Post revs up for quality visit

By April N. Olsen
USAIC Public Affairs Office

When evaluation teams for the Army Communities of Excellence and President's Quality Award competitions visit post later this month, they will be looking at several aspects of how Fort Benning operates.

According to Sarah McLaney, the Chief of the Quality Management Division in the Directorate of Resource Management, the teams will focus on how we do business, or our "processes."

McLaney said the Infantry Center and Fort Benning has identified five key processes by which the installation's mission are defined. These process are Infantry training, Infantry doctrine, Infantry future, force projection and base operations.

"While each is handled by different agencies under various leaderships, the five processes collectively make up the heart of what Fort Benning is and does," McLaney said.

Fort Benning's application packet for the ACOE competition, pooled together by McLaney's office and approved by the Commanding General, explains the key processes. The Quality Management Division compiled the packet with the help of other directorates and agencies on post.

McLaney said that while it is not practical for every person in the Fort Benning community to read the application packet, it does point out basic information that community members should be aware of.

The first key process is Infantry training. Fort Benning is home to the Infantry School, which trains all Infantry soldiers from basic training to noncommissioned officer and officer courses. The Infantry Center is responsible for providing well-trained soldiers and leaders to the Army wide Infantry force. Fort Benning fully supports the Infantry School with instructors, classrooms, training areas and other materials needed to produce the highest quality Soldier and leader in comparison to any other training installation. Fort Benning's major competitors are other TRADOC schools.

The second key process, Infantry doctrine, aims to produce the best trained and equipped Infantry Soldiers and leaders in comparison to any other foreign Army in the world. This process involves the revision of current doctrine, distributing it to Soldiers and units throughout the Infantry and incorporating feedback into future revision. The Infantry Center is also concerned with developing new doctrine as new equipment and weapons' system are tested for Force XXI.

Infantry future, the third key process, is also involved in the development of the Army of the 21st century. The goal is to field the most technologically advanced, lethal and survivable Infantry combat system in the world. This puts the post in direct competition with every foreign producer of modern soldier combat systems in the international arms market place.

Fort Benning is home to the 3rd Brigade, 3rd Infantry Division (Mechanized), the 75th Ranger Regiment and the 36th Engineer Group (Combat), the fourth key process of force projection remains important. Since Fort Benning units have been involved in every major deployment of U.S. forces in the last decade, and the installation must be ready to deploy Soldiers and units anywhere in the world. Fort Benning competes with other power projection platforms for the rapid and timely deployment for forces worldwide. Success in this area is apparent with the operation of the Conus Replacement Center's support of Operation Joint Endeavor since December 1995.

The fifth key process is base operations and concerns every aspect of the Fort Benning community. The daily operation of the installation, as well as the support of Soldiers, civilians and family members is included in base operations.

CFC ends, earns $445,000 for various charities

By April Olsen
USAIC Public Affairs Office

The Fort Benning Combined Federal Campaign raised more than $445,000 for various charities in two months.

Those charities include the Fort Benning Soldier and Family Support Association which funds installation programs such as Youth Services, the food locker, family unit networks, the Red Cross and the Boy and Girl Scouts.

This year's campaign did not meet the post goal of $500,000 but did raise more money than recent years with more than 10,000 Fort Benning's Soldiers and civilians participating, said Staff Sgt. Charles Sears, the installation CFC noncommissioned officer in charge

This year's campaign raised $52,000 for the Fort Benning fund or code 9001, which supports the SFSA and $96,000 for the downtown equivalent code 9000 for the United Way of Chattahoochee Valley.

New to the 1996 campaign was an agreement worked out by Commanding General Maj. Gen. Carl F. Ernst and local United Way President Jerry White, which allows the donations from both 9000 and 9001 to be shared.

Sears said that many people were upset when they found out about the agreement at the beginning of the campaign because they didn't understand it.

"But without it," Sears said, "we wouldn't have had enough to run the on post programs."

He said the programs funded by the SFSA needed at least $62,000 to be donated to match what they had last year, which already included certain downsizing due to diminishing resources.

According to the agreement, the 9000 and 9001 donations will be equally shared enabling the on post programs to receive funding for another year, Sears said.

Post to commemorate MLK

By Lori Egan
Bayonet staff writer

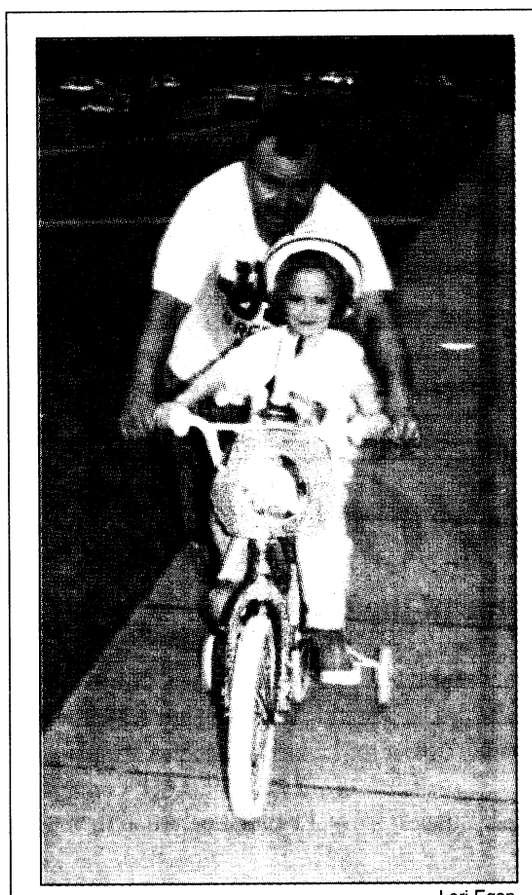
The Equal Opportunity Office will sponsor a commemorative service honoring Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., Jan. 15 at 11 a.m. in Marshall Auditorium, Infantry Hall, Building 4.

The public is invited and is asked to be seated by 10:50 a.m. Admission is free.

The guest speaker will be Claiborne Douglas Haughton Jr., principal director and director for Civilian Equal Employment Opportunity, Office of the Deputy Assistant Secretary of Defense (Equal Opportunity).

Haughton received the 1995 "Making of the King Holiday Award" from Coretta Scott King and the Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. Holiday Commission.

"We commemorate Martin Luther King Day because he was very influential in bringing civil rights issues to the forefront of the American public," said Master Sgt. Beverly Riley, Fort Benning's Equal Opportunity Office noncommissioned officer in charge.



King believed people could live together harmoniously, with racial equality, Riley said.

Initially, Ronald Reagan signed legislation in Nov. 1983 to create a federal holiday to honor Martin Luther King.

President Bill Clinton signed the King Holiday and Service Act into law in 1994 to officially designate the holiday to be a day of national service and to encourage interracial cooperation and anti-youth violence initiatives, Riley said.

"If everyone looks at the theme for this year, which is 'Make Real the Dream for the 21st Century,' we will be able to take Martin Luther King's dream and apply it to our every day lives, to make this a better place to live — no more hatred or crime, but people living in harmony with each other," Riley said.

"We sometimes take for granted the real meaning and significance of special days and holidays," said Commanding General Maj. Gen. Carl F. Ernst. "Gathering for this service will remind us of what this great American's life meant for our country."

COOKING

Proper skills evade bachelor

By Dov Schwartz
USAIC Public Affairs Office

commentary

Dov Schwartz says kitchen utensils still boggle his mind.

I can't cook. Nada. Zero. Zilch. At a recent birthday party, a PAO colleague with culinary interests, received a spatula and a whisk. I needed to ask someone what they were. I thought they were instruments of torture banned by the Geneva Convention.

I'm so bad in the kitchen that I burn water in the microwave. (Speaking of microwave ovens, has anyone figured out how to set the clock on them? I've had my microwave for almost five years and it still reads 0:00). I've been in my apartment for two months and I just discovered I have a dishwasher. Of course you need dishes to use it, but that's a different matter. You see, when you say "kitchen" to me, what you are really saying is the room where I keep the Doritos.

I needed help. So I called a friend. Let's call him Ted. Ted is a vegetarian. This means he doesn't eat burgers. I don't really trust him. Ted loves to cook. He doesn't know a thing about important stuff like who hit the winning home run in the 1960 world series (Hint: Pirate Second Baseman) but, cooking he knows. Ted said no problem. "I'll send you some recipes." I went to the dictionary to look up the word "recipe."

The recipes arrived the other day. I eagerly set about reading them. The first recipe called for a "pinch" of seasoning. What is a pinch? When I think of a pinch, I think between my "cheek and gum." How the devil is someone supposed to know how much a pinch is? Is there a pinch meter? Pinch measuring cup? Pinch spoon? If you use two pinches is it a punch? (You knew it was coming.)

The next ingredient called for a skosh of sauce. A skosh? Now please, I defy any human being to quantify a skosh for me. The smartest guy in the world? Donald Trump? My boss? Anyone? What is a skosh?

While we're discussing ingredients, have you ever eaten one of those microwaveable veggie burgers? Have you ever eaten a hockey puck? Same thing.

The cooking directions for veggie burgers say something like microwave for 90 seconds, depending on the power of the oven, "cooking time may vary."

Cooking time may vary? An extra 10 seconds in a microwave gives you...well, a hockey puck.

Have you ever looked at the names of veggie burgers? "Chick Chick," "Grillers," "Harvest Greens." I suggest more appropriate names like Tums for the Tummy or in the spirit of the season, Mylanta for Santa (Hey, I needed a rhyme.)

Now about the ingredients. Have you ever read the ingredients in veggie burgers? Autolyzed Yeast Extract, Carrageenan, Aspartic Acid. And they call it "all natural?"

That reminds me ... several years ago a certain fast food chain launched a program to encourage healthy eating. This chain, whose golden arches dot our landscape but will remain nameless, listed on its paper place mats the ingredients and caloric levels for its menu. I ask you, and think long and hard about this one, when you order a burger, fries and a Coke do you really want to know the exact amount of artery hardening, heart attack causing gunk in it? A simple Surgeon Generals warning: "anyone eating in a fast food restaurant whose pitch man is a clown wearing yellow pajamas should hold off on a cholesterol test for a while," would do just fine.

I recently wrote a letter to Bill Gates. I am optimistic that Microsoft will eventually solve my cooking problems. Someday soon I expect to be able to click the food icon on my computer for dinner. Double click for seconds. Of course, gourmet will require an upgrade.

In the meantime, I have some recipes to try.

New year

Cold turkey doesn't make for sucessful resolutions

By Brian R. Voller
Bayonet staff writer

commentary

Brian R. Voller Says people need to try and achieve their resolutions slowly.

I don't know about anyone else but I've made New Year's resolutions in the past and I've either forgotten about them after two days, or I fail at them miserably.

So why make them? The answer to the question I'm not completely sure about, but I think it has something to do with our nature as human beings to constantly try and improve ourselves.

The only problem is that our nature as human beings is to put too much stress on ourselves to be victorious with our resolution in the shortest amount of time. Which is why I don't like New Year's resolutions and why I think a lot of people fail at them.

Let's look for instance at the "I'm going to lose 10 pounds before spring so I can go to the beach and not get harpooned."

I have made this resolution in the past. I think it would be swell to have wash board abs and a tight little buttox. But time and time again I make the same resolution and I put so much pressure on myself to lose the weight I end up being completely miserable and the same weight I was before Christmas.

Another tragedy that can occur because of this resolution is the idea that people can lose weight by starving themselves. Well guess what? Studies show that starving yourself screws up your metabolism, so when you start to eat like a normal human being again you gain all the weight you lost back and then some. Another failed attempt at a resolution.

Another popular resolution that people like to make is the quitting smoking resolution. This one boggles my mind. Quitting smoking is admirable and it works wonders for your health. But why is the standard New Year's resolution to quit smoking cold turkey. Going cold turkey is by far the most difficult way to quit. Why not try to quit gradually, or go get the patch, military personnel get the patch and the gum for free (hint hint).

It's not that I want to be a downer or that I think making resolution are a really bad ideas. I think the way most people go about them is wrong. I, more than any other person, am guilty of trying too hard to achieve my resolutions.

Basically I am the case study of what not to do. For example, a few years ago, long before I joined the Army, I decided it would be a good idea to try lose some weight. At the time I was a very heavy 255 pounds. I decided to try and lose weight the old-fashioned way — I ate fruit three meals a day and didn't do a lick of exercise. Of course, after two weeks I wanted to eat the family dog and I'd only lost five pounds, which was water weight.

Then I decided to go about it gradually, I took my time, ate right and put myself on a very rigorous exercise program. Within 15 months I weighed 185 pounds and I was able to join the Army and be where I am today.

What I'm really trying to say here is don't try and kill yourself to make your resolution a reality. When we were babies we didn't just get up and sprint 100 meters. No, we took slow little baby steps and day by day we got better.

Try and do the same thing with your New Year's resolutions. Take them slowly and gradually and give yourself compliments for little things, such as avoiding a candy bar, or only smoking three cigarettes in one day. Those little boosts of confidence will start to grow until before you know it, your resolution is a reality.

ARMY EMERGENCY RELIEF

Agency offers financial assistance for college

Army Emergency Relief

Soldiers with college-aged children often wonder how to afford education costs. Many people fail to realize that Army Emergency Relief sometimes helps with this dilemma.

The AER provides financial assistance through scholarships. This relatively little-known resource makes college possible for many people.

To qualify for financial assistance through AER, students need to enroll and gain acceptance or pending acceptance as a full-time student for the entire academic year in a post-secondary educational institution approved by the U.S. Department of Education.

Scholarships remain available through AER. Eligible students include those unmarried, U.S. citizens or permanent U.S. residents, under the age of 22 on June 1 preceding the beginning of the school year for which the scholarship is requested and authorized dependents of active duty, retired or deceased soldiers.

The awarding of scholarships remains based on financial need, academic achievement and individual accomplishments.

Students awarded scholarships need to reapply each year. Students need to remain in good academic standing and carry a minimum cumulative grade point average of 2.0 to receive scholarships. By requiring students to reapply each year, AER monitors their progress.

As part of the application, students need to submit a family financial analysis and an essay describing their goals and accomplishments.

Applications must be submitted by March 1, for the upcoming academic year. Initial applications request forms became available Nov. 1 for school year 1997-1998 at AER, Building 2643, Soldiers' Plaza. The office opens at 8 a.m. and closes at 5 p.m. Monday through Friday.

AER officials mail letters to students in mid-May from Headquarters, AER, informing them whether they receive scholarships, and if so, how much.

Speaker offers views on Army's future, logisticians role

By Michael E. Lynch
13th Corps Support Battalion

The 13th Corps Support Battalion served as host for Fort Benning's Inaugural Logistics Winter Formal Dec. 19.

The purpose of the formal was to bring logistics officers and noncommissioned officers from units all over Fort Benning together for fun and fellowship.

The logisticians are assigned to units, which support all the major units on Fort Benning, and come from many different branches in the Army.

"We all work together for different training events, but we don't often get together socially because we belong to different units," said 1st Lt. Chris Robertson, one of the organizers of the event. "This was a lot of fun."

"We decided early that we wanted to invite one of the senior logisticians in the Army," said Lt. Col. Gerald Bates, commander of the 13th CSB. "We wanted to get a view from the top. Most of the officers here have never been to the Pentagon, so it's interesting to hear a logistician's perspective on where the Army is and where it's going."

The guest speaker for the evening was Brig. Gen. Harry D. Gatanas, assistant deputy for Systems Management and Horizontal Technology Integration, Office of the Assistant Secretary of the Army. Gatanas spoke on the future of the Army and the role of logisticians in it.

As the Army's budget continues to decline, Gatanas said, three priorities remain: near term readiness, quality of life, and modernization. Of these, modernization has received low priority, especially for support units.

"Although modernization is very important, we decided to take some risk in the near term to fund our modernization accounts," Gatanas said. "This has resulted in an anemic modernization program, and certainly combat service support equipment has been a big bill payer. That policy is changing now, as the Army moves toward the 21st century.

"Our modernization strategy today is to upgrade current platforms with the latest technology, to include the infusion of information technology," Gatanas said. "We are maintaining a technology investment to support Army XXI, and we're investing in a minimum number of new major systems."

These new developments mean improvements for support soldiers, too. Gatanas cited the soon-to-be-fielded "Family of Medium Tactical Vehicles", manuals being distributed on compact disk — read only memory, and initiatives currently underway to improve maintenance operations and spare parts accountability through improved technology as examples of how logistics continues to evolve and improve.

"All these programs and initiatives will assist logisticians significantly in providing even more responsive and higher quality combat service support to our warfighters," Gatanas said.

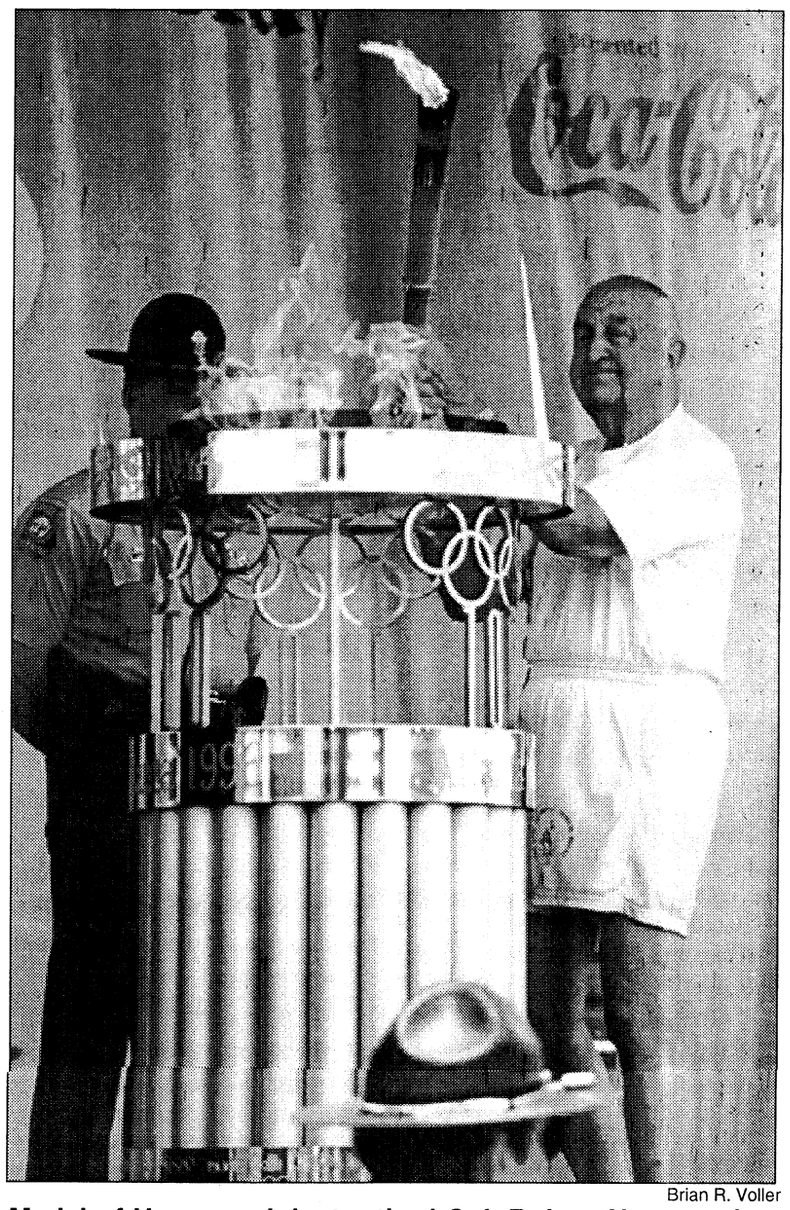
Bayonet staff writer

Many changes occurred at Fort Benning during the year from Commanding General Maj. Gen. Carl F. Ernst's arrival to Command to Sgt. Maj. George D. Conrad's retirement after more than 34 years in the Army.



History was made when Fort Benning became the location for the first privately owned theater to open on a military post. The Olympics offered its very own challenge when the women's softball teams stayed in Henry Hall, Building 73.

The following recaps the year, month by month by the Bayonet publication date.

Post community does much during outgoing year

Lisa M. Hibbert

Eighth-grader Tenisha McCarroll pulls the meat from the inside of her group's Halloween pumpkin while her partners, Takia Holland and Dianthia Holmes, also in the eighth grade look on. The students attend Don C. Faith Middle School.

By Lisa M. Hibbert
Bayonet staff writer

The Fort Benning community accomplished many things in 1996 from being invited to visit with President Bill Clinton to students winning awards in essay writing contests. The following recounts some of the highlights of the outgoing year.

January

•Jan. 10: William H. Spencer High School Student Omar R. Kendall, son of Chief Warrant Officer 2 Melville and Luci Kendall participated in an exchange-student program that took him to Japan. Kendall lived with his Japanese host family for two weeks.

•Jan. 29: Fort Benning spouse, Pamela Wade, wife of Chief Warrant Officer Willie L. Wade, met President Bill Clinton and represented the post at the White House. Wade, along with six other spouses representing all of the military components with family members in Bosnia, was invited by the president to come to Washington, D.C.

February

•Feb. 6: First-grader Michael Hulgan, student at Freddie Stowers Elementary School, received a Stallion award for assisting 6-year-old Shawna Roseman with finding her way home when she got lost. Roseman received the school's Quick Thinkers certificate for remembering her phone number.

•Feb. 8: Judy Hanley, a sixth-grade science teacher at Don C. Faith Middle school received the District VI Teacher of the Year Award from the Georgia Science Teacher Association and Georgia Middle Grades Science teacher of the Year.

•Feb. 17: Staff Sgt. Eric Phillips, supply sergeant for the Infantry Training Brigade, took time to give back to the community by sponsoring a benefit fashion show.

March

•March 23: Nine-year-old Robin Hinds of Fort Benning, daughter of Capt. Russ and Beth Hinds, competed against 110 gymnasts in Cartersville, Ga. and placed second overall.

April

•April 3: Soldiers gave back by participating in the Muscogee County Special Olympics.

•April 6: The search was on when children searched the lawns of Riverside, home of the Commanding General, looking for Easter eggs.

•April 19: Several families participated in the Fort Benning Christian Family Retreat at Uchee Creek Army Campgrounds.

May

•May 4: Two post Girl Scouts earned top honors for service. Sylvia Singleton, daughter of Command Sgt. Maj. Edmond and Barbara Singleton, earned a Silver Leadership Award and a Silver Award, and Cynthia Cole, daughter of Chief Warrant Officer 2 William and Ruth Cole, received a Gold Award, the highest attainable award in the Girl Scouts.

June

•June 7: First lady Hillary Rodham Clinton sponsored an essay contest for all Department of Defense Schools entitled "Living in a Global Village." The award winning essay writers from Fort Benning were third-grader Courtney Kostich of Dexter Elementary, seventh-grader Michelle Welch of Faith Middle and sixth-grader Brian Marchant also of Faith Middle School.

•June 14: Good Samaritan Vilma Kyle-Lewis from the School of the Americas returned a lost ring, valued at more than $6,000 to its rightful owner.

•June 28: Vickie Rodgers, principal of Herbert J. Dexter Elementary received national recognition from the National Association of Elementary School Principals as a 1996 Distinguished Principal.

July

•July 4: Fort Benning celebrated Independence Day with a bang as hundreds of people gathered on York Field to for food, fun and fireworks.

•July 19: T'Nesha Pruitt, Faith Middle School student and daughter of Carlas and Staff Sgt. Warren Pruitt of the Henry Caro Noncommissioned Officer Academy, launched a singing career with the help of manager Sgt. Lavonnie Haynes, also of the NCO Academy.

August

•Aug. 2: The Department of Defense adopted a new healthcare system, Tricare, which will eventually replace the Civilian Health and Medical Program for the Uniformed Services.

•Aug. 2: Post Boy Scouts earned fishing and motor-boating merit badges with the assistance of the Fort Benning Bass Anglers Sport and Sportsman Society Club.

•Aug. 23: The Dwight D. Eisenhower Army Medical Center at Fort Gordon, Ga., became the first hospital in the Department of Defense to obtain a treatment facility for Cardiac Surgery and Interventional Cardiology.

September

•Sept. 27: Fort Benning voted for new community life mayors.

October

•Oct. 20: Post residents turned out, along with members of the Columbus and Phenix City communities, to pick up trash along the Chattahoochee River.

•Oct. 24: Motivational speaker Drew Brown visited Faith Middle School and gives students an anti-drug, pro-education message.

November

•Nov. 5: Post students rocked mock elections. Students at Frank R. Loyd, Herbert J. Dexter, Faith Middle School and more voted for the president. Indicative of society, President Bill Clinton won, former Senator Bob Dole placed second and Ross Perot came in third.

•Nov. 21: Six students from post schools received awards for their no smoking ads during the post Tar Wars campaign.

December

•Dec. 6: Spencer High School teacher, Eugene Shaw received award for having the best automotive program in the state of Georgia. Shaw, who taught at Spencer for 18 years after retiring from the Army, plans to retire from Spencer in February.

In my family, learning is everything.

Books don't just enlighten. They empower. Our children are growing up knowing this. A good education is one of the most important things we can give them. And we will, with the help of U.S. Savings Bonds.

Through the Payroll Savings Plan, we put aside something with every payday. And little by little, it will add up to college for our children.

U.S. Savings Bonds helped my parents put me through college. And next year, it's Michelle's turn. Sure, Savings Bonds have been important to our past, but they'll be even more important to our future. That's what makes our investment so valuable.

Ask your employer or banker about saving with U.S. Savings Bonds. For all the right reasons.

ACAP Job Assistance News

January turns HOT for job seekers at Fort Benning

Soldiers separating from the Army in the near future will have some excellent opportunities in January to discuss potential employment with civilian business recruiters. Getting "up close and personal" with company representatives visiting Fort Benning is a golden opportunity to learn about specific companies, occupation categories, career paths and employment outlook. Additionally, soldiers will find that they have the chance to compare their skills and experience with those sought by employers. TO afford you this opportunity your ACAP Job Assistance Center (JAC) organizes Employer Days and Recruiters Visit on a regular basis. If you are nearing an ETS date, call the ACAP office at 545-2308 for information on 1997's events.

Tips For Job Seekers: When attending Employer Days, Job Fairs and Recruiters Visits at Fort Benning and elseware you should prepare yourself for a good first impression. At Fort Benning during duty hours wear you newest, cleanest and best fitting duty uniform, spit shined shoes/boots and be well groomed. At other locations or after duty hours wear appropriate civilian attire for the occupation you are considering. Be positive and polite in meeting and talking to employer reps. Introduce yourself and be prepared to ask question, such as, "How many employees do you hire annually?", or "What skills are you seeking in an employee?", or "Can you tell me about opportunities for future growth and advancement?", ect. Carry a notebook, folder or attache case and collect as much informational material and business cards as you can for reference and study.

Your purpose is to gather information and ideas about a civilian career path you might follow. If you are close to your ETS date you should have resume with you and be prepared to leave a copy with employer representatives that are most promising. However, even if you don't have a resume you should attend and start to learn about the types of skills needed by each organization and for a specific occupation.

The job search is so much easier if you know where you want to go! For more information, call your happy ACAP JAC at 545-2308, or visiting Bldg 2634 the next time you are in Soldiers' Plaza.

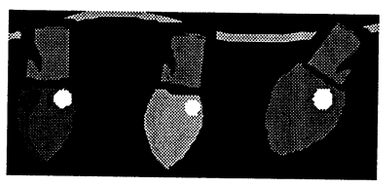
Tailored To Fit Your Career Goals

West Main Post lights up a display of holiday spirit

By April Strawser
West Main Post mayor

The volunteer staff of West Main Post held its first Christmas Quarters contest, with homes being judged on night light display, overall appearance and special consideration for safety and Fort Benning regulations.

The housing area was separated into three groups; McDaniel Manor, Norton and Ragin Courts. First, second and third place were given in each area. Winners received certificates provided by the community mayor.



"It was a hard decision," said Melinda Estep. "We had some very lovely decorated homes. I hope to do this again next year and have more participation."

Judging the homes were the WMP community mayor and vice mayor.

Ragin Court
•First place, the Crossno family of 960 A Michael St.
•Second Place, the Patrick family of 966 H Dixe Rd.
•Third Place, the Davis family of 964 G Dixie Rd.

Norton Court
•First Place, the Frison family of 937 B Kilgore St.
•Second Place, the Straits family of 941 C Burr St.
•Third Place, the Metcalfe family of 948-F Carpenter St.

McDaniel Manor
•First Place, Quarters 302 Vogel Ave.

•Second Place, the Kreiser family of 304 Vogel Ave.
•Third place. the Miller family of 401 Gaines St.

A special honorable mention went to the Bell family of 948-A Kilgore St. for the Community Christmas Tree.

The community is still looking for a few more residents that would like to volunteer an hour of their time a month and join the West Main Post Volunteer Community Life staff. If you live in WMP, call April Strawser at 682-3840.

If you would like to volunteer and you live elsewhere on post, call your mayor or your Community Life Office.

IOBC builds house for habitat

Tyler J. Oxley
2nd Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment

Members of 3rd platoon, Company B, 2nd Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment, IOBC, put their minds to accomplishing a task that was unlike any they had undertaken — starting construction on a new home for Habitat for Humanity Dec. 14.

Forty one students worked alongside the future homeowners, breaking ground and clearing away large blocks of an old foundation to make way for the new foundation. They dug the footing for a new home and helped to finish off the foundation of another.

The students said that they appreciated the opportunity to do work for a good cause in the Columbus area.

"It's important as members of the armed forces not to isolate ourselves from the communities we are in, this is where we get our support," said 2nd Lt. Chris Bass, a volunteer.

"It is very important to be active in the community you live in and this was a very direct way to do that," said 2nd Lt. Mark Olsen.

Aside from doing a good service to the community Olsen said, "This was a good opportunity to get together as a platoon and do something nonmilitary together for once."

The day showed that time can be found for community service projects like Habitat for Humanity.

"This is an opportunity for the lieutenants to give of their time and give something back to the community, especially during the Christmas season," said Capt. Lance Patterson, platoon trainer for third platoon. "You receive a whole lot more by giving something, and it gives you a chance to be with the community."

A lot of work went into coordinating the day. Second Lt. James Jenkins, one of the event coordinators, had a positive response from local businesses who sponsored the event.

Dolly Madison Bakery donated donuts and the 11th Infantry Dining Facility provided coffee for the morning crews. Pizza Roma, Piggly Wiggly and Popeyes Fried Chicken provided lunch for the afternoon crew.

"A lot of coordination had to be done with Habitat for Humanity, especially getting a day to go out and work this close to holiday leave," said Jenkins. "Our sponsors were great, they were more than willing to help out."

Habitat for Humanity is a non-profit, all volunteer organization that builds homes for low-income families. All labor for the building of a home is volunteered, which brings the cost of the home down for the family. The average cost of a Habitat home in Columbus is $30,000. To qualify for a home a family has to meet certain criteria. A family must fall under a certain income, and work 500 hours on Habitat homes before becoming eligible.

"This is a hand up, not a hand out," said Gordon Macdonald, a project coordinator for Habitat. "This is truly a spiritual act that is appreciated by many."

Habitat For Humanity is the world's second largest home builder with over 2,000 affiliates in the United States. Each month over 2,000 homes are built by Habitat. Forty five new homes were built by families and volunteers in the Columbus area last year.

Epiphany celebrates light of the world

By Robert Blessing
2nd Bn., 69th Armor, 3rd Bde.

Epiphany is the day we celebrate the light of Christ that has come to those of us who didn't belong. This is the day we celebrate that we are now his children. Those of us who are not Jewish can now rejoice that we are included in God's family.

reflections

This is the season when we recount the fact that the gentiles, who were the people outside God's plan, cut off from his blessings and not to be included in God's family, are now to be considered his children.

Some of them were the people who lived in Palestine when Joshua entered the land. They battled the chosen people and were despised. Then God said through the prophets that some day they would be his chosen people.

God spoke in a special way to his own people. He loved them, protected them, fed them and cared for them. Now he is doing that for his people that come from among the gentiles. The qualification is that they believe upon Jesus. That was the hope that was prophesied by Isaiah. The text of scripture that is celebrated is in Isaiah 60:1-9. "Arise, shine, for your light has come and the glory of the Lord rises upon you ... Nations will come to your light, and kings to the brightness of your dawn ... you will be radiant." Jesus was the light and he would become light for us.

In churches throughout the land on the night of Epiphany, we will see electric lights turned off. Then a flame from off the altar will light a single candle and this candle will touch another and thus light will spread throughout the darkened churches lighting even the darkest corners. Then as the tradition continues, we will move out from the churches into the streets with our light symbolizing the light of the Kingdom of God spreading out into the darkness of the world.

This is a world that is suffering pain, loss, fear, separation and assault. We bring to the world through our lives, the light of Christ's love for the world's hurt, just as he has given us his love to meet our needs and hurts.

So, on Epiphany, celebrate your life with Christ by bringing light to a darkened world in the way that you can bless the people in it. Today, if your testimony of Christ's love to the world were your candle, would you be able to light the candle next to you? Does your light of the love of Jesus get beyond you to the next person?

Demonstrate faith: redefine your life

By George Smawley
11th Infantry Regiment

With each new year the resolutions come and go. We will save our money, mend our relationships, exercise, and endeavor to drop those few extra pounds. There will be some successes and more than a few failures, but in the process there will be moments of silent contemplation about where and who we are, and about where we want to be.

reflections

This time of year should take an added dimension for those of us who have committed to developing the spiritual component in our lives. The tenor of any self-evaluation lies in the notion that somehow our lives will improve as a result: better focus, priorities, revelations and answers to the problems that have haunted us in the past.

Individuals who have embraced religion, who have brought spirituality into their own lives and the lives of others, need to reflect upon the role that faith plays in their lives and how it has the power to define the environment in which other issues, love, money, career, etc., often come into focus.

The question of faith is venerable indeed. Statesman Benjamin Disraeli considered faith to be a critical part of public service and the military, and wrote that "duty cannot exist without faith." Religion is no different. For Christians, faith is a necessary and integral part of the religious experience.

In Thessalonians 5:8 the writer calls believers to "put on the breastplate of faith and love; and for an helmet, the hope of salvation." II Corinthians 5:7 states that Christians "walk by faith, not by sight."

The Christian church, by definition, requires that believers "be faithful unto death' that they may receive "a crown of life" (Rev. 2:10) KJV.

The challenges and disappointments of daily life should never cast a shadow upon faith that is a part of the religious experience. Faith in the promise of salvation should provide many with the solace and courage to overcome the trials of this life, and to put the demands of each day into broad perspective.

The key is in never forgetting, and in the will to impose the long term covenant of salvation upon the otherwise minor disappointments of our daily lives. It is a resolution we should all keep. It offers a peace of mind far greater than money, good looks, or the other self-important vanities that recur in this secular life.

Begin new year with a commitment to God

By Julie Rowan
HHD, 13th Corps Support Battalion

There is one emotion in the hearts of our people today — and that is the fear of the future. We don't know what lies just over the hill, just out of our reach or in the next year.

reflections

Things are happening in our country with the society, leadership and economy. We can attempt to change things and make a difference by allowing God to be a part of the equation for the New Year. Our New Year begins when we take God seriously.

We in America seem to be in a state of bliss where we spend all our time majoring on the minors. There is a great and grand stampede and a mad rush to get and keep enough gadgets to make and keep us comfortable.

If there is one thing that we are seeking today, it is security. We try to find it in people, science, politics and even religion itself.

America has a tradition of which she can be proud. There is no doubt that we have more than any other people in all the world. We can give an almost countless list of our inventions, successes and discoveries. We have more homes, automobiles, clothes, computers and more of all those things that go along with these than anyone else.

Where is the love that will make you stand for God: in the store, in homes, at work, at school, at play, on dates, with friends, with enemies? Where is the love and devotion for Christ that will make you say: "Here I stand, O God in thy strength. I'll count for you and I would rather die than compromise."

When we can say that, then the New Year has begun. Please, let us not be so ignorant as to think we can fool God with this fast moving age, half-hearted, compromising, Bibleless, prayless, Christless, 10-cent store bought faith — for God does not buy it.

We are always moving along as though we were on fire. We are always in a hurry. We go here and there at break neck speed. Listen, God is not looking for speed. He is looking for quality, and quality takes time.

Our age is characterized by: anxiety, impatience, aimlessness, quick cures, shortcuts, ulcers, crackups and breakdowns. Almost the first words a youngster hears are "C'mon, hurry up!" Mom, pop, teacher, and coach all remind us, "if you're going to get anywhere in life, you'd better get a move on!"

As we move along in all the hustle and hurry, God is moving with a deliberate and unhurried pace. He won't be pushed. He is a God of patience. He pays no attention to our noisy little clocks, marked-up calendars, our schedules and time sheets.

God is growing souls; not rabbits and that requires time. God is holding the winning hand. He knows how the whole thing is coming out.

In that spirit, let us face 1997 with excitement, exuberance and love. God has not given us the whole year. He has given us just one day, in reality, just five minutes more. May we make every golden moment count for him.

Let the love of the Christmas season live on

By William Smith
USAIC Chaplains Office

With the holiday season past, traditionally our sense of peace on earth, goodwill to mankind passes as well. We set about breaking our New Year's resolutions and entrenching ourselves in our own little defensiveness to protect our vulnerabilities and insecurities.

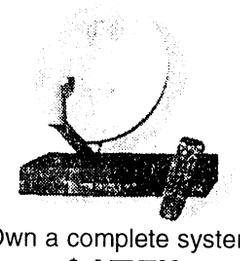
reflections

While we would like to have the spirit of Christmas and the holidays with us all year long, the truth is that joy and peace are but a temporary moment of time in a hurting, frightened, lonely world. The question creeps through the closets of our mind, "Is that all there is to life?"

Would it not be wonderful if everyone could follow the biblical principle of loving your neighbor as yourself? The glitch is that we cannot love our neighbor since we do not know how to truly love ourselves.

At times, we feel inadequate, valueless, and insignificant. Each one of us has our defense for these emotional hurts.

We may try performance and achievements, yet, we never can perform and achieve enough to counter the thirst for self worth. We may try love, pleasure, power, or any number of things, but these also seem to be insufficient in fully validating our need for purpose.



Consequently, we feel that we cannot be ourselves, for being ourselves would expose who we are. If we do not like who we are, then we believe others will not either. Thus, we live with emotional defenses that not only cloud the picture for others to see and enjoy us, but these defenses also prevent us from fully seeing others' hurts and feelings of inadequacy. As a result, we tend not to understand one another and fail to enjoy each other.

Perhaps we need to go back and look at what the Christmas season is all about. It is not about gifts under the tree, but rather God the Father's gift to us — God the Son. One unique point about God's gift is that Christ came that we might have life more abundantly.

Jesus came not only to reunite us to God the Father by paying for our sins, but to give us a new meaning to life. This meaning revolves around our relationship to God. We have purpose and are significant for he made us.

Because of God the Son's coming to earth and dying for our sins, God has accepted us while yet imperfect, and wants us to accept him. By accepting God's forgiveness, we can forgive ourselves and accept others. When we learn to accept ourselves, perhaps we can also forgive and accept others and bring the spirit of Christmas to every month of the year.

June

•Jun. 14: All-Army wrestlers Derrick Waldroup and Rodney Smith won spots on the Olympic wrestling squad during the Olympic trials. Smith, a 1992 Bronze Medalist, made the squad by winning in both the Nationals and Olympic trials while Waldroup defeated two-time Olympian Michael Foy in the Olympic trials.

•Jun. 14: More than 83 golfers were on hand at the Follow Me Golf Course for the Santa's Castle golf scramble. The tournament raised $1,728 to be used towards the purchase toys for Santa's Castle.

July

•July 4: The U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit Service Rifle Team took top honors at the Virginia State High Power Championship in Quantico, Va. The USAMU team won both the National Course Match and Infantry Trophy Team Match defeating teams from the Army, Marine Corps, Air Force, Coast Guard, Reserves and civilian shooters.

•July 26: All-Army wrestlers Derrick Waldroup and Rodney Smith and U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit shooters Theresa DeWitt and Roy Harbison dreams of winning an Olympic medal ended, but not without a fight.

Waldroup, in his first trip to the Olympics, lost his first match in Greco-Roman wrestling but bounced back to win three straight matches before losing in the quarterfinals to Maik Bullman of Germany. Waldroup finished in seventh place overall by defeating Marek Svec of the Czech Republic 10-2. After the match, Waldroup announced his retirement from competitive wrestling.

Smith, a 1992 Olympic Bronze Medalist and two-time U.S. National champion, made it to the quarterfinals before being defeated by Colas Oris 3-2 in the Group B match.

DeWitt came within two-tenths of a point from winning a Bronze Medal in the women's double tap event before losing out to Deserie Huddleston of Australia 13.7 to 13.9.

Harbison came within one shot of earning a Bronze Medal during the men's 10-meter air rifle, but Harbison shot an 8.4 in the final round dropping him from third to seventh place overall.

August

•Aug. 2: The Knights from Company A, 317th Engineer Battalion fought their way though the losers bracket to defeat the Red Dogs in two straight games to win the 3rd Brigade, 3rd Infantry Division (Mechanized), intramural softball champions.

•Aug. 23: Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment defeated the Bandits from the 1st Battalion, 50th Infantry Regiment 20-8 successfully defending their championship title in the post intramural softball tournament at Gowdy Field.

•Aug. 30: The U.S. Army Physical Fitness School's deputy commandant Lt. Col. Charles Hunsaker was selected as the coach for the Army 10-Miler team. Hunsaker, a two time National Collegiate Athletic Association National Coach of the Year in track, also coordinated West Point's first women's track team.

September

•Sept. 6: The U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit's 1996 Olympic shooters and others serving on the Olympic staff traveled to Washington, D.C. where they met with senior Army staff members in the Hall of Champions. On the second day of the trip the entire Olympic Team met with President Bill Clinton, his wife, Hillary, and their daughter Chelsea.

•Sept. 13: Ron Greene shot a double eagle on the par-5, 433-yard ninth hole at the Follow Me golf course during the 1996 Club Championship. Greene finished in third place in the championship flight B division.

October

•Oct. 4: The Ranger Training Brigade won the first place team trophy in the ninth annual Powerlifting Championships at Audie Murphy Fitness Center. Fort Benning's New Year's baby is Verlenia Jernell Redding, born at 7:27 a.m. at Martin Army Community Hospital New Year's day. Parents are Staff Sgt. Roderick and Tammie Redding. The family received a goody basket from the Army and Air Force Exchange Service.

Fort Benning changes alcohol policy

By Lynn M. Bieda
Special to The Bayonet©

Soldiers are no longer able to purchase alcohol in uniform during the duty day.

The alcohol and consumption policy approved in December prohibits Soldiers on duty from buying alcohol between the hours of 7:30 a.m. and 4:30 p.m. during the week.

There are two parts to this policy. It prohibits Soldiers from drinking on duty and restricts Soldiers in uniform from buying alcoholic beverages by the drink on post, either from Morale, Welfare and Recreation facilities, or in bulk from package stores prior to 4:30 p.m. on duty days, Alan Stewart, director of Community Activities, said.

Commanding General Maj. Gen. Carl F. Ernst implemented the program and really it was a tightening of a previous policy, Chuck Walls, garrison executive officer, said.

A few people abused the old policy, and were purchasing alcohol during and after their lunch hours, so we implemented stricter guidelines, Walls said.

"Before the policy, there were maybe between 20 to 30 people in uniform buying alcohol during those hours," said Brenda Augustus, Main Post Class VI manager.

She said alcohol sales have gone down since the policy's implementation.

Before the policy took effect in fiscal 1996, there were 156 driving while under the influence arrests on post, said Maj. Ronald Jones, chief, Law Enforcement Division, Directorate of Public Safety.

In December 1994, there were 29 DUI arrests, Sgt. 1st Class Dan Downs, traffic investigations noncommissioned officer in charge, Law Enforcement Division, said.

In December 1995, there were 29 DUI arrests, Downs said.

But in December 1996, there were 15 DUI arrests on post, Jones said.

"This is encouraging, but since it is a fresh policy, the results are still almost invisible to us," Jones said.

"I think they implemented the plan for safety reasons. We promote not drinking and driving here," as do most agencies on post, Augustus said.

Post to remember MLK

By Lori Egan

The Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. commemorative service is Wednesday in Marshall Auditorium in Infantry Hall.

The theme for this year's program is "Make Real the Dream, Frame the Vision for the 21st Century" and the guest speaker is Claiborne Douglas Haughton Jr.

Haughton, principal director and director for Civilian Equal Employment Opportunity, Office of the Deputy Assistant Secretary of Defense (Equal Opportunity), received the 1995 "Making the King Holiday Award" from Coretta Scott King and the Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. Holiday Commission.

The program, which is sponsored by the Fort Benning Equal Opportunity Office, begins at 11 a.m. and is open to the public; however, the audience is asked to be seated by 10:50.

The 36th Engineer Group plans an observance both Tuesday and Wednesday with a film and discussion on King's life and legacy in Building 2826.

For more information, call Sgt. 1st Class James Madison at 545-6596.

The 29th Infantry Regiment commemorates King Monday at 11:30 a.m. in The Infantry Chapel. The guest speakers will be Tanisha Gordon, a pre-med student at Alabama A&M, and 1st Sgt. Robert L. Bethea, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 36th Engineer Group.

For more information, call Sgt. 1st Class Evelyn Richardson at 545-8452.

Events occurring off post include:

For more information, call Lonnie Jackson at 687-5357 or 321-9596.

Not just playing around

The Directorate of Public Works installed playground equipment on 19 playgrounds throughout the installation in the family housing areas, costing approximately $100,000. This money was reinvested into the community to enhance the quality of life for the families in housing, according to Glenn Todd, customer relations specialist for DPW. The money was from the Army Communities of Excellence award. The Fort Benning Mayor's Program selected and placed the equipment that was installed where they thought it was needed.

Haley Flipse, 3, daughter of Heather and Sgt. David Flipse, Company C, 1st Battalion, 15th Infantry Regiment, 3rd Brigade, 3rd Infantry Division (Mechanized), plays on a newly installed slide.

President's Quality Award team to visit post

By April N. Olsen
USAIC Public Affairs Office

"The President's Quality Award evaluation team will see what makes Fort Benning the best federal agency when it visits post next week," said Sarah McLaney, the Chief of the Quality Management Division of the Directorate of Resource Management.

McLaney, who also serves as the site coordinator for the visit, said the four PQA team members will arrive Sunday for a five-day visit.

During the visit, the team will judge Fort Benning's quality improvement efforts against other federal agencies.

Fort Benning is the only military installation in the top 10 of this year's PQA, McLaney said.

The team will also be briefed on the status of progress made since Fort Benning's application packet was submitted last summer, McLaney said.

This is the first year that Fort Benning entered the PQA competition.

"To make it into the top 10 on our first try is very exciting," McLaney said. "It reinforces what many of us at Fort Benning know already — that we're good at what we do."

According to a message released by the director of the U. S. Office of Personnel Management, "the President's Quality Award Program recognizes federal organizations that have improved their overall performance and demonstrated a sustained trend in providing high-quality products and services to customers."

The highest recognition, the Presidential Award for Quality, is the federal government's equivalent of the Malcolm Baldrige National Quality Award and recognizes organizations that have accomplished outstanding performance results through continuous improvement.

The program's award criteria are based on core values and operating standards found among the highest performing public and private sector organizations in the industrialized world today.

The Baldrige criteria were adopted last year as the guidelines for the Army Communities of Excellence competition.

McLaney said she hopes the team will be able to get a good picture of the installation through several briefings, presentations and visits to directorates and units on post.

Team members will receive briefings on Fort Benning's five key processes: Infantry Training, Infantry doctrine, Infantry future, force projection and base operations.

Other briefings include the installation Morale, Welfare and Recreation program, the U.S. Army Medical and Dental Activities and the Better Opportunities for Single Soldiers program.

The team will also receive a tour of the Dismounted Battlespace Battle Lab and visit the Clothing Issue Facility and the continental U.S. replacement center.

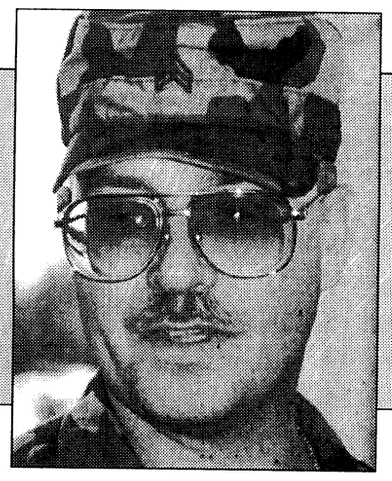
VARIOUS VOICES



How far have we come since Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.'s "I Have a Dream" speech?

Felicia Greene, family member — "We've come pretty far since his speech, but we still have a lot of things we need to work on and improve."

Master Sgt. Eddie Standifer, Headquarters and Headquarters Detachment, 203rd Forward Support Battalion — "We've made strong leaps and bounds in improving race relations, but we still have to improve and we still have a lot of work to do."

Sgt. Tim Lupold, Company C, 2nd Battalion, 69th Armor Regiment — "Things haven't changed enough since his speech. We need more work, because we haven't come that far in improving racism."

Barbara Williams, family member — "I think his speech really helped a lot, we've come a long way since he first gave his speech."

2nd Lt. Jason Hutton, 1st Battalion, 10th Field Artillery — "We're definitely further than we were, but it's hard for me to say how far we've come because I don't see a lot of the problems that are occurring. I do think that we've improved significantly in the military."

Marsha Umana, family member — "I think we've come somewhat far, but we haven't come nearly far enough."

MUSEUM

Columbus history takes center stage

By Dov Schwartz
USAIC Public Affairs Office

If you want to see dinosaurs or ancient Middle Eastern artifacts, rent a Steven Spielberg movie. But if you're interested in the people and culture of the Chattahoochee Valley, the Columbus Museum is for you.

commentary

The Chattahoochee Legacy is the museum's centerpiece. This regional history gallery enables visitors to get involved with the past and experience how our forerunners lived in this part of Georgia.

The tour begins with a short movie in the Heritage Theater. Any film that has a succulent, juicy, "down home" barbecue in one scene followed by a close-up of apprehensive airborne students making their first jump is OK in my book. After seeing rare footage of President Franklin Roosevelt at the Little White House in Warm Springs and breathtaking aerial views of the Chattahoochee River, I was ready to begin my journey through Chattahoochee Valley history.

The Chattahoochee Legacy Gallery's collection of cultural objects and artifacts from the region's river valley creates an image of what the cruel terrain was like in ancient times. Believe it or not, archeological evidence shows that Columbus used to be a cool dry place. Of course, the Ice Age was a few years back.

A tepee built to scale shows how Native Americans lived in this area.

The Yuchi Indians lived on the land that is today part of Fort Benning. Renowned naturalist and explorer William Bertram, who visited the region in 1776, wrote of Yuchi Town that "it is the largest, most compact and best situated Indian town I ever saw." That commitment to excellence described by Bertram still lives in each and every employee at Fort Benning.

A hidden tape recording of children playing in a tepee and a recording of a woman humming a beautiful spiritual melody in an urban slave house lends just the right feeling to a tour through history.

Public education wasn't started in Columbus until 1867. A one-room school, complete with cold, wooden desks, was the norm for the time. Sit at one of the desks in the gallery's one-room school model and return to a time without computers, gymnasiums or laboratories.

The stirring voice of a drill sergeant beckons visitors toward an authentic World War I squad tent. Tents like these housed thousands of recruits as they went through basic training at Fort Benning before deploying to Europe. Experience the rustic environment and spartan furnishings of that time. Don't worry about the drill sergeant, it's only a recording.

A tour of the Chattahoochee Legacy is a walk through the history of this area and a celebration of the people of Columbus. It enables recent arrivals and veteran residents a chance to get involved with the past.

Transformations, a hands-on children's gallery, offers wonderful activities for children (and reporters). A computer paint program offers youngsters a chance to create images and pictures. By the look of things, the kids love Transformations almost as much as their parents.

Exhibits of sterling silver, classical American furniture and American art and sculptures round out the museum's collection.

The Columbus museum is an enjoyable way to learn about the region's history and experience it, too.

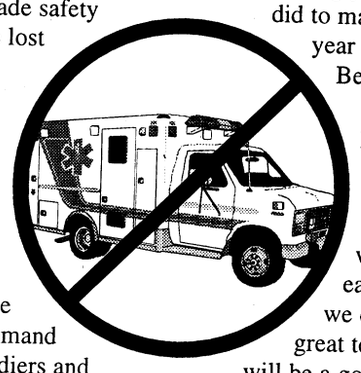
Dr Martin Luther King Jr Day

Fort Benning will celebrate the anniversary of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.'s birthday Jan. 15.

This day commemorates not only the memory of a great American, but also reminds us of King's lasting influence on American society. It is time to reflect on the past and to rededicate ourselves to the future, to the principles for which King lived and died ... a dream of dignity for all.

The theme for this year's Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. Commemorative Service is "Make Real the Dream, Frame the Vision for the 21st Century."

In recognition of King's many lasting contributions to our great country, a commemorative service takes place in Marshall Auditorium, Infantry Hall, at 11 a.m. Jan. 15. All members of Fort Benning and the surrounding community are encouraged to attend this service.



We sometimes over look the real meaning and significance of special days and holidays. Gathering for this service will remind us of what the great American's life meant for our country.

CG welcomes home Soldiers and families

Happy New Year and congratulations!

Congratulations for coming back safely. Your attention and preventive measures made safety happen. We lost no Soldiers, family members or civilians to accidents over the holidays.

I am grateful to the chain of command and their Soldiers and family members and to our civilians and their supervisors for all they did to remind everyone that safety is our number one priority.

The fact that we had no major injuries clearly demonstrates that everyone paid attention and that we can have a good holiday season without risking life and limb.

1996 is now history, except for thanking you for all you did to make 1996 a great year for Fort Benning.

1997 is a big year and we have a lot to accomplish. Like 1996, it will not be an easy year. But if we continue the great teamwork, it will be a good year for Fort Benning.

Thanks for playing it safe. Thanks for being on this great team.

Welcome back.

— Maj. Gen. Carl F. Ernst

Dial 545-BOSS is the commander's action line for soldiers, family members and civilians to call when they have problems or complaints that can't be resolved elsewhere.

While it is not a substitute for the chain of command or for agencies established to provide assistance, the line offers another means of communication between Fort Benning's community and commanders.

The Bayonet features some of the calls that may benefit other members of the Fort Benning community.

Call: A Soldier is concerned about the policy not to issue furniture to U.S. Army Soldiers and their families.

DPW response:
The chief, Housing Division, said that the authority to procure, issue or repair government family housing furniture in continental Unites States was repealed in 1967. CONUS installations were authorized to retain the on-hand furniture until it became unserviceable. The Directorate of Public Works stopped issuing government family housing furniture to U.S. Soldiers at Fort Benning in May 1995 because the furniture became unserviceable.

Call: A disabled caller said when she goes to the Tricare Office at Martin Army Community Hospital, there is no handicap access ramp and the disabled have to send someone into the Tricare Office for them to take care of business for them.

MEDDAC response: The Resource Management Division, MACH, said there have been recent facility modifications completed to provide access for persons with disabilities. Construction of a wheelchair accessible doorway is now complete. Access by ramp is available to the Tricare Service Center through Room 106 of Building 9204. Once inside Room 106, there is an adjoining doorway to Room 15 (Tricare). Rooms 105 and 106 serve as the one stop shop for health care referral services offered at MACH.

Athletic events brighten Soldiers' holidays

Lisa M. Hibbert
Bayonet staff writer

Fort Benning, Columbus and Phenix City officials joined together on the plaza level of the Columbus Government Center Dec. 20 to kick off Operation Holiday.

The annual event, sponsored by the Chattahoochee Valley-Fort Benning Chapter of the Association of the U.S. Army, ran through Saturday.

"Operation Holiday began in 1980 at the request of the Commanding General," said Jim Gallagher, chairperson of Operation Holiday. "A large number of Soldiers were staying here for the holidays, so out of concern for them, he asked the downtown communities to come up with a program of meaningful activities for the soldiers to do. AUSA responded to the call and put together a program now known as Operation Holiday."

Wayne Andrews, president of the Chattahoochee Valley-Fort Benning Chapter of AUSA, expressed how proud he was of this year's Operation Holiday.

"Operation Holiday expanded into something bigger than just a couple of events and activities occurring during the holiday season," Andrews said. "It has evolved and now extends beyond just the holiday season and I am proud of that."

This year, Soldiers attended off-post activities like the Blue and Gray game in Montgomery, Ala., the Atlanta Hawks vs. the Chicago Bulls at the Omni in Atlanta and the Hawks vs. the New York Knicks at the Omni.

The Directorate of Community Activities also sponsored activities for the Soldiers to attend on post.

A Christmas Basketball Tournament, an eight-ball pool tournament, a table tennis tournament and a poker smoker were some of the activities scheduled on post.

Georgia Representative Mac Collins talked about the importance of Operation Holiday to the tricommunities.

"This reinforces how the Columbus, Phenix City and Fort Benning communities work together," Collins said. "This also gives us the opportunity to show how much we appreciate you and the duty Soldiers and what they provide to their country."

Columbus Mayor Bobby Peters and Phenix City Mayor Sammy Howard, along with several local councilmen, took to the podium to read the Operation Holiday proclamation, which officially kicked off "the activities."

Miss Presidential Pathways Tara Watson closed the program with a musical selection of seasonal music.

Several post officials representing the major commands also attended the program, including Col. Lawrence J. White, post chief of staff, who gave remarks on behalf of the post.

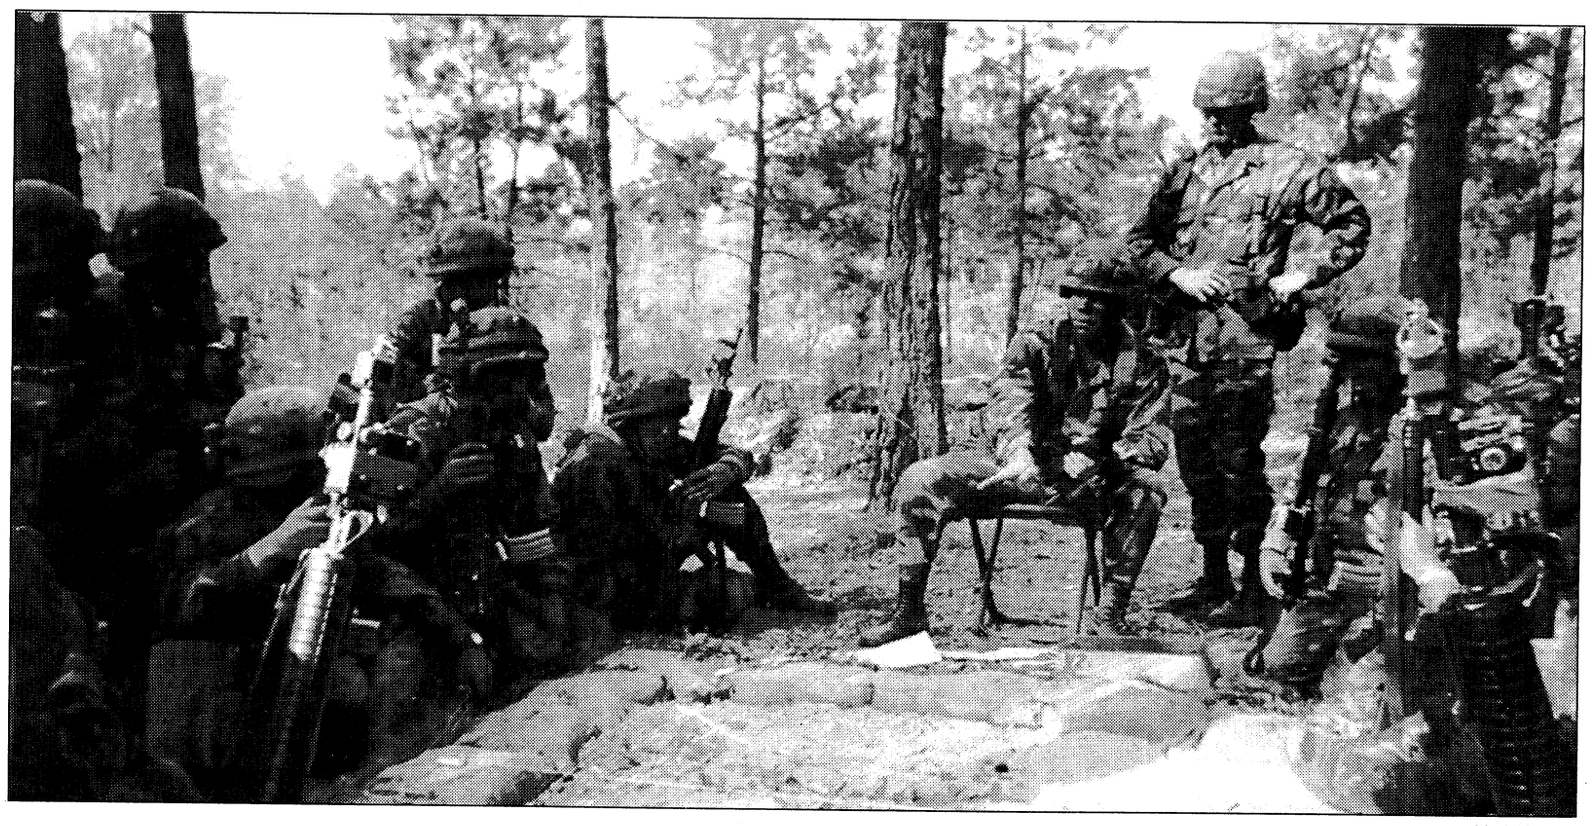
1/50 conducts six-day field training exercise

By Sharon L. Ross
1st Bn., 50th Inf. Regt.

The new Soldiers of Company D, 1st Battalion, 50th Infantry Regiment, Infantry Training Brigade, returned early Nov. 22 from their final six-day, one-station-unit training, field-training exercise.

Company D, who trained 110 new infantrymen during its current OSUT cycle, deployed to the field Nov. 15 and concluded the field training exercise with a 25-kilometer tactical road march back to garrison.

Capt. Mark Krumin, Co. D's commander, said the exercise was very challenging for most of the trainees.



"We take these end-of-cycle FTX's very seriously," Krumin said. "The new Soldiers learn an awful lot because this is their very first extensive training event under simulated combat conditions."

The primary training tool that is used during the end-of-cycle FTX is the situational training exercise, or STX lane.

"STX lanes are relatively easy to set up and execute," said Staff Sgt. James Reich, a drill sergeant in Co. D. "And they allow the Soldiers a realistic opportunity to practice the tasks that they have learned throughout the OSUT cycle."

Staff Sgt. Joey Hutto, another drill sergeant with Co. D, said, "There are a couple keys to a well-executed STX lane. First, thorough reconnaissance and preparation of the lane itself must be done by the drill sergeants ahead of time, so that the Soldiers are able to negotiate the lane smoothly and maximize the opportunities to execute their combat critical tasks. And secondly, a good after action review must be conducted to drive home the learning points in the Soldiers' minds."

"The Soldiers actually do most of their learning during the AAR," said another drill sergeant, Sgt. 1st Class Henry Derricks. "While they are conducting a mission, they do not have time to think about what they are learning. That is why, when we go back and discuss what happened and why it happened, the Soldiers really start to catch on."

Mark Krumin

Staff Sgt. Joey Hutto, a drill sergeant with Company D, 1st Battalion, 50th Infantry Regiment, uses a sand table to brief his Soldiers on an upcoming mission.

Pvt. Victor Cotto of Wilamanic, Conn., the company honor graduate for the cycle, said he learned important lessons about leadership and security. "I think AAR's are important because they let us know the things that we did wrong and how to fix them."

Pvt. 2 James Webb from LaGrange, Ga., agreed.

"In the AAR, I learned that communication is a big key to successful movement on the lanes," he said.

"Teamwork is the most important thing I've learned in the AAR's," said Pvt. 2 Clayton Lantz from Oklahoma City, Okla.

Staff Sgt. Casey Sellers, a Co. D. drill sergeant, summed up the training exercise by saying, "Teamwork and communication go hand in hand. If they can't do these effectively, they can't shoot, move and communicate."

OCS students complete Capstone exercise

By Keirya R. Langkamp Officer Candidate School

A green star cluster illuminated the dark skies as streams of yellow and violet smoke smothered the battlefield. Voices screamed out, "Shift fire, shift fire," but they were soon muffled with the roars of the machine guns. The scene was enough to make Maj. Jullian Crook cry and Hollywood envious.

Within minutes, the firing ceased, smoke lifted and causalities were assessed.

The battle lasted 30 minutes, but it was nine weeks in the making. This was no ordinary battle nor a scene out of Hollywood — it was Capstone.

Capstone, a leadership field exercise conducted by Company B, 3rd Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment, Officer Candidate School, was conducted Dec. 6 to 12 at Fort Benning.

Capstone acted as the melting pot for all the knowledge gained and skills acquired by the 67 candidates, who make up three platoons, during the Basic and Intermediate Phases at Officer Candidate School.

In preparation for Capstone, candidates underwent nine weeks of intensive classroom instruction coupled with field leadership exercises.

Candidates are schooled in all subjects from ethics, land navigation and operations, they were given an opportunity to apply their tactical and technical knowledge through field leadership exercises.

Prior to Capstone, candidates participated in a three-day situational training exercise where they each learned a specific task and how to properly lead a squad through that task.

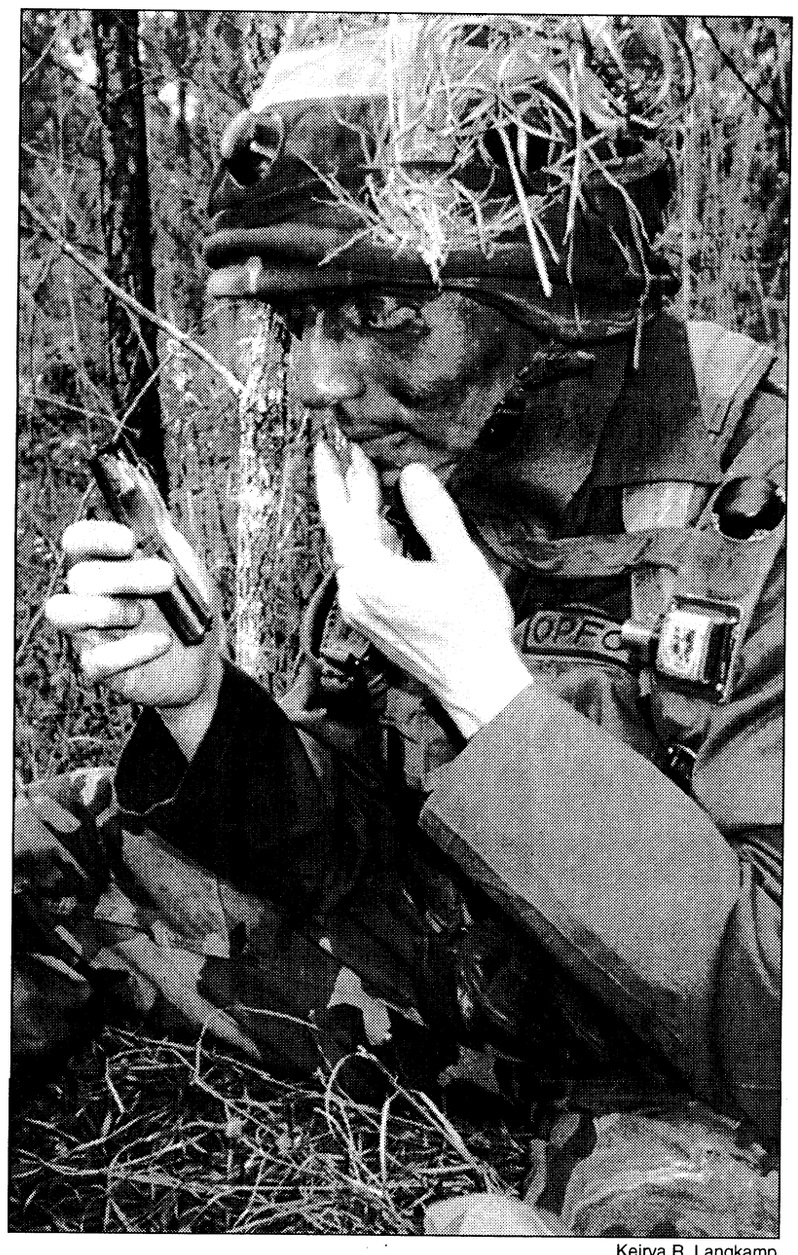
Candidates expanded their responsibilities during Capstone and were required to take those collective tasks and apply them on a platoon level during Capstone.

"Capstone was the final icing on the cake," said Capt. Kevin L. Leonard, Co. B commander. "Everything up to now has lead up to Capstone. This exercise is a compilation of all the training the candidates have learned up to today. This is where all the hard work and long hours pays off."

During the six-day exercise, the candidates conducted and were evaluated in tasks such as ambush, patrol base, reconnaissance and movement to contact.

"The greatest part of an exercise like this is not only learning to apply tactics but how to build and work as a team," Officer Candidate Vern Tubbs said. "For us, the team building began Oct. 6, the first day of school."

"It was a realistic and stressful exercise like this that created that challenge to maintain that cohesion and teamwork," Officer Candidate Catherine M. Torrington said.



Embracing the challenge Capstone created for the candidates, they were forced to be part of a team, according to Officer Candidate Steven C. Jackman.

"You learn early on that to maintain that teamwork and cohesion it is just as important to be a good leader than a good follower," he said. "You also learn that trial and error is a necessary factor for a successful outcome."

"This entire course has been designed around the concept of the crawl, walk and run," Officer Candidate Daniel J. Plourd said. "The classroom instruction was the 'crawl,' the lanes were the 'walk' and Capstone has been the 'run.'"

During Capstone, running to victory is exactly what the 3rd Plt. "War Machines — OPFOR" did.

Now that the smoke has settled from Capstone, the candidates passed into their blue helmet, white ascot, Senior Phase Dec. 17.

Keirya R. Langkamp

Officer Candidate Jospeh D. Thyne, Company B, 3rd Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment, Officer Candidate School, puts on his war face before acting as a member of the opposing force during Capstone.

"After Capstone, Senior Phase is often considered the 3rd, lieutenant phase or the transitional phase," Tubbs said.

Logically, Senior Phase is what is next during the run, according to Plourd.

"Our next step after Senior Phase is our next assignment," he said.

If one has not learned the value of teamwork at that time, then it's a matter of sink or swim, according to Plourd.

"It might be the dog paddle," he said. "All that matters is that your swimming."

390 Soldiers train, compete for EIB

By Robin A. Shawlinski
3rd Bde., 3rd Inf. Div. (Mech.)

The sign reads "Expert — the mark of a man" and 40 infantrymen from across post proved they were experts when they earned their Expert Infantryman Badge.

More than 390 Soldiers began formal training recently at Burroughs Range to earn the coveted EIB.

"The EIB is a mark Soldiers strive to achieve ... it's a tough test," said Command Sgt. Maj. Kenneth Sponsler, 3rd Brigade command sergeant major. "It's also one of the better opportunities for Soldiers to concentrate on individual skills."

The EIB training and testing was sponsored by the 3rd Bde., 3rd Infantry Division (Mechanized). Soldiers were divided into two groups and each took a week to test. Before Soldiers could test they first had to be Infantry Soldiers, had to be recommended by their chain of command, must volunteer and must fire expert with the M-16, according to Sponsler.

During the first two weeks, Soldiers had the chance to receive hands-on training on each station at the site.

Sponsler said the training was important for several reason. The Soldiers got to practice on each station and see what standards were expected of them by the station testers. And, squad leaders from the 3rd Bde. took advantage of this chance to train their Soldiers on the tasks by walking through the stations as a squad.

Once the training was complete, the Soldiers started testing.

To earn the EIB, Soldiers are required to complete 34 tasks. The tasks range from the Army physical fitness test, where they must score 70 percent in their age group, and day and night land navigation to individual movement techniques and camouflaging themselves and their equipment.

Soldiers were allowed only two no-gos for all of the tasks, on the third no-go, the Soldier was disqualified. Soldiers were automatically disqualified if they received two no-gos on one task.

While many Soldiers had different personal reasons for trying for the badge, the overall attitude remained the same.

"The EIB is one of those things that sets you out from the rest," said Staff Sgt. Ken Killingsworth, Company B, 1st Battalion, 30th Inf. Regt. "It shows you're a real professional. If you want it bad enough, you'll get it."

Spc. Art McIntyre of Company D, 1st Bn., 15th Inf. Regt., said the EIB means a lot to Infantrymen.

"It's the mark of the man for the Infantry," he said.

"The EIB is the ultimate challenge." said Staff Sgt. Andrew Dickerson, Company A, 1st Bn., 29th Inf. Regt. "It's what we all need to be successful in our military occupational specialty ... It's more motivating for Soldiers to strive for success when they see their leader with an EIB."

1/30 Soldiers earn Expert Infantryman Badge in postwide competition

1st Battalion, 30th Infantry Regiment

Soldiers from the 1st Battalion, 30th Infantry Regiment, recently completed the postwide Expert Infantryman Badge testing sponsored by the 3rd Brigade, 3rd Infantry Division (Mechanized). Thirteen 1st Bn., 30th Inf. Regt., "Battle Boar" Soldiers earned the badge, exceeding the number earned by any other battalion or brigade on post.

The Expert Infantryman Badge was created in 1943 to recognize Soldiers who successfully completed a prescribed series of Infantry tasks. To earn the coveted badge, Soldiers must pass the Army physical fitness test earning 70 percent in each event, qualify expert with the M-16A2 rifle, pass a day and night land navigation course, complete a 12-mile road march in less than three hours, and flawlessly perform 34 other Infantry tasks to standard.

"Due to the high operational tempo within the Sledgehammer Brigade, our guys only had a week to prepare for the test," said Lt. Col. Tom Heineken, commander of 1st Bn., 30th Inf. Regt. "It's not unusual for units to spend several weeks preparing their Soldiers. Our success, despite the minimal training time, is indicative of the quality of the battalion's Soldiers and noncommissioned officers."

"It was great seeing the NCOs and Soldiers all pitching in to help the candidates, a lot of teamwork was evident," said Command Sgt. Maj. Manual Valdez, 1st Bn., 30th Inf. Regt., command sergeant major. "We had a lot more who just missed it this time. A little more attention to detail next time and they'll be wearing the badge."

Fort Benning Commanding General Maj. Gen. Carl F. Ernst presented the badges in a ceremony held at the test site on Burroughs Range. Battle Boar Soldiers who earned the right to be called expert Infantrymen are: Spc. Paul Geadilla, Staff Sgt. Robert Mittenberg, Sgt. David Therrel, Sgt. Adam Leonard, Staff Sgt. Tony Lyons, Pfc. Richard Munoz, Staff Sgt. Michael Henderson, 2nd Lt. Frank Byrne, Sgt. Jamoine Chambers, Spc. Dean Kendrick, Spc. Thomas Wyatt, Capt. Eugene 'Reb' Yancy and Capt. Doug Cardinale.

ACAP provides assistance

Army Career and Alumni Program

Are you and your family getting ready for the day when you will separate from the Army?

The Army Career and Alumni Program Job Assistance Center staff suggests starting to work toward a degree, professional certification, skills training, practical experience or some other activity or hobby that will make a person more marketable when he or she separates from the military.

During the past five years, the country's defense establishment has experienced a significant downsizing, according to Harold Ericksen, Job Assistance Center manager.

"Even with this behind us, at least 80,000 to 90,000 Soldiers will transition from the Army each year for the rest of this decade," Ericksen said.

"The point is ... everyone will leave the Army and start another career sooner or later," Ericksen said. "To better prepare, an individual should begin now. A person should use remaining time in the Army to build on military occupational skills and make him or herself more valuable when he or she eventually transitions to Army alumni status."

The JAC offers these tips for transitioning Soldiers.

Scheduled events for job seekers:

Date, time, location	Type of event	Sample business
Jan. 22 and 23, 8 a.m. to 4 p.m., Soldiers' Plaza, Building 2634	Recruiter	Vinnell-Military Trainers
Jan. 27, 28 and 29, (Tentative), Time and location to be announced	Recruiter	Atlanta Police Department
Jan. 31, 9 a.m. to noon, Soldiers' Plaza, Bldg. 2634	Employer Day	Trucking industry firms (15 Companies)

Tips for job seekers

•Know your job search objective — Research the occupations you would like to move into and determine if you have the qualifications needed or the training and certifications required.

A person may need to get specialized training or attend a formal school along the way.

•Prepare your resumes and lists of references — Develop a professional resume for each job objective which focuses upon your experience, training, skills, abilities and special accomplishments.

Also, develop a list of professional and personal character references you would want a potential employer to contact concerning your work habits, accomplishments and performance potential.

•Execute your job search with persistence — Using all resources at your disposal, market yourself to employers who need quality employees.

Also, use a network of family, friends, former bosses, neighbors and others you know as you expand your search for job openings. The newspaper, job listings on the Internet, job fairs, employer and recruiter days are other sources.

•Complete job applications and interviews — A job application is normally required before a prospective employer can get serious about hiring you. Give the application your best effort, as this is a legal document and could be more important than your resume. The job hiring interview process is your "final exam" before being offered a position.

•Preparation is a necessity before going into the interview — Know something about the company and its products, know your accomplishments and how you will benefit the company should they hire you.

Job search assistance is available to Soldiers and family members who are transitioning from the Army. For more detailed information, call ACAP Job Assistance Center in Soldiers' Plaza at 545-2308.

Olympian claims Shooter of Year

USAMU Public Affairs Office

A U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit Olympian has been named the 1996 USA Shooting Male Rifle Shooter of the Year.

Robert E. Harbison, an international rifle shooter, claimed the honor for the second year in a row.

USA Shooting, of 1 Olympic Plaza, Colorado Springs, Colo., is the national governing body for Olympic shooting sports in the United States.

Harbison was a member of the 1996 U.S. Olympic Shooting Team and competed in both the men's free rifle event, in which he finished sixth, and air rifle event, where he placed seventh.

Raised in State College, Penn., Harbison graduated from State College Area High School in 1984 before furthering his education at the University of Tennessee in Martin. He graduated with a bachelor's degree in psychology in 1988.

Harbison joined the Army in 1988 as an armor officer and was assigned to the 2nd Armored and the 1st Calvary Division at Fort Hood, Texas, where he served as platoon leader and executive officer. He was assigned to the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit in 1992 as a service rifle shooter and then became an international rifle shooter in 1993.

Harbison, who started shooting in 1979, has numerous marksmanship accomplishments.

This year, he won a Gold Medal in free rifle 3x40 at the Munich World Cup and was inducted into the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit International Rifle Hall of Fame.

In 1995, Harbison won Gold Medals in 300-Meter 3x20 and 50-Meter Free Rifle Prone at the Pan American Games and in 50-Meter Free Rifle 3x40 at the Seoul World Cup. He also won Silver Medals in men's 3x20 and men's 3x40 at the 300-Meter National Championships as well as being named the Men's Air Rifle Champion at the Air Rifle Sectionals.

He was the USA Shooting National Champion in 300-Meter Standard Rifle and was a Silver medalist at the World Military Championships in Individual Slow Fire in 1994.

In 1993, Harbison was the Interservice International Champion in 50-Meter, Three-Position Free Rifle and 300-Meter Standard Rifle as well as winning a Gold Medal at the Scout World Cup in Air Rifle and a Silver Medal at the Munich World Cup in Three Position Free Rifle.

U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit International rifle shooter Roy E. Harbison shows the form that earned him the 1996 USA Shooting Male Rifle Shooter of the Year.

He was the 1997 Interservice International Champion in 300-Meter Standard Rifle, the Georgia Regional Service Rifle Champion and the Service Rifle Interservice, Reynolds Trophy Winner; and in 1991, he was a member of the Interservice International Championships Winning 10-Man Team.

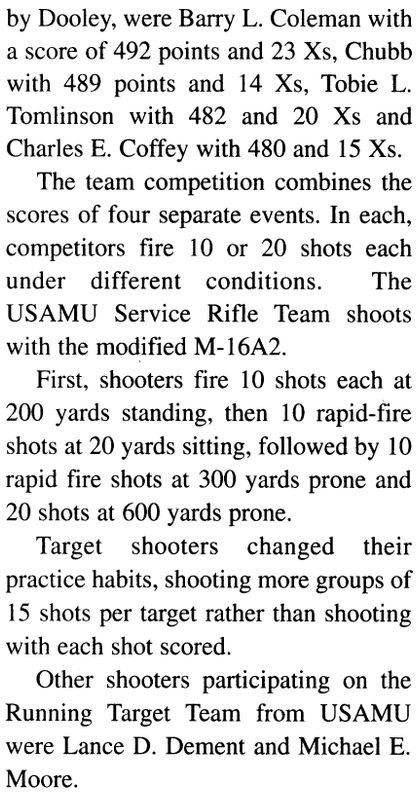
ARMY MARKSMANSHIP UNIT

Shooters win Match

USAMU Public Affairs Office

Service Rifle shooters of the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit had several victories at the fifth annual Mini Interservice Match in Okeechobee, Fla., Dec. 13 to 15. Al! branches of the military, including the Army Reserve and Army National Guard, received invitations to compete in the annual match.

John O. Chubb was named the Individual Mini Interservice Champion for achieving the highest overall aggregate score of 1,474 points out of a possible 1,500 with 47 Xs (an X is a center shot used for tie-breaking purposes only) out of a possible 150 Xs, followed by Rand D. Bentson with 1,467 points and 44 Xs.



"I just concentrated on shooting a good score, making each shot count rather than trying to win the match," Chubb said. "These are the best shooters in the military; they are the same people we have to heat at the nationals and interservice so this was an off-season trial run of the nationals and interservice."

Chubb also won the 1,000-point aggregate with a score of 985 points out of 1,000 with 32 Xs out of 100, again followed by Bentson with 981 points and 31 Xs and Grant L. Singley with 979 and 40 Xs. Carl O. Dooley was first in the Master Class with a score of 973 points and 32 Xs followed by Kyle A. Ward with 969 and 24 Xs.

Singley won the 600-Yard Any Rifle Any Sight Match with a perfect score of 200 points and 16 Xs out of a possible 20, followed by Norman L. Anderson with 200 points and 13 Xs. Singley also won the 600-Yard Standing Match with a score of 47 points out of a possible 50 and 2 Xs out of 5.

"Singley did really well; that's an excellent score," Chubb said. "We did pretty well especially since we had some pretty tricky wind conditions."

The USAMU Service Rifle Team took second place in the team match with a score of 1,943 points out of a possible 2,000 and 72 Xs out of a possible 200, only 3 points behind the winning Army Reserve Team. Members of the USAMU team, coached by Dooley, were Barry L. Coleman with a score of 492 points and 23 Xs, Chubb with 489 points and 14 Xs, Tobie L. Tomlinson with 482 and 20 Xs and Charles E. Coffey with 480 and 15 Xs.

John O. Chubb takes aim with his modified M-16A2.

The team competition combines the scores of four separate events. In each, competitors fire 10 or 20 shots each under different conditions. The USAMU Service Rifle Team shoots with the modified M-16A2.

First, shooters fire 10 shots each at 200 yards standing, then 10 rapid-fire shots at 20 yards sitting, followed by 10 rapid fire shots at 300 yards prone and 20 shots at 600 yards prone.

Target shooters changed their practice habits, shooting more groups of 15 shots per target rather than shooting with each shot scored.

Other shooters participating on the Running Target Team from USAMU were Lance D. Dement and Michael E. Moore.

Georgia Games set for 1997

Georgia Games Update

ATLANTA — The Georgia Games, one of the nation's top state games programs, is back with a full slate of events for 1997.

Several Georgia Games programs (Championships, Opening Ceremonies and the Torch Run) took a one-year hiatus in 1996 due to the Olympic Games. Additionally, a Spring SportsFest has been added to the program.

All Georgia residents will have the opportunity to compete in a wide variety of events beginning in early spring and lasting through the summer. Athletes of all ages and skill levels can choose from more than 100 events taking place all over the state in nine District Sports Festivals.

In July, officials expect more than 13,000 athletes to compete in 33 championship sports during four days of competition.

Additionally, more than 50 percent of championship events get conducted at Olympic training or competition venues.

"This summer, we saw athletes from around the world fulfill their dreams by competing in the Olympics," said Nick Gailey, executive director of the Georgia Games. "We want to ignite those same dreams in the hearts and minds of all Georgians during our 1997 programs."

Dates and locations for 1997 are as follows:

•March 15 — Spring SportsFest, Georgia International Horse Park, Conyers;

•June 1 to 30 — nine District Sports Festivals, throughout Georgia;

•July 10 to 18 — Torch Run, throughout Georgia;

•July 17 to 20 — Championships, Metro Atlanta (Headquarters, Georgia Institute of Technology); and •July 18 — Opening Ceremonies, Georgia Dome, Atlanta.

For more information, contact the Georgia Games Office at (404) 206-54200 or check out the Games' web site at

SportsFest added to Games

By Georgia Games Update

ATLANTA — The Georgia Games has added a new event to its 1997 program. The Spring SportsFest will allow competitive and recreational athletes to participate in eight events at the Georgia International Horse Park, Olympic venue for Equestrian and Mountain Biking, in Conyers, Ga., March 15.

An expansion of the Triple Challenge, the Spring SportsFest will consist of the following events:

•Five-kilometer run;

•Biathlon — five-kilometer run, 20-kilometer bike;

•Triple challenge — five-kilometer run, 20-kilometer bike, five-kilometer skate;

•Ten-kilometer competitive skate;

•Mountain biking competition;

•Five-kilometer fun skate;

•Ten-kilometer fun and fitness walk (Sanctioned Volksmarch); and •Thirty-kilometer fun ride.

Athletes of all ages and skill levels are encouraged to participate.

Additionally, there will be a mini-expo with exhibitors and entertainment for participants and spectators. Concessions will also be available for all who attend.

The Spring SportsFest will allow runners, cyclists, walkers and in-line skaters a chance to hone their skills before the Georgia Games nine-district Sports Festivals June 1 to 30 and the Georgia Games Championships July 17 to 20.

For entry information, contact the Georgia Games Office at (404) 206-5420.

Georgia hunters make record donations to Hunters for the Hungry

Wildlife Resources Division

SOCIAL CIRCLE, Ga. — Thousands of hungry people throughout the state received warm, nutritious meals this holiday season thanks to the help of Georgia hunters.

Hunters donated 356 deer, totaling approximately 11,000 pounds of ground venison, during the two weekends designated as Hunters for the Hungry collection periods this fall.

In 1995, hunters donated 274 deer, totaling 8,944 pounds of ground venison, to the program. The Department Natural Resources, Wildlife Resources Division; the Department of Corrections; the Department of Agriculture; Safari Club International, Georgia Chapter; and the Georgia Wildlife Federation sponsor the Hunters for the Hungry program.

"Georgia hunters continue to show their support of Hunters for the Hungry by increasing their donations year after year," said David Waller, director of the Wildlife Resources Division. "As more and more hunters learn of the opportunity to give and join in our efforts, hopefully there will be fewer hungry Georgians during the holiday season."

Georgia's Hunters for the Hungry program is unique when compared to other feed the hungry programs. Wildlife Resources Division personnel collect field-dressed deer from hunters at one of several designated locations during the Hunters for the Hungry collection periods. In exchange for their donation, hunters receive a Hunters for the Hungry hat provided by the Georgia Wildlife Federation.

After each collection weekend, the deer get transported in refrigerated trucks to the Department of Corrections Lee Arrendale State Prison meat processing facility in Gainesville. Prisoners process the deer into ground venison and pack it into 10-pound tubes labeled with the Hunters for the Hungry logo, under guidelines provided by the Department of Agriculture.

The Middle Georgia Community Food Bank in Macon picks up the ground venison and distributes it through the seven Second Harvest Food Banks located in Albany, Athens, Atlanta, Augusta, Columbus, Macon and Savannah.

"The Hunters for the Hungry program gives Georgia's hunters an opportunity to focus on the positive aspects of hunting, while providing much needed food for those who are less fortunate," said Waller. "Each year, hunters call and ask when the Hunters for the Hungry program will come to their area. The Wildlife Resources Division provided two new drop-off locations this year to accommodate the growing demand."

For more information on the Hunters for the Hungry program, contact the Wildlife Resources Division at (770) 918-6400.

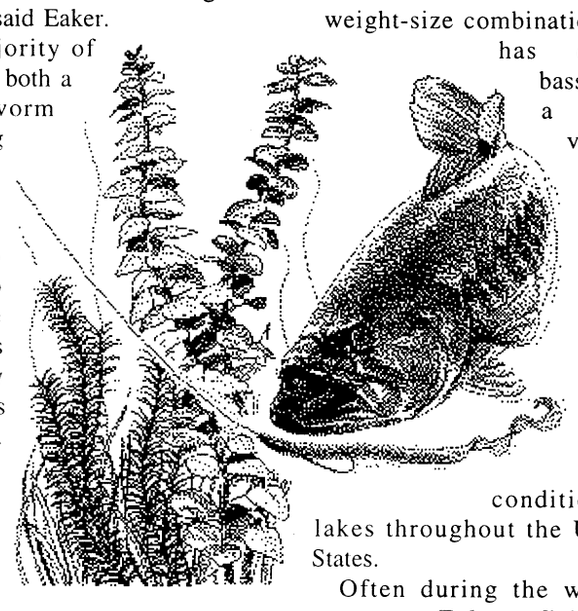
Tournament pro offers tips on fishing with plastic worms

By Steve Price and Earl Bentz
Outboard Marine Corporation

Of all the lures professional bass tournament fisherman Guy Eaker has in his tackle box, his favorites are some more than 40 years old.

"Actually, the lures themselves aren't that old," Eaker, a veteran competitor, said, "but fishermen have been using them that long.

"They're plastic worms, which were originally developed in the early 1950's. I doubt any other lure has caught as many bass as has the plastic worm."



Eaker likes to fish plastic worms in shallow water, and when he does, he prefers to use a sinker that literally screws into the head of the worm.

"Many anglers simply peg the sliding sinker on their line with a toothpick," Eaker said, "but that can damage the line. I use a sinker that has a small corkscrew on the base. After threading the sinker on your line, you screw it into the head of the worm and it will stay in place.

"This type of sinker makes your casting more accurate and it keeps the lure from snagging on brush or limbs, which often happens when the sinker slides freely on your line.

"Having a screw-in sinker also improves the worm's action in vegetation like hydrilla and milfoil," the pro said, "because it allows the lure to fall straight down into tiny holes and openings instead of drifting from side to side where it frequently gets snagged.

"Another thing I like to do with my plastic worms is hop them rather than crawl them along the bottom," said Eaker. "The majority of strikes on both a plastic worm and a jig come when the lure is falling, so I try to make the lure fall as many times as possible. The best way to do that is by raising your rod tip to jump the worm up, then lowering it so it falls again."

If fishermen are not really confident fishing a plastic worm, the North Carolina angler recommends they rig a six inch purple or black and blue worm with a number 20 hook and a 3/16 ounce sinker. This is a famous color-weight-size combination that has caught bass under a wide variety of conditions in lakes throughout the United States.

Often during the warmer summer, Eaker fishes a "swimming worm," by leaving off the sinker. Instead of fishing the lure on the bottom, he swims it on the surface.

"A swimming worm is a great topwater lure around heavy shoreline brush as well as in open water where scattered vegetation is present," Eaker said.

"My favorite retrieves with swimming worms are either a steady swimming action that causes the worm to look more like a small snake, or a series of short jerks that make the worm dart erratically from side to side."

What makes the swimming worm so effective, Eaker said, is the fact it floats and can be kept in the strike zone for a long time. It is also weedless so it doesn't get snagged.

"All in all, the plastic worm is an extremely versatile lure," he said. "I'm not at all surprised that it remains so popular after all these years."

COMMUNITY

AROUND POST

Girl Scout Cookie sales begin — The Concharty Council Girl Scouts begin selling cookies today. Girl Scouts ages 6 through 17 plan to start taking orders.

Cookies cost $2.50 per box.

For more information, call Terri Franklin at 569-1153.

Tricare benefits seminar set — Seminars will be conducted on how to use "Take Care of Yourself," a self-help manual provided by Tricare.

The sessions take place Monday through Jan. 17 at 10 a.m. and 2 p.m. in Room 61 of Building 4, Infantry Hall.

Classes are free. For more information, call 545-4041 or 545-1391.

Tot Town to open Saturday night — Tot Town opens the first Saturday night of every month on a trial basis by parents' requests. The center needs community support to continue this practice.

Tot Town stays open until 6:30 p.m. the first Friday of each month but remains open until midnight and on other Fridays if enough people interested in using the center at these times make reservations in advance.

Call 689-8698 or 689-8772 for more information.

Yard sales require permit — Community Life officials require community members to obtain permits before conducting yard sales.

To obtain a permit, call the local Community Life Center Monday through Friday between 8 a.m. and 5 p.m. or call the Installation Community Life Office at 545-2910. Telephone and building numbers for each center follow:

•West Main Post Community Life Center — Building 80, 682-4724.

Engineer society to meet — The Society of American Military Engineers meets Thursday at 11:30 in the Fort Benning Officers' Club. Robert Steele of Steele Financial Group will discuss financial planning.

Post plans improvements for 1997

By Lisa M. Hibbert
Bayonet staff writer

Quality of life improvements are top priority at Fort Benning.

According to Chuck Walls, garrison executive officer, the opening of the Wynnsong 10 Theater in December, the first of its kind on any military installation, proves this.

"The post has a lot of plans for 1997, but we accomplished a lot in 1996," Walls said.

In 1996, Fort Benning opened a Video Arcade Center (located next to the batting cage on Main Post); installed new equipment in Briant Wells Fieldhouse, Santiago Fitness Center and Kelley Hill Fitness Center; renovated two gas stations; and renovated the children's wading pool at Carey Pool (located next to the Main NCO Club). The post also added 10 new cabins, a meeting and recreation facility, a shuffleboard court, walking trails, horse stables and more at the Uchee Creek Army Campground and Marina.

For Soldiers and their families looking for something to do on post, a glance at the crystal ball reveals much in 1997:

•Upgrades of rental equipment such as bass and pontoon boats at Uchee Creek and jet skis and fishing boats at the U.S. Army Infantry Center's Recreation Area at Destin, Fla.;

•An additional 20-unit motel to open at Destin later this month;

•Construction begins on a 42-bay Auto Craft center (to be located next to Soldiers' Plaza); and •Cosmic bowling, featuring light shows, glowing lanes and balls, music and a glowing cosmic background, comes to the Mall Bowling Center in February.

Another new addition to the post will be Reggie's, an all-ranks club. This theme club will feature sports on video screens with multiple-satellite channels and a quiet area for family dining. Reggie's will occupy a section of the Main NCO Club.

Quality of life improvements for the barracks dwelling for single and unaccompanied Soldiers was also on the slate during 1996.

Soldiers from the 29th Infantry Regiment moved from Harmony Church and Kelley Hill to Henry Hall — the building previously used as an Olympic Village for the 1996 Women's Fast-Pitch Softball games.

"It is a major goal of all commanders to ensure that the Soldiers have good living conditions," Walls said. "It's a morale issue — when Soldiers live well, they work better."

Morale at the 36th Engineer Group is expected get even better with the completion of its new barracks later on this year.

Planned projects for 1997 include:

•Construction on the new barracks complex for the 75th Ranger Regiment is projected to begin in October.

•The $51 million renovation project of Kelley Hill continues through '97, with an anticipated completion date for Phase I and Phase II in late 1998.

•The Infantry Training Brigade and the Ranger Training Brigade barracks will receive new roofs.

All units on post continually conduct small self-help projects, Walls said.

Spending such large amounts on barracks renovations is not new to the post. In fact, Fort Benning spent an overall total of $108 million (including the Kelley Hill project) on barracks renovations since 1994, with an additional $18 million allotted for maintenance and improvement projects, said Glenn Todd, customer service specialist with the Directorate of Public Works.

Barracks dwellers will not be the only ones to receive renovations, Todd said. Family housing residents will also see changes.

The post is planning to invest $10 million in upgrading housing facilities this fiscal year. These changes include:

•new roofs,

•new windows,

•repair of sewer lines, air conditioner ducts and more.

Forty family housing units at Fort Benning's Camp B. Merrill in Dalonaga, Ga., opened in June with families all ready moving in, Todd said.

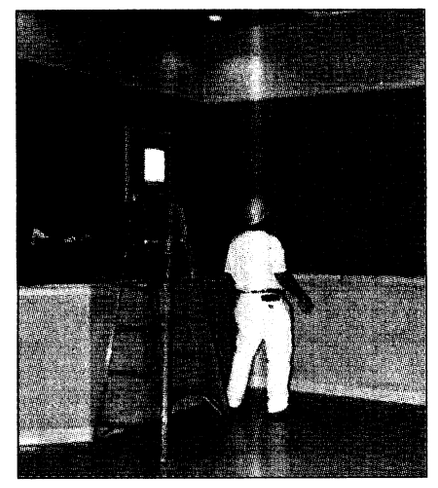
Other areas of improvements that effect the entire military community include the Commissary renovations and improvements to Martin Army Community Hospital.

The improved Fort Benning Commissary, scheduled to be finished in September, will feature customer restrooms, a bakery and a branch of Columbus Bank & Trust.

No longer a cash or check only facility, the Commissary will allow customers to shop with a credit, debit or automated-teller machine card said Jim Hobbins, Commissary manager.

Improvements being made to the hospital, aside from the new pharmacy system that opened in November include:

•a life-safety upgrade;



•renovations of the Labor and Delivery, Newborn Nursery and Postpartum Wards;

•renovations of the Intensive Care Unit and the Intermediate Care Ward; and

•the sixth and seventh floor wards.

Additionally, staff members of the Directorate of Logistics are currently reviewing the post shuttle bus schedule. They are attempting to coordinate drop-off times with movie schedules at the Wynnsong 10 Theater. This will shorten waiting times for the next shows, Walls said.

"Of course, the main mission at Fort Benning is to train the Soldiers, but its important that, if you ask a Soldier to give 100 percent, the leaders must be willing to support the Soldier 100 percent," Walls said.

Directorate of Public Works

As part of our continuing effort to provide the best possible support to all those who live and work at Fort Benning, your Directorate of Public Works staff has undertaken this weekly column. Our intent is to provide a forum in which we can address various DPW-related items and issues that may be of interest or concern to you.

As with virtually every activity on Fort Benning, a lot is going on in the DPW area. For example, in the months to come, more barracks construction projects will kick off. Work begins on a new rail head at Sand Hill, which will provide easier accessibility for moving cargo off post, and runway lighting will be upgraded at Lawson Army Airfield (both in support of Fort Benning's power projection mission); more road and utility repair work will be undertaken postwide; replacement of family housing window blinds that contain lead, will commence; many quarters will receive new roofs; and the drive to demolish more old, unneeded structures will continue, which will cause the relocation of a number of activities. We will use this column to keep you abreast of these and many other DPW-related activities.

We receive calls and letters from many of you and do our best to provide personalized responses. We will certainly continue to provide individual responses but additionally, with permission, we will publish in this column our responses to questions and concerns which might be of interest to the greater post population.

Questions or issues may be referred by phone to Glenn Todd, DPW Customer Service representative, 545-2117, or by writing to Directorate of Public Works, Building 6, Room 409, ATTN: ATZB-PWM (Glenn Todd), Fort Benning, Ga., 31905.

We'll wrap up our first column with a couple of announcements:

•No yard waste pickup — Jan. 20 is a federal holiday honoring Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. There will be no yard waste pickup that day. The next scheduled yard waste pickup date is Jan. 27. Refuse and recycle collections the week of Jan. 20 are not affected.

•New recycle center — you might have noticed a new recycling center near the Shopping Mall Shoppette. This is intended to augment weekly recycling pickups in the family housing areas. Everyone living both on and off post, is welcome to use it. Please segregate your recyclables in accordance with the marked bins and, please, no trash. Recycling benefits all of us, our environment and Fort Benning.

Post museum features new Civil War display

Lynn M. Bieda
Special to the Bayonet©

The National Infantry Museum at Fort Benning is currently displaying an exhibit entitled Baret's Civil War Battles in Bronze.

This 17-piece series of limited edition bronzes is the most recent collection by sculptor Eric H. Baret.

"These authentically detailed sculptures freeze moments in our military heritage," Frank Hanner, director of the National Infantry Museum, said. "They allow each of us to reflect with pride on a time when the United States of America came of age through terrible hardships."

Nine pieces of this series are on display, including First Manassas, Second Manassas, Lookout Mountain, Shiloh, Kennesaw, Richmond, the Wilderness of Virginia and Spotsylvania.

"When you view these works of art, you feel a sense of pride in our history and in our military heritage," Hanner said. "Names of battlegrounds and heroes long gone come to mind — Bull Run, Vicksburg, Gettysburg, Appomattox, Chickamauga, Robert E. Lee, Grant, Sherman and many others."

Each of the bronzes are limited to an exclusive edition of 50. They are all individually signed and numbered by the artist.

"This art pays tribute to an entire generation of Americans that were willing to stand up for what they believed, even if it meant enduring great hardships, to include the loss of arms, legs, eyes or even life itself," Hanner said.

Baret has been sculpting for about 25 years and has produced several series including a western and mystical series.

Baret's sculptures have been shown in Europe and most recently were included at the third annual Rodin prize exhibition at Utsukushi-ga-hara Museum in Japan.

The Civil War series is on display at the museum through February.

The bronzes are available through Stonewall Enterprises located in Columbus at 321-0020 or (800) 856-6071.

Baret's sculpting has been compared to some of the great masters, such as Frederick Remington and Rodin.

"This Civil War exhibit is a fine collection of art that reflects the bloodiest war ever fought by U.S. citizens," Hanner said.

TIME MANAGEMENT

Use days wisely to accomplish much

By Vern E. Jordin II
30th AG Bn. (Rec.)

What if your bank deposited into your account $1,440 each morning but carried no balance to the next day, and at the end of each day canceled whatever amount remained? Would you spend it all, reinvest it in another bank, invest it in other interests or let it be canceled out?

reflections

You have such a bank. It is the bank of time. It credits your account each morning with 1,440 minutes. At the end of each day, it cancels out the balance for the day. Anything not used for a good purpose is lost or squandered. By the way, there can be no overdrafts on this account.

Some look toward the future and make significant and thoughtful investments of today's discretionary time in preparation for tomorrow. Others attempt to borrow on their time account by worrying over tomorrows they cannot control, often paying high interest rates in lost joy or physical ailments.

What would a typical, daily time budget look like? For the average person, there would be 480 minutes for sleep, 480 minutes for work, 150 minutes for eating and meal preparation, 150 minutes for dressing and personal hygiene and 45 minutes for travel to and from work and other places. This time would be like paying the bills, so to speak.

Someone said that we spend an average of 62 minutes a day waiting for someone else and 21 minutes a day on the phone. For sickness, the average daily charge would be about 51 minutes. The suggested daily budget for physical exercise is about 45 minutes. For good stress management, some suggest 45 minutes a day in personal meditation. That leaves 343 minutes of discretionary time per day.

How would you choose to spend your discretionary time? With your family? Some hobby? In reading and self-improvement? More recreation? Television? More work?

The book of Ecclesiastes tells us that there is a time for everything: "... a time to be born and a time to die, a time to plant and a time to uproot, a time to kill and a time to heal, a time to tear down and a time to build, a time to weep and a time to laugh, a time to mourn and a time to dance, a time to scatter stones and a time to gather them, a time to embrace and a time to refrain, a time to search and a time to give up, a time to keep and a time to throw away, a time to tear and a time to mend, a time to be silent and a time to speak, a time to love and a time to hate, a time for war and a time for peace" (Ecclesiastes 3:2-8, NIV). Maybe this means we need to determine the priorities of the time we have to spend.

God, in the Scriptures, encourages us to spend our time wisely. Psalm 90:12 reads, "Teach us to number our days aright, that we may gain a heart of wisdom" (NIV).

There are numerous books on the market about time management. We are wise if we get one that fits us and use it.

Jesus spoke about worry. He said, "Therefore do not worry about tomorrow, for tomorrow will worry about itself. Each day has enough trouble of its own" (Matthew 6:34, NIV).

Sometimes it's hard not to worry, but the exhortation is clear. We have no guarantee there is a tomorrow. If there is, we can only affect it by what we do today. Live today and take care of tomorrow when it gets here.

Somewhere, there is a balance between planning for the future and leaving tomorrow to God in faith. Remember, God sees around the corner of today and into tomorrow. He is eternal and not bound by time as we are bound.

Faith in God does help us face each tomorrow with confidence. He is in tomorrow already, and he is already working out the details of tomorrow for our best interests.

Invest each day to the fullest and trust God for tomorrow.

Relationships

Pay attention to how much you take vs how much you give

By William C. Shelnutt IX
3rd Brigade, 3rd Inf. Div. (Mech.)

No doubt many of us have spent a larger portion of our bank reserves than we have saved during this past Christmas season. Sure, all our expenditures were for very good causes, but how long can this imbalance continue before real hardship exists?

reflections

Life will not let you continue to withdraw without replacing what is spent. Going for days without food or sleep shuts the body down. Similarly, ignoring your partner causes your relationship to suffer. As with our bank accounts, we must pay close attention to the maintenance of our relationship balance or we will pay penalties.

Nothing in our lives requires more attention and exerts more pressure or benefit than does the influence of our relationships.

Our whole emotional makeup and functioning depends upon the nourishment we glean from our relationships. They can make us feel really good or zap the life right out of us and leave us depressed, hurt and sometimes dysfunctional. We are either built up and encouraged by our relationships, or we are torn down.

Normally, the degree to which this happens is so minute that we do not readily sense the changes in the bank of our human spirit. Compliments, care, attention and appreciation add significant deposits to the bank of our human spirit. On the other hand, fights, arguments, disappointments, lies, offensive jokes and other hurts make noticeable withdrawals from our emotional well being.

Several years ago, I came across a list called "Ten Commands of Human Relations." I believe following these commandments will make a difference in our relationship banking practices.

They are:

•Speak to people — There is nothing so nice as a cheerful word of greeting.

•Call people by name — the sweetest music to anyone's ears is the sound of their own name.

•Be friendly and helpful — if you would have a friend, be a friend.

•Be cordial — speak and act as if everything you do is a genuine pleasure.

•Be considerate with the feelings of others — there are usually three sides to a controversy: yours, the other person's and the right side.

•Be alert to give service — what counts most in life is what we do for others.

•Add to this a good sense of humor, a big dose of patience and a dash of humility, and you will be rewarded many fold.

These commandments work for both our vertical (with God) and horizontal (with others) relationships. This is a no-lose situation. When we obey these commandments and cheerfully make deposits in others, we also receive deposits in our account. In other words, making others feel good reciprocates the same warm feeling to us.

Did not God tell us to love him and to love one another? Become a millionaire this year with hawk-eyed attention to your relationships and human bank accounts.

MACH offers new worship services — Martin Army Community Hospital services will be as follows:

•Sunday at 8 a.m. — Protestant Worship Service,

•Sunday at 7 p.m. — Catholic Mass,

•Tuesday at noon — Bible study,

•Wednesday at noon — Protestant Chapel Service, and

•Thursday at noon — Full Gospel Service.

All the services listed above are conducted in the Martin Army Community Hospital Chapel, located in the basement of the hospital.

New children's program begins — The Religious Education Center plans a new segment of its children's Bible study program, Personal Attitudes Relating To You.

The new segment, Children Living Under the Bible, includes Bible study and Scripture memorization, basic etiquette skills, table and home decorating and some sewing and cooking skills.

The class meets the first Saturday of each month from noon to 2 p.m. at the Religious Education Center, Building 2521.

The class is open to girls in grades three through six.

Musician needed for Catholic services — The U.S. Army Chaplains Office needs an organist or pianist with knowledge of Roman Catholic worship to play for the 9:30 a.m. service at Regimental Chapel, Sand Hill, Sunday mornings.

For application information, call 545-1934.

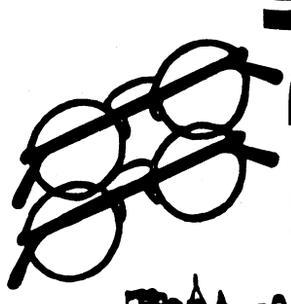
Post chaplains seek workers — The U.S. Army Chaplains Office seeks pianists, organists, choir directors, bus drivers and teachers for Sunday School and Confraternity of Christian Doctrine classes.

The chaplains also need part-time office help and individuals to watch young children during religious activities.

Call the USAIC Chaplains Office at 545-1934, or visit the office in Building 75, for details of times, places and duties.

Sunday school class uses sermon Scriptures — A new adult class provides students an opportunity to study the Scriptures in preparation for the morning sermon.

The Fort Benning Sunday School takes place Sundays from 9:30 to 10:30 a.m. in Building 2517 at the Religious Education Center.



For more information, call 545-4715.

Post policy controls pets

By Jacqué Hill
Special to the Bayonet©

While pet owners might see their dog or cat as another lovable, friendly member of the family, neighbors of these same pet owners may find the animals annoying, dirty or dangerous.

Guidelines for owning pets on post are found in U.S. Army Infantry Center Regulation 40-905.

According to Chuck Walls, garrison executive officer, this regulation is very important.

"Because we live in such close proximity to each other on post, pet owners have got to observe, number one, consideration of their neighbors, and, number two, post regulations," he said.

"You've got to know the rules and observe them if you want to keep a pet on post."

Walls also said that several on-post agencies get involved in incidents where the regulation is ignored or not observed.

The Veterinary Clinic, Military Police Activity, Martin Army Community Hospital, the Directorate of Community Activities and, in cases involving severe animal bites, the Office of the Staff Judge Advocate intervene along with the Garrison Command.

"The Vet Clinic is a big help in the whole pet program," Walls said. "From personal experience, the Vet Clinic is very supportive and useful."

Spc. Vanessa E. Craine, animal care specialist, Veterinary Clinic, said there are a few particular points in the regulation that people need to adhere to.

"Most importantly, pets need current vaccinations and registrations, and the animals need to be under control," she said.

According to the regulation, pets must be fenced in controlled areas of the owners' yards, on leashes or under voice command to be considered under control by post officials.

Several steps are taken, Walls said, when a biting incident occurs. First, the victim is seen by medical staff at MACH and the bite gets reported.

Then, the MPs do a brief inquiry to determine how the bite occurred and the staff at the Vet Clinic checks the animal for rabies.

"It's all for health reasons that we need to see the animal in a bite incident," Craine said.

> "Pet owners have some very clear responsibilities in the control and cleanliness of their pets and, in the consideration of their neighbors and in most cases, those responsibilities are met."
> — Chuck Walls
> Garrison executive officer

Walls further explained the actions taken in biting incidents.

"If the incident is an attack, a decision is then made whether that animal poses a threat to the community," Walls said. "In those cases where it is determined the animal is a threat, the garrison commander will direct the owner to remove the pet from post.

"Pet owners have some very clear responsibilities in the control and cleanliness of their pets and in the consideration of their neighbors, and, in most cases, those responsibilities are met. But occasionally, we do have a problem that requires a pet owner to remove the animal from post.

"Very, very rarely, we move the owner off post, but only if all else fails and he or she disregards all regulations and requirements."

Walls also said a barking dog that brings multiple complaints from neighbors needs to be controlled.

"I think, again, this is an area where consideration of neighbors plays a big role," he said.

Some highlights of USAIC Regulation 40-905 follow:

•All pets must be registered with the Fort Benning Veterinary Clinic within 30 days of their arrival on post.

•Each pet on post must carry current vaccinations, especially required rabies vaccinations.

•Dogs must be in controlled, fenced areas, on leashes or under voice command at all times on the installation.

Robin A. Shawlinski

Sequoia, a Siberian husky owned by Sheri and Spc. Joe R. Wasylishin, 498th Medical Company (Air Ambulance), stands at the fence in his back yard.

•Food, water and shade or shelter must be provided at all times for every pet on post.

•Yards must be kept free of pet waste at all times.

•Pet owners must see to it that they remain considerate of all neighbors at all times.

•Each household is allowed a maximum of three pets.

•Any pet considered harmful, exotic or poisonous is not allowed on the installation.

•A decision to allow the ownership of an animal other than dogs, cats and most birds is made by the garrison commander on a case-by-case basis.

For more information regarding pet ownership on post, contact the Fort Benning Veterinary Clinic at 545-5690.

ACOE team visits to evaluate post

By April N. Olsen
USAIC Public Affairs Office

With a commitment to continuous improvement, Fort Benning is well on it's way to claiming another victory in the Army Communities of Excellence competition.

"Fort Benning will get to show why we're the best during the ACOE APIC evaluation team visit next week," said Sarah McLaney, the site coordinator for the visit.

McLaney, who also serves as the Chief of the Quality Management Division of the Directorate of Resource Management, said Fort Benning leads the Army community with it's programs for improving not only the way Soldiers work, but also the way they live and spend their free time.

"We've won several awards and we're proud of each one," McLaney said, "But the goal is to keep doing better."

McLaney said the Soldiers and civilians on the installation continue to work hard to make the best installation even better.

"As a Department of the Army finalist in the 1997 ACOE competition, Fort Benning continues the tradition of excellence that began in 1993 when we were named the best large installation in the U.S.," McLaney said.

Fort Benning is a leader in the Army, she said. McLaney cited the Single Soldiers' Quality of Life Program and the NCO Risk Reduction, Safety Process Action Team as examples that other installations are trying to follow. Both programs were named best in Training and Doctrine Command last year.

This year's evaluation team will be checking to see that "continuous improvement" is more than a catch phrase, McLaney said.

"The seven member team will be on post to clarify and verify our continuous improvement plan," she said.

The team will visit post Jan. 19 to 25.

Former 11th commander returns as deputy CG

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Col. Walter Wojdakowski will be the next deputy commanding general of Fort Benning.

Col. Walter Wojdakowski will be frocked to brigadier general on Thursday at 2 p.m. on York Field.

He will be assigned as the deputy commanding general of Fort Benning and assistant commandant of the Infantry School, a little more than a year after leaving as the commander of the 11th Infantry Regiment.

Wojdakowski served in various command and staff positions during his Army career.

He commanded the 2nd Armor Division's 3rd Battalion, 41st Infantry Regiment (Tiger Brigade), at Fort Hood, Texas, and in operations Desert Shield and Desert Storm from 1989 to 1991, and was Senior Infantry Task Force combat trainer at the National Training Center, Fort Irwin, Calif., until July, 1992.

His most recent assignments were in Germany where he served as the director of Training, 7th Army Training Command, and later, commanded the Operations Group, Combat Maneuver Training Center.

Wojdakowski is a graduate of the U.S. Military Academy and has a master's degree in business administration from the University of Alaska and a master of military arts and sciences from the Command and General Staff College.

His military education also includes the School of Advanced Military Studies. He is a member of the National Honor Society Phi Kappa Phi.

Wojdakowski's awards include the Silver Star, the Legion of Merit, the Bronze Star Medal, the Meritorious Service Medal, the Army and Navy Commendation Medals, the Army Achievement Medal, the Combat and Expert Infantryman badges, the Ranger Tab and the Master and Canadian Parachutist badges.

Wojdakowski and his wife, Candy, have two children, Steven and Ami, who are both students at Columbus High School.

MTV visits post for future ads

By Robin A. Shawlinski
3rd Bde., 3rd Infantry Division (Mech.)

Fort Benning Soldiers will once again be in the limelight. This time on MTV.

MTV, in coordination with the U.S. Army Recruiting Command and Fort Benning, will tape a series of recruiting commercials at the end of January.

The commercials will feature Soldiers in training and off-duty situations, according to Al Blanchard, U.S. Army Infantry Center Public Affairs Office spokesperson.

"We spend so much time in the studio ... we wanted to do something different and new," said Ed Capuano, MTV producer, during the preliminary visit. "This is fantastic. It's so far beyond anything I could ever have imagined."

The taping will include Soldiers from the Airborne School; the 3rd Brigade, 3rd Infantry Division (Mechanized); the Ranger Training Brigade; the Department of Public Safety; the Dismounted Battle Space Battle Lab; the Army Marksmanship Unit; the 11th Infantry Regiment; the Department of Transportation Aviation; and 498th Medical Company (Air Ambulance), 36th Engineer Group.

The commercials will be taped Jan. 29 to 31.

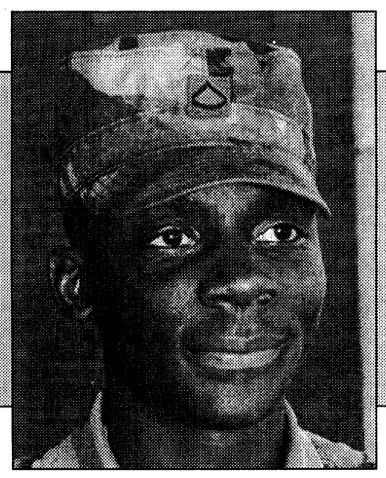
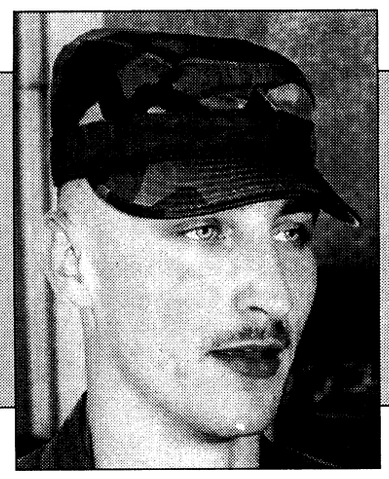
VARIOUS VOICES

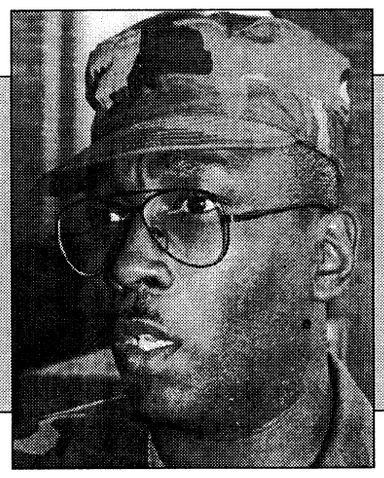


What is the importance of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.'s "I Have a Dream" speech?

Sgt. Florence A. Porter, Detachment D, 24th Personnel Service Branch — "The importance of his speech was the unity between the races and the coming together of the people."



Master Sgt. Beverly Riley, Equal Opportunity Office — "The importance of the speech was for everyone to treat each other exactly the way they want to be treated."



Pfc. Michael Clark, Headquarters and Headquarters Battery, 1st Battalion, 10th Field Artillery — "He said he wanted unity between the races."

Carol Coleman, family member — "He said that all men were created equally and should be treated equally, no matter what their color or ethnic background. He wanted his children to live in a world with peace."

Cpl. Jason Jones, Company A, 18th Replacement Detachment, CONUS Replacement Center— "He wanted to change the future so it didn't resemble the past."

Sgt. Rory Williams, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 1st Battalion, 15th Infantry Regiment — "He wanted everyone to get along with each other. He wanted everyone to live in a world where there was only one race — the human race."

'I Have a Dream'

"I am happy to join with you today in what will go down in history as the greatest demonstration for freedom in the history of our nation.

"Five score years ago, a great American, in whose symbolic shadow we stand today, signed the Emancipation Proclamation. This momentous decree came as a great beacon light of hope to millions of Negro slaves who had been seared in the flames of withering injustice. It came as a joyous daybreak to end the long night of their captivity.

"But 100 years later, the Negro still is not free; 100 years later, the life of the Negro is still sadly crippled by the manacles of segregation and the chains of discrimination; 100 years later, the Negro lives in a lonely island of poverty in the midst of a vast ocean of material prosperity; 100 years later, the Negro is still languished in the corners of American society and finds himself in exile in his own land.

"So we've come here today to dramatize a shameful condition. In a sense we've come to our nation's capital to cash a check. When the architects of our republic wrote the magnificent words of the Constitution and the Declaration of Independence, they were signing a promissory note to which every American was to fall heir. This note was the promise that all men, yes, black men as well as white men, would be guaranteed the unalienable rights of life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness.

"It is obvious today that America has defaulted on this promissory note in so far as her citizens of color are concerned. Instead of honoring this sacred obligation, America has given the Negro people a bad check; a check which has come back marked 'insufficient funds.' We refuse to believe that there are insufficient funds in the great vaults of opportunity of this nation. And so we've come to cash this check, a check that will give us upon demand the riches of freedom and the security of justice.

"We have also come to this hallowed spot to remind America of the fierce urgency of now. This is no time to engage in the luxury of cooling off or to take the tranquilizing drug of gradualism. Now is the time to make real the promises of democracy; now is the time to rise from the dark and desolate valley of segregation to the sunlit path of racial justice; now is the time to lift our nation from the quicksands of racial injustice to the solid rock of brotherhood; now is the time to make justice a reality for all God's children. It would be fatal for the nation to overlook the urgency of the moment. This sweltering summer of the Negro's legitimate discontent will not pass until there is an invigorating autumn of freedom and equality.

"1963 is not an end, but a beginning. And those who hope that the Negro needed to blow off steam and will now be content, will have a rude awakening if the nation returns to business as usual. There will be neither rest nor tranquillity in America until the Negro is granted his citizenship rights. The whirlwinds of revolt will continue to shake the foundations of our nation until the bright day of justice emerges.

"But there is something that I must say to my people, who stand on the warm threshold which leads into the palace of justice. In the process of gaining our rightful place, we must not be guilty of wrongful deeds. Let us not seek to satisfy our thirst for freedom by drinking from the cup of bitterness and hatred. We must forever conduct our struggle on the high plain of dignity and discipline. We must not allow our creative protest to generate into physical violence. Again and again we must rise to the majestic heights of meeting physical force with soul force; and the marvelous new militancy, which has engulfed the Negro community, must not lead us to a distrust of all white people. For many of our white brothers, as evidenced by their presence here today, have come to realize that their destiny is tied with our destiny. And they have come to realize that their freedom is inextricably bound to our freedom. We cannot walk alone. And as we talk, we must make the pledge that we shall always march ahead. We cannot turn back.

> "I have a dream that one day this nation will rise up and live out the true meaning of its creed, 'We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal.'"
> Civil rights leader

"There are those who are asking the devotees of civil rights, 'When will you be satisfied?' We can never be satisfied as long as the Negro is the victim of the unspeakable horrors of police brutality; we can never be satisfied as long as our bodies, heavy with the fatigue of travel, cannot gain lodging in the motels of the highways and the hotels of the cities; we cannot be satisfied as long as the Negro's basic mobility is from smaller ghetto to larger one; we can never be satisfied as long as our children are stripped of their selfhood and robbed of their dignity by signs stating 'For Whites Only;' we cannot be satisfied as long as the Negro in Mississippi cannot vote and the Negro in New York believes he has nothing for which to vote. No! No we are not satisfied and we will not be satisfied until 'justice rolls down like waters and righteousness like a mighty stream.'

"I am not unmindful that some of you have come here out of great trials and tribulations. Some of you have come fresh from narrow jail cells. Some of you have come from areas where your quest for freedom has left you battered by the storms of persecution and staggered by the winds of police brutality. You have been veterans of creative suffering. Continue to work with the faith that unearned suffering is redemptive. Go back to Mississippi. Go back to Alabama. Go back to South Carolina. Go back to Georgia. Go back to Louisiana. Go back to the slums and ghettos of our Northern cities, knowing that somehow this situation can and will be changed. Let us not wallow in the valley of despair.

"I say to you today, my friends, so even though we face the difficulties of today and tomorrow, I still have a dream. It is a dream deeply rooted in the American dream. I have a dream that one day this nation will rise up and live out the true meaning of its creed, 'We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal.' I have a dream that one day on the red hills of Georgia, sons of former slaves and the sons of former slave owners will be able to sit down together at the table of brotherhood. I have a dream that one day even the state of Mississippi, a state sweltering with the heat of injustice, sweltering with the heat of oppression, will be transformed into an oasis of freedom and justice. I have a dream that my four little children will one day live in a nation where they will not be judged by the color of their skin, but by the content of their character.

"I have a dream today!

"I have a dream that one day down in Alabama — with its vicious racists, with its governor having his lips dripping with the words of interposition and nullification — one day right there in Alabama, little black boys and black girls will be able to join hands with little white boys and white girls as sisters and brothers.

"I have a dream today!

"I have a dream that one day 'every valley shall be exalted and every hill and mountain shall be made low. The rough places will be made plain and the crooked places will be made straight, and the glory of the Lord shall be revealed, and all flesh shall see it together.'

"This is our hope. This is our faith that I go back to the South with. With this faith we shall be able to transform the jangling discords of our nation into a beautiful symphony of brotherhood. With this faith we will be able to work together, to pray together, to struggle together, to go to jail together, to stand up for freedom together, knowing we will be free one day. And this will be the day. This will be the day when all of God's children will be able to sing with new meaning, 'My country 'tis of thee sweet land of liberty, of thee I sing. Land where my fathers died, land of the pilgrim's pride, from every mountainside, let freedom ring.' And if America is a great nation, this must become true.

"So let freedom ring from the prodigious hilltops of New Hampshire; let freedom ring from the mighty mountains of New York; let freedom ring from the snow-capped Rockies of Colorado; let freedom ring from the curvaceous slopes of California. But not only that. Let freedom ring from Stone Mountain of Georgia; let freedom ring from Lookout Mountain, Tennessee; let freedom ring from every hilltop and molehill of Mississippi. From every mountainside, let freedom ring.

"And when this happens, and when we allow freedom to ring, when we let it ring from every village and every hamlet, from every state and every city, we will all be able to speed up that day when all God's children, black men and white men, Jews and gentiles, Protestants and Catholics, will be able to join hands and sing in the words of the old Negro spiritual: 'Free at last. Free at last. Thank God Almighty, we are free at last.'"

Corp offers jobs in Saudi

By Chick Eagle
Army Career and Alumni Program

Your military occupational skills could qualify you for a military trainer job in Saudi Arabia.

The Vinnell Corporation, a provider of military training and technical services around the world, has employment opportunities for separating Soldiers.

Frank Turner, senior employment representative with Vinnell Corp., conducts recruiting visits to Fort Benning. Turner's next visit is scheduled for Wednesday and Thursday in Soldiers' Plaza, Building 2634.

Overview briefings will be at 8 and 10 a.m. and 1 p.m.

The rest of the time is used to conduct individual interviews and review of application packages.

According to Turner, all application packages must include the following:

•cover letter highlighting experience, date of availability and a military-oriented chronological resume;

•DD Form 214 — If still on active duty, forward upon receipt;

•copy of civilian education and training diplomas and certificates;

•DA Form 2-1 — Officer Record Brief; and

•copy of all MOS and leadership certificates and diplomas for any military courses.

Openings exist on a recurring basis for noncommissioned officers (normally E-6 or higher), warrant officers and officers with current experience in a variety of military skill areas. Many military trainer requirements are for Soldiers in the combat arms, mechanized and light Infantry, Turner said.

Vets eligible for free driver's license in Ga

Department of Veterans Service

ATLANTA — If you are a veteran who served on active duty or active duty in a reserve component, including the National Guard, during wartime or any conflict when personnel were committed by the president, you may be entitled to a free Georgia driver's license.

"This is one of the state's veterans benefits that a lot of veterans are not aware of," said Georgia commissioner of Veterans Affairs Pete Wheeler.

To be eligible for a free license, a veteran must be a current resident of Georgia and a state resident when he or she entered military service.

A veteran also qualifies for a free license if he or she has been a resident for at least five years immediately preceding the date he or she applies for the license.

"You did not have to be assigned to a unit that directly participated in the war or conflict to be eligible for the free license," Wheeler said.

"The veteran could have served during the Vietnam War and spent his or her entire service career in Europe and still be eligible for the free license," the commissioner said.

The state provides an honorary driver's license free to any Georgia resident who is the surviving spouse of a veteran who was eligible for a veteran's license, so long as the surviving spouse does not remarry.

Also, any resident who is the spouse of a veteran who is qualified to receive a veteran's license but is disabled to the extent that he or she cannot operate a motor vehicle is eligible for a free honorary driver's license.

Veterans who meet the requirements for a free driver's license but, for whatever reason, decide they do not want it can obtain a free Georgia Personal Identification Card.

Commissioner Wheeler encourages any veteran or spouse who believes they might be eligible for a free driver's license, honorary license or personal identification card to visit one of the department's field offices.

The personnel there can validate the veteran's eligibility and fill out the required application.

Any member or former member of the National Guard or reserve forces who has 20 or more years creditable service can obtain a free license by presenting documentation of their service at any licensing facility.

Winter can cause accidents

By Jill Carlson
Infantry Branch Safety Office

The winter months can cause a variety of accidents.

Inclement weather is a major contributor to Army accidents. During training and leisure activities, there is always at risk of accidents.

The following real-life examples involving Fort Benning personnel are safety reminders:

•Cold weather training. During a 18-kilometer dismounted movement to attack an objective in cold weather, a Soldier experienced pain in his feet. The entire mission lasted eight hours and the Soldier did not change his socks during this time. This allowed moisture to accumulate on his feet, resulting in frost bite.

In another incident, a Soldier was crossing a stream during a patrolling mission. While stepping on a log, the Soldier slipped and fell into the stream. When he stopped for the night, he did not change his socks. He put on dry socks the next morning but once he started walking he experienced pain in his feet. He suffered frost bite to his feet.

•Army motor vehicle operations. Two Soldiers were traveling southbound on Highway 27 in an M880 and decided to change drivers. As the vehicle they pulled to the shoulder of the road, the driver lost control of the vehicle. Light rain and fog limited the driver's visibility. The vehicle skidded 38 feet before coming to rest in a ditch. Both Soldiers were not seriously injured but this could have been a fatal accident.

Safety does not take a holiday. Always drive sober and alert.

AIR FORCE

Six competitors dominate Lightning Challenge

By Brian R. Voller
Bayonet staff writer

Every year, the most highly trained and physically fit individuals gather to test their skills.

For four days, these individuals push their bodies and their minds to the limit competing in what the competitors consider one of the most physically demanding competitions conducted. At the end of the competition, the scores are totaled and one person and one team are declared victors. This annual event is the Air Force's Lightning Challenge and it draws the top enlisted Air Force personnel from around the world.

Six members making up three teams from 17th Air Support Operations Squadron, an Air Force unit stationed at Fort Benning that supports the Army, with most of the team members working with the 3rd Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment, finished in the top ten out of 44 teams during this year's Lightning Challenge.

The team of Staff Sgts. Robert M. Arserio and Paul H. Ford won the team competition; Senior Airmen Andy L. Cornelius and Nathan K. Ferguson finished the competition in fourth and Tech. Sgt. John D. Crouse and Senior Airman Michael Colthart finished fifth.

After finishing in first place, Arserio and Ford said they were happy with their first place victory, but they felt even better about how well the three teams from the 17th finished as a whole. They said they were proud because a member of the 17th won some kind of award in every part of the competition.

Unlike the Best Ranger competition where only the team score is judged, the Lightning Challenge also scores the individuals on their performance.

As individuals, the 17th had all six team members finish in the top 12 among all competitors.

Arserio took top honors, besting the rest of the competitors and finishing the competition in first place. His teammate Ford finished third, Ferguson finished seventh, Cornelius finished ninth, Colthart finished 11th and Crouse finished 12th.

The annual competition is similar to the Army's Best Ranger competition in that it is a continuous running event over multiple days; but it is different from the Best Ranger because it is specifically designed to test the skills of Air Force personnel.

The event is organized by the Air Education and Training Command's Detachment 1, 335th Training Squadron, at Hurlburt Field, Fla. The annual competition tests tactical air command and control specialists' combat skills and readiness through several challenges.

Some of the readiness challenges include an obstacle course, a job knowledge test, a two-mile combat run, a field skills event, a land navigation test, a marksmanship evaluation and several other events.

Arserio said the six competitors started training earlier in the year by being allowed to do things such as using half of the regular working day to train for the competition, but he said the competition was still very physically demanding partially because of when certain portions of the competition were conducted.

Brian R. Voller

The competitors of the Lightning Challenge pose behind the awards they received during the competition, Tech. Sgt. John D. Crouse (left), Senior Airman Michael Colthart, Staff Sgt. Paul H. Ford, Staff Sgt. Robert M. Arserio, Senior Airmen Nathan K. Ferguson and Andy L. Cornelius.

"If you go down there not in shape, you're not going to do very well at all," Arserio said. "Probably the most physically demanding part of the whole competition are the road marches. The road marches are done at the end of the day after everything else we've done through the day is over."

Ford said the road marches were also difficult because of the terrain they had to maneuver on.

"Each team is given 100 pounds made up of four 25-pound sand bags and it's up to each team to divide them up how they want," Ford said.

"But most of the terrain down in Florida is sand, so doing a road march down there is like doing one on the beach."

The members of the 17th plan to begin training for next year's competition sometime in June. They said they have several competitions before the Lightning Challenge that they use to decide who from their unit will be going to the next year's Lightning Challenge.

Ford said he is confident that the 17th will continue their winning ways in the years to come.

USAMU commander retires after 26 years

By Paula J. Randall Pagán
USAMU Public Affairs Office

The commander of the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit retired after 26 years of service Jan. 8 during an indoor ceremony at the Pool International Shooting Complex .

Surrounded by dozens of family, friends and well wishers from the Fort Benning and Columbus communities, Col. Alan D. Fenty, commander of the USAMU since August 1995, was honored at the ceremony.

"It seems fitting to me to be retiring here at Fort Benning because it was the first place I was assigned as an Infantry second lieutenant, so it's sort of like coming full circle," Fenty said. "All I can say for sure about the future is that I'm looking forward to its new challenges and a great lifestyle, and I'm looking forward to making the future equally great as a member of the civilian community."

Brig. Gen. Evan R. Gaddis, commander of the Community and Family Support Center, USAMU's higher headquarters, presented Fenty with the Legion of Merit.

The award certificate, signed by Secretary of the Army Togo D. West Jr., cited Fenty's outstanding duty performance, exceptional leadership and dedication to excellence, which were directly responsible for significantly enhancing total Army readiness and elevating Army competitive shooting to previously unachievable levels.

"He's a graduate of the Military Academy," Gaddis said of Fenty. "He's an Infantryman, he's an aviator, he's a foreign area officer, he's an attaché, he's a father and he's a husband. And he has excelled at each. He's a leader, he's a manager, he's a statesman and he's a warrior. But most importantly, he's a proud, brave American."

Gaddis also presented to Fenty's wife, Linda, a Department of the Army Certificate of Appreciation signed by Army Chief of Staff Gen. Dennis J. Reimer.

The members of the Army Marksmanship Unit recognized their commander's service to the unit by awarding him with the Black Hat — the USAMU symbol of a champion. Marksmanship Unit shooters and 1996 Olympians Sgts. Theresa E. DeWitt and Kenneth A. Johnson read the Black Hat Certificate signed by Gaddis, and Laurence K. Mosely, the senior Olympian currently assigned to the unit, presented the certificate and hat to Fenty.

"To the members of the Army Marksmanship Unit, as always, you look great," Fenty said. "You have always been completely professional and I've always been proud to be your commander. You're all winners, and I know I'll be seeing many of you on the winner's platform in the future."

Fenty, an aviation officer, graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, N.Y., in June 1970, received a master of arts degree in international affairs from Florida State University in 1985 and is a 1991 graduate of the Inter-American Defense College.

Commissioned in the Infantry, Fenty initially served in the 3rd Infantry Division as a platoon leader, company executive officer and assistant brigade operations and training officer in the 3rd Brigade in Ashaflenberg, Germany.

He graduated from the U.S. Army Aviation School in 1973, and was then assigned to Korea as an aviation platoon leader and operations officer for the 128th Combat Assault Aviation Company. After completing the Infantry Officers Advanced Course, Fenty reported to the 82nd Airborne Division where he served in numerous command and staff positions from 1975 to 1979.

Fenty and his wife have four children and plan to settle in the Columbus area.

Cold weather injuries hinder Soldier's mission

By William P. Corr
Martin Army Community Hospital

With the cold weather here, Soldiers and leaders need to be even more aware of health effects of cold temperatures. Cold injuries and other cold-related health conditions can prevent Soldiers from doing their jobs.

Major types of cold injuries include hypothermia, immersion foot and frostbite.

Hypothermia is a very serious condition that can result in death. It is the condition that results from reduced core temperature. When body temperature drops to 95 degrees or lower, hypothermia is a danger.

Hypothermia

Signs of hypothermia follow:

•Mental — the first signs of hypothermia include difficulty in decision making, apathy and lethargy. There is a noticeable decrease in cooperation in group activities. Speech becomes slurred. Unconsciousness can even occur.

•Muscular — in the early and moderate stages of hypothermia, Soldiers involuntarily shiver as a way to generate body heat. Hypothermic Soldiers lose the ability to coordinate fine motor tasks resulting in stumbling or falling.

In severe stages of hypothermia, the body stops shivering and becomes stiff. As stated in the Army's safety journal "Countermeasures" (Oct. 1996), "A Soldier may deny he is in trouble; believe the symptoms, not the victim."

Treatment of victims with a rectal temperature above 90 degrees includes preventing further heat loss (remove from cold, dry off the victim, insulate) and actively rewarming. For hypothermic patients with rectal temperatures below 50 degrees, immediately evacuate to medical facility. Do not take time to rewarm a severely hypothermic Soldier in the field.

Immersion foot

Immersion foot occurs when feet are soaked in water 50 degrees or less for greater than 12 hours. This seemingly harmless foot disorder can put a Soldier out of action for several weeks.

Soldiers with immersion foot cannot walk because of pain and frequently will have blisters, ulcers and gangrene. Treatment for immersion foot is bed rest and antibiotics for several weeks.

Immersion foot can be prevented by frequent sock changes and good nutrition. Keep feet dry. Change socks as needed to keep feet dry. Check feet daily. Sleep with feet warm and dry.

Frostbite

Frostbite injury results when tissue is cooled sufficiently to freeze (typically at 28 degrees or below). The affected area will be numb and pale yellow in color (grayish in dark skinned Soldiers).

Soldiers with deep frostbite must be evacuated to a medical facility. Do not attempt to thaw deeply frost-bitten feet and hands before evacuation. Keeping them frozen is far superior to thawing them and then allowing them to refreeze. Refreezing causes immense damage to thawed out extremities.

Soldiers who are more at risk for cold injuries include those who are fatigued, dehydrated, poorly nourished, not trained in cold weather techniques, darkskinned people and tobacco users.

29th appoints honorary colonel

By Lynn M. Bieda
Special to The Bayonet©

The 29th Infantry Regiment appointed an honorary colonel recently.

Retired Col. John C. Hughes was appointed for service in the special interest of regimental continuity, tradition and esprit de corps.

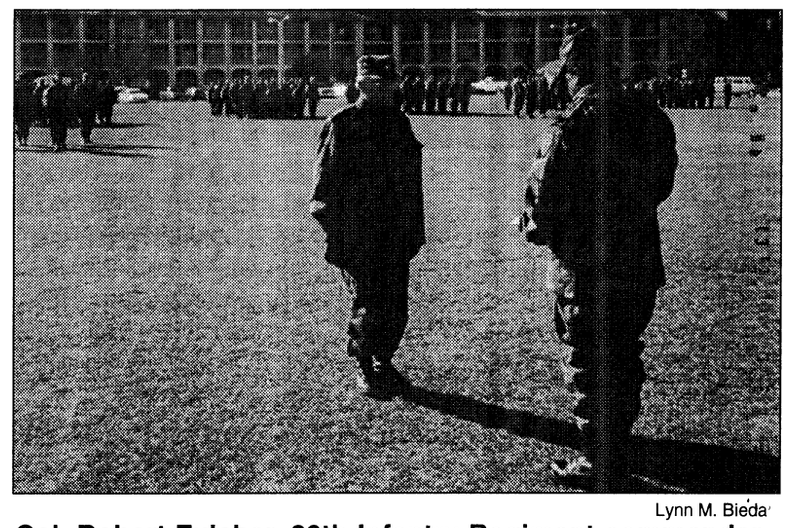
"It's fitting that he be installed as the honorary colonel of the regiment," said Col. Robert J. Fulcher Jr., 29th Infantry Regiment commander. "His actions in combat, his heroism and the actions he's taken as a leader and a teacher of Soldiers designate him as our honorary colonel."

Hughes expressed how proud he was to have this honor and spoke to the troops that were present.

"I'm grateful for your contribution, I'm grateful for your sacrifice," Hughes said. "Each of you will be in the Army for many years to come and each of you will lead in some way."

Hughes entered the Army in October 1942 in the enlisted ranks. He graduated officer candidate school and was commissioned a second lieutenant in October 1943.

During a tour in Vietnam in 1969, where he commanded the 12th Aviation Group (Combat), Hughes earned the nickname "Corn Cob 6." Hughes said he used corn cob pipes "to comfort the wounded, the injured and ill Soldiers of my command when I visited them in the hospitals.



"I also give them to men who do outstanding things in their day-by-day duties. The word has spread and it's having a great affect on morale."

Hughes visited wounded Soldiers two evenings each week and presented them with the pipes.

In 1974, Hughes retired from the Army.

His decorations and honors were awarded for heroic actions and meritorious service against armed enemies of the U.S. during military operations of World War II, Korea and Vietnam.

Hughes was married to the late Ann Abernathy for over fifty years. They have two sons, Lon and Mark.

OWC is accepting scholarship applications — The Fort Benning Officer's Wives' Club is now taking applications for its annual merit scholarships. The OWC is awarding the competitive scholarships to participants or applicants in continuing education and to seniors graduating from high school. Graduating high school seniors may apply for either an academic scholarship or a vocational and technical scholarship.

Any active or associate member in good standing of either the Fort Benning Officer's Wives' Club or the Fort Benning Enlisted Wives' Club may apply for the scholarships.

The scholarships are also available to any military family member of both active duty and retired personnel, whose mother is a member of the OWC or the EWC. The deadline for qualifying memberships for the OWC or the EWC is Jan. 31.

The complete guidelines for applications are available at the Main Post Library, at the Fort Benning Officers' Club by the cash cage and from the high schools' guidance counselors.

All materials must be received or postmarked no later than March 21.

Mail materials to:
OWC Scholarship Selection Committee
C/O OWC Office
P.O. Box 51978
Fort Benning, Ga., 31905-1978

Materials may also be delivered to:
Karon Kinnison
404 Yeager Ave.
Fort Benning, Ga., 31905

For more information, call 682-6417.

Field artillery sponsors ball — The St. Barber's Day Ball takes place today at 6 p.m. at the Fort Benning Officers' Club. The event is sponsored by the 1st Battalion, 10th Field Artillery, 3rd Brigade, 3rd Infantry Division (Mechanized).

The attire for the evening is the dress blue uniform.

Tickets cost $25 per person.

For more information, call Capt. Clark Taylor at 544-2750.

EWC meets monthly — The Enlisted Wives' Club meets the second Wednesday of every month at 7 p.m. in Building 2626, Soldiers' Plaza.

Child care is provided during meeting times.

For more information, call Mamie Wells at 568-6303 or 545-2444.

GET INVOLVED

Installation offers ways to fill spare time

By Lisa M. Hibbert
Bayonet staff writer

New in town? Looking for something to do? Fort Benning offers many clubs and organizations for Soldiers and family members to participate in.

Below is a list of a few of the ways that people can spend their spare time:

•Officer's Wives' Club — The Fort Benning Officer's Wives Club meets for monthly luncheons and dinners at the Fort Benning Officers' Club throughout the year, pausing for a summer break in May and resuming again in September.

The OWC is a service organization that gives back to the community by offering academic scholarships and welfare donations to organizations.

OWC accepts applications from organizations in need of funding and twice a year, they make presentations.

The group also runs a thrift shop that is located on Main Post and sponsors gymnastics, ballet, dancing and piano lessons.

Membership to the OWC is open to wives of officers and senior enlisted soldiers.

Dues cost $7.50 for six months or $15 annually.

For more information, call Ronnie Burke-Samuel at 685-4886.

•Fort Benning Chapter of the Forever Forward Warrant Officers' Spouses Auxiliary Club — The Warrant Officers' Auxiliary, the post's newest spouses club, meets monthly on the third Thursday of every month, although dates may vary according to planned functions. WOA meets at the Officers' Club or at the home of a club member. However, the group may also meet at the Main Post Bowling Alley for a fun night.

Some of the things the WOA does is donate money to charities such as the Ronald McDonald House, the Army Community Services Food Locker, the House of Times — a women's shelter in Columbus — and more.

Like the OWC, the WOA also breaks for the summer.

The WOA is open to all spouses of active duty and retired warrant officers.

Annual membership dues cost $12.

For more information, call Pam Wade at 689-8343.

•Enlisted Wives Club — The Fort Benning Enlisted Wives' Club meets the second Wednesday of every month at 7 p.m. in Building 2626, Soldiers' Plaza, except during the summer.

The EWC has three major functions throughout the year: a scholarship dinner, a Christmas event and an installation dinner.

Throughout the year, the EWC raises money for academic scholarships. These are awarded to enlisted Soldiers and their family members and family members of officers.

The Christmas event is when the EWC and their families get together for an evening of fun and fellowship, and the installation dinner is when the new officers are installed.

For more information, call Mamie Wells at 545-2444 or 568-6303.

AUSA is a Soldier-support organization that lobbies Congress on behalf of Soldiers.

Its major functions include: Military Appreciation Week activities, an Independence Day celebration on York Field, Operation Holiday and the national conference which takes place in October in Washington D.C.

Membership dues cost:

•for E-4 and below, without the magazine — $10;

•general membership — $25; or

•three-year membership for $68.

A benefit of being a member is the discounts offered by area businesses to members.

AUSA is open to all Soldiers in all ranks.

For more information, contact your unit command sergeant majors or call 545-3273.

•Noncommissioned Officers' Association — The Fort Benning Chapter of NCOA is also a Soldier-support organization.

It meets the third Wednesday of every month at either the NCO Club or the NCOA Office, located on South Lumpkin Road.

NCOA conducts many events in the community throughout the year, including a biathlon — a two mile run and a five mile bike race, a golf tournament and more. Proceeds go to soldiers graduating from the NCO academy, NCO, Soldier, drill sergeant and instructor year, drill

Membership in NCOA, like in AUSA, entitles Soldiers to discounts at several area businesses.

Annual membership costs $20 per year and is open to enlisted service members of all branches.

For information, call Sgt. Maj. Willie Wells, local chapter president, at 545-2233 or the NCOA Office at 682-2988.

Mayors work to improve quality of life in housing

By April Strawser
Special correspondent

Volunteer community mayors work all year long to better the quality of life in the Fort Benning community.

The Army established a community life mayoral system to provide family members a way to voice their opinions and help the post respond to the family needs, said Jennifer Morgan, Community Life Office.

Fort Benning adopted the program in 1972, she said. Every year, spouses are elected to represent their communities by fellow residents. The mayors create a formal line of communication and help coordinate between U.S. Army Infantry Center staff, agencies and the communities they serve.

Semi-annual town hall meetings take place in each community to give the residents the opportunity to speak out about community issues, according to Morgan. Some of the areas they have been involved in the past include playground renovations, asbestos removal, housing regulations and quarters renovations.

As the mayors attend the monthly board meetings, they gather information and print a newsletter that is distributed to all area residents, Morgan said.

Community activities that generate a sense of pride is also on the mayors' agenda, Morgan said. The Community Life Mayors' Association sponsors the Santa Ride-Around at Christmas and the Safety Carnival every spring. Individual mayors sponsor other activities, to include community picnics, bicycle rodeos, Christmas lights contest and Easter egg hunts.

To keep the community running smoothly, the mayors cannot stand alone, Morgan said. Other volunteer positions are available in each housing area. Bouton Heights and Davis Hill are looking for a mayor and vice-mayor. Vice-mayors are also needed in Indianhead Terrace and the Custer Terrace, Upatoi and Battle Park areas. Street representatives or court captains, secretary and committees such as education, welcoming and community crime watch are needed in all areas.

These positions serve as liaisons between the mayor and the community.

For more information, contact your community mayor or the installation Community Life Office.

A list of area mayors follows:

•Indianhead Terrace — Dorothy White, 687-4524;

•West Main Post — April Strawser, 682-3840;

•East Main Post — Shawna O'Neil, 685-0479;

•McGraw Manor — Becky Murphy, 685-4482; and •Custer Terrace, Upatoi and Battle Park — Andrea Gronau, 682-1734.

Things to do

From playing pool to touring a museum, Fort Benning offers a variety of activities

Directorate of Community Activities

Fort Benning offers a wide variety of activities for Soldiers and family members to do, a sample of the many things to do follows below:

Youth Services

Video games, ping-pong, dances, sports, field trips — boys and girls will never be at a loss for things to do if they spend their free time at Fort Benning's Youth Activities Center.

Young athletes can be active throughout the year with the Youth Services Sports Program, which includes flag and tackle football, cheerleading, soccer, basketball, baseball, T-ball, swimming and karate. Each sport has several age groups and everyone who signs up during the registration period will be placed on a team.

During the school year, the Main Post Center in Building 1056, the Youth Gymnasium in Building 1055, the Indianhead Center in Building 2592, Bouton Heights, Building 9608 and McGraw Outreach Center, Building 11303, are open Tuesday through Friday from 3 to 8 p.m., Saturday from 11 a.m. to 8 p.m.

During the summer, the facilities are open Tuesday through Saturday from 11 a.m. to 8 p.m.

For more information, call the Youth Services Main Office at 545-3070 or 545-3913.

Recreation Centers

If you find yourself doing the same things with your free time, you might be due for a change. Join a band, read a book, play Nintendo or enter a pool tournament. You don't have to spend a lot of money; just go to the Kelley Hill or Sand Hill Recreation centers.

The recreation centers provide active duty and retired military personnel, Department of the Army civilian employees and their families a variety of leisure-time activities.

The Kelley Hill Recreation Center in Building 9079 is open Monday, Thursday, Friday and Saturday from noon until 9 p.m. and from 10 a.m. to 7 p.m. Sundays and holidays.

For more information, call the Kelley Hill center at 544-3079.

The Sand Hill Recreation Center, located in Building 3308, is open Wednesday through Saturday from noon to 9 p.m. and Sundays and holidays from 10 a.m. to 7 p.m.

For more information, call the Sand Hill center at 544-9161.

Arts and Crafts Center

Do you need that family portrait framed, but the portrait studios charge too much?

Do you want a desk for the den, but you can't find what you're looking for?

Well, you can find everything you are looking for at Fort Benning; all you have to do is make it yourself.

Fort Benning's Arts and Crafts Center has all the supplies for ceramics, framing, woodworking, trophy making, silk screening and full-color copies.

Instructors will show you how to create original items that will be perfect additions to your home or the perfect gifts for friends.

For a small user fee, you can work one-on-one with any of the four instructors.

The Arts and Crafts Center is open Wednesday, Thursday and Friday from 1 to 9 p.m. and Saturday and Sunday from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m.

For more information, call 545-7048.

Bowling

Bowling has been a popular pastime for years, and at the Fort Benning Bowling Centers, it is becoming even more popular thanks to state-of-the-art lanes and computer systems, leagues and daily specials.

Both bowling centers offer a variety of specials to keep bowlers returning.

Infantry Museum

The National Infantry Museum, established at the home of the Infantry in 1959, honors the Infantryman and his more than two centuries of service to the nation.

The museum offers 30,000 square feet of exhibit space within a historic masonry building featuring large, well-lighted, carpeted galleries.

Admission is free, and the museum is open to the public Monday through Friday from 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., and Saturday and Sunday from 12:30 to 4:30 p.m. It is closed Thanksgiving, Christmas, New Year's Day and federal holidays celebrated on Mondays. Tours may be arranged by calling 545-2958.

Sayers Library

A visit to Sayers Library on Main Post is a visit to the future of library management.

The library has undergone several major renovations in the last several years. Its entire collection has been cataloged and bar coded into a new automation system. All new books and other library materials are cataloged and coded before placement on the shelves.

The library also provides computer access to magazines, newspapers, business reports and a complete Georgia law library through CD-ROM.

Sayers also offers patrons the use of typewriters and computers.

The library's hours are Monday through Thursday from 11 a.m. to 8:50 p.m., Saturday from noon to 7:50 p.m. and Sunday from noon to 8:50 p.m.

For information, call 545-7141.

Carlson Wagonlit

Carlson Wagonlit Travel is the place to go when planning a vacation or weekend getaway. CWT makes reservations for hotels, cruises and tours and arranges both airline and train tickets.

CWT offers information and discounted coupons or tickets to special events, amusement parks and other attractions locally, regionally and nationally.

For more information, call CWT at 682-0622.

Follow Me Golf Course

All active duty and retired military personnel, their families and Department of Defense civilian employees who enjoy an afternoon on the Follow Me Golf Course will find all their recreation needs met.

The facility's two 18-hole golf courses, two putting greens, practice green, chipping green and driving range provide hours of recreation.

The golf course employs PGA–qualified golf pros who work on a one-on-one basis with those who schedule appointments.

For information, call 687-1947.

ask the judge

By George R. Smawley
Office of the Staff Judge Advocate

Q: My car recently got vandalized in the parking lot of the Officers' Club. When I called the Claims Office, a representative told me I could file a claim, but Army regulations generally prohibit payment of claims for incidents that occur at a location other than assigned housing. What standards get used in evaluating these kinds of claims?

A: The national epidemic of auto theft and vandalism expanded to military installations with increasing frequency. Fortunately, the military claims system offers some limited relief to active duty service members who find themselves the victim of this type of crime.

Army Regulation 27-20, Chapter 11, defines vehicles as "automobiles, motorcycles, mopeds, utility trailers, camping trailers, trucks, motor homes, boats, boat trailers, bicycles and aircraft." Damage or theft to these vehicles may be compensated up to $3,000 when the incident meets the following conditions:

•The damage or theft occurred while the vehicle was located at the Soldier's assigned government quarters or authorized off-post lodging (hotel while on a temporary duty assignment, but not off-post housing at permanent duty station);

•The vehicle meets proper insurance and registration requirements with both a state Department of Motor Vehicles and the Fort Benning Provost Marshal's Office;

•At the time of the incident that gave rise to the damage or theft, the vehicle needed lawful parking in accordance with post regulations and directives.

The regulation also requires claimants to secure their vehicles and any property contained within. Motorcycles and bicycles need securing inside a locked storage shed or chaining to a fixed object, such as a rack, post or tree.

In accordance with recent changes to the claims regulation, AR 27-20, "there is a presumption that vehicle theft or vandalism occurs off the military installation and is generally not compensable. Officials pay such claims only payable when the claimant proves that the theft or vandalism occurred while the vehicle was located at his or her authorized quarters (e.g. a military police report indicating broken glass from the window is on the driveway)."

Failure to register, insure or properly secure your vehicle contrary to law and regulation also results in the denial of the claim. This includes property located inside of the vehicle.

For example, radar detectors receive no compensation because they are used to evade the law, and stereo equipment needs bolting to the vehicle in a way that requires tools to remove it. Small, high-value items, such as radio headsets and expensive sunglasses, need securing in the truck of the vehicle or locking in the glove compartment.

While the Army claims system offers some limited relief from theft and vandalism, private insurance remains a service member's best guarantee against a loss.

For more information, call the Fort Benning Claims Office, Office of the Staff Judge Advocate, at 545-2285.

Saving 10 percent of income can help you meet goals

Georgia Society of CPAs

It's wise to save at least 10 percent of your pretax income so you can adequately provide for your retirement and meet other financial goals. Sound impossible? It may be easier than you think.

To get you started, members of the Georgia Society of Certified Public Accountants provide these 20 ways to boost your savings — and the return on your savings — in 1997 and in years to come:

•Pare down your debt. Unless you can find an investment with an after-tax return that's higher than what you're paying on your debt (and that's not likely), reducing your debt is the first step toward smart saving.

•Track your spending and look for ways to cut back spending and increase savings.

•Pay yourself first. As long as your debts are under control, put a predetermined amount away in a savings plan each month before you make big-ticket purchases.

•Make it automatic. Authorize your bank to transfer a set amount each month from your checking account to a savings account, mutual fund or another investment vehicle.

•Maximize your 401(k) contribution. Remember that every dollar you invest in this qualified retirement plan reduces your gross income by the same amount.

•Save the small stuff. Rather than cashing small checks you receive for dividend payments, insurance reimbursement, birthday gifts and the like, deposit them in your savings account.

•Bank "extra" checks. If you get paid biweekly, two months out of the year, you'll get three instead of the usual two paychecks. Save those two checks and you'll boost your savings significantly.

•Revise your W-4 form. If you got a large tax refund last year, reduce your withholding for 1997. You'll get a bigger paycheck and you can save or invest the extra cash so that you earn interest on your money.

•Save your raise. Resolve to save the extra money you get in your paycheck after you've gotten a raise. Do the same with any bonuses you receive and you'll really come out ahead.

•Make it painless. If your adjustable rate mortgage adjusts downward, plan to save your windfall.

•Reach for higher yields. To compete with money market mutual funds, some banks offer penalty-free Certificates of Deposit — but watch out for hidden charges.

•Put found money away. If you're earning more than the Social Security withholding cap on payroll taxes, your Social Security deduction will stop before year end. Take the portion of your salary that you previously turned over to the government and put it toward your personal retirement savings.

•Switch credit cards with a credit card that charges less interest and you can pay off your balance faster and free up money for savings.

•Open a 'think twice' account. Every time you decide not to buy something, write a check for the amount you would have paid for the item and deposit it into a separate account. Before long, you'll forget what you gave up and have a tidy sum to invest.

•Pay down your mortgage. Send an extra $50 or more with your monthly mortgage payment and you'll pay off your mortgage earlier and save thousands on interest.

•Make the most of emergency funds. Don't keep all your emergency funds, typically three to six months worth of living expenses, in a low-yielding savings account. Put a portion of it in higher yielding, yet liquid investments, such as short-term CDs or money market mutual funds.

•Use a discount broker or buy direct. Unless you need professional advice, consider buying and selling stocks and bonds through a discount broker. Also cut costs by buying stock directly from a company.

•Consider investing in municipal bonds. Any interest earned on these bonds is free of federal income tax. That feature can boost the yield on your investment significantly.

•Refinance your mortgage. Look into refinancing if the interest rate on your existing mortgage is two or more points higher than today's rates. Invest the money saved on your monthly payment.

•Commit to planning. Keep more of your money when you take advantage of opportunities available to those who make tax planning a year-round event.

Regardless of status, people need a financial plan for future

Georgia Society of CPAs

If you think only the wealthy need personal financial plans, think again.

A personal financial plan serves as a road map to your financial future by identifying your financial goals, assessing your current financial position and providing strategies for reaching your goals.

Plainly and simply, it can help you make the most of your money. Members of the Georgia Society of Certified Public Accountants provide this step-by-step overview for preparing a financial plan.

If you were planning a long road trip, most likely you would have a destination in mind. When it comes to planning your financial future, your goals serve as your destination, pointing you in the right direction.

Do you want to save for a down payment on a house or for a European vacation? Over the long term, are you planning to send your children to college or retire when you're 50? Be sure to put your specific short- and long-term goals in writing to help you stay on the right course.

Of course, like any road trip, you should anticipate that there will be stops along the way. Some might be expected, like getting married, buying a home, or having children. Others might come as a surprise — you may lose your job or become unable to work, or, on the brighter side, you could win the lottery or come into a large inheritance.

The next step is to determine where you currently stand financially.

Put together a personal balance sheet that lists your assets — that is, what you own — such as the value of your investments, retirement plan and your home. It also should show your liabilities — or, what you owe — such as your mortgage, home equity loans and credit card balances. The difference between the total value of what you own and what you owe is your net worth.

To accomplish your goals, you need to make sure your net worth grows.

Basically, there are four ways to increase your net worth: through money you save from your earnings; through income from your savings and investments and increases in the market value of those investments; by building equity in your home; and by reducing your debt.

The two financial exercises that will help you build your net worth are preparing a budget and devising an investment plan.

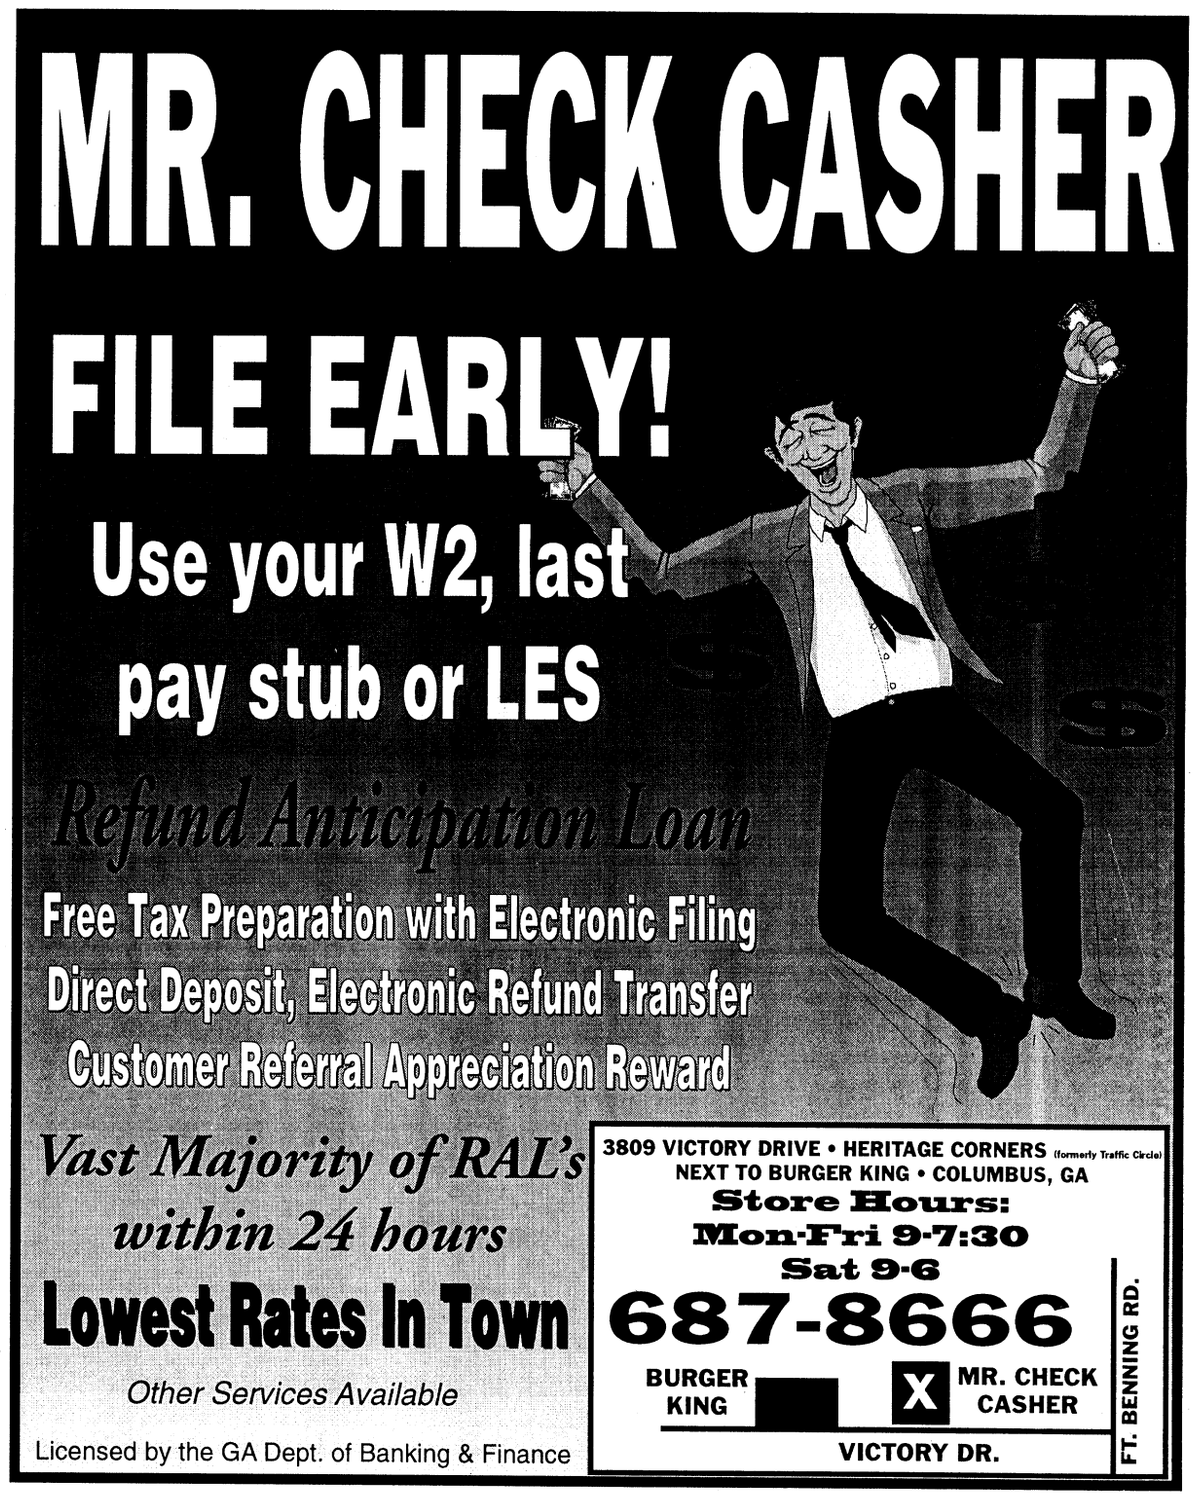
Before preparing a budget, it is helpful to put together a cash flow statement that tracks your income and your expenses over a period of time. By analyzing your cash flow statement, you should be able to see if you are spending too much in certain categories and not enough in others.

Then, it is up to you to establish a budget that sets spending limits and generates income for saving toward your goals. Keep in mind that the more realistic your budget, and the more realistic you are about sticking to it, the better your chance of meeting your goals.

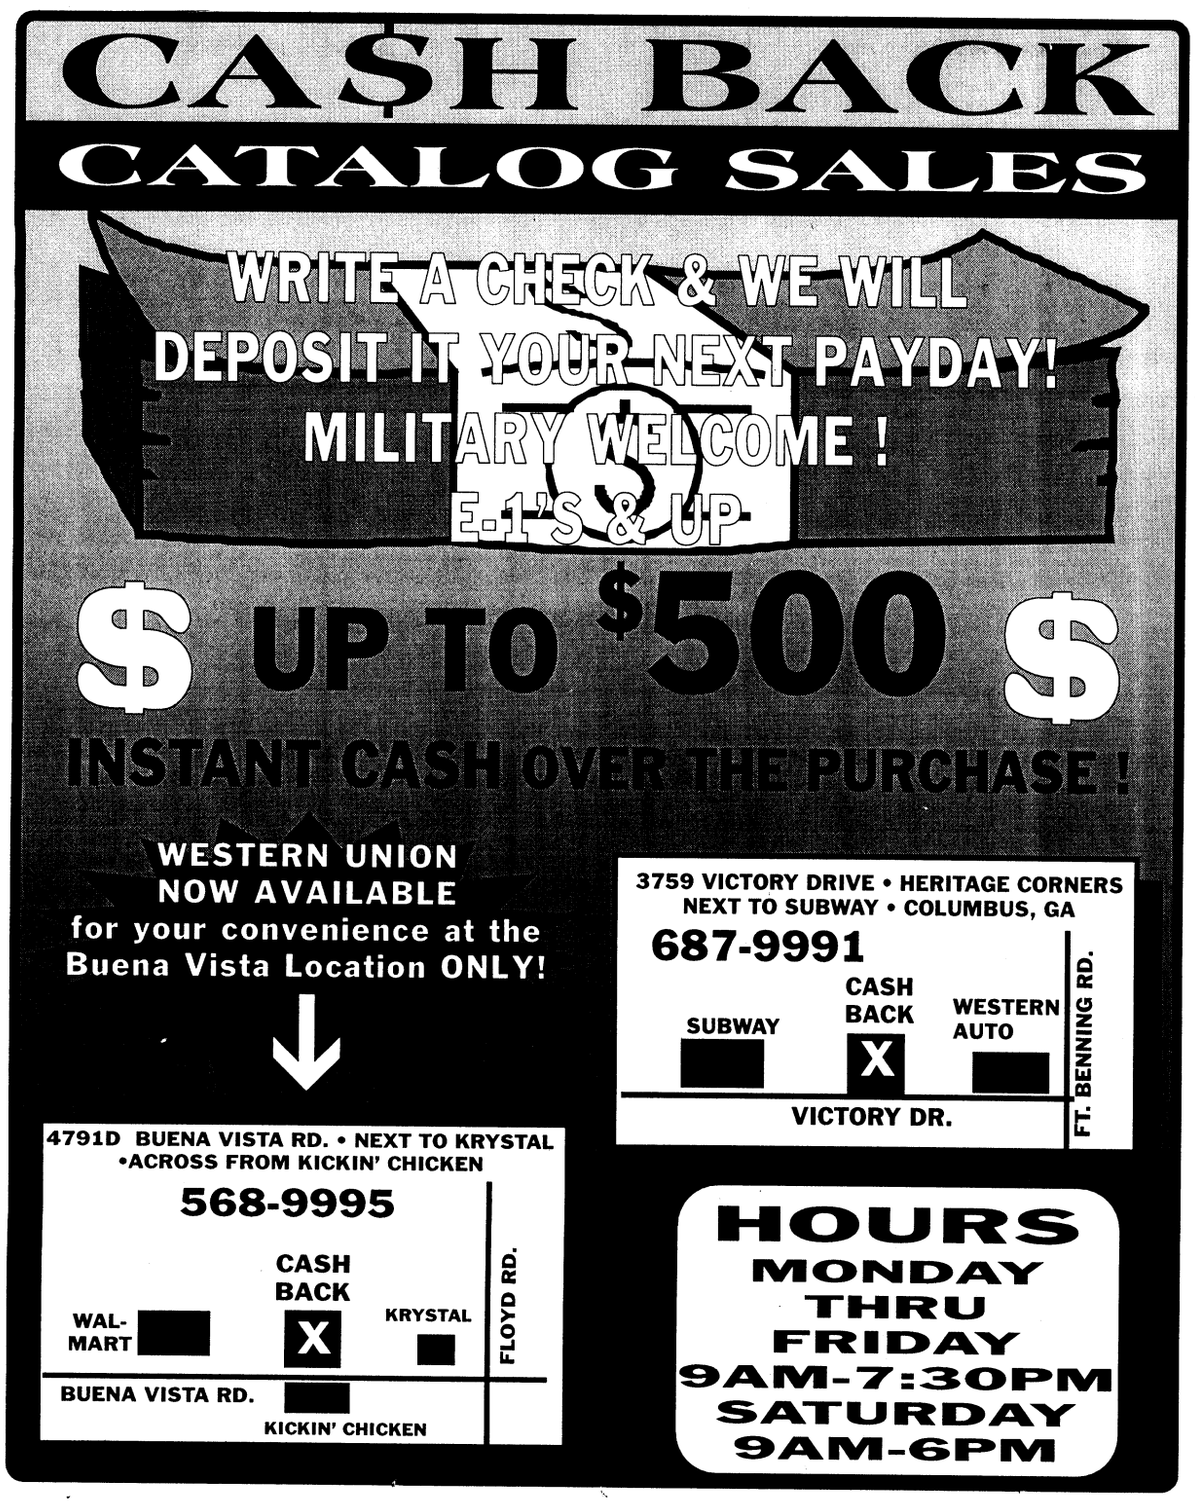
As your assets grow, an investment strategy becomes another important element of your financial plan. Begin by investigating different investment options, such as stocks, bonds and mutual funds, to determine which work best for you.

As you divide your assets among the different investments, be sure your allocation is consistent with your financial goals, your tolerance for risk, and your investment time frame. Also, be sure your portfolio is diversified; a sensible mix can reduce risk and improve long-term returns.

Building your assets is important, but it is equally important to protect the assets you have. You'll want to be sure you have adequate life, medical, disability, property loss and personal liability insurance coverage. Since your needs are always changing, be sure to reevaluate these plans annually.



Many people seriously underestimate the value of their estates.



If your net worth statement shows that you're worth close to one-half million dollars, you should seriously consider the need for an estate plan. Learn how wills, living trusts and other estate planning tools can help you save federal estate taxes.

As you prepare your personal financial plan, you may want to consult with a CPA who can also advise you on the role taxes play in your plan.

Currently, there is a lot of construction under way at Fort Benning, and more will soon start. The following is an update on one of these projects being managed by the Savannah Engineer District:

•A second Kelley Hill barracks modernization project will be under way soon. This long-awaited project has been delayed for two years due to a bid protest by a construction company and subsequent court action. The various issues have now been resolved and the contractor is getting ready to start work.

The project includes the complete renovation of two existing buildings (Building. 9006 and 9007) and the construction of a new barracks building. This project will provide modern housing for 400 Soldiers assigned to the 3rd Brigade, 3rd Infantry Division (Mechanized). Two Soldiers will be assigned to a room with each Soldier having a separate sleeping area and a walk-in closet. Each room contains a bathroom, which the two Soldiers will share. These barracks will be identical to the ones nearing completion in the 36th Engineer Group's area on Main Post. Additionally, a smaller building will be constructed which will house two company headquarters. This project is scheduled to be completed in February 1999.

•Fort Benning currently has a wooden pallet recycling program. Many are serviceable and can be put to good use; others are unserviceable and should be properly discarded. Please do not throw unneeded or damaged pallets in dumpsters or abandon them throughout the installation. Instead, take them to the Materials Recycling Facility (Recycling Center), Bldg. 4000 in Harmony Church. Many of our units and activities make frequent "runs" to our sanitary landfill; those doing so should consider dropping their unneeded pallets off at the Recycling Center on the way to the sanitary landfill. The Recycling Center is open Monday through Friday from 8 a.m. to 1p.m. Recycling wood pallets saves Fort Benning money, conserves precious space in our landfill and eliminates an eye sore. For more information, call Tom Moore at 544-6142 or Walter Nichols at 545-1007.

•Also, be sure to remember the following notes:

There will be a steam, heating, and hot water outage affecting the Kelley Hill area Jan. 25 from 1 a.m. to midnight. This outage is necessary to repair steam and condensate piping throughout Kelley Hill. For more information, call Mark Fincher at 545-4652.

Monday is a federal holiday honoring Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. There will be no yard waste pick-up that day. The next scheduled yard waste pick-up date is Jan. 27. Refuse and recycle pick-up for Tuesday through Friday will not be affected. For more information, call Wilmer Busby at 545-4749.

Legislature signs bills to protect taxpayers

Georgia Society of CPAs

Congress not only legislates taxes, it also legislates taxpayer protection. That protection was strengthened last year when President William J. Clinton signed the Taxpayer Bill of Rights 2.

The Georgia Society of Certified Public Accountants points out some of the changes that are particularly helpful to taxpayers, especially those experiencing hardships in meeting their tax responsibilities.

Taxpayers may be able to enter into installment agreements to pay their back taxes, as long as the Interne Revenue Service agrees to do so. Once such a plan is set up, the IRS has the right to modify or terminate it in certain situations.

However, the IRS must permit taxpayers to request a review of a decision to terminate an installment agreement. So that taxpayers don't get caught in the lurch, effective Jan. 30, the IRS also must provide 30-days notice before ending or changing the agreement.

A taxpayer is generally entitled to 30-days notice before the IRS seizes property to collect any taxes. The notice must include information about appeals and other procedures that can help taxpayers avoid liens on their property.

Under the new law, if the IRS does decide to seize the property, the value of personal property exempt from an IRS levy is increased from $1,650 to $2,500 and the value of books and tools of a trade exempt from levy is increased from $1,100 to $1,250.

In most instances, a taxpayer's principal residence is also exempt from IRS levy.

For any IRS notice issued after Dec. 31, 1996, the IRS will give taxpayers who fail to pay their full tax bill a slight reprieve from interest charges. From the time the notice is issued, the taxpayer will have 21 calendar days — up from 10 calendar days — to pay off the bill without incurring interest charges, provided the tax liability is under $100,000.

IRS authority to abate interest is expanded to apply to interest resulting from "unreasonable" errors or delays caused by IRS employees performing "managerial" or "ministerial" duties.

The new bill will give taxpayers a better chance of recovering attorney's fees in the event of a tax controversy. That's because the burden of proof is shifted to the government. It's now required that the government prove its position was substantially justified before taxpayers would be precluded from recovering such fees.

Don't know why your ex-spouse is being questioned by the IRS? Under the new rules, if you've filed a joint return with your spouse and are now separated or divorced, you can contact the IRS to find out why the IRS is trying to collect taxes from your former spouse. The rule went into effect July 30.

Also, Congress made it easier for married individuals to switch their filing status as of July 31. They can now switch from filing separately to filing jointly, even if they cannot pay the joint liability in full.

Another beneficial tax law change is the recognition of private mailing services to meet the "timely, mailing-as-timely-filing rule."

In the past, only the U.S. Postal Service was recognized. New rules now recognize other private mail carriers, as long as they meet certain criteria. The IRS will designate the private services that qualify for purposes of this rule.

Taxpayers who need help in resolving problems with the IRS can do so through the Taxpayer Advocate. The Taxpayer Advocate reports directly to the IRS commissioner and has expanded authority to assist taxpayers who may be suffering significant hardship because of IRS actions.

Russian colonel speaks of deliverance

By Lisa M. Hibbert
Bayonet staff writer

Former atheist, member of the Communist party and born-again Christian Col. Eugene Khatyushin of the Russian army spoke to the congregation at The Infantry Center Chapel Sunday.

"I'm very blessed to be able to speak at such a wonderful base of American Infantry," Khatyushin said. "I served in the Russian infantry and I know how soldiers are trained because I did it myself so many times. If someone had told me a few years ago that I, a Russian colonel, would one day speak at Fort Benning, I would have never believed it."

Khatyushin began his military career in 1956 and served in a variety of positions. During his career, Khatyushin said he witnessed many changes. He served as a soldier during the height of the Cold War and later he supported the democratic movement in Russia. He said that he favored this change because he became disillusioned with the party.

"Communism wasn't working, so I decided to support the democratic movement in Russia," Khatyushin said.

He served as an advisor to Boris Yeltsin during the 1991 coup attempt. It was his responsibility to organize the military support for the Russian president with 20 officers under his command.

Khatyushin and his fellow officers were with Yeltsin in the Russian White House Aug. 20 when word came that a detachment of the KGB, former Russian secret police and intelligence agency, was coming to attack.

The officers went out to talk to the tank commanders and were instrumental in convincing them not to fire on, but rather defend, the Russian White House. According to Khatyushin, that was one of the most critical times in his life.

This coup marked the end the Cold War and ignited the break up of the former Soviet Union.

Cecil Wayne Todd of Revival Fire Ministry team met Khatyushin about three years ago in Moscow. Todd said they were conducting a worship service when this man, dressed in full military uniform, slipped in the back of the service.

"This was shortly after the fall of communism, and there was a lot of talk of the KGB and surveillances," Todd said. "While we were conducting our services, we weren't sure why he was there."

Todd said they even considered altering their service, but they decided to go ahead and preach the Gospel of Jesus Christ as they did every night. At the end, Todd said the group passed out Bibles.

Khatyushin said he remembers this night distinctly. When he, along with his wife and son, entered the 500-seat auditorium, he found nearly 2,000 people crowded inside with about 50 Americans standing in the front conducting a worship service. At the end, Khatyushin said that someone pressed a book into his hand. After glancing through it, he realized that this was a Bible.

"This was the first time in my life that I held a Bible in my hands," Khatyushin said. "I took it home and began reading it, but I didn't understand."

This ignited a thirst in Khatyushin because he returned to the church and began to learn more about Jesus. He accepted the Lord and was baptized Oct. 24, 1993.

"Finally, I had found something to fill the hole that was inside me," Khatyushin said.

After becoming a Christian, Khatyushin resigned from the military in order to devote his life to God. Today, he travels the United States, seeking Bibles so that he may spread the gospel in Russia.

"After accepting the Lord, he came back to the church and asked for a few more Bibles," Todd said. "Then he asked for 500 Bibles and then he asked for 5,000 Bibles! We investigated him and found out Khatyushin was trying to give a Bible to all of the soldiers under him."

Khatyushin's personal mission is to place Bibles into the hands of all Russian soldiers. So far, he has personally passed out Bibles to more than 20,000 members of the two-and-a-half-million soldiers in the Russian army.

"A Bible only costs about 50 cents to give," Khatyushin said. "That may not seem like much, but when the exchange rate is more than 4,000 rubles to one American dollar, it's a lot to Russians who are struggling with runaway inflation."

Christians come together for Unity Sunday

By Stephen D. Fry
36th Engineer Group

Christians of all denominations will celebrate Christian Unity Sunday this Sunday. Throughout the years, the church has always gone back to Christ as the head of the true church.

reflections

The Bible has always been the source of our beliefs. Yet over the years, various denominations have come into being because of slightly different interpretation of the Bible. The core beliefs are the same for the denominations, but the practices of the different denominations vary.

Christian Unity Sunday is the day that Christians stress their core beliefs. These are the beliefs that define them as Christians. These include the belief that Jesus is God's son, the predicted Messiah of the Old Testament. Jesus fulfills the prophecy of the one who would be born in Bethlehem. He would grow up and bring salvation to the world

In the New Testament, we find that Jesus lived a sinless life. He performed many different miracles to include raising the dead and calming stones. The miracles that Jesus performed were done as proof that he is the son of God. Who else but God has the power over death and nature?

The central truth of all Christianity is that Jesus died on the cross. His death paid the penalty of sin for all that believe in him. Sin is what separates man from God.

A holy God can't have anything to do with sin. All humans have sinned at some time or another in their lives. Thus, we can't know God in our natural state. No matter how much good we do, we can't earn God's salvation.

So, how is the problem of sin overcome? Sin is paid for by the blood of Jesus when he died on the cross of Calvary. The blood of Jesus was offered to God the father as a payment for sin. God accepted this payment for sin.

How are the results of the payment for sin given to us? Romans I 10:9-10 states, "That if you confess with your mouth, Jesus is Lord, and believe in your heart that God raised him from the dead, you shall be saved. For it is with your heart that you believe and are justified and it is with your mouth that you confess that you are saved."

Christians believe that salvation comes from Jesus and that to be saved, one must believe that Jesus lived, died and rose again. Then, one must publicly testify to his or her belief in Jesus.

Even though Christian churches may practice the faith in various ways, all Christians have unity on the central belief in Jesus as savior. This is what Christians celebrate on Unity Sunday.

Nation pauses to remember life of

Martin Luther King Jr

By Kenneth R. Williams
1st Bn., 50th Inf. Regt., ITB

The nation celebrates the birthday of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. Monday. Each national holiday calls Americans to make commitments and take certain actions.

reflections

At Christmas, they celebrate and honor Jesus Christ. On New Year's Day, people make resolutions having to do with self-improvement, mostly concerning diet. Independence Day, brings the celebration of the birth of the nation. So, what do Americans celebrate and what actions do they take on Martin Luther King Day?

King's famous "I Have a Dream" speech conjures several thoughts about celebrating and honoring the great civil rights leader.

Americans should celebrate the personal integrity and courage of a man to stand up for what's right in the face of extreme adversity. Certainly, King knew what could happen to him if he continued the pursuit of his dream.

He had studied Ghandi's teachings on peaceful civil disobedience. He was willing to take whatever abuse or torture or ridicule or punishment came to him. He took responsibility for his actions in standing against injustice and oppression without making excuses for himself. He did not resort to manipulation or petty politics as tools to realize his dream.

His dream was pure and his motives were pure. Americans should commit themselves to be people of truth, honesty and integrity.

The nation should celebrate the spirit of selfless service and sacrifice. King would be appalled at the attitude of our society today — the attitude of selfishness and greed.

At halftime of one of the recent New Year's Day bowl games, Lou Holtz, former football coach at Notre Dame, was asked what he saw as the difference between athletes today and those of fifteen or twenty years ago. He said that twenty years ago, he saw athletes who were interested in duty, responsibility and education.

Today, Holtz said, he sees individuals who are interested in their personal rights and privileges and money.

Americans live in a world of those who are more concerned about getting than giving. People today seem to be willing to use any means necessary to get what they want or what they think is owed to them.

King would not have advocated the practice of using one's own personal pain to an advantage or to gain a profit. King was a giver, not a taker, and a servant, not one who demanded service. Americans should follow his example and not demand their rights, but look to the needs of others.

They should celebrate the fact that truth will win out. King held to a faith that could "hew out of the mountain of despair a stone of hope." He saw and possessed what had not taken place — the freedom and equality of all people.

He was a man of faith and called the nation to faith, faith being "substance of things hoped for and the evidence of things not seen," (Heb. 11:1). He was a man of vision and gave the world a vision of what human relations could be like if everyone would accept each other and break down the barriers that divide them.

People should commit themselves to the pursuit of freedom for all people. King said, "I have a dream that one day this nation will rise up and live its creed. 'We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal.'"

Americans should commit themselves to the equality of all human beings. Respect all people for who they are as created by God in his image.

The Constitution states that Americans have been endowed by our creator with "certain inalienable rights, among these are life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness." Often in the pursuit of their own freedom, Americans infringe on the freedoms of others.

How can the nation's people reconcile their individual freedoms? The answer is found in the Apostle Paul's second letter to the church at Corinth (Corinthians 10:23-24 NIV) where he was addressing the practice of eating meat that had been used in pagan worship.

He said, "Everything is permissible, but not everything is beneficial, ... not everything is constructive. Nobody should seek his own good, but the good of others."

In other words, an individual may have the freedom to do many things, but if he or she causes another to stumble or if he or she offends another, then he or she is abusing the freedom, erecting barriers and restricting the freedoms of others. The result is that he or she incarcerates him or herself in a prison of selfishness.

The guideline for the pursuit of life, liberty and happiness is found in seeking the good of others, not personal good. As Americans pursue their own freedoms, their motives become biased, distorted and selfish.

But, if they can focus on the needs of others, as King did, they can break down the barriers that divide them; they will treat others fairly and as equals, and they will achieve true freedom for all mankind.

No American is truly free until all of them are free. This Martin Luther King Jr. Day, commit to the relentless pursuit of freedom for all mankind and celebrate what God can do through one man who is totally committed to him.

Jews plant trees for Tu B'Shvat

By Chana Timoner
USAIC Chaplains Office

In schools, millions of children studied the food chain and the complicated relationships between all of the animals and plants on the earth.

reflections

Surprisingly, to some, ecology was not unknown to educated people as far back as three thousand years ago. In the Talmud, a huge compendium of Jewish knowledge, we learn about ecology.

Factories were banned from being within one mile of any town. Trees were planted and lovingly cared for. Jewish law and customs developed around proper care of all living things, animal and plants. A holiday, Tu B'Shvat, is observed in which Jews throughout the world plant trees and make donations to plant trees in the land of Israel.

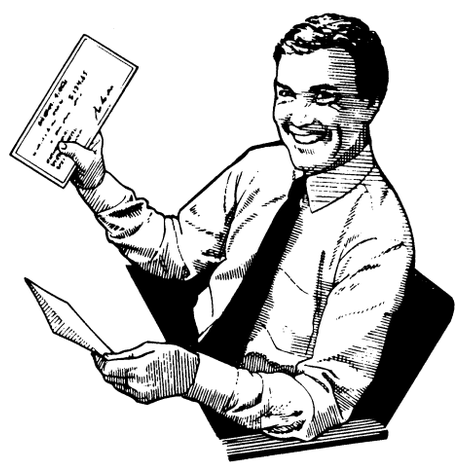
The 15th day of the month of Sh'vat (Tu B'Shvat) in the ancient Jewish calendar is an ecological holiday celebrated long before we became aware of and interested in our environment. Jewish laws and customs tie this day with tithing, because it is in the early spring in Israel. At this time, the earliest plants and trees to bloom needed to be cared for, but more importantly, in the beginning of the season for growth, people needed a reminder to tithe their produce.

So important is this holiday that it became a spiritual connection between Jews who lived outside of Israel and in the land of Israel. An eternal tie that helped to keep the nation of Israel thriving in spite of having lost our land for 1,000 years.

So important is the care and planting of trees that there are several rabbinical tales and stories about the great value of trees.

One favorite saying about planting a tree is that the work is so important that should the Messiah come while you are doing the work, you may not interrupt the planting.

A story is told that a man was planting an olive tree near the side of a road. Another man came along and told him what a fool he was. After all, it takes a hundred years before an olive tree is able to bear any fruit. The man planting the tree replied, "True, I will not live to see the fruit from this tree. But my father planted trees for me, his father planted trees for him, and I am planting trees for my children."



Knowledge about the ecological value of trees has been passed from generation to generation, just as trees have been planted for future generations. Through the intensive program of planting trees, in a single generation the land of Israel has been changed from a desert to a verdant land rich in nutrients and plant life.

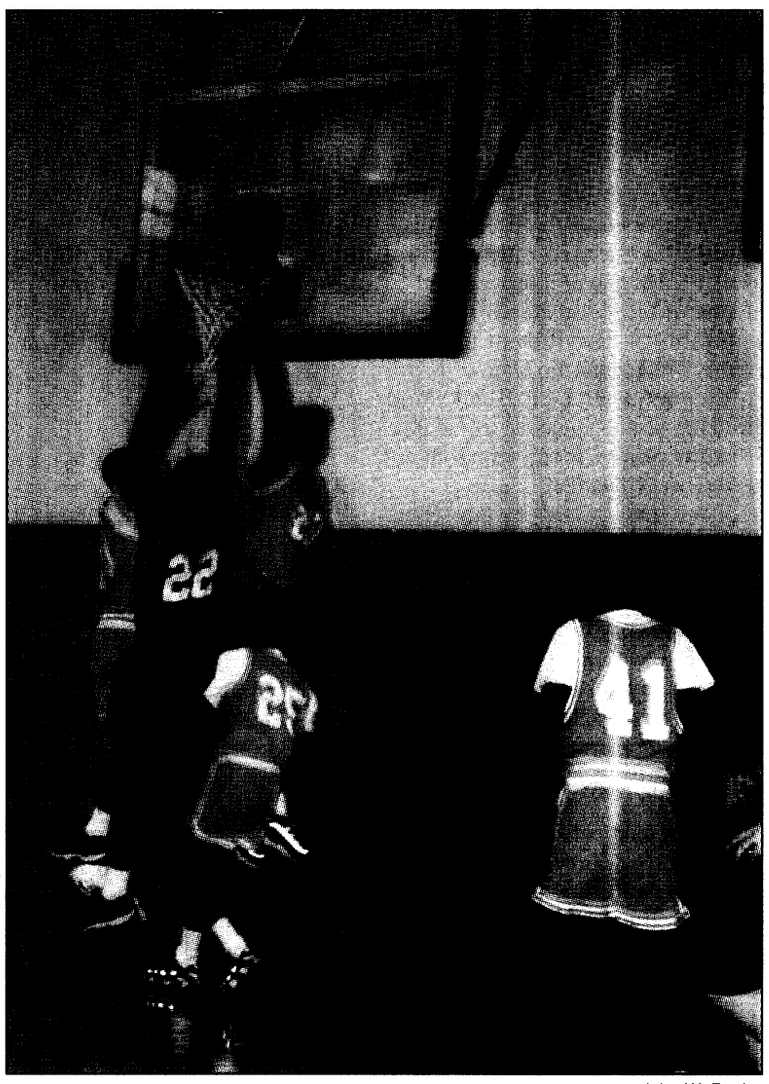
SuperSonics defeat Magics in close game

By John W. Peeler
Special to The Bayonet©

The Youth Services basketball program tipped off after the holiday break with three games played Jan. 10 at the Main Post Youth Services gym.

In the 6- to 7-year-old division the Supersonics led by La-Qwon Perryman and Kenvrick Holmes with 4 points each, defeated the Magics 12-10. Tyler Kahlee knocked down 8 points for the Magics to keep the game close.



In more 6- to 7-year-old action, Ronald Bray scored 10 points to lead the Yellow Jackets to a 18-13 win over the Bulls. Leading the scoring for the Bulls was Gary Howard with 8 points.

In a make-up game for the 8- to 9-year-old division, the Sixers defeated the Dream Team 16-10.

Basketball action picked back up Jan. 11 with 9 games on tap. In the 8- to 9-year-old division, Christopher Stackhouse scored 10 points to lead the Sixers over the Blue Devils 26-10. In the divisions second game, Michael Aaron tipped in 8 points as the Regulators turned back the Spurs 17-7. For the Spurs, the duo of Elijah Davis and Dominique Love scored 4 and 3 points respectively to account for the Spurs points. In the divisions late game, the Dream Team put together a total team effort in defeating the Bulls 11-6. Joshua Bartee, Terrance Mister, Ruben Rodriguez, Fernando Rodriguez and Lewis Posey all contributed 2 points each in the victory. Dwight Jemison, Jeremy Williams and Kevin Gray were the lone scorers for the Bulls with 2 points apiece.

In the 10- to 11-year-old division, the Bulldogs, led by Leon Frazier with 14 points and Terrance Averett with 10 points, defeated Team 4 by a score of 42-2. In the second 10- to 11-year-old game, Brian Sheppard scored 10 points to lead the SuperSonics to a 17-11 victory. Shaunacey LeSure led the scoring for the Hurricanes scoring 8 of the 11 Hurricane points. In the 10- to 11- year-old late game, The Spurs and Blue Devils battled to a 12-12 tie. Joshua Artis was the leading scorer for the Spurs with 7 points and DeJarvis contributed 6 points in the Blue Devils effort.

In the 12- to 15-year-old division, The Celtics defeated the Tarheels 36-32. Leading the scoring for the Celtics was Omar Roman with 25 points while Nick Brown and Travis Slone led the attack for the Tarheels with 10 and 8 points respectively. In other 12- to 15-year-old action, Roland Lusane and Ian Radcliff combined for 42 points to lead the Magics over the Orangemen 44-38. Reggie McFadden was the high scorer with 23 points in the Orangemen loss. In the 12- to 15-year-old late game, the Monstars, led by the scoring trio of Tim Hardcastle, Michael Registe and Miquel Hernandez defeated the Lakers 39-15. Hardcastle and Registe scored 8 points each and Hernandez contributed 7 points in the win. For the Lakers, Alberta Rosa and John Fernandez scored 4 points each in the loss.

Media fails public in professional athlete's case

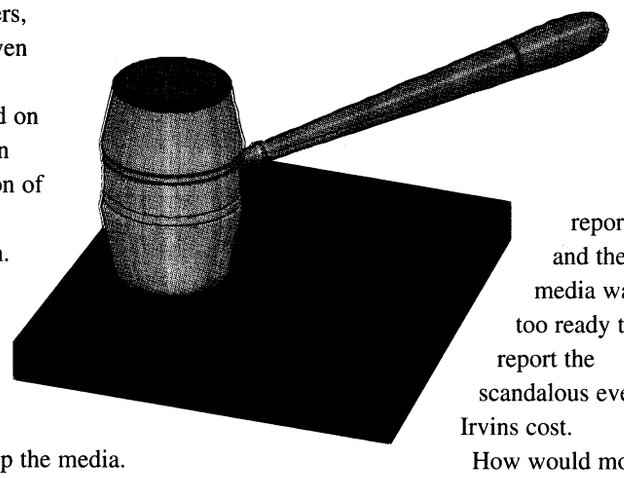
By John W. Peeler
Special to The Bayonet©

John W. Peeler believes the media missed the mark in reporting the Michael Irvin incident.

commentary

An individual is innocent until proven guilty. That's what the Constitution and the Bill of Rights provide to every person in this great country of ours.

It's too bad that sometimes the sports media people do not remember this.



Dallas Cowboys wide receiver Michael Irvin was lambasted in the media for the last few weeks for a reported incident involving him, teammate Erik Williams, an exotic dancer and charges of rape.

Not wanting to wait for the investigation to evolve, the media pounced on Irvin immediately following a press conference by the police naming him and Williams as the purported assailants.

The news beckoned the what ifs and boldly declared the demise of Irvin and the fall from grace the self-proclaimed Americas team had taken.

Without so much as being charged, the media was ready to ban Irvin from football and have him spend 20 years in prison for violating his parole on an earlier drug charge, to which he pleaded no contest.

Sports writers, analysts and even commentators quickly jumped on the band wagon with speculation of what would happen to Irvin.

Irvin had not even been charged, but this small fact did not stop the media.

In the minds of many, Irvin was already guilty. Yes, Irvin was a bad boy earlier in the year, so many already assumed him guilty again.

Well, guess what happened on the way to the forum? The allegations from the dancer were proven to be false. Irvins attempt to rehabilitate his reputation and a victory celebration after a playoff win were ruined.

A quick look at what happened in this instance quickly reveals that the police, through a press conference, decided it was in the publics best interest to know what had been reported and the media was all too ready to report the scandalous event at Irvins cost.

How would most of us react if someone announced to the world that we had been involved in an incident prior to being charged?

When was the last time you saw or heard of the everyday citizen being treated the way Irvin was?

Shades of O.J. Simpson, found not guilty, and Richard Jewell, Olympic Park bombing suspect, immediately come to mind.

In an effort to have someone to blame or find someone accountable, far too many are willing to jump to conclusions before knowing all the facts, even including the police and media at times.

Now, Irvin is asking the press to retract and reprint the stories and issue an apology. I doubt his innocence will get the press his assumed guilt received. The outcome will probably be some obscure piece buried deep within the sports pages.

The media has a responsibility to report in a truthful and unbiased manner based on the facts of the story — in essence, to tell the truth. The media failed in Irvins case.

I guess someone forgot to tell the national media that the Constitution and Bill of Rights that provide them the right of freedom of the press also provides an individual the right of being innocent until proven guilty.

The verdict in this case, Irvin innocent — media guilty.

WCA Program consolidates

By John W. Peeler
Special to The Bayonet©

The Army will centralize World Class Athlete Program operations at Fort Carson, Colo., this year.

Fort Benning Sports Director Jim Brown said the centralization affects three All-Army programs, boxing, tae kwon do, wrestling and the installations which support the sports.

"After the 1997 season, these three All-Army programs will relocate to Fort Carson, Colo.," Brown said. "Sometime in July or August, the wrestling team will move out of Sand Hill and head for Colorado."

Brown said the loss of the program at Fort Benning would have an impact on the rest of the community as well.

"The wrestlers support the Fort Benning and triCommunity youth and adult sports programs, as well as the Georgia State Games," Brown said.

Currently, a number of Army installations run parts of the program. There are 19 separate sports that include boxing, wrestling, tae kwon do, marksmanship, track and field, cycling, modern pentathlon, team handball, swimming, bobsled and biathlon.

Officials said consolidating the sports cuts operating costs and helps supervisors control training.

Army world-class athletes will also be able to use the U.S. Olympic Training Center and the U.S. Air Force World Class Athlete Program in Colorado Springs.

Not all disciplines will move. Army officials said soldiers in the Army biathlon program, currently training for the 1998 Winter Olympics in Nagano, Japan, will continue training with the U.S. National Team at Colchester, Vt.

The U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit will remain at Fort Benning. Soldiers in the modern pentathlon program will continue to train with the U.S. National Team at Fort Sam Houston, Texas.

Scouts get running start

The annual Girl Scout cookie sale gets off to a running start Jan. 25 at Weracoba Park (Lakebottom) at 9 a.m. with the 17th annual Barnett Bank Girl Scout Cookie Run.

"Girls plus sports equals a winning team" is this year's theme for the run that includes a sanctioned and certified five-kilometer race.

"We believe the new certified five-kilometer course will be much more appealing to the competitive runner," said Frieda Williams, director of the program and Cookie Run coordinator for the Concharty Council.

The race will begin and end in the Weracoba Park area, but will follow a course through the surrounding area.

In addition to the five-kilometer race, the event features a five-kilometer Wheelchair Race, a 1.5-mile Run for the Cookies, a 1.5-mile Handicapped Participation Race and a 100-yard Tot Trot for children age 4 and under.

The event is open to all ages with pre-registration costing $7 for children 17 and under and $10 for adults. Registration on race day costs $9 for children 17 and under and $12 for adults. To ensure a Cookie Run t-shirt in the appropriate size, registration should be accomplished prior to race day.

Runners can pre-register for the event can be accomplished at all Barnett Banks until noon Jan. 24 or at the Girl Scout Office at 1344 13th Ave. until 5 p.m. Jan. 24.

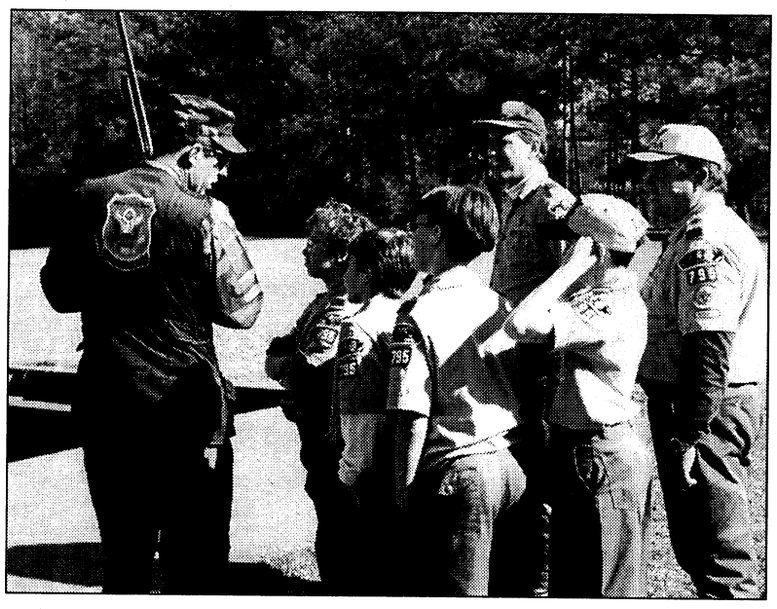
Shooters welcome Boy Scouts to clinic on Fort Benning

By Anna O'Leska
USAMU Public Affairs Office



Georgia Boy Scout Troop 795 from Marietta, Ga., spent a day on Hook Range learning shotgun techniques from the experts.

Twenty Scouts, ages 12 to 14, and their seven adult leaders pitched tents upon arrival at Uchee Creek Campground early Dec. 14. The Scouts stayed the weekend to learn safety and participate in educational activities at the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit.

Scoutmaster Don Blackwood said the Scouts made the trip to take shotgun classes for two reasons — safety and education.

Two specific badges the scouts earn, a shotgun merit badge and a rifle merit badge, involve learning gun safety, breaking the gun down and cleaning it. The troop is currently working on their shotgun merit badge and USAMU shooters spent a day teaching them how to handle guns safely.

Blackwood said that the experience at Fort Benning was a different kind of experience they could not get anywhere else. The scoutmasters provided instruction on breaking the gun down and cleaning it.

Anna O'Leska

Boy Scouts receive instruction from U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit shotgun shooter Richard Haynie during the shooting clinic at Hook Range.

The scouts watched a shotgun demonstration performed by USAMU Olympic athletes Bret E. Erickson and James T. Graves.

"I think the soldiers are great ... some of the greatest shooters in the world," said senior patrol leader Jim Godfrey, 14. "I'd like to become one of them. I'm enjoying it. This is the trip of a lifetime for me."

Blackwood said members of Boy Scout Troop 795 are very pleased that the Hook Range facility is here and so close to home. He said it is good for Scouting and the Scouts are having a good time.

"Guns are a fact of life in this country," he said, "and the Scouts need to understand how to use them so they don't fear them. These classes teach the Scouts to respect weapons and that they are not toys. This kind of expert hands-on instruction is just invaluable to these boys," he said. "The instructors are well qualified to train the boys in safety in a way that is fun, too."

"Anyone in the military who can share their skills is valuable to us," said James Godfrey, committee chairman of the Mount Zion United Methodist Church in East Marietta, the sponsoring charter organization for Boy Scout Troop 795. "Our boys respect that because they are taught proper safety. It reinforces what we've taught them."

After the demo, the Scouts divided into several groups to practice shooting trap while supervised by the expert shooters from the USAMU.

Jim Ogilvie, 14, a Life Scout who personally likes shooting, said, "It's good to have a national group that's so good in the sport of shooting that I can learn from them and they can help us."

"I've never shot a shotgun before today," said John Vinyard, 14, another Life Scout. "I'm learning to load and shoot a shotgun — and a lot of safety rules."

Boy Scout Seaver Lippett, 12, said, "I've never done much shooting with a 12 gauge. It's fun and makes me more confident about shooting."

Erickson said the marksmen try to familiarize youth groups with gun sports and safety as much as possible because it is a way of giving back something to the community. He said it helps to serve the community and it preserves the sport as well.

"I like to see youngsters shooting shotgun because if we don't show them how to shoot now, when they get older, none will know how to do it," he said. "I'd hate to see this sport die."

While teaching the Scouts how to shoot trap, Theresa E. DeWitt, 1996 Olympian and Armed Forces Female Athlete of the Year, said, "It's important to teach firearm safety to young people to make them responsible hunters and shooters when they grow up."

After the shotgun classes on Hook Range, the Scouts toured the National Infantry Museum.

Regulation changes proposed for bass on Lake Blackshear

Wildlife Resources Division

ALBANY — Fisheries biologists with the Department of Natural Resources, Wildlife Resource Division, feel that an increase in the minimum size limit for largemouth bass from the present regulation of 12-inches is needed to protect the abundant population of small largemouth bass in Lake Blackshear. To protect Lake Blackshear's striped bass, biologists also proposed a regulation restricting fishing in three coolwater fish refuges.

After the dam at Lake Blackshear became breached by the flood in 1994, the lake got drawn-down for dam repairs. According to Regional Fisheries supervisor Russ Ober, this draw down created a rapid expansion of the largemouth bass population.

At present, the largemouth bass population remains dominated by 10 to 13-inch fish spawned during 1995. If the proposed regulation is not implemented, biologists feel this young bass population could easily get over-harvested, resulting in lower catch rates in the future.

"Our surveys from the past summer indicate a strong, fast-growing largemouth bass population that needs to be protected," said Ober. "If this regulation is implemented, bass fishing on Blackshear over the next 2 to 3 years should be the best it's ever been."

The lake drawdown also allowed biologists to build enclosures around three springs in an effort to enhance the coolwater habitat for striped bass. These enclosures remain part of project aimed at restoring these fish to parts of their former range.

According to Ober, striped bass got stocked in Lake Blackshear in 1995 and 1996, and some of these fish began to use these coolwater refuges from May 1 through Oct. 31 each year.

"Adult striped bass need a coolwater habitat to survive, and they can be extremely vulnerable to angling while concentrated in these areas," said Ober. "We hope to eventually create a quality fishery for striped bass in the lake, and possibly even reestablish a natural spawning run up the Flint River."

Wildlife Resources Division officials seek comments from anglers regarding these proposed regulation changes. Contact the Albany Fisheries Office at (912) 430-4256 with comments.

Jesus is the reason for the season!

ALL RIGHT ALREADY, so a U.S. Savings Bond isn't the most exciting thing in the world. GOOD FOR YOU! After all, this is your hard-earned money we're talking about. Do you really want your investments to be thrilling? Breathtaking? NO WAY. Wouldn't you rather have an investment that's guaranteed to grow, one that's backed by the full faith and credit of the United States government?

Sure you would. U.S. Savings Bonds.

In my family, learning is everything.

Books don't just enlighten. They empower. Our children are growing up knowing this. A good education is one of the most important things we can give them. And we will, with the help of U.S. Savings Bonds.

Through the Payroll Savings Plan, we put aside something with every payday. And little by little, it will add up to college for our children.

U.S. Savings Bonds helped my parents put me through college. And next year, it's Michelle's turn. Sure, Savings Bonds have been important to our past, but they'll be even more important to our future. That's what makes our investment so valuable.

Ask your employer or banker about saving with U.S. Savings Bonds. For all the right reasons.

Post remembers MLK

By Dov Schwartz
USAIC Public Affairs Office

More than 1,000 people from the tricommunity attended a commemorative celebration honoring Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. in Infantry Hall's Marshall Auditorium Jan. 15

The ceremony featured the Don C. Faith Middle School Chorus and Band and inspirational music selections by Faye Lewis-Strong, Faith Middle School music teacher and Sandra Johnson-Wansley.

King, the founder of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference who spearheaded the movement for racial equality, was gunned down in Memphis, Tenn., April 4, 1968. King's birthday is a federal holiday celebrated annually on the third Monday of January.

In a keynote speech, Claiborne D. Haughton Jr., the principal director, Office of the Deputy Assistant Secretary of Defense for Equal Opportunity, urged the crowd to rededicate itself to the tenants of freedom, justice, peace and equality.

While acknowledging the progress made by African Americans, Haughton told the audience that the struggle was not yet over.

Paraphrasing the poet Robert Frost, Haughton said, "We still have promises to keep and miles to go before we sleep in the struggle to achieve full equality of opportunity for African Americans and all Americans."

Haughton recalled that King's famous "I Have a Dream" Speech began with a financial metaphor.

"We have come to our nation's capital to cash a check." African Americans, according to Haughton, have an unemployment rate double the national average and earn only 70 cents for every dollar whites make.

Urging society to give minorities a fair chance, he encouraged people of color to always perform in a spirit of excellence.

> "It is better to be prepared and not have an opportunity than to have an opportunity and not be prepared."
> — Claiborne D. Haughton Jr.
> Office of the Deputy Assistant Secretary of Defense for Equal Opportunity

Minorities, according to Haughton must prepare themselves to compete in the global economy because future workers will need more analytical and quantitative skills, he said.

"It is better to be prepared and not have an opportunity than to have an opportunity and not be prepared," Haughton said.

Citing his own experience, Haughton urged the audience not to be discouraged.

After graduating from Dillard University Haughton applied for more than 100 positions and took numerous tests until finally landing a job as a general schedule-5 trainee at the Defense Logistics Agency. Only 12 years later, he achieved the senior level GS-16 designation.

In presenting an Iron Mike statue to Haughton, Commanding General Maj. Gen. Carl F. Ernst challenged all Americans to think about the meaning of the King holiday.

"King was a leader for all Americans to emulate," Ernst said.

Soldiers participate in MLK pride month

By Dov Schwartz
USAIC Public Affairs Office

More than 35 Soldiers and family members participated in the Martin Luther King Pride Month Clean-up drive Saturday.

The program was sponsored by the Combined Communities of Southeast Columbus and was part of the tricommunity anti-litter community-beautification program.

Members of the Fort Benning community picked up trash along several main streets in the Southeast Columbus area.

According to Cpl. Jerry Smith of the 75th Ranger Regiment, the clean-up effort showed how people from different backgrounds could come together "to do their fair share to help the community."

In spite of the blustery weather, the large turnout was a demonstration of "outstanding Army support of a great man like Dr. King," Smith said.

Residents of the community appeared stunned as Smith and fellow rangers Pfc. Alex Argota and Pfc. Brandon Stalding walked through the Southeast Columbus community picking up bottles, cans and other debris.

The Army encourages participation in community activities by awarding the Military Outstanding Volunteer Service Medal to Soldiers who excel in volunteerism.

The Better Opportunities for Single Soldier program coordinates many of Fort Benning's community involvement programs.

According to Sgt. First Class Valerie F. Boggs of the Garrison Commanders office, BOSS' involvement enables Soldiers to give something back to the community.

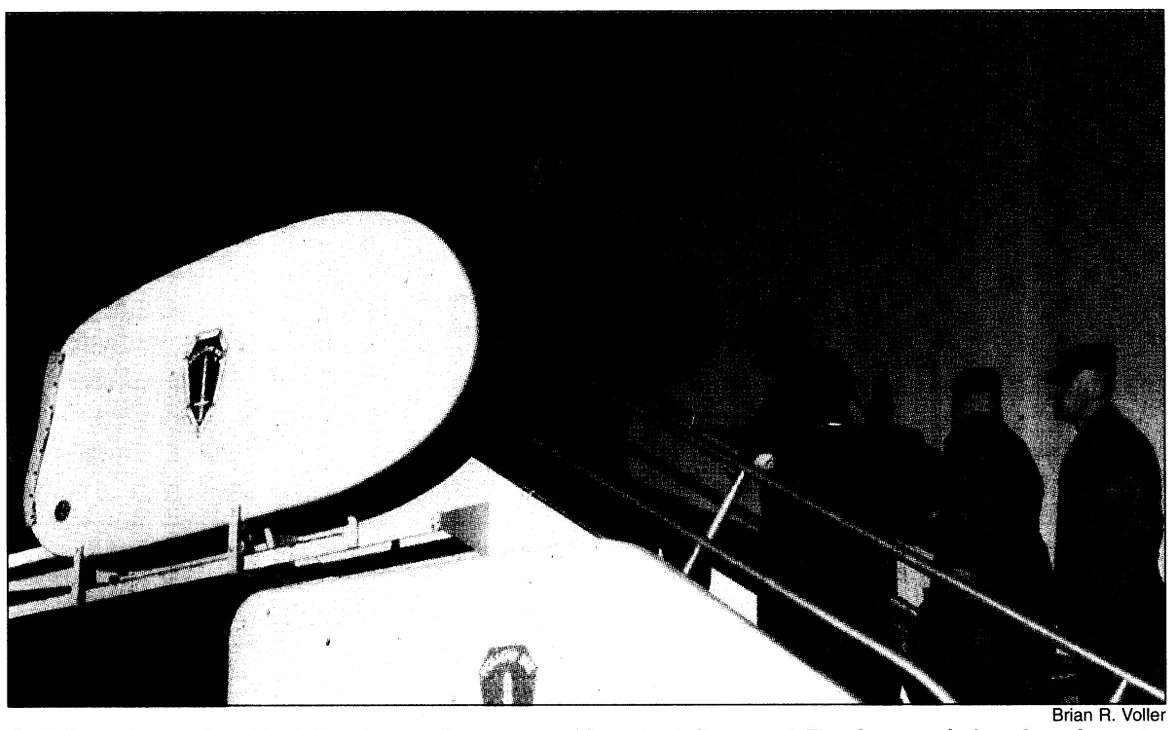
63rd Engineer Co deploys to Fort Bliss for training exercise



By Brian R. Voller
Bayonet staff writer

One hundred and forty-seven Soldiers from the 63rd Engineer Company (Combat Support Equipment), 36th Engineer Group (Combat), loaded two airplanes at Lawson Army Airfield Saturday and headed to Fort Bliss, Texas, for a 60-day deployment as part of Operation Rio Bravo.

Capt. Melody Smith, company commander, said the 63rd is deploying to improve some of the training roads on Fort Bliss before the National Guard conducts its training exercise called Roving Sands.

"Our mission is to deploy to Fort Bliss for a total of 60 days," Smith said. "We are going to construct eight kilometers of standard, one-lane-traffic road and upgrade two kilometers of road to aid the safe movement of vehicles for the Roving Sands exercise."

First Sgt. Randy Dyson said the company volunteered for the mission because it allowed the company to experience a training environment they don't normally get to experience.

Soldiers from the 63rd Engineer Company (Combat Support Equipment), load a plane to Fort Bliss, Texas, to take part in a training exercise.

"We volunteered because it was the first opportunity for us to perform our mission as a company since we deployed to Somalia," Dyson said. "This will give us an opportunity to improve our skill, and it gets rid of some of the training distractions that occur on Fort Benning.

"At Fort Bliss, the Soldiers will be able to improve their operators' skills, and it gives the (noncommissioned officers) a chance to run a larger-scale mission."

In addition to what Dyson said, Smith added that the mission will be a morale boost for the Soldiers.

"It's always hard to deploy for a long period of time," Smith said. "But this training will definitely boost our morale because it will give the Soldiers a chance to use their skills and get some real value out of the training we do. It also allows the Soldiers to be able to look at a finished product and say, 'This is something the 63rd did.'"

The 63rd will be working with mostly Reserve and National Guard Soldiers when they arrive at Fort Bliss. Smith said this also gives them an interesting opportunity because of the nature of their specialty.

"We will probably be the only active-duty unit working out there," Smith said. "About 60 percent of the units that make up our career field are in reserve units. Rio Bravo will give us a chance to train with some of the units that we would more than likely be deployed with."

The 63rd will be at Fort Bliss through the end of February and should return to Fort Benning March 5.

What can be done to improve pet control on Fort Benning?

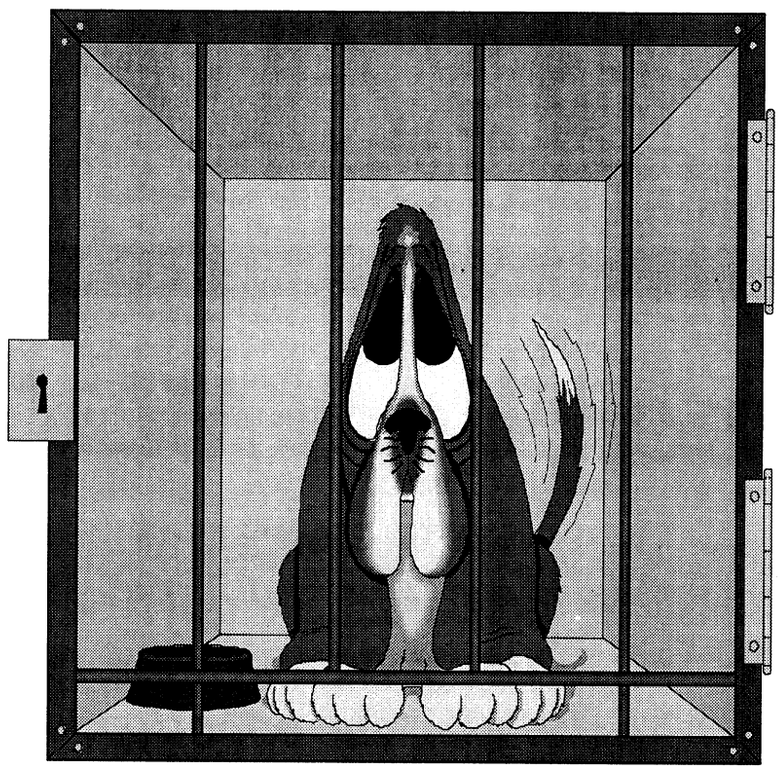
Maj. Herb Watson, Fort Monomouth, New Jersey — "The only thing that's necessary is responsible ownership of pets."

Spc. Steve Ballew, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 1st Battalion, 30th Infantry Regiment — "I think there should be fines for problem owners and their dogs."

Sgt. 1st Class William Dabney, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment — "The animals need to be kept on a leash or in a fenced in area to control them better."

Kathy Thielemann, family member — "I think they should provide the families with free spaying or neutering."

Elone Grace, Department of Public Works— "All pets should be spayed or neutered."



Spc. Tara Sweda, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 203rd Forward Support Battalion — "Pet owners should have to take their pets to be spayed or neutered."

PET CONTROL

Owners need to follow regs

By April N. Olsen
USAIC Public Affairs Office

They're furry, they're lovable and to many of us they're members of the family. But, just like human members of the family, they can get on our neighbors' nerves.

Don't get me wrong, I love animals. But there comes a point when we humans must take responsibility for our pets or not have them at all.

commentary

One benefit of living on post is that there are rules and regulations on having pets. Some of these were outlined on the front page of last week's Bayonet. However, some people don't bother to read the regs, let alone adhere to them.

I understand that pets can be like children. They don't always behave, they can make a mess and they can drive you nuts. This emphasizes the importance of taking responsibility for their actions.

For instance, I have two cats. I take very good care of them; you could say they are spoiled and pampered. I keep them inside for their own safety and so they will not cause a nuisance to my neighbors. Unfortunately, not everyone takes this point of view.

For two years I have lived on post and have lost count of the times I've found piles of dog waste in my yard. I don't have a dog. One of my upstairs neighbors has little dogs and he always takes them for a walk. He doesn't just turn them loose outside to do their business. So why do I have big piles in my yard?

I don't even walk through my yard at night, I walk around to the sidewalk — too dangerous.

April N. Olsen says that pet owners need to follow pet control regulations.

I've also lost count of the times my husband or I had to pick up our trash that has been rifled through by somebody's dog. Putting a lid on the can doesn't matter. The lids disappeared long ago.

I find it irresponsible that people disregard the established regulations on keeping pets. It might be easier for those owners to let the animals roam around free to do their business and exercise. But for some of us, it's a pain in the behind.

I'd like to see the dog's owner picking up piles from my yard or picking up my trash their pet scattered all over the field behind my garage. I wonder if they would be so quick to let Rover run wild then.

Of course, there are others who don't let their dogs run wild. In fact, they don't let them run at all. They keep them caged up or chained to a post. These people bother me even more than the owners who disregard regulations. These owners disregard their pets.

Why is it that some people want to have a dog just to have a dog. They never walk it, pet it or play with it. They just have it.

Negligent owners should not be pet owners. Like children, if they're not going to love and protect one, they shouldn't have one.

It's cruel to keep a dog in a tiny fenced in area all the time, and it's cruel to leave an animal out in the weather unprotected.

There are two little poodles on the corner of my street. Those poor little things are left outside all year long, no matter what the weather. In two years I have never seen the owners pet the dogs, play with them or even talk to them except once about a year and a half ago.

It was an icy evening and I went out back to get something from the car. The rain had been falling steadily for hours and the temperature had dropped. I heard a yelping down the street. It went on for quite some time and drew my attention.

I walked down there and as I approached the yard, a little girl came out of the house. She scolded the poor little dogs for making noise. The adults in the house wouldn't even get wet to scold the pets themselves, they sent the kid out to do it.

I'd make noise too if I were freezing. At that time, the dogs didn't have shelters unless you count the tree one of them was tied to. Had they been untied, they would be smart enough to find shelter.

When I asked about the dogs and walked over to pet them, the little girl offered them to me. When I said they needed shelter from the rain, she said they couldn't go inside because they made a mess.

I said a few more things and I know some may consider it out of line. But I was furious to see such little concern for living creatures.

Soon after, I noticed the addition of two small shelters for the dogs. Not sufficient for cold weather since they have air holes in the sides, but better than nothing.

My point to the story is that it is important for all of us who have pets to realize the importance of being responsible for them. That responsibility ranges from making sure they do not cause a nuisance to providing food and shelter.

545 boss

Dial 545-BOSS is the commander's action line for soldiers, family members and civilians to call when they have problems or complaints that can't be resolved elsewhere.

While it is not a substitute for the chain of command or for agencies established to provide assistance, the line offers another means of communication between Fort Benning's community and commanders.

The Bayonet features some of the calls that may benefit other members of the Fort Benning community.

Call: The caller said that at all other posts he has been assigned to, children under a certain age are supposed to be accompanied by an adult on the way to and from school. But, he said, on this post, he has observed little children his daughter's age walking home from school without adult supervision. He said this is unsafe and someone needs to address this problem.

DPS response:

There is no minimum age established at Fort Benning (policy) or Georgia law for children to walk to and from school unattended; however, it is prudent of parents to be concerned with the safety and well-being of their children.

The Department of Defense Schools Administration said school board policy states that elementary school children living less than one mile from the school are to walk to school (with the exception of certain streets on Main Post, from which children are bused for safety reasons). Middle school children living within 1.5 miles from the school are to walk to school (with the exception of middle school children in Lavoie housing area, which is approximately 1.5 miles from Faith Middle School). These children are bused for safety reasons.

The Georgia State Law requires that all children (regardless of age) living within 1.5 miles of the school will walk to school.

On post there are rules regarding children being left alone in quarters. USAIC Policy Memo 96-4 (Jan. 25, 1996) provides additional guidance for supervision of children involved in Youth Services activities.

Rendering courtesies should be a way of life

Fort Campbell Courier

There are a lot of things that go into making someone a successful Soldier — military bearing, being tactically and technically proficient and knowing military customs and courtesies.

For instance, when a senior officer enters your place of work, do you call your fellow Soldiers to attention? When you see a military vehicle with a general officer's license plate, do you salute the vehicle? Or do you walk to the other side of the street to avoid saluting?

commentary

These are just some of the recent violations. But, more than the violations themselves lies the root question — do you want to be a Soldier?

Being a Soldier is a 24-hour-a-day, seven-day-a-week, 365-day-a-year job. Often times it is thankless.

But it is the life many of us have chosen and in all frankness— customs and courtesies are a part of the job.

Saluting our superior officers is not only an example of good military bearing but is also a way to acknowledge a common bond, the Soldiers' bond. Rendering proper customs and courtesies should be something we do willingly and with great pride. It honors both the person the courtesies are rendered to and the person rendering the courtesy.

Being a Soldier is a very honorable profession, one that all of us wearing the uniform of our country should take great pride in.

Taking the time and making the effort to render the proper courtesies is the right thing to do. That's why we should, as the ad says, "Just do it."

RCP to change for spcs, cpls and sgts

The Department of the Army has increased the number of years that promotable specialists, corporals and sergeants may stay on active duty. These changes in length of service retention control points are the results of the Army's continuing reshaping process.

Presently, the RCP for specialists and corporals is eight years and 29 days, and for sergeants, 13 years and 29 days. Effective April 1, two years are added to the RCP.

As an exception to policy, Soldiers in the above-mentioned categories who are ineligible to reenlist as a result of the current RCP may reenlist or extend their enlistment for a period that does not go beyond the new RCP.

These changes will affect some Soldier qualifications for involuntary separation pay as a result of the RCP. For more details, contact your unit career counselor.

Guardsmen return from supporting Joint Endeavor

By April N. Olsen
USAIC Public Affairs Office

Forty Soldiers from the Alabama and North Carolina National Guard returned to Fort Benning last week from an active-duty tour in support of Operation Joint Endeavor in the Balkans.

Soldiers from Detachment 2, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 31st Separate Armored Brigade, in Alabama and the 449th Aviation Detachment in North Carolina spent three days here outprocessing.

Thirty-three Soldiers of the 31st SAB did the jobs left open by Germany-based Soldiers deploying to Bosnia while others filled slots at the staging area at Taszar, Hungary. Detachment 2 was formed from volunteers throughout the National Guard.

Those Soldiers from units in Kansas, Vermont, Iowa, Oklahoma and Mississippi had to be temporarily reassigned to the Alabama Guard to deploy as part of the 31st, Capt. Rod MacBride said.

MacBride deployed as part of the detachment in May and was assigned to 5th Corps. He worked for the assistant chief of staff, Operations and Plans, in Taszar.

"The mission could not have happened without fillers," MacBride said.

Although many National Guard Soldiers who deployed didn't work in their assigned military occupational specialty, most of them seemed happy to be supporting the mission, Capt. Daniel McCarthy said.

"All in all, I would say they were glad they did deploy," he said.

As a military intelligence officer, McCarthy was assigned to 5th Corps assistant chief of staff, Intelligence, doing force protection work at Taszar.

McCarthy will return to the Kansas National Guard but said he is proud of his time with the 31st SAB.

"It gave me an opportunity to do something for my country," McCarthy said.

McCarthy said he will take several lessons back to his unit, but teamwork is the most important.

"When you do things with teamwork ... any mission you do is a thousand times easier," he said.

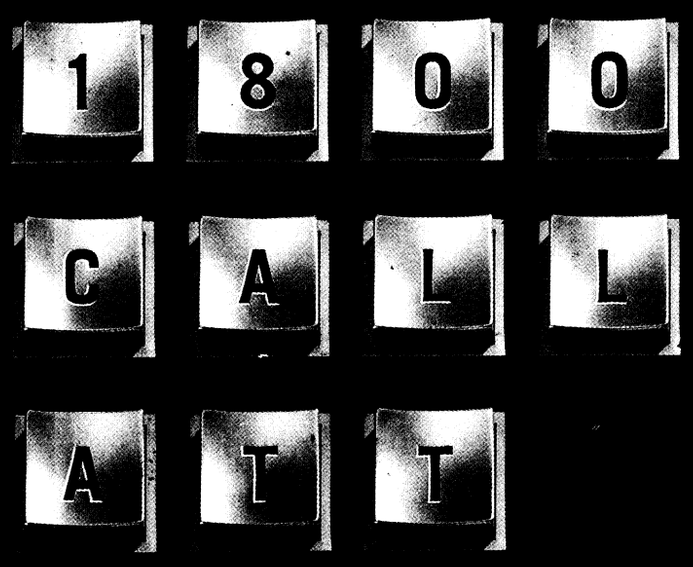
The deployment was also a learning experience for many of the National Guard Soldiers who filled slots in Germany.

"I learned a lot," said 1st Lt. Cinnie Mullins.

Mullins, a quartermaster officer, worked for the assistant chief of staff, Logistics, in Heidelberg, Germany.

When asked what lessons she would take back to her unit, Mullins said, "Write everything down, double check, pay attention to detail."

During the first day of outprocessing, Maj. Gen. Clyde Hennies, the adjutant general of the Alabama National Guard, welcomed the group back and expressed pride in a job well done.



"We're very proud of you," Hennies said.

Hennies told the group of volunteers that the experience they gained while deployed overseas is valuable and would prove useful in the future because more active-duty tours in support of operations other than war are possible.

"I anticipate more of these to come up," he said.

IOBC TRAINING

Students test skills during military stakes

By Lee Barnard
Infantry Officer Basic Course

Students from Company B (Bushmasters), 2nd Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment, Infantry Officer Basic Course, Class 1-97 tested their basic Infantry skills during military stakes training at Sandy Patch under the direction of the Tactical Leadership Branch Jan. 9 and 10. The event provided students with the opportunity to demonstrate proficiency in a variety of basic Infantry skills.

Students spent Jan. 9 conducting train-up in which they rotated around nine stations and received blocks of instruction on 10 individual-level tasks.

Cadre at each station provided students with information on each task, described performance measures and answered questions. The tasks included the following: visual signals; maintain and perform a function check on both an M-249 SAW and M-60 machine gun; load, correct a malfunction and unload an M-249 SAW, M-60 machine gun and M-16A2 rifle; install and recover an M-18A1 Claymore mine; prepare and fire an AT4; install and recover an M-21 anti-tank mine; and prepare a range card for an M-60 machine gun.

Students arrived at the site Jan. 10 after completing a six-mile road march and conducted the evaluated portion of training. As students rotated through each station, TLB noncommissioned officers monitored the testing and assigned either "pass" or "fail" grades based the individual's performance of each task.

Sgt. 1st Class Neal Hensen, the event primary instructor, said that the primary purpose for the event is to supplement previous IOBC training by improving the students' individual-skills competence.

"This training will help the lieutenants down the road by introducing them to the types of tasks necessary for earning the Expert Infantryman Badges," he said.

"It's important that lieutenants know both the standards and the sequence for these tasks — during EIB testing, it's the little stuff that gets you," said Staff Sgt. Eliodoro Perez, evaluator for station six (AT4).

To receive a "pass" grade, students had to complete the tasks within a specified time by following an ordered sequence of steps. Failure to miss a step or going overtime resulted in a "fail" and retesting. By the end of the day, every lieutenant had successfully executed all tasks to standard.

Even though students would not earn the EIB from the event, they did earn grade points which directly impacted on their graduation.

"When your doing these tasks and you make a mistake, you can't get discouraged — you've got to keep focused," said 2nd Lt. Juan Cervantes.

"I also believe it's critical for me to know not only the leader's skills, but to also be proficient in those skills common to every Infantry Soldier — it's part of being a good platoon leader, he said."

For students who had never experienced this type of training before, the event proved especially practical, according to 2nd Lt. Erik Benda.

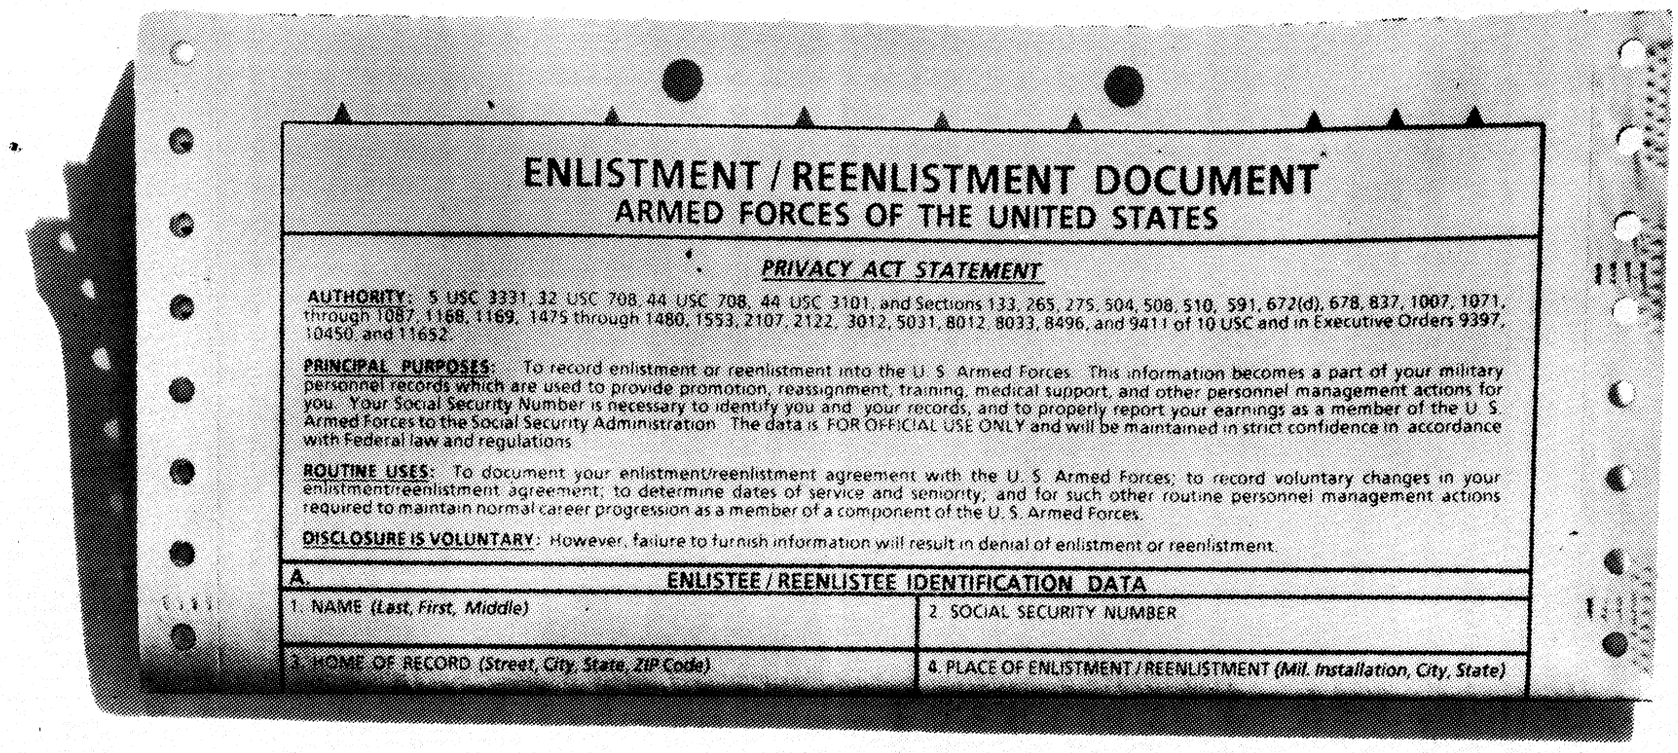
"This was the first time I've ever used an AT4 and now I feel more confident in myself with this weapon system," Benda said.

For prior-enlisted lieutenants, such as 2nd Lt. Matthew Davis, the event revealed important lessons a. well.

"To sustain proficiency, even on tasks you've done thousands of times, you must constantly train and improve," Davis said.

Bushmaster students now enter into a new phase of instruction and will be expected to have mastered these tasks as they begin platoon operations.

After graduation, these same lieutenants will be leading their future platoons.



Class 1-97 graduates March 7.

Army Career and Alumni Program

Ever think about seeing the country from behind the wheel of a big rig?

Then you will want to talk to the trucking companies' representatives Jan. 31 in Infantry Hall, Classroom 22, between 9 a.m. and noon. A total of 18 trucking companies and truck driver training programs will be represented at this Army Career and Alumni Program Trucking Industry Employer Day.

According to Chick Eagle, Job Assistance Center counselor, you don't have to be an 88M (truck driver) to enter the trucking industry but you do need a clean driving record without any citations for driving under the influence in the past five to 10 years, depending on individual companies' policies.

"If you have your commercial driver's license and all you need is experience," Eagle said, "there are many companies willing to pay you while you gain experience. If you do not have a CDL, there are some companies willing to pay your way through a training program and then hire you."

According to Eagle, the trucking industry is very competitive and always in need of good drivers, the pay and benefits packages are very attractive for separating service members looking for a good second career.

If you are interested in driving or maintaining those 18-wheelers, attend Trucking Day. Some companies are bringing trucks to offer an even better idea of what life on the open road would be like.

Tips for job seekers

•Be prepared — Know your accomplishments, experiences and qualifications so well that you can tell a potential employer why you would be good for the company. You should also know about the company you are interested in so you can better relate your background to the job you are seeking.

•Be positive — Put yourself in a positive frame of mind about yourself, your experiences and qualifications, and show enthusiasm about the company you are seeking employment with. The job seeker who is positive and enthusiastic about himself or herself is much more likely to be successful in the job search than a negative one.

•Be persistent — As good as you are, it will still take time and effort to get that job. Don't give up on a good prospect just because the point of contact didn't call you back. Make a call to him or her and ask what you need to do next. Keep trying to get that face-to-face meeting where you can sell your skills, ability, experience and value to the employer.

Service rifle marksman Grant L. Singley is the Army Marksmanship Unit Association's 1996 Shooter of the Year.

AMUA President Bill Blankenship presented the award, a Colt .22 semi-automatic pistol, Jan. 11 at the AMUA Elections Meeting at Pool Indoor Range.

Singley started shooting competitively in 1979 and was assigned to the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit in 1989. A native of Henry, Ill., he has distinguished himself in competitive marksmanship through his numerous accomplishments.

Among them, Singley is the 1996 National Service Rifle Champion and the 1996 Interservice Individual Rifle Champion. He is a two-time Mini-Interservice Match Champion and a two-time President's Hundred Rifle Trophy Winner. He won the Reynold's Trophy, the Forces Command Trophy and is a two-time All- Army Champion.

"I was surprised to win," Singley said. "To be recognized for my efforts is a great feeling. I want to thank the AMUA. It's an honor, especially since it's an Olympic year."

Singley believes he won the award because of the way he won the matches this year.

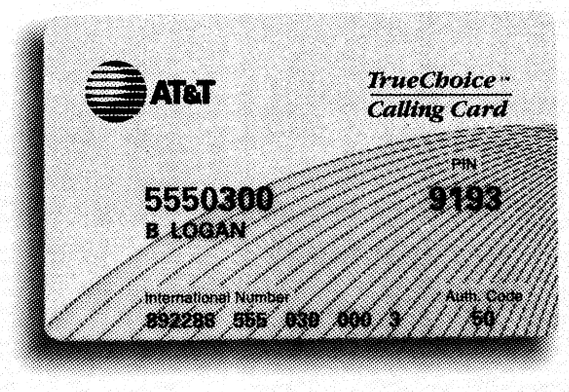
"I won the National and Interservice championships, the President's Hundred Match, the McCann Rapid Fire Trophy and the Reynolds Trophy within a month's time," he said. "I was on top and winning all the time and that's hard to do.

"I had a good year from the start and a good rifle."

This is the third consecutive year that the AMUA has presented an award to the top shooter of the year.

The individual is first nominated in his or her individual section. Then a selection is made by a panel of former champion experts based on the shooter' s accomplishments.

"The award selection is based on the shooter who had the most outstanding performance during the previous year," Blankenship said.



"Singley qualified with the highest score, and so he was the winner," David I. Boyd, chief of competition, said.

Listening to children aids parenting

By Lois Rosenberg Kugler
Radford University

It's 5:04 p.m. Football practice is in 26 minutes and your 8-year-old left his uniform at home. He can't remember where he put the left thigh pad. You're weaving your way out of the parking lot with the pile of work left on your desk still weighing on your mind.

Your youngest has just fallen asleep in the car seat so you're wondering how you'll grocery shop with him sleeping. Your daughter is hungry now. All three children are shouting at once and you scream back, "Yes, I am ... I am listening to you." "But you haven't heard a word that they've said. "But Mom, you aren't listening? That's not what I said."

Perhaps the toughest part of parenting is listening. Even when parents try their best to listen, they may have great difficulty hearing what their children really mean to say. Parenting manuals offer remarkably little information about how to interpret children. Jean Piaget was a famous psychologist who pioneered the study of children's cognitive developmental stages, in part by listening to their language. He emphasized how young children, ages 2 to 5, interpret the world magically and concretely. So our metaphoric or tongue-in-cheek phrases may be interpreted literally by them. When we say, "I'm falling apart at the seams," they check our clothing; or with "I'm really steamed about this," they look for smoke.

In turn, we may misinterpret their phrases in an abstract direction. When one says, "That kid licked me in football. I was so mad," they may mean the child stuck out his tongue. I remember one child remaining confused for years about how someone actually ever did "cut the mustard."

Piaget also illuminated how prior to age 7, children cannot take the perspective of others. Thus, they begin a story in the middle, assuming you already know the beginning. They use words like "him," "her," "they" and "it," assuming you know what or to whom they are referring.

Deciphering their stories takes the effort of a detective and direct questioning. Asking "Who's he?" rarely helps. It's usually best to ask multiple choice instead of open-ended questions: "Are you talking about the new boy at school?" instead of "Who's he?"

If your child's story sounds too outlandish, think back over all the recent television shows or commercials he or she has seen. Kids often talk about fantasy or stories as if they are real events. By 5 or 6, most kids know these stories are not real. For the preschooler, it helps to reiterate that some stories are pretend. If they insist on repeating "It's just pretend" every 60 seconds, they are giving you a message beyond "I want to drive you crazy." Saying clearly what is real and what is pretend helps children sort things out and allays anxieties.

You might also want to change the channel or hold a moratorium on Power Rangers or whatever is scaring your child. Offer a less threatening, fun, alternative show or story.

Children can become obsessed with words, material possessions, the order in which you do things or rules. When your child seems to be repeating him or herself over and over and cannot get off a topic, he or she may be doing so for a reason.

•You may not be listening.

•You may be listening but misinterpreting.

•You may be hearing but not responding, and your child does not yet have the words to convey exactly what he or she wants you to do.

•You may be hearing but not responding because you are too busy

•Your child feels comforted by talking about this topic.

Insistence on a ritual act, schedule or communication is very normal and often quite comforting for a child. Ritual phrases, as well as behaviors, can, for example, aid separation. One 2-year-old could only separate by saying, "Big hug, big kiss; little hug, little kiss" while he hugged and kissed mom good-bye.

Finally, a topic of conversation that becomes an obsession for a child may have a metaphorical meaning which has been missed. If your child focuses solely on a dreamed-of outing or toy that you have told him is unreasonable, this may convey he or she is feeling needy in some other way. The toy may represent unconditional positive reward and unlimited affection for a child suffering from feeling replaced by a sibling or by mom's new job.

Children also can talk nonstop about a special sport activity or hobby, even if they aren't very good at it or have never attempted it. The activity, especially if it is dangerous or thrilling, may be a symbol of the daring, confidence and independence your child is longing to possess. One boy who had many phobias, especially of heights, talked nonstop about the scariest, highest roller coasters in the world. On the one hand, he may have been expressing how he felt about many everyday and unpredictable things, that it feels like being "at the top of the roller coaster." On the other, he felt he could conquer his fears by possessing such knowledge and vocabulary about the very things he feared.

Listening to him meant hearing his unspoken fears and ambitions. Responding to what we hear on many levels would first involve sharing his excitement and being genuinely interested in the mechanical aspects of amusement parks, and second, involve also acknowledging it's okay to stay on the ground and watch the awesome roller coasters. One can still be a brave person without riding the dips and thrills of the Conga.

Sensitizing ourselves to our children's personal metaphors and symbols is no easy task. One way to put ourselves into their small shoes is to reflect back on the special things, story characters or topics that held fascination for us when we were children. Why were we so focused on astronauts, building travel homes for dolls or reading Sears catalogs? We can also begin to count silently in our head to 10 before we respond to our children or change the topic because we don't know how to respond to them.

Thinking about the many levels of meaning inherent in our children's words can help them feel heard. Asking them if they mean what you think they mean, and rewording what they have just said to check that you do understand them will also help. Sometimes just giving them long stretches of time to talk while you do nothing else but look at them with interest is all it takes for a child to feel heard.

Treatments currently available for bed-wetting

Derus Media Service, Inc.

If your child is one of the five to seven million American youngsters who suffers from chronic bed-wetting, be sure to discuss the fact with your physician.

While effective treatments for bed-wetting are available, experts say that as few as 28 percent of children suffering from primary nocturnal enuresis, or nighttime bed-wetting, get the help they so need.

Although 15 percent of bed-wetters spontaneously outgrow PNE each year, 85 percent continue to suffer from the condition, some even into adulthood. For chronic bed-wetters, nighttime does not bring peace and quiet, but instead, feelings of anxiety, guilt and embarrassment. Afraid of being "found out," these children frequently miss the sleepovers and holiday weekend visits to relatives common to most children's growing up. Self-esteem can suffer and some children may even exhibit behavioral problems at home and at school.

"Parents must understand that bed-wetting is not always a behavioral problem, nor an act of defiance," said Anselmo Cepero Akselrad, a pediatric nephrologist at Miami Children's Hospital's Center for Enuresis and Urinary Disorders. "In the vast majority of cases, bed-wetting in children over age 6 cannot be traced to an underlying physical disorder. However, in a very small number of cases, bed-wetting can be linked to a physical cause such as a urinary tract infection or obstruction, or a small or immature bladder."

Physicians distinguish between two kinds of bed-wetting. Primary nocturnal enuresis is the diagnosis when a child has not been dry for any extended period of time. A child is deemed to have secondary enuresis when he or she has had a continuous period of dryness and then reverts to bed-wetting. Secondary enuresis often occurs with emotional distress or a medical illness.

Researchers have found that genetics plays a critical role in whether or not a child will become a chronic bed-wetter. If both parents were bed-wetters, the child has a 68 percent chance of also becoming a bed-wetter; if only one parent was a bed-wetter, the child has a 44 percent chance. An insufficient nighttime increase in the antidiuretic hormone — the hormone responsible for reducing urine production — has also been cited as a possible cause of PNE.

Effective treatments for bed-wetting are available. Treatment begins with a thorough physical exam, urinalysis and urine culture. The physician will then decide how the child should be treated and provide the parents and child with information and counseling. Treatments for PNE may include behavioral modification, bladder stretching exercises and drug therapy.

Parents interested in obtaining more information on bed-wetting can call the National Kidney Foundation toll free at (800) 622-9010.

Family Advocacy Program offers enrichment workshop

Family Advocacy Program

The Family Advocacy Program, in conjunction with the Fort Benning Schools, is offering a workshop in family enrichment one evening a week in February and March. The workshop will take place at the Don C. Faith Middle School cafeteria 6:30 to 8:30 p.m for six Tuesday evenings in a row starting Feb. 11.

"Families are important to all of us," said Rebecca S. Welch, Family Advocacy Program manager. "That's where we learn how to live. I am pleased we can offer this workshop to our Soldier families."

Dell McMullen, superintendent of Fort Benning Schools, believes families face many challenges that early generations did not face.

"Today's culture is much more complex than in years past," McMullen said. "This complexity demands more of families than before." She said that this workshop can equip families to manage these demands well.

Welch's office provided the funding for training the workshop leaders, Chaplain (Lt. Col.) Bob Davidson and Chaplain (Maj.) Robert Thompson. These chaplains took part in a week of training.

"It's really fairly simple," said Davidson. "We discuss and demonstrate three essential family skills: how to speak, listen and cooperate. "

"The style of this workshop is very active," said Thompson. "It's much more than sitting in a chair watching a speaker and jotting a few notes. There's plenty of time for talking things over, for practicing skills and for enjoying a few laughs. "

The workshop is open to parents and their children ages 6 and above. Children below age 6 can receive childcare at Tot Town paid by Family Advocacy.

There is no required cost, but families are invited to make a $6 donation to the Consolidated Chaplains Fund. Families can sign up by filling out a form through the schools.

SOCIAL DRINKING

How much is too much?

In Georgia, drivers 18 and older are legally drunk when their blood-alcohol content (BAC) reaches 0.08.

The number of drinks it takes to become legally drunk in 2 hours: *

WEIGHT	NUMBER OF DRINKS
100	1.6
120	1.7
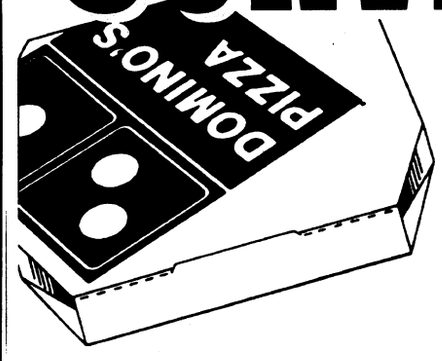
160	2.3
180	2.5
200	3.2

OTHER BLOOD-ALCOHOL LEVELS:

0.08 - Presumed drunk; additional evidence needed for prosecution



0.05 to 0.08 - No presumption; driver can be convicted in there is other evidence of intoxication.

Below 0.05 - Presumed sober.

Drivers 17 years of age or younger are legally drunk if their BAC reaches 0.06.

 A drink is 12 ounces of beer, 5 ounces of wine, or 1.5 ounces of liquor.
Rate of metabolism, sex, tolerance for alcohol, and amount of food in stomach can make BAC levels vary greatly among individuals.

ACAP Job Assistance News

January turns HOT for job seekers at Fort Benning

Soldiers separating from the Army in the near future will have some excellent opportunities in January to discuss potential employment with civilian business recruiters. Getting "up close and personal" with company representatives visiting Fort Benning is a golden opportunity to learn about specific companies, occupation categories, career paths and employment outlook. Additionally, soldiers will find that they have the chance to compare their skills and experience with those sought by employers. To afford you this opportunity your ACAP Job Assistance Center (JAC) organizes Employer Days and Recruiters visit on a regular basis. If you are nearing an ETS date, call the ACAP office at 545-2308 for information on 1997's events.

Tips For Job Seekers: When attending Employer Days, Job Fairs and Recruiters Visits at Fort Benning and elsewhere you should prepare yourself for a good first impression. At Fort Benning during duty hours wear you newest, cleanest and best fitting duty uniform, spit shined shoes/boots and be well groomed. At other locations or after duty hours wear appropriate civilian attire for the occupation you are considering. Be positive and polite in meeting and talking to employer reps. Introduce yourself and be prepared to ask question, such as, "How many employees do you hire annually?", or "What skills are you seeking in an employee?", or "Can you tell me about opportunities for future growth and advancement?", etc. Carry a notebook, folder or attache case and collect as much informational material and business cards as you can for reference and study.

Your purpose is to gather information and ideas about a civilian career path you might follow. If you are close to your ETS date you should have a resume with you and be prepared to leave a copy with employer representatives that are most promising. However, even if you don't have a resume you should attend and start to learn about the types of skills needed by each organization and for a specific occupation.

The job search is so much easier if you know where you want to go! For more information, call your happy ACAP JAC at 545-2308, or visit Bldg 2634 the next time you are in Soldiers' Plaza.

Directorate of Public Works

Some updates on current Fort Benning construction and some helpful tips from the Directorate of Public Works staff follow:

News from McDonald Manor

The McDonald Manor Family Housing area on Main Post is receiving a major face lift. This project includes the renovation of 83 homes and is nearing completion. The $5.1 million contract was awarded to H. Angelo and Company in September 1995. Its scope of work included enlarging bedrooms, adding laundry rooms, enlarging closets, remodeling kitchens with new appliances, constructing new bathrooms and installing new heating and air conditioning systems.

The contract was divided into three phases to facilitate movement of families with the least amount of inconvenience. The last units to be renovated should be available for occupancy by February.

We're receiving many positive comments from the families that now call these quarters home. Spc. Andrew Stevens, 598th Maintenance Company, said he "enjoys the updated kitchen and bathroom. Everything is so new and there are no maintenance problems." Families moving into these facilities will have a quality home away from home during their stay at Fort Benning.

Stop frozen water pipes

Frozen pipes aren't just an inconvenience. An average of a 250,000 families have their homes ruined and their lives disrupted each winter because of water pipes that freeze and burst.

By taking a few simple precautions, you can save yourself the mess, money and aggravation frozen pipes cause. Here are a few simple steps to prevent frozen pipes:

•Call in service orders to identify pipes that are not insulated.

Exposed pipes are most susceptible to freezing. Seal leaks that allow cold air inside near pipe locations. Look for air leaks around electrical wiring, dryer vents and pipes. Use caulk or insulation to keep the cold out and the heat in. With severe wind chill, a tiny opening can let in enough cold air to cause a pipe to freeze.

Disconnect garden hoses, insulate and, if practical, use an indoor valve to shut off and drain water from pipes leading to outside faucets.

A trickle of hot and cold water might be all it takes to keep your pipes from freezing. Let warm water drip overnight when outside temperatures are below 32 degrees, preferably from a faucet on an outside wall. Open cabinet doors to allow heat to get to pipes under sinks and appliances near exterior walls that are not insulated. If you're going away, set your thermostat to no lower than 55 degrees. Ask a friend or neighbor to check your quarters daily during periods when temperatures are below freezing.

•If your pipes freeze, don't take chances.

If you turn on your faucets and nothing comes out, leave the faucets turned on and call DPW at 545-2135. If you determine that your water pipes have frozen and burst, turn off the water if possible. Never try to thaw a pipe with a torch or open flame. Water damage is preferable to burning down your house.

Steam outage

There will be a steam, heating and hot water outage affecting the Kelley Hill area Saturday. The outage will result in no domestic hot water, heating and steam for the entire day. The outage is necessary to repair steam and condensate piping throughout Kelley Hill. For more information, call Mark Fincher at 545-4652.

ask the judge

By Rick Parker
Staff Judge Advocate

If you are an active duty service member assigned to Fort Benning, you have a choice — you can either register your vehicle in your state of permanent residence, or you can choose to register in the county in Georgia where you currently live.

If you choose to register in Georgia, under the Soldiers and Sailors Civil Relief Act, you are entitled to claim exemption from ad valorem taxation of your vehicle. Ad valorem taxes are taxes that a county or state imposes based on the value of personal property located in the state or county. The theory behind the SSCRA exemption is that because you had no choice in coming to your assignment, you ought not be required to pay this type of tax.

Please note that ad valorem taxes are different from sales taxes. You are never exempt from sales taxes. Also note that the vehicle must be at least partially in the name of the active duty service member in order for the exemption to apply.

In order to claim the exemption, you must provide proof to the taxing authority (in this case, the tag office), that you are entitled to it. This is done by completing an SSCRA affidavit and providing proof of your state of legal residence. You can obtain the SSCRA affidavit at the public counter of the Legal Assistance Division in Building 5 on Main Post. The affidavit must be notarized by one of the staff of the Legal Assistance Division, and you must bring a current leave and earnings statement with you in order to get the affidavit notarized. A current LES is one which is no more than 90 days old.

Once you have completed the affidavit, you then go to the tag office of the county where you live and finish the registration requirements for your vehicle. You should take with you the affidavit, your current title and registration of your vehicle, proof of insurance, your LES and the registration fee.

If you are registering the vehicle for the first time in Georgia, the fee is $38. This is because you are not only registering the vehicle, but are also applying to have a Georgia title issued on it. Subsequent registrations cost $20. You should take cash.

Spouses of active duty service members can complete the registration process, provided that they have a valid power of attorney (either a general power or a special power for registration), as well as the other documents normally required to register. This includes a current copy of the service member's LES.

In the past, Soldiers were not able to obtain the exemption from taxes on leased vehicles. We are informed that Muscogee County is now exempting leased vehicles under the same procedures described above.

If you have questions concerning the registration process and the ad valorem exemption, you should call the Legal Assistance Division at 545-3281. The office hours are from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday.

"Our Schedule Fits Your Schedule"

Release stress, let God solve problems

By Clarke L. McGriff
Office of the Chief of Chaplains, DA

reflections

A lady sat in my office with a look of pain on her face one day. She described her situation: her marriage was in trouble; her kids were out of control; her part-time job did nothing for her self-esteem, and, for a long time, she had been in conflict with her mother. To top it all off, her car was on the fritz again.

Stress is an inherent part of our work and personal lives, it can be a source of challenge and growth. Stress is neither good nor bad, and it is possible to have too much or too little stress.

So the goal for all of us is not to eliminate stress but to manage it. Management of stress requires skills particular to each individual. Each of us is unique and will in fact require unique methods of coping. What works for you will not necessarily work for me.

What is stress? Stress is the non-specific response of the body to any demand made upon it. It is the wear and tear caused by life, the mobilization of the body's defenses that allow us to deal with change. Each person's response to stress is unique.

Some of us are race horses and some are turtles. It's just as stressful for a race horse to attempt to perform similar to a turtle as it is for a turtle to act like a race horse. The key is to make stress work for us and not against us.

People who have been judged as happy by themselves and their friends have developed the four following keys to coping with life:

•A good sense of humor — If we don't learn to laugh at our troubles now, we won't have anything to laugh at when we're old.

•The ability to solve problems when they arise without being impulsive — They think through the alternatives and pick one they are willing to live with.

•The ability to live in the present — They do not burden themselves by going over past mistakes.

•The ability to see a place for themselves in the future — They do not become hopeless and despairing. Obviously, one's faith in God and the belief in him or herself and own realistic skills is the thing that is critical in order to live by this step.

Finally, we can find help in the Bible to cope with stressful situations:

•Release the stressful event to God. Instead of worrying, we can turn our situation over to the Lord. Philippians 4:6-7

•Look at what the cross can say to us. What does it mean to be crucified with Christ? Colossians 3 :3, 5, 8-9

•Honestly share our feelings with God. Psalm 22:1

•Claim the rest that Jesus offers to us. Matthew 11: 28-30.

Hang in there, "this too shall pass."

"Blessed is the nation whose God is the Lord."
Psalms 33:12

reflections

In the book of Numbers, the author writes, "With their patience worn out by the journey, the people complained against God and Moses." We can identify with that.

Life is a journey and our patience gets worn out because of all the suffering and conflict that we encounter. When the Israelites complained against God, their suffering got worse, and only when they came to acknowledge that, did God give them relief, or an answer to their prayer.

We are inclined to do the same thing. We are confronted with suffering or hardship; sickness or some form of a cross to carry. We try to handle it alone, because we think we are strong enough to deal with it ourselves, our patience runs out. Now maybe God does not punish us for doing this, maybe he does not respond to our complaining the way he did to the Israelites, but the same result takes place, the suffering becomes worse.

The reason it gets worse is our own fault. What we have done is push ourselves farther away from God. We have separated ourselves from the only person who can put our lives together for us and give us all the help that we need to deal with suffering and to carry our cross.

If we look at God as the source of all strength and the giver of all grace; if we look at him as the source of our human beginning and the object of our existence, then logical reason tells us that he and only he can give us what we need to make it through this human life.

But, he never promised that it would be free of hardship and he never told us that we would not have to suffer. In fact, Christ told us just the opposite. Christ said in very powerful words, "Anyone who does not carry his cross and follow me cannot be my disciple," Luke 14:27 (NIV).

What sets the Christian apart from the rest of the world is not the cross. It is not suffering or hardship or pain or anxiety or frustration. All people have to deal with suffering simply because there is no way to avoid it. It is a part of our humanness. But the Christian is different from other people because he does not try to handle it himself. He sees the need to continually beg for the grace and the strength to carry his cross. Our prayer becomes an acknowledgement that we are in no way capable of dealing with the many kinds of suffering that this human life imposes upon us.

This is what the Christian does. Instead of pushing himself away from God by complaining about his suffering, he draws himself closer to God by acknowledging his need for help.

The Christian is that person who has reached the level of maturity when he can say, "suffering will always be a part of my life. It will come in some form or other — in loneliness, in failure, in sickness, in frustration, in being separated from people I love. Because I am too weak and too fragile to deal with it alone, I must depend on the grace of God."

When you look at the particular cross that the Lord invites you to carry, and when you realize that in trying to carry that cross you are running out of patience, it might help to remember the lesson that the Israelites learned. When we have no patience left, it means that we have made the mistake of trying to carry our cross alone.

Choir to sing for Easter Cantata — The Infantry Center Chapel adult choir is rehearsing now for the Easter cantata, "Calvary's Love." All community members interested in singing in this cantata are invited to join.

Rehearsals take place every Wednesday at 7:30 p.m. in the Chapel Annex.

Call Sandra Norris at 683-0308 for more information.

MACH offers new worship services — Martin Army Community Hospital services will be as follows:

•Sunday at 8 a.m. — Protestant Worship Service,

•Sunday at 7 p.m. — Catholic Mass,

•Tuesday at noon — Bible study,

•Wednesday at noon — Protestant Chapel Service, and

•Thursday at noon — Full Gospel Service.

All the services listed above are conducted in the Martin Army Community Hospital Chapel, located in the basement of the hospital.

New children's program begins — The Religious Education Center plans a new segment of its children's Bible study program, Personal Attitudes Relating To You.

The new segment, Children Living Under the Bible, includes Bible study and Scripture memorization, basic etiquette skills, table and home decorating and some sewing and cooking skills.

The class meets the first Saturday of each month from noon to 2 p.m. at the Religious Education Center, Building 2521.

The class is open to girls in grades three through six.

Musician needed for Catholic services — The U.S. Army Chaplains Office needs an organist or pianist with knowledge of Roman Catholic worship to play for the 9:30 a.m. service at Regimental Chapel, Sand Hill, Sunday mornings.

Blue Devils slip past SuperSonics 29-23

By John W. Peeler
Special to The Bayonet©

Youth basketball action continued Saturday with 11 games on tap at the Youth Services Main Post Gym.

In the 10- to 11-year old division, the Blue Devils won a shooting duel with the SuperSonics. coming out on top 29-23. Dommonick Mister led the scoring for the Blue Devils with 18 points and Brian Sheppard lead the scoring for the SuperSonics with 11 points.

In the 10- to 11-year-old division early game, Leo Crawford and Andrew Rabsatt led the Spurs to a 30-3 victory over Team 4 with 8 and 7 points respectively. Kenneth Armbrister was the lone scorer for Team 4 with 3 points.

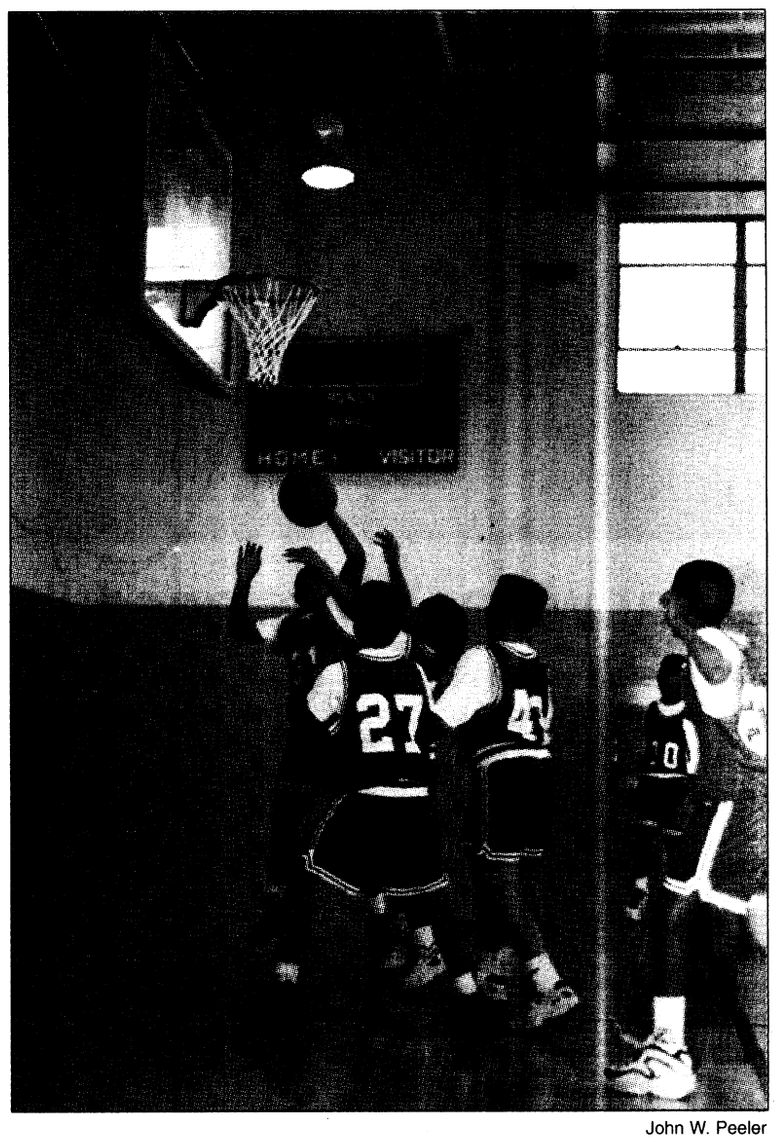
In the late game, the Bull Dogs defeated the Hurricanes 46-7. Leon Frazier led the scoring for the dogs with 18 points and Joshua Sullivan led the way for the Hurricanes with 7 points.

In the 12- to 15-year-old divisions early game, Nicholas Brown led the Tarheels to a 59-46 victory over the Lakers. Brown scored 24 points for the 'Heels in the win, and the team of John Fernandez and Jermaine Stephens combined for points in the Lakers' loss.

In other 12- to 15-year-old action, The Magics slipped past the Monstars 38-35 on the shooting of Ian Radcliff. Radcliff scored 17 points in the Magics' victory. The Monstars leading scorer for the game was Cornelius Light with 14 points.

In the division's late game, the Celtics overpowered the Orangemen 49-39. Omar Roman knocked down 30 points for the Celtics while Reggie McFadden led the scoring for the Orangemen with 18 points.

In the 6- to 7-year old early game, Gary Howard scored 8 points, leading the Bulls to a 14-9 victory over the SuperSonics. The brother team of Ra-Quon and La-Quon Perryman scored 9 total points for the SuperSonics in the 6- to 7-year-old divisional loss.



In the late 6- to 7-year-old game, Robert Nicholas scored 8 points, leading the Chicago Bulls to a 17-2 win over the Magics. Sam Leon scored a bucket for the only points for the Magics.

In the 8- to 9-year-old division's first game, the Dream Team slipped past the Blue Devils 13-10 on 9 points scored by Joshua Bartee. Steven Antonia was the high scorer for the Blue Devils with 4 points.

Raymond Jones took the Bulls by the horns, scoring 10 points to lead the Regulators to a 21-8 victory over the Bulls. Lamount Fredericks and Kevin Gray chipped in 3 points a piece in the Bulls' loss.

Sixers Warren Pruitt, Brandon Jackson and Erich Taylor dug into the Spurs for 4 points each as the Sixers "eighty-sixed" the Spurs 16-3. Taneshia McFadden was the high scorer for the Spurs with 2 points.

Youth Services plans more basketball games at the Main Post Youth Services Gym Saturday beginning at 9 a.m.

No pass, no play policy starts with parenting

By John W. Peeler
Special to The Bayonet©

John W. Peeler believes the no pass no play policy should be left for parents to decide.

commentary

I recently read an article in a local newspaper with a headline reading "Parents, coaches against no pass, no play policy."

Reading the article brought up some very key issues for parents, coaches and educators alike.

Being a coach and parent, I feel there are valid arguments for and against setting a grade standard for student athletes.

On one hand, I can understand from a parent's point of view wanting your children to do well in school and succeed in life. On the other hand, I understand from the point of view of a sincere coach that athletics, properly taught, reinforces a sense of accomplishment, well being and builds self-esteem within an athlete, and can lead to great achievements in the athlete's life.

The responsibility of setting grade standards for athletes to play organized sports is and should rest with each child's parents.

Are all parents going to set the same standards? Not in a million years. At least, the responsibility rests with the people in charge of making the athlete a productive member of society.

When lobbyists and special interests groups become involved, normally, it's the lower-income class of people that suffers.

A dear friend gave me an example of this a couple of years ago when I was an active duty service member.

He said that basically, people were divided into three groups represented by percentages. Ten percent are whiners and complainers who believe the other 90 percent of the people are the causes of their problems. Then, there are 10 percent (lobbyists and special interest groups) who feel that they can make the changes to keep the whiners and complainers happy and in the long run, feel good about what they have done.

Then, there is the third group, comprising 80 percent of the population. This group is not really concerned about the other two groups, they just want to be left alone to enjoy life.

Most of us fit into this latter group. There is only one problem, the whiners and complainers whine and complain until the activists lobby for change that affect the other 80 percent who just want to be left alone.

This philosophy was further emphasized in a conversation I overheard this weekend about this same article. A person was defending the position for making the no pass, no play rule applicable, saying her child athlete maintained good grades while competing in sports and how it was hard to understand why any parent would not do the same thing.

The answer, because no two parents are alike. Another possible answer is maybe another child has a learning disability but is good in sports, and the best avenue for this particular child is to be able to put those talents to work for him or her in athletics.

Controversy will continue to surround the no pass, no play rule with everyone thinking they are doing the right thing. Just remember, if you make others subject to your individual style of parenting, one day you may be the subject.

Parents should be left with the responsibility and accountability for how their children are brought up, not lobbyists and activists.

Until the outcome of this proposed policy, I will continue to be a good parent, an honest coach and continue to live within the 80 percent group who like where they are, who they are and who just want to be left alone.

USAMU to participate in marksmanship weekend

USAMU Public Affairs Office

The U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit will participate in a marksmanship weekend conducted by the Cincinnati Revolver Club Feb. 8 and 9 at the club's range, located at 4951 Winton Ridge Lane, Cincinnati.

The mission of USAMU is to compete in and win regional-, national- and international-level competitions.

Members of the unit's seven competitive marksmanship sections — service pistol, service rifle, international pistol, international rifle, shotgun, running target and action shooting — participate in competitions ranging from National Matches to the World Military Championships to the Olympic Games.

"The USAMU marksmen are true professionals and the unit is the leading training organization for bull's eye shooting in the United States," Cincinnati Revolver Club board member John Westheimer said. "The USAMU literally wrote the book regarding pistol marksmanship."

During the marksmanship weekend, anyone interested in improving their shooting performance can benefit from instruction offered by members of the USAMU Service Pistol Team, according to Westheimer.

Marksmanship training will be conducted Feb. 8 with USAMU instructors providing classes for beginners, intermediate and expert shooters, followed by a 2,700-point match Feb. 9.

"Training could possibly begin as early as Feb. 7, depending on the response to this event," Westheimer said. "There will probably be limited space available and the event will be operated on a first-come, first-served basis."

For more information on the shooting events, call the Cincinnati Revolver Club at (513) 681-2829.

In a joint venture with the Ohio U.S. Army Recruiting Command, two USAMU competitive shooters will also tour several high schools within the Cincinnati area Feb. 3 to 7 to talk with students about their experiences both in the Army and as competitive shooters.

For more information, call Brian Lepley at (614) 469-2345 or (614) 469-2343.

Girl Scouts conduct annual run

By John W. Peeler
Special to The Bayonet©

The annual Girl Scout cookie sale gets off to a running start Saturday at Weracoba Park (Lakebottom) at 9 a.m. with the 17th annual Barnett Bank Girl Scout Cookie Run.

"Girls plus sports equals a winning team" is this year's theme for the run that includes a sanctioned and certified five-kilometer race.

"We believe the new certified five-kilometer course will be much more appealing to the competitive runner," said Frieda Williams, director of the program and Cookie Run coordinator for the Concharty Council.

The important change in the cookie run this year is instead of a five-mile race, the Cookie Run this year will be a five-kilometer race certified by USA Track and Field.

The race begins and ends in the Weracoba Park area, but will follow a course through the surrounding area.

In addition to the five-kilometer race, the event features a five-kilometer Wheelchair Race, a 1.5-mile Run for the Cookies, a 1.5-mile Handicapped Participation Race and a 100-yard Tot Trot for children age 4 and under.

The event is open to all ages with pre-registration costing $7 for children 17 and under and $10 for adults. Registration Saturday costs $9 for children 17 and under and $12 for adults. Pre-registration for groups of 20 or more runners is $9 per person.

To ensure a 1997 Girl Scout Cookie Run long-sleeve t-shirt in the appropriate size, registration should be accomplished prior to race day.

Awards for the race winners vary by event and the racer's ages, and include ribbons or trophies, pizza and or boxes of Girl Scout Cookies.

Runners can pre-register for the event at all Barnett Banks until noon today or at the Girl Scout Office at 1344 13th Ave. until 5 p.m.

For more information, call 327-2646.

Winter activity abounds in Gatlinburg, Great Smoky Mountains

Visitors and Convention Bureau

GATLINBURG, Tenn. — With the backdrop of the Great Smoky Mountains National Park, Gatlinburg offers the adventurous something new everyday.

Whether it's hiking on one of the more than 900 miles of hiking trails or fishing for that prized mountain trout in the Little Pigeon River, outdoor activity is not hard to find in the Smokies.

Start off the adventure with snow skiing at Ober Gatlinburg Ski Resort where the average snowfall is 50 inches.

The average skiing season is early December through mid-March. Ski school and ski rentals are also available.

Eight slopes intertwine on Mount Harrison with the longest trail topping out at 5,000 feet, and with two quad lifts and one double lift, lines aren't a problem.

Ober Gatlinburg also offers ice skating year round on the 140-foot by 75-foot indoor ice arena.

There's no need to worry about reaching Ober Gatlinburg with America's largest cable car, known as the Ober Gatlinburg Aerial Tramway, available.

The Tramway starts in downtown Gatlinburg and departs every 20 minutes. The ride offers a panoramic view of Gatlinburg and the Smokies and is an experience for all ages.

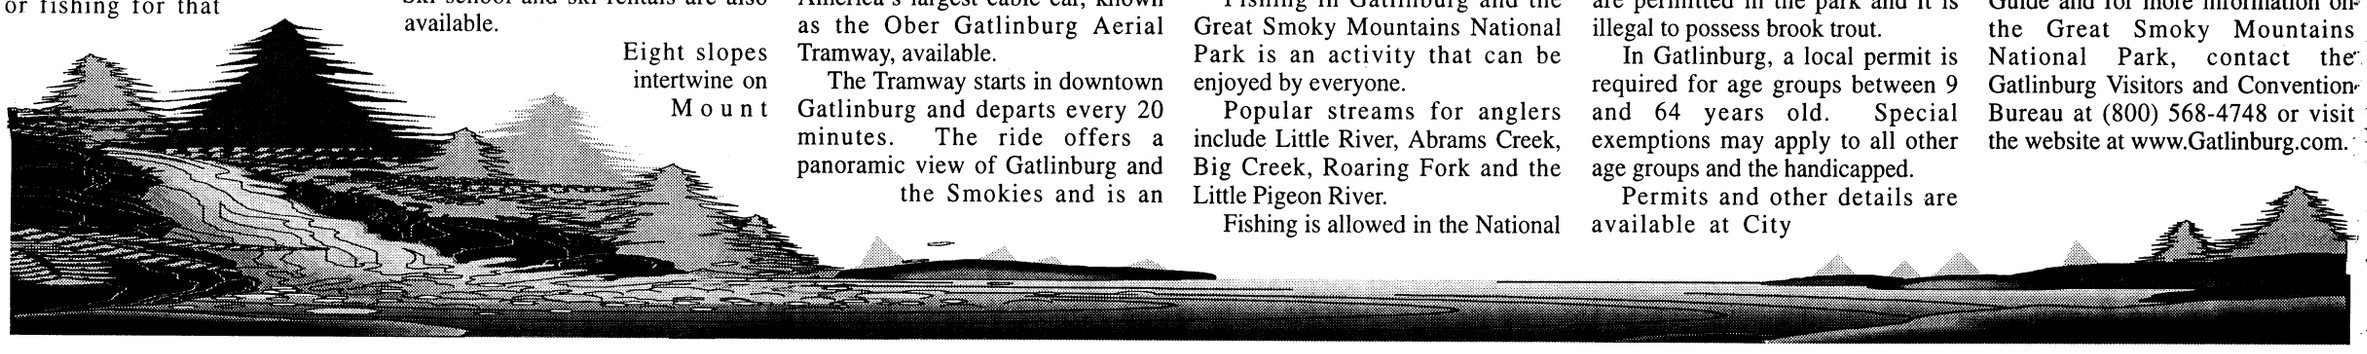
Winter hiking in the Smokies is an adventure in itself. Hike through the snow to reach the pinnacle of the journey and set up camp to enjoy a mountain night beside the fire.

There are three campgrounds in the park that remain open for winter camping.

Fishing in Gatlinburg and the Great Smoky Mountains National Park is an activity that can be enjoyed by everyone.

Popular streams for anglers include Little River, Abrams Creek, Big Creek, Roaring Fork and the Little Pigeon River.

Fishing is allowed in the National Park and in Gatlinburg from sunrise to sunset. In the park, a valid Tennessee or North Carolina state fishing license is required and is available at sporting goods stores in the area and at the Gatlinburg Chamber of Commerce Welcome Center in downtown Gatlinburg.



Only single-hook, artificial lures are permitted in the park and it is illegal to possess brook trout.

In Gatlinburg, a local permit is required for age groups between 9 and 64 years old. Special exemptions may apply to all other age groups and the handicapped.

Permits and other details are available at City Hall and the Chamber of Commerce Welcome Center.

Being the gateway to the Great Smoky Mountains National Park, Gatlinburg offers a diverse variety of accommodations, restaurants, attractions and shopping opportunities to visitors.

For a free Gatlinburg Vacation Guide and for more information on the Great Smoky Mountains National Park, contact the Gatlinburg Visitors and Convention Bureau at (800) 568-4748 or visit the website at www.Gatlinburg.com.

Clear water offers good fishing in winter

By Earl Bentz& Steve Price
Outboard Marine Corporation

For most of the year, bass fishermen stay as far away from clear water as possible. The one time they do look for it is during the winter.

"I believe the most difficult of all fishing conditions is cold, muddy water, so I look for the clearest water I can find," former world champion Guido Hibdon.

"That usually means going to the lower end of a big impoundment and then heading into the largest tributary creek down there," he said. "The lower end is where the water will be the clearest, and a big tributary will give me plenty of fishing options."

The first option Hibdon searches for is where the creek channel swings close to a secondary point inside the tributary.

This condition usually means shallow and deep water near each other, possible current, and hopefully cover.

"If the conditions are right, this is a good place to find a lot of bass stacked together in a small location," Hibdon said. "It may take you several hours to locate them, but once you do, you're usually in for an exciting day."

The pro said lake maps are a good way to find places like this, but it still requires both depthfinder study and actual fishing to pinpoint them.

"Even in the winter bass move shallow to feed, Hibdon said, "but because of the colder temperature they also require deeper water. This is why you look for a channel that swings close to a point. The point usually offers the shallow water, and generally it will have stumps, logs, or rocks bass can use for cover.

"In the winter, bass tend to use the steeper banks so their movements are more vertical than horizontal," he said. "Once they come up from the deeper channel, they're on the point and don't have to move very far to begin feeding. To me, that's one of the major keys to locating winter bass."

Hibdon is world famous for his expertise with a jig, and this is one of his favorite winter lures. He'll also use a spinnerbait, especially when first exploring an area. He fishes it slow and deep, as much to help him locate cover as to catch

"If you're forced to fish cold, muddy water, the spinnerbait is also a good lure choice," he said. "I'll continue as far up a creek as I can looking for moving water. If there are any feeding bass, this is where they'll be.

"I'll either slow-roll the spinnerbait around cover and down dropoffs, or I'll flip a jig around the cover, " Hibdon said.

Investigation clears drills

Two ITB privates receive nonjudicial punishment

By Monica L. Manganaro
USAIC Public Affairs Office

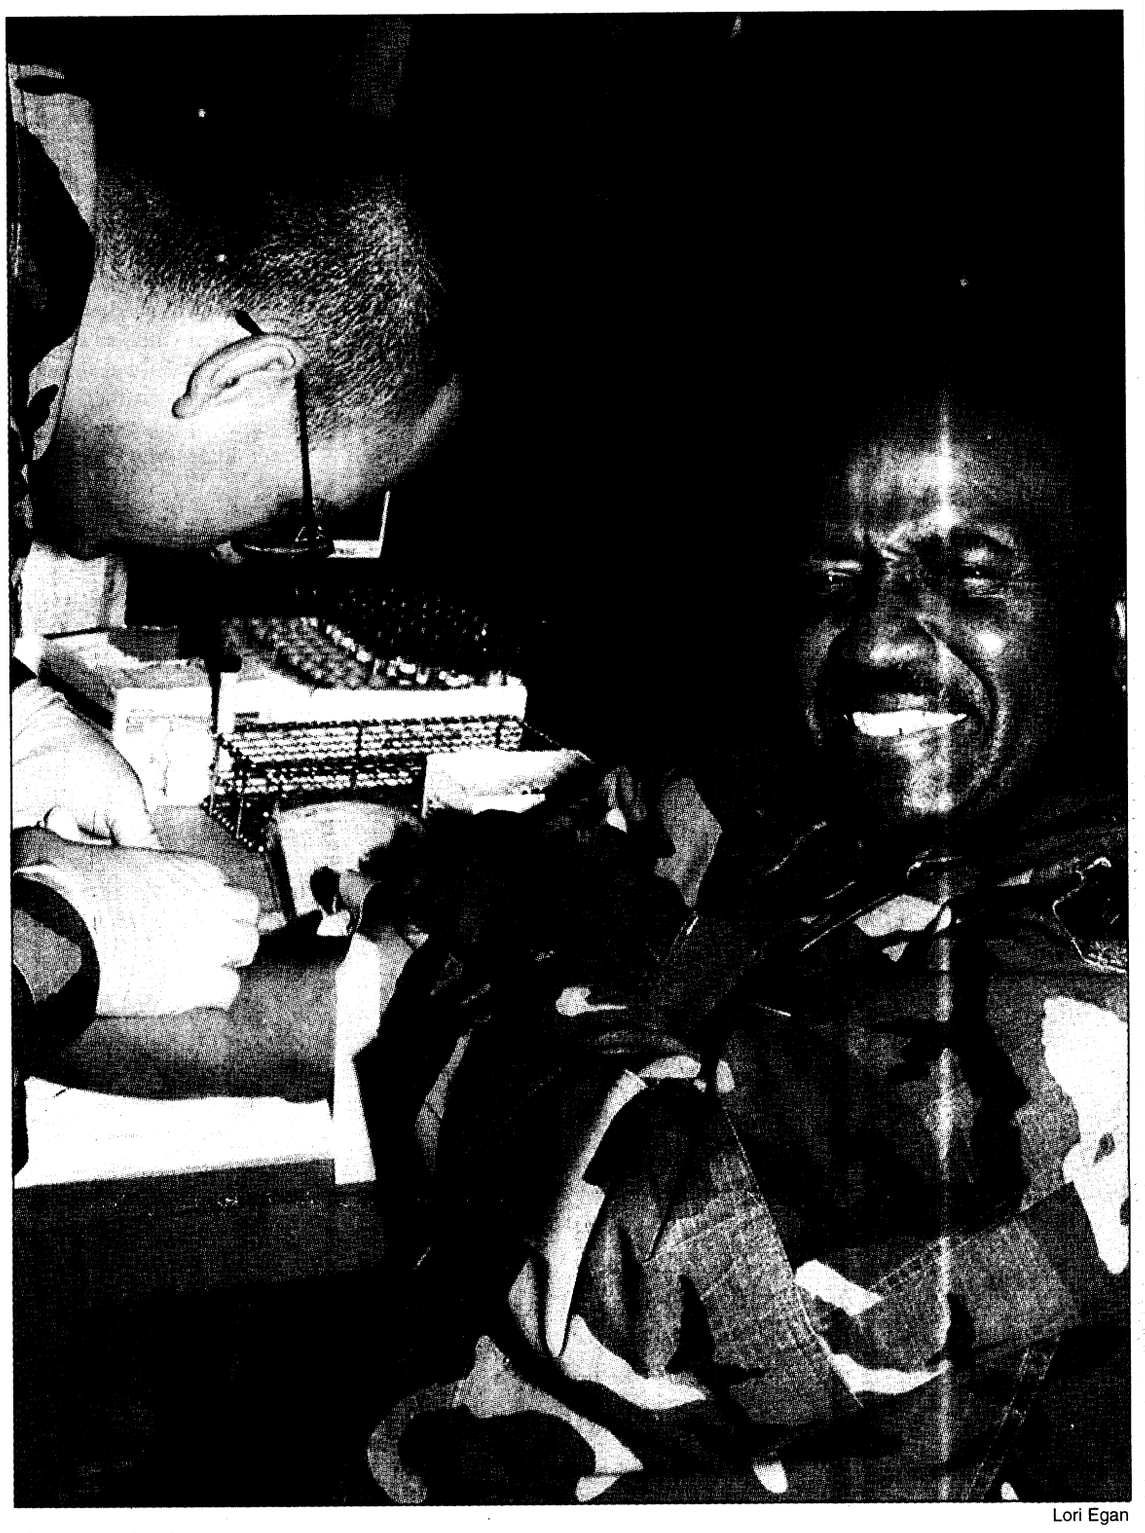
The results of a Criminal Investigation Division report have cleared two Infantry Training Brigade drill sergeants of any wrongdoing, and left the accusers facing nonjudicial punishment under Article 15 of the Uniform Code Military of Justice.

Pvt. Jason Nathanial Yates, 20, of Enumclaw, Wash., and Pvt. Joshua Paul Lair, 18, of Orcutt; Calif., will receive Article 15s following an investigation into allegations claiming they went absent without leave after two of their drill sergeants allegedly assaulted them.

Yates and Lair provided sworn statements Jan. 14 that they were abused while in basic training. The two, who were reported AWOL from Co. E, 2nd Bn., 58th Infantry Regiment, Infantry Training Brigade, since Jan. 12, called Clayton County police from a motel in Forest Park, Ga., a police report said. Both had bruises and were treated by paramedics, then turned over to military police at nearby Fort Gillem where they saw a doctor before returning to Fort Benning.

A CID investigation was unable to substantiate any allegations of assault or abuse of authority by the drill sergeants involving these two soldiers.

The CID did, however, find probable cause to believe the two trainees committed the offense of false swearing based on witness interviews which contradicted their claims.



The battalion commander, Lt. Col. Kelly L. Mayes, said that the unit's first priority is toward taking care of its Soldiers.

"There's nothing here the chain of command can't solve, whether it's a financial problem, personal or a Soldier thinks it's just too hard and morale's down," Mayes said.

"We are an Army family and we take our commitment to Soldiers very seriously and will work towards solving any problems so they may become productive Soldiers."

Mayes said that Soldiers who have problems should use their chain of command, and added that going AWOL is no solution.

"AWOL just adds another level of trouble. It does not solve anything."

Post CSM assumes duties

By Brian R. Voller
Bayonet staff writer

Fort Benning recently received a new post command sergeant major.

Command Sgt. Maj. Mack H. Vereen arrived at the installation after completing his duties as the command sergeant major of U.S. Army Alaska.

When he was first informed that he was coming to Fort Benning, Vereen said, he was very happy.

"This position is a unique opportunity to serve as the chief enlisted Infantryman in the U.S. Army, and to fulfill the duties and responsibilities of a command sergeant major," Vereen said.

"I was happy because I knew I would be able to work side by side with developers to ensure that we have the right technical and tactical task list. I knew I would be able to transform that task list into training objectives to meet the Soldiers' missions, duties and responsibilities so they can do the jobs we ask them to do."

Now that Vereen has taken on the position of the post command sergeant major, he said he has several things he wants to accomplish during his time at Fort Benning.

"I'd like to ensure that Fort Benning remains the best installation in the U.S. Army," Vereen said. "Also, the needs of Fort Benning and the tricommunity will be at the forefront of all of my decisions. Never will I allow my needs to take precedence over my Soldiers, their family members, the civilian work force or the community."

Vereen also said he will ensure that the Noncommissioned Officer Corps of Fort Benning is the best NCO Corps in the Army.

Vereen said during his time as the post command sergeant major, Soldiers can expect several things from him.

"The enlisted Soldiers can expect that I will be instrumentally involved in everything that affects their lives both in the military and

Post to replace vinyl miniblinds

By Jacqué Hill
Special to the Bayonet©

Immediately after the news of the possibility of vinyl miniblinds causing lead exposure broke, Fort Benning officials started working on a plan to keep Fort Benning residents safe.

The Directorate of Public Works officials, along with post commanders, Directorate of Public Safety and Martin Army Community Hospital staffs and personnel of the Office of the Staff Judge Advocate, began implementing a plan to remove a potential threat of danger to community members by replacing the miniblinds currently hanging in government quarters.

The levels of lead increase, Richard Townsend, Industrial Hygiene manager for Fort Benning, said, after vinyl miniblinds have had prolonged exposure to sunlight, humidity and weathering.

"These things speed up the decomposition of blind material, and as it deteriorates, it creates lead with the dust," he said. "This lead-carrying dust is then available inside the home."

Children 6 years old and younger are more prone to lead exposure from the vinyl miniblinds than any other age group, according to Townsend.

"The only way this can be a hazard is if the blind dust is ingested somehow," he said. Because younger children more often tend to touch the blinds and then place their fingers inside their mouths, they are more at risk than other people, he said.

"Do not use a vacuum to clean away the dust from these blinds — lead dust is so fine that it is not trapped by a vacuum," he said. "This can possibly be hazardous to breathe, but is not a problem otherwise."

According to Dr. William Corr, chief, Preventive Medicine, MACH, testing children for lead exposure has always been routine at MACH.

"There have been no cases of lead intoxication related to miniblinds discovered in the Fort Benning community," Corr said.

DPW recently released a two-part plan for replacing the vinyl miniblinds at Fort Benning.

DPW is hiring four additional employees to replace the miniblinds or the residents can replace the blinds themselves.

When the team is hired, a specific plan has been set for it and DPW's current staff to follow, Glenn C. Todd, customer relations specialist, DPW, said.

"They're targeting the areas that would traditionally have the target group of children 6 years and younger first," he said.

According to the plan, the team will replace miniblinds in the following housing areas respectively — McGraw Manor, Custer Terrace, Indianhead Terrace, Austin Loop, Norton and Ragan courts, Perkins Place, Rainbow and Miller loops, Iron Triangle and then, all other housing areas.

The plan offers a second option for miniblind replacement — allowing quarters residents to replace the miniblinds themselves.

Dominick J. DeCarlo, chief, Unit Housing Support Branch, DPW, said the plan lays out some very important guidelines for those wishing to replace their own miniblinds rather than waiting for the replacement team to do so.

"They need to measure the actual blinds in place, or from hanger to hanger if no blind is currently hanging," he said. "Once this is done, DPW will issue them lead-free miniblinds through the U-Do-It Center, Building 385.

"People removing their own blinds must dispose of them with normal household waste. Blinds containing lead may be disposed of in the sanitary landfill in accordance

New AC takes up duties

By Dov Schwartz
USAIC Public Affairs Office

Fort Benning's newest deputy commanding general and assistant commandant of the Infantry school was officially welcomed at a frocking ceremony on York Field Jan. 23.

Former 11th Infantry Regiment Commander Col. Walter Wojdakowski was frocked to general before a crowd of fellow Soldiers, family and friends.

Wojdakowski's stars were pinned on by his wife, Candy, and his father, Wallace.

According to Commanding General Maj. Gen. Carl F. Ernst, attaining the rank of general officer "is the hallmark and crowning achievement of a U.S. Infantryman, who is privileged to be an officer."

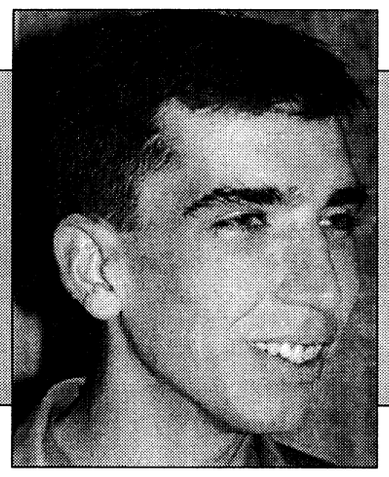
Ernst called Wojdakowski a great Soldier with the "right skills, right background, right knowledge and right leadership" for the assistant commandant and deputy commanding general position.

In his remarks, Wojdakowski hailed the tricommunity area for its support of Fort Benning.

Brig. Gen. Walter Wojdakowski is the new deputy commanding general.

"There is no better place to train, work or learn than right here in Fort Benning, Georgia," Wojdakowski said.

Wojdakowski pledged to devote all of his energy into making the Infantry School the best it could be.

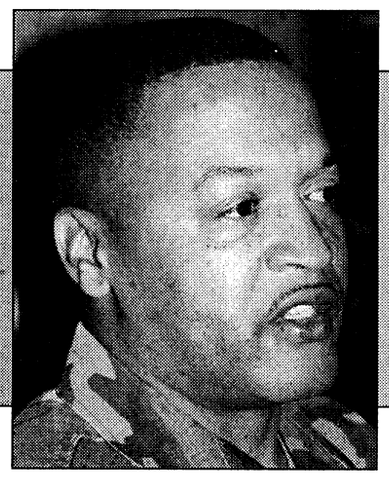


The new deputy commanding general is a graduate of the U.S. Military Academy, West Point. Wojdakowski's military education also includes the Command and General Staff College, the School of Advanced Military Studies and the Army War College.

He has served in various command and staff positions during his 25-year military career.

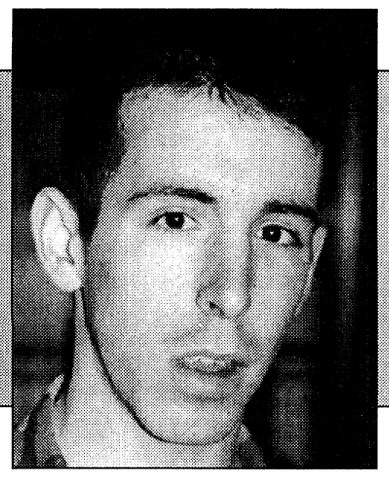
Wojdakowski's most recent position was commander, Operations Group, Combat Maneuver Training Center in Hohenfels, Germany.

VARIOUS VOICES



What can be done to improve The Bayonet?

Cpl. Mike Roane, Company A, 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment — "I'd like to see more articles about things of interest in the downtown area."



Celeste Lee, Directorate of Operations and Training — "I'd like to see an advice column and I'd like to see more civilian interest items."

Master Sgt. Bill Arnold, Directorate of Operations and Training — "I'd like to see more information articles about changes in regulations or changes in current policies."

Spc. Leann Sikes, Chaplains' Family Life Center — "I'd like to see more community news, and I think The Bayonet needs to have more reporters to cover more things."

Sgt. Jeremy Kerr, Company A, 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment— "I think the paper should run monthly updates on promotion points, and I think the paper needs to gear their information towards younger soldiers."

Teri Hall, family member — "I would like to see the paper come out twice a week."

Groundhog Day

Annual winter weather prediction tradition finds roots all over world

By Dov Schwartz
USAIC Public Affairs Office

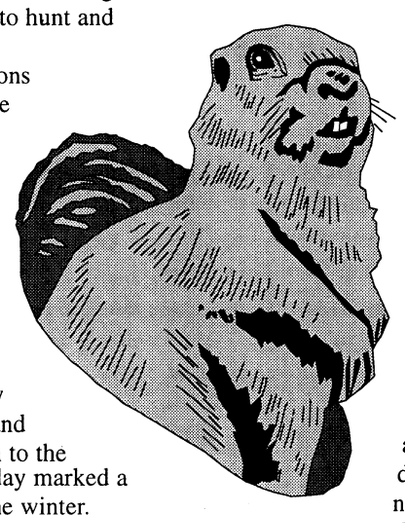
I've been seeing a lot of shadows lately, and with Groundhog Day just a few days away, I am starting to worry.

Groundhog Day, Feb. 2, is a day with profound impact on our weather. This is the day that the seer of all seers, the prognosticator of all prognosticators, Punxsutawney Phil scampers out of his burrow and determines how much longer winter will last.

commentary

If the famed weather prophet doesn't see his shadow, spring is around the corner. But if the great seer glimpses his shadow on the sacred earth of Gobbler's Knob, we are in for an additional six weeks of severe winter weather.

Shadows mean more winter. Now you know why I'm a little worried.



As a native of Western Pennsylvania, I was raised on stories of the weather sage of Punxsutawney. Punxsutawney Phil's powers have been known to throw a terrible chill into the skiing industry. Owners of ski resorts often make the pilgrimage to his modest, one-hole home (you expected a duplex?) to implore him to seek out his silhouette on the day of reckoning, thus ensuring a better season.

According to the legend, the origin of Groundhog Day dates back to the creation story of the Delaware Indians. They believed man began life as animals in "mother earth" and emerged centuries later to hunt and live as men.

Dov Schwartz gives history lesson about Groundhog Day.

Other opinions lead back to the early Christian tradition of Candlemas Day. For centuries, it was a winter-time custom to have the clergy bless candles and distribute them to the people. This day marked a milestone in the winter.

The Germans picked up on this custom and concluded (heaven knows why) that if the sun made an appearance on Candlemas Day, an animal, the hedgehog, would cast a shadow, thus predicting six more weeks of winter.

Like all Pennsylvanians, I yearn to avenge the Royal Ground Hog Murders of 1953. No event in Pennsylvanian history raised the ire of Pennsylvanians more (except last year's Pittsburgh Steeler Super Bowl loss) than the premeditated murder, by officials of the state of California of the Royal Groundhog couple, Philip and Elizabeth.

They were named in honor of England's royal couple (and at last check, of the super market tabloids, England's only royals who are still a couple). Philip and Elizabeth were dispatched to California as gifts from the people of Punxsutawney.

The royal couple arrived after an uneventful flight (the royal yacht, HMS Britannia being otherwise engaged) and were welcomed by zoo officials.

After the lovely couple had enjoyed only a few days in the sun, the California Department of Agriculture declared the young groundhogs "agricultural pests" and ordered them destroyed. Despite a national outcry and pleas for mercy, the six-week-old groundhogs were lined up and shot. Buckingham Palace remained silent. (Tea time — you know).

An immediate apology was demanded. There was talk of forming a militia and a retaliatory invasion was planned.

Elizabeth and Philip were eventually returned to their native soil for burial.

The decades old grudge continues.

Pennsylvanians still harbor deep resentment against anyone from California. (Except the Los Angeles Laker Cheerleaders, whom we admire greatly).

Punxsutawneyites take groundhogs seriously. When the town built its new civic center, it included an air-conditioned, glass-enclosed Groundhog Zoo.

Every Pennsylvanian beams with pride over the groundhog's starring role in the movie "Groundhog Day," which featured Bill Murray and Andie McDowell in supporting roles.

We also know that only a last minute script change caused the groundhog to be bumped from the film "Cast a Giant Shadow" in favor of Kirk Douglas.

But I digress.

In Columbus, our local meteorologists have at their beck and call many instruments to help them predict the weather. They use satellites, weather balloons, weather beacons and Doppler radar, to name a few.

Yet the forecast for one night last week was, and I quote, "We expect a low in the 20s, 30s and 40s." Want that again? A low in the 20s, 30s and 40s." With all that equipment, all that high-tech gizmology (gizmo+technology), the best modern weather forecasting can come up with is a 30 degree spread.

Frankly, I'll take the groundhog and the assembled attendants at Gobblers Knob.

Will we have six more weeks of winter or is spring around the corner?

"Only the Shadow knows."

New secretary of defense gives thanks

I am both honored and privileged to have been asked by President William J. Clinton to serve as secretary of defense. I approach these demanding duties with humility and with a full appreciation of the important work ahead as we confront the uncertainties of future threats to the security of our nation and our allies.

To those who serve in uniform, regardless of where you are or what you do, you should know that you serve with the support of a grateful nation. Thanks to you and your predecessors, the world is a safer place today, for us and for all nations. Your tenacity and undiminished commitment to the pursuit of peace and freedom brought an end to the cold war, reversed aggression in Southwest Asia, and today, deters those forces that seek to undermine the efforts of nations to live in peace. As a result, our community of nations has a renewed sense of hope as it approaches the new century.

As I assume the watch from Secretary William Perry, I wish to convey to each and every one of you two key thoughts. The first is my great pride in your collective achievements, which have enabled the United States to fulfill its indispensable role as the world's greatest force for peace, prosperity and freedom. My respect for your achievements is equalled only by the honor of being selected to lead you and the Department of Defense as we work to ensure the security of the United States and to protect and promote our national interests abroad.

Second, I request an individual and collective rededication on the part of all who wear the uniform to the ideals of protecting our nation. Adlai Stevenson once said, "Patriotism is not a short and frenzied outburst of emotion but the tranquil and steady dedication of a lifetime." Through your steady dedication to the common defense, you represent the best our nation has to offer — both to our own country and to the world. Your greatness is measured in many different ways, every day. Be it by your compassion in humanitarian missions, your steadfast resolve while deterring potential enemies, or your courage and professionalism when the nation decides to commit its might in the pursuit of our national objectives, you light the path for others to follow. Your countrymen look to your "dedication of a lifetime" as a constant in their lives. The world depends on it as a condition for peace and stability.

Let me close by saying that I pledge all of my energies toward achieving the high standards that the American people have come to expect of their armed forces. I further pledge that we shall meet your expectations and those of your families as you discharge your unique and demanding duties on land, at sea, or in the air around the globe.

A proud and grateful nation, whose destiny is in your hands, can do no less. Press on.

—William S. Cohen
Secretary of Defense

545-boss

Dial 545-BOSS is the commander's action line for Soldiers, family members and civilians to call when they have problems or complaints that can't be resolved elsewhere.

While it is not a substitute for the chain of command or for agencies established to provide assistance, the line offers another means of communication between Fort Benning's community and commanders.

The Bayonet features some of the calls that may benefit other members of the Fort Benning community.

Call: Caller complained about the way Soldiers are being treated at the Infantry Hall Fitness Center.

Directorate of Community Activities response: A representative from the Sports Branch was informed that many Soldiers were being turned away from Infantry Hall Fitness Center because of improper physical training uniforms.

The uniform the caller wore when he was turned away from the facility was purchased from the Military Clothing Sales Store.

A staff member at the Infantry Hall Fitness Center told him he was out of uniform because his shorts were too long.

The caller cited another incident where a Soldier on leave was refused entry to the facility because she was in civilian workout attire. Policy Memorandum #96-39, Standards of Conduct for Physical Training at Fort Benning, dated Aug. 9, 1996, is the policy the facility staff uses to enforce proper military attire in the fitness centers.

The fitness center staff is required to inform Soldiers of their improper attire, reference above-mentioned policy, but will not deny the Soldier the opportunity to work out. If repeated violations occur, the Soldier's command will be notified.

The facility staff at Infantry Hall Fitness Center has been briefed on this policy.

CG declares dental month

Whereas, the future is, to a large measure, dependent on the good health of our families;

Whereas, good health can be achieved in part through good dental habits learned early and reinforced throughout life;

Be it resolved, that I, Maj. Gen. Carl F. Ernst, Commanding General of the U.S. Army Infantry Center and Fort Benning, thereby proclaim the month of February as Children's Dental Month and urge all citizens to join in this observation.

"They can expect to see me out and about."

Vereen said he has served in every Infantry leadership position from team leader to command sergeant major.

His combat participations include: Operation Just Cause in Panama and Operation Restore Hope in Somalia.

He has also worked as a drill sergeant and senior drill sergeant at Fort Gordon, Ga.; senior course manager, Fort Jackson, S.C.; first sergeant for Company B, 3rd Battalion, 17th Infantry Regiment, 7th Infantry Division (Light), Headquarters 7th Inf. Div (Light), and Joint Security Force Company, Panmunjom, Korea; operations sergeant in the Ranger Department; 3rd Brigade, 7th Inf. Div. (Light); 1st Corps G-3 training and operations sergeant major; command sergeant major for 417th Inf., 7th Inf. Div. (Light); command sergeant major for Joint Task Force Somalia, 2-Manchu, 9th Inf. Regt.; and most recently, the command sergeant major of U.S. Army Alaska.

During his time in the Army, Vereen said he has witnessed several changes that made the Army better.

"There have been a lot of corrections made to the noncommissioned officer education system," Vereen said. "The Army has made a lot of strides to provide the correct structure to ensure that NCOs are occupationally fit."

He also said the Army has done a lot to improve the Army family with such programs as the Better Opportunities for Single Soldiers program that helps the single Soldiers become more of a part of the Army family.

Vereen said during his time as a young Soldier, the influence of his first platoon sergeant, Emmanuel Lopez, taught him a lot about being a leader in the Army.

"He had his own learning formula, which I still believe is one of the most appropriate and applicable learning formulas a person can use — the PQR-4 formula — preview the questions, read, recite, recall and review," Vereen said.

with governing environmental regulations."

DPW's plan outlines safety measures to protect people choosing the self-replacement option from lead exposure.

Lead-free miniblinds will be made available when DPW begins issuing them, DeCarlo said.

Kopitzke explained that the plan is for family housing residents only.

"This is family housing focused," he said. "We are not going into work buildings, barracks, etc. — this plan is strictly addressed to family housing, especially where children 6 years and younger may live.

"Also, the blinds will not be redistributed to anyone."

For more information, call the installation's 24-hour information line at 545-2118. A recording will answer and the call will be directed to the appropriate post agency.

Tax offices now open

The Fort Benning tax offices open today. The Main Post Tax Office is in Building 4, Room 1. The hours will be from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

The Kelley Hill Tax Office is in Building 9025. The hours are Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, and Friday from 1 to 5 p.m. and Thursday from 3 to 7 p.m.

Electronic tax filing is available for most returns.

For more information, call Capt. Robert Magnuson at 545-3281.

Controlled burning set

Controlled burning of woodland areas will take place Monday through Feb. 9. If weather permits, the following compartments will be affected: B-2, D-7, D-8, D-9, G-7, H-2, I-1, J-3, J-6, K-20, O-3, O-6, O-10, P-1, U-3, V-1, W-2, X-5, Y-1, Y-3, Z-1, Z-2 and Sand Hill.

Burning will occur in pine stands within these compartments to enhance endangered species' habitat and training areas.

Personnel proposing to use these areas for recreational purposes must vacate these areas prior to 9:30 a.m. daily.

Training units using compartments adjacent to those listed above may experience drift smoke and are reminded to exercise caution while travelling in these areas due to the potential for reduced visibility.

Units using ranges and training areas are reminded to remove flammable debris, such as pinestraw, leaves, grass and trash from around structures in accordance with U.S. Army Infantry Center Regulation 210-4, Paragraph 5-22, Organizational Maintenance.

For more information, call Jack Greenlee, Natural Resources Management Branch, at 544-6120.

Special Forces briefs continue on post

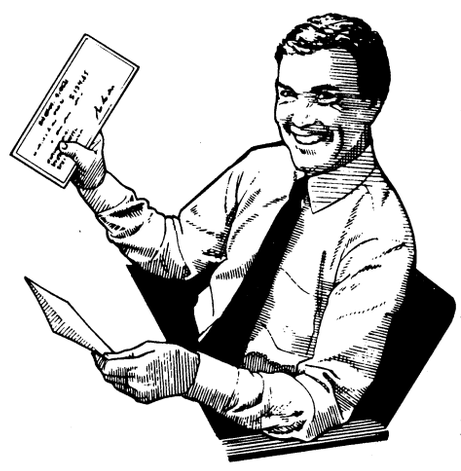
The Special Forces recruiting office conducts briefings every Tuesday at 6 p.m. and Wednesday at 10 a.m. and 2 p.m. in McVeigh Hall, Building 75B, Room 408.

For more information, call Sgt. 1st Class Ernest Donaldson at 545-3079.

Policy emphasizes proper PT uniform

The standard Army physical training uniform will be worn from 6 to 7:30 a.m. on duty days, whether PT is conducted by units or individuals.

The only approved exceptions are the School of the Americas, the Ranger Training Brigade and the 75th Ranger Regiment. These units have an exception to wear a different uniform, but must remain in uniform.



Post offers PT class for pregnant soldiers

Fort Benning offers a physical training class for active duty pregnant Soldiers. This is a specially designed, low-impact aerobic and aqua-aerobic class that promotes proper stretching and use of all muscle groups, especially those involved in labor and delivery.

Classes are held Mondays and Wednesdays from 6 a.m. to 7 a.m. at the Officers' Club Fitness Center, Tuesdays from 7 a.m. to 8 a.m. at Building 2631 in Soldiers' Plaza and Fridays from 8 a.m. to 9 a.m. at the Bryant Wells pool. PT uniform is required except on Tuesdays and Fridays. Soldiers must present their pregnancy profile. An attendance roster is kept and provided to units on a weekly basis.

Commanders, first sergeants and pregnant Soldiers should contact Community Health Nursing, Capt. Watrina White, at 545-4041 or 545-8032 for enrollment or more information.

DOT employees receive awards for providing first aid

By Brian R. Voller
Bayonet staff writer

After waiting almost a year, two Department of the Army civilian employees received recognition for providing first aid to a woman after she was involved in a car accident.

Lesley Steen, training instructor at the Defensive Driving Course, and Sandra Robinson, office automation assistant, both of whom work for the Directorate of Logistics, received the Achievement Medal for Civilian Service during the Commanding General's monthly retreat ceremony Thursday.

Steen and Robinson, along with two Soldiers from the School of the Americas who were in a separate vehicle, were traveling to Jacksonville, Fla., April 24, in support of a rail car loading mission called Operation Dragon Team 7-96.

While traveling on Interstate 295 toward Florida, the two said they witnessed the traffic accident that occurred directly in front of them.

"While we were driving, we saw a piece of plywood blow up out of the back of a pick up truck that was in front of the Blazer the woman was driving," Steen said. "She did the best she could to avoid the piece of plywood, but she over steered and the vehicle began rolling."

Steen said at first, the vehicle was rolling sideways, but the tires eventually caught, and the vehicle began to roll end over end before it eventually stopped next to a tree about 200 feet from the road.

Steen said he and Robinson, along with the two Soldiers in the vehicle behind them, pulled off to the side of the road, called 911 on Robinson's cellular phone and rendered assistance to the woman in the vehicle.

After the shock of initially seeing the accident, Robinson said she was afraid the woman in the car had broken her neck because of the impact of the accident.

"We went down to the vehicle," Steen said. "It was resting on its roof with the motor still running. One of the Soldiers reached into the vehicle and turned off the engine, and we saw that she was trying to work her way out of the vehicle."

Robinson said they helped the woman from the vehicle and laid her down, and then tried to keep her calm and comfortable until the ambulance arrived.

They said aside from some scrapes and cuts, an abrasion on her head and being very shook up, the accident victim, who was later identified as Deborah Brown, was not badly injured.

Steen said it took the Emergency Medical Service 10 to 15 minutes to get to the accident site because the accident occurred a lengthy distance from the nearest hospital.

Robinson said their actions came almost out of instinct because of the training they received on their jobs, but she also said she did it because she would want someone to stop and help her if the same kind of thing happened while she was driving.

Steen said he was happy to be recognized, but he felt his actions were nothing out of the ordinary.

After the accident and after providing Brown with first aid assistance, both Steen and Robinson went to Florida and completed their operation.

Soldiers receive job assistance at ACAP

By Chick Eagle
Army career and Alumni Program

The Job Assistance Center staff conducts workshops, counsels individuals and has automated information systems available as part of the Army Career and Alumni Program process available to separating Soldiers.

"A separating Soldier should allow three to six months for job search activities before his or her estimated termination of service or retirement date," said Frank Casey, Job Assistance counselor. "Generally speaking, the more time you are able to devote to learning and applying job search skills, the greater your chance for success," Casey said.

One of the first things job seekers ask is, "Where are the jobs?" Casey said.

There are really two job markets ... the open and the hidden markets. The "open" jobs are those you can read about in the classified section of the newspaper, listed on the internet, advertised in journals, posted on the windows of businesses and are otherwise known to the general public.

However, according to Casey, the vast majority of jobs are to be found in the "hidden" market. Up to 80 percent of the jobs are found only through personal contact and networking.

A "network" is a group of people you have identified who will provide you information about the job market, your target occupation, potential openings and can tell potential employers about you and your availability. In fact, employers like to fill vacancies through networking and referrals whenever possible because it saves time and avoids the expense of advertising.

Establishing, energizing and expanding your personal and professional network are primary skills needed by job seekers. Casey suggests beginning by contacting relatives, friends, schoolmates, neighbors and members of any organizations you belong to and letting them know when you are separating and what kind of employment you are interested in finding.

Many a separating Soldier success story resulted from his or her asking a friend or relative for help with finding a job, Casey said. The JAC staff can assist with this and many other critical parts of the job search process. The JAC is located in Soldiers' Plaza, Building 2634, next to Frank's Franks. The staff can be reached by calling 545-2308.

ITB leaders share similar histories

By Brian R. Voller
Bayonet staff writer

Two Fort Benning Soldiers with Company E, 1st Battalion, 50th Infantry Regiment, Inf. Training Brigade, share some common bonds.

They both went through basic training in the same battalion — the 1st Bn., 50th Inf. Regt. — one Soldier trained with Co. D and the other trained with Co. E.

Several years later, the two met again when they went through drill sergeant school together. Now the two have come together again at the same place where they completed their basic training, but this time they return as the company commander and first sergeant.

First Sgt. Gregory Watlington attended basic training at Fort Benning in 1978 as part of the first cycle of students to take part in one-station unit training.

Capt. John James attended the same battalion in 1981, and although the two said they never met, they felt a common bond between them when they arrived at drill sergeant school in 1989.

Watlington and James said they met and began talking during their first week of drill sergeant school at a change of command ceremony and they began a friendship because of their common training histories.

After graduating from the school together, the two said they went their separate ways, but tried to stay in contact. During that time, James made the transition from the enlisted ranks to the officer ranks in February of 1991. Watlington continued serving in several capacities as a noncommissioned officer until he was assigned to the 1st Bn., 50th Inf. Regt., in June of 1995 as the Co. E first sergeant.

A little less than one year later, James was assigned to command Co. E, and he said he was surprised to see his old classmate as the first sergeant of the company.

"When I found out I was going to be taking command of a company in this battalion, I came over to the battalion area and that's when I saw his picture on the wall," James said.

Watlington said he didn't realize who the new commander was because he was "down range" when James arrived.

"I was gone the whole week when Captain James arrived," Watlington said. "My old commander's name was Captain James, and when I heard my new commander's name was also Captain James, I was like, 'hey, Captain James and Captain James.'

"But when people started to describe him to me, I said, 'I know a James like that, a Drill Sergeant James. We went through drill sergeant school together.' So when I got back to the company, I saw him. It was like that whole relationship we had during drill sergeant school started again."

Watlington said that when he realized that his old friend from drill sergeant school had made the change from the enlisted ranks to the officer ranks and was going to be his new commander, he felt enthusiastic.

"I was very glad when I found out he was going to be my commander," Watlington said. "As far as the leadership role and the decision making process, I knew he was going to have a great impact because of his prior experience as a drill sergeant and as an enlisted soldier.

"I always like to see quality NCOs make the transition over to the officer arena because I really feel that allows for better improvements in the Army."

Brian R. Voller

First Sgt. Gregory Watlington and Capt. John James explain the proper way to camouflage a rifle to a Soldier during a recent training exercise.

James said he was also happy to find his old friend as his first sergeant because the two felt an instant respect for each other.

"Our team never had to go through that uncomfortable getting-to-know-each-other period that usually happens between a new commander and a first sergeant." James said. "We already new each other's strengths and weaknesses, so there was no wondering about how the other guy was going to operate or what he thinks."

James also said that he and Watlington often times know what the other is thinking or often times, they both have the same idea. He said both of their leadership styles compliment the other's and that allows for Watlington to run the company and for James to command the company.

James said he thinks the most important element of their leading the company together is the example they give to the new Soldiers going through OSUT.

"We are standing examples for all the privates to see," James said. "We allow the Soldiers to see that they can accomplish anything if they have the focus and the goal. The privates see, through us, that they can become rangers or officers or anything if they have the desire."

Members meet at Loyd Elementary School, learn about advances in technology

By Lisa M. Hibbert
Bayonet staff writer

The Fort Benning school board met for its January meeting Monday in Frank R. Loyd Elementary School's Discourse Lab.

The lab, the only one of its kind in the state of Georgia, is equipped with computers at each of the 26 desks that are attached to the teacher's computer. Discourse allows the teacher to ask a question, lets the students key in responses and provides the teacher with immediate access to the entire class's responses.

Although this may be a computerized classroom, the teacher still plays an important role. At the stroke a finger, the teacher learns if the students are understanding the lesson, what percentage understands and gives those students less likely to raise their hands a chance to participate, said Dr. Judy Gilliam, Frank R. Loyd School principal.

Board members had the opportunity to try out the computers as Gilliam gave a short presentation on their use.

The Discourse Lab, as well as computers being available in many other classrooms throughout the post school system, helps Fort Benning increase student proficiency in technology.

The official meeting convened with Col. Michael Bingham, school board president, opening with a review of the December minutes.

The board members approved the November and the December consolidated lunchroom fund statements. The monthly net income for November was $6,018. The current year-to-date income is $21,584. The current fund equity is $133,990.

The monthly net income for December was $12,079. The current year-to-date income is $33,766. The current fund equity is $146,474.

Dr. Dell McMullen, Fort Benning Schools' superintendent, presented her monthly report to the board.

"The Fort Benning Schools Army Communities of Excellence Team, made up of Virginia Wilcox and Earnestine Ezekiel, teachers at Herbert J. Dexter Elementary School; Becky Willoughby and Alice Brown, teachers at Don C. Faith Middle School; Cynthia Kenimer, teacher, and Sharon Ringler, parent at Edward A. White Elementary School; Maria Hampton, Dexter student; and Alice Skinner, director of Logistics and Support, did a fantastic job in presenting a strategic plan to the Presidential Quality Award and the ACOE teams," McMullen said. "In fact, Brig. Gen. Roger Brautigan, ACOE team chief, made a special visit to Dexter to take pictures with Maria."

Loyd Elementary School's Discourse Lab Monday. Desmond Mays (center), son of former Sgt. Freddie and Theresa Ricks, looks on.

Other members at the meeting included: Rhoda Zerger, Dexter Elementary School representative; Sheila Long, Freddie C. Stowers Elementary School representative; Col. Byron Greene III, schools' officer; Lt. Col. Stephanie Willson, schools' attorney; Richard Skinner, assistant superintendent; Robbie Norris, Fort Benning Schools Human Resources site manager; Caroline Myers, president, Benning Education Association; and Stephanie Davis, president, American Federation of Government Employees.

STILL LEARNING

Teachers get a refresher course

Lori Egan
Bayonet staff writer

"Yippee! There's no school today," was said only by the students of Fort Benning Schools, not the teachers.

Fort Benning teachers spent the morning learning new ways to foster enthusiasm for math, science and technology in their students Jan. 24.

The Georgia Youth Science and Technology Centers, Inc., offered workshops for kindergarten through eighth-grade teachers.

Some of the areas covered by the workshop included Activities in Math and Science and Full-Option Science System.

AIMS is designed to help teachers prepare and manage hands-on activities that emphasize learning and enhance critical thinking and problem-solving skills, said Gail Wilson, director of Staff Development.

Julie Celebi, a regional coordinator for GYSTC, conducted the AIMS workshop at Morris R. McBride Elementary School.

These simple and easy-to-make experiments are designed to excite children into learning, she said.

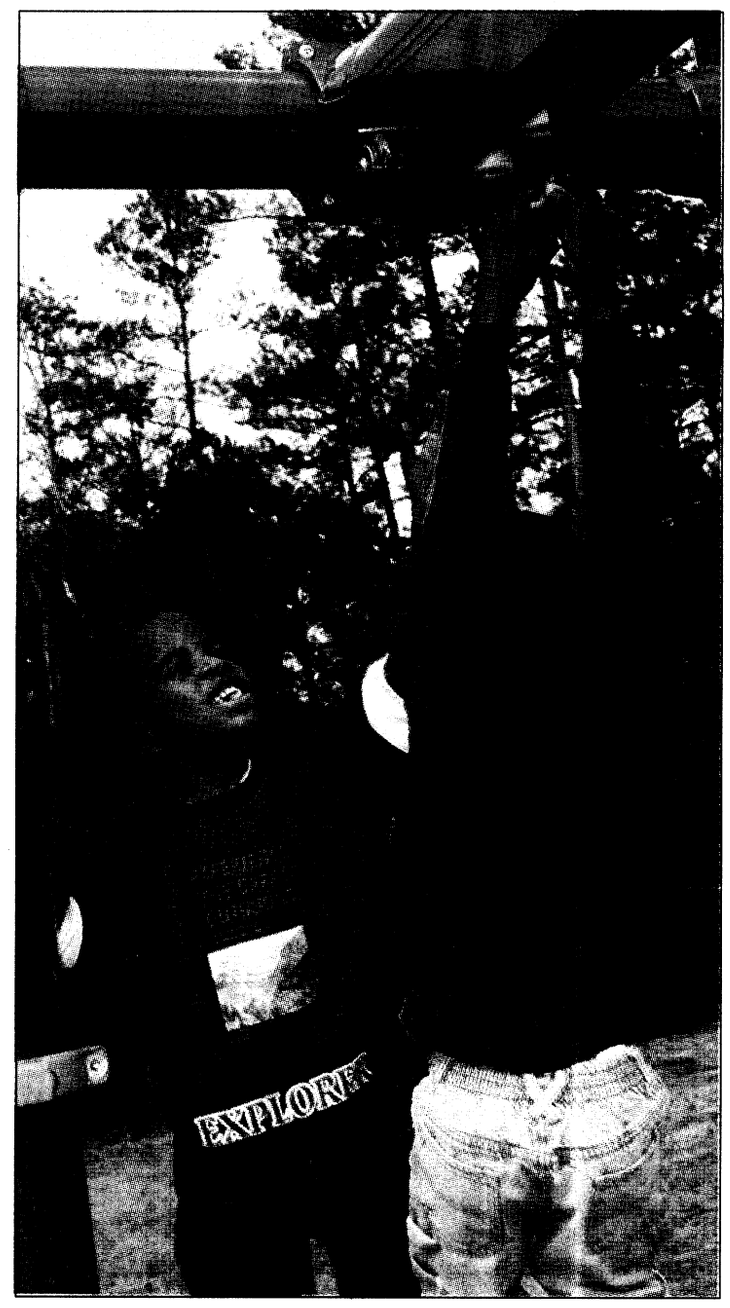
Celebi showed the teachers how to build a sound machine from a paper cup and a string, filtrated polluted water and introduced division using candy.

Beverly Corcoran teaches kindergarten at Richard G. Wilson Elementary School and said the workshop had a lot of good ideas for hands-on activities.

One idea she liked is a guessing jar. Children estimate the number of items in the jar. This activity involves a lot of science and math skills because of the sorting, patterns and counting involved, she said.

"The kids will really enjoy these activities, especially if its food like candy," she said.

"I really enjoyed the workshop," said Jane O'Neal who teaches second grade at Freddie C. Stowers Elementary School. "This workshop was right on grade level and gave me a lot of ideas that are really practical for teaching math."



Lori Egan

Linda Turner who teaches first grade at Herbert J. Dexter Elementary School is finding the center of balance using counter weights.

"The teachers are really excited about the workshop," said Vicki Rogers, principal of Herbert J. Dexter Elementary School. "They get the idea here (in the workshop) and then, with the materials and manuals, they can do the experiments in the classroom with the children."

At Dexter, teachers learned how to find the center of balance using counter weights. This used the FOSS.

The FOSS makes the teaching of science easy for elementary teachers, Wilson said. It offers developmentally appropriate activities for teachers to teach science concepts.

Post to observe Dental Health month

U.S. Army Dental Activity

February is National Children's Dental Health month. The Fort Benning Dental Activity will be celebrating with presentations on how you can help your child maintain a healthy smile at Fort Benning elementary and middle schools.

Several important topics will be discussed, including baby bottle tooth decay, proper brushing and flossing techniques, how dental sealants protect teeth and choosing the right mouth guard for your child.

"With proper care, a balanced diet and regular dental visits, children's teeth can remain healthy," said Dr. Alberto Lugo, Preventive Dentistry officer. "Although water fluoridation has reduced the number of cavities, it's still critical that parents teach their children how to brush and floss and make sure they do a good job."

Lugo said the presentation will provide plenty of time to answer questions on oral health matters.

Seniors leave mark on school with commemorative activities

By Sumika Phillips
Spencer HS newspaper editor

The class of 1997 is working hard to make their last year their best and their junior and senior advisors are working just as hard.

commentary

To me, William H. Spencer High School is one of a few high schools in our county with so much motivation and inspiration for their seniors.

As a 12th grader who has been a Greenwave from the start, I have always looked forward to being able to participate in Junior and Senior Day, the Senior Breakfast and the infamous Senior Skit.

For those of you who have never experienced it, Junior and Senior Day is a day set aside for the 11th- and 12th-grade classes to bid each other farewell. The juniors, in their nice dresses, khakis and dress shirts, say goodbye to the seniors through a unique song chosen and sung by the entire class. The seniors, dressed in white, sing a song of good luck and hope for the future senior class. The day is filled with sentiment, memory and sometimes tears.

Although the Senior Breakfast is a time for the soon-to-be graduates to celebrate with their families as they share breakfast, it cannot begin to compare with the Senior Skit.

For the skit, the seniors get together and write a comical satire about things that happened during the year. Different students portray different teachers and some of their more humorous habits. No harm is intended because it is all done out of love and admiration.

There are many more activities and special times the seniors have, such as the Senior Picnic and Reunion Day, but words cannot describe the emotions and happy times they bring.

Greenwaves have followed tradition for a long time. The most important Spencer tradition is remembering the love and pride in the accomplishments of its senior Greenwaves.

PEER HELPERS

Living up to name, organization assists others

By Aaron Bauknight
Spencer High School

Throughout December, the Peer Helpers, a community service organization, constructed a paper drive for the needy.

Peer helpers placed boxes in every class within the school and personally visited each homeroom and informed students of this worthy cause. They met their goal by collecting more than 280 items and took them to the House of Mercy, a homeless shelter located in Columbus.

The group collected paper plates, paper towels, coloring books, toilet paper, notebook paper, Christmas cards and folders.

Cleo Griswould, 11th-grade guidance counselor and one of the peer advisors at William H. Spencer, came up with the idea of a Paper Drive.

"The athletic department and the Y-Club already had food drives going on, and we wanted to do something different," Griswould said.

The peer helpers and advisors would like to thank everyone who contributed to the paper drive — it was a great success.

Y-Club says 'Why not' to community involvement

Club members do what they can to help others, give of themselves

By Priscilla Gardener
Spencer High School

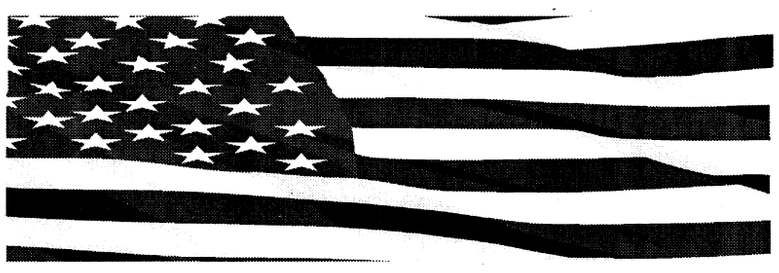
William H. Spencer's Y-Club can only be defined as a club designed to encourage positivity, community service and fun. Each month, Y-Club members meet and try to think of projects that can help the community, Spencer High School and its students. So far this year, the projects have been very successful.

Beginning with the first project in September, Y-Club members decided to hold a coat drive to help the needy feel a little more comfortable during the winter.

To help the teachers feel a little more comfortable at school, club members made them some edible treats.

October meant Halloween candy for some, but for the Y-Club, it meant a donation to the Children's Advocacy Fund of Columbus. The club also helped with Spencer's Hispanic Heritage program.

In November, the club sponsored a food drive for the House of Mercy, a homeless shelter in Columbus, and in December, Y-Club members dressed as Santa, and gave toys to the needy.

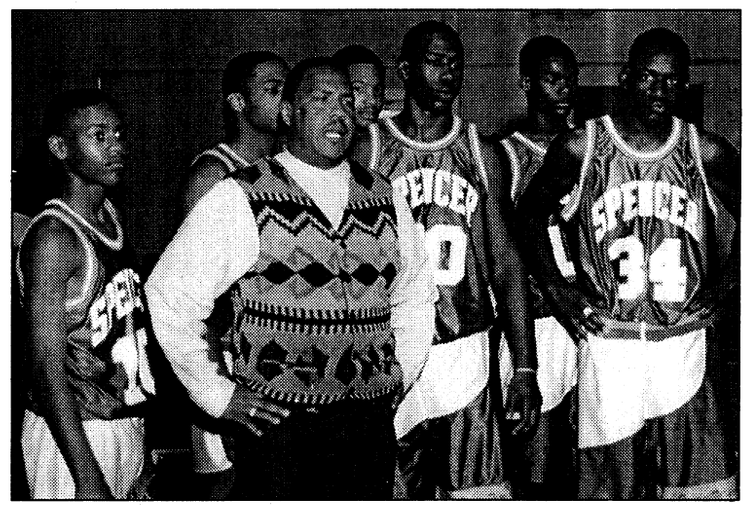


Y-Club members kicked off the new year by visiting children in the pediatric ward of a local hospital.

Hopefully, under the guidance of advisors John Gillis and Greta Lanier, the Y-Club will accomplish even more during the rest of 1997.

Be all you can be with Spencer's JROTC program

Aaron Bauknight
Spencer High School



"Motivating young people to become better Americans" is the motto of William H. Spencer High School's Junior Reserve Officer Training Corps program, currently under the supervision of Col. Thomas Fluker and 1st Sgt. Odel Hardimon.

Students enrolled in this program learn how to be better Americans by taking such classes as leadership, citizenship and American military history. After school, Fulcher and Hardimon teach the cadets repelling and drill formations.

Spencer has received the Honor Unit with Distinction Award for the past 17 years. To receive this, the students participate in an inspection during which the cadet command must maintain at least a 92 percentile.

"Our JROTC program is definitely within the top three," Hardimon said when asked if Spencer had the best JROTC program in the city. "This is possible because our advisors are very encouraging."

Waves float by Cherokees

By Kimberly Boynton
Journalism teacher, Spencer HS

The Spencer Greenwaves washed over the Kendrick Cherokees with a 20-point victory Jan. 10.

High scorer for the game was Travis Ingram who scored a total of 31 points. Behind him was Darvell Hudson who showed why he is a crowd favorite when he slammed three dunks in the faces of the Kendrick Cherokees.

Spencer's battle was even stronger with its starting players Wason Davis, Clyde Wormley, Ben Fluellen and Desmond Artis, putting up big points and playing tight defense the entire game.

The greenwaves finished the game with a convincing 78-55 victory.

Student voices concern over recent legalization of Marijuana for ill patients

By Martin Roberson
Spencer High School

Recently, citizens in Arizona and California voted to legalize marijuana for use by ill patients with AIDS or glaucoma to ease their pain. What, legalize marijuana?

commentary

Most critics strongly oppose this new law and agree that it will have a negative effect on citizens in the United States. In a country where the government struggles to succeed in the war against drugs, the citizens of Arizona and California contrarily made these efforts seem meaningless and comical.

This decision is an embarrassment for the country and makes one wonder in which direction the United States is headed. Legalizing marijuana could cause more use of the drug and spark interest among people to try the drug since it is legalized.

Many people seem to ignore the side effects of the drug, which is not a very wise thing to do. Marijuana harms the memory by possibly causing amnesia. It reduces the sperm count in males, decreases fertility in females and it also is a cause of cancer.

Why get high for a short time while risking the long-term effects of cancer and not being able to produce new life? It' s just not worth it. Users may not see the effects now, but they will definitely get a taste of their own medicine later. Only time will tell when.

Principal wishes students well

commentary

Please allow me to take this opportunity to wish you a happy new year. I sincerely hope that this year, thus far, has been safe and enjoyable for you.

As principal of William H. Spencer High School, I would like to extend a special welcome to all of our incoming military students. If you are in need of assistance, please do not hesitate to call on me.

The primary objective of Spencer High School is to develop the total student and, with your participation and cooperation, this objective can and will be accomplished.

Again, welcome to Spencer High School, home of the Mighty Greenwaves!

Directorate of Public Works

Your first stop at Fort Benning may very well be a visit to the Directorate of Public Works' Community Home Finding Relocation and Referral Services Office.

The CHRRS staff will work with you in finding off-post apartments and houses. Anna Wilson is the chief of the Community Home Finding Relocation and Referral Service Office, better known as "CHEERS."

CHRRS is located in Building 2621 in Soldiers' Plaza, its phone number is 545-3921 or 545-6610, and its fax number is 545-3393. The CHRRS program is available to the following personnel:

•All active duty military personnel and their family members; and

•Department of Defense employees incident to a permanent change in duty station.

Some of the different services CHRRS provides assistance in include: when you have a permanent change of duty station, permissive temporary duty, or when changing your off-post residence (apartment or house); transportation to visit available rental housing; and developing a rental or lease agreement to verify conformance to state laws, regulations and inclusion of a military clause, stating that military members may be released from a lease upon receipt of permanent change of station orders.

CHRRS also provides lists of rental or sales housing units, information on local schools and community amenities, information on the Army's Equal Opportunity in Off-Post Program if you experience discrimination in obtaining housing and information on housing under restrictive sanction — housing that may not be rented by military personnel.

The "CHRRS" office has expanded their services to include the Home Estimate Program and Permanent Change of Station House Express. For more information about these programs, call Anna Wilson at 545-3921.

New items offered by the self help center:

The Directorate of Public Works, Self Help (U-DO-IT) Center, Building 385, now has biodegradable lawn and leaf bags for family housing residents. These bags are part of the installation's Yard Waste Program for grass cuttings and leaves. We encourage residents to use these paper bags in place of plastic; mandatory use of these bags will begin March 3. Residents can receive up to 10 bags per visit. For more information, call your Self Help Center at 545-3963.

Questions and Answers:

Questions or issues may be referred by phone to Glenn Todd, DPW customer relations specialist, at 545-2117, or by writing to Directorate of Public Works, Building 6, Room 409, ATTN: ATZB-PWM (Glenn Todd), Fort Benning, 31905

Q: 1996 W-2s will arrive today year. I am short of money this year and should be due a refund of about $300, the amount I got back last year.

I see lots of ads offering a "quick tax refund" in just 10 days. I kno· 'he Army offers tax help. Wh· 'an't you get the money in ·hree or four days like the tax service?

A: The Army does offer a tax assistance service, which includes electronic filing of returns. It does not offer the "quick" tax refund. To understand why, you have to know how the system works.

First, taxes are prepared by a commercial preparer for a fee or by the tax office at no charge. The return can be mailed in, or it can be filed electronically. If it is mailed in, it will take about eight weeks to receive the $300 refund.

To speed up the process, the Internal Revenue Service allows electronic filing, which is the filing of returns using computer modem transmission. A return filed electronically may be filed by a commercial preparer, generally for a fee, or by the tax office at no charge. It will take two to three weeks on average to receive your refund.

American free enterprise entered the picture by offering the refund anticipation loan. With this loan, a bank agrees to loan a tax filer money based upon the security of the tax refund check. The bank and the tax preparer share a fee for this loan, and the tax filer signs over his tax refund in a power of attorney.

Most tax preparation services advertise all three of these services at once, although they are usually charged separately. A tax client comes in and is charged a fee for tax preparation.

If he or she desires to file electronically, he or she is again charged a fee in most cases. If he or she wants to take out a refund anticipation loan, he or she will fill out a loan application and a power of attorney and pay another fee charged for the use of the money.

The tax preparer electronically files the return and gives the client his or her refund, less the amount of the charges in approximately three days. He or she then waits two to three weeks until the IRS sends a refund. This is a legal process based upon the desire of the client to get his or her money in a hurry.

However, what are you really paying for and is it worth it to you? In most cases, the answer is no.

First, what will you pay? The average cost for tax preparation, electronic filing and a refund anticipation loan is more than $100.

Second, how much time are you saving with this loan? The average time for a refund is between 12 and 21 days, so the loan is for nine to 18 days. If you were expecting $300 refund, that means that you will receive about $200 after the three-day wait. This charge is one-third of the refund, so it seems as if you are paying a rate of 33 percent interest to get the money.

However, because you are only borrowing the money for about 21 days, the annual effective rate of interest is more than 500 percent. Most of us would pass up a loan that had that kind of interest.

The Army does not offer the refund anticipation loan, but it does offer tax preparation and electronic filing at no cost to identification cardholders. Using the tax office, you wait 14 to 21 days to get the entire $300 refund in the example above.

If you are willing to wait for your money, two Fort Benning tax offices open today. The Main Post Tax Office is located in Building 4, Classroom 1, Infantry Hall. The Main Post Tax Office hours of operation are 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Monday through Friday until April 15.

The Kelley Hill Tax Office is located in Building 9025. It's office hours are Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Friday from 1 until 5 p.m. and Thursdays from 3 to 7 p.m.

Believers must remember to trust God

By Vance P. Theodore
USAIC Chaplains Office

As I turned the corner and was walking down the hall, a friend of mine asked me if I had heard the Girl Scouts had taken God out of their oath.

reflections

I replied, "No, I haven't."

"Pretty soon, Chaplain, they will be removing God from the dollar bill and we will only be left with 'In we trust.'"

He chuckled and quickly walked off down the hall. It took me a moment to comprehend just what he was saying.

"In we trust." Does that mean we will only trust in "we?" What would the world be like if we only trusted in "we?"

I thought back to January 1991 in the deserts of Saudi Arabia where a Soldier had asked me, "Chaplain, do you trust in God, and if so, is there really a God?" I answered yes to both questions.

He walked away, but before he did, he asked me to keep a letter for him. "You know what to do with it if anything happens to me." The conversation was short, but that Soldier walked away with hope.

How many times have I personally asked God for help? What would the world be like if God were replaced with just "we?" If we take God out of our lives, in moments of grief or doubt, where would our comfort come from?

"Oh my God," said in a moment of wretched uncertainty, perhaps would be exchanged by a moment of silence with no hope. The question "Is God dead?" which invoked an outcry in the 60s, would not be a thing to ponder.

"So help me, God," would be replaced with "So help me."

"God willing" would be replaced with nothing. The removal of God from the Pledge of Allegiance would change it from "one nation under God," to simply "one nation." God, that being from whom hope, comfort and faith are derived, would be replaced with a simple humanistic "we."

The chaplain's regimental crest carries the Latin saying, "Pro Deo et Patria (for God and country)." If we took God out of our motto, maybe there would be no chaplaincy.

The concept of rendering unto Caesar those things that are of Caesar and unto God those things that pertain to God would have no validity.

As I turned to go into my office, I shuddered to think what would happen if God were replaced in our lives or simply removed from the symbols which have made this country great.

I did not verify if, indeed, what the Soldier had told me was true. However, I hoped that it was not.

Perhaps our country is moving toward a state of "we." If this is so, then an Old Testament Scripture (Joshua 24:15) would seem a necessary reminder to a country that has always believed in God. "As for me and my house, 'we' will serve the Lord. "

BEING A CHRISTIAN

Salvation is free but not cheap

By Harry C. Huey Jr.
2nd Battalion, 58th Infantry Regiment

Dietrich Bonhoffer understood authentic Christianity often carries a very high price tag. He wrote a book titled "The Cost of Discipleship." Bonhoffer backed up his words with his life.

reflections

As a Christian pastor in Germany in World War II, he resisted the Nazi government. He was martyred in prison by the Gestapo, and he paid with his life the cost of obedience to Christ.

In the West today, we rarely have to pay a high price in order to follow Christ. Jesus' words in Luke 14:25-35 are a jarring reminder that sometimes true Christianity is extremely hard.

Jesus stated the cost of following him in two ways. First, he said to be his disciple means loving him more than you love your family and your own life.

Think of that ... what a demand! To follow Jesus means loving him more than you love your parents, spouse and children. To be a Christian means loving Jesus more than you love your own dreams and existence.

Second, Jesus said that to be his disciple means daily serving others while putting aside your own self-interests. Those two demands are incredibly high.

Jesus went on to say that we must consider those demands before we put our faith in him as our Lord and follow him. He gave two illustrations of the point that we should carefully consider before putting our faith in him.

The first illustration is of a man building a tower. The builder must first decide if he has enough money to complete the tower. The second illustration is of a king whose army is outnumbered two to one by an oncoming enemy. That king must decide whether or not he is willing to go to battle against such odds.

Each illustration makes the point that the decision to follow Christ must be carefully considered. Are we willing to pay the price of loving Jesus more than our family and our own lives? Are we willing to pay the price of putting our self-interests to death and serving others in the name of Christ?

Putting our faith in Jesus as our savior and Lord is not an off-the-cuff decision.

Jesus also tossed in the point that we must love him more than we love our possessions. He knew, and knows, how attached we become to our stuff. He said that being his disciple, being a Christian, means loving him more than we love our most prized possessions.

Jesus closed by making the point that loving him and loving and serving others is necessary to true Christianity. He asked if salt doesn't make things salty, then what good is it? It's useless and should be thrown out.

Jesus' point is that if you profess to be a Christian, yet you don't love him before all others, and you do not love and serve others before yourself, then it is not certain that you are a Christian at all.

There is no genuine Christianity without loving him first and foremost and loving and serving others before yourself. That is an incredibly high price to pay.

Salvation and the forgiveness of sins can't be earned by us. Only Christ has earned salvation and the forgiveness of sins. We receive that only through faith in him. Yet true faith in Christ is seen minute-by-minute in our willingness to pay the price of following Jesus.

Finding comfort in the Word of God

By Tim Atkinson
203d FSB, 317th Engineer Battalion

"I tell you the truth, if you have faith as small as a mustard seed, you can say to this mountain, 'Move from here to there' and it will move. Nothing will be impossible for you (Matt.17:21)."

reflections

When I get ready to deploy to a training exercise, I try to prepare my family for my departure. My faith in God in my present situation and throughout my life has been a comfort.

Soldiers often leave their families for deployments. Through those times of separation, I believe faith in God can see the families and the Soldiers through.

The verse above expresses the power a believer in God potentially has. It's not power to never encounter problems, such as deployments, but power to overcome and to move the obstacles that hinder us from overcoming.

To have the comfort of faith, a believer needs to nurture his or her faith. God and the farmer must nurture seeds with soil, water, fertilizer and sunshine in order for them to grow properly. How important it is for us to nurture our faith.

Jesus said if we have faith as a small mustard seed, we could move mountains. God did not say only the faith giants, or ministers, or perfect people can use faith to overcome.

I believe that anyone who declares his or her trust in Christ can live victoriously. We can have victory over sin, as well as the problems in life. As in physical exercise, if we do not use our muscles, they lose their strength, so it is with our faith.

We must nurture our faith with the hearing of the proclaimed word, the studied word and the applied word. We must use our faith, trusting God to conquer the problems of life — not just in our life. We must also trust God as we reach out to help others and he will help us more.

The Scriptures say that faith works by love. Without a loving, forgiving and giving heart, our faith will not work (Mark 11:2224).

Another place in the Scriptures, Jesus compares life to two builders. One builds his house on sand, and the other digs down to the rock foundation and starts his house. When the storm beats against the first house, it collapses. When it beats against the one with a good foundation, it stands strong.

Jesus said that the person who hears his words and obeys them is the wise builder (Luke 6:46-49). For the comfort of a secure life, we do not need great faith, just growing faith, like a planted seed in Spring.

Last year, I, along with several other chaplains from Fort Benning, had the opportunity to go to the Promise Keepers Ministers Conference in Atlanta. More than 40,000 ministers gathered, sang, repented of denominational and racial barriers, prayed for each other and for revival.

This miracle gathering of ministers, nurturing their faith in God and their skills with their families, was a real encouragement to me. Jesus said if two or three gather in his name and agree, he would be there (Matt. 18:19-20).

He emphasizes the power of agreement. These ministers were relying on each other's faith for support to be men they knew God wanted them to be. As you and I plant our faith, nurture it and find the faith agreement with others, nothing will be impossible for us.

Maria Hampton (middle) displays the book she wrote and the plaque she received from Brig. Gen. Roger Brautigan, leader of the Army Communities of Excellence evaluation team, with her family, Maj. Scott Hampton, her mom, Kristi, and her sister, Kaia.

Young author

The Army Communities of Excellence evaluation team visited Herbert J. Dexter Elementary School Jan. 24 to award 10-year-old Maria Hampton, daughter of Kristi and Maj. Scott Hampton, 1st Battalion, 38th Infantry Regiment, with a coin and plaque because she wrote a picture book about the friends she has made during her time in an Army family. Maria wrote the book as part of a holiday Christmas assignment.

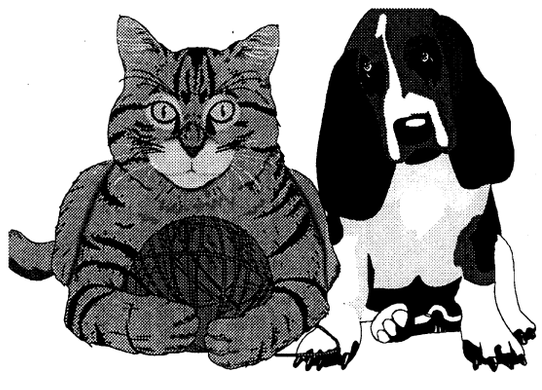
Beware of parasites infecting your pet

Veterinary Services



Intestinal parasites are creatures that can reside in the intestinal tract of animals and humans. There are several different types of worms your animal, and in some cases you, can come in contact with. The following is a listing of the most common types found in this part of the country:

•Tapeworms — These worms belong to a group called the segmented worms. They can be recognized as small white "rice grains" (worm segments) either in the animal's feces or attached to the hair around the animal's tail. They are usually the only worm the owner actually sees.

Tapeworms are transmitted by animals eating fleas — which carry the immature form of the worm — or by eating worm segments directly. If an animal has repeated treatments for tapeworms, it's usually an indication of a flea problem.

•Hookworms — Hookworms feed like vampires. They have very sharp "teeth" that they use to hook onto the intestinal lining (hence their name) and suck blood. Weight loss (or failure to gain in spite of normal appetite) and severe blood loss (anemia) may result. Large numbers of hookworms are a very serious problem in any animal of any size, but especially in young animals.

Hookworm eggs are passed out in an infected animal's feces. These eggs hatch out and the immature hookworms (larvae) can survive in the environment (i.e. grass blades in your yard) until they come in contact with a dog or cat, which they can infect by being eaten off the grass or by penetrating the skin and working their way to the intestines. Hookworm larvae can penetrate human skin, and in large numbers, can cause a severe, itchy skin rash. Young children, whose hygienic habits are still developing, are at special risk.

•Roundworms — Found very commonly in young animals, these worms are usually found in large numbers in the intestines and interfere with the animals' absorbing nutrients from their food. They may also cause serious intestinal blockages called impactions.

Animals with a heavy roundworm infection (again, especially puppies and kittens) have a characteristic "pot belly" and fail to gain weight despite a normal appetite.

•Whipworms — Another bloodfeeding worm, whipworm infections take more time to eliminate because they develop into adult worms very slowly, and most dewormers kill the adult whipworms only. Their eggs, which are again passed in the feces, are very resistant to the environment and can be present in a yard for many months, so it is possible for animals to be re-infected.

Heavy whipworm infections can take a severe toll on an animal — weight loss, diarrhea and blood in the feces and severe blood loss may result.

•Coccidia — Not worms, but microscopic organisms, coccidial infections can cause severe diarrhea — sometimes bloody — and weight loss. Coccidia are shed in the feces in very high numbers and must be treated aggressively through a combination of medical therapy and good environmental sanitation (clean food and water dishes, clean water sources) or pets can continue to be reinfected.

In the southern United States especially, intestinal parasites are very common in companion animals. A fecal screening test at your pet's yearly checkup is recommended to help protect them from the problems associated with these parasites. Prevention is the key to a healthy, happy pet.

Runners win medals at Cookie Run

By John W. Peeler
Special to the Bayonet©

Cookies, balloons, concession stands, Girl Scouts and area runners crowded the streets and grounds at Weracoba (Lakebottom) Park Saturday to help kick off the annual Girl Scout Cookie Drive.

Runners from Fort Benning had no problem hanging in with the other runners from around the area. Six runners from Fort Benning finished in the top three spots in the age division breakdown.

Former Brookstone High School and University of Georgia track team member David Lasseter left competitors in his wake in the 1.5-mile run finishing with a time of 7 minutes and 37 seconds, more than one minute ahead of second place finisher Brad Parker who finished at 8:51. The third place finisher was 46-year-old Andy Harp with a time of 9:36.

Fort Benning's Paul Fry finished in 10th place over all, and second in his age division, with a time of 11:44.

Fort Benning's Girl Scout Troop 216 had a tremendous showing, winning nine medals in their respective events.

Through several fund-raising events, the girls raised enough money to compete in the race for the second year in a row with 99 percent of the troop participating.

"The parents, brothers and sisters also played a big role in support of the girls," said Katherine Carter, troop leader.

Girl Scouts from the troop earning medals were Tanisha Young finishing in first place in the 7- to 8-year-old division with a time of 15:35. Scout teammate Krystal Carter won second place in the same age division, finishing at 15:39.

Darryl Hunter won second place, finishing with a time of 11:21 in the 12- to 14-year-old division.

Trevor Simmons finished at 28:31 in the 25- to 29-year-old division.

Ronald Mckinney finished in second place at 22:53 in the 30- to 34-year-old division, and troop leader Carter finished in second place with a time of 15:11.

Jeff Snow and Dennis Fitzwater finished in first and second place in the 35- to 39-year-old age group at 15:50 and 19:15 respectively.

Keyla Williams of Daisy Troop 23 also ran with Girl Scout Troop 216, winning a first place medal in the 5- to 6-year-old division with a time of 16:20.

Runners get out of the starting blocks during the Girl Scout "Run for the Cookies" Saturday at Weracoba Park. More than 400 runners competed in the 1.5 mile race.

In the 5-kilometer race, Liam Collins of Columbus finished in first place at 15:27 in the male division, followed by U.S. Army Medical Department Activitiy's John Detro at 15:43 and Tim Loonis at 16:14.

In the women's division, Connie Robertson finished in first place with a time of 18:08, followed by Jodie Bock in second place at 18:48, followed by Jennifer Yancey in third place at 19:31.

In the female masters division, Roxann Suits finished first with a time of 22:18, and Noncommissioned Officer Academy's Lloyd McDonald finished in first in the male masters division at 16:55.

McDonald is one of the runners who competed in the Army 10-Miler in Alexandra, Va., last year and is a member of the Fort Benning Army 10-Miler team.

Other Fort Benning runners finishing in the top three positions of their age divisions were 7-year-old Brett Hinds finishing in first place in the 7- to 8-year-old male division at 26:11; Aileen Maorales finishing in second place in the 9- to 11-year-old female division at 26:55; Stephanie Fry finishing in first place in the 15- to 19-year-old female division with a time of 20:51; Max Boswell in first place in the men's 25- to 29-year-old division at 17:12, and Gregory Camp, Fort Benning's former chief of staff, captured first place in the 50- to 54-year-old male division with a time of 20:08.

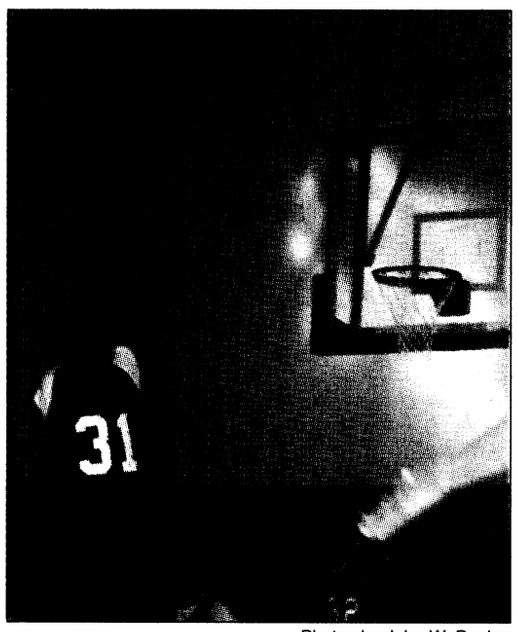
Hall of Fame tickets available

Columbus RedStixx and Cottonmouths

The Chattahoochee Valley Sports Hall of Fame announced Tuesday that tickets for the second annual induction ceremony are now available to the public for $35. Honorees will be inducted Feb. 8 at 7 p.m. at the Columbus Convention and Trade Center.

Tickets can be purchased at the RedStixx offices at Golden Park from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Dress attire is requested.

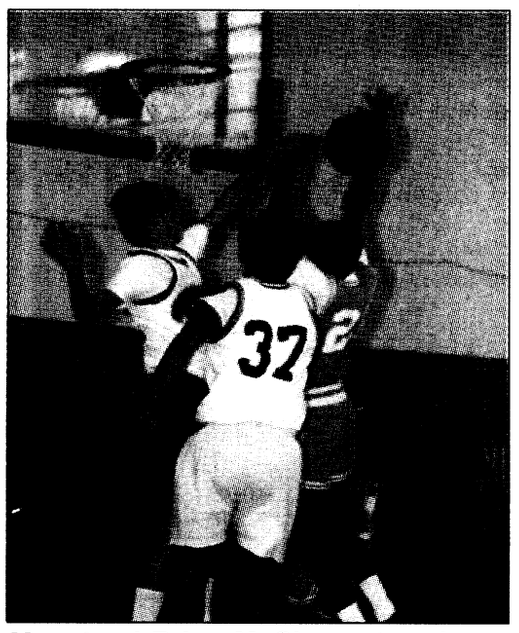
The 1997 class include Cecil Darby, a longtime Ledger Enquirer sports writer and sports editor, former running back for the Cleveland Browns and Spencer High School star Earnest Green, Southern Open founder G. Gunby Jordan, former Columbus mayor and Jordan High School coach B.F. Register and two-time Olympic Gold medalist and shooting athlete Lones Wigger Jr.



The 1997 class joins last year's honorees of Harvey Glance, Jack Hughston, Larry Mize, Nate Odomes and Frank Thomas.

The guest speaker for the event will be Furman Bisher. Bisher is currently a sports columnist for the Atlanta Journal Constitution and former editor of the Atlanta Journal and Atlanta Constitution.

Bisher has authored seven books and more than 1,000 magazine articles. He has been cited 18 times for excellent sports writing by the Georgia Associated Press and four times by the United Press International.



The Cottonmouths will also be attending the ceremony and will be available for autographs.

YOUTH SERVICES BASKETBALL

Bulls win squeaker 8-4

By John W. Peeler
Special to the Bayonet©

Gary Howard led the Bulls charge with 4 points in a 8-4 victory over the Chicago Bulls in the 6- to 7-year-old division. Damia Lyles led the scoring for the Chicago Bulls with 3 points in the loss.

In the late game, the Yellow Jackets stung the slowed down SuperSonics with a 12-9 win. Marcell Glover led the scoring for the Jackets with 6 points and La-Quon Perryman and Pascal Washington were the high scorers for the SuperSonics with 4 and 3 points respectively.

In the 8- to 9-year-old division, Brandon Jackson scored 8 points to lead the Sixers over the Bulls 11-9. The leading scorer for the Bulls was Kevin Gray with 3 points. In other division action, the Regulators put the Dream Team to sleep with a close 21-18 victory. Raymond Jones led the Regulators with 11 points and Jonathan Cole scored 6 for the Dream Team.

In the division's late game, the Spurs pulled out a squeaker over the Blue Devils 9-7. Taneshia McFadden was the high scorer with 5 points and Ross Brown led the scoring for the Blue Devils with 5 points.

In the 10- to 11-year-old division early game, the Bull Dogs took a bite out of the Blue Devils with a 28-17 victory. In other division play, the Spurs nipped the SuperSonics 28-25. The scoring duo of Joshua Artis and Darion Lyles contributed 10 points each in the victory and Brian Sheppard scored 20 of the 25 SuperSonics points in the loss.

In the divison's late game, the Hurricanes defeated Team 4 by a score of 25-8. Shauncey Lesure was the leading scorer for the Hurricanes with 12 points, and Greg Raymond earned top honors for Team 4 with 8 points.

In the 12- to 15-year-old division's early game, the Monstars slipped past the Celtics 50-48 on the scoring Cris Humphries who had 16 points. Omar Rodriguez kept the Celtics close, scoring 18 points in the loss.

In other action, the Magics defeated the Lakers 40-36. Roland Lusane was the leading scorer for the Magics with 18 points and Nathanial Sanderson led the Lakers with 12 points.

In the divisions late game, Jarvis Scott scored 14 points to lead the Tarheels to a 46-41 victory over the Orange Men. Reggie McFadden put up 23 points for the Orange Men in the loss.

More basketball action is scheduled Saturday at the Youth Services Main Post Gym beginning at 9 a.m.

OUTDOORS

Anglers pursue their catch with high-tech accuracy

Outdoors Sportsman

While the miniaturization of Global Positioning System electronics, both in size and price, has attracted a lot of attention from sportsmen and anglers, there has also been a trend toward more powerful and sophisticated products. This trend is most evident in the latest generation of cartographic chartplotters.

Charter captains and long-range cruisers were the first to utilize these cartographic chartplotters. In essence, these devices reproduce navigation charts electronically on a screen about the size of a laptop computer. Different charts are available in the form of cartridges and they contain a wealth of information and detail on marinas, navigation buoys and markers, water depth contours and shorelines — letting you "see" where you are at all times.

When combined with the accuracy and position and location capabilities of GPS, cartographic chartplotters provide an even greater degree of safety while enhancing the fishing success of anglers anywhere in the world.

According to the experts at Magellan Systems, growing numbers of saltwater and freshwater fishermen are adding this new technology to their boats. Map cartridges are available for all the coastal areas of the United States, Canada and the Great Lakes, as well as the Hawaiian Islands and the Caribbean.

"Whether you're making a run to the Bahamas or fishing the Thousands Islands in upstate New York, chartplotters let you graphically see where you are at all times, 24 hours a day, regardless of weather or sea conditions," said Margaret Goodall, marketing manager for one of the systems.

"Better yet, they let you store the locations of productive fishing areas for future reference when you're trolling offshore for sailfish or casting for small-mouth bass around the Great Lakes," she said. "With the detail available on each map cartridge, when it's time to head home, there's no guess work in finding harbor channels, inlets or navigation aids. Navigation is quick and easy to do."

For all their sophistication, cartographic chartplotters are easy to use and operate. In addition to improving your fishing, these units can save time and money. For long-range cruises, such as a run from Miami to the Bahamas, the chartplotter will accept input from the boat's speed log and calculate the effect of current on course and bearing. By keeping a more direct course, you save time and fuel.

Offshore anglers will appreciate the ability to project waypoints when looking for charted wrecks and reefs. They can also use the nearest waypoint search function to find recorded locations that have been saved in memory. Sunrise and sunset calculations and lunar projections help them determine tides and optimum fishing times.

You won't yet find cartographic chartplotters in the sub-$200 range. Expect to pay about $999 for some models. The map cartridges are an additional investment. However, the ability to confidently and safely navigate anywhere in the world makes this a practical investment.

Handgun hunting offers renewed challenges

Outdoors Sportsman

Firearms that just a few years ago would not have been taken seriously for hunting are now earning their keep in the field. Shooters combine outstanding new small- and large-caliber handgun technology with precision optics to put renewed challenge back in a favorite of generations past — handgun hunting.

commentary

Small game, such as rabbits and squirrels, are generally available in the majority of states and they present an inexpensive, exciting way to horse hunting skills for any bigger game that may await down the line.

Handgun manufacturers now offer a wide range of small game firearms in .22 caliber. In fact, most companies make many different revolvers and semiautomatics that are perfect for small-game pursuits.

The next step up might be a .357-, .41- or .44-caliber Magnums handgun equipped with matching optics. A scope-fitted handgun with this much Magnum force will be sufficient to bring down most North American big game.

For those hunters who are a bit apprehensive about big bore handguns, a visit to a favorite firearms dealer should calm those concerns. Another way is to spend some time with an expert at your local shooting range. Remember, there is no question too trivial when the subject is handgun hunting.

More often than not, novice hunters find shooting the new, refined big bore handguns isn't intimidating at all. In fact, modern optics and ammunition make these firearms far more accurate and efficient than they were in the past. Because they are a more dependable hunting tool, the number of handgun hunters has risen in recent years.

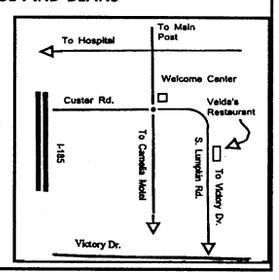
Choosing ammunition is much like choosing a firearm — it comes down to personal preference.

There may be a hundred different loads on the market that are approved for a particular firearm and each has benefits depending on the application.

Hunters should start out with basic, dependable ammo and, as shooting skills improve, test different types of ammunition to determine which are the most reliable, accurate and offer the most confidence to the shooter.

Today's choices make it easy to find just the right combination of caliber, style, optics and ammo for any type of hunting and terrain.

Local dealers advise hunters on the proper combination that fits his or her needs.



After making the choice, spend plenty of time at the shooting range. Learn the limits of the handgun and develop shooting skills that extend across a wide variety of distances, topographic challenges and physical tests. Most of all, the experts urge hunters to hunt and shoot safely.

Fort Benning hits 'Primetime' on music channel

By Marc G. Turchin
USAIC Public Affairs Office

In an unusual turn of events, two unlikely organizations recently came together and worked for a common goal — to promote actual Army life and training.

The Army's Recruiting Command recruited MTV to help dispel the misconceptions about the Army.

MTV planned to do that by sending a video jockey, or VJ, here to report about the variety of things Soldiers do in their day-to-day life.

"We are here to show the real side of the Army," said VJ Simon Rex.

"People seem to have misconceptions about the way (Soldiers) live on a (post)."

Because movies and television portray Soldiers in certain ways, people think that's the way it is in real life, according to Ed Capuano, MTV producer, who oversaw the filming.

Capuano said when a lot of people think of the Army, all they see in their minds are drill sergeants screaming, Soldiers living in barracks and "a very cold, impersonal life."

"The reality of it," Capuano said, "is everyone here is a person and there's personality and there's fun and smiling, and at the same time, there's seriousness and respect for the job that everyone is doing. These are people — not machines."

Rex said it's important for the country to know what is really going on with the military.

"Americans should know what the service is doing, you are the one who is going to go fight for our country."

Rex also said he sees this as a chance to help in recruiting.

"We want the kids who watch MTV to get a better idea of what it's (Army life) about."

Capt. Max S. Muramoto of Headquarters, U.S. Army Recruiting Command, Fort Knox, Ky., said this was done as part of the advertising the Recruiting Command does on the music channel.

"We advertise heavily on MTV to reach our prime market," Muramoto said.

He said MTV offered to do some segments from an Army installation as a benefit for Army recruiting to demonstrate how Soldiers live.

Part of a Soldier's life includes training for the defense of the country and Rex witnessed many types of Army training.

He and the MTV crew filmed Bradley Fighting Vehicles training with Soldiers from 3rd Brigade, 3rd Infantry Division (Mechanized), watched as airborne students practiced and jumped from a C-130 aircraft and got a chance to "own the night" at the post's night fighting facility.

Muramoto said Fort Benning was chosen because of the diversity of training located here.

"We needed a place that was relatively warm, plus we needed a mix of several different aspects of the Army," Muramoto said.

> "Everybody here at Fort Benning is here to defend my right to be a free person."
> — Ed Capuano
> MTV producer

Rex said he more than enjoyed himself while filming on post.

"Riding in the Bradley was really cool ... also the C-130 was impressive. To go up and open the doors, I don't think I've ever done anything like that before," Rex said.

Although Rex had a good time filming on post, what goes on here on a daily basis is serious work in the eyes of Capuano.

He said it reminds him of a quote from the movie "A Few Good Men." Although that movie is about Marines, Jack Nicholson's quote about "living under the flag of freedom that they provide," brings the military and what the military stands for into focus, Capuano said.

"Everybody here at Fort Benning is here to defend my right to be a free person," Capuano said.

After spending nearly three days with Soldiers and seeing them train, Rex's perception of the Army changed drastically.

"It's a lot more cool than I thought," he said. "It's not totally strict, (the Soldiers) have a good time and even laugh with the sergeants or who ever is in command.

"There's definitely an authoritative attitude, but it's a lot more laid back than I thought, without being slackey or anything."

Rex described some of the training here as "hard labor," which pales in comparison to the work schedule he keeps back in New York.

In most cases, Rex said, he only works 9 a.m. to noon. That includes music research, video taping his introduction segments and anything else. But while on post, he and the crew worked from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m.

With the filming completed, Muramoto said he hopes kids have a better idea what the Army experience is all about after the segments air. He also said no other MTV filming sessions are being planned, but he said nothing is ever concrete.

The segments are scheduled to air during MTV's "Prime Time" Monday through Thursday and again Feb. 15.

Taxes '96

It's that time of year again.
The Bayonet's annual tax supplement in this issue provides helpful tax information for Fort Benning Soldiers.

Black History Month

Post plans variety of celebratory events

By Lori Egan
Bayonet staff writer

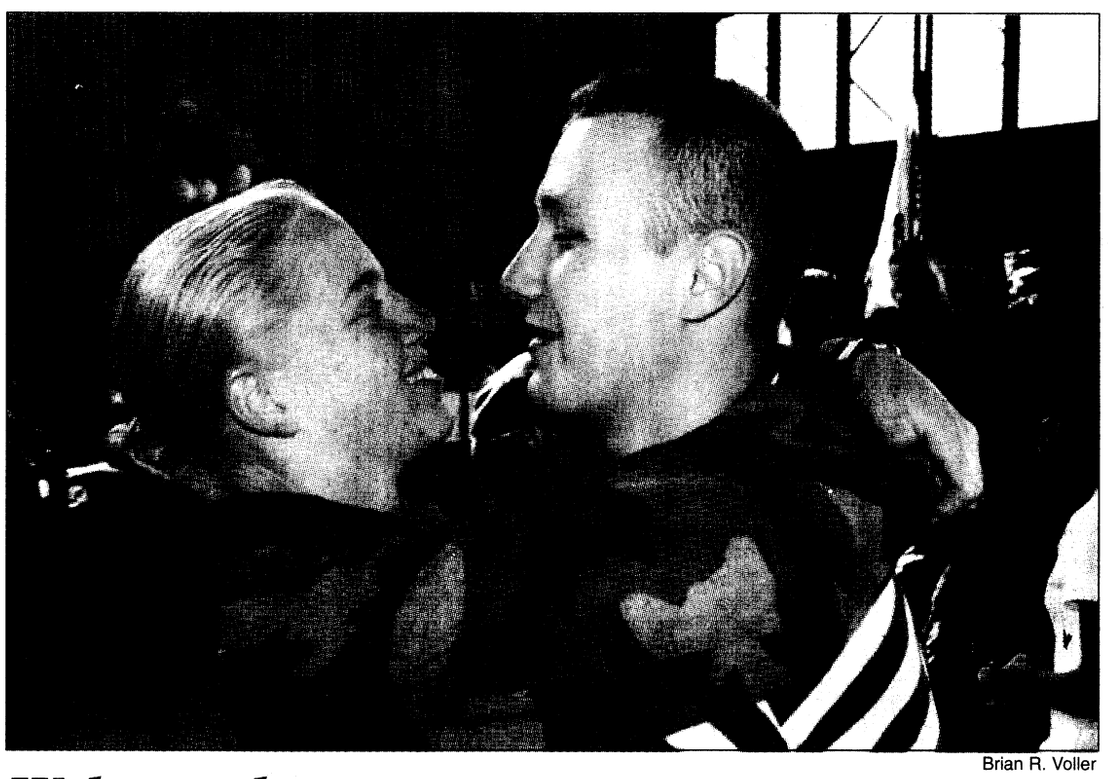
The Equal Opportunity Office will sponsor a Black History Month program in the Henry Caro Noncommissioned Officers Academy Auditorium, Building 880 Tuesday at 11 a.m.

The public is invited and is asked to be seated by 10:50 a.m. Admission is free.

The guest speaker will be retired Col. John C. Holley, president of the Maynard Jackson Youth Foundation, Inc., in Atlanta.

The program includes an interpretive dance by Spencer High School West Africa Dance Troop and musical selections by the M.L. Harris United Methodist Church Praise and Worship Choir.

"The month of February is not the only time to celebrate and learn about black Americans, but this should be done throughout the year," said Sgt. 1st Class Evelyn J. Richardson, Equal Opportunity advisor for 29th Inf. Regt and chairperson for Black History Month. "Like all Americans, black Americans have contributed to what America is today.



"It is important to observe all ethnic observances throughout the year," Richardson said, "because learning about others promotes tolerance."

Other activities that are planned during the month include a Black History Program at the Sand Hill Theater 3 Thursday at 1:30 p.m. For more information, call Sgt. 1st Class Paul Horton at 544-9656.

Martin Army Community Hospital plans to conduct a Black History Month program Feb. 21 at 2 p.m. at the MACH Dining Facility. The guest speaker will be Ken Crooks Jr., president of the National Urban League of Columbus.

The 36th Engineer Group (Combat) plans to present a Black History Month program with the theme of African-American Soldiers: "Past and Present" Feb. 21 at 1:30 p.m. For more information, call Sgt. 1st Class James T. Madison at 545-6596.

The various post dining facilities have planned ethnic meals to serve. The menu includes fried chicken, ham hocks, chitterlings, fried cat fish, pig feet, red rice and collard greens.

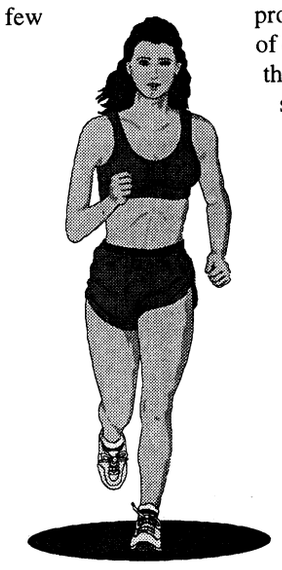
Exercise safety

Increasing number of road-bound athletes present hazards

By Regis Beighley
Directorate of Public Safety



Surveys estimate that over 20 percent of the American population run, walks or jogs as a means to a healthier life. There is concern that the increasing number of people that have taken to the streets are placing themselves in a potentially dangerous environment.

commentary

Motorists, already confronted with crowded roads, do not like sharing the streets with joggers, runners and walkers. Each group seems to annoy and antagonize the other. It is not uncommon to hear reports of motorists and joggers harassing, threatening and, occasionally, assaulting each other.

The following are a few guidelines for safer running, jogging and walking:

•The use of head phones or ear phones while jogging, running or walking on installation roads and streets is prohibited. Your sense of hearing may be vital in alerting you to vehicles or other warnings.

•When possible, keep to the sidewalks, provided you do not interfere with pedestrian traffic. Jogging, walking or running around the block a few times may seem boring, but it provides the same amount of exercise and is far safer than jogging in the streets.

•Always run against the flow of traffic, staying as far to the left as possible, when using roads. This allows you time to spot oncoming cars and get off the road if necessary.

•Avoid streets and roads with heavy traffic. Motorists using congested roads are often preoccupied with other cars and are not alert to joggers, runners and walkers.

•Run in a single-file line when jogging with others. Never jog two, three or four abreast.

•Anticipate dangers. A motorist, unlike a person afoot, cannot stop on a dime. Check traffic before crossing at or between intersections.

•Wear light-colored clothing, especially in the early morning, at dusk or at night. Dark clothing is not seen as soon or as effectively as light-colored garments.

•Always show courtesy to motorists. They control potentially dangerous weapons — vehicles. Joggers, runners and walkers who retaliate against the annoying behavior of some drivers can help build up hostile attitudes in those drivers toward pedestrians.

Courtesy, cooperation and common sense on the roadways of Fort Benning can ensure the safety of everyone.

Teamwork key to working relationships in DOD

By Douglas Gillert
American Forces Press Service

Teamwork is a coat of many colors with diversity interwoven throughout the fabric.

Many players from many backgrounds — cultural, racial, service branches, for example — often comprise the teams we're assigned to in today's joint military environment. Hopefully, we've all learned lessons of synergy and commonality of purpose.

commentary

But what about how military members and civilians get along? As the Department of Defense shrinks, a phenomenon occurs: jobs transfer from the uniformed side of the house to the civilian and contract employee sides, and vice versa.

Today and forevermore, wherever we serve in the military, we most likely will do so within this awkward dichotomy. Awkward, because those in uniform are trained to respect uniformity — i.e., sameness in appearance and adherence to certain protocols and traditions. Not so for their civilian counterparts — and many Soldiers, sailors, airmen and Marines shake in their boots when told the next person rating their performance will be a civil servant.

Both civilians and service members can keep the proper focus. They should be looking at their common goal — mission accomplishment. Instead, they often look at appearances, and as the well-worn cliche goes, appearances can be deceiving.

For example, I recently reported on a competitive event in which neither the participants nor the organizers paid much heed to uniformity of appearance. After gazing upon the long hair, beards, sagging jeans and scuffed shoes, I wondered whether they were prepared to put on a professional, effective program.

Having spent the first 23 years of my adult life in uniform, I'm comfortable with uniformity and conformance. Although I believe I have an open mind, I sometimes react with initial reticence — fear? — when confronted with persons who place no similar value on personal appearance.

Now, I've seen enough people of different walks of life from my own to know not everyone wears the same "uniform" or adheres to the same grooming standards. Even so, I was taken back when the bearded, kind of scruffy-looking gent I interviewed spoke earnestly and intelligently about the importance of his job and the benefits of competing to hone skills and build — yes — teamwork.

Whoa! What's going on here? Enter diversity.

Diversity means we don't have to look alike, dress alike, comb our hair alike, or talk alike. What's necessary — and in my visits to DoD units worldwide, what I've not detected lack of — is mission focus.

In these days of downsizing, military organizations can't afford to overlook their civilian talent and dedication. Likewise, civil servants must understand and accept — and wholeheartedly support— the proud traditions of the armed forces they work for.

Now, more than anytime in our recent past, we need each other's support — and our shared capabilities — to accomplish the defense mission. Together, and only so, will be succeed.

Educator thanks CG

On behalf of the entire teaching staff at Fort Benning, I want to thank Commanding General Maj. Gen. Carl F. Ernst for the outstanding support that the Fort Benning Schools have received from the post.

Because of his desire for and dedication to quality education here, parents, teachers and children benefit daily. The Fort Benning community is truly honored and privileged to be a part of such an outstanding military post.

Ernst's proclamation and support during American Education Week were also greatly appreciated by the teaching staff. We will continue to strive for quality and excellence in our schools as we teach the children entrusted to us.

I hope Fort Benning has outstanding success and wins the President's Quality Award and the Army Communities of Excellence Award. They are great honors, and Fort Benning is deserving of both.

Dial 545-BOSS is the commander's action line for Soldiers, family members and civilians to call when they have problems or complaints that can't be resolved elsewhere.

While it is not a substitute for the chain of command or for agencies established to provide assistance, the line offers another means of communication between Fort Benning's community and commanders.

The Bayonet features some of the calls that may benefit other members of the Fort Benning community.

Call: Caller would like to know why the agencies like Army Community Service don't help families who move to Columbus while their sponsor is stationed overseas.

Directorate of Community Activities response:

The caller told the manager for Relocation Program that she came to Columbus in July 1996 and she called the lending locker to inquire about household items. The staff person on duty informed her that she was not eligible to receive items, because of the fact that her sponsor was not assigned to Fort Benning.

Army Community Services' standard operating procedures require that all Soldiers and families must have permanent change of station orders assigning them to Fort Benning to be eligible for service.

AR 608-1 states that the lending locker will be established for incoming and outgoing families assigned to a particular installation. Household items such as pots and pans will be given out the day the Soldier processes into Fort Benning.

This seems to be a unique situation; however, as per the DCA, this policy has changed and the lending locker will not turn anyone away without household items.

Call: The caller said he resides in Building 2807 and there is constant vandalism to privately owned vehicles and theft from POV's in the parking lot this building's residents have to use. He said there needs to be something done about this.

Directorate of Public Safety response:

DPS' chief, Law Enforcement Division, said that military police conducted periodic surveillance for the parking areas on 1st Infantry Brigade Loop. A review of crime statistics shows 32 reports of vandalism in the vicinity of 15 other buildings near Building 2807 in the past 14 months. Three of the reported incidents are associated with Building 2807.

DPS Physical Security Inspectors conducted a survey of lighting in the area where cars are parked on 1st Infantry Brigade Loop. That survey revealed 12 of 13 street lights were inoperative. Although lighting for barracks parking lots is not a regulatory requirement, adequate lighting may deter acts of random vandalism and theft.

According to the acting commander, 608th Ordnance Company, parking areas are being checked by 13th Combat Support Battalion staff duty noncommissioned officers. Portable lighting systems are also being used to help illuminate parking areas because existing lights do not work.

DPS will follow up with DPW concerning repair and replacement of street light in this area.

AER continues to help Soldiers in 55th year

By Dov Schwartz
USAIC Public Affairs Office

It was the worst kind of phone call. The type where you just listen but are unable to speak.

A loved one was dead.

The Soldier's place was at home with her family. But home was very far away and the flight was more than she could afford.

Pfc. "P" turned to Army Emergency Relief — the Army's emergency financial assistance organization.

AER, in its 55th year of "Helping the Army Take Care of its Own," provided the young Soldier an immediate emergency loan.

"If it wasn't for them (AER), I would not have been able to go (to the funeral.) Sgt. 1st Class Terry Smith, an AER officer, came in on a Saturday and really helped me out," she said.

AER is the only organization dedicated solely to helping Soldiers and their families in times of emergency financial need.

According to installation AER officer, retired Sgt. Maj. Al Deane, applicants eligible for financial assistance include: active duty Soldiers, family members, Army National Guard and Reserve members on active duty for at least 30 days, widows and orphans and members of other service branches stationed at Fort Benning.

The organization provides emergency loans and grants for emergency travel, utility bills, rent, mortgage payments, food, lost or stolen funds, funeral expenses and medical expenses.

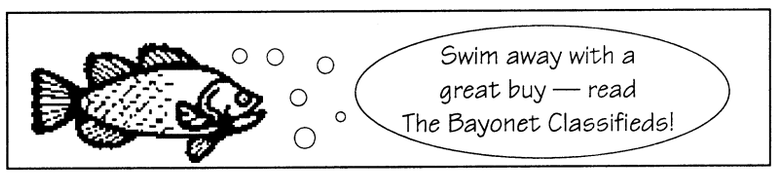
AER also has a scholarship program for dependent children of Soldiers. The scholarship program is coordinated by AER's educational department in Alexandria, Va.

"We try to process requests as soon as possible depending on the circumstance," Deane said.

While AER will consider all extenuating circumstances, they will not aid in car purchases or rentals, liquidation of debts, court fines or child support.

AER personnel are available after duty hours for emergencies.

In 1996, Fort Benning's AER helped more than 1,000 clients with nearly $700,000 in aid, Deane said.



As part of the Army Community Service network, AER can refer clients to Consumer Affairs Financial Assistance Programs, where budget counselors aid clients in debt management planning and check maintenance.

"Young Soldiers often have trouble managing their money, Deane said. "These classes can really help."

AER's annual fund-raising campaign will kick off March 3. AER solicits funds only from Soldiers, active and retired. Ninety-five percent of every dollar contributed to AER is used to help Soldiers, Deane said. AER administrative expenses cost only five percent of every dollar contributed.

Last year, the Fort Benning community raised more than $190,000.

A portion of that sum was loaned to Pfc. "P" for a flight to her hometown to attend her grandmother's funeral.

IOBC students conduct training exercise

By Sean D. Duncan
Infantry Officer Basic Course

Nothing gets your heart pounding more than the sound of bullets impacting only meters in front of your position. Especially when those bullets are from your buddies' weapons!

No, this was not a case of friendly fire, but one of a tightly knit platoon doing what it does best — performing a Platoon Attack Battle Drill.

The Infantry Officers' Basic Course students of Company B, 2nd Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment spent the first week of January attending classes on platoon operations. The week of Jan. 13 was spent in the field rehearsing for a live fire exercise.

Students of IOBC Class 1-97 moved to Hess Hill for such practical experience as how to occupy a patrol base, patrol base activities, and how to plan for and conduct a live fire range. The main emphasis of this exercise, though, was the platoon live fire.

After arriving at Hess Hill, students from each platoon were assigned duties such as platoon leader, platoon sergeant, and squad leaders. The acting platoon leader received and briefed an operations order detailing the mission: a platoon movement to contact with enemy expected in the vicinity of Hess Hill.

For safety reasons, each platoon performed a dry-fire exercise without ammunition on the first day.

The platoon leader walked his platoon through each phase of the mission. Special emphasis was given to the actions to be performed on the objective. In order for the platoon to be successful, the enemy had to be successfully suppressed by the support while allowing the assault element to maneuver close enough to prepare to assault across the objective. This required practice before employing live ammunition on the range.

Jan. 14 was reserved for a blank fire on the range. Blank ammunition brought new lessons to the acting platoon sergeants. One of the biggest lessons was how to control the rate of fire of the suppression element. After practicing, the two M-60 machine gun teams and the two M-249 Squad Automatic Weapons located with the support element were able to volley fire. The weapons took turns firing their ammunition in order to keep the enemies' heads down while also allowing the weapons to remain relatively cool.

Sean D. Duncan

An Infantry Officer Basic Course student prepares for a live-fire exercise by firing an M-60 machine gun with blank rounds.

Jan. 15 was spent preparing for a live-fire exercise. As each platoon approached the objective, enemy shots were heard. While the support team maneuvered into a good position from which to suppress the enemy with their live ammunition, the platoon leader assessed the situation. After he determined that he could conquer the enemy, he moved his assault team to the enemies' flank.

The previous two days training became crucial as the live rounds impacted only meters in front of the assault element. After the platoon leader sent his prearranged signal, the support element shifted their fires to the far side of the objective while the assault element stormed across the barren terrain. Buddy teams were seen bounding and firing well placed rounds at the enemy positions.

Finally, this particular battle was over. Most importantly, no one was injured. The future platoon leaders were aware of the importance of rehearsals before any live fire exercise is actually performed. After action reviews were conducted and everyone agreed that the training was a success due to proper planning and preparation.

According to Sgt. 1st Class Phillip Beard, one of 2nd platoon's trainers, "the live fire exercise is the culmination of an infantry man's training. The ability to put live rounds down range, and the ability to do it well, realistically, and safely is crucial."

Staff Sgt. Allen Fobbs, also a 2nd platoon trainer, said that the purpose of a live fire exercise is to keep Soldiers sharp and to sharpen their skills. He said that live ammunition brings more realism to training than blank ammunition by producing a different mind-set. Future platoon leaders now know the frame of mind needed to safely conduct this type of training at their units.

The students of Company B will graduate March 7.

Ammo engineers fire mortars

By Brian R. Voller
Bayonet staff writer

Twenty-six civilians and civilian engineers from the Office of the Product Manager for Mortars out of Picatinny Arsenal, N.J., General Dynamics and the Yuma Proving Grounds, Ariz., got the opportunity to fire the 120 mm mortar Jan. 30 on Red Cloud Range.

Richard Drogan, the engineer team leader, said the event was special because the civilians who attended the trip helped design the mortar but have never actually been able to fire a mortar.

"The PM for mortar systems, Lt. Col. Steve Davis, arranged for this group to receive a tailored version of the 120 mm Mortar New Equipment Training from the 2nd Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment," Drogan said. "He felt that having the engineers interact with and participate in the same training as the Soldiers who use the equipment would be beneficial.

"He felt the interaction would enhance everyone's future work efforts in support of the mortar programs."

During the engineers' three-day stay at Fort Benning, they were put through a modified version of the training class, which allowed the engineers to receive a classroom overview of the 120 mm weapon and the 120 mm ammunition, use of an M-16 plotting board and receive a hands-on demonstration using the M-23 mortar ballistic computer, Drogan said.

> "He felt having the engineers interact with and participate in the same training as the Soldiers who use the equipment would be beneficial."
> — Richard Drogan
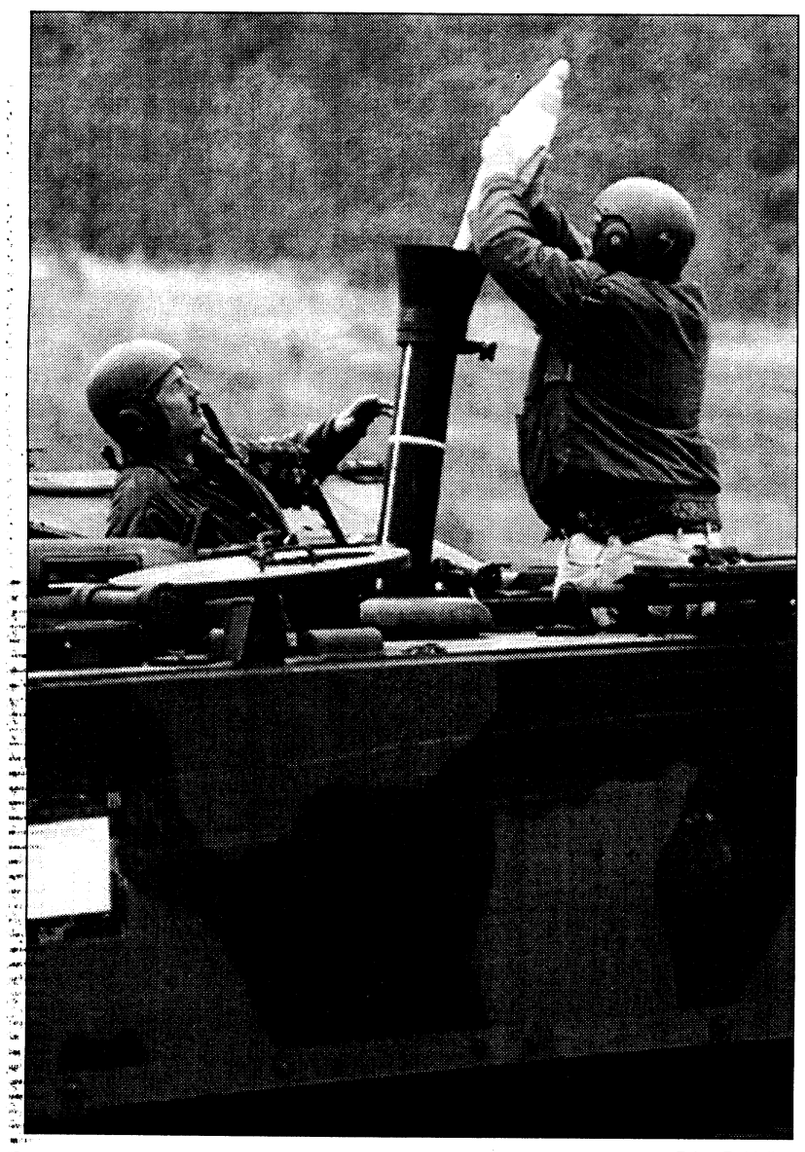
> Engineer Team Leader

The engineers were also taken out to the field where they were taught how to aim the mortar and how to maintain the equipment, and they were also allowed to fire the 81mm M-880 short range training round, Drogan said.

After the engineers where given their modified training sessions, they were taken out to Red Cloud Range where they were allowed to fire three different types of ammunition from the 120mm mortar.



"We shot off 12 rounds of high explosive, 6 rounds of white phosphorus and 20 rounds of illumination," said Staff Sgt. Earl Moore, 2nd Bn., 29th Inf. Regt., Mortar NET team.

After the engineers went through the training and were able to fire the mortar, Drogan said they all felt the trip was worth making.

"It was an awesome experience," Drogan said. "The opportunity to experience how the Soldier uses and operates the equipment and ammo we design sheds new light on the importance of the work we do."

He also said working the 2nd Bn., 29th Inf. Regt. was a very good experience, and that their professionalism was a credit to Fort Benning.

Drogan said when the idea that the engineers come to Fort Benning was initially suggested, there was such a large response that project managers had to cut the amount of people they sent by half, so the engineers plan to make a return trip to Fort Benning sometime in March.

3/75 Soldiers test their physical fitness during monthly Iron Ranger test

By Scott Hiipakka
3rd Bn., 75th Ranger Regiment

Selected members of the 3rd Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment, participated in an Iron Ranger evaluation Jan. 27.

Of the eleven Rangers that participated in the test of strength and endurance, nine were recognized as Iron Rangers.

The test consists of five events: the standard Army physical fitness test for push-ups and sit-ups, a five-mile run completed in 40 minutes or less and a minimum of 10 chin-ups and dips.

If the maximum points are achieved for the rangers age group, the ranger receives 100 points per event. If the ranger exceeds the standard, points are awarded for each additional repetition and for every six seconds below the 40-minute standard for the run.

Iron Ranger awards are based on a graduated point system. A ranger who earns 450 to 499 points receives an Iron Ranger Certificate of Achievement; for 500 to 549 points, he receives an Iron Ranger Certificate of Achievement and an Iron Ranger T-shirt; for 550 points and higher, he receives an Iron Ranger Certificate of Achievement, an Iron Ranger T-shirt, and his name is inscribed on the Iron Ranger Board in the 3rd Ranger Battalion Headquarters Building.

1st Lt. Thomas Goldner, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, had the best score with 684 total points. He completed 114 push-ups, 110 sit-ups, 21 chin-ups, 52 dips and completed the five-mile run in 29 minutes and 49 seconds.

The following Rangers completed the events achieving 550 points or higher: 1st Lt. Thomas Goldner, HHC; Capt. Colin Tuley, Company B; Lt. Col. Michael Ferriter, HHC; and Spc. Jared Rich, Co. A.

The following Rangers completed the events achieving 500 to 549 points: 1st Lt. Jesse Pearson, Co. A; Spc. Joseph Dombrowsky, Co. A; Staff Sgt. Joseph Alexander, Co. C; and 1st Lt. Fulgium, Co. A.

Spc. Jacob Ortega, Co. B, completed the events achieving between 450 and 499 points.

The Iron Ranger test is a monthly event in the 3rd Ranger Battalion.

TAX TIME

SECTION S

Special Section

NEED TO KNOW TAX TIPS

•File on time — By doing this you avoid incurring interest charges and penalty fees. Even if the Internal Revenue Service owes you, you don't want them to hold on to your money.

•Bring everything you need with you to the tax office — Make sure that you bring your W2 forms, your 1099 interest statements, divorce decree (if newly divorced), social security numbers (preferably cards) of dependents and a copy of spouse's orders if spouse is stationed in Korea.

•Filing as head of household — Soldiers or spouses may file head of household if they meet certain criteria.

For example:

•In order to meet this criteria, if the spouse is in Korea prior to June 1996, that spouse must file married, filing separately, but if the stateside spouse provides at least 50.1 percent of the income, then the stateside spouse may file as head of household..

•Single parents with sole custody of children may file head of household if divorced by Dec. 31, 1996.

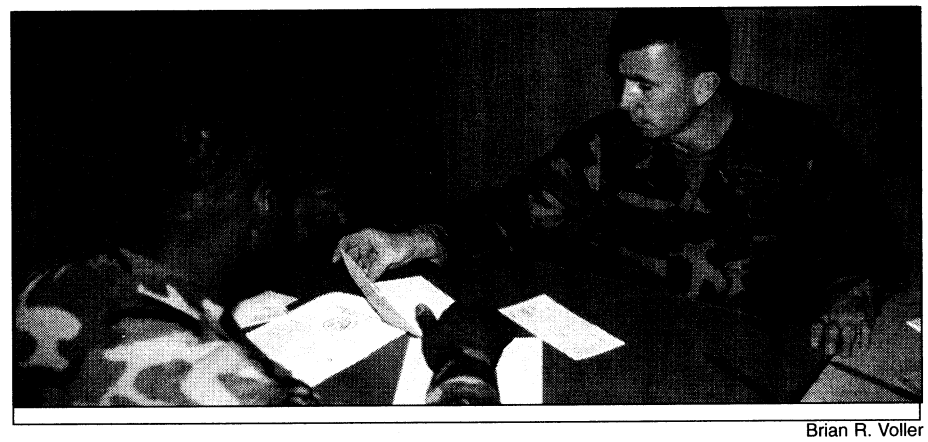
Free tax help

Soldiers can receive advice from installation tax

By Lisa M. Hibbert
Bayonet staff writer



As taxpayers everywhere begin assessing their standings for the April 15 tax deadline, the Fort Benning tax offices are staffed with personnel prepared to offer some help.

Where can Soldiers and family members get help? According to Capt. Robert Magnuson, installation tax officer, they should start with their unit tax advisors. (A listing of the UTAs is on page S-4)

"The UTAs receive training on how to assist Soldiers with their filing needs," Magnuson said.

However, Soldiers do have the option of visiting the installation tax offices. Two Fort Benning Tax Offices opened Jan. 31. The Main Post Tax Office is located in Building 4, Classroom 1, Infantry Hall. The Main Post Tax Office hours of operation are 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Monday through Friday until April 15.

The Kelley Hill Tax Office is located in Building 9025. Its office hours are Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Friday from 1 until 5 p.m. and Thursdays from 3 to 7 p.m.

Brian R. Voller

Staff Sgt. Stanley E. Collins, Company D, 1st Battalion (Airborne), 507th Infantry, 11th Infantry Regiment, assists Staff Sgt. Anthony Gardner, 608th Ordnance Company with his tax return.

Magnuson said that he encourages Soldiers to use the UTAs and the installation tax offices.

"This saves the Soldiers money," Magnuson said, "which is why the Army does this. Soldiers need to take advantage of this free service, it is a part of their benefits package."

The tax offices will fill out all returns and electronically file them. It normally takes eight to 14 days for the return to show up in the Soldiers bank account, Magnuson said.

Those who enjoy doing their own tax forms can still bring them over for a free electronic filing.

For more information, call the Main Post Tax Office at 545-4267.

MILITARY PAY

Certain benefits taxable, some not taxable

American Forces Press Service

Internal Revenue Service officials admit military personnel may have a confusing time trying to fill out federal tax forms, thanks to the various pays, special pays and allowances.

For example, combat or hazardous-duty pay should be taxable because it's pay, right? It depends, IRS officials said, on the individual's rank and the length of duty in the declared combat zone.

Military pay that is generally taxable includes:

•active duty pay;
•reserve training pay;
•re-enlistment bonuses;
•special pay for such career incentives as diving duty, certain aviation positions, medical and dental officers, nuclear qualified officer, special duty assignment and foreign duty;
•military retirement pay based on length of service or age;
•military academy pay;
•payments for accrued leave;
•scholarships such as Armed Forces Health Profession Scholarship Program granted after August 1986; •lump-sum payments on separation from active duty; and •pay received by retired personnel who are serving as instructors in Junior Reserve Officer Training Corps programs.

Military pay that is generally not taxable includes:

•basic quarters allowance;
•uniform allowances;
•family separation pay;
•Department of Veterans Affairs benefits;
•variable housing allowance;
•basic allowance for subsistence;
•moving or storage expenses provided in kind or reimbursement for actual expenses for permanent change-of-station moves;
•benefits under Servicemen's Group Life Insurance;
•pay forfeited on order of court-martial;
•defense counseling payments; and
•payments for former prisoners of war from the U.S. government for inhumane treatment at the hands of the enemy.

Check with the Fort Benning tax offices. The Main Post Tax Office is located in Building 4, Room 1. It's open from 8:30 a.m. until 4:30 p.m. The Kelley Hill Tax Office is located in Building 9025 and is open from 1 to 5 p.m. Mondays, Tuesdays, Wednesdays and Fridays. Thursdays the hours of operation are 3 to 7 p.m..

In addition, the IRS offers two free guides published specifically for military members: IRS Publication 3, Tax Information for Military Personnel, and IRS Publication 945, Tax Information for Those affected by Operation Desert Storm.

IRS Publication 3 explains military and special pays, deductions, dependency exemptions and other tax areas related to military personnel, IRS officials said, while IRS Publication 945 discusses tax-free income, filing extensions and other tax aspects.

Copies of these and other free IRS publications and forms are available by calling (800) 829-3676. or writing to: IRS, Forms Distribution Center, P.O. Box 85627, Richmond, VA 23285.

IRS offers helpful tips for doing taxes

American Forces Press Service

WASHINGTON — The Internal Revenue Service wants to make paying federal taxes as easy as it can. That's one reason it offers a free guide for almost every tax situation that may come up, IRS officials said.

Each publication handles a specific subject, providing detailed instructions along with answers to most questions concerning that topic, IRS officials said.

For example, a taxpayer has questions on child care expenses. IRS Publication 503, Child Care and Dependent Expenses, should answer them and make filing the federal tax forms easier.

Sold a home in 1996? Request a copy of IRS Publication 523, Selling Your Home.

IRS officials stressed these publications are free and available for the asking.

Some of the most requested publications include:

•Publication 1, Your Rights as a Taxpayer;

•Publication 3, Tax Information for Military Personnel;

•Publication 17, Your Federal Income Tax;

•Publication 54, Tax Guide for U.S. Citizens and Resident Aliens Abroad;

•Publication 225, Farmer's Tax Guide;

•Publication 334, Tax Guide for Small Business;

Check tax return before mailing it

American Forces Press Service

Internal Revenue Service officials recommend spending a few minutes double checking your federal tax return before mailing it. A few extra minutes now could save trouble or additional costs down the road.

Double checking can save you from some common errors. These include ensuring you have made copies of all forms and attachments.

Not getting the right Social Security number for a dependent may end up costing you the exemption you claimed for that person.

Also, IRS officials are quick to point out missing attachments or signatures which could cause the tax return to be kicked back for correction.

Any mistake in the federal tax return slows down processing and could slow down any refund by as much as two weeks IRS officials said.

IRS officials recommend taking a few minutes to check your federal tax return for the following points before mailing.

•Make sure your correct name and Social Security number appear on each schedule.

•Make sure the name and Social Security number for each dependent you claim appear on the tax return.

•Make sure your spouse signed and dated the form if filing a joint return.

•Check your math.

•Use the correct standard deduction if you are not itemizing.

•Make sure the correct forms are correctly completed and attached if you qualified for and are claiming earned income credit, child care credit or other type of credit.

•Double check that boxes are marked correctly and figures are correctly carried over to the appropriate lines.

•Double check that you used the correct tax figures from the tax tables.

•If you owe taxes, be sure to spell out Internal Revenue Service on the check or money order.

•Make sure Form W-2, schedules and other required forms are attached to the federal tax return in the proper order.

Now that you have decided everything is complete and in order, make a copy of the entire tax package for your files.

Ensure the proper postage is on the return. Depending on additional forms and attachments, the tax return may require additional postage. IRS officials said a postage-due envelope will be returned to you and considered late if they receive it after the deadline, even if you mailed it early the first time.

W-4 FORMS

Adjust withholdings if you owe, receive too much from IRS

American Forces Press Service

If you owe too much federal tax when you file a federal tax return or your refund is too large, consider filing a new Form W-4, Internal Revenue Service officials said.

Form W-4, Employee's Withholding Allowance Certificate, helps your employer determine the amount of taxes to withhold from your paycheck, IRS officials said.

A few of the changes that may prompt you to increase or decrease your withholding and file a new Form W-4 are:

•buying a home;
•earned income increase or decrease;
•marriage or divorce;
•additional dependents; and
•a large medical expense.

There is no limit to the number of legitimate exemptions you may claim on Form W-4. IRS officials said if it exceeds 10, however, your employer must send Form W-4 to the IRS. You may then be asked to justify each exemption you claimed on the withholding form.

However, IRS officials said, in some instances you must file a new Form W-4 within 10 days. Quitting support of a dependent, divorce and separation are just a few circumstances that fall under the 10-day filing rule.

The IRS offers several free publications that explain the withholding process: IRS Publication 505, Tax Withholding and Estimated Tax, and IRS Publication 919, Is My Withholding Correct for 1997?

If you have specific questions concerning Form W-4 and your tax withholding, check with the Fort Benning tax offices.

The Main Post Tax Office is located in Building 4, Room 1. It's open from 8:30 a.m. until 4:30 p.m. The Kelley Hill Tax Office is located in Building 9025 and is open from 1 to 5 p.m. Mondays, Tuesdays, Wednesdays and Fridays. Thursdays the hours of operation are 3 to 7 p.m.

IRS publications answer questions on how military benefits get taxed

American Forces Press Service

Military personnel may face some different situations than the average taxpayer when it comes to filing federal tax returns.

Questions about combat pay, re-enlistment bonuses and housing allowances can make it difficult to complete the tax forms, said Internal Revenue Service officials.

To make it easier to find the answers, IRS offers two free publications that deal specifically with military taxes: IRS Publication 3, Tax Information for Military Personnel, and IRS Publication 945, Tax Information for Those Affected by Operation Desert Storm.

Another brochure that may help with completing the federal tax forms is IRS Publication 17, Your Federal Income Tax. IRS officials said this publication takes you through the tax return step-by-step.

For free copies of these and other IRS publications and forms, check with the installation tax assistance office. Fort Benning's Main Post Tax Office is located in Building 4, Room 1. It's open from 8:30 a.m. until 4:30 p.m. The Kelley Hill Tax Office is located in Building 9025 and is open from 1 to 5 p.m. Mondays, Tuesdays, Wednesdays and Fridays. Thursdays the hours of operation are 3 to 7 p.m.

The forms are also available at the local post office or library. In addition, these publications and others are available directly from IRS by calling toll-free (800) 829-3676 or writing to:

IRS

Copies of old returns still available

American Forces Press Service

Copies of previous years' federal income tax returns are easily available through the Internal Revenue Service, according to IRS officials.

If you need a copy of a return and can't find it, fill out IRS Form 4506, Request for Copy or Transcript of Tax Form.

Send the completed form, along with a check or money order for $14 for each return requested, to the IRS center where you filed the return. The check or money order must be made payable to Internal Revenue Service; tax officials said be sure to spell out Internal Revenue Service. Allow 60-days processing time.

In some cases, you may need only the information available on a transcript, IRS officials said. Transcript data includes adjusted gross income, exemptions claimed and income tax. This information, along with copies of some forms, is provided free of charge.

Check with the local IRS office, Building 4, Room 1, or call (800) 829-1040 to determine if you need a complete copy of your tax return or if a transcript or tax account data will suffice.

Installation tax assistance offices, libraries and post offices should have copies of IRS Form 4506. For copies of this form and other free IRS publications, call (800) 829-3676 or write to: IRS, Forms Distribution Center, PO Box 85627, Richmond, VA 23285.

Units provide Soldiers with tax advisors

Staff Judge Advocate's Office

Units on Fort Benning have assigned representatives to assist Soldiers in tax preparation.

Capt. Robert Magnuson, installation tax officer, said he recommends Soldiers who have questions about their taxes contact their unit representatives before visiting the installation tax offices, located in Building 4, Classroom 1, Infantry Hall and Building 9025, Kelley Hill.

Owning home affects taxes

American Forces Press Service

Owning a home may be part of the American dream, but it sure can play havoc and cause nightmares when it comes to filing a federal tax return, Internal Revenue Service officials said.

IRS officials admitted determining what is taxable or not, as well as what can be claimed as legitimate expenses, can be confusing.

Keep complete, accurate, up-to-date records on all home repairs, mortgage interest payments, improvement costs and selling and closing costs, among other things, IRS officials said.

When you file your tax return, the IRS checks closely these and other home expenses you include in your return, according to officials.

But before you take any deduction or add to the basis of your home, IRS officials said, be sure you meet all requirements and restrictions.

Basis in your home is generally the way to measure your investment in the home for tax purposes. Home improvements, abstract and recording fees, surveys and owner's title insurance are just a few items included in the basis, IRS officials said.

Generally, if you sell your home, you can postpone or even avoid federal taxes on the sale if you meet certain prerequisites. These include the purchase of a new home that costs at least as much as the adjusted sales price of the old home within two years of the sale.

Specific information on taxes and the sale of your home is available in a free IRS booklet, IRS Publication 523, Selling Your Home. Additional brochures and forms that deal with homeowning and taxes include:

•Publication 3, Tax Information for Military Personnel;

•Publication 17, Your Federal Income Tax;

•Publication 530, Tax Information for First Time Homeowners;

•Publication 544, Sales and Other Disposition of Assets;

•Publication 547, Nonbusiness Disasters, Casualties and Thefts;

•Publication 551, Basis of Assets;

•Publication 584, Nonbusiness Disaster, Casualty and Theft Loss Workbook; •Publication 936, Home Mortgage Interest Deduction; and •Form 2119, Sale of Your Home.

For free copies of these publications, call (800) 829-3676 or write to: IRS, Forms Distribution Center, P.O. Box 85627, Richmond, VA 23285.

OVERSEAS

IRS offers world-wide tax assistance

American Forces Press Service

> Living outside of the continental United States does not exempt you from having to pay federal income taxes.
> — Internal Revenue Services

Do you live overseas and have federal tax questions or problems that have you stumped?

Don't worry. The Internal Revenue Service is only as far away as your mailbox, telephone, facsimile machine or computer.

The IRS also operates a number of year-round offices in a number of U.S. embassies and consulates in various cities overseas. In addition, tax assistants visit more than 100 cities throughout the world to help people with their tax-filing situations

Americans living overseas file their federal tax returns during the filing season.

IRS officials stressed living outside of the continental United States does not exempt you from having to pay your federal taxes.

However, U.S. citizens, including military members and their families, who live abroad are granted an automatic two-month filing extension until June 15.

If you were living and working outside of the United States April 15 and use the two-month extension, IRS officials said to enclose a statement to that effect with your federal tax return.

If more time is needed, another two-month extension can be requested, extending the filing date until Aug. 15. This extension needs to be officially requested, IRS officials said. A copy of IRS Form 4868, Application for Automatic Extension of Time to File U.S. Individual Income Tax Return, must be sent to the IRS by April 15.

If even more time is required, file IRS Form 2688, Application for Additional Extension of Time to File U.S. Individual Income Tax Return, by Aug. 15. Handled on a case-by-case basis, if approved, this extends the filing time by two months, or until Oct. 15.

These extensions are only for filing a complete federal tax return, IRS officials said. Any taxes owed must be paid by the April 15 deadline; otherwise, interest charges and late payment penalties begin accruing and continue to accrue until the taxes owed are paid.

If you have technical or tax account questions and live overseas, call the IRS at (202) 874-1460 or send a facsimile to (202) 874-5440 or write to: Internal Revenue Service, Assistant Commissioner (International, 950 L'Enfant Plaza, SW, ATTN: CP:IN:D:CS, Washington, D.C., 20024, USA.

If you need free IRS forms or publications, write to: IRS, Forms Distribution Center, PO Box 85627, Richmond, VA 23285, USA.

General tax information may also be found on the Internet, IRS officials said. They also stressed that tax questions pertaining to individuals' tax returns cannot be answered by computer. To access the IRS over the Internet, log onto the World Wide Web (http://www.irs.ustreas.gov); or Telnet (iris.irs.ustreas.gov); or dial Fedworld by modem at (703) 321-8020.

Unit and installation tax assistance offices may be able to assist you with your federal tax return, as well as providing some commonly used forms. Publications and forms may also be found at installation libraries and post offices. Some embassy and consulate IRS offices also have copies.

Some points of contact at U.S. embassies follow:

•American Consulate General, IRS Level 59, MLC Center, 19-29 Martin Place, Sydney, NSW, 2000, Australia, Tel. 61-2-9373-9194, Fax 61-2-3233-4445;

Double check federal tax return before sending it in

American Forces Press Service

Internal Revenue Service officials recommend spending a few extra minutes to double check your federal tax return before sending it in.

•Is my arithmetic correct?

•Is my Social Security number correct on all of the forms?

•Is the Social Security number correct for my dependent?

•Is my mailing address correct on the tax return?

•Did I mark the proper box for the filing status?

•Did I claim the full standard deduction?

•Did I claim the earned income credit, if I qualified, and if so, did I attach the correct form?

•Did I use the correct tax table or tax schedule for the tax rate?

•If I am owed a refund, is the amount on the proper line?

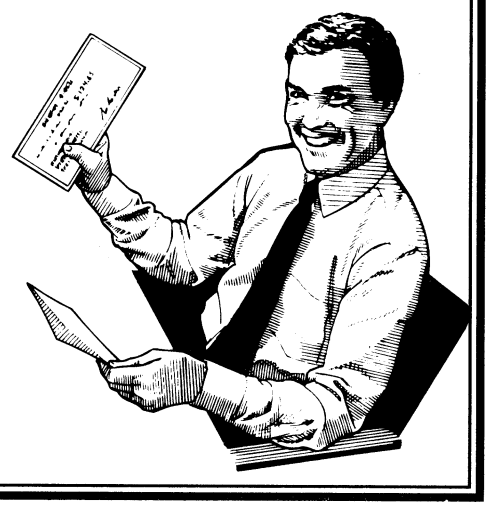
•If I owe additional taxes, did I enclose a check or money order for the correct amount?

•Did I put my Social Security number on the check, and did I spell out Internal Revenue Service?

•Did I sign and date the return?

•If I am filing a joint federal tax return, did my spouse also sign and date the form?

•Are all necessary forms and schedules enclosed and attached in the correct order?



The Main Post Tax Office is located in Building 4, Room 1. It's open from 8:30 a.m. until 4:30 p.m. The Kelley Hill Tax Office is located in Building 9025 and is open from 1 to 5 p.m. Mondays, Tuesdays, Wednesdays and Fridays. Thursdays the hours of operation are 3 to 7 p.m.

Dates to remember when expecting a return

American Forces Press Service

If you mailed your federal tax return and should receive a refund, give the Internal Revenue Service at least eight weeks processing time before checking on it.

IRS officials said if the check hasn't arrived at the end of eight weeks, call the IRS Automated Refund System at (800) 829-4477.

Before you call, make sure you have a copy of your federal tax return available. Information you'll need to use the refund system includes the first Social Security number listed on the return, filing status and the exact whole dollar amount of the expected refund.

Tax refund information is updated every seven days. If you don't receive a refund mailing date when you call, allow a week before calling again, said IRS officials. Hours for the touch-tone telephone service are Monday through Friday, 7 a.m. to 11:30 p.m. Eastern Standard Time. IRS officials said if you use a rotary telephone, call during normal East Coast business hours.

The best time to file your federal tax return is January and February, IRS officials said. Fewer tax returns are filed during this time frame, speeding up the return process.

Sometimes, tax officials said, a refund check can be in the mail in three to four weeks after filing the return.

IRS officials said it takes several weeks to several months to process a federal tax return and to issue a refund check.

To start, the returns are received at an IRS center where they are opened and sorted. The returns are then coded and edited for computer entry. Information and math entries are checked for accuracy.

If the information is correct, tapes with the data are sent to the IRS computing center where the final tax information is credited to the taxpayer's account.

Finally, the information is sent to the Treasury Department's regional finance centers, which issue the checks.

A new program this year — automatic refund deposit — may allow you to receive the refund check a few weeks earlier, IRS officials said.

If you decide you would like your refund automatically deposited to your checking or savings account, just fill in the required information on the tax return. This cuts out the time required to process and mail a check to you.

Use caution when hiring a tax preparer

American Forces Press Service

Many taxpayers take one look at their federal tax returns and all of the paperwork needed and head for the door or telephone to find a tax preparer.

But before looking in the yellow pages check with the Fort Benning tax offices.

The Main Post Tax Office is located in Building 4, Room 1. It's open from 8:30 a.m. until 4:30 p.m. The Kelley Hill Tax Office is located in Building 9025 and is open from 1 to 5 p.m. Mondays, Tuesdays, Wednesdays and Fridays. Thursdays the hours of operation are 3 to 7 p.m.

But if the post tax offices are unable to help or don't suit your needs, consider the following advise:

Don't hire the one with the glitziest advertisements or the first one you find, not until you have at least checked them out, Internal Revenue Service officials said. The bottom line to hiring a tax preparer, tax officials said, is to remember your name is on the form and you are ultimately responsible for everything on the form, regardless of who filled it out.

Talk with friends and business associates, see if they have used a tax preparer, IRS officials said. Check with the local Chamber of Commerce or Better Business Bureau. Make sure the individual or the company will be around after the tax season, in case the IRS questions your return. Ask for references and check them out.

On the chance something may go wrong and you end up owing a lot of money because of mistakes made by the tax preparer, check to see if the preparer carries liability insurance.

Make sure that all of the financial paperwork necessary for the federal tax return is easily available and in order, IRS officials said.

Answers to common Joint Endeavor questions

American Forces Press Service

Just knowing the answers to basic questions will help troops deployed to Operation Joint Endeavor prepare for their income taxes, according to tax officials.

The Department of Defense's Office of Compensation and the Internal Revenue Service have compiled questions and answers about the Military Tax Relief Act.

The act provides tax benefits to service members deployed to Operations Joint Endeavor and Able Sentry. Some aspects apply to military and civilian personnel supporting the peacekeeping mission from Italy, Hungary and aboard ships in the Adriatic Sea.

Defense officials said these questions and answers should provide those deployed most of the information they need when filing their 1996 federal income taxes.

Those having further questions can call IRS tax hotlines. In the United States, call the IRS at (800) 829-1040. This number is good inside the United States. Send electronic-mail questions to oje@ccmail.irs.gov.

The IRS also has offices in Rome and Bonn, Germany, to assist overseas taxpayers with federal income tax questions. Contact the Rome office by calling 39 6 4674-2560 or via fax at 39 6 4674-2223. The IRS-Bonn branch is at 49 228 339-2119 or via fax at 49 228 339-2810.

Some commonly asked tax questions, along with their answers, follow:

Q: Which geographic areas are qualified hazardous-duty areas in the new law?

A: Bosnia-Herzegovina, Croatia and Macedonia.

Q: I am a member of the U.S. armed forces assigned to perform peacekeeping services in Bosnia-Herzegovina. Is any part of my 1996 military pay for serving in this qualified hazardous-duty area excluded from gross income?

A: Yes. If you serve in a qualified hazardous-duty area as an enlisted person for any part of a month, all your military pay received for military service that month is tax-free. A similar exclusion for commissioned officers limits their monthly exemption to the highest enlisted pay rate (currently about $4,250). Exclusions are not subject to federal income tax.

Q: I earned my military pay in Bosnia during 1995. Is any part of my 1995 military pay for serving in this qualified hazardous-duty area excluded from gross income?

A: Yes. Since the law was effective Nov. 21, 1995, the same military pay exclusion rules apply.

Q: How do I exclude from gross income the military pay received for service in the qualified hazardous-duty area during November and December 1995?

A: The Army, Navy, Air Force and Coast Guard will issue Form W-2c, Statement of Corrected Income and Tax Amounts. All U.S. military personnel serving in the qualified hazardous-duty area on or after Nov. 21, 1995, will receive the form.

Once received, troops may file 1995 federal individual income tax returns. Those who already filed will need to file a Form 1040X, an amended U.S. Individual Income Tax Return.

Q: My spouse and I are both enlisted personnel serving with the armed forces in the qualified hazardous-duty area. Are we both entitled to the income tax exclusion for military pay?

A: Yes.

Q: I am an armed forces member stationed in Italy. I fly patrols over Bosnia-Herzegovina in direct support of the military operations there, for which I receive hostile fire and imminent danger pay. Is any part of my military pay exempt from gross income?

A: Yes. Under the law and regulations in effect prior to the law, you serve in the qualified hazardous-duty area. You are a service member in direct support of military operations in the area.

Q: If I become injured and hospitalized while serving in the military in the qualified hazardous-duty area, is any of my military pay exempt from gross income?

A: Yes. Military pay received by hospitalized enlisted personnel as a result of injuries sustained while serving in the qualified hazardous-duty area is excluded from gross income. Commissioned officers have a similar exclusion.

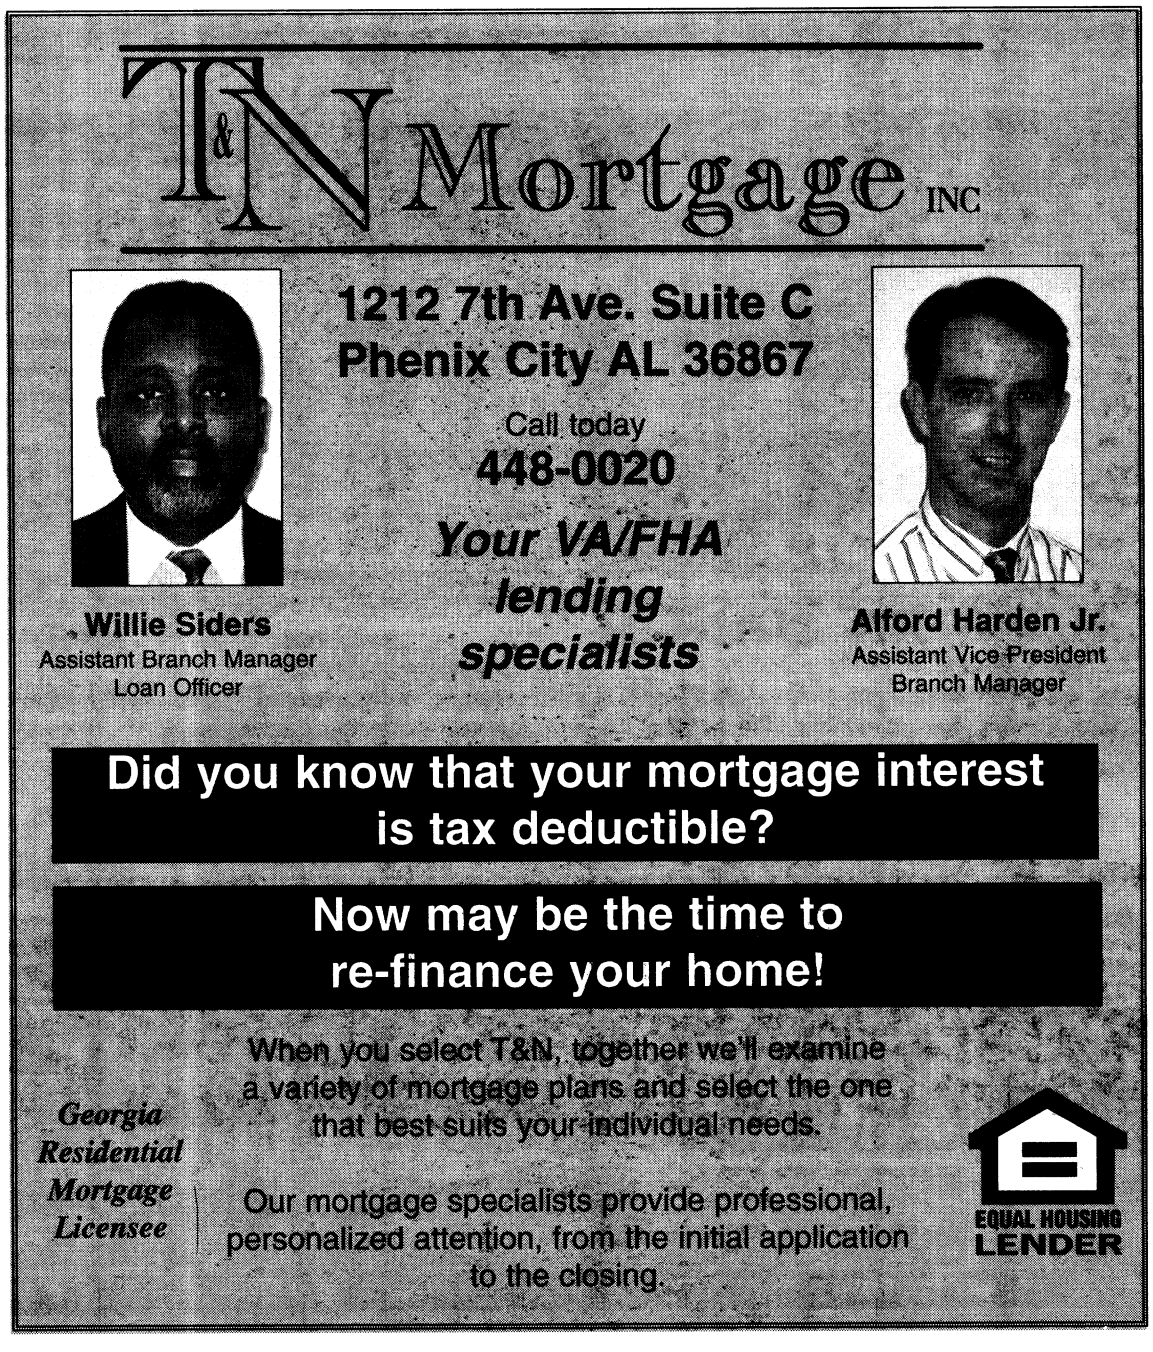
Q: My wife is on active duty in the qualified hazardous-duty area. She will be eligible for discharge when she returns home. If she separates upon her return, will the payment for the annual leave she accrued during her service in the qualified hazardous-duty area be excluded from gross income?

A: Yes. Annual leave payments to enlisted members at separation are not part of the gross income — provided the leave earned was while the member served in the qualified hazardous-duty area.

If your wife is a commissioned officer, only a portion of the annual leave payment she receives for time in the qualified hazardous-duty area may be exempt. The leave payment cannot be exempt if the amount exceeds the maximum enlisted amount for the month of service.

Q: My brother, a civilian in the merchant marines, is on a ship that transports military supplies between the United States and the qualified hazardous-duty area. Does he qualify for the military pay exclusion?

A: No. He is not a member of the U.S. military. The U.S. armed forces include all regular and reserve components of the uniformed services under the control of the secretaries of Defense, Army, Navy and Air Force, as well as the Coast Guard.



Q: My husband is a service member supporting Operation Joint Endeavor from Germany. He is not receiving hostile fire or imminent danger pay. Is he eligible for the military pay exclusion?

A: No. U.S. armed forces personnel serving outside the qualified hazardous-duty area are not eligible for the military pay exclusion. The only exception is if they serve in direct support of military operations in the qualified hazardous-duty area.

For more information and help with filing the tax forms, two tax offices have opened on Fort Benning.

AROUND POST

Girl Scout Cookie sales begin — The Concharty Council Girl Scouts begin booth sales around post today. Girl Scouts ages 6 through 17 will be selling cookies by the Main Mall Post Exchange, the Mini Mall Post Exchange, the Commissary and more.

Cookies cost 2.50 per box.

For more information about booth locations, call the Girl Scout Office at 327-2646.

Community to conduct a Town Hall meeting — Residents of Indianhead Terrace and West Main Post will meet for a combined Town Hall meeting Tuesday at 6 p.m. at Wilson Elementary School.

For additional information, call Dorothy White, Indianhead Terrace mayor, at 687-4524 or April Strawser, West Main Post mayor, at 682-3840.

ACS conducts a new personnel and spouse orientation— All newly assigned personnel, especially those with spouses, are encouraged to attend the Fort Benning Spouse Orientation Program.

Childcare is provided; however, to access this service, family members need to make reservation by calling Army Community Services at 545-4043.

The next orientation takes place at 8:45 a.m. Feb. 14 in Building 359, located on Ingersoll Street.

For more information about the Spouse Orientation Program, call ACS at 545-4043 or 545-7517.

Tricare benefits seminar set — As a member of Tricare Prime, you belong to a healthcare plan that provides enhanced wellness coverage. Tricare prime places emphasis on preventive health and wellness. With Prime enrollment you receive several wellness benefits, which include the "Putting Prevention into Practice," guide the "Taking Care" newsletter and the "Take care of Yourself" manual.

In addition, as a Prime enrollee, you have access to a Health Care Information Line which provides phone access to registered nurses for answers to your health care questions. The nurses are on staff with the Center for Corporate Health through Humana Military Healthcare Services and are available 24 hours per day. To reach the HCIL, call (800) 333-5331.

The "Take Care of Yourself" manual contains valuable information on health, including how to decide when you really need to see a doctor. A class is scheduled to find out the best way to get the most usage from the manual.

The briefing takes place Feb. 26 from 9 to 11 a.m. in the Baugh Conference Room, Martin Army Community Hospital. The class follows from 11 a.m. to noon.

For more information, call 545-4041.

Learning buds, relationships grow with buddy program

By Lisa M. Hibbert
Bayonet staff writer

Anticipation floats in the air of Janie Pride's prekindergarten class at Edward A. White Elementary School as the students anxiously await the arrival of their third-grade buddies.

The buddy program is an all-volunteer program that allows two teachers with students in different grades to come together. When the combined classes meet, the students work on joint projects with an older student pairing up with a younger student.

Projects are assigned by both teachers, said Carolyn Phillips, kindergarten teacher at White. The older students' teacher assigns projects that can be scaled down for the younger students, and the younger students' teacher assigns projects that need the assistance of the older students.

Buddy activities include learning the alphabet, science projects, reading aloud and more.

"This program really works great because the younger students have their own personal teachers," Phillips said.

Another good thing about the buddy program is the amount of attention the students receive from their buddies, she said.

"When the younger kids are working on a project or need someone to sit and listen to them read, their buddies will do that," Phillips said. "The older kids will question them and make sure that they know what their doing.

"It's amazing how seriously the kids take the program," Phillips said. "The older children become very protective of the younger ones. The children relate to each other very well.

"The older children can get on the younger students' level because they can remember what it's like to be that age," Phillips said.

What the buddy program does for participants is:

•Establishes friendships among the older and younger students,

•Allows the older students to serve as mentors to the younger students,

•Promotes positive behavior — the older children become more disciplined around the younger children and •Helps the younger child to learn and gives them positive role models.

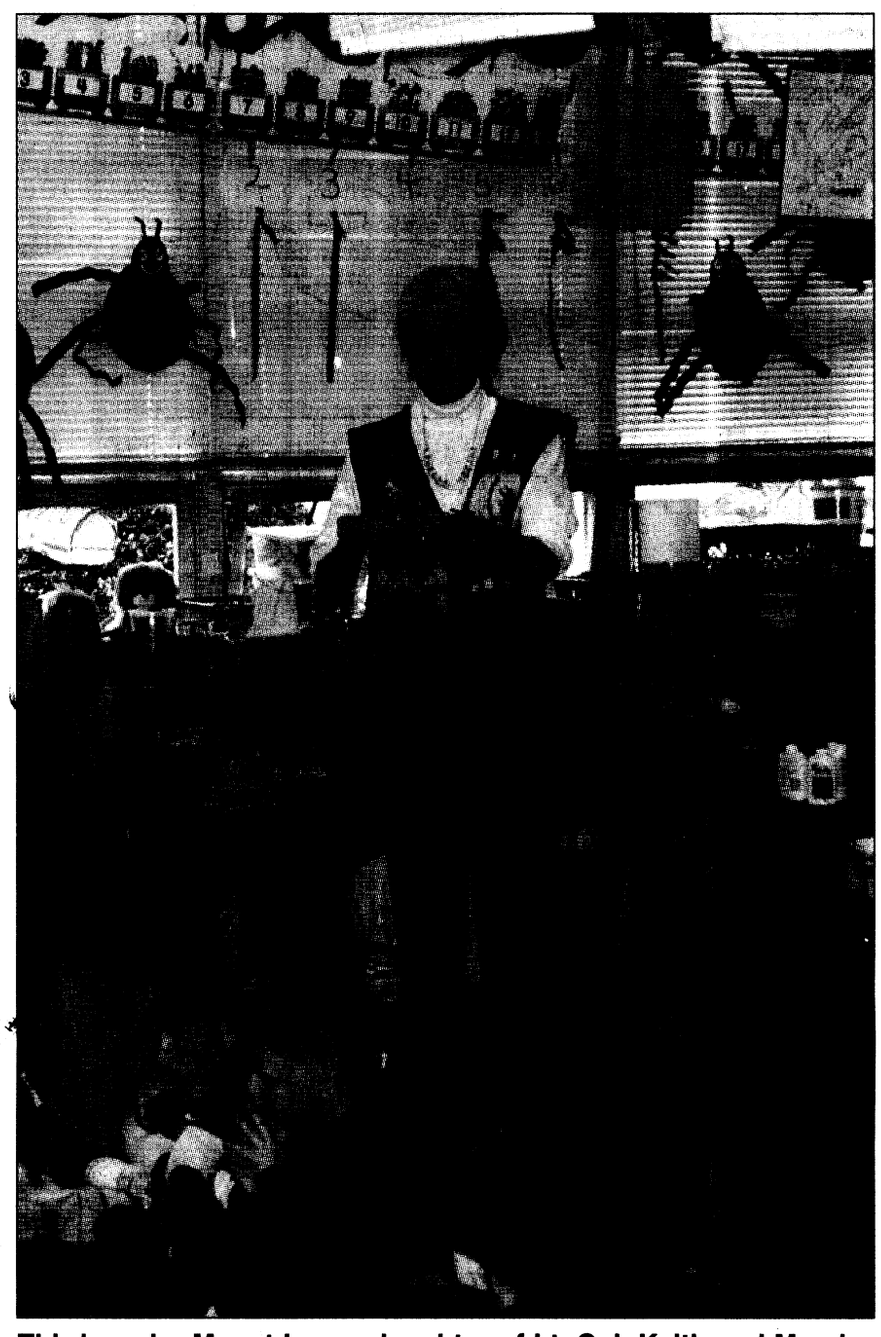
According to Phillips, the children enjoy participating in the program.



"I've never heard a negative comment about the buddy program, from the teachers or the students," Phillips said. "The students get so excited about it, too, and really look forward to meeting with their buddies. They always ask, 'When are we going to meet with our buddies again?'"

Another plus about the buddy program is the socialization, Phillips said.

"Children who are the oldest family member may suddenly become the youngest in the group and children who are the youngest family member may become the oldest in the buddy program," Phillips said. "Not all children have siblings at home and this allows the students to interact with children of different ages.

"The best thing about the buddy program is that the children can explore, create, bond and learn together," Phillips said.

Janie Pride, kindergarten teacher at Edward A. White Elementary School, explains the buddy project to the group Monday.

Third-grader Monet Lowe, daughter of Lt. Col. Keith and Marsha Lowe, and her buddy, kindergartner Laura Smith, daughter of Spc. Chuck and Tara Smith, discuss how to do their buddy project.

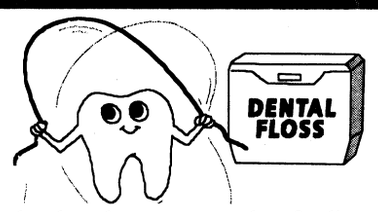
Spencer students learn how to capture the moment on film

Spencer H.S. photography class

Students in a communication class at William H. Spencer High School have been learning the basics of photography by building and taking pictures with pinhole cameras.

The pinhole cameras are built out of cardboard, tape and foil. If you are wondering if it really works, you really can take a picture with a cardboard box.

Pinhole cameras help teach the early history of photography and allow students to see the basic principles behind how all cameras work.



Each camera consists of a rectangular box, about the size of a shoe box, with a place at one end for the film, a small pinhole to admit light and a piece of tape covering the hole for a shutter. To take a picture, the camera must first be loaded in the darkroom, then taken outside for an exposure that usually takes 90 to 120 seconds. The camera must then be taken back to the darkroom and the image developed.

Some of the Fort Benning students working on this project include Anita Willett, daughter of Staff Sgt. George Willett; Michael Knight, son of Staff Sgt. Michael Knight; Brandon Mila, son of Staff Sgt. Braxton Toy; Elisha Austin, son of Sgt. 1st Class Eugene F. Austin III; Douglas Mack II, son of retired Staff Sgt. Douglas Mack; and Sean Farr, son of Sgt. 1st Class Alan Farr.

Dentists stress the importance of properly caring for young, tender teeth

U.S. Army Dental Activity

If you're a new parent, you may not realize the importance of caring for your infant's teeth. Personnel of the U.S. Army Dental Activity at Fort Benning want you to know that serious tooth decay may develop by a child's first birthday.

Even though the child's primary teeth will eventually be replaced with permanent ones, the primary teeth are critical for proper chewing, speaking and appearance.

Baby-bottle tooth decay is a condition that destroys the primary teeth of an infant or young child. It develops when a baby frequently receives a bottle of milk, formula, fruit juice or sweetened liquids to serve as pacifier. It may also result when the child is often allowed to fall asleep with a bottle during naps or at bedtime.

Prolonged breastfeeding may also cause this condition. Although the teeth most likely to be damaged are the upper front teeth, others may be affected.

Tooth decay is caused by bacteria, which are present in a thin film of plaque that constantly forms on the teeth. The bacteria use sugar as an energy source. In the process, the bacteria produce acids that attack tooth enamel.

Frequent, lengthy exposure to sugary liquids can result in acids attacking the child's teeth. After many such attacks, tooth decay can occur.

All types of sugars, including those found in bottle and breast milk, formula, fruit juices and sweetened liquids, can cause plaque bacteria to produce decay-causing acids.

How often a child receives a bottle containing these liquids and for how long a time the child's teeth are exposed to decay-causing acids are two important factors.

The members of Fort Benning's DENTAC said parents can help protect their babies' teeth by doing the following:

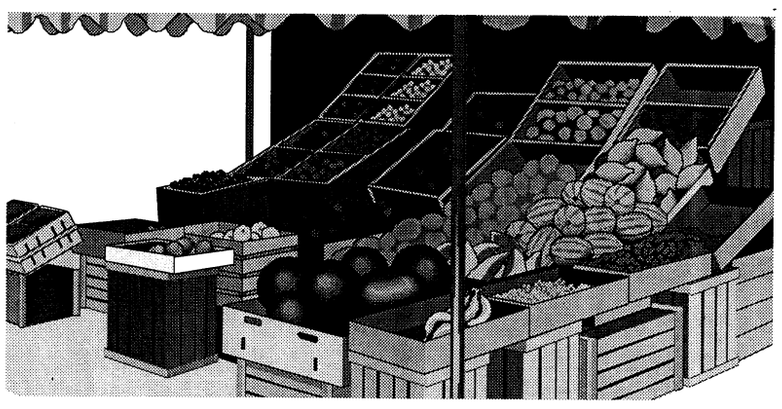
•After each feeding, wipe the child's teeth and gums with a clean, damp washcloth or gauze pad to remove plaque.

•Begin brushing your child's teeth as soon as the first tooth erupts (around six months). Continue cleaning and massaging gums in all other areas that remain toothless.

•Never allow your child to fall asleep with a bottle of milk, formula, fruit juices or sweetened liquid.

•If your child needs a comforter between regular feedings, at night or during naps, fill a nursing bottle with cool water or give the child a clean pacifier recommended by your dentist or pediatrician. Never give a child a pacifier dipped in any sweet liquid.

•Avoid filling a nursing bottle with liquids such as sugar water, sweetened gelatin or soft drinks.



•Make sure your child gets the fluoride needed for decay-resistant teeth. Ask your dentist about recommended methods for obtaining the proper amount of fluoride.

•Schedule regular dental checkups as soon as the first tooth appears.

Food-borne illnesses are preventable

By Lisa Forsyth
Martin Army Community Hospital

Most food-borne illnesses in the home remain preventable by consumers.

Unsanitary food preparation practices remain major contributors to outbreaks of food-borne illness. Errors made in shopping, transporting, storing, preparing and serving food often allows bacteria to survive and multiply. Foods prepared a day or more in advance, if handled improperly, often allow bacteria more time to multiply.

Cross contamination, the contamination of food by bacteria from other food, from utensils and work surfaces and from persons handling or preparing food is another important factor in food-borne illness.

The following food safety tips help prevent food-borne illness and help contribute to an enjoyable holiday season:

•Avoid buying cans or glass jars with dents, cracks, bulging lids, or leaking or rusted seams. Commissary canned goods are checked by veterinary food inspectors.

•Avoid eating raw meat, poultry, seafood, or eggs.

•Cook raw food thoroughly to kill any bacteria present. Use a clean, sanitized metal stem cook's thermometer to check the internal temperature of the food.

•Reheat leftovers thoroughly. Reheat to a minimum internal temperature of 165 degrees. Boil liquids.

•Refrigerate cooked meats, fish and poultry in shallow containers. Remove any stuffing and refrigerate separately.

•When shopping, do your grocery shopping last. Promptly refrigerate perishable foods.

•Check the temperature of your refrigerator; air temperature should be below 40 degrees.

•Store canned goods in a cool, dry place and use them within a year or by the manufacturer's expiration date. Never store canned or bottled foods in direct sunlight, in warm areas such as over a stove, or in damp areas. If canned goods become rusted, especially along the seams, throw them away. If you open canned food which is foamy, discolored or off odor, do not taste it; throw it away.

•Avoid thawing food on the counter; bacteria grow rapidly at room temperature. Thaw food in the refrigerator or in a microwave oven immediately before cooking.

•Keep work areas clean. Wash hands, utensils and cutting boards in hot, soapy water before handling foods and after handling raw meat, fish or poultry.

•A plastic cutting board is generally easier to keep clear. If you have a wood board, it needs to be hard maple and free of cuts and gouges.

•Keep pets away from food preparation and cooking.

•Avoid taking chances. If you suspect a problem, throw the food out.

For additional information on food safety, contact Environmental Health, Preventive Medicine Service, at 545-3577.

Directorate of Public Works

Do you have poisonous chemicals in your home or at work? These chemicals can harm your health, kill wildlife and destroy valuable natural resources.

The Environmental Management Division of the Directorate of Public Works has a staff of experts to assist us in preventing chemicals from being released into our environment. This staff is in the process of implementing a Pollution Prevention Plan.

This plan is expected to reduce the amount of hazardous waste we generate by 50 percent before 1999. Currently, we generate over 300,000 pounds of hazardous waste a year. The ultimate goal is to reduce this number to zero — yes, zero. We can do it, but we need your help.

Here are some hints that will help us achieve this goal and begin saving our environment.

•Buy latex paints instead of oil based. Oil-based paints are flammable and are regulated upon disposal. On the other hand, latex paints are water based, clean up easily and pose few hazards.

•Buy only the chemicals you need and no more. Too often, we buy more chemicals than we will ever use. In most cases, disposal of even a small quantity of these chemicals can cost hundreds of dollars. Approximately 85 percent of the hazardous waste that we dispose of is a result of purchasing more chemicals than we use.

•Avoid buying aerosol cans. They contain propellants that are flammable and contribute to air pollution. Instead, buy products with hand pumps.

•If you do have chemicals that you can no longer use, don't put them in the closet in the hope they will go away, they won't. If someone else can use the product, give it to them. Otherwise, take the time to dispose of chemicals properly.

If you have questions, call your unit and activities environmental coordinator or the DPW environmental staff at 545-4766. Family Housing residents can call the DPW environmental staff at 545-4766.

•Make sure that all containers are labeled properly and completely. At work sites, maintain a file of the material-safety data sheets for all chemicals you use.

•Chemicals should be used for their intended purpose and used completely. Never pour excess chemicals down the drain just because it is easier; doing so is illegal.

•Keep containers closed. Keep them out of the reach of children. Remember, open containers result in air pollution.

Listed below are some methods to reduce chemicals around the home:

•Replace glass cleaner with a mixture of one tablespoon of vinegar or lemon juice in one quart of water. Spray on and use newspaper to wipe dry.

•Replace mothballs with cedar chips, lavender flowers, rosemary, mint or white peppercorns.

•Replace furniture polish with one teaspoon of lemon juice in one pint of mineral or vegetable oil.

•If you store a homemade mixture, make sure it is properly labeled and do not store it in a container that could be mistaken for a food or beverage.

•When preparing alternatives, mix only what is needed for the job at hand and mix in a clean container.

Trash collection schedule for Feb. 17

There will be no refuse, recycle or yard-waste pick up Feb. 17. The next scheduled yard-waste pick up for Family Housing will be Feb. 24.

Refuse and recycle collection scheduled for Family Housing areas between Feb. 18 and 21 will not be affected. For additional information, call Wilmer Busby at 545-4749.

Holiday closing

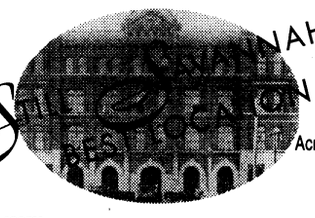
In observance of the President's Day holiday, the Self-Help Store, Loan Equipment Section, and Venetian Blind and Shade Shop will be closed Feb. 15 and will reopen for normal business at 8:30 a.m. Feb. 18. For more information call, Dominick DeCarlo at 545-1121.

If you have questions or topics that need to be discussed in the DPW "Information Corner," contact Glenn Todd, DPW customer relations specialist, at 545-2117, or write to the Directorate of Public Works, Building 6, Room 409, ATTN: ATZB-PWM (Glenn Todd), Fort Benning, 31905.

Rules change for IRA's

The Georgia Society of CPAs

Recently, members of Congress revised the rules, making individual retirement accounts even more attractive. To help you make your IRA investment decisions, here are answers to some key questions about IRAs from the Georgia Society of CPAs.



Who is eligible to open an IRA?

Anyone under the age of 70 years 6 months with earned income can open an IRA. Under IRA rules, "earned income is defined as income from salary, wages, tips, alimony, sales commissions, and self-employment." There is no minimum eligibility age for opening an IRA.

How much can I contribute to an IRA?

For 1996, if only one spouse is employed, you may set up a special spousal IRA and contribute up to $2,250, provided you file a joint tax return. However, beginning with the 1997 tax year, you'll be able to make an even larger contribution. The law changed, allowing each spouse to contribute up to $2,000 even if one spouse had less than $2,000 in earned income or no earned income at all. However, you must file jointly, and the total contribution for both you and your spouse cannot exceed $4,000 or your combined earned income for the year.

HONEST ABE

Celebrating a man of vision, integrety

By Lane Stockeland
A Co., 1st Bn.,11th Inf. Regt.

"Mr. Lincoln, I wish you were here. The Republic's changed a lot in a hundred years, and I don't think it's worked out like we planned. Mr. Lincoln, we sure could use a hand," says the song by Hank Williams Jr.

reflections

According to my 1997 Ecumenical Appointment Calendar, we officially celebrate the birthdays of only two U. S. presidents, Washington and Lincoln. Out of all the former U.S. presidents, why are these two so special?

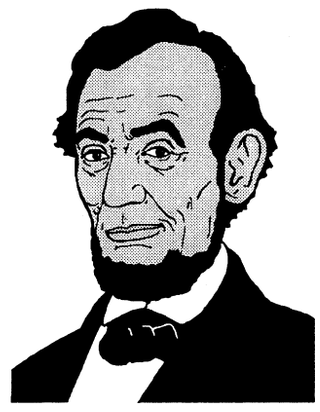
Simply put, they are truly great men. In fact, the World Book Encyclopedia calls Lincoln one of the truly great men of all time. Not just a great man in the United States, but one of the greatest men in the world.

Lincoln was a man of vision, a man of integrity and honesty, and a man of vision and purpose. He also had a great sense of humor and seemed to know what to say, when to say it and how to say it. It is told that he would fascinate people for hours with his stories and humor. The bottom line is he knew a lot about life and how life should be lived.

I have two favorite stories about Lincoln that come from Carl Sandburg's book "Abraham Lincoln — The Prairie Years and the War Years."

The first account is part of a letter that Lincoln wrote to a newly-married friend. Lincoln was teasing his friend about his new bride and how he hoped they would get along and so forth. He added this onto the end of the letter: "Whatever spiteful fools may say, each jealous, ranting yelper, no woman ever went astray without a man to help her!"

The other story is about a religious service that Lincoln was attending. Evidently in those days, it was quite common for some preachers to confront people in the congregation about the state of their souls and where they would spend eternity.



Sandburg wrote "He went to a religious meeting where Rev. Cartwright in due time said, 'All who desire to give their hearts to God, and go to heaven, will stand.' A sprinkling of men, women and children stood up.

The preacher exhorted, 'All who do not wish to go to Hell will stand.' All stood up — except Lincoln.

Then Cartwright, in his gravest voice, said, 'I observe that many responded to the first invitation to give their hearts to God and go to heaven. And I further observe that all of you save one indicated that you did not desire to go to Hell. The sole exception is Mr. Lincoln, who did not respond to either invitation.

May I inquire of you, Mr. Lincoln, where are you going?'

Lincoln slowly rose and said, 'I came here as a respectful listener. I did not know that I was to be singled out by Brother Cartwright. I believe in treating religious matters with due solemnity.

'I admit that the questions propounded by Brother Cartwright are of great importance. I did not feel called upon to answer as the rest did. Brother Cartwright asks me directly where I am going. I desire to reply with equal directness: I am going to Congress.'"

Of course, this story does not detract from Lincoln's spiritual life and his strong faith. He knew the Bible well, had read it from cover to cover as a child and often quoted the Scriptures in his writings and speeches. But his punch line proves his brilliance in thinking and also his ability to move and sway a crowd with his earthiness and insight into personal relationships.

As we celebrate Lincoln's birthday next week, let's learn from his integrity, his honesty, his down to earthiness and especially from the way he approached life and people.

chapel notes

Chapels to conduct Ash Wednesday services — Ash Wednesday services will be conducted Wednesday as follows:

Main Post Catholic Chapel, noon;

Regimental Chapel, Sand Hill (Catholic), 7 p.m.;

The Infantry Center Chapel (Portestant), noon

Lent devotions begin soon — Beginning Feb. 18 and continuing through March 18, there will be Lenten Devotions at The Infantry Center Chapel at noon each Tuesday, followed by a soup and bread lunch in the Chapel Annex at approximately 12:30 p.m. For additional information, call 545-2050 or 545-2931.

Protestant youth classes set— Protestant Confirmation and Communicants' classes will be conducted at the Religious Education Center, Building 2518, each Tuesday afternoon beginning Feb. 18 at 3:45 p.m.

These classes are for students in the seventh grade through high school. Although these classes are normally attended prior to an individual becoming a church member, joining the church, making a profession of faith or however one's faith group refers to it, anyone wishing to learn more about their faith, the history and teachings of the Protestant faith and the Bible, is invited to attend. Upon completion of these classes, anyone desiring to join a church will be put in contact with a chaplain or pastor of that particular faith group.

For more information, call Chaplain Robert Wildeman at 545-2050 or 545-2359 or Bill Putman at 545-4715.

Ash Wednesday

Day signifies the beginning of Lent, season of penitence

By Steve Bounds
1st Battalion, 30th Infantry Regiment

Ash Wednesday is the first day of the season of Lent. Lent is a 40-day period during which many Christian churches prepare for Easter.

Ash Wednesday gets its name from the custom of dabbing ashes upon the foreheads of Christians as a sign of penitence.

This form of discipline, which came into practice during the 10th century, is considered a sign of our mortality. Genesis 3:19 states, "...for dust thou art, and unto dust shalt thou return."

The Ash Wednesday worship service begins without the celebration of music or singing of a hymn. The ministers enter in silence. The liturgy includes a salutation, the collect of the day and the liturgy of the Word.

The sermon should reflect the readings and prepare for the rite of receiving the ashes. The people will kneel in silence as they reflect on their mortality and sin. The ashes may be administered by several people, which may include both laity and clergy.

Psalm 51 should be sung or recited in such a way that all may participate. The rite concludes with the litany of penitence and an absolution by the bishop or priest. The peace is then exchanged. The celebrant or deacon may give a simple parish intercession.

The 40 days of Lent probably comes from the fact that Jesus fasted in the wilderness for 40 days before he began his public ministry. The six Sundays of Lent allowed for only 36 days of fasting, since Sunday is always a festival of the resurrection. Four days were added so that Lent would begin on the Wednesday before the first Sunday of Lent.

Ash Wednesday sets the mood for Lent. Penitence expresses the Christians' understanding that our sins are in contrast to the perfect holiness of God. God's complete forgiveness and remission of our sins follows our repentance.

We must remember that even sorrow for our sin and faith in our savior is God's work of grace in us. It is not considered to be a work to earn his grace.

Ephesians 2:8-9 states, "For by grace are ye saved through faith; and that not of your selves: it is the gift of God. Not of works lest any man should boast." Although we deserve God's wrath, he offers us his mercy through his son, Jesus Christ.

Romans 6:23 states, "For the wages of sin is death; but the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord." Jesus paid the price for our sins when he died on the cross.

Our repentance should be the internal condition of our heart rather than just an outward demonstration. The Lenten discipline of fasting and self denial should not be considered an attempt to make up for past sins and failures. It should illustrate the true nature of the Christian way of life, which is self sacrifice and service to God and others.

The Christian life should not be one of just penitence, even though it does include penitence. It involves the act of repentance, which is a turning around — just as a Soldier changes direction by executing an about face.

We should turn away from our sinful desires and actions and turn toward God to love and serve him. Our repentance should manifest itself in obedience to the commands of Scripture and service to our fellow man.

"Blessed is the nation whose God is the Lord."
Psalms 33:12

The winners of the Elks Club Hoop Shoot show off the trophies they received for their victories. They are QueAndre Fredricks (left), Leshelle Matthews and Xaiver Raymond. The three competitors took 15 shots, got a break and then took 10 more shots, and they finished depending on the number of baskets they made. Matthews went on to finish second at the district level of competition.

Community offers family enrichment skills

Family Advocacy Program

The Family Advocacy Program, in conjunction with the Fort Benning Schools, is offering a workshop in family enrichment one evening a week in February and March. The workshop will take place at the Don C. Faith Middle School cafeteria 6:30 to 8:30 p.m for six Tuesday evenings in a row starting Tuesday.

"Families are important to all of us," said Rebecca S. Welch, Family Advocacy Program manager. "That's where we learn how to live. I am pleased we can offer this workshop to our Soldier families "

Dell McMullen, superintendent of Fort Benning Schools, said families face many challenges that early generations did not face.

"Today's culture is much more complex than in years past," McMullen said. "This complexity demands more of families than before." She said that this workshop can equip families to manage these demands well.

Welch's office provided the funding for training the workshop leaders, Chaplain (Lt. Col.) Bob Davidson and Chaplain (Maj.) Robert Thompson. These chaplains took part in a week of training.

"It's really fairly simple," said Davidson. "We discuss and demonstrate three essential family skills: how to speak, listen and cooperate."

"The style of this workshop is very active," said Thompson. "It's much more than sitting in a chair watching a speaker and jotting a few notes. There's plenty of time for talking things over, for practicing skills and for enjoying a few laughs. "

The workshop is open to parents and their children ages 6 and above. Children below age 6 can receive childcare at Tot Town paid by Family Advocacy.

There is no required cost, but families are invited to make a $6 donation to the Consolidated Chaplains Fund. Families can sign up by filling out a form through the schools.

RANGER 75th celebrates Banner Day

By John W. Peeler
Special to the Bayonet©

Special tactics and training were put aside as the 3rd Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment, relied on brute strength and athleticism during Ranger Banner Day Jan. 31 at Peden Field.

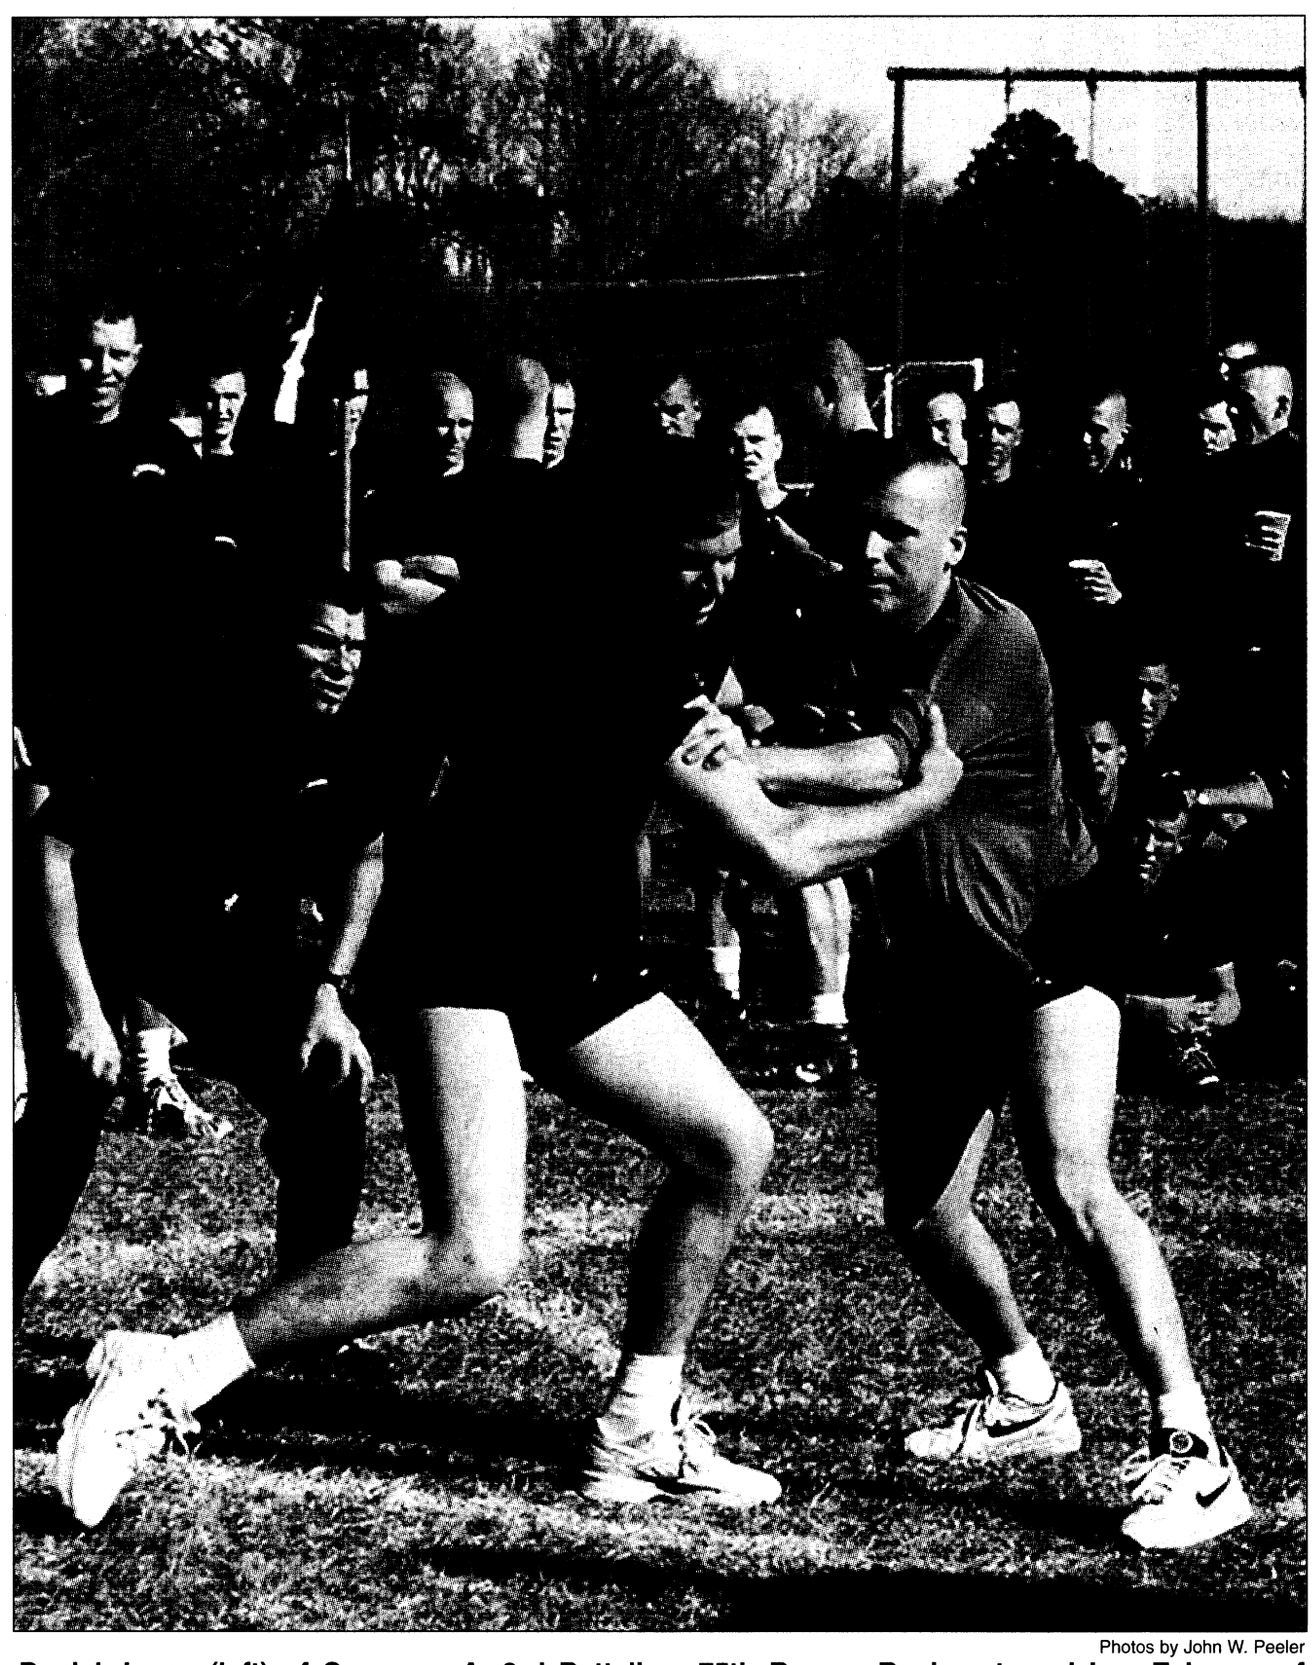
Company A, 3rd Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment, successfully defended its title as the best Ranger company, retaining the coveted Ranger Banner Day guidon streamer and, more importantly, bragging rights within the regiment.

Events for the day included the guidon relay, ranger relay, flickerball, American ball, soccer, basketball, iron ranger, king of the pit and tug of war.

Scott W. Hiipakka, battalion civil affairs officer, said Ranger Banner Day is exciting because it pits all companies against each other with the goal of building camaraderie and fighting spirit within the battalion.

"To win the banner day streamer is pretty noteworthy within the battalion," Hiipakka said.

Hiipakka said one of the advantages of capturing the banner day streamer is that the unit that wins gets to lead battalion runs.



"Most of all, it's the bragging rights within the battalion (that are important)," Hiipakka said.

Co. A won the banner day streamer for the second consecutive time, defeating the nearest company by 13 points.

To capture the title of the best company, Co. A won six of the nine events, placed second in two more events and third in another event for a total of 37 points.

Co. C finished in second place with 24 points, Headquarters and Headquarters Co. finished in third place with 20 points and Co. B finished in fourth place with 18 points.

Hiipakka said the guidon streamer would stay with Co. A until the next Ranger Banner Day is conducted.

Yellow Jackets win 21-9

By John W. Peeler
Special to the Bayonet©

Youth Services basketball action continued Friday and Saturday at the Youth Services Main Post Gym.

In Friday's 6- to 7-year-old divisional games, the Yellow Jackets, led by the scoring duo of Ronald Bray and Luis Flores, stung the Chicago Bulls 21-9. Bray and Flores combined for 14 points for the Jackets, and teammates Demias Lyles and DeMario Stewart contributed a combined 7 points for the Bulls in the loss.

In the late game, the Bulls slipped past the Magics 11-7 with a game-high 6 points from Gary Howard. For the Magics, the trio of Beau Kaup, Shane Lewis and John Holmes scored 2 points each to keep the game close.

In Saturday's games, the 8- to 9-year-old division kicked off the morning's court action with three games being played.

In the first game, Dream Teams' Johnathan Cole scored 9 points, leading the team past the Spurs 25-10. Donell Lewis and Richard Hite scored 4 points each for the Spurs in the loss.

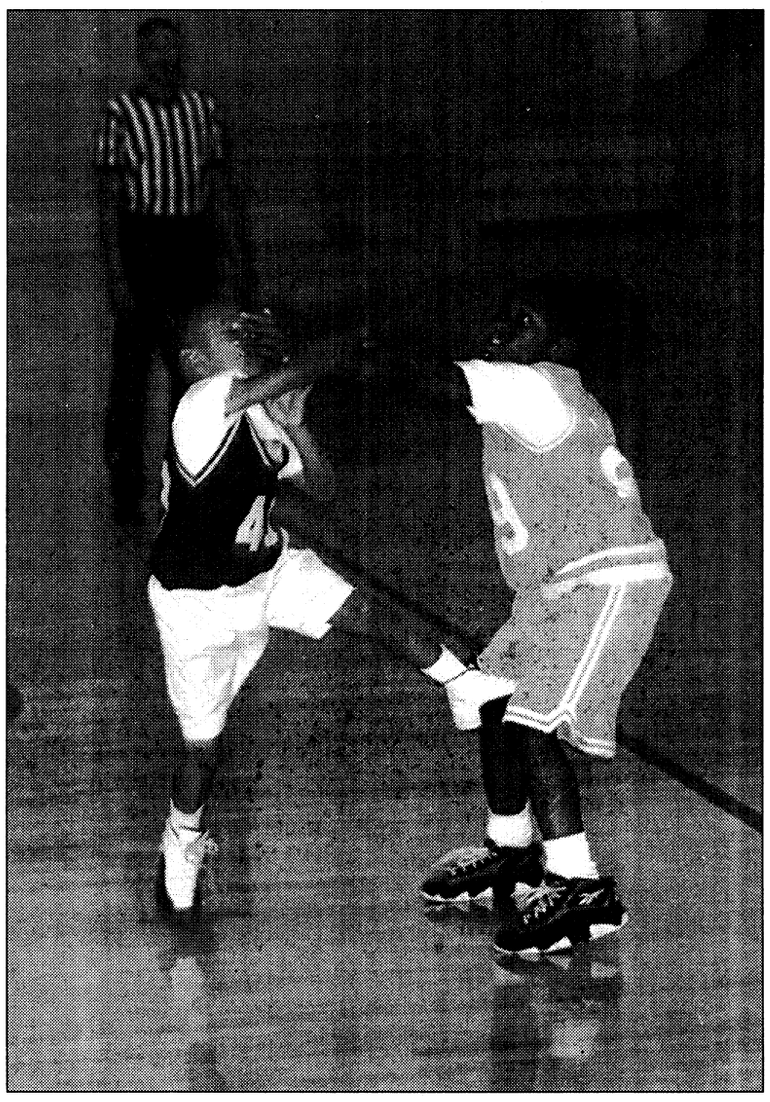
In the second game, the scoring duo of Raymond Jones and Michael Barksdale knocked down 12 points apiece as the Regulators beat the Sixers 30-22. Brandon Jackson was the high scorer for the Sixers with 10 points in their effort.

In the division's late game, the Blue Devils held on for a close 11-10 victory over the Bulls. Steven Antonio accounted for 9 points in the Blue Devils victory, and the team of Kevin Gray and Matthew Snap combined for 7 points in the Bulls' loss.

In the 10- to 11-year-old division, the Spurs posted a 40-17 victory over the Hurricanes. The Spurs' scoring tandem of Andrew Rabsatt and Joshua Artis scored 13 and 12 points respectively with Shancey LeSure posting 9 points for the Hurricanes.

In other divisional action, the Bull Dogs slipped past the SuperSonics 21-18. Bull Dogs' Leon Frazier and SuperSonics' Brian Sheppard led their teams in scoring with 11 points each in the game.

In the division's late game, the Blue Devils handed the Lakers a 20-5 loss with Dommonick Mister leading the charge with 8 points.



In the 12- to 15-year-old division games, Alberta Rosa led the Lakers to a 52-43 victory over the Orangemen, scoring 22 points. Reggie McFadden kept the Orangemen in the game, scoring 26 points in the loss.

In other divisional action, Omar Roman's 33 points led the Celtics to a 49-46 victory over the Magics. Roland Lusane and Brandon Webb kept the game close for the Magics, scoring 18 and 14 points respectively.

In the late game, the Monstars handily defeated the Tarheels 62-33 on 26 points from Cornelius Lights. Nick Brown scored 15 points and Travis Matthews scored 11 points in the Tarheels' loss.

Youth services basketball action continues Friday and Saturday at the Youth Services Main Post Gym.

For more information, call 545-3070.

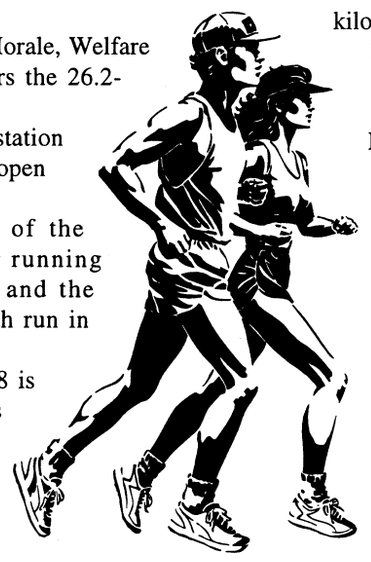
Blue Angel Marathon set for Feb 22

Armed Forces Press Service

WASHINGTON — Race officials are now accepting applications for the 14th annual Blue Angel Marathon, slated for 7 a.m. Feb. 22 in Pensacola, Fla.



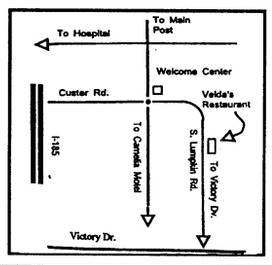
Pensacola Naval Air Station Morale, Welfare and Recreation Services sponsors the 26.2-mile event.

The course runs through the station and downtown Pensacola. It is open to all runners 14 years and older.

The race is also the first of the military's three annual major running events. The Army 10-Miler and the Marine Corps Marathon are both run in Washington in October.

Deadline to preregister for $28 is 4 p.m. Feb. 14. The regular fee is $35, with entries closing at 9 p.m. Feb. 21.

The marathon conducts a competition for military and civilian teams. Teams consist of five runners, and registrations must include a team lineup listing all members, individual registrations for all members, the name of the team captain and a check or money order for $125. Results from the top four runners of each squad will count toward the team title.



In addition to the marathon, Pensacola Morale, Welfare and Recreation will sponsor a five-kilometer road race beginning at 8 a.m. Feb. 22. The event is open to all ages. Entrants must pay a $12 registration before Feb. 14 or $15 by 9 p.m. Feb. 21. Runners may also enter on race day for $20.

Awards will go to the top men's and women's finishers in the overall event, masters (ages 35 to 49), grand masters (over 50) and wheelchair competition. The top overall winners will also receive round-trip airfare to the 1997 Boston Marathon.

Entrants must send either a check or money order to Blue Angel Marathon, MWR, Code 22000, 190 Radford Blvd., NAS Pensacola, Fla., 32508-5217. Make checks payable to MWR/BAM.

For more information, contact the Pensacola Morale, Welfare and Recreation Office at (904) 452-4391 or DSN 922-4391.

Did you know...

While other industries are having cutbacks and layoffs the trucking industry

is growing and hiring.

It's a fact! Many companies are downsizing and cutting corners to make ends meet, while companies in the transportation industry are increasing their hiring activities. According to the U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics, the trucking industry will need to recruit over 648,000 individuals just to keep up with increased demand for trucking services.

As the largest truckload carrier in the nation, Schneider National offers:

- FREE TRAINING
- Job security & stability
- No layoffs in our history
- Great benefits
- $26-36,000 in first year
- $40-50,000 within 3 years
- No experience necessary

If you're ready to consider a new career as a truck driver, please call: Sun-Wed: 7am-7pm or Thurs & Fri: 7am-5pm Central Time

DSP Software/Hardware Engineer

MicroE is revolutionizing motion control. Our award-winning interferometric position sensors are used in semiconductor and disk drive manufacturing, as well as in industrial, defense, and aerospace applications. Sales quadrupled in '96 and are expected to double in '97.

We seek a bright, creative engineer to develop applications software for our DSP interpolator and DSP-based motion controller. Your hardware responsibilities will include making improvements in size, cost, and performance for our current and next generation interpolators and motion control boards. Requires: BSEE, knowledge of Assembly, C, Labview. Experience using DSP's for motion control or electro-mechanical systems is desirable.

We offer a highly competitive salary and benefits package, including stock options, medical, dental, vision, and 401(k). Please send your resume to MicroE, 130 A Street, Needham Heights, MA 02194, or fax to 617/455-6514, or e-mail to jobs@micro-e.com

Army chief addresses sexual misconduct

By Gerry J. Gilmore
Army News Service

Gen. Dennis J. Reimer investigates sexual harassment.

WASHINGTON — The Army's top officer said his service is committed to gender-integrated training and "will be stronger" after it completes investigations into alleged sexual misconduct and sexual harassment activities committed by male Soldiers against female troops.

In his first interview since allegations were made against Sergeant Major of the Army Gene C. McKinney, Army Chief of Staff Gen. Dennis J. Reimer talked about how his service is dealing with the allegations. He spoke during a Monday Pentagon interview with Soldiers Radio and Television Network reporter Sgt. Angele Ringo.

"That (McKinney investigation) is proceeding," Reimer said.

"We are taking the allegations seriously. That investigation, like any other, will be very thorough. We're committed to making sure that the military justice rights of all individuals involved are fully protected ... We will do what's right once the investigation is complete."

Reimer suspended McKinney Monday pending the outcome of the investigation.

Reimer said he continues to favor coed Soldier basic and advanced individual training over separated-gender training. Fourteen percent of the Army's Soldiers are female and about 20 percent of yearly Army recruits are female.

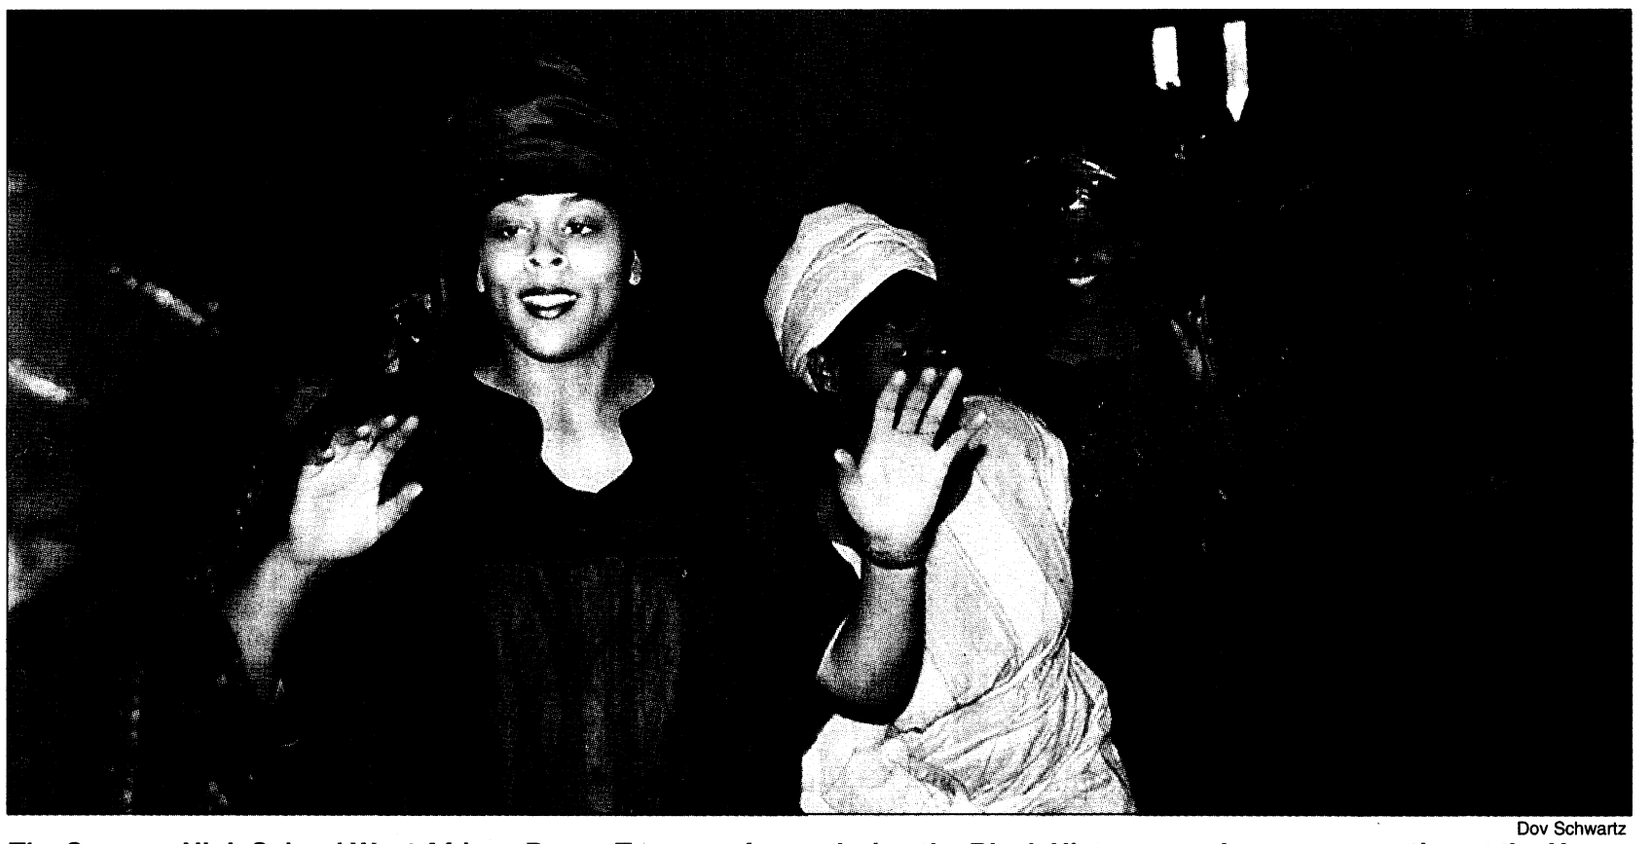
"I think the issue is that males and females are going to have to exist together in the U.S. Army," Reimer said. "We have to find a way to overcome these tensions. My view is that you start that early on.

"I think we have to realize that we're an integrated Army, that we have males and females serving together. And, we need to stress that from the very beginning. If the task force comes back and says this is a problem and can define it in those terms, then obviously, I think we have to look at it.

"But, from what I know right now, I'm totally convinced that gender-integrated training is the best method for the U.S. Army."

Army critics have said that when it comes to sexual misconduct and harassment issues, the Army's reporting system is broken or doesn't exist. Reimer told Ringo he disagreed.

"I think we absolutely do have a viable system in terms of reporting sexual harassment," he said. "I would point out the number of avenues that exist. I think the first line of defense is the individual who's being sexually harassed. He or she must say: 'Stop that. I don't appreciate that type of action.' And, we encourage everybody to do that."



If harassment continues, Reimer said, then it's time for Soldiers to use the chain of command.

"If that doesn't stop (the sexual harassment), then, obviously you'd go to the chain of command," he said.

"But, if Soldiers are not comfortable going through the chain of command, there's the inspector general, equal opportunity, chaplain; there are a lot of recourses available. Most installations have hotlines. There's a Bossline at most installations. We have a 1-800 number to deal specifically with sexual misconduct and sexual harassment."

The chief of staff then talked about the Senior Review Panel on Sexual Harassment, and the Army Inspector General Panel convened by Secretary of the Army Togo D. West Jr.

Fort Benning commemorates Black History Month

By Dov Schwartz
USAIC Public Affairs Office

Retired Col. John C. Holley, the former deputy chief of staff for personnel, 2nd U.S. Army, delivered the keynote address Tuesday at the Fort Benning Black History Month commemoration.

The ceremony was held at the Henry Caro Noncommissioned Officers Academy Auditorium. It featured an interpretive dance performance by the Spencer High School West African Dance Troop under the leadership of Nkolia Onye.

The M.L. Harris United Methodist Church Praise and Worship Choir directed by Jackie Windord and Jewett Wynne, Ms. Troup County 1997-98, provided inspirational musical selections.

During Holley's key note address, he talked his childhood.

He said he went to school in a three-room school house in Windsor, N.C. There was no central heat. He and his friends learned to read from hand-me-down readers.

Inter-city transportation was strictly a back-of-the-bus affair.

Despite the often heard refrain "all men are created equal," Holley and his friends grew up in an America where "some were more equal than others."

According to Holley, when looking at the civil rights movement, we must remember the contributions made by men like Booker T. Washington and Dr. W.E.B. Dubois.

The legacy of the civil rights movement has seen many "footprints etched in the sands of time. We cannot forget," Holley said.

A graduate of North Carolina Agricultural & Technical State University, American University, the U.S. Army Command and General Staff College and the U.S. Air Force War College, Holley is a living example of the progress made by African Americans in the United States.

He also lauded the role played by the armed forces, by way of President Harry S. Truman's Executive Order 99881, eliminating racial segregation in the armed services. "... The armed forces have taken the lead in this fight for equal and civil rights," he said.

Despite the strides made by African Americans, Holley urged the crowd to be vigilant. He quoted Attorney General Janet Reno who said, "The national consensus on civil rights may be unraveling;" however, "the president has made civil rights a cornerstone of his agenda for the next term," he said.

The path to continued civil rights progress lies in each and every one of us, Holley said. "The formula for continued success is simple, treat everybody with proper respect and dignity," he said.

The celebration of black history has been a tradition in the United States since the 1920s. Its purpose is to honor the contribution African Americans have made to all walks of American life and to recall important milestones in black history.

988th completes mission, returns from Honduras

By Brian R. Voller
Bayonet staff writer

After spending six months in Honduras, 33 Soldiers from the 2nd Platoon, 988th Military Police Company, returned to Fort Benning Feb. 5 at Lawson Army Air Field.

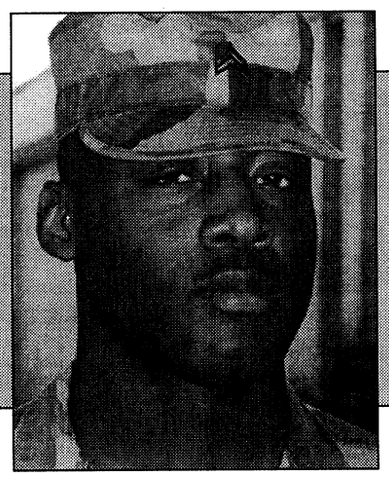
The MPs were deployed to Honduras to provide security support to Task Force Bravo, a joint Air Force and Army mission providing security to the Sato Cano Air Base in Honduras.

1st Lt. Charles Lenoir, 2nd Plt. leader, said the 988th was deployed to Honduras because the area where the air base is located has a very high crime rate.

"My entire platoon went down to Honduras for the mission," Lenoir said. "The air base is a Honduran air base, but we (the Army) have a mission down there. Since our people are down there, we have a responsibility to provide security to those personnel."

Lenoir said his platoon had several missions during their time in Honduras. He said they worked in 24-hour missions in three shifts, providing regular patrols, K-9 patrols and downtown patrols. He said the most dangerous of the three different types of patrols were the downtown patrols because the city has a very high crime rate.

Pfc. Jeanne Smith said the experience in Honduras was good, but it also had some draw backs.

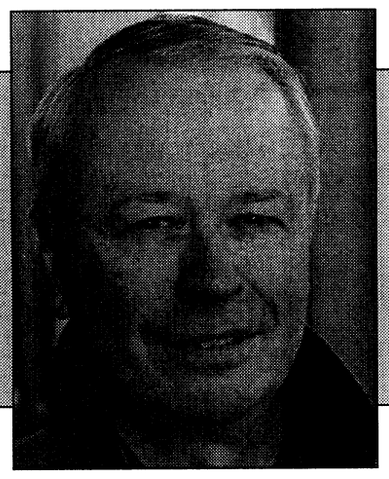


"I loved being in Honduras, it was great working with the Honduran guards," Smith said. "Unfortunately, when I was downtown, I got my engagement ring stolen."

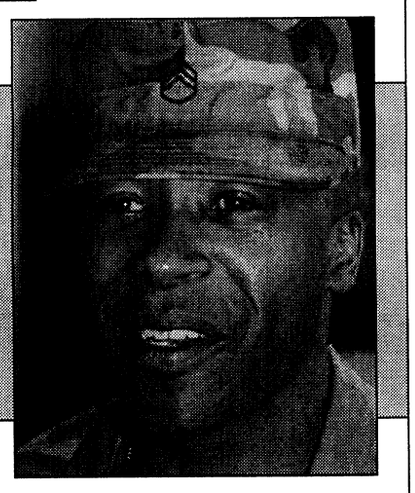
Smith said despite the setback of the stolen ring, she and her fiance, Sgt. Keith Baranow, plan to get married sometime in the next two weeks.

Lenoir said now that the 988th has returned to Fort Benning, they will down load their equipment and then take two weeks of block leave before returning to duty.

VARIOUS VOICES



What do you plan to get your valentine?



Sgt. Kyle Fails, Company C, 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment — "I've already spoiled her with cards and perfume."

Billie Casidy, family member — "I'm undecided, but what I really want to give him, you can't print in the paper."

Charles Casidy, retired Air Force — "I got her perfume, a card and I gave her a trip to the post exchange. We live in rural Tennessee, and we don't get to come here much."

Staff Sgt. Henry Wimberly, 63rd Engineer Company, 36th Engineer Group (Combat) — "I got her one rose, and a box of heart candy."

Patrice Cathright, family member — "I'm going to give him a special dinner and a singing valentine heart."

Debora Burris, family member — "I'm going to buy him some fishing equipment."

Valentine's Day

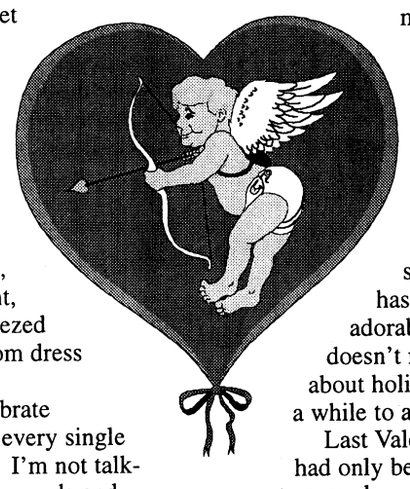
Showing love should not be limited to just once a year

By LaDawn R. Turner
USAIC Public Affairs

Valentine's Day is once again upon us. For the first time, I have the same valentine I had last Feb. 14. Guiness has been calling me for the past two weeks wanting to make sure no unforeseen problems have damaged this record.

commentary

I'm the type of person who would never allow myself to fall in love with someone. Men are too complicated. They never discuss how they feel, unless of course they're tired or hungry. If women do get men to open up, they seldom make any sense, and then they have the nerve to say we're hard to understand.



Anyway, back to Valentine's Day. Men like to pick this one day to show their partners how much they care about them. Not their anniversary, her birthday, or some "just because" day, but Valentine's Day, and I know why. How can any person living in the United States not know when Valentine's Day is? I mean, the cards hit the shelves the day after Christmas. It's in the paper, on television and all over the radio. Even men can remember this day.

They go out at the last minute and fight over the last box of chocolates, a half-dead rose and a bent up card. In their eyes, it makes up for the forgotten birthdays and the "Well, honey, I didn't get 'cha nuttin' for Christmas 'cause I couldn't find nuttin' as purty as you." In their minds, they're geniuses. In your eyes, well, at this point, the guy who sneezed all over your prom dress seems classy.

LaDawn Turner believes Valentine's Day should be celebrated year round.

Why not celebrate Valentine's Day every single day of the year? I'm not talking about Cupids, cards and roses every day, but how about letting that special person know how much she means to you as much as you can. Trust me, this really helps the relationship, and it's much cheaper than roses.

OK, some guys might be a little miffed about my earlier comments, so I apologize. I'm not perfect either; my boyfriend will be the first person to admit that. I tend to go way overboard. I see an adorable stuffed animal — BAMM — it's on it's way to Fort Lewis, Wash. Same with those yucky-mooshy cards, filled with six pounds of heart shaped confetti. He thinks it's a waste of money, I think it's showing him I'm thinking of him and missing him. (Yeah, it makes him think of me, while he's cleaning the confetti off his floor for the next month.)

My boyfriend is the only person I could ever picture spending the rest of my life with. He's caring, handsome, smart, funny and has the most adorable smile. But he doesn't make a big fuss about holidays. It took me a while to accept this.

Last Valentine's Day, we had only been dating about two weeks ... I got him a card and set up a romantic evening. I got nothing in return. No big deal, we weren't all that serious, and he probably didn't think I would get him anything.

Then comes Easter. I get him clothes, a card and two of the cutest stuffed bunnies ever made. I once again got nothing. One month later, my birthday ... nothing.

At this point, I'm heartbroken.

I brought it up to him with tears in my eyes, and he said the wisest and most truthful statement I've ever heard.

"If a $2 card means more to you and proves that I love you more than my actions do, then I'll go get you a card."

I had never felt so bad in my whole life. He was right, he's the kindest and sweetest guy I've ever known. He makes me breakfast and bubble baths and loves me even though I smoke, and I'm not always the nicest person. He makes me feel beautiful when I'm sick and convinces me I can do anything when I feel like the world's against me, whether it's Valentine's Day, our anniversary or a "just because" day.

Now, don't get me wrong, Valentine's Day is a great holiday, and everyone should indulge in the fun and idea of it, but don't let it end Feb. 15. Continue to give those little loving glances, those little love notes and in reality, it's kinda' fun picking up confetti, because every piece reminds you of the person you share a special and unique relationship with.

Believe me, celebrating because you love someone should be celebrated daily, not yearly.

GEORGE WASHINGTON

Legacy of first CinC continues today

By Dov Schwartz
USAIC Public Affairs Office

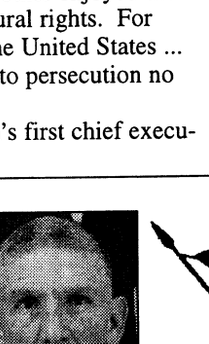
While many people will probably sleep in Monday, I'll be thinking about George Washington's legacy of religious freedom and good government.

Monday is President's Day, a federal holiday established by Congress to celebrate the birthdays of George Washington and Abraham Lincoln. Washington's actual birthday was Feb. 22, Lincoln's was Feb. 12.

commentary

Lincoln, our nation's 16th president, led the country during its darkest hour, the Civil War. His life has been chronicled by Carl Sandberg. Lincoln's character makes frequent appearances in historical novels and television movies.

Washington, however, remains aloof. He is rarely portrayed in movies or books. His image stares down at us from stately murals and sculptures.



What did the father of our country stand for? What did he believe in?

Washington's greatest legacy, and a subject that does not receive enough attention, is the former commander in chief's commitment to religious freedom.

Early in his presidency, Washington called attention to the problem of religious intolerance.

"Of all the animosities which have existed among mankind, those which are caused by difference of sentiment in religion appear to be the most inveterate and distressing."

Dov Schwartz relives history of George Washington.

Washington assured the nation that from his earliest involvement with our new government, he was personally vigilant in ensuring rights for religious minorities.

"If I could have entertained the slightest apprehension that the Constitution framed in the convention, where I had the honor to preside, might possibly endanger the religious rights of any religious society, certainly, I would never have placed my signature to it ... no one would be more zealous than myself to establish effectual barriers against the horrors of spiritual tyranny and every species of religious persecution."

Washington was not a religious man. Yet, during his term in office, he made a special effort to reassure religious minorities who had a historical basis to fear persecution.

To the Hebrew congregation of Newport, R.I., Washington wrote, "It is no more that toleration is spoken of as if it was by the indulgence of one class of people that another enjoyed the exercise of their inherent natural rights. For happily, the government of the United States ... gives to bigotry no sanction, to persecution no assistance."

For eight years, the nation's first chief executive worked to "preserve, protect and defend" the union.

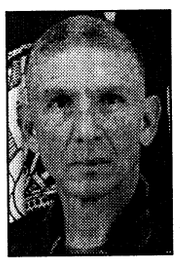
He worked mightily, albeit unsuccessfully, to keep partisan wrangling out of the American political system.

"Partisanship distracts public councils and enfeebles the public administration," he said.

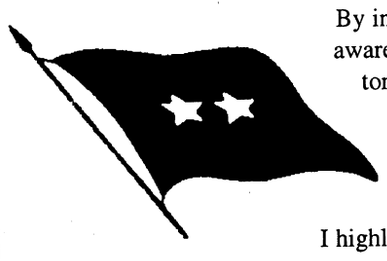
He also cautioned against undue foreign influence on American political life.

Washington's presidency established many precedents that permanently shaped the structure of the federal government. As he wrote to a friend, "I walk on untrodden ground. There is scarcely any part of my conduct which may not hereafter be drawn into precedent."

Some of Washington's precedents included:



•His official title. Some officials recommended "Your Majesty" for the president's official title. Washington rejected their advice, preferring the simple, businesslike "Mr. President."



•Washington established the cabinet as an advisory body to the president, a function not proscribed in the Constitution.

•President Washington chose to appear in person at the opening of each session of Congress in order to review the previous year's record and to recommend subjects for future Congressional consideration. Thus, the State of the Union Address was born.

•The Constitution did not preclude a presidential third term. Washington established the precedent that a president should retire from office after two terms. This custom was later institutionalized in Article 22 of the Constitution.

Black History Month

Former President Gerald R. Ford formally recognized the many contributions of black Americans in 1976 when he proclaimed February Black History month.

It is only fitting that we at Fort Benning celebrate this month by learning more about the many contributions black Americans have made to our nation and to our armed forces.

Therefore, I ask the members of the Fort Benning community to join me as we consider this year's theme, Civil Rights and African-Americans: A Reappraisal, by studying past accomplishments in order to gain encouragement and motivation to attain new heights for the coming year and carry them into the next century.

By increasing our awareness of black history, we promote harmony and improve understanding among all Americans.

I highly encourage everyone on post and in the local community to participate in and enjoy the many historical and cultural activities we have planned for the rest of the month.

OCS presents Patterson Award

By Delicia Battle
3rd Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment

The Robert P. Patterson Award for 1996 was presented to 2nd Lt. Patrick P. Stobbe Thursday in Marshall Auditorium.

The Patterson Award honors the most distinguished Infantry-branch, Officer Candidate School graduate of the proceeding year. Judge Patterson enlisted in the Army in October 1915. After receiving a commission as a second lieutenant in the Infantry Section from Officer's Training Camp, Plattsburg Barracks, N.Y., Patterson went on to serve his country in both world wars and eventually served as the secretary of war.

The Patterson Award was established in 1952 by friends of Patterson, who set up a trust fund to the presentation on his behalf. The award is the highest honor that can be bestowed on an OCS graduate.

The guest speaker for this occasion was Maj. Gen. William F. Kernan, Commanding General, 101st Airborne Division (Air Assault). Kernan is a 1968 graduate of OCS. There was a reception for the event Wednesday at the Officer's Club hosted by the Assistant Commanding General Brig. Gen. Walter Wojdakowski.

Stobbe was selected as the 45th recipient of the award. Being the recipient of a leadership award was nothing new in Stobbe's military career.

When Stobbe initially entered the Army as a private in November 1988, he was the honor graduate of his One-Station Unit Training class. He went on to Airborne School and then the Ranger Indoctrination Program, where he once again earned the position of honor graduate.

During his Primary Leadership Development Course, Stobbe was not only the honor graduate, but also the leadership graduate. After reaching the rank of staff sergeant in the 75th Ranger Regiment, Stobbe entered OCS training.

Here, Stobbe emerged as a distinguished leadership graduate and the Jess Walls Award winner. In his Officer Basic Course, he was a distinguished honor graduate and on the Commandant's List.

Having been selected for the Patterson Award was a natural progression in his military career.

Stobbe spent the majority of his career at Fort Benning. From April 1989 to February 1996, Stobbe was assigned to the 75th Ranger Regiment. He first belonged to Company C, 3rd Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment, which deployed in December 1989 to Operation Just Cause. He then moved to Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 75th Ranger Regiment.

In addition to the various awards Stobbe received, he completed various military schools which include: Airborne School, Ranger School, Jumpmaster Course, the Special Operations Target Interdiction Course, the Special Forces Combat Diver Qualification Course, the Special Operations Training Course, Pathfinder School, and Air Assault School.

Currently, Stobbe is assigned as a rifle platoon leader, Co. B, 3rd Bn., 187 Infantry, 101st Airborne Division (Air Assault), at Fort Campbell, Ky.

Stobbe is married to Elizabeth Stobbe. They have three children, Courtney, 5; Marissa, 2; and Luke, 1 month.

CG to speak at meal

The Chattahoochee Valley-Fort Benning Chapter of the Association of the U.S. Army will serve as host for the Columbus Chamber of Commerce Eye-Opener Breakfast Feb. 27 at the Columbus Convention and Trade Center.

The guest speaker will be Commanding General Maj. Gen. Carl F. Ernst. The uniform is Class A and the cost is $8. Breakfast begins at 6:50 a.m. For more information, call Sgt. 1st Class John Jones at 545-3273.

Reimer: Comments

"The Army Inspector General Panel ... is basically looking at the policies and procedures in the training base, both basic combat training and advanced individual training," Reimer said. "They have gone out and visited a number of installations. I have received periodic reports about what findings they've come up with.

"The other panel is an advisory panel put together by the secretary of the Army. They will advise him on the policies and procedures in terms of creating a better environment for human relations. It's a little broader in scope, and they're due to report in the May-June time frame," he said.

In addition to the two Department of the Army sexual harassment panels, the Training and Doctrine Command at Fort Monroe, Va., has put together a task force to look at the issue, Reimer said. Most major Army commands, like U.S. Army, Europe, and Forces Command, have been looking at sexual harassment in an informal way.

"There's an awful lot going on in terms of looking at our policies and procedures because we're totally committed to make sure we stamp out this problem," Reimer said.

One of the things the Army can do to stamp out sexual harassment is to redouble efforts to train Soldiers to work as a team and to respect their fellow Soldiers, Reimer said.

MILITARY OPERATIONS

1/15 trains in urban terrain

By Robin A. Shawlinski
3rd Bde., 3rd Inf. Div. (Mech.)

The squad works their way methodically down the hallway. With each turn, the squad prepares for any enemies or non-combatants lurking in the area.

Upon reaching a door, one man checks to see if it's locked. Within a couple of seconds, the door is thrust open and the team rushes in to secure the room.

Soldiers from the 1st Battalion, 15th Infantry Regiment, 3rd Brigade, 3rd Infantry Division (Mechanized), are getting their first look at Military Operations in Urban Terrain according to the 3rd Brigade's new mission essential task list of attack a built up area and defend a built up area and the battalion's new MOUT standing operating procedure.

"Things are changing in the world, so this training is really valuable," said Staff Sgt. Wayne Burns, MOUT training noncommissioned officer in charge.

"We created a battalion SOP so that if a Soldier goes from one squad to another or one company to another, they will already know how to do MOUT," said 2nd Lt. Ted Bryant, MOUT training officer in charge.

The two-day training, run by Company D, 1st Bn., 15th Inf., began with a leaders' training session where squad leaders were taught the basics of the MOUT operations.

Robin A. Shawlinski

A Soldier from the 1st Battalion, 15th Infantry Regiment, 3rd Brigade, 3rd Infantry Division (Mechanized), fires down range.

The Soldiers then received hands-on training dealing with close-quarter combat training, distinguishing friendly and enemy forces, quick-fire techniques and day and night firing. The Soldiers also ran through a PVS-7 (night vision goggles) confidence course.

"I wouldn't know what to do if I was entering a building," said Spc. Matthew Dedinas of Company C, 1st Bn., 15th Inf., explaining that he thought the training was good. "There are a lot of major cities in the world and we might have to deploy there.

"I have a good chance of surviving if I deploy these tactics they're teaching us," he said.

AG offers classes on Military Personnel Technical Training

Adjutant General

The Fort Benning Adjutant General offers informational classes on the Military Personnel Technical Training for Soldiers and civilians.

Those who attend the classes will receive a detailed handout of topics discussed.

At the beginning of each class, attendees will receive an instructor training evaluation form so they may evaluate the content of material and identify their individual customer needs. At the end of each class, this data will be critiqued by the class instructor, Sgt. Maj. Allan Thrower, Adjutant General sergeant major, and the division noncommissioned officer in charge to evaluate the technical training and to learn what the customer wants.

The goal of this training is to provide continuous improvement for all military and civilian employees working in the personnel field.

Two days prior to each class, all Major Subordinate Commands will send profs to AG SGM (THROWERA) identifying the number of attendees for each unit. A partial list of classes is listed below:

DATE	CLASS
Wednesday	Personnel Analysis - Unit Status Report
Wednesday	Review Request For Reassignment
March 5	Review Military Occupational Specialty Class and Reclass Actions
March 5	Review Processing of Enlisted Distribution Assignment System Cycle
March 19	Review Request For Deletion and Deferment
March 19	Medical MOS Retention Board
March 19	Process Recommendation For Award

IOBC students conduct defense training

By Lee A. Barnard
Infantry Officer Basic Course

An opposing force Bradley slowly creeps forward in the dark as friendly forces quietly wait in their fighting positions. A trip flare ignites — the platoon leader calls out "Dragons engage!" A lethal barrage of direct fire illuminates the night.

Jan. 28 through 31 students from Company B, 2nd Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment, Infantry Officer Basic Course, Class 1-97 conducted a defense Situational Training Exercise at Bush Hill.

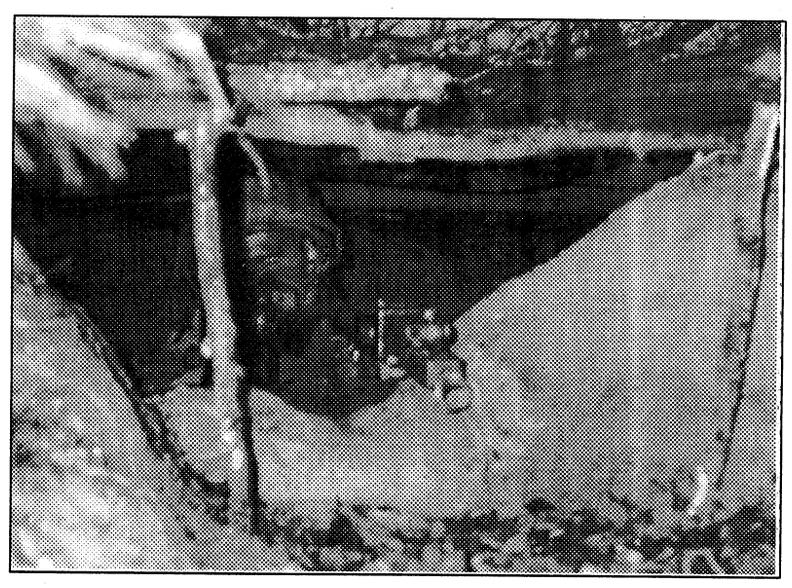
The training provided students with an opportunity to apply their tactical skills in preparing and executing platoon-level defensive operations.

The event consisted of a two-phased operation with four platoons operating as a company to establish a coordinated defensive scheme at four different sites.

Two locations called for mutually supporting mechanized platoons to employ eight Bradley Fighting Vehicles in their defense while two locations called for separate dug-in light platoons. In order to maximize the training value of the event, the students rotated during the change over phase between the mechanized and light locations.

Company A, 1st Bn., 15th Inf. Regt., supported the STX by providing friendly forces with BFVs and engineering assets. Units from Co. A also provided OPFOR mechanized forces replicating a forward detachment of a Soviet motorized rifle division. The event called for OPFOR elements to clear the network of roads and trails of all defending friendly forces in preparation for an attack in the Bush Hill area.

Capt. Kent Strader, the STX primary instructor, said the purpose of the STX was multifold.



"Students should learn how to write a platoon-level operations order for an integrated company defense, go through the steps of defensive site selection, move to and occupy battle positions, integrate reconnaissance and security in their priorities of work, learn how to employ ambushes in the defense and conduct counter-reconnaissance operations in the defense."

When asked about the most important lesson that new lieutenants should learn from the STX, Strader said, "Students must understand how to manage their own and their soldiers' time — there never seems to be enough (time) in the defense."

Throughout the entire STX IOBC cadre provided guidance and evaluated the ability of the student leadership to plan and execute the operation in accordance with the principles of Army doctrine.

The STX began with students receiving a company-level operations order and garrison planning. Jan. 28, Co. B moved to the site and conducted a Tactical Exercise without Troops with their respective platoon trainers in order to familiarize students with the terrain and sequence of events.

Jan. 29 and 30, students conducted defensive operations as platoons rotated between light and mechanized locations. OPFOR elements probed friendly elements during the night and launched a coordinated strike on the morning of Jan. 31.

2nd Lt. Desmond Bailey, 2nd Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment, Infantry Officers Basic Course, takes aim from his fighting position.

Upon the completion of each phase of the operation, platoons conducted after action reviews in order to self-evaluate training.

Overall, the lieutenants came away from the STX with many lessons learned. 2nd Lt. Michael Baker, a prior-enlisted infantryman having served in both mechanized and light units, said

"The key to an effective defense lies in the preparation of fighting positions while retaining the element of surprise—destroy the enemy from well concealed positions before he can react."

"Everyone knows the Troop Leading Procedures, but it's much harder to actually execute the plan on the ground." 2nd Lt. Sung Chong said, , "We tend to take things, especially time, for granted."

The STX proved especially valuable for 2nd Lt. Jonathan Campbell, "It helped me as future platoon leader by demonstrating the difficulty of tasks that I will ask my future soldiers to undertake - I understand their jobs much better."

"Seeing the different levels of experience come together when I was the acting platoon leader clearly shows the spirit of teamwork and a high level of professionalism in the infantryman." said 2nd Lt. D. C. Valvero, a prior-enlisted infantryman with 13 years of active service with both mechanized and light units, commented on teamwork.

IOBC Class 1-97 graduates on March 7.

ACAP continues to improve quality of life for Soldiers

By Chick Eagle
Army Career and Alumni Program

"Transition Assistance programs and relocation Assistance Programs originally mandated by Congress only for the duration of military force downsizing will be continued by the Department of the Army as part of the over 311 Quality of Life programs considered vital to Soldiers and their families," Carl Hopp, Fort Benning counselor, said.

Services such as preseparation counseling, briefings and workshops, civilian job search assistance, verification of military occupational specialty skills, military education and training, and relocation information were not specifically mandated before 1990.

"Before ACAP, Soldiers and their families were pretty much on their own and services varied from installation to installation depending upon available resources," said Hopp who's been with the program for over five years. "Recent Army decisions mean that ACAP services will continue to be available for retiring and separating Soldiers and their families."

To get maximum benefit from these transportation and relocation services, a Soldier is expected to start preparing as early as 180 days from expiration of term of service, but no later than 90 days out if at all possible. Preparation of a highly personalized individual transition plan is key to a successful career and location change, Hopp said. Services continue to be available for 90 days after separation.

The ACAP process begins with attendance, spouses are encouraged to attend the three day pre-separation benefits briefing and workshops currently being conducted weekly in Infantry Hall, Classroom 30.

The agenda includes completion of the preseparation checklist and overview of all available benefits, detailed service provider briefings, and job assistance workshops. Begin to "ACAP" early to give yourself and your family the best chance for a positive transition experience, Hopp said. See your servicing personnel administration counselor to schedule PRESEP briefings and workshops.

PRESEP briefings and workshops scheduled for March and April 1997 are as follows. Program begins at 8 a.m. in Classroom 30 in Infantry Hall.

March 3 through 5 - ETS briefings

March 10 through 12 - retirement briefings

March 17 through 19 - ETS briefings

March 24 through 26 - ETS briefings

March 31 through April 2 - ETS briefings

April 7 through 9 - Retirement briefings

April 14 through 16 - ETS briefings

April 21 through 23 - ETS briefings

April 28 through 30 - ETS briefings.

Soldiers need to begin retirement plans early

Retirement Service Office

If you think planning for retirement health care means knowing the way to the military hospital, you are not ready.

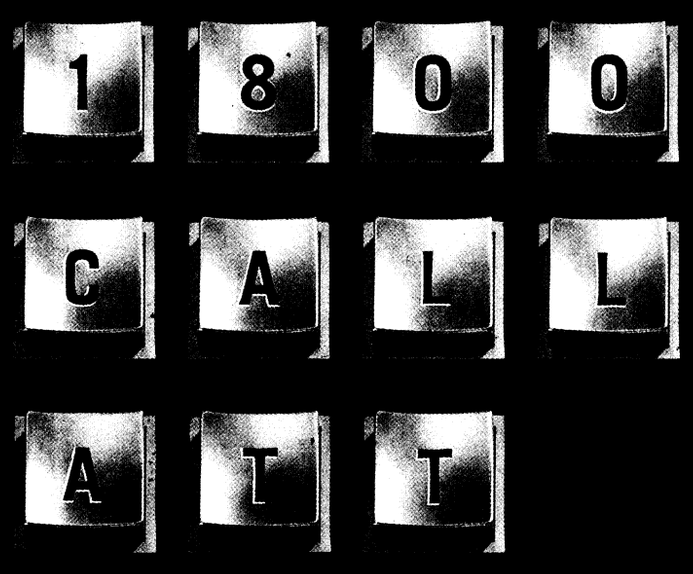
The military is downsizing. Bases are closing, the active-duty force is shrinking — there are fewer military hospitals and doctors.

But have you thought about what this will mean to you and your family when you transition from active duty to retirement? Do you know what Civilian Health and Medical Program for the Uniformed Services and Tricare are, what they cover and what they don't cover?

About one year before you retire is a good time to get ready, according to Retirement Services personnel. Some tips for preparing for retirement health care follow:

•Read more about it. If you have 19 or more years of active Army service, you should be getting Army Echoes, the bulletin for Army retirees.

•Do research. Do you know where you want to retire? Check out the health care situation there.



•Check out private health care policies that supplement CHAMPUS or Tricare. Many insurance companies sell insurance that supplements CHAMPUS and Tricare either on their own or through military-related organizations. You may already be a member of an organization that sells one of these policies — compare this with policies sold by other groups.

•Go to the experts. Your health benefits advisor and retirement services officer are good sources of information.

Dexter Elementary

Fourth- and fifth-grade students recognize role models with a heroes tea

By Lori Egan
Bayonet staff writer

Heroes aren't just imaginary figures who leap tall buildings in a single bound, have fancy gadgets and equipment or X-ray vision.

For the students in Dexter Elementary's 4th- and 5th-grade reading program, heroes listen, teach, care and most importantly, share themselves.

The students answered the question "Who is a Hero?" as part of a language arts reading program called The House, which is part of an interactive distance learning program called the Galaxy Classroom.

"The students were investigating the characteristics of heroes in conjunction with their interactive studies with the Galaxy Classroom," said Vicki Rogers, principal at Dexter Elementary.

"They have been studying well-known heroes from stories or books, TV shows, sports and history and comparing the common characteristics that heroic people share, whether they are famous or come from everyday life."

Marjory Brasfield, 4th- and 5th-grade language arts and math teacher, said, "We learned heroes aren't just Superman, but people who are there every day."

Heroes are moms and dads, brothers and sisters, teachers, sports figures and even the family dog, according to the class.

The students invited their personal heroes to a tea Monday in Dexter's lunchroom to recognize them as heroes.

The students welcomed their heroes with a poem written especially for them.

"All heroes share themselves with others," the class recited. "They are animals, children, teachers, Soldiers, sports stars and yes, mothers. At work or play, on any day, heroes help us make our way. That's why today we are declaring what makes a hero. The answer ... caring."

The children then introduced their heroes and presented them with a carnation and a button designed by one of the students, Rachel Smith, daughter of Tracee and Staff Sgt. Ronald Smith, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 3rd Brigade, 3rd Infantry Division, (Mechanized)..

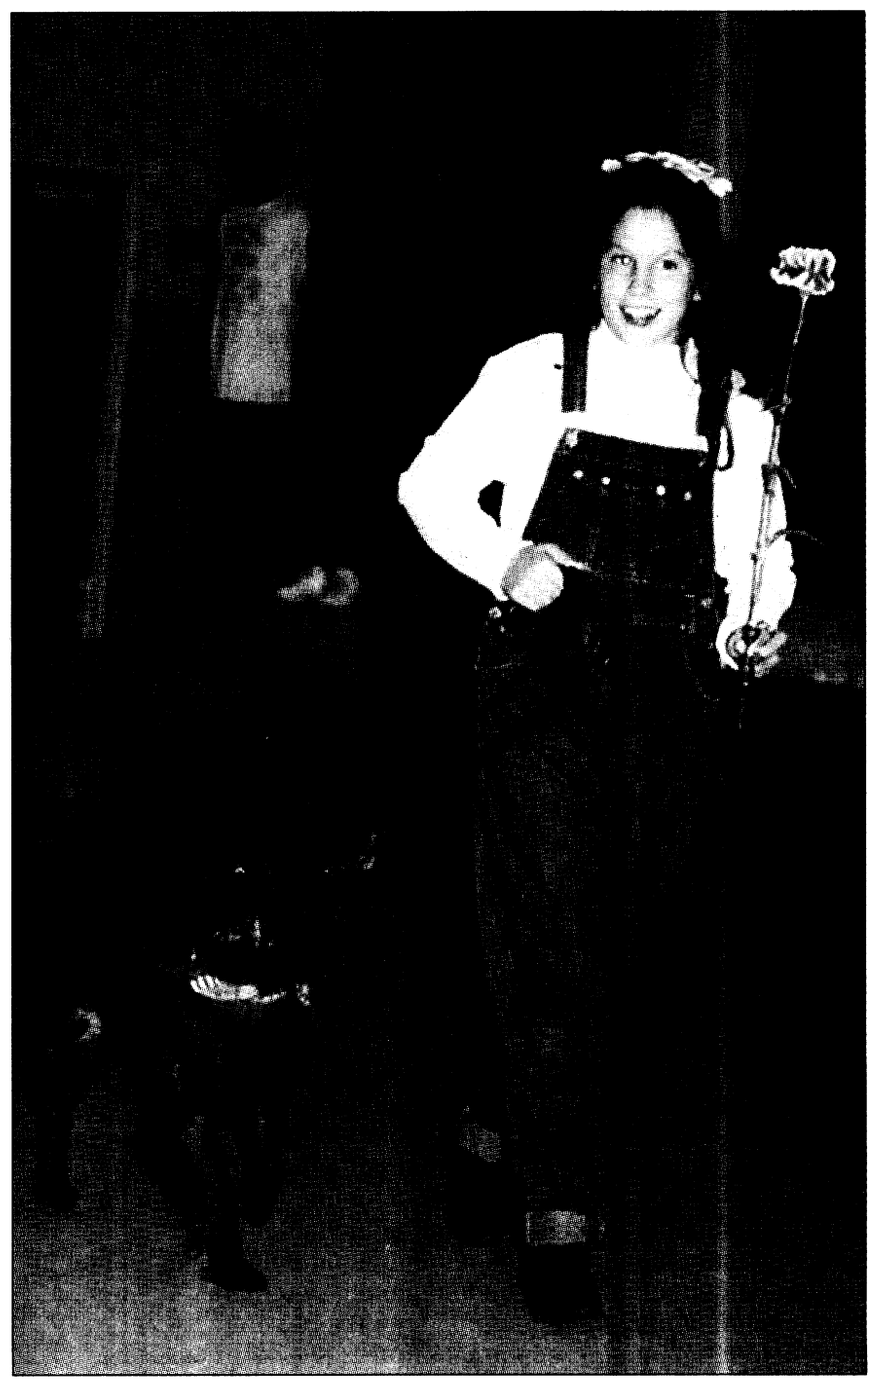
Kayla Collins, 9, daughter of Kelly and Maj. Doug Collins, 75th Ranger Regiment, said her grandmother was her hero.

"She listens to me and she's always nice to me," Collins said.

"I never dreamed I would be chosen as a hero," said Mary Puckett, Collin's grandmother. "I am very delighted and it's quite an honor."

Mary Rothbrust, 9, daughter of Gabriella and Lt. Col. Florian K. Rothbrust, deputy chief of staff of the U.S. Infantry Center, chose her father as her hero because in December he saved her from an angry half-Doberman dog named Max.

"It is an honor to be chosen as a hero even though I didn't perform a heroic deed," Rothbrust said.



Brasfield was chosen as a hero by Christy Winstead, 9, daughter of Theresa and Capt. Curtis Winstead, 17th Air Support Operations Squadron.

"I wanted to recognize her," Winstead said. "She's been my teacher for two years. It's nice to be in her class, we do lots of projects. She made this tea possible."

Winstead also chose her sister Laura as her hero.

Amy Lefler, 11, daughter of Cynthia and Lt. Col. Thomas Lefler, U.S. Army Dental Activity, chose her dog Coco as her hero because Coco is a friend who can be counted on.

"She's been there when I was really sad, when I needed cheering up," Lefler said. "She's found my shoes and kept me out of trouble with my parents, she keeps me company when I am lonely or have no one to play with. She loves me and I love her. That's why I picked her for my hero."

Lori Egan

Amy Lefler walks her hero, Coco, during the Heroes Tea at Dexter Elementary Monday after she introduced the dog as her hero and presented her with a. carnation and a button.

Let kids sport a healthy smile with mouth guards

U.S. Army Dental Activity

Smart athletes wear mouthguards to protect their smiles from serious injury. Mouthguards, also called mouth protectors, are particularly important for children engaged in active sports, according to personnel of the Fort Benning Dental Activity.

The DENTAC staff recommends that if your children participate in sporting activities, they wear a mouthguard. Some active sports include football, basketball, soccer, hockey, skateboarding and volleyball.

However, there are many other sports that present a risk of injury to the head, face or mouth as a result of head-to-head contact, falls, tooth clenching, or from impact with equipment, staff members said. A well-constructed mouthguard used during any of these sports can help prevent injury to the mouth, teeth, lips, cheeks and tongue.

There are three types of mouthguards: ready-made or stock mouthguards, mouth-formed guards and custom-made mouthguards. These types differ in comfort, fit and cost. The most effective mouthguards are resilient, tear-resistant and thin enough for comfortable breathing and speaking, DENTAC staff members said.

Stock mouthguards and mouth-formed guards are available at sporting goods stores. A custom mouthguard made by the dentist is closely shaped to fit the player's teeth for extra comfort.

No matter which type of mouthguard is worn, according to DENTAC's staff, only the upper teeth should be covered for the following reasons:

•The upper teeth usually overlap and therefore protect the lower teeth.

•The front teeth are most frequently injured.

•Covering the lower teeth may create additional bulk, diminishing comfort and fit while providing little extra protection.

Some special circumstances, such as a protruding jaw or the presence of orthodontic appliances (braces) may require that the lower teeth also be covered. A dentist can determine if such a condition might apply, DENTAC staff members said.

The Fort Benning DENTAC staff cautions parents that orthodontic retainers should not be used when participating in contact sports.

Athletes of all ages have discovered that wearing a mouthguard during practice, a game, or while simply skateboarding in the park makes good sporting sense, DENTAC's staff said.

ask the judge

By George R. Smawley
Office of the Staff Judge Advocate

Q: We recently moved into government quarters and we are concerned about protecting our property from potential theft or other misfortune. What sort of protection does the government provide? What is the best way to protect our family's personal goods?

A: The U.S. Army claims system provides limited coverage for losses that occur in government quarters when the loss or damage is due to fire, flood, hurricane or other unusual occurrences including theft and vandalism. The legal authority for such payments, the Personnel Claims Act, is a gratuitous payment statute which is not intended to be a substitute for private insurance.

As a general rule, since Sept. 1, 1995, the government will only reimburse losses that occur at quarters. Vandalism and theft that occur elsewhere on the installation are usually not compensable. Some of the exceptions to this rule include losses to a vehicle used for the convenience of the government, and vehicle losses in areas where the command has directed they be parked pursuant to a deployment, etc.

It is important for those residing in government quarters to understand that the limited protection offered by the Personnel Claims Act is usually insufficient to fully reimburse them for their losses. Consequently, the Claims Office strongly recommends purchasing renter's insurance from a private insurance company. This way, people living in quarters get the benefit of both the Personnel Claims Act as well as any additional coverage a commercial policy would provide.

The Army regulation that implements the Personnel Claims Act limits claims in two ways. First, it defines the claims that are eligible for consideration. Claims that are not cognizable under the regulation include: property lost or damaged as a result of the claimant's negligence (doors unlocked, leaving matches within reach of a child); intangible property (bonds, stock certificates); and incidental expenses (lodging, food, car rental).

The second limitation on government claims are found in the Allowance List — Depreciation Guides, which directs depreciation allowances and maximum payments. The Claims Office has only limited discretion when implementing the depreciation guide.

In the case of a quarters fire, for example, assume that the resident loses $7,200 worth of hunting rifles, $3,100 worth of hunting and camping equipment, $4,100 worth of clothing and a pattern of fine bone china worth $3,600. The family's total loss would be $18,000. The maximum that the Claims Office could pay would be only $11,000.

In addition, property is subject to annual depreciation rates that can run as high as 30 percent for clothing (for the first year, and 10 percent for each year thereafter), 20 percent for toys including Nintendo and Sega Genesis game systems and 10 percent for televisions and electronics. That means that for every dress or pair of jeans that are two years old, the government may pay as little as 60 percent of the amount required to replace them. Many private insurance plans, on the other hand, will pay the full replacement cost.

While the tragedy of a substantial loss do to fire, flood, burglary or other unusual occurrence is impossible to predict, individuals can plan ahead and protect themselves against such losses for as little as $20 a month with a renter's insurance policy.

For more information, call the Fort Benning Claims Office, Office of the Staff Judge Advocate, at 545-2285.

Check out charities before giving clothes

Better Business Bureau

Are you thinking about donating your old clothes or furniture to a charity thrift store? Before you do, the Better Business Bureau of West Georgia, Southwest Georgia and East Alabama suggests you do some homework.

There are three types of thrift store operations. The first is the "conduit-type shop," which is run by volunteer church and civic groups. This type of thrift store usually distributes most of its proceeds to various charitable organizations, often community-based charities.

The second type of thrift operation is run by social service organizations. Here, the thrift stores are operated as part of the charities' program activities, offering "rehabilitation through employment."

The third type involves charities that collect and sell used merchandise to raise funds for their own use. Such arrangements generally work one of two ways. In one method, the charity owns and operates the thrift store. The other more common type involves charities that solicit and collect used items, which are then sold to independently managed stores for an agreed upon amount.

If you are approached to donate goods for thrift purposes, don't hesitate to ask how the charity will benefit financially. Sometimes the charity receives a percentage ranging from five to 20 percent of the gross, or a flat fee per bag of goods collected.

Remember to ask for a receipt that has been properly authorized by the charity. If you need to determine the fair market value of your goods, visit a thrift store and check the going rate for comparable items.

Use caution to avoid burns

Ga. Firefighters Burn Foundation, Inc.

At last count, nearly 150 Georgians died from fire or burn-related injuries in 1996. That total, although less than the previous year, still shows a great need for improvement on fire safety and burn prevention techniques.

Keeping in mind the high fire death rate in Georgia, the Georgia Firefighters Burn Foundation would like all citizens to be aware of a national campaign that begins Sunday and runs through Feb. 22. The promotion is not a sale or gimmick, but safety tips that can keep your family safe from fire or burn injuries.

According to the Burn Foundation, many of the fire deaths that occur in Georgia could have been prevented by following some fire safety and burn prevention precautions.

While people living in rural areas are most at risk for house fires, which may cause death, those living in the metro and suburban areas are more at risk for burn-injuries in the home. Most burn injuries are sustained either by cooking (both outdoor and indoor), or by scalding liquids. Everyone should be knowledgeable about prevention tips for cooking and other various activities around the home because these accidents effect all people of all ages, race and social-economic status.

On the other hand, scald burns generally effect a more select group — children and senior citizens. Children's skin, like that of the elderly, is thin and frail. When skin of this type come into contact with scalding hot liquid, it burns quickly. Children under the age of 3 and senior citizens can receive a third-degree burn in approximately three seconds in water temperatures over 140 degrees.

In order to prevent scald burns in your home, members of the Georgia Firefighters Burn Foundation suggest you set your water heater at 120 degrees. Water at this temperature is still hot enough to sanitize, but not hot enough to scald.

Following are some additional basic fire safety tips that could prevent an accident or possibly save a life:

•Make certain your smoke detectors are functioning properly.

•Be certain that all combustible liquids are stored away from heat or flame.

•Keep matches and lighters out of children's reach.

•Keep children out of the kitchen while preparing meals.

For more information or a free fire safety brochure for your home and family, contact the Georgia Firefighters Burn Foundation at (404) 320-6223 or (800) 273-2876.

For those households that have children under the age of 3 or senior citizens, call and ask for your free baby bath thermometer. Free of charge, this item, when used correctly, will insure that the bathtub water is not dangerously hot for your loved one.

Recurrent stomachaches may be cause for concern in children

Egleston Children's Hospital

When a child develops a mild stomachache or reacts to stress with complaints of abdominal pain, it generally reflects no cause for worry.

But when a child experiences persistent or recurrent pain or discomfort in the abdomen — pain that rest cannot relieve that lasts for as long as a month — see a doctor.

The child may be infected with Helicobacter pylori (H. pylori), a recently discovered, but fairly common bacteria that leads to serious problems, said Dr. Benjamin Gold, a pediatric gastroenterologist with Egleston Children's Hospital at Emory University.

In children, H. pylori commonly causes gastritis (inflammation of the stomach lining) or ulcers in the duodenum (the first part of the small intestine). This bacteria may even lead to stomach cancer.

"The earlier children get the infection, the higher their risk for developing gastric cancer," Gold said.

Experts don't know how children get H. pylori.

"We're pretty sure, however, that H. pylori is transmitted person to person, probably through a fecal-oral or oral-to-oral route, the way most gastrointestinal infections are transmitted," Gold said. "Although the H. pylori bacteria isn't present in breast milk or blood, mothers pass this infection on to their children, probably through close contact.

"This means parents need to pay special attention to hand washing particularly after changing diapers and using the bathroom, and before food preparation," Gold said.

Suspect H. pylori infection when a family history of gastric or duodenal ulcers or gastric cancer exists and when the child develops persistent abdominal pain. Other symptoms include weight loss, nausea, vomiting and decreased appetite.

Invasive and noninvasive methods test for the infection in children. Diagnosis usually involves taking a combination of three drugs for two weeks. Children's successful treatment reflects a good prognosis.

"We don't seem to develop lasting immunity against the organism," Gold said. "But the bottom line is, once you clear it from an infected child, the recurrence rate is very low."

Gold recently received the Young Investigator Award, Clinical Section, from the Southern Society for Pediatric Research for his studies on H. pylori infection in infants.

Nation pauses to remember first president

By Chip Huey
2nd Bn., 58th Infantry Regt.

America will enjoy a holiday known as Presidents Day Monday. This is the day when we as a nation honor the memory of two of our greatest presidents, George Washington and Abraham Lincoln.

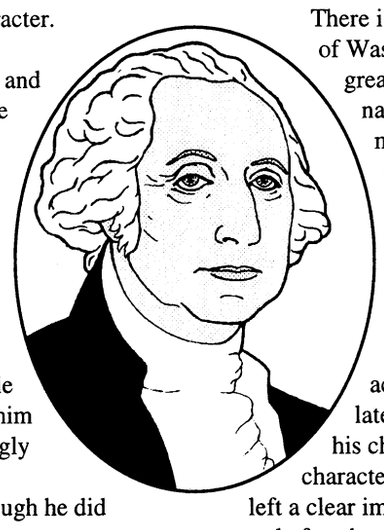
The date was chosen because of its proximity to the birthdays of both men.

George Washington was born Feb. 22, 1732. Presidents Day affords Americans the opportunity to dwell on the character and achievements of Washington and on how he set an example for us as individuals and as a nation.

George Washington was the leader without whom this nation could not have been born. At two crucial juncture's during the birth of the United States, the only thing that held the American movement together was Washington. His character as a man and as a leader is clearly seen in these two episodes.

The first juncture was the winter of 1777 to 1778. After being soundly defeated by the British at Brandywine Creek and Germantown, including losing the Continental Capitol of Philadelphia to the Redcoats, Washington took up winter quarters in Valley Forge, Penn.

Through the bitterly cold, wet and snowy winter, the American Army was very poorly housed, fed and supplied. Many Soldiers were virtually barefoot with only rags for outer clothing. The food supply was only slightly more than subsistence level. The men were exhausted. Pay was months behind. There were jealous politicians in Congress who were conniving with disloyal, selfish officers to try to have Washington fired as commander.



Throughout the episode at Valley Forge, Washington was unyielding in his persistence. He never wavered in his commitment to his duty.

The Army remained intact at Valley Forge only because of the never-say-die tenacity of its leader. Valley Forge proved to be the lowest point of the American Revolution.

Without Washington's courageous, stubborn leadership, the American cause would have fallen apart.

The second juncture was May 1787 through April 30, 1789. This was the period of the Constitutional Convention through the serving of Washington as the first president of the United States.

America's first attempt at self-government had not worked well. The country's leading politicians met in Philadelphia to draw up a new Constitution. Washington was unanimously nominated to chair the convention because of the universal respect for his character.

His weight of character, integrity and leadership did more than anything else to push the convention to adopt our Constitution. That same character - integrity, commitment to duty and implacable leadership caused him to be overwhelmingly elected as our first president, even though he did not want the position.

Once again, without the unifying leadership of Washington at a crucial juncture in our history, America would have floundered.

There is one more aspect of Washington that has greatly influenced this nation. He was a man of authentic Christian spirituality. His writing and his life bear ample witness to his faith.

He was an active member and later a vestryman in his church. His character and spirituality left a clear imprint upon, and example for, the national character of the United States and us as individuals.

As Americans, let us take Washington as a model for character. His commitment to duty in the face of adversity was tremendous.

We, too, should be committed to our duty, even when others around us are quitting, suffering, or opposing us. We should do our duty even when the adversity is prolonged. We, too, should be willing to lead especially when no one else will lead. We, too, should be people of integrity.

Finally, we, too, like Washington, should nurture a relationship with the true and living God, relying upon him for strength and wisdom at all times and in all things.

It only takes one to change the world

reflections

By Stephen D. Fry
36th Engineer Group (Combat)

The Bible records instances where one person has greatly influenced history. Often this has been a prophet of God that has stood against the wickedness of his society.

Today in the United States, crime is rampant. There are many murders that affect families and individuals across our country. Drug dealers and drug users have turned many of our communities into war zones.

No matter how much money is spent, law enforcement involvement or even military efforts cannot stop the spread of drugs and murder unless the people in the communities want change.

Not far from us is one community where drug dealers and their drug customers are no longer tolerated by its citizens. This is the community of Flint Hill.

There, one courageous man, the Rev. Robert Ellison, has been a lone voice crying out against crime in the community. Unfortunately, it took a tragic event to galvanize the community.

Robert "Hawk" Farley Jr. was beaten to death in his own front yard Nov. 16 by a gang of young drug-dealing hoodlums. He was dragged from his home the day after he called the police to report drug activities that were occurring across from his home.

Later, four 15-year-old youths and a 19-year-old were arrested and charged with his murder.

The murder of Farley motivated Ben Eubanks into action. He joined with Ellison and they organized 100 community members into a watch group to fight the open sale of drugs.

The first neighborhood march, camp out and road block was conducted Dec. 23 with 50 citizens and supported by various law enforcement agencies from the surrounding communities. The march started with a prayer that was offered by Ellison and ended some five hours later with a prayer of thanksgiving.

As vehicles were stopped by the police, non-residents of the area were invited to step out of their vehicles and were asked if they would mind if the vehicle were searched. One driver claimed that he was there to find his brother.

One of the marchers who heard this yelled from the yard, "He must come down here daily to find his brother." The residents knew who the drug buyers were.

What happened in the Flint Hill community? The citizens became involved. They were no longer willing to let criminal activity occur in their front yards.

Criminal activity does not need active support from the community to occur. All it needs is the community to look the other way.

As long as people tolerate crime and sin, it will flourish. No amount of law enforcement can rid a community of crime. It is only when the residents take action that the situation can change.

What was the result of the march? Several local TV news stations carried the story, to include pictures of the drug house and the marchers. The drug dealers moved out of the neighborhood because all of the publicity drove away their customer base.

An elderly lady who lived in the drug house was freed. Yes, the drug dealers had moved in uninvited and made this lady a virtual prisoner in her own home. Two weeks later, the drug house was purchased by one of the marchers.

The community has been returned to the citizens because of the vision of one man — one man who was willing to stand alone at first, until others caught his vision of their community as being rid of drugs.

One person can truly make a difference. Are you willing to be a majority of one and stand up for what is right?

Directorate of Public Works

The term "cultural resource" refers to archeological sites and historical structures, which are eligible or potentially eligible for the National Register of Historic Places.

The National Register of Historic Places is a list of historic structures, archeological sites, landscapes, objects, etc., which meet one or more of the Secretary of Interior's four criteria for eligibility. The Secretary's criteria include:

•Association with events that have made significant contributions to the broad patterns of American history;

•Association with the lives of individuals significant to American society;

•Embodiment of distinctive characteristics of a type, period, or method of construction, or representative of the work of a master, or that represent a significant distinguishable entity whose components may lack individual distinction; and,

•Having yielded, or likely to yield, information important in prehistory or history.

Working with the state historic preservation officers of both Alabama and Georgia, as well as with eleven Native American tribes with interests in this area, the Historic Architects and Archeologists of Fort Benning seek to assist in achieving a proper balance between present and future military needs and historic preservation.

There are over 550 historic structures in the Main Post Historic District. The most imposing structures are the curatels. Brick and stucco constructions built as barracks, they remain the core of a historic district surrounded by administrative buildings and family housing, including Riverside, the Commanding General's residence.

Built just after the turn of the century and currently on the National Register, Riverside remains a centerpiece for Fort Benning. The National Infantry Museum, part of the hospital complex built in the 1930s, is a historic structure and is eligible for the National Register.

Over 1,400 archeological sites, some perhaps 8,000 years old or more, and one of which has been designated a national landmark, are recorded on Fort Benning. Over 1,500 more sites are expected to be located by the time surveys are completed in 2002.

Sites include those created by the Muscogee (Creek) tribe, the Yuchi (Euchee) tribe and their predecessors. After the removal of most Native Americans from the region to Oklahoma in the mid-1830s, archeological sites were created by European and African Americans in settlements such as Eelbeck, Jamestown and others.

The preservation of these important cultural resources is an ever-present consideration as the Directorate of Public Works maintains and seeks to enhance the high standard of our quality of life at Fort Benning.

Coach teaches winning, trains boxing champions

By John W. Peeler
Special to the Bayonet©

When boxers speak of boxing at Fort Benning, one man's name comes to mind — Charles Kirkland.

In the last five years, Kirkland has trained more than 250 boxers and numerous champions, some of which have gone to the All-Army Boxing Team.

His latest accomplishment was coaching all five members of his boxing team to successful finishes in the Georgia State Golden Gloves Championships.

Winning at the Golden Gloves Championships were Luis Parra, Headquarters and Headquarters Battery, 1st Battalion, 10th Field Artillery Regiment, 3rd Brigade, 3rd Infantry Division (Mechanized), second place in the 119-pound open division; Carlos Sims, civilian, second place, 139-pound novice division; Barron Von Harris, 2nd Battalion, 69th Armor Regiment, 3rd Bde., 3rd Inf. Div. (Mech.), first place, 156-pound novice division; Rene Gomez, 104th Transportation Company, 36th Engineer Group (Combat), third place, 156-pound open division; and Llewlyn Glover, Battery B, 1st Bn., 10th Field Artillery Regt., 3rd Inf. Div. (Mech.), second place in the 165-pound novice division.

Kirkland said he attributed the team's success to their hard training and willingness to workout every chance they had.

Currently, there are five members on the boxing team.

"When I first took over the boxing team five years ago, I had 32 boxers," Kirkland said. "Since that time, I have trained over 250 boxers."

Still an accomplished boxer, Kirkland said his love of the sport is at the level he is currently coaching.

"I've had offers to train boxers at a higher level, but I like training boxers from the ground up," Kirkland said. "I know that when they do well, there's a part of me that does well with them."

One of Kirkland's latest successes is 156-pound novice class Georgia State Champion and novice class Georgia State Golden Gloves Champion Barron Von Harris.

Von Harris said he has been training under Kirkland for six months and had only fought in one other fight prior to Kirkland becoming his coach.

"Coach Kirkland has very high boxing skills," Von Harris said. "Every time I come in here (the gym), I learn something new."

Von Harris said Kirkland cared about each and every one of his boxers and made sure each boxer had every opportunity to be successful.

"Coach Kirkland has gone as far as to buy equipment for the boxers from money out of his own pocket," Von Harris said.

Kirkland admitted some of his boxers were not as well equipped as boxers from other installations.

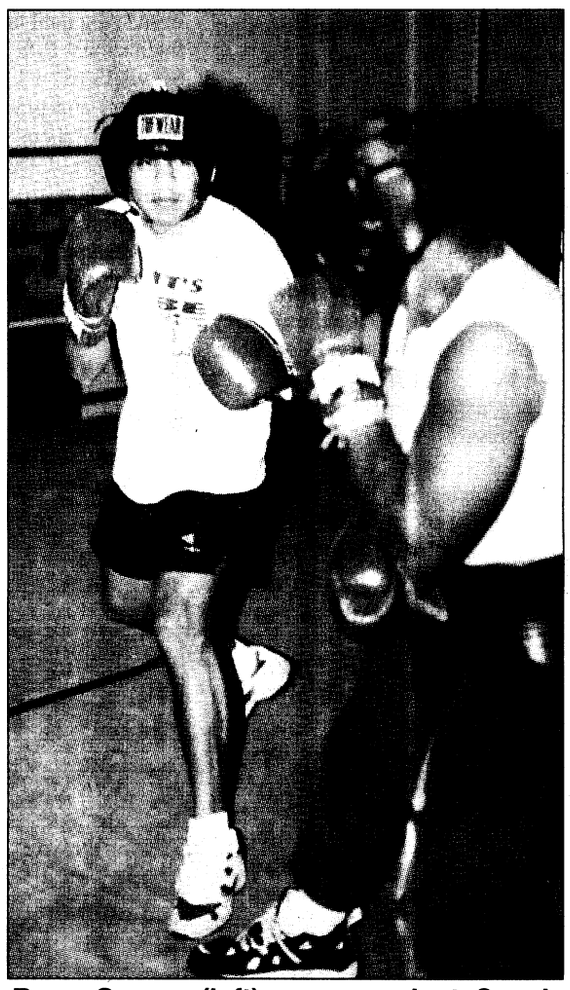
"When they (boxers) get into the ring, if they do not look good, other boxing teams do not take them seriously," Kirkland said. "Support from the installation and commanders is very important to success, and sometimes, the boxing program does not get the support required to produce winners."

Kirkland pointed out the biggest areas needing support are the equipment and boxers' uniforms.

Von Harris echoed Kirkland's assertion.

"For instance, we have a two speed bag brackets but no bags," Von Harris said. "As far as command support, I get great support from my commander, but some of the boxers do not."

Kirkland said he had recently lost one boxer because his commander would not release him to train.



"The commanders should realize when their Soldiers come to me to train, I train them hard," Kirkland said. "The training I give their Soldiers gives back to them (the unit) a better fighter, both in the ring and on the battlefield."

Kirkland said he also teaches the boxers to think on their feet.

"I spar against every boxer on Mondays, Wednesdays, Fridays and Saturdays," Kirkland said. "If they're not thinking when they get in the ring with me, I'll give them a reminder with my gloves."

Kirkland said most people think of boxers as not so smart, but quickly adds boxing is as much a mental sport as a physical sport.

"Most boxers I know also know how to play chess, it helps them with their strategy," Kirkland said. "If they can't think on their feet, they will not be a successful boxer."

Kirkland also teaches his boxers that giving back to the community is an important aspect of being on his team.

"In the next couple of months, we will be giving an exhibition at a rest home for the elderly," Kirkland said. "It gives the boxers a chance to display their boxing talents, as well as entertain a group of elderly citizens."

Kirkland said he strived to make his boxers all-around athletes and giving back to the community is part of being an outstanding athlete.

Kirkland said he will continue teaching boxers who come to him for training, no matter what the odds.

"I train champions — it's what I do, it's what I love," Kirkland said.

Bulldogs unleashed in basketball finale´

By John W. Peeler
Special to the Bayonet©

As the Youth Services basketball season entered its final week, one team in the 10- to 11-year-old division remained unbeaten.

In what was hailed as the game of the week by some in Youth Services basketball circles, the Bulldogs kept their unbeaten record intact Jan. 8 at the Main Post Youth Services Gym by defeating the Spurs in a convincing fashion 29-19.

The Bulldogs put together an impressive offensive game, controlled the boards and shut down the powerful Spurs' offense in the victory. Leon Frazier led the charge for the Bulldogs, scoring 12 points, and Leo Crawford led the Spurs with 9 points.

In other 10- to 11-year-old division action, the SuperSonics got 20 points from Brian Sheppard, defeating the Lakers 35-14. Xavier Raymond and Kenneth Armbrister contributed 5 points each for the Lakers in the loss.

In the 10- to 11-year-old late game, DeJarvis Rogers knocked down 14 points as the Blue Devils blew past the Hurricanes 21-12.

In the 12- to 15-year-old division, the Tarheels defeated the Magics 46-38 on a combined 29 points from the duo of Nick Brown (15 points) and Jarvis Scott (14 points). The Magics' duo of Roland Lusane (14 points) and Juan Montavalo (12 points) combined for 26 total points in the loss.

In other 12- to 15-year-old division action, Omar Roman scored 23 points to lead the Celtics to a 44-35 victory over the Lakers. The tandem of John Fernandez and Jermaine Stevens led the scoring for the Lakers with 10 points each.

In the 12- to 15-year-old division late game, the Monstars and Orangemen battled to a 52-52 tie with Chris Humphries, leading the scoring for the Monstars with 18 points, and Reggie McFadden leading the scoring for the Orangemen with 20 points.

In the 8- to 9-year-old division, the Regulators closed down the Blue Devils with a 40-7 win. Raymond Jones and Xavier Shaw both hit double digits with 14 and 10 points respectively for the Regulators, and Ross Brown, Steven Antonio and Kendra Grier each hit 2 points for the Blue Devils.

In other 8- to 9-year-old division action, the Dream Team slipped past the Sixers 17-15. Joshua Bartee (8 points) and Jonathan Cole (6 points) combined for 14 points for the Dream Team, and the tandem of Brandon Jackson (7 points) and Warren Pruitt (4 points) combined for 11 points for the Sixers.

In the late 8- to 9-year-old divisional game, the Bulls pulled out a narrow 19-18 win over the Spurs. For the Bulls, the high scorers were Kevin Gray with 8 points and Dwight Jemison with 7 points. Richard Hite and Dominique Love led the scoring for the Spurs with 7 and 6 points respectively.

The 6- to 7-year-old division concluded its season Feb. 7 at the Main Post Youth Services Gym with two games on tap.

In the first game, the Yellow Jackets disposed of the Magics 16-8. T.J. Tatum was the high scorer for the Yellow Jackets with 8 points, and the scoring duo of Beau Kaup and Kahlee Tyler both scored 4 points each for the Magics.

In the division's late game, the SuperSonics defeated the Chicago Bulls on the scoring of trio LaQuon Perryman, RaQuon Perryman and Kenvrick Holmes, each with 4 points. Demario Stewart and Samuel Patton tipped in 3 and 2 points respectively for the Chicago Bulls in the loss.

With the basketball season finished, the next athletic season on tap for youths on the installation is soccer and baseball.

Boat registration available by phone

Dept. of Natural Resources

SOCIAL CIRCLE, Ga. — Although boating season is weeks away, boat owners can easily avoid the registration rush now by registering by phone by dialing (800) TO-RELICENSE from a touchtone phone, according to personnel of the Department of Natural Resources, Wildlife Resources Division.

Using a VISA or MasterCard, a boater can renew a registration in fewer than five minutes, staff members said.

"The 1-800-TO-RELICENSE service has been very popular with boaters," said David Waller, Wildlife Resources Division director. "Boaters can renew their boat registrations from the convenience of their own homes just by picking up the phone."

Only one boat registration can be renewed per phone call, and a $4 service charge will be added to the registration fee. Boaters will receive a temporary validation number to operate the boat until the registration card and decals are received, usually about 14 days after the phone call, Waller said.

The Boat Registration Unit reports over 298,000 registered boats in Georgia. More than 18,000 of these vessels are personal watercraft.

State law requires all boats that carry any means of mechanical propulsion to be registered with the Department of Natural Resources. Sailboats that are 12 feet in length or longer also require registration, regardless of whether or not they carry any means of mechanical propulsion.

Boat registrations must be renewed every three years. The fees for boat registration are as follows:

•The (800) TO-RELICENSE service can only be used to renew existing registrations. First-time registrants and owner transfers cannot be handled through (800) TO-RELICENSE.

•Forms for anything other than renewals can be obtained at any Department of Natural Resources office, or at most bait and tackle stores, K-Marts, boat dealers, etc.

ROTC Air Rifle clinic conducted here

By Anna O'Leska
USAMU Public Affairs Office

International Rifle shooters from the U.S Army Marksmanship Unit conducted air rifle classes at the Pool International Indoor Shooting Range Jan. 13 through 17 to teach Junior Reserve Officer Training Corps members from local high schools how to shoot.

Approximately 20 Junior ROTC cadets showed up after school in uniform to attend the classes. They came with their coaches from Hardaway High School and Columbus High School, which have JROTC shooting teams. The air rifle guns they used belong to their high school JROTC departments.

"They're learning the fundamentals from the experts," Thomas H. Whitley, senior Army instructor and coach at Hardaway, said. "It's just the first part of their training."

"This is the first time we've brought our students to Fort Benning," said Richard Pimenthal, assistant JROTC instructor and coach at Columbus. "Other years, we went to Hardaway to have the clinic and AMU instructors would go there to teach the students. We used to shoot the 22 caliber competition rifle. But now, we're shooting air rifles using pellets."

"These students have no experience in shooting until they come here," said International Rifle Shooting Instructor Steve Goff. "They're beginning shooters and plan to shoot on their high school shooting teams."

Goff said that teaching these students how to shoot helps out our local high schools and their JROTC teams and promotes marksmanship.

"It also encourages new people into the sport of shooting," Goff said.

"If you're really good at shooting, you get a letter," Cadet Holly Green, a 10th-grader at Columbus, showing enthusiasm as she fired the air rifle, said. "But you have to be able to average 240."

"We shoot four matches a year against seven Columbus high schools. The top three schools get trophies and points, and the top two schools go to the state finals. If you win there, you go on to the nationals," Pimenthal said.

All high schools in Columbus have JROTC programs. The USAMU encourages support of JROTC programs and other community events by conducting clinics, guest appearances and demonstrations upon request to the USAMU.

OPSKI program offers winter opportunity

Directorate of Community Activities

"We've been sending our troops off to resolve conflicts. Now it's time to send them off to play."

That's the message of AT&T Operation Ski and Snowboard — or OPSKI — a CONUS joint Post Exchange, Commissary and Morale, Welfare and Recreation promotional program designed to combine in-store sales events with a military-wide recreational activity.

Watch for the OPSKI displays in the local PX and Commissary. Special values will be offered, as well as entry forms for a national sweepstakes and your chance to win a ski vacation package for four to Purgatory Ski Resort, Col.

Then, it's your turn to play. From Feb. 25 to March 16, OPSKI teams up with over 130 participating ski resorts nationwide who are offering special deals, including free learn-to-ski or snowboard packages and other price-off incentives. Special regional armed forces ski events and festivals will also be incorporated into OPSKI.

Carlson Wagonlit Leisure Travel Office, located in the Main Mall, has a complete listing of participating ski resorts along with complimentary AT&T OPSKI coupons which you will need to present along with your military or government identification at the ski area.

The CONUS-wide program is open to all patrons of the Military Resale System, which includes active duty and reserve service members, military retirees and family members of these, as well as patrons of MWR activities.

AT&T Operation Ski and Snowboard is a first-ever, joint initiative of the Department of Defense's Executive Resale Board Cooperative Efforts Committee which is comprised of all service exchanges, the Commissary system and MWRs, and is presented at no cost to the government.

It's the culmination of a year-long planning effort that has resulted in a unique partnership between corporate sponsors and the National Ski Areas Association and is presented to you as another benefit of your military service.

203rd FSB moves to Main Post

By Robin A. Shawlinski
3rd Brigade, 3rd Infantry Division (Mech.)

Soldiers from the 203rd Forward Support Battalion, 3rd Brigade, 3rd Infantry Division (Mechanized), recently moved the battalion headquarters and single-Soldier housing to Main Post.

The move came as a direct result of the ongoing construction of single-Soldier housing and company areas on Kelley Hill.

While the Soldiers completed their move in late January, the process began well before Thanksgiving, according to 1st Lt. Shepard Gibson, officer in charge of the 203rd self-help renovation team.

The 203rd self-help renovation team, made up of 38 Soldiers from the battalion, began work on buildings 2815 and 2816, barracks that once housed students from the School of the Americas.

The first task was to remove and turn in all unserviceable furniture from the building. Once completed, the team went to work repainting every room and calling in any work orders needed in the building.

Next, the Soldiers began working on laying floor tile and putting sisel and chair railing in the hallway. The Soldiers added an extra touch to the barracks, though, by installing peep holes and security locks on the inside of every room.

> "All this renovation really improves the quality of life for Soldiers."
> — 1st Lt. Shepard Gibson
> Officer in charge of the 203rd self-help renovation team

"All this renovation really improves the quality of life for Soldiers," Gibson said. "It showed Soldiers that it was the commander's priority to make the move from Kelley Hill to Main Post a step up."

Spc. Kelly Richard of Company C, 203rd FSB, said she was excited to be part of the team.

"Most of us were happy about it," she said. "It let us get away from everyday work, and we got to see the improvements as we did them."

Pfc. Dexter Drayton of Co. C, 203rd FSB, said it was good for him to get involved in the renovation.

"The Army always says, 'Be all you can be,' and I've done it with this," Drayton said of the variety of work he's done as part of the renovations.

Drayton also said he thought those who participated in the renovations will have a lot of pride in what they've done.

As for the move down to Main Post, it has been a big change for many of the Soldiers.

"I kind of wanted to come down here to get away from Kelley Hill, but it's not that much better," said Pfc. John Bush, Co. B, 203rd FSB.

Drayton said the move has been a hard adjustment.

"When I was on Kelley Hill, it felt like home," he said. "This doesn't feel like home yet."

The 203rd FSB is expected to remain on Main Post until the completion of the barracks construction in two years.

Budget seeks increase

By Jim Garamone
American Forces Press Service

WASHINGTON — President William J. Clinton's Feb. 6 budget request to Congress seeks a 2.8 percent pay raise for military and civilian personnel in his fiscal 1998 Department of Defense budget.

His defense budget calls for $250.7 billion in budget authority and $247.5 billion in outlays. Budget authority is the legal ability Congress gives DoD to spend money. Outlays are what the department actually spends.

Defense Secretary William Cohen said in a news conference the budget covers his three priorities for DoD: allowing the services to attract high-quality people, ensuring high force readiness and implementing force modernization.

DoD does not plan major changes in force structure. The budget allows for 1,431,000 active duty service members and 892,000 service members in the Selected Reserves. DoD civilian manpower will be about 772,000. Plans call for a further drop in the number of civilians to 718,000 by fiscal 2003.

The fiscal 1998 budget funds an active force of 495,000 Soldiers, 391,000 sailors, 174,000 Marines and 371,000 airmen.

Some major quality of life initiatives are funded under the budget. While the pay raise is set for 2.8 percent in fiscal 1998, DoD is asking for three percent raises each year through fiscal 2002. DoD will increase the Family Housing Improvement Fund.

"We're finding that in the private sector, they are able to squeeze about 30 percent more in (housing) than we can achieve currently," Cohen said. "So we're going to call upon that fund and use the leverage we can get out of turning to the private sector to create more housing."

Tricare will cover approximately 95 percent of the beneficiaries by the end of fiscal 1998, Cohen said.

"We project that there will be an out-of-pocket savings for those E-4 and below of $170 a year," Cohen said, "and for those E-5 and above, a roughly $240-per-year savings."

Under the president's budget, the Army will receive $60.1 billion for fiscal 1998. The Navy and Marine Corps are slated for $79.1 billion and the Air Force, $75 billion. Defense agency budgets and other defense spending total $36.4 billion.

Journalists take TRADOC competition honors

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Military and civilian journalists from the post Public Affairs Office recently grabbed honors at the Training and Doctrine Command level in the Keith L. Ware Journalism Competition.

Spc. Brian R. Voller repeated last year's performance in the single or stand-alone photographs category — he took second place. Another second place finish for Voller was in the commentaries category — for his movie reviews. He also placed third in the photojournalism category.

Spc. Lisa M. Hibbert placed second in the Paul D. Savanuck Military Print Journalist of the Year category.

The Bayonet civilian contract writer and sports editor, John Peeler, took second place in the open writing category and in the single or stand-alone photographs category.

Sgt. Lori Egan received an honorable mention in the single or stand-alone photographs category.

Voller and Peeler will go on to compete in the Department of Army level contest.

The competition, named in memory of Maj. Gen. Keith L. Ware, former Army chief of Public Affairs, is an annual event with a goal of ensuring the best internal information efforts are recognized for professional excellence and outstanding achievement.

Fort Benning cable channel presents 'It's Your Ticket'

USAIC Public Affairs Office

The Public Affairs Office adds a new show to the Fort Benning Channel 3 lineup. "It's Your Ticket," a movie review show, will feature a different movie each week that is currently showing at the Wynnsong 10 theater on post.

Monica Manganaro, who oversees the production, said the movie review show is produced in conjunction with Military Services, Inc., Army and Air Force Exchange Service and Carmike Cinemas and is shot on location at Wynnsong 10 on Ingersoll Avenue.

"Since Fort Benning is the only Army installation with a first run movie theater, it's great to be able to promote it on our television channel," Manganaro said.

According to Sgt. Bubacarr Batchilly, the show's director, the new show differs from the news-oriented shows already airing on Channel 3.

"We have more flexibility, more freedom," Batchilly said. "Basically there are no rules. We allow the hosts to come up what they think is good without being told what to say."

He said the two hosts, 1st Lt. April Olsen and Spc. Brian Voller, were chosen because he wanted new faces and a fresh approach for the channel's fifth locally produced show.

Batchilly said he believes "It's Your Ticket" will find an audience within the Fort Benning community just as the other shows have.

"We're not trying to be the opposite of the news shows," he said. "We just want to add some variety to the channel."

The PAO wants your comments on the new show. The television section can be reached at 545-5921 or 545-3275.

Editor's note: See Page D-1 for additional coverage.

Politically correct

Terms have no place in the modern English language

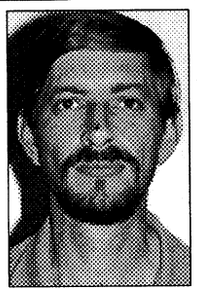
By John W. Peeler
Special to the Bayonet©

Communication, the imparting or interchange of thoughts, opinions, or information by speech, writing, etc., is lost in today's society.

Who's to blame? Those who think it's not okay to hurt someone's feelings or basically to tell the truth, even when it hurts.

commentary

Diplomacy, called political correctness by many, has its place in politics, but not in everyday conversation and everyday life.



Why? Political correctness has an air of deceit and fakeness built into its words.

No longer are we communicating, we are talking to each other, going out of our way not to offend one another and, in the process, losing the feeling and emotion behind the speech.

When is the last time you actually used a politically correct term at home when no one else was around? Probably never.

So why fake it in public? Say what you mean and mean what you say!

Instead of being rude (by today's politically correct standards), just do not say anything. My mother always told me, "If you don't have something nice to say about someone, don't say anything at all," and, "Don't ask me for my opinion if you don't really want to hear it."

John W. Peeler says politically correct terms damage communication.

I live by those two rules for the most part; therefore, I am probably not a politically correct person.

Have you ever heard someone say, "I can't wear these pants, they make me look big."

Well, the fact is, it's not the pants and you probably have put on some weight, but rather than take the blame or responsibility for getting fat, it's easier to blame it on the pants.

So, in reality who are you really kidding?

The same goes for being politically correct.

I would rather someone cut to the chase and tell me what they mean up front than to carry around one of those computer decoders that you can buy with foreign languages built into it to decode politically correct terms into everyday language.

Political correctness is beginning to erode our language.

Eventually your child may come home and tell you "I had a physical altercation at my place of higher learning with a child who was visually challenged, and was asked not to return for a period of three days."

What does this mean? This means he or she is not going to take responsibility for getting into a fight with a child with glasses and was suspended for three days.

The language says "I'm not responsible" and minimizes the event.

Where does it all end?

For those of you whose feelings are easily hurt, here are some of the more recent politically correct terms to help you in your endeavors in masking the truth: Domestic Engineer; Parking Enforcement Adjudicator; Sex Surrogate; Economically Unprepared; Homeless Person; Animal Assassin; Chemically Challenged; Sexually Non-preferential; Socially Separated; Academic Dishonesty; Youth Group; Spatially Perplexed; and People of Mass.

For those of you who are not afraid to "tell it like it is," here are the translations: Housewife; Meter Maid; Prostitute; Bum; Drug Addict; Bisexual; Convict; Cheating (in School); Gang; Drunk or Trashed; and Obese.

I'm sure there are plenty more ways to minimize human behaviors and traits.

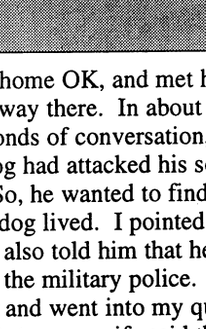
Next time you find yourself being politically correct, ask yourself whose chain are you really jerking.

NAME GAMES

Showing respect most important thing

By Brian R. Voller
Bayonet staff writer

Visually challenged, vocally challenged, metabolically different (that means they're dead), people of mass, or differently statured. Where is it going to end?



commentary

That is a question I ask myself over and over again when it comes to political correctness.

In this modern age of political correctness some people may not question the necessity of having phrases such as visually challenged for people with glasses or calling a person who is rather short in stature vertically challenged.

I question it all the time. I think a lot of the politically correct phrases have gone so over board that they've become more of an insult than a way of saving someone's feelings.

I have several politically correct phrases that can be used to describe me, but to tell you the truth, I don't want anyone to call me any of them. One of the most obvious is the fact that I am starting to lose my hair, some might say I'm going bald. But in the politically correct society, it's not called going bald, it's called being follicularly challenged. Now if someone came up to me and said, "Hey, you're follicularly challenged, but that's O.K. because everyone is beautiful in their own way." That person would be on the fast track to being aesthetically challenged (ugly) because I would take it as such as an insult I would probably become socially misaligned (psychopathic).

Brian R. Voller says he believes politically correct terms have changed over the years.

Another really insulting politically correct phrase is the one for people who are a touch on the chubby side. We are supposed to call these people gravitationally challenged. Does anyone else find this phrase insulting? Gravitationally challenged sounds like the person is leaving pot holes when she walks and causing the Earth to shift it's orbit when she falls out of bed.

Also, I work with a woman who says she's not African American or a person of color, she says she's "black." One of the reasons for her strong opinions about being called black is because she is technically not African American, her direct bloodline comes from Jamaica and she feels that in truth she is Jamaican American.

I have complete respect for that opinion. First, because she is very confident and very proud of her heritage. Also, I have respect for her because she has the guts to stand up for what she believes in, she doesn't want to be called African American, and she tells people she doesn't want to be called African American.

In actuality, politically correct terms have a negative effect on us coming together as a people and removing segregation. The more we come up with different names for different things, the more we start to develop cliques and the less we want to be together.

To me, the very simple answer is having respect for other people. We don't have to set aside different names for people just so they don't get offended, we just need to treat everyone the way we want to be treated. Everyone is special in their own special way and I respect that. What I want people to see when they look at me is a person they can come up to and talk with, not a follicularly challenged, Irish-German, melanin impoverished (white) person.

Resident asks for pet control

I live in a relatively quiet neighborhood. The children play, and they have their moments from time to time. As any parent will know, there isn't anything more terrifying than the scream of a child who is fearing for his or her life.

I got a reality check a few days ago — one that I dreamed might happen to one of my own children. The other day, our neighbor's children were taking their Rottweiler for its semiannual walk in the backyard.

I heard the frightful scream of children yelling for help. I looked out my back door to see two older and bigger children standing around another child who was lying on the ground, kicking and pulling for his life trying to get away from this humongous animal who appeared to be mauling his leg.

The animal was pulling at the boys leg with its rear haunched up in the air and twisting and shaking his head as it was tugging backwards. It looked pretty ferocious to me.

Anyway, I ran out to get the dog off with a plastic toy bat. As I got one bad lick on the animal, the owner showed up and took control of the dog. The kid ran off screaming toward home.

I followed him to make sure he got home OK, and met his dad on the way there. In about five seconds of conversation, I told him a dog had attacked his son.

So, he wanted to find out where the dog lived. I pointed the way and also told him that he should call the military police. I left it at that and went into my quarters.

Later, my wife said the MPs showed up with the dog truck. I thought that she meant that the dog was being taken away.

I went on to think about how it is where I live — having to smell them, look at the filth and mess every time I step out the door, having to deal with the flies and the barking. I especially hate the flies.

Just to be able to sit outside and enjoy the sun and air without smelling the neighbor's conversation piece would be a delight. If you are a dog owner and have neighbors who have to suffer because you want a dog, you should at least do the following things: keep the area clean; bathe the dog weekly; spray the area with water daily; apply something to help control fleas and flies on a regular basis; exercise the dog and let it know you know it exists and, most importantly; be kind to mankind.

We all live here together on this Earth for only a short time. So let's make it an enjoyable time.

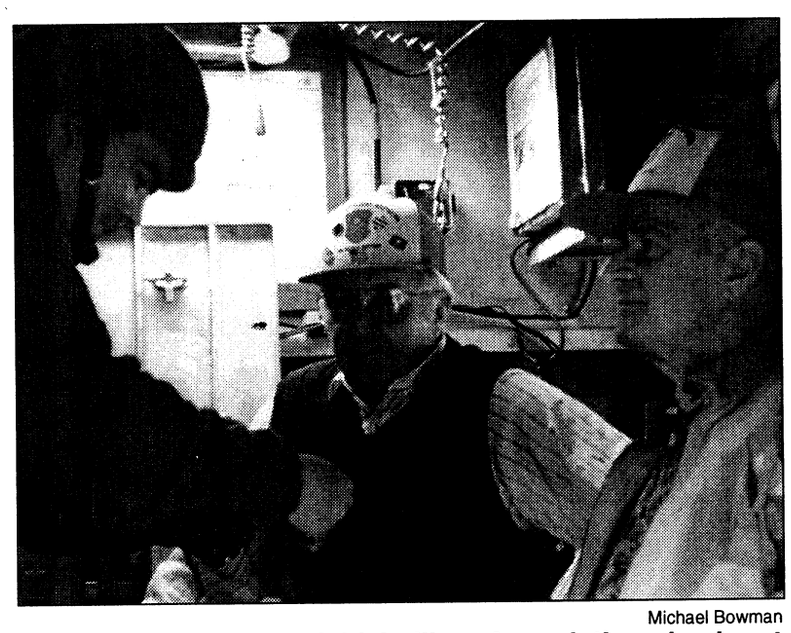
Young and old Soldiers unite and form 10th FA association

By Robin A. Shawlinski
3rd Brigade, 3rd Inf. Div., (Mech.)



Past and present Soldiers from the 10th Field Artillery got together Feb. 5 and 6 to officially mark the creation of the 10th Field Artillery Association.

The two-day event featured an evening social, a howitzer live-fire demonstration, an investiture ceremony, lunch at one of the Kelley Hill dining facilities, a dedication of the 10th Field Artillery Regimental Room and the first meeting of the association.

"The purpose of these two days is two-fold," said Lt. Col. Donald C. McGraw Jr., 1st Battalion, 10th Field Artillery, commander. "First, we're here to honor those Soldiers who have served in the 10th Field Artillery.

"Second, we're here to maintain a linkage between the veterans who carried the colors to combat to those who are ready to do the same thing today. And third, to introduce the current and former members of the 10th Regiment to the honorary colonel and sergeant major."

During the investiture ceremony Feb. 5, the 10th Field Artillery Association officially inducted retired Col. John J. O'Keefe as the honorary colonel and retired Command Sgt. Maj. Harry E. Lewis as honorary sergeant major.

Michael Bowman

Members of the 10th Field Artillery Association check out the interior of a fire direction center.

O'Keefe, a native of Dickinson, N.D., enlisted in the Army December 1961. He was commissioned a second lieutenant Oct. 13, 1964, and attended the Air Defense Artillery Officer Basic Course. Throughout his career, O'Keefe served in a variety of positions ranging from battery executive commander to division artillery commander. He has served with Battery C, 3rd Battalion, 18th Field Artillery, 23rd Infantry Division (Armerical), in Vietnam; Battery C, 2nd Battalion, 34th Field Artillery, 212th Field Artillery Group, at Fort Lewis, Wash.; 1st Battalion, 10th Field Artillery, 3rd Infantry Division, Germany, and 3rd Infantry Division Artillery in Germany. O'Keefe retired after more than 27 years of service.

"I am humbled by the fact that I'm with old Soldiers who have done so much for the 10th and the new Soldiers here at Fort Benning," he said. "Linkages with the past are key and I hope that through this type of association we can create some understanding and some way to make contributions to Fort Benning, the 1st Bn., 10th Field Artillery, and the U.S. Army."

The honorary sergeant major, Command Sgt. Maj. Harry Lewis, a native of Decatur, Ala., entered the service June 12, 1967.

He completed basic training at Fort Benning and attended the Field Artillery School and trained as a fire direction specialist. Throughout his career, he served at all enlisted leadership positions from section chief to command sergeant major. His assignments include a tour in Korea, two tours in Germany, two combat tours in Vietnam, and tours at Fort Benning, Fort Bragg, N.C., Forts Sill and Bliss, Texas. Lewis retired after 21 years of service.

All of the old 10th Field Artillery Soldiers were happy to be around former and present artillery Soldiers.

"This is very, very nice," said Bob McKnight, a former 10th Field Artillery Soldier who served in the Korean War. "This is the first time I've seen some of my old friends and the new (battle dress uniforms)."

Students tackle confidence course

By Robert J. Reynolds
Infantry Officers' Basic Course

The students of Company B, 2nd Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment, Infantry Officer Basic Course, tackled the challenges of the Infantry Training Brigade confidence course recently, incorporating the ITB confidence course into their leadership curriculum. This course, housed at Fort Benning's Sand Hill training area, offered more than just physical obstacles to the new lieutenants. Students had to face the fear of heights and work as a team to overcome the course's various obstacles.

The course is designed to test a soldier's ability to cope with fear and develop trust in their fellow Soldiers, said Staff Sgt. Jose Diaz, the noncommissioned officer in charge of the event. He pointed out the difference between a confidence course and an obstacle course.

"This is different from an obstacle course," Diaz said. "On an obstacle course, your challenge is speed and agility, on a confidence course, we're trying to help (students) gain a sense of trust in themselves and their buddies by letting them overcome their fear of heights together."

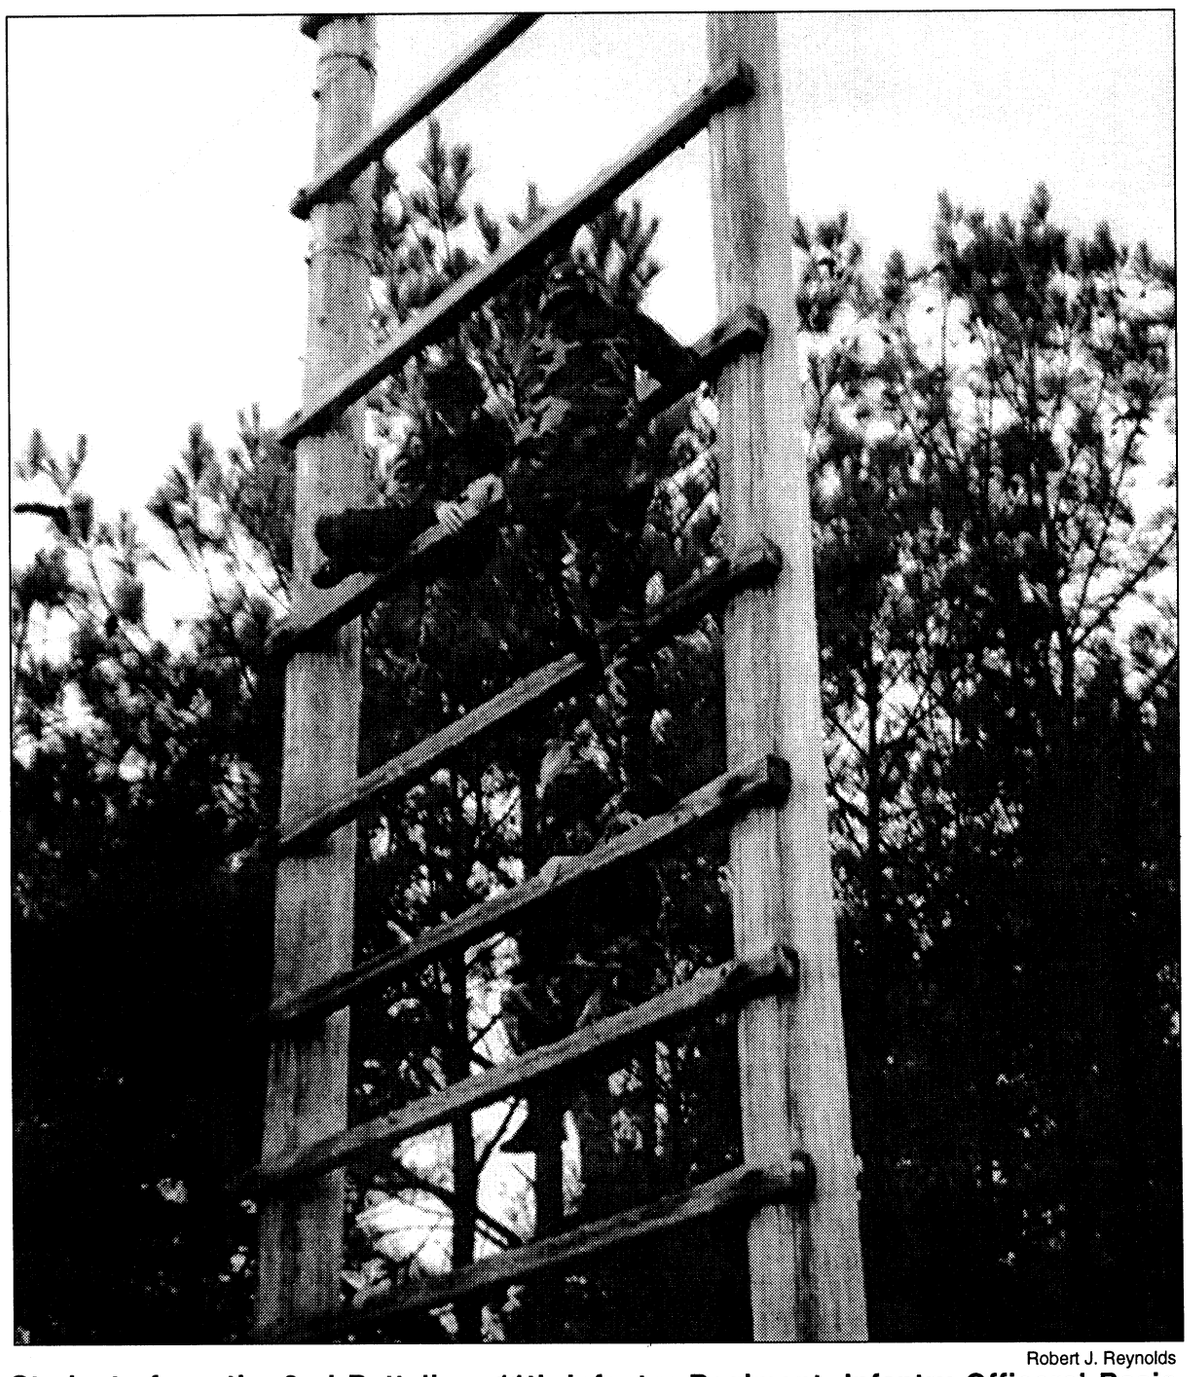
In terms of leadership, Diaz said, "You can't be a leader unless you have confidence in yourself and your abilities, that's what we're building here."

The obstacles are arranged in order of progressive difficulty. This allows Soldiers to develop their confidence as they move through the course. Cadre members were on hand to encourage, but not force, students to negotiate every obstacle.

The student first sergeant, 2nd Lt. Dave Krzycki, discussed some of the challenges in setting up the training.

"To get the training going, it's important that everyone know the route and generally how the obstacles should be done," Krzycki said. "If you don't, things can get pretty confusing. Safety is a big concern, so it's critical to inspect the obstacles to ensure they are safe and in good condition. Apart from a few scrapes and bruises, we had no injuries."

Also during this training event, family members were encouraged to attend. As a result, several family members were present to observe the training.



Amy Copeland, wife of 2nd Lt. Charles Copeland, said, "This seems like a lot of fun, but it looks pretty tough. I'm glad we get a chance to share in this sort of training."

Second Lt. Jeff Perault, a graduate of the University of Montana, was one of the first students to complete the course and talked about what he considered the toughest parts of the course.

"The high obstacles shake you up a bit but the 'hand-over-hand' monkey bars were a killer, the bars you have to grab are so big that it takes everything you've got just to hold on. A lot of guys underestimated this one and had to start over."

Students assaulted the course not as individuals, but in two-person buddy teams. One of the obstacles, the "Skyscraper", is a five-level structure resembling the frame work of a house. It requires students to assist each other in reaching the next level by pushing and pulling one another until they reach the top.

Second Lt. Darrin Blystad described the "Skyscraper" as, "a tough one, because you can't do it all by yourself, you've got to trust your teammate to hold you while you climb up. It's a real a leap of faith."

Robert J. Reynolds

Students from the 2nd Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment, Infantry Officers' Basic Course, attempt to conquer "the high one."

For many of the students, the confidence course was not simply part of the curriculum but a timed event held in conjunction with the company "Ironman" competition. The "Ironman" is a four-part competition resulting in one IOBC student being crowned as the company "Ironman." In addition to the confidence course students must compete on the Army Physical Fitness Test, a timed 5-mile run, and a timed 12-mile road march.

New commander takes control of IOBC

By Andrew Gamblin
Infantry Officers' Basic Course

The Soldiers of 2nd Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment Infantry Officers' Basic Course, officially said goodbye to outgoing commander, Lt. Col. Levi Martin, and welcomed the incoming commander, Lt. Col. David Brown, during a cold and rainy change of command ceremony conducted Feb. 14 at York Field.

The ceremony marked the end of Martin's two-year tour as battalion commander of the 2nd Bn., 11th Inf. Regt.

In his remarks, Martin thanked his family, the Soldiers and the spouses of the 2nd Bn., 11th Inf. Regt. Martin called his time as battalion commander "the thrill of a lifetime." He went on to say that this command was truly a "humbling experience and that you one day awaken to realize its over."

Brown, the incoming commander, thanked his family and wife, Lorie, the families and troops of 2nd Bn., 11th Inf. Regt. for being there on such an "Infantry day."

Brown said, "I look forward to the challenge and responsibilities as commander of 2nd Bn., 11th Inf. Regt."

> — Lt. Col. David Brown
> Commander,
> 2nd Battalion,
> 11th Infantry Regiment

Brown was commissioned in the Infantry from the U.S. Military Academy in May of 1980. He graduated from the Infantry Officers' Basic Course and the Armor Officers' Advance Course, the Combined Arms Service and Staff School, the Army Command and General Staff College, the Joint and Combined Staff Officer School and he holds a master of science in civil engineering from the Georgia Institute of Technology.

His assignments include platoon leader, weapons platoon leader, company executive officer, scout platoon leader, and rifle company commander in the 1st Battalion, 35th Infantry, 25th Infantry Division at Schofield Barracks, Hawaii; assistant professor in the department of Mathematical Sciences at the U.S. Military Academy; executive officer, 1st Battalion, 22nd Infantry, 10th Infantry Division (Light); operations and training officer 1st Battalion, 87th Infantry, 10th Infantry Division (Light), and chief of Battle Staff Operations, operations and training officer, North American Aerospace Defense Command, Peterson Air Force Base, Colo.

His awards and decorations include the Defense Meritorious Service Medal the Meritorious Service Medal with two Oak Leaf Clusters, the Army Commendation Medal, the Army Achievement Medal with two Oak Leaf Clusters, the Humanitarian Service Medal and the Armed Forces Expeditionary Medal. Brown has also earned the Expert Infantrymen's Badge, Air Assault Badge, Parachutist Badge and the Ranger Tab.

Brown is married to the former Lorie Ann Heidt.

Rangers conduct exercise

75th Ranger Regiment

The drone of aircraft engines around Lawson Army Airfield and the thumping of helicopter blades in the skies has been a reminder that the 75th Ranger Regiment has been conducting two weeks of training at and around Fort Benning.

In addition to its home tenants, the 3rd Battalion, 75th Ranger Regt., and regimental headquarters, Fort Benning has also been the temporary staging base for 1st Bn., 75th Ranger Regt., and a host of Air Force and Army Special Operations assets.

The rangers of 1st Bn. arrived from Hunter Army Airfield, Ga., in late January by conducting an airborne assault on Fryar Drop Zone. The Battalion has since been staging out of the Sand Hill area, and has been conducting a wide variety of collective mission-essential tasks and live-fire exercises.

The Battalion's training culminated in a series of company night air-assault raid live-fire exercises supported by Air Force and Army medium-lift helicopters and Army light- and medium-attack helicopters.

Also, this past week, elements of 3rd Bn., 75th Ranger Regt., and regimental headquarters executed emergency deployment-readiness exercises, both of which included airborne assault operations on Fryar Drop Zone and Barnard-Harris Drop Zone.

The operations were conducted with support from Air Force C-130s and C-141 aircraft. The EDREs not only test the unit's ability to conduct major collective training tasks, they also test the regiment's ability to alert, assemble and deploy a combat-ready force within an 18-hour timeline. This capability is critical to the ranger regiment, according to one staff officer.

The exercises were supported by numerous post agencies to include the Directorate of Training, Directorate of Logistics, Lawson Army Airfield personnel and Military Police, who kept roads closed during portions of the operation.

While the rangers understand that road closures are an inconvenience, the ranger staff officer responsible for assisting in securing the training areas said it was necessary to ensure the safety of the Soldiers.

The next time this much of the regiment will be on Fort Benning will be this summer during the Ranger Rendezvous. During this year's activities, Col. William J. Leszczynski will relinquish command of the regiment. Elements of all three ranger battalions will be present for the change of command ceremony.

Students attend first formal

By Tyler J. Oxley
Infantry Officer Basic Course

Jan. 27, students from Infantry Officer Basic Course Class 1-97 donned their dress blues and attended what was for many their first formal event since taking their oath as an officer in the U.S. Army.

At 7 p.m., the mess was called to order and the Dining In for the class was kicked off. The event was held at the Fort Benning Officers' Club, and introduced the students to an Army tradition, which they will partake in once they arrive at their permanent duty stations.

Some of the the events of the night included the punch bowl ceremony, dinner, points of order, a speech by the honorary guest speaker. a farewell to Lt. Col. Levi Martin, 2nd Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment, battalion commander, and skits performed by the individual platoons.

The students said they dedicated a significant amount of time preparing for the night.

"This was a team effort," said 2nd Lt. Mark Olsen. " Many of the key players spent a lot of time practicing their individual parts to ensure everything went smoothly."

The reaction to the Dining In was positive from the students, "Dining Ins are important," said Kelly. "It builds camaraderie and esprit de corps in a social atmosphere."

Once dinner was adjourned the honored guest speaker of the evening, Col. Henry L. Kinnison, the Training and Doctrine Command System Manager Soldier, took center stage.

At the conclusion of Kinnison's speech the colors were retired and the formal part of the evening was over.

The event presented an opportunity for the students of Co. B and cadre to wish a farewell to Martin who will be leaving command of the battalion this February.

The highlight of the night came next when each platoon of Co. B presented a skit.

"The skits were definitely the highlight of the night," said 2nd Lt. Buckley O'Day.

Each skit was judged by the cadre and second platoon took top honors for their individual imitations of the company's cadre.

All festivities were adjourned just prior to 11 p.m., and the members of Co. B. 2nd Bn., 11th Inf. Regt., headed home. Designated drivers for the evening were appointed to ensure all lieutenants got home safely.

Black history month program to honor namesake

Stowers Elementary School

In celebration of Black History Month, Stowers Elementary School will present a Black History Month Celebration Feb. 28 at 9 a.m. in the school's cafeteria.

The program will feature Faith Middle School Teacher Faye Lewis-Strong and guest speakers Col. Michael Bingham, school board president and retired Col. Roy Plummer, a former chaplain.

Stowers is the only elementary school on Fort Benning named after an African-American, Cpl. Freddie Stowers.

Stowers was born and raised in Sandy Springs, S.C. and was the only black Medal of Honor recipient from World War I. He joined the First Provisional Infantry Regiment, one of the Army's all-black units, Oct. 4, 1917. His unit was redesignated the 371st and was shipped overseas to join the American Expeditionary Force.

In his first major action, the battle for Hill 188, the 371st received a citation from the French Government. Stowers and four of his fellow Soldiers were nominated for the Congressional Medal of Honor. The awards were eventually downgraded to the Distinguished Service Cross. Stowers' paperwork was inadvertently lost and was not found until 1989. Former President George Bush presented Stowers with a Medal of Honor April 24, 1991.

Army Teen Panel voices concerns

Army Teen Panel

What worries you? The Army Teen panel wanted to know, so they asked teen family members throughout the Army.

These are the issues that concern Army teens the most, according to an informal survey conducted by the Army Teen Panel. The questions asked pertained to teen violence and the lack of teen "hangouts" on Army installations. More than 1,640 teens were surveyed Army-wide. The top three responses by percentages are listed below.

This is what Army teens had to say:

•What kind of violence affects our communities?

37.7 percent responded none
22.8 percent responded gangs

•How does the violence in your life affect you?

65 percent responded affected in some way
7 percent responded frightened
3 percent responded angry

•What solutions do you see for this violence?

20 percent responded none
20 percent responded get involved with teen center
16 percent responded more police involvement

•If there was a teen center in your community, would you spend time there?

83 percent responded yes
12 percent responded no
5 percent responded undecided

•What kind of activities would you like at your installation?

32 percent responded dances
31 percent responded tournaments
19 percent responded socializing and trips

•What kind of equipment would you like at the teen center?

35 percent responded sports equipment
23 percent responded entertainment equipment
18 percent computer games

•What would be the hours you would like a teen center open?

61 percent responded weekdays 3 p.m. to 10 p.m.
54 percent responded weekends noon to 12 a.m.
91 percent summer noon to 10 p.m.

•Where should the teen center be located?

46 percent responded near housing
18 percent equal distance from all housing areas (central location)
6 percent present location

•How would a teen center decrease the problems with teens?

37 percent responded keeps teens off the street
25 percent responded provides something for teens to do
11 percent responded its a place for teens to hang out.

Army Teen Panel

The Army Teen Panel is a group of eleven teens who are nominated by installation and Major Army command Youth Services to represent teens Army-wide. Eight of the teens represent major commands and three are At-Large members. The Army Teen Panels goal is to increase and improve communications between Army teens and leadership.

The members have the opportunity to take communication to a another level. They conduct briefings with the army leadership on issues that are really important to Army teen and show the Army Leadership that teens really do care.

Post teen council plans show

By Lisa M. Hibbert
Bayonet staff writer

Fort Benning's teen council recently met at the Indianhead Recreation center.

Under the leadership of teen council president, 10th-grader Corey Hudson, six teens gathered to plan and recap the council agenda.

One of the planned events for the youth is a fashion show.

The show will take place Saturday, at 6 p.m., at the Youth Services Main Center, Building 1056.

The models, all teen members of the Indianhead Recreation Center, will be modeling African clothing in honor of Black History Month. Justine Booth, director of the Indianhead Center is coordinating this function.

The event is free and is open to all.

Other planned activities include a basketball game with the Basketeers of WFXE, Foxie 105 and Teen Day, a day of events in which the next teen-council president will be selected.

Other members present at the meeting were Feroza Yasin, Lyndrah Quartimon, Michalla Quartimon, Shadon McConnell, Ian Furman, and Shinequa Seay.

Getting sealants for young teeth prevents future decay

US Army Dental Activity

February is National Children's Dental Health Month. The Fort Benning Dental Activity notes that with proper care and regular checkups, children's teeth can last a lifetime. The Dental Activity has these tips for keeping your child's teeth healthy and decay-free.

Tooth decay is caused by bacteria. The bacteria is found in a sticky, colorless film called plaque. For tooth decay to occur, three elements are needed: plaque, food containing sugars and starches and a susceptible tooth.

When foods containing sugars and starches are left in the mouth, plaque bacteria produce acids that can dissolve tooth enamel. The sticky plaque holds these acids onto the teeth, where they attack the enamel for twenty minutes or more. After repeated attacks, the enamel may break down, forming a cavity.

According to Lt. Col. Alberto Lugo, Preventive Dentistry officer, toothbrushing and flossing are needed daily to remove harmful plaque from your child's teeth and to prevent tooth decay.

"Children should clean their teeth twice a day with a pea-sized amount of fluoride toothpaste," Lugo said.

Additionally, flossing removes plaque that hides between the teeth and under the gumline, areas where a toothbrush can't reach, Lugo said. Supervise your child while brushing and flossing to insure that a proper job is done.

Also, dental sealants can help to prevent or reduce tooth decay, Lugo said. A sealant is a clear or shaded plastic material that is applied to the chewing surfaces of the back teeth (premolars and molars), where decay occurs most often. The sealant acts as a barrier, protecting the decay-prone areas of the back teeth from plaque and acid. According to Lugo, each tooth takes only a few minutes to seal in the dental office.

"When the sealant is applied, finger-like strands penetrate the pits and fissures of the tooth enamel. Although the sealant cannot be seen with the naked eye, the protective effect of these strands continues," Lugo said.

As a result, it may be several years before another application of sealant is needed. Reapplication of the sealant will continue to protect against decay and may save the time and expense of restoring a decayed tooth. Sealants are checked during your child's regular dental visits to determine if reapplication is necessary.

For long-lasting, healthy smiles, the Dental Activity recommends a total prevention program including regular dental visits, the use of fluoride toothpaste, daily brushing and flossing and avoiding frequent, between-meal snacks. If these measures are followed and sealants are applied to the child's teeth, the risk of decay can be reduced or even eliminated.

Hospital to provide shuttle service

By Jalesia Griffin
Martin Army Community Hospital

Wednesday, Martin Army Community Hospital, in cooperation with the American Red Cross, will present their new Patient Transport Shuttle System. The new system uses two four-passenger transportation carts to carry patients from the parking lot to the hospital and vice versa.

According to hospital officials, the carts were purchased using Army Communities of Excellence award money in response to the most common complaint of patients — shortage of parking spaces close to the hospital. Patients who were ill did not like walking to the hospital from the lower lots. This represents a significant step forward in patient service and convenience.

"The carts will be particularly useful for patients with impaired mobility due to illness or injury," said Col. Everett W. Newcomb, MACH commander.

The American Red Cross is playing an integral part in the success of the transport system because they are providing the drivers. Each volunteer goes through a training process to ensure safety rules are followed.

First Lt. Michael Adragna, the officer who spearheaded the project, reminds patients to maintain the appropriate 15 mph speed limit in the parking lots.

"It's especially important now that we have this service," Adragna said. " This new service is designed to promote a more friendly, safe, patient-oriented environment.

Adragna also encourages patients not to be shy about using the system. Patients should flag down the drivers if necessary. Signs posted by the entrance of the parking lot and the clinic entrance will inform the patients whether or not the carts are in use.

The grand opening begins at 10 a.m. in front of the main entrance to the hospital and all are invited to attend.

Due to the shortage of drivers, the transport system will only operate Tuesday through Thursday from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m.

The service will be expanded if additional drivers can be found who are willing to volunteer a few hours of their time.

Anyone interested in driving for the transport system, call the American Red Cross at 544-4223 or Adragna at 544-1384.

11th Infantry gets building improvements

The 11th Infantry and Directorate of Public Works have been working together to improve the facilities used by our airborne Soldiers. These improvements include new barrack roofs, replacing drainage systems and gas piping. One improvement that has been long in coming is the replacement of the outdated latrine on Eubanks Field.

Using our Job Order Contractor, Brown and Root, Inc., DPW is constructing a new facility at a cost of $90,000. The scheduled completion of this 900 square feet facility is March. This facility will provide a modern latrine with showers, water fountains, and conforms with federal guidelines for handicapped accessibility. In addition, Brown and Root is using colored splitfaced blocks and mortar that is aesthetically pleasing but will require little or no exterior maintenance for many years.

Landfield space is at a premium everywhere

One more way you can help save space in landfills is by eliminating unwanted mail. More than half of all advertising mail is thrown away unopened. In 1990, third class mail made up more than 2 percent of the waste disposed in the United States (3.6 million tons). To reduce this amount by more than 50 percent, contact the Direct Marketing Association and inform them that you would like your name removed from the computerized mailing lists. MACH changes presciption pick-ups

By Jalesia Griffin
Martin Army Community Hospital

The Outpatient Pharmacy at Martin Army Hospital now offers patients two choices when filling prescriptions. Patients may either drop prescriptions off to pick up later or wait in the pharmacy lobby for their prescriptions to be filled.

Why the change? MACH completely renovated the Outpatient Pharmacy in October by installing a multiple window dispensing system. According to hospital officals, the new pharmacy was initiated to increase patient counseling, improve medication on compliance, increase efficiency and decrease waiting time.

However, the new system required a sufficient number of personnel to operate the windows and because of the way it was designed, did not accept dropped off prescriptions.

Patients received ticket numbers and had to wait for their prescriptions to be filled within the immediate area of the lobby. Patients who missed their ticket number had to pull another number and wait all over again. The pharmacy staff realized this challenge and, in response to patient suggestions, took action.

Sgt. 1st Class Willie Sims, non-commissioned officer in charge of the pharmacy, said, "With the military cutbacks, we have not been able to acquire enough personnel to operate the windows. This system is manpower intensive, which is one reasons it hasn't been working like we planned."

Responding to patient concerns, a small working group was formed to work toward a solution.

"One of the primary missions of Martin Army is to remain customer focused," said Maj. Isiah Harper, chief of Pharmacy. "It took a strong effort on the part of our work group to devise a solution to patients concerns. Harper said the most common complaint came from those individuals that did not have the time to wait for prescriptions to be filled. With the new option, patients do not have to wait.

When patients drop off prescriptions, the medication can b picked up approximately two hours later. Prescriptions dropped off after 4 p.m. will be ready the following day. Prescriptions not picked up within three days will be returned to stock. The pharmacy created brochures to assist individuals in using the new system.

For more information, call th pharmacy at 544-4771, Monday through Friday, from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m.; and Saturdays, 8 a.m. to 4 p.m.

PRAYER BREAKFAST

Fort Benning celebrates national day of atonement

By Lisa M. Hibbert
Bayonet staff writer

Fort Benning celebrated National Prayer Day with a breakfast, Feb. 13 at the Fort Benning Officer's Club.

Chaplain (Col.) Herbert E. Kitchens, U.S. Army Infantry Center staff chaplain, opened the celebration by welcoming the crowd and giving a short background of the day.

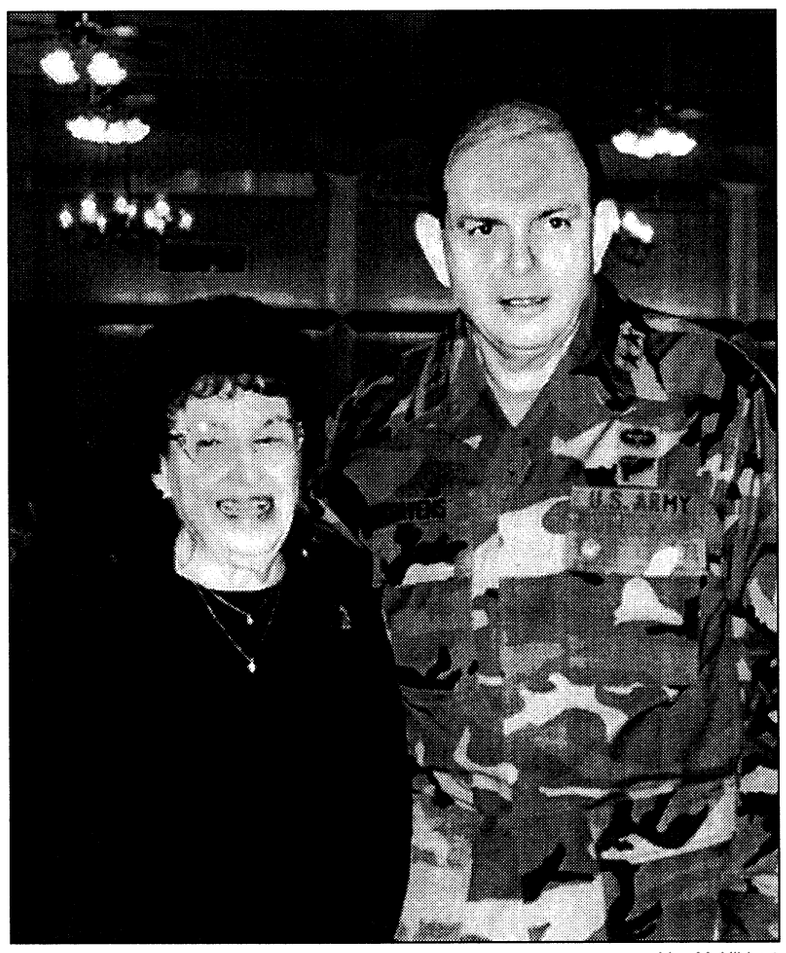
President Dwight D. Eisenhower set aside a national day of prayer. Each year people across the country honor this day by beginning their morning communing with the Lord, Kitchens said.

Cheryl Anderson, wife of col. Dorian T. Anderson, commander, Ranger Training Brigade, provided music for the program. She sang two songs, "He was There All the Time," and "Pour on the Power," and talked about her love for the Lord.

Anderson told the audience how she accepted Jesus as her Lord and Savior when she was 17 years old.

Maj. Gen. Carl F. Ernst, post Commanding General, provided comments and introduced the speaker of the day.

In his remarks, Ernst excused the Soldiers attending the breakfast from that morning's physical training.



The speaker for the occasion was Maj. Gen. James J. Cravens, chief of staff, U.S. Army Training and Doctrine Command.

Cravens was commissioned into the Army as a second lieutenant of artillery in 1966 after graduating from North Georgia College where he received a bachelor of science degree in Business Administration. He later earned a master of science degree from Clemson University.

His military education includes the Air Defense Artillery Officers Basic and Advance courses, the U.S. Army Command and General Staff College and the National War College.

Cravens may have begun his military career in 1966 but he said he had been a Christian much longer.

"I was baptized at Fort Bliss, Texas, when I was eight-years-old," Cravens said.

Lisa M. Hibbert

Margaret Morris, a member of The Infantry Center Chapel, stands with her son, National Prayer breakfast speaker, Maj. Gen. James J. Cravens Jr., chief of staff, U.S. Army Training and Doctrine Command, Feb. 13.

An Army brat, Cravens traveled the world with his father, who also served in the Army, and spent some time in Georgia and the Fort Benning area.

"My family settled in Columbus in 1958 and I attended Baker High School (now know as Baker Elementary School)," Cravens said. "But most importantly, I married a girl from Georgia."

Cravens focused his subject on the issues currently plaguing all of the branches of the military.

"The Air Force is being scrutinized because of allegations of planes being shot down over Iraq, people are looking into the Marines hazing problem with the blood ranks and the Army has the sexual harassment scandal," Cravens said.

"Yes, the services have problems but I believe that the Army will come out better in the end as a result of the issues it had to confront."

He also talked about characteristics that every Soldier should possess and he posed a question to the audience.

"Our actions speak louder than words," Cravens said. "Are your actions, in terms of values, character and integrity, something others should follow? Would your want your children, or anyone else's child, to follow your example?"

Cravens went on to list attributes of value, character and integrity.

"Values are the things that we put first and are most willing to defend," Cravens said. "Our Army is a value-based Army. We are are held to a higher standard than everyone else so when something happens, the media holds us to a higher standard because they expect more," Cravens said.

"Character describes an individuals inner strengths," Cravens said. "A Soldier with integrity will do what is right regardless of the situation.

"Integrity is honesty," Cravens said. "It is the basis of trust and confidence in an individual."

Cravens also talked about the changing Army, having to function despite the downsizing, and the constant — the Soldier.

"Although everything is changing, the Soldier has not changed. The Soldier still has needs — for a opportunity, good training, good leadership and recognition.

In a word to the leaders, Cravens encouraged them to be worthy role models.

"Lead by example," Cravens said. "Be a role model so that you may develop Soldiers with values, Soldiers of character who know right from wrong. Instill integrity in your Soldiers.

"All of us, at least those who've been in the military for a while, understand what is right from wrong." Cravens said. "The challenge in today's Army is instilling this in everyone and being able to move forward."

A lot can be found by opening a door

By Pat Cote´
USAIC Chaplains Office

I came across an incredibly dismal story the other day about a honeymoon disaster. After traveling all day, the newlyweds arrived at the hotel in the middle of the night with high expectations. They had reserved the "Honeymoon Package," which promised a spacious room with many romantic features. Imagine their disappointment when they opened the door only to find that their hopes were dashed.

reflections

According to them, the room was extremely skimpy. It had no view, no flower arrangements, a tiny bathroom and worst of all — no bed! All they found was a lumpy, uncomfortable fold-out sofa. This was obviously not what they had anticipated; consequently neither was their night

The next morning a very frustrated groom stormed down to the desk demanding to see the manager to ventilate his anger. After listening patiently for a few minutes, the manager asked, "Did you try to open the door in your room?" The groom had to admit that he hadn't.

Upon returning to the room, he opened the door that he had thought was only a closet. There, completely furnished with fruit baskets, candy, champagne, and a king-sized canopy bed, was the largest suite he had ever seen! Ugh! Can't you just see the two of them standing in the doorway of the room they had so casually overlooked? "Oh no, if only we had looked, it would have been so, so nice." Instead, they missed it all because they thought the door was a closet. They had assumed the door led nowhere.

Sometimes, we are not that different from this unfortunate couple. We, too, often stand on the fringes of life and miss the main event because we assume the door before us leads nowhere. God has placed His word before us as an open door. It is replete with promises of innumerable blessings to those who will read it and take it to heart (Rev. 1:3). Jesus, Himself said, "You are in error because you do not know the Scriptures or the power of God" (Matt. 22:29).

Do you sometimes feel cramped and packed in the anteroom of life? Do you often think that this is not what you had hoped for?

Oh, it may have its moments, but it is simply not what you think it should be. May I make a suggestion? Open the doors of Scripture. Get curious. Check it out. Give it a shot. Don't make the mistake of assuming the door leads nowhere. You just might be surprised at what you find.

It's Better Over Here.

Running from the Lord does not free us from destiny

By Richard G. Moore
USAIC Chaplain

Remember Elijah, that scruffy and feisty prophet of old?

He's the servant of God to whom He sent food via the ravens, who struggled in prayer to heal the widow's son, who challenged the false prophets of Baal, walked across the Jordan River like Moses did the Red Sea, and was one of two people translated directly into heaven. It was Elijah who, after a 100-mile run and walk, being consumed by fear for his life, bone tired, thirsty and feeling very alone, tells the Lord "I have had enough."

reflections

The Bible is about the living God who helps those heroes of faith with their ups and downs just as he helps you and me. What can we see happening to and for Elijah that gives us a hope that God is with us? What insights can we embrace by our faith in him that can help us through the surprises of life?

Do yourself a favor and read about Elijah in 1 Kings 19:1-18. Vision your present challenges through Elijah's predicaments and discover how the Lord stresses us only to comfort, how He speaks and redirects our path, and how He sends us on spiritual missions in order to heal our pain. How did Elijah deal with his crisis? He ran away.

Elijah escaped from Queen Jezebel's death threat by running for his life from Jezreel to Beersheba. He wasn't feeling loved by anyone, man or God. Before he collapsed from exhaustion, Elijah blurted out to God, "I have had enough, take my life."

Did God simply concur and release the prophet from his plan for Elijah? Not even close! An angel of the Lord came and provided Elijah with food and drink.

Angels play a significant role in the lives of God's people: Jacob, Balaam, Gideon, Samson's parents, Zechariah, Mary, Philip and Cornelius just to name a few.

Hebrews 1:14 informs us about angels by stating, "Are not all angels ministering spirits sent to serve those who will inherit salvation?"

It seems like a paradox that God would allow our stressful surprises to remind us that our life journeys are spiritual. In verse 10, Elijah complained to God. In fact, he whined like a mule. After a little while, God spoke to Elijah.

God asked, "What are you doing here, Elijah?" The prophet didn't find God in the wind, nor the earthquake, nor the fire, but in a gentle whisper.

That's how God speaks to us, gently through the Bible, through the quiet support of our friends, through the ordinary in life. We see Elijah standing up at the mouth of the cave ready to listen to his Lord.

Again, God asked, "What are you doing here, Elijah?" Again, the same complaining response came from the prophet.

By this repetition, God seems to be saying to Elijah, "Why did you put yourself through all of this? We could have talked with each other before you ran away in a panic."

God gave Elijah another mission by saying, "Go back the way you came, anoint two kings and ordain your successor, Elisha." This seemed to give Elijah healing from his fears and pain of loneliness. This entire process took some time.

We can appreciate the time factor. It was about two months and 450 miles from the time Elijah left Jezreel until he listened to the gentle whisper of the Lord. The entire experience also took a toll on Elijah's person, physically, emotionally and mentally.

God allows stress to the fear of death for ourselves and even for our loved ones. Listen for his gentle whisper and receive the healing of his next mission.

Remember the following saying: "I sought my soul, but my soul I did not see. I sought my brother and my sister, but they avoided me. I sought my Lord, and I found all three."

"Blessed is the nation whose God is the Lord."

Learning how to meet God

By Bob Blessing
USAIC Chaplains Office

reflections

Movement to the range is complete. The troops have returned to the barracks for the night. The tanks and Bradleys are all lined up for gunnery the next day and the sergeant of the guard has posted his Soldiers at their watches.

All is quiet and for those few selected Soldiers, a long night of guard duty faces them. As each Soldier makes his and her rounds, their minds reflect upon many things. They wonder what their boyfriends or girlfriends are doing and with whom they are spending time. Are they being missed as much as they miss their mates. The Soldiers may think about their moms or their trucks or even thoughts as simple as how good the chow will be later.

But somewhere in the middle of the watch, as the Soldier may look up to the stars, he or she will think about how big the universe is and where he or she fits into the whole scheme of this world's issues and occupations. Somewhere his or her thoughts will turn to God as he or she continues their watch.

The Scripture tells us in Psalm 63:5-6, "My soul will be satisfied as with the richest foods ... as I think of you through the watches of the night."

We need our souls to be fed by God so that we enjoy the life he offers. What do you reflect upon in your quiet times? We need to know that where our mind goes when our hearts are at rest is what we worship, and what we worship is our God. Do we stand watch with God to have our souls refreshed and fed?

All of us have faced our mortality and met God at different times in our lives. When we are alone and we have time to reflect upon our lives, our minds can move to who we are and where we came from. And this leads us back to God. He will use these times to tell us that he is not far from us, that he wants to know us and wants to give us a fulfilled life with him. He probably won't use a burning bush or a sounding trumpet to speak to us but we will know inside that he is there and real.

If we let him speak to us we will begin a spiritual watch through the night. In this watch, with the Holy Spirit as a guide and the Word as a path for us we will continue in a journey that will lead us to a deeper and more intimate relationship with Him. God will become close to us and that experience with Him will feed us to refresh us though all the wild activities and stress of the day and night.

We all need to stand watch with God so that all the distractions of the day don't rob us of the joy he offers us.

NBA's winningest coach visits post

By John W. Peeler
Special to the Bayonet©

Escorted by a military entourage, Atlanta Hawks Coach Lenny Wilkens rushed from the practice court in Atlanta to Sand Hill Theater Three to be the guest speaker at the Infantry Training Brigade's celebration of Black History Month Feb. 14.

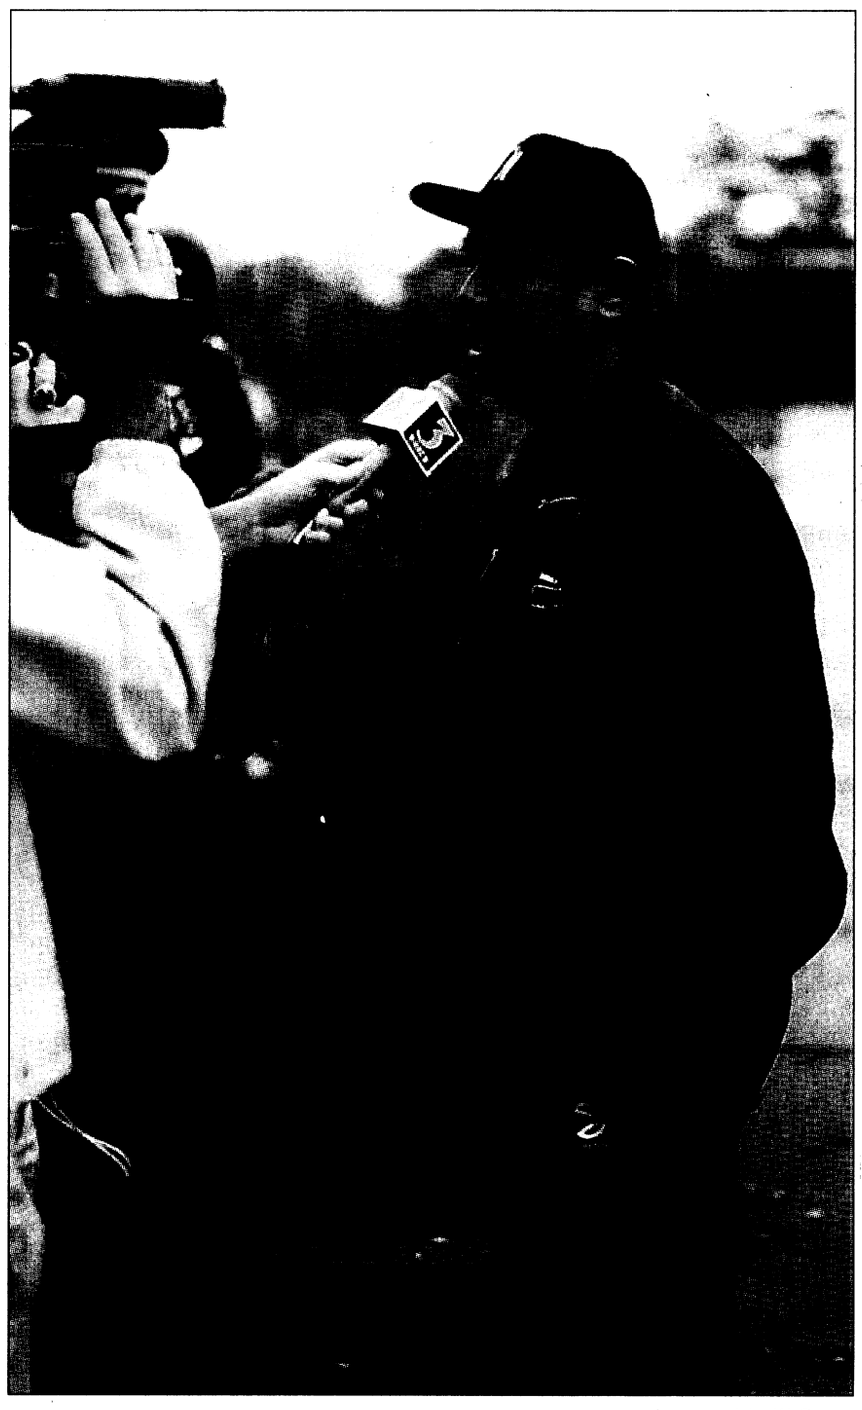
The program opened with the singing of the national anthem by Faith Middle School seventh-grader T'nesha Pruitt and after the invocation and opening remarks, proceeded to a skit on the "African American Alphabet."

Each letter of the alphabet represented a famous African American with the letter "T" bringing a round of applause and "hooah's" from the packed theater for the ITB, commander, Col. Abraham Turner, the first African American commander of ITB and for the letter "W" for the winningest coach in National Basketball Association history, Lenny Wilkens.

Wilkens, a one-time Army quartermaster, said he asked to speak at the celebration because he understood what Soldiers go through and, in his opinion, did not receive the credit due them.

Wilkens said one of the most important aspects of his life was being a father to his children. Wilkens said an incident with his son at one of his games made him realize this. He said during a game that kept going into multiple overtimes, his son approached him and ask for a dollar to get something to eat. Wilkens said it was at that point he realized that although the game was most important to him, eating was the most important thing to his son.

Wilkens began his career in basketball as a first round draft choice in the 1960 draft.



He spent his first eight NBA seasons as a member of the St. Louis Hawks and in 1968, was traded to Seattle, where he spent the next four seasons. In 1972, he became a member of the Cavaliers where he represented the Cavs the following year in the 1973 All-Star Game.

Wilkens had a 15-year playing career in the NBA and ranks among the all-time leaders in assists, games played, minutes played and free throws made. Wilkens was named the Most Valuable Player of the 1971 All-Star Game in San Diego, Calif. He appeared in nine NBA All-Star games even though he played and coached (sometimes simultaneously) in the NBA backwoods — St. Louis, Seattle, Cleveland, Portland, and Atlanta — never in such major media markets as New York City, Los Angeles, or Chicago.

Wilkens became the league's winningest coach Jan. 6, 1995, when the Atlanta Hawks defeated the Washington Bullets 112-90. Despite having won more games than any coach in the history of the National Basketball Association, Wilkens is seldom mentioned in the same breath as such coaching immortals as John Wooden or Red Auerbach, the retired Boston Celtics legend whose record of 938 NBA victories was considered to be out of reach.

Notably, he achieved the record without help from dominating teams or the presence of a single superstar on the roster of any club he has coached.

Wilkens was an assistant on the men's basketball squad, known as the Dream Team, and helped that team win a Gold Medal for the United States at the 1992 Olympic Games. Four years later, Wilkens served as the head coach of Dream Team III, a collection of NBA All-Pros, at the 1996 Summer Games in Atlanta where the team won a Gold Medal with a win over Yugoslavia.

Shooters win at indoor sectionals

By Anna O'leska
U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit

U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit International Rifle shooters Stephen C. Goff and Lance S. Hopper recently won the Individual Three-Position Anysight Sectional and the Individual Four-Position Sectional conducted at the Pool International Shooting Complex.

The Individual and Team Three- and Four-Position Anysight Sectionals are conducted each year around the country to determine who will be the national champion. Scores from all sectionals are compiled and the results published each April.

The Individual Three-Position Sectional is shot indoors at a distance of 50 feet with 40 rounds shot in each position — prone, standing and kneeling.

Goff broke the previous record by four points, scoring 1,196 points with 102 center shots out of a possible 1,200.

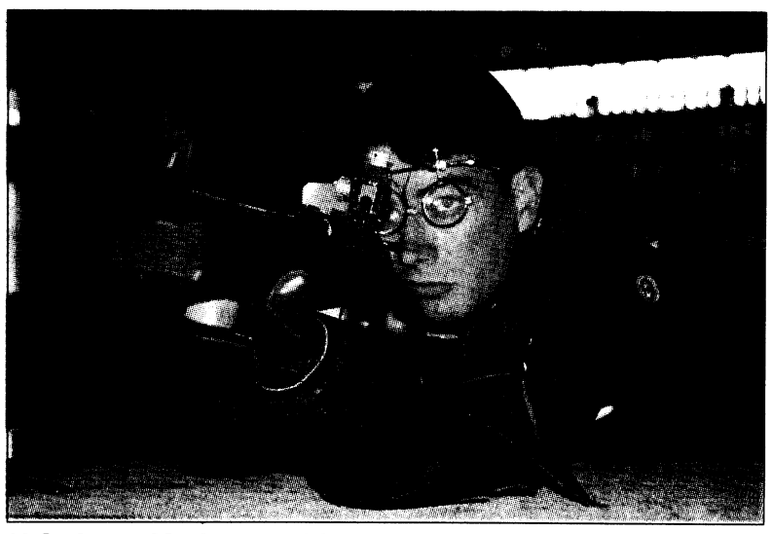
"It's great," Goff said. "It was really exciting to shoot a score that has never been shot before and to get recognition for it as well along with a lot of self-satisfaction."

The Individual Four-Position Sectional is also shot indoors at a distance of 50 feet with 20 rounds shot in the prone, standing and kneeling positions. Hopper won with a perfect score of 800 with 74 center shots.

"I had to shoot a 200 in the kneeling position, which is a good position for me," Hopper said. "So I was pretty confident I would win. It's the first 800 I have ever shot in the four-position and it was good enough to win."

Goff and Hopper were also on the USAMU Team Three- and Four-Position Anysight Sectionals with Thomas A. Tamas and Glenn A. Dubis. The USAMU Four-Position Team shot 10 rounds in each of the four — prone, standing, sitting and kneeling — positions. The team scored 1,596 points out of a possible 1,600 points.

The USAMU Three-Position Team shot 40 rounds in each of the positions scoring 4,728 points out of a possible 4,800.



Both the individual and team events were shot with .22-caliber rifles.

"I think our shooters performed very well," said Coach William E. Krilling. "I think we will win both National Championships in the long run. When all the scores come in, we'll be on top."

Classic benefits MS victims

Georgia Chapter of the National MS Society

ATLANTA — The National Multiple Sclerosis Society Georgia Chapter announced a partnership with Cap Gemini, an international consulting firm with its southeastern U.S. divisional offices in Atlanta.

The first Cap Gemini Classic Golf Tournament will be May 12 at Eagle's Landing Country Club in McDonough, Ga.

Eagle's Landing is heralded as one of the best golf courses in Georgia. All tournament proceeds will benefit the research and programs of the National Multiple Sclerosis Society.

The tournament will begin with a shotgun start at 12:30 p.m. and end the day with a reception and awards ceremony at 7 p.m. Player slots begin at $250 per player.

The National Multiple Sclerosis Society is dedicated to ending the effects of multiple sclerosis. Multiple sclerosis is a chronic disease of the central nervous system. More than 30,000 Georgians are affected by multiple sclerosis. There is no known cause or cure but there is hope through the MS Society's research.

For information about the Cap Gemini Classic at Eagle's Landing, call Terri Pendergast at (770) 984-9080 or (800) 822-3379 toll free.

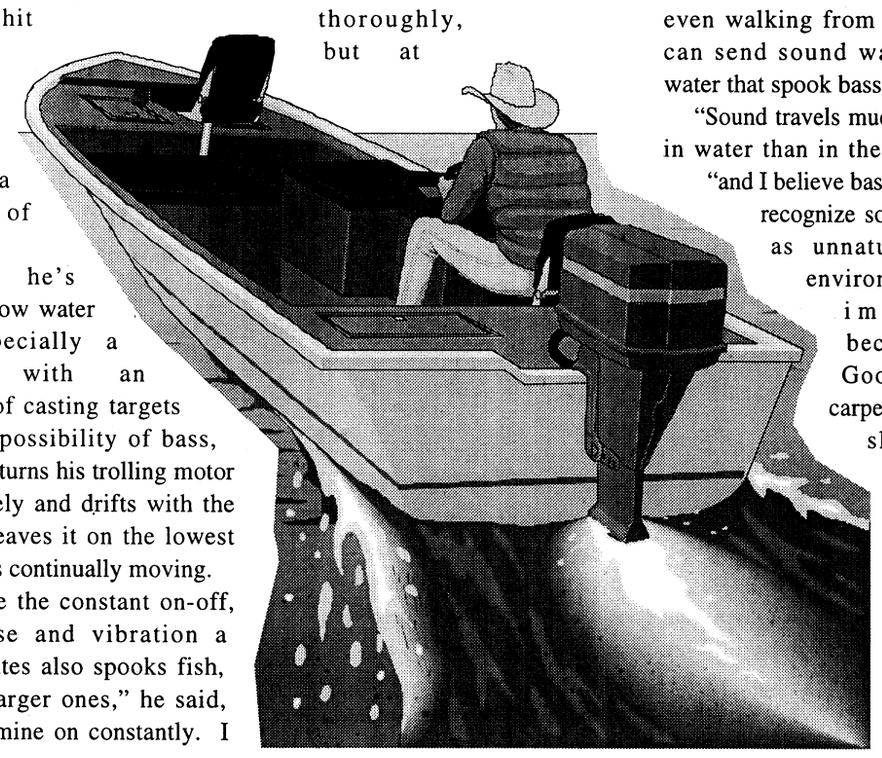
Pro warns excess boat noise spooks shallow bass



By Earl Bentz and Steve Price
Outboard Marine Corporation

Sometimes professional tournament angler Guy Eaker feels like tiptoeing around in his boat. He stops talking, turns off his electronics and leaves his tackle boxes closed.

"Noise, any type of noise from your boat, spooks bass, particularly when you're in shallow water," said the fisherman. "I think making excess noise or vibration is probably one of the most overlooked factors in bass fishing success."

One of the most common mistakes bass fisherman make include improper use of trolling motors.

"You can't believe how often I see fishermen hit stumps or brush piles with their trolling motors simply because they're not paying attention to what they're doing," he said. "If a bass is hiding around a stump in shallow water, you'll usually see it darting away when you do hit something, and that's one less bass you have a chance of catching."

When he's fishing shallow water cover, especially a shoreline with an abundance of casting targets and a high possibility of bass, Eaker either turns his trolling motor off completely and drifts with the breeze, or leaves it on the lowest speed so he's continually moving.

"I believe the constant on-off, on-off noise and vibration a trolling creates also spooks fish, especially larger ones," he said, "so I leave mine on constantly. I may go back and forth along the same bank three or four times until I feel like I've fished it thoroughly, but at least I'm not spooking the fish."

The fishing pro said that noise from tackle boxes and coolers, and even walking from bow to stern, can send sound waves into the water that spook bass.

"Sound travels much, much faster in water than in the air," he said, "and I believe bass and other fish recognize sounds we make as unnatural in their environment so they immediately become alerted. Good boat carpeting helps, but slamming a tackle box lid still creates vibrations that may pass through the hull and out into the water.

"When I know I'm in or near a school of bass, I simply try to be as quiet as possible."

At times, Eaker even turns off his electronics, believing the sonar signals sent by his depthfinders may at times cause fish to relocate.

"I know this sounds like I'm going to extremes," he said, "but a very good friend of mine, who spent many years guiding and who is also a professional bass tournament fisherman now, told me he used to sit over schools of bass watching them with his depth finder. He never moved or dropped a lure down to them, but after a few minutes the entire school would simply leave.

"He was usually 15 to as much as 25 feet above the fish, but he's convinced those bass could somehow sense the signals his electronic depth finders were sending, and it frightened them."

Volvo Spring Classic Bike Tour helps fight Multiple Sclerosis

Georgia Chapter of the National MS Society

For 50 years, the National Multiple Sclerosis Society has provided hope and help for people with MS: hope through its international research programs, and help through its services, which improve the quality of life for people with MS and their families.

If you would like to make a difference in an MS person's life, take this opportunity to join the National Multiple Sclerosis Society in the fight against MS by participating in the 1997 Volvo Spring Classic Bike Tour March 22 in Alphraetta, Ga.

The event is the local component to the National MS Society Cycling Series, which was named the "National Bike Ride" of Bicycling Magazine, the tour's National Sponsor, and described by Volvo Cars of North America, also a National Sponsor and the local title sponsor, as "the most successful series of organized, fund-raising recreational rides ever assembled in North America."

MS is a devastating disease because it is so unpredictable.

The progress, severity and specific symptoms of the disease cannot be foreseen. People with MS never know when attacks will occur, how long they will last, or how severe they will be. Most people are diagnosed with MS between the ages of 20 and 50, and the unpredictable physical and emotional effects are lifelong.

The Volvo Spring Classic brings together cyclists of all levels, from the most recreational riders to competitive cyclists, who are sponsored by family, friends and colleagues who pledge money toward their efforts. Proceeds benefit the MS Society's national research programs, as well as services such as self-help groups for more than 30,000 Georgians affected by MS.

It is the determination of participants like Mark Hodgdon, who raised more than $2,100 in the Spring Classic Bike Tour last year, that enables the National MS Society to serve more than a million people and fund more than $46 million in research grants in the U.S. annually.

Participants in the Volvo Spring Classic have a choice of riding 25, 50, or 75 miles. Upon completion of the bike tour, participants will be treated to a delicious lunch and relaxing entertainment.

"This bike tour would not be possible without the support from our title sponsor, Volvo and from our sponsoring bike shops, Cycleworks, Free Flite, Pedal Power and The Bicycle Link," said Rush Levitt, tour director. "We also depend upon the support from the hundreds of cyclists who are committed to helping us end this devastating disease," Levitt said. Last year over 300 cyclists raised over $30,000 to help fight MS.

MS research has at last turned the corner in unraveling the mysteries of MS. Take this opportunity to join in the fight to make MS another footnote in history.

Registration costs for the event is $15 and a minimum of $50 in pledges from sponsors. Pledges may be accepted by bicyclists as a lump-sum or by the mile.

To register for the Volvo Spring Classic Bike Tour as a participant or volunteer, call (770) 984-9080 or (800) 822-3379.

OPERATIONS AND TECHNOLOGY GROUP

Stratus System Administrator -- Working as a conduit between the application groups and the Data Center staff, the successful candidate will need experience with Stratus VOS system administration, Stratalink and Stratanet configurations, proven problem analysis skills and a strong desire to be challenged. While primarily supporting our critical production Stratus machines, this member of the systems support team will also assist other team members in the system administration on other platforms, including UNIX, VMS and NT. Multi-OS experience is therefore a plus, but not required. Solid communication skills are highly desired. On-call support is required. Job Code: JV1

UNIX System Administrators -- Managing the expectations and needs of multiple application groups whose production UNIX systems reside in our Data Center is only the first challenge. We support 15 applications on over 100 production machines. While the Data Center houses multiple h/w and s/w platforms, including VMS, NT, HP/UX, the majority of the systems are SunOS and SCO UNIX machines. The successful candidate must have proven UNIX administration skills, be comfortable with adding h/w, rebuilding kernels and diagnosing problems. Dealing with global financial markets, on-call support and some weekend work is required. Job Code: JV2

Computer Operator -- Reports to the Operations Supervisor in a high-volume Data Center providing round-the-clock coverage. Responsible for application monitoring, completion of batch schedules, back-ups and restores, as well as error notification and recovery. Requires 2+ years experience in a large Data Center and strong customer service, communication and problem-solving skills. Experience in one or more of the following also essential: VAX/VMX, UNIX, STRATUS and NOVELL. Job Code: RQ1

Our Technology Will Keep Us Ahead.

Use your technical expertise to help us stay there. At UPS, the world's largest package delivery company, our advanced technologies and highly skilled professionals ensure our place in the future. We are currently seeking team players for the following career opportunities.

Software Engineer
As part of a multi-disciplinary team you will develop "real-world" solutions for machine automation controls and data acquisition systems in order to meet the needs of UPS operations. Qualifications include a minimum of 3 years experience in software development and systems integration using Windows 95 and NT, C, C++, Visual C++, VB 4.0. and Microsoft OCX. Knowledge of networking and UNIX is a plus.

Senior Engineer
Is desired with image/signal processing and algorithm development experience. The candidate must be familiar with PC/workstation based development tools and have prior involvement with the development of real time algorithms for extracting data from high-density signals. In addition, an engineer filling this position would be expected to implement selected algorithms in efficient C code in a high speed real time environment. Prior experience with symbology reading, machine vision or OCR would be beneficial.

In return for your energy and expertise, we offer a fully competitive salary and benefits rated among the nation's best. For immediate consideration, forward your resume and salary history to:

Weekend Weather

(Source: 17th Air Support Operation Squadron, Weather, C Flight)

Dov Schwartz

Pfc. Matthew T. Atwater, a Community Oriented Police Squad MP aims his hand-held radar at passing motorists while on Main Post recently.

Speeders beware

By Dov Schwartz
USAIC Public Affairs Office

Dale Earnhardt and Richard Petty wannabees beware.

The military police are using special enforcement techniques, including increased use of mobile hand-held speed detection devices, increased patrols in certain areas and electronic speed boards, to deter speeding on post.

Master Sgt. Donald B. McKeehan, noncommissioned officer in charge of the Law Enforcement Division, Directorate of Public Safety, said he hopes these measures would reduce the incidents of speeding on post.

"We hope this special commitment to speed enforcement will slow people down," he said.

According to Sgt. Kyle Jenkins, a traffic-accident investigator with the U.S. Army Infantry Center MP Company, more than 50 MPs were radar certified in the last month. This enabled the MPs to expand the use of speed detection devices.

To become radar certified, MPs are required to complete two days of class room training and 80 hours of field training.

The mobile-radar units are similar to vehicle-based units. However, their mobility enables MPs to monitor a vehicle's speed without the presence of a police car to alert the speeder.

The MPs purchased several new units recently and have two additional devices on order.

In an additional effort to control speeding, MPs earmarked certain areas for special increased patrols.

These areas include school zones, family housing and designated physical training areas.

According to McKeehan, these designated areas will be randomly selected for special increased enforcement as a means of encouraging drivers to slow down.

The special enforcement will include both car-based and hand-held detection devices.

An electronic speed board is the third of the three-pronged special commitment to speed enforcement.

The speed board, connected to a radar detection device, is displayed in a public area visible to traffic. As the radar is aimed at a passing vehicle the vehicle's speed is displayed on the board, alerting the motorist to reduce speed.

The impact of these new tactics is being felt. In fiscal 1995, 3,720 speeding tickets were issued. In fiscal 1996, more 5,600 speeding tickets were issued, according to Jenkins.

Speeders on Fort Benning face fines up to $75 and notification of individual commanders.

Repeated speeding violations can result in the suspension of driving privileges on post.

Civilian reductions causes post to lose 248

By Brian R. Voller
Bayonet staff writer

Training and Doctrine Command, Fort Benning's higher headquarters, was recently directed by the Department of the Army to make 1,841 reductions in the civilian work force over the next three fiscal years.

According to Kathleen Kenna, Civilian Personnel officer, the reductions come as a result of the Dorn Memorandum, released June 2, 1994, from the Under Secretary of Defense Edwin Dorn, which directed the Department of the Army to reduce the civilian work force by 25,332 civilian workers by 2001.

Due to these reductions, Fort Benning will be making a total of 248 reductions over the next three fiscal years, with 115 reductions taking place during fiscal 1998, 66 reductions during fiscal 1999 and 67 reductions during fiscal 2000.

Kenna said the reductions must be made no later than the end of the preceding fiscal year, meaning the 115 reductions to be taken for fiscal 1998 must be made before Sept. 30.

"It is up to individual department managers to decide where they can take cuts," Kenna said. "At this point, cuts can come from anywhere. It's up to the managers to determine (where the cuts come from), they (the managers) are the ones responsible for accomplishing their mission, and they will be determining which spaces they absolutely have to retain and which spaces they may be able to do without."

Kenna said employees effected by the reduction in force must be given at least 120-days notice before they are terminated.

"We are looking towards the end of May," Kenna said, "but we would have to get authority to conduct the reduction in force. Right now, we are in the planning stages. After we decide which spaces we can cut, where we can cut vacancies or where we can fill jobs, then we have to go to our higher command and tell them what our plans are."

Kenna stressed that even after letters go out for the RIF, the CPO will continue to place people wherever they can. She said they have many agencies in place to help people find jobs, or to register them in a priority placement program that can help them find a job anywhere in the Department of Defense.

Two different programs to reduce the effects of the reductions have been approved by DoD, Kenna said. Voluntary Separation Incentive Pay and Voluntary Early Retirement Authority have been approved for this fiscal year, and according to the memorandum, are expected to be approved for all of the years required to implement the reductions.

"Employees can sign up for the Voluntary Incentive or Retirement and they can either go this year or in either one of the next two fiscal years," Kenna said. "It helps them plan and it helps us plan because we know where we will be having people leaving in the future.

"We encourage people to sign up now so we know if we will have to do this next year or the year after. If we know in advance that we are going to have people leaving and we can abolish these positions, and then we know we don't need to go through this again the next year."

According to the memorandum being distributed to civilian employees, all TRADOC employees wishing to retire or resign and take VSIP in fiscal 1997 or those employees wishing to delay their resignation or retirement and reserve VSIP fiscal 1998 or 1999 must complete the proper forms and return them to the Directorate of Civilian Personnel, Personnel Services Center, Building 85, A Wing, by March 20.

Women's history luncheon set

USAIC Public Affairs Office

The Equal Opportunity Office is sponsoring a Women's History Month Luncheon March 11 at 11:30 a.m. at the Fort Benning Officers' Club Supper Club.

The theme for this year is "A Fine and Long Tradition of Community and Leadership." The guest speaker at the luncheon is scheduled to be Lois N. Cohen, president of Miranar Securities Investments, Columbus.

The planned menu is baked chicken or roast beef, rice with gravy, green beans, rolls and coffee or tea. The price is $6.

The public is invited. Tickets can be obtained from any EO advisor or through the Federal Women's Program.

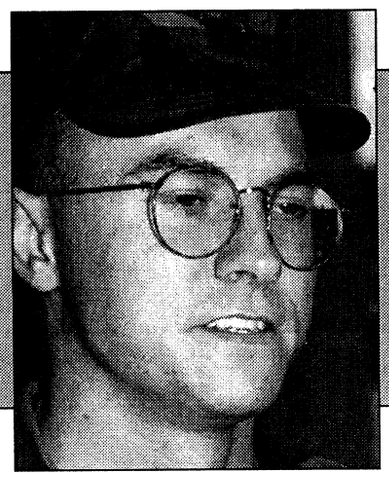
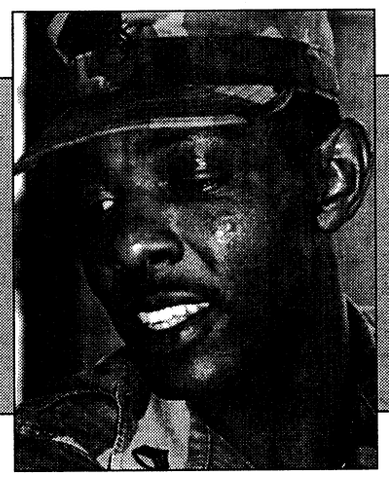
VARIOUS VOICES

What does the term sexual harassment mean to you?

Valencia Hill, Department of Defense employee — "I think sexual harassment is any proposition pertaining to the job with strong, blatant sexual connotations, or any kind of touching."



Spc. Pam Smith, 203rd Forward Support Battalion, 3rd Brigade, 3rd Infantry Division (Mechanized) — "I think sexual harassment is something that is considered vulgar, like I consider cursing to be offensive."



Felicia Dove-Dingle, Department of Defense employee — "Sexual harassment occurs when someone offends you in the way that they treat you."

Staff Sgt. Robert Wiley Jr., U.S. Army Recruiting Command — "Sexual harassment is something that offends a person, like vulgar pictures or repeated advances."

Spc. Michael Moore, Company A, 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment — "Sexual harassment is sexual comments, gestures in a verbal or physical nature or out-of-the-ordinary comments or jokes based on sex."

Staff Sgt. Calvin Gibbons, Headquarters and Headquarters Battery, 1st Battalion, 10th Field Artillery, 3rd Brigade., 3rd Infantry Division (Mechanized)— "I think it is any undue treatment or comment from one person to another, and it doesn't matter what that person's rank is."

Harassment changes rules

By John W. Peeler
Special to The Bayonet©

Sexual harassment has long been a part of our society, but until the last 10 years or so, has not really been seriously addressed by employers and workers.

commentary

John W. Peeler says sexual harassment has changed modern dating.

Some of the behaviors of decade's past have now become a guessing game for eligible bachelors and bachelorettes across the United States.

I know when I was growing up, especially in the dating years, persistence was considered an admirable quality. I am sure some of you have heard stories about how your dad or someone you knew asked a girl out until she said yes. I am also sure you have heard "I had to ask your mom to marry me three times before she said yes."

Is that kind of behavior possible in today's society? I am not really sure I know the answer. Would that be considered harassment by today's standards? Or worse yet, stalking.

These are some of the questions that face today's relationships and what is considered persistence or harassment.

Men and women have progressed in the way they think over the years, and any more, it's hard to tell what is a definite no and what is considered "the chase."

I believe communication is the key ingredient to answer the questions we ask ourselves on weather or not we are harassing someone or if we are being harassed.

Some things you should think about, men — if you are referred to by women as "a dog," chances are you have, or are probably harassing a female you know. Women — when approached by a man you're not interested in, do you say "I'm not interested" or do you make up an excuse, leaving the possibilities open?

I do know one thing though, persistence paid off for me.

A friend of mine introduced me to a wonderful woman 10 years ago. I found out after our first date she had told him she would not go out with "that skinny egotistical so and so (me) if her life depended on it."

I'm really not sure her description was accurate; however, less than a year after our first date, we were married.

In this particular case she didn't mean what she said, it was all a part of the chase.

Here are a few general guidelines you can use to keep yourself on the right track when pursuing a relationship and keep yourself out of harms way of harassment:

•Always treat your prospective partner with respect, dignity and equality.

•Always assume no means no.

•Communicate clearly, never leave anything open to interpretation.

•If you are a Soldier, never date anyone in your unit, even if they are not in your direct chain of command.

•If you are an officer, dating an enlisted Soldiers is specifically prohibited by regulation.

•Think before you act. If you think your behavior may be taken the wrong way, it probably will.

•Learn to communicate in nonthreatening and nonabusive ways.

•Most importantly, if your not sure of your behavior, see your equal opportunity or equal employment opportunity representative or consult the regulations.

Be safe, not sorry.

By Lisa M. Hibbert
Bayonet staff writer

This sexual harassment scandal has sure been a pain in my social life. It seems like people are afraid to speak for fear of being brought up on charges. I wish things could be the way they used to be, like how it was when I was growing up.

commentary

I remember how it was when I was in elementary school. Dating was so easy.

There I was, sitting at my desk, chillin' hard with about a million beads at each end of my braided hair when SWOOSH! INCOMING! A note landed on my desk. The note said — "I like you, do you like me? Check yes or check no."

Now if I checked yes then I got another note, this one said, "Will you be my girlfriend? Check yes or check no." And if I checked yes yet again, then BOOM, I had myself a boyfriend.

I didn't have to worry about whether this guy was married or was only after me for one thing. Heck, we were kids! All we knew was that we liked each other and that we wanted to be together.

Now it seems like everyone is afraid. Whereas before, it was OK for a guy to just walk up and say hello, now all you get is an interested stare from a very far distance.

I think the problem lies in the fact that people are not exactly clear on what sexual harassment is.

But beyond the sexual harassment issue, I think people today are just too confused about how to enter a relationship.

If you pursue someone aggressively, can that be construed as sexual harassment? Or, worse yet, if you try that passive approach and just hope that the person of your dreams will approach you, you could be waiting for forever.

Spc. Lisa M. Hibbert remembers the way dating and getting dates used to be.

It seems to me that I never really hear about someone having a crush on me until they're about to leave Fort Benning. Well I'm sorry! At that point, I just don't want to hear it.

A problem I've experienced in the dating world is baggage. Too many people enter into relationships carrying a lot of leftover baggage from previous relationships. Often times, young relationships fail when people feel that what happened in a previous relationship is about to happen to them again, so the relationship is ended without ever giving that person the benefit of the doubt.

I know some people who believe that every potential partner they go out with wants to get married, just because a previous mate wanted to marry them at one time. They often feel overwhelmed by any sign of emotion because they think, "Uh oh, here it comes again."

Heck, most people want to get married someday, just not now. Showing affection doesn't mean that someone wants to spend the rest of their life with you, it means that they like you and want to get to know you better.

I think that people need to find a way to talk, despite the fear of sexual harassment. I think what we all need to do is read Army Regulation 600-20, Chapter 6, Section 4, which defines sexual harassment, meet with either an equal opportunity or an equal employment opportunity representative and proceed from there.

If we learn how to approach each other respectfully, and, when approached, give an honest yes or no answer, relationships would be a lot smoother.

Bad conduct, poor decisions reaches core of society

By April N. Olsen
USAIC Public Affairs Office

With recent controversial allegations against our military making headlines, I'm left wondering what in the world is going on?

It seems as if every institution that fought hard to earn the public's trust and support is now not worth that trust.

commentary

April N. Olsen says blame for misconduct should be placed on individuals.

No one trusts the government. No one trusts the religious establishment. No one trusts our school systems. No one trusts our law enforcement agencies.

Who is to blame?

Is the public expecting too much from these institutions?

Are the institutions acting too irresponsibly with the public trust?

Is the media to blame for reporting any indiscretion or mistake without hesitation?

I think the blame should rest with the individual. If a person, whether he is an elected official, an Army leader or a clergyman, misuses his power and authority, he is to blame, and should suffer the consequences once he is proven guilty.

Can a corrupt system perpetrate the development of such people?

Of course, but there will always be the temptation to look out for number one and do the easy thing. But we shouldn't hold an entire institution up to scrutiny because one of it's employees made a mistake or used bad judgment.

Let's face it, there are some despicable people out there. They are hiding in every well-intentioned organization. There are priests who molest children, there are politicians who abuse the public trust and there are military leaders who abuse their Soldiers.

This is no excuse to let these miscreants get away with it once they are found out, but making the establishment suffer because of one bad apple is not right.

For example, let's look a little closer to home. The top enlisted Soldier in the Army stands accused of sexual harassment. Besides the fact that this man allegedly abused his military authority and power, he is still an American citizen who dedicated close to thirty years of his life defending this nation. He is innocent until proven guilty, bottom line.

While it is very possible that he could have committed the actions he is accused of, the fact that the press and the American public is so eager to assume he's guilty makes me sick.

I chalk it up to irresponsible journalism and lack of faith by the American people.

In college, a journalism professor claimed that it's better to let 10 guilty people go free rather than wrongly accuse one innocent person.

There's a lot to this. She was hinting that irresponsible reporting can ruin a person or an organization with one headline. But this also calls on the people who pay attention to the media to have the courage to form their own ideas and opinions from the facts, not sensational, subjective journalism.

In this case, it doesn't matter if the sergeant major of the Army is innocent or guilty, the damage to his reputation and to our Army is done. If he is proven guilty, the entire Army will be subjected to a magnifying glass that will disrupt mission accomplishment. If he is proven innocent, no one will care.

The same is true for hazing incidents recently reported in the press. If you've seen the video tape widely aired on some television shows of Marines pounding jump wings into the chests of young men, you're probably as disgusted as I am with that whole mess.

I'm not completely innocent. In our office, promotions became a dreaded event for some because "the Ma'am" seemed to take great pleasure in pounding the new rank into the chest of the promottee. When I saw that videotape of those Marines, I wondered why in the heck I did that.

I'm not usually a barbaric person. I'm not sadistic and don't really enjoy inflicting pain. So, why did I pin "blood rank?"

I guess my sense of tradition and camaraderie over-powered my common sense.

While I know some people think "blood" anything is cool, we have to remember that stepping over that gray line is easier than we think.

What I think is fine and dandy may not be fine and dandy to a young Soldier who respects me or my rank. So, I'll be more cautious.

But isn't that one aspect of being a leader — recognizing the differences in Soldiers and treating them with respect and dignity. What's acceptable to one is harassment or hazing to another in some cases.

Tax time

Spc. Cameron Ellison, Company A, 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment, inputs tax information for electronic filing while tax officers, Richmond Campbell and Donna Pettiford, look on. Capt. Robert Magnuson advises tax payers to come in early, even if they owe money, to find out how much they owe in order to pay the IRS by April 15. The Main Post Tax Office is located in Building 4, Room 1. The hours of operation are from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Monday through Friday. The tax office has state forms and most federal forms. States exempt lodging taxes while TDY

Directorate of Resource Management

A continuing concern and confusion exists regarding federal employees paying state and local lodging taxes while on official travel. The General Services Administration provides the following information.

Generally, individual federal employees are required to pay state and local lodging taxes incurred during official travel. The Comptroller General of the United States has consistently ruled that the federal government is immune from paying state and local taxes associated with lodging only when payment is made by the government directly to the vendor.

In all other cases, the employee is obligated to pay the tax unless a state or local authority assessing the tax provides a specific exemption.

This is true even though employees are reimbursed for their travel expenses by the government. Per diem rates are set at levels to compensate employees for these taxes.

Use of government issued American Express card does not alter these rules. However, if you are on official travel in one of jurisdictions that grant federal employees the tax exemption, use of the government issued American Express Card may be required by the vendor in order to grant this exemption. Unfortunately, states and lodging facilities are not consistent in their application and understanding of the rules.

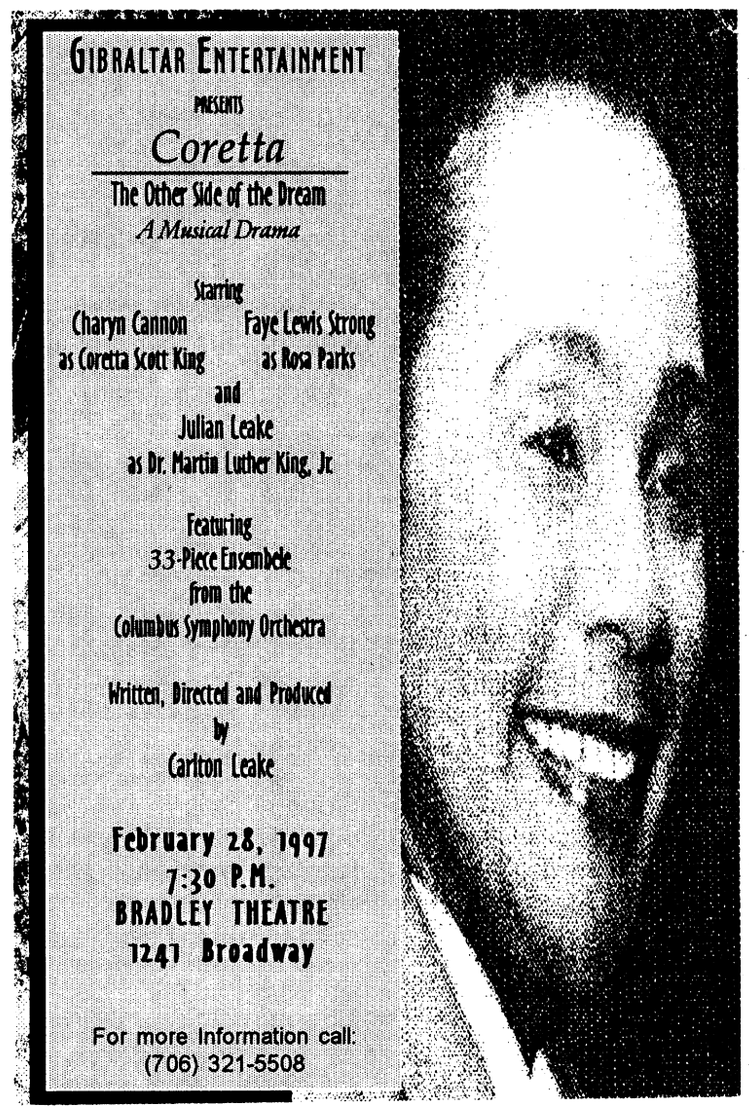
The following is a list of those states who still grant an exemption from paying state and local lodging taxes during official travel:

California: (Cites of Concord, Long Beach, Los Angeles, Millbrae, Monterey, Carmel, King City, Big Sur, Carmel Bay, Pebble Beach, Oxnard, San Bruno, San Francisco, Seaside and Ventura.)

Delaware

Florida

New York



Oklahoma

Oregon

Pennsylvania

States that do not appear above do not offer exemptions.

USAMU needs ammo technicians

The U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit Custom Firearms Shop is looking for ammunition loading technicians.

The Soldiers who work in the USAMU Ammunitions Loading Section are responsible for producing most of the ammunition for rifles and pistols, including center-fire rifles, M-14s, M-16s, 300 Magnums, .38 supers and .45 automatics. The ammunition technicians perform many tests on each cartridge case, propellant, primer and bullet.

According to William O. Hardin, Custom Firearms Shop chief, Soldiers do not need to hold a certain military occupational speciality but they do require some knowledge of loading equipment, components and ballistics; the shop will provide on-the-job training, he said.

'For more information, call Harden 545-6413 or 545-1558.

Students conduct platoon attack STX

By Tyler J. Oxley
Co. B, 2nd Bn.,11th Inf. Regt.

The silence of night was shattered with the thunderous explosion of claymore mines, followed by the loud roar of M-60s and the sharp crack of M-16s.

Then, as suddenly as the firing began, it ceased. Illumination rounds, fired from M-203s, lit up the night sky as the assault element burst from their concealed positions and quickly moved across the road.

This was the scene as students from Infantry Officer Basic Course Class 1-97 took part in a platoon attack situational training exercise Feb. 10 through 14 at Ware Range.

During the week, students were able to put the classroom instruction they received on platoon attacks to use as they conducted movement to contact and day and night ambushes. Students conducted three live-fire missions, a day movement to contact, a day ambush and night ambush.

"What we want is for the students to to know how to conduct a successful point ambush and movement to contact to standard," said Sgt. 1st Class Phillip Beard, a trainer for Company B, 2nd Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment. "This shows the students what its like to put a mass of firepower down range when you get all the weapons systems working together."

Each live fire was preceded by a dry-fire and blank-fire exercise. After each exercise, an after action review took place to help the students further refine their plans before the final live-fire exercise commenced.

Platoons conducted numerous individual rehearsals prior to the mission to ensure everything went according to plan.

"Rehearsals, rehearsals, rehearsals are what made these missions successful," said 2nd Lt.. Jeff Perault, a squad leader during the platoon night ambush.

"The more we rehearsed, the better the key leaders knew when, where and how to place their people."

During the STX, downtime was used for opportunity training. Platoons practiced link ups at night while establishing an objective rally point.

"Training at night helped (the students) prepare for the night ambush, just learning what its like to move and communicate with your leaders in limited visibility made it a lot easier for us when we had to go down and finally do the night live fire." said 2nd Lt. Michael Meyers, a guardsman from Pennsylvania,

"I have a new understanding of the importance of the chain of command," said 2nd Lt. Matthew Larson, an IOBC student. "The chaos that results from key leaders during indirect fire greatly increased the difficulty of consolidation."

"Doing the drill with a 22-pound ballistic vest on and a full ruck also made it challenging," Meyers said. "You have to decide, 'do I dump this stuff here or do I try to move on with it all.'"

Tyler J. Oxley

Second Lt. Dan Justus, 2nd Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment, Infantry Officer Basic Course, covers the kill zone with an M-60 machine gun during the students' platoon attack situational training exercise Feb. 10 through 14.

"This was a lot of great training," said Perault. "We got a lot of hands-on experience this week, getting to do three live fires in a week was an especially good experience. The missions allowed a lot of people to rotate through the leadership positions and get that experience."

IOBC Class 1-97 is in their 15th week of training and graduates March 7.

63rd Engineers continue Roving Sands II mission

By Natalie M. Butler
63rd Engineer Company (Combat Support Equipment)

The 63rd Engineer Company (Combat Support Equipment), 36th Engineer Group (Combat), stepped off the plane in Fort Bliss, Texas, recently to help support operation Roving Sands II.

Their mission, while in Texas, is to build 10 kilometers of road in less than 60 days. Capt. Melody Smith, company commander, said most of the existing 10 kilometers contained washout areas as deep as six feet, waist-high loose sand or "moon dust" and the roads were very narrow.

Other engineer units, such as the 844th Eng. Combat Battalion (Heavy) from Tennessee and the 926th Eng. Combat Bn. (Heavy) from Alabama, have rotated in and out for their two-week annual training, but the 63rd Eng. Co. (CSE), the only active unit in this construction exercise, remains until March 15.

The road under construction, also known as Site 10 road, is necessary for Roving Sands II, Smith said. Nearly 25,000 Soldiers from the United States, Japanese and German Army air defense artillery units conduct joint exercise training here. These units need a dependable passageway for 28 kilometers across the desert for their Heavy Expanded Mobile Tactical Truck Patriot Missile carriers, Smith said.

Soldiers from the 63rd are working 12 to 14 hours a day, beginning with physical training at 4:55 a.m. and the regular work day ending at 6 p.m. A 45-minute bus ride is required to reach the barracks area, Logan Heights, from McGregor Range, the base of the Site 10 Road construction site, Smith said.

The unit is now 70 percent complete with its road building mission, Smith said. Equipment operators are currently bringing the road up to grade with a native soil material called caliche mixed with gravel from a borrow pit located off Site 10 Road.

Smith described a typical work pattern involves scrapers, five- and 20-ton dump trucks moving to their directed locations on the road and releasing their loads.

A grader follows the trucks and scrapers to evenly spread the soil into an approximate two-inch layer. A 6,000-gallon water distributor then sprays the graded soil to reach the optimal moisture content.

Finally, a K300 Bomag, or a vibratory sheepsfoot roller, compacts the soil until the desired rate of compaction is reached.

Water is very critical for compaction and for this mission it is a scarce commodity, Smith said. Water distributors must travel an average of one and one-half hour round trips to fill their tanks.

In spite of the incredible operations tempo Smith said, maintenance is going well. The unit has a 92 percent operational readiness rate even with more than 100 pieces of heavy construction equipment and vehicles.

To repair equipment as quickly as possible, 63rd personnel fix forward contact teams with each platoon on the job site. In addition, the maintenance platoon has a 10-Soldier crew working the night shift to repair equipment by the morning of the next work day.

Smith said the entire company — "from the cooks in the dining facility and the surveyors and mechanics on site to the operators on the construction equipment — is working as a team for successful mission accomplishment."

USAIS chief of staff closes career

By Brian R. Voller
Bayonet staff writer

After 28 years of active service, Col. John R. Reitzell, chief of staff of the U.S. Army Infantry School, will retire from active duty March 13.

Reitzell, a native of Monroe, La., graduated from Northeast Louisiana University and was commissioned a second lieutenant in the Infantry in 1969.

Reitzell said he joined the Army because of the influence of his father who was a career Air Force officer and because he wanted to be part of the Vietnam war.

Only a few months after he graduated from the Infantry Officer Basic Course, Reitzell said he was sent to Vietnam as a rifle company commander.

"I came to Fort Benning to the Infantry Basic Course as a second lieutenant under one (year)," Reitzell said. "I went to Ranger School, Airborne School and then I went to the 82nd Airborne Division as a platoon leader for five months and two days.

"The first day I went to war, I was a rifle company commander and only 10 months out of college."

His first experience in combat and his subsequent wounding during a fire fight with only one year of experience in the Army are some of the most memorable experiences of his career, Reitzell said.

After recovering from the wounds he received during Vietnam, Reitzell went on to serve in several positions during his career in the military.

He became the operations officer of Company N, 75th Ranger Battalion, 173rd Airborne Brigade, in Vietnam, and then later, he returned to the United States to become a ranger instructor.

In 1974, he was assigned to the 2nd Armored Division as a company commander and subsequently as a battalion staff officer.

> "I consider myself to be a Soldier and I like Soldiers, and that's sort of been the driving force behind everything I've done..."
> — Col. John Reitzell
> chief of staff, U.S. Army Infantry School

He also served as the aide-de-camp to then Division Commander Maj. Gen. George S. Patton IV, whom Reitzell said was one of his greatest role models.

In 1978, he was assigned to the U.S. Air Force Academy and led the Air Force Parachute Team, "The Wings of Blue," to the 1979 National Championship of Parachuting. Upon completion of the Command and General Staff College in 1982, Reitzell became the brigade training and operation officer of the 3rd Bde., 2nd Inf. Div., on the Demilitarized Zone in Korea.

Reitzell said he again returned to the United States where he became part of the Joint Special Operations Command as ranger staff officer and later as chief of current operations and training. At JSOC, he participated in Operation Urgent Fury in Grenada and in more than 30 other classified "Real World" special operations deployments.

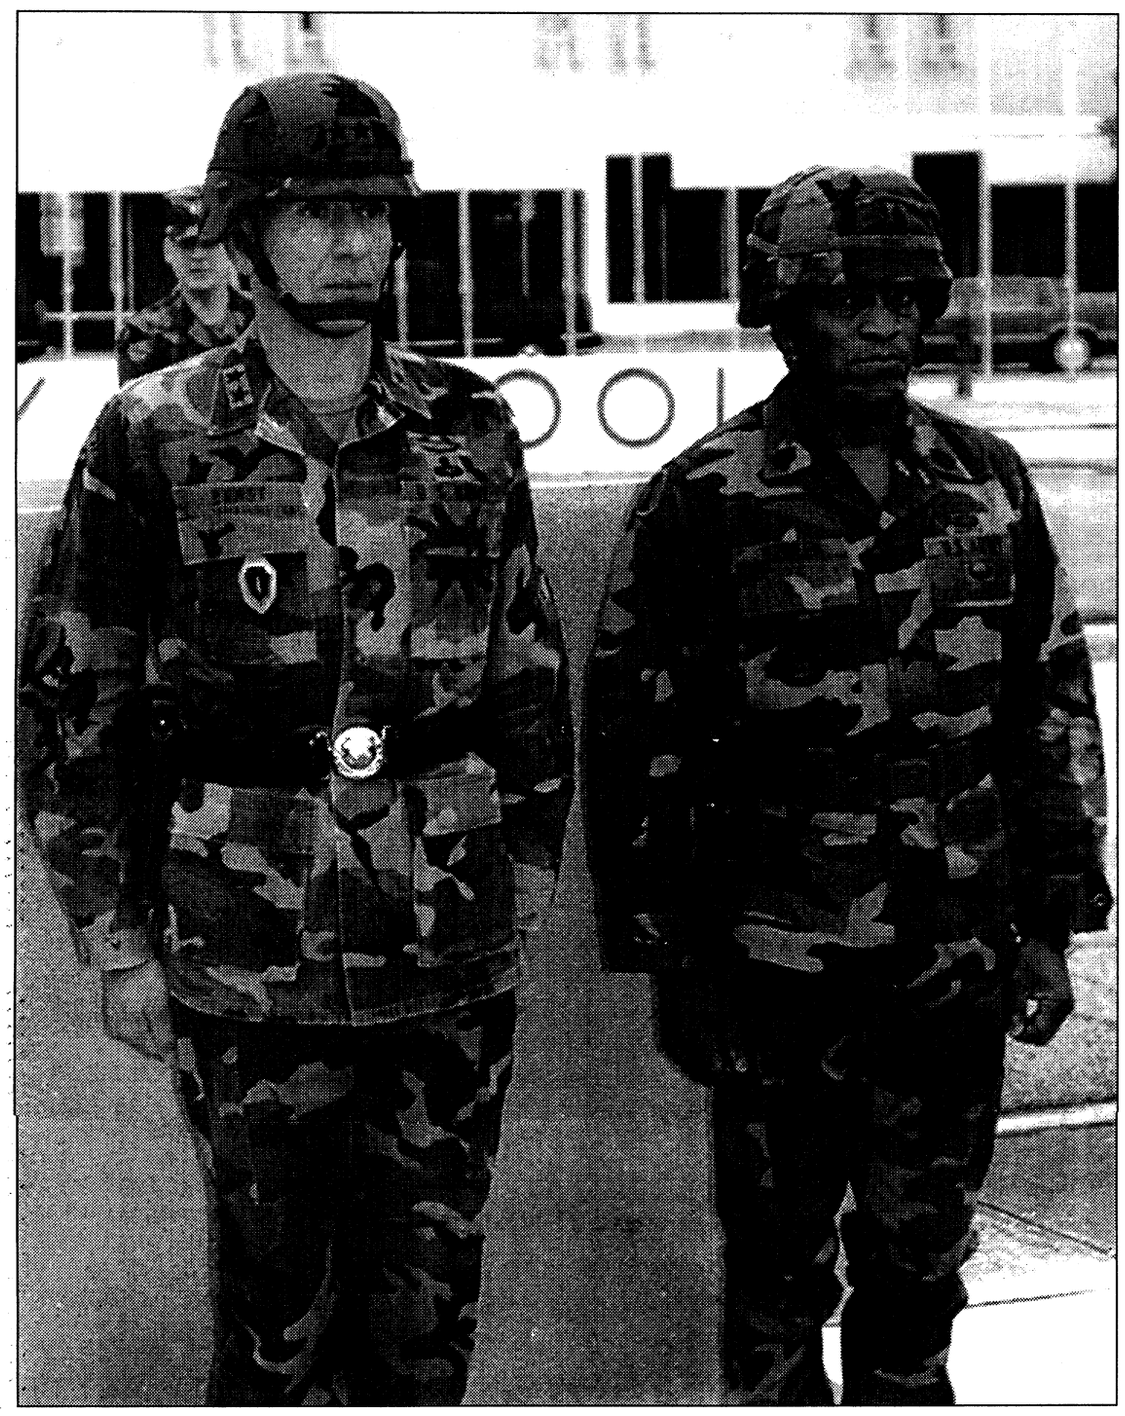
Following his work at the JSOC, Reitzell served in several other leadership positions, such as the commander of the 1st Bn., 509th Parachute Inf.; deputy commander of Operations Group; and brigade commander of the Training Center Command, Fort Jackson, S.C.

When Reitzell first joined the Army, he said he joined during a time when it wasn't very popular to be a Soldier, but he said the Army at that time was still a good Army.

"We were still at war with Vietnam during 1969 and the populace of the country wasn't very happy with that," Reitzell said. "But the Army was pretty good, we were well trained because everyone spent at least a year in training for the mission in Vietnam."

But he said at the time, most of the Soldiers were drafted, and he said that is a big reason why he feels the Army of today is better than the one he joined in 1969.

"The volunteer Army is a lot better than the drafted Army for a lot of reasons," Reitzell said. "The volunteer Army today gets better quality people, the education of the people is better, the training the people go through is better and the combat training centers have added a dimension that has allowed us (the Army) to literally explode in regards to how well we train and how well we do business."



Now that his 28-year career is coming to an end, Reitzell said there has been one thing behind what he has done during his career.

"I've stayed in the Army this long because of the people," Reitzell said. "I consider myself to be a Soldier and I like Soldiers, and that's sort of been the driving and the motivating force behind everything I've done — the way I act; the way I behave; the decisions I make have been in response to people. My career has been absolutely magnificent."

Reitzell will retire with his wife, Glenda Ward. He plans to work for a concepts-oriented company called Computer Sciences Inc., in Huntsville, Ala.

Welcoming

Fort Benning's Commanding General Maj. Gen. Carl F. Ernst stands with Command Sgt. Maj. Mack Vereen, the new post command sergeant major, before Vereen's welcoming ceremony conducted on York Field Monday. During the ceremony, Ernst said Vereen is one of the top Soldiers in the Army.

ITP aids Soldiers' transition

By Chick Eagle
Army Career and Alumni Program

An individual transition plan is a separating Soldier's operations plan for a victorious return to civilian life, according to a Fort Benning Army Career and Alumni Program counselor.

"Without an individual transition plan you may not be successful," said Diane Ermi, a Fort Benning counselor supporting ACAP. "The ITP is a framework you can use to fulfill realistic career goals, based upon your unique skills, knowledge, experience and abilities."

Ideally, the ITP should be prepared six months before a separation date, or as soon as the Soldier is approved to begin the ACAP process if less than six months out.

The following is a suggested preseparation time line:

•Six months out — Start ACAP preseparation process by attending the Fort Benning pre-separation briefing, this session is where each Soldier prepares their ITP. Begin job market research, skills assessment, career planning and education review.

•Five months out — Get serious about the job search by preparing a resume, attending job fairs, looking at specific job possibilities and decide on a back-up job plan.

•Four months out — Start planning for moving out of quarters. Prepare Standard Form 171 if seeking federal employment and refine resumes.

Apply for educational benefits, Veterans Affairs benefits and Army National Guard or the Reserves.

•Three months out — Job search is in full swing with mailing resumes, completing applications, reviewing job listings and following all valid leads. Make arrangements for shipment of household goods, complete college entrance exams, get medical and dental treatment and obtain legal assistance.

•Two months out — Continue the job search and, if possible, visit your relocation destination, service providers and, if necessary, job placement agencies.

Complete separation physical, and decide on transition period medical coverage.

•One month out — Attend job interviews, visit employment agencies, assess life insurance needs and consider converting Service Members Group Life Insurance to Veterans Group Life Insurance. Get ready to outprocess from your unit and from Fort Benning.

VOLUNTEER SPOTLIGHT

Post family member helps the homeless

By Dov Schwartz
USAIC Public Affairs Office

Paul is a veteran with many years of military service. He left the military skilled with the can-do know-how to get things done. His future looked bright. He was full of hope.

The man who walked through the door of the Metropolitan Columbus Task Force for the Homeless last fall belied any connection to his military past. He was hungry, homeless and nearly blind.

Fortunately, Paul was greeted by Shurree´ Arett, AmeriCorps member, Task Force staffer and wife of Sgt. Timothy Arett of the 203rd Forward Support Battalion, 3rd Brigade, 3rd Infantry Division (Mechanized).

Arett arranged a place to live, vocational counseling and referred Paul to the Lions Club for financial assistance to buy new glasses.

Arett smiled as she told the story. Today Paul has a job and a place to live.

The 25,000-member AmeriCorps is a national service movement similar to a domestic Peace Corps. Members support national and community service programs in the area of human needs, public safety, education and the environment.

Americorps members receive a small living stipend and educational awards to help finance their college education. AmeriCorps members who qualify also receive funding for child care costs.

Arett's placement with the Task Force for the Homeless enables her to gain experience in community service.

"This is exactly where I want to be," she said.

The Task Force for the Homeless is a nonprofit agency that provides referral services to low-income and homeless individuals in the metropolitan Columbus area.

The cornerstone of the Task Force is to reach out to the homeless and let them know what services are available.

The Task Force, in conjunction with the City of Columbus, produces the Columbus Street Beat, a pocket-size referral guide to area agencies serving the homeless.

It also coordinates, plans and offers technical assistance to local service providers who serve the homeless.

According to Arett, there are nearly 500 people in metropolitan Columbus' nine shelters. Many of the shelters are being enlarged to meet the needs of the growing homeless population.

"The fastest growing segment of the homeless population are families," said Arett.

"It's not just the fellow who lives under a bridge," she said.

Almost 25 percent of Columbus' shelter population work, according to Task Force Director Elizabeth Dillard. This points to the high cost of housing and low salaries, she said.

"No one can afford a place to live on minimum wage," Dillard said.

Arett said working at the Task Force has been a family experience. She and her husband often spend their free time renovating shelters.

"My husband is my best volunteer," she said.

"We are raising our kids to be good, caring people," she said. "My work with the homeless sets a good example for them."

Stowers Elementary, Army Community Service and the Fort Benning Schools are jointly presenting to the Fort Benning community "Active Parenting Today."

This video-based series offers tips to parents of children ages 2 to 12. They can learn practical skills they can use to build on their children's strengths, minimize parent and child power struggles and settle common conflicts.

Unfortunately, children do not come with instruction manuals and the job of parenting has gotten even more difficult in recent years. The needs of today's children have changed drastically from those of children even a few years ago. Children are constantly confronted by peers and the media, exposing them to drugs, explicit sexual activity and other confusing messages.

DODEA: Post schools meet, learn about technology at Wilson Elementary

By Lisa M. Hibbert
Bayonet staff writer

The Fort Benning School board conducted its February meeting Monday at Wilson Elementary School.

Virginia Wilcox, a science teacher at Dexter, gave a presentation to the board, demonstrating how technology supports the schools' curriculum.

Because of technological advances, Wilcox explained how teachers are now able to do such things as input grades into the computers and have it automatically calculate student averages at the end of the semesters.

Dr. Wanda Person, media specialist at Wilson, also presented to the board on how technology supports the media center.

Now a Wilson Elementary School student has access to the Internet and the staff is using software, scanners, both still- and video-digital cameras, projection devices and editing equipment.

Post Schools Superintendent, Dr. Dell McMullen and School Board President, Col. Michael Bingham, announced several accomplishments made by members of the Fort Benning Schools system.

Earnestine Ezekiel, a kindergarten teacher at Dexter Elementary School was recently named Woman of the Year for the Georgia Clean and Beautiful Program for her work with the e-Club, environmental club at Dexter Elementary School.

The e-Club took second place in the youth group category in the same competition. Both the club and Ezekiel will receive awards at a luncheon in Atlanta March 13.

Wilcox, one of the teachers who gave a presentation to the board, is one of the 10 state finalists who will be named Georgia's Science Teacher of the Year March 8.

A special guest at this month's meeting was fifth-grader Maria Hampton, a Dexter Elementary School student who wrote a book called "Army Friends 4-ever" in honor of the Army Communities of Excellence visit. Hampton entertained the board with a song from Dexter's play "Clown Calamity" called "Once in a While You Have to Smile to Make Somebody Happy."

CHILDREN'S DENTAL HEALTH

Thumbsucking impedes tooth growth

US Army Dental Activity

February is National Children's Dental Health Month. For new parents who are concerned about their baby's thumbsucking, the Fort Benning Dental Activity offers the following advice.

Sucking is one of a baby's natural reflexes. As infants grow, sucking serves many purposes. Infants and young children may suck on thumbs, fingers, pacifiers or toys because it makes them feel secure and happy and helps them learn about their world.

Young children may find that placing a finger or thumb into their mouth provides them with a sense of security at difficult periods, such as after a scolding or when separated from their parents.

Because thumbsucking is relaxing, it may induce sleep.

THUMB: Wean children from thumbsucking and pacifiers early

For this reason, young children may often do this in the evenings or when they are tired.

However, the Dental Activity staff notes that prolonged thumbsucking can cause problems. Once the permanent teeth erupt, sucking may cause problems with the proper growth of the mouth and alignment of teeth.

One factor that determines whether a dental problem may result is the intensity of sucking. Children who rest their thumbs passively in their mouths are less likely to have difficulty than those who vigorously suck their thumbs. Parents of children who do this will often hear a "popping" sound when the thumb is removed from the child's mouth.

The Dental Activity staff noted that some aggressive thumbsucking may even cause problems for their primary (baby) teeth. If you notice changes in the baby teeth, consult your dentist.

Usually, children stop thumbsucking between the ages of 2 and 4. Sucking gradually lessens during this period as they spend more of their waking hours exploring their surroundings. They should cease sucking by the time the permanent front teeth are ready to erupt. Peer pressure causes many school-aged children to stop.

Sucking a pacifier is not necessarily less harmful for a child. Pacifiers can affect the teeth essentially the same way as sucking fingers and thumbs. It is often an easier habit to break, however.

The Dental Activity staff said to keep these tips in mind when helping your child:

•Instead of scolding children for sucking, praise them when they are not.

•Remember that children often suck their thumbs when feeling insecure.

•Focus on correcting the cause of anxiety instead of thumbsucking.

•Children who are sucking for comfort will feel less of a need when their parents provide comfort.

•Reward children when they refrain from sucking during difficult periods, such as when being separated from their parents.

•Your dentist can encourage children to stop sucking and explain what could happen to their teeth if they continue.

•If these approaches don't work, remind the children of their habit by bandaging the thumb or putting a sock on the hand at night.

Editor's note: The American Dental Association provided information for this article in observance of National Children's Dental Health month.

SCHOOLS: Fort Benning School Board members meet

A superintendents meeting was conducted in Orlando, Fla. this month as a part of the Department of Defense world-wide superintendents meeting. Attending superintendents learned about school improvement plans and school accountability profiles and participated in child abuse training.

Also at the Wilson meeting, board members voted to approve the January consolidated lunchroom fund statement. The monthly net income for January was a loss of $7,219, the current year-to-date income is $26,547 and the current fund equity is $139,557.

At the conclusion of the meeting, Bingham paused to acknowledge Wilson School representative to the school board, Staff Sgt. Ricardo Linton. This meeting was Linton's last as he will now be stationed in Florida.

Others present at the meeting include: the 1996 Army Communities of Excellence team, Chaplain (Maj.) Robert Thompson, Rhoda Zerger, Dexter Elementary School representative; Sgt. Joe Todd, Loyd School representative; Staff Sgt. Richie Huffaker, McBride School representative; Richard Skinner, assistant superintendent; Robbie Norris, Fort Benning Schools Human Resources site manager; Caroline Myers, president, Benning Education Association; and Stephanie Davis, president, American Federation of Government Employees.

Swine population growing on installation

DPW is responsible for managing the installation's vast and diverse wildlife population.

Over the past several years, DPW personnel have been monitoring a growing population of feral swine. As they manage this relatively new resident on the installation, hopefully, the following information will be informative.

•Feral swine can cause extensive damage by rooting up vegetation. The soils on Fort Benning are highly erodible, and the rooting and loss of vegetation can lead to further erosion.

•Feral swine also compete with other wildlife for important food, such as acorns, and will eat the eggs of ground-nesting birds, wild turkeys and bobwhite quail.

•Feral swine are susceptible to several serious diseases: swine brucellosis, pseudorabies and trichinosis. These diseases can be transmitted to domestic stock and cause production losses and decreased profits.

Hunters are also at risk of swine brucellosis when they dress feral swine and should take precautions, such as wearing gloves for protection.

Pseudorabies is caused by a herpes virus and is not related to rabies and can not be transmitted to people. It is a fatal infection in other animals, such as cattle, sheep, dogs and cats. Wild mammals, such as raccoons, skunks, foxes, opossums and small rodents, can also be fatally infected.

It is with this in mind that a liberal hunting season was initiated in 1996 and a trapping operation is being conducted to take blood samples to test for swine brucellosis, trichinosi, and pseudorabies.

DPW's initial results from the feral swine disease testing showed that out of 17 feral swine tested for pseudorabies and swine brucellosis, two were positive for pseudorabies and all were negative for swine brucellosis. Three feral swine were tested for trichinosis and all were negative.

Pseudorabies does not pose a serious threat but DPW personnel will continue to monitor the feral swine population for diseases. DPW will release additional information as it becomes available.

For more information, call Pete Swiderek at 544-7319.

If you have questions or topics that you would like to be addressed in the DPW "Information Corner," contact Glenn Todd, DPW customer relations specialist, at 545-2117, or write to the Directorate of Public Works, Building 6, Room 409, ATTN: ATZB-PWM (Glenn Todd), Fort Benning, Ga., 31905.

ask the judge

By Michael H. Lane
Office of the Staff Judge Advocate

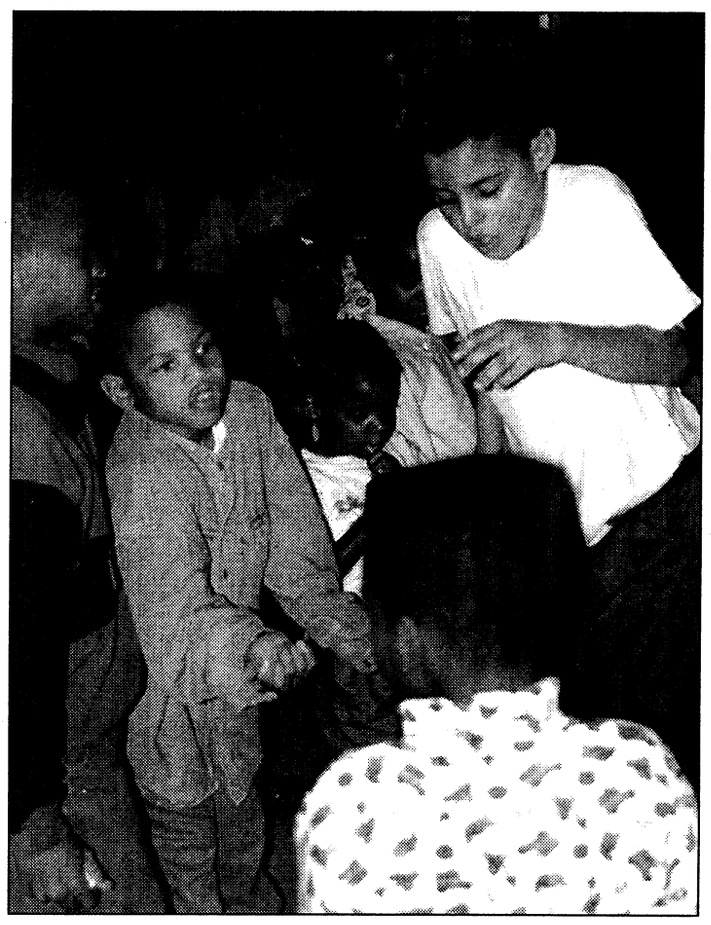
Q. I am employed on the local economy as a waitress in a large local eating establishment. During the last year, I was paid a salary and tips. My employer gave me a W-2 that shows tip income that he said I made. I didn't make that much money. Can he get away with that?

All tips must be reported as income. The way they are reported depends upon the size of the business and the amount of money you made. If you worked in a business with fewer than 10 employees and made less than $20 per week in tips, you do not have to report them to your employer, but only report them on your income tax return under other income. There is no Social Security or Medicare tax due on these tips, but you must keep records to support the amount of tips you actually received.

If you work in a business with less than 10 employees and earn more than $20 per week, you must still report your tips on your income taxes, but you must also report them to your employer. It is his or her responsibility to take Social Security and Medicare taxes out.

The situation is more complicated in your case, since you work in a large establishment. You must report tips on your income taxes, report them to your employer monthly or bimonthly, and have taxes taken out as above, but your employer is required to report certain tip information the Internal Revenue Service in which he or she must "allocate" a certain amount of money to you as "allocated tips." This amount goes on your W-2 form in box S. This amount is not the amount of tips you earned; it is a government-required estimate of the amount you should have earned. No taxes are taken from this amount.

The allocated tips may not match your actual tips. If you have records of your actual tips in an acceptable form, such as the forms in Publication 1244 (available from your employer or the IRS office), you only report the actual tips and not the allocated tips. If you fail to keep records, you will be charged the amount of allocated tips on your income tax, as if you had made that amount.



This process is described in detail in Publication 531, Reporting Tip Income, available at your local Internal Revenue Service office. In Columbus, the office is on Macon Road, behind the Dairy Queen.

If you need assistance on this or other problems, contact the Legal Assistance Office at 545-3282 for an appointment. You may also visit the tax offices in Infantry Hall, Room 1, or at Kelley Hill. Forms may be secured there or at the Internal Revenue Service, Columbus Office, on Macon Road.

PARENTING: Informational videos to air

past can not necessarily be used in today's changing world.

Stowers Elementary School recognized the need for some type of parent education program that would help address the issues pertinent to child rearing.

Today in order for parents to be successful, they must learn to instill communication skills, cooperation techniques, discipline and responsibility in their child. "Active parenting' is a video-based educational program which addresses these concerns.

This video series will begin airing on Fort Benning Cable Channel 3 March 10 and will run every hour during that week. The 30-minute workshop-type sessions feature true-to-life scenarios and include narration by parenting expert Dr. Michael Popkin.

The first in the series of six sessions will help parents develop and understand the different styles of parenting and how you can use choices to eliminate power struggles and promote cooperation.

Stowers will be conducting a follow-up session March 20 in a small group setting to answer any questions parents may have about the series. These will be open to the public.

For more information, call Stowers at 544-2312.

chapel notes

PWC to meet — March 13 from 9:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m., a guest speaker will speak to the Protestant Women of the Chapel on the theme "Sisters in Christ, Arise and Share Your Faith."

The program also includes special music and a picnic lunch. (Mothers with children in watchcare should bring a lunch for them.)

Other Thursdays in March will feature Bible study with "The Way of Agape" by Chuck and Nancy Missler. This study teaches how to love with God's amazing love.

PWOC meets every Thursday from 9:30 to 11:45 a.m. for a program of singing and prayer, and the Bible study which begins at 10:30 a.m.

All ladies are invited to attend these meetings in Building 2521, located near the intersection of Indianhead Road and Thorson Street. Child care is provided free in an adjacent Bldg. 2517.

For more information, call Jean Fry at 689-6049 or Kristie Sickler at 685-4979.

Youth clubs change meeting dates — Two children's groups will meet March 8 instead of Saturday. All children ages 5 through sixth grade are eligible to attend "Personal Attititudes Relating to Youth" and "Children Living Under the Bible" is a program for girls the same ages.

"C.L.U.B." meets at 11 a.m., and then joins with "P.A.R.T.Y." beginning at noon.

Airborne unit conducts Bible study — The Airborne Bible study meets every Tuesday at 7 p.m. in Building 2767, 11th Regiment Chaplain's Office. Everyone is invited. For more information, call 545-1314.

Mormon service takes place on Sand Hill — The Latter Day Saints service is conducted every Sunday at 8:30 a.m. in Building 3245 at Sand Hill.

Lent devotions continues — through March 18, there will be Lenten Devotions at The Infantry Center Chapel at noon each Tuesday, followed by a soup and bread lunch in the Chapel Annex at approximately 12:30 p.m. For additional information, call 545-2050 or 545-2931.

Protestant youth classes set— Protestant Confirmation and Communicants' classes will be conducted at the Religious Education Center, Building 2518, each Tuesday afternoon beginning at 3:45 p.m.

These classes are for students in the seventh grade through high school.

Although these classes are normally attended prior to an individual becoming a church member, anyone wishing to learn more about their faith, the history and teachings of the Protestant faith and the Bible, is invited to attend. Upon completion of these classes, anyone desiring to join a church will be put in contact with a chaplain or pastor of that particular faith group.

For more information, call Lt. Col (Chap.) Robert Wildeman at 545-2050 or 545-2359 or Bill Putman at 545-4715.

Choir to sing for Easter Cantata — The Infantry Center Chapel adult choir is rehearsing now for the Easter cantata, "Calvary's Love." All community members interested in singing in this cantata are invited to join.

Rehearsals take place every Wednesday at 7:30 p.m. in the Chapel Annex.

Call Sandra Norris at 683-0308 for more information.

MACH offers new worship services — Martin Army Community Hospital services will be as follows:

•Sunday at 8 a.m. — Protestant Worship Service,

•Sunday at 7 p.m. — Catholic Mass,

•Tuesday at noon — Bible study,

•Wednesday at noon — Protestant Chapel Service, and

•Thursday at noon — Full Gospel Service.

All the services listed above are conducted in the Martin Army Community Hospital Chapel, located in the basement of the hospital.

New children's program begins — The Religious Education Center plans a new segment of its children's Bible study program, Personal Attitudes Relating To You.

The new segment, Children Living Under the Bible, includes Bible study and Scripture memorization, basic etiquette skills, table and home decorating and some sewing and cooking skills.

The class meets the first Saturday of each month from noon to 2 p.m. at the Religious Education Center, Building 2521.

The class is open to girls in grades three through six.

Musician needed for Catholic services — The U.S. Army Chaplains Office needs an organist or pianist with knowledge of Roman Catholic worship to play for the 9:30 a.m. service at Regimental Chapel, Sand Hill, Sunday mornings.

For application information, call 545-1934.

Post chaplains seek workers — The U.S. Army Chaplains Office seeks pianists, organists, choir directors, bus drivers and teachers for Sunday School and Confraternity of Christian Doctrine classes.

The chaplains also need part-time office help and individuals to watch young children during religious activities.

Call the USAIC Chaplains Office at 545-1934, or visit the office in Building 75, for details of times, places and duties.

Sunday school class uses sermon Scriptures — A new adult class provides students an opportunity to study the Scriptures in preparation for the morning sermon.

The Fort Benning Sunday School takes place from 9:30 to 10:30 a.m. in Building 2517 at the Religious Education Center.

For more information, call 545-4715.

God wants us to excel

By Tim Atkinson
203rd FSB, 17th Eng. Bn.

reflections

Life is too short for us not to reach for excellence. God has put a desire within every human being to strive for excellence.

It is written in the Word of God, "And yet I show you a more excellent way. I trough I speak with the tongues of men and of angels, but have not love, I have become sounding brass or a clanging cymbal (I Corinthians 12:3 - 13: 1)."

The Special Olympics are testimonies to excellence. There is a winner inside of you that can be brought out in Christ. Through faith in God, we can overcome the obstacles of life like an athlete running the hurdles.

The Apostle Paul wrote a word about excellence that reads, "I can do all things through Christ who strengthens me (Philippians 4:13)."

The Army's slogan, "Be all you can be. You can do it in the Army," is supposed to excite a person that wants to excel.

As a child of God, he will challenge you to excel. The first book of the Bible, Genesis, records that God created man in his image. God created the world in excellence and then rested.

We, too, can be those who touch our world in excellence. God has created each of us with various strengths, talents and gifts that can uniquely help others.

Paul said that agape love was the more excellent way. I expound on that verse by saying that one can only reach true excellence by the more excellent way of agape love.

The Greek word "agape" was coined to describe a special love from God. It is an unconditional love that finds its origins in God himself, who is love.

The most important thing that a believer in Christ can do to relate to others and live in excellence is to understand more personally about God's all powerful love.

Once a person understands deep within that God truly loves him or her unconditionally, he or she is free to love others.

Larry Norman, a Christian song writer and musician, wrote, "Without love, you ain't nothing, you ain't nothing, nothing, nothing. Without love you ain't nothing, without love."

Truly, without love we are all like an annoying gong or clanging cymbal. The more excellent way is love.

The best that life can offer is not true excellence without love as the better part of the equation.

One of the best ways to picture excellence in the Christian faith is to think of how love triumphed in Christ's sacrificial death on the cross. As we meditate on Christ's sufferings and passion, we can see the love of God in Christ.

As he forgave the Soldiers praying, "Father, forgive them, for they know not what they do," love triumphed on the cross. Now the cross is a symbol of excellence, because of Christ's love. We, too, can let excellence come out of our tragedies and hurts.

Someone might say, "I cannot forgive what they have done to me." No, but through Christ, you can.

Christ's way of love can and must be our motivation, if we are to walk in excellence.

The golden rule that Christ gave us, "Do unto others as you would have them do unto you," is truly "the more excellent way."

Let us take this time to especially think about the excellent love of Christ.

Bible teaches us how to grow in grace

By Terry W. Austin
USAIC Chaplains Office

reflections

Growing and getting older is one process that will never stop. It is quite natural for all of us to show physical signs of aging through hair loss or some other means, and there is really nothing we can do to prevent it.

We still celebrate birthdays and adapt to a changing body with medication or some other means to improve our quality of life.

As it is with our physical lives, so should it be with our spiritual lives.

We are commanded to grow in the grace and knowledge of Jesus Christ (II Peter 3:18). In other words, we are to know more about Jesus Christ today than we did a year ago. In fact, if we love someone, we will continually strive to know more about them.

The problem with this great experience is us. We cannot only hinder our growth in the Lord, but we can actually stop growing as a Christian. Our faith becomes weak and insignificant because we do not practice it.

We ought to be growing Christians. Hopefully, we are participating in activities that increase our faith. If you are wondering what some of these activities could be, I will recommend a few to you

First, talk to Jesus Christ. After all, he is not only your best friend but he knows everything about you. He is closer than a brother, sweeter than honey and is always with you.

When you talk to someone, you get to know him or her better. Talk to Jesus Christ as you would your spouse or best friend.

Second, read the greatest love letter ever written. The Word of God, the Bible, is God's written message to us.

There are some basic fundamentals we should know about the Word of God. It should be a daily experience of love from someone close to you but far away in a distant land.

Third, fellowship with those who think like you. These friends are found everywhere — at work, church or living next door.

Spend time talking to them about themselves and Jesus Christ. As you do this, you will witness to the grace of God in your life and others.

You may even have the opportunity to share God's love with someone who does not know it. That is another great reason to know Jesus and the Word of God very well.

Growing in the grace and knowledge of Jesus Christ — that is the way it ought to be.

I hope you are growing in our Lord by doing a few of the things mentioned. If not, let me encourage you to begin.

Determine that no matter where you are, you will be faithful to your commitment and continue to grow in the love of God, his son, Jesus Christ, and the work he has called you to do. God will bless you as you act according to his Word.

The chaplains at Fort Benning are committed to your spiritual growth and quality of life. Every week, the love of God is celebrated and you can be a part of it.

I trust you will grow in your faith while in the military — it's the way it ought to be.

Faith in God breaks negative cycles

By James Walton Blount
1st Battalion, 38th Infantry Regiment

Will we ever break the cycle? A boy sees his dad drinking heavily all the time, and when dad really gets drunk then he beats his little boy and everyone else in the family.

reflections

Dad not only abuses the family physically and verbally, but also in other terrible ways that we are far too familiar with.

For this little boy, this is what family life is all about. This is normal family living as far as he is concerned, because this is all that he really sees and experiences.

His ideas of what it is to be a husband and father come mainly from his role model, which happens to be his father. So what inevitably happens when this little boy grows to manhood, marries and starts a family?

Of course, he will act in a way that is normal for him in a family. He will drink heavily and abuse his wife and kids. The cycle repeats itself on and on as his son watches him.

Certainly, this scenario does not happen every time in a dysfunctional family, but it happens far too often. We have to break the cycle

A little girl watches her mom go from husband to husband. The girl doesn't have a clue to who her real father is, and there is never a male figure in the family long enough for her to bond with as her daddy.

Her mom seems to treat marriage like dating; "If he doesn't work out, then I'll just dump him and try someone else." Forget about for better or for worse and till death do us part. Forget about sacrifice.

So this little girl sees as normal the relationships her mom has with men. Her ideas about marriage and family are developed as she observes her mom who is her role model.

What happens when she grows up? She does what she saw as normal. She continues the cycle of divorce even as her daughter watches and learns. The cycle must be broken.

Violence, crime, and poverty, in our society, can be directly attributed to broken homes and dysfunctional families. It is always the children who suffer the most.

Children come to us from God as a great blessing and responsibility. They are not really our children, but they are God's children. We are held accountable as stewards of their lives. If America wants to continue to receive God's blessings, then America had better find a way to break this vicious cycle of broken homes and dysfunctional families that is ravaging our nation.

The answers are out there. The institutions and programs are in place.

What we need now is willpower. We need the will to seek God's will for our families. Our willpower comes from faith in God. I believe that a strong faith in God can and will break the cycle.

Let's break it now.

volunteer of the week

Name: LaTanya Wagstaff

Hometown: Philadelphia, Penn.

Volunteer job title: Director of Personal Attitudes Relating to God and Children Living Under the Bible (Children's programs)

Volunteer organizations:
Religious Education Center, Fort Benning, and North Highland Assembly of God Sunday School.

Why do you volunteer?
I have a desire to give back to the community and to provide children in these programs an opportunity to know the love of Jesus, and to learn the Bible and homemaking skills.

What do you like most about volunteering?
The responses of children and parents.

What are your special interests and hobbies? Public relations, arts and crafts, decorating and homemaking

What others have to say : "LaTanya Wagstaff has served as the director of two programs for children since March 1996. She has contributed a great amount of time and energy, as well as resources, to the development of the programs, recruiting workers and training them, and giving them her personal supervision. Their tremendous success is due solely to her personal efforts in providing Bible study, music, recreation and crafts for the children in these programs."

Preserve our childlife

More than 1,000 children between the ages of 5 and 14 are killed annually as the result of pedestrian-motor vehicle accidents.

Stay alert for children going to and coming from school:

- Obey the speed limit (15 miles per hour) in school zones.
- Watch for children walking, skating or cycling.
- Stop for buses loading and unloading children.

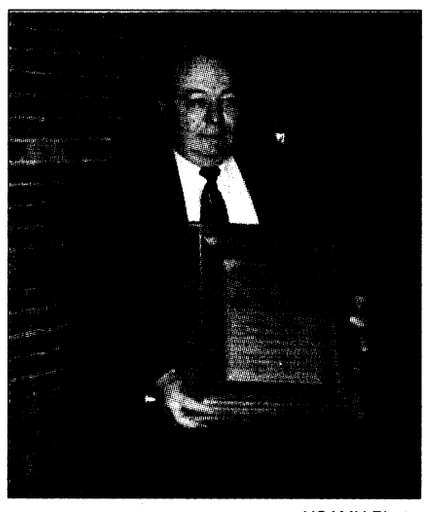
Former Soldier inducted into Hall of Fame



By Anna O'Leska
USAMU Public Affairs Office

Former U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit three-time Olympic Medalist Lones W. Wigger Jr. was inducted into the Chattahoochee Valley Sports Hall of Fame during an induction banquet at the Iron Works Convention and Trade Center Feb. 8.

The Hall of Fame was established to recognize individuals from the Chattahoochee Valley region who distinguished themselves through their talents and achievements in the world of athletics.

In his more than 30 years of world-level competition, Wigger has won 65 Gold, 38 Silver and eight Bronze Medals, including Gold Medal in free rifle at the 1964 and the 1972 Olympic Games. He also set 13 individual world records and was a member of 14 world record-setting teams. He has won 80 national championships and holds or co-holds 32 national records.

Wigger has also had an impact on the Chattahoochee Valley's youth. In the 1970s, he founded the Fort Benning Junior Rifle Club and under his tutelage, the Junior Rifle Club set numerous national records and won 16 national championships. More than 20 members of the Junior Rifle Club earned ROTC or athletic scholarships during his tenure.

USAMU Photo

Three-time Olympic medalist Lones W. Wigger Jr., exhibits the placque he was presented at his induction into the Hall of Fame.

"It's wonderful to be honored by the people in Georgia," Wigger said. "More than that, it's an honor that someone from the sport of shooting is being honored."

Wigger, who began shooting with his father in Montana at age 12, was a three-time All American at Montana State where he enrolled in the Army ROTC program in hopes of becoming a member of the USAMU.

He came on active duty as a lieutenant in 1960 and was assigned to the USAMU where he began a world record-breaking career as a competitive shooter for me Army and U.S. shooting teams.

Wigger won his first Olympic Gold Medal at Tokyo in 1964, while setting a new world record in the process. He also took a Silver Medal. He carried the banner for the U.S. Olympic shooting efforts in 1964, 1968, 1972, 1980 and has shot on 16 other major U.S. teams.

After retiring from the Army in 1987, Wigger continued to enhance America's shooting program as the director of the U. S. Shooting Team until 1992.

Wigger's legacy lives on in the community. The Fort Benning Junior Rifle Club continues to be one of the top junior sports clubs in the nation, producing national championship winners, setting new national records and providing scholarships for deserving members.

Wigger is also a member of the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit's Hall of Fame and is called the USAMU's greatest international rifleman. In 1996, the U.S. Olympic Committee named him one of the top 100 outstanding Olympians of all time.

Currently living in Colorado Springs, Colo., with his wife, Mary Kay, Wigger said he was eager to see old friends in the military while in Columbus.

"It means a lot to me to see my peers again," said Wigger, "those who I worked for and who worked for me.

"The U.S. Army gave me the opportunity to belong to the USAMU and do the things I did,'" Wigger said. "I never would have achieved the things I did without them."

Wigger currently does consulting work designing equipment and promoting new ammunition for various shooting industries in the Colorado Springs area. However, he makes sure he continues doing what he loves in his spare time.

"I still compete in anywhere from 15 to 20 domestic matches a year," Wigger said. "I just don't do international anymore."

Other inductees who were recognized include Cecil Darby, the late G. Gunby Jordan, B.B. Register and Ernest Green.

Today's black hero athletes no comparison to heroes of yesterday

By John W. Peeler
Special to the Bayonet©

John W. Peeler believes today's black athletes do not compare with the black athletes of yesterday.

Athletes have long been heroes and idols for children growing up. As Black History Month concludes, it is only fitting to pay tribute to the many black athletes who have graced the gridirons, diamonds, tracks and basketball and tennis courts over the years.

commentary

As I sat down to write this commentary, I wondered why the numbers of black hero athletes of today in no way compared to the great accomplishments of black hero athletes in years past.

I looked back at the black athletes who I looked up to, like Alan Page, defensive tackle for the Minnesota Vikings; Jackie Robinson, outfielder for the Brooklyn Dodgers; and basketball and tennis greats Lewis Alcindor (Kareem Abdul Jabbar), Milwaukee Bucks and Los Angeles Lakers, and Arthur Ashe.

My favorite all-time sports hero was Page.

Page, a number one draft choice of the Vikings in 1967, went on to be the first defensive player in National Football League history to win the NFL Most Valuable Player award.

On arriving in Vikings training camp, Page found out that a lot of players on the team could not read or write. He set up a program to teach his fellow teammates these skills. Page went on to earn a law degree while playing professional football, and after retirement, practiced law until in 1992 when he became the first African-American to be selected to the Minnesota State Supreme Court.

Page was inducted into the NFL Hall of Fame in 1988 and it was at that induction ceremony he founded the Page Education Foundation, a foundation to provide post-secondary scholarships and mentoring to students of color.

In 1992 Page received the National Collegiate Athletic Association Silver Anniversary Award for distinguishing himself in his 25 years since graduation from Notre Dame. In 1996 he received the NFL Players Association Award for his distinguished career since his retirement from football.

Where can a child find black athletes of this caliber today?

Personally, I do not think they can.

I took a look back and tried to discover a logical reason for the difference in today's black athlete and yesterday's black athlete.

The one difference I noticed was pride and sense of morals.

Yesterday's black athletes worked for everything they received, shunned the stardom and limelight and knew that the way the public viewed them would set the standard for future black athletes.

Today's black athletes expect everything to be handed to them on a silver platter and seem to have no concern for the standards they are setting for future black athletes nor how they are perceived.

Black athletes of today have forgotten the struggle and sacrifices of those before them and it is up to the fans to remind them of this fact every chance they get. Voice your opinions through letters to the offending athlete and stop buying products they endorse.

It is up parents to remind their children that the history of sports and the strides that have been made were built on the sacrifices, blood and sweat of those black athletes of yesterday, and that sports would not be where it is today without black athletes.

So the next time you buy your child a jersey of their favorite black athlete, think about who the player is, what they stand for and, more importantly, the moral standards the player is setting for your child.

Elite military athletes continue receiving world class training

Stephen Barrett
American Forces Press Service

WASHINGTON — Military athletes with world-class skills will continue to receive Department of Defense help toward reaching their Olympic goals, the Armed Forces Sports Council chairman said at a recent press conference.

Air Force Brig. Gen. Patrick Adams said the services will continue their efforts to prepare service members for future Olympic competition.

"They will receive the opportunity to have specialized training, including a reassignment if necessary," Adams said. "They'll get the opportunity to refine their particular (athletic) skill or talent."

Although the next Summer Olympics in Sydney, Australia, is three years away, Adams said, each service must look now at potential Olympians.

"They need the time to train up to international standards," Adams said, "and they have to compete against other world-class athletes to prepare for something like the Olympics."

Three of the four military services run world-class athlete programs designed to turn nationally-rated military athletes into international and Olympic-level competitors. Troops selected train for their sport full time at military training centers, through ROTC programs at major stateside universities or at the U.S. Olympic training centers.

The Army started its world-class athlete program in 1978 and now trains most of its athletes at Fort Carson, Colo. The Air Force began basing its world-class program at Peterson Air Force Base, Colo., two years ago, while the Marines directly assign their athletes to units near U.S. Olympic training centers. The Navy provides support to its nationally-rated athletes, but has no formal program.

Most of these programs start preparations two years before each Olympiad. However, Adams said, the services are already out recruiting their quality athletes. Service coaches initially target their training for 1997 armed forces events, but they are also looking to mentor Olympic potentials.

"There are thousands of military service athletes in the ranks that have special athletic talents," Adams said. "It's those talents that could lead to an armed forces title and a chance for international competition. The sooner you can identify that talent, the more time you have to prepare that athlete for the major competitions."

One who believes Adams' philosophy is Army Staff Sgt. Derrick Waldroup, 1996 Armed Forces Athlete of the Year. A Greco-Roman wrestler who competed in the Atlanta Olympics, Waldroup is now coaching the Army's wrestling team. He said he believes it's never too early to recruit Olympic prospects.

Waldroup

"All you have to do is just go to the 's an amazing amount of raw talent out there," Waldroup said, just returning from a world-wide search for Army grapplers. "But in order to mold these wrestlers into world-class competitors, you've got to get them now, work with them and place them in competition that will help them develop into top wrestlers."

Waldroup's search brought 65 Soldiers to the 1997 All-Army Wrestling Camp at Carson. From that number, Waldroup will select grapplers who will compete at the armed forces wrestling tournament in March at Pensacola Naval Air Station, Fla.

"We've got wrestlers in camp who've been to the nationals and the Olympic trials, and we had a couple of guys just miss out on slots to the Olympics," Waldroup said. "They bring a lot of experience to the table — experience we can use to build toward the 2000 trials and a shot at Sydney."

Another aspect important to a military athlete's success is competing at the Conseil International du Sport Militaire. Adams places a heavy emphasis on CISM competition because it tests U.S. military athletes against their peers from 115 other nations.

Many of the Olympic sports are also common to all service members around the world, Adams said.

"That's why we compete at CISM," he said. "Win or lose, the Americans gain exposure and experience in high-level competition."

With some U.S. athletes concentrating for the 1998 Winter Olympics in Japan, Adams said DoD will also support military athletes vying for slots.

"Alpine and Nordic skiing events, biathlon — they also have their ties to the military," Adams said. "We sent people to Lillehammer (Norway) in 1994, and we've got people training right now in Vermont and New York in biathlon."

Although the military drawdown has cut the number of potential athletes, Adams said service commanders are still willing to allow the best athletes to compete.

"Think of where the military was in 1986 and where it is in 1997," he said. "We're a third smaller than we were before," he said. "In a time of downsizing, field commanders have to make difficult choices about their people. Still, our sports programs have the same level of support that they did before."

For more information about the world-class athlete program requirements, call 545-4300.

OUTDOORS

Equipment key to good fishing

Feature Outdoors

Getting started in fishing is as easy as pushing a button, the casting button of a spincast reel that is. Choosing from the massive array of fishing gear is not as difficult as it might appear to a beginner, if you can keep a few basic things in mind.

Most anglers start out with a Spincast also called a "closed-face," reel. And for good reason. spincast reels are easy to use and perform well.

A tangle-free reel is an excellent choice for beginners. It has a unique drag system that eliminates line twist and tangles that can result when you're first learning to cast. Like many Spincast reels, the tangle-free series are pre-spooled with line so it's ready to fish. The model you choose depends largely on what you plan to fish for.

A spincast reel is also easy for kids to learn fishing.

"In general, the bigger the fish, the heavier the gear you'll want to use, with 8 or 12 pound-test line and on up" said Steve Vogts. "For smaller fish, you'll want lighter gear, and lighter line, 4- to 6-pound test."

The tangle-free 8 is a good medium choice for beginners because it's light enough for fishing smaller fish, like crappie, yet strong enough for bass and walleye.

The next step is to match the right rod to your reel. You can purchase a pre-packaged combo that has been matched for you, or choose a rod that "balances" with the size of your reel.

Smaller reels balance best with light-action rods; medium-sized reels with medium-action rods; and large reels with medium-heavy or heavy-action rods.

The rod's action refers to its weight and stiffness and is stamped on the rod near the handle. Light-action rods are best fished with 2- to 6-pound test line; medium-action rods with 6- to 12-pound test; and heavy-action rods with 12- to 20 pound test. Use a light-action rod if you plan to fish exclusively for pan fish, and a medium-action if you'll mix in some walleye or bass angling.

Rods also come in different lengths, ranging from 4 feet to 10 feet. Shorter rods give you better control while longer rods allow you to cast farther. An ideal starter rod is 5 to 6 feet long, which is short enough to give you plenty of control, yet long enough to provide a fair amount of casting distance.

Rods and reels are a little less intimidating, than all the other fishing tackle. There are a tremendous amount of lures on the market. How do you know which lures are necessary? For an all-around good lure, it's hard to beat a spinnerbait like the Beetle Spin. It imitates the flash of a minnow, and a leech or worm body, and it comes in a variety of sizes and colors to match the conditions and feeding habits of the fish you're after.

In general, choose dark colors for clear water and cloudy days, and bright colors for dark water and sunny days. Chartreuse, pumpkin, pearl, bright neons, black and purple are a good colors to have on hand. Small lures generally work better in early Spring when fish are spawning and not as hungry, while bigger lures are more productive later in the season. Keep handy an assortment of grubs, worms, curly tails, and waxworm plastic bodies, some spinnerbaits, small jigging spoons, a few bobbers, split shots and No. 4 or No. 6 hooks.

Don't be intimidated by all the gear you see and fishing "know how" you hear. All you need is a good rod and reel that's easy to cast, a common bait, a shoreline to fish from and some hungry fish, and you're on your way to great fun.

Rattling jigs attract bass

By Earl Bentz and Steve Price
Outboard Marine Corporation

If it doesn't make noise, it won't catch as many bass.

That's the opinion of the majority of today's professional tournament bass anglers when informally questioned about the use of rattles in jigs.

"I don't believe rattles in a jig will ever hurt you and most of the time they'll help," said Ron Shuffield, a confirmed rattling jig user.

"I believe the rattles simply help fish find the lure faster, and it doesn't matter about water clarity or the type of cover being fished. The more noise your lure makes, the easier the fish can locate it."

As an example, Shuffield describes one of his national tournament wins on Bull Shoals Lake in Arkansas where the water was exceptionally clear.

"I was fishing a rattling jig in sunken bushes as deep as 15 feet," Shuffield said. "The lure was rattling constantly as it bounced off different limbs on its way to the bottom, and once on the bottom, I seldom had to move the lure more than once before a bass had it.

"I think those fish heard the lure falling through the branches, pinpointed it, and followed it down, then struck as soon as it reached the bottom."

Victories like Shuffield's have convinced lure manufacturers noisy jigs are definitely more productive than silent ones, and as a result, virtually every major jig manufacturer now has a rattling jig, or at least a way to add rattles to its earlier models.

"Some of today's jigs are extremely loud, too," the pro said. "We started with single rattles, then went to double rattle chambers, and now some jigs have three rattles," he said. "I wonder if we're going to start making them too noisy."

Many manufactures are hiding their rattles under the jig skirts, but high enough along the hook shank that they don't interfere with hook setting. The actual appearance of rattles on a jig, however, doesn't seem to bother the bass.

"I think bass just see a slow moving creature falling through brush or sliding along the bottom like a crawfish or a small baitfish," Shuffield said. "The fish eats the jig because it is moving slowly and it's easy to catch. What we're doing with rattles is simply making the lure easier to find."

Shuffield's win on Bull Shoals hasn't been his only win with a rattling jig. Late last year, he won a difficult national tournament on the Arkansas River by casting his jig over brush and rattling it a few inches above the bottom. Eventually, he'd feel a bass tugging at it.

"I'm convinced those fish came to the noise," he said.

State Park offers canoe trips

Georgia Dept. of Natural Resources

High Falls State Park is offering a series of day-long canoe trips on the Towaliga River.

The trips will begin April 12 and will continue each month into October. Other dates will be May 10, Jun. 14, July 12, Aug. 9, Sept. 13, and Oct. 18.

The cost is $15 per person. Participants should meet at the park office at 9 a.m, Canoes, paddles and a life jacket will be furnished. A cooler of water will be provided. Canoers should bring their own sack lunch.

Park ranger George Smith said the guided trips are an introductory experience for a novice canoer.

"We will not just go from point A to point B," Smith said. "There will be interpretive talks where we stop, look and talk about things we see. Participants are encouraged to bring their cameras."

The trips are open to anyone looking for a nice day on the river. Youths under 16 years of age must be accompanied by and adult 18 years or older. Children under 5 years of age are not permitted.

Each canoe trip offers 16 spots on a first-come first-serve basis. Reservations and deposits may be made by calling the park office at (912) 993-3053. Only stormy weather will cancel the trips.

Persons owning their own canoes, paddles and life jackets may also register for a fee of $10.

In my family, learning is everything.

Books don't just enlighten. They empower. Our children are growing up knowing this. A good education is one of the most important things we can give them. And we will, with the help of U.S. Savings Bonds.

Through the Payroll Savings Plan, we put aside something with every payday. And little by little, it will add up to college for our children.

U.S. Savings Bonds helped my parents put me through college. And next year, it's Michelle's turn. Sure, Savings Bonds have been important to our past, but they'll be even more important to our future. That's what makes our investment so valuable.

Ask your employer or banker about saving with U.S. Savings Bonds. For all the right reasons.

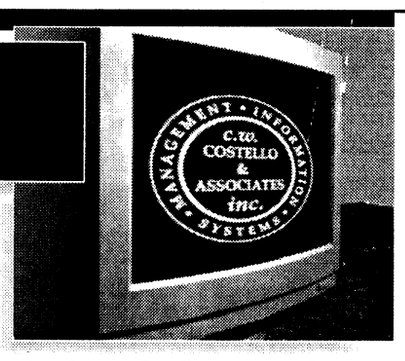
Equal Opportunity Employer

Our Technology Will Keep Us Ahead.

Use your technical expertise to help us stay there. At UPS, the world's largest package delivery company, our advanced technologies and highly skilled professionals ensure our place in the future. We are currently seeking team players for the following career opportunities.

Software Engineer
As part of a multi-disciplinary team you will develop "real-world" solutions for machine automation controls and data acquisition systems in order to meet the needs of UPS operations. Qualifications include a minimum of 3 years experience in software development and systems integration using Windows 95 and NT, C, C++, Visual C++, VB 4.0. and Microsoft OCX. Knowledge of networking and UNIX is a plus.



Senior Engineer
Is desired with image/signal processing and algorithm development experience. The candidate must be familiar with PC/workstation based development tools and have prior involvement with the development of real time algorithms for extracting data from high-density signals. In addition, an engineer filling this position would be expected to implement selected algorithms in efficient C code in a high speed real time environment. Prior experience with symbology reading, machine vision or OCR would be beneficial.

In return for your energy and expertise, we offer a fully competitive salary and benefits rated among the nation's best. For immediate consideration, forward your resume and salary history to:

ARMY EMERGENCY RELIEF

Campaign kicks off, goal $150K

By April N. Olsen
USAIC Public Affairs Office

Army Emergency Relief officially kicked off its annual campaign drive Monday in Infantry Hall, Building 4.

Fort Benning Garrison Commander Col. Ron Greene opened the 1997 campaign by addressing unit project officers and key personnel. The installation goal is to raise $150,000 by the end of the campaign, which is May 15.

Greene said the installation distributed out more than $686,000 worth of financial assistance to Soldiers, retirees and family members last year while donating more than $190,000 into the AER fund.

Greene said AER is one way the Army takes care of its own.

Al Deane, the installation AER officer, said the campaign serves not only to raise funds but also to increase awareness of what AER can do, and he hopes that by the end of the campaign, more people will know how to obtain assistance through AER.

One common misconception, Deane said, is that Soldiers assigned to Fort Benning must go through the AER office here to receive help.

If Soldiers are home on leave or in an emergency situation away from their duty station, they may get assistance from similar agencies set up to help other military service members, he said.

"Soldiers are eligible to get AER assistance through the Air Force Aid Society Section, the Navy-Marine Corps Relief Society Auxiliary or the Coast Guard Mutual Assistance Office," Deane said.

In the absence of those offices, a Soldier can go to any American Red Cross Office for assistance, Deane said.

This cooperation is available because there is a reciprocal agreement to reimburse those funds, Deane said.

AER provides financial assistance in the form of grants and interest free loans to active duty Soldiers, retirees, widows and family members of active duty Soldiers and retirees.

Assistance is provided on a case-by-case basis and is given as a no-interest loan, grant or partial loan and partial grant.

Assistance may be provided for emergency leave, initial rent and deposits, automobile repairs, funeral expenses and non receipt of pay.

Now available through AER is a $2,500 grant for funeral expenses due to the death of an immediate family member.

AER also has a scholarship program for undergraduate study by family member children.

Contributions to the campaign may be made by allotment, cash or check to unit project officers or key personnel or directly to AER located in Building 2436, Soldiers' Plaza.

For more information, call Deane, at 545-4043 or 545-7517.

Production crew films Fort Benning again

By Lori Egan
Bayonet staff writer

Film crews once again visited Fort Benning Monday and Tuesday.

Fort Benning is chosen as a location for many shoots because of its diversity in training and the temperate climate, said Al Blanchard, Public Affairs spokesperson.

Earlier this year, MTV filmed segments about Army life shown on MTV's "Prime Time" in February, and the Discovery Channel just aired a story about how rangers cope with stress. A segment about how Airborne students overcome fear aired Wednesday and will air again Saturday at 8 p.m.

This production crew was on post to film part of a 13-part series for the A&E network on the history of foot Soldiers.

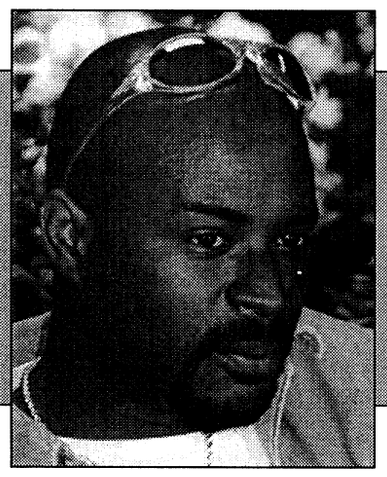
The series traces the evolution of the Infantry, not just the technology, but the character of the Infantry through the ages, said Robert Lihani, producer and director of the segment being filmed here.

"The series, narrated by Richard Karn from "Home Improvement," is not a heavy-melodramatic thing but is more about what the foot Soldiers had to deal with through the ages," Lihani said. "There are similarities and universal constants that we've found here — the idea of leadership, integrity and commitment.

Lori Egan

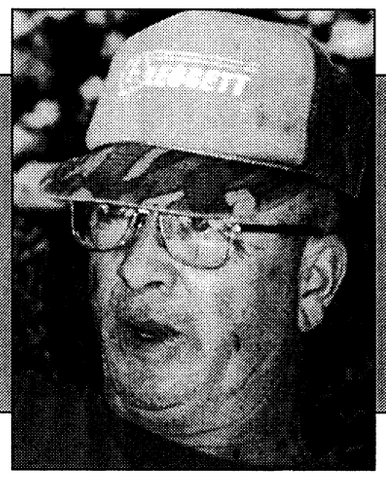
Don Hooper, audio engineer with Rob Rainey Video, checks the sound levels while Sgt. Scott Decker, the Land Warrior Soldier, waits to demonstrate the Land Warrior equipment.

"Its mainly the tools of the trade that have changed and the biggest change we're going to see on the horizon is the land warrior," he said.



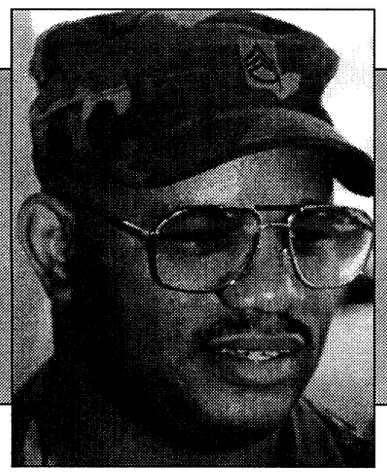
"Fort Benning is the home of the Infantry, so we came to the right place," Lihani said.

Another post that will be featured in the documentary is Fort Irwin, Calif.



The Women's History Luncheon, sponsored by the Equal Opportunity Office, is Tuesday at 11:30 a.m. at the Fort Benning Officers' Club.

VARIOUS VOICES



What can be done to prevent people from speeding on post?

Kenneth Miller, Columbus — "If we had more police, it would definitely cut back on speeding."

Charles Williamson, retired sergeant first class — "Things would be safer and there would be less speeding if there where more military police and if people would observe the drivers that don't speed and try to slow down instead of trying to pass."

Staff Sgt. Mark A. Logan, Company C, 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment — "I think they should put speed bumps in all over post."

Sandra Devine, family member — "I think more police patrolling an area would slow people down."

Leevon Sparks, family member — "I would like to see speed bumps put in and I would like to see the names of speeders published in the newspaper."

Audra Castrow, family member— "If people lost their license for a year they wouldn't speed, not if it would hinder their activities or if they had kids."

Lead feet

Exceeding the speed limit anywhere deserves punishment

By Lori Egan
Bayonet staff writer

commentary

Every time I get in the car these days, I see people pulled over by the military police. Speeders I suppose.

When I first arrived at Fort Benning, everyone and their dog told me not to speed on post. This was good advice.

But as time passed, I saw more and more people driving faster than I thought someone actually doing the posted speed limit should drive.

I don't speed, now. Yes, I am a reformed speeder. I like driving fast. But I don't do it anymore.

I'm not saying that not speeding is easy. It's not. I have a lead foot. I can still rationalize speeding on the interstate, but I've never understood how people can speed through housing areas, parking lots or in business districts with stop and go traffic, etc.

I have a history of speeding tickets. I used to think if I was willing to take the risk and could afford the ticket, then speed, speed speed.

I got my very first speeding ticket when I was a teenager.

I was driving to a friend's house who lived about 20 miles from me.

I liked to see how fast I could get there.

It was dusk — that time just as the sun is going down, not the 30 minutes before when, according to

Lori Egan says she knows it's easy to speed but she doesn't think it should go unpunished.

the Idaho Drivers Manual, a driver is supposed to turn on the car lights.

I passed the cop. I didn't see him driving along in the same direction I was going.

Was that stupid or what? Talk about irresponsibility — which is what the judge said.

I had to go to court for that speeding ticket. It cost a lot of money — my hard-earned money, not my parents'. It was more than two weeks after I got the ticket, but before I had to go to court, I told my parents about the ticket.

Did that stop me from speeding? No! Instead, I learned to recognize police cars from a great distance.

My last speeding ticket was six years ago. I had just returned from Germany and was driving in northern Nevada. Even in Germany, a country known for autobahns and speed, my husband constantly told me to slow down.

The population of northern Nevada consists mostly of deer, groundhogs, jack rabbits and sagebrush. There are a few ranchers, miners and gamblers.

For a while, Nevada would give a wasting valuable resources ticket and slap the speeder with a $5 fine if the speed was less than 70 mph, I think.

I never received a $5 fine in my life.

I paid a fine that exceeded $100. In Nevada, if a speeder didn't get the $5 fine, the fine was increased by every mile over the 55 mph speed limit. Ouch — that ticket hurt.

I received the lecture about not speeding from my husband over the phone. He was still in Germany.

But lectures from my husband, the police or a judge did not stop my speeding. It was my daughter who did.

When she was 3 years old, she started to critique my driving.

"Mom, keep both hands on the steering wheel!"

"Are you speeding, Mom? You're passing the other cars."

But the one comment that made me slow down on Interstate 185 was "Mom, it would break my heart if you were arrested and taken to jail for speeding."

That made me realize I wasn't the only one involved in my little quest for speed.

So now I try not to speed. I constantly glance at the speedometer and scan the roadway for police who pull over other hapless speeders.

But I feel absolutely no sympathy for people who get pulled over in the housing areas, putting those poor, unwatched children at risk, they deserve what ever punishment they receive.

'No, I can't spare a dime...'

Drug epidemic forces Soldier to face his own prejudice

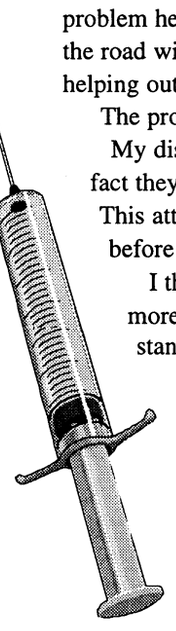
By Bradley Hand
Fort Bragg Paraglide

commentary

Remember when you might have heard, "Buddy can you spare a dime?" from someone? The days of handing out only pocket change are long since past and it seems as though panhandling has become big business.

Recently, I was fortunate enough to visit Washington, D.C., and observe some of the more gifted artists in the trade. Dimes are small time and these people have moved on to asking for dollars.

Every street corner was occupied by a cup holder with undernourished arms, bloodshot eyes and a sign begging for help.



I was horrified, disgusted and angry that I had to witness the sickening sight of our nation's homeless.

"Why can't they get jobs? Why aren't they out there working like I am? Why do I have to worry about them? They're probably whacked out on heroin anyway," were some of the questions and statements I found passing through my mind.

I have always taken pride in America as being host to an ocean of opportunities and the "American Dream." But seeing this display hurt my idealistic outlook.

There are many explanations for why people live on the streets. It isn't always the person's fault and I realize that. Mental illness, loss of a job and drugs are the three main reasons for people being without a home.

I have never found the need to try drugs, so I have never had a problem with them. The understanding I do have is they will mess up a life with a take-no-prisoners attitude.

Drugs are the first thing that pop into my mind when I see someone lying on the street with rags for clothes and no hope in their eyes.

This makes me irate. I see these people who threw their lives away and I say they had to have known what they were getting into.

I turned red with anger when I was asked for money because I figured they might as well smoke the dollar bill. That's what the money was going for anyway.

My attitude was to stomp away and stay mad at these poor souls because if they aren't going to help themselves, then why should I help them?

What was my problem? Why was I so disgusted? What was the source of all this anger? I haven't had a problem helping out a perfect stranger on the side of the road with a flat tire before. What was the problem helping out a perfect stranger now?

The problem was drugs.

My disgust was not with these people, it was the fact they were going to use my money to buy drugs.

This attitude was the same until about a week before I was to leave our nation's Capitol.

I thought for a while and turned down a few more panhandlers. Then I passed a hot dog stand and came up with an immediate solution to my problem.

I stood in front of the hot dog stand and waited for the next one to ask for money. It didn't take long and I told him that I wouldn't give him money, but I would help him out.

I bought him a hot dog and a soda and left. That's all I could do.

I don't feel any better about the homeless in America, and I don't feel any better about the drugs. But I do feel a little better about giving a guy a hot dog, instead of money for cocaine.

I don't buy every homeless person a hot dog, as no one gives every homeless person a dollar. But I do my little part. I figure I can stand to miss a few candy bars here and there while some people can't afford to miss another meal.

letter

Resident agrees with recent letter

I would like to say bravo to the person who wrote "Resident asks for pet control" that was published in the Feb. 21 issue of the Bayonet.

I have also been disgusted with dog owners whose sole purpose of owning a pet is so they can say they have one. I also step out of my door and smell them, see them and hear them in their crowded, inadequate cages.

I recommend that Veterinary Services personnel conduct unannounced walk-through inspections on post once a week. They would be appalled at the way the animals on this post are abused and neglected.

Unfortunately, nothing will change until pet owners become considerate of their animals and their neighbors.

Students Company B, 2nd Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment, remain in the prone position after being dropped off on the landing zone.

Students complete training

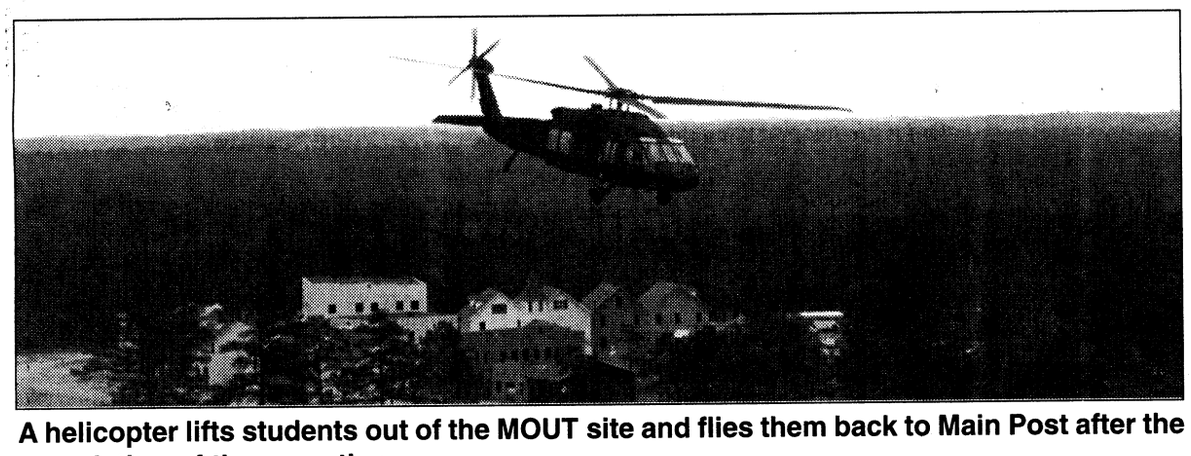
By Andrew Gamblin
Infantry Officer Basic Course

Students of Company B, 2nd Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment, Infantry Officer Basic Course, put their training and endurance to the test recently during a 96-hour culmination exercise.

During the exercise, IOBC second lieutenants conducted air assaults, a company attack, movement to contact, a company defense and a military operations in urban terrain attack.

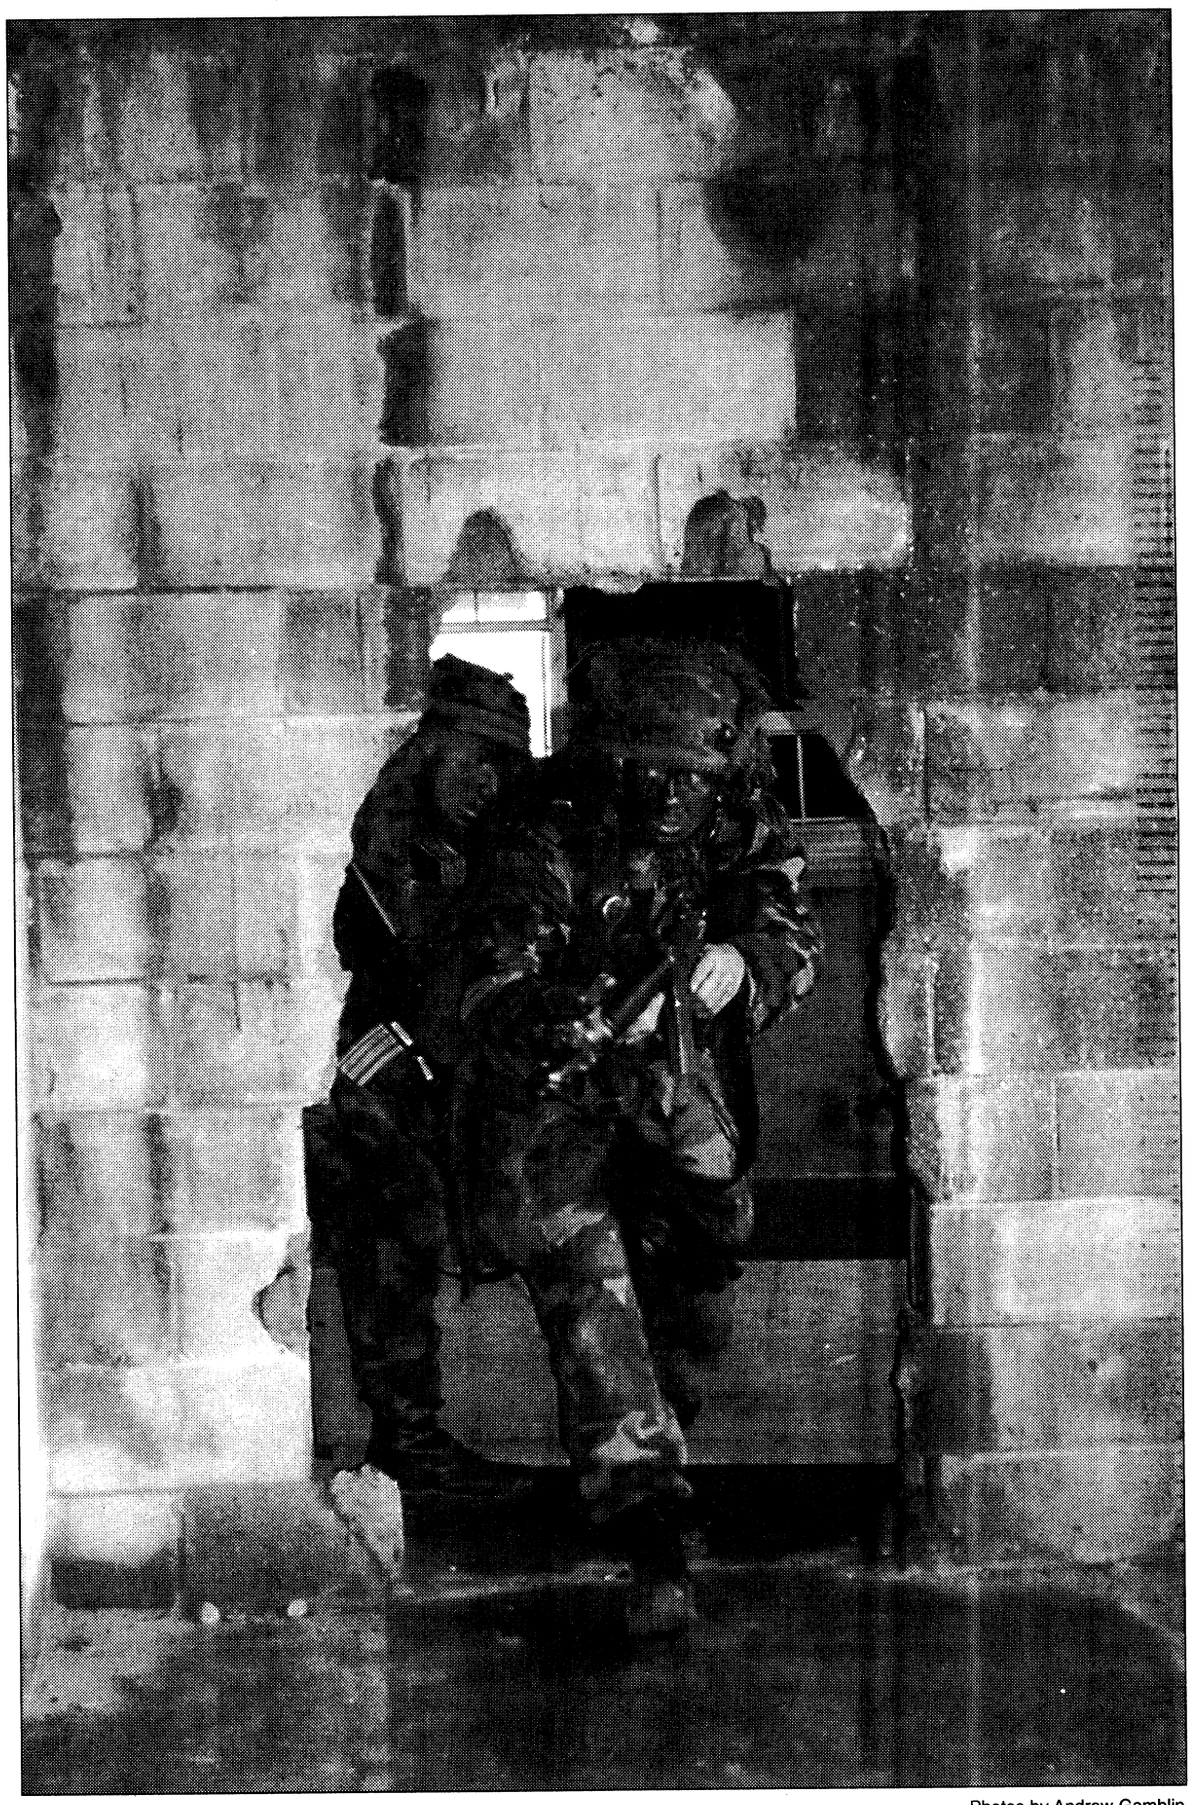
The operation began with an air assault operation and company attack.

"Forward observer and radio and telephone operators are primary targets" as his multiple integrated laser engagement system gear was going off on the objective, "2nd Lt. Tim Furin, acting as field officer during the attack, said.



The exercise continued with daylong movement to contact operations followed by an early morning air assault into McKenna MOUT site.

At McKenna elements of Co. B conducted a predawn assault and clearing of the town. From McKenna, the "Bushmasters" were airlifted back to main post and road marched back to Building 76.



This was the first time that IOBC and Infantry Officer Advanced Course students interacted during an operation.

IOAC students acting as company commanders issued orders and monitored the missions that IOBC students carried out. First Lt. Shawn Daniel said, "It was an excellent opportunity to work with second lieutenants. I would like to see this happen more."

Leaders receive EO training

By Robin A. Shawlinski
3rd Bde., 3rd Inf. Div. (Mech.)

Senior leaders from the 3rd Brigade, 3rd Infantry Division (Mechanized), received equal opportunity training recently at the Truscott Center on Kelley Hill.

The one-day interactive training, facilitated by EO advisors from Defense Equal Opportunity Management Institute from Cocoa Beach, Fla., was meant to provide leaders with a basis awareness of the Army's Equal Opportunity policy and preventive measures that can be taken by the command and individual Soldiers.

The training concentrated primarily on topics of socialization, communication, and sexual harassment prevention.

"This training is about tying in the EO issue to readiness," said Maj. Luis Calatayud, EO management team officer in charge. "That's what the training is all about. It's making that link.

"EO is really synonymous with leadership," he said. "The Army has spent a lot of time on equipment and maintenance but they are just now learning we also have to maintain people."

Calatayud said this interactive type of training is very beneficial for leaders. It allows leaders to share and learn from each other and not just receive a block of instruction on EO issues. The training also includes the use of role playing.

The role playing used during the sexual harassment prevention session allowed leaders to evaluate certain scenarios and learn how they would react in a given situation.

"This training is very unique," he said. "We facilitate, which allows freer discussion."

Throughout the day, the leaders got the opportunity to discuss their personal views and feelings on the subjects and learn about the effects the topics have on readiness. Some of the topics discussed were the effect socialization has on decision making, the impact of the communication process on an organization, and the manifestations of sexism and sexual harassment and their impact on the mission.

In the wake of current situations with sexual harassment, the highlight of the training was on sexual harassment prevention

"(As a result of recent events) many leaders are more reluctant to talk among themselves about it, but they are very concerned about doing it right," Calatayud said. "This is the hottest topic in the Army. The thing with sexual harassment awareness training is there is no cookie-cutter answers."

While Master Sgt. Columbus Austin, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 1st Battalion, 15th Infantry Regiment, said he couldn't relate with some of the sexual harassment training because he doesn't work with women, he said the discussions were interesting.

"(The training) is enlightening," he said. "And it's important that my soldiers and I know this."

1/38 activates company, changes command

1st Battalion, 38th Infantry Regiment

The 1st Battalion, 38th Infantry Regiment, Infantry Training Brigade, activated Company E and changed command of Company C recently in two back-to-back ceremonies.

Co. E was deactivated two years ago during the draw down, and now Capt. Robert B. Rodefer Jr. assumed command of the newly reactivated company from 1st Sgt. Royce Jarmon, who had been the acting commander while the company was being formed.

Rodefer served in Korea and at Fort Hood, Texas, as a rifle platoon leader, support platoon leader and company executive officer. His last assignment was with the Philadelphia Recruiting Command, where he commanded a recruiting company for two years.

Capt. Edward C. Howell Jr. took command of Co. C from 2nd Lt. Loran C. Montgomery, who had been acting commander for six weeks after the previous commander departed. Howell was a Special Forces sergeant first class before attending Officer Candidate School on Fort Benning.

His first duty assignment as an officer was with the 24th Infantry Division. He served as rifle platoon leader, antitank platoon leader, company executive officer and brigade liaison officer and also participated in Operation Desert Storm.

He comes to the Infantry Training Brigade from Fort Bragg, N.C. The 1st Bn., 38th Inf. Regt., has another back-to-back change of command ceremony today for companies B and D at 9 a.m. and 10 a.m. respectively.

JAC conducts second Employer Day

Job Assistance Center

The Job Assistance Center in Building 2634, Soldiers' Plaza, will conduct its second Employer Day of this year March 14 from 9 a.m. until noon.

"I have personally contacted each of the employers and they are enthusiastic about discussing job opportunities available for transitioning Soldiers and their families," said Cynthia Anderson, counselor assistant and Employer Day organizer.

The following companies plan to have representatives attend: Advance Auto; Auto Zone; Burgin Lumber; Georgia Department of Corrections; Georgia Dept. of Labor and Civilian Personnel Office; Huntsville, Ala., Police Department; Prudential Insurance; Publix Food Market; Riverside Military Academy; Thermal Control Coatings; U.S. Road and Rail; Wackenhut Security; and West Building Materials.

Although the scheduled time is from 9 a.m. to noon, some representatives have requested to continue into the afternoon. Specifically, they are: Huntsville, Ala., Police Department; Publix Food Market; and Wackenhut Security.

Huntsville Police will be accepting applications for the position of police officer. Recruiters will also be available to discuss qualifications required for entry into the law-enforcement career.

Publix Food Market will be recruiting for positions in their soon to open market on Macon Road. A wide range of positions need to be filled to meet the training and then opening dates.

Wackenhut Security will be recruiting for positions in the private security industry. This large provider of security services hires security officers and supervisors.

"When attending Employer Days, be prepared to make a good first impression," Anderson said. "At Fort Benning during duty hours, wear your newest, cleanest and best-fitting uniform, spit-shined shoes or boots and be well groomed. Appropriate civilian clothes for the occupation you are seeking can also make a good impression.

"Be positive and polite when meeting and talking to employer reps. Your purpose is to gather information and ideas about a civilian career path you might want to follow and become aware of the job openings the employers might have.

"If you have prepared a resume, you may want to leave a copy with the most promising employers. A resume is desired but not required to attend employer days and job fairs.

"The opportunity is made available for transitioning personnel to research possible careers, learn about companies, talk to company reps where jobs are found and become motivated to find that perfect job. The job search is much easier when you know your objective."

For more information, call the Job Assistance Center at 545-2308 or 545-2309.

Stowers to air tapes — In order for parents to be succeed today, they must learn to instill communication skills, cooperation techniques, discipline and responsibility in their child. "Active Parenting" is a video-based educational program which addresses these concerns.

This video series begins airing on Fort Benning Cable Channel 3 Monday and will run every hour during that week. The 30-minute workshop-type sessions feature true-to-life scenarios and include narration by parenting expert Dr. Michael Popkin.

The first in the series of six sessions will help parents develop and understand the different styles of parenting and how you can use choices to eliminate power struggles and promote cooperation.

Stowers Elementary School will conduct a follow-up session March 20 in a small group setting to answer any questions parents may have about the series. These will be open to the public.

For more information, call Stowers at 544-2312.

Spouse orientation set — The next Fort Benning spouse orientation takes place March 14 in Building 359 at 8:45 a.m. All newly assigned personnel, especially those with spouses are encouraged to attend. This orientation provides information about all of the post services and facilities that are available to Soldiers and their family members.

Childcare is provided, however to access this service family members are asked to make reservations by calling the army Community Service Program at 545-4043.

For more information about the Spouse Orientation Program, call Army Community Service at 545-4043.

Local radio station to play Youth Service teens — Teens from the Youth Services play the FOXY 105 Basketeers in a charity basketball game Saturday at 6 p.m. in the Youth Services gym.

Admission for the game is one canned or nonperishible item.

Proceeds from the game will be donated to the Army Community Services Food Locker.

For more information, call 545-3070.

Boy Scouts seek assistance — The Fort Benning District of Boy Scouts of America is seeking assistance. Unit Commissioners are needed to work with the 20 Scouting programs on post, specifically in Scout advancement, training and registration.

To volunteer, call Scott Wacter at 545-3216 or 327-2634 or Howard Willis at 545-5741.

STOWERS ELEMENTARY

Community honors school's namesake, WWI Medal of Honor recipient

By Lisa M. Hibbert
Bayonet staff writer

Outside of Stowers Elementary School, weapons fire rang out in the distance Feb. 28, but unlike students at some inner-city neighborhoods, these gunshots symbolized courage and candor, not fear.

This was an appropriate sound for the day's ceremony, honoring Black History Month and the school's namesake, Cpl. Freddie C. Stowers who was killed in combat by machine gun fire during World War I. Stowers is the only black WWI Medal of Honor recipient, which he received posthumously in 1991 from former President George Bush.

Upon entering the school's vestibule, a Soldier wearing a dress green uniform, complete with white gloves, stood guard over a Medal of Honor and citation, placed at the school under the direction of Maj. Gen. Carl F. Ernst, Commanding General.

In the cafeteria, where the program took place, more than 700 people gathered to hear the story of Stowers. The program opened with a musical prelude by the school's assistant principal, Debra Mabry and a welcome by Stowers Principal Glenn Hughes.

Lewis Posey, a fourth-grade student led the audience in the Pledge of Allegiance followed by Ramona Edwards, a Stowers parent, who sang "Lift Every Voice and Sing" the Negro national anthem.

Fourth-grade Teacher Carolyn Timmons had the mission of giving the purpose of the day to the audience.

"The purpose of this day is to focus on the contributions of esteemed African-Americans," Timmons said. "The brilliant beacons led us through troubled waters without yielding hopes and aspirations. We come to celebrate Stowers, the great American hero whose name lends an air of flair to this school."

Timmons challenged the students to live up to Stowers' reputation.

"Boys, girls and parents, we must be the best because Stowers, this school's namesake, was the best," Timmons said.

The Faith Middle School Honors' Chorus, accompanied by its music teacher, Faye Lewis-Strong, performed a song titled "Something Inside So Strong" a song about inner strength.

Col. Michael A. Bingham, Fort Benning School Board president, introduced the speaker of the day to the assembly.

Also giving comments on behalf of Ernst, Bingham talked about how honored he was to participate in such a program.

"Stowers taught us that we need to look out for others," Bingham said referring to the way Stowers died. "He regarded others as more important than himself."

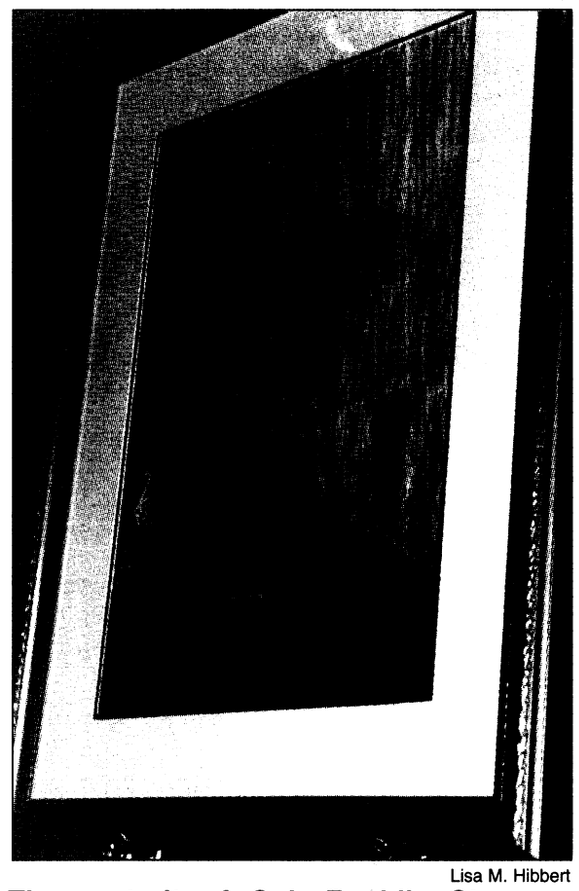
On Sept. 28, 1918, Stowers' company lead an attack on Hill 188, Champagne Marne Sector, France. When his company came within 100 meters of the trench lines, the enemy opened machine gun and motor fire. In the face of this, Stowers took charge.

Disregarding the fire, Stowers led his Soldiers to crawl toward and eventually capture an enemy machine gun nest that was causing heavy casualties to his company. While he pressed toward a second trench line, urging his men on, Stowers was gravely wounded by machine gun fire. Despite his fatal wounds, Stowers continued to urge his troops forward until he died.

Retired Col. Roy Plummer, former post chaplain, was the guest speaker for the day. He focused on forming future leaders.

"As I walked into this building today and I looked at the children, I thought to myself, 'This is the future of America,'" Plummer said. "Children still are so innocent and anything planted in them will grow. I challenge you to plant something notable."

Addressing racism, Plummer said that we can not demonstrate exclusion, but we need to practice inclusion.



Timmons' fourth-grade class presented a play entitled "Oh What a Hero!" The original skit was about a students project to research Stowers.

Strong took to the microphone again, this time to sing "You are the Wind Beneath My Wings." While she sang, the curtains behind her on the stage opened and a portrait of Stowers, illustrated by former Sgt. Gregory Raymond, father of Stowers students Xavier and Gregory Raymond and a Directorate of Public Works employee, was revealed.

As Strong sang the words, "did you ever know that you're my hero?" Raymond, as well as many of the people in attendance wept silently, struck by the significance of the song.

Staff Sgt. Dywaine Robinson presented Raymond with a token of appreciation on behalf of the parent teacher organization and Hughes thanked Raymond for this gift that now hangs in the lobby of the school.

Stephon Bartee-Smith, an eighth-grade student at Faith, sang "His Eye is on the Sparrow" accompanied by Strong followed by recitations from the first-, second-, third- and fourth-grade students.

Lisa M. Hibbert

The students performed "A Dance of Color" billed as a celebration of music and a reflection of african culture.

Vibrant hues of green, gold, blue and more moved elegantly across the stage as the ladies of Stowers came forward to model the african garb they wore, designed by G.C. Benton.

The program concluded with a food festival and an art showing of Raymond's other pieces.

ON THE EASEL

Post artist donates portrait for a cause

By Lisa M. Hibbert
Bayonet staff writer

The artist behind the portrait of Cpl. Freddie C. Stowers, Gregory Raymond of the Directorate of Public Works, admits that although the work comes through him, he is not the master of his work.

"God gave me this gift," Raymond said. "And he was really in this picture of Stowers. A lot of prayer went into me doing this.

When the parent teacher organization originally asked for an artist to do a portrait of Stowers, Raymond was not interested.

"The PTO invited me to a planning meeting and I heard the story of Stowers," Raymond said. "I was moved by it and so I volunteered to do the portrait for free."

The ironic part of the Stowers portrait is that there are no pictures of him. A composite sketch was made of him based on what his family members looked like and guesses on what he must have looked like, said Glenn Hughes, Stowers Elementary School principal.

"To me, Stowers (according to the composite) looks just like Sean Kemp of the Seattle SuperSonics basketball team," Raymond said.

He worked on this charcoal- and colored-pencil piece for over a month but said he had difficulty completing it because he couldn't get the eyes right.

"I did all that I could with it

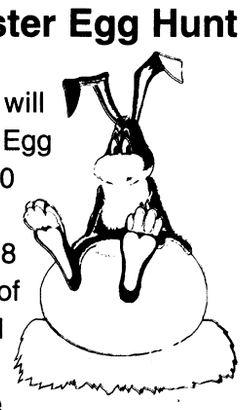
MONEY: Increasing private scholarships available to assist students

National Academic Funding Advisory

Every year, as millions of students pursue their dreams by applying to colleges, universities and graduate schools, their attention soon shifts to the reality and concerns of paying for their education.

College costs have tripled over the past 15 years, making it more and more difficult for families to pay for tuition, room and board, text books, lab fees and other expenses.

With recent cutbacks in federal grants, students are becoming frustrated as they discover they can't keep up with the increasing dollars they are asked to contribute each year. Financial experts see a disturbing trend as many families are funding college costs totally through loans. As a result, an increasing number of students are graduating from undergraduate programs with overwhelming debts of $20 to $30,000 or more.



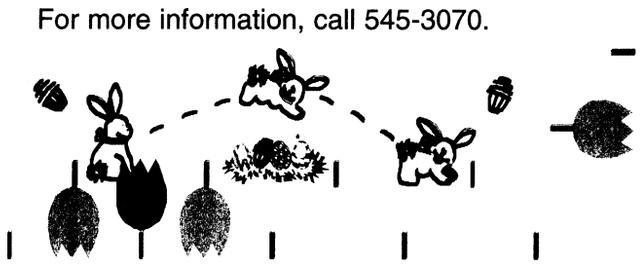
The good news is that private scholarship and grant money available to students has grown over the past several years. Currently, there are nearly 400,000 independent and private scholarship and grant sources available that do not have to be paid back. More than 80 percent of these scholarships do not depend on family need or exceptional grades, but are awarded based on factors such as the student's interests, hobbies, academic focus, age, heritage or parent's work or military service.

Unfortunately, these sources remain largely unknown to most students. As a result, according to members of the National Commission on Student Financial Aid, hundreds of millions of dollars of scholarship money goes uncollected each year simply because students are not aware of it and do not apply for it.

Now, through the resources of the National Academic Funding Advisory, an updated publication for 1997 is available. This publication provides information to help all students seeking financial assistance.

For information on how to receive academic funding and scholarships, send a number 10, self-addressed, double-stamped business envelope plus $2 to cover handling fees to NAFA, 815 Middle Street, Dept. B2, Portsmouth, N.H., 03801.

Post plans Easter Egg Hunt



Youth Services will conduct the post Easter Egg Hunt March 22 from 10 a.m. to noon.

Children ages 18 months to 10 years old, of active duty and retired military personnel and Department of Defense civilian employees are encouraged to participate in planned activities. Clowns, games and more will provide entertainment in addition to the hunt.

Free soft drinks and cotton candy will also be available. The hunt will be at Riverside, home of Commanding General Maj. Gen. Carl F. Ernst and his wife, Linda.

For more information, call 545-3070.

ask the judge

By Baxter White
Office of the Staff Judge Advocate

Q. I went to a automobile dealership downtown and purchased a car Saturday. Monday, I realized that I had paid too much for the car.

I took the car back to the dealer and told him I did not want the car. He told me a deal was a deal and I could not return the car.

He said if I insisted on returning the car, it would be considered an involuntary repossession.

I have been told about a three-day cooling off period for cancellation of contracts; doesn't it apply to my case? What is a voluntary repossession?

A. The three-day cooling off period for terminating or canceling contracts is a federal rule that applies to certain types of contracts.

The rule grants a buyer the right to cancel consumer purchase contracts for up to three business days following a door-to-door sale. This includes buying items from a seller at a place other than the permanent place of business of the seller.

The cancellation must be in writing and placed in the mail before midnight on the third day after the sale. It is advisable to send the cancellation by certified mail as proof that you sent the cancellation within the requisite time.

The seller is required to provide the buyer with a cancellation form. However, if the form is not provided, you may send in your own written cancellation of the contract

In your case, you went to the dealership to purchase the car. The dealership is the permanent place of business of the seller; therefore, the three-day rule does not apply.

Even if you had gone to a tent sale to purchase the car, the three-day rule would not apply, since tent sales are explicitly excluded from the three-day door-to-door sales rule. As such, the car salesperson was correct in stating that you had entered into a binding agreement.

A voluntary repossession takes place when a purchaser or debtor voluntarily surrenders his or her automobile or gives the financier oral permission to pick up the automobile from his or her property.

The financier (the bank that granted you the loan to purchase the car) will then resell the car and credit the amount received from the sale to the loan.

Returning the car does not cancel your loan agreement. You will still be liable for the loan until the entire amount is paid back.

Often, there will be a shortage in the amount received from the resale of the automobile. Any amount not recovered in a resale will be recovered from you.

Therefore, if you obtained a loan for $15,000 to purchase a car and the car sells for only $10,000 on resale, you will have to pay the financier the difference of $5,000. If you fail to pay this amount, the financier can file a suit against you and also place the default on your credit report.

Even if you do pay, the voluntary repossession still goes on your credit report and will have a negative impact on your credit worthiness.

The bottom line is that you should give such deals serious thought before you enter into them. If you feel pressured to buy, don't.

If you have questions about this issue, you should call the Legal Assistance Division for an appointment with an attorney. The telephone numbers are 545-3281 or 545-3282.

Directorate of Public Works

The Directorate of Public Works will be upgrading the 2800 block electrical distribution system beginning Tuesday.

These upgrades will require an extensive amount of work involving several major power outages. These outages will effect not only power but hot water, steam, heat and all other equipment that requires electricity. Listed below are the outages presently anticipated to accomplish upgrades:

•Monday — Buildings 2816, 2819, 2809, 2810, 2880, 2882, 2883 and 2889.

The first outage will be to install transformers at buildings 2816 and 2819. In order to install these new transformers, the buildings stated above will be without power for eight hours (from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m.) Monday.

After power is restored at 4 pm. to all buildings mentioned above, only buildings 2816 and 2819 will experience temporary outages from Wednesday to Thursday to switch over from the old breaker panel boxes to the new panels.

•March 17 — Buildings 2809, 2810, 2816, 2819, 2880, 2882, 2883 and 2889.

The second outage will be to install transformers in buildings 2809 and 2810. In order to install these new transformers, the buildings stated above will be without power for eight hours (from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m.) March 17.

After power is restored at 4 p.m. to all buildings mentioned above, only buildings 2809 and 2810 will experience temporary outages from March 18 to 21 to switch over from the old breaker panel boxes to the new panels.

DPW wages a war to save installation money

Fort Benning is actively pursuing an initiative to remove inefficient buildings on the installation.

This initiative is a key program in achieving affordability in base operations. This initiative requires the installations to accomplish their missions while maintaining a high standard by refocusing the cost avoidance resulting from the program on the remaining infrastructure.

The key to supporting the initiative was the installation commander's personal involvement in fundamentally changing paradigms concerning existing facilities and no longer looking at excess facilities as an asset for future expandability.

Instead, the commander viewed them as a significant drain on current resources. Further, eliminating unaffordable facilities will require a vigorous apace-utilization program by consolidating into fewer buildings concurrent with an aggressive demolition program.

The Commanding General Maj. Gen. Carl F. Ernst directed the development of a demolition support plan. In August, a thorough review was conducted of all existing facilities and space utilization was analyzed. Upon completion of the review, a draft program was presented to the Commanding General Oct. 22 and approved.

Project description

The U.S. Army Infantry Center will demolish, as funds become available, approximately 350 facilities at an estimated cost of $12.5 million.

This eliminates a total of 1.6 million square feet of under-utilized or high-maintenance buildings. When completed, this project will free up $4 million of scarce operations and maintenance dollars per year for use in other areas. These structures are primarily temporary ones constructed in support of the mobilization for World War II.

The demolition will be accomplished by contract and will include demolition, removal of hazardous and non-hazardous materials from the installation and relocation of operations to other facilities. Relocations will involve alterations of some structures.

Paper bags must be used — All yard waste must be in paper biodegradable bags for pick up by the Curbside Recycling contractor beginning March 31.

You can pick up a supply of 10 bags per visit at the DPW, Self-Help (U-DO-IT) Center, Building 385. This change in the handling of yard waste will greatly improve the efficiency of the Recycling Program.

For more information, call the Self-Help Center at 545-3963..

If you have questions or topics that you would like to be addressed in the DPW "Information Corner," contact Glenn Todd, customer relations specialist, DPW, at 545-2117, or write to the Directorate of Public Works, Building 6, Room 408, ATTN: ATZB-PWM (Glenn Todd), Fort Benning, Ga., 31905.

Hospital nutritionist offers tips to get children to eat meals

By Monica M. Maroyka
Martin Army Community Hospital

mealtime can be very frustrating when there is a child who refuses to eat. There are many factors concerning food acceptance for children. It is important to understand these factors and incorporate them into your children's meals.

Meal planning may be the key factor in food acceptance for children. Careful menu planning ensures that a wide variety of foods, from all the major food groups, be introduced into the child's diet. Plans for the menu should include differences in texture, color, flavor and familiarity. Children will learn to eat most new foods if the introduction is gradual and if minimum pressure is put on them to try something new. After the first few refusals, children usually will sample the new food, especially if it is served with familiar foods. If refusals continue, hold off and reintroduce the food at a later date.

Children are establishing food habits during their formative years. These food habits are influenced in many ways by the 'parents' food habits. Whether they are conscience of it or not, parents influence their children's food patterns by their own attitudes toward food. For example, if a child sees mom not eating vegetables, most likely, the child will follow that example and won't eat them either. The development of good nutrition for children begins with good nutrition habits of parents.

As a result of the sharp increase in numbers of mothers working outside the home, teachers and day care providers may have as much of an influence on youngsters' eating patterns as the parents. This is why when choosing a day care center it is important to find out how meals and snack times are conducted. Look for centers that post the daily menu for parents to see, is the menu well balanced? Ask if the day care providers eat with the children, do they record the intake of the children for parents to see?

The typical child will eat quite a large amount of food on some days, and on others, food intake will be surprisingly small. Growth is part of the reason for this. Children do not grow at an even pace, but in spurts. When they are in a growth spurt, their appetites are greater. At other times, childrens' growth slows down and their appetite decreases.

When preparing for mealtime, a five-minute warning prior usually gives children a chance to calm down, wash their hands and get ready to eat. A child who is anxious, excited or tired may have trouble settling down to eat. Let the child partake in mealtime preparations.

By doing this he or she may be more apt to eating the foods served to him or her.

The following is a list of five ways for parents and caretakers to make mealtime healthier: buy healthy foods, serve meals and snacks at regular times, make mealtime pleasant, teach good eating habits at the table and set the example.

Happy encounters with food at any age helps set the stage for sensible eating habits. Handling food and eating situations positively encourages healthy food choices.

Cancer institute clarifies confusing messages

American Institute for Cancer Research

Can hot dogs cause leukemia? Does tea protect against cancer? Which is healthier for your heart: margarine or butter?

Many of us are frustrated by confusing nutritional messages. Americans have been bombarded with contradictory information about nutrition and health. People who switched from butter to margarine were bewildered by reports that the "trans" fat in margarine may be more dangerous than the saturated fat in butter. While nutritionists have advised us to eat carbohydrates, especially from the grains food group, the media has reported that pasta and other carbohydrates can be fattening.

Help is just a phone call away. You can receive free, personalized answers to your questions about nutrition and health from registered dietitians by calling the toll-free American Institute for Cancer Research Nutrition Hotline at 1-800-843-8114. The Hotline operates weekdays from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. eastern standard time, and is offered as a free public service by AICR.

In addition to nutrition advice, you can also request a list of free AICR publications and recipe booklets that will help you eat for lower cancer risk. Researchers estimate that between 40 and 60 percent of all cancers are linked to our diets.

The American Institute for Cancer Research is the only major cancer charity focusing exclusively on the link between diet, nutrition and cancer. The institute provides a wide range of consumer education programs that have helped millions of Americans learn to make changes for lower cancer risk. AICR also supports innovative research in cancer prevention and treatment at universities, hospitals and research centers across the United States.

The institute has provided more than $37 million in funding for research in diet, nutrition and cancer. AICR's Internet web site address is http://www.aicr.org.

ARTIST: DPW worker paints Stowers

and I still couldn't get it right so I stopped and just prayed," Raymond said. "A couple of nights later I woke up in the middle of the night and I finished it, or rather my hands did it but I was not in control.

When I stopped and looked at it I thought 'That's it!' and it was finished," Raymond said. "I kept the portrait in one of the rooms in my house with the door closed but, every time I went by the room I had to open the door and look at the picture. It was like a magnet it kept calling me. Now Stowers is apart of my life."

Not his only work, Raymond is a diverse artist who carves wood, paints abstracts in oils as wells, creates photos as well as draws pencil portraits.

With only one semester of a basic art class and one semester of a basic photography class, this artist aspires to go back to school.

"Right now my daughter is studying art at the Memphis School of Art in Tennessee," Raymond said. "Once she finishes, then I'll go back to school. One day we'll open up a studio together."

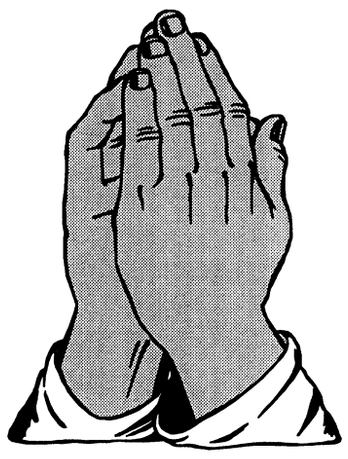
Soldiers need prayer for strength in battle

By Vince Theodore
School of Americas

The battalion commander had just entered his office; unbeknownst to him, the brigade commander was close on his heels. As the brigade commander approached the battalion commander's adjutant, he said he was here to see the battalion commander.

"I'm sorry, the battalion commander is busy," the adjutant said.

"What? " the brigade commander asked, "I just saw him enter his office not five seconds ago."



"I'm sorry, sir, " the adjutant said, "he is busy."

Upon hearing this, the brigade commander angrily opened the battalion commander's door and walked in. A few seconds later, he rushed back out and said, "I didn't know he was that kind of man. Tell him to call me when he is done. "

He had seen the battalion commander kneeling in prayer.

Like Washington at Valley Forge and Lincoln before Gettysburg, many of our leaders are men and women of prayer. Prayer can be a significant factor in one's life. As we read Washington's prayer for the nation, let's listen to what it has to say.

"Almighty God, we make our earnest prayer that thou wilt keep the United States in thy holy protection, that thou wilt incline the hearts of the citizens to cultivate a spirit of subordination and obedience to the government, and entertain a brotherly affection and love for one another and their fellow citizens of the Untied States at large." (Written at Newbury, June 8, 1783, and sent to the governor of each state.)

Prayer is a powerful force in our lives and no one knows better about prayer than the combat Soldier.

Let's listen to another prayer written by a Soldier before the invasion of Normandy during World War II .

"Look, God, I have never spoken to you, but now, I want to say, 'How do you do .' You see, God, they told me you didn't exist and like a fool, I believed all of this.

"Last night from a shell hole, I saw your sky. I figured right then they had told me a lie.

"Had I taken time to see the things you made, I'd known they weren't calling a spade a spade. I wonder, God, if you'd shake my hand. Somehow I feel that you will understand.

"Funny, I had to come to this hellish place before I had the time to see your face. Well, I guess there isn't much more to say but I am sure glad, God, I met you today.

"But I'm not afraid since I know you're near. I guess the 'Zero Hour' will soon be here.

"Well, God, I'll have to go. I like you lots — this I want you to know.

"Look, now this will be a horrible fight. Who knows — I may come to your house tonight.

"Though I wasn't friendly with you before, I wonder, God, if you'd wait at your door.

"Look — I'm crying! Me — shedding tears! I wish I'd known you these many years. Well, I will have to go now, God, goodbye. Strange — since I met you, I'm not afraid to die." (Found on the body of a fallen American Soldier at Normandy.)

What kind of men and women are we? Do we pray? Is it important to take counsel from the Lord?

As we celebrate the World Day of Prayer, let us remember the significance that prayer has played in our lives as Soldiers. Prayer is a powerful tool in which we can commune with the divine and where we can take counsel with the Lord in all our doings.

Learn to heed the requests of the Lord

By Tom Wheatley
Ranger Training Brigade

The picture of the unemployed and homeless in every American city is heartbreaking. Even in the military, both Soldiers and civilians face the prospect of losing their jobs as we continue to downsize.

reflections

This idea of losing a job or being unemployed can be the greatest fear that some face. It can be a condition that affects a person's confidence and self-esteem.

Almost as scary, going back to work, either in the public or private sector, can make even the most talented person a little nervous.

Fortunately, there is good news for anyone who faces unemployment or has to go into a new line of work.

As a child of God, no one is ever truly unemployed. We have all been created in the image of God to honor and glorify him daily.

This activity of striving to be Christ-like gives each of us plenty of employment. No matter what position or job we might fill, the only job that each of us will ever have, is to work daily to let our thoughts and our lives reflect the beauty, the holiness, the power of God in our daily experiences.

"But now, this is what the Lord says — He who created you, O Jacob, he who formed you, O Israel: Fear not, for I have redeemed you; I have summoned you by name; you are mine. Ye are my witnesses, declares the Lord, that I am God," proclaims Isaiah 4 3:1,1-2.

God created us to bear witness to him daily wherever we are and whatever we do. Since we spend a large part of each day at work, this is a good place to be his witnesses.

If we happen to find ourselves out of a job, we need to profess right there all of the qualities that God has given us to bless ourselves and others. Before we know it, he will direct us to the place of opportunity he already has in store for us.

Now this place may not always make sense to us or to others, but if God is calling us to go somewhere, we must hasten to follow. Jesus sets the example for this when he was being persecuted after healing a man on the Sabbath.

He answered his accusers by saying, "My father has worked until now, and I, too, must be at work. I tell you the truth, the son can do nothing by himself; he can do only what he sees his father doing, because whatever the father does, the son also does. (John 5:17, 19)"

Edwin Leever is one man who decided to pray about his place of employment after graduating from college. After he prayed, it came to him to apply for a job at a nearby aircraft plant, but he wasn't the least bit interested in airplanes or aircraft production.

Since he already mapped out his future, he chose another job that appeared more exciting. After a short time, he realized this job wasn't for him, so again prayed about a job. The thought came again to apply at the aircraft plant.

Was he ready to be obedient to God's leading yet? No way! He took a job that looked even more interesting and promising than the last. Everything was great, he even received a great promotion.

Then, suddenly the company shut down all local operations, and to remain, he would have to move out of state. So he prayed again for guidance.

Guess what he felt God telling him this time? That's right — join the aircraft plant. This time, he was obedient, even though the plant wasn't advertising any openings.

He was finally willing to be obedient to God's will for his place of work, and he realized that every day, his real job was going to be expressing the qualities that God had given him.

Two years later, this same company became the prime contractor for the capsule for the United States' first manned space program. Edwin Leever was asked to be the planning and scheduling engineer on that program. He got to see the first phase of that program all the way through from the time it was nothing more than a few lines on a piece of paper to when a live astronaut was being launched in one of the space capsules.

What a blessing he might have missed had he not been obedient to the place of employment that God already had waiting for him. He said his first step in being obedient was to recognize the gifts and talents that God had given him, and that God wanted him to stay busy daily in sharing these talents with others.

There are always plenty of employment opportunities with God. He gives each of us all we need daily to complete the tasks at hand, and he guides us to those tasks in the first place.

So with this daily opportunity of glorifying and honoring God wherever we are, can any of us really be out of a job? We have the eternal job of expressing God and being Christ-like in our daily walk.

Name: Catherine "Cackie" W. Howe

Hometown: San Antonio, Texas

Volunteer job title: Vice-president, Programs, Protestant Women of the Chapel

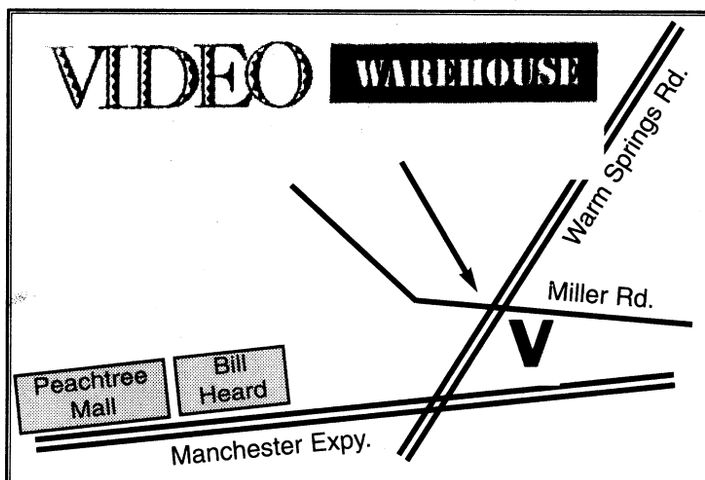
Volunteer organizations?
PWOC, Red Cross, Tot Town parent

Why do you volunteer?
I volunteer for a number of reasons, first of which is that I enjoy helping others and enjoy working to get a task accomplished. I care about the community of Fort Benning and want to be contributing member. I have the time right now and prefer to help out where needed rather than to stay at home.

What do you like most about volunteering?
I like helping other people, and I get satisfaction when my volunteering in an organization helps its mission get accomplished. I like knowing that I was helpful.

What are your special interests and hobbies? Having a hand in getting the job done makes me feel good, as well as does my daughter, running, cooking and reading.

What others have to say : "Cackie spends many hours planning the monthly special programs for PWOC. She has developed the themes, contacts and coordinates with each guest speaker, plans, decorates and sets menus.



"She is dedicated, creative, reliable and always willing to help and encourage others.

"Cackie directed the post Vacation Bible School last year and will do so again this June."

Rower transitions to cycling, Army

By John W. Peeler
Special to the Bayonet©

Seattle to Pennsylvania may not seem a long distance if traveling by plane, train or automobile, but for 28-year-old Carol Melnick, her 26-day cycling trip across the country was just another avenue of aerobic exercise in training for her primary sport — rowing.

Melnick, a three-time Gold Medalist in the American Rowing Championships and a Gold Medalist in the Canadian Henley, said she started cycling because she needed some extra aerobic exercise to supplement her rowing training.

Melnick, who has never competed in a cycling competition, said she enjoys both rowing and cycling, and she has aspirations of getting into the World Class Athlete Program once she completes her military training.

"I would like to get into the World Class Athlete Program now, but I have to wait until all my training is complete," Melnick said.

Melnick said she wanted to get into the World Class Athlete program coming in to the Army, but was not sure what was involved in getting into the program or what was offered for women.

"I would really like to compete in rowing, but rowing is not a part of the program," Melnick said.

Melnick said she was excited about the possibilities of becoming a World Class Athlete in the cycling program.

Melnick, a native of Oakland, Calif., said prior to coming into the Army, her training regimen included riding 10 to 40 miles per day in the hills of Oakland.

Melnick said she decided to join the Army to gain more focus in her life.

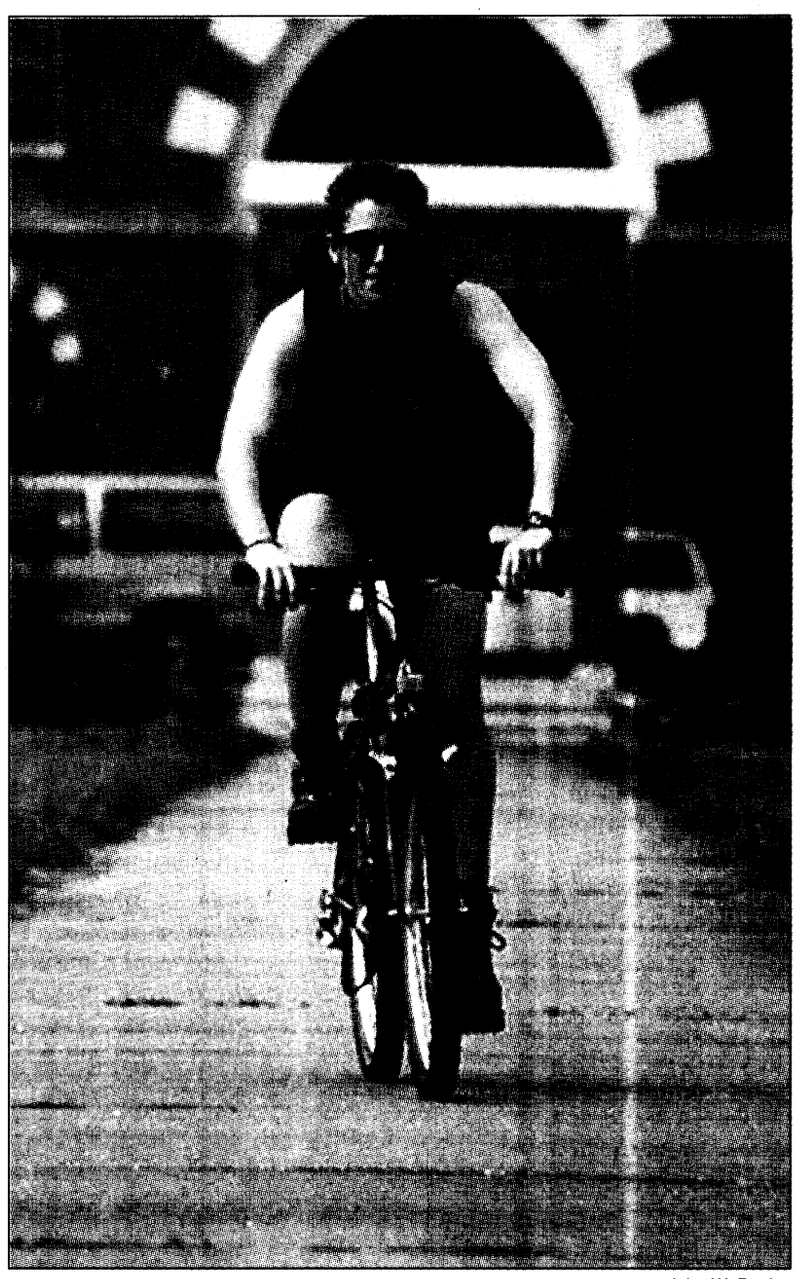
"I have a lot of different talents and abilities," Melnick said.

"I draw. I have a bachelors degree in communications. I was a summer research fellow at Harvard and was published twice in a scientific journal. I felt I needed something that would add more focus and direction in my life."

Among her other talents, Melnick was recently certified as a life guard and puts her training to practical use at the Briant Wells Fieldhouse as a full-time lifeguard.

Melnick said she hasn't been in the Army long enough to see if being a Soldier would help her as she expected, but feels that getting into the World Class Athlete Program would help her tremendously.

"The Army places a lot of pride in its athletes and I think I would flourish with that kind of pressure and expectation," Melnick said.



When asked about her biggest accomplishment, Melnick said she rates her accomplishments in more of a personal nature than athletic.

"Looking at how I'm affected on the inside instead of looking outward is one of my biggest ongoing accomplishments," Melnick said. "Even the athletic accomplishments turn into something very personal for me."

Melnick said her next step is to complete training in her military occupational specialty, complete the transition from civilian to military life, possibly apply for Officer Candidate School and to feel settled within the Army.

Melnick encourages everyone to try different things, not to worry about the risks and to try the things they have dreamed about but have put on the back burner for one reason or another.

With her many talents, Melnick said variety really is the spice of life.

Shotgun shooters win at national preliminary tryouts

By David L. McCormack
USAMU Public Affairs Office

U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit shotgun shooters began this year with a bang by winning five out of five national preliminary tryout matches against 45 of America's best competitive shooters during the Mapleleaf Competition conducted in San Diego, Calif., and the Golden Bear Competition in Prado, Calif., Jan. 24 to Feb. 2.

USAMU shotgun shooter Bret E. Erickson, who was a member of the 1992 and 1996 U.S. Olympic Shooting teams, captured first place in the Mapleleaf Double Trap Competition with a score of 164 out of a possible 200 points and placed second in the Mapleleaf Single Trap event with a score of 201 out of a 225 points.

"It's always nice to win," Erickson said, "especially this early in the year. It kind of sets the tone for winning the big matches later in the year."

Erickson, who has been shooting competitively for more than 25 years, attributed his success to his experience and the training he received through the USAMU.

Joetta R. Novinski, also from the USAMU, earned the prestigious title of High Lady in the women's category by taking first place in both events. Novinski, who was the 1996 National Women's Trap and Double Trap Champion, won the Mapleleaf Double and Single Trap competitions with a score of 144 and 91 points respectively.

"These matches are significant," Novinski said, "because it's the first competition of the year and it really helps you to get into the training mode and get your mind back on the game."

Having just completed the Army's four-week Primary Leadership Development Course in conjunction with the Christmas holidays, Novinski said preparing for the competition was especially tough.

"I just tried to focus on the basics," she said, speaking of her preparatory training for the matches. "It was hard because I haven't shot competitively in a match for so long."

After one day of travel, the duo continued their winning streak by taking first place in all three Golden Bear matches.

Erickson's first-place winning scores included 141 out of 200 in the Golden Coin Match, 172 out of 200 in the Golden Bear Doubles Match and 206 out of 225 in the Golden Bear Singles Match.

Novinski, who shot the same course of fire as the male competitors, dominated the women's category in the same events as High Lady with a score of 91, 156 and 154 points respectively.

U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit shotgun shooter Bret E. Erickson shows the winning form that won him first place in the Mapleleaf Single Trap competition in Prado, Calif.

According to Erickson and Novinski, these preliminary tryouts, or PTOs, are the first "loop" competitive shotgun shooters must jump through each year on the road to the nationals. Shooters with the top qualifying scores will be invited to compete in the annual national matches later this year.

"Since it is the first meaningful competition of the year and in a warm weather climate," Erickson said, "you virtually get to compete against everybody in the country who is anybody, competitively speaking. It's a good gauge on what level competitors are at in the country."

Grapplers earn spots at Armed Forces Championships

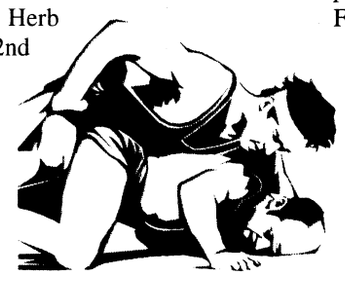
By John W. Peeler
Special to The Bayonet©

The All-Army Wrestling Program conducted its annual wrestle-off Friday and Saturday at the Santiago Fitness Center on Sand Hill.

The winners will compete in the Armed Forces Championships in Pensacola, Fla., March 20 through 23.

The Armed Forces Championship is the first in a series of tournaments where Army wrestlers can qualify for the U.S. National Championships April 24 to 26 in Orlando, Fla.

The Army trials began Jan. 14 with more than 70 wrestlers reporting to camp, 12 of which were in the World Class Athlete Program.



Listed below are the final selections by weight class for freestyle and Greco-Roman competition.

Air Force Marathon slated for Wright-Patterson AFB

By Kimberly E. Devereux
Aeronautical Systems Center

WRIGHT-PATTERSON AIR FORCE BASE, Ohio — The first U.S. Air Force marathon, in celebration of the Air Force's 50th anniversary, will be run at Wright-Patterson Air Force Base, Ohio, Sept. 20.

All levels of marathoners, including those in wheelchairs, are invited to participate.

"This September, everyone can challenge airmen, Soldiers, sailors, Marines, Department of Defense civilians and runners from across America, as well as some famous world-class marathoners, right here on Air Force home turf," Lt. Gen. Kenneth E. Eickmann, Wright-Patterson Air Force Base installation commander and marathon director said. "Where better to begin this new tradition than the birthplace, home and future of aviation."

The course is 26.2 miles; it will start at Air Force Materiel Command Headquarters and finish at the Air Force Museum on Wright Field. U.S. Track and Field officials are certifying the route.

The course will pass Huffman Prairie Flying Field, where Orville and Wilbur Wright honed their flying skills beginning in 1904, and the base flight line, once the site of Wilbur Wright Field, established in 1917. Runners also will pass by static aircraft displays near base operations.

The marathon registration form will be available in various runners' magazines and other publications. It is available on the Air Force Marathon Web site (http://www.afmarathon.wpafb.af.mil). A toll-free number soon will be available for questions not answered by the web site.

Registration is $30 prior to Sept. 1 and $35 thereafter. The fee includes a T-shirt and patch for all registered participants.

Participants who finish the race will receive a commemorative medallion.

Completed forms, with payment and runner's signature, should be mailed to USAF Marathon, Building 70, 5215 Thurlow, Suite 2, Wright-Patterson AFB, Ohio, 45433-5542.

The marathon is funded entirely through corporate sponsorship, donations and registration fees. Kathy Stacy, commercial sponsorship coordinator, can be reached at (937) 257-8220 for more information.

Track and Field season begins

By John W. Peeler
Special to the Bayonet©

The track and field season officially begins March 19 and 20 at Doughboy stadium with the first in a series of three meets.

Events include the 100-, 200-, 400-, 800-,1500, and 3000-meter runs, 100-meter relay, high jump, shot put and discus.

Registration for the meet begins at 10 a.m. with the first event starting at 11 a.m. Competition is open to active and retired military, DoD civilian employees and family members.

The next meet is scheduled for April 16 and 17 with the third and final meet being conducted Jun. 4 during Military Appreciation WeeK.

Team scores from each of the three meets will be combined at the end of the series to determine the post track and field champions and points awarded for Military Appreciation Week.

Other events scheduled for Military Appreciation Week are the Kick-off relay, beach volleyball, billiards, chess, table tennis, spades, three on three basketball, bowling, triathlon, tennis, softball, wrestling, summer biathlon, soccer, combat cross country, AUSA golf tournament, swimming, boxing, "Fit to Win", fishing tournament, "Burn the General Run", and bench press which is a new event this year.

USAMU Shooters set records at 2700 course

By Anna O'leska
USAMU Public Affairs Office

U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit Service Pistol Team shooters set seven new national records recently during the 2700 Aggregate Standard Pistol Short Course Match at Phillips Range.

The 2700 Aggregate Short Course is an outdoor event consisting of individual and team competitions and shot at 25 yards — slow fire, timed fire, rapid fire and the national match course. A maximum total of 900 points is shot three times in the .22-caliber event, the .45-caliber event and the center-fire event.

Roger Jacobson set five new individual national records during the competition, breaking all previous existing records.

He scored 889 points with 48 center shots out of a possible 900 in the center-fire event; 196 shots and nine center shots out of a possible 200 in the .22-caliber slow-fire event; 297 with 19 center shots out of a possible 300 in the center-fire event in the national match course; 195 shots with six center shots out of a possible 200 in the .45-caliber slow-fire event; and he shot 2,659 points overall with 139 center shots out of a possible 2,700 points in the 2700 Grand Aggregate event.

"I was happy to learn I broke these records," Jacobson said. "Now I'm up with the best of the best in shooting. They used to be my idols and now they're my peers."

USAMU shooter Kimberly J. Kolb set a new women's national record in the women's .45-caliber center-fire match when she shot a 285 with eight center shots out of a possible 300 and 30 center shots, breaking the previous record by one point. Kolb said that it was the first time she shot against the 1989 Women's National Champion in Outdoor Pistol Shooting Competition.

"I'm thrilled," said Kolb. "I got to compete directly with a national champion and it's my first national record in conventional outdoor pistol (shooting)."

USAMU's Blue, Red and Black teams also shot team competitions in all three events for a total of 1200 points. The Blue Team won first place in the .22-caliber match with a record-breaking score of 1,182 points and 56 center shots, and in the .45-caliber match with a score of 1,166 points and 53 center shots.

The Black Team won first place in the center-fire match with a score of 1,167 points and 48 center shots.

The USAMU teams also took second and third in all three events.

Our Technology Will Keep Us Ahead.

Use your technical expertise to help us stay there. At UPS, the world's largest package delivery company, our advanced technologies and highly skilled professionals ensure our place in the future. We are currently seeking team players for the following career opportunities.

Software Engineer
As part of a multi-disciplinary team you will develop "real-world" solutions for machine automation controls and data acquisition systems in order to meet the needs of UPS operations. Qualifications include a minimum of 3 years experience in software development and systems integration using Windows 95 and NT, C, C++, Visual C++, VB 4.0. and Microsoft OCX. Knowledge of networking and UNIX is a plus.

Senior Engineer
Is desired with image/signal processing and algorithm development experience. The candidate must be familiar with PC/workstation based development tools and have prior involvement with the development of real time algorithms for extracting data from high-density signals. In addition, an engineer filling this position would be expected to implement selected algorithms in efficient C code in a high speed real time environment. Prior experience with symbology reading, machine vision or OCR would be beneficial.

498th readies for deployment, 832nd Guard unit to help out

By Brian R. Voller
Bayonet staff writer

The 832nd Medical Company Air Ambulance began arriving on Fort Benning, Feb. 5, to replace the 498th Medical Company, Air Ambulance, 36th Engineer Group (Combat), which is currently mobilizing a group of 103 Soldiers for deployment to Bosnia.

Maj. Tracy O. Wyatt, commander of the 498th said the Soldiers of his unit are going to Bosnia for a possible 179 day mission that could be bumped up to 364 days. He said the unit will be serving in its current capacity as an air ambulance company in Bosnia performing the same mission it does on Fort Benning.

The 832nd comes to Fort Benning and Fort Stewart, Ga. from West Bend, Wis., bringing 101 Soldiers and 13 to 15 aircraft. Maj. Gregory G. Frings, commander of the 832nd, said he is excited about the deployment because he said it is rare for a National Guard unit to be deployed.

"It's a unique deployment because it is a continental United States deployment instead of a non-CONUS deployment," Frings said. "In some cases that might remove the luster of a deployment because some might say it's not as exciting to be deployed stateside, but that's not the case here.

"This is a great opportunity for us to do our mission, and it is a chance for us to make a statement because there were 19 other guard units that could have been selected for this mission and because we were the highest rated we were chosen to be deployed."

The 832nd's deployment is for 270 days, which Frings said makes sense because of the length of the 498th's deployment.

"This way we're here when they (the 498th) ships their aircraft," Frings said. "And again, we're here when they come back for their recovery period, and when their aircraft is shipped back. With us being here that allows them to come back to the United States and get comfortable until they are ready to reassume the mission."

Frings said unlike the 498th's deployment that can be extended, the 832nd's deployment is only for 270 days and cannot be extended beyond that time.

Post readies Soldiers for deployment

By Jack Pagano
326th Replacement Detachment

Bosnia pre-deployment training is in its second year. Since 1995 Fort Benning continues to play a pivotal role in preparing soldiers for peacekeeping in the former Yugoslavia. The road to Bosnia starts at Fort Benning.

Sgt. Maurice Davis is a truck driver for the 104th Transportation Company at Fort Benning. He loves his job but the former tanker is now navigating down a different road of sorts.

Dressed in civilian clothes, Davis is part of an Operation Joint Guard training exercise at Fort Benning's Harmony Church area that will continue until 1998.

The Army sergeant of 6 years is playing the role of "civilian on the battlefield" and how he walks, talks, and interacts through various checkpoints will prepare Soldiers for Bosnia.

"I've learned a lot about how someone is searched," Davis said. "My job is crucial in helping Soldiers learn to search civilians who enter checkpoints in Bosnia. It's real-world training."

Army reserve and active duty Soldiers who are being deployed to Bosnia are at the Individual Replacement Training site — a three-day exercise that supports Operation Joint Endeavor. More than 24,000 people have gone through the exercise in places such as Hohenfels, Germany, Fort Drum, N.Y., Fort Riley, Kan. and Fort Bragg, N.C.

Concertina wires, cement barricades, and two, 10-feet high sand bag checkpoint posts dot the two 100-meter roads. The two roads were built with the same feel, look and conditions soldiers will see at checkpoints in Bosnia. Capt. Bruce Davis, Individual Readiness Training project officer, said, the road is saving lives.

"Soldiers are trained to stay on the road and avoid mines, Davis said. "So far the training is paying off and we hope our portion of training will allow soldiers to focus on situations necessary for survival."

Jack Pagano

Rich McDowell plays the role of a TV reporter by asking Spc. Donald A. Fitz, 498th Medical Company (Air Ambulance), 36th Engineer Group (Combat), questions during media training. The interview will be viewed afterwards.

According to IFOR officials in Bosnia, some six to eight million mines are still armed and ready for detonation throughout the region.

While Davis is searched at the first checkpoint, a media team is armed with a microphone and camera. Civilian journalists have arrived and soldiers are peppered with questions in a real-world environment. No question is off the record. Sixty-two Army Guardsmen from the 708th Medical Unit from Chicago, Ill., felt the power of the camera as worst-case scenarios lit up their faces.

"Do you have bullets in your weapon? Are you prepared to use force?" The camera never blinked capturing every word Soldiers sent through the air waves.

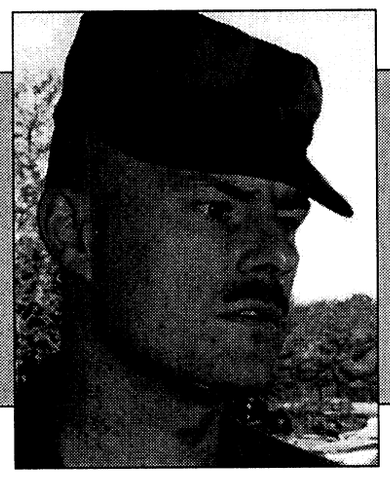
Spc. Jenna Napoli, an English student at Illinois State in Chicago, was impressed with the media instruction.

"This training improved my communication skills," she said. "I was nervous at first but I was glad I did this."

More than 5,000 media have been accredited in the war-torn region.

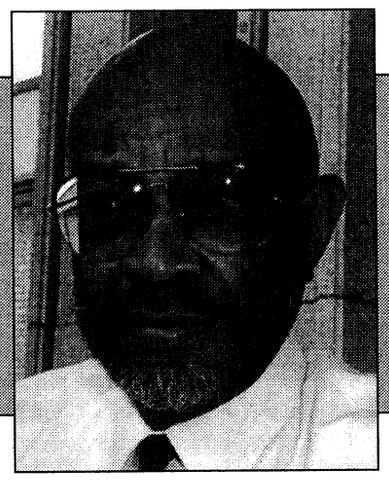
Every soldier is interviewed for two to three minutes and later, under a tent, small groups critique the taped interviews.

According to Gen. Dennis Reimer, Army Chief of Staff, today's Army must tell the Army story otherwise someone else will.



The media training at Harmony Church highlighted Reimer's philosophy and how every soldier can be a spokesperson for the Army.

Pfc. Letice Love from the 498th Medical Detachment will be heading to Bosnia in a few weeks.



"So far I've learned a lot and I can't wait to use it in Bosnia," she said.

VARIOUS VOICES

Why do you think flag burning is right or wrong?

Spc. William H. Kline, U.S. Army Medical Department Activity — "I think burning the flag destroys a symbol of this country."

Retired Maj. Richard E. Rumley, Columbus — "I detest people who burn the flag. It is not patriotic."

Pamela D. Arrocha, family member — "If you live in the United States, you shouldn't disrespect the flag. The flag stands for the principles we hold so dear."

Lisa S. Kramer, family member — "It is disrespectful to burn the flag because the flag represents our country."

Tammy G. Parker, family member — "I personally would not burn a flag. I don't know why other people need to go around burning flags."

Capt. Dana K. Renta, U.S. Army Medical Department Activity — "The flag represents our country. I can't stand it being on the ground, let alone burning."

American flag

Displaying national colors shows respect, patriotism

By Lori Egan
Bayonet staff writer

commentary

I love this time of year. The days seem longer and the early morning sun takes the chill off the freshly-started day.

My favorite time of the morning is just before it is starting to get light, about the time I finish my run.

But when I'm running around Main Post in the morning, it is dark. I am amazed at the number of U.S. flags being displayed in the darkness.

This is a major pet peeve of mine. I think that if someone is going to display the U.S. flag, they should do it properly.

When I think of the our flag, images of the Marines planting the American flag at Iwo Jima, the American flag flying on the moon and Iranians burning the American flag outside the U.S. Embassy in Teheran are invoked. These are powerful images, which summon feelings of patriotism and righteousness — how dare they burn our flag?

An American flag being flown in the middle of the night on an unlit porch does not evoke patriotism or righteousness.

Lori Egan says flags should be displayed properly.

Early one morning, I was going to meet a co-worker for physical training. Unfortunately, we missed each other, so I decided to walk around post instead of running. While I was walking, I counted more than 30 houses flying the flag improperly as I walked past the golf course and around Main Post.

What is the deal? Aren't people attending the self-help class? The instructor of the class used these words to tell the class I attended about displaying the flag without a separate spotlight — "don't do it."

For me, seeing a flag displayed in an improper manner, without proper illumination, makes me infuriated — plain and simple.

Are people more patriotic for flying the flag in darkness? I don't think so.

In fact, flying the flag without proper illumination is plainly disrespectful.

After all, a porch light is not considered proper illumination. Those that believe it is are simply uninformed.

I believe if a person is patriotic enough to fly the flag in front of his or her home, then he or she should do so correctly, in a manner that shows respect for the American flag.

As people move onto post and attend the self-help class as they are required, they are told about the proper way in which to display the flag in front of their homes. So why are there so many flags being displayed incorrectly?

I honestly don't believe patriotism is an issue on an Army post.

I remember my father putting the flag out on Memorial Day. He told me about the importance of treating the flag with respect and then told me how to do so — about not flying the flag after dusk, not letting the flag touch the ground and not flying the flag in bad weather.

If a person cares enough to display the American flag in front of his or her home, then he or she should do it correctly.

Chief of Staff explains policies on home marketing

An article in the Wednesday, March 5, 1997 edition of the Columbus Ledger-Enquire stated that Fort Benning was considering a ban on home marketing. Let me set the record straight.

Various Department of Defense and Army policies address the issue of commercial solicitation or marketing on military installations. The bottom line is no one can sell anything on military installations without permission. The policy being considered would only limit active participation by Soldiers in one form of marketing; that is, "multilevel marketing programs" Other forms of commercial solicitation or marketing will be allowed to continue within the constraints imposed by Department of Defense, Army, and ethics regulations. Likewise, fund raising activities by private organizations, (Girl Scouts, Santa's Castle, etc.), would not be affected by this policy.

It is clear from the response to the Ledger-Enquirer article that many people are unaware of the constraints placed on solicitation or marketing activities on a military installation. First, a person or company that wishes to solicit on Fort Benning must apply and receive permission from the Commercial Solicitation Office, Directorate of Community Affairs. Second, those who live in government owned quarters and who desire to operate homebased businesses must request permission to do so from the Directorate of Public Works. Third, DoD personnel and their spouses who desire to engage in commercial activities must be familiar with the provisions of the Joint Ethics Regulation.

Specific provisions in the JER prohibit DoD personnel from making solicited sales to other DoD personnel junior in grade, rank or position, or to their members on or off-duty.

For example:

•Company Commander X cannot sell to or solicit anyone junior to him or her in or outside of his company or their family members.

•Lt. Y instructor, cannot sell to or solicit anyone junior to him or her in or outside of his or her small instructor group or their family members.

•Sgt. W, squad leader, cannot sell to or solicit anyone junior to him or her in or outside of his or her squad or their family members.

Likewise, sales by spouses of DoD personnel to those junior in grade, rank, or position to the DoD employee should be avoided where it may: create the appearance of partiality; involve the actual or apparent use of rank or position for personal gain; or otherwise undermine discipline, morale, or authority.

•The company commanders' spouse should not sell to or solicit any spouse whose husband or wife is junior to in grade, rank or position to the company commander.

We are aware that home-based businesses are a source of income to some military families, and we recognize the importance of these businesses. We are looking at multi-level marketing in response to a specific problem in a unit at Fort Benning where widespread solicitation of others to sell has become prejudicial to good order and discipline. As we consider what that policy should be, those individuals who desire to engage in commercial solicitation on post, or from their quarters, may do so once they comply with the applicable regulations.

Post celebrates women's history

March is designated as Women's History Month in recognition of the numerous contributions women have made to every aspect of our nation.

This year's theme, "A Fine and Long Tradition of Community Leadership," is designed to help pay special tribute to all women who take on leadership roles in their communities.

Women stepped up to the challenges throughout our history as a nation in their communities and selflessly responded to the needs of others.

Their accomplishments continue to touch thousands of lives. Women's History Month provides a means for paying tribute to these remarkable women.

I encourage everyone to participate in the many events scheduled to celebrate Women's History Month.

545-boss

Dial 545-BOSS is the commander's action line for Soldiers, family members and civilians to call when they have problems or complaints that can't be resolved elsewhere.

While it is not a substitute for the chain of command or for agencies established to provide assistance, the line offers another means of communication between Fort Benning's community and commanders.

The Bayonet features some of the calls that may benefit other members of the Fort Benning community.

Call: The caller said the playground near his quarters is unkempt and is a poor excuse for a playground. He said the basketball goal needs a rim and he has tried to get help but has not been able to get anything done.

Directorate of Community Activities response: The noncommissioned officer in charge at the McGraw Manor Community Life Office informed the caller that the Directorate of Public Works has been notified and will repair the playground equipment.

The area was checked by DPW, the Community Recreation Division,and the Community Life officer and NCOIC. The goal was located next to a residential fence and in an area with constant erosion problems. DPW installed basketball equipment at an alternate site on Magrath Street.

EOO celebrates women

By Elizabeth LaMonica
Special to The Bayonet

More than 250 people gathered at the Fort Benning Officers' Club Tuesday to celebrate Women's History Month, sponsored by the Fort Benning Equal Opportunity Office.

The theme of the luncheon was "A Fine and Long Tradition of Community Leadership."

Lois N. Cohen, president of Miramar Securities, Inc. of Columbus, spoke at the luncheon.

Sgt. 1st Class Evelyn J. Richardson, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 29th Infantry Regiment, recited the poem, "Phenomenal Woman."

Then Col. Byron D. Greene, garrison commander, introduced Cohen, whom he called a tenacious and dedicated lady.

Cohen exemplified the luncheon's theme with her own tradition of community leadership.

"Community involvement is our birthright — we need to do it," she said.

Cohen served as a member of many area councils and was the president of several of them, including the Network for Professional and Executives, the Columbus Sports Council, and the Columbus Lung Association.

Cohen credited several women for leading her to be active in the community. Her closest influences include her mother and her grandmothers. She also recognized several Columbus women: Margaret Belcher, Ruth Shrobe, and Ocie "Mother" Harris.

"Each of these women planted a seed and look at how these seeds have grown," she said. "That's what each of us has to do.

"Each of these women possessed perseverance.

"I don't think anybody has ever told me I couldn't do anything and I've always done what I wanted to do and worked around it," Cohen said.

"Women's History Month needs to be more of an education process within the school systems. Show kids that women are not just there to be mommies.

"The hidden heroines — the drivers and PTA cookie bakers, need to be recognized for their contributions."

Many women in the audience agreed with her. Laurie Marks, also of Miramar Securities, said children need to be taught to recognize leadership abilities in women.

According to Susan Turner, Secretary General Staff, the fact that Women's History Month is recognized is a good thing because it celebrates women's achievements.

Deployment: Brings in Nat'l Guard

said his company will also be participating in a Joint Readiness Training Center rotation from April 8 to 17. He said his unit will be sending a forward support medical evacuation team to Fort Bragg, N.C., to train with a group that will be going to the JRTC at Fort Polk, La., during August.

While on post, Frings said he hopes his company can get the most beneficial training possible, like attending the JRTC rotation, but he also said, he thinks the opportunity to interact with active duty Soldiers gives them an excellent opportunity to gage where they are at as a National Guard unit.

"There are a lot of times when outside evaluation teams come in and say 'yes you're doing everything right,'" Frings said, "But there is still that gray area where you ask yourself, 'well can we handle this or can we do this?' And this is the opportunity to find out if we really can do what we've been training to do for the last six years."

Out of the things that make it hard to go on deployment, Frings said leaving behind a family is the hardest thing, but he also said that for a lot of the Soldiers in his unit being deployed really hurts them financially.

"It can be a real shot in the pocket book for a lot of these guys," Frings said. "There are several people in this unit who have excellent situations in their organizations at home.

"To come back on active duty to be a sergeant or a specialist can mean a very dramatic reduction in pay for them. But being the professionals that they are, we had very few people who said they couldn't go. As a matter of fact I didn't have any difficulty at all getting together my company of 101 people."

The 498th hasn't received word on the exact date they are supposed to leave, but Wyatt believes it will be very soon. Frings and the 832nd will continue with their duties as the Air Ambulance company until their 270 days are up. If the 498th is still deployed at that time Frings said another reserve or guard unit will be activated to take their place.

AER helps Soldiers help themselves

Army Emergency Relief

The annual Fund Campaign has been conducted by the Army each year since 1947. Army Emergency Relief exists solely to help the Army care for its own. Since AER is the Army's own organization, a separate campaign is conducted for AER.

AER solicits funds only from Soldiers, both active duty and retired. Major campaign objectives are to: increase awareness about AER for all Soldiers and their dependents — including spouses and orphans of deceased Army members; publicize procedures so all Army people know how to obtain AER assistance in time of need; and raise funds to support AER assistance programs.

The annual Fund Campaign is the only time each year Army people are asked to help their own organization and their fellow Army members.

Your contributions remain important to allow AER to fulfill its mission of helping Army people in times of distress and misfortune. Need caused AER's creation in 1942.

AER has provided more than $610 million in assistance to more than 2.5 million Army people and their dependents worldwide since it was founded. More than $32 million in AER assistance in 1996 was provided to almost 53,000 Soldiers and their families.

Included in these figures were 45,000 active duty Soldiers and their families who were provided more that $27 million in assistance. 5,300 retired Soldiers were provided more than $3 million in assistance. 1,800 widows and widowers and orphans of deceased Soldiers were provided more than $1 million in assistance. 839 dependent children were awarded almost $669,000 in educational scholarships.

In 1996, Fort Benning's AER helped more than 1,000 clients with nearly $700,000 in aid.

HAMMER FOCUS

3rd Brigade Soldiers train at platoon level

By Brian R. Voller
Bayonet staff writer

The dry, reddish-brown terrain looks like the surface of Mars without a shred of life to be found. Then from beyond a distant hill, a low rumbling sound begins and is soon followed by a slowly moving dust cloud that creeps, almost like it's alive. As the cloud moves closer, a gigantic set of razor sharp teeth expose themselves from the edge of the cloud and the body they're connected to picks up speed. It doesn't take long before it becomes clear that the teeth belong to an M1-A1 Abrams mine sweeper that is leading a caravan of menacing machinery.

The tank belongs to the 2nd Battalion, 69th Armor Regiment, and most of the machinery following it belongs to the 317th Engineer Battalion, who are both returning from lane training that makes up Operation Hammer Focus, which is currently being conducted by the 3rd Brigade, 3rd Infantry Division (Mechanized).

Hammer Focus, according to Lt. Col. Pat Stallings, commander of the 2nd Bn., 69th Armor Regt., is designed as one of the training exercises preparing Soldiers for the annual National Training Center exercise this summer. Hammer Focus is designed to test the skills of the Soldiers at the platoon and squad level.

Stallings said this year's training hasn't changed much but it was fine-tuned to better suit the Soldiers thanks to lessons learned from last year's training.

"I don't think a lot has changed, from what I know, with how we are conducting our training," Stallings said. "Last year's Hammer Focus did a lot to train platoons exactly the way we are doing it now using the eight-step lane-training model.

"This Hammer Focus we're doing pretty much the same thing, but we've changed the terrain because we don't want the same platoon leader going down the exact same lane as he did last year, and we've also improved the opposing force."

Stallings said the lane training they are conducting does a lot to make the Soldiers combat ready.

"The idea of lane training grew up in the Army about six or seven years ago," Stallings said. "What it does is it allows you to focus resources on training in a given unit no matter what size it is.

"Platoon lane training allows leaders to focus on some very basic stuff that you want a Soldier to do."

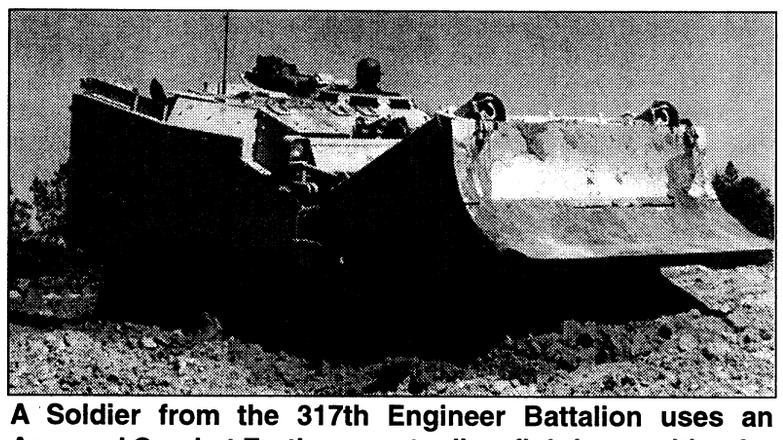
Stallings said the lanes allow the different platoons to experience as realistic a combat situation as they could possibly get whether it be a defensive lane or an nuclear chemical or biological lane.

One of the things Stallings said the Soldiers are concentrating on during this Hammer Focus is the battlefield operating system.

"When we returned from the last NTC we learned a lot about coordination of all the different parts of the BOS," Stallings said. "This means the engineers work with us and the field artillery, the Infantry, the logistician, the military police and communications guys and all of the people who work together to fight and win on the battlefield."

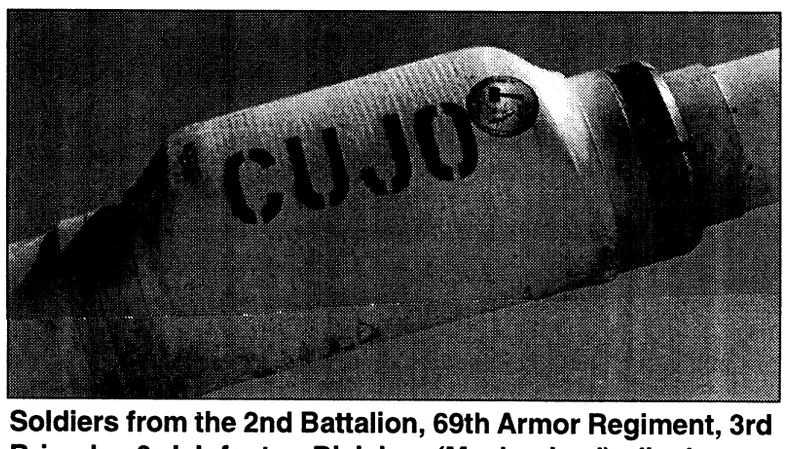
Lt. Col. David Kingston, commander of the 317th Engineer Bn. said the role of the combat engineers is vital to the success of a mission.

"On the lane we just came from, we had engineers on both sides doing everything they could to support the armor guys," Kingston said. "On the survivability side of the training we have people digging fighting positions, we have an insert platoon that puts up obstacles to support the defensive position and we also have engineers on the OPFOR who are being used to breach obstacles and they're doing it tactically. All my engineers are MILESed (multi-integrated laser engagement system) up and if they screw up, they get killed too."



Kingston said he thinks his engineers get good training out of an event like Hammer Focus, but he said the other Soldiers also benefit from the engineers presence.

"There is a lot of benefit in having the cross training between the Infantry and armor guys and the engineer," Kingston said. "By telling them how to use the engineers properly, we aren't wasting their time and they aren't wasting our time. Hammer Focus allows us to get out in the field and get dirty and really learn how to work together."



As for the Soldier in the field, Pfc. Willie J. Conley said he thinks he's getting a lot of the training during Hammer Focus.

"It's better training this year than last year," Conley said. "I found out when we went to the NTC last year that they don't play around. If you don't know what you're doing, they're going to get you out there. So I think this year the training is better and it will help us better prepare for the NTC."

Hammer Focus will continue until the end of March, leading to the 3rd Brigade's next major field exercise called Marne Focus, which begins in May.

A Soldier from the 317th Engineer Battalion uses an Armored Combat Earth mover to dig a fighting position for an M1-A1 Abrams tank.

Officer Candidate School prepares students to be officers

By Brian R. Voller
Bayonet staff writer

Before the candidate knows what is happening to him, the instructor wraps a blindfold around his head putting the candidate in complete darkness. Slowly the instructor leads the candidate to the edge of a diving board 15-feet in the air and without a moments hesitation the candidate screams "Infantry" and leaps off the board into the water.

This was combat water survival training, and it is only one part of 14 weeks of training students endure while trying to graduate from the Officer Candidate School.

Capt. Charles W.H. Ogle, commander of Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 3rd Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment, OCS, said the school is broken down into three phases during its 14 week cycle.

"The first phase is the basic phase, which is very regimented and the most physically demanding phase," Ogle said. "The second phase, the intermediate phase, comes four weeks later and it is more academically motivated but it still is very physical.

"The final phase is the last four weeks of the school, which is the senior phase. This concentrates on the transition to the officer ranks. They learn the managerial and ethical leadership skills an officer should have to make him a well-rounded and knowledgeable second lieutenant."

During the 14 weeks of training Ogle said the students undergo a large variety of training exercises that will help them be better prepared to lead Soldiers after they graduate.

He said they receive training in leadership and team work, land navigation, physical fitness, logistics, tactics, OCS history and several other areas.

Ogle said the average OCS class begins with 90 to 120 students, but he said recently they had a low of 80 students. Of the students who begin the course, Ogle said roughly 95 percent of those students graduate He said occasionally students resign but for the most part the students who come through the school are already highly motivated and usually do well in the school.

Lt. Col. Scott Armbrister, commander of OCS, said the diversity of the students is what makes OCS so special to him.

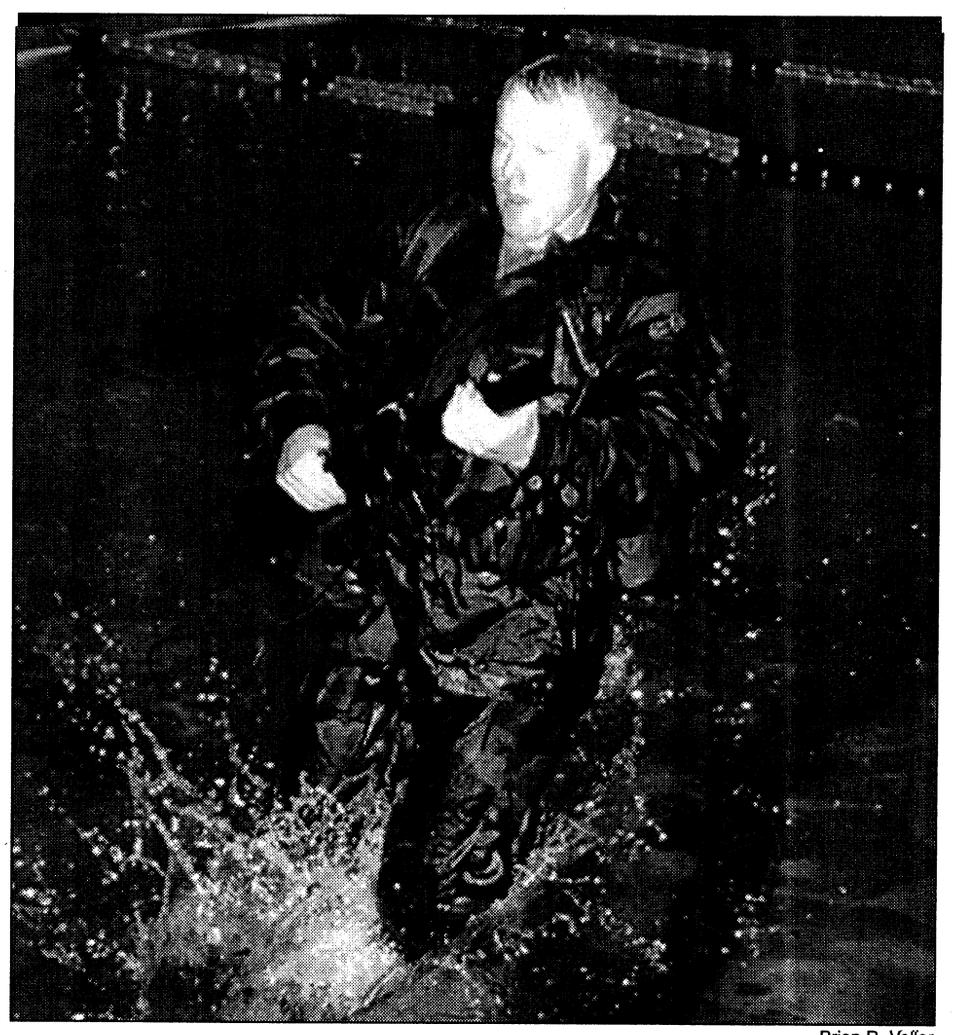
"OCS has a very wide spectrum of people who come through the school," Armbrister said. "In the class that has just arrived, I've got six warrant officers, I've got five sergeant first classes, about 20 staff sergeants, 10 to 20 sergeants and a whole bunch of specialists and privates first class. Not to mention I've got seven people who have only been in the Army for less than three months on the college option program.

"When the question gets asked what kind of person comes to OCS, I can honestly answer every kind of person comes to OCS in some way or form.

That's why I love it so much and that's why as an institution it has survived for so long. It's because of that wide spread, the immense diversity of the school itself that it is such an important and viable commissioning source."

Along with the diversity of the students, Armbrister said his cadre is special because of their diversity as well.

"OCS is the only part of the Infantry School that is branch immaterial," Armbrister said. "I have an armor captain in command of a company, an air defense artillery captain, two adjutant general captains, a military police captain, a signal captain and I have several Infantry captains."



Armbrister said this diversity aids the students because OCS commissions into all branches except the chaplains, staff judge advocate and medical corps. He said having the different branch officers allows students to receive a large variety of experiences from all different aspects of the Army.

Along with the diversity of the officers' branches, there is also a diverse mixture of active duty Soldiers and Soldiers who are on active duty from the National Guard assigned as trainers.

"The 3rd Bn., 11th Inf., is a great example of the total Army.," Armbrister said. "A few years ago the Infantry School commandant and the director of the National Guard made an agreement to put active guard and reserve Soldiers into this battalion.

"Since that time they have maintained 11 or 12 positions down here depending on the time of the year, right now I have several noncommissioned officers and five officers who are National Guard."

Currently Class 3-97 is being trained by Company B, 3rd Bn., 11th Inf. Regt. The students are in their second week of school and conducted their class opening ceremony. This is the time when the chain of command is turned over to the students.

4th RTB changes commanders

By Dov Schwartz
USAIC Public Affairs Office

Lt. Col. Eric D. Hutchings assumed command of the 4th Ranger Training Battalion from Lt. Col. Kim R. Kadesch at Ranger Training Brigade Headquarters Feb. 25.

Reviewing Officer and Ranger Training Brigade Commander, Col. Dorian T. Anderson praised Kadesch for maintaining the high standards expected of a ranger battalion commander.

Anderson noted that despite the high turnover in the Battalion's noncommissioned officer corps during Kadesch's two years in command, his men continued to live up to the ranger motto "Rangers lead the way."

Kadesch and his family will depart Fort Benning this summer for the Army War College.

Anderson welcomed Hutchings and expressed his confidence that the 4th Battalion was in good hands.

Hutchings was a distinguished military graduate at Virginia Military Institute

His troop assignments have included command of a Special Forces SCUBA detachment, multiple tours in the 75th Ranger Regiment as both a rifle platoon leader and rifle company commander.

His staff assignments have included responsibilities as a plans officer in 18th Airborne Corps and the 3rd Infantry Division (Mechanized).

Hutchings is a master parachutist and is high altitude low opening qualified. He has been awarded the ranger and special forces tabs, as well as the SCUBA, Air Assault and Expert Infantryman badges.

He is a graduate of the Army's Command and General Staff College and the School of Advanced Military Studies.

Hutchings served overseas tours in Korea, Germany and Italy. His most recent assignment was in Naples, Italy, where he served in NATO as the lead ground planner for IFOR, CJ5.

Hutchings is married and has three children

Dexter receives honors

Dexter Elementary School

A teacher and a club from Dexter Elementary school were honored Thursday at the Georgia Clean and Beautiful Commission's awards luncheon conducted at the Thomas B. Murphy Ballroom of the Georgia World Congress Center in Atlanta.

Jim Higdon, Commissioner of the Georgia Department of Community Affairs recently named Earnestine Ezekiel, a kindergarten teacher at Dexter Elementary School, as the Georgia Clean and Beautiful Commission's 1997 Woman of the Year.

Ezekiel was selected from a large field of applications recognizing individuals who have made contributions to environmental stewardship, continuing effort to promote community change in environmental improvement and education of the community about care of the environment.

Also, Higdon named the Dexter School Kindergarten Ecology Club, known as the e-Club, as the second place winner in the state competition among Georgia's Youth ecology groups.

Ezekiel is the sponsor of the kindergarten ecology club.

MPs accept Hall of Fame nominations

Military Police Activity

The U.S. Army Military Police Corps Regimental Hall of Fame is soliciting nominations.

Commissioned officers, warrant officers, enlisted Soldiers or professional civilians who have served with or supported an active or reserve component Military Police unit are eligible for nomination.

A nominee must have contributed significantly to the evolution and enhancement of the mission, doctrine, training or lineage and heritage of the military police corps. AROUND POST

Post stray animal facility to close — The Fort Benning stray facility is closing. Animals picked up today and after will be taken to the Columbus City Pound. Owners will be subject to Columbus City laws and regulations concerning stray animals.

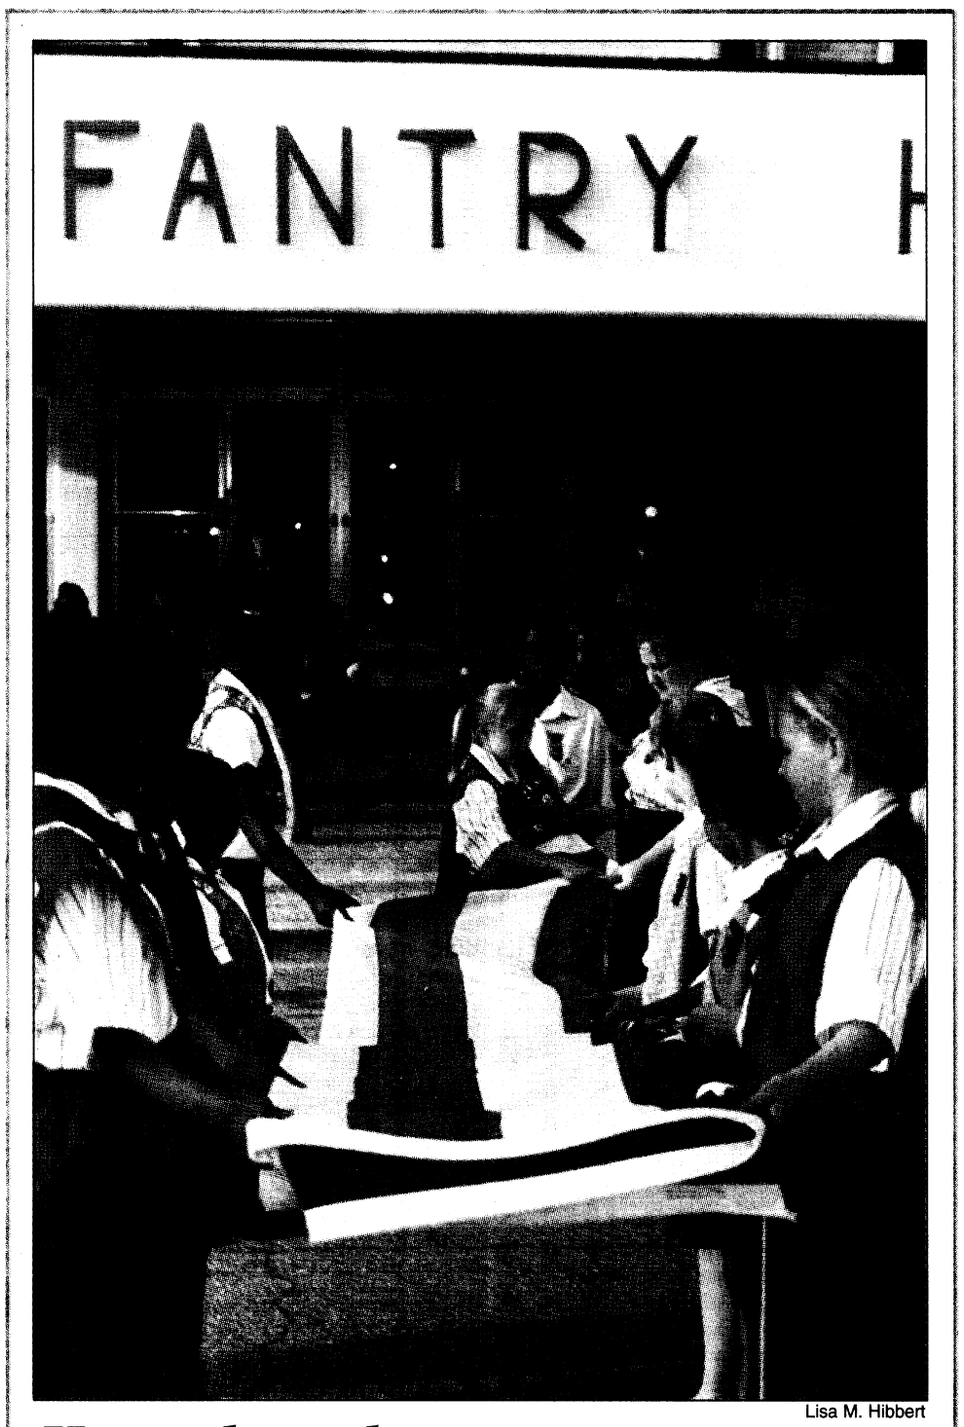
Animals are kept for a maximum of five days. The current impoundment fee is $35 plus $5 per day. Court appearance and fines may be imposed for animals without proof of rabies vaccination.

In addition, Fort Benning regulation states all dogs must have current distemper and parvo vaccinations and be on heartworm prevention year-round. Cats must also have a rabies vaccination and a feline distemper vaccination.

For more information, call the Columbus City Pound at 561-8602 or the Fort Benning Veterinary Clinic at 545-4444.

Boy Scouts seek assistance — The Fort Benning District of Boy Scouts of America is seeking assistance. Unit Commissioners are needed to work with the 20 Scouting programs on post, specifically in Scout advancement, training and registration.

To volunteer, call Scott Wacter at 545-3216 or 327-2634 or Howard Willis at 545-5741.



Pediatric clinic moves back to third floor — Construction is complete for the A-wing on the third floor of Martin Army Community Hospital. The Pediatric Clinic, now temporarily located in Ward B on the sixth floor, will be relocated back to Ward 3A. The move begins Monday. Patients will continue to be seen until noon March 21. For more information, call Mitchell Thompson at 544-4408.

Dexter to sponsor a parent presentation — Dexter Elementary School is sponsoring a parent presentation entitled "Building Self-Esteem in Young Children" March 25 at 7 p.m. Jennifer Fletcher, the manager of Community Education for the Columbus Regional Healthcare System, will be the featured speaker. Fletcher, a former public school teacher, is also certified in neonatal intensive care nursing and is a adjunct professor in the nursing department at Columbus State University.

Fletcher plans to discuss the development of self-esteem in children, conditions associated with poor and healthy self-esteem, and practical strategies to enhance children's self-esteem. Although targeted at Fort Benning parents of pre-kindergarten and kindergarten children, all interested parents are invited to attend.

For more information about the program, call Kathy Einhorn at 545-8254.

Fort Benning Girl Scouts celebrate the 85th anniversary of Girl Scouting Wednesday by taking down the post flag during a retreat ceremony. Lasunda Williams (left front), Quiandra Frederick, Jeneaya Perdue, Rhakitta Carter, Christie Riggs (right front), Kendran Foreman, Candace Marquardt, and Amber Floyd hold the flag steady as Wendy Wayland folds the flags. Sylvia Singleton stands behind Wayland, waiting to receive the flag. Sgt. 1st Class Randy Walker, a drill sergeant with Co. C, 1st Battalion, 50th Infantry Regiment, Infantry Training Brigade, oversees the ceremony along with some Soldiers from his company.
The girls are also planning a yard sale for Saturday. The sale will take place from 8 a.m. to 2 p.m. in Building 1796. Proceeds fund the Scouts Friends and Family campaign.

CHILD ABUSE AWARENESS

Loyd teachers aides receive training

By Lisa M. Hibbert
Bayonet staff writer

Educational aides from Loyd Elementary School received child abuse awareness training Tuesday in the school's media center.

Rebecca Welch, manager of the Fort Benning Family Advocacy Program, provided the instruction for the session. She is providing this training in advance of Child abuse Awareness Month which is in April.

Welch opened the session with a training video called "Come in From the Storm." The film began by showing a routine scene of a woman cooking a meal. Shortly after, the woman receives a phone call from her daughter's father and gets into a heated discussion. She drinks some wine. As the woman gets off the phone, she calls to her daughter. When the little girl doesn't respond, the mother angrily stormed to her daughter's room.

She finds her daughter playing in her room pretending to be her. The little girl is shouting at her doll, "You're a loser, you're going to be a jerk just like your father!"

Although the little girl in this video was not being physically abused, she was being emotionally and verbally abused by her mother — harder types of abuse to recognize, Welch said.

The film concluded with the mother's realization that she was an abuser and her calling a child abuse hotline for help.

Welch then went into a background presentation of FAP and why the Army gets involved in these types of issues.

"The Family Advocacy Program began in 1985," Welch said. "It was created as an Army incentive to focus on family violence. This is not to say that abuse is an Army problem because abuse is going on everywhere. This means that the Army decided to do something about it."

Welch provided the group with some factors that often cause abuse.

"Like the lady in the film, alcohol and stress are often involved in abusive situations," Welch said. "One way to avoid resorting to violence is to communicate and to know your limits.

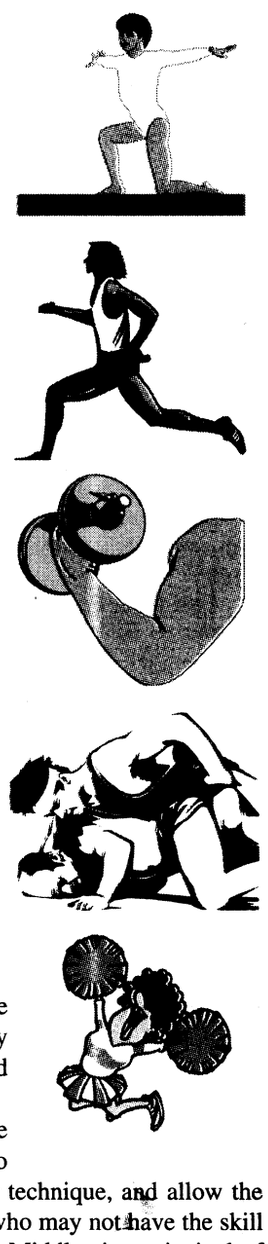
"Also people have to become interested enough to get involved," Welch said. "Soldiers and civilians on a military installation have an obligation under Army law to report any instances of abuse."

Recognizing abuse is not always easy but Welch gave some tips to the group.

"Children generally fall forward so when you see kids with bruises on the backs of their legs and buttocks, that might be a sign of abuse," Welch said.

She also discussed how emotional abuse is hard to detect because a lot of parents don't even realize that they are being abusive.

"It depends on how the parents were raised," Welch said. "If the parents were raised being cursed at then they will probably curse at their kids. That's why its so important to educate people on what abuse is."



Welch also talked about the blue ribbon campaign that is about to begin in honor of Child Abuse Awareness Month.

"A mother whose son was killed in an abusive situation put a blue ribbon on her car," Welch said. "In honor of that we make blue ribbons and hand them out."

"I didn't realize how big the advocacy program was," said Deborah Morris, an educational aide who participated in the training. "It brought home how prevalent abuse is in everyday life."

INTRAMURALS:

Faith Middle School students work out with after school activities

By Lisa M. Hibbert
Bayonet staff writer

Faith Middle School kicked off its spring intramurals program with a variety of activities for the students to participate in.

This year's programs include a spring jogging club, an exhibition gymnastics team, a spirit (cheerleading) team, wrestling and weight training.

Faith follows the Georgia middle school philosophy of noncompetitive sports.

"Our intramurals' program allows the children to compete and participate in activities against themselves," said Jimmy Cochran, Faith Middle School physical education teacher. "The middle school philosophy is to let the children improve themselves individually and to let them be all that they can be, rather than as a team, playing against another school."

Although Faith students do not compete against other schools, they still have the opportunity to compete against each other.

"There is nothing wrong with competition," Cochran said. "Our students do compete — they just compete within the walls of Faith."

At Faith, there are no tryouts. Students just come out and participate. Out of the more than 700 students enrolled in the school, almost 100 participated in the gymnastics program alone, Cochran said.

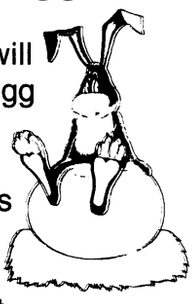
"I've had girls come to me and ask when the tryouts for the spirit team would be," said Libby Heinekein, Faith Middle School PE teacher and spirit team coach, "but we don't have them."

Faith believes in developing a tension-free sports environment. Because the instructors do not apply pressure to get the children to master technique, and allow the children to play at their own level, the students who may not have the skill but the motivation still come out, said Dr. Beth Middlemiss, principal of Faith.

"I don't treat the child that comes across the finish line first any different than I treat the child that crosses the line last," said Susan Emerson, Faith PE teacher and Jogging Club coach. I praise them all equally because this way they are all encouraged to do better."

But since these sports programs are in place, why won't Faith switch to a competitive play?

"One reason is we are a transient population," Cochran said. "with so many students coming and going forming teams would be hard. Another reason is financial. Athletics programs draw their money from the school's PE budget. If we did this then our PE program would suffer.



PE instructors at Faith offer their students more than 35 physical training activities each year, Cochran said. If the athletic program increased this would be cut drastically.

"We are here to serve all of the students at Faith — not just the few involved in athletics," Cochran said.

When Faith students participate in sports they don't have to purchase any special equipment or clothing.

"Usually all the kids need to participate in sports is a pair of sneakers," Cochran said. "Our job here is to help the kids foster a positive attitude about sports and to let everybody get a fair chance."

Poison:

Learn how to recognize, store dangerous goods

Georgia Poison Center

In September 1961, President John F. Kennedy designated the third week of March as National Poison Prevention Week. The 36th observation of National Poison Prevention Week takes place during the week of Sunday through March 22. This year's theme is "Keep All Poisons Away From Children."

Unintentional poisonings

Every year, five to seven million people are poisoned in the United States. In Georgia alone, it is estimated that nearly 150,000 men, women and children are poisoned each year.

Sixty percent of all poisonings involve children under the age of 6. Poisoning is the fifth leading cause of accidental death in children under the age of 6 and is one of the most common reasons children are seen in emergency rooms.

Few people realize that adults are also the unfortunate victims of unintentional poisonings. Anyone, of any age, can become a poisoning victim. The statistics prove this: in 1995, the Georgia Poison Center responded to more than 89,000 poisoning calls.

Common poisons

A poison is anything that can make you sick or kill you if you eat, breath or touch it.

Medicines account for more than 50 percent of the poisonings reported to the Georgia Poison Center. All drugs, whether they are prescription or over the counter, can be dangerous if used incorrectly. All medicine should be stored out of the reach of children in a locked cabinet and in tightly closed child resistant containers.

Household products such as cleaners, laundry, automobile and gardening products, as well as cosmetics, personal hygiene and art or hobby supplies can be extremely dangerous if ingested or used incorrectly. All household products should be stored out of the reach of children in a locked cabinet.

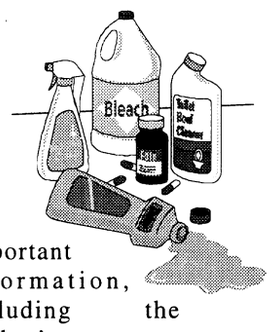
Plants, both indoor and outdoor, can cause severe injury and even death if swallowed by humans and animals. Plants are one of the leading causes of poisonings in children and pets. Children must be warned not to eat any part of a plant shrub, tree, berry or mushroom. For a list of poisonous plants, call the Georgia Poison Center at (404) 616-9235.

Georgia Poison Center

The Georgia Poison Center, a poison emergency treatment and information resource for the public and health care professionals in Georgia, offers a variety of services, which include the following:

- 24-hour poison emergency treatment and information service;
- Rabies and animal bite treatment and information service;
- Professional education,
- Occupational and environmental toxicology information service;
- Drugs in breast milk information service; and
- Data collection and research.

The center is located in Hughes Scalding Children's Hospital of the Grady Health System and operates under the Department of Pediatrics, Emory University School of Medicine.



The emergency information service is accessible through local and toll-free numbers throughout Georgia, 24 hours a day, seven days a week. The center provides a teletype line for the deaf and hearing impaired and has access to 140 languages through the AT&T Language Line.

When poisoning occurs

If you believe a poisoning has occurred, call the Poison Center immediately. Do not wait for symptoms to occur. The 24-hour emergency numbers are:

- Metro-Atlanta Area, (404) 616-9000;
- Outside of Atlanta, (800) 282-5846;
- TDD (for deaf and hearing impaired only), (404) 616-9287.

When calling the Poison Center, if possible, take the poison with you to the phone. Have the label ready when you call. The label provides important information, including the product's contents.

To provide accurate and prompt treatment recommendations, the Poison Center will need to gather the following information from you:

- Victim's age and weight;
- Victim's existing health conditions or problems;
- Name of the substance and ingredients;
- Amount of poison involved; and,
- Time the poisoning occurred.

TRICARE

Prime enrollees receive more benefits than other enrollees

By Christine Parker
Martin Army Community Hospital

The assistant secretary of defense for Health Affairs, Dr. Stephen Joseph, announced a dramatic change in funding of military medical treatments facilities that will become effective Oct. 1.

The latest change means that funding for Martin Army Community Hospital will now be based on the number of beneficiaries who have enrolled in Tricare Prime, not just who live in this area, according to Col. Stephen L. Markelz, deputy commander for administration at MACH.

Only 40 percent of people who are eligible to join Tricare Prime have enrolled, and the hospital stands to lose millions of dollars in funding. Active duty Soldiers are automatically enrolled, but their family members are not. No enrollment fees are required for enrolling the family members of active duty personnel.

Hospital officials believe that the only reason for family members not to join Tricare Prime would be if a spouse already has comprehensive health insurance for the family.

Officials also state that if Tricare Prime enrollment does not increase, the potential for limiting or cutting existing services is a potential reality come Oct. 1.

Soldiers who fail to enroll their family members in Tricare Prime frequently have to pay high unexpected medical bills under the Tricare Standard or Extra options. Tricare Standard and Extra are the medical insurance programs that replaced the former Civilian Health and Medical Program of the Uniformed Services program in July.

An increased emphasis is being placed on Tricare Prime enrollment with the implementation of a Prime-only appointment call-in time. Beginning Monday, only Tricare Prime enrollees will be able to call the hospital and schedule appointments between 8 and 10 a.m. each day. All non-Prime beneficiaries will have to wait until after 10 a.m. to call for an appointment.

This is just one of the advantages MACH offers to Tricare Prime enrollees. For further information regarding the Tricare program, call 685-1138 or visit the Tricare Service Center, Building 9204, at MACH.

Update on the installation's Yard Waste Program

Over the past several years, Fort Benning has been a leader in preserving our environment. As you are probably aware, yard waste can no longer be disposed in the installation's Solid Waste Disposal Facilities.

We enhanced the Recycling Program to include a special pick-up day, each Monday, and created an inert landfill for yard waste. This program has grown to the point that we are asking that all grass cuttings be placed in biodegradable paper bags that the Directorate of Public Works provides.

Residents may also use durable plastic or metal containers in addition to the paper yard waste bags. However, mark these containers "yard waste only." This will help insure that your yard waste is picked up and not mistaken for trash.

This change will greatly improve the efficiency of this labor-intensive initiative.

Beginning March 31, the Fort Benning Army Family Housing Yard Waste Collection Program will only pick up yard waste that is placed in biodegradable paper bags. You can obtain five bags per visit from the DPW Self-Help Store, Building 385.

Only leaves and grass clippings are to be placed into the biodegradable paper bags. Limbs and branches less than two inches in diameter and less that three feet long must be neatly piled next to the bagged leaves or grass clippings. Do not place limbs, branches or any other items in the paper bags.

Here is an alternative to raking and bagging your grass clippings

Rather than raking and bagging grass clippings, the DPW staff recommends an easier and more beneficial way to manage grass clippings ... simply use a mulching mower and leave the grass clippings to decompose and recycle valuable nutrients back to the soil.

If you have questions or topics that you would like to be addressed in the DPW "Information Corner," contact Glenn Todd, DPW customer relations specialist, at 545-2117, or write to the Directorate of Public Works, Building 6, Room 409, ATTN: ATZB-PWM (Glenn Todd), Fort Benning, Ga., 31905.

RECYCLE!

Use grass clippings as a natural lawn fertilizer

Professional Lawn Care Ass. of America

The Professional Lawn Care Association of America asks you to do your part for the environment by recycling when you mow.

Grasscycling — leaving grass clippings on the lawn — saves time, landfill space and nurtures the soil, according to the Professional Lawn Care Association of America.

"Yard waste bans are in place in many areas of the country," said Michael Gaffney, PLCAA's technical resource specialist. "Grasscycling is an alternative to dumping and bagging, and enriches the soil for a healthier lawn."

Grass clippings are 85 percent water and return 20 percent of their nitrogen to the soil to feed the lawn's root system. They decompose rapidly and return nutrients to the soil with no thatch buildup. Grasscycling, a term coined by PLCAA, can be practiced year round with most mowers.

When you mow, PLCAA recommends that you follow the one-third rule: mow often enough to cut only one-third of the grass plant in any one mowing.

"Cut the grass when dry and keep the lawn mower blade sharpened," said Gaffney.

Before grasscycling or practicing any lawn care activity, PLCAA advises that safety should always be your first concern. Follow these basic safety steps:

•Read all operating instructions;

•Keep equipment well-maintained;

•Dress properly for the job (sturdy shoes, long pants, no loose jewelry);

•Store gas in an approved container, away from the house;

•Clean up and clear the area before you start;

•Keep hands and feet away from moving parts;

•Never take passengers; and •Turn off the engine and remove the key when leaving equipment unattended.

For more information on grasscycling, PLCAA offers a "Grasscycling Guide." For a free copy, send a self-addressed, stamped envelope to: PLCAA/Grasscycling, 1000 Johnson Ferry Rd., NE, Suite C-135, Marietta, Ga., 30068. Visit PLCAA's web site at www.plcaa.org.

CAUTION: Keep pets safe when using lawn care products

Professional Lawn Care Ass. of America

Proper turf management practices are essential to a healthy lawn. The result is a thick, cushioned play surface that is excellent for family outdoor activities. Your pets enjoy the grass, too.

Because pets enjoy rolling in the grass and are indiscriminate tasters of everything, including grass, you must think safety first, advises the Professional Lawn Care Association of America. Lawn care professionals take proper precautions as part of their job, and when you make lawn care product applications, you should, too.

Lawn care products are designed and tested for use in a residential environment. Nevertheless, they must be applied according to their directions and certain precautions should be considered by pet owners to minimize exposure to their animals.

Use common sense and follow these basic safety tips provided by the Professional Lawn Care Association of America:

•Do not apply pest control products when pets are in the yard and could be exposed during the application, before dust has settled or sprays have dried.

•Remove or turn over and empty feeding bowls, water dishes and bird baths.

•Don't empty feeding bowls in an area where the food could become contaminated and eaten by the animal.

If a material is applied as a liquid spray, wait until it is dry or until the following day before allowing your pet back onto the lawn. If the applied product is a dry granular material, watering it down is recommended but not necessary.

Follow all label directions and always store pesticide products out of the reach of children and pets.

Widow's sacrifices encourage Christians to give all

By Chip Huey
2nd Battalion, 58th Inf. Regt.

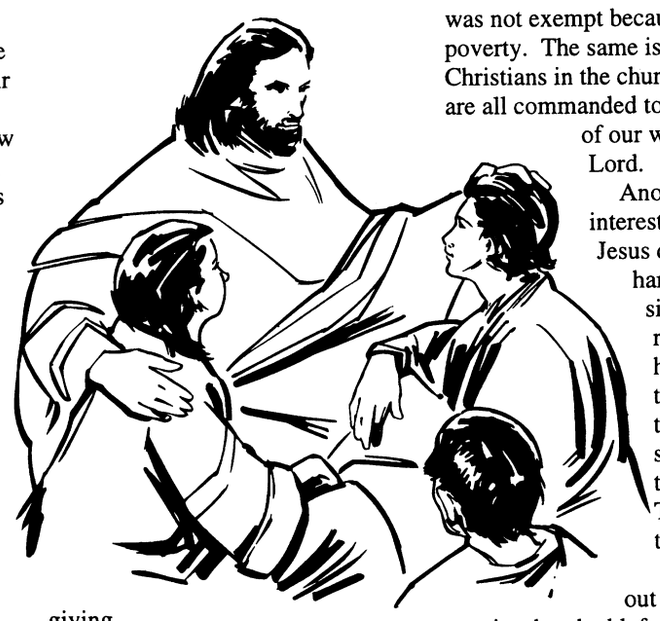
Imagine you are financially broke. You have only a few dollars to your name.

What would go on in your mind if you gave the last bit of money you possessed to the church? Anxiety, tension, panic-stricken second thoughts about that gift? Desperate, illconsidered plans for regaining your financial stability? Mental and visceral chaos?

reflections

The Bible tells the story of a destitute widow who gave all the money she had as an offering to God. This episode in the ministry of Jesus takes place in the Gospel of Luke 21:1-4. According to the Scripture, Jesus was watching the wealthy giving their offerings in the temple. An impoverished widow approached the offering boxes and dropped her gift.

According to Jesus, there was something very different about the widow's act of giving as opposed to the giving of the well-off around her. The wealthy were giving large offerings of money. However, their giving was no sacrifice, for they still had much left over. The widow had only two small coins on which to live. Yet, she gave both coins as her offering to God.



The widow had given all she had to her name. The rich were giving out of their surplus. There was no sacrifice in their giving. Her sacrifice was total, and Jesus watched the whole episode.

He gathered his followers around himself, explained the situation and pointed out the true nature of the widow's giving. She had given more than the wealthy.

There are several important truths to note in this beautiful event.

First, we must note that the giving of monetary offerings was not questioned, but assumed by Jesus. He didn't tell his followers not to give their money. He didn't take a cynical approach and lambaste institutionalized religion for always asking for money.

This is a very important note. One complaint that is voiced over and over again about the church is that it is constantly harping on giving.

Giving financial gifts to God has always been an aspect of worshipping him.

The Christian church is now God's institution here on earth, so it follows that we worship him with our giving to the church. Anyone who wants to gripe about giving to the church needs to take that up with Christ, the head of the church.

We must also note that giving was expected of all. The widow was not exempt because of her poverty. The same is true for Christians in the church today. We are all commanded to give as a part of our worship of the Lord.

Another interesting note is that Jesus did not hammer the rich simply for being rich. Rather, he hammered them because there was no sacrifice in their giving. Their gifts cost them nothing.

They gave out of the ample monies they had left over. Their giving was easy. Their giving required no faith in God and showed in what low esteem they held God. They probably thought they were doing God a favor by giving large sums.

In reality, they were responding to him with disrespect. They weren't giving him their best.

The widow, on the other hand, gave all she had. Her giving was sacrificial. There were two elements to her giving that are challenging truths for Christians today.

First, her giving demanded genuine faith in God. She had nothing. She had to trust God to provide for her somehow.

Second, her giving showed her love for God. She loved him so much, she wanted to give him her best. She gave knowing that giving meant supporting God's work here on earth.

Christians today are challenged by the widow's example. What a frightening prospect giving to God's church until it hurts. There are so many other things we need to do with "our" money. Yet God calls his people to give to his church sacrificially.

Sacrificial giving doesn't necessarily mean giving every single penny you own, but it does mean giving as a first commitment and giving more than is easy.

That kind of giving requires faith. We must trust God that he will take care of us when we give. That kind of giving can cause a great deal of anxiety in our gut and worry in our mind.

But that is the struggle of faith — trusting God even when we can't see how he will provide for us.

That kind of giving also shows our love for God and how we respect him. If you love someone, you want to give them your best. That is true concerning Christ and those who follow him.

May the poor widow be an example for those of us who trust and love Christ and his church. May we be sacrificial givers, trusting God with our money and our lives.

Allow shield of faith to protect you

By Kenneth Williams
1st Bn., 50th Inf. Regt., ITB

"In addition to all this, take up the shield of faith, with which you can extinguish all the flaming arrows of the evil one (Ephesians 6:16 NIV)."

reflections

To the Roman soldier, a shield was one of his greatest pieces of equipment. A shield consisted of a thick piece of wood, approximately 3 by 4 feet, overlaid with leather, framed in iron or bronze and soaked in water prior to battle. Flaming arrows would embed themselves in the shield and be extinguished. With the shield, the soldier could block the strikes and blows of his enemy.

What is faith? In Hebrews 11: 1, (NIV) we read, "Now faith is being sure of what we hope for and certain of what we do not see." In the original language, there is the word, "pragma," which means "a practice or habit."

Faith is not something you have; it is something you practice. We might quite literally translate the verse as, "Faith is practicing confident expectation and being convinced of truth that we may not understand."

Sometimes God is not logical or rational. He does things in ways other than the way we would do them. But we can depend on God.

First he is completely loving. He proved his love for all the world by sending his son Jesus Christ to die for the sins of every person who has ever lived or ever will live. Without God's forgiveness, made possible by Jesus' death, we would be lost in our sins, the consequences of which are death and eternal life in hell.

God demonstrated his love by taking the punishment for our sins. He will always work things out for our good.

Second we can count on God's power. God is creator and sustainer of the universe. He created everything by voice command. He gave an order and it happened, perfectly, just as he said.

What other commander can produce such results? Not only that, but he raised Jesus from the dead. Who else in this world has the power to resurrect people from death? Only God.

Third we can rely on God's wisdom and knowledge. God knows us intimately. He knows our thoughts. He is the perfect father who knows exactly what his children need. He knows our future, for which he is preparing us.

He knows what will be our joys and our sorrows. We can trust God because he loves us, knows us and has the power to help us.

Faith is not wishful thinking. I've been with families who had a member who was critically ill. We've prayed for healing, but the person died.

Then someone in the family said, "If we only had more faith he would have lived." Faith is not convincing yourself that it is God's will to heal. It is convincing yourself that God loves you and will do what is best to demonstrate his power. Then, it is committing yourself and your situation to his care.

Faith is not blind. It is grounded in God's promises. In a crisis, have you ever felt alone? You may feel like God is far away, but he is not. He promise never to leave us nor to forsake us. So even though we may feel like he is far away, he is actually right with us.

Four of Satan's favorite weapons are doubt, discouragement, temptation and trial. He will attempt to get us to question God's truthfulness and faithfulness. He will put things in your way that will cause you to want to give up and quit.

He will make the pleasure of sin look better than the joy and meaningfulness of seeking and obeying God. He will use family, friends, co-workers, anyone and anything to persecute you in an attempt to crush you. Faith is our defense against all the strategies of Satan.

How does one take up the shield of faith? First, believe that God exists.

Hebrews 11:6 (NIV) states, "And without faith, it is impossible to please God because anyone who comes to him must believe that he exists and that he rewards those who earnestly seek him." God is alive. He intervenes in the lives of all people to demonstrate his love and power.

Believe that he rewards those who seek him. He blesses those who obey him. To seek him means to develop a relationship with him. He must be your first priority. You must follow him as a student would follow a teacher, or as a Soldier would follow his commanding officer.

Believe that he keeps his promises. We find God's promises in his word. Faith is produced by hearing God's word. In Romans 10:17 (NIV), we see that, "Consequently, faith comes from hearing the message, and the message is heard through the word of Christ."

The effectiveness of your faith depends on your knowledge of God's word. Your ability to defend yourself spiritually depends on your knowledge of his promises.

How often do you feel defeated? How often do you interact with the Bible by reading, studying, memorizing, meditating or hearing it? There is a direct correlation between the two.

Practice God's promises. Make them a way of life. Do not lean on your own understanding, for our weapons are not earthly, but spiritual.

We cannot defeat Satan by ourselves. But with faith in God we can, conquer all.

As I John 5:3-5 (NIV) states, "This is love for God: to obey his commands. And his commands are not burdensome, for everyone born of God overcomes the world. This is the victory that has overcome the world, even our faith. Who is it that overcomes the world? Only he who believes that Jesus is the son of God."

Teens outfox radio station in charity game

By John W. Peeler
Special to The Bayonet©

The Youth Services Teens may not have had the age and experience, but they outfoxed and outplayed the Foxy 105 Basketeers 82-79 during a charity basketball game Saturday at the Youth Services Gym.

Pandemonium broke out in the stands as the final seconds ticked off the clock in a game where fans and spectators witnessed a 20-point first half lead by the Basketeers' slip into a 3-point defeat to the Teens.

The game, a charity event to support Army Community Services Food Locker, collected more than 125 nonperishable food items that will be donated to the Food Locker at a later date.

The Basketeers jumped out to a quick 20-11 first-quarter lead, led by Timmy McMillian and Brian Thomas who combined for 16 of the 20 first-quarter points and hit 7 of 9 shots from the free-throw line. D.J. Rogers kept the Teens within striking distance of the Basketeers with 5 points, with teammates Sean Jackson, Dennell Rogers and Thaddus Paul scoring one basket each.

The Basketeers kept the momentum in the second quarter by scoring 25 points and kept the Teens off-balance by substituting four fresh players in to the game. The Teens were not able to overcome the sure-shooting and fast-breaking attack of the Basketeers, and by the end of the quarter, fell behind an additional 11 points, ending the half with a 45-25 deficit.

After the halftime intermission, the Teens came on to the court to the cheers and applause of the spectators, appearing refreshed and pumped up.

As the third quarter began, the Teens immediately took control of the game, shutting down the Basketeers and picked up their own offensive play, outscoring the Basketeers offense 2 to 1.

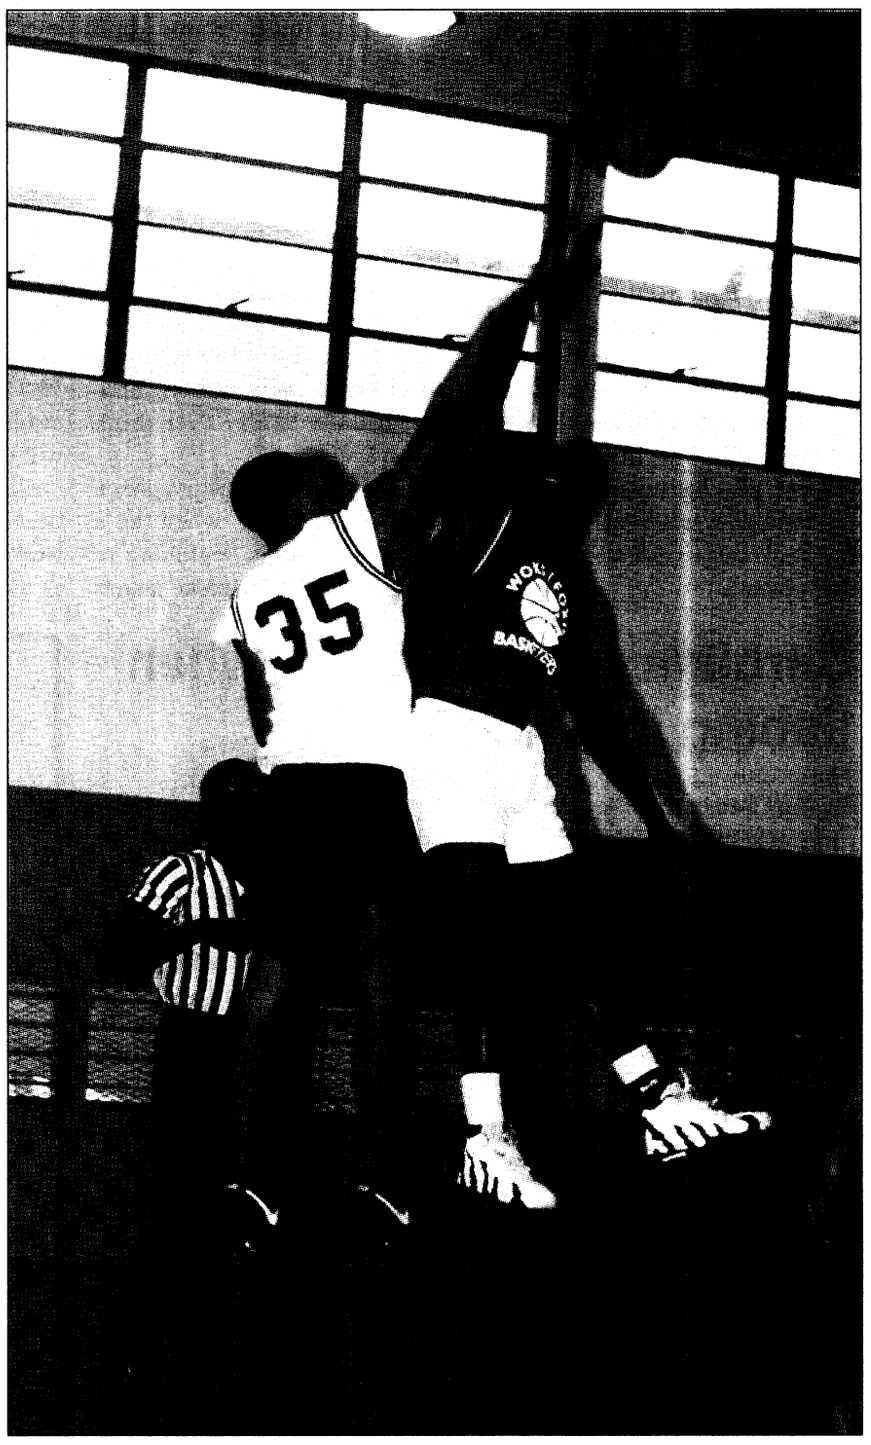
By the end of the third quarter, the Teens had overcome the 20-point deficit and had taken the lead 57-49.

With one quarter left to play, the two teams took the court with diametrically opposed objectives, the Teens needing to hold onto a four-basket lead, and the Basketeers needing a comeback for the win.

The teams battled back and forth and with one minute and 19 seconds left in the game, the Basketeers found themselves within 2 points of tying the Teens.

The Teens kept the pressure on, scoring basket for basket against the Basketeers and with 13 seconds left in the game, had increased their margin to 5 points.

Basketeers' Mike Woods was fouled with six seconds left in the game and went to the free-throw line to attempt to get the Basketeers to within 2 points.



Woods made the first free throw, making the score 82-79.

With only one shot left, the Basketeers moved a player out into the 3-point area with a planned intentional miss of the next free throw.

Woods missed the free-throw, as planned, with the Basketeers snagging the rebound. The ball was passed out into the 3-point area and as the buzzer sounded, the ball caromed off the backboard, missing the goal and preserving the Teens' victory.

With the miss, the last gasp attempt of the Basketeers ended as they succumbed to the Teens 82-79.

The spectators erupted onto the court with the victory and the celebration began.

Soldiers capture 1996 Mayleigh Cup International Match

By Ann O'Leska
US Army Marksmanship Unit

As members of the U.S. International Pistol Team, U.S. Army Marksmanship service pistol shooters Benjamin V. Blackmore and Roger C. Jacobson recently captured first place, winning the coveted Mayleigh Cup International Pistol Team match.

They were among 10 U.S. Pistol Team members and two alternates selected at the Camp Perry National Championships, Camp Perry, Ohio, July 13. Countries that participated and won this year were: first place, the United States; second place, Great Britain; and third place, South Africa.

The Mayleigh Cup is a 50-year-old competitive international match open to English-speaking countries by invitation. Started in 1937 as an individual .22-caliber slow-fire match, it was instituted on behalf of the International Pistol Team of Great Britain as the Mayleigh Cup in 1947 by G. W. Cafferata of Newark, England, who wanted to promote small-bore pistol competition.

Blackmore shot 269 points out of a possible 300 and Jacobson scored 268 points. Individual scores of each U. S. International Pistol Team member were totaled for a team score of 2,688 points out of a possible 3,000 — one of the highest scores ever shot.

"We shot an extremely good score," said Blackmore. "The Mayleigh Cup team captain thought we set a world record and that in itself gave us the confidence to win."

In the slow-fire event, 30 shots were fired, 10 shots at a time, three ties in a row from a distance of 50 meters. Each set of 10 shots is fired in 10 minutes at an international slow-fire target that has a 10-ring center target about two inches in diameter. Shooters fire at the two-inch circle from a distance of half a football field and do this three times in a row. A referee from a different country scores the shooter's target while the shooter waits.

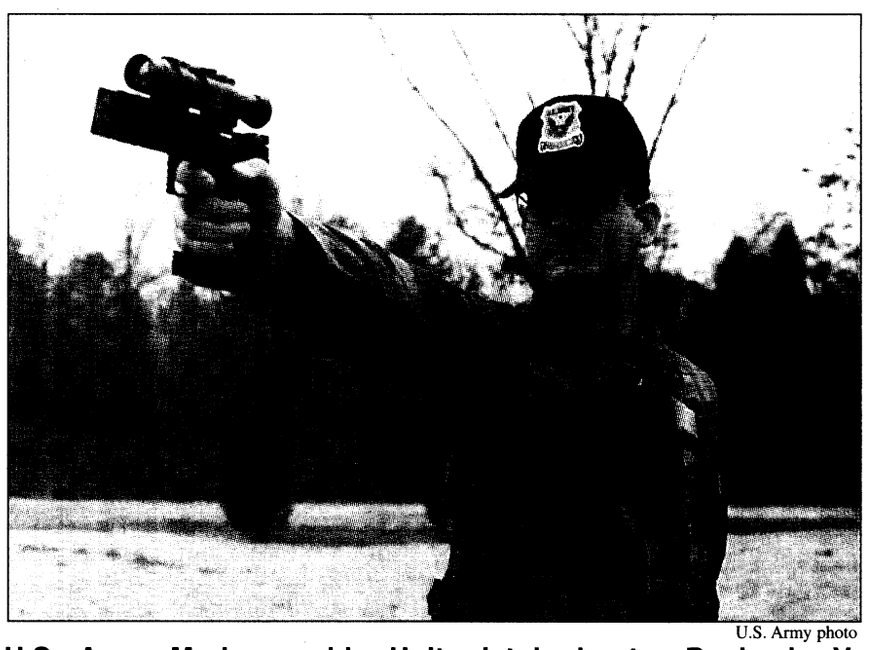
"I was really excited when we shot the match because we all shot so well," Jacobson said. "It was a great feeling to get a medal because I've been waiting so long for the results. It's the first world-level championship I've ever been in."

Camp Perry National Championships is an outdoor match open to all shooters from the United States or from other countries invited to participate with the United States.

Ten members and two alternates are chosen to be on the U.S. International Pistol Team from the top 20 shooters in the .22-caliber pistol, 50-yard, 30-shot slow-fire event. They must be U.S. citizens to make the team.



Approximately 800 competitors, male and female, military and civilian, participated. Twenty best shooters competed against each other to obtain the top 10 winners to be on the U.S. Pistol Team. Among the team members were two USAMU marksmen and a female shooter from the Army Reserves.

Teams from various countries shoot the .22-caliber pistol, 50-meter, 30-shots, slow-fire event at different times throughout the year. Their scores are compiled by the match sponsor, and final results are published after the scores of the last team are in. The 1996 Mayleigh Cup cumulative results were published in February.

Bass pro offers advice for fishing with jigs

By Earl Bentz and Steve Price
Outboard Marine Corporation

When professional angler Ron Shuffield won a national bass tournament on the Arkansas River recently, he did so by using a jig, and he won because he didn't miss fish with the lure the way many anglers do.

"Missing bass when you set the hook with a jig, particularly when you're using a pork trailer, is a common problem in bass fishing," Shuffield, a veteran angler, said. "It happens most often when part of the trailer flips over and gets stuck on your hook point.

"Naturally, when that happens, the hook can't penetrate into the fish's mouth."

Interestingly enough, Shuffield has learned to solve this problem with plastic worms.

"I'll take a straight plastic worm and bite off about one-half inch of it, then thread this over the hook and all the way up the hook shaft under the skirt," he said. "Then I'll put on my pork trailer.

"The small section of plastic keeps the trailer from sliding up the hook, which is what causes it to get stuck on the barb. The plastic doesn't adversely affect the hook-setting in any way, and once I put it on, I hardly ever think about it again."

This time of year, the pro does a lot of jig fishing when he's searching for bass beginning to move shallow. His favorite targets are flooded bushes and trees that offer the last available cover before bass move into actual spawning areas.

"You just have to look at a wide flat or cove the fish will be using," he said, "and determine the last line of cover. This is where the bass will stay until the temperature is right for moving shallow, and it is the first place they will stop when they move back out again.

"It may be 20 yards from the spawning area and it may be 50 or 75 yards out, but if it's the first available cover, that's where they will be."

Shuffield prefers to flip this cover with his jig and pork lures, working individual pieces of cover as thoroughly but as quickly as he can.

"It's a very time-consuming way to fish and a lot of fishermen lose interest if they don't catch bass right away," Shuffield said, "but once you determine where bass are in the brush and how they want your lure presented, you will get your share of bass during a day on the water.

"When I'm flipping, I try different things to get a strike. Sometimes I'll hop the jig right on the bottom and other times I'll flip over a limb and stop the jig six or eight inches above the bottom and start shaking it.

"Sooner or later, if I flip to enough bushes, I'll catch the fish. Bass this time of year can't resist a jig."

Bass chapter conducts tournament at Harding

Tracy Queen
BASS Club

The local chapter of the Georgia Bass Anglers Sportsman Society Federation conducted its February tournament recently at Lake Harding, Ala.

Fishing during the tournament was difficult because of the cold muddy waters, which averaged 49 degrees, and wind gusts up to 15 mph.

While 18 fishermen participated in the tournament, only 16 fish were caught during the eight-hour event for a total weight of 29 pounds, 5 ounces.

Fishermen used a variety of catching methods during the tournament with the black and blue pig and jigs, 1/4-ounce or 3/8-ounce with pork or plastic blue trailer, being the most popular.

First place honors for the tournament went to Leroy Jones with a total weight of 6 pounds, 15 ounces, and Randy Blake captured second place with a total catch of 5 pounds. Chris Cox finished in third place with a total weight of 4 pounds, 8 ounces, and also brought in the big fish for the tournament that weighed 3 pounds, 5 ounces.

The next tournament will be Saturday and Sunday at Lake Seminole, Fla.

Carolina rigs work well when fishing in shallow water

By Earl Bentz and Steve Price
Outboard Marine Corporation

With the spring bass spawning season about to start, Randy Dearman has been busy preparing Carolina rigs, complete with heavy sinkers and big plastic lizards, a selection that surprises many anglers.

"Contrary to what many believe, the Carolina rig is an excellent technique to use in shallow water, " said Dearman, a veteran Texas guide.

"The key to the Carolina rig's success is that it presents a very natural-looking lure like a lizard in a very natural, free-swimming manner," he said. "It allows you to cover a lot of water in a hurry, too, which is important in spring because bass tend to be at a variety of depths this time of year."

In its basic form, the Carolina rig consists of a soft plastic lure like a worm or lizard tied to a two to four foot leader. The leader is tied to one terminal of a swivel while the running line from the reel, with a heavy slip sinker threaded on, is tied to the opposite terminal.

While Dearman fished Carolina rigs in shallow water a long time, one experience during a tournament on Alabama's Lake Guntersville proved to him how effective the technique can be. In two days of competition he caught 35 pounds of fish in less than two feet of water.

"My basic shallow water Carolina rig is nearly identical to the one I use in fishing deep water," said the pro. "I use a slightly lighter sinker, such as one-half ounce, but my leader still ranges from 24 to 36 inches.

"I stay with the heavier sinker because it makes casting easier. It doesn't appear to spook bass unless it lands right on top of them, so I try to cast beyond my actual target area and work the lure out to the fish," he said.

"When the bass are really close to the shore, I may cast up on the bank and crawl the lure and sinker into the water," Dearman said .

Choosing leader length, said Dearman, is trial and error. He starts with one about three feet long and gradually shortens it until he starts catching bass. When he wants to keep his lure floating higher off the bottom, he starts with a longer one.

"I really think a six-inch plastic worm is one of the best lures on a Carolina rig, too," Dearman said. "It looks natural, bass don't seem to want it around them when they're spawning, and it's large enough to draw strikes from a big fish."

"Overall, the Carolina rig is one of the most versatile fishing techniques available to fishermen," Dearman said. "That's why we like it so much, especially this time of year."

Light tackle brings more strikes

By Earl Bentz and Steve Price
Outboard Marine Corporation

"Light tackle is not a cure-all, but in most cases it does bring more strikes."

That's the opinion of former world champion bass fisherman Guido Hibdon, generally regarded as one of the top light line and small lure anglers in professional tournament bass fishing.

Hibdon's definition of light tackle includes lures ranging in weight from 1/8 down to 1/32 ounce and lines testing between 6 and 10 pounds. He uses these with open face spinning reels and sensitive rods with fast tips.

"I've been using tackle like this for more than 35 years, so I'm comfortable with it," the pro from Missouri said, "but a lot of fishermen have trouble using light tackle. It's a lot different from ordinary bait-casting equipment so it takes some practice before you feel comfortable using it.'

"The primary difference between light and heavy tackle," Hibdon said, "is how much more active lures are when fished on lighter lines."

"This is the true key to light tackle fishing," he said. "Even 1/8 ounce lures work much better on six or eight pound test line than on 10 pound test line. The heavier the line, the stiffer it is, and the stiffer it is, the less a lure can move."

At the same time, said the pro, there is also a big difference between a lure weighing 1/8 ounce and one weighing 3/16 ounce.

"The real difference is in the rate of fall," Hibdon said. "Naturally, a heavier lure falls faster than a lighter one, but because the rate of fall is really critical in light tackle, you have to learn to distinguish between the two lures, and that just takes a lot of practice."

"In light tackle fishing, in which the majority of lures are jig-type baits, most strikes come as the lure is falling, so the best way to fish such a lure is by creating multiple falls," Hibdon said.

Thus, hopping or jigging these lures up off the bottom is normally more effective than crawling them along the bottom. I don't work my lures very much, but I do try to create multiple falls."

Many anglers associate light tackle with unusually short rods, often less than 5 feet in length. Hibdon, however, does not like short rods and certainly doesn't believe they're necessary for light lines and lures.

"I prefer a spinning rod just over six feet in length," he said. "To me, having a fast, sensitive tip is the most important part of a light tackle rod. That tip is what allows you to cast a light lure, feel a barely detectable strike, and then set the hook."

"Going from heavier tackle to such light equipment is a hard transition," he said, "but once they gain confidence in it, most anglers really enjoy it. The lures work better and generate more strikes, and that's what fishing is all about."
