Commissary spreads holiday cheer

Needy families receive gifts, shopping spree

By Shannon Day
Special to The Bayonet

In the spirit of the holiday season, the Fort Benning Commissary and several sponsors helped make Christmas brighter for 12 military families in need.

Dec. 20, each family was presented with a certificate for a $100 shopping spree at the Commissary and each child in the family was given a present, teddy bear, bag of fruit and snacks.

The families were chosen by Army Community Service based on need, according to Tom Jones, an ACS representative.

"We asked the sergeants major of the 12 major units at Fort Benning to submit the names of the neediest families," he said. "We chose 12 families from that list."

ACS then gave those names to the Commissary, according to Lillie Burns, grocery department manager at the Commissary.

With the help of Colgate-Palmolive, Kraft, Keebler, Tom's, Frito-Lay, South Eastern American Logistics Association and the Commissary produce department, gifts for the kids were bought and the shopping sprees were paid for, according to Burns.

"This is an annual event at the Commissary," Burns said. "We get really excited about it every year."

She said that usually the Commissary hosts a dinner for the families but because of store renovations they were unable to this year. They spent the extra money on the gifts for the children.

Watching is Lillie Burns (left), Commissary grocery department manager; Benjamin Wainwright, Commissary officer; and Tom Jones, an Army Community Service representative. The Commissary presented 12 families with a certificate for a $100 shopping spree.

Spc. Charlie Johnson, Headquarters, Headquarters Company, Noncommissioned Officers Academy, and his wife Kathy, said they were especially thankful for the help.

As parents of three children, the gifts and shopping spree made the holidays easier, Johnson said.

"I'm really grateful for it," he said. "It's helping us out a lot."

EO to sponsor program honoring MLK

By Lisa M. Hibbert
Bayonet staff writer

The Equal Opportunity Office will sponsor a commemorative service honoring Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. on Jan. 12 at 11 a.m. in Marshall Auditorium, Infantry Hall, Building 4.

The public is invited and is asked to be seated by 10:50 a.m. Admission is free.

The guest speaker will be Maj. Gen. Joe N. Ballard, chief of staff, U.S. Army Training and Doctrine Command.

Ballard earned his bachelor's degree in electrical engineering from Southern University A&M College and his master's degree in engineering management from the University of Missouri.

Other activities commemorating the King holiday will take place in downtown Columbus. They include:

YULETIDE ACTIVITIES

Events brighten soldiers' holidays

Basketball, football, bowling among season highlights

Nearly 50 post soldiers from various units, including seven about to be sent to Bosnia, attended the kickoff for Operation Holiday, the annual yuletide blitz that brings free sporting events and entertainment to Fort Benning soldiers who can't make it home for the holidays.

The ceremony was Dec. 22 at the Columbus Government Center.

Operation Holiday is sponsored by the Chattahoochee Valley Fort Benning chapter of the Association of the United States Army in conjunction with the Directorate of Community Activities and support from area individuals and organizations.

"It goes without saying that Fort Benning is tremendously important to this community," said Stephen Butler, AUSA president. "We don't have to think too hard to realize what our community would be like without Fort Benning."

Butler said this year's Operation Holiday is especially significant because of the deployment to Bosnia.

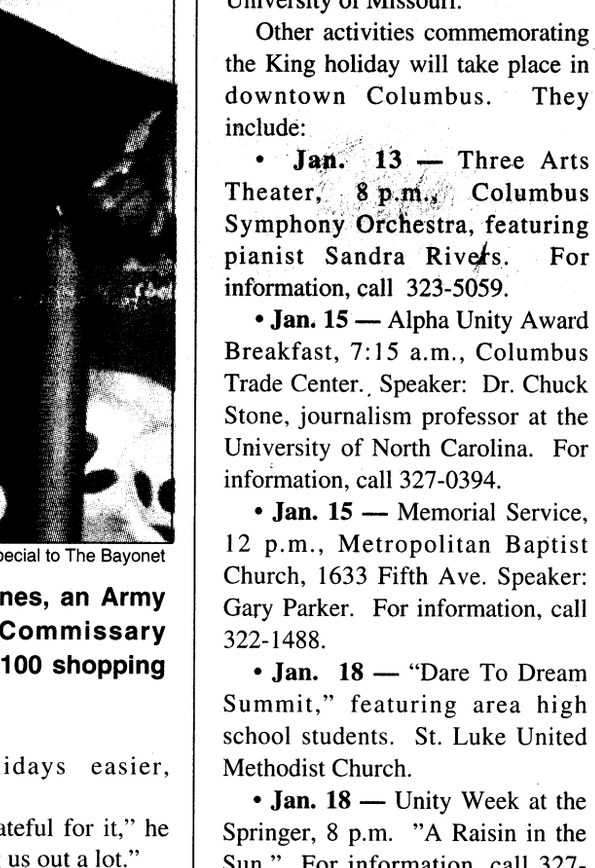
Miss Presidential Pathways Amy Swanson performs Christmas favorites for Fort Benning troops at the Operation Holiday kickoff.

"While many folks are home with family enjoying the Christmas holiday, there are many soldiers who are hard at work serving our country," Butler said. "Especially this year, with the deployment to Bosnia, we want to remember those soldiers who will not only be away from their families but also their country."



The ceremony also included remarks by Brig. Gen. Robert T. Clark, deputy commanding general of Fort Benning.

"This has become one of the most important events of the year, every year, for the soldiers and families of Fort Benning," said Clark.

Clark also spoke about Fort Benning's role in the deployment of personnel to Bosnia and praised U.S. soldiers for their willingness to serve their countries during a season noted for family togetherness.

While at the processing center earlier, Clark said he talked to a sergeant first class about to be deployed to Bosnia who had spent last Christmas in Haiti and the Defense secretary, other leaders outline U.S. plans for Bosnia

By Linda D. Kozaryn
American Forces Information Services

If peace is reached in Bosnia, the United States must contribute troops to help North Atlantic Treaty Organization maintain that peace, administration officials told the Senate Oct.17.

"The United States is the bedrock of NATO's strength and resolve," Secretary of State Warren Christopher said. "We can't say to our allies, 'We've come this far together, but now you're on your own.' " Defense Secretary William J. Perry and Army General John M. Shalikashvili, chairman of the Joints Chief of Staff, joined Christopher in testifying before the senate Armed Services Committee.

Committee members questioned the administration's plan to contribute up to 25,000 U.S. troops as part of a 60,000-man, NATO-led peace agreement is signed.

According to Christopher, the Bosnia government said it would not sign a peace agreement without a commitment by the United States and NATO to help keep the peace.

The presidents of Bosnia, Croatia and Serbia are scheduled to begin peace talks Oct. 31, in the United States, he said.

"There's no other institution capable of directing such a large complex military operation," Perry said.

The U.S. component of the force would consist of heavily armed, mechanized brigades, Perry said. Rules of engagement would be "robust," he said.

Unites States Army General George Joulwan, supreme allied commander Europe, will be the implementation force's overall commander, Perry said. Operational command will be held by U.S. Navy Adm. Leighton Smith, commander in chief, Allied Forces Southern Europe, he said.

According to Shalikashvili, U.S. participation is based on three essential conditions incorporated into NATO planning:

- NATO must be in charge.
- There must not be a dual-key arrangement, meaning the United Nations cannot override NATO military decisions.
- The force must have NATO rules of engagement that ensure it can protect itself and do the job.

Within hours of a decision by the president and NATO's North Atlantic Council, Shalikashvili said NATO will assume control of all military operations, and all dual-key arrangements will cease.

The U.S. deployment will involve sending a division of about 20,000 troops to Bosnia, with others providing air, naval and logistical support in surrounding areas, Shalikashvili said.

A reserve call-up of about 2,000 to 3,000 would likely be necessary, he said.

Troops to get special

By Linda D. Kozaryn
American Forces Information Services

U.S. service members will receive additional pay while in Bosnia Supporting the NATO peace implementation mission. Defense Finance and Accounting Service officials in Washington, D.C., said service members tapped for Bosnian duty will receive imminent danger pay, currently $150 per month.

Service members with families will also receive a family separation allowance of $75 a month, provided the separation is more than 30 days.

Besides imminent danger and family separation pay enlisted members also receive a "certain places duty," ranging from $8 to $22.50 per month.

This allowance is based on pay grade. Enlisted members above specialist and above warrant officers may also receive sea duty pay. Commissioned officers must have three years aboard ship to receive sea pay.

Finance officials said members are placed on field duty and upon deployment, they will temporarily lose their basic allowance for subsistence.

However; if the situation in Bosnia is stable enough that the task force commander places members on regular TDY, they'll reinstate subsistence payments.

During Operation Desert Storm, most deployed service members received tax exemption on their income after much of Southwest Asia was declared a combat zone.

Finance officials said Bosnia isn't considered a combat zone designation and all pay will remain taxable.

Deployment calls for duty to family, loved ones

By Hilda Burgos
36th Engineer Group

I watched a kneeling, weeping mother embrace her hurt and crying little boy as she tried to comfort him.

But as the last soldier marched up the steps into the mouth of that enormous C-5, it appeared that this young man was suddenly the strength that would hold his separated family together until the return of his father.

It's such a dilemma to stand tall and watch your fellow comrades board an aircraft to Tuzla.

There is disappointment that they are going and you are not. There is also a sense of relief for being left behind.

As soldiers, we are obligated to not only protect our country but to guard the life of each other.

Part of every soldier wants to go to war and do what he or she was trained to do, but a bigger part wants to stay home.

It hurts all of us to see American soldiers and families separated, deployed and subjected to the unknown hostilities of another country and people.

The truth that makes such a dilemma tolerable is knowing "soldiers take care of soldiers" and they will get the job done.

Capt. Hilda Burgos believes it is a soldier's duty to embrace deployed soldiers' families and loved ones.

commentary

One of the most important things to a soldier while away from his family and loved ones is knowing that someone is left back to take care, helping to keep hisor her family and home safe until his or her return.

Therefore for those of us left behind, it is our duty to embrace the family and loved ones of those deployed.

We must take care of all that is left behind to include family and work.

We are all one great big family with a common goal and objective — "Protect our home — America by protecting each other — Americans."

Editor's note: Burgos is a captain and is the signal officer for the 36th Engineer Group.

'Living the Dream: Let Freedom Ring'

Fort Benning will celebrate the anniversary of the birthday of the Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. Jan.12. This day is set aside to commemorate not only the memory of a great American, but also to remind us of the lasting influence that King has had on American society.

It is a time to reflect on the past and to rededicate ourselves to the future and to the principles for which King lived and died ... a dream of dignity for all.

The theme for this year's Dr. Martin Luther King's commemorative service is "On the King holiday, help somebody. Every American can make a difference."

In recognition of King's many lasting contributions to our great country, a commemorative service will be in Marshall Auditorium Jan. 12 at 11 a.m.

All members of Fort Benning and the surrounding community are encouraged to attend this service.

Services to control personnel readiness during Bosnia mission

By Stephen Barrett
American Forces Information Service

Although the peace implementation mission could keep U.S. tactical units in Bosnia Herzegovina for up to one year, the services will allow some individual transfers during deployment.

Speaking with the American Forces Network in Brussels, Belgium, Nov. 28, Defense Secretary William Perry said U.S. peacekeepers will not rotate duties with other U.S. or NATO elements. He said once the units enter Bosnia, they're there for the duration.

However, Perry did say individuals may rotate in and out of units. This will allow fresh troops to fill mission requirements and allow initially deployed soldiers to complete their overseas assignments.

DoD is allowing each service to set its own Bosnian peacekeeping personnel policy. Although DoD is watching how the services maintain that readiness, defense officials said there are no DoD plans to enact policy on what it considers a "service matter."

Army personnel face the largest Bosnian commitment. Of the 20,000 U.S. service members slated to deploy, most will come from Army elements stationed in Europe. About 13,000 are members of the 1st Armored Division, headquartered in Bad Krueznach, Germany.

To prepare soldiers for this task, U.S. Army, Europe, released personnel policy changes Nov. 8. According to officials, this policy will balance mission requirements, stabilize the command's fighting force and provide minimal disruption to soldiers' lives.

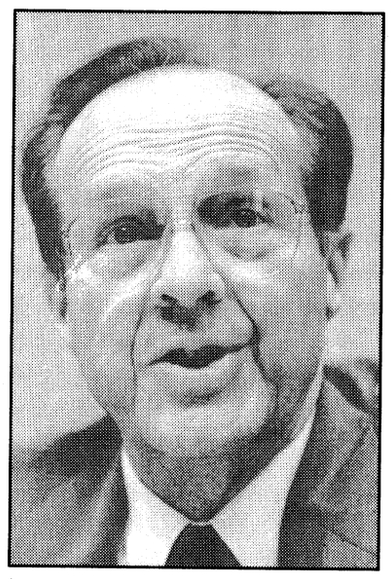
Under the guidance, most soldiers with between 31 and 120 days remaining on their overseas tours will receive a 90-day, involuntary tour extension. Those assigned with deploying units would deploy to Bosnia and support peacekeeping efforts.

As replacements arrive, service members approaching their adjusted reassignment dates would return to their home bases, outprocess and report to their next duty stations.

To further stabilize the units deploying, U.S. Army, Europe requested accelerated arrival dates for European-bound soldiers. Troops scheduled for February and March assignment will now arrive in January. Officials say plans for moving family members to Europe will follow as soon as possible.

Service members may also voluntarily extend or re-enlist to help their units maintain personnel readiness during deployment. However, soldiers on nominative or priority assignment may not extend for deployment duty.

Soldiers on orders for Korea, those leaving military service and those on nominative or priority assignments will leave on schedule. Soldiers with 30 days or less remaining on their European tours will not deploy.



Officers selected for Army-level schools, joint service assignments, unit command and advanced civilian schooling will transfer on schedule.

However, Army non-commissioned officers slated for basic and advanced NCO courses will see their courses deferred while deployed.

In making their personnel announcement early, officials said they prepared soldiers and families for the potential mission, preventing major surprises. They added all soldiers affected by these changes received notification by their commanders well in advance.

Although the Air Force will have 700 to 1,000 members deployed in the region, Air Force spokesman Maj. Chris Giesel said existing personnel policies will stand.

All service personnel deploying to Bosnia will go on temporary duty status. In doing this, soldiers currently receiving a subsistence allowance will keep that payment while deployed.

Perry

In addition, Defense Finance and Accounting Service officials in Washington said service members tapped for Bosnian duty will receive imminent danger pay, currently $150 per month. Service members with family members will also receive a family separation allowance of $75 a month, provided the separation is more than 30 days. Enlisted members also receive certain places pay, ranging from $8 to $22.50 per month; this allowance is based on pay grade.

Enlisted members E-4 and above and warrant officers may also receive sea duty pay. Commissioned officers must have three years aboard ship to receive sea pay.

Finance officials said Bosnia is not considered a combat zone for tax purposes, and therefore all pay will remain taxable.

Once established, deployed service members will also have free postal services. Weight restrictions apply, and mail is limited to cards, letters, videotape cassettes and packages less than 11 ounces. Family members sending mail may use the military postal service at no charge. Mail from stateside locations will require postage, and weight limits also apply.

Counseling services available

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet

Fort Benning's Civilian Counseling Services helps employees deal with a variety of problems.

The service offers assessment, crisis intervention, short-term counseling, community referral information, education and supervisory consultation, said Yvonne Wilbanks, civilian program coordinator.

These services are free of charge and are available to all civilian employees (Department of the Army and nonappropriated fund) and their families.

"We have no restrictions on what kind of problems we deal with," Wilbanks said. "Stress, family problems, problems with children, depression, anger, substance abuse... anything that affects the well-being of employees and their performance at work."

Wilbanks said the CCS will help employees recognize what problems they are having and determine a course of action. If it is necessary to refer the employee to outside counseling or services, then the CCS will work with the employee to find services the employee can afford.

Civilian counseling services are conducted on a completely confidential basis.

"No one will ever know that you came unless you tell them," Wilbanks said. "Participation in the program will not adversely affect your employment or promotion status. Wilbanks encouraged employees to seek help while their problems are still small.

She also encourages supervisors to refer employees experiencing problems to the program as a form of nondisciplinary assistance.

In addition, Wilbanks asked supervisors to contact her to set up a stress management briefing for their employees in 1996. The briefing can be conducted at the worksite, she said.

"I look at the program as an employee benefit," Wilbanks said. "Similar services downtown cost money, but our services are free." "Both supervisors and employees are recognizing the value of the program. It's a good sign when people feel free to come and get help for their problems rather than trying to hide them."

CID seeks info

The U.S. Army Criminal Investigation Division is offering a $10,000 reward for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the person(s) responsible for larceny of several night vision goggles.

The goggles were stolen from Building 2836, Company C, 3rd Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment, between 2:30 p.m. Dec. 22 and 3:50 p.m. Jan. 1.

Anyone with information concerning this incident may contact Chief Warrant Officer 2 Charles Brightbill at 545-2414 or the Military Police at 545-5222.

CID is also asking for any information leading to the arrest and conviction of the person(s) responsible for forgery and larceny that occurred between 2:20 p.m. Nov. 16 and 10:10 p.m. Nov. 17 at 154 Derrickson Street and the Post Exchange at the Main Mall.

Unknown persons removed several discarded checks from a trash can, then forged and negotiated the checks at the Post Exchange at the Main Mall.

The assistance of the local community is being requested in an effort to identify and apprehend the perpetrator(s). The identity of anyone providing information will be kept in the strictest confidence.

Retired baseballer to speak at MLK service

In honor of Martin Luther King Jr.'s birthday, retired baseball player Willie Horton will be the guest speaker at the Sand Hill Regimental Chapel Thursday at 11:30 a.m. There will be an autograph session to follow.

For information, call Sgt. 1st Class Alice Jones at 544-9336 or 544-9554.

Office limits claims

Claims for damage to electronic items damaged by a power surge or power outage will only be considered when the claimant is able to submit a copy of power company records or similar evidence that show that the power surge was of unusual intensity.

Thunderstorms and power fluctuations are not unusual in this area.

Residents of government quarters are expected to use surge suppressors to protect electronic items.

Surge suppressors should not be used on refrigerators or freezers because should the power fluctuate while the resident is not at home, the surge suppressor will not allow the appliance to come back on.

Claims questions should be directed to the Claims Division, Office of the Staff Judge Advocate, at 545-2285.

Fort Benning to get visit from ACOE

The Army selected Fort Benning as one of the 31 finalists in the 1996 Department of the Army, Army Community of Excellence competition.

As a result, Fort Benning was selected for an on-site visit during February or March.

Fort Bragg, N.C. and Fort Sill, Okla. were also selected in the large post category.

Center gets new hours

The Welcome Center is now open Monday through Friday 7 a.m. to 10 p.m., and Saturday and Sunday 2 to 10 p.m. Inprocessing will be from opening hours until 20 minutes prior to closing hours.

Outprocessing soldiers may report to the welcome center or call to make an appointment 10 days before departure from the installation.

For more information, call 545-5404.

Registration rules set

The Chattahoochee County Tax Commissioner's Office will accept only cash and money orders as payment for 1996 motor vehicle registration.

The Tax Office will no longer accept personal checks as payment.

Soldiers who are stationed at Fort Benning but are not Georgia residents may avoid the payment of the ad valorem tax.

To avoid the tax, soldiers must obtain an ad valorem exemption form for each vehicle to be registered from the Fort Benning Office of the Staff Judge Advocated, Building 5, located on the corner of Vibbert and Sigerfoos avenues on Main Post.

The soldier must bring to the office a leave and earnings statement dated within the past three months, proof of insurance, the military identification card and the previous year's paperwork.

A spouse may obtain the exemption form for a soldier if the spouse has a general power of attorney from the soldier.

Call 545-3281 for information.

Special Forces opens local recruiting office

By Anna Oleska
USAIC Public Affairs Office

The Army Recruiting Command's Special Forces Recruiting Detachment officially opened its doors to recruit at Fort Benning Dec. 11.

The Special Forces Operations Recruiting representatives said they chose Fort Benning as a newly assigned recruiting station because there is a great tendency for soldiers to enlist in the southeast, especially here at Fort Benning, at Fort Stewart and at Hunter Army Airfield. Also, soldiers at Fort Benning have shown an interest in this type of challenge.

"We received a mission to recruit 77 Special Forces soldiers in the Fort Benning area in fiscal 1996," said Sgt. 1st Class David C. Boyer, Special Forces recruiter, newly arrived from Camp LeJeune, N.C. "We're basically looking for mature, responsible, motivated people who can operate as team members.

"We've received many phone calls from soldiers all over the region. On post, I've already been around recruiting at the Airborne School, the 75th Ranger Regiment Headquarters and Kelley Hill. Not too many people know we're here.

"We're based here at Fort Benning, but we're responsible for recruiting in all of Georgia, Florida, and Alabama," he said.

Special Forces is a special operations unit commonly referred to as the "Green Berets." It has two basic missions. Its primary mission includes foreign internal defense, special reconnaissance and direct action. Additional missions include security and humanitarian assistance and counternarcotics.

Special Forces soldiers are deployed worldwide and conduct missions in countries where they may be the only military advisers in the country, Boyer said.

Some Special Forces military occupation specialties are (18B) weapons sergeant, (18C) engineer sergeant, (18D) medical sergeant, and (18E) communications sergeant.

The soldier must first learn the skills that pertain to his specialty; then, if necessary, teach the skills with one goal in mind ... how to fight, survive, and win.

Boyer said that because of the critical importance of Special Forces to increase its strength, the Army Recruiting Command opened new offices at Fort Benning and at Fort Carson, Colo.

Sgt. 1st Class Ernest Donaldson, station team sergeant of the Special Forces Recruiting Detachment here from Fort Lewis, Wash., said he believes there is a misconception that Special Forces go to the field a lot and don't spend time with their families. He said that Special Forces soldiers do indeed spend time with their families.

"They have one of the best family support groups in operation today," he said. "They've been around for quite some time now and have an excellent reputation."

Soldiers interested in knowing more about the Special Forces can attend a film and presentation every Wednesday at noon and 2 p.m. at Building 75B, McVeigh Hall, Room 109 at Fort Benning.

Policy requires higher standards for candidates

By Anna Oleska
USAIC Public Affairs Office

Army policy requires that soldiers meet the following criteria in order to become a Special Forces candidate:

- Must be a male officer in year group 1988-93 or, if enlisted, specialist through sergeant first class,
- Score 206 on the Army Physical Fitness test,
- Pass a 50-meter swim test,
- Have a general technical score of 110 or higher,
- Pass a Special Forces physical exam.

Sgt. 1st Class David C. Boyer, Special Forces recruiter said that once a soldier is briefed, meets all criteria, passes the tests, and completes an application, he will be eligible to attend one of four, three-week Special Forces assessment classes during 1996.

The four classes will start in January, March, April, and September at Fort Bragg, and during this Special Forces assessment and selection phase, soldiers will be evaluated on basic skills such as land navigation, road marches, and team building tasks.

After completing this phase, they can select their military occupation specialty from several options. They'll go on to train in their specialty for 24 to 54 weeks in a Special Forces qualifications course at Fort Bragg and Camp McCall, N.C.

When a soldier graduates from the course, he receives his green beret. The next stop is to go to language school at Fort Bragg. Finally, he will be assigned to a Special Forces group either in the United States or overseas.

How To Recycle

Post housing residents may place recyclable materials in brown plastic bins for weekly curbside pickup.

Here is a list of the items that can and cannot be placed in the bin for recycling.

• Glass: Only the following can be recycled: soft drink, beer, juice, ketchup, wine, liquor and food containers. All caps and lids are to be removed and containers are to be rinsed out. Special care should be taken to avoid breaking glass when placing it in the recycling bin. Glass will be separated by color at the curb for processing at the Materials Recovery facility.

• Cans: Only aluminum and steel cans are accepted at this time. Cans must be rinsed out. Labels may remain on the cans.

• Plastic: All plastic materials containing the Recycling Triangle (Three Chasing Arrows) may be recycled. This includes soft drink bottles and milk jugs. Caps must be removed and may be placed in the recycling bin. All containers must be rinsed out.

•Paper: All paper products except used personal type materials may be recycled. These items should be placed in brown paper bags or bundled together and tied then placed beside the recycling bin.

NOTE: incidents whereby used personal items are placed for recycling is cause for rejection.

Cardboard: Pick-up of cardboard from moving will be coordinated directly with the Materials Recovery Facility, at 544-6142. Ask for the manager or leave a message containing your address, housing area, name and phone number.

Inert Waste: Tree limbs, grass clippings and leaves will be picked up on Mondays only. Clippings and leaves should be placed in a garbage can and tied or in a trash can with a lid.

Trash and recycle pickup schedule

Household trash and recycling will be collected once a week on the same day. If there is recyclable material mixed in with the trash can it will not be picked up until the following week, or until recyclables are separated.

YOUR TURN

Should DoD and local schools merge?

Editor's note: Fort Benning's six elementary schools and one middle school would be affected by a proposed merger of Department of Defense Dependent Schools with local community schools. The Bayonet spoke with Dr. Dell Karr, superintendent of Fort Benning Schools, and Col. Gregory Camp, president of the Fort Benning School Board, as well as educators, parents and students.

By Shannon Day
Special to The Bayonet

Congress is considering transferring Fort Benning's seven schools, as well as schools at 15 other military installations, over to the community school system..

This is a topic that comes up in Congress every four to five years, but it should not be taken lightly, according to s, according to Dr. Dell Karr, superintendent, Fort Benning Schools, and Col. Gregory Camp, post chief of staff.

A major concern for military parents is that they may feel like they are losing some of the control they may feel they have now in a Department of Defense School, Camp said.

The school board for the post schools is made up of people connected with the military. This enables DoD schools to tailor an educational program suited to the unique needs of the military family, according to Camp.

If the Fort Benning schools merge with the community schools, then the military parents' voices would be combined with community parents' voices.

Congress is sending out a survey to gather more information about parents' reactions to the quality of education their children receive in DoD schools, said Karr. The survey should arrive at Fort Benning close to Dec. 30.

"It is extremely important the survey is completed by all those who are selected to receive the survey," Karr said. "This survey will be critical information that will be used by Congress to determine whether or not schooling should be continued on post or turned over to the local education agency."

Camp said there are about 3,000 children currently enrolled in post schools. This decision would affect between 2,000 and 3,000 families.

Approximately 5,000 military children already attend schools off post, said Karr.

She added the community school systems are fine systems and the teachers and staff at the schools make every effort to help the children adjust.

Camp said if the schools are transferred to the community, the students would be split between Muscogee and Chattahoochee counties, an issue unique to Fort Benning.

He added that children on the installation may be bused to schools off post, and children off post may be bused on post.

Camp and Karr both agreed the best way for parents to voice an opinion about the proposed transfer is to fill out the survey and send it back.

Karr said that if parents have any questions about the surveys, they can contact their child's school for assistance.

Officials want to know what do you think

Post officials are urging parents to complete a survey about the proposed merger of Department of Defense and local community schools.

The survey should have arrived in the mail around Dec. 30. School officials are asking parents to return the survey as soon as possible. If you did not receive a survey, call the Fort Benning Schools' administrative offices at 545-2500.

If a proposed school transfer is approved, how will it affect your family?

EDUCATORS

If a proposed school transfer is approved, how will it affect the quality of education?

The transfer of Department of Defense schools to the local school systems would greatly reduce parents on post having any significant input into the direction of the educational policies and programs for our schools. The elected school board on post guarantees parents oversight of the Fort Benning School system with its highly transient student population. Since all students attending on post schools are dependents of a military sponsor it is important that our teachers and administration align programs and teaching strategies to accommodate special needs of our kindergarten through eighth-grade students.

Skinner

— Richard M. Skinner
Assistant superintendent

The Department of Defense understands the military child's life. These schools are set up, equipped and monitored to meet the military child's special needs. We are a committed partnership with parents and the Department of Defense to meet these educational goals.

Myers

The child is currently able to attend school where classmates have similar interests and backgrounds.

This feeling of 'family' promotes high self-esteem and achievement.-

— Caroline Myers.
McBride School teacher

If the transfer is approved it would impact our children's education in many ways.

Three immediately come to mind:

• The diverse and highly transient nature of the military family requires a very versatile and strong curriculum with a unique global focus.

Ezekiel

• State of the art technology is of prime importance for our students if they are expected to make the best possible transition from school system to school system with a minimum amount of frustration.

• Paramount to the quality of education that is being provided for our students is the deeply rooted community concept and cohesive family involvement in the school on a daily basis.

A transfer could seriously erode this valuable resource

— Earnestine A. Ezekiel
Dexter School kindergarten teacher

PARENTS

I feel the transfer would affect the quality of education my children would be receiving through several ways, including counseling students whose parents are deployed or constantly ready to deploy at a moment's notice; the involvement of the military command would be greatly effected; the community support would be greatly effected and the strategies used to help our children would change.

Schook

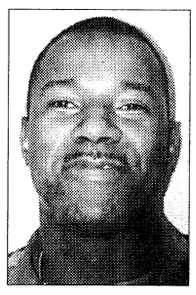
My children, ages 8 and 10, have moved eight times since they were born. The life of the military child is as unique as the child.

The Department of Defense Dependent Schools system understands this lifestyle, and is able to use all of Fort Benning's resources to educate our children in an environment best suited for each child.

The schools are able to meet these needs of each child better than any other I have seen.

The quality of education to meet these needs would change. The best example of this is Loyd School's leaky roof.

Because of the direct support from the post commander, community and teachers, the entire school was moved to a starship barracks in record time.



— Kathleen Schook
Parent

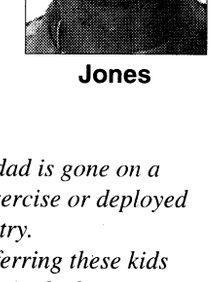
I see a lot of kids that won't be given the opportunity to work as closely with the teacher. For instance, most of the classes have 15 to 20 students in class now vs. up to 35 in county schools.

A lot of teachers in post schools work closely with parents in monitoring your child's progress.

I feel the schools on post also provide a safe environment for the students. Our teachers are well trained in working with the military family and know how to handle a child whose mom or dad is gone on a field training exercise or deployed to another country.

Jones



I think transferring these kids would hurt them in the long run.

— Sgt. Maurice Jones Sr., Battery A, 4th Battalion, 41st Field Artillery Regiment.
Parent

The transfer will affect our family in four ways.

Under the current system, parents have a direct role in school matters through membership and votes on the school board. A transfer may eliminate or diminish this involvement. In other words, we lose our vote.

Marchant

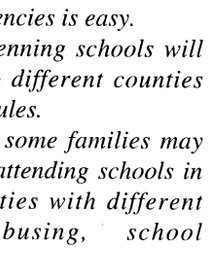
Fort Benning schools operate under a neighborhood school concept. Children live, play and attend school with each other. There is a great sense of ownership and belonging to a school. Under county control, assignments to schools may change with busing students off Fort Benning or busing others onto Fort Benning schools. This looses the 'neighborhood school' approach.

Under department of defense control, schools and children have immediate access to other Fort Benning agencies and resources.

The Fort Benning schools are very accommodating to parents' schedules, deployments, etc.

With schools under the Department of Defense, coordination with other DoD facilities or agencies is easy.

The Fort Benning schools will fall under two different counties with different rules.



This means some families may have children attending schools in different counties with different rules on busing, school assignments, etc.

— Lt. Col. Richard J Marchant 2nd Battalion, 54th Infantry Regiment.
Parent, Faith School Parent - Teacher Organization president

The affect to my family concerns safety. I feel the Department of Defense schools are more safe than public school.

Although we may have some problems, I don't think they are as bad. I feel having military schools is one of our privileges for being in the military. I feel that my kids understand and do better in DoD schools. The teachers and parents also have good relationships and an open flow of communication. Overall, I feel the loss of DoD schools would hurt our kids the most.

Lesure

We have a great system and I would like to keep it.

— Sgt. Rowland Lesure, Company C, 1st Battalion, 18th Infantry Regiment

I am concerned about removing the concept of neighborhood schools from our Department of Defense schools. I advocate military neighborhood schools using military neighborhood resources and facilities . In addition, I really believe in the 'parental voice' that parents have in our DoD schools. Military families appear to have a sense of ownership in their military schools.

Martinez

Most importantly, I believe our DoD schools meet the unique needs of our military families.

Most recently, our schools are having to deal with our children and families who have parents deployed to Bosnia. They can draw from previous experiences with prior deployments to Haiti and Somalia to respond in an appropriate and expedient manner.

As a mother, and with my husband's Army career, I think post schools are great. My children have learned well and my son knows what he wants when school is out.

There are so many problems now in the Columbus school district. It would be a mistake to bus our children to other areas and upset their education. They are getting a great education and the schools offer so much to these children.

Capp

Plus, I have learned from my experience, working as a volunteer at Wilson School is like being with family. They care about the children and their needs. They are not just there for a job.

I feel the transfer would greatly affect my family and others in a very negative way. Our children get so much support from the teachers and faculty who are often military family members themselves; they know where we are, where we've been and understand the differences between military life and civilian life.

Holder

Plus the teaching strategies the faculty uses are geared toward the military child and their lifestyles. And it is so great to have a school where children can walk to and from class with the neighborhood children

Being on a military installation is like being in a close-knit family, with everyone supporting each other in every way.

The quality of education provided in DoD schools is so high, that I feel that being turned over to the state would lower the quality of our children's education.

— Clare Holder,
Parent, Stowers Elementary School Parent-Teacher Organization president

STUDENTS

How would you feel if the Fort Benning schools were closed and you were sent to a school off post?

I would be mad if we would have to go off post. It would take longer to get to and from school. I like Faith (Middle School) because it's so close to my house.

— Lee Lewis
Sixth grade, Faith Middle School

Off post I believe we would get better lunches and have more computers to work with. I think I would rather go off post. I wouldn't mind. The only thing I wouldn't like is that off post is usually in the city and there is more violence.

-Ryan Muszynski
Sixth grade, Faith Middle School

I think it is a bunch of junk. I don't think they should do it. I get along better with the Army kids because they are more used to our kind of life.

ON POST

Christmas tree recycling — Fort Benning will recycle natural Christmas trees by using them to construct soil erosion control projects and fish and wildlife habitat on the Fort Benning reservation.

Fort Benning residents can recycle their natural Christmas tree by removing all decorations and taking them to one of the following locations:

- Any community life center.
- Recycling Center, Building 4000, Harmony Church.

Trees may be dropped off until Monday.

For more information, call Walter Nichols at 545-1007 or Tom Moore at 544-6142.

Officers' Wives' Club luncheon — The Fort Benning Officers' Wives' Club January luncheon will be Jan. 17 in the Officers' Club Regimental Room and will feature Ann Crossley, author of "The Army Wife Handbook."

Crossley will discuss her book and her Army wife experiences. The social hour will begin at 11 a.m. followed by lunch at 11:30 am. The menu will be a soup and salad bar with tea and coffee. Cost is $7.

Reservations must be made by noon Jan.12. The Officers' Wives' Club welcomes all newcomers and guests.

Reservations can be called in to Brooke Gorski at 682-4913 for persons whose last name begins with A-L or to Lorie Bohnstedt at 682-8495 for M-Z.

Family support group training — Family support group training will be conducted Monday from 9 a.m. to noon at the Family Unit Network Center. Topics discussed will be family support group goals, activities, regulations, volunteer administration, fundraisers and newsletters.

Reservations are required, and the training is open to all commanders, first sergeants, family support group volunteers and other unit personnel involved with family support groups.

To sign up, call 545-5931 or 545-5602.

For more information, call Barbara Singleton at 689-7627.

Trash collection holiday schedule — The trash collection schedule in Fort Benning's family housing areas for Martin Luther King's birthday, Jan.15, is as follows:

Trash and recycling will be picked up as normally scheduled in family housing areas Tuesday through Friday. However, there will be no yard waste collection Jan. 15. Yard waste will be picked up Jan. 22.

For more information, call the Construction Inspection Branch of the Directorate of Public Works at 545-4749.

Leaders needed — The Fort Benning Girl Scouts are seeking leaders and co-leaders to be role models and help out the team.

For more information, call Barbara Singleton at 689-7627.

Fund-raiser — Wilson Elementary School Parent-Teacher Organization will be collecting box tops from General Mills Cereal boxes through February.

The PTO will use the money to purchase special projects for the school. General Mills will pay the school 25 cents for every box top turned in by Feb. 29. The entire flap that says "best if used by" should be turned in, according to coordinators.

If you do not have children at Wilson Elementary School but would like to participate in this project, call Dorothy White at 682-6902 or Marla Jewell at 689-5354. Arrangements will be made for someone to pick up your box tops.

Employment assistance — Army Community Service's Family Member Employment Assistance Program is implementing a new service to those seeking employment.

The first and third Wednesday of each month, local area temporary agencies will be available at the Family Unit Network Center, Building 359, from 1:30 to 3:30 p.m.

For more information, call Mark Mills, acting manager, FMEAP, at 545-6969 or 545-5516.

Cookbook sales — The 2nd Battalion, 18th Infantry Regiment, 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division (Mechanized), Family Support Group is raising funds to help families and soldiers of the battalion by selling "The Vanguard Cooking" book.

It contains more than 150 recipes and $3.60 in coupons. Cost is $7.50, and all funds go to the battalion family support group.

For more information, call Connie Zahn at 687-6841 or Stephanie Mello at 689-5284.

Food locker — The Army Community Service is soliciting for organizations and activities to conduct food drives for the emergency food locker. ACS provides food to needy families in the community.

The food locker must be replenished to meet continuing daily and holiday requirements.

For more information call 545-2536, 545-4043 or 545-7517.

Wives' Club — The International Wives' Club invites interested persons to come and visit every first Tuesday of the month at 7:30 p.m.at Building 2462, Soldiers' Plaza, for coffee, cake and information.

For more information, call Olga Kelly at 687-6471 or Andrea Pitts at 687-6937.

AER college assistance — Soldiers with college-aged children often wonder how they can afford education costs. Part of the answer may be found from Army Emergency Relief.

AER provides financial assistance through scholarships. To qualify for financial assistance through AER, students must be enrolled, accepted or pending acceptance as a full-time student for the entire academic year in post-secondary educational institutions approved by the U.S. Department of Education.

Scholarships are awarded based on financial need, academic achievement and individual accomplishments. Applications must be received by March 1 for the upcoming academic year.

For more information, visit the AER, Building 2643, Soldiers' Plaza, 8 a.m. to 5 p.m., Monday through Friday.

Course in Miracles — A Course in Miracles, a weekly study group, meets Wednesdays at noon. at the Ronald McDonald House, located at 1959 Hamilton Road in Columbus. For information, call Mary Montanez at 682-9877.

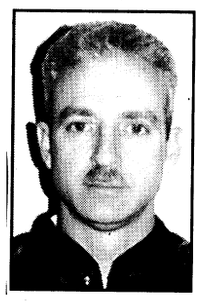
Retirement Services



The Fort Benning Retiree Council recently said farewell to outgoing enlisted co-chairman retired Sgt. Maj. Nathaniel Guydon and welcomed incoming enlisted co-chairman retired Command Sgt. Maj. Eddie Roberts.

Roberts will share the responsibility of council chairmanship with the officer co-chairman retired Col. "Biff" Mayo A. Hadden III.

The council consists of retirees from the local area who meet quarterly to keep abreast of changes in local and national benefits and to pass the information on to other retirees in the 82 county area serviced by Fort Benning.

profile in excellence

Name: Sgt. 1st Class Miguel E. Sanchez

Award or recognition: Outstanding Instructor for Master Fitness Training Course
MOS: 11H 4 E9 H
Unit: U.S. Army Physical Fitness School, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 1st Battalion,11th Infantry Regiment
Job title: NCOIC of Mobile Training Team and Fitness Instructor
Years on the job: 17 years and 10 months

What were your reasons for joining the Army? Education and job security were the main reasons. I'm an immigrant who had little chance of meaningful employment or educational opportunity in the civilian world. At the time, I was allowed to join the Army with a ninth grade education. Today I have a GED, associate in science from Troy State University and bachelor of science in Fitness from Upper Iowa University.

Define your style of leadership. My leadership style is dictated by the situation. However, I mostly like to use the participated style of leadership and that is a direct reflection of the high quality soldiers we have in the Army today.

If you were sergeant major of the Army for a day, what improvements would you make? The first thing would be to lobby Congress to make sure that soldier benefits do not erode any more, so that soldiers today could again feel that sense of security and confidence in the organization that we felt when we came in the military. The next thing would be to change the events on the Army physical fitness test so that we could measure soldier fitness better.

What were your reasons for choosing your MOS? The excitement and sense of adventure that comes with being in the infantry.

Describe a memorable moment in your career. April 1985 graduation from the U.S. Army Drill Sergeant School at Fort Jackson, S.C.

What are your future career plans? To become Command Sgt. Maj. Sanchez.

What others have to say: Sgt. 1st Class Miguel Sanchez has been the model noncommisioned officer of the Physical Fitness School. He has been the NCOIC of many mobile training teams. He has a very unique style of instruction, which brings home excellent after-action reviews even for material that otherwise may be considered dry. He is an NCO of NCOs and demonstrates that every day in the PFS by his hard work, dedication to detail, and commitment to both superiors and subordinates.

Sgt. 1st Class Sanchez has worked tirelessly to bridge the gap between the Army and local Fort Benning communities. He is uniquely responsible for planning and conducting the Fort Benning gym and fire fighters fitness seminars. Each seminar was held in high regard for both content and presentation — items that Sgt. 1st Class Sanchez takes very seriously—underneath his humorous presentation style.

Set your goals all year long

By Timothy H. Atkinson
324th Forward Support Battalion

There are various opinions about the benefits of New Year's resolutions. This new year, set goals instead.

Becoming a goal-setter is very important. Someone said, "If your goal is nothing, you will hit it every time." Even this article had to be a goal in order for me to write it.

The former Soviet Union worked off of a five-year plan. If an atheistic government can receive benefit from goals, surely with the help of God we can live life with purpose and accomplish good and even great things.

Life does sometimes give us lemons; we can, however, make lemonade by playing until we win. Our motivation for goals can be God's love in our hearts. Our security for those goals can be the hope we have in God (Romans 15:13).

The book of Proverbs says "Where there is no revelation (some translations say vision), the people cast off restraint. Franklin Field says, "Poor eyes limit your sight; poor vision limits your deeds." "Write the vision, and make it plain," Habakkuk says.

I am going to spend some time writing out my goals for 1996. I am also going to review my long-term goals and make some changes.

I do not want to say that being a goal-oriented person with vision is the total picture. Some people are very goal oriented, but they miss the blessings from God in life. Not just any goals and objectives will do. It's the type of goals and objectives that make the difference.

Let me suggest putting spirit at the top of your list. As you do, God will help you to get the natural things sorted out. If this life is transient, then the spiritual life is the logical priority.

The best book to develop your goals and objectives is the Holy Scriptures. The Bible is the most spiritual, yet practical book I have ever read. How about a goal of meditating on a portion of the Bible everyday in 1996. In doing so you buiId into your soul and spirit the faith you'll need to help you. You can't necessarily tell the future; like me, you have to live each day by faith in God. You can, however, continually build God's principles of success into your life.

God wants us to be proactive. He's given us too much for us to ignore the principles of his word. They are "a lamp unto our feet and a light unto our path" (Psalms 119:105).

With God's guidance, we have the opportunity to use our abilities to make a difference. We are truly Christ's hands and feet on the earth.

Being a goal-setter is just one of God's principles, but an important one.

reflections

God understands precisely

By Pat Cote
1st Battalion,19th Infantry

Have you ever found yourself yearning for someone to understand your particular situation with your particular struggles? Not just empathizing from their point of view, but really understanding it from your perspective.

I remember reading about a father who was trying to teach his six-year-old son how to shoot a basket.

The boy would take the basketball and push it as hard as he could toward the basket, but it always fell short. The father would then take the ball and toss it toward the basket, saying something like, "Just do it like this, son. It's easy."

The boy would try, and miss again. The father would then take the ball and make another basket, encouraging his son to push the ball a bit harder. After several minutes and many misses, the boy responded to his father's encouragement by saying, "Yeah, it's easy for you up there. You don't know how hard it is from down here."

This story illustrates an ever-present reality. Try as they might, others only have a partial understanding of our circumstances. There are many personal factors and individual events that they have no way of experiencing ... a politician dons a flakjacket and visits an area of operation with the troops ... a reporter comes to the airfield to interview those leaving on deployment ... visiting dignitaries walk into the dining facility and sit to eat with the soldiers.

All three want to communicate the same message: "I identify with you. I understand."

There is one problem, though. We know the politician will take off the flak jacket; the reporter isn't getting on the plane; the dignitaries are going back to their comfortable homes.

Although their intentions are good, these well-meaning people don't really understand. Their participation is partial.

You and I can never say that about God. Of the many messages Jesus taught us about life and stress, the first is: "God knows how you feel."

Hebrews 4:15 states, "For we do not have a high priest to whom our weaknesses are unintelligible. He himself has shared fully in all our experiences, except that he never sinned."

It's as if he knew we would say, "God, it's easy for you up there. You don't know how hard it is down here."

Listen carefully to these words ... he shared fully. Not partially; not nearly, but entirely!

And, he shared in all our experiences — every hurt, each ache, all stresses and strains.

Focus on this and draw strength the next time your world goes from calm to chaos and you feel as though you're standing alone.

Post policy helps control animal population problem

Veterinary Treatment Facility

Over population of homeless animals is a problem on Fort Benning as well as in the surrounding community.

In 1994 more than 700 stray animals came to the Veterinary Services Stray Impoundment Facility. More than one-third of those animals had to be euthanized.

One way to help cut down on the pet population problem is to have your pet spayed or neutered.

Although spaying and neutering is not a service provided by the on-post veterinary treatment facility, there are many off-post veterinary clinics that offer the procedure.

Pet owners living on post need to be aware of the regulations and policies governing pets running stray as well as general pet ownership. Stray animals on Fort Benning are apprehended by Animal Control and brought into the stray impound facility.

Once a stray animal gets to this facility it will be kept three full working days to ensure that the animal does not have an owner. On the fourth working day if the animal has not been claimed by its owner, the animal can be adopted or euthanized.

All active duty soldiers, retirees and their family members are eligible to adopt from this facility. Adopted animals will be immunized with the required vaccines, dewormed and proper diagnostics tests will be performed prior to the animal leaving the facility. The cost of vaccines and tests is the only adoption fee. Items such as shampoo and heartworm prevention may be purchased at an additional charge.

Any animal found running loose on post will be picked up by animal control and brought to the stray facility. If the animal has a tag, the veterinary staff will attempt to contact the registered owner or the soldier's unit. If, after three days, the owner can't be reached, the animal can be adopted by a new owner or euthanized.

Soldiers and family members who fail to maintain physical or geographical supervision may lose their furry friends. More than 700 stray animals came through the doors at Fort Benning's impoundment facility

Owners claiming their animals must show proof of current rabies vaccination and will be charged a fee for each day the animal was impounded. Army Regulation 40-905, which governs pet and animal disease control on post states, "Pets will be kept indoors or secured outdoors on the owners' premises. Animals being walked must be on a leash or under voice command at all times."

In reference to registration the regulation states, "All dogs, cats, and horses maintained on post must be registered within 14 days upon arrival on post or becoming 90 days of age. Upon registration, a metal tag and certificate will be issued to the pet owner.

The tag will be secured, fastened to the collar or harness of all registered pets as a means of identification. Lost tags and certificates may be replaced at the veterinary facility."

The cost of maintaining an animal in the Stray/Quarantine Facility is $5 per day. This is to meet the demands of housing one animal for one day. The charge covers the cost of feeding and housing that animal as well as to pay a laborer to work in the kennels.

The Stray Impoundment Facility, Building 283 is located next to the Veterinary Treatment Facility, Building 265, on 10th Mountain Division Road, next to Cablevision on main post.

Hours of operation for both facilities are 8 a.m. to 11:30 a.m. and 12:45 p.m. to 3 p.m., Monday, Tuesday, Thursday and Friday; and 8 a.m.-11:30 p.m. Wednesdays. The clinic is closed the last working day of each month.

For more information on the services provided call 545-4444 or 545-1127 during normal duty hours.

Staff Judge Advocate's Office

Having survived the recent holiday season, we understand the temptation to buy, buy and buy. We are bombarded with advertisements in the newspaper everyday.

Also, every time we open our mailbox, there is either an advertisement to buy goods or a solicitation from credit card companies offering to extend credit, such as, credit cards, to us. The temptations are simply enormous. But, as with any temptation, one must know when to say no.

The goal of this article is twofold: first, awareness; second, realization. I simply want to make you aware that there are businesses that are willing to lend you money even though it will take until the next century to pay it off.

Also, people must realize that if they do not have the income to purchase an item, they should not go into debt simply to have that item. For all intents and purposes, you probably do not need the item in the first place.

Recently, several businesses in the area have begun advertising on television and on billboards their loan programs. These establishments want to lend you money because it is quite profitable for them to do so.

For example, Soldier Noname goes to one of these places and wants to borrow $1,000 for Christmas gifts. As part of the agreement, which most times people forget to read, Noname promises to pay $50 a month. This amount is no problem for Noname.

However, Noname, because he did not read the agreement, does not realize these "easy" payments are for 36 months. At the conclusion, Noname has paid back $1,800 for only borrowing $1,000. The bottom line is simple: Read the agreement, and if there are any blanks, do not sign it. If you have any questions, come to the Legal Assistance Office.

In addition to the loan stores, there are businesses that will let you put up collateral for the loan money. These businesses are commonly referred to as pawn shops. Good deal? Probably not.

Let me explain. Noname has an automobile that is worth $3,000. Noname goes to one of these places and wants to borrow money.

The business will lend him only $600. This is only 20 percent of the value of the car.

Now, if Noname does not pay back the money, guess what he has lost? Right, the car. In most instances, when you use an item for collateral to secure a loan, if you do not pay back the loan, the bank will keep the collateral.

Now, if Noname does make the payments of the loan, it is certain that the terms of the loan are enormously in favor of the pawn shop. It works the same way as stated in the above example: Noname borrows $1,000 and winds up paying back $1,800. It is simply a terrible deal.

Finally, a word in self-realization. I believe these two questions should be asked whenever you are contemplating a purchase of goods or obtaining an extension of credit so that you may buy some goods.

First, "Do I need the item?," and second, "Can I afford the item?" Asking these questions and answering them truthfully will enable you to make it through the holiday season without being broke.

If you ever have a question about a loan agreement, call the Legal Assistance Office at 545-3281 and attorneys there will be glad to look it over. We would rather see you now than see you after the damage has occurred.

Obedience training is a must for dogs

Veterinary Services

Obedience training is the key to a happy puppy.

Obedience training is based on the dog's acceptance of the human's position of dominance and the animal's desire to please. After the dog is taught a command, he is praised for executing the command properly and corrected when he does not.

Praise or reward is usually in the form of an enthusiastic verbal compliment or sometimes a pat on the body. Many trainers use food tidbits for this purpose.

A dog being trained works for your praise or reward. When training the dog, be certain he really earned the reward.

A correction is a signal to the dog that he did not obey a command or execute it properly. The traditional correction is a slight tug on the leash, which is attached to a training collar. This communicates a negative message because it is accompanied by an authoritative "no" from the trainer.

There should never be any pain or abuse connected with this gesture. Some trainers advocate the use of a noise-maker, such as an empty soda can with pennies inside for this purpose. Correction must never be mistaken for punishment. Punishment is not humane nor is it an effective teaching method.

Learning when and how to effectively praise or correct the dog is the primary means of communicating with him. Praise is the language of dogs and people.

Phase two

John Haystrand Sr. checks the level of the grade pitch while working on the second phase of the Ranger Memorial. The Stewart Mellon Company has about 1,500 more marble tiles to engrave and add to the memorial. The cold weather is slowing down completion of the project, which is expected to take about a month.

Regional personnel office to cut ribbon

By Brian Voller
Bayonet staff writer

At a glance

What: Ribbon-cutting ceremony

When: Thursday at 9 a.m.

Where: in front of Building 6

Information: Call 545-1013

The Southeast Civilian Personnel Operations Center will have a ribbon-cutting ceremony Thursday at 9 a.m. to officially open its doors at Fort Benning.

Gen. William Hartzog, Training and Doctrine Command commanding general, and Sara Lister, assistant secretary of the Army for manpower and reserve affairs, will cut the ribbon. Maj. Gen. John W. Hendrix, post commanding general will also be on hand for the ceremony.

The CPOC opened its doors Oct. 1 at Building 6 to begin the process of organizing a regional personnel office.

"Under the Army plan to regionalize civilian personnel offices, we had to look at all the downsizing with the civilian personnel all over the world," said Mary Hannagan, acting director of the CPOC. "What we determined is that in order to meet the downsizing and still provide services we had to do things a little differently.

"As a result, we came up with a concept of a large processing center within a region that would provide service to installations and activities included in that region."

Under regionalization, the Fort Benning Directorate of Civilian Personnel still provides personnel advisory services and serves as a Civilian Personnel Advisory Center. The office reorganized into a streamlined center, furnishing a full range of advice and assistance to local managers, supervisors, employees and other customers. These services include information concerning position management and classification, personnell staffing and employment, retirements, employee benefits and civilian training. The DCP will continue to serve as your adviser for all local personnel management and labor-employee management issues.

In the near future, representative will be scheduling staff assistance visits with directors, managers and supervisors so that they may furnish in-depth information as to the changes of civilian personnel management under the regionalization concept and answer any questions.

Theresa Gunter, Fort Benning's director of civilian personnel said, "We will continue to provide quality customer service. Installation managers and employees should continue to deal with the DCP who will advise on the full range of functional areas and serve as liaison with the CPOC."

Hannagan said the CPOC will advertise jobs, greet and rank applicants, issue referrals, check records and keep all the personnel records for the entire region in the office. We will keep the heart of the automated network here.

Hannagan also said there will be a training office developed on Fort Benning that will eventually regionalize many of the administrative functions of training for the region, starting this year.

"Employees and managers will deal with the upfront people who are from the CPAC," Hannagan said. "The concept is you will have folks in the CPAC who will work

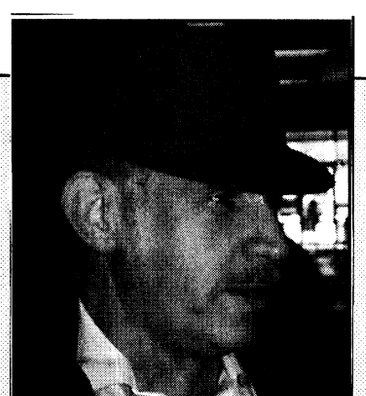
Snow???

Sunday's early morning snow dusted Fort Benning and the tri-city area. The 17th Air Support Squadron measured a trace of snow at Lawson Army Airfield, which is less than a 10th of an inch of snow. The recent cold snap was a result of the arctic air that caused the blizzard in the Northeast. The low temperature Tuesday at Fort Benning was a frosty 15 degrees.

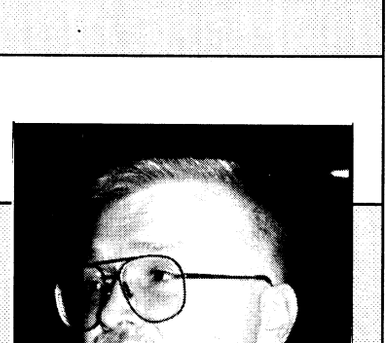
VARIOUS VOICES

How far have we come since Martin Luther King's I Have a Dream speech?

Sharon Walker, family member — "I think we've come a long way. For one thing we're rising as a people. Even though there is still (racism), we are working together."



Mike Morey, civilian employee, Osan Air Base, Korea — "I think we've come a long way, but I (also) think things have faltered because of the lack of leadership on both sides."



Felicia Dove-Dingle, family member — "We've come extremely far. There was a lot of tension (at one time), but I think the younger people are less prejudice."

Judy Niggeman, family member — "I think we've come a long way. Everybody gets along now — or they try to anyway."

Wes Manning, professor, San Diego State University — "I think we're regressing; the pendulum swung toward what he was talking about, but, to make the dream work, you had to violate the rights of other people with unsuccessful programs like affirmative action."

Staff Sgt. Don Fishel, 108th Division — "I think we've made a lot of progress, especially in the military. We have better relationships (among) neighbors ."

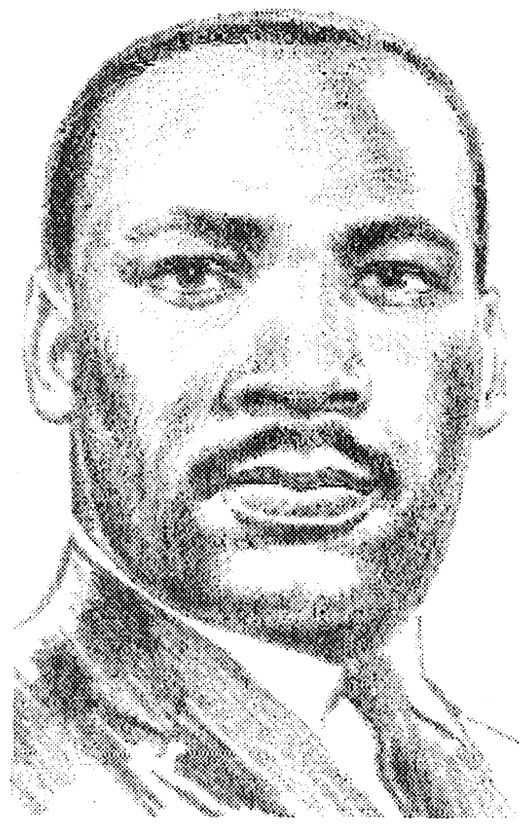
'I Have a Dream'

"I am happy to join with you today in what will go down in history as the greatest demonstration for freedom in the history of our nation.

"Five score years ago, a great American, in whose symbolic shadow we stand today, signed the Emancipation Proclamation. This momentous decree came as a great beacon light of hope to millions of Negro slaves who had been seared in the flames of withering injustice. It came as a joyous daybreak to end the long night of their captivity.

"But 100 years later, the Negro still is not free; 100 years later, the life of the Negro is still sadly crippled by the manacles of segregation and the chains of discrimination; 100 years later, the Negro lives in a lonely island of poverty in the midst of a vast ocean of material prosperity; 100 years later, the Negro is still languished in the corners of American society and finds himself in exile in his own land.



"So we've come here today to dramatize a shameful condition. In a sense we've come to our nation's capital to cash a check. When the architects of our republic wrote the magnificent words of the Constitution and the Declaration of Independence, they were signing a promissory note to which every American was to fall heir. This note was the promise that all men, yes, black men as well as white men, would be guaranteed the unalienable rights of life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness.

"It is obvious today that America has defaulted on this promissory note in so far as her citizens of color are concerned. Instead of honoring this sacred obligation, America has given the Negro people a bad check; a check which has come back marked 'insufficient funds.' We refuse to believe that there are insufficient funds in the great vaults of opportunity of this nation. And so we've come to cash this check, a check that will give us upon demand the riches of freedom and the security of justice.

"We have also come to this hallowed spot to remind America of the fierce urgency of now. This is no time to engage in the luxury of cooling off or to take the tranquilizing drug of gradualism. Now is the time to make real the promises of democracy; now is the time to rise from the dark and desolate valley of segregation to the sunlit path of racial justice; now is the time to lift our nation from the quicksands of racial injustice to the solid rock of brotherhood; now is the time to make justice a reality for all God's children. It would be fatal for the nation to overlook the urgency of the moment. This sweltering summer of the Negro's legitimate discontent will not pass until there is an invigorating autumn of freedom and equality.

"1963 is not an end, but a beginning. And those who hope that the Negro needed to blow off steam and will now be content, will have a rude awakening if the nation returns to business as usual. There will be neither rest nor tranquillity in America until the Negro is granted his citizenship rights. The whirlwinds of revolt will continue to shake the foundations of our nation until the bright day of justice emerges.

"But there is something that I must say to my people, who stand on the warm threshold which leads into the palace of justice. In the process of gaining our rightful place, we must not be guilty of wrongful deeds. Let us not seek to satisfy our thirst for freedom by drinking from the cup of bitterness and hatred. We must forever conduct our struggle on the high plain of dignity and discipline. We must not allow our creative protest to generate into physical violence. Again and again we must rise to the majestic heights of meeting physical force with soul force; and the marvelous new militancy, which has engulfed the Negro community, must not lead us to a distrust of all white people. For many of our white brothers, as evidenced by their presence here today, have come to realize that their destiny is tied with our destiny. And they have come to realize that their freedom is inextricably bound to our freedom. We cannot walk alone. And as we talk, we must make the pledge that we shall always march ahead. We cannot turn back.

> "I have a dream that one day this nation will rise up and live out the true meaning of its creed, 'We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal.'"

"There are those who are asking the devotees of civil rights, 'When will you be satisfied?' We can never be satisfied as long as the Negro is the victim of the unspeakable horrors of police brutality; we can never be satisfied as long as our bodies, heavy with the fatigue of travel, cannot gain lodging in the motels of the highways and the hotels of the cities; we cannot be satisfied as long as the Negro's basic mobility is from smaller ghetto to larger one; we can never be satisfied as long as our children are stripped of their selfhood and robbed of their dignity by signs stating 'For Whites Only'; we cannot be satisfied as long as the Negro in Mississippi cannot vote and the Negro in New York believes he has nothing for which to vote. No! No we are not satisfied and we will not be satisfied until 'justice rolls down like waters and righteousness like a mighty stream.'

"I am not unmindful that some of you have come here out of great trials and tribulations. Some of you have come fresh from narrow jail cells. Some of you have come from areas where your quest for freedom has left you battered by the storms of persecution and staggered by the winds of police brutality. You have been veterans of creative suffering. Continue to work with the faith that unearned suffering is redemptive. Go back to Mississippi. Go back to Alabama. Go back to South Carolina. Go back to Georgia. Go back to Louisiana. Go back to the slums and ghettos of our Northern cities, knowing that somehow this situation can and will be changed. Let us not wallow in the valley of despair.

"I say to you today, my friends, so even though we face the difficulties of today and tomorrow, I still have a dream. It is a dream deeply rooted in the American dream. I have a dream that one day this nation will rise up and live out the true meaning of its creed, 'We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal.' I have a dream that one day on the red hills of Georgia, sons of former slaves and the sons of former slave owners will be able to sit down together at the table of brotherhood. I have a dream that one day even the state of Mississippi, a state sweltering with the heat of injustice, sweltering with the heat of oppression, will be transformed into an oasis of freedom and justice. I have a dream that my four little children will one day live in a nation where they will not be judged by the color of their skin, but by the content of their character.

"I have a dream today!

"I have a dream that one day down in Alabama — with its vicious racists, with its governor having his lips dripping with the words of interposition and nullification — one day right there in Alabama, little black boys and black girls will be able to join hands with little white boys and white girls as sisters and brothers.

"I have a dream today!

"I have a dream that one day 'every valley shall be exalted and every hill and mountain shall be made low. The rough places will be made plain and the crooked places will be made straight, and the glory of the Lord shall be revealed, and all flesh shall see it together.'

"This is our hope. This is our faith that I go back to the South with. With this faith we shall be able to transform the jangling discords of our nation into a beautiful symphony of brotherhood. With this faith we will be able to work together, to pray together, to struggle together, to go to jail together, to stand up for freedom together, knowing we will be free one day. And this will be the day. This will be the day when all of God's children will be able to sing with new meaning, 'My country 'tis of thee sweet land of liberty, of thee I sing. Land where my fathers died, land of the pilgrim's pride, from every mountainside, let freedom ring.' And if America is a great nation, this must become true.

"So let freedom ring from the prodigious hilltops of New Hampshire; let freedom ring from the mighty mountains of New York; let freedom ring from the snow-capped Rockies of Colorado; let freedom ring from the curvaceous slopes of California. But not only that. Let freedom ring from Stone Mountain of Georgia; let freedom ring from Lookout Mountain, Tennessee; let freedom ring from every hilltop and molehill of Mississippi. From every mountainside, let freedom ring.

"And when this happens, and when we allow freedom to ring, when we let it ring from every village and every hamlet, from every state and every city, we will all be able to speed up that day when all God's children, black men and white men, Jews and gentiles, Protestants and Catholics, will be able to join hands and sing in the words of the old Negro spiritual: 'Free at last. Free at last. Thank God Almighty, we are free at last .'"

Army embraces APIC in quest for excellence

Quality Performance Improvement Office

Army Performance Improvement Criteria, a mouthful for anyone, means one thing — continuous improvement in work processes.

The result — customers get a better product or service faster, at less cost and more in line with what they want.

The Army is embracing APIC both out of necessity and desire, said Sarah McLaney, chief of the Quality Performance Improvement Office.

"First, as resources diminish, the Army has fewer dollars to spend and fewer people to get the job done. But we are also embracing APIC because it's a better way to do things," she said.

First there was Total Army Quality. Fort Benning adopted this process to get better at focusing on providing quality products and services.

TAQ proved an important and much needed step on the post's journey toward improving performance, she said.

Now the Army's evolved to APIC, an extension, or "next step," in the quest for excellence.

The TAQ philosophy is a key component of APIC evolution, McLaney said. "It took us from focusing solely on quality to focusing on processes — how we do what we do," she said.

Understanding the work process — from inception to completion — is key, she said. Members of the work force, be they civilians or soldiers, who understand their roles in the process and who understand what becomes of the product or service when they are finished with it, will be better and more productive workers.

At the other end of the spectrum, at the management level, managers who can understand where their process fits in with processes from other directorates or units, will be better able to mesh what they do with what others do, she said. Again, higher quality products, better customer service, McLaney said.

This integration of effort results in more teamwork throughout the installation, another key to quality and productivity.

"It is critical that all members of the post work force, from the warehouse worker and rifleman up to the commanding general understand where their piece of the pie fits into the big picture, or, in other words, into one or more of the five key processes —infantry future, infantry doctrine, infantry training, force projection, and base operations," she said.

Another benefit is a chance for everyone to have a voice in the process. First, informal, daily input (empowerment) is encouraged.

Additionally, there are annual surveys that look at the climate in the workplace, the processes in the workplace and the leadership being provided to the work force.

These surveys tell the leadership what the work force thinks about the effectiveness of their leadership — are mission and personnel needs being met, how well are the work processes performing and whether or not the installation is meeting the work force's and customers' needs and expectations.

APIC is a dynamic, living process that involves everyone, she said. "We all share in the responsibility of providing the best possible service in our daily efforts and of looking for opportunities which lead to continuous improvement," she said.

Directorate of Resource Management

The Directorate of Resources Management is sponsoring a contest to find an acronym that best identifies or reflects the values of Army performance improvement criteria. Some examples are:

P -Performance Improvement
R -Recognition
I -Innovation
D -Dedication
Focus
E -Empowerment
A -Attitude
P -Pride
I -Improvement
C -Customer-

The contest is open from Monday through Jan 12. All personnel working or living on Fort Benning are eligible to participate with the exception of those employees of the installation ACOE Office.

The individual submitting the winning acronym will receive his or her choice of a free weekend at the Fort Benning Recreation Area in Destin, Fla., or a cabin at Uchee Creek.

Entries may be submitted by using the contest coupon, or by PROFS to PROFS user identification: MCLANEYS. You can submit more than one entry.

Rangers to induct new honorary colonel

By Anna Oleska
USAIC Public Affairs Office

The 75th Ranger Regiment will have an honorary change of command ceremony Jan. 19 at 2 p.m. at the Ranger Memorial.

Retired Col. Ralph Puckett will replace outgoing retired Col. Frank "Bull" Dawson.

The honorary colonel of the regiment is selected by the unit commander to organize various Ranger Regiment functions.

He participates in almost all regimental ceremonies such as the Ranger Rendezvous. He also conducts professional development seminars with officers and noncommissioned officers.

He will provide an accurate historic perspective from his era while acting as a mentor and advise to current young rangers, according to Sgt. 1st Class John Sasaki, noncommissioned officer in charge of civil affairs, 75th Ranger Regiment. He also consults with the regimental commander concerning ranger activities and represents all former rangers at key regimental events.

In case of inclement weather, the ceremony will take place in Marshall Auditorium.

USAIC Public Affairs Office

In a recent post Armed Forces Disciplinary Control Board meeting, the names of off-post establishments and areas that are restricted for military personnel were released.

These areas are off limits to all military personnel assigned to Fort Benning, Warner Robins Air Logistics Base and the U.S. Naval Reserve Center in Columbus.

The restricted areas and establishments are as follows.

Phenix City and Fort Mitchell

Richardson Lounge, 102 Seale Road.

Clinchfield, Ga.

Pen Dixie Pit, located 2.3 miles south of Bonaire, Ga., on the Old Perry Road, approximately 100 yards north of the Piney Grove Church.

Columbus

All Breed Dog Training Academy, 1302 Sandusky Drive.

Danville, Ga.

EO office needs reps

The Fort Benning Equal Opportunity Office will have a planning meeting for the Black History Month Program Jan. 24 at 10 a.m. in Building 2515.

Each unit and activity is asked to send a representative to this meeting.

For more information, call Sgt. 1st Class Ana Davilia at 545-1480 or 545-1923.

Gain tax experience

The Fort Benning Tax Office will open Jan. 31 and volunteers are needed.

The Internal Revenue Service will conduct a week-long class for everyone interested in assisting in the free preparation of income tax returns.

The class will be from Jan. 22 through Jan. 26. Also, this year there will be opportunities for individuals to volunteer on Saturdays.

Interested persons should contact Capt. Scott L. Frost of the Office of the Staff Judge Advocate at 545-3282 or 545-3281.

Tax office to open

The Fort Benning Tax Office will open Jan. 31. The office is located in Building 2640 at Soldiers' Plaza and will be open Monday through Friday, from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

Electronic tax filing is available for most federal returns. The office has many federal and state tax forms available.

Unit tax advisers have also been appointed for units throughout the post. Persons having tax questions should see their unit tax adviser first.

For more information, call Capt. Scott L. Frost at 545-3281.

SSNs are required

Every person age 1 or older must have a Social Security number before that person may be claimed on a tax return. The Social Security Office in the Main Post Chapel Center, next to Doughboy Stadium, will accept applications for Social Security numbers Feb. 22 starting at 10 a.m.

Applicants must bring a certified copy of the person's birth certificate and some other type of identification such as school or shot records.

For more information, call Capt. Scott L. Frost at 545-3281.

CID seeks information

The U.S. Army Criminal Investigation Division is offering a $10,000 reward for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the person(s) responsible for larceny of several night vision goggles.

The goggles were stolen from Building 2836, Company C, 3rd Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment, between 2:30 p.m. Dec. 22 and 3:50 p.m. Jan. 1.

Anyone with information concerning this incident may contact Chief Warrant Officer 2 Charles Brightbill at 545-2414 or the Military Police at 545-5222.

CID is also asking for any information leading to the arrest and conviction of the person(s) responsible for forgery and larceny that occurred between 2:20 p.m. Nov. 16 and 10:10 p.m. Nov. 17 at 154 Derrickson Street and the Post Exchange at the Main Mall.

Unknown persons removed several discarded checks from a trash can, then forged and negotiated the checks at the Post Exchange at the Main Mall.

The assistance of the local community is being requested in an effort to identify and apprehend the perpetrator(s). The identity of anyone providing information will be kept in the strictest confidence.

Controlled burning set

Controlled burning of woodland areas will take place today through Jan. 20. If weather permits, the following compartments will be affected: D-7, E-3, E-7 and I-2.

Burning will occur in pine stands within these compartments to enhance endangered species habitat and training areas. Personnel proposing to use these areas for recreational purposes must vacate these areas prior to 9:30 a.m. daily.

Training units using compartments adjacent to those listed above may experience drift smoke and are reminded to exercise caution while travelling in these areas due to the potential for reduced visibility.

Units using ranges and training areas are reminded to remove flammable debris, such as pinestraw, leaves, grass and trash form around structures in accordance with US Army Infantry Center Regulation 210-4, Paragraph 5-22, Organizational Maintenance.

For more information call Jack Greenlee, Natural Resources Management Branch, at 544-6206.

Office limits claims

Claims for damage to electronic items damaged by a power surge or power outage will only be considered when the claimant is able to submit a copy of power company records or similar evidence that show that the power surge was of unusual intensity.

Thunderstorms and power fluctuations are not unusual in this area.

Residents of government quarters are expected to use surge suppressors to protect electronic items.

Surge suppressors should not be used on refrigerators or freezers because should the power fluctuate while the resident is not at home, the surge suppressor will not allow the appliance to come back on.

Claims questions should be directed to the Claims Division, Office of the Staff Judge Advocate, at 545-2285.

Center changes hours

The Welcome Center is now open Monday through Friday 7 a.m. to 10 p.m., and Saturday and Sunday 2 to 10 p.m. Inprocessing will be from opening hours until 20 minutes prior to closing hours.

Outprocessing soldiers may report to the welcome center or call to make an appointment 10 days before departure from the installation.

For more information, call 545-5404.

CID seeks assistance

The U.S. Army Criminal Investigation Command is asking for any information leading to the arrest and conviction of the person(s) responsible for forgery and larceny that occurred between 2:20 p.m. Nov. 16 and 10:10 p.m. Nov. 17 at 154 Derrickson Street and the main Fort Benning Army and Air Force Exchange Service.

Unknown persons removed several discarded checks from a trash can, then forged and negotiated the checks at the AAFES main exchange.

The assistance of the local community is being requested in an effort to identify and apprehend the perpetrator(s).

It is requested that anyone with information concerning this incident contact J. Taylor at 545-7950 or 545-7052 in the Military Police at 545-5222.

The identity of anyone providing information will be kept in the strictest confidence.

Registration rules set

The Chattahoochee County Tax Commissioner's Office will accept only cash and money orders as payment for 1996 motor vehicle registration.

The Tax Office will no longer accept personal checks as payment.

Soldiers who are stationed at Fort Benning but are not Georgia residents may avoid the payment of the ad valorem tax.

To avoid the tax, soldiers must obtain an ad valorem exemption form for each vehicle to be registered from the Fort Benning Office of the Staff Judge Advocated, Building 5, located on the corner of Vibbert and Sigerfoos avenues on Main Post.

The soldier must bring a leave and earnings statement from the past three months, proof of insurance, their military identification card and the previous year's paperwork. Call 545-3281.

Benning commercials to air

By Anna Oleska
USAIC Public Affairs Office

It was World War II. Fort Benning soldiers, dressed in period fatigues, recreate a scene from the Battle of the Bulge.This is a scene for a Army recruiting commercial which will air along with two others that were recently filmed at Fort Benning by the U.S. Army Recruiting Command starting Saturday through Feb. 15.

The ads cover various soldiering skills and are meant to reach 18- to 20-year-olds — the people who will become the next privates and specialists in today's Army.

The commercial ads were filmed at Fort Benning because of the soldier assets here such as: helicopters, armor, parachutes, mechanized infantry and rangers.

The ads will run on network prime time and sports, MTV, ESPN, and the Comedy Channel starting Jan. 13. They will be aired mostly during sporting events and other programs, which the target audience, 18 to 24 year olds, watches. The ads featured will be "Paratrooper" — a storyline about a young woman who joined the Army to become airborne; "Recon" — about rangers on a reconnaissance mission; and, "Tanker" — about a tanker driving across rough terrain.

OPERATION JOINT ENDEAVOR

Combat stress unit deploys in support

Soldiers to aid families, soldiers

By Shannon Day
Special to The Bayonet©

Any time a soldier deploys, and especially when a family is left behind, there is a lot of stress for everyone involved. The family has to adjust to a spouse and parental figure being absent. The soldier has to adjust to being away from loved ones and being in a strange and sometimes hostile environment.

To help these people learn to cope, the Army is deploying the 883rd Combat Stress Company Medical Detachment, 94th Regional Command Support, to various installations in the United States Army, Europe.

The reserve unit,which processed through the mobilization unit at Fort Benning, is based in Roslindale, Mass. It is comprised mainly of mental health workers, according to Sgt. 1st Class, Michael T. Moody, the company's acting first sergeant.

"We have professional psychiatrists, psychologists, behavioral scientists, psychiatric social workers and psychiatric technicians, a total of 19 soldiers, deploying, he said.

Most of the company is going to Wurzburg, Germany, to fill slots of mental health workers who have been deployed to Bosnia. At this point, they have not been told they will be sent to Bosnia, but there is always that possibility, he said.

He stressed that not only will they be working with service members, but they will be there to support family members.

"There is such a great need for that right now over (in Europe)," Moody said. "We're all anxious to get to our work stations, so we can start doing our jobs."

This is not the first time the unit has been deployed for combat stress support. The unit was involved with soldiers coming back from Desert Storm and Somalia, Moody said.

"As critical incident stress debriefers, we let the soldiers know that they have been through a tough time and what they can expect mentally because of it," he said. "We also let them know when they should seek professional help."

Although Moody didn't want to leave his wife and four daughters behind in Buffalo, NY, he said he knows he is needed overseas.

"We have to be there to support our troops and their families," he said.

CPOC: offers civilian services regionally

everything about personnel. They can advise you on classification, how to fill a job, what to do if an employee's performance is inadequate and they will work with the managers and the employees. They would become the focal point for that office.

"The beauty of this setup is that if you went into a restaurant and you want service you deal with one person not a whole group of people... These generalists from the CPAC will work with the organization and they will give us the work orders back here at the processing center and we will take care of all the processing work."

Hannagan said the decision to build the CPOC on Fort Benning was a big deal and very beneficial to the installation. The CPOC will be responsible for forming 200 to 400 jobs depending on the size of the region. Hannagan said the CPOC also brings prestige to the post because it was chosen over eight other installations.

Hannagan said the CPOC will not change the process of civilian job applications on Fort Benning.

"Civilian's applying for a job still need to go to building 85 where the CPAC is located," Hannagan said. "The CPOC is more of a behind the scenes type of operation. We also provide the same type of service for several other installations. The CPOC will be servicing 37,000 employees at 20 installations in three major commands, Training and Doctrine Command, Forces Command and Special Operations Command. The region includes the Florida, Georgia, North Carolina, South Carolina, the southern three fourths of Alabama and the southeastern portion of Virginia; this consists of approximately 20 military installations and facilities."

The CPOC will also be aiding Fort Benning financially, Hannagan said.

"With the downsizing, it was decided that the Army needed to eliminate a lot of the administrative type of jobs," Hannagan said. "Vice President Al Gore said he wanted to eliminate a lot of the red tape involved with personnel. The CPOC effectively regionalizes the different regions and eliminates a lot of manpower. The regionalization has eliminated 536 personnel and is saving the Army a lot of money."

Georgians need to claim IRS checks

Department of the Treasury, IRS

If you are a Georgia resident who never received your 1994 prior year tax refund, the Internal Revenue Service is asking you to step forward.

There were 3,164 checks returned by the Postal Service as undeliverable in Georgia, ranging from as little as $40 to almost $17,000 and totaling $2,641,793.80.

The most common reason refund checks cannot be delivered is that taxpayers move after filing their return and do not give the IRS or the Postal Service a forwarding address. Taxpayers who change their names for any reason should also notify the IRS.

According to Nelson A. Brooke, IRS District Director for Georgia, taxpayers may claim an undelivered refund by establishing their identity and their right to receive a refund check. This can be done by calling (800) 829-1040 or sending a letter to the IRS, Atlanta Service Center, Refund Inquiry Unit, Stop 112, Atlanta, Ga., 39901 with the name and address exactly as shown on tax return; present name and address if different from the return; tax year for which refund is due; Social Security number or number(s) of both spouses if the return is for a joint return; amount of refund and signature (not printed or typed).

To eliminate the possibility of a lost, stolen or undeliverable refund check, file an electronic return or attach a Form 8888 to have it deposited electronically into a checking or savings account.

BOSS recognizes single soldiers, commands that make program work

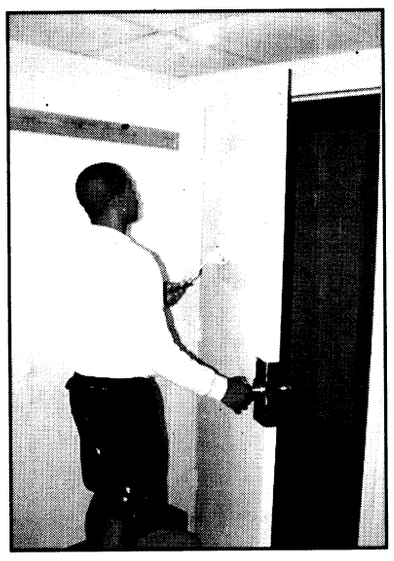
By Lisa M. Hibbert
Bayonet staff writer

What does it take to be the best unit of the Fort Benning Better Opportunities for Single Soldiers program?

It takes a desire to serve single soldiers, said Spc. Michael T. James, president of the BOSS program.

Every quarter, in conjunction with the Commanding General's Awards Breakfast, BOSS recognizes soldiers and major subordinate commanders who are making the program work, James said.

In order to be competitive, a command must meet certain criteria. It must have a current single soldier quality of life standard operating procedure, be in compliance with the Training and Doctrine Command standards and have good soldier involvement in quality of life issues and projects, to name a few.



Participation is optional and commanders usually decide to participate when they know they are competitive.

The winner of the last quarter was the 36th Engineer Group.

Some of the things that set them apart from the competition was the installation of a functioning repair and utilities program, the institution of barracks managers, the appointment of a full time MSC level BOSS representative and renovations to soldiers rooms.

Renovations included ensuring rooms received new paint, paneling, wallpaper, mini blinds and furniture.

Units interested in competing for the top slot still have time in this quarter.

Free seminar for retiring, ETSing soldiers

Army Career and Alumni Program

A Washington lecturer and author on career transition from military to civilian employment will be at Fort Benning March 1 in the Infantry Hall, Classroom 30, from 9 to 11 a.m. to talk to officers, senior noncommissioned officers and spouses on "Marketing Yourself for a Second Career."

Retired Col. Jerry Crews, deputy director of the Officer Placement Service for The Retired Officers Association, travels nationwide addressing military audiences composed of people who are nearing retirement, being involuntary separated or opting to leave military service.

The lecture is open to all military personnel and their spouses. The first 200 participants will receive free copy of the publication, "Marketing Yourself for a Second Career.".

In his free two-hour presentation, Crews will introduce the audience to the realities of the competition in the civilian job market; the perceptions civilian employers have of military personnel; how to plan for the job search; tips for strengthening the resume (to include how employers read resume); networking, preparing for and conducting a successful interview; salary and benefit packages; and rejection.

Crews said he doesn't promise an individual instant job search success but guarantees that each person who attends his lecture will profit from the knowledge gained and will be ready to move in the right direction toward that second career.

The lecture has been continually praised by attendees for its content and delivery. Crews provides information for every attendee and provides insights into the transition which are unique and hard biting.

Military members and their spouses are invited to attend the lecture, will have an opportunity to ask questions of Crews and will also receive a free copy of the publication.

The Retired Association sponsors these lectures, which in 1994 were presented to over 15,000 personnel at 107 military installations throughout the United States and Europe.

For more information, call Mary Allen at 545-4892 or 545-7009.

Transition Assistance Classes

Army Career and Alumni Program

If you're getting out of the military, the Army Career and Alumni Program is available to help you make the transition.

All service members getting out of or retiring from the military must process through the Army Career and Alumni Program's Transition Assistance Office, Building 2617, Soldiers' Plaza, before attending a Transition Assistance Program class in Infantry Hall.

The National Defense Authorization Act Fiscal 1991, Public Law 101-510 states that soldiers within 180 days of expiration term of service are required to attend a Transition Assistance Program class.

Classes are given in three-day blocks and are scheduled throughout the year.

Classes are in Classroom 30, Infantry Hall, from 7:45 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

For more information, call 545-7020 or 545-7009.

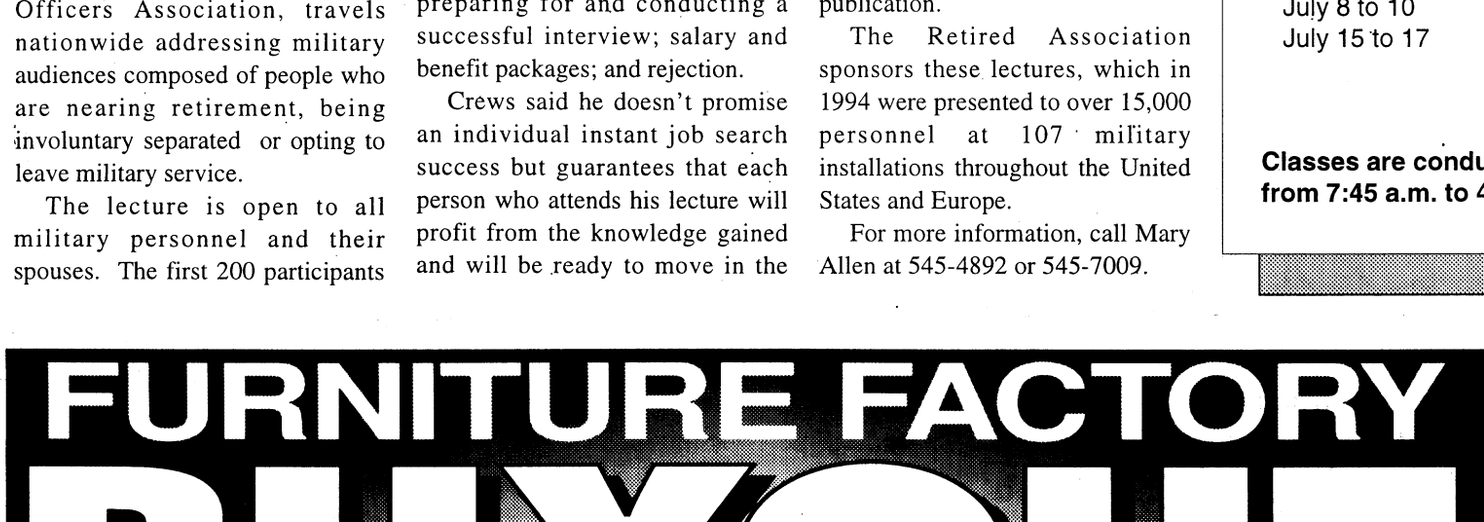
Onsite offers jobs

By Mary Allen
Army Career and Alumni Program

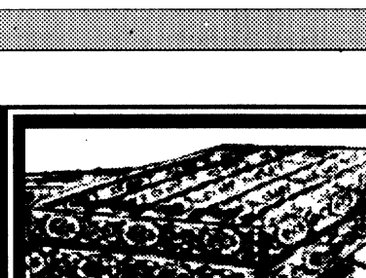
Onsite Environmental Staffing continues to provide employment opportunities for soldiers getting out of the military through Fort Benning's Army Career and Alumni Program.

Onsite employs exiting soldiers, veterans and family members in the field of environmental remediation. Onsite currently employs more than 100 new workers per week nationwide.

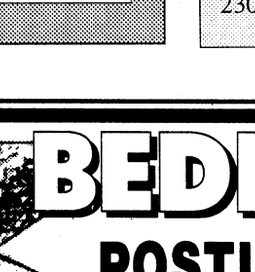
A soldier can train at Fort Benning and then work in the area of his or her choice. Starting wages at Onsite range from $9 to $15 per hour depending on a soldier's skills. A benefit package is also offered to include a 401K plan and dental and health insurance.



Soldiers can use skills learned in the Army to earn a higher starting wage. Heavy equipment operators are in demand at Onsite, as are field technicians, soil and water samplers and people with commercial driver's license.



Onsite offers a 40-hour training course at a cost of $250 per person. A training course will be conducted from Jan. 29 thru Feb. 1 at the Main NCO Club.



For more information about employment and training, contact Vince Catanzaro at (800) 807-0454. Persons interested in meeting with a representative Jan. 19 and to sign up for a training course can call the ACAP Job Assistance Center (706) 545-2308/2309.

Rangers lead the way in Operation Bright Star

By William Huff
3rd Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment

From the pyramids of Egypt to the Panama Canal, the 3rd Battalion , 75th Ranger Regiment, has conducted hard training and experienced diverse cultures.

The mission of rapid worldwide deployability and the requirement for rangers to be able to move further, faster and fight harder than any other soldier in all conditions, resulted in rangers deploying to Egypt and Panama during November and December .

The world-wide experience began with rangers leading the way with an airborne operation into Egypt from the new C-17 Globemaster airplane Nov. 7.

"The long flight was comfortable and the jump from the C-17 is one that I will never forget," said Spc. Chad Bearden of Co. B, 3rd Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment.

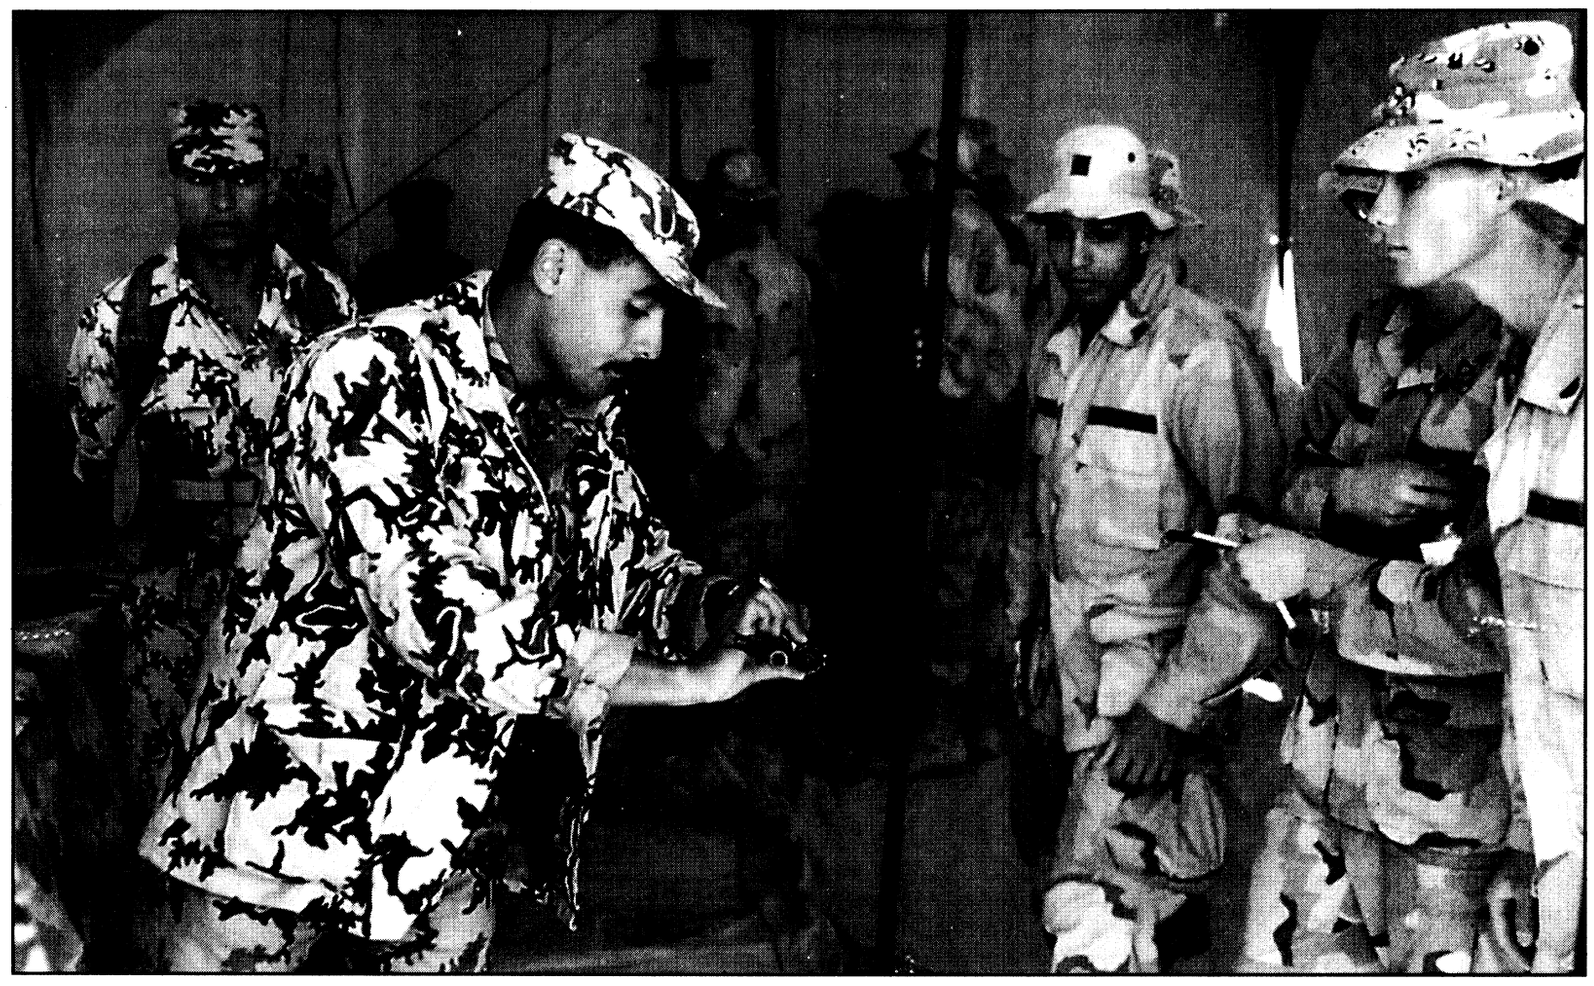
Another milestone of the deployment was the experience of jumping with both Egyptian and British paratroopers.

"All rangers had the opportunity to jump with the fine paratroopers of both the Egyptian and British armies," said Capt. James Johnson, commander of Company B, 3rd Battalion., 75th Ranger Regt.

The deployment was not all work for the rangers.

"It was very important for rangers to be exposed to the culture and history of Egypt," 1st Sgt. Mark Neilson said. "All rangers will remember their deployment to the far away Middle East."

Next stop on the tour was Panama and a rotation through the Jungle Operations Training Center, from Nov. 29 to Dec. 17.



As Spc. Scott McGilvray of Company A, 3rd Battalion., 75th Ranger Regt., said, "The training was tough and very informative."

Rangers learned jungle operational techniques and how to handle the challenges of the jungle.

"It is very important for rangers to view all conditions and especially the jungle as a neutral environment for potential combat operations," said lst Lt. Chris Donahue, platoon leader in Company B, 3rd Battalion., 75th Ranger Regt.

Panama also offered the opportunity for rangers to experience a different culture.

"It is exciting to be exposed to another culture and a city like Panama City which offered a wide variety of things to do," said Spc. Katzer, Company A, 3d Battalion., 75th Ranger Regt.

Harry Crass

Rangers of Company B, 3rd Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment, receive instruction from Egyptian rangers during Operation Bright Star 1995.

"Our training has been challenging and rewarding in both Egypt and Panama," said Lt. Col Francis H. Kearney III, battalion commander. "The rangers and our entire unit is better trained and fully capable to meet the challenges of any future operation."

OFFICER CANDIDATE SCHOOL

Former candidate shares experience

By Pam Newbern
Officer Candidate School

When Col. Ronnie D. Alton attended the Infantry Officer Candidate School at Fort Benning in July 1967, he remembers it was sometimes hard to get home.

It seems his training, assessment and counseling officers had some unique ideas about how to get from the newly constructed Building 4 to his barracks near the water tower on Raider Creek.

"It was 29 years ago this month I started Infantry OCS," Alton told 121 senior officer candidates of OCS Class 1-96 Jan. 5 during a ceremony in front of Building 4.

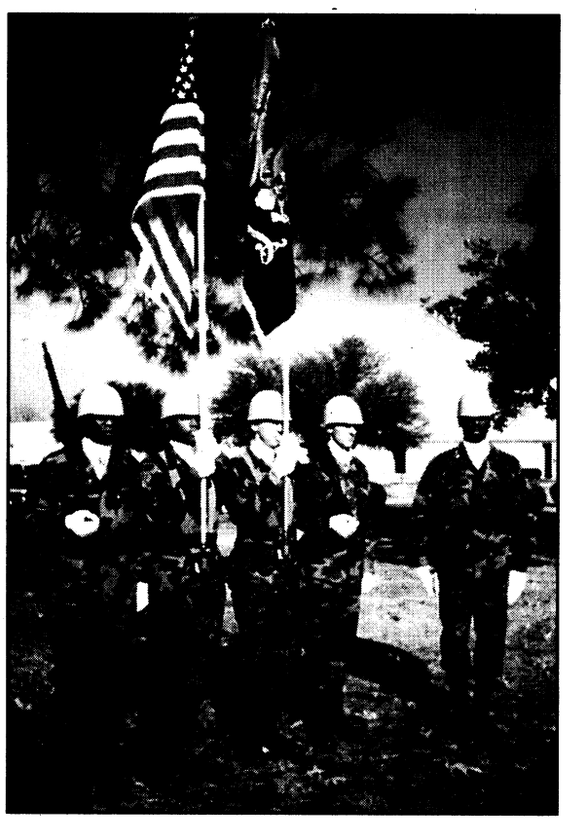
"I was scared to death, but I will always cherish those memories of my life."

Alton, who was the reviewing officer at a ceremony honoring the candidates' promotion to senior status, told the candidates and their guests that walking, running, double-timing, "low-crawling and duck-walking were the options to get to our barracks every day from Building 4."

Alton, who currently serves as the commander, Military Police Activity, provost marshall, and director of Public Safety at Fort Benning, said the memory of low-crawling through Raider Creek has remained with him ever since.

"So, I can relate to what you're going through during this challenging period," he told the candidates. Class 1-96 will graduate Jan. 31.

"Being a member of the U.S. Army is the greatest occupation in the world," he continued. "Being an officer and leader in the U.S. Army is the best profession to be a part of. This whole process can be compared to rungs of a ladder. By attaining senior officer candidate status, you have attained the first step."



As senior officer candidates, the class members take on increased responsibilities and are allowed to receive the same courtesies as commissioned officers from other candidates.

Alton, who will retire next month, said OCS gave him the leadership skills he needed to accomplish a difficult tour as a Military Police platoon leader in Vietnam.

"The only thing that prepared me for a successful tour of duty in a war-torn country was Infantry Officer Candidate School," he said. "I have never forgotten what OCS did for me, and I guarantee you won't forget either."

Alton, a native of Georgia, holds a bachelor of arts degree in history from the University of Georgia and a master's degree in public administration from Georgia Southern College. In May 1991, he was inducted into the Infantry OCS Hall of Fame at Fort Benning.

After being commissioned in 1967, Alton served as a MP platoon leader in Fort Riley, Kan., a platoon leader in Vietnam, and commanding officer of a unit in the Army's Retraining Brigade at Fort Riley, Kan. He also served as the executive officer of the 1st Battalion, USARB, Fort Riley; as well as provost marshall (Pacific) of the 193rd Separate Infantry Brigade in Panama, and battalion commander of the U.S. Army Confinement Facility, Mannheim, Germany.

The color guard prepares to pass the reviewing officer, Col. Ronnie D. Alton, Provost Marshall.

Alton's awards include the Legion of Merit with one oak leaf cluster, Bronze Star Medal with valor device, Defense Meritorious Service Medal, Meritorious Medal with three oak leaf clusters; the Joint Service Commendation Medal with one oak leaf cluster; Vietnam Service Medals; the National Defense Service Medal; Meritorious Unit Citation; Vietnam Cross of Gallantry with Palm Citation; Army Service Ribbon; Overseas Ribbon (second award), and the Republic of Vietnam Campaign Ribbon.

During the ceremony, Alton affixed a streamer to the OCS company's guidon, representing the candidates' move to senior status. The candidates also passed in review.

Among those attending the ceremony were Lt. Col. Scott Armbrister, commander, 3rd Battalion (OCS), 11th Infantry Regiment.

"Basically, this is another hurdle these candidates pass over on the way to achieve the ultimate goal of being commissioned in our Army," he said. "They have performed absolutely magnificently during the past 10 weeks, and every single one of them deserves this recognition and 'rite of passage'

Brig. Gen. Robert Clark, assistant commandant, U.S. Army Infantry School, also attended the ceremony.

"This is a real important event for the candidates," Clark said. "It is symbolic of the transition taking place in their lives. They are really beginning a daily routine that is the same as those of second lieutenant.

"It is a rite of passage now, and a very, very important step in their maturation process as officers," Clark continued. "From here on out, they really are all but commissioned officers. The 'but' is the actual commissioning ceremony."

Officer candidates take on field

Officer Candidate School

Shelter halves.
Ponchos.
Polypros.

The weather is not usually considered an exciting topic of conversation, but for the 123 candidates of Company A, 3rd Battalion (Officer Candidate School), 11th Infantry Regiment, the weather took on vital importance in the weeks before Christmas.

The candidates' fascination with the weather was due to the OCS' final six-day field problem, "Capstone."

From Dec. 13 through 19, the candidates spent their days and nights in the field, practicing infantry platoon tactics, such as breaching a wire mine obstacle and conducting ambushes. The exercise was designed to test them on leadership and combat skills they had learned in previous OCS classes and field exercises.

During Capstone, the candidates had no access to shelter, other than the ponchos and other materials they could pack in their rucksacks.

The purpose of Capstone is "to develop confidence in the individual in himself and in his peers," according to Sgt 1st Class Dennis L. Keck, Training, Assessment and Counseling noncommissioned officer for 1st Platoon, Company A, 3rd Bn. (OCS), 11th Infantry Regt.

"Soldiers have the capabilities to do more physically and to withstand more mentally and emotionally then they think they are capable of, but they must be taught this or shown this."

The TAC officers and NCOs has all kinds of interesting ways to show the candidates how to gain confidence. If the students weren't pulling security at 2 a.m., they might find themselves battling through thick brush at 1 a.m., with 60 pounds of equipment on their backs.

"This is a large scale exercise," said Intermediate Officer Candidate Fidelis Agbor. "I've learned to move in a tactical formation and walk long distances with tons of weight on my back. They're trying to imitate real-life situations in the military."

Real-life situations included dealing with weather that was alternately cold, wet, or both. Candidates also learned to walk through brush that had a knack for poking twigs right in their faces or wrapping around their M-16s and refusing to let go.

Food also took on new importance. Hot meals were delivered once a day by the dining facility. The rest of the time, candidates lived on meals, ready to eat. The various merits of beef stew versus tuna and noodle casserole took on almost as much importance as staying dry.

During the exercise, the candidates spent much of their time perfecting skills they had been taught in previous sessions, such as land navigation and the Tactical Leadership Course.

Keck gave a class on the use of pyrotechnics, including using smoke canisters as protective covering for raids and ambushes. The candidates also became familiar with other pyrotechnics, such as grenade simulators, which their cadre had a disturbing habit of using about 4 a.m. to simulate enemy attacks.

"Keck's class was riveting and eye catching," said Intermediate Officer Candidate Miles Watson.

Intermediate Officer Candidate David Hale said he enjoyed going on an ambush directed by Keck.

"I learned a lot on the ambush," Hale said. "I was the M-60 gunner. It was awesome. The coordination went great. I got to actually see how an ambush works out correctly."

For Intermediate Officer Candidate Teresa B. McKiernan, the exercise gave her an opportunity to learn what a combat situation can be like.

"I've learned that war is filled with confusion and is at times very slow and waiting around," she said. "It sometimes seems like forever to get to your objective, and at other times, you're moving so fast you don't know what's happening."

During the exercise, the TACs rated the candidates on their leadership skills and abilities. Leadership positions usually changed every 24 hours, and candidates could find themselves in charge of leading an operation they hadn't even known about half an hour before.

Capstone is used "to evaluate the officer candidate's leadership ability in a field environment," Keck said. It is designed to give the candidates an "understanding of what the infantry soldier has to live with a on day-to-day basis. It's realistic within the parameters that are required for safety."

The exercise differed from that of previous OCS classes, Keck said.

"The last cycle was more defensive oriented," he said. "This was more small unit, company and platoon-level operations."

The cold weather and long nights took their toll on the candidates, which was one purpose of the exercise.

"You find out when it's time to execute, there are those who will execute," said IOC Michael J. Wood. "It pointed out who the real soldiers were."

The exercise ended with a bang about 11 p.m. Dec. 18, as candidates from three platoons attacked a hill defended by a fourth platoon. The attack, conducted in pouring rain, started with a long walk through the woods toward the defense, followed with breaching a concertina wire obstacle. The candidates, laden with miles gear, attempted to suppress the defenders' M-60 machine gun fire and M-16 rifle fire throughout the event.

As candidates charged up the hill, simulated gunfire could be heard from several directions. The net effect was to give the candidates a far clearer picture of what actual combat conditions are like than they probably could have gained otherwise.

Afterward, the candidates headed back to their barracks to clean up and prepare for Christmas exodus.

Wood said he had one suggestion for improving future Capstones.

"More MREs should have M&Ms in them," he said.

Fort Benning explodes ordnance

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet©

Explosions rocked the farthest reaches of Fort Benning last week after charges emplaced by a demolitions team were systematically fired off with thunderous effect.

The target — unexploded ordnance on K-15, landing place for many highly destructive devices, from 500-pound bombs dropped from the air, to armor and artillery projectiles of every size and shape.

While many of these projectiles find their marks, they don't always explode, said Capt. Michael Durham, commander of Fort Benning's 89th Explosive Ordnance Disposal Detachment.

Since unexploded ordnance represents a potential threat to anyone from hunters to range control personnel who will be dragging in old military vehicles for use as targets, the 89th EOD Detachment was tasked to identify and destroy any projectiles on K15 that were still "live."

"Untrained personnel have no way of knowing whether the tiniest movement may set it off," Durham said.

As evidence of the danger of their mission, EOD personnel are authorized to draw hazardous duty pay, Durham said.

"Not every piece that is unexploded is live," he said. "Ordnance that is classified as inert, that is, that carries no explosive charge to begin with, is simply left alone."

Projectiles that could be safely moved were stacked together for ease of demolition, he said.

Durham said the members of the detachment are highly trained professionals who have graduated from an eight-month course where they learn to identify and dispose of every type of military ordnance.

Spc. Collin Pecaro, a former infantryman who recently changed his military occupational specialty, said he found the school challenging.

"The challenge was more mental than physical," he said. "The tasks themselves are not necessarily difficult , but there is a lot to remember and the grading standards are hard."

After the initial day of identification and marking, the EOD personnel split into three teams, each led by a senior noncommissioned officer with years of similar experience under his belt, to begin preparing the identified ordnance for demolition.

The basic strategy, according to Durham, was to place an appropriate sized charge of composition C-4, a moldable, plastic explosive, on each piece of ordnance to be destroyed. Detonation cord, itself an effective explosive, is used to link groups of ordnance in a particular area together in a circle, a technique known as "daisy chaining," Durham said.

"Each successive explosion ignites the next in the chain," he said. "The explosions happen so quickly, however, that the effect is nearly instantaneous."

Detonation of the charges was accomplished via portable radio from the safety of a nearby hilltop.

A follow-up inspection was conducted to search for ordnance that failed to explode or new ordnance unburied up by the explosion.

Durham said this kind of exercise is excellent training for EOD technicians because it represents their real-world mission.

SOA students fight drug war

By Judith Ginder
School of the Americas

We all know that until drug manufacturers and dealers around the world are stopped, the problems with drugs in the United States will continue.

With this in mind, Latin American countries train their armies and national police forces in counternarcotics tactics.

One way in which they do this is by sending them to the School of the Americas.

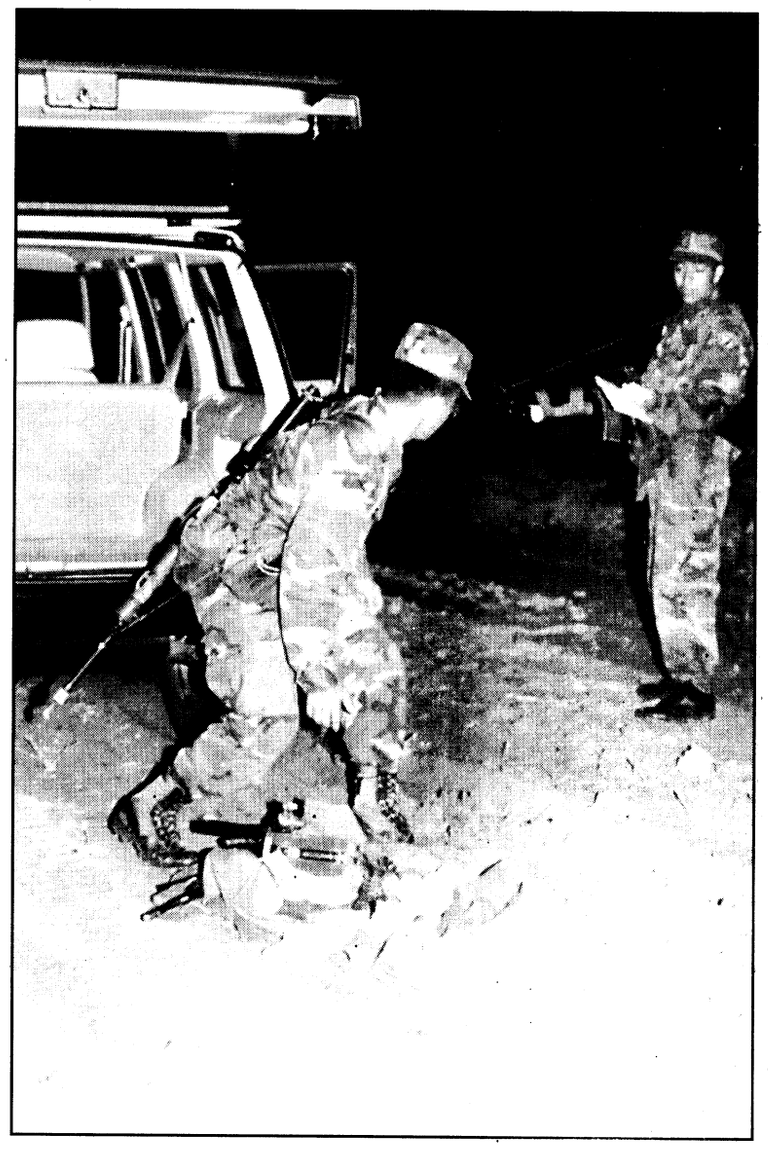
The first of four SOA counternarcotics courses for the year began Monday.

For 11 weeks, officers and noncommissioned officers from Latin America will train in specialized areas for the planning, leading and executing of counternarcotics operations.

Instruction is given in surveillance, discriminative marksmanship, development of intelligence networks, rappelling, fast-roping, human rights, river operations and setting up security checkpoints.

Students are also tested on their swimming skills. Several drug operations center around water for ease of access and the actual making of the drugs.

Another thing that the students are taught is how to scale walls.

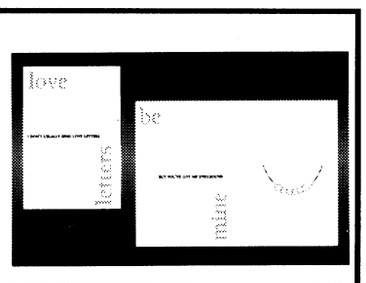


A great deal of teamwork is required in all of the training given, but especially so in building climbing techniques, said Staff Sgt. Jose Fernandez, course director.

"These students receive the hands-on training that isn't always available to them in their country," he said.

This course is working well, said a SOA instructor, because it's being taught at the platoon and company levels.

Students are able to return to their countries and share the information learned at SOA with their squads and the others they work with.on a daily basis.



"It's important to train the lower-level leaders well, so that every member down to each squad is on the same sheet of music," Fernandez said. "That's when we know that what we've taught here has been effective."

COOKIE SALE

Girl Scouts begin knocking on doors, taking orders

By Anna Oleska
USAIC Public Affairs Office

The Girl Scouts will begin their annual cookie sale for 1996 at Fort Benning Saturday until Jan. 19.

During this time, the Scouts will take preorders for cookies by going door to door. The cookies will arrive at Fort Benning Feb. 1 and the Scouts will deliver them and collect money for the orders from Feb. 2 until Feb. 23.

A booth will be set up outside the Commissary as well, with Scouts selling the Girl Scout cookies.

Eight varieties of cookies will be sold at $2.50 per box or $30 per case (12 boxes): lemon pastry cremes, peanut butter sandwich, peanut butter patties, shortbread, caramel delites, thin mints, strawberries and creme (reduced fat), and no-fat cinnamon oatmeal raisin.

All proceeds from the cookie sale go to the Concharty Council of Girl Scouts Inc. in Columbus. In turn, the council helps poverty-level Girl Scout troops reach their goals. Cookie profits afford troops an opportunity to travel, buy uniforms and supplies, pay Girl Scout registration dues for the next year, and plan activities that will benefit needy organizations.

Profits from the fund-raising cookie sale also help the council meet the cost of some of its programs such as volunteer training for Scout leaders, Council events, and Girl Scout camp for those scouts who can't meet their expenses.

Many troops set goals and develop a plan that will allow them to have activities. Some upcoming Fort Benning activities that the Scouts and Scout leaders have planned are as follows:

• Saturday — a bowling field trip for the Junior Girl Scouts, ages 9 through 11 at the Idletime Family Bowling Center in Phenix City.

• January 20 — the Cadette Girl Scout troop 135 will have a mother and daughter bingo at Dexter Elementary School. It is open to registered Girl Scouts and their parents. Admission is one canned food per card — maximum two cards per person. Canned foods go to Army Community Service's Food Locker.

Bingo games are every six months.

• Jan. 27 — The 16th Annual Girl Scout Cookie Run will take place at Lake Bottom Park starting at 9 a.m. There will be a series of five races for all ages. Awards and trophies will be given.

Other activities that the Girl Scouts conducted throughout the year are:

• Attending the Christmas tree lighting ceremony on post and singing Christmas carols at the hospital in December.

• Calendar sales on post and an annual songfest the day before Halloween to honor Juliette Gordon Low's birthday founder of the Girl Scouts.

• Twilight Camp in August where Girl Scouts on post join off-post Girl Scouts. Both registered and nonregistered scouts can attend this camp because it is meant to give all the girls an idea of what being a Girl Scout is all about.

• A weekend camping trip to Camp Concharty located in Shiloh, Ga., in May.

• Girl Scout Week March 10 through 16. The event celebrates the founding of the Girl Scouts. During this week, there is an ice cream social at the commanding general's house, a flag day celebration and a baby shower where the Scouts adopt the hospital's first-born girl that week.

• Thinking Day in February is a day of teaching the girls that individuals are all different yet alike. On this day, the girls perform a skit about a foreign country; then they make and offer food dishes from that country.

Girls interested in becoming Scouts can call Barbara Singleton, the service unit director at Fort Benning who is also a scout leader, at 689-7627.

Anna Oleska

Christa Allen, 9, Junior Girl Scout, daughter of Master Sgt. Ron J. and Ann Allen, takes a cookie order from her neighbor, Dale Blaess and her 3-year-old daughter, Ashley. Cookie orders will arrive at Fort Benning Feb. 1.

AFTB to conduct workshop for

Spouse Readiness

By Amy Durham
Special to the Bayonet©

When Stephanie Anderson took the Army Family Team Building Level 1 course last fall, she never realized she would use her new-found skills in her job.

A part-time civilian nurse at Martin Army Community Hospital, Anderson was working one of her shifts when a young soldier, fairly new to the Army, came into the Emergency Room with his wife and three-week old baby.

The infant was seriously ill and had to be evacuated to Atlanta with the mother. The soldier would have to make it on his own with his other two children. It was then that Anderson mentioned Army Emergency Relief, a community service that provides various types of assistance to soldiers in need.

Although Anderson never followed up once the family left the ER, she recognized the invaluable training she had received through AFTB.

Claudia Phillips, AFTB team leader said she is happy to hear that spouses who have been through the program are able to use the information and skills right away. But, then again, that is why AFTB was implemented.

"We've been saying, 'the Army takes care of its own,' then we realized after Desert Shield and Desert Storm that the Army really wasn't set up to take care of the family,'' Phillps said.

The need to educate and inform families about living the Army life took shape through a grass-roots effort of spouses from all walks and levels.

Program provides free education, child care

By Amy Durham
Special to the Bayonet©

Does your spouse's leave and earnings statement look foreign to you? Or do all the military acronyms you hear and see make your head spin?

If you feel like you entered a foreign country with no translator when you became an Army spouse, you're not alone.

Trainers at the Army Family Team Building office know that many spouses need assistance wading through mounds of Army-specific information.

The AFTB Extravaganza '96, an evening Level I course scheduled for Feb. 8 at 5:45 p.m., will be in the Family Unit Network Center, Building 359.

AFTB, in conjunction with Child Development Services, has 50 child-care slots available for those who register on a first-come, first-serve basis. Giveaways, games and refreshments are also a part of the evening schedule.

Open to all spouses, the seven-module workshop includes instruction about: military terms, acronyms, customs and courtesies; chains of command and concern; introduction to military and civilian community resources; benefits, entitlements and compensation; family and military expectation; impact of the mission on military life; and basic problem solving.

Soldiers and civilians receive instruction and training to prepare them for success in the total Army family, according to Claudia Phillips, AFTB team leader.

This workshop is designed to prepare Army spouses for survival and success while the soldier is in the military.

Although the Fort Benning AFTB office provides Level I courses about once a month, alternating days and evenings.

Phillips said the February extravaganza was scheduled, along with free child care, in order to take away the barriers to attendance.

"We hope we can get more people involved," she said.

To register for the Feb. 8 Level I class or for more information, call 545-5246 or 545-5931.

TVs enhance stay for patients

Martin Army Community Hospital

The Army Communities of Excellence Award has allowed Martin Army Community Hospital to grasp another opportunity in continuing customer service to active duty personnel, family members, and retirees.

After Fort Benning won this award in 1994, the hospital used some of the monetary benefits for patient enrichment, according to Maj. Frank Rowland, chief, Information Management Division at MACH.

Last year, single-line telephones were installed in each patient's room and received great reviews from the patients and their family members, he said.

The television allows freedom of choice for the patient, especially in the multi-bed rooms, he said.

Channel variations allow each patient a viewing choice. Children were found to concentrate on the cartoons than on their restrictions, and Elderly patients found a way to the world outside.

No matter how a person looks at it, the hospital will always strive to put patient concerns at the top of the list, Rowland said.

Six-year old Luke Lichtenwalner, son of Staff Sgt. Luke and Spec. Amber Lichtenwalner, watches cartoons on one of the new televisions purchased by Martin Army Community Hospital.

Association schedules training for nonmanagers

Fort Benning Management Association

The Fort Benning Management Association is planning to host a series of seminars to be presented by Troy State University.

The seminars will be presented as part of the organization's regular monthly meetings beginning Jan. 18.

The seminars are aimed at nonmanagers who want to sharpen their leadership skills. The topics will be related to ethics, team building, motivation, Malcolm Baldridge criteria, automation and its impact, taking charge of your future, psychological aspects of minority managers, leadership and productivity and stress management just to name a few.

These presentations will be given by Troy State University staff faculty. The seminars will be supplemented with case studies and panel discussions.

The charge will be $1 per session to help defray expenses. Certificates will be given for attendance at four, six and eight sessions.

Members and nonmembers may attend. Members that attend will be given extra incentives by the association.

The meetings will start at 11:30 a.m. for lunch and the seminars will run from noon to 1 p.m.

A schedule listing topics, times and locations will be provided at the January seminar, which will be conducted at the Officers' Club.

For more information, contact John Machovec at 545-5173, Bruce Piper at 545-5174, Nilsa Summey at 545-2200 or Steve Magner at 545-2420.

Make your reservations for the Jan. 18 session by Jan. 10 by calling Virginia Wright at 545-7411, Anne Wright at 545-7411 or Myrtle Chalkley at 545-4413.

The program, designed for spouses of military members ranked from private to general, has swept through all Army installations, and since 1994 has found an important spot in Fort Benning's community.

According to Phillips, support for AFTB has been immeasurable. "The command is very supportive,,'' Phillips said. "Col. Richard Rutledge, garrison commander, treats this as a readiness issue."

And readiness of the spouse is as important as soldier readiness.

"When the spouse leaves for deployment, it's too late to plan for wills or prepare powers of attorney," she said. "You can't call the military member during a war."

So AFTB trainers provide classes covering topics ranging from mission impact on family life to benefits, entitlements and compensation. The program is divided into three levels, the first of which is a seven-module, four-hour course designed for spouses who have had five years' experience or less with Army life.

The second level, geared toward spouses who have between five and ten years of experience, expands on basic military community information. Because much of the instruction also highlights leadership and management skills, the 19 modules are offered on an on-going basis .

Impressed with the amount of information, Debra Welch, a family member whose husband decided to re-enter the Army shortly after they married, commited herself to completing the second level because she felt what she was learning could help her in every aspect of her life.

"The instructors even teach you how to do a resume," she said, "and how to use volunteer work to build the resume."

The benefits and entitlements class Anderson attended ultimately saved her and her husband roughly several thousands dollars, she said. Her husband's pay had been incorrect since his rank change from enlisted to officer.

With the information she received from that class, Anderson, with LESs in hand, made an appointment with the Finance and Accounting Office and found out they were due about $3,000.

"It was easier for me to handle the situation," she said, "than for him to get out of classes."

Anderson plans to look up the AFTB office when she and her husband relocate to Fort Campbell - something Phillips says should be easy. "Because AFTB is Army-wide," she said, "you can complete the program elsewhere."

Meanwhile Fort Benning's AFTB program leaders continue to concentrate on teaching as many spouses in the first two levels while they makes preparations to implement the third level.

Training school seeks local student sponsors

By Judith Ginder

School of the Americas

Aloha. Shalom. Yo. Halo. Bonjour. Hola. Hello.

It's a greeting that's the same regardless of the language. The same can also be said of the training at the School of the Americas — whether in English or Spanish, the message is the same.

Some courses at SOA last an entire year, and the students enrolled in them usually bring their families. In addition, Latin American guest instructors are assigned to the school for two years and bring their families as well.

That's where HOLA comes in. HOLA, meaning hello in Spanish, is an organiztion comprised of volunteers whose main purpose is to welcome guest instructors, students and their families to the United States and to the school.

"Volunteer sponsors are matched with either a student or an instructor," said Cecilia Alexander, HOLA coordinator. "HOLA hosts a getting — acquainted open house for the initial meeting of the two groups."

Alexander said one of the biggest benefits of HOLA is it sponsors show the Latin Americans what normal, everyday life in the United States is like.

"We encourage our sponsors not to put on a big show with parties and lavish meal just to impress their guests," she said. "The whole point of the program is to welcome the families into the community and to make them feel at home."

You don't have to speak Spanish to become an HOLA sponsor, Alexander said, since some of the students and guest instructors do speak English. However, she said that being able to speak some Spanish is helpful.

Not only is the sponsor program a learning experience for the Latin American families assigned at SOA, but for the sponsoring American families as well, she said.

HOLA is looking for individuals to volunteer for the program. For more information, contact Cecilia Alexander at 545-1285.

ADAPCP helps workforce beat substance abuse

USAIC Public Affairs Office

The young man looks around nervously as he steps through the door. He puts his hands in his pockets, trying to conceal the trembling. The sweat trickles down his brow. He looks over his shoulder, carefully eyeing the people in the room for some glimpse of familiarity. He slowly approaches the receptionist.

"May I help you?"

"Yes, I need to talk to somebody," he stutters in a low voice.

This is a common scene at the Fort Benning Civilian Counseling Service. It is also the first step a person can take toward getting help for alcohol, drugs or personal problems.

"Untreated substance abuse is a billion dollar hangover, " Yvonne Wilbanks, civilian program coordinator at Alcohol and Drug Abuse Prevention and Control Program, said.

Studies have indicated that at any given time 18 percent of certain workforces are experiencing problems such as alcoholism (10 percent), drug abuse (2 percent) and mental health problems, (6 percent).

According to alcohol and Drug Abuse Prevention Control Program statistics, the troubled employee is absent 16 times more and has an accident rate 3.6 times higher than the average employee.

In addition, these employees utilize their sick benefits three times more and their compensation five times more than the average employee.

Overall, these employees are only functioning at 67 percent capacity.

Because of these somewhat staggering statistics, the CCS has expanded its services to meet the needs of the Fort Benning civilian community.

The service officers help to both appropriated and non-appropriated fund Department of the Army employees and their families.

"The CCS of the ADAPCP functions as a screening service for all eligible employees whose job performance, conduct or attendance appears affected by a personal problem," explained Wilbanks.

"If the problem has its basis in alcohol or other drug abuse, the ADAPCP provides out-patient counseling or referral services designed to resolve the problem," she said.

According to Wilbanks, supervisors play an important role in resolving employees' problems. "Supervisors need to be aware of the signs that indicate an employee may be having trouble," she said.

She went on to say that absenteeism is another indication of trouble such as continued absences form post, long coffee breaks and physical illness on the job. An employee experiencing problems will exhibit difficulty in concentration and spasmodic work patterns.

Generally the employee has lowered job efficiency and makes bad decisions. Recognizing employees with problems is just the beginning to getting help for them.

"Often it is the supervisor's responsibility to approach the worker and recommend counseling.

"Supervisors need to be aware that if an employee receives a driving under the influence citation on post, while on duty, it is mandatory that they are referred to CCS," Wilbanks said.

"Many times the person will come in on their own and not even know what the problem is. We try to help them identify it," Wilbanks said.

Once the employee gets to ADAPCP the road to recovery begins.

The service is free and Wilbanks guarantees that all contacts are kept confidential. "We mostly do screening and referral. We encourage people who are having any kind of problem that's personal in nature to call and set up an appointment. Sometimes it helps to just come in and talk," Wilbanks said.

"Ours is a free out-patient service but if they need to go to the hospital, it's at their insurance's expense," Wilbanks said. Any civilian employee or family member needing to speak with someone about a problem may call 545-2475 or visit Building 324.

There is also an extensive program for soldiers who may believe they have a problem with alcohol or drugs. The system for dealing with soldiers' problems is a bit different, but the purpose is the same. The office is there to help those who need it. Soldiers desiring help can call 545-2475.

COCAINE ABUSE

Know the drug's effects

Cocaine is a naturally occurring stimulant derived form the leaves of the coca plant. (The leaves contain about one-half of one percent pure cocaine.)

Pure cocaine gives a feeling of euphoria because of cocaine's release of neurotransmitter dopamine.

The cocaine abuser experiences the following stages of drug effects:

- Acute intoxication marked by reckless behavior
- The crash replaces euphoria with longer term feelings of anxiety, fatigue and depression. Abusers are prone to try to alleviate this discomfort with more cocaine or other drugs.
- A withdrawal stage sets the scene for desire of more drugs since a lengthy period of depression and inability to derive normal pleasure form life occurs.

Symptoms of cocaine abuse

- Sleeplessness
- Anhedonia
- Increased accidents
- Poor appetite
- Depression
- Fatigue
- Paranoia
- Reduced sexual performance

ask the judge

Staff Judge Advocate's Office

Q: During our last permanent change of station move, the packers from the moving company listed every minor nick and scratch on the inventory as preexisting and exaggerated the extent of the damage. When we filed our claim, we were unable to recover the full amount of the damage because we were unable to prove that the new damage was unrelated to the old. What can we do to protect ourselves on our next move?

A: Unfortunately, the relationship between a moving company and a soldier can often be adversarial in nature. Packers may not be motivated by the best interests of either the soldier or the carrier who ultimately deals with claims for damages to household goods.

Indeed, many packers actually inflate the degree of damage found on furniture and may pack property with as few inventory entries as possible.

The first practice, known as preexisting damage inflation, allows the carrier to claim that all the damage noted at destination existed before the move. The second, commonly referred to as hiding damage, allows the moving company to argue that missing items were not documented and were never tendered to the carrier for shipment. The result of either practice is that Army claims offices have a difficult time paying for missing or damaged items.

The service member should meet the challenge of deceptive packers or carriers by thinking of his or her home as a battlefield. As with any battle, preparation and planning are the key to success.

First, the service member should take pictures of all the property. A video camera is an effective tool for this purpose. Second, the soldier should divide his or her family into supervision teams responsible for the packing and inventory listings of a particular carrier employee. Third, the soldier must carefully study the codes listed at the top of each inventory sheet (SC = scratched, CH = chipped, MR = marred, etc.). These codes are used to describe preexisting damage.

Once familiar with these codes, family members should carefully consider the codes entered on each line of the inventory. If they disagree with description of preexisting damage, they should immediately inform the packer of the problem. If the packer will not change the code input, the soldier should make a note of this on the inventory, e.g. "disagree with damage," and take a photograph of the contested item.

These procedures should be followed for each item of significant value. This places the carrier on notice that the service member was an active participant in the move, making a claim for loss or damage more credible.

Also, photographs and inventory notations provide Army claims offices with the substantiation needed to pay potential claims and to seek reimbursement from the carrier.

For more information, contact the Claims Division, Office of the Staff Judge Advocate, at 545-2285.

Home fire plan prevents destruction

Better Business Bureau

House fires are a major cause of accidental death. Each year, there are more than 700,000 home fires in the United States and approximately 5,200 deaths. There are steps that can be taken to help prevent death and destruction caused by fires.

More than 700,000 home fires devastate American families each year. Following simple steps can help prevent destruction

Fireproof your home

A smoke detector is a life protector; at least one should be placed on all floors of a home. Since, most fatal home fires occur at night while people are asleep, a properly working smoke detector can awaken you in time to escape. Smoke detectors save lives every day, but they cannot save lives if they are installed incorrectly or not in good working order. Here are some tips to remember:

- Make sure at least one smoke detector is outside each bedroom.
- When installing a smoke detector, read the manufacturer's instructions and follow them carefully.
- Make sure battery-powered detectors are working and batteries are replaced at least once a year.
- Never paint a smoke detector and keep dust and cobwebs away.
- Test your detector weekly — most have a button you can push that tests all the functions.

It is also important to keep a working fire extinguisher in the kitchen. Store flammable or combustible liquids in approved containers and outside of the house structure if possible. Make sure you do not overload extension cords and regularly inspect for loose or faulty wiring.

Take extra care when using fireplaces, wood stoves or electric space heaters. Keep paper, flammable or combustible materials and furniture at least three feet away from any alternative heating source. Keep your fireplace, chimney and wood stove clean and in good working order.

Another reminder for home safety is to insist that no one smokes in a bed. Smoking is dangerous and causes a tremendous amount of property damage, injury and death every year.

Make an escape route

As part of a family's fire safety prevention, everyone in the household should be familiar with the escape plan. There should be at least two ways to escape from every room in the home. If needed, make or purchase rope or chain ladders to use to climb out of upper level rooms. The family should plan where to meet after escaping from the home and discuss what to do about pets.

In case of a fire, everyone should get out of the house as quickly as possible. When leaving, crawl to the door on your hands and knees. Most smoke and poisonous gases collect near the ceiling. Before opening any door, feel it first. If it is hot, do not open the door; use an alternative escape route. If you leave a room through a door, close it behind you; this helps keep smoke and fire out. Once you are out of a house, go to the closest phone to call the fire department. Remember, escape first; then call for help.

In case a person's clothes catch on fire, attempt to smother the flames with a blanket or rug. If nothing is available, roll the person on the ground to put out the flames. Just remember, stop, drop, and roll.

Fight the fire

Some small fires do not pose an immediate threat and can be safely extinguished. If it is a cooking fire, turn off the stove, cover the pot or pan with a lid and remove from the burner. If the fire is in the oven, close the door and turn off the heat. Electrical fires need to be smothered with a blanket or other similar object, and the appliance on fire unplugged. Any other small fires can be smothered with a pillow or blanket.

Remember, safety is the number one concern. Fires can spread rapidly. Never take chances. If you feel a fire is spreading or your safety is threatened, get out and leave the firefighting to the trained professionals.

Hopefully taking the above steps to prevent fires will be successful. But, in case of a fire, remember calm, rational action based on your family's preparations will save lives.

Use caution choosing financial adviser

Better Business Bureau

Consumers look to financial planners to provide objective, knowledgeable advice about managing an important aspect of their lives: their money.

Because the field is largely unregulated, however, the title "financial planner" does not guarantee any level of qualifications or expertise.

Consumers, therefore, need to exercise caution when choosing someone with whom to entrust financial resources.

Recommendations from friends, relatives and colleagues may be a good first step to finding a financial planner. Carefully consider the education and professional background of prospective planners. Financial planners who hold are registered financial consultants, certified financial planners or chartered financial consultants or who are members of the National Association of Personal Financial Advisers have codes on ethics, honesty, and conflicts of interests that they are obligated to uphold.

Once you have selected a prospective planner, schedule a preliminary interview. Question the financial planner about his or her professional background, education, employment history, investment philosophy and areas of specialization.

Ask for the names of recent clients and examples of plans and monitoring reports. Does the planner keep current on financial matters through continuing education and training? Also ask how the financial planner expects to be compensated (e.g., fees, commissions or a combination of the two) and get a written estimate of the cost of services.

Remember, a good financial planner should help you get a clear picture of your financial situation and lay the foundation for future investment decisions. Beware of planners who offer few or no alternatives in your investment plan, which may indicate the planner's intent to steer you into a fraudulent scheme or sell a specific product for the commission.

Similarly, avoid planners who use high pressure sales tactics or promise unusually high rates of return on investments. Be on guard for possible schemes that can masquerade as tax shelters, precious metals, commodities, high-tech stocks and other investment vehicles.

Further protect yourself against fraud by contacting your Better Business Bureau to determine if the planner has a back ground of noncompliance with state and federal laws or a history of complaints.

For additional information, contact your Better Business Bureau to request a "Tips On Financial Planners" brochure.

TACTICAL PISTOL MATCH

Pistol Club competitors shoot it out

By Lori Egan
Bayonet staff writer

Photos by Lori Egan

Mark Ashley concentrates on the targets while he fires during the first Tactical Pistol Match of the year.

Shooters shot it out during the Fort Benning Rifle and Pistol Club's first Tactical Pistol Match of the year Saturday on English Range.

More than 65 shooters participated in the competition, which included a new category — the team category. One member of the team must be female, which brought in some new shooters.

Marianna C. Douglas, 15, competed with her father, Pat, in the team category.

"I've only shot a 9 mm Glock one other time," Marianna said. "I've been dry firing it so hopefully I'll do OK. I've got my fingers crossed."

"Because of her age, Marianna had to come out to the range and show she could handle the gun before she could register for the competition," Pat said. "She's very accurate with .22-caliber rifle."

Another new competitor was Toni Lucas, 16, who was also participating with her father in the team category.

"I started shooting when I was 11 or 12," Lucas said. "Dad lives in the boondocks, and I used to shoot out in front of his house. I like shooting with a bigger gun because it's more exciting to shoot when you have more power. But the smaller guns are more convenient for these matches because they are more controllable."

The Fort Benning Rifle and Pistol Club's Tactical Pistol Match draws people from all over. Alexandra Smith came from Atlanta to participate in the match.

"I come (to Fort Benning) to shoot in these tactical matches," Smith said. "When I moved from New York to Atlanta, I felt out of my element and I wanted some protection so I bought a gun. I took lessons from Jim Graham and I come to the matches because just shooting in a gun club doesn't make you feel that confident about having a gun in the house.

"I came down for the stress fire match this summer. In that match, there is a guy with a paintball gun shooting back at you. I just forgot all about him and stood up. I got a paintball in the middle of my chest. These guys remember things like that. But that's why I like to come down to shoot in the tactical match; it's more real than just target practice."

"Every match is competitive and challenging," said Bill Odom, who competes in every match. "It brings out your best, you get to come out and see how you do against others, which is important. Practice makes perfect."

The competitors fired in three timed positions: vehicle, standing, and Mozambique. For all three positions, competitors were allowed six rounds of ammunition in one clip and 10 rounds in the second clip.

When shooting in the vehicle position, competitors started with their hands in their lap. Then they reached through the car window to pick up the gun, loaded it with six rounds and began to fire at the targets. After the first clip was fired, competitors had to reload and finish shooting at the targets.

In the standing position, competitors fired at four Brussel targets and four poppers, which fall down after they are hit. Competitors were required to put two rounds in each Brussel target and knock down the poppers with the remaining rounds.

In the Mozambique position, shooters had to move from one station after firing six rounds to another place about twenty yards away to finish firing at the targets.

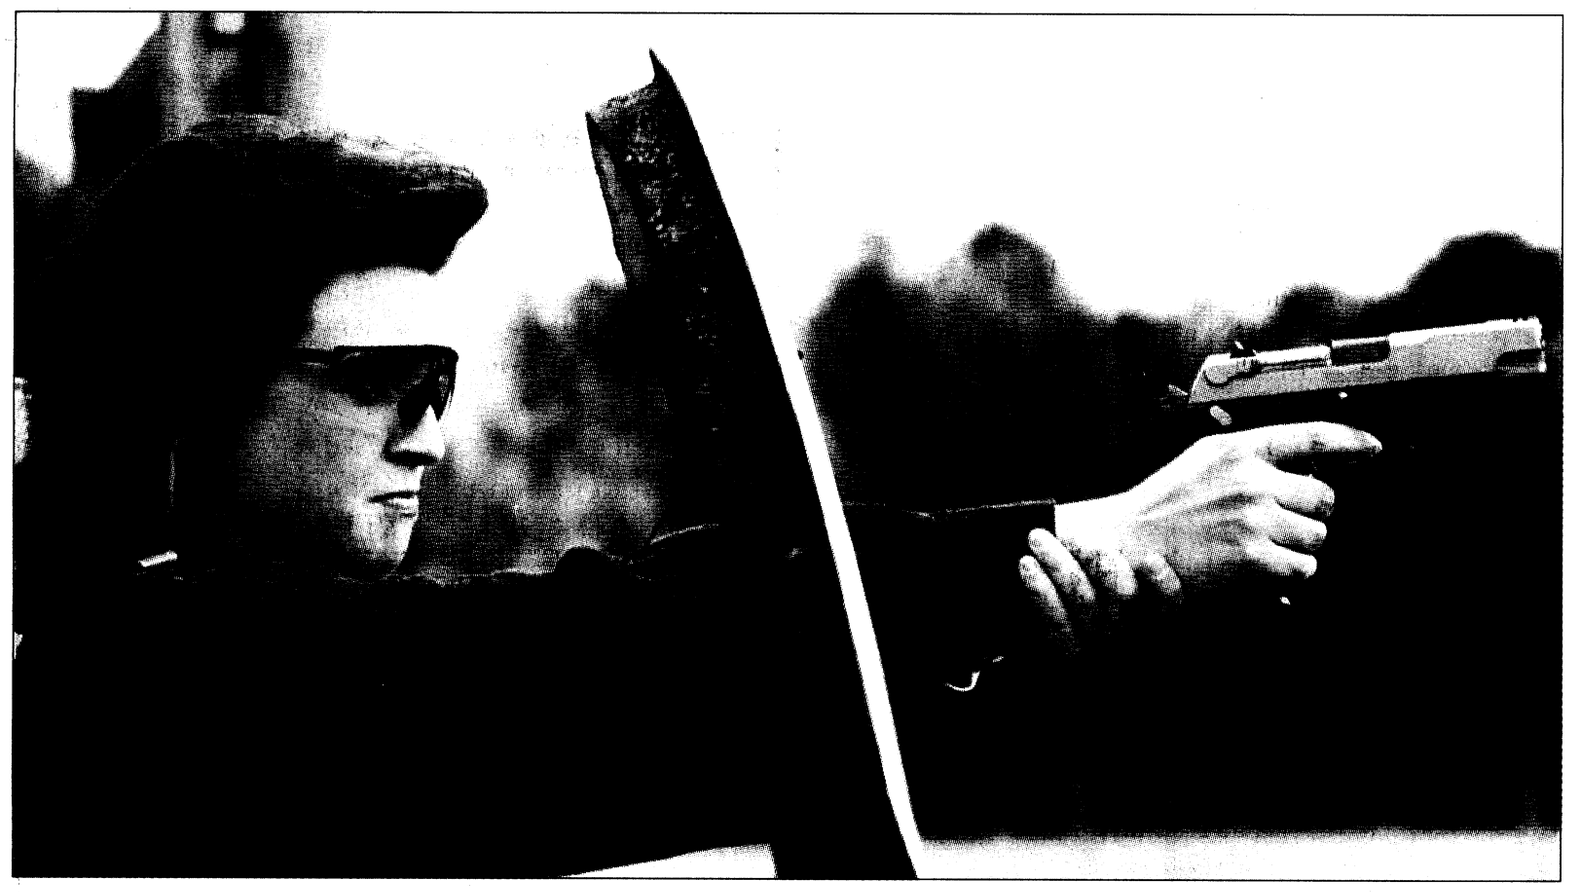
"Misses penalize you in two ways — it takes time to miss and it also costs you time, because with each miss three seconds are added to your time," said Richard A. Bass, a range officer for the match.

The top three finishers in the competitor division were: James Odom, with a score of 165, a time of 38.45 and a hit factor of 4.291. Charles W. Rolling Jr. finished in second place with a score of 168, a time of 39.67 and a hit factor of 4.235. Finishing out the competitor class was Lawrence Cox in third place with a score of 171, a time 42.90 and a hit factor of 3.986.

The top three finishers in the standard category were: Alan June, who finished in first place with a score of 167, a time of 44.43 and a hit factor of 3.759. Second place went to Donald Schleicher, who scored 172 with a time of 46.18 and a hit factor of 3.725. Danny Stearns finished in third place. His score was 167, his time was 45.84 and the hit factor was 3.643.

In the military category the top finishers were: Paul Ford, with a score of 167, a time of 51.47 and a hit factor of 3.245. Second place went to Robert Arserio. He scored 174 in a time of 58.13 with a hit factor 2.993. Finishing in third place was Richard Link with a score of 172, a time of 59.17 and a hit factor of 2.907.

The top three finishers in the law enforcement division were: Morris Lewark, with a score of 174, a time of 43.85 and a hit factor of 3.968. Jerry Caraway finished in second place with a score of 177, a time of 64.72 and a hit factor 2.735. Third place went to Harold English with a score of 159, a time of 60.47 and a hit factor of 2.629.



The top finishers in the female category were: Valerie Long in first place with a score of 167, a time of 70.18 and a hit factor of 2.380. In second place was Rita Means. Her score was 155, her time was 99.49 and her hit factor was 1.558. Finishing in third place was Marilyn Stull with a score of 137 in a time of 106.84 and a hit factor of 1.282.

The top two new shooters in the female category were Toni Ann Lucas and Marianna Douglas. Lucas's score was 154 in a time of 125.62 and a hit factor of 1.226. Douglas finished second with a score of 143 in a time of 119.54 and a hit factor of 1.196.

The top three male new shooters were: John Gilliland in first place with a score of 170, a time of 59.51 and a hit factor of 2.857. In second place was Tony Lucas, with a score was 170, a time of 75.73 and a hit factor of 2.245. David Lahr finished in third place with a score of 164, a time of 86.09 and a hit factor of 1.905.

In the new team category, the top three teams were: Rita Means and Morris Lewark in first place, Marianna and Pat Douglas in second place and Toni Ann and Tony Lucas finished in third place.

The next Tactical Pistol Match is scheduled for Feb. 3. The entry fee is $12 if paid by Jan. 31 and $16 after that date.

Marilyn Stull takes aim while firing in the vehicle position, which is one of the three firing positions of the Tactical Pistol Match. The other two positions are the Mozambique and the standing firing positions.

Begin by joining the 16th annual Girl Scout Cookie Run at Weracoba Park (Lakebottom) Jan. 27.

The theme for the run is "Reach for the Stars Through Health and Fitness," which will be featured on the long sleeve T-shirt.

Several races will be run that day including a tot trot for children under four years of age and the Girl Scout troop relays will also be run in the morning. The first race starts at 9 a.m.

The prerace registration fee is $10 for adults and $7 for children going to $12 and $9 respectively on race day. Businesses and groups of 20 or more can register for $9 per person.

You may register at any Barnett Bank branch or the Girl Scout Office at 1344 13th Ave. before race day, or you can come early on race day to register at Lakebottom.

The race proceeds will benefit Concharty Council of Girl Scouts, which serves girls in 12 counties and Fort Benning.

The first Cookie Run, conducted in 1981 featured two events — the 1.5-mile and five-mile runs. More than 1,000 people participated on that sunny, winter day with the temperature in the 60s. As years passed, more events were added, including the Wheelchair Event in 1983 and handicapped participation in 1986.

11:15 a.m. — 100-yard Tot Trot (for children 4 and under)

No room for snowballs in sports

By Brian R. Voller
Bayonet staff writer

commentary

Brian R. Voller thinks unsports-manlike conduct fines should apply to fans, too.

A couple of weeks ago, there was an unfortunate incident of some New York Giants fans throwing snowballs at other fans and the San Diego Chargers.

Thank God for the photographers at the New York Post who were smart enough to take photos of the people throwing the snowballs. To me, it was poetic justice to see the full-color, full-page photo of one of the idiots who threw the snowballs.

After this little, annoying incident occurred, the press had a field day calling the snowballers a bunch of losers who couldn't stand to lose a ball game. Rightly so. If I was part of a major newspaper or a large television company, I would have gone to town on the fools, too.

Another group that went to town on the snowballers was the New York Giants franchise. They urged anyone knowing the identity of the man who made the front page to call the Giants so they could revoke his season ticket. As it turned out, this man either had very few friends or a lot of enemies, because the next day twenty or so people had called to identify him. Unfortunately, this gutless wonder didn't have a season ticket to be taken away, but he did get slapped with a nice fine and an embarrassing photo that everyone can see.

What's gone unnoticed so far, though, is what kind of person this guy or these people were. I shouldn't just rip on this one guy; he was not alone in his stupidity.

To me, the act of hating a team or several teams is a normal act of being a sports fan. For instance, I'd like to see the Green Bay Packers swallowed up by a hellish black hole never to be seen again. The big difference here is that what I say is just words, just trash talk if you will. I truthfully would never want to see the Packers swallowed up by a black hole.

This is all a sign of maturity. While I don't consider myself to be the maturest of people on the planet, as the people who work with me can attest, I do consider myself adult enough not to throw snowballs at the winning team. That kind of behavior reminds of kids on the playground who are mad about the kickball game played during recess.

This kind of behavior is not just a New York thing either. In my hometown just outside of Chicago, I've been lucky enough to see Bears fans throw snowballs at the New Orleans Saints. I got to watch Bulls fans start a riot after the Bulls won their second championship. And, worst of all I had to watch a woman cry when an obnoxious-drunken loser ripped her San Jose Sharks hat right off her head and threw it down to the ice when Jeremy Roenick scored a hat trick.

This behavior and this "I'm a superfan" type mentality is not needed anywhere in the sporting world. It's good to be a fan, and it's good to be loyal to your home team or your favorite team. But, when your activity starts to border on criminal activity or simply when you start to make a fool out of yourself, it's time to take a step back and think about what it is you're doing.

Remember the Golden Rule, do unto others as you would have them do to you. I'm pretty sure getting pelted with snowballs would wind up pretty low on the list of things people would like to have done to them at a football game.

U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit soldier help train Olympic volunteers

By Marlene E. English
U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit

Knowing the rules is part of the game for volunteers hoping to officiate international shooting competition during the Olympic games in Atlanta next summer.

And, when the stakes for competitive marksmen are as high as the possibility of winning a gold medal for self and nation, maintenance of those rules of competition is crucial.

According to Gary Anderson, that's why the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit became involved in the effort of training those volunteers through the International Shooting Union's Competition Judge's Course which took place Dec. 8 through 10.

Anderson, a two-time Olympic gold medalist and former member of the USAMU who's now the competition manager of shooting for the Atlanta Committee for the Olympic Games, said the USAMU's participation in the event gives the volunteers a chance to associate with world-caliber shooters and the opportunity to train on ranges similar to those that will be used during the Olympics.

"In other words," Anderson said, "this is as close to the real thing as it gets."

So far, the USAMU has a number of soldier-marksmen in contention for participation in the Olympics. The role of these soldiers during the three-day course, which consists of 30 hours of training for the volunteers, is to assist the 12 course instructors — all who have either competed or coached in the Olympics — by demonstrating what Olympic-caliber shooting is all about.

Even though this is something USAMU soldiers do on a daily basis, Spc. Justin E. Hensel, a member of the unit's Shotgun Team who recently was named to the U.S. National Team, said it's the same — only different.

"The difference being that now they're asking us to break the rules instead of following them," Hensel said.

The reasoning for this is simple.

"We want to know how much of the rules the volunteers learned through class time and study of their UIT rulebooks for the shooting discipline they'll be officiating," Anderson said.

However, even though the reasoning is simple, actually catching the shooters "breaking the rules" is another story.

Everything from hand positioning and foot stance to basic elements of range safety and how to handle a shooter whose weapon has malfunctioned is covered in the course, Anderson said.

While some of it's pretty basic, some of it's not.

"Take hand positioning for instance," Hensel said. A marksman's improper positioning of his hands on a shotgun isn't always easy to catch — as a lot of the volunteers discovered.

"We try to find ways of helping them along though," Hensel said, demonstrating a side-long glance that let's a volunteer officiator know all's not quite right on the firing line.

One volunteer, Mike Lawler, appreciates any assistance the USAMU soldiers have to offer.

"It's a tough course," said Lawler, who came to the course after seeing an advertisement in his local newspaper soliciting volunteers to officiate at Olympic shooting competitions.

Yet Lawler, himself a trap and skeet shooter, admits he wasn't overly enthused about dedicating so much effort to becoming a certified officiator.

"It was months ago when I first saw the ad," Lawyer said. "The Olympics seemed so far away then that it was tough for me to get into the swing of things."

But now, with the Olympics looming large on the 1996 horizon, Lawler said he thinks of nothing else than being a part of such an event.

"This is the Olympics we're talking about — a giant gathering of the best athletes from around the world. And it's all happening in our back yard," Lawler said. "Who wouldn't want to be part of that?"

Who indeed? Certainly not any of the 48 volunteers, who, like Lawyer, come from Atlanta and surrounding areas in the hopes of becoming certified officials in any of the Olympic Games shooting disciplines, which includes: shotgun, running target, international rifle and international pistol.

Still, this is only the beginning for the volunteers. After completion of the course, their names are forwarded to the UIT — the organization that has the final say on who will become certified officials at the Olympic Games.

"The UIT looks at many variables, not only at who has completed the judge's course, but also at who has had shooting experience, either as professionals or hobbyists," Anderson said.

However, Lawler maintains the cost is worth the payoff.

"This is a once in a life-time opportunity," he said. "I want to take it while I have the chance."

Acknowledge God when setting goals

By Tom Wheatley
Ranger Training Brigade

Did you make any resolutions for the new year? And, have you broken any of them?

I usually get excited about greeting the coming year with all kinds of things I am going to do better or differently; then after a week or two, I have already failed in some of those areas.

As an example, I always vow to write more of the friends my wife and I have met along the way in the military. Then when one or two months have passed and I have written no one, I get frustrated and discouraged about my failure to live up to my vow. Many people experience the same frustration year after year.

This year, in thinking and praying about how best to keep resolutions, let's trust God more when deciding what to try to accomplish in the new year and how it should be accomplished.

First, we can let God lead us to those things that are important and let God set the priorities. "Trust in the Lord with all thine heart; and lean not unto thine own understanding. In all thy ways acknowledge him, and he shall direct thy paths (Proverbs 3:5-6 KJV).

Divine inspiration, which is always available to us, will guide us to the right activities. With God setting the priorities, he will help us plan only those things that can be achieved, and he will help us to succeed in those things since he planned them.

That brings us to the second point. Too often we try to succeed in life without God. Our human selves like to believe that we are masters of our own destiny and can plan and run our days on our own. The problem is that life is very unfulfilling and unsuccessful if lived this way.

Our need is to recognize God and his plan for each of our days. Then, we will find that he gives us everything we need to succeed since he planned it in the first place. This passage, from Revelation 21:5, jumped out at me the other day as I thought about the new year: "... he that sat upon the throne said, 'Behold, I make all things new'."

In this passage, John is describing the new heaven and the new earth, but it spoke to me that it is God only that makes all things new. We can't do it ourselves even if we want to. That got me thinking about how burdened we often get going into the new year with all the same old responsibilities and tasks, plus trying to keep our new resolutions in which we seem to be failing.

Jesus' words provide an answer to these frustrations and burdens: "Come unto me, all ye that labour and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest. Take my yoke upon you, and learn of me: for I am meek and lowly in heart: and ye shall find rest unto your souls. For my yoke is easy, and my burden is light." (Matt. 11:28-30 KJV).

Turning to Christ as we enter the new year will give us peace of mind as we approach our daily tasks. We can begin to experience the tireless energy that comes from resting in God and allowing him to guide us and provide to us what we need moment by moment. Then the promise from II Corinthians 6:17 will come to pass for us: "Therefore if any man be in Christ, he is a new creature: old things are passed away; behold, all things are become new." (KJV) We must trust God to bring it about. And, when we do, this will truly be a good year for us!

Fellowship seeks members

By Steven G. Chittum,
Garrison sergeant major

The Fort Benning chapter of the Christian Military Fellowship is beginning a membership drive this month.

Christian Military Fellowship is an association of committed Christian believers who are serving in the U.S. armed forces or who are associated with the military community. The CMF is a nondenominational organization.

CMF members hope to introduce people to Jesus Christ and to help Christians grow in their faith within the military society; a peer ministry to military people by military people. Members are part of a worldwide prayer family. Members of the local chapter get together for prayer, fellowship, Bible study, and organized retreat. The objectives are emphasized by the CMF motto: To win, to disciple, to equip., to win.

Regular members are current or former active duty members of any branch of the armed forces. Associate members are those who have not served in the armed forces, including spouses, family members and the installation civilian work force.

There are no membership dues. CMF is financed by the voluntary gifts of members and friends. The Fort Benning Chapter works with the installation and unit chaplains.

To join, fill out and send in a membership application. For applications or more information call 545-2939.

The goals of the Fort Benning Chapter of the CMF are:

- To have 50 members by April 1.
- To develop the Infantry Center prayer reminder, "Battle Report."
- To organize, plan and execute a quarterly retreat.
- To meet twice monthly for ministry and fellowship. To work side by side with the Officers Christian Fellowship to achieve the objectives of outreach and fellowship.

Positive focus strengthens

By Jeffrey L. Voyles
3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division

Every day needs a focus. We all need encouragement and support in our lives. Often one thought will carry us through the day; a thought that causes us to re-evaluate life. Chaplains are often called on for a thought that focuses upon the important things of life.

"What is the thought for the day? What is the good word?" These are common questions asked of chaplains at Fort Benning and throughout the Army. The response to these questions is usually a quote, verse or a very brief devotional thought.

A common quote is, "God is good all the time." A few common verses include Proverbs 3:5, "Trust in the Lord with all your heart," verses 1 and 2 of Psalm 121, "I lift up my eyes to the hills where my help comes from. My help comes from the Lord, the maker of heaven and earth," and Philippians 4:13, "I can do everything through Him who gives me strength."

Occasionally, thoughts for the day are longer. For example, "Dogs have fleas and people have problems." The message was that if you are going to own and enjoy a dog, you have to endure fleas. You can buy a flea collar for the dog. You can use flea spray, dip or powder. But the fleas always come back.

Life is similar. Life comes with both good and bad. Celebrate and enjoy the good and learn to live with the bad.

Another brief thought, "Don't tear it down until you know why it was built." Often we want to change things before we understand them. This includes rules, traditions and ways of relating.

There were three little boys that were told by their father not to cross a particular fence. He did not explain why and they did not ask.

Later the boys decided to cross the fence only to be chased out by a big red bull. If those boys had checked to see why the rule was in place, they may have never encountered the bull.

The last thought is about Robert E. Lee. The story goes that Lee was walking in the snow and noticed his son walking behind him. His son was stretching each step to place his feet in Lee's tracks.

"I must be very careful to walk straight with my son following so closely," Lee said.

It is extremely important for each of us to watch our steps. You never know who is following your example.

Thoughts for the day are good.

Confirmation classes

Beginning Jan. 23, confirmation classes will be conducted at 3:45 p.m. every Tuesday at the Religious Education Center, Building 2518.

Open to junior and high school students, these classes, also referred to as communicants classes, are considered preparation for joining the church or making a public profession of faith. The classes will be general Protestant in faith. Upon completion, students will be referred to chaplains of their faith group for further instruction as requested.

Call 545-2359 for more information.

Praise and worship service — A nondenominational general Protestant service, including worship, praise, singing, prayer, teaching, and preaching, will be conducted every Sunday at the Infantry Center Chapel from 6 to 8 p.m.

Everyone is invited, including single, married, active duty, retired, families, friends, relatives, National Guard, Reserves, enlisted, non-commissioned officers and officers.

Refreshments and fellowship will take place after the service in the chapel annex. Child care will be available.

First communion classes — First communion classes will begin Tuesday at 7 p.m. in the Religious Education Center, Building 2521.

The first session will be an overview of the program for parents and children.

Children in grades two through six are eligible to attend, provided they attended Confraternity of Christian Doctrine or Catholic school last year.

Musicians needed — The custodian of the Consolidated Chaplains' Fund is receiving applications for watch-care giver, pianists and choir directors.

For more information, call Staff Sgt. Phyllis Swinson at 545-1934.

Sunday School — The Fort Benning Sunday School is open every Sunday, and all personnel can attend. There are classes for 2-year-olds through adults. Sunday School is located in the Religious Education Center, Building 2517. Classes are from 9:30 to 10:30 a.m.

Mass change — The Mass formerly celebrated at 9 a.m. Sundays at the Main Post Catholic Chapel will be celebrated at 8:45 a.m.

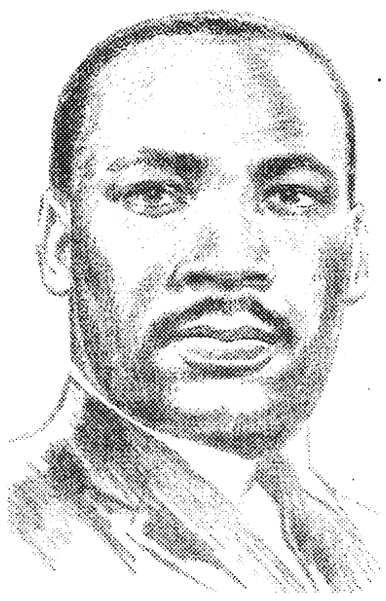
Jewish service change — The Jewish service will be conducted at 7:30 p.m. Fridays at Regimental Chapel. Torah study remains at 9:45 a.m. Sundays.

church brief

Promise Keepers — The Columbus Promise Keepers meet the second and fourth Saturdays of each month at 8 a.m. at the Po Folks Restaurant on Airport Thruway.

Promise Keepers, directed by Joe Miles, is a men's group dedicated to strengthening families through Christian principles.

For more information, call 545-1457 or 561-8551 or Mac Scow at 689-9915.



Essence of dream can still unify nation

By Brenda A. Ruiz
USAIC Chaplain Office

Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. was born Jan. 15, 1929, in Atlanta, Ga. He was a preacher of the Gospel of Jesus Christ, and a teacher of the Gandhi nonviolent method of social change.

During his life, King became the central figure and leader of the nonviolent black movement. A man of destiny, he was involved with education in nonviolent struggle and economic development and changed the course of history. King lived a life of love and peace and gave his life for justice. His leadership still speaks clearly to the conscience of everyone.

While King led a movement focused on the liberation of black people in America, the impact of his life's work has affected freedom and equality throughout the human race.

reflections

What was unique about King was that he not only preached his ideas with uncommon passion and eloquence, but he also demonstrated his ideas by leading people in a nonviolent struggle for the fulfillment of those ideas. King's philosophy of nonviolence was drawn from his Christian faith.

The Martin Luther King Jr. holiday, the third Monday of January, was passed by Congress and signed by the president of the United States as an official federal holiday. It provides a powerful opportunity to remind soldiers, as well as all citizens, of our nation's commitment and responsibility to peace, freedom, equality and justice.

While this observance should not be perceived as a "black holiday," it is a way to honor the contributions of black citizens to America. King believed that Americans of all races must learn to live together.

For this reason, the observance must be substantive and symbolic. It must be more than a day of celebration. The holiday must be considered more than just a "day off." It must be used as a day of reflection, a day of teaching nonviolent (philosophy and strategy) and a day of getting involved in action for social and economic progress.

As a nation chooses its heroes and heroines, it interprets its history and shapes its destiny. The commemoration of the life and work of King can help this nation realize its true destiny as the global model for democracy. This observance can help unify America in the spirit of King's dream.

"Blessed is the nation whose God is the Lord."

RECOVERY FROM GRIEF BEGINS THIS SUNDAY, JANUARY 7TH.
Almost all of us have experienced a loss in our lives: loss of a parent, child or spouse; loss of a job; loss of good health, etc. Many people do not know what steps must be taken to ensure a healthy recovery from grief.
Beginning this Sunday, January 7th, at 8:30 a.m., Cascade Hills Baptist Church will begin a seven week study on Dealing with Grief and Loss entitled "Hope in the Midst of Pain."

Jan. 7	Session #1	When It All Collapses
Jan. 14	Session #2	Denial
Jan. 21	Session #3	Anger
Jan. 28	Session #4	Bargaining
Feb. 4	Session #5	Depression
Feb. 11	Session #6	Acceptance
Feb. 18	Session #7	Hope

Cascade Hills Baptist Church
4510 Oates Avenue
Columbus, Georgia

Commissary

Facility to get complete $8.9 million facelift by March 1997

Anna O'Leska

Sam Carter of Gilley's Heating and Air Conditioning Company renovates the produce section of the Commissary.

By Anna Oleska
USAIC Public Affairs Office

The Fort Benning Commissary's $8.9 million renovation project, started in October 1995, will be completed in March 1997.

Reliable Mechanical, the general contracting company, is making renovations by using local subcontractors, such as Gilley's Heating and Air Conditioning Company, Certified Plumbing and Contracting Company and East Columbus Saw Cutting Company.

"The renovations will include new lighting decor; refurbished, repaired and resurfaced walls; and a new ceiling and roof," said Benjamin Wainwright, the Commissary officer.

"They will also include new signs to indicate where items are found," Wainwright continued.

"The deli will be moved to the front of the store and expanded to be a full-service deli comparable to other large food store delicatessens in town," said Michael S. Waksmonski, deputy commissary officer.

"There will be a new bakery added and redesigned meat, produce, dairy and frozen departments to include three times the number of display cases that were originally there, so there will be a greater selection of items," Wainwright said.

"Other areas have also been revamped like the customer service department, which will take special orders and give information on where items are located," said Wainwright.

A full-service bank with automatic teller machines will be located in front of the Commissary, Wainwright said.

New computers, which will have the ability to accept debit cards, will be used in the checkout area and there will be a new administrative department containing new automated equipment for the administrative employees.

Who: The Commissary

What: $8.9 renovation
The renovation will include: new lighting, refurbished, repaired and resurfaced walls, and a new ceiling and roof.

There will also be a newer, much larger sales floor area expanded from the current 38,000 square feet to 47,000 square feet resulting in better traffic patterns because the aisles will be wider, Waksmonski said.

The entrance to the commissary will remain the same once renovations are completed and customer restroom facilities will be added, he said.

The money for the renovation project is coming from the surcharge fund, which is a collection of money that customers pay into when they shop at any commissary, Wainwright said. A 5-percent surcharge is added to each customer's total purchase.

The fund is set aside by the Defense Commissary Agency for the purpose of renovations, equipment, facilities, and resources needed by commissaries anywhere in the world, Wainwright said.

Commissary hours have not changed during the renovations.

- Monday — closed.
- Tuesdays and Thursdays — 9 a.m. to 9 p.m.
- Wednesdays and Fridays — 10 a.m. to 9 p.m.
- Saturday — 9 a.m. to 7 p.m.
- Sunday — 10 a.m. to 6 p.m.

Program prepares spouses for military living, career

Army Career and Alumni Program

Have you ever wondered where to learn more about the role of a spouse in the Army community?

Now, free multiphased skills training is taught through the Army Family Team Building Program.

This volunteer program is designed to teach spouses how to prepare for deployments and other day-to-day challenges that exist within the Army community.

AFTB teachers are volunteers who have been specially trained. They receive a specifically tailored job description and receive credit for their volunteer hours.

Through AFTB training, spouses receive the tools they need to function in any military life situation with minimal outside support.

As a result of this training, personal and family readiness will improve and overall strengthen the quality of life and Army readiness within the Army family, said Mary Allen of the Army Career and Alumni Program.

AFTB training consists of three levels. Level I is designed for Army spouses with fewer than five years of experience with the Army community, or for those who would like a refresher course.

- Level II is designed for spouses who have been living the Army lifestyle for five to 10 years.
- Level III is designed for spouses who have been living the Army lifestyle for 10 or more years. It is projected to begin in the spring of 1996.

Level I Schedule
Building 359, Family Unit Network Center

AFTB Extravaganza 1996
Feb. 8
5:45 to 9 p.m.

COMMUNITY MAYORS NEEDED

Mayors act as central contacts for residents, command

By Mollie M. Herman
Special correspondent

Soldiers and family members living on post may not see their mayors every day, but those mayors are hard at work in every community on post.

"Mayors are a very important part of the installation Community Life Program and provide a needed service within the community," said Command Sgt. Maj. Steven G. Chittum, garrison command sergeant major.

The community mayoral program was established as a volunteer program based on the belief that the family greatly influences the duty performance of the soldier.

"The mayoral program's primary purpose is to represent the rights and interests of their residents and to serve as a central point of contact to voice residents' opinions about their environment and living conditions to the installation commander," said Jennifer Morgan, Community Life Program officer. "The chain of command of the sponsoring unit is also an instrumental asset of the program."

Residents can have their issues and concerns heard through town hall meetings that are conducted quarterly in each community. The meetings are open to all residents in an open forum and are designed to allow a free flow of information and to discuss any changes in housing area policies.

Issues that cannot be resolved by the primary installation staff agencies in attendance are then elevated to the Quality Performance Improvement Council for resolution and discussion.

Dates and times for town hall meetings can be found in each community's newsletter and are also available at the installation Community Life Office.

Community mayors also sponsor a variety of events on the installation, such as cooking classes, arts and crafts classes, youth activity events and health lectures.

One of the activities is the post's annual safety carnival. This event includes food and games for children and provides an enjoyable environment for the children to learn first aid, fire, bicycle and in-line skating safety.

Community mayors are involved in neighborhood cleanup drives and playground renovations.

"Our goal is to improve the quality of life of all our residents," said Shelly Marley, Indianhead Terrace mayor.

"A typical example is our proposal to use a portion of the 1994 and 1995 Army Communities of Excellence money toward the upgrade of the playground equipment in our housing areas," Marley said.

"Community mayors offer many benefits to the community," Morgan said.

"However, mayors are not responsible for intervention in domestic disputes between neighbors, acting on behalf of the Military Police, or enforcing installation regulations like cutting grass," Morgan continued.

Each mayor should have a large volunteer staff consisting of a vice mayor, secretary, treasurer and other volunteers to staff various committees, such as health and welfare, security and safety, community relations, recreation, education, buildings and grounds and the planning committee.

"Being a mayor or volunteering to be on the mayor's staff is not a thankless job," Morgan said. "It allows people to make a difference in their community and the documented volunteer service may be used as specialized experience on civilian resumes."

Mayors serve a one-year tour with elections being conducted every fall. For more information on the mayors program, volunteers may contact their area community office or Morgan at 545-5931 or 545-5246.

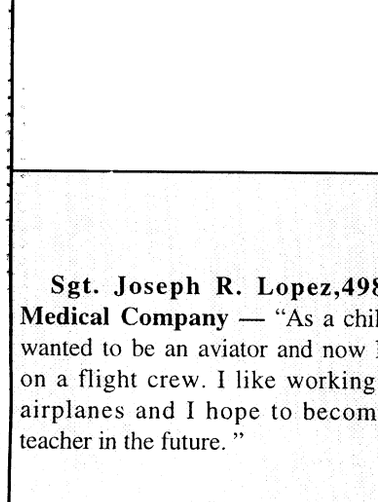
VARIOUS VOICES

What goals of your childhood have you achieved or not achieved?

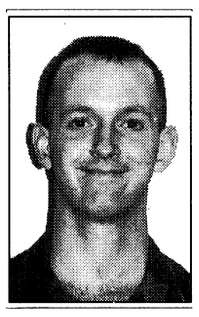


Sgt. William J. Peyregne, HHC, 3rd Battalion, 24th Infantry Regiment — "I finally went to Airborne School. When I was a kid we had an airport down the street and I watched people skydive. I've always wanted to do that. Plus, I'm married and I have a family."

Sgt. 1st Class Clayton L. Evans, 36th Engineer Group — "I never imagined being in the military and in six months I'll be retiring. It's tough to say what goals you've accomplished because your priorities change as you grow."

Sgt. Joseph R. Lopez,498th Medical Company — "As a child I wanted to be an aviator and now I'm on a flight crew. I like working on airplanes and I hope to become a teacher in the future."

Spc. Jorene Wolfe-Ha, Company B, 3rd Battalion, 24th Infantry Regiment— "One of my first goals was finishing college, which was my main one. Now I'm married and I have a family which was another goal I've accomplished."



Spc. Lisa M. Nunn, Company E, 1st Battalion (Airborne), 507th Infantry Regiment — "I'm happily married with child and I've accomplished getting my college degree."

Life can be made easier by Setting realistic goals

By Brian R. Voller
Bayonet staff writer

Brian R. Voller believes that realistic goals can help a person accomplish much more.

I'm only 21 years old, some people might say that I'm still just a baby, and that I have yet to really start to live life. And yet still others might say that I have no business writing a commentary about how to live life. O.K., no problem, but I do have something to say.

commentary

I sometimes think about the times when I was younger playing on the swings in grade school pretending I was some space hero trying to save the universe. It was around age 10 that I started to imagine myself sitting in the seat of an airplane flying at supersonic speeds and saving all of mankind.

Then later in life I realized that this was a silly dream spawned by too many hours in front of the television set watching Sylvester Stallone blow up half the communist army.

So, I gave up on this crazy idea of being a space-age pilot, and concentrated on more achievable goals, like being a professional football player, ya right. This seemed like a winner of an idea. I was actually pretty close to my dreams, at least in my own mind, until I figured out that I couldn't play pro ball because I was only a 5-foot-11-inch offensive lineman. By my senior year in high school it became painfully clear that the 6' 5" lineman who were throwing me all over the field had the better odds of making it to the pros.

Once again it came time for a life-changing decision. This came in the form of a good, safe, realistic job that I could get and make reasonable money with. Enter the fast-paced high, stress world of journalism where writers are chewed up and spit out every single day.

I started taking college courses and as it turns out I was pretty good at this journalism thing. I was pulling down a good grade point average without putting in a whole lot of effort. Only one problem, I was grossly dissatisfied with the rewards of journalism. In the civilian world, journalists have the second highest rate of divorce, and the second highest rate of alcoholism behind police officers. Besides, I just wasn't enjoying myself quite as much I would have liked. I have to say I was getting really disappointed, and I started getting nervous about ever finding a career field.

After two years of college, working 50-hours a week at my job to try and pay my tuition and support a car, I decided it would be a good idea to join the Army and get some extra help. So, I joined the U.S. Army Reserve as, you guessed it, a photo-journalist. But this is where something kind of strange happened, I figured out that the Army was where I wanted to be. For some strange reason I really liked being in the Army. So, after serving my mandatory six months on reserve duty, and after tying up some loose ends, I entered into the active Army where I am today.

Now I'm happy with where I am. I'm still trying to improve myself and my position in life, but I figured something out in the process of deciding on a career field. I figured out that the goals we set for ourselves are sometimes too big to handle, or just plain out of our reach. The best thing to do is set smaller goals for yourself, goals that can be achieved. Setting these little goals can help you achieve a bigger goal and can eventually give a person a great reward. The key is to do what makes you the happiest not what makes everyone else happy.

I guess it's true that I'm still young and that I still have a long way to go before I'm called a subject matter expert. But, since I've stopped getting all broken up about the giant goals that I just couldn't seem to make happen, and started concentrating on smaller more achievable goals I've been a lot happier and a lot more successful.

Dial 545-BOSS is the commander's action line for soldiers, family members and civilians to call when they have problems or complaints that can't be resolved elsewhere.

While it is not a substitute for the chain of command or for agencies established to provide assistance, the line offers another means of communication between Fort Benning's community and commanders.

The Bayonet features some of the calls that may benefit other members of the Fort Benning community.

Call: Caller suggests that the fallen leaves be raked into the gutter, instead of put into bags that go to the landfill and are not biodegradable. He said the post can have a road machine go around post sucking up the leaves from the gutter and then take the leaves someplace to be dumped where the leaves can be used as a mulch or habitat for the RCW or other animals.

DPW, Building and grounds Division response:

Raking leaves into the gutters is not a good idea. Due to very limited resources we can't devote a full time effort to sucking leaves out of the gutter. What generally happens is that a rain comes along and washes the leaves that were raked into the gutters into the storm sewer and after a period of time these leaves stop up the storm sewers causing localized flooding. We then must spend additional resources to clean out the storm sewers.

The leaves that are collected in the plastic bags are not taken to the landfill but are taken to a composting site. Our existing trash contractor provides this pickup service and therefore frees up our limited workforce for other projects.

To try and alleviate the problem somewhat we have just recently resumed street sweeping in family housing and are making a pass through family housing with our leaf machines. This however does not relieve the housing occupant/building occupant of his or her responsibility to put the leaves in their area of responsibility into plastic bags.

Call: She does not agree with the way people are charged for child care. She said if both parents work, they are charged more than if only one parent worked. The caller said she thinks this is unfair because if a family is going to make ends meet, both parents usually have to work and the charges for child care should be based on rank instead of income because it penalizes working people.

Child Development Services Response:

Fort Benning does not establish fee policy locally. Fee policy is determined by the Department of Defense.

It is DoD policy to offer child care in support of working parents and as a quality of life service for military families. Department of the Army provides child care as an employer-sponsored program. As such, it is not considered an entitlement like public education or commissary and medical benefits.

Child care for working parents is an employment cost. The Army provides supplemental funding as an employer responsibility to help support the cost of quality care. Army families, in turn, pay a "fair share" of costs as a work expense.

The DoD fee policy is designed to support the concept described above, specifically:

- DoD establishes fee ranges for full-day and part-day care and family income categories.
- All military child development centers follow the same criteria in setting fees, regardless of location.
- A family's ability to pay child care fees is measured by total family income, rather than rank. This takes both spouses' income into consideration in order to compute fee category.

586th FSG Sends Thanks

A public "thank you" goes out to all the Fort Benning agency representatives who came to the 586th Family Support Group meeting Dec. 6 to brief us on what their agencies are all about and to extend their well wishes and support for us. The support felt that night was overwhelming.

Mayor Bobby Peters and all the religious who attended the community leader prayer service for the troops headed to Bosnia, touched my heart. What a wonderful way to come together in support of our soldiers.

To the rear detachment: thank you for your guidance and understanding. To Lt. Col. Harold J. & Cathie Leeman, Col.Thomas L. & Sue Bailey, Maj. Gen. John W. & Cheri Hendrix: from the time you spent with us at the departure ceremony and at the airfield to putting together a Christmas party with a phone call to our loved ones enroute to Bosnia, words cannot express my gratitude for your thoughtfulness and caring nature. The 586th family is very fortunate to have you in our chain of command. Fort. Benning is a great place to be because of people like you! May God bless each of you !

Counties have specific requirements for car tag renewal

By Marc G. Turchin
USAIC Public Affairs Office

Wondering where to renew or register your tag? Are you questioning yourself about which tag office to go to, what month to go or what you need to bring?

All that depends on where you live on post. The county line for Fort Benning is Upatoi Creek.

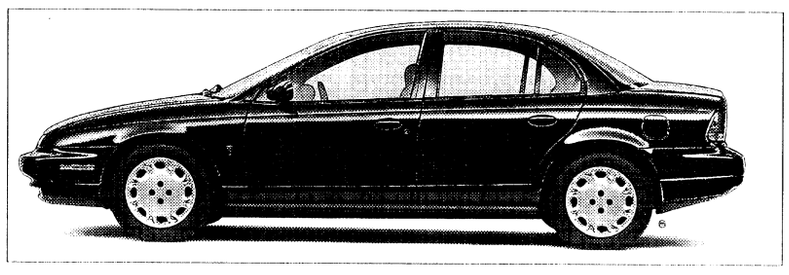
Those people who live north of the creek are residing in Muscogee County and those living south of the creek are in Chattahoochee County.

Muscogee County

In Muscogee County, tag registration begins Jan. 1 and ends May 1.

Vehicle owners can purchase tags anytime after Jan. 1 and avoid a $15 late fee by adhering to the following schedule.

Persons with last names beginning with the letters A to D should purchase their tags before Jan. 31 to avoid a $15 late fee.



Last names beginning with E to K have until the end of February; L to R have until March 31 and S to Z have until May 1.

All tags are valid until May 2. But, if you miss your month, you will have to pay the late charge, according to Janice Beebe, Muscogee County Tag Office supervisor.

Muscogee County residents have a choice of places to get vehicles registered.

One location is inside the east wing of the Columbus Government Center, which is located at Second Avenue and 10th Street. The hours are 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m.

The other site is inside Columbus Square Mall, and the hours are 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. If you live in Muscogee County, whether or not you are a Georgia resident and are renewing your tag or registering for the first time, you need:

- Vehicle registration and title
- Current leave and earnings statement
- Identification card
- $20 renewal fee per vehicle
- Proof of insurance
- Georgia residents have to pay state taxes on each vehicle. The amount will depend on the year and make of the vehicle.

First-time, nonresident registrants also need the registration from a previous county or state, the title of the vehicle (if the year of the car is 1981 or newer) or complete address of the lien holder. The cost for the title change is $18.

Nonresidents must also get a serviceman's affidavit from the Staff Judge Advocate's Office, Building 5. This form will exempt soldiers from paying the state ad valorem tax.

For more information, call 571-4795 or 571-4796.

Chattahoochee County

Chattahoochee County residents must travel to Cusseta to register their vehicles. Cusseta is located 10 miles south of Sand Hill on Highway 27.

Make a left on Broad Street in front of the Citgo station onto route 520 and the court house is one mile down on the left.

Residents and nonresidents of Georgia must have the following to renew their registration or register for the first time in Chattahoochee County:

- Current leave and earnings statement
- $20 cash ($12 for trailers) per vehicle. Checks are not accepted.
- Proof of insurance.

Nonresidents must also get a serviceman's affidavit from the Staff Judge Advocate's Office, Building 5. This form will exempt soldiers from paying the state ad valorem tax.

First-time registrants must also have the registration from the previous county or state.

If the year of the vehicle is newer than 1982, the title or the address of the lien holder is also required. Georgia residents registering for the first time should wait until it is their month to register, according to Gloria Culpepper, tax commissioner for Chattahoochee County.

If the tag has already expired in the previous county when registering, there is a $5 fee. Georgia residents will also be assessed the state taxes based on the year and make of their vehicle.

The deadlines for tag renewal are is based on last names. Last names beginning with the letters A to D have until Jan. 31 to register their tags.

Last names beginning with E to K have until the end of February; L to R have until March 31 and S to Z have until May 1. The first letter of your last name determines when you need to get registered.

There is a $15 fee if you are late.

The tag office hours are 8 a.m. to 4 p.m., Monday through Friday, Culpepper said.

VA reduces claims backlog through innovative management strategies

Department of Veterans Affairs

The Department of Veterans Affairs has reduced its benefits claims' backlog by nearly 200,000 cases over the past two years by developing innovative management strategies to accelerate processing.

VA's claims' processing backlog, which peaked at 574,000 cases at the end of 1993, was reduced to 385,000 at the end of fiscal year 1995.

VA has faced both an increased volume of claims for service-connected disability compensation as well as more complex claims, in large part due to military downsizing and judicial interpretations of veterans' benefits laws.

VA's Veterans Benefits Administration is using "help teams," experienced rating specialists drawn from regional offices nationwide, and "partnering," a pairing of VA stations to share workload.

Focusing on those offices with large rating backlogs and using intensive manpower and overtime (10 help teams have completed nearly 24,000 cases nationwide in the last year) have yielded a significant backlog reduction quickly with no disruption to the ongoing operations of the regional offices served.

"When a veteran is suffering from a disability or illness related to military service, the country owes it to him or her to provide compensation in a timely manner," VA Undersecretary for Benefits R. J. Vogel said. "Despite our gains over the last two years in an era of austere budgets, we face formidable challenges to reducing the claims' backlog, and we must continue to find innovative solutions so we can process veterans' claims as quickly as possible."

The partnering initiative provides a strategy for managing workload and improving service to veterans by pairing regional offices of similar size, workload and staffing characteristics.

Stations are considered for the program based on timeliness of claims processing, the number of cases pending and the number of cases per rating specialist.

Local managers work out the details of the partnership such as the number of cases to be shared and at what intervals.

The offices continue to work together as long as one needs the assistance and the other is capable of providing help.

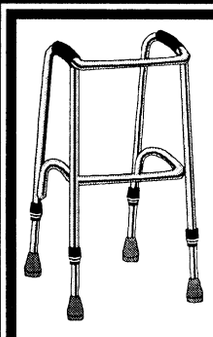
va q&a

Department of Veterans Affairs

Q: May a veteran join with a nonveteran in obtaining a VA loan?

A: Yes. But the guaranty is based only on the veteran's portion of the loan. The guaranty cannot cover the nonveteran's share. This limitation does not apply to a loan to a veteran and nonveteran spouse. Others with nonveteran coapplicants may consult lenders to determine whether they would accept a joint loan application.

Q: I was issued a certificate of eligibility. Does that mean I am approved to receive a VA loan?



A: No. The certificate of eligibility is useful for beginning the loan process, but it does not assure approval of the loan. The veteran must still be found to be qualified for the loan from an income and credit standpoint.

Q: Can a veteran obtain a loan from a private lender in one state for the purchase of property in another state?

A: Yes. However, lenders have their own policies that may limit their lending operation to certain geographic areas.

Each unit and activity is asked to send a representative to this meeting.

For more information, call Sgt. 1st Class Ana Davilia at 545-1480 or 545-1923.

Gain tax experience

Volunteers are needed to work in the tax office.

The Internal Revenue Service will conduct a week-long class for everyone interested in assisting in the free preparation of income tax returns.

The class will be from Jan. 22 through Jan. 26. Also, this year there will be opportunities for individuals to volunteer on Saturdays.

Interested persons should contact Capt. Scott L. Frost of the Office of the Staff Judge Advocate at 545-3282 or 545-3281.

Tax office to open

The Fort Benning Tax Office will open Jan. 31. The office is located in Building 2640 at Soldiers' Plaza and will be open Monday through Friday, from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

Electronic tax filing is available for most federal returns. The office has many federal and state tax forms available.

Unit tax advisers have also been appointed for units throughout the post. Persons having tax questions should see their unit tax adviser first.

For more information, call Capt. Scott L. Frost at 545-3281.

SSNs are required

Every person age 1 or older must have a Social Security number before that person may be claimed on a tax return. The Social Security Office in the Main Post Chapel Center, next to Doughboy Stadium, will accept applications for Social Security numbers Feb. 22 starting at 10 a.m.

Applicants must bring a certified copy of the person's birth certificate and some other type of identification such as school or shot records.

For more information, call Capt. Scott L. Frost at 545-3281.

CID seeks information

The U.S. Army Criminal Investigation Division is offering a $10,000 reward for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the person(s) responsible for larceny of several night vision goggles.

The goggles were stolen from Building 2836, Company C, 3rd Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment, between 2:30 p.m. Dec. 22 and 3:50 p.m. Jan. 1.

Anyone with information concerning this incident may contact Chief Warrant Officer 2 Charles Brightbill at 545-2414 or the Military Police at 545-5222.

CID is also asking for any information leading to the arrest and conviction of the person(s) responsible for forgery and larceny that occurred between 2:20 p.m. Nov. 16 and 10:10 p.m. Nov. 17 at 154 Derrickson Street and the Post Exchange at the Main Mall.

Unknown persons removed several discarded checks from a trash can, then forged and negotiated the checks at the Post Exchange at the Main Mall.

The assistance of the local community is being requested in an effort to identify and apprehend the perpetrator(s). The identity of anyone providing information will be kept in the strictest confidence.

Controlled burning set

Controlled burning of woodland areas will take place Jan. 22 through 26. If weather permits, the following compartments will be affected: A-6, A-19, B-1, C-2, K-1, K-6, K-13, Q-1, Q-5, Q-5, U-1, U-5 and BB-3.

Burning will occur in pine stands within these compartments to enhance endangered species habitat and training areas. Personnel proposing to use these areas for recreational purposes must vacate these areas prior to 9:30 a.m. daily.

Training units using compartments adjacent to those listed above may experience drift smoke and are reminded to exercise caution while travelling in these areas due to the potential for reduced visibility.

Units using ranges and training areas are reminded to remove flammable debris, such as pinestraw, leaves, grass and trash form around structures in accordance with US Army Infantry Center Regulation 210-4, Paragraph 5-22, Organizational Maintenance.

Q: If I have a complaint about the way I am being treated by a business in town, what course of action should I take? Should I seek an attorney's advice, contact the Better Business Bureau, or what?

A: The correct course of action will depend on the facts of the case. However, the most logical first step is to talk to the owner or manager of the business to see if the problem can be worked out. A business can rise or fall on customer satisfaction and, as a result, the people in charge of the business are many times going to go out of their way to resolve these disputes. You should enter into such discussions with an open mind and without being confrontational.

If direct contact with the business does not work, you may want to consider seeking help from outside agencies. Certainly, advice from an attorney may be appropriate to see if there are any legal avenues available to address the problem. Additionally, an attorney may be able to approach the business on your behalf, as your agent, to try to resolve the problem.

The Better Business Bureau is an agency, which is designed to receive consumer complaints about businesses and act as an intermediary between the consumer and the business.

With respect to the military, you might also want to consider bringing your complaint to the attention of the installation Armed Forces Disciplinary Control Board.

The board has the authority, in appropriate cases, to declare a business that engages in business practices adverse to military personnel and their family members off limits to active duty personnel.

As with the bureau, the board cannot force the business to address the particular complaint, but can pressure the business to adopt fair practices by proposing to impose the off limits sanction. You should note that the AFDCB is not a court of law, and will only impose the off-limits sanction in clear cases of unfair practices.

For moreinformation, call the Legal Assistance Division at 545-3281.

CIF supplies soldiers' equipment

Richasd Brill/Special to The Bayonet

Richard Carroll, Central Issue Facility employee, applies a fresh coat of black spraypaint to an entrenching tool to prepare it for reissue.

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet©

From Kevlar helmets to canteen covers, soldiers know that the success of a mission often depends on the quality of their equipment.

And whether the destination is as close as Kelley Hill or as far away as Bosnia, hardly a soldier has passed through Fort Benning without becoming familiar with the Central Issue Facility.

Richard McDonald, facility manager, said quality customer service means getting the right equipment to the right soldier in as timely and efficient a manner as possible.

McDonald said the knowledge gained from his prior Army service, including a stint on post during the Vietnam era, has shaped the way customers are treated at today's CIF.

"We try our best to treat the incoming soldiers as they wish to be treated," he said. "Our goal is guaranteed quality service, and that means issuing quality equipment in a timely manner so that soldiers can accomplish their mission."

McDonald said the facility's employees are doing a super job, especially with the increased number of customers because of ongoing deployments to Germany and Bosnia. The facility employs about 20 permanent employees and has added five temporary employees to handle the increased work load due to deployments.

"The temporary employees are doing just as good a job as the regulars," McDonald said. "We have many employees who don't mind working extra hours and on weekends to make sure the job gets done right."

In September 1994, the facility moved from an old cramped warehouse with no waiting space or heat, to a newly renovated warehouse next door. The new, heated facility features a 100-seat waiting room and snack machines to ease the boredom of waiting for equipment issue.

Computer automation of the issuing process has also saved time and effort that is passed on to customers as decreased waiting time.

Depending on their destination, CIF customers receive a computer printout of the items they are authorized to receive. Armed with sporting baskets and shopping carts, they then move through eight stations to receive their issue items.

"What soldiers receive depends on where they are being sent," he said. "Soldiers going to Bosnia receive more than soldiers staying on post because of the difference in their missions and in the climate."

Richard Carroll, a three-year employee of the facility, issues wet weather parkas, canteen cups and entrenching tools at his station.

"I love this job," Carroll said. "It's interesting to meet the soldiers and see where they are from and where they are going."

An adjacent backup warehouse allows the stations to be quickly restocked if they run out of issue items, McDonald said. So far, the facility has not run out of equipment.

Dale Ellis, post director of logistics, said the facility does an outstanding job of tackling the logistical problem of issuing equipment to as many as 22,000 people in a six month period.

"Our philosophy is: get the right equipment to the soldier the first time through," he said.

To make the process run as smoothly as possible, Ellis and McDonald offered the following tips to soldiers who go through the facility for equipment issue:

- Try to know, as best as possible, the correct size needed of a particular item in order to avoid spending unnecessary time trying things on.
- If you are uncertain about a particular size, be sure to try the item on before signing for it and then finding out it doesn't fit.
- Understand you will only receive the items you are authorized to receive according to a printed menu. Those new boots might look nice, but if you aren't authorized to receive them, you aren't going to get them.

Free seminar available for soldiers leaving the military

Army Career and Alumni Program

A Washington lecturer and author on career transition from military to civilian employment will be at Fort Benning March 1 in the Infantry Hall, Classroom 30, from 9 to 11 a.m. to talk to officers, senior noncommissioned officers and spouses on "Marketing Yourself for a Second Career."

Retired Col. Jerry Crews, deputy director of the Officer Placement Service for The Retired Officers Association, travels nationwide addressing military audiences composed of people who are nearily retirement, being involuntarily separated or opting to leave military service.

The lecture is open to all military personnel and their spouses. The first 200 participants will receive a free copy of the publication, "Marketing Yourself for a Second Career."

In his free two-hour presentation, Crews will introduce the audience to the realities of the competition in the civilian job market; the perceptions civilian employers have of military personnel; how to plan for the job search; tips for strengthening the resume (to include how employers read a resume); networking; preparing for and conducting a successful interview; salary and benefit packages; and rejection.

Crews said he doesn't promise an individual instant job search success, but guarantees that each person who attends his lecture will profit from the knowledge gained and will be ready to move in the right direction toward that second career.

The lecture has been continually praised by attendees for its content and delivery. Crews provides information for every attendee and provides insights into the transition, which are unique and hard-biting.

Military members and their spouses will have an opportunity to ask questions.

The Retired Officers Association sponsors these lectures, which in 1994 were presented to over 15,000 personnel at 107 military installations throughout the United States and Europe.

Army examines extremist groups

Editor's note: The Army recently established a task force to assess the human relations climate and the influence of extremist groups among soldiers. The Bayonet spoke with officers and enlisted soldiers as well as family members about this subject.

By Lisa M. Hibbert
Bayonet staff writer

The Army recently established a task force to assess the human relations climate and the influence of extremist groups among soldiers.

Secretary of the Army Togo D. West Jr., made the announcement Dec. 22.

"The task force will examine the human relations environment among soldiers across the Army and will specifically review the circumstances underlying the recent incident of soldiers in the United States and overseas, including Korea and Europe," according to the task force's charter contained in a memorandum to Maj. Gen. Larry R. Jordan, deputy inspector general. "Its review will include an assessment of the extent to which soldiers participate in racist and other extremist organizations; how the chain of command views and exercises its authority to handle any such participation between military and civilian law enforcement officials; and the strengths and weaknesses of department policies pertaining to such participation, their implementation throughout the Army, and related training and oversight. The task force will recommend changes addressing any weakness identified."

The task force emerged from a recent Fort Bragg, N.C., incident where white soldiers, members of an extremist group, attacked a black family

Sgt. David Hinze, a member of the Military Police's Investigation team at Fort Benning, is in charge of the extremist and hate group activities division of the juvenile task force.

One of the things that Hinze does is educate units about how to identify these groups, what their characteristics are and their ideologies.

"We're not here to be the moral police," Hinze said. "We can't tell soldiers which organization to join. We get involved when soldiers' actions affect the discipline of the Army. But we can only help when soldiers or the units let us know that there is a problem."

Soldiers don't always come forth because they're either afraid of repercussions or don't want to lose friends, said Captain Bruce Jenkins, Service Battery Commander, 4th Bn, 41st Field Artillery Regiment.

"Turning in someone that you know can create division in the unit so soldiers are not always willing (to do that)," said Sgt. Alan Cannon, assistant food service sergeant, 4th Battalion., 41st Field Artillery Regiment.

The Army does not condone active participation in any extremist organization although soldiers are allowed to maintain passive memberships, according to Jenkins.

Passive participation is defined as maintaining membership, attending meetings and accepting literature, Jenkins said. Active membership is considered recruiting members, holding or seeking an office, distributing literature and passing your views to other soldiers. Attending meetings in uniform is prohibited.

So far, there have not been any activities that can be linked to an extremist group on Fort Benning, said Col. Ronnie D. Alton, post provost marshal.

"If anything were to happen, we would deal strongly with the situation," Alton said. "We will not tolerate that kind of activity here."

If soldiers are caught committing an act that can be tied to extremist views, such as beating or harassing someone because of their race, soldiers risk receiving anything from a verbal reprimand to discharge from the Army, Alton said.

Although there have not been any soldiers charged with committing any such crimes on post, signs of racism are evident at Kelley Hill.

"A few months ago a swastika was painted in the road on Kelley Hill," said Sgt. Dulles F. J. Smith, food service sergeant, 4th Bn, 41st Field Artillery Regiment. "There are also racial slurs on the bathroom walls."

Jenkins is planning to give a unit sensing session so that he can try to facilitate communication among soldiers.

"Hate groups are on the rise and only recently are people beginning to talk about it." Jenkins said. "I think that a lack of communication and understanding is the problem."

Officials assess extent of involvement

- Task Force to examine human relations environment among soldiers.
- It will specifically review the circumstances underlying the recent incident of soldiers in the United States and overseas, including Korea and Europe.
- Its review will include an assessment of the extent to which soldiers participate in racist and other extremist organizations; how the chain of command views and exercises its authority to handle any such participation between military and civilian law enforcement officials; and the strengths and weaknesses of department policies pertaining to such participation, their implementation throughout the Army, an related training and oversight.
- The task force will recommend changes addressing any weakness identified."

Jenkins

All soldiers who participate in extremist groups should be chaptered.

We must have zero tolerance when it comes to bigotry and those who promote division among the ranks.

In the Army, as well as the American society, racism is on the rise. We, as leaders, have not come to grip with this demoralizing disease.

To overcome it, we must have positive dialog. That means soldiers, non-commissioned officers and officers must have open forums regularly, discussing the most sensitive issues that affect all ethnic groups.

Also we must promote more multiracial and multiethnic activities after duty hours because this is the time America and the Army community becomes segregated.

— Capt. Bruce Jenkins Svc. Battery, 4th Bn., 41st Field Artillery Regiment

Fort Benning remembers MLK

By Lisa M. Hibbert
Bayonet staff writer

A sea of more than 1,000 rainbow-colored faces filled Marshall Auditorium in Infantry Hall, Building 4, Jan. 12 as the post remembered the life of Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. in a commemorative service.

Sgt. 1st Class Beverly Riley, noncommissioned officer-in-charge of the Equal Opportunity Office, welcomed the crowd, and Brig. Gen. Robert T. Clark, deputy commanding general, introduced the speaker.

Faith Middle School Chorus and the Faith Middle School Band rendered musical selections, setting the tone for the message of the day.

The messenger was Maj. Gen. Joe N. Ballard, chief of staff, U.S.Army Training and Doctrine Command, who talked about King's ideas.

Ballard told how the holiday was established in 1983 and how it was not meant to be a holiday just for people of color, but a day for everyone because King preached unity.

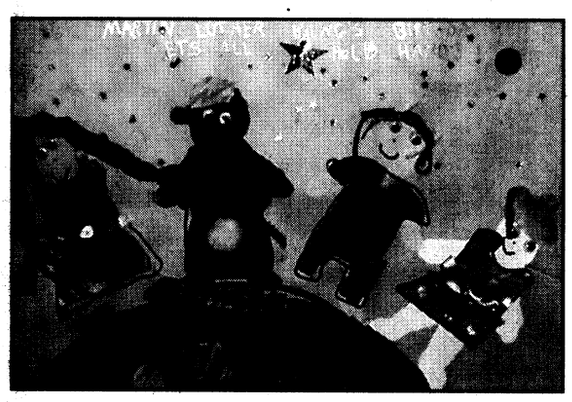
Having lived through the era in which King emerged, Ballard used personal experiences to illustrate the climate of that time.

"That period of time was an era of fear and violence," Ballard said. "The United States faced nuclear terror, the Korean conflict, end to the Vietnam War and a tense racial climate."

King came out of this climate and instead of preaching hate he preached nonviolence, Ballard said.

In his speech, Ballard praised the Army for leading the way in bringing about racial equality.

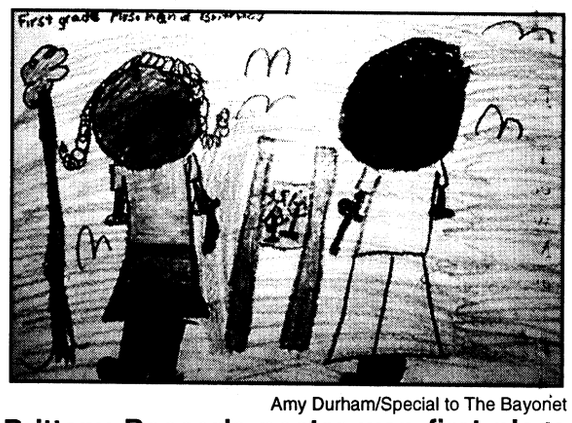
The highlight of the program was Fort Benning Schools Superintendent Dr. Dell Karr's presentation of the King essay contest winners. The awards were presented to students, ranging from kindergarten through seventh grade who stole the show as they strutted across the stage to accept their awards and shake hands with the official party.



Also on the program was retired Command Sgt. Maj. Eddie Roberts, who mesmerized the audience with his reading of the "I have a Dream" speech that King gave on the steps of the Lincoln Memorial during the march on Washington.

Faye Lewis-Strong, music teacher, Faith Middle School, and the chorus, moved the audience with their musical rendition of "I have a dream," a song based on the King speech.

A humorous tributary skit called "Let Freedom Ring," was portrayed by six Fort Benning soldiers and civilians. Each of the actors represented different factions of the post — there was a janitor, a secretary, an engineer, a minister, a soldier, a homeless veteran and a narrator. The actors in the skit read parts of King's speeches as it related to them.



Clark, in his closing remarks at the end of the program, commented on the singing of the chorus and playing of the band.

"I went to Faith Middle School when I was your age and we didn't make music that sounded like that," Clark said "After a program like that, if you're not inspired then you're just not alive!"

Essays reflect dream, highlight ideas

Fort Benning Schools

The Fort Benning Schools recently conduted their annual art and writing contest in honor of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. Follwoing are the first-place entries:

Help Somebody: Every American Can Make a Difference

To help someone is to do something for someone in need. This is what Martin Luther King Jr.'s life was all about. "Help somebody."

When Martin Luther King Jr. was growing up, blacks and whites could not go to school together or eat together or even play together. But King wanted a different life for his children and all children. He had a dream of peaceful, nonviolent change, which would allow people of all races to work and play together. And he put his dream into action.

His message of nonviolence and his dream of racial equality will always be remembered. In many parts of the world, there is still racism and violence. But Martin Luther King's life showed that even the oldest hatred can be overcome.

In conclusion, I will quote some words from one of Martin Luther King Jr.'s favorite songs: "If I can help somebody, as I travel along life's way...Then my living will not be in vain."

Everyone Can Make a Difference

IF you plant a tree today,
the children of tomorrow will be able to play.
IF you teach someone to read,
you will help them to succeed.
IF you take the time to spare a dime,
you'll feel the rest of your life is fine.
IF you help someone who cannot see,
that person may show you life's key.
IF you use your strength to help the weak,
you may find the strength you seek.
IF you join the fight against starvation,
you may help save an entire nation.
IF you help someone in desperation,
they will find hope in your inspiration.
IF like Dr. King you "have a dream", you'll give back to the world its self-esteem.
You'll find that a positive difference no matter how small, results in a change that affects us all.

Every American Can Make a Difference

Have you ever heard of the great American hero, Martin Luther King Jr.? Well, if you haven't, you better wake up and smell the coffee, because he was a very intelligent man who wasn't afraid to speak his mind all through the nation. He made an outstanding difference in our nation. I know that if it weren't for this excellent hero, I probably wouldn't be able to eat at the same tables as some of my friends or drink at the same water fountains just because they're white. Believe it or not, one of the reasons he did all this was to prove that just one person whether black, white, or any other race can change the world.

Well, now that you've heard what I think, you're ready to get up, get started, and make a difference in your life and everybody else's. Now you might not save a life or stop a war but believe me, you will make a very big difference.

— Savahna Tylerbest

Every American Can Make A Difference

Martin Luther King Jr. was a freedom speaker who wanted all black people and white people to come together as one. For instance, he wanted black and white people to use the same water fountains, go to the same schools, use the same bathrooms, and to be friends with one another.

All Americans can make a difference by not being prejudiced against each other. They can make a difference by making the earth peaceful and joyous and by treating people equally. They can make a difference by stopping the violence in all the communities throughout the world.

All Americans should be treated fairly and equally because living life is hard and not to be treated equally would make it even harder. All Americans should be treated equally because it would not be generous to like someone of one color and dislike someone of another color. All Americans should be treated equally because no one should be judged better than anyone else.

Martin Luther King Jr. had a dream and it became true. None of us would be together if it weren't for Martin Luther King Jr. He was a famous freedom leader who spoke so the earth we live on would be peaceful and full of happiness.

Every American Can Make A Difference

Martin Luther King Jr.'s fight for civil rights left us with a vision of how the world should be - EQUAL! His goals were to win equality for all people of color. He avoided violence in striving for his goals. Dr. King helped us make a difference by leading boycotts, marches, and sit-ins. Martin Luther King Jr.'s struggle helped make the world a better place. He was an inspiration to all people. Some of Dr. King's accomplishments ranged from the Voting Rights Act to speaker at the largest civil rights rally where he delivered his famous "I Have a Dream" speech. In his dream, he dreamed of a world free of hate. He was one of America's great civil rights leaders and in his pursuit of justice Martin was awarded the Nobel Peace Prize. A strong but kind man, Martin was loved by people of all races.

We can all help Dr. King's dream come alive by treating people equally and with respect. We can offer help to people in need like the homeless, elderly, single parents, and handicapped people. We can also put tougher laws on guns.

What I can do to make a difference is talk about my problems rather than fight, treat people the way I want to be treated, don't discriminate, and not worry about what people say as long as I'm doing the right thing.

Help Somebody: Every American Can Make a Difference

"If I can help somebody as I pass along, then my living shall not be in vain." Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. was born January 15, 1929 in Atlanta, Georgia. Until he was six years old his name was Michael Luther King Jr. His father changed both their names legally to Martin in honor of the German religious leader.

Martin Luther, the reformer, and Dr. King's life centered around Christianity and righteousness. Because Dr. King cared about people, he worked hard to bring about change in the way that people were treated. He not only contributed to the changing of unfair laws, but he helped to raise the conscience of the world.

Whenever I walk into my classroom and I see a rainbow of different children, I thank Dr. King. When I see people sitting anywhere they like on a bus, I thank Dr. King. When I see minorities serving as senators or congress persons, I thank Dr. King. When I see Gen. Colin Powell in a good position to become the first African American president, I thank Dr. King. These are just a few of the good things that Dr. King's dream made possible.

Now what can we do to make a change? One of the things that I would like to change in this world is to stop the violence that has killed so many people and innocent children. Schools and teachers need to offer activities the entire year. I would encourage children to stay in school and not get involved in gangs or drugs. I think if kids got involved in activities they would not have time to think about violence. Parents need to encourage their children to get good grades and to follow their dreams. This is what I would like to change. We need more peace in this world. That's my dream.

Scheduled seminar to cover modern management theory

Fort Benning Management Association

Nonmanagers seeking ways to sharpen their leadership skills can take part in the Fort Benning Management Association's first in a series of seminars to be presented by Troy State University.

The first seminar is Tuesday in the Corregidor Room at the Fort Benning Officers' Club. Lunch begins at 11:30 a.m., and the program begins at noon.

Dr. Ron Robinson of Troy State University will speak about "Motivation Theory Applied to Today's Management."

The seminars are being presented as part of the organization's regular monthly meetings.

The seminar is aimed at nonmanagers who want to sharpen their leadership skills. The seminar topics will be related to ethics, team building, motivation, Malcolm Baldrige criteria, automation and its impact, taking charge of the future, psychological aspects of minority managers, leadership and productivity and stress management.

These presentations will be given by Troy State University staff faculty. The seminars will be supplemented with case studies and panel discussions.

The charge will be $1 per session to help defray expenses. Certificates will be given for attendance at four, six and eight sessions. These certificates may be used to get professional development credits, depending on current personnel regulations.

Members and nonmembers may attend. Members that attend will be given extra incentives by the association.

The meetings will start at 11:30 a.m. for lunch and the seminars will run from noon to 1 p.m.

For a schedule listing topics, times and locations, contact John Machovec at 545-5173, Bruce Piper at 545-5174, Nilsa Summey at 545-2200 or Steve Magner at 545-2420.

RETIRED BASEBALL PLAYER

Former Detroit Tiger visits Benning

Courtiesy photo

Retired professional baseball player Willie Horton watches as his first home run sails out of the ball park during the 1968 World Series.

By Brian R. Voller
Bayonet staff writer

Retired professional baseball player Willie Horton was the guest speaker at a ceremony in honor of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. Jan. 11 at the Sand Hill Regimental Chapel.

Born Oct. 18, 1942 in Arno,Va., Horton was the youngest of 21 children. When Horton was 8, his family moved to Detroit, Mich,. where he played some little league baseball, but he didn't initially expect to become a professional baseball player.

"Well, I tell you, I knew I was going to become something," Horton said. "I knew because my mother and father wanted me to do something that would give their grandkids more opportunities than they were able to give me."

"I got involved around junior high school or high school when a coach told me I had a lot of natural ability for baseball. I knew I could do a lot of things. When I was a kid, I could always hit the ball farther than everyone else."

Horton did not concentrate on baseball alone. He said he was an all-state football player and a Golden Gloves boxer; but, when Horton made the decision to become a professional baseball player, he said his family supported him but didn't pressure him.

"I know my Dad wanted me to play baseball, but my parents didn't push me or pressure me," Horton said. "I think as parents, people see someone with a lot of natural ability and they force them into playing a sport, and I think at some point the kid stops growing. I don't think my Dad ever tossed a baseball around with me. It was pretty much up to me to train on my own.

"I'll never forget it because as a kid, my father never missed a game. I don't know how he did it because he didn't drive, but he would beat us to the park."

Horton began his career with the Detroit Tigers in 1963 as a left fielder and a designated hitter. In 1968, he was part of the world champion Tigers, who won the World Series beating the Cincinnati Reds.

"The biggest highlight of my career was when I threw out Lou Brock at home plate in the fifth game of the World Series," Horton said. "I don't think I can explain it, and there are no words that can describe how it feels to win a World Series. It is something you train for and something you work at so it becomes part of your makeup."

After 18 years as a player in major league baseball, Horton made the transition from player to coach when he became a roving organizational hitting coach for the Oakland A's in 1983. Horton said the transition from coach to player was an easy transition.

"To me, it was an easy transition because I knew it was time to move on to something different," Horton said. "I was very fortunate to have been able to play 18 years in the major leagues. I could have held on for a couple more years and kept playing, but I never wanted it to get to the point where I was cheating a young man out of his opportunity to play."

Currently, Horton works for ORT Tool and Die Corporation as a sales representative, and he spends time speaking to young children to try and clean up the streets.

"What I'm doing will make a difference to your grandkids. Our streets do need help, but they are not hopeless. I left baseball and came home — home to work with the kids because it was in my heart like a calling. It was something I had to do. I'm not special, I'm just me, but if my name and my past can help the kids, that's good."

During his 18-year career, Horton was selected to five All-Star teams. He is fourth on the Tigers' all-time home run list with 262. He has a string of six consecutive seasons with 20 or more home runs, including his best home-run year in 1968 when he hit 36.

He is 10th on the Tigers' all-time runs batted in list with 886, and he was the second player in Tiger history to give back-to-back 100 RBI seasons. He was a member of the 1968 World Championship Team, and he hit .304 in the World Series.

He was a Tigers' triple crown winner and elected the Sports Writers' "Tiger of the Year" in 1975. Also, he won the American League Designated Hitter award as well as the American League Come-Back Player of the year award.in 1975 and 1979.

Despite all of the accomplishments, Horton has achieved during his career, he said his biggest contribution to the game is his commitment to the sport and his commitment to be the best.

Biologists monitor bass population

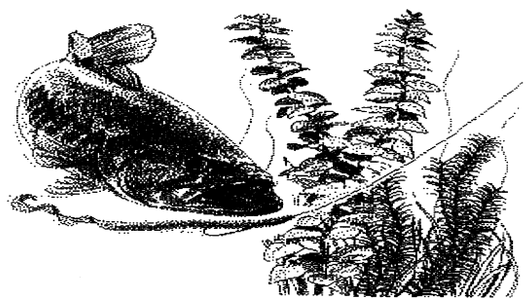
Georgia Department of Natural Resources

Since the early 1990s, anglers have experienced exceptionally good fishing on Lake Seminole for largemouth bass.

In 1995, however, bass anglers reported much lower catch rates for bass on Lake Seminole than in previous years. Many anglers questioned why the success rate for bass fishing at Lake Seminole seemed to change so suddenly.

Several factors have combined to make bass fishing on Lake Seminole more challenging, according to fisheries biologists with the Georgia Department of Natural Resources, Wildlife Resources Division.

One of the reasons is because there are fewer bass in the lake at the present time. Fish population samples conducted by fisheries biologists during the spring and fall indicate a lower number of catchable-size bass this year than in 1993 and 1994, when anglers reported higher catch rates.



Biologists attribute the smaller bass population to poor survival of bass spawns in the early 1990s when hydrilla, a nuisance aquatic plant, covered about 75 percent of the lake.

Research has shown that when vegetation, such as hydrilla, covers more than 40percent of a lake's total area, poor survival of bass spawns are more likely to occur.

Another reason is fishing patterns have changed. Areas that traditionally produced good bass fishing did not offer the same opportunities in 1995.

This shift occurred, in part, as a result of the 1994 flooding, which caused changes in the location and density of many hydrilla beds on Lake Seminole.

These changes caused the bass population to spread out in the lake, making it more difficult for anglers to find and catch fish.

Poor water quality and fish kills are not suspected as factors that have caused reduced catch rates, according to fisheries biologists. The Wildlife Resources Division investigates all fish kills, and if anglers see dead or dying fish on Lake Seminole, or any of Georgia's public fishing waters, they should notify a fisheries office as soon as possible.

"While the bass population on Lake Seminole is not as strong as it has been in recent years, this lake should produce some good bass catches of smaller fish in 1996," said David Partridge, fisheries biologist. "Fish population surveys indicate there was a good survival of the bass spawn in 1995, which should lead to better fishing opportunities in years to come."

The Wildlife Resources Division will continue to monitor the largemouth bass population and other fish populations during 1996.

For more information on the bass population on Lake Seminole, contact the Albany Fisheries Management office at (912) 430-4256.

Wrestlers train for victory

Fort Benning is hosting the All-Army Wrestling Trial Camp to weed out the best wrestlers to compete on the All-Army Wrestling Team and hopefully compete in the Olympics.

The trial camp began this week and will continue through the first week of March, according to Jim Brown, Fort Benning's sports director.

"The Army invited 73 soldiers to attend the trial camp at Sand Hill, including those already on the team," Brown said.

"The All-Army Wrestling Team members are selected during the tryouts, when they wrestle each other for a spot on the team," said Tony Thomas, coach for the All-Army Wrestling Team.

"Then in March, 20 soldiers, two per weight class, will compete in the Armed Forces Championship at Quantico, Va.," Thomas said.

Jason Tolbert, a veteran of Desert Shield, has been training for the All-Army Wrestling Team since April 1992.

"I started wrestling in junior high school because I was too small for football," Tolbert said. "I joined the Army for a chance to grow up and to travel. I've gained that through the Army. Right now I'm ranked third in the country, and I'm the second alternate for the Olympic team."

"The Army's team has been the number one team in the U.S. for the last two years in a row," Tolbert continued. "We have the talent to be the Olympic team, to be gold medalists."

"The World Class Athlete Program is a great program where dreams can be fulfilled if you are willing to put in hard work," said Rodney Smith, Bronze medalist in the 1992 Olympics in Barcelona, Spain.

Laurence Jackson, a two time collegiate All-American joined the primarily to wrestle for the All-Army team.

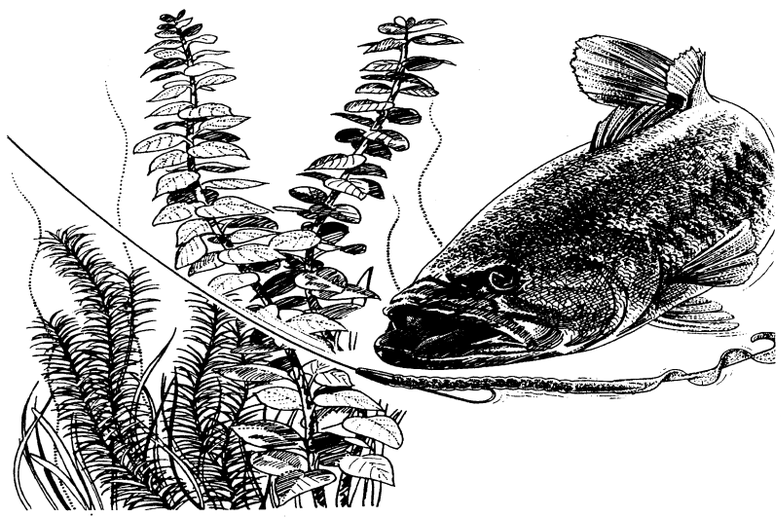
"I've known Coach Thomas since 1988 and have known about the Army wrestling since then too," Jackson said. "It took about two years for me to decide to join the Army, to want to compete again. My ultimate goal is to win a gold medal in the Olympics. Wrestling is 90 percent mental and 10 percent physical. It's whoever shows up and wants it the most that day."

"We have an excellent team," Jackson continued. "The last couple of years the Army team has been No. 1 in the nation. I feel privileged to have an opportunity to try out for this team because of its excellent tradition of athletes."

The wrestling team is in Colorado Springs now, and when they come back, they'll go to Bulgaria, Norway and Sweden to wrestle.

Guide collects fishing lures

By Earl Bentz and Steve Price
Outboard Marine Corporation



As a veteran professional bass tournament competitor as well as being a fishing guide, Randy Dearman certainly has his share of fishing lures, but he never stops looking for more.

Specifically, however, he looks for old lures that may have been made 50 or 60 years ago.

"I've been a lure collector for just about as long as I can remember," Dearman said, who has been a guide for more than 25 years on Lake Livingston in Texas.

"I probably started looking for old lures when I began guiding, because occasionally I'd have older clients who would bring along their old lures because that's all they had," Dearman said. "I really enjoyed looking through their tackle boxes."

Even today, Dearman can't resist looking through tackle boxes, but he's widened his range to include occasional visits to antique shops and yard sales.

"Antique lures are like anything else," Dearman said. "They turn up in some really unusual places. I don't spend a lot of time specifically looking for lures, but I always keep an eye open for them."

Some of the Dearman's favorites are old Bombers, unusual in that each lure, regardless of size, always came packaged in the same size box.

Dearman also treasures some of the original Creek Chub and Heddon lures in his collection.

"Those are among the companies that really started the fishing lure business long before I was born," Dearman said, "and the lures have a lot of history in them. I really think that's why most people collect old lures anyway, because we certainly never fish with them."

Dearman has been surprised at the popularity of old lure collecting, which has progressed to the point that now several reference books have been published detailing lures and putting a value on them.

"I know serious collectors who travel the country just looking for old lures, occasionally buying entire collections," he said. "I'm not that serious and probably never will be."

"One of the things I like to do is compare old lures with what we use today; and, what is surprising is that in many instances the lures have not changed that much. What has changed is how the lures are made.

"The colors have improved dramatically, as have the materials used in making the lures, but the overall concept of what certain lures are designed to do has never changed.

"I'm sure we could use the old lures and catch bass. In fact, we might even have better success with them, since the fish haven't seen them in such a long time."

Athletes compete in NCOA biathlon

Noncommissioned Officers Assoc.

The Follow Me Chapter 295 of Columbus, Ga. hosted a biathlon at Softball Field One and Two recently. It consisted of a 40K bike race and a 10K run.

29th Inf Regt conducts deer contest

By Gilbert W. Johnson
Maintenance Management Division

The Maintenance Management Division of the 29th Infantry Regiment conducted its first contest among the deer hunters in the division from November until Jan. 7.

The contest was open to all members of the division and will be conducted every year.

Pearce won the first-place prize, which was an engraved trophy for taking three deer. The largest weighed 110 pounds and was the biggest deer in the 1995 deer season.

profile in excellence

Name: Betty V. Adkins

Award or recognition: Employee of the Quarter
Unit or activity: Defense Commissary Agency, Southern Region
Job title: Accounting technician
Years on the job: 10 years

What were your reasons for joining civil service?
I wanted a fulfilling career — one that could help me increase my knowledge of business and accounting. Also, people are important to me, and in civil service, you have many opportunities to expand.

Define your work ethic.
I do every task to the best of my ability, as if it is my own business. If I don't do that, I feel I am cheating my employer.

What person has most influenced your career?
Hilda Pachuta, chief of the Management Support Center. She encourages employees to learn about their jobs, to increase their knowledge and to further their careers.

If you were your supervisor for a day, what improvements would you make?
If I could be supervisor for one day, I would build a bigger office for management support and make it more colorful to boost morale.

Describe a memorable moment in your career.
February 1973, the day of the big snow. I was the only cashier to make it to work for the first four hours the store was open. William Cobb, the store manager at the time, two captains and I were the only cashiers for hundreds of customers. We ran the service desk and served as cashiers and baggers. What a day!

What are your career plans?
Sorry to say, but I will be ending my career because I will be retiring this year.

What others have to say: Adkins has distinguished herself through exceptional performance. Her extraordinary abilities to foresee her assigned duties are accomplished to near perfection. I consider her an asset to this organization and a sterling example for others to emulate.

— Hilda S. Pachuta
Management Support Center chief.

profile in excellence

Name: Dorothy C. Williams

Award or recognition: Employee of the Year for 1995
Unit or activity: Directorate of Contracting
Job title: Purchasing Agent
Years on the job: 19 years

What were your reasons for joining civil service?
To find dependable and meaningful employment that would be profitable and enjoyable.

Define your work ethic.
I believe that a job worth doing, is worth doing right.

What person has most influenced your career?
My family, especially my husband, Reverend Joseph Williams.

If you were your supervisor for a day, what improvements would you make?
I would make certain that effective communication between supervisor and workers was maintained.

Describe a memorable moment in your career.
Selection and presentation of this award as the highlight of the Directorate of Contracting's recognition awards ceremony was truly a memorable moment in my career. Selection as the DOC Employee of the Year 1995 is a very special honor.

What are your career plans?
To work as long as I am able and to make a positive contribution to the workforce.

What others have to say: Dorothy Williams is the Purchasing Agent expert of Directorate of Public Works Contracting Division. She is always friendly and upbeat. One contractor's letter said it best, "I could hear her smiling." We face daily challenges, but with quality employees like Dorothy Williams, we're ready.

Make friends, lose enemies

By Phillip Wright
75th Ranger Regiment

Someone has said that the best way to destroy an enemy is to make him your friend.

Fort Benning is the home of the infantry. Here the soldiers learn to kill the enemy and take ground. We do not make it a habit to love our enemies but to do unto him with extreme prejudice before he does unto us.

However, this does not apply to those we must work with or those we live around. Getting along with those near us is sometimes the hardest thing to accomplish.

The idea of showing kindness to those who upset us is really foreign to most of us. Yet it is consistent with the command we find in the Bible. There, we are told to love those who hate us (Matthew 5:44).

Pastor Richard W. Dettian tells how this passage gives us three reasons we should love our adversaries.

First, when we show them kindness, we are imitating our heavenly Father, who "makes His sun rise on the evil and on the good, and sends rain on the just and on the unjust" (verse 45).

Second, we love our foes because there is no reward for loving only those who love us (verse 46).

Third, gracious treatment of our enemies sets us apart from the ungodly. "If we greet our brethren only, what do you do more than others?" (verse 47).

The problem with all of this is that it does not come naturally. Often our first response is to retaliate when somebody wrongs us. Our tempers take over and we do or say something we really regret later.

Sometimes we are not thankful for what we have. Instead, we get upset about something we think we missed, or worse, we are mad because we think someone kept us from getting our just rewards.

The best reward any of us could receive would be to gain a friend who once was an enemy. Showing kindness and helpfulness toward those who despise us may help us break down their hostility and eventually win their favor. All of us could use another friend.

reflections

Remember, there is a difference between the enemy we may meet on the field of battle and the people we interact with regularly. We will defeat the enemy because we are better trained and we will fight with all of our might. We will not fail those around us if we practice thanksgiving and patience in all things.

Fellowship membership drive begins

By Steven G. Chittum
Garrison sergeant major

The Fort Benning chapter of the Christian Military Fellowship is beginning a membership drive this month.

Christian Military Fellowship is an association of committed Christian believers who are serving in the U.S. armed forces or who are associated with the military community. The CMF is a nondenominational organization.

CMF members hope to introduce people to Jesus Christ and to help Christians grow in their faith within the military society; a peer ministry to military people by military people. Members are part of a worldwide prayer family. Members of the local chapter get together for prayer, fellowship, Bible study, and organized retreat. The objectives are emphasized by the CMF motto: To win, to disciple, to equip., to win.

Regular members are current or former active duty members of any branch of the armed forces. Associate members are those who have not served in the armed forces, including spouses, family members and the installation civilian work force.

There are no membership dues. CMF is financed by the voluntary gifts of members and friends. The Fort Benning Chapter works with the installation and unit chaplains.

To join, fill out and send in a membership application. For applications or more information call 545-2939.

The goals of the Fort Benning Chapter of the CMF are:

- To have 50 members by April 1.
- To develop the Infantry Center prayer reminder, "Battle Report."
- To organize, plan and execute a quarterly retreat.
- To meet twice monthly for ministry and fellowship. To work side by side with the Officers Christian Fellowship to achieve the objectives of outreach and fellowship.

chapel notes

Confirmation classes — Beginning Tuesday, confirmation classes will be conducted at 3:45 p.m. every Tuesday at the Religious Education Center, Building 2518.

Open to junior and high school students, these classes, also referred to as communicants classes, are considered preparation for joining the church or making a public profession of faith.

The classes will be general Protestant in faith. Upon completion, students will be referred to chaplains of their faith group for further instruction as requested.

Call 545-2359 for more information.

Praise and worship service — A nondenominational general Protestant service, including worship, praise, singing, prayer, teaching, and preaching, will be conducted every Sunday at the Infantry Center Chapel from 6 to 8 p.m.

The public is invited.

Refreshments and fellowship will take place after the service in the chapel annex. Child care will be available.

First communion classes — First communion classes will begin Tuesday at 7 p.m. in the Religious Education Center, Building 2521.

The first session will be an overview of the program for parents and children.

Children in grades two through six are eligible to attend, provided they attended Confraternity of Christian Doctrine or Catholic school last year.

Musicians needed — The custodian of the Consolidated Chaplains' Fund is receiving applications for watch-care giver, pianists and choir directors.

For more information, call Staff Sgt. Phyllis Swinson at 545-1934.

Sunday School — The Fort Benning Sunday School is open every Sunday, and all personnel can attend. There are classes for 2-year-olds through adults. Sunday School is located in the Religious Education Center, Building 2517. Classes are from 9:30 to 10:30 a.m.

church brief

Eastern Orthodox liturgy — There will be an Eastern Orthodox Liturgy in English at 10 a.m. Saturday at the Episcopal Church on Hilton Avenue.

Books, videos provide education, entertainment

USAIC Chaplain Office

The Fort Benning Chaplain Family Life Center suggests the following for viewing and reading.

Books

"Jesus: An Interview Across Time" by Andrew G. Hodges

In this gripping, moving book, Hodges surmises what Christ would've said if he shared his side of the story of being God's Son on earth — childhood experiences of alienation, being baptized by John, realizing for the first time that he was the Son of God.

"Ethics," Volume 1 by Trutz Rendtorf

Rendtorff developed his theory of an ethical theology, which is, in fact, the idea of ethics being independent from theology. He discusses the place of ethics in relation to theology and gives a view of the three basic elements of an ethical life as well as an analysis of the methodological structure of ethics

Videos

"Charlotte's Web"

A jewel of a video that's based on an all-time favorite children's book. This endearing animated musical masterpiece features the unforgettable voices of Debbie Reynolds as Charlotte, Paul Lynde as Templeton the Rat, Agnes Moorehead as the Stuttering Goose, and Henry Gibson as Wilbur the Pig.

"Martin The Cobbler"

A warm, endearing classic your whole family will enjoy (your children will love the claymation). Martin is a sad and lonely man who has given up on life since the death of his wife and son. But God has other plans for Martin the cobbler and gently leads him to a life of love and service. Based on Leo Tolstoy's "Where Love Is" and is narrated by his daughter, Alexandra.

TRADOC cdr visits post

By Brian R. Voller and Lisa M. Hibbert
Bayonet staff writers

The commander of Training and Doctrine Command visited Fort Benning Jan. 17 and 18.

While on post, Gen. William W. Hartzog, took a tour of the Individual Deployment Site at Harmony Church, served as the guest speaker at the Association of the United States Army dinner and participated in a ribbon-cutting ceremony at the Civilian Personnel Operations Center.

Hartzog began his visit with a tour of the IDS at Harmony Church, inspecting the center that is preparing soldiers for deployment to Bosnia.

"I wanted to see the processes the soldiers are going through to prepare them for deployment because this is the future," he said. "Fort Benning will be the future for this type of operation."

"The one thing this tour has reinforced is that the soldier is the most important thing about the future," Hartzog said. "You can change all the technology you want and all the training you want, but it's the soldier that is the most important thing."

Hartzog walked through different buildings being used for the deployment and said he was impressed with what he saw on his tour.

"I'm impressed with two things about it," Hartzog said. "I first came here back in 1959 in a building right down the street. That building is still there; you can't say that for many things in the Army today.

"The other thing that I liked about it is that it doesn't look quite like it did before," he continued. "There's no coal in the coal bin, and there's no furnace in the back... The interior is very modernized, and it is more attuned to the dignity of people."

Hartzog said he was impressed with the people who were working at the IDS preparing soldiers for deployment to Bosnia.

Brian R. Voller

Gen. William W. Hartzog, commander of the Training and Doctrine Command (middle); Maj. Gen. John W. Hendrix (left), Fort Benning commanding general and Lt. Col. William Petula, Individual Deployment Site commander tour the IDS Jan. 17.

"I think it's absolutely crucial to give a pat on the back to the soldiers who are processing the soldiers for deployment," Hartzog said. "I am very proud that we've got Reserve Component soldiers who were able to mobilize quickly and did it with cheer and goodwill on their faces and in their hearts. They came down here ready to work hard, and they had the skills and were proficient and ready to do this."

After his visit to the IDS, Hartzog moved on to Sand hill where he observed the infantry basic training units.

That afternoon, Hartzog visited the School of the Americas. While there, he spoke to the Command and General Staff course students.

Hartzog welcomed the new SOA students to the school and Fort Benning. He told them the school's history reflects the continual change and growth in both SOA and the nations that attend the school.

"Relations between our nations have fluctuated with time and environment," Hartzog said. "It is significant that the school remains open — that training and education are ongoing."

Hartzog also told the students that the Army of tomorrow, Force XXI, will affect not only the U.S. Army and Air Force officers, but the Latin Americans as well.

"Force XXI will be small, fast and lethal — empowered by information, he said. "As soldiers and leaders you must be strong and that strength will derive from your training and education, a segment of which you will receive at SOA."

Later that evening, Hartzog was the guest speaker at the Association of the United States Army winter meeting at the Officers' Club.

"The centerpiece of our Army today and what it must become is our soldiers," Hartzog said to the more than 375 people attending the meeting.

The morning of Jan. 18 found Hartzog making his final stop on post. This time at the Civilian Personnel Operations Center, the first state-side regional office, for a ribbon cutting ceremony.

"Regionalization is a challenge, but people are important," Hartzog said. "I can't help but be impressed by the enthusiasm on all of the faces of the employees. I'm proud of what you've done, and I applaud you."

Editor's note: Spc. Judith Ginder of the School of the Americas contributed to this article.

Regional personnel center officially opens

By Shannon Day
Special to The Bayonet©

The Southeast Civilian Personnel Operations Center conducted a ribbon-cutting ceremony Jan. 18 to mark its official opening.

The center is the result of a "regionalization" concept, which is a new and dramatic way of doing civilian personnel business, according to Lynden H. (Rowdy) Rosenberry, director, Southeast Civilian Personnel Operations Center.

It involves re-engineering civilian personnel organizational structures and improving work methods so the focus is on increasing productivity in a downsizing environment, according to Rosenberry.

Automation, application of new technologies and functional process improvements are expected to considerably cut the processing time for personnel actions, he said.

"It humbles us as we begin this new challenge," Rosenberry said.

The implementation of this center at Fort Benning is the first step in reaching a mandate set by the Office of the Secretary of Defense that all services regionalize personnel functions by 1999.

As one of the Army's 10 new regions, the center will be home to 175 civilian personnel specialists serving 20 installations and activities in six states, Rosenberry said.

> "This is really an important day. You have done an absolutely wonderful thing."
> — Gen. William W. Hartzog
> TRADOC commander

The ribbon was cut by Sara Lister, assistant secretary of the Army, Manpower and Reserve Affairs; Diane Disney, deputy assistant secretary of Defense, Civilian Personnel Policy; Carol Ashby Smith, deputy assistant secretary of the Army, Civilian Personnel Policy; Gen. William W. Hartzog, commanding general, U.S. Army Training and Doctrine Command and Maj. Gen. John W. Hendrix, post commanding general.

"This is really an important day, " Hartzog said, adding he was really impressed with the enthusiasm of the center's employees. "You have done an absolutely wonderful thing."

"I'm very proud of what you have done," he said. "I applaud you all."

FBI arrests theft suspect

U.S. Department of Justice

The Federal Bureau of Investigation arrested Sonnie Carl Hendricks, age 22 of Columbus, as a result of a joint investigation on the theft of night observation devices that were stolen from Fort Benning in December.

The joint investigation included the U.S. Army Criminal investigation Division Command here, the FBI in Columbus and Tulsa, Oklahoma, and the Rogers County Oklahoma Sheriff's Department.

Hendricks' arrest was based on a complaint and federal arrest warrant charging him with theft of government property and interstate transportation of stolen property.

The arrest came as a result of an investigation involving the December 1995 theft of numerous night observation devices from the 3rd Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment.

Hendricks was afforded an initial appearance before the U.S. Magistrate Court Judge William Slaughter, who ordered him released on a $5,000 unsecured bond.

If convicted, Hendricks faces a maximum of 20 years imprisonment and a $500,000 fine.

SECRETARY OF THE ARMY

Task force on extremists arrive

By Richard J. McDowell
Public Affairs officer

The nine-member Secretary of the Army's task force on extremist organizations is at the mid-point of its nine-day visit to Fort Benning.

This task force and others are visiting Army installations worldwide to determine the climate and gather information about extremist groups.

The task force was formed at the direction of Secretary of the Army Togo West following the shooting deaths of a black couple by white soldiers at Fort Bragg, N. C., earlier this month.

Earlier this week, team members conducted sensing sessions with cross-samples of soldiers from the 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division; Infantry Training Brigade, 29th Infantry Regiment; 75th Infantry Regiment; Noncommissioned Officers Academy and Infantry Officer Basic Course students.

Interviews were also conducted with brigade, battalion and company commanders and noncommissioned officers in leadership positions.

Team members also paid visits to staff officers such as Equal Opportunity officers, chaplains and the Staff Judge Advocate.

There will also be an Army Research Institute questionnaire that will be passed out to 1,600 other soldiers who were not interviewed.

During the team's briefing, Maj. Gen. John W. Hendrix, post commanding general, voiced his support of the team's fact-finding visit.

"I totally endorse this visit," he said. "The only thing we are seeking is the truth. Nothing gets in the way of the truth. There is no need to guard against the truth."

Group seeks info

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Soldiers, civilians and family members who believe they have information relative to soldiers' participation in or recruiting activities for extremist, racist or hate groups on post can submit written statements to members of a task force visiting Fort Benning.

The statements must be submitted in letter format inside a sealed envelope. The letter must include the author's name, grade, Social Security number, unit and duty telephone number.

The outside of the envelope must be addressed to "The Secretary of the Army's task force of extremist activities."

The envelope should be forwarded or delivered to the Inspector General's Office at 71 Wold Ave., no later than Monday.

For information, call Bob Rabb at 545-3961.

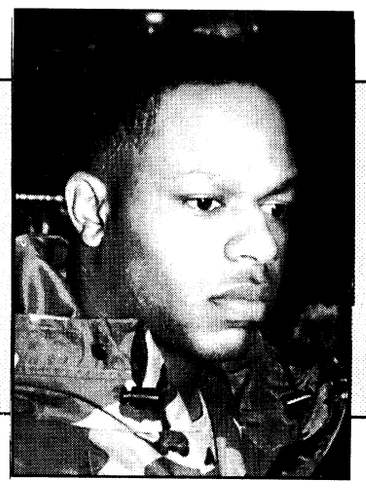
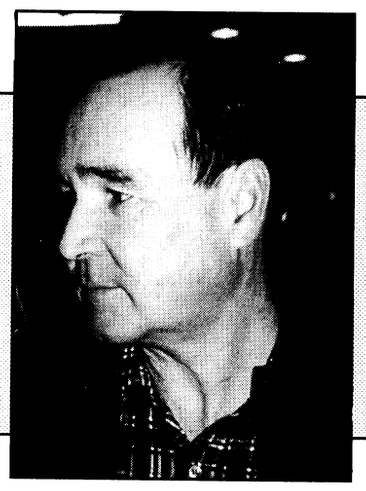
VARIOUS VOICES

If you do not use your tax return money to pay bills, what will you use it for?

Staff Sgt. Dana Schulz, 4th Ranger Training Battalion— "I plan to use my tax return for investment in savings."



Gene Whitlow, retiree — "I'm not getting one."



Georgia Nash, civilian employee — "I might just take the money and go on vacation."

Linda Barnett, family member— "We've had to pay money back every year since we've been retired."

Sgt. Alan Durgan, Company C, 317th Engineer Battalion, 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Divsion — "I plan to put it in the bank and save it."

Jay Eller, retiree — " I try to break even because it's more economical."

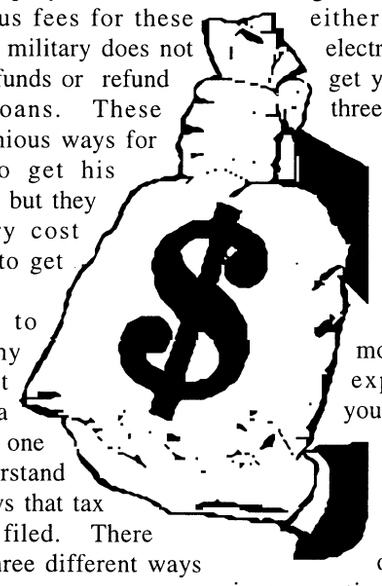
Tax assistance

Office of the Staff Judge Advocate offers services



By Scott L. Frost
Legal Assistance attorney

The Legal Assistance Division of the Office of the Staff Judge Advocate offers a variety of tax assistance through the Installation Tax Office. These services include help in preparation of returns, distribution of common forms and electronic filing.

commentary

When individuals are considering whether to use the services provided by the Legal Assistance Division, they must weigh the individual costs associated with both services.

All of the tax assistance provided by the Tax Office is free. If you choose to go off post to obtain tax help, you will be charged various fees for these services. The military does not offer instant refunds or refund anticipation loans. These items are ingenious ways for the soldier to get his money quickly, but they are not a very cost effective way to get your refund.

In order to understand why an instant refund is not a very good idea, one must first understand the various ways that tax returns can be filed. There are basically three different ways to file your income tax returns, which include mailing it yourself, using the IRS telephone filing for 1040 EZ forms or using electronic filing. If you mail your return, you will get your refund in about eight weeks. If you file by either telephone or by electronic filing, you will get your refund in about three weeks.

When an establishment offers you an instant refund, they are not filing your return any quicker. They are simply loaning you money, based upon the expected amount of your refund. This loan is typically provided by a bank, through the tax preparer, and each of them charge a fee in connection with your instant refund. You, as the tax filer, must sign over your tax refund through use of a power of attorney.

To better understand the implications of this process, let's look at an example. First, you will pay preparation, electronic filing and the instant refund fees of about $100. The average time to receive an electronically filed refund is between 12 and 21 days, so you are essentially paying $100 to get your refund nine to 18 days earlier. If you were expecting a $300 refund, you will receive $200. This charge is one-third of the refund, which amounts to paying a 33 percent interest rate to get your money immediately.

However, because you are only borrowing the money for approximately 21 days, the actual rate of interest is more than 500 percent. Most people would never knowingly sign up for a loan at that interest rate. The choice is yours, either quick and expensive or a little slower and free.

Tax counselors aide soldiers with return

By Clyde Snively
Bayonet columnist

Dragon lady reminded me that we are well into tax season. That's the bad news.

The good news is that most of us enlisted types should see some money coming back. She emphasized that point, "Don't let the government use your money; file early and get it back."

commentary

The super good news is that if forms are as foreign to you as they are to me, there's help.

The Staff Judge Advocate's office provides all sorts of help for people like me who can't add or follow instructions, for example, "If line B is larger than line A, but not as large as line C, go to line D, but if line B is equal to or less than line A, disregard line C and move to item 26, enter amount there."

Hey, I can go out and talk to people, take pictures, take notes, return to the office, turn on my computer and write a story.

But don't expect more of me. The entire left side of my brain is dedicated to just surviving on the job. While the right side of my brain, unfortunately, was DOA — dead on arrival.

Nothing to be proud of, just a fact of life.

As a result, I have no mechanical aptitude. I have no form-filling-out ability and I sure can't do no math. Yet somehow, with the help of the tax counselors, I manage to get my form filled out.

In fact they do just about everything except sign my name.

What this means of course is that I'll have to stay in the Army and remain at a low enough rank so I can continue to use the EZ (hah!) tax form and get all that free help.

Which reminds me, why do Army dudes go to commercial tax firms for assistance? I know some do it because they think if they pay for something it must be better than free assistance.

Others do it because they're so hot to get their returns back, they file electronically. Well guess what, SJA does that too.

William O. Riley went downtown. He went there because the Army tax counselor said he was only entitled to a $46 return. William O. knew that was wrong, so he paid $35 for a commercial firm to fill out his form.

And guess what. They pretty much agreed with the Army guy, so William O's $46 turned out to be $11 after deducting the cost of his fee. Of course, he can claim his $35 on next year's return.

Sucker.

By the way, don't forget you can get help with your state returns too. All those who think they don't need to file state, raise your hand.

Wrongo, BDU breath. You do.

You might be totally exempted (unless you're from some of those stingy states up in the Northeast who don't care if you live there or not, as long as you're a resident, you owe).

But once again, if you've got questions, you know whom to call.

By the way, I pity you people who have to file not only federal, but also Georgia and state of resident return.

Oh well, I guess that's the price of freedom.

Now if we could just lower the price of defending that freedom.

Leadership forgotten by NCOs

By Michael Mettlen
Co. B., 2nd Bn., 29th Inf. Regt.

Leadership is what makes the difference between an effectively trained, ready-to-fight force and a company of soldiers who are disorganized and lack esprit de corps.

Michael Mettlen believes that leadership has been forgotten

commentary

It would be easy for us as noncommissioned officers to blame our problems on the recent drawdown or on our ever decreasing budget. However, at the heart of most problems within a unit, we usually find poor leaders. Weak leaders make weak units.

I've noticed a very disturbing trend over the last few years. It seems as the NCO corps becomes more and more leadership deficient, it has also become more officer dependent. We as NCOs have allowed officers to do our job much too often. The once clear line between officer and NCO duties seems to be getting cloudy. Fewer and fewer NCOs are standing up for themselves and their soldiers.

It is the NCO, not the officer, who is responsible for taking care of and training the soldier. Instead, we too often stand back and watch as commanders who know little or nothing about the soldier's personal life, become both judge and jury when that soldier has personal problems. Whatever happened to standing up for the soldier? Have we become so caught up in the promotion process that we have become scared to do our jobs? At what point do we draw the line between our career and our soldiers?

If we're going to build a force for the future, we NCOs must stand up and take our place. We are the backbone of the Army. When times of conflict come in the future, it will be we who are fighting side by side with that soldier. If we do not take care of the soldier now, the soldier will not follow us then.

NCOs be proud! We have an important job. Let's take responsibility for our actions. Let's not allow others to do our job because by doing so we have become guilty of the most unpardonable sin any leader can be accused of — we've forgotten the soldier.

OCS students give buildings lease on life

By Pam Newbern
Officer Candidate School

Two Fort Benning buildings are getting a new lease on life, thanks to the efforts of students in Class 1-96 in the Officer Candidate School.

For the past few weeks, members of the class have been renovating the insides of Nett and Wigle Halls. Wigle Hall serves as the OCS Hall of Fame, while Nett Hall had been closed for some time.

Nett Hall is expected to be completed by Tuesday, while the work on Wigle Hall may be completed by members of the next OCS class.

Nett Hall is named for Col. Robert B. Nett, an OCS graduate and World War II veteran.

Nett received the Medal of Honor for spearheading an assault on an enemy strong point on the island of Leyte in the Philippines Dec. 6, 1944. He also served in the Korean War, as well as in Europe and Vietnam.

Candidates involved in renovating the halls say they are especially happy to see the changes in Nett Hall.

"It hadn't been used in quite a while," said Senior Officer Candidate Michael Collins, one of the primary coordinators of the project. "It was really doing an injustice to Colonel Nett."

The candidates chose the renovations as their class project — and have put numerous hours into the effort.

"It's the class project, and I figured, if the class is going to have a class project, this is my class and I want to participate," said Cheryl A. Hutchison, senior officer candidate.

"Where the windows are painted, there are going to be display cases for the pictures in the Hall of Fame," she said. "We're going to get new carpet. It's going to be a conference room, as well as the Hall of Fame."

Pam Newbern

Senior Officer Candidate Todd Myers installs a drop ceiling in Nett Hall.

OCS graduates who achieve the rank of colonel are eligible for inclusion in the Hall of Fame.

When the renovations are complete, Nett Hall will house a store as well as a classroom and offices for the OCS Headquarters and Headquarters Company. The company currently has offices in the school's Company B barracks.

"This has been very needed," said Capt. Sean Welch, commander, Headquarter, Headquarters Company, 3rd Battalion, 2nd Infantry Regiment. "We've been really lucky. We had a bunch of guys who did this for a living."

Many of the 121 candidates in the class have been involved in the renovation. Some senior officer candidates, like Collins, Todd Myers and David Robinson, had done construction work in the past.

"I've been building houses since I was 13," said Collins, who owned his own construction business in partnership with three other men.

Myers and Robinson also had their own businesses. Together with Collins, the three have supervised most of the renovation work.

"I'm used to working on multimillion dollar houses," said Robinson. "I've never worked on a government job."

With the exception of the electrical work, all the construction is being done by the candidates. That effort includes everything from laying carpet to painting and installing drop ceilings.

Send e-mail to U.S. troops in Bosnia

By Rudi Williams
American Forces Information Service

WASHINGTON—"Thank you so much for helping to build peace. There is no greater reason to use your great military expertise than to save people's lives and give them a future that we in the U.S. take for granted. Take care and have the best holiday and New Year possible."

This is one of the first messages to troops in Bosnia Department of Defense received over its newly established "any soldier" electronic-mail holiday greetings system. Susan Cooney of Fresno, Calif., used her home computer to send the message through the Defense Bosnia LINK home page on the Internet's World Wide Web.

Defense officials established the system so the public can send greetings to service members participating in Operation Joint Endeavor, the NATO peacekeeping mission in Bosnia-Herzegovina.

The message program went on line in December. Within 12 hours, citizens from across the nation and overseas had responded with more than 1,000 holiday greetings to troops, said Rick Silva, a DoD information resources manager.

Officials haven't decided how long to offer the e-mail service.

"In the first four days, we've received more than 5,000 holiday messages from every state and U.S. territory and from overseas—Germany, Korea and Haiti," Silva said. "All of the messages are very positive and supportive. It's hard to keep a dry eye when you read some of the heartfelt support in these messages."

"We recommend messages be kept to no more than 50 words," he said.

Currently, DoD is unable to deliver personal e-mail messages to specific individuals. DoD will distribute a selection of the messages through its internal print media sources and broadcasts by the Armed Force Radio and Television Service in Bosnia and the areas supporting Joint Endeavor.

The Bosnia Link home page contains operation maps, fact sheets, news releases, biographies of key commanders and leaders and transcripts of briefings, speeches and testimony. It includes a simple message for under "Send your holiday greetings to the troops in Bosnia."

To send a message, access Bosnia Link through World Wide Web address http://www.dtic.millbosnia/, fill out the form provided and click on the "send message" button.

ACAP offers free seminar

Army Career and Alumni Program

A Washington lecturer and author on career transition from military to civilian employment will be at Fort Benning March 1 in the Infantry Hall, Classroom 30, from 9 to 11 a.m. to talk to officers, senior noncommissioned officers and spouses on "Marketing Yourself for a Second Career."

Retired Col. Jerry Crews, deputy director of the Officer Placement Service for The Retired Officers Association, travels nationwide addressing military audiences composed of people who are nearing retirement, being involuntary separated or opting to leave military service.

The lecture is open to all military personnel and their spouses. The first 200 participants will receive a free copy of the publication, "Marketing Yourself for a Second Career."

In his free two-hour presentation, Crews will introduce the audience to the realities of the competition in the civilian job market; the perceptions civilian employers have of military personnel; how to plan for the job search; tips for strengthening the resume (to include how employers read resumes); networking, preparing for and conducting a successful interview; salary and benefit packages and rejection.

Crews said he doesn't promise an individual instant job search success but guarantees that each person who attends his lecture will profit from the knowledge gained and will be ready to move in the right direction toward that second career.

The lecture has been continually praised by attendees for its content and delivery. Crews provides information for every attendee and provides insights into the transition which are unique and hard biting.

Military members and their spouses will have an opportunity to ask questions of Crews and will also receive a free copy of the publication.

The Retired Association sponsors these lectures, which in 1994 were presented to over 15,000 personnel at 107 military installations throughout the United States and Europe.

For more information, call Mary Allen at 545-4892 or 545-7009.

Onsite

Environmental jobs available

By Mary Allen
Army Career and Alumni Program

Onsite Environmental Staffing continues to provide employment opportunities for soldiers getting out of the military through Fort Benning's Army Career and Alumni Program.

Onsite employs exiting soldiers, veterans and family members in the field of environmental remediation. Onsite currently employs more than 100 new workers per week nationwide.

A soldier can train at Fort Benning and then work in the area of his or her choice.

Starting wages at Onsite range from $9 to $15 per hour depending on a soldier's skills.

Benefit packages offered include a 401K savings plan and dental and health insurance.

Soldiers can use skills learned in the Army to earn a higher starting wage. Heavy equipment operators are in demand at Onsite, as are field technicians, soil and water samplers and people with commercial driver's license.

Onsite offers a 40-hour training course at a cost of $250 per person. A training course will be conducted from Monday through Feb. 1 at the Main NCO Club.

For more information about employment and training, contact Vince Catanzaro at (800) 807-0454. Persons interested can call the ACAP Job Assistance Center at 545-2308 or 545-2309.

Transition Assistance Classes

Army Career and Alumni Program

If you're getting out of the military, the Army Career and Alumni Program is available to help you make the transition.

All service members getting out of or retiring from the military must process through the Army Career and Alumni Program's Transition Assistance Office, Building 2617, Soldiers' Plaza, before attending a Transition Assistance Program class in Infantry Hall.

The National Defense Authorization Act Fiscal 1991, Public Law 101-510 states that soldiers within 180 days of expiration term of service are required to attend a Transition Assistance Program class.

Classes are given in three-day blocks and are scheduled throughout the year.

Classes are in Classroom 30, Infantry Hall, from 7:45 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

For more information, call 545-7020 or 545-7009.

Hospital to require SSNs for patients

Martin Army Community Hospital's computer data base will be updated during February.

The new version, which will be in operation Feb. 24, requires Social Security numbers for all patients to include children and infants for registration purposes.

While patients not possessing this data will not be refused care, some delay could occur if the Social Security numbers are not readily available.

Vibbert Ave to close

Vibbert Avenue will be closed to traffic from Edwards Street to Gillespie Street from Thursday through Feb. 29.

This section of the road will be closed because of the construction of an underground utility tunnel for dual-temp piping from the Heating Plant on Vibbert Avenue to Building 399.

For information, call the Construction Inspection Branch of the Directorate of Public Works at 545-4749.

Tax office to open

The Fort Benning Tax Office will open Wednesday. The office is located in Building 2640 at Soldiers' Plaza and will be open Monday through Friday, from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

Electronic tax filing is available for most federal returns. The office has many federal and state tax forms available.

Unit tax advisers have also been appointed for units throughout the post. Persons having tax questions should see their unit tax adviser first.

For more information, call Capt. Scott L. Frost at 545-3281.

SSNs applications to be accepted Feb 22

Every person age 1 or older must have a Social Security number before that person may be claimed on a tax return.

The Social Security Office in the Main Post Chapel Center, next to Doughboy Stadium, will accept applications for Social Security numbers Feb. 22 starting at 10 a.m.

Applicants must bring a certified copy of the person's birth certificate and some other type of identification such as school or shot records.

For more information, call Capt. Scott L. Frost at 545-3281.

Center changes hours

The Welcome Center is now open Monday through Friday 7 a.m. to 10 p.m., and Saturday and Sunday 2 to 10 p.m.

Inprocessing will be from opening hours until 20 minutes prior to closing hours.

Outprocessing soldiers may report to the Welcome Center or call to make an appointment 10 days before departure from the installation.

For more information, call 545-5404.

CID seeks assistance

The U.S. Army Criminal Investigation Division is offering a $300 reward for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the person(s) responsible for a larceny. that occurred between 5 p.m. Jan. 5, and 9:30 a.m. Jan. 8.

Someone entered Building 2755A on post and removed three central processing units, two monitors and one computer printer.

Anyone with information concerning this incident can contact J. Taylor at 545-7950 or 545-7052 or the Military Police at 545-5222.

CID is also asking for any information leading to the arrest and conviction of the person(s) responsible for forgery and larceny that occurred between 2:20 p.m. Nov. 16 and 10:10 p.m. Nov. 17 at 154 Derrickson Street and the Post Exchange at the Main Mall.

Unknown persons removed several discarded checks from a trash can, then forged and negotiated the checks at the Post Exchange at the Main Mall.

The assistance of the local community is being requested in an effort to identify and apprehend the perpetrator(s).

The identity of anyone providing information will be kept in the strictest confidence.

OCS board set

The next Officer Candidate School selection board has been scheduled for June 17 to 21. The cutoff date for applications to arrive at Personnel Command is May 17 — no exceptions.

The Adjutant General Personnel Operations Services Division has set up two local boards to accommodate Fort Benning for the DA June board.

The local board will convene May 6 to 8. Applications for this board must arrive no later than April 19.

For more information, call Marie Lee at 545-3341 or 545-4702.

Registration rules set

The Chattahoochee County Tax Commissioner's Office will accept only cash and money orders as payment for 1996 motor vehicle registration.

The Tax Office will no longer accept personal checks as payment.

Soldiers who are stationed at Fort Benning but are not Georgia residents may avoid the payment of the ad valorem tax.

To avoid the tax, soldiers must obtain an ad valorem exemption form for each vehicle to be registered from the Fort Benning Office of the Staff Judge Advocated, Building 5, located on the corner of Vibbert and Sigerfoos avenues on Main Post.

The soldier must bring a Leave and Earnings Statement from the past three months, proof of insurance, their military identification card and the previous year's paperwork. Call 545-3281.

Fort Benning to get visit from ACOE

The Army selected Fort Benning as one of the 31 finalists in the 1996 Department of the Army, Army Community of Excellence competition.

As a result, Fort Benning was selected for an on-site visit the week of March 4 to 8. Fort Bragg, N.C. and Fort Sill, Okla. were also selected in the large post category.

Thrift Savings Plan opens season

The Thrift Saving Plan open season runs through Wednesday.

Any employee wishing to start a TSP account, change TSP contributions or change how TSP contributions are invested may do so during the open season.

Elections or changes to the TSP may be made by visiting the Directorate of Civilian Personnel. Personnel Services Center, Building 85, Center Wing, during regular duty hours.

Recycle used oil

Used oil can be taken to the following places:

Recycling Center, Building 4000, Villegas Street, Harmony Church. Hours are 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., Monday through Friday.

Main Post Auto Crafts Shop, Building 9064, Marne Road. Hours are 1:30 to 9 p.m. Monday through Friday, 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Saturday and Sunday.

The auto crafts shops charge a fee to collect the used oil.

Used oil may also be turned in to the Energy Management Branch of the Directorate of Public Works or the Defense Reutilization Marketing Office for use. For more information, call 545-4218 or 545-4766.

Office limits claims

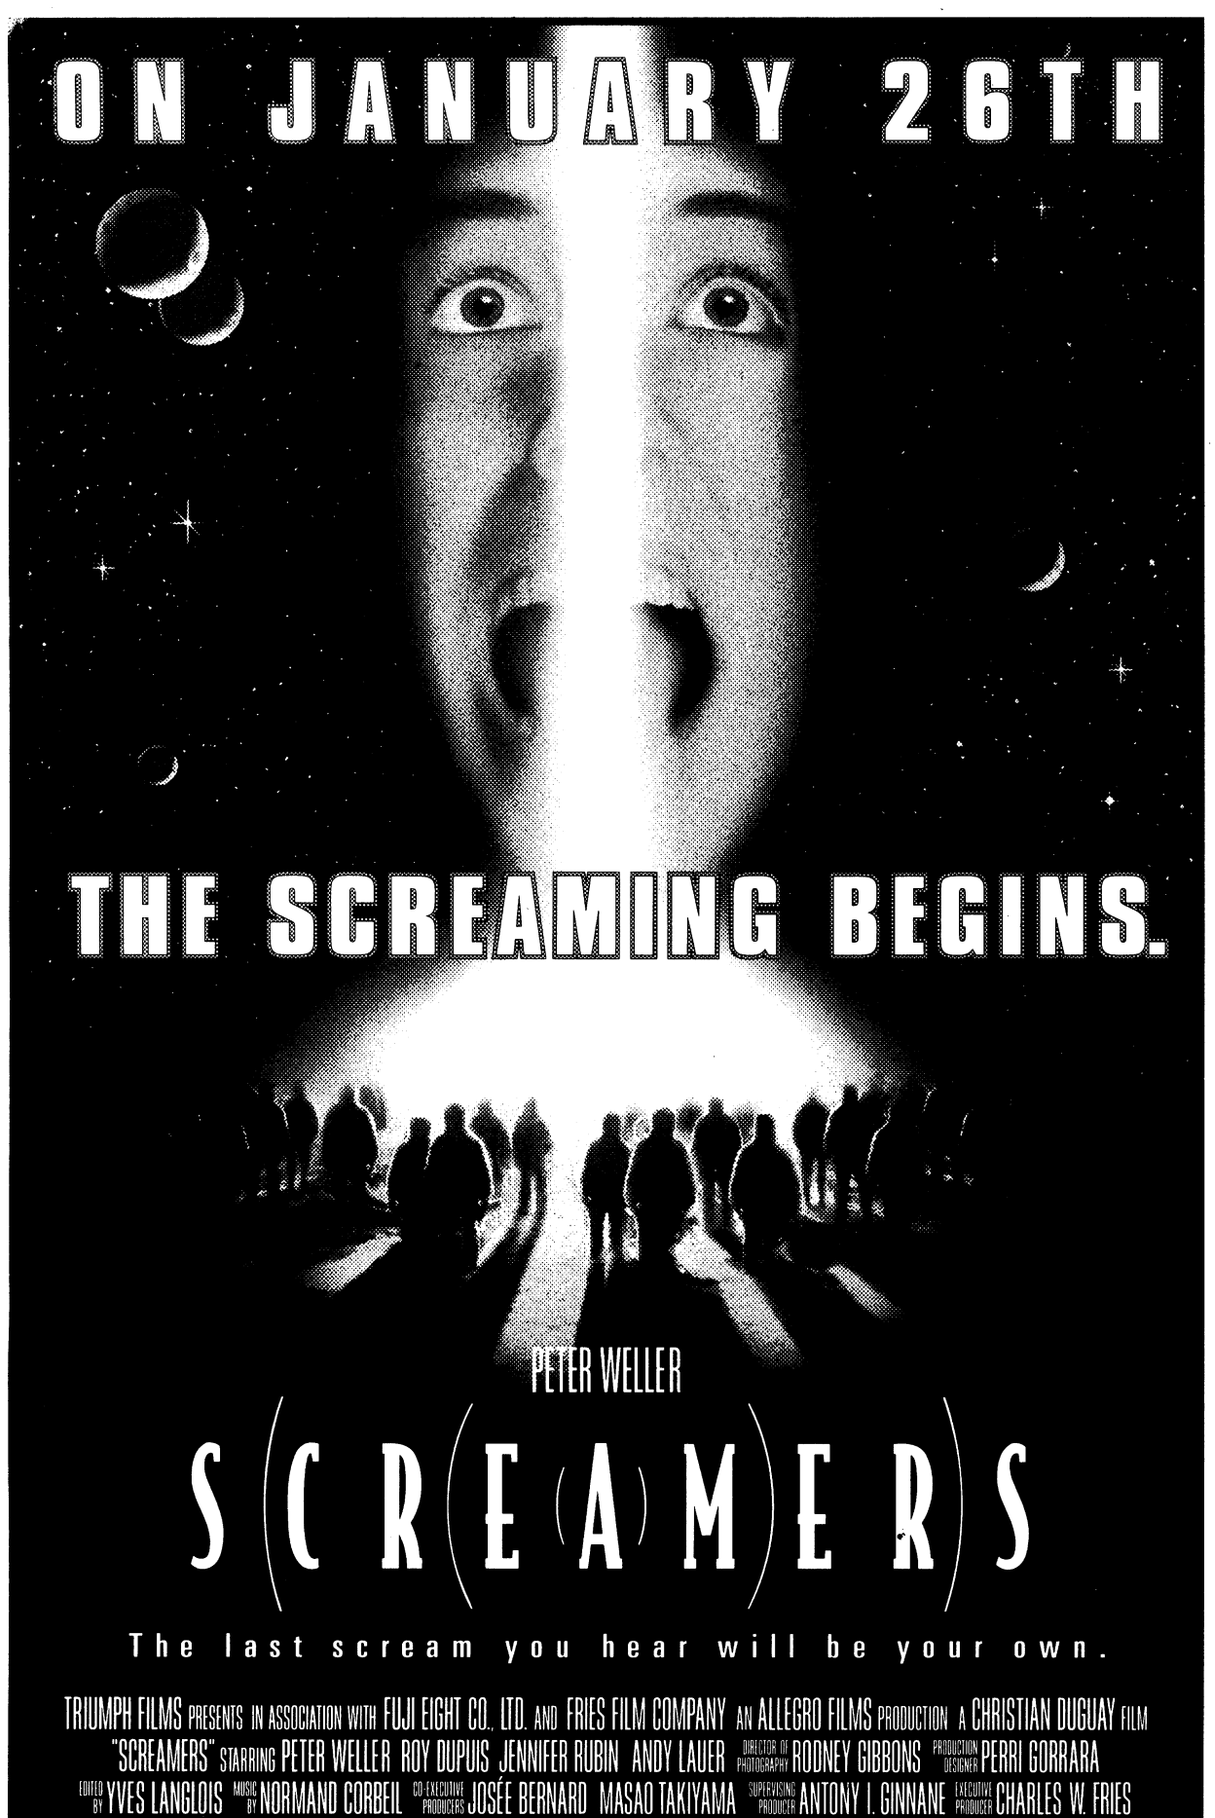
Claims for damage to electronics items damaged by a power surge or power outage will only be considered when the claimant is able to submit a copy of power company records or similar evidence that show that the power surge was of unusual intensity

. Thunderstorms and power fluctuations are not unusual in this area. Residents of government quarters are expected to use surge suppressors to protect electronic items.

Surge suppressors should not be used on refrigerators or freezers because, should the power fluctuate while the resident is not at home, the surge suppressor will not allow the appliance to come back on.

Call 545-2285 for more information.

EFMP program provides assistance



The Exceptional Family Member Program is a Department of the Army program designed to assist, through selective assignment and reassignment, the soldier who has a special needs family member.

The program's purpose is to let the U.S. Total Army Personnel Command at DA know of any family members with special needs, so this can be a consideration during the assignment selection process.

For more information , call Frances Howard at 545-6969 or 545-5516.

TAKE A BREAK, RELAX

Stop stress by knowing, controlling sources

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet©

Whether it's an inconsiderate driver who holds up traffic or life- changing events like divorce or death, stress is no stranger to most people.

Yvonne Wilbanks, civilian program coordinator, civilian counseling service, said stress is a normal part of human existence that cannot be changed.

"Stress is a fact of life," Wilbanks said. "All we can choose is our response."

Understanding what stress is and how it works can help individuals effectively deal with their problems, she said.

According to Wilbanks, stress is the nonspecific response of the body to any demand.

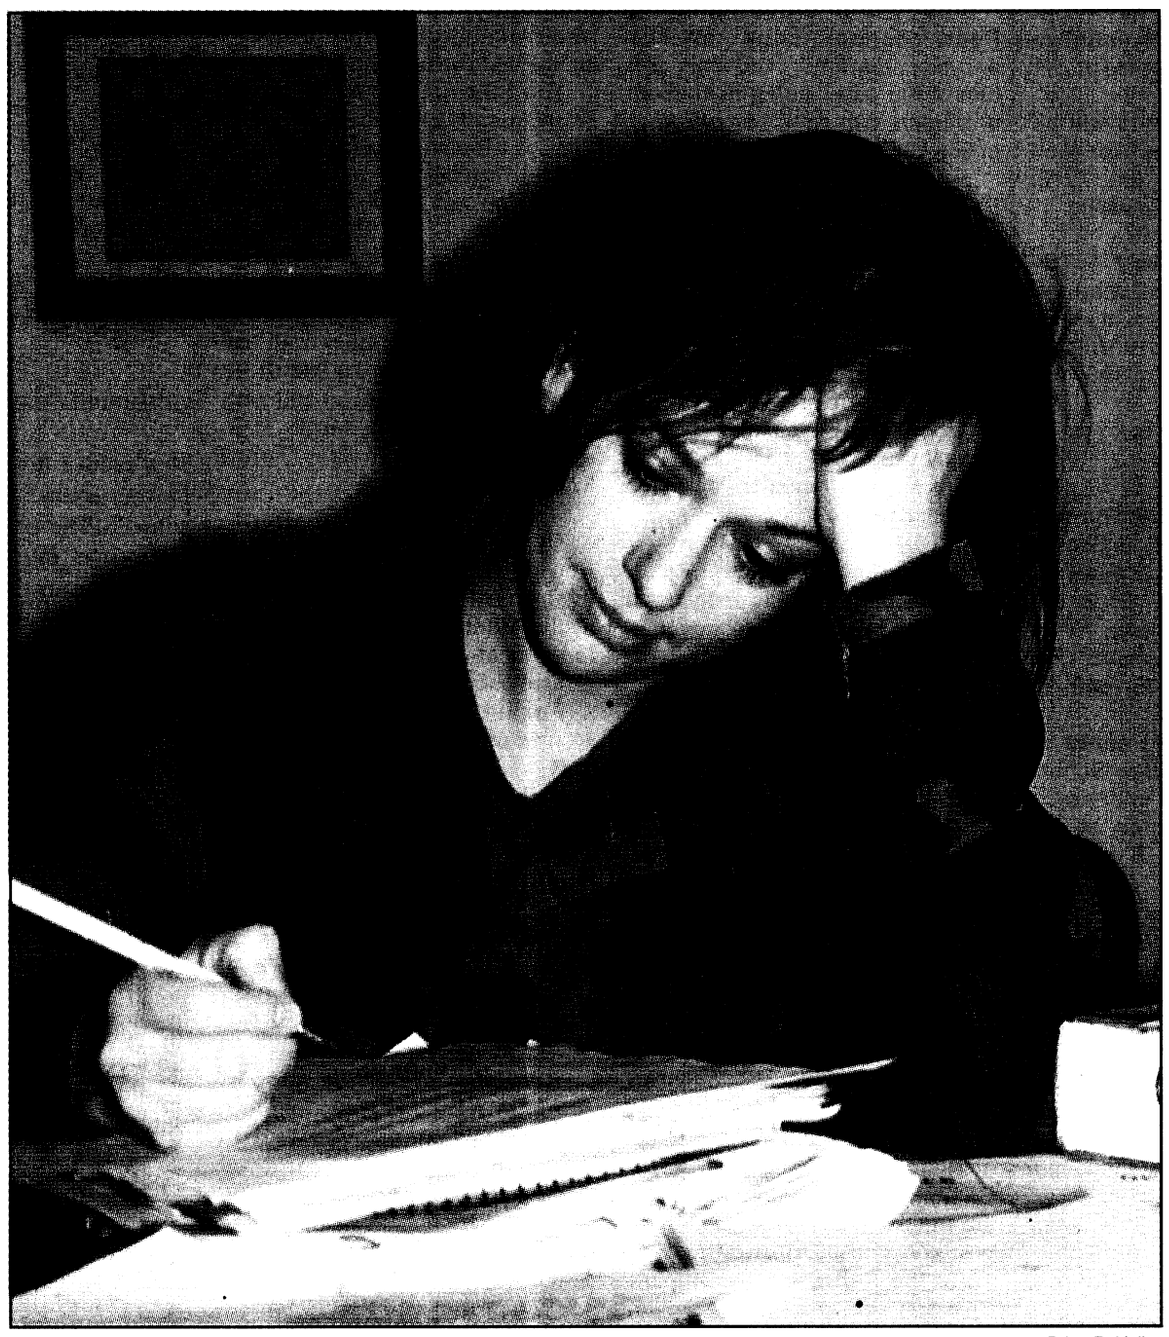
"A certain amount of stress is normal and even positive," she said. "However, too much stress can easily turn into distress."

Signs of overstress often manifest themselves physically, Wilbanks said. Physical signs of overstress include sleeplessness, hives, headaches, ulcers, high blood pressure, chest pains, fatigue, weight loss or gain and cold hands and feet.

Physical symptoms arise because of the body's natural flight or fight response, she said. The body's biological response to stress is designed to physically prepare the individual to fight the danger or flee from it. These natural responses can eventually lead to physical ailments when stress becomes to frequent and prolonged, Wilbanks said.

Wilbanks said stress can also manifest itself psychologically through recurring feelings of unhappiness, anger, irritability and sadness. The combination of the physical and psychological can create a vicious cycle that can be hard to break.

The sources of stress are numerous and often involve some kind of change in an individual's life. The workplace is often a significant source of stress for many people, particularly those who put in long hours at desk jobs.



"We can also create stress for ourselves because of the choices we make in our lives," Wilbanks said. "The decision to start smoking, for example, may lead to physical ailments down the road, which will be a new source of stress."

Wilbanks encouraged people to look closely at their lives and identify attitudes and actions that may contribute to unnecessary stress. It is important that anyone experiencing unnecessary levels of stress seek counseling, she said, because sometimes even just talking through a problem can help alleviate stress.

"A person's attitude is of major importance in determining whether they overcome stress or stress overcomes them," Wilbanks said. While a change in attitude may not necessarily make the cause of stress go away, it can help individuals gain the perspective needed to get themselves back on track toward a more healthy lifestyle.

Wilbanks mentioned a colleague who suffered from cancer but who never let it get him down. The knowledge of an early death didn't make him stop trying to live life as fully as possible, she said.

"The lesson is that no matter what our problems are, we can turn them into positive forces that can make us better people in the end," she said. "The greatest achievements often come about because of adversity. Stress can can be used positively to motivate us and push us to expand our boundaries. You cannot change the fact of stress, but you can choose how you deal with it."

Brian R. Voller

Soldiers, like their civilian counterparts, experience various kinds of stress, both at home and at work. There are simple things everyone can do to alleviate stress.

Small lifestyle changes can make big impact

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet©

Gaining the upper hand over a stressful situation often means gaining an upper hand over our own attitudes, emotions and lifestyles, said Yvonne Wilbanks, civilian program coordinator, civilian counseling services.

Wilbanks suggested numerous ways to recharge one's emotional batteries, many of which can be easily and immediately implemented.

Changes in diet, exercise and relaxation techniques can play a large part in helping individuals overcome the physical and emotional wear and tear of stress.

"A stress management plan can include positive thinking, daily exercise, drinking plenty of water, maintaining a balanced diet and solving problems as they occur, rather than letting them pile up," she said.

Listed below are some strategies for dealing with stress:

- Make it a habit to arrive at a destination at least ten minutes in advance in order to avoid rushing.
- See a movie that you have always wanted to watch
- Don't be afraid to say no to people if you really can't do something they are asking
- Take a warm bubble bath
- Reserve a weekend for yourself
- Call a friend you haven't spoken too in a long time
- Clean out your closet
- Write a letter to someone you love
- Hug a bunny
- Read a novel just for the fun of it
- Practice deep breathing, meditation or yoga
- Eat balanced meals
- Put things back where they belong immediately after using them
- Play your favorite game
- Accept the fact that you cannot change the universe
- Let loved ones go if that is what they really want
- Give up searching for someone or something to blame
- Enjoy your body
- Remember a need is something without which you will die; want is everything else
- Remember that as anger increases, intelligent action decreases
- Take a nap
- Try a new hobby
- Go for a weekend vacation
- Prepare for the morning the night before
- Stop saying negative things to yourself
- Break large tasks into bite-size portions
- Buy yourself a flower
- Learn the words to a new song
- Stand up and stretch
- Do everything in moderation
- Look at problems as challenges
- Memorize a joke
- Take time to smell the flower
- Don't rely on your memory — write it down
- Learn to meet your own needs
- Hum a jingle
- Practice a monster smile
- Have a support network of people, places and things
- Schedule play time into every day
- Watch a movie and eat popcorn.

Post programs provide assistance

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet©

When stress begins to seem as if it is too much to bear, it may be difficult to know when and where to seek assistance.

Yvonne Wilbanks, civilian program coordinator, Civilian Counseling Services, said help for Fort Benning civilian employees is just a phone call away.

What's more, the services are confidential and free.

"A person does not have to have a big problem to use our services," she said. "Whether it's simple advice about what to do or where to go or a desire to find long-term treatment, the service is available to help individuals develop an effective stress management plan."

The service functions as as a screening and referral service, Wilbanks said. Patients can expect from one to three consultations with a trained professional. If it is determined the patient needs additional outside services, personnel will assist the individual in finding affordable treatment.

Wilbanks said post employees consult the service for numerous reasons, including work-related stress, drug dependency, relationship and family problems and stress arising from health problems.

Wilbanks also encouraged supervisors to take advantage of the services's nondisciplinarian referral service by diplomatically encouraging problem employees to seek help.

Wilbanks also conducts numerous on-site stress management workshops with post organizations. Supervisors can contact her for information, she said.

Civilian Counseling Services is located in Building 324, next to the National Infantry Museum on Main Post, and can be reached at 545-2475.

While Civilian Counseling Services is available for post civilian employees only, Wilbanks said soldiers can call for drug- and alcohol-related referrals. She encouraged soldiers with other concerns to pursue help through their unit chaplain or chain of command.

Boys scout for food in annual drive

By Amy Durham
Special to The Bayonet©

Check your front door next Saturday morning. You should find a bag hanging on the doorknob.

Fort Benning Boy Scouts will be scouring installation neighborhoods Feb. 3, placing food collection bags, with flyers inside, on doors for the 1996 Scouting for Food drive.

Then, the following Saturday, Feb. 10, the scouts will return to collect food-filled bags for the Army Community Service Food Locker.

The scouts are asking people to leave bagged items on their doorsteps.

"We can accept canned and boxed goods, as well as food in plastic containers," Robin Scribner, the food drive chairwoman, said.

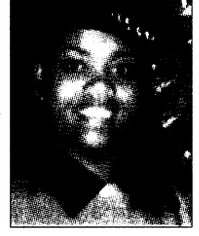
Tony Scribner, 13, and brother, Michael, 11, both of Troop 135 and sons of Staff Sgt. Andrew and Robin Scribner, place a collection bag on a neighbor's door. The two will join hundreds of Scouts Feb. 3 when the 1996 Scouting for Food drive begins.

Fort Benning spouse meets president, represents Army



By Lisa M. Hibbert
Bayonet staff writer

Pamela Wade's husband, Warrant Officer Willie Lee Wade Jr., 586th Engineer Company, 36th Engineer Group, left Fort Benning for Bosnia Dec. 3 with just five hours' notice, leaving her and their four children behind to spend their first Christmas alone.

Out of something bad came something good when Wade received an invitation from President Bill Clinton to visit the White House on Christmas Eve.

Wade and her mother-in-law, Luddie, along with six other families who have spouses and relatives in Bosnia, flew to Washington, D.C., visited the White House at the invitation of President Bill Clinton.

The families invited represented all the components of the U.S. armed forces: U.S. Army Reserve, U.S. Army National Guard, U.S. Navy, U.S. Marine Corps, Department of the Army civilians and the U.S. Army— represented by Pamela Wade — participating in Operation Joint Endeavor.

Pamela Wade, family member, was excited when the President mentioned her husband's name during his speech.

When making the address, the president took the time to mention the names of all the family members present and their spouses.

"I was so happy that he did that!" Wade said. "The president said my husband's name in his speech!"

Unfortunately, Wade's husband did not see that part of the speech on television in Bosnia, although several of his fellow soldiers over there saw it and told him about it, Wade said.

Wade's husband being deployed has not clouded her opinion of, or her enthusiasm for meeting the commander in chief.

"I know that this is my husband's job," Wade said. "I pray that nothing happens to him and I'm glad that I have the support of my family and my church to help me."

Not only were Wade and her mother-in-law present when the president filmed his message, they, along with the other families, were taken on a private tour of the White House, including a special tour of the Oval Office given by President Clinton himself.

"It was a wonderful tour — very historic," Wade said. "He told us about a desk that used to belong to JFK and how the office entrance had to be remade to accommodate Roosevelt's wheelchair.

"I found the president to be a down to earth and personable guy," Wade said. "When he came into the room, he was fixing his tie. All

Scribner added the scouts can even accept bagged items like noodles or flour, as long as the package hasn't been opened. However, Boy Scouts cannot accept anything in a glass container, home-canned items or frozen foods.

Although the Fort Benning food drive collections will go to the Army Community Service Food Locker, Scribner, whose two sons are involved in Scout Troop 135, said the drive also gives the Scouts an opportunity to do something for the community.

"We're trying to get them to understand they are helping families in need and at sometime in their lives, they may need the same kind of help," she said.

Several hundreds Scouts will have that opportunity Feb. 10 as they collect the bags from neighborhood and deliver the food to the Food Locker.

This year, the food drive was scheduled for February because many food bank supplies are usually low this time of year, according to Brad Nescheim scout executive for the Chattahoochee Council for Boy Scouts of America.

Spouse: visits DC

of a sudden the camera crew was looking around, asking what's that sound? The president answered, "It's just my tie" — he was wearing a musical tie!"

Wade said that her mother-in-law was thrilled about visiting the White House and meeting the president with her.

"I didn't take my kids because they were so excited about seeing their grandmother," Wade said. "When I told my kids where I was going, they wanted to go; but, they ended up staying with my mother."

At the end of her meeting with the president, Wade gave Clinton a 36th Engineer Group coin.

"The president collects coins from everywhere," Wade said, "but he didn't have one from the 36th until we gave it to him."

"It was very exciting because going to see the president was such an honor, Wade said. "I'm very glad that I got to go even though I miss my husband and I was sad about the conditions that I got to go."

Spencer student visits Japan

By Shannon Day
Special to The Bayonet©

Before he has graduated from high school, Omar R. Kendall, son of Chief Warrant Officer 2 Melville and Luci Kendall, is going places and realizing dreams he has had since he was a young child.

The senior at W.H. Spencer High School recently returned from an exchange-student program he participated in, which took him to Japan.

"As long as I can remember, I have always wanted to go to Japan," Kendall said.

His opportunity came when he saw a flyer advertising the program in his world history class in September1995. The program allowed for one student from each of the Muscogee County schools to fly to Japan and live with a native host family for about two weeks. He just had to pay for air fare, which came to about $1,300.

As soon as Kendall was chosen, he began to go to weekly classes at Columbus College to learn about the foreign culture and some basic Japanese language.

He and several other students from Muscogee County departed the airport in Atlanta Dec. 27. It took 14 hours to fly to Tokyo, Kendall said. The flight was followed by a three-hour drive to Kiryu, Columbus' sister city in Japan.

There, he met his host family, the Ishizekis.

As soon as he arrived at his host family's home, the differences between American and Japanese people literally hit him — in the head, that is.

"As soon as I got to their house, I realized it was not built for people my size," said 6-foot-3-inch Kendall. "Every time I would go through a doorway or something, I would hit my head on the ceiling!"

He told his host family he wanted to absorb as much culture as he could, so he began by sleeping Japanese-style, which was on the floor. He was also surprised to find out the next morning that the Japanese turn off their heat at night, even in the winter.

> "I learned that in what was supposed to be such a different place, when you get to the core, people are almost exactly the same."
> — Omar R. Kendall
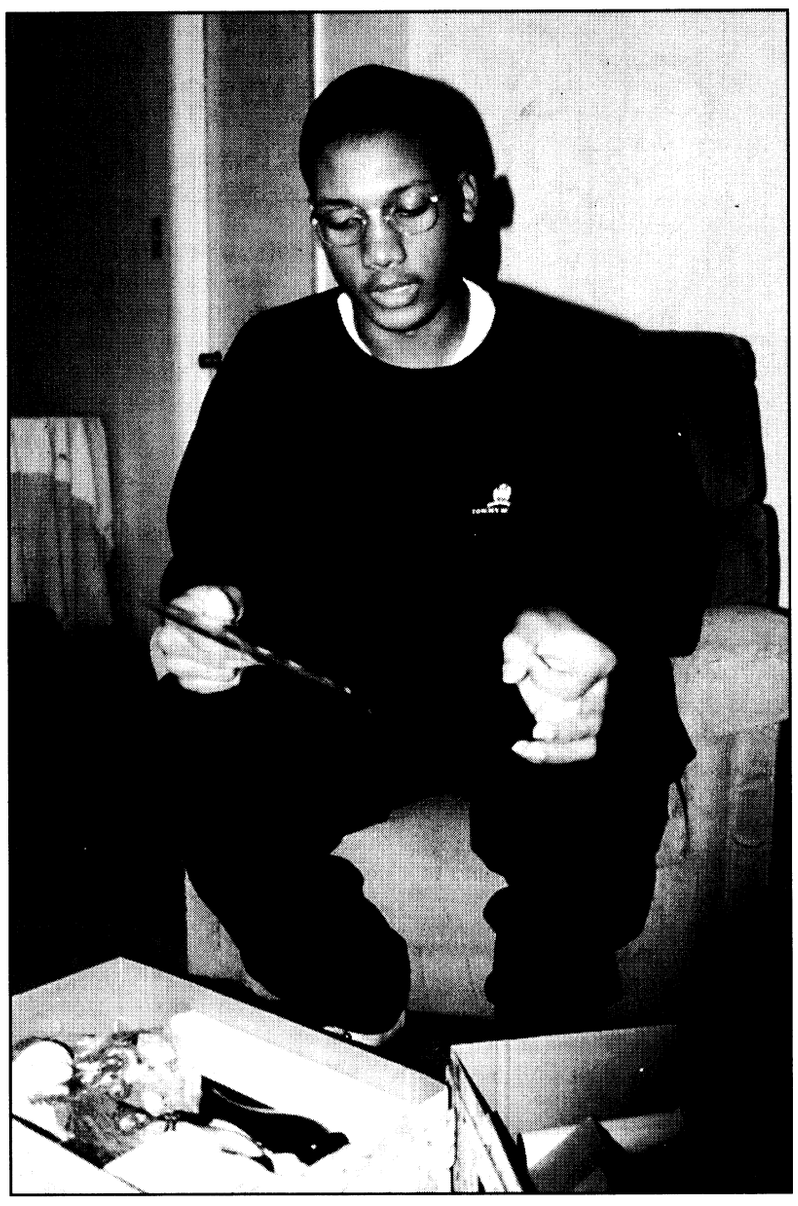
> Exchange student



He was soon warmed up after a breakfast of curried rice, salmon and maccha (green tea), prepared by Yoshiko, his host mother.

He then had a little more time to get to know the rest of his host family better. Besides Yoshiko and her husband, Niroku, there were two sons, Atsushi and Yasushi. Kendall added that he liked all of the members of his host family, but he spent most of his time with 21-year-old Yasushi, who spoke fluent English.

One highlight of his trip included a ski trip to Nikko, a resort about two hours away from Kiryu. It was the first time Kendall had been snow skiing.

He also participated in the Japanese New Year celebration, which lasts several days.

He visited several shrines, including Toshogu, the shrine in Nikko from which the "hear no evil, see no evil, speak no evil" monkeys originated from.

Shannon Day/Special to The Bayonet

Omar R. Kendall, a senior at W. H. Spencer High School, looks at a book written and given to him by a friend he met during his trip to Japan.

He went to Tokyo, which has a population of 12 million.

"It is easy to get separated in Tokyo because of all of the people, but it was easy for everyone to find me because I stuck out above the crowd," he said.

In what was supposed to be such a different place, there were a lot of things that reminded him of America, Kendall said.

"I learned that in what was supposed to be such a different piace, when you get to the core, people are almost exactly the same," he said.

He added that the Japanese seemed to be much more accepting of Americans than he had expected. His host mother even made macaroni and cheese for him one day.

Kendall has only been home two weeks, but he is already making plans to visit the Ishizekis again this summer.

He has also decided that when he graduates from high school, he wants to go to college and learn Japanese. He said his goal is to move to Japan and teach English.

Army Community Service to sponsor car-buying seminar

Army Community Service

A car buying tips seminar will be Feb. 6 at 7 p.m. Sponsored by the Army Community Service Consumer Affairs and Financial Assistance Program, the seminar will be presented by Doug Putman of TIC Federal Credit Union.

The entire car-buying process, from research to driving off the lot, will be covered. While there will be much information on the purchase of new cars, attention will be given to the purchase of a used car.

A very misunderstood concept is the "as is" clause. Also, the Georgia lemon law does not apply to used cars.

Do you know what the total cost for payment, insurance, maintenance and operation should be?

Putman will address these questions and more in his presentation.

The seminar will be in the Family Unit Network Center, Building 359. Because registration is required, interested individuals can call 545-4043 or 545-7517 to register or for more information.

profile in excellence

Name: Sgt. 1st Class Floyd Edwards

Award or recognition: Brigade and Battalion Noncommissioned Officer of the Quarter
MOS: 11M Infantryman (Mechanized)
Unit: Company D, 1st Battalion, 38th Infantry Regiment, Infantry Training Brigade
Job title: Senior Drill Sergeant
Years in the Army: 12 years

What were your reasons for joining the Army? Education benefits and travel opportunities.

Define your style of leadership.
The situation determines the style I will use.

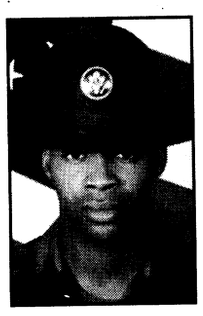
What person has most influenced your career?
Staff Sgt. Mark Brigs, a savior who believes in leading by example.

If you were Sergeant Major of the Army for a day, what improvements would you make?
I would make it easier for senior noncommissioned officers to attend school in the final stage of their career. This would prepare them to meet the challenge in the civilian world.

What were your reasons for choosing your military occupational specialty?
I selected this MOS because the Army is moving forward into technology, and mechanization is part of that technology.

Describe a memorable moment in your career.
Operation Desert Storm.

What are your career plans?
To retire from the Army and be just as successful in the civilian world as I have been in the military.



What others have to say:
"Drill Sergeant Edwards is a drill sergeant that can be counted on to accomplish any mission regardless of the difficulty or personal sacrifice involved."

— 1st Sgt. James M. Riggs
Company D, 1st Bn., 38th Inf. Reg.t., ITB

"Drill Sergeant Edwards thoroughly understands the business of training and consistently provides some of the most tactically proficient and disciplined soldiers in the ITB."

— Lt. Col. Kevin Connors
Commander,1st Bn., 38th Inf. Regt., ITB

profile in excellence

Name: Staff Sgt. Pernell V. Wilson

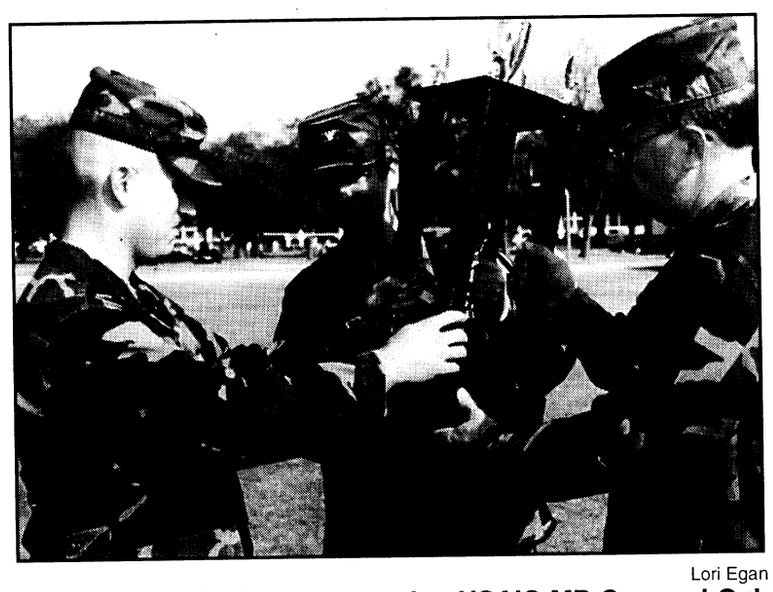
Award or recognition: Drill Sergeant of the Quarter
MOS: 11B Infantryman
Unit: Company C, 1st Battalion, 38th Infantry Regiment, Infantry Training Brigade
Job title: Drill sergeant
Years in the Army: Eight years

What were your reasons for joining the Army?
I wanted to experience the military and I had a strong desire to see other parts of the world.

Define your style of leadership.
Half participative and half authoritarian. I like to participate with soldiers in areas that I perceive are their weakest. However, I encourage them to take as much responsibility for their training as they are able to.

What person has most influenced your career?
Sgt. 1st Class Eric Canon, one of my platoon sergeants. He was the type of noncommissioned officer who coached me, but yet disciplined me, too. He always taught, "Make sure you are correct before you correct someone else."

If you were sergeant major of the Army for a day, what improvements would you make?
First of all, I would change the pay scale. I would make the pay between officers and noncommissioned officers more balanced. The second thing I would change is the promotion system. I think a soldier should be promoted because of his or her performance not because of how much college education he or she has.



What were your reasons for choosing your MOS?
I chose infantry because I'm a physical, energetic person who couldn't imagine sitting behind a desk.

Describe a memorable moment in your career.
When I graduated from Ranger School. This experience taught me there isn't any obstacle in life I can't overcome.

What are your career plans?
To attend Pathfinder School before finishing drill status and then go somewhere and get a platoon. If I can't do this, I probably will become a ranger instructor and continue to drive on.

What others have to say:
"A drill sergeant who was able to step in and make an immediate impact. He has the respect of all those who work with him."

— 1st Sgt. Carlos Garriga
Company C, 1st Bn, 38th Inf. Regt, ITB

Capt. Stephen Smith, commander, USAIC MP Co., and Col. Ronnie D. Alton, post provost marshal, receive Stem award from Col. Linda L. Newman, TRADOC provost marshal.

MP Co takes top spot

By Lisa M. Hibbert
Bayonet staff writer

The U.S. Army Infantry Center Military Police Company ranked top in the U.S. Army Training and Doctrine Command and was presented with the Brig. Gen. David H. Stem award by the TRADOC Provost Marshall Jan. 17.

Col. Linda L. Norman, TRADOC provost marshal, presented the award to Capt . Stephen L. Smith, commander, USAIC MP company, as Col. Ronnie D. Alton, Fort Benning provost marshal, looked on.

"The Stem Award is the highest award in TRADOC and I'm happy that the USAIC MP won," Alton said. "Captain Smith, Captain (Samuel) Barton (executive officer, USAIC MP Co.) and First Sergeant (Terry) Smith did an excellent job with the company and deserve all of the credit."

Companies are judged on such things as re-enlistment rates and soldier achievements, Smith said.

"I'm really pleased that this company won the award," Smith said. "This is the second time the company received the award (they had also won in 1993); but this is the first time that the company has won since I've been here."

Smith gave the credit for winning to the soldiers in his company.

"The soldiers in this company really work hard and they all show a lot of initiative," Smith said. "Without their hard work, we could not have won."

Let daily walk reflect our principles

By Steve Bounds
1st Battalion, 38th Infantry Regiment

Hallelujah! We have survived the rush of the holiday season and are enjoying a new year. I do hope everyone enjoyed spending time with family and friends. Many of us were able to travel back to our home towns for a few days. Thank the Lord for giving us a safe journey.

We should take some time to reflect upon the past year. We all have blessings for which we can thank our God. The Apostle Paul admonished us that we should "in everything give thanks" (1 Thessalonians 5:18 NKJV).

We should thank him both in private prayer time and in public expression to others. We should also be thankful for those unpleasant experiences. God often brings a good result out of a bad thing.

We grow through painful events in our lives. Athletes know that they become better athletes through the sacrifices and pain of physical training.

The old cliche from the gym states: "No pain, no gain."

It is true in other areas of our lives as well. Our minds grow through the pain of teachers inflicting written assignments and exams upon us. Our emotions grow stronger through a broken heart.

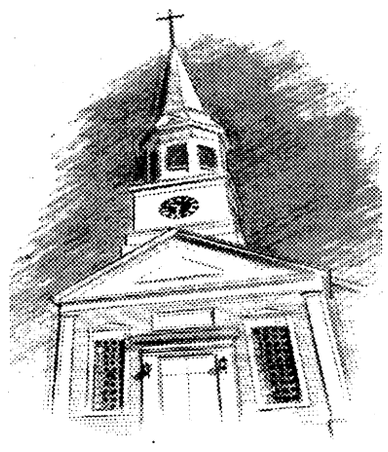
Our willpower grows stronger as we overcome that which hinders us from reaching our goals. There can be no victory without adversity.

Let's not be caught up in the past. Yes, it is good to remember the good times as well as the bad times, but let's not be controlled by our past. There is much more of life ahead for most of us.

We all need a plan to reach our goals. This is a great time to do this since many of us are setting new year's resolutions (another word for goals).

Before we know where we are going, we must know where we are. We must first establish some underlying principles by which we live our lives. Principles are the rock solid foundation stones upon which we build our lives. Principles are our personal, ethical and moral values.

Take a few moments to make a list of those underlying principles. The best place to start is with our spirituality. Where do you stand with God? Are you living your life as he would have you live?



Next we should consider our families. How important are our families to us? Do we spend quality time with our families? We should also consider ourselves. What are we doing to improve ourselves spiritually, mentally and physically?

Finally, we should consider our profession. What are we doing to improve our skills? Whether we choose to work in the home with our children or outside the home on a job, we all have a profession. We can all improve the ways in which we do what we do. We should set goals that fit within those principles. Take a few moments to write your goals down. Be specific. Be realistic. Set short-term (less than one year), mid-term (one to five years) and long-term (more than five years) goals.

Maintain balance in setting goals. Set goals in various areas of our lives such as spiritual, family, professional, mental, social, physical, recreational, etc. Set one or more goals in each of these areas.

The following are some examples:

- Build a closer relationship with God through daily Bible reading and prayer time
- Attend weekly worship services and Bible studies

reflections

- Spend at least one hour weekly of uninterrupted quality time with your spouse
- Spend at least one hour weekly of quality time with each of your children doing something he or she enjoys. Give it some thought and come up with some goals that fit within your principles and reflect your interests.

As we plan for 1996, let's thank our God for his blessings in the old year and keep him first in our lives as we plan our goals and resolutions for the next.

May God bless you all with a happy and prosperous new year.

Christ's loving sacrifice shows real power

reflections

Christmas still lingers if you like. Not the food, gifts and fun parts of it — the Christ part.

Churches that follow a schedule of Bible readings are currently hearing the account of King Herod and the wise men (chapter two of Matthew's Gospel). It's one of many reports in the Gospels about the abuse and the irony of power.

It's a familiar story, even for those of us who aren't active in church life. The wise men ask around the city (Jerusalem) for directions to the "King of the Jews." Herod hears of their inquiries and feels that his rule is being threatened by an unknown contender. He invites the wise men to his court, pretending to be interested.

"Gentlemen, when you find this king, please tell me where he is, so that I, too, can go to worship him," he said.

The wise men find the newborn king in Bethlehem, honor him, then leave the country without seeing Herod again (after God warned them in a dream). Herod is furious, so he sends soldiers to kill all children 2 years old and younger in the Bethlehem area. But Joseph, also warned in a dream, has already fled by night to Egypt with the newborn and his mother.

Some churches call this incident, "The Slaughter of the Innocents." Several artists down through the centuries have portrayed this horror on canvas. Herod's abuse of power here is a tragedy that repeats itself countless times in cultures and eras around the world.

Records from history tell us quite a bit about this king called Herod. He ruled that region for about 40 years. The remains of the temple in Jerusalem today is the product of what he ordered built. When times got tough for his people on one occasion, he canceled their taxes. Once he even took his own gold plate (which he used for eating) and melted it down to buy corn for hungry people.

But Herod's reputation for doing good was greatly overshadowed by evil deeds. The jealousy and suspicion he felt for that newborn male in Bethlehem extended to many other persons. Among those whom he ordered executed were his mother-in-law, his wife, and three of his own sons.

The Roman emperor, Augustus, commented that it was safer to be Herod's pig than to be Herod's son.

When his death seemed to be imminent, he knew that none would mourn for him when he died.

To make sure that people would shed tears at his passing, he ordered several of Jerusalem's finest citizens to be arrested and imprisoned on bogus charges. He further ordered that, at the moment he died, all those people should be killed.

Shocking abuse of power. Egocentric madness. Thank God we don't live like that.

About 20 years after Herod's reign, the young male he tried to kill in Bethlehem began his own public service as a carpenter from Nazareth. He traveled the countryside to declare a message of mercy and hope.

Rather than sacrificing others for personal gain, this working class unknown from the hills eventually sealed his message through his own sacrifice: "Greater love has no man than this: that a man lay down his life for his friends" (John 15: 13 KJV).

Shocking use of power. Incredible goodness. Thank God we can learn to live like that.

There's power. And then there's real power.

chapel notes

National prayer breakfast — The Fort Benning National Prayer Breakfast will begin at 6:30 a.m. Feb. 20 at the Fort Benning Officers' Club.

The breakfast is an opportunity for all people to acknowledge the moral and spiritual values upon which our nation was founded, according to coordinators.

This year's guest speaker will be Chap. (Maj. Gen.) Donald W. Shea, chief of chaplains for the U.S. Army.

A donation of $4.50 is requested for the breakfast buffet. Tickets are available through unit command sergeants major.

For more information, call 545-1314.

Confirmation classes — Beginning Tuesday, confirmation classes will be conducted at 3:45 p.m. every Tuesday at the Religious Education Center, Building 2518.

Open to junior and high school students, these classes, also referred to as communicants classes, are considered preparation for joining the church or making a public profession of faith.

The classes will be general Protestant in faith. Upon completion, students will be referred to chaplains of their faith group for further instruction as requested.

Call 545-2359 for more information.

Praise and worship service — A nondenominational general Protestant service, including worship, praise, singing, prayer, teaching and preaching, will be conducted every Sunday at the Infantry Center Chapel from 6 to 8 p.m.

Everyone is invited, including single, married, active duty, retired, families, friends, relatives, National Guard, Reserves, enlisted, non-commissioned officers and officers.

Refreshments and fellowship will take place after the service in the chapel annex. Child care will be available.

First communion classes — First communion classes will begin Tuesday at 7 p.m. in the Religious Education Center, Building 2521.

The first session will be an overview of the program for parents and children.

Children in grades two through six are eligible to attend, provided they attended Confraternity of Christian Doctrine or Catholic school last year.

Musicians needed — The custodian of the Consolidated Chaplains' Fund is accepting applications for watch-care givers, pianists and choir directors.

For more information, call Staff Sgt. Phyllis Swinson at 545-1934.

Sunday School — The Fort Benning Sunday School is open every Sunday, and all personnel can attend. There are classes for 2-year-olds through adults. Sunday School is located in the Religious Education Center, Building 2517. Classes are from 9:30 to 10:30 a.m.

Fellowship drive — The Fort Benning Chapter of the Christian Military Fellowship is conducting a membership drive.

It is an association of committed Christian believers who are serving in the U.S. armed forces or who are associated with the military, and it is a nondenominational organization.

There are no membership dues. To join, fill out and send in a membership application. For more information, call 545-2939.

Mass change — The Mass formerly celebrated at 9 a.m. Sundays at the Main Post Catholic Chapel will be celebrated at 8:45 a.m.

Jewish service change — A Jewish service will be conducted at 7:30 p.m. Fridays at Regimental Chapel. Torah study remains at 9:45 a.m. Sundays.

church brief

Promise Keepers — The Columbus Promise Keepers meet the second Saturday of each month at 8 a.m. at the Po Folks Restaurant on Airport Thruway.

Promise Keepers, directed by Joe Miles, is a men's group dedicated to strengthening families through Christian principles.

Children benefit from musical exposure

Radford University

RADFORD, VA. — There are measurable musical benefits for children, but there are also benefits beyond measure, according to Radford University music professor and elementary music educator Marilyn Meador.

"Your child doesn't have to be a musical prodigy to have their life enriched by music," she said, adding that every child can benefit from musical exposure and training.

Musical activity at the preschool level has been shown to increase a child's spatial abilities, which are related to math and science skills, Meador said. Even at the college level, studies have shown that listening to Mozart temporarily raises a student's IQ, with possible long-term benefits for repeated exposure.

Even apart from measurable benefits, music itself has values that are unique, she said, including improved communication and the emotional release of self expression.

"Again and again, research has shown that those who study music are more successful in school," Meador said. She acknowledged that complex factors such as parental motivation and involvement may be at work, but music is proven to be a positive force.

"Music gives people of all ages a very personal release and a way of understanding the world," she said.

Except in unusual cases, children under the age of eight or nine don't have the fine motor skills necessary to master many instruments, but they should still be encouraged to develop musical skills, says Meador.

As ways to get your child involved in music, she suggests:

• Model musical behavior and enjoyment. The key would be for the parents to have enthusiasm. Mozart was a prodigy who was touring Europe as a child, but his father encouraged and promoted him. It was a combination of parental drive and innate capacity.

• Sing with your children. If parents sing to their children, the children will be able to sing.

• Dance with your children and have them take dance classes. If a child can express music with their body they can learn to musically express themselves using an instrument.

• Consider group lessons, particularly at younger ages. The group experience can provide motivation without performance pressure.

• Encourage children to make up their own songs or arrangements of songs and to experiment with improvisation. They may not be Maynard Ferguson, but they can still learn that music is not all just structure and rules.

• Get a tape recorder and have the child record his or her musical expressions. Computers and electronic keyboards are an exciting way to experiment with composing and manipulating sounds.

Developing musical skill takes motivation and discipline and it's hard for parents to know how much pressure is too much. If children need a little extra push, it might be helpful to give them a reward for practicing, says psychology professor and clinical child psychologist Jeffrey Chase. But he cautions that it's best to not pay for practicing if it's something your child naturally enjoys.

"If your child enjoys playing music and you pay them to play music but then stop paying them, they'll no longer view it as fun," he said.

If possible, it might be best to reward children for practicing music with more music — the purchase of a better quality instrument, the opportunity to attend a concert or the opportunity to publicly perform, if it's something they enjoy, he said.

"Even if your child drops out, that doesn't mean they're a failure," Meador said. "Music has power and the impact will stay with them."

ask the judge

By George R. Smawley
Staff Judge Advocate's Office

Q: My family is preparing for a permanent change of station to Fort Hood, Texas. Our last move was a mess, and I would like to know what the claims procedures will be like when we arrive in Texas and how to minimize our losses.

A: A government-sponsored move can be one of the most difficult and frustrating aspects of military service. It is never an easy process. There are, however, important steps that soldiers can take in order to make the move — and the claims process that follows — easier and more efficient.

Prior to the day the movers pick up your household goods, take the time to photograph and document all of your high-value items: china, electronic equipment, expensive furnishings, etc. The claims office recommends using a video camera to record, in detail, each room of the household prior to the move.

On the day that household goods are delivered, the mover is required to provide the service member with a pink form, DD Form 1840. The first rule is to document damaged and missing items on the DD Form 1840 while the movers are unpacking your household goods. The mover must sign the front of the DD Form 1840 once all your goods are delivered; and; by documenting damages at the time of delivery, the mover is forced to acknowledge the loss and immediately begin to try and locate any missing items.

Additional damages or lost items, discovered after the movers have left the home, should be noted on the reverse side of the pink form, DD Form 1840R.

The second — and most important — rule is the requirement for service members to submit the DD Form 1840 or 1840R to the claims office within 70 days after the property is delivered. Failure to provide the claims office with the DD Form 1840 or 1840R within the 70-day time frame may preclude recovery for all or much of a member's lost or damaged property.

The third rule concerns the right of the claims office to inspect damages to property. Claims personnel have 45 days from the date on which you report a loss in which to inspect and document, if necessary, their observations.

The inspection will be coordinated between the claims office and the service member, and will be at convenient time for both. Consequently, it is important for service members to hold on to damaged property for 45 days from the date of delivery or the date the loss is reported to the claims office on the DD Form 1840 or 1840R, whichever is later.

The fourth rule is the requirement that completed claims be filed within two years from the date of delivery. A claim is filed by submitting DD Form 1842 to the Claims Office detailing the specific amount of the loss.

Service members must make their claim within two years.

The fifth rule is to submit accurate estimates of the replacement or repair cost for missing or damaged property. Items with a replacement or repair cost of less than $50 do not require estimates. Claims examiners may also use their experience and expertise to determine a reasonable allowance for repair or replacement of property.

The sixth rule is to remember that the burden of proving ownership of property is on the service member. The strongest proof of ownership is a specific listing on the inventory (Zenith TV, Sony VCR, etc.).

Beyond that, claimants may need to show proof of purchase, such as receipts or photographs or home movies made of the property taken prior to the move. A service member's greatest protection is to make certain that the movers list all high-value items on the inventory prior to shippings.

Finally, the last rule is for a situation in which the claims office pays a service member for the replacement of severely damaged property. The government is essentially buying this property from the service member; therefore, the service has a right to claim it for salvage value or recover the cost from the carrier responsible for the damage who, in turn, may also claim it for salvage value.

For questions, call the Claims Office at 545-2285.

Some foods can save your life

The Fort Bliss, Texas, Monitor

It seems we are constantly looking for ways to live a healthier lifestyle. Here is a listing of the top 10 things to eat to save your life.

10. Olive oil — Not all fats and oils were created equal. Research suggests that monounsaturated fats, such as olive oil and canola oil, help to reduce blood cholesterol levels. Saturated fats, such as dairy and animal fats, may increase the risk of heart disease, the No. 1 cause of death among adults

9. Fig bars and other healthy snacks — Snacking, an all-American pastime, can be part of a healthy diet. Fig bars are low in fat and high in fiber. Other good snack choices are pretzels, gingersnaps, animal crackers and graham crackers. Of course, low-fat or fat-free does not mean calorie free, so be sure to exercise portion control.

8. Fish — Fish is not only low in calories, fat and sodium, but it is also high in protein and B vitamins. Salmon, sardines, trout and tuna have the added advantage of being high in omega-3 fatty acids, an essential nutrient that is thought to protect against heart disease.

7. Round steak — Beef can be part of a low-fat diet if you choose lean cuts, trim all visible fat before cooking and eat small portions (three ounces, cooked). Beef is an excellent source of complete protein, iron, zinc and vitamin B-12, nutrients that are sometimes hard to obtain in a vegetarian diet.

6. Oatmeal — As the saying goes: eat a little oat bran everyday. Your cholesterol will go down they say. For fiber and regularity, too, wheat bran will do the trick for you.

5. Skim milk — Non- and low-fat dairy products are still the best sources of calcium, which helps keep bones strong, healthy and prevents osteoporosis.

4. Grapefruit — Here's nutrition in a tasty, convenient package.

Ready-to-eat, it has a generous supply of vitamin C (which helps with iron absorption) and beta carotene (an antioxidant that may reduce the risk of cancer). Studies show that people who eat five or more servings of fruits and vegetables a day have half the cancer risk of those who eat only two servings a day.

3. Beans — A virtual powerhouse of nutrients, beans are high in fiber, protein, iron, folic acid, and complex carbohydrates, and they are low in fat, sodium and calories. The health benefits are equally impressive. Beans help prevent constipation, colon cancer and heart disease.

2. Breakfast — For peak performance and lots of energy, eat breakfast. When you skip eating in the morning, your body must draw upon stored glucose for its energy. These stores may be depleted before lunch, leaving you feeling tired and excessively hungry.

1. Broccoli — Broccoli is one of the healthiest foods you can eat. Like other dark-green, leafy vegetables, broccoli is loaded with vitamins and minerals, and its anti-oxidant properties may help fight cancer. It is low in sodium, high in fiber and has practically no calories.

Civilian linguists prepare for deployment

By Brian R. Voller
Bayonet staff writer

Civilian linguists from all over the United States came together for inprocessing at the Fort Benning Individual Deployment Site for deployment to Bosnia and parts of Europe to serve as translators for soldiers stationed there.

"Most of the linguists heard about the job through the internet," said 1st Lt. Michele Crumley, acting commander, Company B, 825th Personnel Replacement Company. "We have a total of 46 linguists processing through normal soldier processing. That includes all dental and medical processing."

The linguists will be going to Bosnia, Germany, and Hungary to serve as translators for the company commanders out there already, said Sgt. 1st Class George Hinkle, platoon sergeant of the 825th.

Crumley said this group of linguists was the first strictly civilian deployment group processed by the IDS.

"This is the first time that the IDS has processed only civilians," Crumley said. "We usually process at least two or three civilians, but this is the largest group of civilians we've had at one time."

The linguists are trained in one of three languages to act as translators while in Europe, said Hinkle.

"There were Croatian, Serbian and Hungarian translators contracted for deployment," Hinkle said. "They will be going there to act as translators for the company commanders who are stationed out there. They will be serving along with military translators who are also deploying."

The linguists vary in age, civilian occupation and geographical location, said Hinkle.

"They came from all over the United States and eventually came together in Washington D.C.," Hinkle said. "They were supposed to be here together, but they got separated because of the blizzard that hit there."

The linguists vary in age from 20 to almost 70-years-old.

"We have a father and a son, two brothers and a brother and sister," Hinkle said.

One of the two brothers who will be serving in Europe is Edward Sugar from Cleveland, Ohio. The 23-year-old said he always wanted to serve in the military, but he never got the opportunity.

"I didn't hesitate when a friend told me about the job back in Cleveland," Sugar said. "I left a voice-mail message, and they called me and told me to get on a plane for D.C. I've always liked the military and my brother served in the Navy, but I never got my chance to serve. I think this is a good chance to serve my country."

Sugar's older brother, Elvis, said he wasn't nervous about going to Bosnia, and he was happy he'd be going there with his brother.

"I'm not nervous about going out there," Elvis said. "Actually I feel pretty safe. I know who's behind me, and I know they've got me backed up."

Another person who will be participating in the deployment to Bosnia will be Peter Georgevich from Virginia.

Georgevich said he volunteered for the job after several years of working as a freelance translator in Virginia.

"I'm excited about going back to Europe, " Georgevich said. "I think the most important thing about this trip is to go there as an American, and that we don't go there and offer our political views."

One of the oldest members of the translators going to Bosnia is 69-year-old Steve Namesnik. Namesnik is a former Marine who was part of the invasion of Okinawa during World War II.

"Because I'm an ex-GI, I felt a desire to support the cause," Namesnik said. "Also, I have relatives in Koprionica, which is in the northern part of Croatia. "

Namesnik said that he is concerned with the dangers that could await him in Bosnia, but he said he believes he has an edge.

"My wife is very supportive, but we're both concerned about the dangers that are out there," Namesnik said. "I like to look at it like this though: I didn't have a bullet with my name on it in the first war; hopefully I won't have one with my name on it this time."

The civilians have been contracted for a one-year tour overseas.

They will initially fly into Germany and then will move on to their support assignments in Bosnia and Hungary.

SOA cadets pass ranger challenge

By Judith Ginder
School of the Americas

For nine grueling weeks, they train in stressful conditions with minimal sleep and food, in terrain that varies from mountains to swamps.

Soldiers going through Ranger School? Almost.

The School of the Americas Commando Course is based on the U.S. Army Ranger School and teaches U.S. doctrine but is presented entirely in Spanish to soldiers from various Latin American countries.

Taking place at ranger training sites on post; at Dahlonega, Ga., and at Eglin Air Force Base, Fla., instruction can be tough on the students, said Sgt. 1st Class Luis Ledesma, SOA special operations instructor.

"This course is very physically demanding," he said. "It's also tough because of the weather conditions this time of year and the lack of sleep for the students."

It's so tough, in fact, that the attrition rate of the Commando Course usually hovers right around 10 percent, said Sgt. 1st Class David Schroer, SOA special operations instructor.

The commando hopefuls spend the first three weeks at Fort Benning before heading up to the mountains of north Georgia. While on post, the students go on a road march, take a swimming test and prepare for the upcoming adventure by practicing knot tying, improving their land navigation skills and going to the confidence course.

The cold weather in Dahlonega doesn't exactly make for a warm welcome, especially when faced with long, exhausting days and nights filled with training. The mountain phase of the Commando Course takes those skills taught at Fort Benning and puts them to practical use.

Students spend the first few days in a basin at Camp Frank D. Merrill, using towers and rock formations that are around 90 feet high. They climb, rappel, buddy-rappel, and build rope bridges during this time.

Then it's on to Mount Yonah, which is about 45 minutes from Camp Merrill. They hike up the mountain in the cold, early-morning , stopping just short of the monstrous sheets of rock that rise to the peak.

Here is where the real work begins — where what they've learned matters.

One by one, they climb the face of the mountain. Teamwork is the key to reaching the top, and the students put their lives in the hands of those securing the ropes.

There are two important aspects to the mountain phase, said Capt. Jeffrey Voigt, special operations officer. Mountaineering gives the soldiers confidence, while patrolling the Appalachian Mountains for eight days tests their endurance and stamina.

The next stop is Florida. Time for a little rest and relaxation on the sandy beaches of the Sunshine State? Hardly. It's time for the troops to get knee deep into the swamp phase of training.

In the most recent class, they didn't actually get "knee deep" into the training. The lightning and heavy rains around the ranger camp at Eglin Air Force Base kept the students from experiencing the swamp and river to their full extent. To protect the students from cold injuries, the training that normally takes place in the river was actually taught on land, with the exception of small boat operations, said Staff Sgt. Jose Quinones, SOA special operations instructor.

"The day that we did small boat operations, the water was a little high and the weather still cold, so we had to do a dry landing that day," Quinones said. Basically that means that instead of getting off the boat in the swamps, they exited onto higher, dry land.

The commandos-to-be also got some hands-on experience with reptiles. Camp Rudder's 6th Ranger Training Battalion has three or four Florida-certified reptile handlers who give classes for the Ranger School and the Commando Course, said Sgt. 1st Class Moises Olivieri, SOA special operations instructor.

The instructors had about 15 types of snakes with them so that the students could see first hand the differences between these poisonous and nonpoisonous snakes, Olivieri said.

The instructors also had four caged alligators and discussed with the commando students the differences between alligators and crocodiles.Nine weeks after arriving at SOA and many sore muscles, blisters and lost pounds, the troops see their determination pay off — they will get to wear the tab of commandos.

Green to Gold seeks soldiers

By Sheila Denham
Columbus College

The Army Green to Gold program seeks talented, young enlisted soldiers who are considering leaving active service to attend college.

Through the program, soldiers with officer potential enroll in Army Reserve Officers' Training Corps during college and upon graduation, are commissioned as second lieutenants. If a soldier meets the qualification, he or she can voluntarily request early discharge from active duty, then enroll in college and earn both an undergraduate degree and commission.

Army ROTC provides funding for college costs with scholarships. The application window for Green to Gold scholarships begins around Dec. 1 and ends around March 15. Those accepted can begin school in the fall quarter or semester at a college that hosts the ROTC program.

Soldiers may still use their Montgomery GI Bill and Army College Fund benefits with their scholarship. Also, soldiers will receive a $150 per month stipend payment, which is paid to all ROTC cadets.

Those who do not wish to apply for scholarships, or can't because of their age, may opt for the nonscholarship Green to Gold program and enroll in college at any time (except summer sessions). The eligibility requirements are basically the same except for age and grade requirements.

Soldiers, who can also be members of a National Guard or Reserve unit by participating in the Simultaneous Membership Program, receive all veterans benefits, Montgomery GI Bill and College Fund benefits and the $150 per month stipend pay.

If a soldier is too close to his or her expiration term of service date to participate, remember that Army ROTC has many opportunities for veterans.

For more information, contact your unit retention noncom-missioned officer or call the Columbus College ROTC department at 568-2058.

75th Rgr Rgt. conducts honorary change of command

By Anna Oleska
USAIC Public Affairs Office

The 75th Ranger Regiment honorary change of command took place in Marshall Auditorium Jan. 19.

The ceremony marked the transfer of responsibility as honorary colonel of the 75th Ranger Regiment from retired Col. Francis W. "Bull" Dawson to retired Col. Ralph Puckett.

The chosen honorary colonel of the regiment is a retired officer in the rank of colonel or above with former service in a unit of the regiment. His primary mission is to perpetuate the history and traditions of the regiment in order to enhance its combat effectiveness through loyalty, commitment and esprit.

Dawson had served as honorary colonel of the regiment since Sept. 1, 1992, and was instrumental in establishing the traditions of the Ranger Hall of Fame and in recognizing honorary and distinguished members of the regiment.

During his military career, he served in World War II, Korea and Vietnam; in ranger and Special Forces units; participated in the D-Day landing on Omaha Beach with the 5th Ranger Battalion; and was awarded the Distinguished Service Medal.

"Today is both a sad and a happy day for me," said Dawson. "Sad because I'm unemployed now, (and) I'm happy because I'm being replaced by my good friend Ralph Puckett. He is my hero and I'm happy for the rangers."

The incoming honorary colonel, Puckett, served in the military for 23 years.

During this time, he commanded five companies, including a ranger company in combat in Korea, three battalions in Vietnam, one regiment and one brigade.

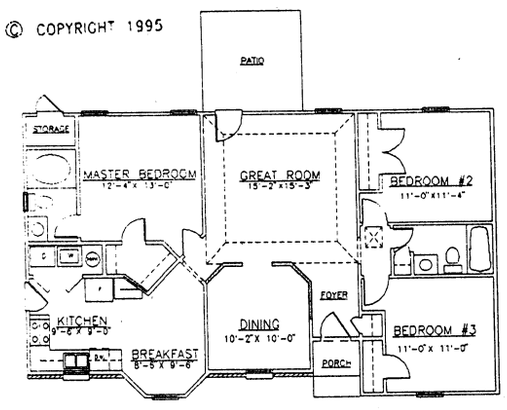
He also organized and established the Columbian Ranger School.

Some of his awards are the Distinguished Service Cross with one oak leaf cluster, the Silver Star with one oak leaf cluster, Legion of Merit with two oak leaf clusters, Bronze Star with one oak leaf cluster, Army Commendation Medal, ten awards of the Air Medal, a Purple Heart, and an induction into the Ranger Hall of Fame.

"This is a proud day for me," Puckett said. "Becoming honorary colonel of the 75th Ranger Regiment is a great honor — one that I never expected. I'm filled with pride every time I'm in your presence. You're the finest fighting force that America can produce!



"I'm inspired by all of you in this great regiment," he continued. "You can count on me to give 100 percent and then some. As I said earlier, I've never been able to accomplish anything by myself. I've always needed help and advice. With your help, I will succeed. I'm proud of you ... I'm proud of being honorary colonel of the 75th Ranger Regiment."

Quality, quantity prevail in USAMU's load room

By Deena Kussman
U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit

Keeping abreast of the constant demand for world-class match ammunition for the shooters of the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit is far from easy. Yet for the soldiers of the USAMU ammunitions loading room, it's a challenge they eagerly face.

Only three soldiers, Staff Sgt. Robert Finch, Staff Sgt. Charles Wittmaack and Sgt. Stanton Lewis, are responsible for the 100 rounds produced in the loading room each day. Some days when preparing for upcoming matches, the men load as many as 2,000 rounds — each measured and adjusted to within one grain of gunpowder.

The men produce ammunition for rifles and pistols, including .30-caliber rifles, M-14s, M-16s, .38 supers and .45 automatics. The components they use to prepare the rounds are new. On rare occasions, once-fired brass is reused.

While production reigns as their primary mission, the soldiers must diligently check that the quality of the rounds they produce is high. Rounds that fail to meet the unit's standards are rejected.

Quality control for the loading room is much more in-depth than at comparable operations or the unit's own former operations, Finch said. In the past, they have only manipulated the amounts of gunpowder and the combination of components used; now the USAMU's loaders are checking to see that the quality of the components fit the standards. Cartridge castings are checked for hardness, dimensions and thickness, while bullets are tested for consistency.

The role the loaders and their products play in the unit is paramount to the success of the world-class shooters in competition, Finch said.

"We have to produce ammunition that outshoots the gun, which in turn has to outshoot the shooter," Finch said. "That way, the shooter has all the advantages to improve himself that we can offer."

Maintaining the number and the high-quality rounds is a tangible pressure the soldiers feel. A single gunpowder grain in a mismeasured round throws the trajectory of the round off enough to cause a top shooter to lose a competition. And in the case of the 1996 Olympic Games, that could mean the loss of a gold medal.

"All it takes is one round with the wrong powder charge," Finch said. "That's how important it is for us to be here doing our job."

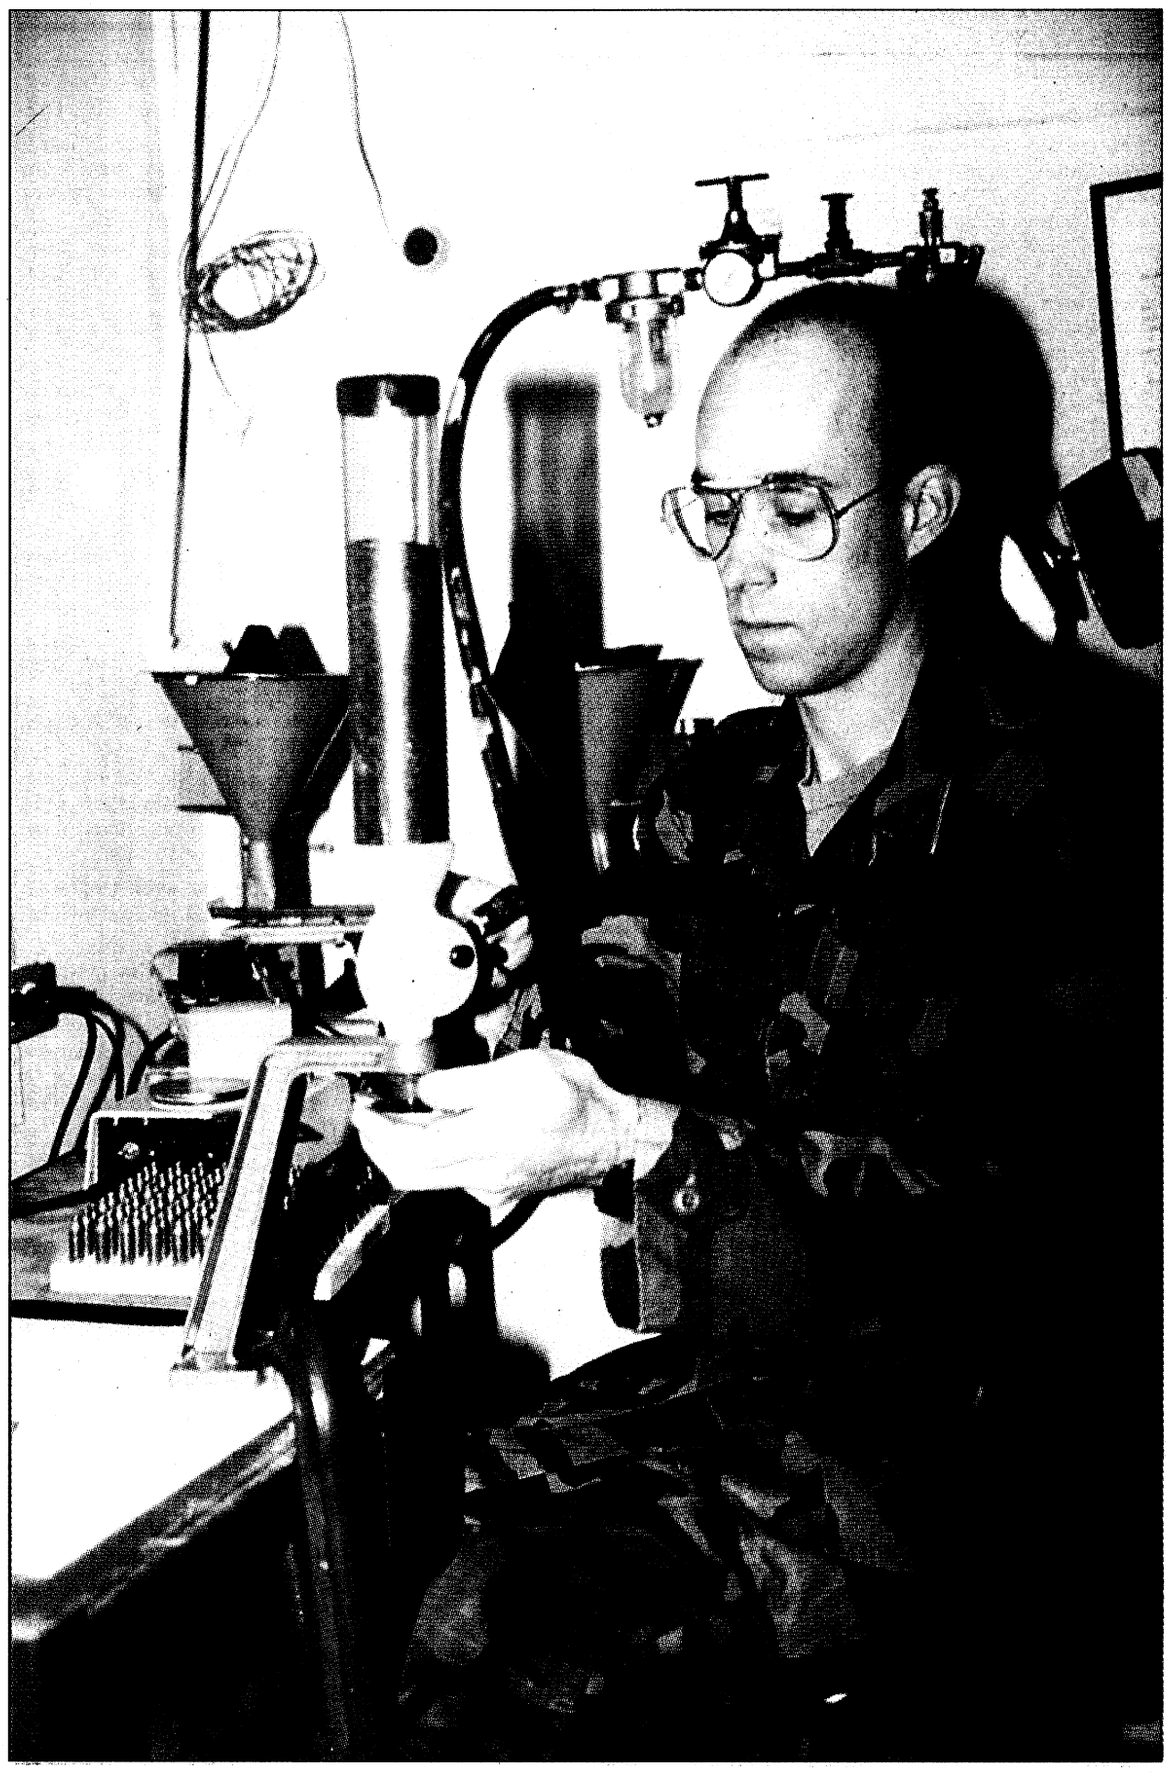
Despite the constant demand for quality ammunition, the loading room rarely falls behind.

"We constantly try to forecast what will be needed in the next month," Wittmaack said. Constant communication between the loading room and the shooting teams, as well as periodic checks of the ammunitions bunker supply, help keep the loading room on top of the demand.

"If need be, we can do a 24-hour schedule if the demand is too great to finish during the day," Finch said.

In their little spare time, the soldiers of the loading room attack their secondary mission: the search for even higher quality. While they regularly test their rounds for accuracy in shooting, the loaders strive to create new combinations of gunpowder, casings and bullets that will outperform the unit's current standard.

"We're always looking for better ways to streamline our production process to improve production flow and improve product quality," Wittmaack said. He, Finch, and Lewis constantly test the various components and equipment they purchase and use for reliability and quality. Each bullet they use is evaluated for internal purposes, so as to supplement commercially published results that may be biased and to eliminate reliance on such information.



"We have the luxury of being a completely unbiased organization, concerned only with performance," Finch said.

While they do not publish their testing results, the loaders will provide information when requested to the companies that produce the equipment so that improvements can be made — which results in better equipment for the loaders to utilize in the future.

Manufacturers are not the only ones interested in the USAMU's loaders' testing.

Frequently, the loaders are inundated with calls for information and advice. Many other specialized units that are concerned with accurate ammunition have called wanting load information, Wittmaack said. Despite the continued interest from the competitive shooting sphere, the loaders will only give minor technical advice, not specifics about the manufacturing process. All their testing is done solely for the purpose of the USAMU.

"Our mission remains the same," Finch said. "We're trying to find that combination that makes or breaks the game."

Super Bowl more than just a game

By Brian R. Voller
Bayonet staff writer

It's that time of year again. This weekend millions of people will gather around their television sets to watch Super Bowl XXX live as it happens.

Brian R. Voller thinks people should not act foolish if their team doesn't win.

commentary

The Dallas Cowboys will be taking on the Pittsburgh Steelers in a game that could prove to be more interesting than a lot of the other games we've seen in the past few years.

This playoff season has been like the golden days of the National Football League when the great teams came together for a hard-hitting wallop of a game.

Let's face the facts though; 50 percent of the reason we all tune into the game is for the half-time show and the really neat commercials that get aired. In the past, we've seen Michael Jackson blasting out of the scoreboards while all these people dance around him like fools, and for some reason we watch this.

The other reason we watch is the multimillion dollar commercials. I must admit that this is the only time of year that I look forward to the television commercials. Car companies premier their new designs, shoe companies will put Michael Jordan and Grant Hill in some real winners that will go down in history and the soft drink companies will make Shaquille O'Neil even richer.

Another reason we all tune into the Super Bowl is that it is as close to a national holiday as anything else in sports. And, with national holidays comes a license to gorge yourself on as much food as humanly possible. But not just any food. We consume large quantities of everything God put on this planet to give us a heart attack. Hot dogs, chips, dips, cheese and crackers, soft drinks and burgers.

I would like to ask that people are smart about what they do. For instance, drinking and driving should be a gigantic no no.

Also, let's not go crazy no matter what the outcome of the game is. Riots in the streets because the Cowboys whooped up on the Steelers, or vice versa, could be construed as a sign of immaturity. Not to mention, it makes you look really stupid.

Finally, let's remember that one team will go home a winner and one team will go home a loser. Even though one team will lose, they need not worry because they still haven't lost as many Super Bowls as the Buffalo Bills.

OCS to present Patterson award

USAIC Public Affairs Office

The 44th annual Robert P. Patterson Memorial Award ceremony will be Feb. 8 at 9 a.m. in Marshall Auditorium, Infantry Hall, hosted by the Officer Candidate School, 3rd Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment.

Second Lt. Jeffrey A. Saeli, who graduated from Officer Candidate School in September 1994, is this year's Patterson Award recipient.

The award goes to the officer selected as the outstanding infantry graduate of OCS during the previous year. It is based on qualities of leadership, academic effectiveness, aptitude and character and is weighted on past accomplishments and class standing in OCS and the Infantry Officer Basic Course.

Patterson, for whom the award is named, served as a captain in the U.S. Army during World War I. His battlefield exploits earned him the Distinguished Service Cross, Silver Star and Purple Heart.

He later served as judge of the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals and as secretary of war during the President Harry Truman administration.

When he died in 1952, a trust fund for the award was established with monetary contributions from several friends.

Saeli enlisted in the U.S. Marine Corps in 1982 initially serving at 29 Palms, Calif., and the Marine Corps Logistics Base, Albany, Ga., as a missile system electronics repairmen. He later served with the 2nd Marine Division, Camp Lejeune, N.C.

Saeli separated from the Marine Corps in 1986 and attended the State University of New York at Fredonia. He later attended Hawaii Pacific University. He maintained dean's list honors during all semesters attended at both schools.

Enlisting in the U.S. Army in 1988, he completed advanced infantry training and the airborne courses at Fort Benning prior to assignment to the 82nd Airborne Division at Fort Bragg, N.C.

He deployed with the 1st Battalion, 505th Parachute Infantry Regiment, during Operation Desert Shield and Desert Storm. He subsequently served with the 25th Infantry Division in Hawaii.

Saeli is assigned as a rifle platoon leader with Company B, 2nd Battalion, 22nd Infantry Regiment, 10th Mountain Division, Fort Drum, N.Y.

BLACK HISTORY MONTH

Post to honor African Americans

By Lisa M. Hibbert
Bayonet staff writer

Fort Benning will kick off its annual Black History Month celebration with a program today at 11 a.m. in Marshall Auditorium, Infantry Hall, Building 4.

The theme for this year is "African-American Women: Yesterday, Today and Tomorrow," and the speaker will be Sgt. Maj. Brenda J. Bryant, Material Maintenance, 24th Infantry Division, Fort Stewart, Ga.

Also on the program will be the Stowers Elementary School chorus, and a free food sampling will follow the program.

Other post activities commemorating the month include the following:

• The Directorate of Logistics will sponsor a Black History Month program Feb. 14 from 11:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. at the Main NCO Club.

Ann Caggin, human resource manager for the Columbus Consolidated Government, will be the featured speaker.

Admission is $6 and a menu of fried chicken or roast beef, steamed rice, collard greens, cornbread or rolls, and tea or coffee will be served.

For more information, call Charyse Banks at 545-6128.

• The Directorate of Information Management will sponsor its Black History Month program Feb. 16 from 11:30 a.m. through 1 p.m. in the Fort Benning Officers' Club, Supper Club.

Gwendolyn Ruff, affirmative action officer, Synovus Inc., will be the featured speaker. Tickets are $6.60 and lunch will be served.

For more information, call Susan Goshea at 545-3211 or Marsye Nelson at 545-2662.

Some off-post activities scheduled are:

• Metro-Columbus Urban League and Springer Youth Theater will take the show on the road Feb. 10. The Springer Theater will take a show and production to Faith Tabernacle Church to give youth a chance to work with professionals to produce and act in a performance.

For more information, call Paul Pierce at 324-5714.

• The Urban League will sponsor the Ebony Fashion Show at the Three Arts Theater Feb. 22 at 8 p.m. Tickets are $20 for adults and $12 for students.

For more information, call Ellis Dandy at 545-3465 or Teena Delgado at 569-6471.

DPS recognizes units for decreased accidents

By Anna Oleska
USAIC Public Affairs Office

The Directorate of Public Safety has recognized six major military units for improving their safety record and reducing their annual accident rate by at least 34 percent.

Units that received awards are:

• The Infantry Training Brigade, which had a 34 percent decrease, from 32 accidents in 1994 to 21 accidents in 1995.

• The 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division (Mechanized), which had a 38 percent decrease, from 39 accidents in 1994 to 24 accidents in 1995.

• The Ranger Training Brigade, which had a 41 percent decrease, from 31 accidents in 1994 to 18 accidents in 1995.

• The 29th Infantry Regiment, which had a 46 percent decrease, from 13 accidents in 1994 to seven accidents in 1995.

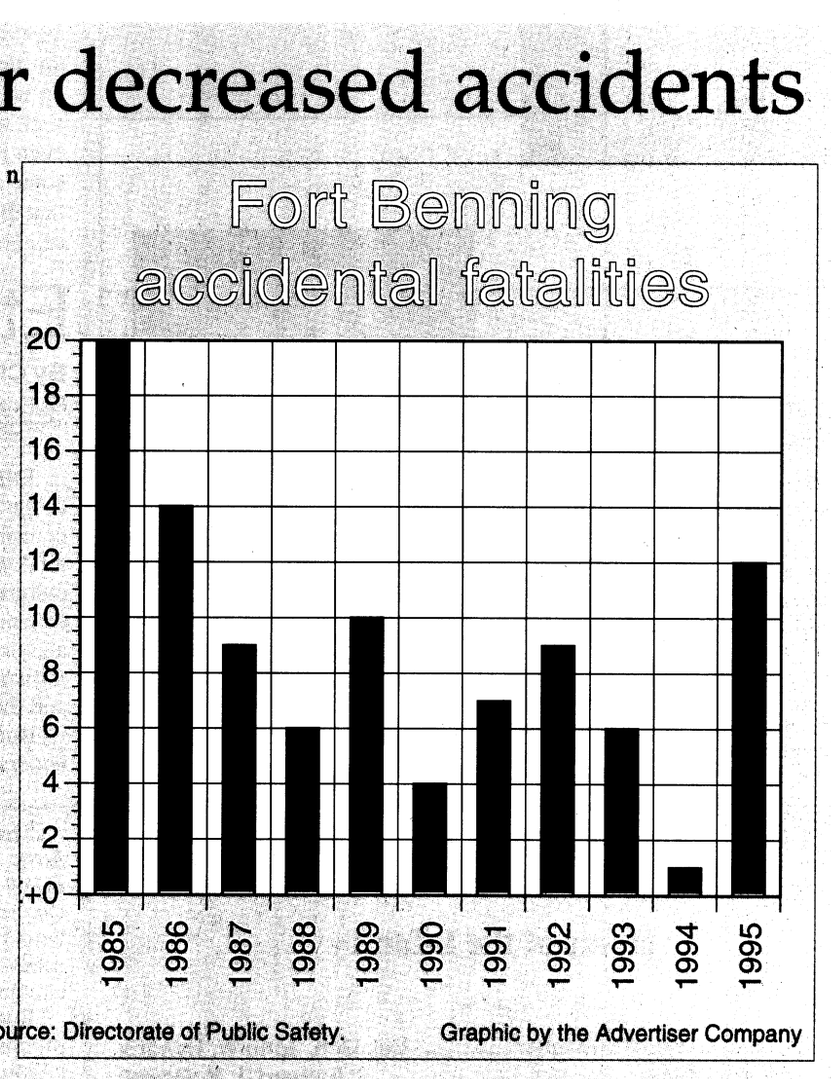
• The School of the Americas, which maintained last year's zero-accident record.

• The U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit, which maintained its zero-accident record from last year.

Regis Beighley, safety manager, said the Infantry Training Brigade made very good progress considering it has new soldiers coming in all the time who know nothing about the Army.

"The 1st Battalion (Airborne), 507th Infantry, 11th Infantry Regiment, did in really well, too, especially since they're the only battalion in the Army that trains airborne soldiers," he said. The number of parachute landing fall injuries decreased to 44 in 1995 from 53 in 1994.

According to Beighley, parachute landing fall injuries and heat injuries accounted for the greatest number of accidents on post in 1995. Privately owned vehicles also accounted for a large number of accidents, he said. However, the number of ground accidents decreased dramatically over the past 10 years. There were 150 in 1995, down from 201 in 1994.



The kinds of accidents that occurred at Fort Benning in 1995 were as follows:

• Parachute landing falls, 44
• Heat injuries, 19
• Privately owned vehicle accidents, 12
• Falls, 18
• Army motor vehicle accidents, 14
• Sports, 9
• Explosives, 1
• Weapons, 2
• Physical training, 5

"Overall, we're trying to reduce the amount of risk yet keep as effective as in the past," he said.

James F. Ozley, combat safety support team leader at the Safety Office, said that the decrease in accident rates is mainly due to personnel being involved in risk management training — reducing hazards and using countermeasures — to improve safety.

Safety is in the hands of the noncommissioned officers, he said.

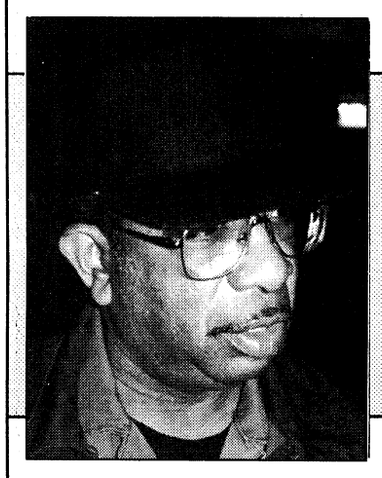
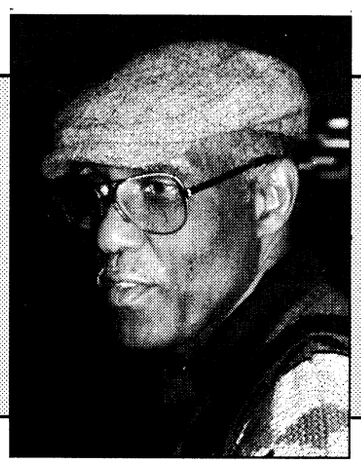
VARIOUS VOICES



Do you think we, as a society, should conduct ethnic observances?

2nd Lt. Charles Bryant, 4th Battalion, 41st Field Artillery Regiment, 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division (Mechanized) — "Everyone should have a chance to celebrate their own heritage as long as it is for the good of America."

Spc. Glennis Carter, Company A, 324th Forward Support Battalion, 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division (Mechanized) — "I think we should observe them because everybody gets a chance to learn about their own history and learn from each other."



Matt Jelks, retired master sergeant — "We need to have them so that we can be educated because everyone, all races, should be educated."

Lana Breland, Carlson Wagonlit Travel — "Society needs to be re-educated, but I think that these events should be promoted multi-culturally so that they can be for people of all races ."

Winnie Wimberlon, family member — "We should observe them because they are a part of our history and children need to learn from it."

Tom Murray, retired sergeant first class — "I think it's important so that we can make sure we all get represented."

Ethnic Programs

Why don't more people attend these observances?

By Lisa M. Hibbert
Bayonet staff writer

I grew up in an ethnically diverse neighborhood. My neighbors represented practically every nationality, race and religion.

commentary

My parents always made a point of exposing my sister and me to a wide variety of cultural activities, stressing the importance of knowing the world in which we live.

When I attended the post Martin Luther King Jr. commemorative service, I was glad to see a mixture of races represented there. However, with black people only comprising 12 percent of the Army's population and 13 percent of the overall U.S. population, the audience should not have been mostly black.

This is not the first time that I had noticed this occurrence at post observances.

At the Women's Equality Month celebration, the audience was predominantly female. At the Hispanic-American Month programs, mostly Hispanic people came, and I am pretty sure that the Black History Month observances will be the same, too.

I attend a lot of the post ethnic observances, but it seems as if the only people who attend are the ones in the particular ethnic group. Those are the last people who need to attend. It's good they do and are supportive of the programs, but I think it's more important that people outside of that group come and take advantage of a real learning experience.

The whole purpose of the Equal Opportunity Office putting together programs that recognize the various ethnic observances is so we all can learn a little bit more about each other.

People always say, I'm not prejudiced. "I don't have a racist bone in my body." But when you ask them if they're going to attend any of the programs marking the ethnic observances, you get a strong "NO."

Now, I'm not saying that if you don't attend these programs that makes you a racist. I just want to know why don't you attend these programs? Why not walk the walk after talking the talk? Why not try to broaden your horizons by learning something about your neighbors?

Spc. Lisa M. Hibbert believes that ethnic observances are for everybody.

Maybe people think they have already learned everything they need to know by watching television. I know I haven't. Honestly, you may see a few black people on a few television shows, but how many Hispanic people do you see? How many Native American or Asian people do you see? What about commercials?

Let's get beyond that. The majority of the characters on television are yuppies — young, urban professional types. While I have friends who fit into that prototype, I can't identify with the characters I see.

With the situations they wind up in — be they comical, near death or extremely sexual — they make interesting and entertaining shows, but it's not anything that happens in everyday life. How real can it be if the characters never use the bathroom or wake up looking terrible with morning breath?

Yes, you might see some ethnic diversity on any number of the talk shows that invade our televisions, but nobody I know acts like that — and if they do, I hope I never see them on any of those shows. My point is, the people we see on television do not and were never meant to represent a whole race.

My parents taught me a lot, but I know that I'll never know all there is about every culture in the world. Learning is an everyday thing — not a kindergarten through 12th-grade thing. My parents taught me enough so that I don't hate anyone because of their nationality, race, religion or gender. I don't make those types of stereotypes. I find other, more valid reasons not to like people.

Don't get me wrong, I don't think people have to know everything there is to know about the next person and his or her likes and dislikes. I do believe that if we take the time to try to understand where the other is coming from, we might realize that our positions are much more similar than we believe.

If we all extend ourselves just a bit by attending these programs, the benefits could be endless.

Black History Month activities are not just for African Americans

By Jennifer M. Rice

Every year, during February, I start seeing ads in the television, newspaper and bulletin boards reminding me that this is Black History Month.

commentary

In the past, I didn't pay any attention to any of these ads because I thought this celebration didn't have anything to do with me.

Why should I be interested in observing Black History Month if I'm not an African American? I even thought celebrating Black History Month promoted more racism.

But this year, I have a very different outlook about Black History Month. First, I was invited to a gospel service. I thought it was going to be boring and I did not want to go. But, I was in for a big surprise. The service was much like my church service but more emotional and soul-stirring.

Everyone seemed to experience deep emotions throughout the service. There was no way for me to fall asleep with such lively and jubilant music. I even joined the congregation in some of the hymns! I also learned that this powerful form of music celebrates the spirit of African Americans, the spirit that although enslaved and oppressed for many centuries, they did not succumb.

Jennifer Rice believes people can learn something by attending a Black History Month

Then I watched "Roots" and "Malcolm X" and for the first time in my life, I opened my eyes and ears to learn something about African-American history and culture.

Now I think that because of our ignorance and lack of interest in learning about African-American heritage, courage and determination, race relations are not much better today.

In the future, I hope there will be no need for black history months; but, for now, having one seems to be an excellent opportunity for every American to learn more about African-American culture.

Editor's note: Rice is a 14-year-old ninth-grade student at Pacelli Catholic High School. She is the daughter of Maj. William Lin, who is a student at the School of the Americas and his wife, Marisol

PROCLAMATION

In recognition of the numerous contributions of black Americans to every aspect of our nation, February is proclaimed "Black History Month."

The 1996 theme for Black History Month is "African-American Women: Yesterday, Today and Tomorrow." African-American women have made, and continue to make, positive, significant contributions to America.

Black History Month is a means to help increase awareness, promote harmony and improve understanding among all Americans.

I encourage all personnel on Fort Benning and the surrounding community to participate and enjoy activities during this observance.

— Maj. Gen. John W. Hendrix
Commanding general

Ethnic observances are intended for everyone

By Clinton Miles
Reflections, Patrick Airforce Base, Fla.

Ethnic observations are designed to recognize the contributions and achievements of all Americans to the American culture. They're also designed to enhance cross-culture awareness and promote harmony among all military members, their families and the civilian work force.

But, before we can begin to understand others, we must understand ourselves. We must look at our socialization process and understand why we think and behave the way we do. We must be able to understand that from our socialization we have developed certain attitudes, beliefs, stereotypes, prejudices and behaviors that we bring with us every day in our interactions with others.

Being able to discuss your thoughts and feelings helps you understand more about yourself and learn more about others.

Unit cohesion, organizational effectiveness, and combat readiness are phrases heard daily throughout our military. Awareness, recognizing and acknowledging are words that will strengthen those phrases in our organizations. How? By training our service members to be more aware of other cultures and races, by recognizing the achievements and contributions others have made and by acknowleding and understanding that there are similarities as well as differences within our units that we all can appreciate.

But if we never discuss such issues in a structured environment, how do we learn to appreciate each other more?

The bottom line is that we must do a better job to meet the objectives of ethnic observance.

Always remember that this ethnic observance is more than just a luncheon!

SAFETY: office reviews 1995

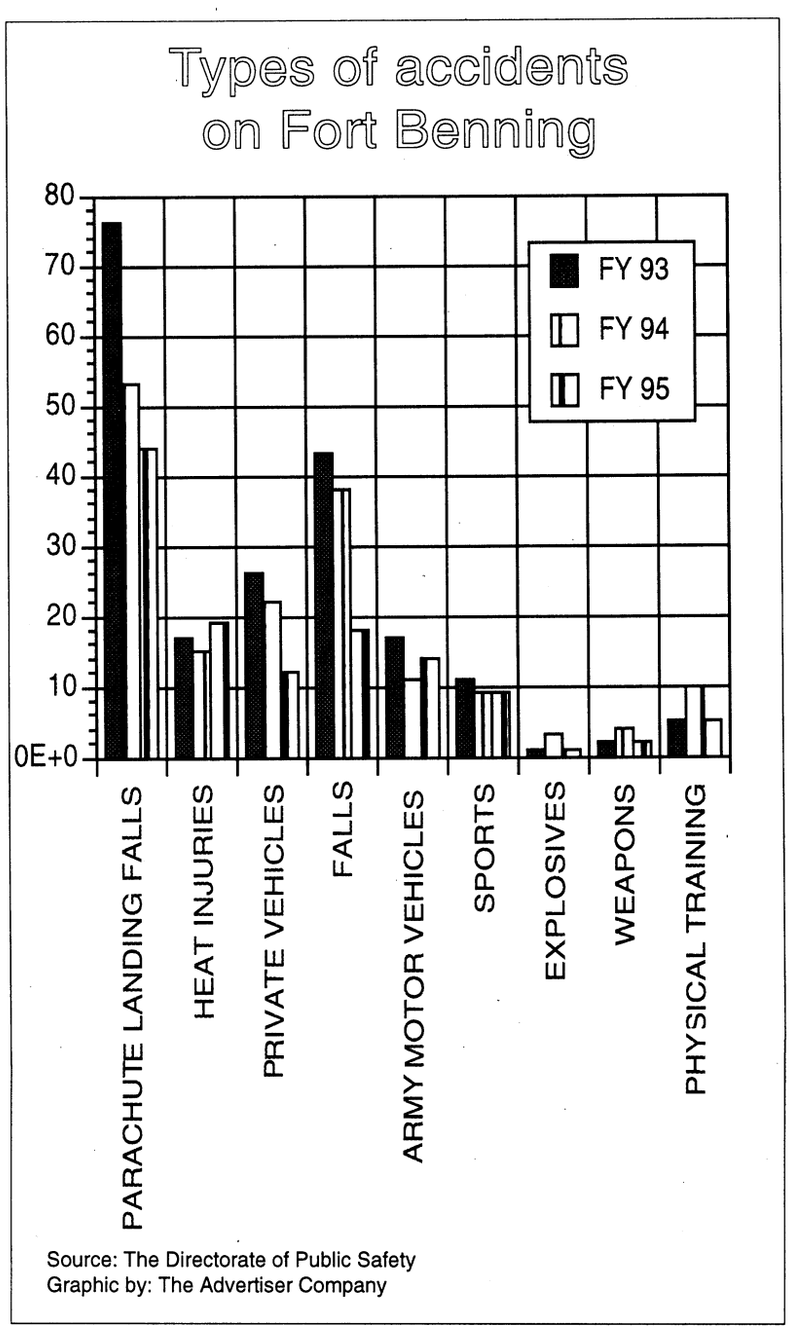
he said. "If there's a problem, we'll fix it. We've developed this Force Protection Program as part of Total Army Quality. Fort Benning implements and executes the program through several noncommissioned officers' risk management objectives. We're trying to be proactive rather than reactive."

Capt. Duane B. Vogtman, company commander of 3rd Bde., 24th Inf. Div., said the unit's safety record of two years without any incident is the result of weekly safety briefings.

"My first sergeant, Nathanial Porter, and the other noncommissioned officers emphasized safety during weekly briefings," he said. "It's a team effort. They're big on safety for the long term."

Vogtman said they'll continue to reinforce the policy that they're using because it seems to work. Company commanders, the first sergeant and the section noncommissioned officer in charge make good use of risk assessment, he said. The NCOIC oversees training and has rapport with the soldiers. He makes sure everything is done according to standards," he said.



Master Sgt. Carlos A. Vasquez, operations sergeant and safety noncommissioned officer in charge for the School of the Americas said their safety record is good because they conduct training in accordance with U.S. Army Infantry Center Regulation 385-6, Risk Management.

"It states you must list all hazards involved in the training you're doing, and you must list ways to implement controls to prevent or minimize the risk" he said. "We follow that when we do training.

"When instructors arrive at School of the Americas, they get a class on risk management and safety" he continued. "All instructors enforce safety as number one priority to make sure training is done the right way. Basically it's good common sense."

Accidental fatalities on and off post increased in 1995. There were 12 in 1995 after a steady decline since 1992 when there were nine fatalities. In 1993, there were six, and in 1994, one fatality.

The 12 fatalities this year included the deaths of four ranger students, which occurred during training at Eglin Air Force Base, Fla.; one accident on Fort Polk; and the remaining on post.

Solicitors need permits, invitation on post

By Shannon Day
Special to The Bayonet©

If someone unexpectedly knocks on your quarters' door and you open it to find a smarmy door-to-door salesperson peddling anything from insurance to magazine subscriptions, beware.

According to Master Sgt. Eddie C. Cosby, noncommissioned officer in charge of the Law Enforcement Division, Public Safety Directorate, that smooth-talking peddler is violating Army Regulation 210-7, which governs commercial solicitation, and may be more worried about emptying your wallet than selling you a quality product — if the product really even exists.

Solicitors must attain permits and are forbidden from going door to door selling wares without a prior appointment or invitation, Cosby said.

Not only that, but they are also forbidden to approach military personnel on duty, solicit in unit areas (such as day rooms) or barracks, said Kaye Kyle of the Commercial Solicitations Office, Directorate of Community Activities.

She said that salespeople are only allowed to initially contact potential customers through advertising, direct mail or telephone. After that, they must make an appointment to contact a consumer in person.

Kyle pointed out that this does not pertain to fund-raising organizations such as Boy Scouts, Girl Scouts or Parent-Teacher Organization projects. That's because these are nonprofit organizations.

"If it's a kid selling something, it's usually legitimate," Kyle said. "Most charities are combined into the Combined Federal Campaign we have at Fort Benning once a year."

Cosby said that as the weather gets warmer, more and more salespeople come out of hibernation, and the number of scam artists increases.

"This comes up here a lot," Cosby said. "We find that many of (the salespeople) come here to take advantage of new soldiers."

One way to ensure a solicitor is legitimate is to ask for his or her permit, Fort Benning Form 5, which all salespersons are required to have, according to Kyle.

"The front of it looks just like an identification card with a photo and a permit number with expiration date," she said. The back of the permit has the name of the business they are affiliated with on it.

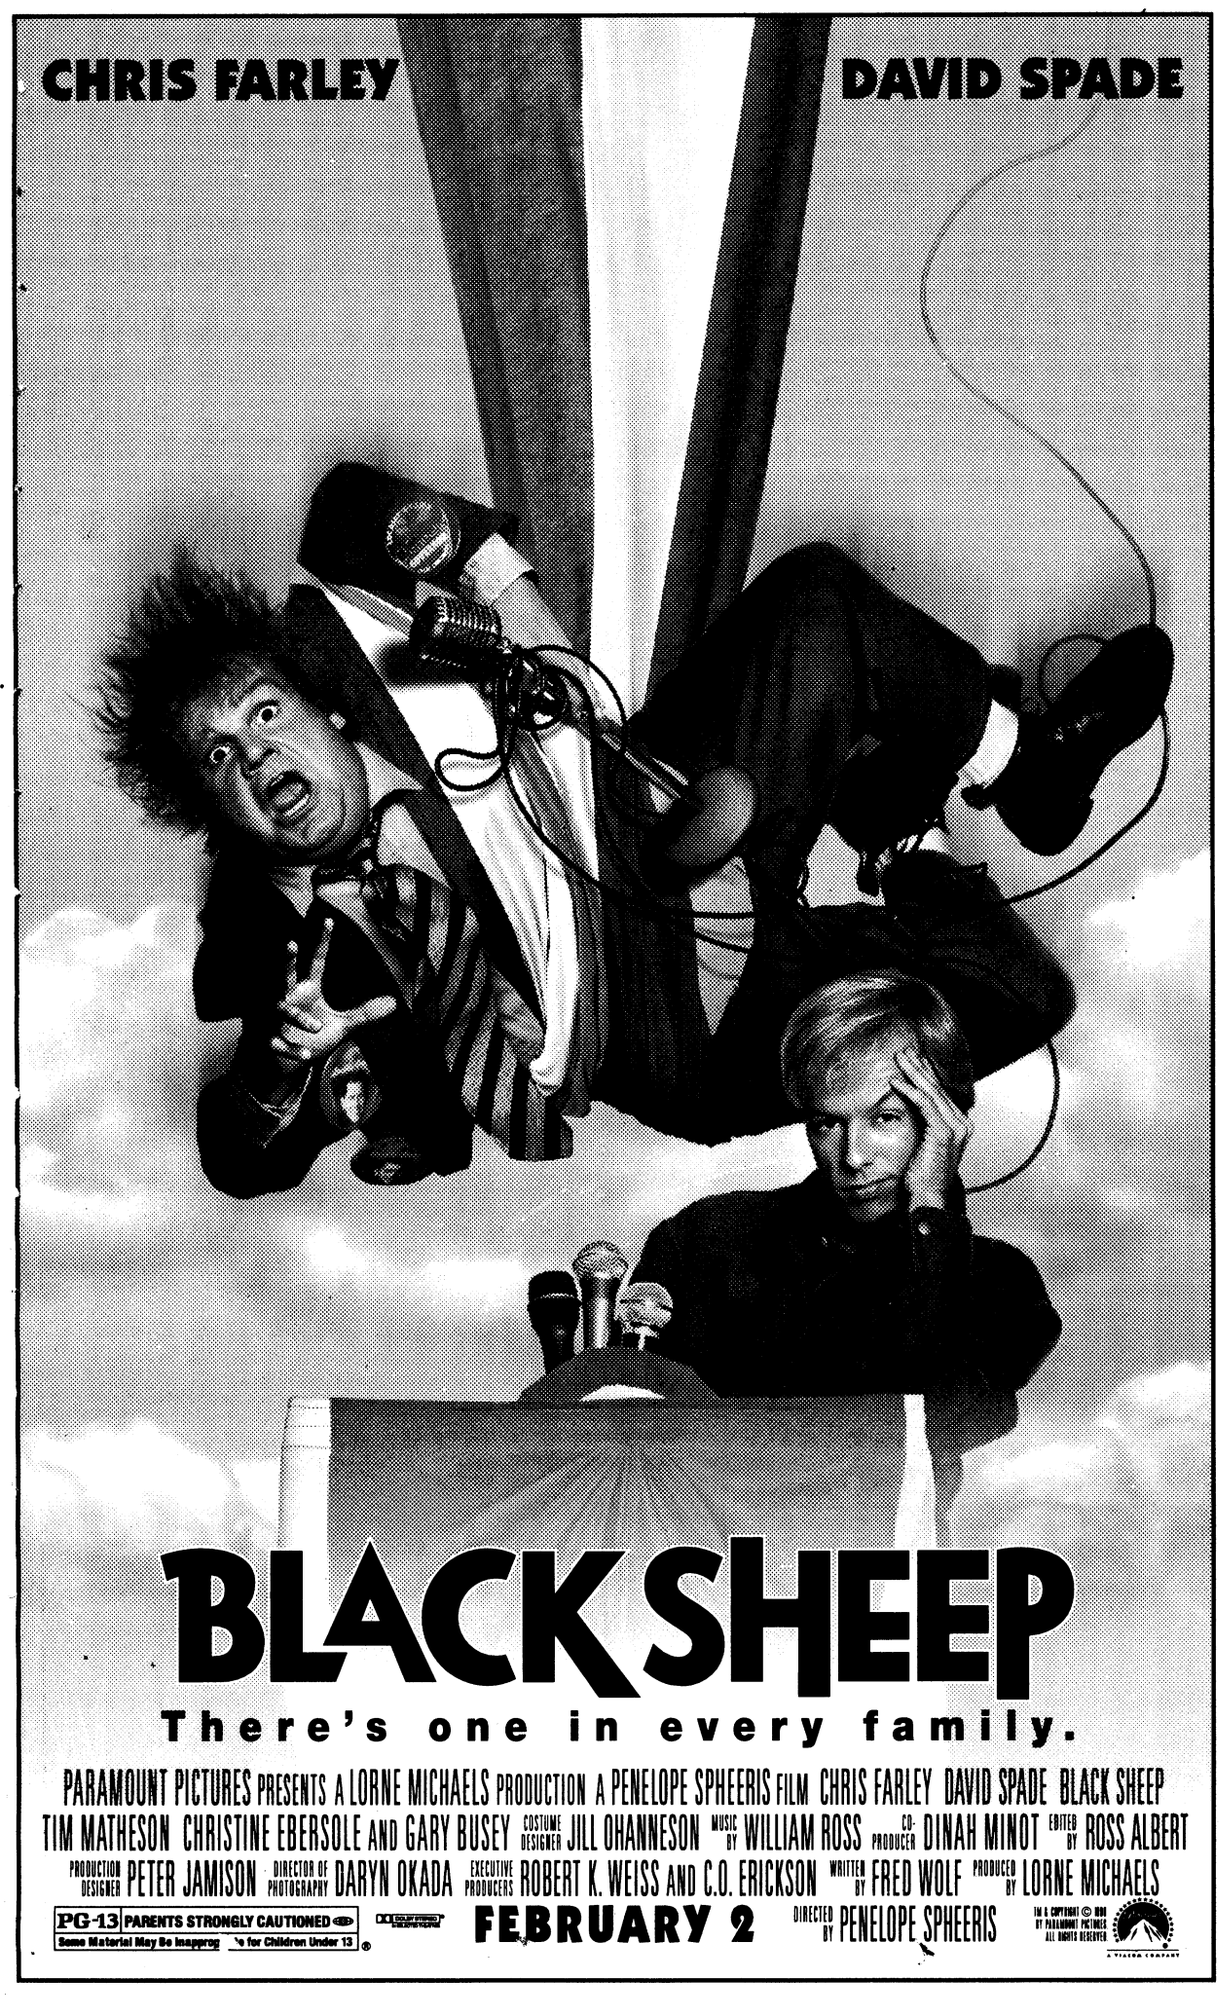
To acquire a permit, solicitors must have a business license and be signed up with the Better Business Bureau, according to Kyle. Their products cannot compete with Army and Air Force Exchange Service goods and services.

This permit is also required for soldiers and family members who want to operate a business out of their home, she said.

"If they can't get a permit, then they can't solicit business, although they may still get an exception from Housing to operate a business in their government quarters," Kyle said.

Cosby said if commanders or anyone else sees solicitors hanging out in unit areas or places they shouldn't be, call the Military Police.

If the salespersons are caught by the Military Police, they will be cited and barred from Fort Benning until they appear before a hearing officer from the Staff Judge Advocate, he said.



The hearing officer will make the final decision as to whether the ban will be upheld or not, Cosby said.

post briefs

New traffic signs to be posted

In an effort to ease traffic flow and better serve the patrons of Fort Benning, several changes are being made to existing traffic control devices.

The Directorate of Public Safety and the Directorate of Public Works are working together to figure out the best way to move traffic around the installation, especially the Main Post area.

So far, the following changes have been made:

- "Stop" sign at Holtz and Burr changed to "Yield" sign
- "Stop" sign at Chesney and Burr changed to "Yield" sign
- "Stop" sign at Indianhead and Merchant changed to "Yield" sign
- "Stop" signs on Moye and 11th Airborne Division removed

A traffic study is currently under way at Edwards and Burr streets to evaluate the feasibility of changing this light to a two-way stop.

All drivers on Fort Benning should be made aware of and adhere to the posted traffic control devices.

Drill Sergeant School classes combined

Drill Sergeant School Class 3-96 and Class 4-96 have been combined into Class 4-96. Graduation for Class 4-96 will be March 15.

For more information, call Master Sgt. Jackie McGriff, commandant, Drill Sergeant School, at 544-8173 or 54-8176.

Hospital to require SSNs for patients

Martin Army Community Hospital's computer data base will be updated during February.

The new version, which will be in operation Feb. 24, requires Social Security numbers for all patients to include children and infants for registration purposes.

While patients not possessing this data will not be refused care, some delay could occur if the Social Security numbers are not readily available.

Vibbert Ave to close

Vibbert Avenue will be closed to traffic from Edwards Street to Gillespie Street through Feb. 29.

This section of the road will be closed because of the construction of an underground utility tunnel for dual-temp piping from the Heating Plant on Vibbert Avenue to Building 399.

For information, call the Construction Inspection Branch of the Directorate of Public Works at 545-4749.

Tax Office opens

The Fort Benning Tax Office opened Wednesday. The office is located in Building 2640 at Soldiers' Plaza and will be open Monday through Friday, from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

Electronic tax filing is available for most federal returns. The office has many federal and state tax forms available.

Unit tax advisers have also been appointed for units throughout the post. Persons having tax questions should see their unit tax adviser first.

For more information, call Capt. Scott L. Frost at 545-3281.

SSNs applications to be accepted Feb 22

Every person age 1 or older must have a Social Security number before that person may be claimed on a tax return.

The Social Security Office in the Main Post Chapel Center, next to Doughboy Stadium, will accept applications for Social Security numbers Feb. 22 starting at 10 a.m.

Applicants must bring a certified copy of the person's birth certificate and some other type of identification such as school or shot records.

For more information, call Capt. Scott L. Frost at 545-3281.

Controlled burning set

Controlled burning of woodland areas will take place Feb. 5 through 10. If weather permits, the following compartments will be affected: A-6, A-9, C-2, D-7, D-16, E-3, E-5, F-2, G-1, G-4, H-1, I-2, I-4, J-5, K-1, K-6, M-7, O-7, O-13, X-2, X-3, X-4 and BB-5.

Burning will occur in pine stands within these compartments to enhance endangered species habitat and training areas. Personnel proposing to use these areas for recreational purposes must vacate these areas prior to 9:30 a.m. daily.

Training units using compartments adjacent to those listed above may experience drift smoke and are reminded to exercise caution while travelling in these areas due to the potential for reduced visibility.

Units using ranges and training areas are reminded to remove flammable debris, such as pinestraw, leaves, grass and trash from around structures in accordance with US Army Infantry Center Regulation 210-4, Paragraph 5-22, Organizational Maintenance.

For more information, call Jack Greenlee, Natural Resources Management Branch, at 544-6206.

CID seeks assistance

The U.S. Army Criminal Investigation Division is offering a $150 reward for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the person(s) responsible for removal of five gas powered leaf blowers; six gas powered weed eaters; three gas powered hedge trimmers; one gas powered lawn mower; one cordless drill; one circular saw; a 200-piece tool set and one wrench set from Building 1198. The items are valued at $3,848.90.

A $300 reward for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the person(s) responsible for a larceny that occurred between 5 p.m. Jan. 5, and 9:30 a.m. Jan. 8.

Someone entered Building 2755A on post and removed three central processing units, two monitors and one computer printer.

Anyone with information concerning this incident can contact J. Taylor at 545-7950 or 545-7052 or the Military Police at 545-5222.

CID is also asking for any information leading to the arrest and conviction of the person(s) responsible for forgery and larceny that occurred between 2:20 p.m. Nov. 16 and 10:10 p.m. Nov. 17 at 154 Derrickson Street and the Post Exchange at the Main Mall.

Unknown persons removed several discarded checks from a trash can, then forged and negotiated the checks at the Post Exchange at the Main Mall.

The assistance of the local community is being requested in an effort to identify and apprehend the perpetrator(s). The identity of anyone providing information will be strictly confidential.

ROTC scholarships are still available

The Columbus College Reserve Officers' Training Corps still has scholarships available for eligible soldiers. The application deadline is March 15.

For further information on how to earn a college degree, a commission as a second lieutenant and have the Army pay for all of your college education, call Maj. Brian Luedtke, Capt. Sheila Denham or 2nd Lt. Angela Soto at 568-2058.

OCS board set

The next Officer Candidate School selection board has been scheduled for June 17 to 21. The cutoff date for applications to arrive at Personnel Command is May 17 — no exceptions.

The Adjutant General Personnel Operations Services Division has set up two local boards to accommodate Fort Benning for the DA June board. The local board will convene May 6 to 8. Applications for this board must arrive no later than April 19. For more information, call Marie Lee at 545-3341 or 545-4702.

Registration rules set

The Chattahoochee County Tax Commissioner's Office will accept only cash and money orders as payment for 1996 motor vehicle registration.

The Tax Office will no longer accept personal checks as payment.

Soldiers who are stationed at Fort Benning but are not Georgia residents may avoid the payment of the ad valorem tax.

To avoid the tax, soldiers must obtain an ad valorem exemption form for each vehicle to be registered from the Fort Benning Office of the Staff Judge Advocate, Building 5, located on the corner of Vibbert and Sigerfoos avenues on Main Post.

The soldier must bring a leave and earnings statement from the past three months, proof of insurance, his or her military identification card and the previous year's paperwork. Call 545-3281.

Center changes hours

The Welcome Center is now open Monday through Friday 7 a.m. to 10 p.m., and Saturday and Sunday 2 to 10 p.m.

Inprocessing will be from opening hours until 20 minutes prior to closing hours.

Outprocessing soldiers may report to the Welcome Center or call to make an appointment 10 days before departure from the installation. For more information, call 545-5404.

ACOE to visit post

The Army selected Fort Benning as one of the 31 finalists in the 1996 Department of the Army, Army Community of Excellence competition.

Free license plates available

Department of Veterans Affairs

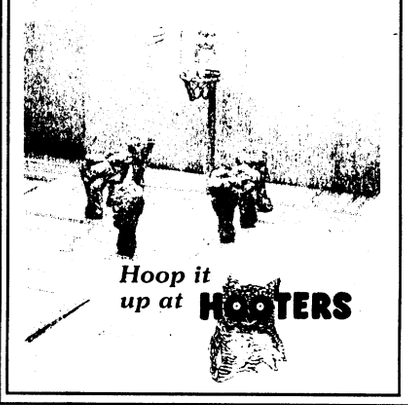
With the new year comes the requirement to renew or purchase state vehicle license plates.

"Various categories of veterans residing in Georgia are entitled to free Georgia license plates and some other veterans can purchase distinctive plates," said Pete Wheeler, Georgia commissioner of Veterans Affairs .

Special license plates are free to veterans who received the Medal of Honor or the Purple Heart and are legal residents of the state.

Former prisoners of war are also entitled to a free tag if they are legal state residents.

Veterans who are receiving or entitled to receive a statutory award from the U. S. Department of Veterans Affairs for the loss or permanent loss of the use of one or both feet or hands; loss of sight in one or both eyes or permanent impairment of both eyes to the extent there is a visual acuity of 20/200 may be eligible for the issuance of a free license plate.



Also, any wartime veteran separated under honorable conditions and verified by VA as receiving or entitled to receive compensation at the 100 percent rate as a result of being totally disabled either permanently or non-permanently is eligible to receive a free license plate.

"We encourage veterans who believe they might be eligible for a free license plate to visit one of our field offices to receive detailed information about this state benefit," Wheeler said.

Disabled veterans tags and distinctive plates for World War I and II, Korea, Vietnam, and Operation Desert Storm are available for purchase.

For information, call the local Veterans Affairs office.

CG recognizes quality workers at quarterly excellence breakfast

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet©

What started as a simple ceremony in February 1993 to recognize individual excellence on Fort Benning has become a quarterly tradition.

The Quarterly Excellence Appreciation Breakfast Jan. 26 at the Fort Benning Officers' Club Supper Club was the site for the presentation of more than 98 paperweights and four special awards.

More than 300 tickets for the breakfast were sold, said Dave Flo, director of Resource Management.

"It's great to be where pride is a way of life," said Commanding General Maj. Gen. John W. Hendrix in his remarks at the ceremony. "Excellence is a way of life. People take pride in what they are doing, and they care about making a contribution to this country."

"This breakfast is always an uplifting event for me," he continued. "I really appreciate what you do. I have never been more honored to work with a group of people than the group of people at Fort Benning. I thank each one of you for what you do for your country, what you do for Fort Benning and what you do for our soldiers and their families."

In addition to the presentation of quality paperweights, four special awards were given to outstanding organizations and individuals.

Master Sgt. Michael Haugan accepted a plaque on behalf of the 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment, for winning first place in the heavy density category at the Training and Doctrine Command level of the 1995 Maintenance Excellence Competition.

Capt. Jeffrey Bochonok accepted a plaque for the 63rd Engineer Company (Combat Support Equipment), 36th Engineer group (Combat), for being Fort Benning's Forces Command winner in the heavy density category of the 1995 Army award for maintenance program.

Pat Anderson, an Army and Air Force Exchange Service retail supervisor, received a plaque for being this quarter's recipient of the customer service excellence award.

Ken Strumpler accepted a plaque for the best self-help project of the quarter, in which Shop One, Maintenance Division, Directorate of Logistics, constructed a parts warehouse for storing major components for tactical combat and engineer equipment.

1/507th team uses self-help, U-Do-It to help themselves

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet©

When the parachute rigging facility moved from an old warehouse on Indianhead Road to its new location on Lawson Army Airfield, the Pathfinder School inherited the vacant building.

Capitalizing on the post's Self-Help and U-Do-It program, the 1st Battalion (Airborne), 507th Infantry, 11th Infantry Regiment, tasked the battalion maintenance team with transforming the dilapidated old structure into a modern facility where future pathfinders could learn their art.

"When we first started work in May, the building was just a shell — four walls with the interior completely open where long tables used to be for packing parachutes," said Staff Sgt. Yancey Fraley, battalion maintenance team member. The other team members include Sgt. 1st Class Richard Boehm, Sgt. 1st Class Christopher Petty, Staff Sgt. Billy D. Epperson and Staff Sgt. James Brannen.

Each team member brought to the job various carpentry skills he had mastered before his service in the Army, Fraley said.

To assist the team, student details from the 507th were brought in, he said.

"We looked for students to volunteer who already had the kinds of skills we needed to get the job done and tried to keep those personnel as long as possible so that we wouldn't have to continuously retrain new personnel," Fraley said.

Petty said the student details did an excellent job.

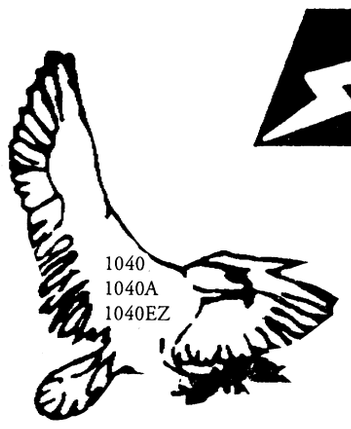
"If it were not for the hard work of the soldiers, this project never would have happened," Petty said. "They deserve 90 percent of the credit."

Fraley said the Directorate of Public Works was instrumental in providing the necessary materials and personnel to complete the electrical work. Fraley and the maintenance team constructed a completely new interior, transforming the single room, open bay warehouse into a modern teaching facility with four classrooms, administrative offices, a lounge area and a lecture hall complete with a stage and projector for large classes.

Fraley said the most challenging aspect of the job was meeting the deadline for completion of the project.

"Originally we were allotted more time to complete the project, but it was decided to use the facility for the last Pathfinder class of the year," Fraley said. "This shortened the amount of time we had to complete the finishing work such as applying paint, putting up paneling and constructing cabinets, which was the most time consuming work which had to be done."

Fraley and Brannen said the amount of money saved by the Army by using self-help was significant.



"The materials cost around $20,000," Fraley said. "To have hired a contractor would have cost at least three times that amount," Fraley said.

Brannen said the work was enjoyable and is something the team can always be proud of.

"After the project was completed in December, DPW personnel told me the facility is one of the best they had seen and second only to the classroom facilities at Infantry Hall," Fraley said. "It's definitely an improvement over what was here before."

School board discusses monitoring team visit

By Amy Durham
Special to The Bayonet©

The Fort Benning School Board discussed the upcoming monitoring of the special education programs in all Department of Defense Dependents Elementary and Secondary Education Schools during its regular meeting Monday.

Dr. Dell Karr, school superintendent, said a monitoring team will be at Fort Benning March 25 to 29 to evaluate quality of programs in the post schools.

Ongoing Parent Academy planning was also discussed. Karr said a guest speaker, Dr. Lenise Bias, has been scheduled as the Friday evening seminar guest speaker and planning for the Saturday sessions continues.

More than 500 need assessments have been returned to the schools by parents interested in the program.

Karr compared this number to the less than 200 assessments returned last year and the 200 returned two years ago.

Karr also said the National Assessment for Education Progress, a national test in math and science, will be administered to fourth- and eighth-grade students this winter, including a Feb. 20 through 23 test date at Fort Benning.

Interviews related to the school transfer issue were completed Jan. 23. Those interviewed included parents, the School Board, Chattahoochee and Muscogee counties superintendents, the Benning Education Association president and the Fort Benning Schools superintendent. Dr. Hector Nevarez, director, DoDDESS, should receive the survey results in July and the results should reach Congress in August, Karr said.

Board members approved the Consolidated Income Statement for the School Lunchroom Fund for the months of November and December, presented by Alice Skinner, director of Logistics.

In November, monthly net income was $4,391; sales, up $74 per day, were attributed to menu changes and marketing ideas. The fund equity stood at $57,516, and the year-to-date loss was $7,088.

December's fund equity stood at $53,389, and the year-to-date loss was $11,517.

The monthly net income loss was $4,429 because of a drop in cash sales and fewer pre-pay accounts. Skinner told the board the loss was a disappointment but expected because of the shorter school month.

The fund historically shows a loss in December because there are only two weeks of school, she said.

Board members present were: Col. Gregory Camp, president; Chap. (Maj.) Robert Thompson, chaplain; Rhoda Zerger, Dexter Elementary School representative; Col. Wm. David Brown, Faith Middle School representative; Kris Holcombe, Loyd Elementary School representative; Staff Sgt. John Perdue, McBride Elementary School representative; Lt. Col Stephanie Willson, attorney; and Dr. Dell Karr, superintendent. Lt. Col. Kelly Cook attended in Col. Richard Rutledge's absence. Caroline Meyers, Benning Education Association president; Richard Skinner, assistant superintendent for budget and personnel; and Alan Day, human resources site manager were also present.

The next school board meeting will be Feb. 20 at 12:30 p.m.

Post is dedicated to customer service

Army Performance Improvement Office

Fort Benning is a community dedicated to excellent customer service and continuous improvement in the work processes.

The key element of Fort Benning's customer focus and satisfaction endeavors is customer-driven quality. Since quality is defined by its internal and external customers, the post must continually focus on customer requirements, expectations, and satisfaction.

Customers are woven among five key processes of infantry training, infantry doctrine, infantry future, force projection and base operations.

Customers include soldiers, commanders, family members, retirees, civilian work force, sister communities, instructors at Training and Doctrine Command schools, reserve components, tenant units, other major commands from Department of the Army on down, the public and, ultimately, the individual taxpayer. In other words, there are few people who aren't the installation customers.

The post provides a variety of infantry products and services to a diversified customer base. One of its major products is the trained infantry officer. This same infantry officer will, at different times in his career, be an internal and external customer, and supplier, based on his different career assignments.

The post has local, regional, national and international markets for its products and services. Wherever infantrymen are located, Fort Benning supports the.

The post's customer requirements are straight forward. For the majority of its products and services, major customers want: a well-trained infantryman, sound infantry doctrine, overmatch of infantry combat systems, rapid deployment of the force and a quality and timely product or service.

Within the installation, it is sometimes difficult to separate customers from suppliers. In many cases, they are one and the same.

For example, every soldier and civilian employee is a worker and provider of a key process. But they, too, become customers of other key processes when they need such services as medical and child care, records maintained and awards processed.

Soldiers who are training, are not only customers, but now are also products of Fort Benning and the Infantry School.

All quality efforts begin and end with customers and customer satisfaction. To truly focus on customers, organizations need to identify their internal and external customers.

Post personnel must understand customers' requirements, consistently meeting or exceeding their expectations.

Soldiers and civilians must solve customer problems, change according to changing customer expectations and continually monitor and modify customer service systems.

Whether a customer or supplier, post workers all must strive to provide the best possible service in daily efforts, always seeking new opportunities that lead to continuous improvement and customer satisfaction.

SSI now located at Fort Jackson

By Jim Caldwell
TRADOC News Service

The Soldier Support Institute has been open for business at Fort Jackson since July 1995 but a considerable amount of mail from Army correspondents continues to be addressed to its old home, Fort Benjamin Harrison, Ind.

The Defense Finance and Accounting Service, which is still at Fort Benjamin Harrison, in particular, continues to receive a large volume of mail for the schools, said Charlie Vines, of SSIs directorate of training support at Fort Benjamin Harrison.

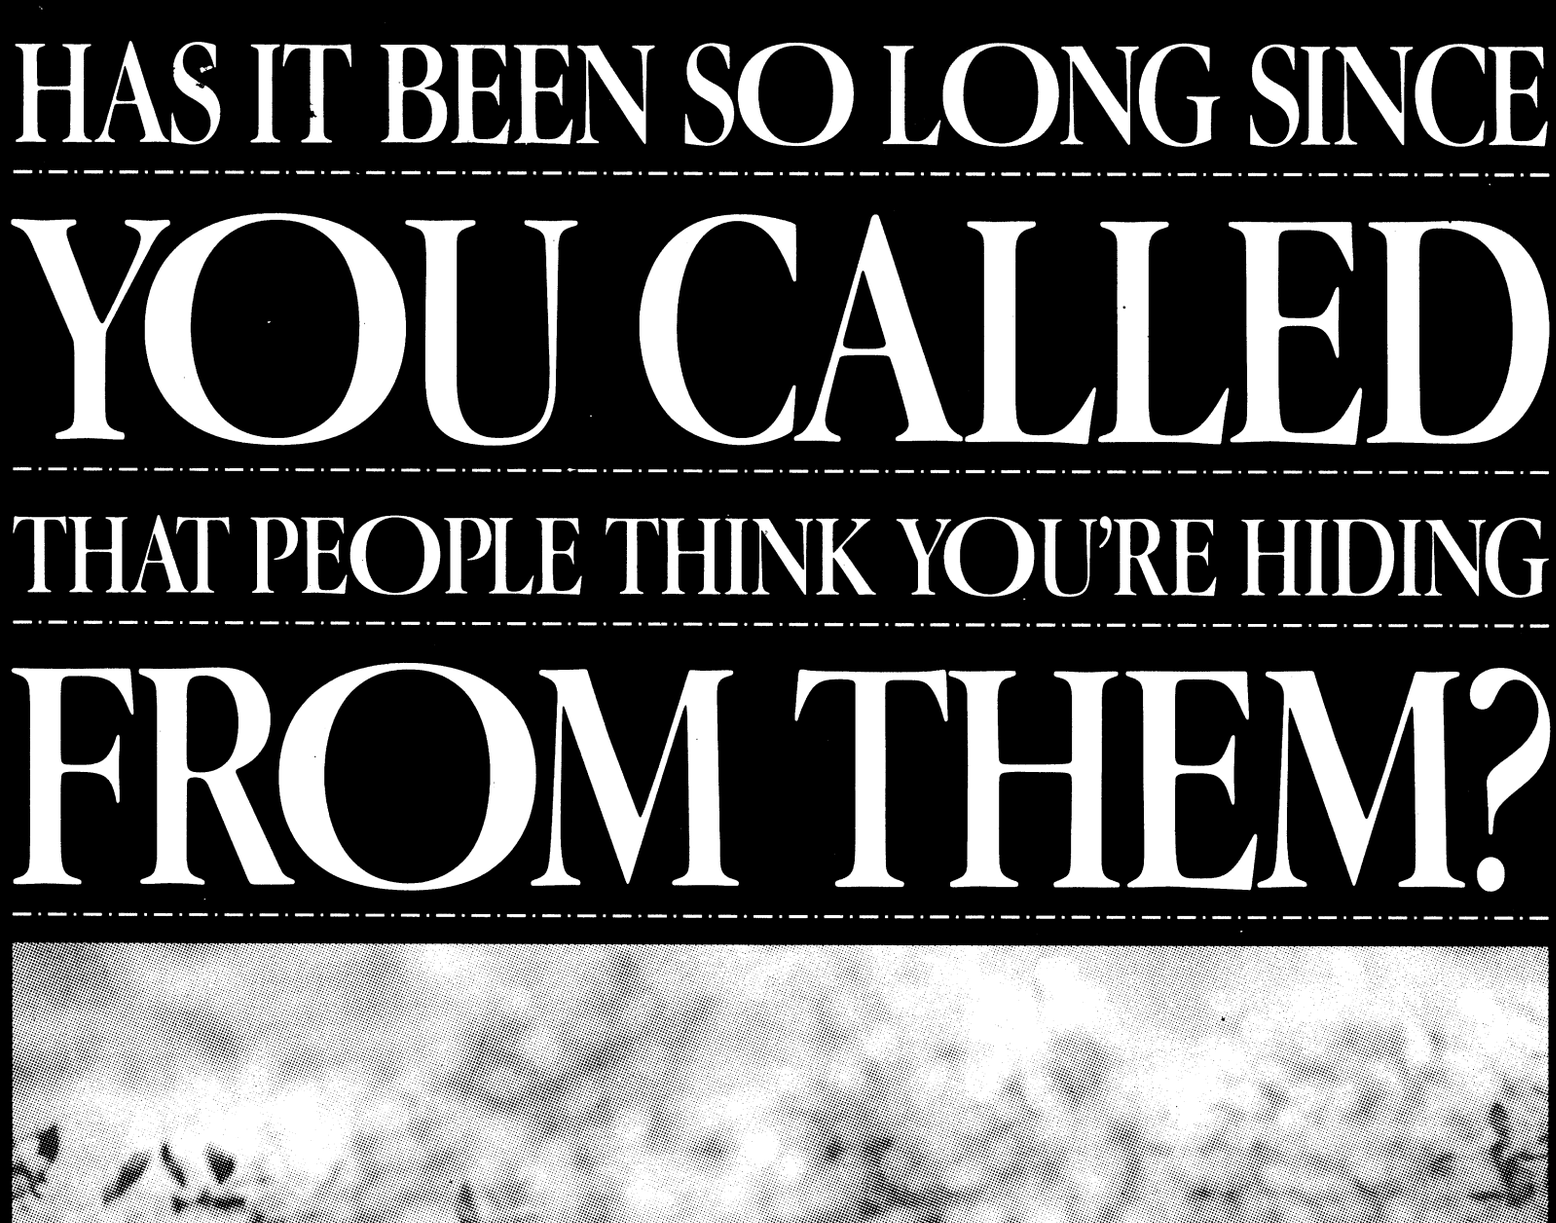
SSI was named the Soldier Support Center. Its three schools — Finance School, Adjutant General School and Recruiting and Retention School — were relocated to Jackson, as well.

Official mail continues to be erroneously addressed to Fort Benjamin Harrison despite correspondence informing the Army of the new address, according to Vines.

The correct mailing address is:

Commander

U.S. Army Soldier Support Institute



ATTN: ATSG-CG

Fort Jackson, S.C. 29207-7035

Mail intended for each of SSI's schools can be sent to that address, too.

It will be given to the proper school, according to Vines.

Post job program provides network

By Amy Durham
Special to The Bayonet©

Rachel Loughney did not wait until she and her husband moved to Fort Benning in December before she started her job search.

Loughney began contacting possible employers a couple of months before she left Oregon. And, when she and her husband arrived at Fort Benning Dec. 7, she hit the ground running the very next day. Loughney also filed applications, sent resumes and mailed letters to every possible organization that might need someone with her experience.

Although those contacts did not produce a job for her, her efforts put the speech pathologist in touch with Mike Mills, Army Community Service's acting Family Member Employment Assistance Program manager. Mills also serves on the Muscogee County/Fort Benning Special Olympics. The program informed Mills about Loughney's contact with the program.

"Mark Mills got my name when I contacted the Special Olympics," she said, "and he told me to contact him at the FMEAP office when I got here."

The extra phone call is only one of the many ways Mills and the volunteer FMEAP staff work to help military spouses successfully meet the job-hunting challenge.

Among the tools FMEAP provides are a three-hour workshop Thursdays from 9 a.m. to noon, designed to not only give prospective employees general job-search information but also to provide locally relevant facts to help spouses find employment either at Fort Benning or the surrounding areas.

Family member Kathy Bishop went to the workshop out of curiosity. After leaving Washington, D.C., with her husband to make Fort Benning their current home, Bishop found herself in a lower-paying market without a job comparable to the one she left as executive assistant to the deputy inspector general of the Air Force at the Pentagon.

Bishop said she was surprised by how informative the workshop was. "It was extremely helpful" she said.

During the weekly workshop, Mills takes broadly-based topics, such as government employment and continuing education as well as general applications and interviews and uses specific examples and scenarios to help prepare participants.

Participation in the workshop enables family members to use the job referrals list. The list is posted every Thursday at 2 p.m. and those who have participated in the workshop can drop by the office in Soldiers' Plaza Thursday from 2 to 5 p.m. and Friday from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. to locate the most up-to-date employment opportunities with hundreds of local businesses.

Mills said there are more than 315 businesses currently listed in the FMEAP job bank, and it is that direct link between Fort Benning family members and area businesses that impressed Bishop when she was utilizing FMEAP services.

"Anyone can look at my resume and see that I haven't lived anywhere for more than two years," she said. "He (Mills)

Tax time ...

Fort Benning's Tax Office opened its doors Wednesday to provide free assistance to all soldiers, retirees and their family members. Located in Building 2640, Soldiers' Plaza, the office will be open from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Monday through Friday. Tax office personnel will not only provide assistance with electronic filing, but will also have state and federal tax forms available. Soldiers who have questions about their 1995 returns can also receive information and assistance from their unit tax advisers. Unit tax advisers received Internal Revenue Service training before the tax season began. For more information about the Tax Office, call 545-4267.

Unit tax advisers from 2nd Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment, Master Sgt. Bennie Wilson, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, Master Sgt. Lionel Haynes, Company C, and Master Sgt. James Chatmon, Company A, all work on the practice exercises in their training manuals.

Parent academy planned

Fort Benning Schools

The Parent Academy, a weekend seminar for Fort Benning parents of children aged 0 to 15, will take place at Faith School March. 1 through 2.

More than 500 school parents responded to a questionnaire in January and academy sessions will reflect interest shown on surveys.

The two-day seminar is free and open to all Fort benning parents and personnel. Free child care will be provided for children aged 6 weeks to 11 years.

Featured guest speaker Dr. Louise Bias will present the keynote address, "A Message of Family, Hope and Love" at 7 p.m. Friday. Dr. Bias will also present Saturday sessions on "Survival Skills for Families in the '90s".

Bias is the mother of Len Bias, the University of Maryland basketball player who died only two days after being drafted by the Boston Celtics, and of Jay Bias, who was gunned down at a shopping mall.

Parents will choose three Saturday morning sessions. Choice topics include: Behavior Management Techniques, Study Skills, Technology, Developing Reading and Math Skills, Encouraging Student Success and many more.

Space in the Parent Academy will be limited. Reservations will be required and can be taken beginning Feb. 13 at the seven post schools. Registration will take place from 8:15 to 9:15 a.m. each morning until all spaces are filled. No phone reservations will be accepted.

Registration forms and information will be sent home with students Feb. 12. Parents interested in attending the Parent Academy can either return the registration form with their child Feb. 13, or stop by any registration site at the appropriate times.

Those wishing to register who do not have a child in the Fort Benning Schools can pick up registration forms and materials at any registration site beginning Feb. 12.

Employment workshop assists family members

By Amy Durham
Special to The Bayonet©

Although family members who come through the doors of the Army Community Services Family Member Employment Assistance Program office do so because they're looking for employment, Mark Mills said the search itself can be a full-time job.

"Family members looking for a job have to be persistent," Mills, acting FMEAP manager, said.

Accessibility is important. According to Mills, a phone, answering machine and even reliable transportation are all important.

"An individual should be able to get an interview at a moment's notice," he said.

Not only should an applicant be accessible but he or she must also be prepared with the right attitude and all the right information. Mills tries to assist family members at various stages of their preparation during a weekly FMEAP workshop. Discussion topics are designed to help job seekers reinforce and fine tune their existing job-search skills while they learn tidbits of information relevant to the Columbus job market.

Mills' workshop stresses the following topics:

Appearance and Attitude

- Always dress professionally, conservatively (even when filing applications; it may lead to an at-moment interview)
- Smile, be enthusiastic; introduce yourself clearly and concisely
- Never arrive at companies with friends, spouses or children

Application process

- Should be neat and complete
- Always avoid military terminology
- Explain "job duties performed" in detail
- Have references available - names, addresses and numbers.

The interview

- Write down answers to difficult questions an employer could

STILL SERVING

Local council helps retirees

By Amy Durham
Special to The Bayonet©

Members of the Fort Benning Retiree Council know that when they meet, they are not only working on behalf of thousands of local retirees, but their efforts are also reaching the post commanding general as well as the chief of staff of the Army's Retiree Council.

Managed by the installation Retirement Services Office and representing more than 35,000 retirees in an 82-county area throughout Alabama, Florida and Georgia, the council is the vital communication link between those who've served the nation and this country's decisions-makers.

Although some of the local council members serve on the national council, which meets annually in Washington D.C., the all-volunteer group meets quarterly to develop local support and to work the specific issues of the five sub-councils that include Warner Robins Air Force Base, Macon Ga.; Maxwell AFB, Montgomery, Ala.; Moody AFB, Valdosta, Ga.; Albany Marine Corps Base, Albany, Ga.; and the Tallahassee, Fla. area.

When the council meets, subcouncil chairpersons bring information and ideas as well as concerns to the meetings, according to Friede McDonald, Retirement Services officer.

One such idea has turned into a decades-old success story. The Tallahasee sub-council began a prescription run because they are not closely located to a medical treatment facility. Retirees would travel to Tyndall Air Force Base to get prescriptions filled for area retirees. Upon return, the volunteers should call recipients to a local armory to pick up their prescriptions for that week.

> "We are fortunate ... the post commanding general provides support to the local retiree community."

From this program grew another. The group began conducting ID Day twice a year for identification card update. This event was expanded to include vehicle military registration so retirees could drive on military installations. Fort Benning provided personnel to support the program and encourage aditional support of retiree subcouncil meetings.

According to McDonald, it is this kind of effort that reflects not only the needs of retirees but also their dedication. "Just because they are retired," she said, "does not mean they are not 'still serving'."

In fact, McDonald sends out a newsletter titled after that motto, to all area retirees, making them aware of current information and changes. McDonald stresses that she and her team exist to provide information and administrative support.

"Retirees really have to be politically involved today, voting and knowing their representatives," she said. "If they don't, there's a chance they could lose some of the benefits they receive."

Council members throughout the nation, acting as a voice for all retirees, use input from local representatives to develop and implement new plans and ensure beneficial changes. The top five current retiree issues are :

- Medical care
- Cost of living allowance
- Commissary privilege
- Dental care and
- Retirement services support

"Because of budget cuts, some installations have had to cut RSO support," McDonald said about the fifth issue. "We are fortunate that our office not only exists, but that the post commanding general and his staff provide outstanding support to the local retiree community."

The retiree council, along with the RSO, is planning the annual Retiree Open House. Scheduled for May 17 and 18, the event will be conducted in conjunction with Association of the United States Army Military Appreciation Week.

"We are planning it so retirees can visit Fort Benning, interact with active duty personnel and see the current technology and services provided by today's Army," McDonald said.

Other open house events will include physicals for retirees living outside the normal 40-mile radius limit, dental screenings and blood pressure checks as well as health-related information.

Retirees and their spouses can find out more about the open house and council involvement by calling McDonald at 545-2715 or 545-1813.

Interview questions:

• "Are you looking for a permanent or temporary job?"

• "What are your strengths? Weaknesses?

• How would you describe yourself?

• Do you intend to further your education?

• What are your ideas on salary?

Although these often-asked questions can be enough to make the most experienced worker nervous, they are an acceptable means for prospective employers to assess an interviewee's abilities and skills. However, there are questions that should not be asked by any interviewer and those are discussed during the four-hour workshop.

Mills also stresses the need for everyone to continue their education. "The more education someone has," he said, "the more marketable they are."

According to Mills, the work force continues to demand higher skills and he encourages military family members to continue their education, whether it be college, university or technical school. He also directs them to the Education Center in Building 2602, Soldiers' Plaza, for additional assistance. The center's phone number is 545-3093.

Being prepared to meet an employer's needs and answer his or her requests can make the difference between a paycheck or unemployment. Do you know how to answer when an interviewer asks, "Why should we hire you for this position rather than anyone else?"

knows the local companies and maintains contact with the ones willing to hire military spouses."

Once family members are enrolled in the FMEAP, Mills said he likes to personally meet each one.

"It helps to put a face and personality with the name of a person we're assisting," he said, "and we want feedback from the people who are out there looking for a job."

One of the best ways to find a job, he said, is through networking, and the FMEAP office schedules temporary agencies to come to the Family Unit Network Center the first and third Wednesday of each month. Representatives from local temporary services are on hand to talk with people interested in various entry-level positions.

Loughney said she attended one of these sessions realizing opportunities could be anywhere, and it was through the FMEAP's company referrals she was employed by Blue Cross and Blue Shield of Georgia in Columbus.

Although her new job responsibilities are not building directly on her eight years' experience working with disabled children, she said she is looking forward to the possibilities that may come. She also continues to volunteer for ACS's Exceptional Family Member Program and as a volunteer fund-raiser for the Special Olympics.

Loughney recommended the employment program for anyone in the job search.

"This program has served me well," she said.

Anyone interested in learning more about the program and the specific services can call 545-6969 or 545-5516.

Car-buying seminar set

Army Community Service

A car buying tips seminar will be Tuesday at 7 p.m. Sponsored by the Army Community Service Consumer Affairs and Financial Assistance Program, the seminar will be presented by Doug Putman of TIC Federal Credit Union.

The entire car-buying process, from research to driving off the lot, will be covered. While there will be much information on the purchase of new cars, attention will be given to the purchase of a used car.

A very misunderstood concept is the "as is" clause. Also, the Georgia lemon law does not apply to used cars.

Do you know what the total cost for payment, insurance, maintenance and operation should be?

Putman will address these questions and more in his presentation.

The seminar will be in the Family Unit Network Center, Building 359. Because registration is required, interested individuals can call 545-4043 or 545-7517 to register or for more information.

Rotary Club celebrates service

Rotary Club of Columbus

Eighty years of civic pride and service was celebrated by the Rotary Club of Columbus Thursday.

The local club was chartered number 200 in February 1916 by Rotary International. Clubs worldwide now number nearly 27,000 with total membership of more than 1,200,00. The Rotary Club of Columbus is currently one of the largest international organizations.

President Ben Williams announced the 322-member civic club was expecting 100 percent attendance for lunch Wednesday as the club remembered its past. This year's Rotary Club International theme featured: "Act with Integrity, Serve with Love, Work for Peace." The regular club meeting that day focused on club history and its roots, with a birthday cake, banners and billboards.

One of the early activities of the club was to help bring to Columbus the new military camp in 1918 that grew and developed into the U.S. Army Infantry Center and Fort Benning. At the request of the Rotary Club, the new installation was named for Maj. Gen. Henry Lewis Benning, a native of Columbus considered the area's most outstanding officer of the Confederate Army.

Also, the Rotary Club supports soldiers by making donations to the annual Operation Holiday, which is in December.

Planning requires vigilance, patience

By Kevin Dougherty
29th Infantry Regiment

Anyone who has been around Fort Benning for any length of time has undoubtedly heard of mission, enemy, terrain, troops and time, or METT-T. One of the T's stands for "time."

In the Army, time is managed through the reverse-planning process. The military planner identifies the critical time in the operation, for example, the time of attack, and works backwards from there to allocate adequate time for each prerequisite task. It is his knowledge of when the critical event will occur that allows the planner to prepare incrementally, assuring he will be ready.

The Christian cannot afford to not have a knowledge of the time of the critical event, the second coming of Christ. Mark 13:32 to 37 states: "But of that day or that hour no one knows, not even the angels in heaven, nor the Son, but only the Father. I say to all: watch" (RSV).

Therefore, instead of reverse planning, the Christian planner has a threefold requirement: constant vigilance, patience and expectations.

Matthew tells us: "Watch therefore, for you do not know on what day your Lord is coming. But know this, that if the household had known in what part of the night the thief was coming, he would have watched and would not have let his house be broken into" (Matthew 24:42-43 RSV).

Because we do not know when Christ will return, we must be ever vigilant and always ready. We cannot put off our quest for salvation, for forgiveness, for leading a life in Christ. Doing it tomorrow may be too late. We must act now.

Anyone who has performed watch duty knows the great patience it requires. The need for constant alertness is punctuated by the need to maintain that condition for the entire shift, not just for a few minutes.

The Psalmist says: "I waited patiently for the Lord and he inclined to me, and heard my cry" (Psalm 40:1 RSV). Imagine the beautiful image of God inclining toward us to assist us in our times of trouble.

What a loving and generous God we serve. He is an ever-present part of our lives. He graciously bends down from his place on high to better hear our prayers and give us help.

"You also must be ready, for the Son of man is coming at an unexpected hour" (Luke 12:40 RSV). There is a wide distinction between believing something will happen, and actually expecting it to happen.

Although we believe Christ will come again, it somehow seems far off; therefore, we often lack any real sense of urgency in preparing ourselves to receive him. How differently would we live our lives if we truly expected Christ to come tomorrow? We need only to look at the changed priorities of the terminally ill to appreciate this phenomenon.

Thus the time portion of a Christian's METT-T analysis reveals three crucial requirements: constant vigilance, patience and expectation. The three built on each other. God has given us time because there is much work to be done. The time is ours to use or to waste.

We cannot say when we stand before Christ's judgement, "Oh Lord, forgive me for wasting my life. Please give me a little more time to make things right. There were so many things I intended to do but never got around to doing because I was so busy." No, God expects us to prioritize our time to serve him first. He is giving us our chance now. We have the time we need. Now is the time to act.

God allows choice

By Bob Davidson
USAIC Chaplain Office

Have you ever watched a baby learn to walk?

She begins by holding onto the furniture as she makes her way around the house. At first, she stands there, smiling at everyone, and then she takes her first shaky steps while Mom and Dad cheer.

Now Mom and Dad get into the act. They hold her hands, lead her along, and pick her up and stand her on her feet again when she falls.

However, if Mom and Dad are wise, they won't try to force their baby to walk. They will wait until she's ready to try on her own. Once she decides to try, Mom and Dad are there to cheer and hold her hand and help her up when she falls.

That, I think, is a good example of how God helps us with our bad habits. He doesn't force us to overcome them. He waits until we're ready to try on our own, and immediately he's there to cheer us on and hold our hands and help us up when we fall.

Choice is the key word here. God absolutely will not violate our power of choice. If we decide to keep on doing the things that we love, he will let us, regardless of how ruinous they may be to our physical health or our emotional and spiritual well-being.

Let's get practical. Suppose you have the bad habit of taking God's name in vain whenever something frustrates you. From the time you were a child, every time your selfish nature was denied something it wanted, you felt angry, and you swore. Every time you swore, the habit of swearing when you were angry became stronger.

Then, one day God showed you that swearing is wrong. Now every time you swear, you feel uncomfortable.

That uncomfortable feeling is called guilt. If you're like me, you don't like guilt, but it's one of the best evidences that God's converting power is at work in your life.

Finally, one day you say, "I'm going to stop swearing!"

God is very happy about that decision. He couldn't make it for you, but now that you've made the decision, he will help you to follow through with it. Paul said, "I can do everything through him who gives me strength." (Philippians 4:13)

That's how God helps you follow through with your decision. He gives you strength. Without his help, your decisions would be like ropes of sand.

National prayer breakfast — The Fort Benning observance of the National Prayer Breakfast will begin at 6:30 a.m. Feb. 20 at the Fort Benning Officers' Club.

The breakfast is an opportunity for all people to acknowledge the moral and spiritual values upon which our nation was founded, according to coordinators.

This year's guest speaker will be Chap. (Maj. Gen.) Donald W. Shea, chief of chaplains for the U.S. Army.

A donation of $4.50 is requested for the breakfast buffet. Tickets are available through unit command sergeants major.

For more information, call 545-1314.

Praise and worship service — A nondenominational general Protestant service, including worship, praise, singing, prayer, teaching and preaching, will be conducted every Sunday at the Infantry Center Chapel from 6 to 8 p.m.

Everyone is invited, including single, married, active duty, retired, families, friends, relatives, National Guard, Reserves, enlisted, non-commissioned officers and officers.

Refreshments and fellowship will take place after the service in the chapel annex. Child care will be available.

Musicians needed — The custodian of the Consolidated Chaplains' Fund is accepting applications for watch-care givers, pianists and choir directors.

For more information, call Staff Sgt. Phyllis Swinson at 545-1934.

Sunday School — The Fort Benning Sunday School is open every Sunday, and all personnel can attend. There are classes for 2-year-olds through adults. Sunday School is located in the Religious Education Center, Building 2517. Classes are from 9:30 to 10:30 a.m.

Fellowship drive — The Fort Benning Chapter of the Christian Military Fellowship is conducting a membership drive.

It is an association of committed Christian believers who are serving in the U.S. armed forces or who are associated with the military, and it is a nondenominational organization.

There are no membership dues. To join, fill out and send in a membership application. For more information, call 545-2939.

ask the judge

By George R. Smawley
Office of the Staff Judge Advocate

Q: I often use my personal computer at work, and sometimes leave it there overnight. There are typewriters and older computers available, but my computer is faster and allows me to do more in less time, so the Army benefits from its use. If my computer is damaged or stolen while located at my place of duty, will the Army pay for its repair or replacement?

A: As a general rule, the government will not compensate an individual who suffers the loss of a high-value item located at the workplace. Individuals who choose to use their own computers, tools, etc. for duty-related tasks need to be aware of the severe limitations on the payment of claims for their loss or damage.

Several conditions must be met in order for a service member to receive compensation for a loss that occurred at the workplace. First, the Personnel Claims Act, as implemented by Army Regulation 27-20, requires that the loss result from theft from a secured area, vandalism, fire, flood, hurricane or other unusual circumstances. The act does not allow payment for the loss of personal property stored at the workplace.

Second, the act requires the service member have prior and specific authorization from the unit commander or directorate head to use personal equipment at the workplace.

The commander or directorate head should only give the soldier authorization to use personal equipment after he has determined that the equipment is not available through normal supply channels. The regulation states that "privately owned computers are inappropriate for use in performing official duties because of both the stringent requirements for obtaining such equipment and the fact that proper security for such expensive items is rarely available."

Items considered normally available through supply channels include computers, typewriters, video and audio equipment, tools, sleeping bags and similar items.

There is an exception to this policy for small items of military equipment, such as extra canteens and ammunition pouches. The commander should limit authorization to the performance of specific tasks on a temporary basis.

The Army regulation does allow compensation for small items of personal property that are reasonable and useful to keep at the workplace. These items include, coffee pots, small radios, microwave ovens, pictures and the like. The maximum allowable payment is $75 per item and $200 per claim for office furnishings.

IRS offers tax tips for seniors

American Forces Information Service

There are special tax rules that apply only to senior citizens, Internal Revenue Service officials said.

Seniors or their caregivers should check the rules carefully because there might be a tax credit they aren't taking that could lower their 1995 federal taxes.

On the other hand, some of the rules, especially those pertaining to Social Security benefits, could add to taxes owed, officials said.

Tax officials said some things senior citizens and caregivers should keep in mind when filing federal taxes include:

• If you are single and 65 or older, you need not file a federal income tax return unless your gross income is $7,350 or more

• Married seniors who are both 65 or older need not file a federal tax return unless gross income is $13,050 or more, while a couple with only one person 65 or older has to file if income is $12,300 or more

• If you are 65 or older and do not receive Social Security benefits or Railroad Retirement benefits, you may qualify for the elderly tax credit.

• The rate at which Social Security benefits are taxed range from 0 to 85 percent, depending on marital status and provisional income

• If you are 65 or older, single and do not itemize deductions, you receive an additional $950 standard deduction; married, filing jointly, the amount is $750

• If you are 55 or older, you may qualify for a once-in-a-lifetime benefit of exempting up to $125,000 profit on the sale of your home

• A portion of the moving-in costs to a continuing-care facility, as well as a part of the monthly fees, may be deductible as medical expenses. However, before any deduction is taken, IRS officials said, you should check it out very carefully. This is an area the IRS scrutinizes on tax returns.

If you have any questions concerning any tax credit, deduction or how Social Security benefits affect your 1995 federal taxes, check with the local IRS office or call (800) 829-1040.

Another option, IRS officials said, is to use the Tax Counseling for the Elderly Program or the Volunteer Income Tax Assistance Program. Both are free and available through local IRS offices.

When you contact the IRS, be sure to get the name and other pertinent information concerning the individual you talk to, IRS officials said. This will help later if any problems arise over your taxes.

IRS officials said publications that may interest seniors, caregivers and anyone who assists in filing the federal taxes include:

• Publication 1, "Your Rights as a Taxpayer"

• Publication 17, "Your Federal Income Tax"

• Publication 502, "Medical and Dental Expenses"

• Publication 505, "Tax Withholding and Estimated Tax"

• Publication 523, "Selling Your Home"

• Publication 524, "Credit for the Elderly or the Disabled"

• Publication 553, "Highlights of 1994 Tax Changes"

• Publication 554, "Tax Information for Older Americans"

• Publication 721, "Tax Guide to U.S. Civil Service Retirement Benefits"

• Publication 910, "Guide to Free Tax Services"

• Publication 915, "Social Security Benefits and Equivalent Railroad Retirement Benefits"; and Schedule R or Schedule 3, Credit for the Elderly or the Disabled.

File taxes easier with good records

American Forces Information Service

Financial records kept up to date, accurate and easy to find can make filing your federal tax forms much less of a headache, said Internal Revenue Service officials.

Instead of waiting until the last minute to try to compile the information, IRS officials recommend keeping a running tab throughout the year.

When filing, you will have to submit a copy of your W-2 form. You will also have to furnish information provided on all Form 1099s, showing interest income, dividends and other types of income such as unemployment compensation and Social Security benefits.

Other information you may have to provide includes child-care expenses, including the name, address and Social Security number of the child care provider, children's birth certificates and Social Security numbers, house payments, moving expenses, charitable contributions, business expenses, medical and dental expenses and alimony and child support payments.

IRS officials said tax records and supporting documents should be kept at least three years. Some financial advisers recommend holding onto the materials for at least six years.

In general, IRS has three years to check the returns. Under certain circumstances, you may find your entire tax history being audited.

If you have any questions on your federal tax return and what financial information you need, call the local IRS office or call (800) 829-1040.

When calling IRS, be sure to write down the name and telephone number of the individual you talked to, along with the date. For copies of the free forms and publications you need to complete your federal tax package, call IRS at (800) 829-3676. Or write to:

Breed, spay or neuter? That's the question

Veterinary Services

An important role as a responsible pet owner is to decide whether or not to breed, spay or neuter the pet. Unless the pet is a purebred of show quality, there is no need to breed him or her at all.

Most importantly, the decision not to breed a pet ensures that it will not be adding to the serious overpopulation problem of America's millions of homeless dogs and cats.

The spaying or neutering of a pet can be done as young as six weeks of age, but most veterinarians prefer the pet be four to six months old.

Spaying involves a general anesthetic and abdominal surgery. Once the incision heals completely, she can look forward to a longer life, no heat cycles and fewer health problems.

Also, the owner will not have the responsibility of finding homes for an unwanted litter of puppies. Older unspayed dogs have higher risk of mammary tumors, uterine infections and other health problems.

Neutering is a relatively safe procedure, performed under general anesthesia and requires only a brief stay in the hospital.

There are many compelling reasons to neuter. From a medical standpoint, neutered dogs are far less likely to develop common prostate-related problems, such as tumors of the rectum, prostate enlargement and various bacterial infections.

Neutering may effectively reverse several annoying behaviors, such as urine marking and mounting, roaming and aggression toward other dogs.

GIRL SCOUT COOKIE RUN

Olympian sets the pace for 5-miler

By Lori Egan
Bayonet staff writer

A 1988 Olympian ran the Girl Scout Cookie Run five-miler in 24 minutes and 16 seconds Saturday, leading a pack of hundreds who participated in the race.

Brian Abshire, who competed in the steeplechase in the 1988 Olympics, is this year's winner.

More than 500 people participated in the 16th annual Girl Scout Cookie Run in Weracoba Park, which featured fast times and brisk weather for its five-miler, 1.5-miler, tot trot and Girl Scout troop relays.

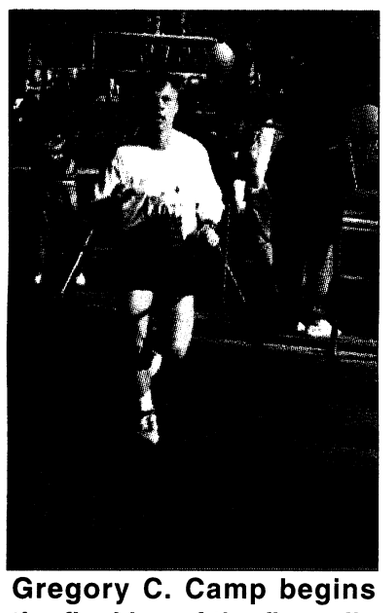
"I couldn't hear the splits," Abshire said. "If I had heard the four-mile split, I would have picked up the pace. But, I knew I was going finish in under 25 minutes so I just relaxed and ran."

Abshire said this is the first race he's run in eight months because of a recovering injury. He is training for the Olympics in Auburn.

Second place in the five-mile event went to Peter Pritchett who completed the run in 25:10. Pritchett is also training in Auburn for the steeplechase competition.

"The course was deceivingly tough," Pritchett said. "I thought it would be easy and kind of fast. But those uphills can kind of get to you."

Pritchett, who joined the Army while in college, is a member of the Army's World Class Athlete Program.



The 1.5 mile "Run for the Cookies" was won by last year's winner, James Evilsizer, Phenix City. He breezed the course in 8:10, slicing 10 seconds off last year's score.

Another runner who improved her time was Courtney Kostich, 8. She whacked more than a minute off the previous year with a time of 12:15. She had the fastest time for children under 9.

The other races included girl scout cookie relays, where the girls passed cookie boxes as batons, and a tot trot in which children under 4 ran a 100-yard dash.

"It was a lot fun, a lot of variety with all of the different races," said Gregory Camp, who is an Army colonel and Fort Benning's Chief of Staff. "It's good to see all the parents with their children, running and it was for a good cause."

The following are the top three finishers in each age group for the five-mile and 1.5-mile runs.

Gregory C. Camp begins the final lap of the five-mile race.

Stars season set to start

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Though the professional football season ended with the Super Bowl, the semi-professional football season has just begun.

The Bi-City Stars will kick off its season against the Beaufort Storms with Military Appreciation Day at Doughboy Stadium Feb. 18 at 2 p.m.

Bi-City Stars

What: Military Appreciation Day

When: Feb. 18

Where: Doughboy Stadium

Information: Call 480-9999.

The Bi-City Stars, comprised of military and civilian players, will battle the South Carolina Storms, which is made up of mostly U.S. Marines from Parris Island.

This year's team will again be headed by Tom Staton, assisted by Connie Burnham from Fort Benning.

And, once again Fort Benning soldiers will play a large part in the offense and defense of the Stars. This year's roster will carry 10 Fort Benning players or coaches.

Saturday, the Stars will play an exhibition game against Palmetto at Garrett Stadium, Summerville Road in Phenix City at 7:30 p.m.

The games will be open to the public. Tickets will be available to Infantry Training Brigade soldiers through for companies.

Tickets are $3 for military personnel, active duty or Reserve and National Guard in uniform or with an identification card. The cost for civilians at the gate is $5.

Tickets can be purchased at the gate or for advance ticket sales, call Lance Hartman at 480-9999 and leave a message or 322-0573.

The home games will be played at Garrett Stadium, with the exception of the season opener, which will be played at Doughboy Stadium. The stadium is located at 3519 Summerville Road, Phenix City.

Orienteering championship — The 1996 post orienteering championships are scheduled for Sunday. There will be four courses, two to six miles in length, for beginners to expert. The map is 1:15,000 with 10 feet contour intervals. The start is located near the vicinity of grid zone FL870785.

Directions to the orienteering course are: from Lawson Army Airfield, cross over the Chattahoochee River bridge into Alabama. Turn right (north) on 101st Airborne Division Road. Drive 1.4 miles to the parking and starting area. Do not exit Fort Benning.

This event is open to all soldiers, family members and civilians. Entrants may run as an individual or as part of a team.

For more information, call Martin Farenfield at 682-5732 or 545-7090.

Tactical pistol match — The Rifle and Pistol Club of Fort Benning will conduct a Tactical Pistol Match Saturday at 10 a.m. on English Range. The entry fee $16. Glock Model 17, 9 mm pistols will be provided for shooters who don't have a pistol. All entrants will receive a T-shirt.

For information, call Jim Graham or James McQuien at 689-3371

Youth soccer — Youth Services will conduct soccer registration Monday through Feb. 9. The program is open to family members, age 4 through 15, of active duty, retired military and Department of Defense civilians.

To participate, family members must have a Youth Services card, which can be purchased at the time of registration.

Anyone interested in being a coach should call 545-3070 or stop by the Youth Services Office, Building 1056.

Pistol class — The Rifle and Pistol Club is hosting a Tom Campbell Pistol Course Feb. 10 and 11 from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. This course is free courtesy of Safariland. Feb. 10 is designed for new shooters and the Feb. 11 class is for more experienced shooters. You may register for either or both classes. You must be a current Fort Benning Rifle and Pistol Club member to attend. The course is free, but there is a daily $8 charge for a lunch catered by Barbecue Billy's.

For more information, call Jim Graham at 689-3371.

Swim team — The Barracuda swim team needs a coach. Interested individuals must have a minimum of one year experience, possess required Red Cross certification cards and provide Youth Services with a written resume.

For more information, call Youth services at 545-3070 or stop by the office located in Building 1056 on McIver Street.

Deer permit — Hunters must return their Fort Benning Deer Permit, Form 48, within 15 days of the close of deer season. The Alabama deer season ended Wednesday. Therefore, all deer permits must be returned no later than Feb. 15. Permits may be returned to the Natural Resources Management Branch, Building 1707. A receipt for turn in can be obtained in person or by mailing the permit by certified mail (return receipt requested) to Outdoor Recreation, P.O. Box 53323, Fort Benning, Ga. 31905. Failure to return the permit will result in a suspension of hunting privileges for the 1996-1997 deer hunting season. Appeals will not be accepted without a receipt for turn in.

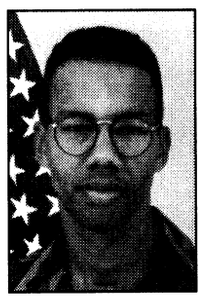
profile in excellence

Name: Sgt. Hector O. Hernandez

Award or recognition: NCO of the Quarter, School of the Americas
MOS: Intelligence analyst
Unit: Civil military operations, SOA
Job title: Intelligence course instructor
Years in the Army: 12 years

What were your reasons for joining the Army? Chance to see and explore the diverse cultures of our world, showing others how we, as Americans, work and help each other.



What person has most influenced your career?
Maj. Fausto A. Natal, Military Intelligence.

If you were sergeant major of the Army for a day, what improvements would you make?
Increase the support we give law enforcement agencies to curb the narcotics problem we have in the United States. Increase the awareness of how destructive prejudice is in the military and abolish it.
I would also change the promotion system for privates thorough corporal. I think they should work on a point program similar to sergeants and staff sergeants. For promotions to sergeant and staff sergeant, there should be a Department of the Army board similar to that of sergeant first class and above.
The Army wants a more professional soldier, and soldiers at every level should realize they must work hard to get promoted.

What were your reasons for choosing your MOS?
Initially I was a medic and the reason was I had an interest in being a nurse. Then, I selected intelligence because it gave me the opportunity to work at a strategic level.

Describe a memorable moment in your career.
Having a general pin on my (Expert Field Medical Badge) when I was named distinguished graduate of the one-week testing.

profile in excellence

Name: Sergeant 1st Class John C. Cruzat Jr.

Award or recognition: Instructor of the Quarter
MOS: Infantryman (Mechanized)
Unit: Bradley Instructor Company, 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment
Job title: Instructor writer
Years in the Army: 15 years

What were your reasons for joining the Army? At 17 years of age, I was seeking some direction for my life. The Army provided that as well as educational opportunities.

Define your style of leadership.
I would call it transformational with a situational approach.

What person has most influenced your career?
Jesus Christ and my wife, Valerie, have been unending sources of inspiration and motivation for me.

If you were sergeant major of the Army for a day, what improvements would you make?
Primarily I would focus on upgrading or even redesigning our institutional training programs at every level. Force XXI is going to need it.

What were your reasons for choosing your MOS?
The tradition and folklore of the infantry provided the psychological framework. I wanted to develop those virtues of duty, honor and country that I genuinely ascribe to.

Describe a memorable moment in your career.
I vividly recall the moment I disembarked from the bus in Ashaffenburg, Germany, following our adventure in the Gulf. We entered the gymnasium to an incredible reception. It was electric! I saw my beautiful wife and daughter.

What are your career plans?
I plan to lead a platoon in Fort Carson, Colo., a company in Korea, and a battalion, regiment or post, perhaps on Fort Benning.

What others have to say:
"Teaches like a college professor!"
— Col. French L. McClain,
Former commander, 1st Bn., 29th Inf. Regt.

"Model instructor!"
— Capt. Lane Lombardo,
Former commander, BIC, 1st Bn., 29th Inf. Regt.

Post employee gets award from TRADOC

By Lisa M. Hibbert
Bayonet staff writer

Elizabeth Redden is the recipient of the Army's Manprint Practioner Award.

A Fort Benning employee was presented with the Army's newest award — the Manprint Practitioner of the Year Award — in a ceremony at the Pentagon, Thursday.

Elizabeth Redden began working at Fort Benning in 1977, just when the Army began trying something new.

Redden, who has a master's degree in psychology, was cross trained as an engineer. Likewise, engineers were cross trained as psychologists. The result was an engineering psychologist — someone who studies the human factors of engineering.

The Army may decide that it wants new weapons that have great ranges of effectiveness but Redden is the person who says, based on her research, a soldier can walk X miles with a weapon X heavy so that is how big this new weapon should be.

"I was honored (to receive this award)," Redden said. "I was actually supposed to get the award at the Manprint Conference. I had not planned to attend and the conference coordinator called me and told me that I needed to be there."

"I couldn't understand why and then I found out that I was supposed to (receive) this award," Redden said. "Unfortunately the program ended up getting canceled."

Redden works in the Weapons Branch of the Human Factors Integration Division, Human Research and Engineering Directorate of the U.S. Army Research Laboratory, and serves as the chief for the U.S. Army Infantry Center field element.

She has been instrumental in such programs as Javelin, Warrior Focus and Own the Night .

"Exercising superb technical and organizational skills, (Redden) has ensured that the U.S. Army Infantry Center proponent systems comply with Manprint criteria ," said Thomas C. Cook, chief weapons restoration, Missile Command. "Her ability to function as a team player with the USAIC helps provide the infantry soldier with the best systems for today and the future."

Redden, who had planned to use her degree to be a child psychologist, has been working at Fort Benning for more than 18 years.

"I never thought that I would be working for the Army, but I really like my job," Redden said.

DCA chief gets White Plume Award

By Shannon Day
Special to The Bayonet©

The director of Community Activities received the Order of the White Plume Award during a ceremony Jan. 16 in Classroom 6 at Infantry Hall.

Alan F. Stewart, a native of Van Wert, Ohio, was presented the award by Brig. Gen. John G. Meyer Jr., commander, U.S. States Army Community and Family Support Center, for significant contributions to the Army recreation program.

"What Michael Jordan is to basketball and Emmett Smith is to football, Al Stewart is to (Morale; Welfare and Recreation)," Meyer said.

Stewart initiated and directed many improvements in the recreation program at Fort Benning, including the revitalization of outdoor recreation facilities at Uchee Creek, and also at Destin, Fla.

Stewart's leadership has ensured excellence in quality of products and services for soldiers and their families, according to Meyer.

The White Plume Award, established in 1982 by the Adjutant General of the Army, has been awarded to little more than 100 people for outstanding support and service to the Nonappropriated Fund Program, according to Meyer.

"The awarding of the White Plume is very special," Meyer said. "This is a great honor, and I feel very humble to present this (award) to Al Stewart."

Soldiers knock out Operation Hammer Focus

By Brian R. Voller
Bayonet staff writer

Soldiers from 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division (Mechanized) began training in preparation for the National Training Center at Fort Irwin, Calif., Jan. 22 with Operation Hammer Focus.

The training is designed to help soldiers prepare for the opposing forces they will be facing when they deploy to the NTC for training April 26 to May 27.

"The training during Hammer Focus is designed to focus on small unit collective tasks," said Maj. Ricardo Riera, 1st Battalion, 18th Infantry Regiment. "Each platoon goes through a six-day training period. We have several platoons from 2nd Battalion, 69th Armor Regiment, and soldiers from 2nd Battalion, 18th Infantry Regiment."

The exercises include the participation of soldiers from the 1st Bn., 18th Inf. Regt.; the 2nd Bn., 18th Inf. Regt.; the 2nd Bn., 69th Armor Regt.; the 4th Battalion, 41st Field Artillery; the 317th Engineer Battalion and the 324th Forward Support Battalion.

One of the areas of concentration during Hammer Focus is platoon lane training that took place Jan. 22.

"At the assembly area, the soldiers plan for further operations," said 1st Sgt. Jeffery Ulmer, Company D, 1st Bn., 18th Inf. Regt. "We make sure they plan properly and the soldiers check all of their equipment. Once they have everything planned properly, they receive an order and move onto the next area, which is the attack area."

While at the assembly area, soldiers are given all the materials necessary to plan a proper mission. One of the things the soldiers use is a mock model of the lanes they will be running during training.

"The sand table and the lane map are good tools for training," Ulmer said. "People can walk the terrain and they can see where everything is at. Along with the different references we give them, they can plan well."

Spc. Michael Barker, gunner, 2nd Bn. 69th Armor Regt., was enthusiastic about the training he will be doing during Hammer Focus.

"I think the training is a good way to train new troops," Barker said. "It's also good for the more experienced enlisted members who can improve their skills."

After Hammer Focus is over, brigade soldiers will rest for a short period of time before they begin preparations for Victory Focus, their annual training exercise when the brigade goes to the field to sharpen its battle skills, which also will take place on Fort Benning and will be conducted from Feb 20 to Mar. 12.

Victory Focus will concentrate on battalion level force-on-force operations, which are being conducted for the first time at Fort Benning.

498th deploys to Nevada for training exercise

By Ron J. Chapman
498th Medical Company (Air Ambulance)

The 498th Medical Company (Air Ambulance), 36th Engineer Group (Combat) deployed one UH-60A to Fallon Naval Air Station, Nev., Jan. 22, to participate in a joint training exercise. The purpose of the exercise was to conduct training on joint combat search and rescue.

"This mission is extremely important because it will give us the ability to rescue downed U.S. military pilots in front of and even behind enemy lines," said Maj. Tracy O. Wyatt, commander, 498th Medical Company.

The company deployed along with one UH-60A and crew from their sister unit the 57th Medical Company (Air Ambulance) at Fort Bragg, N.C.

The two crews deployed on the 2,000-mile, three-day trip using the extended range fuel system. The flight took them across the southeast through Barksdale Air Force Base, La., and across Texas into Tucson, Ariz. The crews continued their journey up to Las Vegas, Nev., and then to Fallon Naval Air Station.

The crews will work with U.S. Air Force, Marine Corps and Navy aircrews and ground personnel while conducting this training. They will first conduct day and night orientation flights at the air station so they will be familiar with the area and flight procedures.

When the exercise begins, the crews will conduct detailed planning on a given combat search and rescue mission and then lead the rescue while simultaneously coordinating with escort aircraft, special operations forces on the ground and the actual military aircrew personnel they are going to rescue.

The aircraft are equipped with external fuel tanks, global positioning system and pilot locating system. The crews will conduct day- and night-training missions using night vision devices during night operations.

Combat development and proponency personnel from Fort Rucker, Ala., will evaluate and document the training to begin establishing Army combat search and rescue doctrine.

"The 498th is truly proud to conduct this training and will do the Army right," said Chief Warrant Officer 2 Jim Gardner, the senior aviator for the mission.

"The results of this training are very important to the future Army combat serach and resue operations and aviation doctrine," Wyatt said. "The 498th plans to execute this mission and training in the manner which is our hallmark — professionally, proficiently and safely."

VIOLENCE IN THE WORKPLACE

Seminars focus on awareness, prevention

By Anna Oleska
USAIC Public Affairs Office

Homicide is the second leading cause of death for men and the leading cause of death for women in the workplace.

During 1993, 2.2 million workers were attacked (about the population of Chicago), 6.3 million workers were threatened and 15 percent were physically assaulted at least once.

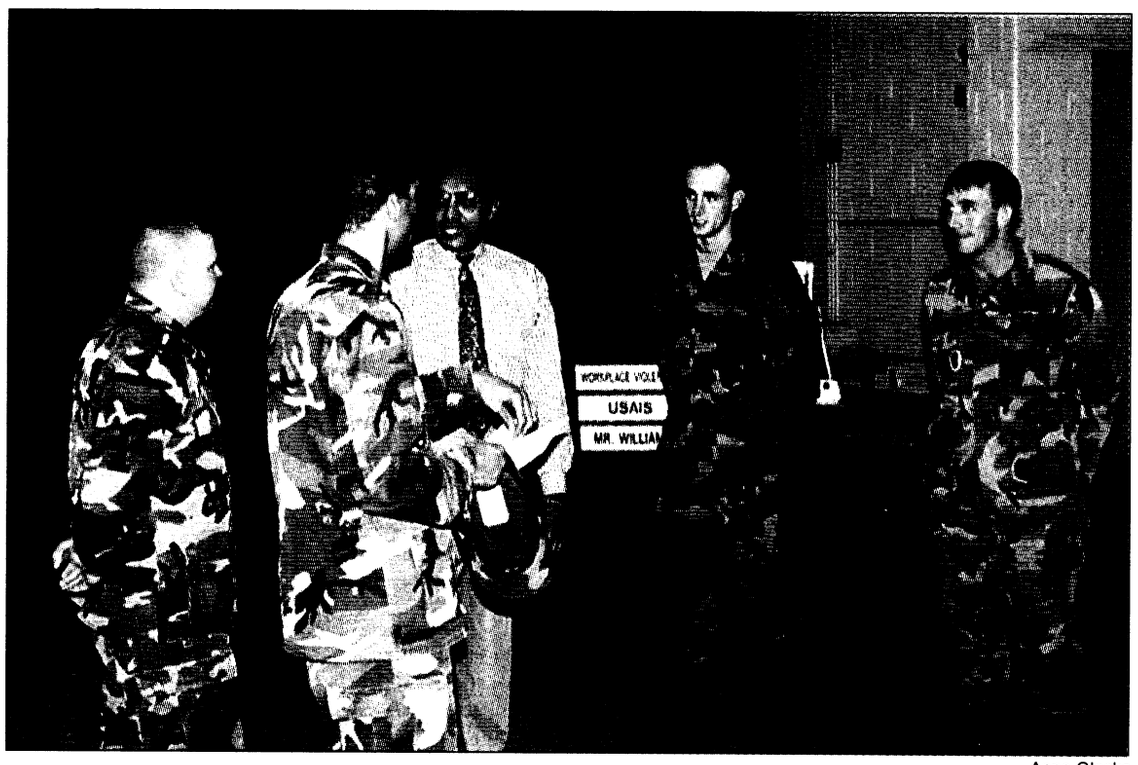
Shootings, assaults, threats and other acts of violence in the workplace were the topic of four, one-hour seminars in Infantry Hall last month.

Ellis L. Williams, training instructor, Staff Education and Training Branch, Directorate of Operations and Training was one of the facilitators.

About 600 installation civilians and military were trained.

The training was conducted because of a growing, nationwide trend toward violence in the workplace.

Millions of workers are victims of violence whether in the workplace or on the street, and millions of dollars in wages, medical bills, and other expenses are lost because of violence in the workplace, according to a crime victimization survey done by the U.S. Justice Department.



Williams said TRADOC defines violence as:

• Physical assault — hitting, pushing, kicking, holding, impeding or blocking movement of another.

• Threats against persons or property — indecent language, provoking speech or gestures, verbal intimidation, harassment, such as conduct creating a hostile or offensive environment.

• Willful damage to property — personal or government.

Many reasons are attributed to an increase in violence in the U.S. in comparison with foreign countries, Williams said. Some of those reasons are:

Anna Oleska

Ellis L. Williams (center), a training instructor from the Directorate of Operations and Training, discusses violence in the workplace with soldiers.

• Easy access to handguns and weapons

• Drugs

• Disintegration of both the family and values

• Media glamorizing violence

• Poverty

• U.S. inventing and manufacturing violent weapons

• Tolerant judicial and penal systems

• Poor economic outlook for baby boomers "me" generation.

Workplace violence has increased because of these external pressures as well as internal pressures, such as downsizing; turbulence in the workplace; an increased workload; how employees work together, such as, jealousy or resentment, which, if not monitored, can lead to workplace violence.

An escalation of violence is happening in the workplace mainly because of management's lack of awareness, concern, preventive programs or an obliviousness to the problem, said Williams.

He said that employees act out violently because of personal problems, closed communications, a distrusting environment, criminal behavior, traumatic events, internal conflict, firing or layoff, and prejudice.

There have been various installations that have had incidents of violence, Williams said. One such example was the one that happened at Chrystal City, Va. when a retired Air Force lieutenant colonel's workload increased because of downsizing. He got upset and shot his supervisor, a co-worker, then himself.

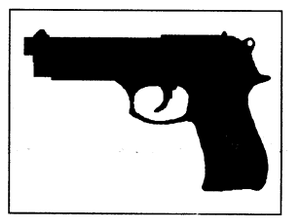
Statistics from the Bureau of Labor Statistics in the Department of Justice study showed that workplace violence is on the rise.

Violence in the workplace takes many forms. Sneering or shouting, belligerence, swearing at others, sarcasm, arguing with co-workers, mean pranks, rude behavior or gossip and uncooperativeness are considered low degrees of violence.

Verbally threatening co-workers, vandalizing facilities, engaging in sabotage, damaging property, stealing for revenge and stalking are considered moderate degrees of violence.

Murder, suicide, arson, rape, unauthorized weapons and assaulting employees and supervisors are high degrees of violence.

Our installation is not immune, according to Maj. Gen. John W. Hendrix, in a policy letter to soldiers and civilians distributed on July 10, 1995. "Every employee and soldier needs to be aware of behavior patterns, strategies to prevent threatening behaviors, and ways to reduce or avoid the possibility of violence," the policy letter read.



The purpose of the program is to work as a preventive measure for influencing a safe workplace and to protect the lives of Army family members. If problems arise, then managers can take steps to prevent them, Williams said.

If there is conflict in the workplace, it is a signal that something needs to be worked on, Williams said. Supervisors, managers and commanders can "turn conflict into cooperation," by doing certain things such as, managing by responsibility rather

Nurse Corps to celebrate anniversary

By Shannon Day
Special to The Bayonet©

The Army Nurse Corps is celebrating its 95th anniversary in February, according to Col. Roslyn D. Booker, chief of the Department of Nursing at Martin Army Community Hospital.

The corps was formally established as a permanent corps by the Army Feb. 2, 1901, under the supervision of Dr. Anita Newcomb McGee.

Although 1901 was the corps' official beginning, Booker said nurses had worked under government contract as early as the Spanish-American War.

Because of the corps' outstanding dedication and top-quality work, a bill was passed, establishing the Nurse Corps, Booker said.

At that time, all members of the corps were appointed. It wasn't until 1947 that the nurses were commissioned. All of its members were female until October 1955, when the first male was commissioned into the corps. Today about 30 percent of the corps is male.

"Nurses have been involved with every conflict since the Revolutionary War," Booker said. "However, the corps has been in conflicts from World War I to the Gulf War and now Bosnia. We have been everywhere soldiers have been."

One thing that separates the corps from civilian nursing is that the corps nurses can closely identify with ordeals military patients have been through because many know first-hand what combat situations and military life are like, Booker said, adding that is something many patients consider important.

Nurses are extremely pivotal in

OCS building rededication honors MOH recipient

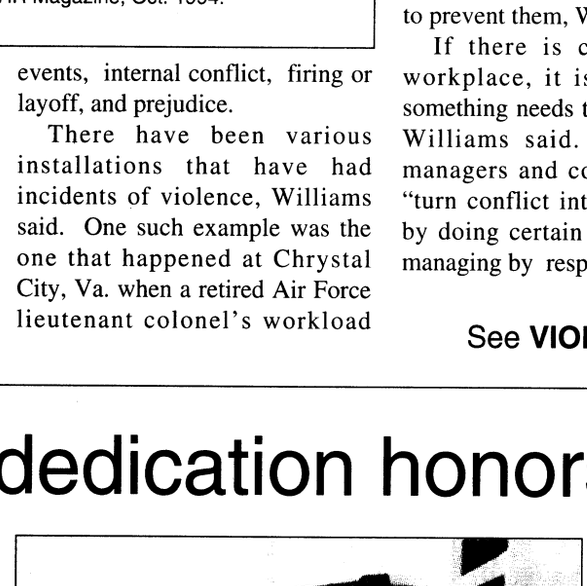
By Pam Newbern
Bayonet correspondent

The heroism and contribution of a World War II veteran and Medal of Honor recipient were acknowledged recently in the rededication of a Fort Benning building in his honor.

Retired Col. Robert B. Nett, whose courage under fire in World War II won him the nation's highest military honor, was present Jan. 30 when members of the Officer Candidate School rededicated Nett Hall in his honor.

The building had originally been named for him in 1989, but funding problems had delayed its renovation until recently when members of OCS Class 1-96 undertook the task as their class project.

"I'm sure officer candidates of the future will study here; and, as we move to the year 2000 and beyond, they will appreciate having this first-class facility to learn the art of leadership and will develop into the great leaders such as those this great institution developed in the past," Nett told an audience of more than 100.



The newly-renovated building will house the OCS Headquarters and Headquarters Company, the new "OCS store," as well as a large area for classes.

Lt. Col. Scott L. Armbrister, commander of the 3rd Battalion (OCS), 11th Infantry Regiment, praised the renovation efforts.

"One of the first things I did when I got here was put it on a list of goals — to make Nett Hall into a functioning building of which Colonel Nett would be proud to have his name on and his picture hanging in."

Working with the Directorate of Public Works, Armbrister said he was able to resurrect old work orders for materials and "refocus those assets and resources on Nett Hall.

"The 3rd Battalion committed several thousand dollars from its operating budget to get Nett Hall up to a working, functioning facility," he said.

Pam Newbern

2nd Lt. Juan Mandujano works at Nett Hall.

Between the battalion, DPW and OCS Class 1-96, work on the project began in January.

"It was astonishing what they could do," Armbrister said. "There are no words to express my gratitude to the class for what they have done for OCS and Fort Benning. They turned a totally useless building into one that is not only functional, but also first rate. I was so proud to stand up there and rededicate it."

During the rededication ceremony, Nett reminisced about the steps that led up to his association with OCS.

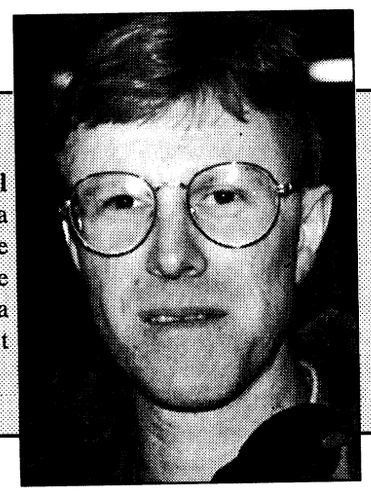
"In the South Pacific during World War II, my company commander called me into his bunker and stated, 'I'm sending you back to Officer Candidate School.' Without hesitation, I replied, 'Sir, I don't want to leave my platoon.' He replied again, 'To win this war, it will take the maximum amount of effort by every individual. It is not what you like, but what you can do to help us win. I'm sending you to Fort Benning because I know you can do the job that is necessary, and I suspect that before long, you will be on your way to higher levels and accomplishments.'"

Nett's company commander might have been psychic. Nett's career included tours of duty in Europe, Korea and Vietnam.

His home in Columbus now features a room stacked full of the awards and honors he earned during his military career. In a position of prominence hangs his Medal of Honor citation, signed by President Harry Truman.

Nett also spoke of the debt he owes to his wife, Frances. A former Army nurse, Mrs. Nett's assignments took her from Labrador to the Philippines, and her numerous awards and medals are on display on one wall of the couple's home.

During the ceremony, Nett was presented with a plaque and a thank you card by the members of OCS Class 1-96.



"I was elated by the plaque that was presented in my honor that encompasses all the branches of the service insignia," Nett said. "Again, it's a unified effort by all branches for us to be successful."

What is so important about Children's Dental Health month?

Pfc David Olin, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 1st Battalion, 18th Infantry Regiment, 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division (Mechanized) — "Some kids are born with abnormal teeth that need to be taken care of early."

Capt. John A. Boyd, Individual Deployment Site — "You've got a lot of companies who manufacture candy and sugary cereals that are targeted at children. You need a good (dental) program to counteract this."

Sgt. Jeff Roseman, Company A, 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment — "I think that it's important that children learn about dental health. If they learn how to brush right, it can cut down on dental bills."

Bessie Schumann, family member— "I believe that dental hygiene is very important. I teach my children how to brush their teeth so that they will be able to maintain them."

Cynthia Butler, family member — "Children's dental health is very important because there are 15- and 16-year-olds with false teeth because they did not take care of them when they were young.."

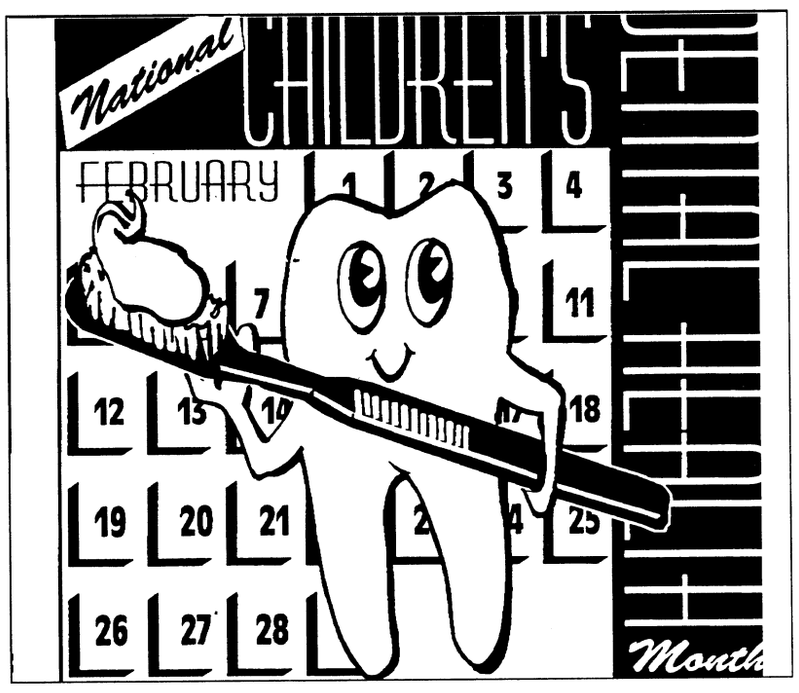
Dentists remind us an early start is key to ensuring

Children's Dental Health

By Dr. Alberto Lugo
Fort Benning Dental Activity

An early start in regular dental care is an important step on the road to total dental health.

This month, we celebrate the 47th anniversary of National Children's Dental Health Month.



Attitudes and habits established at an early age are critical in maintaining good oral health throughout life.

Dental disease is reported to be the most common bacterial disease affecting humans. This is still true despite the tremendous reductions in the incidence of caries.

Millions of individuals are still plagued by periodontal disease, missing teeth, cavities and malocclusions and caries, which could have been prevented with the aid of a daily oral hygiene and preventive program.

The question of when to begin a proactive dental program occasionally arises. One answer would be around the age of 6 months when the first teeth appear. Unfortunately, by that age some damage to the teeth of the child may have already occurred because of neglect or lack of knowledge by the parent. After all, the teeth begin forming around the age of 6 to 12 weeks post conception. Therefore, the answer is right after conception with prenatal counseling.

For many parents, putting the baby to bed with a bottle or filling his bottle with fruit juice to quiet him down seems like a natural and harmless thing to do. It is anything but harmless.

According to the American Academy of Pediatric Dentistry, 5 percent of 1-year-olds and 10 percent of 2-year-olds have tooth decay. Also we know this is responsible for the only severe caries experienced in children under 3 years of age.

Although the number of children who suffer from baby bottle tooth decay may seem small, the effects can be devastating and traumatic, requiring sedation or hospitalization for treatment. Research also shows that at any age children with baby bottle tooth decay are more likely to develop carious lesions than children who are caries free up to age 3.

Reasons not to brush given by parents include:

- It may hurt the tooth.
- My baby hates it.
- All she does is eat the toothbrush.
- It's too much trouble.

One should begin at birth with the wiping of the gum pads with a moist 2x2 gauze pad. Use of a toothbrush should begin upon eruption of the first tooth. Toothpaste is not required; infants and small children cannot effectively spit, so the use of fluoride containing toothpaste should be used sparingly, if at all.

For the most part, flossing is not required early on because of the spacing of early teeth; however, when the posterior teeth erupt and are in contacts, flossing is recommended. The parent should handle the brushing of children up to the age of 11, since children at an age earlier than this do not have the dexterity to do a good job.

Decay results from an acid build up on the susceptible tooth. The greater the acid concentration or the longer the duration, the greater the damage.

Consequently, the damage potential of foods is the result of their solubility and adhesiveness. Sticky foods that are slow to dissolve cause the greater damage. Also added to this formula would be frequency. You need to allow the oral environment time to flush the acid away, but continual meals results in continued acid formation.

Human milk has greater acid production that cow's milk because of its 7 percent lactose content as compared to 4 percent cow's milk, which also has a greater calcium, phosphorus and protein content.

In relation to breast milk, some parents practice demand feeding of the infant, which may result into 10 to 40 feedings in a 24-hour period. These parents need to provide frequent oral hygiene for the infant once the teeth begin to erupt, or the result will be nursing tooth decay.

By participation in the annual celebration of National Children's Dental Health Month, the Fort Benning Dental Activity team, parents, teachers and others can help keep children's smiles beautiful now and for years to come.

Mother realizes importance of her child's dental health

By Robin A. Shawlinski
Bayonet assistant editor

Sgt. Robin A. Shawlinski is going to teach her son how to maintain a healthy set of teeth.

Growing up, my parents taught me that brushing my teeth was very important. So important, in fact, that every night as I attempted to sneak up the stairs to go to bed, they'd yell up to me — "Robin, did you brush your teeth?"

Of course, moments later I'd be down in the bathroom brushing away at my teeth.

That was in the early days. Later on, it just became a habit to brush before school and before I went to bed.

Along with the brushing came the visits to the dentist. That was one of the many things my mother kept us up to date with. I think we went every six months.

Even at a young age, I enjoyed going to the dentist because he had a treasure chest of goodies from which we could pick a prize.

The problem came during my mid-teen years. That's when my teeth problems began. Even though I continued to brush, it was cavity after cavity.

One thing my dentist always harped on was flossing. I barely ever flossed and barely do these days. And believe me, I'm paying for it now. Just last week, I received my second root canal and still have a couple of teeth to be filled.

Being the mother of a four-month-old teething boy, my thoughts are beginning to turn toward dental hygiene.

First of all, I pray that my son, Sean has his father's teeth. My husband only has one filling and that's without flossing.

But in the case that he does have my teeth, there are a few things I am going to make sure I teach him.

The first, and to me the most obvious, is that he brush his teeth.

When I was stationed at Fort Eustis, Va., I met one set of parents whose two year old loved to brush her teeth and another set of parents who had to fight with their two year old to brush. Through talking with them, I found that the first little girl's parents had taught her to brush her teeth since she was 6 months old and the other child's parents had not.

That may or may not have been the reason, but it convinced me that I had to start early with my son.

Second, and most importantly, I want to teach my son about flossing. How I'm going to do that I'm not sure. But I do know that I'm going to have to start flossing my own teeth before I can demand that he floss his.

While I've got some time to get into a consistent habit of flossing, I'll start his brushing soon.

PROCLAMATION

Whereas, the future is, to a large measure, dependent on the good health of our families;

Whereas, good health can be achieved in part through good dental habits learned early and reinforced throughout life;

Be it resolved, that I, Maj. Gen. John W. Hendrix, commanding general of the U.S. Army Infantry Center and Fort Benning, thereby proclaim the month of February as Children's Dental Health Month, and urge all citizens to join in this observation.

VIOLENCE: Class teaches workplace awareness, prevention than by control, as one among several steps.

"Happy, productive workplaces are not conflict-free, but are workplaces actively facing and solving problems," said Yvonne Wilbanks, certified employee assistance professional in Civilian Counseling Services at the Directorate of Community Activities. "At Fort Benning, we have a stable workforce. If there are issues, they're dealt with appropriately. When things surface, they're referred to the various services we provide."

Wilbanks said there are various groups available to solve problems or prevent violence or conflict. They are:

- Employee Assistance Program — available to local employees at Civilian Counseling Services to help employees and their families.
- Occupational Health — available for blood pressure screening, arranging required physical examinations and similar matters.
- Outplacement Counseling — available at the Directorate of Civilian Personnel to help employees get other jobs or transition into new jobs when there is a reduction in force.
- Task-force for the Prevention of Violence — a number of people who get together from the various units to develop big picture programs like the seminar on "Respectful Workplace."
- Civilian Injury Reduction Team — A group that looks at various aspects of the post as a whole to make it a safer place to work. The group examines injuries, including stress-related injuries and provides remedies.

Ways of handling conflict

The most effective way to handle conflict or violence in the workplace is for supervisors to have a more caring attitude because everyone is under more stress these days, said Wilbanks. This helps employees to cooperate.

Employees can also help themselves, she said, by making sure they handle the stress in their lives. They can do this by taking care of themselves, by eating right, exercising, taking care of their health problems and following their doctors' advice. If they do these basic things rather than letting themselves be overwhelmed with problems, they can do a lot to help themselves, Wilbanks said.

Recognize and report conflict

Employees often know of a problem employee yet management doesn't. If a threat of violence comes up in the workplace or if an employee suspects a co-worker is capable of violence, he or she can report it or any incident that occurs either to a supervisor or to a hot line (anonymously at TRADOC) at DSN 727-2758, or to the local hotline at 545-5222 (non-emergency Military Police) and 911 (emergency Military Police), said Williams.

There are some warning signs of workplace violence, he said.

- Direct or veiled verbal threats of harm
- Intimidation of others
- Fascination with incidents of violence in the workplace
- Concealing or flashing a weapon
- Fascination with instilling fear in individuals.

There are reporting procedures soldiers and civilians can take, he said. They are:

- Specify and document the behavior
- Report to supervisors, directors, commanders
- Report in person or by phone to the hot line or the Military Police or the Directorate of Civilian Personnel.

When you report an incident, the following will occur:

- The supervisor will evaluate the situation.
- Positive action will be taken.

"If one person in the office is creating a negative atmosphere, one person can create a positive one," Wilbanks said. "One person can make a difference either way. Focus on what's right."

If a situation gets out of hand, it's best to contact Military Police Activity, Directorate of Civilian Personnel, Medical Activity, or Civilian Counseling Services, she said.

People who are stressed out can contact Civilian Counseling Services or their doctor.

Services available to help

Commanders, managers and supervisors need to have an ongoing program or policy in place for preventing violence and for influencing a respectful workplace, said Williams.

The TRADOC seminars detailed some of the policies that are available to all government employees: training and support services; open and candid communications; a no-tolerance-for-violence policy; and, reporting procedures. Soldiers have these services available, too, and can also contact the chaplain and Community Mental Health on post.

In the civilian sector, similarly many companies have a policy of no tolerance for violence.

"The best policy is zero tolerance, that is, no type of intimidation or harassment, or there will be disciplinary action, even termination," said Mark Strunk, an employee assistance representative at the Pastoral Institute in Columbus. That is, to say that people will be respected regardless of color, gender and religion. No harassing anyone with a difference is the best policy, he said.

Other support services available at Fort Benning are:

- the chaplain
- Civilian Counseling Services (confidential)
- Military Police
- Army Family Advocacy
- Civilian Personnell
- The Emergency Room
- Casualty Operations.

Strunk said that part of a policy to prevent conflict or violence in the workplace should be for the employer to offer training in communication skills within the scope of normal training. The workplace should do training on diversity and let it be known to people hired that this is the company's stance, said Strunk.

"Sometimes an employee doesn't know he's doing something harrassing," Williams said. "It's important to make employees aware of substance abuse and harrassment issues."

Strunk said that where violence occurs, often substance abuse is a corollary.

"The employer has to educate employees as to their rights and responsibilities," Strunk said. "This is what's tolerated and what's not. Spell out what's expected at the workplace."

Informed people usually perform better, Williams said, and a safe workplace environment prevents violence. Managers and supervisors who show respect, trust, open communications and concern for employees create a harmonious and safe workplace environment, he said. A caring, concerned workforce is the best preventive measure against violence, Williams said.

New traffic signs to be posted

In an effort to ease traffic flow and better serve the patrons of Fort Benning, several changes are being made to existing traffic control devices.

The Directorate of Public Safety and the Directorate of Public Works are working together to figure out the best way to move traffic around the installation, especially the Main Post area.

So far, the following changes have been made:

- "Stop" sign at Holtz and Burr changed to "Yield" sign
- "Stop" sign at Chesney and Burr changed to "Yield" sign
- "Stop" sign at Indianhead and Merchant changed to "Yield" sign
- "Stop" signs on Moye and 11th Airborne Division removed

A traffic study is currently under way at Edwards and Burr streets to evaluate the feasibility of changing this light to a two-way stop.

All drivers on Fort Benning should be made aware of and adhere to the posted traffic control devices.

Drill Sergeant School classes combined

Drill Sergeant School Class 3-96 and Class 4-96 have been combined into Class 4-96. Graduation for Class 4-96 will be March 15.

For more information, call Master Sgt. Jackie McGriff, commandant, Drill Sergeant School, at 544-8173 or 54-8176.

Hospital to require SSNs for patients

Martin Army Community Hospital's computer data base will be updated during February.

The new version, which will be in operation Feb. 24, requires Social Security numbers for all patients to include children and infants for registration purposes.

While patients not possessing this data will not be refused care, some delay could occur if the Social Security numbers are not readily available.

Tax Office opens

The Fort Benning Tax Office opened Wednesday. The office is located in Building 2640 at Soldiers' Plaza and will be open Monday through Friday, from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

Electronic tax filing is available for most federal returns. The office has many federal and state tax forms available.

Unit tax advisers have also been appointed for units throughout the post. Persons having tax questions should see their unit tax adviser first.

For more information, call Capt. Scott L. Frost at 545-3281.

Controlled burning set

Controlled burning of woodland areas will take place through Feb. 17. If weather permits, the following compartments will be affected: A-6, A-9, B-3, B-5, C-2, D-7, D-16, E-3, E-5, F-2, G-1, G-4, H-1, I-2, I-4, J-5, K-1, K-6, K-13, L-4, M-7, O-1, O-4, O-7, O-13, Q-1, Q-5, U-1, U-5, Z-2 and BB-5.

Burning will occur in pine stands within these compartments to enhance endangered species' habitat and training areas. Personnel proposing to use these areas for recreational purposes must vacate these areas prior to 9:30 a.m. daily.

Training units using compartments adjacent to those listed above may experience drift smoke and are reminded to exercise caution while travelling in these areas due to the potential for reduced visibility.

Units using ranges and training areas are reminded to remove flammable debris, such as pinestraw, leaves, grass and trash from around structures in accordance with U.S. Army Infantry Center Regulation 210-4, Paragraph 5-22, Organizational Maintenance.

For more information, call Jack Greenlee, Natural Resources Management Branch, at 544-6206.

CID seeks assistance

The U.S. Army Criminal Investigation Division is offering a $150 reward for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the person(s) responsible for removal of five gas powered leaf blowers; six gas powered weed eaters; three gas powered hedge trimmers; one gas powered lawn mower; one cordless drill; one circular saw; a 200-piece tool set and one wrench set from Building 1198. The items are valued at $3,848.90.

A $300 reward for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the person(s) responsible for a larceny that occurred between 5 p.m. Jan. 5 and 9:30 a.m. Jan. 8.

Someone entered Building 2755A on post and removed three central processing units, two monitors and one computer printer.

Anyone with information concerning this incident can contact J. Taylor at 545-7950 or 545-7052 or the Military Police at 545-5222.

CID is also asking for any information leading to the arrest and conviction of the person(s) responsible for forgery and larceny that occurred between 2:20 p.m. Nov. 16 and 10:10 p.m. Nov. 17 at 154 Derrickson Street and the Post Exchange at the Main Mall.

Unknown persons removed several discarded checks from a trash can, then forged and negotiated the checks at the Post Exchange at the Main Mall.

The assistance of the local community is being requested in an effort to identify and apprehend the perpetrator(s). The identity of anyone providing information will be strictly confidential.

ROTC scholarships are still available

The Columbus College Reserve Officers' Training Corps still has scholarships available for eligible soldiers. The application deadline is March 15.

For information on how to earn a college degree, a commission as a second lieutenant and have the Army pay for all of your college education, call Maj. Brian Luedtke, Capt. Sheila Denham or 2nd Lt. Angela Soto at 568-2058.

Registration rules set

The Chattahoochee County Tax Commissioner's Office will accept only cash and money orders as payment for 1996 motor vehicle registration.

The Tax Office will no longer accept personal checks as payment.

Soldiers who are stationed at Fort Benning but are not Georgia residents may avoid the payment of the ad valorem tax.

To avoid the tax, soldiers must obtain an ad valorem exemption form for each vehicle to be registered from the Fort Benning Office of the Staff Judge Advocate, Building 5, located on the corner of Vibbert and Sigerfoos avenues on Main Post.

The soldier must bring a leave and earnings statement from the past three months, proof of insurance, his or her military identification card and the previous year's paperwork. Call 545-3281.

Actor to lead salute to hospitalized vets

Department of Veterans Affairs

Television and film actor Barry Corbin, a Marine Corps veteran, will serve as national chairman of the 1996 Department of Veterans Affairs national salute to hospitalized veterans.

The national salute observance, begun in 1974, is conducted annually at VA's 172 hospitals, nursing homes and clinics, as well as state veterans homes during the week of Valentine's Day, Sunday to Feb. 17.

Corbin, best known for his portrayal of the astronaut on the popular television series "Northern Exposure," will visit hospitalized veterans across the country that week and at other times throughout the year.

He also is inviting the public to follow his example by visiting hospitalized veterans in local VA medical facilities and state veterans homes, and to join the more than 90,000 Americans who volunteer at VA hospitals and clinics throughout the year. This year marks the 50th anniversary of VA's voluntary service program.

"We are proud that Barry has joined the VA team as national salute chairman," said Jesse Brown, secretary of Veterans Affairs. "As a fellow veteran, he knows the importance of expressing honor and gratitude to those who have served our country."

Born in Lamesa, Texas, Corbin said he grew up with a fascination for the Old West. As a teen-ager, he decided to become an actor so he could portray the legendary cowboys he idolized.

He studied acting at Texas Tech, and from there went on to serve two years in the U.S. Marine Corps. Back in civilian life, he resumed his acting career, performing in regional theater for three years.

DPS/MPA to say farewell to Alton

By Lisa M. Hibbert
Bayonet staff writer

The Directorate of Public Safety and Military Police Activity will have a change of command ceremony 10 a.m. Feb. 29 at York Field, Building 4.

The outgoing provost marshal is Col. Ronnie D. Alton. Alton, who has served Fort Benning since 1994, will retire from service April 1.

His military decorations include the Legion of Merit with one oak leaf cluster; Bronze Star Medal; Defense Meritorious Service Medal and the Army Commendation Medal with two oak leaf clusters.

The incoming commander is Col. Thomas J. Cain. Cain is a native of Burlington, Vt., and a graduate of the University of Vermont.

His previous assignments include senior Army adviser for the Massachusetts Army National Guard; chief of staff, Fort Devens, Mass.; commander, Fort Eustis Law Enforcement Command; and provost marshal, Fort Devens.

Cain and his wife, Cindy, have two children. One son, Pfc. Justin Cain, 437th Military Police Company, Fort Belvoir, Va., and one daughter, Elizabeth.

day-to-day health care at Fort Benning, Booker said. They are involved in almost every area in inpatient units and clinics at the hospital and the outlying family practice clinics. They provide compassion and caring, which is critical to patient outcomes, she said.

"I am proud to be a member of the Army Nurse Corps," Booker said. "It is a very professional organization that has excelled in fields of administration, education, research and quality clinical care. It was also the first to require its members to have a bachelor's degree in nursing as a prerequisite for commissioning."

To celebrate the anniversary, the corps will have a brunch Feb. 11 at 11 a.m. at the Fort Benning Golf Course Banquet Room. The guest speaker will be Col. Susan McCall, assistant chief, Army Nurse Corps.

JAC begins 1996 Career Day program

By Mary Allen
Army Career and Alumni Program

As patrons enter the Job Assistance Center, they will note hundreds of colorful stars that represent some of the success stories of clients who have achieved their job-search objectives as they transitioned from the Army at Fort Benning.

Many of these success stories were a result of regularly scheduled Career Days at the Fort Benning JAC.

The Army Career and Alumni Program Job Assistance Center has begun its 1996 Career Day program.

Career Day 1996 kicked off Thursday with 12 nationwide trucking firms that were actively recruiting drivers, mechanics and terminal managers.

Career Day will continue Feb. 22 with a variety of companies that are on the search for managers. A few companies that will be represented are West Building Supply, Racetrac Petroleum, Sears, Liberty National, Waffle House, Orkin Pest Control and University of Central Florida.

If you are getting out of the Army in the next few months and are interested in researching or applying for management type positions, call 545-2308 or 545-2309 to register for this event.

Some other highlights during February are:

• Education Opportunity Center — David Sutcliff from the U.S. Department of Education will be present at the JAC every Wednesday from 9 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. to assist service members who are interested in continuing their education.

• Sutcliff has a computer program with information on colleges and technical schools throughout the country. The information includes cost, admission requirements, length of course, scholarship and grant opportunities and a wide range of other items of interest.

• Small Business Development Seminar — The Fort Benning JAC continues to host the University of Georgia Small Business Development Seminar the third Thursday of the month. Michael Elliot, a small business consultant, conducts a three-hour seminar at no cost.

• Hot Leads (current job listings) — nationwide and local leads continue to expand in numbers and quality. A check of the hot lead status Feb. 5 showed that the Army Employer Alumni Network Hot Lead Program contained 5,008 active leads nationwide.

Free seminar for retiring, ETSing soldiers

Army Career and Alumni Program

A Washington lecturer and author on career transition from military to civilian employment will be at Fort Benning March 1 in the Infantry Hall, Classroom 30, from 9 to 11 a.m. to talk to officers, senior noncommissioned officers and spouses on "Marketing Yourself for a Second Career."

Retired Col. Jerry Crews, deputy director of the Officer Placement Service for The Retired Officers Association, travels nationwide addressing military audiences composed of people who are nearly retirement, being involuntarily separated or opting to leave military service.

The lecture is open to all military personnel and their spouses. The first 200 participants will receive a free copy of the publication, "Marketing Yourself for a Second Career."

In his free two-hour presentation, Crews will introduce the audience to the realities of the competition in the civilian job market; the perceptions civilian employers have of military personnel; how to plan for the job search; tips for strengthening the resume (to include how employers read a resume); networking; preparing for and conducting a successful interview; salary and benefit packages; and rejection.

Crews said he doesn't promise an individual instant job search success, but guarantees that each person who attends his lecture will profit from the knowledge gained and will be ready to move in the right direction toward that second career.

The lecture has been continually praised by attendees for its content and delivery. Crews provides information for every attendee and provides insights into the transition, which are unique and hard-biting.

Military members and their spouses will have an opportunity to ask questions.

The Retired Officers Association sponsors these lectures, which in 1994 were presented to over 15,000 personnel at 107 military installations throughout the United States and Europe.

For more information, call Mary Allen at 545-4892 or 545-7009.

Risk Management

The U.S. Army Infantry Center Sergeants Major Risk Management Process Action Team was established in an attempt to reduce the number of injuries to Fort Benning soldiers. The purpose of the team is to re-enforce the role of of the noncommissioned officer in all aspects of safety.
The following is a list of objectives and goals.

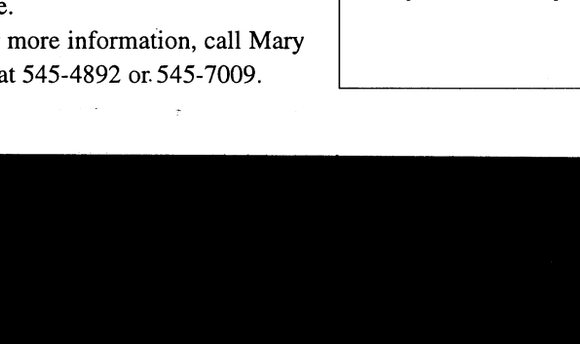
Goal no. 1

Noncommissioned officers will ensure all high risk training is conducted safely

Objectives

1. High risk training (training with the potential for serious injury, death or destruction of equipment) will be identified and fully assessed. The assessment will address all possible courses of action and will ensure all safety measures and requirements are in place. Risk management work sheets will be completed and approved for all high risk training.

2. NCOs will ensure that instructor personnel/unit noncommissioned officers and cadre are safety certified for all high-risk training being conducted and that appropriate safety classes are attended prior to training.



3. During all live-fire training, procedures for the storage, transportation and handling of weapons and ammunition will be strictly enforced. Weapons and ammunition will be protected from the elements.

4. NCOs will brief all soldiers on medical evacuation procedures for day/night, ground, air and water operations. Emergency radio frequencies and telephone numbers will be distributed to all NCOs and radio operators. All NCOs will know standard phone and standard MEDEVAC frequency.

5. NCOs will ensure that all power projection operations (rail loading, ship loading, aircraft loading and convoy movements) will be closely supervised to ensure aggressive safety measures are adhered to and any deficiency immediately corrected.

BLACK HISTORY MONTH

Fort Benning celebrates diverse cultures

Photos by Amy Durham/Special to the Bayonet

Artist Annie Greene shares her creative secrets with Jeremy Williams, 8, and Chiquita Ross, 8.

By Amy Durham
Special to The Bayonet©

Neither the constant pouring of rain nor the dull cover of clouds could dampen the spirit that permeated two classrooms at Richard G. Wilson School last Friday.

Presentations by husband-and-wife team Oliver and Annie Greene kicked off a month-long celebration of Black History Month in the Fort Benning Schools.

Students from Richard G. Wilson School's kindergarten, first- and second-grade classes joined in an animated, hand-clapping and group-singing story-telling session with Oliver Greene, who served 37 years as a principal.

Greene read the story, "Willie Needs Hugs," using the story to teach children the importance of believing in themselves, even when others may not.

"You can't be beautiful if you don't believe you're beautiful," he said. "You have to believe in yourself."

Greene also read a poem he wrote about the influence of drugs on children in America. He stressed to the class members the importance of staying away from such harmful influences.

Finally, Greene's prominent baritone voice led the children in a sing-along with songs slaves used to sing in the fields.

Just down the hall, Annie Greene showed some of her art work depicting African Americans in everyday life. A retired art teacher, Mrs. Greene explained to the children the many ways her ideas are generated and the many ways she presents her ideas in art.

"I use my imagination or recall what I saw and heard as a child to create my art," she said.

Stressing to the young audience, the need to explore their imaginations, Mrs. Greene described how the popular art pieces, a hamburger, hotdog and plate of eggs and toast were created by discarded items found around any home. The artist explained that anything from paper towels, to paper towel rolls could be used to create the pieces.

As Oliver and Annie Greene spoke to the children, the two reminded the young students of the importance surrounding Black History Month.

"We are recalling achievements made by blacks to the development of America," Annie Greene said. "We can work together, young and old, black and white," she said.

Students from all the Fort Benning Schools will be participating in various activities to honor African Americans and to learn about the contributions of blacks in this country.

Speaker shares words of wisdom to make ceremony a success

Fort Benning kicked off Black History Month Feb. 2 with a program in Marshall Auditorium.

The festivities were opened by the Stowers Elementary School Chorus. The third-, fourth- and fifth-grade students enacted their second selection, a song called "Love in Every Language, Pulls us Together," by using sign language. Their second selection was lead off by three female soloists.

The guest speaker for the day was Sgt. Maj. Brenda J. Bryant, Material Maintenance Division, Fort Stewart, Ga.

She commented about the signing of the Stowers Elementary School.

"When I saw those three young ladies signing, I saw the (future) president of the United States, the vice president and the chief of staff of the Army," she said.

Sticking to the Department of Defense theme for Black History Month, "African-American Women — Yesterday, Today and Tomorrow," Bryant touched on the accomplishments of many people, including herself.

"In 1970 I gave birth to a son," Bryant said. "I was a single mother who lived in the projects and was on welfare."

"I was granted a scholarship to attend Oral Roberts University, which I almost turned down because of my situation," Bryant said. "But, I accepted (it) because I knew that there had to be a better life out there for me and my son."

"After seeing my first Army commercial, I decided that I wanted to be all that I could be, so in 1975 I enlisted in the Kansas National Guard," Bryant said.

"In 1976, I joined the regular Army as a track vehicle mechanic.

Fort Benning and the surrounding community will sponsor several programs commemorating Black History Month that will be open to the public.

The Directorate of Logistics will sponsor a Black History Month program Tuesday from 11:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. at the Main NCO Club.

Ann Caggin, human resource manager for the Columbus Consolidated Government, will be the featured speaker.

Admission is $6 and a menu of fried chicken or roast beef, steamed rice, collard greens, cornbread or rolls, and tea or coffee will be served.

For more information, call Joyce Richburg at 544-9300.

The Directorate of Information Management will sponsor its Black History Month program Thursday from 11:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. in the Fort Benning Officers' Club, Supper Club.

Gwendolyn Ruff, affirmative action officer, Synovus Inc., will be the featured speaker.

Tickets are $6.60 and lunch will be served.

For more information, call Susan Goshea at 545-3211 or Marsye Nelson at 545-2662.

Some off-post activities scheduled are:

• Metro-Columbus Urban League and Springer Youth Theater will take the show on the road Saturday. The Springer Theater will take a show and production to Faith Tabernacle Church to give youth a chance to work with professionals to produce and act in a performance. For more information, call Paul Pierce at 324-5714.

• Sistagraphy, a collective of photographers will present, "From the Soul," a photographic exhibit highlighting music through the eyes of black women photographers. The exhibit will run from Saturday to Feb. 25 at the Delta Sigma Theta House, 1127 Brown Ave., Columbus.

A reception for the artists will be Saturday from 7 to 8:30 p.m. The exhibit is free and open to the public.

For more information, call 545-3436.

• The Columbus Black History Committee will host a breakfast at the Columbus Iron Works Convention and Trade Center at 7:30 a.m. Feb. 19. The guest speaker will be Sen. Carol Mosely-Braun.

Tickets are $25 and the proceeds will go to benefit the House of Mercy.

For more information, call Dr. Henry Cook at 322-3218 or Margaret Dawson at 298-1580.

• The Metro-Columbus Urban League will sponsor the Ebony Fashion Show at the Three Arts Theater Feb. 22 at 8 p.m. Tickets are $20 for adults and $12 for students.

For more information, call Ellis Dandy at 545-3465 or Teena Delgado at 569-6471.

Preventive tips help parents baby infants' teeth

Fort Benning Dental Activity

First-time parents may not realize the importance of caring for their infant's primary teeth. However, the American Dental Association cautions parents that serious tooth decay may develop by the child's first birthday.

Even though the child's primary teeth will eventually be replaced with permanent ones, the primary teeth are critical for proper chewing, speaking and appearance.

Baby bottle tooth decay is a condition that destroys the primary teeth of an infant or young child. It can develop when a baby frequently is given a bottle of milk, formula, fruit juice or sweetened liquids to serve as a pacifier.

It may result when the child often is allowed to fall asleep with a bottle during naps or at bedtime. Prolonged breast-feeding may also cause this condition. Although the teeth most likely to be damaged are the upper front teeth, other teeth may be affected.

Tooth decay is caused by bacteria, which are present in a thin film of plaque that constantly forms on the teeth. The bacteria use sugar as an energy source. In the process, the bacteria produce acids that attack tooth enamel. Frequent, lengthy exposure to sugary liquid can result in acids attacking the child's teeth. After many such attacks, tooth decay can occur.

All types of sugars, including those found in bottle and breast milk, formula, fruit juices and sweetened liquids can cause plaque bacteria to produce decay-causing acids. How often a child receives a bottle containing these liquids and for how long a time the child's teeth are exposed to decay-causing acids are two important factors.

The American Dental Association recommends parents help protect their babies teeth by doing the following:

• After each feeding, wipe the child's teeth and gums with a clean, damp washcloth or gauze pad, to remove plaque. Begin brushing your child's teeth as soon as the first tooth erupts (around 6 months). Continue cleaning and massaging gums in all other areas that remain toothless.

• Never allow your child to fall asleep with a milk bottle, formula, fruit juices or sweetened liquid.

• If your child needs a comforter between regular feedings, at night or during naps, fill a nursing bottle with cool water or give the child a clean pacifier recommended by your dentist or pediatrician. Never give a child a pacifier dipped in any sweet liquid.

• Avoid filling a nursing bottle with liquids such as sugar water, sweetened gelatin or soft drinks.

• Make sure your child gets the fluoride needed for decay-resistant teeth. Ask your dentist about recommended methods for obtaining the proper amount of fluoride.

• Schedule regular checkups beginning by the child's first birthday.

Students plan tree planting for Arbor Day

By Shannon Day
Special to The Bayonet©

An Arbor Day ceremony will be conducted in front of Edward A. White Elementary School Feb. 16 at 10 a.m.

Winning students from White's annual Arbor Day poem and essay contest will read what they have written during the ceremony, said Louis H.V. Wilson, operations branch chief, Department of Public Works.

The students will then assist Col. Richard L. Rutledge, garrison commander at Fort Benning, in planting a tree in front of the school. Rutledge will then present certificates to the students.

In ancient times, people planted trees during religious ceremonies, and sometimes when a child was born, said Wilson.

The first Arbor Day observance took place more than 110 years ago in what was then the Nebraska Territory.

Today, Arbor Day is celebrated in almost every state. Arbor Day was officially created in Georgia by the General Assembly in 1941.

Ceremony: wisdom shared

It was a difficult time because there were not many women in that field and my male supervisors did not know how to deal with me," she said.

Today, after working her way through the ranks for nearly 20 years, Bryant has attained the rank of sergeant major and is the first female sergeant major of the Material Maintenance Division.

She commented about how some male soldiers often stop and stare at her because there are not many females with her rank.

"A Fort Benning soldier came up to me and touched my sleave and asked, 'Is that real?'" Bryant said. "He seemed amazed that I am a sergeant major."

In closing, Bryant talked about what an honor it would be for her to meet the commander in chief. She also mentioned a few questions she would ask him.

"It is with pride that I will serve my country and it is with honor that I will die for my country, but will I ever be able to live with respect in my country?"

Just as Bryant saw potential in the three female soloists, the audience looked at the stage and envisioned perhaps the first female sergeant major of the Army although her goal is to become the first female Sgt. Maj. of Fort Stewart.

"I want to be the first female sergeant major at Fort Stewart," she said.

Also on the program were "The Singing Firemen and Company," a group of Fort Benning firemen who moved the audience with their renditions of "Precious Lord" and "I am a Living Testimony."

Three female soldiers from 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division, wowed the audience with their portrayals of African-American women. Harriet Tubman, better known as "Grandma Moses," Rosa Parks and Maya Angelou were brought to life as the soldiers enacted memorable parts of the women's lives.

Commenting about the Department of Defense's theme, established by President Bill Clinton, of African-American women and how this is the first time that women have been singled out during black history month, Bryant said she was pleased.

"The contributions of African-American women are amazing and I am glad the the Department of Defense took the time to acknowledge us," Bryant said.

Celebrating service

Army Emergency Relief, an Army Community Service program, reached its 54th year last Monday. To celebrate, AER staff members provided birthday cake for shoppers at the Post Exchange at the Main Mall. Alfonso J. Deane, AER officer, shares cake with Vicki Odle, her two-year-old daughter, Amanda, and Shalonda Stafford. AER continues to serve the military community in a big way. Since it was established in 1942, AER has helped more than 2 million Army people with more than $550 million. In 1995, AER assisted 58,000 Army people with more than $30 million. In 1995, Fort Benning AER assisted clients with $653,584.20 in loans and $70,989.07 in grants; the two totaling $724,573.27 in aid provided to soldiers, retirees, family members and widow(er)s or orphans of deceased military personnel.

afap update

Directorate of Community Activities

As part of the ongoing commitment to improve the quality of life for the total Army family, last year's Army Family Action Plan issues have been resolved by post officials.

The plan is the management tool used to implement issues and give policy guidance. It identifies concerns of the Army family, determines actions required and assigns responsibility to implement actions to resolve the issues.

The most recent AFAP symposium was conducted in April. Since that time, installation agencies have worked to resolve many of the issues addressed at the symposium.

Action agency: Commissary

Issue: Retention of Commissary benefits. The installation needs to maintain or improve the current level of service available.

Response: The Commissary is continuously coming up with ways to improve customer service. A "Customer Service" desk has been established at the entrance of the sales floor to give customers personal attention. Customer surveys are given to customers to document their waiting time for checkout service. The Commissary officer attends town hall meetings, spouse orientation and provides handouts at the Customer Service Desk describing the benefits of the Commissary. A computer monitor that continuously outlines the benefits is located at the identification desk.

Issue: Courtesy in the Commissary. Good customer service skills are essential for those individuals who serve the public and encourages patrons to come back.

Response: Customer service training is provided regularly. Customer comment cards are located at the Customer Service Desk and in the queuing line. The card can be filled out and given to the attendant at the Customer Service Desk or the manager on duty. Employee incentives are in place, and those employees who demonstrate extra efforts will be rewarded.

b. The employee of the quarter, Commissary Officer's Blue Chip Award, and on-the-spot awards have allowed employees to receive compensated time off and cash.

Families can obtain Social Security numbers on post

SSN info

Who: Fort Benning families who need Social Security numbers for family members

When: Feb. 22 from10 a.m. to 2 p.m.

Where: Main Post Chapel, Building 101, next to Doughboy Stadium at the corner of Brockman and Lauber Streets

Federal tax laws require that every person in the United States, age 1 or older, have a Social Security number before that person can be claimed as a dependent on a tax return. Failure to include a SSN on your tax return will keep you from receiving the deduction for that dependent.

To assist Fort Benning families in obtaining numbers for their family members, the Legal Assistance Division of the Office of the Staff Judge Advocate has arranged for the Social Security Administration to accept applications on post Feb. 22. Applications will be accepted between 10 a.m. and 2 p.m. at the Main Post Chapel, Building 101.

Applicants must bring a certified copy of the birth certificate and some other type of identification, such as a driver's license, U.S. passport, voter registration card, school records or shot records of the person for whom the number will be obtained.

Q: I'm beginning to have problems with my car, and I suspect there's something wrong with the transmission. I hear that transmission repairs can be costly. When choosing a garage, is there anything I should be looking for?

A: Diagnosing a transmission problem can be quite difficult, particularly with automatic transmissions because it is, for the most part, a sealed unit.

If the trouble requires rebuilding or replacing the transmission, it can be very costly, depending on the make of the vehicle. As a result, it pays to be very careful when choosing a mechanic and reaching an agreement about the work.

Open up the Yellow Pages and you will see a number of transmission shops that advertise "free" tests or checks. The free tests do not involve taking out the transmission or opening it up, and in many cases, the only way a mechanic can tell if a rebuild or replacement is necessary is to actually remove the transmission and open it.

You should be aware that most transmission shops will charge a fee for that service, ranging from $200 and up. When you take your car in, you should insist on a written contract that specifies exactly what work the shop will perform and exactly how much it will cost.

Therefore, if you are trying to get information on what the problem is and how much it will cost to fix it, your contract should specify only that the shop will remove the transmission and open it for diagnosis, the cost for that service, and that they will then notify you of the nature of the problem and the estimate of the cost of repair.

You should insist that they will not perform any repair work until you have specifically authorized it in writing. Do not agree that work can be authorized by telephone. If you agree to allow the shop to proceed with repairs, make sure you understand the cost of the repairs, the time it will require to complete them and how payment is to be made. Usually, payment is required on completion of the service. Be aware that if you don't pay the repair cost promptly after completion, and you leave your vehicle at the shop for even as much as a day after they notify you that it's finished, the shop may charge storage charges.

Some shops offer financing. If you are considering this, again, make sure that the financing agreement is in writing before the work begins. The main point is that any agreement between you and the shop should be in writing and include your complete understanding about what's going to happen to your vehicle and what it will cost.

Should you have a legal problem of this nature, contact the Legal Assistance Office for an appointment at 545-3281.

Assistance available for crime victims

By George R. Smawley
Office of the Staff Judge Advocate

Today, America is 12 times more violent than it was 25 years ago. We have learned and relearned of the ever-present disbelief that confounds and confronts victims when they realize they have been violated.

Words such as "stunned," "shocked" and "dazed" pepper the vocabulary of victims. Many people have experienced or been exposed to the confusion and frustration faced by victims when they cannot understand what is happening or how to seek help, even when it is available.

The Victim and Witness Assistance Program at Fort Benning is designed to assist individuals affected by crime. The program is a coordinated effort by several agencies including the Office of the Staff Judge Advocate, the Chaplain's Family Life Center, Social Work Services, the Directorate of Public Safety and the Criminal Investigation Division. Its purpose is to help crime victims identify the agencies and resources available to assist them in dealing with the effects of victimization.

The multidisciplinary agencies involved in the program are dedicated to helping all victims of crime, including those involving domestic violence, sexual assault and theft of private property, take advantage of the benefits available through service providers at Fort Benning and the local community.

These benefits include legal advice, personal and family counseling, short-term financial assistance and information on compensation through the Claims Office and the Georgia Victims Compensation Fund.

Under the provisions of the "Victims' Rights and Restitution Act of 1990," crime victims have a series of rights, including the right to have the military justice system explained; to be notified of all court proceedings; to information regarding conviction, sentencing and release from prison; to receive all available financial restitution and to be reasonably protected from offenders.

The purpose of the act is to make certain that victims and witnesses of crimes do not become lost in the criminal justice system and that they be treated with dignity and understanding. Particular attention will be paid to victims of serious, violent crimes, including child abuse, domestic violence and sexual misconduct.

In terms of the military justice system, assistance begins at the time of arrest and continues through the pre-trial, trial, sentencing and confinement phases. The idea is to make the victim understand that he or she is an important part of the system and that the military community will do everything to alleviate and mitigate the trauma of victimization.

For more information, individuals may contact any one of the organizations mentioned above for assistance or call the Victim and Witness Liaison Officer, Office of the Staff Judge Advocate, directly at 545-7842 or 545-1574.

Following these tips can help you protect yourself

USA News

Many business travelers tend to take safety for granted because their attention is focused elsewhere.

Whether on the road, at the airport or at the hotel, you can reduce your chances of becoming a crime victim by staying alert while traveling.

According to the National Crime Prevention Council, you should watch out for staged mishaps that can divert your attention. Leave valuables at home, if you can, and avoid displaying expensive items or luggage that might draw attention. Here are some more travel safety tips:

On the road

- Know your route before you start.
- Make sure your rental car is in good operating condition before you leave the lot. Keep maps and the rental agreement out of sight.
- Park in areas that are well lighted and close to buildings and walkways.
- Have the keys ready when you approach your car. Check the backseat and floors
- If your car is bumped by another, signal that driver to follow you to a nearby police station or a busy area where it is safe to get out of the car.

At the airport

- Don't let anyone but uniformed airline personnel handle or watch your bags. Keep a record of the contents of checked luggage and keep anything of value with you at all times.
- Wear a money pouch under your clothing. Carry your purse close to your body or your wallet in an inside front pocket.

At the hotel

- Never leave luggage unattended.
- Keep all doors and windows locked.
- Don t display a room key.
- Make sure your room has an indoor viewer and a dead-bolt lock. Verify who is at your door before allowing them entry. Call the front desk if an unexpected visitor claims to he a hotel employee.

Treatment controls fleas

Veterinary Service

For every flea that people see on their pets, there are at least 10 more that are never seen. Fleas are persistent creatures that continue to come back and never give up trying to invade a home. Fleas reproduce at an astounding rate.

Flea control can't be looked at as a one-time chore. It must be thought of in terms of a season-long job.

The first step to good preventive flea control is understanding all the areas in need of treatment. The animal, the home and the outside environment must be treated all at the same time. Repeat treatments must be done at least monthly to effectively kill the hatching larvae.

Fleas spend approximately 15 percent of their time on the animal. The other 85 percent of their time is spent in the surrounding environment. Bathing the animal is a good start. Flea shampoos will kill what is on the animal.

Shampoos have no residual effect and need to be backed up with a flea spray or dip. Be certain not to get shampoos, dips or sprays in the pets eyes, nose or mouth.

After treating the animal, the house should be sprayed or fogged. If foggers are used, furniture should be moved to the center of the room and replaced to its completed. The reason this is done is to kill the fleas and the eggs that are under the furniture.

Fleas do not like the light and therefore tend to jump off of the animal and migrate under objects. Sprays should be used under the cushions and in the center of the room after fogging.

One other helpful tip is to place a flea collar in the vacuum cleaner bag to kill off any fleas or eggs that may be vacuumed up. Vacuuming should be done two to three times weekly. If there isn't a flea collar in the vacuum bag, the bag should be discarded after vacuuming.

When a flea spray is used in the home, concentrate on the areas where the pet spends the most time. Always follow label directions, and pets as well as humans should evacuate the area for a couple of hours at least. For residents of Fort Benning, pest control services are offered.

Soldiers, civilians process before deploying

By Shannon Day
Special to The Bayonet©

Both military members and civilians are coming from all over the United States to process through Fort Benning before heading overseas to support Operation Joint Endeavor. However, before they can deploy, there are many requirements that must be met.

To ensure that these requirements are met and to process the soldiers and civilians as quickly and as efficiently as possible, various agencies at Fort Benning have come together to form the Soldier Readiness Processing Center, according to Danny Wilson, Adjutant General mobilization officer and team-leader for the center.

"What we do here is ensure all individuals going (to Germany or Bosnia) meet deployment criteria," he said.

The center began processing people Dec. 11, 1995. Soldiers and civilians worked weekends and holidays to keep up with the flow of personnel, said Wilson. As of Jan. 29, the center had processed 2,844 personnel.

To pull off this enormous task, several components from Fort Benning and other areas have set up stations at the SRP to accommodate expedient processing.

They include:

• Adjutant General and Directorate of Military Personnel, which updates personnel records issues identification cards and tags

• Finance, which enrolls everyone for direct deposit and advises them of other pay entitlements

• U.S. Army Medical Department Activity, which gives immunizations, fits personnel with ear plugs and makes protective mask inserts for those who wear glasses

• Dental Activity, which provides exams for personnel who haven't had one within the last 12 months and makes sure everyone deploying has had dental x-rays

• Staff Judge Advocate, which deals mostly with wills and powers of attorney

• Directorate of Civilian Personnel, which helps civilians prepare for deployment

• Army Community Service which sends a letter to each person's next of kin, notifying them of the deployment and also of the nearest military installation where they can go for help in case of an emergency

•U.S. Army Chaplain Office, which assists personnel with special religious needs and hands out testaments

• Joint Preparation for Overseas Movement (Atlantic Command), which acts as a liaison for other services and ensures personnel meet their service deployment

•The Army Reserve Personnel Center from St. Louis, Mo., which acts as a liaison for individual ready reservists and individual mobilization augmentees.

"Fort Benning is the best installation in the Army because it is customer oriented," Wilson said, adding that the agencies that have come together have that frame of mind.

"Everyone here that is a part of the team has a real positive attitude," he said.

As a highly mobile post, most of the agencies are used to processing soldiers for deployment, but not on such a large scale.

"It's a time-consuming operation," Wilson said. "It takes a lot of time away from our normal duties and you have to run around trying to play catch-up, but we know this (processing) is a requirement,"

"Whatever our jobs may be, everyone is customer oriented," he said. "We want to make them feel welcome. Whatever their needs are, we want to accommodate them."

Recruiters help civilians be all they can be

By Lisa M. Hibbert
Bayonet staff writer

The Army is looking for a few good men and women to recruit a few good men and women.

"Being a recruiter is an extremely challenging job where you are constantly meeting new people," said Sgt. 1st Class Jeffrey Telepak, commander, U.S. Army Recruiting Station, Peachtree Mall, Columbus.

There are two ways in which soldiers can become a recruiter. Either through being selected by the Department of the Army or by submitting a DA form 4187.

According to the U.S. Army Recruiting Command, applicants must have a general technical score of at least 110 (waiverable) and be a sergeant or above with at least four years in the Army.

To be successful in the field, applicants must also possess good communication skills and be able to relate well to teen-agers as well as people from all walks of life, Telepak said.

Many people who have had dealings with recruiters are under the impression that recruiters get monetary bonuses for putting people in the Army, Telepak said.

"Recruiters do not receive any money for putting people in the Army," he said. "We do have a monthly mission to meet, but we get rewarded with certificates placques and a variety of other incentive awards, not to mention the special duty pay which ranges from $165 to $275 per month."

Recruiters have the mission of putting an average of two soldiers into the active Army per month and three soldiers into the Army Reserves, Telepak. said.

> "The best thing about being a recruiter is that you can have a positive influence on someone's life."
> — Sgt. 1st Class Jeffrey Telepak
> Station commander

"Some soldiers don't want to get into recruiting because they feel their careers will be hurt if they do not meet their mission," Telepak.

The mission has changed from an individual mission to a station mission, so there is not as much pressure on the individual recruiter.

"Teamwork is the key to any recruiting station," Telepak said. "If the office pulls together, it's much easier for everybody to make the mission."

One of the hardest things about being a recruiter is finding qualified applicants, Telepak said.

Applicants can be eliminated from the running if:

• They have not graduated from high school

• They do not meet medical standards, including being under or overweight

• They have too many criminal violations

• They are a single parent.

• They can not achieve a passing score on the armed services vocational aptitude battery exam.

"It's hard to tell someone they don't meet the qualifications to get into the Army because there is this perception in the civilian world that anybody can get into the Army," Telepak said. "Realizing that you can't get into the Army can be a real letdown."

Another problem that recruiters faced is being blamed when applicants do not get the job of their choice.

"The placing of applicants into jobs is the function of MEPS (the Military Entrance Processing Station)," Telepak said. "They are the ones who tell the applicant what is available, based on the needs of the Army and the applicant's qualifications. The applicant ultimately decides if he or she wants to accept the job offered to them."

Telepak, whose recruiting station is tops in the Atlanta Recruiting Battalion, was fortunate enough to have recruited in his home town of Cleveland, Ohio for more than five years before coming to Columbus a year and a half ago.

"When you're a recruiter, you have the potential of being stationed anywhere in the United States," Telepak said. "You are not limited to where military installations are located."

Recruiting is a three-year assignment, but soldiers can opt to recruit permanently. Being a recruiter is not as limited as it seems, he said. Recruiters can transition into being career counselors, recruiter trainers, instructors and more.

"The best thing about being a recruiter is that you can have a positive influence on someone's life," Telepak said. "You feel good when you can make a difference.

"If the Army's been rewarding to you, there's no reason why you can't relay that message to an applicant."

IOBC students master field training exercise

By Charles Faint
Co. B, 2nd Bn., 11th Inf. Regt.

The "Bushmasters" of Company B, 2nd Battalion 11th Infantry Regiment, Infantry Officer Basic Course Class 501-96 conducted its first tactical field training Jan. 17 through 20.

A squad situational exercise was executed at the end of several days of instruction by cadre from the Tactical Leadership Branch, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 2nd Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment. The training was designed to help the students understand how to plan squad-level collective and battle drill training within their platoons.

The training focused on nine essential infantry tasks, including squad attack, point ambush and entering a building or clearing a room. This was the first time that the students operated together as a squad in a tactical environment, and many students performed some of the squad level battle drills for the first time in their professional careers.

"Our squad worked very well together, considering this was our first time operating as a unit in the field," said 2nd Lt. Buck Faircloth, a Company B, IOBC student and Cairo, Ga. native. "The live fire went particularly well."

Preparation for the exercise began in Infantry Hall with classroom instruction on how to plan squad exercises. The students practiced writing operations orders as taught by Tactical Leadership Branch instructors.

Later, for homework, the students planned the squad situational exercise they would be responsible for in the field. Each student was given a mission to plan for as platoon leader. They planned the squad situational exercise, then gave their opposing forces to a cadre-designated member of their squad who then executed the mission as the squad leader. Throughout the squad situational exercise, the platoon leader gave guidance to and evaluated the squad.

After the mission was over, the platoon leader, opposing forces and cadre evaluators conducted an after-action review. The after-action review was a graded portion of the platoon leader's position.

The students executed an average of three missions per day. These missions included live-fire exercises, such as a grenade course and the point ambush. One day was reserved for a cadre-led terrain walk and was intended to be a time for the students to finalize any portion of their squad situational exercise that they did not finish in garrison.

Reservists support Operation Joint Endeavor

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet©

The 347th Replacement Battalion arrived at Fort Benning Dec. 19 to process individual personnel being sent overseas in support of Operation Joint Endeavor.

After processing more than 1,200 personnel, the 347th is deactivating all but one company, which will remain behind to process the small numbers of remaining personnel to be deployed.

Capt. Paul Hungate, commander of the provisional company that will stay behind, said the 347th's efforts have been unique in the history of the Army.

"This is the first time a unit has been tasked with processing individuals from all branches of services — Army, Navy, Air Force, Marines, Reserve and National Guard, as well as civilians," Hungate said. "This has worked out very successfully and will probably be used for future deployments. We are the model."

The battalion, which consists of Army Reserve personnel activated out of Illinois, originally had the capability of handling up to 1,200 personnel at a time. Hungate said the provisional company can be staffed with up to 30 personnel at a time. Currently, there are 26, he said.

Tasked with conducting replacement operations in support of Operation Joint Endeavor, the remaining company of the 347th will continue to conduct a five-day inprocessing procedure for personnel on their way to the 64th Replacement Battalion in Germany.

To accomplish the mission, the provisional company has moved from Harmony Church to the headquarters of the 11th Infantry Regiment, Building 76. The provisional company was formed from the four companies that originally made up the 347th, Hungate said.

Hungate said his company's task is to ensure that incoming personnel meet all the qualifications for deployment.

These include reviewing the individual's finance, medical and dental records, updating immunizations, issuing identification tags, issuing glasses and protective mask inserts if necessary, and giving the individual the opportunity to conduct necessary legal preparations such as wills and powers of attorney.

Processing personnel also make a visit the Central Issue Facility for equipment issue and, if issued a weapon, must zero and qualify with the weapon.

Finally, the personnel are given trained on vehicle and aircraft recognition, land mine identification, cold weather survival, medical procedures and laws and customs of the countries to which they will deploy.

Q. What is the policy governing the wear of the battle dress and utility uniforms on and off post?

A. According to Fort Benning Regulation No. 94-65, the battle dress and utility uniforms are not authorized for wear off post except for short stops for gas, convenience stores, a quick lunch and bona fide emergencies. Neither shopping trips to the off-post malls or department stores are authorized, nor is long distance travel.

In addition to the above limitations, the BDU will not be worn after duty hours or in any off-post facility that serves alcohol.

The Class A or B uniform is the appropriate dress for any business that requires more than 45 minutes.

The Hi Tech boot is not authorized for wear with any Army uniform.

Editor's note: Each week, The Bayonet will run a question, provided by Garrison Sgt. Maj. Steven G. Chittum, to help soldiers prepare for the board.

TRAINING AND TRIAL CAMP

Wrestlers vie for All-Army team spots

By Lori Egan
Bayonet staff writer

Fort Benning is hosting the All-Army Wrestling Trial and Training Camp. The camp started with a team welcome breakfast Jan. 25 and will continue through March when the wrestlers will participate in a wrestle-off to see who will participate in the Armed Forces Championships in Quantico, Va.

More than 70 soldiers were invited to this year's camp. Wrestlers from as far away as Korea and Europe to as close as the wrestler's World Class Athlete Program here on Fort Benning.

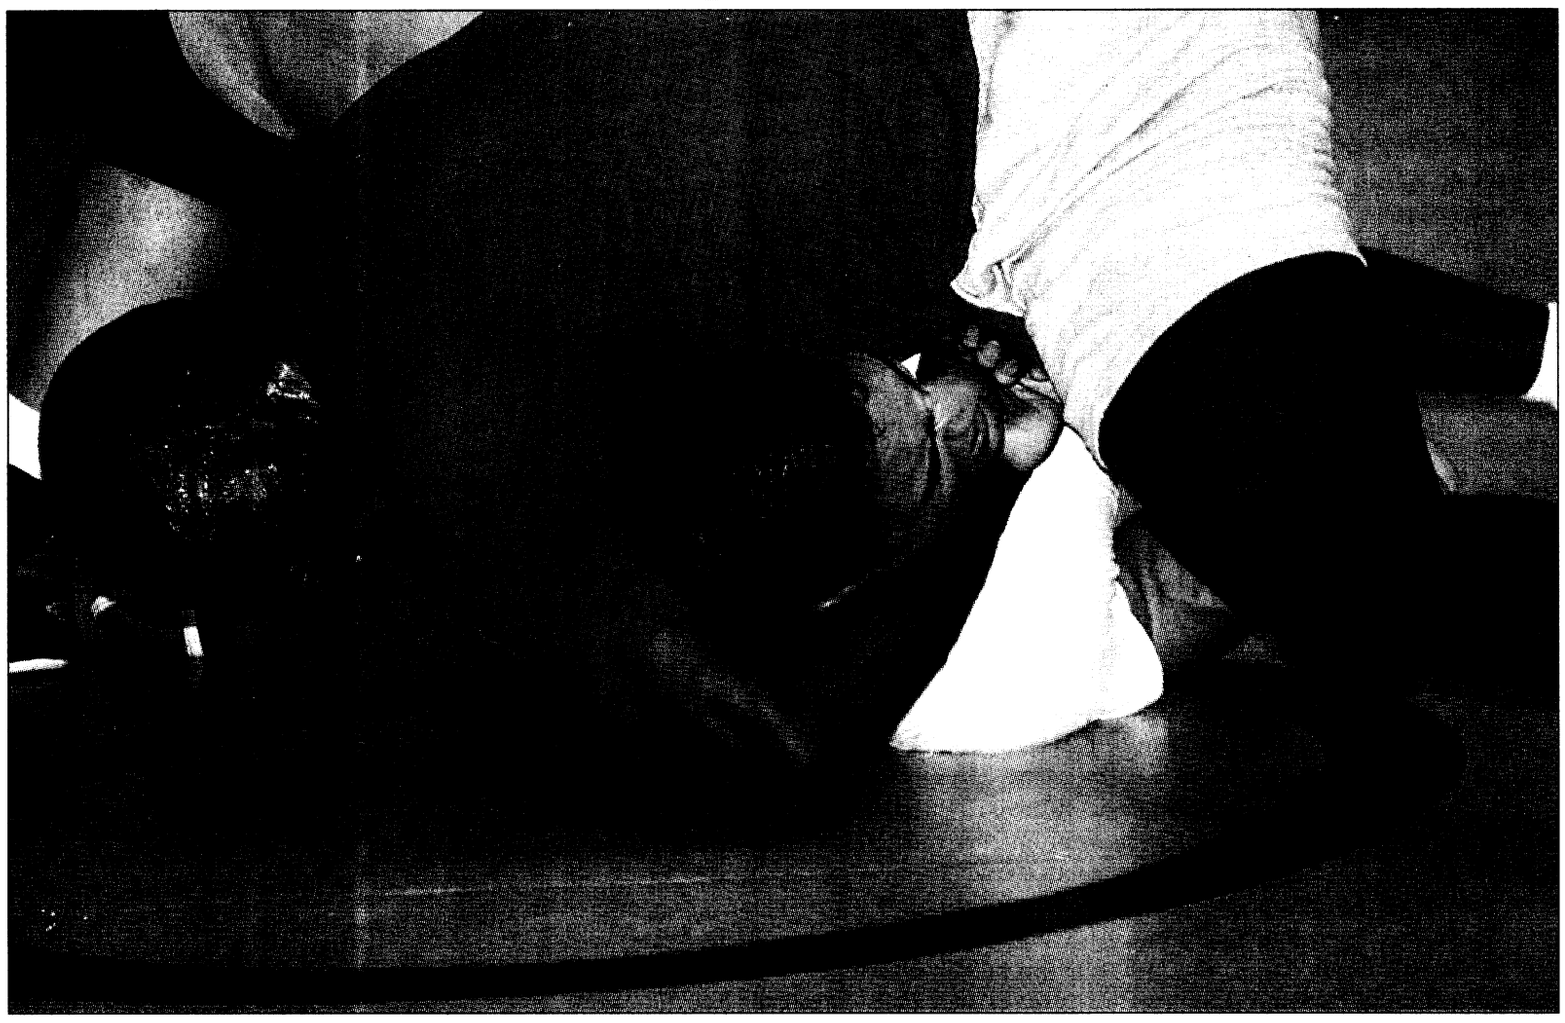
"We are trying to develop new wrestlers so more were invited this year to attend the camp," said Jim Brown, Fort Benning's sports director.

The purpose of the All-Army Wrestling Camp is to provide soldiers the opportunity to train and compete at the national level with the final intent of becoming members of the 1996 Olympic team, according to a memorandum from Department of Transportation. For many soldiers this is their first opportunity to tryout for the All-Army Wrestling Team.

"Some of the guys get frustrated when they first arrive at the camp," said Tony Thomas, coach of the All-Army Wrestling Team.

"I'm starting all over," said Stephan Whyde from Fort Drum, N.Y. "I don't know any of these moves — I'm just getting beat."

"They are working on a whole different level here," Thomas said. "They are learning new techniques, new moves. Most are coming from a high school wrestling background, and we train world-class competitors."



"He makes things look so easy and then when we try it — it's not!" Pete Rupcich from Fort Campbell, Ky. said as Thomas demonstrated a new move

"You gotta be tough," Thomas said. "It's all combinations — a pinch head lock or a quarter turn. You got to do the unexpected. You're taught to drop and attack the body. That's expected. You've got to get in your opponents danger zone."

Wrestlers in the World Class Athlete Program also work out with the camp participants when they aren't competing in matches.

4/41 wins post commander's cup

By Lori Egan
Bayonet staff writer

The Fort Benning Commander's Cup for 1995 was presented to Headquarters and Headquarters Battery, 4th Battalion, 41st Field Artillery Regiment, 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division (Mechanized).

HHB, 4th Bn., 41st Field Artillery accumulated 805 points to win the Commander's Cup competition, which is the highest intramural sports award on post. Teams compete in basketball, volleyball, softball and flag football for points that establish their standing in intramural sports.

"You don't get to be the best on Fort Benning without physical fitness, training and leaders," said Brig. Gen. Robert T. Clark, Fort Benning's deputy commanding general.

"This was truly a unit effort and I accept the trophy on behalf of all the soldiers, the players and supporters, who made us so successful," said Capt. Chris Churchbourne, HHB, 4th Bn., 41st FA, commander.

Winning the flag football championship is what put them over the top to win the cup, said Jim Brown, Fort Benning sports director.

Football coach Kalvin Cain attributed the Head Hunters success to unit teamwork.

"The overall winners are the soldiers — it shows great spirit, which is one of the things that makes this unit great," Cain said. "Everyone was there, supporting the team, even the sideline coaches."

HHB's chain of command supported a lot of individual effort, which led to the unit's success, said George Stinson, the unit's volleyball coach.

"We placed second in the post volleyball championship," Stinson said. "It's the first time we put together a team, not just a group of people showing up for the games. We decided we would go all the way; and, with the team's effort and the unit's support, we did.

"What's extraordinary is that we did so well without a lot of volleyball experience," he continued. "I think natural talent and our good physical condition contributed to our success. Our physical training helped us play strong volleyball, and playing volleyball helped to keep us in shape."

HHB, 4th Bn., 41st Artillery, earned points for the Commander's Cup trophy by placing third in the post softball championship.

"We had a good team because of the players," said Walter Baxter, the team's first baseman and catcher. "In fact, we had the best team, but we got caught in a three-game, back-to-back series in the losers' bracket."

"It's good to be the best on Fort Benning," Churchbourne said.

Local fishermen participate in January tournament

By Stephen W. Ward
Fort Benning Bass Club

The first tournament of the year for the Fort Benning Bass Club was conducted Jan. 14, launching from the Hatchechubbee Ramp on Lake Walter F. George in Eufaula, Ala.

The day started off cool to cold, but warmed nicely to the low to mid 60s.

Around midday, a small amount of water draw caused a slight current in the river.

Ten local fishermen tested the waters and fished all day.

Despite the cold and water surface temperatures that never exceeded 47 degrees, several fish were caught.

The favorite lure for the day was some type of jigging combination.

The results of the tournament were as follows:

• First place — Stephen Ward

• Second place and Big Fish Award — George Mendez

The February tournament is scheduled for Lake Martin.

The Fort Benning Bass Club is open for membership to all service personnel (active and retired) and their family members who are 16 years of age or older.

The club is also open to eligible federal civilian personnel.

Meetings are conducted twice a month on Tuesday evenings

Anyone interested in becoming a member can attend a meeting and call.

The club is open to boaters and non-boaters alike.

For more information, call 569-5705.

Twelve students took six first-place trophies, nine second-place trophies, seven third-place and two fourth-places trophies.

Jesse Ruiz, a 9-year-old brown belt won the 10-year-old and under grand champion trophy. He placed first in kata (forms) and third in sparring.

Also winning first-place honors were Dana Walls, first in kata, second in weapons and fourth in sparring. Ranier Garza, an 8-year-old brown belt, took first place in sparring, second place in kata and third place in weapons. Priyesh Vyas, 9 years old, took first place in kata and fourth place in sparring. Falguni Vyas, a 10-year-old brown belt, took second honors in kata and sparring. Simon Marinelli, an 8-year-old brown belt, won second place in sparring and third in kata.

Michael Tomczeuski, a 7-year-old green belt, placed second in both sparring and kata. Maggie Bearden, a 7-year-old blue belt, won third place in kata and sparring. Eva Daley, a 6-year-old yellow belt, won second place in sparring. Bryce Bomkamp, a 6-year-old yellow belt, took third place in sparring.

Lynn Mettler, a 19-year-old adult green belt, won first place in kata and first place in sparring. Chris Mettler, a 17-year-old adult green belt, took second place in weapons and third place in sparring.

Yoshukai karate is a traditional Japanese martial art. The Fort Benning School is located at the Fort Benning Officers' Club Fitness Center. Ron Ziss is the instructor.

The Fort Benning school conducts classes Saturday through Wednesday. Classes are open to military and all other authorized Morale, Welfare and Recreation patrons. For more information, contact Ziss at 324-3113.

Bi-City Stars to kick off season

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Though the professional football season ended with the Super Bowl, the semi-professional football season has just begun.

The Columbus Stars will kick off its season against the Beaufort Storms with Military Appreciation Day at Doughboy Stadium Feb. 18 at 2 p.m.

The Columbus Stars, comprised of military and civilian players, will battle the South Carolina Storms, which is made up of mostly U.S. Marines from Parris Island.

This year's team will again be headed by Tom Staton, assisted by Connie Burnham from Fort Benning.

And, once again Fort Benning soldiers will play a large part in the offense and defense of the Stars. This year's roster will carry 10 Fort Benning players or coaches.

The game will be open to the public. Tickets will be available to Infantry Training Brigade soldiers through for companies.

Tickets are $3 for military personnel, active duty or Reserve and National Guard in uniform or with an identification card. The cost for civilians at the gate is $5.

Tickets can be purchased at the gate or for advance ticket sales, call Lance Hartman at 480-999 and leave a message or 322-0573.

Columbus to begin hockey franchise with Cottonmouths

Columbus Hockey Club Inc.

Cottonmouths strike fast. Beginning this fall, the people in the Chattahoochee Valley area will discover Cottonmouths skate with the same degree of aggressiveness.

A new hockey franchise set to begin play at the new Columbus Civic Center in October will be named "Columbus Cottonmouths."

The team, owned and operated by Columbus Redstixx and Hockey Club Inc., will compete in the Southern Hockey League.

Other teams currently in the league include the Daytona Beach Breakers, Lakeland Prowlers, Jacksonville Bullets, Winston-Salem Mammoths, Huntsville Channel Cats and the West Palm Beach Barracudas.

"The sport of the '90s will excite and intrigue the local community," said Charles Morrow, Cottonmouths team president. "Ice hockey combines the speed and excitement of NASCAR with the physical play of football. This is going to be something new for the people here. Most Southerners grew up watching and playing football or baseball. Hockey has long been a mystery. The sport has really caught on nationally and has been successful in other southern cities. Columbus is ready for it.

"The people are excited about it and our brisk ticket sales for a team, which to this point has been anonymous, proves just that," Morrow said.

In addition to the name, the team also released a striking logo, which features an attacking snake head beneath the swooping words "Columbus Cottonmouths." The team colors are deep blue and light blue accented with yellow and black.

"We wanted colors that were unique from teams in our league and other leagues," Morrow said. "We've got a classic look to the logo. We think this will be a very popular logo not just in this community but with hockey fans nationwide."

The Cottonmouths will begin play in late October.

Season tickets are available by calling (706) 571-8866.

Soldiers re-enlist at luncheon

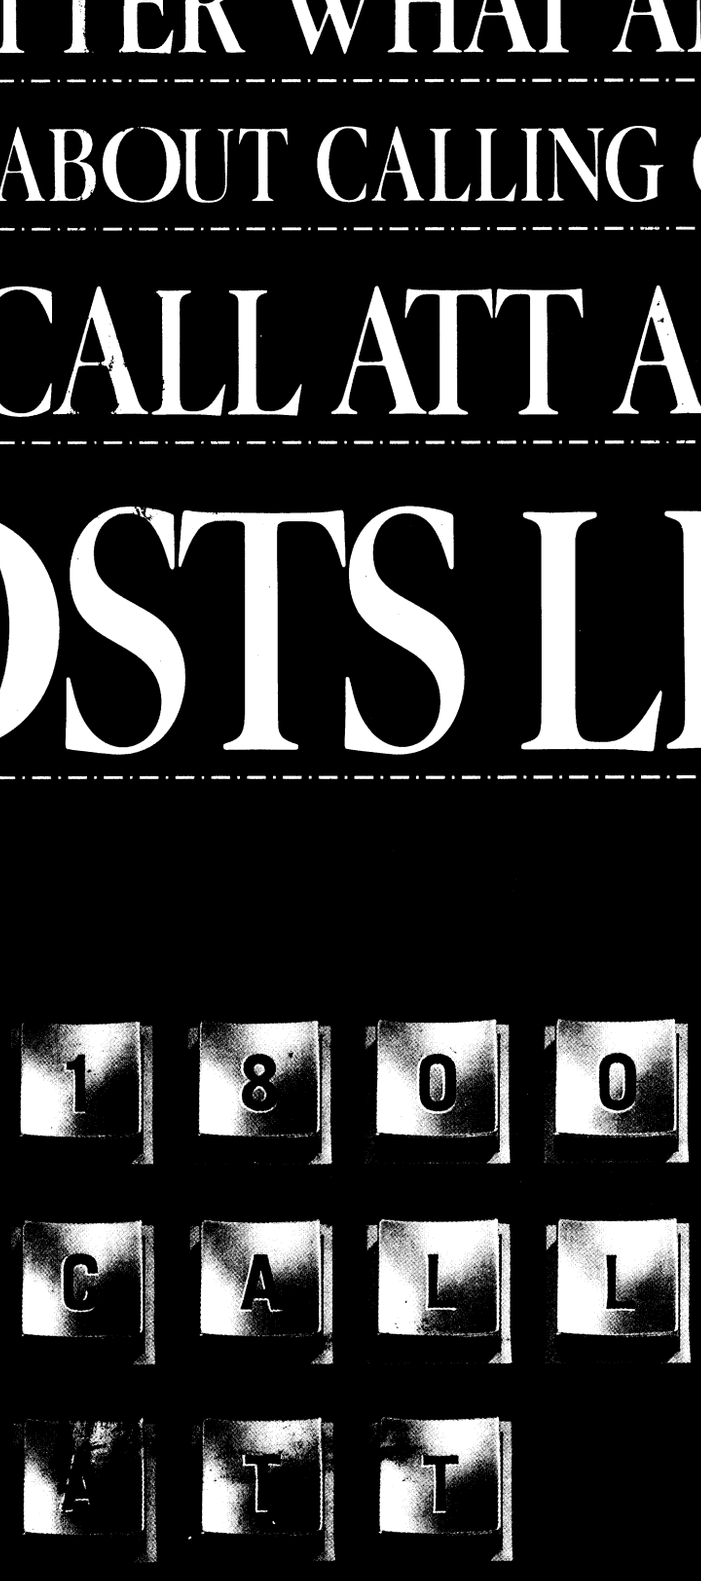
11th Infantry Regiment

The 11th Infantry Regiment hosted a re-enlistment luncheon Jan. 9 at the Follow Me Dining Facility to recognize soldiers choosing to make the Army their career.

Three soldiers re-enlisted at the luncheon:

• Sgt. Thomas Brock of the Adjutant General Replacement Detachment

• Sgt. Tommy R. Gayten, a mid-careerist who was promoted while on terminal leave



• Master Sgt. David Hargrove, who reflected on the challenges and assignments faced during his long career.

Retired 1st Sgt. Jimmy Stewart, general manager of the Main NCO Club, was the guest speaker. He emphasized that soldiers must have a plan and set goals for themselves. He also commented on his career as an airborne infantryman and how his service had afforded him the opportunity to obtain additional education and training.

"This luncheon is a way to reach young soldiers, not to award ourselves," said Col. John P. Lewis, commander of the 11th Infantry Regiment. "We can illustrate to these soldiers the benefits of a 20-year career in the Army and let them know they are the quality we want and that we want them to stay with us."

Celebration honors Jesus' appearance

By Alex C. Brown
13th Corps Support Battalion

The Epiphany is a Christian celebration commemorating the manifestation of Jesus Christ. The word "epiphany" means manifestation, to appear, or to show oneself.

It is the celebration of the first appearance of Jesus to the gentile world, as represented by the three wise men from the east. Thus, this Christian feast is also known as the "Feast of Three Kings," which began Jan. 7 and continues until Ash Wednesday, which begins the season of Lent.

Matthew, writer of the first gospel, records the story of the visit of the magi. They came looking for one who was born "King of the Jews." They had seen his star from their place in the east. They came westward to worship him (Matthew 2:2).

Many questions can be asked about the Epiphany story. Who were these visitors from the east and how many? What was the nature of the star? How long after the birth of Jesus did they arrive? The more intriguing questions are raised from their question, "Where is he who has been born King of the Jews? (Matthew 2:2).

Why did these gentiles come so far to worship and pay homage to a Jewish king? How did they know about him? There are only two possible explanations as to how these magi would have known about this Jewish king. First, they were given a special revelation from God. Secondly, they knew of this event from contact with Jewish people and prophecy.

The Jewish scriptures possessed by the Jews exiled to Babylon in under the rule of King Nebuchadnezzar would have been a source of Jewish prophecy. They may have heard of the Balaam's prophecy as recorded in Numbers 24:17 that ". . . a star will come out of Jacob; a scepter will rise out of Israel." Maybe these magi stumbled upon the writings of Isaiah the prophet (Isaiah 7:14 and 9:6).

Not only was there the influence of prophetic Jewish scriptures, but there was the direct influence of Jewish people. The "Memoirs of King Nebuchadnezzar" (605-562 B.C.), who ruled Babylon during the Jewish exile, might have recorded his life-changing contact with the prophet Daniel and the Hebrew youth.

Daniel told King Nebuchadnezzar both the content and interpretation of his dream (Daniel 2:25-45). King Nebuchadnezzar witnessed the survival of Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego in the fiery furnace (Daniel 3:19-30). Nebuchadnezzar himself had experienced animal-like insanity because of his arrogance and pride. When he raised his eyes toward heaven, his sanity returned to him and he blessed the most high and praised and honored him who lives forever, the king of heaven (Daniel 4:28-37).

In these personal experiences with the Jewish people, the pagan king of Babylon paid greater homage to the God of the Jews. This transforming influence of God's people and God's word on the eastern empire of Babylon would have certainly been passed down through the generations and apparently with a great degree of credibility.

Maybe the magi themselves read from their own ancestral records of the coming manifestation of the Jewish king.

Why is this a likely explanation for the arrival of these wise men? Because these magi, outside of a direct revelation from God, followed a star.

reflections

They searched for a king, born to a foreign people, in a land far away. And yet they came, not by interstate at 75 miles per hour, but over thousands of miles of desert sand, bearing gifts for one they believed to be king of the people of the most high God. They came in faith for the Epiphany, manifestation of the God's Son and man's savior. They believed and so they came. They saw his appearing and so they worshiped.

What will be your response to him who is born "King of the Jews"? Will you believe? Will you worship him?

chapel notes

BOSS bible study — The Fort Benning Better Opportunities for Single Soldiers program is sponsoring a single soldiers' Bible and prayer fellowship for Christian single soldiers of all denominations.

The goals of this group will be to organize and plan a quarterly event to meet once or twice a month for ministry and fellowship and to provide Christian single soldiers a better opportunity to join others in the growth of Jesus Christ.

Contact Spc. Michael Will, at 544-9269 or your unit chaplain to join the group, or call 545-2813 for more information.

Praise and worship service — A nondenominational general Protestant service, including worship, praise, singing, prayer, teaching and preaching, will be conducted every Sunday at the Infantry Center Chapel from 6 to 8 p.m.

Everyone is invited, including single, married, active duty, retired, families, friends, relatives, National Guard, Reserves, enlisted, non-commissioned officers and officers.

Refreshments will be served and fellowship will take place after the service in the chapel annex. Child care will be available.

Musicians needed — The custodian of the Consolidated Chaplains' Fund is accepting applications for watch-care givers, pianists and choir directors.

For more information, call Staff Sgt. Phyllis Swinson at 545-1934.

National prayer breakfast — The Fort Benning observance of the National Prayer Breakfast will begin at 6:30 a.m. Feb. 20 at the Fort Benning Officers' Club. The breakfast is an opportunity for all people to acknowledge the moral and spiritual values upon which our nation was founded.

This year's guest speaker will be Chap. (Maj. Gen.) Donald W. Shea, chief of chaplains for the U.S. Army.

A donation of $4.50 is requested for the breakfast buffet. Tickets are available through unit command sergeants major.

For more information, call 545-1314.

Several religious books and videos are available at the Faith and Family section at Sayers Memorial Library. Listed below are some examples: .

Books

• "Scripture Miniatures: The Life of Christ" — These four charming miniature books feature selected scripture portions from the life of Jesus.

Each mini-book is from the New King James Version and is set in eye-catching type. The set includes "His Birth," "His Teachings and Parables," "His Miraculous Works" and "His Passion and Resurrection."

• "Letters of Francis A. Schaeffer" — Discover the personal side of Francis Schaeffer in this compelling compilation of his letters.

Dated from 1946 to 1983, they offer practical advice and insight on spiritual reality, its reawakening and its role in daily living and personal relationships, a subject close to Schaeffer's heart.

Videos

• "The Silver Chair" — This film is third in "The Chronicles of Narnia" series written by C. S. Lewis.

Prince Rilian, heir to the Narnia throne, is being held captive and Eustace, with school chum Polly, must rescue him before it's too late.

• "Uncle Tom's Cabin" — Harriet Beecher Stowe's timeless classic springs to new life in this powerful adaptation with an all star cast.

Bruce Darn, Fallacy Raced and Very Brooks vividly portray Stowe's characters in their courageous struggle for freedom amid boundless cruelty in the pre-Civil War South. A memorable must-see for all ages.

MPs to bid farewell to commander

By Lisa M. Hibbert
Bayonet staff writer

The Directorate of Public Safety and Military Police Activity will conduct a change of command ceremony Feb. 29 at 10 a.m. on York Field in front of Building 4, Infantry Hall.

The outgoing provost marshal is Col. Ronnie D. Alton, and the incoming commander is Col. Thomas J. Cain.

Alton came to Fort Benning as the provost marshal in 1994. During his tenure, the Safety Office and Fire Department were placed under his command, creating the Directorate of Public Safety. Alton will retire from service April 1.

Cain is a native of Burlington, Vt., and a graduate of the University of Vermont.

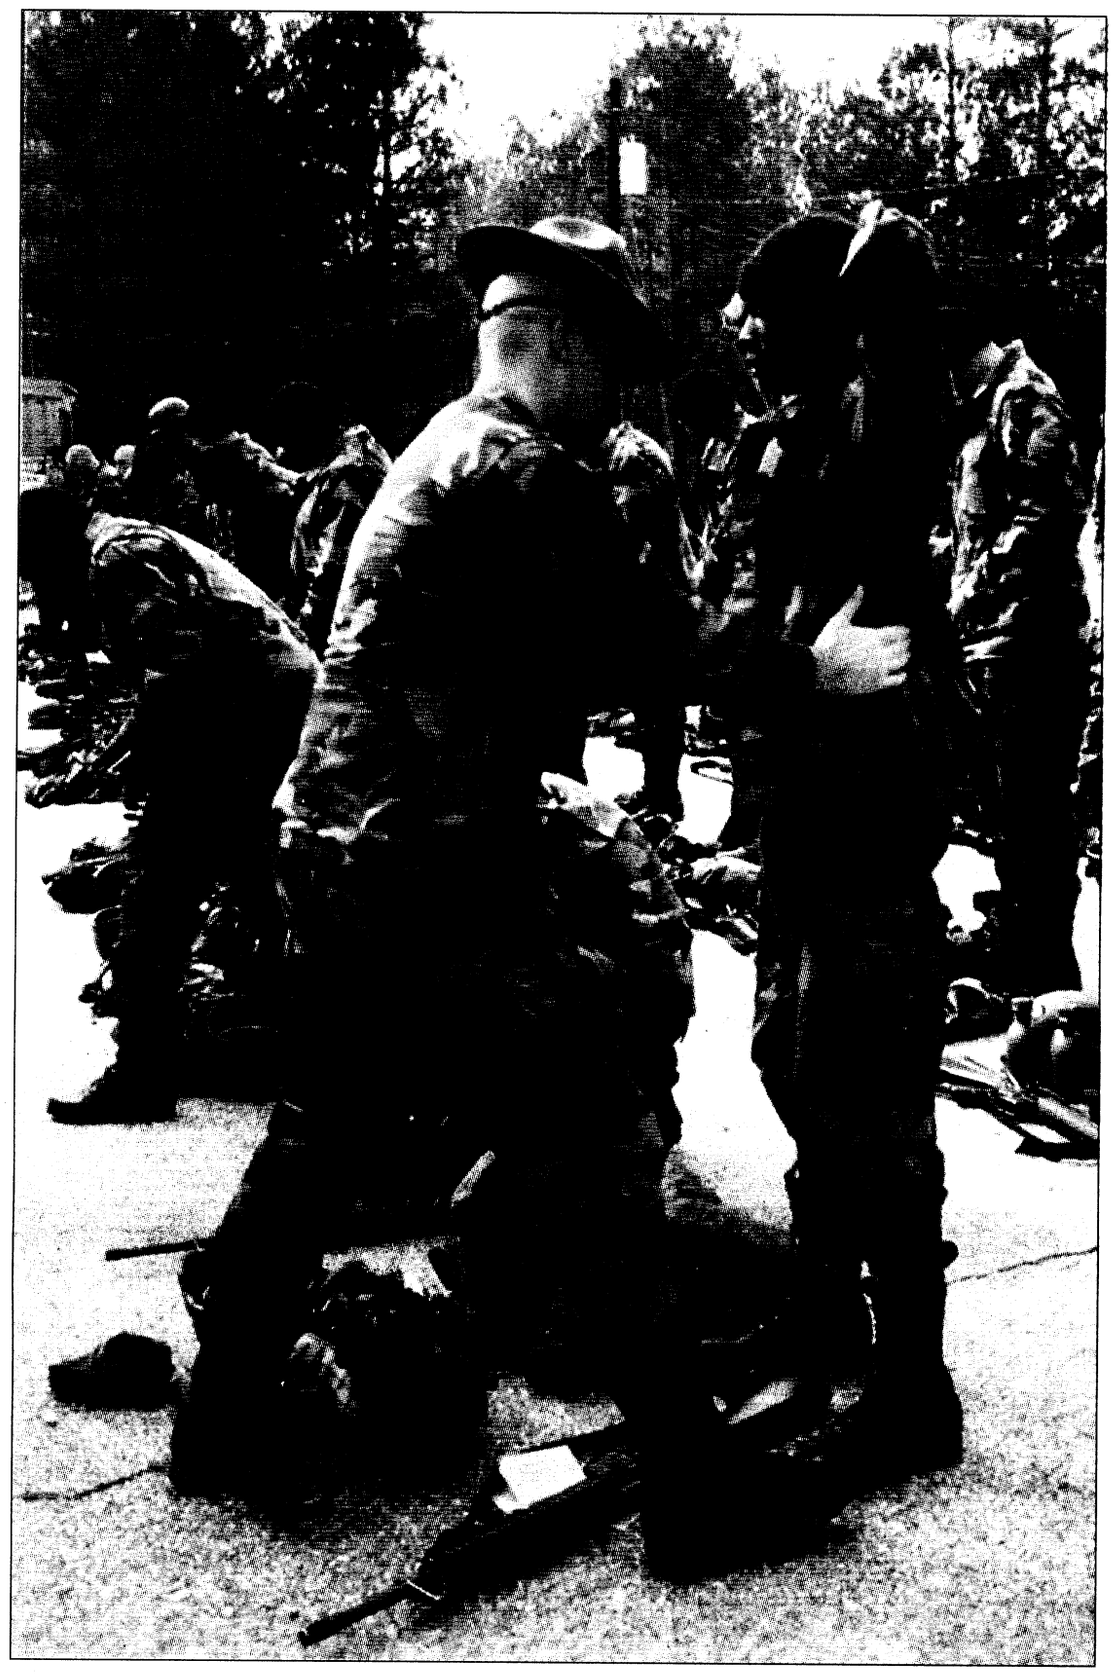
His previous assignments include senior Army adviser for the Massachusetts Army National Guard; chief of staff, Fort Devens, Mass.; commander, Fort Eustis Law Enforcement Command; and provost marshal, Fort Devens.

Facilities to close for holiday

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Most military and civilian personnel at Fort Benning will be off Monday in observance of Presidents Day. The holiday will result in a number of post facilities being closed or operating at reduced hours.

All Fort Benning schools will be closed.



The Commissary will be closed Monday and Tuesday.

The Main Mall Post Exchanges will be open from 10 a.m. to 7 p.m.

The Custer Terrace shoppette will be open from noon to 6 p.m.

The Mini Mall Shoppette is open from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m.

For more information about facility closures and reduced hours, see page B-2.

AAFES surveillance system helps detect, nab

Shoplifters

Army and Air Force Exchange Service

If people in the Fort Benning post exchange feel like they're being watched, it's for a good reason.

Army and Air Force Exchange Service security systems account for thousands of dollars in recovered merchandise, as well as numerous criminal charges.

A typical shoplifting bust begins in the store's high-tech surveillance room where security workers scan a wall of television monitors, keeping a watchful eye of suspicious activity. Since the system's installation in 1985, it's received several upgrades and helped nab thousands of shoplifters.

The Post Exchange has 32 cameras and a staff of detectives who monitor the facilities to ensure people aren't taking part in unadvertised bargains.

When a suspected shoplifter is identified, cameras zoom in on the person recording his or her actions. The camera can also take still photographs and provide times, dates and locations.

Once identified, the person is detained and turned over to the Military Police. The MPs then talk to store detectives, review the videos for evidence and then charge the individual with shoplifting.

"If the cameras don't catch them, my detectives will," said Linda Wright, security supervisor at AAFES. Some detectives dress in ordinary clothes and walk the store looking for suspicious customers.

And for shoplifters who make it out of the store, they may not be as free as they think, according to Wright. Many get caught returning items for refunds.

That's when AAFES kicks in the Automated Refund Information System.

AAFES associates use the refund system to log and permanently record every person who returns an item without a receipt.

Associates monitor names, addresses, dates, refunded items and dollar amounts weekly.

Shoplifters who trade AAFES merchandise at pawn shops for cash should know that AAFES monitors those, too.

AAFES also receives tips on shoplifters from other customers. Customers interested in helping AAFES should report incidents to AAFES management at 687-0142.

"If they help us, we can ensure they aren't identified or involved in the investigation," said Mary A. Babbitt-Malinowski, AAFES general manager.

All in all, these security programs may sound more than adequate, but Wright and her detectives aren't able to catch everyone.

Theft costs AAFES and military families millions of dollars worldwide each year.

Last year, she said unobserved shoplifting accounted for a loss of about $14,000.

That results in higher prices for customers and a loss of income for the Morale, Welfare and Recreation.

> "Spread the word that it's not a matter of whether shoplifters will be caught, but when they'll be caught."
> — Mary Babbitt-Malinowski
> AAFES general manager

Who is responsible?

Wright said the majority of shoplifters are adults, not kids. We have some juvenile problems, she said, but it's mostly adults who know the penalties and shoplift anyway.

In fact, they usually have the money with them and they still shoplift.

The most recent figures from the Fort Benning exchange show that active duty personnel commit less than 13 percent of all shoplifting offenses. Their family members account for almost 40 percent. While retirees rarely take things, their family members account for 14 percent of the losses.

The remaining 28 percent is attributed to civilians who work for the Department of Defense or come as guests of authorized shoppers.

These shoplifters face serious consequences at Fort Benning, not to mention the professional and personal embarrassment of being caught.

For active duty personnel, penalties include fines and disciplinary actions such as a court martial, Article 15 and loss of AAFES shopping privileges.

Civilians are handled by the federal magistrate's court. Juveniles are handled through their sponsor and may do community service.

There are penalties far exceed the value of the frivolous to fancy merchandise that's lifted. Targeted merchandise includes makeup and magazines to jewelry and recorded music.

There's also cases of people going for bigger-ticket items. Once someone walked away with a computer valued at $2,000, while another carried out $1,000 worth of clothing.

AAFES security systems can't stop shoplifters from trying, but it can help stop them from succeeding, Babbitt-Malinowski said.

"Spread the word that it's not a matter of whether shoplifters will be caught, but when they'll be caught," she said.

We can all help by reporting suspicious incidents to the Military Police law enforcement desk at 545-5222, 545-5223 or 545-5224.

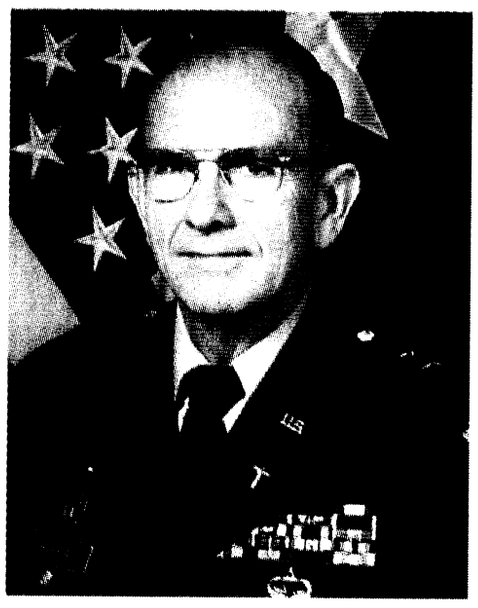
National prayer

Breakfast to celebrate diverse religious heritages

USAIC Chaplain Office

Hundreds will gather for Fort Benning's observance of the National Prayer Breakfast at 6:30 a.m. Tuesday.

More than 400 post personnel are expected to converge at the Officers' Club Supper Club at dawn to celebrate the rich and diverse religious heritage of America.



The breakfast will also honor the moral and spiritual values upon which this nation was founded.

Special guest speaker will be Chaplain (Maj. Gen.) Donald W. Shea, chief of Chaplains for the U.S. Army.

Commissioned as a U.S. Army chaplain, Shea entered active duty in August 1966.

He served in many corners of the world, some of which include his time with 10th Special Forces Group (Airborne), Bad Toelz, Germany; 1st Brigade, 7th Infantry Division, Korea; 1st Bde., 101st Airborne Div., Vietnam; 4th Battalion, 10th Inf., Panama; 9th Inf. Div., Fort Lewis Wash.,; and currently, chief of Chaplains, Washington D.C.

Among his awards and decorations, Shea received the Legion of Merit, Purple Heart,Vietnam Service Medal with six Campaign Stars, the Special Forces Tab, Bundeswehr and Vietnamese parachute badges.

VARIOUS VOICES

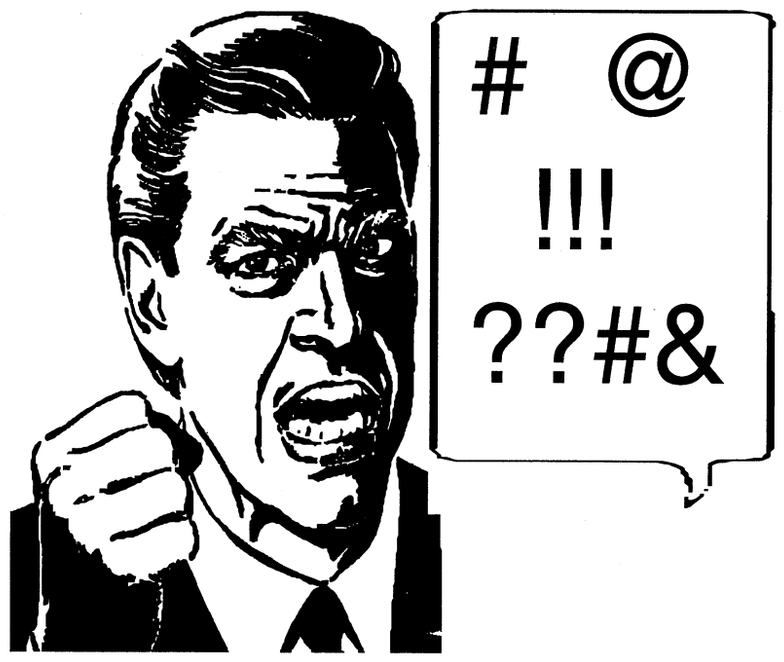
Are town hall meetings an effective forum for solving problems?

Capt. Rob Purvis, 2nd Battalion, 69th Armor Regiment, 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division (Mechanized) — "I've never really read or heard anything about what they put out. I've never heard any viable information come out of one of the housing meetings."

Capt. Emiciades Alcon, Company B, 30th Adjutant General (Reception) Battalion, Infantry Training Brigade— "Town hall meetings are good because the people can come together and identify common problems and hopefully identify common solutions."

Robin Winans, family member — "I think they're good because people get to voice their own opinions and come to a solution."

Sgt. Joseph Eilert, Veterans Services— "Whether or not the meetings are effective depends on who lives in the area. If they are the type of people who are at the meetings (to improve their community), who are well organized and definitely have a voice, then they are effective."



Daniela Rozzelle, retired captain family member — "I think the meetings are very important. It's a great way to inform the community, and it's a great way to inform the city officials. It's the best time to address city officials and to explain different things to people."

Residents complain about conditions in housing areas but should learn to use diplomacy, courtesy at

Community town hall meetings

By Lori Egan
Bayonet staff writer

Recently, I attended a town hall meeting. What an experience!

I feel sorry for the men and women who conducted that meeting. They listened to complaint after complaint.

Some of the issues raised at the meeting were: speeding, lack of military police patrolling the housing areas, parking problems, noisy neighbors, sidewalks falling in, etc.

It is true that the squeakiest wheel gets the grease, but really! Continuing to complain after the garrison executive officer takes your name and number and promises to personally look into the matter is unnecessary.

At the meeting, residents complained about the lack of police patrol in their housing area compared to other areas on post.

They complained about people speeding through the housing areas, that there aren't enough speed limit signs posted.

Tell me, who doesn't know the speed limit is 15 mph in housing areas? Who drives in the housing areas? Residents of those areas.

I don't know a single person who voluntarily drives around the housing areas for a good time. People who live there, speed there. It's that simple. So, since the residents know the speed limit of all housing areas, why do some continue to speed?

Several residents' solution to the speeding problem was to have more MPs. They said, "We need more MPs to patrol the area and to set up speed traps (which is illegal in Georgia)."

Why? We don't live in a police state. Why do we need more police to prevent us from speeding in the housing areas? Why can't we just use common sense; and, if that fails us, follow the posted speed limit?

Another complaint was adequate parking. We were told, "There are no designated parking spots on post. The only ones who have designated parking have carports or garages. In the areas where the house numbers are painted on the sidewalk, use courtesy. But remember, no designated parking."

The key words are: use courtesy.

Whatever happened to courtesy? Is it old fashioned, too time consuming, not worth the effort?

I don't think so. Common courtesy could be used to solve a lot of the complaints and so-called problems in most housing areas.

Take the problem of parking, for instance. If you invite someone over to your home for the evening, be courteous. Park down the street in an open parking area and let your guests use your parking spot — not your neighbors' parking spot.

Spc. Lori Egan believes people should become more responsible for themselves and their property.

Most people are reasonable. If you ask them nicely to bring the barking dog in at 10 p.m. so that you can get some sleep, they will. But if you scream out the window and tell the dog to shut up, what good will that do? The dog barks louder and all you've done is contributed to the noise level.

People in the Army have the luxury of having a home provided for them. This is a two-edged sword, however, because they don't get to pick the home and they don't get to pick their neighbors.

One woman discussed the problem of vandalism. An older car that she and her husband are restoring was keyed while they were away on leave. Several other cars in the area were keyed during the same time frame.

Her complaint was that the Staff Judge Advocate didn't pay her for damage to her car, but they paid all the other claims because they were newer vehicles.

Excuse me but since when is the government responsible for our old wrecks?

In the private sector, or real world, whichever you prefer, the person responsible for the car is the person who owns it — not the government. Hopefully that person has insurance to cover such occurrences.

My brother's pickup truck was set on fire one night in front of our mother's house. Thankfully the fire department came and put out the fire, but neither Uncle Sam nor any of his public servants came along to say to my brother, "Gee, this happened to your pickup on a public road. Let the government compensate you for your loss."

My brother experienced total loss of his transportation, and we, who are in the military, are lucky that some of us are compensated for damage done to our vehicles. However, Uncle Sam's pockets aren't bottomless and depreciation tables are used.

The thing to do is to become more responsible for ourselves and our property. If we act like courteous, responsible adults, maybe our neighbors will, too. Then perhaps there won't be any more suggestions of living in a police state.

545-boss

Dial 545-BOSS is the commander's action line for soldiers, family members and civilians to call when they have problems or complaints that can't be resolved elsewhere.

While it is not a substitute for the chain of command or for agencies established to provide assistance, the line offers another means of communication between Fort Benning's community and commanders.

The Bayonet features some of the calls that may benefit other members of the Fort Benning community.

Call: The caller said the post Burger King has a policy that there can be only two orders per car at the drive-thru window. He said he checked with Burger King restaurants downtown and their managers said they would not survive with a similar policy. The caller said this policy is inconvenient because one day he was having a meeting that ran through lunch and sent one of his people to pick up lunch for everyone. He said Burger King wouldn't take the orders at drive thru. He said he talked to the manager, and the manager indicated the policy would not be changed. The caller said he feels this Burger King has this policy because Fort Benning is a captive audience and there is no other one on post and he feels this policy should be changed.

Army and Air Force Exchange Service response:

The AAFES food business manager said the Fort Benning Burger King adopted the two-order policy because of the extremely high volume of customers who patronize the restaurant. Without this policy, he said they would not be able to provide adequate customer service.

The restaurant serves an average of 650 customers between 11 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. daily. The front counter accepts multiple orders and additional registers located there help to keep the line moving for other patrons. He suggests the front counter be used for multiple purchases. The AAFES food business manager said the current policy will remain in effect to properly service the majority of customers on Fort Benning.

Call: The caller asked if it was possible to become a member of the Officers' Club Fitness Center without becoming a member of the Officers' Club. He said he only uses the Fitness Center and he wants to know what authority prevents an officer from joining just the Fitness Center.

Directorate of Community Activities response:

The caller was contacted and it was explained to him that when the decision was made to offer a limited number of fitness memberships to Morale, Welfare and Recreation patrons who are not officers, the council recommended, and the commander concurred, that the current Officers' Club membership package would not be segmented, since as the current low cost dues structure was dependent on a total package including golf, fitness center, swimming, etc.

PX audio personnel professional

You know sometimes we don't really appreciate some of the employees who work at the Main Post Exchange, but I would like to say a few words about the employees in the Audio Department.

I have met some of the most knowledgeable and professional persons I have ever encountered in the PX.

Their courtesy and knowledge of the items in the store was outstanding, especially Linda Darrington and Shirley Miller. Not only those employees, but others as well, make me feel like giving them a hug every time I pass through the Audio Department.

Word Bayonet originated in France

I was reading the Bayonet newspaper from Fort Benning and am writing to you about the origin of the word B-A-Y-O-N-E-T since it is of French derivation.

A bayonet is a small sword that can be attached to the end of a rifle. In France, the bayonet was a hunting arm from as early as the 16th century. It was perfected in 1640 in Bayonne, a city located in Basque country in the Pyrenees Mountains, near Spain, in the southwest of France.

The word bayonet takes its name from that city.

Fort Benning to send 6 food service specialists to compete in U.S. Army culinary competition

By Jennifer Amos
13th Corps Support Battalion

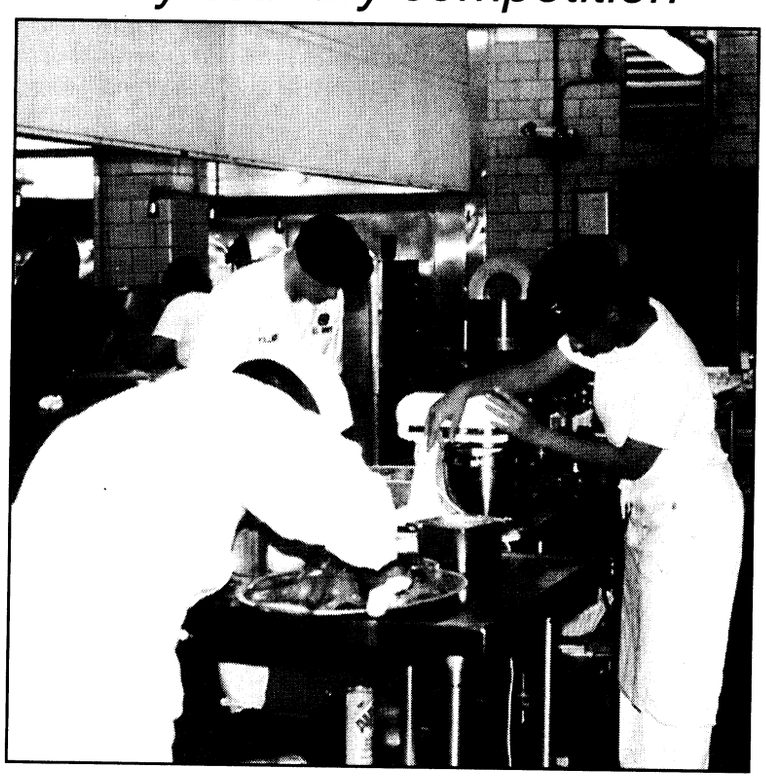
Food service specialists from the 36th Engineer Group (Combat), 13th Corps Support Battalion and the 75th Ranger Regiment have combined their cooking talents and composed a six-member cooking team to represent Fort Benning at the 21st U.S. Army Culinary Competition at Fort Lee, Va., March 4 to 14.

The purpose of the competition is to raise cooking standards and to improve the quality of cooks within the Army.

Culinary competitions promote loyalty, raise educational opportunities, and develop cooking ideas and bring long established cooking ideas up to date and promote growth, development and good health, said Jeff Moore, project officer for the 21st U.S. Army Culinary Competition, Fort Lee, Va.

Culinary competitions prompt individuals to use their imagination and encourage participation by providing cooks a review of basic cooking skills from other cooks within the Army, Moore said.

Competition between food service soldiers provides individual soldiers with a chance to show their individual cooking techniques and skills and sets an example for beginning food service soldiers.



The Fort Benning Culinary Team will be represented by Sgt. 1st Class Mark Holland, Staff Sgt. Kenneth Hicks, Spc. Trista Melone, Spc. Ruth Humphrey and Pfc. Kimicoe Brown.

Holland from the 598th Maintenance Company, 36th Engineer Group, will present one buffet platter of fancy chocolates, petits fours with a bear centerpiece and four different cold sweets consisting of Hungarian chocolate mousse, Bavarian cream, poached pears and a Hungarian chocolate tart.

Hicks of 63rd Eng. Co. (Combat Support Equipment), 36th Eng. Group, will present one restaurant platter of duck, maguise potatoes, baby corn and natural gravy; one restaurant platter consisting of roast pork and veal; a vegetable garden centerpiece and chicken in a basket.

Melone from the 104th Transportation Co., 36th Eng. Group, will present a lunch menu of stuffed chicken breast with white sauce, Indian fried rice, green beans with pimentos, tropical fruit with chocolate sauce, American salad shrimp cocktail with a swan centerpiece and one buffet platter of five different cookies and petits fours.

Humphrey from the 598th Maint. Co., 36th Eng. Group, will present one lunch menu of bed pork roast, ginger glazed carrots, steamed rice molded with tarragon, four different sweets consisting of pasty cream aligned with strawberries, apricots and peaches with sponge cake or pastry and a centerpiece of chocolate.

Soldiers from 36th Engineer Group, 13th Corps Support Battalion and 75th Ranger Regiment practice preparing meals for the competition.

Brown from Headquarters and Headquarters Co., 36th Eng. Group, will present one buffet platter consisting of chocolate pretzels, kisses, mints, rum truffles and white chocolate cases with piped dark chocolate, four different desserts including baked apples in wine syrup, chocolate souffle, chocolate almond mousse and chocolate candy.

"I look forward to competing with other food service specialists," Brown said.

Pfc. Paul Vollmer, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 3rd Bn., 75th Ranger Regiment, will compete for Junior Chef of the Year, and present a lunch meal consisting of veal with sorrel sauce, seasoned potatoes and squash, a mixed green salad, cherry tart, a cold platter of ham, turkey and roast beef with a centerpiece of a French mask.

To prepare for the competition, the culinary team conducted a training exercise Jan. 16 to 31.

"I liked the training," Vollmer said. "It concentrated on a smaller quantity of food, prepared with greater attention to detail on food presentation. Training was conducted away from the larger dining facility in a smaller dining facility allowing no distractions."

"The training reflected the standards of the competition, sanitation requirements and procedures and intricate details of preparing the food for presentation," Humphrey said. "It's our first competition. There is a lot of talent within the dining facility, and our effort and training has ignited other food service specialists' interest in culinary competitions, and they are looking forward to next year's competition."

Culinary competitors also earn American Culinary Certification points, which can be applied to cooking schools and used toward becoming certified chefs.

Educating the masses

Susan Goshea (left) and Cynthia Thomas, members of the planning committee for the Black History Month program pause to admire one of the many artifacts pertaining to women in a Black History Month display at Building 16. This year's theme is "African-American Women: Yesterday, Today and Tomorrow." The display depicts famous black women of yesterday and DOIM female employees of today. The display will be exhibited throughout February. Marian Hammons was also on the committee.

Risk Management

The U.S. Army Infantry Center Sergeants Major Risk Management Process Action Team was established in an attempt to reduce the number of injuries to Fort Benning soldiers. The purpose of the team is to reinforce the role of of the noncommissioned officer in all aspects of safety. The following is one of the goals and its objectives.

Goal no. 2

Noncommissioned officers will ensure unit training is conducted safely.

Objectives

1. NCOs will ensure that instructor personnel/unit NCOs and cadre are properly trained and certified for the tasks being conducted and that appropriate safety classes are attended prior to training.

2. Prior to training, NCOs will conduct safety briefings that cover all aspects of safety for each training event and will emphasize balancing safety with realistic high quality training. Risk management work sheets will be used as a guide for the briefing with risk management checklists completed daily.

3. NCOs will identify all combat lifesavers prior to training requiring combat lifesavers. NCOs will ensure that combat lifesaver certification is current and that all life support equipment is present, maintained and updated as necessary.

4. Prior to the field training, NCOs will direct soldiers to avoid wild animals, specifically snakes and stinging insects. NCOs will ensure personnel who are allergic to insect stings are identified prior to training and that insect repellent and sting kits are available.

5. NCOs will identify potential safety hazards by walking all terrain. Where and when possible, rehearse training prior to conducting training.

6. NCOs will ensure soldiers do not sleep near roads, trails, or other areas where vehicles may travel. Dismount points will be established and all vehicles will be ground guided at night. Guards will be posted to protect sleeping areas as deemed necessary by NCOs. NCOs will ensure soldiers do not sleep in front of or under vehicles or trailers.

7. NCOs will ensure road guards are posted IAW Unit SOPs for all unit training.

8. NCOs will evaluate all field expedients to ensure minimum necessary risks to soldiers. Training will be adjusted or canceled if soldiers are placed in imminent danger or risk serious injury or death.

9. NCOs will encourage soldiers to report any unsafe acts or conditions. NCOs will direct soldiers to immediately halt all training, call cease fire or check fire when any safety violation is observed.

EO promotes equality

By Robin A. Shawlinski
Bayonet assistant editor

Equal opportunity and equal treatment are given to all soldiers, their families and the Department of the Army and Department of Defense civilians without regard to race, color, gender, religion or national origin, according to the Army's Equal Opportunity Policy.

"The purpose of EO is to ensure fair and equitable treatment across the board," said Sgt. 1st Class Beverly Riley, noncommissioned officer in charge of the Fort Benning Equal Opportunity Office.

"The key (to equal opportunity) is to treat people fairly and with dignified and respect," Riley said. "By doing that you can get more out of an individual — more in terms of the job, mission accomplishment and communication."

To uphold this policy, commanders have a challenge to provide a climate of equality.

And it is the responsibility of the equal opportunity advisers who are present at the brigade level, to assist and advise commanders in this task.

"EO is a commander's program," Riley said. "But it's our job to advise and assist the commander."

The Army's equal opportunity program first came about in the 1960s during the racial riots in the United States. During that time, a committee known as the Kerner Commission was appointed to study racial unrest. The commission concluded that racism was the cause of serious problems nationally and on military installations and ships.

As a result, the Department of Defense conducted a two-year study that reinforced the commission's findings. The recommendation was used to start the military's Race Relations and Racial Awareness Program, the forerunner of the EO program.

The program was later changed to the Defense Equal Opportunity Management Institute, which includes equality in regard to race, color, religion, gender and national origin.

Aside from advising, it is the job of equal opportunity advisers to plan ethnic observances and to make the community aware of these observances.

"The Department of Defense mandates these observances to bring out awareness," Riley said. "(These observances) are not meant just for that group. They are meant to educate people on the group's accomplishments and who they are."

Although there are only eight ethnic observances throughout the year, Riley said that everyday is every ethnic groups' observance day.

"Celebrate anyway you want," she said. "Take someone of another race out to lunch ... talk to them."

EO to conduct planning meeting

The U.S. Army Infantry Center Equal Opportunity Office is conducting a planning meeting for "Days of Remembrance" for the victims of the holocaust, which will be April 14 to 21. The meeting will be held Feb. 28 at 10 a.m., Building 2515. The EOO requests all activities and units send a representative to this meeting.

For information, call Sgt. 1st Class Julius Young at 545-3200 or 545-6665.

ROTC scholarships are still available

The Columbus College Reserve Officers' Training Corps still has scholarships available for eligible soldiers. The application deadline is March 15.

For information on how to earn a college degree, a commission as a second lieutenant and have the Army pay, call Maj. Brian Luedtke, Capt. Sheila Denham or 2nd Lt. Angela Soto at 568-2058.

Post halts trash collection for holiday

Refuse and recycle will be picked up as normally scheduled in family housing areas Tuesday through Friday. However, there will be no yard waste collection at Fort Benning housing areas Feb. 19. Yard waste collection will be picked up Feb. 26.

For information, call the Construction Inspection Branch of the Department of Public Works at 545-4749.

Briefings set for Green to Gold

The Columbus College ROTC Department will host Green to Gold briefings today and March 1. Briefings will be today and March 1 at 1 p.m. in Building 4, Classroom 30.

The Columbus College ROTC Department will assist applicants in attending the school of their choice. All scholarship applications must be processed by March 15.

For further information, call Maj. Brian Luedtke, Capt. Sheila Denham and 2nd Lt. Angela Soto at 568-2058.

Civilians to receive awards at luncheon

The February Civilian Awards Luncheon will be at the Supper Club of the Fort Benning Officers' Club Feb. 29 from 11:30 a.m. to 1:15 p.m. The Adjutant General/Directorate of Military Personnel will host the luncheon. The theme is "Partnership in Excellence."

The cost is $5. Advance tickets are required to ensure adequate seating and food are available for all attendees.

Attendees can obtain tickets from their centralized activity point of contact. Points of contact are encouraged to consolidate ticket requests and monies for their directorates. For advance tickets, contact Mary Allen at 545-4892 no later than Feb. 26. Tickets are available now.

SSNs applications to be accepted Feb 22

Every person age 1 or older must have a Social Security number before that person may be claimed on a tax return.

The Social Security Office in the Main Post Chapel Center, next to Doughboy Stadium, will accept applications for Social Security numbers Feb. 22 starting at 10 a.m.

Applicants must bring a certified copy of the person's birth certificate and some other type of identification such as school or shot records.

For more information, call Capt. Scott L. Frost at 545-3281.

Hospital to require SSNs for patients

Martin Army Community Hospital's computer data base will be updated during February.

The new version, which will be in operation Feb. 24, requires Social Security numbers for all patients to include children and infants for registration purposes.

While patients not possessing this data will not be refused care, some delay could occur if the Social Security numbers are not readily available.

Tax Office opens

The Fort Benning Tax Office is open. The office is located in Building 2640 at Soldiers' Plaza and will be open Monday through Friday, from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

Electronic tax filing is available for most federal returns. The office has many federal and state tax forms available.

Unit tax advisers have also been appointed for units throughout the post. Persons having tax questions should see their unit tax adviser first.

For more information, call Capt. Scott L. Frost at 545-3281.

Controlled burning set

Controlled burning of woodland areas will take place Tuesday through 24. If weather permits, the following compartments will be affected: A-6, A-9, C-2, E-3, E-5, F-2, J-1, K-1, K-6, K-13, M-7, P-2, Q-1, Q-5, T-3, U-1, U-5, W-4 and CC-1.

Burning will occur in pine stands within these compartments to enhance endangered species' habitat and training areas. Personnel proposing to use these areas for recreational purposes must vacate these areas prior to 9:30 a.m. daily.

Training units using compartments adjacent to those listed above may experience drift smoke and are reminded to exercise caution while travelling in these areas due to the potential for reduced visibility.

Units using ranges and training areas are reminded to remove flammable debris, such as pinestraw, leaves, grass and trash from around structures in accordance with U.S. Army Infantry Center Regulation 210-4, Paragraph 5-22, Organizational Maintenance.

For more information, call Jack Greenlee, Natural Resources Management Branch, at 544-6206.

CID seeks assistance

The U.S. Army Criminal Investigation Division is offering a $150 reward for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the person(s) responsible for removal of five gas powered leaf blowers; six gas powered weed eaters; three gas powered hedge trimmers; one gas powered lawn mower; one cordless drill; one circular saw; a 200-piece tool set and one wrench set from Building 1198. The items are valued at $3,848.90.

A $300 reward is available for anyone with information leading to the arrest and conviction of the person(s) responsible for a larceny that occurred between 5 p.m. Jan. 5 and 9:30 a.m. Jan. 8.

Someone entered Building 2755A on post and removed three central processing units, two monitors and one computer printer.

Anyone with information concerning this incident can contact J. Taylor at 545-7950 or 545-7052 or the Military Police at 545-5222.

CID is seeking information concerning a person or person who stole a vehicle between 6:45 a.m. Feb. 5 and 9:30 p.m. Feb. 6 from a parking lot adjacent to building 9073 on Kelley Hill.

The Bronco was green with a white top and grey primer on the rear corner panel.

The vehicle also had a 2-inch body lift with 33-inch BF Goodrich Mud Terrain tires and a worn winch bumper.

The assistance of the local community is being requested in an effort to identify and apprehend the perpetrator(s).

The identity of anyone providing information will be strictly confidential.

For information concerning this incident call Special Agent James Newsome at 545-7950 or the Military Police at 545-5222.

States permit registration, voting via fax

By Stephen Barrett
American Forces Information Service

WASHINGTON—The electronic age will help some military voters receive their absentee ballots for the federal election.

By using a fax machine and Federal Post Card Application (Standard Form 76), service members can register to vote, apply for absentee ballots and receive blank absentee ballots.

According the Voting Assistance Guide 1996-97, a total of 36 states, Guam and the U.S. Virgin Islands permit service members to fax absentee ballot requests.

Most of those states also allow voter registration by fax.

For those sending voting material by fax, all requests must go through the Federal Voting Assistance Program in Washington at DSN 223-5527, (703) 693-5527 or (800) 368-8683.

Program officials urge voters not to fax materials to state election boards. They say by faxing materials to Washington, officials can protect the integrity of the voting process and to provide an audit trail if needed.

Although many states or territories accept voter registrations and ballot requests by fax, only 19 will send the blank ballot electronically. Of those, only Hawaii, Kansas, Louisiana, North Dakota and the U.S. Virgin Islands will accept marked ballots via fax without question.

Indiana, Maine, Montana, New Jersey, South Carolina, Utah and Washington will accept completed ballots by fax only in emergencies.

For more information about voter registration and ballot requests, call your unit voting assistance officer or voter hot line at (800) 438-8683.

Replacement Det. soldiers help themselves renovate living area

By Pam Newbern
Bayonet correspondent

Permanent party soldiers at the Adjutant General Replacement Detachment have traded in their battered old wall lockers and scratched sinks for new closets and cabinets, thanks to the efforts of two soldiers.

Sgt. Ben Salmon, director of Repair and Utilization for the detachment, began working in September with Pfc. Chad Freeman to renovate seven rooms in the detachment headquarters in Building 2756B, located near the Airborne School Headquarters.

Salmon, who also is the detachment's representative for the Better Opportunities for Single Soldiers program, worked with the Department of Public Works' Self-Help Program at Fort Benning to install closets, replace the battered old sinks and renovate seven of the detachment's rooms.

"The Self-Help Program gave me anything I needed (in the way of supplies)," Salmon said.

Funds for the renovations, estimated at $20,000, came from Fort Benning's Army Community of Excellence winnings, according to 1st Sgt. Raymond Fitzgerald.

Salmon, who has been at the detachment since August, said he'd had a lot of experience doing electrical and tile work, but had never tackled a construction job such as this.

"I just ended up coming here, and they had rooms that needed to get done," he said. "It took off from there."

Spc. David Dobbs, who is permanently stationed at the detachment, is one of the recipients of the new rooms.

"It's by far the best room I've been in," said Dobbs, who had moved into the new room only a few days before.

Transient soldiers are still housed elsewhere in the building, according to Capt. Henry Davenport, detachment commander. He said more work is scheduled on other rooms, as funding permits.

Salmon, who also serves as the assistant for the Fort Benning bus tour, said working on the renovations has helped him in other ways.

He is busy getting in shape to take on the strenuous physical activities needed to pass both Airborne School and the Special Forces qualification courses.

He said serving as the repair and utilization director for the detachment has given him extra time to work out.

In the meantime, he's planning further construction work in the building.

"It's been a heck of a learning experience," he said.

JAC to sponsor Career Day February 22

By Mary Allen
Army Career and Alumni Program

Many of the success stories of clients who achieved their job-search objectives as they transitioned from the Army at Fort Benning were a result of regularly scheduled Career Days at the Fort Benning JAC.

The Army Career and Alumni Program Job Assistance Center is continuing its effort to help those getting out of the service Feb. 22 with a Career Day. The day will feature with a variety of companies that are on the search for managers. A few companies that will be represented are West Building Supply, Racetrack Petroleum, Sears, Liberty National, Waffle House, Orkin Pest Control and University of Central Florida.

If you are getting out of the Army in the next few months and are interested in researching or applying for management type positions, call 545-2308 or 545-2309 to register for this event.

Some other highlights during the month of February are:

• Education Opportunity Center — David Sutcliff from the U.S. Department of Education will be present at the JAC every Wednesday from 9 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. to assist service member who are interested in continuing their education. Sutcliff has a computer program with information on colleges and technical schools throughout the country. The information includes cost, admission requirements, length of course, scholarship and grant opportunities and a wide range of other items of interest.

• Small Business Development Seminar — The Fort Benning JAC continues to host the University of Georgia Small Business Development Seminar the third Thursday of the month.

Michael Elliot, a small business consultant, conducts a three-hour seminar at no cost.

• Hot Leads (current job listings) — nationwide and local leads continue to expand in numbers and quality.

TEACHER OF THE YEAR

Post educator earns respect, top honors

By Amy Durham
Special to The Bayonet©

Ask her what her teaching philosophy is and she says simply that it has to be fun and interesting for her and her students.

Ask her students what's so special about Judy Hanley, and they'll quickly say her hands-on approach to lessons is interesting.

Watch the energetic teacher work with the children and wonder who's having more fun — the students or the "edutainer" as Hanley likes to put it.

The sixth-grade science teacher from Don C. Faith Middle School was not only recently selected as the District VI Teacher of the Year by the Georgia Science Teachers' Association but also was named the Georgia Middle Grades Science Teacher of the Year during the annual GSTA conference in Augusta Feb. 8.

With glowing letters of recommendation from Jerry Christie, Fort Benning School technology coordinator, as well as from parent Pamela Peeler, Hanley did not even know she was the teacher being named until a letter was read from one of her students.

"The child had said, 'No matter what happens, when Mrs. Hanley walks into the room, she's always smiling,'" she said.

With a smile that brightens her entire face, Hanley admitted that students and the others who wrote letters describe her quite well. But it wasn't her smile that won her recognition as a top teacher.

Aside from the letters, Hanley had to turn in lesson plans, continuing education commitment and a curriculum vitae — an overview showing service performed for science education.

Through a hands-on approach, Hanley makes science not only interesting but easier to learn, according to one of her students, William Crowder.

The 12-year-old said, "she's taught us so much, it's unbelievable. She'll go out of her way to help us."

Student Chanthel Gonzalez agreed. "(Miss Hanley) explains everything," she said.

The two students explained with confidence their current class project involving using slinkys to study waves — types, parts and how the waves are formed by kinetic energy.

Hanley makes sure her students never go home unprepared for the question, "So what did you do in class today?" Her students have a multitude of class projects to recall. One experience in particular, Hanley said, involved one day she was absent.

According to Hanley, the students had been learning series and parallel circuits in their electricity unit. The day she was absent, the substitute teacher and students were connecting the battery to the bulbs. The students followed the procedure incorrectly and deliberately, she feels; and, as a result, 37 light bulbs blew.

"They (students) knew better," Hanley said with a grin. "The children loved it."

Even such classroom antics can't break her teaching spirit. Assistant principal Ann Justice believes Hanley's loving and caring approach to such mishaps is what endears her to the children.

"She is such an excellent science teacher, her reputation exceeds the school grounds," Justice said.

"We have parents who request their children be placed in her class, although (selective placement) is not possible."

But Hanley has made it possible for children to learn science and enjoy what they're learning.

That very gift she shares with her students is the reason she has been nominated for the Presidential Award for Excellence in Science and Math. While Hanley develops different sample lesson plans for the Feb. 28 deadline, she said she is proud of the plaque the GSTA awarded her and looks forward to using the $1,000 she received to purchase a new home computer.

Sixth-grade science teacher Judy Hanley cringes at the high-pitched sound her students William Crowder and Chanthel Gonzalez make with their new invention, the chicken squawker. Made from a plastic cup, piece of string and small sponge, the handmade device realistically imitates the sound a chicken makes.

Town hall meetings provide forum for post residents

By Amy Durham
Special to The Bayonet©

Residents of Fort Benning have a voice. Questions can be answered. Ideas can be worked. And concerns can be addressed.

Just as people living in the surrounding communities can effectively influence quality-of-life issues through open city council meetings, soldiers and family members who live in the six on-post communities have the same opportunity through quarterly town hall meetings.

"These meetings are a perfect forum for residents to voice community concerns, both positive and negative," said Jennifer Morgan, Installation Community Life officer.

One of the most recent examples of a town hall meeting serving residents' needs is the impact fewer students would have on staffing at Edward A. White School as a result of Infantry Officer Advanced Course designated housing.

Mayor Shawna O'Neil said several hundred houses on East Main Post were recently designated as quarters for students in the IOAC. According to O'Neil, the constant turnover of families in those quarters would affect staffing at White School.

"For the most, we have permanent party soldiers living here," O'Neil said, "and Fort Benning Schools' superintendent Dr. Dell Karr was available to inform residents about the issue."

Morgan stressed that although there are often community-specific issues, some of the concerns raised by one community may be relative to all six communities.

"Representatives from various directorates and agencies on Fort Benning attend the meetings to provide answers to questions and inform residents about any upcoming changes that would

Soldier takes time to give back

By Lisa M. Hibbert
Bayonet staff writer

When he was 4 years old and living in a homeless shelter with his mother in Cleveland, Ohio, Staff Sgt. Eric E. Phillips said the kindness of one of the workers touched him and he always remembered her. He never imagined that he would one day be in a position to help the homeless.

Up until Phillips was six, he and his mother lived from place to place — ranging from abandoned buildings to homeless shelters.

Today, Phillips remembers his period of homelessness and is doing what he can to aid other homeless victims by coordinating a fashion show to benefit Each One-Reach One, a homeless shelter in Phenix City.

"I always liked clothes," Phillips said. "I guess that's because I never had a lot when I was growing up."

Phillips has been able to get several of the major stores chains in Peachtree Mall to loan him clothes for the show.

"When I was a kid, I did not have any toys when I was growing up," Phillips said. "We didn't have any furniture. We usually just had a mattress and a blanket— that's it."

While in high school, Phillips' mother was voted the most popular girl in her high school. She was even awarded an art scholarship to Ohio State University. She met Phillips' father and they planned to marry. It was not until she was pregnant that she learned Phillips' father was already married.

Phillips said his mother suffered from a nervous breakdown shortly after that and was not able to provide for herself and her sons.

"My mother did not buy food," Phillips said. "My grandmother would bring us some, but my mother would throw it away."

When Phillips was 6 years old, state officials took him away from his mother.

"I was sick and my mother would not take me to the doctor," Phillips said. "My grandmother would try to persuade her to take me, but she wouldn't do it. Finally, my grandmother called social services and they came and got me.

"I felt like I was being arrested," Phillips said. "Two of them came — a man and a woman — and they took me away, one holding each of my arms. I remember looking back at my mother and she was not crying," Phillips said. "My mother just watched as they took me to the hospital."

When he left the hospital, he was placed in a boys' home. Later he moved in with a foster family and eventually, Phillips' grandmother was able to get custody.

Phillips joined the Army when he was 24 because he wanted to expand himself and see the world, Phillips said.

"My mom and my grandmother are very proud of me," Phillips said. "They always tell everybody about me being in the Army."

Veterinary Service to host weekend clinic

Veterinary Service

Veterinary Services will host a walk-in clinic March 2 from 8 a.m. to noon to enable pet owners to update vaccines and registrations.

To avoid spreading contagious diseases to healthy pets, annual vaccinations will be provided for cats, dogs, puppies and kittens.

Animals showing signs of illness cannot be effectively vaccinated and should not be brought to the walk-in clinic. Animals due for annual vaccinations in March and April should be considered for this clinic.

Services offered will be vaccinations for rabies, feline distemper, feline leukemia, feline infectious peritonitis, canine distemper or parvo and kennel cough. Heartworm testing, Leukemia testing, fecal testing and deworming will also be available.

Because of the large number of animals that will be waiting and the safety risk they may present, children under 12 years of age will not be allowed in the clinic. Pet owners are required to have all pets on a leash or in a carrier.

Appointments will not be accepted for the day of the clinic.

The Veterinary Clinic is located in Building 265 on Main Post, 10th Mountain Division Road. Normal operating hours are 8 to 11:30 a.m. and noon to 1 p.m. Monday through Friday.

The clinic is closed the last working day of the month for inventory and every Wednesday afternoon for training. Vaccinations and sick call are scheduled by appointment only. Appointments are scheduled one week in advance and are available each Monday morning at 8 a.m.

Appointments can be made by calling 545-4444.

ASH WEDNESDAY

Day marks new beginnings

By John R. Houser
Martin Army Community Hospital

Ash Wednesday, the Wednesday before the first Sunday of Lent, falls this year on Feb. 21. This day of fasting, self-examination and prayer marks the beginning of the season of Lent, a 40-day period, excluding Sundays, between Ash Wednesday and Easter.

During Ash Wednesday observances, both Catholic and Protestant congregations practice a form of the blessing of ashes.

The symbolism of ashes made from the palm branches of the previous year's celebration of Christ's entry into Jerusalem is a sign of an individual's affirmation of that return, according to Camillus Gott, a Catholic chaplain.

"It is a sign that one repents of the root causes of sin in life and believes anew in the good news," he said.

"It is also a sign that we are created; and left to our own designs, we cannot change our attitudes or direction without God's help," he continued.

reflections

"Repent and believe in the good news or remember, you are dust and unto dust you shall return, are the words that remind us to stop and reflect on our pilgrimage in life through, with and in Jesus Christ.

History

This sacrament, consisting of the application of ashes, is a relic of the solemn ritual of public penance at the beginning of Lent, a practice that existed from the fourth to the tenth centuries, according to the Catholic Encyclopedia. The penitents were reconciled to the Church on Holy Thursday (the Thursday before Easter).

Application

Jan Alkire encourages Christians to take advantage of their religious heritage to effect real and meaningful physical, mental and spiritual healing during Lent. She provides two options — to practice preventive health measures, and to use the world of science and the power of prayer.

Beginning Ash Wednesday, try these preventive health measures. First, give up habits that you know are destroying your physical body. Second, make a commitment to attend the chapel or church of your choice regularly. Third, begin practicing good medical care procedures. Fourth, decide to think positive thoughts. Look at problems from the top of the mountain instead of from the valley.

Beginning Ash Wednesday, use the Christian's greatest tool for abundant Christian living — prayer. Use private personal prayer. Seek the prayer of others. Attend services designed especially to pray for the deliverance of the sick.

If you will commit yourself to these two options during the Lenten season, you will find that Easter morning will be the greatest day of your life. Who knows? You might even find that the resurrection power that raised Christ from the dead is still effective today.

Look forward with courage

By Mark A. Zerger
2nd Bn., 54th Inf. Rgt., ITB

"Suffer hardship with me, as a good soldier of Christ Jesus" (II Timothy 2:3). I can well imagine the father of our country, George Washington, summoning his beleaguered men at Valley Forge to do just that— suffer hardships as a good soldier.

The man George Washington, I believe, was God's man for God's purpose in history. He was the man for the moment providentially chosen to stand and deliver. However, George Washington was, like all of us, not perfect. I want to focus on the father of our country not as the great statesman, but as the great soldier.

The bible has many passages that use the metaphor of soldiering to encourage spiritual victories. The honorable and noble characteristics of soldiering are indeed uplifted in the word of God. Those characteristics such as courage, discipline and dedication to duty are but few.

George Washington displayed all these yet, like us, he needed to be able to display one more. Paul wrote, "Forgetting what lies behind and reaching forward to what lies ahead, I press on." (Philippians 3:13b-14a). One crucial characteristic of a successful soldier is that he cannot dwell on past defeats or rest on past victories.

In spite of Washington's great victories at Trenton and Yorktown, he was not without his past defeats. In 1753 the rivalry between the British and French over control of the Ohio Valley had erupted into the French and Indian War (1754-63).

In October 1753, Governor Robert Dinwiddie dispatched Washington to go and warn the French commander at Fort LeBoeuf against territories claimed by Britain. On July 3, 1754, Washington was surrounded by army troops at Fort Necessity, Pa. With food supply now low and in drenching rain, Washington surrendered. It is interesting to note that one of Washington's greatest days was July 4, but he also had his July 3.

Maybe you have experienced a July 3 in your life — some kind of defeat or setback. Just as George Washington put his July 3 in his past, where it needed to be, we need to do likewise. We must pull ourselves out of the mud to go on to Trenton and Yorktown. We can do this, of course, with God's help.

reflections

I love the portrait of George Washington kneeling in prayer in the snow at Valley Forge. George Washington was God's man for his providential plan in history. Like a good soldier he was able to put July 3 behind him and look forward with God's help to the July 4. Like a good soldier, continue in faith to do your best and trust in God to do the rest.

chapel notes

Gospel choir to perform — The congregations of Sightseeing Road and Kelley Hill chapels will sponsor the Inspirational Voices of Faith from Clark University of Atlanta Sunday.

The 80-voice gospel choir will perform at Sightseeing Road Chapel beginning at 4 p.m. The public is cordially invited.

Admission is free.

Ash Wednesday services — Ash Wednesday marks the beginning of Lent and is associated with the distribution of ashes and the observance of Holy Communion. The distribution of ashes reminds worshippers that they are "dust" and is a symbol of penitence.

Two Ash Wednesday Protestant services will be offered Feb. 21: one at noon in Room 642, Infantry Hall, Building 4 and a 7 p.m. evening service at the The Infantry Center Chapel.

Both services are open to everyone.

Lenten lunches — Beginning Feb. 28 and continuing to April 3, lenten lunch programs will be at The Infantry Center Chapel each Wednesday during Lent.

The program will begin with a devotional service in the chapel at 11:30 a.m. and will be followed by a lunch of soup and bread in the Annex.

Volunteers are needed to prepare the soup and bread. Child care will be provided.

For more information, call the Infantry Center Chapel at 545-2931 or 545-2050.

BOSS bible study — The Fort Benning Better Opportunities for Single Soldiers program is sponsoring a single soldiers' Bible and prayer fellowship for Christian single soldiers of all denominations.

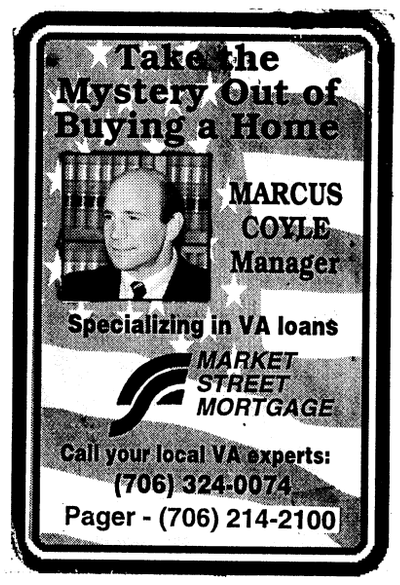
The goals of this group will be to organize and plan a quarterly event, to meet once or twice a month for ministry and fellowship and to provide Christian single soldiers a better opportunity to join others in growth of Jesus Christ.

Contact Spc. Michael Will at 544-9269, your unit chaplain to join the group or call 545-2813 for more information.

Praise and worship service — A nondenominational general Protestant service, including worship, praise, singing, prayer, teaching and preaching, will be conducted every Sunday at the Infantry Center Chapel from 6 to 8 p.m.

Everyone is invited, including single, married, active duty, retired, families, friends, relatives, National Guard, Reserves, enlisted, non-commissioned officers and officers.

Refreshments will be served and fellowship will take place after the service in the chapel annex. Child care will be available.



Musicians needed — The custodian of the Consolidated Chaplains' Fund is accepting applications for watch-care givers, pianists and choir directors.

For more information, call Staff Sgt. Phyllis Swinson at 545-1934.

Fellowship drive — The Fort Benning Chapter of the Christian Military Fellowship is conducting a membership drive.

It is an association of committed Christian believers who are serving in the U.S. armed forces or who are associated with the military, and it is a nondenominational organization.

There are no membership dues. To join, fill out and send in a membership application. For more information, call 545-2939.

Former Marine takes OCS' Patterson Award

Charles Butler

Brig. Gen. John J. Marcello, assistant division commander, 10th Mountain Division (Light), presents 2nd Lt. Jeffrey A. Saeli with the Patterson Award.

USAIC Public Affairs Office

The Officer Candidate School honored 2nd Lt. Jeffrey A. Saeli as its most outstanding infantry officer graduate from 1994 during a ceremony in Marshall Auditorium on Feb. 8. Saeli is the recipient of this year's Robert P. Patterson Memorial Award.

The Patterson Award goes to the officer chosen as the most outstanding graduate of OCS and the Infantry Officer Basic Course the previous year. It is based on qualities of leadership, academic effectiveness, aptitude and character.

Saeli graduated from OCS as the distinguished honor graduate in September 1994.

"I'm proud to have received the Patterson Award," Saeli said. "But I try and put it in perspective. It represents recognition of things I've accomplished in the past. It's a prestigious slap on the back. Now, I'll have to look ahead. I realize I still have a long road ahead of me yet."

When accepting the award, Saeli commented on learning about leadership.

"You should never find yourself in the position of having to make a decision and not being able to make it because you don't know the literature, the techniques, or the tactics," he said. "So you make the wrong decision because you didn't school yourself. That process starts here. They teach the details here. Once you're out there, it's up to you. So make that positive effort to learn everything there is to learn so you can make the most informed decisions possible."

The award consists of a certificate of achievement from the Secretary of the Army, $1,500, and an engraved .45-caliber pistol. It is the highest honor that can be bestowed on an OCS graduate, said Lt. Col. Scott Armbrister, commander of the 3rd Battalion, (OCS), 11th Infantry Regiment.

Saeli, enlisted in the U.S. Marine Corps in 1982 and served initially at 29 Palms, Calif., and the Marine Corps Logistics Base, Albany, Ga., as a missile systems electronics repairman. Later he served with the 2nd Marine Division, Camp Lejeune, N.C.

Saeli separated from the Marine Corps in 1986 and attended the State University of New York at Fredonia. Later he attended Hawaii Pacific University. He maintained dean's list honors during all semesters attended at both schools.

He enlisted in the U. S. Army in 1988 and trained in infantry and airborne at Fort Benning. Assigned to the 82nd Airborne Division at Fort Bragg, N.C., he deployed with the lst Batallion, 505th Parachute Infantry Regiment for Desert Shield and Desert Storm. Subsequently, he served with the 25th Infantry Division in Hawaii.

Saeli is an honor graduate of the 3rd Brigade, 82nd Airborne Division, leadership course and the light leader course. He was named to the commandant's list of the primary leadership development course at Fort Bragg, the basic noncommissioned officer course at Schofield Barracks, Hawaii, and the Infantry Officer Basic Course at Fort Benning. He is a graduate of the Ranger and Pathfinder courses.

Among the numerous awards that Saeli has received are the Southwest Asis Service Medal with two Bronze Service Stars, the Liberation of Kuwait Medal and the Army Commendation Medal with two oak leaf clusters.

Patterson, for whom the award is named, served in the U.S. Army in both world wars. His combat service earned him the Distinguised Service Cross, Silver Star and the Purple Heart. He later served as a judge in the U.S. District Court and the U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals and as secretary of war during the President Harry Truman administration. When Patterson died in 1952, several friends established a trust fund on his behalf with monetary contributions for the awards.

Saeli, who said his career goals are modest, said he is looking forward to a company command.

"I'll continue to be a platoon leader," Saeli said. "That's my job. I don't have great and glorious goals. I set out to do a good job whatever job they offer me. That's my goal. I'm looking forward to company command about four years from now. That's the next thing I have my sights set on and spending time getting ready for that challenge."

Saeli is assigned as a rifle platoon leader with Company B, 2nd Batallion, 22nd Infantry, 10th Mountain Division (Light), Fort Drum, N.Y.

profiles in excellence

Name: Capt. Erik Sevigny

Award or recognition: Instructor of the Quarter
Military occupational specialty: Infantry
Unit: Company A, 2nd Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment
Job title: Senior platoon trainer
Years in the Army: Eight

What were your reasons for joining the Army?
I joined the Army because I wanted to serve my country.

Define your style of leadership.
I consider my leadership style to be in continual development. As I gain experience and continue to develop professionally.

What person has most influenced your career?
All of my company commanders have had varying levels of influence on my career.

If you were chief of staff of the Army for a day, what improvements would you make?
I would work to raise the pay for enlisted soldiers. I would also work to revise the Army's evaluation systems for both enlisted and officer.

What were your reasons for choosing your MOS?
The infantry is where I thought I could best put my abilities to good use.

Describe a memorable moment in your career.
The Florida Phase of Ranger Class 2-90. It was the coldest winter Florida had had in 30 years.

What are your career plans?
Within the next year, to take command of an infantry line company.

What others have to say:
Captain Sevigny is the consummate professional — tough, disciplined and an excellent leader. A gifted teacher, he is an ideal role model and mentor for our young Infantry lieutenants.

— Maj. Matthew T. Margotta,
Commander, Co. A 2nd Bn., 11th Inf. Regt.

Name: Stephen A. Magner

Award or recognition: Employee of the Quarter
Unit or activity: Directorate of Contracting
Job title: Contract administrator
Years on the job: Eight

What were your reasons for joining civil service?
I had worked for about nine years in construction management for different corporations. Civil service offered a better "hedge."

Define your work ethic.
"Lead by Example" is the work ethic my father taught me. By no means is it the easy way, but I find greater personal satisfaction when I've applied it well.

What person has most influenced your career?
William "Bill" Ragan, a high school teacher. He was the first person to teach me how to apply logic and physics together successfully, and he opened the door to a career in building science management.

If you were your supervisor for a day, what improvements would you make?
Less disruption of work flow, more acceptance by the staff, greater "profit" to the organization.

Describe a memorable moment in your career.
In January 1993, a legal action for thousands of dollars was pending against the government by a contractor. The chief of the division asked me to try to break the deadlock. After reviewing the files and negotiating with the contractor for two days, I was able to achieve a settlement, which in time would be the basis for final resolution. This was personally very gratifying to me.

What are your future career plans?
To continue to progress to higher positions where I may have a greater impact on our community.

What others have to say :
An outstanding worker any supervisor would enjoy having on his or her team. Using innovation and his technical expertise in both contracting and construction, Steve identifies and develops improved processes for performing his daily work. He is a real asset to Fort Benning.

— Bruce G. Piper
Chief, Directorate of Public Works Division

Name: Staff Sgt. William T. Sigmon

Award or recognition: Instructor of the Quarter
Military occupational specialty: Infantryman
Unit: Company B, 1st Battalion (Airborne) 507th Infantry Regiment
Job title: Airborne instructor
Years in the Army: 14

What were your reasons for joining the Army? My father was in the Army, and I always wanted to make him proud of me.

Define your style of leadership.
Participative.

What person has most influenced your career?
Richard Avalos, my first sergeant when I left Fort Bragg in 1988.

If you were sergeant major of the Army for a day, what improvements would you make?
I would try to impress upon the chain of command that small unit leaders need more input on the training of their squads and teams.

What were your reasons for choosing your military occupational specialty?
I wanted to help defend our country and the backbone of the fighting force is and always will be the infantry.

Describe a memorable moment in your career.
When I finally passed Jumpmaster School at Fort Bragg the second time through. I made some mistakes my first time through, but it only strengthened my resolve to excel the next time I went through.

What are your future career plans?
To attend the Pathfinder School and to go to Advanced Noncommissioned Officer Course, right here at Fort Benning.

What others have to say:
As first sergeant of Bravo Company, I feel that his commitment to the soldiers and the company helps to achieve our mission success.

— 1st Sgt. Samuel Strater,
Co. B, 1st Bn. (Abn), 507th Inf., 11th Inf. Regt.

ON POST

Tax assistance — Fort Benning's Tax Office is open for business.

Free assistance is available to all military members, retirees and family members. Customers can obtain forms and file electronically through the office.

Located in Building 2640, Soldiers' Plaza, the office will operate from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., Monday to Friday. The Tax Office will be open to April 15.

For more information, call 545-4267.

School board meeting — The next meeting of the Fort Benning School Board will be at 12:30 p.m. Tuesday.

The meeting will be in the schools' administrative building conference room, 201 Custer Road, Building 2670.

Copies of the agenda will be in the schools after noon today. For more information, call 545-2500.

Youth membership drive — Youth Services will conduct a membership card drive in February. Membership cards will be available for sale at the following facilities:

• Saturday — Indianhead Gym or Center, Building 2592, 545-3607

• Feb. 24 — McGraw Outreach Center, Building 11303, 544-2673.

Employment assistance — Army Community Service's Family Member Employment Assistance Program is implementing a new service to those seeking employment.

The first and third Wednesday of each month, local area temporary agencies will be available at the Family Unit Network Center, Building 359, from 1:30 to 3:30 p.m.

For more information, call Mark Mills, acting manager, FMEAP, at 545-6969 or 545-5516.

Arbor Day ceremony — A tree-planting ceremony in honor of Arbor Day will be at White Elementary School today at 10 a.m.

Students from the school will read poems and essays they have written about Arbor Day and will help plant a tree.

In case of rain, the ceremony will be moved inside to the school's auditorium.

Parent training workshop — Parents can learn about the "ages and stages" during a seminar at Tot Town Child Development Center. The seminar will be Feb. 28 at 10 a.m., 1 p.m. and 7 p.m.

The center's training and curriculum specialist, Bettie Harris, will help parents to understand what their child could possibly be doing at different age levels. The seminar will be at the center, located on First Division Road.

For more information, call 689-8698 or 689-8772.

West Point Society celebrates — The Fort Benning chapter of the West Point Society invites all graduates of the U.S. Military Academy to the 1996 celebration of Founder's Day.

The event will be March 16 at 6 p.m. in the Regimental Room of the Fort Benning Officers' Club.

Howard H. "Bo" Callaway Sr., chairman and chief executive officer of Ida Cason Callaway Foundation and former Secretary of the Army, is the guest speaker for the occasion.

Callaway is a 1949 graduate of the academy, a former third district congressman from Georgia and was appointed Secretary of the Army in 1973.

In 1975, he was awarded the Medal of Distinguished Public Service by the Department of Defense and managed President Gerald Ford's presidential election campaign during the 1976 elections.

For more information, call 544-9252.

Parent academy planned — The Fort Benning School system is making plans to conduct its annual Parent Academy to be March 1 and 2.

Featured guest speaker will be Dr. Lonise Bias. Sessions will include such topics as: management techniques, developing math and science study skills and encouraging student success.

Space in the academy is limited and reservations will be required and taken on a first-come, first-serve basis. Parents, as well as Fort Benning personnel and family members who do not have children, can register at any of the post schools and the administration office on Custer Road.

OWC luncheon set — The Fort Benning Officers' Wives' Club luncheon is set for Wednesday at 11:30 a.m. in the Officers' Club Regimental Room. Social hour begins at 11 a.m.

A guest speaker from Cargill's Nursery will discuss tips for landscaping and yard improvement.

The menu will be a buffet with tea and coffee. Cost is $7.

Prior to the luncheon there will be an activity registration at 10:30 a.m. for members and nonmembers alike.

For more information, call Louise Kelly at 682-0788.

To make reservations for the luncheon, call 682-4913 if your last name begins with letters A to L, or 682-8495 if your last name begins with M to Z. Reservations must be made no later than Feb. 16.

Faith School honors — The theme for Don C. Faith School's Black History Month program is "Every American Can Make a Difference."

The program, scheduled for 2 p.m. today, will be student-centered and student-focused. School club presidents and other students will share the podium with guest speaker, Chap. Anthony Montague.

School band and chorus performances, student solos and readings will be included. Martin Luther King Jr. essay contest winners will be awarded.

affect them," she said.

O'Neil added that everyone's problem may not be solved right away; however, she believes many people feel better about having their questions answered, or at least knowing someone is working on finding an answer.

Although town hall meetings provide post residents a direct link to those who make decisions about families living in quarters, both Morgan and O'Neil said the town hall program also provides another important opportunity for residents.

"It's a chance for neighbors to get to know one another as well as their mayors," Morgan said.

This quarter's town hall meetings are being scheduled with post agencies. Mayors will inform residents of dates through newsletters. Look for the dates to be published in The Bayonet Community Briefs section as well.

PISTOL MATCH

Marksmen brave cold

USAIC Public Affairs Office

More than 75 shooters bore the freezing temperatures to compete in a tactical pistol shoot Feb. 3 on English Range.

Robert Delaney was the new high shooter with a factor of 3.39. His factor was 96 percent of the high match factor of 3.52, which was shot by Morris Lewark.

Dennis Cavender took first place overall with a score of 209 and a hit factor of 3.513.

In the standard class, Murohy Lege took first with a 207 score and a 2.762hit factor.

Female shooter Brandi Morgan finished first against five other females with a score of 215 and a hit factor of 1.370.

The next match is the Bad Moon Rising Match March 2 beginning at 7 p.m.

The match will be split into categories which include competitor, National Rifle Association or higher and U.S. Pistol Shooting Association C class or higher, standard (civilians), military law enforcement, high female and high new shooter and a team category.

Teams must consist of two shooters, one of which must be female. The entry fee is $12 if paid by Feb. 29 and $16 after that date.

The match is open to shooters with any serviceable 9 mm or above handgun with a barrel of less than six inches.

This match is essentially for stock guns. If you do not have your own handgun, Glock 9 mm pistols are available.

For more information, call 689-3371.

Pork or plastic trailers add to jigs and spinnerbaits

By Earl Bentz Steve Price
Outboard marine Corporation

Professional bass tournament angler Denny Brauer always looks for ways to make his lures more attractive to bass, and one of the most effective tricks he uses is adding a pork or plastic trailer to his jigs and spinnerbaits.

> "If you flip a jig with a big pork chunk on it right in front of a big bass, that fish will be more likely to strike..."
> — Denny Brauer
> Professional bass fisherman

"Trailers do several things to a lure," Brauer said. "All of them are good. First, a trailer makes the lure larger, so bass can see it better. It also adds action so bass can hear it more easily and find it faster. A trailer also adds weight to a lure so you can cast further, allowing you to stay away from your target where you won't spook the fish."

Brauer, winner of several national bass tournaments, uses both pork and plastic trailers depending on the water temperature.

"In colder water, I prefer a pork trailer because it seems to stay more limber; but, in warm water, I'll use plastic because it has plenty of action. Pork dries out very quickly in warm weather, and plastic seems to get stiff in cold weather," says Brauer.

Trailers are available in a wide variety of sizes and styles, said the pro, but they are basically used on only two lures, spinnerbaits and jigs.

"A trailer almost serves as a teaser on a spinnerbait," Brauer said, "and it can be particularly effective if you're getting 'short' strikes. If the bass are hitting a spinnerbait but not really taking the lure, adding a trailer like a plastic craw-worm or a pork frog with legs often brings a better strike."

Pork trailers can also help spinnerbaits come through vegetation more effectively because they add a planing surface and cover part of the hook.

"With a jig, a trailer adds bulk so you're presenting a larger visual package to a bass," Brauer said. "I think this can be especially important when bass are not very aggressive and they're hiding in thick cover.

"If you flip a jig with a big pork chunk on it right in front of a big bass, that fish will be more likely to strike than if you're only using a jig without a trailer."

Another way Brauer uses trailers is when he wants to add buoyancy to his lures. Pork, especially, is a good choice when you need a heavy jig to penetrate thick cover but want to slow the lure's fall.

"Adding a big pork trailer will definitely slow a jig's fall," Brauer said, "and this can be important now as we come into the winter fishing season when bass are less active. They don't want fast-moving lures of any type, and adding a pork trailer is one way to slow them down "

The decision of which particular style of trailer to use is both a matter of personal preference as well as trying to achieve a particular effect. Trailers with long swimming tails add more action while shorter, thicker trailers add more buoyancy.

NCOA takes 507th 64-54

The "Over the Hill Gang" from the Noncommissioned Officer Academy proved they were still young enough to play basketball by defeating the "Riggers" from Company E, 1st Battalion (Airborne), 507th Infantry, 11th Infantry Regiment 64-54 at the Briant Wells Field House Feb. 8.

The Over the Hill Gang used a combination of fast breaks, strong defense and precise three-point shooting from Robert Jackson and Michael Artis to jump out to an early lead.

Jackson and Artis combined for a total of 38 points in the first half and at the break the gang led 48-30.

The Riggers made adjustments at halftime and succeeded in shutting down Jackson and Artis in the second half. The Riggers outscored the Over the Hill Gang 24-16 in the second half. However, it was not enough to overcome the tough gang defense or the big first half lead.

The win improved the Over the Hill Gang's record to 8-2 in the combined league and dropped the Riggers to 5-6.

Scoring for the Noncommissioned Officer Academy: Jackson (26), Artis (12), Cumming (10), McCommons (10), Smith (6).

Scoring for Co. E, 1st Bn (Airborne), 507th Inf., 11th Inf. Regt.: Smith (23), Shelfield (15), Coley (7), Bowman (5), Clayton (4).

MEDDAC stays on top beating MPA 71-60

The U.S. Army Medical Department Activity (MEDDAC) basketball team remained in first place in the Combined League with a resounding 71-60 victory over the Military Police Activity II in a game Tuesday at the Briant Wells Field House.

MEDDAC coach Marshall Brown said the victory was a result of "good solid defense, controlling the boards, and good team shooting." Neither team could gain a decisive edge in the first half and MEDDAC entered the break with a slim 24-22 lead.

"It was a close game at the end of the first half but our team wanted the win more than they did," said Brown. In the second half MEDDAC's Leon Tyner led the offensive charge with 19 points as MEDDAC outscored MPA II 47-33 to secure the victory.

MEDDAC assistant coach David Bethea said the solid play of the defense allowed the offense to control the tempo of the game and that was the difference between winning and losing.

The win improved MEDDAC's record to 9-2 and dropped MPA II to 7-4. The two teams will meet again on Thursday at the Briant Wells Field House at 5:15 p.m.

Scoring for MEDDAC: Tyner (22), Spaulding (13), Cauldwell (9), Brewer (8), Starr (6), St. Halaire (5), Gaines (3), Johnson (3), Hankins (2).

Scoring for MPA II Atkins (19), Lewis (15), Powell (11), Anderson (9), Neal (4), O'Neal (2).

Stars to kick off season with home opener

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Though the professional football season ended with the Super Bowl, the semi-professional football season has just begun.

The Columbus Stars will kick off its season against the Beaufort Storms Saturday, 7:30 p.m. at Garret Stadium.

The Columbus Stars, comprised of military and civilian players, will battle the South Carolina Storms, which is made up of mostly U.S. Marines from Paris Island.

This year's team will again be headed by Tom Staton, assisted by Connie Burnham from Fort Benning.

And, once again, Fort Benning soldiers will play a large part in the offense and defense of the Stars. This year's roster will carry 10 Fort Benning players or coaches.

The game will be open to the public. Tickets will $5 for the general public, $3 for military in uniform or with a military identification card and $1 for Infantry Training Brigade soldiers.

Garrett Stadium is located at 3519 Summerville Rd. in Phenix City. Take Victory Drive to the 280 by-pass, turn right at Winn Dixie on Stadium Drive. Drive two miles and the stadium is ahead; or take I-185 north to Exit 7 to Phenix City and exit on Summerville Road. Turn left to the stadium.

Fisheries' biologists continue to monitor bass fish population at Lake Seminole

Georgia Dept. of Natural Resources

Since the early 1990s, anglers have experienced exceptionally good fishing on Lake Seminole for largemouth bass.

In 1995, however, bass anglers reported much lower catch rates for bass on Lake Seminole than in previous years. Many anglers questioned why the success rate for bass fishing at Lake Seminole seemed to change so suddenly.

Several factors have combined to make bass fishing on Lake Seminole more challenging, according to fisheries biologists with the Georgia Department of Natural Resources, Wildlife Resources Division.

One of the reasons is there are fewer bass in the lake at the present time. Fish population samples conducted by fisheries biologists during the spring and fall indicate a lower number of catchable-size bass this year than in 1993 and 1994, when anglers reported higher catch rates.

Biologists attribute the smaller bass population to poor survival of bass spawns in the early 1990s when hydrilla, a nuisance aquatic plant, covered about 75 percent of the lake.

Research has shown that when vegetation, such as hydrilla, covers more than 40 percent of a lake's total area, poor survival of bass spawns are more likely to occur.

Another reason is fishing patterns have changed. Areas that traditionally produced good bass fishing did not offer the same opportunities in 1995.

This shift occurred, in part, as a result of the 1994 flooding, which caused changes in the location and density of many hydrilla beds on Lake Seminole.

These changes caused the bass population to spread out in the lake, making it more difficult for anglers to find and catch fish.

Poor water quality and fish kills are not suspected as factors that have caused reduced catch rates, according to fisheries biologists. The Wildlife Resources Division investigates all fish kills, and if anglers see dead or dying fish on Lake Seminole, or any of Georgia's public fishing waters, they should notify a fisheries office as soon as possible.

"While the bass population on Lake Seminole is not as strong as it has been in recent years, this lake should produce some good bass catches of smaller fish in 1996," said David Partridge, fisheries biologist. "Fish population surveys indicate there was a good survival of the bass spawn in 1995, which should lead to better fishing opportunities in years to come."

The Wildlife Resources Division will continue to monitor the largemouth bass population and other fish populations during 1996.

For more information on the bass population on Lake Seminole, contact the Albany Fisheries Management office at (912) 430-4256.

Burn plan controls wildfires

Natural Resource Management Branch

For more than a decade, the Natural Resource Management Branch has implemented an aggressive, controlled burning management plan, resulting in a significant reduction in the number of wildfires in Fort Benning woodlands.

Fallen leaves and branches accumulate on forest floors all year long. Normally this natural litter decays and recycles, but during a drought, it becomes fuel that may be ignited by lightning or man.

"A forest fire has always been a periodic and inevitable event in the wooded uplands of the southeast," said Robert King, wildlife biologist. "In fact, woodland fire benefits the living forest community, speeds up the nutrient cycle, maintains the association of forest plant species that have always occurred here and reduces the level of forest fuels."

Forestry and wildlife personnel set fires to pine woodland floors, he said. The benefits are the same as those from wildfire, but the burning is under controlled conditions.

Occasional drought in woodlands is inevitable, King said. "Burning fuels under controlled conditions ensures there will be fewer wildfires when drought occurs, and there will be no wildfires of catastrophic proportions," he said.

Between Jan. 1 and Sept. 1, the natural forest litter in Fort Benning's pine woodlands is burned.

The entire pine forest is treated one parcel at a time, until at the end of three years when all of it has received fire. This is called a three-year burn rotation, and it assures that dangerous levels of natural fuels are unable to accumulate on the forest floor, King said.

Burn rotations in some forests may be 10 to 15 years or even longer. In long rotations, fuel accumulates to dangerously high levels, eventually resulting in catastrophic wildfire. Such fires are virtually uncontrollable and can cause considerable loss of life and property.

Prior to the huge Yellowstone wildfires that were covered on national television for several weeks, National Park Service policy did not support any controlled burning program. The service began a controlled burning program as a result of those wildfires.

From its beginning in the 1960s to 1986, Fort Benning's controlled burning program was on a 10-year burn rotation. Over those 20 years, there was an average of 337 wildfires per year. Shortening the rotation to seven years between 1986 and 1989 reduced the wildfire rate to an average of 276 a year. The rotation was shortened to four years in 1990 and to three years in 1992. There has been an average of 193 wildfires per year since 1990.

Severe wildfires occur most often in early fall at the end of long summer drought, King said. By the end of the 1995 summer, rainfall at Fort Benning was 13 inches below average. As Labor Day weekend approached, temperatures and relative humidity dropped significantly.

Sept. 1, high winds and an extremely low relative humidity assured that before the day was out, a wildfire would start that would spread far and wide.

It started at Grandstaff Range; and, although it spread over 1,000 acres, it gained little attention. This wildfire did not produce the mass of smoke that a fire of its size typically does, because the three-year rotation had reduced fuel loads, King said.

ask the judge

By Scott L. Frost
Office of the Staff Judge Advocate

Q. It is tax time again and I have received a number of forms from the Internal Revenue Service and my home state. I am not sure exactly how to prepare them. I am thinking about going to an off-post tax-preparing service and paying to have my taxes done for me. Is there any help available on post?

A. Yes, there is help available on Fort Benning and it is free. The Legal Assistance Division of the Office of the Staff Judge Advocate, along with Army Community Service, provides tax assistance to soldiers and family members. The Tax Office opened Jan. 31 and will be open through April 15. The hours of operation are 8:30 am to 4:30 p.m., Monday through Friday.

The Tax Office is located in Building 2640, Soldiers' Plaza

An important component of the program is the soldiers designated from each unit to serve as unit tax advisers. You or your family members' unit tax adviser is the first source of information and assistance. Unit tax advisers receive extensive training for one week from the Internal Revenue Service and the Georgia Department of Revenue.

If your unit tax adviser is unable to resolve the problem, he or she will contact the Tax Office for more in-depth help. You can also call the IRS directly at (800) 829-1040.

Some federal and state forms are available at the Tax Office. However, if you are in need of any forms, particularly state income tax forms, you should stop by the Tax Office early in the tax season. If the Tax Office does not have the forms you need, you will have to request them from your state tax authority.

Many individuals may be able to file by telephone. The processing times for telephone returns are approximately the same as for returns filed electronically. Soldiers who are filing a 1040EZ can file by using a touch-tone telephone. When you receive tax forms this year, you should carefully read the instructions and see if you qualify. This service is free and may be a simpler way for you to file.

Tax Office personnel will also be filing returns electronically this year. The advantage of electronic filing is that a properly prepared and transmitted return enables the tax payer to receive the refund much faster than the conventional filing by mail. Any questions regarding electronic tax filing should first be directed to the soldier's unit tax adviser.

When seeking tax assistance, an individual should be prepared to bring the following items: W-2 Forms from all employers, Form 1099 showing interest earned, Social Security numbers for every family member more than 1 year old, including nonworking spouse, employer identification number or Social Security number and address of child-care provider (if applicable), detailed itemized deductions if applicable, mortgage interest statement, power of attorney, if filing for absent soldier, copy of 1995 tax return, bank name, bank branch and account number.

Call your unit tax adviser or the Tax Office if you have any questions about these matters or any other tax related matter. The phone number of the Tax Office is 545-4267.

UNDERSECRETARY OF DEFENSE

Army future appears bright

By David P. Masko
Air Force News Service

SAN ANTONIO, Texas — Edwin Dorn, the undersecretary of defense for personnel and readiness, described 1996 and beyond as an almost triumphant period that holds much promise for those serving in the armed forces.

He said the Defense Authorization Bill for fiscal 1996 provides many quality-of-life benefits for service members and their families.

"We've moved a lot of money into quality of life," he said. "We expect to focus more heavily on housing, which needs a lot of work. We also have some new authority in the '96 bill that allows us to work with private developers for housing."

"I think we've made enormous progress," he said. "We got millions of dollars more dedicated to quality of life now that we weren't dedicating to quality of life a couple years ago."

Dorn punctuated his remarks with high hopes for future pay raises.

"It's good news; it's good news," he said. "The president and the secretary (Defense Secretary William Perry) have committed themselves to a pattern of pay raises over the next several years — the maximum pay raise allowable by law."

Dorn said he thinks next year's pay raise will work out to about 2.5 or 2.6 percent. He said the next raise would depend on the cost of living index and probably would be in the same range as the raise for this year.

He also expressed pride in what is being done to change perceptions about a military that's been hit hard with massive personnel and funding cuts.

"What I hear mostly is not concerns any more," Dorn said. "The first year or two of the administration, we heard lots of concerns about the way the downsizing was proceeding ... whether or not individual soldiers, sailors or airmen were going to be affected."

"We're now 85 to 90 percent through with the military drawdown," he said. "We're well along with the civilian drawdown, so I think people are feeling a lot more confident about the future and about their future in the military."

> "If I were talking to a young man or young woman in high school looking for a challenge and an opportunity, I'd say go for the military."
> — Edwin Dorn
> Undersecretary of defense

He said making any future cuts would be done sensibly and sensitively in terms of watching out for the welfare of the military and civilian personnel.

"The president has made a commitment that the people who helped us with the Cold War will not be left out in the cold," he said. Dorn emphasized his recurring theme — that the military has a bright future.

"If I were talking to a young man or young woman in high school looking for a challenge and an opportunity, I'd say go for the military," he said. "There are 200,000 real opportunities. It's a good way to find a profession, and it's a darned good way to serve your fellow man."

Still, Dorn said his heart goes out to military and civilians across the United States who have lost their jobs and way of life because of the military's downsizing.

"They've been affected by this huge change in the way we do the military," he said. "But it's an essential adjustment. The Cold War is over. We do not need to maintain as huge a force as we've maintained in the past."

Dorn said Defense leaders are sensitive to the need to control operations tempo in the wake of the drawdown to provide as much stability as possible for the 1.5 million service members on active duty.

"We're determined not to push our folks too hard, because if we push folks too hard, they start leaving us. And we lose our best people," he said.

At Our Breakfast Bar, Eggs Come With 39 Side Dishes.

At some places when you order breakfast, it seems all you get with your eggs is a wait. At Shoney's, however, a wait is about all that doesn't come with breakfast. Instead what you get is 39 dishes. And fast. Bacon, grits, sausage, biscuits, fresh fruits – anything you see at Shoney's All-You-Care-To-Eat Breakfast Bar. Just come on in. You'll taste the difference in seconds flat.

Journalists, broadcasters take TRADOC competition honors

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Military and civilian journalists from the post Public Affairs Office and the School of the Americas Public Affairs Office recently grabbed honors at the Training and Doctrine Command level in the Keith L. Ware Print and Broadcast Media Journalism Competition.

The post television station, USAIC TV, Channel 3, received first place in the television information program category.

The Bayonet editor, Agatha Hudson Debrow, placed third in the news articles category.

Pfc. Brian R. Voller took second place in single or stand-alone photographs category and an honorable mention in the features, news or sports picture story category.

Spc. Lori Egan placed third and Spc. Lisa M. Hibbert received honorable mention in the Paul D. Savanuck Military Print Journalist of the Year category.

Spc. Judith Ginder, from the School of the Americas Public Affairs Office, placed third in the features, news or sports picture story category.

The Bayonet contract writers, Richard Brill and Shannon Day, took first and second place respectively, in the Civilian Contract Writer of the Year category.

The Bayonet newspaper received honorable mention in the civilian enterprise newspaper (metro) category.

Voller and USAIC TV will go on to compete in the Department of Army level contest.

The competition, named in memory of Maj. Gen. Keith L. Ware, former Army Chief of Public Affairs, is an annual event with a goal of ensuring the best internal information efforts are recognized for professional excellence and outstanding achievement.

Luncheon honors Nurse Corps

By Shannon Day
Special to the Bayonet©

Army Nurse Corps members, both active duty and retirees, came together Feb. 11 for a luncheon at the Follow Me Golf Course Clubhouse to celebrate the corps' 95 years of service to the Army.

The Army Nurse Corps 95th anniversary celebration began as Col. Roslyn D. Booker, chief of the nursing department at Martin Army Community Hospital, welcomed everyone.

"We as a corps can be very proud of the accomplishments we have achieved through the years," she said, also thanking the retired nurses for their overwhelming response and attendance.

Col. Gerald Cross, commander of community services at the hospital, attributed much of the success the facility has had in the last year to the corps.

"They are the guardians of the patients," Cross said.

After brunch, Booker introduced the guest speaker, Col. Susan C. McCall, assistant chief of the corps.

"We have lots to celebrate, be happy about and be proud of," McCall said.

The topic of her speech was Tri-Care and its impact on Army nursing.

The new system will place more demands on nursing skills, she said.

However, she said the corps should continue to be patient centered, promote health and prevent disease. The corps should also continue to provide nursing leadership and high-quality care.

After her remarks, she presented a video made by nurses at Walter Reed Hospital about the corps' history.

The video was followed by the cutting of the anniversary cake, traditionally sliced with a saber, by retired Lt. Col. Betty Powell, the senior corps officer present and 2nd Lt. Julie McInnis, the junior corps officer present.

After the cutting of the cake, the male members of the corps sang a rendition of the Army Nurse Corps Song, played by the Infantry Band.

Post names Drill Sgt of the Year

By Shannon Day
Special to The Bayonet©

Fort Benning has announced its 1996 Drill Sergeant of the Year. He is Sgt. 1st Class Gregory J. Mance, drill sergeant leader, Fort Benning Drill Sergeant School, Infantry Training Brigade.

He and five other drill sergeants (one from each battalion at the Infantry Training Brigade) spent three days in close competition.

On Feb. 12, the first day of competition, the drill sergeants took an Army Physical Fitness Test and a rifle marksmanship test.

The next day, the candidates were given a hands-on performance test of Drill Sergeant School tasks. These included three drill and ceremony movements; one physical training stretch and exercise; several bayonet positions and offensive movements.

On Valentine's Day, the last day of competition, the drill sergeants each appeared before a formal board and were questioned on variety of topics from about 19 different subject areas.

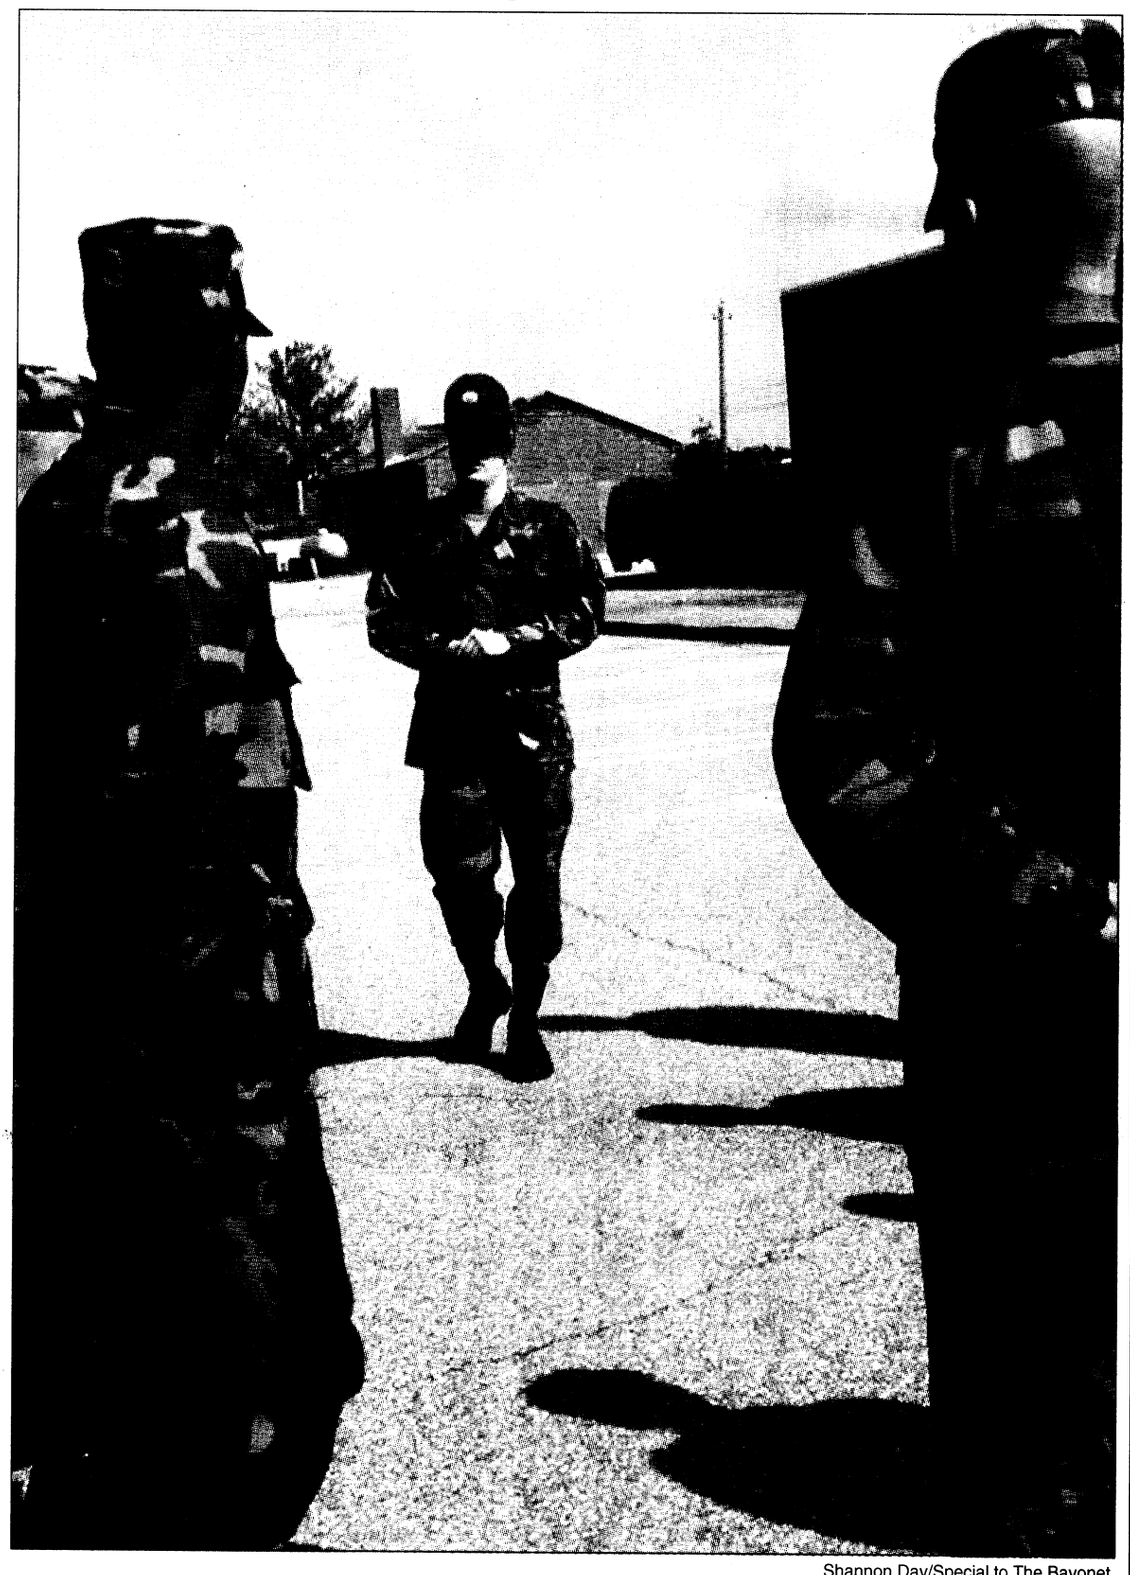
Mance said he began to prepare for the contest several weeks in advance.

"I did a lot of physical training and spent time looking over and memorizing manuals," he said. "It was pretty much continual study for about six weeks."

He couldn't have won without the help of a few friends at the Drill Sergeant School, he said. Drill sergeants Michael Fowler, Christopher Greca and John Lowthorpe, spent a lot of time studying and going over procedures with him. They also set up mock boards to help him prepare for the official one.

Mance said the board portion of the contest was particularly challenging because he hadn't been to one since 1989, when he appeared before the staff sergeant board.

He also said he owes a lot of thanks to his wife, Brigitte, for putting up with his hectic schedule the last six weeks.



"She has really been supportive," he said, adding that he planned to take her out to do some celebrating now that the contest is over. "She already went out and bought a new dress."

Although Mance said he is pleased he won, he is relieved the contest is over.

"It's a mentally and physically exhausting proceeding," he said.

However, Mance doesn't have long to relax because he is beginning to prepare for the Training and Doctrine Command Drill Sergeant of the Year competition, which is in May.

The Fort Benning Drill Sergeant of the Year ceremony will take place April 12 at 3:30 p.m. in the Sand Hill Recreation Center.

ACOE team to visit Benning March 3

By John W. Hendrix
Commanding general

Excellence is in the air. Fort Benning will soon have the chance to demonstrate once again, that it's the best installation in the Army.

CG speaks

The Army Community of Excellence evaluation team will be here March 3 to 10. The purpose of the visit is to identify the top Army communities of excellence to serve as role models for our Army.

They will be looking for "best-in-class" processes to share with the rest of the Army.

I know they will find plenty of examples here.

We are two-time world champions. I expect us to add a third title this year. As champions, we take pride in welcoming the ACOE team to our community where we can showcase those things we do better than anyone else.

This year, we will once again tell the Fort Benning story and demonstrate how we are continually improving in five key processes: infantry training, infantry doctrine, infantry future, force projection and base operations and quality of life.

There are new rules this year. This is the year Malcolm Baldridge criteria will be used to evaluate the installations.

I know you are familiar with this because you just completed your chain-teaching on the requirements of the Army Performance Improvement Criteria.

So you will be ready.

And while we certainly want to be "three-peat" winners, APIC is more than winning an award. It's about change. It's about improving our processes and the way we do business.

This year's competition will not be easy. Change can be painful. But we can, and must change to survive.

My challenge to you is to break the paradigm, seek new horizons, new ways of doing things, to trust your co-workers and work with them as a team to do things smarter and better.

APIC is an excellent management tool to improve the way we do business and will help us achieve greater success as we move the Army and Fort Benning into the 21st Century.

It's the tool that will help us manage our installation, help us make our post even better.

This tool can be applied to any level and any area of management: leadership, information and analysis; strategic planning; human resource development and management; process management; operational results and customer focus and satisfaction.

APIC is also a great way to conduct self-assessment.

My three tips to help us win another championship are:

• Attitude. A positive, can-do attitude is essential for success;

• Communication. We must communicate upward, downward and laterally. It's crucial to ensure everyone is on "the same sheet of music," in order to build a solid foundation of team work.

• Taking care of people. Our people are our most important resource. They are closer to the day to day problems and opportunities for improvement than anyone else. They are creative and the best source for new ideas, which can lead to continuous performance improvement. So don't forget to empower them, then stand back and watch them perform.

Breakfast to honor excellence & quality

USAIC Public Affairs Office

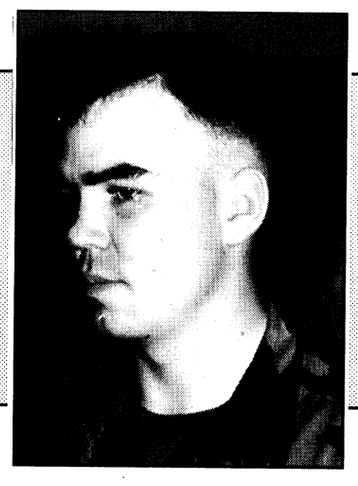
Fort Benning will welcome the Army Community of Excellence evaluation team at the Excellence Appreciation Day Breakfast and Quality Awards Ceremony March 5 at 8 a.m. at the Officers' Club.

Hosted by Maj. Gen. John W. Hendrix, post commanding general, the breakfast is designed to recognize and honor Fort Benning's employees, both military and civilian, for the job they do day in and day out.

Having the ACOE team present will provide the work force an opportunity to demonstrate the spirit of Fort Benning.

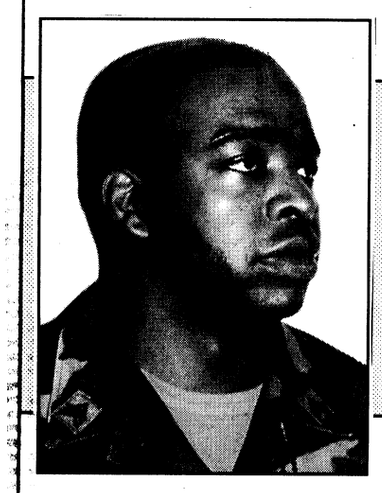
The menu is bacon or sausage, scrambled eggs, grits, biscuits, coffee and juice and costs $4.50 per person.

Tickets will be available through March 1 in the Parrish Building, Building 66.



For more information, call, Pat Porter at 545-1713 or 545-4332.

VARIOUS VOICES



Have you ever had or shown a random act of kindness?

Soldier shows that beneath his military appearance is

A person of exceptional kindness

By Agatha Hudson Debrow
Bayonet editor

He was like most other soldiers. He wore an Army green, camouflaged battle dress uniform. He was about 20 years old, and his reddish brown hair was cut in a typical Army haircut, a fade.

About the only noticeable difference in his outward appearance was his Peter Sellers'-type mustache, which, when he smiled, stretched thinly across his top lip.

While his uniform, haircut and overall appearance was typical of any Fort Benning soldier, I discovered he was unlike anyone — soldier or civilian —I had ever met.

He had sauntered into the flower shop at the Main Mall that Thursday afternoon shortly after I had. I noticed how he looked around a bit, then pensively picked up a plastic champagne bottle full of red candies with two, one large, one small, "Happy Valentine's Day" balloons floating on an attached string.

After deciding on the balloon arrangement, he came and stood behind me in the checkout line. We exchanged glances, and I said to him, "You're late."

"It's for my sister," he said, quickly explaining.

"Aren't you nice."

"Well, she and her boyfriend broke up and she just had a baby."

"That's really sweet," I said, "especially for a brother."

"I'm just trying to cheer her up," he said.

I looked at the customers in front of me to see how soon I could expect to checkout. Another soldier and a woman stood waiting at the counter, and a child was running around playing on the floor near them. I looked for the clerk, who was in the back making an arrangement.

"She sure is taking her time," I thought. And it seemed as if she would never get to the next customer, me.

I was in a hurry since I was on my lunch hour and I was trying to make it to the Medical Center to see my former boss. I had stopped by the flower shop on the way to pick up some cut flowers or a plant to brighten her hospital room.

I had quickly decided on a croton, an orange, yellow, beige and green plant, since it was one of my favorites. While standing in line, I decided to look in my checkbook.

"Hum, no checks again," I thought. I quickly placed the croton on the counter and dashed to my car to get my other checkbook

Agatha Hudson Debrow believes people should practice more random acts of kindness.

When I returned, the soldier who was previously in line behind me was now at the counter. The clerk fastidiously checked the price of the arrangement and the price of the balloons.

"Why isn't it all priced together?" I thought. "Why are the balloons a separate cost?"

While she was trying to get everything together, I decided to write a card to go along with the plant I was getting, so I moved beside the soldier to the other end of the counter.

"Oh, I need to get one of those, too," he said, and he carefully picked out a card, "May I borrow your pen?."

"Sure," I said.

He wrote a longer-than-usual message. Then he smiled and returned my pen.

I returned the smile, trying to be nice and friendly.

Finally, the clerk totaled the soldier's order, he paid for it and left the store.

After what had seemed like an hour, I was finally going to pay for the croton and go on to the hospital.

I stepped closer to the cash register. The clerk was moving slowly again and seemingly ignoring me.

"Do you accept credit cards," I asked assertively, trying to speed things up.

"Yes."

"Visa?"

"Yes, but, it's already paid for," she said in a didn't-you-know, matter-of-fact sort of way.

"How?" I asked, puzzled. "By whom? I stammered "And why?"

"The guy in front of you," she said. "I thought you two were together."

I ignored that statement, thinking what on Earth would make her think that.

"Did he know he was paying for it?" I said, thinking she had mistakenly added it to his bill.

"Yes," she said. "In fact, he told me to add it to his bill."

"Why would he do that," I said.

"I don't know," she said.

I stood frozen and in shock; my mouth gaped open. I didn't know what to say. I stood immobilized for a moment, trying to figure out why and what to do.

Question after question raced through my mind. Was she sure he knew he was paying for it? Did he really ask her to add it to his bill? If so, why? Why would he pay for flowers for a total stranger? Was this his way of making a pass at me?

Common sense finally kicked in, and I realized I needed to catch up with the soldier to make sure he knew he had paid for the plant. I was convinced, he had made a mistake.

I ran out of the flower shop, looking for him, realizing the only way I could distinguish him from every other soldier in BDUs in the mall was by those red, white and silver Valentine's Day balloons. I didn't see them in the mall, so I ran outside.

I spotted the balloons halfway across the parking lot, so I ran to catch him. By the time I reached him, he was getting in his car — a white Ford Escort that looked to be around an '88 or '89.

"Why did you do that," I asked, making a conscious effort to look at his nametag. I looked for rank, too, but he had on a jacket and I couldn't see any.

"I just wanted to, ma'am," he said. "Happy Valentine's Day."

My mouth gaped open again. I stood frozen. Then as if from nowhere, the words, "Thank you" tumbled from my lips.

I didn't know what to think, what to feel, let alone what to say.

Those two words were all I could muster from my state of shock — my shock that kindness in its truest sense still exists.

I think his last name was Morrison, and this spelling could be wrong. I don't know his unit or his rank. But, I do know he blessed me that day. Praise the Lord!

545-boss

Dial 545-BOSS is the commander's action line for soldiers, family members and civilians to call when they have problems or complaints that can't be resolved elsewhere.

While it is not a substitute for the chain of command or for agencies established to provide assistance, the line offers another means of communication between Fort Benning's community and commanders.

The Bayonet features some of the calls that may benefit other members of the Fort Benning community.

Call: The caller said he feels that the automated teller machine in Infantry Hall should not charge the users $1 since it is the only ATM in the building. It's like having a captive audience.

Directorate of Resource Management response:

It was explained to the caller that all on-post financial institutions were offered the opportunity to place ATMs in Infantry Hall. Only CB&T chose to locate an ATM in the building. In order to lower cost for their customers, on-post financial institutions are allowed to charge fees that are customarily charged by financial institutions in the surrounding area. It is customary for banks in the surrounding area to charge nonaccount holders for use of their ATMs, therefore the post allows CB&T to charge for this service. In this way, they maintain lower costs for their account holders.

DoD declassifies information chemical weapons stockpile

Army New Service

WASHINGTON — The Department of Defense announced Jan. 22 newly declassified information on the United States stockpile of chemical weapons awaiting destruction at eight sites in the U.S. and one site on Johnston Atoll in the Pacific Ocean.

DoD is citing the release of the information as another example of U.S. openness in the area of chemical weapons and one that underscores the U.S. commitment to eliminating chemical weapons worldwide.

Declassification of this information will support the planning, execution and oversight of the destruction of U.S. chemical weapons.

"As President Clinton said in his State of the Union message last year, the United States must lead the charge to eliminate chemical weapons," said Secretary of Defense William Perry in announcing the declassification.

"Prompt ratification and entry into force of the multilateral Chemical Weapons Convention is critical to achieving this objective," he continued. "Our citizens and those of our friends and allies will be safer in a world in which chemical weapons have been banned. The CWC is vital to our security, and we need it now."

Declassification of this stockpile information is a major step toward reaching the goal of eliminating chemical weapons.

Defense officials said declassification of this information will not compromise the security, emergency procedures or the environmental and safety standards that currently exist at the stockpile sites. The U.S. chemical weapons stockpile consists of 30,599.55 tons of unitary (single component) agent and 680.19 tons of binary components.

Changes will occur as chemical weapons are destroyed at chemical demilitarization facilities.

Weapons stockpile information will allow local citizens, citizen's advisory groups, state and federal regulators, contractors, and others involved in the chemical weapons destruction process access to more specific chemical weapons stockpile data. This will both save money and gain efficiencies.

For many years this stockpile of chemical weapons served as an effective deterrent to the use of such weapons by others against our armed forces.

With the end of the Cold War and advances in global disarmament, this deterrent stockpile is no longer needed nor does its composition and location require secrecy, an Army official said.

"Providing this information to the public, particularly in the communities where these weapons are stored, will provide a better basis for informed discussion concerning their current storage and destruction," said Maj. Gen. Robert D. Orton, program manager for Chemical Demilitarization, Aberdeen Proving Ground, Md.

The Army, under Congressional mandate to destroy the stockpile by 2004, has an operating destruction facility at Johnston Atoll in the Pacific Ocean.

To date, the Johnston facility has successfully destroyed through incineration more than 2,000,000 pounds of nerve and mustard agent. That figure represents approximately one-quarter of the total stockpile of agent stored on the island.

More than 72,000 M-55 rockets, 45,000 projectiles, 3,000 bombs and 134 one-ton containers have been destroyed there. Another destruction facility will begin operating at Tooele, Utah, in the next few months.

Destruction at the seven other sites is scheduled to begin over the next few years. In addition to incineration, the Army continues to research and evaluate alternative methods of destruction for the disposal of the chemical agents at the bulk-only stockpile storage sites.

In addition to the chemical weapons stockpile, several sites have other chemical items that are not part of the stockpile.

These items contain what are referred to as nonstockpile and chemical defensive research agents. Information on quantities of these items is not classified and is being provided as part of this release to give U.S. citizens a complete picture of the total tonnage of agents in the U.S. chemical weapons inventory.

Tricare

Dental briefing to be Tuesday

U.S. Army Dental Activity

An information briefing regarding the new Tricare dental plan administered by United Concordia Companies Inc. will be Tuesday at 10 a.m. at the National Infantry Museum. A representative will be available to answer questions.

United Concordia Companies Inc. began administering the Tricare active duty family member dental plan Feb. 6.

The U.S. Department of Defense and the Office of Civilian Health and Medical Program of the Uniformed Services selected United Concordia over incumbent Delta Dental of California to manage the $1. 7 billion dental contract.

United Concordia will administer the dental plan for family members of active duty service personnel throughout the United States, the District of Columbia, Canada, Guam, Puerto Rico and the U. S. Virgin Islands.

United Concordia, a wholly owned subsidiary of Pennsylvania Blue Shield, is one of the largest dental administrators in the country. United Concordia currently processes more than 3 million dental claims annually and pays more than $250 million in dental benefits.

Under United Concordia's administration, there will be no changes to the family member dental plan benefit coverage. Annual maximums, orthodontic lifetime maximum, cost share percentages, dental benefits and limitations will remain the same.

The dental plan was previously modified to include dental care in Canada and the eligibility requirements for OCONUS returnees have been changed to allow sponsors with at least 12 months of remaining eligibility to enroll family members.

United Concordia will also be maintaining a network of participating dentists to provide care for family members. Virtually every dentist in the U. S. has been invited to join the United Concordia network.

Since dentist participation is voluntary, whether a dentist participates with United Concordia is a decision that is made by the individual dentist.

Although family members can receive covered services from any licensed dentist, family members who go to a participating dentist may save time and money because a participating dentist agrees to accept United Concordia's allowance for services rendered.

If you currently visit a participating dentist, make sure to ask if he or she will be participating in the United Concordia network before you receive treatment.

This will allow you to take advantage of the cost savings a participating dentist offers.

Claims for services before Jan. 31 must be submitted to Delta Dental for processing.

To contact United Concordia, call (800) 866-8499 or (800) 891-1854 (TDD).

BOSS continues can recycling effort

USAIC Public Affairs Office

The post Better Opportunity for Single Soldiers, in conjunction with the Morale, Welfare and Recreation Branch, is continuing its aluminum can recycling program on Fort Benning.

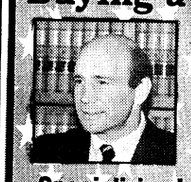
The program initially began in 1992, and representatives distributed more than 300 blue recycling containers, said Spc. Michael James, BOSS president.

Despite their success, BOSS representatives still have containers left to distribute.

"We need your help to place the remaining 150 containers where they are needed, i.e. beside soda machines and building entrances and exits," James said.

If an agency or unit would like a recycling container, call the Fort Benning voice mail system at 545-7204, then dial the last five digits, 5-7204 to leave a message. Leave a point of contact, phone number, building number, location and the number of containers desired.

If you have containers that need to have cans picked up, call the voice mail system and leave the information.



For more information, call James at 545-6800 or 545-2813.

Postal agency releases peacekeeper ZIP codes

By Rudi Williams
American Forces Information Service

Postal ZIP codes have been assigned to service members supporting Operation Joint Endeavor in Croatia, Hungary, and Bosnia.

Official and personal mail operations were fully operational in early February.

By late February, the units will be able to accept bulk mail. However, there is a 70-pound U.S. Postal Service weight limit, and military postal officials recommended parcels be no larger than a shoe box.

The APOs are: APO AE 09779, Zagreb, Croatia; APO AE 09780, Sarajevo, Bosnia-Herzegovina; APO AE 09781, Split, Croatia; APO AE 09782, Kiseljac, Bosnia-Herzegovina; APO AE 09788 and 09789, Tuzla, Bosnia-Herzegovina; and APO AE 09793 and 09794, Tazsar, Hungary.

"It still takes 32 cents to send a letter into the theater," said Army Adjutant General Col. Earl Simms. However, the Department of Defense has approved "free mail" for troops supporting Joint Endeavor in the former Yugoslavia, Croatia, Hungary and the Adriatic, he said.

Free mail applies only to outgoing personal correspondence, including first-class letters, cassette voice tapes and personal communication videos weighing 11 ounces or less. Service members have to pay for parcel shipments.

Army Lt. Col. Jerry Peck, chief of staff for the Military Postal Service Agency, said Navy ships and Marine units have unique, permanently assigned ZIP codes.

Mail currently takes eight to 10 days to travel either way between the United States and Bosnia. Mail from Europe to Hungary and Bosnia is taking two to four days, Simms said.

Peck said the postal agency supports U.S. peacekeepers with eight military post offices in and around the former Yugoslavia. To maintain postal services in Germany, the Army Reserve 23rd Adjutant General Company from Pittsburgh, 329th from St. Paul, Minn., and the 755th from Texarkana, Texas, deployed to backfill the active units, Simms said.

Mail going to American peacekeepers through the military postal system is subject to the same restrictions as the international mail system. Host country customs officials usually prohibit the entry of coins, bank notes, currency notes, precious metals and stones, narcotics, alcohol, firearms and ammunition, DoD officials said.

There's also "any service, any family member" mail. "This program became popular during Desert Shield and Desert Storm," Simms noted. "It's designed for the public to send cards, letters and packages to unspecified service members or to the families of those who are deployed."

Those addresses are:

Army, Navy, Air Force and Marine Corps land forces:
Any Service Member
Operation Joint Endeavor
APO AE 09397

Navy and Marine Corps personnel aboard ship:
Any Service Member
Operation Joint Endeavor
FPO AE 09398

Families in Germany:
Any Service Member
Operation Joint Endeavor
APO AE 09399

The Military Postal Service Agency has established a toll-free hot line in Alexandria, Va., to assist mailers in verifying active Joint Endeavor ZIP codes and any restrictions imposed on them, DoD officials said. The number is (800) 810-6098. Calls are accepted weekdays from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. Eastern time.

Briefings set for Green to Gold

The Columbus College ROTC Department will host a Green to Gold briefing March 1. Briefings will at 1 p.m. in Building 4, Classroom 30.

The Columbus College ROTC Department will assist applicants in attending the school of their choice. All scholarship applications must be processed by March 15.

For further information, call Maj. Brian Luedtke, Capt. Sheila Denham and 2nd Lt. Angela Soto at 568-2058.

Hospital to require SSNs for patients

Martin Army Community Hospital's computer data base will be updated during February.

The new version, which will be in operation Feb. 24, requires Social Security numbers for all patients to include children and infants for registration purposes.

While patients not possessing this data will not be refused care, some delay could occur if the Social Security numbers are not readily available.

Tax Office opens

The Fort Benning Tax Office is open. The office is located in Building 2640 at Soldiers' Plaza and will be open Monday through Friday, from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

Electronic tax filing is available for most federal returns. The office has many federal and state tax forms available.

Unit tax advisers have also been appointed for units throughout the post. Persons having tax questions should see their unit tax adviser first.

For more information, call Capt. Scott L. Frost at 545-3281.

Controlled burning set

Controlled burning of woodland areas will take place through Feb. 20 through 24. If weather permits, the following compartments will be affected: A-6, A-9, C-2, E-3, E-5, F-2, J-1, K-1, K-6, K-13, M-7, P-2, Q-1, Q-5, T-3, U-1, U-5, W-4 and CC-1.

Burning will occur in pine stands within these compartments to enhance endangered species' habitat and training areas. Personnel proposing to use these areas for recreational purposes must vacate these areas prior to 9:30 a.m. daily.

Training units using compartments adjacent to those listed above may experience drift smoke and are reminded to exercise caution while travelling in these areas due to the potential for reduced visibility.

Units using ranges and training areas are reminded to remove flammable debris, such as pinestraw, leaves, grass and trash from around structures in accordance with U.S. Army Infantry Center Regulation 210-4, Paragraph 5-22, Organizational Maintenance.

For more information, call Jack Greenlee, Natural Resources Management Branch, at 544-6206.

CID seeks assistance

The U.S. Army Criminal Investigation Division is offering a $150 reward for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the person(s) responsible for removal of five gas powered leaf blowers; six gas powered weed eaters; three gas powered hedge trimmers; one gas powered lawn mower; one cordless drill; one circular saw; a 200-piece tool set and one wrench set from Building 1198. The items are valued at $3,848.90.

A $300 reward for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the person(s) responsible for a larceny that occurred between 5 p.m. Jan. 5 and 9:30 a.m. Jan. 8.

Someone entered Building 2755A on post and removed three central processing units, two monitors and one computer printer.

347th aids Joint Endeavor

Ceremony honors unit's service at Fort Benning

By Shannon Day
Special to the Bayonet©

The 347th Personnel Replacement Battalion, U.S. Army Reserve, conducted a ceremony Feb. 13 at 3:30 pm. in Infantry Hall to recognize the achievements of its soldiers.

The battalion was mobilized to assist the U.S. Army Infantry Center in the operation of an individual deployment site in support of Operation Joint Endeavor. The battalion had been at Fort Benning since Dec. 21.

The unit, commanded by Lt. Col. William Patula, was involved in the processing of more than 1,200 active duty, reserve and civilian personnel from all services going to Germany, Hungary, Croatia or Bosnia.

"The Army today cannot do what it needs to do without you," said Col. Michael J. McKean, director, Directorate of Operation and Training. "We need you great and loyal patrons to do what you do. You did it in a very fine (manner)."

The unit has also been responsible for conducting a five-day processing and training schedule to prepare individuals for overseas deployment.

This included welcoming incoming personnel; preparing administrative and medical records; issuing uniforms, equipment and weapons.

They also conducted training on first aid and dealing with cold weather; local laws, customs and treat briefings; weapons and protective mask training; giving a predeployment briefing and coordinating for overseas transportation.

"I thank you very much for being professional soldiers," Patula said. "For all we know, one soldier was saved because of what you do."

The battalion returned to its home station in Marion, Ill., Feb. 15.

VA to pay insurance dividends

Department of Veterans Affairs

The U.S. Department of Veterans Affairs will pay more than $18.5 million in dividends in 1996 to Georgia veterans holding active veterans' life insurance policies.

"This is good news for those 45,484 Georgia veterans holding active policies," Georgia Commissioner of Veterans Affairs Pete Wheeler said. "Many of these veterans live on fixed incomes and the dividend payment is a tremendous help for them."

The dividend payment will vary between $200 and $900 depending on the veteran's age, type of insurance and length of time the policy has been in force.

The dividends, paid from insurance trust funds, reflect the fact that veterans are living longer than originally predicted, and the insurance trust funds are earning high yields from investment in long-term U. S. government securities.

The 1996 payout will be credited automatically to policyholders on the anniversary date of their policies. Individuals may choose to receive a dividend check or select one of nine alternate payment options.

VA cautions veterans that only those policies that have been kept in force when premiums were required are eligible for a payout.

Government life insurance policies were issued to veterans of World Wars I and II and the Korean War serving between 1917 and 1956.

The largest Georgia group receiving payments will be 38,903 World War II veterans with National Service Life Insurance ("V") policies.

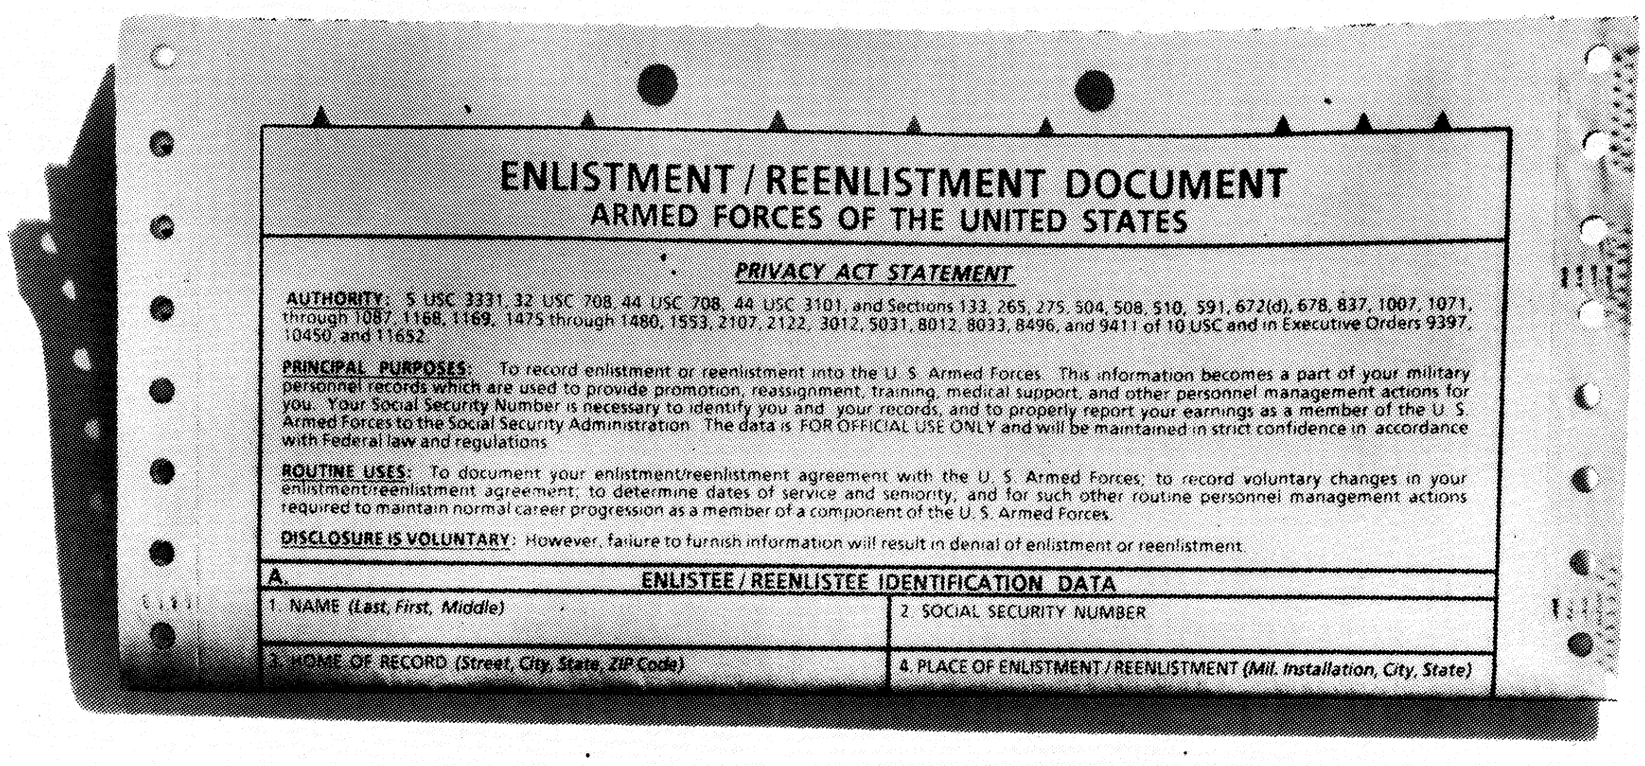
They will share more than $16 million in payments. The average payment will be $406.

Dividends totaling $113,000 will be paid to 464 World War I veterans holding U.S. Government Life Insurance ("K") policies. The average payment will be $227.

The 4,605 veterans with active Veterans Special Life Insurance ("RS" and "W") policies will share more than $1.9 million. The average payment will be $429.

A group of 1,512 veterans with active Veterans Reopened Insurance policies will share $514,000 in payments. Average payments to policyholders will be $319; to ("JR") policyholders, $539; and to ("JS") policyholders, $889.

While VA also administers a special life insurance program for disabled veterans and a program offering mortgage life insurance coverage, neither pays dividends.



For active duty service members and reservists, VA supervises a contract with a private carrier to underwrite Servicemen's Group Life Insurance; however, it pays no dividends.

Veterans who have questions about their policy can call the VA Insurance Center at (800) 669-8477 or contact their local Department of Veterans Service Field Office.

Free seminar on second careers

Army Career and Alumni Program

A Washington lecturer and author on career transition from military to civilian employment will be at Fort Benning March 1 in Infantry Hall, Classroom 30, from 9 to 11 a.m. to talk to officers, senior noncommissioned officers and spouses on "Marketing Yourself for a Second Career."

Retired Col. Jerry Crews, deputy director of the Officer Placement Service for The Retired Officers Association, travels nationwide addressing military audiences composed of people who are nearing retirement, being involuntarily separated or opting to leave military service.

The lecture is open to all military personnel and their spouses. The first 200 participants will receive a free copy of the publication, "Marketing Yourself for a Second Career."

In his free two-hour presentation, Crews will introduce the audience to the realities of the competition in the civilian job market; the perceptions civilian employers have of military personnel; how to plan for the job search; tips for strengthening the resume (to include how employers read a resume); networking; preparing for and conducting a successful interview; salary and benefit packages; and rejection.

Crews said he doesn't promise an individual instant job search success, but guarantees that each person who attends his lecture will profit from the knowledge gained and will be ready to move in the right direction toward that second career.

The lecture has been continually praised by attendees for its content and delivery. Crews provides information for every attendee and provides insights into the transition, which are unique and hard-biting.

Military members and their spouses will have an opportunity to ask questions.

The Retired Officers Association sponsors these lectures, which in 1994 were presented to over 15,000 personnel at 107 military installations throughout the United States and Europe.

For more information, call Mary Allen at 545-4892.

Transition Assistance Classes

aer q&a

Army Emergency Relief

Q. What is Army Emergency Relief ?

A. AER is a private, nonprofit organization, incorporated in 1942 by the secretary of War and the Army chief of staff. AER's mission is to provide emergency financial assistance.

Q. Whom does AER help?

A. AER helps active duty soldiers, retirees and their family members, Army National Guard and Reserve soldiers on active duty for more than 30 days and their family members and surviving spouses and orphans of soldiers who died on active duty or after they retired.

Q. What can AER do?

A. AER can help with emergency financial needs for food, emergency transportation (due to emergency leave), vehicle repair, funeral expenses, medical and dental expenses, certain expenses when pay has been lost or stolen and undergraduate level education scholarships based on financial need to children of active and retired soldiers.

Q. What type of assistance does AER offer?

A. AER offers free loans and grants, or part loan and part grant, if repayment of loan will cause undue hardship.

Q. Is there a dollar limit on AER help:

A. There is no limit on AER help. AER will help anyone who is eligible for AER assistance and has a valid emergency need.

Q. Do I have to contribute to AER in order to be eligible for assistance?

A. No.

Q. What can't AER do?

A. AER cannot help pay for nonessentials such as financing ordinary leave or vacation, paying fines or legal expenses, helping liquidate or consolidate debts, assisting with house purchase or home improvements, helping purchase, rent or lease a vehicle, covering bad checks or paying credit card bills.

Q. Does AER get its money from the government?

A. No. AER does not receive any appropriated or nonappropriated government money.

Q. When I visit AER for assistance, what documents should I bring with me?

A. Soldiers should bring their military identification card, most recent leave and earnings statement, leave or permanent change of station orders and substantiating documentation such as car repair estimate, apartment or house rental agreement or utility bills.

INDUSTRIES

On January 4, 1996, Cablevision Industries (CVI) was acquired by Time Warner Cable. the merger eventually will benefit this community with expanded horizons in programming and services as well as new resources to bring customers the best that cable can provide.
Effective with the merger, CVI is operating under new federal government rules that result in changes in our rates. At the same time our prices are increasing, we will provide free cable and education materials to area schools and a commitment to improve the technology in our current cable system. the best news is that rate increases on our most popular program package and all regulated services will take place only once per year from now on. The Federal Communications Commission has waived our normal 30-day notification requirement for these changes.
However, all CVI customers will receive notice in their next bill regarding the rate changes (listed below)

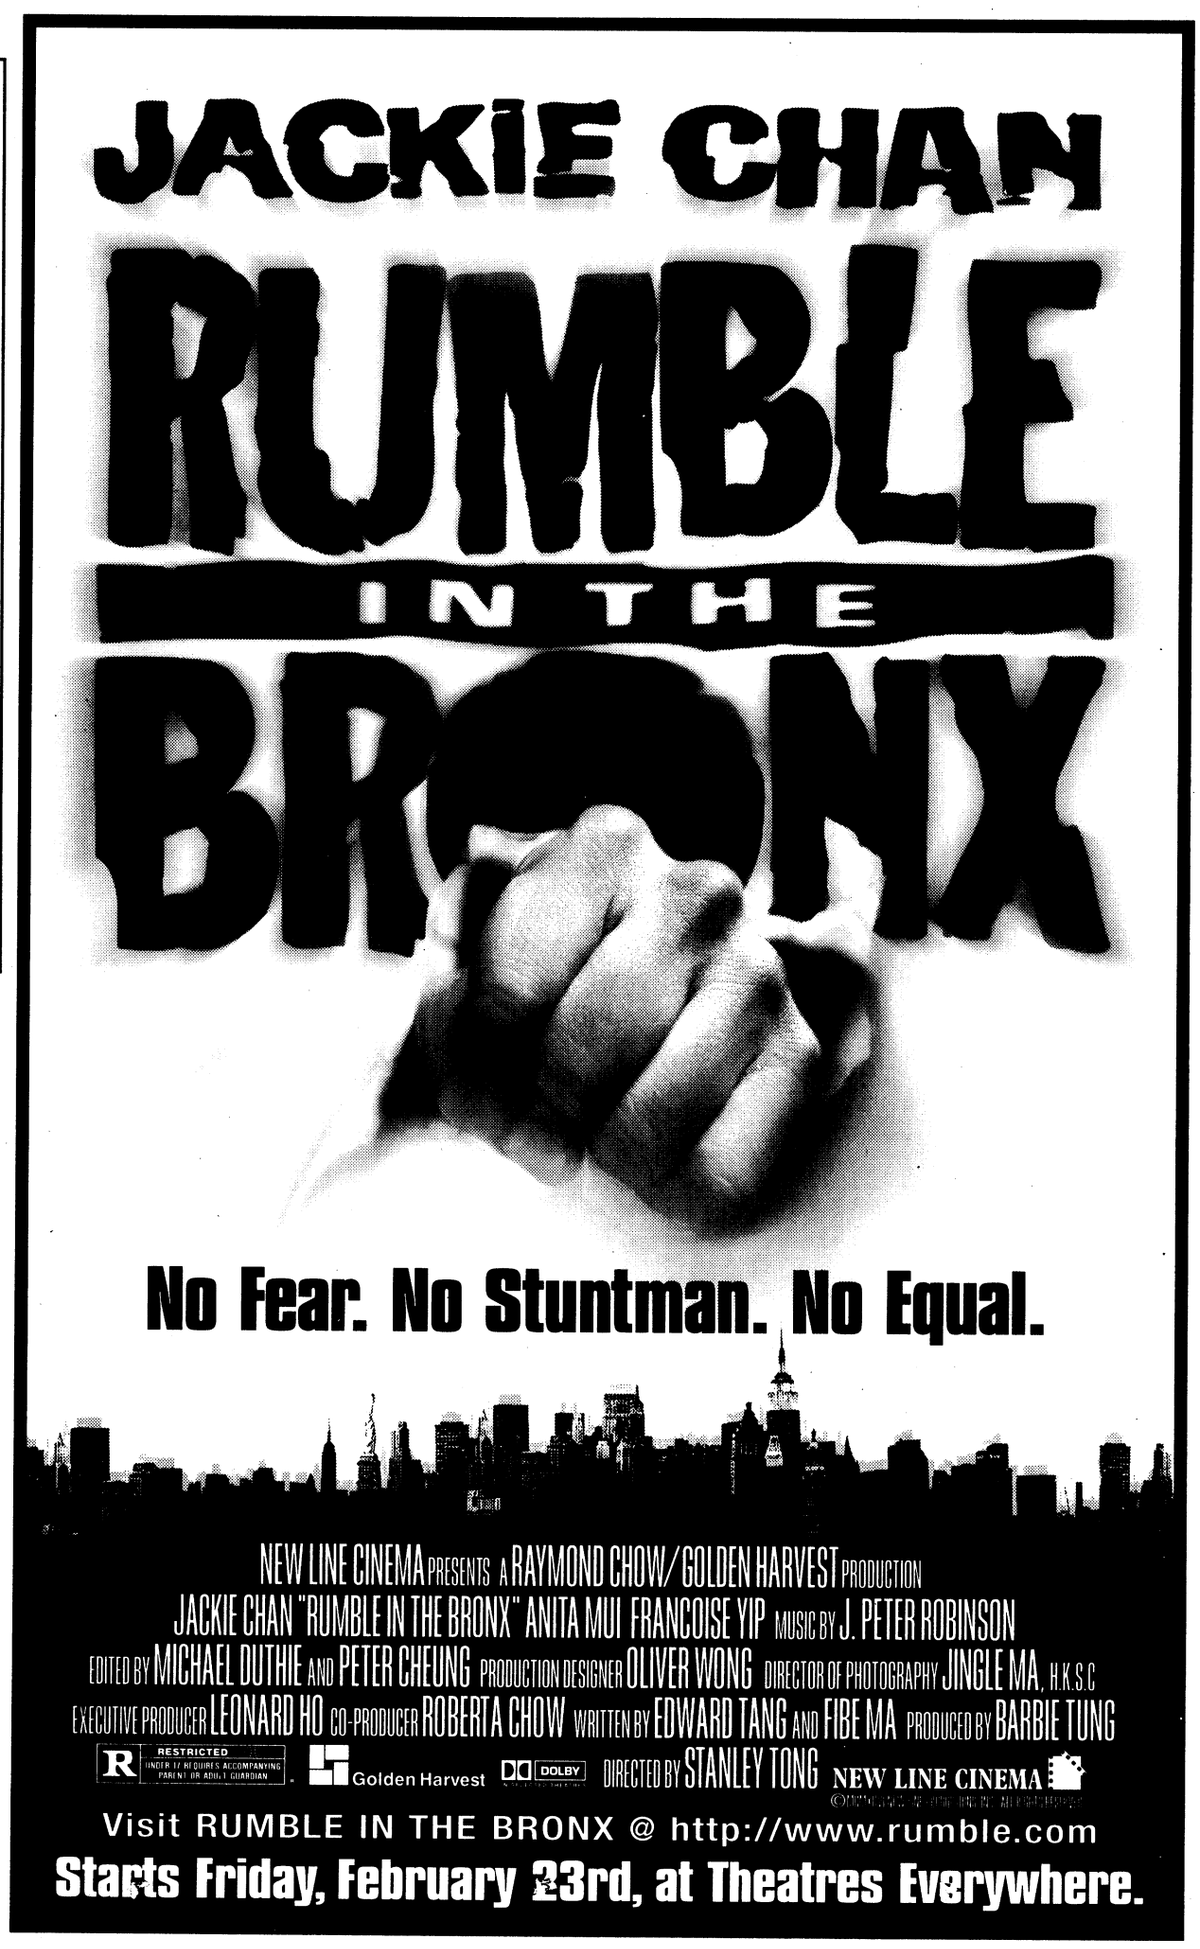
Risk Management

The U.S. Army Infantry Center Sergeants Major Risk Management Process Action Team was established in an attempt to reduce the number of injuries to Fort Benning soldiers. The purpose of the team is to reinforce the role of of the noncommissioned officer in all aspects of safety.
The following is a list of objective and goals.



Goal no. 3

Noncommissioned officers will ensure all privately owned motor vehicles and motorcycles are operated safely.

Objectives

1. To prevent POV and motorcycles accidents, NCOs will counsel soldiers with prior driving violations.
2. NCOs will conduct random inspections of POVs and motorcycles throughout the year.
3. Prior to any extended weekend (three or four days), NCOs will inspect POV and motorcycles and conduct safety briefings. The safety briefings will cover, as a minimum, use of seat belts, proper rest, speeding, reckless driving, driving under the influence, designated driver, and phone numbers to call in circumstances requiring a ride.
4. NCOs will have the authority to deadline a POV or motorcycle based on safety considerations.
5. NCOs will ensure that all soldiers who own or operate motorcycles will attend the installation motorcycle safety course and register their motorcycle on post.

Soldiers' values stand

By Amy Durham
Special to The Bayonet©

The values of the American soldier remain as the foundation of ethics in today's society, according to Chap. (Maj. Gen.) Donald W. Shea, U.S. Army chief of Chaplains.

Addressing an audience of military and civilians gathered at the Officers' Club Tuesday in observance of the National Prayer Breakfast, Shea asked, "Why do we have prayer breakfasts?"

With lighthearted jokes and historical reflection, he told the audience that the prayer breakfast "reminds us that Americans live out of a bank of national values.

"Values are those things that give precious meaning to our lives," he said.

"We were soldiers before we were a nation," Shea said, "and our values today are backed by the soldier character ethic (of those serving in the U.S. armed forces)."

Shea told the crowd that although national values are interpreted and applied according to changing times, soldier values never change.

Citing that values are lost through neglect, Shea spoke of a soldier's courage, candor, commitment, competence and compassion.

"The U.S. military has been rated as the institution that inspires the most confidence among the Board meets, plans for future with strategies

By Amy Durham
Special to The Bayonet©

Members of the Fort Benning School Board discussed preparing students for the next millennium during their meeting Tuesday.

Dr. Beth Middlemiss, principal, and Jimmy Cochran, teacher, explained the current status as well as the "Goals 2000" strategic plan for the future of Faith's programs. Luis Lopez student, explained how technology has not only expanded his learning experience but how classroom technology has also prepared him for a bright future. He said, "Computers are not just vicious machines, but they're also helpful."

Schools curriculum coordinator, Dr. Judy Archer, presented the standards and benchmarks for the schools' art and music curriculum. Citing that Fort Benning Schools are receiving recognition for "meeting or exceeding the national standards in art and music," Archer presented two curriculum guides to the board for approval.

Dr. Dell Karr, superintendent, informed board members that funds have been allocated for renovations at McBride Elementary School. The schools will also receive funding for a four-year-old preschool program beginning in Fall 1996. Based on enrollment trends, Karr said as program planning continues, she anticipates approximately 350 to 400 eligible children on post.

Planning for the schools' Parent Academy continues. Registration is open to all post personnel and their family members until close of business today.

Karr also gave the board an update on the schools transfer study. "The report will be forwarded to the House of Representatives in October," she said. She also said the dates — March 25 to 29 originally — for the monitoring team scheduled to visit Fort Benning's special education programs had been delayed.

Meanwhile, four teachers will present programs at the Georgia Council for Teachers of English Conference at Callaway Gardens today. Karr will also represent the stateside schools at the Home-School Partnership meeting in Washington D.C., next Tuesday and Wednesday. She was selected based on DoDESS Director Dr. Hector Nevarez's observance of such programs as the Lunch and Learn, Parents Hall of Fame, Parents as Pals, and the Volunteer Program among others, during his visit to Fort Benning in December.

In January, post school representatives also met with Dr. Susan Squires, coordinator of gifted programs for the Muscogee County School District. The group discussed new state criteria for entrance into the gifted program. Broader than used to be, the criteria includes achievement, creativity and motivation now as well as ability.

During the meeting, board members presented Staff Sgt. John Perdue with a plaque of appreciation for his efforts and commitment to Fort Benning Schools during his two-year involvement as the McBride Elementary School representative.

Other board members present were Col. Gregory Camp, president; Chap. (Maj.) Robert Thompson, chaplain; Rhoda Zerger, Dexter School representative; Col. David Brown, Faith School rep-resentative; Shelia Long, Stowers School representative; Adrienne Porter, White School representative; Staff Sgt. Ricardo Linton, Wilson School representative; and Lt. Col Stephanie Willson, attorney.

Others present included: Richard Skinner, assistant superintendent for budget and personnel; Alice Skinner, director of Logistics; Caroline Myers, Benning Education Association president; and Stephanie Davis, American Federation of Government Employees president.

OWC offers scholarships to families

Officers' Wives' Club

The Fort Benning Officers' Wives' Club is offering merit scholarships for continuing education students and graduating high school students.

Applications are now available at the OWC office located at the corner of Dixie and Ingersoll roads, Building 229.

The deadline for application submission is March 28.

Although the exact number of scholarships and amounts have yet to be determined, several will be awarded. In the past, scholarships have ranged from $500 to $2000.

Scholarships are available to an active or associate member in good standing of the Fort Benning OWC or Enlisted Wives' Club, and to military family members (officer, enlisted, active duty or retired) whose mother is a member of OWC or EWC.

The candidate or candidate's mother must have been a member of OWC or EWC prior to Dec. 31, 1995, or must have been an individual who arrived at Fort Benning after Jan. 1, 1996, and joined the local club within six weeks of arrival.

The OWC office is open Monday to Thursday from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m.

For additional information concerning scholarships, call the OWC office at 687-3537 or contact Brenda Barger, scholarship committee chairperson at 568-8021.

Fort Benning students celebrate Arbor Day

By Shannon Day
Special to The Bayonet©

Despite the low temperatures and biting wind, a tree-planting ceremony in honor of Arbor Day was conducted in front of White Elementary School at 10 a.m. Feb. 16.

Each year, the school conducts an Arbor Day essay contest. One winner is chosen from each grade.

This year, the winners are:

- Kelsey Dyer, kindergarten
- Colton Cummings, first grade
- Joshua Chunkleen, second grade
- Joshua Daly, third grade
- Edgard Almodovar, fourth grade
- and Holly Carmichael, fifth grade.

Before the tree was planted, the winners of the contest read their essays.

Students and teachers from the school huddled outside and listened as the winners shared some of the reasons trees were important to them.

After they read their essays, Col. John Reitzell, chief of staff, U.S. Army Infantry School, assisted the students in planting the tree.

"Congratulations to all the winners," he said. "It's a great day to plant a tree!"

He added that J. Sterling Morton, who founded Arbor Day in the Nebraska Territory during 1872, would probably be proud that people are still upholding the tradition today.

Reitzell presented the winning students with certificates of achievement.

He also presented a certificate of achievement to Barbara Proctor, a teacher at the school, who coordinated the essay contest.

Amy Durham/Special to the Bayonet

Students from Edward A. White Elementary School assist Col. John Reitzell, chief of staff, U.S. Army Infantry School, in planting a tree in honor of Arbor Day. Faculty, teachers and students weathered the cold temperature to hear winning essays commemorating the day.

afap update

Directorate of Community Activities

As part of the ongoing commitment to improve the quality of life for the total Army family, last year's Army Family Action Plan issues have been resolved by post officials.

The plan is the management tool used to implement issues and give policy guidance. It identifies concerns of the Army family, determines actions required and assigns responsibility to implement actions to resolve the issues.

Since the last symposium, installation agencies have worked to resolve many of the issues addressed at the symposium.

Delegates attending the symposium addressed many concerns. Each week, those concerns and the measures taken to resolve those concerns will be presented.

Action agency: Commissary

Issue: Tips for baggers. Customers shouldn't feel obligated to pay someone to carry out groceries and what is the accepted amount of a tip?

Response: Bagger and carry-out services are provided to Commissary patrons by individuals who are not employees of the Commissary. They are not salaried employees and work for tips only. Signs are posted across the front of the checkout area informing the customer that baggers work for tips only.

The cashier asks customers if they would like a package carrier or if they would like to bag and carry out their own groceries. Customers in no way should feel obligated to pay for this service, since it is provided at his or her request.

A computer monitor located at the ID Desk explains tips and surcharge. The information is also in handouts given during briefings at meetings.

Handouts have been ordered to be given out at the Customer Service Desk to patrons entering the Commissary. A letter of instruction and standing operating procedures outlining specific concerns and solutions concerning courtesy are available.

Issue: Commissary hours. The Commissary is currently closed on Mondays and needs to be open more hours.

Response: Commissary patrons were surveyed during September 1995 to determine their demands on operating hours. The majority of the patrons responded that they would like a seven-day operation. Currently, the Commissary is undergoing a major renovation to upgrade the facility that will be completed in March or April 1997.

The contract is written to enable the contractor to perform various functions within the patron sales area on Mondays when the store is closed. In order to change the current operating hours to reflect a Monday opening, the contract would have to be modified. The completion date would be extended to the end of December 1997 or January 1998 time frame and add additional dollars to the contract.

It is anticipated that after the renovation is completed, a seven-day operation is possible pending the availability of fiscal year funding.

Action agency: Army and Air Force Exchange Service

Issue: Post Exchange restrooms. The current location is inconvenient to shoppers.

Response: There are no future plans to relocate restrooms in the PX. Restrooms are located for both PX and Commissary customers use.

Normally, if the customer tells the ID checker that their child has to use the restroom, they are not required to see the ID card again.

Issue: Double-coupon day. Consumers save money when taking advantage of double coupons, which provides an incentive to make other purchases aside from the double-coupon items.

Response: The double-coupon promotion applies to only the first item purchased. If a customer has other identical coupons, then the single coupon discount applies. These limitations were made because PX officials found customers were abusing the promotion.

This is a common practice at stores off post; however, most of these stores only allow their customers to use coupons of 50 cents or less on double coupon days, whereas our limit is $1. AAFES does have double-coupon promotions several times a year, which are advertised in the AAFES weekly flyer.

Issue: Customer courtesy. Good customer service skills are essential for those individuals who serve the public and encourages patrons to come back.

Response: AAFES is training all associates to become more involved. Employees must realize they are an integral part of the larger AAFES vision "to be customers' first choice."

The main store has implemented an incentive program for sales associates in the form of a special recognition award with a check for $25. This is given on a weekly basis by department managers to the associate giving the best customer service.

AAFES has an open door policy to notify management of concerns, complaints or compliments. Comment boxes are located in the main store facility by the cashier's cage and at the ID stand.

Christians should do more than minimum

By Vincent de P. Burns
Infantry Training Brigade

The beatitudes (Matthew 5:1-12) were spoken to a people who lived by the law.

There was nothing more important to them than to keep God's commandments, to do what God wanted them to do and not to do whatever God did not want them to do.

This is what it took to be a good person and gain eternal life in heaven and to avoid eternal punishment in hell. And that was the minimum.

That mentality upset Christ.

What is the minimum effort that has to be put forth? What can I get away with before my action becomes a sin? This is always a favorite question of young people who are exploring their sexuality. A common mentality among Christians who have a shallow relationship with Christ is "All I have to do is to avoid serious sin."

How do you know when you are missing the point of the Beatitudes? I think when you ask the question, "Why do I have to come to church," instead of asking yourself, "What can I do to get more out of church?" It is when you ask, "How often do I have to pray?" instead of "How can I pray better?"

I think you are missing the point when you ask questions like:

• "Is premarital or extra-marital sex a sin?" instead of asking, "How can I use my power to love and my own gift of sexuality in accordance with God's plan?"

• "Why do I need the church?" instead of "What is the mission of the church and what is my part in that mission?" "

• What else can I buy to wear to make myself look better?" instead of "What can I do to make some poor person warm?"

• "What can I buy to make my house look better?" instead of "What can I give away so that someone else might have a home?"

• "What can I do to be more comfortable?" instead of "What can I do to get food and medicine to those who need it?"

When Christ preached the Beatitudes, he was consciously contradicting the religious mentality of the people. He knew what he was saying and he knew what kind of a reaction he would get. He was saying to the people, "Yes, you have kept the commandments. Yes, you have been faithful to the law. And certainly God rewards you for the good that you do and God loves you because you are his people."

But that isn't enough. There's more. There's much more. If you do only the minimum, you will never grow up. You will always be spiritually immature. And you will never really know God; you will know only his law. You will never really feel God's life and God's love within you; you will see God only as one who judges your behavior and either rewards you or punishes you.

The message of the beatitudes hasn't changed, and I'm not sure that the religious mentality of God's people has changed much either. For lots of people there is still that mentality that God is the judge of my sins rather than God is my father and mother who loves me in spite of sins. There is still that mentality of doing only the minimum, to get by with as little as possible. Tell me how much I have to do, and that is as far as I will go.

The beatitudes challenge that and call us to something more, something greater, something deeper and more costly in the sense of commitment.

The disciples didn't always want to hear what Christ was saying because he was asking them to make a deeper commitment. He was asking them to go beyond just keeping the law. And when they missed the point, when they misunderstood the message, Jesus was frustrated. He had something great to give them, and they would not accept it.

reflections

The message of this particular part of Scripture, the message of the beatitudes is really the key to understanding Christ and Christianity. If you want to get to heaven at the end of this life, then keep the commandments. If you want to know this person, Jesus Christ, if you want to share in the mission of the Church, if you want to feel the presence of God in your heart, if you want to know what this human life is all about, then practice the beatitudes. It really is that simple.

VALUES: character builds soldier respect

American people in the Gallup Poll for the last seven years," he said.

"(It is) because soldiers: risk more than others think is safe; care more than others think is wise; dream more than others think is practical; and expect more than others think is possible," he said.

"I am speaking to leaders today, not commanders," he said. "Some of you are commanders — all of you are leaders."

Charging everyone to use what God gave them, Shea told the audience that if they did not think they were leaders, that may be the very value they were neglecting. Remembering a conversation he'd had with a soldier who had lost his arm in a recent conflict and was waiting to be fitted for a new forearm, Shea said he praised the soldier for his heroic actions and pitied him for the tragedy.

"The soldier looked at my cross and said, 'Chaplain, when I was in recovery, another soldier asked me, "If you only had six months to live, what would you do; and, if you are not doing that now, why not,"'" Shea said.

In closing, Shea said he would like to be remembered as a chaplain soldier and asked, "And how would you like to be remembered?"

PWOC to host its monthly meeting

USAIC Chaplain's Office

The Protestant Women of the Chapel organization will have its general monthly meeting March 7 from 9:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. at the Religious Education Center, Building 2521.

"Stand on His Promise of Freedom" will be the theme for the day, using John 8:31-32 as the scripture reference.

Flavia Harrell, a licensed marriage and family therapist, will be the guest speaker, and will help the group get on track with the truth.

Joy Maulsvy will be the guest musician.

A lunch of assorted salads, breads, rolls, desserts and hot and cold beverages will be provided for all participants. There also will be a morning snack with coffee, tea and juice.

Childcare will be provided free of charge, but parents are requested to bring a sack lunch for their children who will eat in the child-care area.

All women are invited to attend, and a special welcome is extended to Fort Benning newcomers.

Lent leads to Easter

reflections

By Bill Putman
USAIC Chaplain Office

For those who observe the liturgical calendar, the season of Lent, which leads to Easter, ranks with the season of Advent, which precedes Christmas, as the two most important seasons in the Christian church year.

Lent is the period of 40 days excluding Sundays prior to Easter. The word Lent has its background in words of several languages, one meaning springtime, and another meaning to lengthen, pertaining to the lengthening of days during the spring.

Many people celebrate the Mardi Gras Carnival, which is a time of "partying." The word carnival comes from Latin meaning "to take away meat." It is a time of rejoicing just before Shrove Tuesday.

Shrove Tuesday is the day of confessions before Ash Wednesday.

Ash Wednesday is the beginning of Lent. The name Ash Wednesday comes from the act of penitent Christians having ashes put on their foreheads by priests to indicate their penitence.

This use of ashes as a sign of penitence or mourning has biblical roots referred to as early as II Samuel 13:19 where Tamar, the daughter of David, put ashes on her head and tore the long-sleeved robe that she was wearing; and Esther 4:1 where Mordecai tore his clothes and put on sackcloth and ashes.

The season of Lent is a season of fasting, prayer, self-denial, Bible study and preparation for Easter.

Many people give up something for Lent. For some, it is meat; for others, it is another food; while for others it is smoking or drinking. The act of giving up something for Lent, or denying oneself something, is considered a way of preparing yourself and making yourself more readily able to concentrate on the business at hand, which is the preparation for Easter.

Other significant days during Lent are Palm Sunday, Maundy Thursday, Good Friday and Holy Saturday.

Palm Sunday is the day on which Jesus entered Jerusalem riding a donkey and the crowds waved palm branches along the way. This is known as Jesus' triumphal entry. Palm Sunday begins Holy Week.

Maundy Thursday night is the night on which Jesus was observing Passover with his disciples and subsequently was betrayed by Judas. This betrayal led to his capture and crucifixion on Good Friday.

Good Friday is perhaps the saddest day in the Christian calendar. It is observed in a somber manner, in remembrance of the death of Christ. Holy Saturday follows Good Friday, ends the season of Lent and is also a quiet, somber day.

Easter Sunday is a day of celebration of the resurrection of Christ and his triumph over death and the grave. Joyful triumphant music is used and flowers decorate churches. The entire mood is one of celebration. The fasting and self-denial of Lent have ended.

Chaplains support troops in Bosnia

By Rudi Williams
American Forces Information Service

WASHINGTON — More than 30 Army Reserve chaplains and enlisted assistants recently arrived in Germany to fill in for chaplains supporting U.S. troops in Bosnia.

The religious service providers, 18 chaplains and 17 enlisted assistants, came from Army Reserve units around the country. National Guard chaplains also could be deployed in the future, said a spokesman from the Army Chief of Chaplains Office at the Pentagon.

"The Navy is a little different from the Army," said Chaplain (Capt.) Stephen Rock, director of distribution and inventory with the Navy's Chaplains office. "The Army has the primary responsibility for the Bosnian mission. We only have one chaplain on the ground who went in with a Seabees [Navy construction battalion] unit."

If Marines aboard ships go in, chaplains would go with them, Rock said.

"If there is a special requirement on land, a chaplain from a ship could fly in for services," he said.

The Air Force has a Protestant chaplain, a Catholic chaplain and two enlisted support personnel in Tuzla, Bosnia, and a Protestant chaplain and an enlisted person in Taszar, Hungary, said Chaplain (Lt. Col.) John R. Blair of the Air Force Chief of the Chaplain Service Office at Bolling Air Force Base, Washington, D.C.

"Most people don't know that chaplain readiness teams are working with our folks over there [Germany, Bosnia, Italy and Hungary]," said Air Force Chaplain (Col.) William Zoshak, senior chaplain of the 305th Air Mobility Wing at McGuire Air Force Base, N.J. "The chaplain and enlisted support person work 12-hour shifts. They talk to the people and try to help them with problems. They also try to help them feel better about where they are and being separated from their loved ones. They do anything they can to help with problems with loved ones back in the States. That's the mission of our chaplain support teams."

Chaplains and their support personnel are often a saving grace when people encounter seemingly insurmountable problems, officials said. For example, Zoshak said service station owner Jack Hagopian of Cherry Hill, N.J., asked the McGuire Public Affairs Office to mail 1,400 Christmas cards he'd collected after asking his customers to support the troops in Bosnia.

The office couldn't help. Regulations prohibit the use of official mail for that purpose, but even if they didn't, the military postal system wasn't set up in Bosnia and Hungary then.

Public affairs representatives asked the chaplains for help. While searching for ways to get the cards to Bosnia and Hungary, Zoshak found a divine answer — use chaplain readiness teams.

When readiness teams go on the road, they take boxes packed with Bibles, religious literature and other items to help boost troop morale, Zoshak noted.

"We try to give troops some uplift from scriptures while they're away from home to make them feel better about their lives and the lives of the people back home," he said. "Since our readiness teams distribute things to the troops to help their morale, we used the teams as a distribution point for the cards."

With the help of an air crew, the cards were shipped to Bosnia on a C-141 aircraft.

A few days later, Zoshak did a repeat performance when women from Our Lady Queen of Peace Catholic parish in Hainsport, N.J., arrived at McGuire in a van loaded with 298 large, decorated tins of home-baked cookies.

"We'll be sending our readiness teams supplied to take care of our troops—whatever they need," Zoshak said. "If they need cookies, we'll send them more cookies. If they need literature or Bibles — whatever they feel will be helpful to lift the spirits of the troops."

chapel notes

Lenten lunches — Beginning Wednesday and continuing to April 3, lenten lunch programs will be at The Infantry Center Chapel each Wednesday during Lent.

The program will begin with a devotional service in the chapel at 11:30 a.m. and will be followed by a lunch of soup and bread in the Annex.

Volunteers are needed to prepare the soup and bread. Child care will be provided.

For more information, call the Infantry Center Chapel at 545-2931 or 545-2050.

BOSS bible study — The Fort Benning Better Opportunities for Single Soldiers program is sponsoring a single soldiers' Bible and prayer fellowship for Christian single soldiers of all denominations.

The goals of this group will be to organize and plan a quarterly event, to meet once or twice a month for ministry and fellowship and to provide Christian single soldiers a better opportunity to join others in growth of Jesus Christ.

Contact Spc. Michael Will at 544-9269, your unit chaplain to join the group or call 545-2813 for more information.

Praise and worship service — A nondenominational general Protestant service, including worship, praise, singing, prayer, teaching and preaching, will be conducted every Sunday at the Infantry Center Chapel from 6 to 8 p.m.

Everyone is invited, including single, married, active duty, retired, families, friends, relatives, National Guard, Reserves, enlisted, non-commissioned officers and officers.

Refreshments will be served and fellowship will take place after the service in the chapel annex. Child care will be available.

Musicians needed — The custodian of the Consolidated Chaplains' Fund is accepting applications for watch-care givers, pianists and choir directors.

For more information, call Staff Sgt. Phyllis Swinson at 545-1934.

Confirmation classes — Confirmation classes are conducted at 3:45 p.m. every Tuesday at the Religious Education Center, Building 2518.

Open to junior and high school students, these classes, also referred to as communicants classes, are considered preparation for joining the church or making a public profession of faith.

The classes will be general Protestant in faith. Upon completion, students will be referred to chaplains of their faith group for further instruction as requested.

Call 545-2359 for more information.

Sunday School — The Fort Benning Sunday School is open every Sunday, and all personnel can attend. There are classes for 2-year-olds to adults. Sunday School is located in the Religious Education Center, Building 2517. Classes are from 9:30 to 10:30 a.m.

First communion classes — First communion classes are conducted at 7 p.m. Tuesdays in the Religious Education Center, Building 2521.

Children in second through sixth grade are eligible to attend, provided they attended Confraternity of Christian Doctrine or Catholic school last year.

God is reason for hope

reflections

By Clarke L. McGriff
3rd. Bde., 24th Inf. Div. (Mech.)

How bright is your future? How high is your hope? What does the year hold for you? Can we do something to ensure success?

Some have made resolutions, while others have set goals. Just about everybody is hoping for a better tomorrow and good today.

In spite of the multiple crises that are present in the world: budget stalemate, layoffs, crime, political corruption, deployments and even war, many people still maintain hope.

What is your hope based on? I Peter 3:15 says, "But in your hearts set apart Christ as Lord. Always be prepared to give an answer to everyone who asks you to give the reason for the hope that you have ..." (NIV).

None of us is immune to the various dilemmas of living. Sickness, pain and disappointment come at some point to all of us. We are all subject to the highs and lows in life. Externally, everyone is in the same boat.

The difference lies not in the external, but the internal. How we are adorned inside is much more vital than our makeup on the outside. If our hope is based on the outside things: rank, money, position, health or appearance, then we must recognize that these things are subject to change at any time. But if your hope is in Christ who abides and who never changes, then your hope is one that will endure.

There are numerous reasons to base your hope in Christ, but here are four to consider:

• With no strings attached, God loves you. No matter who you are, where you have come from, what you possess or what you can or cannot do, God truly loves you. Age is not a factor, and neither is race. God does not put you on a scale to check your weight. God's love for you is unconditional. That's a good place to put your hope.

• God does not change. The electorate cannot vote him in or out. A dip in the economy does not affect his power. We change. We change jobs; we change hair color and eye color; we change spouses; we change political parties. But, God does not change. As he was with Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, so is he today — all powerful and almighty. That's a good place to put your hope.

• God died for you and me, to purchase our freedom. Sin had us bound as slaves and only through the shedding of Christ's perfect blood could the power of sin be broken. Nothing else could repair the relationship between God and us except that his Son Jesus would die. Even though Christ is the only Son of God, still God allowed this death because of his great love for us. And so, he died so that we might be free from the death grip of sin. I believe that a God who would do that is a good place to put your hope.

• God succeeded — I'm free!

As one song puts it, "I once was lost in sin, but Jesus took me in..." Because Christ died and I have trusted him as my Savior and Lord, I am free from the ultimate consequence of death and separation from the presence of God. I no longer count on the outside things, but my hope is on the inside thing, Jesus Christ. I am free in Christ, the only true place to put my hope. How about you? What's the reason for your hope?

Stars pounce Storms 45-18

By Robin A. Shawlinski
Bayonet assistant editor

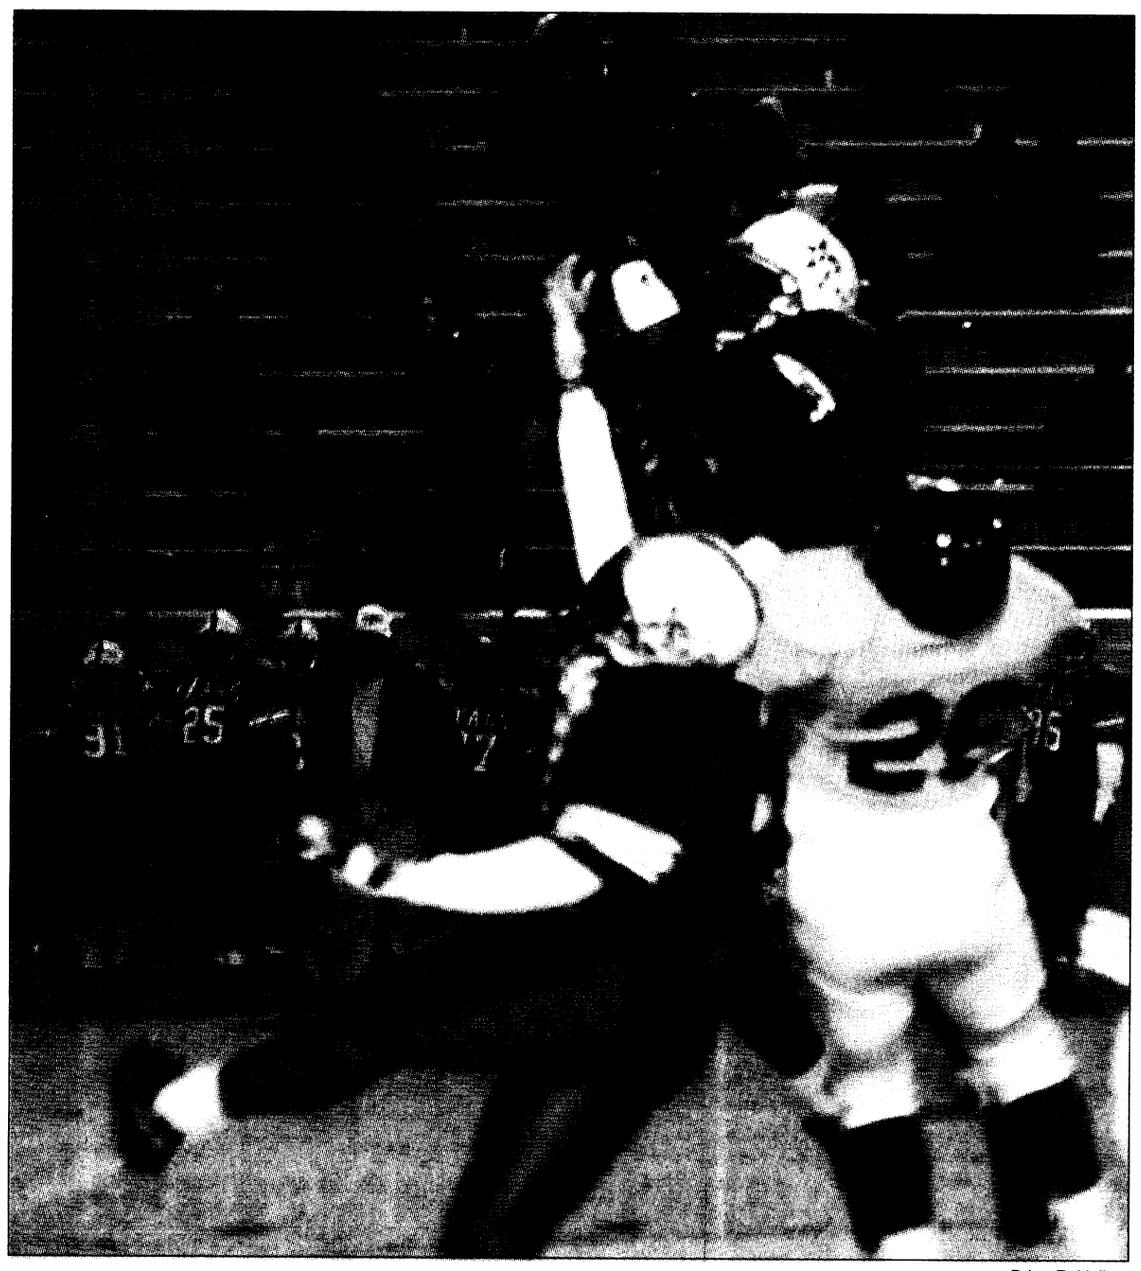
The Bi-City Stars semi-professional football team gave fans a glimpse of the upcoming season when team members squashed the Beaufort Storms 45-18 in their first regular season game Saturday at Garrett Stadium.

The Stars showed strong offense from the very beginning with near misses within the first five minutes of play. The Stars couldn't miss though, when Kalvin Baker turned a Storms fumble into a touchdown with 5:59 left in the first quarter.

Five minutes into the second quarter, Jeff McUrrie threw a 15-yard pass to Dwight Washington for another touchdown making the score 12-0. Kicker Vernon Laree came up with a perfect field goal kick giving the Stars a 13-0.

The Stars showed their offensive strength again in the second quarter with a touchdown by Dave Davis giving them a 19-0 lead.

The third period secured the Stars win with touchdowns by Dave Davis and Albert Tate.



Despite aggressive play by the Storms, the Star defensive held them from scoring until the third quarter when the Storms made a 30-yard touchdown. The score was 32-6.

The Stars defense and offense worked together in the final quarter by taking away any chance of a Storms revival.

The offense came back with two more touchdowns by Albert Tate and Tim Taylor making the final score 45-6.

"We're looking forward to a good season," said assistant coach Connie Burnham. "Over the past couple of years, our defense has been stronger.

"This year our offense has stepped up quite a bit. If things work out this year we'll put some points on the board."

Brian R. Voller

A member of the Bi-City Stars defensive backfield intercepts a pass from the Beaufort Storms quarterback during the season opener Saturday.

Although three-quarters of the team is new (12 players being on active duty), Burnham has high hopes for the Stars.

"We have a lot of great talent," he said. "On the offense, we have fullback Lavelle Winfrow, who's in the military and is really good; and our great kicker Vernon Laree.

"On defense we have a great set of linebackers and Stacey Lee, who's a first year player has a lot of talent and Frank Lewis, a veteran, brings strength and leadership."

Burnham said their goal is to outdo their playoff finish last year.

"We hope to go undefeated and get a first or second bye (in the playoffs) and take it from there."

Morrison tragedy could save lives

By Brian R. Voller
Bayonet staff writer

Isn't it amazing how it takes a tragedy to change somebody's life? In this case, the tragedy would be heavyweight boxer Tommy Morrison who tested HIV-positive Feb. 10 in Las Vegas.

The 45-3-1 Morrison was scheduled to fight the same night he was found to be carrying the virus. Feb. 15, Morrison held a press conference and officially announced his retirement from the world of boxing.

commentary

Not surprisingly, one of the first people Morrison talked to was another professional athlete with HIV, Magic Johnson. According to an article in USA Today, the two talked for more than an hour discussing plans to get together and promote AIDS awareness.

Both Morrison and Johnson cited a life of promiscuity as the cause of their contracting the HIV. Morrison was quoted as saying "I blew it with irresponsible, irrational, immature decisions that will eventually cost me my life."

While I feel pity for both Morrison and Johnson, I have to ask the question, why did it take you guys so long? Why does it always take a slap in the face for people to wake up and smell the coffee. Both Morrison and Johnson knew the risks they where taking, and now they're both paying the ultimate price for their decisions.

I think the combination of the two athletes going around the country trying to promote AIDS awareness is a stellar idea. Even though Morrison said kids should not look at him as a role model, his presence could be enough to change a whole lot of young minds.

For Morrison to test HIV-positive is a definite tragedy, but there is a silver lining to his very black cloud. He is now going to use his disease to warn others of the dangers of unprotected sex. I just wish he could have come to this decision before he was told his life was coming to an end.

Gunsite comes to Fort Benning

By Brian R. Voller
Bayonet staff writer

The Fort Benning Rifle and Pistol Club hosted the Gunsite Pistol School Saturday and Sunday at English Range.

The school is based at the American Pistol Institute near Paulden, Ariz. It was founded by Jeff Cooper who, according to Jim Graham, manager if the Rifle and Pistol Club, is known in the small arms community as the father of modern pistol technique.

The program that was brought to Fort Benning was the Gunsite 100 course. This program is just one of the basic classes offered by the Gunsite school.

"The Gunsite 100 class is kind of an introductory firearm and pistol class for defensive pistol shooting," said Walt Marshall, range master for the Gunsite pistol school. "We are not a marksmanship training unit. We don't teach people to hit bulls eyes. We teach them to defend themselves safely and properly."

The two-day program was designed to help participants to better handle their personal firearms.

"We want to see that decent citizens are trained properly," Marshall said. "There is a right way and a wrong way to handle a pistol. We want to ensure that they leave this class knowing exactly how to handle a pistol."

Participants in the class had a variety of reasons for taking the class and came from a variety of backgrounds. But, the focus of the class is something Marshall said everyone can benefit from.

"We are primarily instructing civilians here today," Marshall said. "We've got an accountant and we've got a lawyer and there's a police officer who's participating in the class. But, what we do is something that the military and civilians can benefit from equally."

Brian R. Voller

One of the participants in the class said being robbed at gunpoint four years ago was her reason for attending the class.

"I had a man stick a gun in my face and rob me," said Carol Lucas, an accountant of the Alabama Credit Union League. "I've been carrying my gun ever since then.

"I knew that I didn't have any skills with my revolver, so I signed up for the class," Lucas continued. "The instruction I received over the past two days has given me the confidence that I need."

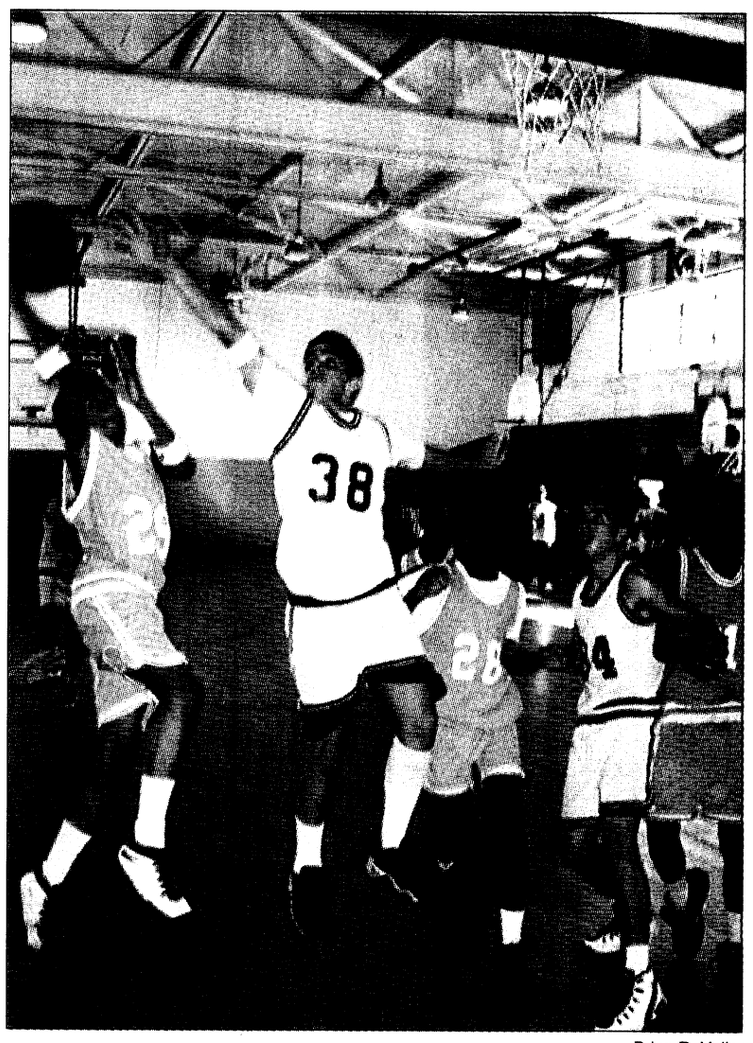
The Gunsite Pistol School will return to Fort Benning May 11 and 12. There will be a 15 percent discount for all active duty military personnel who apply. For more information call 689-3371.

Panthers take Dream Team 68-38

By Brian R. Voller
Bayonet staff writer

The Youth Basketball Panthers continued their dominance of the league Saturday defeating the Dream Team 68-38 at the Youth Activities Building .

"We went into this game knowing that the Dream Team had two good shooters," said Tony Coffee, head coach of the Panthers. "We wanted to come into the game and shut down their two best shooters, so we moved to a man-to-man defense."



The game began with the Dream Team blasting onto the floor with an offensive show that left the Panthers down 12-8 before Coffee called a time out.

After making some quick changes with his team, Coffee's Panthers came back onto the floor and dominated the rest of the ball game. By the end of the first quarter, the Panthers were well on their way to victory 18-12.

At the beginning of the second quarter, Coffee again made an adjustment by adding full court defensive pressure to the Dream Team. The addition of the full court defense threw off the Dream Team's offense and caused several turnovers. Capitalizing on the turnovers, the Panthers drove the score up by adding another 14 points to their first quarter score, finishing the half 32-18.

The third quarter brought more of the same with the Dream Team again giving up costly turnovers that the Panthers turned into quick points. By the end of the third quarter, the Dream Team's chances of mounting a comeback had all but been eliminated by the Panther's tenacious defense. The third quarter ended with the Panthers comfortably ahead 52-21.

In the fourth quarter, the Panther's finished off the Dream Team and added another game to their perfect win column defeating the Dream Team by a final score of 68-38.

Sven Coffee attempts to block the shot of Derrick Royal in youth basketball action Saturday.

"My team is the better team in the league this season," Coffee said. "They want to win, and they want to play ball. We don't do anything fancy. We have five basic plays we execute. If the guys do those plays, we seem to have no trouble scoring and winning."

Despite the fact that his team lost, Paul Horton, head coach of the Dream Team, said he loves being able to coach with the youth teams.

"In this atmosphere, winning isn't everything," Horton said. "I tell my kids that if they don't start the game, it doesn't matter because they can still be a player off the bench. It's just a lot of fun to come out here and be with the kids. I don't have any kids that play on the team; I just like being around the kids."

Hockey to come to South Ga with the Cottonmouths

Columbus Hockey Club Inc.

Cottonmouths strike fast. Beginning this fall, the people in the Chattahoochee Valley area will discover Cottonmouths skate with the same degree of aggressiveness.

A new hockey franchise set to begin play at the new Columbus Civic Center in October will be named "Columbus Cottonmouths."

The team, owned and operated by Columbus Red Stixx and Hockey Club Inc., will compete in the Southern Hockey League.

Other teams currently in the league include the Daytona Beach Breakers, Lakeland Prowlers, Jacksonville Bullets, Winston-Salem Mammoths, Huntsville Channel Cats and the West Palm Beach Barracudas.

"The sport of the nineties will excite and intrigue the local community," said Charles Morrow, Cottonmouths team president. "Ice hockey combines the speed and excitement of NASCAR with the physical play of football. This is going to be something new for the people here. Most Southerners grew up watching and playing football or baseball. Hockey has long been a mystery. The sport has really caught on nationally and has been successful in other southern cities. Columbus is ready for it."

According to Morrow, season ticket sales have been moving along at a solid pace.

"The people are excited about it and our brisk ticket sales for a team, which to this point has been anonymous, proves just that," Morrow said.

In addition to the name, the team also released a striking logo, which features an attacking snake head beneath the swooping words "Columbus Cottonmouths." The team colors are deep blue and light blue accented with yellow and black.

"We wanted colors that were unique from teams in our league and other leagues," Morrow said. "We've got a classic look to the logo, which will look sharp on merchandise. We think this will be a very popular logo not just in this community but with hockey fans nationwide.

Preserve children's smiles

Dental Activity

For new parents who are concerned about their baby's thumbsucking, the American Dental Society offers this advice.

Sucking is one of a baby's natural reflexes. As infants grow, sucking serves many purposes. Infants and young children may suck on thumbs, fingers, pacifiers or toys because it makes them feel secure and happy and helps them learn about their world.

Young children may find that placing a finger or thumb into their mouth provides them with a sense of security at difficult periods such as after a scolding or when separated from their parents. Because thumbsucking is relaxing, it may induce sleep. For this reason, young children may often do this in the evenings or when they are tired.

The Dental Society notes that prolonged thumbsucking can cause problems. Once the permanent teeth erupt, sucking may cause problems with the proper growth of the mouth and alignment of teeth.

One factor that determines whether a dental problem may result is the intensity of sucking. Children who rest their thumbs passively in their mouths are less likely to have difficulty than those who vigorously suck their thumbs. When a parent removes the thumb from the child's mouth, a "popping" sound is often heard.

The Dental Society notes that some aggressive thumbsuckers may cause problems for their primary (baby) teeth. If you notice changes in the baby teeth, consult your dentist.

Usually, children stop thumbsucking between the ages of two and four. Sucking gradually lessens during this period as they spend more of their waking hours exploring their surroundings. They should cease sucking by the time the permanent front teeth are ready to erupt. Peer pressure causes many school-aged children to stop.

Sucking a pacifier is not necessarily less harmful for a child. Pacifiers can affect the teeth essentially the same way as sucking fingers and thumbs.

The Dental Society urges parents to keep these tips in mind when helping your child:

• Instead of scolding children for sucking, praise them when they are not.

• Remember that children often suck their thumbs when feeling insecure. Focus on correcting the cause of anxiety, instead of thumbsucking.

• Children who are sucking for comfort will feel less of a need when their parents provide comfort.

• Reward children when they refrain from sucking during difficult periods, such as when being separated from their parents.

If these approaches don't work, remind the children of their habit by bandaging the thumb or putting a sock on the hand at night. Your dentist or pediatrician may prescribe a bitter medication to coat the thumb.

ask the judge

Q: What is renter's insurance and why is it important to have?

A: Renter's insurance is a special form of property insurance for people who do not own their place of residence.

Of course, most people who own their homes have homeowner's insurance to protect against loss or damage to their home or the property in it; in fact, the mortgage company always requires it.

For a long time, however, people who rented were without such protection. As a result, if a fire, storm or burglary occurred that resulted in damage or loss of a renter's furniture, clothing or other personal property, the renter was faced with the simple choice of spending his or her own money to replace the property or doing without.

A tenant could not count on relying on the landlord's insurance unless the landlord was at fault in causing the loss (a storm does not meet this criteria, and in many cases, neither does a fire).

One only has to look at news articles concerning apartment fires in which tenants are burned completely out, with the loss of most of their furniture, clothing and belongings. Without renter's insurance, these people will have to start from scratch.

Renter's insurance can be procured through most major insurance companies, or you can contact an independent insurance agent who will seek the best coverage from among various insurance companies.

The cost of the coverage is based on the total value of the property you wish to protect and on whether you want insurance for replacement or depreciated value. You should also ask your agent about coverage for special items of property such as high-value pieces of jewelry, computers, art objects and the like. Sometimes these items must be scheduled separately.

Finally, you may want to look into coverage for "loss of use." This will pay for the cost of temporary lodging until your rented apartment or home is repaired.

Is renter's insurance necessary or desirable for those who live in government quarters? Absolutely. Although the government will pay for loss or damage because of casualty under certain circumstances, it will not pay replacement value, and what it does pay may be subject to certain maximum limits. Renter's insurance can alleviate these limitations.

crime watch

Military Police Activity

This week's hot topic is loud music — the kind of music that vibrates your windows to the staccato beat of the bass. Music so loud that you are unable to converse with a fellow passenger. Music so loud that you can't hear the sirens from an approaching emergency vehicle. Music so loud you have to listen, even if it's not your favorite singer.

Why do you have to listen to music that teeters on the brink of deafening? You could just reach over and turn down the volume, but you can't. Why? Because you would have to leave your vehicle and walk to the car in in front of, behind, or beside you, reach in and turn down the volume.

Post policy memorandum No. 94-64 prohibits the playing of music that can be heard more than 15 feet away.

Another hot topic concerns unattended children. U.S.Army Infantry Center Regulation 210-5 (Garrison Regulation) holds parents and sponsors responsible for their children and family members at all times while on Fort Benning.

Parents and sponsors are reminded that children are prohibited from playing in streets, construction areas, troop billeting areas, golf courses, or public buildings (except those designated for this purpose).

When playing outside, children should always be under the supervision of the parent, sponsor or another responsible adult.

Children under 8 cannot be left unattended in a parked vehicle, and children under 12 are not allowed to be left alone in quarters.

If you observe a lost or unattended child, report it to the Military Police at 545-5222.

The following entries are from the Fort Benning Military Police blotters. Such entries may be incomplete and do not prove the guilt and or innocence of any person.

• A civilian was charged with driving under the influence, driving with a suspended license, no proof of insurance and failure to drive on roadway laned for traffic.

An MP noticed the individual crossing over the outside white line. The individual was stopped and alcohol was detected. The individual was apprehended and taken to the MP station where he was charged and later released.

Other activities include 15 traffic accidents, four cases of driving under the influence, five cases of shoplifting and 24 cases of larceny.

Remember to help "Make Our Post The Best — Give Crime Arrest."

Report any activity that seems wrong or out of place to the military police at 545-5223 or 545-5224 or the "Crime In Progress" line at 545-5222.

Kennel club provides tips for dog care

American Kennel Club

The American Kennel Club provides 10 tips to America's 52.6 million dog owners.

When properly followed, these 10 easy tips can turn the average dog owner into a very responsible dog owner:

• Take your dog to the vet for a checkup — every year.

• Remember your dog's nutritional needs and feed it treats that are good for him, such as carrots or white grapes (not fattening table scraps and never chocolate).

• Teach or review the five basic obedience commands with your dog: heel, sit, stay, down and come. Go for obedience classes if you need to start from scratch.

• Get your dog a form of permanent identification, either a tattoo or microchip, and then enroll her in an animal recovery program.

• Get outside with your dog for longer and more energetic walks — it needs exercise, too.

• Buy a new grooming brush or mitt, and spend some extra time grooming your dog each week.

• Spend more quality time with your dog.

• Never leave your dog unattended in the car — in any season, but especially not summer.

• After the snow melts, give your yard a dog-proofing treatment — removing sticks and debris that your dog could try to eat or chew.

• Before traveling with your dog, take precautions for a safe trip, such as ensuring your dog's crate is large enough to allow him to stand, turn and lie down.

To learn more about being a responsible dog owner, the AKC has a responsible dog owner's packet, available free by writing to the AKC, 5580 Centerview Drive, Raleigh, N.C. 27606

Animal crate can become sanctuary

Veterinary Services

A dog house is the ideal retreat for a dog when the house resembles a parade field.

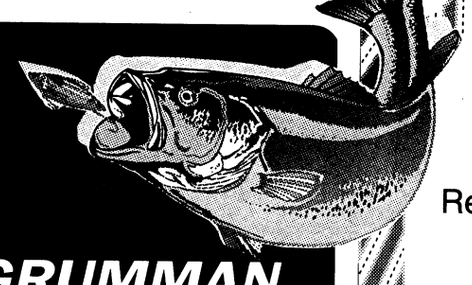
A dog crate, if used properly, can be a sanctuary for a pet. Its use lies in directly with a dog's instincts to have a den as the core area of his territory. Crates can be made of a variety of materials (e.g., wire, plastic airline kennels) and should be a suitable size for each dog.

The crate is an extremely useful tool when housebreaking a dog whether as a puppy, adolescent or an adult animal — because his instinct is not to soil his den. It is also valuable during periods of chewing and teething since it can help prevents damages to the household. It can be used as a part of obedience training or as a way of confining the animal when his behavior is annoying.

Puppies usually accept the crate in a short time if not placed there in anger. Set it up in an area near family activity, such as the hallway or kitchen. Make it cozy. Place a few safe toys, a familiar blanket or towel inside. The crate should be long enough to permit the grown dog to stretch out and high enough for him to stand up in without hitting his head.

You can construct a partition for the puppy so there is just enough room to lie down or sit up. It must never offer more space than necessary or it loses its den- like quality. As the puppy grows, increase the space by moving the partition back.

Develop a crate routine. Close the puppy in the crate at regular one- to two-hour intervals during the day (his own chosen nap times will be a guide) and whenever he must be left alone for up to three to four hours. A crate should never be used as a daily long-hours convenience for a regularly absent owner.



The dog's association with the crate should always be a positive one, never frightening. At bedtime it may be preferable to place the crate, with the door left open and newspaper nearby, in an enclosed area such as a bathroom; crying is easier to endure knowing that the puppy is not uncomfortable.

Once adjusted to his new lifestyle, he should soon have greater bowel control and eventually may be crated all night in his regular daytime place.

If things do not go smoothly at first — don't weaken and don't worry; be consistent, be firm and be very aware that crate training may prevent pets from getting into trouble while also providing security and comfort.

SOA instructors receive training in

Counternarcotics

By Danielle Holliday and Judith Ginder
School of the Americas

The School of the Americas Counternarcotics course is designed to teach commissioned and noncommissioned officers of platoons and companies valuable leadership skills.

Counternarcotics training is geared toward realistic and strenuous field operations. The students develop skills through tough, performance-oriented training and are subjected to physically and mentally stressful situations.

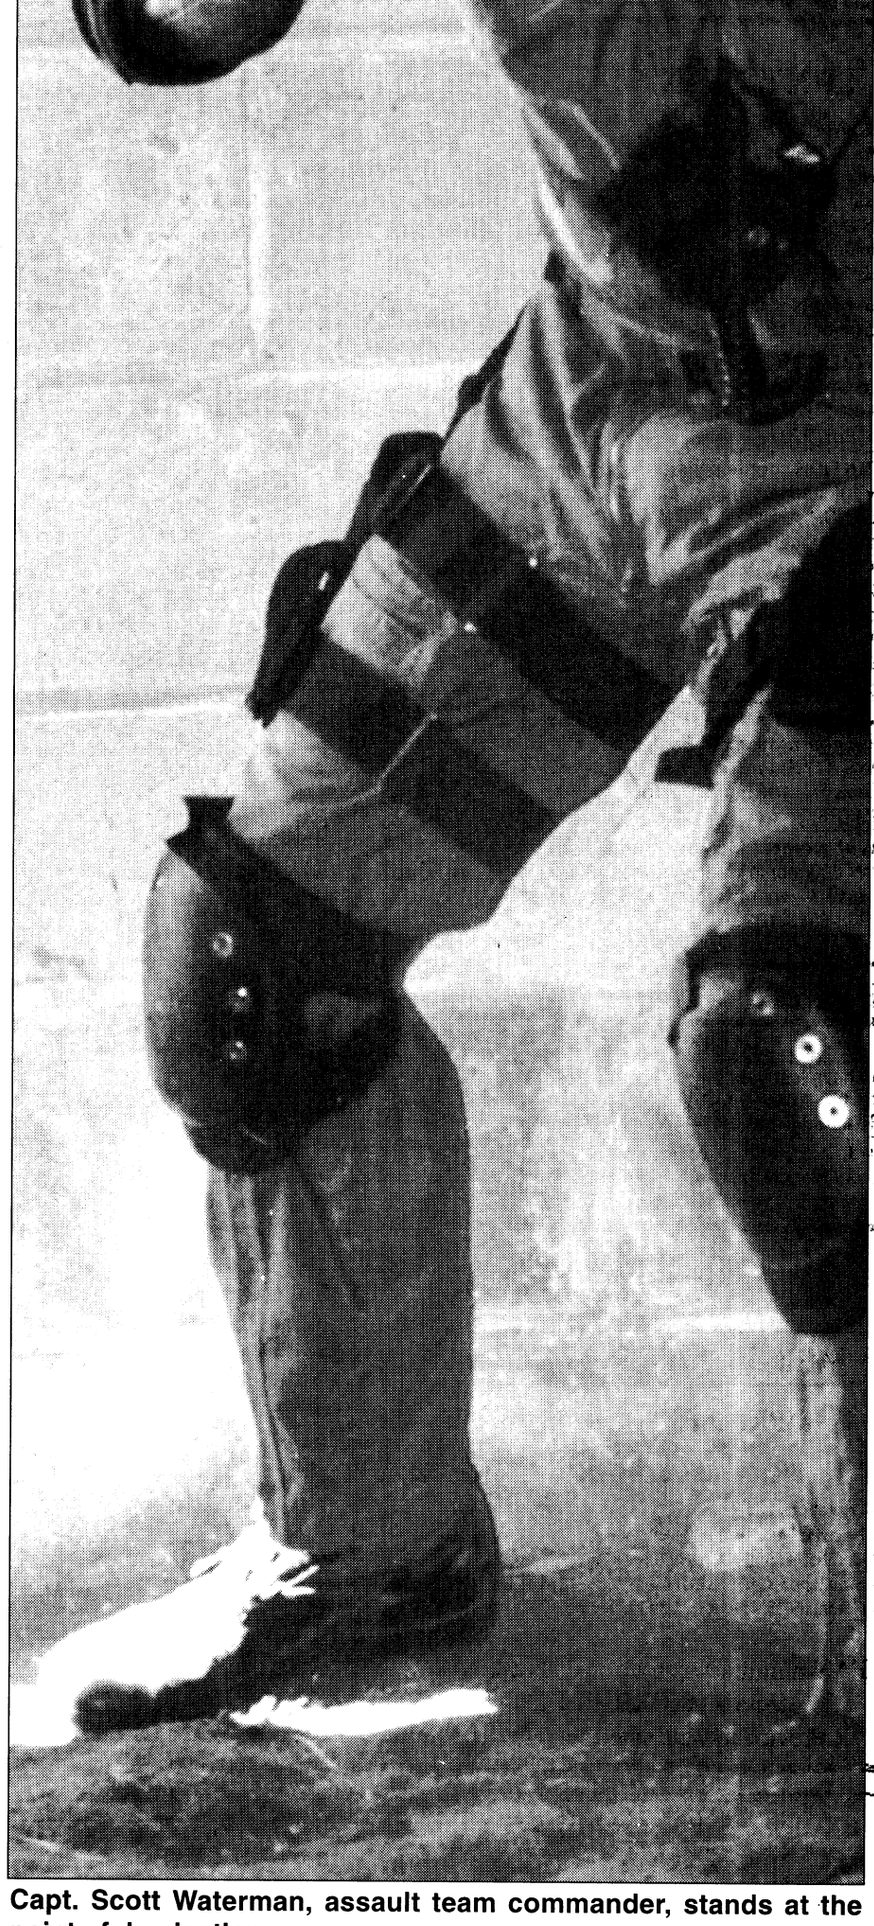
Students are instructed in a variety of areas including: surveillance, land navigation, development of intelligence networks, human rights training and patrolling operations.

Recently, counternarcotics instructors prepared for an upcoming close quarters combat exercise.

"The mission (in close quarters combat) is to perform a surprise move on a drug den and then secure it quickly and safely," said. Staff Sgt. Jose Quinones, an instructor who participated in the exercise.

The soldiers began by lining up, each person having a specific position. They then moved forward strategically to the entrance of the building. Staying close to the wall, they moved toward the entrance of the building.

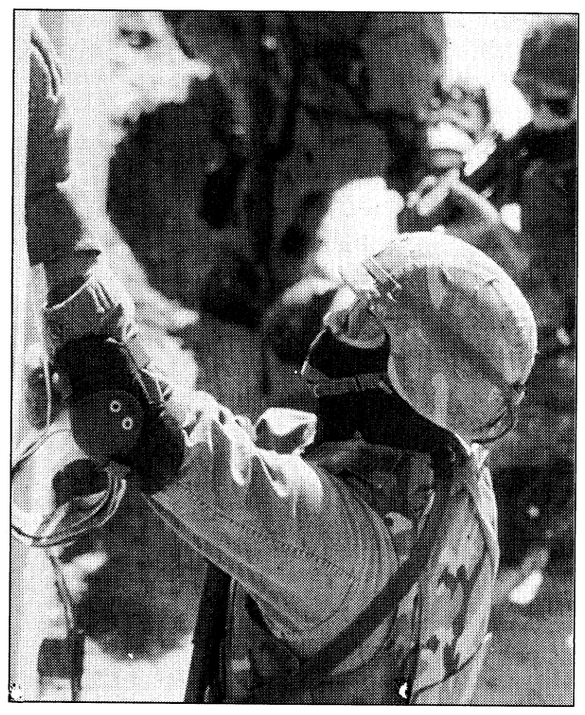
"This is the first time that we have conducted a rehearsal for close quarters combat," said Capt. Scott Waterman, assault team commander. "We used this as a basic cadre trainer. The better prepared our team of instructors, the better we can train our students."



While the rest of the team pulled security, one of the men moved forward to place a linear charge on the door. The team members then returned to their original position in the lineup. Once the charge went off, this signaled the team to enter the building.

"It's important that we make the rehearsals stressful because we always have to keep in mind that we're adapting to the stress of a real mission," said Sgt. Edgar Ramirez, an instructor who participated in the exercise.

As they rushed in, each man went to his specified position, which was called point of domination, in order to gain control of the room. Once the surprise move had been performed, the final objective was to secure and clear the building. Mission accomplished.



Instructors line up and prepare to enter the building.

Capt. Scott Waterman, assault team commander, stands at the point of domination.

Instructors rehearse their approach to the entry point.

Staff Sgt. Jose Fernandez, SOA instructor, places a linear charge on the door during the training exercise.

The 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division (Mechanized), was reflagged to the 3rd Brigade, 3rd Infantry Division (Mechanized) February 16.

The unit will still be referred to as the 3rd Bde., 24th Inf. Div. (Mech.), until the official division reflagging ceremony at Fort Stewart, Ga., May 31.

Several units that currently fall under 3rd Bde., 24th Inf. Div. (Mech), will be undergoing numerical designation changes.

The redesignations are as follows:

- The 1st Battalion, 18th Infantry Regiment, will become the 1st Battalion, 15th Infantry Regiment.
- The 2nd Battalion, 18th Infantry Regiment, will become the 1st Battalion, 30th Infantry Regiment.
- The 4th Battalion, 41st Field Artillery Regiment, will become 1st Battalion, 10th Field Artillery Regiment.
- The 324th Forward Support Battalion will become the 203rd Forward Support Battalion
- The 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division (Mechanized) Military Police Company will become the 3rd Brigade, 3rd Infantry Division (Mechanized) Military Police Company.

Soldiers of the 3rd Bde., 24th Inf. Div. (Mech.), will continue to wear the taro leaf patch and "V" on their kevlars until April, when the brigade deploys to the National Training Center, Fort Irwin, Calif.

At that time, soldiers will begin to change patches to the 3rd Infantry Division (Mechanized) patches, which is a square patch with alternate blue and white diagonal stripes.

There will be a welcome ceremony hosted by the brigade in mid-June.

More information will be given as plans for the reflagging solidify.

TSC creates mock Javelin

In-house project could save Army $27 million

USAIC Public Affairs Office

The ingenuity of four Fort Benning employees, coupled with the craftsmanship of an area small businessman, could save the Army $27 million.

As the Army converts to the Javelin Missile as its latest crew-served, anti-tank weapon, it needs 3,100 missile simulation rounds, or training devices, to train crews safely and cheaply.

Initially, the Army was going to contract the job out at a cost of $33,000 each for the first nine missile simulators and $11,000 each for the remaining 3,091 simulation rounds.

When Jane Preston, chief of the Training Support Center, learned of the project, she called in people from her devices branch and asked them what they thought they could make the same missile for.

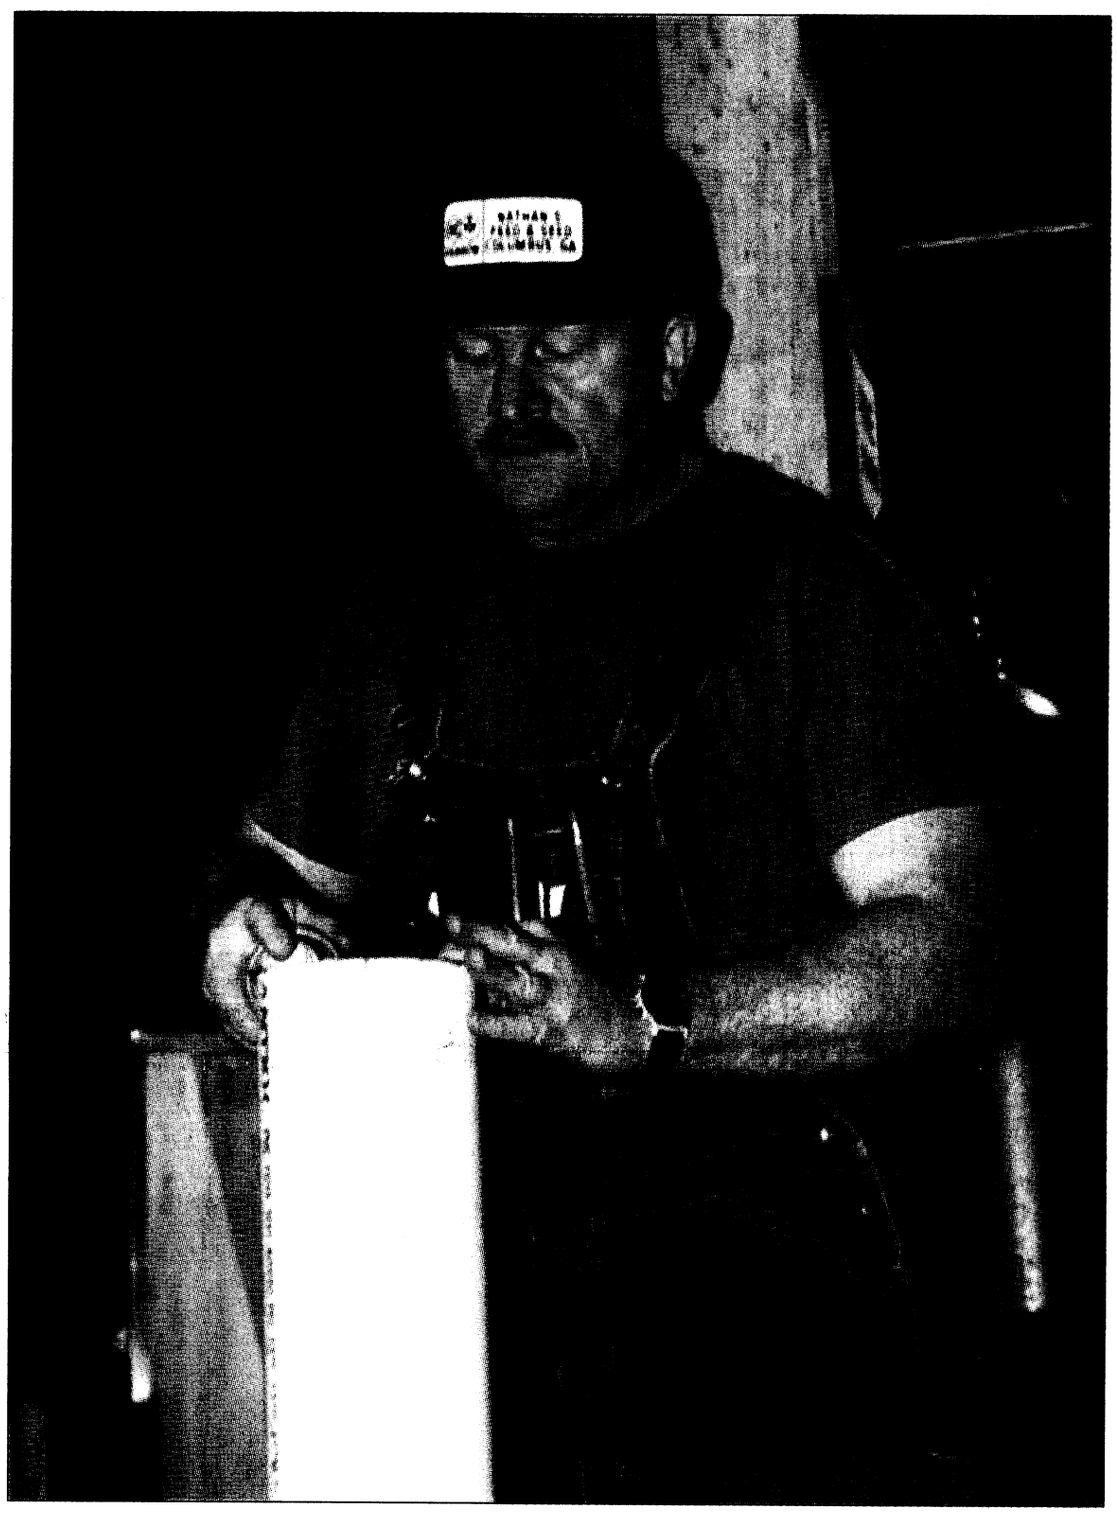
"I knew they could make the simulation rounds," she said. "They are as talented as heck."

Working with a $10,000 budget, the chief of the devices branch, Lee Thomason, John Grantham, Stan Everritt and Albert Algood came up with a prototype for the training missile.

A fourth TSC employee, Kevin Fifield, added the decals to the rounds to provide the final touch of realism to the simulation rounds.

The simulation round is 47 inches long, weighs 35 pounds and looks, feels, balances and even smells like the real Javelin Missile, according to Preston.

After experimenting with various materials, the Training Support Center employees found a small foundry, Lotts Patterns and Castings in West Point, Ga., that would cast several of the parts out of aluminum.



The cost for the missile simulation round was now down to $2,500.

The product was successfully tested by Redstone Arsenal, Ala., Missiles and Munitions Command and the first ones are rolling off the production line, she said.

Fort Benning has the contract to fabricate 133 of the missile simulation rounds at a cost of $332,500.

At this rate, if it gets the contract to manufacture the other 2,967, the savings to the government will be in excess of $27 million, Preston said.

Soldiers use the simulated rounds to practice crew drills.

586th presses forward with Bosnia mission

By Anna Oleska
USAIC Public Affairs Office

The 586th Engineer Company (Assault Float Bridge), 36th Engineer Group (Combat), is accomplishing its mission in fine fashion, according to Sgt. Roger Berthelette, noncommissioned officer in charge of the Personnel and Administration Center.

Berthelette said the men from his unit are maintaining the bridge across the Sava River.

The 586th Engineer Company left Fort Benning for Bosnia Dec. 13 with nearly 156 soldiers. Since then, several individual replacements have been deployed from Fort Benning, putting the personnel count at 160.

Once arriving in Bosnia, the unit went about building the floating bridge across the Sava River.

The unit could remain in Bosnia for up to one year.

"There are about 300 to 400 vehicles a day crossing the bridge," he said, "and the bridge is open 14 to 16 hours a day."

"Everyone's doing fine, he said. "There are no serious injuries, and we're doing real good."

Berthelette described his unit's location as Support Area Harmon in Zupanja, Croatia, which is 10 kilometers from the Sava River, right on the Bosnia-Herzegovina border.

"We just opened a tent so that the soldiers can watch TV and play card games and all kinds of board games," he said.

"The soldiers are eating 'real food' now for breakfast and dinner but are still eating MREs for lunch."

The morale of the soldiers is high, Berthelette said.

The weather was causing some minor problems, he said.

"Weather the last two days has caused the river to rise two feet," he said. It's been raining and the snow is melting, so we had to add to the bridge to keep it afloat and keep it from going downstream."

The 586th is an assault float bridge company.

It has the capacity of bridging large rivers with float bridge sections, according to Maj. Westley B. Anderson, executive officer for the 36th Engineer Group.

The company is responsible for loading big, massive sections onto a truck that backs up to the river and drops the sections off.

Small boats are used to push these sections together and hold them together, Anderson said. The bridge then floats on the river and is spread the width of the river.

A problem in Croatia for the 586th is that the river has a lot of current, Berthelette said, and that's a particularly wide span at that part of the Sava River.

These small boats have to apply pressure, especially when a vehicle crosses the bridge.

Berthelette had a short message for his wife and family. To his wife, he said, "I miss you and love you a lot and I can't wait to get home."

ACOE team to evaluate post activities

By Lisa M. Hibbert
Bayonet staff writer

How well does Fort Benning do business?

The Army Communities of Excellence team will attempt to answer that question during an extensive, six-day evaluation that begins Monday.

So far the post is off to an excellent start, passing the Training and Doctrine Command level to make it to the final cut of the Department of the Army level, said Pat Porter, Quality Performance Improvement Office.

This is not the first time that the post has made it to this level. In 1994 and 1995, Fort Benning was named the best Army installation in the world and, if it wins again this year, it will "three-peat."

This year's visit by the evaluation team marks the first time that Fort Benning will be judged based on the Army Performance Improvement Criteria, an adaptation of the Malcolm Baldridge criteria, that the Army implemented in 1995.

"The post uses APIC as a management tool," said Sarah McLaney, ACOE coordinator. "Even if the post were not being evaluated, APIC would still be used because it focuses on continuous improvement."

As this is the first year that the post will be using the new criteria, the evaluation team's focus will be different from previous years. This year, the focus will be on performance improvement

Fort Benning submitted a written application to enter the ACOE process. The team will be here to verify and clarify information that was submitted in the post application.

The purpose of the visit is to determine an installation's effectiveness under APIC in order to select the the top Army Community of Excellence to serve as a role model for the rest of the Army.

Breakfast to honor excellence, quality

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Fort Benning will welcome the Army Community of Excellence evaluation team at the Excellence Appreciation Day Breakfast and Quality Awards Ceremony Tuesday at 8 a.m. at the Officers' Club.

Hosted by Maj. Gen. John W. Hendrix, post commanding general, the breakfast is designed to recognize and honor Fort Benning's employees, both military and civilian, for the job they do day in and day out. Having the ACOE team present will provide the work force an opportunity to demonstrate the spirit of Fort Benning.

Tickets will be available through today in the Parrish Building, Building 66.

For more information, call, Pat Porter at 545-1713 or 545-4332.

VARIOUS VOICES

Should smokers be made to smoke outside or should they have designated areas inside?

Paul Alcott, AAFES concessionaire — "As a smoker, I think they should be able to smoke inside. I don't like smoking in the cold."

2nd Lt. George Wolbert, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 2nd Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment— "They should smoke outside. Not everyone wants to breathe that smoke and shouldn't have to."

Maj. Katie Moore, Fort McPherson, Ga. — "I think they should smoke outside because the air they pollute when they smoke inside cannot be contained in one area. I'm a reformed smoker. Maybe that's why I'm harder on smokers."

Glynis Smith, family member — "I think they should smoke in designated areas They should have the right if they choose to smoke and they should be comfortable."

Ernest Williams, retired military — "I don't think they necessarily have to smoke outside as long as it doesn't contaminate nonsmokers."

Mickey Stanziola, family member — "I think they should smoke outside because people who don't smoke don't like smoke."

Smoking vs. Nonsmoking

By Amy Durham

commentary

I am killing myself.

I know my "chosen" habit is self-destructive. And my friends and family — even my husband — can do nothing about it. That is, except tell me that I'm going to die before my time, tell me how much they love me and want me to quit.

My husband has six years of marriage invested with me. Although I tell him I was smoking when we began dating, that then was his chance to leave if he did not like it, I understand his obvious anger and frustration every time I light up another cigarette.

What I can't stand is a complete stranger walking past me only to give me a disgustedly condescending look or to make a snide comment like, "You're killing yourself with those things." If you're going to intrude on my privacy, tell me something I don't already know.

Incense me more by sitting down at a nonsmoking-designated restaurant table, which happens to be near the smoking-designated table at which I'm sitting, and have the nerve to make a scene, telling the waitress, in a loud voice intended for me, that you can't sit at the table and you should not have to inhale my smoke.

You are right. You should not have to inhale my smoke just as I, who am sitting at a legally-designated smoking table, should not be subjected to your righteous indignation. Instead, the restaurant should consider installing a state-of-the-art ventilation system and consider possibly switching the nonsmoking and smoking sections so that nonsmokers do not have to walk through a carcinogenic haze to get to their tables.

I believe fully in every man, woman and child's right not to suffer through my life-shortening habit with me. But I am an adult who has the right to make the choice whether or not to smoke, and to live — or die— by that choice.

I admit that if I could, I'd change the choice I made 11 years ago when I lit that first cigarette. I had severe allergies throughout my childhood. I could not breath in a smoke-filled room or car, literally. Around smoke, my nasal passages would stop up and my eyes burned, itched and watered endlessly. Yet I started smoking, stupidly I guess, for the fun of it.

Coming from a home where neither parent smoked and smoking was forbidden, even of guests, I guess I did it because I was not supposed to do it. Maybe I thought I was in control and would always be in control.

To this day, I discourage any nonsmoker I know from picking up a cigarette. And, I am polite about my habit. Although I smoke in my home and car, at work and in other public places such as restaurants, I smoke only in designated areas. I never smoke in someone else's home unless they, too, are a smoker, and usually only if I know them as a friend. I don't even consider smoking when we go out with friends.

I know I am addicted to cigarettes just as people with eating disorders seem to have a mental and physical addiction to food. I continue to learn things about smoking that bothers me. I do process what doctors, friends and family tell me about smoking's effects on my body and the second-hand effects of smoking on my husband.

At 27, I have tried to quit many times. My success or failure — depending on how you look at it — has lasted from a couple of minutes or hours to as much as a couple of days or weeks. But, every time, I come up with a reason to start back. In my mind, every reason is justified.

My father and brother, both of whom do not smoke, suffer from heart problems. It bothers me that their health and apparently my own are not enough to make me quit, although I know what I am doing to my body cannot be good.

But I shut down when someone

I don't even know, assumes a right they do not have, and preaches to me or chides me about something that is none of their business. Those people need to put their efforts in convincing someone they know — a friend, relative or co-worker — to quit smoking. I certainly would not tell an overweight, nonsmoking restaurant patron as he pushes the table away from his booth to make getting up more possible, that obesity kills, too.

I believe society should continue to educate young children about the effects of smoking. The best way to quit the habit is to keep others from ever starting.

There will be those who will smoke a cigarette hours, or even minutes, before they take their last breath in this lifetime.

Each day, I like to think I can and will quit — that I'd like to feel my full lung capacity again.

Whether I am smoking in 20 years or not is up to me. My friends, my doctor, my family and my husband can continue to beg me to stop. I don't know if it will work.

But I do know that strangers who pass me in a designated smoking area, or sit near me in a restaurant, will get nothing from me with their unwanted comments but my very acidic remarks. They don't need to tell me what I already know — I am killing myself.

commentary

I'm not completely innocent of nicotine addiction. I've been trying to get over a nasty chewing tobacco habit for a while now. I've been doing pretty good, but it's hard to get over this horrible addiction.

The reason I include this information is so people who read this don't try and use the excuse, "Why should I listen to him? He doesn't understand how hard it is to quit." Well guess what? I do, and one of the most important goals of my life is to stay away from the nicotine bug that still haunts me.

What I'm not going to concentrate on is the usual, smoking stinks, chewing's gross, you're all nasty type of commentary that usually runs with this kind of article. What I am going to do is fill it with little known facts about what nicotine and what smoking really can do to your body.

In actuality, nicotine is not a completely horrible drug. Nicotine calms you down and wakes you up; it improves memory, decreases anxiety, raises tolerance of pain, lifts depression, increases metabolism, reduces hunger; and improves overall mental and physical performance. Of course, with the good always comes the bad.

If you look closely at all the good things that nicotine does, you will notice that all of the good effects are short term effects and all of these effects wear off with time causing a person to have to increase their nicotine intake to get the desired effect. Thus begins a very vicious cycle that leads to what some people call a hopeless addiction.

The only thing that is long term about nicotine addictions is the long term health problems that come with years of nicotine intake. There are, of course, several types of cancer that come with nicotine use. Also, it is one of the leading causes of heart disease and high blood pressure.

Basically every cigarette a person smokes hurts his health. According to Dr. Dean Ornish's Program for Reversing Heart Disease there are several short-term effects that happen every time a person intakes nicotine. The only problem is that most people don't realize that these effects are hurting their bodies:

- Blood vessels to a person's skin constrict. Because of this, a person's skin wrinkles more quickly.
- Blood vessels to a person's

CON

heart constrict. Chest pain and heart attacks could follow.

- Blood vessels to a person's brain constrict, which could cause a stroke.
- Blood vessels to a person's hands and feet constrict. At a minimum, this causes cold hands and feet. In worst cases such as people with diabetes, this can cause gangrene and amputation.
- Blood flow to the sexual organs decrease. Studies by Dr. Irving Goldstein of the Boston University Medical School have shown that nearly two-thirds of impotent men smoke, almost twice the rate of the general population. He also found that the decreased flow to the penis was directly proportionate to the number of cigarettes smoked.
- Nicotine clearly decreases your sense of taste, touch and smell.
- Women who smoke are three times more likely to be infertile than nonsmokers. In men, smoking decreases sperm count and sperm motility.
- Over a long period of time, nicotine damages the lining of the arteries in your heart and throughout your body, causing blockages to form more readily, further decreasing blood flow.
- Nicotine, like chronic stress, causes your body to produce excess cortisol, which suppresses a person's immune system and increases the formation of arterial blockages.
- Nicotine increases the tendency of your heart to beat irregularly, increasing the risk of sudden cardiac arrest.

These are just some of the problems that come along with nicotine consumption. There is an endless series of diseases and bad things that could result from nicotine addictions.

In Ornish's book he cites some staggering statistics about the ill-effects of smoking. More than 350,000 people die prematurely in the United States each year from smoking-related deaths, more than the total number of Americans killed in World War I, Korea and Vietnam combined. It has also been estimated that 30 percent of the deaths from coronary heart disease, or 170,000 deaths each year, are attributable to smoking.

Now, I'm not preaching and saying you're all going to die of a smoking-related illness. Some smokers may go on to live to be 105 years old and not see a single sign of ill health. But to me the risks are just way too high, and my life is not something I'm going to gamble. I don't have the guts to play Russian Roulette.

Symposium to mark National Women's History Month

Equal Employment Opportunity Office

A symposium commemorating National Women's History Month will be Tuesday from 1:30 to 2:30 p.m. in Infantry Hall, Classroom 2.

Three local women will be speakers at the symposium. They are Dr. Nemia M. Chai, professor of English, Department of Language and Literature, Columbus College; Iris Jessie, assistant city manager, Columbus Consolidated Government and Keryn Shipman, meteorologist, WTVM Channel 9 News.

March was designated National Women's History Month in 1987 in recognition of the many contributions of women.

This year's theme, "See History in a New Way," defines women's lives and accomplishments as an essential part of the nation's history. History looks very different when the contributions of women are included.

"Examining the contributions of women increases our own understanding of the world we are living in today and expands our possibilities for the future," said Winnie Torain of the Equal Employment Opportunity Office. "Each year we become more encouraged by the work of many people throughout our country who are promoting an authentic and inspiring portrayal of women and their contributions in American history."

"National Women s History Month gives us the opportunity to celebrate the lives of women who have preceded us," she continued, "as well as to honor and recognize the work of contemporary women who are doing so much to keep the promise of possibility and accomplishment alive."

Military and civilian personnel are encouraged to attend and support this national commemorative observance, she said.

For additional information, contact your organization's Federal Women's Program representative or Torain, the installation's Federal Women's Program manager, at 545-1872.

VA to limit points when refinancing home loans

Department of Veterans Affairs

The Department of Veterans Affairs is announcing plans to develop regulations to guard against excessive discount points that veterans are being charged by some lenders when refinancing VA-guaranteed home loans.

In the interim, a new policy directs VA regional offices to scrutinize interest-rate reduction refinancing loans, so-called "streamline refinances," and requests lenders voluntarily comply with a two-point ceiling on how many points may be financed while VA develops a regulation that would ultimately impose the two-point limit.

"In recent weeks, we have detected instances of as many as seven discount points being rolled into loans that already were bearing market interest rates," R.J. Vogel, VA undersecretary for benefits, said. "We are gravely concerned that some veterans may not realize they are inflating the loan beyond the value of their home, leaving them in a potentially devastating financial predicament if they move and must sell the property."

One of the primary benefits of the VA home loan program for veterans is the ability to include the funding fee, discount points and other closing costs in the refinancing loan. However, VA officials warned veterans that as they negotiate with lenders, by adding excessive points into a refinancing loan, they are not getting the full benefit of reducing their interest rate — and it may even increase their monthly payment.

Because the interim guidelines are voluntary while the regulation is under development, VA will require lenders to disclose these warnings to veterans and obtain a signed statement of receipt when submitting to VA any IRRRL loan with more than two financed discount points before VA issues the loan guaranty certificate.

VA loan officials believe that the practice of providing loans with excessive discount points was an isolated phenomenon that appeared only recently as firms were vying to maximize their return on these type loans.

Of the 243,700 loans that VA guaranteed in 1995, approximately 25,000 were interest-rate reduction loans. Although a lapse of legislative authority at the end of 1995 has put on hold the ability of veterans to negotiate interest rates on original loans with lenders, veterans retain the right to negotiate rates and points under the interest-rate reduction program.

Some states permit voters to cast ballots via fax

By Stephen Barrett
American Forces Information Service

WASHINGTON—The electronic age will help some military voters receive their absentee ballots for the 1996 federal election.

By using a fax machine and Federal Post Card Application (Standard Form 76), service members can register to vote, apply for absentee ballots and receive blank absentee ballots.

According the Voting Assistance Guide 1996-97, a total of 36 states, Guam and the U.S. Virgin Islands permit service members to fax absentee ballot requests. Most of those states also allow voter registration by fax.

For those sending voting material by fax, all requests must go through the Federal Voting Assistance Program in Washington at DSN 223-5527, (703) 693-5527 or (800) 368-8683.

Program officials urge voters not to fax materials to state election boards. They say by faxing materials to Washington, officials can protect the integrity of the voting process and to provide an audit trail if needed.

Although many states or territories accept voter registrations and ballot requests by fax, only 19 will send the blank ballot electronically. Of those, only Hawaii, Kansas, Louisiana, North Dakota and the U.S. Virgin Islands will accept marked ballots via fax without question.

Indiana, Maine, Montana, New Jersey, South Carolina, Utah and Washington will accept completed ballots by fax only in emergencies.

For more information about voter registration, ballot requests and voting via fax, contact your unit voting assistance officer or call the voter assistance hot line at (800) 438-8683.

DENTAC to close today

The U.S. Army Dental Activity, except for the Martin Army Community Hospital Dental Clinic, will be closed today for commander's call and training. Emergencies will be seen at the MACH dental clinic.

Volunteers needed for Olympic Village

Volunteers are needed to work at the Olympic Village on Fort Benning from July 6 to Aug. 2.

Volunteers who speak Japanese, Mandarin, Chinese, Dutch, Spanish are needed as well as volunteers who have human resources experience.

For more information, call Marcus Alexander at 660-1996.

Insurance companies answer questions

A representative from Blue Cross and Blue Shield will be available Tuesday in Wing C of Building 85 8:30 to 11:30 a.m. to answer insurance questions.

A representative from Mail Handlers insurance company will be available Wednesday in Wing C of Building 85 from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. to answer insurance questions.

Appointments can be made through supervisors with the Personnel Services Center, Management Advisory Services Division of the Directorate of Civilian Personnel at 545-3374 or 545-2470.

AER campaign set

The Army Emergency Relief Fund Campaign begins today and will end May 15.

AER, which was established Feb. 5, 1942, is a nonprofit organization dedicated solely to "Helping the Army Take Care of its Own."

AER offers loans and grants or a combination of the two to soldiers, family members, Reserve and National Guard soldiers on extended active duty, retirees, widows and orphans of soldiers who died on active duty or after retirement.

Briefings set for Green to Gold

The Columbus College ROTC Department will host a Green to Gold briefing today. The briefing is at 1 p.m. in Infantry Hall, Building 4, Classroom 30.

The Columbus College ROTC Department will assist applicants in attending the school of their choice. All scholarship applications must be processed by March 15.

For further information, call Maj. Brian Luedtke, Capt. Sheila Denham and 2nd Lt. Angela Soto at 568-2058.

Hospital to require SSNs for patients

Martin Army Community Hospital's computer data base will be updated during February.

The new version requires Social Security numbers for all patients to include children and infants for registration purposes.

While patients not possessing this data will not be refused care, some delay could occur if the Social Security numbers are not readily available.

Tax Office opens

The Fort Benning Tax Office is open. The office is located in Building 2640 at Soldiers' Plaza and will be open Monday to Friday, from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

Electronic tax filing is available for most federal returns. The office has many federal and state tax forms available.

Unit tax advisers have also been appointed for units throughout the post. Persons should see their unit tax adviser first with questions.

For more information, call Capt. Scott L. Frost at 545-3281.

CID seeks assistance

The U.S. Army Criminal Investigation Division is offering a $150 reward for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the person(s) responsible for removal of five gas powered leaf blowers; six gas powered weed eaters; three gas powered hedge trimmers; one gas powered lawn mower; one cordless drill; one circular saw; a 200-piece tool set and one wrench set from Building 1198. The items are valued at $3,848.90.

A $300 reward for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the person(s) responsible for a larceny that occurred between 5 p.m. Jan. 5 and 9:30 a.m. Jan. 8.

Someone entered Building 2755A on post and removed three central processing units, two monitors and one computer printer.

Anyone with information concerning this incident can contact J. Taylor at 545-7950 or 545-7052 or the Military Police at 545-5222.

CID is seeking information concerning a person or persons who stole a vehicle between 6:45 a.m. Feb. 5 and 9:30 p.m. Feb. 6 from a parking lot adjacent to building 9073 on Kelley Hill. The Bronco was green with a white top and grey primer on the rear corner panel. The vehicle also had a 2-inch body lift with 33-inch BF Goodrich Mud Terrain tires and a "Warn" winch bumper.

The assistance of the local community is being requested in an effort to identify and apprehend the perpetrator(s). The identity of anyone providing information will be strictly confidential. For information concerning this incident call Special Agent James Newsome at 545-7950 or the Military Police at 545-5222.

ROTC scholarships are still available

The Columbus College Reserve Officers' Training Corps still has scholarships available for eligible soldiers. The application deadline is March 15.

For information on how to earn a college degree, a commission as a second lieutenant and have the Army pay for all of your college education, call Maj. Brian Luedtke, Capt. Sheila Denham or 2nd Lt. Angela Soto at 568-2058.

Controlled burning set

Controlled burning of woodland areas will take place through March 9. If weather permits, the following compartments will be affected: A-2, A-6, A-9, B-5, C-1, J-1, K-1, K-6, M-7, P-2, Q-1, Q-5, T-3, X-4, V-4, W-1, W-4 and CC-1.

Burning will occur in pine stands within these compartments to enhance endangered species' habitat and training areas.

Personnel proposing to use these areas for recreational purposes must vacate these areas prior to 9:30 a.m. daily.

Training units using compartments adjacent to those listed above may experience drift smoke and are reminded to exercise caution while travelling in these areas due to the potential for reduced visibility.

Units using ranges and training areas are reminded to remove flammable debris, such as pinestraw, leaves, grass and trash from around structures in accordance with U.S. Army Infantry Center Regulation 210-4, Paragraph 5-22, Organizational Maintenance.

For more information, call Jack Greenlee, Natural Resources Management Branch, at 544-6206.

Presents
The Internationally Renowned Musical Performance

Coming From Jerusalem, The Holy Land!

• Prince Asiel Ben Israel, International Ambassador of the African Hebrew Israelite Community of Jerusalem in conjunction with a consortium of concerned organizations and individuals, is bringing the play, "Sound And The Kidnapped Afrikan" to America. For the first time this dynamic musical drama, which, for the last fourteen years, has thrilled international audiences abroad, will be performed in the United States.

• This play depicts the historical and prophetic journey of the Afrikan, from the greatness of his origins in Afrika to his denigrated status of kidnapped slave, to urban ghetto dweller and on to his final rise to his preordained destiny.

• The entire cast is comprised of Afrikan Americans who are a part of the Hebrew community that returned to Afrika in 1967, seeking freedom, self determination and reunification with the God of Africa.

Editor's note: Questions and answers are provided to help soldiers prepare for the board.

Q. What is the difference between a statement of charges and a report of survey?

A. According to Giffard's Pocket Study Guide, a person who admits guilt for loss of or abuse of a piece of equipment can pay for it with a statement of charges. This is a voluntary act . If a person does not admit responsibility, his or her commander can order a report of survey, and a surveying officer will investigate and decide if he or she has to pay.

OPERATION VICTORY FOCUS

3rd bde, 24th ID focuses on victory

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Intense training is in progress for the soldiers of the 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division (Mechanized) during Operation Victory Focus, a vigorous three-week capstone exercise. The soldiers are preparing for their upcoming rotation to the National Training Center.

The Army's largest mechanized infantry brigade combat team has taken to the field at Fort Benning for this annual training, which will continue until March 12.

Known as the "Sledgehammer Brigade," the unit is incorporating many innovative training methods into the exercise, some for the first time.

Months of intricate planning and coordination by the brigade and battalion staffs complement the progressive training regimen each company in the brigade has scrupulously followed. The result is some of the most rewarding and cost-effective training the brigade has ever undertaken.

One innovation to be used in this year's Victory Focus is the lane training concept. This method allows company-sized elements to train to specific standards by running through training "lanes". These lanes are tailor-made to teach and evaluate a specific mission essential task.

Over the past several weeks, the brigade soldiers designed and constructed several lanes that will drill infantry and armor companies on assembly area procedures, breaching operations, the hasty attack, movement to contact, the hasty defense, the deliberate attack, and fire control techniques.

Each lane will have an experienced officer as a "lane expert" who oversees the conduct of the lane and serves as an evaluator. Lane training will continue through the first week of March.

After the completion of the lanes, the brigade will conduct deep operations, similar to the types of missions the unit will fight during the National Training Center rotation, which takes place in April and May. Deep operations will incorporate many different combat and combat support assets, culminating in a five-day joint Army-Air Force training exercise from March 8 to 12.

This year's Victory Focus maximizes the training potential of available space, equipment and personnel through progressive, carefully structured exercises that prepare fighting units for every contingency.

This approach to the unit's most intense home station training allows the "Sledgehammer Brigade" to prepare for success at the NTC and to enhance their readiness posture.

TRADOC leads the way into 21st century

TRADOC news service

FORT MONROE, Va. — The Training and Doctrine Command is leading the entire Army in an effort to build a 21st Century fighting force in a program appropriately named Joint Venture.

"Our function is the conceptual redesign of the operational Army, essentially from the individual fighting soldier up through corps level," said Col. John A. Klevecz, director of Training and Doctrine Command's battle lab integration, technology and concepts.

Joint Venture is one of three axes of a program that will create Army XXI. Another is redesign of the processes and policies of the institutional Army at major command headquarters, including Headquarters, Department of the Army, according to Klevecz. This is the table of distribution and allowance, he said.

The third axis is the integration technologies, overseen by a task force from the Army Digitization Office.

All three axes interact and support each other to reach the common goal of Army XXI.

Gen. William W. Hartzog, TRADOC commander, heads up Joint Venture, coordinating the use of Army assets to experiment with concepts and material.

Gen. Gordon R. Sullivan, former Army chief of staff, coined the term Joint Venture.

"The name was really to connote the issue of cooperative effort," Klevecz said. "We have elements of every major command participating in Joint Venture: essentially the entire Army. Army agencies have not had to be tasked to participate in Joint Venture," he said. "Agencies eagerly volunteer.

"We certainly have senior leaders in the Army at this time who are willing to experiment."

Experimentation is the tool with which the future Army will be built, he said. There has already been a series of major advanced war fighting experiments, and many smaller experiments at the eight battle labs.

An aggressive schedule of experiments will be conducted over the next five years.

"They may vary from battle lab experiments where we may be looking at specific pieces of equipment all the way up to experiments that involve elements greater than a division," Klevecz said.

"Each experiment leads to the next, with results fed into subsequent experiments," he said. "The series will culminate with corps-level trials. Those experiments will be done with constructive and virtual simulations. It would be prohibitively expensive to field several thousands of soldiers for corps advanced warfighting experiments."

Results of experiments will enable Army leadership to make one of three decisions about concepts being tested. One is to invest in the concept, whether it is materiel or organizational changes The second is to continue experimenting to learn more. The last is to discontinue efforts because results show the concept is not workable.

One such concept that was discarded was the idea of a paper tactical operation center.

"There was a notion that we could pass information via computers and do away with passing paper back and forth," Klevecz said. "We determined, however, that we are not ready for the paperless TOC just yet, so we discarded it."

Data collection for live experiments has advanced to the point that events can be electronically captured and replayed through construction and virtual simulations.

"Simulators are sophisticated enough to vary the conditions, make day into night, make good weather into bad," he said. "You can introduce fog, smoke, confusion on the battlefield and see how people react."

Even though Joint Venture was intended to describe total Army participation, other services are participating in Army experiments. Two past AWEs — Theater Missile Defense and Atlantic Resolve — were conducted with Air Force and Navy elements.

Air Force and Marine Corps units will also participate in the Task Force XXI. AWE will be at the National Training Center, Fort Irwin, Calif., in February 1997.

"We're talking about changing an Army in a process that has never been done before," Klevecz said. "We want to make sure we provide to senior leaders the rigorous analysis gained from these experiments that will enable them to make necessary decisions."

An American to command a NATO

Army News Service

The commander of the U.S. Army Europe, Gen. William W. Crouch, assumed an additional role as commander of North Atlantic Treaty Organization's Allied Land Forces Central on Feb. 15.

Crouch will be the first American to command Land Forces Central, which was activated July 1, 1993. Originally, the command was scheduled to be rotated between German and Dutch generals.

"The dual command will allow me to oversee the continued integration of the U.S. Army Europe into NATO's post Cold War structure. All NATO Corps, except for the 4th German Corps, are now multinational. Ensuring interoperability between units of different nations will be an ongoing challenge," Crouch said.

"Both USAREUR and NATO have vital, interlinked roles to play as we continue to consolidate our relationships with former Warsaw Pact nations through the Military Cooperation Program and the Partnership for Peace, Initiative," he said. Land Forces Central's missions are to:

• Protect the peace and deter aggression in NATO's central region

• Plan, prepare and direct operations of land forces under NATO command

• Plan, coordinate and conduct the Land/Air Subcampaign, jointly with NATO's Allied Air Command Central

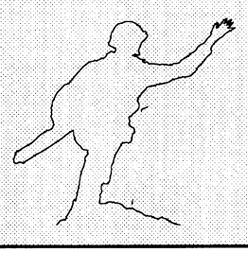
• Develop plans and participate in the Military Cooperation Program and the Partnership for Peace Initiative

• Support the flanks of the area of responsibilities.

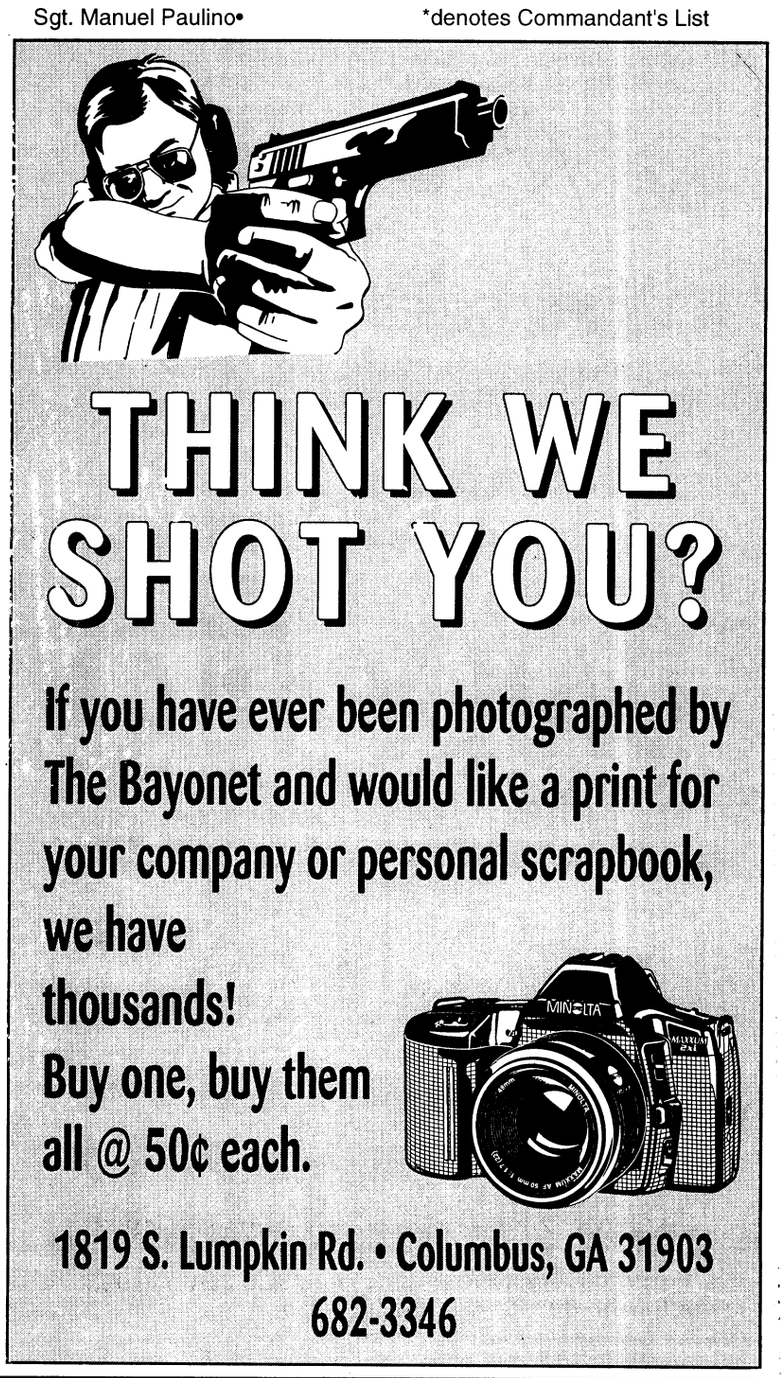
Land Forces Central's area of responsibility comprises Germany, Belgium, Luxemburg and Holland. As commander, Crouch will command a headquarters of more than 700 NATO personnel drawn from the land forces of Germany, Denmark, Canada, the United Kingdom, the Netherlands, the United States and Belgium.

In addition, with logistics, communication and transportation troops supporting Land Forces Central, the command's troop population is about 2,100.

As commander, Crouch will work for the Commander, Allied Forces Central, who is a German four-star general.



The headquarters of Land Forces Central is organized as an international combined staff. At the moment, the deputy commander is a Dutch three-star general. The secretary, chief of staff, is from the United States. The director of operations is a Belgian two-star general, while the director of support is from the United Kingdom.



After Feb. 16, the secretary, chief of staff became a German position. The assistant chief of staff of operations will rotate from a U.S. brigadier general to a German brigadier general in the following months.

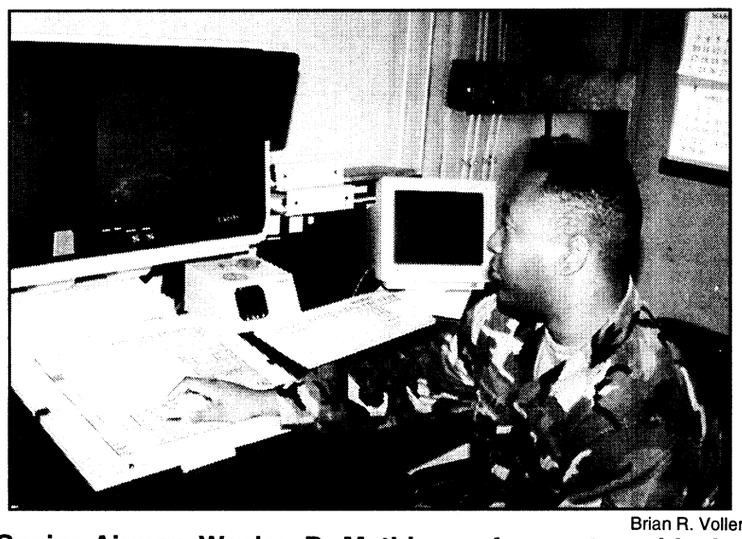
Siren signals weather warnings

USAIC Public Affairs Office

If a wailing weather siren leaves you wondering whether to run for cover or simply go about your business, then an understanding of the post's weather warning system will clear up any misunderstanding, said Capt. Curtis M. Winstead commander of 17th Air Support Operations Squadron, C Flight, U.S. Air Force.



Approximately 12 sirens, located throughout the populated areas of the post, will sound only if a code black warning has been issued by the Air Force Weather station at Lawson Army Airfield, which means a tornado has been detected and safety precautions should be taken immediately.

The sirens will emit a constant, high-pitched sound for five minutes to warn of a tornado. To indicate the tornado has cleared post, a two-minute siren will sound, followed by one minute of silence, two minutes of siren and one minute of silence.

"Residents should bear in mind that this is a very large post and the tornado may not necessarily pass through their area, even though the sirens are sounding," Winstead said. "Tornadoes can change direction without warning so the entire post must be warned at once."

It may also seem like a long time before the all-clear signal has sounded because the tornado must leave the post boundaries before the all clear signal is given.

According to Winstead, when a tornado threatens, observe the following safety precautions:

Brian R. Voller

Senior Airman Wesley D. Mathias, a forecaster with the Fort Benning Weather Station, monitors weather patterns on the radar system.

• Stay away from windows, doors and outside walls. Protect your head.

• In schools, hospitals or public places, move to predesignated safety areas. If at home, move to the basement if there is one or the smallest interior room, such as a closet or bathroom.

• If in a car or mobile home, leave it for more substantial shelter.

• If outdoors with no shelter available, lie flat in a nearby ditch or depression and shield your head with your arms.

Master Sgt. Marc A. Pope, noncommissioned officer in charge, said residents should take the weather siren seriously.

"The siren does not mean a tornado is possible. That falls under a Code Green watch, for which a siren is not sounded," Pope said. "The siren means a tornado has in fact been sighted and is on its way toward the post. We mean it if we sound it. Residents need to take action if they hear the sirens sound."

Pope encouraged parents to discuss tornado safety with their children and to predesignate a room in their homes to go to in case a tornado strikes.

Winstead added that the Fort Benning system issues warnings only for the post.

"Sometimes the National Weather Service will issue a tornado watch for the area but we will not," he said. This is because the NWS watch covers a much larger area and the weather conditions for which it warns might not ever affect Fort Benning."

MACH pharmacy makes changes to meet customer service needs

Composite Health Care System decreases waiting times for outpatient prescriptions

Martin Army community Hospital

The Pharmacy Service at Martin Army Community Hospital has been making changes over the past two years to meet patients' needs.

As a result, the pharmacy's approach has increased customer service and continues to produce positive results, according to officials.

Recent examples of improvements include the implementation of a new computer system, the Composite Health Care System, a telephone refill system, and a refill pharmacy annex. There is also a renovation of the Outpatient Pharmacy scheduled to take place this fiscal year.

The Composite Health Care System is an automated system designed to facilitate decreased waiting times for outpatient prescriptions.

This system will eventually link all areas of the hospital to the Pharmacy Service including the outlying military clinics on Fort Benning.

This link makes it possible to send a prescription electronically to the pharmacy and have it completed before the patient arrives.

Another advancement is the automated refill line. This system allows customers to request their refills telephonically.

Patients can call in a refill with or without a touch-tone phone and simply follow the recorded directions. The refill line is only good for prescriptions filled at the hospital and refills are ready to be picked up 24 hours later. To access the phone-in refill line, dial 544-1352.

In conjunction with the telephone refill system, a new refill pharmacy annex was opened at the the Main Mall.

All hospital refills, to include phone-in refills, are processed and dispensed at the refill annex. The new pharmacy annex has eased the pickup of refills and has drastically reduced the waiting time for prescriptions.

Finally, the Outpatient Pharmacy at the hospital is scheduled to undergo a renovation this year.

By late summer, the pharmacy service plans to increase the number of dispensing windows and convert to a "bank-teller" approach. Each patient will be able to have his or her prescription fully processed and receive medication counseling while waiting at the window.

The pharmacy service will continue to make every effort to improve the services provided and increase customer satisfaction.

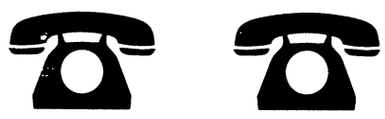
Free seminar set for retiring, ETSing soldiers

Army Career and Alumni Program

A Washington lecturer and author on career transition from military to civilian employment will be at Fort Benning today in the Infantry Hall, Classroom 30, from 9 to 11 a.m. to talk to officers, senior noncommissioned officers and spouses on "Marketing Yourself for a Second Career."

Retired Col. Jerry Crews, deputy director of the Officer Placement Service for The Retired Officers Association, travels nationwide addressing military audiences composed of people who are nearing retirement, being involuntarily separated or opting to leave military service.

The lecture is open to all military personnel and their spouses. The first 200 participants will receive a free copy of the publication, "Marketing Yourself for a Second Career."



In his free two-hour presentation, Crews will introduce the audience to the realities of the competition in the civilian job market; the perceptions civilian employers have of military personnel; how to plan for the job search; tips for strengthening the resume (to include how employers read a resume); networking; preparing for and conducting a successful interview; salary and benefit packages; and rejection.

Crews said he doesn't promise an individual instant job search success, but guarantees that each person who attends his lecture will profit from the knowledge gained and will be ready to move in the right direction toward that second career.

Crews provides information for every attendee and provides insights into the transition, which are unique and hard-biting.

For more information, call Mary Allen at 545-4892 or 545-7009.

Is smoking a cool thing to do? Why, or why not?

It is not cool to smoke and I don't do it. I don't want to die at an early age. I'm an athlete-play football and basketball. Smoking would mess up my game; and, if a scout is looking at me and finds out I smoke, he might reject me. My goal is to be a National Football League player with the Dallas Cowboys as a running back.

Smoking is not cool. It is bad for your body. When somebody smokes, it's not right. Smoking can make your body sick and your lungs black. When people start, they can't quit.

I don't think it's cool. Smoking is bad for you. People can't stop and they can also die from it. I don't know any kids who smoke, but I have seen a lot of guys smoking in their cars on the road.

Smoking is not cool. It's more of a risk to die. It gives you a lot more to think about if you want to ruin your life. I know some kids who smoke but I leave them alone.

I think it stinks and keeps the girls away because they don't like kissing a guy who smokes. I want to be a lawyer, and I want to live to enjoy it. I play basketball and I don't want to go up for a layup and die instead.

Students study consequence of smoking

By Amy Durham
Special to The Bayonet©

Adults often throw out the "right to choose" phrase when debating any of today's hot topics, including the smoking issue.

But considering that many individuals are picking up the habit at a very young age, health-care providers like doctors Capt. Eric Shuping and Capt. Barry Pockrandt both family practice residents, U.S. Army Medical Department Activity, want children to understand the full scope of the smoking habit so they can make a fully informed decision..

Through Tar Wars, a national program targeting fifth-graders, health-care providers use education and community involvement to discourage children from smoking. Locally, Shuping and Pockrandt are working toward a goal of reaching Fort Benning's elementary children.

"As you get older, you'll have choices to make," Shuping said to students during a presentation at Richard G. Wilson Elementary School several weeks ago, "and hopefully, your choice will be not to smoke."

When Shuping asked fifth-graders, "What are some of the things smoking and chewing tobacco do to you?" the young students could answer without hesitation.

They ran off a list faster than Pockrandt could write on the chalkboard. Yellow and brown teeth, breathing problems, cough, bad smell, heart disease, lung cancer and gum disease were among the negative items students cited.

Ironically, it was not necessary for Shuping to prepare a lesson plan. Many students were filling class time, giving personal accounts of parents, grandparents, neighbors and friends who smoked.

But their knowledge of such deadly habits was the very reason he and Pockrandt were conducting a Tar Wars class in the elementary school.

"It's a difficult habit to quit," Schuping said, "and if we can catch someone at a younger age, before he or she starts smoking, I'll feel better."

Shuping and Pockrandt both have reason to be concerned about the young children at Fort Benning. According to 1992 statistical files in the Primary Care Library at Martin Army Community Hospital, nationally 10 percent of girls and 14 percent of boys begin smoking 10 years of age or younger, and the rate increases during early adolescence, peaking at ages 13 and 14, when 25 percent of females and 24 percent of boys smoke.

To combat the statistics, the two residents have conducted Tar Wars classes in two of Fort Benning's six elementary schools and plan to visit the other four schools before the school year ends.

Part of the doctors' strategy is to negate what children are not only learning from other smokers, but also from advertising targeting their impressionable minds.

To demonstrate how it feels for a smoker to breathe, Shuping used a straw exercise. Children held their noses while they breathed through a straw and jogged in place.

Shuping and Pockrandt also used popular magazine advertisements as an exercise in helping children read between the lines of seemingly cool art and words. Shuping believes peer pressure is tougher to break when students are in high school. His point was made when the two doctors began the advertisement exercise; several students told the special instructors they had copies of those advertisements and proceeded to pull magazines from their book bags.

Committed to attacking the smoking epidemic before children are faced with the ultimate choice of whether or not to smoke, both Shuping and Pockrandt hope they can make a difference through the Tar Wars Program.

"I have seen what it can do to a person," Pockrandt said, "and that drives me to teach children not to smoke before I have to provide treatment."

Shuping agreed. "If we can convince one or two not to smoke, it (Tar Wars) will have been worth it," he said.

Health professionals continue educational goals

Although professionals have already visited Dexter and Wilson elementary schools, Doctors Capt. Eric Shuping and Capt. Barry Pockrandt have scheduled Tar Wars classes for the following:

- Stowers School, March 22;
- Loyd School, April 18;
- White School, Date To Be Announced;
- McBride School, Date To Be Announced.

Volunteers are also welcome to assist in the student-training program. For more information, call 544-1946 and leave a message.

Do health care providers deal with the same addictions?

HEALTH CARE PROVIDERS

I don't smoke. I usually tell patients who tell me they smoke, that, simply put, it is the single worst thing you can do to your body.

Most people are familiar with the association of smoking and lung cancer, but most people are not aware that more individuals die with complications of heart disease, secondary to smoking.

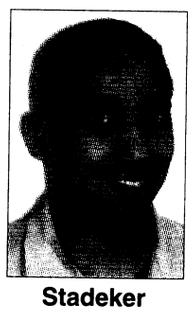
No. It was a choice. Growing up it was the thing to do. It did not appeal to me. When I learned it was so bad for your health, I was glad I never started.

My husband had smoked for years and tried to quit and he was finally successful. His brother was also trying to quit but was not successful. His brother died ten years ago.



Loftin

Loved ones take responsibility for someone's death. They say, "I could have done more to help them quit." It is hard. Two of my brothers smoke. One died of emphysema and the other continues to smoke and he has heart problems although he wants to quit.

For years, it did not matter to me one way or the other if someone smoked; but, the more I've seen what it can do to people, the more it matters to me and gets to me.

No. Smoking is the single worst thing you can do for your overall health. That includes oral heath. From an oral health standpoint, not only does smoking cause staining and poor healing (if you have had an extraction, for example) but it also can lead to abrasion and break down of the tooth's enamel. Dipping snuff and chewing tobacco can also have the same effect on teeth. My feelings about smoking, chewing and dipping led me to start a smoking cessation workshop at Fort Benning.

Cagel

I smoke. I don't know why; it's just a bad habit. I did not smoke until I was 22, after I got into the dental profession.

You have to really want to quit smoking. I've tried a few times. I think I'm getting there; I've cut down a lot.

Even after knowing and seeing what it can do to someone's health, I still haven't quit smoking. I would urge people who haven't started not to start smoking.

Do you discourage your children from smoking? Why, or why not?

I don't smoke. I try to discourage it because it is bad for their health and it makes their breath smell. It's not a big issue right now, but I want to curb it before they feel the peer pressure in years to come.

Healthy consumers research labels

By Shelly L. Clyde
Martin Army Community Hospital

Low fat, reduced fat, low cholesterol — words intended to be healthy and helpful often confuse health-conscious consumers. Should I eliminate fat from my diet? What is cholesterol and where does it come from? What types of fat should be avoided? These are all examples of common questions answered by nutrition experts every day.

Fat is an important part of the diet, providing a concentrated fuel source for the body to use. Dietary fat also aids in the transport of vitamins A, D, E, and K throughout the body. Although fat is a necessary component of the diet, eating too much fat can add extra pounds to the body and eventually increase your risk for heart disease.

The American Heart Association suggests limiting fat consumption to less than 30 percent of the total calories consumed daily. This means that a person consuming 1800 calories each day should limit their fat consumption to 60 grams or less per day. Guidelines for other calorie levels to gram fat are:

Calorie Level	Grams of Fat
2600	87
2400	80
2200	73
2000	67
1800	60
1600	53

Meats, oils, dairy products and fried foods are all examples of dietary sources of fat. Instead of eliminating these foods from your diet, try following these guidelines to decrease fat consumption.

- Choose leaner cuts of meat (round and loin cuts)
- Include fish and poultry in menu planning
- Remove visible fat from meat before cooking
- Limit fried foods to once per week
- Use low-fat cooking methods — roast, broil, boil
- Choose low or non-fat dairy products

Diets high in cholesterol can also increase the risk for developing heart disease. Cholesterol is only found in animal products. Examples of foods high in cholesterol are meats, eggs and dairy products. Suggestions for lowering cholesterol consumption include:

- Limit consumption of organ meats (kidney, liver, heart)
- Limit egg yolks to three to four times per week
- Enjoy three ounce portions of meat, fish and poultry

Finally, it is also important to note the type of fat that you are eating — saturated and unsaturated. Saturated fats tend to be solid at room temperature, such as lard, shortening and butter. Saturated fats are thought to contribute to the development of heart disease. Unsaturated fats are not believed to contribute to heart disease when used in moderation.

Unsaturated fats tend to be liquid at room temperature, such as canola, sunflower, corn and other liquid vegetable oils.

Consider modifying the fat in your diet as an adventure. There are many new and exciting fat-free and low-fat products on the Commissary shelves. New food labels are making it easier to obtain fat information.

Remote control airplane static display Saturday

Flyers Association

The Columbus-Fort Benning Radio Control Flyers Association will host a static display of more than 30 radio-controlled airplanes at Peachtree Mall all day Saturday.

A typical training plane will be displayed for those interested in seeing what it takes to get into the hobby. Club members will be present to answer any questions about the airplanes on display or radio control flying.

The club will also host an open house at its flying field south of Fort Mitchell, Ala., starting at 11 a.m. Sunday.

A variety of aircraft will be flying throughout the day along with a radio-controlled "skydiver" who will free fall to a landing on the runway. Spectators seriously interested in the hobby may be able to try their hand at flying through the use of a "buddy box" system controlled by an instructor pilot.

There is no admission fee and the public is invited. The concession stand will not be open so bring your own refreshments.

The flying field is located south of Fort Mitchell, Ala. Take U.S. Highway 431 and Alabama Highway 165 south, turn left on Russell County 18 and go eight-tenths of a mile to the field entrance.

Providence Canyon to conduct contest

Providence Canyon State Park

A "1996 World Olympics" poster contest is being sponsored by Providence Canyon State Park in conjunction with the Farmers State Bank of Stewart County.

The purpose of the contest is to expose students to the value of a culturally diverse world.

The poster contest is for students in kindergarten to sixth grade.

World sets aside day for prayer

By Kenneth R. Williams
1st. Bn.,50th Inf., Regt., ITB

Today is the World Day of Prayer. This day is set aside for us to go before our God in order to intercede for our world and to ask God to intervene in the world.

Rather than setting aside a particular day for prayer, I would like to see people use this World Day of Prayer as a spring board to developing a personal relationship with God through a daily time of prayer and Bible reading. If our world is going to change, then the people of the world must change. If the people of the world are going to change, then their hearts must be changed.

A person's heart is the key to his or her actions. Jesus said in Matthew 15:18 to 19, "But the things that come out of the mouth come from the heart, and these make a man 'unclean.' For out of the heart come evil thoughts, murder, adultery, sexual immorality, theft, false testimony, slander." (NIV).

In Luke 6:45, "The good man brings good things out of the good stored up in his heart, and the evil man brings evil things out of the evil stored up in his heart. For out of the overflow of his heart his mouth speaks." (NIV).

Our hearts and minds are like computers. What you get out of them depends on what you put into them. So all the people of the world, each of us, need changed hearts.

Our hearts are changed through a personal relationship with God. The Apostle Paul said in 2 Corinthians 5:17 "Therefore, if anyone is in Christ, he is a new creation; the old has gone, the new has come!" (NIV).

We develop that personal relationship with God through prayer and Bible reading.

Do you know how to pray? Recently a trainee asked me if there were some prayers I could teach him so he could pray. I told him that the best prayer he could pray was to express the thoughts and desires of his heart to God, who like a loving father, would listen and understand. I don't think that we need a lot of beautiful language and five-dollar words in order to address God.

I agree with Rosalind Rinker when she says, "Prayer is the expression of the human heart in conversation with God. The more natural the prayer, the more real he becomes. It has all been simplified for me to this extent: prayer is a dialogue between two persons who love each other."

In order to develop a relationship with God, we also need to listen to him. You can listen to God in several ways. Perhaps the easiest way to listen to God is to hear his word preached. Another way is to read the Bible for ourselves. We can also listen to the Bible being read by a narrator on cassette tapes.

God, through the Holy Spirit, illuminates and illustrates his word for us so it becomes specific and meaningful for our situation. How many times have you felt that the preacher was talking just to you? Or when have you read the same passage of scripture at different times, but have gotten different meanings. When you ask God to speak to you and give you wisdom and insight, He will. Second Chronicles 15:2 (NIV) says, "The Lord is with you when you are with him. If you seek him, he will be found by you, but if you forsake him, he will forsake you."

Notice that Jesus' favorite name for God was "Father." Not judge, not king, not creator, but Father. God wants to love you, provide for you, protect you, guide you, teach you, relate to you as a father does with his child. As you communicate with him through prayer; and, as he communicates with you through his word, the Bible, a transformation takes place. Your heart is changed and you become "a new creation."

As best friends get to know and enjoy each other, and as a husband and wife grow in openness, love and intimacy, so will you develop a personal relationship with God.

The result of developing a relationship with God is wisdom, power, peace and joy. Just as in every friendship when each person brings strengths to compliment the other person's weaknesses, when you enter into and develop a relationship with God, he brings all his strength and wisdom to impact your life.

reflections

When Moses asked God, "What is your name?" God answered, "I am that I am." The meaning is "I will be what ever you need." In other words, whenever you enter into and develop a personal relationship with God, you have everything you need. If you have everything you need, you will be at peace.

King David wrote a song that begins with, "The Lord is my shepherd, I shall not want." A contemporary paraphrase would be, "The Lord is my shepherd, I have everything I need.

What do you lack in your life? Peace? Joy? Self-confidence? Self-esteem? Contentment? Success? Power? Provision? Turn to God. Become his child. Grow in a loving relationship with him, and you will experience a life that is full and meaningful.

Purim Festival celebrates Jewish victory over death

reflections

Many people love to play the lottery. The odds of actually winning the lottery are not very great, yet we still pay our money with the hope of getting lots of money in return. It is a risky business, yet many find it to be fun too.

In the book of Esther, which takes place in Persia around 479 B.C., another figure, Haman, plays the lottery to determine the date to have all of the Jews in the empire slaughtered.

Haman, who was elevated to the highest official position in the kingdom by King Ahasuerus, devises this plan to get revenge on Mordecai, an attendant in the king's court and also a Jew.

Mordecai refuses to bow down to Haman, the normal action granted to the favorite of the king, because of Haman's unprincipled character (or perhaps he wouldn't bow down to anybody but God). So Haman plots revenge not only on Mordecai but on all of the Jews.

Therefore, he casts "Pur", or lots, day after day to find a lucky day for this venture and arrives at the 13th day of the 12th month of Adar. Haman then receives the king's approval for this plan through bribery and deception. This lot is certainly unlike our present day lottery, for the pur were stones or inscribed tablets, which were put into a vessel, shaken and drawn out or cast.

As chance would have it, the Jewish people were lucky enough to have a strong advocate in the kingdom. Esther, the queen, was a Jew herself. She had been raised by her cousin Mordecai. When Mordecai reads the decree sent out by Haman in describing the event that will take place, he goes to Esther to encourage her to speak to the king on this matter.

So Esther takes a chance by going to the king's chambers to talk with him without being summoned, a risky move since it was an act punishable by death. She invites the king to dinner and asks the king to bring Haman. The king accepts Esther's invitation and even agrees to dine with her a second night and to bring Haman again. Haman feels greatly honored and expects only good from the evening. But on the second night, Esther clarifies for the king this plot of Haman's and reveals that she herself is Jewish. Upon hearing this, the king hangs Haman along with his sons on the very gallows that Haman had built for the purpose of hanging Mordecai.

This story has a very happy ending, at least as far as the Jews are concerned, and a festival called Purim (the plural of Pur) is outlined in the book of Esther to be celebrated on the 14th and 15th days of Adar each year (this year on the fifth and sixth of March).

During this festival, the people celebrate their victory over Haman's plot to destroy them. They read the book of Esther aloud; and, when the name of Haman is read, the people cry out, "Let his name be blotted out," or 'The name of the wicked shall rot." The names of Haman's sons are all read in one breath to indicate that they were hanged simultaneously. The second day is devoted to mirth and rejoicing before the Lord, and gifts are given to the poor.

I imagine that the character of Esther is also praised. She had great courage and love for her people, which inspired her to go before the king. Though Haman seemed to rely on luck or chance, Esther took matters into her own hands, trusting in God's constant protection and care for those who do his will.

Perhaps we might all learn something from this attitude. Any time we act out of love for God and for others, the outcome is never left to chance.

chapel notes

Protestant lenten services— Beginning Wednesday and continuing to April 3, lenten lunch programs will be at the Infantry Center Chapel each Wednesday during Lent.

The program will begin with a devotional service in the chapel at 11:30 a.m. and will be followed by a lunch of soup and bread in the annex.

Volunteers are needed to prepare the soup and bread. Child care will be provided.

For more information, call the Infantry Center Chapel at 545-2931 or 545-2050.

Catholic Lenten services — Each Friday during Lent, a service of praying the Stations of the Cross will be conducted.

The services will be at the Main Post Catholic Chapel at 6:30 p.m. A soup and bread supper will immediately follow the service at the Infantry Center Chapel Annex at 7:15 p.m.

BOSS bible study — The Fort Benning Better Opportunities for Single Soldiers program is sponsoring a single soldiers' Bible and prayer fellowship for Christian single soldiers of all denominations.

The goals of this group will be to organize and plan a quarterly event, to meet once or twice a month for ministry and fellowship and to provide Christian single soldiers a better opportunity to join others in growth of Jesus Christ.

Contact Spc. Michael Will at 544-9269, your unit chaplain to join the group, or call 545-2813 for more information.

Praise and worship service — A nondenominational general Protestant service, including worship, singing, prayer and preaching will be conducted every Sunday at the Infantry Center Chapel from 6 to 8 p.m.

Everyone is invited, including single, married, active duty, reservists, retired, families, enlisted, non-commissioned officers and officers.

Refreshments will be served and fellowship will take place after the service in the chapel annex. Child care is available.

Army chief of Chaplains speaks to SOA students

By Judith Ginder
School of the Americas

Chaplains usually have a way of making you see things for more than what they appear. They don't necessarily make you look at things more spiritually — but just more deeply.

Chaplain (Maj. Gen.) Donald W. Shea, Army chief of Chaplains, recently visited students in the Command and General Staff Course at the School of the Americas.

Shea told the students that he remembered being in Panama earlier in his career and noticing the SOA students there. He said he liked the fact that the students and cadre were like a family.

"I was also impressed with the way the students brought their values to the school with them," Shea said.

He also said that patriotism comes from the personal values that are brought with the students.

He said that regardless of the mission, be it training, peacekeeping exercises, nation building or war, family is what is important to everyone.

He told the leaders of tomorrow that when taking care of soldiers, they must remember that regardless of the mission, what is going on in a soldier's family will affect the mission, for good or bad.

Shea said he hopes more units around the Army will continue to have strong bonds that mold the group of people together like a family the way the School of the Americas does.

afap update

Directorate of Community Activities

Fort Benning is preparing for this year's Army Family Action Plan Symposium as part of the ongoing commitment to improve the quality of life for the total Army family.

The AFAP is the management tool used to implement issues and give policy guidance. It identifies concerns of the Army family, determines actions required and assigns responsibility to implement actions to resolve the issues.

Since the last symposium, agencies have worked to resolve many issues .

Delegates attending the symposium addressed many concerns. Each week, those concerns and the measures taken to resolve those concerns will be presented.

Action agency: Army and Air Force Exchange Service

Issue: Post Exchange renovations. The PX is scheduled to undergo renovations in the near future. Renovations should include plans to widen the aisles and provide more space in the departments. The current situation does not allow space to maneuver wheelchairs or strollers.

Response: Provisions have been made to provide broader areas to maneuver shopping carts. The new standard is six feet for all walkway areas and we have already taken action where possible. Renovation plans include all aisles to be six feet wide.

Issue: Use of the PX by Department of the Army civilians. AAFES employees are authorized to use AAFES facilities; however, DA civilians are not entitled to the same privilege.

Response: This issue was discussed at the general officer steering committee meeting at DA in April 1995 with the following results:

Status: Unattainable.

Resolution: The Office of Secretary Defense denied the Army's request for a policy change to extend AAFES and Morale, Welfare and Recreation privileges to MWR employees. OSD also denied an Army request for extension of purchasing privileges, excluding AAFES, for MWR employees. Based on continued OSD denial of broader purchasing opportunities for MWR employees, expansion of shopping opportunities for all Department of Defense employees will also be denied.

Action Agency: Medical Department Activity and Dental Activity

Issue: Public relations and customer service. The perception among some customers is the public relations and customer service provided by some Martin Army Community Hospital employees is unacceptable.

Response: A Beneficiary Handbook has been printed and new signs have been posted throughout the clinics along with the Patients' Rights and Responsibility.

Issue: Information distribution and management. A lot of the negativity concerning the medical services provided by the hospital is due to lack of knowledge by consumers. There are constant developments in the medical services field. The community needs to be kept informed of changes, improvements and updates. In addition, consumers should be reminded of the savings and advantages we have as a result of free medical services.

Response: Speakers have been provided on a regular basis to Family Support groups and Town Hall meetings. More than 25 articles have been published in the last six months. Data is provided in the welcome packets and a new registration process has been instituted at Soldiers' Plaza.

Issue: Staffing. Many of the clinics or departments within the hospital are inadequately staffed.

Response: Staffing is provided by manpower benchmarking based on workload. Currently ancillary staffing is in line with the workload. Temporary shortage caused by delay in hiring actions underlaps due to PCS etc. are managed as best as possible.

The Army Medical Department is downsizing and the number of military authorizations is dropping. The president has inspired a civilian reduction in the Department of Defense. The outlook for enhanced staffing does not look feasible.

We currently have a program where Table of Organization and Equipment medics rotate through the hospital to maintain proficiency and learn new skills.

Issue: Length of time to obtain appointments. Constant "no-show" appointments affect the number of appointments that can be obtained. With decreasing dollars and resources, medical services cannot and should not be taken for granted.

Response: The agency cannot punish people or take away their entitlement or benefits without a lengthy due process procedure.

Commanders are notified when active duty or their dependents act out or their failure to make appointments is adversely affecting their health.

The Family Practice, Pediatrics and Victory Clinics currently have a same-day appointment system to handle acute minor illnesses.

Be vigilant against breast cancer by employing early detection steps

By Susan Allen
DeWitt Army Community Hospital

Look at the facts, and it is difficult to imagine women not taking advantage of the established tests and procedures developed to help detect breast cancer.

The bottom line to women is this: breast cancer is a killer.

Although experts say there is a 92 percent five-year survival rate if the cancer has not spread after treatment, there is only a 70 percent five-year survival rate if the cancer has spread to nearby organs. And, just a 19-percent survival rate if the cancer has spread throughout the body.

There is no magic immunization against breast cancer. Lifestyle and family history do play a part in determining individual risk factors, but there is no single factor that promises protection. The only option women have in successfully fighting breast cancer is early detection.

The number of women diagnosed with breast cancer is increasing. One in eight American women will develop breast cancer in her lifetime.

The death rate, however, has remained fairly stable over the past 50 years. Why? Early detection and treatment of breast cancer are the most probable reasons.

The American Cancer Society and many of the nation's leading health organizations recommend women employ a three-step early detection program against breast cancer.

This program includes regular mammograms, clinical breast exams and monthly self-breast exams.

Women are encouraged to obtain a baseline mammograph at age 35 and should begin regular mammogram screening by age 40. Until age 49, women should have a mammogram every one or two years.

Since more than 75 percent of all breast cancers occur in women older than 50, annual mammograms are recommended for that age group.

Researchers have not yet been able to stop the onset of breast cancer. They don't even fully understand what role heredity, environment, lifestyle and diet play in the cancer scenario. But, they do know that women do not need to become a fatal statistic.

Take charge of your health. Make a personal pledge to early detection — your best weapon against breast cancer.

Communication builds pet-owner relationship

Veterinary Services

The miracle of dog and human communication comes from a brief understanding of dog behavior and simple obedience training. Dogs understand very little of our language, but they do respond to the tone of voices, gestures and the feeling behind words spoken.

Dog training and dog psychology are based on the known facts of dog and wolf behavior. They form social attachments and live in groups known as packs. They require a leader and they claim territory and create a den in the center of it.

Pack behavior establishes the need to be with other creatures. When living as pets, dogs transfer this need to humans. This explains why dogs are constant and loyal companions.

Every dog requires that someone within the "pack" assume a leadership position. Dogs are insecure without a leader and have been known to take charge if no one else will. Dogs accept leadership from those with dominant personalities or who behave with some degree of authority. Once an owner assumes the position of leader, the dog will accept it for the rest of his life.

MADD continues its mission after 15 years

MADD, Georgia

After 15 years of working to stop drunk driving and to support the victims of this violent crime, Mothers Against Drunk Driving continues on strong, both nationally and in the state of Georgia.

Currently there are 17 organized, active groups of volunteers, representing both chapters and Community Action Teams in Georgia, as well as individual community contacts in those areas, which do not have an organized group.

Currently, MADD is involved in legislative activities, encouraging support of bills to strengthen driving-under-the-influence laws and watching out for those bills that may be counterproductive to this mission.

Throughout the year, there are MADD programs that heighten awareness of the problem of drinking and driving, such as Project Red Ribbon, sobriety checkpoints, designated drivers, prom and graduation, and Keep It a Safe Summer, to mention a few.

"MADD's mission is two-fold — to stop drunk driving and to support the victims of this violent crime," said Sybil Collins, state chairwoman. "We encourage anyone who may be interested in becoming involved on a grassroots level to call at our state office to volunteer."

MADD has trained victim advocates to assist individuals and families who are victims of drunk driving crashes from help in the grieving process to support through the judicial system.

MADD has a continuing need for newly trained volunteer advocates, and MADD provides training for individuals who would like to join its team and make a difference in their community. The next basic victim advocacy training workshop is being planned for late March.

Anyone interested in volunteering with MADD, whether in victim advocacy, community awareness, or legislative support, is encouraged to contact the MADD State Office at (800) 823-6233.

Parents can help children deal with stress

Egleston Children's Hospital

Stress may seem something that only adults experience; but, even very young children deal with stress, according to clinical child psychologist Laura L. Mee, who practices at Egleston Children's Hospital at Emory University.

In fact, stress plays a positive role in the developmental process. Without the stress of separation anxiety, for example, children would never learn to be wary of strangers nor learn self-sufficiency.

Conversely, stress can be overwhelming to children unless their parents recognize their stressors and teach them appropriate coping techniques.

What stresses a child? That depends largely on the child's age and temperament. Some children are more prone to overreact, while others tend to let things slide. Some are stressed by external factors while others' stresses are self-induced. Often a child's stresses are fueled by age-specific anxieties as well.

Young infants: Fear of heights, loss of physical support, loud noises and the unpredictable.

One to three years old: Strangers, separation from parents and toilet training.

Preschool: Monsters, supernatural phenomenon, the dark, fear of abandonment and things they can't control.

School age: Typically, school-age children profess five to eight major concerns. Possibilities include: school-related worries, peer problems, concern about illness and even fear of dangerous weather.

Adolescence: Feelings of personal inadequacy, sexual matters, physical illnesses, relationships and judgment or evaluation by peers.

Mee warned parents against belittling their children's anxieties.

"Parents must remember that all a child's stresses, big or small, real or imagined, are valid," Mee said. "As an adult, you may know there's no tiger under the bed, or that your child isn't the biggest loser in the class. Still, the associated stress is very real for your child and he or she will need help coping."

Children need to learn a variety of adaptive coping techniques. Some children successfully channel their stressful feelings into physical activities. Others find it useful to write in a journal or draw pictures about stressful situations.

Parents should encourage their older children to talk through their problems, expressing their frustrations verbally. Parents can help younger children by talking through their problems with them, thereby teaching them to solve their problems for themselves later.

It helps neither to force a child to face a stressful situation directly if he or she is unprepared to handle it nor should a parent be overprotective.

"You can't throw your kids to the lion, but you can't isolate them either. You must allow them to experience things and learn to cope," Mee said. "The key is to expose them slowly to stressful situations at a level they can tolerate. Be there for support and encouragement as needed and praise their progress toward handling stress adaptively."

TORCH BEARERS

Local heroes to carry on Olympic tradition

By Anna Oleska
SAIC Public Affairs Office

Of the 29 local individuals who will carry the Olympic flame for the upcoming 1996 Olympic torch relay, seven are affiliated with Fort Benning or the military.

The 1996 Olympic Torch Relay will begin in Los Angeles April 27 and travel through 42 states for 84 days. It will pass through the Columbus area in July. It will cross 15,000 miles and will finish in Atlanta July 19 at the opening ceremony of the 1996 Olympic Games.

The Atlantic Committee for the Olympic Games chose 25 local community heroes and four Olympians from the Columbus Phenix City and Fort Benning area.

The seven people affiliated with Fort Benning or the military chosen as torchbearers are:

- Sgt. 1st Class Joseph J. Wood, Company B, 2nd Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment, originally from Fulton, NY.
- Sgt. Willie Briskey, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 3rd Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment, originally from Alabama.
- Retired Col. Robert B. Nett, formerly of Company E, 305th Infantry, 77th Division.
- Civilian employee Owen T. Ditchfield, media specialist, Edward A. White Elementary School, Fort Benning Schools.
- Capt. Glenn Dubis, a 1984 Olympian from the Army Marksmanship Unit, originally from Pittsburgh, Pa.
- Retired Sgt. Maj. Laurence Mosley, a 1960 Olympian from the Army Marksmanship Unit originally from New York City
- Retired Master Sgt. Charles Davis, a volunteer with the ACOG, originally from Hazard, Ky.

Outstanding citizens were selected to carry the Olympic flame based on their extraordinary contributions and service to others in the community.

The torchbearers were chosen by a 12-member panel, community heroes themselves, representing a cross-section of the Columbus, Fort Benning and Phenix City community, who met in January to review applications and nominations of people from citizens of the area.

All torchbearers will carry a 3 1/2 pound torch for one kilometer (.62 miles), and the ACOG will provide uniforms for each torchbearer.

"The whole Olympic event is a historical event," said Jerry White, president of United Way and former commanding general of Fort Benning. "Activities will be planned involving the entire community from now until July."

> "We can't underestimate the great honor that's being bestowed upon these individuals to carry the 'sacred' Olympic flame."
> — Bobby Peters
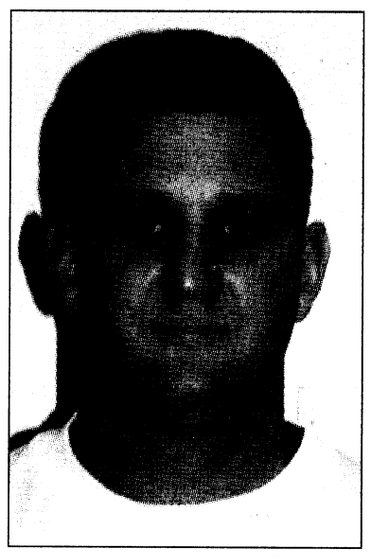
> Mayor of Columbus

These torchbearers represent the best of the community, said Lisa Keeble, United Way Olympic torchbearer coordinator. They are individuals who were chosen based on an essay someone wrote to nominate a community hero and submitted it as an entry.

Then they were chosen based on the following four criteria:

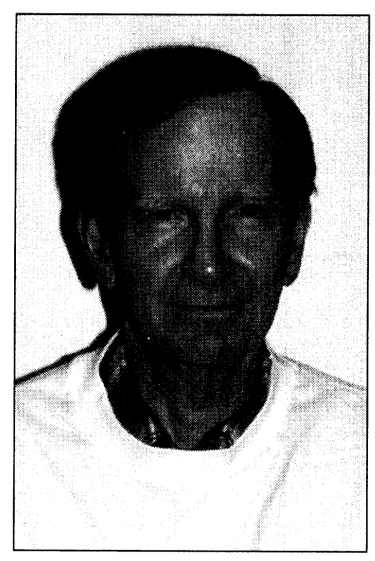
- outstanding volunteer work
- service to others, such as mentors, leaders or role models
- performing acts of generosity and kindness
- and performing extraordinary accomplishments or feats, locally or nationally.



"They are people who shed light into the lives of others in order to make their communities better places to live," said Keeble.

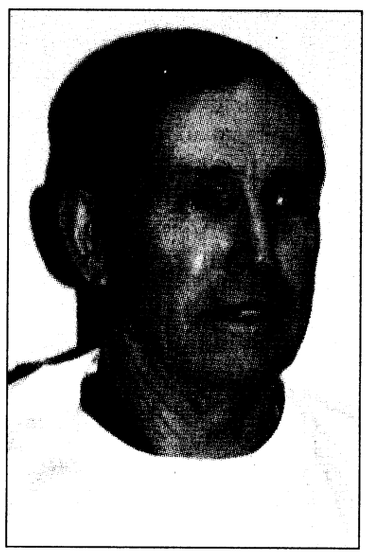
"They are all wonderful examples of the greater good that is found in the Columbus, Phenix City (and) Fort Benning area," said Robert Anderson, local judging-panel leader. "The Olympic flame is a symbol of hope and peace."

"We can't underestimate the great honor that's being bestowed upon these individuals to carry the 'sacred' Olympic flame," said Bobby Peters, mayor of Columbus. "As the flame is being carried across the United States, it will symbolize the connection, the oneness, the united interests of the many cultures of our nation. That is a unity and diversity which sets this nation apart and makes America the great country that it is."



Americans can still nominate special people in their lives they would like to see carry the Olympic flame by participating in the "Share the Spirit Program", said Dale Fourhman, spokesman for Coca-Cola.

"Fifty people in this region can still be chosen until March 8 by submitting an entry form found on the "Share the Spirit" torchbearer selection program banner located in any grocery store," he said. "Entrants will be selected through a random lottery."



Glenn Dubis

Rank: Captain
Unit: Army Marksmanship Unit

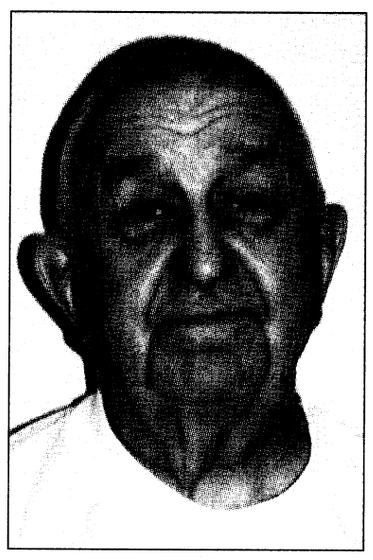
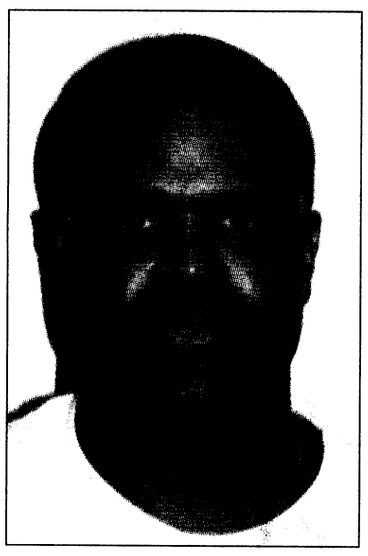
Age: 37
Olympic history:
1984 Olympian, shooting. Specialty: small bore rifle 3 position and air rifle. 1988 Olympian, shooting. Specialty: small bore rifle 3 position and small bore prone.
What does carrying the Olympic flame mean to you?
"It's a real honor and it's a service to the community. It'll be a nice time for the whole family. I'm still trying to make this year's Olympic team and I have this to focus on now!. I'll be carrying the torch in Newnan, Ga."



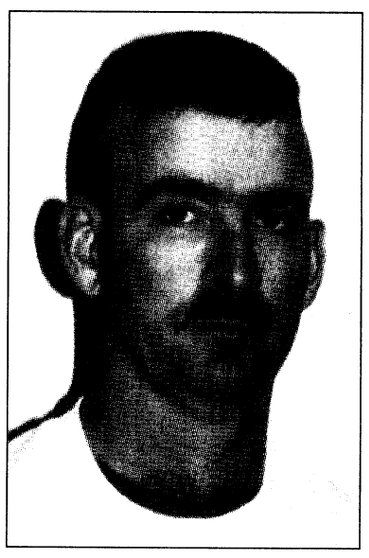
Laurence Mosley

Rank: Retired Sergeant Major
Unit: Army Marksmanship Unit
Marital Status: Wife, Trudy
Children: Ellen and Ernest
Grandchildren: Grandsons Cory, 12 and Casey, 9
Age: 62
Olympic history: 1960 Olympian, shooting the Specialty Rapid Fire Pistol
What does carrying the Olympic flame mean to you?
"It's a great honor and a challenge too, because soon I'll be 63, and I feel I'm in as good shape at 63 as I was in 1960 when I was a member of the 1960 Olympics. That was one of the greatest moments of my life! I'll be carrying the torch in Columbus, Ga."



Charles Davis

Rank: Retired Master sergeant
Unit: Army Marksmanship Unit
Marital Status: Married
Children: Carol
Age: 69
Olympic history: 1972 Olympian, shooting the Specialty,Running target with small bore rifle.
What does carrying the Olympic flame mean to you?
"It's another chance to help with the Olympic movement. For several years I've been a speaker for the Atlanta Committee for Olympic Youth in Education Program. I've been going into different schools in the counties giving classes on the history of the Olympics. I'll be carrying the torch in Americus."

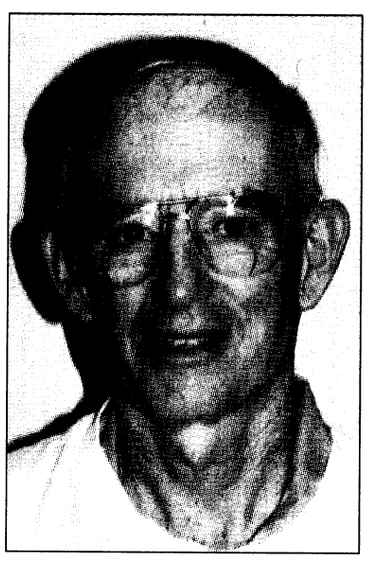


Robert B. Nett

Rank: Retired Colonel
Unit: Company E, 305th Infantry, 77th Division
Marital Status: Wife, Frances
Children: Retired Dr. (Maj.) Robert B. Nett, Jr.
Grandchildren: Michelle, Erica and Nicholas
Age: 73
What does carrying the Olympic flame mean to you?
"It means continuing to serve with soldiers as I have done through three wars. I feel it's a tribute to them and I'd like to share it with them. I had no dreams of ever participating in this event. I believe a student I've taught submitted an essay to nominate me."

Willie Briskey

Rank: Sergeant
Unit: Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 3rd Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment
Marital Status: Divorced
Children: Brandon, 8 and Taquila, 15
Age: 33
What does carrying the Olympic flame mean to you?
"It's really an outstanding opportunity to participate in this event. It's very heartwarming to have been selected as a torchbearer. My sergeant major was one person who recommended me by writing an essay."



Joseph J. Wood

Rank: Sergeant First Class
Unit: Company B, 2nd Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment.
Marital Status: Wife, Patricia
Children: James 14; Jerimiah, 13; and Johnny, 11
Age: 37
What does carrying the Olympic flame mean to you?
"The number one reason in my mind is that I'll be a hero in the eyes of my three boys. I never thought I'd win this award though. I believe I was nominated and selected because of my deep involvement with youth everywhere.. I've coached and developed programs in the community for youth to keep them where they should be. I'll be carrying the torch July 11 and 12."

Olympic torch run at a glance

What: Olympic torch run.
When: Run will begin April 27 and last for 84 days.
Where: The torch will pass through 42 states.
Distance: The torch will cover a total of 15,000 miles.

Owen T. Ditchfield

Rank: Civilian employee - media specialist
Activity: Edward A. White Elementary School, Fort Benning Schools
Marital Status: Wife, Mabel
Children: Andrew, Brian, Carol, and Dora
Age: 56
What does carrying the Olympic flame mean to you?
"It's an honor because it gives me a chance to represent South Columbus where I've worked for 14 years. It's a wonderful chance to share the spirit of the Olympics with the kids I teach. But 'hero' torchbearer is a word not comfortable for me. I haven't done anything heroic. A lot of people in this community deserve it more than I do, such as the teachers I work with."

Mental mistakes hand Bi-City Stars their first defeat of the season

By Brian R. Voller
Bayonet staff writer

The Bi-City Stars suffered their first defeat of the season when the Albany Warriors defeated them 9-7, Saturday at Garrett Stadium, in Phenix City, Ala.

The Stars began the game on a poor note with two early turnovers inside their own 40-yard line. Neither of the turnovers resulted in any points because of the strong defensive play of the Stars.

But the strong defensive play wasn't enough to contain the Warriors' driving offense as they scored on a quick 13-yard touchdown reception. The Warriors converted on the extra point that put them on top 7-0 with 11:42 left in the second quarter.

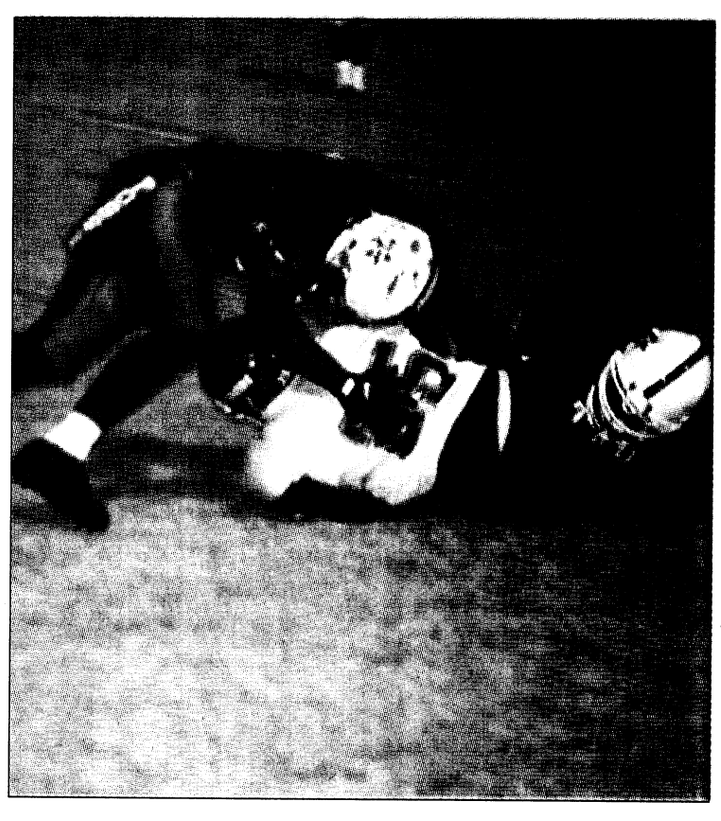
Despite the set back of the Warriors early lead, the Stars' defense was not ready to quit, and they proved that when Kelvin Thomas stepped in the line of a Warrior pass and hauled it for an interception. The interception put the Stars in prime position for scoring.

But once again the Stars' offense couldn't put together a scoring drive; and, after a quick series of downs, punter Matt Mayberry came onto the field to punt the ball. Once again a mental mistake hurt the Stars as the snap from Shun McEndree sailed over the head of Mayberry and was recovered by the Warriors on the 15-yard line.

The Stars' defense rose to the challenge and stopped the Warriors, and the Stars took over with less than four minutes left in the half. The defensive standoff seemed to fire up the Stars' offense as they marched down the field and scored off a two-yard run by Daren Larsen. Vernon Laree came onto the field and put the ball through the uprights and tied the score 7-7.

The Stars fired-up offense and their strong defensive play began to turn the game toward their favor in the closing minutes of the first half. After a corner blitz by Kalvin Baker resulted in a sack for a 12-yard loss, the Stars appeared to be moving in the right direction heading into the half. The first half ended with a missed 50-yard field goal attempt by Laree.

Both the Stars and the Warriors came onto the field in the third quarter and treated the audience to a show of sloppy football. Multiple interceptions by Stars' quarter back Jeff McCurrie and a questionable fumble call put the Stars back where they spent most of the first quarter. Despite all the bad plays and turnovers, the score remained tied 7-7 at the end of the third quarter.



The fourth quarter was a seesaw battle between the two teams' defenses. The battle was finally won by the Warriors who sacked McCurrie in the end zone for a safety with 8:19 left in the ballgame. The safety put the Warriors on top 9-7. The game ended after a well designed two-minute-offense ended in disaster with another interception thrown by McCurrie with two seconds left in the ballgame. The Warriors' offense kneeled on the ball and ran the clock out to close the game.

"We came into the game hoping to just run the ball down their throats," said Danny Green, head coach of the Warriors. "We just didn't execute like we should have. We should have scored at least 40 to 50 points in this game."

"They're a good ball club," Green continued. "It's always a good ballgame when we get together. We seem to have developed quite a rivalry between our two teams, and I'm looking forward to playing them again."

Assistant head coach for the Stars Connie Burnham said his team's loss was due to mental mistakes.

"We just couldn't tackle right," Burnham said. "We were out there trying to arm tackle, and we were not wrapping up. We had our game plan to play good defense, and we threw some new wrinkles into our offense, but the mental mistakes killed us in the end."

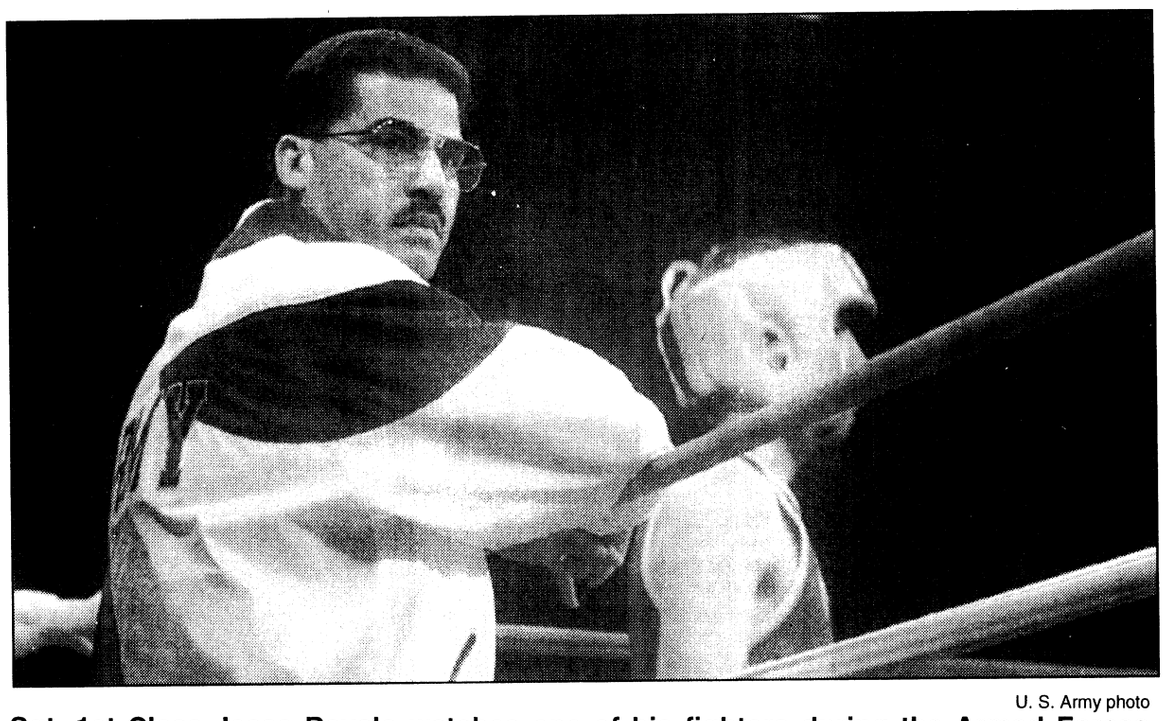
Boxing coach brings experience to ring

By Stephen Barrett
American Forces Information Service

FORT HUACHUCA, Ariz.— The ringside routine doesn't change much for Sgt. 1st Class Jesse Ravelo. After each round, he enters the ring, squats before his resting fighter and explains in detail what he sees.



In that one-minute break between rounds, he will know the strengths and weaknesses of his fighter's opponent and relay that information to his boxer. He will also coach the fighter and finish with a customary slap to his fighter's headgear as the warning buzzer sounds.

"It builds fighters, and it makes winners," said Ravelo, who has made winners of many Army boxers for the past three years. Since he began coaching the Army team in 1993, Ravelo has won three armed services team titles and coached fighters to 32 of 36 individual weight class titles. In 1994, the Army swept all 12 weight classes and won 11 titles in 11 championship bouts this year.

U.S. amateur boxing officials are seeing this and rewarding Ravelo for his efforts. Last year, the soldier earned Amateur Coach of the Year honors from USA Boxing, the country's Olympic-sanctioning body.

He also earned a coaching spot for the U.S. Olympic boxing team competing in Atlanta this summer. He hopes it's a team with some of his own Army fighters, but Ravelo said just coaching in the Olympics is very special.

"It's been an honor to be coach of the year and an Olympic coach — it was one of my goals," he said. "I succeeded as a boxer, and I was succeeding as a coach. Now, the next goal I have is to get a couple of my guys on the Olympic team. That would really make me feel great about my making the team."

Ravelo knows the military's tradition of sending boxers to Olympic competition. Ray Mercer and Leon Spinks, for instance, are two Olympic gold medalists with military boxing ties. Ravelo said the Army team has the talent to send a few fighters to Atlanta.

Paced by Spc. Benjamin McDowell, 1995 Armed Forces Athlete of the Year, the Army's team has four boxers who successfully defended their 1995 interservice boxing titles. Two are three-time champions in their weight classes, and one — Spc. Bradley Martinez of Fort Huachuca — was an alternate at the 1992 Olympic Games in Barcelona, Spain.

Most of the fighters on this year's team are proven boxers enrolled in the Army's World Class Athlete Program. Two years before Olympic competition, the Army assigns its best athletes to sports training facilities to better prepare them for Olympic competition.

The Army sends its best boxers to train with Ravelo at Fort Huachuca or to Fort Bragg, N.C., where they work with assistant team coach Alvin Simpson. Wherever they train, though, team members must follow Ravelo's standards—standards he hopes will bring the success he had both as an amateur and professional fighter.

"I've been involved in boxing since 1962 and started coaching in 1975," said Ravelo, now 42. "I went 11-0 as a professional middleweight and was a very disciplined boxer when I competed. I try to combine the discipline I had as a fighter with the training these guys need to win."

He said boxers who have discipline and who train the way he wants them to train can succeed in anything they want to do.

Ravelo said it's not as easy as it sounds. He said he's had some undisciplined fighters— and they didn't last long in his program.

"Some guys think they can win by just going through the motions and doing the basics," he said. "Basics are fine, but unless they put the effort up front, they won't go anywhere."

With these demands, it's odd to hear Ravelo's thoughts on effort. He doesn't expect a "100 percent effort" each time a fighter enters a ring. Instead, he wants high effort that builds through the fighter's three rounds.

"One-hundred percent is not in my vocabulary — it is out, and my fighters will tell you that," he said. "If a boxer gives me 100 percent in the first round, he's burned out for the second and third. My fighters are trained to go out strong, but they have the discipline to pace themselves throughout the fight."

Another aspect of Ravelo's game is how he guides his fighters.

"Many of them have the discipline it takes to win," he said. "I try to guide them and refine those disciplines into winning. I respect the efforts the guys are making, and they respect me for what I'm doing. It's a two-way street, and it works well."

Martinez is one who likes Ravelo's style.

"The one thing you have to say about him is that you're prepared when you go into the ring," he said. "It's up to us whether we want to win, but he keeps us in good condition and drives us to have the discipline we need to win."

With the Olympic trials in March, Ravelo has plenty to concentrate on before heading to Atlanta. Yet he's still setting goals — marks he says he hopes to reach after his Army days are over.

"I'd like to start coaching in the professional ranks," said Ravelo, who is nearing retirement. "I guess the next step is coaching a world champion. It would be another goal I wouldn't mind reaching. But right now, my goal is getting my guys to the Olympics, helping them get them get a medal and being there to see them wear it."

USAMU dominates Snowbird

By Paula J. Randall
USAMU Public Affairs Office

The U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit's Service Rifle team nearly swept the Snowbird Open in Starke, Fla., Feb. 9 to 11.

Out of 12 possible medals, USAMU shooters won 10.

In the team match, USAMU teams took first, second and third place.

In first place with a score of 1,966 out of possible 2,000 was the team of Sgt. 1st Class Kenneth V. Gill, Sgt. Kevin McMahon, Sgt. Lewis A. Tippie and Spc. Norman L. Anderson.

In second place with a score of 1,952 was the team of Sgt. 1st Class John O. Chubb, Staff Sgt. Rand D. Bentson, Sgt. Scott A. Boyd and Sgt. Charles E. Coffey.

In the individual championships, McMahon took first place among 84 competitors with a score of 792 points out 800. Gill placed third with a score of 792 and Anderson was close behind with 791.

USAMU shooters swept the long-range, any rifle, any sight open competition. Tippie won first place with a score of 399, Hawkins was second with 398 and Boyd was third with 397.

In the long-range, any rifle, any sight service rifle competition, Anderson took first place and McMahon came in third.

Spencer B-ballers push for team titles

By Ross Marshall
Special to The Bayonet

The mass of screaming, exhausted, deliriously happy members of the Spencer High Lady Green Waves gave testimony to the effort they had just displayed in capturing the Region 3-AAA girls basketball tournament, dropping highly regarded and heavily favored Jordan 46-41.

Behind the 12-point performance of Candice Hicks, the Green Waves took charge from the outset and were never seriously challenged until the final quarter.

Spencer had to travel a long and treacherous road en route to the title, facing four different opponents in as many days.

In the tourney opener, Spencer faced an inspired Hardaway only to send them packing in overtime, then they dispatched the Kendrick Cherokees, and in the tourney semi-finals eliminated the Shaw Raiders.

"This feels great," said Hicks who, as a senior knew that this was her last chance to be a champion. With the additional 10-point performances of both Amanda White and Crystal Thornton, they kept the home standing Red Jackets from ever being a threat.

Spencer jumped out to a quick 8-0 lead and pulled away, leading by as many as 22 points in the third quarter, while holding the vaunted Jordan offense to a scant 12 first half points.

"There is no doubt they won because of desire and attitude, mostly attitude," said Collin Jones, Spencer head coach. "I'm really proud of what they did. It showed great character."

Jordan had been riding a season-long home winning streak, which had kept them unbeaten in the "matchbox," the Red Jackets gym, which barely holds 500 fans.

The long road the Green Waves had traveled began to tell, and they started to slow down. However, they would not be denied, as they continued to put points on the board at a fast enough clip to ensure the final five-point margin of victory.

Spencer next sees action this week in Albany against the runner up from Region 1-AAA in the first round of the state tournament.

In boys action at the tournament, the Kendrick High Cherokees broke out to an early lead, and expanded it to 15 points in the first half, however, regular season region champion, the Blue Devils of Columbus High, charged back, took command, and followed the 19-point output of Wesley Evans to also capture the overall title.

Senior Derek Mann ignited the fire that set the Devils ablaze, as he connected for a layup in traffic, was fouled and converted.

Tavares Pass netted 12 in the win and Lamarcus Davis added 10. Davis, along with Kelvin Stuttson began to take control of the back boards early in the third stanza.

The Cherokees were led by Searcy with 15 points and Lydell Baker with 11.

Kendrick finished third in the regular season, behind Columbus and Spencer, the Cherokees will face the winner of the Region 1-AAA tournament in Albany this week, while Columbus opens against Region 1's runner up on Thursday afternoon.

Soldier, Marine named top athletes of 1995

By Stephen Barrett
American Forces Information ervice

An Army sprinter and a Marine Corps triathlete are the armed forces' top athletes of 1995.

Spc. Dionicio Napier earned the Department of Defense's male Athlete of the Year Award, while Marine Capt. Karen L. Krajicek captured top honors in the women's category. The Department of Defense announced the winners at a banquet sponsored by the Armed Forces Sports Council.

In addition to the armed forces awards, both Napier and Krajicek captured top military athlete awards from the Washington Touchdown Club. They received those awards Jan. 20.

Napier is a member of the Army's World Class Athlete Program, with duty at Louisiana State University in Baton Rouge. He won the 200-meter gold medal and 400-meter silver medal at the World Military Games in Rome. His 20.31 second time at the U.S. Outdoor Nationals in Sacramento, Calif., qualified him for the 1996 Olympic 200-meter trials. He also earned a silver medal in the 400-meter relay at the Pan American Games.

Other award hopefuls were Coast Guard Lt j.g. George Ganoung (triathlon and cycling), Marine Corps Staff Sgt. Douglas Marocco (triathlon), Air Force Staff Sgt. Ronald Simms (boxing) and Navy Petty Officer 3rd Class Robert Demeritt (wrestling).

Krajicek captured the women's armed forces triathlon title in July and finished twelveth at the World Military Games in Rome. Among her credits are military women's titles at the 1994 and 1995 Ironman Triathlon in Hawaii. She serves at the Marine Corps Recruit Training Depot in San Diego.

Other competitors were Air Force Capt. Teresa Lewis Orcutt (modern pentathlon), Coast Guard Lt. j.g. Amy Baribeau (triathlon), Navy Ensign Christine Stancliff (track and field) and Army Staff Sgt. Tonia Stubbs (team handball).

Fort Benning strives for Excellence

By Lisa M. Hibbert
Bayonet staff writer

Fort Benning is again celebrating excellence as the Army Communities of Excellence, Army Performance Improvement Criteria Evaluation Team visited the post this week.

Commanding General Maj. Gen. John W. Hendrix motivated post personnel March 1 with a pep rally in Marshall Auditorium, Infantry Hall, Building 4.

At the rally, Hendrix discussed Fort Benning's interpretation of APIC — which may mean Army Performance Improvement Criteria to the Army — at Fort Benning it means "Army Pride is Catching."

"Fort Benning is the premier Army installation and we set the standards that others follow," Hendrix said. "We lead the way."

The year's evaluation differed from previous years since this was the first year the post implemented the Malcolm Baldridge adapted Army Performance Improvement Criteria.

"APIC is not about a million dollars," Hendrix said. "The real reason for APIC is continuous improvement, getting better and being committed to excellence."

For this year's competition, Fort Benning had to submit a written application that outlined how the post implemented the new criteria. The team was here to see if "Fort Benning is walking the talk," said David Flo, director of resource management.

The team visited various places on post, including:

- Combined Arms and Tactics Division
- Dismounted Battlespace Battle Lab
- Directorate of Community Affairs
- Adjutant General
- Office of Infantry Proponency
- Directorate of Civilian Personnel
- Directorate of Resource Management
- Public Affairs Office and
- Martin Army Community Hospital.

After leaving Fort Benning, the evaluation team members will present their findings to the Department of the Army judges who will decide the winner of this year's ACOE competition.

The post is looking for a three-peat in 1996.

In 1995, Fort Benning was the first post in the Army to be a two-time winner of the Commander-in-Chief's Best Army Installation in the World award, the best installation in the continental United States, large category, best military personnel services, best civilian personnel services and the best Morale Welfare and Recreation division and Family Support Services.

In 1994, the post won the commander-in-chief award, best installation in the continental United States, large category, best military personnel services, best army career and alumni program, best MWR and family support services.

In 1993, Fort Benning was the best installation in the continental United States, large category, best civilian personnel services and the best military support services .

This year the post is competing against Fort Bragg, N. C., and Fort Sill, Okla., in the best installation in the continental United States, large category.

Installations outside the continental United States that are also in the competition are Grafenwoehr, 409th Base Support Battalion, Germany; Ansbach, 235th BSB, Germany and U.S. Army Pacific, Fort Shafter, Hawaii.

There are a total of 32 communties in the commander-in-chief's best Army community in the world category.

ARMY EMERGENCY RELIEF

Fund campaign drive kicks off Feb 28

By John W. Peeler
Special to The Bayonet©

Army Emergency Relief officially kicked off its annual campaign drive Feb. 28 in Infantry Hall, Building 4.

The theme for this year's campaign is "Helping the Army Take Care of its Own."

Fort Benning Commanding General Maj. Gen. John W. Hendrix opened the 1996 campaign by addressing unit key personnel and said his goal for this year is $155,000.

"Army Emergency Relief is one of the best ways I know that we take care of our people," Hendrix said.

Hendrix said in the last four years, the installation has handed out more than $3 million worth of financial assistance to soldiers, retirees and family members.

"Within that same time, we collected and donated into that fund over $700,000," Hendrix said.

The major objectives of the campaign are to increase awareness about AER to all soldiers, publicize procedures so all Army personnel know how to obtain assistance, raise funds to support AER assistance programs and to inform people that contributions help the Army take care of their own.

Following the kickoff, unit key personnel were provided training for this year's campaign.

AER provides financial assistance to active duty soldiers, retirees, widows, family members of active duty soldiers and retirees.

Assistance is provided on a case- by- case basis and is given as a no-interest loan, grant or partial loan/ partial grant.

Assistance may be provided for emergency leave, initial rent and deposits, automobile repairs, funeral expenses and nonreceipt of pay.

AER also has an education scholarship program for undergraduate study by family member children.

Contributions to the campaign may be made by allotment, cash or check to unit key personnel or directly to AER located in Building 2436, Soldiers' Plaza.

For more information on the campaign, contact Alfonso Deane, AER officer, at 545-4043 or 545-7517.

March recognizes American Red Cross services

By Anna O'Leska
USAIC Public Affairs Office

March is Red Cross Awareness Month, and the post American Red Cross office will present special events every Wednesday throughout the month to celebrate.

The events will focus on the services provided by the Red Cross to soldiers and civilians, said Deitra S. Russell, acting station manager for Fort Benning's American Red Cross office.

The special events are as follows:

March 13 — Information Day. Red Cross personnel will focus on various programs offered to the public.

March 20 — Health and Safety Day. Representatives will be on hand to explain courses available to promote a healthier lifestyle.

March 27 — Videos will be shown on how the Red Cross does business and the services it provides.

The American Red Cross is an organization mandated by Congress to provide services and moral support to the Armed Forces and their families, Russell said.

There is a Red Cross chapter in Columbus that also provides services to family members living in the city, and it functions in the same way as the Fort Benning chapter, she said.

Russell said some of the services the Red Cross offers to soldiers and their families are as follows:

- Emergency reporting and communication, providing health and welfare reports when a service or family member has not received word from the other party and is concerned about their well-being.
- Information and referral. Red Cross workers give information on hardship discharge and government benefits and make referrals to other agencies when necessary for counseling and other needs.
- Burial assistance, providing service members with financial assistance for burial of a dependent.
- Disaster assistance, providing food, shelter, clothing and other needs free of charge in the event of fire, flood, hurricane and tornado.
- Health and safety courses, including cardiopulmonary resuscitation, first aid, the human immunodeficiency virus, acquired immune deficiency syndrome, baby-sitting for youth and lifeguarding.
- Blood drives every other month. A blood drive is coming up April 12, 9:30 a.m. to 3:00 p.m. in Classroom 2, Infantry Hall, Building 4.
- Emergency travel assistance for soldiers and families on and off post who do not have personal funds to get home for death or illness in the immediate family.

At a glance

What: Information Day

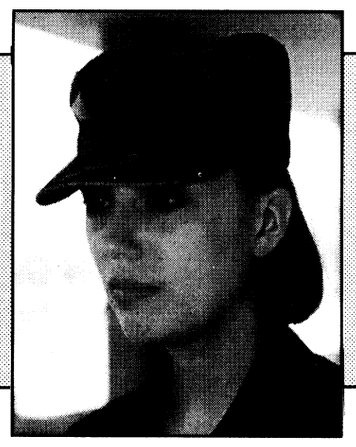
When: March 13

Where: American Red Cross office, Building 1699 on Vibbert Ave.

The Red Cross also has a volunteer program. Volunteers work at the Martin Army Community Hospital Red Cross main office as well as outlying areas helping out in offices, clinics and wards.

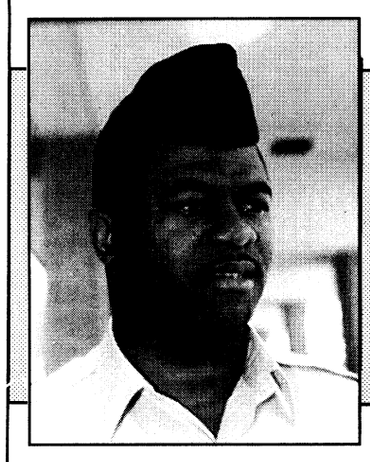
The Main Post Red Cross office is located in Building 1699 on Vibbert Avenue across from the Doughboy Stadium.

Business hours are Monday to Friday from 8:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. Red Cross personnel answer emergencies 24 hours a day. For information or in case of an emergency, call 545-5194.



Russell said that in the event of an emergency, the duty officer can also be called at 545-2218.

VARIOUS VOICES



What should be done about the illegal dumping on post?

Tonya Debose, family member — "If they start fining them and start fining them a higher fine, people might stop. Usually it gets people if they hit them in the wallet.."

Pfc. Holly Walton, U.S. Army Medical Department Activity — "They should open a dump site on Fort Benning."

Senior Airmen Daren Newton, 17th Air Support Squadron — "First of all, if you know the people doing it, you should turn them in. If they are caught, active duty personnel should be reprimanded and civilians should be put on a post detail."

Pfc. Robert Gasman, Company C, 1st Battalion, 18th Infantry Regiment — "They should send people on one big police call and give them large fines."

Rebecca Braden, family member — "Anyone caught should be thrown off post."

Willie Lewis, retired — "There should be some laws enforced by the environmental people and the military police."

To suggest future topics or questions for Various Voices or to volunteer your opinion on upcoming questions, call 545-2201.

People destroy post's look through ILLEGAL DUMPING

By Shannon Day
Special to The Bayonet©

On the weekends, when the weather is nice, my family and I usually take to the back roads of Fort Benning in our 1979 four-wheel-drive Dodge pickup truck, to do a little off-roading and hopefully catch a few glimpses of wildlife.

We have seen countless bottles, broken glass, plastic bags, cardboard, etc., and it doesn't stop there.

I have seen old mattresses, couches, toilets, stoves, fence materials, wooden palates and containers, some empty, some still full.

Now I could talk about poor basic trainee Pvt. Joe Smith, who tripped over a stump in the woods and cut his hand severely on a piece of glass, which came from a broken beer bottle.

Or, I could talk about John Doe who just finished changing the oil in his car. He decided to go dump the old stuff in the woods. That evening it rained and washed the old oil into a stream and killed a bunch of fish. That same stream flows into the source from which the Fort Benning population gets its water supply.

A gallon of clean drinking water costs anywhere from 50 cents to $2, depending on the brand and where you buy it. Who would have thought of having to pay money for clean water 20 years ago. With the growing population and pollution, what will the price be in another 20 years?

The world is rapidly becoming one large smelly disposable diaper. No one is stopping to think that those high-priced plastic diapers we so lovingly put on our babies' behinds to keep them clean will someday be their nemesis. Talk about irony.

We bought the movie "Pocahontas" for our son recently. It was the first time I had seen it, but I was impressed by the 'ripple effect' the willow tree talked about.

For the few people who haven't seen it, the effect's basic principle is that what begins as a small ripple in the middle of a pool, spreads and gets bigger.

Each person can make a difference.

There are many things you can do at home to help the environment. Here are a few simple suggestions my family does:

- Teach your children not to litter by not littering yourself. If you throw something towards a garbage can and miss, pick it up.
- Recycle what items you can, and try to reuse what you can't. If you are a soda drinker, let the children save and crush the aluminum cans. They can redeem them for money.
- Don't do laundry or run the dishwasher unless you have a full load. Remember, all that detergent and fabric softener gets washed down the drain.
- Try some less harsh cleaning chemicals. We use vinegar diluted with hot water to mop the floor, instead of brand-name floor cleaners. It cleans as well and it's cheaper. Baking soda and hot water also work well on countertops.
- If you have furniture to get rid of, check with a less-fortunate family or maybe a homeless shelter to see if they could use the item. Have a yard sale. Your junk could be someone else's treasure. And, you could make some money. Just don't dump it in the woods.
- Get your family involved. Go for walks in the woods or plant some wildflowers and see if they grow. The more you get out of the house and experience nature, the more you will come to appreciate it.

Prevent heat injuries

The Fort Benning summer can be very harsh to soldiers and employees involved in outdoor training and operations. Heat injuries are critical because they present a high risk of fatality if the body temperature soars out of control. Without constant vigilance, heat injuries can severely reduce valuable training time.

All leaders must be actively involved in heat injury prevention by ensuring that:

- Soldiers and employees are properly acclimated.
- Appropriate work and rest cycles are followed for each heat category.
- Adequate water is provided and consumed.
- Soldiers and employees are taught to recognize heat injury symptoms.

Now is the time to educate leaders in the prevention, recognition and treatment of heat injuries. Pocket cards (FB Form 7, Heat Injury Prevention) provide guidance for the prevention and treatment of heat injuries and are available from Post Publications, Building 1792. These cards, used with the Wet Globe Temperature Index, give definitive guidance on conducting safe training and operations.
