Tricare briefings to be set

Martin Army Community Hospital

Tricare, the Defense Department's revised health support system, will begin implementation at Fort Benning during June. Tricare has three essential features:

• Mandatory enrollment choices to receive specified benefits. (Contractor managed enrollment will begin during June.)

• Funding for service based on enrollment

• Use of a managed care contractor (Humana Military Healthcare Services) to supplement military treatment facilities.

Soldiers will be automatically enrolled in the military treatment facility option, but family members will have the opportunity to choose from several options to be offered during a series of Humana enrollment presentations during June and July.

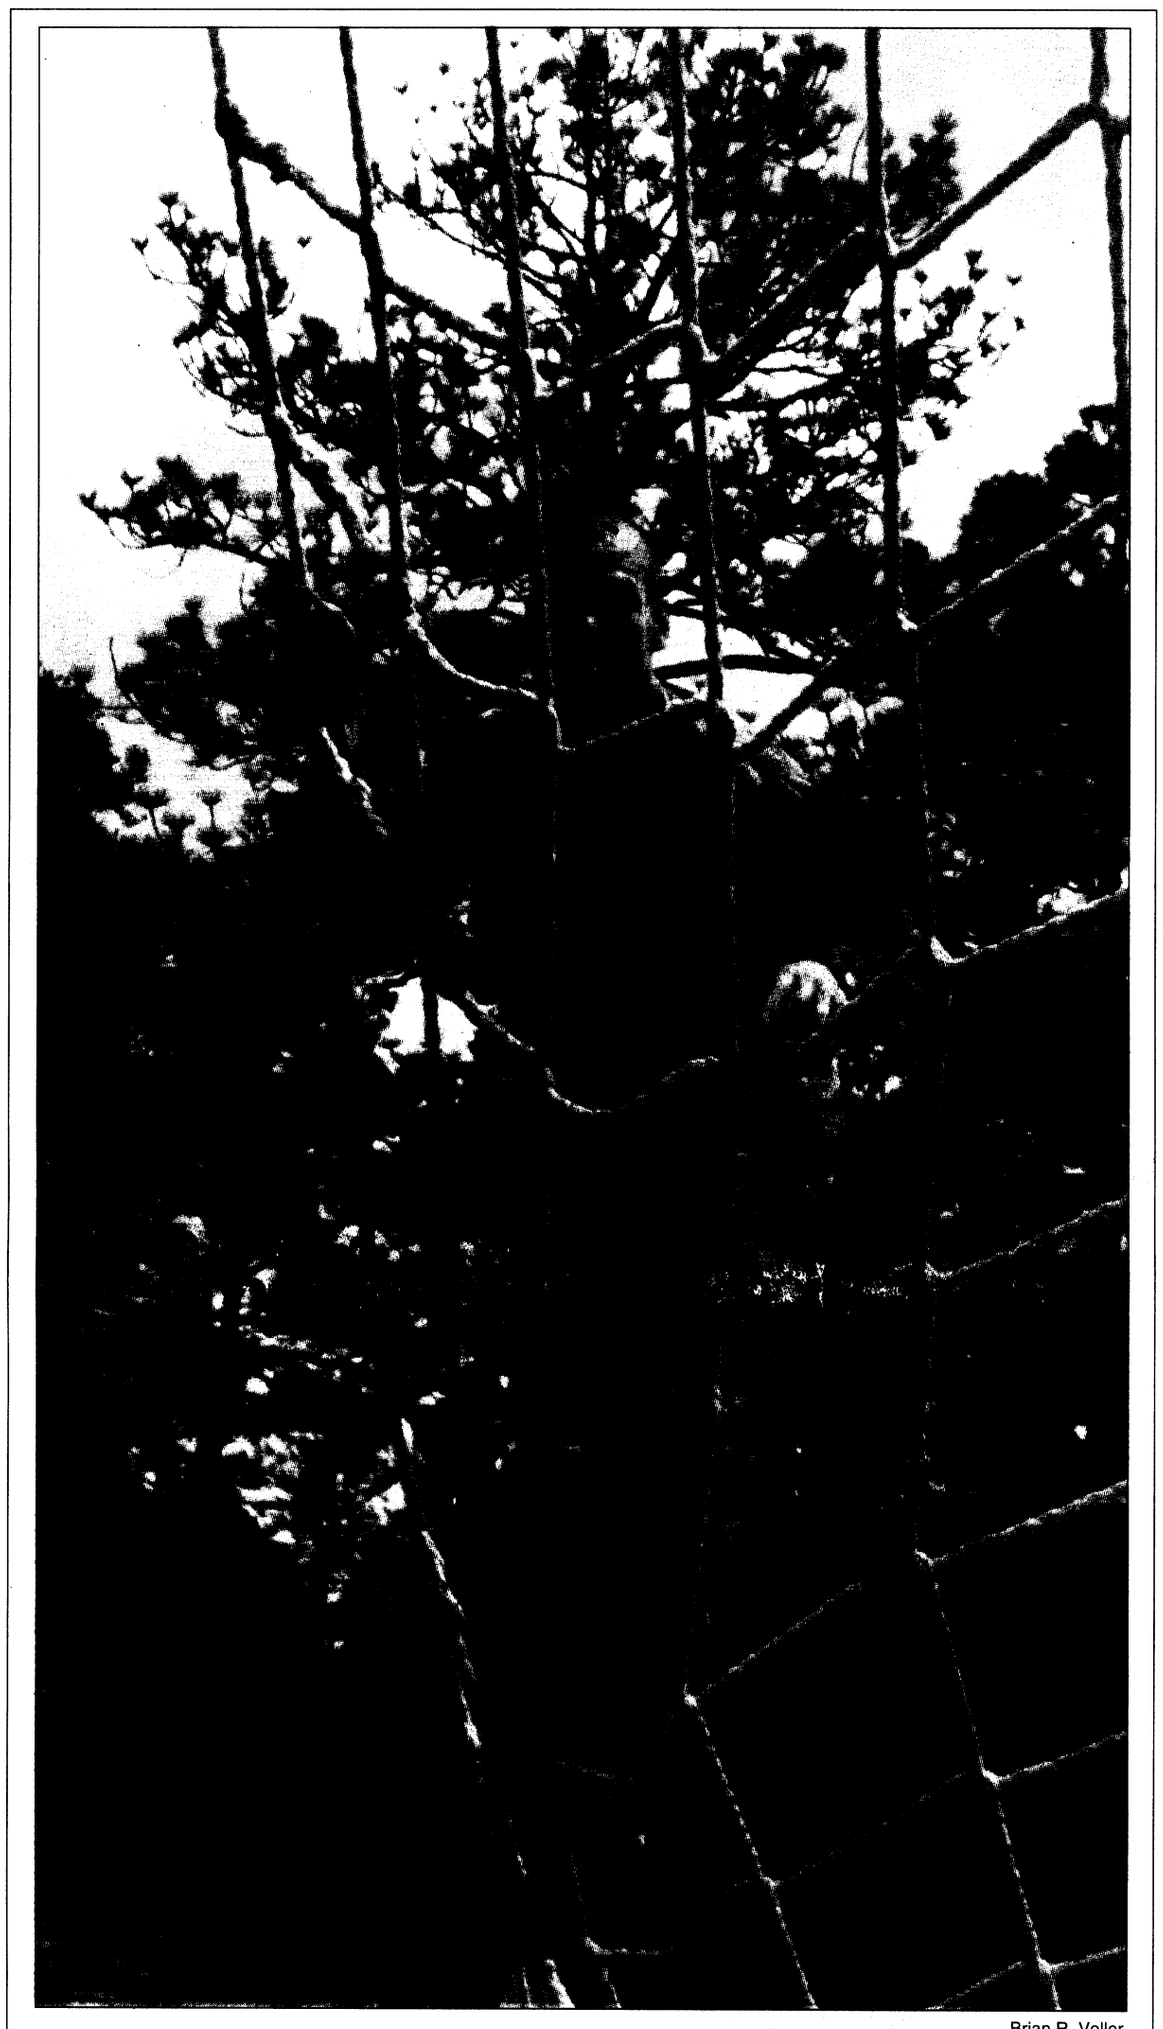
Military families will be best prepared to make these decisions if they have the advantage of advance information about the Tricare program. As enrollment is a "first-come, first-serve" process, family members need to be prepared to make their election of options June 3 when the process begins.

A briefing by a team of professional health care providers, benefits advisers and contract specialists will be available during May to educate Fort Benning personnel on the benefits and requirements of the program.

Groups of soldiers, family members and retiree groups of up to 250 can attend briefing, which will last approximately one hour.

Contact the Medial Department Activity's Plans, Training, Mobilization and Security Office to schedule a briefing during May at 545-1626.

Units may be combined to accommodate scheduling. Organization representatives should furnish the following information:



• Number of briefings.

• Requested date(s)

• Proposed location (s)

• Group composition (soldiers, family members, etc.)

• Organization POC and phone number.

Billeting services limited during Olympic Games

By Jacqué Hill
Special to the Bayonet

Fort Benning's guest housing and transient billeting services will be limited from June 20 to Aug. 3 during the Olympics because the Olympic Village, Building 73, will be used to house some athletes.

During that time, people must meet specific criteria to stay at the facilities, according to Janet Ashabranner, post billeting officer.

"You've got to be down here on official business," she said.

Anyone experiencing a permanent change of station to or from Fort Benning and their family members, persons coming to post for temporary duty assignments and Department of Defense civilian employees on official business will have priority over others wishing to stay in Visiting Officers and Visiting Enlisted Quarters and Guest Housing, according to Lt. Col. Kelly Cook, garrison executive officer. Also, these people will get rooms only with confirmed reservations during the Olympic time frame.

"These individuals are urged to make reservations as soon as they have official orders directing them to travel to Fort Benning or PCS from Fort Benning," Cook said. She also pointed out that reservations will be held only until 6 p.m. on the day the traveler is expected to arrive, unless the Billeting Reservation Office is notified of a late arrival.

Ashabranner said people who are not going to be here for official purposes, but who want a room, will be allowed to stay when possible.

"Retirees, military personnel on leave, people on permissive TDY, family members and guests of military personnel assigned here will be given rooms based on space availability, in that order," she said.

According to Cook, these people will be allowed to make reservations only one day prior to their arrivals and the reservations will be held until 6 p.m. on the day they are expected. Travelers may notify the Billeting Reservations Office if they will arrive late to continue to secure their reservations.

Distinguished visitors, including lieutenant colonels, sergeants major and higher ranking persons, who are not conducting official business will also be booked for rooms based on space availability.

> "Retirees, military personnel on leave ... military personnel assigned here will be given rooms based on space availability, in that order"
> — Lt. Col. Kelly Cook
> Garrison executive officer

"Reservations for distinguished visitor quarters will be accepted for official visitors only and be approved on a case-by-case basis as determined by the commander, USAIC, or his designated representative," Cook said.

Because the limitations are occurring at the same time as billeting's peak season, according to Ashabranner, some soldiers' families will not be able to get rooms through the billeting office for summer graduations they wish to attend.

"We want to take care of our soldiers and their families," she said. Ashabranner said there are a few rooms set aside for the purpose of housing family members attending graduations, but that the number will not be enough to house everyone wanting to stay in the billeting facilities.

The Olympic Village will be at Henry Hall, Building 73, and will house athletes participating in the games in at least 249 of billeting's 1,306 rooms, according to Ashabranner.

"Besides their rooms, there will be offices, a travel agent, bank, linguists, doctors and other facilities set up in the area to accommodate the Olympians," she said. "The athletes who stay here will have everything they need provided for them at the village."

For further Guest House availability and transient billeting services information, contact Fort Benning's Billeting Reservations Office at 687-0067 Ext. 5621 or DSN 835-0067.

Infantry leaders gather

By Lori Egan
Bayonet staff writer

Government contractors filled the first floor halls of Infantry Hall this week with displays of futuristic Army equipment. The displays were set up during the Infantry Conference, which was Monday through Wednesday.

The theme of this year's conference was "Infantry into the XXI Century." The purpose of the conference was to provide a forum for presentations and discussions in the area of doctrine, training and materiel requirements related to the infantry's mission.

Steve Taulbee, Army Research Laboratory, shows Staff Sgt. William D. Paul, Fort Bragg, a non-lethal munition sponge grenade.

Maj. Gen. John W. Hendrix, post commanding general, spoke of the state of the infantry Tuesday morning. He talked about the strategic environment, noncombat tasks such as peacekeeping and disaster relief, and the challenges the infantry faces, such as technology, new organizations, new operational concepts and the changing threat.

Gen. John W. Hartzog, TRADOC commander, and other infantry leaders attended the conference.

Fifty-one representatives from Fort Benning departed Lawson Army Airfield Wednesday to attend the 1996 Chief of Staff of the Army, Army Community of Excellence and the Commander-In-Chief awards ceremonies.

The group will be in the nation's capital to accept the Chief of Staff Award for best large army installation. Fort Benning did not win the Commander-in-Chief Award for the third year in a row; this year's winner was Picatinny Arsenal in New Jersey.

While in Washington, the representatives will be taken on a tour of the Capitol building to include both a tour of the senate gallery and a tour of the House of Representatives.

After attending the awards ceremony, the Fort Benning representatives will travel to the Fort Myer, Va., Main NCO Club for an Association of the United States Army reception, and a second reception hosted by Congressman Sanford Bishop.

Hi Mom!

Why athletes acknowledge their mothers

By John W. Peeler
Special to The Bayonet©

Have you ever wondered why the first words a pro athlete utters when he or she is in front of a television camera is "Hi Mom"?

I did for a long time until I sat down and recounted my escapades as a high school athlete, youth services coach and even today as a sportswriter.

It occurred to me that my mother, and all those mothers like her with athletes in the home, have a special bond with their athlete children.

Mothers come in all shapes, sizes and professions, but to them there is prestige and love in the three letter word "mom."

Yeah, dads will be the first to tell you they taught their child everything they know about sports and, for the most part, they are probably right.

From a macho standpoint, dads need that.

Sometimes it's hard for athletes who rely on strength and independence to acknowledge how much their mothers contributed to their success.

As in most athletes' homes, my mother played taxi driver (when I would call her to "pick me up"), coach, cheerleader, equipment manager, curfew enforcement officer, photographer, psychologist, doctor, nurse, dentist, financial adviser, automobile repairman, chef, housekeeper, confidant, dating consultant, social adviser and most important, hurt-feelings repairer and on and on.

commentary

I have probably missed more than I have named, but I am quite sure there is not a mother out there who would ever bring it up.

Why? Because it's their unselfish nature to take a back seat and let their athletes shine.

John W. Peeler is a staff writer for the Bayonet. He believes mothers are underrated, contribute more to the lives of athletes than most people realize and have a special bond with their athletic children.

"Hi Mom" is a way an athlete says thanks to the one person who was always there — win or lose.

It's a way to break out of the macho mold without really having to.

It's a way of saying, "If it weren't for you, I wouldn't be where I am today."

It's everything you ever wanted to tell your mom, but for some reason you couldn't.

So on Mother's Day, stop in to see your mother, or at least call her on the phone to let her know how much you care about her and how much you appreciate the difficult job she had in raising you.

Above all, if you ever get the opportunity to be on television, don't forget to say hello to the special lady who contributed the most to your success.

Just say "Hi, Mom!"

Motherhood brings a mixture of joy, sorrow

By Agatha Hudson Debrow
Bayonet editor

It is one of the most difficult, most painful, yet rewarding and fulfilling areas of my life.

I've had 21 years experience, yet I'm still trying to figure out exactly what it is I'm supposed to be doing and exactly how I'm supposed to do it.

Motherhood, which I define as possessing the character and qualities to successfully raise children, is one thing in life that can be bitter and sweet at the same time. It is filled with heartache and happiness, disappointment and delight; and, although it weighs heavily on the heart, it still manages to take you to a depth of love you never knew existed.

Yes, I know children are a heritage from the Lord and I love my two. But, it's tough when you have to deal with the challenges they bring. The hurt they've brought me sometimes overshadows the joy.

My son and daughter have done everything except wreck the car — everything from speeding tickets to behavior that resulted in a grandchild out of wedlock.

Don't get me wrong. They are not all bad. I have proudly said "That's my child," many times.

But, some of their actions have forced me to face the greatest challenge of my life — and that is to love in spite of everything. It's not a question of whether the love is there; it's a question of how to continue to show love even when I don't want to.

Agatha Hudson Debrow says motherhood has brought her life's greatest challenge.

commentary

My own mother's unconditional love reminds me that I have to love my children even when they mess up because she's done just that for me. Despite my many failings (and believe me I have brought shame to the family — not just once, but many times), she continues to love me.

Her love has taught me that just like the Lord "commended his love for us in that while we were yet sinners," we too have to love people, including our children, when they mess up or when they do something we do not agree with.

I know I can do it; it's just that it's easier to divorce myself of them and their actions. The hard part is to hang in there and show love in spite of circumstances.

With God's help, I'll continue to be able to do just that.

Only winning the lottery could add to motherhood

By Lori Egan
Bayonet staff writer

I am the mother of a wonderful 4-year-old daughter. I love being a mom.

I was talking to a neighbor the other day about being a mom. She told me that being a mom has made her complete. It's as if she has come full circle, she said.

I agreed with her and said I would rather be a mom than a lottery winner. That's not to say I wouldn't mind being both.

About three weeks after my daughter was born, my mom and I were talking about loving Jessica and Mom said that Jess would never love me as much as I would love Jess.

At first, that comment made me sad, but now I understand it. If mothers didn't love their children more than anything, life wouldn't be what it is.

After all, haven't you ever wondered why the world isn't full of only children?

Mothers have selective memories. They forget the pain of childbirth, which is why I have two brothers and two sisters and why Jess is the 11th grandchild in my family.

Moms forget things. Children count on this. That's why they ask the same thing over and over. I think they hope that eventually you'll forget what you said the last time they asked.

Lori Egan loves being the mom to a little girl who keeps her on her toes with her statements about life.

commentary

At first, I was on top of this. I wrote things down in a notebook so I could remember why I said yes or no to certain things.

For example, "Mom, why can't I wear makeup?"

My answer to that was, "You are too young to wear makeup. You can start wearing makeup when you're 16."

"Mom, when can I get my ears pierced?"

"When you are 13." It's a family tradition, sort of."

These are frequently asked questions from a 4-year-old girl wanting to be older.

But moms have to remember things, too. Moms have to remember to pick children up after music lessons or baseball practice.

Moms remember to feed, clothe, support and love their children unconditionally.

Just the other day, Jess asked me, "When will I be old enough to use the microwave?"

Which reminded me it was time to fix dinner.

Volunteer coordinator says thanks

The Volunteer Resource Center sends a heartfelt thank you to all sponsors and supporters of the volunteer recognition reception.

Without the support of organizations such as the Enlisted Wives' Club, Army and Air Force Exchange Service, Rock 103, Regency Jewelers, United Armed Forces Association, A Beautiful Touch Florist and Army Community Service, the reception would not have been possible.

A special thanks to each volunteer who worked so diligently through each stage of the planning and implementation.

The extent of gratitude cannot be expressed in mere words. Your support and commitment are qualities that accentuate Fort Benning as the best installation in the world.

Thanks again!

Total Quality

master's program being considered on Fort Benning

Staff Education and Training Branch

Anna Maria College of Paxton, Mass., the first college in the nation to offer an accelerated master's degree program in total quality, is conducting a needs assessment survey to identify students interested in pursuing this degree at Fort Benning.

The course emphasizes teamwork and collaborative learning with teams completing tangible process improvements instead of traditional examinations and term papers. The thesis is replaced by a team-driven, comprehensive process of improvement at organizations of the team's choice.

The program consists of 12 courses, covering all aspects of quality, and includes business process reengineering, team-building, quality in human resource management, benchmarking and the Malcolm Baldrige Award.

The school also offers classes in ISO 9000, the European Quality Standard. Faculty are flown in from all parts of the country, Canada and the United Kingdom. Each course takes two weekends per month and involves team meetings between courses. The master's degree and doctorate degree in quality, with the same emphasis on team-driven process improvements, are also being considered.

The garrison commander is researching the possibility of defraying some portion of the tuition costs for Fort Benning civilians interested in the course. Dr. Robert J. Gee, the program manager, will be at Fort Benning May 23 in Classroom 6, Building 4, Infantry Hall, to answer questions concerning the total quality degrees.

Interested students, both civilian and military, can plan to attend either the morning session from 9:30 to 10:30 a.m. or the afternoon session from 1 to 2 p.m.

For more information, call the Fort Benning Education Center, 545-6114.

The Mountain Phase is 21 days long, and more than 2,000 students receiving basic and advanced mountaineering and combat technique training each year.

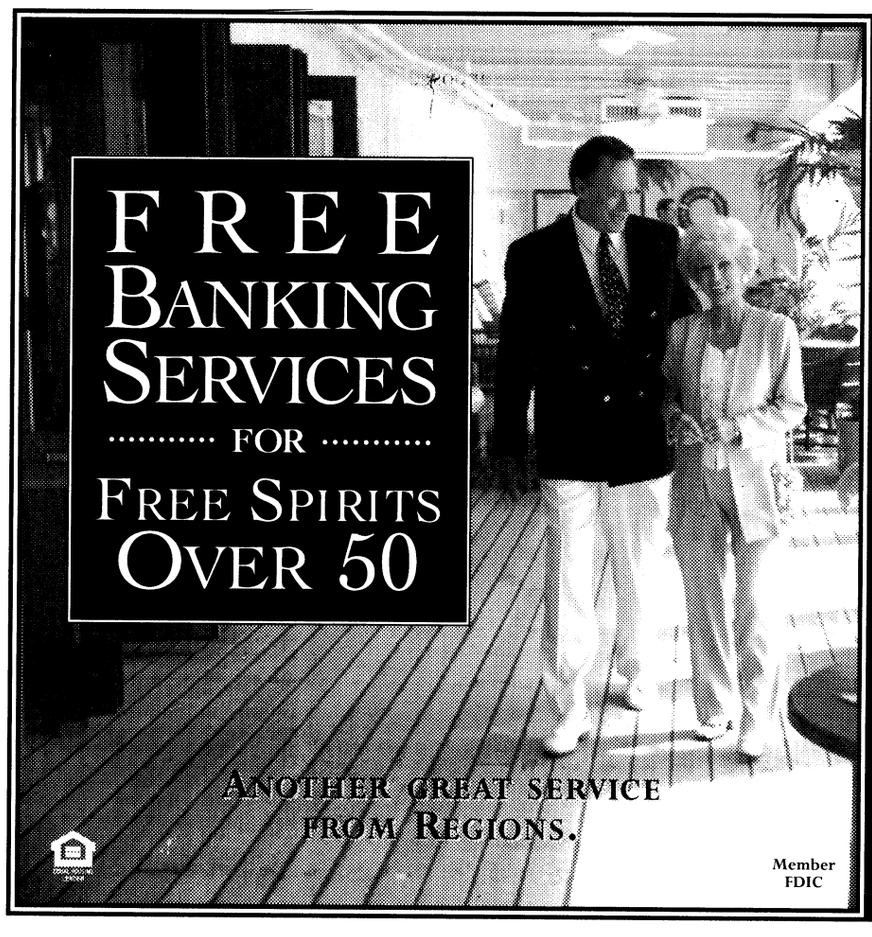
Treasury gives $100 bill a facelift

American Forces Press Service

WASHINGTON — Ben Franklin got a facelift. A new picture of Franklin appears on the $100 bill.

The recent change is the first major redesign of American currency since 1929. The Treasury Department is taking the action to combat counterfeiting.

You can still use any old design $100 bills you have. Treasury officials will take the old bills out of circulation as they come in. They said the $100 bill begins a redesign process that will continue until all denominations have been changed. The Treasury will introduce a new bill each year.



The new bill features a number of security-related changes. Microprinting and security threads, which started in 1991, will continue. The bill has a larger portrait of Franklin and is off-center to give more space to a watermark.

In addition, the security thread glows red when exposed to ultraviolet light. Officials changed the type of ink used. It will shift color from green to black when viewed from different angles. There is also microprinting in the lower left numeral and on Franklin's collar.

Officials made all these changes to make the note more difficult to duplicate. Treasury officials said this will allow currency security to stay ahead of advances in printing technology such as color copiers and scanners.

BEST RANGER

75th rangers prove they're 'best'

By Brian R. Voller
Bayonet staff writer

BEST RANGER COMPETITION RESULTS

- Complete list of finishers, Page C-5
- Awards ceremony, Page C-5

It began with 35 two-man ranger teams, it was followed by three days of rigorous competition and it ended with one team whose members could truly call themselves the best of the best.

Staff Sgt. Jeff Strueker and Spc. Isaac Gmazel from the 75th Ranger Regiment, proved they were the best when they won the 14th Annual David E. Grange Jr. Best Ranger Competition, which was conducted May 3, 4 and 5.

The Ranger Training Brigade changed the competition from years past by keeping the events secret until just before the event began.

"The way the competition ran this year had its good points and its bad points," Strueker said. "This year was more physically time consuming than before. In years past, the events were hard but they were hard and fast. This year, they were just as hard but they were hard and long."

The first major change to the competition came during the May 3 events when the competitors were flown to Dahlonega, Ga., for land navigation, a free descent Prusik climb and a road march.

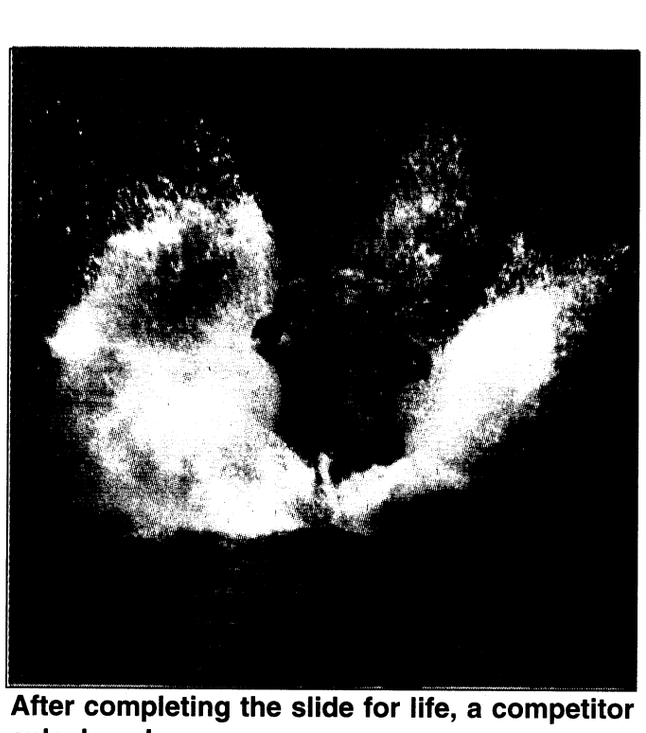
"Traveling up to Dahlonega was a big shocker at the beginning of the competition," said second place finisher 2nd Lt. Christopher Robishaw, 11th Infantry Regiment. "We didn't do much road marching in the terrain that's indigenous to the mountains of north Georgia. Being thrown into it was a big shocker, and it was a good start to the competition."

The second day, the competitors were moved to the Malone Range complex where they qualified with the M-16 rifle, the M-203 grenade launcher and M-60 machine gun. After qualifying on the ranges, the competitors were moved to Phillips Range where they qualified on the 9 mm obstacle course, another new addition to the Best Ranger Competition.

Finally, the day ended with the competitors participating in the ranger stakes, which required them to do a series of events that are included in basic ranger tasks.

The final day of competition moved the competitors out to the Darby Queen obstacle course in the morning, then to Victory Pond for the water confidence competition, which eliminated the helocast but added a longer swim and a demolitions category. Finally the competitors moved to Malvesti Field were they took a modified physical training test.

Robishaw said the most difficult part of the competition was to be there for his partner.



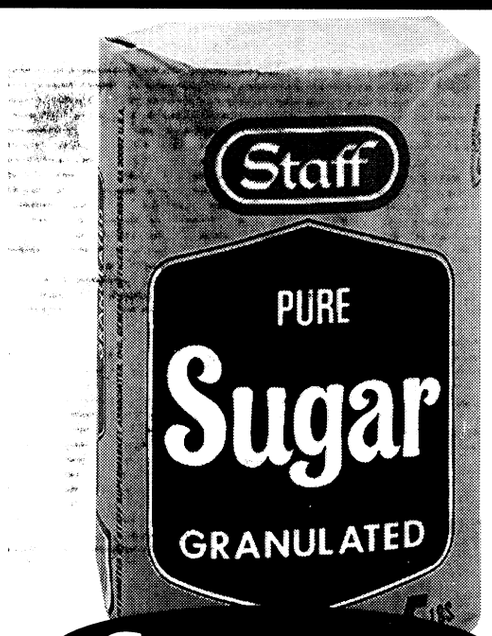
"To me, the most difficult part was not letting my partner down," Robishaw said. "When I was going through OCS (Officer Candidate School)my partner Jay Hansen approached me and asked me if I wanted to compete. He had done it for the past three years, but I had never really thought of myself in that criteria — I was really flattered. I talked it over with my wife; she was willing to support me and decided I couldn't pass up the opportunity."

Strueker said a person competes in the Best Ranger Competition to see who is the best and to test your mind and your body.

"Until you check your limits, you don't know how much you're really capable of doing," Strueker said. "That's something this competition will do, and there is a lot of people out there that have the physical ability to compete and to do well."

For Staff Sgt. Fredrick Ahern, the reason for competing is all in the name.

"The name says it all, Best Ranger," Ahern said. "There are thousands and thousands of people throughout the military who are ranger qualified, but 70 of them volunteered to come here and find out who's the best."



After completing the slide for life, a competitor splashes down.

Sgt. James Yaw and Sgt. David Hoogendorn, 6th Infantry Division, compete on the Darby Queen.

Health care issues to be discussed at Retiree Open House

By Amy Durham
Special to the Bayonet©

Health care issues will be included in the varied information to be provided during the upcoming Retiree Open House.

As more than 35,000 retirees gather at Fort Benning, agencies of Martin Army Community Hospital will provide exhibits concentrating on screening, health promotion, disease prevention, diet, exercise and stress reduction.

Some exhibits will include nutritional care, stress management and reduction, suicide prevention and depression, women's health, physical therapy, common eye diseases and eye care and smoking cessation.

Retirees and their family members can receive blood pressure and cholesterol checks.

According to Friede McDonald, retirement services officer, Col. Everett W. Newcomb III, commander, Martin Army Community Hospital, will brief participants on Tricare and how it affects them.

Aside from the health information which will be provided during the noon to 3 p.m. information fair Saturday in Infantry Hall, Building 4, representatives from other organizations will be on hand to disseminate updated information.

McDonald said other pertinent information to be provided will include subjects such as Tricare, Veterans Affairs, Social Security and finances.

"Representatives from Defense Finance and Accounting Service (Retired Pay), will come from Cleveland with laptops," McDonald said. "With those computers, retirees will have a direct link to the database.

"Retirees need to bring their latest pay statement so changes and updates can be made on the spot."

During the three-day event, retirees and family members from the Alabama, Georgia and Florida service area will be able to tour the National Infantry Museum as well as participate in a tour of the Dismounted Battlespace Battle Lab's Simulation Network Facility.

Individuals interested in attending the open house can register or receive more information by calling 545-1813, 545-2541, or 545-5369. The deadline is close of business today.

In celebration of Military Appreciation Week, the third annual Job Fair will be sponsored by the Chattahoochee Valley-Fort Benning Chapter Association of the U.S. Army May 16.

"Local, state and national businesses will be on site," said AUSA Job Fair Chairman Bruce C. Tait. "We need all types of positions filled, including everything from mechanical to teaching and more.

"We are anticipating 70, or more, businesses to participate this year," he said.

Some of the local businesses expected to participate include Synovus and Total Systems, Cott Beverages, Century 21 North Properties, W. C. Bradley and Charbroil, according to Tait.

Columbus Regional Health Care and the Muscogee County School District are also expected to have representation at the event, said Tait, as well as the Federal Bureau of Prisons from Pennsylvania.

Representatives from the FBI, CIA and Secret Service are slated to be at the Job Fair, along with David Poythress, labor commissioner for Georgia; retired Gen. Jack N. Merritt, national AUSA president; Commanding General Maj. Gen. John W. Hendrix; and Steve Butler, CEO and president of W. C. Bradley. Butler is also the president of the local chapter of AUSA.

Mark C. Mills, acting manager of Army Community Service's Family Member Employment Assistance Program, hopes that attendees utilize the opportunity not only to get jobs, but to learn from the businesses participating at the Job Fair.

"The Job Fair is not only good for those seeking employment and businesses' recruiting purposes; it is also great for people in the process of career planning," he said. "With so many types of businesses on site, it is a perfect opportunity for some people to discover more about particular careers."

Tait is expecting a large number of attendees.

"Last year, we had roughly 1,100 attendees," he said. "This year, we're hoping for an attendance between 1,100 and 1,500."

The Army Community Service, Army Career Alumni Program and Georgia Department of Labor are assisting AUSA with the Job Fair's organization. All active duty and retired military personnel, Department of Defense civilian employees and the family members of both are invited to attend the event, according to Tait.

He also said AUSA sponsors the Job Fair for several reasons, but mainly to aid the soldiers preparing to separate from the military.

"It's an opportunity for AUSA to show its appreciation (for soldiers) exiting the Army," he said.

Mills urges attendees to arrive at the Job Fair prepared.

"We recommend that everyone have résumés done with numerous copies ready," he said. "Last year, our recommendation was 20 copies, but most people discovered that amount was not adequate. I would suggest having 40 to 50 copies prepared for the event."

The Job Fair will be from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. at the Main NCO Club, Building 2784.

For information, contact Bruce Tait, AUSA, at 649-7423; Mark Mills, FMEAP, at 545-6969; or Mary Allen, ACAP, at 545-7020.

PRAYER POWER

Citizens ask for guidance from higher being

By Agatha Hudson Debrow
Bayonet editor

Hundreds turned out to petition God on behalf of their city and nation as Columbus celebrated the National Day of Prayer with services at the Riverwalk May 2 at 7 p.m.

Chaplain (Col.) Herbert E. Kitchens, post chaplain, and Drexel Brunson, pastor, Evangel Temple, moderated the program, which featured local clergy and lay leaders from throughout the city.

Fort Benning Chief of Staff Col. Gregory C. Camp was the guest speaker.

"The National Day of Prayer is a day for us to honor God," Camp said. Camp said Psalms 50:15 shows that we honor God by praying to him: "They call upon me in time of distress and I will rescue you and you shall honor me." We honor God by putting faith and trust in him to rescue us out of our distress, he said.

Camp said there's no such thing as too much prayer.

"I've never heard of anyone contracting ulcers to getting anxiety or high blood pressure or any other ailment from too much prayer," he said.

Camp recalled experiences with his children that may help to understand how praying to God honors him.

He said just like a child thinks his or her father can do anything, so we honor God by taking our concerns and problems to him with unfailing faith, knowing there's nothing too hard for him and that he will deliver us.

"Prayer is an attitude," said Sheila McGill, National Prayer Day coordinator for Muscogee County. "It's a way of life. It's not something you do just one day a year."

Dena Chambliss of Faith Tabernacle Full Gospel Church directed a children's choir in a series of song, including "This Little Light of Mine," "He's Got the Whole World in His Hands," while Kitchens and Chaplain (Capt.) Steve Bounds, Fort Benning coordinator for the National Day of Prayer and staff chaplain for the 1st Battalion, 38th Infantry Regiment, accompanied the choir on guitar.

The program also featured an adult choir, which featured "Amazing Grace," Hallelujah" and "The Old Rugged Cross."

Finally, a series of local church leaders led the more then 300 people in prayer for pastors and their families, physicians and the medical community, children and families, soldiers and their families, schools, teachers and boards of education, businesses, the Olympics, and government leaders.

As as a golden setting sun formed a silhouette of each person who stood at the podium praying, bodies rose, some joined hands and other uplifted their hands in praise and intercessory prayer for America and its people.

Spiritual readiness important for soldiers, country they serve

By Amy Durham
Special to The Bayonet©

Spiritual readiness is as important to America's soldiers — and those who support them — as are physical and mental toughness, according to Lt. Gen. John E. Miller, deputy commanding general, U.S. Army Training and Doctrine Command.

Miller

Miller, who spoke to several hundred soldier and civilian personnel during Fort Benning's National Prayer Breakfast May 3, said that soldiers sometimes fail to recognize the spiritual side of life.

"We must remember that we are spiritual beings made in the likeness of God," he said. "Spiritual preparedness through regular, active practice of our religious faith is an important part of the mission of a soldier — just like physical training is for our bodies," Miller said.

He spoke of the nation's historical leaders who have allowed their faith to lead their decisions as much as anything. General Stonewall Jackson, General Robert E. Lee and President Abraham Lincoln, all of whom — leading armies and a nation — guided this country through a pivotal point in history.

As Miller spoke of values, faith and prayer, he said the American people are blessed to live in a nation whose vast strength is founded on spiritual values.

"Values are principles we hold important because of their intrinsic worth," he said.

"Our Army's achievements, since its beginning, are emblematic of our values," Miller said. "With service based on the right principles and guided by the right values, we will succeed as a nation in God's plan for us. And as we look to our inner selves," he said, "we find that we can turn to our creator and to one another for strength and encouragement."

Victims regain personal power through help

News USA

It is becoming routine to cover up the bruises, but you know others suspect their cause. You think there is no one you can turn to who would understand.

The National Crime Prevention Council has a message for you: You are not alone.

The council said as many as four million women in the United States suffer some kind of violence at the hands of their husbands or boyfriends each year, yet few will tell.

Part of the abuser's power comes from secrecy and victims often are ashamed to talk about such intimate family problems. Domestic violence counselors recommend breaking the cycle of abuse by going to a friend or neighbor, calling a domestic violence hot line or talking to a counselor.

If you are hurt, call the police. Remember that assault, even by family members, is a crime. Police often have information about shelters and other agencies that help victims of domestic violence.

Leave, or have someone stay with you. If you believe that you and your children are in danger, leave immediately.

And get medical attention. Ask the hospital or doctor's staff to photograph your injuries and keep detailed records in case you decide to take legal action.

For more information, call the National Resource Center on Domestic Violence at (800) 537-2238.

This information is provided as part of the National Citizens' Crime Prevention Campaign, which is substantially funded by the U.S. Department of Justice.

Editor's note: Fort Benning residents can receive more information or assistance by calling the Army Family Advocacy Program at 545-3344 or 545-6969.

Are you abused?

Does the person you love...

- Constantly accuse you of being unfaithful?
- Discourage your relationships with family and friends?
- Prevent you from working or attending school?
- Constantly criticize you for little things?
- Anger easily when drinking or using other drugs?
- Control all finances and force you to account in detail what you spend?

- Hit, punch, slap, kick or bite you or the children?
- Use or threaten to use a weapon against you?
- Threaten to hurt you or the children?
- Force you to have sex against your will?

If you checked any of these, it's time to get help.

Radiologists key to detecting signs of domestic violence

Martin Army Community Hospital

Radiology plays an important role in uncovering domestic violence, which has now reached epidemic proportions.

An act of domestic violence occurs every 18 seconds and millions of people are victims of domestic abuse in the United States annually, according to Doctor (Col.) Thomas M. Anderson, Jr., chief, Radiology Department, Martin Army Community Hospital.

While examining a person's x-ray or computerized tornography scan, a radiologist may find something which is consistent with abuse. Once signs of abuse are discovered, x-rays, CT scans and ultrasound can be used to find the extent of a person's injury as well as evidence of previous abuse. Fort example, CT scans can be used to look for broken blood vessels and ultrasound can be used to look for intra-abdominal injuries in children, Anderson said.

Women are the largest group of victims of abuse, with eight to 12 million women at risk of being abused by a current or former partner. Two to four million women a year are assaulted by a spouse or partner, according to Anderson.

Approximately two million children are seriously abused yearly by the caregivers. At least 1,000 children die each year as victims of abuse. Nearly 10 percent of trauma treated in emergency rooms in children under five years of age is not attributed to accidents. The problem is that children are often too young to tell the doctor they have been abused.

Abused senior citizens often do not report abuse because they are too sick or because the abuser is a family member. According to the state Adult Protective Services and state Aging Agencies, from 1986 to 1991, elder abuse increased 94 percent. The American Public Welfare Association estimates that 1.57 million elders are abused per year.

In all of these situations, without the findings of the radiologist, the abuse may not be discovered.

"We as radiologists can detect abuse early, before it kills," Anderson said.

'PROJECT ENVIRONMENT'

Faith sixth-graders place in contest

California Table Grape Commission

FRESNO, Ca. — Kimberly Woods and Jessica Terry of Faith Middle School tied for second place in the southeast region of the California Table Grape Commission's national poster and essay competition, "Project Environment."

Both students submitted essays about their favorite places to experience nature and how to take care of them.

Kathleen Nave, project director for the contest, said the judges chose the entries from these Faith Middle school students because they offer viable solutions to environmental problems and show a great deal of creativity.

Terry details the encroachment of manmade structures on nature at her favorite creek. She believes that saving nature is everyone's responsibility, not only the responsibility of community leaders.

Woods points out the dangers of thermal pollution in water, in addition to the problem of litter. She recommends writing to the Parks Department to heighten their awareness of thermal pollution and to share ideas to keep parks clean.

The "Project Environment" competition is open to students in fourth through sixth grades and encourages young people to consider how to protect and respect the environment.

The contest winners receive prizes related to outdoor activities. Terry and Woods both won dome tents.

Taking time to enjoy beauty of nature, wildlife impacts Earth's future

Terry

By Jessica Terry
Faith Middle School

My favorite place to experience nature is at the creek.

The creek has wildlife and beauty all wrapped up in one. The creek has neat and interesting points to it, including tracks of animals and other things only Mother Nature can provide.

It also shows how manmade things can try to stop Mother Nature. For example, man made a dam and Mother Nature worked her way around and under it.

It just goes to show you that you cannot just stop something and think that it is OK. But when looking at the creek, it makes me feel confident and ready to go help Mother Nature any way I can.

The creek is a place where I have also left two important parts of my life. It is taking care of the bodies of my beloved hamsters.

It makes me feel good to go and see the spot where they lay in eternal slumber. It is also a place for peace and quiet or just plain thinking time. But don't get the wrong idea, it is also the place for some of the best fun of your life. The best part of playing there is that most of the time you know you are not harming or taking away the creek's beauty.

I think the way to save or capture the beauty, if you will, is to work together with no bad apples to spoil everything. I think if we could stop fighting and working on advancing technology for a while, we just may be able to keep the creek safe and out of harm's way.

People turn to someone else to do the work of saving nature and we must stop doing that. We must take charge of our own lives and things we do, not what everyone else is doing.

If we really care about the future, we must stop the things we do because we are only trying to hide the fact that if we weren't here, there would probably be no pollution.

People try and pin a lot on Mother Nature, but Mother Nature is natural. I think many people have forgotten what natural is. I think that the definition of natural should be everywhere to tell us to stop trying to make better computers for a minute and look around you.

Think about the Earth and its pain. If we do not stop our destruction of nature, there may not be much of a future for our children.

Recycling, attitudes can stop pollution

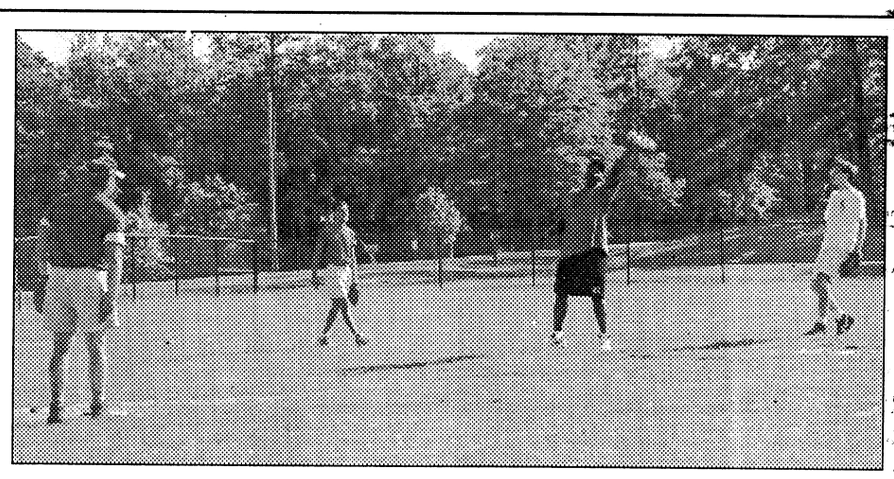
By Kimberly L. Woods
Faith Middle School

My favorite place to experience nature is Lake Eufaula.

Lake Eufaula has a park, a picnic area and a lake with swimming, fish and ducks. When I go there, I have a picnic, feed the ducks and lounge around. It's a place everyone can enjoy. If we keep polluting the area, no one will be able to enjoy it now and in the future.

Some people do not recognize that they are throwing trash on the ground, but they are! They just throw cans, plastic cups and rubber items on the ground and in the lake.

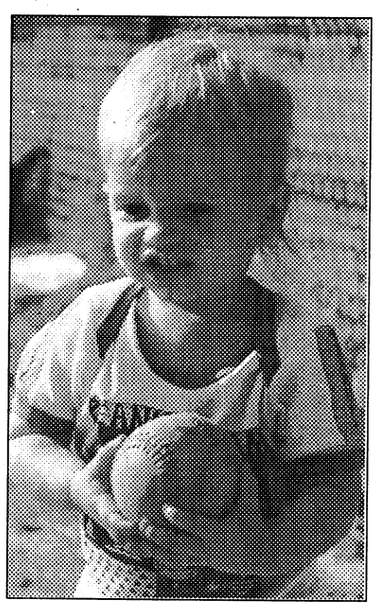
Some people pour out cold water into warm water, which produces thermal pollution. Thermal pollution cuts off the oxygen in the water. If people keep on producing thermal pollution, they will kill all the fish in the lake.



Woods

If you have been in a situation where you wanted to help stop pollution in a park or somewhere else, you know where I am coming from.

If you tried to stop pollution in a place like Lake Eufaula and you thought you could not do anything, you can. You can gather up some of your friends that are interested in helping. Once a week go and pick up some trash. Separate the things that can be recycled from the things that can't be recycled. Recycle the things that can.



Write a letter to the sponsor of the park and give him or her some ideas on how to make the park less polluted. In the letter, tell the sponsor about thermal pollution and what it does to the fish. Maybe the sponsor can find a way to stop thermal pollution from forming.

If we do all these things, we might have a park to play at in the future!

ITB hosts annual spring formal

By Aaron Solich

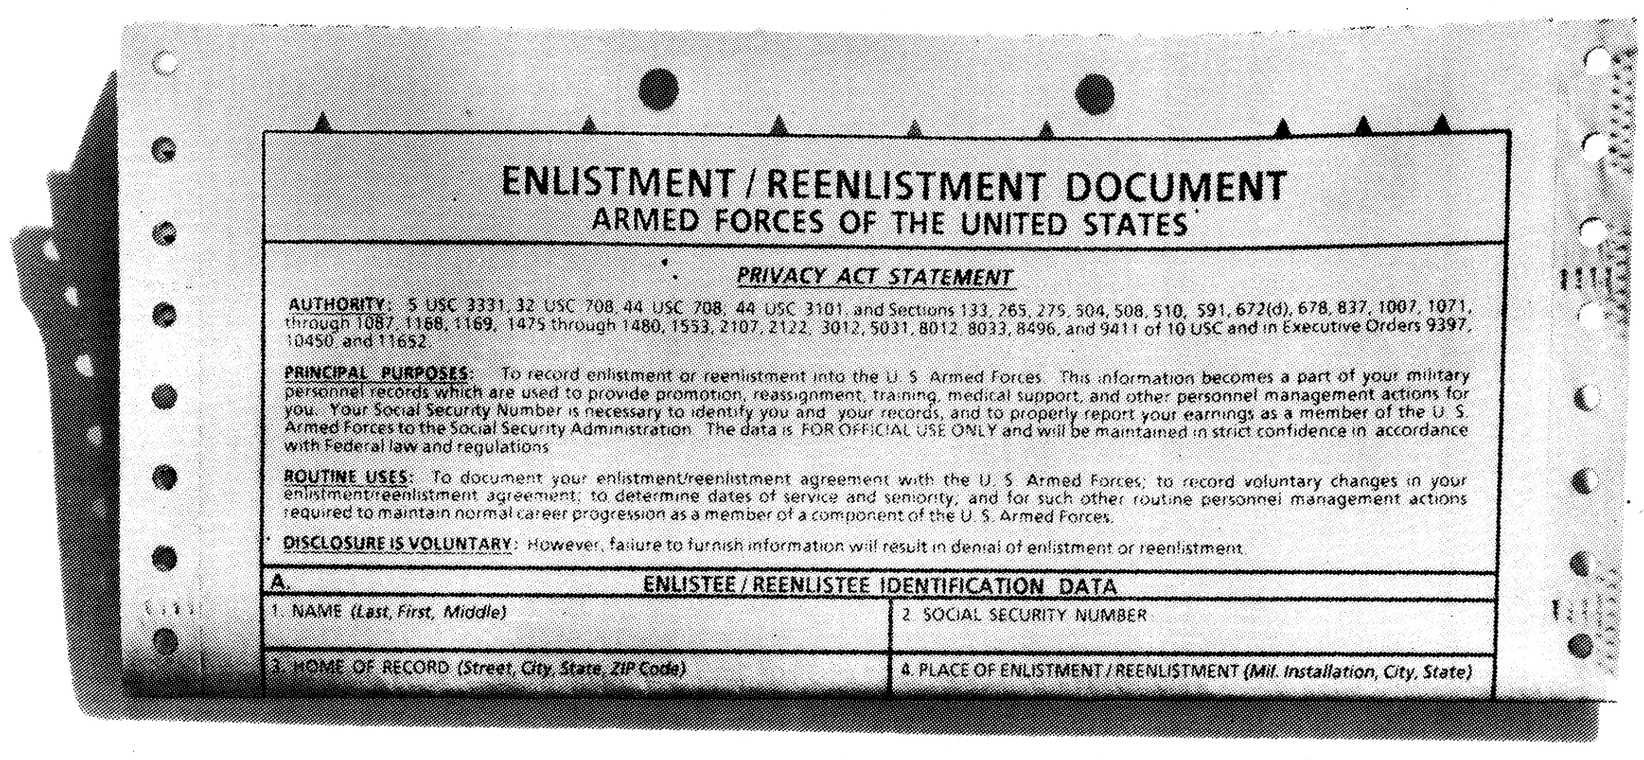
Soldiers from the Infantry Training Brigade took a breather from training recently to enjoy the company of friends and family members.

More than 740 people joined to celebrate the brigade's mission as trainer of today's infantrymen during the Spring Formal at the Columbus Iron Works April 20.

Between dinner and dancing, guest speaker, Maj. Gen. John W. Hendrix, commanding general, spoke about the role the Infantry Training Brigade plays in training soldiers. According to Hendrix, the U.S. Army has the best (noncommissioned officer) corps in the world.



"You are a source of amazement to people of other armies," Hendrix said, while speaking to the noncommissioned officers.

Infantry Training Brigade Command Sgt. Maj. Gary J. Hurley commented on Hendrix's speech.

"(It was) very appropriate that Maj. Gen. Hendrix recognized the efforts of all NCOs in the success of their units and in the lives of young soldiers, while at the same time making it clear that the drill sergeant is not the only important facet of the Infantry Training Brigade," he said.

Music was provided by the band Chaz from Atlanta, Ga.

Focus group to help plan Army of future

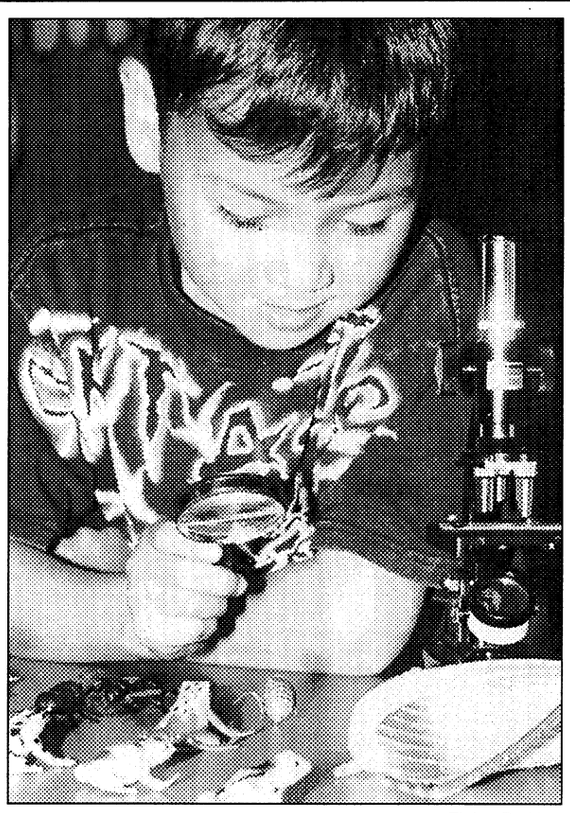
Family Unit Network

Various Fort Benning community members will have the opportunity to help design the installation of the future.

Representatives from Headquarters, Department of the Army, will be at Fort Benning May 29 to conduct a Quality of LIfe Focus Group Symposium as part of Army Chief of Staff General Dennis J. Reimer's campaign to improve quality of life for soldiers and their families.

The symposium, which will be at the Fort Benning Officers' Club, will consist of four focus groups that will discuss and prioritize Army quality-of-life services and programs they feel should be for the 21st century.

Groups members, representing all segments of the post's population, will be organized based on years of service: up to six years; seven to 14, and; 15 or more.



Battalion commanders and sergeants major will comprise the fourth group.

Spouses will participate in each of the four groups. Retirees, recruiters and Reserve Officer Training Corps instructors will also participate.

Focus groups will meet in the morning to prioritize programs and services. Group members will present their ideas of the model installation to the HQDA team that afternoon.

The data from the work groups will be taken back to HQDA for analysis. This information will allow senior Army leadership to focus resources on those items deemed most important to soliders and families.

ask the judge

By Rick Parker
Office of the Staff Judge Advocate

Q: I recently had a permanent change of station to Fort Benning, and I will have to rent an apartment off post because housing officials said it would be nine months before we would come up for quarters. I've found a place I like, and the landlord is offering anywhere from a three-month to 12-month lease. The 12-month lease is the cheapest, but I'm afraid that I'll get quarters before the 12-months are up. Can you give me any guidance on this?

A: This is a recurring problem we see in the Legal Assistance Division, because, as a rule, landlords off post will not let you break your lease just because you get quarters. There are only two ways to terminate a lease early without penalty.

First, if you receive PCS orders or temporary duty orders in excess of 90 days, Georgia law requires that the landlord allow termination with 30 days' written notice from you along with a copy of the orders, and no penalty can be charged. Notice that this only applies to PCS and TDY; it does not apply to getting quarters or expiration term .

Second, you can terminate early if your lease contract specifically gives you the right to do so. That is, early termination must be in the lease in writing. Many leases have provision for early termination, but most impose a penalty of some sort for doing so (forfeiture of security deposit, or payment of one month's rent over and above the rent you pay for the time you are actually there).

These types of penalties are fully enforceable even though the landlord rents the apartment to another person the day after you move out.

If you are going to be in the situation you have described, you should discuss this fully with the landlord before you sign the lease and reach an agreement about it.

If the landlord says that he or she will let you out early without penalty, insist that it be in writing as part of the lease. Oral promises or agreements do not work.

If the landlord is unwilling to agree to early termination without penalty, you have only three choices: take a shorter term lease at the higher rental rate; take the long term lease and gamble that you won't get called for quarters; or, don't rent from that landlord.

The Legal Assistance Division has attorneys available to advise you concerning these issues. If possible, before signing a lease, see about making an appointment to see one of our attorneys to review the proposed lease with you. The Legal Assistance Division telephone number is 545-3281.

reflections

The following poem taken from "The Moral Compass," Simon and Schuster Publishers and edited by William J. Bennett, allows our minds to see a significant life moment for a mother and her child.

"When Mother Reads Aloud"

When mother reads aloud, the past seems real as every day;
I hear the tramp of armies vast,
I see the spears and lances cast, I join the thrilling fray.
Brave knights and ladies fair and proud
I meet when mother reads aloud.
When mother reads aloud, far lands seem very near and true;
I cross the deserts' gleaming sands,
Or hunt the jungle's prowling bands, Or sail the ocean blue.
Far heights, whose peaks the cold mists shroud,
I scale when mother reads aloud.
When mother reads aloud, I long for noble deeds to do —
To help the right, redress the wrong;
It seems too easy to be strong, ...So simple to be true. Oh, thick and fast the visions crowd my eyes, when mother reads aloud.

There are many significant moments as a mother nurtures the body, mind and soul of a child. This moment, however, when a mother reads a story to her child, illustrates three influences that nurture the imagination.

First, the little one feels safe to let the mind wander, to see "the story." The mother provides a sanctuary for feelings and thoughts to enter a different place, the place of guided imagination.

Second, the moment of story reading can inspire wonder and joy that buttress the child's self esteem and self worth. No matter the circumstances of the day, "far lands seem very near and true." Finally, truth and values, "noble deeds to do," are instilled in the child's life. The vision beyond the moment sets the stage for the little one to do the right thing in the years to come.

Varied and many are the loving tasks of a mother for her child, but the reading of stories to a child is a most precious event.

Believers honor Christ's ascension

By Chip Huey
2nd Battalion, 58th Infantry Regiment

Ascension Day is the annual commemoration by the Christian church of the ascension of Christ.

According to Acts 1: 1-11, Jesus departed our world by elevating into the sky and disappearing into the clouds. This is known as Jesus' ascension. The same text states that this event took place 40 days after he rose from the dead.

During the third and early fourth centuries A.D., the Christian church celebrated Christ's ascension and Pentecost together. However, by the late fourth century, the church separated the two holy days. The commemoration of Jesus' ascension was known, logically, as Ascension Day.

Ascension Day was celebrated approximately 40 days after Easter or on the fifth Thursday after Easter. That tradition continues today.

SOUTHEASTERN FOOTBALL LEAGUE

Stars fall in division championship

By John Peeler
Special to The Bayonet©

The Columbus Stars suffered a tough 13-6 loss to the Albany Warriors May 4 in the Southeastern Football League semi-finals played at Hugh Mills Stadium in Albany.

The loss ended the season for the Stars and propelled Albany to the championship game to defend their championship title.

The Stars were in high spirits as the entire team, hand-in-hand, took the field for the opening coin toss.

From the opening possession, it was apparent the game would be a defensively fought, low scoring game, with both teams being unable to move the ball.

The Stars would be first getting into scoring position with a punt return of 25 yards by returner Alvin Humber.

The Stars went to work with the ball on the 46-yard line. Running back Eddie Mitchell fought for a run of 7 yards against the Warriors' tough defense followed by a 2-yard run by running back Albert Tate. On third and one, Mitchell ripped off another run of 7 yards putting the ball on the 30-yard line.

The Warriors' defense tightened up, holding the Stars' offense to no yards on three consecutive plays forcing a field goal attempt.

Place kicker Vernon Loree split the uprights giving the Stars a 3-0 lead with the first half winding down.

On the ensuing kickoff, the Warriors, who were unable to gain ground on the Stars earlier in the game, put together a nine-play scoring drive covering 59 yards.

The point after attempt was no good, and the Warriors took the lead 6-3 with less than three minutes left to play in the half.

The Stars would be unable to move the ball as the Warriors took over possession on downs to end the half.

As the second half started, mental mistakes started to plague the Stars when on the third play from scrimmage, Mitchell fumbled the ball on the Warriors' 44-yard line.

Game turning point

PLAY: With less than 2 minutes remaining in regulation play, the Warrior defense stripped Stars running back Cordell Johnson of the ball. Warrior linebacker Rickey Galloway scooped up the ball and rambled 37 yards to the Stars 10 yard line.

RESULT: Two plays later, Warrior quarterback Tony Richardson hit receiver Tommy Raines in the corner of the end zone for the go-ahead score.

The Warriors took possession of the ball and two plays later, Warriors wide receiver Ken Conner fumbled to ball back into possession of the Stars after a 40-yard pass completion.

The Stars would gain only 22 yards on seven plays before having to punt the ball back to the Warriors.

The Stars' defense took over the line of scrimmage, controlling the point of attack while holding the Warriors to minus 4 yards on three plays.

After a poor punt, the Stars took possession of the ball on the Warriors' 37-yard line.

The Stars' offense methodically moved the ball down to the 1-yard line and looked to be going in to score when a holding penalty cost them 10 yards, moving them back to the 11-yard line.

The Stars would not recover from the penalty and would settle for a 13-yard chip shot by Loree to knot the score at 6-6.

Both teams defense would continue to dominate for the remainder of the third and fourth quarter, and it appeared the game was heading for overtime.

The Stars would have one more legitimate shot at winning the game with less than three minutes remaining on the clock.

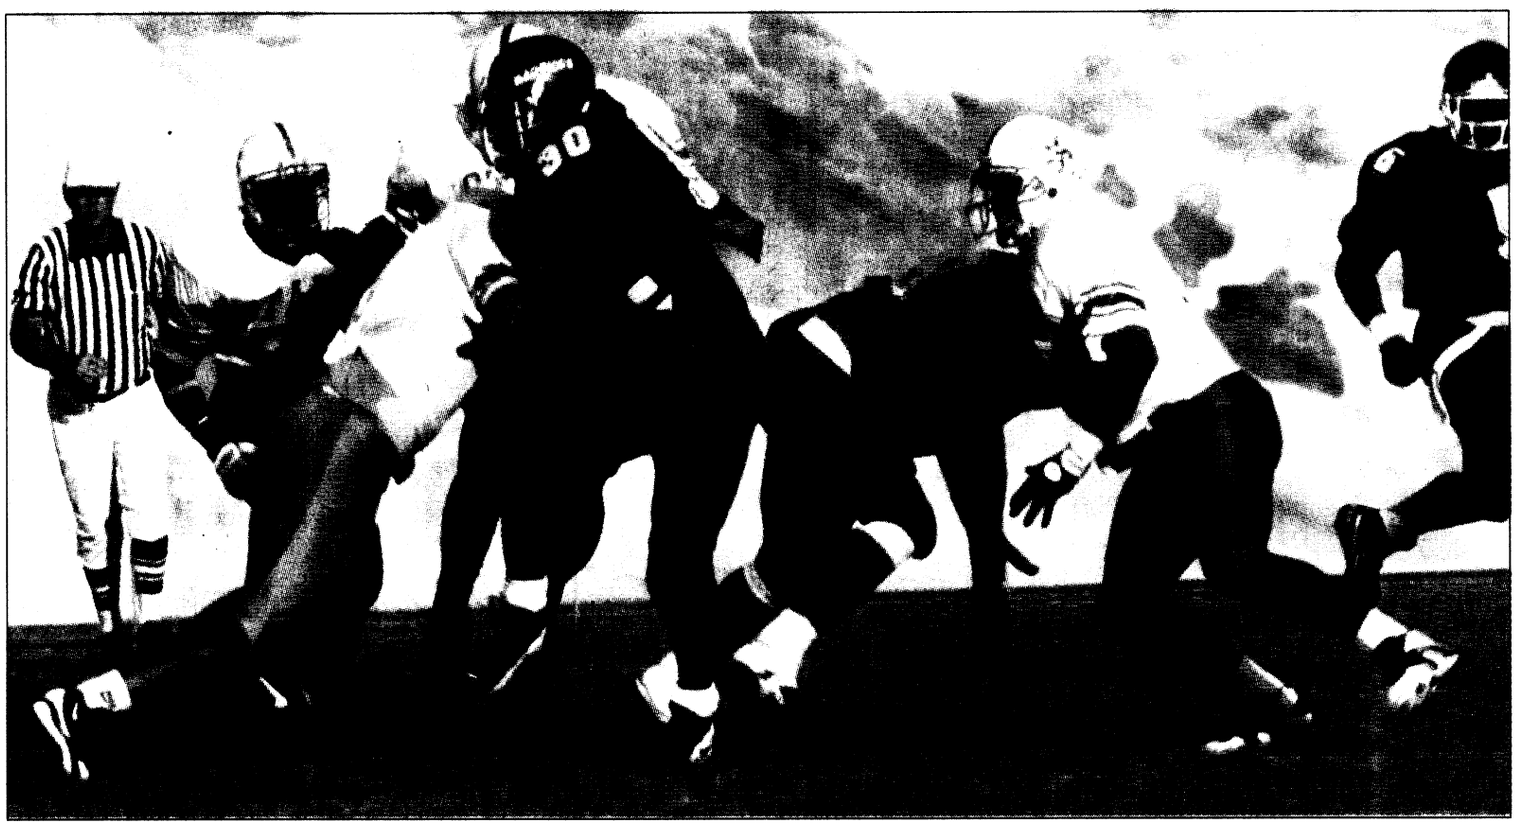
Taking over possession of the ball on the Warriors' 48-yard line, the offense went to work.

Eddie Mitchell popped off runs of 8, 21 and 1 yards moving the ball down to the Warriors' 18-yard line with two minutes left in the game.

On the first play from scrimmage after the two-minute warning, running back Cordell Johnson coughed up the ball with the swarming Warriors defense recovering on the Warriors' 25-yard line.

The Stars' defense would hold the Warriors' offense forcing a punt, giving the Stars another shot at a score with less than one minute remaining in the game.

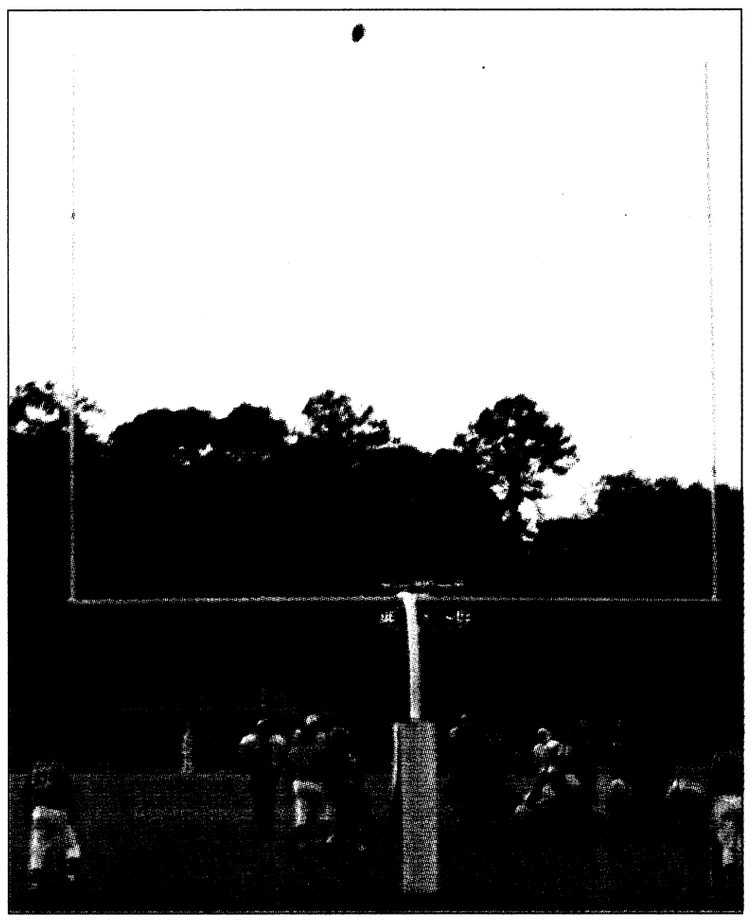
On the first play from scrimmage, the swarming Warriors caused another fumble with Warrior Rickey Galloway catching the ball in stride and rambling 37 yards down to the Stars' 10-yard line.



Two plays later, Warriors quarterback Tony Richardson hit wide receiver Tommy Raines on a fade route for the touchdown and a Warrior 12 6 lead.

The point-after attempt was good and the Warriors led the game with 25 seconds remaining.

The Stars' offense took the field after the kickoff with 15 seconds on the clock.



After two hail-mary passes, the Stars' dream for a divisional title and an opportunity to play for the championship had ended.

After the game, players and coaches were turning their thoughts toward next season.

SOA professor competes at Senior Olympics

By Judith O'Toole
School of the Americas

Five gold medals and a silver medal in one day? With the flu?

April 27, at the Alabama State Senior Olympics in Montgomery, Ala., Dr. Russell Ramsey did just that.

Ramsey, the School of the Americas' resident civilian professor, has competed in Senior Olympic competition for the past 11 years.

He said he usually swims in both the Georgia and Alabama games, but this year the Georgia Senior Olympics were canceled because of the 1996 Summer Olympic Games in Atlanta. Although he had the flu during the Alabama event, he was able to do it and said sometimes you just have to "gut it out."

The events that Ramsey took first place in were the 200-yard individual medley and backstroke, and the 100-yard breaststroke, backstroke and butterfly.

He also won a second-place medal for the 400-yard freestyle.

He said he was happy with his performances, which equaled his 1991 and 1992 time in the same meet, but younger age group.

"I can usually beat younger people at distance events," Ramsey said. "But the shorter distances are hard on my shoulders."

He wins about five national events a year and took second place at last year's Iron Man Pentathlon in the 60-to-64 age group.

He said he wasn't sick the day of that race, like he was for the games in Alabama.

Ramsey said he swims to promote his fitness.

Competing gives him a goal to shoot for and he is looking forward to being part of SOA's swimming team during Military Appreciation Week this month.

Navy wins men's title

By Stephen Barrett
American Forces Press Service

WASHINGTON—A balanced scoring attack and tough man-to-man defense paced Navy to the 1996 armed forces men's basketball championship at Camp Lejeune, N.C., recently.

Using double-figure performances from five players, Navy (3-0) captured the 1996 hoop title with a 87-72 victory over Air Force (2-2). Marine Corps (1-2) finished third, while Army (0-2)—the defending champions—finished last. This year the tournament was a double elimination competition.

Navy coach Chief Warrant Officer Bernard Boston said victory this year came from lessons learned in 1995, when Army's 111-106 win showed him areas Navy needed to improve.

"You always try to learn from the past and prevent [mistakes] from happening again," said Boston, assigned at the Naval Air Station in Brunswick, Maine. "We saw we had to select talented players who were coachable, then prepare them physically for 40 fast-paced minutes a game."

"We hit Air Force with a press every time we scored a bucket, and we kept that up the entire [championship] game," he said. "If they got the ball across midcourt, they saw man-to-man pressure all the way to the basket. They didn't get a defensive break, and eventually that caused turnovers we used to win the game."

Navy opened an eight-point halftime lead at 40-32. Petty Officer 1st Class Gerald Rooks (Naval Reserve Personnel Center, New Orleans) dominated first-half play for Navy, scoring 10 of his 14 points in the opening period. He also blocked two shots and grabbed six rebounds.

Air Force trailed only 18-16 after the first 10 minutes as Staff Sgt. Mark Forbes (Hurlburt Field, Fla.) battled Rooks under the boards. Forbes scored nine of his team-high 16 points in the opening period and got help from forwards Capt. Steven Warrior (Offutt Air Force Base, Neb.) and Senior Airman Troy Miles (Keesler Air Force Base, Miss.). While leading the defense, Johnson also paced Navy's offense. He canned three three-pointers and scored 17 of his game-high 19 points in the second period.

While Rooks continued to control the backboards, Navy got inside help from Petty Officer 3rd Class John Jackson of San Diego Naval Base. The 6-foot-5-inch forward grabbed seven rebounds, blocked a shot and scored 11 of his 15 points — most in the final minutes.

In winning the championship, Navy first bounced Army 98-89, then upended Air Force 70-67 in the semifinals. Air Force beat Marine Corps twice, winning its opening game 102-77, then eliminating the Marines in the tournament semifinals, 107-87.

After the tournament, the armed forces sports committee selected its players for the 1996 Conseil International du Sport Militaire tournament at Fort Hood, Texas, later this month. Boston will coach the squad.

Despite losing its only two games, Army placed four players on the squad: Sgt. Carl Curry of Fort Sill, Okla.; Sgt. Lee Brown of Fort Clayton, Panama; Spc. Cedric Dennis of Wuerzburg, Germany, and Pfc. Kaylon Green of Fort Riley, Kan.

Army added two Fort Hood soldiers to the CISM squad. Spc. Eric McLaughlin, unavailable for the 1996 armed forces tournament due to an injury, earned a slot on the players' roster. McLaughlin paced the 1995 U.S. CISM basketball team to a silver medal at the 1995 World Military Games in Rome. Spc. Carl Sheppard will assist Russell as a trainer.

Tournament Games Air Force 102, Marine Corps 77 Navy 98, Army 89 Marine Corps 103, Army 96 (Army eliminated) Navy 70, Air Force 67 Air Force 107, Marine Corps 87 (Marines eliminated) Navy 87, Air Force 72 (Air Force eliminated).

Army women win third team title

By Stephen Barrett
American Forces Press Service

WASHINGTON—Army bombed Air Force 60-38 and cruised to its third straight armed forces women's basketball title at Memphis Naval Air Station, Tenn.

Navy (2-2) claimed third place in the double-elimination tournament, losing an 80-61 decision to Air Force (2-2) in the consolation bracket final. Marine Corps (0-2) took fourth.

Paced by Spc. Tammy Brown of Bamberg, Germany, Army (3-0) broke a 21-21 halftime tie to win the basketball title. Brown, who nailed four three-pointers in the championship game, canned 12 of her game-high 21 points in the first period. She continued her hot shooting with nine second half points.

Spc. Demetria Barr (Fort Hood, Texas) and Pfc. Sylvia Cummings (Kaiserslautern, Germany) combined for 14 second half points as the Army forwards dominated the backboards. Barr scored nine of her 11 points in the final period, while Cummings tallied half of her 10 points in the second half.

Staff Sgt. Terry Crumpler (Peterson Air Force Base, Colo.) paced Air Force with 12 points. Senior Airman Tracy Kinton (Vandenberg Air Force Base, Calif.) added nine points.

Defeated by Army 66-46 earlier in the tournament, Air Force kept the championship game close through the first half. Crumpler and Kinton played solid defense against the Army front court of Cummings, Barr and Staff Sgt. Gail Potts (SHAPE, Belgium), limiting them to five first half points. While playing well defensively, Crumpler and Kinton also combined for 14 of Air Force's 21 first half points.

However, while Air Force controlled the front court during the first 20 minutes, Army dominated the second half. Cummings, Potts and Staff Sgt. Cassandra Howard (Fort Hood) limited Air Force forwards to 11 second half points and controlled the offensive boards, leading to many easy Army layups.

Army placed seven players on the all-armed forces basketball squad. Besides Barr, Potts, Cummings, Brown and Howard, Army added Spc. Sharon Lyons (Fort Hood) and Pfc. Tracye Coursey (Fort Bragg, N.C.) to the 13-member team. Army head coach Sgt. 1st Class Johnnie Pickett (Fort Hood) also earned an all-tournament slot.

Three Marines and three Navy players also earned spots. Pacing the Marine Corps entries were Cpl. Linda Richmond of Camp Lejeune, N.C.; Sgt. Carlotta Moore of Marine Corps Base, Hawaii, and Cpl. Trinia Allen of Marine Corps Air Station Iwakuni, Japan.

Earning Navy slots were Petty Officer 2nd Class Ammie Harris of Cherry Point Marine Corps Air Station, N.C.; Petty Officer 3rd Class Rhonda Thompkins of Dahlgren Naval Surface Warfare Center, Va., and Seaman Shenita Waddle of North Island Naval Air Station, Calif.

Tournament Results Army 66, Air Force 46 Navy 67, Marine Corps 53 Army 65, Navy 64 Air Force 76, Marine Corps 42 (Marines eliminated) Air Force 80, Navy 61 (Navy eliminated) Army 60, Air Force 38 (Air Force eliminated)

Army women capture armed forces bowling championships

By Stephen Barrett
American Forces Press Service

WASHINGTON—Air Force Maj. Mark Seifert and Army Command Sgt. Maj. Debra Smith captured overall titles at the armed forces bowling championships. Nearly 50 bowlers competed in the four-day event recently at Fort Jackson, S.C.

Seifert, stationed at Scott Air Force Base, Ill., averaged 205 in winning the 1995 combined championship. That pace was 1.5 pins better than Army Sgt. 1st Class Ray Porritt of Fort Sam Houston, Texas.

Smith easily captured the women's crown, rolling a 199.2 average in claiming the title. The Fort Huachuca, Ariz., soldier cruised to a 10-pin victory over teammate Maj. Debra Riefflin of Army's Military District of Washington. Riefflin was also the runner-up in 1995.

Navy took the men's overall bowling championship, followed by Army, Air Force and Marine Corps. Army captured the women's overall team title, followed by Air Force, Navy and Marine Corps.

In singles competition, Navy Master Chief Petty Officer Bev Brennan of Barbers Point Naval Air Station, Hawaii, took the women's competition. Brennan averaged 205.5 in beating Smith. Anthony grabbed the men's singles competition, averaging nearly 216 pins per game. This was more than nine pins per game better than Navy Petty Officer 3rd Class Michael Cowles (Naval Medical Center, San Diego). Frederick took third, followed by Marine Corps Staff Sgt. Bill Eckley (Marine Corps Air Station, Iwakuni, Japan) and Porritt.

Riefflin and Anthony combined to capture the mixed doubles title with nearly a 203 average. Their win was more than five pins per game better than Navy's Chief Petty Officer Dee Foust (Sasebo Fleet Activity, Japan) and Petty Officer 1st Class John Pangburn (Miramar Naval Air Station, Calif.). Siefert and Air Force Capt. Patricia Fox (Tyndall Air Force Base, Fla.) took third.

In women's doubles, Smith and Riefflin combined for a 193.3 average to take the event. Army teammates Capt. Madeline Bondy (Fort Knox, Ky.) and Sgt. 1st Class Karen Mayfield (Fort Story, Va.) took second place, with third going to the Air Force team of Coy and Staff Sgt. Karen Clacken (Brooks).

Siefert and Master Sgt. Steve Bergan (Scott Base) teamed to win the men's doubles title. The duo combined for 2,555 pins—an average of 212.9. The Navy pair of Frederick and Cowles took second, followed by Pangburn and Petty Officer 2nd Class Robert Bozarth (Long Beach, Calif.).

Porritt and Anthony helped Army men take their one-day team event. The two combined with Sgt. 1st Class Tony Szeluga (Fort Campbell, Ky.), Sgt. Alton Betts (Fort Hood, Texas), Staff Sgt. Clark Blosser (Tripler Army Medical Center, Hawaii) and Chief Warrant Officer Danny Berardi (Wiesbaden, Germany) for the title.

Each competitor rolled six games per event, with individual scores from all events combined to decide the overall champions.

Line, hooks take heavy abuse

By Earl Bentz & Steve Price
Outboard Marine Corporation

Bass anglers have long been taught to check their lines often for possible fraying when fishing in heavy cover, but professional tournament pros like Tom Mann Jr. also check their lure hooks, too, and may replace them nightly during a week of competition.

"Hooks can get dulled quickly, especially when you're fishing around rocks," said Mann, a former guide on Georgia's Lake Lanier and fishing pro. 'Instead of trying to sharpen all the barbs on two or three treble hooks, it's easier to just replace the hooks."

"If I have a favorite crankbait I'm using all day, I'll put new hooks on it each night."

Mann also checks the split rings on his lures where he ties his line. Occasionally these may stretch or begin to open, especially when he uses one of the non-stretch braided lines.

"It will surprise many anglers to learn how much abuse their lures really take during a day of fishing," Mann said. "Most of the time, all that is readily noticeable is when paint gets chipped, but the hooks and split rings really need to be checked after each day on the water, too."

Mann also pays particular attention to his fishing rods, since the high-modulus graphite materials used in many rods today seldom show visible cracks or fractures.

"Whenever you pull with a rod very hard, you stress it," the pro said. "This is particularly true when you snag a lure on a log or limb and try to pull it free.

"When I do stress a rod like this, I reach up and bend the tip, and listen for cracking. If I hear anything, this is a pretty good indication the rod has already been cracked and will soon break, so I stop using it."

Mann also said rods get damaged during rough boat rides. When he knows he's in for a long, bouncing ride through waves, he makes certain his rods are strapped securely on his casting deck so they don't bounce around.

He also puts the extra rods in his boat's rod locker in individual tubes that protect them from each other.

"When rods get bounced around inside a rod locker, something as simple as a heavy Carolina rig lead weight on one rod can crack another rod," Mann said, "and rod guides easily get bent or broken. All these problems are easy to prevent by putting the rods in individual protective cases or tubes."

To keep his reels operating smoothly, the Georgia pro sprays them with a cleaner once each month.

He pays particular attention to the exposed worm gear that controls the line guide.

"I spray it thoroughly with a cleaner, blow out the grit, and then re-lubricate it," he said.

"Just a little maintenance like this will keep the reel running smoothly for a long, long time."

Public Notice

PURSUANT TO THE NATIONAL PRESERVATION ACT OF 1966 (AS AMENDED) ADVISORY COUNCIL ON HISTORIC PRESERVATION REGULATION 36 CER § 800.5 (e)(3) Proposed Demolition of Buildings 90 and 227 Fort Benning GA

Fort Benning proposes to demolish Buildings 90 and 227, which are part of the Fort Benning Main Post HIstoric District nominated to the National Register of Historic Places. Building 90 is a movie theater and Building 227 is an enlisted soldiers club constructed in 1939 and 1932, respectively. A new "ten-plex" theater replacing Building 90 will be constructed in the near future. A new enlisted soldiers club replacing Building 227 has already been constructed. No future missions for building 90 and 227 are currently planned nor are missions for these structured anticipated. Government estimates for maintaining or preserving Buildings 90 and 227 in their present or past use is in excess of $1.6 and $1 million, respectively. Fort Benning does not consider it to be in the best interest of the public to continue to utilize scarce resources for the continued maintenance and uneconomical repair of structures for which there is no mission. Any questions or comments regarding this proposal can be referred to: Commander, US Army Infantry Center ATTN: ATZB-PWN-P (Mr. Larry R. Jones) Bldg. 6, Meloy Hall, (Room 415) Fort Benning, GA 31905-5122. Written comments must be received no later than (THIRTY DAYS FROM THE INITIAL PUBLICATION OF THIS NOTICE.)

EXCELLENCE

Post receives ACOE award

By Brian R. Voller
Bayonet staff writer

Continuous Army excellence was rewarded when representatives from Fort Benning made a trip to Washington D.C., May 8, 9 and 10 to receive an award for this year's Army Community of Excellence competition.

Col. Richard L. Rutledge, garrison commander, accepted the ACOE bowl for the Chief of Staff award for being the best large Army installation in the nation. This marks the fourth consecutive year that Fort Benning has brought back a trophy from the competition, including two straight years winning the Commander-in-Chief award for best installation in the world.

Sgt. Maj. Steven J. Chittum, garrison sergeant major, said it is important for Fort Benning to do well in ACOE competition because of the past victories the community has won.

"Fort Benning has traditionally had a very active quality about it," Chittum said. "We've been very fortunate that we have won some victories on several occasions.

"As the Army continues to downsize and changes are implemented; and the Army begins to work with the Malcom Baldridge criteria, we as the number one Army installation in the world, have an obligation to continue to put our best foot forward and continue to be a pace setter for the rest of the installations."

Chittum also said Fort Benning's commitment to excellence, its quality of life and its commitment to customer service is what keeps bringing victories to the post in the ACOE competition.

Because of its past performance in the ACOE competition, Fort Benning has become one of the top installations in the world. Maj. Gen. John W. Hendrix, post commander, said Fort Benning is one of the premier installations because of the teamwork the soldiers and community put forth.

"There are a number of things that make Fort Benning one of the premier installations," Hendrix said. "Fort Benning is a complicated organization, with a diverse mission. But the one thing that puts Fort Benning at the top is teamwork. In any organization teamwork is the deciding factor. You either rise or fail because of the teamwork involved.

> "Fort Benning is a complicated organization, with a diverse mission. But the one thing that puts Fort Benning at the top is teamwork."
> — Maj. Gen. John Hendrix
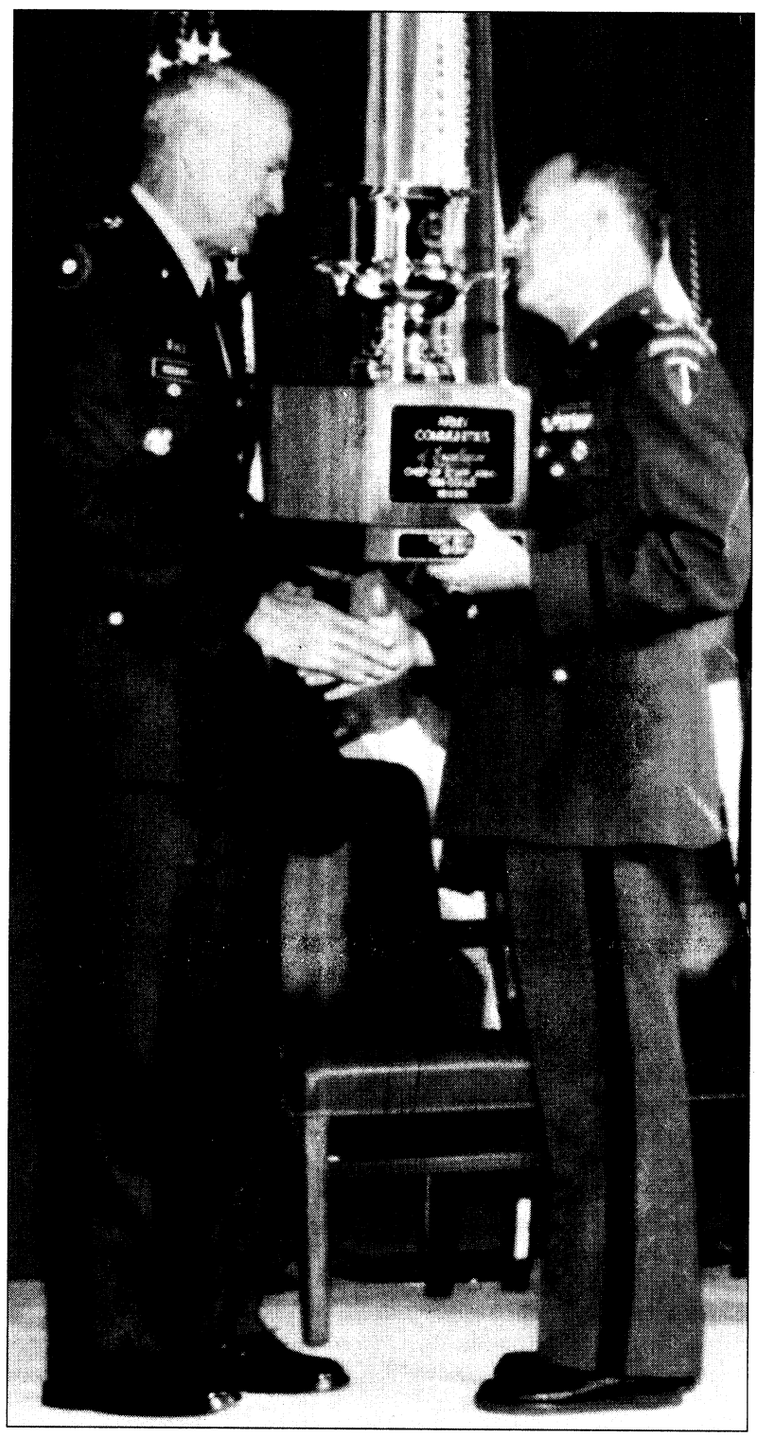
> Commanding General

"We all have about equal ability, the difference is in those who commit themselves to achieving and not just settling for marginal or average performance and working together as a team."



Hendrix said the next step in the ACOE competition is to continue with the teamwork and positive attitudes, but also to improve the attention to detail that comes with the competition.

"What we're doing now is something that is just a little bit different," Hendrix said. "The rules have changed a little bit, so now we talk about continuous improvement. The one thing we have to do in the future is we have to find the specific and precise ways to improve in our different areas of the mission.

"We have to get down to crossing the T's and dotting the I's."

This years competition was changed from the way the competition was conducted in the past. Maj. Gen. Frank L. Miller, assistant chief of staff for installation management said the changes were made to improve Army installations even more.

"When ACOE first started out people likened it to painting rocks and painting yellow stuff on the streets," Miller said. "But I never saw a bad unit that looked good. If a unit is good it's going to look the part. So ACOE matured over time to adopt total army quality and the Malcolm Baldridge criteria."

Roy Newman/TASC

Gen. Dennis J. Reimer presents the Chief of Staff award to Col. Richard L. Rutledge, garrison commander, at the ACOE awards ceremony at the Pentagon.

Miller said the use of the Malcolm Baldridge criteria allows the Army to do things the best way possible and it allows the Army to provide the goods and services to the community in the best way possible.

After four wins in a row for Fort Benning, Hendrix said the one thing he feels the most is pride in the installation, the people and the Army.

"I'm proud because when you see people work hard toward a goal and then win, that is what life is all about," Hendrix said. "We have a lot of people who work awfully hard at Fort Benning, soldiers of all grades and civilians, and to see them work so hard and commit to something and then win that's what it's all about at Fort Benning and the Army."

Enrollees register for Tricare Prime

By Douglas J. Gillert
American Forces Press Service

WASHINGTON — Thousands more than expected have signed up for Tricare Prime, the top option under Department of Defense's new Managed Health Care Program.

This comes under the "good news, bad news" category for DoD officials. It was good so many wanted to participate, but it slowed processing procedures.

In the first few months of enrollment in the Pacific Northwest's Region 11, the first of 12 Tricare regions to begin operations, enrollment surpassed what was expected the first year.

"That caused some administrative delays that frustrated some enrollees," said Stephen Joseph, assistant secretary of defense for Health Affairs. "Then the same thing occurred in Region 6 [Arkansas, Louisiana, Oklahoma and Texas].

"These were growing pains," Joseph said. "Once we realized the popularity of Tricare Prime, we were able to adjust. On a scale of one to 10, I give Tricare an eight."

Of course, Joseph wants and anticipates higher scores as the program develops and expands to all regions, including Europe — where a modified version of Tricare aided the Bosnia deployment — and the Pacific.

DoD began Tricare to counter rising health care costs and the impact of base closures and fewer military hospitals. Active duty members and their families, non-Medicare eligible retirees and their families and survivors qualify.

Tricare is a managed health-care plan formed through a partnership of military medics with civilian contractors. Besides cutting costs, it was designed to improve access to care, quality of care and medical readiness.

Three levels of care are available as enrollment options:

• Prime — Similar to a civilian health maintenance organization that serves as a central source for all health needs. All active duty service members will be enrolled in Prime and receive most of their health care from military medics. Active duty personnel and their families enroll at no charge; retirees pay an annual fee of $230 or $460 per family.

• Extra — No enrollment. People using this option can choose any health-care provider. If they use an authorized network provider, they receive a 5 percent discount from Tricare Standard cost shares after paying the annual Civilian Health and Medical Program of the Uniformed Services deductible.

• Standard—New name for standard CHAMPUS. Users pay CHAMPUS deductibles and cost shares and abide by CHAMPUS rules.

Joseph said he hopes everyone will see the benefit of selecting the Prime option.

"In my mind, the greatest reason for enrolling in Prime is the $11-per-day cost for hospitalization," he said. He compared that to $25 or more a day for active duty members and their families admitted to civilian hospitals, and up to $330 retirees have to pay under Tricare Standard and CHAMPUS rules.

Joseph said he is frustrated, however, by Congress' inaction on allowing Medicare eligible beneficiaries over the age of 65 to enroll. Under current law, the military cannot be reimbursed by Medicare for care provided the over-65 population.

"We've been fighting this battle a long time, and I respect the patience of that group of people in waiting for congressional action on this. Not allowing them into Tricare is a big frustration and credibility buster," Joseph said.

Both houses currently are considering changing the law, Joseph said.

"Until they change the law, we will continue to treat our over-65 segment on a space-available basis."

Unfortunately, space in military medical facilities could become even scarcer. Some members of Congress have assailed military peacetime health care, saying costs

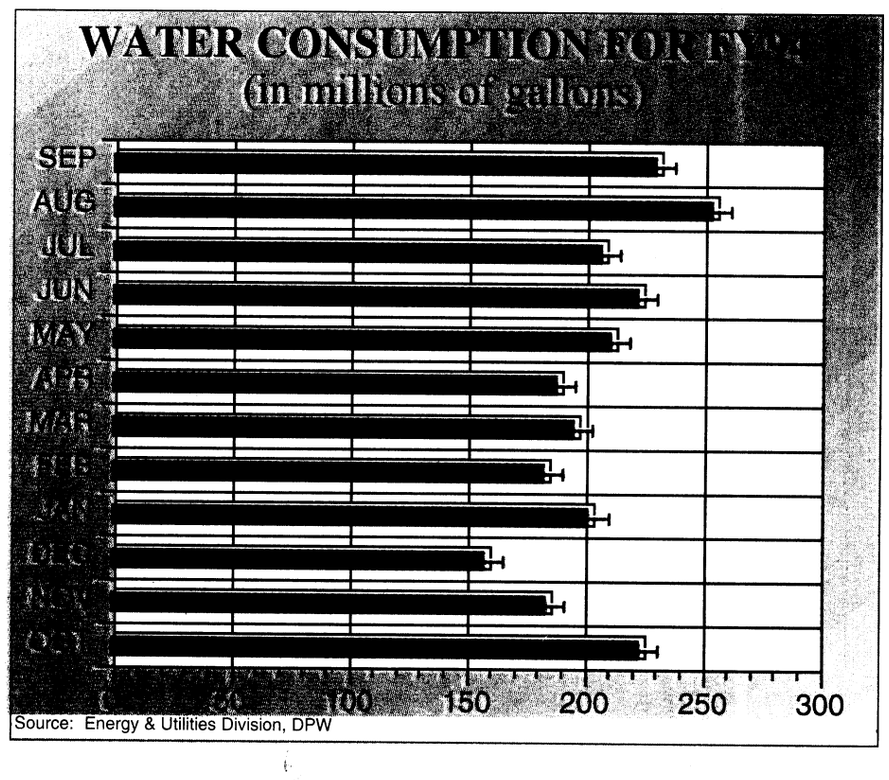
Pipe burst curtails post's water usage

By Lori Egan
Bayonet staff writer

Post residents were asked to limit water use for essential purposes only May 10 and Saturday until noon because of a burst water main.

Residents were asked to use water only for drinking and flushing toilets. They were asked not to water lawns, wash cars and to postpone non-essential tasks like washing clothes and dishes.

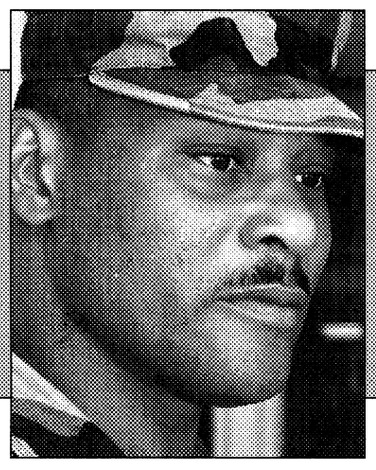


A broken pipe at the water intake site near Upatoi Creek flooded the raw water pump structure with 46,000 gallons of water, shorted out an electrical panel and submerged the three pumps responsible for drawing water from the Upatoi.

"The main problem was getting the pumps back on line after we pumped the water from the intake site," Col. Dave Brown, director of Public Works, said.

"Fort Benning normally uses about 8 to 10 million gallons of water a day," Brown said. "This was the first time since I've been here that Fort Benning has lost its ability to bring water in from the Upatoi."

Because there were 1.5 million gallons of water in the treatment facility and 5.5 in holding tanks, officials didn't need to shut down facilities or schools, an idea which had been considered; instead they asked residents to conserve water in case of an emergency.



"The water was pumped out of the raw water pump structure around noon last Friday," Roy Bethel, chief, Energy and Utilities Division, DPW, said. "We are now back to pumping at full capacity." We've pulled the pumps, rewound the motors and are putting in new bearings as a precautionary measure.

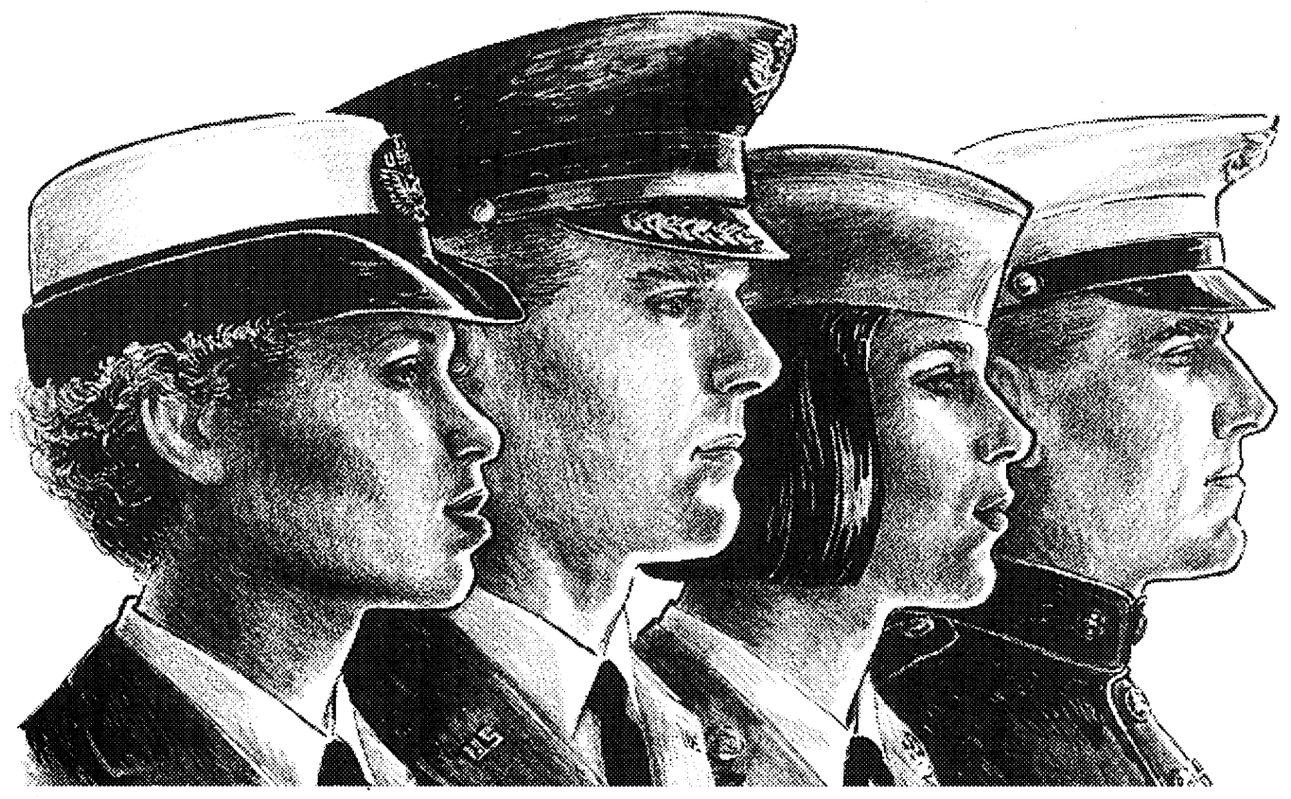
Spc. Jaime A. Testerman, 381st Replacement Battalion — "A lot of people don't respect their armed forces and some education of them on our part about what we do and the sacrifices we make would help the people know what we do and to respect us more."

Retired Staff Sgt. Orian G. Henderson — "I feel that if you think about your forefathers and what they have done to put us in the life and freedom that we have now, we should be able to accept the military and fighting men and women of our country."



Sheila L. Kemp, family member — "By providing family activities for kids and spouses."

Latessa M. Johnson, Child Development Services — "Better pay for active duty (service members) and retirees. Please do not forget about retirees. And better raises because, most of the time, when they get raises, the prices also go up."

Americans honor soldiers who protect their freedom with Armed Forces Day celebration

'Pillars of freedom'

Army News Service

Saturday is Armed Forces Day. On this day, we Americans gather to honor the millions of dedicated and selfless volunteers — military and civilian alike — who now serve in defense of America.

editorial

The tradition began in 1949, when President Harry S. Truman proclaimed the third Saturday in May to be Armed Forces Day — a national observance. On this day each year, Americans now proudly recognize all the armed services of the United States — the Army, the Navy, the Air Force, the Marine Corps and the Coast Guard. Armed Forces Day calls attention to the unity and common purposes shared by the separate military services. Together these services and the men and women who serve in them stand tall. They are the pillars of freedom.

Before 1949, the three largest branches of the armed forces — the Army, the Navy and the Air Force — had held elaborate observances on separate days of the year. President Truman's proclamation of 1949 did not eliminate these individual celebrations.

It did, however, more or less reduce them to commemorations within each service to promote the particular traditions and achievements of that service.

The tradition of Armed Forces Day stretches back 47 years, but the heritage of the military services goes much deeper in time — down to the very roots of this nation.

Now, more than two centuries have passed, and America has grown. America has matured. America has evolved into a powerful country, a leader in the world community of nations. As world history unfolds, it is clear that our armed forces have stood as pillars of freedom not only for America itself, but also for millions of people and many nations all around the world.

Today, many nations strive for democracy. To help them, American soldiers have deployed all over the world, providing food and protection, and carrying out missions of mercy. We Americans wish for all oppressed peoples what we have achieved for ourselves: the blessings of liberty under democratic government.

Having gained so much by our own liberty, it seems only natural that we serve the cause of liberty throughout the world. And indeed, we have done so in so many ways.

Always in the forefront of America's efforts to help the oppressed, the U.S. armed forces have done their part. On the battlefields of Europe, Africa and Asia, they fought for freedom in two world wars. They later carried freedom's light to icy outposts in Korea, then to the jungles of Vietnam and the sands of the Persian Gulf.

Just last year, American troops helped restore liberty to the long-troubled land of Haiti. Less than two years ago, a brutal military regime ruled Haiti — beating, torturing and murdering its citizens. As soon as the military leaders of Haiti learned that America's force for freedom was on the way, they got out of the way. Now, Haiti is democratic, free and more secure than ever before. As President Bill Clinton said recently, "the Haitian people are moving from a dark night of fear to a new day of freedom. Today (they) know why we call the United States The Land of the Free and the Home of the Brave."

Now, once again, American troops stand in harm's way — this time in Bosnia. As part of a North Atlantic Treaty Organization force, their mission is to secure the peace, stop the suffering and build a free and stable Europe. Clinton said, "Bosnia lies at the very heart of Europe, next-door to many of its fragile new democracies and some of our closest allies. Generations of Americans have understood that Europe's freedom and Europe's stability are vital of our own national security."

Keeping America strong is no easy task, but it is a task that must be accomplished. The struggle against terrorism and tyranny simply will not go away by itself. We must be prepared at all times to do battle — using diplomacy whenever possible but using military force if we have to. It's the price we pay for our freedom.

Celebrations like Armed Forces Day certainly are welcomed and appreciated. But the national support our service members need is also an everyday affair. It goes far beyond the recognition and remembrance of our armed forces on two or three holidays during the year. Those who serve in defense of America must know that the American people are behind them each and every day.

No matter how we cut the cake, keeping America strong takes more than soldiers and ships, more than tanks and tactics, more, even, than armed forces willing to stand and deliver. It also requires a commitment.

First it requires a commitment from us, the American people, to keep America strong; finally it requires our commitment to support those who serve in our military services.

Volunteer happy to serve

Members of Company C, 2nd Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment, recently volunteered at the annual Miss Wheelchair Georgia Pageant. After reading the article by Tom Fraley (April 26 edition of The Bayonet), I decided to write.

Volunteering at the pageant was one of the best things I have done while at Fort Benning.

My peers and I went to the pageant not really knowing what being disabled meant. After the festivities, I still do not know exactly what it means.

The ladies we escorted were both young and old. They were very active people who did everything from horseback riding to volunteering at schools to dancing with their escorts at pageants. They are disabled only by the label placed on them by society.

As a volunteer, I learned a lot about myself and others. I was taught how to dance with a lady in a wheelchair. I learned that when talking to someone in a wheelchair, I should kneel, or sit, to bring myself to their level.

Also, I learned that we must not only be aware of these wonderful people and accommodate their needs when necessary, but we should also remember they are very capable and spirited. If ever there was a definition of "Hooah," it would be very close to their spirited nature.

In the future, I hope I will once again get the opportunity to serve as a volunteer. It broadened my horizons and the experience will always be in my memory.

I would like to thank the people of the Miss Wheelchair Georgia Pageant because I am very grateful for being given the opportunity to serve them.

I sincerely hope the Fort Benning and Columbus communities continue to work together to support this excellent organization.

Co. C, 2nd Bn., 11th Inf. Regt.

Red Cross appreciates its volunteers, merchants

The American Red Cross at Fort Benning would like to thank all of its volunteers for a job well done. We would also like to thank the following merchants for door prize donations for our awards ceremony: Dale's Hallmark Shop, Foodmax, Master Cuts, China Star, the Post Exchange, the Fort Benning Flower Shop and Goo Goo Car Wash.

Your support is greatly appreciated and is indicative of the cooperative spirit that exists in our tri-community.

Officer Candidate School receives

$45,000 Donation

By Jacqué Hill
Special to The Bayonet©

A New York philanthropist recently donated more than $44,000 to the Officer Candidate School.

Hugh Trumbull Adams of New York City, donated $44,820 to Fort Benning's Officer Candidate School, 3rd Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment.

According to Lt. Col. Scott L Armbrister, battalion commander, retired Col. Frank Huray, a former OCS graduate, knew Adams and requested the contribution from him. Adams agreed to donate the money mainly for the purpose of renovating the OCS Hall of Fame at Wigle Hall, among a few other purposes, according to Armbrister.

"That's where the main thrust of the money is going," Armbrister said about the renovations planned for Wigle Hall.

Currently, all of the information available at the OCS Hall of Fame is in books. According to Sgt. Maj. Darryl W. Powell, battalion sergeant major, after the renovations are completed at Wigle Hall, the histories and photographs of former OCS graduates will be computerized and accessible via the World Wide Web.

Powell said he was thankful for Adams and his contribution.

"He (Adams) is a benevolent benefactor of good causes," Powell said. "The contribution is greatly appreciated by not only OCS, but by the 11th Regiment and Fort Benning as a whole; and, it will be used to benefit OCS and Fort Benning," he said.

According to Armbrister, some of the funds will also be used to update the OCS Store.

Jacqué Hill/Special to The Bayonet

Lt. Col. Scott L. Armbrister and Senior Officer Candidate James N. Hickman III prepare to show retired Col. Frank Huray a mural painted by Hickman.

"The OCS Store's sole purpose is to help defray the candidates' out-of-pockets expenses for attending OCS," he said.

The OCS Foundation had to be established in order for OCS to receive such donations, according to Armbrister.

"It took us about five months of coordination," he said about setting up the foundation. "We think OCS deserves this kind of contribution, so we put a lot of time and effort into getting it, and it was very fruitful." Powell said the foundation will provide a lot for OCS.

"The purpose of the OCS Foundation is to improve the quality of life of the candidates and to preserve the history and lineage of the OCS," he said.

On behalf of OCS, Armbrister accepted the donation from Huray who presented it for Adams. To commemorate the occasion and thank Huray for his efforts in organizing the contribution, OCS presented him with a plaque and a coin.

During the first or second week of June, Armbrister will fly to New York to present Adams with several commemorative gifts from OCS, thanking him for his donation.

Besides photographs of the donation presentation, Adams will also receive a book about the history of OCS and a mural of the school painted by Senior Officer Candidate James N. Hickman III.

Armbrister said choosing to give Adams the painting was easy because it best represents OCS and its people.

"The painting is something presented, prepared and designed by a candidate," he said. "It is amazing what talent you have in a candidate class," he said.

Hickman said he enjoyed painting the mural and was glad he could volunteer to do it.

"I looked at it as my donation to OCS because what I did helped OCS to show its appreciation for his (Adams) gracious contribution," he said

TOTAL QUALITY SURVEY

College may offer degree

Army Education Center

Anna Maria College of Paxton, Mass., is conducting a needs assessment survey to identify students interested in pursuing a total quality degree at Fort Benning.

The course emphasizes teamwork and collaborative learning with teams completing tangible process improvements instead of traditional examinations and term papers. The thesis is replaced by team-driven, comprehensive process improvement at organizations of the teams' choice.

The program consists of 12 courses, including business process reengineering, team building, quality in human resources management, benchmarking and the Malcolm Baldridge Award.

Faculty will be flown in from all parts of the country, Canada and the United Kingdom. Each course takes two weekends per month and involves team meetings between courses. The master's degree can be completed in one year. Being considered are an accelerated bachelor's degree and a doctoral degree in quality, with the emphasis on process improvements.

The garrison commander is researching the possibility of defraying some portion of the tuition costs for Fort Benning civilians interested in the course. Qualified military may be eligible for tuition assistance and GI Bill benefits. Dr. Robert J. Gee, the program manager, will be at Fort Benning Thursday in Classroom 6, Building 4, Infantry Hall, to answer questions concerning the total quality degrees. Interested students (both civilian and military) should plan to attend either the morning session from 9:30 to 10:30 or the afternoon session from1 to 2).

For more information, call the Fort Benning Education Center, at 545-6114.

Program recognizes Asians, Pacific Islanders

The Equal Opportunity Office sponsored a program May 10 in recognition of Asian and Pacific Islander American Heritage Month.

Dominador Manio Jr., chairman of the Asian Pacific Alliance, spoke at the event honoring Asian and Pacific Islander Americans, comparing America to a tossed salad with its cultures making up its ingredients, each one distinct, but well blended with the others.

"There is one thing that makes our country great," he said. "It is a mix of cultures."

Manio also quoted former President Jimmy Carter's sentiments about America's varied cultures.

"America's strength is in the richness of its cultural diversity," he said. Carter said this when he proclaimed the week of May 7 Asian and Pacific Islander American Heritage Month, according to Manio.

After Manio spoke, the audience watched several cultural dances from the Pacific Islands and Asia. Besides hulas from Hawaii, there were Polynesian and Filipino dances and a Korean harp song performed at the event.

To end the celebration, several cultural food samples were available for attendees to try. While they ate, attendees visited with one another and learned more about the various cultures represented at the program.

Manio believes that Asian and Pacific Islander Americans joining together to celebrate their heritages is important, but he also stressed the importance of individualism.

"Whether you are white, yellow, black or brown, this world, this country, this city, this community will be a great place to live if we have harmony, and it has to begin with you," he said.

Pine Mtn 8th grade band plans performance at Infantry Museum

By Jacqué Hill
Special to The Bayonet©

Pine Mountain Middle School's Eighth Grade Band will perform at Fort Benning Thursday.

The school is located in Kennesaw, Ga., just north of Marietta. The Eighth Grade Band members will travel here to entertain an audience in front of the Infantry Museum, as well as to take a tour through the museum.

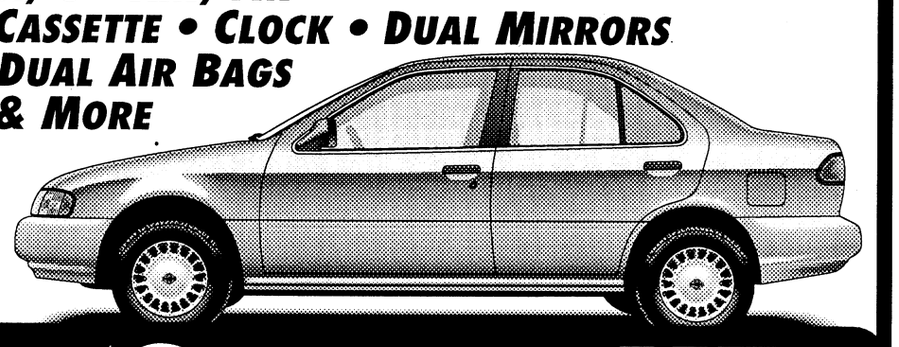
Having ranked well at competition this year, the 45-piece ensemble deserves this trip and chance to perform, said Jim Jackson, band director.

"This trip is presented to the students as a reward for earning 'superior' ratings from each of their judges at festival this year," he said. "I also expect that they will take from it a new appreciation for the self-sacrifice and devotion to duty that are necessary to preserve our nation in peace or war."

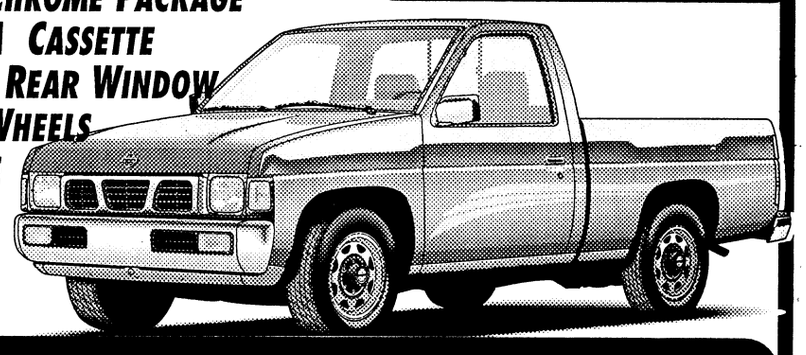
Jackson said he has been trying to prepare the band's members for the day.

"I've talked to them about what people in the military go through everyday to be prepared to defend our nation, and that it is all based on the Constitution," he said.

The Eighth Grade Band will begin its concert at 11:30 a.m. in front of the Infantry Museum Thursday, and the public is invited.



Jackson said the students are eager about performing and hope to have a large audience.



"They certainly are excited about getting to see the museum and perform for the soldiers," he said. "They want to show their appreciation for the soldiers' training and constant preparedness and readiness to defend them."

Relay kicks off Military Appreciation Week

By Lori Egan
Bayonet staff writer

Military Appreciation Week kicked off early Monday morning with the Kickoff Relay.

For the first time in the relay's history, runners ran along the Riverwalk to the Phenix City Amphitheater.

The relay also set another record; 13 teams participated in the event, according to Jim Brown, post athletic director.

Once at the amphitheater, Steve Butler, president of the Fort Benning-Columbus chapter of the Association of the U.S. Army, welcomed the runners and members of the tri-communities.

"The Riverwalk joins Fort Benning to two communities," Butler said. "AUSA is a bridge, whose mission is to join the military community and civil communities together.

"This week is a celebration of the relationship, which supports the commitment and sacrifice of the soldiers at Fort Benning."

Richard Martinez read his essay about how the communities are dependent on each other; then Mayors Bobby Peters and Sammy Howard read a proclamation....

"Military Appreciation Week is a time of excellence," Maj. Gen. John W. Hendrix, post commanding general, said. "It provides quality of life, and AUSA is the driving force behind this week."

Military Appreciation Week is the tri-communities' way of honoring the military and the contribution it makes to the community and the country.

The course was approximately 11 miles and the fastest team completed it in a time of 56 minutes 51 seconds, Brown said.

The top four teams were: 11th Infantry Regiment Team 1, Infantry Training Brigade Team 1, ITB Team 2 and 11th Inf. Regt. Team 2.

1st female now guards Tomb of the Unknowns

By Thomas E. Mani
American Forces Press Service

ARLINGTON NATIONAL CEMETERY, Va. — Teen-age girls lined the rope barring tourists from the plaza front of Arlington Cemetery's Tomb of the Unknowns. Their young faces reflected surprise and admiration as they watched the tall soldier guarding the monument to the nation's fallen.

Army Sgt. Heather Lynn Johnsen stood ramrod straight in her dress blue uniform, brown hair trimly tucked beneath her service cap, bearing an M-14 rifle and paced the ceremonial 21 steps forward and 21 steps back before the tomb. She had become the first woman to earn the privilege of guarding the tomb.

"There is no higher honor — there is no greater honor, and I can't think of anything else I would rather do for my country than to guard the Unknowns," said Johnsen.

The Tomb Guard tradition stretches back 48 years for soldiers of the 3rd U.S. Infantry (The Old Guard). Tomb sentinels guard the remains of four service members "Known But to God."

Johnsen received the badge from her company commander, Capt. Michael Eddings, shortly after 9 a.m. March 22. In a short ceremony, Eddings awarded the silver badge to Johnsen—the 389th person to earn the honor.

To keep the award, Johnsen must perform nine more months of spotless service as a tomb guard; then her badge becomes a permanent decoration.

Originally a personnel administrative specialist, Johnsen, 23, said she set her sights on becoming a tomb sentinel two years ago. She joined the unit in 1994 as a member of the regiment's military police platoon and applied to become a tomb guard last June after completing a year of ceremonial duty.

Johnsen's training at the tomb began with an interview and a two-week trial assignment. To qualify, soldiers must be between 5 feet, 10 inches and 6 feet, 4 inches tall. At 5 feet, 11 inches, Johnsen met the height requirements.

During the trial assignment, candidates must also memorize and recite verbatim seven pages of Arlington National Cemetery history. If they pass this test and meet other initial requirements, they earn their first "walk" and begin the second phase of training.

During the second phase — lasting as long as eight months — potential sentinels continue to study the cemetery history — learning the grave locations of some 300 famous buried veterans. Sentinels work on their manual of arms and learn the proper care of a sentinel's equipment, weapon and uniform.

They also practice the 90-steps-per-minute pace required of the guards. They become proficient in the guard changing ceremony and must know the precise timing of their movements while on a walk.

At first, their training occurs only when the cemetery closes to the public. After time, it extends to high-visibility walks, guarding the tomb during public hours. Since receiving her tomb guard assignment last June, Johnsen completed 179 "walks" before the Unknowns before receiving her badge.

Johnsen said becoming a tomb guard was the same for her as for any other sentinel. She said the difficult process begins with earning others' respect for you as a soldier.

"It was mentally demanding; it was physically demanding," said Johnsen of the training.

None of Johnsen's family were able to attend the event, but she said they could see her on television and hear her remarks at the ceremony. Johnsen had many people to thank, from her family in Roseville, Calif., to sentinels from the third relief with whom she trained.

Johnsen specifically thanked Sgt. Daniel Torrez, her former squad leader. She said while she was figuratively walking in the footsteps of former tomb guards, she's also walked the mat in Torrez' shoes.

Tomb guards wear specially constructed shoes to enhance their posture and protect their feet from the heat and cold while guarding their post. While Johnsen waited for her shoes, Torrez loaned Johnsen a pair of his.

Another making a special point to be there was Army Sgt. 1st Class Anthony Mills — the sergeant of the guard when Johnsen began her training. He said he knew Johnsen would have what it takes when he began working with her.

If there was any difference between the ceremony, it would have to be in the gleam of a young girl's eye as she watched from the audience as the guard change occurred. The girl smiled as she saw the erect bearing of the oncoming guard — straight brown hair tucked into a neat bun.

Impeccably uniformed and executing with dignified authority the time-honored ritual, Johnsen's accomplishment is something the young onlooker may now aspire.

va q&a

Department of Veterans Affairs

Q: Does the home loan entitlement provide any cash to the veteran?

A: It does not. The amount of the entitlement is a measure of the portion of the loan that Veteran's Assistance will guarantee. A guarantee against loss that is provided the lender.

Q: Are veterans with compensable service-connected disabilities required to pay a funding fee for VA home loan guarantees?

A: No, these veterans are exempt. Also exempt are surviving spouses of veterans who died as a result of service where the spouse never remarried.

Q: I am a mortgage banker and my office has several VA buyers who need an adjustable rate loan to buy the home they want. What is the latest on reinstating the adjustable rate home loan program?

A: This program expired when Congress failed to pass a proposal for a 90-day extension before Sept. 30. Meanwhile, VA will honor loans for veterans who have commitments for ARMs from lenders on or before Sept. 30, 1995. VA will continue to work with Capitol Hill on possible legislation making the ARM program permanent.

Q: What are the minimum service requirements to be eligible for a VA home loan?

A: If you served in a wartime period before Sept. 7, 1980, (enlisted) or Oct. 16, 1981, (officer), the service requirement is at least 90 days. For veterans of peacetime eras, the requirement is 181 continuous days of service. Veterans serving after those 1980 or 1981 dates must have served 24 months or the full period for which they were called, but not less than 181 days peacetime or 90 days wartime. If you are now on active duty, you are eligible after 90 days.

Q: I have seen ads in the paper listing VA properties for sale. Are these also available to people never in the military?

A: Yes. Where VA is disposing of a property, such as the result of a foreclosure of a VA-guaranteed loan, it can be purchased by a nonveteran. In such cases, it was the original VA-guaranteed loan for the purchase or repair of a home that was available only to eligible veterans.

Q: I'm on active duty in the Marines and have a certificate of eligibility for a VA-guaranteed loan. Will the certificate expire when I leave the Marines and become a veteran?

A: Home loan entitlement is generally good until it is used. However, the eligibility of service personnel is only available when they are on active duty. If they are discharged or released from active duty before using their entitlement, a new determination of eligibility must be made, based on length of service and the type of discharge received.

Q: I did not serve in the U.S. military. Can I buy a home that the VA has acquired as a result of foreclosure of a VA-guaranteed loan?

A: Yes. These homes are available to both veterans and nonveterans.

Q: What is the law that provides for compensation of U.S. veterans who have unexplained illnesses related to their service in the Persian Gulf?

A: It is Public Law 103-446, the Veterans Benefits Improvement Act of 1994, which President Clinton signed into law Nov. 2, 1994. The law authorized the Department of Veterans Affairs to pay compensation to any Persian Gulf veteran suffering from a chronic disability from an undiagnosed illness or a combination of undiagnosed illnesses that became manifest during Persian Gulf service, or to a degree of 10 percent or more, within a specific time frame following Gulf service.

VA began compensating Persian Gulf veterans after publication of a regulation Feb. 3 in the Federal Register. The regulation lists 13 categories of undiagnosed illness or illnesses that must manifest within two years of leaving the Persian Gulf theater of operations.

The 13 categories are not exclusive and other signs and symptoms could qualify for compensation purposes. The 13 categories are: fatigue, signs or symptoms involving skin, headache, muscle pain, joint pain, neurologic signs or symptoms, neuropsychological signs or symptoms, signs or symptoms involving the respiratory system (upper or lower), sleep disturbances, gastrointestinal signs or symptoms, cardiovascular signs or symptoms, abnormal weight loss and menstrual disorders.

Editor's note: If you have a question regarding your VA benefits, call the VA regional office at (800) 827-1000.

SOA DEMOLITION

IOBC students learn uses for explosives

By Danielle Holliday
School of the Americas

In their countries, demolitions can be used for many practical purposes to include fighting the war on drugs.

Recently, at the School of the Americas, students of the Latin American Infantry Officer Basic Course learned different ways to use explosives. They learned how to calculate and place charges, their characteristics and effectiveness and how to make and install them. Another technique they learned, important to the safety of the soldiers, their units and the local civilians, was how to remove a mine.

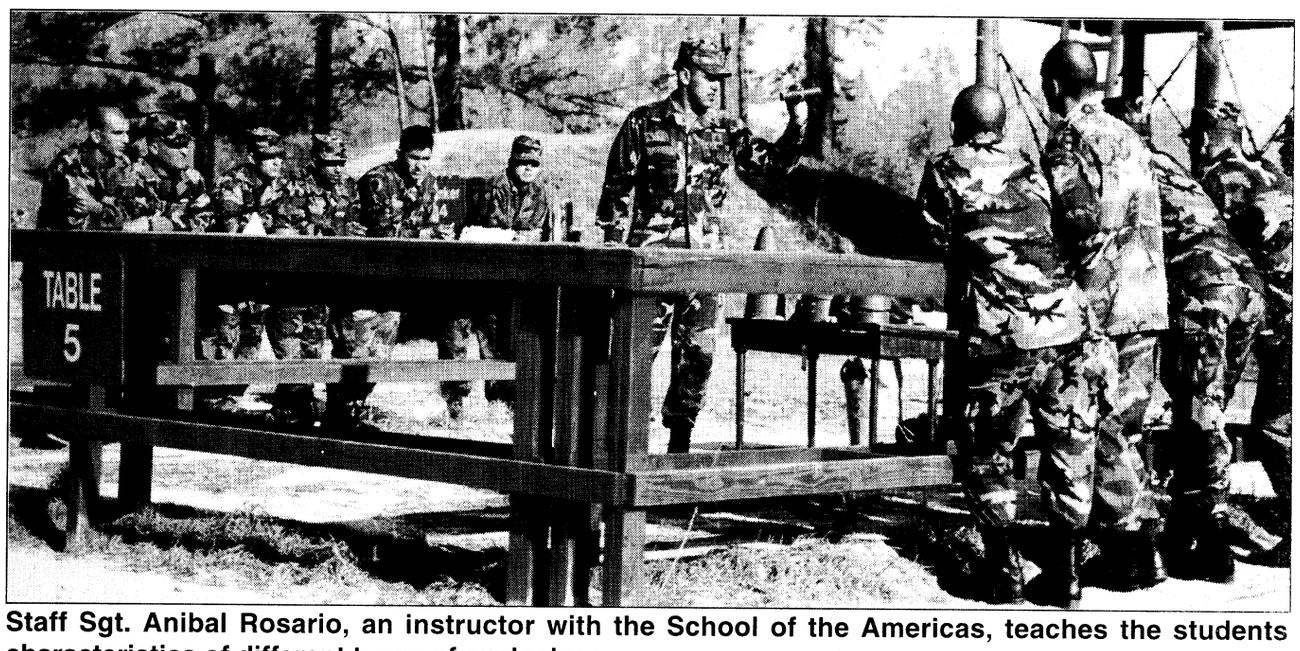
"An infantryman needs to know about engineering, especially about mines, because he's going to be the first one to encounter it," said Capt. Jorge Swank, course director. "Say he's going on a patrol, if he comes upon a mine, he can't just leave it in place. He must go through set procedures, putting down grid coordinates and reporting it to his chain of command. If he can disarm it at that time then he'll have to do so.

"Without a doubt," Swank said, "what you'll find is when the basic infantryman is going through the field with his company or platoon, he not only has the obligation to mark a mine for his troops' sake, but he also must do it to protect the innocent civilians that are in the area."

"The drug war is a reality that many of them will encounter when they return to their countries," Swank said. Several of his students already have been involved in counterdrug operations.

Typically, the drug traffickers spread themselves throughout the mountainous regions of the country. Smaller processing stations operate in many different locations to support the main labs. If the students locate a source, it is important for them to know how to cause an explosion, in order to destroy that particular lab, according to Swank.

Another way to impede the flow of drug traffic is by using the cratering charges that they were taught that will obstruct airplanes from landing on isolated airstrips, said Staff Sgt. Anibal Rosario, SOA instructor.



"The training that we've received here will help us in the future," said 2nd. Lt. Eloy Alvarado from Ecuador. "It will allow us to teach the techniques we have learned in our country. Also taking into account saftey measures will also help us in the future."

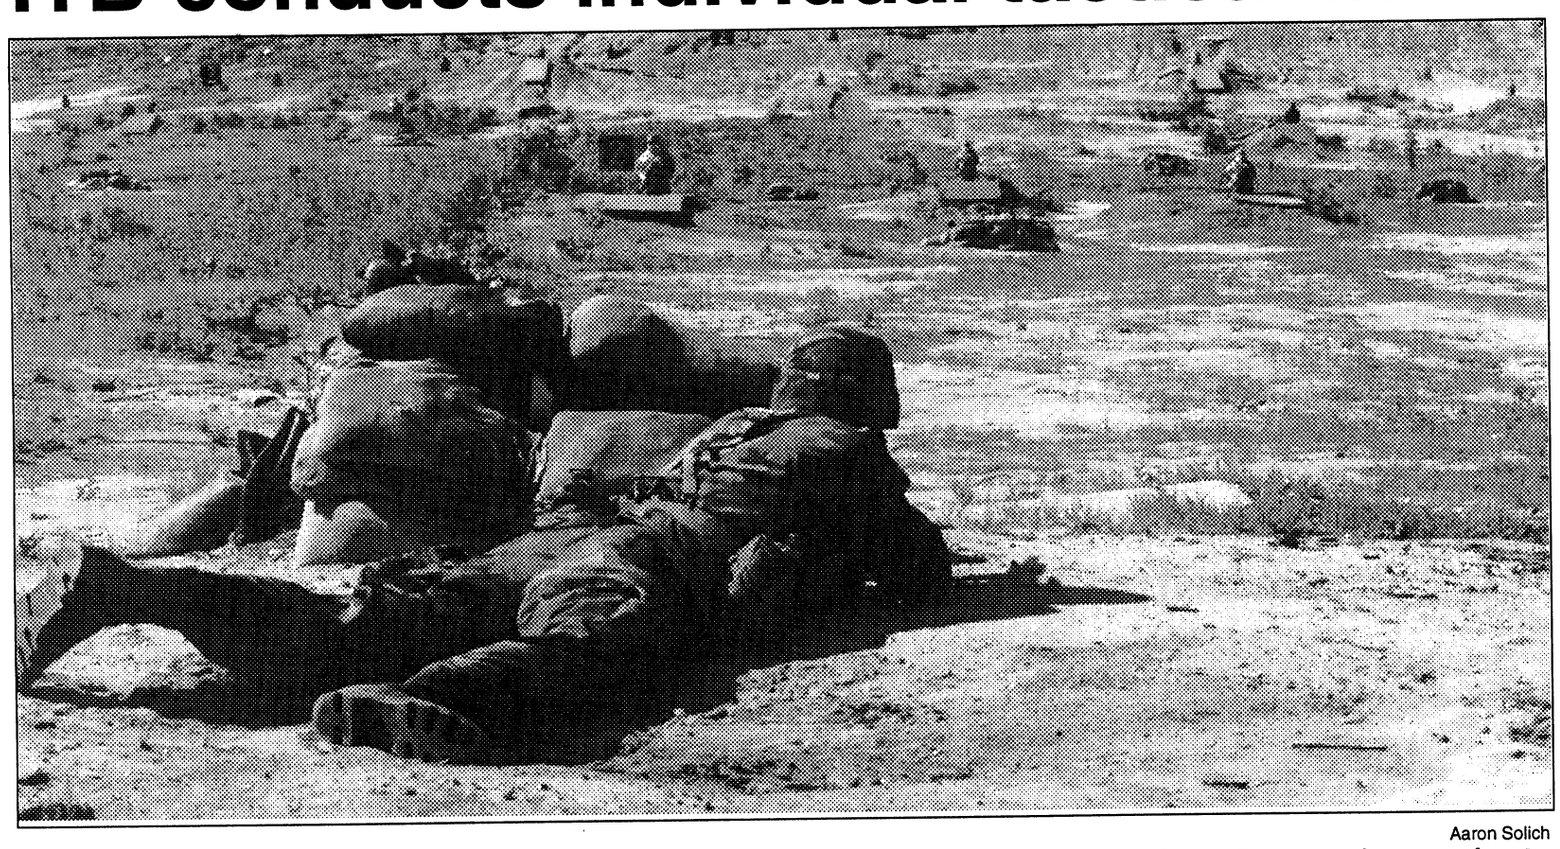
There are a lot of civil things that this training will allow them to put to use in a positive manner.

"Some of the different methods they were taught, like ditching, stumping and tree cutting will help them with construction, installing drainage ditches, or building roads to get to remote areas," said Rosario.

SOA's IOBC is based on the U.S. Army Infantry School's course. However, it is tailored to Latin American needs. The SOA curriculum has added civil affairs, civil-military operations, and counternarcotics training and stresses human rights throughout the 16-week course.

"My country sends me here to get to the highest level of professionalism," said 2nd Lt. Ceasar Landazun from Ecuador. "Because the United States has a good image, that's part of the reason they send us here. We will be the leaders in our country. Also, what I like about the course especially is that everything is planned, organized and written out and nothing 'just happens.'"

Staff Sgt. Anibal Rosario, an instructor with the School of the Americas, teaches the students characteristics of different types of explosives.



Students 1st Lt. Igor J. Serrudo and 2nd Lt. Diego L. Penaherrerra tie the detonation cord into the main line.

Staff Sgt. Anibal Rosario and 1st Lt. Luis Fuentes-Rivera instruct students 2nd Lt. Gonzalo P. Camcho and 2nd Lt. Alex F. Beltran as they prepare to initiate the charges.

ITB conducts individual tactical training on Pierce Range

Aaron Solich

A trainee from Company C, 1st Battalion, 19th Infantry Regiment, engages targets on Pierce Range before moving to his next covered position. This live-fire exercise was part of individual tactical training, period four.

By Aaron Solich
U.S. Army Infantry Training Brigade

Company A, 1st Battalion, 19th Infantry Regiment, conducted individual tactical training period four at Pierce Range May 7.

During ITT period four, trainees practice individual movement techniques while firing live ammunition at targets on the range. They also practice throwing hand grenades.

There are two main purposes of ITT period four. First, ITT period four gives the trainee more time to become familiar with the M-16A2 rifle. Second, it reinforces the skills that the trainees learned during Basic Rifle Marksmanship.

ITT period four also teaches responsibility to the trainees. Trainees move down lanes on the range next to each other while firing live ammunition. The combination of live ammunition and movement forces the trainees to be aware of the location of the other trainees and the direction that they are pointing and firing their rifles.

According to Staff Sgt. Ray I. Stull, this training gives the trainees "first hand knowledge of what a ground infantryman does" and "reinforces the battle team concept."

The safety of this training has also been increased. At one time, there was one instructor for every two firers. Now there is one instructor for each firer.

Three concurrent training stations were being used at the same time as the live fire. Trainees were cycled through the training stations and live fire in order to receive the most training possible. The first station was practice of IMT. The second was the preparation of reports on enemy forces. The third station was weapons maintenance. These stations were peer instructed by other trainees in the company.

ITT period four ended when all of the trainees had been cycled through the live fire and all of the concurrent training stations.

New field manual could improve survivability

TRADOC News Service

FORT MONROE, Va. — A new field manual is aimed at ensuring Army forces commanders receive proper fire support, airlift and close air support when and where it is needed on the battlefield.

Field Manual 100-13, Battlefield Coordination Detachment, is an attempt to correct some shortcomings that occurred during Desert Storm operations, according to its author.

"The Artillery School [volunteered] to develop the doctrine to overcome some of the deficiencies we saw coming out of Operation Desert Storm," said Lt. Col. Don Oxford, development division chief in the Artillery School's warfighting development directorate at Fort Sill, Okla. "We didn't feel like we (Army commanders) were getting all our target nominations incorporated into operations orders."

The battlefield coordination detachment is an attempt to prevent future problems.

The Army forces commander provides a BCD to the joint air operation center supporting the theater or area of operations. The AOC can be Air Force, Navy or Marines, depending on which service has air support responsibility.

The BCD commander and staff are liaison between the Army commander and AOC commander. The BCD staff has expertise across all functional areas — intelligence, fire support, airlift, close air support, air defense and airspace management.

It is integrating all of the interests rather than just the interests of the fire support community, Oxford said.

He pointed out that fire support can't be used unless intelligence has identified targets. After targets are validated, the attack on them must be synchronized by all elements of the air-ground team.

The battlefield coordination detachment has responsibility for integrating the broad Army forces interests to those in charge of air operations, to make sure those interests are understood and, to the greatest degree possible, complied with, Oxford said.

Battlefield coordination began in 1980 with the Air Land Battle doctrine of deep strike against numerically superior Soviet forces in Europe. The battlefield coordination element was created to synchronize Army and Air Force efforts from front to deep into an attackers forces.

Doctrine for battlefield coordination had been contained in a Training and Doctrine Command pamphlet, which was discontinued in 1994.

The Army and Air Force signed a memorandum of agreement in 1995 establishing Army BCDs as part of Air Force AOCs.

Trainees receive training in urbanized warfare

Aaron Solich

A trainee of 2nd platoon, Company E, 2nd Battalion, 58th Infantry Regiment, fires into a high window as his team members help him into the window.

Company E, 2nd Battalion, 58th Infantry Regiment, conducted Military Operations on Urbanized Terrain training at the Sand Hill MOUT site May 1.

The instructors for the training were members of Company A, 2nd Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment. Before the training began, Spc. William Miller of Co. A, emphasized the importance of MOUT training to the trainees of 2nd Platoon, Co. E, 2nd Bn., 58th Inf. Regt.

Miller said that MOUT has been an integral part of all recent military operations. These have included operations in Grenada, Panama, Kuwait, Somalia, Haiti, Croatia and Bosnia.

Cpl. Michael Wieczorek of Co. A, 2nd Bn., 29th Inf. Regt., was also instructing the trainees of 2nd Plt. According to Wieczorek, the trainees are only being taught the basic techniques of MOUT. These basic techniques will give the trainees a knowledge base that can be built upon once they arrive at their first assignment. Wieczorek also said more time should be dedicated to MOUT training at regular units.

The training started with movement techniques for urbanized terrain. Next, the trainees learned how to do low level entries into a building and how to position a fire team in a room.

They also learned how to do high level entries into a building using a grappling hook and ladder. Once inside of the building, the trainees practiced how to clear a building (of resistance) by moving from room to room.

Lastly, the proper employment of hand grenades and smoke in urban areas was also taught to the trainees.

According to Miller, anywhere the U.S. Army deploys, it will have to deal with MOUT issues, and the training that the trainees receive during the MOUT exercise, will increase survivability of the soldiers in combat.

Program helps local Army recruiters

U. S. Army Recruiting Battalion

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — A Livingston County man was recently back in familiar surroundings as part of a new program to assist local U.S. Army recruiters.

Spc. Shannon Tutor, a personnel administrative specialist stationed at Fort Benning, arrived in Paducah on a 10-day stint assisting Army Recruiter Sgt. Michael Scheidler under the Army's new Soldier of the Quarter Recruiter Assistance Program.

With the program, soldiers like Tutor, who earned Fort Benning's Soldier of the Quarter honors for first quarter of fiscal 1996, are sent to their home towns and assigned on temporary duty status to assist Army recruiters. Tutor is among the first 30 Army soldiers selected for this program, according to Sgt. 1st Class Angelo Owens, U.S. Army Recruiting Command, Fort Knox, Ky.

For his part, Tutor said he is enjoying being back in his hometown promoting Army opportunities.

"It's a very exciting opportunity," Owens said. "I've been able to tell young people that there's an alternative to the standard line of work in this area."

It was during his initial training period at Fort Benjamin Harrison, Ind., that Tutor met a Massachusetts National Guard soldier from Boston named Annemarie. They later wed and have a 1-year-old daughter, Emma.

Tutor currently serves with Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 1st Battalion, 19th Infantry Regiment, Infantry Training Brigade at Fort Benning. Before taking Soldier of the Quarter honors, he also finished at the top of his 130-person Primary Leadership Development Course.

At that point, Tutor vied for Soldier of the Quarter honors.

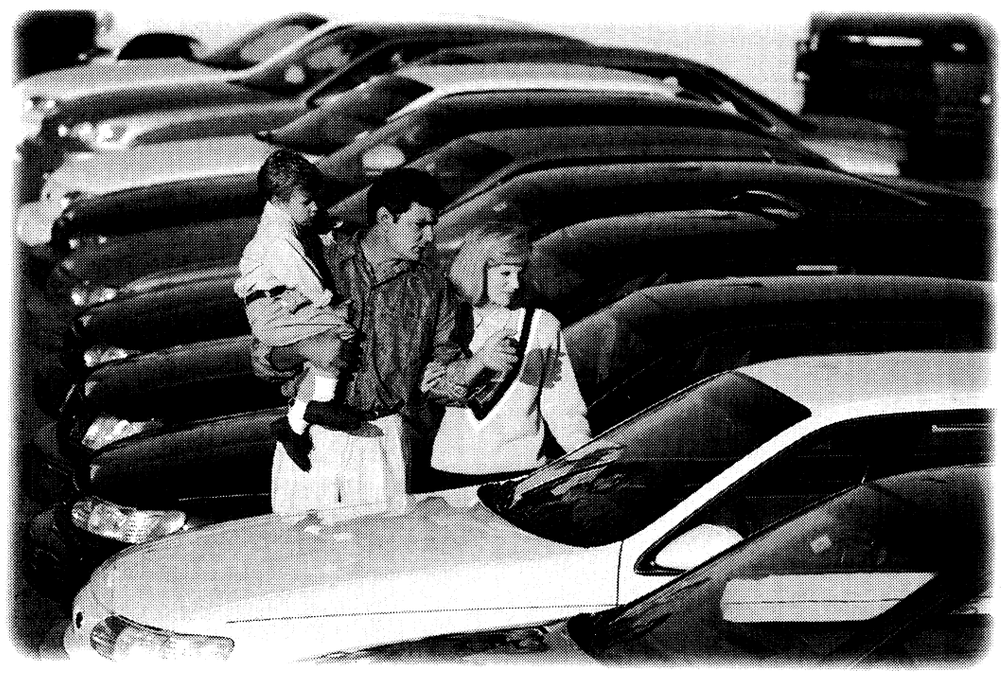
"I went to the board with the desire to win," Tutor said. "It was quite an honor being chosen from among 20,000 other soldiers on Fort Benning."

That honor earned him a place among the initial group of Soldiers of the Quarter winners from posts around the nation who were chosen to participate in the program, Owens said. There will be 30 soldiers participating in the program during its initial trial this year, he said.

Scheidler said Tutor made a good initial impression on him and performed well in his brief role.

"He's a very sharp, hard-working soldier," Scheidler said. "He came here after a long plane ride and car trip and was ready to go."

Tutor helped Scheidler work the telephones and do face-to-face prospecting.



"Because he was once a poor college student, he could relate well with a lot of guys," Scheidler said. "They really listened when he told them about his experiences.

"(Tutor) really worked out well. He was one of the best we've had since I've been here."

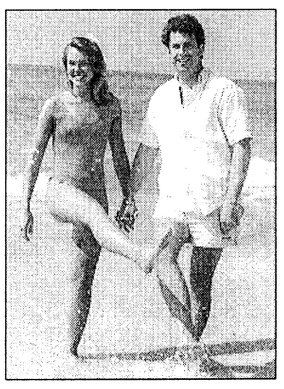
for the record

Last week's issue of the Bayonet stated that during the Olympic games, Fort Benning's billeting services will provide rooms to retirees, military personnel on leave, people on permissive temporary duty, family members and guests of military personnel assigned here based on space availability, in that order.



The statement should have read personnel not conducting official business at Fort Benning, to include retirees, military personnel on leave, personnel on permissive TDY and family members and guests of military personnel assigned to the installation, may occupy facilities on a space-available basis; however, they will not be given advance confirmed reservations during the June 20 through Aug. 3 time frame.

The May 3 issue of the Bayonet stated that Martina, Martin Army Community Hospital's mascot, lives at the medical services' barracks. She actually lives at the veterinary services' barracks.

Tricare uses the wellness approach

By Douglas J. Gillert
American Forces Press Service

FORT LEWIS, Wash. — If people are healthier, they won't need as much medical care.

The logic is simple, and if applied, the results could be spectacular. Because a healthier force not only reduces the need — and cost — of health care, but better health increases force readiness.

Such reasoning has pointed military medicine in a new direction. In the past, the Department of Defense focused on treating illness and injury. Now— under Tricare, implemented to contain costs and improve readiness — the focus has shifted to prevention.

"It's good management to reduce the number of visits people make to the hospital or clinic," said Col. Paul Evans, a primary care manager at Madigan Army Medical Center. "For example, if somebody has a cold and wants to see a doctor today, is that appropriate, and if not, how do we educate that person?"

Tricare reduces unnecessary visits to the doctor in many ways, Evans said. For example, Region 11, which encompasses Washington, Oregon and six counties in Idaho, encourages people to call its nurse advisory service first.

The toll-free service is available around the clock. The number is printed on platinum cards all Region 11 enrollees receive. Once connected, callers talk to a nurse, describe their symptoms and get on-the-spot medical advice.

"Advice often saves them a trip to the hospital," Evans said. "Quite often, people really don't need to see a doctor to take care of their health problems. The nurse adviser tells them what to do for relief from their current symptoms and also counsels them on how to prevent future problems. So it's a way to educate people and orient them toward healthier lifestyles."

To further cut back clinic visits, Madigan also offers a wellness clinic.

"We identify people who make more than 30 appointments a year (the average is 4 1/2 visits a year)," Evans said. "We then refer them to the wellness clinic for counseling and education. In most cases, these are people who aren't dealing well with their injury or illness — who are stressed out. The wellness clinic works with the primary care physician to manage these patients."

Similar programs are available throughout the region, including nearby McChord Air Force Base, where a health and wellness center provides a "one-stop shop" for wellness.

Capt. Jan Seladis, an Air Force registered nurse, directs the center where, she said, all McChord beneficiaries are welcome to come for counseling, education and fitness programs.

"We offer a holistic approach to better health by dealing with our customers' physical, emotional and spiritual well-being," Seladis said. "People can learn to live a healthier lifestyle."

Health and wellness centers are a Tricare phenomenon popping up at Air Force bases everywhere, Seladis said. The Air Force's fitness testing program, cycle ergometry, is being shifted there from gymnasiums, along with remedial training for those who fail the test and weight-management for airmen who don't meet weight standards.

Three times a week, Seladis hosts a brief orientation for new enrollees.

"We find out what their specific needs are, train them on the equipment and sign them up for classes," she said.

Since the center opened in January, 300 people have joined.

"Our biggest users are active duty airmen and retirees," she said, and she's starting to see more family members. The center also caters to base civilian employees.

Referring patients to the wellness center frees the McChord clinic's small staff to treat other patients, and it's also affecting nearby Madigan. Because McChord's clinic is small, it always has relied on nearby Madigan for patient assistance. For example, the clinic has no emergency room or after hours care. Airmen and their families needing those services must go to Madigan.

Thanks to Tricare, those trips are down, said Capt. Bob Valentine, Tricare director for McChord's 62nd Medical Group.

"In March 1995 (when Region 11 was activated), we were averaging 400 visits a month to the Madigan emergency room," Valentine said. Statistics show visits since have dropped below 350 a month.

"I use the nurse adviser all the time," said Debbie Pyle, an Air Force spouse with two asthmatic children. "Under Tricare, it's also easier to get an appointment to see somebody. Tricare has made military health care here a lot better."

Editor's note: Madigan Army Medical Center in Fort Lewis, Wash., was the test site for Tricare.

TRICARE: Patients sign up

could be cut in half if the services treated active duty members only. But Joseph said there's an undeniable link between treating patients of all ages and health conditions, and meeting the health needs of war fighters.

"American people demand a very high standard of wartime health care," he said. "They expect us to be there right away — and that's the right expectation. But this requires a highly skilled and practiced medical force.

"We can't recruit and retain good doctors unless we provide them a good practice, and the research and training opportunities available to them in our major regional medical centers.

"We need a broad, robust patient population and health care system that keeps our medics ready for any contingency."

Tricare also ensures availability of health care even when large numbers of service medics deploy. Joseph cited Operation Joint Endeavor as an example.

"The majority of American service members in Bosnia deployed from units in Europe," he said. "Two years ago, that would have been a disaster, because we had no system in place to provide health care to family members and service members not deployed.

"Because of our success in establishing resource-sharing agreements under European Tricare, the deployment and backup health care have been seamless," he said.

Resource-sharing impacts stateside Tricare, as well, Joseph said. For example he cited an obstetrics shortage at Fairchild Air Force Base in eastern Washington filled by an Army physician from the western part of the state. Regionalizing military health care greatly enhances availability and accessibility for all eligible beneficiaries, he said, and expands the practices of military physicians.

"To survive in the current environment and meet the challenges of future environments," Joseph said, "we must be flexible. Tricare was designed to meet current needs and what we think future needs will be. As we progress, those needs—and the needs of our patients—are going to change."

Tricare, with its inherent cost-savings and expanded provider base, the assistant secretary said, provides that flexible response.

As temperatures continue to rise, so do the pets' health risks related to heat.

Domestic animals left to fend for themselves — or neglected —face fatal injuries. According to Margarite Brice, animal care specialist, Fort Benning Veterinary Treatment Facility, many parents buy that cute little puppy in the window and place him under the Christmas tree only to leave him to fend for himself six months later because the puppy turned out to be more work than imagined.

As the days get longer and hotter and families get busier, often pets are forgotten. But Brice stressed certain daily responsibilities cannot be shunned. Some of those responsibilities include:

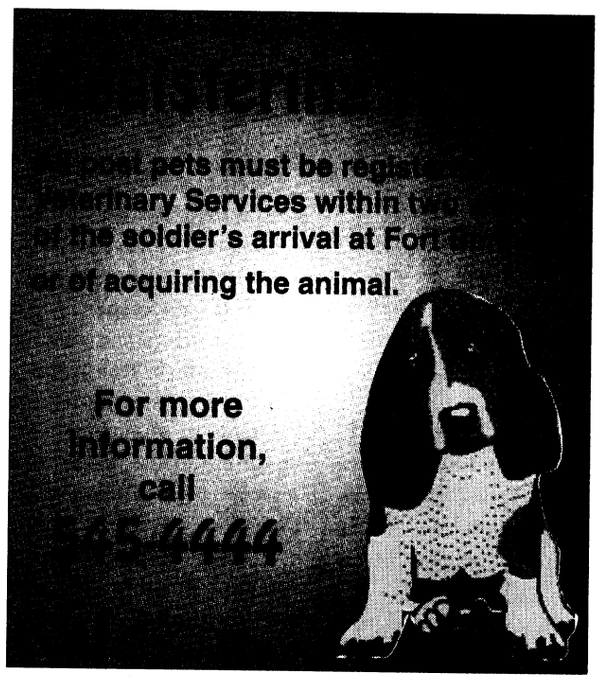
• Fresh water — Bowls should be changed and cleaned daily

• Food appropriate to needs — Consider the dog' s age, weight and special health considerations

• Shelter — Doghouses should be waterproof and roomy enough for dog to walk in and turn around.

"Dogs and cats absolutely need water, food and shelter,"Brice said. "Owners need to be responsible for their animal just as they would a child."

Even Timmy's mom and dad had to keep Lassie vaccinated.



Likewise, soldiers and their families are required by regulation to register their pets within two weeks of the soldier's inprocessing or immediately after the family acquires a new pet.

Health and safety concerns for family members as well as pets is the simple reasoning behind the registration. This regulation extends to soldiers who may acquire a pet while living on Fort Benning.

According to Brice, pet registration ensures all vaccinations are current, especially rabies shots.

"We want to know without a doubt all pets are vaccinated," she said.

Although Fort Benning would not be considered farm country like Lassie's romping ground, post residents and pets still share close quarters with wildlife. Brice said although rabid attacks to pets and children are not common, keeping all post domestic animals vaccinated helps veterinary workers prevent the spread of rabies among other diseases that can be transmitted to other animals and humans.

Owners can have their dogs' and cats' vaccinations updated at the post clinic. The following are vaccines necessary for dogs:

• Rabies, given at 12 weeks and updated yearly.

• Distemper, which includes the parvo virus vaccine.

• Heartworm test, given at six months and updated each year.

If dogs are often placed in a kennel by frequent travelers, then Warren suggests the dog be given the kennel cough vaccine every six months.

Vaccines for cats include the rabies, distemper, feline leukemia, feline infectious peritonitis and feline immuno deficiency virus.

For more information about the services provided at the treatment facility, call 545-4444, or stop by the facility in Building 265 at 10th Mountain Division Road. Operating hours are 8 to 11:30 a.m. and noon to 3 p.m. Monday through Friday, except Wednesdays when the clinic is open from 8 to 11:30 a.m. The Veterinary Treatment Facility is closed the last working day of each month.

Pets will be seen at the clinic by appointment only. Appointments for vaccinations or diagnostics are scheduled on Mondays for the following week. Sick-call

Treatment facility provides protection against fatal

Heartworms

By Shawna Porter
Veterinary Services

Heartworms are a life-threatening parasite to the canine. They can be fatal if left uncontrolled.

Living in a dog's heart, they can grow up to 14 inches, causing the restriction of blood flow to the liver, kidneys and lungs. This can cause stress on the heart, causing failure of organs.

The heartworm parasite is transmitted by a mosquito biting an infected dog and carrying to another dog. Heartworm parasites at one time were common only in warmer climates. Now the parasites can be found throughout the country, and are rapidly spreading.

When it begins to turn cold, mosquitoes find protected areas such as inside a dog house or in the home. Dogs that are kept indoors the majority of the time are still at risk. Also, when a dog is taken for a walk or released in the yard for even a short period of time, a mosquito can still get the dog.

For heartworm prevention, a dog should be tested yearly. The test only takes a couple of minutes. If the results are negative, the dog may begin taking heartworm preventive medicine. If the dog is under the age of 5 months, it does not need a test until its yearly vaccinations are due.

The Fort Benning Veterinary Clinic offers Heartgard Plus or Interceptor. Either come in a six-month supply, either chewable chunk or tablet form. They are given once a month and sizes vary with a dog's weight. This is a full month's protection in a single dose if given properly.

Quality of life issues to be discussed during focus group symposium at end of month

Family Unit Network

Various Fort Benning community members will have the opportunity to help design the installation of the future.

Representatives from Headquarters, Department of the Army, will be at Fort Benning May 29 to conduct a Quality of LIfe Focus Group Symposium as part of Army Chief of Staff General Dennis J. Reimer's campaign to improve quality of life for soldiers and their families.

The symposium, which will be at the Fort Benning Officers' Club, will consist of four focus groups that will discuss and prioritize Army quality-of-life services and programs they feel should be for the 21st century.

Groups members, representing all segments of the post's population, will be organized based on years of service: up to six years; seven to 14, and; 15 or more.

Battalion commanders and sergeants major will comprise the fourth group.

Spouses will participate in each of the four groups. Retirees, recruiters and Reserve Officer Training Corps instructors will also participate.

Focus groups will meet in the morning to prioritize programs and services. Group members will present their ideas of the model installation to the HQDA team that afternoon.

The data from the work groups will be taken back to HQDA for analysis. This information will allow senior Army leadership to focus resources on those items deemed most important to soldiers and families.

Maintenance necessary for summer driving

Derus Media Service Inc.

Spring is a perfect time for car maintenance: you can attend to the wear and tear caused by winter driving while preparing for the demands of summer's heat and stop-and-go traffic.

The following tips are from the National Institute for Automotive Service Excellence, the nonprofit group that certifies automotive technicians.

• Don't wait until the day before your big vacation to have the family vehicle checked out. Routine car care should be practiced throughout the year. Neglect only makes problems worse. Besides, regular service extends the life of your vehicle, improves your gas mileage and gives you peace of mind.

• Establish a battle plan. Read your owner's manual. Follow the recommended service intervals and keep good records.

• Periodically perform a driveway inspection: Look for unusual sounds, odors, changes in performance and handling, leaks, drips, etc. Mention anything unusual to your technician.

• If you are not a do-it-yourselfer, find a repair facility with qualified technicians. Reward good service with repeat business.

• Ask friends and business associates for recommendations. Check the reputation of the shop with your local consumer organization. Look in the customer waiting area for evidence of training and credentials. And look in the service bays for up-to-date equipment and overall orderliness.

• Look for repair facilities that employ Automotive Service Excellence-certified technicians. Certified technicians have taken national exams to prove their competency to their employers and, most importantly, to you.

•A summer inspection should cover belts and hoses, all fluids, the radiator, the air conditioning system and engine performance (sluggish acceleration, rough idle, hard starts). Also check brakes, tires (including spare), suspension and steering, lights and bulbs, the battery and windshield wipers.

• Carry some tools (ask a technician for suggestions), road flares, a flashlight, a car phone or CB radio and water-based fluid to fight road grime and insects.

ask the judge

By George R. Smawley
Office of the Staff Judge Advocate

Q: I recently purchased a computer system including a color monitor, printer and a variety of software. Next month, I make a permanent-change-of-station move to Fort Wainwright, Alaska. To what extent will the government compensate me for any damages that might occur in shipment? What are the standards used by the Army Claims Service?

A: As personal computers become more common, so is the number of service members who ship their computers and related equipment during government-sponsored moves.

As a result, the Claims Office is seeing an increasing number of claimants with internal damage to their personal computers. Like all claims for damage to personal property, it is the burden of the service member to show that the loss or damage claimed was the result of mishandling by the carrier.

Sometimes there is evidence, such as broken parts, which shows that this damage is attributable to rough handling and therefore compensable under the Personnel Claims Act. Often, however, the computer's operating system is simply not working. Without evidence of physical damage, it is the position of the U.S. Army Claims Service that the damage is due to a "mechanical defect." In other words, the computer should be able to withstand normal handling in shipment. If there is no evidence of abnormal handling, then the problem is related to the manufacture of the item, not the shipment of the item.

Personal computers are delicate items. Quite often, without showing any external damage, they will malfunction after shipment. Unless there is reliable evidence that internal damage to a computer is because of rough handling in shipment rather than some other cause, neither the government nor a private insurer will pay for the repairs. The only protection against this type of loss would be under a service contract of the manufacturer's warranty.

It is also important for service members to understand that the maximum allowance per shipment for all computers and computer accessory equipment (printers, software, etc.) is $4,000, which is often less than the value of the property.

For this reason it is important for the service member to ensure that shippers take the time to properly pack and inventory all computer related equipment.

For more information, call the Fort Benning Claims Office, Office of the Staff Judge Advocate, at 545-2285.

SOA soldiers celebrate at all-ranks ball

By Judith O'Toole
School of the Americas

As the guests began to arrive, it was hard not to notice the variety of sharply-dressed men and women, in uniforms from all over Latin America, as well as women in beautiful ball gowns.

About 300 people attended the 1996 School of the Americas' All-Ranks Ball April 20, sponsored by the Association of the United States Army, according to Nivia Butler, SOA protocol officer.

"Everyone is involved — from private to colonel," said Sgt. Maj. Ricardo Barbet, SOA battalion sergeant major. "We all come together as one,"

SOA staff, students, guest instructors and their guests came to the annual event at the Main Post NCO Club for dinner and dancing. Before dinner, toasts were made to the enlisted soldiers, the noncommissioned officers and the officers. Finally, some of the guest instructors and students at SOA, offered a toast from each of their countries to all of the people present.

Afterwards, the colors were retired for the evening and dancing and music began, including Spanish and American music.

The great thing about SOA, Barbet said, is that the Latin Americans learn from us and our culture, and in turn, we learn from them.

'Season of new life' brings deadly pain

Army News Service

Spring, the season of new life, is when most suicides occur. Suicide is one of the top 10 causes of death in the United States. It ranks as the third-leading cause of death among those 15 to 24 years old.

Last year alone, more than 30,000 persons killed themselves; that's one suicide every 17 minutes.

Almost everyone has thought about suicide, but no one needs to die by his or her own hand.

Suicide is preventable if you watch for the warning signs, stop to ask a few questions and take the time to help.

Here are a few key points to help guide your questions and some suggestions on how to help. Don't be afraid to ask.

Who are those at greatest risk?

In general, suicide rates within the Army are two-thirds of what is seen in a similar civilian population. Anyone — service members, spouses, children and relatives — may think about suicide given enough stress.

Those who are at the greatest risk of self-injury are emotionally upset over work problems, a relationship that's in trouble, or a major life change.

They may blame themselves and allow self-hate, self-blame, guilt and shame to fester. They withdraw from others and outside activities. They develop tunnel vision as their hope narrows — all they can see is continued suffering. Finally, there is the thought that ceasing to be would stop the pain.

How can you help?

Most people who attempt suicide really don't want to die. They're asking for help. Eight out of 10 people who commit suicide have indicated to someone their intention of killing themselves.

As a rule, if you can lower the emotional distress that has led someone to consider suicide, you will also lower their risk of committing suicide.

Watch for these warning signs:

- Confusion
- Financial difficulty
- Loss of social life
- A family history of suicide
- Previous suicide attempts
- Feelings of failure
- Talking about death or committing suicide
- Lack of social relationships
- Overemphasizing a lack of suicidal thoughts and tendencies
- Withdrawal from other people and outside social activities

In the presence of any of these warning signs, take action!

The American Association of Suicidology advises the following:

- Believe it. Take any signs or threat of suicide seriously.
- Listen carefully. Keep the lines of communication open, ask questions and talk calmly.
- Be sympathetic. Don't be judgmental or give false assurances that everything will be all right.
- Get help. Call a suicide-prevention center, mental-health clinic, physician, chaplain or other qualified mental-health professional.
- Be there. Be supportive and show that you care. Don't leave the person in a crisis.
- Follow up by staying in touch and encouraging him or her to continue treatment. Don't forget.

When you suspect someone may be thinking about suicide, ask them. Asking someone if they're thinking of suicide does not cause them to kill themselves. It's just the kind of concerned interest that may save a life.

If you need help or you're concerned that someone you know may be at risk of suicide, there are caring professionals available who can to help.

Contact your chaplain, community mental health services, clinical psychology service, social work services, or department of psychiatry. After normal duty hours, go to the emergency room of your local military treatment facility.

There are people who care. Don't be afraid to ask!

For more information, the Mental Health Services staff at Martin Army Community Hospital is available to help active duty soldiers. Call 544-1717, 544-5964 or 544-2587 during normal duty hours.

Editor's note: Fort Benning residents can receive more information or assistance by calling Army Family Advocacy Program at 545-3344 or 545-6969.

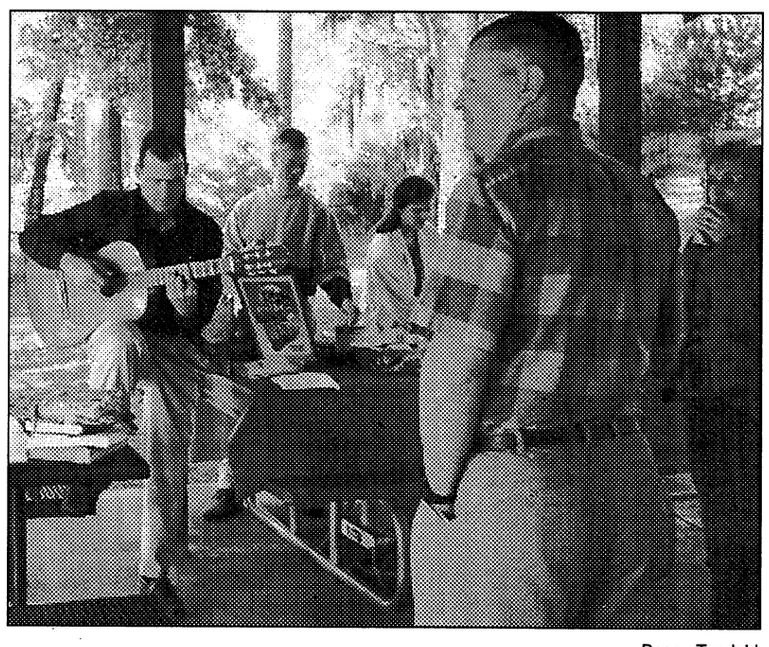
Post families fellowship at spring retreat

By Mike Tesdahl
TRADOC System Manager-Soldier

The Fort Benning Christian Family Spring Retreat was conducted at Uchee Creek Army Recreation Center April 19 to 21.

The theme was a quote from Francis of Assisi: "Preach the gospel at all times; if necessary, use words!"

Rev. Norman Dunlap of Columbus led the adult seminar with practical tips for living out the gospel in every aspect of our lives.



Christians are directed to do this in Deuteronomy 6:6-7: "These commandments I give you today are to be upon your hearts. Impress them on your children. Talk about them when you sit at home and when you walk along the road, when you lie down and when you get up."

Dunlap's message focused on the essence of God's order, the stress of getting out of order and what we can do about it. He paraphrased Ephesians 2:8-9 by saying, "Jesus loves you. You can't do anything to make him love you any more or any less."

Chap. (Capt.) Tom Wheatley, Ranger Training Brigade, guided youth through their own time of instruction and recreation.

The weekend featured events for the whole family, including an ice cream social, square dancing, led by Columbus' own Jay Medlocks, a bonfire, complete with roasted marshmallows and campfire singing and musical entertainment by a host of local talent.

The retreat closed with a lay-led outdoor worship service and a message from Col. Richard Rutledge, garrison commander, who used the example of Ephesians to encourage the participants to be wholehearted, willing to be spent for God's cause and fully armed.

Holiday time to thank military, God

By Robert A. Wildeman
The Infantry Center Chapel

To properly appreciate Armed Forces Day, perhaps a brief history of the observance is appropriate.

On July 26, 1947, Congress passed the National Security Act, which combined all branches of the military under the Department of Defense. In 1949, President Harry S. Truman ordered that the third Saturday in May would be set aside for the observance of Armed Forces Day.

The purpose of the holiday was to celebrate the unity and common purpose of the military forces and to encourage continued interservice cooperation. The president also intended that the day would provide an opportunity for the American people to express their gratitude to the members of the Armed Forces for their role in the defense of freedom. It also provided the military an opportunity to demonstrate their latest technical advances to the American people.

Consequently, Armed Forces Day is an opportunity to thank everyone in the military and their family members for their commitment and sacrifice to defend America's freedom. It is a time to remember that God is the ultimate author and defender of liberty and to thank him for his faithfulness and for the strength he has committed in defending America. It is a time when Americans can commit themselves to pray for God to protect and guide the military forces.

In Exodus 17 when Israel was fighting the Amalekites, Moses was on a hill watching the battle. As long as he kept his arms raised, the Israelite army won. If he dropped them, Israel would begin to lose. Therefore, Aaron and Hur stood at Moses' side all day holding up his arms. Israel defeated the Amalekites. After the battle, Moses built an altar and thanked the Lord because he knew that it was God who had defeated the enemy.

This Saturday on Armed Forces Day, take time to thank the Lord for all the men and women who serve in the military and for their families. Make sure that you conclude by thanking God for the gift of freedom and committing yourself to be like Aaron and Hur and supporting America's military personnel and family members in prayer each day.

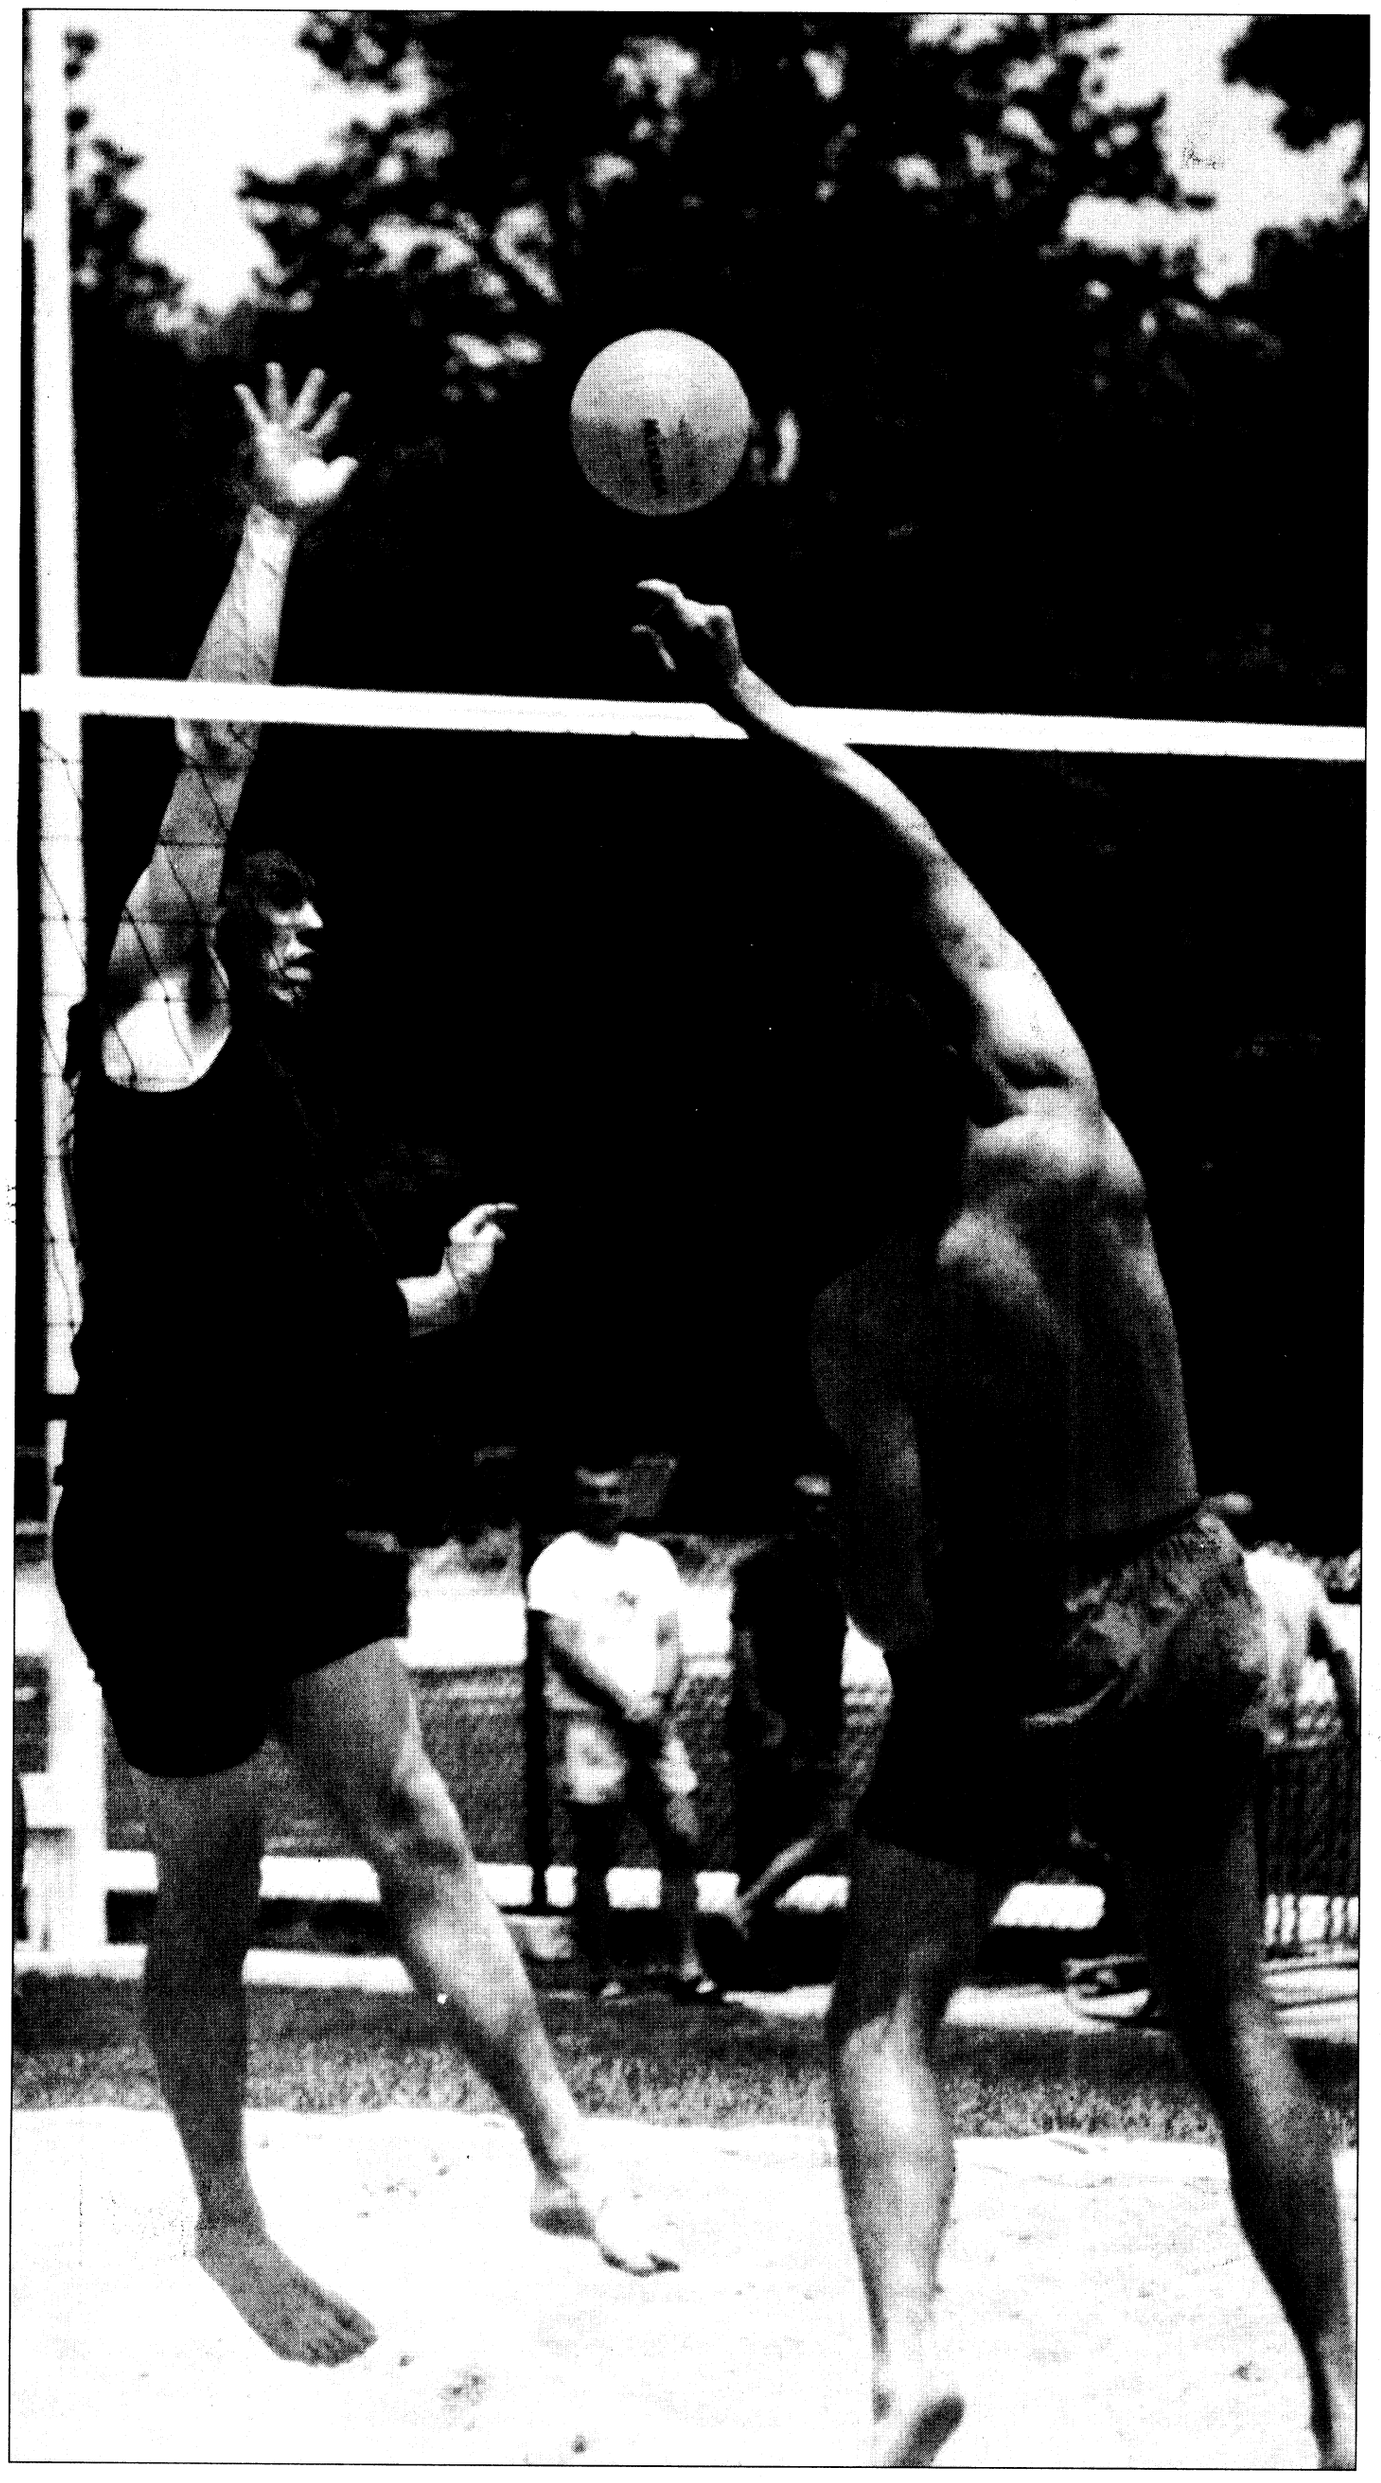
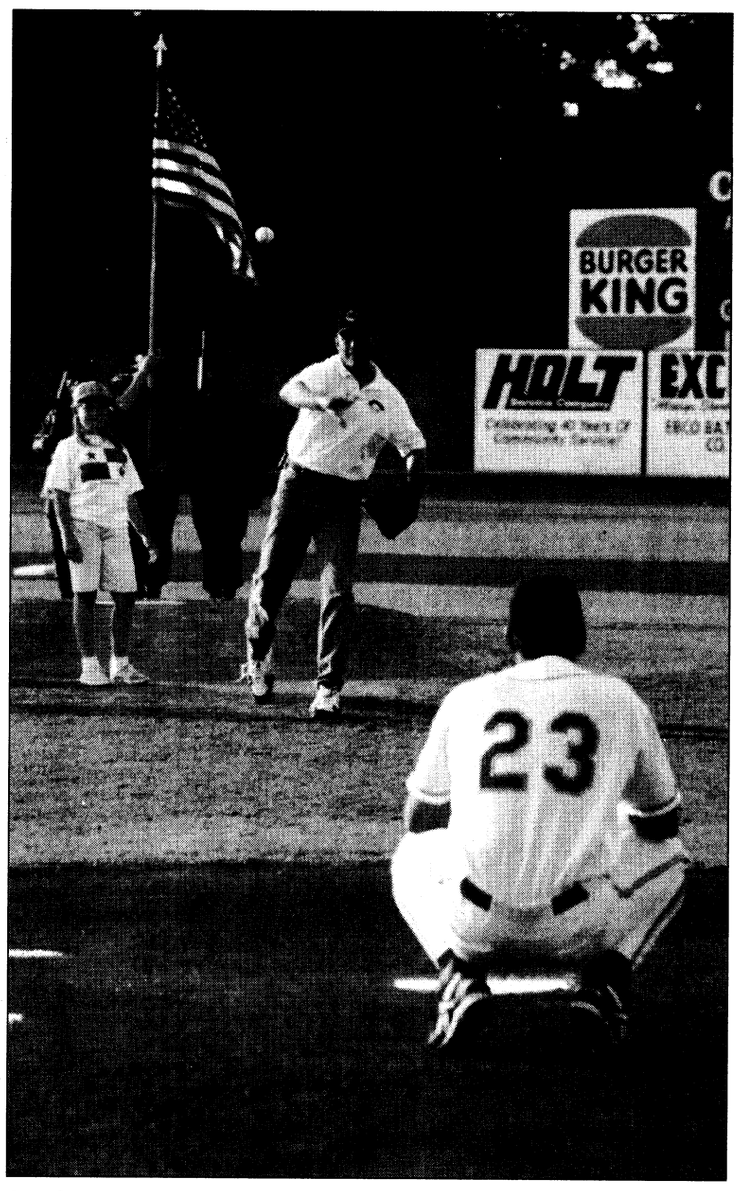
Competition during Military Appreciation Week for the Commander's "Follow Me" Cup will conclude with Saturday's awards ceremony at York Field from 11 to 11:30 a.m.



So far, unit teams have competed in various events including relays, beach volleyball, basketball, softball, bowling, tennis, wrestling, soccer, track and field, golf, swimming, boxing, triathlon, summer biathlon, fishing and an array of small games that included everything from darts to table tennis.

Military Appreciation Week, a week long celebration to foster goodwill between military and the local community, began with the Kickoff Relay starting at the National Infantry Museum Monday.



The events encompass the entire post with competition concluding tomorrow with the "Burn the General" run on York Field at 7:30 a.m.

The 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment entered the week with a commanding lead for the cup as a result of track and field meets conducted in March and April.

Events today include the "Fit to Win" competition beginning at 2:30 p.m. at Doughboy Stadium, women's and men's softball finals at Gowdy Field beginning at 3:30 p.m.; darts at 7 p.m. at the Concord Lounge; darts at 9 p.m. at the Drop Zone, Afterhours Club and Boomer's; an all-day fishing tournament at Uchee Creek; and an all-day bowling tournament at Fort Benning bowling lanes.

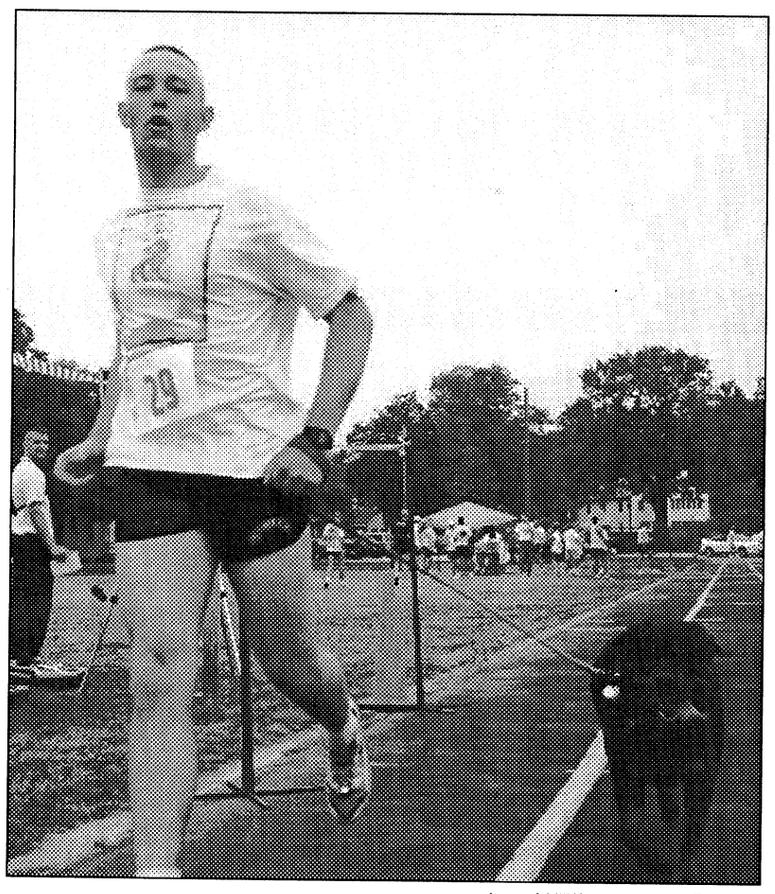
Nurses compete in 5K race

By Jacqué Hill
Special to The Bayonet©

In celebration of National Nurses Week, a committee at Martin Army Hospital sponsored a 5K run or walk at Doughboy Stadium May 4.

Col. Roslyn D. Booker, chief, Department of Nursing, said celebrating and recognizing members of the nursing profession is vital.



"It is important to celebrate National Nurses' Week to recognize the talents and acknowledge the many outstanding contributions made by nurses worldwide," she said. "As clinicians, researchers, administrators and educators, nurses have been pivotal in defining the future of health care delivery.

"Many of the pioneering efforts and innovative changes would go unnoticed without an organized way of making them known," Booker said.

Each entrant received a T-shirt commemorating the race.

Officer wins armed forces powerlifting championship

By Jim Bolton
Fort Lee Public Affairs Office

FORT LEE, Va. — First Lt. Michael Stokes participated in a variety of sports while going to high school in his Deland, Fla., hometown, but when he became a cadet at the U.S. Military Academy, West Point, he fell in love with a sport in which he could truly excel.

While a cadet, Stokes, 25, was a member of the West Point powerlifting team and was named an All-American four years straight. Since then, he has continued to compete and recently returned to Fort Lee after placing first in the 198-pound weight class at the drug-free Armed Forces Powerlifting Championships conducted April 9 and 10 at Fort Hood, Texas.

At the championships, he also broke his own records in all three events of the competition: the squat, bench press and deadlift. These were the records which he had set at last year's championships, in which he also took first place.

"It was a very good meet for me," said Stokes, Kenner Army Community Hospital security and operations officer. "I couldn't complain."

In the squat, he lifted 700 pounds, which set an armed forces national record; bench pressed 440 pounds; and topped off the deadlift at 730 pounds, which also set an armed forces national record. His total for the competition was 1,870 pounds

Stokes, 25, explained that competition is in his nature. "If I didn't powerlift, I would be competing in something," he said. "I like powerlifting because I get to build myself up, see visible gains. I always have a goal to work toward."

By winning the Armed Forces Championships, Stokes became a member of the All-Armed Forces Powerlifting Team and qualified for the Senior Nationals Championships. However, he just completed Airborne School at Fort Benning, Ga., and will not have adequate time to train for the competition.

Last year, Stokes was the runner-up in his weight class at the senior nationals.

Stokes said he begins training for competitions about 10 weeks out. He starts with a light weight-more repetitions regimen until he peaks out. As he lowers the number of repetitions, he increases the weight he lifts until he gets used to the heavier weights to obtain the maximum effect — to be able to make up to nine solid lifts, three in each event, during competition.

"I hope to participate in a "touch-up" meet this fall and be prepared for the Senior Nationals next year," Stokes said. (Army News Service)

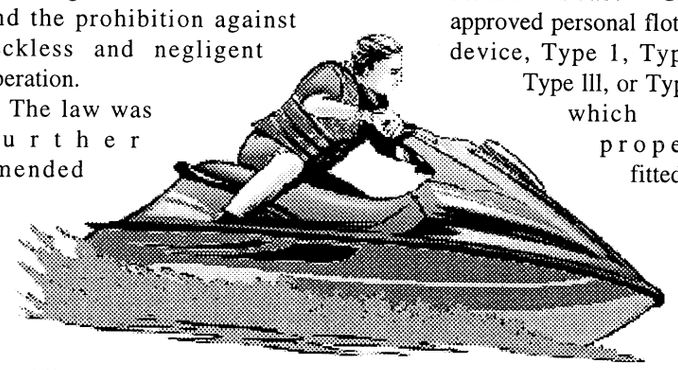
Georgia passes several laws for jet skiers

Department of Natural Resources

Several laws relating to the operation of jet skis and similar watercraft were passed by the 1992 Georgia General Assembly. Code Section 52-7.2 of the Georgia Boat Safety Act has been amended to include the following:

'Class A Vessel' means a boat less than 16 feet in length.

'Personal watercraft' means a Class A vessel which:



• Has an outboard motor or an inboard motor which uses an internal combustion engine powering a water jet pump as its primary source of motive propulsion.

• Is designed with the concept that the operator and passenger ride on the outside surfaces of the vessel as opposed to riding inside the vessel.

• Has the probability that the operator and passenger may, in the normal course of use, fall overboard.

Such a term includes, without limitation, any vessel where the operator and passenger ride on the outside surfaces of the vessel, even if the primary source of motive propulsion is a propeller, and any vessels commonly known as a 'jet ski.'

Therefore, operators of personal watercraft must abide by all laws regarding equipment and operation pertaining to Class A vessels, including the "rules of the road" and the prohibition against reckless and negligent operation.

The law was further amended by adding special conditions (listed below) to vessels that fall into the "personal watercraft' definition.

• Each person aboard a personal watercraft must wear a United States Coast Guard approved personal flotation device, Type 1, Type ll, Type lll, or Type V, which is properly fitted and fastened.

• No person shall rent, lease, or let for hire a personal watercraft to any person under the age of 15 years; provided, however, that personal watercraft may be rented, leased or let to a person between the ages of 12 and 15 years if such person is accompanied by and under the supervision of an adult 18 years of age or older.

• No person shall operate a personal watercraft on the waters of this state between the hours from one-half hour after sunset to one-half hour before sunrise.

• No person shall operate a personal watercraft on the waters of this state unless such personal watercraft is equipped with a self-circling device or a lanyard-type engine cutoff switch. If equipped with a self-circling device, such device must be fully operational. If equipped with a lanyard-type engine cutoff switch, the lanyard must be attached to the operators clothing, body, or PFD.

• No person shall operate a personal watercraft on the waters of this state in excess of five miles per hour within 100 feet of any moored or anchored vessel, shore, wharf, dock, pier, piling, bridge structure or abutment, or a person in the water.

For more information, contact any law enforcement officer at the Game and Fish Division.

Planning, key to outdoor canoe fun

Feature Outdoors

No one knows for sure when canoeing became a leisure activity but early explorers must have enjoyed the peaceful, reflective time on the water as much as today's recreational canoers.

Today, many families are leaving boat and camper behind, and venturing into the wilderness with a canoe and some outdoor gear to enjoy a quiet, solitary vacation.

It offers an affordable escape from the clamor of daily life and populated tourist areas, and it is a good way to spend quality time together and teach outdoor skills to kids.

"It's important to get the kids involved in activities, whether it's pitching the tent, learning to read a map, or exploring the surrounding area," said Scott Phillips, a canoeing expert for Old Town Canoe. "Parents have to take the time to be a kid again."

Canoeing is also an excellent recreation that families can enjoy close to home. There are streams or lakes near most communities. And with a canoe, you can access some secluded waters even on a heavily-traveled river.

The bays and inlets off larger bodies of water are often too shallow for boats. But a canoe can glide through four inches of water easily, to reach a quiet area for fishing or a picnic.

"Canoeing allows you to see nature in its purest form," Phillips said. "It's not unusual to come upon a nest of loons or ducks along a riverbank, or to spot a herd of deer on a shoreline, even right outside a big city. I've had deer actually walk toward me with their ears up," he continued. "Because a canoe is so silent, they can't quite identify what you are and are curious."

With the right canoe, families can enjoy a one-day river trip as well as rugged canoe camping in lake country.

Phillips recommends a versatile canoe that can be used in various waters: one that is fairly wide, 36 to 40 inches, with a shallow arch bottom and a moderate rocker. This style offers stability and works well on waves and on whitewater. It can also be maneuvered easily around obstacles and has good tracking ability.

Besides the right canoe, a good attitude will make the trip worthwhile for everyone. Here are some tips for getting the most out of a canoe camping trip:

• Preplan the trip so that you can enjoy a leisure time, instead of a mad rush. Take your time getting to the destination. Stop for breaks along the way to see points of interest, dine at a good restaurant, or hike at a state park.

• Don't make it hard for the children. Allow them to pitch in where necessary, but let the adults handle the harder jobs — loading the canoe, paddling and portaging, hauling heavy gear.

• Don't take risks by paddling all day until everyone is exhausted, or waiting until sunset to find a campsite. Take plenty of breaks.

• Avoid dangerous waters. Rushing water and underwater currents are stronger than you might anticipate, not to mention the danger of jutting rocks. Some whitewater is okay, but you might not have the right canoe to maneuver properly. Don't risk questionable water conditions.

• Everyone in the canoe should wear a proper fitting personal flotation device. Don't rely on your ability to swim.

• Leave a detailed itinerary with friends at home. Remember, you can't retrieve a forgotten item at the camp store in the wilderness, so plan ahead, bringing essentials for weather changes, shelter, clothing, food, water and first aid.

No future missions for building 90 and 227 are currently planned nor are missions for these structured anticipated. Government estimates for maintaining or preserving Buildings 90 and 227 in their present or past use is in excess of $1.6 and $1 million, respectively. Fort Benning does not consider it to be in the best interest of the public to continue to utilize scarce resources for the continued maintenance and uneconomical repair of structures for which there is no mission. Any questions or comments regarding this proposal can be referred to: Commander, US Army Infantry Center ATTN: ATZB-PWN-P (Mr. Larry R. Jones) Bldg. 6, Meloy Hall, (Room 415) Fort Benning, GA 31905-5122. Written comments must be received no later than (THIRTY DAYS FROM THE INITIAL PUBLICATION OF THIS NOTICE.)

Fort Benning to conduct Safety Stand Down Day

By John W. Peeler
Special to The Bayonet©

The post will observe its annual Safety Stand Down Day today with emphasis on saving lives and preserving resources through awareness.

Safety Stand Down Day gives commanders and directors an opportunity to suspend nonessential activities and to conduct safety training relevant to their mission.

Many units included briefings and activities that include off duty activities as well.

In a letter to commanders and directors, Maj. Gen. John W. Hendrix, post commanding general, said that privately owned vehicle deaths were up 20 percent Armywide and that one-fourth of all off-duty fatalities happened during four-day holiday weekends.

Many units on the installation will be conducting privately owned vehicle inspections and safety briefings to prepare for the upcoming Memorial Day weekend.

Other areas of concentration will be bicycle safety, fire safety, sports safety, tornado safety, lawn equipment safety, wildlife safety and water safety.

Company A and Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment, will be conducting a joint safety fair in Infantry Hall, Building 4.

"We will have representative from Triple A Auto Club, the Red Cross, Army Community Services and others," Staff Sgt. Earl Ellison, Company A, 1st Bn, 11th Inf. Regt. training noncommissioned officer, said.

Various stations will cover the hazards of drinking and driving, unexploded ordnance, storm precautions, inspection of POVs, child care, home security, and wrecked vehicles.

For more information on what your unit will be doing on safety day, contact your unit safety officer, commander or first sergeant.

AER campaign winding down

By John W. Peeler
Special to The Bayonet©

With one week remaining, the Army Emergency Relief campaign already surpassed its goal of $155,000.

"If everyone will continue soliciting and contributing, we will do very well," said Capt. Calvin Thomas, campaign coordinator.

Thomas said the campaign surpassed its goal with six units still left to report.

"We reached 118.49 percent of our goal for this year," Thomas said. "We had a few problems in the beginning with units being slow to solicit, some of our major units being deployed and other units preparing to deploy, but the campaign really took off."

"Thomas is doing an outstanding job with the campaign," Army Emergency Relief Officer Alfonso Deane said. "He is one of the reasons the campaign is so successful."

The major objectives of the campaign are to increase awareness about AER to all soldiers; publicize procedures so all Army personnel know how to obtain assistance; raise funds to support AER assistance programs; and inform people that their contributions help the Army take care of its own.

AER provides emergency financial assistance to active duty soldiers, retirees, widows and family members of active duty soldiers and retirees.

Assistance is provided on a case-by-case basis and is given as a no interest loan, grant, part loan or part grant.

For more information about AER, call Deane at 545-4043 or see your unit project person.

To meet customer needs and requests, The Bayonet recently added a Grips and Grins Page in the C Section. We've been running it for the past two week; and, if you haven't noticed, check it out in this issue on Page C-6.

The newspaper receives many requests to run awards, promotions and other photos of this type, so the staff decided to designate a page just for that.

Because of downsizing and the frequency and number of the events that generally produce grip and grin type photos, the newspaper's policy remains that we will not send a reporter to take these type photos, but we will run those submitted by our readers.

Photos you may submit include those from events such as balls, teas, coffees, club and organizational meetings and elections, award presentations, check presentations, official parties, dinners, dining events, dances and group photos.

If you have a good quality black and white or color photo of awards or promotion ceremonies, sporting teams, social events, etc., just send them to The Bayonet, Grips and Grins Page, U.S. Army Infantry Center Public Affairs Office, Infantry Hall, Room 606, Fort Benning, Ga. 31905. Recruiting ads feature post

By Brian R. Voller
Bayonet staff writer

Teamwork, leadership, limits and showing the human side of the Army were all put center stage Wednesday when photographers came to Fort Benning to shoot posters for the United States Army Recruiting Command.

"The posters are being shot to run in magazines starting in August," said Capt. Max Muramoto, Headquarters, U.S. Army Recruiting Command. "We're emphasizing the aspects of the Army we feel are the most important; teamwork, leadership, and the human side."

The posters are being shot in conjunction with the same characters who made up the television commercials shot on Fort Benning in October.

"We came back to Fort Benning so we could have continuity between the commercials and the posters," Muramoto said. "We went back to the units and got the same people who were in the television commercials, so when people see the adds in different magazines, they will be able to put the name with the face."

Brian R. Voller

Spc. Jeremy Hutson, 498th Medical Company (Air Ambulance), poses for a recruiting poster .

The reason people will be able to put the name with a face, Muramoto said, was because the posters being shot will include the real name rank and military occupational specialty of the character. Muramoto said this was being done to personalize the Army even more.

The ads will begin to show in magazines such as "Rolling Stone," "TV Guide," "Total TV" and "People" in August. The posters will also be dis-played in recruiting offices across the country.

Showing respect, appreciation for all military members, Americans take part in Memorial Day celebration

Honoring our fallen heroes

Army News Service

Memorial Day is a time to gather to honor those who gave their lives in defense of America.

Throughout the nation, we do this by proudly displaying the Stars and Stripes, by visiting cemeteries and monuments and by attending special events that recognize the sacrifices of our military dead.

Originally called Decoration Day, this honoring of our war dead is one of our oldest national holidays. The first formal observance can be tracked back to 1868, when the Grand Army of the Republic, the country's first veterans organization, designated May 30 as the day for decorating the graves of our military who fell into battle.

editorial

The roots of this celebration go back even further. Five years earlier, a number of women in Columbus, Miss., began the tradition by decorating the graves of confederate soldiers. When they noticed the unkempt graves of union troops nearby, the women also cleared those areas and laid flowers beside them. Soon, the tradition spread to other communities.

Although the holiday originally came about to honor those killed in the Civil War, it took on a broader meaning over time. Eventually, the name was changed to Memorial Day, and it became a time to remember those who died in later wars, as well — to remind ourselves that the freedoms we enjoy were not secured without great cost. We paid with the lives of the men and women of our armed forces. To pay that price was always a heavy burden, no matter how many or how few Americans fell — no matter how large or how small the battle or war that consumed them.

Those we remember and honor today now number more than 1 million. These were Americans who have given the last full measure of devotion while serving our nation in war. These war dead rest today in more than a hundred national cemeteries in the United States, and also in a number of military cemeteries overseas. Many more lie in other cemeteries across our land. They deserve our honor, our respect and our recognition.

These fallen heroes served valiantly in many battles. Some of the battles best remembered were those of the American Revolution, the War of 1812, the Civil War, World Wars I and II, the Korean War, the Vietnam War, Operation Desert Storm and Somalia. A few have fallen in Bosnia, where America most recently has deployed troops.

In far away places, these soldiers, sailors, airmen and Marines lived constantly in the shadow of danger and death. The following words, inscribed at Arlington National Cemetery, are dedicated to them: "Not for fame or reward, not for place or rank, not lured by ambition or goaded by necessity, but in simple obedience to duty as they understood it, these men suffered all, sacrificed all, dared all — and died."

American service members have been called upon to defend our nation many times, and have recognized, too, that the rights and privileges of freedom cannot be preserved so long as they are denied to other persons in other nations, however distant. We have come to realize that we are, indeed, our brothers' keepers. With compassion and the belief that human dignity and freedom are everywhere inseparable, American service members have repeatedly crossed oceans and continents to defend or assist those people whose liberty and lives were in peril.

Many of those we honor this Memorial Day lost their lives in defense of people unblessed by the liberty we Americans too often take for granted. The dedication and faith that led them to do so are truly American.

The service members we honor loved peace. Willingly, without thought of compensation, they turned their backs on material things to defend things more precious: freedom and individual liberty.

In some circles these days, it is unfashionable to speak of patriotism, to fly the flag, to profess faith in American ideals and to claim that our freedoms are worth any price. There are those who say that such values are unsophisticated and inappropriate to our time. But the service members we honor held those values without reservation. They lived by them. They died for them.

On this Memorial Day, we give thanks that so many have given so much to keep alive our heritage of liberty and democracy. If they had failed, we would not today be free citizens of a free nation.

But there is more to Memorial Day than remembrance and giving thanks for yesterday's fallen heroes: There is the challenge of tomorrow. Even as we look back, feeling pride and patriotism, we also look to the future.

Challenges of the future won't be any easier than those of the past. As the American patriot Thomas Paine said, "Those who expect to reap the blessings of freedom must...undergo the fatigue of supporting it."

Every American must be willing to render that support. All Americans must be willing to assume the burden of protecting the rights they enjoy. After all, freedom is never really free.

Let us resolve, then, to keep faith with our fallen comrades. In doing so, we can pay no higher tribute. It is our promise, our guarantee, that they did not sacrifice their lives in vain.

Dial 545-BOSS is the commander's action line for soldiers, family members and civilians to call when they have problems or complaints that can't be resolved elsewhere.

While it is not a substitute for the chain of command or for agencies established to provide assistance, the line offers another means of communication between Fort Benning's community and commanders.

The Bayonet features some of the calls that may benefit other members of the Fort Benning community.

The caller expressed concern about the Golf Course menu choices being changed and some items deleted.

The Food and Beverage manager, Community Operations Divisions, Directorate of Community Activities, related how the design, capabilities and intent of the snack bar did not lend itself to the large full-service menu previously posted. This, coupled with high labor cost to maintain the menu, was responsible for the large financial loss the food and beverage operation incurred over the past five months. The changes being implemented at the snack bar would improve service to the golfer, provide food and beverage within the design and capabilities of the facility and bring the food and beverage operation to a break-even or profitable status.

CG reminds soldiers to practice safety

Privately-owned vehicle accidental soldier deaths are up in the Army by 20 percent. A study of these fatalities from fiscal 1992 to fiscal 1996 indicates one-fourth of all off-duty fatalities happened during four-day holiday weekends.

On Monday, Americans will remember those who gave their lives for this great nation. The weekend also marks the start of summer season activities. To protect our personnel from injury and suffering, all leaders will brief personnel to:

- Drive sober and alert.
- Wear seat belts.
- Obey all traffic laws, especially the speed limits.
- Conduct a safety check of all vehicles.
- Drive during daylight as much as possible.
- Swim only in waters protected by lifeguards.
- Wear approved life jackets while boating.
- Follow safety rules for handling all weapons.

My personal goal is to celebrate this holiday weekend without the loss of any member of the Fort Benning community.

Have an enjoyable and safe holiday.

Soldiers market their skills, abilities at local JOB FAIR

By Marc Turchin
USAIC Public Affairs Office

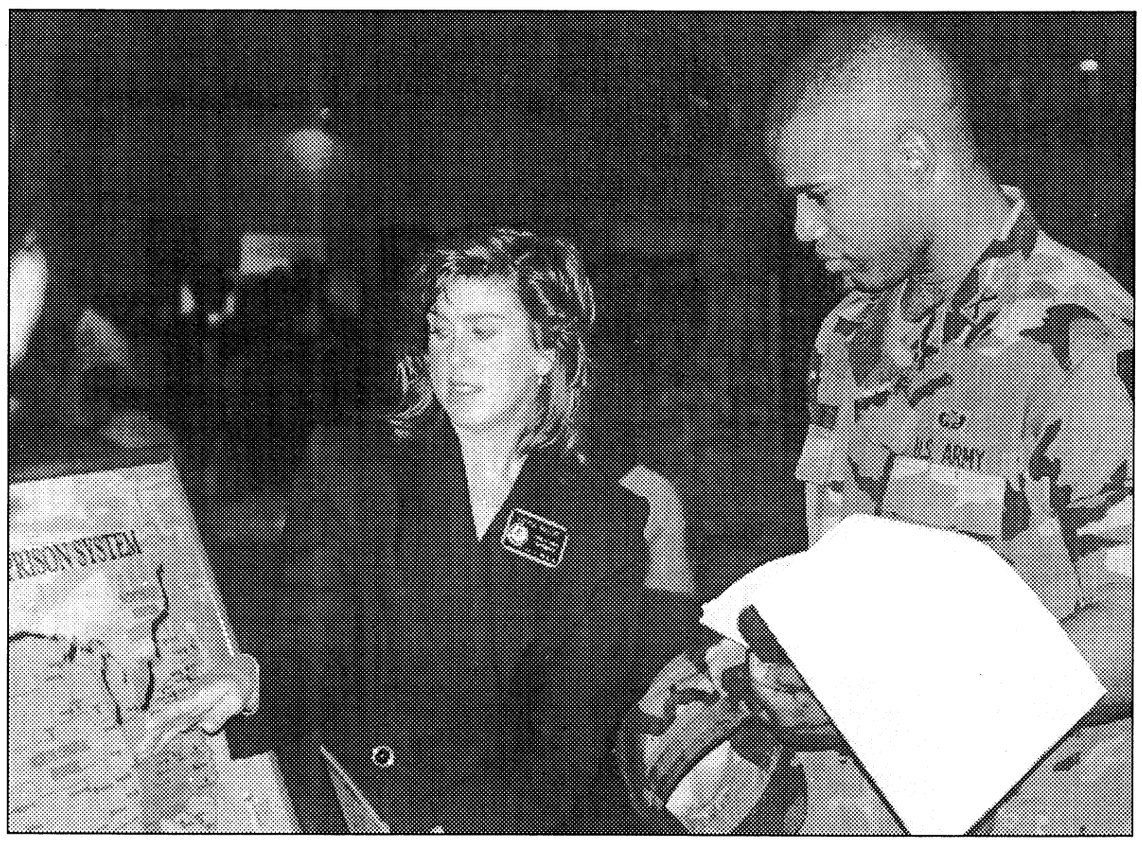
Military Appreciation Week is traditionally known for its athletic competitions concluding on Armed Forces Day. Who would have thought it would be a good time to find a job or learn about job opportunities?

For the third year in a row, the Chattahoochee Valley — Fort Benning Chapter of the Association of the United States Army sponsored the AUSA Job Fair at the Main NCO Club May 16.

Active duty soldiers, retirees, Department of Defense civilians and their families spent literally hours browsing the job market at the event, which included representatives from agencies from around the country.

Sgt. 1st Class Bernard Ford of 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment, said he was looking at jobs for himself and for the soldiers in his office. He said by having the job fair, it saves time for all soldiers.

"I think it helps (soldiers) find jobs better by the soldiers interacting with the vendors ... by giving them the vital information they need," Ford said.



Information played a big part in the fair.

Teresa Gaither, an executive secretary with the Federal Bureau of Prisons, said most of the people she talked with had plenty of questions to ask.

"Some of the most-asked questions have been what exactly is the bureau and (questions about) the pay scale," Gaither said. She also said they wanted to know about benefits and mobility. Gaither, along with Joe Gibson who is a service manager with Orkin Exterminating in Columbus, said military service members are excellent employees.

Gibson said it is soldiers' discipline and aptitude to stick to a task that make them good employees.

"We're fortunate enough to have a good percentage of our staff who are ex-military and retirees," he said.

Marc G. Turchin

Teresa Gaither, an executive secretary for the Federal Bureau of Prisons, shows Capt. Andre Wilson, of Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 2nd Battalion, 29th infantry Regiment, the variety of places where the bureau has prisons.

Some of the representatives at the Job Fair were ex-military personnel themselves. Some of the companies they represented included the Central Intelligence Agency, Primerica Financial Services, Firestone Tires, Muscogee County School District and the Tallahassee Police Department.

The companies were arranged in rows in the main ballroom, with displays set behind tables. Prospective employees talked to the representatives and were able to file applications with some job agencies.

Ford said he thought the fair was organized well and there were a lot of opportunities, but he would like to see job fairs conducted more often on post.

AUSA seeks nominees for civilian award

USAIC Public Affairs Office

The Association of the United States Army is seeking nominations for the fourth annual Heberling Award, which recognizes exemplary service by a civilian in soldier support, family support, Army community support, support of military operations and their impact on the success of the installations missions.

Nominations should be submitted to the Public Affairs Office, Room 608, Infantry Hall, Building 4, by June 7.

Nominations should include the nominee's name and organizations, as well as reasons why he or she should receive the award. Nominations should also include the nominator's name, address and phone number.

The award will be presented at the June 27 AUSA general membership meeting.

"There are very few missions on the post that civilians don't play an important role in," said Dan Smith, personnel management specialist for the Directorate of Civilian Personnel.

The Heberling award is an annual opportunity to recognize the contribution of the civilian component. It was for that reason the Chattahoochee Valley -Fort Benning Chapter of AUSA established the award.

Previous awardees include Sarah McLaney, Alan Stewart and Dale Ellis. Stewart went on to receive the National AUSA Award for Distinguished Civilian Service.

The award was named for the post's former director of Resource Management, who was also the first civilian to serve as comptroller of a military post.

The vestibule of Meloy Hall is also named for Heberling, who retired from Fort Benning after 34 years of government service. Heberling died in 1987.

"Heberling was truly a distinguished civilian," Smith said. "This award is prestigious, and it is very difficult to choose a winner because there are so many of our employees who are doing great things for Fort Benning on a daily basis."

Olympics could mean problems for travelers around city of Atlanta

TRADOC News Service

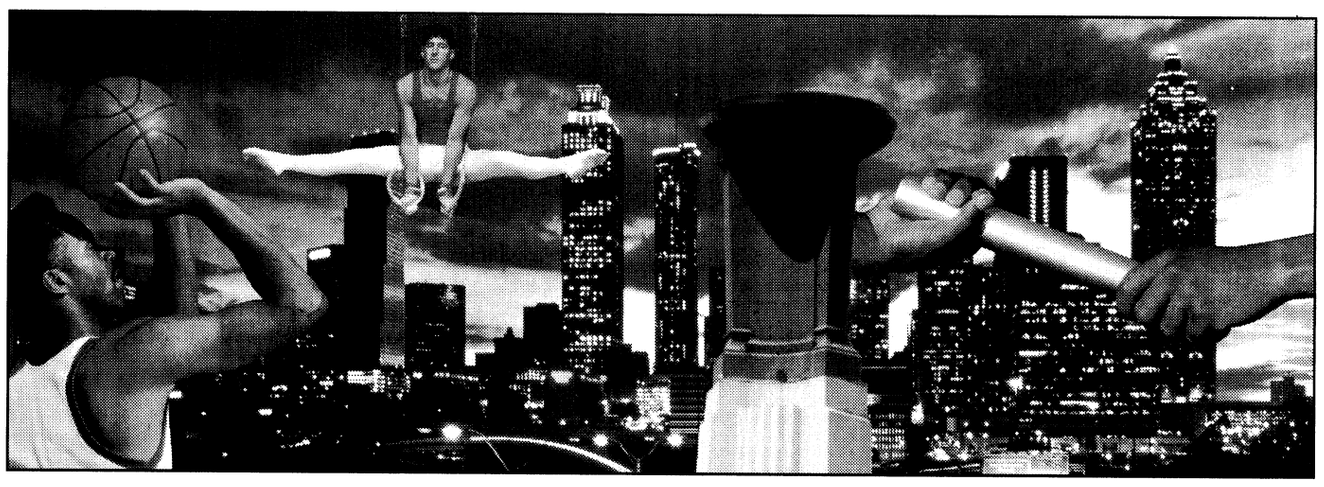
The world will converge on Atlanta for the 1996 summer Olympics, which means that most lodging and ground transportation in and around the city has already been taken.

The Olympics will be July 19 through Aug. 4, but transportation and lodging in the Atlanta area are expected to be profoundly affected during the buildup and drawdown period July 1 through Aug. 19, said Marie Murphy of the Training and Doctrine Command's Travel Division.

Of particular concern is the Atlanta airport, which is the major hub for commercial air travel in the southeastern United States.

Travelers who miss connecting flights at the airport may be stranded for long periods of time with no chance of finding lodging.

Murphy said driving to and from the airport will be severely constrained.



Additionally, traffic on many major routes into and around the city will be restricted from 6 a.m. to midnight daily throughout the Olympics.

Training and Doctrine Command installations that will be most affected are Fort Benning and Fort Gordon, Ga.; Fort Rucker and Fort McClellan, Ala.; and Fort Jackson, S.C. These installations represent one fourth of the Army's training base, according to Lt. Col. Richard Payne, of TRADOC's training operations management activity.

However, the Military Traffic Management Command has made arrangements for recruit travel to these installations, Murphy said.

About 30,000 students are also scheduled to attend functional and professional development courses at affected TRADOC posts and the Missile and Munitions School at Redstone Arsenal, Ala., Payne said. He said however, that military personnel traveling on official business and emergency leave from overseas through Atlanta may be caught unaware of the lodging and transportation shortages there.

Military and civilian personnel who are planning official or unofficial travel in the area should check with the installation transportation office or commercial office before deciding on a final itinerary. These offices are aware of the situation and can route travel around Atlanta, she said.

Armed Forces Day honors soldiers

By Lori Egan
Bayonet staff writer

Thousands of people turned out for Military Appreciation Week, which was sponsored by the Association of the U.S. Army, and ended Saturday with the Armed Forces Day festivities.

The day started early for nearly 900 people who participated in the "Burn the General Run," including Maj. Gen. John W. Hendrix. After running the three-mile course, Hendrix stopped before crossing the finish line to let those behind him receive the "I Burned the General" certificate.

"Running this course was fun," said Lori Buxton, who placed first in the female category after arriving 45 seconds late for the start of the race. "There was a lot of enthusiasm — the troops were calling cadence; it really kept you motivated."

The day continued with the awards ceremony. Nicole Young from the Infantry Training Brigade was crowned Ms. AUSA, large subchapter. Karen Smith, who represents the U.S. Army Medical Department Activity, was crowned Ms. AUSA, small subchapter.

After Hendrix presented the Follow Me Cup and the Commander's Trophy to the 11th Infantry Regiment for its winning athletic efforts, he told the crowd that the Army is a competitive business. Military Appreciation Week represents the spirit of competition, which gives the Army the winning edge it has to have, he said. He urged soldiers to continue to support AUSA because AUSA lobbies Congress on behalf of the military.

People chose to participate in Military Appreciation Week and Armed Forces Day for many different reasons.

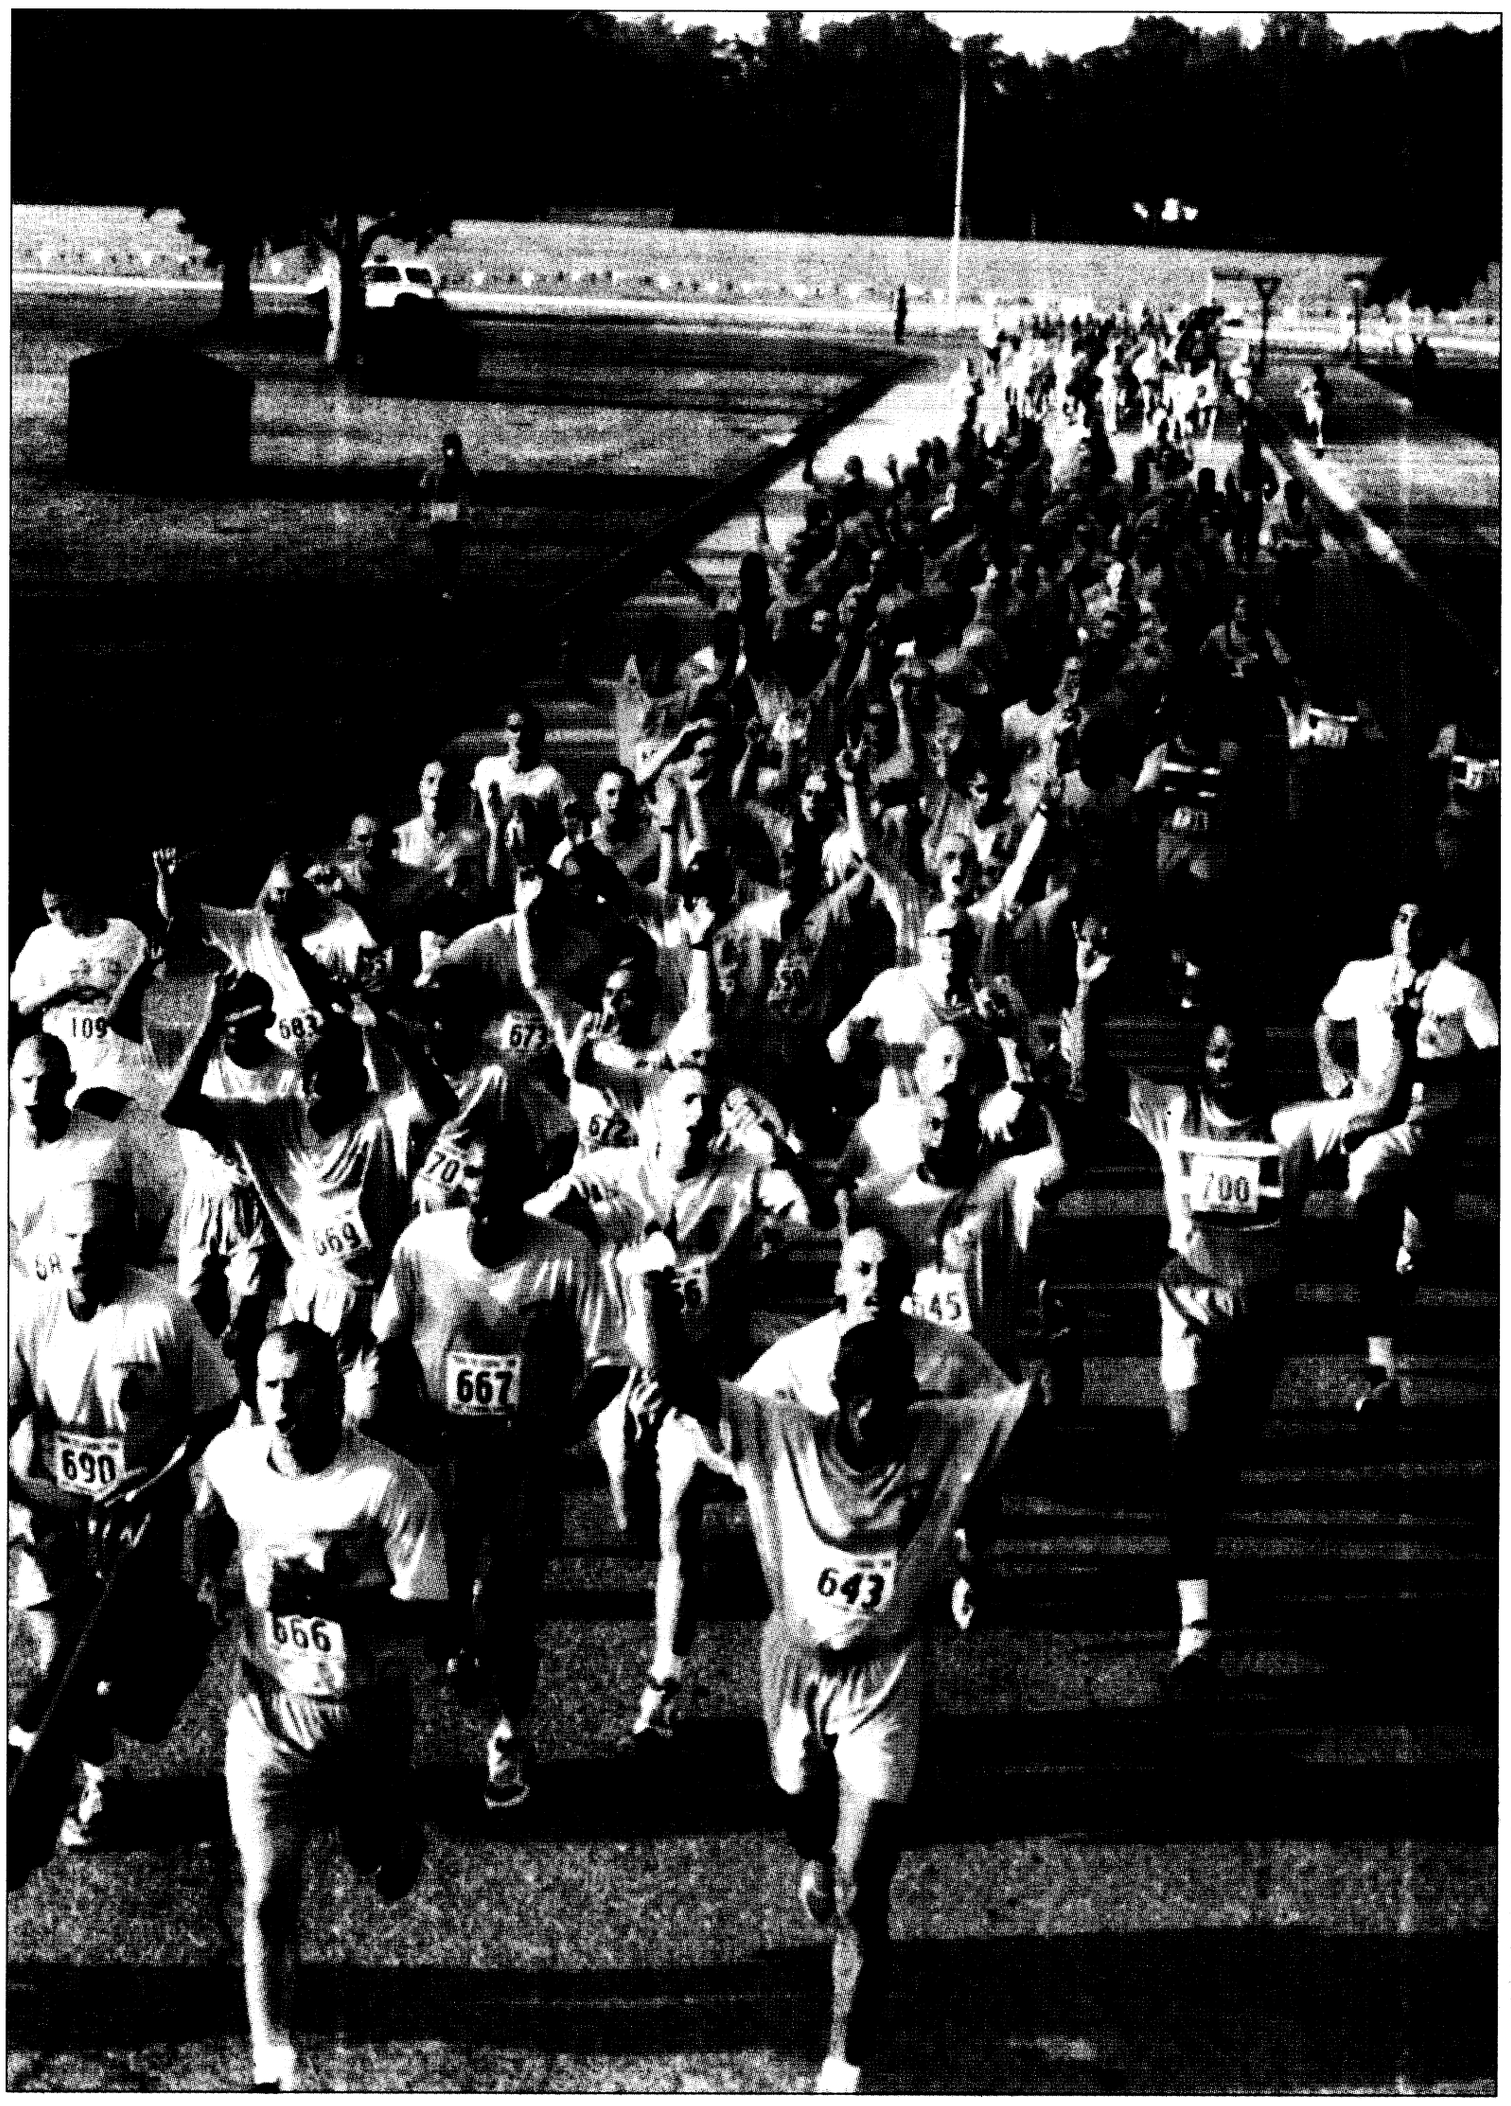
Joel Jadofski drove from Auburn, Ala. with his two sons, Zachary, 5, and Jacob, 4, to participate in the day's events.

"My dad was in the Army and I used to have a lot of fun at Armed Forces Day's events when I was a child," Jadofski said. "I thought it was neat when I was a kid and thought it would be neat for the boys."

Capt. Alan Kelly, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regt. attended Armed Forces Day with his family.

"We came to have fun — to celebrate Armed Forces Day, but also to make sure we continue to support and to teach our children to respect the military who came before us," Kelly said.

Soldiers volunteered their time to run booths, cook hot dogs, give children rides in high-mobility, multi purpose wheeled vehicles and hand out balloons.



"I'm here to support AUSA," said Sgt. Charles Maxwell, 608th Ordnance Company, who was a volunteer in the picnic area.

"I wanted to do all that I could to represent MEDDAC. We're not a large unit, so we need to do a lot," said Officer Candidate John Detro, U.S. Army Medical Department Activity, who finished first in the "Burn the General Run." This was after he had competed in the track and field competitions and the combat cross country.

EOD DISPLAY

Explosive experts demonstrate bomb hazards

By Amy Durham
Special to the Bayonet©

The phrase "If you see me running, you better catch up" is printed on a wall poster in the small building in which 21 Army explosive ordnance specialists work.

But all humor aside, members of the 89th Ordnance Company (Explosive Ordnance Disposal) recently demonstrated the serious business of unexploded ordnance and improvised explosive devices to more than 40 officials from Fort Benning and regional law enforcement agencies.

According to 1st Sgt. Bob Trueman, the May 15 liaison visit was a part of the unit's annual requirement to provide unexploded ordnance briefings to agencies within its area of responsibility which encompasses a total of 55 counties in Alabama, Georgia and Florida.

With the Olympics coming to Georgia this summer and this being an election campaign year, the 89th commander elected to bring representatives to Fort Benning for an update.

"We were able to cover more information by bringing them to post," he said. "We were able to provide more displays and demonstrate effects of various explosive devices."

Aside from the information briefing and equipment display, some of the scenarios included: a robot demonstration, used for recovering , moving or disrupting bombs; remote opening of a vehicle using ropes and a screwdriver to open a car from a safe distance; a pipe bomb placed behind the seat of an ambulance; disruption charge on a car to disrupt a bomb without physically opening the car and others.

Connie Fugate

The Ordnance Company demonstrates the effects of a package bomb placed inside of a desk during the EOD display conducted May 15 on Malone Range No. 1.

Sgt. Bruce Whitehead, one of the Columbus Police Department 's two-man bomb squad, whose department receives several calls a month, said the information and demonstrations at Malone Range were extremely beneficial.

"I've always seen photos and slides of package bomb effects in training," he said. "But this was the first time I've seen one detonated."

Agency feedback is proof the demonstration was successfully informative and educational.

"Several of them (visiting officials) requested classes for their agencies," Trueman said.

Whitehead was one of those requesting assistance.

"This type of briefing was a lot more informative than others I've been to in the past," he said, "and I would like to use it for training our rookies."

Because of its proximity to Fort Benning, Whitehead said his department relied on the partnership between Fort Benning and Columbus.

"When we call, they (EOD) respond," he said.

Cable TV could change training

By Jim Caldwell
TRADOC News Service

FORT MONROE, Va. — Local cable access channels on 60 Army installations in the United States, better known as commanders' channels, may become another outlet for delivering training to soldiers and civilian employees.

The concept will be demonstrated this summer and fall at Fort Hood, Texas, when three courses will be taught to members of III Corps. It is part of Training and Doctrine Command's Warnet pilot program.

"Busy soldiers can receive training at their home stations, reducing time away from their families and their units," said Dr. Mimi Stout, commander's channel manager in TRADOC's futures training division.

"Distance learning through commanders' channels can deliver standardized training while reducing travel expenses," she said. "It has the potential to reach large numbers of soldiers and civilians quickly and reduce the cost of instructor-to-student contact hours for repetitive training."

Nearly every Army installation in the country receives cable TV service from local companies. A cable channel can be provided solely for the installation's use. Many posts with broadcast facilities schedule local informational programs or programs provided by the Soldiers Radio-TV Service.

When there is no local programming on the commander's channel, it can be used to deliver training classes.

The pilot courses are an eight-hour hazardous materials handling recertification course to be taught in June; the 22-hour

SOA gets new commander for School Battalion

By Judith O'Toole
School of the Americas

The School Battalion at the School of the Americas got a new commander May 20 at Ridgway Hall.

Lt. Col. Stephen E. Keeling replaced Maj. Shepard A. Sawyer, who had been the interim battalion commander for the past two months. Sawyer will become SOA's new chief of staff. Before taking command of the battalion, Sawyer headed the school's Special Operations Detachment.

Col. Roy R. Trumble, SOA commandant, was the reviewing officer for the ceremony. He said that the job of running the School Battalion is not always an easy job.

"SOA is unique," Trumble said. "We are also a national security asset. We get a lot of attention on any given day, and those two priorities are competing for our attention."

He said that since SOA is the only U.S. military school dedicated to instructing other nations in their own language, it is a special challenge and a heavy responsibility for a commander. He said the school is extremely fortunate to have an officer of Keeling's calibre and experience to assume command of this battalion.

Before this assignment, Keeling commanded the Psychological Operations Dissemination Battalion at Fort Bragg, N.C. As a field artillery officer, his assignments have included platoon leader, company commander and battalion executive officer.

Keeling was commissioned through ROTC at Jacksonville State University, Fla., with a bachelor of arts degree in 1976. He also has a master's degree in area studies from Cornell University, N.Y.

"I am happy to be at Fort Benning and at the School of the Americas, and I've been anticipating this day for the past 20 years," Keeling said.

He said that his strength is in his "troop time." Keeling has been able to work closely with soldiers throughout his career, and he said he is glad that he will be able to continue that at SOA.

"I understand the importance of the school's mission," Keeling said. "I proudly accept the colors of this unit and look forward to the challenge ahead."

Green Beret receives Soldiers Medal

By Eric Farris
Army News Service

FORT POLK, La. — Chief Warrant Officer 2 Wade Chapple, a planner with the Special Operations Forces, Plans Section, received the Soldiers Medal May 5. Lt. Gen. J.T. Scott, commander, U.S. Army Special Operations Command, made the presentation.

Chapple recently came to the training center after wrapping up a three-year tour as a tactical training adviser to the Colombian Army's 10th Airborne Brigade in Melgar, Republic of Colombia. His advisory mission was unique because he was individually assigned to the Colombian Army installation.

The incident that led to the medal occurred May 11, 1995. Chapple was advising three counter-guerrilla platoons during tactical training patrols near Melgar,

Fort Sill Battery conducts training in Korea

By Michael Maddox
Army News Service

After three weeks of traveling and training in unfamiliar terrain throughout South Korea, 35 soldiers from of Battery C, 6th Battalion, 27th Field Artillery, are back at Fort Sill a little more worldly-wise and proven combat multipliers.

The soldiers duplicated a deployment under combat conditions — a real-life, go-to-war scenario, complete with a flight to a foreign country and a live-fire exercise. They loaded their battery and support equipment and headed out on three Air Force C-17s for a 14-hour flight to K-16, South Korea.

The airload training for the deployment and the return trip offered an excellent opportunity for the soldiers to jump right in and learn how to tie down their equipment in a wartime deployment, said Capt. Dave Burwell, C Bat., 6th Bn., 27th FA commander.

"Getting to tie down equipment on a plane isn't a very frequent event," Burwell said. "It's good training to be able to do the job and then take off with it on a deployment."

Learning from Air Force personnel was an added benefit, Burwell said.

"The soldiers realized the tie-down procedures are very similar to those used during a rail load," Burwell said. "The soldiers adapted very quickly. I think they realize that the load master is the one running the show and that he'll take care of you."

The soldiers were originally scheduled to land at R-222, near the Demilitarized Zone, to demonstrate United States deployment capabilities. This was changed at the last minute due to the political tension in the region, said 2nd Lt. Nicholas Joslin, platoon leader for Btry. C, 6th Bn., 27th FA.

"Officials at the U.S. Embassy felt for us to land in R-222 would be kind of provocative," Joslin said, "although that was our original mission — to demonstrate that the C-17s are capable of landing on a dirt runway, unimproved, and land in forward positions. But the current situation in North Korea dictated that we change our plans for landing so we didn't appear hostile."

From K-16, the soldiers moved to Camp Stanley, South Korea, where the soldiers joined 6th Battalion, 37th Field Artillery, 2nd Infantry Division, for the battalion's Warstrike External Evaluation.

Battery C soldiers spent the next 10 days in the field. Between cramped sleeping conditions and the smell of human waste fertilizer in the fields hanging in the air, and not knowing when to expect the next resupply, the soldiers got a first-hand feel for combat conditions in Korea.

Training so close to a real-life combat mission was a great experience for the soldiers, said Joslin.

"Warstrike is their external evaluation where they have a unit from somewhere else come in and evaluate their practices and procedures," Joslin said. "It gives them ideas on some of the ways they can improve operations. It's a big thing, because it's somebody from outside the unit doing the evaluating and looking at everything you do."

Despite some mechanical problems with one of their launchers, the 6th Bn., 27th FA soldiers exceeded everyone's expectations acting as one of the leaders during the evaluation.

The soldiers also performed a live-fire during the external evaluation. They fired reduced range practice rockets from the Chor-won Valley. They learned that this is done a little differently in Korea than at home.

"It was a very different experience," Joslin said. "It was a lot slower than when we fire at Fort Sill. They are much more concerned about the safety factor, because they shoot into a much smaller impact area. It was kind of trying because it was so slow, but all and all, the live-fire was successful — all of the rockets were safe and observed."

Taking part in 6th-37th FA's movement training and live-fire provided more challenges than normal training at Fort Sill, said Spc. Michael Strate, 6th Bn., 27th FA crew member.

"It was good experience for us to go out there and fire with another whole battalion," he said. "It was something unique that a lot of soldiers don't get the chance to do today."

The 6th Bn., 27th FA soldiers fired "rippers" in preparation for the trip to Korea before they left Fort Sill. This gave the soldiers some added experience in preparation for the live-fire in Korea, Joslin said.

"I think all of the training we did before we left was a good experience," Joslin said. "Firing at Fort Sill was the first time we had ever fired the reduced range practice rockets, which is all they fire in Korea. Plus, we had practiced some of the other things they do that are different, like placing concertina wire around the positions — things that we don't normally have the opportunity to do."

926th medical detachment soldiers deploy to Haiti for UN support

By Kathy Dixon
926th Medical Detachment

On March 29, the 926th Medical Detachment (Preventive Medicine) had three soldiers deploy to Haiti in support of United Nations Forces during Exercise Fairwinds. The commander, Maj. Thomas Little, along with two other soldiers of the regular ten soldier detachment are providing preventive medicine services for U.N. Forces.

Services include pesticide spraying, food services facility inspections, and chemical and bacteriological testing of water. They are also assisting with scheduled Medical Readiness Training Exercises.

On May 1 Spc. John Purvis, one of the three soldiers and a preventtive medicine specialist, was awarded the Army Achievement Medal for his heroic efforts in assistant a burn victim.

"If it were not for Spc. Purvis' intervention," said Lt. Col. Deogracia Quinones, medical task force commander. "The soldier could have sustained major injuries."

The soldiers are scheduled to return to Fort Benning in late November.

about 100 miles southwest of Bogota in the Andes Mountains.

"We were conducting reconnaissance with the company commander in preparation for upcoming ambush training," Chapple said. "A little later in the day, a couple of people from a nearby village informed us there was a wounded man up in the mountains."

Chapple and his group considered several possibilities before reacting to the information.

"At first we thought it was one of our men," Chapple said. "The actual guerrilla threat is very high in that country so we also had to consider the possibility that this was a trap."

Chapple and the Colombians decided to investigate. Along the way, they encountered a mountain rescue team.

"I established contact with the commander of the team; he gave me the location of a topographer who had fallen off a cliff face and was severely injured," Chapple said. Through binoculars, the injured man appeared to be about 4,000 feet above his position on a vertical mountain face, Chapple said.

The man appeared to have fallen about 500 feet before hitting a large boulder balanced on a small ledge.

"I asked the rescue team what their plan was: "too dangerous," they said. I told them that was totally unacceptable."

The rescue team refused to lend their equipment, but when Chapple asked for two men, the team commander agreed.

The trio headed for the Colombian Air Force Base by ground. Chapple went directly to the base commander and requested a helicopter. To his surprise, the commander had him in the air within 45 minutes.

It took about 30 minutes to locate the spot. Once they found the topographer, the difficulty of his situation became readily apparent.

"We could only set down about 700 feet below the victim on a small 'finger'; the pilot could only set part of the helicopter on this finger so we had to deplane quickly to allow him to get airborne again," he continued.

"It took us about one and a half hours to climb 700 feet," Chapple said. "It was a difficult climb."

The victim was in severe shock. Assessing his injuries, Chapple found a double compound leg fracture, a fractured collarbone, a lumbar fracture and severe head injuries.

"He was slow and unresponsive," Chapple said. "This man had already accepted the fact that he was going to die."

After Chapple immobilized him, the trio eased the man onto the stretcher and strapped him on with their belts and strips of the man's clothing. Chapple gave the man an I.V. to hydrate him.

Chapple then secured a stretcher around his waist with a belt and began the descent. His two climbers were below the level of the stretcher on either side helping to guide it around obstacles while Chapple did his best to hold on.

"It took us about an hour to get down," he said. "There were times we were sliding like a toboggan. It was one of the hardest things I've ever done."

The helicopter returned to the tiny ledge just before dark. They had to hurry because the helicopter could only stay in the air for a short time longer.

"We made it to the helicopter and flew back to the air force base where an ambulance took us to the hospital," he said. "I continued to perform what life support I could." The man was eventually moved to a larger medical facility for more advanced care.

Chapple met the man three months later. He could walk and was in good health considering the extent of his injuries.

"He told me he would never have another bad thing to say about Americans or the U.S. military," Chapple said. "As far as this man is concerned, Wade Chapple didn't rescue him, the U.S. military did. I like that," Chapple said.

Fort Bragg conducts airdrop

By Scott Kelley
Army News Service

FORT BRAGG, N.C. — Above the night sky, the rumble of aircraft engines heralded the largest airdrop of military equipment and personnel since World War II.

Throughout the night, 144 C-130 and C-141 aircraft flew sortie after sortie, depositing thousands of American and British paratroopers and their equipment onto Fort Bragg drop zones for the Combined Joint Task Force Exercise '96.

The paratrooper airborne jump took years of planning, months of preparation and days to complete, and involved British and American service members on an unheard of training scale.

"For the U.S. and 82nd Airborne Division, it exercises the entire division in one big jump," said Maj. Ricky Gibbs, joint exercise officer, 18th Airborne Corps. "For the British, it's an exercise to purify their rapid deployment task force, which is a division-size force. They're capitalizing on all the assets available for this one exercise."

The jump was the main showpiece of Royal Dragon, one of three separate exercises that were linked together.

A publication about the month-long exercise described the airborne troopers as the "key forces in ending Koronan aggression in the Decisive Combat phase."

The fictitious Kartuna (the country under Koronan aggression) is made up mostly of Fort Bragg's training areas. It was into this area that the 82nd Airborne Division, British 5 Airborne Brigade and other paratrooper units jumped at night.

In addition to the paratroopers, several air assault operations were conducted on Fort Bragg and Camp Mackall landing zones, bringing the total number of assault soldiers to more than 7,000.

After securing the drop zones and landing zones and bringing in additional supplies, the paratroopers began pushing southward, fighting the Koronan army (10th Mountain Division soldiers) until their aggression stopped.

The courses will originate from the Army Logistics Management College, Fort Lee, Va., and the U.S. Army Sergeants Major Academy, Fort Bliss, Texas, respectively.

Students can receive the training in the barracks, family quarters or a classroom. The training can be made interactive with the use of an 800 number to the originating studio.

"Future courses can use scheduled phone banks, a time in which students may call in their questions and receive answers from instructors," Stout said. "Other options are to use E-mail, voice mail and Internet home pages."

U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit

What do Mick Jagger, Richard Nixon, Clint Eastwood and Sgt. Theresa E. DeWitt of the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit have in common? They were all captured on film by world-famous photographer Annie Leibovtz.

Leibovtz visited Fort Benning May 18 to photograph DeWitt for a book and display she has been commissioned to do for the 1996 Olympics in Atlanta. DeWitt, a USAMU shotgun shooter, is a member of the 1996 U.S. Olympic Shooting Team and will compete in the women's double trap competition in July at the Olympics.

Leibovtz, the daughter of an Air Force colonel, started her career at 19 years old as a photographer for Rolling Stone magazine. Her work has appeared in every major American magazine including Life, Time, Newsweek, New York Times Magazine, Enquirer, Vogue and Vanity Fair, as well as many overseas publications, such as the London Independent Magazine and the Paris Match.

Among her best known photographs are those of Whoopi Goldberg, Bette Midler, Demi Moore, Roseanne and Michael Jackson. She is famous for her photographs of John Lennon and Yoko Ono in an embrace taken only a few hours before he was killed, and her portfolio on the O.J. Simpson trial for The New Yorker. She has photographed actors, politicians, writers, athletes, singers, artists, dancers and now a military female Olympic shotgun shooter.

DeWitt was raised in Cincinnati, Ohio and received a bachelor's degree in wildlife management from Ohio State University in 1985. She joined the Army in 1991 and was assigned to the Marksmanship Unit following her competition of basic training and military police school. She has won numerous competitions in women's double trap, including a Silver Medals at the 1996 World Cup in Atlanta, a Gold Medal at the 1995 Pan American Games in Buenos Aires, Argentina, Silver Medals at the 1995 and 1994 U. S. Championships, and a Team Silver Medal at the 1994 World Cup in Beijing, China.

1/15 begins chapter

By Robin Shawlinski
3rd Brigade, 3rd Infantry Division

The 1st Battalion, 15th Infantry of the 3rd Brigade, 3rd Infantry Division (Mechanized), on Kelley Hill established the first Continental United States chapter of the National Infantryman's Association since its rebirth in 1994.

Commanding General Maj. Gen. John W. Hendrix, National Infantryman's Association executive officer retired Col. Biff Hadden, and NIA president retired Maj. Gen. Kenneth C. Leuer presented the 1st Bn., 15th Inf., with their chapter, the Old Hand's chapter at the Infantry Conference dinner May 7.

"We've relied on word of mouth to transmit information about the rejuvenation of the association," said retired Col. Biff Hadden. "We're letting it grow slower based on the willing support of infantrymen.

To establish the chapter, the unit had to recruit 20 members and elect a board made up of a president, vice president, secretary and treasurer. The unit then applied to the National Infantryman's Association board and received its bylaws.

"You look at every other branch and they've all got their special (branch) medallions and being the Queen of Battle, we didn't have anything," said Command Sgt. Maj. Hubert Key, battalion command sergeant major.

"(Creating an association and chapter) is the only recognition the infantry has and its important we do that," Key said.

The 1st Bn., 15th Inf., voted its chain of command as its board members. Battalion commander Lt. Col. Edward M. Cook is president, Battalion command sergeant major, Key is vice president; Capt. Curtis Price, battalion personnel officer, is secretary; and Lt. Marcus White, battalion logistics officer, is treasurer.

The association's beginnings date back to 1893 when it was created as the Infantry Society.

It operated until 1921 when it became the Infantry Association and remained in operation until 1950. During that year it merged with other military associations to create the Association of the United States Army.

In April of 1982, the Infantry Association was reestablished at Fort Benning and operated as a nominal organization for the subscribers of Infantry magazine. In 1994, the Infantry Association was reviewed and incorporated as the National Infantryman's Association.

"The purpose of the Association is create a foundation for infantrymen ... to support the chief of the infantry ... to recognize infantrymen of the past and present and supporters of the infantry ... to promote infantrymen and remind everyone the infantry is the core branch of the Army ... to preserve the history and traditions of the Infantryman through support of the National Infantry Museum," Hadden said.

Infantry Ball set

By Ron Tillman
11th Infantry Regiment

The Infantry Ball June 14 at the Fort Benning Officers' Club is an annual celebration intended to bring together the infantry community.

This year, infantrymen and their wives will be celebrating 221 years of historical excellence, tradition and customs, and they will recognize a soldier whose career has been marked by contributions, dedication and sacrifice.

Retired Gen. James J. Lindsay, former commander-in-chief, U.S. Special Operations Command and former director of the Joint Deployment Agency, is this year's recipient of the Doughboy Award, which will be presented at the ball.

The Infantry Ball is open to all officers and enlisted soldiers, regardless of branch. Individual units will handle the invitations and sale of tickets.

OPEN HOUSE

Retirees receive latest information

By Amy Durham
Special to The Bayonet©

Hundreds of military retirees and their spouses gathered at Fort Benning for the services, information and fellowship of others during the 14th annual Retiree Open House May 16 though 18.

Many traveled varying distances to participate in the many activities planned throughout the three-day event, but each retired service member came with a personal agenda. Some came to receive physicals at Martin Army Community Hospital, correct pay problems, or to learn more about Tricare, the new multiservice health plan scheduled to soon replace the existing Civilian Health and Medical Program of the Uniformed Services.

Although most of the 700 hundred attendees traveled from parts of Georgia, Alabama and Florida, one man flew in from west of the Mississippi River to participate in the open house. Retired Air Force Lt. Col. José L. Ramirez, flew in from Houston, Texas., to hear about Tricare.

Currently insured under another plan, 67-year-old Ramirez, who considers himself to be fairly healthy, said he was open to change depending on what Tricare had to offer.

Ramirez was not alone in his curiosity. Many retirees and spouses anxiously awaited the Saturday morning briefing by Martin Army Community Hospital representatives.

Retired Army Command Sgt. Maj. Bobby Davenport checks out the view from an M-1 Abrams tank as his wife, Joanne, looks on. The couple joined several hundred others to participate in the Retiree Open House May 16 through 18.

Retired Army Staff Sgt. Renzie B. Knighton, 69, said during the Friday evening barbecue in the Fort Benning Officers' Club, that Tricare would be just a name to him until the briefing because he did not know what it was about. He and his wife, Carolyn, 60, drove from Albany, Ga., to participate in all the activities planned for the open house. Since they reside outside a 40-mile radius of MACH, both Knighton and his wife took advantage of physicals offered specifically for those outside the cachement area.

According to Friede McDonald, Fort Benning's Retirement Services officer, 105 people received physicals May 16. Of the other events, 60 individuals toured the Battle Space Battlelab Simulation Network facility May 17, and 140 took advantage of the barbecue dinner and dancing at the Officers' Club.

The majority of participants attended the May 18 "County Fair" of information and services booths set up along the corridors of Infantry Hall. While representatives from various post and local agencies passed out brochures and updated retirees on the services they provide, Maj. Gen. John W. Hendrix, commanding general, informed hundreds more about not only today's Army and the Army of the next century, but also briefed the crowd on Force XXI.

"The basic mission of the infantry will remain the same," Hendrix said as he explained the infantry's expanding roles.

After the Tricare briefing, staff from various MACH departments provided screenings and information about health issues. Participants were able to have their blood pressure, eyes, feet and cholesterol checked during the open house health fair.

McDonald said although most open house events were not new, it seemed the agency representatives go out of their way to make each year bigger and better.

Open house planners were able to provide a special addition to the agenda this year. Representatives from the Defense Finance and Accounting Service in Cleveland, Ohio, set up computers in Building 4 so they could help retirees with any pay problems.

"Most of the requests were for allotment changes and mailing address changes," McDonald said.

Overall, open house participation was up from last year's 450, McDonald said. Although she was pleased by the increase, McDonald believed the desire to know more about Tricare brought out more people.

But, getting and having access to information is what the open house is all about, McDonald conceded. If retirees do not use forums like this, no one else will suffer but themselves, she said.

Post Girl Scouts earn top honors for service

By Sally Pearson
Fort Benning Girl Scouts

The Concharty Council of Girl Scouts conducted its annual cadet and senior reception at the Columbus Museum May 4.

Among the honorees were Sylvia Singleton and Cynthia Cole, two members of the Fort Benning Girl Scouts.

Third-year cadet Sylvia Singleton, daughter of Command Sgt. Maj. Edmond and Barbara Singleton, received a Silver Leadership Award and a Silver Award. She earned her Silver Leadership Award by displaying various styles of exceptional leadership skills during girl scouting.

To complete her project for the silver award, Sylvia provided a Hallelujah party for the children of the chapel. She contacted various local agencies.

She was able to garner support from the Post Exchange at the Main Mall and Burger King, which provided donations and prizes; Faith Middle School, which provided facility space; and members of the Protestant Women of the Chapel who volunteered their time.

From beginning to end, the project took Sylvia more than six weeks of planning and preparation. The Silver Award is the highest award that can be earned as a cadet Girl Scout. Sylvia will begin next year as a first year senior in scouting.

Cynthia Cole, daughter of Chief Warrant Officer 2 William and Ruth Cole, is in her third year as a senior scout and last year of scouting. She earned her Gold Award, which is the highest award that can be attained as a Girl Scout and is equivalent to a Boy Scout Eagle Award.

Cole focused her efforts on the Blue Bird project, which took more than four months to complete. She performed two months of research, working with area offices including the Fish and Wildlife Branch, Department of Public Works, and the Audubon Society of Columbus.

Her task also included monitoring the blue bird population on Fort Benning. For two months, she made weekly checks on two blue bird trails in which she observed the habits of the birds and their fledglings.

Singleton and Cole

Also, Laura Zahn and Amber Floyd each earned their pins for 10 years of service to Girl Scouting.

11th Regiment adopts local elementary school

By Ron Tillman
11th Infantry Regiment

Soldiers and officer candidates from the 11th Infantry Regiment recently assisted faculty, students and staff of the Muscogee Elementary School with their annual "Field Day."

Building a bond of friendship with the students, regimental soldiers and officer candidates helped make the field day a success, officials said. Many of them participated in many capacities such as referees, game coordinators and cheering section.

A performance by members of the Junior Reserve Officer Training Corps Color Guard, led by Cadet James Lewis from Kendrick High School, highlighted the opening ceremonies.

Retired Lt. Col. Jerry Wall and retired Command Sgt. Maj. Jimmy J. Richards are the senior Army instructors for the Kendrick High School JROTC.

Joanne Wilson, principal, said this was the first time soldiers from Fort Benning participated in field day activities.

Several teachers commented on the cooperation between the Columbus school and Fort Benning soldiers.

"It was very exciting having the soldiers here; they made good role models for the children," Karen Metasavage said.

Teacher Debbie Munoz said she was glad to have the Fort Benning soldiers participate.

Spc. Chrystal Puryear, Company A, 1st Battalion., 11th Infantry Regiment., saw her part in the activities as "welcome change" and said helping out made her feel good.

Command Sgt. Maj. Joe Heckard, regiment command sergeant major, said the regiment plans to build a running track and "upgrade the school's playground." Muscogee Elementary School has educated the community's children since the early 1950s and currently has a student population of more 450 children and a staff and faculty numbering 70 personnel, teaching and servicing grades kindergarten through fifth grade.

The school coach, Cleophus Holt Jr., coordinated the field day competition according to Assistant Principal Jeanella Pendleton.

Pet care providers offer kitten-proofing tips

Veterinary Services

Kittens are lively and curious, which can lead them into serious trouble unless the owner takes preventive measures. A kitten has a lower vantage point than humans and may be attracted to things the owner does not see while standing.

It is almost impossible to completely kitten proof a home, but for the kitten's safety, here are some suggestions.

• Securely screen all windows to help prevent falls, and keep kittens off balconies, upper porches and high decks.

• Securely store cleaning supplies, bleach, paint, pesticides, medications and antifreeze.

• Remove poisonous plants or hang out of kittens' reach. Some plants poisonous to cats include amaryllis, azalea, holly, mistletoe, morning glory, oleander, poinsettia, rubber plant and weeping fig.

• Keep toilet lids down. Kittens may play in the water, and the lid could close and trap them; also, toilet bowl cleaners are harmful if swallowed.

• Never give your kitten any medication without first consulting a veterinarian. Among the drugs dangerous to kittens are aspirin, acetaminophen, diet pills and tranquilizers.

• Keep sewing supplies out of the kitten's reach. Buttons, needles, pins and threads can hurt its mouth or internal organs if swallowed.

Smart travelers follow safe tips

News USA

Weeks of careful planning and scheduling have your family ready for that long-awaited vacation. But overlooking a few simple steps can turn even a weekend getaway into a travel nightmare.

To keep you and your family safe while you are on the road, the National Crime Prevention Council offers the following tips:

The best laid plans ...

• Take only essential credit cards in your purse or wallet, and use credit cards or traveler's checks instead of cash wherever possible.

• The tried and true "fanny pack" is used by most travelers today to carry money and other essential items. In its absence, be sure to carry your purse close to your body or your wallet in an inside front pocket or wear a money pouch under your clothes.

• Travel light. Juggling heavy bags makes you an easier target for crime.

Do not draw attention to yourself with expensive designer luggage.

• When checking luggage, keep a record of the contents of that luggage with you. Always keep valuables and medication in a carry-on bag that stays with you.

Know the rules ...

• Remember the first rule of family travel: Stay together. Make sure all family members know the name and address of the place they are staying. Teach children what to do if they get lost or separated from you and make sure they know not to accept rides or favors from strangers. Agree on an easily identified meeting place in case you get separated.

• Check maps before you go out so you can tour with confidence.

• Stay in areas that are well lighted and well traveled. Do not take shortcuts.

• Do not display jewelry, cameras and other items that might draw attention.

• Lock your vehicle when it's parked, even if your stop is brief. Keep valuables locked in the trunk, and do not advertise that you are a tourist by leaving maps and guidebooks on the seat or dashboard.

This information is provided as part of the National Citizen's Crime Prevention Campaign, which is substantially funded by the U.S. Department of Justice.

Q: I purchased an appliance locally and was furnished free warranty coverage on the purchase for a period of one year. What exactly is covered under a warranty and how may I exercise my rights if the warranty is not honored?

A: A warranty is now a common part of retail business, but this was not always the case. Long ago, the rule in retail purchasing was "let the buyer beware" or "as is." This has changed to the extent that most consumers expect a warranty and assume that there is a warranty on any new retail purchase. However, the terms of a warranty are not the same for all purchases, and there is more than one kind of warranty.

There are two major categories of warranty, known as express and implied. The express warranty is because it is usually spelled out in writing and is either a full warranty or a limited warranty. Express written warranties are covered by federal law. Implied warranties are creations of state law and are of two types: the warranty of "merchantability" and the warranty of "fitness for a particular purpose."

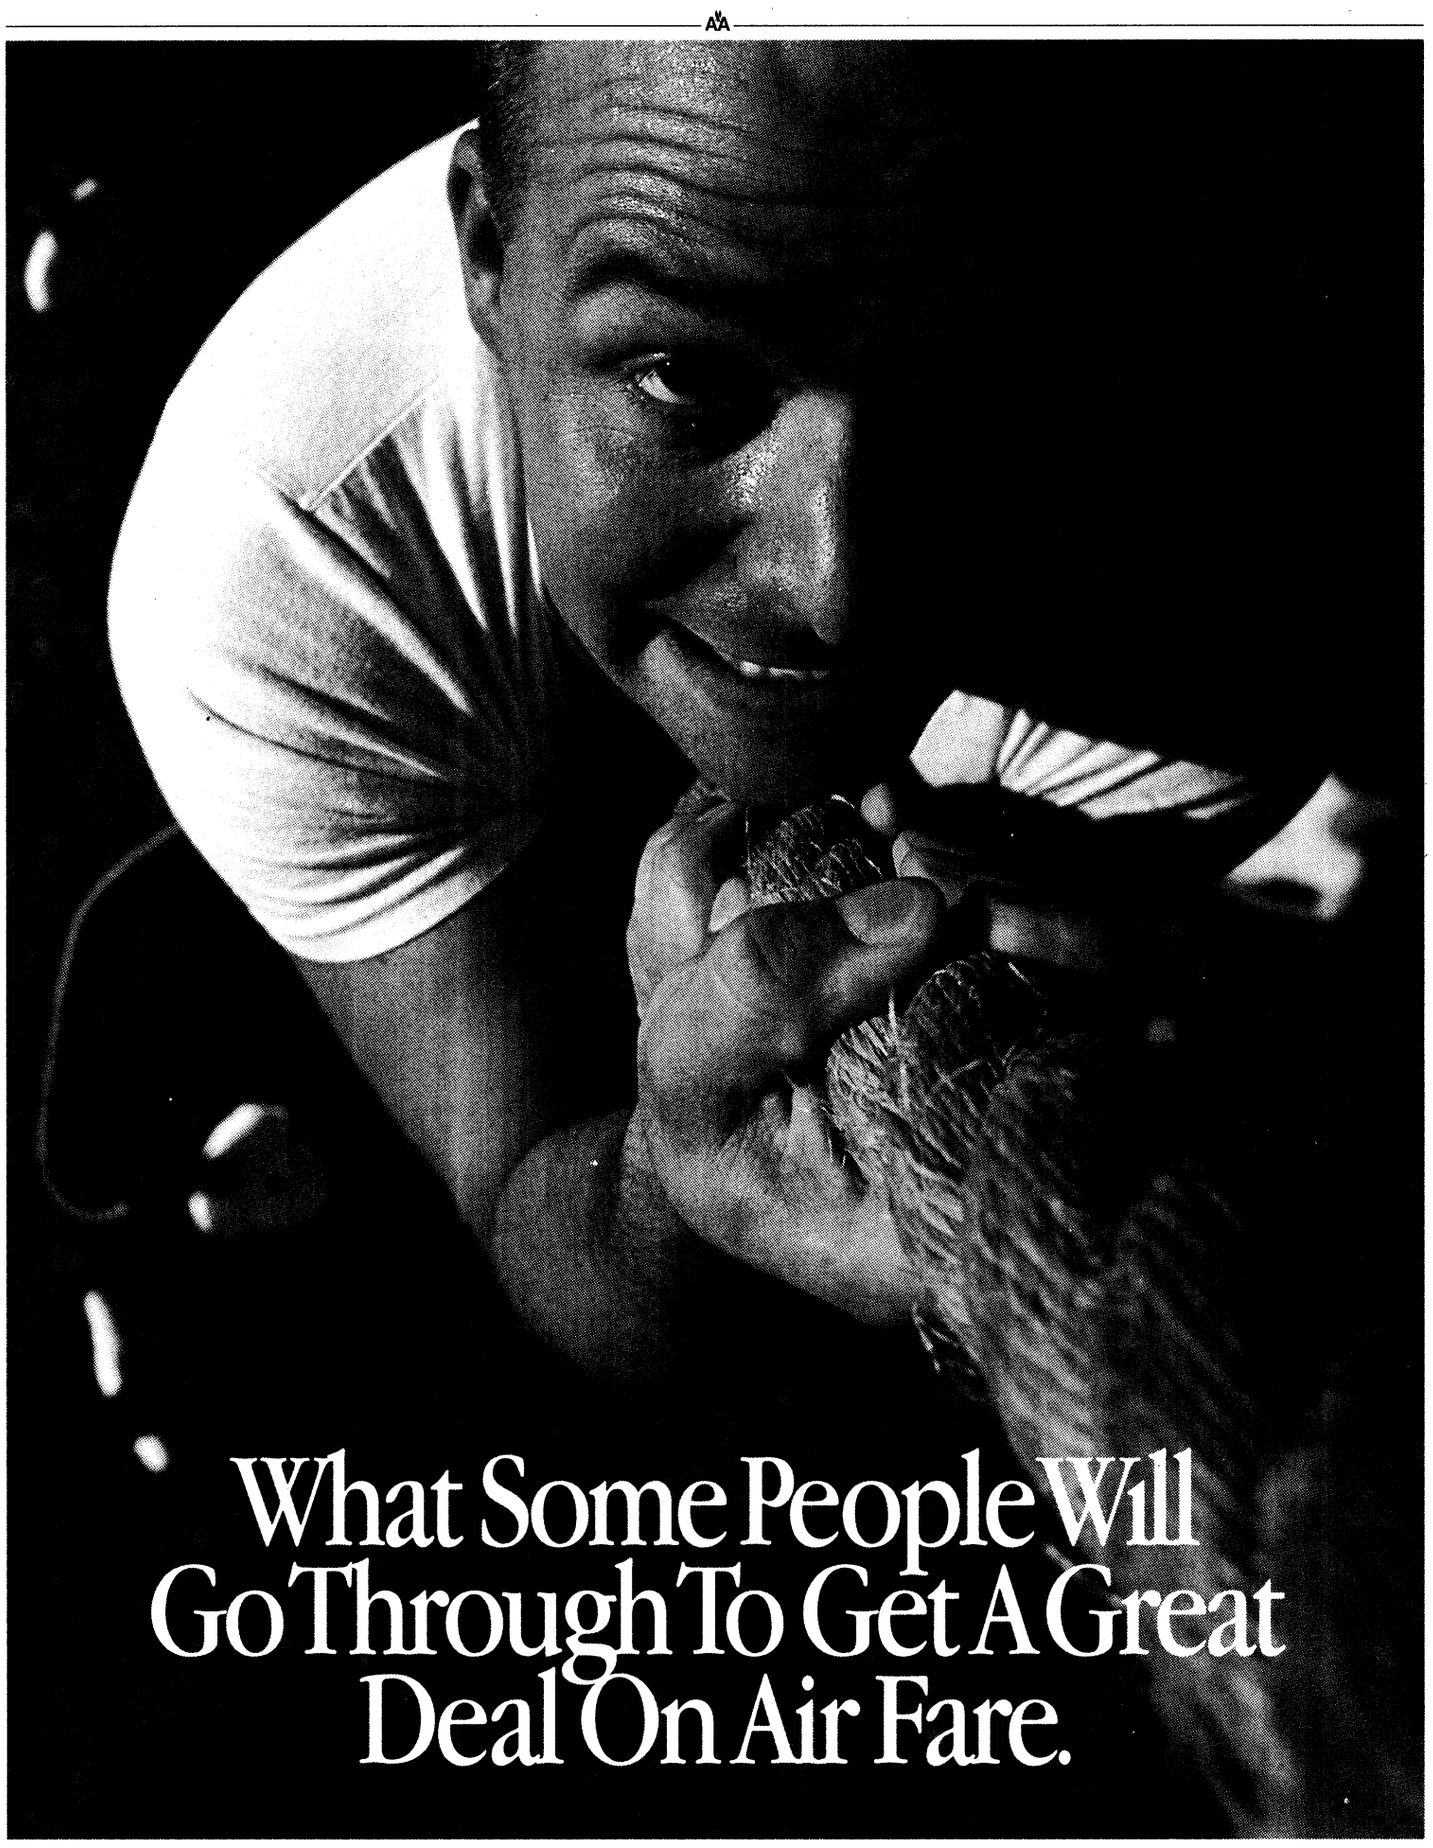
Express warranties are either full warranties or limited warranties. These are somewhat self-explanatory, but the full warranty has a specific meaning under federal law. A full warranty means: that a defective product will be repaired or replaced free; that the product will be repaired within a reasonable time period; that the warranty covers anyone who owns the product during the warranty period; and that replacement or refund will be offered if the product cannot be repaired within a reasonable period of time. A limited warranty is by definition anything less than a full warranty.

An implied warranty of merchantability means simply that a product is in proper condition for sale and that it works for what it is intended. That is, there is nothing wrong with the product and that it will work for a reasonable length of time. This is not expressly stated anywhere, but it is implied by the law. If an oven does not heat, or if it heats unevenly, it is not "merchantable." Even if there was no express warranty, the manufacturer would have to repair this defect.

A warranty of fitness for a particular purpose is a special type of warranty that arises when a customer relies upon a seller's advice that the product can be used for a particular purpose. For example, if a seller advises that a particular washing machine will wash 20-pound loads, and the buyer takes that advice and buys the machine, it must be able to wash 20-pound loads or it may be returned or replaced.

The warranties may work together in some cases. For example, a television set may have a limited warranty covering parts and labor on the picture tube for one year. However, a television lasts a considerable time. If the set does not work after one year, a warranty may be implied depending on the period that it is reasonable to expect the television set to work and depending upon the defect.

Any time you have a warranty problem, you should seek to enlist the aid of the retailer first. If he or she cannot or will not honor the warranty, the manufacturer is next.



A complaint may be made to the Federal Trade Commission, the Better Business Bureau and the State Attorney General's Office. It may also be possible to file suit in small claims court to enforce the warranty. Many times, the threat of action will encourage the retailer or manufacturer to assist you.

For general advice, the Legal Assistance Office staff in Building 5 is available to assist you in these and other matters by appointment. Office hours are 8 a.m. to 5 p.m.; or call 545-3282.

MEMORIAL DAY

Time to honor nation's fallen heroes

By Vance P. Theodore
School of the Americas

In our country, there are two great holidays to honor our soldiers. One is Veterans Day and the other is Memorial Day.

Normally, we have a hard time distinguishing between the two, and the speeches we hear tend to combine the two concepts of honoring soldiers. We usually read the newspaper articles and hear the open-quoted line of "today we honor our fallen comrades who gave their lives in the service of their country."

reflections

However, in our busy schedules, we tend to forget that these are solemn holidays. We are more likely to look at our three-day weekend (Memorial Day) as a time to pull out the barbecues, strike up the tunes and head out to enjoy a day in the sun and, if we are lucky, a training holiday is thrown in.

Memorial Day is a time for remembering and a time for honoring our war dead. Unfortunately, not many of us spend time visiting the cemeteries of our war dead or even remembering.

The other day, after performing a graveside service for a retiree, I noticed an older lady walking between the graves talking to them. I stopped and talked to her. She pointed out where her husband was buried and all his friends. She reminisced about World War II and how she, as an English Red Cross volunteer, met her Yankee boyfriend. She talked of pride for what the Yanks had done over there during World War II, and I could feel her sincerity as she honored the dead.

Words invoke a powerful image, and the following poem of a soldier who died more than two centuries ago on foreign soil drives home the point of those who gave their lives for their country:

A moth-eaten rag on a worm eaten pole
Doesn't seem likely to stir a man's soul,
But it was the deeds that were done
Beneath that moth-eaten rag
When that pole was a staff and that rag was a flag.

Since that British soldier died over two centuries ago, our American soldiers have been buried in more than 14 cemeteries throughout the world as memorials to their sacrifice to maintain our freedom.

During World Wars I and II, more than 125,000 American soldiers were buried on foreign soil. As lasting testaments to their courage and valor, they remain interred and their white headstones are silent reminders of the solemn sacrifice of their lives that they gave so selflessly.

A few years ago, a chaplain friend and I toured some of the battlefields of World War I with our rucks, a few francs and some food. We spent the night in the Ardennes Forest in a bombed-out crater and slept in a war cemetery honoring fallen soldiers.

In visiting the American National Cemetery, honoring soldiers who had died during World War I, we were impressed with the solemnity of the area. Row upon row of white head markers, embedded in immaculate well-cared-for lawns surrounded by trees and beautiful shrubbery, bore testimony of the fallen. Names upon names of soldiers, units and hometowns spoke of a different time.

In preparing to leave the National Cemetery, the curator stopped to talk with us. He knew we were chaplains and as we were about to depart, he said, "This really is a sacred place."

So I would challenge all of us to remember Memorial Day as more than a three-day weekend. It is a solemn day dedicated to remembering our war dead and realizing that the price of freedom is never cheap.

Feast of Pentecost

Christians celebrate Holy Spirit of Christ's church

By Vincent deP. Burns
Infantry Training Brigade

When Christ returned to the Father at the time of his ascension, the apostles learned a very important lesson. It was then that they realized that the kingdom of Christ was not of this world.

reflections

Remember their whole background was in a religion that believed that the Messiah would be a liberator and conqueror and an earthly king. Even though Christ tried to counteract that thinking, even though he used parables to help them understand what his kingdom would be like, it never really hit them until he ascended into heaven to be with his Father.

The time between Easter Sunday and Pentecost Sunday was essential to the birth of the church. Christ founded his church on the apostles, but he certainly knew them well enough to realize they needed time to grab onto what he was trying to share with them.

This was a sorting-out time — a time for allowing the events of the last three years to sink in and take root, a time for mentally digesting everything that had happened since they first began to follow Christ.

The nine days between the Ascension and Pentecost was a time of intense prayer. Christ had told them to pray for the gift of the Spirit.

The Acts of the Apostles tells that beautiful and powerful story of Pentecost. Those nine days of prayer and intimate communication with God were climaxed by the coming of the Holy Spirit.

The author writes that fire appeared over the heads of the apostles and they were filled with the Holy Spirit. They received what we call now the gift of tongues, and they were able to speak in foreign languages. Even today, that gift is present in certain members of the Church for the purpose of praising God and manifesting the presence of the Spirit.

It was then that the apostles learned another very important lesson: that faith in Christ was never meant to be contained in one place or confined to one group of people.

Again, we have to remember that they came from a religious background that taught that salvation was only for the chosen people, and Christ had specifically contradicted that when he told them to go out and baptize all nations in the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Spirit. But they did not get the full impact of what he said until the Holy Spirit came to them and made it clear that the gospel message was to be preached to the entire world.

Paul, writing with hindsight, to the Church at Corinth, had already seen the Spirit at work in the church. He is sharing with us what he had already experienced — what happens when people become filled with the Spirit, when they recognize his presence within them, when they respond by spending themselves for the purpose of building the Christian community.

Lord, send out your Spirit, and renew the face of the earth. This has been the prayer of God's people since the time of the Old Testament prophets, asking him to take suffering and conflict out of their lives. They equated the coming of the Spirit with the presence of eternal peace. Hopefully this is still the prayer of every sincere Christian.

But perhaps what we tend to overlook is that God has already answered this prayer. He has already sent his Spirit into his church. This is what we celebrate on the great feast of Pentecost — the fact that the Holy Spirit lives within the church. When we acknowledge the presence of the Spirit in the community, when we respond to the gifts that the Spirit has shared with each of us and when we begin to use those gifts for the building of the church and the spreading of the Gospel, then the Father will renew the face of the earth.

Peace in the world and peace in our hearts does not depend on the coming of the Holy Spirit. It depends on whether or not we acknowledge the fact that he has already come.

MEDDAC, DENTAC officers defeat civilians 9-3 in tourney

By John W. Peeler
Special to The Bayonet©

The officer team from the U.S. Army Medical Department Activity defeated the civilian team 9-3 in a one-pitch softball tournament recently at Gowdy Field.

The softball tournament was conducted in support of the Army Emergency Relief food locker program and included teams from the Medical Department Activity and Dental Activity.

To get to the finals, the officer team defeated the junior enlisted team 10-3 in the semi-finals and the civilian team in the opening round of play.

The civilian team rebounded from an opening round loss to the officers with a 9-1 win over the senior enlisted team to reach the finals.

The tournament, sponsored by MEDDAC, brought in more than 850 canned goods that will be donated to the Army Emergency Relief food locker.

Command Sgt. Maj. Henry Holt, MEDDAC command sergeant major, said the Commander's Can Challenge represents an opportunity for MEDDAC to become a positive force within the military community.

Holt also said that without the support of Sgt. 1st Class Wayne Williams and Staff Sgt. Derick Purdue the Commander's Can Challenge would not have been possible.

"They were the brains and executers of the event, and I personally thank them for making it happen," Holt said.

"The ultimate goal is to create a Commander's Can Challenge program that will provide fun-filled competitive events year-round," Williams said. "It provides for unit involvement in the community and fosters an environment of team-work and cohesiveness."

The tournament will be an annual tournament and, in the future, will coincide with a basketball tournament.

USAMU shooter wins shotgun championship

USAMU Public Affairs Office

A U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit soldier took the top spot in Interservice International shooting championships shotgun competition May 14 through May 19 at the USAMU's Hook Range.

Staff Sgt. Bret Erickson triumphed over 30 competitors who ventured from locations nationwide to participate in the championship's trap competition with a score of 189 out of 200 points.

"He's an excellent shooter with a wealth of talent and a world of experience behind him," Burl Branham, USAMU shotgun team coach, said. "That's just the kind of shooter you would expect to find here (at USAMU)."

Erickson, who began shooting in 1970, has numerous marksmanship accomplishments.

He is a three-time national trap champion, a 1995 Pan American Games Gold medalist and a 1992 Olympian.

Even though he has the talent and drive to become one of the "greats" in the world's shotgun arena, Erickson takes nothing for granted.

"Every time you reach that point where you think you can't get any better, you have to strive to push beyond it," Erickson said.

Erickson said his reason for participating in the Interservice International shooting Championships was to more or less use it as a practice session for himself.

The championships provided Erickson the opportunity to go up against some of the nation's top shooters before he goes up against the world's top shooters during Olympic shooting competition July 20 through July 27 at Wolf Creek Shooting Complex.

"Afterall, Erickson said, "when you have the chance to represent your country in the Olympics, you take nothing for granted."

US Army Marksmanship Unit soldiers sweep National Team Selection matches

U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit

U. S. Army Marksmanship Unit soldiers swept the National Team Selection international pistol matches conducted at Fort Benning May 16 through May 19.

Consisting of a number of events, including men's air pistol, men's free pistol, women's sports pistol, and rapid fire, the selection matches are the first of three matches to be shot before marksmen are considered for the National Team, Ronnie Boles, USAMU International Pistol Team coach, said.

The other two selection matches will be shot June 28 through 30 at Lynden, Wash., and Oct. 11 through 13 at Chino, Calif.

Considering the selection matches are open to the nation's finest shooters, Boles said, USAMU International Pistol Team members fared well in this first go-round.

Sgt. Daryl Szarenski is a member of the USAMU pistol team.

Sgt. Daryl Szarenski beat out 45 competitors to take first place in the men's air pistol match with a score of 677.7 points. Szarenski's score of 640.9 points also earned him a third-place finish in the men's free pistol match. Both events had a total of 200 points available.

In the ladies sports pistol match, Capt. Rhonda Bright finished second out of 20 competitors with a score of 672.5 out of 700 points.

Cpl. Amy Szarenski rounded out of the USAMU international Pistol Team's winning performance with a third-place finish in the women's pistol match. Her score was 470.8 out of 500 possible points.

11th Regiment team wins AUSA golf tournament

USAIC Public Affairs Office

A four-man team from the 11th Infantry Regiment blitzed the Follow Me Golf course during the Association of the United States Army annual golf tournament, shooting a phenomenal 52, 20 under par, in the 18-hole scramble.

Ben Johnson, Darryl Madison, Roy McCage and Joachim Gadshian made up the winning team. But as hot as they played, they were still only two strokes better than the second-place team of Juan Bustamante, David Farr, Paul Leonard and Jared Garrity.

The third-place team of Robert Anderson, Jay Grantham, John Calhoun and Neal Hatcher were one more stroke back at 55.

A team headed up by the Assistant Commandant of the Infantry School Brig. Gen. Robert Clark took top honors in the second flight with a 59. Three colonels, Greg Camp, Rich Rutledge and Johnny Reitzell rounded out that team.

A score of 61 won the third flight. Greg Henley, Jack Carlisle, Jason Dement and John Dale played on that team. Leo Fowler, Billy Powell, Doug Greenway, William Bunnell took the fourth flight with a 62, Tom Cain, Dan Downs, John Jenkins and Brian Kelly were the fifth flight winners with a 61 and a 66 won the sixth flight for Lance Patterson, Dean Weller, Tony Benttez and Li Shhamanski.

The 11th Infantry team of Johnson, McCage, Madison and Gadshian also won the AUSA sub chapter title; the corporate winner was the CB&T team of Anderson, Hatcher, Calhoun and Grantham. Ed Burkhalter, Harry Ikner, Bob Osbourne and Frank Sharp, shooting a 60, won the Retiree Division and Jim Galey, Gary Burkhalter, Rich Coreno and Charles Franklin won the DA civilian division with a 70.

Closest to the hole winners were Fowler, Glen Hughes, Bustamante, Steve Travis and Gordy Peese. Rob Kissel and David Farr had the longest drives and Ernie Gray won the most accurate drive.

Two-hundred, forty-two golfers from Fort Benning, Columbus and Phenix City competed for prizes that included $10,000 for a hole-in-one, but which went unclaimed.

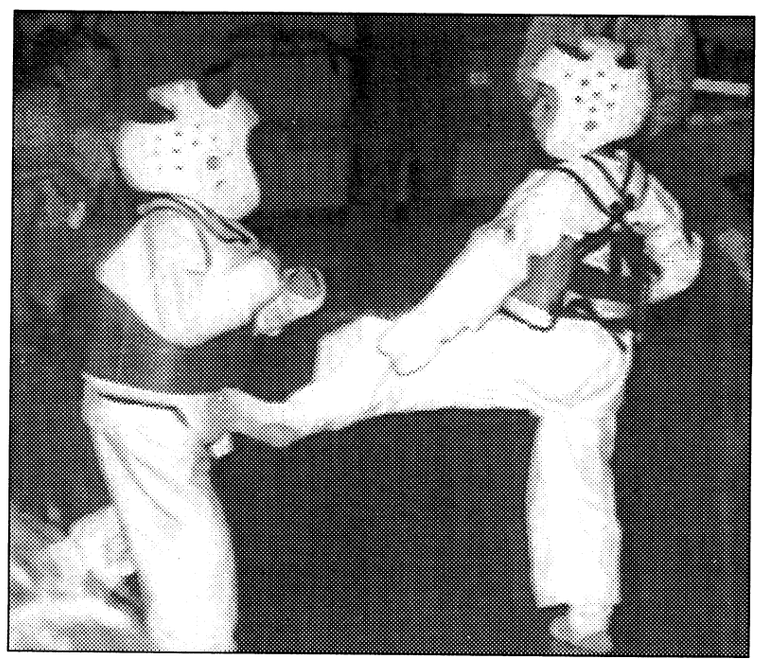
Tae kwon do students win at Junior World Cup

By John W. Peeler
Special to The Bayonet©

Students from the Fort Benning Tae Kwon Do School competed at the Junior World Cup championships in Conyers, Ga., May 18 winning 13 gold, silver and bronze medals at the annual event.

The championships, sponsored by grand master Yoo Jin Kim, are conducted every year in Conyers and are a prelude to the Junior Olympics.

The Fort Benning Tae Kwon Do School sent 15 competitors to this year's championships. Kim said six states were represented at the championships with more than 275 competitors.



Kim said in his opening remarks that there was good news and bad news for tae kwon do competitors.

"The bad news is there are still four more years until tae kwon do becomes an official part of Olympic competition," Kim said.

"The good news is that within the next two years, most of the major colleges and universities across the United States will offer scholarship programs for tae kwon do students so they may continue their education."

There are currently only a few colleges that offer tae kwon do as an officially recognized sport, the most prominent college being the University of California at Berkeley.

Felix Davila, the school instructor, said he was proud of the way the Fort Benning students represented the school and the installation and that he was looking forward to going to Orlando, Fla.,

A camping experience, whether it's your first or 100th trip, will be a more positive one if you stay dry, comfortable and can enjoy a level of convenience that suits your needs. With all the modern camping equipment available, you can plan just about any type of camping or backpacking trip imaginable. But no matter what the trip, a good, stable shelter that offers protection from the weather and comfortable accommodations is an absolute necessity.

If you haven't shopped for a tent lately, sorting through the myriad of styles, sizes and colors can be a bit overwhelming. Linda Grebe, a marketing manager for a tent company, said consumers need to determine first what type of camping they plan to do and how much space they'll need.

Here are some other guidelines for choosing a tent:

• Style. "While style plays some role in the tent's function, it is primarily a matter of personal preference," said Grebe.

Dome tents are a popular all around tent style for all types of camping. They offer good interior space for their floor size, and fold up compactly. By that moisture can't escape, it condenses inside the tent making everything wet. Make sure the tent has permeable nylon in the walls to allow moisture to escape, and waterproof nylon in the fly and floor.

•Durability. Whatever style you choose should have long-term durability. Family tents, in particular, need to withstand a lot of rough treatment from active kids and walking in and out of the tent.

The tent's strength and stability depends on the framework. Steel poles are not as durable as aluminum poles and are more prone to bend and corrode. Fiberglass has good strength and stability and flexes well to hold a curve or arc. Drawn seamless aluminum is very strong, stable and is lighter weight, a feature that helps minimize weight of large family tents. Backpackers and light-gear travelers might prefer an A-frame, small dome, or hybrid tent, which have minimal weight and can fold down into small, compact packages.

Traditional large cabin tents provide the most space for families or large groups, often with separate rooms for privacy. Large umbrella style or dome tents are also excellent choices. Some larger tents have attached awnings.

•Staying Dry. Once you've determined the style and size you want, look for features that will keep you dry. Even if it doesn't rain outside, plenty of moisture can develop from within. A sleeping camper can emit up to a pint of water in one night. Look for reinforced seams and corners.

•Value. "You can't always see or feel the level of quality in a tent until it falls apart. So be cautious of tents with prices too good to be true," Grebe said. "If you get a bargain tent and the frame breaks, what kind of bargain is that? Ask the dealer to explain the framework; and fabrics in different tents to help you make a good choice," she continued. "Look for warranty as well. A good tent will have a life time warranty."

Your tent is an investment in many years of outdoor activity. Make sure your outdoor home pro vides plenty of comfort, space and dryness to ensure your 100th camping trip will be as memorable as the first.

Fishing, getting started is easy

Feature Outdoors

Getting started in fishing is as easy as pushing a button the casting button of a spincast reel that is. Choosing from the array of fishing gear is not as difficult as it might appear to a beginner, if you can keep a few basic things in mind.

Most anglers start out with a spincast also called a "closed-face," reel. And for good reason. spincast reels are easy to use and perform well.

A tangle-free reel is an excellent choice for beginners. It has a unique drag system that eliminates line twist and tangles that can result when you're first learning to cast. Like many spincast reels, the tangle-free series are pre-spooled with line so it's ready to fish. The model you choose depends largely on what you plan to fish for.

A spincast reel is also easy for kids to learn fishing.

"In general, the bigger the fish, the heavier the gear you'll want to use, with 8 or 12 pound-test line and on up" said Steve Vogts. "For smaller fish, you'll want lighter gear, and lighter line, 4- to 6-pound test."

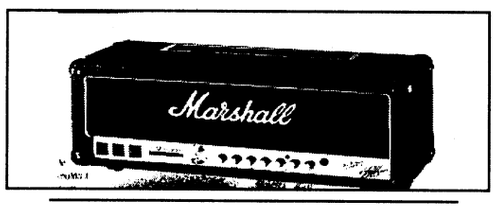
The tangle-free 8 is a good medium choice for beginners because it's light enough for fishing smaller fish, like crappie, yet strong enough for bass and walleye.

The next step is to match the right rod to your reel. You can purchase a pre-packaged combo that has been matched for you, or choose a rod that "balances" with the size of your reel.

Smaller reels balance best with light-action rods; medium-sized reels with medium-action rods; and large reels with medium-heavy or heavy-action rods.

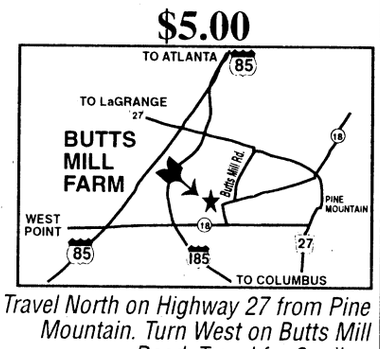
The rod's action refers to its weight and stiffness and is stamped on the rod near the handle. Light-action rods are best fished with 2- to 6-pound test line; medium-action rods with 6- to 12-pound test; and heavy-action rods with 12- to 20pound test. Use a light-action rod if you plan to fish exclusively for pan fish, and a medium-action if you'll mix in some walleye or bass angling.

Rods also come in different lengths, ranging from 4 feet to 10 feet. Shorter rods give you better control while longer rods allow you to cast farther. An ideal starter rod is 5 to 6 feet long, which is short enough to give you plenty of control, yet long enough to provide a fair amount of casting distance.



Rods and reels are a little less intimidating, than all the other fishing tackle.

For an all-around good lure, it's hard to beat a spinnerbait like the Beetle Spin. It imitates the flash of a minnow, and a leech or worm body, and it comes in a variety of sizes and colors .



In general, choose dark colors for clear water and cloudy days, and bright colors for dark water and sunny days. Chartreuse, pumpkin, pearl, bright neons, black and purple are a good colors to have on hand. Small lures generally work better in early Spring when fish are spawning and not as hungry, while bigger lures are more productive later in the season. Don't be intimidated by all the gear you see and fishing "know how" you hear. All you need is a good rod and reel that's easy to cast, a common bait, a shoreline to fish from and some hungry fish, and you're on your way to fun.

MEMORIAL DAY

Fort Benning honors veterans

Sentiments run deep as families remember

Hundreds showed up to honor fallen comrades, fathers, brothers, mothers and friends at Fort Benning's Memorial Day Ceremony Monday at the post cemetery.

Remembering the men and women who died for America is what Memorial Day is all about, said Robert Head, whose father, Sgt. 1st Class Billy Ray Head, is buried at the cemetery.

"(You) have to remember the men and women who died for us," he said.

Head was joined by retirees, active duty soldiers and civilians, along with Fort Benning Commander Maj. Gen. John W. Hendrix, at the ceremony.

As he stood in front of rows and rows of white tombstones, Hendrix talked about what the holiday stands for.

"The tombstones before us here serve as reminders that the freedoms that we enjoy today were not secured without great cost, and that cost was paid with the lives of the men and women of our armed forces."

Hendrix, along with Chaplain (Lt. Col.) Robert Wildeman, placed a wreath on the tomb of the Unknown Soldier. After the wreath placing, a color guard made up of soldiers from the 36th Engineer Group, honored the dead by firing three volleys.

Some grew teary-eyed and some couldn't hold back the tears of pain during the ceremonial playing of taps. The notes from the trumpets echoed across the cemetery as the crowd stood in complete silence.

Vocal notes were also heard when the crowd joined Hendrix and Wildeman in singing the "Battle Hymn of the Republic" and "America the Beautiful."

In between the singing of these patriotic songs, Hendrix talked about past wars and conflicts and the type of respect the fallen service members deserve. He quoted a phrase from an inscription at Arlington National Cemetery, Washington D.C.

"Not for fame or reward, not for place or rank, not lured by ambition or goaded by necessity, but in simple obedience to duty, as they understood it, these men suffered all, sacrificed all, dared all, and died."

After the ceremony, Head, his mother and his two sons stood facing the grave of their father, husband and grandfather. Head said those people who think Memorial Day is just a day off are wrong.

As he stood holding both of his sons and tears rolling down both sides of his face, he said, "(Those people) haven't really lost anybody."

Hendrix ended his remarks by asking everyone not to forget the past and those who gave their lives for this country.

"Let us resolve then to keep faith with our fallen heroes, our fallen comrades, in so doing we can pay no higher tribute," he said. "It is our promise, our guarantee, that they did not sacrifice their lives in vain."

Bragg soldier enters plea

Fort Bragg Public Affairs Office

Recently Sgt. William J. Kreutzer entered a plea of guilty to many of the charges pending against him regarding the Oct. 27 Towle Stadium shooting. The hearing was conducted at the request of Kreutzer and his counsel.

Kreutzer was charged with one specification of premeditated murder, 18 specifications of attempted murder, one specification of violating a general order by transporting weapons on post and one specification of larceny of government property (theft of government ammunition).

At the conclusion of the hearing, Military Judge Col. Peter E. Brownback III found that there was a factual basis for Kreutzer's guilty plea and that his plea was knowing, voluntary and intelligent. Kreutzer pled guilty to the following offenses:

• Seventeen specifications of assault with a dangerous weapon and lesser included offenses of the 18 specifications of attempted murder. Kreutzer did not plead guilty to the shooting of Staff Sgt. Robert Howes, 3rd Battalion, 3rd Special Forces Group, who was injured during the attempt to subdue him. Each of the 17 specifications carries a maximum penalty of a dishonorable discharge, reduction to E-1 (private), total forfeiture of all pay and allowances and confinement for up to eight years.

• Violation of a lawful general order for transporting his loaded weapons on post. This specification carries a maximum penalty of a dishonorable discharge, reduction to E-1, total forfeiture of all pay and allowances and confinement for up to two years.

• Murder by unlawfully killing a human being without justification or excuse while engaged in an act that is inherently dangerous to another and while evincing a wanton disregard for human life. This crime is a lesser included offense of premeditated murder. The maximum penalty that might be imposed for this charge is a dishonorable discharge, reduction to E-1, total forfeiture of all pay and allowances and confinement for life. The death penalty may not be imposed for this offense.

• Larceny of government property of some value. This is a lesser included offense of the charge of larceny of government property of a value more than $300.

This offense carries a maximum penalty of a bad conduct discharge, reduction to E-1, total forfeiture of all pay and allowance and confinement for up to one year.

Although Kreutzer entered a plea of guilty to the offenses set out above, Brownback only entered findings of guilty as to the violation of the general order and the larceny of the government property.

This is because the government still intends to attempt to prove at trial that Kreutzer premeditated the murder of Maj. Stephen Badger and attempted to murder the 18 other soldiers who were also gunshot victims.

The entry of the guilty plea by Kreutzer to the above offenses reduces the number of issues which will be litigated at trial. Specifically, Kreutzer admitted that he did shoot at the formation on the morning of Oct. 27 and that bullets fired from his weapons struck the victims, causing the death of Badger and injuries to 17 other victims. Kreutzer's plea also established that he engaged in the conduct wrongfully and without any legal justification.

The next hearing for this case is scheduled for Thursday when a panel will be selected.

3rd Bde returns to post

By Robin A. Shawlinski
3rd Brigade, 3rd Infantry Division

About 3,400 soldiers from the 3rd Brigade Combat Team, 3rd Infantry Division (Mechanized), returned from the National Training Center, Fort Irwin, Calif., after a month-long rotation from May 23 through Sunday.

The Sledgehammer Brigade deployed to the National Training Center April 22.

While at the NTC, the 3rd Brigade Combat Team trained on the tasks that support the brigade and division tactical mission.

"This was a great rotation," said Lt. Col. William C. Dorman, 3rd Brigade executive officer. "It's truly awesome to witness all the battlefield operating systems coming together decisively.

"We set records on (drawing equipment) and during fighting," Dorman said. "Task Force 1-30 set records for the number of kills, and we're in the process of setting records in turn-in."

During the NTC deployment, units drew prepositioned equipment and participated in multiple force-on-force exercises.

"The deployment went very smooth — almost seamless," Dorman said.

The reception, staging, onward movement and integration phase proved to be a success for the brigade. The brigade's tracking system, which was set up to assess its combat power, may be integrated into NTC's recommended plans for other units, Dorman said.

Throughout the rotation, Sledgehammer Brigade soldiers conducted movements to contact, hasty attacks, deliberate attacks, hasty defenses and a deliberate defense in the Mojave Desert. They also conducted brigade-level offensive and defensive live-fire exercises.

Maj. Michael Bowman, 1st Battalion, 10th Infantry, fire support officer, said the rotation went well for the soldiers.

"It was a super rotation," he said. "The soldiers were motivated. They trained hard and they learned a lot."

Robin A. Shawlinski

Soldiers disembark at Lawson Army Airfield.

He said the unit had two highlights during the rotation.

"First, we had no firing incidents," he said. "We shot live fire without any faults. Additionally, this was the first time in 14 months that there were two successful Copperhead (laser-guided munitions) fires."

Pvt. 1 Benjamin Bell of Company A, 2nd Battalion, 69th Armor, said he learned a lot.

"I really enjoyed the training," he said. "Everyone was seriously focused and it was safe," he said. "And I learned my

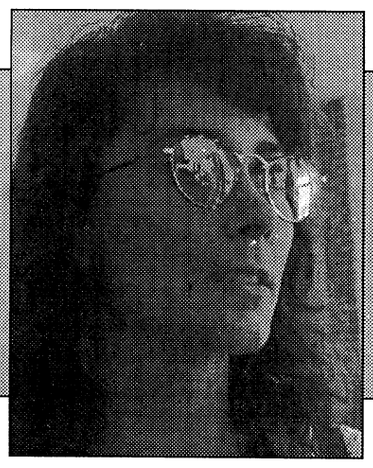
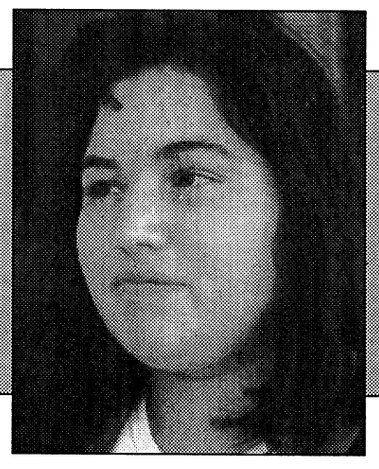
What changes do you think could be made to improve on post housing?

Pvt. 2 Matt R. Hines, Company C, 1st Battalion (Airborne), 507th Infantry, 11th Infantry Regiment — "Better air conditioning, put doors on entryways. Other than that, it's all right."

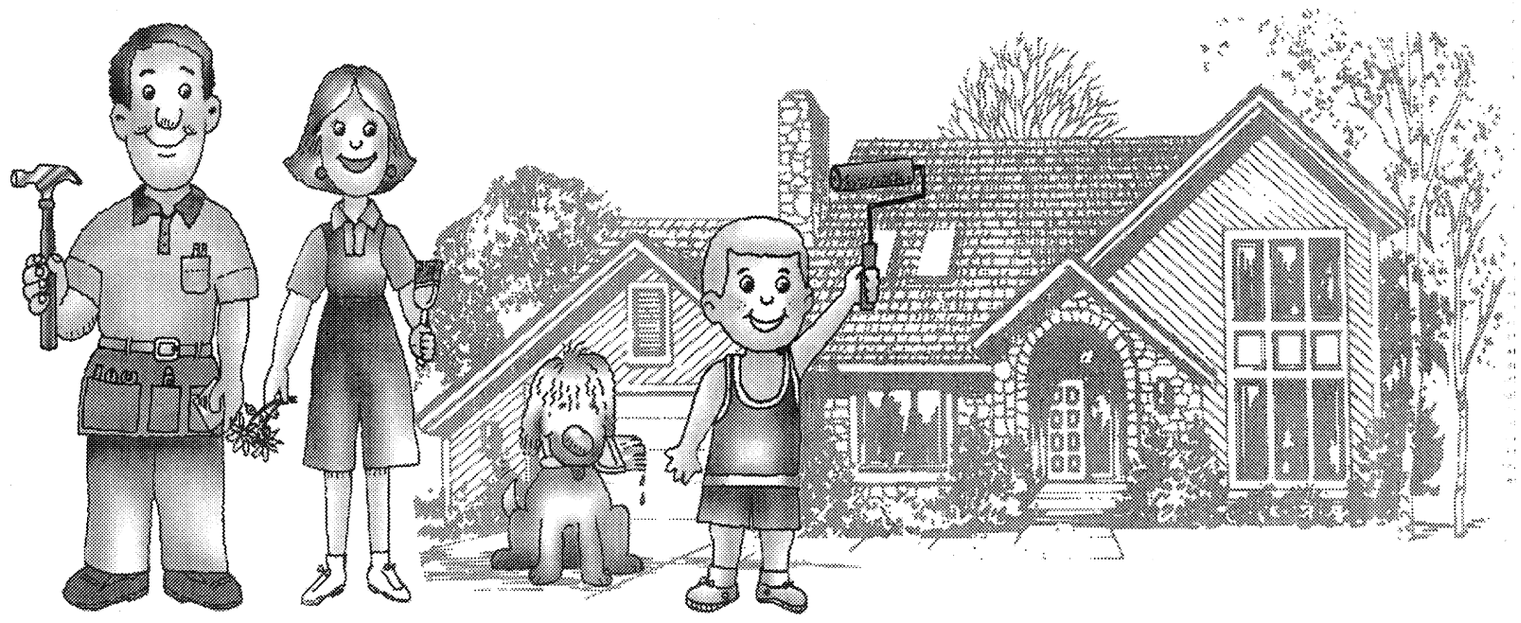


Pfc. Jimmy J. Guinard, Company A, 1st Battalion, 30th Infantry Regiment — "I think they should authorize washers and dryers to be in the houses, carpets instead of hardwood floors and let us control our own air conditioning."



Elizabeth K. Barriga, family member — "It would be nice to have another bathroom downstairs in the McGraw area. When we moved in, it wasn't up to code, so there were a lot of little different things missing and I had to call for maintenance right when we moved in."

Staff Sgt. Donald Gaines, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 29th Infantry Regiment — "I can't complain about how quick we get in housing here, but I feel there should be fencing around all of the housing and upgrades on the air conditioning."



Brenda M. Hoolis, family member — "Better maintenance of the housing and playgrounds. Covered, shaded playgrounds."

Regina S. Smith, family member — "I think the playgrounds need to be upgraded and fencing put around dangerous areas."

CLEARING QUARTERS

Helpful housing hints from...

DPW official offers knowledge on how to make a very smooth move

By Ron Smith
Chief, Family Housing

Family Housing does more than just place soldiers into on post housing.

The office does that and much more. It assigns and terminates quarters, assists relocating soldiers and provides military personnel with information regarding temporary lodging.

Housing's mission

The Family Housing mission is to provide adequate housing for soldiers and their families. We exist for the service member.

The management of Army Family Housing is governed by Army regulation and Fort Benning's policies and procedures. Army-owned family housing is intended to supplement the local communities in providing adequate housing for soldiers assigned to Fort Benning.

Fort Benning has 4,081 sets of government quarters. Battle Park

commentary

Homes Inc., although privately owned, consists of 200 units and is located on the installation. This provides an excellent alternative for short-term accommodations.

Assignment, termination

The Family Housing Office, located in Olson Hall, Building 399, is responsible for the assignment and termination of quarters. It is mandatory that departing soldiers schedule a pre-termination inspection 30 to 45 days before their final inspection and departure from the installation.

Soldiers are responsible for ensuring all maintenance is performed before termination of quarters. Additionally, we provide a contract cleaning service that permits departing soldiers to pre-pay to have their quarters cleaned for them.

The advantage of this program is that it allows soldiers to depart the installation without being concerned about cleaning their quarters. This is a very popular program.

Almost every category of housing has a waiting list and waiting times can range from fewer than 60 days to more than 14 months. With the approval of the Business Occupancy Program, which began Oct. 1, the residents' basic allowance for quarters comes directly to the installation to be spent on the management and upkeep of family housing facilities.

Relocation services

A vital part of the Family Housing Program is the Community Homefinding, Relocation and Referral Services Office located in Building 2621.

This office is staffed with trained counselors to provide a wide range of real estate type services. They have many listings for soldiers to consider, including both rentals and sales. They can even provide transportation to view listings if necessary.

They can also provide information on temporary lodgings on or off post. For personnel wishing to purchase a home, counselors can assist in loan qualifications, mortgage information, etc.

A computerized data base (Permanent Change of Station House Express) provides information to personnel concerning their next duty station. Information includes the number and waiting time for on-post quarters as well as rental and sale prices in that locale.

It is required that all personnel process through the Community Homefinding, Relocation and Referral Services Office before making any arrangements for off-post housing. Personnel desiring government quarters can also apply at the Community Homefinding, Relocation and Referral Services Office. This is truly a one-stop housing service.

Our goal is simple — provide the services that soldiers need to ensure their families are adequately and affordably housed at Fort Benning in the quickest amount of time possible.

Retiree thinks clearing is adventure to some, necessary evil to others

John W. Peeler
Special to the Bayonet©

Clearing quarters is one military task most soldiers and spouses dread.

Understanding the system, preparation and a little common sense go a long way in figuring out the best approach when leaving an installation.

commentary

Some questions that have to be answered are when to have household goods picked up, whether to hire a cleaning team, do the quarters need painting, when to schedule the preinspection and what do you "think" you know about clearing quarters so you don't have to ask? These questions deserve serious thought and are an important step in making an easy transition to your next installation or residence.

If you have not taken your impending move seriously, disaster normally strikes and you to end up waiting until the last minute to do things. Not only will you not have all the information you need to complete the move, you will probably forget something of importance.

Having lived on Fort Benning for four years and retiring, I found myself clearing quarters for the last time.

I found the experience to be the same as other installations I have lived on because I answered those important questions early on in the process.

While visiting the office, there were soldiers who were having difficulty grasping the whole quarters clearing thing, mostly because of their inability to communicate and understand how the system worked.

Can this be avoided ? I believe it can by following a few "time-tested" suggestions.

• As soon as your orders for movement are received, contact the local housing office and ask them questions about your impending quarters clearance. Make sure you note the date, time and name of the person you spoke with in case there are conflicting instructions.

• Find out what the policy is on painting your quarters. You should know when you moved in and when the last time your quarters were painted to assist the housing representative.

• Be honest with yourself; evaluate the need for a cleaning team. Your local housing office should have a listing of cleaning teams.

• Decide when you want to move your household goods. I found it best to have my household goods picked up just prior to the preinspection. This causes an additional burden; but, if items are separated for temporary use while in transit, quarters clearing will be much easier. This method will allow the housing inspector to accurately assess your quarters because all the furniture will be gone and needed repairs easily recognized. It will also help you make the decision on whether or not to hire a cleaning team.

• Make sure you have completed all self-help type of repairs before scheduling a final inspection. A word to the wise, do not wait until you have received the word to move before starting. Keep your quarters in a good state of repair throughout your occupancy to make it easier when you get ready to leave.

• Don't "think" you know everything about clearing quarters. Every installation has its own way of doing things, so make sure you ask any questions you are not sure of.

• Above all, remain courteous to those who are there to help you. They have a responsibility to make your experience as pleasant as possible; however, sometimes that can be difficult to do.

My mother used to tell me to treat others as I would want to be treated.

Remember, you can really catch more bees with honey.

Of course, my way of clearing quarters is only one of the many possible ways of doing it. I found it to be successful and, with time, you will find what works for you.

dial 545-boss

Dial 545-BOSS is the commander's action line for soldiers, family members and civilians to call when they have problems or complaints that can't be resolved elsewhere.

While it is not a substitute for the chain of command or for agencies established to provide assistance, the line offers another means of communication between Fort Benning's community and commanders.

The Bayonet features some of the calls that may benefit other members of the Fort Benning community.

Senior Officer Candidate Ivy J. Williams III, 3rd Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment, and Congressman Sanford Bishop take a moment to discuss the Memorial Day Ceremony at American Legion Post 35 Monday.

Vets remember

American Legion hosts ceremony, gives congressman award

By Jacqué Hill
Special to the Bayonet©

A Memorial Day Ceremony at American Legion Post 35 Monday featured retired Col. Robert B. Nett, Medal of Honor recipient, as the speaker.

Before Nett spoke of the sacrifices made by America and its military for democracy, he explained that when he says Army, he means every branch of military service.

"Those in the Army today ... protect the peace and freedom for which some of their predecessors died," he said. "We remember them (those who died) with special appreciation. The sacrifices are real, too very real."

Nett also said the rows and rows of white crosses and stars of David in cemeteries across America represent much.

"They stand for those who died trying to free other Americans held captive in hostile lands," he said.

He recalled the oath to "defend against all enemies, foreign and domestic" taken by military members at the commencement of their service as somewhat unclear when it is first heard.

"As our assignments came and progressed, we came to understand every word," he said.

Receiving the Citizens Flag Alliance Award at the ceremony was Rep. Sanford Bishop. According to Charles R. Knox, master of ceremony, the post presented the award to Bishop in recognition of his past support of the American Legion's efforts.

"I am very proud," Bishop said. "The members of this post and the veterans in the Chattahoochee Valley area have been very supportive of me for 20 years now, so I'm proud to be here to receive this award."

Jay L. Hickey, deputy national director of the U.S. Army Ranger Association, said the ceremony was not only educational, but patriotic.

"We have so much dissension today, but the people assembled here today don't know anything about color or races," he said.

Preceding a gun salute provided by eight senior officer candidates from 3rd Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment, and a bugle rendition of "Taps", Nett reminded audience members why they were gathered on Memorial Day.

"We're lucky, you and I," he said. "As Americans, we come from a country with many blessings. We cannot forget the price for the freedom we enjoy today."

Acquisition reform focus of today's day-long event

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Getting the best technology faster and more cost effectively for the Army is the goal of Acquisition Reform Acceleration Day.

Workshops will be conducted in Infantry Hall, Classroom 9. The schedule is as follows:

- 11:30 a.m. — commercial items and market research

Representatives from each division of the Directorate of Contracting will set up tables in Classroom 54 to provide participants with information about contracting requirements. Also, contracting representatives will be available to answer questions.

The event is open to anyone who uses the acquisition process, including commanders, managers, other installation personnel, etc.

For information, call 545-1013.

Bill in works to ban sale of adult magazines on post

By Michael Noris
Army News Service

The House National Security Committee voted May 1 to ban the sale of adult magazines and videos on military installations.

Proponents of the bill said the legislation would limit the sale or rental of sexually explicit books, magazines and videos at military installations, items otherwise available outside military gates.

Committee critics said the proposal was vaguely written, and that it could be used to exclude sex manuals or even the Sports Illustrated annual swimsuit edition.

Rep. John M. McHugh was quoted in the following day's Washington Post as saying: "When it comes to first amendment rights, there is a different standard for the military. Just because you have a right to read it does not mean I have an obligation to sell it to you."

The committee also called for banning homosexuals from military service and discharging service members infected with the AIDS virus. A prohibition against performing abortions at overseas military hospitals was also attached to the bill.

The reconciliation bill between the House and Senate authorized the Department of Defense $267.3 billion for fiscal 1996, $12.9 billion more than President Bill Clinton requested.

Desert Storm deputy commander-in-chief for Operations dies

By Robyn Pell Pentagram
MDW News Service

Retired Lt. Gen. Calvin A. H. Waller, who died May 9 at age 58, was buried May 15 at Arlington National Cemetery after a mass at Memorial Chapel.

His last duty assignment was as commanding general, I Corps at Fort Lewis, Wash., before he retired on Nov. 30, 1991. Before that, he was the deputy commander in chief for Operations with U.S. Central Command (Forward) during Desert Storm.

Waller's career in the Army spanned 32 years. He held a variety of staff and command positions which included: chief of staff, 24th Infantry Division (Mechanized), Fort Stewart, Ga.; commanding general, 8th Infantry Division (Mechanized), 5th Corps, U.S. Army Europe and Seventh Army.

"His rise from humble beginnings to one of the highest-ranking African-American officers in the U.S. military through stalwart determination and a record of excellence served as an inspiration to minority and nonminority officers," President Bill Clinton said on learning of his death. He cited Waller's reputation "as a skillful and disciplined professional and a caring, enthusiastic commander."

When Waller retired, he moved to Denver and served as president and chief executive officer of an environmental technology company, RKK, Ltd. He then became the senior vice president for the Department of Energy Programs for the ICF Kaiser Environmental and Energy Group. In July of 1995, Waller became the Kaiser-Hill vice president for site operations and integration at Rocky Flats Environmental Technology Site.

Waller is survived by his wife of 37 years, Marion Waller of Golden, Colo., and sons Michael of Colorado Springs, Colo., and Mark of New York. His mother, still lives in Baton Rouge, La., and a sister lives in Chicago.

Secretary of the Army Togo D. West Jr. said Waller got "the very best effort" from his soldiers because he cared deeply for them "and they knew it."

"He has," West said, "in his devotion to family and country, truly been a model for all Americans."

DFAS to change travel pay procedure

The Defense Finance and Accounting Service-Indianapolis is changing the process and format in which travelers receive information concerning their travel payment.

Beginning in August, travelers will receive a simplified advice of payment printed concurrently with the check or Electronic Fund Transaction. The AOP provides the essential information travelers need regarding their payment on one single sheet of paper in the same format they submitted the settlement voucher.

In February, a sample of the new travel AOP was sent to 3,500 government travelers services by DFAS-IN Operating Locations. The response was overwhelming. The survey reflected a 90% acceptance level.

For more information on travel AOP, call (317) 542-2405 or DSN 699-2405.

DFAS centralizes disbursement

The most current initiative from the Defense Finance and Accounting Service is centralized disbursing. The focus of this initiative is on centralizing check writing and electronic funds transfers functions at the Indianapolis Center. Under centralized disbursing, the Indianapolis Center will take advantage of high speed equipment to prepare and mail all payments for the Operating Locations. Accompanying each payment will be a simplified advice of payment designed to provide the payee with an easy to read explanation of what the payment represents. DFAS surveyed travelers and vendors and received a favorable response.

The first phase of centralized dsbursing was kicked off in April and the printing of checks for the Fort Benning OPLOC will begin June 3. different responsibilities as a crew member.

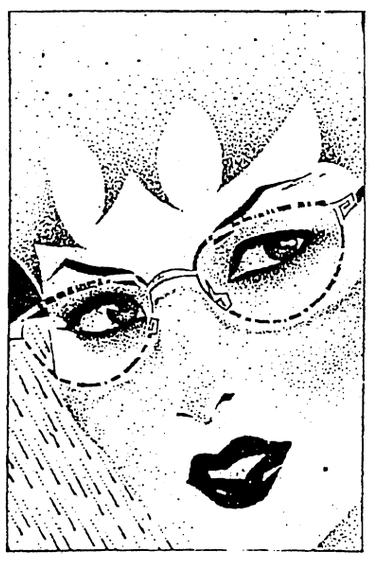
"If we were to go to war, I think we would be ready."

On the logistics side of the operations, Staff Sgt. Kenneth Lynum of Headquarters and Headquarters Battery, 1st Battalion, 10th Field Artillery learned a lot about coordination.

"I dealt with logistics, fuel supply and medical support and I learned how the different teams come together into the combat support team and pull together to accomplish the mission," he said. "It was great."

Overall, Dorman said the rotation was tremendous.



"Though we had our nose bloodied a couple times, we never lost the fight," he said. "More than once we destroyed the (Opposing Force). Everyone was on the money."

With their return, the brigade will become the Division Ready Brigade, which means it will be the first brigade in the division to be called up for deployment should the need arise, later this summer.

Latin Americans tackle obstacles

School of the Americas

" No PT today? Hooah! "

The troops thought they were getting off easy when they saw the training schedule omitted the usual morning workout. But the 14 students of the Infantry Officer Basic Course, School of the Americas, soon discovered real physical training. They were on tap for Sand Hill's confidence course.

The eight Ecuadorians, three Bolivians and three Dominicans had plenty of time to see what they would be up against.

Through SOA's Tactics staff, they experienced the routine that every U.S. soldier knows all too well. They heard about the task, conditions and standard. They walked through the course for familiarization. Then they received a safety briefing and learned what the risk assessment was.

The officers soon discovered that their performance on this course would not only be timed and evaluated, but it gave one of them the chance to win a plaque and certificate of achievement.

"This was revealed after initial warm-up exercises and getting the butterflies out of their stomachs with good-natured ribbing — the brotherhood of arms crosses all borders," said SOA Tactics instructor Capt. Jorge Swank.

After tackling the course, the young officers' reaction was one of "Hey, this wasn't so bad," Swank said. But that was after only one time through. That attitude wore off by the third pass.

"The smiles turned to grimaces when it was decided that, since not everyone got wet going through the low-crawl wire obstacle, maybe a fourth iteration was necessary," Swank said.

SOA's IOBC trains Latin American officers in basic infantry skills with emphasis on human rights awareness in all situational training exercises. The students will graduate in mid-July.

Bradley crews aim for combat readiness

By Robin A. Shawlinski
3d Brigade, 3rd Infantry Division

The Bradley Fighting Vehicle moves up to battle position one. "This is Delta 13, Redcon One," the Bradley commander radios to the tower. "Delta 13, this is Charlie 92. Enemy PCs spotted in vicinity TRP1. Bound to battle position three," the tower responds.

"Charlie 92, roger out," the BC replies, then commands his driver . "Move out."

The Bradley begins its trek down range as the BC identifies the enemy he commands, "Gunner battlesight PC."

The gunner acquires the target and responds, "identified."

The BC gives the command to fire and the gunner fires his 25 mm SABOT and destroys the target.

The BC commands his gunner to cease fire. To the tower, "Charlie 92, this is Delta 13. Engaged and destroyed enemy PC."

The engagements ends. And the Bradley crews prepares for their next engagement.

After months of practicing in the Unit Conduct of Fire Trainer (simulation device), soldiers of the 1st Battalion, 15th Infantry Regiment, got their chance to prove they are combat-ready during their biannual Gunnery Exercise May 3 to 23.

Throughout the exercise, the Bradley crews practice different maneuvers on several intermediate gunnery "tables." Tables 6 through 8 are conducted on live-fire ranges.

"Tables 6 and 7 are practice for Table 8," said Sgt. Michael Simmons of Company A, 1st Bn., 15th Inf. "This is where crews work out all the bugs and they work on crew coordination.

"Here is where we're getting the crew to where everything is second nature," he said.

Spc. George Stephenson, a gunner with Co. A, 1st Bn., 15th Inf., said that Tables 6 and 7 are good for the crews.

"Table 6 and 7 is just a warm-up — it's a game," he said. "Although they're not important for score, they're important for crew coordination."

Table 8, single-vehicle qualification, is where everything comes together and where the crews prove their combat-readiness.

During Table 8, soldiers from 2nd Battalion, 7th Infantry Division (Mechanized), Fort Stewart, Ga., evaluated each company on their crew's ability to properly acquire and engage targets during various firing conditions, said Command Sgt. Maj. Hubert Key, 1st Bn., 15th Inf., command sergeant major.

During qualification, the crews must fire six day engagements and four night engagements at targets ranging from 500 to 1,600 meters. At table 8, crews must engage targets in nuclear, biological and chemical environment, a moving Soviet vehicle with troops, a three-truck target and other target combinations. A crew must fire three rounds on each target to make the kill.

They are rated on the time it takes to acquire a target and fire on a target, as well as, the Bradley Commander's commands and the crew's ability to work together. The crew can receive a possible 100 on each engagement, but must pass one of the two NBC engagements and score at least a 700 total, Key said.

Upon completion, the crew will receive a qualification classification depending on their score. A "distinguished" classification is given to crews who score at least 900 points. A "distinguished" is given if a crew scores 800 to 899 points. A "qualified" is given if a 700 to 799 is scored and an unqualified is given if a crew scores a 699 or if the crew scored less than 69 points on four of the ten engagements.

Company D crew, Sgt. 1st Class Moses Burrell, Sgt. Stephen Chappell and Pvt. 2 Stewart Jackson, said they were happy with their day qualification run.

"We pulled a 500-day run. It's looking pretty good," Burrell, the Bradley commander, said. "It takes a lot of stress off the night run."

The battalion qualified 99 percent of its soldiers.

CID presents its home page on the 'Web'

TRADOC News Service

FORT BELVOIR, Va. — The Army's Criminal Investigation Command became the latest to join the Worldwide Web sites on the Internet when it introduced a home page recently.

The computer address http://www.belvoir.army.mil/cidc/index.htm transports cyber surfers to the U.S. Army Criminal Investigation Command site. Computer users are immediately greeted by the major command's insignia roundel of a star with compass points, and the banners for "Integrity" and motto "Do what has to be done."

The page features hypertext words to access information about CID's history, organizational structure, agent training and a biography of the commanding general, Brig. Gen. Daniel A. Doherty.

The computer page also includes an address for tips from military personnel and civilians who have information about a crime committed against the Army.

The page represents a team effort by staff members in the command's deputy chief of staff for Operations, deputy chief of staff for Information, Public Affairs Office and field input.

There are now 467 Army home pages, according to military information management specialists.

Clearing Quarters

Does leaving have to be so hard?

By Amy Durham
Special to The Bayonet©

After 15 years of living as far away as Germany, Brenda Barnes is excited to be moving to North Carolina — just a short drive from relatives.

But before she can settle her two daughters and two Chihuahuas in at Fort Bragg, Barnes and her husband, Sgt. 1st Class Mickey Barnes, 2nd Battalion, 58th Infantry Regiment, must clear Fort Benning quarters. Theirs is one of hundreds of families that will be preparing to clear this summer.

Among the list of things to do — disconnecting phone and cable services and scheduling packing and moving times — Barnes has to do all she can to "pass inspection."

"It can be one of the hardest things they're going to have to do to get out of here," said Ron Smith, Family Housing chief, Directorate of Public Works.

The inspection is actually a two-phase process. Barnes' husband will have to go by the Family Housing Office in Building 399 to schedule a pre-inspection approximately 30 to 45 days before final clearance. Smith said quarters clearance is so important that the pre-inspection requirement is stated on a soldier's orders.

"When they (soldiers) receive permanent-change-of-station orders, they need to begin thinking about the clearing process," he said.

Smith said clearing quarters can become an obstacle because housing residents often neglect to maintain quarters to standard while they are living on post, thus causing unnecessary panic when it is time to leave.

The pre-inspection allows both the soldier and the Family Housing Maintenance Shop enough time to correct any deficiencies found by the inspector.

Because furniture is still in place during a pre-inspection, inspectors may miss things like holes in the wall or damaged floors. Smith suggested residents inform the inspector of any known, but unseen, damages so no deficiencies will be found in what should be the final inspection.

Although Barnes said she has maintained her quarters while her family has been living on Fort Benning, she still is concerned about what she is responsible for. Smith said that is why one of Housing's five inspectors takes a look at the home about a month before the residents leave.

"The inspector will go over the clearing checklist during the pre-inspection," he said.

At that time, Smith said, the inspector will note all deficiencies and answer any questions residents may have about their cleaning responsibilities. If after the pre-inspection residents are confused or think of more questions, Smith said they can call Reggi Sumbry, lead inspector at the Housing Office, at 545-7312 during regular business hours.

Smith said inspectors will also discuss the resident's option to hire a cleaning team. Although she will take care of basic cleaning any occupant would perform when moving, Barnes has already decided to hire one of Housing's 15 approved cleaning team firms.

"The money we'll pay is worth the hassle and time I'll save," she said.

Barnes is not alone in her choice. According to Smith, 85 percent of the residents who clear quarters at Fort Benning take the cleaning team option. For residents like Barnes who choose to hire a cleaning team, Housing provides a list of approved firms. Smith said once residents have negotiated a price, they need to drop a copy of the contract and the payment (money order or cashiers check only) by the Housing Office, Building 399, one day prior to the final inspection.

Passing final inspection and getting out of housing is not always an easy process. Many residents encounter hurdles along the way. Recounting a neighbor's recent move, Barnes said the pre-inspector told the family member not to wax the floors.

"But during the final inspection," Barnes said, "another inspector told her she should have." Barnes said her neighbor had to go through a third inspection, at which time another inspector told the woman she did not have to wax her floor. According to installation policy, Fort Benning residents are required to wax floors as part of their clearing process.

It is this kind of confusion Barnes wants to avoid and the reason she believes having a cleaning team might facilitate passing final inspections for soldiers and their families.

To alleviate the confusion, Smith said Housing now assigns the same inspector for both the pre- and final inspections. But he also said cleaning teams are held to the same standard as residents for inspections.

Cleaning teams can fail inspections, too, Smith said. "Two cleaning teams have been removed from the approved list within the last 30 days due to failed inspections," he said.

According to Smith, if a cleaning firm team fails inspection three times within a six-month period, they are removed from the list.

Smith said whether a resident chooses to clean his or her quarters for final inspection or hire a cleaning team, the standards for clearing quarters are not to make moving hard on the family, but to ensure another military family can enjoy living in government housing.

While Barnes and her husband are looking forward to getting back to family, fresh seafood and North Carolina's many waterways, they are also taking the necessary steps to ensure they pass their quarters' final inspection so they can leave Fort Benning.

Proper maintenance

Prevents unnecessary hassles, headaches for soldiers, families trying to clear post

By Amy Durham
Special to the Bayonet©

Families residing in post quarters often put off maintenance until the soldier receives permanent-change-of-station orders.

But the ideal time to think about clearing is the day a family moves in.

According to Ron Smith, Family Housing chief, proper preventive maintenance can alleviate a lot of headaches and hassles when a soldier actually clears post quarters.

"If residents maintain quarters during the time they occupy housing," he said, "and identify problems as they occur, proper maintenance can be completed in adequate time."

And timing is everything in Fort Benning's preventive maintenance scheduling. According to Daniel Donahue, Family Housing Maintenance Shop supervisor, the maintenance shop received 7,155 work orders from post residents from Oct. 1, 1995, through May 6. Of those orders, a staff of 27 individuals — carpenters, plumbers, electricians and other skilled professionals — have responded to and corrected all but approximately 300. Staff members answered those orders according to priority.

Donahue said the Family Housing Maintenance Shop staff responds to Priority One calls, such as broken glass or exterior doors that will not secure, within an hour.

"A Priority One order is a safety, health and welfare issue," he said.

Other work orders are given Priority Two or Three status based on the urgency. Donahue said examples of a Priority Two would be leaky faucets, stopped-up commodes or sinks; something that is not placing the family in danger, but prohibits necessary functioning of the household. However, if there is more than one commode, residents may receive service the next day. Priority Three calls would consist of screens needing to be repaired, etc. But whatever the priority classification, Donahue said workers try to correct problems as soon as they can, averaging several hundred completions per week.

If a resident is not sure whether he or she needs assistance from the Family Housing Maintenance Shop or from the U-Do-It-Center, Donahue said representatives will tell customers which they need when they call.

To make the work-order response process run more smoothly, Housing officials suggest post residents do the following:

- Give the customer service representative current home and work numbers of both soldier and spouse.
- Stay home to let the service representative in if the work order is a Priority One.
- Keep a record of the service order number for each work order requested. This number alleviates time-consuming searches when customers call for status updates.

The bottom line, according to Donahue and Smith, is that residents use all Directorate of Public Works resources to correct problems as they occur.

U-Do-It Center

One well-used resource is the post U-Do-It Center in Building 385 on Vibbert Avenue. All family housing residents are made familiar with the center when they sign for quarters.

According to Dominick De Carlo, chief, Unit Housing Support Branch, DPW, the two-hour family self-help class is not only a tool in which housing officials can explain post resident responsibilities, but also to provide information about the U-Do-It-Center's procedures and inventory.

De Carlo said the center's inventory includes 66 different types of loan items such as wheelbarrows, post hole diggers and weed eaters, which must be returned to the center within an allotted time frame.

The center also provides approximately 1,000 line items that do not have to be returned, which are issued for proper maintenance of home appliances and yards. De Carlo suggested residents visit the U-Do-It-Center regularly to stock up on items.

"I encourage residents to come in on a monthly basis," De Carlo said. "They can get air conditioner filters and other items needed to keep their quarters up

Officials address common questions, concerns

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Fort Benning's Community Life mayors recently put together a list of the questions, concerns and complaints they hear most often from residents moving on and off post. Below are the answers provided by Department of Public Work's Family Housing.

• Why can't DPW guarantee the final inspection will be completed by the same person who does the pre-inspection?

• The Family Housing Office recently changed the policy so that the same inspector will perform both the pre- and final inspections of quarters.

• What recourse does the resident have if the final inspector finds deficiencies not listed in pre-inspection or on housing's clearing list?

• The pre-inspection must be scheduled 30 to 45 days prior to final clearance from quarters. This allows sufficient time for the Family Housing Maintenance Shop to respond and correct deficiencies in the quarters. The major reason that most residents fail the first inspection is not cleaning of the quarters but having maintenance items that were not corrected. If the pre-inspection is scheduled in advance, Family Housing's Maintenance Shop can respond in a timely manner and all repairs are made prior to the occupant's final inspection. Pre-inspections are not intended to produce a list of deficiencies but to provide valuable information on what the occupant's responsibilities are in preparing quarters for the final inspection. Army Regulation 210-50, Family Housing Management, requires outgoing occupants to leave quarters in move-in condition; as a result, deficiencies must be corrected.

• What do residents clearing on Monday do if they need a self-help item?

• Residents should plan in advance for their self-help needs if their inspection is scheduled on a Monday. Self-Help will handle emergencies.

• Why is it that no one passes their first (and usually second) inspection if they do not hire a cleaning team? (The feeling among many families is cleaning teams are paying kick-backs to inspectors.)

• Many residents who clean their own quarters pass on the first inspection. Some residents who fail do not maintain their quarters properly during their occupancy. Some wait until the last minute to begin preparing their quarters for the inspection. Cleaning teams also fail inspections. Two cleaning teams have been removed from the approved list within the last 30 days because of failing inspections.

• When does basic allowance for quarters start again once cleared of housing?

• Termination orders are prepared the same day the resident clears quarters, which reinstates basic allowance for quarters on the date specified in the contract; or, if the resident cleaned the quarters, BAQ is reinstated the same day.

• Does the grass have to be just seeded or growing in order to clear?

• Grass must be actively growing in order to clear quarters. Common problems areas are where pets have been kept and areas where storage shed were. Purchase of sod is an option.

• If housing does not assign a parking place, how can residents be required to clear one before clearing?

• Some housing areas have carports and garages. These residents are required to clean these areas. In areas where parking is on a first-come, first-served basis, residents are not required to clean the parking area.

• Housing inspectors are not inspecting to the same standard. For example, pre-inspector may say the tub caulking is fine, but the final inspector may tell the resident to recalk before clearing quarters. What recourse does that resident have?

Learning the Ropes

Fort Benning teens reach personal summits, tackle mental and physical obstacles participating in ...

Teen Discovery Day

Making the most of the equipment available was one of the keys to completing the given tasks. Here, one of the students begins to tie the rope onto the pole.

By Marc G. Turchin
USAIC Public Affairs Office

Some Fort Benning middle and high school students recently spent hours learning to work well with others, discussing matters in an open forum and learning the power of positive reinforcement. No, this was neither a class project, nor were the students in class.

This was part of Fort Benning's annual Teen Discovery Day — a day devoted to teaching children leadership skills required as they get older.

The day consisted of three hours at the Infantry School's Leaders Reaction Course, then a pool party at Briant Wells Field House, followed by a barbecue.

The day's activities had a direct impact on the Fort Benning teenagers — during the barbecue, the students chose one teenager to represent Fort Benning at the World Teen Summit, which will be conducted in Columbiana, Ala., and the NASA Space Camp in Huntsville, Ala., Aug. 6 through 11.

Fort Benning's choice to represent them is Corey Hudson. Hudson, who is 15 and a ninth-grader at Columbus High School, will present the concerns of Fort Benning's teen-agers to the rest of the world at the summit.

Although the teen-agers' choice to represent them took only hours to decide, Hudson had to meet requirements long before he was chosen.

Some of the requirements included:

- Minimum age of 14
- One year retainability on post
- Participant in extracurricular activities
- Scholastic achievement

Some of the requirements came into play when Hudson and his classmates challenged the Leaders Reaction Course.

The students were required to accomplish a variety of tasks using everyone on their team.

More than 45 children attended the day's activities, but only about 25 were able to take part in the course activities.

There were four teams made up of around five or six people.

Each task included different settings, materials and goals — although the final goal was to have the team work together.

> "If one person doesn't cooperate, (the task) won't succeed ...it's a good way to build teamwork."

"The course helps develop problem-solving skills, interaction with others and leadership abilities," said Sergeant 1st Class Eddie Jones, the noncommissioned officer in charge of the course.

He said normally students from the Officer Candidate School, Infantry Officer Basic Course and Ranger Orientation Program use the course as part of the normal program of instruction of the Infantry School, but the teens learn the same things.

"It's not as structured with the students, but the same point gets across."

One of the points is team building, and the team building was evident right from the start.

When the students first arrived, they seemed quiet and tentative. But once the teams began their tasks, there was yelling, laughing and screaming from everyone.

"That is what team building is all about," Jones said. "They are there pulling for each other to succeed."

Hudson said it is something like survival of the fittest.

"If one person doesn't cooperate, (the task) won't succeed," Hudson said. "It's a good way to build teamwork."

Besides teamwork, the students came away with another important skill — people skills.

"Normally I don't associate with all these people during class; this gave me a better chance (to get to know them) through this," Hudson said.

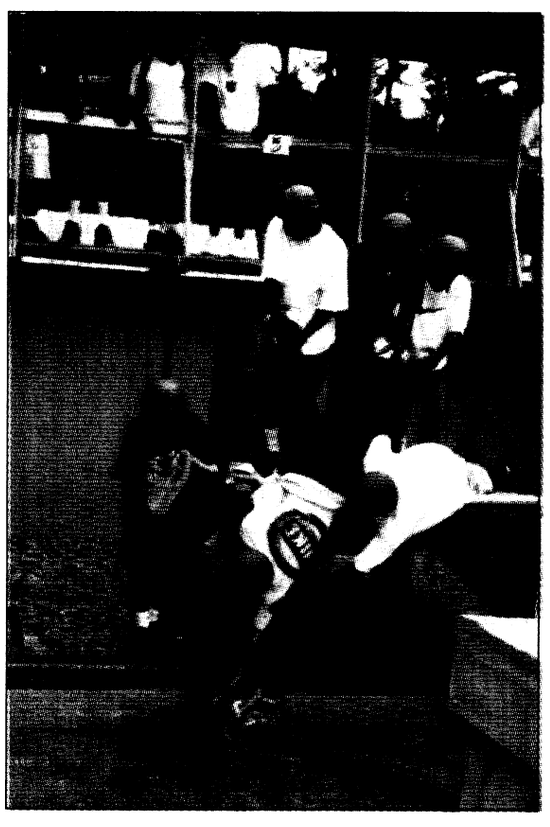
Jeff Thompson throws a rope over the pole, as the rest of his team watches. They hope that this will be the way to successfully cross over the pool of water. If someone touches the red areas, they must jump into the water, which is about waist deep.



J.R. Torian walks along a ladder which is over a pool of water. He is trying to see if the ladder will hold him as he makes his way to the other side.

Terrance Thorn, left, Sean Jackson, Cpl. William Warden, 29th Inf. Regt., and J.R. Torian tie knot a rope through a ladder.

Sergeant 1st Class Eddie Jones gives the initial briefing to the students about the safety hazards and objectives of the course. Once the briefing was complete, the students were broken up into groups and tackled the course. The students who were not able to take part, stood above the course on walkways and cheered the other students on.

After completing the task of getting across the water, one of the boards falls in the water. Again using teamwork, the team recover the board and was able to move on to the next task.

Board plans upcoming school year

By Amy Durham
Special to the Bayonet©

School board members continued their discussion about strengthening the objectivity of the selection process for the gifted program during their regular meeting Monday.

Dr. Dell Karr, Fort Benning Schools superintendent, discussed ongoing evaluation of the new eligibility requirements for participation in the gifted program.

Karr briefed the board on efforts to reduce the subjectivity factor in the selection process, making it as objective as possible.

Of the four criteria in which potential students must meet a standard, Karr said the committee considering the new criteria has decided to measure a child's placement by standardized tests. Those four criteria upon which children will be placed in the gifted program are mental ability, achievement, creativity and motivation.

The creativity criteria, the one which schools officials were most concerned about measuring objectively, will be measured by two tests. One will test analytical creativity — how a child can put things together — and another will test their verbal creativity.

Karr said keeping the screening process as objective as possible will make the standards "fair for all children across the board."

Karr also updated the board on progress with planning of the new pre-kindergarten program to be implemented at the beginning of the 1996-1997 school year. Karr said almost two hundred children are already registered. She also said transportation will be offered to children who meet distance criteria for busing and that staffing decisions will be made in early June.

Karr informed the board of student achievements and faculty changes; the Don C. Faith School History Club won state competition and will compete at the national level June 7 and Stacey Poydasheff will be retiring from her position as a third-grade teacher at White School. Karr also announced Vicki Rogers, principal, Dexter School, was recently recognized as the Department of Defense Education Activity's Principal of the Year, Stateside.

In other business, board members approved the Consolidated Lunchroom Fund for April. Alice Skinner, director of Logistics, presented the statistics. The monthly net income was $12,934, reaching a gain of $1,970 from March. Current year-to-date income was $39,795 while current fund equity was $105,910, Skinner said.

Other board members present were: Col. Gregory C. Camp, president; Chap. (Maj.) Robert Thompson; Rhoda Zerger, Dexter representative; Sgt. Joe Todd, Loyd representative; Sheila Long, Stowers representative; Adrienne Porter, White representative; Col. Richard Rutledge, schools officer; Lt. Col. Stephanie Willson, schools attorney; Richard Skinner, assistant superintendent for Budget and Personnel; and Caroline Myers, president, Benning Education Association. Others present were: Bob Ouimette, contracting manager; and Vicki Rogers, principal, Dexter School.

ask the judge

By Clay C. Schuett
Office of the Staff Judge Advocate

Q: I was recently driving along Dixie Road on my way to work when I noticed a lawn maintenance crew doing work. As I passed the crew, my windshield was shattered by a rock thrown from a lawn mower. I was told that the government would compensate my loss. Is that true?

A: The answer in most instances is "no." The only time a person can be compensated for this type of loss is when they are using their vehicle pursuant to orders for the convenience of the government, or when negligence can be established on the part of the government.

Army Regulation 27-20, paragraph 11-5, states that damage to vehicles may only be paid when the "damage is caused by fire, flood, hurricane, or other unusual occurrence." According to the regulation, "rocks thrown up by lawn mowers, weed eaters, or vehicles are not unusual occurrences" and are not compensable.

Also, golf balls or baseballs escaping from golf courses or ball fields are also not unusual occurrences and are not compensable. Therefore, in the situation above, the government would probably not pay to have the windshield fixed.

There are, however, two situations where the person would be compensated by the government for the damage to their vehicle.

The first situation is when the person is using their vehicle pursuant to orders for the convenience of the government, as will often occur when a soldier is on temporary duty. In order to file a claim in this situation, the soldier will first need to file with his or her insurance company. After settling with their insurance company, the soldier will then need to bring to the Claims Office a copy of the TDY orders authorizing use of the privately owned vehicle for the convenience of the government, proof of ownership of the vehicle, a police report (if there was one) and estimates of repair. At that time, their vehicle will be inspected by a claims examiner and the claim will be processed.

The other situation where a person will be compensated is when negligence can be established on the part of the government. In order to establish negligence in the situation above, the person would need to prove that the government worker was negligent in the operation of the lawn mower.

This can be established with either a statement from the operator admitting negligence or by the surrounding circumstances (ie, running a lawn mower in an area with no grass, only rocks).

If the person can establish negligence, they will then need to get a statement from the supervisor of the crew stating that the operator was in the "scope of his or her employment" at the time of the incident.

With this information, the person can come to the Claims Office and file for the damage caused to the vehicle. One should be aware, however, that establishing negligence in this situation would be very difficult.

For more information on this type of claim, or any other, call the Fort Benning Claims Office, Office of the Staff Judge Advocate, at 545-2285.

Questions: Officials respond

• Now that the same inspector performs both the pre- and final inspection, this problem should not occur.

• If an item was not there when the previous resident moved out, why should the current resident be responsible for putting it there? Housing makes it very clear that these are government quarters — not resident property.

• If the item is a self-help responsibility, the resident is responsible to ensure the item is in place. DPW Shops will provide anything beyond self-help responsibilities.

• If a resident moves out and the Housing Office is aware of a leaky roof or any other serious problem, why can it not be fixed before the next resident moves in? (One mayor said she personally knows of two times in the last year that an Indianhead Terrace resident found out from neighbors their roof leaked.)

• DPW does repair major deficiencies during change of occupancy. Many times departing occupants do not identify these problems to the inspector and, as a result, the new occupant moves in and then the repair is made.

• Do inspectors receive any customer service training? Inspectors treat outgoing residents like they are trying to get over on the inspection. Inspectors are never friendly or personable.

• Inspectors do receive customer service training on a regular basis. Incoming residents deserve and expect a clean house and the inspector's job is to ensure departing occupants leave the quarters clean and ready for reassignment.

Residents should begin early in preparing to vacate their quarters by scheduling a pre-inspection appointment 30 to 45 days before the date they want to clear quarters. Inspectors will help identify both self-help and DPW deficiencies that must be corrected before departure. Cleaning teams are available for those who elect these services.

Maintenance: Key

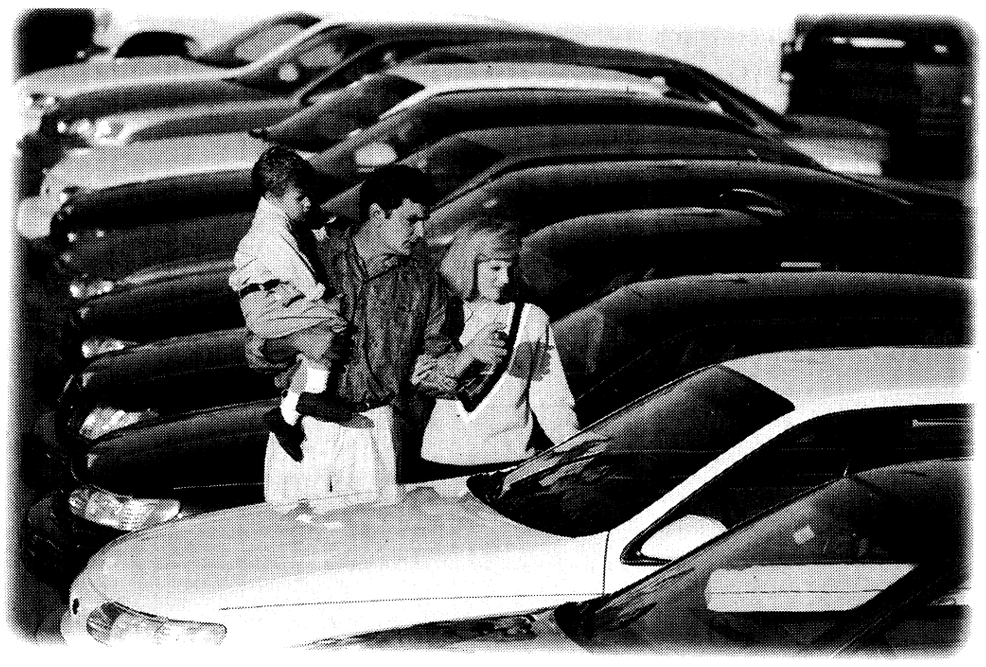
a to good standard."

Aside from the more commonly available line items — light fixtures, air filters, grass seed and fertilizer — De Carlo said the center just added several items to the inventory based on what residents need. Door sweeps, drain screens and outside faucet handles were recently added because of customer requests.

Quality service is important to the staff of six, De Carlo said, even when they serve approximately 40,000 to 42,000 customers each year.

To make using the center a smooth experience, he suggests customers follow these quidelines.

• Be prepared to show a military identification card and the self-help card, which contains the resident's self-help number. This number helps staff members identify — through the computer system — the customer and what set of quarters in which they reside.



• Fill out a service slip (hanging on clip boards throughout the center), including the name, address, item number, description and quantity.

• If it is a broken or missing item and there is more than one in the home, bring it in, so the staff can issue the correct item on the first try.

For self-help items, residents can stop by the U-Do-It Center, Building 385, Tuesday through Saturday from 8:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. The center is closed Sundays, Mondays and holidays.

The DPW work order section is open 24 hours every day, for emergency calls. The number is 545-2135.

Mother's teachings help son say final goodbye

By Robert Thompson
Chaplain's Family Life Center

The doctor said she will live only a few weeks to a few months. How could this be? She exercised, ate healthy foods and took vitamin and mineral supplements. Her own mother died less than four years ago. I expected her to live for another 20 years.

reflections

"I have pancreatic cancer," she said while sobbing on the phone 12 days ago. "I want you to come to see me."

So I have been with her and Dad for a week now and need to catch a plane in a few hours. I will mourn after she dies.

I am getting to say goodbye — a terrible luxury, a heart-tearing opportunity. She wasn't killed in an accident, with no chance to exchange farewells. She is on death row: condemned by cancer with no execution date set.

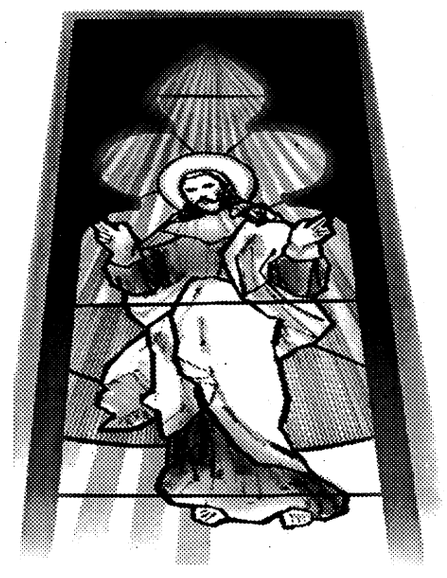
I help her with lunch. It is pasta and chicken broth I prepared myself, with a few small chicken pieces. I am surprised and pleased that she eats most of it. She even asks for a piece of pumpkin bread, but I can't find any, so my brother offers a fig bar as a substitute, and she eats that, too.

Now my friend who will drive me to the airport is here, talking to my dad while I speak with my mother.

"Mom, do you remember the time when you and I were up at the orchard picking filberts? I was only about 5 years old." Through closed eyes and a weak voice she says, "No."

"Well, that day you taught me the Lord's Prayer and the doxology." She smiles.

"I would like to recite them with you." She squeezes my hand, so I begin: "Our Father, who art in heaven."



As I pause to begin the next phrase, she repeats what I just said. I expected that we would say it together, but she repeats each phrase after me, as I had repeated, four decades ago, each one after her.

Then we sing the doxology. Her voice is raspy through lack of use and the pain medicine; mine is choked with emotion. It does not sound much like music. "Praise God, from whom all blessings flow." But it feels like a prayer. "Praise him all creatures here below."

What Mom had taught me, the young son, now becomes a song of thanks that we share as adults. What she taught me near the beginning of my spiritual life comforted us both near the end of her physical life.

We press our cheeks together and hold hands for a lingering moment. Then, with hot tears and a lump in my throat, I leave her room, hug Dad goodbye and ride to the airport.

She died the day after Ash Wednesday, when churches marked the beginning of the season of Lent. Pastors all over the world pronounced that ancient and somber phrase, "From dust we were formed; to dust we shall return." Worshippers accepted a small cross of ashes smudged on their foreheads to remind them of that grim reality and of the penance it should stir up.

Mom's cremation hastened her return to dust. As I cast her remains across the ground, I voiced my link to Lent: From dust we were formed; to dust we shall return.

Yet somewhere in the ring of those words, I heard an echo of the words we shared before she returned to dust — words which reach beyond the gritty grimness of Ash Wednesday and Good Friday, words of an often neglected glory: "Praise God from whom all blessings flow ... for thine is the kingdom and the power and the glory forever" — words of hope for Mom, for me, for us all.

Christians show their devotion to God by Giving unconditionally

By Chip Huey

Jesus spent the day in the temple in Jerusalem. There he sparred verbally with the religious leaders of his day.

reflections

After occupying the hot seat for quite some time, Jesus noticed an interesting drama unfolding in a nearby section of the temple.

In the temple of that era, a certain area contained the boxes into which people dropped their monetary offerings. Jesus watched while wealthy worshippers plunked their offerings into the containers. A poor widow dropped in her offering — a mere two small copper coins. Jesus' brief commentary on this little drama is powerful, convicting and can be summarized as follows: to love God is to give him your all.

One of the usual complaints about the church regards money. The church is frequently accused of constantly asking for money. In light of that complaint, it is interesting to note that Jesus assumes that giving is part of worshiping God.

Giving of some kind, whether monetary, material goods, or service, has always been integral to worship. Giving is expected of all, both rich and poor. Jesus did not say the poor widow should not give her offering.

Jesus made the point that rich folks were giving when it was easy. He said that they were giving out of their surplus. He certainly is not condemning the rich for their wealth. There is nothing wrong with being wealthy. Rather, Jesus' point was that the giving of those particular rich folks was no sacrifice. They gave out of what they had left over — their surplus.

Their giving did not hurt them at all. They took care of their needs and wants first; then they gave to God. That required no faith on their part.

Jesus said the widow, in her poverty, gave all on which she had to live. In those days, widows were often the poorest of the poor. A woman's prospects were grim if her husband died and either she had no children or relatives or they neglected her. The only amount of money smaller than the two copper coins the widow gave would be one copper coin.

Yet the widow's gift was the greatest. She gave sacrificially. She gave all she had. This required great faith on her part. She believed God was worthy of her best and that he would provide for her. On God's scales, her gift was far more valuable because she gave all she had. She gave out of her need.

How often do you and I give to God when it is easy? How often do we give after we have taken care of our needs and wants? How often do we give out of our surplus — what we have left over? I think this shows a poverty of faith on our part. We do not believe God is worthy of our best, nor do we believe he will provide for us.

Christ calls us to give him our all. He calls us to give not only our money, but our possessions, our time, ourselves — our lives. Jesus calls us to believe he is worthy of our best and that he will provide for us. Christ calls us to give no matter our station in life or situation. He calls us to give till it hurts.

Army captain to represent US in Summer Olympics

Paula J. Randall-Pagan
U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit

An Army captain with the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit says he feels like he's on top of the world because he will represent the United States at this summer's Olympic Games as a member of the U.S. Olympic Shooting Team.

Capt. Glenn A. Dubis, an international rifle shooter, won two spots on the team by taking first place in both men's 3x40 rifle and air rifle at the Olympic shooting trials in April in Atlanta.

Raised in Pennsylvania, Dubis started shooting in 1975 on his high school team. He did so well that his coach let him use the school's .22 caliber rifle to shoot with the local sportsman's club and in the Pittsburgh Suburban League where he also excelled. While attending Pennsylvania State University, he shot on the varsity squad and the ROTC shooting team, and was named honorable mention All American. After graduating in 1981 with a bachelor's degree in agronomy, he joined the Army and was selected to shoot with the Marksmanship Unit.

"I knew the slots (at the Marksmanship Unit) were competitive and I could only come here if they had room and if I made All American," Dubis said. "I never felt that I reached my potential in college. I knew I could be better but I didn't know how much better I could be, but I wanted to find out."

> "I have a good chance to medal, but nothing is certain; there's a handful of us who can win."
> — Glenn Dubis
> United States Army Marksmanship Unit

This will be the third Olympic appearance for the Desert Storm veteran. He placed fifth in three-position free rifle at the 1988 Olympics and placed sixth in three-position free rifle in 1984.

"I feel good that I made the team," Dubis said. "I have a good chance to medal, but nothing is certain; there's a handful of us who can win. I think (Capt.) Rob Harbison (also of the Marksmanship Unit) has a good chance, too."

Harbison, an international rifle shooter, won two spots on the U.S. Olympic Shooting Team by coming in second place in both men's 3x40 rifle and air rifle at the Olympic shooting trials.

"It takes many things to be a champion," Dubis said. "In my case, the Marksmanship Unit has been a very critical piece of what it has taken to make me the shooter that I am today."

His shooting accomplishments are numerous. In 1995, Dubis was a Gold Medalist in the 300-meter National Championships men's 3x20, and a team Gold Medalist at the Pan American Games in Argentina in air rifle. He also won a Silver Medal at the Military World Championships in 300-meter military rapid fire, and two Bronze Medals — one at the Pan American Games in air rifle and one in the 300meter National Championships men's 3x40, as well as winning third place in the Interservice International Championships in 50-meter English rifle.

Dubis won the title of World Military Rifle Champion at the Counseil International du Sport Militaire in 1994 as well as becoming the World Rifle Champion in 300-meter 3x40 in which he set a new world record, breaking his own world record he set in 1986. Besides being a National Team member that year, he also won four Gold Medals in men's air rifle at the Pan American tryouts, in the Interservice International Championships 300-meter English rifle and three-position rifle competitions, and at the USA National Shooting Championships in three-position free rifle.

He was a member of the World Military Championships Team in 1992 and won the President's Hundred Tab and the U.S. Army Distinguished Rifle Badge. In 1990, he was the World Rifle Champion in 300-meter 3x20 and set a world record in 300-meter 3x40 standing position. He won a Silver Medal in 1989 at the Pan American Games in three-position free rifle.

Dubis won the World Military Rifle Champion title in both 1988 and 1987, and in the 1987 Pan American Games was a Gold Medalist in three-position free rifle and a Silver Medalist in air rifle.

He set two world records, in 300-meter free rifle and 50-meter free rifle (kneeling), in 1986 as well as winning the World Rifle Champion title in the World Shooting Championships.

Golf tale gets rewarded

Atlantic Southeast Airlines

Almost everyone who has played golf has a story to tell, and May 22, Jean Harron, wife of Jack Harron, a retired colonel and former president of the Association of the United States Army, was recognized for the best golf story in Columbus.

Atlantic Southeast Airlines and WRCG-AM named Harron as the winner of the ASA Golf Getaway contest. The dream golf getaway includes round-trip tickets on ASA, two days of golf as well as dinner and hotel accommodations for four at Chateau Flan Resort and Spa north of Atlanta.

In 1964, Harron was playing golf with her husband on the Pineside course at Fort Benning. All morning, an obnoxious man behind them had been pushing them and almost hitting them with balls.

> "We went merrily on our way, and later we heard a blood curdling scream."
> — Jean Harron

As they approached the seventh hole, they came upon a freshly killed snake. Harron's description: it looked like someone had just taken their 9-iron to it. "After they putted, they coiled the snake into the hole with only its head sticking out of the cup.

"We went merrily on our way, and later we heard a blood curdling scream. We never saw the fellow behind us again," Harron said.

The foursome will probably relive the events of their Golf Getaway for months, and if they are like so many others of us, the tales will grow every time they are told.

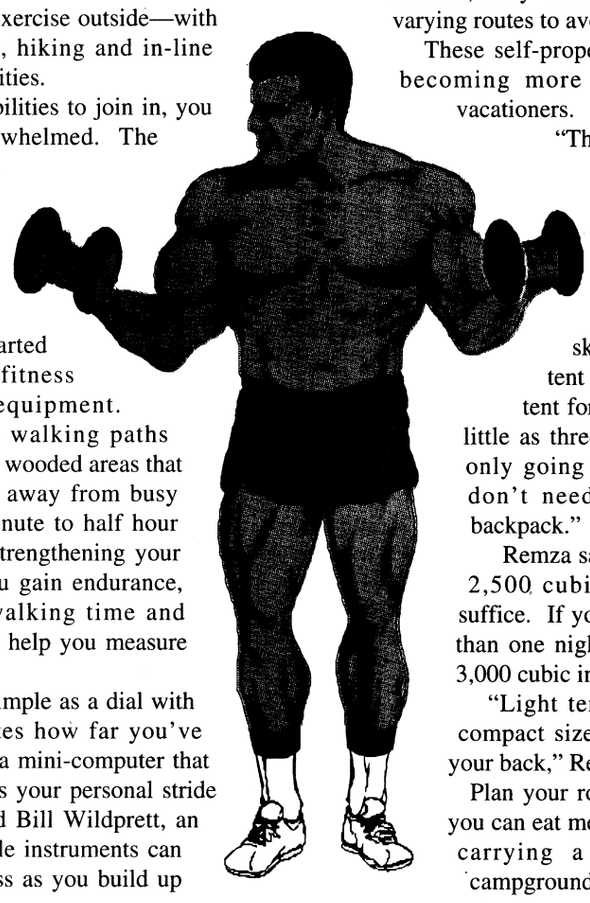
The Chateau Elân Resort Course is ranked as one of the best daily fee courses in Georgia. Holes from the course were included in Georgia Trend's recent listing of "The Best Holes Around" and "Holes from Hell."

Chateau Elan is a European estate winery and resort on 3,100 acres 30 minutes north of Atlanta.

Exercise moves outdoors

Feature Outdoors

People are becoming more aware of the need for exercise to maintain overall health. More than ever, people are taking up exercise outside—with running, mountain biking, hiking and in-line skating, to name a few activities.



Looking at all the possibilities to join in, you may feel confused or overwhelmed. The sporting goods stores offer a baffling array of expensive equipment and clothing. So where do you start?

One way is to take up walking. It can get you started toward good health and fitness without the expensive equipment. Many communities have walking paths through nature preserves, or wooded areas that can offer a peaceful route away from busy streets. A brisk fifteen minute to half hour walk is sufficient to start strengthening your heart and muscles. As you gain endurance, you can increase your walking time and distance. A pedometer can help you measure your progress.

"Pedometers can be as simple as a dial with a single hand that indicates how far you've gone, or as complicated as a mini-computer that counts your steps and stores your personal stride length in its memory," said Bill Wildprett, an outdoor expert. "These little instruments can help you track your progress as you build up distance and speed."

This information helps you determine whether you are reaching your target heart rate zone — which is important for effective exercise.

As you gain distance, you may want to bring a small fanny pack to carry a water bottle, rain coat, or billfold.

Once you are accustomed to a regular workout, you can vary your activities to include cycling or inline skating. They offer the same benefits as walking: a smooth, easy on-the-joints workout, with varying routes to avoid boredom.

These self-propelled modes of travel are becoming more popular with outdoor vacationers.

"There is so much ultra-light camping gear on the market today, that it's very possible to carry everything you need for a few days of hiking, cycling, or skating," said Jim Remza, a tent company spokesman. "A tent for two people can weigh as little as three pounds. And if you're only going for a night or two, you don't need to carry a full-sized backpack."

Remza said a pack that has at least 2,500 cubic inches of space will suffice. If you plan to be out for more than one night, you will want at least 3,000 cubic inches.

"Light tents fold down to a very compact size that is easy to carry on your back," Remza said.

Plan your route through towns where you can eat meals at restaurants to avoid carrying a lot of food. Make campground reservations in advance, to ensure you have a spot when you arrive.

A brisk walk out your front door could open up a whole new world of recreation possibilities. All it takes is an initial decision, and the determination to stick with it.

Paralympic Games celebrate 'Triumph of the Human Spirit'

International Payalympic Committee

Imagine winning a gold medal in the men's lOOm — though born without hands or feet, imagine setting a world record in swimming, without being able to see, imagine long jumping more than 19 feet, on one leg.

On the evening of August 15 thousands of people will converge at the new Olympic stadium to become part of a showcase of color, light and design as they participate in the Opening Ceremonies of the 1996 Atlanta Paralympic Games — kicking off what promises to be one of the decade's greatest events.

Celebrities Christopher Reeve and Aretha Franklin will lead an all-star cast in the global celebration along with other headliners to be named.

The evening will include a parade of flags representing some 127 countries followed by more than 3,500 athletes and 6,000 singers, dancers and performers who will commemorate the "Triumph of the Human Spirit."

For 10 straight days, athletes with physical disabilities will be competing in 17 sports, 14 of which are Olympic sports, and two demonstration sports. Fans will be "dazzled" by the competitive skills of Paralympic participants who are athletes first and disabled second.

Many disabled athletes, functioning with prosthetics which only give an 85 percent return, are slight seconds shy of world records set by non-disabled athletes. For instance, double-arm, double-leg amputee Tony Volpentest has run the men's 100m in 11.46 seconds compared to Carl Lewis' Olympic record of 9.86.

The Paralympic Games is more than just an athletic event. It offers hopes and dreams to many individuals with disabilities who would otherwise not have the opportunity to compete in a world-class sporting event. It offers one inspirational moment after another to fans.

Whether it's a legally blind swimmer counting strokes across the pool on her way to winning a gold medal or an individual, born without hands or feet who uses two paint cans topped with padding to prop his arms in starting blocks on his way to setting a new world record in the 100m, each Paralympic athlete has an inspiring story to tell, each of which represents the true spirit of competition, discipline and courage.

The 1996 Atlanta Paralympic Games is affordable in every way and provides families with a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity to view the "Triumph of the Human Spirit."

The Opening Ceremonies tickets start at $25.

In addition to the Opening Ceremonies. Tickets for sporting competitions start at $10 and are available through Ticketmaster ticket centers where no service fee will be charged — a first in its history. Families looking for a bargain package can purchase the Paralympic Coupon Book (valued at more than $120) for $68, available through Ticketmaster. The book contains eight single event tickets, a coupon for 25 percent discount on Opening Ceremonies tickets and a coupon good for 10 percent off purchases of Paralympic merchandise. Special group rates also are available for parties of 20 or more.

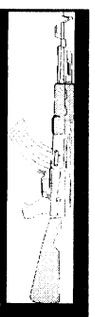
License required for red deer, elk

Georgia Department of Natural Resources

Effective July 1, Georgians must have a wild animal license in order to possess red deer and elk.

People who already own one or both of these animals as of June 30 will receive a free permit for the animals, as long as they are not being bred. As of July 1, anyone interested in acquiring or selling one or both of these species must have a wild animal license. The Georgia General Assembly passed these laws during the 1996 legislative session, according to the Department of Natural Resources, Wildlife Resources Division.

Department of Natural Resources officials remind all animal owners that it is illegal to possess a wild animal or an animal that is a cross between a wild animal and a domestic animal without a wild animal license. A wild animal is defined as any species not native to Georgia and not usually domesticated. This includes any cross between a wild animal, wildlife and a domestic animal and all subsequent generations of such crosses.



"Wild animals often appear cute and playful when they are young, but they can become dangerous as they grow older," said Todd Holbrook, chief of Game Management. "There are other concerns as well such as lack of a rabies vaccine for some wild animals."

Another species that may be owned with a license only is a wolf-hybrid. These animals become increasingly unpredictable as they mature and are susceptible to rabies because an effective vaccine has not been developed.

"It has been illegal to buy or sell these animals without a license since 1994, yet it is still being done," said Maggie Beacham, Wildlife Resources Division special permits officer. "The purpose of the license is not to deprive the people of Georgia, but to protect them from unpredictable wild animal behavior and possible exposure to rabies."

For more information on how to obtain a Georgia wild animal license, contact the Wildlife Resources Division, Special Permit Unit at (770) 918-6425.

Explosives can be dangerous

By Jacqué Hill
Special to the Bayonet©

Pyrotechnics (fireworks or any similar devices) and other explosives are dangerous and should be handled with extreme caution only by persons trained to handle them. A few harmful incidents have recently occurred involving such objects.

1st Sgt. Robert L. Trueman, 89th Explosive Ordnance Disposal Unit, offered warnings to people about the avoidance of a pyrotechnic.

"Don't play with it, keep it away from flames, don't subject it to stress of any type, including cutting into it," he said. "Things like firecrackers and simulators we use on post have photoflashes in them and are very susceptible to cutting.

"If someone finds a suspected dangerous munition, they should call the Military Police or Range Control," Trueman said. "We take over for the military police and Range Control if it's something they can't handle. If we can move it and take it to a safe place, we will. If not, we will take protective measures and then blow it up where its at."

Trueman specifically warned against the dangers of fireworks because Independence Day will be celebrated soon.

According to a memorandum from Col. Richard L. Rutledge, garrison commander, an accident recently occurred at Fort Benning.

"While on a force-on-force training exercise using blank ammunition, a soldier found an M-16 clip with live ball ammunition," he said. "The soldier wanted to use the clip, so he dumped the ball ammunition and loaded blank ammunition into the clip. Unfortunately, he left one live ball cartridge in the clip. As a result, another soldier was seriously wounded in the shoulder."

Rutledge also offered safety advice in the memorandum and urged people to report any pyrotechnics or explosive devices they might find to the proper authorities.

Barracks to get individual phone service in rooms

By Jacqué Hill
Special to the Bayonet©

Individual phone lines will soon be available for soldiers living in enlisted barracks.

The service, made possible by a contract between the Army and Air Force Exchange Service and Sprint, will give soldiers the opportunity to have their own phone lines, instead of relying on pay phones in recreation rooms and at the end of halls for general use by everyone in the barracks.

For a $41 connection fee that can be prorated over six months and $20.50 monthly recurring charge, Sprint will provide both local and long distance services to a soldier's room. Along with these services, the customer will also receive unlimited local calling, voice mail, call waiting and 60 minutes or $20 worth of long distance calls at no extra charge.

Each phone customer will be assigned, or be given the opportunity to choose, a personal identification code. A caller will be required to key this access code in when making any type of toll call.

"The purpose of the personal access codes is to alleviate unauthorized callers from charging long distance calls to the owner's phone, which in turn protects the phone owner's credit," Spc. Michael James, president, Better Opportunities for Single Soldiers Program, said.

According to Dick Belgrano, chief of Programs Support and Initiatives Office, Business Programs Directorate, Community Families Support Center, customers may use "dial around" codes in order to access long distance carriers other than Sprint if they do not wish to use the company for their long distance services.

"They will basically have Sprint as their long distance carrier, however, they are free to dial around that," he said.

The company codes that enable a phone user to access different long distance carriers begin with the number 10, followed by three additional numbers, and are usually listed in the front of nonmilitary telephone directories.

Those people currently using Bell South may switch to Sprint without incurring a connection fee, according to Daniel J. Drugich, on-site representative with Select Switch Systems, Inc., a company contracted to perform customer service responsibilities on behalf of Sprint.

"If someone is currently using Bell South, there will be no connection fee — it's free," he said. Those soldiers who previously had Bell South service and prefer not to switch to Sprint will not be forced to do so, according to Drugich.

"Right now, there is a little bit of a wait to be put online, but once our service is up and running, within 12 to 24 hours, customers will be connected," Drugich said.

Soldiers who deploy or receive temporary duty orders requiring them to be absent for a substantial duration will have their monthly recurring charge waived, according to Drugich.

"If they have TDY orders or their unit is deploying or they go to training for 30 days or more, we'll waive their monthly recurring charge while they're gone," he said. Drugich also said that soldiers in these situations can still use their calling cards and voice mail services while they are gone.

Applications for barracks phone services are available at Morale, Welfare and Recreation and most AAFES locations.

Soldiers may also visit a customer service representative at the Barracks Phone Center, Building 9234, located directly behind the Mall Bowling Center, to apply for the service.

3rd Bde remembers unit sacrifices

Soldiers past and present recall fallen comrades during Memorial Day ceremony

By Robin A. Shawlinski
3rd Brigade, 3rd Infantry Division

The memorial stands as a solemn reminder of the sacrifices soldiers from the 3rd Infantry Division have made since its creation in 1917.

Soldiers, past and present, remembered those sacrifices during the first 3rd Infantry Division Memorial Service since 1958, May 30 in front of the National Infantry Museum.

The 1st Battalion, 15th Infantry Commander, Lt. Col. Edward Cook, representing the division, and Bill Schlitz, representing the Society of the 3rd Infantry Division, presided over the ceremony.

"These (present veterans) have fought alongside a lot of those who were killed in action," Schlitz said. "They knew them and they're here paying their respects to them."

During the ceremony, Cook spoke of the soldiers who gallantly died in defense of their country.

"It's great to have the 3rd (Infantry Division) back at Fort Benning and to participate with such a fine group veterans," Cook said about their participation in the ceremony.

The 3rd Infantry Division was born at Camp Green, N.C., in November 1917. The division saw combat in World War I at Aisne, Champagne, Marne, Aisne-Marne, St. Mihiel and Meuse-Argonne; in World War II at Algeria-French Morocco, Tunisia, Sicily, Naples-Foggia, Anzio, Rome-Arno, Southern France, Ardennes Alsace, Rhineland and Central Europe. They also saw combat in the Korean War and the Persian Gulf War.

On July 14, 1918, combat along the Marne River in France earned them the nickname "Marne Division" and its motto "Rock of the Marne."

In its history, the soldiers of the 3rd Infantry Division earned two Medals of Honor during World War I, 36 during World War II and 11 during the Korean War. The division also saw 73 days of combat during the Korean War.

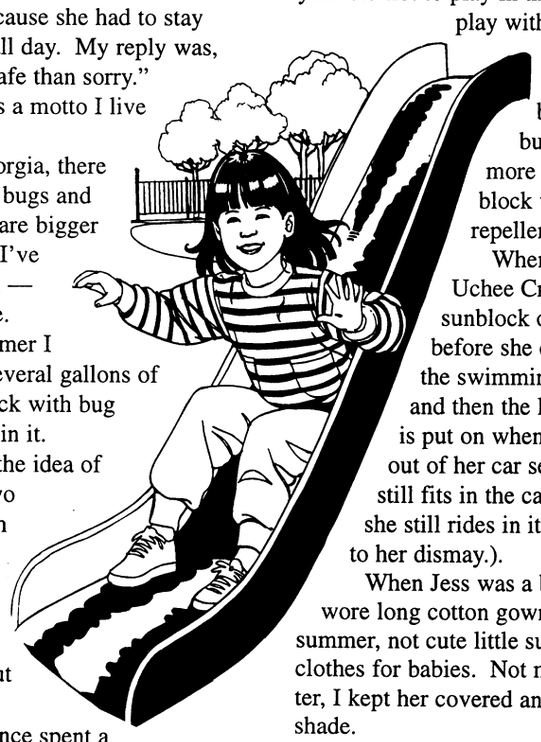
SUMMER TIME

Mother says to 'play it safe'

Lori Egan
Bayonet staff writer

Summer time in Georgia is here again, or, since I'm from Idaho, it's never left. Summer is one of the year's busiest times for moms.

For one thing, school vacation begins. Moms now have to find ways to keep their children busy all day, instead of most of it. Otherwise, they'll hear the whiny "Mommm — I'm booorrred." (I loved doing this to my mom and she always said something about payback — now I know what she meant.)



commentary

During the summer, moms ferry their children from baseball practice to swimming lessons, from vacation Bible school to picnics at Uchee Creek.

This is the time for all neurotic moms to rush out and buy sun block, not by the bottles, but by the gallons.

I'll admit to it — I'm a neurotic mom. My daughter gets sun block slathered on her every morning before she goes to school. The other afternoon, after a day of rain, she told me I had wasted the sun block because she had to stay indoors all day. My reply was, "Better safe than sorry."

This is a motto I live by.

In Georgia, there are more bugs and the bugs are bigger than any I've ever seen — anywhere. Last summer I bought several gallons of a sun block with bug repellent in it.

I like the idea of killing two birds with one stone. Unfortunately, I'm all out of it now.

I've since spent a Saturday afternoon and a Monday morning at the hospital because of a spider bite.

My daughter told the emergency room doctor the spider had big red flashing lights and she didn't like it when he bit her.

I can't reasonably expect a four year old not to play in the dirt or play with rolly pollies and lady bugs, but I can buy some more of the sunblock with bug repellent in it.

When we go to Uchee Creek, I put sunblock on Jessie before she even puts the swimming suit on and then the life jacket is put on when she gets out of her car seat (she still fits in the car seat, so she still rides in it — much to her dismay.).

When Jess was a baby, she wore long cotton gowns in the summer, not cute little summer clothes for babies. Not my daughter, I kept her covered and in the shade.

When she was six months old, we went to San Diego to visit my sister. We went to the beach and yes, my daughter was the one in cotton long johns and a hat.

Another part of Jessie's summer ensemble is her bike helmet. She has to put the bike helmet on before the bike comes out of the storage shed.

Lori Egan loves being the mom to a little girl who keeps her on her toes with her statements about life.

Poor kid, sweat drips off her like she's playing in the sprinkler, but the helmet stays on until she's finished riding the bike.

One reason why she doesn't fight me about the helmet is I always wear one, too, when I ride with her.

Another way my neurotic mom routine kicks in is at home. We have a wading pool in our backyard. The first thing I told Jess was that if she fell down and was under the water, all she had to do was stand up and she would be taller than the water. Then, I put a lock on the back gate so that other kids couldn't come and drown while we weren't home.

Now is that neurotic or what? Better safe than sorry.

dial 545-boss

Dial 545-BOSS is the commander's action line for soldiers, family members and civilians to call when they have problems or complaints that can't be resolved elsewhere.

While it is not a substitute for the chain of command or for agencies established to provide assistance, the line offers another means of communication between Fort Benning's community and commanders.

The Bayonet features some of the calls that may benefit other members of the Fort Benning community.

The office did not receive the job opportunity announcements in a timely manner to give employees equal chance to apply.

Fort Benning has experienced delays in receiving job opportunity announcements. The procedure used for issuing, printing and distributing the announcements has been researched and the reasons for delays discovered and rectified. An improvement process is being established whereby installation organizations will be notified of forthcoming job announcements by electronic mail.

The caller said drivers are speeding in the housing area, going 30 to 40 miles per hour in a 15 mph zone.

Law Enforcement Division officials explained the Military Police efforts toward reducing speeding in the Custer Terrace housing area and explained that the MPs continue to give a high priority to speeding prevention within the housing areas. From Oct. 1 through March 26, 94 speeding violations were issued on Craig Drive alone. An additional 1,320 citations were written in the five housing areas on the installation. The MPs will continue to intensify their speeding prevention efforts in all housing areas to include Craig Drive. It has also been noted that most speeders in housing areas actually live in that area.

The caller said there is broken glass on the playground and trash containers are being turned over. They need sand to go under the equipment for safety and vandalism is rampant and every single piece of equipment is broken.

The chief, Quarters Management, Family Housing, explained that residents and sponsor units are responsible for the upkeep of their playground area. The Directorate of Public Works will have sand delivered to the playground, but the graffiti will have to be painted over by the residents through self-help efforts. Any future repairs can be fixed by telephoning in a service order to the DPW Work Order Section, which will be forwarded to the Family Housing Preventive Maintenance Shop.

The caller inquired as to why a soldier can't get his name on the housing list for quarters as soon as he gets orders assigning him to Fort Benning.

The chief, Quarters Management, Family Housing, explained that Army Regulation 21050, Housing Management, prohibits sponsors being placed on a waiting list at the gaining installation prior to the soldier signing out at the losing installation. Under Army housing regulations, the sign-out date is required because it establishes the eligibility date for housing at the gaining installation (except dependent-restricted tours). Soldiers may fax or mail Department of Defense Form 1747, Advanced Application for Housing, prior to actual arrival. Soldiers may get on the waiting list prior to signing into the installation by bringing a copy of their orders and sign-out paperwork to the Housing Office while on leave or on permissive TDY. However, the soldier must sign in at the gaining installation before quarters assignment can be made.

The caller complained about the wearing of the uniform on post, especially in the gym. Soldiers are constantly wearing the wrong uniform during on-and off-duty in lifting weights or playing any other type sports.

The Infantry Training Brigade command sergeant major and the company commander said they are all in agreement on this. Soldiers in the gym should be in physical training uniforms, or if on leave or personal time, in civilian workout attire. The Infantry Training Brigade command sergeant major said noncommissioned officers should handle problems of this type by making on-the-spot corrections. If the soldier fails to comply with a correction, then his chain of command should become involved. If necessary, the MPs could become involved.

Visitor appreciates hospitality

We all enjoyed our trip to the States and were very pleased with, and appreciated, all the wonderful hospitality shown to us wherever we went.

I was particularly impressed by the standards of the soldiers (male and female) we met. They were all very attentive and most respectful at all times — certainly a credit to your country.

Once again, many thanks.

Families prepare for 586th's return

By Marc G. Turchin
USAIC Public Affairs Office

Hoping the 586th Engineer Company (Assault Float Bridge) will meet its mid-June scheduled return to Fort Benning, families of the soldiers' unit came together at Audie Murphy Gymnasium to make signs and banners.

It was all in the family as everyone helped out. Family members young and old taped, painted, measured and smiled as they made banners.

Some of the banners offered messages such as "welcome home" and "we missed you," while others had the names of the missed loved ones with their childrens' handprints on each side of the banner. Some will be placed in the unit's dayrooms and some at the reception area.

All the families talked of excitement and anticipation when the subject of the unit's homecoming came up.

"I'm pretty excited," said Leslie Jackson, who's husband, David, is a sergeant with the 586 Eng. Co.

"When he gets off the plane, I'd just like to go straight home."

"I want to go see his family," Jackson said. The Jacksons were married in September of last year and David left in December.

"I'm new to the military, its been especially hard on me," she said.

"I think they (the soldiers in the unit) want to go home and spend time with their families," said Stacy E. Metzler, who's husband, Spec. Steve Metzler, serves with the unit.

Sherri Gondeck, wife of the unit's company commander, Gregory Gondeck, said she's as excited as the next person.

"I can't wait to see his big smile again," Gondeck said.

She said he called one day and said he had received the orders to come home.

"I was ecstatic, I was bouncing off the walls," Gondeck said.

Jackson said she has some plans of her own when David returns.

She said, "I met some of his family, but I've never been to his hometown of Prescott, Mich."

But, before that can happen, the unit must first return and when it does, the soldier's families are prepared.

"We're just focusing on welcoming home the unit," Gondeck said.

The family support group worked as a seasoned team trading markers and paint and offering advice to one another about what they liked best about the banners and signs.

They also offered advice when someone was down during the deployment or when someone was having problems.

"It had its high points and its low points," Metzler said. "At times, there were a lot of tears."

Both Jackson and Metzler said the family support group helped out a lot.

Throughout the deployment the family support group threw a Christmas party, packed and sent Valentines Day care packages and gave weekly calls to all the spouses making sure everyone was alright.

"I think we've had good communication between the unit and the family support group," Metzler said.

That communication may have led to the high morale level the spouses had at the gym May 31. It's possible, but it could be the anticipation of the unit's return.

"I just can't wait for them to get back," Gondeck said, "I'm sure there's going to be a lot of tears of joy."

Reserve Components to cut 16,000 positions

By Rudi Williams
American Forces Press Service

WASHINGTON — The Department of Defense will inactivate hundreds of Reserve Component units across the country, cutting nearly 16,000 people by Sept. 30, according to a recent Pentagon announcement.

"This is the third year of a five-year restructuring plan, so we consider this a fairly routine year with fewer personnel cuts and inactivations than there were during the first couple of years," said a reserve affairs spokesperson.

Secretary of Defense William Perry said reserve component downsizing results from changing defense requirements of the post-Cold War world.

"This strategy continues to strive to protect personnel readiness while our forces 'right size' to achieve the fiscal 1999 target structure," Perry said. "Readiness remains my top concern. In the future, we'll have a smaller force structure, but it will be one that is highly ready and well-equipped."

The reductions will free resources to pay for other quality of life initiatives such as employer and family support and initial-entry and duty training, Perry said.

The fiscal 1996 reductions comply with strength levels established through the Bottom-up Review, which provided DoD and the military services with the strategy and force structure adjustments required to meet a post-Cold War threat, officials said.

DoD has three priorities in restructuring:

- To enhance force readiness with an increased reliance on the reserve components
- To protect people — whenever possible, service members will be transferred to other units; however, transition benefits authorized by Congress will take care of reservists leaving the forces; and
- To minimize the impact on the states' ability to respond to domestic emergencies.

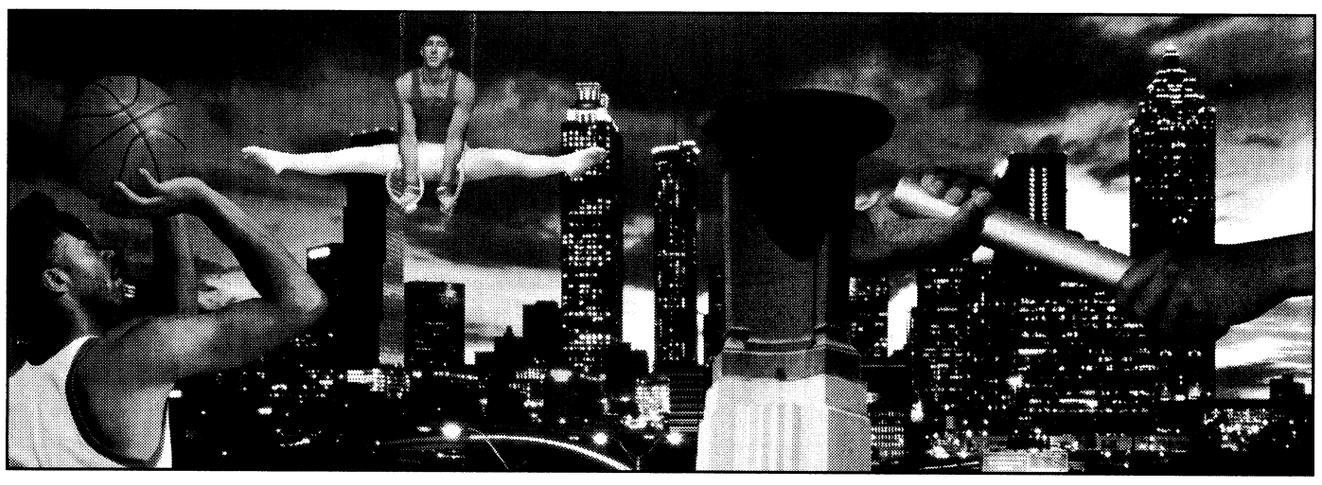
Whenever possible, personnel from inactivating units will be reassigned to other reserve component units within a reasonable distance from their residence. If there is no position available, the individual will be separated with the appropriate transition benefits, officials said.

"Individuals who decline the new assignment will be involuntarily separated without transition benefits," a spokesperson said.

Transition benefits include separation pay, special separation pay, early retirement at age 60 and continuation of education benefits under the Montgomery GI bill. Benefits also include limited commissary and post exchange privileges and priority placement benefits for those who are involuntarily separated due to inactivation or reorganization of units.

Individuals enrolled in a GI Bill program at the time of involuntary separation will continue to receive the benefits, officials said. DoD will grant waivers to those required to serve a certain number of years in exchange for education benefits.

Reservists and guardsmen who enlisted or reenlisted for a bonus or the Student Loan Repayment Program will no longer receive payments if their units are inactivated, officials said.



Weapons and equipment at inactivated units will be redistributed to other units, officials said.

Better Opportunities for Single Soldiers election to be conducted

By Jason Ruby
Better Opportunities for Single Soldiers

The Fort Benning Better Opportunities for Single Soldiers Program is preparing to hold elections to replace the current BOSS President, Spc. Michael James.

James was elected in June of 1995 and is coming to the end of his one year term in office. During his tenure there have been many changes and accomplishments through the BOSS Office of Fort Benning. Fort Benning hopes to continue these trends with the incoming president.

There will be no incumbency due to the fact that the U.S. Army Infantry Center Regulation 600-19, Single Soldier Quality of Life, specifically states in Chapter 4 paragraph. 3 sub-paragraph d, that "the post BOSS president will serve a one year term and is limited to a single term of office and may not be re-elected."

The Office of the Fort Benning BOSS President is open to any and all single soldiers of Fort Benning if they meet certain criteria, that criteria is as follows: must be recommended with an endorsement from their major subordinate commanders, and must be able to be released form their unit to serve a year long term at installation level.

All applications must be submitted to the Office of the Garrison Commander no later than June 14. Applicants must be available for interviews with the garrison sergeant major and the BOSS Council between June 17-21.

The job requirements and profile consist of being an advisor to the commanding general regarding single soldier issues and concerns, representing Fort Benning's 4,000 single soldiers, acting as a liaison and representative to Fort Benning and it's single soldiers at Department of the Army level.

Successful candidates will be:

• Mature, articulate, enthusiastic, motivated, and able to provide a broad background of single soldier experiences, fully capable of representing their respective unit at battalion level and higher.

• Stationed on Fort Benning for at least six months and expect to remain for at least one year.

• Volunteers in the rank of specialist to sergeant, selected by the company or battery Single Soldier Council or designated by the commander or first sergeant, and then approved and appointed on orders by the commander.

The official election will take place on June 21 by the 14 member post BOSS council. Results will be posted and reported through the Bayonet.

EXPLOSIVES: Beware of duds

maintained to standard," he said. "Anything less puts lives in jeopardy.

"Range Division should be notified about weapons problems and whenever ammunition, duds or simulators are found. Do not handle any found munitions.

"U.S. Army Infantry Center Regulation 210-4, Range and Terrain, outlines procedures for handling of ammunition and pyrotechnics on ranges. Contact the 89th Explosive Ordnance Disposal Unit and the Quality Assurance Specialist (Ammunition Surveillance) for ammunition malfunctions."

Another accident occurred when eight children were injured by a 40 mm high explosive dud projectile explosion, according to a memorandum from Col. Gregory C. Camp, infantry chief of staff.

"They had picked up a 'dud' from a Fort Sill range," he said. "Later, one of the children dropped the projectile and it detonated. Fortunately, none of the children were killed."

Camp further warned of the dangers of duds in the memorandum.

"Duds are explosive devices that have been fired, but have not yet exploded," he said. "The key words to remember are 'have not yet exploded.' That means they may explode later. The older the ordnance, the more unstable it is, and therefore, the more dangerous it is.

"Commanders should ensure simulators and duds are treated with the same respect as live ammunition."

The U.S. Army Safety Center has given further warnings about the handling of pyrotechnics and explosives.

"Simulators are real explosives," center information said. "Don't ever forget that! Simulators can kill you just as dead as the real thing.

"Do not open any simulator and try to burn the contents. You'll be the one burned! Don't touch duds!"

To report any found explosive devices, contact the Military Police at 545-4204 or the Range Division at 545-3474 or 545-3479.

FORT KNOX

Drill Sgts of the year named in annual competition

Army News Service

Two Fort Knox, Ky., non-commissioned officers are the active and reserve Army Drill Sergeants of the Year for 1996.

Staff Sgt. Kevin R. Greene, of the 1st Battalion, 81st Armor, 1st Armor Training Brigade, is the active duty Drill Sergeant of the Year, and Sgt. 1st Class Ronald R. Coots, instructor in the 100th Division's Drill Sergeant School, won the honor for the reserves.

"We've talked about it for a while," Greene said, referring to their preparations at their home base for the competition at Fort Monroe. This year's competition featured 13 active drill sergeants and eight reserve trainers. Their competition began May 14 with the Army physical fitness test, and continued for two more days with demonstrations of their teaching abilities and interviews with a board of sergeants major.

"It was tough," Greene said. "I had been preparing for this for a while. But everybody else, all the regular Army and reserve, had too."

Coots is a cavalry Bradley Fighting Vehicle commander. He started his Army career as a personnel administration specialist, on the advice of his first sergeant.

> "It was tough ... I had been preparing for this for a while, but everyone else, all the regular Army and reserve, had too."
> — Staff Sgt. Kevin R. Greene
> Active, Drill Sergeant of the Year

"My first sergeant told me that to be first sergeant you've got to know about paperwork and personnel," he said. "Now that I know what the first sergeant does, and I've been in leadership positions, and being a first sergeant is my next step."

He joined the U.S. Army Reserve on a split option in 1985, taking his basic training at Fort Knox between his junior and senior years in high school.

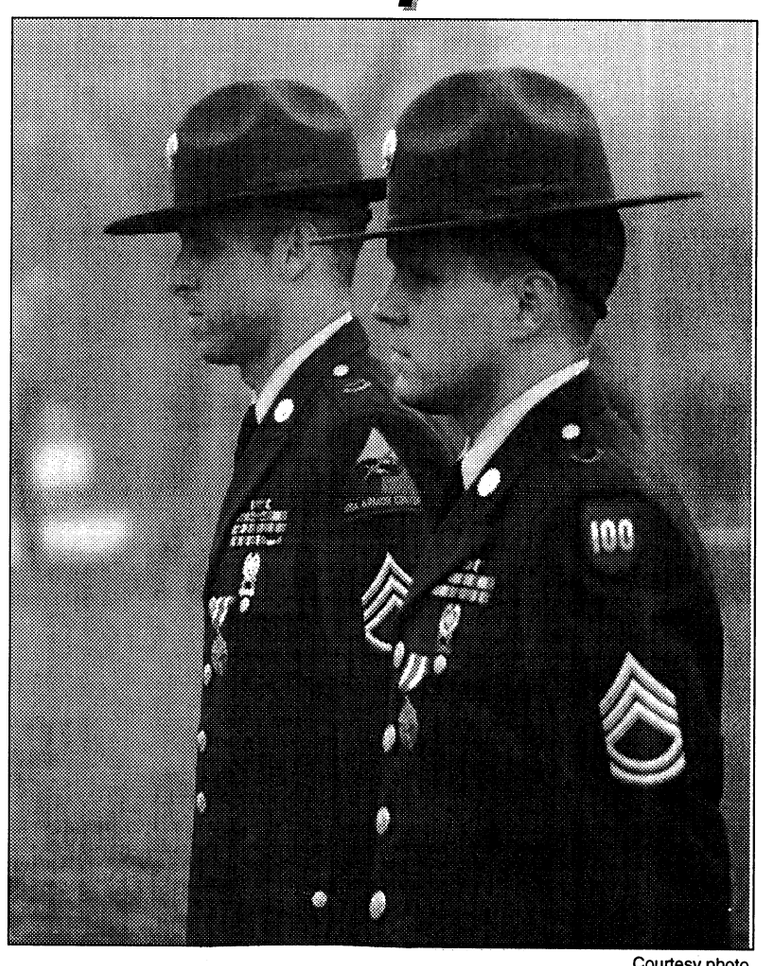
Four years later, he attended Fort Knox Drill Sergeant School, finishing near the top of the class. However, his opportunity to train soldiers didn't come for another three years. He and four other volunteers were attached to the 1st Battalion, 46th Infantry Division at Fort Knox to train recruits for a full training cycle.

Now he has to train NCOs to become drill sergeants.

"The key difference is for the privates you start from the ground up," Coots said. "With the NCOs, it's getting them used to being able to give directions and instill in them that what you teach is what they're going to turn around and use to teach soldiers."

Greene and Coots both say the biggest difference between today's recruits and when they enlisted is an overall lack of physical conditioning.

"When I was a kid, we used to go outside and play football," Green said. "Nowadays, they play football on computers."



Current Army enlistees, however, may have a real incentive to learn during basic and advanced individual training, Coots said.

"With the numerous deployments to hostile fire areas, today's recruits may find themselves deploying to a combat zone shortly after graduation," he said.

Greene, who has been a drill sergeant in one-station unit training for about two years, agrees. He said he thinks after 16 weeks soldiers are technically prepared for their Army jobs, but they need a chance to develop.

"If I went to college to be a brain surgeon, I wouldn't be able to come out and perform brain surgery right away," he said. "With any job, somebody's going to have to take you under their wing and reinforce everything that you learned in school."

Greene will soon be transferred to Fort Jackson, S.C., where he will work with the Army Drill Sergeant Schools proponency. Part of his job will be to help ensure standards of all schools throughout the Army.

Army's future smaller, more lethal

Army News Service

FORT MONROE, Va. — The Army's Force XXI experimental division will have about 3,000 fewer soldiers, but modern weapons completely integrated by digital command and control systems will make it more lethal.

Eliminating some functions and reorganizing others adds 300 more infantryman. That will also make the new division more lethal and flexible.

"We rely on synchronization among all our parts to be the best force in the world, not just brute size," said Gen. William W. Hartzog, commander of Training and Doctrine Command, who also heads up the Force XXI process.

The Army will retain "one or two light divisions," according to Hartzog, which will be the 10th Mountain Division, Fort Drum, N.Y., and the 25th Infantry Division, Fort Shafter, Hawaii. The 82nd Airborne Division, Fort Bragg, N.C., and the 101st Airborne Division, Fort Campbell, Ky., will also remain in their basic configuration.

On paper, the current "Army of Excellence" division and the Force XXI division are similar — each have five armor battalions and five mechanized battalions, and an armor cavalry squadron. But the organizations of those battalions have changed radically, and the mechanized battalions have about 300 more dismounted soldiers overall.

Adding more infantry was made possible by eliminating an antitank company and moving the support functions from the battalions to four division support battalions.

One of three engineer battalions and one of two aviation attack battalions were also dropped.

"When you start adding your Long Bow Apaches and Comanches into that (aviation attack battalion), the capability and lethality go way up," said Brig. Gen. Joseph Kellogg, TRADOC's assistant deputy chief of staff for combat developments.

The additional infantry will provide more light forces to permit tailoring to handle some of the missions now performed largely by light divisions.

"In a 10-division force, we no longer can afford to have specialists," Hartzog said. "You can't send the 10th Mountain Division and the 82nd to every low intensity operation and reserve your heavy battle fleet.

The search for a design for a 21st Century Army division began about two years ago. Since then there have been four major advanced warfighting experiments and numerous constructive simulations.

The Army leadership used the analytical results to arrive at 11 division organizations to explore.

Each of the 11 alternatives also had several variations. They were all subjected to rigorous computer simulations and wargames,and were studied by past and present Army leaders.

All versions were tested in scenarios in Korea, an Iraqi-type threat in Southwest Asia and a new hostile force in Europe.

"We looked at radical platoon and company and battalion formations, light and the same sort of thing heavy," Hartzog said. "We looked at different division command and control systems."

The lighter divisions won in all the scenarios, but suffered heavy losses when going up against a large, well-armed enemy.

"One of the principles is to design something that can fight and not add the casualties," Hartzog said.

It is technology that will give the division its punch.

"The division design that we have is much more lethal than anything we had in the past through insertion of technologies and weapons systems and the command and control suites that we're putting in there," Kellogg said.

DPW deputy director 1996 engineer of the year

Lori Egan
Bayonet staff writer

"Professional integrity" is more than just a phrase to John L. Baggett, deputy director of the Directorate of Public Works.

According to retired Col. Robert W. Hatch, former director of DPW and deputy vice president for facilities at the University of Arizona, Baggett is the epitome of professional integrity, which is why he has been selected to receive the Georgia Society of Professional Engineers 1996 Engineer of the Year in Government award.

The award will be presented to Baggett during the GSPE's summer meeting at Amelia Island, Fla., June 12 through 15.

"I am very honored to receive such an award from fellow engineers," Baggett said. "It is especially rewarding to have fellow engineers from the state level recognize our efforts here on Fort Benning because this is a team effort — I just happen to be the one who got recognized and this award is a reflection of DPW's workforce."

"He is directly responsible for managing an $80 million annual budget that provides all base operations support, including engineering services, master planning, utilities and environmental services to a daily population of 100,000 soldiers and civilians," said Col. Dave Brown, director of Public Works.

Baggett has been a member of DPW's workforce since 1965 and has been the deputy director since 1985.

SENSIBLE SAFETY

Policies promote secure living

USAIC Public Affairs Office

As summer sun and weather draw more people to outdoors activities, the risk for accident and injury increases.

To combat unnecessary chaos, representatives from the Directorate of Public Safety suggest these common sense approaches to everyday living.

Safe play

While running and walking are old standbys, biking and inline skating are becoming popular leisure activities.

Although the safety gear that goes with any sport may seem hot and cumbersome for active people, post policies and regulations exist simply to keep people alive. So before you hit the bike trails, or lace up those skates, know the post rules concerning your hobby.

According to Fort Benning Policy Memorandum 95-19, all inline skaters must wear, at a minimum, a helmet, knee pads, elbow pads and some type of reflective gear. Bikers are also required to wear helmets and reflective gear. Inline skating and running are not allowed on roads with a speed limit greater than 25 miles per hour.

Among the many miles of Fort Benning roads, only a few are off limits to runners. Among those are: Dixie Road, except from Sightseeing Road to Lawson Army Airfield; Sightseeing Road from Dixie Road to Sunshine Road; Lumpkin Road from Dixie Road to Marne Road; 10th Division Road; Custer Toad from Benning Road to the Eisenhower

Children need parents' attention

Lori Egan
Bayonet staff writer

During the spring and summer months, calls concerning unattended children on Fort Benning rise. Some parents, trying to beat the system, not wanting to pay for child care for their 9- or 10-year-olds during school vacation, leave their children home alone.

"This is child neglect and it's not safe," said Rebecca S. Welch, Army Community Service Family Advocacy Program manager.

According to U.S. Army Infantry Center Policy Memorandum 96-4, children under the age of 12 will not be left unattended by parents or guardians.

This means the child must be in direct eyesight of the parent or guardian, Welch said. A parent who is sitting on the porch watching their child riding their bicycle up and down the sidewalk is supervising their child. The parent watching television while their child is knocking garbage cans into the street with their bike is not supervising their child.

Parents are subject to child neglect if they don't have direct supervision of their children, Welch said. If a child is out of sight then the child is out of care.

Sgt. 1st Class Larry Webb, noncommissioned officer in charge of Military Police Investigations, said a three-year-old child was found riding a tricycle a mile away from home.

"Parents feel children are safe because the MPs are at their disposal, but it still takes 24 hours for a missing child to be put into the system network for statewide searches," Webb said. "And horror stories are heard every day about children being abducted from around the United States — it's best if parents monitor their children."

Neighbors who call the military police to report children being unattended, wandering the neighborhood or being left alone in quarters often get frustrated when they think nothing is being done, Welch said.

When the MPs are called and go to the quarters to investigate, if the parents are watching their children then the MPs can't do much. But if the MPs are habitually called to a certain address on an unattended child complaint, sooner or later, they will have the documentation necessary to charge parents with neglect, Welch said.

If a family is charged with child neglect, that's when various organizations get involved. Those organizations include: Family Advocacy Program, Army Community Service; Muscogee and Chattahoochee Department of Family and Children Services; and Social Work Services, U.S. Army Medical Department Activity.

These agencies investigate the complaint and if valid, try to rectify the situation.

"Family advocacy's goal is treatment; it's not a punitive program," Chris Schmink, a counseling psychologist at Social Work Services, said. Social Work Services offers parenting classes and individual sessions for parents who are charged with neglect.

"Most parents don't intentionally endanger their children," Schmink said. "These classes are offered to educate parents and make them aware of potentially harmful situations. Children don't come with instructions and sometimes parents need help in recognizing whether or not a practice is dangerous."

"Some parents don't realize leaving a child alone in a car is inherently dangerous," Schmink said. "They don't think about the consequences. If they leave the car running with the air conditioning on they think the child will be all right, but what if the child puts the car in gear?"

Parents don't realize leaving a child sitting in the car while they run into the post office qualifies as neglect, Webb said. When MPs see this, they can cite the adult, but usually explain the danger of the action.

USAIC regulation 210-5 stipulates that children under the age of eight years old will not be left unattended in a parked vehicle.

Post policy also states that children under the age of 12 must be under the direct supervision of a legal guardian, baby-sitter or enrolled in a Youth Services School Age Services or Child Development Services program.

Post policy takes into account the varying maturity levels and special needs of children 12 to 18, but regardless of age, parents must be responsible for their children at all times.

"These policies are in place to protect our children," Welch said. "We are adamant about making sure children are safe in this community. It is all of Fort Benning's responsibility to ensure child safety. The bottom line is children need supervision and unattended children will not be tolerated on Fort Benning."

Regulation bans BB guns, air rifles in Post neighborhoods

Lori Egan
Bayonet staff writer

A lot of parents don't view BB guns or air rifles as dangerous weapons, but according to one safety official, they are.

Regis P. Beighley, Fort Benning Safety Officer, said BB guns and air rifles are extremely dangerous because long-barreled guns are easier to aim and are usually more accurate.

BB guns are usually the first weapon children learn to use and most don't receive weapon safety training, Beighley said.

Many parents don't supervise their children while they play with BB guns, which increases the risk of injury and property damage, he continued.

Recently, there have been problems with people using BB guns and air rifles in the Fort Benning housing areas, Beighley said.

On Fort Benning, these guns are classified as weapons and owners must comply with U.S. Army Infantry Center Regulation 210-5.

According to the regulation, "No weapon will be fired, discharged or used within 50 feet of a training area building or used within the limits of the garrison or cantonment areas."

Also, children may not use or carry weapons unless accompanied by an adult who will be responsible for safety precautions.

The bottom line, Beighley said, is that these weapons may not be used in the housing areas.

According to Master Sgt. Eddie Cosby, Law Enforcement Division noncommissioned officer in charge, weapons will be confiscated and the juvenile will be titled and referred to the Community Life Center. The case could also be referred to the juvenile review board for proper adjudication.

Also the sponsor can be charged with failure to control their family members and be referred back to the unit commander for action.

If the problem continues, the family could be removed from post housing, Cosby said.

Larceny: Fort Benning below national average

By John W. Peeler
Special to The Bayonet©

With crime on the rise, it is important to protect your valuables to prevent larceny-theft.

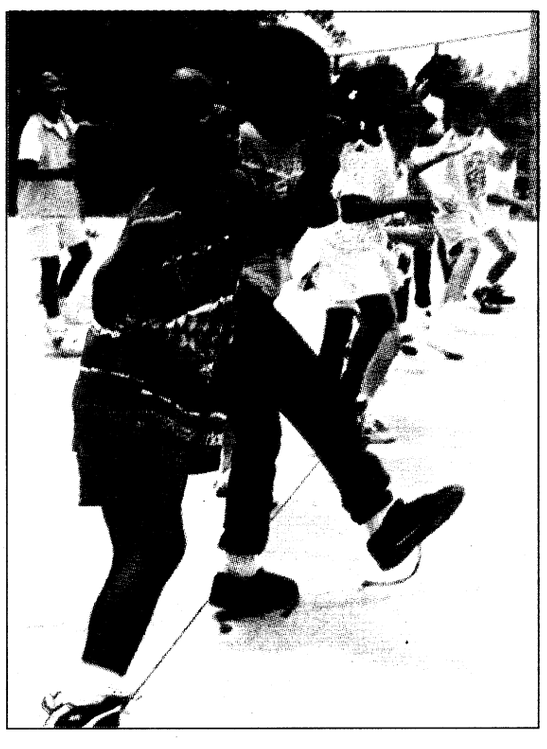
If you reside on-post, you will be pleased to know that larceny-theft postwide is half the national average.

Even with the one-percent drop in the crime rate in 1994, nationally, the jury is still out on the 1995 crime statistics.

According to the latest Federal Bureau of Investigation reports, there has been a 13-percent rise in crime in the last 10 years with larceny-theft comprising 56 percent of the total Crime Index.

By region, the Southern states recorded 35 percent of all Crime Index offenses reported to law enforcement officials with an estimated total of nearly 7.9 million offenses; larceny and theft comprised 56 percent of the Crime Index total.

The total dollar loss to victims nationwide was estimated at $4 billion during 1994 with the average value of property stolen at $505 per incident.



More than 1.5 million thefts of motor vehicles, or an average of one theft for every 130 registered motor vehicles, were reported with an estimated monetary loss of nearly $7.6 billion.

That is an average of $4,940 per vehicle, more than seventy-nine percent of motor vehicles stolen were automobiles.

Although thefts of motor vehicle parts, accessories and contents made up the largest portion of reported larcenies, items of a sentimental value are not exempt from being stolen.

On Fort Benning, the total reported incidents of crime in fiscal 1994 was 3,372 with 965, or 28.6 percent, of

Military lifestyle opens childrens' minds

By Michelle Welch
Faith Middle School

The global village — what a concept! All the people on this planet living together with basically the same interests, the same goals; to live fully, caring for one another, communicating with one another, while caring for the planet as well. It's an awesome idea.

Growing up in a military family has given me a taste of the global village. I have lived in four different communities, and each has given me exposure to many kinds of people from all over the United States and other countries as well. I have learned that other cultures and beliefs can coexist with my own and even influence my own, therefore enriching them. The military community is, in a way, a microcosm of the world — different kinds of people from all over the world bound by a common goal.

Welch

Living in the global village has many advantages, but there is especially one that deserves attention. In Department of Defense Domestic Dependent Elementary and Secondary Schools, all of the students are accustomed to the moving around that defines military life. Because military families are moved around so often, making friends is usually easier for us because we are more accepting of people who are different from us.

One of the lessons we learn very early in life is that relationships can be temporary. This is because when you move somewhere, you could be there as little as six months or as long as ten years. Students who always live in the same place, who have the same classmates year after year, tend to narrow their outlook of the world. When military children go to public schools, it takes a while for them to be accepted; most of those students have been together since elementary school, and they don't want newcomers invading their little "cliques." But when DoDD students go to schools with other military dependents, the acceptance that we feel is almost immediate.

Therefore, military children benefit by being with other military children. Living in our "global village," the military community, exposes us to differences of others, yet provides us the acceptance from others, allowing us to be ourselves. I am certain that our experiences with and exposure to all different kinds of people and cultures in the "global village" will help us to succeed in life.

Communication links diverse people, cultures

By Bryan Marchant
Faith Middle School

Communication today is different than it was in the past.

It used to be that when you wanted to communicate with someone far away, you would have to write a letter, put it on a ship and wait for the other person to write back. Then we began to use telegraph wires. The dots and dashes were expensive, and if something happened to the wire between the two telegraph stations, a message could not get through.

Finally, we started using the telephone. Even though it was expensive, you could actually talk to the person on the other line. The telephone continued to improve until it was a household item. Today we have computers, faxes and a highly sophisticated telephone system.

Long ago, when the telephone was first used, an entire village could talk to each other on a party line. Now we do the same thing on our computers. Increased communication leads to increased understanding among people of different nations. Being able to talk quickly and easily with people worldwide has reduced the size of the world into that of a global village.

Marchant

Since we are able to communicate so well, we should be able to better understand the needs of others. This understanding will help end the problems that have plagued our "village" for so long. Drugs and war, bigotry, poverty and hunger can all be stopped, and they will if we can all work together like the neighbors that we are.

A famine starts in Asia, the rest of the world sends volunteers and relief supplies. This saves millions of lives, and was all done through communication.

What about communicating with other "villages" beyond our solar system? It is difficult to imagine that our planet is the only one with life upon it. There may be a village in space that has the cure we need for cancer or acquired immune deficiency syndrome. Maybe we have the answer to a problem of theirs.

We will never know if we do not keep the lines of communication open. It is easy to see that for all its vastness, the world is a "global village" in disguise.

Cease fighting, take advantage of differences

By Courtney Kostich
Dexter School

This huge world is made up of a lot of fighting. They fight over all kinds of things.

Most of the things that they fight over, aren't even worth fighting over. It really bothers me to see people fighting all the time. God made all of us, and he wants us to get along with one another and to love each other.

Living in a global village allows us to meet new people all the time. These people speak different languages, and have different customs. We can learn a lot from other people, if we take the time to care and to listen to them.

Kostich

I get to have friends from all over the world. This is really exciting! I don't like moving though, because I must leave my friends behind, but I know that when I get to my new home, wherever it is, that I will meet many new friends. These friends will have different stories to tell of the places that they have lived.

If we could learn to get along with each other and to love each other, this world would be a much better place to live in. We need to appreciate each person for who they are, and not try to change them to be like us. That would make living in a global village a great experience!

Job Corps opens doors

United States Department of Labor

ATLANTA, Ga. — Job Corps, the U.S. Department of Labor job training and educational program for disadvantaged youth, launched a new recruitment drive throughout the Southeast region in May, officials announced.

The campaign targets motivated young adults between the ages of 16 and 24 who wish to take advantage of the education and vocational options offered through Job Corps.

"It features testimonials from successful Job Corps graduates and businesses that have hired Job Corps students," said Melvin Collins, director of the Southeastern region which includes Alabama, Florida, Georgia, Kentucky, Mississippi, North Carolina, South Carolina and Tennessee.

"We have embarked on a new spring recruitment drive after a very successful fall and winter campaign," Collins said. "We will continue to use a mix of outreach tools to reach candidates and their families to see if Job Corps is a match for them."

The new campaign revolves around actual Job Corps success stories, such as Milton Moore, an electrician from Jacksonville, Fla.

"I was a high school dropout, Moore said, a graduate of the Jacksonville Job Corps Center. "When I went to Job Corps, I was looking ahead, but I found out that I was only seeing the first turn. Job Corps totally changed my life and opened a door, giving me a great foundation to build on."

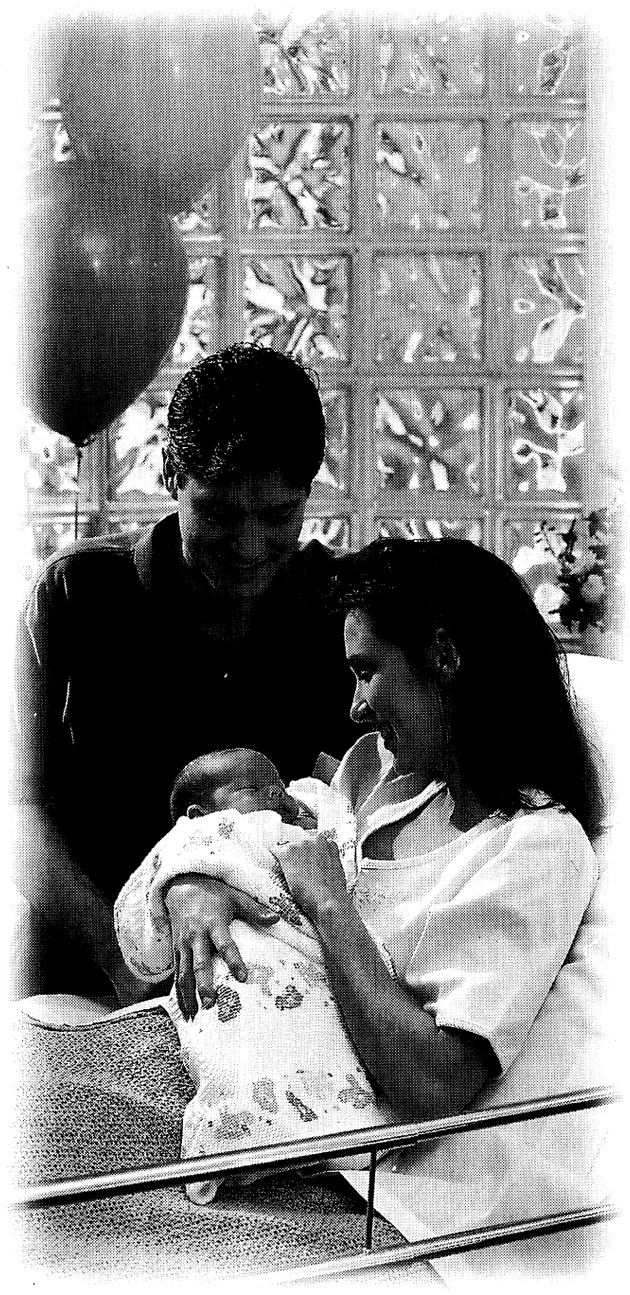
Moore credits Job Corps with giving him the skills he needed to start a successful career.

"Job Corps taught me the terminology used in the field, and it gave me hands-on training," he said.

"We hired Milton after he had completed an apprenticeship program and earned his journeyman's license," said Carmel Morris, owner of Allstate Electrical Contractors in Jacksonville. "He has proved his excellent ability as a well-rounded craftsman, and I would place him in the top five percent of electricians.

"I credit Job Corps with teaching Milton and other young people the basics of a trade," Morris said.

Job Corps has a toll-free number, (800) 733-JOBS, for those who want to learn more about the program and what it has to offer.



As part of the Labor Department's Employment and Training Administration, Job Corps provides basic education and general education classes, as well as vocational training and job placement in health occupations, clerical skills, food service, landscaping technology, forestry, retail and other fields.

It is in primarily a residential program, providing students with room board and some spending money while they learn. Some centers offer non-residential programs and provide day care. There are 22 Job Corps centers in operation in the eight-state region.

Larceny: Protect valuables against crime

those being larceny-theft related.

Compared to the national average for the same time period, the post cut larceny-theft related incidents by half.

In fiscal 1995, incidents of larceny-theft dropped three-tenths of one percent with 3,360 total incidents of crime, of which 952 — 28.3 percent — were larceny related.

So whatever happens to those things that get stolen? Individuals who have suffered theft may be in for a long wait for items to be returned.

Sgt. T. Gray Given, evidentiary custodian for the Military Police Activity provided some answers to what happens when evidence is recovered and what happens to lost and found items.

Given said he maintains two separate rooms where items are kept either for evidence or for property that has been lost and found.

"We have an evidence room where we keep items that have been recovered after the commission of a crime," Given said.

"They stay there until the final outcome of the criminal case." "Once the case is completed, we contact the property owner and return the item."

Given said if items of stolen property are unable to be returned, then it is disposed of in accordance with applicable regulations.

"In the property room we have items like identification cards, wallets and bicycles," Given said.

Given said there were more than 100 unclaimed items being held in the property room waiting to be claimed.

If you have had property stolen or lost an item and have not checked the property room, call Given at 545-1889.

ask the judge

By Rick Parker
Office of the Judge Staff Advocate

Q: My spouse and I are thinking about buying a house. In talking with various people, we have heard that we ought to get a "contingency contract." What is that and why have it?

A: A "contingency" in a real estate contract is an event which must happen before the rest of the contract is carried out to its conclusion. If it does not happen, then the party for whose benefit the condition was included has the option of choosing not to go forward with the contract.

For example, one very common contingency in real estate contracts is the condition that the sale is contingent on the buyer being able to obtain a loan. In fact, this condition can be made to be very specific, to include that the loan must be of a certain amount, at a certain interest rate and for a certain length of time. Let's suppose that you have agreed to buy a house for $80,000, but you are going to have to borrow the money (as do most people) to complete the purchase. You would probably want to specify that your obligation to go through with the purchase of the home be contingent on your ability to get a VA loan for $80,000 for 30 years. In this example, we will also include a provision that the interest rate can be no more than eight percent per annum. Now, let's further suppose that after diligently pursuing your loan application with the bank, the best they can do is the $80,000 loan for 30 years, but at 9.5 percent per annum. You would have the right to decline to go through with the purchase.

Basically, a contingency can serve as a safety valve against being trapped into going through with signing for a loan you can't handle. It can also serve as a safety valve in other ways. For example, if you are buying a previously-owned home, you probably would want to have the opportunity to inspect the home thoroughly to make sure that it is structurally sound and that everything works properly. You could have your obligation to go through with the sale contingent on results of such an inspection, or on the seller correcting any defects found during an inspection.

A similar contingency can be used in contracts for the purchase of a new home. Before you close, you would want to make sure that all work has been completed.

Finally, if you already own a home, and are trying to sell it before you buy a new one, you can make your agreement to buy the new home contingent on the sale of the old one. You can even specify that your old home must sell for a minimum price. The negotiation of a real estate contract, particularly where contingencies are concerned, can be complicated even for an experienced buyer. If you are contemplating buying a home, you should seriously consider consulting with an attorney first. You may, by appointment, consult with an attorney at the Legal Assistance Division at 545-3281.

Rules: Simple efforts can save lives, homes

Interchange; and Lawson Army Airfield.

Runners are required to wear reflective equipment and shirts.

Many soldiers and family members run or walk in the evenings. Staff Sgt. Charles E. Patrick, Physical Security Section noncommissioned officer in charge, suggest individuals take these precautions for late-night exercise.

•Always let someone know you are going out for a run or walk

• Tell them your route

• Give an approximate time for your return.

"A good rule of thumb is for people to go out with someone," he said.

Whatever your hobby, taking simple safety-conscious precautions could save your life.

Home security

One of the first things families do when school lets out is take a vacation. Before you leave for that much-needed getaway, take the necessary home security precautions to ensure you do not return to an empty home.

• Secure all windows

• Leave outside lights on

• Have someone bring in your mail and newspapers

• Leave a key with a trusted friend or neighbor. Patrick, suggests someone check a vacated home twice a day.

"It is best if someone can check your home in the morning before they leave for work," he said, "and again in the afternoon."

Fort Benning residents also have the advantage of Military Police services. Soldiers and family members living on post can stop by the MP desk in Building 215 and fill out a quarters check form. According to Patrick, residents should note the dates in which they will be away from home and the names of any neighbors or friends who have reason to be near the residents' home. MPs will make regular home checks during residents' absence.

Patrick said residents should inform MPs when they return home. "They need to come in to let us know," he said, "so that we can properly verify their identity.

Whether it's a trip to the shoppette or to the beach, a common sense approach to home security can mean the difference in filing an insurance claim for stolen property or not.

Alternatives help alleviate stress

Egleston Children's Health Care System

Many adolescents lead very stressful lives. While stress can serve as a positive, motivating factor in a teen's life, it can also be totally overwhelming, unless parents help their adolescent children learn to use appropriate coping techniques to manage stress, according to Egleston Children's Hospital clinical child psychologist Laura L. Mee.

Many possible sources cause stress in a teen's life. The inherent anxieties of adolescence, issues such as self-doubt, peer pressure and blossoming sexuality are among the most common.

Plus, teens lives are often busy and demanding, filled with pressures to perform in the classroom, on the playing field and in their social spheres. Adolescents are also vulnerable to the worries about major life events that plague their parents as well.

Because adolescents' stressors and their reactions vary so widely, it can be difficult for a parent to recognize one who's over stressed. Parents must look for differences in behavior from what's typical for their adolescent, rather than differences from other teens behavior. Changes in eating and sleeping habits, overall mood or peer interactions could all be signs of too much stress.

The first step toward teen-age stress relief is to identify its sources and determine whether each stressor plays a positive or negative role in the teen's life. An example of positive stress is sticking with a demanding class that will enable a teen-ager to progress in school and enhance self esteem. On the other hand, remaining in a class that's well beyond the teen's ability can create a negative stress.

Mee recommends teens try a variety of coping techniques to ease tension. Coping is a very personalized skill. What works for one may fail miserably for another, so teens should keep trying different approaches until they find ones that work for them.

• Get physical. Some teens channel their frustrations into physical activities and sports.

• Express yourself. Writing in a journal or drawing pictures about stressful situations can be good ways to vent anxieties.

• Talk it out. Parents should encourage their teens to talk through their problems with them or another trusted adult, rather than internalizing the stress.

• Share the pain. Often a friend, older sibling or other adult has experienced the same anxieties causing the teen to feel pressure. It may help a teen to talk through their situation with one of them and hear how someone else handled the situation.

• Get organized. Feeling out of control can be very stressful. Sometimes the best way to regain control is to get organized and set priorities.

• Just say no. Teens, like adults, sometimes take on more than they can handle because of guilt feelings. They need to learn to say no.

Finally, Mee warned parents against belittling their teen-ager's anxieties.

"Parents must remember that all stresses, big or small, real or imagined, are worthy of parents' time and involvement," she said.

Faith in God wins spiritual, tactical battles

By Kevin Dougherty
2nd Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment

Deception is usually not something we think of as a Christian virtue. Yet, deception is exactly the tool Joshua used to do his work as a warrior of God at the battle of Ai.

At first, Joshua underestimated the strength of Ai, a city some 12 miles north of Jerusalem. He sent a reconnaissance patrol forward, which reported that the city had relatively few inhabitants and was lightly held (Joshua 7:4). Armed with this information, Joshua attempted to seize Ai with a force of just 3,000 men. Only 36 Israelites were killed (Joshua 7:5).

Even with this setback, Joshua planned a second assault more earnestly. His new plan hinged on deception. Joshua would take advantage of the concealment of the night to send 30,000 men up the mountain towards Ai (Joshua 8:3). This force would lie in the low ground just to the west of Ai, between it and the city of Bethel, a mile away. He instructed these men to "lie in ambush against the city, behind it; do not go very far from the city, but hold yourselves in all readiness" (Joshua 8:4).

The next morning, Joshua led the rest of his army north of Ai. This force would cause the enemy to "come out after us, till we have drawn them away from the city; for they will say, 'They are fleeing from us, as before'" (Joshua 8:6). Once the enemy had fallen for this trap, the ambush force would "rise up from the ambush and seize the city" (Joshua 8:7).

Such a plan takes advantage of one of the principles of deception — planning: that it is easier to convince an opponent to believe what he wants to believe anyway. Joshua emphasized that his force was to conduct itself "as before." This would give the enemy the impression that the Israelites would be using the some tactics that led to their defeat in the earlier assault. Likewise, he hoped the enemy would respond "as before" (Joshua 8:5).

The battle unfolded as Joshua had envisioned. Seeing Joshua's force to the north, the king of Ai ordered his troops to attack. Giving the impression of retreat, Joshua's men fled, with the enemy in pursuit. In actuality, Joshua was leading the enemy further and further away from Ai, making the city more and more vulnerable.

reflections

Joshua's deception worked so well that "all people who were in the city were called together to pursue" him (Joshua 8:16). In the end, there was not a man left in either Ai or Bethel, and Joshua's objective lay defenseless (Joshua 8:17).

Joshua seized this moment to lift his javelin as a signal for the ambush force to rise up and capture Ai. The Israelites burned Ai, and when Joshua's force saw the smoke they knew the plan had worked, and they turned back against their pursuers (Joshua 8:20-21). Those who had entered Ai also turned back, trapping the enemy between the two converging Israelite forces (Joshua 8:22). When the battle was over, there was not a single one of the enemy "that survived or escaped." (Joshua 8:22)

The story of Joshua's capture of Ai serves both religious and secular purposes. Obviously, it is a stirring example of how faith in God can allow us to turn an initial defeat into a victory. But on the secular side, it is an excellent example of a sound tactical plan built on the deception considerations outlined in today's doctrine.

Annual awards presented to parishoners

USAIC Chaplain Office

In a recent ceremony at the Main Post Catholic Chapel, Makovec awards were presented to several members of the parish in recognition of their significant contributions to the parish.

Master Sgt. John J. Makovec, who served in the armies of three countries and fought on opposing sides in successive world wars, retired at Fort Benning. During his retirement years, he totally devoted himself to the volunteer service of the Catholic parish and priests.

While at Fort Benning, he developed a lifelong friendship with retired Lt. Col. Philip Gage Jr., son of a former assistant commandant.

In 1977, Gage created a trust fund in memory of Makovec. Funds from this trust are used each year for presentation of the John J. Makovec Award.

Recipients of the award this year were Debbi Erickson, Esperanza Godoy, Lance Lombardo, Sandra Lombardo, Rich Wampler and Cathie Wampler. Chap. (Lt. Col.) Vincent deP. Burns presided at the presentation ceremony.

God provides protection, relief from world

By Tom Wheatley
Ranger Training Brigade

The days of summer seem as if they are already here. That is, if you go by the hot weather, the running of air conditioning in cars and homes and the summer clothes.

reflections

In the days of oppressive heat (just wait — we haven't seen anything yet!), we all look for things that can provide relief from this heat. These things might include a nice cold drink or an air-conditioned building.

The other day, I would have spelled relief S-H-A-D-E. I was in an open field letting my dogs run, and it was a very hot, sunny day. I began to look for a bit of shade. In the field there was no shade in sight, so I walked to the end of the field where a few lone trees stood. I don't need to tell you that the shade was a welcome relief from the heat and sun. I spent a few long minutes in the shade before venturing back into the sun, but even those few minutes were enough to refresh me.

Many writers of the Bible also lived in regions where there was plenty of sun and heat, but very little shade or relief. They placed great value upon anything that would provide some shelter from the oppressive weather conditions. They also searched for ways to describe their God who loved them and provided for all of their needs. This God also showed his love and care for his people by protecting and sheltering them from enemies and oppressive conditions, so they used images that their people could picture, and then compared their God to this image to help describe some deeper aspects of his nature.

One such image is that of shade. A dictionary definition of shade is "cover or shelter provided by an object's interception of sun or its rays." The word shadow or shade was a conventional Hebrew metaphor for protection against oppression — as shade protects from the oppressive heat of the desert sun.

A person, too, such as a king, could be spoken of as the shade of those dependent on him. And in the same way, the Lord is the protective shade of his people. In Isaiah 25:4, God is "a shelter from the storm and a shade from the heat." In another well-known and well-loved passage from scripture we read that "He who dwells in the shelter of the Most High will rest in the shadow of the Almighty" (Psalm 90:1).

And in Psalm 121, a wonderful description of God's protection daily and hourly of his people, "The Lord watches over you — the Lord is your shade at your right hand; the sun will not harm you by day, nor the moon by night."

On your sleeping face you can become blind or God truly is a very present help in trouble. He can provide instant relief in the form of whatever idea or physical help we require to continue. Next time you happen to be looking for relief from the heat or sun, remember in your search that the best way to spell relief from any oppressive conditions, physical, mental, or emotional, is G-O-D.

Awards were given to first through third place winners in four the major classes.

In addition, awards were given to the high female shooter, high new shooter.

Tigers defeat Braves in youth services baseball

By John W. Peeler
Special to The Bayonet©

The Youth Services baseball Tigers defeated the Braves 13-0 in a game played on Green Field June 1.

The Tigers got off to a fast start scoring 4 runs in the first inning. Tiger pitcher Shavers Martell set the tone of the game, in what was a tough day for Braves batters, holding the Braves hitless in their first at bat while striking out three batters.

The Tigers added 4 runs in the second inning on two singles from Noel Foley and Miguel Hernandez, a double from Mike Monroe, and a triple from Jose Rodriguez.

The Braves woes continued into the second inning, with only one batter reaching base on a walk.

In the third inning, the Braves defense came to life catching two fly balls and ending the inning with a run-down of Hernandez.

With the score still 8-0, it appeared the run-down revived the Braves and got their adrenaline flowing as the team came off the field; however, the Braves batters had to face a new pitcher when the Tigers brought in reliever Darnell Love.

Love started off a little shaky by walking the first two batters but rebounded by retiring the rest of the side.

The Braves countered by bringing in relief pitcher Patrick Funkouser to try and keep the score close. Funkouser did his job striking out two and ended the inning on a Tiger fly ball.

In the top of the fifth, the Tigers put together a hitting spree collecting four runs giving them a solid 13-0 lead.

The lead was too much for the Braves to overcome as Love appeared to be getting stronger as the game progressed.

Love struck out the first batter with the defense ending the game on a fly ball.

Transfusion therapeutic for MEDDAC volleyball team

MEDDAC

The U.S. Army Infantry Center Post Volleyball Tournament came to a close May 30 when the U.S. Army Medical Department Activity team Transfusion successfully defended their title with a 15-9 win over the 2nd Battalion, 54th Infantry Regiment.

MEDDAC made it to the finals coming through the losers bracket after a 2nd round loss to the 2nd Bn., 54th Inf. Regt., a team they would ultimately face again in the finals..

MEDDAC fought their way through the losers bracket to win five matches in a row during the second week of the tournament, knocking off many excellent teams along the way, including School of the Americas (a longtime rival) in the semifinals.

The finals against the 2nd Bn., 54th Inf. Regt. appeared exhausting for both teams due to the number of games having to be played.

"We had the talent and the drive to win."

— Kris Johnson
Team Captain, MEDDAC

In the second game MEDDAC won the first 2 out of 3 matches with MEDDAC needing to win one more match against the once beaten 2nd Bn., 54th Inf. Regt. team.

Transfusion had the momentum going into the final match clinching the title winning two straight 15-5 and 15-9.

Sparked by the strong hitting and blocking of team captain Kris Johnson, Transfusion won their second championship in a row.

"We had the talent and the drive to win," Johnson said.

"Tony Reyes, Jason Yoakum and I were our only returning players from last year — we surprisingly received another awesome all-around player in Eddie Needham and Tyler, both proved to be excellent hitters."

The 2nd Bn, 54th Inf. Regt. team, led by their two more experience players, Mark Hannon and Tim Westreate, also had an excellent tournament.

"We were happy with our performance; especially for having such an inexperienced team," Paul Hilton, team captain, said.

"We showed tremendous improvement from the first of the season to the end of the playoffs."

Carry water when outdoors to prevent dehydration

Feature Outdoors

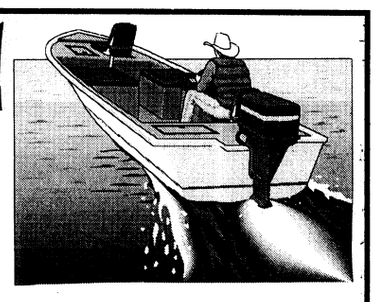
When mountain biking, hiking, backpacking and cycle touring, many people expose themselves to a danger that never crosses their minds — dehydration.

You do not have to be in a desert wasteland or marooned at sea to experience it. Dehydration can occur five miles from your home if you are not prepared.

Because your body is 60 percent fluid, most of the metabolic energy production that is essential for outdoor fun and recreation requires water. That is why it is important to maintain an optimum body fluid level when you are active outdoors.

Just a four percent fluid depletion can reduce your aerobic work capacity by almost 50 percent. As you ride, hike or climb, your fluid level steadily declines because of sweating and muscle use. If not replaced, this liquid loss leads to dehydration. Symptoms include: lack of sweat, dry mouth, chills, severe fatigue, nausea, muscle cramps and in extreme cases, heat stroke.

The answer for an increasing number of active people is to carry a compact water purifier and refill their water bottle at a convenient stream or public faucet. Weighing less than a pound, a water purifier eliminates all microorganisms and ensures the water is safe to drink.



"Let's face it," said Tom Klein, a water purification consultant, "it's tough to carry a full day's supply of drinking water, and the days of dipping a canteen into a nearby stream are gone. Bacteria, protozoan cysts, such as Giardia and even viruses, can contaminate any stream or lake and cause serious illness. If you don't have a safe way to refill your water bottle, you run the risk of becoming dehydrated."

Some water purifiers weigh only 12 ounces and can produce up to one quart of water per minute with a simple pumping action, like that of a bicycle pump. If you are thirsty while cycling or hiking and the nearest water source is a pond or stream,a water purifier will quickly eliminate any dangerous microorganisms, filter out suspended sediments and produce safe, good tasting water. Unlike slow-acting iodine tablets, which leave a strong iodine taste in the water, a water purifier quickly produces safe water that is much more palatable and appealing to drink.

A water purifier is a good investment for all outdoor enthusiasts. For example, a cyclist loses one to 112 quarts of water cycling at a moderate pace for three hours on a typical 80-degree summer day. But, cyclists may not feel thirsty or sweaty, even though their bodies are rapidly losing fluid. The wind generated from biking constantly cools the skin and evaporates the sweat, leaving cyclists unaware of the amount of moisture being lost. A good rule of thumb is to drink three to four glasses of water before heading out, and drink a standard size bottle of water for each hour of cycling, or four to eight ounces every 15 to 30 minutes.

However, water is heavy. You do not want to carry four quarts, or 10 pounds, of water on your back. The convenient solution is to carry a purifier and frequently refill your water bottles during the day.

It is almost impossible to drink too much water when active. Remember, thirst is not a reliable signal that dehydration is setting in, so drink water steadily and make sure it is safe by using a water purifier.

Georgia launches Designated Skipper Program

Georgia Department of Natural Resources

Following the rules of the road can help save lives on the water this season. The Georgia Department of Natural Resources, Wildlife Resources Division and community and business leaders are launching the state's first Designated Skipper Program, which urges boaters to "Pledge Not to Go Overboard."

The Designated Skipper Program encourages boaters to designate a safe skipper who will abstain from drinking alcohol while on the water. The campaign also fosters water safety and responsible boating. The program will target Lake Lanier, one of the state's busiest waterways. Already this year, there have been six accidents and one fatality on Lake Lanier. Statewide in 1995, 17 Georgians died and 83 more were injured in 121 boating accidents.

Olympic Gold Medalist Steve Lundquist introduced the program at Lake Lanier.

"When you're piloting a boat, often filled with family or friends, their safety and yours is riding on your performance and judgement," said Lundquist. "The Designated Skipper Program reminds us to make responsible choices while on the water."

The 1996 Georgia Safe Boating Campaign and the Designated Skipper Program is sponsored by TEAM Georgia, a sober driving coalition; the Georgia Department of Natural Resources, Wildlife Resources Division; and Miller Brewing Company.

Beginning this week and continuing throughout the season, hundreds of bars, restaurants, marine venues and convenience stores in the Lake Lanier area will offer special incentives to boaters who "Pledge Not to Go Overboard."

Participating businesses will display posters, table tents and brochures with the "Designate a Skipper" message. By signing a pledge to abstain from drinking alcohol while on the water, each safe skipper will receive a free non-alcoholic beverage and chances to win prizes in weekly drawings. Brochures on the Designated Skipper Program also include responsible boating guidelines and water safety tips.

"In Georgia, where water sports are such a part of our lifestyle, taking our message of sober driving to the water is a must," said TEAM Georgia Chairman Andy Arani. "Just as on land, it's critical to designate a skipper who will not drink alcohol while on the water. Water and alcohol don't mix. The effects of alcohol are compounded by the sun, doubling the rate of absorption."

The latest statistics from the U.S. Coast Guard log the most boating accidents ever reported — 6,904 during 1994. The Coast Guard estimates half of all boating accidents are the fault of the boat operator. Collisions with other vessels are the most reported type of accident.

> "The Georgia Boat Safety Act makes it illegal to operate a boat under the influence of alcohol or drugs."
> — David Walker
> Director, Georgia Department of Natural Resources, Wildlife Resources Division

"The Georgia Boat Safety Act makes it illegal to operate a boat under the influence of alcohol or drugs," explained David Waller, Director, Georgia Department of Natural Resources, Wildlife Resources Division. "The maximum penalty for BUI is a $1,000 fine and possibly 12 months imprisonment." DNR law enforcement officers are responsible for patrolling Lake Lanier and other Georgia waterways.

Miller Brewing Company is active nationally in safe boating efforts and has sponsored similar campaigns in other states.

"Miller wants to help promote responsible conduct on and near the water," said Maria Strollo, southeast public affairs representative, Miller Brewing Company. "We support law enforcement and public safety efforts to keep our waterways and roads safe, and welcome opportunities to participate in public education programs like Designated Skipper."

Each year, almost 70 million Americans enjoy recreational water activities. It is always safer not to consume alcoholic beverages while on the water. However, if passengers choose to drink alcoholic beverages, always designate a skipper. A safe guideline for passengers is to consume only one drink or less per hour, but never on an empty stomach or while taking medicine.

For more information on the 1996 Georgia Safe Boating Campaign and the Designated Skipper Program, call the Wildlife Resources Division at (770) 918-6400.

SOFTWARE ENGINEERS!

We Move in the right circles

PSW Technologies' performance over the last few years has been truly exceptional. Revenues grew 65% in 1995 - and profits were up well over 800%. That has to make us one of the fastest growing software consulting firms in the country.

The secret of our success? Few consulting companies can match the depth and breadth of our technical expertise. That's not merely "hype." We maintain a one- to two- year technology lead through partnerships with prominent technology providers - NeXT, Lotus, Transarc, Tivoli, IBM... to name just a few. That exposure substantially enhances the skills we bring to the table when we go on to support Fortune 100 companies efforts to maintain balance on the cutting edge.

What does all this mean to you? A chance to work with superior technical resources. A chance to work in the hottest technological areas with the best minds in the field. A chance to develop skills relevant to tomorrow's systems and the future's way of doing business.

But most significantly, a chance not only to do important work — but to play a vital role in building an exploding business in the Boston area as a Software Technology or Application Developer.

We need all levels of the following: Development Software Engineers with strong C or C++ Unix Programming experience that includes familiarity with some of the following: Unix Porting; Client/Server Applications; XWindow/Motif GUI Development; Network Programming. DEC Alpha or OSF &/or Unix Development build engineer with ClearCase experience a plus. Quality Assurance Software Engineers with strong Unix QA experience and an emphasis on any of the following: Client/Server Applications; Unix Application Testing; XWindow/Motif GUI Testing. Lotus Notes &/or Test Development, automated Test Tools a plus. Unix System Administrators with emphasis on DEC Alpha Unix platforms.

The excitement doesn't stop there. Did we forget to mention that we are a fun group, that we are a team, that we give and get support at an unusual level — and that by working with us, you'll enhance your professional credentials in a way you never thought possible? So, if you're looking to travel in the right circles, please send your resume with salary requirements to: Brent Terry, PSW Technologies, 9050 Capital of Texas Highway North, Suite 300, Austin, TX 78759. Fax: 512-343-9650. E-Mail: brent@pswtech.com

The Department of the Army announced Tuesday that Maj. Gen. John W. Hendrix, Fort Benning's commanding general, will be reassigned as the commanding general of the 3rd Infantry Division (Mechanized) at Fort Stewart, Ga.

Hendrix said he was delighted with being selected to be the commanding general of the 3rd Infantry Division.

He said that everyone in Army leadership knew that if he had a choice of assignments, it would be the 3rd's commanding general.

"It's a great unit with great people with an important mission," Hendrix said.

Maj. Gen. Carl F. Ernst, presently assigned as the Deputy Chief of Staff for Training, Training and Doctrine Command, Fort Monroe, Va., will replace Hendrix as the commanding general of the U.S. Army Infantry Center.

Ernst was previously assigned at Fort Benning as the deputy commanding general and assistant commandant. He was commissioned in the infantry from Louisiana State University in 1966 and holds a master's degree from Shippensburg University of Pennsylvania. His military training and education include the Army War College, Command and General Staff College, Infantry Officer Advanced Course, Infantry Officer Basic Course, the Inspector General's Course,

He served in all types of infantry positions and is a Combat and Expert Infantryman, Ranger, and Master Parachutist. Among his awards are the Legion of Merit, Bronze Star (with V device), two Purple Hearts, four Meritorious Service Medals, Air Medal, Joint Service Commendation Medal, two Army Commendation Medals, Army Achievement Medal and Humanitarian Service.Medal.

He and his wife Linda have two children, Erik and Ashley.

Hendrix told members of the Fort Benning community that he is "delighted with the choice of Gen. Ernst as my replacement."

"There's no one who knows more about the infantry than (Maj.) Gen. Ernst," Hendrix said. He's well steeped in the workings of TRADOC and he's had several key assignments at Fort Benning, such as director of the Combined Arms and Tactics, and assistant commandant of the Infantry School and deputy commanding general of Fort Benning.

Hendrix assumed command of Fort Benning and the U.S. Army Infantry Center and School Sept. 15, 1994.

Hendrix and his wife, Cheri, are both Georgia natives. He's from Statesboro, while she's from Atlanta. They have two sons, Mark and Michael.

No date has been established for the change of command.

Welcome home!

Spc. Danny Austill, his wife Shannon, and his daughter Brook reunite after six months of separation. Austill and his unit, the 586th Engineer Company (Assault Float Bridge), returned home from their peacekeeping efforts in Bosnia Wednesday night. The soldiers were flown into Lawson Army Airfield shortly after 1:30 a.m. where they were greeted by Col. Thomas L. Bailey, commander of the 36th Engineer Group. The soldiers were then bused to Audie Murphy Fitness Center where they were greeted by hundreds of fellow soldiers and family members. Fort Benning's Commanding General, Major General John W. Hendrix praised the 586th by complimenting the unit's soldiers on their speed of mobilizing, the skill with which they put in an expansion bridge at night and the effectiveness of their joint effort with the Hungarian military. Hendrix said, "You all look a few pounds leaner than when you left here six months ago, but we are all damn proud of you, hooah!"

Rangers

remember fallen comrades with new memorial

By Marc G. Turchin
USAIC Public Affairs Office

Losing a loved one is never easy, nor will it ever be forgotten.

It was this type of loss, the unexpected and heart-drenching losses of 22 rangers over the past 12 years that saw the 3rd Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment, unveil a new memorial in their memory.

Members of the battalion, friends of the ranger community and some family members of the fallen rangers turned out for the dedication ceremony inside the battalion's compound June 7.

This passage is inscribed on the memorial:

"This monument is an eternal reminder of the sacrifices made by the gallant men of the 3rd Ranger Battalion who have given their lives in combat and training since 3 October 1984. They are here with us as long as the regiment serves. We, their brothers in arms who watched them bravely lead the way, humbly render this salute. May God watch over our fallen rangers and bless their families."

This passage was emotionally read by 3rd Battalion's Commander, Lt. Col. Frank Kearney.

Midway through the reading of the inscription, those who were related to the honorees and even some who weren't, couldn't hold back the tears and began to cry.

Kearney talked about the inscription, at times barely keeping his composure.

"The text speaks of courage and gallantry. It speaks of legacy and it reminds us of our sacred responsibility to learn from their sacrifice so that these rangers would not have died in vain."

The names of the 22 honored rangers' are engraved into the marble stone. Those who died in combat are on one side, those who lost their lives in training on another.

Kearney said rangers who walk by this memorial will remember the rangers who gave their lives.

Marc G. Turchin

Emma Piazza, wife of Philip Piazza who is the president of the Merril's Mauraders Association, places a flower at the base of the new memorial at the conclusion of the ceremony.

"For each ranger who pauses here, this memorial will have special meaning," Kearney said. "Some will read the names and think of Rio Hato (Panama) and Mogadishu (Somalia) and draw strength and courage ... that legacy of courage and strength may carry the day in another firefight in defense of freedom somewhere in the world."

Some of the legacy Kearney talked about includes the honorees' families. A few of them attended the ceremony.

Some of them were able to take part in the dedication ceremony. Sandy Harris, wife of 1st Sgt. Glenn Harris and Deanna Joyce- Beck, who was married to Sgt. James Joyce, helped current rangers Staff Sgt. Matthew Eversman and Sgt. Brad Thomas place a ranger wreath at the memorial.

Joyce-Beck said coming back to the compound brings back a lot of emotions.

"It's hard for me," she said. "We lived here for three years and I used to drop my husband off every morning and it's hard to come back here and see all the soldiers."

She also said coming to the compound is the hardest part about the ceremony.

"You used to attend these things and your husband was right there beside you and that's very hard."

Harris said the ceremony sort of slow's the healing process, but it helps her understand what her husband was doing.

"It brings it all back when you hear taps and the guns; it's hard," Harris said.

Although it was hard coming to the dedication, Harris said it's important for the rangers to have a memorial.

"The rangers have always looked upon their fallen as leaders and (the dedication) is something real significant to come in and give them confidence," she said. "Pride is what it takes to be in a unit like this."

Both women said it was an honor to be there for the dedication and they wouldn't have missed it.

Beck has since remarried and says time does a lot of healing.

"It's hard in the beginning but there's a point when you have to realize they're not coming back," Joyce-Beck said. "You don't want to spend your life miserable."

During his remarks, Kearney gave examples of lessons he learned with the loss of these rangers. He should know; he served with 16 of the 22 rangers honored.

"Because I knew these rangers, the lessons will be indelibly etched in my mind and I will continue to pass them on," Kearney said.

"And so," Kearney added, "they really are here with us as long as the regiment serves."

Wrestlers go for gold

Special to The Bayonet©

Two Fort Benning wrestlers made the Olympic team, three team members were named as alternates and one coach was named as an assistant coach to the Olympic team.

This happened because of the All-Army team's performance during the recent Olympic wrestling trials in California.

The wrestlers who made the team are 1992 Olympic bronze medalist Rodney Smith and Derrick Waldroup.

The alternates are Shon Lewis, Keith Sieracki and Jeffery Green.

Coach Tony Thomas will also be making the trip to Atlanta for the Olympics as an Olympic team assistant coach.

"It really feels good," Thomas said. "This has been the Army's best performance of all time, the most to make the Olympic team since 1964."

"Without a doubt, Waldroup is one of the best wrestler the Army has ever had." Thomas said.

Thomas credits the Army wrestling success to the athletes themselves and assistant coach Anatoli Nazarenko.

Thomas said Nazarenko himself was a former three-time world champion and coach with the former Soviet Union.

Thomas

Thomas said the wrestlers who will compete in the 1996 Olympics will do well but not without a lot of stiff competition.

"Russia is deep in competitors, but like I said, anything can happen."

Smith credits the success to the coaches and the training plan they put together a year ago.

Smith said his teammates and family were a major contributing factor to his personal success, with the team assuming the role as "his second family."

Regarding the possibilities of the alternates competing Thomas said "anything can happen, athletes get injured all the time."

"If one of the wrestlers gets hurt, then one of the alternates would get the spot."

Thomas said July 19 was the deadline for any lineup changes.

The team will leave today and go on to the Olympic training facility in Colorado Springs, Colo. and return to Fort Benning for a short time, then on to Atlanta and the 1996 Olympics.

Should a basketball star be allowed to bend the rules and infringe on rights of others by publicly denouncing a national icon of freedom, peace and liberty?

American flag deserves respect

By Gary Sheftick
Army News Service

Denver Nuggets basketball star Mahmoud Abdul-Rauf was briefly suspended without pay for refusing to stand for the National Anthem.

In reply to the suspension, Abdul-Rauf publicly denounced the flag as a "symbol of oppression and tyranny."

Abdul-Rauf's behavior and venomous words have been offensive to many fans, especially veterans. All season, as the rest of his teammates lined up for the anthem, Abdul-Rauf remained disrespectfully seated or hiding in the locker room. Since lining up for the National Anthem is a National Basketball Association rule, the star was finally suspended. But justice was short-lived for the fans who supported the NBA for its principles.

After just one game, Abdul-Rauf struck a deal with the NBA. Now the basketball star stands for the anthem, but covers his face as he supposedly prays to Allah. Does covering one's face during the anthem qualify as standing "in a dignified posture" as the NBA rule requires? Apparently many of the fans don't think so because they loudly boo in protest.

commentary

Ed Wearing, commander of the American Legion state organization in Colorado, suggested that Abdul-Rauf renounce his U.S. citizenship. Personally, it seems that denouncing allegiance to the nation and the flag is almost synonymous with renouncing citizenship.

After all, are not naturalized citizens required to pledge allegiance?

Perhaps at age 18, those born in this country should take an oath of allegiance before gaining the full privileges of citizenship?

Maybe some of us take our citizenship a little too much for granted.

All those who immigrate to this nation are required to become educated about the American political system before becoming citizens. No such requirements exists for native-born Americans like Abdul-Rauf, who was known as Chris Jackson before converting to Islam five years ago.

Regardless of religion or creed, all service members and Department of Defense employees have taken a solemn oath to support and defend the United States constitution, and thereby the flag for which it stands.

Abdul-Rauf has denounced the flag for which more than a million Americans have given their lives over the years to defend.

Abdul-Rauf says the United States has "a long history of oppression and tyranny" and he can't pledge allegiance to that.

Maybe he would rather pledge allegiance to Iraq or Libya?

Some may applaud Abdul-Rauf for standing up for his beliefs.

If he were simply voicing dissent for a U.S. policy or suggesting improvements, it would be another matter. But Abdul-Rauf has nothing constructive to add to public debate. He just denounces the flag and all that it stands for.

Some may say that he has a First Amendment right to denounce the flag and the nation—or say anything else he wants to say.

Wearing disagrees. He believes what Abdul-Rauf is doing is "tantamount to treason."

Free speech is only free until it infringes on the rights of others. After all, you can't scream fire in a crowded movie theater, and you can't advocate the violent overthrow of the government.

What message, I ask, is Abdul-Rauf sending to our youth who look up to sports stars as role models?

Flag represents true spirit of America

Armed Forces Information Service

Picking through the rubble of what had been the U.S. Embassy in Beirut when it was bombed in April 1983, rescue workers uncovered the body of 21-year-old Marine Cpl. Robert V. McMaugh. Beside his body lay the tattered remains of the U.S. flag that had once stood proudly beside McMaugh's guard post in the embassy's main lobby.

commentary

McMaugh's fellow Marine security guards draped their dead comrade in a fresh American flag and carried him away on a stretcher. A squad of Marines snapped to attention and saluted.

"It was a poignant moment," recalled Chief Warrant Officer Bill Henderson, a spokesman attached to the 22nd Marine Amphibious Unit in Lebanon at the time of the bombing.

"Everyone has been digging and digging, then suddenly, everything stopped. Not a word was said.

"Seeing the body of a fellow Marine, covered with the American flag ... it was an electrifying moment."

While stationed in Beirut, Henderson said he came to appreciate the flag not just as a piece of material, but as a symbol of courage.

"Each Marine (in Lebanon) wore an American flag on his shirt," he said. "It did more than show that we were representing this country and what it stands for: freedom for all people."

> "The lines of red are lines of blood, nobly and unselfishly shed by men who loved the liberty of their fellowship more than they loved their own lives and fortunes."
> — Woodrow Wilson
> U.S. president, 1913-1921

President Woodrow Wilson knew what freedoms the U.S. flag stands for. He said, "The lines of red are lines of blood, nobly and unselfishly shed by men who loved the liberty of their fellowship more than they loved their own lives and fortunes. God forbid that we should have to use the blood of America to freshen the color of the flag."

As a part of Wilson's world of continuing sacrifice, Capt. Roger Mathews of U.S. Army Forces Command watched the shiny black hangar at Dover Air Force Base, Del. An honor guard from the 101st Airborne Division (Air Assault) snapped to attention as a C-141 aircraft arrived, carrying the first of 24 of their fellow soldiers killed in a December 1985 plane crash in Gander, Newfoundland.

There was a sudden quiet as the aircraft came down, revealing 10 caskets, each wrapped in the bright red, white and blue of the American flag.

"That sight," said Mathews, "simply sucked the air out of everyone."

One by one, the caskets were carried from the aircraft and aligned on pedestals on the hanger floor.

"It was, by far, one of the most significant events of my life," Mathews said.

Raised in a military family, Mathews said the flag has always had a special significance to him. But his experience at Dover, he said, gave him a more personal understanding of what the U.S. flag means to members of the U.S. military.

"America stands for a lot of ideals. The flag has always been symbolic of those ideals.

"And when you serve in the military, you're sometimes called on to give everything you have to give for those ideals. You just can't give much more than what those soldiers gave at Gander."

Throughout history, the flag has survived victories and tragedies, glory and degradation.

Francis Scott Key's great inspiration about the American flag, "The Star Spangled Banner," was written during the War of 1812, when in the face of a British bombardment the battle-scarred American flag continued to fly over Fort McHenry.

Col. David M. Roeder had spent only eight days as the assistant Air Force attache to the U.S. Embassy in Iran when he and more than 50 other Americans were taken hostage on Nov. 4, 1979.

For 444 days, Roeder lived without the freedoms he loved and worked to protect as a member of the U.S. military. He looked on helplessly as U.S. flag burnings became almost daily media events and his captors carried garbage from one area of the embassy compound to another, wrapped in the American flag.

Roeder said that in the face of this adversity, he never lost faith in his country or the flag that symbolizes it.

His most positive memory associated with his captivity took place the day the newly-freed hostages arrived in Germany and were met by thousands of waving American flags.

Having just hours before run the gauntlet of angry Iranian faces, Roeder said that the sight of "all those friendly faces and all those American flags being waved made the reality of freedom explosive."

Roeder, who said he's always been a nationalist, said his experience in Iran emphasized every positive feeling he'd ever had about the United States and what it stands for.

"When you talk about a flag, whether it's standing in a place of honor at a ceremony, or draped over a casket, or waving from someone's house, you're talking about a symbol," he said.

"But the importance of that symbolism is monumental. It represents what we are, wherever we are in the world. And no matter what anyone else says about it or does to it, the flag never loses its dignity."

"It only gains dignity. Because when someone attacks the American flag, it's only because they recognized all that it represents and the greatness of this country. "

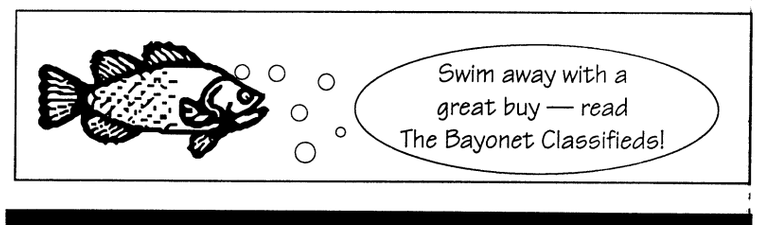
Housing division receives $1.9 million for repairs

By Brian R. Voller
Bayonet staff writer

Fort Benning received $1.9 million dollars from the Training and Doctrine Command recently to begin repairing damage caused by Hurricane Opal last October.

Ken Hankins, chief of the housing division, said the money was received after the post submitted a request for financial aid to ease the cost of repairing the housing areas.

"We submitted the request for the money shortly after the hurricane and the funds were received a couple of weeks ago," Hankins said. "Originally, we were told we weren't going to get any additional money, but then we were informed that we would be getting the money we requested."



The money, which was given to TRADOC by the Department of the Army, is being used to repair the damaged rooftops in all 28 housing areas on post, Hankins said.

The repairs that will be done include reshingling the damaged areas and stopping leaks in the roofs of the houses where people have called and complained.

The work could take 6 months or more to complete, Hankins said.

The contract is scheduled to be awarded in August and work will begin approximately 30 to 40 days after that.

Messages will be distributed to the different housing areas before work begins, but those wishing to get more information on the repairs can call the Housing office at 545-8323 or 545-8324.

Suicide deaths can be prevented

By Brian R. Voller
Bayonet staff writer

In the world today, there are 30,000 completed suicides a year, or 75 per day or 1 every 20 minutes. There are twenty times the number of suicide attempts or 1,000 per day or one every 60 seconds.

In the Army, suicide is the third leading cause of death during peace time. The rate of suicides during peace time in Forces Command units has doubled over the past year and Fort Benning averages 3 to 10 suicides a year. This year alone there have been two deaths by suicide on Fort Benning.

The numbers of suicide deaths are staggering, but according to Capt. Mark Baggett, Community Mental Health Center, suicides are preventable, provided people look for warning signs.

"There are several risk factors that can be identified in people who might be contemplating suicide," Baggett said. "Signals such as sleep disturbances, fatigue, poor concentration, appetite disturbances and multiple physical complaints could be signs that someone is getting depressed."

Most suicide attempts don't involve just one risk factor, Baggett said. Almost every completed suicide has involved alcohol and the person losing something significant, such as a boyfriend, girlfriend or a spouse.

"Loss is a very big risk factor," Baggett said. "Losses of status, money, or opportunities; conflicted relationships; pending adverse action or legal problems; or a perceived lack of support are all factors that could bring on suicidal depression."

Some of the behavioral changes, according to Baggett, that could give people an indication that someone is contemplating suicide include: poor hygiene, changes in job performance, social withdrawal, increased use of alcohol or drugs, agitation or slowing of physical activity, giving away of prized possessions, making out a will, risky or reckless behavior, self mutilation or buying a gun.

While people may show signs of some of these symptoms, Baggett said it is a very distinct pattern of several of the behavioral clues that should cause alarm.

"If you think a person is at real risk of committing suicide, you should probably go directly to the chain of command," Baggett said. "Have the person go to his squad leader, platoon sergeant or their first sergeants, and they can make sure that person is seen by us.

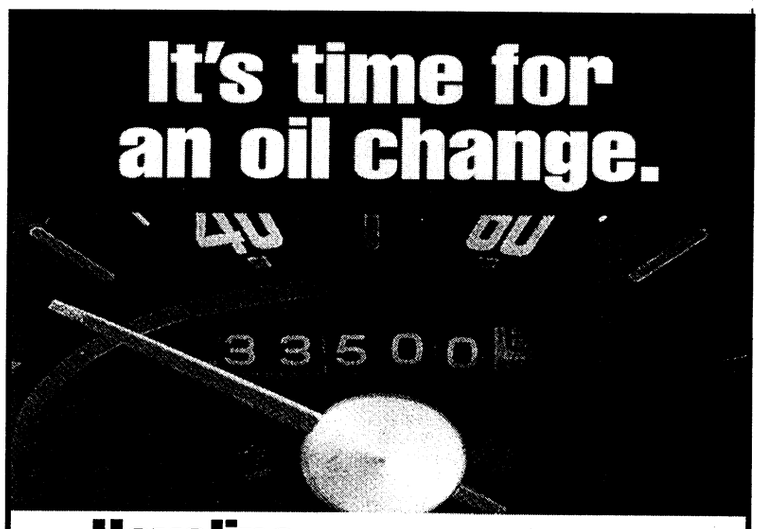
"But if a person is down and a roommate or a friend notices, he or she might want to tell that person to go see the chaplain," Baggett said. "People have such a stigma about mental health, they think only crazy people are seen here. While we work to dispel that myth, seeing the chaplain might make the person more comfortable."

Baggett said the Community Mental Health Center gets referrals from the chaplains all the time. He said the chaplains are more visible due to the number of chaplains on post, which makes them easier to access than the mental health officers.

"Chaplains tend to be more visible," Chaplain (Maj.) Robert Thompson said, "and they play a critical role, because they are available in the units to counsel with soldiers and family members.

"People often come to their chaplains to talk about their stress and anger, which often contribute to suicidal thinking and gestures," Thompson said. In talking to those persons early on, chaplains can assist them in improving their life coping skills. Good coping skills prevent not only suicide, but other problems, such as child and spouse abuse and divorce."

Thompson also said that chaplains often teach suicide prevention classes for the commanders in their units. "We look at the whole context of their lives and help them strengthen that context, which includes work, family, self-worth, spiritual views, and other factors."



Thompson said that sometimes soldiers will make appointments with the chaplain, but soldiers will be forced to cancel the appointments because their chain of command told them something else was more important.

"Appointments with chaplains are like medical appointments," Thompson said. "Chaplains provide similar kinds of help as the mental health folks give, but we provide it from a foundation of pastoral care. If a person is actively suicidal, we need to get him or her to the Community Mental Health Center. But for long term help with coping with life, chaplains are a great resource."

The Community Mental Health Center takes phone calls 24-hours a day. The numbers during regular work hours are 545-1717, 545-6766 or 545-2587. To reach the Community Mental Health Center after hours you must call the Emergency Room at Martin Army Community Hospital. Soldiers can also make appointments to be seen at the Community Mental Health Center, Building 2615 in Soldiers Plaza.

Soldiers needing assistance in emergency situations should contact the emergency room of Martin Army Community Hospital at 544-3711.

Civilians who need assistance can be seen through the Department of Psychology of MACH on an outpatient basis at 544-3690.

Better Opportunities for Single Soldiers

$250,000 award to fund improvements

Better Opportunities for Single Soldiers

$250,000 dollars can go a long way to improve the lives of single soldiers, said Spc. Michael T. James, Better Opportunities for Single Soldiers Program president.

Once again, Fort Benning has demonstrated why it has been recognized as the premier installation for four consecutive years, said James. With a 30 day suspense, Training and Doctrine Command announced the single soldier quality of life competition.

When TRADOC announced the winners of the competition, Fort Benning's Single Soldiers Program won the top prize of $250,000 dollars. The money is to be used exclusively to enhance the quality of life for soldiers in the barracks.

"We went head to head with 31 other TRADOC installations, all eligible to compete for the prize money," James said.

"In these times of military downsizing and harsh cut backs you have to look for all available avenues and go after them to fund improvement projects," James said. "Therefore, the money will be used to further fund single soldier 'Do It Yourself Projects' and, with 14 major subordinate command's, it will be a challenge to allocate the funds."

The BOSS council will prioritize unit requests and recommend to the post sergeant major and garrison sergeant major which organization's projects can be funded.

So get your request to your BOSS representatives today.

Question of the week:

Can I smoke in my room?

Smoking is authorized in soldier's rooms, according to single soldier quality of life regulation USAIC 600-19. Smokers and non-smokers will be separated, but in many cases, it is not possible to assign separate rooms for smokers and non-smokers, therefore the room will be designated a non-smoking room. Smoking is prohibited in dayrooms, TV rooms, latrines, washrooms and other common areas. Designated smoking areas should be recognized.

Commissary saves soldiers $, reduces its operating costs

Stephen Barrett
American Forces Press Service

WASHINGTON — Re-engineering and streamlining efforts at the Defense Commissary Agency are saving service members and taxpayers money, the agency director recently told members of the House National Security Committee.

Speaking before the committee's panel on Morale, Welfare and Recreation, Army Maj. Gen. Richard E. Beale Jr. said the agency is reducing operating costs and increasing patron savings. He said these efforts will safeguard the commissary benefit for service members and save taxpayer money.

Our customers have experienced a significant rise in savings," said Beale, referring to a 1995 market-basket price comparison study. "The study disclosed an average savings of 29.7 percent to the commissary patron. That's 6.3 percent more than the last market-basket price comparison study conducted in 1992."

Beale said this means an E-4 with over four years of service, supporting a family of four and doing all grocery shopping at the commissary, saves $1,581 per year. "The commissary savings amount to 6.8 percent of their total income, which is money available to this typical military family for other living expenses," he said. "This is what your predecessors designed the commissary to do — put pay in the service member's pocket!"

Savings to patrons are important, but Beale also emphasized taxpayer savings to those supporting the military's commissary benefit. "From a high of $1,272 million in fiscal 1993, DeCA will have reduced its operating costs to $939 million by the end of fiscal 1997," said Beale. He said reorganizing the agency increased efficiency and reduced costs by eliminating duplication and centralizing contracting, category management, buying, merchandising and distribution.

Beale said recently awarded contracts will modernize commissary business systems — which include computer-assisted ordering, automated coupon processing and electronic shelf labels.

"We could take all of that time and money going into the hiring of people, and put it into extending operating hours, adding cashiers and adding stockers to keep the shelves full and the lines short," he said.

To Beale, there is no downside to converting — a change he expects to be complete by the middle of fiscal 1997.

DFAS to change travel pay procedure

The Defense Finance and Accounting Service-Indianapolis is changing the process and format in which travelers receive information concerning their travel payment.

Beginning in August, travelers will receive a simplified advice of payment printed concurrently with the check or Electronic Fund Transaction. The AOP provides the essential information travelers need regarding their payment on one single sheet of paper in the same format they submitted the settlement voucher.

In February, a sample of the new travel AOP was sent to 3,500 government travelers services by DFAS-IN Operating Locations. The response was overwhelming. The survey reflected a 90% acceptance level.

For more information on travel AOP, call (317) 542-2405 or DSN 699-2405.

Controlled burning set

Controlled burning of woodland areas will take place Monday through June 22. If weather permits, the following compartments will be affected: M-7, N-1, N-2, BB-3, and CC-2.

Burning will occur in pine stands within these compartments to enhance endangered species' habitat and training areas.

Personnel proposing to use these areas for recreational purposes must vacate these areas prior to 9:30 a.m. daily.

Training units using compartments adjacent to those listed above may experience drift smoke and are reminded to exercise caution while traveling in these areas due to the potential for reduced visibility.

Units using ranges and training areas are reminded to remove flammable debris, such as pinestraw, leaves, grass and trash from around structures in accordance with U.S. Army Infantry Center Regulation 210-4, Paragraph 5-22, Organizational Maintenance.

For more information, call Jack Greenlee, Natural Resources Management Branch, at 544-6206.

DFAS centralizes disbursement

The most current initiative from the Defense Finance and Accounting Service is centralized disbursing. The focus of this initiative is on centralizing check writing and electronic funds transfers functions at the Indianapolis Center. Under centralized disbursing, the Indianapolis Center will take advantage of high speed equipment to prepare and mail all payments for the operating locations. Accompanying each payment will be a simplified advice of payment designed to provide the payee with an easy to read explanation of what the payment represents. DFAS surveyed travelers and vendors and received a favorable response.

The first phase of centralized disbursing was kicked off in April and the printing of checks for the Fort Benning OPLOC started June 3.

3rd ID heads to Olympic games

Robin A. Shawlinski
3rd Brigade, 3rd Infantry Division

Nearly 600 soldiers from the 3rd Brigade, 3rd Infantry Division (Mechanized) on Kelley Hill are heading to Atlanta during the next two weeks to provide support for the 1996 Olympic Games.

About 25 more soldiers from the brigade will leave for Atlanta July 9 to provide bus transportation during the Olympic Games.

More than 560 soldiers will be doing administrative security support for the state law enforcement agencies and the Georgia National Guard. The brigade soldiers will be spread throughout 40 different venues in and around Atlanta, according to 1st Lt. Charles St. Clair, 3rd Brigade Olympic Games support actions officer.

"They will be doing all the administrative work, such as monitoring phones, scheduling, acting as clerks and participating in logistics activities in the Olympic venues," he said.

The brigade is also sending food service specialists to help prepare meals for the more than 10,000 active duty and National Guard soldiers supporting the Olympics.

Aside from administrative support, 25 3rd Brigade soldiers will join other 3rd Infantry Division soldiers from Fort Stewart, Ga. in providing transportation for the athletes during the Olympics.

Currently, these soldiers are attending a commercial bus driver course on post. They will transport athletes and security personnel to and from venues.

Most of the soldiers from 3rd Brigade are from 1st Battalion, 30th Infantry Regiment.

"If you would want to be anywhere (in the world) in July and August, it would be in Atlanta for the Olympics," said Lt. Col. Brian R. Zahn, 1st Bn., 30th Inf. commander. "This will give the soldiers an opportunity to see how the Olympic (Games) are set up and run."

Plans are currently being made with the Morale, Welfare and Recreation Division to provide soldiers with activities and events to attend during their three-month mission, St. Clair said.

Most of the soldiers will remain in Atlanta until Aug. 31. The food service specialists and bus drivers will remain in Atlanta to support the 1996 Paralympics through August into early September.

Force XXI trains for the future of war

Jim Caldwell
Army News Service

Can the Army's experimental division synchronize operations among armor, mechanized and light infantry units to mass lethal force against an enemy?

That is the primary question that Army leaders hope to have answered at the Task Force XXI Experimental Force Advanced Warfighting Experiment at the National Training Center, Fort Irwin, Calif., in March 1997. It is not the only question, however.

Decisions reached because of the AWE could impact the Army not only in this decade but as far into the future as 2025, according to Gen. William W. Hartzog, commander of Training and Doctrine Command.

"We are moving along a path in Force XXI where we're going to nonlinear operations, the ability to fight in different directions and to move around quickly on the battlefield," Hartzog said.

"The interoperability of tanks and the light soldiers has to be tested. They have two different rhythms."

Tanks are able to cross a battlefield at 30 miles per hour, and fight in extended engagements. Infantry, on the other hand, plans and rehearses to conduct short, decisive operations, Hartzog said.

The EXFOR is the 1st Brigade, 4th Infantry Division, Fort Hood, Texas, and 1st Battalion, 5th Infantry Regiment, Fort Lewis, Wash. They are currently being outfitted with new weapons systems, digital communications equipment and night fighting gear.

About 3,000 soldiers from 4th Infantry and several hundred from 5th Infantry will be organized into one armor battalion, one mechanized battalion and one light infantry battalion.

According to Hartzog, the EXFOR will have 90 new systems and a total of 7,000 end items. Nearly 900 vehicles will have digitized communications capability, as will individual light infantry soldiers.

Soldiers are currently training to operate and maintain the new equipment. In June, the entire EXFOR will begin an eight-month training period to learn how to use the equipment and technologies on the battlefield.

Digitization has added a powerful dimension to warfare, Hartzog says. In AWEs, commanders have been able to prepare completely integrated operations orders in about seven minutes. The process takes about seven hours in a conventional command post.

In previous AWEs, commanders have been able to place their forces more quickly to take advantage of enemy moves. One of those AWEs was Warrior Focus at Fort Polk, La., in November 1995. The light infantry was outfitted with digital communications and nightfighting equipment.

"The digitized light infantry brigade ... covered 180 percent more of the area than it would have covered ... without the digitization," Hartzog said.

Logisticians will also participate in the EXFOR AWE to learn if digitization can help them provide more timely combat support. Sensors on tanks and other vehicles will measure ammunition and fuel use rates, and transmit it throughout the command net.

Logisticians will have more battlefield awareness and be able to respond by moving supplies where and when they are needed.

Bugle calls have long heritage

Army News Service

From morning reveille to afternoon retreat and evening taps, Army bugle calls set the tone and tempo for Army posts.

Military customs and courtesy dictate that pedestrians outside pause and face the direction of the garrison flag on the main post parade field or the nearest source of the music when certain bugle calls sound at 6 a.m. and 5 p.m,

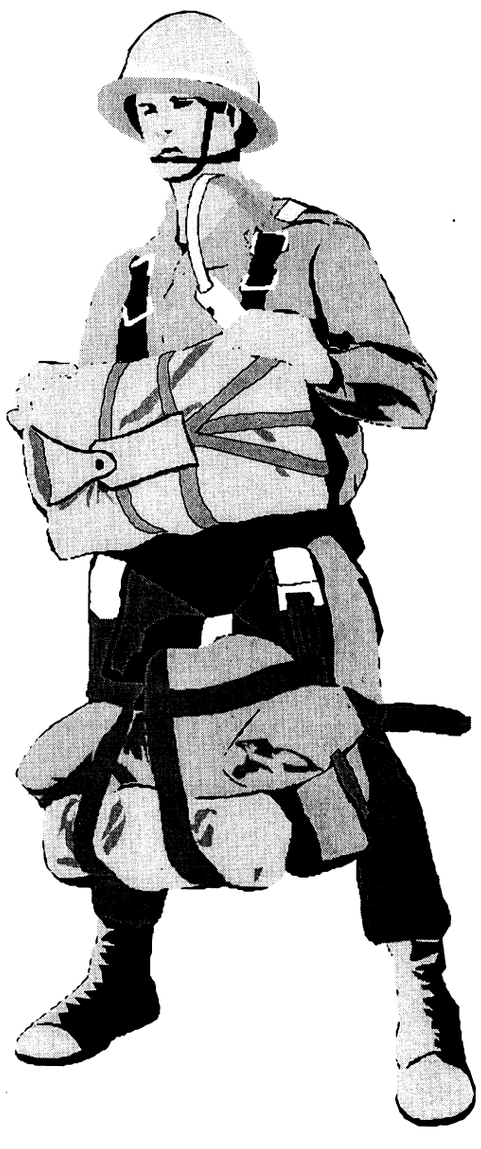
Motorists should pull to a safe position, step out of their cars and face the garrison flag or the nearest outdoor speaker. In all cases, military personnel salute while civilians place their hands over their hearts.

"Historically, the beats of the drum and calls of the bugle go far into past centuries," writes retired Lt. Col. Lawrence P. Crocker in the Army Officer's Guide. The armies of Gideon and Saul in the Bible may have been the first to make military use of bugles, according to William Carter White's book, "A History of Military Music in America."

At 6 a.m. reveille sounds, which dates back to the Crusades and the French military. A salute is required for this bugle call. Retreat is sounded at 5:30 p.m. but few listeners know that it, too, dates back to the Crusades. A cannon fires at the call's last note. It is followed immediately by the tune "To the Colors." This second bugle call requires a salute. It is a cavalry call dating back to 1867.

Tattoo sounds on post at 9 p.m. as the longest call in the U.S. Army with 28 musical measures. Its origins stem from the British and French armies. This signals that it's time to quiet down in the barracks and to turn lights off within 15 minutes, according to the book "Military Customs and Traditions" by Maj. Mark M. Boatner III.

Most visitors to Army posts will recognize taps when it's played at 11p.m. The familiar music from military ceremonies and funerals is an all-American song composed by Civil War Gen. Daniel Butterfield, of the Army of the Potomac. Without knowing a note of music, Butterfield, assisted by his brigade bugler Oliver W. Norton, created taps as a tune signaling the end of the day's activities. They wrote the call while encamped at Harrison's Landing, Va., one night in July 1862.



"The daily ceremonies of reveille and retreat constitute a dignified homage to the national flag at the beginning of the day ... and at the end of the day," Crocker explains in his book.

Historians remind us that both ceremonies require dignity and respect to honor our nation and those who fought to protect it.

ACAP helps with easy transition

Army Career and Alumni Program

The Army Career and Alumni Program provides career guidance for soldiers transitioning out of the service. Starting early is the key for soldiers to begin thinking about what they want to do after the military.

Based on soldiers' individual needs, ACAP counselors will offer career guidance and counseling on services and programs available to them.

Soldiers should schedule individual appointments through their personnel services noncommissioned officers for their three-day retirement briefing and ACAP transition counseling prior to their expiration of term of service.

ACAP offers:

• A three-day retirement transition class within 180 days of separation that prepares military members for transition.

• A one-day "advanced course" explaining resume preparation and interviewing skills.

• The Defense Outplacement Referral System process that provides a free service to match a person's abilities to civilian employment positions by sending a mini-resume to a data base accessed by employers worldwide.

• Career Day provides an opportunity for employers to meet soldiers, provide information on job leads and interview prospective clients as needed.

• The Educational Opportunity Program provides an awareness of tuition assistance, enrollment procedures or current data on any college or university.

• The Skill Development Program is intended to provide training opportunities to soldiers, civilians and family members who transition from the Army.

• Referrals for separation benefits to include Special Separation Benefits, Voluntary Separation Incentive and retirement.

Below is a timetable for job hunting while still in the service.

Six months before separation

• Schedule through the unit PSNCO your preseparation counseling appointment at ACAP Transition Office, Building 2617, and the three-day preseparation classes conducted in Infantry Hall, Classroom 30.

• Develop an individual transition plan with the ACAP transition counselor in Building 2617 and review the mandatory "preseparation Counseling Checklist" (Department of Defense Form 2648) required for clearing post.

• Begin researching the job market. Develop a career plan, including a list of possible employers in your career field.

• Assess your job skills and interests to determine how they relate to today's job market; take a vocational interest inventory.

• Discuss with your family possible options about your career and where to live next.

Five months before separation

• Seek help if the stresses of your transition to civilian life become too much to handle.

• Contact friends in the private sector who may help you find a job.

• Begin attending job fairs.

• Develop a fall-back plan in case your first career plan falls through.

• Research specific job possibilities, job markets and the economic conditions in the geographic areas where you want to live.

• If you need additional educational or vocational training to compete in the job market, explore your options for adult education.

• Establish a financial plan "to make ends meet" during your transition to civilian life.

• If you are separating before fulfilling eight years of active service, you must satisfy your obligation by becoming a member of the Ready Reserve.

Four months before separation

• Receive your "Verification of Military Experience and Training" (DD Form 2586). For specific information call (800) 258-8638.

• Write résumé.

• If you are considering federal employment, fill out an application (Standard Form 171). Explore special federal programs and hiring opportunities for veterans.

• Visit the Relocation Assistance Program Office. If you live in government housing arrange for a preinspection and obtain termination information.

• Learn about the education benefits you can obtain under the Montgomery GI Bill.

ACAP Discusses services

Army Career and Alumni Program

Army Career and Alumni Program representatives were recently invited to discuss the variety of services available to military personnel getting out of the Army and their families through the Service Corps of Retired Executives.

Although ACAP officials were familiar with SCORE, they said they learned a great deal more about the advantages of using their "free" expertise.

SCORE is a must for anyone self-employed or for anyone thinking about it, officials said.

SCORE is sponsored by the Small Business Administration and services are free. A nonprofit organization, SCORE has more than 10,000 volunteers nationwide, providing practical advice in a full range of technical and managerial fields.

More than 300,000 small-business people receive counseling or training annually from SCORE members or SCORE workshops — more than 2 1/2 million Americans have received assistance since SCORE was established in 1964. Score has more than 750 counseling sites nationwide.

SCORE is also available for prebusiness counseling. Many new business owners are not prepared or informed enough to open their businesses, officials said. Motivation, desire and talent are not always enough.

Development of their brains, ideas, skills and experiences are all available to the small business owners.

For more information about SCORE, call the Columbus office at 596-8331 or the Small Business Administration office nearest you.

SCORE is committed to assisting personnel getting out of the military who are planning to open their own businesses.

ACAP officials said they recommend military personnel take advantage of SCORE services.

SOA samaritan returns lost goods

By Judith O'Toole
School of the Americas

It seems as if nothing good ever happens anymore. On a daily basis, the media bombards the viewers with the horrendous wrongs of the world.

The moral convictions of a civilian employee at the School of the Americas were recently put to the test when a mysterious package arrived in the mail.

Just going through the daily grind of the work week, Vilma Kyle-Lewis went to her post office box to find a small package heaped in with the rest of her mail. The box didn't have her name on it, but the box number was right, so she didn't really give it a second thought.

Kyle-Lewis went to work and opened the package. She said that she orders a lot of things from mail-order companies and sometimes they've sent her additional gifts, so she thought that was what this box was. A new and improved peel-o-matic? More like glittering gold and, oh yes, a girl's best friend — diamonds!

"I opened the box and saw all of this jewelry with some sort of price list included," Kyle-Lewis said. "But there wasn't any sort of name on it, so I took it right back to the post office."

The price list inside the box valued the nine pieces of jewelry at more than $6,000. There was no return address on the package, and it had not been certified or insured. The person at the post office remarked about her honesty and said that most people would have just kept the treasure for themselves.

Kyle-Lewis said that there was no question in her mind. The jewelry didn't belong to her, and there was no way she could or would have taken it for herself.

A couple of days later, the post office found the jewels' rightful owner, Agatha Harden. It turns out that Kyle-Lewis' Fort Benning post office box has the same number as Harden's in Columbus. And she really wanted to thank Kyle-Lewis for being so honest.

Harden sent Kyle-Lewis a thank-you card. In it, Kyle-Lewis said, Harden thanked her for returning the jewelry and said that she would like very much to thank her in person. She left a phone number and when they spoke, Harden said that she wanted to send a little something as a reward.

"She is a super lady," Harden said. "She deserves all of the credit for this. Vilma could have easily not turned in the package, and I would have been none the wiser."

Kyle-Lewis said she did not want Harden to give her anything and told her that it wasn't necessary. She was just happy that the jewels had gotten back to her.

"I'm a Christian," Kyle-Lewis said. "That's why I couldn't keep that package."

However, Kyle-Lewis received another letter from Harden. This time, the letter included a $100 check.

But she is not keeping that, either. She's giving it to her church. The money isn't for her, she said; she was just doing what was right.

"If it wasn't for my beliefs, and what I was taught in church," she said, "I wouldn't be the person that I am today."

Modestly, Kyle-Lewis said that she thinks most people in her situation wouldn't have thought twice about returning the jewelry to its rightful owner.

Prevent injuries this summer by child-proofing home

Egleston Children's Hospital

The child safety experts at Egleston Children's Hospital at Emory University in Atlanta, are encouraging young families to make sure their summer home improvement projects include child proofing.

"For children 5 years and under, more than 50 percent of unintentional injuries occur in the child's own home," said Egleston Emergency Center Nurse Maryann Johnston. National statistics show that every year, more than five million children under the age of 15 require emergency care because of serious injuries that occur in the home.

Johnston recommends parents go through each room and identify any potential hazards and make the appropriate changes.

"In the kitchen, check your cabinets and move items that need to be locked up high and kept out of your child's reach. An inexpensive lock on cabinets is essential for storing any poisonous cleansers, alcoholic beverages, knives, matches, detergents, or soaps," Johnston said.

Like the kitchen, all items in the bathroom, such as scissors, razors, cleansers, medicines and cosmetics, should be locked up out of children's reach. Each bathroom, as well as any room where water and electricity are near each other, should have a ground fault circuit interrupter. Although a circuit interrupter cannot prevent shocks, it can prevent serious injury or death. Electrical appliances should be stored on shelves or cabinets away from the tub or sink to prevent electrical shocks and burns.

Bathtubs should also undergo careful scrutiny for child safety reasons. To prevent scalds from hot water, lower the water heater thermostat to 120 degrees Fahrenheit or install an anti-scald device. Put a tub spout cover on your faucet in order to prevent head injuries and place a rubber mat or stickers on the bottom of the tub to prevent slippery falls.

"Parents should also take a good look at their furniture when childproofing their home," Johnston said. "Avoid or secure heavy furniture that is not stable and can easily be pulled down. Place corner guards on sharp corners of tables and other furniture and remove or tighten any loose knobs. And, although harmful amounts of lead have not been allowed in paint since 1978, older pieces of painted furniture or older homes may still have heavily leaded paint, especially in their undercoats. If you suspect any of the paint on your furniture or walls is older than 1980, call your local health department," Johnston said.

Phone cords, extension cords and other electrical cords are also hazardous. A child can suffer electrical burns from chewing on the cord. Throw away any old, frayed or faulty cords and place safety outlet plates over all electrical outlets.

Falls should also be considered when working on childproofing home improvement projects, according to Johnston.

"A child can fall out of a window opened just four inches, even if there is a screen," she said. "Therefore, it is especially important to install window guards for all windows above the ground floor unless they are part of your fire escape plan."

The Egleston nurse also recommends that safety gates be installed at both ends of stairs and that doors leading to balconies and decks be locked at all times if you have toddlers.

Other important home improvement projects include installing a carbon monoxide detector and a smoke detector. National statistics show that each year 200 people die from carbon monoxide poisoning. Carbon monoxide detectors should be placed in the hall outside bedrooms, as well as above any fuel burning appliances. Smoke detectors should be installed on hallway ceilings near bedrooms and on every floor of your house.

Batteries should also be checked each month and changed twice a year. New smoke detectors with a long lasting lithium battery are also available.

The garage is another area that needs to be childproofed. Lock poisonous chemicals, pesticides, cleansers, nails, screws and tools up high out of children's reach. Automatic garage door openers can also be very dangerous.

"Children who have run or played under an automatic garage door while it was closing have been trapped or killed," Johnston said. "Make sure your installed automatic garage door opener is the type that reverses when it touches any object. If it doesn't, install one that does and be sure and test the reverse feature frequently," she said.

Childproofing the outside of the home is also important. Make sure you have a chimney screen to keep hot ashes and embers from escaping and igniting the roof or nearby trees. And have the chimney cleaned every five years. Protective surfacing under any play equipment is also recommended.

Because the ground and grass are hard and don't absorb shock, at least six inches of loose fill material, like sand or wood chips, is needed to prevent injuries from falls.

"By making slight changes in and around the home, you can decrease the chances of your child being injured," Johnston said. "But, parents need to remember that even though they are taking steps to protect their child, children should never be left unattended," she said.

Parent creates piece of history for teacher

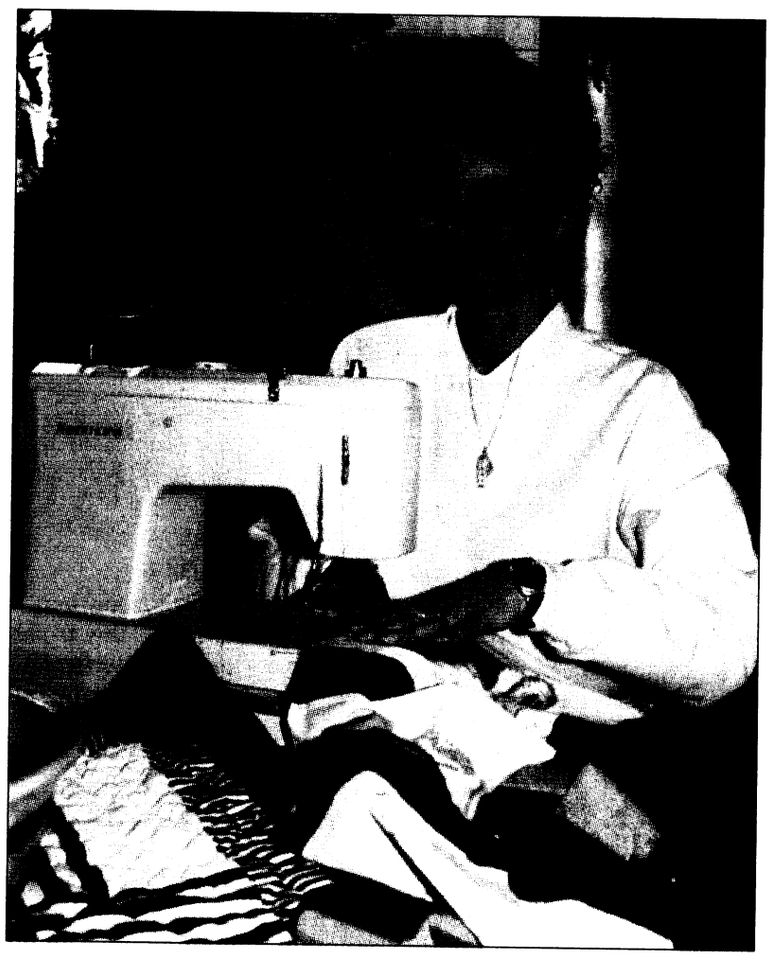
White School mother sews kindergartners faces into a quilt for end-of-year gift

By Amy Durham
Special to The Bayonet©

Children and parents often hear teachers say they'll never forget their students. One kindergarten mom has ensured her son's teacher won't.

Carolyn Phillips, kindergarten teacher at Edward A. White Elementary School, certainly will remember the 20 self-portraits sewn into a quilt Kathy Jackman, made for her son, Patrick's kindergarten class this semester as an end-of-year gift to the class.

"She (Jackman) asked if she could make a quilt for us," Phillips said, "and I told her, 'Of course.'"



The three-month process began in February, when — after Jackman read a children's book, "The Boy and the Quilt" — Phillips' 20 kindergartners, armed with fabric crayons, sat down to draw their self portraits on sandpaper. While some reflected the children's true skin and hair color, other portraits — with purple faces — displayed some children's creativity, it was an exciting project all of them, according to Phillips.

Knowing the children would be thrilled to see the work they'd done, Jackman, who began quilting about five years ago, set to work on the next phase — the long and tedious work of piecing everything together.

Jackman took great care to make every piece of the quilt reflect the kindergarten class at White School. Once the children had done their part, Jackman had to iron each sandpaper portrait onto broadcloth. She then stitched the blocks together with blue lattice, and later bordered the entire quilt with yellow material, and again with a brightly-patterned material. And when she was finished, Jackman sewed a block on the back of the quilt listing all of Phillips' kindergartners for the 1995-1996 school year.

When Jackman returned to White School May 30, the children were so excited by the quilt decorated with their faces, it seemed the children had forgotten that summer vacation was only one week away. They politely applauded Jackman for the gift and said their many thank-yous.

Jackman pieces together the 20 self portraits the five- and six-year-olds made with fabric crayons and sandpaper. The quilter used blue and yellow — school colors — to border the quilt. On the back, Jackman sewed a block containing the teacher's name and all students in Carolyn Phillips' kindergarten class at White School.

Kathy Jackman shows kindergartners the details in various kinds of quilts she has made for her family. Jackman learned the art of quilting about five years ago.

Classmates look for their work of art on the quilt Kathy Jackman made.

Surprised, Takyra Quinn, 6, said the quilt was fabulous.

"I did not know you could make a quilt like that," she said.

"You did all the work," Jackman simply replied.

"No!" the children cried. "You did all the work."

However, her classmates' excitement was shown best when they all piled on the quilt and lay there until it was time to hang the quilt — in the school hall, so as Phillips said, anyone who wants to see it, can enjoy it.

Excited about the entire project, Phillips said, "It (the quilt) exemplifies kindergarten artwork."

Good eating

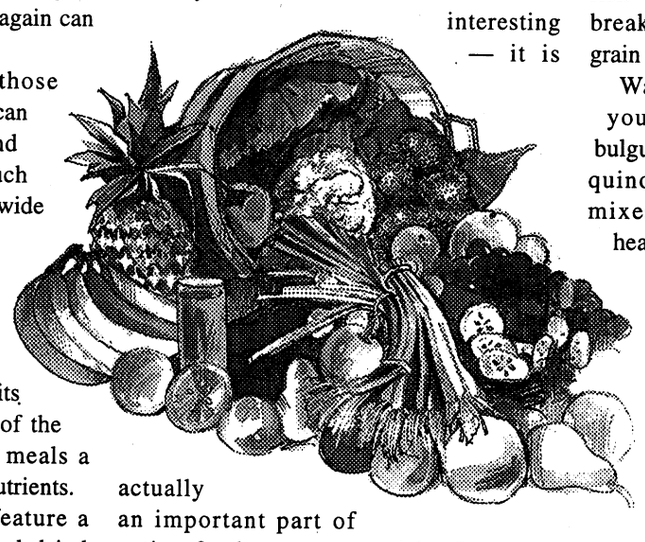
Enjoying nutritious, healthy foods is easier due to availability of better tasting varieties

American Institute for Cancer Research

Remember when "health food" meant plain brown rice and sprouts? Or when you had to go to a "health food store" to get anything with wheat bran?

Thank goodness, healthy foods are no longer bland and hard to find, as supermarkets now routinely offer hundreds of appealing foods that fit easily into a nutritious diet.

The variety of health-conscious food products is expanding rapidly. The list includes better-tasting vegetarian and soy items, including low-fat replicas of burgers, bacon, sausage, hot dogs; international and organic fruits and vegetables that offer a whole spectrum of different tastes, colors and textures; and reduced-fat and non-fat versions of nearly any dairy product. All this variety makes it easier than ever to eat for lower cancer risk while enjoying every bite.



If you're trying to eat the minimum five daily servings of fruits and vegetables that health authorities recommend, sticking to the same old foods over and over again can get pretty tiresome.

But you'll find those recommendations from the American Institute for Cancer Research and the National Cancer Institute much easier to follow if you explore the wide world of fresh produce.

Chayotes, jicamas, jerusalem artichokes and arugula are now stocked next to the iceberg lettuce at many supermarkets. Guavas, mangos, papayas, star fruits and passion fruits are just a few of the exotic fruits that can give your meals a sunny new taste along with extra nutrients.

International food sections feature a range of legumes like canned and dried beans, peas and lentils that are excellent non-fat sources of fiber, protein and other nutrients.

Eating a variety of fruits, vegetables, legumes and whole grains not only keeps healthy meals interesting — it is actually an important part of eating for lower cancer risk. Research shows that different types of these foods contain different cancer-fighting substances.

There was a time when people who ate high-fiber cereals for lower colon cancer risk were teased about "eating twigs" for breakfast. But now there are fiber-rich grain products of all kinds to choose from.

Walk down the pasta or bread aisles, and you may see whole-wheat spaghetti, bulgur, couscous, basmati rice, barley and quinoa —as well as pre-blended grain mixes and quick-cooking versions of healthy grains like brown rice. Whole-wheat and soy flours are available to boost fiber and nutrients in baked goods, while all kinds of delicious whole-grain cereals and breads are now standard.

In the dairy section, everything from sour cream and yogurt to cream cheese and ricotta cheese is available in low- or non-fat versions. Food companies are continually producing better low-fat cheeses, which at first received bad reviews for taste and didn't melt very well, but are now much improved.

A wider variety of low-fat cheeses and margarines is also available, and nutritious soy milk and tofu — once unheard of in regular supermarkets — are now more widely available.

Public demand for soy foods is growing because of their possible cancer-fighting benefits and use as protein-rich alternatives to meat and dairy foods.

Celebrate National Nutrition Month by exploring the new world of delicious wholesome foods supermarkets now offer. Try adding different fruits, vegetables and grains to your meals each week as a way to eat with pleasure while following the American Institute for Cancer Research's advice to eat a low-fat, high-fiber diet.

For a copy of the free recipe brochure "Fruits, Vegetables and a Healthier You," send a stamped (55 cents postage), self-addressed No. 10 or business-size envelope to the American Institute for Cancer Research, Department AP, Washington, D.C. 20069.

Cooking with fat-free flavors can improve taste of meals

American Institute for Cancer Research

Tired of the same old tuna salad at lunch and the usual chicken breast for dinner? If you crave something with more pizzazz once in a while, don't just head for the nearest high-fat, take-out food. Instead, let some fat-free herbs, seasonings and condiments come to the rescue.

There's a wide range of deliciously different tastes that can make simple, healthy foods into satisfying everyday meals that have variety. They can make eating nutritious vegetables, grains and fruits a satisfying experience, so that it's easy to eat a healthy diet that lowers your cancer risk, as recommended by the American Institute for Cancer Research.

Start with the spice rack. In addition to milder green herbs like dill, basil, thyme and sage, try some that are a little more pungent, such as cumin and coriander (delicious added to cooking liquids, tomato-based sauces and vegetable soups). Pre-mixed spices that add zip include lemon pepper, barbecue spice (delicious in non-meat dishes like bean chili) and curry powder (a small dash can give soups like tomato or green pea a taste-lift without a strong curry taste).

Everyone knows lemon juice goes well with fish, but other kinds of juice can also add flavor. Try poaching your fillet in orange or tomato juice with some dill and chili powder. Lime juice is another possibility. Combined with ginger and pepper, it makes a piquant fat-free marinade or cooking liquid for fish or skinless chicken. Apple or cranberry juices are delicious for basting poultry or lean pork and grapefruit juice perks up any salad.

Mustard often gets used only for hotdogs, but a turkey breast flavored with a few dabs of spicy brown mustard is sensational. Mustard comes in many varieties, and is delicious mixed with nonfat yogurt, vinegar or lemon juice, minced garlic, a bit of honey and herbs for a salad dressing or dipping sauce for vegetables. It can flavor fish, skinless chicken or lean meat.

Vinegars come in all flavors these days, including tarragon, raspberry, mango and garlic. Mix them with some tomato or orange juice for a fat-free salad dressing. A teaspoon of cider vinegar gives a pot of chili just the right flair or nicely sharpens the taste of beef stew. Robust balsamic vinegar gives a tangy taste to salad greens, and an elegant contrast to sweet fresh fruit.

Other fat-free flavorings to keep on hand are salsa, picante sauce, soy sauce, teriyaki sauce, Worcestershire sauce, chili sauce, pepper sauces, cooking sherry, pickle relish, chutney, low-fat broth, bouillon cubes and stewed tomatoes. If you're in the mood to explore, Latin and Asian food markets have wonderful spices and condiments that are reasonably priced.

Father's teach family values

Steve Bounds
Infantry Training Brigade

reflections

We will celebrate Father's Day Sunday. It is a special day on which we remember our fathers and let them know how much we appreciate them.

As I write this article my heart and mind are filled with great concern. In just a few days I'll drive home to be with my father as he enters the hospital for surgery.

He is 74 years old. Although he has been in good health until now, I know that he will not always be around. My mind goes back to an earlier time when we were both much younger. I do treasure those precious memories. Please allow me to share some of those memories with you.

He was a great father who always tried to spend time with me. When I was a small child, I was never afraid of anything while my dad was around. I thought he could do anything.

We would play and wrestle on the floor and sometimes put on boxing gloves to spar. He would usually let me get the best of him to keep it fun and build up my self confidence. That self confidence would later be the undoing of more than one school-yard bully.

We would play catch with a baseball or football. There were also camping, hunting and fishing trips to remember. He would always lecture me on the importance of safety during these potentially dangerous activities.

Sometimes we would just sit around the house laughing and joking.

My dad also taught me to have strong moral values as well. First, he led by his example. He never sent me to church but took me every Sunday. He didn't leave his Christianity at the church but lived it throughout the week. Perhaps the most important lesson that he taught me was to love and trust God and his holy word. Dad also taught me to always do the right thing and to respect authority — much to the relief of my teachers in school. He taught me to keep my word and finish whatever I started. When I asked him for an allowance, he gave me a lawn mower and told me that I could have all the allowance I wanted if I mowed the neighbors' yards.

Whenever I did wrong, I could always count on receiving his chastisement. He was always firm, fair and consistent. He never lost his self control to anger. He never left a bruise or mark on my body from excessive force. He always let me know that he loved me. He's the greatest father anyone could ever have. We can all learn from his example.

One of the most impressive TV commercials that I have ever seen taught a valuable lesson about being a father. It showed a man baby-sitting his two small children. He changed their diapers and played with them. They climbed on him as he tried to relax. He very lovingly and patiently cared for his children. At the end the narrator made this powerful statement: "Anybody can make a baby, but it takes a real man to be a dad." We need for more real men to be real dads.

Although most of my comments have been addressed to fathers, let's all learn from these examples.

Let's all be loving and patient moms and dads. We want to prepare our children to be responsible adults with high moral character. Let's always be firm, fair and consistent with them. Let's lead them by our examples. Above all else, let them know that we always love them no matter what. Let's treasure those precious moments of quality family time. Remember to share joys of family life while our children are still with us. All too soon they'll be gone.

Wrestlers make Olympic squad

By John W. Peeler
Special to The Bayonet©

On July 20 at the World Congress Center in Atlanta, Ga., more than 190 athletes will gather to begin wrestling on a raised platform for a place in history and Olympic medals.

Army wrestlers Derrick Waldroup and Rodney Smith are hoping this is the year where their names will be placed in the annals of wrestling history alongside Carl Schumann, the first Gold medalalist in the inaugural modern Olympic Games and Ivar Johansson of Sweden, the first wrestler to win a Gold medal in both freestyle and greco-roman styles at the same Olympic Games.

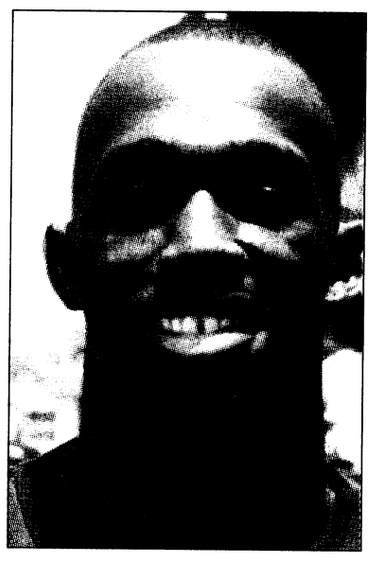
Wrestling, a primitive and ancient form of combat has also been an organized sport with wrestling events dating back to the Nile Valley in 3400 B.C.

Wrestling was first included in the 1896 Olympic Games in Athens. Both Freestyle Wrestling and Greco-Roman Wrestling became Olympic medal events in 1920.

Today, Freestyle Wrestling and Greco-Roman Wrestling are the only two styles of wrestling permitted in the Olympic Games.

To make the Olympic team both Waldroup and Smith had to face familiar competition.

Prior to the nationals, Randy Couture and Michael Foy, a two-time Olympian, held national rankings above Waldroup, a four-time U.S. Nationals champion.



Waldroup defeated Foy in the Olympic trials. Foy pinned Couture in the Nationals.

Waldroup is considered by many in the wrestling world to be one of the greatest military wrestlers of all time.

"It is a great complement to be considered as one of the best," Waldroup said.

"Without a doubt, he (Waldroup) is the greatest wrestler we (Army) have ever had," wrestling coach Anthony Thomas said.

Waldroup said his biggest challenge to winning a Gold medal would be "to relax and not just worry about one particular person."

Waldroup

Smith

Internationally, Waldroup may have to face the likes of Hakki Baser of Turkey, Gogi Koguachvili of Russia and Germany's Maik Bullman.

Baser appears to have the momentum going to the Olympics after winning the 1995 World Championship. But two past world champions will also be in Atlanta. Koguachvili was the World title holder in 1993 and 1994 and is looking to regain his title in international competition as is Bullman who dominated the sport for four years, winning the world Gold medals from 1989-92, and adding a Silver in 1993 and a bronze in 1994.

Smith, a Bronze medalist in the 1992 Olympics, says he considers himself the old-timer on the team.

"Derrick (Waldroup) and I are the most experienced on the team but this will be his first time at the Olympics," Smith said.

Smith took first place in both the Nationals and Olympic trials and said he is ready to win the Gold this year.

Some of Smith's top competition may be Islam Doguchiev of Russia who has been the most dominate wrestler at 149.5 pound for several seasons, capturing four world titles (1990-1991, 1993-1994) and the 1992 Olympic Silver medal during his reign. However, Doguchiev slipped to 10th position at last year's world meet allowing Rustm Adzhy of Ukraine to grab the title.

Another candidate who may walk away with an Olympic medal is the consistent French wrestler Ghani Yalouz, who was the Silver medalists at the 1994 World Championship and third in 1993. Also in this year's Olympic field hoping to make an impression is the 1988 Olympic Champion and 1989 World Champion at 136.5 pounds Kamandar Madijidov of Belarus.

"I have faced these wrestlers before and feel confident I can come home with aGold medal," Smith said.

Smith also said he felt teammate Waldroup would definitely bring home the gold.

Army teammate Keith Sieracki credits both Waldroup and Smith, along with Thomas, for his success in the wrestling program.

Sieracki made the Olympic team as an alternate in the 163-pound class.

Other Army wrestlers making the Olympic team as alternates were Jeffrey Green, 286-pound class, and Shon Lewis, 136.5-pound class.

AUSA conducts golf tournament

By John W. Peeler
Special to The Bayonet©

Bad weather seemed to be the order of the day, as rain once again threatened the golfing aspirations of golfers from around post. This time it was during the Non-commissiond Officers Association golf tournament conducted Saturday at the Follow Me golf course.

For the second straight month, rainy weather set in as golfers from around post gathered to test their skills against each other.

The rain delayed tee time for about 30 minutes and held off until after the awards ceremony had been completed at the end of the tournament.

In first flight action, the team of Jessie Bass, Willie Watkins, Jerome Humphries and George Galloway walked away with the first-place award shooting a 54 on the Lakeside course with the team of John Middleton, Willie Lewis, Eddie Gunn and Darryl finishing second with a 59.

The team of Jon Blossom, Doug Greenway, Leo Fowler and Bill Powell rounded out the competition in the first flight finishing in third.

The second flight saw the team of post commander John W. Hendrix, Scott Armbrister, Willie Wellsand and P.J. Fuller take the first-place award with a team score of 59.

"This is the first time the CG has walked away as part of a team with something to show for their efforts," said resident golf pro George Cliff.

"He has won here before, but not as part of a team."

Second place in the flight went to the team of Roy McCage, Mark Mills, Harry Holloway and Howard Miller with a final score of 62.

Special awards were given to Robert Fowler, Jon Blossom, Roy McCage and Willie Watkins for bing closest to the hole with the longest drive award going to John Sego.

The next tournament to be conducted at the Follow Me course will be the Annual Purple and Gold Golf Tournament June 29.

The next monthly tournament will be the Holiday Tournament July 4.

For more information on the upcoming tournament, call George Cliff at 687-1940.

USAMU prepares to defend national titles

USAMU Public Affairs Office

The U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit Service Rifle Team is gaining momentum toward the 1996 Interservice and National Championships with winning results in four states.

Barry L. Coleman is this year's winner of the Georgia State Service Rifle Championship, winning the coveted Glenn Nelson Eagle Trophy. Teammates Kevin McMahon and Tobie L. Tomlinson took second and third. The AMU team of Scott A. Boyd, McMahon, Tomlinson and Coleman, coached by Charles W. Hearlth Jr., won the team match making a clean sweep of the State Championship.

In Oak Ridge, Tenn., Charles E. Coffey won the 200-yard rapid fire and the long-range, any rifle, any sight match. Teammate John O. Chubb was second.

At Camp Perry, Ohio, the winds blew, but that did not stop Rand Bentson from winning the rapid fire aggregate.

Just a week before, USAMU Service Rifle Team Membe[illegible] swept the Quantico Monthly Team match with first, second, and third place finishes on the Marine Corps home range.

This is just the beginning of what is expected to be another record setting year, according to Carl O. Dooley. The team is motivated and ready to defend there 1995 titles, he said.

Shooting the modified M-16A2, the Service Rifle Team captured the 1995 Interservice 10-Man Team Championship match, shutting out all the other military services. This competition, which is conducted annually at the Quantico Marine Corps Base in Virginia, is a time for all the military services to bring together their top guns for more than a week of grueling competition to see who is the best..

Members of the 1995 Championship Interservice 10-Man Team that won the competition included line coach Richard Remily and team members Kenneth Gill, Steven Armstrong, Lewis Tippie, Grant Singley, Norman Anderson, Bentson, Boyd, McMahon and Coleman. Service Rifle Team head coach Frank Briggs sai[illegible] it took a lot of hard work for the team to succeed.

The service Rifle Team also swept the competition at the 1995 National Matches at Camp Perry with the modified M-16A2. The team, coached by Remily and team captain Dooley, shot 2,951 points out of a possible 3,000 with 133 bull eyes — a new nationals record for the competition. Remily says that win brought the Army shooters the respect they deserved.

In the Infantry Trophy Match, the USAMU team coached by Dooley placed first, followed by the USAMU team coached by Remily whose score was only 6 points behind the winner; the third place was more than 200 points behind.

USAMU shooters also won the Enlisted Men's Trophy Team match, the President's Rifle match and the Individual Service Rifle Championship. Chubb not only beat 1.221 competitors win the 1995 President's Trophy, but he also broke the match record — a record which was set in 1976 — with a score of 298 out of a possible 300 points. For his efforts, Chubb also received a letter of congratulations fr[illegible] m President Bill Clinton.

Tomlinson defeated hundreds of competitors to win the 1995 National Service Rifle Individual Championship, and McMahon placed second, only 1 point behind Tomlinson.

Tippie won the national long-range service rifle event with a new national record aggregate score for which he was awarded the Atkins Trophy; he shot 200 points out of a possible 200 with 16" bull's eye out of a possible 20 at the 600-yard Army match during the interservice match, which tied a 1973 record.

In 1995, the USAMU team finished first in a number of matches comprising the National Championship, is which more than 1,200 shooters competed; the competitors were the best shooters from the Army, Marine Corps, Navy, Air Force, Coast Guard, Reserves and civilian shooters.

The USAMU Service Rifle Team will defend its titles at the 1996 Interservice Championships at Quantico July 17 to 23 and the 1996 National Matches at Camp Perry July 30 to Aug. 11.

New athletes take track and field winners' stand

American Forces Press Service

The services honored 16 new champions at the 1996 men's armed forces track and field championships, held May 22 and 23 at Santa Barbara (Calif.) Community College.

Of 18 individual events, only two defending champions repeated their 1995 performances.

Among the new faces in the winner's circle this year was Air Force's Matt Zuber, who claimed five medals. Zuber, assigned to the U.S. Air Force Academy in Colorado Springs, Colo., captured two gold, a silver and two bronze medals. Four were in field events.

Zuber's victories came in 110-meter high hurdles and the long jump. In the hurdles, Zuber edged Marine Corps Adrian Bean by nearly a second, recording a 14.27 time. He then beat Navy's Tony Walton by leaping 7.65 meters (25.24 feet) for the long jump gold. Zuber finished second in the Javelin and grabbed third in the pole vault and high jump.

Zuber's dominance in the field events carried over to his teammates. Air Force athletes captured 11 of the 24 field medals. Rich Lewis gave Air Force a 1-2 finish in the discus with a toss of 52.12 meters (171.9 feet). Jason Anderson fed a 1-2-3 Air Force sweep in the hammer throw, recording a winning toss of 53.72 meters (177.3 feet).

Gabriel Booker captured the Marines' only gold medal, winning the shot put with a 16.3-meter (53.8 feet) toss. Navy's Drew Orsinger's 5.2-meter (17.2 foot) vault gave him the pole vault title.

Army's Dionicio Napier and Cordon Sanders successfully defended their titles. Napier, the 1995 armed forces athlete of the year, retained his 200-meter title with a 20.79-second effort. He added a second gold medal in the 400 meters (40.20) and earned a third in the 1,600 relay.

Sanders captured his second straight 10,000-meter title, recording a 29:33:1 time in cruising to a nine-second win over Army teammate Sam Natagia. Sanders also repeated his 1995 Bronze medal performance, taking third in the 5,000.

Army athletes captured three field events. The javelin title went to Marco Montoya with a winning toss of 62.05 meters (204.8 feet). Charles Swindell leaped 15.02 meters (49.6 feet) in winning the triple jump, and Joel Mitre claimed the high jump title with a leap of 2.08 meters (6.8 feet).

While Air Force dominated the field events, Army controlled the track, winning nine of the 12 events. Besides the victories by Sanders and Napier, four other Army athletes earned individual titles.

With Napier on the sidelines, Bryant Williams captured the 100 meters, beating Navy's Michael Jefferson. Williams, who recorded a 10.61 in winning the 100, also grabbed silver in the 200.

Army took first and second in the 3,000-meter steeplechase, with Christopher Rizzo beating Nagatia for the gold medal. Army's Michael Bernstein earned the 5,000-meter gold medal, recording a 14:13.67 in beating Navy's Mark Gilmore. Bernstein also earned a bronze in the 1,500.

In the 400-meter intermediate hurdles, Ronald Murray's 53:02 edged teammate Brandon Davis for the Gold medal.

Air Force grabbed the other three track titles. Besides Zuber's win in the 110-meter hurdles, Nick McFalls captured the 1,500 and Doug Sersun won the 800 meters.

McFalls beat teammate and defending champion Michael Michno for the 1,500 title with a 3:46.56. Michno took the silver. Meanwhile, Sersun had little problem beating defending 800-meter champion Francisco Gonzalez of Army.

In the relays, Army defended both 400- and 1,600-meter events. The team of Williams, Swindell, Brett Leonard and Benjamin Cureton took the 400 title, clocking a 41.35 time. Navy took second, followed by the Marines.

Napier, Cureton, William Davis and David Texada gave Army the 1600 title. The foursome completed the relay in 3:13.33, edging Air Force by only four-tenths of a second. Marines took third.

In the team competition, Army repeated as service champion. Army recorded 84 points; Air Force (50) took second, followed by Navy (26) and Marines (20). The Naval Construction Battalion Center at Port Hueneme, Calif., hosted the 1996 competition.

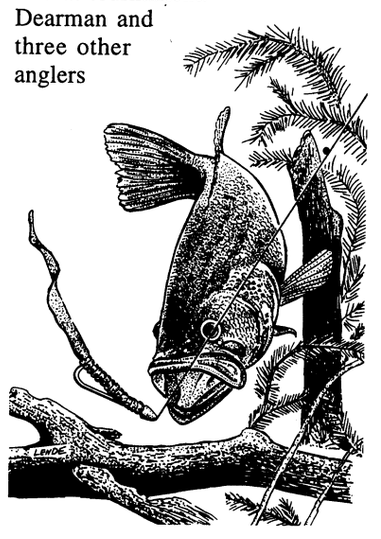
Sam Rayburn , great place to catch trophy bass

By Earl Bentz and Steve Price
Outboard Marine Corporation



Professional bass angler Randy Dearman has fished all over America for the past two decades, but the lake he likes best is right in his backyard. It's the 114,000 acre Sam Rayburn Reservoir near Jasper, Texas.

"I don't think there can be any doubt Sam Rayburn is one of the most productive impoundments in the United States," said Dearman, a veteran fishing guide.

"During a recent two-day national bass tournament on Rayburn, 324 fishermen weighed in more than 5,800 pounds of fish," he said. "Included in that total were one bass over 12 pounds, another over 11 pounds, and two more over 10 pounds. And in practice, a 13 pounder was caught.

"Tournament fishermen aren't known for weighing in big bass because of the style of fishing we normally employ, so I think those bass show just how dynamic this fishery really is," Dearman said.

The numbers become even more impressive when one considers Dearman's own fourth-place finish in that tournament. Dearman and three other anglers caught nearly 125 pounds of fish from a single cove during the two days.

"In this particular tournament the catch was really high because the lake is about eight feet low and we located the bass in big schools as they were staging to come shallow to spawn, but Rayburn has actually been producing catches like that for years," he said.

"The lake record stands at more than 15 pounds now, and many fishermen thought it would be broken during our tournament," he said. "It might have been if we had fished three days instead of just two. Because one day was cancelled due to the high winds, our total catch was actually much lower than it would have been," said Dearman.

Rayburn's success as a bass fishery is usually attributed to the hydrilla, which grows in the shallow water throughout much of the lake. The vegetation provides ideal nursery conditions for small bass, providing them a safe haven from predators as well as a place to find a ready food supply, since baitfish also inhabit the hydrilla.

"The lake also has an amazing amount of structure, such as creek channels, points, underwater islands, and standing timber," said Dearman. "Rayburn is large enough so anglers can spread out. If you go to one spot and find someone else already there, you can easily go to another area that's probably just as good."

Tricare expansion includes post

American Forces Press Service

WASHINGTON — The Tricare managed health care plan for service members and their families and military retirees isn't gathering moss.

Implementation began last year and in July, Tricare arrives in South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Mississippi, Tennessee and the eastern third of Louisiana.

Early next year, the plan is scheduled for Montana, most of Idaho, Wyoming, Utah, Colorado, the Dakotas, Nebraska, Kansas, Minnesota, Iowa, Missouri, Nevada, Arizona, New Mexico and the western corner of Texas including El Paso.

Tricare should reach the remaining states — from Wisconsin and Illinois east, and from Kentucky and North Carolina north, including the District of Columbia, by August 1997. Alaska remains under CHAMPUS rules.

Overseas versions of Tricare — for Europe and the Pacific beyond Hawaii — also are in the works, with the European plan slated for implementation this year.

Tricare information is available at the assistant secretary of defense for health affairs web site: http:/www. ha. osd. mil/.

For more information about Tricare, attend one of the briefings in Building 4. Call the health benefits advisors at 544-3461.

Montgomery gave blood during the blood drive at Infantry Hall June 14. Deitra Russell, the coordinator for the blood drive said 77 units of blood were drawn during the day. It goes to Atlanta for processing and then will be distributed in the community as needed. During the summer months, donations are down and the need is up due to accidents and natural disasters. The next blood drive in Infantry Hall will be in August.

Sacrifice Field honors fallen soldiers

By Jacqué Hill
Special to the Bayonet©

Sacrifice Field was dedicated June 14 in honor of soldiers with ties to Fort Benning, who died in the line of duty in war and peace.

The field is located directly in front of the National Infantry Museum.

Three of the soldiers honored, Capt. William Black, 1st Sgt. Glenn Harris and Capt. Patrick McKenna died while on active duty, while retired Maj. Wayne Wiley was performing civilian work at a military training center when he was killed.

"We thank them for their dedication and commitment," said Brig. Gen. Robert T. Clark, deputy commanding general and assistant commandant U.S. Army Infantry School, who hosted the dedication ceremony. "We thank them for their love of country."

Black was born in Newbern, Tenn., in April 1942. After receiving his commission at the U.S. Military Academy in 1964, he established strong ties with Fort Benning, as an infantry officer, through his work with the Rangers.

He was killed in 1969 in the Republic of Vietnam where he was serving as the commander of Company A, 2nd Battalion, 12th Cavalry Regiment, 1st Cavalry Division.

Black's wife, Anne, and his son, Geoff, attended the ceremony honoring their lost loved one.

"It is a great honor," said Anne Black of Sacrifice Field being partially dedicated to her husband. Geoff Black, who was only 18 months old when his father died, believes the dedication was deserved.

"It was a good honor for the sacrifice that was made," he said. "It's been a long time coming. I'm glad it's finally here."

Harris, who was born in Montgomery, Ala., Dec. 2, 1959 and earned an associate's degree from Troy State University.

He was serving with Company B, 3rd Ranger Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment, in December, 1994, when he was killed in an accident during a routine training exercise.

McKenna was born March 21, 1967, not in Georgia, but spent a lot of his childhood in the area and went to school in Columbus. After graduating from Columbus High School, he attended the Citadel and was a part of the class of 1989.

He was piloting a helicopter in a no-fly zone over northern Iraq when his craft was accidentally shot down by the U.S. Air Force.

Wiley, born Feb. 3, 1940, in Hennepin, Minn., was killed in the latter part of 1995 during a bombing at a U.S.-run military training center in Saudi Arabia.

Before his retirement from the military, Wiley worked at Fort Benning's Directorate of Combat Development.

Top infantrymen receive Doughboy award

By Lisa M. Hibbert
Bayonet staff writer

The 1996 Doughboy award marks the first time the award was presented to two infantrymen and the first time an enlisted soldier was a recipient.

Retired Gen. James J. Lindsay and retired Command Sgt. Maj. Theodore L. Dobol were presented with the Doughboy award and the Gold Order of Saint Maurice, by the National Infantrymen's Association at the Infantry Ball June 14.

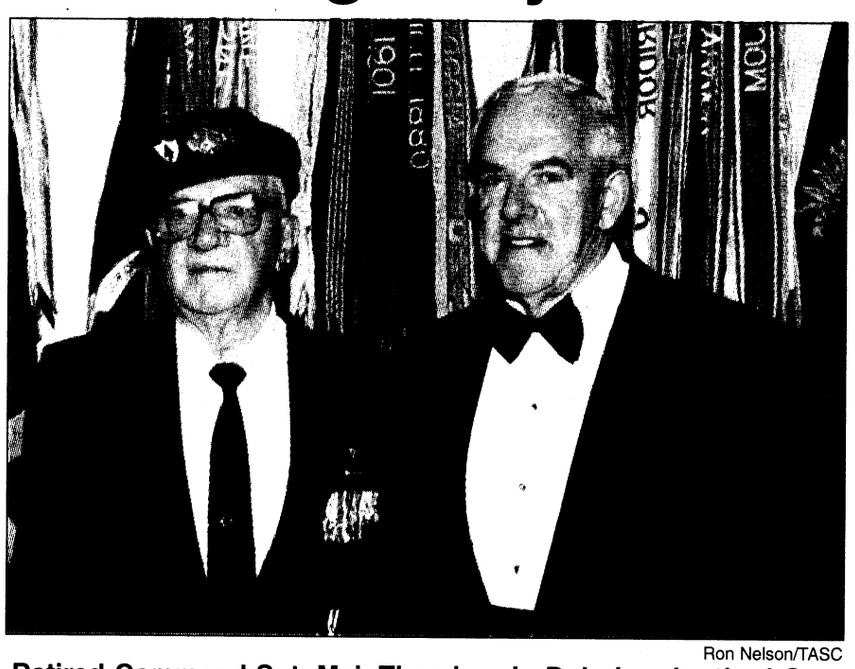
Brig. Gen. Robert T. Clark, deputy commander, introduced the honorees and spoke of Lindsay.

"I've encountered Gen. Lindsay on several occasions," Clark said. "He is the epitome of the infantry leader, a soldier's soldier who always lead by example and wasn't afraid to get his boots dirty."

Lindsay, former commanding general of Fort Benning, the 82nd Airborne Division, and former commander in chief of the U.S. Special Operations Command, McDill Air Force Base, Fla., told the audience how honored he was to be part of the ceremony honoring Dobol.

"I think its about time that we chose to honor one our senior enlisted soldiers," Lindsay said. "This is a wonderful recognition of the fact that noncommissioned officer's are the backbone of the Army."

Lindsay spoke of how important the NCO corps is and how this should not be taken for granted.



"NCO's set the standard for this great Army and if you don't believe that, just talk to any foreign officer or dignitary who visits your unit," Lindsay said. "I asked several 'what is the single, most impressive thing about our Army' and 99 percent said our NCO Corps."

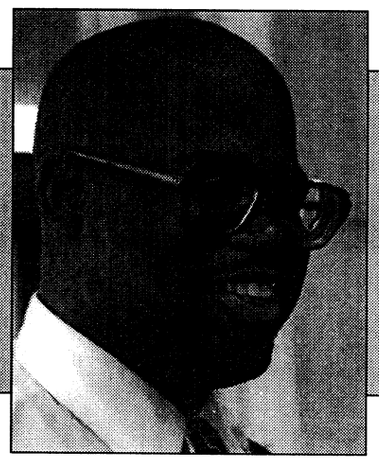
Lindsay's awards and decorations include the Distinguished Service Cross, the Army's second highest award for valor, the Distinguished Service Medal, four Silver Stars, the Legion of Merit and four awards of the Bronze Star with "V" Device.

Dobol, one of the first NCO's to be promoted to the rank of Command Sergeant Major, gave advice for being a good NCO.

"Lead the men and take care of them," Dobol said. "The most important job of an NCO is to take care of the young soldier. Be loyal to your unit and your leaders. Do not look for any rewards unless someone has set something aside specifically for you. Just carry out your duties."

"Dobol had such a distinguished career," said Command Sgt. Maj. George E. Conrad, post command sergeant major. I thought it was very appropriate that Dobol was the first enlisted solder to receive the Doughboy.

Ron Nelson/TASC



Retired Command Sgt. Maj. Theodore L. Dobol and retired Gen. James J. Lindsey are the 1996 Doughboy award recipients.

Dobol, who served in the 26th Infantry Regiment for 25 years, participated in campaigns in North Africa, Sicily, France, Belgium, Germany and Czechoslovakia, earned four Silver Stars, five Purple Hearts, and eight battle stars on his campaign medal, among other awards and decorations.

Also honored was, retired Col. Steven Meade, who received the Gold Order of Saint Maurice as the oldest Infantrymen attending the ball.

Daughter's high hopes of being good parent stem from her father's love

By Lisa M. Hibbert
Bayonet staff writer

Every father's day I always reflect on how lucky I am to have a dad like mine.

My dad always taught me that once you learn the basics, you can do anything. Well, my dad mastered the basics of Parenting 101 and I can only hope to be half as good.

When I was in kindergarten and my dad would pick me up in the afternoons, I would drop everything when my dad came into the room. He never let me fall as I did a Peter Pan leap into his ready hug.

I remember going on road trips with my family and listening to my dad's contagious laughter when he would entertain me and my sister with his stand up comedy routine and laugh harder at the jokes than we did. Sometimes, his laughter was so infectious that we had to laugh even if we didn't want to — his laugh made us laugh.

Music always filled our house. My Jamaican father had me and my sister listening to reggae music long before it became popular in this country. I remember the weddings my family attended and my dad would dance and dance to the Caribbean sounds, never working up a sweat.

My dad was the chef in our house. When my friends would come over around meal times, my dad would always make them eat with us. It never mattered if they told him they weren't hungry. My dad made a plate anyway. Funny, I can't remember my friends ever leaving those plates full and they always did drop in at dinner time.

He was also the family photographer. Everything was a photo opportunity when my father was around. My sister and I still joke about standing with the sun in our eyes for what seemed like hours while our father clicked away.

I remember when I was sick and my dad would give me some warm overproof rum with honey and lemon — no water. Heavy on the rum of course. Ya gotta love those home remedies! It's a wonder I survived that.

When I was going through my growing pains, my parents would chastise me about staying out late. My mother would yell and get mad at me which made me rebellious, but my father would talk to me so nicely that I felt guilty and I would make a real effort to stop whatever bad thing I was doing.

"Lisa, why do you stay out late? You know I can't go to sleep until I know you're safe so, don't do that anymore, okay?"

I've already decided that I'm going to use my father's method on my son when he gets older. It's much more effective.

I remember when I went away to school. My dad drove the whole eight hour trip, took all of my stuff to my room, made sure I was fed and settled in, turned around and drove back home and then went to sleep.

My son's father was so nervous about meeting my dad for the first time. I kept telling him that my dad was cool, but he didn't believe me. When they did meet, the first thing my dad did was crack a joke and offer him some food. Needless to say, my son's father was an instant convert to the Mr. Hibbert fan club.

Lisa Hibbert said she realizes how lucky she is to have a father like hers and wishes everybody could.

commentary

Even when I procrastinated on a hotel reservation for him when I graduated from college and the only hotel available was this seedy place that also rented rooms by the hour, he smiled at me and told me the room was okay and that he still loved me.

When I had my son, my father drove 16 hours without stopping for anything but food and gas and still insisted on getting up for the 4 a.m. feeding so that I could get some sleep.

My dad would always say to me, "Aren't you lucky, don't you wish everybody could."

I would always say "could what Daddy?" and he would relate it to whatever the situation was at the time.

Now I understand. Yes I am lucky. Yes, I do wish everybody could have a dad as great as mine!

Technology: Human responsibilities fading from minds into memory chips

By Rakim Sunra Ali
Paraglide, Fort Bragg, NC

commentary

As the computer language of "O's" and "I's" works its way into more and more facets of modern life, the responsibilities that once set a precedent as being unique to humanity alone are fading from our minds and into the memory chips of our mechanized counterparts.

How often do you wake up without the use of an alarm clock? Cars have the ability to speak when we exit without turning the headlights off. And cashiers at participating restaurants need only to identify a picture of the item requested in order to charge a customer. No longer are basic mathematics required to complete sales.

So, while lasers have "modernized" surgical techniques, the question arises, how much of today's technology is actually to our benefit? Is today's society a product of "convenient intellect?"

Whatever the case, there is no denying the fact that invention has become an ideology perhaps second only to the creation of mankind and the universe he lives in.

With machines that create other machines and the decreasing language barrier between mankind and some of the more intelligible species who share this earth of ours, maybe it is safe to say that no matter what our fate may be, technically, we are not destined to share it alone.

Virtual reality is used for both research and entertainment. Virtual reality means something which is "virtually" or "almost" real. Within this realm of fantasy, science has made it possible to transpose our reality into a seemingly boundless existence. The military uses it for combat simulation. Service members can experience the intensity of various forms of battle from within a controlled environment. Law enforcement agencies can recreate crime scenes. Officers have the ability to draw conclusions from clues organized by computers. Countless numbers of other professionals can now take advantage of the benefits virtual reality provides to further themselves in their fields.

But is it too good to be true? There must be some give and take. Hardly anything comes to us easily and without responsibilities. There is a perspective danger, as is normally true when dealing with something new. Hidden within the shadows of opportunity, there lingers the possibility of misuse and addiction. Are we, or can we become, strong enough as a whole to govern our advancements?

The media is one of the more influential forces in the country. And with the power to reach most everyone, it states its opinions for and against the extreme use of some of today's technologies. Newscasts, documentaries and commercials reflect the attraction (and sometimes the ugliness) of the ever-growing computer industry. Computer generation has also found a home in holiday special. It can be confirmed that Christmas, Easter and Thanksgiving all share the newest in three dimensional characters, as well as some of the more traditional styles and formats.

For quite some time, the movie industry has granted itself a head start by relaying its views on potential misuse of certain technologies. Movies such as "Strange Days" and "War Games" are meant to strike a blow to our sensibility.

Even in such "high-tech" times, some are content to simply live while others place great importance on contributions to advancement. We climb to new heights in a race with ourselves, striving for attribution. And, as the finish line may not be clearly in sight, perhaps we can still hold dear in remembrance the starting point from which the race has escalated.

letter

President thanks people for their dedication, committment to local chapter of the AUSA

Because of dedication, hard work and commitment of many, the Chattahoochee Valley - Fort Benning Chapter Association of the U.S. Army has had a very good year.

It has been a great honor for me to be exposed to the people who make Fort Benning the best Army installation in the world, and who give so generously to make our AUSA chapter a success. All of our events over the past 12 months, including the Fish Fry, Golf Tournaments, Fort Benning Day at the Buick Challenge and, especially, Military Appreciation Week, have been wonderfully successful. We have exceeded our membership goals and should be well positioned for significant recognition at the National Meeting in Washington, D.C.

I am very thankful to have been surrounded this year by people who are dedicated not only to the mission of the Army and to the support of soldiers and their families, but to the importance of the relationship between the civilian community, including our government and strong Army.

That is the role of AUSA and we are challenged to build on our success, and to live up to the important role we have in serving both the Army and our country.

— Steve Butler
President, Chattahoochee Valley - Fort Benning Chapter AUSA

Military to help Olympic effort

By Stephen Barrett
American Forces Press Service

Vice President Al Gore said the federal government must do its part to make the 1996 Summer Olympics in Atlanta successful. He said the support will come from numerous federal agencies, including the U.S. military.

In a recent press conference, Gore said hosting the 1996 Games is a gigantic task.

"The Atlanta Committee on the Olympic Games is doing its part," Gore said. "The state of Georgia is doing its part. The City of Atlanta is doing its part. The federal government must do its part, too.

"These aren't only Atlanta's games, they are America's games," he said. "Because they are America's games, America's government must run the leg that only it can—specifically in the areas of security, the processing of international visitors and transportation."

With the thousands of foreign visitors attending both the Olympic Games July 14 through Aug. 4 and the Paralympic Games Aug. 15 through Aug. 25, Gore said the federal government must help local law enforcement in keeping people safe.

"Someone has to help patrol the streets, gather intelligence, check cars, trucks and packages for explosives and take the lead on counterterrorism," he said. "Only federal law enforcement agencies, teamed up with the Department of Defense, have that kind of muscle and the tens of thousands of people to take on that responsibility."

Those needs will be extensive. At stake is protection of 36 Olympic venues—including training sites and Olympic villages—and 16,500 athletes, coaches and officials from nearly 200 countries. It also involves protecting the more than 361,000 daily spectators.

Most of the 36 venues are in Atlanta and include the new Olympic Stadium, the Georgia Dome, the Omni, Atlanta-Fulton County Stadium and campus athletic facilities at Georgia Tech. However, security personnel must also support venues in other areas of Georgia and Tennessee, as well as soccer stadiums in Miami and Orlando, Fla.; Birmingham, Ala.; and Washington, D.C.

There aren't as many police in Georgia as there were at the 1984 Los Angeles Games.

"We just have a very different law enforcement picture in Georgia than we had in California," said U.S. Deputy Attorney General Jamie Gorelick. "That is why we have done everything we can to make sure that as many people as are available will be present in Atlanta and around the environs of the venues."

Gorelick will bring in 12,000 to 15,000 law enforcement officers in Atlanta to bolster city, county and state resources.

"One of the benefits, and one of the reasons why, is to relieve state and local law enforcement of responsibilities that they might otherwise have," she said.

Providing Olympic security assistance is nothing new for DoD. The department supported the 1980 Olympic Winter Games in Lake Placid, N.Y., by congressional direction. Since then, it has supported every major international competition in the United States.

"Once we found out Atlanta was awarded the games, we immediately sent people there to meet with the local law enforcement and organizers," said Jeanne Fites, DoD's deputy undersecretary for requirements and resources. "We wanted to tell them what we could provide and the kind of services we provided in the past two Olympics."

As a matter of policy, Fites said, most DoD support goes to public agencies, such as law enforcement and public safety. "We know they don't have all the assets for anything of this magnitude," she said. "Public safety cannot and should not be held hostage to private committee budgets."

DoD is committing nearly 9,000 active and reserve component troops to the Olympic support effort. They'll come from 41 states, and most will fill DoD security requirements.

Officials with the Joint Olympic Task Force at Fort McPherson, Ga., said much of DoD's law enforcement support will come from National Guard units. These troops will team with other federal authorities in patrolling venues.

Service members will also help inspect vehicles and packages entering and leaving Olympic venues. Military aviation units will provide helicopter support to law enforcement efforts, and DoD explosive ordnance disposal teams will assist other federal agencies if needed.

While security concerns top DoD support commitments, they do not cover all support. Of the 9,000 DoD personnel slated for Atlanta duty, nearly 2,000 will provide administrative and logistical support. There are also requirements for military linguists, musicians and communications specialists.

One major task has military personnel driving Olympic shuttle buses. Task force officials said uniformed military reservists and National Guard drivers will handle all shuttle traffic between the Olympic villages and the athletic venues. Olympic task force officials said keeping drivers in uniform would enhance athlete security and deter possible threats.

Service members will stay at base camps around the city. Initial arrivals will stay at a leased five-building airline training facility that can house 3,500 troops. Once that fills, troops will occupy seven local schools — each housing between 450 and 750 people. All facilities will have air conditioning, mobile kitchens and recreational facilities.

Civilian board evaluates SOA

School of the Americas
Public Affairs Office

Experts on human rights and international law met at Fort Benning's School of the Americas May 28 to 30 to see how the school should evolve into the next century.

The SOA Board of Visitors itself evolved from the Academic Review Board which met in June 1994 and recommended that the board expand and become a permanent entry. It is now a group of academic military and civilian leaders who expect to meet twice a year to assess the SOA curriculum and to advise changes.

The Academic Review Board, chartered by the U.S. Army Training and Doctrine Command, also developed an Inter-Agency Working Group, made up of representatives from the Department of State Office of Secretary of Defense, U.S. Southern Command, Department of Army and TRADOC.

This group is intended to ensure coordination among the various agencies that have a stake in SOA. The school also created two new courses to enhance democratic values in Latin America — peace operations and democratic sustainment.

Also headed by TRADOC, the new board's aim is to determine how the school can best champion the U.S. security strategy of protecting human rights and sustaining democratic systems in the hemisphere.

President Bill Clinton has stated that he wants a free trade zone from pole to pole by 2005. It is the board's challenge to support that by supporting the democracies of Latin America, said Maj. Gordon Martel, SOA public affairs officer.

Col. Roy R. Trumble, SOA commandant, said that a lot was accomplished during the meetings.

"We provided a lot of information to the board on our mission, operations, the evolution of the school's curriculum, the history of the school and the political issues that surround SOA," Trumble said.

He said that on the second day of meetings, the board developed an agenda with items to examine. One that they will explore is more realistic training that will meet the needs of the different countries in Latin America.

The Board of Visitors is going to put together its findings from the conference and will make recommendations to the Department of the Army. Trumble said the areas that are being looked into are curriculum development, command and control of SOA, funding and training.

He said that the board will meet again in December to see how much progress has been made on its findings.

"We are here to do what is right — not what is expedient," said Gen. William W. Hartzog, TRADOC commander. Hartzog attended the briefings May 29 and said that there is a need to craft a plan to take SOA into the next century.

Members of the Board of Visitors include retired Gen. Paul F. Gorman, former commander in chief, U.S. SOUTHCOM; retired Gen. William R. Richardson, former commander, TRADOC; retired Gen. Frederick F. Woerner, former commander in chief, U.S. SOUTHCOM; Dr. John Fishel, professor of National Security Affairs, U.S. Army Command and General Staff College; Dr. Lawrence Graham, specialist on Latin American Civil Military Operations; and Steven M. Schneebaum, chairman, Board of Directors, International Human Rights Law Group.

Also members but unable to attend this meeting were the Honorable Edwin Corr, former ambassador to Bolivia, Peru and El Salvador; and the Honorable Ambler Moss, former ambassador to Panama.

Army Ideas for Excellence Program saves money

By Jacqué Hill
Special to the Bayonet©

The Army Ideas for Excellence Program, operating in accordance with Army Regulation 5-17, can save the military money while earning some for people with helpful suggestions.

According to Mary H. Tillman-Johnson, AIEP coordinator, Directorate of Resource Management, anyone can submit a suggestion to the program for evaluation and any type of idea, not just those that save money, will be considered.

"It is important to know that military and civilians can participate in the suggestion program," she said. "Basically, the suggestion program is to award deserving soldiers and civilians.

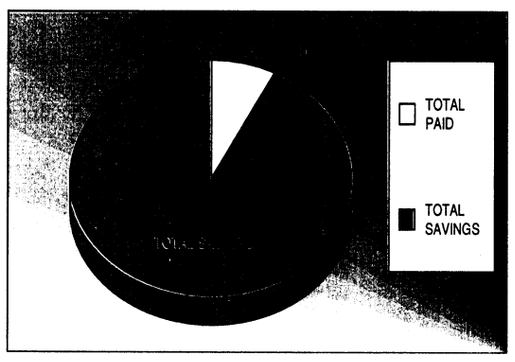
"(A suggestion) may improve on ways of doing things, it can improve on procedures. It can save time, it can save process in time, it can save man hours. It could save lives."

When a suggestion or idea is submitted to the program, Tillman-Johnson said, it is evaluated by the place that would most directly be affected by its implementation and also by a trained evaluator. Once the idea has received positive feedback from these sources, it is sent for approval.

If approved, the person who submitted the award would receive monetary compensation or an award certificate for his or her suggestion, Tillman-Johnson said.

"As long as it's a good idea and the Army can use it ... then we'll award the suggestion, provided it's approved," she said.

Sandy G. Babb, senior management analyst, Directorate of Resource Management, said the program has several good points.



"The beauty of it is the Army and Fort Benning get the benefit of the idea while the individual gets rewarded," she said.

Tillman-Johnson said generally, approved and usable ideas are awarded monetarily. An idea that will save the military money is awarded based on the amount of money it is expected save. The award amount will be in accordance with Army Regulation 5-17, which states specifically how much money a person may earn for a suggestion. An idea that does not directly save money will be evaluated, then awarded in accordance with the same regulation.

An idea that is implemented Armywide will receive larger compensation, Tillman-Johnson said, than an idea used only at Fort Benning.

DoD civilians partners in America's defense

By Gerry J. Gilmore
American Forces Press Service

WASHINGTON — DoD civilians perform important work worldwide with active duty and reserve component military members to protect the United States and its interests. The department plans to highlight those contributions throughout the year.

Edwin Dorn, undersecretary of defense for personnel and readiness, noted DoD's more than 800,000 civilians include scientists, engineers, logisticians, accountants, computer specialists and many other specialists. Civilian employees comprise a quarter of the total force, which also includes 900,000 members of the reserve components and 1.5 million active duty service members.

"I think we sometimes forget how important our civilians are," Dorn said. "DoD's civilian employees are partners in our national defense. They develop and maintain sophisticated systems, manage complex programs, handle the day-to-day business of feeding, housing and paying personnel, and sometimes go into harm's way to support our military forces."

He said civilian employees are integral to the success of DoD military operations, citing, for instance, the 700 deployed in Bosnia in Operation Joint Endeavor. During Desert Shield and Desert Storm, he added, about 4,500 DoD civilians deployed to the Mideast.

While many DoD civilians deploy with military members, others remain behind to perform other important work, said Diane M. Disney, assistant secretary of defense for civilian personnel policy.

"Civilians provide stability in the organization," Disney said. "Military people rotate between assignments every three years or so. DoD civilians are necessary to provide vital support that allows our warfighters to perform their missions."

DoD civilians make up roughly half of the federal civilian work force, Disney said. However, unlike other federal civilian employees, DoD civilians support a special mission.

"It's as if DoD civilians live two lives," Disney said. "We live the life of a civil servant and the life of a defense employee. We are like other civil servants in that we fall under the same statutory authority, but we're also like the military in that we're dedicated to support the defense mission.

"I have found the civilians who work for DoD to be absolutely extraordinary. We have bright, hard-working people who are committed to working for something bigger than themselves," she added.

Dorn said DoD civilian employees are high quality, bringing stability, diversity and a professional work ethic into a work force that provides opportunities without regard to race or gender. DoD is the nation's largest employer of women and minorities. Thirty-seven percent of DoD civilian employees are women.

Defense civilians have developed technologies that have defense and commercial applications, Dorn said, such as the Internet, the Global Positioning System and the malaria vaccine lasers.

Dorn said he is impressed with DoD's civilian work force and wants to ensure the quality remains.

"It's important for us to ensure we recruit and retain the highest-quality civilians, just as it is for us to recruit the best-quality people to wear the uniforms of our military services," Dorn said.

Better Opportunities for Single Soldiers

BOSS breakfast recognizes contributions

Better Opportunities for Single Soldiers

The Better Opportunities for Single Soldiers program hosts the Commanding General's BOSS recognition breakfast each quarter.

Soldiers are recognized because of their accomplishments within their organization, their volunteer efforts and civic involvement, said Spc. Michael T. James, BOSS president.

The Commander's Cup is also awarded during the breakfast to recognize the major subordinate command that strives the hardest to implement the BOSS program in their organization, according to Sgt. Maj. Steven G. Chittum, garrison sergeant major.

During the breakfast, civil service employees, civilian organizations and other civic associations are also recognized for their support and contributions, James said.

Last quarter, Building 17's command council was given a plaque to recognize their involvement in the BOSS program. They meet once a month to address single soldier issues and concerns that effect those who live in Building 17 and their quality of life, James said.

This is a unique council because the company commanders, first sergeants and BOSS representatives all meet to discuss single soldier issues, James said. No other council does this at this time, he said.

"This shows the soldiers that their chain of command is involved in improving their quality of life," James said.

Question of the week:

How can my major subordinate command get it's name on the Commander's Cup?

The BOSS president and the Single Soldier Program manager evaluate each major subordinate command using a criteria evaluation worksheet to rate the MSCs. Each MSC can use this criteria to assess it's own standing before the evaluation team rates the MSC. Once the MSC command is ready to be evaluated, the evaluation team will rate the MSC on site. If you have the best MSC on post, call the post BOSS office at 545-6800 to schedule your on site review today.

va q&a

Department of Veterans Affairs

Q: I served at sea in the Persian Gulf area during the conflict in 1991 and later was discharged, but I am not service-connected. Still, I would like the special Persian Gulf Registry health examination I have heard about. A friend told me that since I don't have serious problems right now and do have a well-paying job, it would be hard to get into the local VA hospital — he doesn't even try any more.

A: There are special provisions for access to care for veterans of the Persian Gulf War theater of operations such as yourself. You do not face the same income "means test" that governs access of most other non-service-connected veterans either for the Persian Gulf Registry health examination or for medical care for any conditions found that may possibly be related to the Gulf. You definitely should call your local VA medical center to ask for an appointment for a registry health exam. More information is available from the VA Persian Gulf Helpline at (800)749-8387.

Q: I am a Gulf-deployed reservist who was in good health when I came to the VA a year ago for the special health examination. Now I am starting to feel joint pain and tenderness, but I feel like I've missed the opportunity to have this considered under the Persian Gulf Registry program.

A: VA welcomes past registrants to return for a follow-up registry health examination under the special program if their health changes or new concerns arise. The registry database is updated by the VA health-care provider when a new diagnosis is made. In addition, if you subsequently receive care outside the VA and a non-VA physician makes a diagnosis, please ask him or her to send a letter to the local VA medical center's "veterans' registry physician" so that this information can be reviewed and added, as necessary, to the VA database.

Q: I heard something on the news about a committee's continued scientific review of the possible effects of Agent Orange on Vietnam veterans. Does VA still have the special health screening program for Vietnam veterans?

A: Yes. If you are a Vietnam veteran and have not had the free physical examination to be included in the Agent Orange Registry, you may want to contact your local VA medical center and make an appointment. While the Agent Orange Registry exam will not provide you with definitive answers about the relationship between Agent Orange exposure and any medical problems you may have, it may uncover conditions that require prompt treatment.

Q: Are there special Agent Orange tests that I will get in the examination?

A: When you have your appointment, your medical history will be recorded, you will be asked about your herbicide exposure, and a complete physical examination will be conducted. That includes certain blood tests, urine analysis and a chest x-ray, if you have not had a chest x-ray in the past six months. The person who examines you will look carefully for symptoms of any of the conditions that have been recognized as service-connected based on exposure to herbicides. Unfortunately, there are no medical tests that can show whether a health problem was caused by Agent Orange or other herbicides used in Vietnam. There are tests that show the current level of dioxin, a contaminant found in one of the ingredients of Agent Orange, in blood or tissue. Such tests are used for research and there are serious questions about their value in a routine examination.

Q: Who is eligible for Veterans Affairs vocational rehabilitation?

A: Veterans and active-duty service members generally are eligible if three conditions are met. First, they must have suffered a service-connected disability in active service after Sept. 15, 1940, and are receiving at least 20 percent compensation, or would be except for receipt of military retired pay. Secondly, they must have been discharged or released under other than dishonorable conditions or are currently hospitalized awaiting separation for a service-connected disability. Finally, they must be in need of vocational rehabilitation services to overcome an employment handicap.

German television crew films the future of infantry

Bayonet staff writer

With his thermal sight generating heat images of enemy soldiers, and the video camera shooting around corners never exposing his body to enemy troops, the TRADOC System Manager-Soldier's Land Warrior showed off why he is the future of the Army.

Sgt. Scott Decker, the XXI Land Warrior, put on a show for a freelance television crew filming for the German television show "Auslands Journal" Monday. The producer of the program, Gianfranco Norelli, said the program was looking for the most futuristic and the most advanced weaponry in the world.

"The purpose of the program is to show how computer technology will change the future of warfare," Norelli said. "This is a very interesting program. This system lends itself to visual explanation of how the computer is used. It is not only technically interesting, but it is immediately visible to the audience who will watch (or did) this program, how technology is changing the future of warfare."

Decker and Sgt. Maj. Butch Hancock, TSM-Soldier sergeant major, took the film crew to Malone Range 7 to use Infantry Training Brigade soldiers from Company D, 1st Battalion 38th Infantry Regiment, as a backdrop for the Land Warrior.

The film crew took several shots of the ITB soldiers practicing for their upcoming qualification, and then used six ITB soldiers for a demonstration of how the thermal imaging sight on the Land Warrior's M-4 Carbine Weapon worked.

The soldiers were sent into the woodline and moved through the trees in a wedge formation. The thermal sight picked up the soldiers heat images and relayed those images directly onto the film crews video.

Hancock said the full cooperation of the Land Warrior Program is important to keep good relations.

"The U. S. military and its relationship with our allies is extremely important," Hancock said. "Even though the Land Warrior system is not going to be sold to other countries at this time, it is important for people like the Europeans to see this kind of technology. Even though the cold war is over, we still have a big stake in Europe because of their strategic positions."

Decker also said that the promotion of the Land Warrior System is important because our allies are currently working on similar technologies and the systems need to be compatible.

"The Land Warrior system has to be compatible with theirs because they are our allies," Decker said. "Just like how we currently use 5.56 mm ammunition, our allies use 5.56 mm ammunition so we are fully compatible. Well it's the same thing for the Land Warrior System. Their system must be compatible with the Land Warrior System so we can talk to each other on the Battle field. "

After taking the film crew to Malone Range 7, Decker and Hancock took the film crew to the McKenna Military Operations on Urbanized Terrain site to demonstrate the Land Warrior's

EQUAL OPPORTUNITY

SMA attends EO workshop

Army News Service

WASHINGTON — An examination of equal opportunity issues awaited Sgt. Maj. of the Army Gene C. McKinney and 23 command sergeants major and sergeants major throughout the Army in early June. McKinney and the senior Army sergeants were attending a one-week workshop at the Defense Equal Opportunity Management Institute in Cocoa Beach, Fla.

The course, developed by DEOMI in 1995, is designed specifically for senior enlisted personnel and examines how current and potential EO issues could impact on mission readiness.

"I am committed to equal opportunity," McKinney said. "I personally selected the attendees for the workshop. It was important to me to ensure that we had a diverse group to intensify learning. I chose command sergeants major from the major commands in the Army along with others who reflect the diverse Army enlisted leadership."

The demographic make-up of the workshop was 52 percent white, 28 percent black, leaving the remaining 20 percent as either Asian, Mexican American, Puerto Rican or others. Women comprised eight percent of attendees.

"I attended this workshop while I was the United States Army Europe command sergeant major," McKinney said. "At that time, I had the command sergeants major throughout Europe also attend. After going through the workshop, I observed an increased sensitivity and awareness level among the participants when they returned to their units. I hope to see the same type of awareness from this group.

"As senior leaders, we are responsible for leading, training and developing junior soldiers. By attending the course, we are leading by example," McKinney said. In order to work in this changing, diversified environment, we must continue to be aware of our constantly changing surroundings, he explained.

Command Sergeant Major John Rucynski informed attendees that, "whether you want to believe it or not, learning will take place." Rucynski attended a DEOMI senior enlisted workshop in 1995.

Sergeant Major Larry Strickland from the Office of the Deputy Chief of Staff for Personnel said his expectations prior to the course were twofold, one, was for the participants to better understand themselves and two, to pass onto their own organizations what they learned to better their respective organization.

Command Sergeants Major Thomas Brooks and Minerva Ramos-Lopez said they did not attend the course with any preconceived notions. "I went into the workshop with an open mind and no expectations," Ramos-Lopez stated.

In all seven of the DEOMI courses, attendees are trained on three different levels; intrapersonal, interpersonal, and organizational. "We believe that individuals must first learn about themselves, what prejudices and bias' they hold based on their socialization," said Master Sgt. Richard Cox, senior trainer at DEOMI.

The next level involves dealing with others. "Once individuals recognize their own differences they can begin to better understand the differences of others," he explained. DEOMI strives to instill that there are differences between individuals. "It's important to know what's unique to the various cultures and ethnicities that make up our military. Being aware and sensitive to these differences enhances mission readiness at the organizational level."

At the end of the workshop, Strickland said, "right or wrong, I consider myself to be open minded and liberal in dealing with others, but the course reminded me that ignorance is still around, affecting the lives of minorities and women. Unfortunately, ignorance is something we cannot cure, only remain aware of."

"The workshop taught me that I do have prejudices and bias' I was unaware of. I realized that I must dig deep inside myself before judging others. It's imperative that we, as leaders and as individuals, check ourselves out before we let our values pre-judge a person or situation," Ramos-Lopez said. Additionally she said, "I believe every sergeant major should have this type of training, especially with the new generation of soldiers in today's Army."

capabilities in an urban battle field environment.

From great distances the Land Warrior was able to produce heat images of soldiers walking guard duty outside of the buildings in the MOUT site. The Land Warrior system also showed its effectiveness inside the buildings, by allowing the Land Warrior to see images inside of rooms by only moving his weapon around corners. This allowed the Land Warrior to stay completely behind cover with out exposing his body to the enemy soldiers.

"With the Land Warrior, we try and run the full gambit to show what the Land Warrior system is capable of," Decker said. "We do what ever we can to promote our system. This is the future of the Army and it's important that we show what the Army is capable of."

TRADOC commander reviews Force XXI

By Elke Hutto
Killeen Daily Herald

Hurtling toward the future at an unprecedented speed, one of the drivers of the Force XXI experimentation train has found himself rethinking concepts and contemplating projects he hasn't done before.

Gen. William W. Hartzog, commander of the Army's Training and Doctrine Command, joined other commanders at Fort Hood, Texas for a two-day meeting to discuss ongoing preparations for the Force XXI experimentation at the 1st Brigade, 4th Infantry Division.

For more than 20 years, the training command has been tasked with preparing the Army for war and designing future combat roles. In an interview with the Herald Thursday, its latest commander responded to a number of questions dealing with the experiment.

Hartzog said one of the milestones for the project will be the brigade's exercise in California next year. During the exercise equipment, currently being installed, will show its true value. Based on the outcome, the Army leadership will decide which systems to use to shape the future Army.

"There will be some tough decisions to be made because we probably won't be able to afford everything that's a good idea. We have to prioritize," Hartzog said.

In doing so, he said future equipment has to expandable.

"You have to be wise enough to make the selection for those things that have the potential for more than one or two years," he said. "Software is going to change with the speed of light so we don't expect to build a force that is obsolete once it is built."

Hartzog said that in contrast to past practices the Army is taking a huge step with the Force XXI effort. He rejected the perception that the Army is conservative in its ability to adapt to a changing technological environment, noting that a perception of conservatism may stem from fiscal prudence.

"If we were truly conservative, we would be building another gun that looks like the last gun with a little more capability," he said. "You have an amount of money that is given to you by the citizenry of the United States with which you are expected to provide defense to our nation ... so we have to work within our budget."

Hartzog said it remains unclear whether the current technological effort will result in the need for less manpower in the future.

"I think it is logical to assume that if we are going to put resources into better equipment and better ways to handle information, that it follows that it takes less people to do it," he said.

Those remaining, though, Hartzog explained, will have to be the right kind of people to handle the information.

"That may take a little more leadership training because the information comes in more rapidly," he noted. "It may take a slightly different type of mechanic to deal with some of the new equipment that we haven't dealt with before."

But, Hartzog said, the soldiers at Fort Hood appear to be capable of adapting.

"I have great faith in our younger generation and the way they were raised and their ability to deal with digits and computers and things that are mysteries to me," he said. "I saw a lot of (privates first class) and specialists whose hands were just flying across the keys. They haven't been at it long, just two or three weeks, but it was comfortable for them because they were raised that way."

Medical internet will change health care

By Douglas J. Gillert
American Forces Press Service

WASHINGTON — A "medical internet" will provide U.S. forces in Eastern Europe the same level of health care they'd receive back home, officials at the Medical Advanced Technology Management Office, Fort Detrick, Md., said.

When fully augmented, the DoD telemedicine project dubbed "Primetime III" will equip medics deployed to Bosnia and Hungary with high-resolution, color remote video teleconferencing for consultations with specialists around the world. Primetime III will enable deployed medics to obtain radiology, dentistry and psychiatric medical support, hold preventive medicine and infectious disease consultations, provide situational awareness and conduct medical research on the Internet.

Army Capt. Scott Ehnes, Primetime III operations officer, said the network will give deployed medics access to Army, Navy and Air Force medical centers in the United States and expand telemedicine services to additional Air Force, Navy and allied force medical units in Europe.

The network also will allow specialists to see and talk to deployed physicians and patients in real time to discuss diagnoses and treatment, Ehnes said. This will allow patients to be treated in theater, vs. evacuating them for medical care, he added.

Eastern Europe's often inclement weather and inadequate airport runways hamper large-scale medical evacuations and underscore the need for improved health care on site, according to Army Col. Fred Goeringer, a project manager.

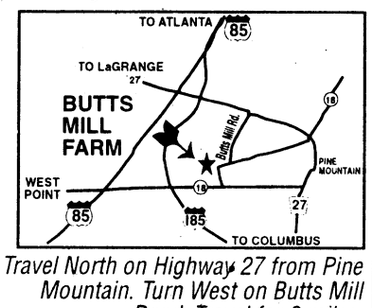
"We can expect to have 400 to 500 clinic visits a day (in Bosnia and Hungary)," Goeringer said. "If you look at that in terms of the next year, it just isn't feasible to think you can airlift them all out."

Previous Primetime projects supported U.S. forces in Macedonia and Croatia. Phased augmentation of Primetime III began in February.

In the first phase, the Primetime III task force fielded telemedicine support packages and developed the network at the Landstuhl Regional Medical Center, Germany; 67th Combat Support Hospital, Hungary; and 212th Mobile Army Surgical Hospital, Bosnia; and established telecommunication connectivity to stateside military medical centers.

Now in progress, the second phase will field seven deployable telemedicine forward operating base medical units supporting Operation Joint Endeavor.

Phase 3 will further expand the telemedicine network to the remaining forward operating medical units in Bosnia.



Telemedicine is up and running at the two field hospitals in Bosnia and Hungary, Ehnes said. A fourth phase will include electronic medical records and a theater medical information network.

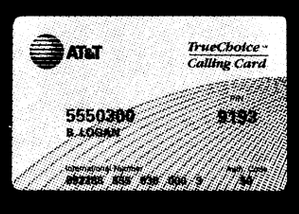
Middle Tenn. State University gives CG award

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Fort Benning's Commanding General, Maj. Gen. John W. Hendrix, was awarded the Virginia S. Austin Award by the Military Science Alumni Association, Middle Tennessee State University, of Murfreesboro, Tenn.

"Maj. Gen. Hendrix was selected to receive this award for his outstanding contributions to the Military Science Department for the period (from) 1974 to 1977," said Ken P. Lord of the MSAA.



Hendrix prepared all junior and senior cadets for their training at the Reserve Officers Training Corps Advanced Camp during the three-year time frame, according to Lord.

"Maj. Gen. Hendrix's personal involvement in, and concern for detailed planning of, resulted in the award of the Warrior of the Pacific Trophy to the MTSU contingent for best overall performance nationwide for the 1977 Advanced Camp," said Lord. "In addition, as the MSIII instructor, Maj. Gen. Hendrix was directly responsible for molding the future leaders of the U.S. Army by his personal example and exemplary leadership qualities."

Symposium focuses on 21st-century Army

By Amy Durham
Special to The Bayonet©

A secure and stable home life will be the Army's greatest weapon in the 21st century.

That's the impression soldiers and family members gave representatives from Headquarters, Department of the Army, during a recent visit to Fort Benning.

More than 50 military personnel and family members, with varying years of service and affiliation, participated in the Quality of Life Focus Group Symposium May 29, and, according to Michelle Aldridge, Family Support Group coordinator, the purpose of the one-day brainstorm session was to "focus on the continuity of services.

"It's about what soldiers and their families expect to see as they move around in the Army," Aldridge said.

Participants, with varying years and experiences, were broken into four groups: up to seven years; seven to 14; 15 or more, and; command level.

And each of the four groups said Army Community Service's Deployment and Mobilization Family Support is one of the most valuable services. Its deployment support mechanism was also voted as the most valuable service in the end-of-symposium group con-sensus.

Linda Sawyer, one of the family members participating in the 7-to-14 year group, said she was glad to see ACS Family Support be deemed the most valuable.

Sawyer said it showed Army leadership finally understands the stress deployments place on families.

"And family members accept deployments better now because they have the information and support," she said.

While group consensus for family support seemed a decision, most other results reflected the diversity of the military.

"There were issues I thought were silly," said Cpl. Amy Szarenski, Army Marksmanship Unit, "but then someone would say, 'My daughter needs this service for these reasons,' and I'd think, 'OK.'"

Although the symposium reinforced her ideas about certain services, Szarenski said hearing others' points of view changed her mind on some issues.

Sgt. David Stanley, U. S. Army Physical Fitness School, in the Army for eight years and married for two, agreed the symposium was more of a learning experience for him.

"There are some agencies I have never had to use," he said, " but I found out through others the need for the different agencies."

Army families' needs are as varied as military people themselves and Aldridge said the symposium — part of Army Chief of Staff General Dennis J. Reimer plan to improve quality of life for soldiers and their families — allowed Fort Benning the chance to tell leaders in Washington what services soldiers and families deem necessary.

"With shrinking dollars," she said, "I believe they (HQDA) want to make sure they provide the services most needed and wanted by those serving the nation."

At the symposium's end, 57 Fort Benning representatives had voiced their opinions. Listed below are the three most valuable services of each category voted by a group consensus.

Grass clippings rejuvenate yards

Directorate of Public Works

Did you spend too much of your valuable "recliner time" last summer bagging grass clippings from your lawn? During a normal growing season, even a small lawn can produce more than 1,000 pounds of grass clippings.

There is an easier way to keep a healthy lawn that will greatly reduce the amount of time required to rake, collect, bag and transport grass clippings. Besides saving landfill or compost cost and space, grass recycling is a win-win for your community.

An easier and more beneficial way to manage grass clippings is to simply leave them on the lawn and let the grass decompose and recycle valuable nutrients back to the soil.

Walter Nichols, Solid Waste Program Manager, Directorate of Public Works, recommends residents let your grass grow to between one and one-half to two inches high and set your mower blade so grass clippings removed will be about one-half inch long.

During the peak growing season, your lawn will probably need to be cut weekly, according to Nichols. "Mow your lawn when it is dry, so the cut grass will filter down to the soil," he said. "This method will minimize the amount of raking to only areas where there is an accumulation of clippings on the surface."

Nichols also said a recycling or mulching mower will clip the grass into smaller pieces and further reduce raking requirements. Mulching blades and baffles can also be purchased for existing lawn mowers. Furthermore, leaving the clipping on your lawn returns nutrients and improves the physical condition of the soil. A healthy lawn will be more drought-resistant and require less water.

"Contrary to what many people think, leaving the clippings on the lawn will not cause a build up of thatch," Nichols said. "Recycling grass clippings is a great way to reduce the volume of solid waste."

According to Nichols, about 10 percent of Fort Benning's Army Family Housing waste is grass clippings.

"By leaving the grass on your lawn," he said, "we can greatly reduce solid waste disposal costs."

It also saves on water, fertilizer and plastic bags, and keeps the ground around your home cooler, therefore, saving energy. All of these are positive influences on our environment as we search for better methods to manage our waste.

If you have any questions about grass recycling, please contact Nichols, Solid Waste Program manager, at 545-1007.

Tips ensure safe mowing

Infantry Branch Safety Office

Each year many people are seriously injured by lawn mowers. Being hit by something thrown from the mower is dangerous because the speed of debris coming out the discharge chute has been clocked at 200 miles per hour. The following are ways to protect yourself and your family.

- Wear eye and hearing protection. Sturdy shoes are essential. Avoid loose clothing. Wear pants which cover your legs.
- Inspect the area to be mowed. Pick up stones, toys, metal fragments and anything else that could become a flying missile.
- Check oil and refuel in a well-ventilated area before starting. Never refuel while the motor is running or hot.
- Make sure all guards are in place.
- Clear the area of children and pets.
- Stand clear when starting. Keep feet away from the mower blade and stay clear of the discharge chute always.
- Mow in daylight only and when the lawn is dry.
- Push, do not pull your mower. Mow laterally across a slope — not up and down. If on a riding mower, the rule is just the opposite.
- To make repairs, clear the discharge chute, or change the cutting height, stop the mower and disconnect the spark plug.

ask the judge

Q. About five months ago, I pawned my car title in order to borrow $500 that I needed to pay bills. I didn't pay back my loan at the end of the month, so the pawnbroker extended my pawn ticket for each subsequent month and I was told to at least pay the interest. I have paid the pawnbroker $125 monthly for the past five months. Now, the pawn shop is requesting I pay the face amount on my pawn agreement or they are going to take my car. Can they do that?

A. Georgia law permits a pawnbroker to charge interest and pawnshop charges which together equal no more than 25 percent of the principal amount advanced to a borrower. For example, if you borrowed $100, when you repaid the loan you would pay $125 (25 percent x 100). Some pawnshops will allow a borrower additional time or an extension to repay the loan. However, the borrower will be required to sign a new contract for each thirty-day extension. In this way, the pawnshop may obligate the borrower to pay at least the interest amount on the loan during each thirty-day period.

The problem arises when the pawn shop no longer wishes to renew or extend your contract. At that time you will be liable for the face amount of the loan, regardless of how much money you have paid in the past. If we apply these facts to the case above the following would occur: During the five-month period you will have paid a total of $625 (5 months x $125), but you would still owe the pawnshop $625 ($125 + 500), the face amount of the pawn ticket. The total cost of a $500 loan —- $1,250.

When you do not pay your loan back it is considered "in default." A pawnbroker has, upon default, the right to take possession of the vehicle without judicial process. In other words, if you can not pay, the car becomes the possession of the pawnbroker.

If it is at all possible, the best solution is to avoid these types of pawnshops. Instead borrow the money from a reputable credit union or from relatives. If you decide to pawn your car title, remember, if you do not pay it back within the first thirty days, you may lose more than you borrowed.

If you have questions or a problem concerning a pawn contract, the Legal Assistance Division has attorneys available to advise you. Call the Legal Assistance Office at 545-3281 or 545-3282 to make an appointment.

'Almost' defines what might have been in our lives

By Pat Coté
1st Bn., 19th Inf. Regt.

Have you ever thought about the saddest word in the dictionary? I think that I may have found it, thanks to insight gained from a Texas preacher and writer named Max Lucado.

It's not a fancy word. It's not hard to spell or pronounce. In fact, it doesn't look impressive at all. The word is almost.

It's a word that reeks of missed opportunities, aborted plans, blundered chances. It's second string and runner-up.

"Almost" ... it conjurs images of the one that got away. The gamble that almost paid off. The plans almost realized.

How many people do you know whose contribution to life is almost? "Did I ever tell you about the time I almost was selected as the Soldier of the Year?" "They say she almost made the cut-off score." "My wife and kids almost came back to me."

As long as there have been people, there have been almosts. People who almost won the battle, who almost climbed the mountain, who almost reached the rainbow.

The Greeks had a statue called Opportunity. When viewed from the front, it had long flowing hair. But seen from the rear, it was bald. It stood as a reminder that as long as opportunity was coming towards you, there was something to grab hold of. Once opportunity had passed you though, there was nothing to grab.

reflections

Far from being outdated and archaic, the Bible is replete with relevant admonitions encouraging us to take advantage of opportunity while it is available. One such text states, "Be very careful, then, how you live — not unwise but as wise, making the most of every opportunity." (Ephesians 5:15-16)

Do you know what it is that makes "almost" such a lethal word? It stands as a startling reminder of the tragedy of missed opportunities.

Opportunities that were within our grasp but somehow slipped through our fingers. Opportunities that we had the resources to obtain but not the diligence to pursue. The result of which is often a trail of despair and regret. "I almost made it...We almost worked it out...I almost made the right decision."

Almost does not have to be all gloom and doom, because it is preventable.

While opportunity is in front of us, the choice is still ours. Seizing the moment turns "I almost" into "I did." Diligence with the present will prevent regrets over the past.

God's providential care eliminates despair

By Mark A. Zerger
2nd Bn., 54th Inf. Regt., ITB

"And we know that God causes all things to work together for good to those who love God, to those who are called according to his purpose. (Romans 8:28) No other verse of scripture so expresses God's providential care for his children.

reflections

The great theologian Augustus H. Strong defines providence as "the continuous agency of God by which he makes all the events of the physical and moral universe fulfill the original design with which he created it." The word providence comes from two words, pro video — literally to see before.

A few years ago in the American Football Conference championship game, the Buffalo Bills staged the greatest comeback win ever against the Houston Oilers. The Bills were behind 34-0 at the half. I later told some people as I watched the game I knew for certain the Bills would come back and win. They asked how I knew that. I replied that I was watching a videotape of the game. We don't know the future, but God does. It is pro video to him.

Let me say at this point that I do not believe that God is the author of any evil which comes into our lives. James 1:13-17 makes this clear. Evil is a result of a sin infected world and our free will. I do believe that God in his providential care foresees evil, problems and disasters which affect our lives, and he can turn these "things" around for our good.

New Testament scholar Albert Barnes defines "things" in Romans 8:28 as "all our afflictions and trials, all our persecutions and calamities along with all good things which God uses 'mysteriously' to work for our good." Case in point — Joseph went from the well to Egypt to Potiphar's house to prison to the throne. Later he told his brothers, "what you meant for evil, God used for good." Of course some things are obvious and others are not so obvious. I Corinthians 13:12 tells us that "now we see in a mirror dimly." We may not understand many things until we get to heaven.

In 1986 my wife and I waited anxiously to hear from our church's overseas missionary board concerning our service as missionaries in Thailand. Finally the call came and we were told that we would not be able to go because of my wife's illness. We both entered a period of despair and uncertainty. Little did we know that God would later open the door for us in the Army chaplaincy. Sometimes our disasters can be turned into victories.

A missionary was shipwrecked in the North Sea and washed ashore on an abandoned island. He was determined to survive. He built a small shelter out of the ship's remaining lumber to protect himself from the cold. He built a fire to warm the makeshift hut and went to gather food. As he returned he saw his only protection from the cold going up in flames. He fell to his knees in despair. In a few moments he heard voices. He looked up and saw a ship. The ship's captain yelled, "We saw your fire and came to rescue you."

We probably will not understand all things that come our way in life, but in faith we can claim Proverbs 3:5-6 — "Trust in the Lord with all your heart, and do not lean on your own understanding. In all your ways acknowledge him and he will make your paths straight."

Preparations for four students from the Fort Benning School of Tae kwon do are almost complete as they get ready for Junior Olympic competition at the Orange County Convention Center in Orlando, Fla., Monday through June 30.

Dorothea Dorsey, Luis Rodriguez, Tremon Thornton and John Peeler Jr. will compete with more than 4,800 other athletes nationwide in the annual tournament.

"It has been a long year of tournaments and training," said the school's instructor Felix Davila.

"Each one of these students has given up a lot of their personal time to train for this event and to reach a goal they set a year ago," Davila said.

The students' quests began last year at the conclusion of the Georgia State Tae kwon do championships and concluded March 16 with the students qualifying at this year's state championships.

"To get a chance at competing in the Junior Olympics, a student must place in the top three of his or her age, weight and belt category," Davila said.

"These four (students) are four of the best in the state and are the only ones to qualify for the event in this area."

In all, 96 competitors from each state qualify to go to the Junior Olympics each year.

Jennifer Matsuoka, Georgia State Tae kwon do Association president, said that normally about half of the 4,800 qualified competitors actually show up for the games.

Matsuoka said this was due to the travel and expense involved with getting the competitors to the site of the games.

"Due to the expense involved, our students had fund raisers to offset the expenses of motels, food and travel," Davila said.

"All of our support came from the donations and help of the soldiers of the Infantry Training Brigade and School of the Americas," Davila said.

"If it were not for those two unit's, especially the "Bushmasters" of Company D, 1st Battalion, 19th Infantry Regiment, our students would not be going.

"Every weekend, they encouraged the students to stay with it (the sport) and to always do their best.

"They more or less took a personal interest in what the kids were trying to accomplish," Davila said.

Dorsey's road to the Junior Olympics consisted of six tournaments that saw her win six Gold, two Silver and four Bronze medals.

Dorsey qualified by becoming the state sparring and forms champion in the female 13 to 14, 115- to 135-pound, green belt division.

Rodriguez also entered in six tournaments to prepare himself for the games, bringing home four Gold, two Silver and one Bronze medal. Rodriguez gained his spot by becoming the boy's 9 to 10, 85- to 95-pound, green belt sparring and forms state champion.

Thornton entered five tournaments throughout the year, capturing one Gold, one Silver and five Bronze medals and qualified by winning a Bronze medal in the boy's 11 to 12, 75- to 85-pound, blue belt division at the state tournament.

Peeler prepared himself for the games by entering 10 tournaments bringing home two Gold, five Silver and five Bronze medals and qualified by winning a Bronze medal in the boy's 6 to 8, 55- to 60-pound, green belt division at the state championships.

"Not all of the students will compete in both sparring and forms at the Junior Olympics," Davila said.

Davila said the athletes are only able to compete in the event they qualified for at the state tournament.

Davila credited the success of his program to Edward Givens, the school's president and Master Jae Y. Shim, a highly recognized tournament director in Georgia and the GSTA.

"Without those people, young students here at Fort Benning would not have the chance to compete," Davila said.

Davila said the students journey was just about over and that his personal thanks go to everyone who made the upcoming competition possible.

Davila also said hopefully, he would be able to bring back four proud Junior Olympic medalists to the Fort Benning Tae kwon do school.

USAMU medalists win top competitions

The Fort Benning soldiers from the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit, who will represent the United States at the 1996 Olympics in Atlanta July 20 to 27, are proving that they are world champions. So far, five of the USAMU Olympians have won medals at recent top shooting events.

The soldiers, who are members of the 1996 U.S. Olympic Shooting Team, are international rifle shooters Glenn A. Dubis and Robert E. Harbison, and shotgun shooters Bret E. Erickson, Theresa E. DeWitt, James T. Graves and David R. Alcoriza. Kenneth A. Johnson, an USAMU international rifle shooter, was chosen as an alternate for the 1996 U.S. Olympic Shooting Team.

At the Munich, Germany World Cup in May, 68 countries sent more than 500 shooters to compete in the men's rifle shooting competition. In Munich's cold, windy and overcast conditions, Harbison won a Gold medal in the men's 3x40 three-position rifle event and Dubis won the Bronze in the men's free rifle prone event. Harbison and Dubis will compete in the Olympic Men's Air Rifle Competition in Atlanta July 22 and in the Olympic Men's Free Rifle 3x40 Competition July 27.

DeWitt won a Silver medal in women's double trap at the Atlanta World Cup in April. She will shoot for the Gold Medal in the Olympic Women's Double Trap Competition in Atlanta July 23.

Graves took first place at the National Skeet Shooting Association World Skeet Shoot in Miami, Fla., in the preliminary match, in which fellow USAMU shotgun shooter William J. Moran finished second. Graves also won the finals and USAMU shotgun shooter Shawn C. Dulohery took second. Graves and Dulohery won the NSSA World Skeet Two-Man Team Match, and Graves, Dulohery and Moran won the NSSA World Skeet Three-Man Team Competition.

Graves will go for the Gold in the Olympic Skeet Competition in Atlanta July 26 and 27.

Erickson captured first place in the Interservice International Shooting Championship's Trap Competition at Fort Benning's Hook Range in May. He will compete in the Olympic Trap Competition July 20 and 21 in Atlanta.

Alcoriza will shoot in his first Olympics in the Men's Double Trap Competition in Atlanta July 24.

Shotgun shooter selected for Olympics

When Theresa E. DeWitt tagged along as a youngster with her father to his sporting club in Cincinnati, Ohio, she never dreamed that her experiences there would lead her to the U.S. Olympic team.

DeWitt, a 1985 graduate of Ohio State University with a bachelor's degree in wildlife management, took up shooting as a hobby while back home hunting for her first post-college job.

"I was back home again," she said. "It was a hobby I just wanted to pick up and learn since I didn't have any studying to do anymore."

Meanwhile, DeWitt said she was looking for a job in her career field.

"What I really wanted to do was work in the field on a research project, working with the environment," she said.

But she said she found such jobs, at least on a full-time basis, hard to come by

> "To bring home a medal, that's my near-term goal."
> — Theresa E. DeWitt
> USAMU shotgun shooter

"I really wanted to work for the Ohio Department of National Resources," she said.

So, while she searched for the dream job, DeWitt began spending even more time shooting American-style trap.

In 1988, she shifted to international style — the Olympic style where targets are thrown much faster and much sharper angles than American-style trap.

DeWitt said she found she was good at her new hobby and decided to pursue it more seriously. She hit the competition circuit. During her travels, she met members of the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit and was impressed with what she saw.

With what she heard from the Army Team, DeWitt knew there was something special at Fort Benning, and the hopes of traveling the world circuit and someday, perhaps, making the Olympic team could really become a reality. In 1991, she put her mind to it and enlisted in the Army.

"The Army provides me the equipment to train and the opportunity to compete at the national and world levels necessary to become a champion and an Olympian," DeWitt said. "It's a great opportunity."

She said she also knew that one of the world's most renowned international-style shotgun coaches was the coach for the Army team. DeWitt got her first opportunity to meet Burl Branham when she traveled to Fort Benning for a match.

"To be able to benefit from him and his expertise is incredible," she said. "He's really good at reading people. He seems to know the shooters better than they know themselves, and that's what makes a good coach."

To prepare for the Olympics, she is continuing her intense training schedule. And when it is time to relax, she has picked up yet another hobby.

"I'm learning to fish," she said. "Fishing is really big down here. I'm learning the southern bass fishing circuit."

DeWitt dreams of Olympic Gold. When asked what her future goals are, she quickly replied, "To bring home a medal, that's my near term goal. Long-term, I want to stay in the Army and reach the rank of sergeant major."

Four repeat as track winners

Armed Forces Press Service

Seven medalists from the 1995 women's Armed Forces Track and Field meet claimed gold medals at this year's event, conducted May 22-23 at Santa Barbara Community College.

Of the seven medalists, four successfully defended their 1995 titles during the two-day event, hosted by the Naval Construction Battalion Center at Port Hueneme, Calif.

Christine Stancliff retained her 1995 javelin title, winning this year's competition with a toss of 51.86 meters (171.1 feet). Stancliff, 1995 Navy female athlete of the year, then earned gold in the women's shot put with a 13.45 meter (44.4 foot) toss winning over Army's Karen Bill, last year's champion.

Successfully defending her title in the 5,000-meter race was Army Tracy Vandeventer, a reservist from Columbus, Ohio. She clocked the distance in 17:11.72, then added a second gold medal by winning the 3,000-meter event in 9:57.19.

Two other soldiers also retained titles. The U.S. military's fastest female sprinter, Rhonda Colvin, repeated her 1995 performances by capturing both the 100- and 200-meter runs. Colvin took the 100 in 11.04 seconds, then captured the 200 in 24.13. Simone Brooks defended her long jump title with a 6.2 meter (20.46 foot) leap. Brooks also took two silver medals in the 100 and 200 sprints.

Navy athletes dominated this year's field competition, winning four of the six categories. Five of the Navy's seven medals came from field events.

Besides Stancliff's two gold medals, Julie Althoff won the high jump with a 1.6 meter (5.28 foot) jump. Maureen Magnan bettered her third place finish last year with a 42.30 meter toss (139.6 feet) in winning the women's discus. Magnan also took a silver in the hammer throw.

Army kept a respectable presence in field events, thanks to Bill.

Although losing one title to Stancliff, Bill captured four individual medals: silver in the shot put, gold in the hammer throw with a toss of 43.84 meters (144.7 feet), silver in discus and bronze in the javelin.

While Navy dominated field events, Army athletes fared better in track. Only the efforts of Navy Barbara Kannewurf and the Marine Corps' 1,600-meter relay team kept Army from sweeping the nine running events.

Kannewurf, assigned with the Portsmouth (Va.) Naval Medical Center, ran the 1,500 meters in 4:40.04 seconds to claim the gold medal. She finished third in 1995.

The Marine Corps team of Gertrude Aviles, Camilia Jones, Raphique Edwards and Ernestine Epps edged Army by two-tenths of a second to claim the 1600 relay. It was the Marines' only gold medal. The rest was all Army.

Army's Cynthia Swift earned her first two Armed Forces titles in winning both the women's 400- and 800-meter events. The Army 400-meter relay team of Brooks, Colvin, Dawn Adams and Tangela Stevenson clocked a winning time of 46.67.

Victories by Kannewurf and Vandeventer in the distance events overshadowed efforts by Air Force Lori Eppard, who claimed three of Air Force's 10 medals. The Wright-Patterson Air Force Base, Ohio, runner took silver medals in the 1,500-, 3,000- and 5,000-meter runs.

Army retained the team title, scoring 72 points and collecting 21 of the 45 available medals. Air Force (29 points), despite not winning an event. edged Navy by one point for second place.Marine Corps finished with 20 points.

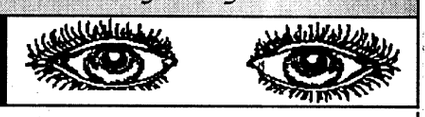
Red Stixx baseball games are free to soldiers and accompanying family members for the remainder of the season.

Baseball for Soldiers and Military Families Program was officially kicked off when Steve Butler, president of the Chattahoochee Valley-Fort Benning Chapter of the Association of the United States Army signed an agreement with Red Stixx owner, Charlie Morrow, last week.

While units are encouraged to "make a night of it at Columbus State College's Cougar Field," Morrow said, all remaining home games would be free to soldiers and their family members.

So far, eight units have signed up to take advantage of the free baseball.

The first two unit nights are being sponsored by 1st Battalion, 507th Parachute Infantry Regiment, scheduled for Sunday night and the 2nd Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment, being the host unit Monday night.



The current schedule is July 19, 30th Adjutant General Battalion; July 25, School of the Americas; August 22, 36th Engineer Brigade; August 27, 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment; August 28, 3rd Battalion, 11th infantry Regiment.

The 3rd Brigade of the 3rd Infantry Division is also scheduled to host a baseball night, but a date has not been selected.

Units interested in hosting a night at Cougar Field should contact Sgt. 1st Class Art Murphy at 689-3272.

Come on in, don't be shy, we have girls to catch your eye.

Base camp backpacking provides camping options

Feature Outdoors

For some people there is no other way to camp except in a fully loaded campground. For others, camping means getting away from even the most primitive campgrounds.

There is definitely a big difference between "car" camping, and backcountry camping — hiking into remote, roadless destinations. It certainly gets you away from it all. But for those who seek a balance, you can enjoy the solitude of a tucked-away campsite without sacrificing all of the campground conveniences.

"When people think of backpacking, they picture a trip that goes from point A to point B in the wilderness, setting up camp along the way each night," said Linda Grebe, a marketing analyst. She also said there is another option.

"Instead of hiking all day and setting up a new campsite every night, you can hike in, establish a 'base camp', and plan your activities from there," Grebe said.

"Base camp backpacking allows you more options for planning your day and limits the time you spend hiking; whereas through-hikers typically hike all day, and sometimes have to hike longer than they wish to reach a suitable campsite before nightfall."

Kids especially need flexibility in their activities to stay interested and avoid getting overly tired. A hike from the camp can be a leisurely day of exploring the surrounding area, carrying only a daypack for essentials. You can hike to a nearby pond or stream for a day of solitary fishing or exploring the water's ridge.

Find an open field and fly a kite, then return to camp and relax with a good book or a game of cards. Establishing a base camp in mountainous regions allows you to travel more lightly up and down the summits, and cover more ground in less time.

Because you don't have to hike as long and far to a base camp, weight is not as much a factor, and you carry in more "luxury" items — a small cooler, a lantern, compact camping chairs, or extra fishing equipment.

Freeze-dried food, the staple of through-hikers, is not necessary for base-camp backpackers. Fresh fruits, vegetables and meats, if you have a place to keep them cold, can be packed into a base camp easily.

Pack a loaf of French bread or a bottle of wine into the side pocket of your backpack to enjoy with a hearty pasta dish. Try new ways to cook outdoors, and experiment with old recipes. Or, partially prepare some meals at home for quick meals at camp. Secure water bottles in a fast flowing stream all day, and serve cold with dinner. Remember to purify any water that comes from a stream or pond before drinking it.

With the freedom and solitude of backcountry camping, also come responsibilities. Conveniences such as running water, waste facilities and trash containers are not accessible. Backcountry campers are responsible for carrying out their trash and practicing low-impact camping. Some wilderness areas do not allow campfires, so you will need a cooking stove. Others do not allow camping within 200 feet of the trail or on fragile alpine areas.

The variety of activities are just as available in the backcountry as they are in campgrounds. Discover new wilderness areas, and you may just give up car camping for good.

Bradley training

Soldiers from Company B, 1st Battalion, 15th Infantry Regiment, 3rd Brigade, 3rd Infantry Division (Mechanized), demonstrate Bradley Fighting Vehicle training on Red Cloud Range June 20. The training was one of the events scheduled during the 15th Infantry Reunion. More than 50 soldiers and veterans participated in the week's events.

Mission ends, 586th returns

By Jacqué Hill
Special to the Bayonet©

Family and friends awaited the arrival of more than 100 soldiers from 586th Engineer Company (Assault Float Bridge), 36th Engineer Group (Combat), in the early morning of June 13 at Lawson Army Air Field.

These troops had been deployed to Croatia for six months and returned to Fort Benning that day. This was a shorter deployment than the unit expected, according to Capt. Gregory Gondeck, 586th commander.

"When we initially left, we were told to expect to be gone for a year," he said.

"It feels great to be back with family and to get back into a normal routine," said Gondeck of the company's return from Croatia.

Pfc. Kimber L. Tolson agreed.

"It feels really good to be back with my family," she said. "It was hard to leave them behind."

Tolson brought back more than memories from Croatia. She brought back knowledge, too.

"It just made me love my country more and all it's about," she said of the unit's deployment.

While deployed, the soldiers in 586th constructed a bridge, made up of three parts which they floated separately down the Sara River in order to assemble it. According to Gondeck, these bridge portions were floated a total of seven kilometers along the river and it took only three hours to put the bridge in.

"The biggest obstacle was the river itself," said Gondeck of the company's mission to construct the bridge.

"The biggest challenge was probably the last two months, or so, when we didn't have a lot of traffic crossing our bridge," he said. "Those last two months were tough keeping the morale of the soldiers up when our bridge wasn't being used as it should be."

According to at least one soldier, use of the bridge was key to her morale.

"My greatest moment was probably when we actually started carrying people across the bridge," said Tolson.

Most of the unit's soldiers found Croatia to be a pleasant area.

"The atmosphere in Croatia was very nice and they (Croatians) were very friendly," said Gondeck. "There were some very nice areas in Croatia where the people were very well-to-do."

Not all of their deployment was nice, though. There was an unidentified virus contracted by several of the unit's soldiers early in the deployment, according to Gondeck.

"Approximately 28 soldiers contracted the virus," he said. "It made you itch and breakout and run a fever."

Members of the 586th were quarantined for a short period of time to avoid spreading the airborne virus. According to Gondeck, the effects of the virus lasted from five to seven days, depending on the individual soldier who contracted it.

New commander coming to post

USAIC Public Affairs Office

The U.S. Army Infantry Center will receive a new commanding general during a change of command ceremony scheduled for 9 a.m. July 10 on York Field.

Maj. Gen. Carl F. Ernst will take command of Fort Benning from current Commanding General, Maj. Gen. John W. Hendrix.

Hendrix will be reassigned as the commanding general of the 3rd Infantry Division (Mechanized) at Fort Stewart, Ga. on July 15.

Ernst, presently assigned as the deputy chief of staff for training, Training and Doctrine Command, Fort Monroe, Va., is a previous deputy commanding general and assistant commandant of the infantry school.

AGENT ORANGE

Vets entitled to payments

Department of Veterans Affairs

Washington — President Clinton announced recently that Vietnam veterans afflicted with prostate cancer and acute and subacute peripheral neuropathy are entitled to disability payments based on their exposure to Agent Orange.

Clinton said that the Department of Veterans Affairs also will be proposing legislation that would provide an appropriate remedy for children of Vietnam veterans who suffer from spina bifida.

The decisions follow an in-depth VA review of a report issued in March by the National Academy of Sciences on the health effects of exposure to Agent Orange and other herbicides. NAS, under contract with VA, found that there is new limited or suggestive evidence to show an association with prostate cancer, acute and subacute peripheral neuropathy (a neurological disorder) in Vietnam veterans, and spina bifida (a congenital abnormality) in their children.

"I am deeply concerned about the NAS findings, particularly the suggestion that the children of Vietnam veterans may be at higher risk for spina bifida, since VA does not have the authority to provide benefits based on birth defects in veterans' children," said Secretary of Veterans Affairs Jesse Brown. "We will seek legislation that would provide an appropriate remedy."

Brown also said that he is directing that a regulation be developed as quickly as possible so that VA can begin compensating Vietnam veterans currently disabled from acute and subacute peripheral neuropathy, if manifested within one year of herbicide exposure, and those with prostate cancer.

"These benefits represent the continuing cost of war," Brown said.

Brown said that the VA decisions are based on statutory standards that are not ordinarily used for purposes of scientific inquiry.

"The evidence, pro and con, is quite evenly balanced regarding these conditions," Brown said. "But the

Citizen soldiers prepare for various deployments

By Lisa M. Hibbert
Bayonet staff writer

Citizen soldiers are playing an active role in Operation Joint Endeavor at Fort Benning as well as throughout the European theater.

Fifty-one soldiers from the 2145th Mobilization Troop Command, Tennessee National Guard Unit, Nashville, are manning Fort Benning's mobilization center on Sand Hill.

"We are responsible for housing and feeding the units and taking them to where they need to go," said Col. William A. Cragg, commander, 2145th Mobilization Troop Command.

At the Mobilization Troop Command, Army Reserve and Army National Guard units are processing through as they go to Bosnia, replacement units throughout Europe or to stateside processing units like the ones at Fort Benning.

One of the units that was processing through the Mobilization Command was the 158th Maintenance Company, Alabama National Guard, Tallassee, Ala.

More than 215 soldiers from the 158th are on their way to Hungary for a nine-month rotation to replace the forces that have been activated for Bosnia.

One of the soldiers was Staff Sgt. Frank Saxton, a Fort Benning employee who works in the initial issue at the 30th AG replacement detachment on Sand Hill..

"I am proud to be going to Hungary, but I am looking forward to retiring from the military when I come back," Saxton said.

Unlike Saxton who was tasked for this tour, Spc. Thurston Patton volunteered.

"I'm ready to go," Patton said. "I've never been to Hungary and I would like to see the country. I volunteered for this tour; I was not assigned to this unit a few days ago."

Patton is not the only soldier who volunteered for this tour, Chief Warrant Officer 4 Henry Thomas also volunteered.

"It was put out that this unit was looking for someone in my specialty, shop technician, to go to Hungary, so I volunteered," Thomas said.

The mission of the Individual Deployment Site in Harmony Church is similar to that of the Mobilization Command except individuals from the Army, Air Force, Navy, Marine Corps and civilians process through instead of whole units.

The IDS is being manned by 70 Army Reserve soldiers from the 801st Replacement Company of Antlers, Okla.

One difference in the two sites is some of the individuals are being deployed for shorter periods of time than the units, some will be there for a month.

"Some individuals who work in very specialized jobs were sent over to Bosnia, stayed about a month, and have already returned," said 1st Lt. Adele M. Kraus, executive operations officer, 801st Replacement Co.

Both of the reserve units have been activated for a possible 270-day rotation.

Four soldiers from the 213th Legal Detachment, Army Reserve, of Chamblee, Ga., have also been assigned to the IDS.

Many of the citizen soldiers who were called to active duty left family, friends, as well as jobs, behind. First Lt. John Bunnell, 213th Legal Detachment, had to reschedule an opportunity to appear on a game show.

"I was supposed to appear on Jeopardy, but I will have to reschedule it," Bunnell said. "Hopefully I will be able to go while I'm on active duty so that I can wear my uniform."

Active duty soldiers from Fort Benning are assisting the reserve units with identification cards, medical, dental and finance duties.

SUMMER READING

Students should maintain skills

By Richard W. Riley
U.S. Secretary of Education

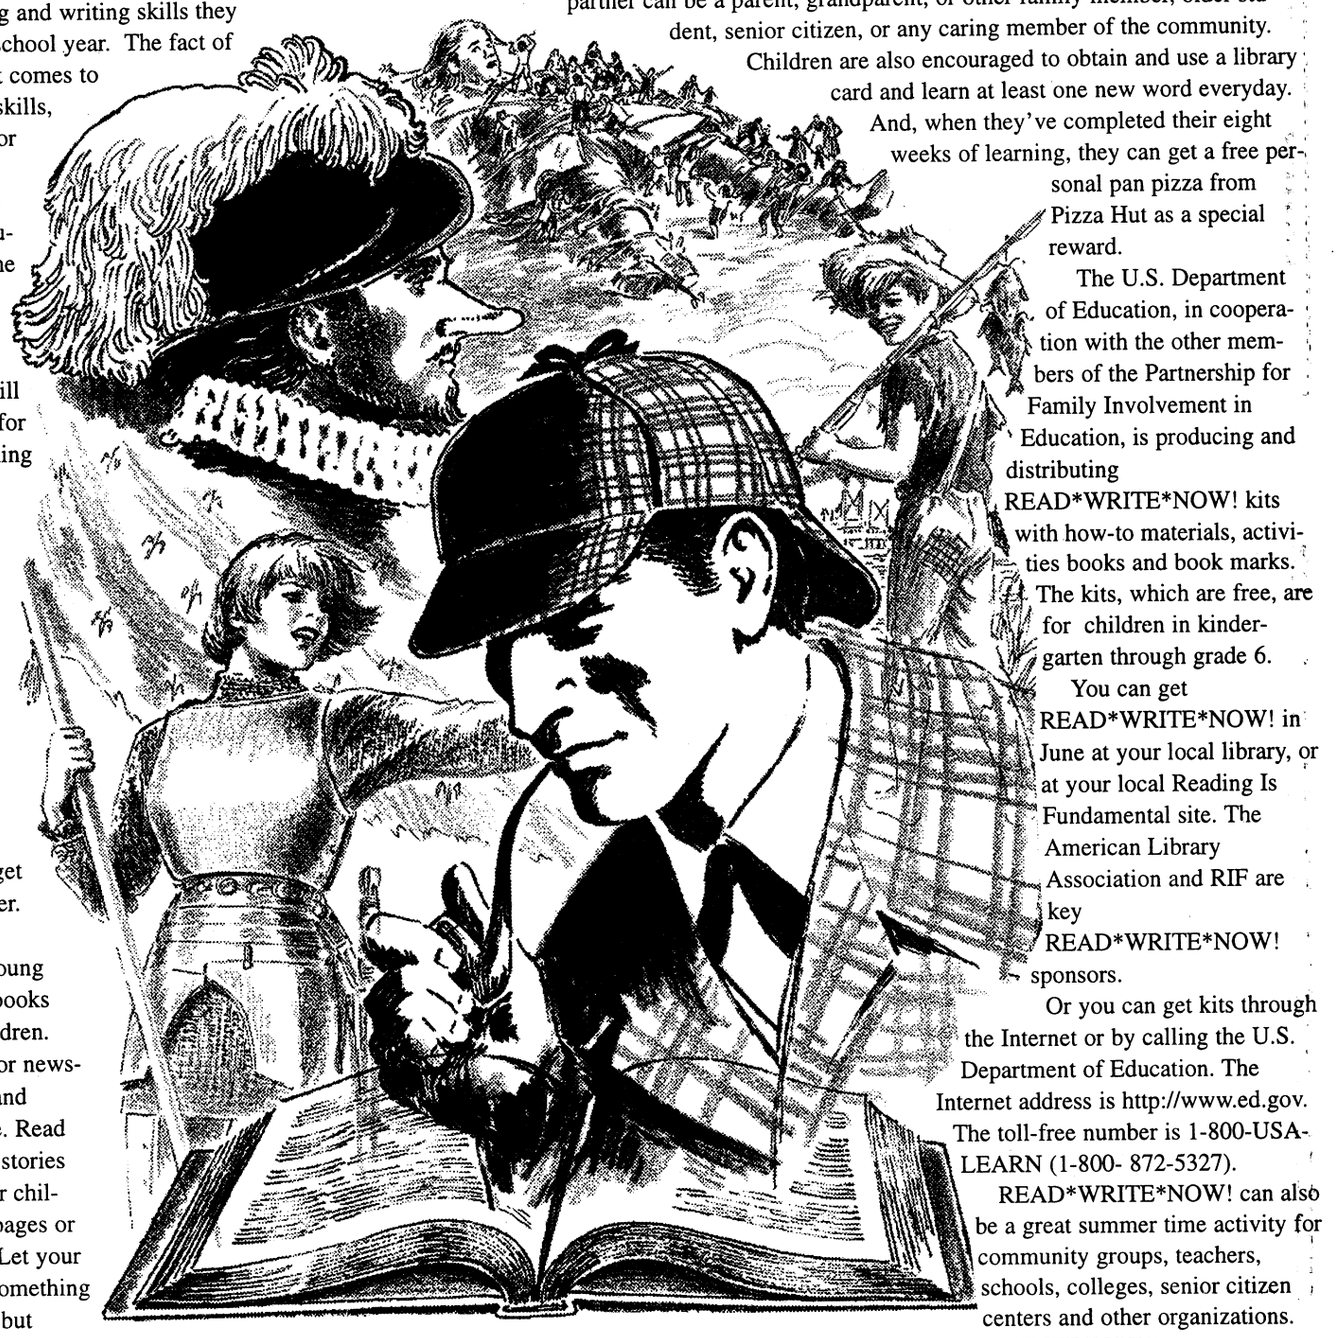
Kids all over America poured out of school doors, racing toward summer fun. They left their desks and classrooms behind. But did they also leave their learning behind? Unfortunately, many did.

Studies show that over the summer, students can lose up to three to four months of the reading and writing skills they acquired during the school year. The fact of the matter is, when it comes to reading and writing skills, you either use them or lose them.

That's why it's so important to keep students reading over the summer months, even if it's for only 30 minutes a day. Kids can read and still have plenty of time for playing ball, swimming and other summer activities.

Good reading habits, like all other educational activities, begin in the home. So my message to parents, grandparents, aunts, uncles and all other adults who are responsible for raising a child is this: get involved this summer. Here are some tips:

• Read to your young children and share books with your older children.



• Make a place for newspapers, magazines and books in your home. Read the important news stories of the day with your children, or the sports pages or the family section. Let your children pick out something that interests them, but read. And make sure your children see you reading.

• Take your children to the library and make sure they get a card. Show them that there are other places in the world to visit besides the video arcade at the mall.

• Limit TV viewing. Yes, I know that's a tall order. But when kids watch six or seven hours a day, we've got to say as parents, "Enough is enough — close the set and open a book!"

• Ask your children to write to relatives and friends. If you have access to a computer, have them send e-mail messages regularly because in this day and age, literacy means computer literacy, too.

• Participate in READ*WRITE*NOW!, the summer reading initiative sponsored by the national Partnership for Family Involvement in Education.

commentary

READ*WRITE*NOW! encourages children to practice their reading and writing for at least 30 minutes a day, five days a week, for eight weeks throughout the summer. Children also team up with a learning partner who provides extra guidance at least once a week for 30 minutes. A learning partner can be a parent, grandparent, or other family member, older student, senior citizen, or any caring member of the community.

Children are also encouraged to obtain and use a library card and learn at least one new word everyday. And, when they've completed their eight weeks of learning, they can get a free personal pan pizza from Pizza Hut as a special reward.

The U.S. Department of Education, in cooperation with the other members of the Partnership for Family Involvement in Education, is producing and distributing READ*WRITE*NOW! kits with how-to materials, activities books and book marks. The kits, which are free, are for children in kindergarten through grade 6.

You can get READ*WRITE*NOW! in June at your local library, or at your local Reading Is Fundamental site. The American Library Association and RIF are key READ*WRITE*NOW! sponsors.

Or you can get kits through the Internet or by calling the U.S. Department of Education. The Internet address is http://www.ed.gov. The toll-free number is 1-800-USA-LEARN (1-800- 872-5327).

READ*WRITE*NOW! can also be a great summer time activity for community groups, teachers, schools, colleges, senior citizen centers and other organizations.

This will be the second year of READ*WRITE*NOW! Last summer, 425,000 children and 125,000 reading partners participated all across America. This summer, we're aiming to reach more. If the American people really join in, we can reach a million kids — including the kids who are nearest and dearest to your heart.

We can really make a difference in the education of our children. Overall, American students are improving in math and science, but reading scores have been stagnant, and that's a problem for us. Virtually every job that is now created in America requires a high level of literacy to perform. Good reading is necessary to succeed in school, to obtain and hold a good job and to become a productive, contributing member of our society.

So we all have a stake in helping students to keep their reading and writing skills sharp, whether school is open or closed.

Women remain mysterious

By Glenn A. Johnson
Monitor staff, Fort Bliss, Texas

I was talking to an old friend of mine about women the other day and both of us have decided that we don't have a clue about how they think or what they want.

commentary

For instance, a female friend of mine loves John Wayne movies (always a plus in a woman) and thinks that he is very sexy; a real manly man. She also happens to think that the movie "The Quiet Man" is very romantic.

Now, if you have ever seen that movie, you would know that the Duke doesn't exactly treat Maureen O'Hara with kid gloves. He bends her arm around her back and plants a wet one on her without her permission. He drags her five miles across a field covered with sheep dung, kicking her twice in the process, so that he can give her back to her brother because he wouldn't give the price promised to the Duke for taking her off his hands.

Not exactly my idea of romance, yet, when some women watch this movie, they find themselves in a near swoon at the sight of such "romantic" behavior.

I guarantée that your significant other would not go home to fix you dinner like Miss O'Hara did for John Wayne if you were to try this sort of manhandling.

So, what exactly do women want? Who knows, I sure don't. It's kind of like the whole double word description thing that women do.

If you don't know what I'm talking about, just listen to a couple of women talk for a while. It goes something like this: "I went out on a date with him, but it wasn't a date date." Or, "Sure we kissed, but it wasn't a kiss kiss."

What the heck does that mean exactly? I spent money money on the dinner dinner. The conversation was what I would consider a conversation conversation, so why wasn't it a date date?

Now try this. Ask a woman when you pick her up at the door if the evening is going to be a "date date" and see what she says. I did once and I got this exact response, "I don't know what you are talking about. Where are you taking me to dinner?" Draw your own conclusions.

The final mystery is the "you know" game. It goes something like this: after being at a gathering of some sort, you are on the way home and your significant other pipes up with, "I can't believe you did that in front of everybody."

"Did what?" you reply innocently.

"You know!" she replies with open disgust, not only for your alleged actions, but at your stupidity at not being able to read her mind.

My advice in this situation is to say nothing and to hope in the upcoming session of being verbally emasculated, you can glean some knowledge as to what she is talking about.

So, still the question. What do women want? I don't know. I suspect that the mystery lies in the fact that most women don't know what they want either.

But, for you kindred lost souls out there like me, I offer this advice. Never hit or verbally abuse women; never answer their questions without first asking, "What do you mean?" And finally, fake unconsciousness at every convenient moment.

Sgt. Jeffery Obermuller, Company B, 1st Battalion, 15th Infantry Regiment, explains to the 15th Regt. reunion attendees the capabilities of the Bradley Fighting Vehicle at Red Cloud Range.

1/15th reunion fosters camaraderie

Robin A. Shawlinski
3rd Bde., 3rd Infantry Division

War stories, fallen comrades, the Army past and present, honorary colonels and unit pride were the topics of discussion for soldiers and veterans of the 15th Infantry Regiment last week.

Soldiers from the 3rd Battalion, 15th Infantry Regiment from Fort Stewart, Ga., the 1st Battalion, 15th Inf. Regt. on Kelley Hill and veterans of the 15th Inf. Regt. participated in many of the events during the 15th Infantry reunion June 18 to 21.

The participants began the week with a get-together in Columbus.

"This gave (the veterans) the chance to get acquainted with us and and our chain of command," said Maj. Ricardo Riera, 1st Bn., 15th Inf. executive officer. "It also gave us a chance to get to know the association members.

The week continued with the annual association meeting where it was decided that the 15th Infantry Regiment Association will be presenting the 15th Infantry Regiment Soldier and Noncommissioned Officer of the Year plaques and will be invited to attend the 3rd Infantry Division reunion Sept. 6 through 9 in Pittsburgh.

While the reunion was a chance to reminisce about the past, the 15th Infantry Regiment veterans also got an opportunity to see present day soldiers in action. Soldiers from Company B, 1st Bn., 15th Inf. conducted Bradley Fighting Vehicle training showing them fire power capabilities, movement capabilities and features of the Bradley.

"They showed an interest in (present day) battle," Riera said. "They wanted to become familiar with what soldiers of today carry to battle."

Later in the week, the veterans and soldiers got another chance to get to know each other with a day of golf and some tours in Columbus.

Riera said the reunion is beneficial for past and current soldiers.

"(The past soldiers) need to see that the traditions and deeds they performed while they were in are still in effect," he said. "(The current soldiers) get to see those who have formed the unit's reputation with service and blood. It sets the tone of what is to be expected in the future."

Edwin Adams, treasurer of the 15th Infantry Regiment also said the reunion was good for past and present soldiers.

"There is a lot of heraldry and history in this unit and it's great to impart that on the current soldiers," he said. "It's also like a family reunion because we all share a common bond."

The week climaxed with the China Gate Ceremony at the China Gate monument on Morrison Ave.

During the ceremony, the Association dedicated a plaque depicting the 15th Regiment's involvement in combat to Fort Benning.

The ceremony also performed a change of command ceremony for the Regiment's Honorary Colonels.

Retired Maj. Gen. Maurice W. Kendall relinquished his position to retired Maj. Gen. James G. Boatner.

Boatner was born in Tientsin, China March 28, 1930. He graduated from the U.S. Military Academy in 1951 and commissioned an infantry officer.

Boatner served in combat as a rifle platoon leader and rifle company commander with the 15th Infantry Regiment during the Korean War and as commander of the 4th Battalion, 12th Infantry in Vietnam. Currently, he is the President of the Robinson Terminal Warehouse Corporation in Alexandria, Va.

Boatner said it was an honor to serve as the honorary colonel.

"I'm very pleased to be the honorary colonel," he said. "My family has been associated with the regiment for a long time."

Boatner's father was a member of the regiment in China.

Executive order ends Vietnam combat zone

By Stephen Barrett
American Forces Press Service

WASHINGTON — Combat pay and special tax benefits end Sunday for U.S. service members assigned in Vietnam, although imminent danger pay will continue for duty in the Southeast Asian nation.

The change comes following President Clinton's executive order May 14 declaring Vietnam no longer a combat zone. Clinton's order repeals the one signed over 30 years ago by President Johnson.

Defense officials, in a recent information paper, said the combat zone designation remained in effect for service members missing from the conflict.

"With the passage of time since the last POW (prisoner of war in Vietnam) was declared dead and the president's decision to normalize relations, the designation of a Vietnam combat zone was no longer necessary or appropriate," said the study.

Combat benefits are based on a service member's pay grade. After June 30, those benefits will drop to the standard $150 monthly imminent danger pay.

The biggest effect of the order is the end of tax benefits. Under current law, all enlisted and warrant officer pay earned in a combat zone is tax exempt. Commissioned officers serving in Vietnam, benefiting from a tax law change tied to Operation Joint Endeavor, could claim over $4,200 per month of their income tax free.

The study adds that as relations with Vietnam government progress, more service members may see assignments to Vietnam. "Tax exclusions would be applicable unless the combat zone designation were terminated," said a spokesman with DoD's compensation office. "Vietnam no longer merits the designation."

Defense officials said only a handful of active duty service members are stationed in Vietnam, but 30-member DoD investigation teams travel to Vietnam about six times a year. Officials said those service members are eligible for imminent danger pay.

Only the Persian Gulf region remains as a designated combat zone. U.S. forces serving in Bosnia-Herzegovina, Macedonia and Croatia as part of Operation Joint Endeavor currently receive tax and monetary benefits "as if" they were in a combat zone.

Operation Joint Endeavor continues in full swing

By Lisa M. Hibbert
Bayonet staff writer

Operation Joint Endeavor is still in full swing and soldiers from Fort Benning are still being deployed to Bosnia.

Seven military police officers from the 988th Military Police Company left Fort Benning for Bosnia June 9 to relieve seven soldiers from the same unit that have been there since December.

"The Department of the Army needed approximately 180 soldiers to augment the MPs in Bosnia," said Capt. David Lewis, commander, 988th MP Co. "The soldiers on the first list were DA selected. For the second rotation, we replaced the soldiers over there by selecting people of equal rank."

While in Bosnia, the MP's that have been there since December have served in a variety of positions.

"Two worked a security detail for a brigade commander, one worked security in an S-2 shop and the others were in various line units," Lewis said.

The mission of the soldiers going over now has not yet been determined.

The initial seven MP's will be arriving back at Fort Benning within the next two weeks. The second rotation will be in Bosnia for a 179 days.

Americans to ring their bells in celebration of Independence Day

By Jacqué Hill
Special to the Bayonet©

"Let Freedom Ring," an Independence Day celebration coordinated by the Pennsylvania Society of the Sons of the Revolution, will begin at 2 p.m. July 4.

Any American may participate in the event by ringing a bell at exactly 2 p.m. on Independence Day. As people across the nation ring bells simultaneously, the centennial bell that hangs in the tower of Independence Hall will be ringing and the Liberty Bell will be symbolically rung 13 times by descendants of the leaders who signed the Declaration of Independence.

During the celebration, radio stations across the country are scheduled to air bell ringing for a one-minute duration.

The bell ringing celebration honors America's founding fathers, dedicated soldiers and its freedom, according to Master Sgt. Phillip Prater, Office of the Chief of Public Affairs.

"The celebration allows us to reflect upon the courage and resolve of those first patriots who set the example of true dedication and sacrifice for all of us who have since followed in service to this great nation," Prater said.

36th Eng. soldiers head north to Olympics

13th Corps Support Battalion

The 13th Corps Support Battalion, 36th Engineer Group (Combat), are deploying to Atlanta and will provide combat services and base operations support to a portion of the estimated 10,000 to 12,000 National Guard soldiers from throughout the country, which are being activated to augment for the Olympic Games.

Soldiers began deploying to Atlanta June 10 and will continue through July 1.

The battalion was notified in February that they would be deployed to support the Olympics and has been planning the operation since then.

Because of the timing of the Olympics deployment so soon after the return from National Training Center, the battalion staff began planning for both missions simultaneously, said Maj. Michael E. Lynch, Support Operations officer.

"This mission will involve more of our soldiers than the NTC did, but not as much equipment," Lynch said. "It's not our normal mission, but we're looking forward to it.

"We're use to tailoring our unit to fit our various missions, and we will do so this time," Lynch said.

The battalion will be augmented by soldiers coming from several other installations throughout the United States.

"We have soldiers who will be coming from as far away as Fort Hood to be attached to the battalion for the mission."

The plan is to operate base camps which will provide billets, food, transportation, laundry, administrative services, recreational facilities and security for incoming soldiers, Lynch said.

The base camp will be operated at three schools in Dekalb County, northeast of Atlanta. Each will be established by a company and commanded by a company commander. The battalion headquarters will also deploy and will coordinate all activities.

Each base camp will house 650 to 950 soldiers from all Army components and from other services and DOD agencies. The reserve component soldiers will rotate through in two-week increments corresponding to their annual training dates.

Despite having just returned from a month-long deployment, the soldiers of the 13th CSB are upbeat about the mission and are looking forward to a new opportunity.

"The world is coming to 'HOT-lanta,'" said Spc. Vanessa Witzman, 598th Maintenance Company. "There is nothing greater than to have the chance to support the country and the world. This is a once-in-a-lifetime deal."

Some of the soldiers may be able to attend some of the events during their off-duty time.

"Our soldiers are excited about it," said Capt. Rene Brown, commander of 598th Maintenance Company. "They know they might get a chance to see the Olympics, and that doesn't happen every day. It's not our normal wartime mission, but we're always ready to deploy."

In addition to the support provided to the base camps, the battalion will operate a bus marshaling area in Atlanta.

"We will coordinate the movements of all buses carrying athletes and soldiers between Olympic villages, base camps and venues," Lynch said.

The battalion is also providing contracting officer representatives will monitor a variety of contracts that provide laundry, dry cleaning, food, facility management and waste removal service.

In August, the 13th CSB will operate a support unit to assist with the Paralympic Games. This unit to be composed of an additional 100 soldiers and will deploy during the first week of August.

"I think this is a great opportunity," said Spc. Valerie Wisniewski, 608th Ordnance Company. "I've worked with Special Olympics before, and it was very rewarding. I'm looking forward to working at the Paralympics because these disabled athletes are very inspirational."

The battalion is a multifunctional support unit attached to the 36th Engineer Group in peacetime, but assigned to the 1st Corps Support Command at Fort Bragg in wartime.

The Battalion's support to the 36th Engineer Group (Combat) and the Fort Benning community will continue throughout the deployment. A large portion of the battalion will remain at Fort Benning, and the full range of ammunition, transportation and maintenance support will still be available.

VETS: Treatment expands

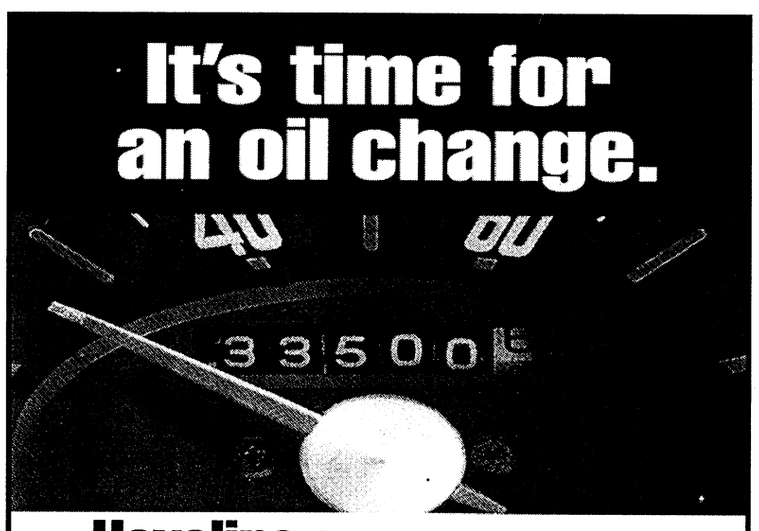
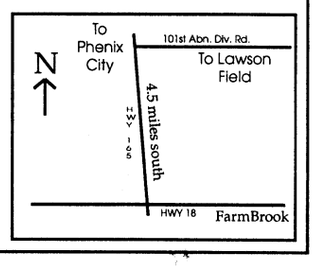
President and I firmly believe that VA needs to be on the side of veterans and their children."



VA estimates that potentially up to 3,000 children of Vietnam veterans may be afflicted with spina bifida.

Within 60 days, VA will publish in the Federal Register for public comment the proposed rule on prostate cancer and acute and subacute peripheral neuropathy, with a final rule published in October. Approximately 2.6 million veterans served within the borders of South Vietnam and in adjacent waters. Vietnam veterans are not required to prove exposure to Agent Orange; VA presumes that all military personnel who served in Vietnam were exposed to Agent Orange.

In response to the NAS report, VA also will be increasing funding for research to learn more about the possible relationship between herbicide exposure and the development of birth defects, including spina bifida and other health problems in veterans' offspring.



VA currently recognizes seven diseases as presumptively related to exposure to Agent Orange and other herbicides: chloracne, porphyria cutanea tarda, soft tissue sarcoma, Hodgkin's disease, multiple myeloma, respiratory cancers (lung, bronchus, larynx, trachea) and nonhodgkin's lymphoma.

Vietnam veterans who believe they have health problems that may be related to their exposure to Agent Orange while serving in Vietnam or their survivors should contact the nearest VA medical center or regional office. VA's nationwide toll-free number is 1-800-827-1000.

DFAS to change travel pay procedure

The Defense Finance and Accounting Service-Indianapolis is changing the process and format in which travelers receive information concerning their travel payment.

Beginning in August, travelers will receive a simplified advice of payment printed concurrently with the check or Electronic Fund Transaction. The AOP provides the essential information travelers need regarding their payment on one single sheet of paper in the same format they submitted the settlement voucher.

In February, a sample of the new travel AOP was sent to 3,500 government travelers services by DFAS-IN Operating Locations. The response was overwhelming. The survey reflected a 90% acceptance level.

For more information on travel AOP, call (317) 542-2405 or DSN 699-2405.

DFAS centralizes disbursement

The most current initiative from the Defense Finance and Accounting Service is centralized disbursing. The focus of this initiative is on centralizing check writing and electronic funds transfers functions at the Indianapolis Center. Under centralized disbursing, the Indianapolis Center will take advantage of high speed equipment to prepare and mail all payments for the operating locations. Accompanying each payment will be a simplified advice of payment designed to provide the payee with an easy to read explanation of what the payment represents. DFAS surveyed travelers and vendors and received a favorable response.

The first phase of centralized disbursing was kicked off in April and the printing of checks for the Fort Benning OPLOC began June 3.

INFANTRY FUTURE

TRADOC plans ahead

By Jim Caldwell
Army News Service

FORT MONROE, Va. — If crystal balls exist, a group of officers at Training and Doctrine Command headquarters could use one. They're trying to see 30 years into the future for the "Army After Next."

The Army After Next is the one that will follow Army XXI, with capabilities to serve the country after 2010, according to Gen. William W. Hartzog, TRADOC commander. The project will "conduct broad studies of likely development of warfare" until about 2025, he said.

"The program will provide these issues to senior Army leadership in a format suitable for integration into Army combat development programs, and to be leveraged in other government programs, as appropriate," Hartzog said.

"Normally ... 15, 18, maybe 20 years, that's about all you can legitimately take a look at and have people believe that you're not writing science fiction," said Col. Michael Starry, who heads the AAN team. Starry is also director of future battle under TRADOC's deputy chief of staff for doctrine.

"Our job is to keep it related to what we're doing today, even though we're trying to look at a 30-year future.

"We have a benign period, if you will, where we have no strong competitors in a super power sense and where we can take some risks and do some different things," Starry said.

The exercise in predicting the future is being done at the direction of Gen. Dennis J. Reimer, Army chief of staff. He tasked TRADOC with trying to figure out what capabilities the Army after Army XXI will need.

"We want senior folks in industry, in business, in government, the other services and the Army to participate in investigating those four azimuths," Starry said.

Sister services, other government agencies and private think tanks and laboratories are also trying to define the future, and the AAN team will have access to their efforts.

All such information, as well as studies conducted by team members, will be synthesized into a "white paper," a report to be delivered to Gen. Reimer each summer.

The other major annual event is a winter wargame to be held at the Army War College, Carlisle Barracks, Pa.

The ultimate goal is to produce an Army that wins wars, not just individual battles on specified battlefields, Hartzog said.

"This broadens considerably the scope and depth of AAN research and invites multi-service participation at every opportunity," Hartzog said. "Winter wargames will therefore be global in scope, replicate spectrum of warfare from strategic-political to tactical, and they will be fundamentally joint in nature."

Although AAN work is related to the Force XXI process, that of developing Army XXI, the project will not be tied to the restrictions of the Army's annual budget program requirements and deadlines.

"We will raise issues about possible future developments," said Lt. Col. Gregory Conover. "If the Chief (Gen. Reimer) thinks they may be of significant value, he will task TRADOC to investigate them more fully."

It is vital that the Army knows what the future might bring because it is the Army that has the ability to carry out national policy over a wider range of situations.

Cadets complete training program

By John W. Peeler
Special to The Bayonet©

Three Reserve Officer Training Corps cadets completed Phase I of the Nurse Summer Training Program Monday at Martin Army Community Hospital and have left for Phase II being conducted at Fort Lewis, Wash.

Program Coordinator Maj. Mary-Beth Coty said the NSTP is a two-phase program for junior or senior ROTC nursing students with Phase I, the clinical phase, being conducted at Fort Benning.

Coty said the cadets arrived May 28 and will now enter the second phase of training, the field phase, at Fort Lewis, Wash.

Coty said the primary purpose of the program was to provide the ROTC nurse students with leadership opportunities and leadership roles and to focus on what it is like to be a lieutenant in the Army Nurse Corps.

"This was my first year as a program coordinator for the program," Coty said. "It was given to me as a special project.

"This is the annual training for junior or senior ROTC nursing students. Normally, we get the cadets one summer before they graduate college."

Coty said each cadet was assigned a lieutenant (preceptor) to work with.

"The preceptor has a lot of experience and the cadets work the same shifts right along side of the lieutenant in the clinical area," Coty said.

"Each cadet was assigned to a different clinical area. We have one cadet that works in the emergency room, one in the intensive care unit and one in the orthopedic and pediatrics clinic," Coty said.

One cadet, Colin Ratner, who was assigned to the emergency room, said he felt one of the major benefits of the program was the ability to learn nursing as a military officer, rather than just a student in a college environment.

"The program takes a two-step approach to nursing," Ratner said. "First we have nursing, then we have leadership as an officer.

"I have only positive things to say about the program."

All three ROTC nursing students echoed Ratner's observations of the program.

Cadet Dianne Paraoan, who conducted her training in the orthopedic and pediatric clinics, said her experience at MACH was beneficial because of the "hands on" aspect of the training.

Paraoan, who attends York college at Pennsylvania University, said she received a scholarship out of high school and decided on the nursing field because of her desire to help people.

Cadet Jamey Walden said the experience in the intensive care unit was an invaluable experience in his training.

"We can not get this kind of experience at our universities," Walden said. "Not only do we get the hands-on experience in the clinic, we also got the chance to learn about leadership."

Ratner said that because of the program, his college (Indiana University of Pennsylvania) has made five scholarships permanently available to nursing students.

Deployed soldiers attend school

Army News Service

BOSNIA — When asked what they did during Operation Joint Endeavor, some soldiers will be able to give an educated answer.

Thanks to the Army Continuing Education System, in cooperation with three U.S. institutions of higher learning, Task Force Eagle soldiers are taking college classes, correspondence courses and receiving other educational services.

Never have deployed U.S. soldiers received such an array of educational opportunities so early in a deployment, said Mike Tevnan, ACES educational service officer.

"One of the lessons learned from previous deployments was that sometimes soldiers deployed were not staying as competitive as soldiers in the rear because of a lack of military or civilian education," Tevnan said. "So the Department of the Army said we need to make sure soldiers get educational opportunities."

Tevnan and six other ACES specialists arrived during February and March to set up education centers for soldiers.

They have established centers at Eagle Base, Lukavac, Steel Castle, Bedrock and Gentry Base, and will soon open one at Camp Angela.

During the spring semester, nearly 1,000 soldiers registered for classes offered by the University of Maryland, Central Texas College and the City Colleges of Chicago.

More than half of those enrolled were at Lukavac, where the first center was established.

And, while most of the students are taking general

Soldiers of tomorrow begin training today

Army News Service

To say that tomorrow's soldiers must be brighter and more skilled is almost cliche.

Faced with new technology, such as that found on the Paladin and Crusader howitzers, the soldiers of Force XXI will fight in an environment scarcely conceived 15 years ago.

The 1st Battalion, 78th Field Artillery, and the 1st Battalion, 19th Field Artillery, are striving to redefine Basic Cannoneer One Station Unit Training at Fort Sill, Okla.

Given the Field Artillery Training Center commander's vision of what skills a Force XXI soldier will require, they are developing a curriculum to meet this need. The soldiers of Battery D, 1st Bn., 19th Field Artillery, are among the first to experience this new direction.

Capt. Dwayne Mayton, Battery D commander, added his approval to the new training.

"Total Army units in the field require that each and every soldier coming into units have as many crucial skills as possible. As an OSUT battery, we saw an opportunity to add to this units' bottom line; to graduate each soldier with wartime mission critical training.

"The current graduate of OSUT receives only introductory instruction in artillery crew drill in addition to their basic training," said Mayton. "Col. Thomas Costello, the Field Artillery Training Center commander, realized that our training program had to change to reflect the additional skills the artilleryman of the future will require. He commissioned a study of our current curriculum, which was called "Path to Change."

"The additional training that field units require in these areas is normally done by the gaining commands. We recognized an opportunity to greatly enhance Total Army combat readiness by alleviating a field unit's need to devote this valuable training time," said Mayton.

Starting with an average class size of 140 and an already full plate of Army and Training and Doctrine Command mandated training, the cadre of 1st Bn., 19th Field Artillery, and the 1st Bn., 78th Field Artillery, realized they would have to cooperate to accomplish the mission.

"We had the soldiers and training resources, but very little extra time," said Capt. Terry Ivester, Battery B, 1st Bn., 78th Field Artillery commander. "We've done training like this before, but never to this degree. Our plan required a lot of flexibility."

"We had limited time, and my cadre had to squeeze this additional training into an already busy schedule" said Mayton. "We decided to focus on three areas of concern to field commanders: first aid, driving skills and gunnery."

Army Training Center's combat lifesaver program, led by Sgt. 1st Class Robert Voskoyan of Battery C, 1st Bn., 78th Field Artillery, tackled the first aid instruction.

"It amazed me to see these men, just six weeks into basic training, actually starting IV's in each other's arms," Mayton said. "They had complete confidence in themselves and their training. They proved that they could learn quickly and apply these skills."

After first aid, the next most desirable skill a cannoneer could have is drivers training.

"Cannon batteries never seem to have enough trained drivers. We wanted to try to fix that," said Mayton.

Working with Staff Sgt. Fonza Daniels of Headquarters and Headquarters Battery, 1st Bn., 78th Field Artillery, they expanded the existing drivers training program to instruct 35 soldiers from Battery D.

This training included tracked vehicles, such as the howitzer and heavy wheeled trucks up to five tons. These soldiers will practice their driving skills during upcoming field training exercises. Upon graduation, they will take their new talents to their gaining units.

Another 30 soldiers will be exposed to advanced gunnery skills as participants in the Fast Tracker program. While the rest of their class is training in basic cannoneer tasks, these Fast Trackers will learn the skills of howitzer gunners and assistant gunners.

They will learn how to use the howitzer site systems to lay, elevate and aim their guns during dry- and live-fire training. After successful completion of this demanding program, they receive a letter of commendation from the battalion commander.

This is just the beginning. Plans are in the works to incorporate decision-making and computer classes in the near future. The cannoneer of today is certain to be the section chief and platoon sergeant of tomorrow.

Future: Plans begin on Army After Next

"The Army is an amazingly flexible instrument," Starry said. "I can't imagine an F-15 squadron being broken apart for constabulary duties in Bosnia. You take a crew off an aircraft carrier, you've got the same problem. But you take a division ... and you still have an effective tool to execute the nation's will."

The AAN team wants their vision of future militaries to be a solid one and not based on fashionable theories of the moment. For example, they point out that some groups in the 1960s said revolutionary warfare was what the future held. By the 1970s, that opinion had changed to warfare by terrorism. Today, many military analysts think that the future U.S. Army will only be involved in operations other than war.

"We are assuming right now ... we are going to deal with a world system, international system, that's geopolitically based with ... emphasis on economics," Starry said. "Technological surprise in the form of a piece of equipment or technology is probably not likely."

Studying history is just as important for the AAN team as inputs from futurists.

"Militaries have been successful not because of what they invent, but because of how they adapt," said Col. Robert Killebrew, assistant Deputy Chief of staff for Doctrine.

New aircraft begins joint Army, Air Force effort

By Andy M. Drury
Army News Service

WARNER ROBINS AIR FORCE BASE — On every front, ranging from acquisition reform to the front lines of battle, the Joint Surveillance and Target Attack Radar System, or Joint STARS, program has been a "shining example of success," said Gen. Henry Viccellio Jr., commander of Air Force Materiel Command, at an aircraft turnover ceremony recently.

The 93rd Air Control Wing accepted the first production E-8C aircraft from the Air Force Materiel Command.

The Joint STARS program, brand new to the Department of Defense, and a joint venture between the Air Force and Army will boast a 19-plane fleet by 2004 that will be outfitted with the most advanced technology in radar and computer data systems.

The planes are the first developmental aircraft ever to be called to war. Joint STARS aircraft have been used in operations Desert Shield and Desert Storm, as well as Operation Joint Endeavor late last year. Joint STARS is a long-range, air-to-ground surveillance system that has the ability to locate and track ground targets, as well as transmit data to mobile units on the ground.

"Your teamwork both on and off the field has been a perfect model for joint operations," Viccellio said. "This is the most advanced air-ground surveillance system in the world."

In terms of acquisition reform, the program has reduced requirements for defense acquisition board documents from 46 to eight and has reduced the number of data submissions required from the contractor from 250 to 52.

Repair cycle times have been reduced by 18 percent, Viccellio said. In addition, the local depot saved more than $30 million by ensuring that Robins personnel can use existing technical data in place.

"Joint STARS is nothing less than a supernova," Viccellio continued, praising the various team players involved in the project. "This has been teamwork at its very best. We never want to fly in combat without a Joint STARS kind of system."

Gen. Richard Hawley, commander of Air Combat Command, said the aircraft has already proven itself. "It is a real tribute to the scientists, engineers, technicians and the Army and Air Force teams who had the vision to say we can build an airplane that can deliver a picture of the ground situation equivalent to what we enjoy with AWACS in the air," Hawley said. "(The planes) have gone to combat twice and saved American and Allied lives."

When the full complement of Joint STARS arrive at Robins over the next eight years, the program will employ 2,500 civilian, contract and military personnel which adds one more advantage to the Joint Stars Program.

During recent events, a ceremonial key was presented by representatives of the plane's manufacturers, Northrop Grumman, to Col. Robert Chedister, system program director for Joint STARS. He, in turn, passed the key to Col. Ben Robinson, commander of the 93rd wing. Robinson then handed the key to representatives of the 93rd maintenance and operations personnel.

School: Soldiers learn

While most of the students are taking general education classes such as English and Math 101, ACES Lukavac Education Services Specialist Manny Iglesias said one soldier, Chief Warrant Officer Kelly Fuller, recently finished the one class he needed to earn a bachelor's degree.

"The funny part is that (Fuller) was enrolled in two seminars with me (back in Germany) that were canceled because of a lack of enrollment," Iglesias said. "Then he got deployed.

"I thought he was going to kiss me when he saw me here (in Lukavac)."

Most students, however, are just starting down the path toward an associate's or bachelor's degree.

"I had no civilian education other than high school," said Pfc. Scott M. Vannatter of Company D, 123rd Main Support Battalion. "Right now I'm working on the basics, but I'm thinking about majoring in mechanical engineering."

The 21-year old Muncie, Ind., native said the classroom instruction has helped him enjoy classes, such as English, that he hated in high school.

Tevnan said that video and correspondence courses are also popular.

University of Maryland professor Steve Holowenzak has taught troops from Saudi Arabia to Iceland.

"I love to be here with the soldiers," he said. "I have a lot of respect for the soldiers. They have their missions, their family and, on top of all that, they pursue their educational goals, too."

CAMP HAMPTON, BOSNIA — In just one week, the Apache attack helicopter pilots of Troop C, 6th Squadron, 6th Cavalry, 11th Aviation Regiment, flew more hours then they would in a normal month back in their home base of Illesheim, Germany.

The unit and its aircraft recently replaced Troops D, E and F, 1st Squadron, 1st Cavalry, and its fleet of old Cobra attack helicopters.

Pilots had to learn their new routes quickly. This meant they spent little time on the ground, while crews spent little time off their feet.

Flight Line Supervisor Sgt. Richard W. Fee of Harlen, Ky., said maintaining the aircraft the first two weeks required round-the-clock work.

"It was very hectic at first," Fee said. "Because of the increased amount of flight hours our tempo was higher than usual, but we handled it."

Sgt. 1st Class Ronnie A. Souder, flight platoon sergeant from Cincinnati agreed. "The first week, we hit the ground with just a small advance party," he said. "We put in a lot of long hours maintaining the aircraft and I'm proud to say they've held up extremely well."

Now that pilots have learned their routes, things have settled down.

But Fee and the other flight sergeants said they continue to work hard to keep the pilots flying.

"There is a loyalty between the crew chiefs and pilots," he said. "When the aircraft takes off, you know that you've completed your mission and the pilots will be able to complete theirs."

Fee said the Apaches require extra special attention.

"The Apaches are our babies, our main concern," he said. And with a smile, Fee said, "They're not like a vehicle which you can pull over to the side of the road - they have to be in excellent condition."

With many months of patrols ahead in all kinds of weather, the crew chiefs here expect to be very busy.

A 20-year veteran, Souder expressed confidence that his soldiers will meet the task. "I'm a seasoned soldier and was trained by the best," Souder said. "I'm going to train and mentor my soldiers as hard as I can.

"I'm going to be there for them," he said, "(because) we're all in this together."

Principal of year

Dexter chief receives national recognition for excellence in leadership

By Amy Durham
Special to the Bayonet©

Getting sent to the principal's office is usually perceived by many children to be a frightening experience, but not at Fort Benning's Herbert J. Dexter Elementary School. Principal Vicki Rogers creates a relaxed and comfortable environment for her students with an open door policy.

Her warm and caring approach to children and learning is reflected in her Dexter office, where plants, a collection of bunnies and posters depicting children in various activities blend in with Rogers' books and paperwork.

And for her ability to nurture a positive sense of teamwork with a strong commitment to excellence in learning, Rogers has been selected by the Department of Education and the National Association of Elementary School Principals, as a 1996 Distinguished Principal. Rogers was one of two principals selected to represent the Department of Defense Education Activity in competition for this award.

Designed to recognize excellence among elementary school principals, the award provides an opportunity to highlight the vital leadership role they play in a school's success.

And success is no stranger to Dexter School. A Georgia School of Excellence, Dexter is home to many innovative programs — which Rogers said was a major factor in her selection as principal of the year.

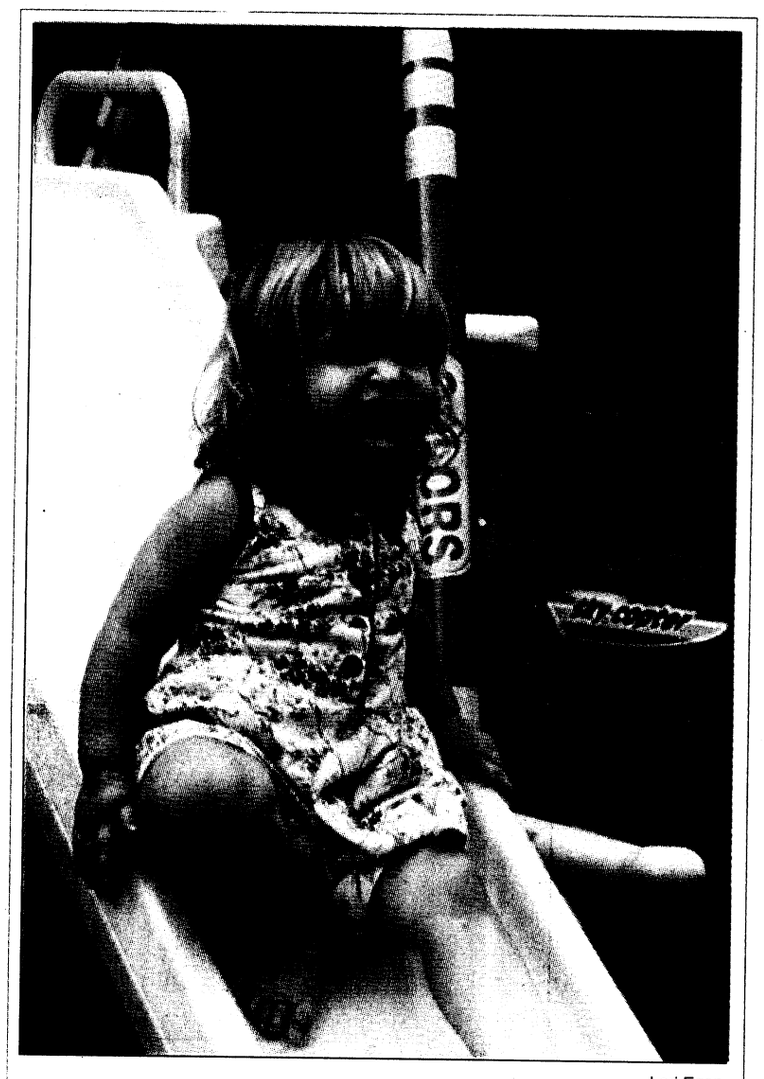
Rogers

"After putting all the information (about Dexter's program) together," she said, "I was surprised to see how much we have actually accomplished."

A believer in learning as a lifelong process, Rogers said she and the entire staff like to use technology as a tool for learning. "We know the world of business tells us that children need to be technology proficient and that they need to be good communicators," she said. "So technology is integrated throughout the entire learning process, in not only science and math, but social studies and language arts as well.

"And we have children work together in cooperative groups so that they can collaborate together as a team."

The Dexter staff provides various extracurricular programs which support of educational goals, Rogers said. The school has a buddy trail — a problem-solving trail in which older children help younger ones master problems along the way. Students who participate in the Green Thumbs club are able to take advantage of lab conditions in their on-site greenhouse. And according to Rogers, several technology programs allow students to interact via on-line communication.



Dexter students participate in the Galaxy Distance Learning program in which they interact with students from around the world.

"Our students are able to compare data from experiments with children in other regions of the world who may be conducting a similar project," she said.

The school's students have participated, for several years, in the International Arctic Project and the Mount Vaughan Antarctic Expedition. "Our children actually go on-line with explorers on the expedition," she said, "and the explorers have come here to visit."

One of the explorers has become the school's hero. Ninety-year-old Norman Vaughan is in constant communication with the children, according to

Inline skating requires skill, various safety precautions

Infantry Branch Safety Office

Most kids learn how to roller skate at a fairly young age. Old-fashioned steel-wheeled skates have given way to sleek nylon-wheeled models, while many teenagers and young adults have switched to skateboards or inline skates.

Roller skating, inline skating and skateboarding can be fun and exciting tests of skill and balance, satisfy a thirst for speed and even combine transportation with exercise. However, they can also injure or maim both the one skating and any pedestrians or other skaters who happen to be "in the way."

Typical consequences of unprotected or unsafe skating include scrapes, bruises, sprains, bone fractures and head injuries. More serious injuries, for example, a collision with a vehicle, can include paralysis, coma or death. Some basic "rules of the road" can keep these self-propelled and gravity-propelled modes of movement safe and sane.

What to wear

The basic safety gear for all these skating activities includes a helmet (like the type used for bicycling), elbow pads, knee pads and gloves. As for the rest of the uniform, it helps to wear clothing that allows freedom of movement without getting caught up in the wheels of the skate or a passing tree. Flowing dresses are definitely out.

Ice vs. pavement skating

Those who are skilled ice skaters should not assume that inline skating will be a cinch. When someone falls on the ice, their momentum is redistributed into the energy of sliding across the ice. This property is not available on other surfaces. Also, most ice skates (except hockey blades) have teeth on the front of each blade that dig into the ice when a skater lands from a jump. Roller skates designed for competition have a rubber stop on the toe that serves the same purpose on floors. However, many models of roller skates and inline skates do not have this rubber toe grip. So, it becomes very dangerous to try to execute jumps and other ice skating moves on pavement.

Fancy dancing

It may be tempting for kids to jump up or down steps on a skateboard or roller skates, to race across a street by jumping the curbs against a "don't walk" light or to quickly weave through a crowd of window shoppers on a busy sidewalk, especially if others are doing it. However, such antics make the skater an accident waiting to happen.

Most skateboards, for instance, have only makeshift "braking" techniques: jumping or falling off the board at high speed or colliding with something. Inconsiderate skaters also tend to generate ill will toward skaters in general. Skaters and skateboarders should practice tricky steps or jumps in an area set aside for that activity, wearing recommended safety equipment and, if possible, following the advice of an experienced competitor or trainer.

Abuse of public areas may not only land the skater on his or her back, the community could outlaw it, if it hasn't done so already. Safety and good public relations go hand in hand when it comes to skating on pavement.

School board evaluates training, student scores

Fort Benning students rate well on two standardized tests

By Amy Durham
Special to the Bayonet©

Fort Benning scores on the Iowa Test of Basic Skills were significantly above the national average, said Dell Karr, Fort Benning schools superintendent, during the board's regular meeting Monday.

"Our goal is to have all scores at least at the national average, which is the 50th percentile," Karr said.

The above average rating on the ITBS — a test which is used to find out how much each child has learned of what they've been taught — was especially welcome to administrators since this year marked a "renorming of the standardized test." Karr explained that the renorming is a statistical procedure that ensures the testing company is using the appropriate standards and that the schools are getting valid results.

"When we are in a year when we use new norms," Karr said, "it is more difficult to show increases over the previous year because students have to score higher just to maintain the scoring average, and then several more points to show an actual increase on the test."

One successful score increase was the problem solving area. According to Karr, in 1990, the system average was 45 percent, while in 1996, the system average rose to 58 percent, reflecting an increase of 13 percentage points which Karr attributed to greater strides in the schools' math and science programs.

"We are quite pleased with our scores."

The other test administered to the post's second and fifth graders is the Cognitive Abilities Test which Karr told board members measures each child's capabilities to learn coming into the classroom.

Special education

Ever changing demographics is the challenge and success behind the post's special education program, according to Tommye Woods, director of Special Education.

Woods briefed board members of the changes in special education requirements and services.

"The definition of special education has changed over the years," Woods said, "as the continuum of services becomes broader."

Woods explained that in the past, schools brought special education children in but educated them in separate classrooms. But the pendulum has been swinging in the other direction, she said, as educators move toward "inclusion."

"At Fort Benning, we refer to it as collaboration," Woods said.

Collaboration includes special education children in regular classrooms the majority of the time, she said. This also allows the special education teacher to follow the students into the regular classroom.

Woods noted the obvious advantage. Each classroom benefits from two teachers as the regular education teacher works with special education children while the special education teacher works with the regular education students.

"Our ultimate goal is that we can accommodate all special education children's needs," she said.

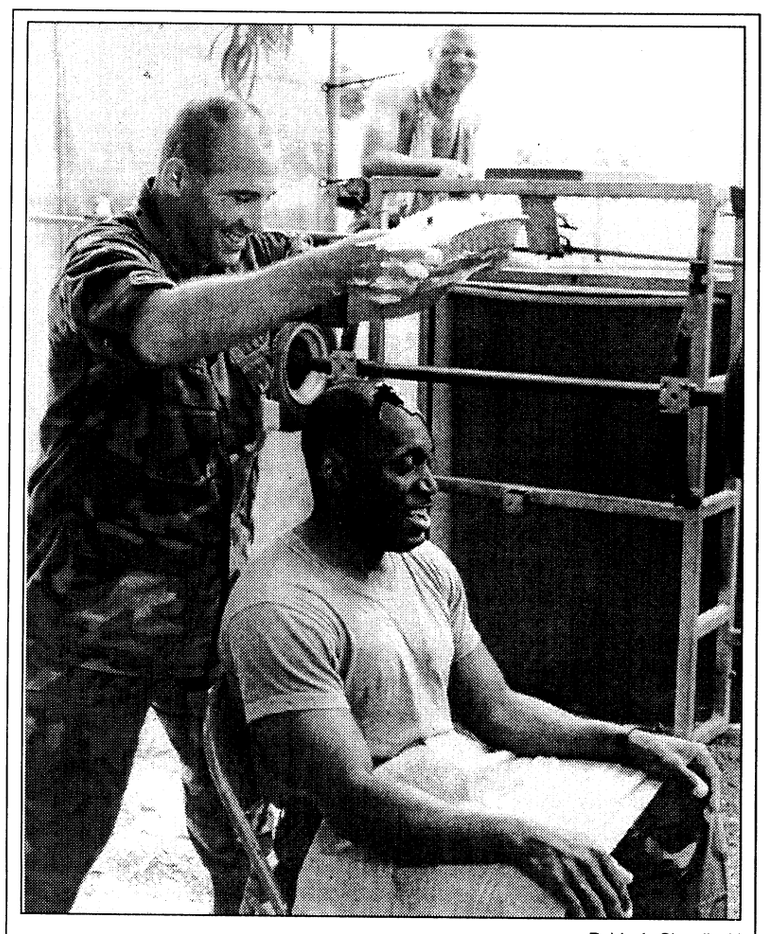
Citing the necessary measures to ensure collaboration's success, Woods said, "We don't put them in a regular classroom just to say we put them there. We have to train regular education teachers to meet the special education students' needs."

Staff development

While the students are away, the teachers continue to study.

Jerry Christy, curriculum coordinator, briefed board members that Fort Benning school teachers have been and will continue to participate in staff development training throughout the summer.

While the staff development program continues to be a major focus, Christy said, during his summary of system-wide courses, that site-based efforts have increased this year. As teachers press forward in their efforts to prepare children for the ever changing world, Christy said the emphasis has been on technology courses to teachers throughout the school year, and the summer courses will emphasize math.



Lunchroom fund

In other business, Alice Skinner, director of Logistics, presented the School Lunchroom Fund data for May. According to Skinner, the monthly net income for May was $8,677, while year-to-date gain was $48,473 and the current fund equity was $114,890.

Skinner also said feedback from a recent audit of the consolidated lunchroom fund (from 1993 to 1st quarter of 1996) was very positive. Skinner cited Shirley Putnam, director of Child Nutrition, as a key player in the program's continuing success.

During the meeting, Col. Gregory Camp, president, presented Putnam a plaque for her "tremendous work" on the school lunchroom fund, and "outstanding dedicated service." Putnam is leaving Fort Benning Schools due to a move.

Board members present were: Col. Gregory C. Camp, president; Rhoda Zerger, Dexter School representative; Col. David Brown, Faith School representative; Sgt. Joe Todd, Loyd School representative; Lt. Col. Stephanie Willson, attorney; Dr. Dell Karr, superintendent; Richard Skinner, assistant superintendent for budget and personnel; Alice Skinner, director of logistics; and Dianne Hilt, vice president, Benning Education Association.

Safety tips strike against dangers of lightning

The force behind this power is responsible for more than $250 million in property damage in U.S.

Lightning Protection Institute

Lightning season has begun in the United States, according to the National Weather Service.

Most Americans can expect to witness roughly 30 to 35 thunderstorms through September, with most occurring in the central and eastern regions of the country.

Lightning packs up to 100 million volts into a space of about one inch. An average bolt holds enough current to light a 100-watt light bulb for three months. The force behind this power is responsible for more than $250 million in property damage annually in the U.S. alone. Most of the damage is to homes and businesses, with more than 30,000 damaged by direct strikes or through lightning transients that are induced onto power lines.

The Lightning Protection Institute cites lightning as responsible for more than 30 percent of church fires, while the National Fire Protection Association lists lightning as the number one cause of fire in rural areas, and a leading cause of fire in urban areas (second only to defective flues and faulty wiring).

"It's impossible to predict where and when lightning will strike," said Vladimir Rakov, associate professor of electrical engineering with the Lightning Research Laboratory at the University of Florida in Gainesville. "Lightning's properties continue to baffle our researchers, even though we've been studying the subject for more than 20 years."

Beyond extensive property damage, lightning claims about 80 to 100 lives annually — more than hurricanes and tornadoes combined.

"Many lightning-related deaths, injuries and property damage are needless and preventable," said Andrew Larsen, executive director of the Lightning Protection Institute. "The safest place to be in a thunderstorm is a building equipped with a properly installed lightning protection system."

According to Larsen, a properly installed protection system forces lightning's harmful electrical discharge onto a specified path, dissipating the current, thereby eliminating damage by fire or explosion within non-conductive parts of a structure. The system intercepts the electrical charge and safely guides the current to the ground.

Rakov agrees. "The effectiveness of the lightning protection system depends on the quality of the system," he said. "There are three basic parts to a protection system — the lightning rods, which intercept the lightning; the downward lead, which conducts the lightning to the ground; and the grounding rod itself. If any one part is missing, the system will be ineffective."

Rakov also stresses the importance of connections between all three parts, which must be welded or bolted together. Proper connections prevent gaps that could permit sparking and ignite fires.

Being aware of changing weather conditions and knowing how to react in a storm can save lives. LPI offers the following safety tips to help consumers "weather" the storm season:

- Seek shelter in a protected structure — one guarded by a lightning protection system, which safely harnesses the energy of a strike.
- Avoid contact with the stove, sink, plumbing fixtures, electric appliances and metal objects. Never use the telephone.
- When outdoors, keep away from trees, metal fences, poles and similar upward-projecting objects.
- In a grove of trees, take shelter under the smallest tree and avoid step voltage injury by staying a minimum of 100 feet away from the most prominent tree or highest point.
- Practice the "flash and bang" method for measuring lightning distance (time from seeing the stroke to hearing thunder). For every slow count of five, lightning is one mile away — a count of 10 equals two miles away, etc. At a count of five, take immediate defensive action. Seek safety in a protected shelter.
- On a golf course, seek shelter in a protected structure (never an isolated shed, which can become a lightning trap), or find a ditch, staying crouched as closely to the ground as possible.
- In the event of injury, call 911 and stay with the victim until help arrives. Victims can suffer electric shock, but won't carry a charge and can be touched to administer care. If the victim is not breathing and has a pulse, administer artificial respiration; if no pulse, begin cardiopulmonary resuscitation. Follow up with a physician.

To obtain a free booklet on lightning and safety tips, or information on lightning protection systems and a list of LPI-certified professionals, send a self-addressed stamped business-size envelope to: LPI, 3335 N. Arlington Heights Rd., Suite Arlington Heights, Ill. 60004.

The Lightning Protection Institute is a national not-for-profit organization based near Chicago, which promotes lightning safety and lightning awareness.

ask the judge

By Michael H. Lane
Office of the Staff Judge Advocate

Q. I am retired, living in Columbus and have been drawing retirement pay for a number of years. Now that I have turned 62, I have been told that I will be eligible for a tax credit from Georgia. Can you tell me how this works, and will it affect my wife's pension, too?

A. In Georgia, taxpayers over 62 years of age are allowed to exclude up to $12,000 of retirement income when computing their Georgia taxes. The exclusion applies to each taxpayer individually, which means that a couple could both claim the exemption if each qualifies. The provisions of the law are summarized below, with examples following.

- The taxpayer must be age 62 or older, or totally disabled.
- The exclusion is a $12,000 maximum for each taxpayer, or up to $24,000 on a joint return if each qualifies.
- A taxpayer may use up to $4000 of his earned income (from W-2) to reach the $12,000 figure. All unearned income (interest, dividends,and the like) may be considered to reach the $12,000 limit.
- For jointly held unearned income, each spouse may only use one-half of the income in computing his or her separate $12,000 maximum amount.

To illustrate the workings of the law, consider these examples:

- Single taxpayer over 62 has W-2 earnings of $12,500, savings account interest of $500 and pension income of $5500, for a federal adjusted gross income of $18,500. On his Georgia return he will be able to exclude $4000 of his W-2 earnings, all $5500 from his pension, and the interest of $500 (unearned income), a total of $10,000, leaving $8,500 reported as the Georgia adjusted income on his return.
- Taxpayer and spouse are over 62. Neither one works. He receives $10,500 in pension income; she receives $5000 from a CD in her name only. They have $2000 in interest on a joint bank account. Their federal adjusted gross income is $17,500. If they file jointly in Georgia, he excludes the entire $10,500 of his pension, and $1000 (half) from the joint bank account, a total of $11,500. She excludes $6000 ($5000 from her CD, $1000 from the joint bank account). Their Georgia adjusted gross income is zero.

It is important to note that there has been and continues to be a complete exclusion of all Social Security income in Georgia, even if some was reported on the federal return. This amount is excluded in addition to the pension amounts discussed above.

If you have any questions concerning this issue, you may contact the Legal Assistance Office at 545-3282 for an appointment. You may also call or visit the Georgia Department of Revenue Columbus Office at 649-7451. There is an agent on duty to answer your questions about Georgia taxes.

Dexter:

Principal earns recognition for leadership

Rogers, and as she said, has inspired a number of Dexter students to write poetry and books, one of which Vaughan read at his National Geographic Press Conference in Washington, D.C. last year.

But Vaughan is not the only one who reads what the school students write. Rogers said it is not uncommon for one of the children to enter her office and read to her a book they've written.

"It's very important for the children to work hard," she said, "but it is just as important that they celebrate their successes."

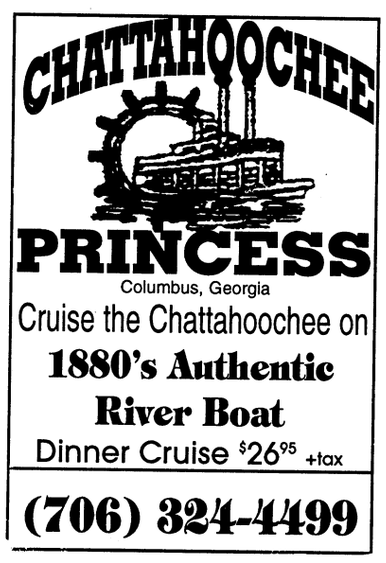
And it is the work and success of which Rogers has always wanted to be a part. So her office door remains open, her calendar is always clear and her heart ready to give to another child.

"The time I spend with the children is the most rewarding thing to me.

"I never considered any other career," she said. "For as long as I can remember, I have wanted to be a teacher."

Rogers spent 12 years in the classroom teaching and worked with Georgia Department of Education as a teacher assessment specialist. She is in her 10th year at Fort Benning, the last six of which Rogers has been the principal at Dexter School.

She is also committed to community service. Rogers serves as secretary of the Buena Vista Chamber of Commerce in her hometown; she also serves on the Public Relations Committee of the Columbus Literacy Board.



"Community service is very important to me," she said. "It is something I need to do, and I enjoy doing."

As for her career motivation, Rogers said she is in the business of educating simply for the children. "We need to make sure our children are ready."

But Rogers refuses to take credit for all that Dexter School provides Fort Benning's children. A firm believer that teachers must be empowered to use their talents and expertise to make decisions effecting each child's learning experience, Rogers, honored by her recognition, said Dexter's and, consequently, her own success is based on team effort.

Rogers will accept her award during a two-day visit in Washington D.C. Sept. 19 and 20.

SOA library summer reading program reaches across barriers

By Judith O'Toole
School of the Americas

What are you going to do with those kids this summer?

Around this time every year, parents have to face this dilemma. Will they send them to day care for the summer? What about the older kids; what will they do?

Well, before you shell out a lot of bucks shipping them off to some camp in the mountains, think about the John B. Amos Library Children's Summer Program at the School of the Americas.

The library at SOA will have two summer programs this year, said Yamill Collazo, SOA librarian. One will be a story telling session, and the other will be a movie program.

During the summer, a story teller will come to the SOA library to read stories to the children. They will be told in both English and Spanish, to accommodate the bilingual needs of the school. Children between the ages of 6 and 10 can attend the story telling, which is every other Thursday at 1 p.m. and began June 20.

The movie program is every other Thursday at 1 p.m. and started Thursday. Only "G" rated movies will be shown to the 6- to 12-year-old children who attend. Children who are dependents of either military personnel or of Department of Defense civilian employees are welcome to attend one or both of these programs.

Collazo said this is the fourth year SOA library has had the Children's Summer Program and the staff is looking forward to another year of fun with the children who participate.

God can restore broken lives

By Vern E. Jordan II
Infantry Training Brigade

The prophet Joel recounts, in Chapter 2, verse 25, an incident of great devastation in Israel. It was destruction of such magnitude as never had been seen before or since. He urged his hearers to tell their children, and their children's children and the generation after that so that no one would ever forget. What was the destruction?

It was the devastation of a great swarm of locust which destroyed the grapevines, the olive groves and the wheat and barley fields.

It was not unusual for locust to swarm from time to time, but this was destruction so great that it would take years to rebuild the grape vineyards and the olive groves. In the meantime, there would be no harvest. There would be no grain to feed families or sheep or cattle. There would be no grain to use in guilt offerings to the Lord.

Joel understood this devastation to be God's judgment on the nation for its sins. What sins? Joel never describes the sin. I think this is to our advantage. If he did describe the sin, we in our generation might likely be tempted to say, "Well, at least I didn't commit the sins of Israel as described by Joel." In this way, we might lull ourselves into spiritual slumber thinking we are without need of repentance.

reflections

Yet, Joel calls for an assembly of repentance. How could they repent when there was no grain to offer as a guilt offering? There can be no greater realization than when we realize that in and of ourselves we have nothing to offer God for our restoration to fellowship with Him.

The suggestion offered by Joel was to tear their hearts not their clothes. The tearing of clothing was used as a symbol of great remorse,. but anyone can tear clothing. Genuine remorse and repentance comes when our hearts are torn in grief because of our sin.

Tucked away in this short prophecy is a verse that gives us our hope. It says, "And I will restore to you the years that the locust have eaten." (Joel 2:25, KJV)

What a message of hope. When we express true repentance, God will restore what his discipline in our lives has destroyed as indicated by the above scripture. When our sinful, selfish hearts eat away at our relationships, God will restore what was lost when, with God's help, we express true repentance.

With God's help, true repentance, and a little nurturing, broken marriages can be restored. When parents and children are heart-broken over the squabbles that alienate them, God can restore their relationship. With genuine repentance and God's help, coworkers can repair the rifts that break down working relationships.

What would you like God to restore in your life? Is there a sin for which you should repent? What can you nurture to bring restoration and healing? Who can you make peace with by an act of true repentance?

Scriptures guide believers

By Vincent de P. Burns
Infantry Training Brigade

The custom of the Jewish people was to come together to listen to the scripture being read and explained to them. Somehow, they equated the word of God with the law by which they directed their lives. They saw a value in two very important practices.

reflections

First, they thought it was valuable and necessary to come together as a community. Second, they thought it was important to listen to the word of God being proclaimed to them by the priest or scribe, and then clarified or interpreted for them by a prophet or someone who had become skilled in the scripture passages.

In the first chapter of Luke, the author mentions a specific occasion when Jesus was in his hometown of Nazareth and he went into the synagogue on the Sabbath and stood up to do the reading. Notice that Luke was trying to point out to us that this was not at all a rare occasion or a different experience. He specifically says that Jesus was in the habit of doing this. He doesn't want us to miss that important point.

Luke writes that Jesus was handed the book of the prophet Isaiah, and he deliberately opened it to the passage that referred to the prophecy of the Messiah: "The Spirit of the Lord was upon me; therefore he has anointed me. He has sent me to bring glad tidings to the poor, to proclaim liberty to captives, recovery of sight to the blind and release to prisoners."

Try to imagine the impact that Christ made on them when he said, "Today this Scripture passage is fulfilled in your hearing." These are people who had known Christ since he was a boy. They had watched him grow up within their community and they certainly knew his family. To them, he was the son of the local carpenter, and probably would eventually become a carpenter himself. They were used to hearing him proclaim the scripture readings in the synagogue, and this happened often. But to hear him identify himself as the Savior and the Messiah that God had promised through Isaiah and the other prophets, this was more than they could handle.

I think this event in the life of Christ answers some of the questions that we ask — questions asked particularly by young people who are trying to find a direction in their lives. Why should I believe in Jesus? Because Jesus identifies himself as the one sent by God — the fulfillment of the prophecies — and he performs miracles for those who are reluctant to believe.

Why do I need to go to Church? Because there is the need to worship, the need to pray as community, the grace that we receive in connecting with God, and to keep the Sabbath Day holy.

Why can't I pray alone? You can and should pray alone, but our tradition has tried to convince us of the need and value of praying with a community of believers. Anyone who reads the Scripture will realize that God has always called the people together.

What can Christ do for you? He can put your life together, give meaning and purpose to your life, give you the grace and the guts to deal with the problems and pain that you experience.

What can the Church do for you? Saint Paul best answers this question for us in his letter to the Corinthians when he speaks of us as the body of Christ. Through baptism, we are all members of the body of Christ connected with Christ and connected with one another.

When we gather for prayer, wherever that happens to be, we are doing what our customs and tradition tell us to do. We are doing what Christ has invited us to do. We do it because there is nothing on earth more powerful than the word of God that we hear in the scripture. We do it because we believe it.

Braves, Rockies tie in finale

By John W. Peeler
Special to The Bayonet©

In a nail-biter reminiscent of the professional baseball's Atlanta Braves, the Youth Services Braves and Rockies battled to a 10-10 tie in their season finale at Green Field June 22.

Pitchers from both teams started strong with Rockies pitcher, Alexander Taylor, striking out three of five batters in the first inning leaving two Braves batters on base going into the bottom half of the first.

Braves pitcher Patrick Funkouser responded by striking out three of six batters faced, stranding three on base ending the first inning.

Funkouser had some problems with the Rockies batters as the second inning got under way with three of the first four batters reaching base. By the time Funkouser retired the side, six runs had scored with the Rockies taking a 6-0 second inning lead.

Taylor walked six batters in the bottom of the second inning allowing four Braves' runs to score.

The Braves were not finished for the inning as Funkouser slammed a double into center field scoring one more run.

Taylor retired two batters in a row sending the Rockies into the top of the third with a slim 6-5 lead.

The Braves held the Rockies to one run in the top of the third with solid team defense and an impressive performance by Funkouser.

Going into the bottom of the third with the Rockies holding a 7-5 lead, the Braves began to heat up the bats. They scored five runs to take their first lead of the game at 10-7.

With the 95-degree heat bearing down on the Braves defense, the Rockies were able to push across three runs in the top of the fourth to knot the score at 10-10.

With time expiring in the game, the Braves would have one more chance to try and win the game.

Rockies relief pitcher Treton Slone had other plans for the Braves as he retired three of the five batters he faced giving the Rockies one final at-bat to win the game.

Funkouser stayed in as the Braves pitcher but appeared to be tired as he took the field.

The Rockies first batter grounded out bringing up Leon Frazier in the second slot.

With the count one and one, Frazier slammed a triple into right field.

With the go-ahead run on third, Funkouser walked the next batter putting runners on first and third base.

Facing the fourth batter in the line-up, Funkouser only took three pitches to record the second out of the inning.

The Braves fielders were obviously tense as the next batter walked up to the plate.

Funkouser got behind on the count two balls and one strike before throwing an off-speed curve down the middle to even the count at two and two.

Funkouser's next pitch missed low and outside bringing up a full count with two outs with a runner in scoring position.

Funkouser momentarily stepped off the mound taking a deep breath and looked over into the Braves dugout to his teammates and coaches.

With a look of confidence on his face, Funkouser stepped back on the mound and delivered a fast ball right down the middle of the plate for a called strike three.

Both benches erupted onto the field cheering and congratulating each other as the teams finished the season in a 10-10 tie and satisfied the season did not end with a loss.

Golf tournament raises money for Santa's Castle

By John W. Peeler
Special to The Bayonet©

Santa may not have been at the Follow Me Golf Course, but 83 of his helpers from across post were on hand to participate in the Santa's Castle golf scramble June 21.

The tournament, sponsored by Santa's Castle and staffed by volunteers from 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment, collected $1,728 which will be used to purchase toys for needy service members children at Christmas time.

Capt. Michael Quirion, the tournament chairman, said the tournament raised most of the money through player registration; however, there were also two donations made.

"The Enlisted Wives Club made a donation of $500 and we received another donation of $200 from a tournament conducted a couple of months ago," Quirion said.

Trophies and prizes were awarded for first through third place, umbrellas for fourth and special prizes for closest to the hole on number 16, longest drive on 11, most accurate tee shot on 10 and longest putt on 18.

The team of Dempsey Williams, Steve Schook, Henry Scott and Ned Woolfolk took first place with a 53 for the course.

The team of Dennis Pabian, Gregory Patterson, Kevin Beaudan and David Belcher finished in second place three strokes behind the leaders with a 62.

John Vete, Timothy Hanscom, Marcia Flo and the new Follow Me Golf Course Superintendent and accomplished golfer Ray Meredith rounded out the top three with the team of Joseph Chatfield, Dean Hoffman, Kirk Deviere and Mark Hannon finishing in fourth.

Larry Wark won the closest to the hole award with Williams taking the longest drive award, Robert Radcliff made the most accurate tee shot and Meredith took the longest putt prize.

The next tournament for the Follow Me Golf Course is the Holiday Golf Tournament on July 4.

For more information on the upcoming tournament call George Cliff at 687-1940.

Green water can produce quality bass

By Earl Bentz and Steve Price
Outboard Marine Corporation

Bass fishermen often use the term "off-color" to describe the type of water they prefer to fish, but former world champion angler Ken Cook has a better description: green.

"When I'm looking for bass on any lake, I look for fertile water because that means plankton is present and the entire food chain can be operating," said Cook. Fertile water tends to be slightly greenish and with visibility two to about six feet underwater."

"Normally, fertility tends to be better on the upper end of a lake," he said.

"Do not to mistake muddy water as fertile water, since the upper ends of many reservoirs also tend to be more muddy or dingy," said Cook.

"A lake is considered fertile when it has dissolved nutrients like phosphorous, nitrogen and potassium naturally occurring from the soil. When these are present, sunshine will start the process of photosynthesis with plankton, which represents the bottom of the food chain for bass.

"Now, if the water is too muddy, light penetration is limited and photosynthesis cannot take place. That means there won't be much plankton and thus fewer bass will be present," he said.

When faced with these conditions, Cook often looks for the transition zone between the muddy water and the more fertile greenish water.

"Water can also be too fertile, which is generally recognizable by its extreme greenish color," he said. "This is frequently a problem in summer because of the long hours of sunshine.

"When too much plankton is present, it actually uses up all the oxygen in that area, so the bass leave. When the plankton 'bloom' is widespread, a fish die-off can occur," he said.

Water that is too fertile like this usually has visibility of about 14 inches or less. If you lose sight of your spinnerbait or crankbait that quickly, you need to be fishing in another area."

"Certain tributary creeks of embankments on various lakes often gain reputations for being more fertile than other parts of the same lakes," Cook said. "An indication of this is when one area tends to produce outstanding catches year after year.

"During a national tournament on Lake Livingston in Texas last year, the top three positions all came from the same tributary creek and when we fish Lake Mead in Nevada, everyone heads to a spot known as Vegas Wash because it's more fertile than the rest of the lake," he said.

"Anglers fishing a lake for the first time should inquire about historically productive areas of that lake, and when they see them personally, the water there will nearly always be greenish in color because it's fertile."

Light tackle should bring more strikes

By Earl Bentz and Steve Price
Outboard Marine Corporation

"Light tackle is not a cure-all, but in most cases it does bring more strikes."

That's the opinion of former world champion bass fisherman Guido Hibdon, generally regarded as one of the top light line and small lure anglers in professional tournament bass fishing.

Hibdon's definition of light tackle includes lures ranging in weight from 1/8 down to 1/32 ounce and lines testing between six and 10 pounds. He uses these with open face spinning reels and sensitive rods with fast tips.

"I've been using tackle like this for more than 35 years, so I'm comfortable with it," said the pro from Missouri, "but a lot of fishermen have trouble using light tackle. It's a lot different from ordinary bait-casting equipment so it takes some practice before you feel comfortable using it."

"The primary difference between light and heavy tackle," said Hibdon, "is how much more active lures are when fished on lighter lines."

"This is the true key to light tackle fishing," he feels. "Even 1/8 ounce lures work much better on six or eight pound test line than on 10 pound test line. The heavier the line, the stiffer it is, and the stiffer it is, the less a lure can move."

At the same time, said the pro, there is also a big difference between a lure weighing 1/8 ounce and one weighing 3/16 ounce.

"The real difference is in the rate of fall," Hibdon said. "Naturally, a heavier lure falls faster than a lighter one, but because the rate of fall is really critical in light tackle, you have to learn to distinguish between the two lures, and that just takes a lot of practice."

"In light tackle fishing, in which the majority of lures are jig-type baits, most strikes come as the lure is falling, so the best way to fish such a lure is by creating multiple falls," Hibdon continued.

"Thus, hopping or jigging these lures up off the bottom is normally more effective than crawling them along the bottom. I don't work my lures very much, but I do try to create multiple falls."

Many anglers associate light tackle with unusually short rods, often less than five feet in length. Hibdon, however, does not like short rods and certainly doesn't believe they're necessary for light lines and lures.

"I prefer a spinning rod just over six feet in length," he said. "To me, having a fast, sensitive tip is the most important part of a light tackle rod. That tip is what allows you to cast a light lure, feel a barely detectable strike, and then set the hook."

"Going from heavier tackle to such light equipment is a hard transition," he said, "but once they gain confidence in it, most anglers really enjoy it. The lures work better and generate more strikes, and that's what fishing is all about."

FORT BENNING

CG reflects on home of infantry

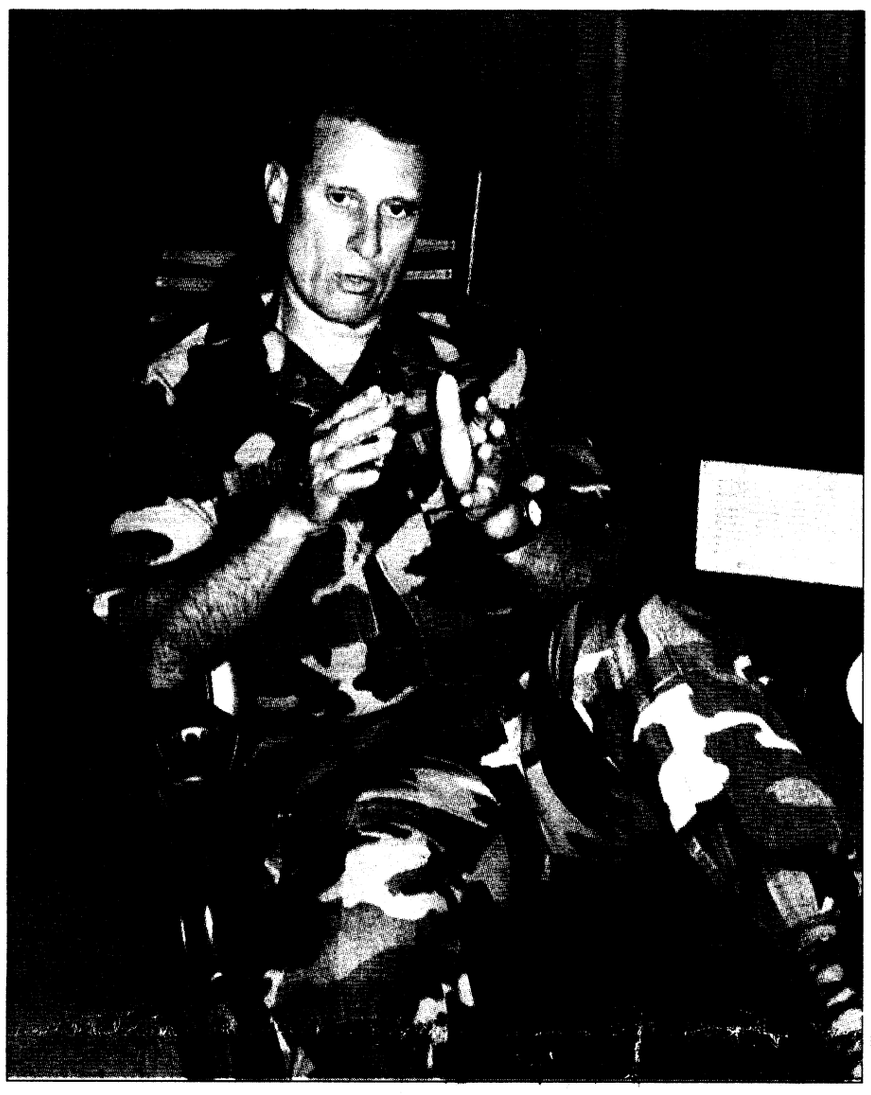
By Lisa M. Hibbert
Bayonet staff writer

As Maj. Gen. John W. Hendrix, Fort Benning's commanding general, prepares to move to his next assignment as division commander for the 3rd Infantry Division, Fort Stewart, Ga., he said he would like to be remembered for helping to transition the infantry to the 21st century.

"There was a challenge to get the infantry transitioned to the 21st century during the drawdown, and there was the challenge of keeping the (soldiers) trained and ready for the world as it exists in 1996," Hendrix said. "We've been able to achieve those two targets."

Improving warfare and maintaining Army readiness is what Hendrix said he is most proud of.

"We train the privates, sergeants, lieutenants and captains (at the U.S. Army Infantry School) that it takes to man the force everyday to keep this Army ready," Hendrix said. "We have maintained readiness and have done remarkable things in the developmental area. Today, we can shoot more targets at night than we could hit in the daytime three years ago.



"I'm biased, but I think we've got the infantry soldiers in the world," Hendrix said. "There is no other nation that has anywhere near the quality of soldiers that we have here."

Even two-star generals have something they regret and Hendrix said that he regrets not being able to do more.

"I wish I had more money to put into the installation, more time to spend with the training units and more imagination in developing the future of the Army," Hendrix said.

Despite that, Hendrix said the Army, as it is today, is a great place to be and no major changes are needed to make it better.

"We recruit the best soldiers and obviously excite and challenge them because they stay (in the Army)," Hendrix said. "I have total confidence in this Army. If my country told me to go and fight any country in the world, I would go — totally confident. When I was in Desert Storm, I used to get letters from people and my standard answer was don't worry about us, we will fight and win this war, and we did."

Brian R. Voller

"We've got the best soldiers in the world," emphasizes Maj. Gen. John W. Hendrix, commander of the U.S. Army Infantry Center.

One of the things Hendrix said he will miss about Fort Benning is the spirit of the infantry.

"I've got the 75th Ranger Regiment on one side of me, the Airborne School on the other side and the 3rd ID in the east," Hendrix said. "This is the home of the infantry and there is no other place where you get a better feeling of it than here."

But what Hendrix said he will miss most are the people.

"Wherever I go on Fort Benning, there are people who are (working hard) and all they want is an opportunity to do a great job and to be recognized for that," Hendrix said.

Hendrix said Fort Benning's being named the Best Large Army Installation in the United States four years in a row was because of the people working together — not because of him.

"It's people caring about people and caring about getting better," Hendrix said. "I didn't create this organization, I just happened to be here during the time when the (Army Communities of Excellence) evaluations took place."

Although Hendrix did not have any input into where his next assignment was going to be, he said that he is pleased with the idea of going to Fort Stewart.

"If you had offered me any job in the Army, I would have chosen that one," Hendrix said. "The 3rd ID is clearly the best division, on the heavy force side, in the U.S. Army. Plus, I'm from that area. I have a lot family and friends who live near Fort Stewart."

Self motivation alone didn't get Hendrix where he is today. Hendrix said his family and great leaders were sources of inspiration for him.

"I learned a lot from my parents that is enduring," Hendrix said. "As for my military training, Ralph Puckett, who was my commander in Vietnam, in combat, had a big influence on me. There were also many more that are too numerous to name."

For anyone seeking to follow in Hendrix's footsteps and reach for the stars, Hendrix said that the four C's are key.

"The four C's are commitment, courage, competence and candor," Hendrix said. "This is a service commitment. Service to your country, your unit, your soldiers and to each other. When you get outside of that and worry about yourself, you are in the wrong business.

"Always study your profession," Hendrix said. "Warfare is thinking people against thinking people. If you ever think you know everything, you're wrong. It's just too complicated because someone is always trying to outsmart you."

Hendrix said there is no other job he would rather have than being in the Army.

"This is a fun business," Hendrix said. "Everyday is not a good day, but at least four out of five are great days. We should approach (the Army) with the belief that our careers will be filled with the satisfaction that comes from preserving our nation. I get a lot of satisfaction from believing that I have served my country and served my soldiers.

"I see serving in the Army as a very honorable position and there is nothing in the world that I would rather be doing," Hendrix said.

Post receives $100,000

By Brian R. Voller
Bayonet staff writer

Several World War II barracks used by Gen. George S. Patton during his time as the commander of the Second Armored Division will begin to get renovations due to a $100,000 donation from a local businessman.

Frank G. Lumpkin Jr., a former battalion commander under Patton, presented the personal check to Maj. Gen. John W. Hendrix, post commander, at the Main Post Chapel June 26.

Hendrix accepted the check from Lumpkin and thanked him for his family's continued support of Fort Benning.

"This project has been pursued by the Infantry Museum and by Fort Benning, but we simply haven't had the funds to complete it," Hendrix said. "But out of the interest in the preservation of the history of our country and Fort Benning, Mr. Lumpkin has generously donated this money to us and I thank him and his family for their long-time commitment to Fort Benning."

The money Lumpkin donated is going specifically towards renovating the World War II barracks located behind the Infantry Museum. The buildings were part of Patton's headquarters during his time as commander at Fort Benning.

Lumpkin said he donated the money because of the potential the barracks have of being a quality addition to the Infantry Museum.

"I was fearful that the barracks were going to be destroyed because they couldn't get the money for the renovations," Lumpkin said. "I'm going to work hard to get the rest of the money for the renovations because I think the Infantry Museum is the best attraction Columbus has now and the barracks will make it even better."

Lumpkin served during World War II with the 709th Tank Battalion in Europe, which was part of the 2nd Armored Division under Patton's command. Lumpkin served as a major during World War II and later retired as a lieutenant colonel from the U.S. Army Reserves.

Lumpkin served as the president of Wilcox-Lumpkin Co., an insurance agency in Columbus, the president of Trust Company of Columbus and president of the Garrad Company. He has since retired and still lives in Columbus.

The Lumpkin family was one of the original owners of the land the U.S. Army purchased to form Fort Benning. Lumpkin's father, Frank Lumpkin Sr,. was one of the Columbus residents who helped establish a post at Fort Benning.

Security advisor discusses military force

By Jim Garamone
American Forces Press Service

WASHINGTON — When and where to use military force was the subject of a commencement address by National Security Adviser Anthony Lake at the National Defense University.

Lake said the post-Cold War world has meant the end of superpower confrontation, but the rise of smaller countries. Before, the superpowers could keep rogue states restrained by supplying them with arms and resources; that restraint is now gone.

"Now, they are freer to gamble and use force to achieve their ends," he said.

The end of superpower confrontation also means a new openness pervades the world, and this very openness leaves society vulnerable to attacks by terrorists and international crime syndicates, Lake said.

The new environment requires defense planners to think anew and look for new solutions, Lake said. Officials must ask three questions in this new era:

• How does the country maintain efficiency and effectiveness in the post-Cold War drawdown?

• How does the military preserve readiness as the United States becomes involved in increasingly diverse missions?

• How does the military attract and keep a high quality, all-volunteer force that reflects a rapidly changing U.S. society?

Lake said he believes the Department of Defense has handled the drawdown well. The American military reduced forces by a third and cut the defense budget by 40 percent. Yet it has been done without the corresponding loss in efficiency seen following previous drawdowns, Lake said.

"So in 1994, when in one year, Iraq menaced Kuwait, when tensions rose in Korea and trouble in Haiti boiled over, we showed that our military was up to the task and more," he said.

"Today the U.S. military force structure is right and readiness is as high as ever.," he said, "and officials must concentrate on how the nation employs its armed forces."

"We always have focused on that, but in this new era, I think we have to do it all the more, because more than any other institution in the world, when the U. S. military is asked to do something, it delivers," he said.

While this knowledge is comforting to policy makers, it also carries much responsibility.

"We must not misuse this extraordinary institution," Lake said. "When we use force, we must use it unflinchingly, but we must never ask our military to do things that it can't or shouldn't do."

When to use force is the most important question for policy makers, Lake said. Obviously, the president will use force when some country directly threatens the United States, its vital interests or its allies.

"But more often, we face situations that do not threaten our nation's vital interests, yet do still affect our interests and the character of the world we live in," he said, citing Bosnia and Haiti as examples.

"This kind of case is difficult to address because our interests, though important, are less immediate and the threats may be less clear," Lake said. "That is why before we use force in such circumstances, we must make a very careful assessment."

Questions include whether the military can succeed and are the interests at stake important

Independence Day is a great time to link American values to family values and teach children appreciation for the U.S. flag, citizenship and democracy

Celebrating America's freedom

By Daniel A. Ludwig
The American Legion

commentary

American families are getting ready for a special day. They are buying fireworks, planning picnics and making travel arrangements.

Independence Day is one of the biggest family events of the summer. It's probably the only summertime occasion that's as big a deal to small children as it is to their parents.

Our airports, highways, train stations and bus terminals are jammed with holiday travelers.

Americans go to a lot of trouble — and often travel a lot of miles — to celebrate during Independence Day.

But, are we celebrating America's independence?

Adults must help youngsters understand the meaning of Independence Day. That means adults cannot forget the significance of the holiday.

This task is important because Americans cannot support a democracy on the sheer quest for material things. Our young people have to learn to appreciate the special aspects of America that allow us to earn a decent living — with proper training and hard work.

There's no better way for us to do that than to pause during our celebrations and reflect on how great it is to be Americans.

We've got it good here in the United States. We've got it so good that often we forget about the sacrifices which make America a reasonably safe place in a war-beaten world.

Legionaires want to help America keep the record straight. Legionaires know that American freedom is a byproduct of American sacrifice. Legionaires know that whenever it was time for America to step up, in a role of military leadership, our men and women in the armed forces answered the call. Legionaires know that American-style freedom was not free, and never will be.

We also know that the American flag has been the unifying symbol of everything for which American soldiers, sailors, airmen and Marines fought.

The American Legion supports a constitutional amendment to protect the American flag from intentional physical desecration. The flag that hangs from residential porches and balconies on Independence Day is not the equivalent of a Halloween jack o' lantern. The flag symbolizes the fight for our nation's sovereignty and the struggle for freedom the world over involving American forces. The flag deserves a special place in our society, shielded from those who want to burn it to make a statement.

We need to link American values to family values and teach our children to appreciate U.S. citizenship. The Fourth of July is a great time to do this.

A love of God and country. An understanding of the historical role of America's veterans. An appreciation for the flag and for the uniqueness of American-style freedom. These are among the values which are often missing from family Independence Day festivities. Without those values, the fireworks and picnics are mere celebrations of a day off of work.

For too many of our children, history is last school year and the future is next weekend. Sacrifice is missing a favorite television show. Respect is a one-way street, from parent to child. We adults, who know something is wrong, can make a difference. We have to take a time-out and talk to the kids about the beautiful uniqueness of America.

Let's have a safe and enjoyable Fourth of July holiday. Bring on the food, friends, family and fireworks. But let's celebrate what we should be celebrating.

We must pause on Independence Day to recognize Americans preserving freedom in Bosnia, as well as those who represented America on other military missions.

We must pause to remember that American-style freedom was not free, and never will be.

Forefathers' ideas triumph for more than two centuries

Two hundred and twenty years have passed since the American colonies first declared their independence. It was in 1776 that our founding fathers pledged their lives, their fortunes and their sacred honor in the pursuit of liberty.

The journey has certainly not been without obstacles. Yet the ideals of our forefathers have triumphed, and today America is the world's oldest continuous democracy.

It is absolutely fitting on our nation's Independence Day that we pay tribute to the men and women of the Army, Navy, Air Force, Marine Corps and Coast Guard — active duty and reservists — past and present. For more than two centuries, the brave members of the armed forces have shown that we are a nation with great heart, true faith, and possessed with a will to do the things that will continue to guarantee freedom and justice.

During the special celebration this year, take time to reflect with gratitude on the continuing sacrifices of our military — sacrifices that include separation from loved ones, keeping the peace in Bosnia, long days of service at sea, flying dangerous missions in the skies over northern and southern Iraq, standing watch in Korea, in the Sinai, along the Peru-Ecuador border, and in countless other places where U.S. troops are deployed. The liberty we exalt today, they defend every day; the rights we often take for granted, they ensure by their selfless service.

On behalf of the joint chiefs of staff, I extend best wishes to the men and women of the armed forces and their families for a happy and safe Fourth of July!

—Gen. John Shalikashvili
Chairman, Joint Chiefs of Staff

Proclamation

You are to be commended for your excellent safety record over the holiday weekends this year, no accidental fatalities. We need to build on this success.

Many families will travel great distances to be with relatives in a traditional renewal of family ties over the holiday. Others may prefer to spend the holiday fishing, boating, swimming or enjoying other outdoor activities, such as those available here at Fort Benning.

We must all be alert to the fact that there are many hazards associated with our summertime holiday activities. The accidents which cause the most deaths during this period involve driving and water activities. Ignoring good safety practices costs lives. Fasten seat belts when you are in a vehicle, take frequent rest breaks and always drive sober. Swim only in authorized areas with lifeguards on duty; and, for boaters, wear personal flotation devices while on a boat.

Have fun and enjoy a safe holiday.

— Maj. Gen. John W. Hendrix

dial 545-boss

Dial 545-BOSS is the commander's action line for soldiers, family members and civilians to call when they have problems or complaints that can't be resolved elsewhere.

While it is not a substitute for the chain of command or for agencies established to provide assistance, the line offers another means of communication between Fort Benning's community and commanders.

The Bayonet features some of the calls that may benefit other members of the Fort Benning community.

Caller wanted to know why there is no support group for family members whose military sponsor is assigned to Korea. She said there seems to be support for the wives of soldiers in Bosnia, but not for wives of soldiers in Korea.

The Family Support Group coordinator explained that recently, several attempts were made to establish a Waiting Spouses Group. Articles were placed in The Bayonet and responses were received from waiting spouses. Meetings were scheduled on several different occasions. Due to the lack of involvement, the group was canceled. The coordinator said another attempt will be made to establish a group in early summer.

A support group does exist for the spouses of soldiers assigned to Bosnia.

General takes final leap

By Marc G. Turchin

In what has become a sort of tradition at Fort Benning, the post's current commander recently took part in his final parachute jump as commander here.

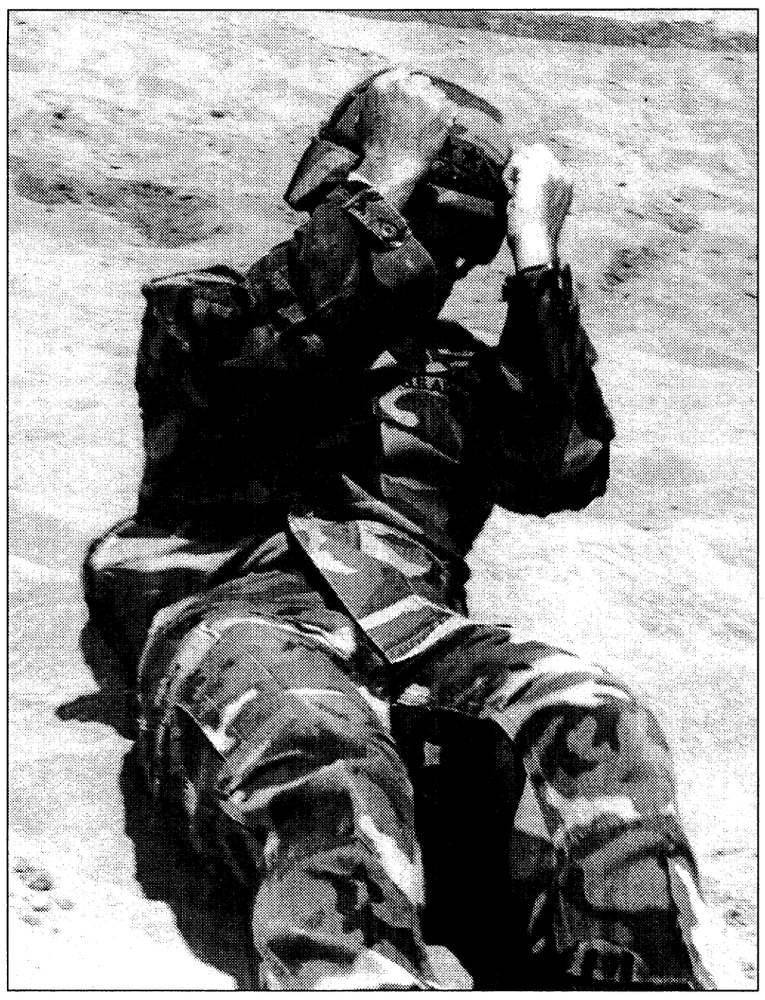
Maj. Gen. John W. Hendrix was joined by his colleagues and friends for the event. Some of those involved included unit commanders like 11th Infantry Regiment's commander, Col. John P. Lewis, and friends like Command Sgt. Maj. William Cox, who is the sergeant major for the Airborne School.

They all came together at McCarthy Hall, Lawson Army Airfield, to "put their knees in the breeze" one last time with Hendrix.

Before Hendrix arrived with deputy commander Brig. Gen. Robert T. Clark, the others went through their prejump inspections and briefings.

When Hendrix and Clark arrived, they went through their briefings and inspections.

The prejump activities included practicing parachute landing falls and the sequence of events inside the aircraft and emergency procedures.



All the jumpers filed into McCarthy Hall to put on their parachutes and take part in a small ceremony.

Hendrix was given an encased blackhat from Lt. Col. Thomas Sittnick, the commander of the 1st Battalion (Airborne), 507th Inf. Regt., 11th Infantry Regiment.

Sittnick spoke about how great it was to have commanded a battalion under Hendrix and said the blackhat was a gift from everyone at the airborne school.

After everyone had their equipment checked, the group of 22 walked onto the airfield and loaded the C-130 aircraft.

Before long, the airplane was airborne and Hendrix and company were ready to get down to business and put their knees in the breeze.

Fort Benning commander, Maj. Gen. John W. Hendrix, lperforms a parachute landing fall in the sand pit near McCarthy Hall.

Only a matter of minutes went by before the command of "30 seconds" was given. Just after that, Hendrix gave the senior jumpmaster for the flight, Sgt. 1st Class Leonard A. Pimental, part of his static line and calmly walked out the door after being given the command of "go."

Hendrix performed a parachute landing fall, just as he has done so many times before. But this time may be the last time on Fryar Drop Zone. It was the last time as the post commander.

After a second pass by the aircraft, all 22 were safely on the ground and it was time for another small ceremony. This one was from all who took time out of their day to spend it with their boss, — their friend, and say good-bye and thank you. Each of the jumpers signed a parachute pack which was placed on a plaque.

Hendrix, although he may be leaving Fort Benning, is now part of a tradition of commanding generals who has paid tribute to their time spent at Fort Benning by taking a last parachute jump as commanding general with their friends and colleagues.

AER meets fund goals

Fort Benning's annual Army Emergency Relief Fund Campaign Drive's goal of $155,000 was exceeded during this year's campaign.

Contributions for the drive were taken from March 1 to May 15 and the installation beat its goal by more than $38,000.

"This year's campaign was a terrific success," said Alan F. Stewart, Director of Community Activities. "The installation established a realistic goal for $155,000."

More than 99 percent of the contributions were made by active duty personnel, according to Stewart. The rest of the funds collected came from retired military personnel, civilians and a cake sale sponsored by the U.S. Army Medical Department Activity.

This was the second year AER has implemented a new computerized contribution management system, but it was the first time this system was used at Fort Benning, according to Alfonso J. Deane, Army Emergency Relief officer. He believes this was another reason for such a successful campaign.

Deane said he did not expect to reach such a high total for contributions, even with the new computerized management system.

"I was confident that we would make our goal, but I was surprised we went that far over it," he said.

Soldiers deploy to Atlanta for Olympic mission

By Michael E. Lynch
13th Corps Support Battalion

The 13th Corps Support Battalion has arrived in Atlanta to begin support of the Centennial Olympic Games.

The battalion established two base camps at the end of June and began accepting soldiers arriving from all over the United States. A third base camp will open this week. The base camps will house more than 2,400 soldiers at maximum capacity and are expected to be full by July 26.

The mission to operate the base camps is part of the overall requirement to house National Guard soldiers who have been activated to augment security forces in the Atlanta area.

The 13th CSB is attached to the 24th Corps Support Group, Fort Stewart, Ga., for the duration of this mission. The 24th CSG consists of five battalions which operate a total of nine base camps to house the National Guardsmen.

The battalion has more than 250 soldiers deployed to four different sites in the Atlanta area. Each base camp has been augmented by soldiers from other services to run the operations, bringing the total number of soldiers to 350.

Each camp is named for the school in which it is located, and is operated by one of the companies in the battalion.

Michael E. Lynch

Soldiers from the 104th Transportation Company, 13th Combat Support Corps deploy to Atlanta to support the Olympics.

Camp Peachtree (Peachtree Junior High School) holds 950 soldiers and is operated by the 598th Maintenance Company. It is located in the city of Dunwoody on the north side of Atlanta.

Camp Dunwoody (Dunwoody High School) is also located in Dunwoody and holds 650 soldiers. It is operated by 608th Ordnance Company.

Camp Cedar Grove (Cedar Grove High School) is located in Panthersville on the south side of Atlanta and holds 750 soldiers. It is operated by 104th Transportation Company.

The 13th CSB commander, Lt. Col. Gerald Bates, outlined the size of the job facing the soldiers.

"Each company's immediate task upon arrival at each school was to turn a school building into a barracks facility," Bates said. "This required moving all the tables, desks and chairs in the classroom to storage and cleaning every room. It was a big mission." The battalion's top enlisted soldier, Command Sgt. Maj. Robert Spates echoed the battalion commander's comments.

"I'm proud of our soldiers," Spates said. They've done a great job getting these camps established and we're looking forward to the next couple of months."

The Olympic Torch will pass through Columbus July 12 and four Fort Benning representatives will carry the torch.

The torch will pass on Victory Drive headed East towards Veterans Parkway. The torch will be at the corner of Victory Drive and Fort Benning Road at approximately 12:28 p.m. The Columbus 96' torchbearers are:

- Ret. Col. Bob Nett, a 1945 Congressional Medal of Honor recipient for his valor during a World War II campaign
- Owen Ditchfield, a media specialist at Edward A. White Elementary School, who works in his spare time with Habitat for Humanity, the "Cool our Kids" drive for air conditioning in public schools, and has helped to beautify the city of Columbus
- Sgt. 1st Class Joseph Wood, 2nd Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment, a former All-Army Basketball player
- Sgt. Willie Briskey, 3rd Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment, who helps out after duty hours with the Special Olympics.

A pep rally luncheon to honor the 1996 Olympic torchbearers will be conducted at the Columbus Convention and Trade Center in the North Hall at noon, July 11.

Future: Conference discusses options

"Before we send our troops into situations where our interests are less than vital, they need a clear and achievable mission, the means to prevail and a strategy for withdrawal that is based on the military mission's goals," Lake said.
