in as part of your tax package, including every form and schedule.

• Never sign a blank tax form.

• If your taxes are complex, consider hiring a certified public accountant.

The main thing to remember when having someone else do your taxes, said IRS officials, is that, bottom line, you are responsible for everything that is in or not in your tax return — just as you would be if you did your taxes yourself.

If you have a personal computer at home, said IRS officials, another option for filing your federal tax return is to get one of the many IRS-approved tax programs available at local computer stores. Many of these programs print out only the lines that have entries, omitting blank lines and spaces, resulting in a one- or two-page tax return.

About 4 million people filed tax returns using a 1040PC program during the last filing season, said IRS officials.

If you have any questions concerning electronic filing, contact the local IRS office or call toll-free (800) 829-1040.

Many states collect taxes

American Forces Information Services

When sitting down to do federal income tax returns, remember many state and local taxes are also due.

Deadlines vary from state to state, and state tax rules vary widely, IRS officials said. For example, some states tax military pay, some tax only a portion, and others exempt the entire amount. Some states require service members to file a return even though their pay is exempt.

Service members with second jobs, spouses who work and members with some type of nonmilitary income may have to file a return for the state they're in as well as for their home-of-record state, said IRS officials.

Alaska, Florida, Nevada, New Hampshire, South Dakota, Texas, Washington and Wyoming don't have individual state income taxes. This doesn't mean they don't have some type of tax revenue system, however. For example, New Hampshire taxes income from interest and dividends.

Some state tax questions can be answered by local installation tax assistance offices. In addition, local libraries may be able to provide some help. For further information and forms concerning state taxes, contact:

Electronic Tax Filing

If you are looking for ways to file your federal tax return, Internal Revenue Service officials said you might want to investigate electronic filing or computer-generated forms.

More than 14 million people filed their 1993 federal tax returns electronically, said IRS officials. Good points about electronic filing include a refund within three weeks, if you are due one; if there are mistakes on the tax return, you have a chance to correct them before penalties and interest payments would kick in; and filing now but not paying any money due until April 17.

If you have a personal computer, you may want to try filing your federal tax return using an IRS-approved tax program, many of which can be found at local computer stores. These programs generally print out just the blocks you have filled in.

If you would like more information on these options, check with your local IRS office or call toll free (800) 829-1040.

IRS PRO

Have problems with the Internal Revenue Service you haven't been able to take care of through normal channels?

That's why the IRS Problem Resolution Office was set up, said IRS officials, to help taxpayers with tax problems that just won't go away.

There are some types of problems that the office can't handle, like Freedom of Information Act requests and criminal investigations, as well as appeals of technical determinations in audits. However, said IRS officials, the Problem Resolution Office can suspend agency actions under certain circumstances, look into your refund status and deal with problems that exist between you and an IRS employee.

For more information on the Problem Resolution Office, call toll-free (800) 829-3676 and request a free copy of IRS Publication 1546, "How to Use the Problem Resolution Program of the MS."

Final Return

The Internal Revenue Service said filing a federal tax return may be the last thing on your mind when someone dies, but certain steps must be taken.

If the person dies between January and April and had not filed for the previous year, a return must be filed for that year. However, said IRS officials, one also must be filed for the year the individual died.

For specific details on this subject, call IRS at toll-free (800) 829-1040. In addition, IRS Publication 559, "Survivors, Executors and Administrators" addresses the topic.

Filing Status

When you sit down to do your federal tax return, one item that may make a big difference in how much tax you pay is your filing status.

Some people have no choice, said Internal Revenue Service officials. For example, individuals who are single with no dependents must file as single taxpayers. However, married couples have the option to file a joint return or two separate returns. The other filing options are head of household and qualifying widow or widower.

Information on filing options is included in your federal tax package, said tax officials. If you have specific questions, check with the local Internal Revenue Service office or call toll-free (800) 829-1040.

IRS Publication 17, Your Federal Income Tax, explains the tax process. A complete listing of available free publications can be found in IRS Publication 910, "Guide to Free Tax Services."

More qualify for EIC

American Forces Information Service

More people now qualify for the Earned Income Tax Credit, thanks to changes in the 1994 federal tax laws.

Internal Revenue Service officials said the changes raised the income level to qualify for the tax credit, making it available to more people. In addition, people without children can now use the credit.

The credit, explained Internal Revenue Service officials, is based on individual income and the number of qualifying children living with the taxpayer(s) for more than six months of the year or for the entire year, if the child is a foster child.

Prerequisites to claim the credit, which could be worth up to $2,528 if you have two or more children, or $2,038 with one, include:

- A qualifying child, which is based on relationship, residency and age
- Earned income of less than $23,755 with one qualifying child and less than $25,296 for two or more children
- Must file the tax return for the 12-month period
- Live in the United States.

The Department of Defense again tried unsuccessfully to get the residency requirement lifted. However, IRS officials said, some service members may be able to claim the credit. If the service member is living overseas but the family remained in the United States for at least six months of the year, they may qualify for the credit.

IRS officials said military personnel who are thinking of claiming the credit must remember to add all nontaxable income to their income. Items such as quarters allowance, basic subsistence allowance and combat pay are all considered income when it comes to determining this credit.

Items such as quarters allowance, basic subsistence allowance and combat pay are all considered income when it comes to determining this credit

If you have a qualifying child, you have two options for claiming the Earned Income Tax Credit, said IRS officials. You may claim the credit when you file your federal tax return or you may decide to spread it out over the year, receiving monthly payments.

If you decide to take it each month, you must fill out a new Form W-5, "Earned Income Credit Advance Payment Certificate," and give it to your employer. Remember, IRS officials stressed, if your situation changes and you no longer qualify for the credit, you must file a new Form W-5 to stop payment.

For the first time, individuals who don't have children may claim the Earned Income Tax Credit, said IRS officials. This is one change in the 1994 tax laws.

To claim the credit if you don't have children, you must meet certain prerequisites. These include:

- You must be between the ages of 25 and 65
- You must have earned less than $9,000
- You must have lived at least six months in the United States
- You must not be claimed as a dependent by another taxpayer.

You may be qualified to take this credit — when you file your federal taxes or in monthly payments — even if you owe no taxes and nothing was withheld from your income, said IRS officials. However, you must file a federal tax return to claim it, even if you otherwise don't have to file.

IRS Publication 596, Earned Income Credit, explains everything you need to know about claiming the credit. Two other IRS publications may help you with the credit. They are IRS Publication 501, Exemptions, Standard Deduction and Filing Information; and Publication 503, Child and Dependent Care Expenses.

IRS gives guidelines for error-free return

American Forces Information Service

Take a little extra time to check your federal tax return before you file it, Internal Revenue Service, officials said. These few extra minutes may help you find mistakes that could cost you money and time.

For example, missing attachments or no signature could find the tax package back in your mailbox, returned from IRS because it could not process the return. Mistakes could cost you more money in fines and penalties if you owe IRS money, or they could slow your check if you have a refund coming.

IRS officials said your chances of filing an error-free federal tax return improve if you follow some simple guidelines. These include:

• Make sure your correct name and Social Security number are on each form and schedule.

• Make sure the name and Social Security number for each of your dependents age 1 and older appears on the tax return.

• Double-check your math.

• Double-check you entered correct figures on each line and properly marked each box.

• Make sure you claim the correct standard deductions.

• Double-check you used the right tax from the tax tables.

• Make sure you sign and date the tax return.

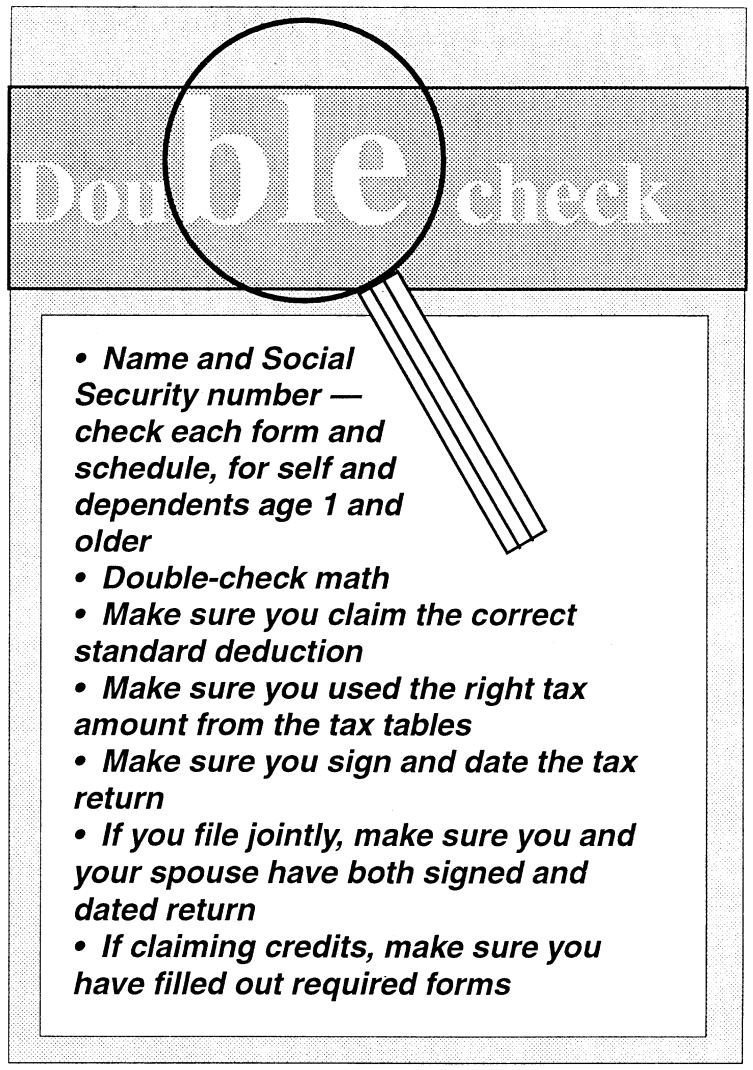
• If you file a joint return, make sure both you and your spouse sign and date it.

• If you are claiming any credits, such as for earned income or child care, make sure you have filled out the required forms for those credits.

• Spell out "Internal Revenue Service" on the check or money order, if you owe any taxes.

• Make sure you keep a copy of each form and attachment you mail to IRS.

• Double-check you attached all Form W-2s, schedules and forms, and check, if required, in the proper order to the tax return.



Make sure you have put enough postage on the tax return, IRS officials cautioned. Attachments and supporting forms can require additional postage. IRS will return a postage-due envelope to you. Your tax form will be considered late if postmarked after the April 17 deadline, even if you originally mailed it before the deadline.

If you have specific tax questions, check with the local unit or installation tax office, or call IRS toll-free at (800) 829-1040. If you live overseas, check with the nearest U.S. embassy or consulate, or contact IRS' international assistance office at:

Check Refund Status

If you are expecting a refund, the Internal Revenue Service has a telephone number for you to call.

Wait at least six weeks before calling the Automated Refund Service, IRS officials said. For those using a touchtone telephone, the service operates Monday through Friday, from 7 a.m. to 11:30 p.m. If you use a rotary telephone, call during normal business hours, Monday through Friday.

When you call, you will need your full name, Social Security number, filing status and the amount you expect to get back.

Call toll-free (800) 829-4477 for information on your refund.

Publication 910, "Guide to Free Tax Services," has a complete rundown on the system and how it works. For a free copy, call toll-free (800) 829-3676.

Good record-keeping simplifies filing

American Forces Information Service

Remember the television programs and movies in which some fellow is doing his federal taxes and his receipts and paperwork are stuffed in bags and boxes?

Internal Revenue Service officials said it is much easier to work on your federal tax return if you organize the financial records you need and have copies of the correct tax forms and schedules.

Also, don't wait until the last minute to do your tax return. You may find you are missing interest forms or a Form W-2 from your employer; or, said IRS officials, you may need more forms and schedules.

If you start gathering the information for your return early enough, said IRS officials, you should have time to get copies of what you need. This could save time and money, especially late penalty payments, if you owe any federal taxes.

IRS officials said records you will need to file your federal tax return, if they apply, include:

• Children's birth certificates and Social Security numbers

• Form W-2s

• All Form 1099s, showing dividends, interest income and other income such as Social Security benefits and unemployment compensation

• Alimony and child support payments

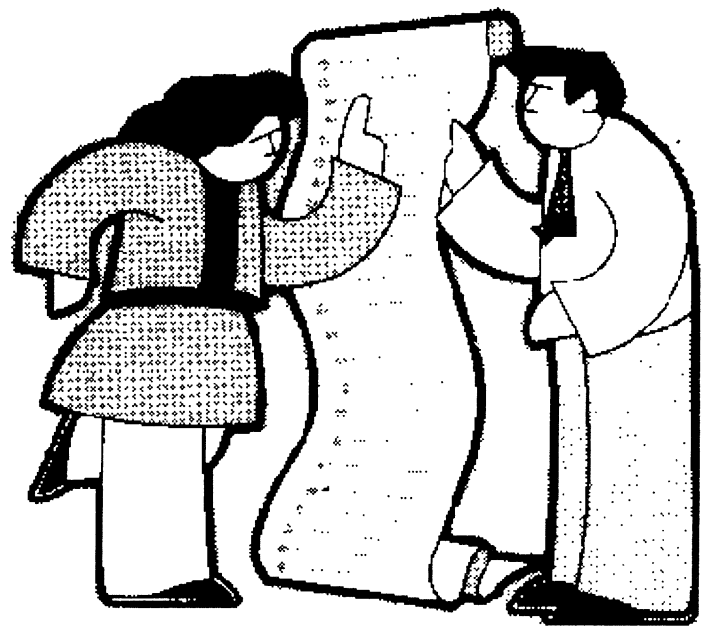
• Child care expenses, including the name, address and Social Security number of the care provider

• House payments

• Moving expenses

• Business expenses

• Charitable contributions



• Medical and dental expenses.

If you are audited, you will need these and more, said IRS officials. Generally, IRS tax audits go back no further than three years; however, under certain circumstances some audits may cover your entire tax history. IRS officials suggested you keep a file copy of each year's federal tax return package.

IRS Publication 17, Your Federal Income Tax, should provide some assistance, said tax officials. Also, IRS Publication 910, Guide to Free Tax Services, lists more than 100 free publications and forms to help you with your federal taxes. For a copy of these publications and others, call toll-free (800) 829-3676 or write to:

IRS Forms Distribution Center
P.O. Box 25866

Some forms and publications may also be available through the installation tax assistance office, local library or U.S. post office. People living overseas may also want to check the nearest U.S. embassy or consulate.

Taxpayer's Bill of Rights guarantees fair treatment

American Forces Information Service

The Taxpayer's Bill of Rights, signed into law in 1988, guarantees fair treatment by the Internal Revenue Service.

This means the tax agency must explain in easy-to-understand language what actions it is taking against you and why, said IRS officials.

Congress passed the Taxpayer's Bill of Rights because of numerous complaints from taxpayers about the way IRS employees treated them.

IRS officials said the law states you must be treated fairly by IRS employees, you are entitled to privacy and representation, and you have the right to appeal an IRS examiner's findings.

It also ensures interest will be paid on delayed refunds and you can get free tax assistance from IRS in preparing your tax return. This includes free publications as well as telephone and walk-in service.

In addition, if you can't resolve a problem with IRS after repeated attempts through normal channels, you can take it to the Problem Resolution Office. A special office within IRS, the Problem Resolution Office is staffed by tax experts who are able to cut through red tape and can usually solve a problem within a month.

Areas they handle include incorrect IRS actions, third notices from the IRS and suspension of agency actions. Call toll-free (800) 829-1040 if you need assistance from the Problem Resolution Office. If you live overseas, write to:

Tax Return Copies

Need a copy of last year's federal tax return, but can't find it? Don't worry, said Internal Revenue Service officials. You can get a complete copy or just specific pages of your past federal tax returns. Complete a copy of IRS Form 4506, "Request for Copy of Tax Form," attach a check or money order for $14 per return and mail them to IRS. You may want to check with the IRS because some parts of the return are free of charge. Call toll-free (800) 829-1040 with specific questions. For a copy of the form, call toll-free (800) 829-3676.

Small Businesses

The Internal Revenue Service has a lot of free information for people who run small businesses. The information includes tax laws and responsibilities, and hints on successful record keeping and bookkeeping methods. For a free copy of IRS Publication 334, "Tax Guide for Small Businesses, call toll-free (800) 829-3676."

In addition, IRS publishes a newsletter for small businesses. For a free 12-month subscription, call the IRS taxpayer education coordinator at toll-free (800) 829-1040.

OCS to present Patterson Award

Officer Candidate School

The Patterson Award will be presented to 2nd Lt. Robert W. Kinder at a ceremony in Marshall Auditorium, Infantry Hall, at 9:30 a.m. Feb. 10.

The award is presented to the officer selected as the most outstanding infantry officer graduate of the Officer Candidate School and the Infantry Officer Basic Course and is the highest honor that can be bestowed on an OCS infantry lieutenant.

The Patterson Award was established in 1952 by friends of Judge Robert P. Patterson, who set up a trust fund for the presentation on his behalf.

Feb. 12 marks the 104th anniversary of the birthday of Patterson and the 43rd year of the Patterson Award presentation.

Patterson served his country in both world wars and was decorated for his bravery in action. In 1918, he received the Distinguished Service Cross, Distinguished Service Medal, Silver Star and the Purple Heart for his combat service.

Patterson enlisted October of 1915, in Company I, 7th Infantry, New York National Guard. He was mustered into federal service for border patrol duty June 26, 1916, as a private.

He was commissioned a second lieutenant, Infantry Section, Officers' Training Camp, Plattsburg Barracks, New York. He was promoted to captain Aug. 15, 1917, and assigned to the 152nd Depot Brigade at Camp Upton, N.Y. He was transferred to Headquarters Company, 306th Infantry Jan. 15, 1918, and left the United States for service in France April 13, 1918.

Because of his extraordinary heroism in action Aug. 14, 1918, he was awarded the Distinguished Service Cross with the following citation: "Captain Patterson, accompanied by two noncommissioned officers, made a daring daylight reconnaissance into the enemy lines. He surprised an enemy outpost of superior numbers and personally destroyed the outpost. Later he again had an encounter with another outpost, during which several of the enemy were killed or wounded and one member of his patrol wounded. The enemy advanced their outposts and Capt. Patterson covered the retreat of his patrol, during which he dropped into a depression and feigned being killed in order to escape capture. Here he lay until he was able to escape to his lines under cover of darkness."

Patterson, who had served on the U.S. District Court and the Circuit Court of Appeals, went on to serve as the undersecretary of War for President Franklin D. Roosevelt and the secretary of War under President Harry S. Truman.

Patterson Died Jan. 22, 1952, in an airplane crash at Elizabeth, N.J. He served 13 years in private industry and had a total of 21 years of government service including his military service.

Black history honored

By Jan Wesner Childs
Special to The Bayonet®

People of all races should participate in Fort Benning's Black History Month activities, the organizer says.

"The purpose is educational awareness," Sgt. 1st Class Rosalie Mascoe, equal opportunity adviser for the 36th Engineer Group, said Monday. "We're hoping to entice people from other races to come in and see what African-Americans do and what this particular race has contributed."

Black History Month is an opportunity to dispel myths and negative stereotypes about African-American culture, Mascoe said. She said it's important for people of all races to know more about other cultures and respect each other's accomplishments.

Mascoe said each unit will have a special event sometime this month to celebrate the achievements of black people throughout history.

The highlight is a post luncheon and entertainment at 11:30 a.m. Feb. 24 at the Main NCO Club. Cost is $6 and tickets are available from unit equal opportunity advisers.

Tickets can also be purchased by calling Mascoe at 545-3198.

Camp Merrill families to get new homes

Officials break ground for new housing project

By Marc G. Turchin
Bayonet staff writer

The 5th Ranger Training Battalion conducted a ground-breaking ceremony Tuesday in north Georgia for the beginning of construction of new homes for soldiers and their families.

The ceremony took place close to Camp Frank D. Merrill, which houses the mountain phase of Ranger School and is just outside of Dahlonega. Forty homes will be built to house soldiers and their families. Construction is scheduled to begin the first week in March and to be completed in October of 1996.

Top officials from Fort Benning, Camp Merrill and the city of Dahlonega attended the ceremony. Included were Maj. Gen. John W. Hendrix, Fort Benning's commanding general, Col. Galen B. Jackman, commander of the Ranger Training Brigade, Lt. Col. Ralph F. D'Elosua, commander of the 5th Ranger Training Battalion, and John Raber, mayor of Dahlonega.

The housing area, named Porter Village in honor of Sgt. Donn F. Porter, a Medal of Honor recipient, is located 13 miles from the camp. There will be three five-bedroom, seven four-bedroom, 11 three-bedroom, and 19 two-bedroom homes.

Metric Construction, from Atlanta, is in charge of the construction for the site. The amount allotted for the purchase of the land and construction of the houses is $4.5 million.

D'Elosua spoke about what these homes will do for the soldiers working at Camp Merrill.

"This will assist us in being able to pull our families together and help us as a unit," he said.

Just because a housing area is being built for the soldiers and their families doesn't mean they will be isolated from the city of Dahlonega, D'Elosua said.

"We are still a part of the community," D'Elosua said. "We certainly will maintain our rapport as people being able to contribute to the Dahlonega community."

Before the ceremony, the group from Fort Benning took a tour of Camp Merrill. A new vehicle maintenance shop, additions to the Overhang Club, Camp Merril's social club, and upgrades to the gym and weight room were highlights of the tour.

Hendrix also stopped in at the camp's Troop Medical Clinic to see what sort of equipment and staffing the clinic has. The clinic is responsible for treating students going through Ranger School as well as the camp's cadre.

Hendrix spent time talking with soldiers during the tour, then ate lunch with the company commanders of the training facility and dinner with the camp's first sergeants.

This event is the second celebration in as many months for Camp Merrill. In December, the camp earned $25,000 from the Army Communities of Excellence program for placing honorable mention in the best sub-installation category.

Camp Merrill is expected to receive the money in October, according to Maj. Roy A. Herman, executive officer for the camp.

He said the camp's facilities set Camp Merrill apart from some of the others in the running.

"We have got a miniature installation — we can cover the whole spectrum of supporting units as well as a larger installation," Herman said.

"All this money is tabbed to improve this post," D'Elosua said.

He said adding wall-to-wall carpeting to the single soldiers' barracks and repairing the shower facilities are two of the possibilities of where the prize money could be spent. D'Elosua said the final decision will be made some time this summer.

Rangers will remember comrade in ceremony today

USAIC Public Affairs Office

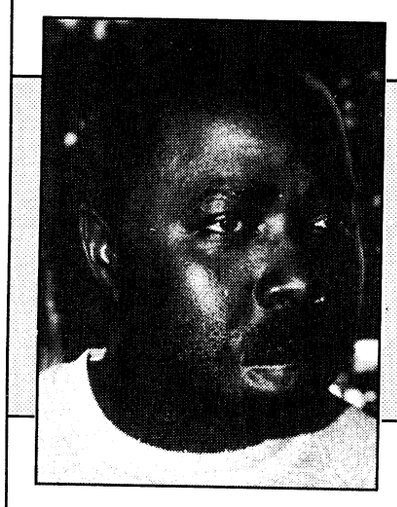
Members of the 75th Ranger Regiment will conduct a memorial service today for a comrade who died Jan. 20 as a result of injuries sustained while exiting an Army helicopter during an exercise at the Joint Readiness Training Center in Fort Polk, La.

Sgt. Alphonse J. Harness, 21, a communications sergeant with the 3rd Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment, will be remembered during a service at 1 p.m. today in Marshall Auditorium in Infantry Hall.

Harness, a native of Milwaukee, Wis., was participating in a Joint Readiness Training Center exercise when the accident occurred. He, along with other soldiers were exiting a hovering MH-47 Chinook helicopter as part of the combat training exercise. The procedure, known as "fast roping," is a form of rappelling in which soldiers use a large rope to exit the aircraft.

Twenty other soldiers were injured in the accident.

The injured soldiers were transported to Bayne-Jones Army Community Hospital at Fort Polk. None of the other soldiers was critically hurt.



The accident occurred shortly after 10 p.m. local time in the Zion Hills training area about three miles east of Fort Polk.

The incident is under investigation by the Army Safety Center.

Harness, who entered the military in 1991 and arrived at Fort Benning January 1992, is survived by his wife, Korena, and a daughter, Brittany. Funeral services for Harness were conducted Jan. 27 at Woods National Cemetery in Milwaukee.

Life's challenges — it never ends ...

By Marc G. Turchin
Bayonet staff writer

commentary

Marc G. Turchin is continuing to challenge himself.

I assume all of us have achieved something in life. If nothing else, we are still alive. In today's society, that's a lot. But what are life's hardest challenges? Marriage? Being happy? My toughest challenge consisted of what, in my mind, was the need to do the right thing.

I was supposed to graduate from high school in 1987. I didn't until 1993. Not that I didn't play the part back in late '80s, I did. I had "senioritis" since the beginning of the 1987 school year. But my interest was in music. My band instructor let a handful of people, myself included, who weren't the best players in the band, but had the most enthusiasm, practice in the bandroom when they should have been in other classes.

That wasn't the only reason I didn't graduate. I wasn't the best student in the world either. My grade point average after the 11th grade was probably around 1.2. No lie.

Fast forward to 1992. I was living in Orlando and working for a big company and feeling like I wasn't doing anything. I was a lifeguard. I had been with the company for almost four years and was really struggling with whether or not this place was going to pan out into a secure job for the future.

I knew I didn't have my diploma and quite frankly had no intention of getting it. I simply figured I didn't need it to make it in the world. My father would always ask me when we talked if I had any plans to get my diploma in the near future. My answer was always no.

At the end of 1992, I quit my job. Why? Because I thought there was more to life than lifeguarding and I intended to find a job that I believed was a step up from what I had been doing. The next month would show me there is more to life than work and me.

My girlfriend of two years and I broke up and my father died in the same week during January of 1993.

It was during this time of grief that I realized that it was up to me to make something of my life. I decided to put my life into my own hands and make a difference.

It was the thought of my father knowing his only son was uneducated and going just about nowhere with his life that really pushed me to get my diploma and basically start all over.

So my quest began. After moving to St. Petersburg, Fla., and moving in with my mother, I started to find the necessary information for school — learning where classes were given and when they began.

I started my second school career at Dixie Hollins Adult Education Center. The school is a high school during the day and an adult education center at night.

The counselor at the school told me the number of credits I needed. It was a lot more than I thought. I needed three credits in English (funny, considering I am now a journalist) and three credits in science. It made me think "what the heck was I doing during the four years I attended school?"

I attended school two nights a week. I found myself being extremely focused and I enjoyed the studying. I was able to work at my own pace and was eager for the next assignment.

I earned my credits in just over three months. My English teacher said my kind of enthusiasm at adult education was a rarity. I told her for me to be in school was a rarity.

I look back at that time in my life and have mixed feelings. On one side, I lost my father who was someone with whom I had a difficult relationship but loved deeply and I never really told him that. I also lost the woman I cared for more than anyone up to that date. We are friends now; but, at one time, it could have been much more.

On the other hand, losing the both of them made me take a really hard look at myself and realize I could be better.

After graduating high school, I joined the Army to continue to challenge myself. I believe I am finally doing the right thing.

dial 545-boss

Dial 545-BOSS is the commander's action line for soldiers, family members and civilians to call when they have problems or complaints that can't be resolved elsewhere. While it is not a substitute for the chain of command or for agencies established to provide assistance, the line offers another means of communication between Fort Benning's community and commanders.

The Bayonet features some of the calls that may benefit other members of the Fort Benning community.

☎ Call: There is no lighting within my housing area. I would appreciate it if someone would do something about this problem.

Housing Division's response: A Housing Division engineer technician paced the distance between the street lights and the caller's residence. The street lights were positioned within the required distance, which is 200 feet. The technician explained this to the caller and also explained the process of requesting an exception to policy if additional lighting is wanted.

The caller said she would resolve the problem by putting up a portable light at her kitchen door that would shine toward the parking lot .

☎ Call: I called in a work order two days ago on getting drinking water. A contractor came out, checked the water and said that the water was being flushed. The water is still brown and I am concerned about the danger to my family.

Utilities Branch's response: The water service at the caller's residence was checked for possible contamination. The water test revealed no contamination. However, pipe scale sediment was evident in the water samples.

The water mains have been flushed several times to rid the system of the sediment deposits. The water is now running clear.

☎ Call: I have called the post locator several times and no one answers the phone. And if the phone is answered after ringing and ringing someone hangs up. I would like someone to check on this.

Director of Information Management's response: We checked out our Post Locator and had no problems. The caller could have been calling during a time when the Post Locator was closed.

Loyd School principal sends thanks

A wonderful thing just happened at Loyd School — we moved to Kinsman Barracks, Sand Hill. The actual packing began on Dec. 17 and we were completely moved and ready for business Jan. 5.

Everyone involved in the move including the command group, the Directorate of Logistics, the Infantry Training Brigade, the Directorate of Public Works, our Schools' Administration Office, Martin Army Community Hospital, parents, students, teachers and staff worked together to accomplish this move in an orderly and organized way.

It's not easy to relocate a facility as large or involved as a school but it happened in a positive and enthusiastic way.

This exercise demonstrated to all of us at Loyd the commitment that the command group has toward the military child.

Thank you to all of those involved in our recent adventure.

Judy Gilliam, principal

Christmas article wonderful testimony

I picked up a copy of The Bayonet when passing through Georgia. Agatha Debrow's article, "The Real Story of Christmas," (Dec. 22) was a wonderful testimony to the reality of Christmas.

I intend to share her thought provoking and insightful message with others in my community and state.

God bless her as she shares in his love.

"And those who are wise — the people of God — shall shine as brightly as the sun's brilliance, and those who turn many to righteousness will glitter like stars forever." Daniel 12:3, Living Bible.

Proclamation

In recognition of the numerous contributions of black Americans to America's diverse ethnic, racial, social, political and religious history, the month of February is proclaimed "Black History Month" at Fort Benning.

The 1995 theme for Black History Month is "Reflections on 1895: Douglass, DuBois, Washington."

Black History Month is a means to help increase awareness, promote harmony and improve understanding among all Americans.

I encourage all soldiers and civilians at this installation and in surrounding communities to join with fellow soldiers and citizens in enjoying activities during "Black History Month 1995."

School Board looks at costs, authority

By Jerrie Macintire
Special to The Bayonet©

The authority of the school board in Department of Defense schools and the rising costs of serving school meals at Fort Benning were topics of discussion at the regular Fort Benning School Board meeting Monday.

The board heard reports that the school lunch fund lost money for the month of December, but new cost-cutting measures have been implemented.

The loss for December totaled $7,101, reported Alice Skinner, director of logistics and support personnel for Fort Benning Schools.

Shirley Page, new director of child nutrition, announced that in a a preliminary analysis of five schools' January lunch and breakfast programs as compared to October's, the price for lunch per meal was 20 cents less and the price per breakfast meal was 10 cents less because of cost-cutting measures in menu planning .

She is currently evaluating further automation in the cafeterias to cut labor costs. Cost-saving measures include controlling food costs, increasing revenues, eliminating nonessential or duplicate supplies, and further employee training to reduce waste.

Page, who holds a master's degree in health and nutrition, also is exploring ways to increase participation while maintaining high standards of nutrition, she said.

Also at the meeting, a proposed draft of a policy defining the authority of school boards in DoD schools, commonly known as section 6 schools, was highlighted by Col. Gregory C. Camp, post chief of staff and School Board president.

Camp was among representatives from 16 DoD schools who gathered in Washington, D.C., in December to hammer out policy regarding the relationship between school boards, superintendents and section 6 administrators.

Clarifications include the authority of local school boards to choose superintendents, the protocol involved during disagreements between superintendents and school boards, the chain of command school boards must follow to appeal decisions affecting section 6 schools and the ability of individual boards to address unique local concerns using the section 6 policy manual.

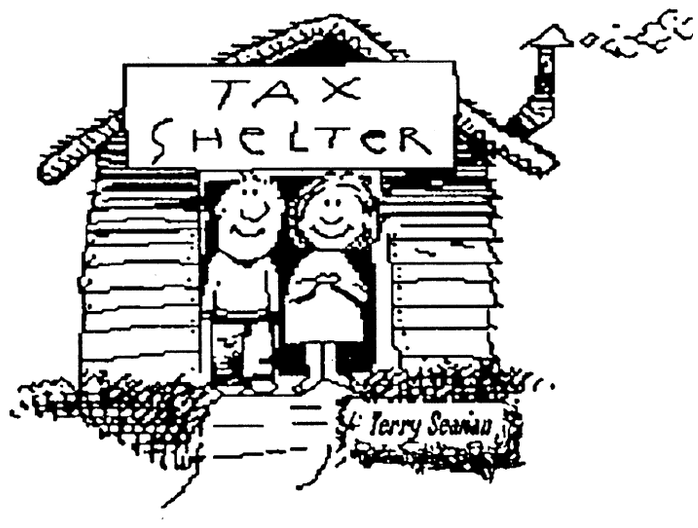
In the superintendent's report, Dr. Dell Karr said visiting officials were currently visiting post schools to evaluate the programs for continued accreditation from the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools. Representatives from the SACS, who routinely visit schools to evaluate programs, will report findings to Karr which she will share at next month's meeting, she said.

In other action:

• The board heard a report by Del Hicks, principal at McBride School, on a school renewal project emphasizing motivating students for success while instilling self-esteem. Hicks reported on the computerized library system and the accelerated reading program in place at McBride, and discussed methods of motivating students to strive for and achieve success.

• Karr told the board $750,000 had been approved for roof repairs at Loyd School. Students are currently attending school at Kinsman Barracks until repairs are completed. Repairs to the roof at White School are also proceeding, he said.

• Karr noted that two science teachers had received recognition for their excellence in teaching. Joyce Flatt of Dexter and Judy Hanley of Faith were recognized as "Teacher of the Year" for elementary and middle school, respectively, by the Georgia Science Teachers' Association for District 6. They will both be eligible for the statewide title of "Science Teacher of the Year" for elementary and for middle schools, which will be announced after the annual conference in Savannah this month.



• Camp reported the School Board had no authority to act upon a grievance filed by a school counselor. The Benning Education Association, which negotiates for teachers, has authority in the matter, Camp said.

• The board heard that 96 parents had registered the first day for the upcoming Parent Academy, scheduled Feb. 24 and 25.

Total Army Quality — not what it used to be

By Karen S. Morarie
Bayonet staff writer

The public's response to Total Army Quality is like its response to personal computers — people either love it or they run from it.

TAQ. The people who use it, swear by it. They say it opens up communication on the job, improving morale, efficiency and customer service. The people who don't use it say it's too complicated; they don't understand how to make it work for them.

Fort Benning's TAQ action plan and guide sets forth what TAQ is and a step-by-step plan on how to use it.

The guide reads in part, "The (TAQ) objective is to serve our customers better and to create a climate where everyone will work together for continuous improvement. There are many offices on the installation improving service to their customers by improving their processes. Why not work smarter, provide better customer services and feel better about your job?"

The real key to TAQ seems to be that "continuous improvement." Successful TAQ depends on managers being open to employees' suggestions, according to Annette Parker, who retired Tuesday as installation TAQ coordinator and chief of the TAQ and Army Communities of Excellence office.

"A lot of work is technical," Parker said, "and supervisors don't always know the ins and outs of the process. Workers can make suggestions on how to do things more efficiently and for less money, because they know all the details of the processes they use."

Parker also said "cross-functional" teams can be effective in using TAQ.

"When organizations meet together. they can all become more efficient," she said. "For instance, if (two directorates) both provide services for the same customers, they can analyze how their paperwork is handled, how their processes work, and how they can streamline to better meet their customers' needs."

Parker said TAQ and ACOE, which both focus on improving customer service, have made a big difference in the atmosphere of Fort Benning.

"You don't go hardly anywhere anymore and find grumpy people at the front desk," she said. "People are nicer; they work together as a team. They're making things better for themselves and their customers."

Maj. James A. Walls, executive officer for the garrison commander, has worked with Parker in following and evaluating TAQ initiatives on post. While he is not an expert in the program, he said, he has seen a lot of improvement in the Army's approach to TAQ.

"I went to my first TAQ class in the spring of 1990, when it was brand new," Walls said, "and there was a lot of opposition. It was presented as a 'zero defects' program, and most management approaches then emphasized allowing your people to grow, develop and occasionally make some mistakes.

"I don't think it was very well marketed," Walls said. "And it lost some momentum then. TAQ had a real resurgence around '92, and it was presented more positively. The emphasis was on excellence and customer service. "

Walls said ACOE really brought TAQ to the fore.

"People started using it, and we found that lo and behold, it worked!"

The drawdown also had a lot to do with encouraging the program, Walls said. With fewer people for the same jobs, "working smart" and "more with less" became critical, he said.

"We're more efficient, more customer-service oriented now than we were four or five years ago, even with fewer people," he said. "Now, we want to continue to keep it alive and improving with all the new people coming into Fort Benning."

Parker said while units and directorates across post have made improvements with TAQ, she said the Adjutant General's office in particular has improved customer service. The Identification Card Section, inprocessing and Retirement Services office have all decreased their customers' waiting time, achieved higher customer satisfaction ratings and improved their efficiency — from 38 minutes to 18 for the ID section, from four days to less than two for inprocessing, and from 10 days to one for retirement services.

Martin Army Community Hospital, Parker said, has also used TAQ to improve customer service, from phone-in prescription service to an evening clinic for women.

"They've greatly increased access for Pap smears and mammograms," she said.

Parker said goals for improving TAQ use on post include gearing it more to military applications. "We've had a lot of success with military members — AG is mostly military," she said. "But we constantly have to retrain, because people rotate out all the time. We'll be looking at ways to adapt the TAQ training so it fits into military requirements."

Walls agreed, saying the post's leadership is concerned with expanding the program's military applications, but that doing so would take a lot of study.

"We (the Army) have a very traditional organization," he said, "and it's based on the ideas of leadership and the chain of command. I think there's a lot of potential out there for applying TAQ — by no means should it not be applied to the military — but it may take a little more time. It's certainly worked well on the civilian side; our challenge is to continue to push it for the military."

The TAQ guide is available from the Directorate of Resource Management, Building 66, on Wold Avenue. Contents include "Getting Started," "A Step by Step TAQ Effort," "Quality Improvement Process," "Key Elements of a Successful TAQ Effort" and "Where to Go When You Need Assistance.

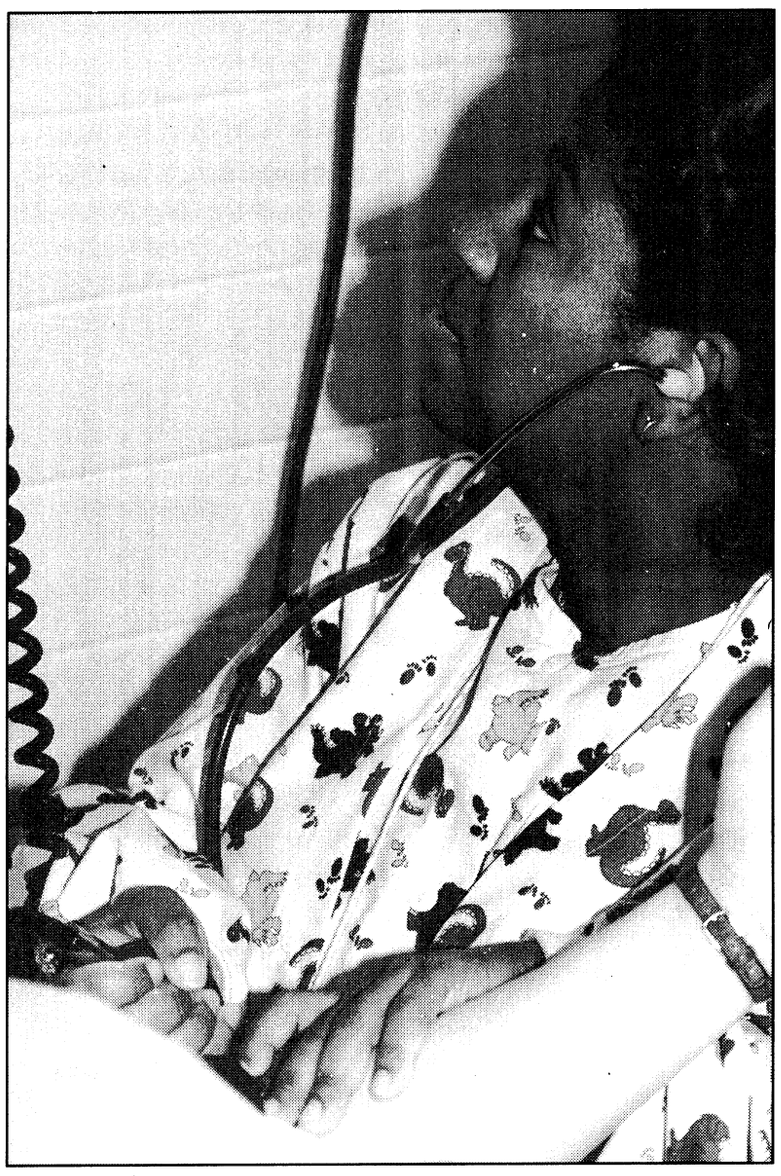
Victory Clinic moves PRIMUS in-house

By Karen S. Morarie
Bayonet staff writer

"The choice was to either move or cut services, and cutting services was unacceptable. Our goal was to maintain quality care."

Dr. (Lt. Col.) Kenneth J. Franklin, chief of the Family Practice Community Care Service, said Victory Clinic, which recently opened at Martin Army Community Hospital, represents the solution to the dilemma of maintaining patient services while containing costs.

The new facility, which replaces the Primary Care for the Uniformed Services clinic on Macon Road, opened at the hospital Dec. 12. Franklin said the decision to move the clinic was made about three months earlier, when the annual contract renegotiation took place.



"We determined then that it would be impossible for us to remain at that location and continue to still answer all customer concerns and stay within the budget," he said. "It would have been prohibitively expensive."

The cost advantage in having the clinic located at the hospital, Franklin said, is that the government no longer pays the contractor for ancillary services — lab work, X-rays, pharmacy services and medications.

"All of those are available at the hospital," Franklin said, "and if a patient is referred to a specialist, they're in the same building."

The facility was painted and renovated before Victory Clinic opened, and all-new equipment has been installed, from examination tables to EKG monitors. The light-colored walls, bright, even lighting and waiting area with upholstered chairs are designed to create an attractive, appealing environment for patients, according to Randy Backman, clinic administrator.

Backman said the new system is working smoothly. With 12 patient examination rooms, two screening rooms and staggered appointments, he said, it's possible to keep a steady flow of patients and avoid overcrowding.

Karen S. Morarie

Gabriele Polk-Seldon, a licensed practical nurse at Victory Clinic, watches a wall-mounted monitor as she checks a patient's blood pressure.

The clinic is still staffed by contract employees, including doctors, nurses, clerical workers and administrators, Franklin said, and the medical director at the old clinic, family physician Dr. Edna Daniels, remains as medical director of Victory Clinic.

"The clinic staff, the hospital staff and the patients have all made a remarkably smooth transition," Backman said. "We're doing our quarterly satisfaction survey now, and the results are very positive."

Franklin agreed. "We've been pleased by the lack of complaints since we made the change," he said. "There've been virtually none."

Franklin said openings are currently available for new patients who aren't enrolled in other clinics.

"We contacted every patient from the old clinic before we moved," Franklin said, "and verified they were still in town. We found that several thousand had either moved or chosen other care options. That opened up space for nearly 4,000 patients."

Franklin said adult family members of active duty or retired military can enroll in the clinic.

"All adults other than the soldiers can go there," he said. "Care for children is now provided at the Pediatric Clinic in the hospital. Again, that allowed us to improve care and lower costs."

Adult family members interested in enrolling in Victory Clinic, Franklin said, can call the health care finder at 544-1591 or 544-1447.

TAQ manager plans 'quality' retirement

By Karen S. Morarie
Bayonet staff writer

Annette Parker retired Tuesday from her position as TAQ coordinator.

She has the slightly drawling speech and easy manner of a native Southerner, but as guiding force behind the post's Total Army Quality program, she's been anything but laid back.

Annette Parker, a native of South Carolina and now a resident of Phenix City, has worked in civil service for 28 years, the last several as TAQ coordinator and chief of the TAQ and Army Communities of Excellence Office in the Directorate of Resource Management.

Parker took early retirement Tuesday, ending a career that began in 1965 when she took a job as a clerk typist at the Canal Zone College in Panama. Parker lived in Panama until her husband, David, finished two tours there. They then moved to Fort Benning, where he retired.

The blonde, blue-eyed professional woman in executive suit and flowered blouse has enjoyed her work, she said, but admits she's looking forward to hanging up her blazer and pursuing other interests — not least, her five children and 10 (so far) grandchildren.

She speaks proudly of her children — Kathy, Cindy ("She's a doctor — an intern"), David Jr. and the twins, Lorrie and Larry.

The twins are the youngest, and Parker said when they were born, ultrasounds weren't standard procedure, so she didn't know she was having two babies until she was in the delivery room.

"The twins were a shocker," she said, "but with a girl and a boy, they gave (the family) a nice balance."

Parker's had some surprises to deal with on the job, as well. The best, she said, was when then-Chief of Staff Col. Burnet R. Quick announced the post had won the 1994 Commander-in-Chief's award.

"He just called us up to Building 4 and didn't tell us why," she said. "When he announced we won, everybody just started hugging. We were all so excited."

The excitement, she said, is what she'll miss most about the job. After seeing the post win several ACOE awards in the past few years, Parker said, it'll feel strange not to be involved. But, she said, she's ready for a rest.

"The only problem with winning," she said, "is the better you are, the more (the ACOE team) expects you to do. It's been fun, but it'll be nice to slow down."

Parker's plans for retirement sound fairly active, however. She and her husband own a fruit and berry farm, she said, and she'd like to spend time working with the plants. They plan to start growing shiitake mushrooms, she said.

"We have two small ponds on the property," she said, "and I want to spend some time just sitting and watching the fish. And I'll visit the grandchildren more, of course."

Volunteers needed for research study

The U.S. Army Aeromedical Research Laboratory at Fort Rucker, Ala., is conducting a study on night shiftwork and reproductive health.

Female volunteers between the ages of 18 to 40 are needed. Expenses will be paid by the lab.

For more information, call Dr. Carlos Comperatore or Sandra Myrick at (334) 255-6858 or (334) 255-6850 or DSN 558-6858 or 558-6850.

Tax office now open

The Fort Benning Tax Office, located in Building 2640 at Soldiers' Plaza, is now open. Office hours will be 8:30 a.m. to 4 p.m., Monday through Friday.

Electronic tax filing will be available for most federal returns, and the office has many federal and state tax forms available.

Unit tax advisers have been appointed so soldiers with tax questions can see their unit tax advisers first.

Controlled burning will take place next week

Controlled burning of woodland and range areas will take place Monday to Feb. 11.

If weather permits, the following compartments may be affected: A-17, C-3, D-4, E-6, G-6, H-3, J-4, K-5, K-9, K-10, K-19, O-2, O-5, S-2, S-3, U-2, V-2, V-3, W-3, X-1, Z-3 and BB-2.

People using this area for recreation must leave before 9:30 a.m. daily.

Training units using compartments next to these areas may experience drift smoke and are reminded to exercise caution while traveling in these areas because of the potential for reduced visibility.

For more information, call 544-6206.

Holiday to affect trash, yard collection

There will be no trash or recycle collection Feb. 20. Areas scheduled to be picked up that day will be picked up as scheduled Tuesday through Friday. No yard waste will be picked up Feb. 20, but it will be picked up the following Monday as normally scheduled. All other schedules remain unchanged.

For more information, call 545-4749.

Female instructors needed for school

The Fort Benning Drill Sergeant School needs female sergeants first class or staff sergeants who have served as drill sergeants in the last six years to be instructors.

Applicants must:

• Want a challenging and demanding job

• Be in excellent physical condition and have no profiles

• Have excellent military bearing, conduct and overall appearance

• Want to share knowledge and experience as a drill sergeant

• Develop new drill sergeants by leading by example.

Only those who are serious and willing to give 100 percent should inquire, officials said.

For more information, call Master Sgt. Jackie McGriff at 544-8176 or 544-8173.

SSA to accept applications for SSNs

Every person age 1 or older must have a Social Security number before that person may be claimed as a dependent on a tax return, according to Staff Judge Advocate Office officials.

The Social Security Administration will accept applications for Social Security numbers Thursday at 10 a.m. at the Main Post Chapel Center next to Doughboy Stadium. Applicants must bring a certified copy of the person's birth certificate and some other type of identification, such as school or shot records.

For more information, call 1st Lt. Michael Roberts at 545-4267.

Free tax preparation assistance available

Free assistance with tax form preparation by Legal Assistance Office personnel will be available at the Main Post Exchange Saturday from 9:30 a.m to 1 p.m.

Individuals needing assistance should bring all paperwork and tax forms, officials said.

AER to celebrate 53rd anniversary

Army Emergency Relief will celebrate 53 years of service Feb. 5, and Fort Benning's AER office will celebrate with a birthday cake Monday from 9 a.m. to noon at the Post Exchange at the Main Mall.

AER is a private nonprofit organization, incorporated in 1942 by the secretary of War and the Army chief of staff. AER's mission is to provide emergency financial assistance.

Visit the AER office in Building 2643, Soldiers' Plaza, or stop by the Post Exchange at the Main Mall Feb. 6 for a piece of birthday cake.

PX gets new hours

The Post Exchange at the Main Mall has changed its operating hours. The new hours are Monday through Saturday from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. and Sunday from 10 a.m. to 7 p.m.

Cols Tech offering degree in engineering

Army Career and Alumni Program

The Fort Benning Army Career and Alumni Program office is sponsoring a skill development program, in conjunction with Columbus Technical Institute, to soldiers, civilians and family members who are making the transition from the Army to civilian life.

The Electronics Engineering Technology program at Columbus Technical Institute is a two-year associate degree program with a major in electronics engineering technology. The 114-credit hour program is a sequence of college-level courses designed to prepare students to work in the field of electronics engineering technology.

The program of study emphasizes the application of scientific, mathematical and engineering knowledge and methods combined with technical skills in support of engineering activities.

In the workplace, a graduate of the engineering technology program has the intellectual and technical background to understand the requirements of the engineer with a degree and then communicate those requirements to technicians.

"A goal of our program is to develop independent thinkers who can analyze engineering problems and synthesize technical solutions," said Albert Zasada, head of the Electronics Engineering Technology Department at Columbus Tech. "Our graduates are taught to be problem solvers."

The faculty consists of graduate-level electrical engineers with both industrial and professional engineering experience.

Spring quarter enrollment begins April 5. A prerequisite for this program is college algebra and computer fundamentals. Students may elect to attend classes at Fort Benning (college algebra) on Tuesday and Thursday and classes at Columbus Technical Institute (computer fundamentals) on Monday and Wednesday during the spring quarter. When sufficient students meet the prerequisite, Columbus Technical Institute plans to offer engineering technology classes at Fort Benning, possibly as early as the summer quarter.

Persons interested in the program can call Zasada or Ray Mercer at 649-1820 or 649-1930.

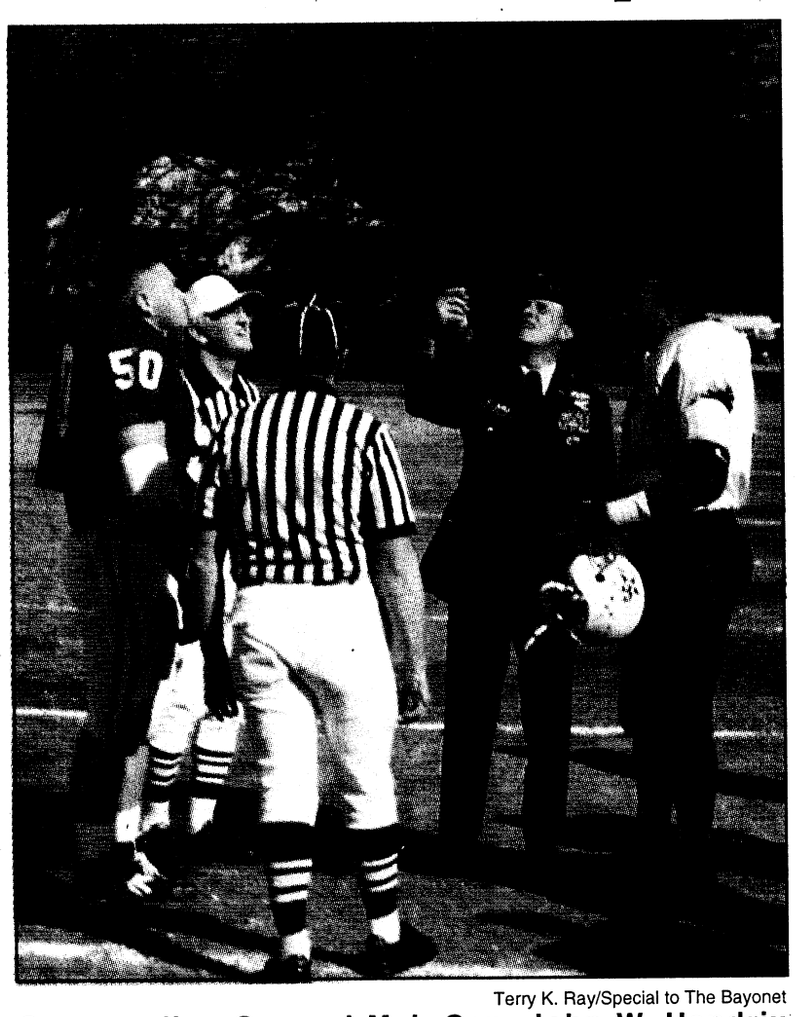
Columbus Stars sparkle in opening game

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet©

The Columbus Stars opened the start of the 1995 season with an exhibition game against the Dothan, Ala., Chiefs at Doughboy Stadium Saturday afternoon coming away with a 23-13 win.



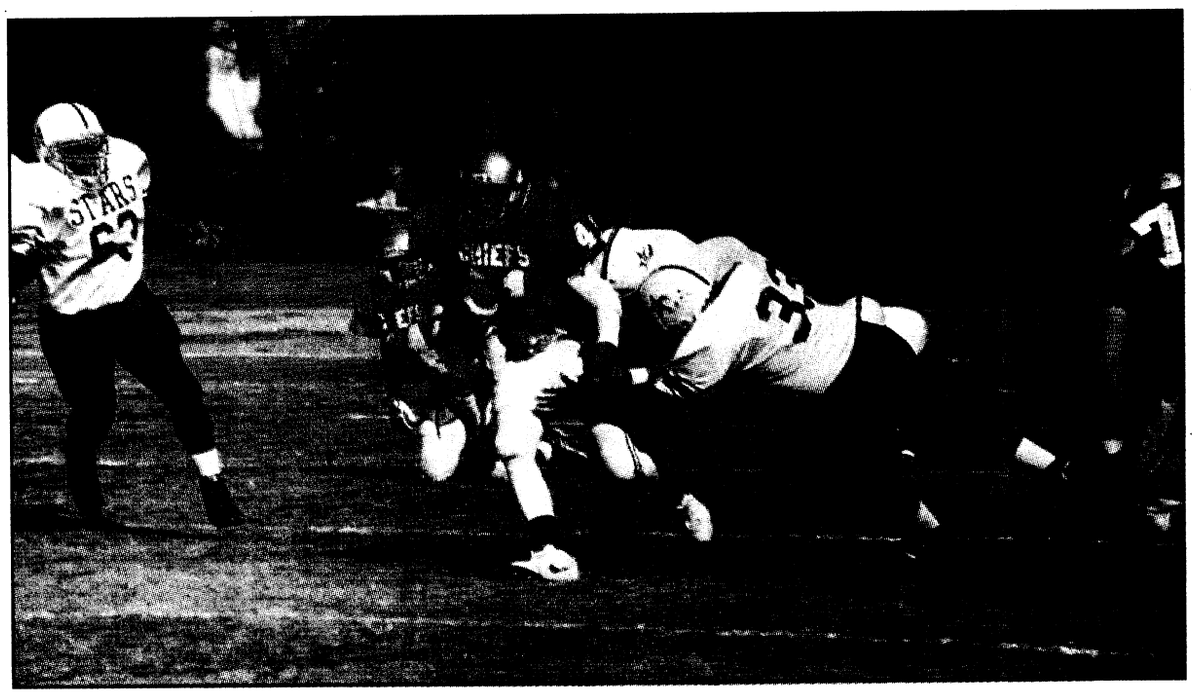
The Stars opened the game with quarterback Jeff McCarrie at the helm, but they soon switched to Eddie Mitchell after the Stars offense failed to move the ball early in the first quarter.

"Jeff just had a bad day," (0-7 passing with two interceptions), said head coach Tom Staton. "Jeff's looked a lot better than this in practice; he just wasn't on today. He was audibling at the line and reading the defense right; we just weren't holding our blocks on the offensive line. I switched to Eddie because he won't audible."

The Chiefs drew first blood early in the first quarter when defensive back Angelo Belvin picked off McCarrie at the Chiefs' 20-yard line and turned upfield.

The Stars hemmed Belvin in at midfield and it looked as if the Stars would force the quick defensive back out of bounds; but, at the last second, Belvin threw a lateral pass to teammate Ramon Bruner who cut back past the defense and raced to the end zone for the score. The conversion failed leaving the Chiefs up 6-0 at 8:38 of the first quarter.

The Stars moved the ball down to the Chiefs' 9-yard line on their next possession using 200-pound fullback Jamon Smith (21 carries, 115 yards for the day) on misdirection plays. The drive stalled at the Chiefs' 4 with the Stars attempting a 21-yard field goal. A bad snap to holder Bennie Harris foiled the attempt giving the ball back to the Chiefs at their own 4.



Terry K. Ray/Special to The Bayonet

The Stars' defense rose to the occasion, stopping the Chiefs on three plays and forcing a punt early in the second quarter. The Stars started with great field position at the Chiefs' own 35. On a fourth-down play from the Chiefs' 18, McCarrie once again threw an ill-fated pass over the middle. The pass was tipped, and linebacker Anthony Ridoff pulled in the floater for the Chiefs' second interception of the game.

The Stars' defense returned the favor on the very next play when Chiefs' quarterback Clifton Sherrod was picked off by cornerback Kelvin Baker at the 49-yard line with 2:38 left in the half.

On the first play from the 49, Mitchell fumbled the ball and linebacker Allen Mason recovered for the Chiefs. Once again, good fortune was backing up the Stars' defense. Free safety Kevin Baker picked off Sherrod and returned the ball down to the Chiefs' 30-yard line with 1:40 left in the half.

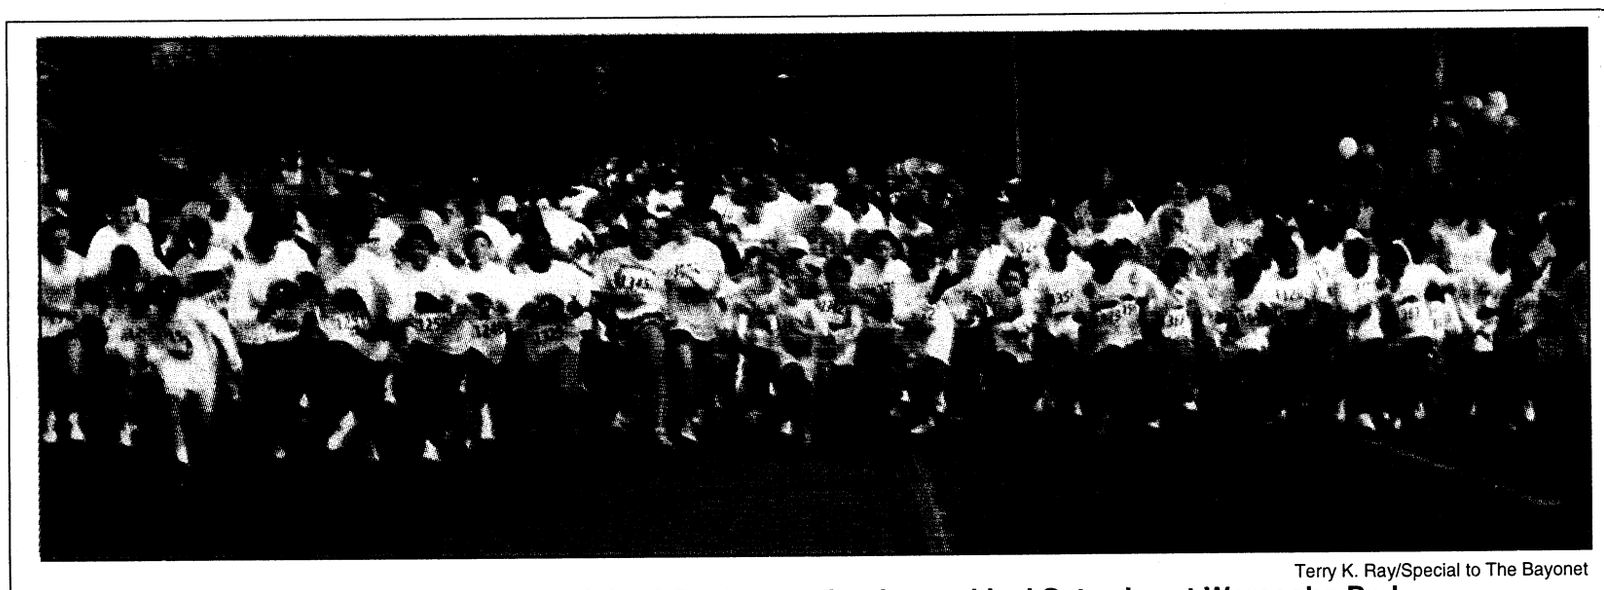
Terry K. Ray/Special to The Bayonet

Angelo Belvin of the Dothan Chiefs is brought down by Terrance Hollis and company of the Columbus Stars during first-half action at Doughboy Stadium Saturday.

Smith moved the ball down to the Chiefs' 5 for first-and-goal with under a minute to go. Two plays later Mitchell went in from the 1 on a quarterback sneak, tying the game at 6. The extra point failed, sending both teams to the locker room at the half deadlocked.

The Stars' defense put the crunch in the "Crunch Bunch" in the second half, stopping the Chiefs' first drive three and out. A bad snap to the Chiefs' punter Jeremy Baggett caused a poor punt and great field position for the Stars at the Chiefs' 19-yard line.

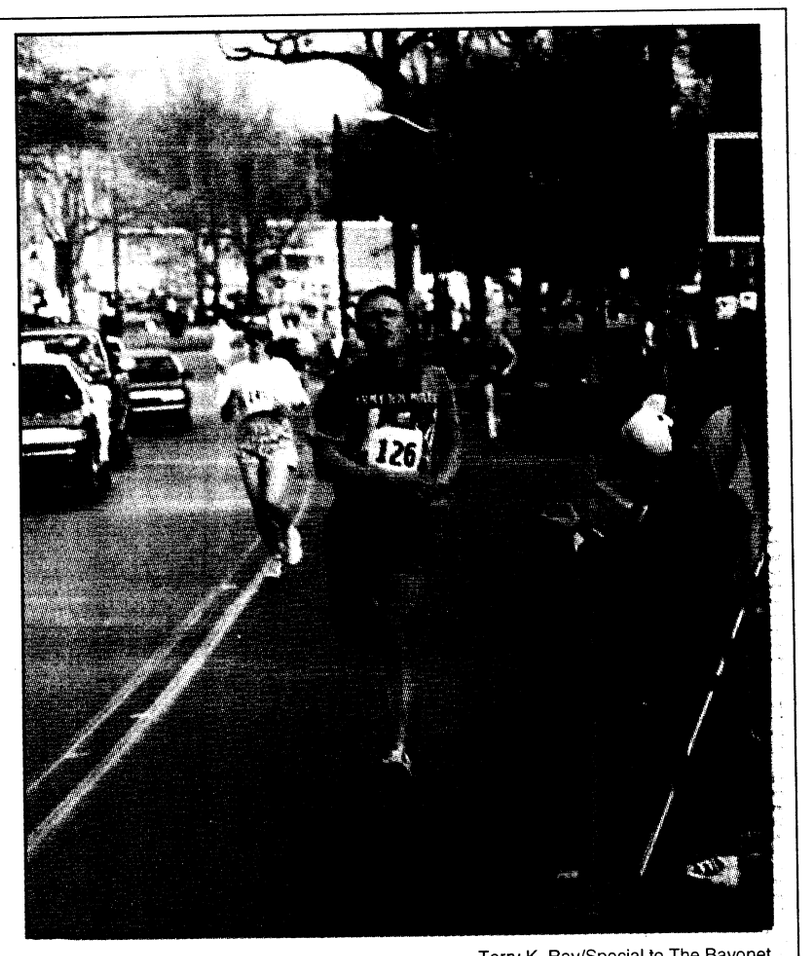
Three plays and 3 yards later, the Stars had to settle for a 33-yard field goal by Scott Alalof and a 9-6 lead.



The Stars' defense once again set the table for the offense. On the kickoff, the special teams stuffed the return at the Chiefs' own 8. Three plays later, the Stars gave the Chiefs a first down on a penalty. Linebacker Frank Lewis took the ball away on the next play with the Stars' third interception of the day and a first down for the offense at the Chiefs' 19. Five plays later, Mitchell strolled into the end zone on a quarterback option right from 4 yards out. Alalof tacked on the point after for a 16-6 bulge at the end of the third quarter.

In the fourth quarter, the Stars put together a 10-play, 54-yard drive that ended when fullback Albert Tate rambled 10 yards off an option pitch from Mitchell for the touchdown. Alalof added the conversion for a 23-6 lead.

The Chiefs struck for their final score when Sherrod found Calvin Grooms on a quick slant in the end zone for a 5-yard touchdown strike. The conversion from Richard Meyers cut the lead to 23-13 with 4:12 left in the game. The Chiefs' touchdown was set up on a 67-yard-bomb from Sherrod to Tracy Jackson.



The Stars' defense would close out the game with a sack by Robert Stroy at the Chiefs' own 23 with 30 seconds left.

The Stars open the regular season Saturday evening at Garrett Stadium in Phenix City against the Tallahassee Tornadoes, who ripped the Stars in their two meetings last year 16-0 and 21-19. The second loss knocked the Stars out of the playoff hunt. Kickoff is set for 7 p.m.

Kyle Rambo Jr. completes the five-mile run.

350 athletes 'run for the cookies'

More than 350 souls braved the torrential downpour Saturday morning to participate in the 15th annual Barnett Bank Girl Scout Cookie Run at Weracoba Park and Lakebottom Park.

But by 9 a.m. the rains had blown their way through, leaving blue skies and sunshine for the races.

In the five-mile run; Kyle Rambo of Company B, 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment, ran away from the field with a time of 27 minutes and 11 seconds, outdistancing second place finisher Duane Robinson by seven seconds. Jeff Keady finished third at 28:13.

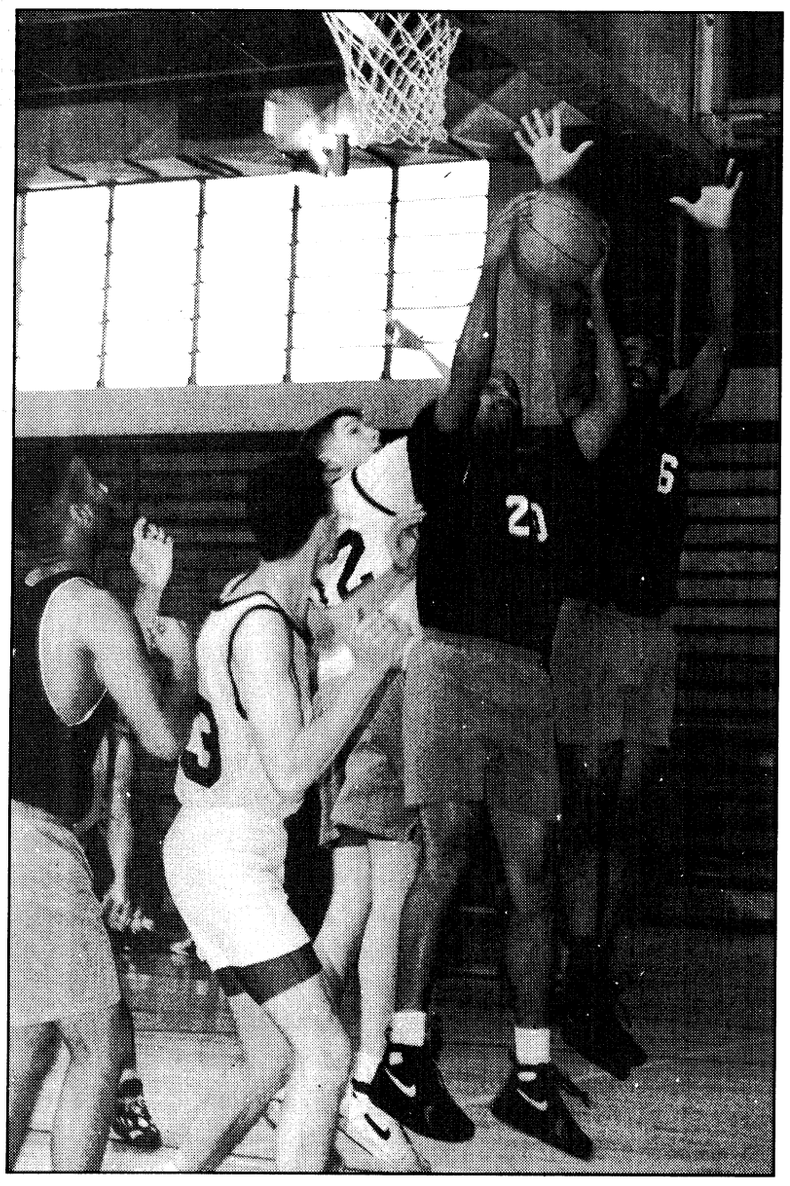
Rambo, 29, an Army 10-miler for Fort Benning in 1991, has returned to the post for the Infantry Officer Advanced Course and has been in the area for only a week.

"I've been stationed at Fort Carson, Colo., and running at a higher elevation helped," Rambo said. "The only thing that bothered me was the humidity."

In the women's division, 32-year old Connie Robertson paced herself to a first-place win with a time of 30:40. Jennifer Yancey finished a distant second at 30:58 and Carol Anderson took third at 35:33.

In the 1.5-mile "Run for the Cookies," Smiths Station, Ala., runner Jimmie Evilsizer claimed the top spot with a time of 8:20, 17 seconds faster than Bard Parker. Ron Chapman finished in the third spot at 8:38.

Seventeen-year-old Angela Jones of Central High School in Phenix City clocked in at 7:05, blowing away her nearest competitor Rebekah Porter by nearly three minutes. Porter finished with a time of 9:52. Third place went to Bryn Crawford at 10:56.



Following are the top three finishers in each age group for the five-mile and 1.5-mile runs.

Ronald Lymuel of the Cobras pulls down a rebound.

2/69 plays basketball

Special to The Bayonet©

The 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division, hoopsters are pounding the hard court at Kelley Hill Fitness Center. Two games were played by the 2nd Battalion, 69th Armor Regiment, Monday night.

The Cobras of Company C, 2nd Bn., 69th Ar. Regt., struck down the Assassins of Company A, 2nd Bn., 69th Ar. Regt., 61-43.

The Cobras pulled away to a 10-point lead at the half 27-17 behind Joe Cushingberry's 19 points and Mecko Johnson's 16.

In the second half, the Cobra's used a strong 2-3 zone defense to keep the Assassins from going to the basket and starting several fast-break baskets for the offense. The Cobras led by Ronald Lymuel and Leonard Peterson also dominated on the glass, pulling down rebounds off the offensive and defensive backboards.

The Cobras opened up the second half with a 10-2 run pulling away to a 37-19 advantage in the first five minutes of the half. The Assassins were led by Daniel Dailey's 18 points and James Jackson's 13. The Assassins tried to get back into the ball game, but the Cobra defense stood fast and stopped the Assassin's from putting together any type of offensive threat late in the game.

In game two of the evening, the Rebels of Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 2nd Bn., 69th Ar. Regt., ran all over the Dogs of Company D, 2nd Bn., 69th Ar. Regt., 64-46.

The Rebels' running game was just too much for the Dogs to handle. William McPhall scored a game high 21 points, and teammate Frank Tanner added 14 to propel the Rebels to the win.

The Rebels used a 14-3 run in the first six minutes of the game to establish the tone of the game. Up 35-15 at the break, the Rebels opened the second half with a mini 6-2 run to go up 41-17.

With less than six minutes to play and up 51-32, the Rebels used wholesale substitutions, sitting most of the starters for the final minutes of the game.

The Dogs, who missed more than half of their free throw attempts that would have kept them in the game, were led by Donald Wing with 20 points and Greg Cameron with 7.

Boxing fever is here

The Canadian Mist "Night at the Fights" Sega Genesis Greatest Heavyweights Tournament is under way now at various clubs on Fort Benning.

The elimination-style competitions, using the "Sega Genesis Greatest Heavyweights" game, will give participants the opportunity to become one of the greatest heavyweights of all time.

Players can choose from: Muhammad Ali, Jack Dempsey, Joe Frazier, Larry Holmes, Evander Holyfield, Joe Louis, Rocky Marciano and Floyd Patterson.

Soldiers will have the chance to strap into four-foot tall robots and battle each other during each match. Each bout of robotic boxing consists of three 30-second rounds held under the direction of the referee. Points are scored by knocking your opponent's robots head. If the head stays up for a three count by the referee, you win by knockout.

Cash prizes will be awarded to the winners, with other prizes for all tournament participants.

The Sledgehammer will host the event tonight at 7 p.m. The Afterhours Club will sound the bell Wednesday at 8:30 p.m. The four week promotion will culminate Feb. 10 at 7 p.m. at the Afterhours Club with the championship bout.

Registration sheets and rule sheets are located at each club.

In conjunction with the tournaments, there will be special promotions at the Class Six stores consisting of giveaways, prize drawings and special rebate offers.

Coinciding with the launch of the 1995 Army Boxing Training and Box-Off at Fort Huachuca, Ariz., the tournament is scheduled through Wednesday.

As the corporate sponsor, Canadian Mist helps fund expenses for the boxers who attend the Army Boxing Training Camp at Fort Huachuca.

Bass club — Active duty and retired soldiers, Department of the Army civilians, and family members 16 years and older are eligible to join the Fort Benning Bass Club.

Meetings are the second and fourth Tuesday of each month at 7:30 p.m. at the Fort Benning Boy Scout Hut. Call Stephen Ward at 569-5705 for more information.

Cruise-matics rugby — It's rugby time again and the 1994 Georgia Division II champions, the Cruise-matics, are starting their spring season.

New players are welcome to join the team, which practices Tuesdays and Thursdays from 7 to 9 p.m. The first game is Saturday against the University of Georgia in Athens.

The season will end with military nationals at Scott Air Force Base in Illinois, April 20 through 24.

For more information, call Jim Muldoon at 327-6544 or Roy Krueger at 685-4343.

Run for fun — Runner Sam Bobbitt invites Fort Benning runners to work out together twice a week starting Tuesday.

Bobbitt, who is in training for a chance at being part of the world class athlete program, is willing to use his skills as a runner to help others improve also.

Running sessions will be Tuesdays and Thursdays at 5 p.m. at the Stewart Field Track next to the Main Post Bowling Center and across from Infantry Hall.

Everyone is invited to come out and run, learn some training tips and have fun. Soldiers, civilians and family members are all welcome. There is no age limit, and any number of people can participate.

If interested, call Bobbitt at the U.S. Army Physical Fitness School at 545-6333.

Women's Bowling Special — Women bowl free for St. Valentine's Day Feb. 14 from 9 a.m. to 11 p.m. at the Main Post and Mall Bowling Centers. There is a three-game limit.

Tactical pistol match— The Rifle and Pistol Club of Fort Benning will conduct a tactical pistol match on English Range Saturday at 10 a.m. Entry fee is $12 if paid by Wednesday, $16 after that. Glock model 17 9mm pistols will be provided for shooters without pistols.

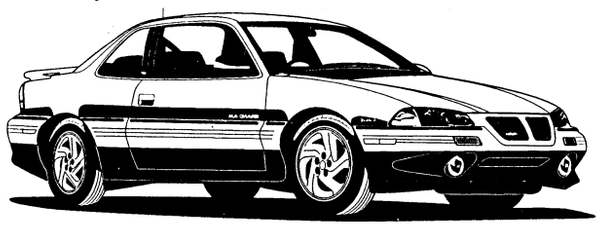
All entrants will receive a long-sleeved jersey. For more information, call 689-3371.

Basketball camp — Registration is now open for the 17th annual Bryan Adrian Summer Basketball Camp. Boys and girls ages 5 through 18 are eligible.

Players such as Jerry Stackhouse and Rasheed Wallace from the University of North Carolina, Drew Barry from Georgia Tech and Chris Corchiana of the National Basketball Association will be included in the camp staff.

The camp will be offered at several locations, including Atlanta. For a brochure, call (704) 372-3236.

Youth baseball, soccer registration — Youth Services soccer and baseball registration will end Feb. 10. Registration will be Monday through Friday from 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m Registration is open to youth ages 4 to 15, of active duty, retired military, and DoD civilian personnel.



Instructional soccer will be available for children ages 4 and 5, regular soccer for youths ages 6 to 15, T-ball for ages 5 and 6, coach pitch for ages 7 to 8 and baseball for ages 9 to 15.

Youth Services will need coaches for the upcoming season. Individuals who are interested can stop by Building 1056, Monday through Friday, from 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. and fill out a coach's application.

Prospective coaches should have an interest in working with children and be willing to attend all scheduled practices and games. For more information, call 545-3070.

Military Police Activity

TAKE A BITE OUT OF CRIME®

Because of the increased number of complaints about stray cats and dogs on the installation and several pet owners failure to control their pets, the Military Police Activity will conduct a round up of all stray and uncontrolled pets during February.

All pet owners are reminded that U.S. Army Infantry Center Regulation 210-5 requires pet owners to prevent animals from being a nuisance. If pets are cited three times for nuisance acts or impounded more than once as a stray, owners will be required to permanently remove the animal from post and will be prohibited from future ownership of pets.

The following entries are from the Fort Benning Military Police blotters from Jan. 11 to 17. Such entries may be incomplete and do not determine the guilt or innocence of any person.

• A staff sergeant was charged by the Columbus Police Department for driving under the influence of alcohol and making an illegal U-turn. The soldier made a U-turn on Interstate 185 adjacent to Macon Road and was stopped by a Columbus police officer.

When the soldier got out of the vehicle, the officer detected a strong odor of alcohol. The soldier was administered a field sobriety test, which he failed. The officer transported the staff sergeant to the Muscogee County jail where he was given a breathalyzer test with a result of .28. He was arrested and was held pending a Recorder's Court hearing.

• A staff sergeant was charged with larceny of government funds and desertion. The soldier left her place of duty without authorization and did not return. The sergeant received pay and allowances from the government in the amount of $6,494.14 while in deserter status. The soldier was arrested by civil authorities and released to military control.

• A private was charged with larceny of nonappropriated fund property (shoplifting). The private removed a stereo radio cassette player from the display shelf and placed it in a bag. The soldier attempted to exit the store and was stopped by Army and Air Force Exchange Service security. He was apprehended and taken to the Military Police station where he was processed, issued identification card confiscation orders, his post exchange privileges were suspended and he was released to his unit.

Other activities included seven cases of driving under the influence of alcohol, nine traffic accidents, 12 cases of larceny and four cases of shoplifting.

Remember to help "Make Our Post the Best — Give Crime Arrest." Report any activity that seems wrong to the Military Police at 545-5223 or 545-5224 or the "Crime in Progress" line at 545-5222.

Q: Tax time is here, and I've heard a lot about changes concerning the Earned Income Credit. What is the credit and what are the changes for the 1994 tax year?

A: The earned income credit is a special credit for certain persons who work. The credit reduces the amount of tax you owe (if any) and is intended to offset some of the increases in living expenses and social security taxes.

In order to get the credit you must:

• File a tax return — even if you do not owe any tax, or you did not earn enough money to file a return

• Meet certain rules

• Fill out the EIC worksheet to figure the amount and where to enter it on Form 1040, 1040A, or 1040EZ.

Who may take the credit?

Beginning with your 1994 tax return, the earned income credit is available to persons with a qualifying child and to persons without a qualifying child.

The important changes for the 1994 tax year are:

• Health insurance credit and the extra credit for a child born during the year. These credits are no longer available.

• Child and dependent care credit. You may be entitled to the child and dependent care in addition to the earned income credit in 1994.

• More people may get the earned income. The earned income credit has expanded to include some persons who work, earn under $9,000, and do not have a qualifying child. The credit could be as much as $306.

• Increased earned income credit amount. If you have one qualifying child, the maximum credit you could get has increased from $1,434 in 1993 to $2,038 in 1994. If you have two or more qualifying children, the maximum credit you could get has increased from $1,511 in 1993 to $2,528 in 1994.

• Increased amount you can earn. The amount of income you can earn and still get the credit has increased. If you have one qualifying child, you can earn less than $23,755. If you have two or more qualifying children, you can earn less than $25,296.

• Form 1040EZ. Beginning with your 1994 tax return, if you do not have a qualifying child, you can use Form 1040EZ to claim the credit.

• Schedule EIC and the EIC Worksheet. Beginning in 1994, not everyone who gets the credit has to fill out Schedule EIC. Only persons who have a qualifying child must fill out Schedule EIC and attach it to Form 1040 or 1040A.

Schedule EIC contains only information about qualifying children. Do not use Schedule EIC to figure the credit. You must use an EIC worksheet to figure the amount of the credit, which can be found in the instructions for Form 1040, 1040A, or 1040EZ.

A PERSONAL LOOK

Name: Cpl. Karen Leakey

Title: MP of the Year

Education: Bachelor's degree in computer science from Nazareth College, Rochester, N.Y.; Army basic training, advanced individual training and Airborne School.

Family: Husband, Stephen.

Future goal: "I know I can be an officer and lead a lot more people."

QUOTE

"The thing I like best about my job is taking care of my troops. It makes me feel good to get a group of soldiers to work as a unit."

Former computer programmer now MP of year

By Jan Wesner Childs
Special to The Bayonet©

Two years ago, Fort Benning's most recent military police officer of the year was working as a computer programmer for a software design company in New York.

Today, Cpl. Karen Leakey is a guard at the post detention facility.

How and why Leakey made such an unlikely career change is easy for the 31-year-old to explain.

"I liked computer science when I was in school," Leakey, who has a bachelor's degree in computer science, said recently. "But being stuck in an office got so boring. I felt like I had to go out and do something. I just felt like I wasn't accomplishing anything."

Leakey has accomplished quite a bit in the 20 months since she quit her job — and took a pay cut — to enlist. She was named MP of the year last month after a series of written and physical tests and a board evaluation.

Leakey said she always wanted to join the Army, but followed the advice of her family and went into computer programming instead.

When she finally decided to follow her own instincts, her family said she was crazy.

Leakey's next goal is to be selected for Officer Candidate School and then make a career out of the Army.

"I have a degree; I know I can be an officer and lead a lot more people," Leakey said. "But I'm not unhappy with what I'm doing right now.

"The thing I like best about my job is taking care of my troops. It makes me feel good to get a group of soldiers to work as a unit."

One of Leakey's supervisors, Staff Sgt. David Costine, said she takes the initiative to get things done before an order is given.

"She's one of the most professional corporals I've ever worked with," Costine said. "She takes the ball and runs with it."

Leakey goes before the OCS board this month. The Fort Benning Installation Detention Facility is closing so Leakey will transfer to Fort Leavenworth, Kansas, if she doesn't make it into OCS this time around.

29th Inf Regt soldier is Retention NCO of Year

By Brett Chamberlain
29th Infantry Regiment

"Awards and recognition are great, but the satisfaction I receive from serving soldiers' needs is my main motivator," said Sgt. 1st Class Ray Woodard, retention noncommissioned officer for 2nd Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment, after being named Training and Doctrine Command's Retention NCO of the Year for fiscal 1994.

Woodard

As one of three finalists selected from a field of 20 retention NCOs representing TRADOC installations, Woodard competed at a board in Colorado Springs, Colo., this past November and brought home the top honors.

According to Woodard, the foundation for his success lay in command support and close interaction with his peers, particularly those within the regiment.

"I could never downplay the emphasis placed on the reenlistment program by commanders at all levels, from Col. (Robert L. Jr.) Jordan, the regimental commander, to the company commanders," Woodard said.

"And, I've also had the good fortune to serve under two battalion commanders who understand the necessity of a strong retention program. They've both shown great personal interest in the program, which makes my job much easier."

With the continuation of the Army's drawdown, one might think that career opportunities for young soldiers would become limited. Woodard said that this is not the case.

"The Army will always have a need for the good, quality soldier, and we as career counselors will do all we can to accommodate their needs and desires. Of course, all is done with the Army's needs in mind, but if a soldier has a specific request and there is a chance to make it happen, we will use all available channels to make it happen." Woodard said.

"After all, the soldier is the reason why I have this job in the first place."

As the TRADOC retention champion, Woodard recently competed as one of 13 finalists for the title of Regular Army Career Counselor of the Year at the Pentagon.

To Woodard, winning that honor would be icing on the cake compared to the day-to-day feeling he receives from simply doing his job.

"Being a soldier is a great profession and being able to help fellow soldiers get the training or assignment they want brings me a great deal of personal satisfaction," Woodard said. "And that, along with keeping the Army strong, is what this job is all about."

THE NEXT TIME YOU DRIVE TO ATLANTA TO CATCH A FLIGHT... ATTACH THIS TO YOUR WINDOW!

Some folks think that to get the cheapest airfare or the best airline connection, it's necessary to drive to Atlanta. Leaving Columbus two hours early to make the 100 mile drive, parking their car in a suburb of Harris County, fighting the crowds, catching a train and finding any one of hundreds of departure gates, and then being faced with the same grim process on their return, doesn't seem to deter the cost-conscious traveller in his quest to find the absolute lowest fare.

Captains' RIF canceled

Army News Service

WASHINGTON — The reduction-in-force board for basic-branch captains scheduled to convene Tuesday has been canceled, according to Army personnel officials.

The need for the RIF was offset by a sufficient number of applications for voluntary separation.

Likewise, "Category one" of the fiscal 1995 Voluntary Separation Incentive Program (captains with dates of rank from March 2, 1990, to March 1, 1991, with less than 14 years active federal service), and "Category D" of the Early Retirement Program (captains with dates of rank from March 2, 1990, to March 1, 1991, with more than 15 years active federal active service), was closed Jan. 19.

Voluntary Separation applications dated Jan. 19 or earlier will continue to be processed, officials said.

The RIF originally could have selected as many as 583 officers for involuntary separation out of an eligible population of about 2,700.

UN names Haiti commander

Army News Service

WASHINGTON — Defense Secretary William Perry recently announced that the secretary general of the United Nations intends to name Maj. Gen. Joseph W. Kinzer for assignment as commander of the U.N. Mission in Haiti.

The UNMIH is authorized under the provision of United Nations Security Council Resolution 940, which authorizes a force level of 6,000 troops and calls for the completion of the U.N. mission by February 1996.

The UNMIH will assume control of operations from the multinational forces, commanded by Maj. Gen. David C. Meade in early 1995.

It was previously announced that Lt. Gen. Daniel R. Schroeder would be nominated for the position; however, the assignment of a lieutenant general would require a Senate confirmation.

Appointment of a major general will avoid any delay caused by a potentially lengthy confirmation process, facilitate a smooth transition from the multinational forces to the UNMIH, and still place a qualified and experienced officer in command.

Kinzer is currently assigned as the deputy commanding general, Fifth U.S. Army, at Fort Sam Houston, Texas.

No more blue helmets for OCS Candidates

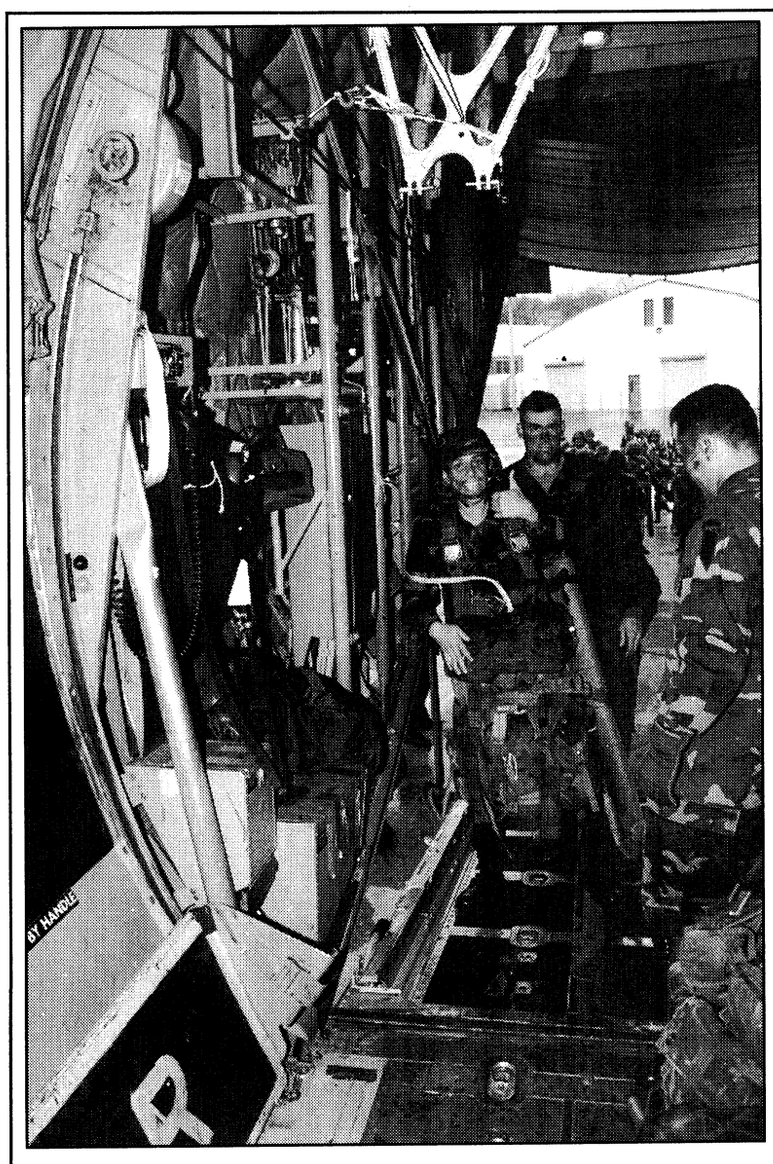
Officer Candidate School

As the Fort Benning community already knows, 3rd Battalion (Officer Candidate School), 11th Infantry Regiment, has the responsibility to train, educate and commission Army officers.

What is not readily known is the different phases of the OCS candidate's training that culminates in receiving a commission as a second lieutenant in the U. S. Army.

When an officer candidate enters OCS, he or she faces a 14-week course of leader development. Weeks one through four are the Basic Phase; candidates are referred to as basic officer candidates. Weeks five through 10 are the Intermediate Phase; candidates are referred to as intermediate officer candidates. Weeks 11 through 14 are the Senior Phase; candidates are senior officer candidates.

During Senior Phase, the candidates complete the transition from their enlisted background to commissioned officership. The candidates receive the courtesies due to a commissioned officer. For example, basic and intermediate candidates are required to salute the senior officer candidates in passing.



Senior candidates acquire increased responsibility, performing as staff duty officer for 3rd Bn., 11th Inf. Regt. and representing the battalion commander in his absence. Senior candidates are briefed to understand that their duty is not that of charge of quarters, but they have a higher responsibility and accountability.

Ordinarily, during Senior Phase, candidates are issued blue helmets and white ascots. If there is one thing all OCS graduates remember, it is the opportunity to "go blue."

Wearing the blue helmet meant that a candidate was "over the hump," so to speak, and finally approaching his or her destiny. The blue helmet gives SOCs the same satisfaction that lieutenant's bars give to commissioned officers.

Effective Jan. 8, which began OCS Class 2-95 (conducted by Company A), OCS candidates no longer display the blue helmet during senior status. OCS Class 1-95 (conducted by Company C), which graduated Jan. 26, marks the end of this tradition. Candidates will continue to display the white ascot. Future candidates will look forward to the opportunity to "go white."

Lt. Col. Donald B. Chung, commander, 3rd Bn., 11th Inf. Regt., understands there will be some disappointment among past graduates. But he assures that the battalion will uphold the focus and standards of training of the Senior Phase. Candidates will continue to conduct the Senior Status Review, which is the opportunity for the community to observe the candidates as they make their debut as senior officer candidates.

Gearing up ...

About 250 soldiers from the 1st Battalion (Airborne), 507th Infantry, 11th Infantry Regiment, participated in a mass tactical parachute jump Jan. 27.
The soldiers jumping were not Airborne School students, but the instructors, administrators riggers and support personnel from all areas of the Airborne School.
Though not a requirement in a school environment, the battalion is planning to make the "mass tac" jump a quarterly exercise to help career parachutists complete requirements for senior or master parachutist qualifications and to maintain proficiency in the conduct and planning of tactical airborne operations.

National Guard, active duty join forces at OCS

'Active Guard' TACs train future officers

By Ruth J. Spaller
Bayonet staff writer

The U.S. Army National Guard and active duty components took a concrete step toward becoming a more "total Army" with the graduation of Company C, 3rd Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment (Officer Candidate School), Jan 26.

The 110 graduating lieutenants are the product of the first OCS class taught entirely by National Guard officers and noncommissioned officers on active duty status.

The cadre of Company C is made up of 11 National Guardsmen who volunteered to serve three-year "active guard" tours as teaching, assessment and counseling officers and NCOs. (Known familiarly at OCS as "TACs.")

"This is unique in that this is the first time National Guard cadre have trained a (mostly) active component class," said Capt. Don Brown, commander, Co. C. "Ten years ago, you never would have heard of that."

Ruth J. Spaller

Teaching, assessment and counseling noncommissioned officer Staff Sgt. Calvin Glenn (left) evaluates candidate David M. Dudas' performance on a weapons task.

But today, in an Army that deploys active duty, reserve and National Guard soldiers to serve shoulder to shoulder, training that way seems to make sense.

"I think this is one of the first "total Army" initiatives where you have really got a fully integrated, total Army perspective," said Lt. Col. Donald B. Chung, commandant of the Officer Candidate School.

Chung, referring to Army Chief of Staff Gen. Gordon R. Sullivan's "golden rule" in leader philosophy, said that team building is based on mutual trust and respect, which sets the tone for how to train leaders. Having a company of active guard cadre training active duty, National Guard and reserve officer candidates fits right in with that, Chung said.

"This probably sets the first example for the young second lieutenant — breaks the old images, old perceptions, that sometimes haunt the National Guard," Chung said.

Working with guard cadre is a living example of the total Army concept, said officer candidate John M. Cantin.

"The Army's trying to integrate, and this really fosters that interaction," he said.

"This gives the AC (active component) a chance to see us and say 'oh the guard, they're just like us' — they see that we've been to the same schools, that we know more than they maybe gave us credit for," said Capt. Shawn Welch, senior TAC of Co. C.

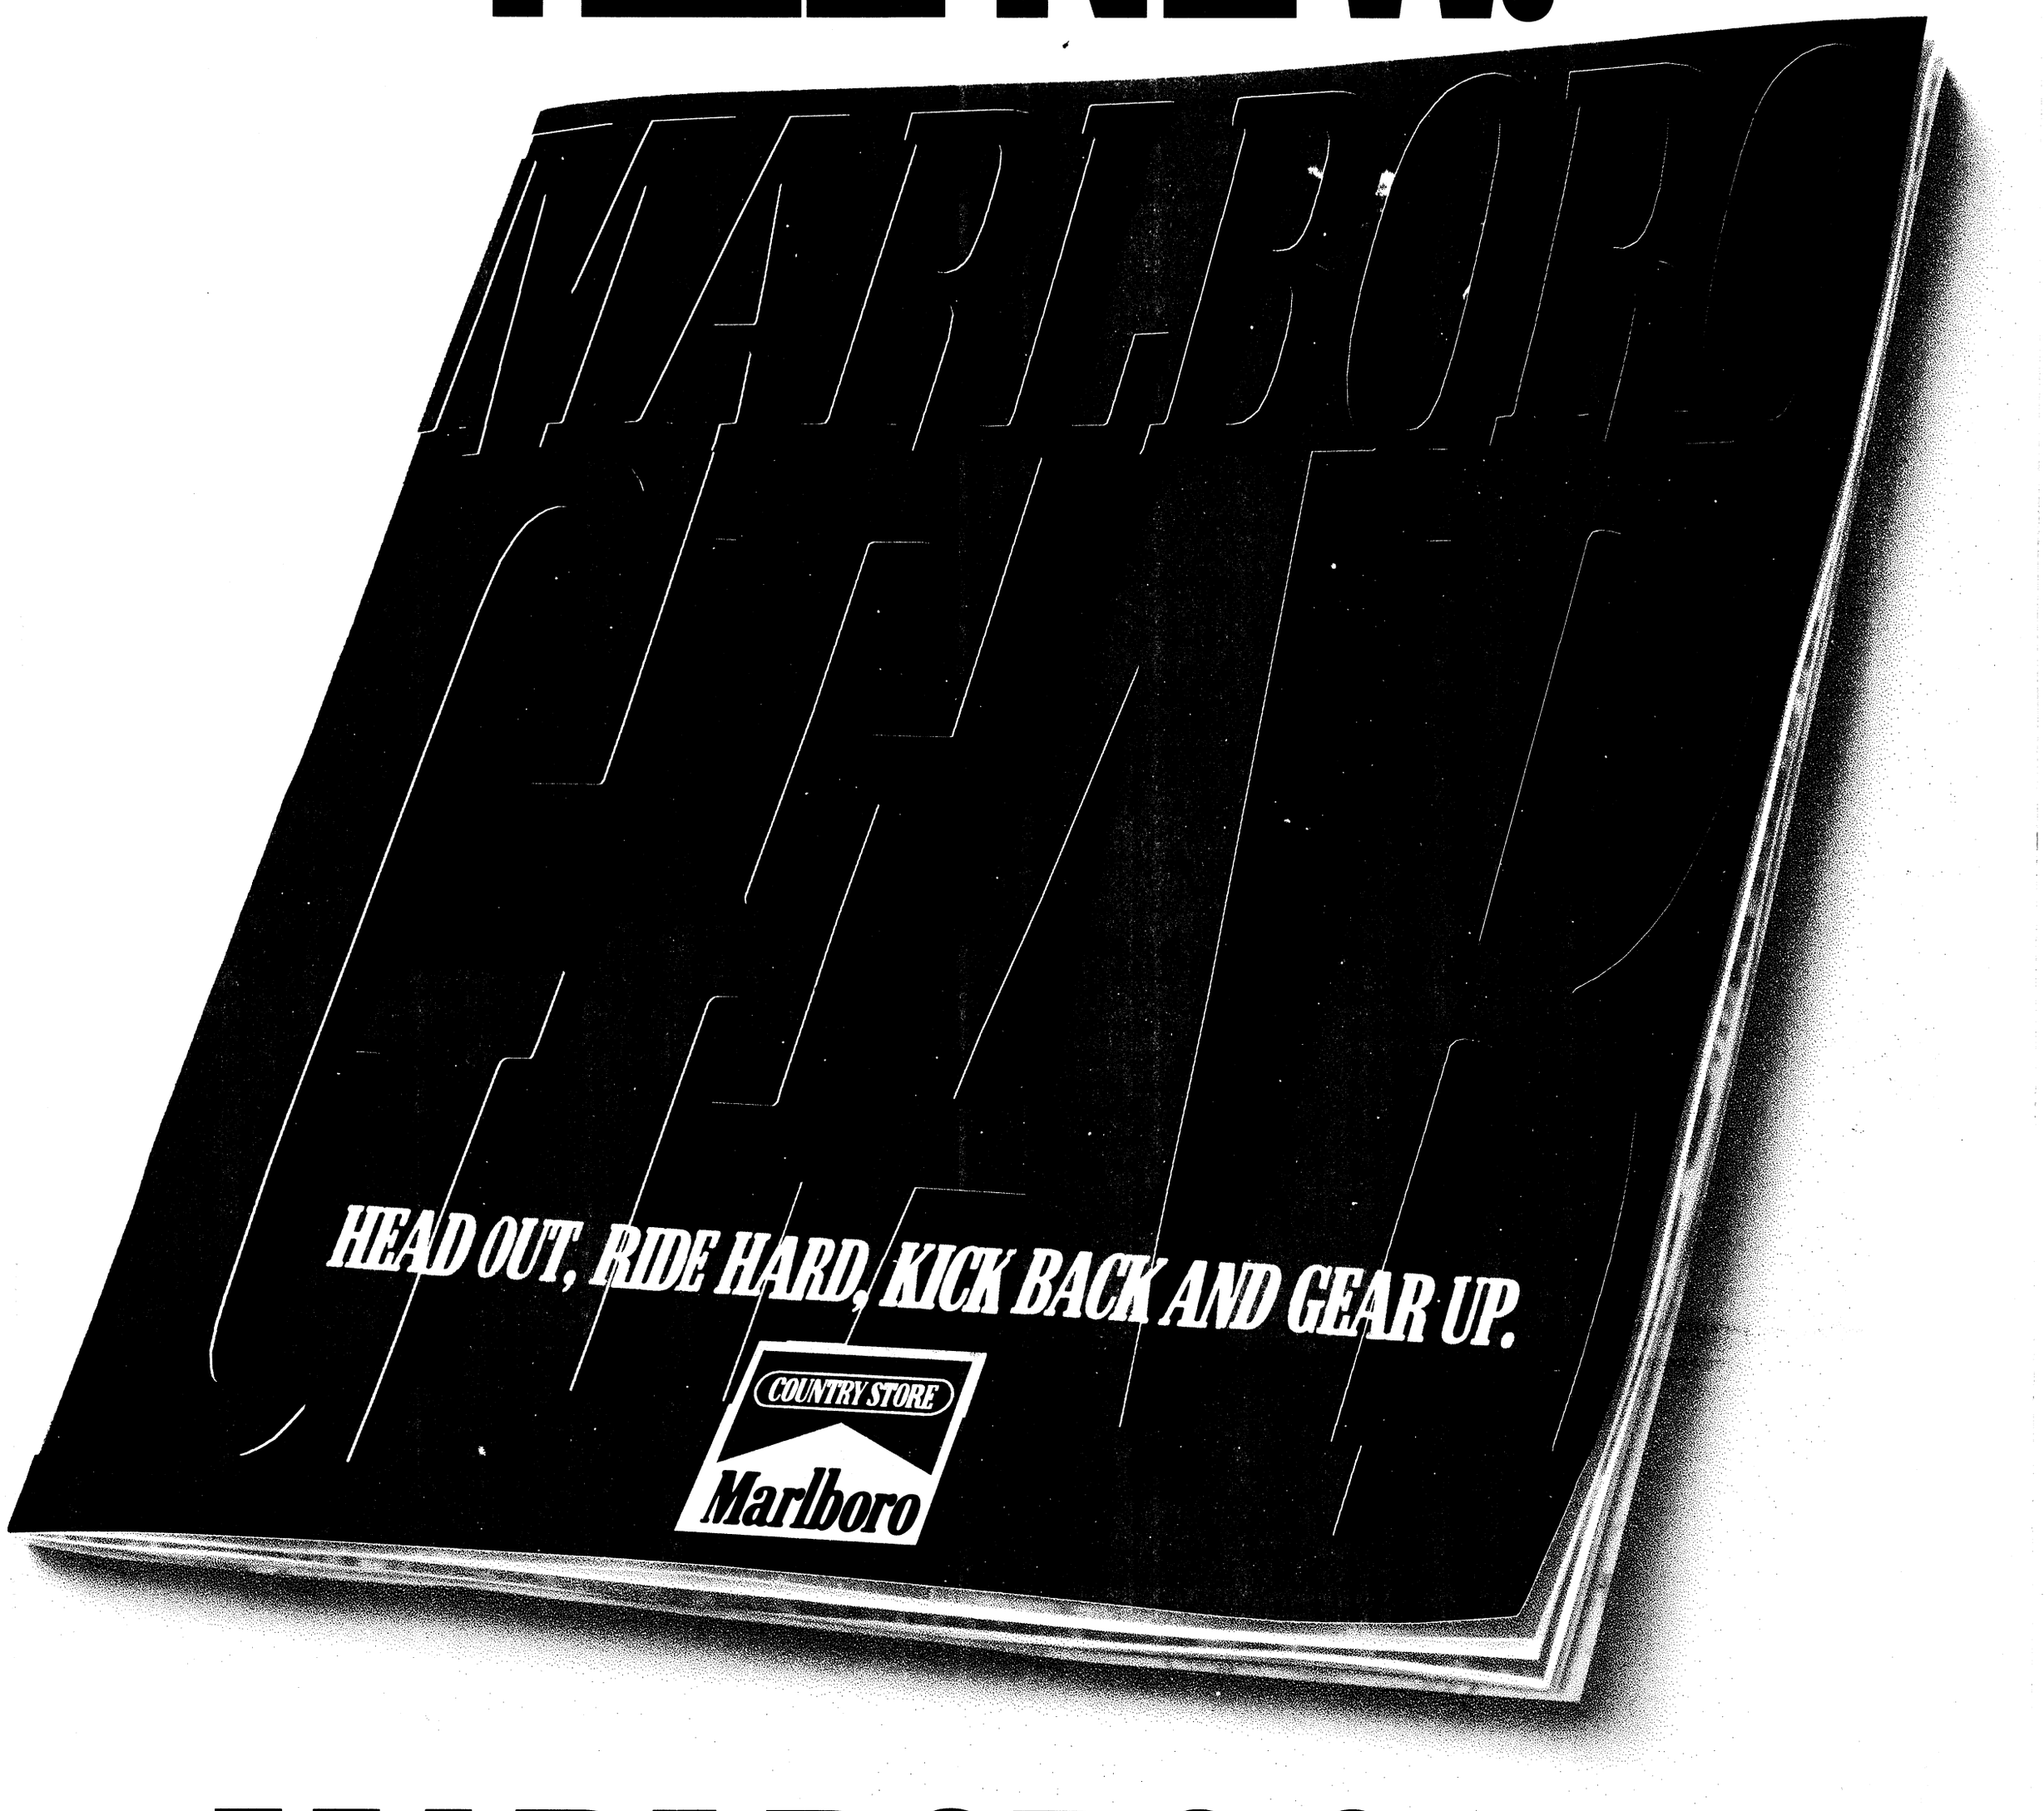
Many of the active guard TAC officers have not only worked in the civilian world, but have also served on active duty, and they can "co-relate," said TAC officer Capt. Peter K. Kemp.

The guard cadre bring with them a "diverse background of knowledge and experience," Kemp said. "They know what it takes to be successful 'outside,' and they know what it takes to be successful here."

Overall, Company C gives the Officer Candidate School a "blended perspective," Chung said, with a "cross fertilization" of active duty and National Guard.

"For us in the active component, this has allowed us to work hand in hand with the National Guard and Reserve ... we all have the same focus, and that is to produce the same standard of officer, regardless of component," Chung said.

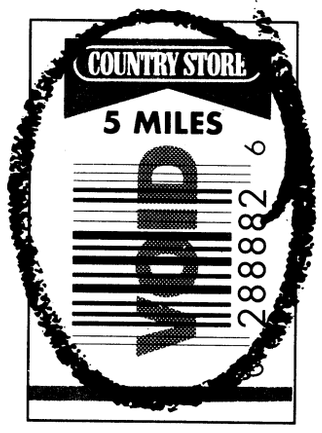
Taking this one step further, Chung said, the school will soon be expanding its mission to include support of the state-run National Guard OCS programs.



Ideally, they could support the writing of exams and distribution of material using state of the art technology, and provide assistance visits to look at and enhance the training that is ongoing in each of the regions, Chung said.

"It goes back to the idea of coming down to one standard of training that results in fine officers regardless of component," Chung said.

Chung said he hopes Company C can serve as a model for rest of the Army and other Army schools, and he looks forward to where this will lead.



"This initiative," he said, "has allowed the U.S. Army Officer Candidate School, quite frankly, to be an equal partner with ROTC and West Point in the development of the officers of the 21st century Army."

Special Education preschoolers get off the bus to begin their school day.

As the sun filtered through the aquarium in the window and cast dancing shadows of swimming goldfish onto the alphabet carpet, the preschoolers filed into the room for a typical day.

They hung up jackets to the beat of a Sesame Street record, a daily ritual, and prepared for the first of several activities at various tables.

When they came to the table to fashion paper horns, it seemed to matter little that some came in wheelchairs or with aluminum walkers. Others with more hidden disabilities such as emotional disorders or cognitive delays crowded around the table searching for just the right marker for coloring their project.

These children, part of the Fort Benning preschool program for children with disabilities, come together for the standard reasons: to learn and play together while preparing for kindergarten.

The program is open to children who live on post who have a physical, mental or emotional disability, said Tommye Woods, director of special education for the Fort Benning Schools. Now in its seventh year, the program was established before Congress mandated special education for preschoolers in 1991 because "the Fort Benning (school) administration saw that we needed earlier intervention," Woods said.

"We were in place before the law (public law 99-457) took effect. The administration has always been very supportive of special education," she said.

This year a total of 28 children between the ages of 3 and 5 are served in preschool classes at Wilson or Stowers schools.

In addition, more than 30 preschoolers attend "speech only" classes, Woods said.

As teachers Carolyn McCollum and Cheri Corser structure activities for their young charges, they are supported regularly by aides, physical and occupational therapists, speech and language pathologists and interested parents.

Teachers provide varied activities geared to meet the individual needs of each child as defined by that student's Individual Education Program. The IEP is a statement of goals and expectations agreed upon by parents and educators.

An activity such as tossing a ball can mean different things to children as they work on personal goals; it may mean physical therapy to strengthen muscles for one youngster while to the autistic child it is a chance to leave a private world and interact with peers. Still another may be working on attention span by focusing on a game while a language disordered student exercises his speech skills as he asks for his turn.

Children in the preschool program have a wide range of disabilities from mild to severe; the program serves or has served children who are speech and language disordered, visually or hearing impaired, behaviorally or emotionally disordered, developmentally delayed and those who have limited mobility.

To ensure each child is successful, "it's important to start at the developmental age of the child," McCollum said. "It's fun for them if they're successful," she said while observing her students interact with older "buddies" at Wilson School who have exchanged points for good grades and behavior for the privilege of visiting the preschoolers.

"Buddies" aren't the only ones involved with the preschoolers; parents often visit the classes.

Parental support has two benefits: families see techniques for teaching and motivating, and parents have an easier time "letting go" of children as they enter school, Woods said.

Family member Helen Hilgers said family support is a key ingredient for the success of the youngsters. Hilgers, a regular volunteer, observed her son, Brett, sharing a toy boat and said, "He has improved 100 percent since he's been here. His speech has improved along with his attitude; he wants to please everyone."

Brett will join some classmates in attending regular kindergarten next year. Others will require special education support services but will be mainstreamed into some regular classes. Still others will remain in special education classes, interacting with regular classes as much as possible.

Whether they remain in special education or not, educators say they hope to raise awareness of these preschoolers as children first and foremost who just happen to have exceptional needs. Educators say it's working; older students at Stowers and Wilson think of the preschoolers not as disabled, but as "the little kids."

A variety of toys helps students understand and feel comfortable with individual differences, including dolls who use canes, wheelchairs, hearing aids and walkers. When the dolls arrived last week, Corser bent close to catch a phrase from a youngster in a wheelchair playing with the doll in a wheelchair. Apparently, something was wrong and Corser listened attentively as the student communicated what the problem was — the doll wasn't wearing shoes. Everyone wears shoes to school, the youngster signed.

Teachers and students often communicate using Makaton, which encourages expressive and receptive language skills.

Educators say they love teaching exceptional children, but, in an interesting reversal of roles, they also learn from them. They say these preschoolers often teach important lessons about setting goals, about always trying your hardest, about finding joy in the small victories of life, and about accepting others as they are.

"When I need a lift, I like to come in here," said Woods as McCollum's morning class celebrated a victory. A youngster had taken a few tentative steps on his aluminum walker, and he was rejoicing with friends at his new accomplishment.

Special education office offers screenings, brochures

When parents enter the Fort Benning special education office seeking services for their preschoolers, they don't leave empty handed. Free screening tests identify children eligible, but not all children who come in for testing have disabilities. Whether or not children are eligible for the program, parents receive a variety of brochures to help with the concerns that brought them to the office such as thumb-sucking, temper tantrums, peer relations and the impact of divorce. For more information on the preschool program for children with disabilities, contact the special education department at 545-5520.

Boy Scouts aim for confidence

By Marlene Tikal
U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit

There was a time Kyle Peltmann's hands may have shaken with fear. Now — thanks to the confidence boost of a U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit soldier standing beside him — he takes a firm, but relaxed grasp of the 12-gauge shotgun.

Firing a shotgun was a first for Peltmann and most of the other 18 Troop 75 Boy Scouts who ventured from Marietta, Ga., to Fort Benning Saturday. It's also one of the requirements for earning the Boy Scouts of America Merit Shooting Badge, Fred Britton, assistant scout master, said.

But that's not all.

"They also have to learn the proper use and care of the weapon," Britton said. "Since handling a shotgun is a first-time experience for most of the Scouts, we wanted them to learn the basics in a controlled environment."

And, according to Britton, there's no better bunch to teach the basics and help the Scouts earn the Merit Shooting Badge than the USAMU marksmen.

"After all," he said, "they're the experts. Most of them have qualified as being among the best shooters in the world."

But being the best isn't easy, according to Sgt. 1st Class Richard Haynie, noncommissioned officer in charge of the USAMU Shotgun Section. On top of participating in hours of rigorous training on a daily basis, USAMU marksmen must also know the rules of shooting safety inside out.

"And if there's anything we can teach these boys," Haynie said, "it's to follow those rules of safety to the letter."

That means wearing proper eye and hearing protection, keeping the weapon pointed in a safe direction, and leaving the weapon unloaded until ready to fire, Haynie said. It also means having a healthy respect for the weapon and realizing the damage it's capable of doing if not handled properly.

The Scouts, who fall between the ages of 14 and 17 years old, are the perfect candidates for learning these lessons of safety, Haynie said.

"That's because, having not fired a shotgun before, there's an element of fear involved that's going to make them respect that shotgun," he said. "As a result, they'll be more receptive to the instruction we have to give them."

Verifying Haynie's statement, it's with some trepidation Peltman approaches the firing line. Even after receiving several classes on shooting safety, breathing techniques and proper stance, he still shifts nervously on his feet.

Taking the shotgun in his hands, he loads it and braces the butt of the weapon against his shoulder before quickly firing off a few shots. The clay targets flying through the air have so far escaped unscathed. However, a few words of encouragement from Spc. Joseph Buffa of the USAMU shotgun team have an impact on Peltman. The next target isn't as lucky.

"I was nervous at first," Peltmann said, adding that his greatest fear was of the kick of the weapon. "I thought it would hurt. But it didn't. I actually had a lot of fun."

And for braving his first shotgun experience and earning his merit badge, Peltman and his fellow Scouts were treated to a special class given by former Olympian Maj. Wanda Jewell of the USAMU International Rifle Team. During the class, Jewell commended the Scouts for their winning attitudes and interest in the sport of shooting.

Jewell even went so far as to compare them to Olympians.

"We all have areas of interest we can excel in and become the best we can be," she said. "I think all the Scouts proved that today."

New video games to be tested on post

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet©

Some of the most technologically advanced video games in the world will soon allow Fort Benning enthusiasts to conquer the universe without leaving the safety of their virtual reality goggles.

As part of a pilot program by the Army's Community Service Center, Fort Benning is one of the first posts to receive some of the most popular and technologically advanced video games in the world, including "Tekken," "Virtual Fighter," "Video X Man," "Mad Dog II," "Primal Rage," "T-Mek" and "Daytona U.S.A," as well as several of the most popular pinball machines.

"These are absolutely the latest, state-of-the-art video games, incorporating the latest computer, laser and virtual reality technologies," said Brian Smith, Directorate of Community Activities Marketing director. "We are proud to be able to offer these for the enjoyment of Fort Benning residents."

According to Smith, the new games will be placed in 11 locations — the Main NCO Club, Afterhours, Bradley's, the Rally Point, the Sand Hill and Kelley Hill Recreation centers, both bowling centers, both laundromats, the Youth Services Center and the Drop Zone.

Smith said all the games will be on post and fully operational by the middle of this month. In addition, exhibitions are planned featuring company representatives and some of the nation's top players, as well as contests at the individual locations.

John Bush, chief of Community Operations Division, said that video games see a high level of usage among soldiers.

"Video games are extremely popular overall," he said. "In fact, nationally, video games take in more money than all of the movie theaters."

One of the biggest benefits of the program, Smith said, is that money generated from the games will be used for future quality of life improvements on post.

"The program is self-sustaining," he said. Not a dime of taxpayer money is used to finance this project. Money generated by the games is put back into the funds to improve post facilities. By playing these games, post residents are actually helping to improve their quality of life."

'Live for today' chaplain preaches

By Jan Wesner Childs
Special to The Bayonet©

Live for today.

That was the simple but inspirational message delivered by Chaplain (Col.) Calvin Sydnor, Training and Doctrine Command Headquarters Chaplain, at a Jan. 26 National Prayer Breakfast program at the Officers' Club.

"The problem with many of us is that we live in the past," Sydnor told the more than 400 people gathered for the event. "I see soldiers, I hear soldiers say, 'That last assignment was the best ... that last sergeant major was the best sergeant major in the Army.' "

"Then some of us live in the future. We no sooner get to one assignment than we start looking to the next assignment."

Sydnor was the keynote speaker at the prayer breakfast, part of an annual national event. The program also featured the Infantry Band, Infantry Chorus, the Praise Three singers and several hymns and readings.

The theme of the program was "Conversations with God: Prayers of our Soldiers." A pamphlet was handed out that included several original prayers from Fort Benning soldiers (see box.)

Sydnor recited a favorite psalm that he urged everyone to live by: "For this is the day the Lord hath made, let us rejoice and be glad in it."

Many people, he said, cannot be satisfied with today.

"We tend to vacillate between the future and the past and that's something I think we should guard against," he said. "Because when we live in the past and we live in the future, we are not living our lives to the fullest.

"Just think what would happen if we could focus all of our energy on today."

Sydnor said society is going through difficult times, and people should lean on their faith — no matter which religion they choose — for support.

"I think we are at a crossroads in our lives," he said. "Certainly there are a lot of changes in the military."

Fort Benning Commanding General Maj. Gen. John Hendrix took a moment to praise Army chaplains for their work.

"It's a life of service," Hendrix said. "It has its unique challenges."

From weddings to funerals to counseling sessions, Hendrix said chaplains face "an emotional roller coaster" every day.

"A Warrior's Prayer"

"As another sun folds, we take a knee,
one day closer to the Infantry.
Let us remember to thank the Lord,
for our good deeds will shine through our swords.
Step by step leading the way,
bless us Lord, in your own special way.
Before we lay down and close our eyes,
cross our hearts for the soldiers who died.
They will never be forgotten.
INFANTRY FOLLOW ME. Amen."

Science spins spiritual

USAIC Chaplains' Office

Coming to Fort Benning Feb. 12, the acclaimed Sermons from Science series will bring its live platform demonstrations to Fort Benning. Sermons from Science aims to use scientific phenomena to demonstrate the power and design of natural law.

The programs will be presented at 7 p.m. Feb. 12 to 15 at Marshall Auditorium at Infantry Hall. Each program is different and all are open to the public.

Dean Ortner, who has been presenting these demonstrations since 1973, uses an array of scientific and electronic equipment to convey his message.

During the programs his audiences experience a frozen shadow, music on a laser beam, floating metal rings, liquid light and a cry that shatters glass.

The series climaxes as Ortner climbs on a generator and allows 1 million volts of high-frequency electricity to pass through his body, causing a board to burst into flames.

Sermons from Science has been presented to standing-room-only crowds at Olympic games, world fairs, Camp David and all each of the U.S. military academies.

The demonstrations have been given on more than 600 U.S. military bases in the U.S. and abroad.

More than 5 1/2 million people have attended these programs since their inception.

Muslims to celebrate holy month of Ramadan

USAIC Chaplains' Office

reflections

Muslim soldiers and their family members will soon celebrate the holy month of Ramadan. This month-long period of fasting is observed each day from dawn to sundown and is followed each evening by a breaking of the fast (Iftar).

In "Christians and Muslims Together," Byron Haines writes:

The most physically rigorous of the [five] pillars of Islam is ... "fasting." ... During the days in Ramadan, nothing may pass between the lips of the worshiper, and marital relations are suspended. By this ritual, Muslims demonstrate their dependence only upon God for that which is of worth and not upon the things of the world, even food or human pleasures. The daytime fast also emphasizes that the bounty of God should not be taken for granted, and that hardship in the name of God is preferable to worldly ease without God.

The approximate beginning date for Ramadan is Feb. 1. It is observed continuously for 29 or 30 days, depending on the lunar calendar. During Ramadan, Muslims fast each day from 1 1/2 hours before sunrise (dawn) until after sunset. During these hours a Muslim may not eat or drink. At the conclusion of Ramadan, Eid-Ul-Fitr is observed. For three days thanksgiving and rejoicing is celebrated. This year Eid-Ul-Fitr falls on either March 3 or 4, depending on the lunar calendar.

Commanders and other leaders are reminded that under the accommodation of religious practices policy in AR 600-20, Army Command Policy, soldiers may need some consideration to allow them to observe these religious celebrations. Typical of these requests is release from duty each day prior to sunset in order to make the necessary preparations for observance of Iftar (the traditional fast breaking meal) and for sunset prayer. Exceptions may also be made for participation in rigorous daily physical training or when total abstinence from food or water would create undue hardship.

It is recommended that commanders and supervisors liberally grant leaves and passes for soldiers and civilians to observe the celebration of Eid-Ul-Fitr.

POST HONORS SOLDIER KILLED

Ranger lost during training exercise

Friends gather to remember 21-year-old sgt

By Karen S. Morarie
Bayonet staff writer

Hundreds of rangers, along with friends and family members, gathered Feb. 3 in Infantry Hall's Marshall Auditorium to mark the passing of one of their own.

Sgt. Alphonse J. Harness, communications sergeant for Company C, 3rd Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment, was killed Jan. 20 while fast-roping from a helicopter during a Joint Readiness Training Center exercise at Fort Polk, La.

The 21-year-old ranger is survived by his wife, Karena, and 2-year-old daughter, Brittney.

"What do we say when a friend or family member is struck down?" said Chaplain (Capt.) Phillip Wright, battalion chaplain, who gave the invocation and delivered a memorial message at the ceremony. "I can't give you a reason, moral, logical or theological, for what happened out there that Friday night."

Those gathered weren't looking for reasons — as some of the speakers pointed out; part of being a ranger is knowing life is never certain. Instead, those who worked with Harness shared their memories of the young man.

"He always shouldered more than his share of the task," said Mike Menster, former communications sergeant for Co. C. "(The company) has lost a great man, a great soldier and a great ranger. We miss you, ranger buddy."

Warrant Officer Jeth Rey, who worked with Harness, said he used to call the sergeant "Mike Tyson," because of his resemblance to the former champion.

"He was such a great guy," Rey said. "He's going to be my ranger buddy for life, whether he's here or not.

"I saw him that last day," Rey said. "He ran all the way to my tent just to say, 'Chief, I'm leaving on my mission. I'll see you when I get back.'

"I saw him (after the mission)" Rey said. "But not the way I wanted to."

Sgt. Jerome Misher, a friend of Harness', said the two met in Airborne School.

"I asked him, 'Does your mom know you're here?'" Misher said. "He replied, 'Do your grandkids know you're missing?'"

Misher's voice broke as he said Harness had "a smile you couldn't resist and a sense of humor that left you on your knees."

Misher said despite his age, Harness had a great knowledge and understanding of his duty position.

"If anyone had a question, he had an answer," Misher said.

"He loved being married to Karena, and being the ideal father to his daughter, Brittney," Misher said.

Harness' company commander, Capt. Troy Krause, said, "He was a blithe spirit among us. This is a job few 21-year-olds could do, or be entrusted with."

Krause said before the fast-rope exercise, Harness checked his captain's equipment. "He found a call sheet in my back pocket, and scolded me with a big smile on his face," Krause said.

Just before the exercise, he said, "Sgt. Harness and I stood up, the last of 50 rangers to leave the aircraft — one by one, they exited the helicopter ... one man exited, and fell into the lap of God."

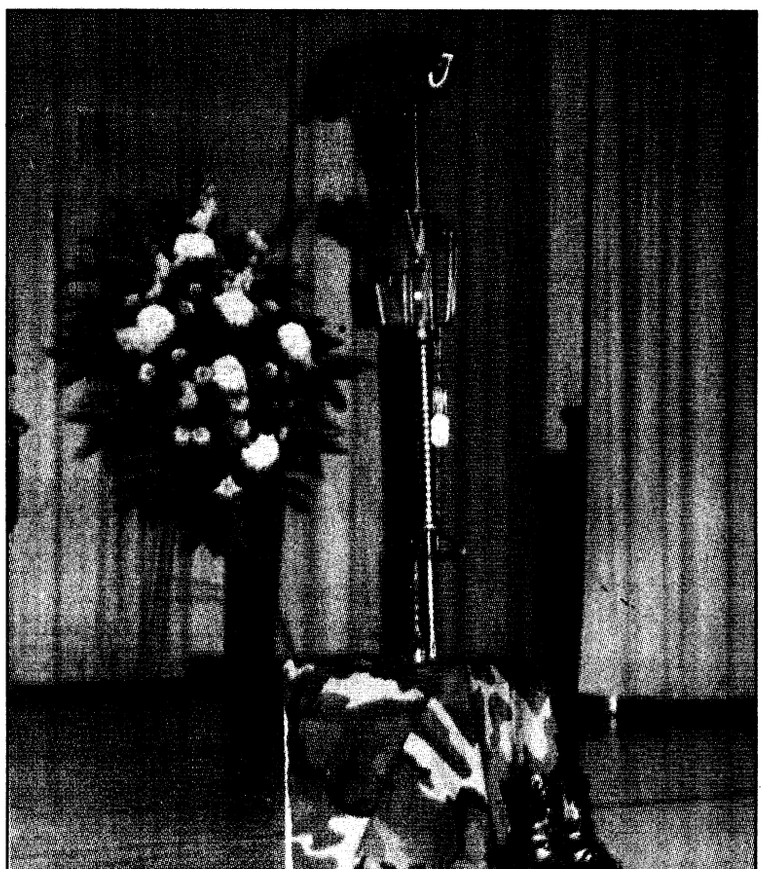
After the remarks, the audience stood to sing "America the Beautiful." The slow, measured tones of the song died away to silence, then one by one, single voices spoke from various parts of the auditorium, reciting phrases of the ranger creed, to be answered by the rolling baritone thunder of the voices of every ranger present.

"Recognizing that I volunteered as a ranger ... fully knowing the hazards of my chosen profession ... I will always endeavor ... to uphold the prestige, honor and high 'esprit de corps' ... of my ranger regiment."

The last echoes of the creed's conclusion, "Though I be the lone survivor," faded, and the ceremony concluded with the traditional "last roll call."

Clipboard in hand, 1st Sgt. Sherman Fuller mounted the stage and stood beside Harness' empty boots and M-16 topped with his black beret. Three times, Fuller called Harness' name, until a ranger in the audience answered, "He's not here."

Lights dimmed, and a grim-faced Fuller said, "Sgt. Alphonse J. Harness was killed in a training accident Jan. 20, 1995."



The ceremony concluded, leaving many audience members in tears.

As Harness' family members were escorted from the auditorium, Brittney was carried out by her grandmother, asleep, her head on the woman's shoulder.

Afterhours new enlisted club opens Today

Directorate of Community Activities

Many months of planning and construction will finally pay off with the opening at 6 p.m. today of Afterhours, the new junior enlisted club located across from the Airborne Snackbar.

The evening will feature an ample supply of free food, a chance to compete in a robotic boxing tournament and a visit by Wes Flowers who will compete with contestants on the new video game "Fast Draw Showdown."

Also, there will be plenty of giveaways, such as T-shirts, hats, stadium cups and key chains to name a few.

Starting at 7 p.m., Afterhours will feature the Canadian Mist Robotic Boxing Tournament. The winner of the tournament will take home $300 in cash.

Contestants will strap into robots and will battle each other for three 30-second rounds under the direction of the referee.

The elimination-style competitions, using the "Sega Genesis Greatest Heavyweights" game, give participants the opportunity to become one of the greatest heavyweights of all time.

Players can choose from: Muhammad Ali, Jack Dempsey, Joe Frazier, Larry Holmes, Rocky Marciano and Floyd Patterson.

Points are scored by making hits to your opponent's head. If the head stays up for a three count, the contestant will have an automatic knockout.

Flowers is billed as the "fastest draw in the world." He lives in Tombstone, Ariz., and is waiting to challenge any and all to the final gun battle. Participants may arrive early and practice "Fast Draw Showdown" as games will be free in preparation for the event.

Post receives $1.3 million for 'unleading'

By Ruth J. Spaller
Bayonet staff writer

Fort Benning has received more than $1.3 million from the Training and Doctrine Command to treat lead paint in post housing units and minimize the risks to children associated with it.

Three contracts have been awarded, and treatment of lead paint has already begun on Austin Loop, said Kenneth G. Hankins, chief of housing.

Work there is scheduled to be completed in September. Two other contractors will start work in other affected areas in March, and renovations should be finished within 180 days, weather permitting, Hankins said.

The contractors will be scraping loose paint off exterior walls, removing rotten wood and repainting the quarters. The paint shards and wood will then be removed as hazardous waste.

The majority of the lead paint is on the outside of the quarters, Hankins said. Lead may have been present in the enamel paint used for kitchen and bathroom walls, but these have been painted over so many times it has been effectively sealed in, or "encapsulated," Hankins said, and is safe unless chipping or peeling exposes the old lead paint.

When all work is finished, the 493 units identified as high risk for lead in a survey conducted by the Directorate of Public Works and Martin Army Community Hospital in December 1993 will be renovated.

The units pinpointed have been closed to families with children age 6 and under since the initial survey, but "when the project is completed they will be open to all families again," Hankins said.

Most of the housing units identified were older wooden structures on Main Post. Streets where lead encapsulation will take place include Miller Loop, Eames Avenue, Rainbow Avenue, Sigerfoos, Bjonstad, 1st Division Road, Lumpkin Road, Yeager, Stewart, Gaines, Harris Circle and Ingersoll Loop.

To ensure minimal exposure, DPW is asking residents to leave their quarters while work is being done during the day. Though residents can return to their homes in the evenings, DPW has arranged for residents to stay in the new Guest House while work is being done on their quarters.

The only unit not completed will be Riverside, the commanding general's home.

If you have any questions about lead paint, contact the Directorate of Public Works at 545-3803.

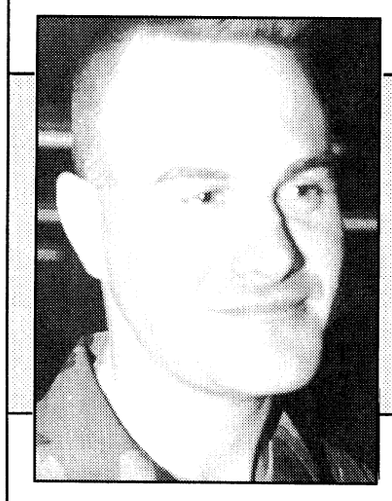
Reduce lead risks to children

USAIC Public Affairs Office

High levels of lead can cause learning disabilities and other health problems in young children when they are exposed to lead over a period of time, according to Lt. Col. Daniel Davidson, chief of Martin Army Community Hospital's Preventive Medicine Service.

When lead paint is exposed, children may eat paint chips or get dust from peeling paint on their hands and then in their mouths, he said.

Exposure can be prevented in environments where lead paint is present by keeping quarters clean and free of lead dust, Davidson said.



Fort Benning medical facilities have had 13 cases of children with "higher than normal blood lead levels, but no other health effects" reported in the last year, Davidson said. Eight of those children live on post, five off post.

But the work currently being done to remove lead paint from the exterior of post quarters should alleviate the problem here, he said. "Once paint is encapsulated, it's not a health risk any longer," Davidson said. "We expect that painting will take care of the problem completely."

If you have questions about lead and your children's health, contact your family practice physician or the Preventive Medicine Service at 545-1144.

Valentine's Day

'90s 'all work no play' death of romance

By Karen S. Morarie
Bayonet staff writer

commentary

The topic of the week is Valentine's Day, or, Whatever Happened to Romance, Anyway?

You romantics are still out there, of course. You just have scheduling problems. Between dual careers, school, kids and extracurricular activities, you just don't have time for valentines. And this year, the day falls on Tuesday, the most unromantic day of the week, except for Monday.

However, romantics never give up, and it looks like most of us have at least a little closet romance in our souls. For instance, two men in my informal survey aren't celebrating on the 14th. One has rugby practice and it's the other's bowling night. But both admitted that they would be pushing the celebration up to Monday, not canceling it altogether. (Of course, it's a good thing football season's over, or that day would be taken, too.)

This casual rescheduling is a product of the '90s. You soon learn that if you want to get together with someone, you have to be flexible — you should see my office trying to plan a Christmas party. I think it was Jan. 6 this year.

Anyway, people I talked to are mostly moving their Valentine's Day around, but they're otherwise taking it seriously, and the men have some good ideas this year:

• Dinner at Columbus' swankiest restaurant and a diamond ring (this is very good, but as another man pointed out, hard to follow up on. What's left for next year?)

• Dinner at a less swanky, but very nice, restaurant, and a gift certificate for a facial, massage and makeover — perfect for the stressed-out significant other

• A getaway at Jekyll Island

• A red rose and a card on the dashboard of her car in the morning.

The women are sticking a little closer to tradition:

• A candlelight dinner (this is a classic — men, try this some time. We love it.)

• Silk boxers with hearts

• Champagne, dinner and a walk on the Riverwalk (I really like this one — I just hope the weather warms up for them.)

Most people I asked said their most successful valentine experiences had one thing in common — an element of creativity.

One woman said that early in her marriage, she left a "map" for her husband when he came home. He was greeted at the door with little instructive heart-shaped notes, beginning with "take your shoes off." The hearts led him through the kitchen, where he picked up the valentine goodies she had prepared, and finally to the bedroom, where she was waiting.

I say, go for it. Be creative — try to fulfill one of your partner's fantasies. (We have a 3-month-old baby at home, and two older children. I think my husband's biggest fantasy right now is six hours of total silence.)

Love has to be renewed every once in a while, or it gets stale. In this age of downsizing, the time we spend with the ones we love is often the first thing to shrink. And sometimes there's just no energy left to devote to being devoted.

So if you're lucky enough to be in love, hang up your stress and have fun. Whether your Valentine's Day is Tuesday, next weekend, or next January, put something of yourself into it. Be playful, be surprising, and turn the phone, fax and computer off.

Whatever you do don't get her what she needs

By Clyde Snively
Bayonet columnist

commentary

Hopefully you Bubbas and Bubbaettes have got your sweeties something appropriate for Valentine's Day.

Notice, I said, "appropriate."

Two years ago I was in, to coin a phrase, "deep kimchee," because I forgot all about the day.

I mean, do we get a day off on that day, and just what day is it again — 12th? 13th? 14th? No we don't, so how am I supposed to remember it?

Well last year, Dragon Lady, her esteemed editorship, reminded me. Not to keep me out of trouble with Emma (the wife), but to get a column out of me, just like she reminded me this year.

Well anyway, last year I discovered you can get into as much, if not more, trouble by buying a gift as you can for forgetting to.

Last year I discovered women are into sentiment in a big way — practicality is not in their feminine vocabularies.

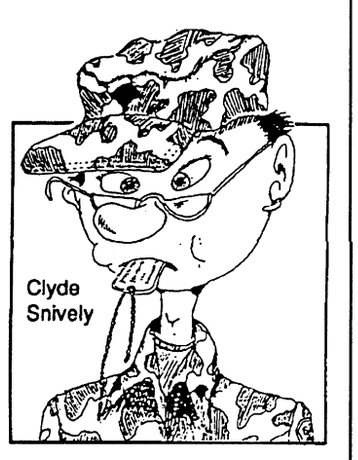
Hey men, for your Valentine's Day, or your birthday, or anniversary, would you be insulted to get a power tool?

Get me a 4.5 Kubota power mower, a 1.75 Poulan Weedeater, or even a battery-operated screwdriver and I'd be in seventh heaven.

Women don't think that way. An Orick nine-pound upright vacuum cleaner for Valentine's Day does nothing for them.

Or wow, what about a side by side washer-dryer combo for Mother's Day?

Great idea, make the little lady's work a lot easier. You ever watched the world go round from inside a dryer?



Hey, we need carving knives; what a great anniversary idea! No go Joe, unless you want to become a pincushion.

Men, women don't think like us.

They don't want necessities on those special days. The operative word here is, "need."

If they need it, they want it on a plain old Monday or Tuesday or Saturday, not on birthdays or anniversaries or Groundhog Day.

Now I admit, there's a thin line that separates need from "nice to have."

Like what about a breadmaker.

Sounds like the ideal gift to me. Does she need one? Or would she really like to have it?

Also, will she perceive it as just one more insensitive macho thing you are giving her to "make her life easier," read, "get you out of helping to do something."

Ahhh, you say, you're telling me to stick with the basics, the box of chocolates, the flowers.

Maybe I am and maybe I'm not.

Aside from the obvious pitfalls — is she allergic to flowers or chocolates, is she on a diet — there's still the female psyche that you're dealing with here.

"These are nice, but it would mean even more to me if I got them on a nontraditional day," she says to a mystified you.

In other words, it's written that you're expected to cough up some bucks for these Valentine treats. So when you do, you're just going through the time-honored tradition. It means nothing to her.

No pleasing women?

For what it's worth, here's my advice. Stop by the florist about a week out from Valentine's Day.

Buy a bouquet of flowers (they're also cheaper then — $5 for cut flowers on this nontraditional day as opposed to $20 for a Valentine's arrangement) and take that home to her with a mushy note, a slobbering wet kiss and a "because I love you."

Then on Valentine's Day you can get by with a card (although going out to dinner and maybe a movie wouldn't hurt).

To sum up — make them feel special.

EXPLOSIVES

Duds may be deadly if handled

By Marc G. Turchin
Bayonet staff writer

"Don't even touch it." That is the advice from representatives of the 89th Explosive Ordnance Disposal Detachment to people who find duds on or off post.

"We urge you, if you see any (unusual object) do not pick it up or take it home," said Staff Sgt. Tony G. Pfertsh, a team leader with the 89th EOD.

"If you do anything other than find it (the ordnance), if you put your hands on it, you're liable to get hurt," said Capt. Bill McDonough, commander of the 89th EOD.

Examples of some of the ordnance that can be found are:

- Projectiles — mainly used with artillery or mortars
- Rockets
- Guided missiles
- Grenades — both hand and rifle.

McDonough said in the last fiscal year, the 89th EOD responded to 225 calls in which something, ranging from scrap metal to a full explosive ordnance, was found.

Back in 1992, Pfertsh said he helped carry a civilian who was killed on Hartell Observation Point after he apparently came in contact with a unexploded ordnance. Pfertsh said it was not known how the munition exploded. He and his team arrived soon after the accident call had come in.

The detachment covers 55 counties in Georgia, Florida and Alabama, McDonough said.

When a call comes in to the detachment, either from a law enforcement department or range control, a response team is sent to the location, he said.

After linking with the caller, the team will evaluate whether or not the find is a hazard, McDonough said. If it is a hazard, the team will take the appropriate steps, he said, adding that if it's not a hazard, the team will still dispose of the find.

The best thing people can do if they find a munition or something they think may be harmful is not to touch it, McDonough said.

If an object that may be a hazard is found on post, call the military police. If it is found off post, call the local police department, which will contact the 89th EOD.

Anyone who may have picked up potentially dangerous "souvenirs" from a range or other area will have the chance to turn them in anonymously Wednesday during the post Ammunition and Explosive Amnesty Day.

"The main purpose is getting potentially hazardous items out of the quarters or out of troops' hands," Ammunition Supply Point Chief Jerry Gaylor said last week.

Gaylor said troops sometimes bring ammunition or explosives home from important deployments like Saudi Arabia and Somalia, or pick them up during training.

Live rounds or other explosives kept in quarters can be hazardous, Gaylor pointed out.

Soldiers can turn in such items without punishment anytime, but the annual amnesty day is set up to encourage them to do so.

Wednesday, each unit will have a box for soldiers to deposit ammunition or explosives. No questions will be asked and anyone turning in ammunition or explosives will not have to give their name or unit number.

The ordnance will be delivered to the Ammunition Supply Point at Building 6000. It will either be destroyed by Explosive Ordnance Disposal teams or re-issued in the future.

James Michaud, quality assistance specialist in the ammunition surveillance section, said the same kinds of items are turned in every year.

"Typically, what's turned in is small arms ammunition, smoke grenades, signal flares, sometimes expended pieces of ordnance like maybe a shell from a mortar round," Michaud said. "Sometimes it turns out to be live."

Michaud said World War II-era items even turn up sometimes.

"People think maybe it would make a nice paperweight," he said.

Security learning center opens

By Jan Wesner Childs
Special to The Bayonet©

Their jobs deal with keeping things secret, but those who are in charge of office and unit security shouldn't have to search for information on how to accomplish their duties.

At least that's the opinion of installation security manager Pat Weekley and information systems security manager Carol Vasko, who work in the Fort Benning Directorate of Threat and Security.

Vasko and Weekley opened a security learning center Jan. 31. The center serves as a clearinghouse for those personnel assigned to be security managers, systems security officers or unit intelligence officers.

There are more than 70 people responsible for security of documents, security clearances and handling of classified materials in units and post directorates. They are the people who do things like make sure classified material is processed on the right computers and marked properly and classified documents are kept secure.

Weekley and Vasko are responsible for setting the policy the security officers follow.

Security officer is an extra assigned duty, Vasko said, "and most of them didn't ask for it. They just were in the wrong place at the wrong time."

But Vasko and Weekley say the job is an important one and should be taken seriously.

"It's important that they know what to do if a compromise were to come up," Weekley said. "If a safe were left open, if a document was left out, if some kind of subversive situation comes up, they have to know what to do."

The new security learning center consists of a videocassette recorder and television monitor, computer, computer programs, books and other learning materials. It's available for use to any security officer.

"It gives them the tools that they need to do their job," Vasko said. "We think knowledge is power. The more you know, the better off you are."

Vasko and Weekley gathered the materials for the center from various agencies, classes and workshops. They've done the footwork so that the security officers can get their questions answered quickly and more efficiently.

When renewing car tags, make sure you know how, where, when

By Marc G. Turchin
Bayonet staff writer

Wondering where to renew or register your tag? Are you questioning yourself about which tag office to go to, what month to go or what you need to bring?

All that depends on where you live on post.

The county line for Fort Benning is Upatoi Creek. Those people who live north of the creek are residing in Muscogee County and those living south of the creek are in Chattahoochee County.

Muscogee County

The Muscogee County residents have a choice of places to get vehicles registered.

One location is inside the east wing of the Columbus Government Center, Second Avenue and 10th Street. The other site is inside Columbus Square Mall.

If you live in Muscogee County, whether or not you are a Georgia resident and are renewing your tag or registering for the first time, you need:

- Current leave and earnings statement
- Identification card
- $20 renewal fee per vehicle
- Proof of insurance
- Georgia residents have to pay state taxes on each vehicle. The amount will depend on the year and make of the vehicle.

First-time, nonresident registrants also need the registration from past county or state, the title of the vehicle (if the year of the car is 1981 or newer) or complete address of the lien holder. The cost for the title change is $18.

Nonresidents must also get a serviceman's affidavit from the Staff Judge Advocate's Office, Building 5. This form will exempt soldiers from paying the state ad valorem tax.

People with last names beginning with the letters A to D had until Jan. 31 to register their tags before a $15 late fee was added to the cost. Last names beginning with E to K have until the end of February; L to R have until March 31 and S to Z have until May 1. All tags are valid until May 2. But, if you miss your month, you will have to pay the late charge, according to Mary Hockaday, Muscogee County Tag Office clerk.

Both tag offices are open from 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. The mall office closes from noon until 1 p.m. for lunch.

For more information, call 571-4795 or 571-4796.

Chattahoochee County

Chattahoochee County residents must travel to Cusseta to register their vehicles. Cusseta is located 10 miles south of Sand Hill on Highway 27. Make a left on Broad Street from Highway 27 and the court house is one mile down on the left.

Both non-Georgia and Georgia residents must have the following to renew their registration or register for the first time in Chattahoochee County:

- Current LES
- $20 ($12 for trailers) per vehicle
- Proof of insurance.

First-time registrants must also have the registration from the previous county or state, depending on where the vehicle was last registered.

If the year of the vehicle is newer than 1982, the title or the address of the lien holder is also required. Nonresidents must also have the serviceman's affidavit from SJA to avoid the state ad valorem tax.

Georgia residents registering for the first time should wait until it is their month to register, according to Gloria Culpepper, tax commissioner for Chattahoochee County. Residents can register before their due month.

If the tag has already expired in the prior county when registering, there is a $5 fee. Georgia residents will also be assessed the state taxes based on the year and make of their vehicle.

The deadlines for tag renewal are the same as in Muscogee County. The first letter of your last name determines when you need to get registered. There is a $15 fee if you are late.

The tag office hours are 8 a.m. to 4 p.m., Monday through Friday. Culpepper said the office only accepts checks from local banks.

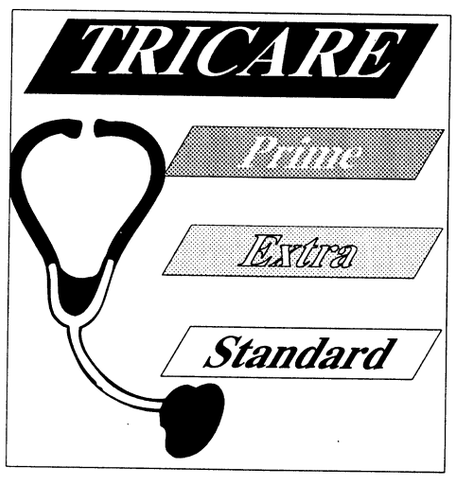
DoD announces benefit option



New program to phase in over next two years, reduce health-care costs

American Forces Information Service

The Department of Defense has announced a new uniform health benefit option for military families, survivors, retirees and their families. The option, TRICARE Prime, will significantly reduce the cost of health care for beneficiaries and the government, said officials.

TRICARE Prime is a health maintenance organization-style option that allows patients to receive care in military facilities without paying a cost share. Fees and co-payments for receiving care in participating civilian medical facilities will average significantly less than existing fees and co-payments. For example, the average family of a service member in pay grades corporal and below will save $170 per year over standard costs with the Civilian Health Medical Program of the Uniformed Services. Families of sergeants and above, including officers, will save about $240 per year. Retirees, survivors and their families will save an average of $100 per year.

Active duty personnel will automatically be enrolled in TRICARE Prime once it is available in their region. They will receive most of their care from military facilities but won't have to pay when referred to doctors in the TRICARE Prime network.

Beneficiaries will choose from three health care options — TRICARE Prime, TRICARE Extra and TRICARE Standard — as TRICARE managed-care support contracts are begun in each of the 12 TRICARE regions across the country. Region 11 (Washington and Oregon) will be the first to offer the HMO option, beginning in March. TRICARE Prime will be phased into the regions over the next two years, with all regions slated to have it by May 1997.

Military officials said TRICARE brings together the health delivery systems of the services as well as CHAMPUS in a cooperative effort to better serve military patients.

TRICARE Prime is the voluntary enrollment option that offers patients the advantages of managed health care, such as primary care managers, assistance in making specialty appointments and someone else to do claims filing. Prime offers the scope of coverage available today under CHAMPUS, plus additional preventive and primary care services. For Prime enrollees, the new cost-sharing provisions do away with the usual standard CHAMPUS cost sharing. Active duty families will have no enrollment fee.

CHAMPUS-eligible retirees enrolling in Prime will pay an enrollment fee but will pay only $11 per day for civilian inpatient care in comparison to the $323 per day plus 25 percent of professional fees charged retirees using TRICARE Standard. Prime enrollees will have copayments for care from civilian providers. However, the co-payments are significantly less than in the other two options.

One option, TRICARE Standard, is the same as standard CHAMPUS.

In the other, TRICARE Extra, CHAMPUS-eligible beneficiaries can go in and out of the TRICARE network provider system, receiving discounts and avoiding claim forms. CHAMPUS beneficiaries don't enroll in TRICARE Extra, but participate case-by-case just by using the network providers.

Survey says: Most civilians satisfied with health care

By Evelyn D. Harris
American Forces Information Service

More than 80 percent of federal employees in both fee-for-service plans and health maintenance organizations expressed satisfaction with their plans.

U.S. Office of Personnel Management Director Jim King announced results of the Federal Employees Health Benefits Plan survey.

"This survey is an important piece of OPM's commitment to customer service, and it represents the first large-scale availability of plan-by-plan consumer opinion information of FEHBP," said King.

"The survey results will help consumers make informed decisions about their health plan choices and provide participating plans with information important to their ongoing quality improvement efforts.

The federal health plan provides coverage for more than 9 million Americans, including current and retired federal employees and their family members. More than 90,000 plan enrollees responded to the survey. Enrollees gave their opinions of 261 plans and options. Plans with few federal enrollees and new plans were not asked to participate.

In all, 82 percent of respondents in traditional fee-for-service plans were satisfied with their plans. Of that number, 19 percent were extremely satisfied, 41 percent were very satisfied, and 22 percent were somewhat satisfied.

The Center for the Study of Services, a nonprofit consumer research organization, conducted the survey for OPM. Researchers said people who are in good health tend to give high ratings to their health plans, while people with more health problems are less satisfied.

OPM plans to conduct a similar survey for release during next year's open season.

Tax office now open

By Karen S. Morarie
Bayonet staff writer

Fort Benning's Tax Office, a free full-service tax assistance office for all military identification card holders, is now open.

The office is located in Building 2640, Soldiers' Plaza, and will be open 8:30 a.m. to 4 p.m., Monday through Friday.

The office is being run by the Staff Judge Advocate's Office, with tax preparer volunteers from Army Community Service.

Workers are expecting to file 5,000 to 6,000 returns this year, according to 1st Lt. Mike Roberts, the legal assistance officer in charge of the office. In the first four days of operation, he said, about 900 returns were filed.

Most returns can be filed electronically, he said, and customers can save the $60 to $70 (and up) fees most civilian preparers charge for electronic returns.

"Most people can get their refunds in about 10 days," he said, "although the IRS won't guarantee it in under three weeks.

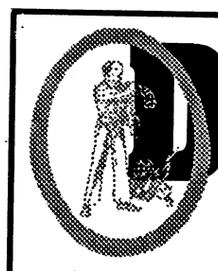
Federal tax forms are available at the office, as are most state tax forms.

Roberts said documents customers should bring with them include:

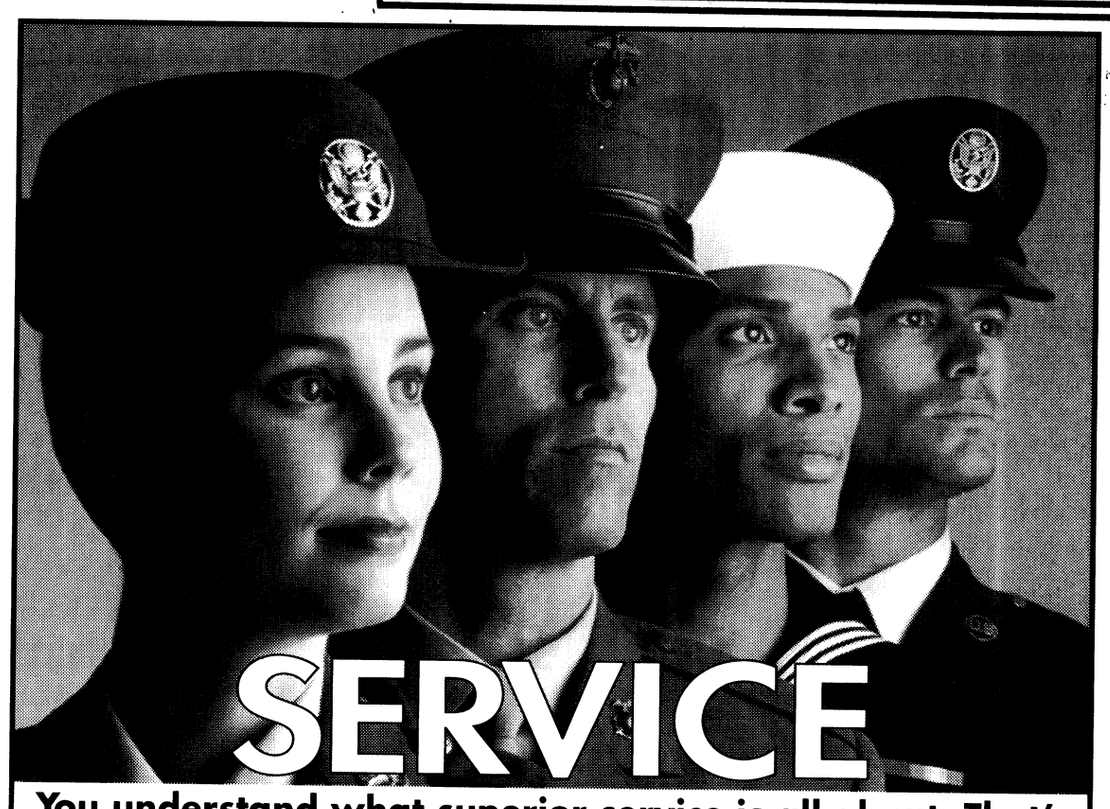
- W-2 forms from all employers
- Form 1099 from banks showing interest earned
- Social Security numbers for every family member more than 1 year old, including a nonworking spouse
- Employer identification number or Social Security number and address of child-care provider (if applicable).
- Detailed itemized deductions
- Mortgage interest statement
- Power of attorney, if filing for absent soldier
- A copy of last year's federal income tax return, if available
- Bank name, branch and account number.

Those filing joint returns should bring their spouses with them, he said.

UNIT TAX ADVISERS



Staff Judge Advocate's Office



Units on Fort Benning have assigned representatives to assist soldiers in tax preparation.

First Lt. Mike Roberts, a legal assistance officer with the Staff Judge Advocate's office, said he recommends that soldiers who have questions about their taxes should contact their unit representatives before visiting the Tax Assistance Office in Soldiers' Plaza, Building 2640.

BOSS program designed for single soldiers

USAIC Public Affairs Office

What started out just a few years ago as a recreational outlet is now a major force on post.

Better Opportunities for Single Soldiers stands dedicated to provide improved quality of life for single soldiers at Fort Benning, said Spc. Christina Rapé, BOSS president.

What's more, she said, BOSS now has the means to back up its pledge.

"BOSS helps single soldiers by assisting the chain of command and the NCO (noncommissioned officer) support channel in identifying and addressing the concerns of single soldiers," she said. "The only thing left to do is to spread the word."

BOSS also underwent organizational changes that helped to establish it as a formal body with real power, such as appointing a president and BOSS representatives down to unit level and the establishment of formalized BOSS Council meetings.

The battalion BOSS Council is made up of the unit-level BOSS representatives, whose duty is to interact with fellow soldiers, inform them of single soldier initiatives, and be a point of contact on issues within their unit.

"The representatives must have been stationed on post for at least six months and have at least one year remaining," Rapé said. "That way, the representatives know Fort Benning. Representatives are also chosen for their maturity, communication skills and must have a genuine interest in making a difference."

Rapé said senior leadership is involved at every level of the BOSS process. The major subordinate command council meetings are chaired by the command sergeant major or a commander of a major subordinate command. The post BOSS Council meetings are chaired by the post command sergeant major, garrison sergeant major and the post BOSS president. All major subordinate command BOSS representatives and representatives from the Directorate of Community Activities, Directorate of Public Works and the Army and Air Force Exchange Service also attend.

"This is one of the really effective aspects of the way that BOSS works, "Rapé said. "The key leadership is there from the very beginning of the process. They can solve problems and provide resources, information and support. If necessary, an issue can be taken all the way to the Commanding General's Advisory Panel, but most issues are worked out at the lower levels."

Rapé said BOSS is the vehicle for any issue that affects single soldiers on post.

"Any concern, whether it's barracks, quality of life, recreation, entertainment or sporting activities, can be brought before BOSS," she said. "I urge all single soldiers to do their part by telling their unit BOSS representatives and their chain of command about their concerns."

Rapé said soldiers with questions and concerns can also contact her at 545-7041 or 545-7215.

"The average soldier is very aware of the quality of life in their community but often do not know where to turn when he or she has an idea that may benefit single soldiers in general," she said. "BOSS is the way. BOSS has the power to be a force for positive change in the quality of life of all single soldiers on post. All that remains is for them to let us know what they want."

Soldiers can also contact their unit BOSS representatives. The following are the representatives for each major subordinate command.

- Ranger Training Brigade: Spc. Andrew Garcia, 544-6504
- 11th Infantry Regiment: Sgt. Sheila Hall, 545-3797
- 75th Ranger Regiment: Spc. David Roman, 544-6504
- U.S. Army Medical Department Activity: Spc. Eugene Sukert, 544-4418 or 544-2662
- Noncommissioned Officers Academy: Spc. Charlie Johnson, 545-3352 or 545-3602
- 29th Infantry Regiment: Spc. John Eide, 544-2401
- Military Police Activity: Pfc. Joy Oliver, 544-6007
- U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit: Spc. James Diehl, 545-1558
- Dental Activity: Spc. Darin Weinberger, 544-3904
- 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division: Spc. Lois Marshall, 544-2818
- School of the Americas: Pfc. Vernice Murillo, 545-1835
- Infantry Training Brigade: Spc. Caryn Bumpstead, 544-9365
- 36th Engineer Group: Pfc. Anastacia Morecraft, 545-4442
- 3rd Ranger Battalion: Sgt. Willie Briskey, 545-4155.

profile in excellence

Rapé

Name: Spc. Christina Lynn Rapé
Position : Better Opportunities for Single Soldiers Program president
Military Occupational Specialty: 63B10
Unit: Company A, 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment
Job Title: Light wheel vehicle mechanic
Years on the job: Six years in Reserves, one year active duty
Hometown: Tulsa, Okla.

What were your reasons for joining the Army?
To finish my education and to keep the security in my life as far as stability.

What were your reasons for choosing your MOS?
I enjoy being outdoors and my favorite job in the civilian world was working at an auto parts place.

What person has most influenced your military career?
Master Sgt. Jan Walke, director of the MOS Academy, Fort Chaffee, Ark. He is a leader that I would follow to any situation. He showed me I could succeed with the military, keep my head up and "If you can laugh about it, you can live with it."

If you were the sergeant major of the Army for a day, what improvements would you make?
I would say that after the Primary Leadership Development Course and the board that it be up to the commander and company to promote, not points.

What do you think about the BOSS program and why is it important?
I find the BOSS program great. It is important because people who are joining the Army now are grown-ups and not young people right out of their parents' home.

What have you accomplished as the BOSS representative for your unit?
I became BOSS president of Fort Benning.

What specifically has the BOSS program done to help the soldiers in your unit?
Made living in the barracks more comfortable.

What others have to say about you:
"Chris Rapé is a very ambitious, hard-working soldier. Her main goal is to see that the BOSS program continues to succeed in its goal of providing the best facilities, working conditions, and, of course, opportunities for single soldiers. She does her job, always with a positive attitude and always to the best of her abilities."

Former commanding general to head local

United Way chapter

By Jerrie Macintire
Special to The Bayonet©

Fort Benning's most recent former commanding general has been named president of the United Way in Columbus.

Retired Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White, who wrapped up a 35-year Army career in October, will begin duties as head of the local United Way April 1.

"I think it's a strong move to bring someone here of Jerry White's caliber. He's a caring individual who has great concern for this community," said Salvador Diaz-Verson, chairman of the Columbus United Way.

White replaces Joe Medlin, who retired after 20 years of service with the local organization.

The 57-year-old White said his experiences in key command and staff positions overseeing family advocacy programs would help in his new position as head of an organization that supports 28 charitable agencies from the Salvation Army to the Boy and Girl Scouts.

"With my experience I can provide leadership and the guidance to make a good program a lot better," White said after the announcement Jan. 6.

Last year, about 108,000 people in Fort Benning and the surrounding communities were served by United Way Agencies including those who were helped through Red Cross programs, youths who participated in educational and recreational activities, and children who benefited from physical, speech and occupational therapies.

The United Way also served victims of domestic violence, provided fitness programs for senior citizens, and gave food, shelter and clothing to homeless adults and families.

Military family members and Department of Defense civilians as well as members of the surrounding communities benefit from United Way programs, said Bill Plager of the local organization.

Nearly 3,000 individuals with ties to Fort Benning benefited from the United Way last year through such programs as the Boy Scouts and the Girl Scouts, the Urban League and the Consumer Credit Counseling Service, according to figures released by the local organization.

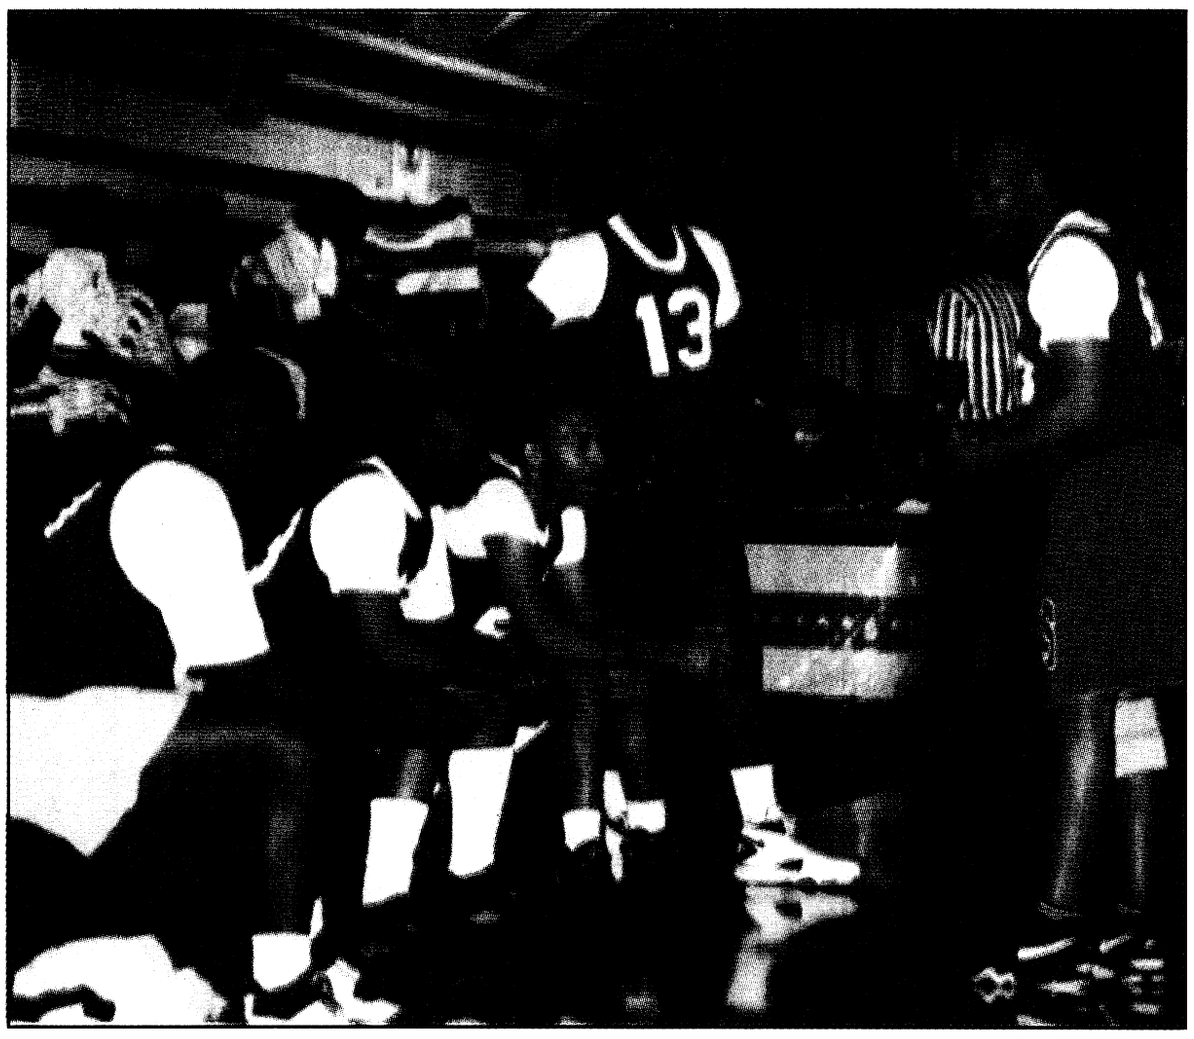
Razorbacks breeze by Cougars

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet©

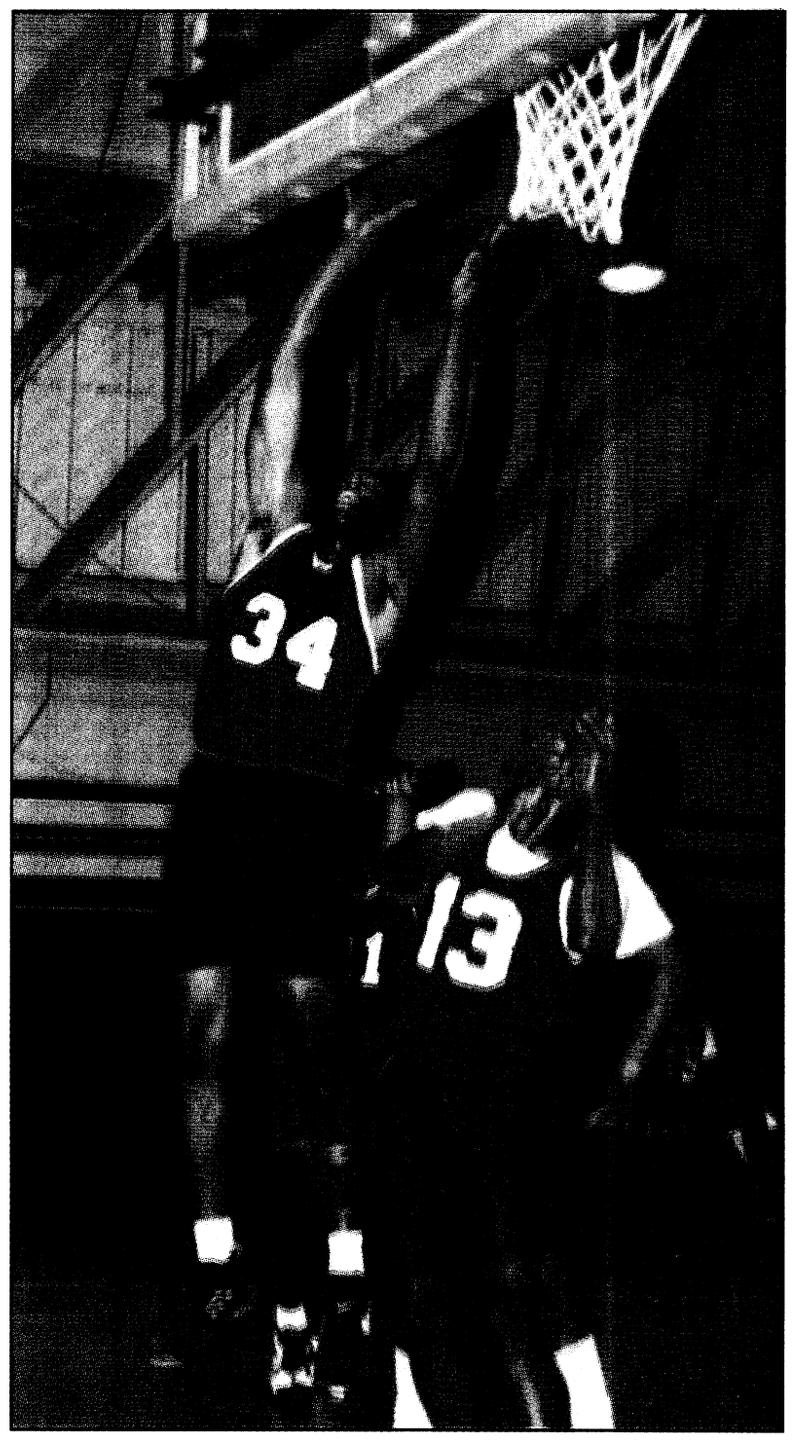
The 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment, basketball season is under way at Harmony Church Field House. Two games were scheduled for Monday night, but only one was played.

The Razorbacks of the Bradley Instructor Company, led by James Griffin's 25 points, went on a 16-3 run with less than four minutes to play and broke open a very close game against the Cougars of Company C, 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment, slicing their way to a 60-53 win.



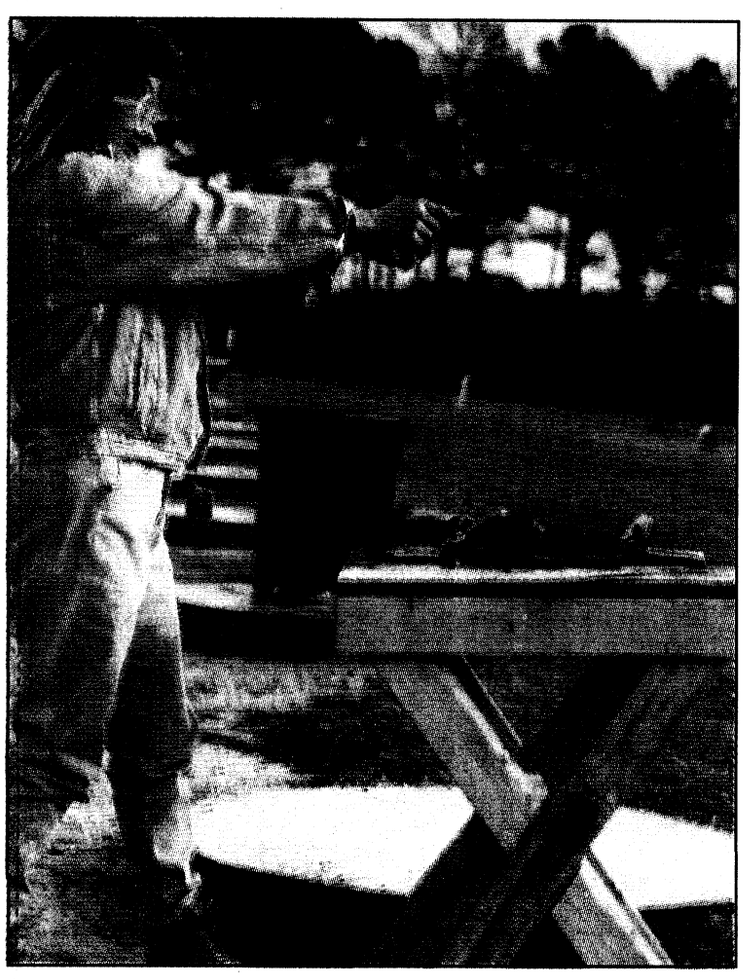
Griffin finished the game with six of the Razorbacks' seven three-pointers, five coming in the second half. Down 50-45, the Razorbacks started their run on baskets by Phillip Anthony (10 points) and Tony Mayer (11 points). A free throw by Clarence Horton tied the game at 50 with 2:32 to play.

A three-pointer by Griffin gave the lead to the Razorbacks for good at 53-50. With less than a minute to play, Griffin popped in another three-pointer, giving the Razorbacks a 56-50 cushion.



Four straight free throws by Mayer wrapped up the win for the Razorbacks. Alford Heygod also finished the game with 13 points for the Razorbacks.

The Cougars stayed in the game behind the shooting of Leslie Vance's 16 points, Patrick Dixon's 12 and Isiah Freeman's 11. The Cougars also combined for seven three-pointers.



The second game of the night between Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 29th Infantry Regiment, and Co. E, 1st Bn., 29th Inf. Regt., was forfeited by Co. E, when the team failed to show by game time.

Hot shooting, cold weather during post pistol match

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet©

With the possibility of snow flurries Saturday morning, 81 shooters braved the cold and damp to participate in the Fort Benning Rifle and Pistol Club's February tactical match at English Range.

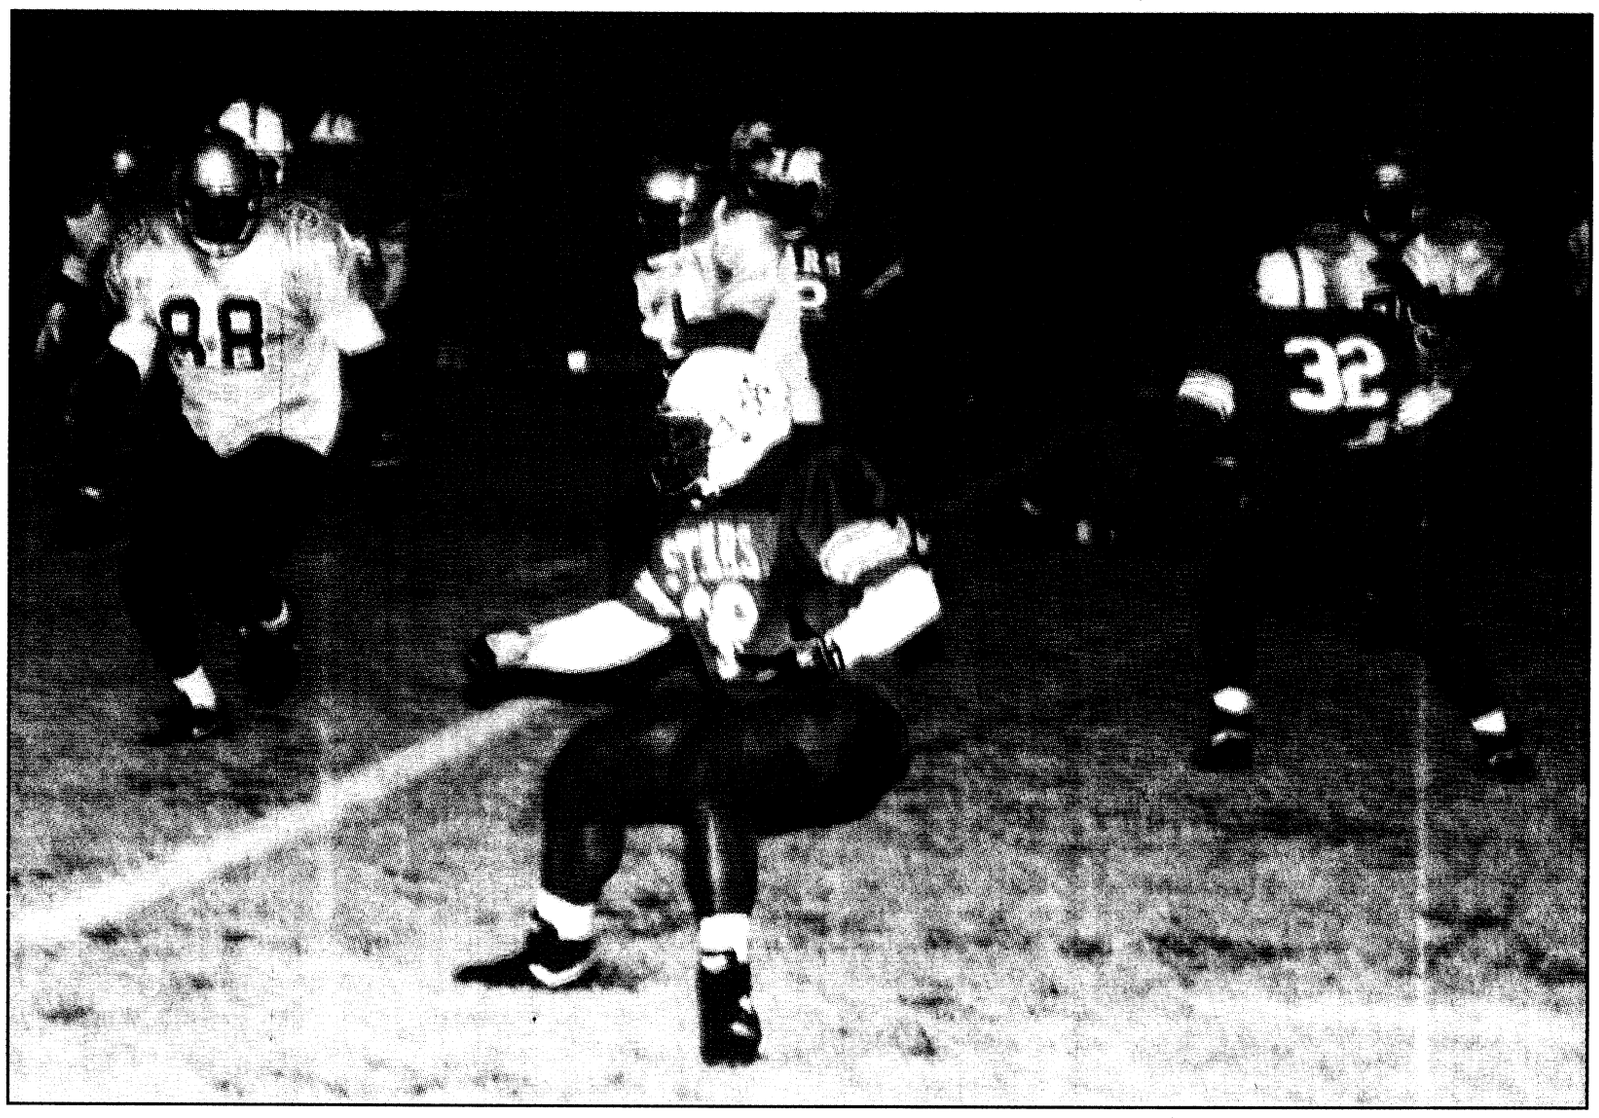
"We actually had 91 people register to shoot, but the cold kept some of them at home, I guess," said match coordinator Jim Graham.

For those like Renee Austin of Company A, 1st Battalion (Airborne), 507th Infantry, 11th Infantry Regiment, shooting in the competition was worth being cold.

"I really like doing this," Austin said. "I've been here about a year and I only wish I'd heard about the monthly matches sooner. I will be coming as often as I can from now on."

In the competitor class, Charles Rolling outpointed Richard Hopp 2.824 to 2.231, with James Odom finishing third at 1.640.

Rob Lewis scored a 2.762 to win the standard class. J.F. Kersey took second at 2.138 and Danny Craps brought up the final spot at 1.891.



In the military class, Marcus Custer took first with a score of 2.372 with Eric Spalding close behind at 2.076 and Mark Olson in third with a score of 1.962.

John Cranfill nipped Gary Bolen for high honors in the high law enforcement class 1.462 to 1.339. Kenneth Garrett finished third with a score of 1.324.

In the female class, Angie Jennen held off Austin 1.284 to 1.036 to take first. Valerie Long took third at .985.

The next match will be a night match March 4, beginning at 7. Entry fee is $12 if paid by March 1, and $16 after that date.

Tornados seeing 'stars' after loss to Columbus

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet©

With the temperature dropping like a rock, the Columbus Stars successfully opened the 1995 season with a 7-0 win against the Tallahassee Tornados Saturday night at Garrett Stadium.

Quarterback Eddie Mitchell of the Stars put the only points of the night on the board with 12:20 left in the second quarter on a one-yard option run to the right. Scott Alalof converted the extra point attempt for the 7-0 lead.

The Stars' defense set the offense up for the touchdown when linebacker Kevin Jordan blocked a punt by Tornado punter Frank Sands Jr. Defensive end Marcus Mahone recovered the ball at the Tornado 6, for a first-and-goal. Three plays later Mitchell rambled in for the score.

"We scored first and then the defense took over," Mitchell said.

Take over they did. The Stars offense turned the ball over three times in the first 17 minutes of play, giving the Tornados opportunity after opportunity to put points on the board. The Stars' defense, on the other hand, shut the Tornados down each and every time. The most crucial came on the Stars' first turnover, giving the Tornados the ball deep in Stars' territory.

The Tornados, behind quarterback Eddie Williams and tailback Adolf Mizzell moved the ball down to the Stars' 1-yard line, setting up a first-down-and-goal from the one.

The Stars' defense bowed their necks and stuffed the Tornado offense on four consecutive plays from the one, giving the ball back to the offense at its own goal line.

Led by Mahone (six tackles, two sacks, two assists, two tipped passes, one fumble caused and a fumble recovery) the Stars' defense would bend at times but would never break. "The last time I played on this field (Garrett Stadium) I lost, playing for Carver High School," Mahone said. "With the Carver band playing, I felt it was my band playing; all I wanted was to play well. With my teammates taking on extra blocks, that freed me up to use my speed to make the tackles. I was just on tonight. When Kevin (Jordan) blocked the punt, hoping the ball would bounce my way, I tried to pick it up and run but I stumbled."

The Stars' defense gave up 216 yards of offense to the Tornados; but, in the one column that counted, the Stars blanked the Tornados for their first shutout of the season.

"We didn't have our timing down," head coach Tom Staton said. "We've got to leave the 11 or 12 in there; you can't be switching up all these people. It throws off the timing and hurts our offense."

"Our defense, on the other hand, takes it as a personal attack if you score on them," Staton said. 'When you turn the ball over five times in a game you usually lose. This is a testament to the defense."

The Stars' offense moved the ball for 202 yards of offense and showed signs of life at times, with Smith gaining 85 yards on 15 carries and Mitchell going 4 out of 10 for 60 yards and one interception.

The Stars hit the road for Mobile, Ala., to take on the Vipers Saturday. The next home game will be Feb. 18, against the defending league champion St. Augustine, Fla., Tigers at Garrett Stadium. Kickoff is at 7p.m.

Big fish wanted? Big lures needed

By Earl Bentz and Steve Price
Outboard Marine Corporation

commentary

Use large lures, fish deeper structures away from the shore, and work hard.

Those are the keys to catching trophy-class largemouth bass, according to professional bass tournament angler Charlie Reed.

He should know; by his count he's caught more than 250 bass weighing seven pounds or more.

"I believe the most common mistake anglers make is not fishing deep enough," said Reed, a member of the Johnson Outboards Pro Staff. "Big bass are rarely caught in shallow water except during the spawning season.

"The majority of my big fish have been caught in water between about 10 and 25 feet deep — depths a lot of fishermen never fish."

When he's working these deeper depths, Reed said he prefers to fish specific underwater structures such as breaklines, ridges, humps and channels.

He said one of his largest bass, an 11-pound, 7-ounce giant, came from a dropoff where the depth changed abruptly from four to 15 feet.

"Another characteristic I've noticed about larger bass is that they prefer larger lures," Reed said. "Virtually every big fish I've ever caught has hit a big lure. I'm not sure if big bass are lazy and don't feel like chasing smaller lures, or if larger lures just create a more active strike response, but I always use large lures when I'm looking for big bass."

Two of the Johnson pro's favorite big fish lures are a Carolina rig lizard and a jug and pork trailer.

"Both are large and somewhat bulky," he said, "and when you retrieve them correctly each has a very lifelike appearance."

The Carolina rig lizard has probably accounted for more big bass in recent years because more anglers are using it.

"The plastic lizard imitates a salamander which is a natural bass food. It's a great lure any time of year," he said.

Another lure Reed enjoys using is a heavy, double willow leaf spinnerbait, in either 5/8 or one-ounce size. He likes to slow-roll the lure over submerged grassbeds, through standing timber or over dropoffs.

Reed advises anglers who may be trying for a big bass this year that perhaps the most important aspect of trophy fishing is persistence.

"You have to keep casting," he said. "I can't tell you how many times I've been fishing and not catching anything, then suddenly had a strike and landed a big bass.

"Sometimes I think big bass may actually drive smaller bass out of an area," he said.

"Catching big bass is not as difficult as many anglers believe," Reed said. "It takes time and effort, but if you use the proper lures and fish in the right areas, sooner or later you'll catch one."

Players can choose from: Muhammad Ali, Jack Dempsey, Joe Frazier, Larry Holmes, Evander Holyfield, Joe Louis, Rocky Marciano and Floyd Patterson.

Soldiers strap into four-foot tall robots and battle each other during each match. Each bout of robotic boxing consists of three 30-second rounds held under the direction of the referee. Points are scored by knocking your opponent's robots head. If the head stays up for a three count by the referee, you win by knockout.

Cash prizes will be awarded to the winners, with other prizes for all tournament participants.

Coinciding with the launch of the 1995 Army Boxing Training and Box-Off at Fort Huachuca, Ariz., the tournament ends tonight.

As the corporate sponsor, Canadian Mist helps fund travel, equipment and other training expenses for the boxers who will attend the Army Boxing Training Camp at Fort Huachuca.

AMU sets national record

U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit

Members of the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit's International Pistol Team secured a number of top-ranked positions and a new national record during the International Sectional competition recently in Charleston, S.C.

The USAMU marksmen outshot some of the nation's finest pistol shooters who ventured from locations nationwide to participate in the competition, which was composed of five shooting events, said David Boyd, USAMU chief of competition.

Spc. Daryl Szarenski finished first in Center Fire competition with a score of 571. He was followed closely by team member Pfc. Chad Harreld, who took second place with a score of 564.

Szarenski also took first place in both Free Pistol and Air Pistol competitions with respective scores of 535 and 567.

Capt. Rhonda Bright won the Women's Air Pistol competition with a score of 566.

In Ladies Sport Pistol competition, Cpl. Sandra Utasy set a new national record and took first place with a score of 568. Cpl. Amy Szarenski secured second place with a score of 563. Sgt. Kimberly Farr came in third with 560.

All three of the women broke the existing Ladies Sports Pistol national record of 559 set by former USAMU shooter Spc. Audrey Hayes in 1989, said Ronny Boles, International Pistol Team coach. Sgt. Ronald Watts took first in Rapid Fire competition with a score of 574. Harreld placed third with a score of 524. All scores are based on a 600-point scale.

Thumbsucking habit

may cause problems for children past infancy

U.S. Army Dental Activity

For new parents who are concerned about their baby's thumbsucking, the Fort Benning Dental Activity offers the following advice.

Sucking is one of a baby's natural reflexes. As infants grow, sucking serves many purposes. Infants and young children may suck on thumbs, fingers, pacifiers or toys because it makes them feel secure and happy and helps them learn about their world.

Young children may find that placing a finger or thumb into their mouth provides them with a sense of security at difficult periods such as after a scolding or when separated from their parents. Because thumbsucking is relaxing, it may induce sleep. For this reason, young children may often do this in the evenings or when they are tired.

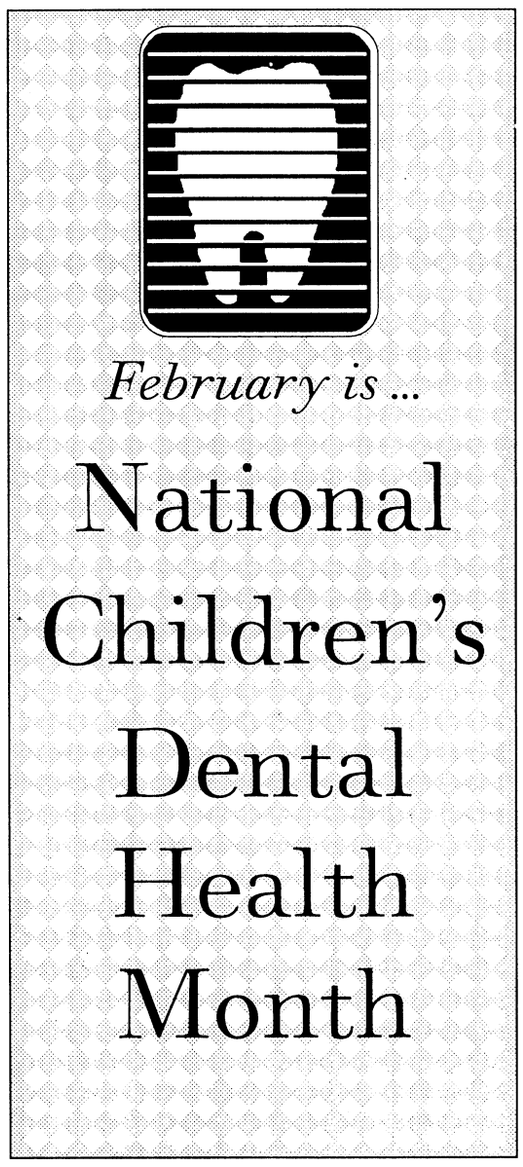
The Dental Activity notes that prolonged thumbsucking can cause problems. Once the permanent teeth erupt, sucking may cause problems with the proper growth of the mouth and alignment of teeth.

One factor that determines whether a dental problem may result is the intensity of sucking. Children who rest their thumbs passively in their mouths are less likely to have difficulty than those who vigorously suck their thumbs. When a parent removes the thumb from the child's mouth, a "popping" sound is often heard.

The Dental Activity notes that some aggressive thumbsuckers may cause problems for their primary (baby) teeth. Parents who notice changes in their children's baby teeth should consult their dentist.

Usually, children stop thumbsucking between the ages of 2 and 4. Sucking gradually lessens during this period as they spend more of their waking hours exploring their surroundings. They should cease sucking by the time the permanent front teeth are ready to erupt. Peer pressure causes many school-aged children to stop.

Sucking a pacifier is not necessarily less harmful for a child. Pacifiers can affect the teeth essentially the same way as sucking fingers and thumbs. However, it is often an easier habit to break. The Dental Activity says to keep these tips in mind when helping your child:



• Instead of scolding children for sucking, praise them when they are not.

• Remember that children often suck their thumbs when feeling insecure. Focus on correcting the cause of anxiety, instead of thumbsucking.

• Children who are sucking for comfort will feel less of a need when their parents provide comfort.

• Reward children when they refrain from sucking during difficult periods, such as when being separated from their parents.

• Your dentist can encourage children to stop sucking and explain what could happen to their teeth if they continue.

• If these approaches don't work, remind the children of their habit by bandaging the thumb or putting a sock on the hand at night. Your dentist or pediatrician may prescribe a bitter medication to coat the thumb.

'Seal in' that smile

Dental sealants add protection

U.S. Army Dental Activity

The Fort Benning Dental Activity notes that children's teeth are meant to last a lifetime. The Dental Activity has these tips for keeping your child's teeth healthy and decay free.

Tooth decay is caused by bacteria. The bacteria is found in a sticky, colorless film called plaque. For tooth decay to occur, three elements are needed — plaque, food containing sugars and starches and a susceptible tooth. When foods containing sugars and starches are left in the mouth, plaque bacteria produce acids that can dissolve tooth enamel. The sticky plaque holds these acids onto the teeth, where they attack the enamel for 20 minutes or more. After repeated attacks. the enamel may break down, forming a cavity.

According to Lt. Col. Dennis Akiyama, Preventive Dentistry officer, to prevent tooth decay, toothbrushing and flossing are needed daily to remove harmful plaque from your child's teeth. "Children should clean their teeth twice a day with a pea-sized amount of fluoride toothpaste," says Akiyama. The doctor adds that flossing will remove plaque that hides between the teeth and under the gumline, areas where a toothbrush can't reach. Supervising your child while brushing and flossing will ensure that a proper job is done.

Akiyama notes that dental sealants can help prevent or reduce tooth decay. A sealant is a clear or shaded plastic material that is applied to the chewing surfaces of the back teeth (premolars and molars), where decay occurs most often. The sealant acts as a barrier, protecting the decay-prone areas of the back teeth from plaque and acid.

Akiyama says that each tooth takes only a few minutes to seal in the dental office. "When the sealant is applied, finger-like strands penetrate the pits and fissures of the tooth enamel. Although the sealant cannot be seen with the naked eye, the protective effect of these strands continues," says Lt. Col. Akiyama. As a result, it may be several years before another application of sealant is needed.

Staff Judge Advocate's Office

Q. What is bankruptcy, and what is the difference between Chapter 7 and Chapter 13?

A. Many people with financial problems seek guidance from the Legal Assistance Office on bankruptcy. Often they mistakenly believe bankruptcy is the easiest way to avoid paying their debts.

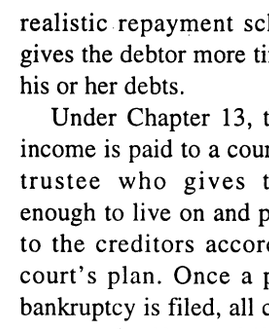
Bankruptcy is a procedure that reduces or wipes out debts when it is impossible for the debtor to fulfill his or her financial obligations. The purpose of bankruptcy is to give the debtor a "fresh start."

There are federal bankruptcy courts established by Congress in each state that deal exclusively with these matters. All petitions for bankruptcy in the Columbus and Fort Benning area are filed with the U.S. Bankruptcy Court in Columbus.

For individuals, there are two types of bankruptcy. Under Chapter 7, the court takes most of the debtor's property, sells it, divides the proceeds among the creditors and discharges the remaining debt. Some debtors could pay their debts if given more time, and a Chapter 13 bankruptcy is designed for them. Chapter 13 allows the court to establish a realistic repayment schedule that gives the debtor more time to repay his or her debts.

Under Chapter 13, the debtor's income is paid to a court-appointed trustee who gives the debtor enough to live on and pays the rest to the creditors according to the court's plan. Once a petition for bankruptcy is filed, all creditors are automatically prohibited from making further collection efforts without the permission of the bankruptcy court. The court has broad powers to prevent harassment by creditors.

Bankruptcy is not an easy way to avoid paying debts. Under Chapter 7, the debtor loses most of his or her property. Even under Chapter 13, life becomes a no-frills experience because most of the debtor's income is paid to creditors. On top of this, bankruptcy makes it difficult to get credit and it may remain on credit reports for up to 10 years.



Bankruptcy does not necessarily affect security clearances. The debtor's commander decides whether it is appropriate to restrict or withdraw access to classified material. Actually, because bankruptcy provides relief for the debtor, a person who files for bankruptcy may be less vulnerable to blackmail than one trying to keep his or her financial problems a secret.

Some debts cannot be discharged by the bankruptcy court. These include taxes, child support, alimony and student loans guaranteed by a government entity. Bankruptcy should be a last resort.

If you have further questions about bankruptcy, call 545-3281 or 545-3282 to set up an appointment with an attorney.

Military Police Activity

The following entries are from the Fort Benning Military Police blotters from Jan. 18 to 24. Such entries may be incomplete and do not determine the guilt or innocence of any person.

A first lieutenant was charged by the Columbus Police Department for speed excessive for road conditions and driving under the influence of alcohol.

The lieutenant was traveling at a high rate of speed, swaying back and forth across the road. A traffic stop was initiated, and the officer smelled alcohol.

The lieutenant was administered a field sobriety test, and he was transported to the Muscogee County jail where he was given a breathalyzer test with a result of .14. He was arrested and is pending a Recorder's Court hearing.

• A staff sergeant was charged by the Columbus Police Department for reckless driving, fleeing and eluding, leaving the scene of an accident, no proof of insurance and no state driver's license.

The sergeant was seen leaving a residence in his car and struck the rear end of a truck that was parked on the side of the street. The soldier continued to travel at a high rate of speed until he ran his car into a house. He was arrested and taken to The Medical Center and admitted.

• A civilian was charged with driving under the influence of alcohol.

The driver was stopped and the officer noticed a strong odor of alcohol. She was administered a field sobriety test and transported to the MP station where she was given a breathalyzer test with a result of .13.

After her vehicle was impounded, she was issued post ejection orders, further processed and released at post boundaries.

• A private was charged by the Columbus Police Department for loitering and prowling.

The soldier and an unidentified male were seen climbing over a wall at the rear of several closed businesses. The soldier admitted to climbing over the wall but only to see a painted mural on the other side. The soldier was arrested and taken to the Muscogee County jail pending Recorder's Court.

Other activities included eight cases of driving under the influence of alcohol, 20 traffic accidents, 12 cases of larceny and two cases of shoplifting reported at the Main Exchange facilities.

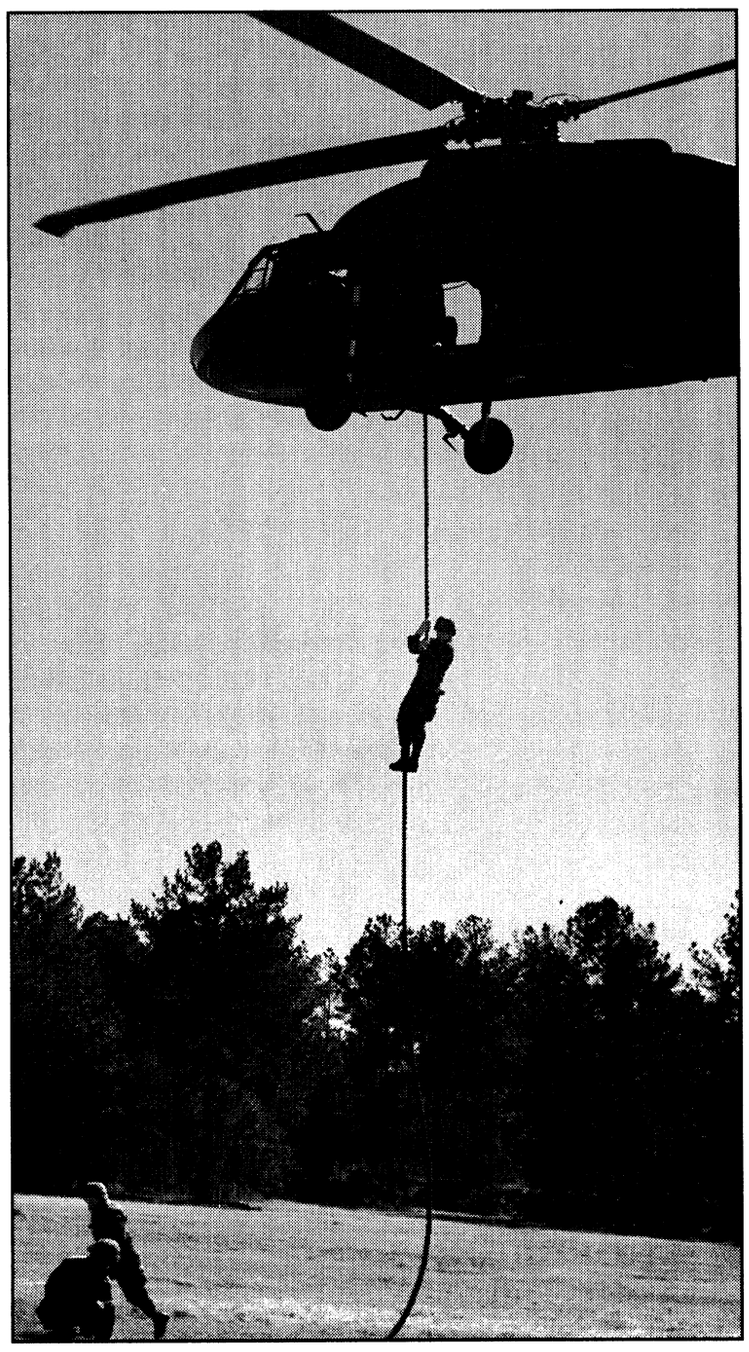
SCHOOL OF THE AMERICAS

Counternarcotics course offers specialized training

By Judith Ginder
School of the Americas

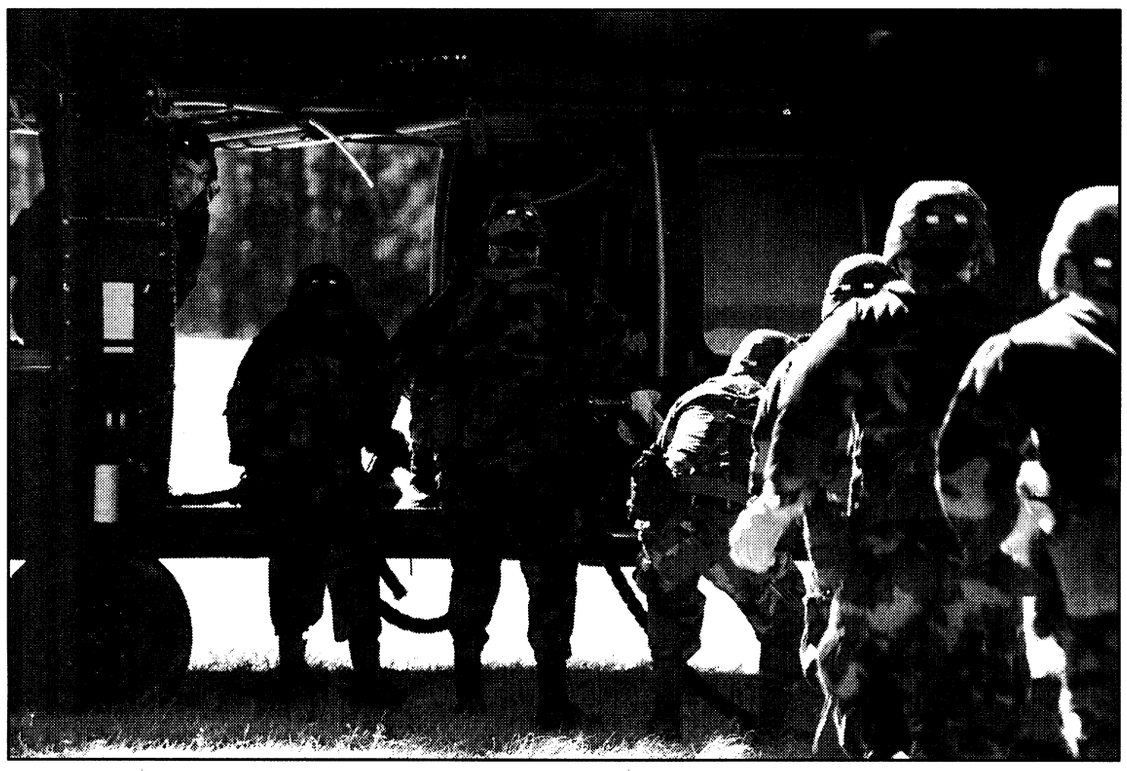
The completion of any mission, civilian or military, depends upon comprehensive training at every level. From general to private, chief executive officer to mail clerk, all people involved must have the specialized training it takes to successfully accomplish their objective.



At the School of the Americas Counternarcotics Operations Course, platoon- and company-level training is given to both officers and noncommissioned officers serving in leadership positions.

Instruction in the counternarcotics course is given in surveillance, discriminative marksmanship, development of intelligence networks, rappelling, fast-roping, human rights training, river operations and vehicle ambush training.

In addition to the demanding physical training required in the course, students are evaluated on their swimming skills, since most drug operations center around sources of water.



During recent fast-rope exercises, students were taught the fundamentals of fast-roping from a 30-foot tower. After descending the tower several times, the students proceeded to fast-rope from a helicopter.

As the battle in the war on drugs continues in Latin America and throughout the world, the School of the Americas continues to train students of the school to meet the needs of both the United States and Latin America.

PERSCOM provides guidelines for soldiers taking early outs

Personnel Command

Headquarters, Personnel Command, will approve or disapprove all pending voluntary separation incentive and special separation benefit and early retirement applications within the next 30 to 45 days.

The following administrative instructions are furnished to assist soldiers who receive approved responses to their applications.

Separation physical

All soldiers are reminded that they are required to undergo a retirement or separation physical.

Those soldiers attempting to retire without a physical will be held and not allowed to complete processing.

In compliance with Public Law 102-484, the soldier must receive the required preseparation counseling at least 90 days before retirement date.

Public service listing

Soldiers approved for early retirement must be listed with public and community service.

Registration for PACs must be accomplished no earlier than six months and no later than three months before retirement.

The servicing Army Career and Alumni Program office, or Army Community Service Center if no ACAP is available, will provide required counseling and assistance in registering for PACS.

Early retirement is not authorized until the soldier is listed on the PACS.

The confirmation copy of the PACS mini-resumé must be placed in the military personnel records jacket for further transfer to an official military personnel file.

GI Bill enrollment

The law provides an opportunity for certain personnel to enroll in the Montgomery GI Bill before being separated under VSI or SSB.

As early as possible before separation from active duty, the soldier must visit the education center for educational benefits counseling and further details regarding Authorization Act of 1991 directed that each separating or retiring service member receive a transcript of his or her military experience and training.

Experience verification

If a soldier is within 120 days of separating or retiring and has not received his or her Department of Defense Form 2586 (Verification of Military Experience and Training), he or she can call (800) 258-8638.

VSI/SSB payments

Soldiers who separate from active duty under the special separation benefit or voluntary separation incentive programs and receive a special or incentive bonus the same year will have the SSB/VSI reduced in an amount equal to the bonus.

This does not apply to members who separate in the last year of a bonus payment.

Active duty soldiers who separated from the military services under the VSI or SSB programs after Sept. 30 and are rehired in a civilian position of the Department of Defense within 180 days of separation from the Department of Defense, shall have the VSI or SSB separation payments recouped.

VSI and SSB separation payments are taxed as income in the year in which received. Under current tax law, soldiers who receive VSI or SSB pay that is later recouped may not be able to fully recover taxes resulting from the VSI or SSB payment.

Deferment requests

Soldiers and commanders are reminded that requests for deferment to a date later than June 30 will only be accepted after the approval process is completed.

This program requires that soldiers separate no later than June 30 in order to meet drawdown requirements.

Requests for delay of the separation or retirement should be held to a minimum and only documented hardship or operational necessity will be considered.

world war II

50 years ago this week ...

- Forces of the U.S. 6th Army broke into Manila, liberating more than 5,000 Allied prisoners. The U.S. Army's 1st Cavalry Division reached the outskirts of the capital from the north, while the 11th Airborne Division approached from the south. The 37th Infantry Division was also engaged in the fighting. The 20,000 Japanese in the city would fight to the end, offering bitter resistance. Much of the city, dating from the Spanish colonial period, was destroyed by American artillery fire and Japanese demolitions.

- American bombers dropped 2,266 tons of bombs on Berlin Feb. 3, the most concentrated attack on the city up to that time.

- The Allies launched a major offensive to reach the Rhine River. The German nation continued to crumble under the intense pressure from all sides, but the resistance was fierce. The French and British made progress in their sectors. The Red Army continued to drive toward the German capital from the east, while four U.S. Army divisions crossed the German frontier opposite Luxembourg. The days of the "Thousand Year Reich" were drawing to a close — but much Allied blood would be shed in the next few months.

- The first concentrated Allied offensive in Italy against the Germans in more than three months opened 10 miles below Bologna.

- The Yalta Conference opened with President Franklin D. Roosevelt, Winston Churchill and Joseph Stalin conferring on the structure of post-war Europe, the occupation of Germany and Soviet participation in the war against the Japanese Empire.

- The first private bank loan outside the lend-lease program was made to the Netherlands for $100 million. The loan was made by a group of 14 New York banks headed up by Chase Manhattan.

- At Fort Benning, a portrait of Gen. of the Army George C. Marshall, presented to the War Department by 35 leaders of American industry, was accepted on behalf of the secretary of War by Maj. Gen. Fred L. Walker, commandant of the Infantry School.

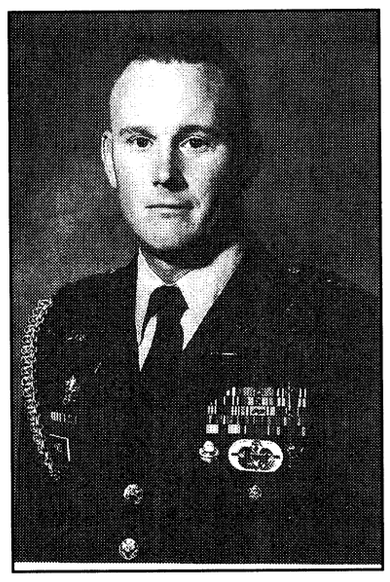
OCS selects outstanding infantry grad



USAIC Public Affairs Office

The 43rd annual Robert P. Patterson Memorial Award ceremony, hosted by the Officer Candidate School, 3rd Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment, will be at 9:30 a.m. today in Marshall Auditorium.

Second Lt. Robert W. Kinder, who graduated from Officer Candidate School last April, is this year's Patterson Award recipient.

The award goes to the officer selected as the most outstanding infantry graduate of OCS during the previous year. It is based on qualities of leadership, academic effectiveness, aptitude and character.

The award is named for Judge Robert P. Patterson, who served as a captain in the U.S. Army during World War I. His battlefield exploits earned him the Distinguished Service Cross, Silver Star and Purple Heart. He later served as judge of the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals and as secretary of War in the President Harry Truman administration.

Kinder

When Patterson died in 1952, a trust fund for the award was established with monetary contributions from several friends.

Kinder initially enlisted in the U.S. Air Force in 1980, serving as a target intelligence specialist. He later served as a combat controller at Norton Air Force Base, Calif., and later with the Joint Special Operations Command at Fort Bragg, N.C., deploying to Panama during Operation Just Cause with that unit.

Kinder separated from the U.S. Air Force in 1990 and graduated from Riddle Aeronautical University with a degree in professional aeronautics. Enlisting in the U.S. Army later that year, he completed Special Forces training at Fort Bragg, N.C., and entered Officer Candidate School in 1993.

He was distinguished honor graduate of the Special Forces Qualification Course, the distinguished honor graduate and the distinguished academic graduate of OCS and the platoon honor graduate of his Infantry Officer Basic Course. He is a graduate of Airborne School, the Military Freefall Parachutist and Jumpmaster courses, the Combat Diver Qualification Course, Ranger School, Arabic-Egyptian Language Course, the Pathfinder Course and the U.S. Air Force Survival, Evasion Resistance and Escape School.

His awards include the Joint Service Commendation Medal, three awards of the Air Force Commendation Medal, Joint Service Achievement Medal, two awards of the Air Force Achievement Medal, two awards of the Army Achievement Medal, the Expeditionary Medal, and the Combat Readiness Medal.

Kinder is currently assigned to Company A, 5th Battalion, 325th Parachute Infantry Regiment, 82nd Airborne Division, Fort Bragg. He and his wife, Faye, live there with their two children. They are expecting a son in May.

MPs receive awards for duty in Haiti

By Marc G. Turchin
Bayonet staff writer

The military police company that recently returned from Haiti was honored Feb. 2 during a ceremony conducted in Marshall Auditorium, inside Infantry Hall.

Soldiers from the 988th Military Police Company were given awards for their role in Operation Uphold Democracy.

Awards for 165 soldiers and family members were given out. The family members were given awards for their help with the Family Unit Support Group.

The awards presented at the ceremony were the Army Commendation Medal, the Army Achievement Medal, as well as certificates of achievement and participation.

Maj. Gen. John W. Hendrix, Fort Benning's commanding general, and Col. Ronnie D. Alton, post provost marshal, spoke to the MPs and others who were in the audience.

Hendrix said he "sleeps a lot easier now" that the military police are almost back up to full strength on post.

Alton said as far as he knows, everything in Haiti went as planned.

"As far as I'm concerned, it went without a hitch, " Alton said. "We didn't have any problems with the people coordinating (and) they did a super job."

Second class graduates from Law Enforcement Academy

Army Career and Alumni Program

The Army Career and Alumni Program Skill Development Program announced the second graduation of the Fort Benning Law Enforcement Academy Jan. 13.

Fort Benning's Commanding General Maj. Gen. John W. Hendrix and approximately 125 relatives and friends of the graduating students attended.

The guest speaker was newly elected Columbus Mayor Bobby Peters. Peters challenged the graduates to seek to be the best they can be.

He told them that even though a tremendous challenge lay before them, their career would never be dull or monotonous and that they would play a vital role in our society.

Academy Director Bob Awtrey said these graduates had a great deal of which to be proud and congratulated each of them. Sean Robertson and David Childs received special awards as the students.

Mark Floyd and Robertson also received awards for the top firearms averages.

Awtrey emphasized that many of the graduates were already employed by various law enforcement agencies when they graduated while other graduates were in the process of being employed.

Other classes are scheduled to begin May 1 and July 31.

The course is open to all soldiers and family members, not just those with military police and security backgrounds.

Any soldier interested in obtaining information about the program can contact Awtrey at 545-7028.

NATIONAL INFANTRY MUSEUM

Museum director says goodbye to 'baby'

By Jan Wesner Childs
Special to The Bayonet©

Outgoing National Infantry Museum Director Dick Grube has outlasted 14 different commanding generals at Fort Benning and hosted more than 2 million museum visitors.

He's seen the museum undergo a five-year redesign program and amass one of the biggest collections of original military artifacts.

He has even cleaned the bathrooms and dusted off exhibits.

And now, after 22 years, Grube thinks the time has come to hand his "baby" over to someone else.

"I am the father of three daughters and this museum," Grube said Jan. 31, his last day of work. "Giving them away in marriage is just like my leaving here today — I do so with mixed emotions."

Curator Frank Hanner will take over from Grube.

Grube, 61, doesn't hide his feelings when he looks back at his time as museum director.

"One of the reasons I stayed is that every morning when I wake up there is no greater challenge to me than to come to Fort Benning and to open the doors to this museum," he said.

Grube came to the museum in 1973 after he retired from the Army as a lieutenant colonel. He founded and served as curator of the U.S. Southern Command museum in Panama in 1969, and he always had an interest in military history.

"I've been collecting antiques since I was 13 years old, and I told my wife one day that when I retired from the Army I planned to work in an armory and dust cannons," he said. "Little did I know that would be my fate."

Grube takes great pride in the personal attention he gives the exhibits. He's traveled around the country to purchase unique objects.

Grube just came back from Fort Lauderdale, Fla., where he bought a set of cast iron gate panels from an 1830s fort. They will be displayed on the front porch of the museum.

The museum searches for items to buy in magazines and keeps in contact with a large number of dealers. Many items are also donated.

"In the old days, when our budget was much more than it is now, we used to just get in a truck and spend 10 or 12 days driving through Virginia and Pennsylvania" looking for artifacts, he said.

Nowadays the museum, just like every other agency, is facing budget cutbacks. Grube and his small staff have taken over janitorial duties and are relying more on donations from the public.

Still, the museum has maintained its high standards. Grube said the museum has few reproductions.

"We have such an incredible collection and the thing I think we're the proudest of is that, with very few exceptions, everything we have is real," he said. "There are very few museums that can say that."

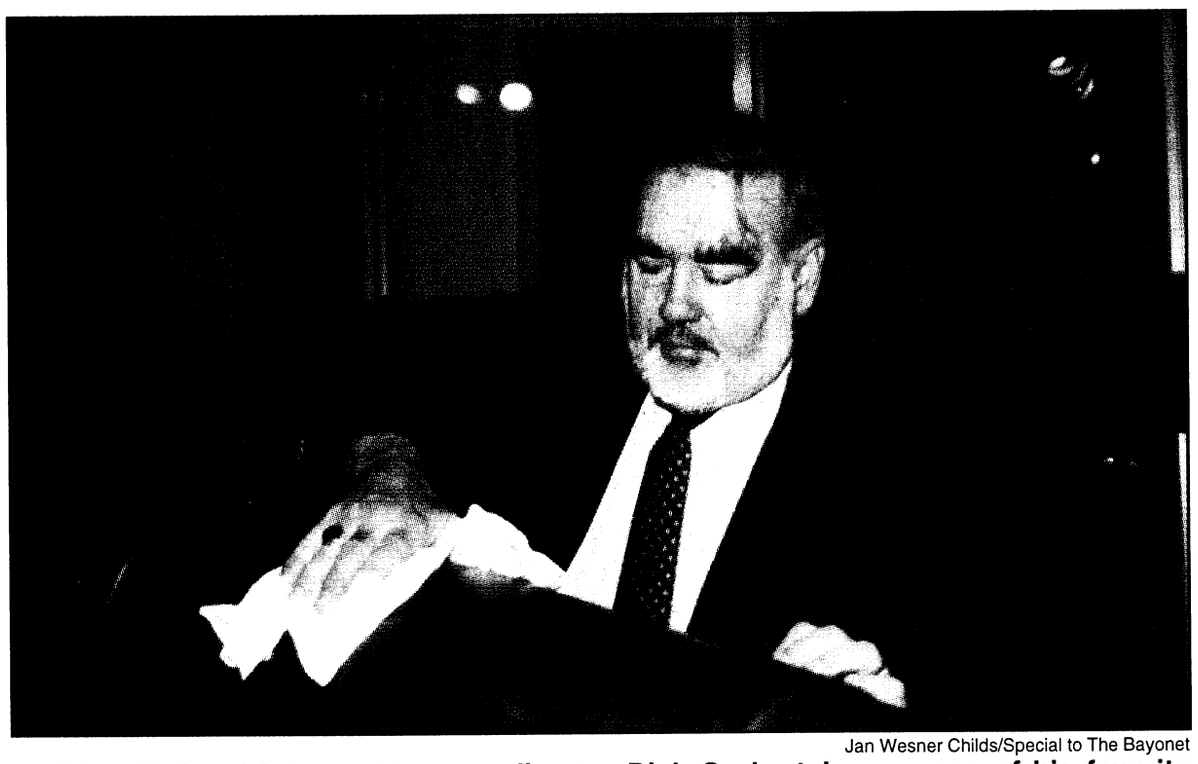
An effort to photograph all the museum's artifacts is under way in case some are ever destroyed or stolen.

Grube is often asked what he'd save if a fire or natural disaster were to strike the museum and he had only seconds to escape. The answer brings tears to his eyes.

"I would save the two Medals of Honor," Grube said. "They represent a great sacrifice by two decades of infantrymen."

"The Medal of Honor was established 132 years ago during the American Civil War. During that 132 years, when we've seen such great conflicts as the Spanish-American War, World War I, World War II, Korea, Vietnam ... the Medal of Honor has been given roughly only 300 times. Infantrymen have received it more than half of the time."

One of Grube's greatest memories is of the July 1, 1977, grand opening of the new museum in its present location. Gen. of the Army Omar Bradley cut the ribbon.



Besides Bradley, distinguished visitors to the museum have included presidents, astronauts and foreign dignitaries. About 110,00 people visit the facility each year, according to Grube.

But the everyday visitors are most important, he said.

"The thing that I'll miss is the contact we have with veterans that come in here and tell their story."

Grube said World War II vets visit the museum and recount the glory of their units. He's always amazed at the pride they still have after all these years.

"That's our mission here, to honor those infantrymen," he said.

Fort Benning teachers win recognition

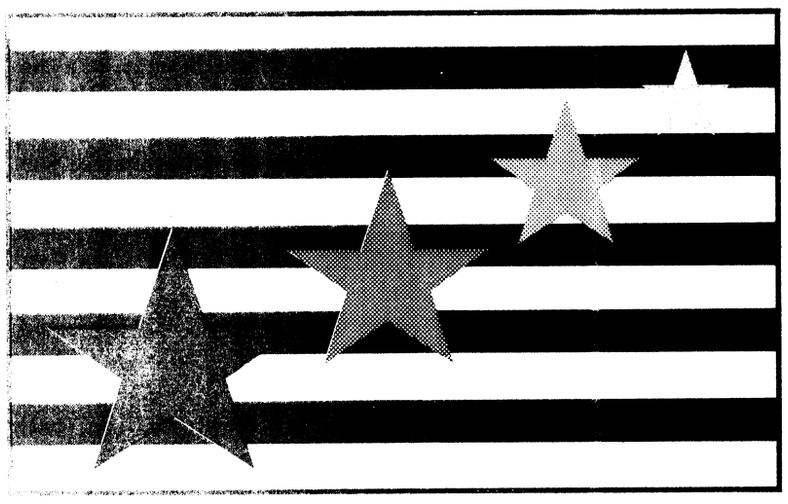
By Jerrie Macintire
Special to The Bayonet©

Two Fort Benning teachers were recognized for their excellence in the field of education at the Georgia Science Teachers Association Awards Banquet in Savannah Feb. 2.

Judy Hanley and Joyce Flatt were designated "Science Teacher of the Year" for District 6 in the middle school and the elementary school categories, respectively.

"These teachers believe in the value of science education, and put their heads and their hearts and their hands into that belief," said Jerry Christy, curriculum, coordinator for computer education, math and science.

"Both teachers involve children in meaningful, hands-on experiences that help develop science concepts that are difficult to explain," he said.



For example, Hanley often teaches geology and the concepts of rock layering by using cupcakes swirled with three flavors of batters. Students use charts, rulers and colored pencils to chart data as they take core samples from the cupcakes using drinking straws in much the same way geologists take core samples from rock formations.

Flatt also teaches earth sciences in an innovative way, encouraging experiments such as moisture analysis and plan soil comparisons using Dexter School's greenhouse as a hands-on classroom.

She often solicits seasonal leftovers from area garden centers, then encourages her students to nurse the plants back to health.

"These science teachers offer exciting classroom activities so the students are doing instead of listening about the experiments of others. They are just generally 'science activists,'" Christy said.

Hanley and Flatt received recognitions and a cash award at the annual GTSA awards banquet.

AUSA seeks essay writers

Army News Service

WASHINGTON — Association of the United States Army officials are looking for writers to participate in the second annual ARMY Magazine Essay Contest.

Anyone, except employees of AUSA, is welcome to enter. Essays must address important issues concerning the U.S. Army in the 21st century. Some examples of appropriate focus are:

• The changing world of Army training: simulation, virtual reality and field exercises

• The role of women in tomorrow's armed services

• The use of Reserve Components in operational roles

• National security and operations other than war

• The future of the soldier in a high-tech Army.

The author of the best essay will receive a cash prize of $1,000. Second- and third-place entries will receive $500 and $250, respectively. Winning essays will be published in ARMY Magazine.

Essays will be judged by a board of national security and land power experts. The review of the essay will measure overall quality, scholarship and analysis of the subject. Essays must stress analysis and interpretation — not exposition, personal narrative or report.

Entry rules:

• Essays must be original and must not exceed 2,500 words

• All entries should be sent to:
Editor, Army Magazine
Attn:Essay Contest
2425 Wilson Blvd.
Arlington, Va. 22201.

• Essays must be postmarked no later than May 31

• The author's name will not appear on the essay.

(Each author will write a two- or three-sentence synopsis of the essay on a cover sheet. A sealed envelope will accompany the entry. Inside the envelope will be the author's name, brief biographical sketch, Social Security number, address, day and evening commercial telephone numbers, and the same two- or three-sentence synopsis that appears on the cover sheet.)

• All essays must be typewritten and double-spaced on 8 1/2 by 11-inch paper. Three copies must be submitted.

Winners will be notified by letter in August

The editor of ARMY Magazine will also review essays not selected for cash awards for publication in the magazine. Writers will be compensated at the established rate and must transfer all rights, including the copyright, to AUSA before publication.

ARMY Magazine reserves the right to edit published essays for style, accuracy or space limitations.

SOA hosts open house for sponsors

By Judith Ginder
School of the Americas

The School of the Americas' Host of Latin America program, better known as HOLA, welcomed sponsors at an open house Jan. 20 at the Officers' Club.

HOLA is a group of volunteers who sponsor guest instructors and students of the School of the Americas.

Sponsors are matched with either individual students or with students and their families. Students enrolled in courses lasting one year and guest instructors who teach at the school for two years usually bring their families with them to the United States.

According to Cecilia Alexander, HOLA coordinator, once sponsors are matched with student and guest instructors, HOLA brings the two groups together.

We begin by introducing the sponsors to their guests so getting to know one another isn't as difficult, Alexander said. The open house was to welcome sponsors and potential sponsors into the program.

During a slide presentation, guests learned of the School of the Americas' history and about some of the courses at the school. Sponsors are also given helpful tips about some things to expect from the visiting students.

The biggest of these is to keep things casual. Don't try to impress guests with big, fancy dinners.

Making the guest feel comfortable is most important, Alexander said.

She also stated that although being able to speak Spanish is helpful, it is not a must.

There are close to 50 sponsors at this time but more are always welcome to participate in the program.

For more information about becoming a sponsor, contact Alexander at 545-1285.

volunteers needed

Volunteer Resource Center

The Fort Benning Volunteer Resource Center promotes volunteerism by recruiting potential volunteers, by retaining active volunteers and by recognizing the contributions of volunteers to the quality of life of soldiers and families.

The Volunteer Resource Center is located in Building 359, Family Unit Network Center, and it is open Monday through Friday from 8 a.m. to 5 p .m. Persons interested in volunteering can visit or call Olga MacLean, installation volunteer coordinator, at 545-5602.

There are many volunteer opportunities available through the center.

• Volunteers are needed at the Thrift Shop on Tuesdays and Thursdays between 10 a.m. and 2 p.m. Individuals will gain retail experience while helping others. Free child care is provided for up to two children.

• Santa's Castle needs volunteers on Wednesdays from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. to help clean and refurbish toys. A volunteer is particularly needed to sew baby doll and Barbie clothes. Child care costs are provided.

• Sayers Memorial Library needs volunteers to assist with shelving books, data entry and story time for children. Also, volunteers with experience in activity program planning, dramatic reading and counseling are encouraged to participate in the Multiple Reading Program this summer. Child-care costs will be provided.

Volunteers are needed in each housing area to assist the community mayor. Persons interested can contact a community life center.

• The Public Affairs Office needs an editorial assistant to assist the print section in publishing The Bayonet.

This product supports Army families by disseminating community news and command information to all Fort Benning families. The Bayonet newspaper is delivered free to all on-post housing units and by subscription to those living off post.

Interested persons must have typing ability; knowledge of computer word processing systems is preferred but not required. Good communication skills and command of the English language are required. Education or experience in print journalism is preferred but not required. Also, the individual must be familiar with the Army and Fort Benning.

For more information, call 545-2201.

• The Rape Crisis Intervention Program is looking for volunteers. Training and child-care costs are provided.

• The First Steps Program needs volunteers to mentor and assist new mothers during the first few days or weeks after the birth of their children. Training and child-care costs are provided.

• Big Brothers and Big Sisters of Columbus needs adults to share love, support and time with children from single-parent families. For more information, call 327-3760.

• Project Voice needs volunteers to serve as tutors, mentors and coaches to work with youths. Individuals working in this program will serve as role models through their efforts in sports, educational and recreational programs. For more information, call Tony Adams at 571-4975 or 571-4976.

• The Fish and Wildlife Management office needs sports-minded volunteers to work at the deer-check station, feed the catfish in Russ Pond and perform other duties.

• The Combined Communities of Southeast Columbus is looking for volunteers for its tutorial program for Saturday mornings. Contact Lonnie Jackson at 687-5357.

• The Volunteer Resource Center is located in Building 359, Family Unit Network Center, and it is open Monday through Friday from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. For more information, visit or call Olga MacLean, installation volunteer coordinator, at 545-5602.

• Bouton Heights, Davis Hill and Indianhead Terrace housing areas need volunteers for Mayor. If interested, contact your community life office.

• The Army Family Team Building Program is looking for volunteers to assist in clerical support. The program is dedicated to get all members of the Army Family established and actively involved.

• The American Red Cross is looking for volunteer health and safety instructors and Red Cross board members.

Dogwoods available

The National Arbor Day Foundation

Ten free white flowering dogwood trees will be given to each person who joins the National Arbor Day Foundation during February.

The free trees are part of the nonprofit foundation's Trees for America campaign.

"The white flowering dogwoods will add year-round beauty to your home and neighborhood," John Rosenow, the foundation's president, said. "Dogwoods have showy spring flowers, scarlet autumn foliage and red berries that attract songbirds.

The trees will be shipped postpaid at the right time for planting between March 1 and May 31 with planting instructions. The six- to 12-inch trees are guaranteed to grow or they will be replaced free of charge.

Members also receive a subscription to the foundation's bimonthly publication, "Arbor Day," and The Tree Book.

To become a member of the Foundation and receive the free trees, send a $10 contribution to: 10 Free Dogwoods, National Arbor Day Foundation, 100 Arbor Ave., Nebraska City, Neb. 68410, by Feb. 28.

Soup company labels needed for playground equipment

Family Child Care

The Family Child Care providers at Fort Benning are sponsoring a campaign through the Campbell's Labels for Education Program to earn free playground equipment.

The playground equipment can be used by children, from toddler age to school age. At present, none of the playgrounds on post are equipped for this varied age group or can accommodate children with special needs.

Fort Benning will be collecting labels from more than 1,000 Campbell-made products, to include: any Campbell's label product, Marie's, Mrs. Paul's, Swanson, V-8, Early California, Franco-American, Vlasic, Pepperidge Farm and Prego. The goal is to collect 345,650 labels during this program.

Collection barrels are located in all post community life offices for deposit of the labels. Many of the child-care providers will accept labels. Their homes can be identified by the yellow rainbows in the windows.

This playground equipment will not only benefit the child-care providers, but it will also provide a place for any family from Fort Benning to come with their children to play. The projected location for this equipment is Russ Pond.

For more information, call Debbie Snoke at 687-6823.

Providers must be certified

Family Child Care Office

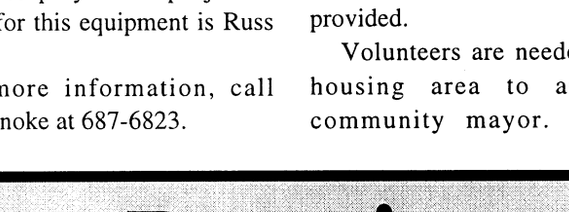
Are you using unauthorized child care?

It is against Army regulations for individuals to provide child care in quarters for more than 10 child hours per week without becoming certified through Child Development Services. Uncertified child care in quarters could result in losing post housing.

Certification ensures that people caring for children do not have any record of child abuse, or drug or alcohol abuse. It limits the number of children in care so that each child receives individual attention. It ensures that nutritious snacks and meals will be served at regular times, and that the home is clean and safe.

Certification also allows homes to be monitored on a regular basis by Army staff and to be covered by Army liability insurance.

Certified child-care homes are identified by a yellow rainbow sign posted in the window.



Information and referrals for certified child care can be obtained by calling 544-1623 or 687-4038.

Parent Academy

Fort Benning Schools plan sessions to help parents on raising children

Fort Benning Schools

The Parent Academy, a weekend seminar for Fort Benning parents of children up to age 18, will take place at Faith School Feb. 24 and 25.

Last year, more than 300 parents attended the two-day seminar that covered parenting topics related to children ages newborn to 15. This year's Parent Academy will be expanded to include parenting issues from birth through high school.

The Parent Academy is free and is open to all Fort Benning parents and personnel. Free child care will also be provided for children aged 6 weeks to 11 years of age.

Space in the Parent Academy will be limited. Reservations are required. These reservations are taken on a first-come, first-served basis and may be made at the seven Fort Benning Schools and at the Fort Benning Schools Administration Office on Custer Road.

Registration will take place from 8:15 to 9:15 a.m. each morning until all spaces are filled. No telephone reservations will be accepted.

The Parent Academy is built around topics identified by Fort Benning parents. More than 200 Fort Benning Schools' parents responded to a questionnaire last month. The Parent Academy sessions have been designed to cover the topics that were of greatest interest.

Barbara Coloroso, an internationally recognized speaker in the areas of parenting, discipline and nonviolent conflict resolution, will return to Fort Benning to share her knowledge and expertise.

Following a spaghetti supper Feb. 24, she will present a keynote address to kick off the academy sessions scheduled from 8 a.m. to noon Feb. 25.

On Saturday morning, parents will choose three sessions. Choices include such topics as discipline, chores, homework, encouraging creativity, technology, stages of development of middle school students, high school, college and career planning and many more.

Registration forms and information will be sent home with Fort Benning Schools' students Jan. 24.

Parents interested in attending the Parent Academy can either return the registration form or come to any registration site to register during the registration times.

Those wishing to register who do not have a child in the Fort Benning Schools can pick up registration forms and materials at any registration site.

The Parent Academy is being presented by the Fort Benning Schools, the Officers' Wives' Club and other community agencies.

va q&a

Department of Veterans Affairs

Q: The Department of Veterans Affairs recently determined I have a service-connected disability because of a leg injury I received while in the Air Force. VA rated my disability at 10 percent. Am I eligible to participate in VA's Vocational Rehabilitation Program?

A: Maybe. Veterans with at least a 10-percent disability rating may be entitled to a program of vocational rehabilitation if VA finds "a serious employment handicap," and the veteran needs rehabilitation services to prepare for, obtain or retain suitable employment.

Contact the VA regional office nearest you at (800) 827-1000 for further information.

Q: I receive a VA pension. Can I qualify for VA's Vocational Rehabilitation Program?

A: Yes. Any veteran receiving a pension awarded between Jan. 30, 1985, and Dec. 31, 1995, can apply for a vocational training evaluation.

If an evaluation shows the veteran can achieve a vocational goal if provided the appropriate rehabilitation services, VA will help develop a plan of services that can lead to employment.

There is no requirement that a pensioner participate in an evaluation or training; and, if the veteran elects to enter a training program, the pension benefit is protected until the veteran is employed.

The Vocational Training Program for VA Pensioners provides the same types of training as the Vocational Rehabilitation Program but does not pay the veteran a subsistence allowance.

Q: For what purposes can I use a VA-guaranteed home loan?

A: Veterans can get a VA-guaranteed loan to buy a home, including a townhouse or condominium unit; build a home; repair, alter or improve a home; refinance an existing home loan; buy a manufactured home with or without a lot; buy and improve a manufactured home lot on which to place a unit owned and occupied by the veteran; improve a home through installation of a solar heating or cooling system or other energy-conserving measures; and refinance a manufactured home loan to acquire a lot.

Q: I know that the Department of Veterans Affairs pays disability compensation to veterans with certain conditions that have been linked to exposure to Agent Orange. What are those conditions?

A: VA makes disability payments based on a presumption that veterans who served in Vietnam were exposed to Agent Orange and other herbicides.

The conditions VA recognizes on this basis are soft-tissue sarcoma, non-Hodgkin's lymphoma, chloracne, Hodgkin's disease, porphyria cutanea tarda, multiple myeloma (a cancer involving the bone marrow) and respiratory cancers affecting the lungs, bronchus, larynx and trachea.

Editor's note: If you have a question about your veterans benefits, call the Department of Veterans Affairs at (800) 827-1000.

Veterans Affairs to pay dividends

Department of Veterans Affairs

The Department of Veterans Affairs has announced it will pay more than $928 million in dividends in 1995 to veterans holding active veterans' life insurance policies.

The dividends are made possible because veterans are living longer than originally predicted, and the insurance trust funds are earning high yields from investment in long-term U.S. government securities.

"VA life insurance programs continue to prove themselves as outstanding investments for many of our veterans, and a large dividend distribution such as this provides a welcome boost to our economy," said VA Secretary Jesse Brown.

The $928.2 million payout will be credited automatically to some 2.4 million policyholders on the anniversary date of their policies.

Policyholders may choose to receive a dividend check or select one of nine alternate payment options. VA is cautioning veterans that only those policies that have been kept in force receive annual dividend distributions.

The amount of the dividend will vary according to age, type of insurance and duration of the policy. No application from individual policyholders is necessary.

The largest group receiving 1995 payments will be two million World War II veterans with National Service Life Insurance ("V") policies. They will receive an average payment of $397, with total payments expected to reach $788.9 million.

Veterans who have questions about their policy can call the VA Insurance Office at (800) 669-8477.

Me-me-me vs you-you-you

reflections

Around the time of Jesus, a great sage lived in Israel named Hillel. Hillel said, "If I am not for myself, who will be for me? If I am only for myself, what am I? And if not now, when?"

Rabbis and other scholars have often pondered this quote and wondered what it meant. What was Hillel trying to say? I'll tell you what I think; you decide for yourself.

You, yourself, must be your first area of concern. Before you begin to care for others, you must first take care of yourself. One cannot depend on the kindness of others. We need to make sure that our own needs are met. We cannot permit ourselves to be so burdened with our obligations that we disregard our own needs.

When you feel stressed out and overwhelmed by the demands and expectations of your family or your job, working harder becomes counterproductive. Believing that you will solve all their problems by devoting more and more time is self-defeating.

You must be for yourself because nobody else can or will look out for you as well as you can. Keep yourself from doing simply to fulfill other's expectations of you.

Do not let guilt or resentment direct your concern for others. Do not become overworked because of an exaggerated sense of obligation. Remember always to be for yourself first and foremost.

If you cannot take care of yourself, then you cannot take care of others. If you are not "squared away," then you cannot "square away" others. If you do not love, accept and protect yourself, then you cannot love, accept and protect others.

Hillel cautions us by saying, "If I am only for myself, what am I?" Thinking and caring only for self does not do any good either.

One needs to have a balance. A person should not speak only in me-me-me language, nor is it healthy to speak in only you-you-you language. The ideal language is the language of we and us. We must not give so much that we lose who we are and simply become a role player or an object in the eyes of another.

Being defined as only so and so's spouse, so and so's child or so and so's parent is a loss of personhood and sense of self. Speaking of yourself in those terms of possession is a negation of self and implies a huge loss of self-esteem and self-worth.

Seeing yourself as only a role player in your family or at your job will perpetuate that negative self-image and can lead to depression or dependency. At the same time, we must not be so self-absorbed to become selfish or narcissistic. We cannot be people who think that everything is owed to us, that we are entitled to all the good things in this world and it does not matter if others are more in need or even more worthy.

The ideal kind of self is a person who knows his or her own worth, a person who has a name of their own, not one imposed upon them by the role they need to play with others; a person who is not withdrawn or self-centered but gives love and care freely without expectations or conditions; a person who gives easily without fear of rejection or resentment; a person who does not act out of guilt or a sense of obligation but from an honest expression of his or her most heartfelt feelings.

This balance is not easily achieved. It may require huge efforts, perhaps with the help of counseling. It may involve trying to get rid of many years of abusive or self-destructive behavior. It may even seem impossible because of your current life situation; but, even if you can just begin the process to change the way you see yourself and the way you deal with others, it will be worth it.

As Hillel said, "If not now, when?"

Dean Ortner demonstrates the ability of sound to shatter a glass goblet during one of the Sermons from Science programs.

Science spectacular coming

USAIC Chaplain Office

"Man's sense organs are unreliable tools to use in probing for proof of what goes on in the world."

Dean Ortner will provide spectacular evidence of that contention as he presents his Sermons from Science demonstrations at Infantry Hall's Marshall Auditorium at 7 p.m. Sunday through Wednesday.

Masterminding more than $100,000 worth of scientific equipment to supplement the lectures, Ortner makes metal float effortlessly, chemicals alter color at a predetermined time and a suitcase oppose the will of audience participators.

"This is not hocus-pocus," explains Ortner. "It is natural law discovered by science. My purpose is not to amuse people with tricks, but to show that eyes and ears are such tragically feeble instruments in some realms of nature that man is reduced to the functional stature of a jellyfish in a symphony orchestra."

The demonstrations focus on the fact that science constantly uncovers facts indicating there are yet untold sounds and sights we know nothing about. He demonstrates that the universe runs by laws that we know only in part, but to disregard these laws asks for disaster.

"Much more tragic than the results coming from violation of physical laws is the risk of our eternal destiny when we fail to follow God's laws for the spiritual world," explains Ortner.

Ortner has a degree in biology and served on the faculty of North Dakota State University for three years in entomology while doing research in bionucleonics.

Admission to these world-famous demonstrations is open to the public without charge.

HOW TO RECYCLE

Post housing residents may place recyclable materials in brown plastic bins for weekly curbside pickup.

Here is a list of the items that can and cannot be placed in the bin for recycling.

• Glass: Only the following can be recycled: soft drink, beer, juice, ketchup, wine, liquor and food containers. All caps and lids are to be removed and containers are to be rinsed out. Special care should be taken to avoid breaking glass when placing it in the recycling bin. Glass will be separated by color at the curb for processing at the Materials Recovery facility.

• Cans: Only aluminum and steel cans are accepted at this time. Cans must be rinsed out. Labels may remain on the cans.

• Plastic: All plastic materials containing the Recycling Triangle (Three Chasing Arrows) may be recycled. This includes soft drink bottles and milk jugs. Caps must be removed and may be placed in the recycling bin. All containers must be rinsed out.

•Paper: All paper products except used personal type materials may be recycled. These items should be placed in brown paper bags or bundled together and tied then placed beside the recycling bin.

NOTE: Incidents whereby used personal items are placed for recycling is cause for rejection.

• Cardboard: Pick-up of cardboard from moving will be coordinated directly with the Materials Recovery Facility, at 544-6142. Ask for the manager or leave a message containing your address, housing area, name and phone number.

• Inert Waste: Tree limbs, grass clippings and leaves will be picked up on Mondays only. Clippings and leaves should be placed in a garbage can and tied or in a trash can with a lid.

Trash and recycle pickup schedule

Household trash and recycling will be collected once a week on the same day. If there is recyclable material mixed in with the trash can it will not be picked up until the following week, or until recyclables are separated.

TIPS FOR MAKING YOUR AD MORE EFFECTIVE

- Start Your ad with the item you are selling, service you are offering, or job title you are looking to hire.
- Be descriptive. The more information you provide to the reader, the better the responses will be to your ad.
- Use bold type, white space of decorative characters such as stars, to bring attention to your ad.
- Run your ad for an ample length of time. Remember, as soon as you get results, you can cancel at any time .
- Always include the price of your item.

Construction budget boost — by the numbers

Post may get budget windfall of $44 million

By Jan Wesner Childs
Special to The Bayonet

Fort Benning will get $44.6 million for construction projects if the current proposed budget is approved by Congress.

Master planner Ken Holloway said Tuesday the following projects are included in the proposed military budget for fiscal year 1996:

• Demolition and replacement of four barracks buildings at Kelley Hill. Buildings 9008, 9009, 9010 and 9011 will be replaced to meet updated standards. Cost of the project is estimated at $33 million.

• Construction of a close combat tactical training facility with 38 vehicle simulator modules. Cost is estimated at $4.9 million.

• An eight-room addition to Faith Middle School at a cost of $1.1 million.

• Upgrades to Martin Army Community Hospital to bring the facility in line with national Fire Protection Association safety standards, including installation of automatic sprinkler systems. Cost would be $5.6 million.

No housing projects were included, according to Holloway.

He said the post set its priorities for 1996 about four years ago. The requests went through several levels of approval and competed against projects from other posts. A final list eventually ended up in the budget now before Congress.

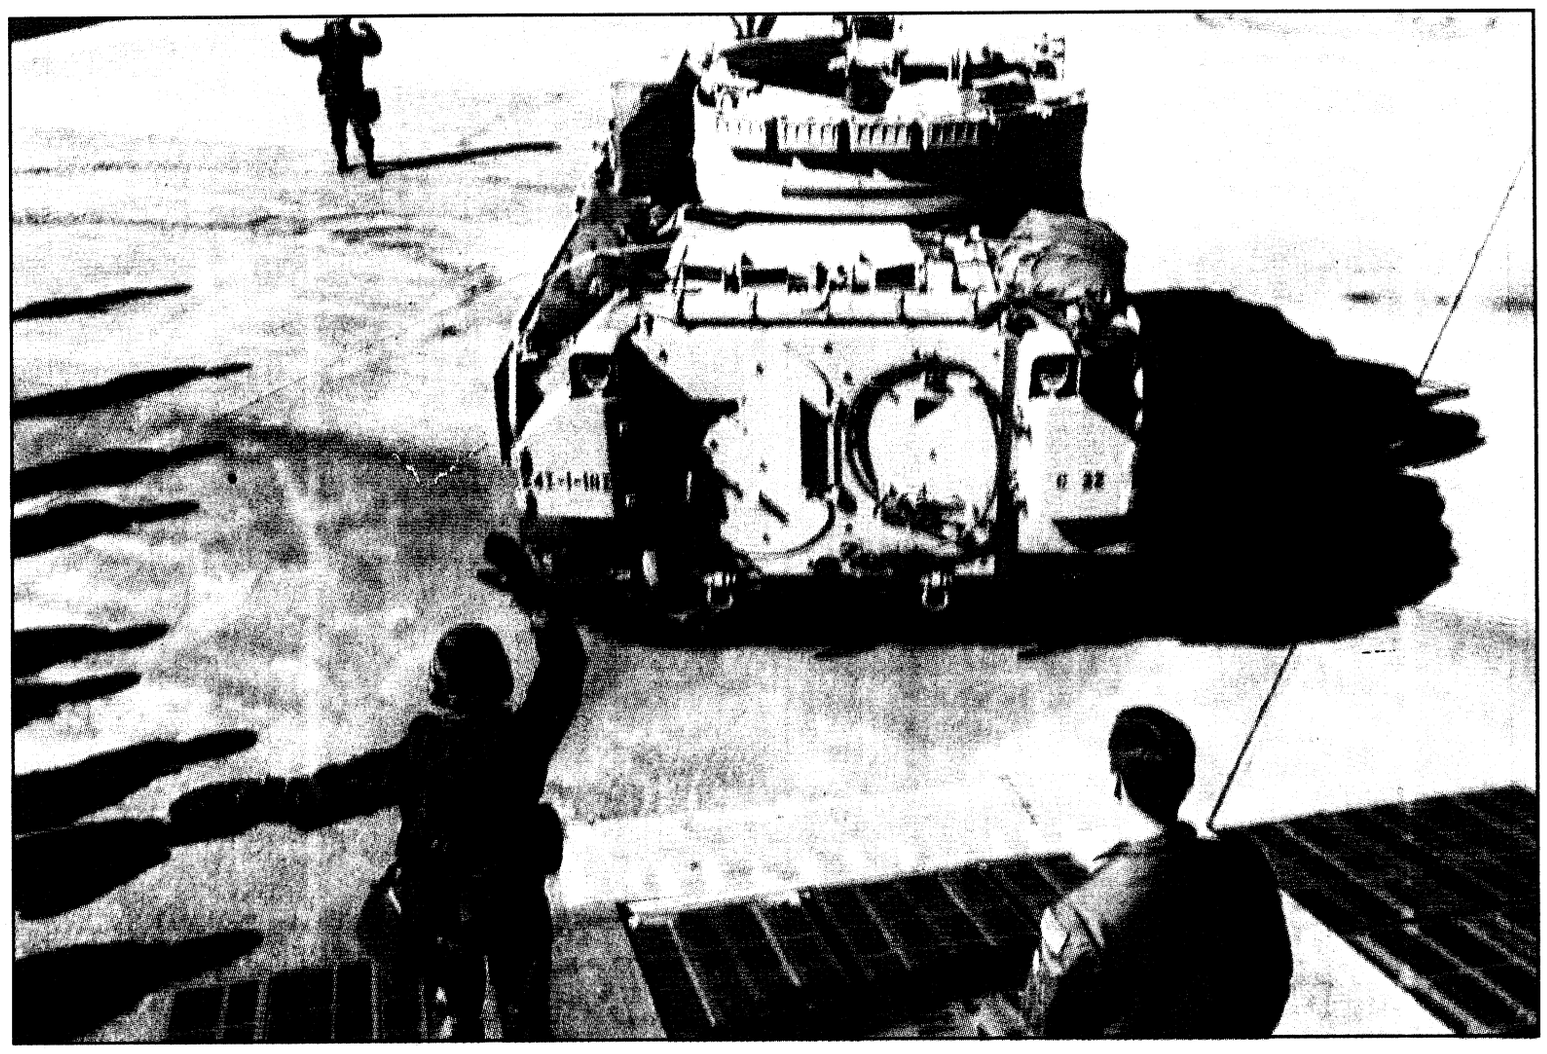
The process is a long and competitive one, Holloway said. The projects that survived are not necessarily the ones that were the post's top priorities.

Holloway said the Kelley Hill barracks project is necessary because the buildings are outdated.

"They're 1950s standards," Holloway said. "They would tear the whole thing down and start from scratch."

The new barracks would include individual sleeping and living rooms, walk-in closets and private toilet and service area with maximum occupancy of two people.

They would also include cable television and telephone service.



Holloway said $21 million was originally requested for the barracks project in fiscal year '95, but the request had to be resubmitted because the standards changed and the cost of the project increased.

Another project on the list, the close combat tactical training facility, would be "state of the art" and would link up with similar vehicle simulator facilities on post, Holloway said.

"It's a real advanced, virtual reality type thing," he said.

The facility would also be able to connect with other posts for training.

The Faith Middle School project would include one special education classroom, seven general purpose classrooms, a supply room, janitor closet and toilet facilities.

Ranger students die in training

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Four ranger students died Wednesday during a training exercise in the Florida swamps.

The students were in the ninth day of the final phase of Ranger School at Eglin Air Force Base, Fla. They were operating in three, 34-man patrols and had been in the field since Saturday.

The current operation began when the students began boat training drills at 11 a.m. Wednesday.

At about 3 p.m. they began patrolling in the swamps where the water ranged from waist to chest high. When the water began to be even deeper, the rangers began building rope bridges.

It was then, about 5:30 p.m, when ranger instructors noticed that one of the students was demonstrating signs of hypothermia.

A medical evacuation helicopter was called and by the time it arrived 15 minutes later, ranger instructors decided to evacuate two other students. All three were taken to the troop medical clinic where they are in good condition.

Two hours later, two more students showed signs of hypothermia. They too were evacuated, using a jungle penetrator to extract them.

Because of dense fog, two other students could not be flown out and had to be medevaced by ground ambulance. Two ranger instructors administered constant cardiopulmonary resuscitation to the students during the 40-minute move to high ground where the ambulance was stationed.

Of these four, three died and one was placed under intensive care but is now in stable condition.

The fourth student disappeared from the patrol and was not found until the next day, culminating an intensive search by ranger cadre and members of the Air Force search and rescue teams.

Ranger School, headquartered at Fort Benning, with camps in Dahlonega, Ga., Fort Bliss, Texas, and Eglin, trains about 3,000 soldiers in close combat skills each year.

The last casualty at the Florida camp was a drowning in 1985.

Names of the deceased soldiers are being withheld pending notification of next of kin.

Fort Benning officials are investigating all aspects of the operation.

Headquarters, 24th infantry Division

FORT STEWART, Ga. — The 24th Infantry Division (Mechanized) will be redesignated as the 3rd Infantry Division (Mechanized), according to an announcement made Feb. 10 by Secretary of the Army Togo D. West and Army Chief of Staff Gordon R. Sullivan.

The redesignation is part of the Army's restructuring from 12 to 10 divisions.

The 24th Infantry Division was formed from elements of the old Hawaiian Division on Oct. 1, 1941.

In 1957 the division was inactivated in Korea. In 1958 it was activated again in Germany. Two years later the division moved to Fort Riley, Kan., where it remained until it was inactivated in 1970.

It was reactivated at its current location, Fort Stewart, in 1975.

Victory Division soldiers have performed many operational deployments, including Operations Restore and Contiune Hope in Somalia, Restore Democracy in Haiti and Vigilant Warrior in Southwest Asia.

DCA: Take only authorized rides

By Karen S. Morarie
Bayonet staff writer

If you're looking for a taxi ride on Fort Benning, the Directorate of Community Activities reminds you to "buy American."

American is now the only company authorized to pick up passengers on post, according to Roger Garrity, program manager for the Directorate of Community Activities.

Other cab companies may try to pick up soldiers on post, Garrity said, and in the past several months there have been instances of overcharging.

"Trips from the Harmony Church area to Main Post cost approximately $8 in authorized American cabs," Garrity said, "while other companies have been charging $15 to $17."

By not using an authorized cab, Garrity said, soldiers leave themselves unprotected.

"If somebody rips them off, there's nothing we can do about it," he said. "These drivers can charge whatever they want. With American, we have a set rate posted in the cabs for fares, along with comment cards for complaints. "

Garrity said soldiers who have registered valid complaints with a contract company in the past have gotten refunds.

American cabs are dark blue on the bottom, white on top, and have red lettering. This is what soldiers should look for when flagging down a cab, Garrity said; and, if calling for a taxi, they should be sure to call only American.

Garrity said the "cowboy," or unauthorized, cabs operating on post carry other dangers besides inflated fares. They don't undergo the safety inspection American Cab Co. vehicles are subject to as a condition of the contract, so some of them could be in poor condition. They also don't carry the same insurance.

Garrity said any cab can drop fares off on post, but only American cabs are supposed to pick up passengers.

For more information or to register a complaint involving taxi service, call Garrity at 545-4917.

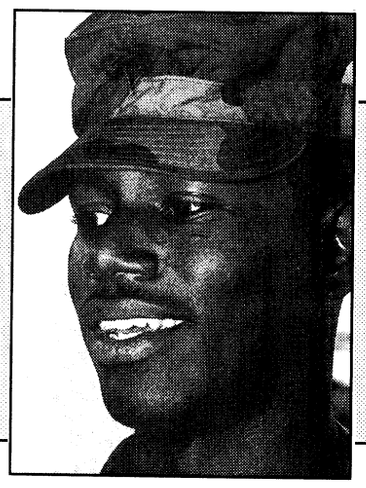
What do you think of race relations in this area?

Sarah Allen, family member — "There could be a vast improvement. But, I haven't been here very long."

Capt. Michael K. Chatman, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division (Mechanized) — "It's pretty good."



Sgt. Anthony Cook, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 29th Infantry Regiment — "It's kind of poor. I think there is a lot of segregation."

Marion A. Emmendorfer, family member — "I don't think they are too bad. I've never experienced anything bad here."

Master Sgt. Charles A. Higgins, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment — "Relations are better on Fort Benning because of the command influence. It could be better off post."

Spc. George L. Hall, Company B, 324th Forward Support Battalion — "It depends on where you go. It's not bad on Fort Benning."

dial 545-BOSS

Dial 545-BOSS is the commander's action line for soldiers, family members and civilians to call when they have problems or complaints that can't be resolved elsewhere.

While it is not a substitute for the chain of command or for agencies established to provide assistance, the line offers another means of communication between Fort Benning's community and commanders.

The Bayonet features some of the calls that may benefit other members of the Fort Benning community.

☎ Call: I tried to contact the engineers about individuals cutting or picking up wood. I was told that Fort Benning did not have the personnel or money to do either.

Directorate of Public Works' Environmental Management Division's response:

The caller's main concern was that there were dead trees on the ground in compartments N-1 or N-2 and they were going to waste because Fort Benning would not allow firewood cutters to salvage the wood.

Because of the Southern pine beetle epidemic, which began in July, workloads for an emergency status have been at a maximum.

The Corps of Engineers Forest Resource Office, which normally handles all firewood sales, has had continuous temporary duty help from other installations, but has still not been able to keep up with the ongoing Southern pine beetle suppression requirements.

About 12 logging crews have been working simultaneously and continuously since August and approximately 550 Southern pine beetle spots still remain to be harvested.

Because of this exhaustive effort and lack of personnel to locate, prepare and administer the firewood program, firewood sales were postponed until further notice.

Compartments N-1 and N-2 will be checked for significant amounts of downed hardwood trees that could be made available for firewood cutting.

Also, other areas of the installation will be located and designated for firewood cutting. Permits are now sold for firewood cutting.

☎ Call: It gets extremely hot in Building 85. I have called in to have the heat turned off but have received no response.

Energy Branch's response: Building 85 was overheating because of an inoperative valve operator on the hot water circulation system. The material was ordered and repairs were completed last month.

We will continue to monitor the system to ensure it continues to run properly.

MPs' assumption, lack of assistance astounds reader

Jan. 20 at approximately 8:15 p.m. on Main Post, two of my children and I were riding in our car when we ran out of gas. I am sure many moms can relate to that; we have so many other errands to run that we neglect to make that all-important stop to the gas station.

The car stopped about one block from the gas station on the street behind the Main Shoppette. This street is dark and seldom traveled. I put my hazard lights on to show that the vehicle was disabled, and my children went into the Shoppette to see if we could purchase a gas can.

The Shoppette did not sell any gas cans, so I decided to walk to the gas station as I was sure that it would sell them. As we were walking out of the Shoppette, my children noticed the flashing lights of a Military Police car. They made the statement that we would be able to receive assistance.

We made our way to our car, and as soon as I saw one of the MPs, I immediately let him know that was my vehicle. I started to explain what had happened, and before I could get a word in, the MP — using a belligerent tone of voice throughout the entire conversation — told me that my vehicle was illegally parked, it can be towed, he can give me a ticket and I would need to move it right away.

Needless to say, I was totally astounded. I told the MP that I was unable to move the vehicle because it had run out of gas. He obviously did not believe me because he then made the statement that many people have a tendency to illegally park there so that they can make a quick run to the Shoppette. I replied that I'm sure that may happen, but in this particular case it was not so.

I told the MP that we had not been there for more than five to seven minutes and were in fact on our way to the gas station to get a gas can and some gas.

I must mention at this point that it was very chilly outside and my children and I were freezing while this lengthy exchange was going on.

Trying one last time to disprove my story, the MP told me that he had touched the hood of my car and it was cold. I informed the military police officer that the heat in my car was also not working.

Becoming a little exasperated at this point, I told him that if he felt the need to write me a ticket for anything then go ahead, because it was cold outside, my children were freezing and we were going to the gas station to get some gas.

At that point we began walking to the gas station. When we were halfway to the gas station, these same MPs drove right by us. My daughter made the comment that they didn't even offer to help us. We purchased a gas can and some gas, and made our way back to the car.

When we got there, my daughter was surprised that neither one of the MPs had stayed behind with the car. She thought that because it was a dark street and seldom used, one of them would have stayed to make sure that we were all right.

She said that even though this is a military installation, "bad" things still happen here and anything could happen to a woman alone with two children. Fortunately, nothing "bad" happened. I put the gas in the car, proceeded to the gas station and went on home.

A team of examiners was just here to determine if Fort Benning should win an award for the "Best Installation in the World." If the actions of these two military police officers are any indication, the answer is a resounding no!

We are all aware of the duties of the Military Police — to uphold and enforce the law on Fort Benning. But doesn't that job description also include treating the members of the community to whom they are sworn to serve with a little bit of good, old-fashioned courtesy, consideration and understanding, not to mention respect?

I am not even upset about the fact that they did not offer me any assistance; I am upset because they assumed that I had done something wrong and they were going to do everything in their power to prove it. They didn't even want to give me a chance to explain what had happened.

Unfortunately, my son and daughter were very upset about the incident. They could not understand why the Military Police did not help us, and why they made it seem as if we had done something wrong.

They were so bewildered by the situation and were unable to come up with any rational reason for it, other than that old standby — they were treated that way because of the color of their skin. And unless someone can tell me differently, I am inclined to agree with them.

— Diedre Bush
Fort Benning

Military Police response:

The Military Police Activity has thoroughly investigated this incident.

As soon as the Military Police Activity became aware of her complaint, we contacted her and asked her if she would be willing to come in at her convenience to discuss the incident. She agreed to come to the Military Police Station at 5 p.m., Feb. 3.

She met with the chief of Law Enforcement Operations, assistant Law Enforcement Operations officer, Military Police duty officer the two military police officers at the scene and the Current Operations noncommissioned officer.

She was invited to explain her view of the events of that evening. She was not interrupted and spoke freely about the way she thought she was treated.

She stated that she was concerned with getting her children out of the cold and refueling the car. She stated that she was upset and did not recollect being asked by the military police officers if she would like assistance.

After she spoke, the two military police officers at the scene gave their synopsis of the events of that evening. The MPs explained how they addressed her and inquired as to why the vehicle was parked in the flow of traffic. Once she told them that the car had run out of gas, they offered her assistance. They stated that she was visibly upset and refused assistance.

Once she left her vehicle for the gas station, one of the MPs stayed in the vicinity of her vehicle while the other drove past her as she neared the 24-hour gas station.

The meeting with her was very cordial and open. We invited her in because of the seriousness of her complaint and our desire as professionals to address it quickly and justly.

We assured her that it is the policy of the Military Police Activity to investigate all complaints against military police officers. We deal with the public daily and go to great lengths to ensure our MPs are courteous, helpful and professional, even in the most difficult circumstances.

She was advised, as were the two MPs, that the Provost Marshal's Office will not tolerate actions of MPs based on race, gender or rank. The Military Police Activity Equal Opportunity Policy states that any MP suspected or proved of violating this policy be relieved of duty and placed in a duty position in which he or she does not interact with the public until proper action can be taken.

It was our belief when she left the meeting that she was happy and satisfied with our explanation of the incident.

The Military Police Activity is dedicated to providing the Fort Benning community with professional, responsive and courteous law enforcement support. Your military police officers are on call 24 hours a day, seven days a week to provide you with protection and service, and to make Fort Benning a safe and secure environment in which to work, live, train and play.

After Hours: Robotic boxing, gunslinger highlight new club opening

By Marc G. Turchin
Bayonet staff writer

The room was filled with smoke and echoing with noise — noise from the crowd, from the music and from video games being played. That didn't seem to bother the two metal figures that stood inside the squared circle.

Each boasted a boxing glove on either hand and an iron mask with a rectangular-shaped area where they could see — if they had eyes.

These two warriors were only pawns who withstood punishment from the participants — soldiers who strapped themselves in behind each robot in hopes of knocking out their opponent.

This simulated boxing match was part of opening festivities at After Hours, the new junior enlisted club on post that opened its doors to the public for the first time Feb. 10.

Sponsored by Canadian Mist, the robotic boxing tournament had soldiers strapped in behind four-foot-tall robots. Each bout consisted of three 30-second rounds under the direction of Joe O'Grady, who owns the boxing equipment and acted as referee, master of ceremonies and commentator.

Points were scored when the head of the robot was hit. To score a knockout, the robot's head must have stayed up for a three count by the referee.

Throughout the night, there were decisions, technical knockouts, outright knockouts and double knockouts, which is when both fighters knock each other out.

The winner of the tournament took home $300 cash. The runner-up earned $75.

Some of the fight names used by the contestants were "Smokin' Joe," "Bubba Gump," "Melvis the Pelvis" and "Lick 'em Lois."

In the end, it came down to Pvt. 1 Craig "Studboy" Bratta of Company E, 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment, vs. Spc. Heath "Big Pig" Kosakowski, also of Co. E, 1st Bn., 29th Inf. Regt.

The match was very close. Both fighters landed scores with shots to the head. After the first round, the Pig was ahead by two points. During the break between rounds, fatigue set in with both fighters as the Pig held his head below his chest and Studboy was breathing heavily.

In the final round of the two-round championship bout, Kosakowski stayed a punch ahead of his opponent. He would land a jab, then Bratta would land one. It went back and forth the entire round. In the end, it was Kosakowski who stayed out in front with points and won the championship.

"It was my infantry skills that overpowered my opponent," Kosakowski said. "This makes me feel like a stud."

"I think it was a very good promotion," said Leigh Churchbourne, marketing assistant for the Directorate of Community Activities. "Participation was good, especially at Bradley's (during the Sega Genesis Tournament)."

Besides the boxing action, there was also gunslinging going on inside the club.

Wes Flowers, billed as the "fastest draw in the world," was present to back up his title. The video game, "Fast Draw Showdown," features Flowers.

Patrons who visited the club got a chance to have a showdown of sorts with Flowers.

Dressed in an Old West cowboy outfit, with a face full of hair to match, Flowers challenged club visitors to move quicker than he did.

Face to face with challengers, Flowers dared them to clap their hands, held open at waist level, before he could draw his pistol through their hands and point it at their chests.

Amazed, people tried over and over to move quicker than Flowers, but to no avail.

With the boxing action and the quick-draw professional, plus no cover charge, free video games and free food, the After Hours club seemed to be just what the doctor ordered for the post.

SEXUAL HARASSMENT

Task force suggests changes

By Evelyn D. Harris
American Forces Information Service

The Department of Defense's Task Force on Sexual Harassment and Discrimination will recommend greater command involvement and a clearer appeals process, according to a draft report. The task force also will tell the services to strictly forbid reprisals against individuals reporting sexual harassment.

Defense Secretary William Perry formed the task force last spring. Edwin Dorn, undersecretary of defense for personnel and readiness, and Air Force Secretary Sheila E. Widnall co-chaired the task force.

Widnall said DoD has two goals in establishing basic principles: enhanced unit effectiveness and fairness to individuals. "Trust, fairness, high morale and cohesion spell success for military units," she said. "The military team succeeds only when all members are accepted as equals."

The task force concluded command involvement is the key to an effective equal opportunity program.

"While we heard arguments that the chain of command is unable to resolve complaints of discrimination and harassment effectively, the task force strongly disagrees," Widnall said. "We believe it is imperative that we make the chain of command work for service members and against the discrimination and sexual harassment in the armed forces."

The services must publish clear and concise policies, especially concerning the appeals process. The task force found while most services have such a process, its existence is seldom acknowledged or publicized, Widnall said.

The task force's final report will contain more than 25 recommendations for the improvement of the services' equal opportunity programs and discrimination complaints systems.

Recommendations include:

• Hold leaders accountable for equal opportunity and for fair, prompt complaint resolution;

• Develop and publicize formal and informal options for reporting discrimination and harassment complaints — the formal complaint process should be documented, adhere to specific time lines and provide meaningful feedback to the complainant;

• Establish toll-free or local information programs for members who have experienced discrimination or sexual harassment;

• Develop better equal opportunity objectives for professional military training programs;

• Train all personnel involved in handling discrimination complaints;

• Act affirmatively to prevent reprisal and protect service members who allege reprisal.

DoD officials say the study should help set DoD-wide standards for some aspects of the complaint process. However, Dorn does not believe DoD can standardize the process across the services.

"The services operate very, very differently," he said. "The Air Force, for example, operates from fixed bases and tends to have robust support structures.

"The Navy operates much of the time from ships. They cannot afford to have this robust support structure aboard ships," he said. "We've got to recognize these differences and make allowances for them."

Although DoD forbids reprisals against service members who make complaints of discrimination, briefers and experts alike told the task force reprisal and fear of reprisal was widespread, said Widnall.

In one "egregious case," Widnall said, a service member who contacted her senator after getting no results at her installation was ordered to undergo psychiatric evaluation. Although found fit for duty, she was kept in a locked psychiatric unit several more days. She also received an adverse fitness report.

The task force discussed ways to prevent reprisals by both supervisors and co-workers, said Widnal.

Parents, sharpen your pencils. Kids, plug in your computers and load your graphics program.

The Fort Benning school system is sponsoring a logo contest to find a symbol to mesh with its motto; "The Fort Benning Schools ... an environment for creativity and excellence in learning."

The contest is open to all military and civilian personnel and their family members including school personnel and students, said Gail Wilson, director of staff development.

Entries must be submitted by March 7 to the principal of the post school your child attends or to Wilson at the school administration building on Custer Road.

Entries must be on 8 x 10 inch paper, and should contain name, address, and a daytime phone number. Students should also include their school, grade and homeroom teacher.

The winning entry will be judged on creativity and the relevance to the post schools, Wilson said. Entries may be drawn or created with computer graphics, she said.

The winner will receive a $50 gift certificate from Peachtree Mall as well as "The History of Fort Benning 75th Anniversary" courtesy of the Advertiser Company, printers of the Bayonet.

Among students, the first place winner in each school will receive a $10 gift certificate from the Army and Air Force Exchange Service and "The History of Fort Benning 75th Anniversary" book for their school. Winners will be notified by March 15, Wilson said.

Activities to honor blacks

Equal Opportunity Office

The following activities are scheduled to commemorate Black History Month.

Through Feb. 28: "Men of Bronze," a movie about black soldiers of the 3rd Battalion, 69th Armor Combat Regiment, during World War I, will be shown at the National Infantry Museum.

Today: Luncheon — sponsored by the Army and Air Force Exchange Service, 11:30 a.m. at the Main NCO Club Lounge. The theme for the luncheon is "Focus 2000 — Bridging the Gap with Education." The speaker will be Arlene Johnson, an attorney at Columbus College. The cost of the luncheon is $5. For tickets or information, call Tereasa Berkley at 682-0562 or 682-0941.

Tuesday: Black History program — Retired Col. Herbert Carter (Tuskegee airman), will speak at Building 302 at 2 p.m. For more information, call Staff Sgt. Stephen Alabi, U.S. Army Dental Activity at 544-3386.

Thursday: Ethnic luncheons at Building 2808, 13th Corps Support Bn. dining facility and Building 2831, 2nd Mobile Army Surgical Hospital consolidated dining facility. For information, call 545-7918.

Feb. 24: Luncheon with entertainment and prizes. Main NCO Club, 11:30 a.m., $6. For more information, call Rosalie Mascoe at 545-3198.

Curator carries on museum's history

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet©

The retirement of Dick Grube as director of the National Infantry Museum leaves Curator Frank Hanner in charge of the 35-year-old Fort Benning institution.

Hanner said it seems like only yesterday when he began working at the museum in November 1981 with Grube, who he said was a great inspiration.

"There is no way I can adequately express what he has done for the museum," he said. "He has taught me so much about history and of the importance of preserving it so soldiers can understand that the past plays an important part in shaping who they are today and so that civilians can appreciate the suffering and heroism that helped make this nation great.

"My wish is to not only maintain what we already have in our extensive collection, but to see the museum grow and become even more meaningful to those who serve," he said.

Hanner's lifelong passion with history began as a boy in Winston-Salem, N.C. A master's degree in history from Armstrong State College in Savannah, Ga., plus a two-year stint as an Army soldier instilled in him a consuming interest in military history.

While still in the Army, Hanner worked in the 2nd Infantry Division's museum in Korea and the Don F. Pratt 101st Airborne Museum at Fort Campbell, Ky. After his enlistment expired, he worked for 4 1/2 years in the 24th Infantry Division (Mechanized) Museum at Fort Stewart, Ga., before coming to Fort Benning.

"When I first took the Fort Stewart job, I was told it was a temporary position not to exceed three month, but I was willing to take the risk in order to do what I love," he said. "My first day on the job, I was told that the position would be permanent."

In addition to conducting a complete inventory of the Infantry Museum's more than 22,000 artifacts, Hanner said the museum staff, which consists of four permanent positions, will begin preparing for the 1996 Olympics, when a large number of foreign visitors are expected.

"So much of the museum's work is done behind the scenes, whether it's polishing a pair of World War I boots to keep the mold off or breaking down and cleaning an old rifle," Hanner said. "It couldn"t be done without a dedicated staff and the great volunteers who generously help the museum."

The museum is also working on a project to move several World War II-era wooden barracks to the museum grounds and restore them to their original appearance.

"There are no temporary structures from World War I left, and those from World War II are disappearing quickly," he said. "It is extremely important that we save these so that 100 years from now people can look at them and see firsthand where soldiers lived and trained before going off to fight for their country."

Hanner said a large number of volunteers will be needed to do the dirty work of tearing down layer by layer the 50 years of change wrought by later generations who used the buildings. He also said he hopes to find veterans who may have trained at Fort Benning in these or similar buildings who might have original photographs of them.

Finally, Hanner wishes to maintain the excellent working relationship the museum has with the Columbus and Phenix City communities.

"In hard times like these when resources are dwindling, we really need to help each other so that history can be rightfully and adequately preserved for future generations," he said.

Counselors say starting early is key to easy transition

Army Career and Alumni Program

The Army Career and Alumni Program provides career guidance for soldiers transitioning out of the service. Starting early is the key for soldiers to begin thinking about what they want to do after the military.

Based on soldiers' individual needs, ACAP counselors will offer career guidance and counseling on services and programs available to them. Soldiers schedule individual appointments through their personnel services noncommissioned officer three-day expiration of term of service retirement briefing and ACAP transition counselor appointment.

ACAP offers:

A three-day retirement Transition Class within 180 days of separation that prepares military members for transition.

• A one-day "advanced course" explaining resume preparation and interviewing skills.

• The Defense Outplacement Referral System process that provides a free service to match a person's abilities to civilian employment positions by sending a mini-resume to a data base accessed by employers worldwide.

• Career Day provides an opportunity for employers to meet soldiers, provide information on job leads and interview prospective clients as needed.

• The Educational Opportunity Program provides an awareness of tuition assistance, enrollment procedures, or current data on any college or university.

• The Skill Development Program is intended to provide training opportunities to soldiers, civilians and family members who transition from the Army.

• Referrals for separation benefits to include Special Separation Benefits, Voluntary Separation Incentive and retirement. Below is a timetable for job hunting while still in the service.

Six months before separation

• Schedule through the unit PSNCO your preseparation counseling appointment at ACAP Transition Office, Building 2617, and the three day preseparation classes conducted in Infantry Hall, Classroom 30.

• Develop an individual transition plan with the ACAP transition counselor in Building 2617 and review the mandatory "preseparation Counseling Checklist" (Department of Defense Form 2648) required for clearing post.

• Begin researching the job market. Develop a career plan, including a list of possible employers in your career field.

• Assess your job skills and interests to determine how they relate to today's job market, take a vocational interest inventory.

• Discuss with your family possible options about your career and where to live next.

Five months before separation

• Seek help if the stresses of your transition to civilian life become too much to handle.

• Contact friends in the private sector who may help you find a job.

• Begin attending job fairs.

• Develop a fall-back plan in case your first career plan falls through.

• Research specific job possibilities, job markets, and the economic conditions in the geographic areas where you want to live.

• If you need additional educational or vocational training to compete in the job market, explore your options for adult education.

• Establish a financial plan "to make ends meet" during your transition to civilian life.

• If you are separating before fulfilling eight years of active service, you must satisfy your obligation by becoming a member of the Ready Reserve.

Four months before separation

• Receive your "Verification of Military Experience and Training" (DD Form 2586). For specific information call (800) 258-8638.

• Write resumé

• If you are considering federal employment, fill out an application (Standard Form 171). Explore special federal programs and hiring opportunities for veterans.

• Visit the Relocation Assistance Program Office. If you live in government housing arrange for a preinspection and obtain termination information.

• Learn about the education benefits you can obtain under the Montgomery GI Bill.

Three months before separation

• Start a subscription to a major newspaper in the area in which you plan to live.

• Send out resumés and make telephone calls to check if they arrived. Submit your DORS resume (DD Form 25Q) for processing.

• You and your spouse may begin your automated job search by using TBB America's Job Bank and the Federal Job Opportunities Listing.

• Once you have chosen where you will live next, arrange your transportation counseling. Learn about your options for shipment and storage of household goods.

• If you decide to go back to school, take an academic entry exam, college admission test, or challenge exam.

• Schedule a final dental examination.

• If you would like to prepare a will or if you have legal questions or problems, obtain free legal advice.

Two months before separation

• Begin planning a visit to the area where you plan to move. Get your resumé printed and start mailing it out to selected employers. Include in your cover letter the date you plan to be in the area. Start assembling a wardrobe for job interviews.

• Choose your transitional health care option: Use military medical facilities or sign up for Civilian Health and Medical Program of the Uniformed Services.

• Schedule your separation physical examination.

• Determine whether you are eligible for separation pay.

• For detailed information about disability compensation, benefits, and programs, call the VA, one month before separation

• Visit a private employment agency or executive recruiter in the area.

• Decide whether to sign up for (CHCBP) medical coverage. Optional.

• Consider converting your Serviceman's Group Life Insurance to Veteran's Group Life Insurance. Optional.

• Several government agencies offer special loans and programs for veterans. Check with your local VA office.

• If you are employed, you may qualify for unemployment compensation.

For additional information, contact the ACAP office at 545-4913 or 545-7009, Building 2617, Soldiers' Plaza.

CID seeks burglar

The Criminal Investigation Division is seeking a burglar who stole stereo equipment worth $1,416 from a vehicle parked in the parking lot next to Building 2749. The incident occurred between 11:30 p.m. Jan. 18 and 1 a.m. Jan. 19.

Anyone having information concerning this incident can call CID at 545-7907 or 545-8922 or the Military Police at 545-5222.

The identity of anyone providing information will be kept in the strictest confidence.

Female BG to speak to post soldiers

Brig. Gen. Patricia Hickerson is coming to Fort Benning and has asked to meet with the female officers and senior noncommissioned officers (sergeant first class and above) to solicit their concerns and interests. She will also speak on the challenges facing women in the Army today.

She has commanded the 14th Army Band, the 38th Personnel and Administration Battalion, the Central Sector of the U.S. Military Entrance Processing command, and the Physical Disability Agency. This last command was while also serving as the adjutant general of the Army and the executive director, Military Postal Service Agency. She is currently the deputy commanding general (west) of the U.S. Army Recruiting Command.

While female officers and NCOs are the primary target, all others who wish to attend are welcome. The talk will be in Infantry Hall, Classroom 6 at 9 a.m. Wednesday.

For more information, call Maj. Beverly S. Cardinal at 544-9725.

West Pointers to host founder's dinner

All U.S. Military Academy graduates are invited to the upcoming Founder's Day Dinner March 25. The West Point Founder's Day Dinner will be March 25 at the Fort Benning Officers' Club.

For more information, contact Capt. Dave Smith at 544-9352.

Self-Help Store to close for holiday

The Self-Help Store, Loan Equipment Section and Venetian Blind/Shade Shop will be closed Saturday in observance of the Presidents Day holiday and will reopen for normal business hours at 8:30 a.m. Tuesday.

Inf Tng Bde to host retirement ceremony

The Infantry Training Brigade will host a retirement ceremony honoring Command Sgt. Maj. Sylvan B. Bauer Jr. March 24 at 2 p.m. at Kanell Field. For information, call at 544-9484.

Corrections officers to meet today

The Fort Benning Law Enforcement Academy is sponsoring an information session with the Georgia Department of Corrections at Fort Benning today in Infantry Hall's Classroom 20 from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m.

This session will consist of general information, qualifications for acceptance into the corrections academy and to determine if enough interest is shown to establish a corrections academy at Fort Benning.

Anyone interested in attending this session may stop by to receive information about the program. For more information, contact the Fort Benning Enforcement Academy at Army Career and Alumni Program, Building 2617 or call 545-7028.

Volunteers needed for research study

The U.S. Army Aeromedical Research Laboratory at Fort Rucker, Ala., is conducting a study on night shiftwork and reproductive health.

Female volunteers between the ages of 18 to 40 are needed. Expenses will be paid by the lab.

For more information, call Dr. Carlos Comperatore or Sandra Myrick at (334) 255-6858 or (334) 255-6850 or DSN 558-6858 or 558-6850.

Stars defang Vipers with 13-0 win

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet©

The Columbus Stars improved their record to 2-0 with a 13-0 win against the Mobile, Ala., Vipers in Mobile Saturday afternoon.

With a steel gray sky and a steady rainfall setting the backdrop for the afternoon, the Stars' defense used the sloppy field to their advantage.

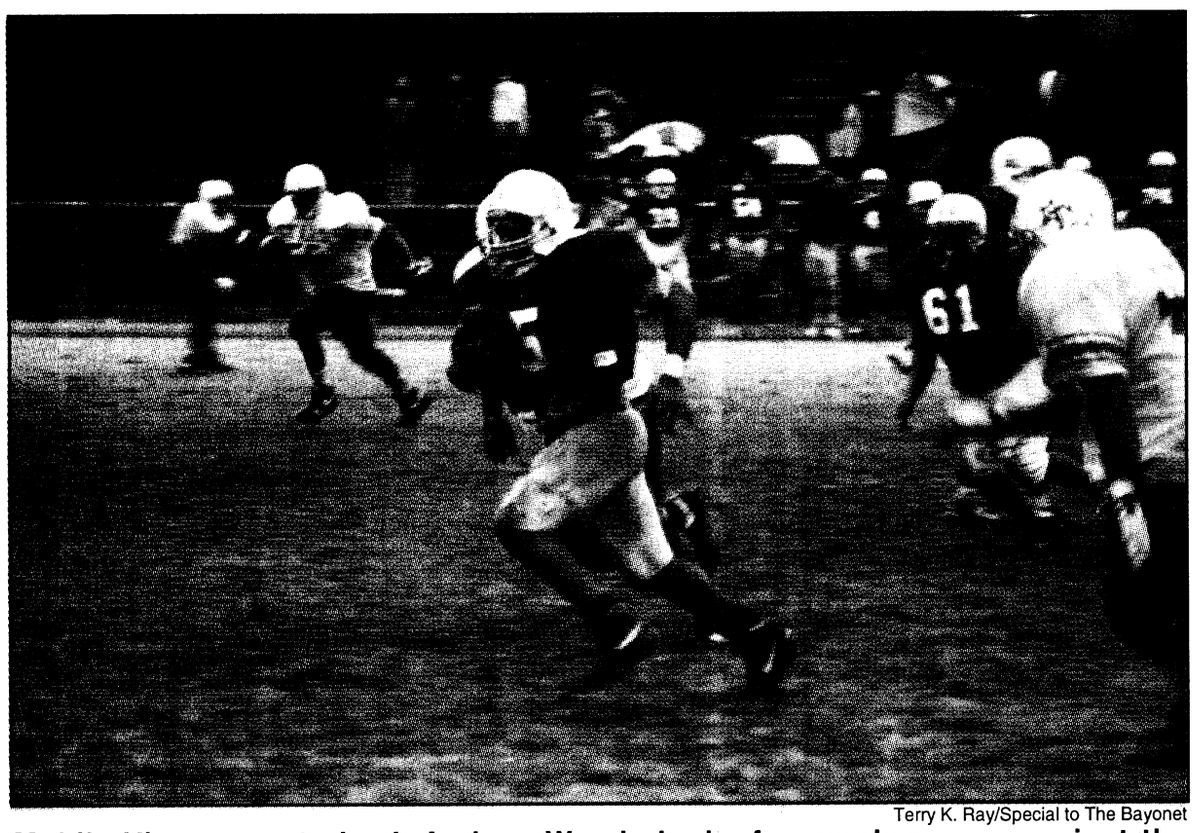
Strong safety John Harris recovered a fumbled punt attempt by Dwight Patterson on the Vipers' first possession of the game setting up Jamon Smith's first touchdown run, a 15-yard run around the left side with 11:47 left in the first quarter. Scott tacked on the extra point conversion for a 7-0 lead.

Minutes later, linebacker Kevin Jordan recovered Vipers quarterback Andrew Woods' fumble at the Viper 15-yard line.

Three plays later Smith sprinted into the end zone from 10 yards out for his second score of the day on an option pitch from quarterback Eddie Mitchell.

Scott Alalof missed the conversion leaving the Stars up 13-0 at the end of the first quarter.

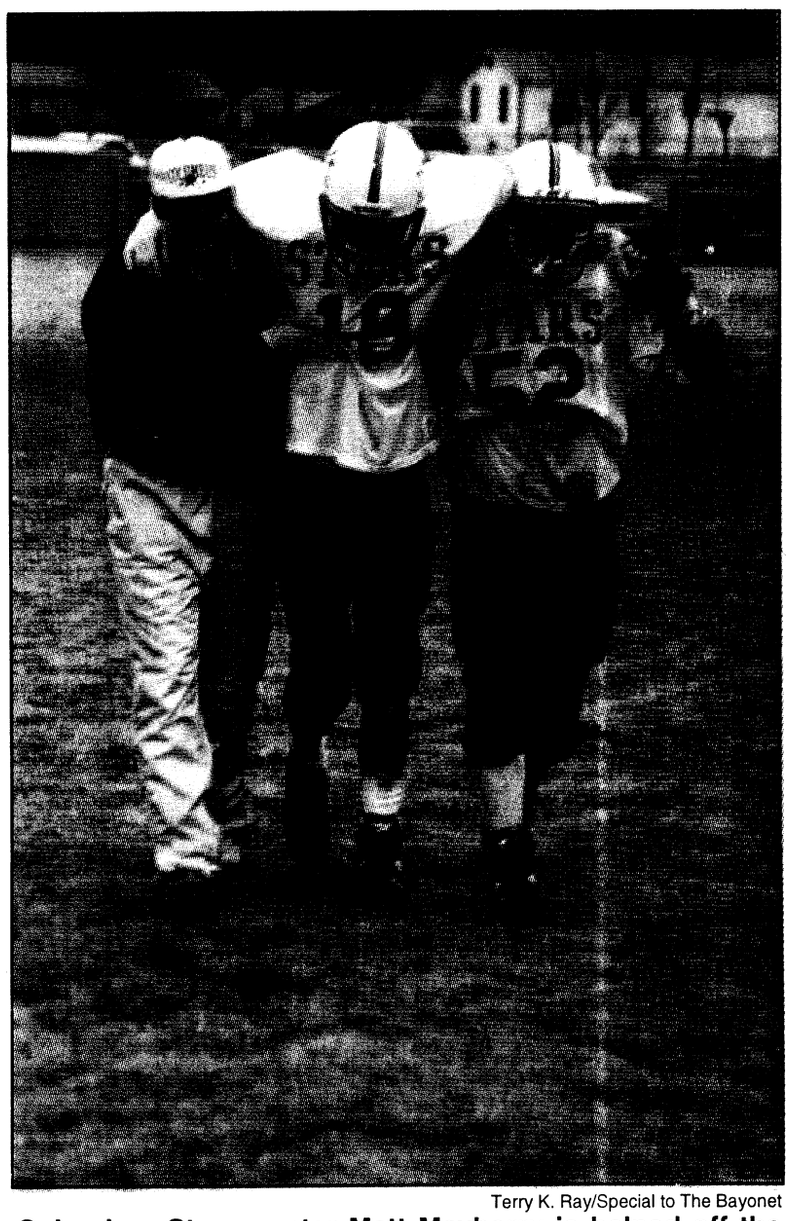
For the next three quarters, neither offense would be able to put together any type of threat, with the cold and wet compounding both defense's smash-mouth football.



Anthony Orr led the Vipers' defense with six tackles and one assist while Stars linebacker Terrance Perry had four tackles and two assists. Cornerback Michael Prince had three tackles and one assist and defensive tackle Harold Jenkins chipped in three tackles and two assists for the Stars.

"I thought we got a little sloppy because of the weather," said Stars head coach Tom Staton. "We jumped out to the early lead in the first quarter, and I think it worked against us later on. I think the offense thought we were going to blow them (the Vipers) out, but they changed up their defense to stuff our run and we couldn't throw the ball. Don't get me wrong — any time you shut a team out and come home with a win, you've done something."

The Stars' offense could only manage 82 yards of total offense while the Vipers had 117.



The Stars will return to Garrett Stadium Saturday for a matchup with defending champion the St. Augustine, Fla., Tigers.

"This is a class team we've got coming in here on Saturday," Staton said. "They like to use the run-and-shoot offense so our defensive coaches are putting in a new defense just for this game." Kickoff is set for 7 p.m.

Combined league pounds hardcourt

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet©

The combined league basketball season is in full swing. Three games were played Tuesday evening at Briant Wells Field House.

The Noncommissioned Officers Academy Allstars downed the Rangers of Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 75th Ranger Regiment, 68-55.

Robert Jackson of the Allstars led all scorers with 27 points. Teammates B.J. Wells added 12, Tony McCommom chipped in eight and Ronald Cummings had seven.

The Rangers were led by Guy Bett's 13 points. Ivy Williams had 10 and three players, Eric Hernandez, Timothy Simpson and Gabe Morton, each had eight points.

The Allstars opened the game with a 9-0 run and by halftime had ballooned the lead to 41-22. Jackson had 17 points at the break for the Allstars.

With Jackson hitting the outside shot and Stanley Peterman, McCommon and Wells cleaning up the boards down low, the Allstars kept the pressure on the Rangers throughout the game.

The Rangers made a spirited run at the Allstars late in the game cutting the lead down to 64-55 with less than a minute to play, but the Allstars fended off the attack with two fast-break baskets to seal the win.

In game two, the Law Dogs of the Military Police Activity handcuffed the Bruisers of the U.S. Army Medical Department Activity, 55-43.

The Bruisers pounded their way to an early 13-3 advantage using center Mark Keough down low in the paint for nine first-half points.

The Law Dogs charged back to tie the game at 17 at the 2:42 mark of the first half behind the outside shooting of Frederick Robinson (11 first half points, game high 18).

The Bruisers went in at the half up by one, 22-21.

With 10 minutes left in the second half, the Law Dogs took their first lead of the game 30-27 on a three-point shot from Jarmette Davis who had just checked into the game. Davis finished with nine points.

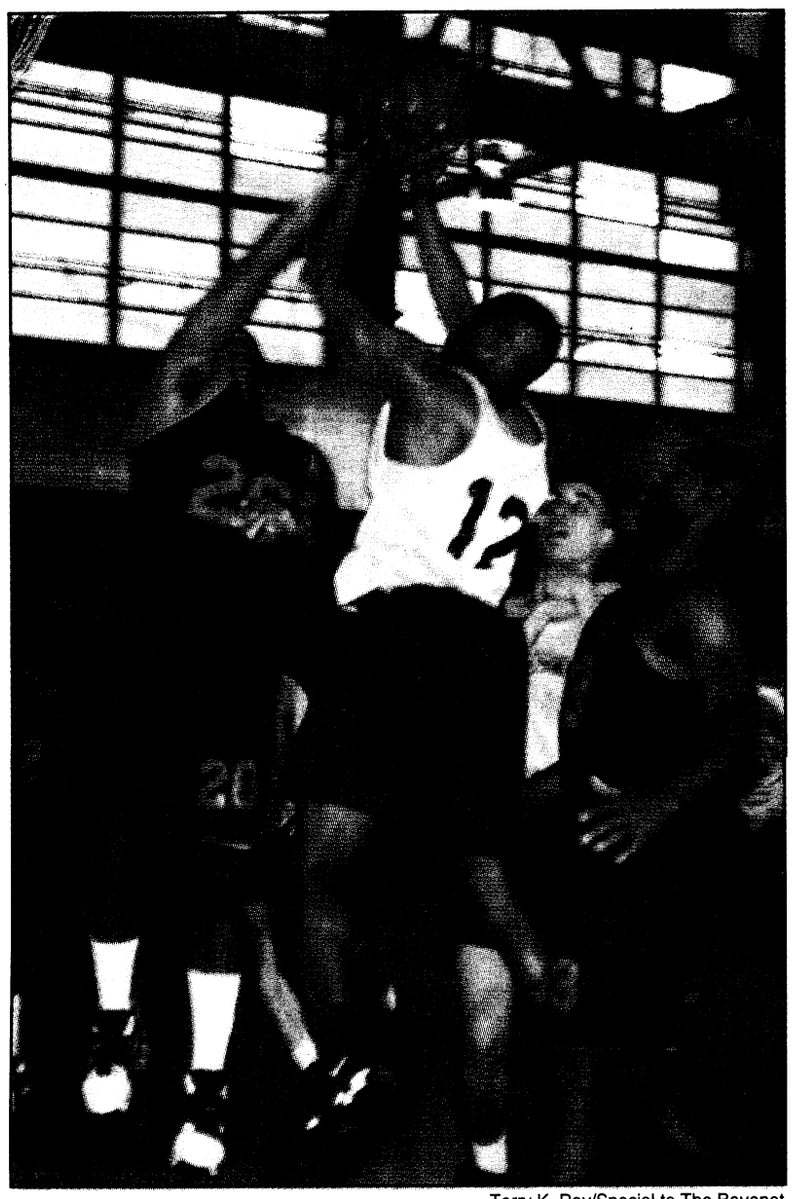
A layup by Kevin Anderson (15 points) at the 6:06 mark increased the Law Dog lead to 40-30. Davis pushed the Law Dog lead to 48-34 with two baskets with less than three minutes to play. The Bruisers fought back with a three-pointer by Allen Proven (17 points) at the two-minute mark for a 48-37 deficit.

Robinson put the game away down the stretch when he was fouled on a drive to the basket. Robinson hit the free throw for the final points of the game and the 55-43 win.

In the finale of the night, the Eagles of Company E, 1st Battalion (Airborne), 507th Infantry, 11th Infantry Regiment, came from behind to dump the Dirty Dozen of Co. A, 1st Bn., 11th Inf. Regt., in overtime 63-60.

Roderick Smith (game high 40 points) hit a three-point basket with no time left on the clock to tie the game at 56 and send the game into overtime.

Down 28-23 at the break, the Eagles soared to their first lead of the second half at 35-34. Robinson increased the lead to 43-36 with two straight baskets at the seven-minute mark.



The Dirty Dozen cut the lead down to 46-44 on a basket by Joseph Williams (team high 19 points). A three-point play by Robinson kicked the lead up to 49-44 with three minutes left in the game. The Dirty Dozen fought back hitting three straight baskets to regain the lead at 50-49 with two minutes to play in the game.

A basket by Ricky Sheffield (12 points) gave the lead back to the Eagles at 51-50. A steal and a layup by Troy Lewis of the Dirty Dozen at the 1:44 mark; then a baseline jumper from Williams gave the Dirty Dozen a three-point lead at 54-51.

Robinson cut the lead to 54-53 with a basket with one minute left. Aaron Young (13 points) connected with a short jump shot for the Dirty Dozen and a 56-53 lead with 15 ticks left on the clock.

Robinson took the ball upcourt and drove past two defenders at the three-point arc and let fly with a desperation shot that went as the buzzer sounded.

In the overtime period, Robinson scored six of the seven Eagle points on a three-point shot and three free throws. Henry Derrick hit one free throw with 19 seconds left to give the Eagles a 63-60 lead. The Dirty Dozen missed two three-point shots to try and tie the game for a second time.

Young anglers 'cast-off'

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet©

The Bass Anglers Sportsman Society Club of Fort Benning in conjunction with the Dolphin Bass Club of Columbus, will conduct a children's casting contest March 11.

Sponsors for the contest will be Kissin' 99.3 FM and Leon Jordan Marine.

Two winners from each age group, 7 through 10 and 11 through 14, will be crowned by the Alabama BASS federation and four winners, two from each age group, will be crowned by the Georgia BASS federation. Winners will qualify for competition at the state and national level if they win. Entry is free.

"All we're interested in is the kids," said Harry Hall, director of the Georgia BASS federation. "We are encouraging kids from Fort Benning to come out and participate."

The contest will consist of three different fishing techniques — pitching, flipping and casting — at targets from various distances for each technique. Each contestant will get two tosses each with the highest score being used. The most points a participant can earn is 50 points for each technique for a total of 150.

All rod and reels will be furnished by the clubs for competition use. To register, stop by Leon Jordan Marine after March 1 and fill out the necessary forms.

Parents may want to bring along a birth certificate for 10- and 14-year olds who have their birthday after the middle of August.

"If a child who is 10 years old and turns 11 before the middle of August, he or she will be moved to the next age group," Hall said. "If a child who is 14 years old turns 15 before the middle of August, he or she will not be allowed to compete."

For more information, contact Leon Jordan Marine or listen to Kissin' 99.3 FM.

Operation Bass to run fishing tourney

Operation Bass

GILBERTSVILLE, Ky. — Operation Bass will conduct the first Red Man bass fishing tournament of the Bulldog Division, Feb. 26 on Lake Seminole at Jack Wingate's Lunker Lodge, signaling the start of the six-event Bulldog Division.

The second event will be March 19 at Eufaula/Lakepoint State Park in Alabama. Entry deadline is March 8. Other events will take place at various locations and dates through Sept. 20.

The top 30 fishermen in the Bulldog Division after the six qualifying events will advance to one of five Regional Championships where they will compete with 90 other "working" men and women anglers for a $40,000 "Dream" bass fishing rig consisting of a Chevrolet pickup and a fully-rigged Ranger boat powered by an Evinrude or Johnson outboard.

Those anglers that enter all six qualifying tournaments within a division and do not qualify for another regional will qualify to compete in the "Wild Card" regional. The top six finishers will qualify for the prestigious Red Man All-American Championship.

The top eight from each of five regionals, the top four from the Western regional and the top six from the Wild Card regional will advance to the Red Man All-American where the winner will be awarded $100,000.

Each Red Man qualifying tournament has a $75 entry fee and a guaranteed first place cash award of $1,000. Each divisional point leader is also a guaranteed winner of $1,000.

Additionally, Red Man anglers will be competing for the following awards throughout 1995: Bill Lewis Live Release Award; CITGO Cup Challenge Award; Old Milwaukee NA Rookie-of-the-Year, Abu Garcia Big Bass; and Energizer/Eveready Winning Combination Award.

Catch and release is practiced at every Red Man tournament and Operation Bass maintains a 98 percent live release rate in 147 events nationwide.

Sponsors of the 1995 Red Man Tournament Trail include: Red Marl Chewing Tobacco, Ranger Boats, Abu Garcia Rods and Reels, Armour Vienna Sausage, Chevy Trucks, Stren Fishing Lines, Evinrude and Johnson Outboards, Evinrude and Johnson Electrics, Techsonic Industries (Humminbird Electronics, CITGO Super Premium Gasoline, Fleetwood, Energizer and Eveready Marine Batteries; Beer Nuts, Aladdin Stanley, Old Milwaukee NA and Bill Lewis Lures.

For more information, call (502) 362-8110 or write Operation Bass at Route 2, Box 74B, Gilbertsville, Ky. 42044.

Military Police Activity

TAKE A BITE OUT OF CRIME

This week's hot topic concerns privately owned firearms. The U.S. Army Infantry Center Regulation 210-50 allows those soldiers and family members living on Fort Benning to keep their privately owned firearms in their family quarters; however, adequate security measures must be taken to prevent theft or unauthorized use of these weapons.

Soldiers residing in the barracks are required to secure their privately owned firearms and ammunition in unit arms rooms. Approval must be obtained from the unit commander to withdraw privately owned firearms from a unit arms room.

All military personnel and family members who own or possess a privately owned firearm and reside on Fort Benning must register it with the Military Police Activity's Vehicle and Firearms Registration Section, Building 2637, within 72 hours of arrival on post or within 72 hours of obtaining a firearm, and also sign a statement concerning security of privately owned firearms.

Call 545-3646 for information concerning the registration of privately owned firearms.

The following entries were taken from the Fort Benning Military Police blotters from Feb. 1 to 7. Such entries may be incomplete and do not determine the guilt or innocence of any person.

• Two sergeants were charged with larceny of private property, gambling with subordinates, conspiracy, and selling false or unauthorized passes. The sergeants allegedly sold pass privileges to basic training soldiers on two occasions to gain personal profit for themselves.

The first occasion, they held a pie raffle with the pass inside the pies, and gained a profit of $1,450 from the trainees. Also, they bought a variety of food from local restaurants and sold them to the trainees at inflated prices. The second occasion, they solicited the trainees to play basketball games against them, betting money on each soldier per game. The gained profit was $450. The case is still under investigation.

• A specialist was charged with larceny of government property (munitions), unlawful possession of weapons, and wrongful possession of explosives. The specialist was in possession of illegal firearms and explosive devices kept at his off-post quarters. The soldier had removed the serial number from one of his weapons, which is illegal, and he modified the barrel length of two other weapons, making them illegal as well.

Also, the soldier had a large number of parts that could have been used to manufacture explosive devices. All of the items were recovered by the office of the Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms Agency. The soldier is pending an investigation by ATF agency.

Other activities included two cases of driving under the influence of alcohol, 18 traffic accidents, 15 cases of larceny and seven cases of shoplifting reported at the exchange facilities.

Remember to help "Make Our Post the Best — Give Crime Arrest." Report any activity that seems wrong or out of place to the Military Police station at 545-522 or 545-5224 or the "Crime in Progress" line at 545-5222.

ask the judge

Staff Judge Advocate's Office

Q: Recently, I left my car at a mechanic's shop for repairs. The repairs took about a week, and when I went to pick up my car, I discovered that it had been broken into and the radio stolen. What can I do about this? Is the shop liable?

A: When you leave your car with a mechanic under these circumstances, you and the mechanic have entered into what is known as a "bailment." You have "bailed" your property to the mechanic, which gives rise to certain duties on the mechanic's part with respect to the care and safekeeping of the vehicle.

Generally speaking, a person in receipt of bailed property is required to use "ordinary care and diligence" in keeping the property safe and secure while in his or her possession. The definition of "ordinary care and diligence" is based on what a reasonable person would do or not do under the same circumstances. Thus, it will vary depending on the circumstances of each case.

For example, if you, as the mechanic, know from experience that the area in which your shop is located is subject to a lot of vandalism, theft and the like, you probably would take more precautions to protect property than someone located in an area of low crime. However, bear in mind that no one can absolutely guarantee that theft or vandalism won't occur; all one can do is take reasonable precautions.

Before leaving valuable property in the care of another, it would be wise to inquire about the measures that will be taken to ensure safekeeping. Be aware that some shops will attempt to limit their liability by placing disclaiming language on work orders or other paperwork associated with the job. You should ask about the policy of the shop on this. If you don't like what you hear, consider taking your vehicle elsewhere.

If it is possible to remove valuable property from your vehicle before leaving it, do so. If a theft does occur, make sure that a police report is made. Sometimes, the theft is an inside job, and you will want to know if a police investigation bears this out. Theft by an employee of the shop is not the "ordinary care and diligence" to which you are entitled.

Anyone with questions concerning this can contact the Legal Assistance Division at 545-3281 for an appointment to speak with an attorney.

DENTAC celebrates healthy smiles

U.S. Army Dental Activity

The Fort Benning Dental Activity notes that 1995 marks the 50th anniversary of water fluoridation.

In 1945, Grand Rapids, Mich., became the first city to adjust the level of fluoride in its public water supply, changing the course of preventive dental care throughout the world. Today, 144 million people — some 62 percent of those who use community water systems — drink fluoridated water. The Fort Benning water system maintains an optimal level of fluoridation.

Fluoride is a naturally occurring element that prevents tooth decay when ingested or when topically applied to teeth. All bodies of water contain some amount of naturally occurring fluoride. Fluoridation is the process of adjusting the fluoride content of community water supplies to the recommended level for optimal oral health.

"Fluoridation has several benefits. First, it strengthens developing teeth," Lt. Col. Dennis Akiyama, Preventive Dentistry officer said. "It also promotes remineralization, or repair, of tooth enamel in the very early stage of tooth decay. A small area of decay may fail to enlarge or may even reverse because of frequent exposure to small amounts of fluoride. Later in life, adults still reap the benefits of fluoridation because it also helps prevent decay on the root surfaces of teeth."

Studies demonstrate that fluoride is incorporated into the surface of a tooth root, making it more resistant to decay should the root become exposed as a result of receding gums.

In addition to the direct benefits, water fluoridation has several indirect advantages as well. These include fewer missing teeth, fewer abscessed teeth and reduced need for dentures and fewer school and work days lost due to dental disorders or visits to the dentist.

According to a 1994 report released by the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services, fluoridation is one of the most effective public health interventions in the United States. It is largely due to fluoridation that today's prevalence of tooth decay among school children is lower than ever.

"Fluoridation is a public health intervention that has greatly reduced dental illness and cost," Akiyama said.

The government report states that lifetime costs of restoring decayed teeth may well exceed $1,000 per tooth. Per capita expenditures for community water fluoridation for a lifetime may be as little as 12 cents a year in large communities.

"In fluoridated communities all citizens receive the preventive benefits, regardless of their economic situation," Akiyama said. "It's a perfect public health measure."

ACQUIRED IMMUNE DEFICIENCY SYNDROME

Required classes feature local spokesman

Former honor student now speaks for Columbus Network AIDS

Any man's death diminishes me, because I am involved in Mankind;
And therefore never send to know for whom the bell tolls; it tolls for thee.

John Donne
Devotions, 17

By Jerrie Macintire
Special to The Bayonet©

Three years ago, Edward Polk was a dean's list honor student at Columbus College grappling with standard issues like marriage and career; today, illness has forced him to redirect his goals and he now serves as guest spokesman for Network AIDS in Columbus, an organization dedicated to helping individuals with acquired immune deficiency syndrome and those who care for them.

As part of mandatory AIDS training classes on post, Polk gave others a peek inside a life where infected individuals know their T-cell count as well as major league sluggers know their batting averages.

Dressed in a white oxford shirt, jeans and a maroon sweater-vest, Polk seemed more college student than spokesman for one of the most pressing public health problems worldwide. Soft-spoken and seemingly shy, Polk walked among the audience of federal workers as he said, "I have more to fear than you. I'm more susceptible to your cold than you are to my HIV."

Polk explained he, like other infected individuals, is especially vulnerable to colds and viruses. Therefore, Polk avoids those with even minor illnesses and keeps a careful watch on his T-cell count, which is currently 285.

The T-cell count refers to white blood cells, or T-4 lymphocytes, and is an indicator of health. While the average person has a count of about 1,500 to 2,000; a count of below 200 indicates an individual has entered the final stage of the illness and has "full-blown AIDS." Those who have been exposed to the virus and carry antibodies but have not developed full-blown AIDS are considered "HIV positive."

Originally thought of as a "gay man's disease," when first documented in 1981, AIDS is spreading throughout all segments of the population. There is no known cure.

Polk, one of about a million infected Americans, has been sharing his story of how he contracted the virus from his former fiancé as part of a required "AIDS in the workplace" training session for federal employees.

Mandated by executive order, the classes cover issues such as prevention education; workplace issues, laws and ethics; emotional and psychosocial issues; medical information, and community resources, said Patti Pfeiffer, chief of Training and Development, Directorate of Civilian Personnel.

"Even for those individuals who are not at risk, this education may help them with family members or friends who may be affected," said Pfeiffer.

Workplace issues

It is unlawful to discriminate against someone with AIDS or any other illness or disability, said Alex Van Heuvel, employment development specialist, DCP.

Employees diagnosed with the illness should not be treated any differently, and they should be encouraged to work for as long as their health allows, he said.

Employers are required by law to "make reasonable accommodations" for workers affected by illness or disability, according to a video presented at the seminar.

All medical information is highly confidential, and nobody should reveal positive test results except in documented "need to know" cases, Van Heuvel said.

In addition, it is unlawful to demand individuals undergo testing for the virus, he added.

Supervisors and co-workers should make an effort to accommodate medical appointments and setbacks experienced by those who deal with an illness, including AIDS, he said.

Medical experts say AIDS cannot be spread through casual contact, such as sharing a telephone or shaking hands.

Medical information

Sandy Chambers, assistant Red Cross station manager, discussed blood donations and medical issues of AIDS.

According to current medical theories, AIDS is transmitted in three ways; through exchange of body fluids during sex, blood to blood contact such as a transfusion or by sharing contaminated hypodermic needles for drug injections, and from mother to child before or during birth.

"You can't get this from giving blood, or though casual contact," she said, stressing that the Red Cross always uses sterile needles for drawing blood from each donor. In addition, the Red Cross carefully screens donors and declines to draw blood from "high risk" individuals, she said.

Donated blood is tested twice in an effort to detect the virus, but because of a "window period," there is a slight chance individuals may contact the virus during a transfusion, Chambers said. The window period refers to an approximate six-month period of time right after exposure and before antibodies can be detected in the blood.

Blood cannot be heated or frozen to destroy viruses, and is no longer good after 45 days, she said.

Chambers, speaking on reducing risks of exposure in the workplace, said employees should use precautions when handling first aid emergencies due to injuries.

Employees should know where the first aid kit is located in the workplace, and make sure the kit contains latex gloves in case a co-worker has a blood spill. Avoid directly touching a blood spill, and carefully dispose of used first aid supplies in a hazardous waste receptacle, she said.

To reduce risks outside the workplace, she encouraged individuals to use condoms during sex and avoid sharing needles during drug abuse.

Resources

Family issues and social problems related to AIDS were highlighted by Susan Ellis, director of Network AIDS in Columbus.

While the United States has just topped 1 million cases of AIDS, Columbus has one or two new cases diagnosed each day, she said.

There are currently 376 full-blown AIDS cases in Muscogee County, and three times as many are estimated to be HIV positive, she said.

One in 250 people are thought to be infected, and "by the year 2,000 everyone will personally know someone who has AIDS," she said.

Through her work with the nonprofit organization, Ellis has personally known many people with AIDS, she said.

"I hug them when they need hugs, I hold their hands, I cry when they cry," she said.

However, the organization does more than provide emotional support; in addition to coordinating various support groups, it also helps with respite health care and coordinates terminal care with Hospice, helps infected individuals with medical supplies, provides transportation, and offers education counseling for community groups.

Ellis, wearing a red ribbon lapel pin to signify support of those who live with AIDS, said she hopes she will someday be out of a job but doubts that will happen as the virus continues to spread.

Education is key to containing the virus, she said, and she hopes her seminars will make a difference to both those who have been exposed and those who have not.

To help people avoid exposure, she advocates explicit and accurate information on safe sex for all age groups, including teen-agers.

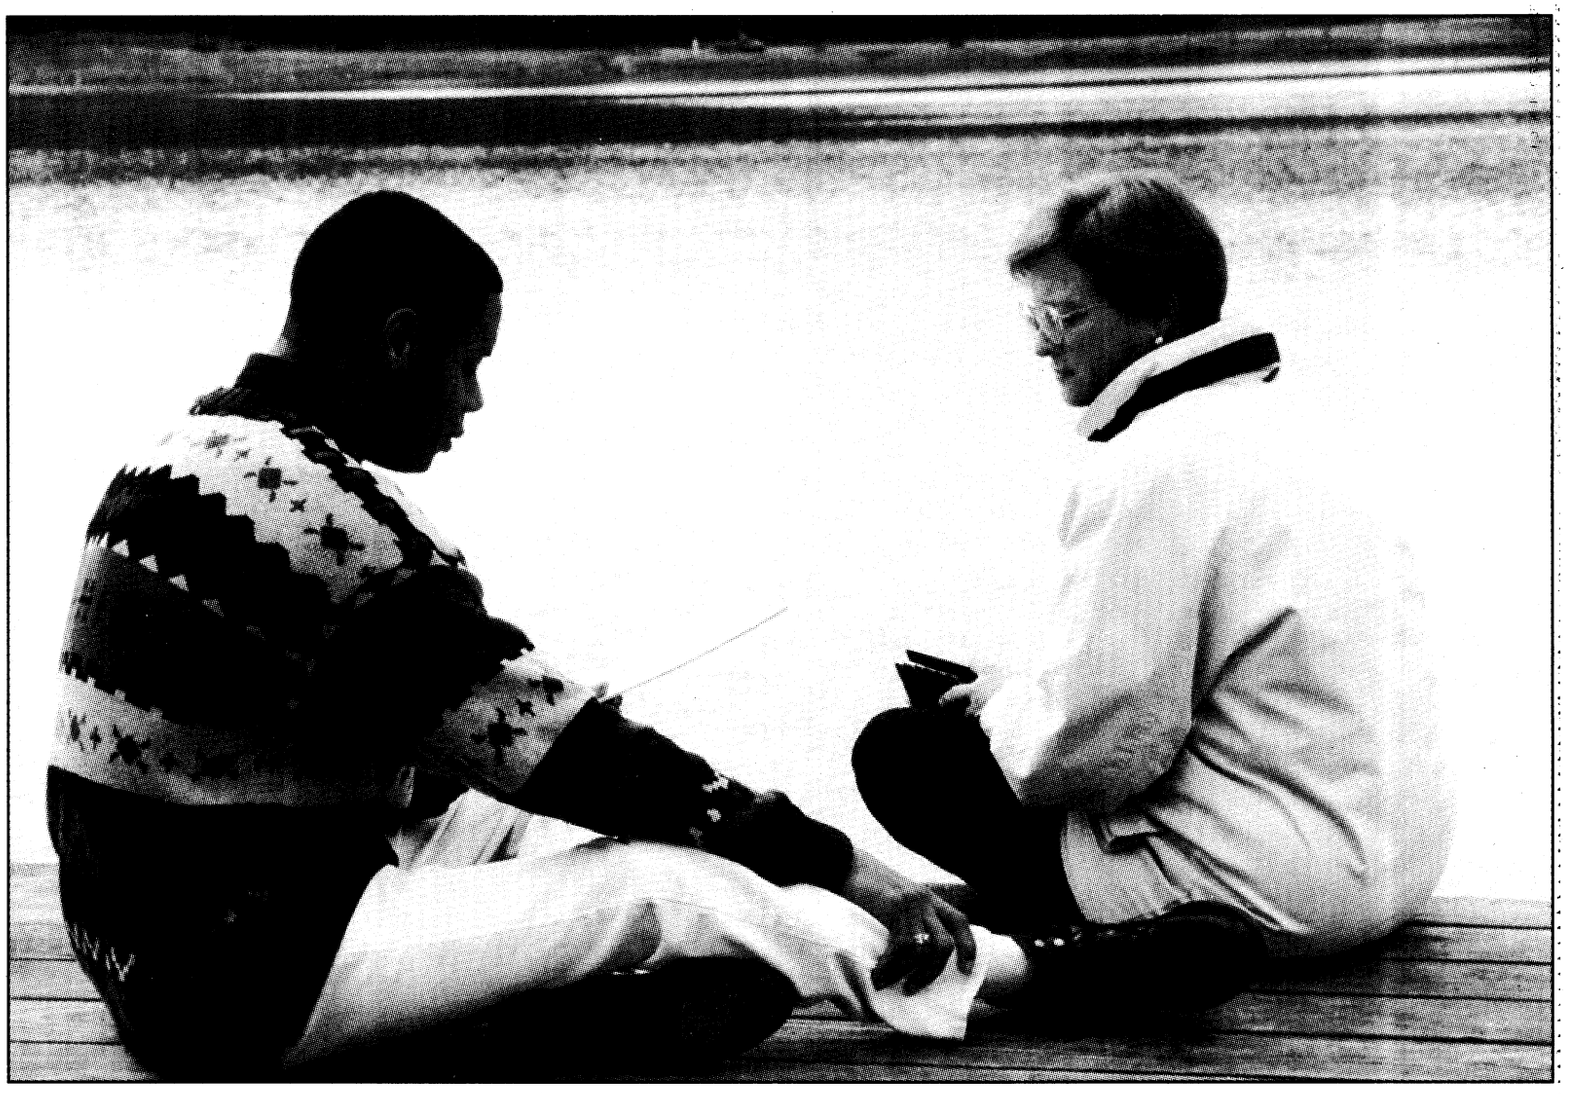
"Parents need to talk to their teens about this," she said.

For those who have been exposed, Ellis hopes to help with emotional support and practical support such as transportation.

She also hopes to educate others with help from those like Polk, the 28-year-old former college student who was told he had been infected when he tried to donate blood.

Though he is sometimes fatigued, Polk said he plans to continue serving as spokesman, raising awareness of medical issues and fighting prejudice toward those who are infected.

He said he would like to see less judgmental attitudes toward those with the illness.



"It makes me sad to think that anybody should have to die because they were looking for some type of satisfaction," he said.

There is still fear and misunderstanding about AIDS, he said, and many infected individuals find even family members forsake them when they hear of the illness.

"I am one of the lucky ones. My family is still behind me," he said.

Polk says he will continue to provide a face and a voice to go with the name of HIV/AIDS.

Though he says he regrets leaving his place as an honors student at college, "This is more important."

AIDS facts

- There is no possibility of contracting AIDS while donating blood since fresh needles are used for each donor.
- Condoms are only 50 percent effective in stopping the transmission of aids.
- HIV tests are anonymous and take just 10 minutes. Results take from 3 days to three weeks, depending upon the laboratory used.
- The rate and severity of the disease depends partly upon the number of exposures. For each exposure, the viruses mutate and join together to more quickly destroy the immune system.
- Georgia is eighth in the nation for the total number of AIDS cases.
- Upon first exposure, individuals have a few days of flu-like symptoms that disappear. It could be several years before other symptoms show up.
- Medication to maintain the health of infected individuals can cost between $600 and $1,000 each month. Disability benefits are less than $500.
- It is easier for a man to transmit the virus to a woman than for a woman to expose a man.
- Medical researchers believe AIDS has been around longer than formally described in 1981. Since most who die from the illness die from one of 26 related ailments, or opportunistic diseases, it is difficult to pinpoint when the virus began.
- AIDS Network, a non-profit organization, has a local phone line: 660-1030. The organization helps those affected by AIDS and conducts community seminars on education and prevention.

3rd Bde 'exercises' its skills

By Marc G. Turchin
Bayonet staff writer

One of Fort Benning's deployable units went on alert late last week — sort of.

The 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division, (Mechanized), conducted an emergency deployment readiness exercise beginning Feb. 9 on post.

During this exercise, called Victory Hammer, troops from different units within the brigade braved cold weather and at times downpours of rain while they loaded equipment onto trains and into aircraft.

The equipment included Bradley Fighting Vehicles and M-1 Abrams tanks. A convoy of vehicles also made a motor movement to Fort Stewart, Ga.

This is the largest exercise of this kind in 18 months, said Capt. Larry Wark, assistant operations officer, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 3rd Bde., 24th ID. This will test the division ready force's and the immediate ready company's ability to prepare to deploy within a certain amount of time, he said.

The ready force is a battalion-sized force which must be ready to deploy within 48 hours, Wark said. The ready company consists of elements from other units from the brigade such as armor, infantry, air defense, support and field artillery. These units must be able to deploy in 18 hours, Wark said.

Prior to assuming the IRC, each company conducts preparations for the soldiers and their equipment.

For this exercise, Company C, 1st Battalion, 18th Infantry Regiment, was the immediate ready company. It, plus the 317th Engineer Battalion, worked day and night at Lawson Army Airfield loading and unloading equipment and vehicles into a U.S. Air Force C-5 aircraft.

The mission for the IRC rotates from battalion to battalion inside the division during a 30-day period, said Capt. Scott C. Sharp, commander of Co. C, 1st Bn., 18th Inf. Regt.

"In 18 hours, we can be wheels up and flying to any crisis spot in the world," Sharp said.

Once the unit is alerted, the preparation for deployment begins.

Sharp said the company's equipment goes through a preinspection process. During the process, for example, vehicles are checked to be serviceable, and ammunition is loaded onto pallets for shipment, he said. An inventory of everything being shipped was also taken. All vehicles and equipment were loaded and unloaded eight times to simulate having eight aircraft ready to deploy.

Meanwhile, on the other side of post at Fort Benning's rail head, soldiers from the 4th Battalion, 41st Field Artillery Regiment; and 1st Bn., 18th Inf. Regt., loaded more vehicles on trains for the exercise.

"This is a deployment exercise that we're practicing to refine our techniques," said Lt. Col. William M. Bransford, commander of the 4th Bn., 41st FA.

Bransford said the exercise was given to "give soldiers practice under real-life conditions."

"It's a good thing," said Staff Sgt. Keith A. Neighbors, Company B, 317th Engineer Battalion. Neighbors was the noncommissioned officer in charge of an alert holding area outside the air field.

"It gives us a chance to work the small bugs out of the process," he said.

A Bradley Fighting Vehicle is directed to turn to the left in preparation of being loaded onto the aircraft.

TRADOC to institute program for NCO recognition

TRADOC News Service

FORT MONROE, Va. — "By the time the field Army gets up, we've been training three to four to five hours already," said Command Sgt. Maj. Gilbert Paez. " "

That is why, as one of his first acts as command sergeant major for Training and Doctrine Command, Paez started the wheels turning to create a recognition program for TRADOC NCOs.

"We're going to integrate a 'Sgt. Audie Murphy Elite Club' program into TRADOC and give our NCOs an opportunity to compete with the rest of the Army," Paez said. "Our soldiers selected for the Audie Murphy program will be able to compete equally with everybody in Europe, in Forces Command and in Korea."

Since becoming TRADOC command sergeant major in August 1994, Paez has traveled throughout the command.

"I found out in talking to soldiers, they felt they were at a disadvantage (with the rest of the Army)," he said. "They said, 'Hey, you selected me for instructor duty. I'm doing a good job. I have to mix and match family time and continue to work, being a professional. Why should that count against me?'"

Paez said he thinks the Audie Murphy program, mirroring similar programs in FORSCOM and U.S. Army Europe, will elevate the TRADOC NCO corps to a comparable competitive level.

> "Throughout the Army, noncommissioned officers in TRADOC, men and women, are looked at as instructors, as having an easy job, but, in fact, they don't."
> — Command Sgt. Maj. Gilbert Paez
> TRADOC command sergeant major

Details of the program will be announced in the near future. There will be no quotas or minimum number of NCOs who can be nominated for the award. Any NCO who "does great work, is a professional soldier and takes care of other soldiers" will be eligible for induction into the Audie Murphy Club.

"I feel good about giving my NCOs a chance to compete with the rest of the Army," he said.

On Feb. 2, Gen. Gordon R. Sullivan, Army chief of staff, canceled the Self-Development Test designed to measure NCOs' military skills and leadership knowledge. He did so on the advice of the Army's senior NCOs.

Paez is one of the NCOs who urged doing away with the SDT. He didn't think the Self-Development Test was an efficient tool to judge NCOs for promotion

"Maintaining SDT is not cost-effective," Paez said. "It created problems for proponents in keeping the SDT up to date."

In his opinion, the NCO Evaluation Report is the most effective tool in the Army for selecting sergeants for promotion.

"It's the best document we've had in the Army in years," he said. "Commanders are using it properly.

"When you have someone evaluated throughout the year, it shows up. All the promotion boards have indicated that it is the most important indicator when considering an NCO for promotion."

However, self-development efforts, such as off-duty education programs, are still important.

"All other things being equal, the person who works, hard at self-development to compliment his career is the aggressive type, top quality soldier. If you don't do that, you're just sitting and letting things pass you by. And promotions will pass you by."

The key for Paez is "all things being equal." He feels that self-development accomplishments are the discriminator between soldiers who are equally qualified in their professions. Off duty education does not outweigh job performance.

Paez arrived at TRADOC after serving as command sergeant major for V Corps in Germany. Before that, he held that same position at 7th Army Training Command, also in Germany, for more than two years.

"I'd always been working on the other side of the fence, executing training that had been prepared or developed by the Army," he said. "At 7th Army Training Command I learned how to work the issues of developing training, the changes you want to include for the Army and why the changes were necessary."

What Paez wants to do at TRADOC is to ensure there is "connectivity" in enlisted training to ensure relevant training is developed. That connectivity includes him, the proponents, the Department of the Army and TRADOC as an organization.

"TRADOC provides the training for what the Army does today. The reason we're successful in the Army today, in my opinion, is we do a pretty good job of training soldiers," he said.

The quality of young Americans enlisting in the Army has also impressed Paez. He talks with young men and women at advanced individual training and basic training sites.

"Some people think that college money is the first thing they're here for," Paez said. "After the first few weeks in the Army, they find their direction. believe it or not, they're in here to serve the nation."

High on Paez list of priorities is to continue gains made through the single soldier initiative. TRADOC leads the Army in single soldier programs, he said.

"The Army in Europe was ahead of the CONUS (Continental United States) based Army to start with. But the program has accelerated at each TRADOC installation and now we're far ahead of the rest of the Army," he said.

Because of funding limitations, soldiers at TRADOC installations have made barracks renovation a personal commitment.

"In some cases, single soldiers go out and do their own fund raising. Sometimes they do it with volunteer labor," Paez said.

TRADOC, as an organization, must stay current with the rest of the Army and changes in the world, the sergeant major feels.

"An NCO might find himself working with another nation's military," Paez said. "That possibility should be included in all of our training, at least as an awareness factor.

"We have to train new concepts and new ideas, but not forget the fundamentals. We will continue to train in that manner," he said.

Army revamps logistics procedures

TRADOC News Service

FORT LEE, Va. — When American forces deployed to Cuba in 1898, their supplies and equipment sat on the docks of Havana until logistics personnel could open crates and identify contents.

More than 100 years later, the docks of Dhahran, Saudi Arabia, were clogged with mountains of unidentified materiel needed by U.S. soldiers fighting in Operation Desert Storm.

Every time the United States has tried to get its logistics infrastructure to the theater with its combat forces, we have an overload at the point where things are taken off the transports, said Capt. Rich O'Connor, an ordnance officer with the Combined Arms Support Command's logistics concepts directorate at Fort Lee.

O'Connor is one of a team of officers and civilians working to eliminate choke points in the process of getting critical supplies from the factory to soldiers on the front line.

The Battlefield Distribution System has been created by CASCOM's Combat Service Support Battlefield Laboratory to eradicate similar holdups in the supply system for future deployments.

Using technology borrowed from the transportation industry, such as United Parcel Service and Federal Express, Army logisticians will track supplies from the warehouse to the theater of operations to the ultimate users, the combat soldiers.

The supply distribution system in theater will also be changed along with the use of transportation assets.

The key to BDS is information. The Army of the future, Force XXI, will be totally linked by sophisticated communications systems from the battlefield to the national command authority in the United States.

The new single distribution manager at each echelon of theater command will also be in that net.

He will have the command information necessary for him to anticipate, to even preposition supplies on the battlefield, because he will know what the maneuver forces are going to do, said Jim O'Connell, chief of the BDS integration task force.

The single distribution manager replaces several individuals currently responsible for transportation, supplies, maintenance and other support functions.

"Right now, if a guy wants to know about materiel, he has to go through a materiel management center," said Chief Warrant Officer 4 Steve Pawlick, supply systems technician. "You now have one individual who is responsible for the whole piece of the pie."

Army logisticians will have their own communications channels to order, manifest, track and log the dispatch and receipt of supplies.

The battle lab will test the battlefield distribution system in future Army warfighting experiments. Through AWEs, BDS concepts will be tested to expose any problems that need fixing.

BDS will rely a great deal on Army reserve components — the National Guard and U.S. Army Reserves — for its success. During combat operations overseas, RC units will operate both the ports of debarkation in the United States and the theater ports of entry.

"What BDS means is that the combat soldier can rest assured that when he asks for something, it will be delivered at the right time, at the right place, in the right amount, and is exactly what he asks for," Bayer said.

sdt question

Editor's note: This will be the last question The Bayonet will publish based on the Self Development Test, as the program has been discontinued.

Which of the following evaluators, while evaluating a unit's training, failed to follow the basic rules of an evaluator?

A. Evaluator No. 1 based his evaluation on personal knowledge of the preplanned scenario.

B. Evaluator No. 2 lived in the same conditions as the unit being evaluated

C. Evaluator No. 3 conducted a reconnaissance of the unit being evaluated.

Answer: A. Evaluator No. 1 based his evaluation on personal knowledge of the preplanned scenario? The answer may be found in Field Manual 25-101, page 5-4.

world war II

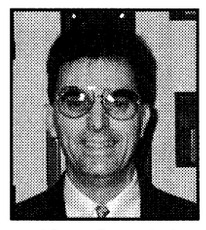
50 years ago this week ...

• The Allies carried out one of the heaviest raids of the war, with bombers dropping thousands of incendiaries and high explosive bombs on Dresden. They set the city on fire and started a fire storm as the rising column of intense heat sucked up oxygen and burned it, creating hurricane-like winds and temperatures up to 1,000 degrees fahrenheit or higher. The firestorm raged for four days and could be seen for 200 miles. German sources estimated that more than 70,000 persons were killed. This raid became very controversial because Dresden was not an important military target and was a city of much historical interest.

• The Red Army completed the conquest of Budapest after a 50-day siege that cost the Axis 159,000 troops — the largest single loss since Stalingrad in 1943. The Soviet advance from the Oder to the Neisse began to pick up speed despite German efforts. Soviet troops crossed from Silesia into Brandenberg to threaten Berlin from the south and to drive a wedge between Berlin and Dresden.

• In Japan, an earthquake described as "fairly severe" struck the main Island of Honshu. The countries two largest cities, Tokyo and Yokohama, were affected.

• The fierce fighting in Manila continued as American armored units split Luzon from coast to coast. U.S. forces attacked the Japanese garrison of Fort McKinley in southeastern Manila. Clearing operations began on the Bataan peninsula so that Manila Bay could be reopened.



• On the homefront, a program was announced that would provide for 19 million post-war jobs through construction of 15 million homes in the 10 years after the war. Elsewhere, Lederle Laboratories announced it had developed a method for administering penicillin by mouth. The medicine was suspended in cottonseed oil and placed inside a gelatin capsule.

• At Fort Benning, Brig. Gen. William H. Hobson, post commander, was named honorary chairman of the Fort Benning 1945 War Fund Campaign of the American Red Cross. It was hoped that the 1945 drive would exceed 1944's record contribution of $45,000.

profile in excellence

Name: Margie Usry

Award or recognition: Directorate of Contracting Employee of First Quarter
Unit or activity: Directorate of Contracting
Job title: Policy and procedure
Years on the job: 10 years in DOC

What were your reasons for joining civil service?
I joined civil service at Mare Island Naval Shipyard, Vallejo, Calif., in 1974. I thought working at a nuclear submarine facility would be exciting, interesting and stimulating. It was.

Define your work ethic.
Take responsibility even if "It's not my job." Give my best at all times, and consider the needs and viewpoints of others.

What person has most influenced your career?
My idol is Harry Truman. I had a supervisor early in my career who had the work ethic, moral attitude, perseverance and concern for others like Harry Truman. William Rippey was a great influence.

If you were your supervisor for a day, what improvements would you make?
I don't think there are any improvements that could be made in a day that have not already been initiated by John Machovec.

Describe a memorable moment in your career.
The Air Force had a program called Command Facility Inspection much like the Army's Community of Excellence program. I was given special recognition one year for CFI, the only civilian accorded such recognition.

What are your future career plans?
To move upward and outward in the contracting career field.

What others have to say : "Ms. Usry is the acme of an employee. She performs duties without my even knowing about them. She always provides solutions to any problems. She makes herself do whatever is necessary to get the job done."

Outstanding infantryman recognized

By Ruth J. Spaller
Bayonet staff writer

This year's Patterson Award winner was congratulated after the ceremony Feb. 10 by a Vietnam veteran who told him, "I got tired of hearing all that you've done."

Second Lt. Robert W. Kinder, who has been selected as the year's most outstanding infantry graduate of Officer Candidate School and the Infantry Officer Basic Course, does, indeed, have an impressive list of accomplishments.

As well as being both the distinguished honor and academic graduate of OCS and the platoon honor graduate of his Infantry Officer Basic Course, Kinder was the distinguished honor graduate of the Special Forces Qualification Course.

He is a graduate of Airborne School, the Military Freefall Parachutist and Jumpmaster courses, the Combat Diver Qualification Course, Ranger School, the Arabic-Egyptian Language Course, the Pathfinder Course and the U.S. Air Force Survival, Evasion Resistance and Escape School. He is also a master parachutist with more than 300 jumps.

But Kinder, who is the 43rd recipient of the Patterson Award, said he was humbled by the recognition that comes with it.

The award is named in honor of Judge Robert P. Patterson, a highly decorated World War I veteran who went on to serve as the secretary of War under President Harry Truman.

Having his name associated with the award's namesake, the previous recipients and past OCS graduates like local Medal of Honor recipient retired Col. Robert B. Nett, who attended the ceremony, "kind of leaves me feeling wanting," Kinder said.

Of his accomplishments, he said, "But those are schools, though ... those guys have really done it."

Kinder hopes to follow in the footsteps of those "great infantrymen" and "warriors" now that he's an infantry officer, he said.

His path to this point has been a long one, though. Kinder started his military career in the Air Force in 1980. He spent 10 years there, working the last several in close connection with the Army in the Special Operations Command at Fort Bragg, N.C. He deployed to Panama during Operation Just Cause with that unit.

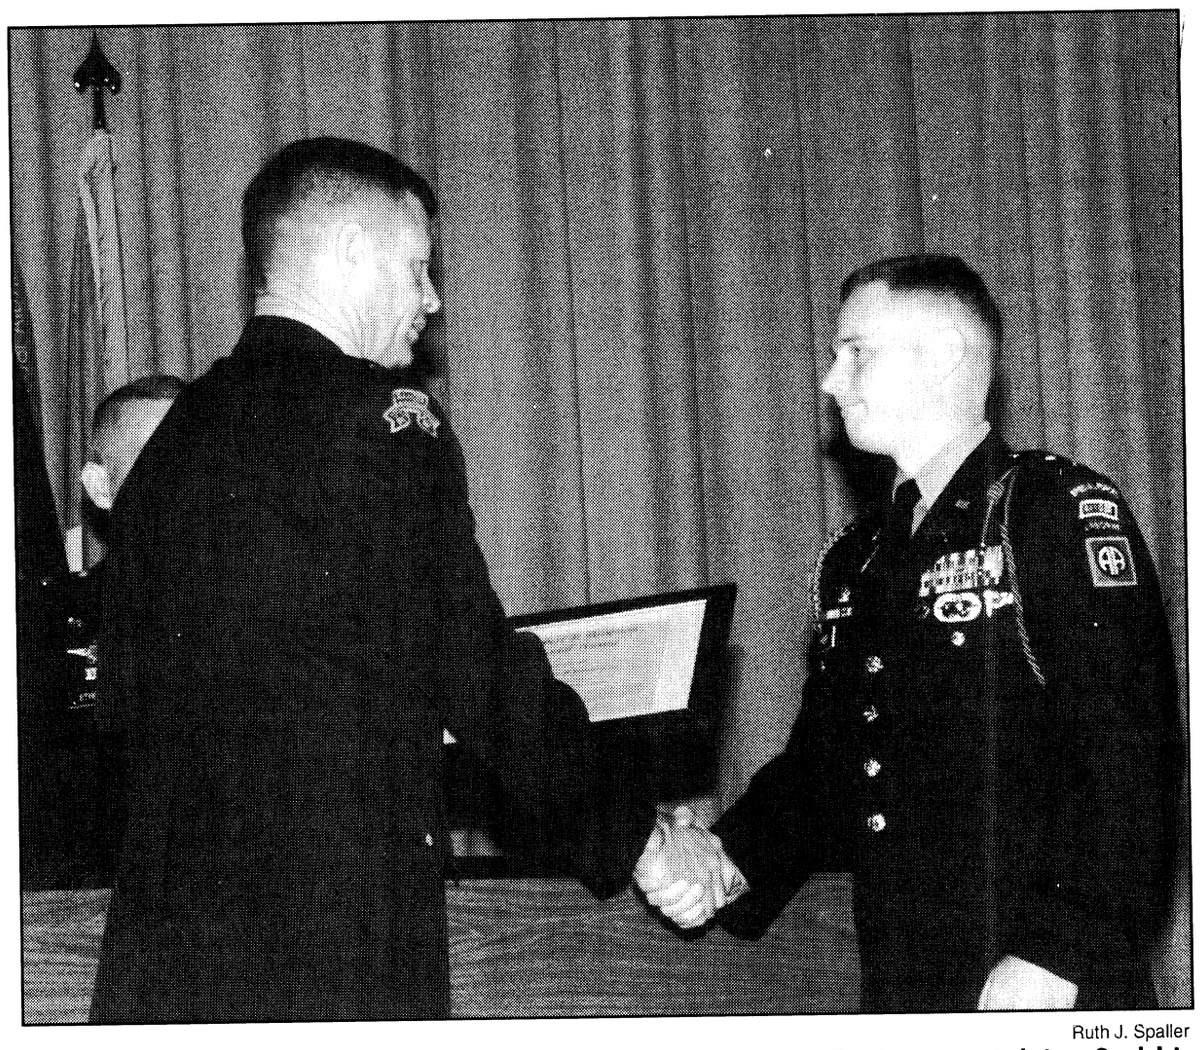
In 1990, Kinder left the Air Force as a technical sergeant. He wanted to join the Army, "because the Army's got the mission," he said.

He earned a bachelor of science degree in professional aeronautics from Embry Riddle Aeronautical University, and in 1991, he enlisted in the Army, dropping a pay grade to attend basic training as a sergeant.

In 1993, Kinder entered OCS and requested to branch infantry, he said, because "that's what the Army's all about."

Now, Kinder is a platoon leader with Company A, 1st Battalion, 325th Parachute Infantry Regiment, 82nd Airborne Division, at Fort Bragg.

After the ceremony, Kinder was preparing to make a quick return to Fort Bragg to join his unit for an exercise at the Joint Readiness Training Center at Fort Polk, La.



"I've got the honor — and it is an honor," Kinder told a current OCS class at the ceremony, "of leading 30 young, motivated paratroopers on an airfield seizure. Those young soldiers have been working very hard for me, and I'm proud to be their leader.

"As officers, I think each of us is charged with the possibility of leading into combat America's sons and daughters," Kinder said.

"Don't let them down. Through determination and perseverance, overcome your weaknesses."

His favorite quote, Kinder said, is, "The race is not always to the swift, but to those who keep on running." He approaches the future one step at a time, he said, and is not looking further right now than just making first lieutenant.

Kinder said he would like to end up back at Fort Benning someday, with the 3rd Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment.

Defense engineer blazes trail for women

Army News Service

WASHINGTON — The Alabama Engineering Hall of Fame will induct Dr. Robin Buckelew into a selective fraternity of 49 recognized engineers at the Auburn University Conference Center Saturday.

"This is a great source of pride for me," said Buckelew, director of the U.S. Army Space and Strategic Defense Command's Engineering and Systems Directorate at Huntsville, Ala.

As a member of the elite senior executive service, Buckelew has served in many engineering and management positions since entering government service as a summer aide for NASA in 1966.

Buckelew said she believes her selection for the award is based mainly on her work as manager of a $500 million ground interceptor experiment program from 1988 to 1991. Another factor in her selection was her work to promote engineering education at the University of Alabama.

Buckelew now directs the development and analysis of large-scale, weapons-system simulations. She manages a $60 million budget and about 240 employees.

She feels her biggest challenge as a manager is to "stretch (employees) to the limits of their potential."

She has come a long way since her days as an engineering aide, and later a young aerospace engineer at the U.S. Army Missile Command in Huntsville.

"At that time, very few women ever make to above the grade of GS-13," she said. "Of course, very few women went into engineering in the first place. In my graduating class of 250 engineers, only a handful — fewer than 10 — were female. The field was overwhelmingly male.

"I would like to be a trail blazer ... a role model for other younger engineers, and I hope that the jobs that I have held proved that wonderful, satisfying careers can come in this field."

Demo marries scientific, spiritual

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet©

Fort Benning audiences witnessed a series of scientific demonstrations Sunday through Wednesday in Infantry Hall's Marshall Auditorium. The seminars have been seen by more than 5 million people, including audiences at four World's Fairs, two summer Olympic Games and 600 military bases.

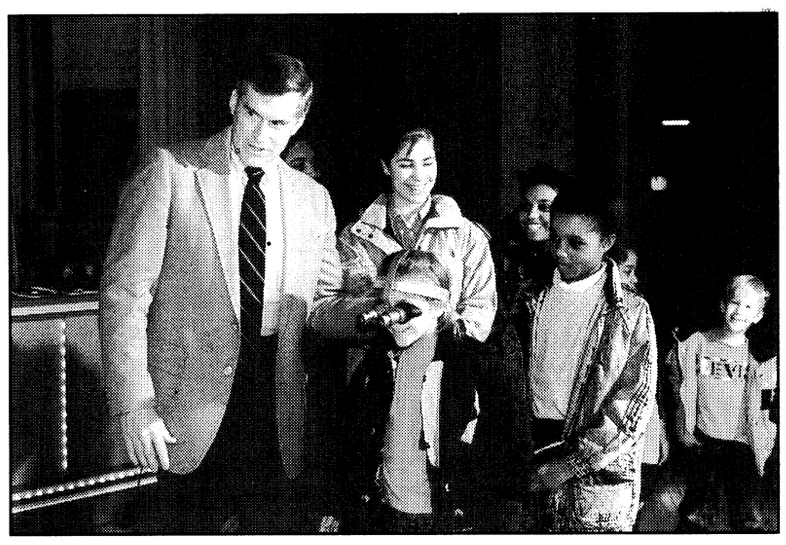
Dean Ortner, who has been presenting the Sermons from Science demonstrations since 1973, used more than 2,000 pounds of scientific equipment to perform such feats as floating metal in the air, shattering a glass goblet with sound, producing liquid light and playing music on a beam of light.

In his final demonstration, Ortner climbed onto an electrical coil and allowed 1 million volts of high-frequency electricity to flow through his body, causing a board he was holding to burst into flames and producing lightning from his fingertips.

"Your body's electrical system and muscles are in tune with 60 cycles," Ortner said. "The coil changes the standard 60 cycles to 65,000 cycles. At 60 cycles your muscles would contract so violently that if it were used on the coil, it would throw your dead body across the room."

Ortner, who has a degree in biology from Moorhead State University and who served on the faculty of North Dakota University while doing graduate work in bio-nucleonics, used this and other dramatic demonstrations to show there are natural laws that govern the world around us.

"This is not hocus-pocus," Ortner said. "Every demonstration is as scientifically accurate as possible."



Science is constantly discovering facts indicating there are untold sights and sounds we know nothing about, he said. Man can't make natural science laws, he can only learn and obey them. In the same sense, spiritual laws are just like scientific laws, only with far greater consequences, Ortner added.

Ortner said science and religion do not exclude, but complement, each other.

"The first scientist was God, who established the natural laws by which the universe operates," Ortner said. "A true scientist should realize that by observing these natural laws, we can get some indirect evidence about the existence of the creator who set them up."

Ortner said he focuses more on the scientific aspects of his demonstrations than the religious.

"I'm not here to cram religion down people's throats," he said. "I love performing the science demonstrations, and the programs are designed to be informative and entertaining to people of any age or scientific background."

Honor nation's leaders on Presidents Day

By Geoffrey and Melinda Alleyne
13th Corps Support Battalion

reflections

If you were appointed a general of an army that's about to go to war by a congress that had no authority, and then it said, 'We have no formal government to stand by you, no arsenal of weapons to fight with, no money to support a war and no trained soldiers or officers to help you, only a group of inexperienced volunteers, but; we think you're the right man for the job," how would you respond?

George Washington responded, "As the congress desires it, I will enter upon the momentous duty, and exert every power I possess in their service, and for the support of the glorious cause. But I beg it may be remembered by every gentleman in the room, that I this day declare, with the utmost sincerity, I do not think myself equal to the command I am honored with."

With these words a nation of people was empowered to fight, a battle was fought, and freedom was won. Washington served the people in the Revolutionary War. He led them into a victory that had once seemed impossible. However, his greatest achievement came after the war.

Washington, along with other worthy leaders, led the floundering colonists into the formation of a nation that would stand the test of time. After the war, Washington was unanimously elected by the electoral college to become the first president of America. Thanks to men like Washington, we now celebrate Presidents Day — a day that we set aside to honor those who have led our nation.

Deuteronomy 1:13 gives us guidance on how to choose our leaders. It says, "Take wise men, and understanding, and known among your tribes, and I will make them rulers over you." (NKJV)

Apparently, Washington realized the job of leadership was an awesome one — one that was greater than he. Washington had said he was honored to serve. The early colonists chose a leader from among their midst that met the standards that are laid out in Deuteronomy.

Washington was a wise leader. He had led them into an impossible battle and won, yet he understood the battle was only part of the victory. While he was being sworn into office, Washington added these words to the oath he had just taken, "so help me God." He was still acknowledging the job was bigger than the man. He would need help. It was under Washington's leadership that a great nation was built.

The next time you think about choosing a leader, ask yourself, does this person meet God's standards? It's easy to let our party affiliations dictate to us who should be our leaders, but we, as Christians, have the responsibility to follow God's standards.

It's God's responsibility to make them into rulers. He certainly made Washington into one, and look what happened.

Your Guide to Prime-Time TV: Cable and Broadcast Schedules

Sally Field stars as 'independent' woman

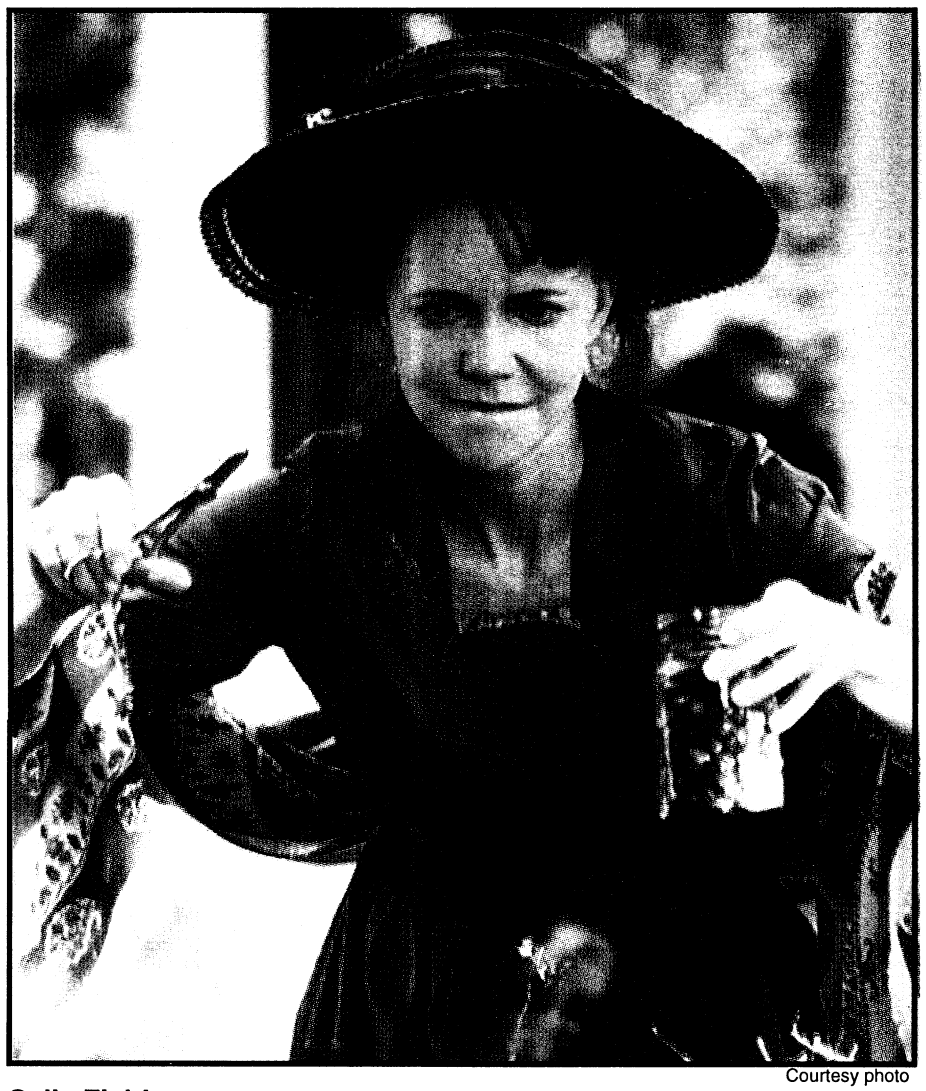
By Jay Bobbin
Tribune Media Services

She started her career as "Gidget" and "The Flying Nun," and two Academy Awards later, Sally Field is returning to television.

What: "A Woman of Independent Means"
When: Sunday, Monday and Wednesday on NBC

SPOTLIGHT

An Oscar-winner for both "Norma Rae" and "Places in the Heart," the actress makes a now-rare home-screen appearance in "A Woman of Independent Means," NBC's new miniseries adaptation of the Elizabeth Forsythe Hailey best-seller that airs Sunday, Monday and Wednesday.



Also the executive producer of the saga, Field stars as Hailey's own maternal grandmother Bess Steed Garner, who lived through much of the 20th century with a sense of personal freedom afforded her by a considerable inheritance from her mother.

However, that didn't make her immune to emotional pain, a great deal of which she experienced in the course of her two marriages and her raising of two children.

Tony Goldwyn ("The Pelican Brief") plays her first husband, and Australian actor Jack Thompson appears as her second spouse.

Other pivotal members of the cast include Charles Durning as Bess' father and Ron Silver as her financial adviser and would-be suitor.

Also featured is Brooke Hailey, the daughter of the book's author, in the part of Bess' granddaughter Betsy ... the young Elizabeth Forsythe Hailey herself.

Sally Field

"The work is wherever it is," said Field, whose last major television performance was her Emmy-winning portrayal of "Sybil" nearly two decades ago.

"The work is all I relate to," she said. "I never really have a feeling of where it's going, on television or in a movie house.

"I had read the book when it first came out, and loved it like everyone else, but I never felt that it could be a film," she continued. "The impact of the piece is that it is (about) a person's lifetime, and it isn't that there's a trial or a kidnapping or (a pivotal) incident.

"It's just the bravery of people who live their lives, and you cannot do it in two hours (the standard length of a movie). We barely did it in six hours," she said.

As evidenced by her work in the two films that have earned her Oscars as best actress, and again by "A Woman of Independent Means," Field has a particular knack and affinity for playing Southern ladies.

"I think early on in my career, I thought, 'I have to stop with this theme; I have to move on,'" she said. "Then, these wonderful (roles as) Southern women would come my way and I'd say, 'Well, maybe not this year.' They're just the most colorful women that I have read (in scripts). I guess it has something to do with my own baggage, as we say."

Museum to host school art show

The Columbus Museum

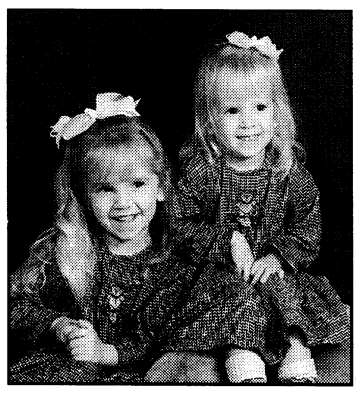
In support of art education and Youth Art Month, the Columbus Museum is hosting the Middle School Art Show for this area.

The art works will be on display in the Turner Galleria from Tuesday through Feb. 26. A reception honoring the middle school artists and their families will be Feb. 26 at 3 p.m. in the Museum's Wright Community Room. This year's Youth Art Month theme is "Art Can Make a World of Difference."

Planned by the area's public and private school's art teachers, the art show is part of a statewide program sponsored yearly by the Georgia Art Education Association, an organization composed of art teachers and museum educators. All middle school art teachers in this region were invited to participate in this exhibition and to select works by their students for display.

Art students in elementary and high schools will also participate in Youth Art Month. The Columbus College Art Department will host a juried exhibition for high school artists, Feb. 27 to March 10. The elementary school art exhibit will be shown at Peachtree Mall, Feb. 27 to March 5.

Participating teachers and middle schools are Susan Hudnall, Rothschild; Panchita Crawford, Eddy; Frances Spencer, Fort; Gloria Loar, Faith, Fort Benning; Amy Paterson, Harris County-Carver; Rose Ogle, Brookstone; Laurel Barger, St. Anne's; Sandy Crain, Chattahoochee County Education Center, Cusseta; and Christina Mullenix, South Garrard, Phenix City.



For more information, call 649-0713.

Springer to present 'Sophisticated Ladies'

By Paul R. Pierce
Springer Opera House

Duke Ellington's granddaughter will return to Columbus to direct the Springer's production of "Sophisticated Ladies" scheduled to open Thursday.

Mercedes Ellington directed last season's popular "Ain't Misbehavin'," at the Springer Opera House and has agreed to direct and choreograph the upcoming Broadway hit based on her grandfather's music.

Although Duke Ellington was one of America's most celebrated African-American musicians and bandleaders, the Springer will present "Sophisticated Ladies" with a multi-cultural cast of singers and dancers.

Dance styles in "Sophisticated Ladies" range from tap and jazz to ballet and ballroom. Ellington is casting eight principal players and eight ensemble performers.

"Sophisticated Ladies" features Duke Ellington favorites like "Take the 'A' Train," "Satin Doll" and "It Don't Mean a Thing If You Ain't Got That Swing."

"We're fortunate to have Mercedes joining the Springer artistic staff again this season," said artistic director Paul R. Pierce. "She is one of our country's foremost choreographers and directors and its natural for her to direct her grandfather's music at the Springer. We are all excited about her return to Columbus."

For ticket information on "Sophisticated Ladies," call the Springer Theatre at 324-1100.

Ranger class to graduate after training incident

By Marc G. Turchin
Bayonet staff writer

Today's graduation of the U.S. Army Ranger School's newest rangers will be overshadowed by the loss of four students who died Feb. 15 during a training exercise at Eglin Air Force Base, Fla.

The graduation at Malvesti Field at 11 a.m. will be the end of a class that will mostly be remembered for tragedy.

That tragedy keyed Maj. Gen. John W. Hendrix, Fort Benning's commanding general, to put a stop to all training for two days.

All training but water-based training was reinstated Saturday morning. All water-based training is suspended indefinitely, post officials said.

As of today, there are four ongoing investigations into the incident. The Department of Army Inspector General, the Criminal Investigation Division and the Army Safety Office are all probing the accident for details. An internal investigation is being headed up Brig. Gen. John J. Maher III, Fort Benning's deputy commanding general.

The accident happened during the ninth day of the final phase of Ranger School.

The students were operating in three, 34-man patrols and had been in the field since Feb. 12. The operation began when the students began boat training drills at 11 a.m. Feb. 15.

At about 3 p.m., they began patrolling in the water, which ranged from waist to chest level. When the water level got even deeper, the students began building rope bridges.

"Once they moved approximately 700 to 800 meters through the swamp, they were to conduct either an ambush or a raid on the high ground," Lt. Col. Joe Spenneberg, executive officer for the Ranger Training Brigade, said during a press conference at the brigade Feb. 16.

Around 5:30 p.m. the first ranger student was showing signs of hypothermia, Spenneberg said.

Eventually, seven rangers had to be evacuated from the swamps.

Of those evacuated, three died.

Another ranger got separated from his patrol during the confusion of the evacuation operation. His body was recovered early the next morning after an intensive search of the swamps by ranger cadre and Air Force personnel.

The deceased are:

- Capt Milton Palmer, 27, of Fishers, Ind., was a Citadel graduate and is scheduled to be buried today at Arlington National Cemetery.
- 2nd Lt. Spencer D. Dodge, 25, of Stanley, N.Y., was president of his West Point class. Burial was Thursday in Canadaigua, N.Y.
- 2nd Lt. Curt G. Sansoucie, 23, of Rochester, N.H., was a 1994 West Point graduate. His funeral service was Tuesday in Somerworth, N.H.
- Sgt. Norman Tillman was a 28-year-old mortarman with the 82nd Airborne Division, Fort Bragg. He was posthumously promoted to staff sergeant. His burial was Thursday in Holcomb, Miss.

Ready for flight

Col. Roy R. Trumble, commandant of the School of the Americas, readies himself for a flight demonstration inside a UH-60 Blackhawk simulator during a recent visit to the School of the Americas' Helicopter School Battalion at Fort Rucker, Ala. The battalion trains Latin American aviators and mechanics. See story on Page C-1.

Cleanliness can keep critters clear

By Karen S. Morarie
Bayonet staff writer

Georgia is known for its mild climate, lush vegetation, peanuts — and bugs.

Soldiers living in the barracks may find themselves with unwanted roommates of the six- or eight-legged variety, as in spiders and roaches. Fortunately there are ways to stamp out this menace; the Directorate of Public Works suggests you start with a broom and a mop, followed by a visit to Self-Help.

Chris Dunn, Pest Control Branch chief, said his shop hasn't been responsible for pest control in barracks rooms since the beginning of fiscal 1994, when the branch lost manpower and budget allocations.

Now, Dunn said, it's each soldier's responsibility to make sure his or her living area is bug-free.

"Sanitation is the key," according to Tom Robertson, chief of Buildings and Grounds Division, DPW. "Obviously, the critters are there mainly because there's something for them to eat."

Keeping surroundings free of food and dirt, Robertson said, will go a long way toward reducing insect populations, particularly cockroaches.

"If there's nothing for them to eat," he said, "they'll pack their bags and go elsewhere."

Also, he said, pesticides are available at Self-Help U-Do-It.

"When we made this changeover, U-Do-It started stocking supplies for the soldiers," he said, "but they're not being fully utilized."

Pesticides shouldn't be applied, Robertson said, unless there's a pest problem. They shouldn't be used as a precautionary measure.

Dunn said there are several reasons not to apply pesticides unless they're needed:

- Cockroaches become resistant to pesticides after repeated exposure
- The Department of Defense is engaged in a pesticide reduction program, as part of its attempt to become more "environmentally friendly"
- Soldier safety — "I can't think of another business," Dunn said, "where people go out and intentionally put down poison."

Robertson said units can contact the Pest Control Branch if they have a serious infestation. Pest Control has a list of local exterminators approved by Training and Doctrine Command that units can contact if necessary.

"The catch," Robertson said, "is the unit has to pay."

The Pest Control Branch still applies pesticides for residents of housing, Robertson said, and also in dining facilities.

AER campaign to kick off

By Jan Wesner Childs
Special to The Bayonet©

Army Emergency Relief will kick off its annual fund-raising drive Wednesday. The campaign will run through May 15.

"AER is a nonprofit organization existing on military installations to provide financial assistance to soldiers during times of emergency," said Alfonso Deane, AER officer. "In general, AER is basically the Army's own financial agency to take care of its soldiers."

Last year, AER gave more than $807,000 to nearly 1,400 Fort Benning soldiers, according to Deane.

Soldiers can get help paying for utilities, rent, emergency leave and funeral expenses, among other things.

AER wants to raise $175,000 this year. Deane said that goal is based on Fort Benning-area demographics. If every soldier and retiree gave $1 a month, he said, the goal would easily be reached.

Anyone who wishes to contribute to AER can contact his or her unit AER key person. Donations can be given by cash, check or monthly allotment.

Additional funding comes from donations and other money given to the AER national headquarters. The group also makes investments.

Any soldier is eligible for assistance from AER, according to Deane. The first step is to pick up the necessary forms at the AER office in Soldiers' Plaza. The request must be approved by the soldier's first sergeant and commander.

Requests are granted based on need and may be in the form of loans or grants. Scholarships for children of soldiers are also available, Deane said.

Soldiers requesting money from AER are usually unable to pay their bills for one of two reasons, according to Deane.

"One is nonreceipt of pay for that month," he said. "Another reason is because soldiers overextend themselves."

He said that if an AER officer thinks a soldier is handling money poorly, the soldier will be referred to Army Community Services for budget counseling after consultation with the unit chain of command.

Self-Help offers CO detectors

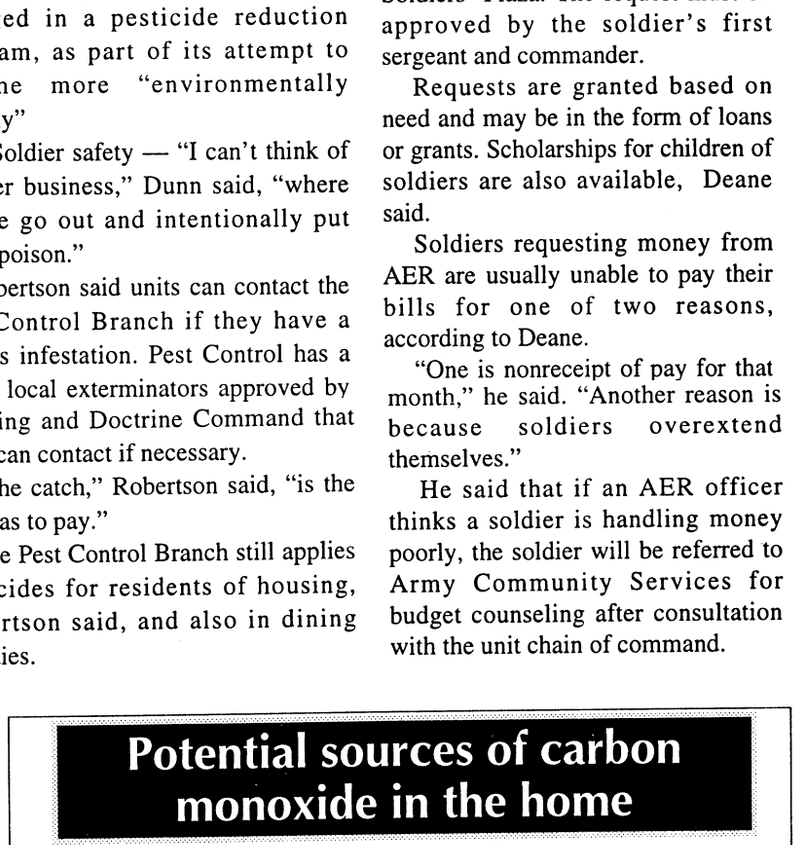
By Jerrie Macintire
Special to The Bayonet©

As wet, chilly weather keeps people indoors with the windows tightly shut and furnaces working overtime, the risk of carbon monoxide buildup increases.

Carbon monoxide, a colorless, odorless gas, which can be toxic at high levels, is produced when fuels don't burn completely. Carbon monoxide replaces oxygen; and, when there is poor ventilation in a closed area such as a home, people can experience dizziness, headaches, nausea and fatigue, all symptoms of "carbon monoxide poisoning."

As a preventive measure, devices to detect the presence of carbon monoxide in the home are now available to residents of the 4,082 quarters on post, according to Ken Hankins, director of Housing.

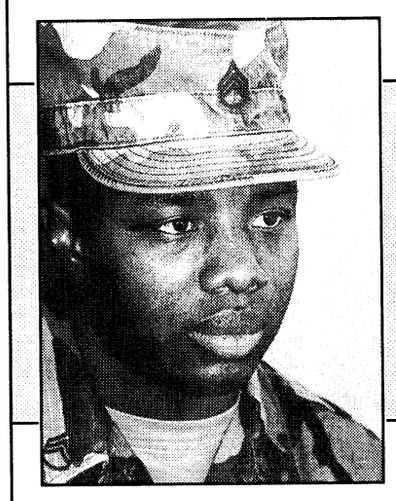
The detectors, available at the Housing Self-Help Store, Building 385 on Vibbert Avenue, feature a sensing device that monitors the amount of the gas in the air and causes a chemical treated danger spot present. "The detectors are available now, and we encourage residents to use them according to directions," Hankins said.



The devices must be installed properly and away from other common indoor pollution sources such as ash trays and kitty litter boxes, which can give a positive reading, Hankins said.

Housing engineers have also been checking post quarters following two incidents of cracked furnace heating jackets in the Indianhead Terrace area. The occupants, who complained of headaches and dizziness, were evaluated at the hospital, but medical tests showed no carbon monoxide poisoning, Hankins said.

After inspecting homes in the Indianhead Terrace area and other housing areas on post, no additional problems with furnaces or with water heaters, another possible source of carbon monoxide, were found, Hankins said. The two cracked furnaces were replaced.



As a further precaution, the Housing

It's a good time to join military

By Starlene R. Parizek
Fort Meade, Md.

Two college students in caps and gowns wait at the end of the long line to receive their diplomas.

"By the time we get up there, all the jobs will be taken!" one said to the other.

Ralph Dunagin expresses this perspective of graduating from college in his cartoon, "Dunagin's People."

College graduates are finding themselves working in minimum-wage jobs. Experts say today's grim job market is the worst since World War II, according to an article in USA Today.

In today's economy, it is a good time to join the military. The military offers better job stability, vocational training and many benefits. These benefits include health care, compensation for family separation, free food rations and living quarters, veteran's programs, travel opportunities and programs to help pay for additional schooling.

A college degree is no longer a guarantee for a related job in our discouraging economy.

Another USA Today article talks about Shelly Biggs, a journalism graduate from the University of Nebraska, who dreams of becoming a newspaper reporter. But instead of flipping pages of a notebook, she's flipping burgers at a Seattle fast-food restaurant.

"It's frustrating when you put your heart and soul into preparing for an occupation and you're not able to do it when you get out," Biggs said in the article.

This illustrates one of the best reasons for receiving military vocational training. Once you are furnished with a military job qualification, you can be reasonably sure you will be working in that field.

Even with a bachelor's degree in extended English education, I couldn't find a good job in my field before joining the military.

The job I was working was very unstable. I was a copy writer for a small mail-order catalog business.

With the postal increase in the summer of 1992, consumers were hesitant in purchasing by mail. Fellow co-workers were being laid off every month. It was a scary feeling, not knowing if I might be next.

Being one of the "few and the proud," you are striving to "be all you can be" and "aiming high." You have an occupation that is "not just a job, but an adventure."

The military is the way to go!

DCA thanks sponsor

On behalf of the Directorate of Community Activities, I would like to thank Canadian Mist for its sponsorship of the "Going the Distance" for the 1995 Army Box-Off and Boxing Training Camp promotion.

This promotion involved a variety of events for the Fort Benning community. Floyd Patterson, legendary world heavyweight boxing champion, made a visit to Fort Benning as part of the promotion in December.

The Class Six stores offered rebates on Canadian Mist with a percentage of the profits benefiting the 1995 All-Army Boxing Team. The Fort Benning Club system packed a punch with the Canadian Mist "Night at the Fights — Sega Genesis Video Boxing Tournaments."

Tournaments were at The Sledgehammer, The Drop Zone and Bradley's. Cash prizes were given each night to the champion along with T-shirts and key chains for all participants.

The finale for the promotion was at the new enlisted club, "After Hours," with a Robotic Boxing Tournament.

The champion received $300 in cash and the runner-up received $75. All participants were given T-shirts and key chains.

DCA would like to congratulate the winners of the tournaments and thank them for their enthusiastic participation. The entire promotion was compliments of Canadian Mist and we sincerely appreciate its continued support of Fort Benning and the All-Army Boxing Team.

Army Times article about MWR incorrect

The Directorate of Community Activities wants to set the record straight regarding the Jan. 23 Army Times article titled "Army says MWR will share the wealth."

The article was referring to the Oct. 31 cash sweep of excess unspent installation Morale, Welfare and Recreation funds as directed by Congress. As part of the 1995 Defense Authorization Act, Congress said "amounts may not be retained in excess of the amount necessary to meet cash requirements of that installation."

The Army Times, quoting Jeffrey Dalbey, the director of resource management for the Community and Family Support Center, compared the cash sweep results of Fort Benning and Fort Polk, La.

The article was correct in stating that the sweep removed no funds from the Fort Benning MWR because Fort Benning had a very active capital reinvestment program and put its profits into purchasing equipment used by soldiers and their families, and into renovating or expanding facilities.

The article was incorrect in stating that Fort Benning's profits were $16 million for fiscal 1994.

The correct statement should have been that Fort Benning generated $16 million in gross revenues including Army and Air Force Exchange Service direct dividend distribution during fiscal 1994 and that Fort Benning's true fiscal 1994 profit or earnings before depreciation was $1.9 million.

Gross revenues are those funds generated prior to deductions for operating expenses and labor costs. Profits in MWR are used to maintain and upgrade the MWR facilities, and if sufficient funds are generated, to expand or add new MWR facilities.

Fort Benning's current annual requirement for equipment replacement and maintenance and repair and refurbishment of MWR facilities per fiscal year is $1.2 million. This $1.2 million represents those dollars required to assure that your MWR facilities remain the very best in the Army.

Maintenance and repair costs include items such as replacement of the damaged pool at the Destin, Fla., Recreation Area, painting of the cabins at the Uchee Creek Recreation Area, replacing a cabin at Destin, repairing the dock at Destin that was damaged during the tropical storm last summer, and the Follow Me Fitness Trail, to name only a few.

The remaining funds are used to construct new facilities that have been identified as desired by Fort Benning soldiers and families. Needs are identified from such sources as the Better Opportunities for Single Soldiers Program, postwide assessment surveys and comment cards.

Projects, based on these needs, are validated and recommended by the MWR advisory subcommittee, which is comprised of representatives from all units on post. Final approval for expenditure of funds is made by the MWR board of directors, comprised of the commanding general and other key command personnel.

Expenditures of this nature include construction of the new guest house and the new junior enlisted club (both of these were funded with Fort Benning MWR earnings), the addition of 10 new cabins at the Uchee Creek Recreation Area, $250,000 for the purchase of furnishings and equipment for the new junior enlisted club "After Hours," construction of the Sledgehammer Lounge at Kelley Hill, construction of batting cages on Main Post and purchase of 13 new Coachman rental camping trailers.

Dental health month

Delta plan covers annual dental checkups

By Jan Wesner Childs
Special to The Bayonet©

A child's primary teeth "stand guard" for the permanent teeth that come in behind them, dentists say. That's why it's important to keep them healthy.

One way to do that, according to Fort Benning and Columbus dental professionals, is through the Dependents Dental Plan.

DDP is an insurance program offered to military family members. The program is administered and underwritten by Delta Dental Plans, a national company. Several local dentists accept the plan.

All dependents of active duty military members are eligible for the plan as long as the sponsor has been on active duty for more than 30 days and intends to remain so for 24 months.

Cost is $9.65 a month for one family member and $19.30 for two or more. Co-payments and the amount of coverage depend on the type of treatment. There is no deductible.

The insurance program was started after the military stopped providing dental care to family members.

Since February is National Children's Dental Health Month, a lot of emphasis is being placed on preventive care for youngsters. But it's also important for adults to take good care of their teeth. Pat Wood, health benefits adviser for Fort Benning, said DDP helps them do that.

"Basically, they can keep up with any problems before they get worse," Wood said.

She pointed out that the dental plan covers two complete examinations a year, including x-rays and cleaning. Delta Dental pays 100 percent for those preventive treatments.

Other common types of treatment, such as crowns, fillings and root canals, are covered at some cost to the patient. Cosmetic dentistry is not included, but children's braces are covered up to $1,200.

Soldiers can go to their personnel action center to sign up family members for the dental plan.

Wood, who works in the Civilian Health and Medical Program of the Uniformed Services office on post, can provide general information on the plan and has a list of local dentists who participate.

Gulf vets may get compensation

American Forces Information Service

Sick veterans are one step closer to receiving more assistance for undiagnosed illnesses that may have resulted from their Persian Gulf War service, according to the Department of Veterans Affairs.

VA developed proposed legislation compensating disabled Persian Gulf veterans with undiagnosed illnesses after President Bill Clinton signed the Veterans Benefit Act of 1994 authorizing the compensation.

"I have taken steps under this law to expedite compensation payments to chronically disabled Persian Gulf veterans while we continue to look for the causes of their health problems and to study the health status of their spouses and children," Secretary of Veterans Affairs Jesse Brown said.

VA is contacting each veteran on its Persian Gulf Registry, currently numbering more than 34,000. It will also reopen previously denied compensation claims.

Veterans or their survivors with potential claims can contact the nearest VA regional office by calling (800) 827-1000 for information and assistance.

Under the proposed rules, Persian Gulf veterans may be eligible for disability compensation if they have chronic disabilities resulting from undiagnosed illnesses that showed up either during their service in the Persian Gulf or within two years thereafter.

Disabilities must exist for at least six months to be considered chronic.

Any eligible Persian Gulf veteran with a disability rated at 10 percent or more will be compensated. Monthly compensation rates currently range from $89 for a 10 percent disability to $1,823 for a 100 percent disability.

VA already provides priority care for Persian Gulf veterans in its medical centers and outpatient facilities.

A list of 13 categories of undiagnosed illnesses is included in the rule: fatigue, skin diseases, headache, muscle pain, joint pain, neurologic signs or symptoms, psychological signs or symptoms, upper and lower respiratory problems, sleep disturbances, gastrointestinal problems, cardiovascular problems, abnormal weight loss and menstrual disorders.

The categories represent the conditions most frequently reported in VA's registry but are not exclusive. Other symptoms could qualify for compensation.

The new law also authorizes VA to study the health status of spouses and children of veterans on VA's Persian Gulf registry established in 1992 to identify patterns of illnesses.

The study will include diagnostic testing and medical exams to formulate research hypotheses on possible associations between Persian Gulf veterans' illnesses and disorders suffered by their spouses and children, including miscarriage and stillbirths.

VA will also survey 15,000 randomly selected Persian Gulf veterans and compare results with a 15,000-person control group of veterans from the same time period who did not deploy.

The proposed rules appeared in the Dec. 8 issue of the Federal Register.

Persian Gulf vets can call 800 number

Department of Veterans Affairs

The Department of Veterans Affairs has established a telephone line for Persian Gulf War veterans seeking information about medical care and benefits.

The VA Persian Gulf Help Line went into effect Feb. 2, and it is part of an outreach program set up to assist Gulf veterans, particularly those who are suffering from the so-called Persian Gulf syndrome, arising from service in the 1991 war.

The telephone service has headquarters at the St. Louis, Mo., VA regional office and it will be staffed with benefit specialists from 8:30 a.m. to 9:30 p.m. on weekdays.

Recorded messages providing information will be available 24 hours a day, seven days a week.

The phone number is (800) PGW-VETS, or (800) 749-8387.

Soldiers reminded to vote this year

Soldiers are reminded of the 1995 elections. Many municipal and local elections are conducted during nonfederal election years throughout the United States. Many states and jurisdictions conduct elections throughout the year to fill offices ranging from municipal and state legislative seats to county and city-wide positions.

Winners in these races will be responsible for enacting legislation and executing public policy in their jurisdictions which has a direct impact on issues that affect all citizens of that city, county or state.

Elected officials at the state and local level often address issues such as education, taxes, and health care long before Congress acts on them. In many instances, these elections have lower voter turnout and voters who participate in these elections may have a greater impact on the outcome of these races.

A federal post card application request for registration and a ballot is usually a temporary registration and valid for one calendar year. Applications are available from your voting assistance officer.

For more information, call 545-2803.

Library adds videos

The Training and Development Division has added the following two new videos to the Lending Library:

• Total Army Performance Evaluation System

• See Wellness Through My Eyes: This video is for anyone who uses a visual display terminal. The objective of this video is to provide employee education on the use of visual display terminals, reduce eye and musculoskeletal complaints associated with usage and increase user awareness of individual ergonomics in the workplace, including screen placement, workstation positioning, chair positioning and posture.

The Lending Library has recently added 100 videos on safety and environmental subjects.

The Lending Library is located in Meloy Hall, Building 6, Room 105, and selections are available on a loan basis.

For information, call the Training and Development Division of the Directorate of Civilian Personnel at 545-5580 or 545-5656.

Volunteers needed for research study

The U.S. Army Aeromedical Research Laboratory at Fort Rucker, Ala., is conducting a study on night shift work and reproductive health.

Female volunteers between the ages of 18 to 40 are needed. Expenses will be paid by the lab.

For more information, call Dr. Carlos Comperatore or Sandra Myrick at (334) 255-6858 or (334) 255-6850 or DSN 558-6858 or 558-6850.

Tax office now open

The Fort Benning Tax Office, located in Building 2640 at Soldiers' Plaza, is now open. Office hours will be 8:30 a.m. to 4 p.m., Monday through Friday.

Electronic tax filing will be available for most federal returns, and the office has many federal and state tax forms available.

Unit tax advisers have been appointed so soldiers with tax questions can see their unit tax advisers first.

British officer loves life in military

By Marc G. Turchin
Bayonet staff writer

He has traveled the world during his military career. Australia, Central America and Northern Ireland are a few of the stops he has made. His job now requires him to make three trips to Bermuda a year to monitor training — someone has to do it.

But traveling the world is just part of the job. His life in and out of the British army has seen all that the military can offer.

Lt. Col. Timothy F.L. Weeks, the new British liaison officer for Fort Benning, has been England's liaison since January.

As the liaison between the British infantry and the American infantry, Weeks is the focus for a two-way exchange of information concerning training, doctrine and equipment. He said he can ask questions about the U.S. Army and the Americans are able to ask questions about the British army.

Weeks fits right in at the U.S. Army Infantry School. What better place to find an infantryman — British or American?

"I couldn't ever envision being anything but an infantryman," Weeks said. "It's probably the branch of the army that has the closest relationship with the soldiers."

Being able to command the infantry, Weeks said, is more than just a command position.

"It has got to be one of the most professionally satisfying things you could ever do," he said.

Weeks hasn't spent his entire career with the infantry, but he has plenty of experience with the troops on the ground.

His first assignment as a second lieutenant was from 1972 to 1974 as a rifle platoon leader in a mechanized battalion, which included two operation tours in Belfast, Northern Ireland. Other assignments included a recruit training instructor with the Light Infantry; a jungle warfare instructor with the Australian army in Queensland, Australia, and in 1992, he assumed command of the 1st Battalion, the Light Infantry.

His last assignment before arriving on post was as the commander of a British Air Assault Battalion, the 1st Light Infantry. During this command, he took the battalion to Belize, Central America, for a seven-month operational tour and to Northern Ireland. The battalion participated in seven exercises, including one at Fort Lewis, Wash.

"I'm very, very happy in the jungle," Weeks said with a smile on his face. "Close country is my specialty."

It was the close-country fighting that saw soldiers under his command die during an attack by the Irish Republican Army in Northern Ireland in 1977.

While on patrol in Belfast, Weeks and his soldiers were ambushed by an IRA hit squad. During the skirmish, two of the soldiers with Weeks were shot and killed by snipers in the area.

"That, of course, was the low point of my career, " Weeks said.

"You patrol as a dove," Weeks said about working in Northern Ireland, "but you have to be ready to turn into a hawk instantly." Weeks has since served 11 operation tours in Northern Ireland.

His main reason for serving in the military, Weeks said, was because he couldn't see himself sitting at a desk, at the same place, doing the same work, for the rest of his life.

His father was a career member of the military. He was a member of the British Parachute Regiment for 32 years and retired as a colonel. Weeks attended a boarding school in Berkshire County outside London called Wellington College.

After graduation, Weeks said he had "no clue" about what he wanted to do with his life.

"I bummed around for about a year," he said. He did odd jobs for film companies and drove Rolls Royces as a chauffeur during the year following graduation.

In 1972, at the age of 21, he entered the military academy and two years later was a brand new second lieutenant.

Now, 20 years after graduating from the academy, Weeks said he tells young officers that "command is a privilege.

"As long as you remember that command is a privilege, not a right; and you earn respect — you don't demand it, everything else will be fine."

He was going to school at the Commanders Battle Course School in 1973 as part of the 3rd Battalion, the Light Infantry, when he met his wife, Caroline. They met in a pub in England in 1975. She is here in the States with him for the first time, Weeks said. He said she loves being in the States. "She thinks this is brilliant."

Weeks said Caroline would like to work while in the States, but getting a permit to work is a bit of a hassle. He also said she'd like to see as much of the country and meet as many people as possible. "That should keep her busy," Weeks said.

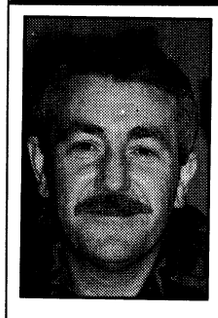
Weeks also has three children who will visit the States during vacations from school in England. The oldest is Ben, 18, then Gemma, 15, and Tom, 10. They all can't wait to come to the states, Weeks said. He said Tom has had his bags packed for three months in anticipation of coming overseas.

Gemma, Weeks said, is an aspiring actress and can't wait to come over to Hollywood. "She thinks the whole country is Hollywood," he said.

On the bookshelf directly in front of him, Weeks has pictures of his family. Pictures of people and units he has served with hang on his office walls. To the left of his desk and behind his chair is a framed picture of Queen Elizabeth II and Prince Phillip. He also has a picture of the rugby team he played for while attending the Command and Staff College.

He once played army-level rugby, but now enjoys a less physically brutal game — golf.

When he's not marching down the fairway of a golf course, you can find Weeks jogging or fly fishing with his son Tom.



"It's got to be the purest form of fishing," Weeks said. "To catch the big trout, you have to use all your skills," he said.

Weeks said the best places to catch trout are normally beautiful places. "Therefore you have complete relaxation."

But when it's time to get back to work, Weeks doesn't mind at all.

"Since the day I started work (in the military), I've always looked forward to coming to work on Monday," Weeks said. "The day that I get up on a Monday and don't feel like coming to work is the day I'll leave the army."

ACAP offers ways to ease transition

By Elsie Jackson
Army Career and Alumni Program

What is the Army Career and Alumni Program? For too many soldiers, it's just another station to clear on the way toward civilian life.

However, all service members who are leaving active duty must go through some form of transition services because it's the law.

At Fort Benning, transition services are commonly referred to as ACAP, an acronym for Army Career and Alumni Program. For soldiers separating at Fort Benning, ACAP is a three-part process.

Counseling session

Part one of ACAP is a one-on-one counseling session with an ACAP transition services specialist who is sometimes called an ACAP Counselor.

During your counseling session, you and your counselor will prepare a preseparation counseling checklist. This checklist will eventually become a part of your permanent file. You will need a copy of this checklist to clear Fort Benning, regardless of the circumstances of your separation.

Your counselor will also prepare an individual transition plan for you. The plan consists of referral sheets to agencies, including Job Assistance Center, Finance, Transportation, Reserve Components, which have services available to you and your family as you transition.

An ITP may have as few as one or two, or as many as a a dozen referral sheets. The referral sheets are not mandatory appointments and the appointments are set by you at your convenience. Additionally, you may request information sheets detailing states' veterans' benefits, verification of military experience and training, temporary early retirement authority, public and community service and pay and bonus estimates.

Except for retirees, all ACAP appointments are made through your personnel action center. Retirees can make their own ACAP appointments once they have applied for retirement.

If you are being separated because of legal action, you should still go through your personnel administration center for an appointment. Walk-ins for individual counseling sessions are seen on an emergency basis only. To be considered an emergency, you must have clearing papers in hand.

Both the three-day workshop and the one-on-one counseling session should take place about six months from your separation date. The "separation minus six-months" milestone is of special significance to early (15-year) retirees because of the requirements for public and community service registration. A 20-year retiree can start the transition process six to 12 months from his or her actual retirement date.

If you will be taking 60 days of terminal leave, (or 60 days of terminal leave combined with permissive temporary duty, you may want to see if you can get an appointment based on when your terminal leave starts instead of your actual separation date. .

Three-day workshop

Part two at ACAP is spread over a three-day workshop.

Conducted weekly in Infantry Hall, the workshop covers military subjects (required by Army Regulation 635-10), a block of instruction on veterans' benefits, and job search skills training.

One workshop each month is devoted to retirees. By the way, you are encouraged to wear civilian clothes when you attend the three-day workshop. You may wear civilian clothes to your one-on-one session with your ACAP counselor if it will not interfere with your regular duties before and after your session.

Clearing process

ACAP part three is a quick stop at Building 2617 as part of your clearing process.

ACAP services do not end when you leave the ACAP classroom or offices. You are entitled to transition services, which includes the Job Assistance Center, for up to 120 days past your separation date.

For more information about ACAP, or to schedule an appointment, call 545-4892 or 545-4913.

profile in excellence

Name: Spc. Anastacia E. Morecraft

Position: Better Opportunities for Single Soldiers Program representative

Military Occupational Specialty: 51T10, technical engineer specialist

Unit: Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 36th Engineer Group

Job Title: Drafter/surveyor

Years on the job: 18 months

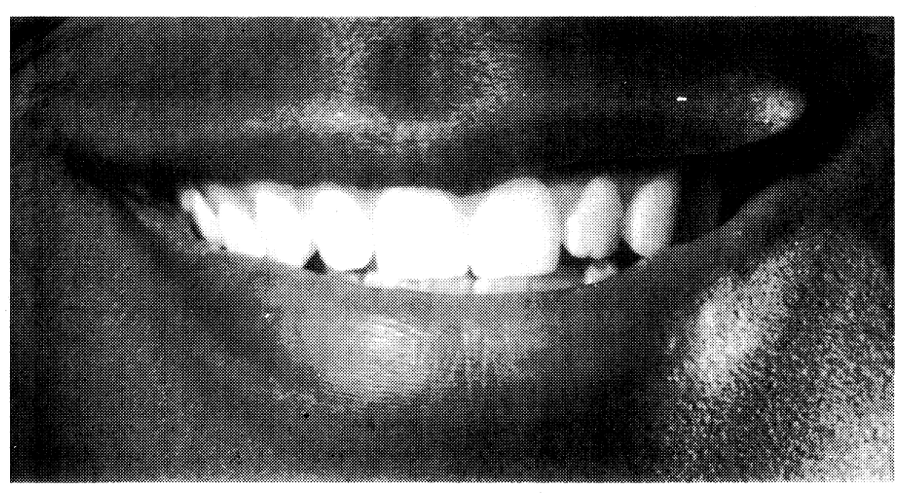
Hometown: Paris, Illinois

What were your reasons for joining the Army?
I joined the Army for work experience.

What were your reasons for choosing your MOS?
I studied landscape architecture at the University of Illinois before enlisting. I chose drafting because it coincided with my educational background and it is something that I enjoy doing.

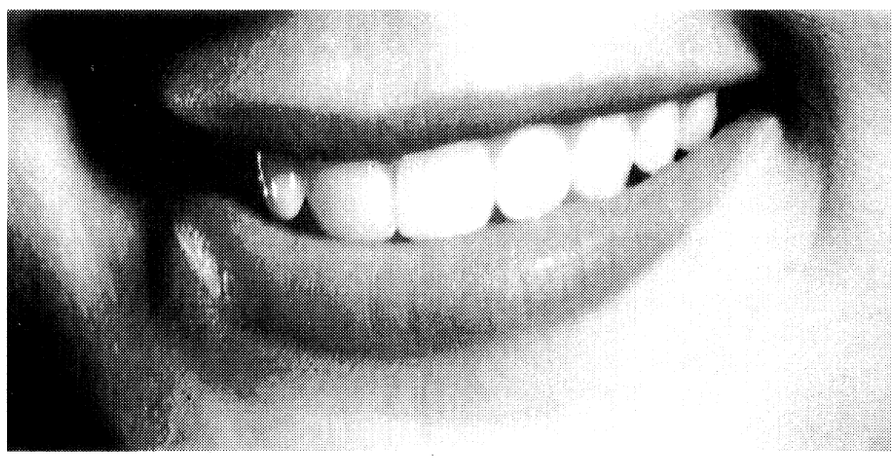
What person has most influenced your military career?
Sgt. Lorne Johnson, HHC, 36th Engineer Group, keeps me focused and continually gives me guidance in my career.

If you were the sergeant major of the Army for a day, what improvements would you make?
If I were the sergeant major of the Army for a day, I would ensure that all single soldiers enjoy the same privileges and amenities that are allowed to married soldiers. The military needs to realize that even though most single soldiers reside in barracks, that that is our home and we need to be allowed the same freedoms in our living areas.



What do you think about the BOSS program and why is it important?
I believe that the BOSS program is an excellent instrument for improvement and has wonderful potential. In order for the program to operate successfully, soldiers need to start utilizing the program's amenities. Without the BOSS program, the single soldiers' needs and concerns would not have the consideration that they now receive.

What have you accomplished as the BOSS representative for your unit?
I believe that I have established a good relationship between the BOSS program and the chain of command here in 36th Group. I attempt to ensure that all soldiers are continually informed about events, facilities and the status of concerns. I constantly try to create a positive image for the program.



How can someone get involved in the BOSS program?
Become interested! Soldiers need to become interested. They need to attend a BOSS meeting or function to discover what the program is truly all about. The program has many amenities; and, without becoming involved, soldiers will never know what we can offer them.

BOSS in the 36th Engineer Group:
The BOSS program has an important role in group with the whole barracks renewal plan that is now under construction. The command has sought the single soldiers' opinion in the designing of the new living quarters as well as ideas for the renovation of the existing barracks. The soldiers opinions have been sought for room furnishings and amenities. BOSS is very well received by the chain of command in group and I always have full support.

CARBON MONOXIDE: Detectors available

Office has purchased a hand-held carbon monoxide testing device, which can immediately detect the presence of the gas.

"Fort Benning has been very proactive with regard to carbon monoxide education," said Richard Townsend, industrial hygiene manager on post.

"We want residents to be aware of it," he said.

Residents who experience symptoms such as headaches, nausea and dizziness that disappear when they go outside can call the housing engineer at 545-8323 for an inspection during regular office hours.

"If you think you have an emergency leak, you should call the fire department," Hankins said.

As a source of fuel, Fort Benning uses natural gas, which does not contain carbon monoxide. However, incomplete combustion of natural gas can produce carbon monoxide vapors, according to "Industrial Toxicology."

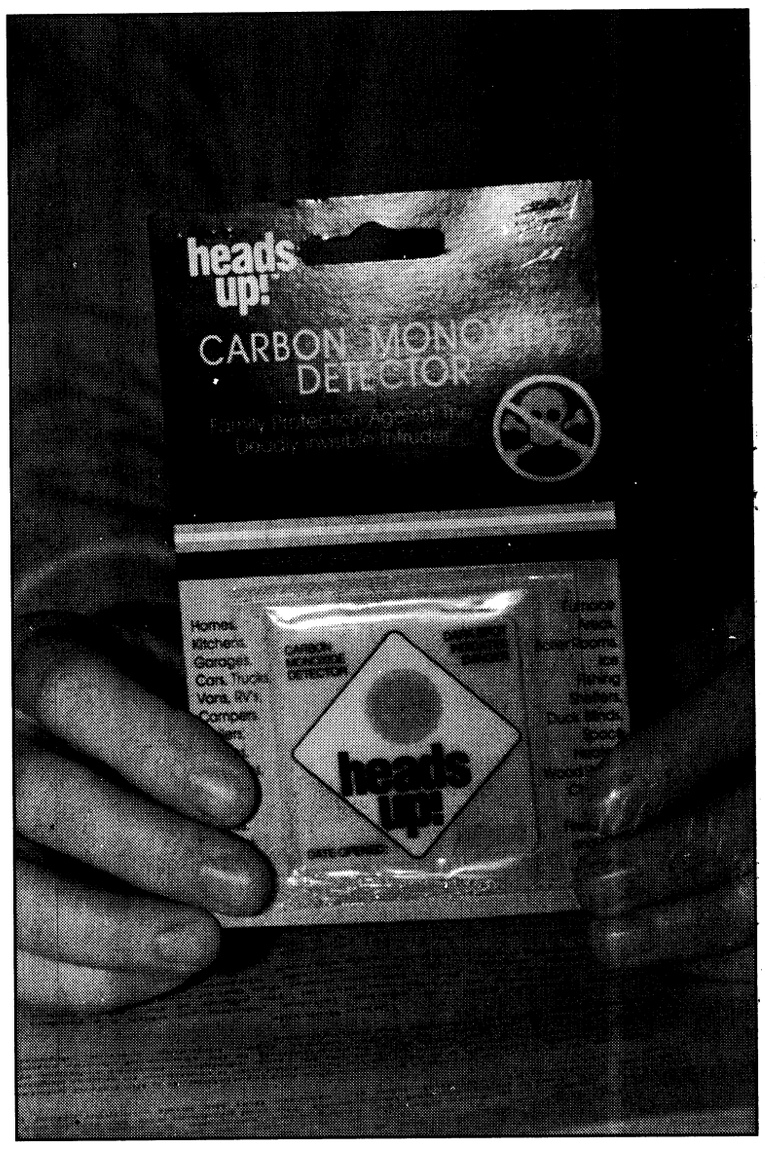
Carbon monoxide is a naturally occurring gas produced from the oceans, forest and grass fires, electrical storms, marsh gases and the natural seasonal changes in autumn.

Man-made sources of carbon monoxide account for about 10 percent of the total in the atmosphere; of the man-made sources, the majority comes from automobile exhausts with other sources being space and water heaters, furnaces, industrial processing, coal mining and solid waste disposal methods.

Mild symptoms begin to appear when there is as little as .05 percent concentration of carbon monoxide in the air, according to "Principles of Internal Medicine." After exposure of one hour to concentrations of .1 percent, there is danger of unconsciousness, coma and possible death.

Levels of carbon monoxide in the blood are detectible in persons who work as firefighters, traffic police, garage mechanics, cooks and some painters, according to literature on carbon monoxide. Cigarette smoking can also contribute to carbon monoxide levels. Treatment for carbon monoxide poisoning is oxygen therapy, and exposure to fresh air reverses the effects of mild carbon monoxide exposure.

Each year, exposure in the home results in a host of symptoms from mild to severe, according to the Consumer Product Safety Commission. The organization reports more than 200 deaths per year directly related to the use of combustion appliances in the home.



Total deaths from carbon monoxide poisoning, including accidental exposure and suicides, are about 3,800, according to the Mayo Clinic.

The presence of the gas in the body is commonly called carbon monoxide poisoning even though, medically speaking, it is an asphyxiant since it robs the blood of needed oxygen, according to medical literature.

Symptoms are as follows: headaches, nausea, ringing in the ears, dizziness and weariness. Long-term repercussions from high levels of the gas can include learning disabilities, memory loss, brain damage and coma.

CARBON MONOXIDE SAFETY

- Install a carbon monoxide detector according to label directions. The detectors are available to post residents at the Self-Help Store on Vibbert Avenue.
- Change air circulation filters each month; if you don't know the size, bring the old filter with you to the Self-Help Store.
- Check the flue on the water heater. If you see rust, call in a work order for a new one.
- Never use a charcoal grill indoors. The fumes use up oxygen in the home and create carbon monoxide.
- Residents who have fireplaces should make sure there are no blockages such as bird's nests and make sure flues are open when using the fireplaces.
- Don't put anything in the furnace room or block the air return vent in the home; poor circulation can contribute to a problem.
- Cooking stoves should show a blue flame, an indicator that the combustion is efficient and carbon monoxide levels are safe.

Jerrie Macintire/Special to The Bayonet

Carbon monoxide detectors are available to residents of the 4,082 post quarters. The detectors feature a sensor that darkens when exposed to carbon monoxide.

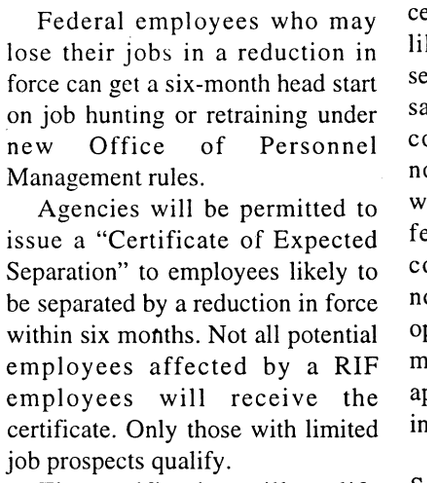
Employees can get job help

American Forces Information Service

Federal employees who may lose their jobs in a reduction in force can get a six-month head start on job hunting or retraining under new Office of Personnel Management rules.

Agencies will be permitted to issue a "Certificate of Expected Separation" to employees likely to be separated by a reduction in force within six months. Not all potential employees affected by a RIF employees will receive the certificate. Only those with limited job prospects qualify.

The certification will qualify employees for advanced registration in retraining or placement assistance programs such as the Department of Defense's Priority Placement Program and OPM's Interagency Placement Program.



It will also provide the opportunity to receive counseling, testing and other support. Through the Job Training Partnership Act, the U.S. Department of Labor provides funding for various types of retraining and readjustment assistance to displaced workers, such as counseling, testing, placement assistance and other activities.

Agencies will issue the certificates only if there is a good likelihood the employee will be separated by a reduction in force, if same or similar jobs in the local commuting area are limited or nonexistent, and if suitable jobs with the employee's own or other federal agencies in the local commuting area are limited or nonexistent. Also, if eligible for optional retirement, the employee must not have filed a retirement application or otherwise indicated in writing an intent to retire.

The Certification of Expected Separation is not a RIF notice. Agencies must still issue the notices at least 60 days before the effective date of the RIF. The notice must explain the reason for the action, employee retention rights and other relevant information.

DoD already has a policy of sending the certificates when a RIF is probable. DoD officials said giving other federal employees the same assistance is a positive move.

Employees can download sample certification letters from the RIF/Downsizing forum of OPM's Main Street electronic bulletin board on (202) 606-4800.

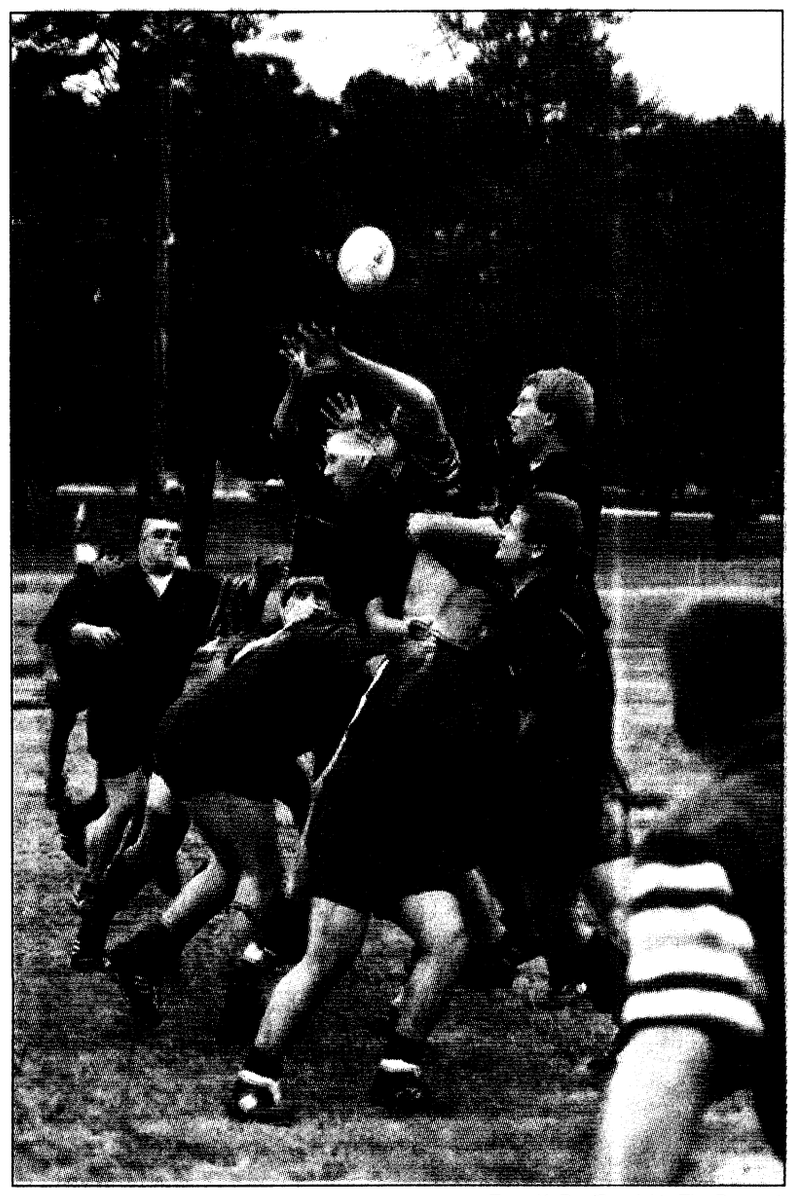
Cruise-matics get sloppy, let Renegades run wild



Rugby team suffers muddy loss, 62-5

Cruise-matics eight man Kevin Hyneman (center) gets pulled away from the ball on a Cruise-matic line out.

The Renegades were running wild in Columbus Saturday. The Columbus Fort Benning Rugby Football Club Cruise-matics hosted the Atlanta Rugby Football Club Renegades and were promptly dispatched 62-5 Saturday afternoon at Lakebottom Park.

With legal restrictions denying the Cruise-matics from playing on Stilwell Field at Fort Benning, the ever-flooded field at Lakebottom (hence the name) Park would be the site of the massacre.

The Renegades opened the flood gates early with a try by inside center Greg Williams for a 5-0 lead. Moments later, winger Rob Gotlick scored his first try of the day giving the Renegades a 10-0 lead with barely 10 minutes gone by in the half.

The Renegades scored again when wing forward Tom Kircher touched the ball down after the Renegades pushed the scrum across the touch line. Rob Holcombe converted the kick for a 17-0 lead.

Williams got his second try of the day off a 22-meter scrum and one pass from scrum half Alex Ortiz. Williams raced around the left side and found daylight to the try zone and a 22-0 advantage.

Fly half Patrice Le Tape added to the ever growing list with a try of his own late in the half. Holcombe added the conversion giving the Renegades a 29-0 lead going into halftime.

The second half would fare no better for the Cruise-matics who were playing without the skills of two of their starting side due to rules violations last weekend in the 0-0 tie with Florida State University.

"With this being the first match for at least six of our players and not having Tim Butterfield or Joe Hyder to lend their experience to the new guys, we just couldn't get any kind of rhythm," said wing forward Darren Monaco. "I don't want to say the field had anything to do with it; but, if we had been at Stilwell Field where we have played for the past three years, it would not have been quite as sloppy."

And sloppy it would be, for the second half started the same as the first. With the Cruise-matics moving the ball to midfield, eight man Kevin Hyneman got pinned inside and attempted to pitch to the outside man; however Williams stepped inside picked off the pass and was off to the races for the hat trick. Holcombe converted and the Renegades were up 36-0.

Gotlick earned his own hat trick with back-to-back tries. Holcombe converted one-of-two kicks giving the Renegades an insurmountable lead at 55-0.

The Cruise-matics, playing for pride by this time, avoided the shutout when Le Tape was tackled and stripped of the ball in the Cruise-matic try zone. Monaco touched the ball down for a 55-5 deficit.

The Renegades would have the last say in the game when Holcombe tacked on the final try of the afternoon along with the conversion for a 62-5 finish.

The Cruise-matics will hit the road with a Mardi Gras tournament in Mobile, Ala., Saturday and then a match with the Montgomery Rugby Football Club in Montgomery, Ala., before returning for a match with Fort Rucker, Ala., at Columbus College March 4.

Stars nip Tigers 14-10; record now 3-0

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet©

The Columbus Stars improved their record to 3-0 with a 14-10 win against the defending league champion St. Augustine, Fla., Tigers Saturday night at Garrett Stadium.

With the win, the Stars gained control of the Northern Division sending the Tigers home with their first loss of the season.

"This is a very well coached team," said Tiger head coach Jerry Easton. "Coach Tom Staton has done a very fine job of getting this team ready to play. I don't like to talk about the officiating but the no call on the interception (Terrence Perry's game winning touchdown late in the third quarter) really hurt. The tape will show that the ball skipped off the ground into the defenders hands. It should not have been an interception, much less a touchdown."

But a touchdown it was, and the score stood.

The Stars tried very hard to give the game away, turning the ball over seven times (five fumbles and two interceptions). But the defense would have none of it taking the ball away from the Tigers on four different drives (three interceptions and one fumble).

The Tigers opened the scoring on a turnover. Tiger cornerback Rodney Lovett picked up Stars' quarterback Eddie Mitchell's fumble at the Stars 42-yard line and streaked untouched into the end zone for the touchdown. Kicker Shawn Lacy tacked on the conversion for the 7-0 lead at the 8:43 mark of the first quarter.

A 30-yard touchdown run by Mitchell late in the first quarter would have tied the game, but a penalty on the offense nullified the score keeping the Tigers in the lead for most of the first half.

Late in the first quarter, the Stars went on the offensive after linebacker Kevin Jordan set the Stars up with excellent field position with a 24-yard interception return down to the Tiger 11-yard line. With 23 seconds left in the first quarter, Mitchell scored from 5 yards out on an option play to the left side. Scott Alaloff added the conversion for the 7-7 tie.

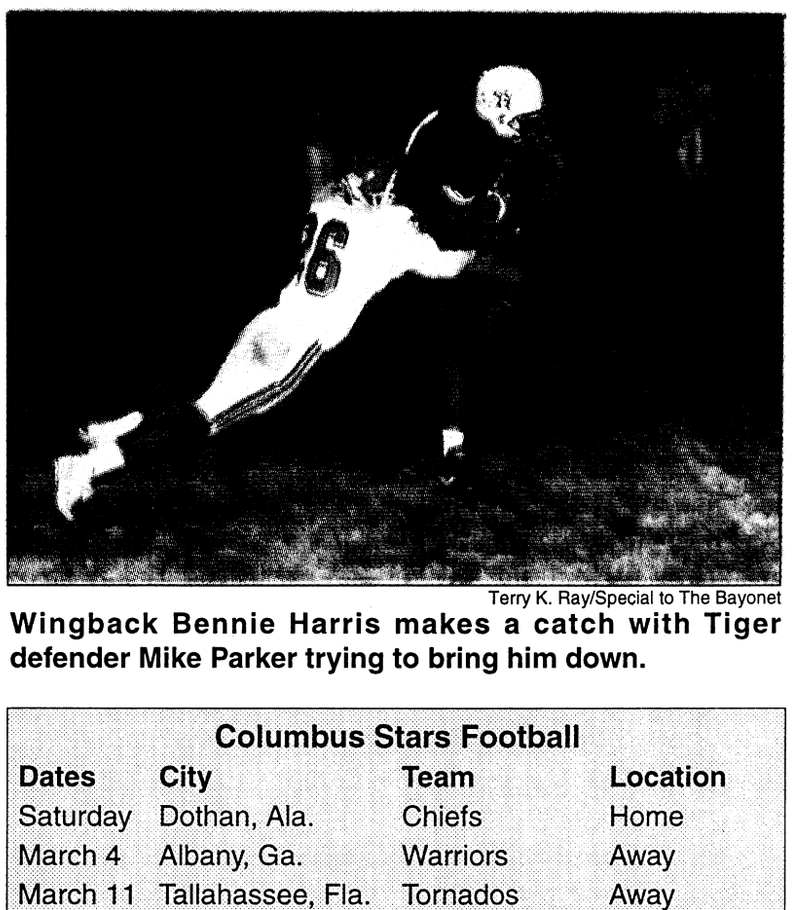
A fumble by sure-handed fullback Jamon Smith set the Tigers up at the Stars' 29-yard line with 5:50 left to go in the second quarter. The Stars' defense once again rose to the occasion and stuffed the Tigers on three straight plays. A 22-yard field goal by Lacy gave the Tigers their last lead of the night at 10-7 with less than three minutes to play in the half.

In the second half, both defenses would keep the game in the middle of the field with neither team able to move the ball inside the other's 20-yard line.

"Our offensive line opened some gaping holes for the backs to run through, and in the process of fighting for the extra yard we lost the ball," said Staton. "I'm really proud of this team. We've got some bugs to work out, but we'll be all right."

The Stars took the lead for the first time when Perry picked off a poorly thrown pass into the flat by Tiger quarterback Lee Bass and raced to the end zone for the touchdown. Alaloff tacked on the conversion for the 14-10 lead.

The defense, led by linebacker Thomas Bryant (five tackles, two assist and two sacks), would nail down the win when cornerback Noah McClinton (HHC, 36th Eng. Grp.) drilled wide receiver Terry Jones into the ground at the Stars 10-yard line with no time left on the game clock.



The Stars outgained the Tigers in total yardage 258 to 213. 203 yards coming on the ground with Albert Tate (Co. D, 2nd Bn., 18th Inf. Regt., 3rd Bde., 24th Inf. Div.) carrying the load (14 carries, 87 yards). Jeff McCarrie (HHC, 1st Bn., 18th Inf. Regt., 3rd Bde., 24th Inf. Div.) who came on for Mitchell in the second quarter finished the game (4 for 10 for 46 yards and one interception).

"This was a big win for us," McCarrie said. "It's the biggest win I've had since I've been playing, (4-0 counting the exhibition game). The offensive line was phenomenal. I made a mistake on the one drive with the interception — the route was open, it was just a bad throw. We turned the ball over way too much; we can't have that. To come away with a win against a team like this is a good feeling."

The offensive line, led by Larry Walker (586th Eng. Co.), Larry Calhoun and Sean McEndree, used their speed and quickness to keep the Tiger line turned away from the play until the back was through the hole and headed upfield.

"They were the champions last year," Walker said. "This game meant a lot to us, we just wanted to get the momentum and open up all the holes. The defense they were playing (is the one) we went over in practice and it paid off."

Next up for the Stars will be the Dothan Chiefs from Dothan, Ala., Saturday night at Garrett Stadium. Kickoff is set for 7 p.m.

SOA waits for day to come

By Judith Ginder
School of the Americas

Can you guys ever win a game?

The School of the Americas basketball team lost to the Ranger Training Brigade Feb. 16, 68-42.

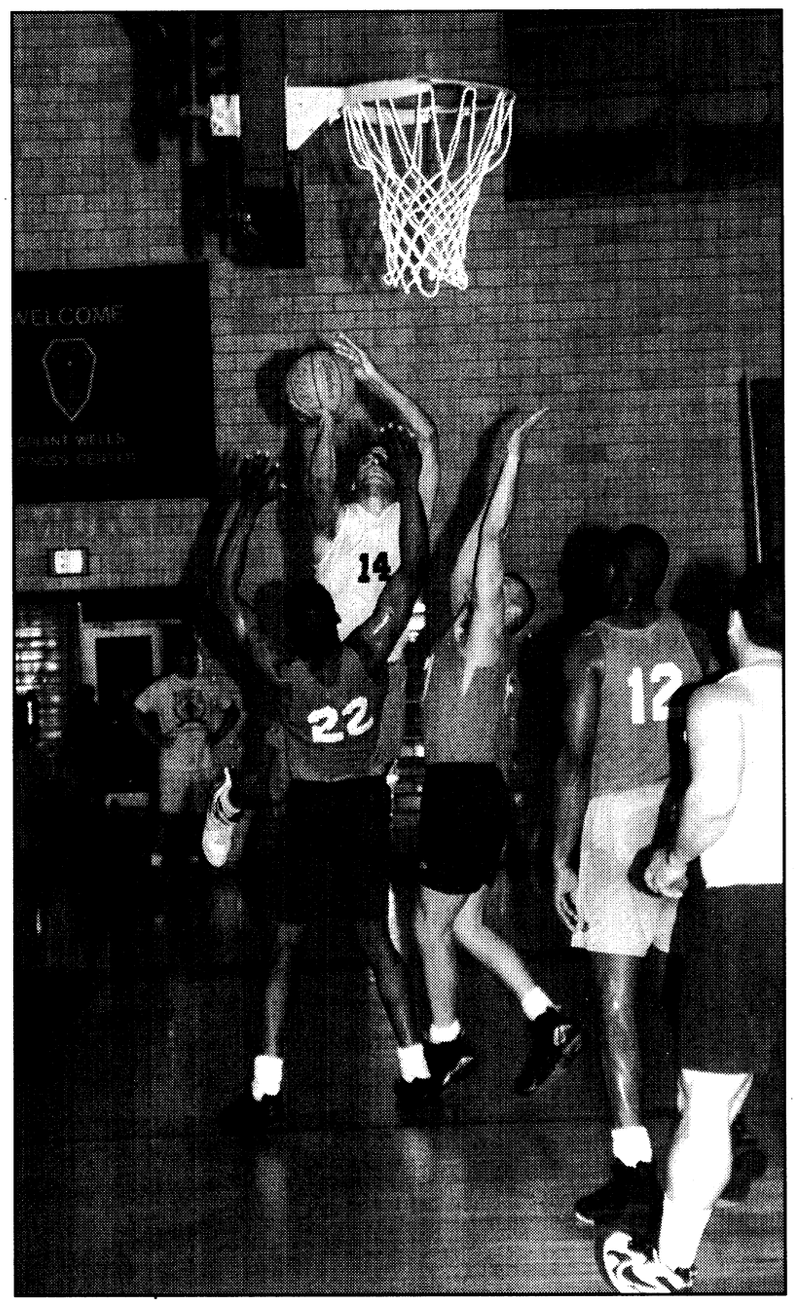
The team, coached by Ricardo Lynton, has a 0-7 record for the season.

commentary

As the second half of the basketball season gets under way, the School of the Americas basketball team has yet to win a single game.

But the SOA team tried to bring home a win against the Rangers. Early in the first half, SOA led 10-8.

That, however, was the last time the team had the lead. By the time the first half ended, RTB was up by 13 points.



Although a good effort was given by all of the players, it just wasn't enough to hold off RTB, Lynton said.

"I know we can win; we can do it if we just concentrate on the game at hand," Lynton said "All it takes is a little heart, and I know we have that."

They definitely give it their all. While watching the team play, a member of another team who has already played and beaten SOA, said, "Although the team never wins, they just don't give up."

Can you guys ever win a game? Somehow, someway, these guys will.

They have what it takes; their day just hasn't come yet.

BASS club hosts winter tourney

By Stephen Ward
BASS Club

Though winter is not thought to be the best time of year for bass fishing, the Fort Benning Bass Anglers Sportsman Society Club conducted its monthly tournament at Lake Harding Jan. 15.

The anglers fished under partly cloudy skies with a slight wind later in the day. Water temperature of 52 to 53 degrees meant the bass had to be fished slowly. With the storm front that passed through the local area the day before, water clarity diminished to 18 inches at the best areas.

The results of the tournament were:

First place: David Moore with five fish for a total of 12 pounds 12 ounces

Second place: Miguel Aviles with five fish for a total of 12 pounds 2 ounces

Third place: George Mendez with four fish for a total of 8 pounds 12 ounces.

The big bass of the day was caught by David Moore on a Carolina-rigged Power Craw, pumpkinseed color. It was 7 pounds 15 ounces. It would have been more than 8 pounds, Moore said, but the fish lost a 3-ounce shiner into his livewell after being caught.

The Fort Benning BASS Club in open to membership to all armed forces members, retirees and family members. Membership is also open to various Department of Defense civilians and their family members. Membership is also open to own a boat.

For more information about bass fishing, call Ward at 569-5705 or Moore at 298-5955.

TAKE A BITE OUT OF CRIME

Military Police Activity

This week's hot topic concerns vehicle theft. Latest statistics show that more than 1 million vehicles are stolen every year. As thieves get smarter, the recovery rate of stolen vehicles becomes lower. Make it hard for thieves and joy rider's by taking the following steps to protect yourself and your vehicle.

• Always lock your car and take your keys with you.

• Never use an identification tag on your key ring, this will only help a thief locate you or your car if you lose your keys.

• Take valuables and important papers with you. If you must leave packages or other articles in your car, cover them. For better security, lock them in the trunk.

• Try to park in well-lighted or busy areas, and always have your key ready when returning to your car.

• If you're in the market for a new car, ask the dealership about anti-theft options. Keep in mind many insurance companies offer reduced rates for vehicles equipped with security devices.

• As always, if your car is stolen report it immediately. Stolen vehicles are often used in the commission of other crimes. Quick action with accurate information could lead to the recovery of your vehicle and prevent its use in other illegal activities.

The following entries are from blotters from Feb. 8 to 14. Such entries may be incomplete and do not determine the guilt or innocence of any person.

• A civilian was charged with fraud and larceny of services when she received numerous medical treatments and various prescription drugs valued at approximately $1,500 from Martin Army Community Hospital. She was no longer authorized to receive medical treatment since she was divorced from her spouse.

• Three soldiers were charged by the Columbus Police Department for carrying concealed weapons and possession of an explosive device. An officer asked the soldiers for identification and noticed handguns. The soldiers were arrested and a further search revealed that in addition to the handguns they had a can of pepper spray, an 80,000-volt stun gun, numerous amounts of ammunition and a hand grenade simulator. All three soldiers were transported to the Muscogee County jail pending a Recorder's Court hearing.

• A private was charged with wrongful possession of marijuana. While the unit was conducting a health and welfare inspection, a plastic bag containing marijuana was found in an ice cream container along with a package of rolling papers. A test was conducted and the soldiers registered positive. The soldier was apprehended and transported to the Military Police station where he was processed and released to his unit.

Other activities include two cases of driving under the influence of alcohol, traffic accidents, 15 cases of larcenies, and four cases of shoplifting at the main exchange facilities.

Remember to help "Make Our Post the Best — Give Crime Arrest."

Report any activity that seems wrong or out of place to the military police at 545-5223 or 545-5224 or the "Crime in Progress" line at 545-5222.

Office of the Staff Judge Advocate

Q: W-2s arrived this year Jan. 31. I am short of money this year and should be due a refund of about $300, the amount I got back last year.

I see lots of ads offering a "quick tax refund" in just a few days. I know the Army offers tax help. Why can't you get the money in three or four days like the tax service?

A: The Army does offer a tax assistance service, which includes electronic filing of returns. It does not offer the "quick" tax refund. To understand why, you have to know how the system works.

First taxes are prepared, by a commercial preparer for a fee, or by the Tax Office at no charge. The return can be mailed in, or it can be filed electronically. If it is mailed in, it will take about eight weeks to receive the $300 refund.

To speed up the process, IRS allows electronic filing, which is the filing of returns using computer modem transmission.

A return filed electronically may be filed by a commercial preparer, generally for a fee, or by the Tax Office at no charge. It will take two to three weeks on average to receive your refund.

American free enterprise entered the picture by offering the refund anticipation loan. This is a loan: the bank agrees to loan a tax filer money, based upon the security of the tax refund check.

The bank and the tax preparer share a fee for this loan, and the tax filer signs over his tax refund in a power of attorney.

Most tax preparation services advertise all three of these services at once, although they are usually charged separately. A tax client comes in and is charged a fee for tax preparation.

If he or she desires to file electronically, he or she is again charged a fee in most cases.

If he or she wants to take out a refund anticipation loan, he or she will fill out a loan application and a power of attorney, and pay another fee charged for the use of the money.

The tax preparer electronically files the return and gives the client his or her refund, less the amount of the charges in about three days. He then waits two or three weeks until the IRS sends a refund.

This is a legal process, based upon the desire of the client to get his or her money in a hurry.

However, what are you really paying for, and is it worth it to you? In most cases, the answer is no.

First, what will you pay? The average cost for tax preparation, electronic filing and a refund anticipation loan is more than $100.

Second, how much time are you saving with this loan? The average time for a refund is between 12 and 21 days, so the loan is for nine to 18 days.

If you were expecting a $300 refund, that means that you will receive about $200 after the three-day wait.

This charge is one-third of the refund, so it seems as if you are paying a rate of 33 percent interest to get the money.

However, because you are only borrowing the money for about 21 days, the annual effective rate of interest is more than 500 percent. Most of us would pass up a loan that had that kind of interest.

The Army does not offer the refund anticipation loan, but it does offer tax preparation and electric filing at no cost to identification cardholders.

Using the Tax Office, you wait 21 days to get the entire $300 refund in the example above.

If you are willing to wait for your money, the Fort Benning Tax Office is located at Building 2640, Soldiers' Plaza.

Hours of operation are 8:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday through Friday, until April 17, the last day to file taxes this year.

Black history

students told to 'live the dream'

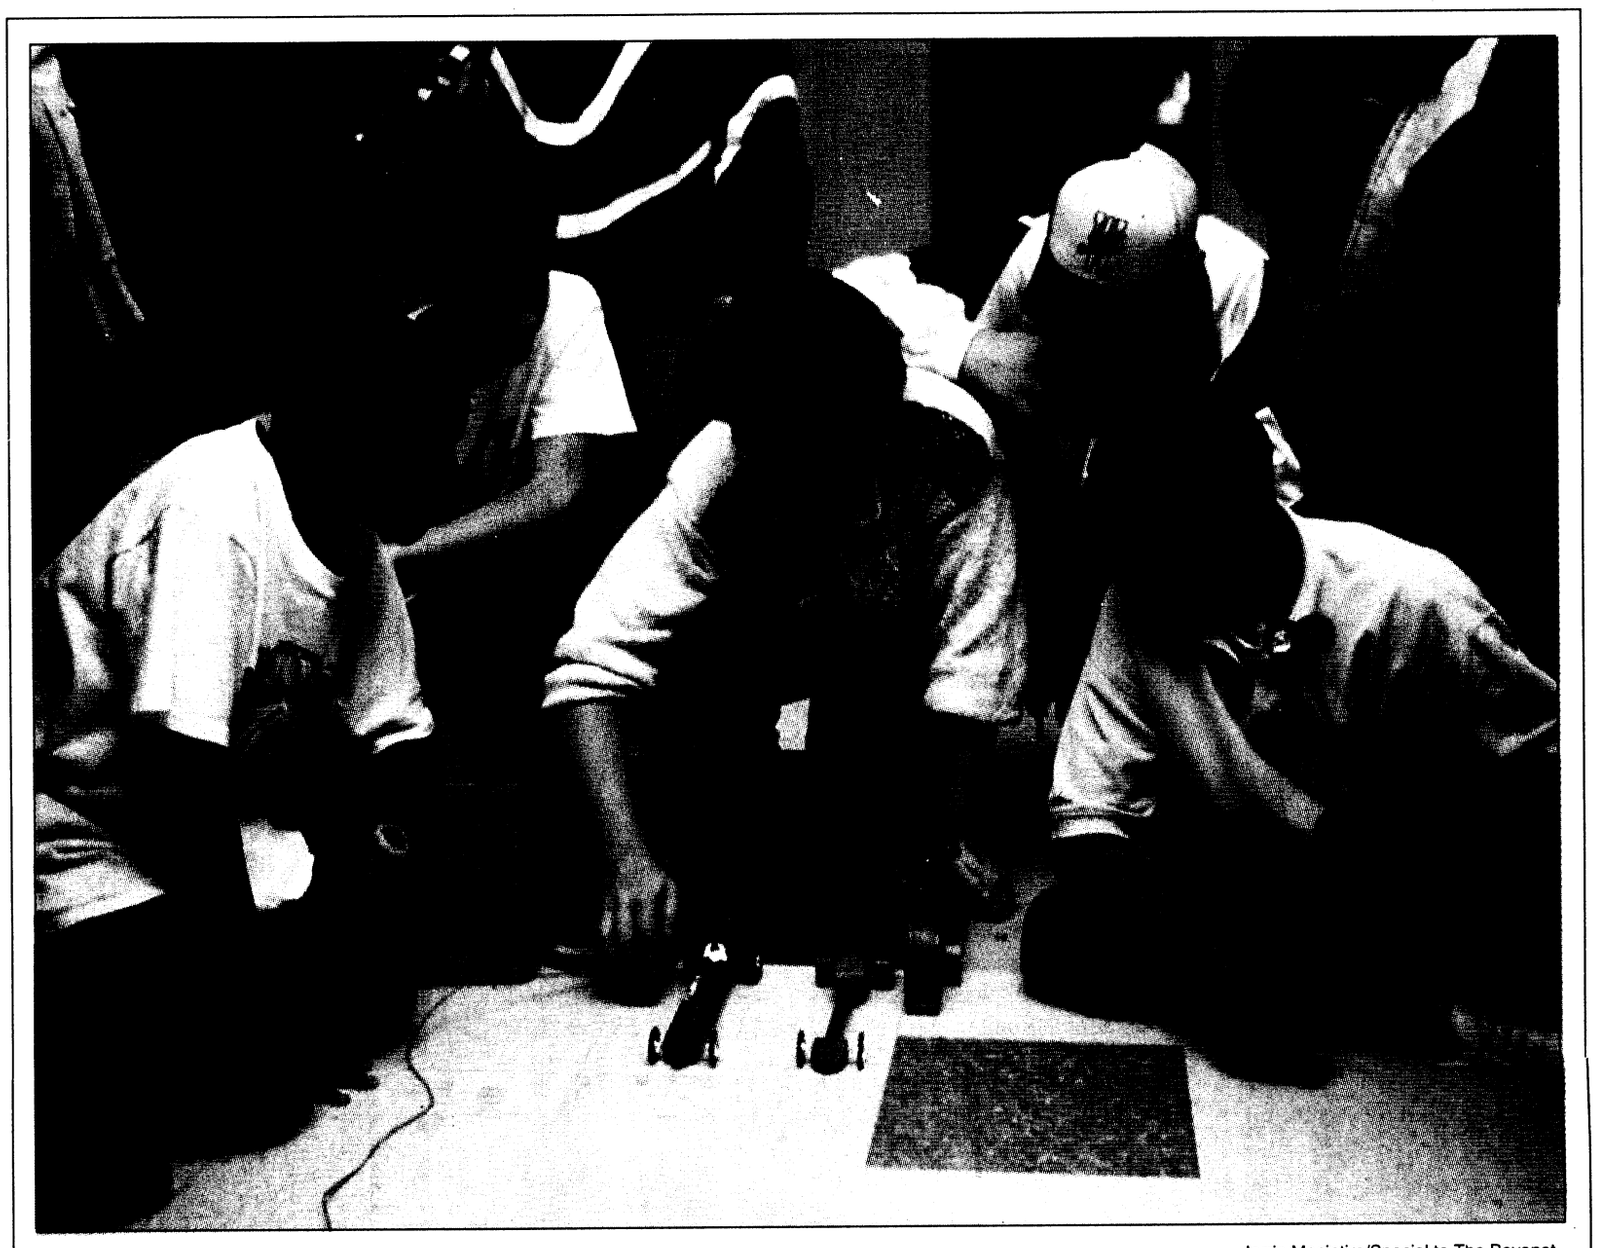
By Jerrie Macintire
Special to The Bayonet©

Holding fast to Martin Luther King's visionary ideas, Faith School students and guest speakers provided insight on "Living the Dream" Feb. 16 in observance of Black History Month.

Using King's famous "I have a Dream" speech as a starting point, speakers discussed ways to bring dreams into reality at the student-focused presentation featuring keynote speaker Spurgeon Glenn, office manager for the Columbus District Attorney's Office.

Encouraging students to "hold fast to your dreams," Glenn said, when dreams cease, "life is like a barren field."

Citing some famous dreamers who made their fantasies into realities, Glenn encouraged students to fulfill their potentials.



"If because of prejudice, people don't reach their potential, the world is less. We all lose," Glenn said.

King, who had first-hand knowledge of prejudice, fought prejudice and hate with love as his guide and "that love continues today," he said.

Glenn's speech was one portion of the celebration, which included recitations, choral, vocal and instrumental music, essays and presentations highlighting Black History Month.

Also as part of Black History Month, the Faith Multi-cultural Club presented "Reflections on 1895: W.E.B. DuBois, Frederick Douglass and Booker T. Washington" to personnel at Martin Army Community Hospital.

The school also displayed a variety of hallway decorations including a floor to ceiling mural using mosaic designs, which heavily symbolized the progression of black Americans through time.

VA offering scholarships

Department of Veterans Affairs

The Department of Veterans Affairs is announcing the availability of scholarships to nursing, nurse anesthesia and occupational, physical and respiratory therapy students for the 1995-96 school year.

This year, for the first time, physician assistant students at the baccalaureate and master's level also may apply for the awards.

Awards are intended for students in the final year of an associate degree in nursing or respiratory therapy, or the final two years of a baccalaureate or master's degree in a nursing, occupational, physical and respiratory therapy or physician assistant program.

Recipients receive tuition, educational expenses and a monthly stipend of $767. In exchange, participants agree to serve as a full-time professional in a VA health facility for a period of two years.

The program, instituted in 1982 to provide VA with adequate numbers of health-care professionals, has granted more than 4,000 student scholarship awards.

Approximately half of the award winners are employed by VA, many in significant clinical leadership positions.

Requests for applications may be made Wednesday through May 19 by calling (202) 535-7528. Requests received before or after these dates cannot be processed.

EFMP plans education forum

Army Community Service

The next Exception Family Member Program Education Forum is scheduled for March 16. This meeting will feature the following programs and services:

- Linda Jones: Therapeutic Recreation Division of the Columbus Parks and Recreation Department.
- Donna Smith: Social Security Administration office.

Following each presentation will be a question-and-answer session and an opportunity to exchange input on program needs, what programs need change, and state concerns on issues or procedures.

The next meeting is March 16 at the Family Unit Network Center, Building 359, 11:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. For more information or to register, call Frances Howard or Mark Mills at 545-6969, 545-3344 or 545-516.

EFMP Resource Library

The EFMP Resource Library contains reference materials on specific special needs conditions/ disorders; therapeutic devices to assist and help improve skills; and recreational equipment for enjoyment.

Examples of therapeutic devices include the "Talking Pen," which helps children improve coordination skills, and a "Vision Exercise" video to help those who are visually impaired. In addition to those enrolled in EFMP, units that are planning picnics or outings in which special needs children are present can check out recreational equipment for use by all children.

Prize: $50 gift certificate
Eligibility: Open to all military and civilian and family members

Parents, sharpen your pencils. Kids, plug in your computers and load your graphics program.

The Fort Benning school system is sponsoring a logo contest to find a symbol to mesh with its motto; "The Fort Benning Schools ... an environment for creativity and excellence in learning."

The contest is open to all military and civilian personnel and their family members including school personnel and students, said Gail Wilson, director of staff development and coordinator of the competition.

Entries must be submitted by March 7 to the principal of the post school your child attends or to Wilson at the school administration building on Custer Road.
