Healing comes through touch

By Tom Wheatley
Ranger Training Brigade

All of the important relationships in our life appear to thrive when we practice physical touch as a daily part of that relationship.

A young child constantly seeks holding by its parents. In fact, evidence exists that babies not held or comforted, develop significant emotional difficulties.

reflections

One of my co-workers said that his wife requires 12 significant touches a day (hugs, hand holding, kisses) for the relationship to stay healthy. Our pets love sitting on our laps or lying next to us and they love to receive stroking or petting.

We often shake hands with our good friends, punch them on the shoulders, hug them, or touch them somehow when we talk. The Bible even admonishes Christians to greet each other with a holy kiss.

Jesus Christ also practiced physical touch when he demonstrated his care for someone or performed healing.

For example, in the book of Mark, a man with leprosy came to Jesus and begged for healing. The man told Jesus, "If you are willing, you can make me clean."

Jesus needed not to touch the man to heal him, yet the Bible states that Jesus filled with compassion for the man reached out and touched him. This act possessed tremendous significance since the leprous man received no touch from another human for a long time.

A leper even carried a bell announcing his or her uncleanliness, thus not fit for human touch. By touching this man, Jesus communicated a wealth of care and love for this man, and he immediately received healing.

The people constantly brought the sick and needy to Jesus for his touch, and they instantly received healings. Parents brought their children to Jesus for him to hold and bless them.

Another story in the book of Mark reveals an important aspect about being touched by Christ.

In Chapter 5, Jesus went to heal Jairus' daughter. A woman suffering from an illness for 12 years reached out and touched Jesus' cloak as he passed by. She received immediate healing.

Jesus instantly sensed that someone reached out for help, and he stopped. He asked,"Who touched me?"

The disciples remained unsure of what Jesus asked about because a large crowd pressed against him. However, Jesus knew that someone reached out for help and received healing.

When the woman came forward and admitted she touched Jesus, he told her, "Daughter, your faith has healed you. Go in peace and be freed from your suffering" (Mark 5:22-34).

The lesson for each of us? When we suffer, whether physical pain, mental, or emotional, we need to reach out to God and to Christ for healing. In many of the healings we find in the New Testament, those who suffered first reached out, physically and mentally, to find the healing they sought.

Should we expect anything different for ourselves? A telephone commercial taught us to "reach out and touch someone" we care about by phone. Well, let us also reach out and receive the touch of Christ so that the love, compassion and care of God come flooding into our lives.

Christ waits to touch us and heal us — when we become willing and humble enough as a child to reach out and up for his touch. Let us possess the attitude of the psalmist when he said, "I remember the days of long ago; I meditate on all your works and consider what your hands have done. I stretch out my hands to you; my soul thirsts for you like a parched land" (Psalms 143:5-6).

Veterans deserve honor, recognition

By Matthew Goff
3rd Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment

The dictionary provides two definitions of the word veteran — an old soldier of long service and a former member of the armed forces.

I usually picture the first definition when I think of a veteran — the image of a person in the later years of life who served more than 20 years and saw action in World War II and Korea.

reflections

The second definition, one I sometimes forget, really broadens the picture. The 26-year-old who served in Desert Storm and the 22-year-old who served but never deployed anywhere are also called veterans in this country.

I love to meet veterans and hear their real-life stories about life in the military. Their stories intertwine with the history of our armed forces. From World War II and Korea through Vietnam to Grenada, Panama and the Persian Gulf, their stories get told.

Through times of conflict and times of peace, their tales of struggle, perseverance and trust in almighty God inspire those of us who wear the uniform today.

I meet veterans in many different places — in the checkout line at the commissary, in church, in restaurants, at the airport and at the lake. I met some who served with my father in the late 1950s, and I met some who lived the history I only read about in units where I once served.

Some of my favorite places to meet veterans remains at the many reunions conducted each year across the country. All American Week at Fort Bragg, Ranger Rendezvous at Fort Benning — these become great times to hear the stories and share the heritage handed down to us from these former members of the armed forces.

As I listened to the veterans' stories, one of the recurring messages I heard told of how proud they remain of the men and women who serve in the armed forces today.

Likewise, those serving today need to thank the old soldiers for wearing the uniforms and serving to preserve and secure the peace and freedom enjoyed in America. That's why Americans celebrate Veterans Day each year.

The dictionary defines Veterans Day as "the date of Nov. 11, set aside to commemorate the end of hostilities in 1918 and 1945 and observed as a legal observance in the United States to honor veterans of the armed forces."

Because of their service and sacrifices, Americans as a nation, and hopefully each individual, need to honor and respect the veterans of our great country on this observance.

Having faith allows things to happen

By Richard Gary Moore
U.S. Army Infantry School

It's a moving thought that the Psalms we sing in chapel and read at home were all well known to Jesus. He sang them with his followers, quoted them, and found his own life experience mirrored in them. So when we think about the Psalms today, we are drawing from the same wellspring that refreshed our Lord's soul.

reflections

Take the third Psalm. Have you ever found life cruel to your hopes, or found that it failed to provide the relief and relaxation you expected from your later years? Then this Psalm is for you. The Psalmist David also experienced this.

This Psalm of David belongs to a time when contending factions dethroned him and drove him out of Judah, an outlaw without a home. Read this Psalm with that background in mind and how vivid it all becomes.

A whole series of truths exists in this Psalm. Notice just a few of them from the standpoint of your own feelings and experiences. First, the mystery of life. Why did the will of God, which called David from the pastures of Bethlehem to the throne of Judah, not keep him secure? How come we face so many problems, placing our happiness at risk and countering our plans? If you ever find this burden of the mystery of life pressing down on you, remember two things:

•You're in good company. It's not just your problem alone. All of God's people have struggled with it. Even our Lord faced adversity and fought it to the point that the Scripture said, "... his sweat became like drops of blood ..." (Luke 22:44 NAS). Will the thought of this high company not put a resolve in your spirit?

•Read David's first word, "Lord." When you feel trapped, return to him. Link up with the Lord, and join issue with the mystery of life.

This Psalm also points out God's strange silence: "Many are saying of me, 'God will not deliver him.'" (NIV). "There is no help for him in God" (KJV).

In this hour of trouble, David almost began to believe that it might be true. This represents the most terrible thing about his situation, much worse than the loss of his position and the homeless life that followed it. David actually thought that God left him. But, see how it leads immediately to the defiant reaffirming of his faith: "But you are a shield around me, O Lord, my Glorious One, who lifts up my head." His confidence in the Lord is not a vague and insecure hope. David almost quits on a "quitting" God, but he reframes his faith in the living God, "you are a shield around me."

Remember that David was a stumbling, sinful human being, and bitterly he knew it. He never forgot Nathan's rebuke, "You are the man." (II Sam. 12:7). Even now the real sting of his present trouble as exile and fugitive arose because of his own actions.

But listen to a great truth from this Psalm. When the sense of unworthiness becomes acute for you, remember, "O Lord, my Glorious One, who lifts up my head." If the Lord trusts me, I can look the whole world in the eye.

Remember, Peter, the disciple who shamefully disowned him, was sought out by the risen Lord and recommissioned to as an apostle, "Feed my Lambs." (John 21 :15). Peter stunned in his silence begins to realize: "He means me, I turned my back on him — can it be? It can't be. And yet I wonder. Yes, it must be. If he says it, it must be true. Nothing else matters. the nightmare is over." David in the Old Testament, and Peter in the New Testament, represent us. This story belongs to us too, we exist in this Psalm. There is no depressed mood to defeat your spirit. This is the defiant reaffirming faith: "Lord, you lift up my head."

Many before us suffered through struggles coping with dashed hopes and the sometimes harsh perceptions of others. We need to take to heart the great truths found in Psalm 3.

Good Stewards

give of their possessions to help others

By Terry W. Austin
USAIC Chaplains Office

reflections

Imagine getting financial advice from someone who borrowed everything, possessed more money than any man who ever lived and kept money in a fish's mouth.

If good stewardship, or giving, meant possessions and ownership, Jesus could have owned the world, but he turned it down. He knew ownership fails to bring joy, peace and happiness.

Good stewardship means being responsible for what our Lord gives us and giving a portion of everything God gives us to help others. This includes money, time and talent.

The Bible contains many truths, which at first seem difficult to understand including the area of stewardship.

For example, the Bible teaches us to give if we want to receive. Imagine giving in order to get? Well, that remains exactly what God wants us to do.

He tells us that if we remain faithful in a few things, he gives us many things. When we demonstrate the ability to give, our selfish natures find contentment. We deny the temptation of hoarding or keeping, in order to offer a blessing to someone else.

This same practice carries over into our personal finances. If we resist the temptation to buy on impulse, or charge beyond our means to pay back, we demonstrate good stewardship.

This remains one of many good biblical practice to live by.

The American society confuses stewardship with ownership. Many people believe they need to own as much as possible. They think that if only they get more, they experience happiness.

Good stewardship includes more than material possessions; it includes talents and the God-given ability to bless others. We need to demonstrate the ability to live as good stewards by using these talents he has given us.

We also possess time. Even a few hours of volunteer time in a chapel or a program to benefit others gives us great satisfaction. Doing activities to benefit others broadens our views.

We see that ownership remains simply another form of stress and responsibility. It is good to own some things, but an overload breaks us down. So, good stewardship goes beyond material ownership.

Give to the chapel, the Combined Federal Campaign, or some worthy cause. Volunteer a few hours.

Even when we give these things, the most important part of giving remains giving ourselves to Christ. When this happens, the joy of giving simply becomes the evidence in our lives of performing Christ's work.

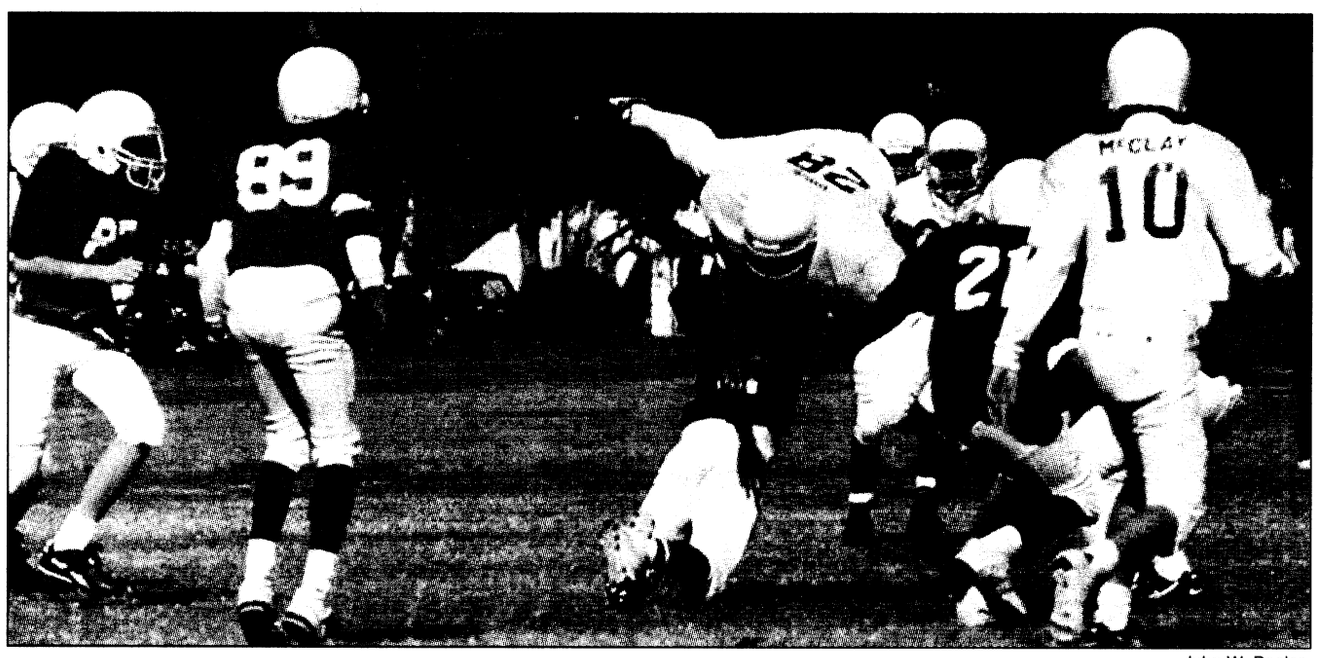
YOUTH FOOTBALL

Vikings, Browns remain undefeated

By John W. Peeler
Special to the Bayonet©



Going into week seven of Youth Services football, one team in each division remain unbeaten.

The 6- to 8-year-old Vikings, the 9- to 12-year-old Vikings and the over-12 Browns teams each survived close calls while keeping intact their undefeated records in their respective divisions.

The Vikings (7-0) defeated the 49ers (3-3-1) 20-14 to remain unbeaten in the 6- to 8-year-old flag football division. Leading the Vikings to victory were Joshua Lee, Dewayne Thomas and Shevon Thomas. Lee scored on two touchdown runs with Dewayne Thomas scoring on another run. Shevon Thomas added the extra point conversion to complete the scoring for the Vikings.

In the 9- to 12-year-old division, the Vikings (7-0) needed every second on the clock to defeat a tenacious Panther (0-7) team 16-12. The Vikings led at half-time 2-0 on a safety by Viking linebacker Paul Fry and extended the lead to 8-0 on a third quarter touchdown pass from quarterback Zeke Morris to wide receiver William Proctor.

The Panthers got their first score of the game on a 86-yard run by Emerril Brown in the third quarter and added another touchdown in the fourth quarter making the score 12-8 with five minutes left in the game.

John W. Peeler

Lions Bruce Maddox dives for extra yardage after being tacked by 49ers defensive safety Reggie McFadden. The 49ers cruised to an easy victory over the Lions 26-0.

Starting deep in their own territory, the Vikings began driving down the field only to be stopped at the Panther 20-yard line by the stingy Panther defense. Out of time outs, it appeared the Panthers would hand the Vikings their first loss of the season.

With less than a minute in the game, Vikings linebacker Andrew Rabsatt stripped the ball from the Panther running back and streaked down the sideline 20 yards for the touchdown, securing the victory for the Vikings.

The Browns (3-0-2) remained undefeated in the over-12 division, slipping past the Steelers (0-4-1) 16-14 on a last-minute fumble recovery for a touchdown by Tim Hardcastle.

The Browns took an early lead in the game on a Darryl Royal 20-yard touchdown run, but the Steelers fought back, scoring touchdowns in the first and third quarters. With less than two minutes in the game, Hardcastle picked up a fumble on the 50-yard line and raced for the touchdown to secure the victory for the Browns.

Marksmen induct two shooters into Hall of Fame

U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit

The U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit inducted two of its international rifle shooters into the unit's International Rifle Hall of Fame Oct. 30.

Maj. Stephen C. Goff, a six-time national champion, and Capt. Robert E. Harbison, a 1996 Olympian, received honors at the ceremony at Fort Benning's Pool Indoor Range with photos and profiles of them being permanently mounted on the range's Hall of Fame wall.

"The significant thing about being inducted into the Hall of Fame is being recognized by your peers, who are an elite group of people," Goff said. "It takes a lot of time, effort and persistence to get enough points, which are based on national and international-level competitions, to qualify for the Hall of Fame."

Goff credits his father for introducing him to shooting and attributes his shooting success to the opportunities provided by the military.

"I want to thank everyone for this award," Goff told the crowd of fellow shooters at the ceremony. "And I would like to see the rest of you up on that wall with me."

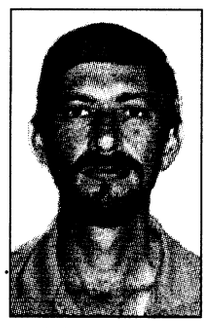
Goff, a 1995 Pan American Games Silver Medalist in the 300-meter 3x40 free rifle competition, won several medals at the Conseil International du Sport Militaire. He won Gold Medals in 1995 and 1986 in standard rifle and in 1983 in rapid fire, Silver Medals in 300-meter rapid fire in 1996 and in rapid fire in 1986 and a Bronze Medal in 1995 in rapid fire.

Goff

Harbison

His 1986 CISM rapid fire score set the world record and still stands today. He serves as the 1995 and 1994 300-meter 3x40 free rifle national champion, the 1994 and 1993 300-meter 3x20 standard rifle national champion, the 1993 50-meter free rifle prone national champion and the 1992 NRA indoor three-position any sight national champion.

Harbison, who served in Desert Storm, has been shooting on and off for the USAMU since 1990. He said Army shooters impressed him as a teen-ager so he joined the Army and started as a pick-up shooter with the Service Rifle Team, which he joined in 1992. He started shooting international rifle in 1993.



"I've been shooting for years and won a lot of honors and championships, but the most significant honor is being recognized by your peers," Harbison told the attendees at the ceremony. "I was a late bloomer in international rifle, but it's been a great experience."

Harbison serves as the 1996 NRA indoor three-position international national champion; and, at the 1996 Olympics, he finished seventh in air rifle and sixth in 3x40. He won Gold Medals in the men's English match and the 300-meter 3x20 in the 1995 Pan American Games and serves as the 1994 International 50-foot national champion and the men's English Match national champion. He won Silver Medals in the 1994 CISM Slow Fire Match and the 1993 World Cup Final. He received the Distinguished Rifleman Badge and the President's Hundred Award.

"I think it's great that they have been named to the Hall of Fame," USAMU International Rifle Coach William E. Krilling said. "I recognized their potential a long time ago, and I'm not surprised that they accomplished what they did."

In more 9- to 12-year-old division action, the Chiefs (4-2-1) slipped past the Eagles (2-5) 14-6. The Chiefs scored on a 99-yard touchdown catch and run by Samuel Miller from quarterback Ronald Tubbs and a 60 -yard kick return from kick returner Dreke Richardson.

In the other 9-to 12-year-old divisional game, the Seminoles (3-3-1) trounced the Cowboys (4-3) 20-8 to move to within a half game of the third place Cowboys.

In the over-12 division late game, the 49ers (3-1-1) cruised to an easy victory over the Lions (2-3) 26-0 on two Reggie McFadden touchdowns.

McFadden also threw a 52-yard touchdown pass to Chris Humphries on a botched punt attempt and Justin White added another touchdown run to round out the scoring.

Two of the 49er scores were set up by Rick Bansiak early in the game on a fumble recovery and an interception deep in Lion territory.

"I didn't get to shoot in the 300-meter nationals because it's a men's event. But USA Shooting, the national governing body, is probably going to change it. DoD Announces 1997 Armed Forces Sports Tournament Dates

By Stephen Barrett
American Forces Press Service

WASHINGTON — The Department of Defense's Armed Forces Sports Committee will conduct 21 championship tournaments at 10 installations in 1997, beginning Feb. 9 with the armed forces boxing tournament at Camp Lejeune, N.C.

Lejeune remains one of nine installations entertaining multiple championships in 1996. It also conducts the men's and women's triathlon championships — new to the armed forces schedule — July 28 through Aug. 2.

The men's and women's basketball championships take place April 6 to 12 at Fort Hood, Texas. The post also conducts the 1997 U.S. amateur basketball championships April 24 to 27.

Fort Eustis, Va., conducts the 1997 soccer championships, slated for Nov. 2 to 8. In addition, Eustis serves as host for an armed forces open tennis tournament. Although not an official armed forces sport, winners of the Army-sponsored tournament advance to the Conseil International du Sport Militaire tennis tournament.

The military's top volleyball players meet May 5 to 10 at Fort Benning for the men's and women's interservice championships.

Two weeks later, sprinters, long-distance runners and field athletes compete in Santa Barbara, Calif., in the armed forces track and field meet. The Navy Construction Center at Port Hueneme, Calif., serves as host of the event May 19 to 23 at Santa Barbara Community College.

Air Force installations conduct four armed forces tournaments in 1997. McChord Air Force Base, Wash., sponsors both the men's and women's military bowling championships April 8 to 14. Vandenberg Air Force Base, Calif., conducts the men's and women's golf tournament Sept. 21 to 27.

Besides conducting the track and field championships, Navy sponsors the 1997 men's and women's softball championships. Those tournaments occur Aug. 10 to 16 at Little Creek Naval Amphibious Base, Va.

The Navy also serves as host of the 1997 wrestling tournament March 18 to 23 at Pensacola Naval Air Station, Fla.

Finally, tae kwon do — competition based on the Korean martial arts discipline — returns to military competition in 1997 with men's and women's tournaments April 12 and 13 at Fort Indiantown Gap, Pa.

Athletes competing in armed forces events often qualify for national and international military competitions. CISM conducts events annually, including the 1997 championships in Ghana (boxing), Angola (basketball) and Canada (golf). CISM announces other tournament sites later.

Athletes need to apply for armed forces competition through local sports channels and qualify through service tryouts and tournaments. Requirements vary by service.

For more information, contact the local sports office.

National Shooting Sports Foundation

Six-year-old Heather Maness looked forward to this day — opening day of dove season and her first hunt with her dad.

In a field near the family's farm in Randolph County, N.C., she helped her dad scan the skies for fast-flying doves on the wing.

The BB gun she carried posed no threat to the fast-flying doves. But Heather was learning important lessons about the basics of responsible firearms handling, hunting ethics and how to behave in the field.

For Heather, shooting doves wasn't really the main point, anyway.

"I like to hunt because I get to spend some time with my dad," she told Walter Taylor, a columnist for Carolina Adventure magazine, who wrote about Heather's experience in a recent issue.

Heather discovered a love of the outdoors and a sport that she most likely will enjoy her whole life, according to Mark Duda, executive director of Responsive Management, a firm that studies various aspects of outdoor recreation for the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, including one of the largest and most comprehensive studies on factors related to hunting participation.

The three-year study, a Federal Aid project, found that among those for whom hunting became a lifelong sport, about 80 percent learned about it between the ages of 12 and 15 — many even earlier.

Duda says his studies show the importance of family, or close family surrogates, because hunting encompasses much more than just learning certain skills. The experience — with the outdoors and with family or friends — goes far beyond whether youngsters caught a limit of trout or filled a deer tag.

"You're really building a lifetime of memories," Duda said. "The bonds that hunting builds are truly incredible, and we've documented it.

"An adult who takes a child hunting or fishing is making a pretty big commitment to that child," he said . "The time spent together often become that child's favorite family memory."

Hunting ethics also get instilled at an early age, according to Duda's research.

"The youngster who is taught hunting ethics will continue to be an ethical hunter as an adult," he said.

Most youngsters today grow up in an urban area without a dove field or trout stream just down the road, or with a parent who can teach them about the outdoors. Many lost any connection to the outdoors.

The increase in single-parent families compounded the problem, but hunters and anglers often help youngsters reconnect with their outdoor heritage by finding a niece or nephew or a friend's child who waits for an adventure in the great outdoors.

Encouraging attendance or taking one or more youngsters to a hunter safety course, which provides between 16 and 20 hours of instruction in not only safe firearms handling, but also in conservation and the outdoor experience, seems like a good first step. Hunter education courses remain mandatory for young hunters in 47 states.

Hunters also share their outdoor knowledge with the local Scout troop or 4-H group. Invite them to the club or range for an afternoon of supervised activities — fishing and safe boating or safe air gun handling and target practice.

Get other club members involved, as well as the parents of the youngsters, and make it an event that everyone enjoys.But don't do it because a study says it's a good thing. Do it for the look on a youngster's face the first time he finds a deer track or she feels a tug on her fishing line.

Do it because both the tradition and the experience is rich and rewarding ... and can be for a lifetime.

Make youngster's outdoor experience better

Some tips for making youngster's first outdoor experience a good one follow:

•Keep the youngster's comfort level in mind. His or her first experience in a duck blind shouldn't be on a day when it's 20 degrees below with a howling wind.

•Make sure clothing fits the elements. Some coaching in the wardrobe department may be in order before the outing, especially if the child's parents aren't outdoor enthusiasts.

An extra change of clothing remains a must for younger children and not a bad idea for older kids.

•Be mindful of kids' shorter attention spans and plan activities accordingly.

•Make sure the equipment remains a size that the young sportsman can handle.

•Keep it fun and design it to be successful.

Directorate of Public Safety

Statistics show that 90 percent of hunting accidents result from carelessness or ignorance.

When you go hunting, always remember to let someone know where you are going and when you expect to return. Do not travel alone, especially in rough terrain.

Plan your activity and be aware of the terrain and landmarks. Take enough food for a few extra days and have basic survival equipment and proper clothing. Be familiar with first aid procedures.

A few tips for being safe while hunting include:

•Treat every gun with the respect due a loaded gun.

•Control the muzzle.

•Unload guns when not in use.

•Be sure barrel and action are clear of obstructions.

•Be certain of your target.

•Never point a gun at anything you do not want to shoot.

•Never climb at tree or fence, or jump a ditch with a loaded gun.

•Store guns and ammunition separately.

•Avoid alcoholic beverages before and during hunting.

Persons born on or after Jan. 1, 1961, must attend a Georgia Hunting Safety Course.

For more information on the next course, call the Infantry Branch Safety Office at 545-3267.

spearheading the way into the 21st century

By April N. Olsen
USAIC Public Affairs Office

With little more than three years to go before the Army is scheduled to field the first fully digitized and computer equipped unit, the agencies responsible for developing the equipment conducted an "azimuth check"' said Col. Hank Kinnison, the TRADOC System Manager for the Soldier.

Representatives from agencies spearheading the development of the Army of the 21st century recently gathered at Fort Benning to conduct a soldier system review of several ongoing programs, including the Soldier Enhancement Program.

Attendees were briefed on the current status of programs and were able to view equipment and clothing displays before an afternoon demonstration on Land Warrior capabilities at Griswold Range.

Gen. William Hartzog. the commanding general of Training and Doctrine command, and Gen. Johnnie Wilson, the Army Materiel Command commanding general, lead the dialogue between general officers, material developers and combat developers.

Kinnison said the one-day event ensured the ongoing programs were heading in the right direction.

Hartzog said the Army Chief of Staff Gen. Dennis Reimer wants a fully equipped digital division by the fourth quarter of 2000.

When Hartzog asked if a division worth of Land Warrior equipment could be fielded by then the answer was no.

Col. Phil Hamilton, the Project Manager Soldier, said the program has already been compressed as much as it can be.

Although some refinements are needed in the Land Warrior program. the Army is focusing on weight and power, Hamilton said.

Although a piece of equipment meets the needs of Force XXI, research may be ongoing to make it more suited to the needs of the soldier.

The Land Warrior program is scheduled to field a fully integrated modular soldier system consisting of everything a soldier wears, carries and consumes by the year 2000, Kinnison said.

A fully integrated Modular Soldier System includes a computer/radio subsystem, an integrated helmet assembly, weapon subsystem, protective clothing and individual equipment subsystem and a software subsystem.

The modular system enhances command and control, lethality, mobility and survivability by providing soldiers with the greatest situational awareness possible on the battlefield.

Brian R. Voller

Maj. Gen. Ralph Wooten, commandant of the U.S. Army Chemical School, Fort McClellan, Ala., looks through the thermal imaging sight of the Land Warrior System.

The modular system is designed so leaders at all levels can tailor it according to mission requirements. The system can be reconfigured quickly and allows for upgrades, Kinnison said.

Army takes action in EO complaints

USAIC Public Affairs Office

The Secretary of the Army and the Army Chief of Staff expressed "grave concern" about allegations of sexual misconduct and rape within the Army Training and Doctrine Command at a press conference last week.

They stated that "sexual harassment is totally abhorrent to Army traditions and American values."

Court-martial charges are pending for a company commander and two drill sergeants at Aberdeen Proving Grounds while three non-commissioned officers were charged with sexual misconduct at Fort Leonard Wood, Mo.

Gen. Dennis J. Reimer, chief of Staff of the Army, announced that there would be a chain teaching program on sexual harassment training for the entire Army, to be completed by March 17.

At Fort Benning several programs are already in effect. First Sergeants and Company Commanders receive an eight hour block of instruction on sexual harassment. This training is also part of the program of instruction for all the noncommissioned officer training programs on post.

Additionally instructors from the Equal Opportunity Office present prevention of sexual harassment classes twice a year to all units.

Civilians too, receive classes about sexual harassment. All civilians receive the two-hour Prevention of Sexual Harassment course while supervisors attend an eight-hour entry level course and receive a four- hour update every three years.

Post Commander Maj. Gen. Carl F. Ernst has said all soldiers need to be treated with dignity and respect and that everyone in the chain of command must realize that sexual harassment is unacceptable and will not be tolerated.

Ernst told commanders that one way to assess the climate of their commands is to get out and visit soldiers while they are training, noting that's when soldiers open up.

Soldiers on post informed the mechanisms in place for reporting sexual harassment. These include going through the chain of command, contacting the Inspector General's office, visiting. or calling the Equal Opportunity Office or using their hot line.

The EOO hot line number is 545-3206.

Fort Benning advances to final top 10 list

USAIC Public Affairs Office

When it comes to quality, Fort Benning runs with the "big dawgs."

The U.S. Office of Personnel Management announced Wednesday that Fort Benning was one of 10 finalists for the President's Quality Award.

"For an installation to be among the top 10 is phenomenal," Sarah McLaney, the post's quality guru, said in making the announcement. "To be selected the first time you try, well, that's just unheard of."

She said that when Post Commander Maj. Gen. Carl F. Ernst was told, his reaction was: "Hooah! We've got to go for it!"

McLaney noted that many installations devote years to building up their submittal in order to reach the top 10.

"But in Fort Benning's case, (former post commanding general), Maj. Gen. Jay Hendrix said, 'Let's go for it,' so we did. And lo and behold, we made it," she said.

McLaney said Fort Benning would be competing against other federal institutions, some of which have been entering the competition for a long time.

The other finalists include the Defense Contract Management Command Long Island, Garden City, N.Y.; Defense Mapping Agency, Fairfax, Va.; Veterans Administration Medical and Regional Office Center, Department of Veterans Affairs, Togus, Maine; Department of Navy Shore Intermediate Maintenance Activity, San Diego, Calif.; Federal Supply Service, Northeast Caribbean Region, General Services Administration, New York, N.Y.; Goddard Space Flight Center, National Aeronautics and Space Administration, Greenbolt, Md.; Rock Island Arsenal, Rock Island, Ill.; U.S. Army Communications-Electronics Command Logistics and Readiness Center, Fort Monmouth, N.J.; and the U.S. Army Communications-Electronics Command Acquisition Center, Fort Monmouth, N.J.

McLaney said the purpose of the President's Quality Award Program is to recognize federal organizations that improved their overall performance and demonstrated a trend in providing high quality products and services, resulting in effective use of taxpayer dollars. She said it's also designed to promote sharing of the best management techniques and providing models for other organizations.

An assessment team will visit the post in mid-January.

CG approves CFC extension

Maj. Gen. Carl Ernst, the commanding general, extended the Combined Federal Campaign to Dec. 2 to give incoming students and trainees the opportunity to contribute.

"We're hoping to offer the opportunity to participate to those transient students who will in-process after the original deadline," Chief Warrant Officer 4 Darrell Carter, the installation project officer, said.

Individuals may continue to turn in contributions to unit key persons or the unit campaign coordinator through close of business on Dec. 2, Carter said.

The deadline for units to make a final turn in is 2 p.m. Dec. 6, he said.

As of Nov. 8, $240,000 had been raised equaling 48 percent of the $500,000 goal set when the campaign began last month.

For information on making turn ins or contributions, call 682-5142.

Post remembers rangers during observance

By Lori Egan
Bayonet staff writer

Fort Benning paid tribute to rangers killed in action during the Vietnam War Monday at the Ranger Memorial.

Larry Rhodes, treasurer of the 75th Infantry Regiment Association, read the names of the six men from Company D (Ranger), 151st Airborne Infantry, who were killed from the only ranger National Guard unit that served in Vietnam. These men were awarded Purple Hearts for their ultimate sacrifice. Two of the men who died within two months of each other were also best men at each other's wedding, Rhodes said.

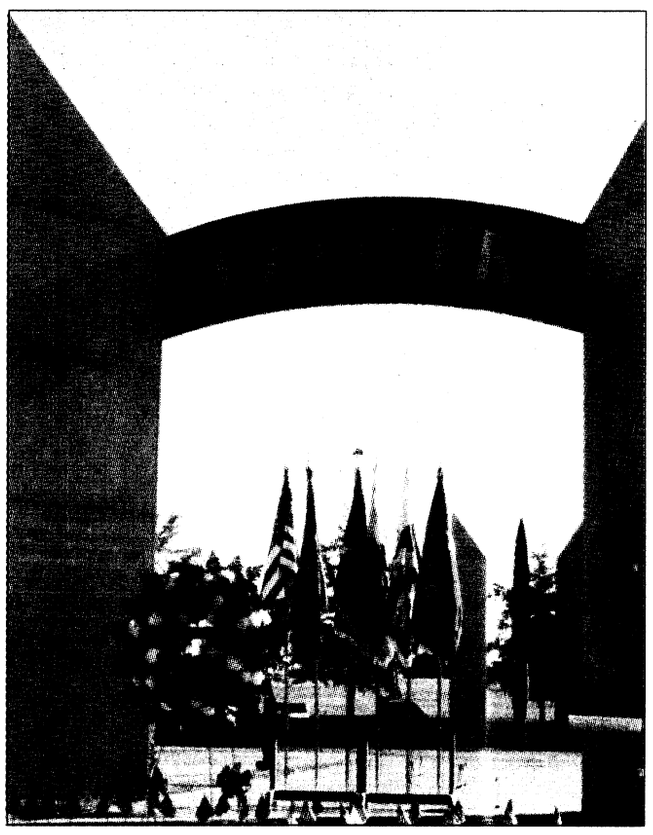
Voices broke as veterans remembered the soldiers they served with in Vietnam, reading their names and the dates of their deaths. Men like George Olsen, who Steve Crabtree, a veteran of Company G, remembered horsing around with the day before he died and John Bennett, whose body he pulled out of the South China Sea.

The names of these soldiers and others like them are engraved on bricks lining the walkway of the Ranger Memorial.

Crabtree's wife purchased a brick for him in 1993 and Crabtree started to think about purchasing bricks for World War II rangers Pres Hogue and Joe Larkin who were captured at Anzio Beach in 1944 and then about the soldiers he served with in Vietnam.

"I became overwhelmed with the idea of purchasing 31 bricks and then contacted McDonnell Douglas to see if they would provide a grant to match donations.

Former rangers of Companies G, P and N; 75th Ranger Regiment; and Company D (Ranger), 151st Airborne Infantry, raised money to purchase bricks, which line the walkway of the Ranger Memorial. McDonnell Douglas provided matching funds.



"We have at least 122 bricks in place now," said Rick Ehrler, president of the 75th Infantry Regiment Association.

"Our goal is to have all the names of the almost 400 men who served in long range reconnaissance patrols and ranger units and were killed in Vietnam in stone by the year 2000," Rhodes said.

"More appropriate than this memorial is the fact that we are honoring their service and their sacrifice," Ehrler said.

While speaking to more than 100 people who attended the ceremony, Crabtree said, "We lost the battle in Vietnam but we won the war for democracy."

Not without a price ... freedom is never free, said Chaplain (Capt.) Tom Wheatley, Ranger Training Brigade in closing the ceremony.

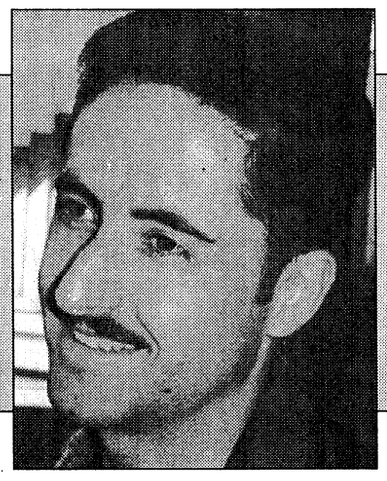
What can be done to curb teen-age smoking?

Ruth Lawrence, family member — "To curb teen-age smoking, stores need to check the identification of everyone. They also need to post signs saying that smoking will kill you."



Pvt. 2 George Pratt, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 1st Battalion, 15th Infantry Regiment — "I think it's important to give classes on smoking in schools. They could use the shock factor like they do with alcoholism."

Emilio Aviles, civilian employee — "They need to take all of the cigarette machines away, and they need to make smoke-free zones."

Sgt. 1st Class Marta Walker, School of the Americas — "I would like to see the parents of the teen-age smokers get punished. I also think they should ration the cigarettes to parents only."

Vanessa Timmons, family member — "The stores should get identification from everybody who wants to buy cigarettes, or they should scare them straight by taking them to the hospital and showing them what it looks like to die of cancer."

Sgt. Roland Lewis, Fort Bragg, N.C. — "The schools should show the students what it looks like when a cigarette burns inside of a bottle. That will show them what smoking does to your lungs."

Smoking

Health risks go far beyond respiratory disease

By Thomas D. Richardson
U.S. Army Dental Activity

Everybody knows about the scientifically-proven hazards of smoking, including lung cancer and other lung diseases, heart disease and oral cancer — the big ones.

And let's not forget the now-proven hazards of second-hand smoke (the smoke inhaled by persons near a smoker), which also include lung cancer and heart disease. Second-hand smoke also induces asthma attacks and other respiratory ailments in bystanders.

commentary

Some of you may have considered quitting, but haven't, so perhaps you need that last little push, that last little discouraging piece of information about tobacco use that finally galvanizes your will — the proverbial "straw that breaks the camel's back."

Consider the now documented deleterious effects of tobacco use just in your mouth.

Health officials now recognize cigarette smoking as a "risk factor" in caries (dental decay). This means that smoking increases the potential for the existence and progression of caries in your mouth. We don't know exactly why yet, but suspect that it may interfere with some of the protective qualities of saliva. Caries is a disease affected by many factors, some of which are very difficult to quantify or to even identify. Measured over large populations and statistically analyzed, however, cigarette smoking proves convincingly to be a culprit.

Cigarette smoking affects periodontal disease even more so. The dental literature now names smoking not merely as a risk factor, but as a major risk factor in folks with normal immune systems. Treatment rendered to smokers with periodontal disease is often much less effective than that provided to otherwise healthy nonsmokers. Stated simply, the "healing potential" of oral soft tissues in smokers is often poor.

Smokeless tobacco users also incur additional risks within the oral cavity. Mucogingival defects, in which the gingiva (gums) are eventually separated from the teeth, readily occurs as a result of the "chemical burn" effect of smokeless tobacco placed in the typical locations.

Mucogingival defects result in a cascading sequence of events that eventually require the extraction of the affected tooth. As in the case with smokers, treatment for mucogingival defects is adversely affected by the continued use of smokeless tobacco.

The greatest threat from smokeless tobacco, however, is oral cancer. Use of smokeless tobacco soon leaves a characteristic corrugated, white patch where normally is found red-colored soft tissue. This white patch usually cannot be distinguished from oral cancer by visual examination. Oral cancer in the early stages is usually painless and often doesn't appear very impressive — often like a small, red sore, or sometimes as a white patch.

A substantial number of people die from this type of cancer every year because it is often discovered late in its course, when treatment is less successful. The frequency of oral cancer can be directly attributed to the frequency in which the oral tissues are subjected to chemicals, such as those found in tobacco products, which are known "carcinogens" (proved scientifically to cause cancer).

The oral future of the tobacco user is grim. Tobacco use encourages periodontal disease and dental caries, and fatal or disfiguring oral cancer can occur. Take some time to consider all the risks you take by using tobacco products.

You already know about the medical risks to your body and to those close enough to you to inhale your "second-hand" smoke. And I suspect that you already know that the real reason you use tobacco involves addiction to the drugs contained in tobacco.

Let this information concerning tobacco's harmful oral effects help you make the right decision. Load the "last straw" — then do the right thing!

Editor's note: Thursday is the Great American Smokeout when millions of Americans will quit for a day. The American Cancer Society hopes that as smokers discover they can quit for a day, they will discover they possess the willpower to quit forever.

The Great American Smokeout takes place Thursday

Smokers and nonsmokers can get information and assistance by visiting their local hospital or clinic or by contacting a branch of the American Cancer Society in their area. They also can call the society at (800) 227-2345.

Policy: Post enforces public smoking prohibition

Office of the Staff Judge Advocate

Fort Benning's policy on smoking prohibits:

•The smoking of tobacco in all workplaces, military vehicles and aircraft and official vans and buses. The workplace includes any area inside a building or facility where military personnel, civilians, or persons under contract to the Army perform work, except for certain recreational facilities in which authorities designate smoking areas occasionally.

•Smoking within 50 feet of common points of ingress or egress. The policy permits smoking in designated outdoor smoking areas located at least 50 feet from common points of ingress or egress and not in areas commonly used by nonsmokers.

Supervisors, including special court-martial convening authorities, directors and senior staff officers, can designate outdoor smoking areas. Where more than one activity occupies a building, the supervisor or building coordinator bears the responsibility of designating smoking areas.

•Denying employees the right to smoke and appropriate break times for this purpose. However, appropriate break times provide smokers with no additional time beyond routine breaks for the purpose of smoking instead of performing their job duties.

Supervisors bear the responsibility for monitoring their workers and initiating proper action if workers violate this policy.

•Smoking in common spaces, defined as any space within a building common to occupants and visitors, including but not limited to corridors, laundry rooms, stairways, lounges, elevators, lobbies, storage areas and restrooms. Examples of these areas include family housing apartments, unaccompanied personnel housing, transient housing and Army operated hotels.

•Smoking where it presents a safety hazard, such as firing ranges, ammunition storage areas, fuel pumps, motor pools and equipment maintenance shops.

•Cadre and faculty of any military school to use tobacco products in the presence or view of students while on duty.

The policy permits:

•Smoking in individually assigned and unaccompanied personnel living quarters as long as the quarters share no common heating, ventilation or air conditioning system. It permits smoking in quarters with common air-conditioning systems only if an air quality survey establishes that the indoor air quality protects nonsmokers from environmental tobacco smoke.

When not required or not available and a room assignment includes two or more individuals, smoking and nonsmoking preferences will be a determinate factor during that room assignment.

The policy instructs:

•The proper authorities to display notices stating the prohibition of smoking except in designated outdoor areas at entrances to buildings and facilities at Fort Benning.

Failure to comply with this policy subjects soldiers, family members, retirees and civilian personnel to a variety of penalties, depending upon the violation, the status of the offender and other relevant factors. Military personnel not complying with this policy subject themselves to a variety of administrative actions. Civilian personnel not complying subject themselves to possible disciplinary actions.

A possible result for a person repeatedly disobeying this policy include removal and barring from activities, such as morale, welfare and recreation facilities; the Youth Activity Center; and the installation.

Post celebrates Native American Month

By Lisa M. Hibbert
Bayonet staff writer

Fort Benning conducted its opening ceremony for Native American Month Nov. 7 at the Henry A. Caro Noncommissioned Officers' Academy.

Featured speaker, former Cpl. Philip W. Coon, a full-blooded Creek of Sapulpa, Okla., and Bataan Death March survivor, spoke on his experiences in the military.

Born in 1919, Coon's mother died while he was still a child and his father, unable to take care of him, sent him to an orphanage in Kansas. While there, he attended Haskell Institute in Lawrence, Kan.

Many of his fellow students served as National Guardsmen so when World War I started and their units got activated, Coon said he decided to enlist and go with them.

"In our school, we always did a lot of military drills," Coon said. "We even had a calvary unit at our school. I guess I always wanted to join the military because I had been exposed to that type of life."

Although Coon's friends deployed ahead of him, he volunteered for an overseas assignment in 1941, hoping for Hawaii. After completing both basic and jungle warfare training, Coon ended up going to Manila where he served in Company H, 31st Infantry Regiment, as a machine gunner.

April 11, 1942, members of the Japanese Army forced Coon to participate in the infamous Bataan Death March and held him captive until January 1945.

"At the time of my capture, I never thought I would make it out alive," Coon said. "The Filipino soldiers who were our captors shot anyone that tried to run. When I first got there, we would try to help our fellow soldiers who were injured. The Filipinos made us leave them alone. Our captors took the person away from us, and we heard the shots being fired. We just never saw those people any more"

Coon said he remained in the camp a month after the U.S. Army finally rescued him in 1945 because they waited for a safe passage out.

"I remember the day the Army came to get us," Coon said. "You could hear the motor humming in the engine, and I just knew that it was an American plane because the plane engines sounded different.

"When I saw the plane coming in the distance, the silver trim glittered in the sunlight," Coon said. "We all watched as it descended lower and lower. It stopped and hovered over us and the guy dropped down a first-aid kit with a note attached saying that the war was over and that we were going home."

Coon said that his infantry training prepared him for his time as a prisoner of war.

"Being a foot soldier, I was better prepared for the front line than the airborne soldiers I was with. I already had experienced being out of ammunition and without food."

Coon said that the hardest part of his capture was when he came down with malaria.

On his way back to the U.S. from Manila, Coon finally made it to Hawaii although he stayed very briefly. Upon his arrival at Fort Sam Houston, Texas, Coon received an honorable discharge from service.

He entered the Job Training Corps where he earned a two-year apprenticeship in welding and painting. He eventually moved back to Oklahoma and worked until 1981 when he retired from his local Painters and Decorators of America Union No. 1895.

Coon and his wife, Helen, reside in Sapulpa, Okla.

At the conclusion of the ceremony, Coon received two plaques — one presented by Col. John R. Reitzell, chief of staff for the U.S. Army Infantry Center, and one from Command Sgt. Maj. Willie G. Wells, commandant of NCOA.

The program also featured 11-year-old T'Nesha Pruitt, daughter of Staff Sgt. Warren Pruitt of NCOA, who sang the national anthem, and Cory Loomis, adult advisor to the Apatschin Chapter of the Order of the Arrow, Boy Scouts of America, who performed a Native American dance.

Sgt. 1st Class Gregory Mance, Post Drill Sergeant of the year, narrated the event.

Better Opportunities for Single Soldiers

Credit sometimes hard to establish for single soldiers

By Michael T. James
Better Opportunities for Single Soldiers

Have you ever been turned down for a credit card, car loan, or a personal loan? If you have and you're single, you need to know why it's harder for single soldiers to establish credit than their married counterparts.

When applying for some form of credit, creditors take the information provided to them and then contact a local credit bureau office to check the applicant's credit history. A point system is used to evaluate the information for approval or disapproval.

Points are awarded based on such things as being married, having a phone in your name, checking and savings accounts, renting or owning a home and being at least 25 years of age. Single soldiers loose points because they live in barracks and don't have phones, according to a spokesperson at the Credit Bureau of Columbus.

How can single soldiers establish credit and build a good credit history file?

Building a credit history file takes time and a good credit-building strategy. The first step is to obtain a current copy of your credit history report.

The second step is to add any missing data to your file. Take all letters and loan information from creditors of paid off or currently open accounts where regular scheduled payments are made.

The credit history report, good or bad, determines how easy or difficult it is for you to obtain bank loans, auto loans, personal loans, etc. The report also determines what interest rate is charged and in some cases, whether or not you get a certain job or are even able to increase your life insurance policy.

A credit report is the picture of you that your prospective creditors get by inquiring into your credit bureau file.

VA seeks women vets' stories

Department of Veterans Service

ATLANTA — Georgia Commissioner of Veterans Affairs Pete Wheeler urges women from throughout the state to participate in a unique effort to locate and honor an estimated 35,100 women veterans who reside in Georgia.

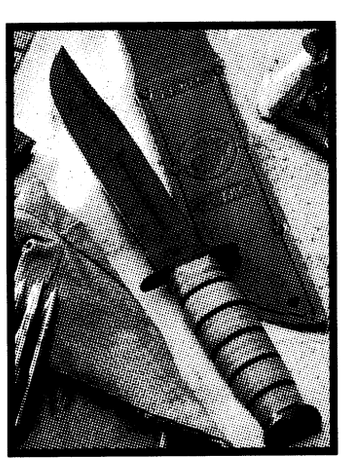
The Women In Military Service For America Memorial Foundation Inc. broke ground at its Arlington National Cemetery site June 22, 1995.

When completed, the memorial will honor and pay tribute to the nearly 2 million women who have served in our nation's defense, beginning with the American Revolution and continuing to the present. As construction continues and planning begins for the dedication on Oct. 18, 1997, the drive to locate and register women veterans and active duty service women intensifies.

The registration serves to document the stories of women's deeds, sacrifices and service. Each registration submission includes the photo, military history and personal memories of a service woman. These stories will be displayed through the memorial's computerized database and will be accessible to the public.

Only 1,700 of an estimated 35,100 women veterans residing in Georgia have registered thus far.

"We urge women from across the state to help in this effort to document women's history in the military," Wheeler said. "Whether you served many years ago or are serving today, your military history deserves a place in this national memorial.



For more information or to register, call (800) 472-5883 or write to the Women's Memorial, Dept. 560, Washington, D.C. 20042-0560.

RSO aids retiring soldiers with transition

Retirement Services Office

Retirement represents a battle many soldiers and families approach unprepared.

Once a soldier retires, what happens to his or her benefits. Where does a person not on active duty get medical care? Will he or she need a new identification card?

As a retiree, a person still remains a part of the total Army, but benefits and obligations change from those on active duty.

To win the retirement battle, remember three letters — RSO, which stands for Retirement Services officer, someone who can answer a retiree's questions and many more dealing with life after active duty.

Even if a person faces retirement several years from now, a visit to meet the Retirement Services officer helps. Ask for a copy of Army Echoes, the bulletin published for retirees by the Army Retirement Services Office of the Deputy Chief of Staff of Personnel.

And, ask for the installation retiree newsletter, Still Serving Survivor Benefit Plan, which lets retirees make sure that part of their retired pay continues to go to family members after the retiree's death.

No matter how much research a soldier conducts to try to get ready for retirement, there comes the question of how to find that next job, how soon to decide where to settle for retirement, how to prepare for the transition into retirement, etc.

As soon as a soldier applies for retirement, a representative from the Retirement Services Office automatically refers the service member to the Army Career and Alumni Program personnel who schedule an appointment for preseparation orientation and a one-on-one consultation to assist the soldier with all transition needs.

During Retiree Activity Day, soldiers meet and chat with those who've already fought the retirement battle and hear experts speak on retirement and related subjects.

Speakers from various agencies talk about retirement and retirement benefits. Agencies include: Army Retirement Services, the Defense Finance and Accounting Services' Retired and Annuitant Pay Centers, Social Security, the Department of Veterans Affairs, the Civilian Health and Medical Program of the Uniformed Services Office and Tricare, Martin Army Community Hospital and other sources.

By volunteering for RAD, service members meet retirees, learn about your benefits and assist Retirement Services Office in preparing for this meg1a-event.

Don't enter the retirement battle without a plan, visit the Retirement Services Office.

IOBC soldiers learn IMT techniques

By Lee A. Barnard
Infantry Officer Basic Course

Adrenaline, dust, bullets, explosions — the warrior leaps to his feet — "I'm up, he sees me, I'm down!" This is a familiar scenario for soldiers executing individual movement technique drills.

Nov. 6 and 7, students from Company B, 2nd Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment, Infantry Officer Basic Course Class 1-97 sharpened their IMT skills during a live-fire training exercise at Pierce Range. The training provided students with the opportunity to properly execute IMT drills while engaging targets under simulated combat conditions.

The IMT range consisted of five separate lanes, each totaling 150 meters in length with various concealment points and pop-up target pits located along the route. Students negotiated the lanes in two-man teams in which they executed three- to five-second buddy rushes, the high crawl, and low crawl — all while firing at enemy targets with live ammunition. To add to the realism, the cadre trainers discharged smoke grenades and artillery simulators.

"The course is designed to certify that every IOBC student can properly execute the low crawl, high crawl, and buddy rush to standard," said Sgt. 1st Class William Brown, primary instructor for the exercise. He also emphasized that new lieutenants must understand the practical aspect of support and maneuver with the basic two-man buddy team.

Brown said the lieutenants must know the safety aspect of live-fire movements and the importance of maintaining their weapons oriented toward the enemy.

"I realized the importance of safety and being mentally focused," 2nd Lt. Craig Cardon said, "and to keep my weapon up-and-down range."

As the IMT lanes ran parallel to each other, students had to be keenly aware of not only their respective buddies but to keep close watch for other teams in adjacent lanes at all times.

IOBC cadre members accompanied each team as they moved down range to ensure that students properly executed the IMT drills and to supervise safety. In addition, the cadre first provided a blank-fire rehearsal for all students, which allowed them to practice before receiving live ammunition.

Lane safety Staff Sgt. Allen Fobbs said he believes the live-fire exercise directly benefits new lieutenants by illustrating the importance of "training as you fight in war" and making them aware of potential fratricide.

"Such training also prepares the students for future IOBC operations," Fobbs said, "which will require them to assault simulated enemy positions with live ammunition using their IMT skills and acting on the principles of maneuver and support."

For students who had never participated in live-fire training, the exercise highlighted the importance and hazards of the infantry's mission — to engage and destroy the enemy. Even prior enlisted lieutenants admitted that the day's training proved especially valuable.

"Although I've done this before, it is still a learning experience," 2nd Lt. David Buffaloe said.

Fobbs said physically and mentally demanding training such as live-fire IMT exercises remains especially important in the development of young infantry officers.

"The IMT training allowed me the opportunity to perfect my basic soldier skills and therefore better lead my future soldiers by example," 2nd Lt. Richard Benton, said.

"It helps a new lieutenant more clearly understand the soldiers' perspective," added 2nd Lt. Mike Buchkoski.

1st Lt. Leonas Lukosevicius, an international student from the Lithuanian army, admitted that basic soldier skills such as IMT differed very little between the American and Lithuanian armies, but he said the intensity of the pyrotechnics and pop-up targets during the day added a sense of realism.

"Such training emphasizes the critical importance of team work and the fact that you can't fight alone," Lukosevicius said.

However, the IOBC lieutenants were not the only personnel to improve their knowledge about the infantry at the IMT range. Wives of IOBC students also attended the training through Co. B's spouse support program, which is designed to integrate the wives of new infantry officers into the Army community.

IOBC wives Lianne Cardon, Catherine Buffaloe and Marilyn Brown all anxiously watched as their husbands negotiated the lanes.

All the wives admitted that viewing such training permitted them to more fully comprehend the type of demanding, stressful duties required by their husbands in their profession as infantry officers.

"I have a better understanding about the basic course and a better understanding of what my husband is going through," Brown said. She said that by attending such training, she ultimately supports her husband in his job.

Class 1-97 graduates March 7, 1997.

Four rangers compete in Eco-Challenge

U. S. Cavalry

Four members of the 5th Ranger Training Battalion located at Camp Frank D. Merril, in Dahlonega, Ga. and one female white water rafting instructor recently competed and finished 11th in the Eco-Challenge.

Eco-Challenge, a painstaking, breathtaking, bone-breaking survival event, is spread over 300 miles of the most treacherous terrain in British Columbia, Canada.

Coed teams of five raced across glacier-cut land, fog-shrouded forests and bitter-cold glacial rapids in seven events — team member horseback riding, kayaking, climbing, mountain biking, rafting, trekking and canoeing. Teamwork, stamina, mental and physical ability, and compassion where all key elements to completion.

Seventy-one teams entered this year's Eco-Challenge competition. Only 14 teams accomplished this goal.

Randy Acton, U.S. Cavalry's president, and his wife, Patsy, attended the entire eight-day competition.

"It was overwhelming to watch the exhausted contestants cross the finish line, including Team U.S. Cavalry who finished 11th. They are all true winners," said Acton. "We're especially proud of our team, both as individuals and as representatives of U.S. Cav."

The team consists of four males, Lt. Col. Luke Green, Capt. Dan Knight, 1st Sgt. Arthur McCann and Staff Sgt. Johnny Long, all assigned to the 5th Ranger Training Bn. in Dahlonega, Ga., and one female, Julie Dauphine.

Sgt. 1st Class Scott Carter and Billy Richards formed the support team.

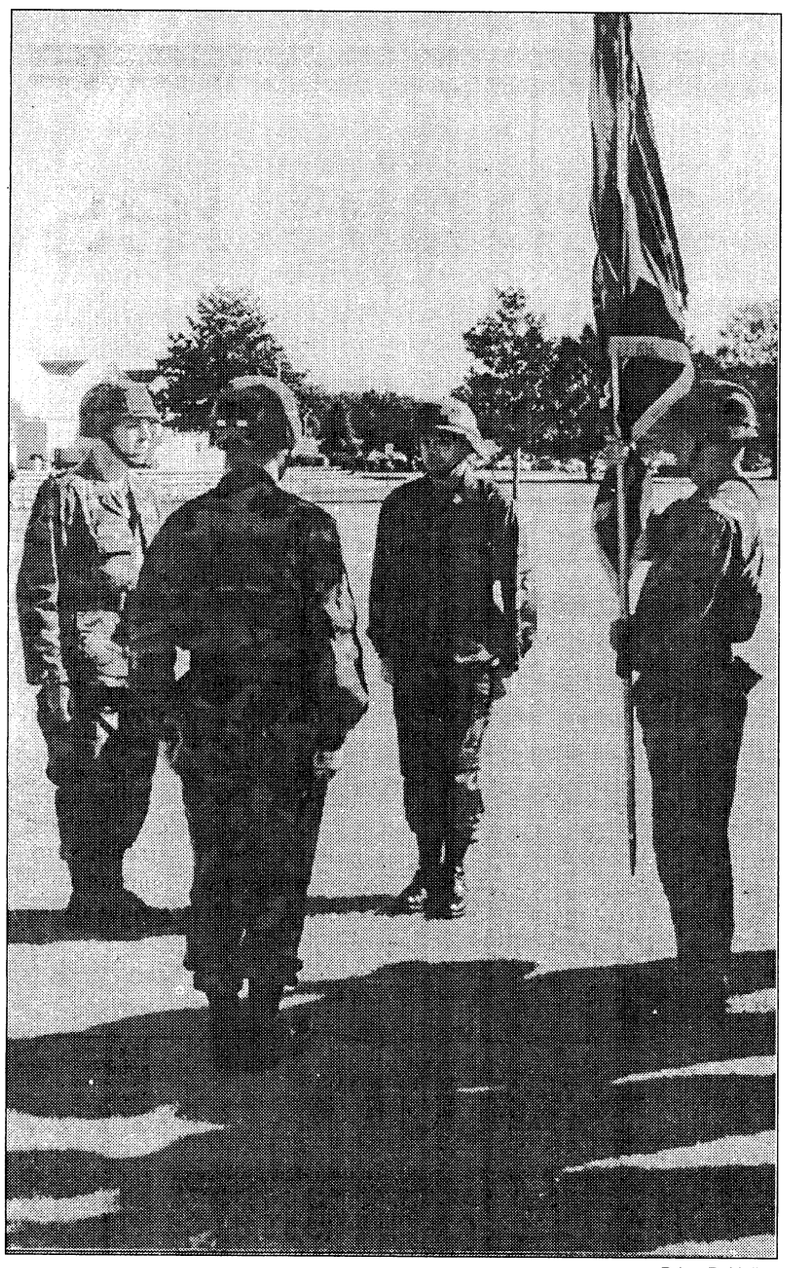
SAFETY

on the front line

The noncommissioned officer serves as the first line of defense for safety in tactical operations, unit training and on and off duty recreational activities. The NCO corps will implement and execute the best force protection safety program through the following NCO risk management safety goals and objectives.

Goal no. 1

Noncommisioned officers will ensure unit training is conducted safely.



Objectives

1. NCOs will ensure that instructor personnel, unit NCOs and cadre are properly trained and certified for the tasks being conducted and that appropriate safety classes are attended prior to training. Rehearse training prior to conducting training.
2. Before training, NCOs will conduct safety briefings, which cover all aspects of safety for each training event, and will emphasize balancing safety with realistic high quality training. Risk management work sheets will be used as a guide for the briefing with risk management checklists completed daily.
3. NCOs will set the example during unit physical fitness training by demonstrating the proper methods of stretching and warm-up exercises prior to physical activity and using authorized running routes only.
4. NCOs will identify all combat lifesavers before training, which requires combat lifesavers. NCOs will ensure that combat lifesaver certification is current and that all life support equipment is present, maintained and updated as necessary.
5. Before the field training, NCOs will direct soldiers to avoid wild animals, specifically snakes and stinging insects. NCOs will ensure personnel who are allergic to insect stings are identified prior to training and that insect repellent and sting kits are available.
6. NCO's will ensure soldiers do not sleep near roads, trails, or other areas where vehicles may travel. Dismount points will be established and all vehicles will be ground guided. Guards will be posted to protect sleeping areas as deemed necessary NCO's. NCO"s will ensure soldiers do not sleep in front of or under vehicles or trailers
7. NCOs will identify potential safety hazards by walking all terrain where and when possible. NCOs will ensure road guards are posted in accordance with unit SOPs for all unit training.
8. NCOs will evaluate all field expedients to ensure minimum necessary risks to soldiers. Training will be adjusted or canceled if soldiers are placed in imminent danger or risk serious injury or death.
9. NCOs will encourage soldiers to report any unsafe acts or conditions. NCOs will direct soldiers to immediately halt all training or call cease fire regardless of rank to avoid an accident.

1st Bn 11th Inf Regt changes command

Brian R. Voller

Lt. Col. Richard Kaiura, outgoing commander waits to receive the 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment, colors from Command Sgt. Maj. Donald R. Hopkins before passing the colors over to Lt. Col. Robert C. Morris, the incoming commander.

By Brian R. Voller

The 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment came under the command of a new leader Nov. 12 on York Field.

Lt. Col. Robert C. Morris Jr. succeeded Lt. Col. Richard G. Kaiura as commander of the 1st Bn., 11th Inf. Regt.

Kaiura, commander of the 11th since September 1995, awaits assignment orders for a new duty station.

Kaiura said he was very proud to have served as the 1st Bn., 11th Inf. Regt., commander for 14 months.

"We have one of the most diverse and important battalions on Fort Benning," Kaiura said. "It has been professionally challenging to get to know the ins and outs of this battalion ... I am extremely proud of everything this battalion has accomplished; I know there is more work to be done, and I know the first battalion is prepared for what lies ahead.".

Morris said taking command from Kaiura felt like an honor in itself and taking command of the 1st Bn. was something he has wanted to do and he looked forward to achieving.

"If I had to think of one officer whom I would like to take command from, it would be Rich Kaiura," Morris said.

He continued by comparing his taking of command to the words the late Col. Bill Powell, a former commander of the 2nd Ranger Battalion.

"I am here on my own volition. I am here today because I desire to train and to work with the soldiers who make our Army great. I look forward to my time in command as a time to repay all the people who have helped me get where I am today."

Morris comes to Fort Benning after serving as special project officer with the assistant secretary of Defense for Special Operations and Low Intensity Conflict where he supported numerous international humanitarian organizations' programs and operations to include the International War Crimes Tribunal for Rwanda and the former Yugoslavia

Morris' initial assignment after graduating from the Virginia Military Institute in 1979 was as a rifle platoon leader, company executive officer and scout platoon leader with 1st Battalion, 31st Infantry in Korea.

His other command and staff assignments include the 2nd Battalion 75th Ranger Regiment, in Fort Lewis, Wash., as a rifle platoon leader and then battalion support platoon leader supporting Operation Urgent Fury in Grenada; a company commander with the 82nd Airborne Division at Fort Bragg, N.C.; and three years with the Joint Special Operations Command at Pope Air Force Base, N.C., as the Logistics Plans and Procurement Officer supporting special operation missions to include Just Cause in Panama and Desert Shield and Desert Storm in the Persian Gulf.

Morris and his wife, Kim, have one daughter.

Challenge: rangers compete

"When we received the letter from the Ranger Battalion requesting our sponsorship, we knew we could trust they were serious individuals with intensive training and determination," Acton said.

U.S. Cavalry donated all of the merchandise the team needed along with the transportation vehicle, air tickets, room and board, and entrance fees. The extensive list of needed merchandise ranged from tents to backpacks to water-proof matches. Pretesting, conducted on each item, assured it would endure their tough battle. After the competition, Acton donated all of the used equipment to the Army's morale, welfare and recreation department at Camp Frank D. Merrill.

Volunteers make dreams come true

Santa's Castle helps make Christmas day possible for many children on Fort Benning.

Santa's Castle is a private non-profit organization run entirely by volunteers that help distribute toys to struggling families for Christmas, said Terri Mazure Santa's Castle's Toy manager.

"We run entirely from donations," said Mazure.

Also to help Santa's Castle each year, various units and organizations hold fund-raisers, Santa's Castle's chairwoman Heather Olsen said. Past fund-raisers include runs, bake sales, tournaments and haunted houses, Olsen said.

"Donations we need include: toys, jewelry, sports equipment, cleaning supplies, paint, books, games and puzzles," Olsen said.

"Fund-raisers help, but we always need more people to volunteer their time and more money, we need what every other organization needs, more manpower and more money," Olsen said.

Santa's Castle collects donations year-round to help families who find themselves in severe financial difficulty, Olsen said.

Some indicators of a family in financial need include: no pay due, garnishment of pay, handicapped children, single parents with two or more children, severe illness or death in the family, or a new addition (baby) to the family, Olsen said .

Olsen also gave a list of personnel that may submit and sign applications for these families: commanders, company commanders, first sergeants, chaplains, Army Community Services personnel and Red Cross personnel.

After applications come back to Santa's Castle by these personnel, volunteers then make an appointment for the family to come to their building and to "shop" or choose toys for each of their children, Olsen said. Appointment slips containing a date, time and other important information go back to the soldier's unit then, Olsen said.

All information on the applications are regarded confidential, Olsen said.

And last but not least the families shop. Six families are scheduled every half hour for two weeks in December (Monday through Friday) up until December 20, said Olsen.

Each family receives three toys, a stuffed animal, a book and a puzzle per child. Families also receive one game and one roll of wrapping paper, said Olsen.

Olsen said that Santa's Castle remains open and accepts donations year-round.

Also applications can be picked up and donations dropped off at Santa's Castle located in Soldiers' Plaza, Building 2639.

Hours of Santa's Castle during November include Monday, Wednesday and Friday 10 a.m. to 2 p.m., and every week day in December up to Christmas, Olsen said.

For more information on volunteering or donating, contact Terri Mazure at Santa's Castle at 545-1233.

SCHOOL BUS SAFETY

Use caution while riding, driving by

By Lisa M. Hibbert
Bayonet staff writer

Imagine a school bus stops at a corner. The sign comes out to stop the motorists and allow children to cross the street and board the bus safely, but one car goes around, jeopardizing the lives of the children.

Unfortunately, this scenario played for real in a Fort Benning housing area, but the Military Police and the bus drivers of Taylor Motors Inc., the contractor for Fort Benning Schools, came together to try to solve this problem.

"We put patrols in the school zones for those who do not willingly comply with speed limits," said Maj. Ronald G. Jones, chief, Law Enforcement Division. "Our presence must compel people to mind their manners and use prudent safety laws."

"Cars not stopping for the bus stop sign does not happen often," said Robert Ouimette, contract manager for Taylor Motors Inc., "but we don't want this to happen at all."

But unyielding motorists do not comprise the total danger facing the passengers; other issues like poor visibility for the bus drivers also need to be addressed.

"We tell our kids to watch the bus driver for a signal before crossing the street because the children cannot see oncoming traffic from where they stand," Ouimette said. "Also, we teach the bus drivers what to look for as the kids cross in front of them because the driver's visibility is blocked for about 20 feet in front of the bus because it's up so high."

Because of the precious cargo being carried, the bus drivers inspect their vehicles before every trip — before they take the children to school and before they take them home, to ensure a safe riding vehicle, Ouimette said.

Unlike automobiles, buses do not have seat belts because of safety reasons.

"The compartment seats are specially designed to fold over and protect the rider in case of an accident," Ouimette said. "Plus in the event that a bus tips over, having to undo the seat belts of about 50 preschoolers would be dangerous."

But safety just isn't routine for the bus driver; it's done out of a love for the children, Ouimette said.

"Your life begins to revolve around your responsibility to keep the children safe, both on the bus and off," said Linda J. Ouimette, wife of the contract manager and a former bus driver.

The Ouimettes refers to the passengers as our kids because they said that as bus drivers, you develop a relationship with the children.

Save our children

More than 1,000 children between the ages of 5 and 14 are killed annually as the result of pedestrian-motor vehicle accidents.

Stay alert for children going to and from school this fall:

•Obey the speed limit (15 miles per hour) in school zones and housing areas.

•Watch for children walking, skating or cycling.

•Stop for buses loading and unloading children.

Cigarette smokers kick tobacco butt for the Great American Smokeout

By Douglas J. Gilbert
American Forces Press Service

WASHINGTON — When Thursday comes around, will you quit smoking or help others quit?

That's the goal of The Great American Smokeout, a day set aside each year by the American Cancer Society to get smokers to take their last puff.

America's decades old anti-smoking crusade recently became more politically and emotionally charged. Steadfastly — with less sensationalism — the Department of Defense moved toward a smokeless office environment. Today, few military installations, including the Pentagon, allow smoking indoors, and at any post or base, service members receive help kicking the smoking habit.

To this end, the services' health promotions offices gear up every November to help smokers quit. Smokers and nonsmokers get information and assistance by visiting their local hospital or clinic, a branch of the American Cancer Society in their area (listed in the business pages of telephone directories), or the society directly at (800) 227-2345.

Internet users don't need to wait for Nov. 21, however. The World Wide Web offers information, answers questions, and even sponsor contests. For a look, access the Internet through a web browser and open "The Great American Smokeout" at www.cancer.org/smokeout/. The site offers a Smokeout Pledge for school-age children to complete and hand to their teacher. The form instructs teachers to mail the pledge to the American Cancer Society, which uses the information to promote its program to Congress and the White House.

In fact, this entire web site aims directly at children some disturbing information the American Cancer Society learned about youths and smoking:

•More than 1 million kids will start smoking this year. One-third of them will die from their addiction.

•Nearly 90 percent of all new smokers are age 18 or younger.

•The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention reported between 1991 and 1995, the proportion of high school students who smoked increased from one-quarter to one-third. Today, nearly 40 percent of white high school females smoke and 44 percent of white high school males light up or use smokeless tobacco. The percentage of young black males who smoke doubled between 1991 and 1995, from 14.1 to 27.8.

•Cigarettes kill more Americans than AIDS, alcohol, car accidents, murders, suicides, drugs and fires combined.

To further challenge youthful smokers, the Cancer Society web site offers a variety of on-line activities, including brief messages from well-known entertainers, authors and business leaders; a quiz to test knowledge about smoking and health; and chances to win $1,000 and $700 shopping sprees.

According to the society, most of America's 46 million adult smokers desire to quit. Like today's generation of puffers, they lit up for the first time at an average age of 13. By 14 1/2, they smoked daily. The Great American Smokeout unites all Americans in snuffing out smoking — and help prevent tobacco from snuffing out smokers, organizers said.

Red Cross receives donation

By Lynn M. Bieda
Special to The Bayonet ©

The Infantry Training Brigade spouses presented the Red Cross with more than $500 Wednesday.

Christine Brooks, one of the ITB wives, presented the check to Henry Edgar the station manager of the Red Cross.

The money raised by the ITB wives came from various social functions the club participated in.

"Some of our activities included an annual spouses' night out, a dinner and fashion show and bingo," Brooks said. "Last year we donated $275 to the Red Cross and this year we voted to donate the money again to the Red Cross," Brooks said.

The Red Cross' mission on Fort Benning includes cooperating closely with the Army by carrying out activities that supplement and assist the Army in its programs relating to the health, welfare, recreation, and morale of military personnel and their family members, Edgar said.

"The Red Cross advisory committee votes on how the money is used, Edgar said. "The Red Cross is needed in every community; we help prevent, prepare for and cope with emergencies."

The Red Cross provides emergency communications between service members and family members, factual reports of emergency situations for service members and military authorities. and financial assistance, Edgar said. It also provides health and safety courses and trains health and safety instructors and provides disaster assistance.

The Red Cross is located in Building 1699 on Vibbert Avenue.

USAIC Public Affairs Office

The Department of Defense switched to a new health care program for the Army, Navy and Air Force this year.

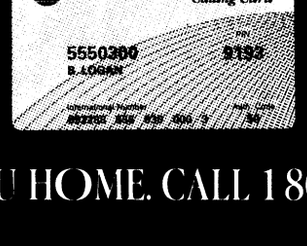
Representatives from Martin Army Community Hospital provide Tricare information to soldiers, retirees and family members.

Many eligible beneficiaries show concern about the change and how it affects their care. One of the most commonly asked questions follows.

As a Tricare beneficiary who elects not to join Tricare Prime, what benefits are available to me at the military treatment facility?

Tricare beneficiaries who choose to use Martin Army Community Hospital for their health-care needs continue to do so on a space available basis.

This applies to all active duty families, retirees and their family members. Public law significantly changed the priority of appointments for all military beneficiaries as follows: active duty, Prime enrollees, non-Prime enrollees, etc.



For example: An active duty family member who elects not to enroll in Prime will be seen on a space-available basis and thus will have a lower priority for appointments than a retiree or retiree family member who has enrolled in Tricare Prime.

At Martin Army Community Hospital, Prime enrollees receive guaranteed access standards for care. Prime enrollees requesting urgent care receive appointments within one day, routine appointments within seven days and wellness visits within 30 days.

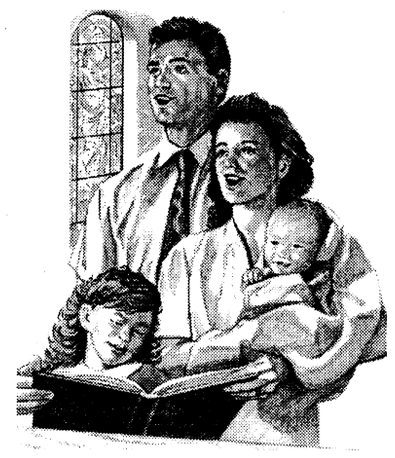
Learn to value the gift of community

By Julie M. Rowan
13th Corps Support Battalion

The community remains a place where we come to fellowship with each other. Here we feel free to share feelings, thoughts and desires. We discover our differences as well as our similarities.



reflections

The gift of community includes our interior freedom, which we often tend to overlook and ignore. Everything in this world relies upon the way in which we communicate. We soon discover the importance of those close to us, so our responsibility revolves around accepting, listening and learning.

The key in relating to others lies in finding a person willing to enter into the process of acceptance, affirmation and compassion. It is important to put 100 percent trust into other human beings. This involves taking risks and accepting others — warts and all.

We need to reach the point of breaking down the walls of inadequacy and of being able to relax when our darker sides show. When we finally feel satisfied and comfortable with our confidant, we become able to risk our vulnerabilities and find a common bond of affirmation to hold us together.

The question of trust then arises.

How much are we willing to risk together? Are we willing to open up and reveal those deep secrets that lie buried within? Most importantly, are we able to trust a stranger to hold these secrets in the utmost of confidentiality?

There remain those certain individuals with whom you can share your inner most thoughts. With them you don't feel condemnation or guilt. Being surrounded by loving and caring people who accept us, even with our guards down, encourages us to take the risk of being creative, spontaneous.

It takes a special kind of love to give enough acceptance and affirmation to someone to confide in you. I Corinthians 13:4-6 says, "Love is kind, it is not rude, it keeps no records of wrongs. Love does not delight in evil but rejoices with the truth. It always protects, always trusts, always hopes, always perseveres."

We all need to live with this passage so it reminds us that we need to respect and encourage our peers when they need the gift of sharing of the community.

Laying down burdens helps to Lighten your load

By Mark A. Zerger
29th Infantry Regiment

"For if you forgive men their trespasses, your heavenly Father will also forgive you, but if you forgive not men their trespasses, neither will your heavenly Father forgive your trespasses" (Matthew 6:14-15).

reflections

I like to travel light. I always throw away or give away a bunch of junk each time we move. It just makes life easier and less complicated for me. I'm not sure how you feel, but I believe that none of us likes to feel burdened down with things that weigh heavily on our hearts.

I read a story about a man who carried a big bag on his shoulder. A man on a horse drawn wagon pulled up beside him and said, "Get on and I'll give you a ride."

The beleaguered man struggled onto the wagon with his big bag still on his shoulder. "Throw down the bag, neighbor, and rest yourself," the driver of the wagon told him.

"No thanks," said the bag man, "I've been carrying this bag around so long, I'm used to it."

Do you possess feelings of unforgiveness that you got used to carrying around, and even though they weigh heavily on your heart, you still carry them.

A lot of benefits come with practicing forgiveness. You avoid developing ulcers and other negative side effects that eventually break you down. Most importantly, you perform what God requires.

Every Sunday we pray, "Forgive us our trespasses as we forgive those who trespass against us." Do we ever really stop to think that God requires us to forgive in order to be forgiven? God warns us about the danger of developing an overly critical spirit.

Jesus said in Matthew 7:3 (NAS) "Why do you look at the speck in your brother's eye, but do not notice the log that is in your own eye?" Again, this reminds us of Jesus' words, "He who is without sin among you, let him be the first to throw a stone at her" (John 8:7).

We need act as diamond miners when it comes to people. You must remove a lot of dirt to find the diamond. A problem develops when we get lazy and want to see the diamond first. Often we quit looking for the diamond and remember only the dirt. We often forget that dirt mixes with our own diamonds. Thank God that he forgives us when we come to him in faith.

He only asks us to be like him and willingly forgive others as he willingly forgave us. Thank God for his forgiveness. Thank God we possess the ability, with his help, to forgive others and free our hearts from those unwanted burdens. God's gift of forgiveness cements us together as children and in addition, lightens our load.

My dad showed me the difference between collecting coins and saving money.

When I was a kid, I thought he'd been collecting U.S. Savings Bonds. Until he said that his "collection" was for my college education and his retirement. Then I realized that he wasn't just "collecting" but "saving" to help insure our future. He told me that Savings Bonds are backed by the full faith and credit of the United States, so they're secure. They earn interest for up to 30 years. And their value is guaranteed to grow at market-based rates. That's insuring the future.

So I guess that's why I started "collecting" U.S. Savings Bonds, too.

Ask your employer or banker about saving with U.S. Savings Bonds. For all the right reasons.

Football teams complete perfect season

John W. Peeler

Chiefs running back Alphus Jackson runs for daylight as head official Eli Barber chases the play. The Chiefs won the game over the Cowboys 14-0 and posted a 5-2-1 record for the season.

By John W. Peeler

Perfection proved the order of the day on Blue Field Saturday as the 6-to 8- and 9-to 12-year old football leagues closed out their seasons with one team in each division finishing unbeaten and untied.

Coincidentally, both teams wore purple and were named Vikings.

The 6-to 8-year old Vikings went out in style shutting out the Giants 28-0 and in the process became the champions in the flag football division.

Scoring for the Vikings came on three rushing touchdowns from Josh Lee, Shevon Thomas and Duane Thomas.

Lee also scored on an interception return and the Viking defense recorded a safety to round out the scoring.

The Vikings were also crowned champions in the 9-to 12-year old tackle division by pounding the Seminoles 22-6 with a grinding running game that could not be stopped by the Seminole defense.

On the other side of the ball, the Viking defense allowed an early score then shut down the Seminole offense.

Running back Andrew Rabsatt led the Viking offense with two touchdowns and amassed 120 yards of the 220 total rushing yards gained by the Vikings.

Quarterback Zeke Morris added a touchdown to round out the scoring for the Vikings.

The victory left the Vikings as the only unbeaten team in the 9- to 12-year old division.

In the other 6-to 8-year old flag divisional game, the 49ers defeated the Packers 19-6 to complete a winning season.

In more 9-to 12-year old tackle football action, the Eagles slipped past the Panthers 6-0, and the Chiefs defeated the Cowboys 14-0.

In the over 12 tackle football league, the Browns won by forfeit over the Lions but played an exhibition game following eight-man football rules.

The 49ers put together a good mix of running and passing plays on offense and a strong effort on defense en route to a 22-6 victory over the Steelers in the other over 12 tackle football game.

The over 12 tackle football league concludes Saturday with the Browns taking on the 49ers in a game that will determine the champion and the Lions play the Steelers.

MEDDAC junior enlisted defeat civilians in 'Can Challenge'

Sgt. Maj. Henry Holt, MEDDAC command sergeant major, gets a pie in the face during the pretournament cookout.

By John W. Peeler
Special to the Bayonet©

The junior enlisted soldiers from the U.S. Army Medical Department Activity defeated the civilian team Nov. 7 in a MEDDAC-sponsored basketball tournament at the Briant Wells Field House.

The single elimination tournament, part of the Commander's Can Challenge program, brought in more than 400 canned items that will be donated to the Army Community Services Food Locker. Only MEDDAC and DENTAC units participated in the tournament with admission open to the general public.

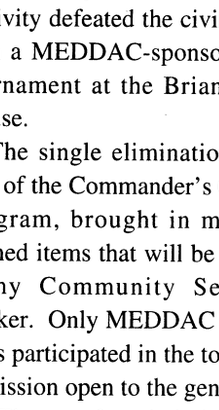
"The cost for admission to watch the games was one canned item per spectator," Sgt. Maj. Henry Holt said. "We were real pleased with the turnout."

Holt said the program provides a fun-filled competitive event for the soldiers and civilian employees that ultimately benefits the soldiers from around the installation.

"The real winner of this tournament was the food locker and the soldiers it serves," Holt said.

Holt said currently the Commander's Can Challenge Program is open only to MEDDAC and DENTAC units; however, at some point and time the program may expand.

"It would be nice if something like this could be done postwide," Holt said.



The tournament was the second this year with MEDDAC sponsoring a one-pitch softball tournament last May.

Holt credited Sgt. 1st Class Wayne Williams and Staff Sgt. Derick Purdue with the success of the program, along with the soldiers from MEDDAC and DENTAC, and said future tournaments would be conducted.

Some golfers deserve a good flogging

By Clyde Snively
Bayonet columnist

Singapore is not the only place flogging is permitted. I should know. I flog every time I step into the Follow Me Flogger Golf Course.

All I can say is golf is a four-letter word.

I'll admit it. I play infantry golf. I spend my time in the woods. Wait-a-minute vines snare my clothes and hidden branches poke my eyes. I do a lot of terrain association walks. A friend once recommended that I carry a map and compass in my bag along with a machete.

Fairways are what I read about in golf magazines. I hear they consist of grass and are free of rocks, branches and other obstructions.

Unfortunately, just like my milieu, the deep woods, they aren't litter free.

I used to think one reason for playing golf was to become one with nature, to savor lush greens and fairways (that you didn't have to mow), catch sight of soaring hawks, the grazing deer and escape from the hustle and bustle of every day life.

Not so.

Too many people use it as an excuse to go on a drinking binge — "How many beers can I consume over an 18-hole period?"

They abuse the golf carts and golf course. They toss their styrofoam cups and beer cans wherever they may be when the container becomes empty.

Even paper drinking cups at the water points are strewn about the trash receptacles. It's hard to imagine why these keen-eyed, sure-handed, highly coordinated golfers can't manage to ring the basket with their cups. But granted the occasional miss, what prevents them from bending over, picking up their trash and putting it in the basket?

I know they can bend over to tee up the ball, or get it out of the cup.

I often marvel at the manners of some of our golfers. I've noted that some of them do not think rules pertain to them. They drive their carts on fairways they aren't supposed to be on. Some even practically park on the greens despite signs that tell them "no carts."

Clyde Snively

commentary

They forget, or don't care, that there are other golfers who would like a modicum of silence while they are trying to strike the ball. Yes, voices, especially command voices, carry quite nicely on the golf course.

Some golfers either don't care or don't realize that they should allow faster groups to play through when they begin to lag more than a hole behind the group in front of them.

And you know those marks your balls make on the greens, there's a special tool designed to repair them. If you don't own one, a tee serves the same purposed.

Oh yes, guess what. Just because range balls go onto the fairway, or get hit beyond the fence and lie along the road, doesn't mean they now become common property. They still belong to the golf course and taking them is stealing. And that even includes walkers, joggers and bicyclists who stop along First Division Road to help themselves to the balls.

Speaking of stealing, it's also stealing to pay cart fees for one person then have two ride. And don't beat up the marshal or star who catches you. Instead, hang your head in shame and pay up and leave the course.

Golf is a great activity. It can be enjoyed by the duffer just as much as by the low-handicapper, but only as long as we show some considerations to the other golfers and take care of our course.

USAMU shooters showcase talent

USAMU Public Affairs Office

U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit shotgun team members showcased their talent recently in Quantico, Va., during the Virginia State Championships.

The USAMU soldiers swept both the singles trap and doubles trap competitions placing first through third in both events.

If this was a surprise to the 15 competitors who came from locations throughout Virginia to participate in the event, it certainly wasn't for the USAMU marksman.

"We train hard throughout the year," said 1996 Olympian David Alcoriza. "There's no down time. We keep a consistent training pace so we can continue to do well in competitions like this."

In the singles trap event with 225 points possible, Bret Erickson finished first with a score of 206, followed by Matthew Depuydt, who shot a score of 205. Alcoriza finished third with 203 points.

In the doubles trap event with 200 points possible, Walter Keever took first with a score of 172. Alcoriza followed in second with a score of 170. Erickson won the shoot off for third place with a score of 167.

The USAMU shotgun team will participates next in the Maple Leaf Regional Jan. 23 through 26 in San Diego, Calif.

"We're really looking forward to doing well there, too," said Burl Branham, USAMU shotgun team coach.

Sportsmens' contributions impact conservation efforts

National Shooting Sports Foundation

This year, the U.S. federal government shares $399 million in conservation funds, and every state in the union benefits, thanks to the hunters and anglers whose license fees and excise taxes contribute to funds that finance wildlife and sporting programs nationwide.

When sportsmen and women go afield on a hunting or fishing trip, in addition to the licenses and permits they purchase, they buy equipment, clothing, food, fuel and often shelter for use during their trip.

Much of their time and money gets spent in small, rural towns that rely heavily on outdoorsmen for their living, and more than 410,000 jobs remain directly or indirectly supported by hunting alone. Fishing supports another 924,000. Individual states and cities also benefit from the millions of dollars in sales taxes generated by sales of hunting and fishing gear.

More than 16 million hunters exist in America, each of whom spends about $850 per year on the sport. According to a recent poll conducted for the International Association of Fish and Wildlife agencies, the total contributions of hunters and anglers to the economy tops $104 billion per year. The billions of dollars that hunters and anglers contribute to the economy benefit all Americans.

The funds are collected each year from excise taxes on hunting and fishing gear, motorboat fuels, shooting supplies, etc. and get divided among the states. Everyone in America who likes to sight see, picnic, mountain bike, hike, camp, water ski, bird watch or who enjoys just about any other outdoor past time reaps the benefits of these funds.

In fact, sportsmen provide more than 75 percent of the nearly $1.7 billion spent each year on conservation programs managed by state agencies. Dollars collected from hunters remain used for acquisition and improvement of wildlife habitat, introduction of wildlife to the environment, research on wildlife problems, surveys and inventories of wildlife, hunter education programs and acquisition and development of wildlife-related recreational facilities.

The funds, collected from anglers, remain used for fish hatcheries, fisheries manage meet, boating access, aquatic education and research.

Research shows that the millions of acres of state lands purchased with these funds get used 11 times more heavily by nonhunters than by hunters. The improved access to lakes, as well as the cleaner water, are enjoyed by everyone who recreates on or near the water. Yet hunters and anglers paid for them.

Funds also go toward coastal wetlands protection programs, which receive $54.8 million this year, and the U.S. Coast Guard Boating Safety Program, which receives $10 million this year.

In addition, the government set aside $20 million to fund the pending Recreational Boating Safety Improvement Act. If Congress votes against the bill to create the act, the $20 million stays in the Sport Fish Restoration account and gets given out next year.

In addition to contributing to the funds, sportsmen often help out with implementing improvements paid for with the funds. Individual states ante up 25 percent matching funds to get the monies and often it's man-hours and material donated by sportsmen which make up the bulk of the matching funds.

Sportsmen donate time and material to such projects as fish habitat installation and improvement, fixing fences to make it easier for antelope to pass and building water caches to gather run-off and provide drinking water to all wildlife.

State wildlife agencies are not the only recipients of sportsmen's conservation dollars. Hunting and fishing clubs all over America include millions of members who voluntarily pay dues and contribute to specialized conservation efforts.

The Rocky Mountain Elk Foundation, Safari Club International, Ducks Unlimited, Wildlife Forever, National Wild Turkey Federation, Pheasants Forever, Trout Unlimited, the Foundation for North American Wild Sheep and the Mule Deer Foundation name just a few of the thousands of national and local sportsmen's groups who dedicate themselves to the conservation of wildlife and habitat.

Millions and billions of dollars remain hard to imagine, abstract concepts, but the beauty of our wetlands, forests, streams and lakes preserved and protected with sportsmen's dollars remains easy to see and appreciate.

Students need to bring their Social Security numbers with them.

Georgia Dept. of Natural Resources

SOCIAL CIRCLE, Ga. — Georgia hunters contribute to the fight against hunger by participating in the fourth annual Hunters for the Hungry program Nov. 30 to Dec. 1.

Deer collection takes place at seven locations throughout the state, including new locations in Tifton and Gainesville.

Hunters for the Hungry, a program that aims to feed hungry people throughout the state by collecting deer taken by hunters, is sponsored by the Department of Natural Resources, Wildlife Resources Division; the Department of Corrections; the Department of Agriculture; the Greater Atlanta Chapter of the Safari Club International; and the Georgia Wildlife Federation.

"In the last three years, hunters have donated nearly 10 tons of meat to feed the hungry," said David Waller, director of the Wildlife Resources Division. "The number of deer donated almost equaled the total number of deer collected during the first two years of the program combined. Hopefully, the number of deer donated this fall will double again, meaning even more ground venison for hungry people in Georgia."

Hunters' deer donation locations follow:

•Lexington — Oglethorpe County Farmer's Market on U.S. Highway 278, west of town, adjacent to the Farm Bureau Office;

•Gainesville — Jesse Jewel Parkway at Interstate 985; and •Tifton — Exit 20 off Interstate 75 at the Rural Development Center.

Hunters need to look for the blaze-orange Hunters for the Hungry banners at each collection location. Deer accepting takes place from 9 a.m. to 8 p.m., and all deer require field dressing by the hunters before donation. In return for their donation, each hunter receives a blaze-orange Hunters for the Hungry hat donated by the Georgia Wildlife Federation.

After each weekend collection period, the deer get transported by refrigerated trucks to a DOC meat processing plant. Prisoners process the deer into ground venison and pack it into 10-pound tubes labeled with the Hunters for the Hungry logo.

The Middle Georgia Community Food Bank picks up the ground venison and distributes it through the seven Second Harvest Food Banks in Albany, Athens, Atlanta, Augusta, Columbus, Macon and Savannah.

"Unlike many Hunters for the Hungry programs throughout the country where hunters or deer processors must pay a portion of the processing fee, there is no monetary cost to the hunter associated with Georgia's program," said Waller. "The only cost to the hunter is the time and effort expended to donate a deer. The rewards of joining with other hunters to help feed thousands of hungry people is well worth the effort."

For more information on donating a deer to the Hunters for the Hungry program, contact the Wildlife Resources Division at (770) 918-6400.

Nine parks to improve accessibility

Ga. State Parks & Historical Sites

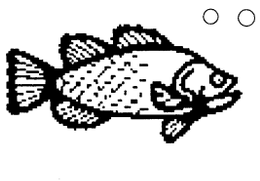
ATLANTA — The Georgia Department of Natural Resources received $881,250 from state bond funds to improve handicap accessibility at nine state parks.

While the majority of state parks already offer some accessible facilities, nine parks will soon begin upgrading their facilities to better comply with the Americans with Disabilities Act.

These parks include Red Top Mountain State Park in Cartersville ($50,250), Unicoi State Park in Helen ($109,300), Vogel State Park in Blairsville ($52,050), James H. Floyd State Park in Summerville ($54,300), Cloudland Canyon State Park in Rising Fawn ($131,200), Amicalola Falls State Park in Dawsonville ($108,000), Gordonia-Alatamaha State Park in Reidsville ($87,300), General Coffee State Park in Douglas ($153,200) and Hard Labor Creek State Park in Rutledge ($135,650).

The money goes toward constructing or renovating accessible restrooms, cottages, campsites and lodge rooms; reconfiguring parking spaces; and creating better paths between facilities.

Plans for some sites include installing grab bars, hand-held showers, and lowered mirrors and towel racks in bathrooms, as well as purchasing items such as accessible picnic tables and telecommunication device for the deaf telephones.



"Georgia's state parks are an untapped resource for people with disabilities who want to get out and enjoy nature," said Linda Priest, the state's coordinator. "I have been pleasantly surprised at the number of accessible facilities at state parks, such as cottages and picnic shelters, but I am even more excited about the additional improvements that can be made with this funding."

Don't Find A Home Without It.

Our New PurchasePower Card Will Show Just How Much Home You Can Afford.
All it takes is a touch-tone phone, a few minutes, and the answers to a few simple questions about your income and debt payments. It's quick and easy because it's fully automated, and walks you through each push-button step in a flash. By the next business day, you'll know which mortgage types and how much you qualify for.
Then we'll send you a card that spells out that details of your loan, including the amount that's been pre-approved. And you can show the seller that you've got real PurchasePower. It's just that simple. And simply the easiest way home.

3rd ID completes Jordan mission

By Robin A. Shawlinski
3rd Brigade, 3rd Infantry Division

Task Force 1-15 returned Nov. 14 through Wednesday from a 30-day combined training exercise with the Jordanian Army in the Al-Kharana Desert of Central Jordan.

Task Force 1-15, which consisted of more than 500 soldiers from the 3rd Infantry Division and 18th Airborne Corps, deployed to Jordan in late September.

Task Force commander, Lt. Col. Tad Davis, said the exercise was extremely successful.

"The key to the success of this exercise was the professionalism and fighting spirit displayed by the men and women of Task Force 1-15," he said.

The Task Force operated out of a forward operating base — Black Cow Village — named after an obscure village in northern China where the 15th Infantry Regiment was stationed in the 1920s.

During the exercise, the soldiers conducted day and night operations with blank and live ammunition. The training exercise concluded Nov. 5 with a combined Jordanian-U.S. Task Force live-fire operation.

Much of the training involved the task force soldiers teaching the Jordanians tactics, techniques or procedures half the day and the Jordanians teaching the task force soldiers those same things the other half of the day, said Staff Sgt. Galen Klaurnan, Co. B, 2nd Bn., 69th Armor Regt.

"I feel we put on a good impression as soldiers and Americans," he said. "They really loved our tanks."

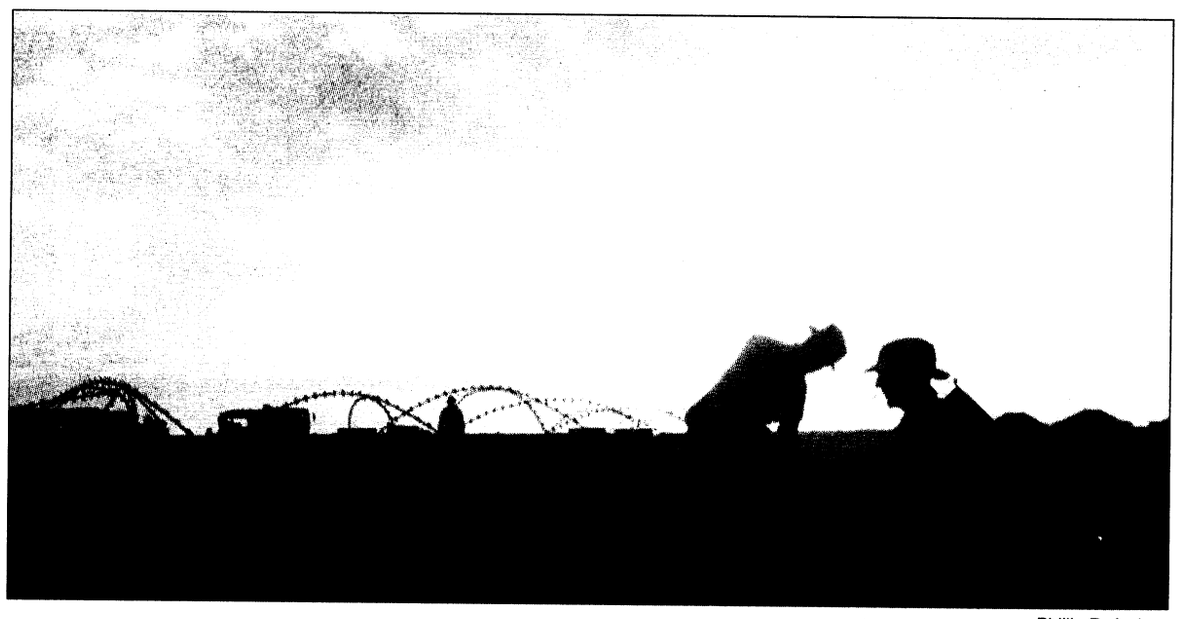
"At first, I didn't want to go, but once we got into the swing of things — showing the Jordanian how our tanks work and what they can do — I liked it," said Spc. Frank Tanner, Company B, 2nd Bn., 69th Armor Regt..

Pvt. 1st Class Chad Muirhead, Company C, 1st Battalion, 15th Infantry said the mission was fun and the training was great. Muirhead said he learned how the Jordanians performed dismounted operations and the Jordanians were anxious to imitate what the task force soldiers did.

Maj. Roger MacDonald, 1st Bn., 15th Inf., operations officer praised his Jordanian counterparts and emphasized the close cooperation that developed throughout the exercise.

"The exchange of unit insignia among soldiers was symbolic of the exchange of tactics and techniques shared between the two armies," he said.

Many of the soldiers felt the exchange between the armies provided something good both for the Army and on a personal level.



On a personal level, he said they got a chance to sit down and eat dinner with them and talk about families and ways of life.

Klauman said he thought the Jordanians liked them being there, and he said he was glad he got the opportunity to speak to them about their families and their lives.

During the exercise, Col. Steven P. Schook, the 3rd Brigade Combat Team, 3rd Infantry Division (Mechanized), commander visited Jordan.

"This is a great joint exercise by a well disciplined unit," he said.

Other visitors to the site included Field Marshal Abdal Hafiz Marei, the chairman of the Joint Chief of Staff of the Jordan forces, Wesley Egan, the U. S ambassador to Jordan, and Gen. Binford Peay, commander in chief of U S. Central Command.

Post prepares holiday feast for Thanksgiving

USAIC Public Affairs Office

It's that time of year again, when the malls begin to play "Deck the Halls" and the thought of long holiday weekends with lots of relatives and that delicious aroma of turkey and dressing wafting from the kitchen puts a little perk in our step.

Wait a minute. What if people have no kitchen to cook in or not enough relatives at Fort Benning or Columbus to cook a grandiose meal? Should they just sit at home and eat chili dogs or Spam sandwiches?

Not if the dining facilities at Fort Benning have any say in the matter! Food Services personnel are preparing a Thanksgiving feast for everyone including single soldiers and retired service members, according to Ed Hilton, chief of Food Services.

"The cooks will be up all night before Thanksgiving preparing for the next day," he said. "We will have the traditional ice-sculpted shrimp boat, a Bible cake, decorated turkeys, cornucopias and decorative centerpieces."

He said the cooks see this time of year as a food specialist Army Training and Evaluation Program.

"It takes a special breed of people to be cooks day in and day out," he said. "They realize this is a hard time, especially for single soldiers. These special efforts help commanders boost morale this time of year."

To give the cooks more incentive, all of the dining facilities on post have a contest for the best decorations.

"Each of the cooks has to make an individual centerpiece," he said. "We will judge them, and the winner will get a three-day pass."

On Thanksgiving Day, all retired service members are invited to eat at the Follow Me Dining Facility, Building 73. It will be open from 11:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m., and the cost is $4.50 per person. For family members of E-4 and below the cost is $3.50. For reservations, contact Hilton at 545-3750 or 545-7970.

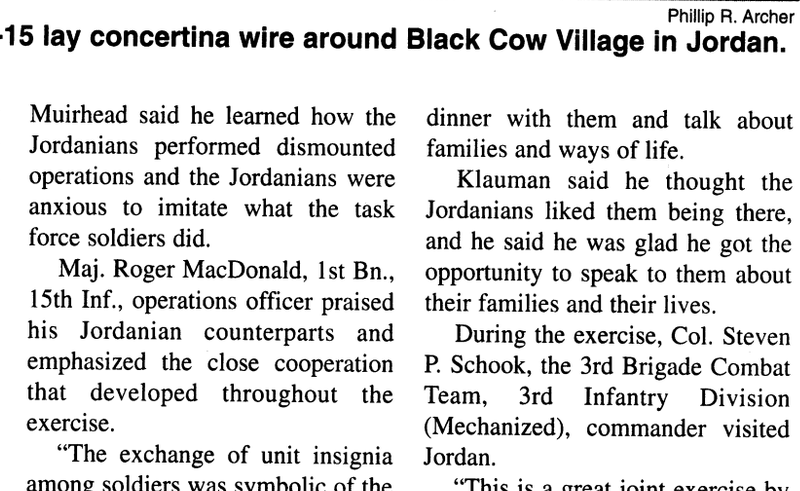
Veterans dedicate monument

By Lori Egan
Bayonet staff writer

More than 250 veterans, rangers and guests, including Secretary of the Army Togo D. West Jr., assembled to pay tribute to World War II veterans and to dedicate the World War II Ranger Memorial at Sacrifice Field Nov. 14.

As the Infantry Center Band played the "Star-Spangled Banner," the veterans who fought during World War II sang, their voices wavering and thin.

Simon A. Loesh, from Warren, Mich., was one of the veterans singing the national anthem.



"We laid down our lives for each other," Loesh said. "This monument really means a lot to us."

"My company lost 60 percent of our men, and there were 66 men to a company," Loesh, who fought behind the lines in the Huertgen Forrest battle, said. "You're not scared until after you go through it. You don't realize what we went through. But we made it."

"The World War II rangers are the ones who set the standards, and we just tried to live up to what they did," said Vietnam veteran 1st Sgt. Duke DuShane. "I told my men in Vietnam when they became depressed when we lost some men, 'to get up off your butt, and we're going to do what rangers always do — we're going to lead the way.' (The World War II ranger) set the standard, we just followed."

"You have given us everything we have, everything — the liberty we prize, the glorious and beautiful nation in which we are able to enjoy our families and friends," West told

Former 11th cdr to return

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Col. Walter Wojdakowski will return to Fort Benning as assistant commandant and deputy commanding general.

A former 11th Infantry Regiment commander, soon be promoted to brigadier general, will return to Fort Benning a little more than a year after leaving.

Only this time, Col. Walter Wojdakowski will be serving as the deputy commanding general of Fort Benning and the assistant commandant of the U.S. Army Infantry School.

Maj. Gen. Carl F. Ernst said Wojdakowski's assignment as assistant commandant and deputy commanding general is a perfect fit.

"Walt is a highly qualified infantryman," Ernst said. "He knows Fort Benning, its diverse missions and the community. We are fortunate, indeed, to have Walt returning home."

Wojdakowski currently serves as the commander, Operations Group, Combat Maneuver Training Center, in Grafenwoehr, Germany.

A graduate of West Point, Wojdakowski was commissioned into the infantry in 1972. He has served at Fort Lewis, Wash.; was a ranger instructor at the Mountain Ranger Camp in Dahlonega, Ga.; and served as an assistant professor of military science at the University of Alaska-Fairbanks.

He commanded the 3rd Battalion, 41st Infantry Regiment, of the Tiger Brigade during Desert Storm and was the senior infantry task force combat trainer at the National Training Center, Fort Irwin, Calif.

In addition to his bachelor of science degree, Wojdakowski possesses master's degrees in business administration and military arts and sciences.

His military schooling includes the School of Advanced Military Studies and the Army War College.

His awards include the Silver Star, Legion of Merit, Bronze Star, Combat and Expert Infantryman's Badges, Ranger Tab and the Master Parachutist Badge.

Wojdakowski and his wife, Candy have two children, Steve and Ami. He is replacing Brig. Gen. Robert Clark who leaves in mid-December. No arrival time for Wojdakowski has been announced.

Loaded 45: Signals time for holiday safety

By April N. Olsen
USAIC Public Affairs Office

One-third of all driving under the influence arrests on Fort Benning occur during the 45-day period that includes the Thanksgiving, Christmas and New Year's holidays.

"People still don't get it," said Sgt. 1st Class Dan Downs, the noncommissioned officer in charge of the Military Police Activity traffic investigations section.

Citing recent statistics and an MPA database, Downs said despite safety campaigns and increased patrolling during the holidays, the next 45 days will be some of the most dangerous of the year.

During the fiscal year, 48 of the 156 DUIs on post occurred during the holiday season known as "Loaded 45," Downs said.

To decrease the number of drunken drivers, specially trained military police officers from the traffic investigations section will make up a DUI task force to patrol the streets of Fort Benning during Loaded 45, he said.

Members of the annual task force are sent to specialized training at the state police academy in Forsyth, Ga., Downs said.

Officers receive extra training on the field sobriety test and the breathalyzer used at MPA, as well as hands-on training on the use of the radar and video equipment that is used in task force vehicles during Loaded 45, Downs said.

When on patrol, officers on the task force have the sole purpose of looking for DUI offenders, Downs said.

"They are not responding to other calls," he said.

Regis Beighley, the Infantry Branch safety officer, said the Loaded 45 program is a success because it makes people aware of the increased risk during the holiday season.

Over the last five years, increased awareness through the implementation of Loaded 45 and other safety programs reduced the fatality rate, Beighley said.

Safety Cab is another safety measure available during the holiday season. From Dec. 13 through the first of January, from 7 p.m. until 3 a.m. daily, Safety Cab will give anyone in Fort Benning, Columbus and Phenix City a free ride home.

Beighley said that everyone should be aware that the telephone number will be different this year. The new number is 660-6069.

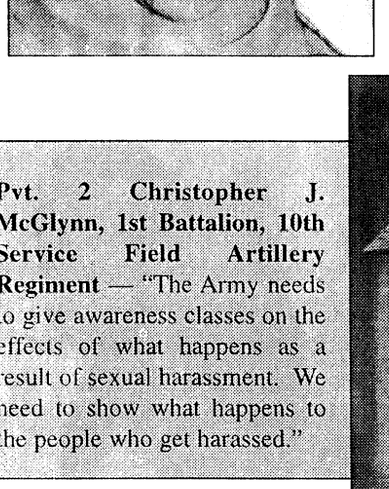
VARIOUS VOICES



What can be done to decrease sexual harassment in the Army?

Sgt. 1st Class Howard Goehring, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 3rd Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment — "We need to increase people's awareness of what is sexual harassment and increase people's respect for each other."

Pvt. 2 Christopher J. McGlynn, 1st Battalion, 10th Service Field Artillery Regiment — "The Army needs to give awareness classes on the effects of what happens as a result of sexual harassment. We need to show what happens to the people who get harassed."

Pvt. 2 Brian Klinger, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 2nd Battalion, 69th Armor Regiment — "Awareness classes would help soldiers be more aware of the effects of sexual harassment."

Pamela Henry, family member, — "People need to control themselves, and men and women should never be allowed to be unsupervised."

Sgt. 1st Class Linda Mays, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 3rd Battalion, 3rd Infantry Division (Mechanized)— "The Army needs to educate people. Also, we can't let it slide by; we need to take action the first time it occurs."

Nancy Jones, family member — "People need to learn to speak out more before the trouble gets out of control."

Harassment

Ways to defend against unwanted attention

Army News Service

Chances are that you, or someone you know, has first-hand knowledge of at least one instance of sexual harassment in the workplace.

Perhaps even you have been harassed, or have done some harassing. Whatever the case, you can't escape the barrage of information coming from all corners of command and management on how to deal with acts of sexual harassment.

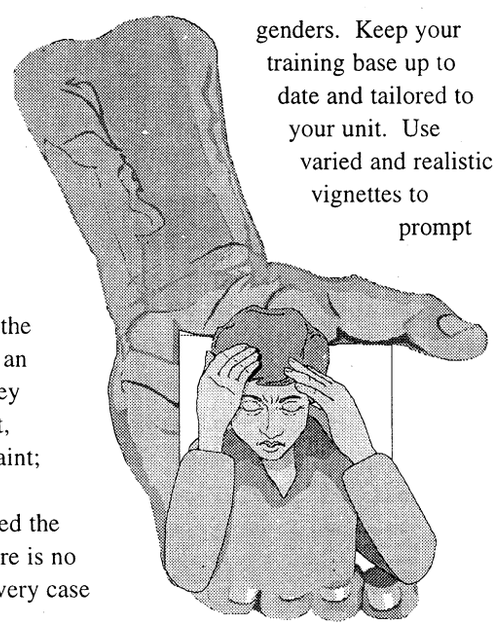
Sexual harassment is an important issue and needs to be dealt with. The Army has zero tolerance for such behavior.

Two cases

Two hypothetical cases that might happen are as follows:

•One day, Debbie Dorsey found herself escorting a high-ranking guest around the installation where she worked. The visitor had just arrived on a flight from the West Coast, and Dorsey had volunteered to drive him to his hotel.

Once inside her car, the visitor lost no time turning the conversation to personal matters: "Debbie, do you have children? Is this your first marriage? What kind of alcoholic beverage do you prefer?"



Halfway to the hotel, he placed his hand on her thigh. Dorsey said, "Don't do that." He persisted, so she let him off at the nearest cab stand. Later that day, she filed a grievance, partly to protect herself from any claim by him that she treated him rudely.

•Freddie Freeman, a young soldier at a Southeastern post, had been on the job only a few months when his supervisor, a woman, invited him and one of his buddies to stop by her place for a few drinks at day's end.

Freeman's buddy left early to meet his wife; Freeman stayed on. An hour and two drinks later, Freeman's supervisor reached over with her hand, gently stroked back of his neck and said, "You know, I might be able to promote you in a few months if you could handle a few minor modifications to your job description."

He thought fast and said, "I never like to mix business and pleasure. We'll talk about it at the office tomorrow, okay?" Then he called a cab and left, hoping his spurned supervisor would take no reprisals in the workplace.

In each of these cases, the victim sought, and found, an appropriate remedy: Dorsey rejected a pass on the spot, then filed a formal complaint; Freeman deflected his supervisor's pass and hoped the problem would pass. There is no single right solution for every case of harass-ment.

Intervention

EO advisers have explained several elements of a good prevention program:

•Lead by example. As you and your colleagues develop appropriate behavior patterns, attitudes will change as well.

•Train your soldiers. Research shows that interactive, small-group discussion most effectively trains persons on how to prevent sexual harassment. Have the groups include soldiers or civilians of both genders. Keep your training base up to date and tailored to your unit. Use varied and realistic vignettes to prompt discussion of the various facets of the problem.

•Counsel your subordinates; be their mentor. Don't be afraid to get involved. If you lack the answer to a tough question, or feel unable to deal with a particularly complex situation, seek help from the unit EO adviser.

•Take swift and appropriate action on all complaints. Intervene when you see sexual harassment. Taking no action in a situation, no matter how minor, implies that you condone inappropriate behavior, or that you're ignorant of what's going on.

•Encourage and develop assertiveness in soldiers. The harassed person needs to say, "No." Both individuals in the two hypothetical cases said, "No.," — one directly and one indirectly. Confrontation, however, may not always be the best course of action, especially if the harasser is a repeat offender.

Dealing with sexual-harassment complaints should mirror the way NCOs deal with any other problem of concern to the unit commander: They gather all the facts and present them to their commanders.

The dynamics of involvement EO advisers note that the inertia of cop-out non-involvement can backfire on both the complaint handler and the unit. They add that sometimes organizational damage can ensue more from doing nothing than from doing the right thing.

The Army needs to eliminate sexual harassment because it is against the law and because eliminating it is the right thing to do. Sexual harassment is an area where there can be no tolerance for abuse.

Prevention preferred

What measures might prevent sexual harassment incidents in the first place? For years now, equal opportunity advisers Armywide have been offering the answer through programs promoting awareness and compliance.

Their message is simple and straight forward: Train your soldiers. Make sure they understand what constitutes sexual harassment.

Impress upon them the negative effect that sexual harassment has on personal performance and unit cohesion. Instruct them in proper techniques to use if they become victims.

Ensure they know how the complaint system works, and whom they can go to for help. Train your subordinate leaders in appropriate procedures for processing and resolving complaints.

Such training may never result in total elimination of the problem any more than regular ethics training can prevent all unethical conduct. But it can and does give you a head start on coping with one of society's more vexatious problems.

Heed and lead

Every leader in the Army has a vested interest in cracking down on sexual harassment. This is inappropriate, unwarranted sexual behavior, EO advisers and commanders point out. It undermines unit cohesion, effectiveness and discipline.

Incidents of teasing, jokes or sexual questions are considered sexual harassment and must be eliminated.

The current cases should sound a red alert for us all: We need to review EO literature to better understand what constitutes sexual harassment.

Sexual harassment takes many forms, including active behavior — such as telling sexually explicit jokes or using obscene gestures and profanity. It can be passive, like displaying obscene materials in the form of notes, cartoons and photographs.

Using such gratuitous pet names as O'babe, O'honey, or O'sweetie can lead you across the line into sexual harassment.

A request for sexual favors, when used for personal gain or accompanied by a promise of preferential treatment or threat of punishment, constitutes sexual harassment. Repeated, unwelcome requests for dates also come under the definition. The victim determines the degree of unwelcomeness.

Misconduct: Media should blame accused

By Brian R. Voller
Bayonet staff writer

Recently, the term sexual harassment became a thorn in the side of the Army. Day after day, the civilian media continues to dig for more stories concerning the Army and its programs regarding sexual harassment.

But day after day, the stories seem to center around what actions the Army took or failed to take; almost never, do we hear what actions an individual took or failed to take. I think the news media needs to focus on actions taken by the individual or individuals.

One particular phrase that keeps coming up is "The Army comes under fire for a string of sexual harassment charges." But should the entire Army get tried, or should the individuals only get tried? As far as the media seem concerned, the entire Army deserves punishment.

Brian R. Voller believes the media should leave the fault with the individuals not with the entire Army.

commentary

But why should the entire Army suffer for the actions of a few of its individuals. When sexual harassment occurs in New York, does the entire city get blamed for this problem? Or when a major business undergoes a sexual harassment charge, do millions of television crews beat down its doors to film the evil-doers? I doubt it.

The Army needs to be commended for admitting that a problem occurred, and that for taking every necessary action to ensure no other such incidents occur in the future. Instead of sweeping the problem under the carpet and pretending it never took place, the Army made the account public information and tried to repair the already-done damage.

It's because of the nature of our mission as soldiers that we become easy or interesting targets. Maybe it's an attempt to knock us down a peg or two since the public holds us in such high esteem.

But the problem remains that the Army as a whole receives blame for something it as a whole did not do. Soldiers receive no training on how to sexually harass their subordinates, but we do receive training on what comprises sexual harassment and the punishment for it.

Individuals need to bear the responsibility for their actions as individuals. To blame an entire system for the actions of the few is ridiculous.

Let the military justice system work its course, and let it punish the accused, if guilty. But, let's avoid putting the entire military on trial for the actions of a few individuals.

Sgt. Maj. Michael Knoell and Lt. Col. Accidents increase during holidays

Infantry Branch Safety Office

The Thanksgiving holiday season, with its intense activity, breeds accidents. Fatigue, inattention, speeding and drinking and driving all take their toll, because holidays remain prime times for travel.

Most traffic accidents remain preventable. Leaders need to remind their soldiers of the following lessons before allowing them to leave for a long weekend or other holiday period. During the last 10 years, 31 Fort Benning soldiers were injured, two of them fatally, in November in accidents involving privately owned vehicles. Giving real-life examples to soldiers makes the reminders a little harder to ignore.

•Lesson 1 — Always buckle up. A Fort Benning soldier attended a party while on leave in Florida. After drinking several beers, he drove south on Interstate 75 toward his home. He lost control of his vehicle and collided head on with another vehicle and died at the scene. He was not wearing a seat belt.

•Lesson 2 — Use safety belts even in cars equipped with air bags. A soldier driving his new car hit a patch of ice, slid off the road and struck a tree. His air bag inflated, but since he failed to wear his safety belt, he slid free and hit the dash, breaking his jaw.

•Lesson 3 — Make sure to get plenty of rest and stay alert behind the wheel. A Fort Benning specialist drove toward his Columbus home at 8:30 a.m. after spending the night on duty. He fell asleep behind the wheel, ran off the road and struck a guard rail, sustaining neck injury due to whiplash.

•Lesson 4 — Adjust speed for road conditions. Remember, the posted speed limits remain the maximum speeds permitted in ideal conditions. In rain, snow, or fog, reduce the car's speed accordingly. A soldier injured his back when the car he drove sped onto an ice-covered bridge. The car went out of control, hitting first one guard rail and then the other before veering back and coming to a stop on top of the first guard rail.

•Lesson 5 — Don't drink and drive. A Fort Benning soldier drove his Mazda north on Interstate 85 near West Point., at approximately 4 a.m. He fell asleep, running the car off the road way, crossing the median and striking some trees.

The driver was thrown from the vehicle and died from his injuries. He failed to wear a seat belt.

•Lesson 6 — Don't expect coffee to take the place of rest or sobriety. Only rest takes care of fatigue, and only time removes alcohol from the blood stream. A soldier fell asleep at the wheel at approximately 3 a.m. while driving across the state. He became permanently paralyzed after his car ran off the road and hit a tree.

•Lesson 7 — When riding a motorcycle, wear personal protective equipment and follow the

WWII: Links to the future

the veterans.

"We fully understand the heroic sacrifice of the World War II veterans and commemorate it."

West said (the World War II rangers) were perfect examples of the loneliest form of courage.

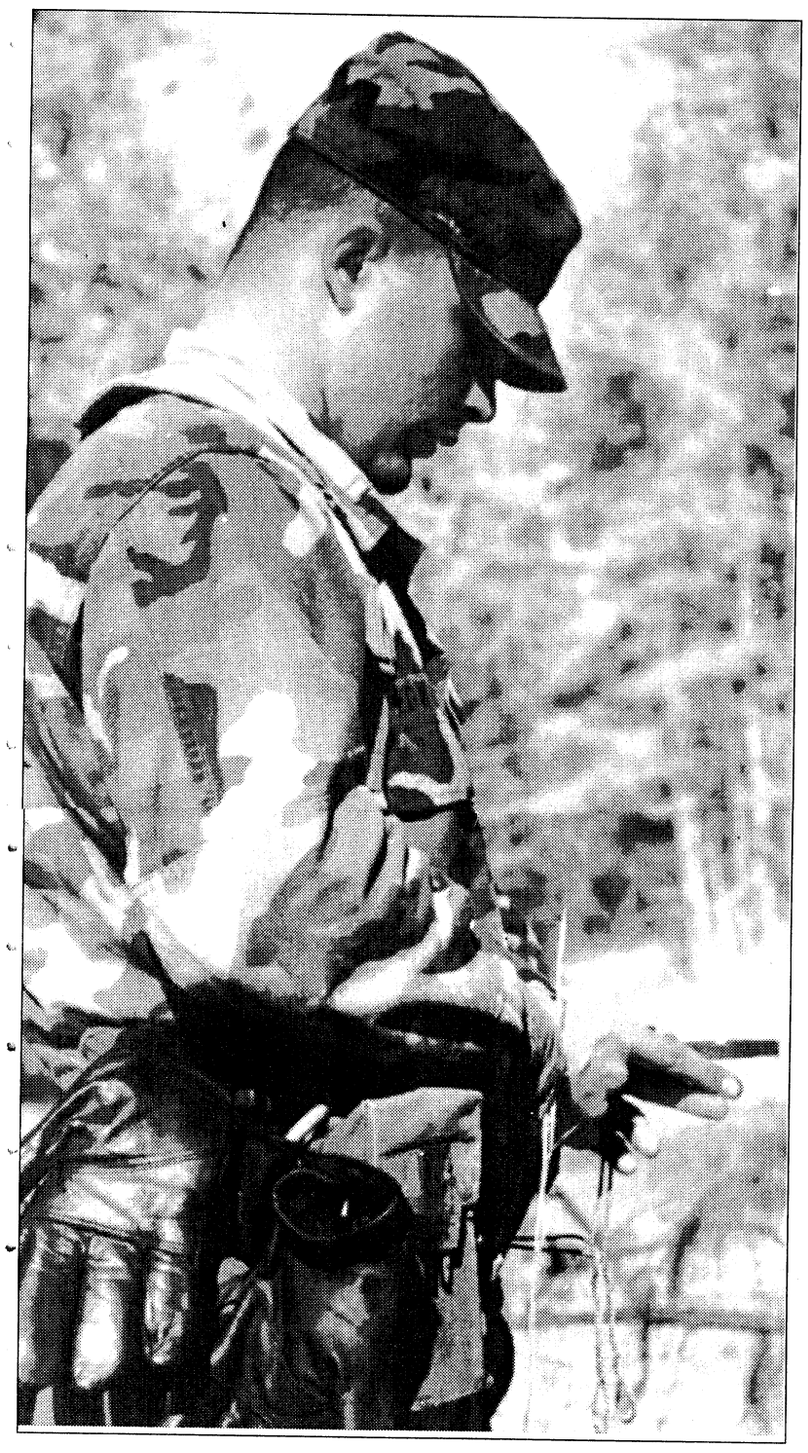
"The choices were simple — to either win the war and preserve America and the world from tyranny or lose and see the plain of freedom sucked out, perhaps forever," West said.

Nothing solidifies and strengthens a nation like reading history, whether recorded in books or embodied in institutions and monuments, said James Altieri, chairman of the WWII Remembrance Society.

"Monuments link us to the Army's military past and inspire us and prepare us for the future," Altieri said.

The heroic missions of the rangers are all embodied in that monument, Altieri said — embodied alongside the 580 names etched in stone.

Whether storming the beaches at Anzio, scaling the cliffs at Omaha or recapturing the Philippines and releasing hundreds of prisoners of war, the rangers led the way, West said.



"We dedicate this memorial in memory of the valiant warriors of World War II," said retired Gen. Wayne A. Downing, former commander-in-chief of the U.S Special Operations Command. "We remember the living and honor the dead who created this magnificent legacy for our nation.

"In years to come, this memorial will remind all who gaze upon it of the feats that these men performed in the service of their nation," Downing said. "It will remind us of the incalculable debt that we owe them and will remind the rangers of the 21st century what we expect of them and what we demand and what they must be."

Loesh said he was one of the first to buy a memorial brick for the Ranger Memorial on Ranger Field, but (the World War II Ranger Memorial) "really is the last word."

New lieutenants test skills in land navigation

Second Lt. Jason Edwards, Company B, 2nd Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment, shoots an azimuth to his next point before moving out.

By Sean D. Duncan
Infantry Officer Basic Course

Infantry Office Basic Course students in Class 1-97 headed to the Fuhrman Road Land Navigation Site for their first extended field training exercise Nov. 13. The culmination of this exercise, a test of day and night land navigation skills, took place at the Yankee Road Land Navigation Site Nov. 15.

After arriving at the Fuhrman Road Land Navigation Site, students paired up and got a map of the area. Each pair of students got a lane with nine eight-digit grid coordinates. Six of the nine points needed to be correctly plotted and located within three hours to pass the practice-day exercise.

At least one kilometer spanned between many of the points on these lanes. Each student plotted and planned a route to minimize the amount of time spent traveling the course.

According to Staff Sgt. Rafael Duran, 3rd Platoon instructor, land navigation remains a fundamental skill that all soldiers must know and practice.

"Leading soldiers from point A to point B is an especially important task for infantry officers," Duran said. "Platoon leaders are responsible for the health of the platoon's soldiers. They must be able to call for a medical evacuation or even call for fire. To do so effectively requires the ability to correctly read a map and navigate the land."

According to Duran, some of the common ways to avoid land navigation mistakes include sticking with the basics, knowing and trusting your pace count, continuously checking your azimuth and distance and always orienting the map to the terrain.

Duran said a common deficiency among students is the ability to associate terrain.

"Learning terrain association could be the biggest help to students," Duran said. "Always practice analyzing the terrain, even when you are driving in the car.

"Map plotting is usually at 100 percent for the lieutenants, but practical experience on the ground is harder to master," Duran said. "As with many perishable skills in the military, land navigation must be practiced."

2nd Lt. Andy Estep, an IOBC student, said he agreed that land navigation must be practiced. Although Estep was on an orienteering team in college, he said "more time spent with a platoon on a real-world mission" will help hone his land navigation skills.

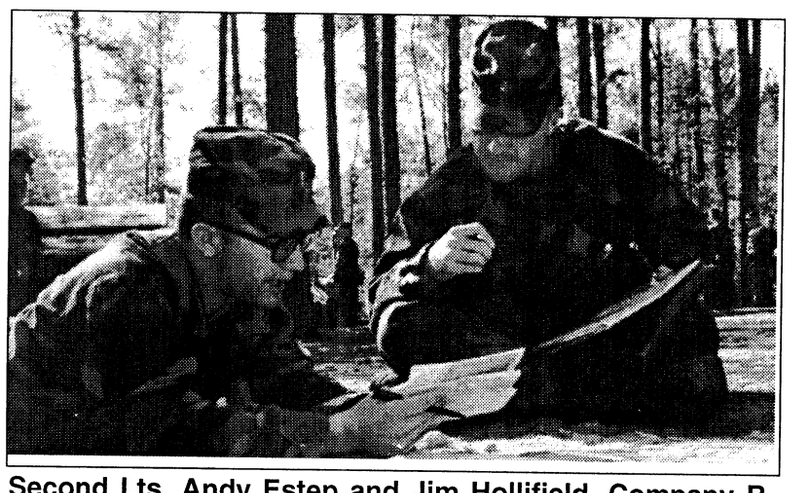
As soon as the sun set on the night of the 13th, the first night land navigation practice began. Students again paired up and got a lane with five eight-digit grid points. Three out of the five points needed correct plotting and locating within three hours to pass the practice night exercise.

2nd Lt. Brad Fisher said he uses several tips to aid him in night land navigation. These tips include trusting your pace count to avoid unmapped roads; watching for drift by checking your compass, especially on slopes; and reconnoitering the route to avoid deadfall and heavy brush if possible.

Thursday brought two more day and one more night iteration to practice land navigation. Students practiced the first day exercise and the night exercise alone just as the test would be administered.

In order to become more competent land navigators, 2nd Lt. Jason Edwards recommends practicing the "basic" land navigation skills.

"Platoon leaders need to be proficient in all aspects of leading soldiers," he said. "We can't rely on mechanical devices that could fail. A good knowledge of the basics is the best way to gain confidence in our navigation skills."



Finally, the day of the test arrived and the students of Company B moved to the Yankee Road Land Navigation Site to receive a briefing from the Fort Benning Land Navigation Committee.

Each student received a clean map of the Yankee Road area and a lane card with nine eight-digit grid points to plot and locate in three hours. Once everyone was accounted for and night had set in, each student again received a clean map and a lane card with five eight-digit grid points to plot and find in three hours.

The few students who failed to find the minimum of six day points and three night points were retrained and retested.

Company B's next land navigation exercise occurs near the end of the cycle. Students will be required to avoid roads during the Advanced Land Navigation Course because they will be wearing multiple integrated laser engagement system equipment and will get "shot" if spotted by roving patrols.

All students must pass the Day, Night and Advanced Land Navigation Courses in order to graduate March 7.

Second Lts. Andy Estep and Jim Hollifield, Company B, 2nd Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment, Infantry Officer Basic Course, plan their route through the land navigation course after plotting the points they need to find during the land navigation exercise.

JPOM deploys individuals for joint service

By Brian R. Voller
Bayonet staff writer

After the conclusion of Operation Desert Storm, then Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff Gen. Colin Powell and the former Secretary of Defense Dick Cheney directed the military to design and establish a single site for centralized joint training and indoctrination for all individual U.S. augmentees destined for joint and multinational staffs in the European theater.

It was decided that Fort Benning because of the availability of the U.S. Army Infantry School instructors and building and housing space and the ability for Lawson Army Airfield to handle large aircraft, seemed a prime location for such a facility.

The Center for Joint Preparation and Onward Movement was established in Building 4, and began processing soldiers, sailors, airmen, Marines and civilians for the peace keeping mission in Bosnia Dec. 14.

According to Col. Clayton D. Spangenberg III, director of the JPOM, the JPOM falls under the command of the U.S. Atlantic Command, which ultimately bears the responsibility for the application of the JPOM and the missions for which the JPOM works.

"The USACOM's job is to project aircraft, equipment and personnel needed to support a mission," Spangenberg said. "The USACOM receives its information from the other commanders in chief from Europe who tell USACOM what kind of support they need."

The USACOM then determines what individual personnel need to be selected and sent to support the mission, Spangenberg said. It then becomes the JPOM's job to ensure that all personnel meet the standard and are prepared to work in a joint environment.

The JPOM began operating to fill the need for a multiservice or multinational force to work together on a particular mission, Spangenberg said.

"Our job is to ensure that every individual who deploys as a member of a joint or multinational staff is properly trained and equipped to do his or her job safely and effectively," Spangenberg said.

The JPOM currently operates with several liaison members from the different branches of service, who remain in position to help ease the transition of individual members to a joint operation similar to Operation Joint Endeavor.

When a service member processes through the JPOM, there are several areas they must clear before they are sent on to their duty station, Spangenberg said. The whole process takes approximately seven days to complete, except for personnel involved with intelligence information who have to stay additional days in order to be prepared for their missions, he said.

Some of the training individuals who process through the JPOM receive include personnel readiness processing, which includes such things as nuclear biological and chemical skills; weapons qualification; medical screenings; and other basic things.

In addition to the standard training the service members receive, individuals deploying on to joint positions at the peace-keeping mission also receive some additional training in areas such as a NATO overview, instruction on peace operations, the current situation, the liaison representatives duties and responsibilities, joint and multinational operations and functional training.

Spangenberg said the JPOM currently operates with six liaison representatives who remain available to help the different services prepare for their upcoming mission.

Staff Sgt. Amanda Fink, the Air Force liaison, said she and the other liaisons ensure that the individual service members are truly ready and scheduled to deploy.

"We check things such as confirming that they will have billeting when they get to their duty station, ensuring they're medically and dentally qualified for service, getting all their administrative things are in order, getting their uniforms and equipment, getting them trained to Army standards ensuring they have the proper security clearance and then making sure they deploy on time," Fink said.

Since the JPOM began operating in December, including shutting down between the months of March and May, it processed 550 personnel, including 85 civilians for duties in Bosnia. Out of those 550, 488 actually deployed for duty.

Spangenberg said the civilians have been processed for duty with the Army and Air Force Exchange Service, the Red Cross, construction contracting and linguistic assistance.

Spangenberg said the JPOM tries to get return information from the individual service members after they arrive at their duty stations to try and evaluate if the JPOM is accomplishing their mission. He said of the 488 individual service members who processed through the JPOM, 317 said the training they received before deployment helped them prepare for their duties.

Spangenberg said the JPOM is the first processing station of its kind designed for multiservice use. He said the concept and design becomes part of military doctrine next month.

CRC assists with deploying soldiers for peacekeeping

By Brian R. Voller
Bayonet staff writer

The Conus Replacement Center, located at Harmony Church, processes soldiers waiting for deployment to peace-keeping missions.

The 381st Replacement Battalion, out of Ponca City, Okla., conducts most of the processing of the full-size units activated to serve, but the unit also works in training the service members in the basic skills they need before they deploy.

Capt. Richard Coutre, battalion adjutant, 381st Repl. Bn., said most of the soldiers in the 381st Repl. Bn., have been there since the third week in August and will continue to work on Fort Benning until another reserve unit is activated to replace the soldiers of 381st.

Coutre said during their activation, their responsibility has been to process individual service members by issuing them battle dress uniforms, screening them medically and several other necessary activities. He also said they try to make sure the service members have an idea of where they are going and what it is they are going to be doing when they get there.

When the new reserve unit is activated and arrives, most of the members of the 381st will be sent home, but some of the members of the unit will remain to train the new soldiers coming in.

SAFETY on the front line

The noncommissioned officer serves as the first line of defense for safety in tactical operations, unit training and on- and off-duty recreational activities. The NCO corps will implement and execute the best force protection safety program through the following NCO risk management safety goals and objectives.

Goal no. 3

Noncommissioned officers will ensure soldiers operate all privately owned motor vehicles and motorcycles safely.

Objectives

1. To prevent POV and motorcycles accidents, NCOs will counsel soldiers with prior driving violations.
2. Before any extended weekend (three or four days), NCOs will inspect POVs and motorcycles and conduct safety briefings. The safety briefings will cover, at a minimum, use of seat belts, proper rest, speeding, helmet laws, reckless driving, driving under the influence, designated driver and phone numbers to call in circumstances requiring a ride.
3. NCOs possess the authority to deadline a POV or motorcycle based on safety considerations.
4. NCOs will ensure that all soldiers who own or operate motorcycles will attend the installation motorcycle safety course and register their motorcycle on post.

BOSS-querade party fun for all

By Chineka Calvin
Better Opportunities for Single Soldiers

The Better Opportunities for Single Soldiers program conducted a BOSS-querade party Nov. 1 in Building 2409, the abandoned publications warehouse on 82nd Airborne Division Road in front of Lawson Army Airfield. Admission cost either a cash or food donation.

The BOSS-querade party was intended for soldiers and civilians to come together to show off their Halloween costumes, dance and enjoy themselves, according to Spc. Caryn Bumpstead, BOSS president.

"BOSS offered free food, except for alcoholic beverages," said Spc. Matt Jenkins, 29th Infantry Regiment BOSS representative. "We sold these only to persons with proper identification. The money collected at the door offset the cost of the party. Although attendance was low, the people there enjoyed dancing, socializing and admired the spectacular set-up.

"The music was entertaining, and the atmosphere amazing," Jenkins continued. "Everything was unreal — I really couldn't believe that an abandoned warehouse was turned into a dance club. There were a lot of black lights and strobe lights too.

"I'm really looking forward to next year's event, and we plan to do it better by contacting more people. We're going to open it up to everyone on post and to off-post organizations such as fraternities and sororities. That way, maybe more people will attend."

Bumpstead said everything went as planned, and she was pleased everything went smoothly.

BOSS plans to give the cans of food to Army Community Services' food locker before the Thanksgiving holiday, Bumpstead said.

rules of the road. A Fort Benning soldier traveled south on Victory Drive in the far right lane. A van also traveled south in the adjacent lane. The driver of the van accelerated past the soldier on the motorcycle and pulled too close in front of the motorcycle.

When the van struck the motorcycle, the soldier was thrown 60 feet, sustaining a severe injury to his left leg that required amputation to save his life.

•Lesson 8 — Ensure the vehicle's operating condition. A Fort Benning soldier drove home for lunch along Highway 39 in Alabama. He became unable to stop the car at a stop sign because its brakes failed. The car continued into the intersection, where it was struck by a log truck. The soldier wore his seat belt and only received minor injuries.

These incidents serve as reminders to be safe all year round, not just the holidays.

YOUR TURN

Is teaching a rewarding, fulfilling career?

By Lisa M. Hibbert
Bayonet staff writer

With all that appears in the news today about overcrowding classrooms, in-school violence and low teacher salaries, it makes one wonder why anyone works in the school system.

Fortunately not all schools function alike and for three teachers at Fort Benning, teaching remains the only career they want.

Barbara Culwell, a first-grade teacher at Freddie Stowers Elementary School began teaching seven years ago because of her love for children.

"I always wanted to work teaching somebody something they can carry with them through life," Culwell said. "When I was in college, I realized that I had a good rapport with small children, so I decided to major in elementary education."

For Culwell being a teacher remains exciting work.

"First-graders have such an enthusiasm for learning," Culwell said. "They get so excited about being in school. I'm excited about being there; and, if a teacher teaches something they're interested in, their excitement spills over to the students."

Jean Anderson teaches special needs children in the combined third-, fourth- and fifth-grade special education class at Frank R. Loyd Elementary School. Her work at Fort Benning Schools began in 1980, but she began teaching 26 years ago. She said she gets her motivation from her students.

"I love it when they catch on to what I'm teaching them and teach each other," she said. "That really motivates me."

When working in special education, Anderson said teachers need to make adjustments in their teaching methods and their temperament.

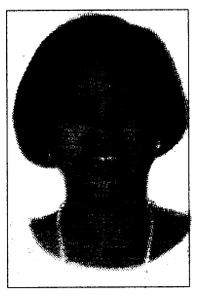
"Working in special education involves a lot of repetition and dividing the subject matter into smaller groups," Anderson said. "Sometimes the students get frustrated, or I get frustrated, but that's OK; I'm human."

Anderson said that using a variety of teaching methods keeps it interesting for both her and her students. One of the things her class does is run a country store to raise money for the students to participate in the Special Olympics.

"I try to be creative when I teach, so it never gets boring for me," Anderson said, as she filled jars of apple butter that her class plans to sell for the holidays.

With news of corporate burnout, being able to work in the same room for 35 years without being bored seems amazing, but Ann Horne, a kindergarten teacher at Herbert J. Dexter Elementary School, has been working that long and plans to work even longer.

"The biggest change I've seen since I started teaching is the implementation of technology in the classroom," Horne said. "Years ago, we taught children a lot of basic skills that they now come in knowing."



Horne plans to work at least another five years at Dexter but said she just can't imagine her life without children. Her sentiments about teaching and working in the Fort Benning School System echoed those of the other teachers.

"I've always been completely satisfied working at Fort Benning," Horne said. "There is no place else I would rather be and I can't imagine doing anything other than teaching."

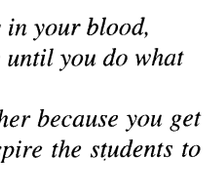
What motivated you to become a teacher, what keeps you in the field?

TEACHERS

I've always been a teacher. I taught the choirs songs in my church; I worked with youth groups and a lot of other things before I actually started teaching school.

Strong

Teaching is in my blood. I come from a long line of teachers, and I had excellent role models in my family.



I fought being a school teacher for a long time; but, if it's in your blood, your life is incomplete until you do what you are called to do.

I love being a teacher because you get to plant seeds and inspire the students to go the right way.

A teacher who impressed me when I was coming up was my high school history teacher. She was always prepared and always professional. She had a dry sense of humor and was very enthusiastic.

Windham

I began teaching as a media specialist, and I decided to go back to school and get a degree in English. I became a teacher because of the motivation of my teachers, plus my mother taught kindergarten and first grade for years.

I learned from her that you have to be enthusiastic. If you don't show enthusiasm, then the kids won't pick up on what you're teaching. I also learned from her that you need to have high expectations of your students. If you expect something, they'll work harder.

The best thing about being a teacher is the children. A student, who transferred to another school the other week, came by and thanked me. I have students come back to the school to visit me and give me a hug. That means a lot.

For me, there is never a dull moment. Every day is a different day.

I just love English. I am so excited about my subject, and I think that makes a real difference.

I had three high school English teachers who were so good at what they did. They were all tremendously enthusiastic. When they read plays, they became so involved in the stories that the students got involved, too. This is something I try to do for my students.

Coe

When I was a student, I was incredibly shy; but, my teachers provided me with the opportunity to get up in front of the class and make presentations. If they had not given me the opportunity, I probably would not have become a teacher.

Teaching is a very challenging job but that's OK. You have your good days and your bad days, but you keep going because it gets in your blood. You keep going because you feel you'll have a positive influence on somebody.

I'm a product of the Muscogee County school system. I had a seventh-grade science teacher who opened up a whole new world for me. He talked about a lot of issues in the science realm, such as evolution, which were very controversial at that time. He encouraged us to be open minded and to form our own opinions based on evidence.

Reynolds

I still have children in school, so I like to stay abreast about teaching, but I plan to continue teaching after they finish. Like I said, it gets in your blood.

SOLDIER

Why are educators so important?

Not only are teachers responsible for teaching the basic educational areas but they also have to fill in the areas that count as weaknesses. Teachers play a major role in the implementation of values. You have so many families where both parents work and a lot of single parents who the teachers have to fill in for. Sometimes teachers know the children better than the parents because they spend so much time with them.

STUDENTS

How did a teacher or coach most influence your life?

I had two teachers who really influenced me. Ms. Evers, my freshman biology teacher and Ms. Boynton-Brown, my journalism adviser. Ms. Evers became a real friend to me. If I had a problem, I could go to her. I haven't had her since then but I still go by her class to see her and talk.

Phillips

I've had Ms. Boynton-Brown for something every year. I like the way she teaches. She relates everything to the real world, and she talks to students as if we're people instead of talking down to us like a lot of other teachers do.

— Sumika Phillips
12th grade, William H. Spencer High School

All of my advanced teachers influenced me. Because of them, I look at school differently than I used to. I learned that going to school is like going to work. Even though people are getting paid, they complain. I learned that school is an ongoing process and that you get paid every day.

My seventh-grade English teacher, Mr. Galloway, showed me how to read something and get the most out of it. He taught me a real love for reading. I wasn't doing that good in English before then, but I've been in honors English ever since.

ask the judge

By George R. Smawley
Staff Judge Advocate's Office

Q: We recently moved to Fort Benning. While working on our household goods claim, a local furniture repair shop owner told us to exaggerate the damage to our dining room set in order to get more money from the government. He told my wife that everybody did it, and that if we got caught, the government still paid for the rest of our damages. We felt that this was dishonest and only filed for the fair value of our damages. Does this sort of fraud occur as often as we were led to believe?

A: Individuals who filed a claim with the government used to get away with grossly exaggerating or even lying about certain aspects of the claim and still received payment for the remaining valid costs. Not any more. In the past couple of years, the Army policy regarding fraudulent claims changed so that not only will the grossly inaccurate items be denied, but the entire claim, including valid items, gets denied if a determination comes that the claim is substantially tainted by fraud.

Not susceptible to easy definition, the term "substantially tainted by fraud," at a minimum, includes:

•A claim with altered estimates that represent values in excess of the actual loss or damage,

•A claim of missing items that the claimant clearly never owned,

•And a claim in which the claimant clearly misrepresented the true age or condition of numerous claimed items.

If officials discover fraud after the claim is paid, the claimant will be required to repay the government for the full amount, either voluntarily or involuntarily, and may be the subject of an investigation by the Military Police or the Criminal Investigation Command.

Filing a fraudulent claim remains a crime under Article 132 of the Uniform Code of Military Justice, punishable by a dishonorable discharge, forfeiture of all pay and allowances, reduction to E- 1 and confinement of up to five years. Federal law also makes it a crime punishable by up to five years and, or, a fine of up to $100,000.

In the past year, the Criminal Investigation Command investigated more than a dozen instances involving fraudulent claims, often resulting in criminal or adverse administrative action (for example an Article 15) against the offending service member.

Recently, a service member received a conviction and a sentencing, by a court-martial, to a bad conduct discharge for grossly exaggerating the extent of her loss on a household goods claim filed with the Fort Benning Claims Office. Her conviction ends her career, she receives virtually no veterans benefits, and she deals with the consequences of a criminal record that includes a federal conviction.

Q: While on leave, my roommate borrowed my car and caused more than $1,000 worth of damage to it. I never gave her permission to take the car, and now she refuses to pay me for the repairs. My first sergeant told me to file an Article 139 claim. What is an Article 139 claim and does it apply to me?

A: The Fort Benning Claims Office regularly answers whether or not a mechanism exists for victims of property damage and theft to recover from the party responsible for the loss. Article 139 of the Uniform Code of Military Justice serves this purpose and provides an administrative means by which victims assert claims for damages against a soldier for harm committed by the soldier.

Article 139 claims may be asserted by an individual whether military or civilian, a business, charity, or state or local government for losses caused by intentional acts of active duty service members. The loss must be due to damage to land or other property owned by the claimant intentionally damaged or stolen by a soldier. For consideration, the claim needs assertion within 90 days of the incident out of which the loss originated.

Intentional damage refers to damage willfully, knowingly and purposefully inflicted without justifiable excuse. Damage resulting from an accident or negligence is not considered intentional.

Stolen means exactly that. If a soldier takes property without authority, or borrows it with the intent to sell it or never return it, or writes a bad check with the intent to never pay its sum, then an Article 139 claim may be filed. If, however, the claimant and the soldier dispute over an agreement or contract, then an Article 139 claim remains inappropriate.

Individuals normally file an Article 139 claim with the Claims Office at the Office of the Staff Judge Advocate, Building 5. The Claims Office then forwards the claim to the offending soldier's special court martial convening authority — usually the brigade commander — who in turn appoints an officer to conduct an investigation. The commander considers the investigating officer's findings and recommendations and makes a final decision on whether to approve the claim.

If an individual filing an Article 139 claim reaches success in proving intentional damage or theft of property, he or she receives compensation directly from the soldier's military pay. Government money is not involved.

For more information regarding claims and Article 139, call the Fort Benning Claims Office, Office of the Staff Judge Advocate, at 545-2285.

Eagle Scouts learn variety of skills

By Lynn M. Bieda
Special to The Bayonet ©

Hardworking, dedicated and focused — these are just a few words used to describe the Eagle Scouts on Fort Benning.

"Less than 2 percent of the candidates ever make it to become actual Eagle Scouts," Terry said.

"To start the program, one needs to be at least 11 years old and in the sixth grade or higher," said Bo Terry, Scout Master of Troop 27.

"It's a very well-rounded, worthwhile program," Terry said. "The kids learn various skills such as environmental science, first aid and safety skills, aquatic, camping, cooking and sewing skills."

These are just a few of the skills needed to become an Eagle Scout. Before becoming a scout, one needs to complete seven ranks or phases. A final project needs drafting, planning, coordinating and submitting for approval. Then, one needs to lead this project.

Shawn Parker crafted one such project. Thirteen-year-old Parker, an eighth-grader at Don C.Faith Middle School, started in the Boy Scouts in the fifth grade. He completed all of his other phases at Fort Bragg, N.C., except the final one, which he completed here.

At Cemetery Two near Santa Fe Road Oct. 19, "Shawn and about four or five adults and twenty children from his troop participated in the upkeep of a historical cemetery," Terry said.

"We fixed broken headstones, and rusted gates," he said. "We painted and straightened a wire gate; we performed general lawn care of the entire cemetery, and we even repaired a crypt by mixing and using our own cement.

"Shawn planned and coordinated and even got the supplies and tools for the entire project," Terry said. "Shawn focused on Fort Benning and the Columbus community, and he turned the cemetery into a nice place people could visit."

After the final project approval, coordination and undergoing, a sort of after-action review gets written. Then, the Eagle Scout candidate must participate in a board of review, Terry said.

"In the board of review, there are no right or wrong answers; they just want to check my maturity level," Parker said.

"I get a queasy feeling when I think about the board of review, but I'm pretty sure I'll make it," he said.

Parker goes for his review at the end of this month. He is still unsure of the date, he said.

Approximately 27 members comprise Parker's troop, and they meet at Russ Pond Monday nights.

For more information about the Boy Scouts, call Bo Terry at 545-1016.

Doctor offers tips for parents of dating-age teens

Egleston Children's Hospital

Given the realities of life in the '90s, parents become tempted to postpone their young teens' dating careers indefinitely.

Instead, parents need to establish sensible ground rules and help their children anticipate and avoid difficult dating situations, said Dr. Edward Gotlieb, a pediatrician who practices at Egleston Children's Hospital at Emory University in Atlanta.

Gotlieb advises parents, whose teens express an interest in dating, to remember that "going out" can mean something altogether different than they might suppose.

To some teens, going out means talking on the phone or going to the mall with a group that includes a "special" friend. In other circles, going out becomes an overnight retreat. For parents to make informed decisions about dating, it helps to know exactly what your teen means.

Make sure your teen's interest in dating remains genuine. Sometimes young teens feel pressured to date before they're ready.

Parents need to help them avoid situations for which they're not emotionally or developmentally ready.

If the teen stands truly ready for dating, Dr. Gotlieb offers parents the following reminders:

•Knowledge is power. Talk to your dating teens about being responsible in relationships and sexual consequences, including sexually transmitted diseases and pregnancy.

•Join the crowd. Gotlieb prefers group outings for a teen who just started dating.

"There really is safety in numbers," he said.

•Age differences count. To keep your teen out of situations they're unable to handle, encourage them to date and befriend kids whose developmental stages are similar to their own.

Tune-ups make marriages run smoothly

By Len Kircher
2nd Battalion, 54th Infantry Regiment

Every 10,000 miles, whether I think my car needs it or not, I take it in for a tune-up. Depending on the type of car you drive, some need them more frequently and some less. But a tune-up remains vital if you want to keep your car running smoothly and make it last a long time.

reflections

Marriages also require occasional tune-ups, whether you think your marriage needs it or not. When life goes along smoothly, couples fall into a false sense of well-being in regard to their spouses and children. We fall into a daily routine in our home lives.

One spouse goes to work, comes home, eats, watches television and goes to sleep. The other spouse stays home and cooks meals, gets the children off to school, performs the myriad of chores necessary to keep a household running, then goes off to bed at night. Pretty soon, this becomes a tedious and, in some cases, destructive lifestyle.

Dissatisfaction may develop, although not readily apparent. In some people's minds they say, "It's all right; at least we're not arguing," or, "Why rock the boat if everything's all right?" Cars may appear to run smoothly while a problem deep in the engine develops.

Marriages experience the same thing. I propose two types of tune-ups for a marriage. First, the occasional one-on-one "check-up," and secondly, the scheduled, mandatory trips to the shop.

The occasional check-up is needed when things appear to be going well. I suggest periodically visiting a counselor to talk out things in your marriage, even if things appear to be going well. I offer this because married couples become so emotionally involved that a counselor's objective intervention brings out some issues one spouse experiences that the other is unaware of. You can do this every few months or every couple of years, but it's important to get it accomplished. This helps you discover issues in the engine of your marriage not readily apparent otherwise.

Secondly, mandatory trips to the shop consist of those activities offered by organizations to help you in your married life. Marriage enrichment retreats and child-rearing seminars, offered by the Chaplains Family Life Center or Army Community Services, describe just a few examples of what you can do.

We constantly seek self-improvement through service schools, college courses and correspondence classes. Why shouldn't we strive for the same in our marriages? If we put as much energy into our marriages as we put into so many other outside activities, very few would fail.

What you get out of your marriage depends very much on what you put into it. People grow and so do marriages. Make an effort in the coming months to keep your marriage tuned!

Learn to work with, not against your partner

By Robert Blessing
3rd Brigade, 3rd Infantry Division (Mech)

When crossing a river, you possess three options. You flow with it, fight across it or go over it.

reflections

A couple of weeks ago, the crew of an M-113 armored personnel carrier, which weighs 11.3 tons, decided not to worry about the rain-swollen Upatoi Creek. They planned to fight the current by crossing it and continuing on with the mission. But the crew forgot a river is mightier than an armored vehicle.

The crew attempted to cross over, but the river deposited the APC more than 500 meters downstream from where the crew intended to land. The moral of the story for this crew was take time to check out whether you can handle the flow of the river.

Our love life parallels the APC crew's experience. We make decisions that sometimes overwhelm us before we know it. We make rash decisions that put us in vulnerable positions.

Look at our relationships between men and women. So many of us get caught up in sexual pleasure and the excitement of romance. We think, "If I just move in to live with this woman or man, all my longings and needs will be met, and I will be happy." These thoughts seem similar to the APC crew when they planned to just plow through the river and get to the other side.

When we quickly plow into relationships and decide to get married, because of hormones, loneliness or longing for immediate companionship, we get swept downstream to a place we are unprepared to go. People in this type of wild love get caught in the excitement without recognizing that responsibility, faithfulness, commitment and friendship built over time comprise the marriage river, which offers it challenges. Going into this river necessitates real preparedness. Marriage does not equate a casual fling or skinny dip.

Marriage often seems the most fulfilling experience of life. Sometimes in a marriage, we get to where we want to go right from the beginning, but often we need to be ready to go where the river takes us.

Newer and deeper intimacy than we expected or wanted becomes part of this river. Responsibilities of children or finances flow over us after marriage. We no longer seem able to play as the free-wheeling teen-ager or single person partying as we wish. Commitment to another person changes things.

Are we mature enough to handle the changes; are we prepared? It is better not to commit until we are prepared.

The APC crew received extensive training to move and operate their vehicle; yet they got into trouble. Without the training they received, the situation for the crew might have been worse.

We also need training to develop our relationships. Get a manual and adviser to help you maintain your marriage; then it can possess the potential to run as one of the hottest marriages around. The Bible, a wonderful manual given by our Lord, gives us insight to building the most important relationship of our life.

A wise friend, a pastor, priest, or a chaplain often offers you insights to enrich your marriage. Talk to someone else. Most healthy marriages use maintenance schedules for counseling, dates, dinners and weekend get-aways.

Remember your wedding vows. Most go as follows: "In the name of God, I take you to be my (wife or husband), to have and to hold from this day forward, for better, for worse, for richer for poorer, in sickness and in health, to love and to cherish, until we are parted by death. This is my solemn vow."

At the time of the wedding, couples only recall the better, richer, health and love part of our vows. Be reminded that the river of love and marriage also possesses the worse, poorer, sickness and death part of the vows.

We survive these times easier when we prepare for marriage by waiting for the right time, being sure we possess the ability to handle the responsibilities of married life, giving ourselves time to mature and being sure that we really know the person we intend to marry.

To jump into the river of marriage before preparing for the life adventure seems like driving across the Upatoi. You don't know where you will end up.

Get out of the vehicle and check the river flow. See where you and the river are ready to go.

Your right mate waits there to handle the river of love with you when you take the time to prepare.

Do all things through God's strength

By G. and M. Alleyne
USAIC Chaplains Office

A small boy tries to move a heavy object, but can't budge it. His father, passing by, notices his son trying to move the object and stops to watch. After a while he says to his son, "Are you using all your strength?"

"Yes I am," the boy says.

reflections

The father shouts back, "No, son, you're not, because you haven't asked me to help you."

People often give up when obstacles in their way seem too big for them to move. They strain with all their strength, sometimes they try every idea they think of, but the problem still stares them in the face.

It becomes difficult for them to properly estimate their ability unless they include the vast resources at their disposal through the help of our heavenly father.

The Apostle Paul said, "I can do all things through Christ who gives me strength." (Philippians 4:13). People do not have to limit themselves, because with God all things are possible.

There is no reason to ever give up when attempting any task regardless of difficulty. Stop for a moment and pray in all earnestness, seeking God's help.

The Apostle Paul discovered that God's reliability, resourcefulness and love for helping his children. Paul experienced God's faithfulness in times of need.

If you face mountains in your life, look to God as a source of strength. You do not have to face the world alone or handle everything yourself. With God's strength, you are able to face the world.

YOUTH FOOTBALL

49ers defeat Browns in title game

John W. Peeler

Justin White gets around the end on the Browns' defense. White scored four touchdowns in the 40-14 victory over the Browns.

By John W. Peeler
Special to the Bayonet©

The Youth Services 49ers accomplished something Saturday no team in two years accomplished in the over-12 football league when they beat the Browns, the defending champions.

The 49ers ended their season with a 40-14 thumping of the Browns, winning the championship in the process.

Before the game, head coach James White said their strategy was simple.

"If we can stop 'the beast' —Browns running back David Arce — we will win this game," White said.

On the other hand, White said he believed his team had too many weapons for the Browns to stop and felt his team would come out on top.

The Browns elected to receive the kickoff after the 49ers deferred their choice until the second half and immediately went to work putting together a grinding ground game led by Arce.

The 49er defense stopped the Browns, forcing them to turn the ball over on downs.

The offense went right to work on the Brown defense mounting a drive capped off by a touchdown by running back Justin White. The two-point conversion was foiled and the 49ers obtained a quick 6-0 first quarter lead.

On the Browns' next possession, Arce took control of the ball for the Browns, driving down the field and culminating in a touchdown plunge tying the score at 6-6. Arce ran the ball into the end zone for the two-point conversion as the quarter ended, making the score 8-6 in favor of the Browns.

The 49ers responded in the second quarter with a long scoring drive of their own, taking the ensuing kickoff and marching down the field 60 yards, going ahead of the Browns 12-8 on a scoring pass to White. Reggie McFadden added the two-point conversion, putting the 49ers on top 14-8.

Trailing, the Browns went back to the ground game that got them to the championship game. Mixing runs by Arce and quarterback Tim Hardcastle, the Browns moved the ball down to the 49ers 15-yard line.

With the half winding down, Hardcastle handed the ball off to Arce around the right end. Arce stopped and threw the ball back to Hardcastle, who slipped out of the backfield around the left side, into the end zone tying the score 14-14.

The Browns were unable to convert on the two-point attempt; and, with less than four minutes remaining in the half,

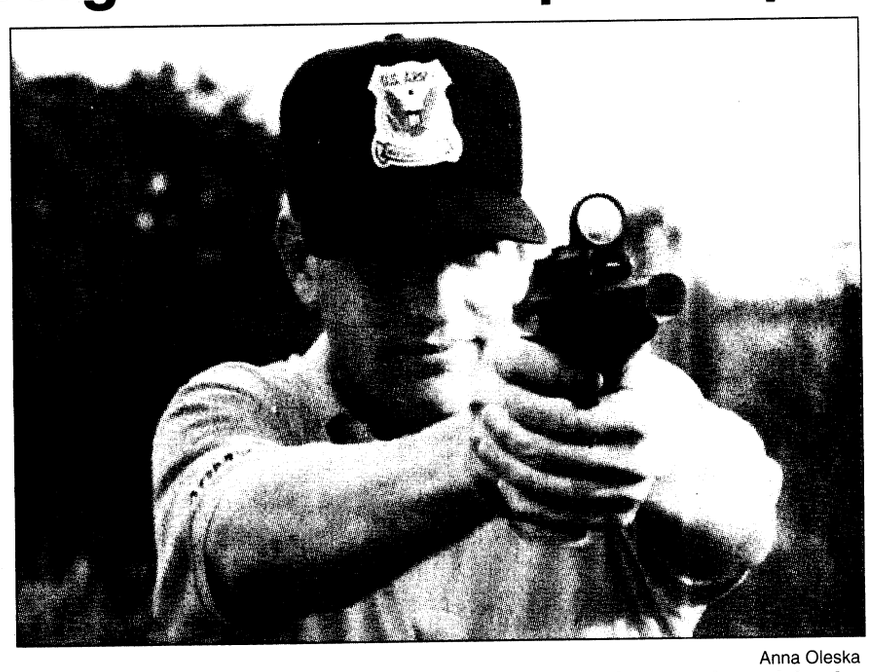
Action pistol shooter wins Georgia State Championships

U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit

U. S. Army Marksmanship Unit action pistol shooter Gregory S. Way recently swept the Georgia State Action Pistol Championships in Conyers, Ga.,winning the overall match and becoming Georgia State champion for the second year in a row.

"The match is a level one competition and as a state championship serves as a good training match for our shooters," said Coach Ray Arredondo. Every state in the country has one primary shooting match each year, and this is it for Georgia.

The match was a mixed open. Approximately 180 competitors from Georgia, Florida, North Carolina, New Jersey and other states participated.



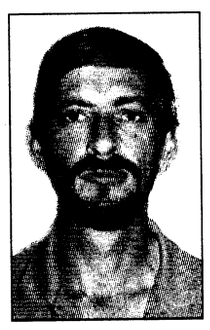
Shooters, firing the .38-caliber super pistol, completed eight courses of fire using approximately 250 rounds. They shot an average of 30 rounds per course of fire, with each shot worth five points.

Other USAMU action pistol shooters competing included Harold A. Christy, Kenneth S. Suratt and Julie Goloski.

Way won by scoring the maximum number of points — 1052, or 100 percent. In action shooting, the match winner always scores 100 percent and every other shooter's score is based on a percentage of the match winner's score.

Way said he was ready for the match because he had just come off training for the world championships, a level five world match, which was conducted in Brazil in October.

"The Georgia State match was important to me because I was the reigning Georgia champion going in and I wanted to shoot my best and win the Georgia state title again this year," Way said. "It was my kind of match because there was lots of shooting on-the-move, which is one of my strong points."



Anna Oleska

Gregory S. Way won the Georgia State Championship in Conyers, Ga., for the second consecutive year.

Title: 49ers win championship

the score remained 14-14.

The Browns appeared to have held the 49ers after the ensuing kickoff; but, with less than one minute left in the half, McFadden hit Damon Ault on a 45-yard scoring strike in the end zone, giving the 49ers a 20-14 lead going into the half.

As the third half opened, the 49ers picked up right where they left off in the second quarter.

Mixing running and passing plays, the 49ers culminated their drive with a dive play for a touchdown by White. The two-point conversion failed and the 49ers opened a commanding 26-14 lead.

After the ensuing kickoff, the Browns went back to the running game with Arce.

On third down, Hardcastle dropped back to pass throwing an errant pass that was picked off by White. White weaved through Browns defenders, breaking to the sideline, and raced 45 yards en route to another 49er touchdown.

McFadden added the two-point conversion making the score 34-14.

McFadden scored one more time in the third quarter to give the 49ers a commanding 40-14 lead — a lead the Browns failed to overcome.

With the victory, the 49ers received the over-12 league champions crown, unseating the defending champion Browns.

USAMU pistol shooters sweep 2700 Match

U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit

Service pistol team shooters with the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit captured first place recently at the Columbia, Tenn., 2700 Regional Match.

In the 2700 Match, participants shoot three 900-point courses of fire with three different pistols — the .22-caliber, the .45-caliber and the center fire pistols — for a perfect score of 2,700 points. Shooters come to this central location from states surrounding Tennessee to shoot in the match.

The USAMU Blue Team scored the winning 1,170 points in the .45-caliber pistol team match, 1,159 points in the center fire team match and 1,178 in the .22-caliber pistol team match. Shooters on the victorious Blue Team included Steven M. King, Roger C. Jacobson, Aaron P. Schreiber and Fritz A. Ficke.

> "We worked really well as a team, and this was the best we shot since the team got together in January."
> — Roger C. Jacobson
> USAMU pistol team shooter

Coach Ray Arredondo said the Blue Team's performance was excellent and is getting better all the time.

"Usually, it's the same people on the Blue Team who shoot every match," Arredondo said. "But this time our alternate, Schreiber, replaced one of our shooters who had to be away. He stepped right in and did very well for the team."

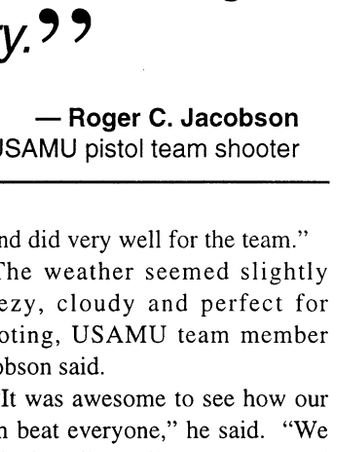
The weather seemed slightly breezy, cloudy and perfect for shooting, USAMU team member Jacobson said.

"It was awesome to see how our team beat everyone," he said. "We worked really well as a team, and this was the best we shot since the team got together in January."

Jacobson, competing against some 40 other shooters, stole first place and won the Gold Medal in the regional individual excellence in competition match while shooting the .45-caliber pistol, scoring 276 points out of a possible 300. Jacobson said he did not know he had won at first, but that he shot a good score.

"I felt great when I learned I won," he said. "I trained hard, checked out my equipment and spent a lot of time getting last minute mental tips from my coach."

"Having the support of my coach and the unit gives me confidence to prepare myself for the match."



Jacobson also came in second place, taking the Silver Medal in the 2,700 individual aggregate with a score of 2,636 points, scoring 134 bull's eyes.

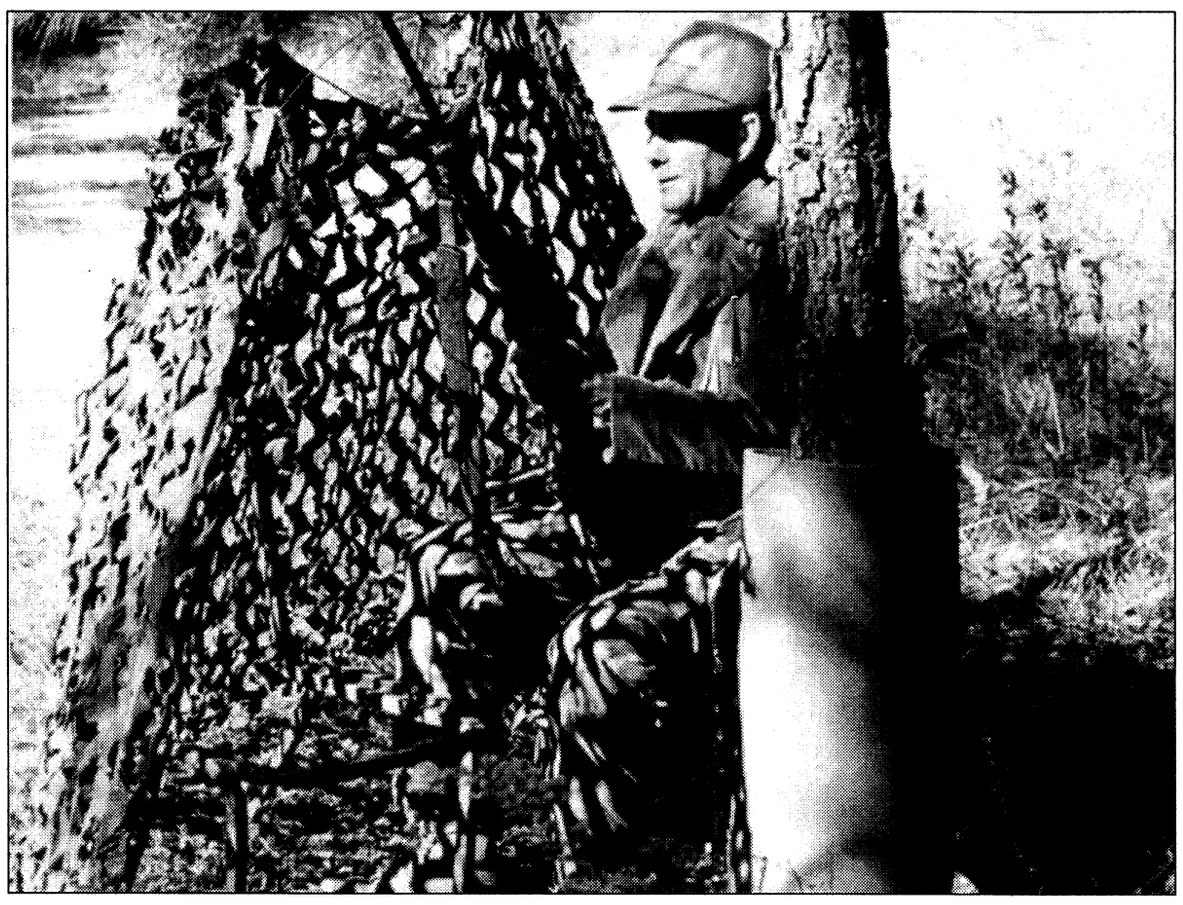
Hunters help veterans overcome disabilities, enjoy outdoors

By John W. Peeler
Special to the Bayonet©

The onset of a physical disability, even a permanent one, may not mean the end of hunting. In fact, hunters with disabilities can make adjustments and continue to enjoy the great outdoors, according to two local veterans.

Bill Brickner and Thomas Humphus, local veterans and avid hunters, remind disabled veterans that with the help of someone else, they can continue their dreams of hunting.



Brickner and Humphus help disabled hunting veterans by taking them out almost every day.

Brickner said he and other volunteers take anywhere from five to eight disabled hunters out almost every day on post to hunt and enjoy the outdoors.

"We normally leave early enough to be in our area by about 7 a.m.," Brickner said. "By 10:30 or 11 a.m., the guys are tired and ready to come in."

Brickner said most of the disabled veterans he takes out lack the stamina to complete a full day of hunting.

"We try to find places with easy access for the hunters, set up blinds with camouflage and help them get into position," Brickner said. "We do whatever it takes to make the veteran's day."

John W. Peeler

James Amerson sits behind a blind prepared by Bill Brickner. The blind is constructed of camouflage netting and wire with a converted wheel chair as a seat.

Brickner takes two veterans, 75-year-old Chester Marsh and 67-year-old James Amerson, hunting almost every day.

Marsh, who served in the Battle of the Bulge during World War II and Korea, said he has been hunting on Fort Benning since 1939, but would not be able to go now if it were not for Brickner.

Marsh suffers problems when walking and remains unable to get into tree stands. He hunts mostly from blinds set up along easy-access roads.

The younger Amerson retired in 1969 and has been hunting on Fort Benning for 16 or 17 years. Amerson said he gets around a little better than Marsh but lacks the stamina to pull a deer out of the woods if he shot one.

"I have a bad heart valve, and it would be almost impossible for me to pull a 70- or 80-pound deer out of the woods," Amerson said.

"Bill (Brickner) makes it possible for guys like us to be able to get out and enjoy the outdoors safely."

Amerson is able to climb most tree stands but said having someone with him while he is hunting makes his wife feel a little easier about his hunting.

"The big thing is to look after them so if they need help, we are there to give it to them," Brickner said. "It relieves their wives from worrying about them when they go out because their wives know they are not as young as they used to be."

"Safety always comes first," Brickner said. "You never know what can happen out here."

Brickner said safety signals let people know when there is a problem.

"The preferred method is three quick shots fired in the air," Brickner said. "Another method is blowing a whistle."

Brickner said the number one accident with deer hunting occurs with deer stands, such as someone falling out.

Amerson said the group sets a time when they are going to come out of the area and if someone does not come out, then the hunters go in and look for them.

Brickner said he and Humphus don't mind spending the time taking disabled hunters out because he realizes they will be that age at some time in the future.

"Any disabled hunter, young or old, who would like to get out, hunt, enjoy the outdoors and be with someone who cares about them should give me a call," Brickner said.

If you are disabled, know someone who is disabled or would just like to go hunting with someone who knows the area, contact Brickner at 563-0189 or Humphus at 321-1766.

Facing hunting challenges for disabled requires thought, open mind

By John W. Peeler
Special to the Bayonet©

Disabled hunters use bows and rifles just like any other hunter, although not as easily.

For those with disabilities, bow hunting carries with it problems not faced when hunting with a firearm.

Most successful archers hunt from a tree stand, but climbing a tree proves especially challenging for a hunter with disabilities.

A 4-foot-by-4-foot platform comprised of trees grouped together makes a tree stand. An inclined stairway can be used to reach the platform by slowly ascending on both hands and knees. Safety remains of paramount importance in all types of elevated stand hunting. A safety belt remains necessary, even when sitting down.

If unable to stand for long periods, a good seat becomes needed on the hunting platform. A seat from a boat works well. Put a nail through the seat so that no rotation takes place until you are seated.

Commercial ladder stands with rotating seats remain available. These can be moved to a different hunting site on short notice, giving them an advantage over a fixed stand.

Disabled bow hunters unable to climb at all need to build a blind on the ground.

Even if a hunter requires a walker, arm crutches, shoulder crutches or a wheel chair, hunting remains possible.

commentary

An all-terrain vehicle serves this purpose. This method often requires a friend to help the hunter onto it at the beginning of the day and back off of it again when his or her hunt ends, but it works.

Walkers seem to not work well in the woods, but arm crutches work fine on uneven surfaces.

Disabled hunters need to realize they can't go as far, or as fast, and certainly not as quietly, as before; however, they remain able to position themselves for some quality hunting.

Disabled hunters often need more shooting practice than others. Although the arms remain strong enough to handle a 50-pound compound bow, constant work to maintain that strength and constant shooting practice is needed to keep hunting skills up.

While practicing shooting, retrieving the arrows after each shooting round often proves demanding. Take time to get to and from the target.

If hunting with a gun, a disabled person hunting from the ground needs the cover of a good blind to hide the extra movements required to get into position for a shot, even a wheelchair-bound hunter hunts comfortably and safely from a blind.

The disabled person is likely to be more active and accepted today, and enjoying outdoor activities remains in reach for open-minded hunters. Just being outdoors — not necessarily filling a game bag — often serves as the greatest success and accomplishment of any hunting trip.

Don't Find A Home Without It.

Our New PurchasePower Card Will Show Just How Much Home You Can Afford.

All it takes is a touch-tone phone, a few minutes, and the answers to a few simple questions about your income and debt payments. It's quick and easy because it's fully automated, and walks you through each push-button step in a flash. By the next business day, you'll know which mortgage types and how much you qualify for.

Then we'll send you a card that spells out that details of your loan, including the amount that's been pre-approved. And you can show the seller that you've got real PurchasePower. It's just that simple. And simply the easiest way home.

MPs return from Bosnia, express pride in mission

By Lynn M. Bieda
Special to The Bayonet©

Several soldiers from the 988th Military Police Company recently returned from Bosnia where they were deployed for about five months.

While there, the 988th prepared for strategic deployment on order, conducted battlefield circulation control and area security, directed public works operations and directed law and order operations, according to the unit's first sergeant, 1st Sgt. Wesley Lee.

Before deployment, the soldiers processed through Fort Benning's Continental U.S. Replacement Center, located in the Harmony Church area; and, for some, this was their first overseas deployment.

"This was my first assignment overseas," said Pfc. Jim McGee. "I felt we were prepared, and we trained really hard to get that way."

The soldiers performed a variety of mission-related tasks to augment the United States' role in the overall peacekeeping mission.

"The company I was attached to had four missions — gate guard, command escort, life support area patrol and area security," said Pfc. Carla Thompson .

"In Bosnia, we had hands-on experience," she said. "But being in Bosnia had it ups and downs."

"When we patrolled, we saw the blown-out buildings, and we were instructed to stay away from the land mines," she said.

"Once I had a grenade thrown near me, and I got caught in a riot with some other soldiers," McGee said.

Another concern for the soldiers in Bosnia was interaction with the local media.

"If you got caught on film waving, the media could turn it around and make it look like something else, so we weren't allowed to talk to civilians," Thompson said.

"I think we were lucky though," Kinyon said. "We had tents to sleep in and wooden floors, and the post exchange was in a warehouse. I felt we had it better than the first group of people who deployed there."

Some of the soldiers volunteered for the deployment, but their feelings about the deployment varied.

"There were a lot of inconveniences for us there — we had to walk for two to three minutes to get to the showers, the chow hall was a half mile away and the laundry was far away, too," Thompson said.

The soldiers commented about how they felt about returning from Bosnia.

"I didn't mind going except that I was away from my wife," Sgt. James Kinyon said. "I wouldn't want to go back."

"Even though I volunteered to go, I wouldn't want to go back. I feel I've done my time there," McGee said.

"I would like to go back if I had the chance," Thompson said. "I made a lot of good friends; we were all a part of one big family. But, I don't feel that we need as many troops there as we did at first."

OPERATION HOLIDAY

Tricommunities, AUSA plan festivities

USAIC Public Affairs Office

The annual Operation Holiday kickoff takes place Dec. 20 at the Columbus Government Center Plaza at 9 a.m.

Maj. Gen. Carl F. Ernst, commanding general, will be joined by Columbus Mayor Bobby Peters and Phenix City Mayor Sammy Howard in reading a proclamation declaring Dec. 20 to Jan. 4 as the official time period of Operation Holiday.

This is the 17th year that the Association of the U.S. Army has worked with community groups in providing activities for soldiers who remain on post during the holiday period.

Jim Gallagher, chairman of AUSA's sports and entertainment committee, said that as in years past, Operation Holiday will be oriented to providing soldiers a good mix of sports and entertainment.

He said he hopes the impetus gained from Operation Holiday will be something that can be extended beyond the holiday period — providing soldiers with meaningful activities throughout the year.

He said unit command sergeants major will play a key role in helping distribute tickets to soldiers.

Gallagher noted that corporate AUSA members were making it possible for soldiers to attend Cottonmouth ice hockey games, and that Auburn University had donated tickets to select basketball games.

Gallagher said AUSA will be distributing tickets to the Blue-Gray game once again, thanks to students in the Air Force's Command College at Maxwell Air Force Base in Montgomery.

Also, AUSA will be purchasing tickets to Atlanta Hawks and Falcons basketball and football games and to some key college basketball games in Atlanta.

On post, the Directorate of Community Activities will be sponsoring many athletic events and activities for soldiers.

CG gives thanks, stresses safety

Food, families and friends are usually foremost on our minds when we think of Thanksgiving.

We as Americans can be thankful for the bountiful harvests our farmers provide us, some of which will be readily available in unit dining facilities and family dining rooms Thursday.

Many of us will join family members and friends on this holiday.

As Soldiers, we can be thankful that our nation has the trust and confidence in us we need in order to accomplish our mission of supporting and defending the Constitution of the United States.

We can be thankful for the first-rate training and equipment we have to make us the most formidable force in the world. And above all, this year we can be thankful we are not engaged in any combat missions; rather we are entrusted with helping to keep the peace where other nations lack the will and the resolve to do so themselves.

No matter what our faith, we should give thanks for our American heritage — heritage that has endured for more than 200 years, a heritage that is the envy of every other nation.

But as we give thanks, we must remember that even in this nation, there are those who are without.

Let us, therefore, resolve to look around us and see who can use our help; for the greatest thanks we can give is helping those less fortunate than ourselves.

As wonderful and glorious as this holiday season is, it is not without danger.

Where there are long trips to visit family members, where there is partying to celebrate the season, where there is taking time off to rest and recreate, there is danger.

Maj. Gen. Carl F. Ernst encourages the entire Fort Benning family to rest and return to work safely on Monday.

When on the road, we must remain alert for those who aren't. We must ensure those who had too much holiday cheer to drink, don't drive. And if we are hunters and sportsmen, we must be careful that we know the rules and play by them, especially when firearms are involved.

I encourage the entire Fort Benning family to take time off, to be with family and friends, to rest and to return to work safely Monday.

Thanksgiving

Holiday season brings plenty to feel thankful for

By Lisa M. Hibbert
Bayonet staff writer

Lisa M. Hibbert is thankful for several things in her life.

commentary

I sometimes forget how much I have to be thankful for, so I try to remind myself periodically. This time last year, I mourned the death of something precious to me, which ironically came about because of the life that grew inside of me.

I dated this guy for four years. We planned to marry. I got pregnant and a month before the wedding, he called it off.

Here I was, four months pregnant, a stranger in a foreign land with no family or close friends around.

While being alone and pregnant was hard to endure, watching my dreams die was even harder. All of the plans I made with this man were dead. There were so many things in life that I wanted to accomplish, like obtaining another degree, that all of a sudden seemed so unachievable.

Everyday, as my stomach swelled, I faced the dilemma of answering the inquiries of the curious.

"Oh, congratulations! I didn't know you were married. Is your husband excited about the baby?"

Saying, "No, I'm not married," was the hardest thing in the world for me.

I listened to the grim predictions by many of how hard things were going to be for me as a single parent.

Today, as I look back at it all, I can honestly say that I am thankful for everything I endured.

Before my pregnancy, I didn't really appreciate the constant warm climate of Columbus, but I realized, I could have been pregnant in Fort Drum, N.Y., in the middle of the winter.

I could have worked in the civilian world where I would have had to pay for all of my prescriptions, plus 20 percent of my doctor bills like most of my friends. Instead, I was in the military and having a child cost me about $10 total.

If I worked in the civilian world, I would have gone broke trying to buy maternity clothes to wear to work. Instead, I had the audacity to complain about the unflattering style of the free one I received.

Worst yet, I could have married and been unhappy. While I know the ideal way to bring up a child is with both parents present, I learned that marriage does not guarantee that.

I have watched many people experience divorce and even the death of a spouse after they had children. I have watched men and women flounder under the burden of keeping a household together while their mates deployed, went away to school or simply left.

I heard a minister preach on the subject of the single parent one day. He told his married members to stop judging the singles. He said you never know when your spouse may die or seek to divorce you. Being a single parent can happen to anybody, although a person may not enter into single parenthood the same way I did.

Many people call children born out of wedlock illegitimate children, but there is nothing illegitimate about my son. The only thing illegitimate is the relationship that created him, meaning he was conceived out of wedlock. I pray that my child does not suffer the sins of his parents.

I now appreciate my singleness because I realize my ability to function as an individual. I know that as a single parent, I can go back to school; in fact, I must go back so that I can provide a better lifestyle for my son.

Someone asked me the other day if it is hard being a single parent. Truthfully, I don't know the answer. I've always been a single parent, so I don't have anything to compare it with. This is all I know.

However, in my opinion, it's not hard being a single parent; it's hard being a parent period!

I have learned to appreciate the challenges that befall me for I know they only serve to make me stronger. I have learned to be thankful for the little things.

Like when I pick up my son from the day care center and his toothless grin brightens the room, I realize how fortunate I am to have him around.

I'm proud to be a soldier, but I'm even more proud to say I have a job because so many people want to work but remain unable to for whatever reason.

I know this may sound cheesy, but, I'm glad I possess the ability to get up in the mornings and participate in physical training exercises because I know that somewhere there exists a soldier who desires to but just can't.

Seeing the sun rise makes my day even more glorious; and, when I come home after dark, I always take time to marvel at the brilliance of the stars in the sky.

Don't get me wrong, those who know me best will testify that I was always a sucker for a walk under a full moon on a warm summer night. I always did like the simple things in life. I have just learned how to recognize and appreciate the gifts I have received all along and somehow took for granted.

ACS salutes military families

Army Community Services

Military Family Week is celebrated during the Thanksgiving holiday period, and we join our military leaders in expressing appreciation for the dedication and sacrifices that are made by service members and their families in our community.

commentary

In the daily press of activities that characterize our modern lives, we often overlook opportunities to express our appreciation to those who make a special contribution.

To amend that oversight, we take this opportunity — along with the Armed Services YMCA — to salute all military families. While the YMCA focuses its attention on the younger men and women in uniform, we extend our community's gratitude to all military families.

Military families, who live in our community — whether on post or off — are separated from their own hometowns and friends and frequently separated from each other because of military duties.

We value their contributions. We share their pride.

Vehicles, alcohol combine for deadly holiday situation

By April N. Olsen
USAIC Public Affairs Office

Twenty thousand people die in traffic accidents involving alcohol or other drug impairment each year. That's 20,000 too many.

Because impairment increases with consumption, many national agencies support lowering the legal blood alcohol content in all states. Georgia is among the five states that has already lowered the legal BAC to .08.

Drivers under the age of 21 are targeted with our most intensive efforts to prevent impaired driving because of the high numbers of younger drivers in motor vehicle crash fatalities each year. A dozen people under the age of 21 die in impaired driving accidents every day.

Many young people consume large amounts of alcohol believing they can "handle it."

What some fail to realize is that alcohol makes us feel as if we are doing fine when in reality we are far from being able to "handle" operating a motor vehicle. The only acceptable BAC for operating a motor vehicle is 0.00.

Alcohol consumption makes any activity inherently more dangerous and risky because alcohol impairs our ability to make good, timely judgments.

Too much alcohol leaves a person struggling to pronounce words correctly and makes it difficult to see. Alcohol slows down our response time because our brain and muscles lose the ability to act quickly and effectively. It becomes nearly impossible to accurately perceive what is happening around us.

"Handling" the drunken driving problem is everyone's responsibility. It takes a community-wide effort to combat this problem.

Some propose measures to take the license away from a person arrested for exceeding BAC levels. Other proposals include:

•Withholding the driver's license from those under 21 who violate any alcohol law.

•Lower the legal drinking age so drinking is no longer taboo, therefore making it less desirable.

•Federally mandating the legal driving age to 18 or 21 with special permits given to those who work or have special needs.

Whichever actions communities take, it is imperative that we balance the incentives to break those laws with better information about impairment and with safer, healthier community norms for drinking by those who legally can.

Soldiers, civilians and their family members are Fort Benning's most valuable assets. We must protect them.

3 soldiers suffer wounds in accident

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Three Fort Benning soldiers were wounded in an unintentional shooting incident on post Saturday about 8:30 p.m.

The shooting occurred in the barracks when a fourth soldier, who was sitting on a bed with a 9 mm handgun, had it discharge unexpectedly. The shot hit one soldier in the chest, ricocheted off the floor and hit the two other soldiers in the lower leg.

All four soldiers are members of the 317th Engineer Battalion, 3rd Brigade, 3rd Infantry Division (Mechanized).

Wounded in the incident were Staff Sgt. Gregory Hendricks, 29, Spc. Kevin Gasque, 23, and Sgt. Demarco Bailey, 24.

Hendricks suffered a wound to the chest and was taken to the Medical Center, Columbus, and remains hospitalized. Gasque and Bailey both suffered wounds to the lower leg. They were treated and released from Martin Army Community Hospital.

Sgt. Jason Derosa, 24, the soldier who discharged the handgun, has not been charged.

The investigation continues.

Firearm safety a must

Infantry Branch Safety Office

Fort Benning regulations require soldiers to register all privately owned weapons with the Military Police, Building 2637, 545-3646.

Accidents with firearms can be prevented through conscientious adherence to the following cardinal rules for firearm safety.

•Treat every weapon as if it were loaded.

•Do not trust safety mechanisms.

•Make sure the weapon is empty before handling or cleaning.

•Always point the weapon in a safe direction.

•Point weapons only at targets you intend to shot.

•Keep weapons unloaded when not in use.

•Avoid horseplay.

•Be sure gun barrel is clean and free of obstructions.

•Store weapons and ammunition in separate areas.

•Never leave weapons where they are accessible to children.

•Weapons and ammunition should always be locked up and the use of firearms by older children should always be supervised by an adult.

•Teach children that weapons are not toys and are not for play.

Agency accepts donations for troops in Bosnia

Defense Logistics Agency

The Defense Logistics Agency now accepts approved bulk donations — items weighing 70 pounds or more — for U.S. troops serving in Bosnia during the coming holiday season.

Most of these troops, about 7,500, make up members of the covering force. Another 2,500 personnel from the current U.S. forces involved in Bosnia also remain in the country during the holidays.

The agency's primary mission remains to provide essential operational and life support items to U.S. forces. The logistics pipeline to personnel serving in Operation Joint Endeavor now, however, accommodates donated items on a space-available basis.

All bulk donations need approval in advance of acceptance.

Donors need to first call DLA's toll-free number, (800) 841-0937, for donation approval and to receive specific instructions on the packing, marking and shipping of their donations.

Donors bear the responsibility for delivering their items to the designated Department of Defense facilities. Donations need to arrive at the designated DoD facilities no later than Dec. 6. The donated items then receive shipment to the troops at no cost to the donor.

The DLA donation office provides potential donors with a list of suggested and most popular items, as well as information on unacceptable items.

Prohibited items include firearms, alcoholic beverages, combustibles, pornographic materials, perishable foods, glass or breakable containers, home-baked products, books, newspapers and magazines.

Donors should note that donations cannot be sent to specific individuals, units or locations. This does not, however, preclude donors from sending specifically addressed donations directly, using their own shipping agents.

Donations to Operation Joint Endeavor cannot be tracked, so information regarding the recipient of the donated items remains unprovided. If for any reason a donation becomes unable to be delivered to the Bosnia region, it gets sent to U.S. military personnel serving elsewhere.

The Department of Defense also accepts monetary donations. Donors wishing to make a financial contribution need to contact the Defense Finance and Accounting Service at (703) 607-0918 for more information.

By Michael Kornburger
2nd Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment

The lieutenants of Company A, 2nd Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment, left the Infantry Hall classrooms and headed to the field to conduct training Nov. 4.

During week 12 of the 16-week course, the IOBC students conducted a four-day field training exercise at Bush Hill. This particular field training exercise focused on the conduct of the infantry platoon defense.

Field training exercises remain key ingredients in the IOBC training agenda. This training allows the students to apply the skills they learned from the commissioned and noncommissioned officer trainers of the 2nd Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment.

The training scenario placed mechanized infantry forces from the Atlantican Army, a fictitious opposing force that fights using doctrine under Training and Doctrine Command Pamphlet 350-16, against the IOBC students. Members of Company A and Company C, 1st Battalion, 15th Infantry Regiment, and personnel from the 317th Engineer Battalion, 3rd Brigade, 3rd Infantry Division (Mechanized), comprised the Atlantican Army.

The IOBC students prepared a company defense consisting of both mechanized and light infantry forces. The IOBC company organized two platoons of light infantry and two platoons of mechanized infantry.

Second Lt. Greg Knight provides security, while 2nd Lts. Steve Droste and Vincent Intini, all with the 2nd Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment, Infantry Officer Basic Course prepare their fighting position.

Company C, 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment, provided the Bradley fighting vehicles for the mechanized platoons in the defense. The crews for the Bradleys consisted of students who will be assigned to mechanized units after completion of IOBC.

The 63rd Engineer Company (Combat Support Equipment) soldiers supported preparation of the defense. The soldiers aided in the preparation of the fighting positions for both the light and mechanized forces.

They prepared two-step fighting positions with bulldozers for the Bradley fighting vehicles and individual fighting positions with small equipment excavators. This allowed the Bradleys and dismounted soldiers to use the existing terrain for cover and concealment.

The four-day exercise encompassed the planning, preparation and execution phases of the defense. All of the IOBC students were required to develop a plan and a select few operated in key leader positions.

Those selected as platoon leaders briefed the plan they developed. The platoon members proceeded to prepare their portion of the company defense to include Bradley fighting vehicle positions, individual fighting positions and obstacle emplacement.

Preparation of the company defense took most of the second day of the operation. By the third day, the IOBC students were ready to defend the Bush Hill area against the attack of the Atlantican Army.

The attack came at approximately 7 a.m. on the third day. Mechanized forces of the Atlantican Army proceeded up Box Springs Road only to meet the defenses of the IOBC students.

After the smoke cleared, the IOBC students proved to be tough opponents, but the seasoned crews of the Atlantican Army still managed to penetrate the defense.

After the battle, the IOBC students conducted after-action reviews.

"Rehearsals are very important," said 2nd Lt. Charles Jones, 2nd Platoon leader. "Going against the trained Bradley crews was real'y difficult. The trained opposing force crews fired and maneuvered effortlessly on our positions."

Trainers listened as students identified lessons learned from the operation. Some of the poin's identified by the students stressed the importance of rehearsals, effective time management and the need for counter-recon patrols.

The IOBC students enhanced their skills by being involved in all facets of the mechanized and light infantry defense, according to 2nd Lt. Jamison Kirby.

"I am glad to be a light fighter, but the mechanized infantry training is critical to being a comple e leader," he said.

"The students learned not only defensive operations, but the importance of working together in the company sized operation," he continued. "The skills learned in the classroom were put into action in the field."

"The exercise showed the importance of synchronizing the direct fire plan with the indirect and obstacle plan," said Capt. Jay Migone, 2nd Platoon trainer and officer in-charge of the exercise. "Other key considerations were proper utilization of the engineer assets and logistics planning."

The IOBC students returned to garrison after conducting range recovery operations. Next, the lieutenants of Company A move on to offensive operations.

JPOM deploys multi-service individuals

Joint Preparation for Onward Movement

At the beginning of Operation Joint Endeavor, the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, Gen. John M. Shalikashvili, and the Secretary of Defense William Perry, directed that a single site be established where individuals assigned to joint or multi-national staffs in support of Operation Joint Endeavor would be prepared for their assignments prior to deploying.

The mission was given to the U.S. Atlantic Command and the Army's Training and Doctrine Command.

Fort Benning was chosen as the deployment site because it is a primary mobilization site due to its size, training areas, the airfield, the Infantry School, life support facilities etc.

The individual deployment site, which later became the Continental U.S. Replacement Center, began processing individuals for missions in Operation Joint Endeavor. Later, the Center for Joint Preparation and Onward Movement became established in Building 4, to assist the CRC with processing Army, Navy, Air Force Marines and civilians for the peace keeping mission in Bosnia Dec. 14.

According to Col. Clayton D. Spangenberg III, director of the JPOM, the JPOM works to verify assignment, train the individual augmentees in specific areas applicable to joint and multi-national staffs and confirm their deployability, but he said the post still does most of the processing.

Spangenberg said the JPOM falls under the command of the U.S. Atlantic Command, and the JPOM works as a joint provider and trainer supporting commanders in chiefs from all over the world with units, personnel and equipment.

It becomes the JPOM's job to ensure that all personnel meet the Army standard, because the personnel are deploying from an Army post, but it is the supported CINC, in the case of Operation Joint Endeavor the supported C'NC is the European Comr and, which establishes the requirements in the areas of training and indoctrination, familiarization, issuance of weapons and specific items of equipment.

The JPOM began operating to provide trained augmentees to work on joint or multinational staffs.

"Our job is to ensure that every individual who deploys as a member of a joint or multinational staff is properly trained and equipped to do his or her job safely and effectively," Spangenberg said.

The JPOM currently operates with several liaison members from the different branches of service, who provide service specific-support because this is an Army post. Spangenberg said because this is an Army post, the post's personnel administrators understand Army regulations, but may not be totally conversant with other services. The liaison members provide a direct line to the other services administration personnel.

When a service member processes through the JPOM, there are several areas they must clear before they are sent on to their duty station, Spangenberg said. The whole process takes approximately seven days to complete, except for individuals going to intelligence billets requiring familiarization with the specific systems, both NATO and the United States.

Some of the training individuals who process through the JPOM receive include both general subjects, which are taught by Fort Benning, and JPOM specific takes.

In addition to the standard training the service members receive, individuals deploying on to joint positions at the peace-keeping mission also receive some additional training in areas such as a NATO overview, instruction on peace operations, the current situation, the liaison representatives duties and responsibi'ities, joint and multinational operations and functional training.

Staff Sgt. Amanda Fink, the Air Force liaison, said she and the other liaisons ensure that the individual service members are truly ready and scheduled to deploy.

"We check things such as confirming that they will have a valid billet, (which is a Navy term meaning a duty position), ensuring they're medically and dentally qualified for service, getting all their administrative things are in order, getting their uniforms and equipment, getting them trained to Army standards ensuring they have the proper security clearance and then making sure they deploy on time," Fink said.

Since the JPOM began operating in December and throughout phase one of the JPOM's existence, which was between Dec. 14 and March 5, 488 personnel have been deployed. During phase two, May 5 to the present, 422 individual personnel have been deployed. This includes all four services and civilian personnel form civilian and government agencies.

Spangenberg said the civilians have been processed for duty with the Army and Air Force Exchange Service, the Red Cross, construction contracting and linguistic assistance.

Spangenberg said the JPOM tries to get return information from the individual service members after they arrive at their duty stations and have been in country for 30 days. They give the deployed personnel a survey to try and evaluate if the JPOM is accomplishing their mission. He said the JPOM currently has a favorable rating in the mid-90 percentile, approximately 94 percent.

Spangenberg said the JPOM is the first processing station of its kind designed for multi-service use. He said the concept and design will become the known as the Joint Personnel Training and Tracking Activity when it is published by the Joint staff, the official publication date for this has not been determined yet.

CRC assists with deploying soldiers for peacekeeping

Joint Preparation for Onward Movement

The Continental U.S. Replacement Center, located at Harmony Church, processes soldiers waiting for deployment to peacekeeping missions.

The 381st Replacement Battalion, out of Ponca City, Okla., conducts most of the processing of the full-size units activated to serve, but the unit also works in training the service members in the basic skills they need before they deploy.

Capt. Richard Coutre, the battalion adjutant, said most of the soldiers in the 381st Repl. Bn., have been there since the third week in August and will continue to work on Fort Benning until another reserve unit is activated to replace the soldiers of 381st.

Coutre said during their time of activation, their responsibility has been to process the outgoing individual service members by giving them battle dress uniforms, screening them medically and several other things. He also said they try to make sure the service members have an idea of where they are going and what it is they are going to be doing when they get there.

When a new reserve unit is activated and arrives, some members of the 381st will remain to train the new soldiers coming in.

1st Bn, 38th Inf changes command

By Brian R. Voller
Bayonet staff writer

The 1st Battalion, 38th Infantry Regiment, Infantry Training Brigade, came under the command of a new leader Nov. 15 at Weatherby Field.

Lt. Col. John R. Lee, succeeded Lt. Col. Kevin Conners, the outgoing commander, during the 9 a.m. ceremony.

Conners, his wife, Maj. Ann Wolford-Conners, and their son and daughter, Christopher and Erin, plan to remain at Fort Benning where Conner plans to serve as the chief of doctrine in Building 4.

During the ceremony, Conners thanked the members of the 1st Bn., 38th Inf. Regt., cadre and command staff, and he left the ITB soldiers with some guidance for their military careers.

After taking command of the 1st Bn., 38th Inf. Regt., Lee reflected on his time when he became a part of the unit and what he plans for his command.

"My first assignment with the 1st Bn., 38th Inf. Regt., was my first taste of real infantry operations ... along the D-militarized zone in Korea," Lee said. "Sixteen years later, I get to rejoin the battalion. Now the mission is a little different; we now do initial entry infantry training. Now we send infantry soldiers out to their units to do recon, ambushes and a whole lot of other operations anywhere in the world."

Lee received his infantry commission from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point in 1979.

He served as a platoon leader and a battalion scout in the 2nd Inf. Div., Republic of Korea, in 1980.

From 1981 to 1985, he served with the 4th Inf. Div., Fort Carson, Colo., where he served as a platoon leader, company executive officer, battalion adjutant, battalion motor officer, company commander and battalion operations officer.

He then earned his master's degree from Texas A&M University in 1987 and subsequently served as project officer at the Training and Doctrine Command Analysis Command, Fort Leavenworth, Kan., until 1990.

He also served as battalion operation officer and chief of training, Division G-3, in the 101st Airborne Division (AIr Assault), at Fort Campbell, Ky., from 1992 to 1994.

Most recently, Lee spent the past two years working in the Pentagon as chief analyst for the director of military personnel management, DCSPER and as executive officer for the deputy assistant secretary of defense for military personnel policy.

Lee and his wife, Judie, have a son, Jason, and a daughter, Larisa.

DPS changes name

Defense Automated Printing Service

The Defense Printing Service, the newest member of the Defense Logistics Agency, changed its name to Defense Automated Printing Service.

A recent customer satisfaction survey conducted by the DPS showed that customers rated the quality of the products and services extremely high. However, the research also indicated that the customers wanted even quicker, simpler and more efficient processes to address their needs and expectations.

"We strongly believe that when our customers speak, we must listen — and get it right," said Michael J. Cocchiola, director, DAPS. "All other priorities are secondary. Our new name signals our customer-driven focus and commitment to deliver the highest-quality products and services even faster and more efficiently to our customers through the use of automated technology training. The addition of automated to our name says it all."

In addition, the customer satisfaction research study indicated that DAPS is a name well-liked by the customers because of its shortness, easiness to pronounce, communication of the benefit of increased technological automation and sounding like an action-orientated acronym.

For more information about DAPS and what it offers, contact John C. Davis, director, DAPS, Building 130, Morrison Ave., or call 545-4967.

SOA soldier takes top enlisted spot at SOUTHCOM

By Judith O'Toole
School of the Americas

Combat veteran, leader, manager of resources — the command sergeant major at School of the Americas Command brought these titles with him to his position.

Command Sgt. Maj. Carlos Legoas said he planed to take the experiences acquired at SOA — knowledge of the area of responsibility and a sensitivity for Latin American contemporary issues — with him to his next assignment as command sergeant major of the U.S. Southern Command in Panama.

Before leaving the School of the Americas, Legoas said he looked forward to his new position.

"It will be unique because this is a joint assignment, and I'm sure it will be challenging," Legoas said.

He said leading by example, from the front, remains the most important thing to remember as a noncommissioned officer.

"I think (Army leaders) have given me their vote of confidence by placing me in this position of great responsibility," he said.

Now, he said, he must provide sound leadership and make use of available resources to ensure mission accomplishment. Not only does he not want to disappoint those whose confidences he gained, but he doesn't want to disappoint the thousands of soldiers at SOUTHCOM he will be responsible for.

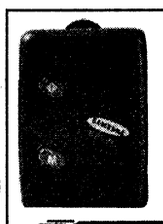
"He is one of the most professional soldiers that I know," said Col. Roy R. Trumble, SOA commandant. "This appointment not only speaks highly of him, but also of the caliber of NCOs at the School of the Americas."

Legoas said the development of the NCO Exchange Program serves as his greatest accomplishment while at SOA. Earlier this year, more than a dozen NCOs from Fort Benning and Ecuador visited another nation to learn from the host's army.

The NCOs of the U.S. military, he said, serve as role models for the NCOs of the world. He told NCOs recently to be proud of who they are and to continue to be positive role models for the junior enlisted troops.

"I have been in many parts of the world during my military career," Legoas said, "and the admiration by others for the U.S. NCO is unequaled."

Legoas served two tours at SOA and possesses strong feelings about the school.



"SOA has contributed immensely to the stability and security of the Latin American countries," he said. "The school teaches U.S. Army doctrine and fosters the democratic values that better prepare other armies to defend their countries against internal or external aggression."

Although the command sergeant major said he will miss the school, the officers, noncommissioned officers, soldiers and civilians at SOA, he said he'll take a lot of memories with him.

"My fondest memory from SOA was participating in the first airborne operation at the school," Legoas said.

He said he folded the SOA flag and wrapped it around his chest and jumped with it close to his heart.

Pumpkin Soup

1 tablespoon light olive oil
1 teaspoon ground cumin
1 teaspoon ground coriander
1/4 teaspoon cinnamon
2 cups diced yellow onion
2 cups fresh pumpkin puree or 15-ounce can pumpkin puree **
6 cups vegetable stock
salt to taste
1/4 cup thinly sliced scallions
1/2 cup toasted croutons

Heat oil in 3 1/2 quart saucepan. Add dry spices, stirring to warm but do not brown, about one minute. Add onion, stirring to coat. Saute over medium heat until onion is soft but not brown, about five minutes. Add pumpkin puree and stock; stir to mix. Bring to a boil. Lower heat to simmer. Simmer, covered, until soup is slightly thickened and flavors are melded, about 20 to 25 minutes. Salt to taste. Pour soup into large bowl. Puree in batches in food processor or blender. Return to pan. Heat before serving. Garnish with scallions and croutons. Makes eight servings.

*Cook's tip: This recipe relies on vegetable broth, aromatic spices and fresh pumpkin puree for great flavor and texture. Although fresh puree and homemade vegetable broth provide the best flavor, if you use canned pumpkin, boost the flavor by sauteing garlic, ginger and one teaspoon curry powder with the onion.

Sausage Apple Stuffing

1/4 pound bulk pork sausage
1/3 cup chopped onion
1/3 cup chopped celery
6 cups dry bread cubes
1 teaspoon finely chopped fresh parsley
3/4 teaspoon Accent flavor enhancer
3/4 teaspoon salt
1 1/2 teaspoon poultry seasoning
1/8 teaspoon pepper
3 tablespoon margarine or butter, melted
1/3 cup water
1 1/2 cups chopped peeled apples
1/2 cup raisins

In small skillet, brown pork sausage with onion and celery. Do not drain.

In large bowl, combine bread cubes, parsley, Accent favor enhancer, salt, poultry seasoning, pepper and margarine; mix well. Stir in water, apples, raisins and sausage mixture, including drippings.

Just before roasting, spoon stuffing into turkey; do not pack tightly. Roast turkey according to package directions.

Makes seven cups stuffing, enough to fill 18-pound turkey.

Traditional Turkey

Turkey
4 celery stalks
2 bay leafs
2 green onions
2 large onions
1 pound. of mushrooms
1 garlic cove
2 teaspoons of sage
4 teaspoons of black pepper
4 teaspoons of salt
2 teaspoons poultry seasonings

Thaw turkey completely to ensure even cooking. Wash turkey and remove gizzard from the center cavity. Put garlic clove on a cookie sheet and bake for five minutes or until golden. (Roasting the clove first enhances the garlic flavor) Chop garlic clove, onions and mushrooms. Place turkey in pan breast side up. Put garlic, unchopped celery stalks, green onions, bay leafs and one onion in center cavity. Mix pepper, salt, poultry seasonings and sage together. Rub seasonings into the bird. Make small cuts with knife all over the bird,and insert seasonings into incisions.

Cover with aluminum foil and bake 30 minutes per pound. Baste often. Remove foil for last 30 minutes and let bird brown. Add remaining onion and mushrooms.

Cook's tip: I always forget to baste the turkey, so I flip the whole bird over twice while cooking. While this makes a really juicy turkey, use caution when turning because the bird is heavy and causes serious burns if dropped.

Choose wines according to meal

By Lisa M. Hibbert
Bayonet staff writer

When celebrating during the holidays, people often serve wine to their guests. When selecting a bottle, certain basic rules apply:

•White wines go best with poultry, fish, grilled foods,

•Red wines go best with red meats, and pasta,

•Blush wines go with any type of meal,

•Champagnes go best with deserts.

Although people rarely deviated from these rules in the past, today, people drink any type of wine with any type of meal, depending on personal preference.

Wines get their unique flavors from what time of year the grapes were picked, the type of storage barrel used, the length of time stored and the flavorings added to the grapes, according to Jerry Jackson, food and beverage manager at the Fort Benning Officers' Club.

Always allow red wines to breath before serving. To accomplish this, open the bottle. Also remember, white wines need chilling.

Egleston Children's Hospital

Unfortunately, children remain especially at risk during the holiday season of parties, giving gifts, visiting and decking the halls.

To help keep children safe, the child safety experts at Egleston Children's Hospital at Emory University in Atlanta offer these holiday safety tips:

Decking the halls

If you choose a live Christmas tree, water it frequently to prevent it from drying out and keep it away from fireplaces and flammable items.

Anchor it to keep it from tipping over, and hang ornaments and tinsel out of reach of young children. Avoid glass ornaments if you're planning to receive young children into your home.

•Keep seasonal plants out of reach of young children — several become poisonous if eaten, such as holly and mistletoe.

•Avoid using tinsel containing lead if you plan to receive young children into your home.

•Avoid using Christmas tree lights with frayed or damaged wiring.

•Never decorate your tree with candles and avoid the "octopus" — too many plugs in one outlet. Repeatedly blown fuses and tripped circuit breakers signal an overloaded electrical system.

•Never try to hide electrical cords under a carpet or rug — a damaged cord can cause a fire.

•Avoid using latex balloons in your decorating plans if young children remain in the home. The gloves serve as the leading cause of infant death by choking.

•Avoid using tablecloths. A child injures himself or herself (and your best serving dishes get ruined) if he or she pulls on the over-hanging edges of the tablecloth.

•Never leave burning candles unattended, even for a few minutes.

Parties

Avoid serving small, round foods such as nuts, hard candies, cocktail wieners, peanuts, popcorn, grapes, small candies and pieces of raw carrots if children under 4 are attending. These kinds of items easily choke a child of that age since they resemble the width and diameter of a child's windpipe, making them potentially deadly plugs in a child's throat.

•Never leave alcoholic drinks within the reach of small children. Alcohol seriously affects children. If you suspect alcohol poisoning, call the Poison Control Center immediately.

•Move hot drinks away from table edges where they possibly get knocked over and scald children. Don't serve hot drinks on tablecloths. Scalding injuries occur if a child pulls on the cloth edges.

•If you expect to entertain several children, consider offering a children's party area with "safe" foods suitable for children, such as cupcakes and fruit punch. Ideally, arrange for a baby-sitter to help organize children's party activities in a separate room away from the adult festivities.

•When the party ends, empty drink glasses and put any alcohol away. If guests smoked cigarettes in your home, check for cigarettes still burning in ashtrays or that fell onto the carpet or became lodged between furniture cushions.

Giving gifts

Avoid toys with small, removable parts for children under 4. Choose large toys that cannot enter and become lodged in the throat.

•Avoid toys with sharp points and glass or metal edges, as well as dart guns or other toys that can fire pencils, nails or other items not intended for use with the toy.

•Avoid toys with long strings or cords, such as necklaces and child mobiles, which cause strangulation.

•Follow labels that give age recommendations. Look for fire-retardant characteristics or flame-resistant labels on fabric products, and washable and hygienic materials labels on stuffed animals.

•Tie plastic from toy packaging in a knot and dispose of it immediately to avoid the child playing with it and becoming smothered.

•Make sure children riding toys with wheels, such as bicycles, in-line skates and skateboards, wear approved helmets, knee and elbow pads and wrist guards.

To receive a free holiday safety brochure, send a self-addressed envelope to Egleston Children's Hospital at Emory University, Child Safety Department, 1405 Clifton Road, N.E., Atlanta, Ga. 30322-1101.

Holidays increase stress; here's how to beat the blues

By A. Bruce Campbell
News USA

For most people in this country, the holiday season brings joy, a time for giving and receiving gifts and good cheer, or a time for reuniting with family and friends. But for many others, holidays remain dreaded.

Depressed people, or people with substance abuse problems, often see the holiday season as a time when all their problems and obligations become magnified.

The "holiday blues," more clinically known as seasonal affective disorder, affects millions of Americans. People tend to drink more and sleep less around the holidays. Conflicts, both at home and at work, become more prevalent.

Many of the people most at risk for seasonal affective disorder include those who buy into society's raised expectations for the holidays. They often feel overwhelmed by others' expectations, both at work and at home, and feel the need to live up to them. They seem busier and obligations — family, financial and social — often pile up quickly.

According to physicians, seasonal affective disorder symptoms tend to surface immediately before the holidays. Often they last into January. This condition requires coping and understanding from the people closest to the sufferer.

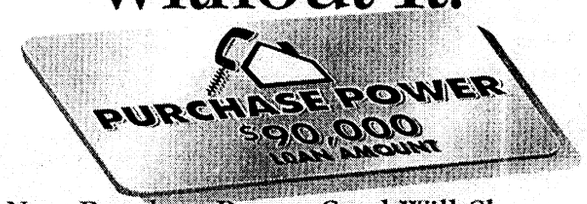
People suffering from the "holiday blues" often appear depressed or unenthusiastic. They become irritable or display unusual anxiety. Food and alcohol consumption often increases.

Some tips to reduce the affect of seasonal affective disorder follow:

•Plan some "down" time or quiet time for yourself. Build time for relaxation into your schedule.

•Make a task list; then prioritize. Complete one or two tasks a day, instead of trying to accomplish everything at once.

Avoid fearing to delegate some responsibilities to other members of your family. Set financial budgets and stick to them.



•Take care of your health. Practice moderation in your consumption of alcohol and food. If feeling stressed, try exercising.

•Engage in heart-felt communication with your loved ones. Focus on the meaning of the holidays and avoid getting caught up in the frenzy.

•Ordinarily, the symptoms of the "holiday blues" resolve themselves, but sometimes they don't, or they become too intense to deal with.

It remains difficult sometimes to understand that a season that brings such joy to millions of people brings turmoil to others. But by recognizing the sources of holiday-related stress and by focusing on how to combat it, each individual becomes able to make this holiday season more enjoyable and meaningful for everyone.

Leaders express thanks

By Terry W. Austin
USAIC Chaplain's Office

Thanksgiving is a celebration almost everyone participates in. We all possess much to be thankful for, and we express this in many ways.

reflections

Young people, as well as older people, seem equally thankful for what they possess. Sometimes it is good health and at other times, it is a well-working vehicle.

Big things, as well as little things, need thanksgiving. Let's focus on people giving thanks for the American soldiers and their families.

The president of the United States continually thanks service members for their sacrificial service and dedication to their duties. I recall, while in Germany, the Armed Forces Network messages from the president and other political figures expressing their thanks for our service. That seemed a blessing.

Countries exist where service members get no respect. American soldiers remain very blessed to live in a country that recognizes the hardships of a service member and gives thanks for them.

The secretary of the Army and the Army chief of staff already sent a message to soldiers and their family members expressing their gratitude for their service. They encourage us to "reflect on the many blessings we enjoy individually and those we share as Americans."

American soldiers serve a grateful nation. The Veterans' Day celebrations across our country encouraged me. Clearly Americans remember all service members and veterans and the population deeply appreciates their sacrifices. Americans give thanks for freedom and for those who serve to protect all the benefits of such freedom.

Fort Benning soldiers serve in a grateful and very thankful city. Columbus and of citizens support Fort Benning and its military members. It remains a beautiful city and always ensures that we possess the privilege to take part in everything that goes on.

The community gives thanks for the military and supports its members in tough times, such as deployments, as well as delightful times.

Indeed, soldiers are a blessed people. From coast to coast, family to family and neighbor to neighbor, the soldier truly gets blessed.

All Americans possess so much to give thanks for. This Thanksgiving, reflect on all the good things you possess. Remember those who give thanks for you. It will encourage you very much.

God gave all of us so much. To some, he gave good health and to others, family.

Give thanks this year. Take some time before you eat that special meal and thank God, our creator and sustainer, for all his blessings and for those who give thanks for soldiers.

Advent season begins Sunday

By Bill Putman
USAIC Chaplain Office

Sunday begins one of the two biggest and most exciting seasons in the church year. It is the first Sunday in Advent.

reflections

Once formally observed in only churches that follow the liturgical calender, Advent, which precedes the Christmas holiday, as Lent precedes Easter, is now celebrated unofficially by other Christian churches.

The word advent comes from two Latin words — ad, meaning to or toward, and venire, meaning to come. Therefore, advent remains a time of coming toward Christmas; of looking forward to the coming of Christ (his birth); and, for some faiths, a time of looking forward to the second coming of Christ. The period begins four Sundays before Christmas.

For some faiths, it remains a time of prayer and fasting. For other groups, it remains a time of preparation for the celebration of the commemoration of Christ's birth. For any Christian, it should mark a very holy time, in which we prepare our hearts for the celebration of Christmas.

Many churches and homes contain an advent wreath made of greenery and five candles. The wreath usually gets placed flat on a stand or a table with the candles standing on and in it. Three purple candles and one pink candle stand on the wreath itself, and a white candle stands in the center. Each Sunday during advent, pertinent scripture gets read and one candle gets lighted. On Christmas, the white Christ candle in the center gets lighted.

Numerous other activities exist for children to participate in during advent to help them understand the season and to prepare them for Christmas.

Whether your faith group officially observes Advent matters not. Christians need to prepare their hearts and minds in whatever way seems appropriate for Christmas and the celebration of Christ's birth.

Christians should know and teach their children that this season is not just the mad rush of Christmas shopping, Christmas plays, Christmas recitals, Christmas decorating and getting ready to go on leave, but a season of spiritual preparation.

va q&a

Department of Veterans Affairs

Q: I was wounded when I bailed out of my plane and subsequently was held a prisoner of war for 10 months. I was marched from one camp to another in Germany for 86 days. After being liberated, I was so happy to get my discharge that I did not make any claims, but now I need medical treatment for diabetes and arthritis. Can VA help me?

A: Former prisoners of war are eligible for hospital care for any disability within the VA health care system. Whether they have a VA adjudicated service-connected disability or not, former POWs are exempt from VA's income "means testing" which governs access to inpatient care for other nonservice-connected veterans. Outpatient and nursing home care may also be provided at the hospital's discretion depending on its available space and resources.

Q: A friend served on active duty in Germany in the late 1950s. He is destitute and may be losing his sight. He presently has little or no health insurance. Would he qualify for any VA medical services?

A: Veterans whose annual income is below certain levels may have mandatory eligibility for VA inpatient care and outpatient care. The dollar limits change annually and are higher for those with dependents. Veterans should apply for care at their nearest VA hospital for a determination of how their particular circumstances and medical condition would fit with these criteria.

Q: For recipients of Dependency and Indemnity Compensation, what are the new rates for those of us in the post-1992 program, and how much extra is being added for each child?

A: Effective Dec. 1, 1995, survivors covered in that program are receiving $810 per month with $205 additional for each child under age 18. Survivors covered in the earlier program (deaths prior to January 1993) are compensated according to the service member's rank.

Editor's note: If you have a question regarding your VA benefits, call the VA regional office at (800) 827-1000.

Bad Boys win championship 12-6

John W. Peeler

Bad Boys' Freddie Dupree weaves through the Rude Boys' defense in the post championship game. The Bad Boys won the game 12-6 to become the post intramural flag football champions.

By John W. Peeler

In a game marred by penalties, the 29th Infantry Regiment's "Bad Boys" overcame an early score in the first half by the 58th Infantry Regiment's "Rude Boys" Friday to capture the Post Intramural Flag Football Championship 12-6 at Doughboy Stadium.

The Bad Boys from Company B, 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment, won the opening coin toss and elected to defer until the second half giving the ball to the Rude Boys from the 2nd Battalion, 58th Infantry Regiment.

The Rude Boys put the ball in play and moved the ball into Bad Boy territory. With a first down inside the Bad Boy 20-yard line, a clipping call on the Rude Boys moved the ball back to the 38-yard line with the goal as the yard to gain.

A false start on the next play cost the Rude Boys another 5 yards, moving the ball outside the Bad Boy 40-yard line. The Rude Boys got the penalty yardage back on the next play when the Bad Boys received a 5-yard penalty on an encroachment call.

On the next play, the Rude Boys got the ball down to the Bad Boys 5-yard line on a broken field running play, but an illegal block on the Rude Boys brought the ball back 15 yards.

Runners compete in Native American race

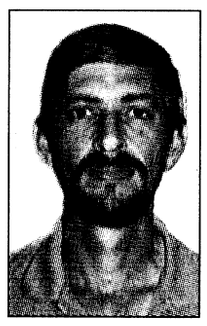
In a tribute to Native Americans, units, soldiers and family members gathered at Doughboy Stadium Nov. 20 to the sights and sounds of Native American heritage at the Native American Five-Kilometer Road Race and Youth Track Races.

The race, sponsored by the Fort Benning Equal Opportunity Office, Community Recreation's Sports Offices and the Training and Doctrine Command, welcomed all runners free of charge to help support Native American Month.

A replica tepee and Native American music welcomed the runners to the stadium with more than 75 soldiers and family members competing in the event.

The five-kilometer route took runners through Main Post and culminated in a final lap around Doughboy Stadium.



Children also competed on a course laid out within the confines of the stadium.

Sports Director Jim Brown said organizers plan to sponsor the race annually with the best finishers receiving TRADOC certificates and category winners also receiving certificates.

Following the race, team trophies went to the top three finishers, and individual winners received Gold, Silver and Bronze Medals.

Bad Boys: Post Champs

brought the ball back 15 yards.

Trying to find a way through the Bad Boys defense, the Rude Boys turned to a passing attack with disastrous results.

The Bad Boys picked off an errant pass, returning the ball to the Rude Boys 30-yard line, giving the Bad Boys the ball for the first time in the game.

The Bad Boys started off their offensive series with a run for no gain. On the next two plays, the Bad Boys pass protection broke down, allowing the quarterback to be sacked on consecutive plays for a total loss of 10 yards.

A holding penalty against the Rude Boys gave the Bad Boys the 10-yards back, making it third down with the point of gain the 20-yard line.

The Bad Boys continued trying to pass the ball, throwing an incompletion. After a flag on the Rude Boys for encroachment, the Bad Boys picked up a first down with a 5-yard pass play down to the 15-yard line.

After a run for no gain, the Bad Boys drew a flag for a personal foul, marching the ball back 10 yards.

On second down, with the ball on the 25-yard line, the Bad Boys quarterback went back to pass and lofted a ball into the end zone. The ball was picked off by the Rude Boys in the end zone, but a penalty on the play gave the Bad Boys another chance.

The Bay Boys, unable to capitalize on the penalty yardage, turned the ball over to the Rude Boys on downs.

The Rude Boys opened up their next drive with a 50-yard run, followed by a draw play for no gain, a pass for 5 yards to the 7-yard line and culminated the drive on a cut-back run for the touchdown, giving the Rude Boys a 6-0 first half lead.

It appeared the Rude Boys would hold the Bad Boys in their end of the field, but on fourth down, a critical holding penalty gave the Bad Boys a first down, keeping the drive alive with 55 seconds left in the first half.

On the next play, the Bad Boys turned the ball over to the Rude Boys on an interception at the 10-yard line. The Rude Boys ran out the clock and went into the half with a 6-0 lead.

The Bad Boys received the second half kick off and, after a return of 15 yards, put the ball in play at the 35-yard line.

The Bad Boys took control of the game with a grinding running game on consecutive runs for 9, 11, 5, 11 and 2 yards, moving the ball down to the Rude Boys' 7-yard line.

On the next play, the Bad Boys got their first score of the day with a 7-yard touchdown pass. The two-point conversion was no good and the game was knotted up at 6 points apiece.

The Bad Boys' defense held the Rude Boys on the next series of plays, forcing a punt.

The Bad Boys took possession of the ball and drove the ball down down the field with a combination running and passing game to get the go-ahead touchdown, making the score 12-6.

The Rude Boys continued to be plagued by penalties and were able drive deep into Bad Boy territory; but, on 3rd down from inside the Bad Boy 20-yard line, a pass over the middle was picked off ending the Rude Boys' chances of a score and a post championship.

At the conclusion of the game, the first-place trophy was presented to the Bad Boys and second-place trophy presented to the Rude Boys.

BASS chapter conducts tournament

By Stephen W. Ward
Special to the Bayonet©

The local chapter of the Bass Anglers Sportsman Society Club of Fort Benning conducted tournament 11 for the 1996 club fishing trail recently at Lake Jordan, Ala..

The tournament fielded seven boats and 13 anglers to do battle with the largemouth and spotted bass on the lake. Local sportsmen also had to out fish another four tournaments being conducted at the lake during the weekend.

The day started with cool water surface temperatures of 60 degrees; but, as the day progressed, the weather warmed and the sun warmed the water to an incredible 65 degrees in some parts of the lake.

The majority of lures used were some type of Carolina rigged soft plastic and jigs with either pork trailers or soft plastic trailers.

The results of the day's contest were:

First place: Dale Courington with 11 pounds and 10 ounces.

Second place: Jack Pines with an excess of six pounds.

Third place: Lloyd Crow with an excess of six pounds, just ounces out of second place.

Big Bass: Lloyd Crow with a five-pound, eight-ounce bass, just one ounce larger than the second largest bass.

The next tournament is the last tournament of the year and is traditionally a mystery tournament. That means the lake is not revealed to the competitors until the night before the tournament.

BASS club officials encourage catch and release of all uninjured, healthy fish caught during tournaments.

For more information on the club, call Steve Ward at 569-5705.

The club opens its membership to all active and retired service members, their family members and eligible Department of Defense civilian employees. Meetings take place the second and fourth Tuesday of each month with one tournament each month.

Shooting sharpens hunting skills

National Shooting Sports Foundation

In hunting, good marksmanship extends not only to personal pride but also ethics and conservation.

Unfortunately, opportunities to obtain sufficient field experience don't come often enough for most hunters to fine tune their marksmanship skills. That's where target shooting comes in — especially the kind designed to duplicate the shots that hunters most likely encounter in the field.

The following suggested activities increase hunting marksmanship. When practicing, try to use the same ammunition, clothing and equipment that you plan to use in the field.

Sporting clays and other clay target games, skeet and trap, offer excellent shotgun hunting practice. Sporting clays in particular hone hunting skills by simulating a wide variety of field scenarios — including shots at running game, such as rabbit and wing-shooting for decoying mallards, springing teal, flushing grouse and darting doves. Targets fly at all angles, elevations and speeds that simulate the real thing, which is why sporting clays provide highly realistic practice for the shotgun hunter.

Combination trap and skeet fields provide useful practice for long-range crossing shots such as those at high-flying dove or ducks. You learn to avoid the natural tendency to begin "tracking" a target instead of quickly swinging ahead and pulling the trigger. Try shooting at the trap targets from skeet stations one through seven. On a standard trap-only field, set up stakes approximately where the skeet stations should be.

Rifle hunters rehearse field shots by firing at hanging pie plates set out at 100 yards. To begin, practice rapidly mounting the rifle in one fluid motion. Is the plate fully visible in your scope the instant you mount the gun? If not, the scope is likely mounted too far away or too close to your eye. Shooting offhand, fire 10 shots in two minutes or less. If you put all 10 in the pie plate, set your sights on the Olympics!

If you miss only two or three times, you're still, according to the experts, an exceptionally fine shot. Even if you get five or six in, you're doing better than the average rifle shooter, but if you score below 50 percent, do yourself a favor and keep at it. If you can shoot well offhand, you'll be able to hit from other positions.

Equipment maintenance is another important part of every ethical hunter's field preparations. Firearms to be used should be thoroughly cleaned, carefully examined for signs of wear that could indicate needed repairs and sighted-in for accuracy. Shotguns should be pattern-tested with the same ammunition to be used afield. A qualified gunsmith should perform any necessary repair work and be consulted before modifications or alterations are made to any firearm.

Select guns with care to ensure adequate and appropriate power for the game sought. When called for, wear blaze orange clothing to ensure field safety, but these garments can fade over time. Replace them if necessary. Also, remember to wear ear and eye protection.

Hunting well serves as a synonym for good hunting. By following the above guidelines, every hunter is assured of a valued experience each time he or she takes to the field. The true measure of the hunt is revealed in the richness of its memories rather than the number of shots fired or the amount of game taken.

How good of a shot are you?

Can you shoot as well as the average hunter? How about better?

To find out, the National Shooting Sports Foundation selected a random group of hunters and had them shoot a series of regulation rifle, shotgun and handgun events.

The shotgun events included trap and skeet. For the pistol and rifle test, participants fired at standard competition targets.

Since none of the hunters had ever shot at these regulation events before, their scores provide a good indication of the average hunter's ability.

To find out how they scored and where you stand with your fellow hunters, send for the free booklet, "Something To Shoot For," from the National Shooting Sports Foundation, 11 Mile Hill Road, Newtown, Conn., 06470-2359.

Ignorance of hunting laws no excuse

By Thomas J. Cain
Director of Public Safety

commentary

When caught, many hunters say, "I didn't know the area was closed," or "This road guard vest is reflective," or some other excuse.

But, ignorance of the law provides no excuse. All hunters must read and heed USAIC Regulation 210-2, Hunting and Fishing Regulation, USAIC Circular 210-4, Hunting Seasons and Bag Limits and the Georgia 1996-97 Hunting Seasons and Regulation.

Since deer firearm season began in Georgia Oct. 26, there have been several violations of the hunting regulation. The two laws violated most frequently include hunting in a temporary or permanently closed area and failure to wear the prescribed hunter orange.

Hunters must check the access maps before hunting. Range Division personnel prepare hunting and fishing information sheets designating open areas. These maps are posted before 9 a.m. daily by activities at several locations and will show the areas that are open for hunting and fishing on the following day.

These maps are located at the following places:

•Malone Range 21, Buena Vista Road;

•Uchee Creek Army Campground and Marina;

•Outdoor Recreation Office, Building 1707, Main Post; and

Georgia law requires that anyone hunting deer, bears or hogs during the firearms deer or bear season or anyone accompanying such person must at all times wear at least 500 square inches of hunter orange visible above the waist. Personnel hunting or accompanying a hunter on the Fort Benning reservation during deer firearm season must also wear a hunter orange hat. Hunter orange will not be taken off while in the hunting area.

All states have hunting laws and regulations. Hunters must read and understand these. Hunting laws provide several functions. Some laws protect wildlife. Other laws provide equal opportunity for everyone to hunt, photograph, or just observe wildlife. Still other laws provide for the outdoor safety and welfare of everyone. Read, know and obey the laws and regulation and enjoy a great sport.

ATHLETES OF THE YEAR

Army shooter, wrestler earn top honors

Paula Randall-Pagán

Theresa DeWitt is the Female Athlete of the Year.

By John W. Peeler
Special to The Bayonet©

All-Army wrestler Staff Sgt. Derrick Waldroup and U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit shooter Sgt. Theresa DeWitt were recently named the Armed Forces Male and Female Athletes of the Year by the U.S. Military Sports Association.

"It's a real honor," Waldroup said.

Waldroup, now the coach of the All-Army wrestling team, competed in the 1996 Olympic Games finishing seventh overall in the 198-pound (90 kilograms) division.

"A lot of hard work has paid off, striving for excellence not only as a Soldier but as an athlete as well."

Waldroup, a native of Chicago, graduated from Berman High School in Midlothian, Ill., in 1976 and entered the Army in 1985.

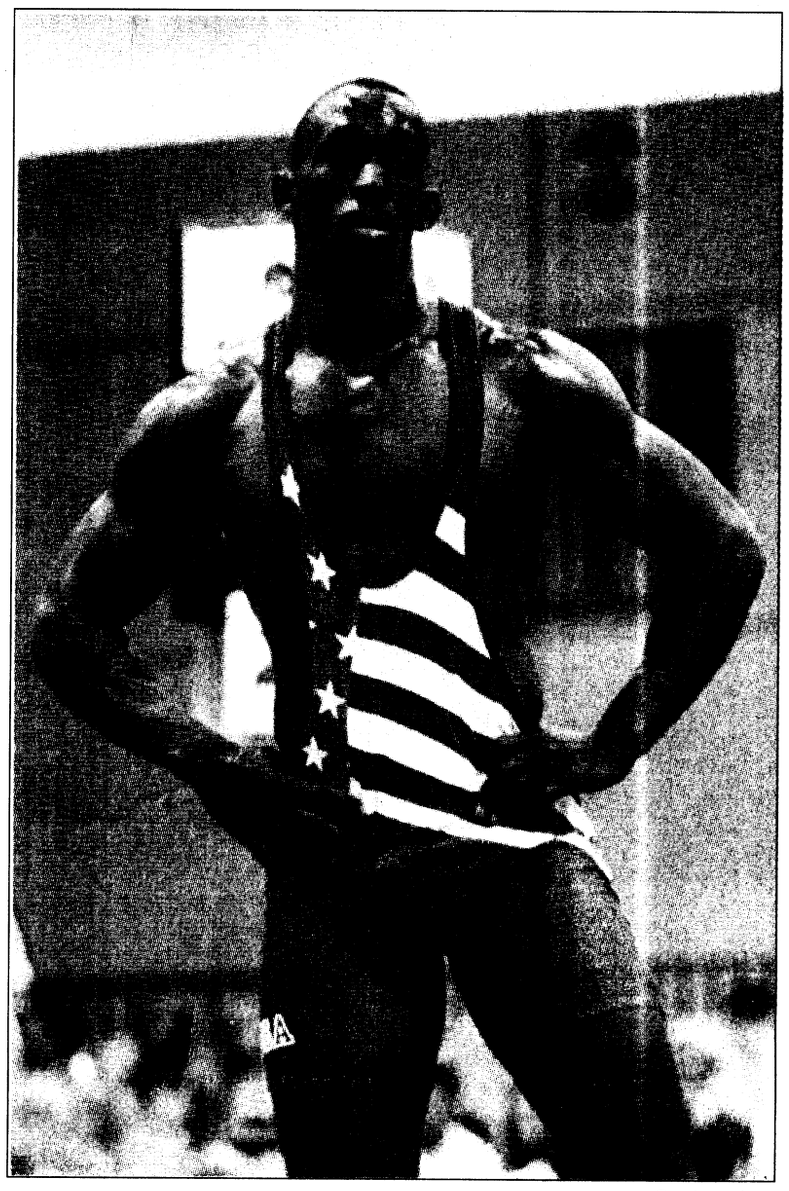
Waldroup's international accomplishments include 1988 World Military Games champion and 1986 Concord Cup champion. In U.S. competition, Waldroup was the 1994 Winter Classic champion; a four-time U.S. Nationals champion (1986-87, 90, 94); 1987 U.S. Olympic Festival champion and owner of 15 Armed Forces titles, eight in Greco-Roman (1986-88 and 1990-95) and six in freestyle (1987 and 1990-94).

Waldroup was also recognized as the Outstanding Greco-Roman wrestler at the 1987 U.S. Nationals and selected as the Army Athlete of the Year in 1987 and 1996.

In college Waldroup was the 1984-85 Junior College National wrestling champion and was a member of the Junior College National wrestling team.

Dewitt is this year's Armed Forces Female Athlete of the Year.

"It is without a doubt the highest honor I have ever received," DeWitt said. "I am very proud to be a part of the Army Marksmanship Unit."



DeWitt was raised in Cincinnati, and graduated from McAuley High School of Cincinnati in 1981 and from Ohio State University in 1985.

"My whole family shoots," DeWitt said. "Dad would take us hunting when we were kids, and it just grew from that."

DeWitt began competitive shooting in 1988 and has numerous shooting accomplishments including finishing fourth overall in the women's double trap competition in the 1996 Olympic Games.

Other competition accomplishments include a Silver Medal in the 1996 USA World Cup; a Gold Medal in the 1995 Pan American Games; a member of the Gold Medal women's double trap team at the 1996 World Cup and set a national trap record and was the Women's National Trap champion in 1993. DeWitt was also named the 1996 Army Athlete of the Year.

Waldroup and DeWitt will be honored by the National Press Club in Washington, D.C. Jan. 23 at an awards banquet.

Doughboys visit post, remember winning

By Lynn M. Bieda
Special to The Bayonet©

Several members of the undefeated Doughboy football team of 1946 reunited at Fort Benning Nov. 22.

While at Fort Benning, the team toured the post and Doughboy Stadium where they played football 50 years ago.

"It's great to see the guys again," William Meek, head coach of the Doughboys, said.

"I think that one of the reasons we were undefeated is the fact that the players were all 18- and 19-year-old kids and that made the team phenomenal and different than the other teams that played here," Meek said. "We always seemed to be smaller than the other teams, and they always had more experience.

"The fact that we weren't college or professional players and we still won all 10 games, scoring 353 points while only allowing 45 points, shows how phenomenal we were," Meek said.

After Meek got out of the Army in 1946, he became a football coach.

"I got hooked after we won the championship," Meek said.

Meek coached at the University of Maryland, Kansas State, West Point, the University of Utah and other schools during his coaching career.

Another former Doughboy, Mel Reabold, coached football and taught high school for 45 years.

"I never thought I'd make this team," Reabold said. "I didn't think I was good enough.

"We practiced every day except weekends and our games were on Sundays," Reabold said. "Coach Meek gave us principles to live by in life and being on the team was a good experience for me being straight out of high school."

USAIC MPs win Stem award again

By Lynn M. Bieda
Special to The Bayonet©

The U.S. Army Infantry Center Military Police Company won the Brig. Gen. David H. Stem award for the second year in a row.

There are three categories in which an MP company can win, said Capt. Michael C. Nason, USAIC MP company commander.

"There is the extra-large category, large category, and small-medium category," Nason said.

"We won the extra-large installation category," Nason said.

The award is based on the size of the installation, its number of missions, its military police support and military police readiness, Nason said.

The U.S. Army Training and Doctrine Command forms a committee that decides who receives the award for the different categories, Nason said.

The Stem Award honors David H. Stem, the late commandant of the U.S. Army Military Police School and chief of the MP Corps, Nason said.

It is awarded annually to the three most outstanding Military Police activities and organizations in TRADOC, Nason said.

It is a voluntary competition in which all 15 TRADOC installations can submit a nomination packet, Nason said. The packet contains information on areas such as: training, physical fitness, military education, reenlistment, foundations of excellence and unit awards, according to Nason.

"Winning this award is a credit to all soldiers, every soldier played a part in helping us achieve this goal," he said.

"Winning this award will definitely boost the morale of our unit and it contributes to our esprit de corps," Sgt. Leland L. Phillips said.

Homecoming welcomes back 3rd ID

By Robin A. Shawlinski
3rd Bde., 3rd Inf. Div. (Mech.)

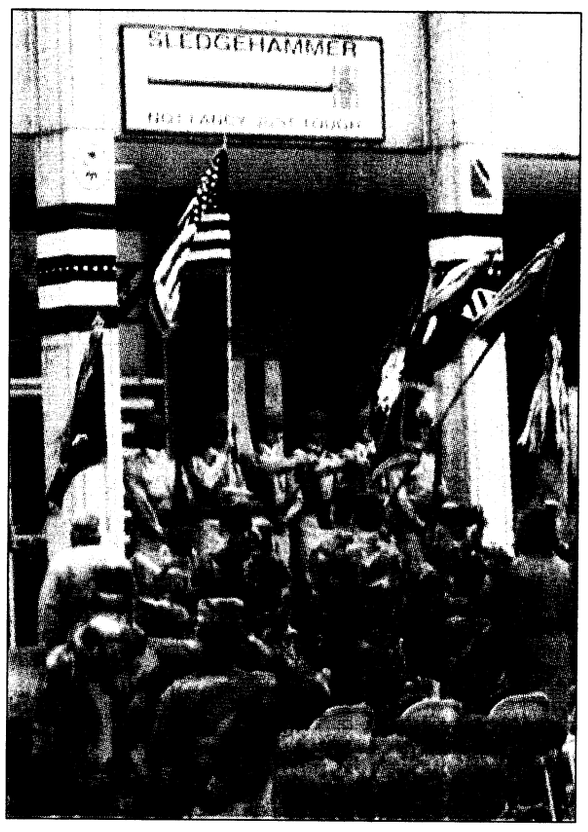
The 3rd Infantry Division (Mechanized) was officially welcomed back to Fort Benning by Columbus and Phenix City during Marne Homecoming Week Nov. 25 through 27.

Throughout the week, Soldiers, past and present, attended the many events conducted to celebrate the homecoming.

The Marne homecoming ceremony marked the official welcoming of the 3rd Infantry Division (Mechanized) since its reflagging in April.

During the ceremony, Columbus Mayor Pro-Tem A.J. McClung and Phenix City City Manager Bobby Gaylor exchanged their city flags with the 3rd Brigade, 3rd Infantry Division (Mechanized) flag, presented by Col. Steven P. Schook, 3rd Brigade commander.

The ceremony marked the Division's return after 38 years and the reaffirmation of the cities adoption of the 3rd Infantry Division during the Auf Wiedersehen ceremony Feb. 12, 1958.



"We are proud to be partnered with two great cities," Schook said to the city representatives. "The flags we exchanged today will stand as physical reminders of this renewed partnership with Columbus and Phenix City. It will be our honor and privilege to carry and protect these flags as we do our National, Division and Brigade colors."

"To the Soldiers, past and present, who have served with the 3rd Division ... yours has been a gallant group," Schook said to the 3rd Brigade Soldiers. "We are proud of you and your record. France, Morocco, Sicily, Italy, Germany, Korea and Saudi Arabia have all known your conquering steps and heroic deeds. This record of your exploits is a monument to our comrades who paid the supreme sacrifice, a bond of comradeship between those of us who served with them, and an inspiration to all who will follow in your footsteps."

The celebration kicked off with the renaming of the 1st Battalion, 15th Infantry Regiment physical fitness field. The battalion renamed the field in honor of Medal of Honor recipient Pvt. William Carson, a musician during the Civil War.

Carson received the Medal of Honor during the Battle of Chickamauga, Ga., Sept. 19, 1863. Carson, on his own initiative, bugled "To the Colors" amid the wavering 18th U.S. Infantry who formed by him and held the enemy. Within a few minutes, Carson moved up the line to the 2nd Ohio Infantry and repeated the call. The bugling deceived the enemy who believed reinforcements had arrived and delayed their attack.

Community life

Fort Benning strives, achieves excellence in Army installations

By April N. Olsen
USAIC Public Affairs Office

Fort Benning is once again in the running for the Army Communities of Excellence award; and, this year, in our first attempt at the Presidential Quality Award, we made it into the top ten.

commentary

First Lt. April N. Olsen says Fort Benning stands as a community of excellence.

"Community" and "quality" mean different things to different people.

I was recently talking with the lady who spearheads Fort Benning's organized effort to compete in ACOE. She said that the sign on the interstate and having that title each year does not mean a thing if the Soldiers and civilians who live and work on post do not believe in it.

Winning ACOE year after year is an impressive accomplishment for the installation, but what does it really mean?

I'm just a regular person at Fort Benning. I don't command a company or battalion, and I don't run any office or directorate on post, but I think I represent a lot of folks on the installation.

I'm a young Soldier, relatively speaking, and this is my first tour. I've been in the Army three and a half years and I live in government quarters. Fort Benning is my first real impression of the Army, and I think it's been a good one.

I consider this a "Community of Excellence" for several reasons.

The Post Exchange at the Main Mall and the Commissary are actually customer-focused. And there are shoppettes all over the place, so I'm not inconvenienced too much when I run out of milk or soda. Most of the employees I run into are nice, polite and really want to help me. The ladies in the Infantry Hall Shoppette are so great, I put them on my Christmas card list.

The Military Police officers who run the Welcome Center are eager to help newcomers to post. The times I've been in there, those Soldiers were eager to be of service. It's comforting to know that the first impression of the Home of the Infantry some receive is such a professional one.

Although I'm very excited about the new Wynnsong 10 Cinema opening on post, I'll be sad to see the Main Post Theater close. The gentleman who runs the ticket sales is such a nice and friendly guy.

But it's not just the folks who are paid to be on post that add credibility to Fort Benning. Many things on post are focused toward making it a great community for those of us who live here. There are fitness centers that offer weights, machines, classes and shower facilities. There's community life centers and youth service centers that exist to offer family members extra things to do. It's a great community.

I have to admit that I really didn't notice all the great things on post before I moved into quarters. And to be honest, before I started working in the Public Affairs Office, I had no idea what kind of great things go on at Fort Benning.

Most people have heard of Santa's Castle and know volunteers donate their time to repair and clean toys for less fortunate kids. But some do not realize that countless military and civilian volunteers work all over post to make Fort Benning a great place for our Soldiers and their families.

Retired Soldiers and concerned area citizens work alongside active duty Soldiers and their families to contribute to food drives during the holidays, coach youth sports, give tours around post, organize charity drives and volunteer at the museum, to name a few.

While they donate their time and effort, they do not ask for recognition or praise. Their satisfaction comes in knowing that they made a difference to someone and that they helped.

It's that spirit of community effort and support that makes Fort Benning a "Community of Excellence."

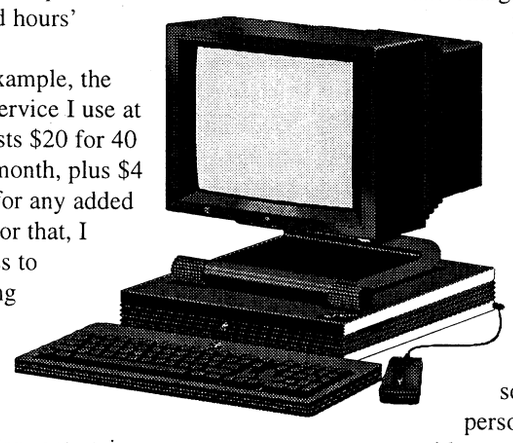
Internet: World Wide Web explanation

By Douglas J. Gillert
American Forces Press Service

Scan the magazine ads or watch the TV commercials and you'll begin to notice a common denominator — nearly all carry small print at the bottom that looks something like this: (http:/www.buynow.com).

commentary

These letters and symbols represent the product's or company's Uniform Resource Locator, or Internet address. They indicate the presence of the advertiser on the Internet's rapidly expanding World Wide Web.



The web, of course, isn't only for advertisers. News organizations, educational institutions and entertainment companies use it, as does the federal government, including the Department of Defense. But don't take my word for it; see for yourself (http://www. dtic. mil/defenselink/).

"Whoa! Not so fast," you say. "How do I get there?"

You need a computer, of course — one equipped with a modem and telephone line. Then, you need software that knows how to call up a web server. The most common ways of accessing the web are through either a commercial on-line service or an Internet service provider.

On-line servers, such as America Online and CompuServe, offer membership in private networks. Members typically pay a basic monthly fee for a set number of hours of on-line usage and agree to pay so much per hour for added hours' usage.

For example, the on-line service I use at home costs $20 for 40 hours a month, plus $4 an hour for any added hours. For that, I get access to everything the web offers and to the information, entertainment, product offerings and can send and receive electronic mail worldwide. By agreement, the service bills my credit card directly.

On-line services offer a raft of their own sites and only recently began offering members full World Wide Web access. Check the fine print before signing on to know exactly what you're getting. If you can, take advantage of trial offers.

Most on-line service companies offer the first month and up to 10 hours' free use. Examples include America On-Line (http://www.aol.com) and CompuServe (http://www.compuserve.com), both $9.95 per month, including the first five hours' access.

To bypass all the proprietary stuff on-line services provide — and charge you for — you may go instead with an Internet service provider that connects you to the Internet. What you can get ranges from bare-bones access to an e-mail account, software and a personal home page with storage space on the provider's computer network.

Bare-bones examples include the various national phone companies' Internet service plans, generally about $20 a month for five to 10 hours, available in major metropolitan areas. For a list of other commercial Internet service providers, point to "The List" at http://thelist.iworld.com. Also, try looking at "computers" or "Internet services" in the Yellow Pages of your phone book.

Whatever service you select, make sure your modem doesn't slow you down. I recommend at least 14,400 bits per second speed, but with what today's offerings, even that can make cruising the web slower than a rush hour commute.

Remember, the web is a graphical environment, including not only text but full-color images, video, 3D and animation. The faster your modem, the faster you'll cruise.

Much faster modems are commercially available and relatively inexpensive. My advice: Go for as much speed as you can afford. It will make your Internet travel a lot more enjoyable.

For more information on web servers and trial memberships, consult a computer magazine or visit a computer software retailer. In addition, the information systems folks in your organization may be able to help you get connected at work.

3ID: Hails heroes

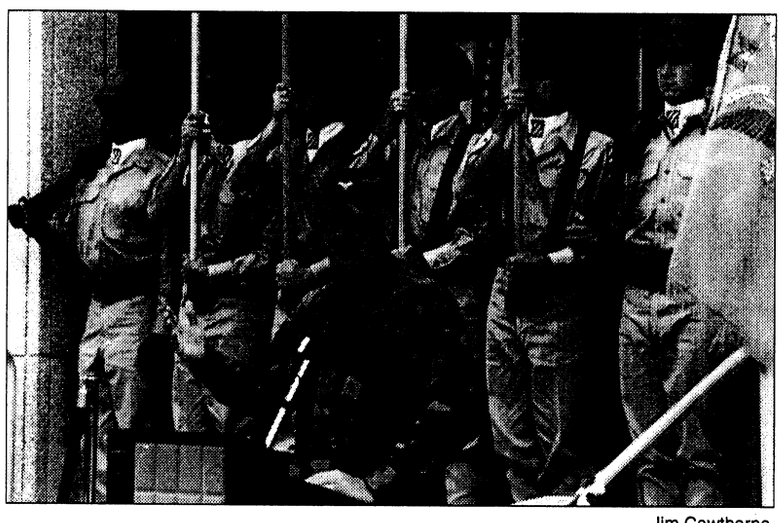
As a tribute to Carson, a civil war re-enactor wearing the uniform of the Confederacy, stood midfield and sounded "To the Colors" imitating the actions of Carson's efforts.

After the field's renaming, the celebration moved to the battalion headquarters for the official opening of the China Room. The China Room houses more than 500 trophies, photographs and artifacts acquired during the Regiment's 26-year stay in China.



Nov. 26 marked the dedication of the Truscott Center, once the abandoned theater building on Kelley Hill.

The building now houses the brigade re-enlistment office, the brigade consolidated mail center and a state-of-the-art classroom to conduct high-tech briefings. The interior also features photographs of the division's history and a Medal of Honor wall of those Soldiers from the units under the current 3rd Brigade.

The center was dedicated in honor of Gen. Lucian K. Truscott, Jr., a former 3rd Inf. Div. commander.

Truscott commanded the 3rd ID from March 1943 to Feb. 1944. As commander, he led his troops through the landings in Sicily, Salerno and Anzio, and the capture of Palermo and Messina.

"Through his 'lead from the front' attitude and genuine concern for his unit and its mission, Gen. Truscott truly embodied the spirit of the 'Rock of the Marne.' Therefore, we pay tribute to him today by naming this facility in his honor," Schook said during the dedication.

Jim Cawthorne

Col. Steven P. Schook speaks at the Truscott dedication.

Other events included a boxing smoker Nov. 26, and Nov. 27 with a brigade run and a golf tournament.

While the events were open to present-day 3rd Brigade Soldiers, past 3rd ID Soldiers also came to celebrate the homecoming.

"I wouldn't have missed this," said Medal of Honor recipient retired Col. Charles P. Murray, "and to be present during (the Marne Homecoming Ceremony) was an honor.

This event indicates how close the cities are with us and how the Soldiers are to the 3rd ID."

The 15th Inf. Regiment honorary sergeant major, retired 1st Sgt. Jerry Cunningham, echoed the sentiment.

"The esprit de corps within all the units is fantastic," Cunningham said. "I'm so proud the Soldiers of today continue to carry on the traditions and how the unit is still pressing forward."

Cunningham said the greatest thing was being able to see the 3rd ID back home at Fort Benning.

where two Fort Benning teams were vying for the post flag football championship, John Hoefling, a back-up center who went on to become a major general turned to Piros and said, "I never did get over the butterflies before each game."

"Neither did I," Piros said

To help organize the reunion, Bob Piros, another member of the team, phoned Meek.

"Beverly Meek had collected a scrapbook of the season and sent it to me, and I got a lot more information to go on from there," Piros said.

"My next step was to get a hold of West Point, and they gave me the names and numbers of the players from West Point," Piros said. "Then I started using Switchboard — a listing of every name, address and telephone number of every telephone in the United States — which is on the Worldwide Web.

"And so it was from that I started tracing people," Piros said. "We started in March and in September, we were still locating people.

"I have seen all but two of the players in these past 50 years. I was very surprised at how many people showed up."

Surveying the 32 former players and their spouses, Meek noted the spirit of 50 years ago remained alive.

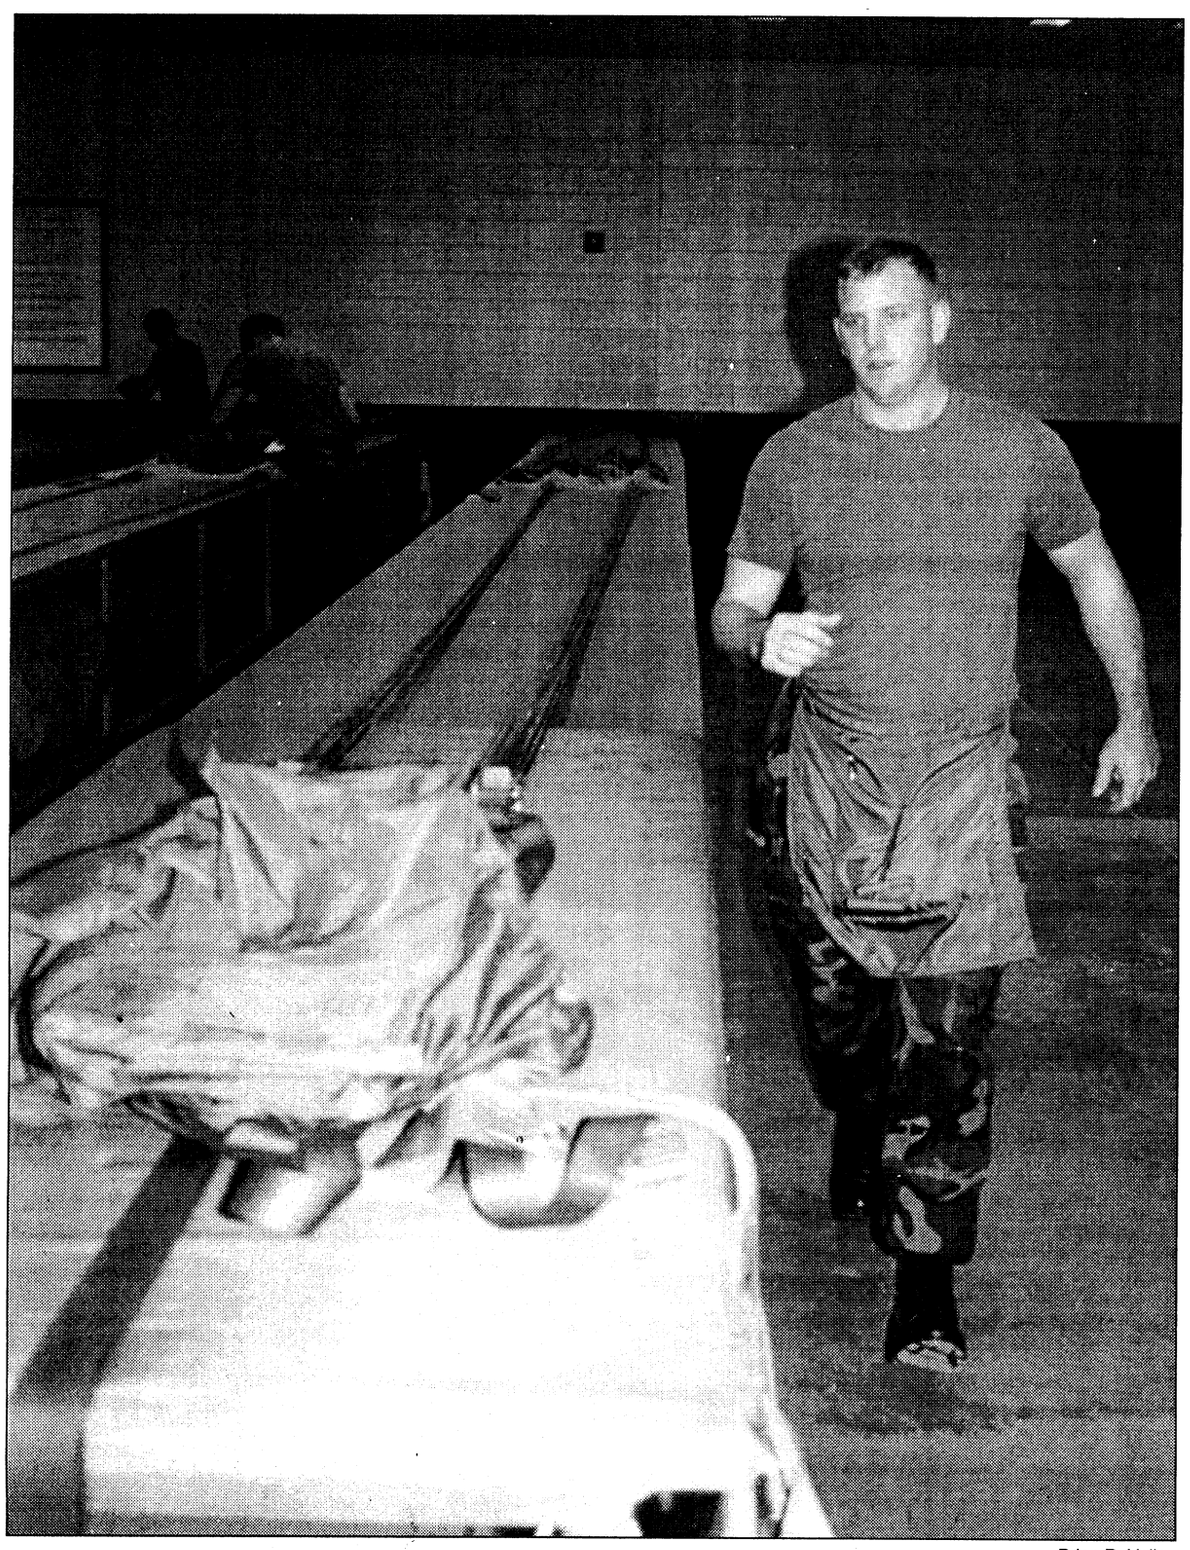
RIGGER RODEO

Airborne Soldiers test skills

By Brian R. Voller
Bayonet staff writer

Twenty-seven riggers from Company E, 1st Battalion (Airborne), 507th Infantry, 11th Infantry Regiment, battled it out to find the top rigger and the top rigger team in the company during Fort Benning's first Rigger Rodeo.

Sgt. Patricia Burdette, proved the top individual competitor of the rodeo finishing the competition in first place. As a reward for winning, Burdette received a gold braid to wear, an Army Commendation Medal and the opportunity to switch to a different job and platoon if she wishes.



The team consisting of Spc. Maurice McVey, Pfc. Rebekah Champouillon and Burdette took the title of the top rigging team and earned Army Achievement Medals.

In addition to the overall winner and the team winner, every Soldier who competed in the Rigger Rodeo received a medallion and a ribbon.

During the two-day competition, the riggers tested on nine different stations including a physical fitness test and a written exam. During the testing phase, the riggers tested on rigging a rucksack, recovering a cargo parachute from a drop zone, determining the condition of air drop equipment, rigging supplies for an air drop, packing a parachute, and inspecting a parachute and a reserve chute that hadn't been used.

All of the Soldiers where given a specific time period to complete their task, with the more difficult tasks being allotted more time.

Sgt. 1st Class Marshall Ford, platoon sergeant, said the competition was good because it developed esprit de corps and because all of the participants were able to test and evaluate their skill levels.

New TRADOC CSM plans for future Army

TRADOC News Service

FORT MONROE, Va. — Training and Doctrine Command's newest command sergeant major helps to ensure that Soldiers and noncommissioned officers possess the skills and knowledge to operate weapons systems designed for the 21st century Army.

"That's a challenge in itself," said Command Sgt. Maj. James C. McKinney. "We're going into the 21st century. A lot of our technology and how we employ weapons systems will change."

The position of the training NCO for the Army brings surprises for him. "There's just a lot to do here," he said.

McKinney arrived at TRADOC headquarters Aug. 25. He has yet to travel to most of the training centers and installations within the command.

"I have purposely stayed away from most of the installations until after we had our first TRADOC commanders conference," he said.

At his request, Gen. William W. Hartzog, TRADOC commander, included all the command's top sergeants major in the commander's conference at Fort Sill, Okla., in October.

"We got a lot of good comments from both commanders as well as sergeants major," McKinney said. "The sergeants major had an opportunity to vote on some of the issues that came up.

"I told all the sergeants major you have the right and the authority to communicate to anyone you want to about issues," he said. "Since I have done that, I have gotten more than my share of e-mail, and I mean that positively."

One of McKinney's least pleasant jobs is being a member of the recently-formed sexual misconduct task force at TRADOC headquarters.

"In some cases, to make a mistake and not know the rules would be acceptable," he said. "But we have some drill sergeants who decided to do what they wanted to do, and they know what the rules are. That is not acceptable."

McKinney pointed out that all NCOs know the rules regarding fraternization with junior Soldiers, male and female. The rules are emphasized during drill sergeant and instructor training.

"I'm here today as a result, I would like to think, of what my drill sergeants did for me," he said. "They were hard as nails to me; but, for the most part, I think all of them were fair and up front with me.

The command sergeant major said he remains upbeat about his new job, especially after meeting commanders and command sergeants major from around TRADOC.

"We've got a lot of sergeants major who have a lot of energy," McKinney said. "My challenge is to focus that energy to take care of people and Soldiers, and make sure our institutional training is what the Army needs for the 21st century."

IOBC trains with service weapons

By Tyler J. Oxley
Infantry Officer Basic Course

No sooner had the targets appeared than a short burst of rounds exploded down range from the M-60 machine gun, knocking the targets back down.

This was the scene as students from Company B, 2nd Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment, Infantry Officer Basic Course, took part in crew-served weapons training during the week of Nov. 18 to 23. The week focused on familiarization with the M-60 machine gun, M-249 squad automatic weapon and the M-2 Browning.

Each day began with a road march from Building 74 to Wagner Range on Dixie Road before training began at 8:30 a.m. The company divided into two sections with each section receiving two days of training.

During day one of the rotation, students familiarized themselves with the M-60 machine gun. Classes included assembly and disassembly of the M-60, range cards and application of immediate action. A class on the M-2 Browning, a weapon few of the students were familiar with, drew the most attention. The class included the breakdown and assembly of the weapon and setting the head space and timing.

At the conclusion of the day, each student approached the firing line and shot a 100-round belt through the M-60 as silhouettes sprung up.

"It was nice to work with a weapon other than the M-16 for once," said Tim Maddrey, an IOBC student. "I particularly liked the M-2 familiarization," he said.

On day two of the rotation, students became familiarized with a weapon they will see at the squad level, the M-249 squad automatic weapon. Classes were taught on the breakdown and assembly of the M-249 and the application of immediate action. Time in the schedule also allowed for a class on the employment of the Claymore mine.

Once again, at the conclusion of classes the students took to the firing line where they put 100 rounds down range through the M-249.

For many, this served as their first opportunity to fire live rounds from both the M-60 and M-249.

"This is really excellent training," said Mark Olsen, an IOBC student. "This was a good experience to really get to shoot the weapons."

Another student said he had never been given the opportunity to fire live rounds from the weapon before.

"I've shot blanks from them but never any real rounds," Michael Meyers, a National Guardsmen from Pennsylvania said. "This training will really help me in becoming more proficient with the weapons that will be used by the platoon."

Much of the instruction covered tasks the students receive testing on when they undergo common tasks testing later in the cycle. Immediate action on the M-60 and M-249, as well as the claymore, are tasks covered and tested on. The training offered an opportunity to get hands-on experience.

Range noncommissioned officer in charge Sgt. 1st Class Paul Capp from Co. B, 2nd Bn., 11th Inf. Regt., underscored the importance of learning about the crew-served weapons.

"It is important that the students familiarize themselves with the weapons systems that their Soldiers will use," Capp said. "If they are going to be responsible for training within the platoon, then they need to know how to use the weapon just as the Soldier does."

He continued by saying the M-249 is the primary automatic weapon used to support the squad; the M-60 is employed to support at platoon level. The M-2 is usually found mounted on a vehicle, but can be ground mounted on a tripod.

Before the road march back, students broke out their cleaning kits and cleaned the weapons, giving them a further opportunity to familiarize themselves with the disassembly and assembly.

IOBC Class 1-97 began training Oct. 27 and graduates March 7.

SAFETY on the front line

NCO's risk management

The noncommissioned officer serves as the first line of defense for safety in tactical operations, unit training and on- and off-duty recreational activities. The NCO corps will implement and execute the best force protection safety program through the following NCO risk management safety goals and objectives.

Goal no. 4

Noncommissioned officers will ensure service members operate military vehicles safely.

Objectives

1. NCOs will ensure service members treat all military vehicles as extremely dangerous. Unit vehicle safety programs will include:
- •speed limits
- •NCO supervision
- •PMCS
- •load plans
- •assistant driver responsibility
- •seat belts
- •vehicle limitations
- •passengers vs. equipment load limits
- •defensive driving course
- •safety straps
- •procedures for emergencies
- •authorized routes and off limit areas

ITB company executive officer receives ARCOM for saving life

By Brian R. Voller
Bayonet staff writer

Recently while driving to visit a friend in Enterprise, Ala. the executive officer of Company C, 2nd Battalion, 54th Infantry Regiment, Infantry Training Brigade, saved the life of an injured man trapped inside a wrecked automobile.

First Lt. Kurt W. Page said he was driving to Alabama to visit his friend 2nd Lt. Fred D. Heer, when he saw several vehicles and people standing alongside the road he was driving on.

Page said as he approached the vehicle, it became evident to him that a serious traffic accident had occurred. When he pulled up to the accident, he realized the driver of a white station wagon remained pinned inside the vehicle and the vehicle had caught fire.

First Lt. Kurt Page received an Army Commendation Medal for saving a life.

"The car was on fire, or at least the car battery was on fire," Page said. "What happened was that this little station wagon went right under a bigger truck, which buckled the hood and took the top of the battery off.

"The battery was still hot because the car was still running and the cloth liner on the hood had fallen around the battery and caught fire."

Page said he returned to his vehicle and retrieved his leatherman tool, which he used to cut the positive battery lead and then used dirt to extinguish the fire.

After extinguishing the fire, Page realized the driver of the vehicle was gaining and losing consciousness and releasing the brake pedal. Page said the damaged vehicle was on the right shoulder of the highway and facing down a ditch.

"I was afraid with how the driver kept releasing the brake pedal, that the vehicle would eventually roll down the hill," he said, "so I placed the car's spare tire behind the rear wheel to stop the vehicle from rolling down into the ditch."

After ensuring the vehicle was safe, Page said he moved to the injured man inside the vehicle and began to render first aid. Page said he tried to get one of the onlookers to assist him, but they declined citing a fear of catching AIDS.

"I moved to the injured man and evaluated his vitals," Page said. "After further evaluation, I discovered he had a puncture wound to the left side of his forehead, which was bleeding profusely and numerous lacerations to the right arm ... I inspected the puncture wound on his forehead, and I realized pieces of glass had landed in the wound after impact. I removed the pieces of glass and used my T-shirt to control the bleeding."

Page said he did not attempt to move the injured man because he appeared to be stable and he feared he may have a neck or back injury.

One of the onlookers, Page said, informed him that the police had been called and were on their way. Page said he told someone else to call the police and inform them that the "Jaws of Life," a rescue device, would probably be needed to remove the man.

Page said he stayed with the man and assisted the paramedics in stabilizing and removing the injured man.

Page said he learned the injured man's name was Kenneth Hatley, a 36-year-old Army reservist. Later that evening, Page said he called the emergency room and learned that Hatley had just gotten out of surgery and his prognosis was good.

Because of his efforts, Page received an Army Commendation Medal at the Commanding General's Monthly Retreat Ceremony.

CID investigates military crimes

By Lynn M. Bieda
Special to The Bayonet©

Last year, 34 sets of night-vision goggles were stolen from the 75th Ranger Regiment.

Officials called in the U.S. Army Criminal Investigation Command and the goggles were recovered.

"We are the Army's version of the FBI," Jody L. Taylor, the economic crime coordinator for CID at Fort Benning, said. "We investigate felony crimes against or involving Army personnel and work almost every type of crime — larceny, homicide, solicitation, forgery, assault and robbery, for example.

"You name it, we do it all. We work with just a little bit of everything," Taylor said. "Some recent cases here involve computers. They are often unsecured on desks that are accessible to anyone walking by.

"Soldiers and commanders should be aware of the rise in this type of crime and take the necessary crime prevention precautions," Taylor said.

"We want Soldiers and employees to be aware and protect these valuables items," Taylor said.

Ways to protect belongings from theft include: locking windows and doors and keeping an up-to-date inventory of belongings. Businesses and offices need to keep careful records of equipment, and units need to maintain copies of any hand-receipted items.

Careful, current records often assist in rapid identification and recovery.

If equipment is reported stolen, the first thing an investigative agent often asks is the serial number and model number, Taylor said.

CID gives fraud awareness briefings monthly to help units become more crime alert.

"Everyone in the Fort Benning community should attend our fraud awareness briefings," Taylor said.

"We want to stop crime before it happens," Taylor said. "With fraud awareness training, we call this issue to everyone's attention, remind the public of what they should be on guard against, the potential concerns and ensure it's understood how this can affect units and lives."

The Fraud, Waste and Abuse Monster

IF YOU WITNESS FRAUD, WASTE OR ABUSE CALL CID'S FRAUD, WASTE AND ABUSE HOT LINE 545-7908

Beyond crime prevention and felony investigations, logistical security remains one of CID's main concerns, Taylor said.

"If a unit goes to war and they can't fight because they don't have the logistical support due to crime, corruption and fraud, then the Army can't accomplish its tactical missions," Taylor said. "That's basically our job — we make sure units have their equipment if and when they deploy," Taylor said.

CID is a worldwide command that currently has agents performing logistics security missions in Bosnia, Taylor said.

If anyone in the Fort Benning community knows of any fraudulent actions, call CID's fraud hot line at 545-7908.

Conferees exchange training ideas

By Judith O'Toole
School of the Americas

The U.S. Army Infantry Center served as host to the sixth Training and Military Education Conference Nov. 18 to 22 at the School of the Americas.

SOA served as the executive agent of the conference that featured a wide range of training and educational issues that were developed and discussed.

Attendees of the TMEC included chiefs of training from the Conference of American Armies, Command and General Staff College commandants, observer nations and other organizations with Latin American interests.

"We are gathered here this week to exchange ideas — ideas on how we can better our armies in security and defense of the hemisphere," said Maj. Gen. Carl F. Ernst, Fort Benning Commanding General.

"This is no easy task, nor should it be," he said. "For, as professional men and women at arms, our countries have entrusted us to support the democratic processes."

The TMEC remains one of six preparatory conferences before the Conference of American Armies. The CAA, formed in 1960, is a series of bi-annual meetings among the chiefs of armies in the western hemisphere, said Capt. Brenda L. Bonk, TMEC officer in charge. There are 16 member nations, 10 observer nations and two observer organizations of the CAA.

TMEC allows the chiefs of training of the member armies to meet, share ideas and develop resolutions for the next CAA Commanders' Conference, planned for November 1997 in Quito, Ecuador.

This year's TMEC theme focused on "activities for security and international peace within the framework of a democratic society."

Ernst said that while our armies must remain prepared to protect our nations and people, in the interim, we must be able to complete missions other than war — disaster relief, peacekeeping, medical assistance and counterdrug operations.

Representatives from each nation spoke about how the following topics will effect their nation's armies in the future.

The main topics of the conference included:

•Consideration of the military and environmental factors involved in humanitarian missions;

•Distance learning;

•Integration of reserve personnel and units into the activities of active-duty units;

•Development of a civilian and military education plan for active military personnel of the American Armies;

•Training for the combat Soldier in operations other than war; and •Higher military education.

Also during the TMEC, some of the attendees traveled to SOA's Helicopter School Battalion at Fort Rucker, Ala., to observe training, while others were briefed and watched training at the Night Fighting Training Facility at Fort Benning.

The TMEC's objective is to exchange training ideas on items of mutual interest, with emphasis on increasing the collective efficiency of military education necessary to assure the security and defense of the hemisphere.

Ernst said that our training must be the best; it must be exact.

"Our Soldiers must know the techniques, tactics and procedures needed to ensure mission success," he said. "They must remain battle-focused and our units must ensure that individuals and collective training is conducted to standard."

At the end of the conference, the experts, who attended the TMEC, will present their ideas for the training of the American armies. These recommendations get forwarded to the CAA Commanders' Conference for final resolutions.

Ernst said the conference focused on cooperative development, international peace and bettering democratic societies.

BOSS improves life for singles

Better Opportunities for Single Soldiers

What is BOSS, or the Better Opportunities for Single Soldiers program?

"What the word BOSS means to just under 4,000 single Soldiers stationed at Fort Benning is an opportunity to improve their overall quality of life," said Spc. Michael T. James, former Better Opportunities for Single Soldiers program president.

Department of the Army officials designed the program to improve the quality of life for single Soldiers. Officials saw the need for such a program that can enrich the lives of today's single Soldiers.

The BOSS program supports quality-of-life issues and concerns by recommending improvements through the chain of command, James said. The program remains a valuable tool for the chain of command to use in identifying ways to improve Soldiers' lives.

"BOSS gives Soldiers the opportunity to participate in and contribute to the local communities as well as their respective organizations," He said.

Participating in the BOSS program allows single Soldiers to meet other Soldiers, to take action in improving the single Soldiers' quality of life — on post and off, James said.

BOSS program officials plan social events, too, he said. It's about single Soldiers meeting other Soldiers, local people in the community and having fun. It's about taking advantage of events provided on Fort Benning and in the surrounding community.

AIDS • SIDA • AIDS • IN ANY LANGUAGE IT MEANS DEATH • AIDS • SIDA •AIDS

abstinence

By Lisa M. Hibbert
Bayonet staff writer

Often times, abstinence gets looked upon negatively, but abstaining from sex until married remains the smarter way, according to Chaplain (Maj.) Gary Moore, the U.S. Army Infantry School chaplain.

"When I think of abstinence I think of two "I" words — identity and intimacy," Moore said.

"Identity is who you are to yourself and who you are to other people.

"Whenever we make choices, it affects our identity. We choose who we will be intimate with in terms of our identity. I believe that we only have one identity — there is no ethnic identity or protestant identity because when it comes to AIDS you are a human being and you start from there — from within. It forces you to evaluate who you are and where you are going."

> "When it comes to an AIDS diagnoses, you are a human being and you start from there — from within."
> — Chaplain Gary Moore
> U.S. Army Infantry School chaplain

Moore believes that although people often seek to get close to others in a sexual way, they often fear intimacy.

"Although people may look for relationships or for sexual fulfillment, they are not really looking for intimacy," Moore said. "When we open our lives up to Jesus Christ and decide we want to live as Christ, our identity as Christians is 'in Christ,' which is a very important phrase. It forces you to look at your world view, what you believe in, which brings you back full circle with intimacy.

"Intimacy is total commitment to the Lord," Moore said. "The Lord then shares intimacy with husbands and wives, to include sexual intimacy. Intimacy is supposed to be a spiritual thing."

While some maintain that you must have sex with your partner before marriage, Moore believes that it's smarter and safer to exercise self-control.

"It's so dangerous for people to have sex promiscuously that I advocate waiting until married," Moore said. "Aside from other moral issues, people must worry about getting AIDS."

But addressing the moral issue, premarital sex opens individuals up to more than they bargained for, Moore said.

"What happens to you when you hunt for a partner is it changes who you are," Moore said. "Once you have sex with someone, you will always be related to that person. You'll have flashbacks years down the road of that person and you will have this comparison chart for your wife or husband, which clouds your judgment.

"True intimacy means making yourself vulnerable to another person."

Some of the freedoms we possess in this country also hinder us, Moore said.

"The individualistic nature of our society has become our Achilles Heel, Moore said. "People want self-gratification, but a truly strong individual cares about other people and about the community. Abstaining from sex until married shows caring not only for yourself but also for the other person."

However people contract the disease, Moore said, it changes you.

"AIDS is a horrible disease, whether you get it through birth, intravenous drug use, a blood transfusion or sexual relations," Moore said. "Once you get it, your life takes a fixed path that you can't just turn away from."

safer sex

By Lisa M. Hibbert
Bayonet staff writer

"First of all I'd like to clarify something, there is no such thing as safe sex because condoms don't always work," said Patrice Cathright, AIDS coordinator at Preventive Medicine. "There is only safer sex."

While Cathright believes that the only real safe sex method is abstinence, she said that risks are reduced when a latex condom is used correctly each and every time.

With the rising AIDS rate among teens, Cathright advocates that parents talk to their children honestly about sex and what the risks are with being sexually active.

"You need to be honest with your children when they ask you questions about sex," Cathright said. "If you tell your child that kissing causes pregnancy and they later find out it doesn't, some of your credibility goes too and they may not feel as inclined to come to you with any questions."

> "There is no such thing as safe sex because condoms don't always work. There is only safer sex."
> — Patrice Cathright
> Preventive Medicine

While parents do not need to get graphic in their descriptions, Cathright says that a basic talk suffices. By beginning these discussions early, while the child is still impressionable, you can reach him or her before they become too independent and form his or her own opinions.

"You teach them if they steal they'll go to jail: if you have sex, you might have a baby before you're ready to take care of it," Cathright said. "Gauge your discussions on the maturity of the child, but you should talk to them before they reach puberty. Parents need to let their kids know what can happen to them now that all these changes are occurring in their bodies."

Although many parents may feel uncomfortable discussing sex with their children, Cathright said that many excellent books exist that parents can use to help them talk with their children.

As far as educating adults goes, Lt. Col. Joann Hollandsworth, chief, Preventive Medicine, said you must give people all the facts so they can make good decisions.

"When you're talking about AIDS, there is no easy answer to give people," Hollandsworth said. "But people need to take the time and really know their partner and use condoms if they decide to become sexually active. People need to take a second and think, is it really worth the risk?"

"Although this may not be a popular idea or a realistic one, it's never to late for those presently sexually active too become abstinent," Cathright said. "It's never too late to stop and wait until you're in a committed relationship."

But being in a committed relationship does not always guarantee monogamy. When spouses cheat, they run the risk of contracting AIDS and infecting their partners.

"When people are promiscuous and become infected with a sexually transmitted disease, they then pass it along to their spouses," Cathright said. "If they become infected with AIDS, they're not only compromising themselves but it effects the whole family if both parents die."

"You can't be with your children or with Soldiers 24-hours a day, but you can give them skills, teach them how to use a condom correctly, and hope they make good choices," Hollandsworth said.

SHUTTLE BUSES

Riders need to refrain from vandalism

By Lynn M. Bieda
Special to The Bayonet ©

Fort Benning shuttle buses experience frequent vandalism from teen-age family members, according to Bobby Tucker, chief, Operations Branch, Directorate of Logistics.

"This happened off and on for a couple of years, but this year it has been heavier than last," Tucker said.

"Most of the problems seem to appear in the evening hours, with dependents," Tucker said. "They take their knives out and rip the backs and bottoms of the seats."

"One-hundred-twenty seats were damaged so far this year, and each seat back costs (for labor and material) $45," Tucker said. "That costs us $5,400 this year.

"We have to absorb the cost of the damage when no one is caught damaging the seats," Tucker said.

The military drivers of the shuttle buses receive instruction that if they find anyone damaging the seats, they need to drive their buses directly to the Military Police station where the vandals get taken in and their parents receive calls. The parents must pay for the damage, Tucker said.

"We can no longer tolerate the destruction of the buses," Korin Mason, chief, Transportation Division, Directorate of Logistics, said.

"About 300,000 people use the shuttle buses here each year," Mason said.

"The service is provided for free, and we should hope everyone should appreciate that and take care of the buses, Mason said.

"However, we are prepared to take corrective measures if the vandalism doesn't stop," Mason said. "We will limit the riders to active military ID card holders and necessary Department of Defense personnel only," Mason said.

"We want to let everyone continue the privilege of using the shuttle buses, but we have limited funds," Mason said.

The shuttle bus route goes throughout Fort Benning.

Fort Benning community combats tobacco with a tar war

By Dana K. Renta
U.S. Army Medical Department Activity

For the past two weeks, while students across America returned to their classrooms to learn their math and science lessons, fifth-grade students at Fort Benning schools learned how to battle the tobacco industry and to "say no to Joe Camel."

The war against tar, or Tar Wars, rages. Tar Wars is a nationally based program, founded in 1988, which promotes pro-health tobacco education and received awards from the American Medical Association and the World Health Organization.

Recently, the Uniformed Services Academy of Family Physicians, Health Promotions Committee, established a chapter with Martin Army Community Hospital's Family Practice Residency Program, coordinating the campaign throughout the Department of Defense school systems. Classes begin this winter within the local civilian school system.

"The best way to prevent tobacco-related death and disease is to never start smoking," said Col. Everett W. Newcomb III, Martin Army Community Hospital commander. "The Tar Wars Program provides needed education to children at a time when they are most vulnerable."

The battle is not simple. The weapons chosen by the tobacco industry include clever advertisement on highway billboards, racing cars and T-shirts. Children get bombarded with pro-tobacco images in the movies and magazines.

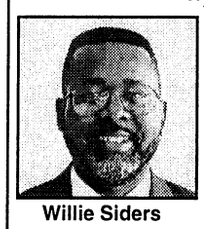
According to Morbidity and Mortality, a weekly medical report, about 90 percent of people who start smoking tobacco are less than 18 years old and the number is increasing. By the age of 10, 30 to 50 percent of children experiment with tobacco products and approximately 20 to 24 percent of 15-year-old children smoke regularly.

Tobacco companies realize the trend, targeting nearly $4 billion annually on advertising to children. Children younger than 12 seem more likely to become chronic heavy smokers.

Tar Wars is an in-school lesson, conducted locally by Fort Benning family physicians and other volunteers. The lessons teach the long-term effects of tobacco use, refusal skills and understanding tobacco advertising.

Tar Wars' curriculum includes discussions and activities focusing on the reasons why people smoke and the benefits of not smoking. Students get a close look at the cost of using tobacco and discuss other options for money management.

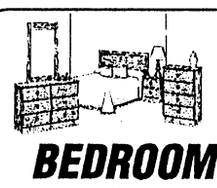
Another activity involves students running in-place while breathing through a straw to mimic the long-term effects of smoking, such as seen in emphysema. Students analyze magazine advertisements and discuss how tobacco companies target teens.



The school visit comes complete with a poster contest where students convey the message of Tar Wars.

Judges for this year's event included Newcomb and Dr. Dell McMullen, Fort Benning Schools' superintendent.

John Williams from Freddie C. Stowers Elementary School, whose message was "Fred's Lifetime Story," won this year's contest. Other winners include Siara Goodwin from Richard G. Wilson Elementary School, second place; and Stephanie Comas from Wilson Elementary School, third place.



Honorable mentions go to Joshua Hollaway, Jackeline McDonald, Jessica Richards and Giquilla Bonds all from Edward A. White Elementary School. Prizes, donated from the Fort Benning Post Exchange included a portable compact disc player, portable tape player, walk-man and videos.

The winner competes in the USAFP annual scientific assembly, vying for a chance to compete in the National Tar Wars competition.

Virgin Mary

Catholics celebrate her gift of faith

By Phil Reilly
USAIC Chaplains Office

The Immaculate Conception comes from the belief that Mary, the mother of Jesus, was graced by God in such a way that she was preserved from sin from the first moment of her existence.

Immaculate thus refers to the absence of sin or stain and conception refers to Mary's very beginning. This belief correlates in no way with the sexual manner of Mary's conception nor with the way in which she later conceived her own child through the overshadowing of the Holy Spirit (the virginal conception of Jesus). Rather, it points to God's graciousness to this woman as she came into the world sinless or full of grace.

The official theology of the Roman Catholic Church concerning the mystery of the Immaculate Conception began with the Ecumenical Council of Ephesus in 431, which insisted on the true divinity of Christ and specified the corollary of Mary as the mother of God.

In 1854, after consultation with the world's bishops, Pope Pius IX declared this belief a dogma of the Catholic Church. In the words of the decree, the virgin Mary was blessed from the first moment of her conception, by the grace of almighty God, and in view of the merits of Jesus Christ the savior of the human race, preserved free from all stain of original sin.

The Immaculate Conception remains celebrated with a liturgical feast day Sunday, ranked as a solemnity. In the United States, this is a holy day of obligation for Roman Catholics, partly because the country remains dedicated to Mary under the title of the Immaculate Conception.

The religious meaning of the Immaculate Conception centers on the victory of God's grace freely given in Christ. Sin remains universal and the whole human race remains in need of salvation. Through his life, death and resurrection, Jesus Christ mediates the saving mercy of God to all sinners prior to any merits of deserving works on their part. Belief in Mary's sinlessness celebrates God's victory over the powers of sin.

To the Catholic imagination, it is fitting that she received God's free and abundant grace because of her role as the mother of Jesus. Her "yes" to God brought into the world Christ, through whom the ancient sin gets overturned.

That God generously graces Mary, enabling her union with God from her beginning even while not removing her from the sufferings of history, is harmonious with divine mercy. It also symbolizes the good news that in the life of every human being, grace is more abundant than sin.

Post chaplains to host men's conference

USAIC Chaplains Office

The Infantry Center Chapel sponsors a men's conference from the Dad, the Family Shepherd, Ministry of Little Rock, Ark. The conference focuses solely on equipping men as champions in the home. Using a concept called father power, DFS teaches men to take hope and become effective leaders in their own homes.

Fort Benning served as the host to previous DFS conferences with astounding impact on those who attended. Many soldiers received the wake up call they needed for their lives. Plan now to attend and get prepared for more involvement with your family, more in tune with their needs and training to deal with the most important mission we ever receive — care of our families.

The conference occurs today and Saturday at the Family Unit Network Center (behind the Red Cross Building).

A registration fee, payable to Dad, the Family Shepherd, is $25; but scholarships remain available to soldiers needing assistance. The Consolidated Chaplains Fund will provide lunch. The schedule is as follows:

Jewish festival Hanukkah signifies burning the eternal oil lamp

By Chana Timoner
USAIC Chaplains Office

Alone among the festivals, Hanukkah tells the story of actual military valor and epic bravery. It focuses attention upon a dramatic crisis in Jewish history when freedom cried out for protection by dedicated people.

reflections

Records of the stirring circumstances that gave birth to the first account of guerrilla warfare in the history of mankind exist.

Alexander the Great conquered the Holy Land during the fourth century B.C. He brought with him both Greek rule and Greek culture.

Hellenization made deep inroads among Jewish officials and wealthier families who sought to gain favor with their rulers. Among them, the Greek language, Greek gods, Greek sports (such as the Olympics), modes of dress and Greek names became fashionable. The Sabbath and festivals were gradually replaced by pagan observances.

Loyal Jews became dismayed to see their own brothers selling out to the conqueror. So, for approximately 150 years, Jewish passion gradually became more intense. A simple spark touched off a war.

That spark was provided during the reign of Antiochus the IV, who became King of Assyria, and thereby ruler of Israel in the year 175 B.C. He boastfully called himself Antiochus Epimanes (the mad man). He remained determined to use Greek culture as the cement to bind the different national groups within his empire.

Antiochus sold the office of the high priest to Jason, the leader of the Hellenistic party. A few years later, he received a larger bribe from Menelaus for the position and he accepted it.

This total disregard for the religious feelings of the Jews brought matters to a head. When rumor spread that Antiochus met defeat in battle, war erupted.

These rumors were untrue, but Antiochus became frustrated by Rome in his attempt to attack Egypt. He turned his rage against the Jews, invaded Jerusalem on the Sabbath and dealt harshly with people suspected of opposition.

A royal edict was proclaimed, forbidding the practice of Judaism under the penalty of death. The Temple was converted into a sanctuary of Zeus, the chief Greek god. Heathen sacrifices were offered on the former alter of God. The sacred temple areas echoed with pagan rites, dances and orgies.

While this sparked the first martyrs for freedom of conscious, the need for more military resistance soon became apparent. In the town of Modin, the banner of revolt got raised by Mattathias and his five sons, among whom Judah towered in military prowess and courage.

"Whomever is for the Lord, follow me!" the aged leader said. The battle for religious freedom began.

Three factors helped bring miraculous victory to the vastly outnumbered Jewish forces of Judah Maccabee and his brothers. They fought on "home territory" and knew their region well. Every cave, path and niche in the rocks remained familiar to them.

Antiochus, in his pride, refused to take the fighters seriously until too late. Perhaps most significantly, they fought with the reckless determination of men and women who understood the stakes.

Losing the war meant the erasure of Judaism. They won because they dared not lose. To the Jewish people goes the glory for winning the first war in history for the precious right of religious freedom.

The victorious Jews symbolized their triumph by cleaning the temple and rededicating it exactly three years after its defilement.

It is said by the sages that the oil for the eternal lamp lasted eight full days, even though it contained only enough to burn for one day.

Here, we find a clue to the destiny of faith. By every standard, people should have "burned ourselves out" centuries ago. Yet time and again, through courage and loyalty to God, they keep the flames of faith and hope alive.

Friends make life run more smoothly

reflections

By Matthew Goff
3rd Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment

My recent move to Fort Benning reminded me of the well-known quotation "No man is an island."

For some reason, my wife and I decided to make a do-it-yourself move. We left Fort Bragg, N.C., with a 24-foot truck, towing a 6-foot by 10-foot trailer, seven bikes strapped on top, followed by a packed-out minivan, leaving behind a 5-foot by 15-foot storage unit filled with all the "treasures" that just wouldn't fit in our convoy. Fortunately, we remembered not to leave any of our five children in storage.

From this adventure, I picked up two new rules for our home — when your family size equals seven, you're too big for a DITY move. Plus a DITY move cannot be accomplished in isolation; you need friends to help.

David Smith, in his book, "Men Without Friends," shares a humorous account that illustrates our need at times to accept the help of others.

"Dear Sir: I am writing in response to your request for more information concerning Block 11 on the insurance form, which asks for 'cause of injuries' wherein, I put 'Trying to do the job alone.' You said you needed more information, so I trust the following will be sufficient.

I am a bricklayer by trade, and on the date of injuries, I was working alone laying bricks around the top of a four-story building when I realized that I had about 500 pounds of brick left over. Rather than carry the bricks down by hand, I decided to put them into a barrel and lower them by a pulley that was fastened to the top of the building.

I secured the end of the rope at ground level and went up to the top of the building and loaded the bricks into the barrel and swung the barrel out with the bricks in it. I then went down and untied the rope, holding it securely to ensure the slow descent of the barrel.

As you will note on Block 6 of the insurance form, I weigh 145 pounds. Because of my shock at being jerked off the ground so swiftly, I lost my presence of mind and forgot to let go of the rope. Between the second and third floors, I met the barrel coming down. This accounts for the bruises and lacerations on my upper body.

Regaining my presence of mind again, I held tightly to the rope and proceeded rapidly up the side of the building, not stopping until my right hand was jammed in the pulley. This accounts for the broken thumb.

Despite the pain, I retained my presence of mind and held tightly to the rope. At approximately the same time, however, the barrel of bricks hit the ground and the bottom fell out of the barrel. Devoid of the weight of the bricks, the barrel now weighed about 50 pounds. I again refer you to Block 6 and my weight.

As you would guess, I began a rapid descent. In the vicinity of the second floor, I met the barrel coming up. This explains the injuries to my legs and lower body. Slowed only slightly, I continued my descent, landing on the pile of bricks. This accounts for my sprained back and internal injuries.

I am sorry to report, however, that at this point, I again lost my presence of mind and let go of the rope; and, as you can imagine, the empty barrel crashed down on me. This accounts for my head injuries.

I trust this answers your concern. Please know that I am finished 'trying to do the job alone.'"

Friends remain important. Take time to build friendships you can count on.

The Bible tells us in Ecclesiastes "There is a friend who sticks closer than a brother." This of course refers to Jesus, God's son. Take time to build that friendship, also.

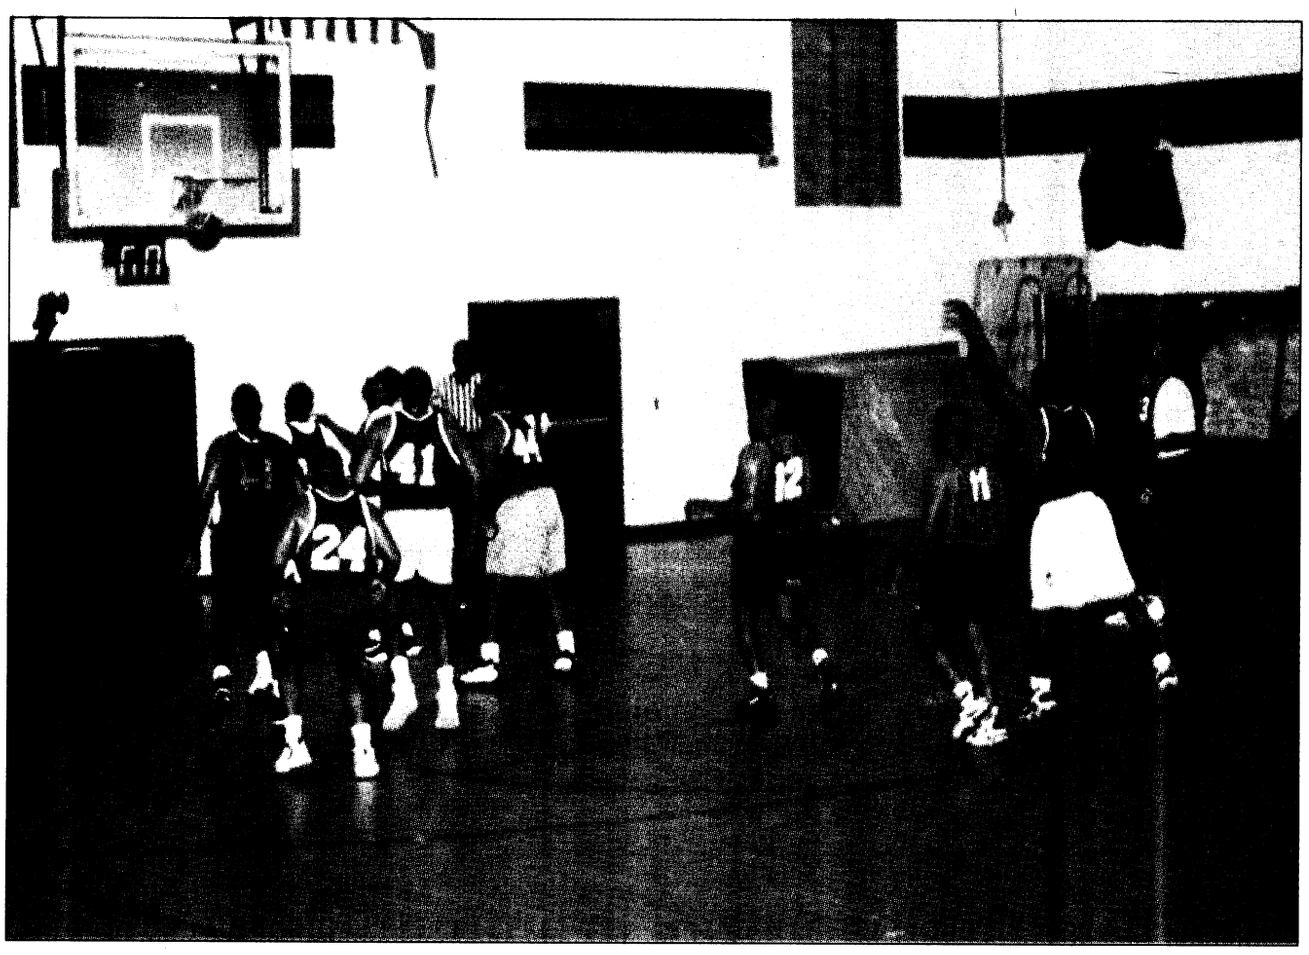
11th Inf Regt wins basketball tourney

By John W. Peeler
Special to the Bayonet©

The 11th Infantry Regiment squeaked past the 36th Engineer Group 42-40 in the final seconds of the championship game of the Native American Basketball Tournament Tuesday at the Audie Murphy Fitness Center.

To get to the finals, the 11th Inf. Regt. defeated the 29th Inf. Regt. 34-28 and the Military Police Activity 48-26.



The 36th Eng. Grp. thrashed the Noncommissioned Officers Academy 57-40 and the 3rd Brigade, 3rd Infantry Division (Mechanized), 37-31 to meet the 11th Inf. Regt.

Both teams used a fast-break offense and stingy defense in the first half. At the buzzer, the score remained tied 12-12.

The scoring leaders in the first period included Alphonsa Thomas from the 11th Inf. Regt. team with five points and Charles Hunter of the 36th Eng. Grp with eight points.

With the second half under way, both teams moved up and down the court with the 11th Inf. Regt. team members hitting the majority of their shots from the three-point area. The 36th Eng. Grp. used more of a ball control inside offensive strategy and controlled the boards for most of the second half.

Going into the final four minutes of the game, each team traded off scoring shots; and, with less than 20 seconds, it appeared the 11th Inf. Regt. would lose the game trailing 40-38.

John W. Peeler

Alphonso Thomas sinks a basket from the top of the key to put the 11th Infantry Regiment ahead in the game for good. The 11th Inf. Regt. went on to secure the victory 42-40.

With six seconds in the game, and time running out, Thomas hit a three-pointer to put the 11th Inf. Regt. team up 41-40.

The 11th Inf. Regt. team put on a full-court press and forced the 36th Eng. Grp. team to turn the ball over.

On the ensuing inbounds pass, Aaron Young drew a foul, sending him to the free-throw line with four seconds left in the game.

Needing a point to ensure a two-point margin, Young missed the first shot. Pressure mounted as the fans cheered with Young stepping to the free-throw line.

Young made the shot, sinking the basket to give the 11th Inf. Regt. the win.

After the game, both the 11th Inf. Regt. and the 36th Eng. Grp. teams received trophies as the first- and second-place teams.

Healthy bodies need some cholesterol

By Linda Kaup
Special to the Bayonet©

commentary

Americans seem more conscious, but not necessarily clearer, about the relationship of cholesterol to health.

Although some experts question whether a high blood cholesterol level causes heart disease in everyone, there is substantial evidence that, in most cases, the connection between a high blood-cholesterol level and heart disease remains as incontrovertible as the link between smoking and lung cancer. The connection seems strongest in people younger than age 50. For young women and everybody older than 50, the link seems weaker, but still significant.

Cholesterol defined

Cholesterol is a white, waxy, fat-like substance. Although we usually think of it only in the blood stream, it actually presents itself in all the body's tissues.

Cholesterol remains essential to life. Among other things, it gets used in the outer membrane of cells, as a fatty insulation sheath around nerve fibers and as a building block for certain hormones.

Despite its importance to life, cholesterol isn't an essential nutrient — you don't have to consume any to stay healthy. In fact, most of the cholesterol in your body comes from the body itself. A majority of the cholesterol produced by the body gets done by the liver — from the proteins, fats and carbohydrates eaten. The body produces about 1,000 milligrams a day. In addition, the average person consumes 400 to 500 milligrams of cholesterol a day in the food they eat.

Cholesterol gets found in animal products, such as meat, egg and dairy products. So, there exists really two types of cholesterol — the kind you produce yourself and the kind that you obtain from foods.

Two cholesterols

Low-density lipoprotein, carries cholesterol throughout the system, dropping it off where it gets used for cell metabolism. Cholesterol carried by LDL not used or broken down by the liver accumulates in the arterial walls. Over periods of time, this condition remains known as atherosclerosis. This often leads to heart attacks or strokes.

The liver makes another type of lipoprotein — high-density lipoprotein. HDL consists of proteins, fats and cholesterol, but HDL carries less cholesterol than LDL.

As HDL makes its rounds in the body, it possesses the capacity to pick up cholesterol and bring it back to the liver for reprocessing. Simply, LDL brings cholesterol into the system so it gets dubbed "bad" cholesterol and HDL clears cholesterol out of the system so it gets dubbed "good" cholesterol.

Many factors that affect your blood-cholesterol level exist; and, some people, no matter how little fat and cholesterol they eat, continue to possess high blood-cholesterol levels because of genetic disorders, diabetes or other metabolic diseases. For most people, diet remains the best defense against high blood cholesterol.

Quality, quantity prevail in ammunition loading section

U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit

Keeping abreast of the constant demand for world-class matches, ammunition for the shooters of the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit seems far from easy. Yet, the soldiers of the USAMU Custom Firearms Shop, Ammunitions Loading Section, said it's a challenge they eagerly face.

Only two soldiers, Robert S. Finch and Charles S. Wittmaack, bear the responsibility for the thousands of rounds produced in the ammunition section each day. Some days, when preparing for upcoming matches, the soldiers load as many as 3,000 rounds, each measured and adjusted to within 500ths of a grain.

The men produce ammunition for rifles and pistols, including: .30-caliber rifles, M-14s, M-16s, 300 Magnums, .38-caliber supers and .45-caliber automatics. The components they use to prepare the rounds remain new. On rare occasions, once-fired brass gets reused.

Finch said that while production reigns as their primary mission, the soldiers must ensure the quality of the rounds they produce remains high. Rounds that fail to meet the unit's standards get rejected.

Quality control for the ammunition section seems much more in-depth than at comparable facilities, Finch said. USAMU's ammunition technicians are checking to see that the quality of the components fits the USAMU standards. Cartridge castings get checked for hardness, dimensions and thickness, while bullets get tested for consistency.

The role these soldiers and their products play in the unit remains paramount to the success of the world-class shooters in competition, Finch said.

"We have to produce ammunition that outperforms the gun, which in turn has to outperform the shooter," Finch said. "That way, the shooter has all the advantages to improve himself that we can offer. The equipment doesn't impede him or his performance.

"If the ammunition produced here isn't up to our standards, a shooter is at a disadvantage."

Maintaining the number of rounds and the high quality demanded sometimes is a tangible pressure the soldiers feel. One-tenth of a grain of gunpowder in a mismeasured round changes the impact of the round enough to cause a top shooter to lose a competition.

"All it takes is one round with the wrong powder charge," Finch said. "That's how important it is for us to do our job."

Despite the constant demand for quality ammunition, Finch and Wittmaack rarely fall behind.

"We constantly forecast what will be needed for the year," Wittmaack said.

Constant communication between the ammunition technicians and the shooters, as well as periodic checks of the ammunition bunker, help keep the soldiers on top of the demand.

"We're always looking for better ways to streamline our production process to improve production flow and product quality," Wittmaack said.

He and Finch constantly test the various components and equipment they purchase and use for reliability and quality. Each product they use gets evaluated for internal purposes to supplement commercially published results.

"We have the luxury of being a completely unbiased organization concerned only with performance," Finch said.

While they do not publish their testing results, the ammunition technicians provide information when requested to the companies that produce the equipment so that improvements can be made, which results in better equipment for them to use in the future.

Manufacturers are not the only ones interested in the USAMU testing results. According to Wittmaack, many other specialized units concerned with accurate ammunition call wanting load information.

"Our mission remains the same," Finch said. "We're trying to find the combination that makes or breaks the game."

Call Harden at 545-6413 or 545-1558 if interested in the job.

Encourage gun safety through education, practice

National Shooting Sports Foundation

Playing ping pong can be hazardous to your health, when compared to hunting.

It seems hunters are very safe sportsmen, according to the National Safety Council's 1994 Safety Facts booklet. It reports that twice as many people get injured playing ping pong than while hunting!

Bowlers receive more than seven times as many injuries as hunters. In fact, in 1994, only 7.6 out of every 100,000 hunters got injured.

These low numbers get reduced even further by using common sense in the field. Hunter education courses usually get offered free of charge or at a very low cost, and contacting your state Fish and Game Department puts you in touch with a hunter education course in your area. There, you acquire skills to become an even better and safer hunter.

Of course, one of the first safety rules for handling any firearm remains knowing how your gun works — read the manual and familiarize yourself with the features of your firearm. Always assume that any gun is loaded. Never point a gun at any person or allow the muzzle to swing around in the direction of people.

If carrying or holding a firearm, you need to assume responsibility for it at all times, which means you need to constantly remain aware of where a bullet would travel, in case the firearm discharges. Making sure no rounds remain in the chamber until just before ready to fire the gun prevents an accidental discharge.

When you finish shooting, unload your firearm and leave the action open. If hunting, load the magazine, but don't chamber a round until you're ready to take the shot. Never rely on your gun's safety.

You need to maintain control of that firearm. When the opportunity for a shot comes, always take a moment to figure out where the bullet will go if you miss your target. Even the humble .22-caliber can send a bullet flying for more than a mile.

commentary

For target practice, choose a spot with a safe background, like a dirt hillside. Take into account the fact that bullets ricochet and pass through walls and brush. Hunters need to always make sure of their target and the background before they ever chamber a round and pull the trigger.

While you maintain complete control over your own behavior when handling a gun, measures exist so that you can make sure that you stay safe around other hunters.

One of the best ways to ensure you never get mistaken for game is to wear hunter orange. Statistics indicate that when hunters wear fluorescent orange, accidents decrease by 50 percent.

Also, many excellent camouflage patterns that incorporate blaze orange exist, so you can blend in with the habitat, but still remain highly visible to other hunters. Be sure to check hunting regulations in your state.

Taking your youngsters with you on a hunting trip remains one of the best ways to form close bonds with them, but a hunting trip is not the time to begin to teach your child about gun safety. All youngsters need to attend a hunter education course and need to learn how to handle a firearm safely before ever taken into the field.

If you hunt, teaching your children about safe firearm handling remains effective in preventing accidents. Of course, even if your children receive gun safety training, all guns need keeping under lock and key at home and separating from the ammunition.

If you fire the gun and nothing happens, beware! It could still fire, even several seconds later. Keep the gun pointed in a safe direction, carefully open it, remove the defective round and discard it in a safe place. If not readily familiar with the mechanics of the gun, stay safe and take it to a gunsmith.

When hunting, you need to consider each occasion separately. Many good hunters often experience highly-enjoyable expeditions without ever firing a shot.

Americans have a long tradition of safe, ethical hunting and you and your children can enjoy a lifetime of pleasurable, accident-free hunting adventures if you know and practice gun safety rules.

Pro warns of hypothermia

Escape to the Outdoors

In the summertime, a refreshing plunge into cold water reduces your body's high temperature. But an unexpected winter dip often turns out deadly if the body temperature dips below safe levels, called hypothermia.

"Protect yourself," said Jay Yelas, a pro angler. "Better equipment has enabled anglers to fish earlier and later each year, so when you're on the water in cool or cold weather, you need to watch out for yourself as well as for your boat and its accessories.

A checklist of information and safety tips on hypothermia from Yelas follows:

•Hypothermia means the body's temperature drops to 95 degrees or below. Unless treated, a person may lose consciousness and stop breathing.

•Hypothermia results from loss of heat through only part of the body, such as the feet. Even when you're dry, hypothermia remains a danger in extreme cold — as much as 25 percent of body heat is lost through an uncovered head.

•Go fishing with a buddy. Inform others of your plans and stick to them.

Commanding General Maj. Gen. Carl F. Ernst shares a laugh with Brig. Gen. Kathryn G. Carlson, Army and Air Force Exchange Service executive officer, and Michael Patrick, chief executive officer, Carmike Cinemas, Inc., during the Wynnsong 10 grand opening and ribbon cutting ceremony Dec. 6.

WYNNSONG 10

Cinema opening makes history

By Brian R. Voller
Bayonet staff writer

Fort Benning, the Army Air Force Exchange Service and Carmike Cinemas made history Dec. 6 when the doors of the first Wynnsong 10-plex theater officially opened to the public.

Commanding General Maj. Gen. Carl F. Ernst, Brig. Gen. Kathryn G. Carlson, deputy commander, AAFES, and Michael Patrick, chief executive officer, Carmike Cinemas, Inc., stood on the theater steps and cut the ribbon officially opening the Wynnsong 10 Theater.

The 10-plex theater stands as the first military contracted theater with first run movies and the first theater in Columbus with 10 screens.

Ernst said the theater opening on Fort Benning was due to the hard work of several people and that its opening on Fort Benning was a conscious decision.

"In the Army and the Air Force, it has long been established that when you want to initiate something and you want to initiate something right, you go to the place where they maintain the highest standards every day — you go to the best installation in the world," Ernst said. "It was indeed no accident that Fort Benning was chosen as the place to build this theater."

He said that while he happens to be the Commanding General who is in the position to receive the theater, he was not around Fort Benning for the conception of the idea.

"I have to credit my predecessors who saw, along with Carmike (Cinemas), that there was and opportunity for a joint venture ...," Ernst said. "On the Army side, I have to thank (retired Maj. Gen.) Jerry White, (Maj. Gen.) Jay Hendrix and Col. Rich Rutledge, who was the tenacious officer who wouldn't let anyone stand in the way of making this happen."

Ernst also thanked AAFES and the Patrick family, owners of Carmike Cinemas, for their help in making the Carmike Theater happen on Fort Benning.

Patrick said his company had a different agenda when they agreed to build the theater.

"This theater is more of a venture built from the heart," Patrick said. "My family has a deep affection for the military and we've been around Columbus for many years, and with this theater, it is our way to make sure that the Soldiers are the ones who will win."

Carlson said that when she was stationed at Fort Benning, she never dreamed she would be returning to the installation to open a 10-plex theater.

"I never dreamed that I would be returning to Fort Benning to participate in a ribbon cutting ceremony opening such a beautiful 10-plex theater like the one we have here," Carlson said. "AAFES is really proud to be part of the partnership between Fort Benning and Carmike Theaters to present to you this great, great theater."

Theater manager Ussery M. Henry said the price for admission to the theater will be open to the public, and is $5.75 for adults, $3.75 for children and seniors. The matinee prices, which are every show before 5:30 p.m., will be $3.75.

In addition to the ribbon cutting ceremony that took place, the Wynnsong 10 Theater also conducted a Military Appreciation Night Dec. 5 in which everything in theater, including the price of admission and the price of all refreshments, was only 25 cents.

Post recognizes instructors of the year

By Brian R. Voller
Bayonet staff writer

The top instructors for Fort Benning where honored Monday in Classroom 6 of Infantry Hall when the post recognized the U.S. Army Infantry School's Instructors of the Year.

Capt. Bruce V. Sones, Combined Arms and Tactics Directorate, received the top officer recognition; Sgt. 1st Class Clark H. Swedberg, 4th Ranger Training Battalion, received the senior noncommissioned officer recognition; and Staff Sgt. Brian D. Washington, Noncommissioned Officer Academy, received the Junior NCO recognition.

Commanding General Maj. Gen. Carl F. Ernst, emphasized the significance of winning the instructor of the year recognition.

"Being an instructor is important business," Ernst said. "I can't think of anything in our Army that is more fundamentally important to the training of our younger and older Soldiers than the selection of an instructor.

"To be an instructor at the largest military teaching institution in the free world is an accomplishment, and then to be selected as the top instructor from such a large institution, well, that says a lot about these individuals."

Sones, an instructor of aviation operations, said his job as an instructor is to prepare students to successfully use aviation assets to increase the overall effectiveness of the Army on the battlefield.

He said the award came as a great shock to him.

"I don't consider myself to be a great instructor," Sones said. "I consider this to be just chance ... to be singled out as the instructor of the year because there are many very good instructors out there, I'm just fortunate to be singled out this year."

Swedberg, an instructor with the Ranger Training Brigade, said he is responsible for the training and safety of the ranger students while preparing them to be confident small unit leaders.

Swedberg said he attributes a large portion of his success to the hands-on experience he gained throughout his military career.

"I think the instructor program is a great success because you're taking personnel who have been involved in this kind of mission, and then you are in turn taking that person and turning him into an instructor," Swedberg said. "They know exactly what really works out there, it's not always the book answer but it works. Therefore, they can provide the students with that information, and I think that type of instruction really benefits the students in the long run."

Washington, a Basic Noncommissioned Officer Course instructor, said his job is to train NCO students to be effective squad and section leaders.

He said he is not intimidated by the importance of being an instructor, but he actually receives a lot of satisfaction out of it.

"To me, it is very satisfying to see a person leave the course with more than what they came in with," Washington said. "I get a lot of good feedback from people who graduate the course. Every now and then, I see someone who has graduated the course and they have gotten their E-6 (staff sergeant). They come up to me and say, 'Hey, how ya doin,' Sergeant Washington?' The fact that they still have the respect to call me sergeant means a lot."

For being named as the Instructors of the Year, the three received:

•From the Chattahoochee Valley Chapter of the Retired Officers Association, Sones received a $100 savings bond.

•The Association of the U.S. Army presented the three awardees with a plaque, a $100 savings bond and a warm-up jacket.

•The Noncommissioned Officer Association presented several awards to all the awardees.

•The Army and Air Force Exchange Service presented all the awardees with a $50 gift certificate.

•Ranger Joe's presented the awardees with merchandise.

510th MPs celebrate 50th anniversary

By Lynn M. Bieda
Special to The Bayonet©

The 510th Military Police Association reunited Sunday at Fort Benning when the organization celebrated the 50th anniversary of its activation.

While at Fort Benning, the group toured the National Infantry Museum and the MP station. During the weekend, they toured Tuskegee University and participated in a group photo, along with other activities.

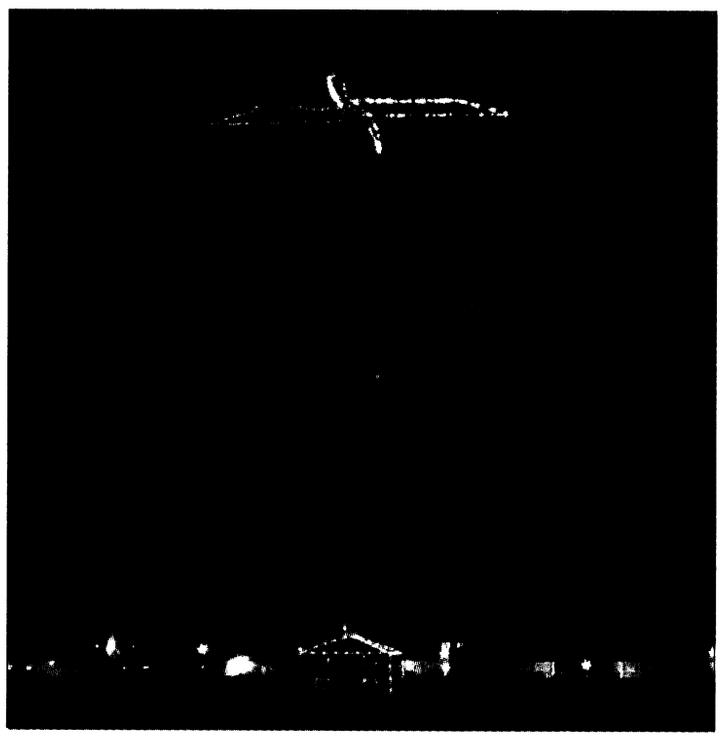
"What makes the unit so unique is the fact that they were made up of African-American Soldiers who served with Caucasian contemporaries two years before desegregation occurred in the military," said Alice M. Flannigan, the unit's historian.

"Serving in the 510th MP platoon was a very important period in my life," said retired Lt. Gen. Arthur J. Gregg, president of the 510th MP Association.

The unit served in Mannheim and Giessen, Germany, from 1946 to 1951. Gregg served with the unit from 1946 to 1949. After Gregg left his Germany tour, he entered Officer Candidate School.

"(Serving with the 510th) was a period of personal and professional growth, which greatly influenced my military and post military careers," he said. "Most importantly, it permitted me to form and nurture relationships with outstanding men whose friendships I highly value."

Another member of the 510th, Len Leavell, who currently lives in Columbus, retired from the military in 1964 as a master sergeant.



"This is the greatest group of men I ever served with," Leavell said. "These guys are family to me. Our families are friends, also. We were together in hard times and we appreciate and love one another."

Leavell and Cecil Jackson helped to set up this 50th reunion.

"We have a roster with everyone's phone number and address, so we just set up a phone tree," Leavell said.

"Every two years, we have a reunion. This is our second in Columbus, the first was in 1977."

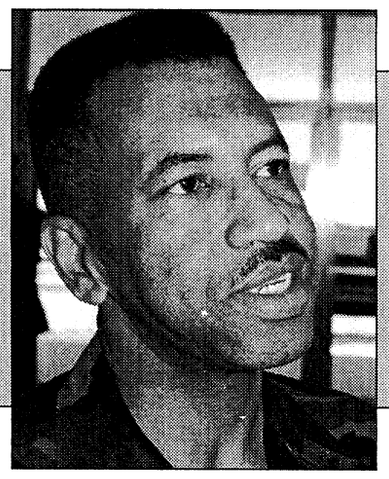
VARIOUS VOICES

What should be the punishment for people who are convicted of driving under the influence?

1st Lt. John Taylor, Infantry Officer Advanced Course — "I think they should receive a 48-hour suspension of privileges and field-grade punishment."



Spc. Victor Eric Roberts, Company A, 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment — "They should receive jail time if they hit someone and they should be made to take a course on the dangers of drinking and driving."

Staff Sgt. Karen Smith, U.S. Army Medical Department Activity — "I think they should have their licenses suspended and they should receive remedial classes."

Capt. John Hodge, 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment — "I think the punishment should be stiffer for the first offense — they should revoke the license for an extended period. After the second offense, their licenses should be revoked for life."

Command Sgt. Maj. Henry Holt, Medical Department Activity— "Education is the key. Their licenses should be revoked and they should have to undergo extensive training and rehabilitation, along with some community service."

Spc. Kelley Castillo, Company A, 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment — "The offenders should be heavily fined and they should have their licenses revoked or suspended."

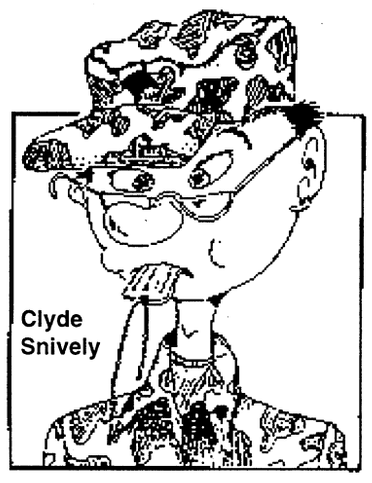
Driving drunk

Taking a life while driving under the influence inexcusable



By Clyde Snivley
Bayonet columnist

commentary

The downside of drunken driving is innocent people get killed and maimed. There is no upside.

So why do we drive drunk?

We know we can kill someone or be killed. We know we can lose our drivers' licenses, but we do it anyway.

"We" are Congressmen, judges, Army officers and noncommissioned officers who risk our careers by getting behind the wheel drunk.

Usually, we get to where we're going without being caught. But sometimes, we fail. Then our friends, neighbors, family members read about us or see us on TV looking shamed and remorseful and apologetic, wondering "what's going to happen to me now? Is this the end of my life as I know it?"

So why do it in the first place?

Some of us don't consider ourselves drunk when we get behind the wheel of a motor vehicle. But if we've been consuming more than a beer per hour, chances are, we're legally drunk.

Or we might know we're drunk, but don't think our driving skills are impaired, so we take the chance.

When I was a college student working for my hometown newspaper, I was sent to the home of a college student to ask the family for a picture of their daughter. The daughter was on her way home from school for the Christmas holidays when she was killed by a drunken driver.

Unbeknownst to me and my editors, the family didn't know about the accident until I asked for the picture and had to explain why.

I'll never forget the anguish that news brought to the family. I've never been able to get that picture of the stunned couple out of my mind.

On the other side of the coin, I've often wondered how these murderers feel about what they've done. Do they ever get over it?

This is not a holier-than-thou sermon. For despite the experience with the couple, I've been guilty of drunken driving. There were times when I woke up in my bed and did not know where I'd been or how I got home.

All I can say is someone was looking out for me.

But I'm through tempting faith. There are too many options available to get home safely, especially this holiday period.

There's the safety cab, 660-6069, that will take you from where you've been drinking to your home or quarters (not to another bar).

If you're on post, you can call the military police or your unit for help. Or you can travel with people willing to be designated drivers — just don't make them mad at you as you begin to drive home or you may end up walking, and drunken walkers can get themselves into trouble, too.

So this holiday, play it safe. Don't be the hero, the macho person and show everyone how you can drink them under the table and still drive home.

You might not make it this time.

New resident compliments Civic Center

By Dov Schwartz

commentary

Well-behaved fans, courteous parking attendants, clean and well lit rest rooms. Madison Square Garden? Yankee Stadium? No. A hockey game at the gleaming new $33.6 million Columbus Civic Center.

I went to a hockey game recently at the Civic Center. I mentally prepared myself for the usual hassles — raucous fans, rude parking attendants, unkempt facilities ... boy, was I surprised.

Despite my handing him a $20 bill for the $2 parking fee, the parking lot attendant remained calm and professional. Patiently, he directed me to the parking area.

And what's with the $2 parking cost? Two dollars for parking? That's the cheapest parking fee for a professional game this side of the Pacific Ocean.

Dov Schwartz thinks the Columbus Civic Center is a well-run operation.

Inside the Civic Center (all right — the "snake pit" for you Cottonmouth boosters), the ticket attendant was efficient and helpful. I mean "really" helpful. As a recent arrival in Columbus attending an event at the Civic Center for the first time, I asked for directions to my seat location. Expecting the usual "just follow the signs buddy," the attendant surprised me with his clear, concise directions.

Between periods of the game, I strolled through the Civic Center facility. For someone accustomed to the aging sports complexes of the Northeast the center's sharp physical plant, gleaming building supports and spotless rest rooms (they even had towels) were a real eye opener.

The fans were enthusiastic and "loud." But unlike many arenas (did someone say the "Garden"), there was no cursing or profanity. Almost as unbelievable, people stood up forthright and without complaint to allow patrons to get to their seat in the middle of a row.

Now a word about traffic. There wasn't any. None. For anyone who labels the post-game scenario at the Civic Center "traffic," I invite you to experience real traffic, like trying to leave Pittsburgh's infamous North Side after a game at Three Rivers Stadium. Better bring a meal, you're going to be there for a while.

Columbus, you've shown an ex-patriot Yankee how to run a first class sports facility. Well done!

545-boss

Dial 545-BOSS is the commander's action line for soldiers, family members and civilians to call when they have problems or complaints that can't be resolved elsewhere.

While it is not a substitute for the chain of command or for agencies established to provide assistance, the line offers another means of communication between Fort Benning's community and commanders.

The Bayonet features some of the calls that may benefit other members of the Fort Benning community.

Call: A retired Soldier said he wants to know why the Commissary lets patrons in without showing identification cards.

Commissary response: The Commissary Officer said ID cards now get checked at the registers. He said it was a policy directed by the Defense Commissary Agency director June 27 to coincide with the renovations. He said the post commander at the time agreed. The Commissary Officer said many DeCA commissaries no longer check IDs at the door. This action was implemented Nov. 5.

Call: Two callers voiced concern about the Briant Wells Field House indoor swimming pool not being provided the personnel needed to keep the pool open from 6 to 8 a.m. and 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. daily. They said they were told that it closes due to lack of lifeguards. The callers said the pool closed for three days and this remains the only pool available during this time of year.

Directorate of Community Activities response:

The Sports Director, DCA , said currently a recruitment action for a civilian lifeguard vacancy exists. It is at Civilian Personnel and they are waiting for a referral list. Two special duty requirements exist for lifeguards from the 11th Infantry Regiment. One is filled and the other will be filled as soon as a qualified Soldier gets identified. Once one of these vacancies get filled, the temporary pool closure stops.

TRADOC commander sends holiday greeting

As we enter this holiday season, we have much to be thankful for.

Indeed, this year has been challenging and next year will be equally so.

Our fellow Soldiers, stationed at distant outposts around the world, help nations overcome conflict and bring peace to their people. Training and Doctrine Command Soldiers perform a vital function in helping to achieve these objectives.

The New Year brings exciting new opportunities for TRADOC and the Army. TRADOC remains dedicated to its primary missions and the extraordinary demands those missions pose.

Whether supporting the force in the field, training our Soldiers to meet the demands of the 21st century, or experimenting with new concepts and equipment to modernize the force, TRADOC remains a committed and vital part of the Army team.

New challenges in a new year add vibrancy and vitality to the work TRADOC does every day.

During this holiday season, families and friends gather together to solemnly observe the birth of Jesus on Christmas Day or to celebrate Hanukkah, which began Dec. 6. In either case, it is that time of year to reflect on the past year's events, enjoy the company of one another and look forward to the future.

When travel becomes part of your plans to observe the holiday, please drive safely. When you celebrate, act sensibly. Family and friends treasure you.

You remain important to TRADOC, the Army and your country.

Doughboy Award recipient dies

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Retired Command Sgt. Maj. Theodore L. Dobol died of a brain tumor in Chicago Nov. 25. He is survived by his wife, Frances; his eldest son, Theodore; his daughter, Louise; two step-children and three grandchildren.

Dobol received the 1996 Doughboy Award presented June 14 at Fort Benning. He also received the Gold Order of Saint Maurice from the National Infantryman Association for his life-long contributions to the Infantry and the U.S. Army.

Dobol, the first noncommissioned officer to receive these honors, enlisted in the U.S. Army in 1938 and served with the 14th Infantry Regiment in Panama. He re-enlisted in 1940 in the 26th Infantry Regiment at Plattsburg Barracks, N.Y., and remained with the 26th for more than 25 years.

Dobol participated in campaigns in North Africa, Sicily, France, Belgium, Germany and Czechoslovakia — earning four Silver Stars, five Purple Hearts and eight battle stars on his campaign medal, among other awards and decorations.

Following World War II, Dobol rose to become the regiment's sergeant major. In that capacity, he returned with the unit to Fort Riley, Kan., in 1955. In April 1959, Dobol became the Army's first noncommissioned officer receiving promotion to the newly-established rank of command sergeant major (E-9).

When the 1st Infantry Division departed for Vietnam in 1965, it left Dobol behind. He was reassigned to the 3rd Regiment, Corps of Cadets, U.S. Military Academy, but subsequently, visited the 1st Battalion, 26th Infantry, in Vietnam while accompanying the chief of staff of the Army.

Dobol retired from active duty with 31 years of service in September 1969. Since retiring, he served as the curator of the Big Red One Museum, honorary sergeant major of the 26th Infantry Regiment and was a member of numerous military associations.

The Doughboy Award, a chrome-plated doughboy helmet, is presented annually to persons who made a significant contribution to the Infantry force, and it is presented on behalf of Infantrymen, past, present and future.

PX prices merchandise competitively

By Lynn M. Bieda
Special to The Bayonet©

The Post Exchange has a no-hassle policy which is designed for the benefit of the customer and the associate, said Mike Woodard, Main Mall Post Exchange manager.

"Because of the no-hassle policy, we accept two types of price challenges from customers," Woodard said.

"The first price challenge is when someone comes in to buy something and claims the item is cheaper with our competitors, then we give him or her the cheaper price if the difference is under $5," Woodard said.

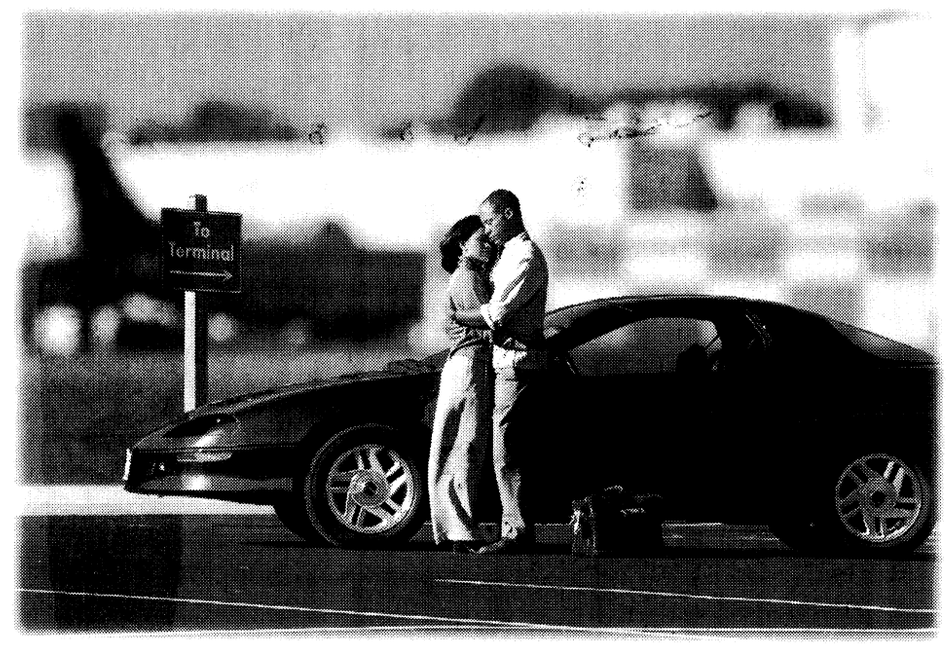
"The second price challenge is when someone comes in and claims that an item is cheaper (and the difference is more than $5), then he or she must show proof, usually in the form of an ad or, if he or she doesn't have proof, then we can call the store and verify the price," Woodard continued.

These are the two ways that we can ensure that the PX is cheaper than the competition, Woodard said.

"We also have a best price guarantee; we guarantee the best price in town," Woodard said.

"We train all our associates to give approvals right at the register. We teach them the no-hassle policy," Woodard said.

"We also have price surveyors who survey all retail merchandise in the PX," said Sue Ellen Sorrells, PX price surveyor.



"We break every month down into its four weeks and each week, we survey different image items; these are the high-demand items," Sorrells said.

High-demand items are things such as health and beauty products, toiletries, such as toothpaste, mouth wash and cleaning items, Woodard said, and are basically anything consumers buy on a weekly basis.

"If in our surveys we find that an item is cheaper, then we immediately match the competitor's price or lower ours," Woodard said.

For the upcoming holidays, the Army and Air Force Exchange Service is running a program called Bonus Bucks, Woodard said.

"For every $20 you spend at the PX, you earn $1 in Bonus Bucks," Woodard said. "And those are just like cash, good toward your next purchase."

SAFETY

on the front line

NCO risk management

The noncommissioned officer serves as the first line of defense for safety in tactical operations, unit training and on- and off-duty recreational activities. The NCO corps will implement and execute the best force protection safety program through the following NCO risk management safety goals and objectives.

Goal no. 5

Noncommisioned officers will ensure training in adverse weather is conducted safely.

Objectives

1. Soldiers who have had previous cold and hot weather injuries will be identified prior to training in adverse weather conditions and will be closely monitored by NCOs in accordance with unit standing operating procedure. Soldiers exhibiting signs of cold or hot weather injuries will be immediately evacuated.

2. During hot weather training or activities, NCOs will ensure that water is available to Soldiers at all times. In addition, NCOs will ensure that Soldiers carry at least one quart of water and as a minimum drink the following amounts:

Heat category 1: one-half quart per hour
Heat category 2: one-half quart per hour
Heat category 3: one quart per hour
Heat category 4: one-and-one-half quarts per hour
Heat category 5: two quarts per hour

3. During severe thunderstorms or lightning, NCOs will direct Soldiers to disperse and squat down in an area away from tall trees or other hazards, ground weapons and load bearing equipment away from themselves, and reduce the use of tactical radio to a minimum.

4. Adverse weather safety will be evaluated as a part of risk management worksheets. NCOs in the field will adjust training if weather conditions present imminent danger to Soldiers.

5. NCOs will advise Soldiers to reduce speed during adverse weather.

6. During prolonged training under adverse weather conditions, NCOs will reinforce the use of buddy teams to monitor Soldiers and will ensure transportation and shelter has been arranged.

510th MP: Reunite

Although members of the 510th are now receiving the respect they deserve it wasn't always that way, Flannigan said.

"Many had to accept reductions in rank to serve in combat," she said. "Their first first sergeant was murdered. Other servicemembers refused to give them full authority and threats of disbandment were ever present."

Despite the problems, the members of the 510th all said being in the unit was a good experience for them.

Columbus Mayor Bobby G. Peters said this of the 510th's reunion.

"Congratulations on your 50th anniversary, which will be celebrated during your meeting here. We are honored that you have chosen to have this significant celebration here in Columbus and Fort Benning. Let me assure you that Columbus holds the military in very high regard and that the city and the military are, in a very real sense, one community.

"I am aware of the important contribution the 510th MP Platoon made in pioneering desegregation at highly responsible levels of military service. The members of your association well deserve this time of proud reflection on the courage, dignity and professionalism exhibited in the performance of the 510th in Germany, from 1946 to 1951," Peters said.

New IOBC 2nd Lts participate in Situational Training Exercises

By Lee A. Barnard
Infantry Officer Basic Course

"Claymore, Claymore, Claymore!" A deafening explosion follows from an M18A1 anti-personnel mine and a concealed Infantry squad opens with a lethal barrage of live fire on pop-up enemy targets.

Dec. 3 through 6 students from Company B, 2nd Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment, Infantry Officer Basic Course, Class 1-97 participated in a Situational Training Exercise at Garnsey Range under the supervision of the Training Leader Battalion.

The event began with students receiving in-class instruction on the Army's training philosophy and the preparation, planning and execution of squad focused STXs Dec. 2. Next, each second lieutenant prepared a written STX and operations order for their respective lanes based on dismounted battle drills and mission tasks.

The students went to the field and prepared their respective lanes which consisted of the following: deliberate point ambush (live fire), cross a danger area, enter a building and clear a room, knock out a bunker, clear a mined wire obstacle, clear a trench, conduct a reconnaissance, execute a raid, react to a near ambush, break contact, squad attack (blank fire), and squad attack (live fire).

Over the next three days individual squads rotated through each of the twelve lanes. A student platoon leader evaluated the performance of the squad and its leader during the execution phase based on his written STX. Each lane concluded with the platoon leader conducting an after action review. Cadre assigned to each lane evaluated the platoon leader and monitored safety.

According to Capt. Dean Weiler, the STX primary instructor, "The purpose of the exercise is three-fold: to expose new lieutenants to battle drills, develop and execute a written STX, and to develop an understanding of the Army's AAR process. "In addition, he emphasized the importance of exposing students to the demands and safety of live fire training."

Sgt. Mark Ferguson, lane cadre for react to a near ambush, summarized the STX training.

"It simulates a six-to eight-week train up process crammed into a single week whereby second lieutenants learn how to identify and correct training deficiencies within their respective platoons based on guidance from their higher commanders."

Furthermore, Ferguson said, "This exercise teaches IOBC students to use the AAR as a tool in order to help them sustain and improve individual, collective and leader task training for their future soldiers."

TLB cadre continuously highlighted both safety and realism as critical components of Infantry training. First, every squad received a safety in-brief from the student-platoon leader at the beginning of each rotation.

Second, prior to the execution of live-fire lanes, students conducted dry and blank-fire rehearsals.

Finally, pop-up targets on live fire and opposing forces on blank-fire lanes enhanced training realism. Both OPFOR and friendly forces wore multiple integrated laser engagement system equipment.

2nd Lt. Gerard Baptiste, the acting M-60 machine gunner from 1st Squad, 1st Platoon admitted, "The live ammo on the squad attack lane certainly made me a little more nervous, but the pop-up targets made the event more challenging — more genuine."

In addition to serving as platoon leaders, every student had the opportunity to act as squad leaders and team leaders for at least one rotation. Such an experience provided valuable insight into the leadership duties of these demanding positions.

2nd Lt. Aaron Benton said, "Just serving as a squad member helped me to learn that if clear and concise instructions are not given by leaders, it's difficult for individuals to accomplish their respective tasks. Every individual must be ready to step up to higher levels of command because you never know when a key leader might go down."

2nd Lt. Peter Ganesh, an international student from Trinidad, said, "I came away from this exercise knowing how to operate as squad leader and how to assess a squad's performance as a platoon leader." Furthermore, he added, "I have a better understanding of American tactical doctrine since my understanding of tactics is based on British doctrine."

At the end of the exercise students developed a practical understanding of the Army's training philosophy, applied that understanding as platoon leaders, and demonstrated tactical warfighting skills at the squad level. 2nd Lt. Julian Avent summarized the week's training, "The STX represents one more piece of experience to help me become a better leader."

Company B students will soon apply lessons learned from the squad STX to higher echelons during upcoming training events —a critical process in the transformation of new lieutenants into future infantry platoon leaders. IOBC Class 1-97 graduates March 7.

FISH FRY

AUSA recognizes excellence

By Brian R. Voller
Bayonet staff writer

Brian R. Voller

Sanford Parr, Training and Doctrine Command Systems Manager, presents Sgt. Willie Briskey, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 3rd Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment, with the Gallagher Award while Wayne Andrews, Association of the U.S. Army president, looks on during the AUSA Fish Fry.

The second Gallagher Award, an award honoring a noncommissioned officer for outstanding achievement, was presented at the Chattahoochee Valley-Fort Benning Chapter of the Association of the U.S. Army annual Fish Fry Nov. 26, at the Fort Benning Officers' Club.

Sgt. Willie Briskey, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 3rd Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment, received the Gallagher Award for his achievements as a volunteer. In addition to recieveing the Gallagher award, Briskey was also recognized as the Georgia Volunteer of the Year.

After receiving the award, Briskey thanked his entire chain of command and especially thanked his sergeant major, Command Sgt. Maj. Ralph R. Beam, 3rd Bn., 75th Ranger Regt., who Briskey said started him on his way in his Army career. Briskey said he plans to continue to give 100 percent in everything he does.

Also awarded during the ceremony was Sgt. Brenda C. Watkins, 608th Ordnance Company, who received a $3,000 scholarship to attend Troy State University from the Troy State Campus Dean Ron Robinson.

During the ceremony, Commanding General Maj. Gen. Carl F. Ernst, thanked all of the Soldiers and commanders for coming to the Fish Fry, and then went on to compliment two large ceremonies that occurred the same day — the 3rd Brigade, 3rd Infantry Division (Mechanized), rededication ceremony and the monthly retreat ceremony.

Post receives lifetime achievement award

Every year since 1979, Fort Benning receives recognition for employing a large number of disabled workers in the Columbus area, Barbara Pigg, program chairwoman for individuals with disabilities, said.

This year, the installation received a lifetime achievement award for its extraordinary record in the employment of disabled persons from the Mayor's Committee for Persons With Disabilities, according to Pigg.

Pigg said the successful recruitment program for individuals with disabilities helps recognize the needs of the disabled community here.

"Our success at being named large employer every year attributes to top-level support and cooperation of the command group, the entire management team and various organizations throughout the

EXCELLENCE BREAKFAST

CG recognizes outstanding individuals

By Lori Egan
Bayonet staff writer

The Fort Benning Quarterly Excellence Appreciation Breakfast took place Tuesday at the Fort Benning Officers' Club.

More than 50 quality paperweights were presented to individuals who were recognized for their commitment to quality, according to Pat Porter, management analyst for the Directorate of Resource Management.

"This breakfast is an opportunity to say thanks for the great work you do," Chuck Walls, garrison manager told to the honorees during the opening remarks.

This morning is about why Fort Benning is great, said Maj. Gen. Carl F. Ernst, Commanding General.

"It's not who lives at Riverside, but the people who work here, the people who stay at Fort Benning," Ernst said.

"We want to be the best," he said. "We recently cleared (Training and Doctrine Command) for best large installation and now we're going forward to Department of Defense level, but being the best installation in the world is not a bumper sticker, it's what the people who live and work here do.

"The Infantry is at the cutting edge of the freedom frontier — we train the Infantry here 50 weeks a year. We are unique."

Ernst also said that Fort Benning is the only large military installation in the top 10 for the federal President's Quality Award.

This is the last breakfast of this type, according to Sarah McLaney, chief, Quality Management Branch, DRM.

"Our Human Resources Process Action team along with the Benchmarking team developed a new and improved ceremony, so the Excellence Appreciation Day Breakfast and Quality Awards Ceremony, a quarterly event since July 1992 is changing," McLaney said. "The new ceremony is being called the "Two-Star" Celebration of Excellence. The first quarterly celebration of excellence is scheduled for March 13 at 8 a.m. tricommunity area," Pigg said.

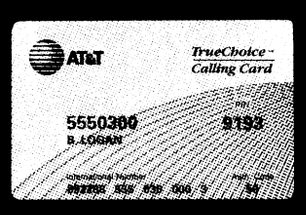
Also, Fort Benning accommodates the special needs of these employees with things such as ramps, reclining chairs, special keyboards and telecommunication devices for hearing impaired employees.

Another goal of the IWD program, called "windmills," helps reduce prejudice barriers that prevent people with disabilities from obtaining meaningful employment or advancing beyond entry-level positions here, Pigg said.

To achieve these objectives, according to Pigg, the program eliminates negative thinking about people with handicaps, eliminates fear, bias, myths and stereotyping, opens up the communication process between employee and employer, gives a better understanding of specific disabilities and other prejudice-fighting techniques.

Some of the types of jobs people with disabilities hold include computer specialist, file clerk, construction inspector, health systems specialist, training technician, medical clerk and others, Pigg said.



"Every year, to show we remain focused on the ability rather than the disability, we honor several employees, employers and volunteers with awards at a mayor's awards banquet," Pigg said.

Nominations get taken in October and a mayor's committee decides who wins the awards.

Personnel receive awards for Joint Endeavor

By Lynn M. Bieda
Special to The Bayonet©

Several Red Cross personnel received recognition for their support of Operation Joint Endeavor during a ceremony Nov. 27 at the Fort Benning Officers' Club.

One member of the group served in Bosnia with the fourth Red Cross team, Henry Edgar station manager of the Red Cross, said.

The team was gone for five months and returned home in October, Edgar said.

"Some of the many things we did included keeping military families in touch, informing soldiers of family emergencies and making the deployment experience better for servicemembers and sharing care packages with the soldiers," said Ray Galas, station manager of MacDill Air Force Base, Tampa, Fla.

Part of their mission in Bosnia also included raising the morale of service members, Doris Shropshire, national headquarters operational associate, said.

To do this, paper glider contests, golf tournaments, weekly trivia contests, a fun and games carnival night and other events were introduced, she said.

"The team served thousands of cups of coffee and punch, and they made ice cream sundaes and banana splits for soldiers," Shropshire said.

"They also provided cards, videos, books and games," Shropshire said.

While in Bosnia, the team handled more than 4,500 incoming messages, 100 of which contained good news, Shropshire said.

"We were operational 24 hours a day, and provided emergency communications for soldiers," Galas said.

In support of the many overseas assignments, Red Cross personnel decided to mint a Red Cross coin, Shropshire said.

On the front of the coin are the shields of the five branches of military service, and on the back reads the phrase "we were with you then and we are with you now," Shropshire said.

Many of the personnel recognized received the coin, a certificate and other items.

Board meets, discusses budget

By Lisa M. Hibbert
Bayonet staff writer

The Fort Benning School Board convened Tuesday for its November school board meeting.

Col. Michael Bingham, school board president and Don C. Faith Middle School representative, opened the meeting with a review of the minutes from the October meeting.

The board members approved the October consolidated lunchroom fund statement. The amount spent in October remains less than the amount spent in October 1995, said Alice Skinner, director of logistics, Fort Benning Schools.

This savings results from employees being moved from permanent status to flex time. The monthly net income was $15,567. The current year-to-date income is $15,567. The current fund equity is $127,700.

Dell McMullen, Fort Benning Schools superintendent, discussed some activities going on in the school system.

According to McMullen, Edward A. White Elementary School ranks as one of four schools from the Department of Defense Education Activity to make the finals in the Blue Ribbon Schools of Excellence program.

Movement of Morris R. McBride Elementary School from the school building into trailers is complete, McMullen said. Students and faculty plan to occupy the trailer village until scheduled renovations of the school are complete in August.

"The Faith Middle School race, conducted Saturday, remains one of the very best run races in this area," McMullen said. "Susan Emerson and the Physical Education Department at Faith do a remarkable job with the race and we received great support from the community."

Several activities that took place in November and December emphasized the schools system's home-school partnership goal. White conducted a Toast and Topics; Herbert J. Dexter and McBride conducted a Lunch and Learn.

McMullen also discussed the school systems district improvement plan, which encompasses the systems mission statement, benchmarks and goals.

The board recognized Cheri Corser, a prekindergarten, special-education teacher at Freddie C. Stowers Elementary School who recently received the Channel 3 Golden Apple award.

Other members at the meeting include: Chaplain (Maj.) Robert Thompson, chaplain's representative; Rhoda Zerger, Dexter Elementary School representative, Sgt. Joe Todd, Frank R. Loyd Elementary School representative; Sheila Long, Stowers Elementary School representative; Sgt. 1st Class Henry Porter, White Elementary school representative; Staff Sgt. Ricardo Linton, Richard G. Wilson Elementary School representative; Col. Byron Greene III, schools' officer; Lt. Col. Stephanie Willson, schools' attorney, Richard Skinner, assistant superintendent; Robbie Norris, Fort Benning Schools Human Resources Site Manager; Caroline Myers, president, Benning Education Association; and Stephanie Davis, president, American Federation of Government Employees.

Two visitors also attended the meeting.

FAITH MIDDLE SCHOOL

PRIDE CONTEST

School works to improve facilities

Don C. Faith Middle School

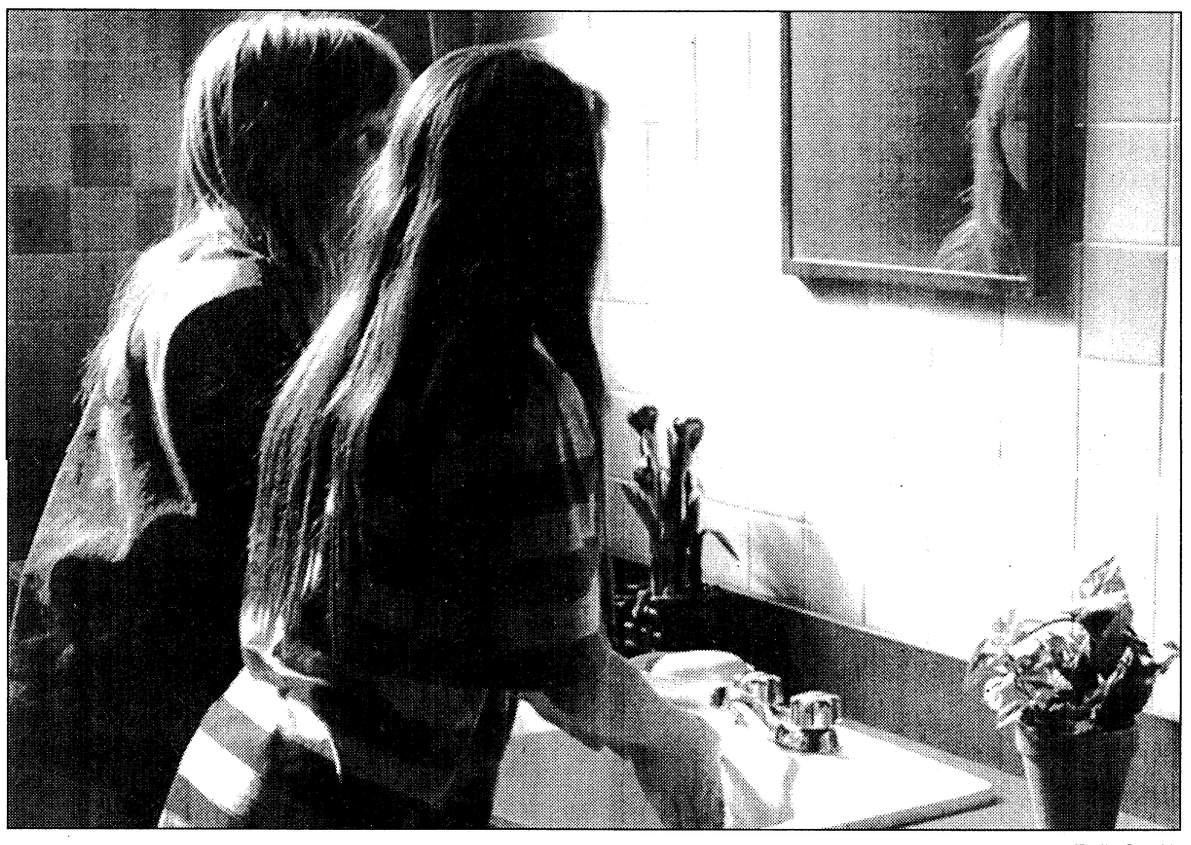
It's 8:02 a.m. You hear the voice of Ann Justice, Don C. Faith's Middle School's assistant principal, telling you the pride scores of the day before. The sixth-, seventh- and eighth-graders all listen anxiously to see if they are in the lead. Well, it turns out that the sixth grade is winning by 10 points.

What, you ask, is the pride contest? It is a contest to see which grade level shows the most pride in its hall, lunch period, rest rooms and behavior each quarter.

Each grade can earn 10 points every day for having the students keep its hall neat, clean up after themselves in the lunchroom, show good behavior in the halls between periods and keep their rest rooms neat. It is possible to earn 20 or 30 points on special days, such as days when there are visitors or assemblies in the building.

What is the prize when a grade level wins? In the past, there have been different types of rewards. Students have received movies with popcorn and sodas, or movies with pizza and sodas, or candy and cookies.

Justice announces the scores each day. She said she keeps a chart of the points each grade earns each day. She walks around all over school to keep an eye on what is happening in each hallway and rest room, and, at times, she even asks visitors to rate each grade level. Sometimes, teachers can help point out things that need to be considered before points are given or subtracted.



The sixth-grade girls have shown a great deal of pride in their rest room. They have added ceramic soap dishes, flower arrangements, wall posters and plug-in type room deodorants. The boys have added plastic soap dishes to theirs.

Pam Tate, sixth grade teacher, pointed out that we can always show off our rest rooms to visitors.

"In most schools, the visitors won't go near the rest rooms," Tate said.

Teachers, administrators and visitors agree. The entire school is much more attractive now because of the Faith pride contest!

Students learn programs, surf net in Technology class

Don C. Faith Middle School

The eighth grade is using many different forms of technology this year. At the beginning of the year, students were given keyboarding classes that were taught by Mary Barnette.

Students were to accomplish certain speeds in a set amount of time. Word processing was also taught.

Currently, students are working on a database. Each student is using the database with his or her Earth Science project. Each student's work is put on his or her portfolio disk.

This way, all of his or her work and progress for the year can be reviewed at the end of the year. The use of spreadsheet and multimedia projects will be introduced throughout the school year.

In the media center, students use many computer programs. One program there is the card catalog. It allows students to look up books by their subject, title, author or content. This program not only allows students to look up books, but it tells them whether the books they're looking for are checked out or not.

Students also have the Internet available for use. They have two computers for the whole school, so each student only gets 15 minutes on the Internet at one time.

With the Internet easily accessible to student use, they perform many class projects with it. The most recent project they did with the Internet was called Balloteers.

Balloteers is a program designed to help students understand and get involved with the 1996 election. Students were given assignments on a weekly basis over the Internet. They then searched the Internet for information needed to complete the assignments.

Students currently have four technology labs that are always open for use. Sometimes the labs are filled by individual students. At other times, the labs are filled with classes that can be working on a wide variety of things.

Sometimes students just write essays or stories, and other times, they design houses for Industrial Technology class.

It doesn't matter what students are doing — researching on the Internet, word processing, using a data base, scanning pictures into computers or using compact disk read only memories —they're almost always using technology in some way.

Spirit day hailed contests, prizes

Don C. Faith Middle School

Spirit Day was the highlight of the year. On this eventful day we had a blast!

Olympic Day, we had such a great time last year, we decided to have Spirit Day as a re-run and make it better. Spirit Day is just another way of showing how much you appreciate your school. It's not "all work and no play..."

commentary

We started the day off with the national anthem and the Pledge of Allegiance. Then, we had our cheerleading contest.

The contest was between the sixth-grade Dazzlers and Dinomite teams, the seventh-grade E-Team and A-Teams and the eighth-grade Eliminators and Dream Teams. The cheer leading results were included with the all-around spirit contest to determine which team showed the most spirit.

The events were: the high jump, long jump, shot put, 60-meter dash, 10-meter dash, 4 x 100, 4 x 200, 4 x 400, sprint medley and the mile run.

The E-Team ended by tying the Dazzlers for first place in the Spirit Day competition. Everybody had a great time.

There are many contests going on at Don C. Faith Middle School. For instance, the "Go For The Gold" is a contest of behavior. If you do something disruptive in school, you will get a point. If you have up to five points, you're in the gold. If you have six to 10 points, you're in the red. If you have 11 to 15, you're in the blue.

We try to stay in the gold always. If you have zero to five points, you will be able to go to dances and special functions at the school.

Then there's the pride contest, which is between the sixth and eighth grades. Each grade can earn zero to 10 points a day for how clean their hallways are. So far, eighth and seventh have been trading leads. If your grade wins, your grade gets a party.

Anne Trawick

Canterbury or bust... Seventh-graders Losa Frye (left), Michael Alvarez, Jason Vasse, Jason Funkhouser and Charles Glynn on ground, create their own Canterbury tales and take their own pilgrimage to Canterbury, otherwise known as Faith's back yard, to read their tales.

Faith students finally find end to unfinished story

Don C. Faith Middle School

Chaucer never finished Canterbury Tales, and no one knows why ... so Anne Trawick's seventh-grade language arts class finished them for him. After writing their tales, they set out on a pilgrimage to the wide grassland outside the modern atmosphere of the school.

The class put on costumes to describe the storytellers in their stories. The Oxford graduate wore the long, black cape of a lawyer. The knight had his jeweled, royal purple garb and the cooks wore their aprons.

After a short journey, they stopped to sup on a feast of bread, cheese, juices and sparkling cider, under the giant oak, using the roots as stools and the trunk to rest their weary backs.

To escape from the raging wind that persisted, the travelers sought shelter in an old cave, which some call the dugout. To entertain themselves, they read their tales with creative flair.

The next day, they traveled to another tree where some generously shared and others rationed the remaining food items. More excited stories were told, ranging from the hilarious to adventurous, from tragedy to magical.

They returned from Canterbury to continue with the rest of the school day, but continued to talk among themselves about the stories they heard. Perhaps, as Chaucer intended, one of their stories would be chosen as the best, and they would get treated to a dinner.

Faith runs to fitness with the jogging club

Don C. Faith Middle School

Don C. Faith Middle School's after school program seeks to turn young inactive "couch potatoes" into successful joggers.

Students voluntarily meet twice a week in the Faith School gymnasium under the direction of Susan Emerson, a 34-year veteran teacher in physical education. Emerson puts club members through focused warm-up exercises designed to help them develop better muscle and breathing coordination for endurance running.

This year, approximately 70 Faith School students chose to "hang out after school" as jogging club members under Emerson's watchful eye.

"To me, jogging club is a great place to hang out after school," said one of the students. "It is fun and gives me a lot of exercise. Mrs. Emerson teaches us a lot of techniques to get better running times. The kids are very nice, and I have met some friends."

Students in grades six through eight, as well as their family members, can participate in this after-school activity. The club also participates in track meets against other schools.

"Although we run with other schools, we don't keep score or present awards," Emerson said. "There are three objectives of the jogging club: physical fitness, earning awards and having fun."

Jogging club members receive recognition for meeting the following goals: most mileage logged, perfect attendance and most improved. Awards of T-shirts get given for specific times on running two miles. Jogging club boys receive a T-shirt for running two miles in 15 minutes. The girls receive a T-shirt for running two miles in 16 minutes.

The jogging club members begin their spring session March 24.

Suddenly sick

Children often feel ill when stressed at school

Egleston Children's Hospital

If your child's sudden complaints of a stomachache on a school morning make you suspicious, don't call it a hoax too quickly.

Sarah Ninan, a registered nurse and clinical nurse specialist of the medical and psychiatric unit at Egleston Children's Hospital at Emory University in Atlanta, Ga., said that children feel physical symptoms, such as stomach pains and headaches, when they feel stressed.

"Children aren't able to verbally express their feelings all the time," she said. "One way to express some of their feelings can be through vague symptoms."

Ninan cautions parents to rule out any true physical problems when they suspect their child avoiding school. Has the child experienced any recent gastrointestinal upset? How is the child's appetite? If the complaints persist, take your child to see his or her pediatrician.

After ruling out clear-cut physical symptoms or causes, parents need to carefully consider the emotional root of their child's complaints of nondescript aches, pains, or nausea. Ninan offers parents these investigative steps to follow:

•Recall your child's behavior after school the previous day. Did he seem troubled or more quiet than usual? Sudden changes in behavior might mean a stressful situation at school.

•Look at your child's "big picture." Does a large new assignment such as a research paper loom ahead? Has your child advanced to a new level of math and feel anxious about his or her performance?

•Has your child been avoiding homework? Are his or her grades slipping? Make it your business to visit his or her classroom to see things for yourself. Arrange a time to discuss your child's classroom performance, both academic and social, with his teacher.

•Has your child stopped asking friends to come over after school? Conflicts with his or her peers may exist that you remain unaware of.

•Is there increased stress at home? Often when parents argue, or when a parent spends more time at work, a child's stress level increases. Determine what to do to decrease your overall household stress level and spend more one-on-one time with your child.

While parents play detective to find the source of their children's sudden illness, or school avoidance, whether the child stays home presents the immediate concern.

"If you decide to keep your child home from school, the type of day he or she will have is very important," Ninan said.

She suggests that parents provide comfort and rest without making the day at home overly rewarding.

Ninan advises parents who send children to school with vague complaints of sickness to write the teacher a note saying, "My child was not feeling well this morning. Please monitor him or her and call me if he or she becomes too ill to participate in all school activities."

Finally, Ninan encourages parents to look for school avoidance and mild sickness patterns. Children often develop nondescript illnesses Monday mornings after a comforting fun-filled family weekend and on Fridays, which represent typical test days.

Dealing with death helps children grow

Radford University

RADFORD, Va. — All children sometimes feel vulnerable and afraid, but these feelings become accentuated if someone close to them dies, said Lois Kugler, Radford University psychology professor and clinical child psychologist.

"In a sense, it's normal for children to have a fear of death, of the dark or separation," Kugler said. "But if someone dies or children are exposed to news like the Oklahoma bombing, these feelings become amplified. That's particularly true if the one who dies is a sibling."

How a child copes with death depends upon many things, including past losses, stresses, the family support system and the child's personality style, Kugler said.

"How a parent presents death can make a difference, but you can only influence the child to a point," Kugler said.

Younger children, for example, have little or no sense of the permanency of death and there may be nothing a parent can do to change that perception.

"Anxiety can interfere with understanding," Kugler said. "Denial is a way of coping."

However, parents should avoid using euphemisms for death that imply the person can come back.

"Saying that the person has gone away or is alive in heaven may convey that the person has voluntarily left and is able to come back," Kugler said. After a death, it's particularly important to provide structure and predictability, Kugler said.

"It's difficult for children to deal with death, but it can make them stronger," she said. "A strength can develop from learning to deal with tragedy. People learn that life goes on and families can develop a greater appreciation for each other."

Parents need to use caution with

Weapons

News USA

On the television and in the newspapers, guns seize our attention and fuel our fears every day. According to the National Crime Prevention Council, 10 children under the age of 19 are killed by gunfire and many more are injured each day.

Experts estimate that 1.2 million elementary school-age, latchkey children have access to guns in their homes. The council is urging children, parents and school personnel take action to stop the violence.

•Teach children that guns and other weapons hurt and kill. Have them take McGruff's "Stay Away From Guns" pledge.

•Consider removing firearms from homes with children or teens.

•Keep guns unloaded and securely stored.

•Support school staff in their efforts to keep weapons out of schools.

•Encourage students to report any weapons they know about on school grounds to the police or school authorities.

•Launch a public education campaign to raise awareness of the dangers of firearms and the risks of keeping guns in the home.

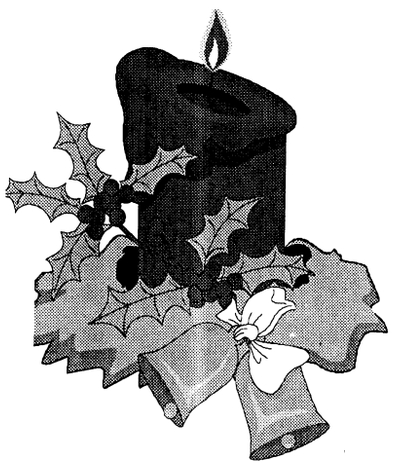
CANDLES

Let the light of Lord shine during Advent

By Lane Stockland and Paul Davidson
11th Infantry Regiment

It was about 18 degrees, snowing and the wind was howling. We were in the field for a training exercise. I crawled into my tent around 11 p.m. and fell asleep shortly thereafter, only to awaken around 2 a.m. freezing cold.

reflections

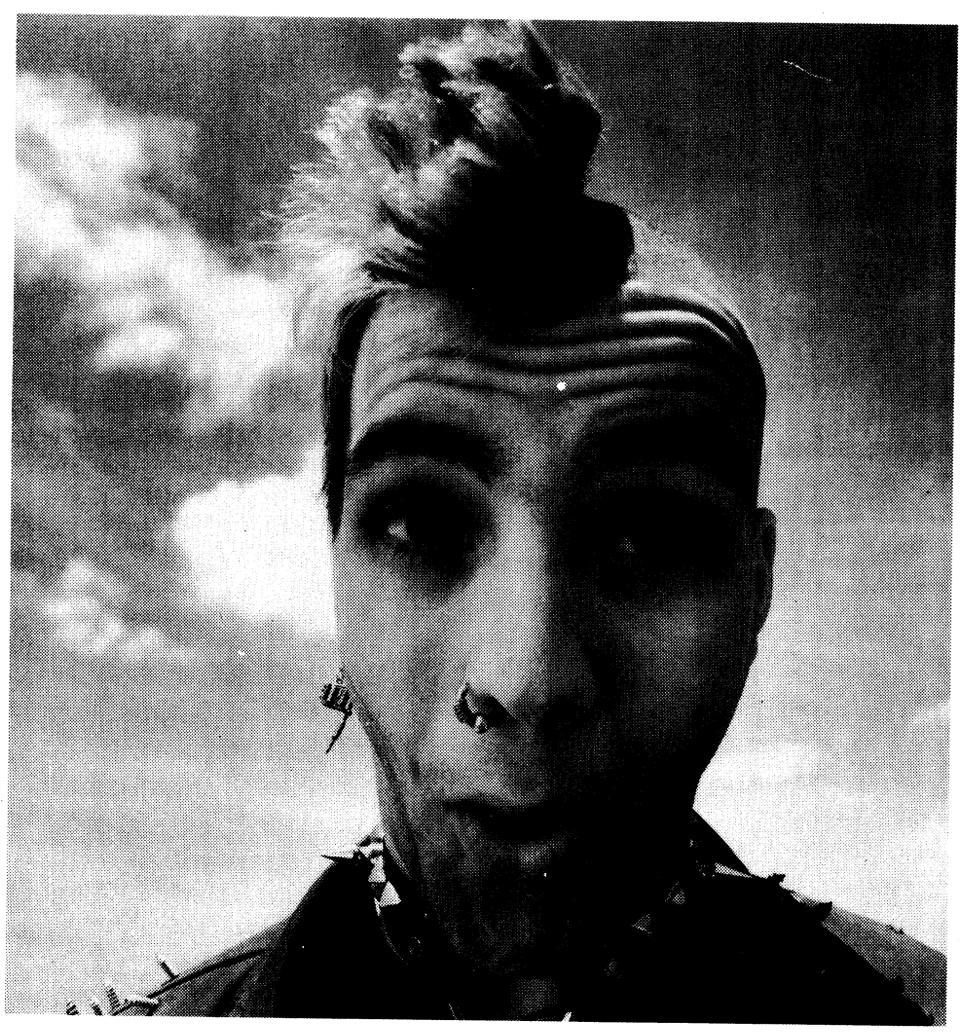


The entire inside of my tent was covered in frost. I crawled out of my sleeping bag, found a small candle and lit it. I let some of the wax fall into a 2-pound coffee can and then placed the candle in the coffee can. In a matter of seconds, my hands got warm. After a few minutes, the tent warmed up enough for me to crawl back inside the sleeping bag and go back to sleep.

While candles remain a necessary commodity in the field, especially when packing light, they play an extremely significant role during Advent. They represent light, warmth, newness, hope and expectancy. It has been said, "In the darkest part of the year comes Advent to light a fresh candle of expectancy."

Sometimes, preoccupied as we get with our problems and troubles, it is embarrassing for the Advent season to move in.

Christmas — insisting upon a practical application of our loudly-voiced theories of human relations — good will and peace to all. How strange, yet wonderful in a world full of war, hatred and destruction, to find the powerful presence of Christ penetrating into our innermost being — that still-small voice reminding us of that there is another way.



Responsibilities of eternal significance lie with us all — parents, teachers, leaders, followers, soldiers, children, whomever — to bend a sensitive ear to the message and the messenger of Advent and then practice the message. Only unbelief stops the practical application of good will and peace.

Living of these precepts begins in our own home, workplace, school and company; our own area of operation.

Let peace and good will begin in our place, let it begin in us. For in doing this, the light of Christ Jesus will provide a fresh candle of expectancy amidst the backdrop of a dark world.

Christmas

During holiday season, people need to celebrate good will, peace to all, birth of Jesus Christ in Bethlehem

By Xuan Ngoc Tran
1st Bn., 10th FA, 3rd Bde., 3rd Inf. Div. (Mech.)

Last weekend, I went to the mall. I saw many Santas, Christmas trees and people busy buying gifts for their families and friends.

reflections

We all celebrate Christmas in different ways. For some people the Christmas holiday means food. They spend a lot of time and energy preparing and cooking cakes, pies and turkeys. For other people the Christmas season just reminds them of their loneliness, poverty and family conflicts. They wish the Christmas season would never come, because it brings depression and headache to them. Other people celebrate Christmas by having parties and drinking booze.

In many ways we wish Santa Claus could give us whatever we want, and take away our problems. Our world today is full of trouble. We only receive peace from God. Everyday, the newspaper headlines tell of more crises than we want to know about. The threat of nuclear war looms over the world. There are over thirty wars being fough around the globe today. History has recorded only a total of 26 years when there has been peace. More money and energy are being directed at weapons of war than on health or education. Poverty is a massive world wide problem. The number of crimes, divorces and ruined lives seems to go up every year.

Who is to blame? According to the Scriptures, the problems we see around us are not caused by him, or her, but by sin found in each one of us. The world's problems are actually our heart's problems. Sin has separated us from God, our creator. From the time Adam sinned against God, we became strangers, aliens and enemies to God. But, what is the real reason to celebrate Christmas? Two thousand years ago, Santa Claus did not come to Bethlehem, but Jesus Christ the creator of the universe, came in human flesh. He became one of us. Jesus Christ is the greatest gift of God to mankind.

According to the Scripture headlines, on that holy night the angels praised God and said: "Glory to God in the highest, and on Earth peace, good will toward men." Luke 2:14 KJV This Christmas, Jesus Christ offers not only peace between God and man, but between man and man. He forgives us and delivers us from sin. He restores the most perfect and trusting relationship with us. He gives us real life and peace that the world cannot offer us.

We all like to receive gifts but they must fit our particular needs. Jesus Christ is the most appropriate gift for us during this holiday season. He is the only mediator between God and man, and through him we can have real peace with God. He also will give us the spirit of forgiveness so that we can be reconciled with our families and friends. God in Christ came into the world to save sinners. We need to turn in faith to the only one who can give us real cause to celebrate this Christmas. Yes, Jesus Christ is the real reason for the season, and he is the greatest gift we could ever receive.

Would you like to possess real peace this Christmas? Accept Jesus Christ into your heart as your personal Savior and Lord now.

Christ fixes everything

By Stephen Fry
36th Engineer Group

Chaplain (Lt. Col.) David Canada of the 121st General Hospital coauthored a booklet entitled "Great Day to be a Soldier." One devotion, called "Something That Money Can't Fix," gave me new insight into life's problems, and I pass it on to you.

reflections

It seems a car accident that cost several hundred dollars to fix occurred. When one individual complained to his supervisor about the accident, he said, "Well, thank God, the problem is something money can fix."

What a concept! We earn money to take care of our families, friends and ourselves. Unexpected expenses always occur that cause us to cringe, that upset us and make us ask, "Why me, Lord?" Many of those things can be fixed by mere money.

But what about the big things that money can't fix? God tells us that only trusting him can bring us relief. Proverbs 3:5-6 says, "Trust in the Lord with all your heart and lean not on your own understanding; in all your ways acknowledge Him and He will make our paths straight."

Sometimes, I let circumstances get me down. Most of the time, they remain simple matters that money can fix. But other times, money can't fix the problem. That's when I have to rely on the power of God to work out the situation.

The Bible tells about a man crippled from his birth. Peter and John encountered him at the gate of the temple in Jerusalem. He had a problem money couldn't fix. They had no money, but they had a powerful and loving God.

When the man looked to them for help, Peter said, "Silver and gold I do not have, but what I have I give you. In the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth, walk!" (Acts 3:6 NIV). The man jumped to his feet, healed of his infirmity.

God remains the same. For the little problems, he gives us jobs to earn money. For the big problems, he gives a savior to trust in.

OCTAVE OF CHRISTMAS

Season celebrates Mary, mother of Jesus

By James Blount
1st Bn., 38th Inf. Regt., ITB

The Octave of Christmas, Mary, Mother of God marks an eight day period, beginning Christmas day and ending New Year's day, in which the birth of Jesus Christ to the virgin Mary is remembered and celebrated. It is important for us to always keep within our hearts, and also share, the great glad tidings of joy.

reflections

We must not let ourselves become desensitized to the real meaning of Christmas amid all the commercialization and business, but we must use the traditions and observances of the church to reawaken us to the awesome thought of God sending his only son to this earth to save us. We need to rededicate and reenergize ourselves to spreading this gospel.

The Octave of Christmas is one way that we can experience a revival of the heart and mind amid all the other hoopla that has absolutely nothing to do with the real meaning of Christmas. The Octave of Christmas is a celebration of God's love for each and everyone of us.

We must celebrate the birth of the Christ child everyday of the year because this will strengthen our faith and our witness as well. Traditions and remembrances are so very important because they help to keep our faith fresh and strong. We must never become robotic in our beliefs where we simply just go through the motions.

Many of us will celebrate Christmas up until the 25th and then stop, but the Octave of Christmas allows us to continue on into the new year. Christmas should energize and revitalize us for the coming year.

Spiritually speaking, our faith should be strengthened for the coming year which undoubtedly will bring trials and tribulations. God so loved us that he sent his only begotten son. It is incredible that the God of the universe and all that ever exited, loves so much that he would sacrifice his son for us. We must endeavor to show or mirror God's love to everyone we meet in the hope that they will one day meet the Christ child themselves in a very personal way.

The Christmas story is the gospel story in part. Let us commit ourselves to sharing that story by inviting others to join us at Church as we, through traditions and remembrances, recall how very much God loves us. We were in darkness, but now we have seen the light; we were in despair, but now there is hope; we were dying, but now we live forever because Christ our savior is born!

Work to glorify God, not ego

By Pat Cole
1st Battalion, 19th Infantry Regiment

The story of The Tower of Babel in the 11th chapter of Genesis is a vivid account of people pooling their energies and talents together for a common goal.

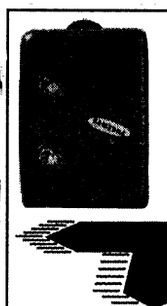
reflections

A bystander would have been impressed with the smooth-running construction of the world's first sky-scraper. Each worker knew his job and did it well.

Their dream was a tower that would be taller than anyone had ever dreamed. What was the purpose of the tower? To glorify God? No.

The purpose of the work caused its eventual abortion. The method was right. The plan was effective. But the motive was wrong. Verse 4 states, "Come, let us build ourselves a city, and a tower with its top in the heavens, and let us make a name for ourselves."

So why was the tower being built? It's built because of selfishness. The bricks were made of inflated egos and the mortar was made of pride. Why? So that somebody's name could be remembered.



We have a name for that: blind ambition. Becoming a legend in one's own time; climbing the ladder to the top.

Don't get me wrong. This world would be in sad shape without people who dream of touching the heavens. Ambition is the grit in the soul which creates disenchantment with the ordinary and puts the dare into dreams.

Left unchecked, it becomes an insatiable addiction to power and prestige, leaving behind only the skeletal remains of relationships. blind ambition.

The result is abandoned dreams and wind-swept futures. All of these had one thing in common: a half-finished tower that stands as a stirring epitaph to those who follow.

Kevin Toth digs a little deeper on the Lakeside Course of the Follow Me Golf Course during the Bushmaster Classic.

IOBC takes to the greens

By Robert Reynolds
Infantry Officer Basic Course

With incoming projectiles landing all around them, golfers from Company B, 2nd Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment, Infantry Officer Basic Course, Class 1-97, dove for the cover of their vehicles and charged to the top of the hill during their quarterly golf tournament at the Follow Me Golf Course Nov. 26.

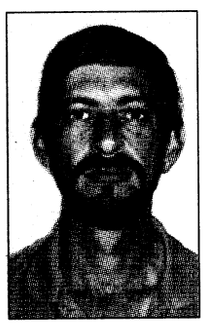
"Hey, you guys, yell 'fore' when you're teeing off!" was just one of the many on-the-spot etiquette corrections made during the fourth Bushmaster Classic Golf Tournament.

With 144 participants, this was the largest Bushmaster Classic and the fourth-largest tourney at the Follow Me Course this year.

The day of golf began with a 'shot gun' start over the well-manicured Lakeside course. The four-person teams consisted of IOBC cadre and students playing 18 holes of 'best ball.'

Trophies went to the first, second and third place teams. Additional prizes went for the longest drive and nearest-to-the-pin. The tourney sponsor, Hillquick of Columbus, donated prizes.

The first place team, with a score of 64, consisted of Paul Patterson, Dennis Patterson, Lance Patterson and Tony Benitez. Paul Patterson won the longest drive award. Lance Patterson claimed the nearest-to-the-pin award. The most lost balls competition resulted in a massive tie, and the award of a lesson learned was shared by all.



"The majority of our students are new to the military and the tournament gives the students and their families a chance to have some fun and get to know their classmates better," said Lance Patterson, the tournament officer in charge. "That really pays off later when training is tough and they have to keep their morale high."

Patterson, who organized the first Bushmaster Classic, seemed delighted with the growth of the tournament from its beginning of 14 players. Patterson said he hopes the lieutenants realize the importance of extracurricular events in the development of unit cohesion and support these type of events when they reach their units.

"I had a great time, everyone had a lot of fun," said Eddie Gautier, a tournament competitor. "We just relaxed and enjoyed the break from the work we've done. We had a chance to converse and get to know each other better.

"The course itself was in great condition. We shot six-under par and we hope that's enough for the win."

Course pro and director of golf George Cliff was extremely happy with the tournament.

"These types of tournaments are good for the course and are great for morale," he said. "For a lot of these folks, this is their first time on a course, but once they come out and have a good time, they keep coming back for more."

Joe Swiecki, a relative newcomer to the sport, shared these observations.

"I had a great time, everything was well set-up," he said. "I lost 12 balls in the wood line, but I enjoyed every stroke. I'd like to set-up a tournament at my unit and give my soldiers a chance to see how much fun golf can be."

Swiecki was not the only golfer to lose a few to the wood line. An informal survey revealed that nearly 250 balls were claimed by Lakeside. This should resemble an early Easter for the regular clientele of the course who will stumble upon brightly colored cache of lost balls.

The Lakeside course, usually referred to as the "Original Nine," served as host to a number of tournaments organized by groups such as the Ranger Hall of Fame, Officer Candidate School, the Association of the U.S. Army, the Noncommissioned Officer Academy and the 75th Ranger Battalion.

The rolling course, located behind the National Infantry Museum, has been played by some of the Army's most legendary golfers since its creation in the mid-1920s. Both Gen. Omar Bradley and Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower shot this course.

Marksmanship unit sweeps championships

U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit

Members of the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit's International Pistol Team swept the British Columbia Championships recently in Vancouver.

Of the 150 total competitors, the USAMU marksmen shot their way into prominent positions to finish with top spots in both men's and women's competition.

Honda Bright finished first in the women's air pistol match with a score of 1,161, followed by teammate Amy Szarenski, who finished second with a score of 1,111. Shane Buffa took third with a score of 1,061. All scores came out of 1,200 possible points.

In men's air pistol, Carl Trompeter took first with 1,712 points. Paul Johnston finished second with a score of 1,685 and Eric Daniels placed third with 1,685 points. All scores came out of 1,800 possible points.

"We went into this with the goal of winning both the women's and men's air pistol events," USAMU International Pistol Team coach Ronnie Boles said.

"Not only did we meet that goal, we surpassed it," he said, adding that many of the shooters also participated in the match in order to work on their shooting fundamentals.

"We are trying to get ready for the shooting season to launch into full gear," Boles said. "This was just another opportunity for the shooters to get out there and fine-tune their performances for upcoming competitions."

The USAMU International Pistol Team participates next in the International Pistol Sectionals Jan. 23 through 27 in Charleston, S.C.

OUTDOORS

Dove season in full swing

By John W. Peeler
Special to The Bayonet©

The last of three hunting seasons for dove started Tuesday at selected sites around Fort Benning.

The season, open from Dec. 10 through Jan. 15 is open to authorized hunters one-half hour before sunrise to sunset.

This year, bag limits for dove remain at 12 per day with a possession limit of 24.

Dove hunting may be conducted on both the north and south sides of U.S. Highway 280 in accordance with the Fort Benning Hunting and Fishing Overlay Map. Fields open for hunting are posted on the daily hunting and fishing sheets available at the Outdoor Recreation Office.

Off-limits areas for hunters include dud areas, restricted areas, exclusion areas and within 200 feet of maintained roads, buildings and posted troop training areas. It is also unauthorized to discharge a firearm in the direction of and within 200 yards of a maintained road, building, ammunition storage area, active airfields or posted no hunting areas.

To hunt on Fort Benning, whether on the Georgia or Alabama side of the installation, hunters need to possess the appropriate licenses, permits and identification while hunting.

Individuals hunting on the Georgia side of the installation need to show evidence of successful completion of a Hunter Safety Course approved by the state of Georgia if born on or after Jan. 1, 1961. To hunt on the Alabama side of the installation, persons born on or after Aug. 1, 1977, need to show evidence of successful completion of a Hunter Safety Course approved by the state of Alabama.

Georgia and Alabama hunters born before the mandatory Hunter Safety Course cutoff dates need to view the Fort Benning Hunter Safety Film prior to getting issued a license.

Licenses, permits regulations and maps remain available at the Outdoor Recreation Office, Building 1707, or the County Store, Uchee Creek Army Campground and Marina.

Experts recommend winterizing boat trailers

ShoreLand'r Trailers

Depending upon where you live in the United States, the transition into fall possibly means one of two things for fishermen and boaters — it's time to winterize the boat or the fishing and boating begins to improve.

In either case, now seems the best time to winterize or service your boat trailer to make sure of its readiness, whether your next boating trip takes place next week or next spring.

Usually, only simple maintenance is required. Trailer experts offer these simple, do-it-yourself tips for trailer owners.

•Lubricate the wheel bearings. This remains one of the most important items to include on your winterization list.

If your trailer contains bearing protectors, which replace the hub's dust cover with a grease fitting and reservoir, just pump new marine grease into the bearing until the springloaded piston reaches approximately 1/8 inch from its seated position. Otherwise, lubricating standard bearings requires that you jack up the trailer, remove the wheels and tire.

Next, take off the hub's dust cap and remove the cotter key and axle nut. The bearings can now be removed, cleaned in a solvent and inspected for wear or damage. Perform the same actions for the bearing races inside the hub. To finish, pack the bearings with marine grease and reassemble.

•Check the tires. While you work at road level, inspect the tire tread for excessive or uneven wear. If less than a quarter-inch of tread remains, replace the tires.

•Inspect the frame. This step requires taking a close look at the frame. Look for rust or cracks. A few rust spots remain easy to fix.

Check the springs for broken leaves. Depending upon the size of your trailer, two to five leaves possibly exist. If you find any broken, take the trailer to a dealer for competent repair or replacement.

•Inspect the bunks and rollers. Not often do the bunks or rollers need replacement, but a quick inspection shows any problems.

•Check the lights and electrical wiring. Hook up the trailer to your truck or car and make sure all the lights work — both running lights and turn signals. Check the lenses for cracks and breaks and replace them, if necessary.

•Check the winch and straps. Lubricate the winch mechanism if required and play out the entire length of the winch strap. Inspect for frayed edges or cuts and replace, if necessary.

Now is a good time to make sure of proper winding onto the winch spool.

If hooking up your boat and heading for warmer water appeals to you, just take off.

OPERATION HOLIDAY

AUSA event kicks off today

USAIC Public Affairs Office

The Chattahoochee Valley-Fort Benning Chapter of the Association of the U.S. Army kicks off its annual Operation Holiday on the plaza level of the Columbus Government Center today at 9 a.m.

Officials from Fort Benning, Columbus and Phenix City will join citizens of the tri-community and Soldiers from the post at the downtown ceremony.

Operation Holiday runs through Jan. 4, and is designed for single Soldiers and unaccompanied married Soldiers who are remaining at Fort Benning during the holidays. It provides activities for those Soldiers and gives local citizens and businesses an opportunity to express appreciation to Soldiers for their contributions to the nation's defense.

This year, a variety of special events are planned, including attendance at ice hockey games, college and professional basketball and football games, participation in bowling tournaments and other recreational, athletic and chapel activities.

AUSA will provide a limited number of tickets for the following off-post events during the holiday season:

The schedule is:

•Today is the Kick Off Ceremony at 9 a.m. at the Columbus Government Center; and the Atlanta Hawks play the New Jersey Nets at 7:30 p.m. in Atlanta at the Omni.

•Saturday, basketball classic, University of Georgia play Brigham Young University and Georgia Institute of Technology plays University of Kentucky at 5 p.m. in the Georgia Dome, Atlanta.

•Wednesday, the Blue and Gray Football Game starts at noon in Montgomery.

•Thursday offers skating at the Lambert Skate Center at 6:30 p.m. in Columbus; and the Atlanta Hawks play the Chicago Bulls at 7:30 p.m. in Atlanta.

•Dec. 27, the Columbus Cottonmouths play the Nashville Nighthawks at 7:30 p.m. in the Columbus Civic Center.

•Dec. 28, the Peach Bowl is at 8 p.m. at the Georgia Dome.

•Dec. 30, Auburn University plays Winthrop at 3 p.m. in the Auburn University Arena.

•Jan. 2 offers skating at 6:30 p.m. at the Lambert Skate Center in Columbus; and the Columbus Cottonmouths play the Macon Whoopee at 7:30 p.m. in the Columbus Civic Center.

•Jan. 4, the Atlanta Hawks play the N.Y. Knicks at 7:30 p.m. in the Omni in Atlanta.

This is the 17th year that AUSA has worked with community groups in providing activities for Soldiers who remain on post during the holiday period.

On post, the Directorate of Community Activities will be sponsoring many athletic events and activities for Soldiers.

ITB Soldiers leave for exodus

By Lynn M. Bieda
Special to The Bayonet©

Every year since the 1960's, exodus helps soldiers go home for Christmas.

During this time of year the Infantry Training Brigade more than 2,000 soldiers home for the holidays.

"This is a community relations operation done every year, except in 1990 because of Desert Shield and Desert Storm," said David Christensen, exodus coordinator, Directorate of Transportation.

"This is the Soldier's opportunity to spend time with their family," he said.

The whole process started Wednesday at 8 p.m. at Theater 3 on Sand Hill and ends Jan. 2 around midnight.

According to Christensen, there were 5 commercial buses waiting to be boarded for destinations like New Orleans, St. Louis or Miami Wednesday. More than 300 Soldiers who live within a 500-mile radius of Fort Benning took the buses home.

For the more than 1,700 Soldiers who need to fly home, 41 civilian chartered buses take them to the Atlanta airport.

"They started the battalion pick ups at 10 p.m. and the buses left Fort Benning by 1 a.m.," Christensen said.

Not all Soldiers left by planes or buses. Nearly 100 Soldiers left by privately owned vehicles, but by 5 p.m. Thursday, the Soldiers from Sand Hill were on their way home for Christmas.

"Since ITB Soldiers do all their training at Fort Benning, including, basic training and advanced individual training, they have their choice to go home for Christmas or after graduation," Christensen said.

Exodus planning starts in July every year with the various installation directorates helping to support it, Christensen said.

The Directorate of Public Works performs any required maintenance, including repairs on the heating system, and they make sure the dining facility is open for anyone who stays at Fort Benning.

The Directorate of Logistics provides the buses, and vans for transportation around Sand Hill and for the drill sergeants who go to the airport and the bus depots.

The Directorate of Information Management provides telephone service to Theater 3 and the special telephone line in the Atlanta airport.

The military police play a significant role, Christensen continued. MPs help restrict traffic on the night of departure and when the Soldiers return, dog units inspect every piece of luggage that comes back.

Post finance helps with arranging for the soldiers to have enough money to go home.

"We have three scheduled ticket and pay days for exodus," Christensen said. "The Soldiers can draw an advance in pay to help with their ticket if they need it. Soldiers can buy tickets from Carlson Wagonlit Travel if they want to. They sell about 90 percent of the airline tickets, anywhere between 1,700 and 1,900 airline tickets, to Sand Hill soldiers.

"This is an historical event, which takes place every year so that soldiers can be with their families," Christensen said.

Post bids farewell to deputy commander

By Lori Egan
Bayonet staff writer

An Honor Bayonet ceremony took place Dec. 13 on York Field to bid farewell to the assistant commandant of the Infantry Center and the Infantry School.

Brig. Gen. Robert T. Clark leaves Fort Benning to go to Fort Monroe, Va., where he will be the deputy chief of staff for Combat Developments.

Clark expressed mixed emotions about leaving Fort Benning and told the crowd he had been trying to hold onto the assistant commandant job until next summer.

"The job I'm going to at Fort Monroe is certainly important to the future of the Army and the Infantry, but this will be the first time in 10 years that I will be in a nontroop assignment and I can tell you that I am thankful for every day I have spent with Soldiers, and I will do all I can to work for them in the years ahead," Clark said.

"Fort Benning is the crown jewel of Army installations," Clark said. "Serving here has been close to a religious experience because everything that is good and proper about the Army exists right here — tough dynamic Infantry Soldiers, (noncommissioned officers) and officers training America's youth.

"(We have) premier fighting units and support units that are ready at this moment to go anywhere in the world to fight and win. And a civilian work force that is second to none, totally dedicated to preserving the goodness of Fort Benning while working hard to fix things that need improvement."

Clark concluded his comments by saying the only thing he wouldn't miss are the infamous elevators in Infantry Hall.

Commanding General Maj. Gen. Carl F. Ernst said he would miss Clark's counsel and advice.

"Brig. Gen. Clark is the epitome of what a senior Infantryman should be," Ernst said. "He can shepherd an outfit in the direction it needs to go and he has the ability to take me aside and tell me if I'm going in the wrong direction.

"He was part of the Infantry traveling team, making sure the units were receiving the quality product they need from the home of the Infantry," Ernst said.

"The traveling team received high marks from our clients and customers around the world," Ernst said.

During the ceremony, Clark was awarded the Legion of Merit and the Order of St. Maurice.

Col. Walter Wojdakowski will become the new deputy commanding general upon his arrival in January.

"Serving here has been close to a religious experience because everything that is good and proper about the Army exists right here — tough, dynamic Infantry Soldiers, and (noncommissioned officers) and officers training America's youth."

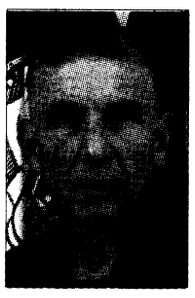
CG wishes community best for holidays

As 1996 draws to an end, I extend my thanks to the Soldiers, civilians and family members of Fort Benning for all you've done this year to make this post the best place in the Army to serve, live and work.



You've brought honor and distinction not only to Fort Benning, but the U.S. Army as well, as you manned the ramparts of freedom here and in many foreign lands.

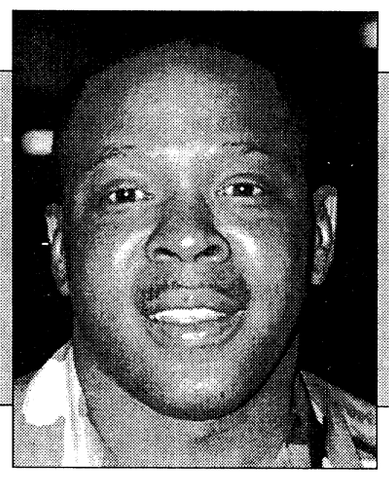
Whether at home or abroad, Fort Benning Soldiers stand out for they set the standards for all others to follow. They do so because they have leaders who care, leaders who want the best for their troops and their families.

I hope you will be able to take advantage of this holiday period to be with loved ones to share and enjoy the spirit of the Christmas season.

Also, I ask you to remember our Soldiers who are deployed this Christmas in Bosnia, Korea, Sinai, Macedonia, Haiti and other parts of the world to help deliver the age old hope of peace on earth; that God will comfort them and their families during this special season.

It goes without saying that this is also a time of year that we need to be on our guard. We need to 'look out for the other guy,' for while we may have our 'act together,' we can't be sure about others who may have had a bit too much Christmas cheer. So don't take chances and have a sensible and sane holiday.

Maj. Gen. Carl F. Ernst thanks Soldiers, civilians for Fort Benning's success.



Linda joins me in wishing you the very best for the holidays and that 1997 will be a year of peace, prosperity and happiness for our nation, our Army, our Soldiers and all of the Fort Benning family.

Merry Christmas and Happy New Year.

— Maj. Gen. Carl F. Ernst
Commanding General

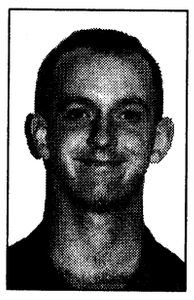
Holiday spirit

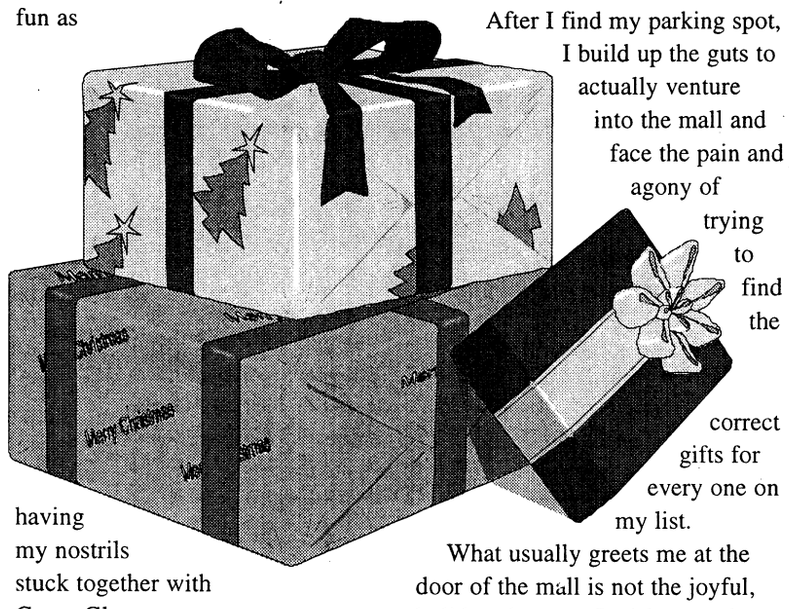
People tend to forget what is really important during Christmas

By Brian R. Voller
Bayonet staff writer



commentary

It's the most wonderful time of the year, right? Sometimes, I wonder if it really is the most wonderful time of the year.



I know my stress level goes through the roof during the holiday season. There's the fact that I have to shell out hard-earned money on gifts, but I get past that problem by just reminding myself that these are the holidays and I'm supposed to give and be merry.

There's also the problem of having to go visit the family back home in Chicago. While I love my family very much and I miss being close to them, I know my returning home to visit always causes some kind of problem. One of the great traditions in my household is the fact that my mother and I can't be in the same room for more than a couple hours before a fight breaks out.

But by far the biggest problem I hate having to endure year after year is the dreaded Christmas shopping experience. I'm not a big fan of shopping to begin with, but it's during the holidays that I find going to the mall about as much fun as having my nostrils stuck together with Crazy Glue.

Brian R. Voller believes people tend to lose sight of what's important during the holidays.

Every year, I force myself to brave the traffic and the insults, and make my way to the Christmas hell we call the mall. After about 20 minutes, I'm close to calling it quits, packing up my stuff and becoming a hermit somewhere on the outskirts of the Rocky Mountains, but I haven't even found a parking place yet.

To find a parking spot, I usually have to stalk some poor couple as they make their way back to their car; and then, I have to fly into that spot before some ignorant parking virus tries to steal it from me.

After I find my parking spot, I build up the guts to actually venture into the mall and face the pain and agony of trying to find the correct gifts for every one on my list.

What usually greets me at the door of the mall is not the joyful, holiday shoppers I wish were there. No, I usually get met by a flock of rabid shoppers who would not think twice about putting a bullet in me for the last Tickle Me Elmo.

But I carry on, and I stand in the lines and I deal with the people who take up entire aisles looking at candy canes, and I handle the rude people who cut in front of me, and I don't kill the little kids who are screaming at their parents, and I even manage to find some nice gifts for people.

But what keeps haunting me the whole time I go shopping year after year is what ever happened to the Christmas spirit? When did we as a whole lose track of what is really important?

I believe that it is during the holiday season that we should try a little harder to smile, and we should try to lend a hand to some one who needs it. Sometimes, I think we get too caught up in our own agendas to take the time to realize what it is we're celebrating, no matter what a person's reasons are for celebrating during the holidays.

My biggest wish for this holiday season would be for the first time in my life to say I really celebrated Christmas — that I actually took the time to sit back and enjoy what is supposed to be the most wonderful time of the year.

Holidays bring traffic hazards, breeds accidents

By Jim Ozley
Directorate of Public Safety

commentary

The Christmas and New Year holiday season, with its intense activity, breeds accidents.

Leaders need to remind their soldiers of the following lessons before allowing them to leave for a long weekend or other holiday period. During the last 10 years, 31 Fort Benning Soldiers were injured, two of them fatally, in holiday accidents involving privately owned vehicles.

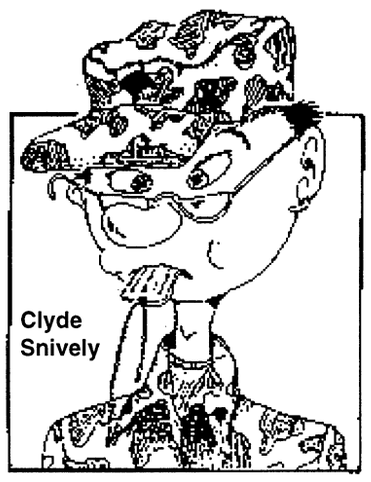
•Lesson 1 — Horseplay on dirt roads. Recently, four Soldiers were attempting a "high speed, highway patrol turned around" in a pickup truck. The vehicle was found with the emergency break fully engaged, the steering wheel fumed to the extreme right, upside down in the middle of the road.

Two Soldiers in the front of the vehicle were not wearing seat belts and the two passengers were thrown out of the bed of the truck. The vehicle was not registered on post, carried no insurance and the driver was cited for driving under the influence of alcohol. Luckily, no one was killed.

•Lesson 2 — Adjust speed for road conditions. A Soldier was traveling south on Interstate-185 on his motorcycle. The vehicle entered a detour "S" curve approaching Macon Road.

As he entered the curve, the vehicle struck a cement median and the Soldier slid with his motorcycle for approximately 200 feet before coming to rest. The Soldier was pronounced dead at the accident scene.

•Lesson 3 — No game rules in recreational activity. A Soldier was participating in a unit basketball game during a Christmas tournament. He received a blow to the left side of his head while attempting to gain control of a loose ball. The Soldier was transported to the medical center with follow up surgery at Martin Army Community Hospital.



•Lesson 4 — Be alert in unknown terrain. A Soldier was newly assigned to Fort Benning and was attempting to locate Building 4317 to attend a mandatory class. She failed to see a stop sign and was involved in a traffic accident. She was wearing her seat belt and no one was injured.

•Lesson 5 — Too tired for road conditions. A Soldier departed Fort Benning at approximately 2 a.m. for December exodus leave. He traveled by bus to Jonesboro, Ark., where he was met by his mother and sister. He insisted on driving while en route home from the bus station. The vehicle was struck by a train and all occupants were killed.

These lessons serve as a reminder to be careful not only during the holiday season but throughout the year.

Group sponsors display for Native American month

By Michael E. Lynch
13th Corps Support Battalion

Drumbeats echoed through the Audie Murphy Fitness Center Nov. 19 as the 36th Engineer Group sponsored a display for Native American History Month.

The display honored Native Americans and their contributions to society. It included many genuine artifacts and artwork from several different tribes to reflect the history and diversity of Native American culture.

The display attracted many Soldiers, several of whom descended from Native Americans. Pfc. Karrie L. Collins, 608th Ordnance Company, part Seminole Indian, appreciated the recognition.

"Native Americans need to be recognized," Collins said. "People forget who they are."

Pvt. 2 Adrian Scott of 926th Medical Detachment, part Lumbee Indian, agreed.

"This is an opportunity for other people to see things about Native Americans," Scott said. "It makes me feel proud of my heritage."

The items on display came on loan from the collection of Pat Myres who is part Choctaw. Myres and her daughter, Shannon, explained the significance and use of the pieces displayed.

Most of the items were common objects that reflected Native American beliefs, traditions, or simply their way of life. Myres explained that studying the artifacts is key to understanding the cultures.

"Everything had a use," Myres said. "For example, the dream catcher, which is popular in many homes today, comes from the Native American culture. Native Americans believed that bad dreams would be caught in the wires of the dream catcher, while good ones would pass through the small hole in the center.

"The same is true of the medicine wheel used to ward off illness, which has lines pointing in four directions to invoke protection from all directions," Myres said.

The books and artwork featured many different tribes from all over the United States. The pictures illustrated the clothes they wore, the tools they used and the dwellings they lived in.

"Seeing the things they used is a clue to where and how they lived," Shannon Myres said. "They dressed according to the climate, so you could tell whether they were from the plains or the mountains."

Many Soldiers were unaware of the contributions made by Native Americans and were surprised by some of the things they learned.

Spc. Steven Giese, Headquarters and Headquarters Detachment, 13th Corps Support Battalion, learned quite a bit about Native American history. He was particularly impressed with Pat's description of the "code talkers," a group of Navajos formed into a military signal unit during World War II.

Pat explained that the unit translated secret messages into the Navajo language, a code that was reportedly never broken.

"It's very informative," said Giese, a communications specialist. "It helps people become aware of the contributions Native Americans have made to the military."

Col. Thomas L. Bailey, commander, 36th Engineer Group, sponsored the observance of Native American Heritage Month to foster a better understanding of the many cultures which are part of our society.

"This is a great display," he said. "It's important that we have events like this, to celebrate the contributions our Soldiers have made to our society and the Army." Bailey said that some Soldiers may not even be aware of how the cultures of other people have become linked throughout American history.

Sgt. Jerome Harrington, Company A, 317th Engineer Battalion, agreed.

"I think it's admirable that the Army does things like this," he said. "Everyone's not black or white, and it's good to recognize the cultures and achievements of other people."

By Lynn M. Bieda
Special to The Bayonet ©

The command of the Infantry Training Brigade changed hands Monday during a ceremony at Wetherby Field.

Col. Abraham J. Turner took command of ITB from Col. Johnny W. Brooks who leaves Fort Benning for a job in the Pentagon.

Commanding General Maj. Gen. Carl F. Ernst spoke during the ceremony, congratulating and welcoming Turner to Fort Benning.

"He is a consummate Infantryman who's done it all," Ernst said. "He's done everything that you would expect to have done to be selected for a brigade command."

Turner said returning to the Infantry Training Brigade as it's commander was an honor.

"It is indeed an honor and a distinct privilege to serve as commander of this outstanding brigade," Turner said.

"My wife, Linda, and I are proud to assume the command team responsibilities — to become a great command team like Johnny and Chris Brooks.

Turner is a distinguished military graduate of South Carolina State College Army ROTC where he was commissioned as a lieutenant of Infantry in May 1976.

He spent his initial tour of duty at Fort Benning where he was assigned as a training company executive officer and then training company commander.

Another assignment Turner held At Fort Benning was as a U.S. Army ranger instructor, Morgan Team, Benning Ranger Division.

His next attended Command and General Staff College at Fort Leavenworth, Kan., and was then posted to an assignment with a mechanized Infantry battalion in 2nd Infantry Division, Korea, as the battalion operations officer.

Following his assignment to Korea, Turner returned to the 82nd Airborne Division. During this tour, he was assigned as 1st Brigade S-4; executive officer, 1st Battalion, 504th Parachute Infantry Regiment; deputy G3, 82nd Airborne Division; and commander, 3rd Battalion, 504th Parachute Infantry Regiment.

While serving as executive officer, 1st Battalion, 504th Parachute Infantry Regiment, he deployed to combat with the 82nd Airborne Division during Operation Just Cause in 1989, and Desert Storm in 1990 to 1991.

In 1994, Turner attended the U.S. Army War College at Carlisle Barracks, Penn., where, in addition to his military studies, he earned a masters of public administration degree from Shippensburg University, Shippensburg, Penn.

AG to conduct personnel classes

Adjutant General

Due to the merger of enlisted military occupational specialties in the military personnel fields, Fort Benning has initiated military personnel technical training for Soldiers and civilians. This training supplements the installation unit major subordinate commands training program.

A series of over 50 personnel training classes will enhance the skill development of military and civilian employees. Some topics include: process recommendation for award, prepare service-member's Group Life Insurance, identification cards for military and family members, review processing of enlisted data assignment cycle and process.

All military and civilians working in the military personnel field are welcome to attend. This includes personnel administration centers and separate units.

Classes are conducted bi-weekly on Wednesday 1 to 3 p.m. at Infantry Hall.

All attendees will receive a detailed handout of topics discussed. At the beginning of each class, attendees will receive an instructor training evaluation form so they can evaluate the content of material and identify their individual customer needs. At the end of each class, this data will be critiqued by the class instructor, Sgt. Maj. Allen D. Thrower, Adjutant General sergeant major, and the division noncommissioned officer in charge to evaluate the technical training and to learn what the customers want. The goal of this training is to provide continuous improvement for all military and civilian employees working in the personnel field.

Fort Benning continues to strive for excellence

By April N. Olsen
USAIC Public Affairs Office

Fort Benning is once again representing Training and Doctrine Command at the Department of the Army level in the Army Communities of Excellence competition and is listed in the top 10 in our first year of entering the President's Quality Award.

Being named the best Army installation in the world means nothing if the Soldiers, civilians and family members working and living on the post do not believe in it, Maj. Gen. Carl F. Ernst, post Commanding General, recently said.

Although Fort Benning has already submitted application packets for both competitions, the judging is still underway, Sarah McLaney, the chief of the Quality Management Division of the Directorate of Resource Management, said.

An evaluation team from each competition will visit Fort Benning early next year.

The PQA team will be on post Jan. 13 through17 and the ACOE team will be here Jan. 20 through 24.

At a recent Quality Awards Breakfast, Ernst recognized outstanding employees and volunteers, saying that hard work and commitment to excellence is what makes Fort Benning the best large Army installation in the continental U. S.

"We already know that we're the best at what we do," McLaney said, "we just have to prove it to the teams."

McLaney said the teams will be coming to see what we at Fort Benning see everyday — commitment to excellence and continuous improvement.

She said that the most important thing for everyone on the installation to do is "just keep doing the outstanding job that you've always done."

McLaney added that there are a few things the Fort Benning community should be aware of in order to understand our role in the ACOE and PQA competition and the reasons for the evaluation teams' visits.

"Some people out there think we just gear up for ACOE when the evaluation teams come around," McLaney said, "but that's not true."

"Quality management is a full-time, year-round program," she said.

She said that continuous improvement is always a goal of the Army and Fort Benning.

"This is not new," McLaney said, "the Army has always tried to improve, but we haven't always recognized it as a competition."

Army regulations state that the primary responsibilities of all leaders are to provide motivation, purpose and direction, Fort Benning has a Quality Executive Steering Team for this, McLaney said.

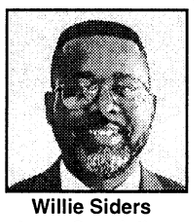
The team is responsible for executing quality decisions and is charged with leading the effort in developing key processes and in establishing an organizational culture of continuous improvement, McLaney said.

The QUEST consists of the Commanding General, the deputy commanding general, the Infantry Center chief of staff and command sergeant major, the garrison commander and the garrison sergeant major, the Infantry School chief of staff and command sergeant major, the brigade level commanders, director and chiefs of major activities.

Fort Benning's quality message to the rest of the world can be summed up in five phrases, McLaney.

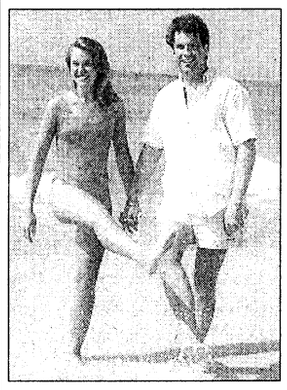
•"What we do." The USAIC and Fort Benning has named five key processes: Infantry, Training, Infantry Doctrine, Infantry Future, Force Projection and Base Operations. There is a key process team for each of these which guide the development of each process.

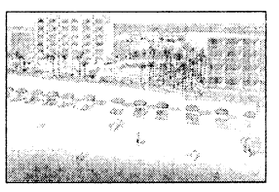
•"Whom we do it for." Besides aiming to provide outstanding service to all soldiers, civilians and family members on and off post, Fort Benning is home to the Infantry School. The school trains all Infantry Soldiers from basic training to noncommissioned officer and officer courses.



•"Why we do it." Key business drivers established by the QUEST provide the framework used to make and prioritize decisions about resources, organizational structure and personnel. The key business drivers relate to the five key processes.

•"How well we do it." The key process teams establish measures of performance for the key processes in three formats: quarterly training briefs, which capture measures and successes for our military units; quarterly operations briefs, which look at the internal performance of our organizational activities and directorates; and the Program Resource Advisory Committee, which allocates resources for accomplishing our missions.





•"How can we do it better?" The QUEST solicits recommendations from customers, suppliers and employees in order to ensure the standard of excellence is met and to make decisions that improve overall results.

McLaney said these five phrases focus the work force on quality service to the customer and continuous improvement.

Lights, camera, action

Holidays begins with lighting of Christmas tree, menorah

By Lisa M. Hibbert
Bayonet staff writer

On a balmy December evening, as the sky grew dark, the Fort Benning community gathered on the lawn of the Field of the Four Chaplains to witness the lighting of the post Christmas tree and menorah Dec. 13.

Jazzy holiday tunes wafted in the air as the Infantry Band played beside the tree and menorah.

Band members, Spc. Jennifer Whitaker and Sgt. Kirk Fulton caroled for the crowd, belting out "Hark the Herald Angels Sing" and "Oh, Christmas Tree." The audience even joined in, singing along with the band.

Chaplain (Col.) Herbert Kitchens, post chaplain, opened the ceremony with a welcoming prayer. In it, he asked for the Lord's blessing to fall upon each family and individual represented at Fort Benning.

Rabbi Arthur Rutberg, spiritual leader of the Shearith Israel Synagogue in Columbus, told the story behind Hannukah and the lighting of the menorah, a candelabra bearing eight candles, to the audience.

A war between the Greeks and the Jews erupted in Jerusalem. A royal edict was put out forbidding the practice of Judaism under the penalty of death. The holy temple became a sanctuary of Zeus, chief of the Greek gods.

Angered, the Maccabees entered into battle. When they entered their desecrated temple, they found it destroyed. But when they entered the holiest of holy, they found a candle. With it remained only enough oil to burn the candle for one day.

The Maccabees knew that it took a week to produce more oil, but they stepped out in faith and lit the candle anyway. Miraculously, the candle burned for eight days, allowing enough time for more oil to be produced and [illegible] lights, children from everywhere allowing the light of Judaism to [illegible] running and mobbed him at the continuously. During the season of [illegible]dium.
Hannukah, a candle is lit everyday for eight days, symbolizing the burning of the oil.

Chaplain (Maj.) Andrew Bullard, Martin Army Community Hospital chaplain, talked about the real reason for the Christmas season.

Reading from the second chapter of the book of Luke, Bullard read the story of the birth of Jesus.

This story tells of how Joseph and the virgin Mary were in Bethlehem when she brought forth her firstborn son, Jesus, and wrapped him in swaddling clothes in a manger.

As some neighboring shepherds tended to their flocks, an angel appeared, causing the glow of the Lord to shine around them. This frightened the shepherds but the angel told him not to be afraid because he brought good news of great joy for everyone.

"For unto you is born in the city of David a saviour, which is Christ the Lord (Luke 2:11)."

After the chaplains finished, Commanding General Maj. Gen. Carl F. Ernst took the microphone and shared his holiday wishes with the audience.

"My wife, Linda, and I hope that everyone has a wonderful Christmas and we hope and pray that 1997 is prosperous for everyone," Ernst said. "I am so thankful to be at Fort Benning and to work with the quality Soldiers and civilians that are here.

"I hope that as you pause to reflect on what is important in your life this season, you remember those stationed around the world, away from their families and ask for God's blessing upon them and their families," Ernst said.

When Ernst called for volunteers to step forth to help him flip the switch that would fill the night sky with the colorful munching on their cookies, they stopped again to gaze upon the Christmas tree and menorah.

As the crowd gazed upon the tree and the menorah, they sang a hymn and departed, moving inside the reception hall of The Infantry Center Chapel.

Santa Claus, who took time out of his busy schedule to appear at Fort Benning, waited inside to greet the children. After listening to their wish lists, Santa gave each child a candy cane.

As the people left the chapel, silently

Children surround Chaplain (Col.) Herbert Kitchens, post chaplain and Maj. Gen. Carl F. Ernst, Commanding General at the Tree and Menorah lighting ceremony.

Community health nurse, Carmen Ramos, shows Caitlynn Walker, daughter of Staff Sgt. Lee and Tiffanie Walker, Company B, 5th Ranger Training Brigade, some of the toys on display at the Post Exchange Dec. 11.

TOY STORY

Use care when choosing gifts for small children

By Lynn M. Bieda
Special to The Bayonet©

Each year, hundreds and hundreds of children receive injuries due to their Christmas toys.

"No toy is bad, unless it is defective, but it can be harmful if a child is not mature enough for that toy," said Capt. Kareece Larry, R.N., acting chief of Community Health Nursing at Martin Army Community Hospital.

From 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. at the Main Mall Post Exchange Dec. 11, Larry and two other registered nurses set up a booth to answer questions as part of the toy safety program. They were there to explain toy safety and to give away things such as canvas bags, candy canes, safety coloring books and medicine flasks.

"We want parents to remember to check the boxes of toys for the age level to make sure their child is in that age range," Larry said.

If a child is younger than the age range and the toy has removable parts, then that can be a hazard.

"As an example, we ask that people think in terms of a choke tube — meaning something like a toilet paper roll tube. If a piece of a toy is small enough to fit through that tube, then your child could choke on it."

Another nurse from MACH further explained.

"A lot of times, parents just buy what their child wants and they don't realize their child is

Examine children's gifts for dangerous parts

Egleston Children's Hospital

The child safety experts with Egleston Children's Hospital at Emory University encourage all parents to take extra time this holiday season to thoroughly examine any gifts purchased for children.

Sadly enough, seemingly innocent toys such as tricycles, marbles and balloons cause thousands of injuries each year. In fact, statistics from the U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission estimate that in 1995, more than 150,800 children under the age of 15 received treatment in hospital emergency rooms due to toy-related injuries.

"No time is a good time for a medical emergency, but the holidays are especially hard when little ones are involved," said Egleston emergency center nurse Maryann Johnston. "It's a hectic time of year with many distractions. People are traveling more on-the-road. It makes for a stressful and confusing time of year for many of us, which is all the more reason to take those extra precautions with children's gifts," Johnston said.

Johnston recommends avoiding toys with small, removable parts for children younger than the age of 4.

"Infants and toddlers have a tendency to put things in their mouth; toys with small parts can easily become lodged in a young child's throat," Johnston said.

Other recommended tips — parents should watch out for toys with sharp points or edges since they could enable a child to unintentionally stab himself or herself or another person. The item needs to be free of glass or metal edges. Toys that require electricity remain best suited for children 8 years and older, and parents of infants and toddlers need to take precaution with toys with long strings or cords such as necklaces and child mobiles because they often cause strangulation.

"Once an infant is strong enough to pull himself or herself up or pull on the hanging objects, the mobile becomes a dangerous toy that the child could get tangled in," Johnston said.

Avoid dart guns or other toys possibly capable of firing articles not intended for use in the toy, such as pencils or nails, Johnston said.

When shopping for toys, always read the packaging, especially if you're not quite sure if the toy is suited for the child.

"Most major toy manufacturers give age recommendations for the use of the toy, which can be a helpful guideline for parents," Johnston said. Parents also need to look for safety labels including "flame retardant" or "flame resistant" on fabric products and "washable" or "hygienic materials" on stuffed toys and dolls, she added.

The toy's packaging can also be hazardous for children.

COMMUNITY LIFE

Post residents need to take care of housing

By Lori Egan
Bayonet staff writer

As the half-day holiday schedule quickly approaches, Christmas decorations and lights adorn many of the homes in the post housing areas.

Nora Stebbins, a McGraw Manor resident, put up her family's Christmas decorations and lights.

"I wish I had a tree in my front yard so I could put lights on it, too," Stebbins said. "This is my home, my neighborhood, not just a temporary place to reside. We've lived here for more than three years," she said, "It beats the heck out of paying rent."

Most everyone agrees not paying rent and the bills associated with it is one of the advantages of being in the military. However, living on post is a privilege, not a right, said Sgt. Maj. Arthur Van Allen, garrison sergeant major.

For the servicemembers and their families on the waiting list, quarters are a privilege, it's the families who've been here awhile who've forgotten the benefits of living on post, Van Allen said.

"Sometimes we need to remind ourselves that things could be worse," he said.

Living on post allows children to attend Department of Defense schools, not pay garbage, water, electrical and gas bills and the big bill itself, rent.

Fort Benning residents also avoid the rush hour commute. For most of the soldiers who live on post, travel to and from work takes less than 20 minutes from their front door to their workplace.

Another perk is safety.

"I feel a lot safer living on post," Stebbins said. "But sometimes I wonder if people feel too safe. I see small children, 2 or 3 years old, playing outside without any adult supervision. Even though we live in a safer neighborhood, parents need to watch and be responsible for their children.

"I really hate it when other children come and take my children's toys from our front yard. I've had to reclaim the toys from as far as two buildings away."

But the main reason parents need to watch their children is because people don't always obey the speed limit in the housing areas, Stebbins said.

Speeding in the housing areas is a problem, Van Allen said.

"What is it going to take for people to slow down?" Van Allen asked. "A child's death?"

"I wish the (military police) could patrol the area more often," Stebbins said.

The Community Oriented Police Squad recently started patrolling the neighborhoods out of the community life offices, Jennifer Morgan, community life officer said.

This way, the MPs become more familiar with the neighborhoods and the families, she said.

"Staying mostly in the neighborhoods helps us stop most of the problems before they start," said Pfc. Stephen Broome, an MP with a neighborhood beat.

The key to living in quarters is courtesy, Stebbins said.

"It's the little every day things that people need to remember to be courteous about," she said. "If you have a dog, pick up the poop — daily. Don't let the dog go to the neighbor's to do his business and then leave the poop for the kids to step in."

Morgan agreed, people need to be courteous and respectful of each other.

There are approximately 4,000 sets of quarters on this post; people need to remember the golden rule, she said.

One thing about living on post is that the residents should know exactly what they can and can't do — after all this is the Army, Van Allen said.

The assignment of post housing falls under the provisions of Army Regulation 210-50 and U.S. Army Infantry Center Regulation 210-50, post policy for quarters.

Issues such as speeding, children, dogs and even when to cut the grass are addressed in the regs, said Ron Smith, chief of Family Housing, Directorate of Public Works.

Roughly 300 families are on the waiting list for government quarters, Smith said.

For these families who await government quarters, people who take advantage of the system, abuse the housing privilege or abandon their quarters are costing these soldiers money, Van Allen said.

"It's the the young enlisted soldiers who can't afford the rents in Columbus — they're the ones who are accepting substandard housing because that's what they can afford," Van Allen said.

Spc. Paul Perkins, Battery A, 1st Battalion, 10th Field Artillery, 3rd Brigade, 3rd Infantry Division (Mechanized), has been on the housing list for nearly four months.

"I want to live on post because it is cheaper to live there, no power bills, closer to work," Perkins said. "And the on-post schools are another advantage."

Van Allen said that in recent months there have been problems of families not clearing quarters properly, not getting along with their neighbors and some families have been asked to move.

According to U.S. Army Infantry Center Regulation 210-50, quarters may be terminated for the conduct of the sponsor, family members or guests that is contrary to good standards of behavior, safety, health or morals; misuse or illegal use of housing; and, failure to maintain housing and grounds in an acceptable condition.

"If everyone plays by the rules, we won't have to waste resources," Van Allen said.

Bottom line, Fort Benning trains soldiers, Van Allen said. If the Soldier's first sergeant, company commander and battalion command sergeant major are settling a housing problem with all the other agencies involved, then who is training the Soldiers?

SAFETY:

Choose toys wisely

"Watch for large plastic bags the toy is packaged in because they could be a suffocation device," she said. "Always tie the plastic in a knot and dispose of immediately so children don't play with it and accidentally smother themselves."

If there is an older sibling, parents need to make sure they separate the toys. A safe toy for a 7-year-old isn't safe for a 2-year-old.

"Explain to the older sibling why his toy might be dangerous for his little brother or sister and make sure the toy is always put away after they have played with it," Johnston said. "If possible, encourage the child not to play with the toy in front of the smaller sibling."

Spencer High receives national award for automotive program

By Lisa M.Hibbert
Bayonet staff writer

William H. Spencer High School received national recognition Dec. 6 when retired Master Sgt. Eugene Shaw, Automotive Mechanics teacher, accepted an award recognizing the school as possessing the best secondary automotive technicians training program in the state of Georgia during the year 1996.

The Industry Planning Counsel presented the award to Shaw at the State Directors of Trade and Industrial Education meeting in Ohio. This is the second time the school received this award, the first was in 1988.

Shaw, who was an automotive instructor in the Army prior to retirement, came to Spencer in 1978. More than 1,000 students passed through this program since Shaw began working there.

"The program is an Automotive Service Excellence certified program," Shaw said. "Spencer was the second high school in the state to receive this type of certification."

Having this certification helped Spencer earn the top award. But the judges also wanted to know about job placement for the students after they graduate from high school.

"Many of our students get jobs right away," Shaw said. "A lot of them go on to become certified mechanics and specialize in a specific part of the car like brakes or alignments."

For winning this award, the school will receive a $16,000 car. Unfortunately the car can not be driven but the students will use it for training purposes, Shaw said.

"Last year Carl Gregory Honda donated a '95 Honda Civic to us," Shaw said. "We took it and broke it down so the students could fix it."

The students also work on their own, teachers' and family members' automobiles.

Recycle: saves $$

By Lynn M. Bieda
Special to The Bayonet©

Across the country, landfill space debates occur frequently. No one seems to want a landfill near their house, yet no one seems to want to recycle. Not so on Fort Benning.

"There is a 73 percent curbside participation rate of recycling here," said Tom Moore, Materials Recovery (Recycling), manager. "That is above the national average by 6 percent.

To help keep up this rate, the recycling center plans to put up a voluntary recycling drop-off center at the Main Mall, Moore said.

"This is a pilot program that we hope to turn into a long-range plan. It will be an additional place for household recycling that can be used by retirees who live off post, and for others who don't live in an area that recycles."

The voluntary recycling center consists of two stands with several different bins in which people can put their materials into correctly labeled bins.

"We want everyone to realize when they recycle, it helps conserve landfill space," said Glenn Todd, Customer Relations specialist, Business Management Division, Directorate of Public Works. "The less a landfill is used because of recycling, the longer we can use the space.

"Current cost to develop one acre of landfill space is $500,000," Todd said.

The recycling center won the Army Community of Excellence Award for 1994 and 1995, Moore said.

"To continue our efforts, we want everyone to recycle. Our goal is 100 percent participation in recycling," Moore said.

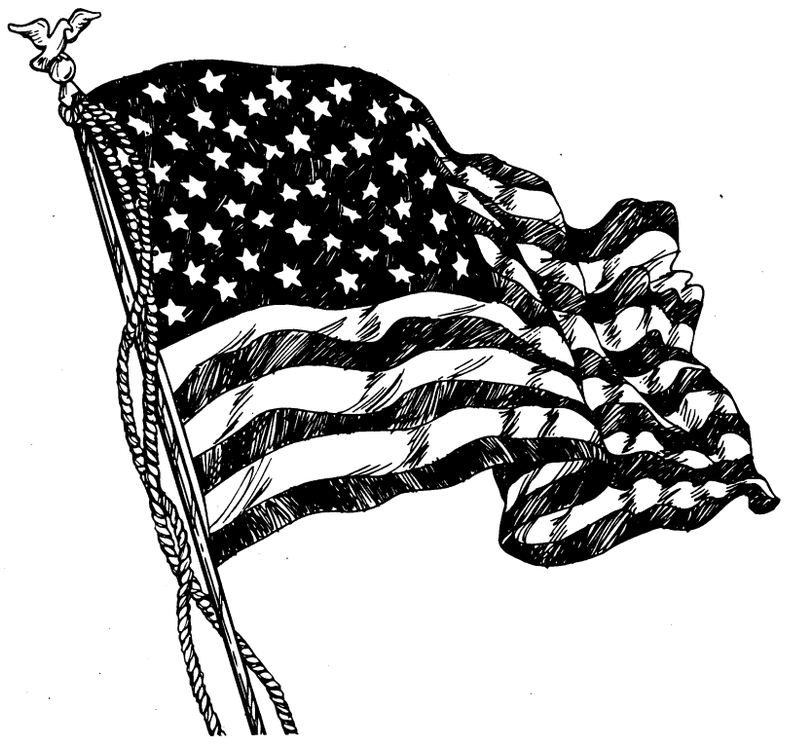
not old enough for that toy," said Ely Melendez, R.N., Community Health Nursing, MACH.

The toy safety program was started in 1992 after a survey from Martin Army Community Hospital confirmed there were many injuries caused from toys on Fort Benning, Larry said.

"Our main purpose is to provide toy safety awareness and home safety awareness for parents," Who said. "We try to do this at Christmas time because parents are buying more toys. We also try to set up booths at the health fair and the PX.

"If we can prevent one injury, then we've done our job," Larry said.



"At the booths, we get a lot of questions from parents. Sometimes they just don't know how a toy works, or that they should supervise their children when they play with removable parts," Melendez said.

For more information on toy safety, call Community Health Nursing at 545-4040.

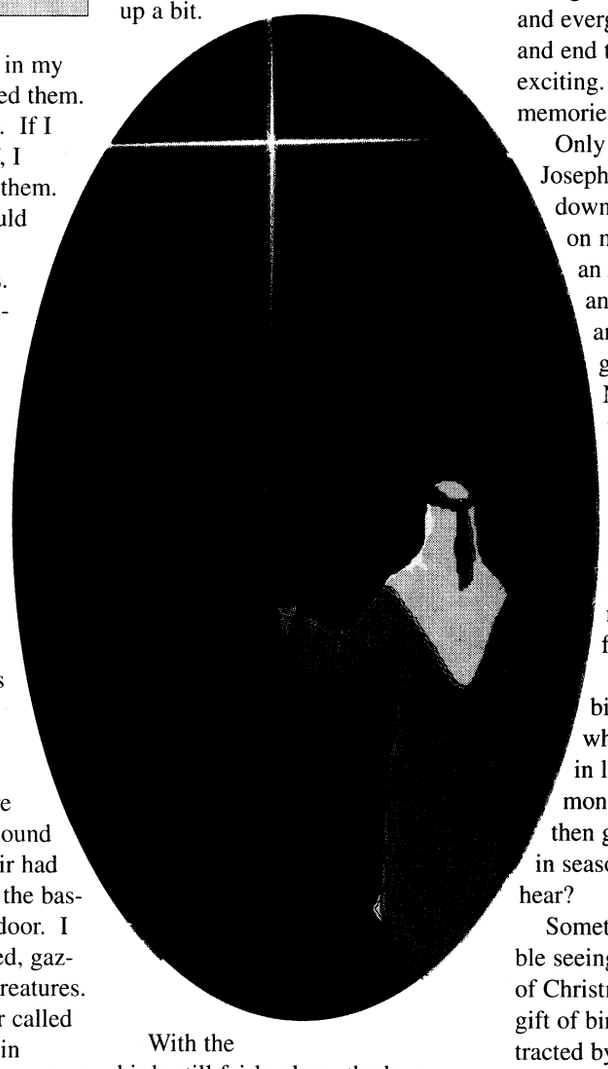
Enjoy the Christmas season by noticing life's little treasures

By Robert Thompson
Family Life Center

A flock of birds flew over my head. They were small black ones, maybe about 40 of them, although I didn't try to count.

reflections

I was crossing the street in my neighborhood when I noticed them. They were coming my way. If I had climbed up on my roof, I think I could have touched them. They were so low that I could hear the wind whistling through their beating wings.



Because I was still crossing the street, I checked it again: all clear. Three junior high boys were shooting baskets on the driveway next door. The metal backboard clanged out to the neighborhood the boys' every attempt to be Larry Bird or Michael Jordan.

Exciting basketball memories from former days — Wilt Chamberlain and others — filed past my mind's eye.

But the birds! They were directly overhead, and the sound of their wings beating the air had wrestled my attention from the basketball championship next door. I reached the curb and stopped, gazing up at those little sleek creatures.

The backboard next door called to me, so I turned my head in answer. But something in my mind said, "Bird wings! When have you ever heard the beating of bird wings?" A quick memory search turned up nothing.

They were past me but still close enough to hear. I turned up my ears as loud as they would go. I wanted to absorb and capture that sound. It was a kind of whirring hum, but not a noisy kind. It was soft, yet strong. Because the birds seemed to be flapping in unison, the hum had a steady, pulsing rhythm to it, like the loping of a cold engine which needs throttled up a bit.

With the birds still fairly close, the hum faded, but I could still see their wings, moving up and down in quiet rhythm. I wished I could join them, to savor their special music. Scarcely 10 seconds had elapsed since I first saw them. I was glad I had laid aside my basketball fantasies long enough to enjoy this spontaneous treat.

I went into our house and noticed the decorations. Our Christmas tree stood across the room, sporting its festive garb, which our son had proudly arranged. Candles, bells, stockings and evergreen trimmed the hearth and end tables. The setting was exciting. It stirred up holiday memories.

Only the night before, Mary, Joseph and the baby looked down from above the fireplace on my family and me. We lit an Advent candle and read ancient words of promise and hope. In the background, we heard "Silent Night" on the stereo. My wife suggested that we ponder the ceramic manger family for a moment. We gazed upon the Bethlehem trio with the soft beating of the music in our ears. All else faded into the background.

The manger scene, the birds, a Christmas song, a whirring hum — somethings in life are rare; some are common. Somethings are here and then gone; others are around us in season. What do we see and hear?

Sometimes, I have as much trouble seeing and hearing the message of Christmas as I do noticing the gift of birds in flight. I can be distracted by basketballs and Christmas bells. Yet, the bounty of both the rare and the common waits patiently but eagerly for us.

The reward of paying attention, of watching and listening, is the quiet, strong joy of discovering all

When I hear the music, it reminds me of my grandmother.

I remember the way she'd comfort me. Make me feel secure. Even today, when I hear the music, I can almost hear her saying, 'Everything'll be just fine.' I'll never forget how good that security felt.

I want that same security when I invest my money. That's why I decided on Savings Bonds. Because when I buy Bonds, I get security, not surprises. I like knowing things are where I put them, and that they'll stay there. That's peace of mind for me. Savings Bonds are backed by the full faith and credit of the United States. And my Payroll Savings Plan lets me save something each payday. I know exactly where my money goes. I think my grandmother would have approved.

Ask your employer or banker about saving with U.S. Savings Bonds. For all the right reasons.

Remember to spread some Christmas joy

By William D. Smith
USAIC Chaplains Office

What makes Christmas that very special time of year? As a little boy, I remember that the time between Thanksgiving and Christmas appeared to be the longest, yet the most enjoyable, time of the year.

reflections

The streets filled with the excitement of Christmas. The songs of Christmas swirled through the busy crowds as each one hurried hither and yon to get that special present for a son or a daughter, a sister or a brother, a mother or a father, a friend or a relative.

The decorations in the stores and on the streets met the eyes of the young and the old, reminding all "Tis the Season to be Jolly." As the time drew near to Christmas day, even the house glowed with the sights and sounds and, yes, the smell of the season

The tree was trimmed and decorated, the records heralded the spirit of the time, and the smell of homemade candy, turkey and pumpkin pie reminded one from morning until night that the very special day was not far away.

Looking back, I wonder what made it so special? My parents were poor and could not afford more than one or two presents for each child. My cousins and friends always seemed to receive the expensive gifts, while my sister and I knew we could never expect to see those types of gifts under our tree.

Yet, we did not seem to care. We shared their toys and their excitement became our excitement.

I believe two things made that time of year so precious and unique. One was the love in the home and in the gift.

The other was love we all had toward the son of God whose birth is celebrated Christmas day.

May your Christmas be blest this year with your love for each other as you give and your love for God as you receive his gift, Jesus Christ.

"Blessed is the nation whose God is the Lord."
Psalms 33:12

West beats East All Stars 26-25

By John W. Peeler
Special to The Bayonet©

In the last intramural football game of the season, the West All Stars, representing 29th Infantry Regiment, defeated the East All Stars, representing the 3rd Brigade, 3rd Infantry Division (Mechanized), 26-25 at Doughboy Stadium Dec. 13 in the first post All Star game.

The East received the opening kick off and marched down to the West 10-yard line before the drive stalled on a costly 10-yard penalty.

The West took over possession but were unable to move the ball against the tough East defense and went three and out.

On the ensuing possession, the East mixed a short passing game with well-timed running plays to pull the West defense in close before scoring on a 45-yard touchdown strike to wide receiver Kendrick Lucas. The extra point conversion was not good and the East took an early 6-0 lead.

The West quickly responded on their next possession with a solid running game and short passes, driving to the 40-yard line before scoring on a 40-yard touchdown pass to Elliot Reed.

With the failed extra point conversion, the score was knotted up at 6-6.

The East quickly went to work on the West pass defense on the next series, marching down to the 5-yard line with short and intermediate passes. With the ball near the goal line, East quarterback Jeffrey Sumpter surprised the defense by running the ball in for the touchdown. The extra point conversion was no good and the East took a 12-6 lead with time running out in the half.

With time running out in the half, the West took possession of the ball and tried to move the ball downfield against

Jingle Bell Jog raises money for Santa's Castle

Michael E. Lynch

Runners get off the starting line on a chilly December morning at the Jingle Bell Jog. The run raised money for Santa's Castle.

By Michael E. Lynch
13th Corps Support Battalion

The first Jingle Bell Jog kicked off Saturday to raise money for Santa's Castle.

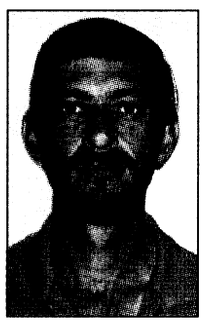
The 13th Corps Support Battalion, 36th Engineer Group, conducted the race, which drew more than 41 runners. The event included a 10-kilometer race and a five-kilometer fun run with prizes to the overall winners in each race.

The entrance fee covered the cost of a commemorative T-shirt with a small donation to Santa's Castle.

"We started this about three weeks ago," event organizer Paul Price said. "Last year, the battalion hosted a Sports Day to raise money, and we thought this might be a good idea. We know how to make it even better next year."

The weather was a chilly 38 degrees in the morning, which may have kept many early entrants away.

"We sold a lot more T-shirts than we had runners show up," Price said.



The runners who came seemed to enjoy it. Michael Bowman from the 1st Battalion, 10th Field Artillery, 3rd Brigade, 3rd Infantry Division (Mechanized), was one of those who braved the cold and ran the 10-kilometer race.

"This was a good event and a good course," Bowman said. "It was a great day to run and I am

The Fort Benning youth basketball program continued Saturday at the Harmony Church Field House with 10 games in its second week of competition.

The 6- to 7-year-old Yellow Jackets defeated the Magics by a score of 26-7 Dec. 13.

The Yellow Jackets were led to victory by the shooting of Marvell Glover with 14 points and Sam Leon contributing 7 points for the Magics.

In the night's second game, the Chicago Bulls and the Super Sonics battled to a 13-13 tie. Damias Lyles and Demario Stewart scored 4 points each for the Bulls while LaQwon Perryman led the Sonics with 9 points.

It was the 8- to 9-year-olds' turn to take the court Dec. 14 as the Regulators squared off against the Blue Devils with the Regulators taking a decisive 23-5 victory. Raymond Jones led the Regulators to victory with 9 points while Marcus Lewis and Brandon Farrior scored 2 points apiece for the the Blue Devils.

In the late 8- to 9-year-old game, the Bulls slipped past the Spurs with a 13-8 win. The Bulls leading scorers included George Fredricks and Kevin Gray with 4 points each. For the Spurs, Taneshia McFadden led the pack with 4 points, followed with 2 points from Richard Hite.

In the 10- to 11-year-old games, the Supersonics faced off against Team 4, the Bull Dogs took on the Spurs and the Hurricanes were pitted against the Blue Devils.

Brian Sheppard scored 18 points for the Super Sonics as they blasted Team 4 by a score of 26-7. Kenneth Armbrister scored 4 of the 7 points for Team 4 in a game where the Super Sonics shut down the Team 4 offense.

In the second game of the day, the Bull Dogs slipped past the Spurs 17-16. Leon Frazier led the scoring for the Bull Dogs with 9 points and Joshua Artis led the scoring for the Spurs for the second straight week with 8 points.

The Blue Devils blew past the Hurricanes 19-8 in the third 10- to 11-year-old game with the scoring of trio Dejarvis Rogers with 6 points and Dommnick Mister and Justin Taituave with 4 points each. It was a team effort for the Hurricanes as Omar Tyler, Landon Braye, Joshua Sullivan and John Schook each scored 2 points to round out the scoring for the Canes.

In the 12- to 15-year-old division, Brandon Webb and Roland Lusane weaved a spell to lead the Magics to a 30-26 victory over the Tarheels. Webb and Lusane scored 13 and 12 points respectively while the leading scorer for the Tarheels was Travis Slone with 15 points.

In the second 12- to 15-year-old game, the Celtics got a big game from Omar Roland who scored 20 points to lead the Celtics past the Lakers 46-42. The combination of John Fernandez, Jermaine Stephens and Doran McConnell scored 12 points each for the Lakers to keep the game close.

Reggie McFadden continued as the high scorer for the Orangemen with 27 points as they battled to a 41-41 tie with the Monstars. The leading scores for the Monstars were Cornelius Lights with 10 points and Brian McClay with 9 points.

ALL STARS: West snags victory the tough East defense. With seven seconds left in the half, a pass attempt was picked off by East defensive back Clifton Evans at the 20-yard line. Evans weaved in and out of West defenders and got down to the West 1-yard line as time expired in the half.

In the second half, both defensive teams held each other's offense in check until a 2-yard pass to West receiver Bryan Walker tied the score at 12-12. The West was not able to convert the extra point, and going into the last three minutes of the game, it appeared the game would go to overtime.

On the East's next possession, the offense went to work passing their way to midfield. On a third and long play, the East quarterback, flushed out of the pocket, threw what was an apparent errant pass. The ball bounced off two West defensive backs into the hands of Lucas who ran down the sideline to pay dirt. With the score, the East took a late 18-12 lead.

With the game clock winding down, it appeared all was lost for the West. The West received the ensuing kick-off and started deep in their own territory.

The East defense held the West on two successive plays and with six seconds left in the game, a time out was called.

West quarterback Elyon Zeigler set up in shotgun formation with three receivers to the right side.

The East defensive line put a fierce rush on the quarterback forcing Ziegler to sidestep to the right. Zeigler heaved a 65-yard hail Mary pass down to the goal line with three East defenders and receiver Reed all going up for the ball. The West bench erupted as Reed came down with the ball in the end zone as time expired. The extra point conversion was denied by the East defense and the game headed into overtime.

Starting at the 20-yard line, it would not take the East long to score as Duane Gallery got the ball in the end zone for a 24-18 East lead. The East went for a 1-point conversion attempt and was successful for a 25-18 lead.

The West took their shot at the end zone next starting from the 20-yard line. On third down, Ziegler hit Robert Smith with a touchdown strike, making the score 25-24.

Needing 1 point to tie the score, the West decided to go for the 2-point conversion.

Ziegler started the play from the shotgun formation. Flushed out of the pocket by the East defense, Ziegler threw the ball to the end zone to David McKenney who made a tip-toe catch along the back line for the conversion and a 26-25 West win.

RUN: Community participation helps during holidays glad I came."

The race was staffed by Soldiers from the 13th Combat Support Battalion, 36th Engineer Group, who volunteered to help run the operation.

Samuel Lebara and Wendy Michael, both of the 608th Ordnance Company, 13th CSB said they thoroughly enjoyed the event.

"This was an excellent race," Lebara said. "I am glad I came out to help." Michael agreed.

"I found it very motivating to see people coming out to run for a good cause," Michael said.

Gerald Bates ran the five-kilometer fun run with his wife, Margaret.

"We really enjoyed the run, our whole family came out, and lots of people brought their kids, too," Bates said. "It was nice to do something together."

"I think all the kids really had a good time," said Thomas Bailey. Bailey also ran the five-kilometer fun run with his wife, Sue.

"We try to do something to raise money for Santa's Castle every year," Bailey said. "This race is a good idea that we'll probably do again next year."

The winner of the 10-kilometer male division was Jim Hoover who finished with a time of 41minutes, 47 seconds.

The top overall female finisher in the five-kilometer run was Julie Brown at 53:35 and Rene Gomez finishing at 23:15.

At the conclusion of the run, Terry Mazure accepted a check from Bates on behalf of Santa's Castle.

"We're very pleased and honored that you've done this to help us," Mazure said.

"Santa's Castle provides an important service to the families of the Fort Benning community, and we couldn't do it without the fund-raisers the units do for us. We can help a lot of people with this."
