Annual post clean-up set for April 13-17

Community Life Office

It's time to clean up around your quarters area. The post cantonment and housing area clean-up is scheduled for April 13-17. For assistance with removal of large debris (scrap, aluminum, tree limbs), contact your area coordinator or community life NCO. Residents may pick up pine straw, lime and fertilizer at the U-Do-It Center located at Building 385 (Vibbert Avenue). All yard waste must be disposed of in durable plastic containers (with lid) or Directorate of Public Works (DPW) approved paper bags before placing by curbside for pick-up. These bags may be obtained from the U-Do-It Center.

Area Coordinators will make initial area inspections and issue deficiency notices April 10. Residents will correct deficiencies before reinspections by major subordinate commanders and community life NCOs April 15. Final inspections will take place on April 17. For more information, contact the Community Life NCOIC for your housing area.

Areas of Special Interest:

Area of Responsibility. Residents are responsible for the areas immediately adjacent to their government quarters. This includes lawns, shrubbery, curbing, gutters and driveways. This area extends to the surrounding streets and halfway to adjacent quarters, but not to exceed 150 feet. Sponsors occupying government quarters are directly responsible for policing these areas and will accomplish the following:

•Mow and edge grass. Edging walkways and curbs by digging V-shaped ditches adjacent to the pavement is not authorized. Edging grooves should not exceed 1-inch in width and be adjacent to the pavement. Placing gravel or stone adjacent to pavement is not authorized.

•Prune and trim shrubbery

•Remove trash, litter and leaves from lawn areas. Raking of leaves, litter, etc. into streets is not authorized. Debris should be placed in durable plastic containers (with lid) or DPW approved paper bags and placed at the refuse collection point.

•Sweep sidewalks and hard surface areas.

•Remove vines and other vegetation from buildings and fences.

•Maintain existing approved fencing, to include cleaning, painting and the repair or replacement of broken or missing items.

•Eliminate unsightly storage of household items including, barbecue grills, bicycles, toys, etc.

Refuse Pick-up. Occupants will comply with the procedures listed below when disposing of trash and refuse.

•Household refuse will be placed in sealed plastic garbage bags or covered trash cans. Recycle items will be placed in recycle bins. Containers should be placed curbside in front of the quarters no later than 7:30 a.m. on the regularly scheduled day of pick-up in each family housing area. Washers, dryers and other non-refrigerant bulk items may be placed at curbside with household refuse. Residents should call Glenn Todd, DPW, at 545-2117 to arrange pick-up of refrigerant items.

•Yard waste will be picked up on Mondays in family housing areas.

•Residents who need to dispose of tires and batteries should contact Fran Allor, Defense Reutilization and Marketing Office, at 545-3719 for proper disposal. The Oil Recycle Point, Building 4000, Harmony Church at 544-6142, should be used to properly dispose of used oil. For more information, call Walter Nichols, DPW, at 545-1007.

For more information concerning the housing area clean up, call the housing area Community Life Centers. The numbers are listed below.

East Main Post, Master Sgt. Larry Perkins, Building 359, 545-2830

Too hot to handle

Jack M. Greenlee, forestry supervisor for fire management in natural resources management branch, conducts a prescribed burn on the K-23 training area. The purpose of the exercise is to reduce dead grass and trees to prevent catastrophic fires. According to Greenlee, the prescribed burn also helps to promote bio-diversity and create a variety of habitats for different species of wildlife. Prescribed burns will take place Monday through April 4.

Promotion changes help Soldiers

Pvt.1 Amy L. Nyland
Bayonet staff writer

During the last three years promotions have been undergoing a facelift. The Department of the Army is cracking down and getting promoted means harder work. All of the changes mean both good and bad news for Soldiers.

Most Soldiers know that a promotion means not only more money but also greater responsibility, but to earn that it takes more than just sitting around.

According to Sgt. Ronald K. Anderson, NCOIC of promotions, 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment, the promotion office is there to help the Soldiers understand what it takes to get promoted.

"I don't get why someone would come into the military if they didn't want to advance," Anderson said. "Getting promoted is something Soldiers should want and if you want something badly enough you will do what it takes to get it."

Anderson said two changes that have taken place in the last three years and another change which takes affect Oct. 1 can make the process of getting promoted more difficult. However for those who are willing to go the extra mile, the changes could mean getting promoted quicker and easier.

Anderson said one of the new changes is the procedure of reevaluation over the old method of recomputation. Under the old system of recomputation Soldiers would come in annually to update promotion packets. Now with reevaluation after a soldier gains 20 points the packets can be updated.

"What makes the process of reevaluation so good is that you can do it at anytime you are ready," Anderson said. "This system causes the Soldiers to want to work harder because its going to give them incentive to get out there and earn their 20 points."

The other change directly affects E-4's going to E-5's. No longer can a Soldier be promoted without first going through the Primary Leadership Development Course (PLDC). Now Soldiers must go to a promotion board and then an NCOES course. In turn Soldiers cannot even get into PLDC without being promotable, Anderson said.

The third change is scheduled to take effect Oct. 1 and is directly related to reevaluations. The change states that any Soldier who has not done a reevaluation or updated their promotion packet within two years from the last action done will automatically be removed from the promotion standing list, Anderson said.

"We are not talking just competing again," he said. What is going to happen is we are going to mail your packet back to you and the next time you do a reevaluation it will be after you have gone to the board ... again."

Anderson said one of the reasons it is so difficult to get promoted is because there are Soldiers sitting on the promotion list who aren't doing anything.

"This new system is good because it will take those who aren't doing anything out of the running and give those who are working hard a greater chance at getting promoted," Anderson said.

According to Anderson, military and civilian education are a huge part of the promotion process.

"Military education is one of the easiest ways to earn promotion points," Anderson said. "What I think should be stressed is you have to go to school to be promotable. Don't play around. If you make the cut-off , go to school and get the points you need to get promoted. The military offers so much education that if you work hard from the very beginning, by the time you are ready to be promoted you can completely max out military education with correspondence courses alone."

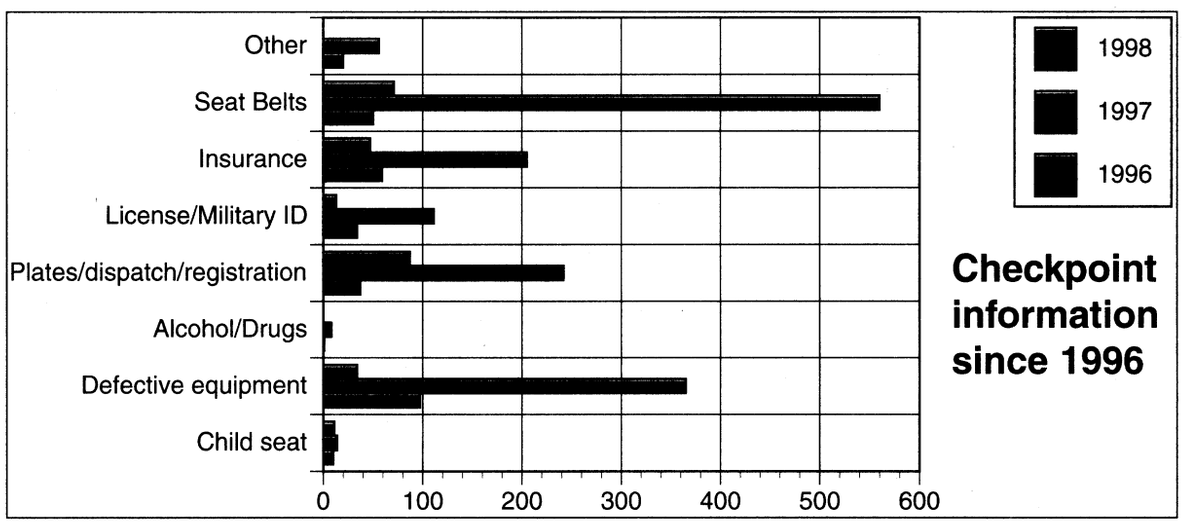
Anderson said, preparation for the board is another essential area in getting promoted.

He said Soldiers should not go before the board with the minimal amount of points. He suggests Soldiers earn as many points as possible before facing the board in case things do no go as planned. That way Soldiers have something to fall back on.

"We really encourage Soldiers to do what they must to get promoted," Anderson said. "Come down here (promotion office) and talk to us, ask us the questions you need to ask about getting promoted. This is a big deal. This has to do with career advancement, money and taking care of Soldiers. It shouldn't be taken lightly."

MP vehicle checkpoints ensure post safety

Erin A. Nash
Special to the Bayonet©



The next time you're driving along Fort Benning and get flagged to pull over into a safety checkpoint, don't worry. The military police (MP) are doing their part to help ensure the safety of the entire post and one of the ways they are doing this is with safety checkpoints.

The checkpoints were started by post Commanding General Maj. Gen. Carl F. Ernst in September of '96 as a result of a Soldier being killed after he was thrown from the bed of a pickup truck, said Maj. Ronald G. Jones, chief of law enforcement division.

"It's all about safety," Jones said.

The average time it takes to go through a checkpoint is three to five minutes if there are no deficiencies, Jones said.

"The MP's will check to make sure you have your license, ID if you're military, proof of insurance and registration. They will also check safety equipment such as lights, turn signals, the windshield and horn," Jones explained.

In the 11 checkpoints done so far in 1998, 34 citations have been given for defective equipment.

The biggest problem encountered in 1998 has been license plates and registration. Eighty-seven citations have been given.

"Of the 1,995 vehicles that have been inspected in 1998, we've given out 263 total citations. For things like a broken headlight, we give the driver an Armed Forces traffic ticket," Jones said. "They are given the opportunity to correct some equipment deficiencies within 72 hours and report to the MP station. If they do, the ticket is dismissed.

"For things like not wearing a seatbelt or not having the proper restraints on a child, offenders receive a district court violations notice that can result in a fine."

"Both the state law in Georgia and Army regulations require the use of a seat belt. Children four and under must be in a child passenger restraining system approved by the U.S. Department of Transportation," Jones said.

Eleven citations have been written in 1998 for child restraint violations compared to 14 for the entire year of 1997 and 10 in 1996.

Motorists are subject to a checkpoint stop anytime.

"We do checkpoints at all hours of the day, any day of the week, all over post," Jones said.

"The checkpoints are important because it lets people know that Fort Benning cares about safety. What we're really doing is pointing out things people weren't aware of. We're trying to make it as safe a place as possible."

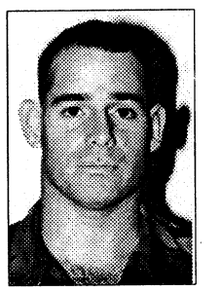
Spring marks beginning of sunshine, sports

Sgt. Marc G. Turchin
Bayonet staff writer

It's the time of love. It's the time of new beginnings — flowers begin to bloom and the boys of summer are getting their early workouts. Spring is in the air and with it comes the welcome of hot weather and many activities.



commentary

Spring is the time of year when all of us want to get outside to do something. Most of us spent the winter bundled up next to a fire or the heater attempting to escape the cold winds and temperatures of the winter. I'm from Florida, spring isn't much different from winter, but I've heard stories from people from the north.

Spring is the time when grass turns a deep green, flowers show off all types of colors and the sky, when it's not raining, is such a mesmerizing color of blue, it puts me to sleep while I'm trying to get a tan. What's not to like?

With all that in mind, there are many ways to spend a warm spring day.

My first and foremost priority is to shed the one attribute that proves winter has just ended — I'm as white as a marshmallow.

It's time to return to the ocean or the Gulf of Mexico (which is much closer) to lay on my fifth point of contact and pray to the sun to change me from marshmallow to the color of a fine cigar.

I love lying on the white sands of the beach. The sun, with its boiling heat, blazes down at me and I've drenched myself with dark tanning oil. Of course I use oil with some protection from the sun's rays so I don't get skin cancer. That's important. Anyway, the sand beneath me is too hot to walk on. The sounds of the waves crashing onto the sands of the beach sends me into a deep sleep with no cares in the world.

Two hours later I awake and the storm clouds are hovering over me. My face feels as if it just got out of the oven and my eyelids are stuck to the top of my cheeks. My deep, sun-fried arms and legs begin what is a very painful move to clean-up my area and get indoors before the afternoon thunderstorm floods down on me. That is one way to spend a spring day. In your case, I hope you take better care of your skin.

For those of you who don't like the outdoors as much, spring provides most of us a time for something that is usually desperately needed — spring cleaning.

This operation includes going through old clothes, old files or just about anything else old. Go through the attic and throw away those clothes that you know will never fit anymore. Most people only hold on to these things to remember what they once were. I've got three words for you, "get over it!"

Things to do like turning towels into clean-up rags, washing underneath the sink, cleaning the very tops of ceiling fans and, for the women out there, downsizing the shoe collection from 50 to 20 pairs. For some this task is hated, but needed. Others plan it weeks in advance and get the family to make lists of what they think needs to go. However it's done, there is nothing bad about the end result.

Spring is also a time for sports. Whether it's on television or in the backyard, spring-time sports is an all season event.

There's March Madness. Kentucky, Stanford, North Carolina and Utah will go head to head this weekend for the NCAA national championship. My heart goes with Kentucky because I love the SEC, but I think the Tar Heels will pull it out. But the tournament is the most fun. Watching the upsets, last second shots and the unlikeliest heroes is something I look forward to each spring.

Baseball season is only weeks away. This year we have the addition of the Tampa Bay Devil Rays and the Arizona Diamondbacks. I love the time of the year when I can turn on ESPN to watch Sportscenter and see loads of baseball highlights. Spring training is a fun time because all of us can see which team looks like they have a chance to win it all. With all the trades that happened, I doubt the Marlins will repeat. My Mets almost always look promising during spring training, but I know history — and history has a way of repeating itself.

Spring offers so much to do for everyone. It is a renewed time of energy, giving us unlimited activities to choose from. My advice is to enjoy the beautiful weather which is about to engulf us. Spring is the time for change. So go outside for a change and leave the winter coat inside.

Georgia congressman congratulates post

I am honored to congratulate Fort Benning for winning the Army community of Excellence Chief of Staff Award. This is the sixth consecutive year that Fort Benning has been recognized as the best large Army installation in the United States.

The award is indicative of the ability of professionalism of the tens of thousands of Soldiers that pass through Fort Benning's gate each year and of the successful partnership that exists between Fort Benning, Columbus and Phenix City communities.

The Soldiers and civilians who work under the leadership of Maj. Gen. Carl F. Ernst and his staff continue to reinforce Fort Benning's long-standing commitment to military quality, focusing on the watch words, "First in training, first in readiness and first in quality of life."

Fort Benning constitutes a cornerstone of our national defense. To all of the personnel at Fort Benning, I offer my sincere thanks and congratulations for a job well done.

— Congressman Mac Collins as cited in the Congressional Record

Post deserving of title as best post in Army

Fort Benning is always busy. We train some 45,000 Soldiers a year and deploy and redeploy our Soldiers to training sites and trouble spots around the world.

We are also in the business of processing and deploying thousands of Soldiers, Marines, airmen, sailors and civilians to wherever foreign policy demands.

It's all happening at Fort Benning.

And because it's all happening at Fort Benning, nearly everyone wants to come here and see for themselves.

Since the start of the year, we've had the Secretary of the Army here twice, a congressional delegation on a fact-finding visit to the U.S. Army School of the Americas, the vice president, the sergeant major of the Army, former chief of staff of the Army, Gen. Gordon R. Sullivan and the Japanese equivalent to our chairman of the joint chiefs of staff.

And that names just a few.

Yet each visit went smoothly, a true tribute to your professionalism, diligence and ability to perform several tasks simultaneously.

As I escorted our dignitaries about post, I was proud of the way you executed your duties and then some, not only during normal duty hours, but well into the night and on weekends too.

You're certainly deserving of the title: "Best Post in the Army." My hat is off to all of you. Hooah.

— Maj. Gen. Carl F. Ernst
Commanding General

History month honors women's contributions

Sgt. 1st Class Evelyn Richardson
29th Infantry Regiment

Women's History Month is observed and celebrated during the month of March. At Fort Benning there were many activities that highlighted the accomplishments of women in our society.

The observance is a time to reflect upon the contributions and achievements women made since the beginning of our nation. One of the great things about these observances is they enable us to see history in a different light. "Hidden" stories of women's contributions throughout our nation's past dating back to Colonial times are unveiled during celebrations.

The value of American military women has been recognized, even by our foes. After World War II, one high ranking German officer said the following in an interview: "How wise you were to bring your women into your military and into your labor force. Had we done that initially as you did, it could well have affected the whole course of the war. We would have found out as you did that women are equally effective and for some skills superior to men."

It takes an extraordinary woman to exert mental and physical powers under difficulty. Many women have exercised these traits by serving in all branches of the military ranging from administration to Infantry. Some of the women who have contributed to the "legacy of women's rights" by serving in the Infantry include: Molly Pitcher, 7th Pennsylvania Regiment; Deborah Sampson, 4th Massachusetts; Jennie Hodgers, 95th Illinois Volunteer Infantry; Sarah Edwards, 90th Illinois Infantry; Sarah Rosetta Wakeman, Marine U.S.A; Emmeline Piggott, Confederate spy; Pauline C Cushman, Major, Union Army spy.

I believe many contributions by women to our nation have gone unnoticed. I think such observances as Women's History Month are therefore necessary to enlighten ourselves and future generations.

Considering the outstanding contributions and achievement of American women, it is difficult to foresee an Army without women.

Controlled burning set

Controlled burning of woodland areas will takes place Monday through April 4. If weather permits, the following compartments will be affected: B-4, B-6 C-3, D-1 D-4, D-6, D-11, D-13, D-15 E-6, E-7, F-3, F-4, G-5, H-3, K-9, K-21, K-23, L-1, L-2, O-8, O-11, O-12, Q-2, Q-7, R-1, T-4, T-5, X-1, and AA.

Burning will occur in pine stands within these compartments to enhance endangered species habitat and training areas.

Personnel proposing to use these areas for recreational purposes must vacate these areas prior to 9:30 a.m. daily. Training units using compartments adjacent to those listed above may experience drift smoke and are reminded to exercise caution while traveling in these areas due to the potential for reduced visibility.

For more information, call Jack Greenlee, Natural Resources Management Branch at 544-6120.

Drop box available for job applications

Based on a cooperative effort between Local Union 54, American Federation of Government Employees, the Southeast Civilian Personnel Operations Center and Fort Benning's Civilian Personnel Advisory Center, a drop box has been installed inside the front entrance of Meloy Hall, Building 6. The box allows applicants the option of submitting job applications rather than submission through the mail. It also makes it easier to guarantee the deadline for applying for a position is met and reduces the cost of postage.

Employees are encouraged to take advantage of the drop box service and to make certain applications are placed in the drop box prior to the closing date of announcements.

For more information, call the Directorate of Civilian Personnel, Management Services Division, at 545-5562 or 545-7657.

Tax centers announce hours of operation

The Fort Benning Tax Office is in Classroom 1, Infantry Hall. The hours are 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Monday through Friday. The 3rd Brigade Tax Center is located in the Brigade Legal Center, Building 9025.

Electronic tax filing is available for most federal returns. Many state and federal tax forms are also available. Limited evening and weekend dates will be scheduled. To file your taxes, you will need your W-2s, Social Security card for you and your dependents, Power of Attorney (if applicable), 1099 statements and other tax documents.

For more information, call Capt. David Barrett at 545-8859.

IG office seeks two inspectors

The Inspector General's Office needs two Soldiers to join the Inspection Branch. These positions require two Soldiers with the MOS 92Y40-supply inspector and 63H40-automotive inspector.

Soldiers eligible for the positions will have no more than 18 months on station or possess assignment instructions. If selected the Soldier will be assigned to the IG office for two years.

For more information, call Maj. Bob Popowski at 545-3961 or 545-4780.

Union meeting set

The America Federation of Government Employees, Local 54, plans meetings for the second Thursday of each month in Building 235. All union members and prospective members are invited to attend. For more information, call 545-5379.

ACCP courses available on the web

Soldiers can enroll in the Army Correspondent Course Program through the internet.

A catalog of courses is available through the Army Institute for Professional Development home page at http://206.135.244.97/accp/aipd htm.

The address is http://www.atsc-army.org.

ID Card Section takes appointments

Main Post ID Card Branch has an appointment system for more convenient service. Personnel with appointments have priority over walk-ins and are seen within five minutes of their scheduled appointment time.

Walk-ins are always welcome but appointments are highly encouraged. The appointment desk phone number is 545-4068. Operating hours are 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday to Friday, and 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. Wednesday.

Regulations require proper PT uniform

Post regulations require that Soldiers wear the standard Army physical fitness training uniform for PT from 6 to 7:30 a.m. on duty days, whether units organize PT or Soldiers conduct it on their own. Reflective vests are required.

The only approved exceptions are the School of the Americas, the Ranger Training Brigade and the 75th Ranger Regiment. These units have an exception to wear a different uniform, but they must remain in uniform.

Fort Benning to test tornado sirens

Fort Benning will test the tornado sirens at noon, the first Saturday of every month. The test will not occur in the event of bad weather.

Special Forces briefs continue on post

The Special Forces recruiting office conducts briefings at 6 p.m. every Tuesday and 10 a.m. and 2 p.m. every Wednesday in McVeigh Hall, Building 75B, Room 408. For more information, call Sgt. 1st Class David Boyer at 545-3079 or 545-6778.

Hawaii pet import requirements change

The state of Hawaii now requires all dogs and cats entering the state to have an electronic microchip implant (issued by the state itself). Additionally, there is now an option for a 30-day quarantine if specific pre-requirements are met well in advance.

If you have pets and anticipate a PCS to Hawaii in the near future, please contact Veterinary Service at 545-4444 or 545-5690 for more information.

AG simplifies outprocessing

Staff Sgt. Ashbel Pastor
Adjutant General Personnel Office

In efforts to simplify outprocessing for Soldiers, an appointment system was developed for more convenient service. The Welcome Center has an automated system to evaluate the specific outprocessing requirements of each Soldier and to schedule all necessary appointments. Personnel with appointments have priority over walk-ins and are seen within five minutes of the scheduled appointment time.

Installation clearance papers are issued to the Soldier 10 working days prior to the scheduled departure date. Soldiers should call the Welcome Center three to four weeks prior to the departure date at 545-7510 or come by Building 2607 in Soldiers' Plaza to schedule an appointment to pick up installation clearance papers.

Soldiers should report to the Welcome Center for their outprocessing appointment in the proper duty uniform and with all the necessary documentation. Each Soldier should have a pickup date for household goods and a final housing clearance date for termination of government quarters prior to arriving at the Welcome Center.

It is the Soldiers' chain of command and unit Personnel Action Center (PAC) responsibility to ensure the Soldiers have the proper paperwork prior to arriving at the Welcome Center for scheduled appointments. Soldiers without the proper documentation will be returned to their respective unit PAC to assure these Soldiers have the proper paperwork on hand once they return to the Welcome Center.

The required documents are:

•One copy of orders and all amendments (Unit PAC)

•DA Form 31, Leave Authorization, with a signature and title of unit commander on block 13. If Soldier is authorized Permissive Temporary Duty Assignment (PTDY), he or she must have a signature and title from a lieutenant colonel or above in accordance with AR 600-8-10, SEC 5-31. (Unit PAC)

•Port call information for Soldiers PCSing overseas, Building 2628 Soldiers' Plaza

•Completed medical-dental preparation paperwork for overseas movement (DA Form 4036-R), which must be signed by a medical and dental officer at the unit TMC and dental clinic)

•Transportation paperwork (Property Counseling Sheet), Building 280, Main Post.

Walk-ins are always welcome, however sometimes a Soldier will have to wait a little longer because of appointments already scheduled.

The primary hours of operation for outprocessing and issue of installation clearance papers are 8 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. Monday through Friday, by appointment only. Soldiers should make an appointment for this outprocessing scheduling.

For more information, call the Welcome Center NCOIC or staff personnel at 545-7510 or 545-2747.

Officers find their way with land navigation

2nd Lt. Brandon del Pozo
Infantry Officer Basic Course

It's dark out. A Soldier only has a compass, a map, a red-lens flashlight, a pencil and a protractor. He has to find at least three stakes in the ground given their grid coordinates. The stakes are spread out over fairly dense woodland and if it takes a minute more than three hours, he fails. Welcome to Infantry Officer Basic Course (IOBC) land navigation — now get moving.

Company B, 2nd Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment, Class 3-98, spent March 16-20 in the field at Furhman, Yankee and Lightning roads learning how to get themselves — and one day soon their rifle platoons — from point A to point B at day or night. The Soldiers were using only the most primitive tools: a map of the land, the Earth's magnetic field and the length of their strides to estimate the distance covered.

This may seem like a far cry from the global positioning systems most units use to get around, but the training emphasis is on teaching junior officers a skill that will serve them even if technology fails.

"Factors such as the enemy, counter measures, very dense vegetation or equipment failure might cause Global Positioning System (GPS) systems to go down, but a unit still needs to be at the right place at the right time. You are asking for trouble by relying solely on GPS," said Maj. Thomas MacDonald, company commander.

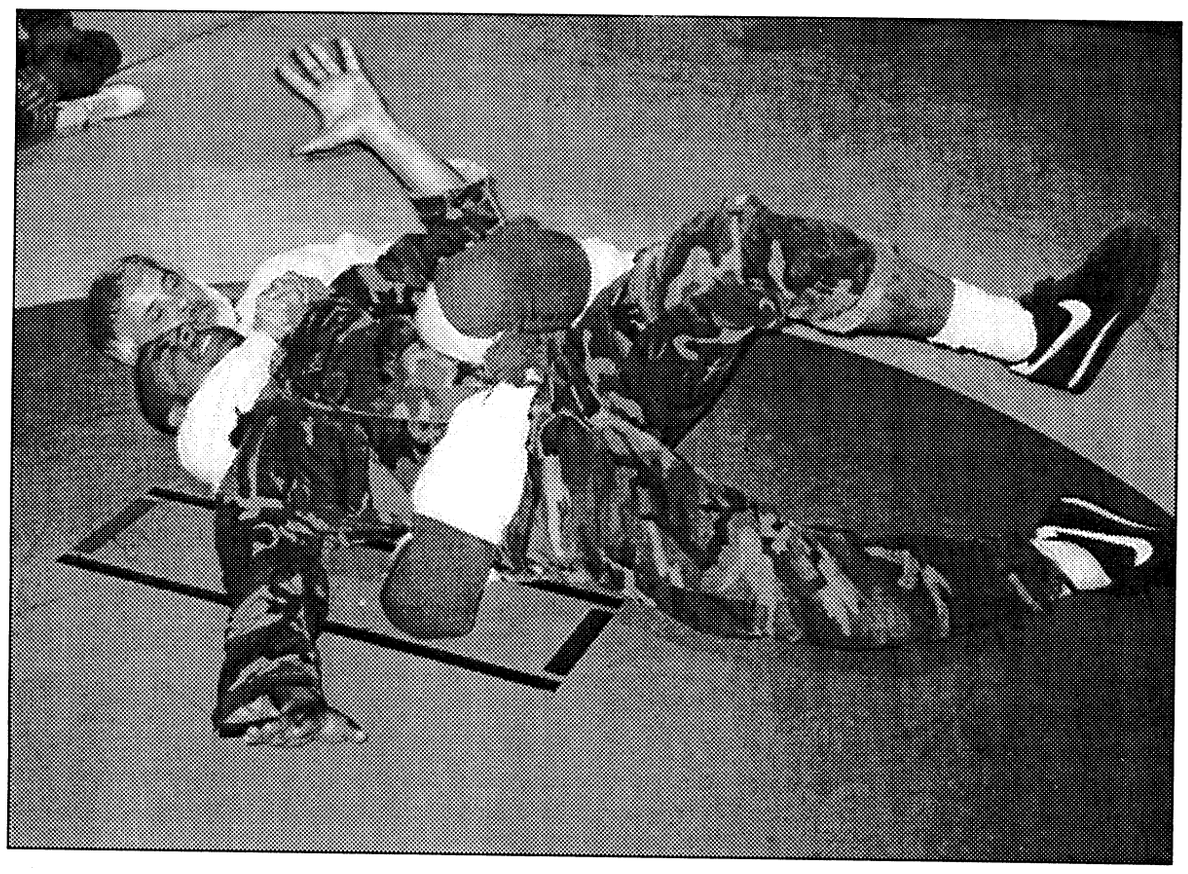
The company received classes on terrain association or how to interpret the features on a map as they relate to the lay of the land. This was complemented with classes on the use of the compass to follow azimuths and each individual Soldier's pace count. Along with plotting grid coordinates, this is all a Soldier theoretically needs to keep from getting lost in the woods.

Still, some instructors padded the basics with less conventional methods.

Staff Sgt. Santana Perez, Jr., 1st platoon, advised that "one method, which only works sometimes, is to run up to a tall tree and shake it. When you see that tree moving on the map, you know where you are. Or, you can look very closely on the ground to find the grid lines." The platoon's consensus was that these were backup skills.

The first practice run was executed in buddy teams for both the three-hour day and night phases. The second day saw Soldiers sent out on their own to find at least six of the assigned points in daylight and three of five points at night — again in three hours each. To receive credit for finding a point, the lieutenants recorded the number imprinted on the point onto a score sheet.

For the actual test, Soldiers were moved to a new course south of the practice location and this time had to imprint on their scorecards a pattern which could only be obtained from a specific hole punch attached to each point.



When all was said and done, more than 70 percent of the officers met the standard on the first try.

MacDonald's reaction to those who did not meet the standard was encouraging. He said, "the course is about as difficult as the one used at Ranger School. I am not upset by Soldiers failing. This is their basic Infantry course and many of them have not practiced these skills in a long time. This is their chance to learn."

Those who needed additional training were sent out the next Saturday morning to continue practicing. "Run faster," was Perez's advice to students who found the necessary points but could not return to base in less than three hours.

The rest of the company took the weekend to rest their feet from a week of six hours a day of constant movement over dirt roads and broken terrain and supplemental battle drill training that served as the course's introduction to moving fire teams and squads in battle.

"This week gave myself and my fellow platoon leaders the confidence not only to fight the Infantry battle, but to find the battle in the first place," said 2nd. Lt. Ryan Earleywine of first platoon. "When I say 'Follow me!' I'll mean it."

Courses help get Soldiers in shape

Spc. Michelle J. Davis
Bayonet staff writer

Physical fitness has always been an important part of the Army and combat readiness.

Troy State University offers a degree program to Soldiers and civilians interested in developing fitness leadership and management skills.

"This program is unlike any other physical education program in the U.S. and Army today," said Dr. Ed Thomas, creator of the program. "We focus on physical training (PT) and martial arts."

"Tomorrow's high-tech battlefields will be faster and more lethal then ever before," added Thomas. "Our off-duty program is designed to keep tomorrow's leaders thinking about how to improve physical training for combat."

While the program is open to both Soldiers and civilians, Thomas said that it is directly related to Army physical training.

"This program allows Soldiers to take what they have learned and directly apply it back in their units," Thomas said. "Our overall goal is to teach the students well enough so that they can go back to their units and improve their PT program."

Thomas added that the university has a good working relationship with the U.S. Army Physical Fitness School and many of the program's concepts follow the fitness school's training doctrine.

The program's curriculum is split into three areas to include pedagogical, restorative and martial arts.

The pedagogical component focuses on the theoretical side of fitness with classes like anatomy and nutrition.

The restorative arts component includes rational exercises that bring the body to its highest state of readiness.

"Take running for example," Thomas said. "Just running every day will not make a person physically fit in itself. By mixing different activities, you will work all areas of the body creating an equilibrium."

The martial arts component is divided into three ranges which include close range, medium range and weapons.

Close range classes consists of grappling. The medium range classes include techniques in kicking and striking opponents. The weapons classes teach students how to use items such as knives, sticks and handguns.

Air Force Staff Sgt. Derrick Gurley, who is assigned to the 75th Ranger Regiment, recently began taking classes through the university and said he has already noticed a change in the way he conducts PT.

"I have learned how to train so that my body can get the maximum benefit from a workout," Gurley said. "The different techniques and aspects of fitness I learned have really made a difference in my performance."

The next semester for Troy State begins Tuesday. Unit classes also can be scheduled if more than 15 students are interested in a class.

Soldiers provide protection for dignitaries

Sgt. 1st Class Lisa Hunter
Fort Belvoir Public Affairs Office

FORT BELVOIR, Va. — The crack of pistol shots and the squealing of car tires caused sudden confusion, then a life-and-death struggle ensued. It looked like the filming of a police show for television. It was all over before the gun smoke cleared away.

For the Soldiers of the Criminal Investigation Command's Protective Services Unit, it was just a regular day of training.

"We have between 40 and 50 agents who provide protective services," explained Special Agent Thomas Le Brun, training NCO for the Protective Services Unit. "We provide protection for people like the secretary of defense and the Joint Chiefs of Staff. We're the Army's 'Secret Service.'"

The agents attend a three-week specialized protective services school before being assigned to the unit, but continuous scenario training helps the agents hone their skills for unexpected events that could occur during a real-life mission.

Fort Belvoir CID agents and military police teamed up for protective services training in February on Fort Belvoir. With military police Soldiers acting like would-be terrorists, the four PSU special agents played out a scenario of providing security for a visiting dignitary. "This was training for our new agents. We have two new active-duty agents and two reserve agents who we are training," Le Brun explained. "The 'ambassador' has an itinerary of several places he's visiting on Fort Belvoir, and at every location, there will be an attempted attack on him, but the agents don't know that."

The agents work in teams. One works as the advance team, going ahead of the ambassador, checking the security of the area, speaking to people in the area to assess whether they pose any sort of threat to the dignitary. The second team accompanies the dignitary in the vehicle.

"We are here to protect the dignitary from any sort of attack — assassination, injury, kidnapping or possible embarrassment," Le Brun said. "We have to anticipate any type of attack that could take place."

During the half-day training, a colorful array of pseudo-assailants put the agents through their paces. The ambassador's early-morning visit at the Provost Marshal's Office ended abruptly as the agents and the ambassador sped away from a female armed with pepper spray, before she had an opportunity to do anything. During his visit to a projected building site at Tompkins Basin, the ambassador narrowly escaped a water-balloon bombing by a disgruntled fisherman outraged at the idea of losing his fishing spot to new construction.

At the ambassador's last stop, the advance team foiled the assassins' first attempt by taking the ambassador in the back entrance instead of the front. But when the ambassador posed for a photograph upon his departure, the gunmen seized the opportunity.

As the assailants ran forward, guns blazing, agents scrambled to protect the ambassador. Other agents rushed in for a no-holds-barred struggle with the would-be assailants, ultimately subduing them.

Following the attack, adrenaline was still pumping hard as the agents and military police examined their bruises, scrapes and — in one case — a ripped sweatshirt. Le Brun then critiqued the agents' performance.

As the MPs and agents walked away slowly and stiffly, they did so with a better understanding of what it means to serve with the Protective Services Unit.

Rangers earn medical badge

1st. Lt. Lawrence O. Basha and Sgt. 1st Class Michael Nesbitt
3rd Bn., 75th Ranger Regiment

Imagine someone is injured, frightened and strapped to a litter being carried under fire across the dark battlefield. Will the medics get this person through this?

The medics would know how to handle this situation if they'd been through Expert Field Medic Badge (EFMB) training.

Six rangers from Fort Benning's 3rd Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment were awarded the EFMB recently at Hunter Army Airfield in Savannah, Georgia. The rangers left Fort Benning for Savannah in early February to begin two weeks of training followed by one week of testing.

The Army Medical Center and School, Fort Sam Houston,Texas, sent two observers to validate the examination process and individual tests.

Master Sgt. Gerald Peters, the senior observer, said the two weeks of training were key to the rangers' 90 percent success rate, which is above the Army's 26 percent average.

The examination was hosted by the 1st Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment, and employed medical personnel from all ranger battalions as instructors. The testing course consisted of several stations such as land navigation, a survival lane, the litter obstacle course and a trauma lane. The Soldiers used combat scenario missions in a three-day continuous operation as a vehicle for the EFMB testing. As an end to the mission, the candidates roadmarched 12 miles to the graduation field.

One of the more difficult tests was the 1k litter-obstacle course, which required candidates to work as a team to negotiate a variety of obstacles while carrying a litter.

During each run through the course, the candidates took turns as the patient strapped to the litter. The primary challenge is to keep from dropping the litter and endangering the patient while crawling over, under and around the multitude of obstacles.

The centerpiece of the hands-on medical testing is the trauma lane.

The candidate must assess and treat four patients, each with four different injuries, during simulated combat conditions. The candidate is graded on how the casualties are treated, bandaged and transported. The biggest challenge is when it's performed. It's all done in the dark and after many hours of physical activity with no sleep.

Future leaders learn management combat skills

2nd Lt. Francis E. Germanese
Infantry Officer Basic Course

IOBC Class 2-98 recently completed what many students said was the most physically demanding week at Fort Benning. The squad situational training exercise (STX) is a week of intense training at Garnsey Range, designed to teach new Infantry platoon leaders how to plan and conduct training.

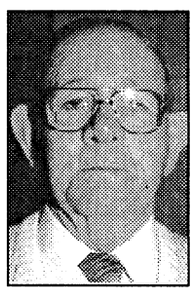
Students participate in a series of twelve squad battle drills they planned and implemented.

After the completion of each battle drill, the evaluating lieutenant gets an opportunity to conduct his After Action Review (AAR). "These drills serve three purposes, the first is to teach basic squad tactics, the second is to develop squad cohesion and the third is to teach the proper methods of the AAR," said Staff Sgt. Gib Gibbons.

"The AAR is not a critique, but a process by which the leaders can help find signs the squad did well and things that need improvement," Gibbons said.

"The key to a good AAR is that no blame is placed on incorrect actions," said 2nd Lt. Leslie Grange, an Illinois National Guard Officer. "Learning from the successes and mistakes of the squad without pointing fingers is essential to the process."

The class received instruction on how to ask open-ended questions designed to allow the squad members to discover for themselves what improvements need to be made as well as what positive elements to carry over to the next mission.



The STX missions built upon each other for three days, culminating in an overnight 12-hour platoon ambush planned and led by the students. After two days of rain and 45 degree weather, the platoons set out to ambush a suspected resupply route.

"We had almost no illumination, visibility or sleep," said 2nd Lt. Dave Pickel, a Connecticut National Guardsman. "It was difficult terrain and it made us realize operations in limited visibility are extremely challenging," Pickel said.

Upon completion of the ambush, the platoon cadre of Company A, 2nd Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment, conducted a brief AAR.

"The lieutenants did a wonderful job," said Capt. Louis Russell, platoon trainer with three years of experience. "I was extremely impressed with 2nd platoon's uncanny tactical prowess. We gave them minimal guidance and they took the ball and ran with it."

volunteer of the week

Name: Herbert Lauve
Hometown: Port Arthur, Texas
Volunteer job title: Patient transport driver

Volunteer organization: American Red Cross — Martin Army Community Hospital

Why do you volunteer?
I volunteer because I like to provide assistance to others. The carts at the hospital are a tremendous help to all the patients and I enjoy being a part of that program.

What do you like about volunteering?
I like the people who I help and their response to my help.

What are your special interests and hobbies?
Baseball, gardening and being with my family.

What others say about your contributions
Mr. Lauve is a great asset to the Red Cross program. His warmth and caring attitude bring a great deal of pleasure to all of the patients.

EO qualified Soldiers return to units

Equal Opportunity Office

Class 98-3 graduated March 13 from the U.S. Army Infantry Center Equal Opportunity Representative Course.

The 80-hour course is designed to train the unit's equal opportunity representatives. All company, battalion or equivalent level units are required to have assigned and trained primary and alternate representatives.

The emphasis of the course is to provide enough information for the equal opportunity representatives to become the eyes and ears of their commanders.

The speaker for the graduation was Command Sgt. Maj. Ricardo F. Layne, Command Sergeant Major, School of the Americas. Class 98-3 graduates are:

Electronic mini-resumes aid civilian transition

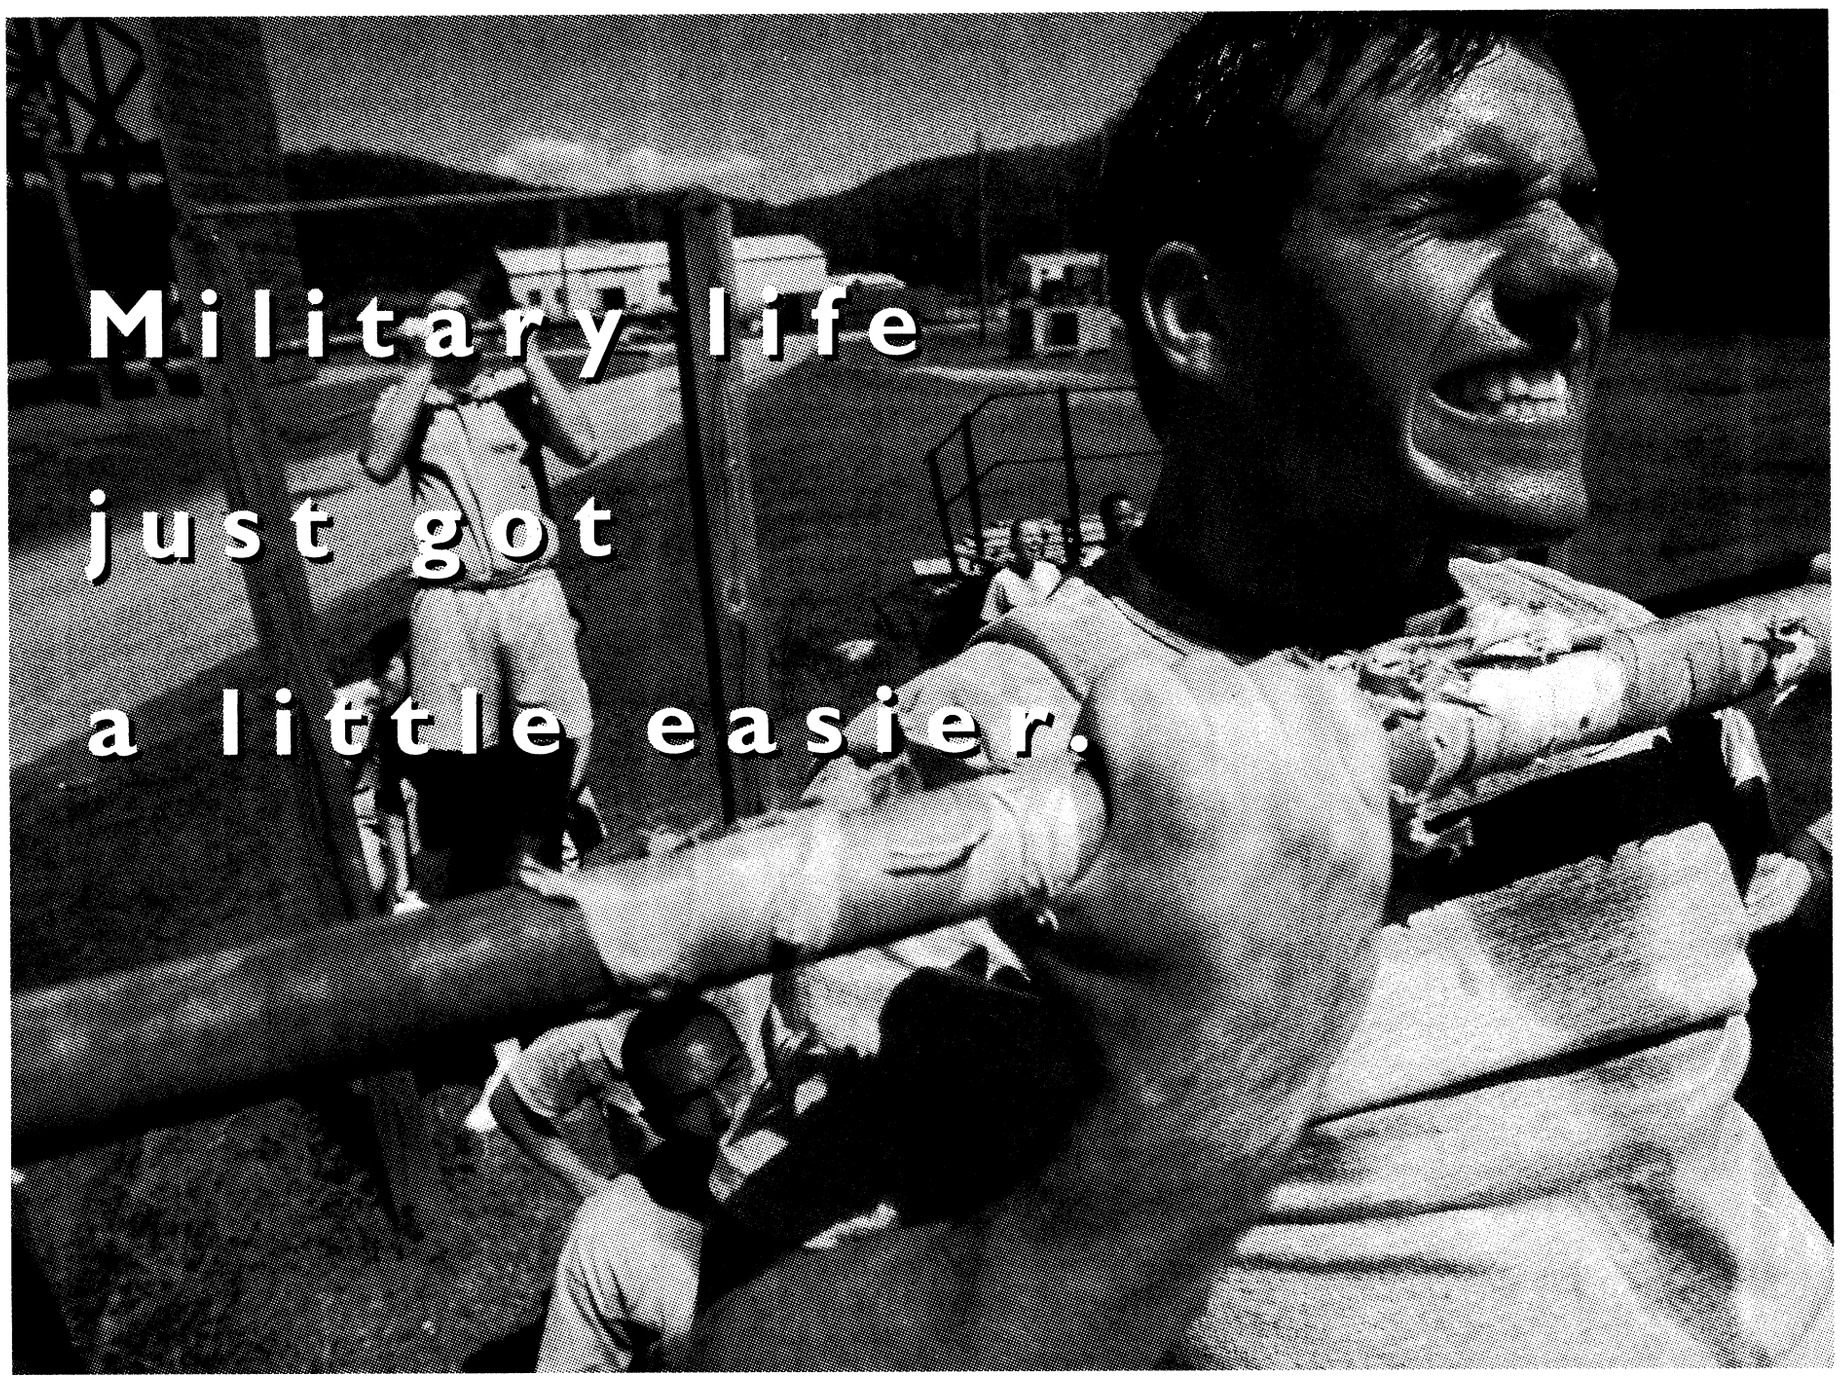
Army Career and Alumni Program

"The Defense Outplacement and Referral System (DORS) is an innovative tool transitioning Soldiers and their spouses can use to position their names in front of employers nationwide," said Chick Eagle, counselor with the Army Career and Alumni Program (ACAP) Center in Soldiers' Plaza.

DORS is a computerized on-line resume service for private employers. By dialing an 800 number, employers can receive copies of mini-resumes of separating Soldiers and spouses whose skills and training match the employer's needs. The system also allows public and community service (PACS) employers to receive the same information. The PACS registry is used by nonprofit, public and community service organizations such as schools, hospitals, law enforcement agencies and social service agencies.

The preparation and transmission of a Soldier's mini-resume is accomplished as a part of job assistance counseling services. Soldiers get individual training and assistance on how to complete the electronically transmitted resume. The preformatted computer program requires name, address and phone data, job and location preferences, a summary of job skills, experience and the precise date when available to start a new job.

"The system really works," Eagle said. "Employers request resumes from the Department of Defense transition assistance office in California and then call or write Soldiers to see if they are interested in working for them."



Eagle said many transitioning Soldiers said they were called by a company they did not know, but the company had received their mini-resume.

"This is a valuable tool for job seekers and we recommend that each transitioning Soldier take advantage of this unique service," Eagle said .

Job assistance is available for any separating Soldier and his or her spouse as part of the ACAP program.

For more information, visit the ACAP Center in Soldiers' Plaza or call 545-2308 or 545-2309.

Youth Services plans egg hunts, fair

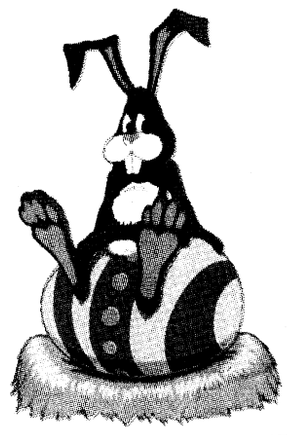
USAIC Public Affairs Office

The annual Easter egg hunt takes place 10 a.m. to noon April 4 at Riverside, the home of Commanding General Maj. Gen. Carl F. Ernst and his wife, Linda.

The hunt begins at 10 a.m. and takes no more than five minutes to complete.

The Easter bunny plans to make a special appearance along with McGruff, the crime dog and Blinky, the talking car.

Children ages 18 months to 9 years of active duty and retired military and Department of Defense civilian employees are encouraged to participate in planned activities, which include rides, games and prizes.



Two prizes will be awarded for the following age groups:

- 18 months to 2 years old,
- 3 years old to 4 years old,
- 5 years old to 6 years old and
- 7 years old to 9 years old.

Free soft drinks and cotton candy will be available.

Parents are reminded that pets are not allowed. All activities end at noon.

For more information, call 545-3070.

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Youth Services is planning its first Spring Fair, a carnival with 25 rides, game booths and food concessions 1 to 11 p.m. April 7-11 in the lot across from Faith Middle and Dexter Elementary schools.

"We started working on the idea a year ago," said Linda Laine, acting director of Youth Services. "At first it was just something for the kids to do but because it is happening during spring break, it ballooned into a family theme with rides for both children and adults."

The rides planned for the event include a Tilt-a-whirl, Ferris Wheel, Zipper, and a Merry-go-round. For more information, call 545-3070.

Fort Benning school budget faces cuts

Spc. Michelle J. Davis
Bayonet staff writer

Just as many government agencies have dealt with budget cuts this year, the Department of Defense Education Activity took its share as more than $22 million was chopped from the organization's annual budget.

With this cut, the Fort Benning School District also took a direct hit as the district received about $720,000 less than the target budget, according to Richard M. Skinner, assistant superintendent of the school district.

Skinner explained the district's target budget for a given year is nearly $21 million, which is divided into different areas.

"A majority of the budget is automatically fenced to cover pay and benefits of teachers, administrators and support personnel, which totals about $18 million," Skinner said.

After setting aside money for other expenses such as post support and various contracts, the district is left with less than $50,000 to support the school system with supplies and equipment.

"This is a pretty significant reduction from what we're normally used to," Skinner said. "On any given year, we normally need to have around $1 million for supplies, which include everything from learning aids to logistical supplies."

"We're just going to have to tighten our belt and pinch every penny and see what happens," Skinner said.

To help conserve funds, the school district has reduced field trips and personnel travel from Fort Benning schools this year.

"Eliminating field trips won't critically affect the schools and we know we can get by without them for this year," said Skinner.

Other areas the district is cutting back on include teacher training during in-service days and many other training opportunities have also been placed on hold.

In addition to cutting expenses, the district continues to write to DODEA headquarters to ask for unfinanced requirements,

"We're basically telling them that we need more money to get through this school year and it would be in our school system's best interest to secure these funds," Skinner said. "The money we lost normally goes towards cycling in new textbooks and daily supplies. This could hurt us in the long run."

Skinner said that tightening day-to-day expenses and hopefully getting some unfinanced requests approved will get the schools safely through this year, but the main concern is what will happen next year.

"We know we've got people's attention at the higher level and they know we could not sustain this two years in a row," Skinner said. "We're hoping this was a one-year glitch and we'll get the money back next year in addition to needed funds for this year."

Odyssey of the Mind

Faith students win regionals

Seven Faith Middle School students are putting their brainpower to the test with Odyssey of the Mind (OM), a worldwide program in which students compete against each other in creative problem-solving skits.

The students, eighth-graders Mark Baker, Amanda Hutchings, Paddy Ferriter, Lisa Fry, Kelly Lefler and seventh-graders Jaxon Lee and Laura Rose competed and won against nine different teams at the Chattahoochee region's OM competition for Division Two (junior high and middle schools) March 14. There are six regions in Georgia.

OM is a problem solving competition that began in New Jersey several years ago by a New Jersey college professor.

The Faith OM team is coached by media specialist Cindy Givens and Anne Trawick, who teaches sixth-, seventh- and eighth-graders.

Students are given eight minutes to put up all their props and perform the entire skit, Givens said.

The students competed in a problem called "Marvelous Mentors." Students got a list of 20 mentors which included Lucille Ball and Alfred Hitchcock.

"The students were given the task of researching four or five mentors and had to sell each mentor they studied to the group," Trawick said. "They ended up picking Confucius because he would be more visual."

Baker, who played Confucius, won the OMer Award, the highest recognition that a student or team can receive for a performing skill.

"He is a wonderful performer," Trawick said. "He sings to the judges; he's a natural leading man."

Baker said he likes playing Confucius because he was well-known.

"I've always liked the Chinese accent. I like to do different voices and I'm comedy-prone. I liked playing Confucius because he was known for being wise," said Baker, son of Tracy and 1st Sgt. Mark Baker, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 3rd Brigade, 3rd Infantry Division (Mechanized).

The students started preparing in 1997.

"The students wrote the script with certain characters in mind," Trawick said.

The characters included Starshine, Patty Brain, Loretta London and Don Vito Ravioli.

"My character started out as Lloyd London, but it changed to Loretta London after reading the scripts," said Kelly Lefler, daughter of Cynthia and Lt. Col. Thomas Lefler, U.S. Army Dental Activity.

The students had to present a television commercial about a nutritional product and discuss or present the nutritional benefits of the product and also design and make a package for the product.

The students picked mulberries because they're from China and good for silkworms, Lefler said.

"The students had many guidelines to follow and were scored on various parts of the program," Givens said.

Paddy Ferriter, Kelly Lefler and Mark Baker perform their winning skit from the Odyssey of the Mind competition.

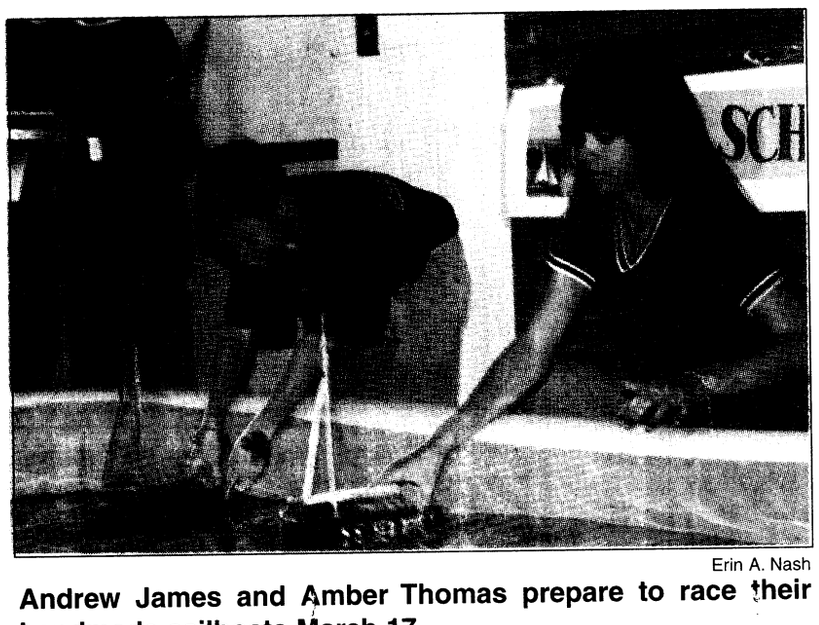
"They were scored on humor, which is very hard, but somehow the humor in the music just happened," Trawick said.

"Humor is hard to do, that's why they ask you to do it," Givens said.

The students also had to use less than $100 on the total program.

"In the end, we spent about $85. The kids visited a lot of thrift shops for their costumes," Trawick said.

In addition to the long-term problem at the competition, students are given a short-term problem, also called a spontaneous problem.



"They are either given a verbal problem to solve, in which they are given an object and have to respond creatively to that object, a hands-on problem, where they are given four or five objects and have to choose two or a technical problem, in which they are given common materials to build something, like a structure or something to hold weight. The kids are outstanding in these areas" Givens said.

"These are resources they have to learn — we can teach them how," Givens said.

"They are two strong coaches coaching a very strong team. At Faith we're very proud of them," said Faith principal Dr. Beth Middlemiss.

Faith has won first place twice in past years in the OM worldwide contest, competing against teams from Russia, Czechoslovakia, Poland and England.

Eighth-graders learn physics, set sail in boat-building contest

Faith Middle School eighth-graders "set sail" recently with a boat-building project in Anne T. Shaw's industrial arts class.

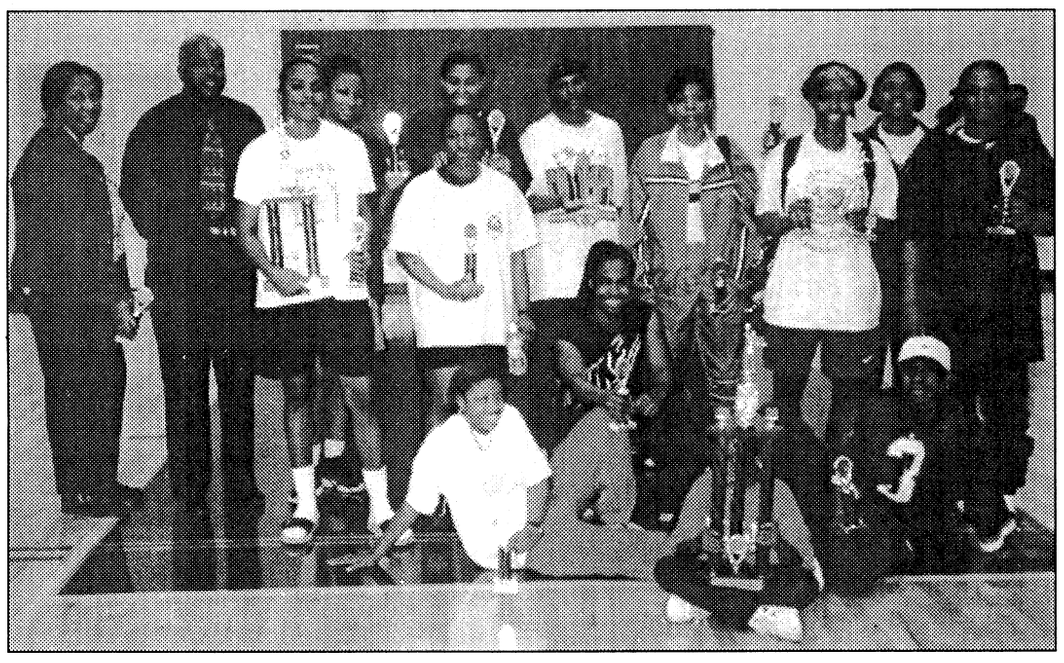
It was a first-time project for Shaw. Shaw and her husband are sailors and got the idea from watching the Whitbread race, an international sailing event, on television.

Shaw showed the tape to her students. Shaw then incorporated physics terms into the boatbuilding project.

"I taught them about balance, lift, displacement and more," Shaw said. "These are words they learn in science and now they get the chance to apply them."

As part of the project, Shaw had one of her friends who also races bring in a racing boat.

"The kids set the mast, raised the sails, put on wet suits and practiced tacking," Shaw explained.



When it came time for the students to build their own boats, Shaw had the students use hand tools only.

"I wanted the kids to appreciate power tools later on. They used a coping saw, a keyhole saw, hand drills and files," Shaw said.

"I liked using the hand tools because it makes it more yours," said Paddy Ferriter, son of Margie and Lt. Col. Michael Ferriter, commander of 3rd Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment. "You have to use more skill. You can see the difference when you use hand and power tools."

It took the students about eight days to build their boats, including painting them and using a needle and string to rig their sails.

On March 17, students put their boats to the test in a race in an inflatable pool with a fan blowing the boats from the side. Students raced their boats against each other, with one boat named the ultimate winner.

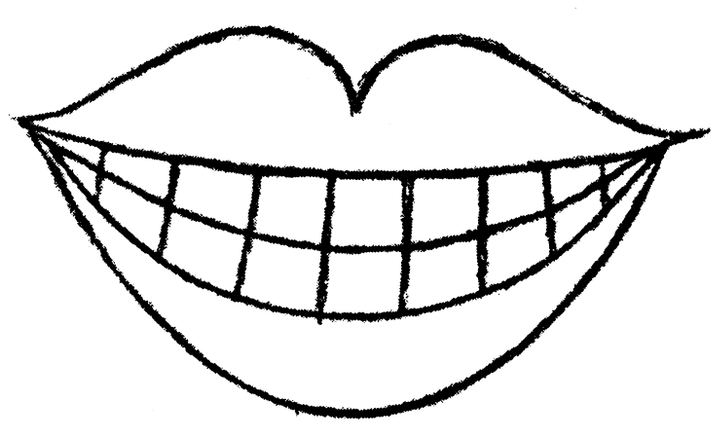
Manage stress or it will manage you



Stress is the wear and tear our bodies experience as we adjust to our environment. Stress can be positive or negative. It can compel us to action with exciting changes or be a negative influence that results in upset stomachs, anger, depression and high blood pressure. A new job, loss of relationship or death of a loved one is experienced as stress while we adapt to these changes. As we deal with life, stress can motivate of hinder us.

Since we cannot eliminate stress from our lives, stress management helps us achieve healthy living. Recognize what you can do to help yourself. For example: exercise, develop a support group and tap into your spiritual reserve. Begin to managing stress before it begins to manage you.

The Martin Army Medical Mentor

... a community service from Martin Army Community Hospital

Deciding how we die: You do have choices

Dr. Virginia Yates
Martin Army Community Hospital

Many remember John F. Kennedy Jr. speaking to the press the day his mother, Jackie Onassis, died.

"She died on her terms, the way she wanted it, just like she had done everything else in her life," he said.

He was talking about his mother's Advance Directives. Long before the time of her death, she decided what medical treatments she wanted and what she would not allow if she was unable to communicate at the time of her death.

This is not simply a privilege of the rich and famous. Thanks to the efforts of many heart-torn families who have gone to court for the rights of a loved one, this is everyone's right.

The Patient Self-Determination Act of 1991 was the first federal law to ensure patients the right to accept or refuse certain medical treatments. The law requires all adults must be told end of life options at admission to the hospital.

However, an adult does not have to be hospitalized to learn about and act on this right. Every adult has the right to be informed and given the chance to make end of life choices and to make those choices known in writing.

While most might think this idea pertains only to the elderly and very sick, it is noteworthy that the struggle of a family to get their young daughter off a breathing machine (ventilator) probably played the biggest role in this legislation. Had the Patient Self-Determination Act been in effect for Karen Quinlan, she could have placed written Advance Directives in her medical records while she was healthy.

Her family and doctors would have been required to follow her wishes even though she was unable to communicate when she was tragically stricken ill.

The law allows adults of all ages and all conditions of health to put in writing what they want done — if they are ever too sick to speak for themselves. This is called a Living Will. The law also allows adults to designate another person to speak on their behalf in case they are too sick to speak. This is called a Durable Power of Attorney for Health Care. Together, these two documents are called Advance Directives.

Unfortunately, most people are not aware of these rights and do not have Advance Directives.

As a result, often family members are forced to guess what one might want when near death and unable to communicate. This can cause tears, arguments among family members and accusations as choices are made. Sometimes the choices made are not the ones we want for ourselves at the end of our lives.

In 1995, a magazine called Archives of Internal Medicine published the results of a survey of 883 people. The people were given some information about Advance Directives and then were asked a few questions.

Overall, people said they wished doctors would discuss the subject sooner in life and before sickness was too advanced. Sometimes doctors avoid the subject because the topic can be upsetting.

Several civilian organizations offer the opportunity to complete the Living Will and Durable Power of Attorney for Health Purposes documents and most often you are charged a fee. These documents are free for military personnel.

You might be thinking, "I'm not sure I understand what to want or refuse." There are many words doctors use that can be confusing, such as coma, terminal illness, vegetative state, CPR and ventilator just to name a few.

For that reason, Martin Army Community Hospital (MACH) provides a class where attorneys and physicians explain what could happen near the time of death, what would be done and then explain to you what you can refuse or request if you are unable to speak.

You are then given personal time with the attorney to develop your Advance Directives documents.

The next class will be 1 to 3 p.m. April 20 in Regimental Conference Room, second floor, MACH. To reserve a seat, call 544-3135 and provide full name and the last four of the sponsor's social security number.

Everyday heroes do exist

USAIC Chaplains Office

"Real -life heroes in a jaded world." This was the headline of a newspaper article describing the bravery of four Atlanta men who "got involved." Risking personal safety, they tackled a carjacker who attacked drivers. The article reported, "Their bravery may well have saved lives. They risked harm to themselves to protect others." Such inspiring words describe the heroic deeds of caring citizens who simply got involved.

reflections

The media reports on such events because of the heroism. These men "risked their lives." This act has the makings of a movie. The article concludes, "although they resist anyone calling them heroes, their actions make them worthy of the label."

More than being heroes, these four men are servants. A hero is a mythological or legendary figure of great strength or ability. One who is admired for some achievement or certain qualities. If we label these men heroes, then there will be few such acts of others getting involved because we don't think of ourselves as heroes. At least, we don't admit it. We call them servants.

What is a servant? Many will think of a slave or one in a lowly position. Chuck Swindoll, in his book, Improving Your Serve: The Art of Unselfish Living, (1981 Word Inc.) gives some helpful Biblical insights on this concept of serving.

A servant is one who does not hide the realness of his humanity. When it hurts, he says "ouch," admitting he is not perfect. A servant is genuinely humble. He has nothing to lose. He does not resist being accountable, is non-defensive when confronted, and really wants to help others. A servant is absolutely honest — when no one is looking. A servant gives, forgives and forgets the wrong committed against him. ("Write injuries in dust, benefits in marble.")

There are servants all around us. A mother nursing her baby. A father taking his children to school, practice and don't forget rehearsal. A mess sergeant and cook serving hungry, tired Soldiers in the field on a cold early morning. A Soldier cleaning his weapon, serving his country. A teacher who years ago, patiently tutored a struggling student who is today her personal physician. A neighbor who puts your garbage on the curb because you forgot. She watches your healthy child while you rush the sick one to the hospital.

Have you ever noticed the guy driving the tractor, mowing the grass, the same guy who blows the leaves in the fall — a servant. The first sergeant who gives water to a thirsty private — a servant. A parish council who prays and labors for the congregation — servants. Now that the budget has been drastically cut, servants are greatly needed.

Get involved. Serve someone now and throughout the year. Maybe you can't afford to buy a gift, but you can go for a visit at the hospital, prepare a meal for someone, invite someone over, listen to a child. Serve someone and you will be a hero in their eyes.. You will also be in good company. "For even the Son of Man did not come to be served, but to serve, and to give his life a ransom for many." (Mark 10:45, NIV)

Horse show set — The Fort Benning Hunt Club has scheduled an exhibitional horse show for 1 p.m. April 18.

The show will feature demonstrations of various horse breeds and disciplines including dressage and show jumping .

The show is open to the public and free of charge

For more information, call 689-3945.

Georgia Pride hosts tryouts — The Georgia Pride will host open tryouts from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. April 11 at the South Commons Softball Stadium in Columbus.

Any female with prior fastpitch playing experience is invited to tryout. However, trying out for a professional team will make a high school or college athlete ineligible.

Tryouts will involve defensive and offensive work. Athletes are expected to field ground and fly balls.

All participants must bring a glove, bat, cleats, catching gear (if catcher) and come prepared to play on the day of the tryout.

Participants must register by April 7. The participation fee is $25.

For more information, call 653-5272.

Gun club sponsors pistol match — The Fort Benning Rifle and Pistol Club is sponsoring a Glock Sport Shooting Foundation (GSSF) Match April 4-5 at English Range.

The event, Old South Classic VI, is expected to draw between 300-400 participants from across the U.S.

Participants are required to fire Glock pistols for the event. Club members may use a club-owned Glock free of charge.

Registration fee is $25 if competitors pre-register. GSSF membership is also required. Membership is $20 per year.

For more information, call 689-3371.

BASS club holds bimonthly meetings — The Bass Anglers Sportsman's Society (BASS) Club of Fort Benning meets the second and fourth Tuesday of every month at 7:30 p.m. in Faith Middle School's cafeteria. The club is open to all active duty, retired and military dependents.

USARSA instructors shut out students in soccer game

Teachers' winning streak continues during annual battle of skills

Spc. Alberto Betancourt
U.S. Army School of Americas PAO

After weeks of taunts and challenges, the U.S. Army School of the Americas' instructors prevailed once again on the soccer field Saturday after beating the students from the Command and General Staff Course 2-0 in the annual game.

"This happens every year," said Eladio Aruajo, a guest instructor from Paraguay. "They always tell us they can beat us, but again they were wrong."

Araujo, who's been playing in the annual soccer game since 1995, said the students haven't won since he's been at USARSA.

During most of the first half, it was the students who pressured the instructors. With the strong wind at their back, they penetrated the instructor's defense over and over with attempts at the goal.

However, Luis Eduardo Triana, a guest instructor from Colombia and goalie for the team, stopped all scoring attempts. Triana's effort motivated the instructors, who in turn began pressuring the student's defense in the final minutes of the half. The pressure was so much that ironically a strong kick from Jose Burone, a guest instructor from Uruguay, bounced off one of the student defenders for an automatic goal. This ended the half with the instructors leading 1-0.

In the second half, both teams ran the field with futile attempts at scoring. Both Triana and Jeff Baker, goalie for the students, held their ground. As time took its toll and with the wind to their advantage, Alejandro Volta, a guest instructor from Venezuela, put his team ahead and sealed the 2-0 victory.

USAMU shooter aims for gold in 2000 Olympics

Paula J. Randall Pagan
U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit, PAO

David R. Alcoriza, a shotgun shooter with the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit has one goal — to win an Olympic Gold Medal in Sydney, Australia, in the year 2000.

While a specialist in the Army and a relatively young shooter at the age of 27, Alcoriza fulfilled a life-long dream of representing the U.S. in Olympic Competition when he was selected to the U.S. Olympic Shooting Team and competed in the 1996 Olympic Games in Atlanta.

"I knew since I was a kid that I wanted to be a part of the Olympics," he said.

Alcoriza shot in the Men's Double Trap Matches in the 1996 Olympics in Atlanta. In Double Trap, shooting 12-gauge shotguns, shooters aim at two clay targets simultaneously moving around 50 mph. Men shoot 150 targets in three rounds of 50 each. The top six shooters advance to the finals.

The Lodi, Calif., native said one of the best parts of the Olympics was having his family there to see him. His parents, Ron and Susan, his sisters, Tina and Laura, his wife, Mendy, and sons, Jordan, now 5 years old and Camron, who is now 2, all got to watch him represent the United States in the Atlanta Games.

He and his fellow 1996 U.S. Olympians, were personally congratulated by President Bill Clinton at the White House in August 1996. He was also honored by then Secretary of the Army Togo West and Army Chief of Staff Gen. Dennis J. Reimer in the Hall of Heroes at the Pentagon, as well as receiving congratulations from the Secretary of Defense and chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

Alcoriza's coach, USAMU Shotgun Team Coach Burl Branham, said that type of success is not easily earned.

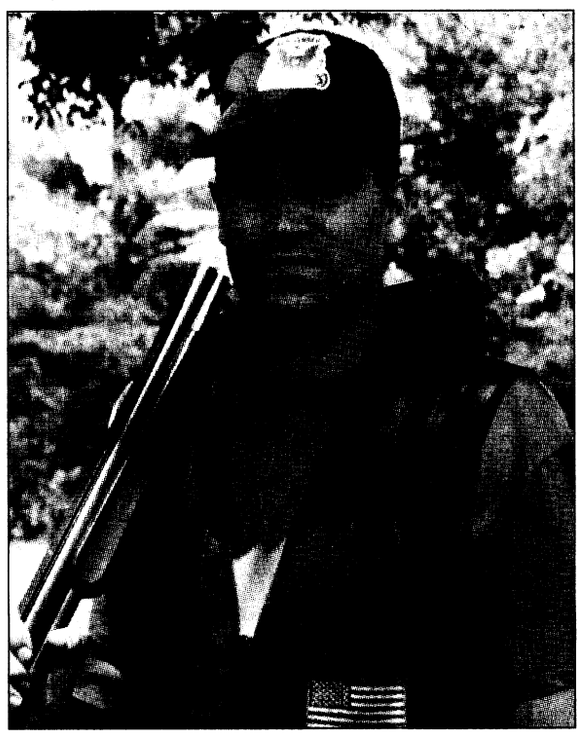
"David's the hardest worker I know," Branham said. "Since he arrived at the marksmanship unit in 1994, he's been training every day, nearly eight hours a day, shooting double trap."

Branham said Alcoriza spends most of his time concentrating on one thing — winning.

"It's easy to see that David's experience and his desire to exceed will help him go far," Branham said.

"I'm just happy to have made it as far as I have — to have had the chance to compete in the Olympics and to have a chance to do it again," Alcoriza said.

Alcoriza is ranked 10th in the country in trap and in double trap is second only to fellow USAMU shooter Sgt. 1st Class Bret E. Erickson, who is a two-time Olympian.



"Bret Erickson is number one in the country and I shoot against him every day. I want to beat him every day as he wants to beat me every day; that competitiveness makes us both better," Alcoriza said. "But I'm pretty confident and feel that I can win any time I shoot."

Shooting is a sport Alcoriza grew up with. His father, who was a 10-time All American trap shooter himself, used to take him to shooting matches nearly every weekend.

"My father got me into shooting and coached me," Alcoriza said. "I call him all the time and he still gives me advice."

At present, Alcoriza is busy training for the upcoming World Championship Team Selection Matches and Grand Prix to be held at Fort Benning in April.

He has been selected to shoot in the Atlanta World Cup in May, which will be shot at the Wolf Creek Olympic Shooting Complex where he competed in the 1996 Olympics. There he will have the opportunity to meet the individual qualifying standards and minimum qualifying scores for Olympic participation in 2000. He could also help the United States win quota slots for the 2000 Olympics.

David R. Alcoriza is preparing to participate in the 2000 Olympics in Sidney.

Alcoriza, who began shooting in 1980, has numerous shooting accomplishments including being 1997 Gold Medal inner in Men's Double Trap at the Championship of the Americas in Buenos Aires, Argentina and being a member of the 1997 World Championships and U.S. National World Cup teams.

In 1996, he won the Double Trap Olympic Selection Match, took second place in Double Trap at the Interservice Championships at Fort Benning and third place in Double Trap in the North American Championships. He was also fourth in both Double Trap at the World Cup in Atlanta and in trap at the Interservice Championships.

Children, adults need lesson in sportsmanship

Staff Sgt. Lori Egan
Bayonet assistant editor

Every now and then I forget the meaning of a word, a word that is commonly known, so I look it up in the dictionary. This week the word was sport, which according to the dictionary, the general definition means any activity or experience that gives enjoyment or recreation.

commentary

So sports are supposed to be fun. Why is it that I see so many people involved in sports not having any fun?

I watched a little girl drag a little boy to the ground by his shirt and pummel him because he accidentally kicked her in a 6-to 8-year-old soccer game. Obviously this incident wasn't fun for either child, their parents or the coaches.

After the game but before the children lined up to slap hands, my daughter's coach told the children being a good loser and a gracious winner was just as important as how the children played the game.

My daughter told me one little boy on the losing team told the winning team members they were stupid while slapping their hands.

During the basketball season, I watched one mom heckle a little girl who was learning how to play the game.

I have this to say — that little girl on a 6- to 8-year-old team was out there trying, learning about a sport she was unfamiliar with. The woman who made fun of the little girl's attempts at basketball was not setting a good example for anyone.

It is not polite to make fun of people. I know this is an obvious statement, but sometimes one needs to be obvious — it hurts one's feelings when someone is rude to them.

This is true for the boy who called the winners stupid. This hurt my daughter's feelings. This is what she remembers, not the fact that the her team won. She still thinks both teams are winners.

I thought youth sports was about learning the fundamentals of a sport — like soccer or basketball and about teamwork. I thought children were supposed to have fun.

As a parent, I love watching my daughter play. I'm tickled pink when she pays attention to the coach during practice and nearly walking on air when she actually stops the offense.

My daughter is learning how to play soccer — I can't expect her to play like Pele. I can, however, encourage her to do her best and to always try, which is what I thought sportsmanship implies.

My advice to other parents is to encourage their children to do their individual best and remember that they are part of a team. And please remember, you are the adult — don't teach your children to call other children names.

ALA offers Golf Privilege Card — The American Lung Association of Georgia is offering its 1998 Golf Privilege Card.

The card gives golfers the opportunity to play on over 600 of the finest courses in Georgia, Florida, Alabama and Mississippi.

Some of the courses in the local vicinity include Bull Creek, Callaway Gardens, Maple Ridge, Red Oak and Orchard Hills golf courses.

The cost of the Golf Privilege Card is $25 each. If three cards are bought, the fourth one is free. Visa and Mastercard are accepted.

For more information, call the West Central Region office of the American Lung Association at 569-1098.

Resource department sponsors safety class — The Georgia Department of Natural Resources and U.S. Coast Guard Reserve is sponsoring a Boating Safety and Personal Watercraft Course from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Saturday at Florence Marina State Park.

The course is located at the Kirbo Educational Museum in the park and a $5 book fee is required.

Due to the limited number of openings, call the park at (912) 838-4707 to reserve a slot.

Florence Marina State Park is located in Omaha, Ga., on Ga. Highway 39.

All participants must be 12 or older and pass a written exam to be eligible to receive a Georgia Personal Watercraft Card or Alabama Boating Certification.

For more information, call 931-1550.

Golf course conducts clinic — The Follow Me Golf Course will conduct a golf clinic for active duty Soldiers from 9 to 10:30 a.m. Saturday.

The clinic is for beginners and is free.

For more information, call 687-1940.

Fitness Center schedules volleyball meeting — Kefurt Fitness Center on Kelley Hill will conduct a meeting for intramural volleyball coaches at 1 p.m. Thursday.

A preseason tournament will be April 13-22. Coaches will register for the season during the meeting.

YS offers programs — Youth Services offers instruction in taekwondo, tumbling, piano and dance for children ages 6 to 15.

Class fees range from $20 to $25 per month.

Registration is open to youth family members of active duty and retired military personnel and Department of Defense employees.

All children who participate must possess a YS card, which costs $20 per year, per family and can be purchased at the YS administration office and the Main Post Youth Center, as well as all community outreach centers.

For more information, call Youth Services at 545-1435.

OCS inducts 30 to Hall of Fame today

Spc. Michelle J. Davis
Bayonet staff writer

The Officer Candidate School (OCS) will induct 30 new members into its Hall of Fame at 11 a.m. today in Infantry Hall's Marshall Auditorium.

The honorees are all OCS graduates who distinguished themselves in military or civilian pursuits, said Maj. Patrick J. Tennis, executive officer of 3rd Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment (OCS).

"This is the highest honor that OCS can bestow upon its graduates," Tennis said.

Guest speaker for the ceremony is Maj. Gen. James Link, chief of staff of the U.S. Army Materiel Command.

This year marks the 40th anniversary of the beginning of the OCS Hall of Fame. Since its start, more than 1,900 graduates have been inducted into the Hall of Fame including former senator Bob Dole and former Secretary of Defense Casper Weinberger.

The OCS Hall of Fame, which is housed in Wigle Hall, was established not only to honor past graduates, but to provide motivation and an incentive for OCS candidates.

Each year a board of officers from the U. S. Army Infantry Center convenes to review packets of the nominated Soldiers.

To be eligible for the hall of fame, OCS graduates must have graduated from Fort Benning's OCS course or ground school at Fort Riley, Kan.

In addition, the nominees must also have accomplished one of the following: attained the rank of colonel while on active duty or in a reserve component, awarded the Medal of Honor, been elected or appointed to an office of prominence in national or state government or been recognized or recommended by the commandant of the Infantry School for outstanding service.

For a complete list of inductees, see A-5.

Youth Services plan annual egg hunts Saturday, fair set April 7-11

USAIC Public Affairs Office

The annual Easter egg hunt takes place 10 a.m. to noon Saturday at Riverside, the home of Commanding General Maj. Gen. Carl F. Ernst and his wife, Linda.

The hunt begins at 10 a.m. and takes no more than five minutes to complete.

The Easter bunny plans to make a special appearance along with McGruff, the crime dog and Blinky, the talking car.

Children ages 18 months to 9 years of active duty and retired military and Department of Defense civilian employees are encouraged to participate in planned activities, which include rides, games and prizes.

Two prizes will be awarded for the following age groups:

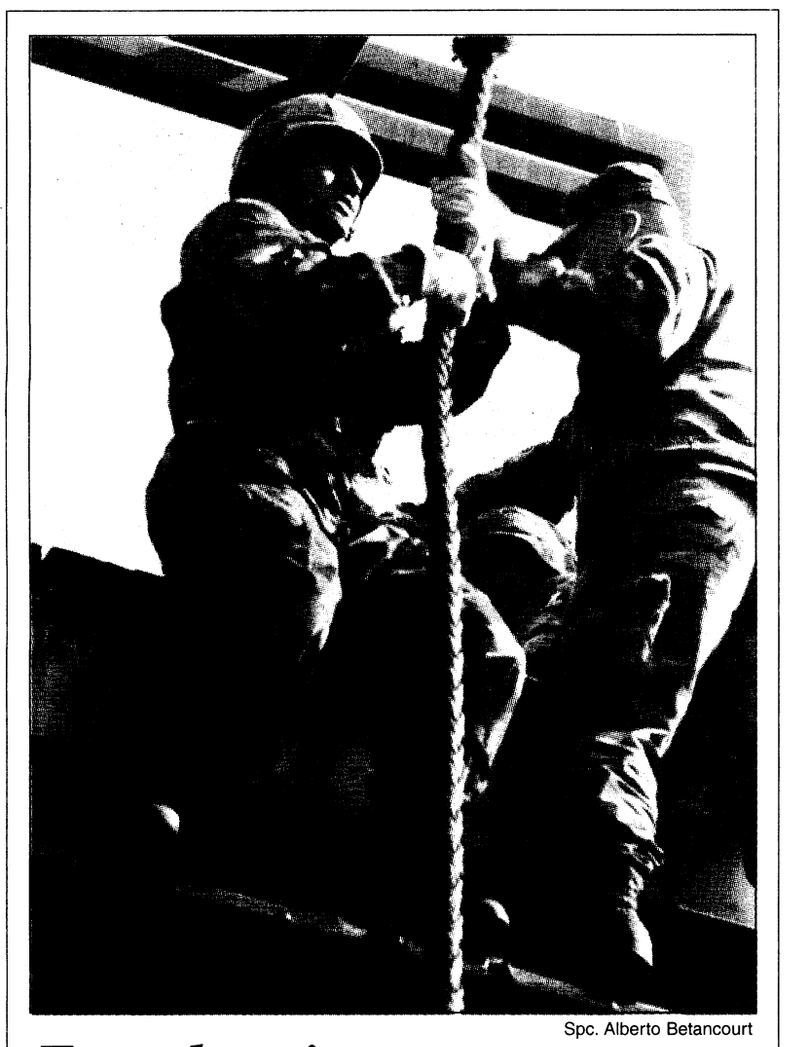
- 18 months to 2 years old,
- 3 years old to 4 years old,
- 5 years old to 6 years old and
- 7 years old to 9 years old.

Free soft drinks and cotton candy will be available.

Parents are reminded that pets are not allowed. All activities are scheduled to end at noon.

For more information on the egg hunt festivities, call 545-3070.

USAIC Public Affairs Office



Youth Services is planning its first Spring Fair, a carnival with 25 rides, game booths and food concessions 1 to 11 p.m. April 7-11 in the lot across from Faith Middle and Dexter Elementary schools.

"We started working on the idea a year ago," said Linda Laine, acting director of Youth Services. "At first it was just something for the kids to do but because it is happening during spring break, it ballooned into a family theme with rides for both children and adults."

The rides planned for the event include a Tilt-a-whirl, Ferris Wheel, Zipper and a Merry-go-round.

Because the Spring Fair will require the efforts of the Youth Services staff the Youth Services Center will only open for piano, dance and taekwondo lessons.

For more information, call 545-3070.

Reggie's restaurant opens on post

Pvt. 2 Amy L. Nyland
Bayonet staff writer

Piles of buffalo wing bones and remnants of devoured food along with barbecue covered faces and hands were part of the scene at the grand opening of Reggie's, a new restaurant, March 20, located on Sightseeing Road adjacent to the Main NCO Club.

According to John C. Bush, chief of community operations division, Moral Welfare and Recreation (MWR), Fort Benning has become home to the one and only Reggie's in the United States. Two other Reggie's currently exist overseas in Korea and Germany.

Bush said the estimated $400,000 year long project was a joint effort between the MWR and Community Family Support Center (CFSC). The decision was made to cut the Main NCO Club in half and use the existing kitchen and dining room to create a place for the Soldiers.

He said Reggie's is part of a commercial theme restaurant chain and is scheduled to expand throughout the U.S.

"We are trying to give the Soldiers what they ask for. What they have asked for is the same things they can get downtown, without having to go downtown," Bush said. "That's why we have combined the best things we could find in all commercial restaurants to make Reggie's what it is," Bush added.

According to Bush, Reggie's offers everything found in a commercial restaurant. There is a huge selection of beverages including alcoholic drinks and Reggie's labeled microbrews. The menu includes selections of Italian, Mexican and American dishes. Reggie's also offers a big-screen television, pool, darts and video games.

"You could come into Reggie's three or four times a week, have a good meal and never eat the same thing twice," Bush said.

He said Reggie's is a place not only for the single Soldier, but also for parents and children. It offers recreation in a convenient location and safe environment.

"The idea is to have it all here," Bush said. "That way Soldiers aren't paying for taxi cabs and wandering around all night trying to figure out what they are going to do."

Bush said having the movie theatre and Reggie's on post make it possible for the Soldiers to go out and have a good time less expensively.

"Reggie's gives Soldiers a place to go and blow off steam," said Officer Candidate Robert C. Metcalf, Company B, 3rd Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment. "We can hang out, play pool and people watch in a comfortable atmosphere."

Bush said Reggie's is scheduled to hold drawings and give aways every weekend in April. One of the prizes available is a weekend in Destin, Fla.

Armstrong speaks at FWP program luncheon

Nicole Longstreath
Special to the Bayonet©

Motherhood was the subject of the Federal Women's Program Luncheon at the Main NCO Club, March 25. Guest speaker, Dee Armstrong of WTVM, spoke to a crowd of 250 about the trials and tribulations of being a mother with a career in today's society.

Armstrong devoted most of her 30-minute speech to describing how her mother raised her and how she is now raising her children.

"It is because of my mother that I am who I am today," Armstrong said.

Armstrong got her first job in communications during high school when a teacher recommended her to a recruiter from a local newspaper.

"My mother taught me to be on time, be respectful and turn in my homework," Armstrong said. "My teacher picked me because she knew she could trust me, I had to prove that to her."

Today, Armstrong not only continues the tradition of teaching her children responsibility, but self reliance.

"I tell my kids, if there is something you need to do, do it," Armstrong said. "Kids saying they have nothing to do is such a prevalent problem. When I hear kids say that, I think, 'Is your lawn mowed, are your kitchen cabinets clean, is your bathroom clean?'"

According to Armstrong, guiding children in the right path is crucial.

"Because we are responsible for raising our children, we, as women and mothers, are responsible for the direction our society goes," Armstrong said.

Armstrong stressed the importance of mothers getting to know their children and raising them to be the best they can be.

In closing, Armstrong said, "Motherhood is a wonderful thing. It eats up all of my money and my time, but I wouldn't trade it for anything."

Sgt. 1st Class Evelyn J. Richardson, Equal Opportunity Adviser, 29th Infantry Regiment, had a more philosophical take on motherhood.

"It has been stated that the woman is the mother of the Earth," Richardson said. "Women are ... responsible for the upbringing of this nation."

According to both women, the great responsibility appointed to women has been overlooked.

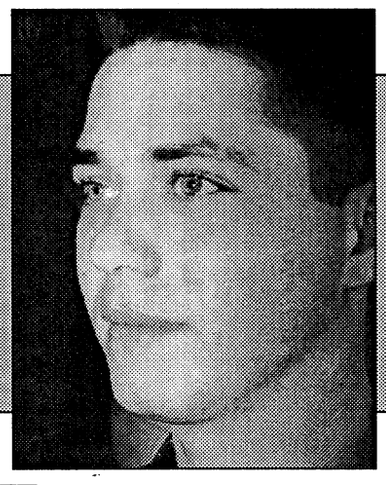
"Achievements that women have made have been taken for granted," Richardson said, "Women have not been recognized as much as men for the founding of the nation."

"We are the thinkers, the planners, the organizers, just like men are. I think it has been greatly overlooked at how women have played a role in shaping their homes," Armstrong said.

The role in the home, according to Armstrong, is not the only thing that needs to be developed.

"I look at women in general as work in progress," Armstrong said. "We have to be ready for change, we have to have an open mind and an open heart."

According to Anjie Kumar, Women's Program Manager, having an open mind was the focus of the event.



"The luncheon gave us a chance to take time away from work and focus on our lives," Kumar said. "It also gave us an opportunity to take something from the guest speaker's life, like how she got to where she is today."

VARIOUS VOICES

What do you need to do in preparation for spring cleaning?

Jenny Salley, family member — "I've done almost all my cleaning, but I still need to wash the walls and put away my winter clothes and bring out the summer ones."

Pvt. 2 Brett Stabile, Company A, 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment — "Scrub the scum off my shower and throw away all my old socks."

Cpt. Nathaniel Stinson, Headquarters and Headquarters Battery, 1st Battalion, 10th Field Artillery, 3rd Brigade, 3rd Infantry Division (Mechanized) — "I need to start putting away all my winter clothes and service the air conditioning in my POV."

Veronica Reinel, Columbus — "Repaint the inside of my house and redo the woodwork. Also get some of the outside gardening done."

Spc. Mike Holden, Company A, 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment — "Clean out the gutters around my house and do yard work."

Trygve Jetter, family member — "I just moved here so I'm starting from scratch. I really need to unpack and clean the whole house."

Spring cleaning brings more than housework

Staff Sgt. Lori Egan
Bayonet assistant editor

commentary

Ahh spring ... flowers blooming, pollen in the air, dust blowing in the frenzy created by a mad house cleaner.

Every spring my mother would start what she euphemistically called spring cleaning. Spring cleaning doesn't sound too bad but what was actually done was: curtains taken down and the windows washed, cupboards and closets cleaned, much more than the usual daily pick up after yourself and the Saturday get the house clean so you can go and play cleaning. She always wanted the back porch cleaned entirely.

In our house, the back porch was the catch all for everything that didn't have an actual location in the house, things like plant cuttings, coffee cans, my brother Tony's old sneakers plus a lot of other stuff that families accumulate.

First thing my mom would do is give a warning order.

"I want the back porch cleaned off now!"

Five sets of feet would race to the back porch for anything of value. Mom would be there with a large garbage can.

Once we were on the back porch, she started assigning other cleaning tasks.

The funny thing about my mom's idea of spring cleaning is it could happen any time of the year.

One time I was given the privilege to clean out all the kitchen cupboards because I broke some minor rule while my best friend gave a surprise birthday party for some other classmates.

What joy I experienced as I watched from the kitchen window the girls treasure hunting while I was finding some "treasures" in the cupboards. It has always amazed me how someone could put a sticky honey jar back in the cupboard without wiping it off first.

Now that I am an adult, I'm the one in charge of spring clean up. Only when I shout I'm cleaning off whatever my six-year-old daughter says good idea and I'm the one racing to save my good stuff that has no home.

Sometimes I am amazed at the stuff I think I need. Why I should hang on to phone bills from 1989, I just don't know.

But spring cleaning doesn't just mean housework anymore. Now I get to do yard work. Mowing the grass, raking the yard, weeding and preparing the flower beds are the fun part of spring clean up for me, which is good because the post annual spring clean up is April 13-17.

I've heard a lot of people complain about spring clean up. Why do we have to do this, why do we have to do that, etc. The Army doesn't need to tell me what, how and when to clean up.

Apparently the Army does need to tell some people what, where, when and how. The why is obvious — it needs to be done.

We are lucky to live in government housing for many reasons — close to work, close to schools, no electricity bill and the housing market in Columbus can be expensive.

What we need to remember is that we don't own our homes and that we need to take the best possible care of them, after all, our tax dollars are used to clean up the waste that some of our neighbors leave behind.

545-BOSS

Dial 545-BOSS is the commander's action line for Soldiers, family members and civilians to call when they have problems or complaints.

While it is not a substitute for the chain of command or for agencies established to provide assistance, the line offers another means of communication between Fort Benning's community and commanders.

The Bayonet features some of the calls that may benefit other members of the Fort Benning community.

Call: The caller expressed concern that pets are not properly supervised when they are being walked and owners are not using scoopers. Children are playing in the same playgrounds where pets are allowed to relieve themselves.

Directorate of Public Safety response:

DPS recommended that the caller should bring this concern directly to the attention of the housing mayor for discussion with the garrison commander in the next community meeting. He also suggested that they might post leaflets throughout the community in coordination with the Community Life Office.

Call: The caller said the traffic signal at Ingersol and Wold does not work properly and traffic is held up sometimes as long as 10 minutes before the light changes.

Directorate of Public Works response:

The Energy and Utilities Division, DPW, said the traffic signal cycle and detection devices were checked and all components are working properly. It was noted that if a vehicle does not stop on the pavement where the sensors are located, the sensors may not detect the vehicle and the light will not change to the occupied lane in a timely manner.

Call: Soldier said her windshield was damaged when a civilian contractor's truck sped past her and threw up gravel.

Staff Judge Advocates response:

SJA action officer worked with the caller to identify the trucking company. The caller was advised to assert a claim for the damage against the contractor's insurance company and was also informed that she could contact the contractor directly to see if they would like to settle without reporting it to the insurance company. If the company refuses to pay, the action officer recommended the caller contact the SJA office's Legal Assistance Attorney for advice on her right to pursue payment for the damage.

Principal thanks post for support provided

I am writing you to express appreciation for the assistance rendered a group of 26 students and faculty members from Thomas County Central High School who were aboard a school bus that broke down on March 12 on Georgia Highway 520 at the exit ramp off Custer Road at about 7 p.m.

Shortly after our bus driver contacted 911, two Military Police patrol vehicles arrived at the scene, and the two officers were invaluable in using their cellular phones to contact your dispatcher who in-turn called our school official here in Thomasville to request repairs and the dispatch of another bus.

Because the weather was extremely cold and the replacement bus from Thomas County would not arrive for three hours, or until about 11 p.m., your officers and the dispatcher at headquarters were able to get special permission for a bus to be dispatched from Kelley Hill to transport our passengers to the warmth of the Military Police headquarters on post, where they were allowed to take refuge until a motel van arrived to transport them to their destination for the night. Three trips were necessary to transport the entire group, so the ordeal extended for more than three hours.

My sincerest thanks are extended to everyone involved in resolving this emergency.

How to get your news in The Bayonet

Requesting coverage of news events

The staff of The Bayonet enjoys covering newsworthy events on post that are timely and pertinent to our readers. Some events we cover include brigade-level changes of command, changes in post policies or procedures and other postwide events. Due to our limited number of personnel, we prefer that coverage requests be submitted at least two weeks in advance.

Some events we do not send a reporter to cover are parties, dinners, dining events, dances, balls, teas, coffees, club and organization meetings and elections, award presentations, changes of command below the brigade level, check presentations and group photos.

Deadlines

Film, photos, stories, letters to the editor and other news items intended for The Bayonet must arrive in our office no later than noon Friday prior to the next week's publication. You may leave stories, film, photos for publication in The Bayonet's drop box located in the Information Office, Room 111, Infantry Hall, Building 4. The deadline for items left in the drop box is noon Friday, also.

Copy must be typed and doubled-spaced, except for letters to the editor which may be handwritten. Typed copy is easier for us to edit, easier for our typesetter and results in fewer errors.

Use civilian dates, times, the name of the building as well as the building number. Also, be sure to include the first and last names of all individuals mentioned in the story, and spell out all acronyms on first reference.

You may fax briefs or announcements only. However, we need the original typewritten copy of stories (anything longer than one page).

Stringers

Stringers are people belonging to various units who write about and take photos of unit activities for The Bayonet.

Unit commanders who would like to arrange for a stringer should call The Bayonet's command information officer at 545-2201.

Stringers need not be trained or have experience as journalists; The Bayonet will provide training and materials including film and photo processing.

Photos

We will accept photos that are black and white glossy prints or color prints. We also accept black-and-white and color negatives and color slides. We prefer action shots — people doing their jobs or interacting with other people. Head and shoulder shots of individuals are also acceptable.

Address

We are located in Infantry Hall, Room 606. Our mailing address is: The Bayonet, Infantry Hall, Room 601, Fort Benning, Ga. 31905. Our fax number is 682-0095 and our e-mail is: fbbayonet@mindspring.com

Former chief of staff praises work of Fort Benning Soldiers

Pvt. 2 Amy L. Nyland
Bayonet staff writer

He held his hands high and spoke with immense pride. As he recalled past experiences and his love of the Army, retired Gen. Gordon R. Sullivan, president of the Association of the U.S. Army (AUSA), allowed the audience to witness moments where he had to choke back emotion.

As he spoke during a general member meeting, Soldiers and civilians alike listened to the words of a man who has helped create not only American history, but Army history as well.

Sullivan, a former chief of staff, devoted 40 years of his life to Army Service and has received numerous awards including the Distinguished Service Medal and Purple Heart. He also served extensive overseas assignments, including two tours in Vietnam and one in Korea.

Sullivan visited Fort Benning to receive the highest award bestowed by the Infantry, the Order of Saint Maurice. He was also the guest speaker for the AUSA Chattahoochee Valley Chapter General Membership Meeting March 26.

The meeting celebrated Fort Benning's sixth consecutive win of the Army Chief of Staff's Installation Excellence Award. The efforts of Soldiers on Fort Benning were honored and the Soldier, NCO and Drill Sergeant of the Year along with Miss AUSA were recognized.

During his introduction of Sullivan, Commanding General Maj. Gen. Carl F. Ernst commented that Fort Benning is a slice of the greatness of the U.S. Army.

Ernst said that Fort Benning Soldiers know and understand they are on the best installation in the world and everyday they prove it by supporting the command and being the "best they can be."

After Ernst's remarks, Sullivan talked about being impressed with Fort Benning and the Soldiers.

"When I came on post I could see the signs proclaiming Fort Benning an award winner," Sullivan said. "But what's more is you can see it and feel it everywhere you go. You (Soldiers) should feel proud you've done a terrific job."

In his speech Sullivan talked about pride, performance and people who have made an impact on his life.

"If you don't think I'm proud to be the president of your association you are kidding yourself," Sullivan said. "I have a great association, a strong association and we are going to tell the Soldier's stories of what they have accomplished."

The night ended with Sullivan being presented with the Order of Saint Maurice by Ernst as lines of Soldiers formed to shake the hand of a man who represents the true American Army.

Post joins in fight against child abuse

Family Advocacy Program

The Army Family Advocacy Program at Fort Benning is joining many states and national organizations in a campaign to "get people to show their true colors" as part of Child Abuse Prevention Month in April.

The Family Advocacy Program under the direction of Rebecca S. Welch, manager, Family Advocacy Program, is a specialized prevention program which focuses on child and spouse abuse. Blue ribbons will be distributed on post and adults are asked to wear a blue ribbon throughout April to symbolize the fight against child abuse and neglect.

In the spring of 1989, Bonnie Finney, a Norfolk, Virginia grandmother, took a stand against child abuse when she tied a symbolic blue ribbon around her van. It was a signal to her community of her personal commitment to involve everyone in the battle to stop child abuse.

Bonnie's own grandson, Michael Wayne "Bubba" Dickenson, was a tragic, young victim of child abuse.

The Blue Ribbon serves as a constant reminder to fight for the protection for all our children.

Family Advocacy Program, Building 2643 Soldiers' Plaza, 545-3344 or 545-5516.

Social Work Services, Building 2625 Soldiers' Plaza, 545-1661.

Family Advocacy First Steps Program, Martin Army Community Hospital, 3rd floor, 544-2020.

University of Georgia, Cooperative Extension Service, Ground Floor, Government Center.

Family Advocacy has coordinated with the Child Development Centers and Youth Services to make educational materials available for parents.

For more information on Child Abuse Prevention Month and the Blue Ribbon campaign, call 545-3344 or 545-5516.

Airborne festival set for April 16-18

Erin A. Nash
Special to the Bayonet©

Fort Benning will participate in the 21st annual Airborne Awards Festival at 10:45 a.m. April 16, with a monument dedication to take place on Airborne Walk. The monument is being dedicated to all who served with the Vietnamese Airborne Division and Team 162, the "Red Hats." Post Commanding General Maj. Gen. Carl F. Ernst will welcome the 500 to 600 participants expected to attend.

The festival takes place April 16-18, with the majority of scheduled events to take place at the Atlanta Airport Sheraton Hotel. The festival honors distinguished members of the Airborne community, past and present.

Red Hats are former members of Airborne Advisory Team 162, Airborne Division Advisory Detachment, U.S. Military Assistance Command, Vietnam. Team 162 provided military assistance to the Vietnamese Airborne Brigade from 1962 to 1973.

The Red Hats veterans' organization, officially the Society of the Vietnamese Airborne, was formed in 1985 at Fort Bragg, N.C. Red Hats take their name from the red berets worn by South Vietnamese troops and U.S. advisers in the division.

Team 162 constituted the largest U.S. advisory effort of the Vietnam War. Some 1,200 Soldiers were assigned to Team 162 during its 11 years of service.

Thirty-two Soldiers and three airmen from Team 162 were killed in action. That was the most of any advisory detachment in Vietnam. Two Army advisers are still missing in action.

At least 30 former team members became generals and 75 sergeants major. One Red Hat earned the Medal of Honor. Many more received Distinguished Service Crosses. Several Vietnamese airborne battalions were awarded Presidential Unit Citations.

American airborne advisers took part in training and combat operations at every level of the Vietnamese unit from battalion to division. Initial advisory duties emphasized planning, training and logistical issues. Later, Team 162 members coordinated U.S. artillery and close-air support for Vietnamese elements.

Retired Gen. Frederick J. Kroesen will be the guest speaker.

During the ceremony, Charles "Swifty" M. Wilson, a member of the test platoon, will pin airborne wings on the youngest member of the newly graduating airborne class.

Lt. Gen. Joseph W. Kinzer will then dedicate the Red Hat monument.

Following the ceremony, participants will have lunch and then proceed to Fryar Drop Zone to observe an airborne operation and airborne graduation.

Directorate of Public Safety

Each year, many people are seriously injured by lawn mowers. Being hit by something thrown by the mower is dangerous because the speed of debris coming out of the discharge chute has been clocked at 200 miles per hour.

The following are ways to protect yourself and your family.

•Wear eye and hearing protection. Sturdy shoes are essential. Avoid loose clothing. Wear pants which cover your legs.

•Inspect the area to be mowed. Pick up stones, toys, metal fragments and anything else that could become a flying missile.

•Check oil and refuel in a well-ventilated area before starting. Never refuel while the motor is running or hot.

•Make sure all guards are in place.

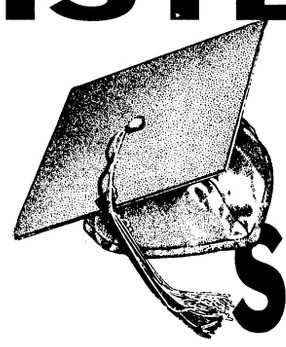
•Mow in daylight only and when the lawn is dry.



•Stand clear when starting the mower. Keep feet away from the mower blade and always stay clear of the discharge chute.

•Push, do not pull your mower. Mow laterally across a slope — not up and down. If on a riding mower, the rule is the opposite.

•To make repairs, clear the discharge chute, or change the cutting height — stop the mower and disconnect the spark plug.

Safety Office lists guidelines for safer jogging, driving

Directorate of Public Safety

Surveys estimate that more than 20 percent of the American population run, walk, or jog as a means to a healthier life. There is no doubt that this is an excellent form of exercise, but the concern is the increasing number of people that have taken to the streets, placing themselves in a potentially dangerous environment.

Motorists already confronted with crowded roads, do not like sharing the streets with joggers, runners, and walkers. Each group seems to annoy and antagonize the other. It is not uncommon to hear reports of motorists and joggers harassing, threatening and occasionally assaulting each other.

The following are a few guidelines for safer running, jogging, and walking:

The use of headphones or ear phones while jogging, running, or walking on installation roads and streets is prohibited. Your sense of hearing may be vital in alerting you to vehicles or other warnings.

When possible, keep to the sidewalks, provided you do not interfere with pedestrian traffic. Jogging, walking, or running around the block a few times may seem boring but it provides the same amount of exercise and is far safer than jogging in the streets.

Always run against the flow of traffic, staying as far to the left as possible, when using roads. This allows you time to spot oncoming cars and get off the road if necessary.

Avoid streets and roads with heavy traffic. Motorists using congested roads are often preoccupied with other cars and are not alert to joggers, runners, and walkers.

Run in a single file when jogging with others. Never jog two, three, or four abreast.

Anticipate dangers. A motorist, unlike a person afoot, cannot stop on a dime. Check traffic before crossing at or between intersections.

Wear light-colored clothing, especially in the early morning, at dusk, or at night. Dark clothing is not seen as soon or as effectively as light-colored garments.

Always show courtesy to motorists. They control a potentially dangerous weapon. Joggers, runners, and walkers who retaliate against the annoying behavior of some drivers can help build up hostile attitudes in those drivers toward pedestrians.

Courtesy, cooperation, and common sense on the roadways of Fort Benning can ensure the safety of everyone.

Safety Guidelines

Safety starts with the individual. Post these safety bullets to help you be a safer member of the Fort Benning community.

Alcohol

- Georgia law defines DUI as 0.08 blood alcohol content (lowest in the USA).
- Alcohol use is a factor in more than 40 of all accidents.
- Do not operate any vehicle or machinery after drinking alcoholic beverages.
- Alcohol will not be consumed while on duty.

Vehicles

- On an average, 200 soldiers die in traffic accidents each year, world wide. If you get killed in an accident it will probably be in a privately owned vehicle.
- State and local laws mandate the wearing of seat belts (lap and shoulder) while operating or riding in vehicles.
- Speed limits:
  a. 15 mph during PT, 0600-0730 Mon - Fri (10 MPH - whenever passing troops).
  b. 15 mph - school zones, parking lots, service drives and alley ways.
  c. 30 mph - unless otherwise specified.
- Secure children under the age of 4 in a safety seat. Never leave a child alone in a vehicle.
- Register vehicle within three working days (Building 2637, 545-3646).

Motorcycles

- Army Motorcycle Safety Course is required for post registration.
- Riders must wear:
  a. Motorcycle helmets with fastened chin strap and shatter-resistant eye protection.
  b. Leather boots or shoes.
  c. Gloves.
  d. Long-legged pants.
  e. Long-sleeved shirts or jacket.
  f. A highly visible reflective vest.

Weapons

- Register privately owned weapons with the military police (Building 2637, 545-3646).
- Store privately owned weapons in arms room or in family quarters.
- Keep weapons unloaded and the ammunition secured separately.
- Hunters must complete a Hunter Safety Course (Building 18, 545-3267).
- Weapons will not be carried in a concealed manner.

Swimming and Boating

- Swim only where a lifeguard is on duty.
- Wear a personal flotation device when boating.
- Do not operate a boat or swim while under the influence of drugs or alcohol.

Inline Skating and Skateboarding

- Wear an approved helmet.
- Wear highly visible clothing and reflective gear during periods of limited visibility.
- Protective pads (i.e. knee and elbow) are encouraged.

Fires

- Dial 911 to report any fires.
- Check smoke detectors monthly.

Joggers, Walkers, or Runners

- Wear brightly colored/reflective clothing.
- Do not wear headphones while jogging on the streets or roadways.

Bicycles

- Wear highly visible, reflective clothing and an approved helmet.
- Bicycles will have a headlight visible 300 feet at night and reflectors (front and rear).
- Use special safety seats for children between 1 and 4 years old.

Sports

- Follow rules and practice good sportsmanship.
- Use protective clothing and equipment.

OCS presents Patterson Award to outstanding graduate of year

Spc. Michelle J. Davis
Bayonet staff writer

The Officer Candidate School will not only induct 30 new members into their Hall of Fame today, but they will also present the 46th annual Robert P. Patterson Memorial Award.

The Patterson Award, which will be presented during the Hall of Fame ceremony at 11 a.m. in Marshall Auditorium, will recognize 2nd Lt. Scott J. Malone II, a 1996 OCS graduate.

The Patterson award goes to the officer selected as the outstanding Infantry graduate of OCS during the previous year.

The award was established in memory of Patterson, a veteran of both World Wars and Distinguished Service Cross recipient. After leaving the military, Patterson went on to serve on the U.S. District Court of Appeals and as Secretary of War for President Harry Truman's administration.

Upon his death in 1952, a trust fund was set up for the presentation on his behalf. Each year, OCS representatives make recommendations to Fort Benning's Commanding General who in turn makes his suggestion to the Patterson family and executors.

Criteria reviewed for the award includes physical training ability, academic scores, demonstrated leadership skills and professional ethics, said Maj. Patrick J. Tennis, executive officer of the 3rd Battalion, 11th Inf. Regt.

Tennis, who served as Malone's Teach, Assess, Council (TAC) officer during OCS, witnessed first hand Malone's leadership skills.

"He has superb leadership ability," Tennis said. "There was no doubt in my mind that he was in competition for the award."

Malone first enlisted in the Army in 1986 and completed numerous assignment including tours with the Long Range Surveillance Detachment, 82nd Airborne at Fort Bragg, N.C., and 3rd Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment at Fort Benning.

Malone is currently assigned to Company C, 2nd Battalion, 327th Infantry Regiment, 101st Airborne Division (Air Assault) at Fort Campbell, Ky., as the unit's executive officer.

Atlanta Hawks honor four ITB Soldiers

Bayonet staff writer

Spc. Michelle J. Davis

The four honorees clutch their jerseys as Turner speaks to the Soldiers in the stands.

Four Infantry Training Brigade Soldiers were honored by the Atlanta Hawks professional basketball organization Sunday during the team's game against the Detroit Pistons.

Hawks general manager Pete Babcock presented Col. Abraham Turner, ITB commander; Command Sgt. Maj. Larry D. Durham, ITB command sergeant major; Sgt. 1st Class Paul Horton, ITB equal opportunity advisor; and Drill Sgt. of the Year Staff Sgt. Sean Polwort of Headquarters Service Company, ITB; with authentic Hawks jerseys in front of the Georgia Dome's estimated 25,000 visitors.

"Fort Benning has done so much for us through their support," said Hawks Director of Marketing Frank Timmerman. "This presentation was one way that we thought we could show our gratitude."

Timmerman said the Soldiers were chosen for their support and commitment to not only the Atlanta Hawks organization, but the military.

In addition to honoring the four Soldiers, Hawks representatives also came out to Fort Benning to sell discount tickets prior to the event.

"We have offered discounted tickets in the past, but we really wanted to get the military community involved in this event," Timmerman said.

In addition to hundreds of military members and their families who came independently to the game, more than 1,100 ITB Soldiers were transported to Atlanta to show support to the honored Soldiers and the Hawks organization.

"It was really a thrill to get out there in front of all those people and be recognized like that," Horton said. "I just can't put into words how it felt to walk out onto that court and look up at the crowd."

This event was the first time the Hawks recognized Soldiers from Fort Benning and Timmerman said it probably won't be the last.

"We have a great relationship with Fort Benning and this is definitely something we would like to continue in the future," he said.

MACH to receive accreditation survey

Martin Army Community Hospital

The Joint Commission on Accreditation of Healthcare Organizations will conduct an accreditation survey of Martin Army Community Hospital May 5-7. The purpose of the survey will be to evaluate the organization's compliance with nationally established Joint Commission standards. The survey results will be used to determine whether, and the conditions under which, accreditation should be awarded the organization.

Joint Commission standards deal with organizational quality of care issues and the safety of the environment in which care is provided. Anyone believing that he or she has pertinent and valid information about such matters may request a public information interview with the Joint Commission's field representatives at the time of the survey. Information presented at the interview will be carefully evaluated for relevance to the accreditation process. Requests for a public information interview must be made in writing and sent to the Joint Commission no later than five working days before the survey begins. The request must also indicate the nature of the information to be provided at the interview. Such requests should be addressed to:

Division of Accreditation Operations, Organization Liaison, Joint Commission on Accreditation of Healthcare Organizations, One Renaissance Boulevard, Oakbrook Terrace, IL 60181

The Joint Commission will acknowledge such requests in writing or by telephone and will inform the organization of the request for any interview. The organization will, in turn, notify the interviewee of the date, time and place of the meeting.

USARSA instructor wins TRADOC honor

Jim Caldwell
TRADOC News Service

FORT MONROE, Va. — A Venezuelan noncommissioned officer who teaches at the U.S. Army School of the Americas and two military policemen are among the 1997 Training and Doctrine Command Instructors of the Year.

Each year TRADOC officials select outstanding instructors in five categories — field grade, company grade, warrant officer, NCO and civilian.

The winners in those categories are, respectively, Maj. Thomas L. Kelly, U.S. Army Field Artillery Center, Fort Sill, Okla.; Capt. Stephen T. Willhelm, U.S. Army Military Police School, Fort McClellan, Ala.; Chief Warrant Officer 4 Jerold J. Unruh, Military Police School; Sgt. 1st Class Pedro Sanchez, U.S. Army School of the Americas, Fort Benning; and Lon D. Flurer, U.S. Army Aviation Center, Fort Rucker, Ala.

"All candidates are winners in a competition of this nature," Maj. Gen. Leroy R. Goff III, TRADOC deputy chief of staff for training, wrote in announcing the top instructors. "Their professionalism as leaders, instructors and mentors ensures the Army's preparedness for the challenges of the future."

Sanchez is the first School of the Americas' faculty member to win instructor of the year honors. He became an instructor in 1996 and has since accumulated more than 100 hours on the podium in five different courses. Among the course subjects are sapper training and NCO training management.

Sanchez credits the instruction he received in the Venezuelan Army as being instrumental in making him a successful instructor. He also learned from other instructors.

"This experience gave me a wide range of knowledge and expertise enabling me to successfully develop my own instructional methods and classes," he said.

The TRADOC Instructor of the Year program was established in 1989 to recognize the contributions instructors make in training future leaders of the Army.

DD Form 2586 "VMET" reports military experience and training

Army Career and Alumni Program

"Transitioning Soldiers must document military experiences, qualifications, work history, training, education and achievements when preparing a resume," said Chick Eagle, a Fort Benning ACAP Counselor.

Preparation of a resume is the accepted way for a job seeker to present their professional history to potential employers. One convenient source available to help with resume preparation is the DD Form 2586, Verification of Military Experience and Training (VMET) that is provided free of charge.

The Department of Defense will issue to each separating Soldier a DD Form 2586, VMET report. Often Soldiers have had many military training courses and job experiences, perhaps too many for some to recall easily for inclusion on resumes, job or college applications. The VMET report is created from automated records on file and includes military job assignments, training programs with recommended college credits and civilian job titles that relate to specific military occupation specialties (MOS).

Separating Soldiers should automatically receive the VMET report no later than 120 days before separation date. It is recommended that each separating Soldier call the VMET office to check the status of the automatic system as early as possible during transition and update mailing address to insure receipt in time to be useful. CONUS based Army personnel call: (800) 258-VMET.

"Soldiers who have received their VMET are encouraged to bring it to ACAP preseparation briefings, workshops and counseling sessions," Eagle said. "This useful tool is available to separating Soldiers to help transition back to the civilian workforce."

For information about the VMET and other ACAP services, call the ACAP Center at 545-2308 or 545- 2309 in Soldiers' Plaza, Building 2634.

'Long rifle' initiative

Pfc. Michael Groh, Company E, 1st Battalion, 50th Infantry, Infantry Training Brigade, adjusts the position of one of the sand table's range obstacles while his drill sergeant, Staff Sgt. Raul Munoz directs the placement. Groh's previous construction background came in handy when he volunteered to help build the popsicle stick structures and paint rocks for the sand table kit. It took about a week to complete the structures, which can be used on any Fort Benning range, Munoz said.

Latin American students learn about counterdrug operations

Spc. Alberto Betancourt
U.S. Army School of the Americas Public Affairs Office

Planning, leading and executing counterdrug operations are just a few of the tools Latin American students learn at the U. S. Army School of the Americas.

"What they're doing here is critically important," said Brian Sheridan, principal deputy assistant secretary of defense. "There is no greater threat to our hemisphere right now than drug trafficking and the young people who just graduated are going to go out and risk their lives trying to keep cocaine, heroin and marijuana off the streets of the United States."

Sheridan was the guest speaker at USARSA's Counterdrug Operations Course graduation March 19.

"The curriculum and the program of instruction is very relevant to our nation's war on drugs program," he said. "If you look across the hemisphere, the one thing that is needed the most is training. I think USARSA plays a unique and vital role in serving our nation's interest and keeping us engaged in the hemisphere."

Sgt. 1st Class Luis Barraza, chief instructor of the 10-week Counterdrug Operations Course, said the training was oriented towards realistic and strenuous field operations. Students developed counterdrug interdiction operation skills through performance-oriented training while being subjected to physical stressful conditions.

According to Barraza, the course included instruction on advanced marksmanship, close quarters battle, surveillance and targeting techniques, riverine operations, development of intelligence networks, preparation of the battlefield and physical fitness, combatives. The course also included explosive entry techniques, land navigation, communications, staff organization and planning, special infiltration and exfiltration techniques and patrolling operations.

"We have two FTX's (field training exercises) during the course, which enable the students to apply what they've learned," Barraza said. "Both FTX's have drug interdiction operations. They also incorporate planning with operation and warning orders, allowing them to execute what they've planned."

There were 26 students, eight from Mexico and 18 from Peru, who attended and graduated from the course that began in January.

Capt. Eric D'India, commander of USARSA's Special Operations Detachment, said the school's goal is to assist in fostering military-to-military contact for The U.S. Southern Command.

"We have the lead in helping develop professional militaries in Latin America," D'India said. "Their desired end state is to have the highest level of democratization in Latin America."

"We are a tool in executing that by trying to develop a more professional officer and NCO corps for the military, as well as police officers for Latin America."

Although most of his operations occur at sea, Capt. Carlos Gomez of Mexico's navy, said the course was solid training.

"This course has helped me understand how we can tactically fight the war on drugs by land, air and water," Gomez said. "Everything I've learned will be very applicable in my countries' military."

Gomez also said the course was very important to the war on drugs because it helped all Latin American countries plan and execute at the same standards.

Capt. Gaston Farach of Peru's National Police, said the course will benefit his countries' war on drugs.

"This course teaches excellent patrolling techniques which will be very effective for us in the jungles of Peru," Farach said. "Fort Benning's terrain is not like Peru's, but the techniques we learned will be applicable in any terrain."

Farach, along with the other 17 Peruvian students, is a member of his countries' Special Anti-Drug Team.

"I will always recommend to my senior leaders that we continue to send students here," he said. "My country has benefited greatly from the graduates of this great school and particularly from this course."

"We are giving them the skills to be successful in stopping narco-trafficking in their country," Sheridan said. "We're giving them the skills they need to help keep drugs off the streets of America."

3/75 rangers begin jungle operations warfare training in Panama Monday

Sgt. Marc G. Turchin
Bayonet staff writer

FORT SHERMAN, Panama — Soldiers from Fort Benning's 3rd Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment, arrived in Panama March 27 for training in jungle operations warfare.

More than 500 rangers flew into one of Panama's civilian airports because of heavy flight traffic at Howard Air Force Base. The rangers then hopped onto buses and took a three-hour trip through the innerstructure of Panama City, crossed the Panama Canal and into Fort Sherman, where the battalion will be training for the next three weeks.

With the temperatures in the low 90s and the humidity at nearly 100 percent, the school offers all types of jungle operations.

"What Panama offers that Fort Benning doesn't have is the jungle," said Maj. Gary J. Volesky, battalion liaison officer. "We can train on unfamiliar terrain and we have the opportunity to work with different types of boats."

During the first few days the battalion became acclimated to the weather and ensured the equipment was in working order. Soldiers began the first of many classes to get oriented with the jungle on Monday.

Volesky said the battalion would go through three modules of training as part of their mission here.

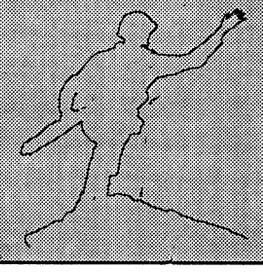
The first module involves a boat situational training exercise (STX).

"These will be platoon raids," Volesky said. "Our main focus throughout the deployment will be on the squad and platoon."

The next training mission will be a platoon live fire.

This will be done at the Pina live-fire village. According to battalion officials, the rangers will trek through terrain including thick jungle, hills and swamps and, after rehearsals, conduct a live fire. The rangers will train for military operations on urbanized terrain (MOUT) at the village. The village is equipped with three buildings for the rangers to train on, Volesky said.

"That will give us the opportunity to do some MOUT training also," he said.



The final training mission is called a northern STX.

Rangers will fly via helicopter to a determined site, march through the jungle and then attack two separate objectives.

Children learn math basics in pre-K, kindergarten programs

Pvt. 2 Amy L. Nyland
Bayonet staff writer

It has been said that curiosity killed the cat, but for a young child being precocious means exploring the world around them and learning in great detail about that world.

Early education is a stepping stone in this exploration. It helps lay a foundation for a child's educational future and prepares them for the "great beyond."

Now this foundation becomes even broader as children in pre-K and kindergarten are taught a subject that has been around for centuries and continues to challenge the greatest of minds. The subject is math.

"Children at the pre-K and kindergarten age are not too young to learn the concepts of math," said Sheila G. Cousins, a kindergarten teacher at Loyd Elementary School. "Their minds are like sponges and they are able to absorb so much. The earlier they begin to learn about math the better," Cousins added.

According to Cousins, teaching children math early helps them to gain confidence in their mathematical abilities. Having confidence in math gives children an advantage as they advance to the next level of schooling.

Cousins said teaching the children math in a fun and interesting way and getting them to realize math can be related to everyday life gives the children a better understanding of math.

She said making math fun motivates the children and helps them to develop an enthusiasm which will be carried with them through the years.

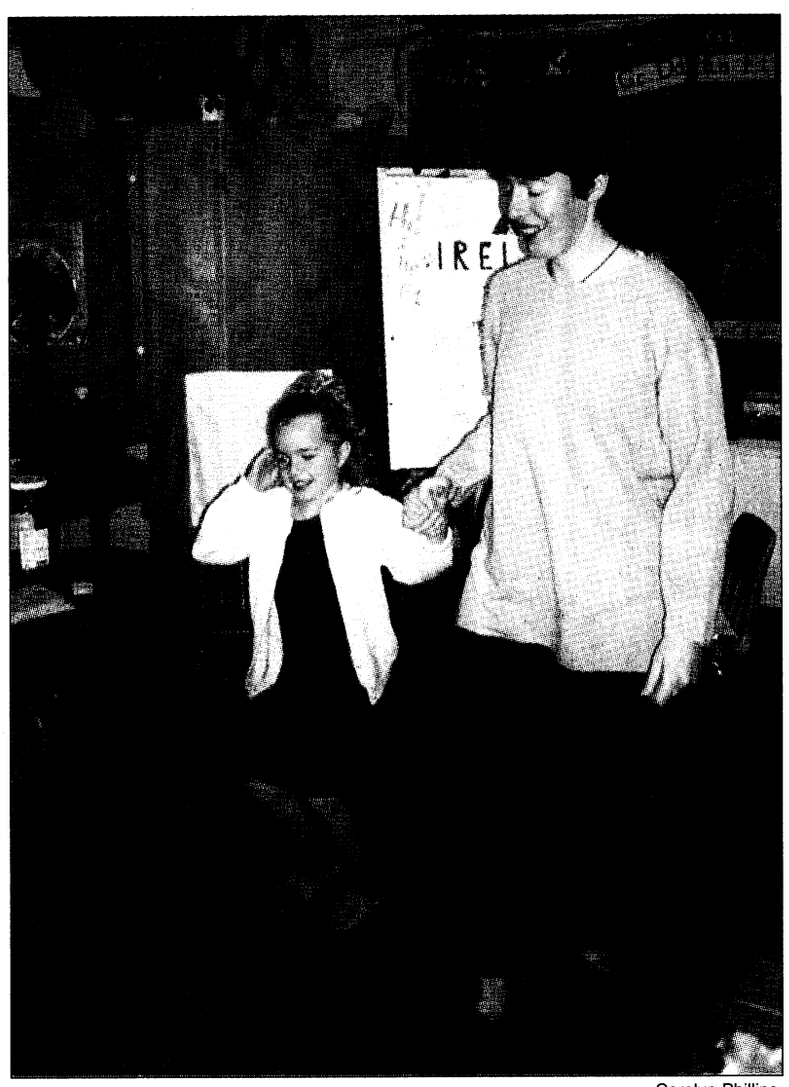
"I remember when I was in school and math was just a paper and a pencil and I hated it," Cousins said. "If we make math fun and meaningful, then children will leave here with a desire to pursue math, which is very important."

According to Katherine Walker, pre-K teacher at Loyd School, children are naturally curious about numbers.

She said teachers devote a lot of classroom time to basic number concepts and developing ways to teach math to the children.

"We try to immerse them in math," Walker said. "We try to incorporate math into everything such as songs, computer programs and stories. We want children to develop that inner feel for math."

Walker said that the children learn math through playing with manipulatives such as blocks and puzzles. They also explore the concept of less and more, fewer and greater by classifying objects into groups and comparing them. The children play at a table filled with rice and move the rice from container to container to compare full and empty or half-full.



She said that pre-K does not have a set math curriculum. However math is incorporated into most aspects of the classroom.

"It's all about active learning and exploration of math," Walker said. "We want the children to develop a sense of numbers but we also want them to realize that there is no right or wrong way to do math."

Walker said it is very important to start teaching children early about what numbers and math means and instilling the importance of their use in children.

She said anyone and anything can be used to educate a child about math. Parents and teachers can use anything from pebbles to macaroni to teach basic concepts.

"If a child doesn't learn the basics of math they are going to struggle later on," Walker said. "It is vital to help children develop a strong foundation. It will benefit them in the future."

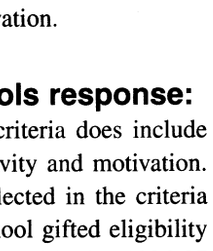
Irish dancing



Kindergarten student Ashley Schaefer, 5, daughter of Robin and Capt. Malcolm Schaefer, Company A, 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment, dances an Irish jig with Una Wilson March 17. Wilson is a native of Ireland and a volunteer at White Elementary School who demonstrated the the dance for the children. This was part of a St. Patrick's Day celebration in Carolyn Phillips kindergarten class. Other activities the children participated in included trying to catch a leprechaun and learning about Irish money.

School officials respond to Education 2000 Symposium suggestions

Fort Benning Schools

Editor's note: During the Education 2000 Symposium, the participants suggested ideas for making the transition easier for students moving into the Fort Benning Schools and surrounding high schools.

The Bayonet will publish the suggestions and the progress made by the schools.

Issue:

During the symposium, parents of gifted children discussed the problem of lack of publicity for the program's criteria.

Fort Benning Schools response:

Gifted eligibility criteria will be made available to the public through the media prior to August registration. Criteria will also be advertised during the school tours for incoming students in May and during summer registration.

Issue:

Parents discussed the issue of multiple criteria, which should include achievement, ability, creativity and motivation.

Fort Benning Schools response:

The present eligibility criteria does include achievement, ability, creativity and motivation. Each of these are also reflected in the criteria established for Middle School gifted eligibility at Fort Benning beginning with the 1996-97 school year. Motivation would be reflected in grades.

Issue:

For kindergarten though second grade, provide a resource model "pull out" based on teacher recommendation and or classroom performance.

Fort Benning Schools response:

The Fort Benning Schools presently serves accelerated kindergarten through second-grade students through a variety of programs geared to meet individual needs. These include accelerated reader programs, academically challenging library and media center activities, computer lab programs, extra-curricular programs, literacy groups, cross-grade level grouping to accommodate reading, language and math needs.

Issue:

Provide self-contained classroom for upper elementary students.

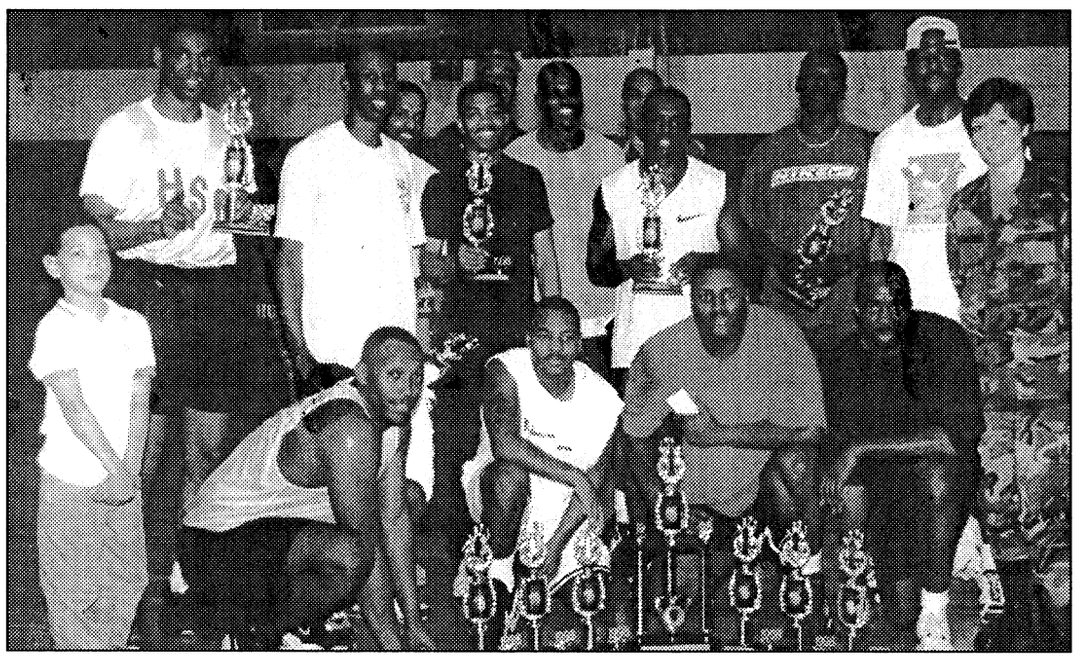
Fort Benning Schools response:

Upper elementary students are served using the self-contained classroom model.

Issue:

Provide honor and advanced placement classes for middle and high school students.

Fort Benning Schools response:

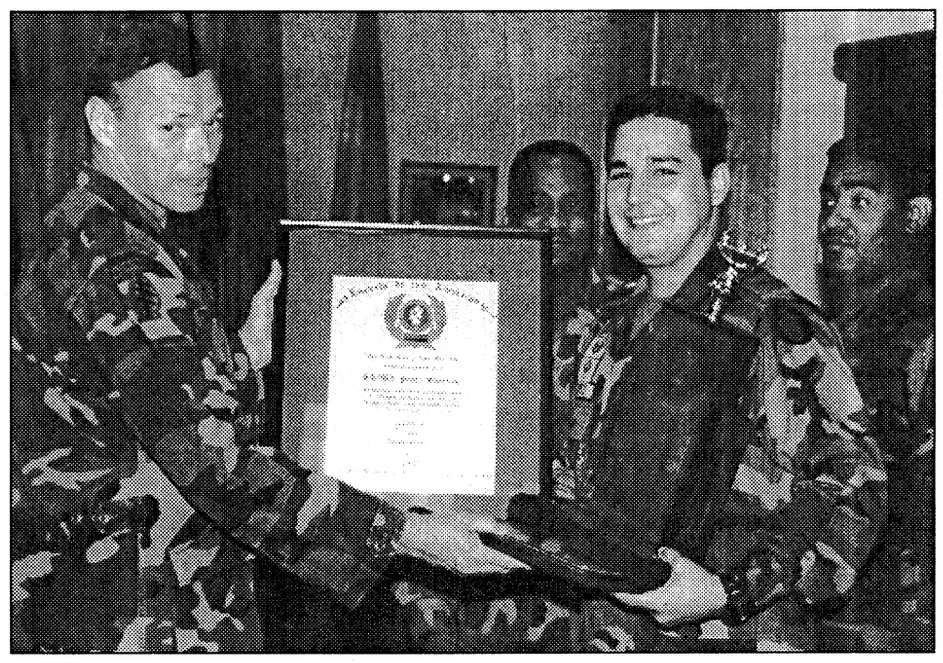


Faith Middle School provides classes for eighth-grade students in geometry and algebra I and has applied for Carnegie Unit status through the state of Georgia.

Issue:

Many parents are unaware of the details of the gifted student program. These should be provide in the parent orientation.

Fort Benning Schools response:



A parent orientation will be provided prior to the start of the school year. Tours are being set up for all parents of fifth-grade students in May. These will reach parents of all students. Gifted criteria will be discussed then.

Directorate of Public Works

The United States Army Corps of Engineers is designing a project for a whole neighborhood renovation in the White Elephant Housing Area. This project is scheduled to be awarded by September 1998 with the starting date of Nov. 3. This contract will take approximately 24 months to complete. To reduce the number of families that will be required to relocate, plans are to stop assigning families to this area. The goal is to minimize the number of families that will need to be relocated when actual construction begins in November.

To address questions and concerns residents may have on this project, Col. R. O. Buck, the Director of Public Works, will conduct a meeting with residents from 7 to 8 p.m. Tuesday at White Elementary School. Housing representatives will be on hand for this meeting to discuss the scope of the renovation and plans for relocating residents.

For more information, call Ron Smith at 545-2988.

DPW plans water outage for Soldiers Plaza

There will be a water outage affecting all of Soldiers' Plaza (2600 Block) from 8 a.m. to 2 p.m. Saturday. This outage is necessary to install metering equipment for several buildings in Soldiers' Plaza.

For information, call Gene Cross, Construction Inspection Branch, DPW, 545-1571.

DPW plans steam outage for Main Post

There will be a steam, heating, and hot water outage affecting all of the 2700 and 2800 Blocks including Buildings 4, 6, 17, 73, 74, 75, 76, 83, 399, NCO Club, Main Post Bowling Center, Bernheim Dental Clinic, Troop Medical Clinic No. 1 (2822), Troop Medical Clinic No. 2 (2750), Sightseeing Chapel, Audie Murphy Gym and DOL Shop No. 1 from 1 a.m. to midnight. This will result in no domestic hot water, no heating and no steam for the duration of the outage. This outage is necessary to repair steam and condensate lines throughout Main Post. Briant Wells Field House will have showers available. The operating hours for Briant Wells Field House is from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m.

For more information, call Mark Fincher, Chief, Energy Management Branch, at 545-7928.

Back pain: Prevention and treatment give relief

Dr. Virginia D. Yates
Martin Army Community Hospital

One of the most frustrating health problems among humans is back pain. Not only is it one of the most common problems, but it is also one of the most difficult to treat.

Some estimated 80 percent of Americans will experience back pain in a lifetime. The most common cause, according to a Harvard Medical School report in 1990, is strained muscles or ligaments. Problems result when a person places either a heavy, unexpected, or prolonged strain on a back. Some people repeatedly expose their backs to awkward positions or prolonged sitting leading to pain.

Being strong and flexible will help prevent back injury. Stretches should be slow and gentle. These concepts are the basis for many Yoga and Tai Chi exercises. Avoid vigorous repetitive stretching, especially in a twisting motion, which leads to over stretching and may do more harm than good.

The most important strength exercise you can do for your back is to stand or sit as tall as possible. When you stand or sit tall, your abdominal and back muscles contract. You may also notice that your clothes suddenly feel looser at the waist! If you continue to stand as tall as possible every time the thought passes your mind, you will eventually create a permanent and improved change in your body shape. You will also place traction on your spine and may unload pressure off the discs and nerve roots which can be a source of pain.

These exercises are for daily prevention, but what about a new injury to the back? Most back injuries improve in one month as long as you avoid restraining. The best advice is listen to your back. Avoid movements that make the pain worse or cause a shooting pain. Remember to bend at the knees and not at the back.

Place ice cubes in a wet towel and place them on the painful area of the back for twenty minutes several times per day. Ice can ease the pain effectively in most cases. New pain is called acute and old pain is called chronic.

Over-the-counter nonsteroidal anti-inflammatory medications such as Motrin or ibuprofen (take up to 800 mg at a time), Aleve and aspirin have been shown to be effective. Remember, these can lead to bleeding in your stomach, so take with food cautiously. Muscle relaxants are available by prescription but generally do not relax newly strained muscles well. They are a sedative and may help you sleep in the early stages of an injury. Ice will do a better job of relaxing muscle spasms.

Physical Therapists teach McKenzie exercises which are one of the proven effective exercises for treating acute back pain. If your back pain is chronic or if you want to learn how to prevent future back injuries, the Physical Therapy Back School is available by referral and can be valuable.

Chiropractic maneuvers such as manipulation have been shown to be more effective for chronic back pain. Injections of anesthetics and steroids may give short term help to chronic back pain. Little has been studied in western literature of the effects of acupuncture, a treatment long recognized in Asian countries.

The National Institute of Health recently published a statement that deep relaxation may relieve chronic pain as readily as drugs and surgery. Statements in support of deep relaxation techniques have been published from the Department of Pain Research at the University of Washington School of Medicine in Seattle and from the physician director of behavioral medicine at Beth Israel Deaconess Medical Center/Harvard Medical School in Boston. The Occupational Therapy Department offers stress management by referral and may be a source for relaxation information.

Not all back pain problems disappear. Those that are chronic can be improved through the various options noted. Always, the concepts of daily good posture and proper body mechanics prevail as the foundation for all other treatments.

(Dr. Yates is a medical doctor who also holds a master's degree in physical therapy.)

Better Business Bureaus help solve business disputes

Better Business Bureau

COLUMBUS — Are you having trouble getting a manufacturer to honor a "money back" guarantee?

Have you reached an impasse with a company over its misleading advertising or having problems with a product or service failing to perform as promised?

Chances are, the Better Business Bureau (BBB) can help you resolve your dispute quickly and at minimal or no cost.

For more than 80 years, the BBB has offered dispute resolution services that are informal, customer friendly and can help both consumers and businesses overcome a variety of common marketplace conflicts. As non-profit, business member organizations, BBB's promote ethical business and advertising practices.

If you have a dispute with a company the BBB suggests that you first contact the company and try to resolve the issue.

If the dispute is not resolved, you should file a written and signed complaint with the BBB. After the complaint is reviewed and accepted, a copy is sent to the management of the company. When the BBB receives a response from the company, it is reviewed and mailed to the complainant. If the business does not respond within a specified number of days, the BBB will suggest alternative courses that can be taken to resolve the problem.

If the dispute remains unsettled, the BBB offers conciliation, mediation and arbitration to help solve the problem.

In conciliation, your views are presented and discussed with the business, and in turn, the business's viewpoint is presented to you. This usually takes place by telephone or mail and frequently settles the matter simply and quickly. Most disputes are settled through conciliation.

The next step may be mediation, in which a trained mediator meets with you and the business to guide you in working out your own mutually agreeable solutions. Like conciliators, mediators don't decide who is "right" or "wrong." Instead, they help the parties involved reach a solution on their own — one that works best for them.

The final step that may be available to you is arbitration. In an arbitration hearing, an arbitrator listens to both sides and weighs the evidence presented. He or she then makes a decision about the dispute after the hearing is over.

BBB arbitration is binding on both parties in most cases. However, in some cases, particularly those involving disputes with automobile manufacturers, you are free to go to court if you are not satisfied with the arbitrator's decision.

If you need help resolving a marketplace dispute, contact the Better Business Bureau: the BBB's web site on the Internet at www.bbb.org to locate the BBB nearest you.

Holy Week celebrates life and death

Chaplain (Capt.) Steve Bounds
3rd Brigade, 3rd Infantry Division (Mechanized)

Holy Week is the holiest week of the Christian year. The events that transpired during this week almost 2,000 years ago, form the foundation of the Christian faith. The week begins with Palm Sunday.

reflections

As a child, I thought that this was a most unusual name for such a special day. As I grew older, I learned about the significance of what happened on the original Palm Sunday.

Jesus sent his disciples to fetch the foal of a donkey upon which no one had ever ridden. In humble submission to the Lord, this young donkey did not buck or try to run away when Jesus sat upon his back.

As Jesus rode the donkey into the city, the people went before him and placed their coats and palm branches in the pathway. This was a high honor that was only accorded to royalty.

They sang out his praise: "Hosanna to the Son of David! Blessed is he who comes in the name of the LORD! Hosanna in the highest!" (Matthew 21:9, NKJV) This was their declaration of their belief that he was their king.

Upon entering the temple, Jesus found it filled with people who were making money off those who had come to worship God and offer sacrifices to him.

Many of them were being dishonest in their transactions. Jesus became angry at this pollution of the house of worship. He drove them out overturning their tables and releasing their animals. Through the chaos, he loudly declared, "It is written, 'My house shall be called a house of prayer,' but you have made it a den of thieves." (Matthew 21:13, NKJV)

After a number of other public confrontations, the leaders began to plot how they could get rid of Jesus.

On the first Maundy Thursday, Jesus met with his disciples to eat the Passover meal together for the final time. Jesus told them that men were plotting to have him killed and that each of the disciples would all forsake Him. After they had dined, Jesus took bread and the cup and instituted the memorial ceremony for the death He was about to endure.

Jesus took the bread, blessed it and said, "This is My body which is given for you; this do in remembrance of Me." (Luke 22:19, NKJV) He also took the cup and said, "This cup is the new covenant in My blood, which is shed for you." (Luke 22:20, NKJV) This became a testimony of the Lord's death.

Paul wrote, "For as often as you eat this bread and drink this cup, you proclaim the Lord's death till he comes." (1 Corinthians 11:26, NKJV)

Shortly after this, Jesus went with his disciples to a garden on the Mount of Olives to pray. While there, Judas came accompanied by a great multitude with swords and staves and took Jesus to be tried before the chief priest and his counsel. Although they could find no witnesses to testify against Him, they finally charged Jesus with blasphemy and sedition. He was then ushered to the court of Pontius Pilate then to Herod and back to Pilate. Although Pilate declared Jesus to be faultless, he ordered the crucifixion — the Roman form of capital punishment.

On Good Friday, Jesus died on the cross for our sins. This was the greatest confirmation of God's love for us.

Paul wrote, "But God demonstrates His own love toward us, while we were still sinners, Christ died for us." (Romans 5:8, NKJV)

Our personal faith makes salvation available to each of us. The exciting climax to this series of events came on that first Easter Sunday when Christ arose from the dead. Oh what joy his disciples must have felt when they discovered that the tomb was empty. Let's share in their joy as we observe Holy Week this year.

Horse show set — The Fort Benning Hunt Club has scheduled an exhibition horse show for 1 p.m. April 18.

The show will feature demonstrations of various horse breeds and disciplines including dressage and show jumping.

The show is open to the public and is free of charge.

For more information, call 689-3945.

Georgia Pride hosts tryouts — The Georgia Pride will host open tryouts from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. April 11 at the South Commons Softball Stadium in Columbus.

Any female with prior fastpitch playing experience is invited to tryout. However, trying out for a professional team will make a high school or college athlete ineligible.

Tryouts will involve defensive and offensive work. Athletes are expected to field ground and fly balls.

All participants must bring a glove, bat, cleats, catching gear (if catcher) and come prepared to play on the day of the tryout.

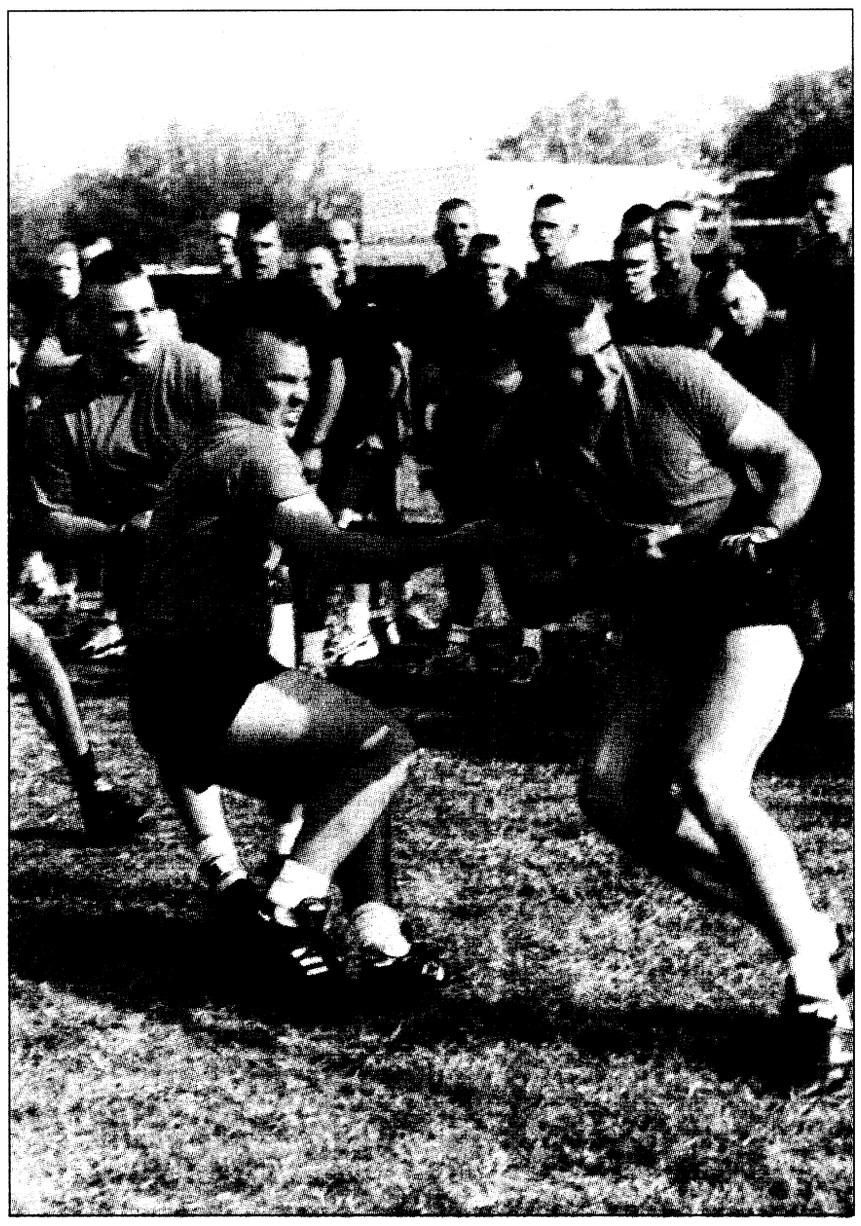
Participants must register by Tuesday. The registration fee is $25.

For more information, call 653-5272.

Gun club sponsors pistol match — The Fort Benning Rifle and Pistol Club is sponsoring a Glock Sport Shooting Foundation (GSSF) Match Saturday and Sunday at English Range.

The event, Old South Classic VI, is expected to draw between 300-400 participants from across the U.S.

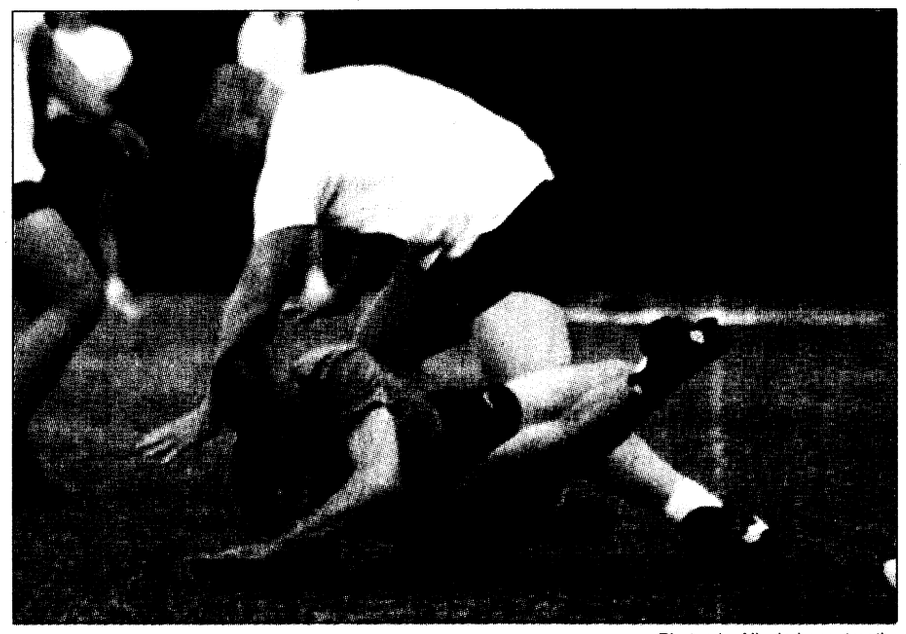
Participants are required to fire Glock pistols for the event. Club members may use a club-owned Glock for free.



Registration fee is $25 if competitors pre-register. GSSF membership is also required. Membership is $20 per year.

For more information, call 689-3371.

BASS club holds bimonthly meetings — The Bass Anglers Sportsman's Society (BASS) Club of Fort Benning meets the second and fourth Tuesday of every month at 7:30 p.m. in Faith Middle School's cafeteria. The club is open to all active duty, retired and military dependents.



For more information, call Mike Timm after 5 p.m. at 682-5850.

The competitors finished off the Banner Day activities with a tug-of-war.

A day of friendly competition

Rangers conduct Banner Day

Special to the Bayonet©

Three-hundred rangers screamed and cheered for their competitor of choice as companies A, B, C and Headquarters and Headquarters Company competed against each other at "Banner Day," March 24.

"A day of friendly competition," as described by Sgt. William Breen, Company A, 3rd Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment kicked off with a three-mile run as part of an event called "The Endurathon." The event also consisted of an additional two-mile run with the Soldier's rucksack and ended with a three-mile bike race.

"Banner Day is a break from normal, everyday training," said Spc. Ken Martin, HHC, 3d Bn., 75th Rgr. Regt.

During this "break" the rangers competed in many events. One event, "flickerball," was a game a lot like rugby, but instead of just running across a line to get points, the competitors had to throw the football through a large round hole cut out of a standing piece of wood about 10 feet off the ground.

Other events held were basketball, soccer, tug-of-war and a ranger special operations vehicle (RSOV) push.

During the RSOV push, five men pushed the vehicle back and forth across Peden Field while one man steered, racing against the other companies.

None of the events at Banner Day attracted a crowd quite as large as the event that seemed to be everyone's favorite — hand-to-hand combatives, which is "ranger speak" for wrestling.

Demonstrating moves they all had learned while in the battalion, each pair of rangers wrestled their opponent to the ground, some even drawing blood. The spectators actively participated as they cheered, jeered and yelled insults and suggestions.

"To win at combatives, it takes skill and the aggressive nature of the highly trained ranger," Breen said.

No matter how aggressive the Rangers were with each other, it all seemed to be in good sport.

"Banner Day symbolizes the competitive spirit at the ranger battalion," Martin said.

Although highly competitive, the full-day event was deemed beneficial by many in the battalion.

"Banner Day builds spirit and camaraderie," Breen said.

AMU shooters win matches, prepare for international competition

USAMU PAO

Shooters of the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit continue to score some major victories in the past few weeks.

The following results are just some of their recent accomplishments:

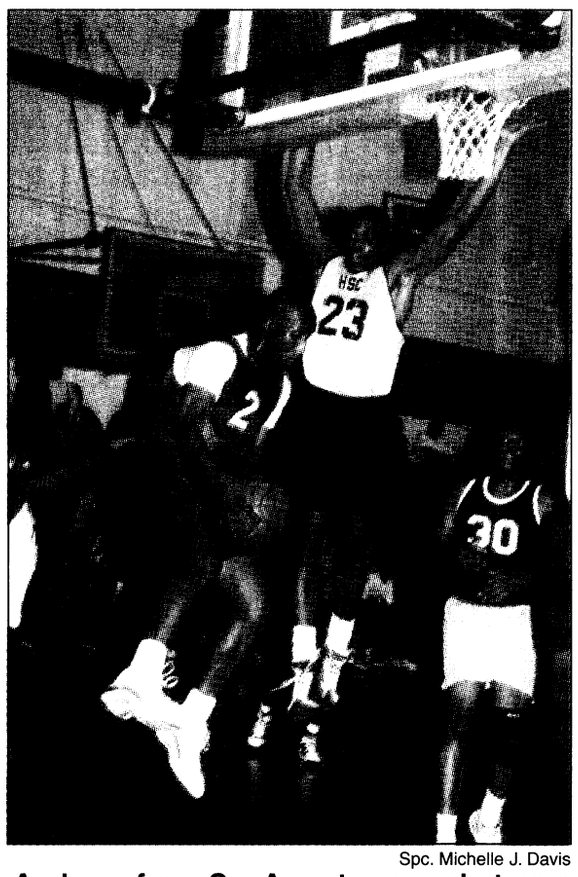
During the Wolf Creek Inter-Skeet Shoot March 20-21 in Atlanta, shotgun shooter Shawn C. Dulohery won the two-day match and Anthony D. Naatjes took second on March 20.

Also on March 20-21, pistol shooter Daryl L. Szarenski took second in the Free Pistol Match the first day while William G. King Jr. finished second in the Free Pistol Match March 21.

During the Conseil International du Sport Militaire Tryouts March 15 on Fort Benning, Steven M. King finished second in the match as Roger C. Jacobson took third. Terry Anderson, a 1996 Olympian, took the title. Rhonda L. Bright won the Women's Division and Kimberly J. Kolb took second.

The USAMU Service Pistol Team won the category of the Dixie Match March 15 in Jacksonville, Fla. Thomas A. Rose won the Leg Match and broke the match record. Jason A. Sargent was second in the Nondistinguished Category.

The marksmanship unit is currently preparing to host the International Grand Prix May 4-11 at Phillips, Pool and Hook ranges on Fort Benning.



There will be competition in three Olympic shooting disciplines: International Pistol, International Rifle and Shotgun.

The competition is in preparation for the upcoming World Cup, which is scheduled for May 12-17, where teams from more than 50 countries are expected to compete.

"The Grand Prix will be the final tune-up match for the U.S. Shooting Team as well as international shooters before the 1998 World Shooting Championships in Barcelona, Spain in July," said USAMU Deputy Commander Bob Aylward.

More than 45 1996 Olympians are anticipated to compete in the Grand Prix.

For more information, call 545-5436.

ITB team clinches post B-ball championship

Spc. Michelle J. Davis
Bayonet staff writer

The intramural basketball season came to an end March 26 as Headquarters Service Company, Infantry Training Brigade, soared past Company A, 2nd Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment, 56-53 to claim the post basketball championship at Santiago Fitness Center.

In the first few minutes of the game, both teams scrambled to put the first points on the board, but HSC took the lead and didn't let it go.

"Our goal was to gain the lead and never relinquish it, and that's what we did," said coach Thyris Banks of HSC, ITB.

Although ITB led the majority of the game, Co. A kept the score close throughout the 28 minutes of play and fought back each time ITB tried to pull ahead.

By halftime, Co. A was only down by one point as HSC led 24-23.

"Coming into the game we knew we were going to have to work hard and we played our hearts out," Banks said.

At the start of the tournament, the ITB team had recorded only one loss during the regular season to the 1st Battalion, 50th Infantry Regiment, ITB. Co. A, 2nd Bn., 29th Inf. Regt., later beat the team during one of the semifinal rounds of the tournament.

"We knew that they must have been good if they were able to beat 1-50th," Banks added. "And they were good. Each team we played in the tournament was a challenge."

Banks contributed his team's victories to the discipline and cohesion of the team.

"We work well as a team and from day one of the season, we had our minds set that we were going to take the championship," he said. "The teams we played were all good enough to beat us, but we had a stronger will to win."

In the tournament's consolation game, played prior to the championship game, 4th Ranger Training Battalion slid past 1st Bn., 50th Inf. Regt., ITB, 45-38.

The top teams took to the court after beating out 12 other teams.

"We started out the season with 49 teams in the four divisions on post and only the 16 with the best records were given a chance to play for the title," said Carol Gearheart, intramural sports coordinator, during the awards presentation following the championship game. "These four teams represent the best of Fort Benning."

Army powerlifters dominate meet

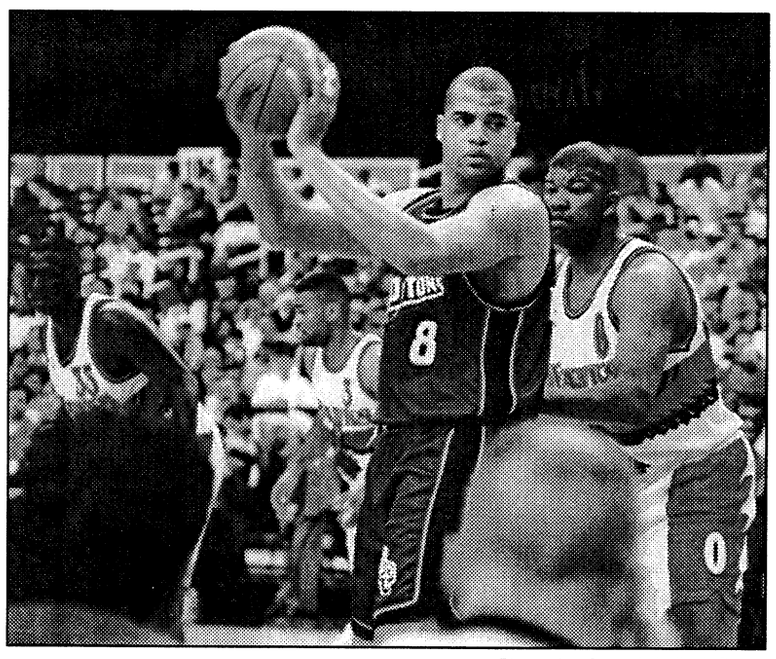
FORT HOOD, Texas — Sixty-eight military and collegiate powerlifters assembled at Abrams Physical Fitness Center on Feb. 28 as Fort Hood hosted the 1998 USA Powerlifting National Military Championships.

Fort Hood's team members celebrated the homecoming by capturing their fifth consecutive powerlifting championship during the meet.

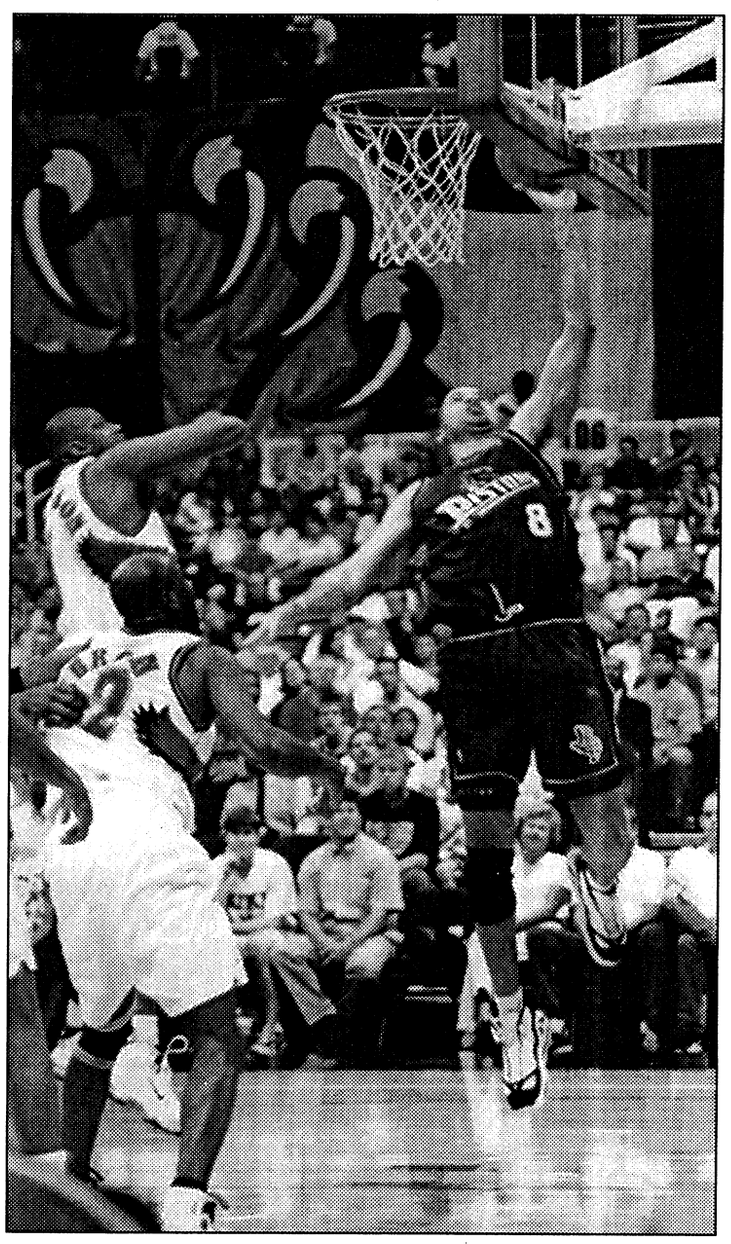
Teams from all four services, as well as lifters from regional colleges, competed in squat, bench press and dead lifting events.

John Geiser (132 lbs.); Swindell Autry (181 lbs.); Anthony Jongs (198 lbs.); Kevin Stewart (242 lbs.); and Calvin Thompson (275 lbs.) captured first place in their weight classes for the Fort Hood team.

Female power lifters Donna Covington (148 lbs.) and Paulette Calhoun (181 lbs.) won victories for Fort Hood.



"These are the military championships and we have lifters from all over the world and every branch competing," said Military Chairman for USA Powerlifting and Fort Hood Powerlifting Coach Johnny Graham during the event. "We had lifters come in from Japan, Germany, and Cuba, as well as from all over the United States."



"We have 11 weight classes for male and female lifters," Graham said. "The best of three lifts counts toward the total."

"We're giving awards for first through fifth place," he added.

Lifters competed individually and in a team. Teams of Marines from Fort Pendleton, sailors from Fort Worth, as well as Fort Hood Soldiers and a Coast Guard team from Destin, Fla., competed at the event.

The Fort Hood team compiled a lofty record in recent years. "Fort Hood's team has won the championship for the last four years," Graham said of his squad. "We've actually been undefeated for four years."

Banner: Soldiers learn sportsmanship

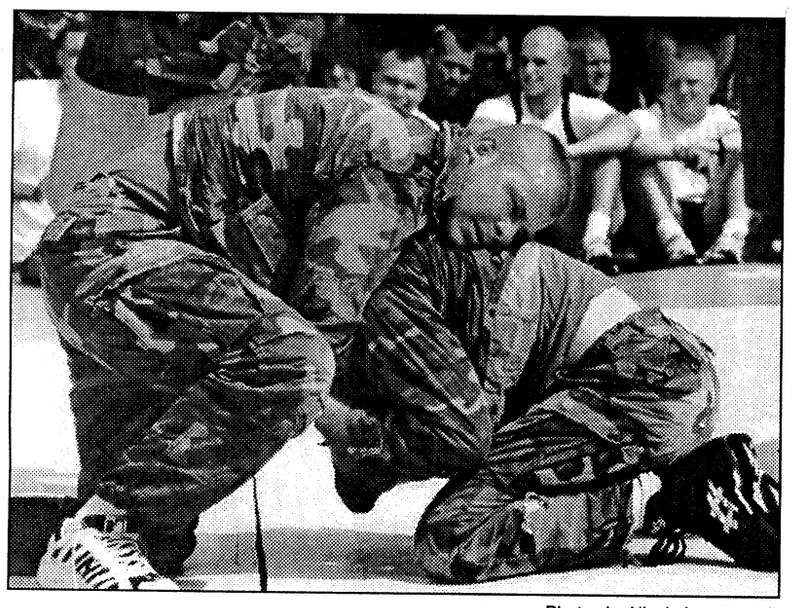
Banner Day brings all of the companies within the battalion together by promoting the idea of sportsmanship," said Pfc. Scott Wheeler of Company A.

Promoting sportsmanship was not the only motive behind the founding of Banner Day.



Leadership, said battalion commander, Lt. Col. Mike Ferriter, is an important aspect of being in battalion.

"A day like today is so physically challenging that it gives the men a chance to use their leadership qualities," Ferriter said.

Even some family members who came out to watch the events had something good to say about Banner Day.

"This event is good for the guys because it gets them away from work and gives them something to aim for," said Ann Stanley, wife of 1st Lt. John Stanley, HHC, 3rd Bn., 75th Ranger Regt.

"I love this," said Vicki Martin, wife of Sgt. 1st Class Kevin Martin, HHC, 3rd Bn., 75th Ranger Regt. "It gives these guys a chance to get out and compete and have fun without having to worry about rank."

Soldiers prepare for Army 10-Miler

USAIC Public Affairs Office

This year's Army 10-Miler is scheduled for October.

According to 2nd Lt. John F. Detro, there will probably be two qualifying races to select the team from Fort Benning.

The team is looking for males who can run two miles in under 11 minutes and 10 miles in under 56 minutes. Women should be able to run 10 miles in under 70 minutes, he said.

Last year, five females and five males represented Fort Benning during the annual event.

The teams will consist of eight members.

"We hope to improve on last year's eighth place performance," Detro said. "Training for this year's race is already underway."

To prepare for the race, the team may enter several local races to prepare for the event. Some of the local races include the Chickamauga Chase 15 kilometer and 5 kilometer race Saturday at 8:30 a.m. Columbus State University is sponsoring a Spring Break 5K run 9:30 a.m. April 11.

Individuals interested in training for the qualifier can contact Detro at 544-1912, 544-1909 or 544-1833.

YS offers programs — Youth Services offers instruction in taekwondo, tumbling, piano and dance for children ages 6 to 15.

Class fees range from $20 to $25 per month.

Registration is open to youth family members of active duty and retired military personnel and Department of Defense employees.

All children who participate must possess a YS card, which costs $20 per year per family and can be purchased at the YS administration office and the Main Post Youth Center, as well as all community outreach centers.

For more information, call Youth Services at 545-1435.

RedStixx baseball season opens — The Columbus RedStixx began the season Thursday at Golden Park against the Hagerstown Suns.

Tickets are now on sale for regular season games. Cost is $7 for box seats, general admission is $5.

ALA offers Golf Privilege Card — The American Lung Association of Georgia is offering its 1998 Golf Privilege Card.

The card gives golfers the opportunity to play on more than 600 of the finest courses in Georgia, Florida, Alabama and Mississippi.

Some of the courses in the local vicinity include Bull Creek, Callaway Gardens, Maple Ridge, Red Oak and Orchard Hills golf courses.

The cost of the Golf Privilege Card is $25 each. If three cards are purchased, the fourth one is free. Visa and Mastercard are accepted.

For more information, call the West Central Region office of the American Lung Association at 569-1098.

Wildlife Federation hosts shoot — The Georgia Wildlife Federation will host a benefit titled Shoot for Conservation, May 30 at the Callaway Gardens Gun Club in Pine Mountain, Ga.

Proceeds will benefit environmental education programs.

Entry fee is $65 per shooter or $130 per team. Cost includes 100 sporting clay targets, earplugs and lunch.

For more information, call (770) 929-3350 or send your entry fee to GWF, 1930 Iris Drive, Conyers, GA 30094..

for the record

In last week's issue, Nick H. Stahler's name was misspelled in cutline information on C-1.

In the same cutline text, the winner and age group of a youth soccer game was misidentified. The Fort Benning Dragons won the bout with the Red Comets 3-0. The game was in the 6- to 8-year old division not the 8- to 9- year old division.

Chaplain to speak at sunrise services

USAIC Chaplain's Office

Retired Chaplain (Col.) Roy N. Mathis will speak during the Easter sunrise service at 7 a.m. Sunday at Doughboy Stadium.

Mathis is presently the director of Marketplace Ministries, Piedmont-Carolinas Division, located in his hometown of Gaffney, S. C. He has been serving in this position since his retirement from the Army in the summer of 1992.

He received his bachelor of science degree from Clemson University in 1957, a Master of Divinity from Southwestern Baptist Theological Seminary in 1966, a Master of Guidance and Counseling from Long Island University in 1975, and a Master of Industrial Relations, National Defense University in 1986. He did postgraduate work at Boston University School of Theology.

Mathis

Mathis pastored churches in Texas and Arkansas prior to entering active duty in the Army as a chaplain in 1968. From 1968 until 1992, he served at installations throughout the United States, Vietnam, Turkey and Germany. His last five assignments include Division Chaplain, 3rd Armored Division; Training Officer and Executive Officer for the Chief of Chaplains, Installation Chaplain, Fort Benning; and Command Chaplain, Training and Doctrine Command, Fort Monroe, Va.

Mathis' military awards include the Legion of Merit, two Bronze Stars, five Meritorious Service Medals, two Air Medals, two Army Commendation Medals, two Army Achievement Medals, four Vietnam Campaign Medals, Foreign Service Medal, Armed Forces Reserve Medal, two Army Overseas Medals, National Defense Medal, Master Parachutist Badge, the Department of the Army Staff Identification Badge, three foreign awards and two Unit Citations.

In addition to serving as Division Director for Chaplain Services in sixteen industries/ businesses throughout the southeast, Mathis is a member and deacon of the First Baptist Church, Gaffney, a member of the Broad River Pastors Association, the President of the Cherokee County Clemson Club, the President of the Gaffney Rotary, a trustee for Limestone College and serves on the Board of Directors of the Cherokee County Family YMCA. He is also a member of the Gaffney American Legion, the National Association of Retired Officers, and the Cherokee County Hall of Bravery.

Mathis is married to the former Nancy Spencer of Gaffney. They have one married daughter, Tammy Renee' Collins of Greer and one granddaughter, Jessica.

Longtime volunteers celebrate anniversary, service

Capt. David Barrett
Tax Assistance Center

The Fort Benning Tax Assistance Center relies heavily on community volunteers and leading the pack are Billie and Lillie Galbraith. However, April 3 was not only another day of volunteer duty for them, they also celebrated their golden wedding anniversary that day.

Their spirit of volunteerism was born long ago. Billie served in the Army from 1944-1969, and served time in both World War II and Vietnam. Lillie has stood by his side through two wars, four children, seven grandchildren and three great-grandchildren. Now 50 years after they married, this couple enjoys spending their golden years and golden anniversary giving back to the community.

Pvt. 2 Amy L. Nyland

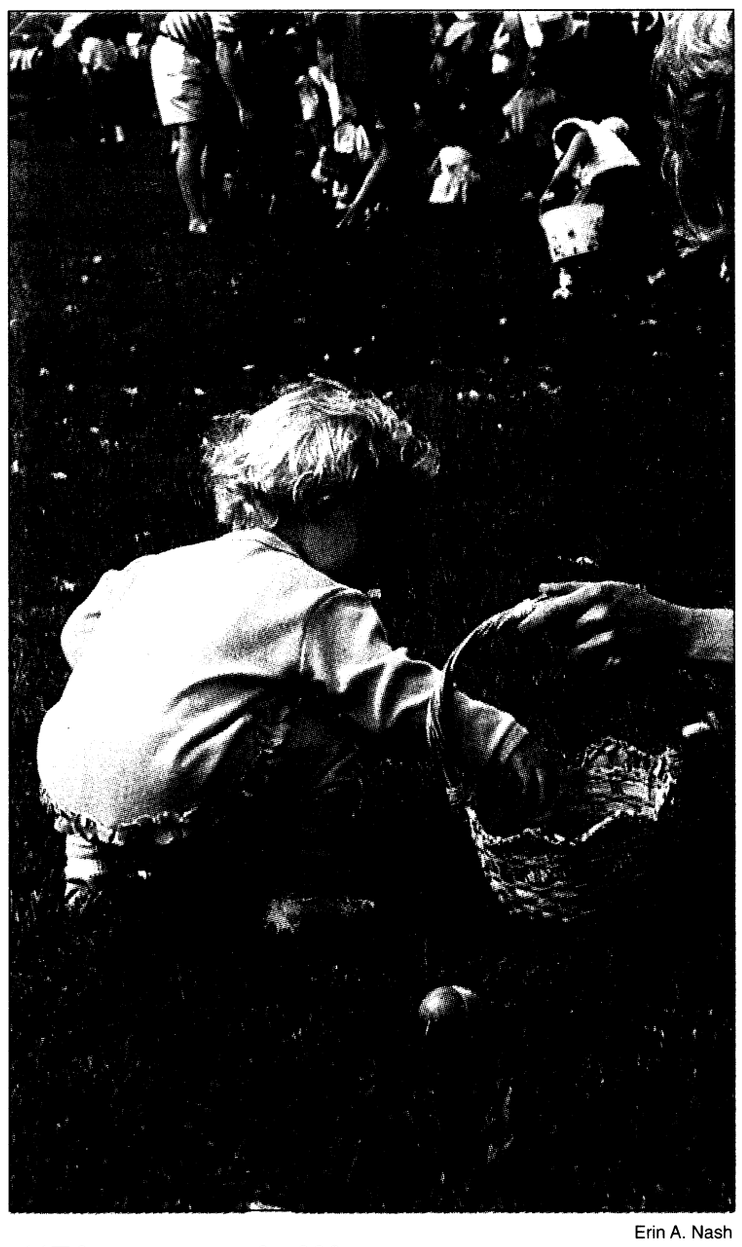
Lillie and Billie Galbraith celebrate their 50th wedding anniversary and sixth year as volunteers.

During the tax season, Billie and Lillie work a combined 60-70 hours per week, and they have certainly proved themselves worth their weight in gold. Their experience in tax preparation and knowledge of the tax laws ensure that the Fort Benning tax center is able to serve a greater number of military taxpayers with more complex tax concerns.

"Mr. and Mrs. Galbraith not only serve as preparers but also assist in training the unit tax advisors. They are the greatest asset of the tax program," said Sgt. 1st Class Richard Maldonado, NCOIC of the tax center. In addition to his 40 hours per week in the tax center, Mr. Galbraith also serves in the Cusseta chapter of the Kiwannis Club. Billie said that he mostly enjoys helping young Soldiers.

"A young Soldier came into the tax center scared to death because she never had to file before. I took my time, explained the tax laws, and she left with tears of joy when she realized she was due a large refund."

Likewise, Mrs. Galbraith strives to serve the community beyond Fort Benning. This year, she opened a free tax preparation site in Cusseta to assist her local community. She also played an active role in the school system and recently assisted with the tax referendum for school construction in Chattahoochee County. Mrs. Galbraith said she enjoys seeing the smiles of those she assists.



"I enjoy helping the client get the largest refund within the limits of the law."

In the time they have volunteered at the tax center, the Galbraiths have seen many changes in the both the tax center and tax laws. They always ensure that the taxpayer is getting the best break possible. Recently, Maj. Scott E. Hampton of the Infantry Training Brigade stopped in the tax center just to get a few answers to some tough tax questions.

"These volunteers are great. Mr. Galbraith saved me the time and frustration of tackling the new capital gains form and the Self Employment form," Hampton said, "I truly appreciated his advice."

The Galbraiths have received numerous rewards for their service to the Fort Benning Community including Volunteers of the Quarter. This year, they will also be recognized by the Internal Revenue Service office in Atlanta. The Fort Benning Community is fortunate to have such dedicated volunteers assisting the Soldiers.

"The tax center is a outstanding service for Soldiers and retirees and the Galbraiths are the key to providing free and competent assistance," said Ann Pratcher of Army Community Service. "We truly appreciate the many years of unselfish service in an area of volunteering that is not so glamorous."

Rangers continue to train in Panama, Atlantic Ocean

Sgt. Marc G. Turchin
Bayonet staff writer

FORT SHERMAN, Panama — The men stood beside each other, waiting for their next command. The leaders from the 3rd Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment, were about to tackle one of their first exercises. Their upcoming mission had them standing in formation on the Jungle Operations Training Center's heliopad in the early morning hours of March 29. Daylight had not yet come and a normal ritual preceded the mission's orders.

An officer stood facing the formation. "My country expects me to move further, faster and fight harder than any other Soldier," he yelled. Those in formation echo his words. He returns to the formation. Another officer is called to the front. He is given his order. "Readily will I display the intestinal fortitude required to fight," he screamed. Again the formation of rangers repeat. The rangers psyche themselves up with the Ranger Creed, which is something they say they live by.

All officers were dressed in black. They huddled around an easel, which spelled out the mission at hand. It would be more than an hour before they would return, drenched with water, some covered in sand, but all without injury.

The mission is called officer physical training (OPT). This marked the first time officers joined one another for physical training since the deployment. The OPT included six-man teams, a 2.5-mile run, a 2,000-meter boat movement in the Atlantic Ocean, a 1,000 meter ocean swim and 375 push-ups and sit-ups.

"I thought it was a good physical challenge," said Capt. Steve Gilland, battalion S-3 officer. "I found the swim the toughest part because I'm not the most experienced swimmer."

The first event was the 2-mile run. Officers journeyed around the track enclosing the airstrip next to the barracks that houses the battalion's Soldiers. The tail end of the run had the men running to the lagoon next to the airstrip to get to their boats.

Before entering the boats, they picked up life vests and flippers. One by one the teams pushed off from shore paddling.

One team actually left shore without everyone in the boat. That problem was remedied when the man left behind dove into the water and swam to catch up to his departing team. All members of the departing boat were ordered by battalion commander, Lt. Col. Michael Ferriter, to leave the boat and help the officer who was left behind in the boat.

Six boats ventured from the post's lagoon into the open waters of the Atlantic Ocean. Rough

Drinking, driving message hits home

Erin A. Nash
Special to the Bayonet©

We've all heard it: don't drink and drive. We've been bombarded with ads on television, on the radio and on billboards. Like most people, I'll glance at the ad or billboard and listen to the radio message, but I don't really think about it. Most of us don't think about it until it affects us, like AIDS, poverty or the other social issues that are somebody else's problem. But I have a different stake in it. I was in a drunk driving accident.

commentary

I'm not going to preach. I'm not going to rant and rave or try to make you feel sorry for me, because I don't feel sorry for myself.

Alcohol was very popular at my high school. Every Friday, the halls were filled with "Where's the party tonight?" My friends and I were into the party scene, into the drinking.

To make a very long story short, neither my friends nor I stopped to think that the combination of alcohol and a car were a bad mix. We were leaving one party for another, and my friend who was driving took a short cut to our next destination. Maybe if we hadn't taken that road, or maybe if she didn't have so much to drink ... but they're all maybe's and maybe's don't count after the fact.

The fact was we were on a curvy road with a lot of sand on the sides of that road. I don't know exactly what caused the accident, but I would have to say it was a combination of everything.

I, being very drunk, had my head down and my eyes closed. The next thing I remember is another passenger in the car saying, "This is a bad curve. We're all going to die!"

After that, I felt like I was at the amusement park, on the "Zipper" ride, the one that feels like you're going to be launched into space any minute. We were in a Jeep Wrangler, and when the Jeep hit the curve and the sand, we flipped over twice and snapped a utility pole in half.

We landed on the roof and somebody pulled me out. I was fully conscious, in shock and drunk, though sobering up very quickly. I thought we were just going to push the Jeep back over and go to the party.

It finally started sinking in that we had been in an accident when I heard my friend screaming, "My Jeep! My parents are going to kill me!"

I went and sat down next to my other friend. She was silently crying. That's when it hit me.

"We could have died," I told her.

Luckily, some older kids were driving down the street and stopped and helped us. The ambulance came and they cut my favorite shorts to put a leg brace on because I was complaining of leg pain and a sore neck, so I also had a neck brace and a backboard.

The hardest part was calling my mother from the hospital. The nurses wouldn't tell her what was wrong with me, just that I was in the emergency room.

I told my mother what had happened.

"Were you drinking?" she asked.

"No," I told her.

She repeated the question and I broke down and told her the truth.

She came right to the hospital. Medical personnel informed me after X-rays I was fine, just very lucky.

When the Jeep flipped, I was sitting in the middle of the back seat, wearing no seatbelt and the gas tank had broken and dripped onto me. It took me weeks and all kinds of concoctions to get the gasoline smell out of my hair.

My friends came out of the accident relatively unscathed. An injured knee for one, stitches on the head for the other.

The next day my dad drove two hours from his home to see me. My mother told me later that he had asked her if she was going to ground me. She said she told him that she thought I had learned my lesson.

Boy, did I.

To this day, I cannot sleep in a car. Because I had my head down when the Jeep flipped, when I close my eyes in a car, it's like deja vu. I have endured two 22-hour sleepless trips in the car.

If I'm in the car with someone, even my husband, my eyes are never taken off the road. I've turned into the world's worst backseat driver.

I'm also terrified of flying. Because I can't see the pilot, who's in control, I'm not in control.

So, even though the accident was almost seven years ago, it still affects my life. What I'm most thankful for is that we didn't hurt or kill someone else.

You may have seen the ads on television that show a home movie of a child or family and their names and the fact that they were killed by a drunk driver. They make me cry, knowing that someone irresponsible like us took somebody else's life, somebody that was a mother, a father or a child with a promising future.

I can only pray every night that nobody ever has to have this affect their life. I wouldn't wish it on my worst enemy, nevermind somebody I love.

Stress turns driver into maniac

Pvt.2 Amy L. Nyland
Bayonet staff writer

I have come to believe in my own world, no matter how small that may be, that cars are evil.

Yes, you heard me right, I sincerely believe that cars possess some kind of weird power that turns ordinarily sweet and normal people into raving lunatics. The kind of power strong enough to reduce a person with an extremely high I.Q. to that of a coma victim.

commentary

I'm not sure where this power comes from. I've thought long and hard about this and the only explanation I can come up with is at the end of every car assembly line, sits a little man with a can of evil. This evil is sprayed into each and every vehicle before they are released to the unsuspecting public.

I guess the government has been hiding this little man with the can of evil for years. You see there really isn't such a thing as "new car smell" it's just a fabricated scent that the government created to explain the overpowering aroma of evil.

I don't know why the little man does this or what purpose he serves, but I'm sure it has to do with some trillion dollar top secret government study that proves nothing besides people are very susceptible to evil.

However, this little man's main job is to determine the amount of evil a car needs depending on it's size. It's actually a quite complicated process. This little man is probably very smart-probably graduated from Harvard.

All of this explains why people who usually drive a smaller car go insane when they get behind the wheel of a very large vehicle. The greater concentration of evil becomes like an overdose of a very lethal drug.

I witnessed this first hand when my friend ... I'll call her Dotty, who usually drives a small Neon, got behind the wheel of an oversized van.

It was like Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde. .

Her sentences became fragments mostly containing words that never exceeded four letters. Her maneuvering skills became precise as she wavered in and out of traffic stuffing the van into hopelessly small spaces. I noticed my surroundings began to look like a scene from Star Wars as she brought the large vehicle to speeds only Mario Andretti could truly appreciate.

No longer was she the sweet and innocent friend who I had always admired, she was Demon Dotty, queen of the highway to hell.

I became very afraid that day. I made it a priority to try and figure out what it was that caused this metamorphosis. I suppose I will never know the complete truth, but at least I have tried to come up with some answers of my own.

One thing I want to emphasize is that this evil thing is a reality and shouldn't be taken lightly.

The fact is, driving is a serious thing and everyone should be concerned with not only their own safety but with the safety of other drivers.

Most people need to realize when they get behind the wheel it is important to take a deep breath and leave the day's stress and worries outside the car door.

Bringing the day's turmoils onto the road with you doesn't make things better it just creates bigger problems.

It could mean causing a situation that is potentially fatal to both you and others on the road.

Now I understand this evil thing doesn't make things any easier. But I've found that if you enter a car with a clear head and somewhat happy mind, it is easier to resist the the effects of the evil. You are also doing the highways a favor and possibly even saving a life.

I know it's hard to forget about the daily stresses of life, but the image of twisted metal and blaring ambulance lights is something that will live with you forever.

So remember, staying alert, having a clear mind and thinking happy thoughts are all essential elements in resisting the evil and staying safe on the road.

Safety Factoid

During the last three years, a total of 92 Soldiers were killed and 17 suffered permanent disability injuries in privately owned vehicle (POV) accidents. Three Fort Benning Soldiers died this year in POV accidents. The causes of these accidents are not new or different: speeding, alcohol and fatigue. Use of seat belts in one of these accidents could have saved the Soldiers' lives.

It's easy to speed and drivers often try to justify it. "I'm running late." "I'm driving the same speed as everyone else." "The speed I'm driving isn't that dangerous." "I'm a good driver. I'm in control."

These are poor excuses for a bad habit. Speeding is a factor in approximately 30 percent of all fatal traffic accidents.

When you speed, you take unnecessary risks: the risk of having to repair or replace a wrecked vehicle; the risk of increased auto insurance rates; the risk of points against your driving record; and the risk of being unable to stop before hitting a pedestrian, bicyclist, or road debris — not to mention the risk of injuring or killing yourself, loved ones, or others.

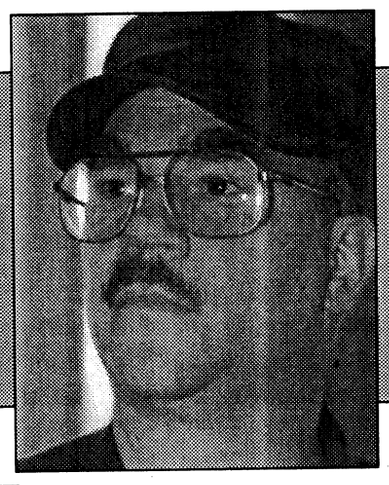
You should drive at speeds appropriate for road conditions and in accordance with posted speed limit. During rain, fog, snow, or congested traffic, the "safe speed" is always well below the posted speed limit.

The faster you drive, the longer it takes to stop or swerve to avoid a collision. A car's occupant protection equipment is less effective as speed increases, resulting in more damage to life and property during a collision.

There are certain times of the day and conditions that heighten accident risks:

Night driving — Sixty percent of all speed-related fatal accidents occur between 6 p.m. and 6 a.m., even though fewer vehicles are on the road. Part of the reason is that speeding cuts the effectiveness of a vehicle's headlights. Low-beams illuminate 160 feet ahead of the vehicle. At high speeds, a driver does not have enough time and space to spot an obstacle on the road, apply the brakes and stop. Combinations of speeding, rain, fog, darkness, fatigue, and use of alcohol or other drugs increase the risk and invite disaster.

Drowsiness — Not only does drowsiness occur at night, but also mid-afternoon or on the way home from a long day's work. Drowsy drivers have difficulty maintaining constant speed and often drive faster unknowingly. Drowsiness is most likely when driving alone or on long trips, especially on interstate roads. The consumption of alcohol or cold remedies can greatly increase sleepiness.



Wet roads — Any moisture on the road diminishes a vehicle's traction, making it harder to switch lanes, turn, or stop. Speeding compounds such dangers and makes even basic driving maneuvers risky. A car travelling at 40 mph in the rain needs almost twice as much distance to stop as it does on a dry road. Roads are slickest when it first starts to rain because accumulated dirt and oil on the pavement combine with the water. A moving vehicle will hydroplane or "float" on this thin film of slimy water, resulting in loss of control.

Speeding is not worth the dire consequences. SLOW DOWN to reduce the chance of having an accident, reduce the damage if an accident occurs, and avoid costly traffic tickets and insurance rates.

Editor's note: Adapted from the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration.

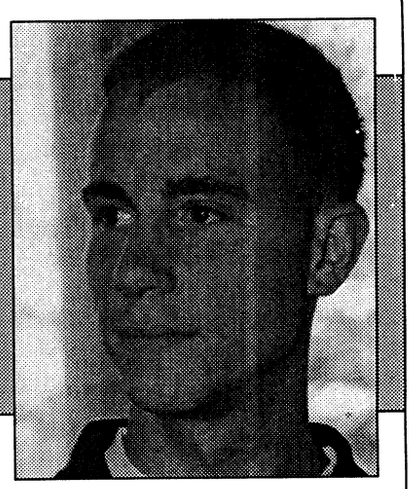
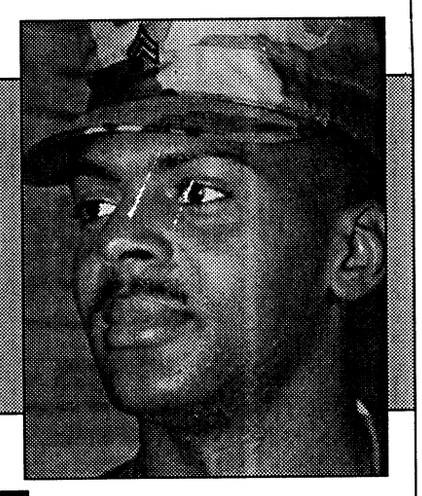
VARIOUS VOICES



Three Soldiers have died recently in vehicular accidents. What do you recommend to ensure your safety while driving?

Col. Byron W. Lindsay, U.S. Army Dental Activity, Fort Carson, Colo. — "I always make sure I concentrate on driving and I never exceed the speed limit or wear earphones when I'm in the car."



Cpl. Erica Y. McClary, 360th Conus Replacement Center — "I try to always stay very attentive and watch all the cars in front and back of me."

Cpl. Joseph J. Lopez, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 5th Ranger Training Battalion — "I always keep my eyes on the road and other drivers. I try to guess what the other drivers might do."

Beverly Maddox, family member — "If I have a problem with my children I always pull over to the side of the road and I never eat or feed my children in the car."

Sgt. David McKenny, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment — "Stay alert, stay alive."

Tammy M. Barger, family member — I always try to be very cautious and I make sure there is nothing distracting me."

Craft shop offers haven for do-it-yourselfers

Pvt. 2 Amy L. Nyland
Bayonet staff writer

You won't find Bob Vila hanging around the Arts and Crafts Center located across from the Main Post Bowling Center, but you probably will find eager "do it yourselfers" who are helping to make the words "more power" a reality.

According to James S. Lee, frame shop manager of the Arts and Crafts Center, the center offers a variety of activities for people who have experience in woodworking and for those with little or no knowledge.

Lee said the center offers custom framing, a complete wood shop for woodworking needs and a country store where greenware and other materials are sold.

He said the Arts and Crafts Center is perfect for someone who doesn't know anything about framing or woodworking because individual help and instruction are offered to participants.

"Someone could come in here not knowing anything about framing, but by the time they finish their frame, they are going to know what it takes to build another one by themselves," Lee said.

He also said the center can save people up to three times the amount of money they would pay going downtown to get the same quality work.

People who come in and do the work themselves pay only for the cost of the materials, Lee said.

"You can come in here and build a bookcase entirely out of oak for around $50, but if you were to buy the same bookcase downtown you would end up paying between $200 and $300," Lee said.

According to Lee, almost anything made of wood can be built at the center and all of the materials and tools needed to do the work is available.

He said people come in and build anything from frames for awards, decorations and sabers to complete furniture sets.

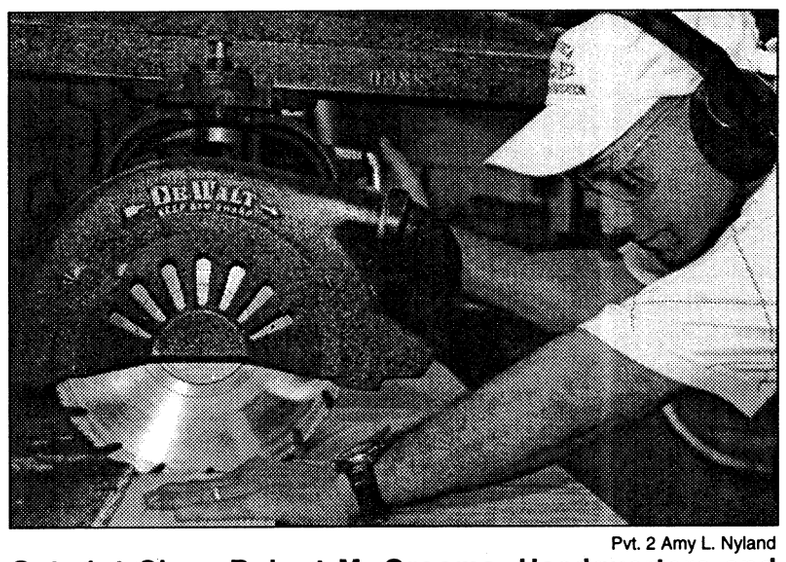
"A captain came here and built all of the furniture for his home right out of the wood shop, to include the dining room, living room and bedroom," Lee said.

According to Lee, the center is more than just a place to build things. The center provides a relaxing atmosphere where people can come in and enjoy what they are doing.

Lee said the activities provide a great way to relieve stress, not to mention the satisfaction of learning a skill and completing a project.

"Learning the skill of building a frame or woodworking can give you so much personal satisfaction," Lee said. "When you get done with your project you have something to show for your efforts. You'll have that frame that you made hanging on the wall and it will be there for a lifetime. So that not only you, but others will be able to come in and admire and enjoy it."

Lee said that woodworking can also be a family activity. People can bring spouses, children, brothers, sisters and friends to the Center to work on projects.



He said this allows people to spend quality time together, doing something fun with the added bonus of a finished product that is going to be utilized.

"The cost savings are tremendous," said Laura Gluhm, family member. "I've spent about $200 to make a mirror and frame that I would have paid $600 for downtown.

"It's (arts and crafts center) a great place to meet a wide variety of people and have a good time doing something worthwhile," Gluhm said.

According to Lee the center is unique because there is no other "do-it-yourself" frame shop in the Columbus and Phenix City area.

The Arts and Crafts Center is open 1 to 9 p.m. Wednesday through Friday and 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Saturday and Sunday. It is open to all active duty, retired and civilian personnel and family members.

Child's concern raises money for veteran

Seven-year-old Evan Johnson was just a bored first-grader itching to help someone until a certain letter to the editor was published in a recent edition of The Bayonet.

In the letter, John Johnson (no relation), a Vietnam veteran, told a story of how $60 worth of groceries came up missing at the Fort Benning commissary just a few days before his 71st birthday.

Evan, an avid viewer of Nickelodeon's television show, The Big Help, was looking for an opportunity to help his community somehow when his mother, Jo Johnson, read the article and told him Johnson's story.

This 7-year-old boy saw his chance to help. With the support of his sister, Laurie, 5, they began a food drive to assist the veteran.

Just to make sure they weren't breaking any of Fort Benning's rules for solicitation, Evan and his mother visited the Military Police Station.

"I didn't know how to go about doing any of this and I wanted to make sure it wasn't against the rules," Johnson said.

There they were advised to go to Infantry Hall to talk with garrison manager Chuck Walls, where, as Johnson put it, "Evan did all of the talking."

Although Evan felt compelled to help, he was a little weary of giving up his free time to organize the food drive.

"I usually never give up my play time for anything," Evan said.

In the end, his mother feels he made the right decision.

"Evan came to me and said, 'Mom, I think this is what Jesus would want us to do,'" Johnson said.

Armed with Evan's determination and a copy of the letter published in The Bayonet, the duo set out on a door-to-door trek encompassing Rainbow Avenue, Miller Loop and an area called The Iron Triangle to collect canned goods and cash donations.

"We went around to people's houses to tell them what we were doing," Evan said.

After a trip to the commissary, the result was an overwhelming 20 bags of groceries including the canned goods donated and other items purchased with the $70 collected by Evan and his sister.

The food drive turned out to be a learning experience for the youngsters and their mother.

"I learned to help one another; you have to spend time doing the right thing," Evan said.

Helping, as Johnson said, was the real reason behind the food drive.

"Evan didn't do this for a reward or so that people would say, 'Oh, what a nice little boy,'" Johnson said. "He has been wanting to do something helpful for a long time."

"This renewed my faith in people, I learned that people really do care," Johnson said. "They just don't know how to help."

One charitable giver wrote to Johnson, "Thank you for helping us show we care."

Reservists lend valuable services to active duty force

Nicole Longstreath
Special to the Bayonet©

The 360th CONUS Replacement Battalion, an Active Guard Reserve (AGR) unit from South Carolina, arrived at Fort Benning Aug. 17, 1997.

Their mission was to in-process and out-process Soldiers going to and from the theater of operations in Bosnia, Germany, Hungary and many other places in Europe.

Processing Soldiers was an on-going cycle. Each cycle was an eight-day operation, beginning with Sunday when the Europe-bound Soldiers arrived at CRC.

During the course of eight days, they were assigned rooms, tested for diseases, given mandatory shots, trained in NBC weapons and weapons qualification and processed through the Soldier Readiness Processing (SRP).

Finally, the Soldiers were given a departure briefing, put on a bus to Atlanta and shipped off on what was usually a commercial flight to the Balkan area of Europe, while a new cycle of Soldiers were arriving.

According to many at the battalion, the AGR Soldiers from the 360th had more responsibility than just training and the paperwork involved in processing Soldiers.

"My Soldiers are processing individuals who are going through a very stressful period, like leaving their families to go to Europe for six months at a time," said battalion commander Lt. Col. Malcom Atkins. "These men and women have taken on this mission in a personal way; they have gone out of their way to make the individuals sent here feel at home."

Soldiers within the battalion agreed that emotional support for the outgoing Soldiers was imperative.

"We try to give them support and let them know we appreciate what they've done and what they are doing and try to make it as easy as possible for them," said Cpl. Fernando Burgess, Company B, 360th CONUS Replacement Bn. "A little bit of the everyday, 'How ya doing," and 'How's the wife and kids,' goes a long way and puts them at ease."

The Soldiers of the 360th also seemed to learn some important interaction skills aside from the day-to-day processing duties.

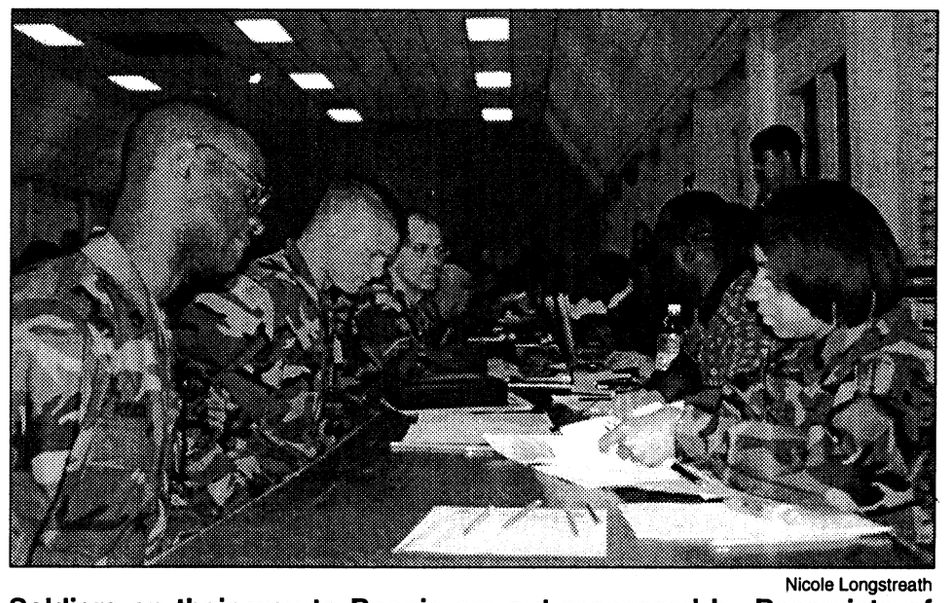
"While dealing everyday with Soldiers going to places like Bosnia, I had to help them get things squared away back home and help them deal with emotional issues ... I learned how to deal with a lot of different people," said Sgt. Jeff Jackson, Company A, CONUS Replacement Bn.

Some in the battalion also developed their own ideas on their role in the military.

Burgess said he hopes that this mission will shed a new light on Soldiers that aren't active duty.

"I hope our mission here helps change the perception of Reserve Soldiers," Burgess said. "We have proved time and time again in operations such as Desert Storm that we are just as good as active duty Soldiers."

"Our qualifications are just as high as the active duty Soldiers," Jackson said.



Now, it's time for the AGR Soldiers from the 360th to be shipped back home from their mission to South Carolina where jobs and families await their return.

The first of the 360th will leave Fort Benning April 15, the last will go home May 28.

According to the battalion's executive officer, Maj. Vernon Harris, the Soldiers currently at the CRC will be replaced in May by a "hodgepodge" of AGR Soldiers.

Jackson and Burgess both said they are looking forward to getting home.

Jackson, a soil scientist has a job waiting for him at Myrtle Beach, S.C., and Burgess is looking forward to getting home to "Fort Livingroom" in Lake City, S.C., and spending time with his wife and daughter.

3rd Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment

Soldiers experience jungle first hand in Panama

Sgt. Marc G. Turchin
Bayonet staff writer

FORT SHERMAN, Panama — Soldiers from 3rd Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment finished their first week of training, a series of jungle training classes, to prepare them for their upcoming field training exercises.

The classes included mines and booby traps, waterborne operations, squad react to contacts, jungle living and land navigation.

Beginning March 30 and ending April 2, each of the companies sent their Soldiers through each one of the classes daily.

"The classes gave the ranger combat effectiveness for him and the unit," said Sgt. 1st Class Kenneth Wolfe, Jungle Operations Training Center (JOTC) instructor at one of the react to contact training sites.

In the mines and booby traps class, rangers learned about the types of mines and traps found in jungle terrain. They were shown the correct way of walking through the terrain and how to spot mines and traps. Following a short class, platoons were given a mission, which included the azimuths and the distance each platoon was expected to travel.

The platoons moved through thick vegetation, crossing over streams and climbing up and down hills. Some platoons found mines and traps while others bypassed them altogether. Cadre members said the idea was to see if the rangers could maneuver through the terrain properly and react to exploding training traps and mines correctly.

"It pretty much made us aware of what's out there and what to look for," said Staff Sgt. John Donaldson, battalion reenlistment NCO. He said he learned about American and foreign made traps and mines.

"Foreign countries have different setups than ours," he said. "Basically, anything in the jungle could be booby trapped."

From booby traps to boats, rangers took classes on just about everything in between.

Waterborne operations started with a swim test. Donaldson said this was done to ensure everyone was capable of conducting the training.

After the swim test, the rangers learned the correct way of getting out of a parachute while in the water. Each ranger went under water with the parachute attached and was required to unhook himself.

The Soldiers then moved from the water to land to practice tying the proper knots needed for the training. Rangers stood in square configurations as waterborne instructors first demonstrated the tying procedures then watched as the rangers gave the knot tying a shot.

When the knot-tying class was finished, rangers prepared their rucksacks for water carriage. The rucks were wrapped in watertight packages using ponchos. Each ranger was required to swim between 100 and 200 meters with the ruck attached to them.

They also built poncho rafts with their rucksacks. Rangers swam in two-man teams with two rucksacks. The front man was attached to the rucks with a snap link and pulled the rafts as he swam while the back person pushed the rucks.

During the waterborne class, rangers learned to build rope bridges and then cross them. Using six or seven-man squads, rangers put their newly acquired skills to use as they first set up the rope bridges on land to practice the procedure.

> "Foreign countries have different setups from ours. Basically, anything in the jungle could be booby trapped."
> — Staff Sgt. John Donaldson
> Battalion reenlistment NCO

After the dry land practice, they had to do the same across a 25-meter water obstacle. The squads used three lanes to set up their rope bridges.

After accomplishing the task at hand, the rangers conducted a competition to get back to where they started. The stakes had the second-place squad doing 25 push-ups and the third-place squad knocking out 50.

But the rangers weren't through getting wet. Next was boat operations. They were given a class about how to capsize a zodiac boat. Donaldson said the main reason for capsizing the boat is because of the jungle environment.

"One of the reasons we'd have to capsize the boat would be due to heavy rains," he said. "We'd have to get the water out of the boat." To capsize the boat, the rangers have to go through a series of commands.

"I'd have to say waterborne was the best of all the classes," Donaldson said. "It's been a couple of years since I last trained with the boats," he said. "Plus it gave me a chance to swim around a little bit." Donaldson described himself as a strong swimmer on the ranger swimming scale — a less experienced swimmer is a nonswimmer, an average swimmer is called a swimmer and a experienced swimmer is called a strong swimmer.

No matter how well the Soldier could swim, the squad react to contact class had the rangers totally submerged in jungle terrain testing how well each squad acted under fire from an enemy.

This class also offered the rangers something most said they looked forward to — their first live-fire in the deployment.

Rangers first moved as squads through the jungle with their weapons loaded with blanks. An opposing force (OPFOR) eventually ambushed the squad. Wolfe, who accompanied all squads at his training lane through the movement, said he was watching for good and bad actions. Whether the squad did good or bad, Wolfe discussed all aspects of the mission during the after action review (AAR).

After one AAR, Wolfe said there's something special about working with rangers.

"They're at a higher level of training compared to other light Infantry units," he said. "Being that I spent time in the regiment, I know they're whole life is centered around training."

One Soldier said training in the jungle is like training nowhere else.

"It makes it tougher to control your element," said Staff Sgt. Richard Clinton, squad leader with Company B, 3rd Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment. "You can't see as well and you have to tighten things up and slow everything down."

Although Clinton admitted most of his squad had never operated in the jungle, he said practice makes perfect.

"They're getting a lot out of this," he said. "As they do it, they get more and more confident and that's the big thing with this — building their confidence."

Clinton said his squad did react well on it's first time through, but it's an educating experience.

"In anything we do, there's going to be learning points," he said. "That's the reason we're out here training."

The training continued at the jungle living class. Here, rangers were introduced to habitats of the jungle. They watched as cadre showed slides at the post theater of animals and plant life the Soldiers may run into while training in the jungle.

For instance, Donaldson said he was worried about a certain frog that secretes a poisonous liquid out of its glands when it is agitated.

"You have to be on your toes all the time," he said. "There's a lot of stuff that can mess you up." The rangers also walked through the post zoo, located near their barracks. There they saw crocodiles and a variety of monkeys and birds.

Some of that wildlife may have been seen during the land navigation course. Unlike the courses on Fort Benning, Donaldson said the maps don't show the small terrain features because of the rainy season.

"The rainy season changes the way the terrain looks and that effected us getting to our second point," he said.

The first point was found pretty easily, he said, but the second one took a while because his squad was basing their direction on pace count and terrain features.

"We were disoriented at first, then found a spot on the map where we thought we were and 15 minutes later we found our point."

Donaldson and a number of other Soldiers blamed the terrain for their misfortunes.

"You're fighting vines constantly," Donaldson said. "Visibility was no more than about 20 meters at best."

The Soldiers were required to locate three out four points in under three hours.

The classes are designed to prepare the rangers for their field exercises during the second week of the deployment. But, Clinton said this type of training has other benefits.

"We're out there doing raids, ambushes, movement to contacts, running patrol bases and moving from here to there," he said. "It's good learning for everyone — especially the younger guys who still need to go to Ranger School."

Rangers: Train in water ops

waters hampered the boats, but the officers pressed on. In each boat, one man cadenced, "stroke, stroke."

Two safety boats equipped with medics took turns going around the parade of filled zodiac boats looking for anyone injured. A buoy approximately 1,000 meters from the barracks shoreline was the final destination for the boat portion of the OPT.

"I think the pace of the boats was a lot quicker than most thought it would be," Gilland said. One officer said the boat part of the OPT was the toughest for his team.

"We were the last in the water," said 1st Lt. Lee Pearce, Battalion special projects officer. "We had a lot of ground to make up. We did most of that in the boat movement."

After reaching the buoy, the officers jumped into the water. With the tropical Panamanian climate, the water seemed perfect for swimming. It could have been a scene from the movie Titanic, with the number of heads seen bobbing up and down in the water. Still, the men swam on. Using backstroke, sidestroke and freestyle, all made it to shore.

"That was my first open water swim," Pearce said. "It was a lot easier than I thought it would be."

Reaching the shore was not the end. There was still one more event.

Each team handled the task differently. When it came to push-ups, some did 40 or 50 at a time. Only one person could compete at a time. The men laid in the front leaning rest position while the other person pushed. After the push-ups, came sit-ups. Again, they lined up in the ready position until their turn. When it was all over, the team of Capt. Kyle Lear, Capt. Jim Gray, 1st Lt. Pat Work, 1st Lt. Pat Lange, 1st Lt. Don King and 1st Lt. Mike Nerenberg won the competition.

But in the end, Ferriter said there was really no competition at all.

"Everyone is a winner," he said. "The battalion is the real winner, as it is everyday."

Gilland said he believed this type of training helps.

"It increases the cohesion," he said. "The officers in the battalion bond with the OPT's."

He also said it was the battalion commander's idea to do an OPT in Panama.

"He wanted us to use the assets around us," Gilland said. "So we did exactly that — we ran, used boats and swam."

Although this OPT was conducted in Panama, this is not the first time it has been done.

According to Pearce, the OPT is conducted on a monthly basis.

"It's usually some type of competition," Pearce said. "Last summer we did one that included a three-mile run with rucksacks, a marksmanship event at a range and a five-mile run to the Main NCO pool where we conducted a swimming event."

He said there may be another OPT session before they redeploy.

"If we do have another one, it's because it'll be different from anything at Fort Benning."

The boat portion of the session will pay off in the not so distant future, as the battalion will have boat operations inside the jungle.

Staff Sgt. Brian Thomas

A ranger from Company A, 3rd Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment, tows a poncho raft through the lagoon at Fort Sherman, Panama, during waterborne training at the Jungle Operations Training Center.

Rangers spent the rest of the week going through classes preparing for upcoming field training exercises in the next few weeks. Today, the rangers will tackle a more than one-mile obstacle course.

Officer candidates learn land navigation, teamwork during field exercise

Officer Candidate John J. Morrissey
Company B, 3rd Battalion, 11th Infantry Regt.

The students in Officer Candidate School class 3-98 had a well-earned break from the mental stress of Officer Candidate School last week — in a sense. Company B, 3rd Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment (OCS) spent six days and nights in the field to develop land navigation skills, and in the process finished with 95 percent of the 100 candidates earning a first time "GO."

Blessed with beautiful weather and assisted by the range cadre from the 29th Regiment, the land navigation exercise took on the feel of a working vacation for some.

"The week in the field was good," Officer Candidate Kevin Heinonen, of Minneapolis, Minn., said. "We got plenty of chow and slept well. I enjoyed the week in the field. It was a good break."

It wasn't all fun and games, though. The candidates went on practice exercises three times a day, walking (and often running) well over five miles each time. Exhausted and filthy, they were ready and anxious for the test.

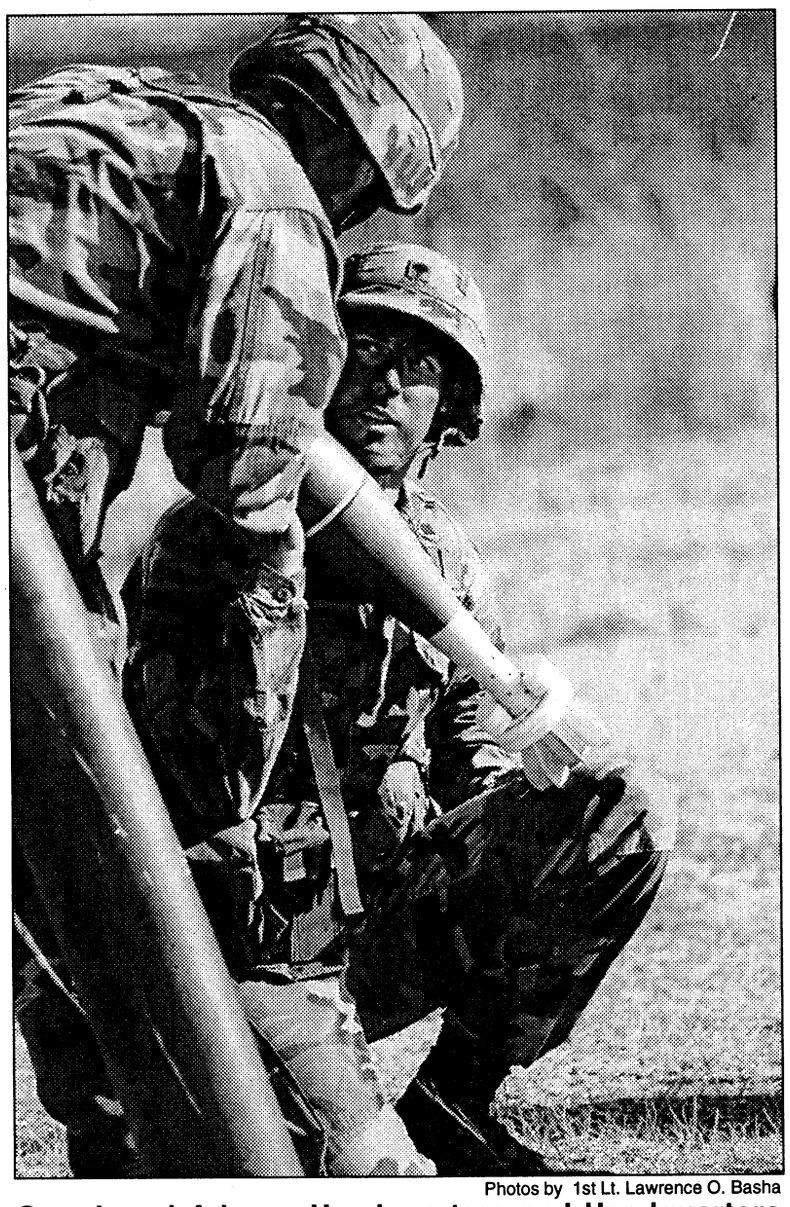
"It was a well organized event," Officer Candidate Bruno Zitto, of Barranquilla, Colombia, said. "The people from the 29th are very knowledgeable, they do this for a living. I have experience with land nav. I'm an 11B, but it was nice to have a week of training to refresh my skills."

Not all candidates had as much experience as Zitto. In fact, company commander Capt. Victor L. Thompson suggested that the company's lack of experience might have contributed to its success.

"A person just learning is a better listener," Thompson said. "They apply what they have learned,. "It's the Soldiers who know what they are doing that will go out there and bolo."

"The testing was pretty dog-gone easy," said Officer Candidate David Kimzey, of Red Bud, Ill., "I'm happy I passed. I re-learned my skills for land navigation so I can lead my troops effectively. I might save my troops' lives one day and that's the most important thing."

OCS brings together many Soldiers with very different backgrounds.



"I'd never spent that much time in the field," said Officer Candidate Jungbum Hur, of Hilo, Hawaii.

"I probably learned more in that one week than in one or two years. It wasn't just the land nav, it was the teamwork, the way the chain of command works — it's something you don't get in the Reserves. There's more of a camaraderie out there in the field," he said. He was one of the candidates who received a first time go.

Another candidate to max the test was OC Dennis Terry, of Daytona Beach, FL. Terry, a seasoned Soldier of 14 years was able to pass his skills on to other candidates by teaching, coaching and going on practice routes with other less experienced candidates.

"It was about getting from point A to point B," Terry said. "You need that in all MOSs. In a combat situation, you'd better be able to get out of that vehicle, grab a map and lead your people with confidence."

"A lieutenant must know how to get to where they are going and GPS batteries don't always work," Thompson said.

The mortar platoon of Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 3rd Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment, was the first element to employ and fire the 81 mm and 120 mm-mortar systems in the history of the Ranger Regiment March 20.

The mortar live-fire exercise was the culmination of a one-week mortar new equipment training (NET) program. The NET program incorporates both instructors from the 75th Ranger Regt. and instructors from the U.S. Army Infantry School Infantry Mortar Leader's Course.

The NET consisted of subjects such as employment, set-up and breakdown, weapon manipulation, crew drills and fire direction control procedures. The rangers spent a little more than a day on the M-252 81 mm-mortar system and the rest of the week on the 120 mm mortar.

The implementation of the mortar system is part of a regimental force modernization program. This program not only implements the new mortar system, but also consolidates the three rifle company mortar sections in HHC, making the mortars a battalion asset.

These changes now enable the battalion to employ any combination of the 60 mm, 81 mm and 120 mm mortars based on the mission requirements.

The rangers liked the new mortar systems and found little difficulty in transitioning to the new weapons. They found the 120 mm very similar to the M-224 60 mm mortar. The M-252 81 mm was a little more difficult since the traverse and elevation knobs are reversed from the 60 mm and 120 mm mortars.

"It's just a little difficult manipulating the bubbles with the 81 mm," said 1st Lt. Mike Nerenberg, the mortar platoon leader. "With the 120 mm, it is just getting used to the bigger system."

"It just takes some getting used to," said Pfc. James Gilliland, a mortar gunner. "A mortar is just a mortar. I'm proud that the higher headquarters would think of ways to better take care of our rangers."

Retired Infantryman continues to train young Soldiers with OCS prep course

Spc. Jamie T. Karl
Company E, 1st Battalion, 38th Infantry

It is one of Fort Benning's best kept secrets.

Twice a year, for the past 16 years, the Infantry Training Brigade (ITB) has been quietly preparing tomorrow's Army officers for future challenges. Every February and September, Infantry Soldiers graduate from One Station Unit Training (OSUT) — and those who have been designated to attend Fort Benning's Officer Candidate School (OCS) — spend two weeks at the ITB's own Officer Candidate Preparatory Training Course.

The man responsible for the operation and instruction of the course is retired Lt. Col. John H. Damewood. Damewood founded the officer candidate preparatory course back in 1982, when he was a battalion commander at the Infantry Training Center. Since then he has been responsible for the pre-professional training and mentoring of more than 1,500 officer candidates.

In the two weeks he volunteers to spend with the ITB Soldiers, Damewood conducts classes on field operation orders, map reading, land navigation by terrain association and dead reckoning, night land navigation, command voice, professional presentations, methods of instruction, as well as drill and ceremonies for leaders. As a bonus, guest speakers — ranging from newly commissioned officers fresh out of OCS, to the officers who head OCS — tell the group of aspiring officers what to expect at OCS and what will be expected of them as candidates once at the school.

Teaching the course has become a highlight of Damewood's life. Although the semi-annual class means two weeks away from his home and wife, Judith, in Hampton,Va., Damewood says he is constantly preparing for his next visit to Sand Hill.

A distinguished military graduate of Idaho State University, Damewood's career as an Army Officer and a civilian volunteer spans four decades. From two tours in Vietnam to high-level work at the Pentagon; from a ROTC instructor and commander at Auburn University, to a training battalion commander responsible for producing 4,000 new Infantrymen.

Despite a lifetime of achievement, this Soldier said he still has a remaining mission in training tomorrow's Army leaders.

"The bottom line is I get great satisfaction from training these young officers-to-be," Damewood said. "It is a great way to share skills, experience and values learned the hard way, over more time than I care to admit."

Damewood added that the leadership of the small tactical unit is the most critical element in determining the mission success or failure of our Army, and that he wants to do all he can to prepare up-and-coming junior officers for the challenges that lie ahead.

"Without the junior officer, pulling together direction from higher the operation of the unit will lack the essential direction, force and professionalism to be successful," Damewood said. "Preparatory training for young officers-to-be is an opportunity to learn the essential tactical and technical skills, without the pressure of time constraints, and the freedom to fail, try again and succeed."

Damewood believes that preparative training of selected OSUT graduates awaiting OCS is a necessity.

"I can perform a useful service to these Soldiers by mentoring and training them, and in turn, provide ITB an asset that would otherwise come out of mission resources," Damewood added.

Some of the Soldiers who have attended Damewood's course say it is like ITB's own West Point. With limited military experience under their belts, they are grateful for the training from such a knowledgeable individual.

"I don't know if Col. Damewood will ever know how much we appreciate him coming to Fort Benning and helping us prepare for our future," said Spc. Tymon Lamar, 23, of 1st Battalion, 38th Infantry Regiment. Lamar, who is awaiting Department of the Army approval for OCS, said that Damewood's instruction is testament of how much he cares about tomorrow's Army officer corps and the future of the country.

While waiting out the lengthy OCS selection process, some of the candidates end up attending Damewood's classes two or three times. And that's a good thing, according to Damewood's students — who sometimes dub themselves "Damewood's Disciples."

"I'm extremely grateful that I was able to experience Col. Damewood's course not only once, but twice," said Spc. James Smith, 22, from 1st. Bn., 50th Inf. Regt. "The amount of information that this man passes on really requires more than two weeks to absorb," Smith said, who has been waiting to be accepted to OCS since graduation from OSUT in August.

"He's the most influential figure I've met in the Army, and the more time I can spend learning from him, the better off I am."

Adding to the nobility of Damewood's service is the fact he conducts his course free of charge to the Army, financing the cost of the instruction himself, from travel expenses to classroom materials.

"That just goes to show how much he cares," Smith added.

Veterans can provide highly trained job force

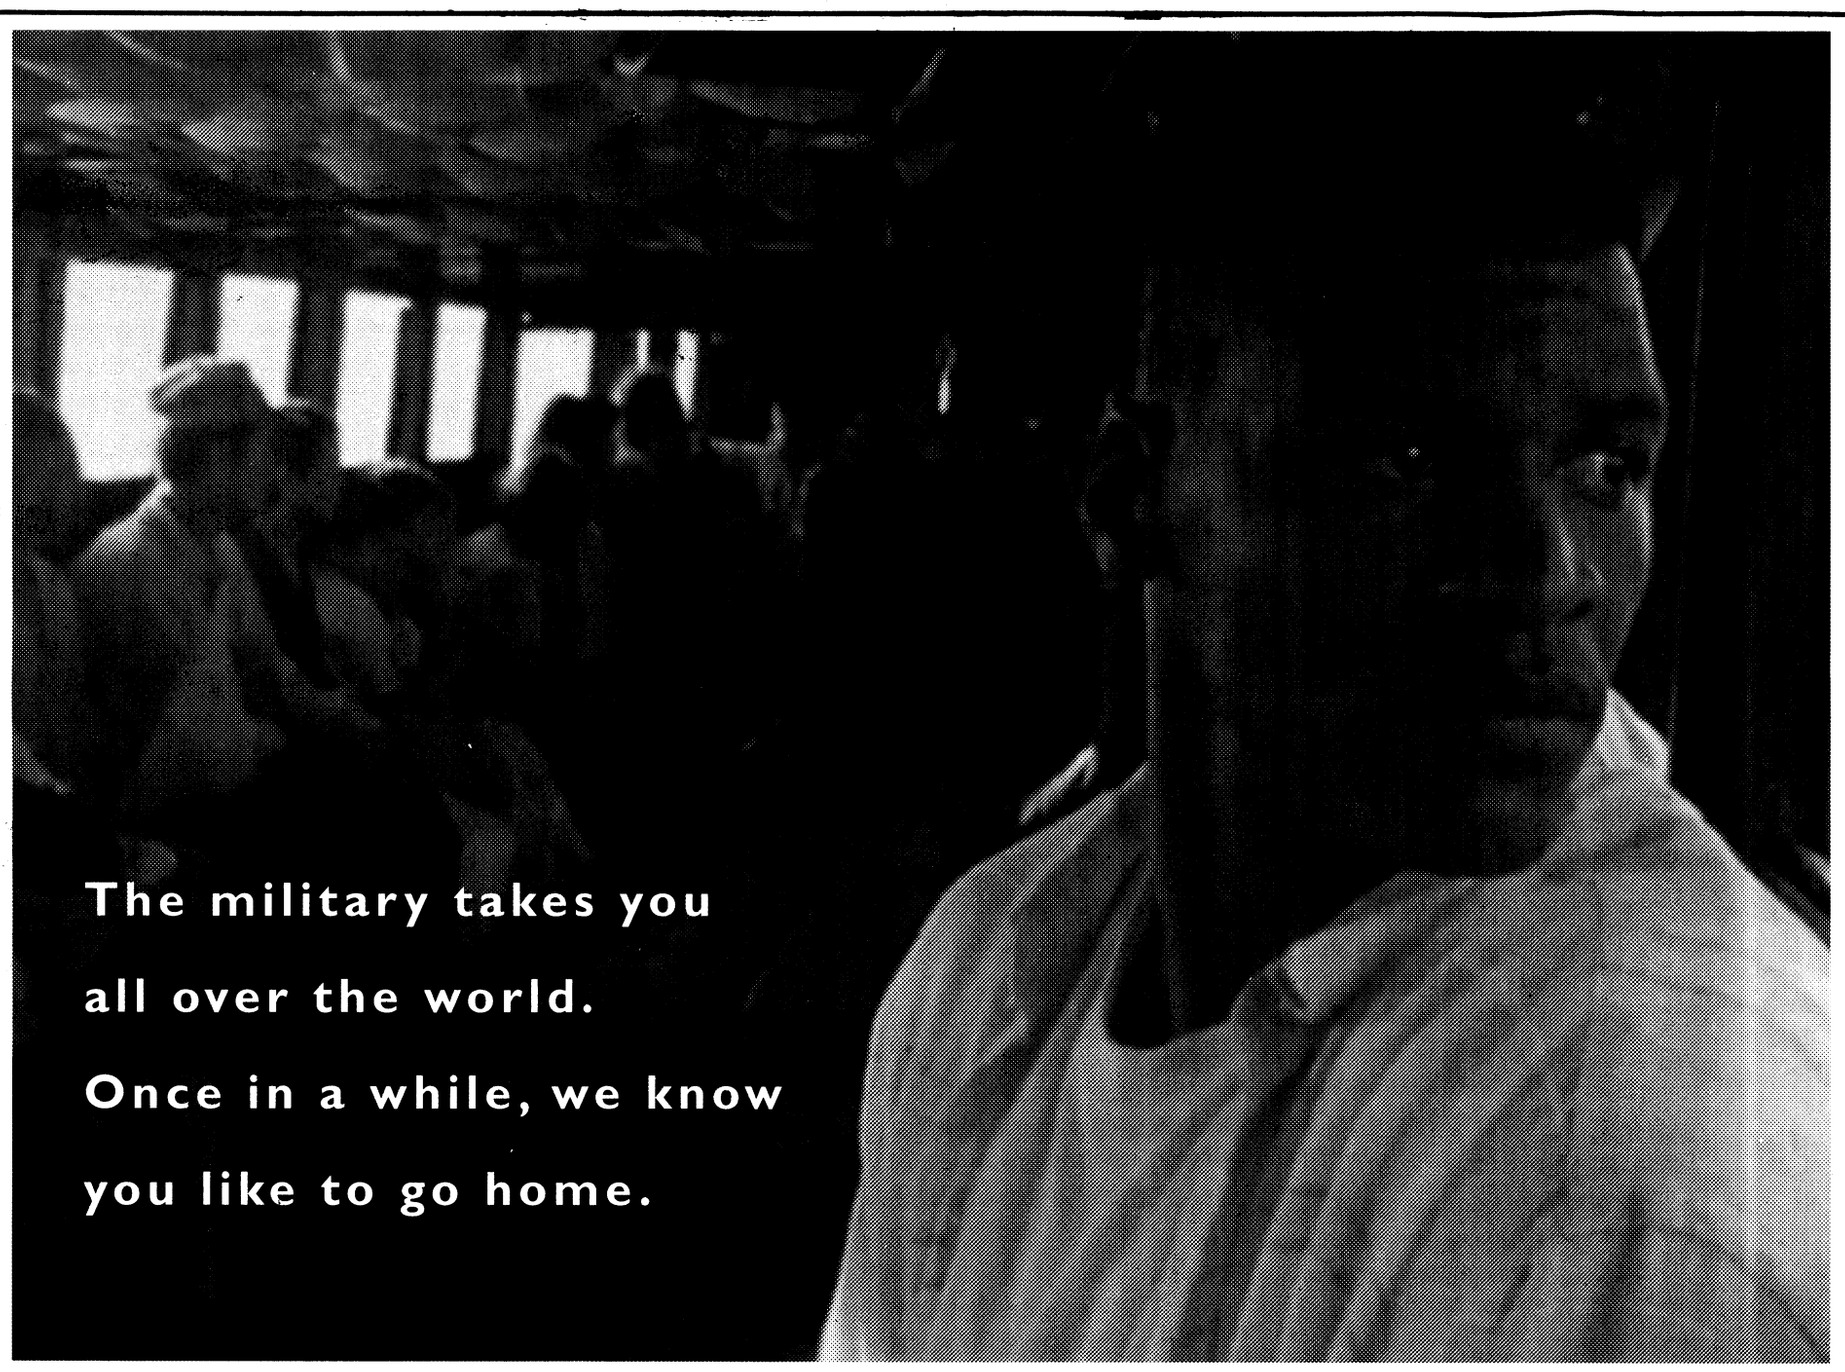
Army Career and Alumni Program

Within the next 12 months, approximately 235,000 military service members will leave the Department of Defense (DOD) and return to civilian life.

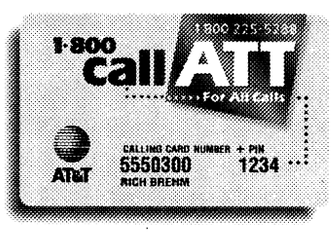
"As members of the Army, Navy, Marine Corps, and Air Force, they helped form one of the most highly trained, highly motivated military forces in our nation's history," said Chick Eagle, Army Career and Alumni (ACAP) counselor. "As civilian employees, they bring a strong work ethic, training, leadership and interpersonal skills to the civilian work force."

More than 30,000 separating service members will have at least one college degree. Another 41,000 will have one to four years of college credits and 164,000 will have a high school diploma or a GED equivalency.

According to Eagle, as members of the Armed Forces, all service members will have received extensive military, civilian academic and technical training coupled with hands-on experiences in their areas of expertise equal to hundreds of thousands of dollars in the private sector economy.



The majority of service members who leave the military will have completed their first term of service, while others will have served more than one term. Approximately 41,500 will have completed at least 20 years or more of military service.



Because of the military experience, Eagle said employers have the opportunity to hire top-notch professionals in virtually every job category: aviation, electronics, equipment repair, computer programming, communications, law enforcement, logistics, health care, finance, personnel management, heavy equipment operations and many, many more.

Tens of thousands of departing service members have various degrees of DOD security clearances indicating levels of responsibilities and leadership positions they occupied, which is another asset for the future employer, Eagle said.

The DOD, Department of the Army and ACAP encourage employers to hire today's vets, because it's right and because it's smart, Eagle said.

For information about local ACAP service, visit the ACAP Center in Soldiers' Plaza, Building 2634 or call 545-2308 or 545-2309.

Trashy

Trash is picked up in the housing areas weekly. Policy states that residents should leave the garbage at curbside no earlier than 6 p.m. the night prior to pick up and bring the garbage cans from the curb no later than 6 p.m. the day of pick up. Trash should be in a container other than a plastic bag.
Residents on Arrowhead Road in McGraw Manor left trash on the pad March 30 for pick up April 2. For more information, call Walter Nichols at 545-1007.

Agency provides hints for healthy parenting

Family Advocacy Program

Are you a hurried parent who could benefit from hints on how to enhance communication with your kids, tips on getting along better, guidelines on how to improve your relationship with your children?

The parenting tips that follow provide a fresh perspective and an opportunity to build on your own positive parenting skills.

Be positive

•Build confidence by being positive.
•Look for ways to give compliments.
•Give hugs.
•Remember to laugh with your child.

Emphasize strong points

•Praise special, unique traits in your child.
•Help your child understand that nobody is perfect and that's OK.
•Help your child understand that everyone is good at something and not so good at other things.

Give your time

•As parents, you are all probably short on time and may often feel overwhelmed with all your responsibilities. However, it's important for you to know that the best gift to give your child is undivided attention.

•If you're experiencing guilt, you need to work through that and work on specific times to be with your children. You could begin by scheduling monthly "dates" together.

Say I love you

•Give this message in different ways. Try nonverbal as well as verbal.

Listen and stay connected

•Give your full attention. Keep good eye contact, nod, even touch your child.

•Listen for feelings. There are no wrong feelings. Acknowledge your child's feeling, then reflect those feelings back. (Don't interpret, either repeat their words or use similar words to reflect your child's feelings.)

•Keep your talk to a minimum. Simply saying you understand and care may be enough. Being there for them is most important.

Take time to be with your child.

•Read a book or watch TV together. Talk about the book or program. Use this time to give your full attention to your child.

•If you're a working parent, call your child from work to just say "hello" — not to remind him or her about chores or homework.

•Make time for regular heart-to-heart talks with your child. Keep conversations free and open.

Use Positive Discipline

•Set rules.

•Determine what rules are important. Set limits and boundaries. Make sure everybody understands the rules and consequences.

•Apply rules consistently. If you make an exception, make sure your child understands that it's a special treat (for example, staying out later than usual).

•Rules are flexible in that they're appropriate to the age of the child.

Address a problem

•Respond to the problem as soon as possible.

•Be firm. You're the parent. Do not underestimate your parenting ability.

•Keep calm, use your anger in a positive way. Address the problem, discuss the consequence, follow through. Don't blow up!

Criticize the behavior only

•Choose your words carefully. Address the behavior, not the person. For example, you could say, "I'm upset that you hit your friend", instead of "You're a bad boy for hitting."

Help in Problem Solving

Define the problem

•Try to help your child solve the problem, don't solve it for him her. Teach your child how to problem-solve.

•Ask your child what exactly the problem is. What are their feelings about it?

Brainstorm about ways to solve the problem.

•Talk about every possible solution with your child. List them out. Discuss and weigh the outcome of each potential solution.

•Pick the best solution.

•Talk about, and role-play if necessary, the way you or your child will implement the solution.

•Discuss the outcome.

•Did the solution work? Why or why not?

•If not, talk with your child about trying another solution.

Drop box available for job applications

Based on a cooperative effort between Local Union 54, American Federation of Government Employees, the Southeast Civilian Personnel Operations Center and Fort Benning's Civilian Personnel Advisory Center, a drop box has been installed inside the front entrance of Meloy Hall Building 6. The box allows applicants the option of submitting job applications via this means. It also makes it easier to guarntee that the deadline for applying for a position is met and reduces the cost of postage.

Employees are encouraged to take advantage of the drop box service and to make certain that applications are placed in the drop box prior to the closing date of announcements.

For more information, call the Directorate of Civilian Personnel, Management Services Division, at 545-5562 or 545-7657.

IG office seeks two inspectors

The Inspector General's Office needs two Soldiers to join the Inspection Branch. These positions require two Soldiers with the MOS 92Y40-supply inspector and 63H40-automotive inspector.

Soldiers eligible for the positions will have no more than 18 months on station or possess assignment instructions. If selected the Soldier will be assigned to the IG office for two years. For more information, call Maj. Bob Popowski at 545-3961 or 545-4780.

Regulations require proper PT uniform

Post regulations require that Soldiers wear the standard Army physical fitness training uniform for PT from 6 to 7:30 a.m. on duty days, whether units organize PT or Soldiers conduct it on their own. Reflective vests are required.

The only approved exceptions are the School of the Americas, the Ranger Training Brigade and the 75th Ranger Regiment. These units have an exception to wear a different uniform, but they must remain uniform.

School board meets, learns about schools' use of technology, teachers

Staff Sgt. Lori Egan
Bayonet assistant editor

Fort Benning School Board members learned about Stowers Elementary and Faith Middle Schools past, present and future uses of technology during the March 30 meeting in the Faith Middle School Data Projection Room.

Fifth-grade math teacher Sue Ann Dixon used a Power Point presentation to illustrate how Stowers uses the technology of the Discourse Lab.

The lab has 30 student study comms, which are monitors, a personal computer and the Discourse software.

One of the features of the lab is spontaneous teaching, Dixon said. There is no need for teachers to use preauthored lessons to in order to use the Discourse lab. A teacher can use a disk that has been Discourse initialized and create a lesson using a word processor.

"This is good because it doesn't cost extra money to upgrade software," she said.

The teacher can see every child's response as it is typed in. The correct responses can be shown on the monitors for the class to view, while the teacher can determine who doesn't understand the lesson.

"Putting a child's correct response on the monitor for the class to view is a great way to give a child a pat on the back," Dixon said.

The Discourse program also grades the work. Teachers can get reports and percentages at the push of a button.

Because of the classes popularity, the school now has to schedule classes to avoid overcrowding.

Faith Middle School demonstrated their use of technology with a video made by Cindy Givens, media specialist, and Mary Barnette, educational technologist.

The Explosion of Technology video was made using video editing bays at the school. The two instructors explained how the school uses its technological resources including recycling old Apple computers for Spanish lessons to the state-of-the-art projector in the Data Projection Room that the parent teacher organization purchased last year for $6,700.

During the meeting, Dr. Dell McMullen recognized seven teachers "for going beyond the call of duty and coaching students to perform exceptionally well in a number of competitions during March."

Anne Trawick, an English teacher, and Givens received lapel pins for coaching Faith's Odyssey of the Mind (OM) team, which won the regional and state competition and will compete in the world competition.

Gloria Loar, art teacher at Faith Middle School, received a compass pin for her work with Faith students during National Art Month. Students displayed their art at the Columbus Museum recently. Loar made T-shirts with the students' art work on them.

Kim Green, a music teacher at Faith, received a compass pin for her work with band students. Thirteen students performed with the All District Honor Band. During a recent solo and ensemble competition, 13 students received superior ratings, 16 received excellent ratings and three received good ratings.

Ernestine Ezekiel, Joyce Flatt and Linda Turner, teachers at Dexter Elementary, received compass pins for attaining status in the Giraffe program.

"This is a nationally recognized program that builds on the virtues of responsibility, service, caring and courage through the concept of heroes," McMullen told the board members. "These teachers are role models for the Dexter School community for the caring and responsible way they carry out environmental awareness projects."

Sixth-grader Natasha Bennett, daughter of Rita and Staff Sgt. James Bennett, 104th Transportation Company, 36th Engineer Group (Combat), received a 1996 Paralympic pin for a poem she wrote about disabilities.

In other business, the board voted against spending $2,800 on facsimile machines for the school lunch rooms, but agreed on purchasing a new mixer, two walk-in freezers, upgrading the cafeteria computers and purchasing heating and cooling units for the Wilson Elementary School satellite lunch program.

In the superintendent's report, McMullen said schools completed the Terra Nova testing, which went well according to the principals.

McMullen told the board that Faith ambassadors led tours of the school for Japanese officers and post sergeants major and are also preparing a tour for next year's incoming sixth-grade class.

Faith Middle School

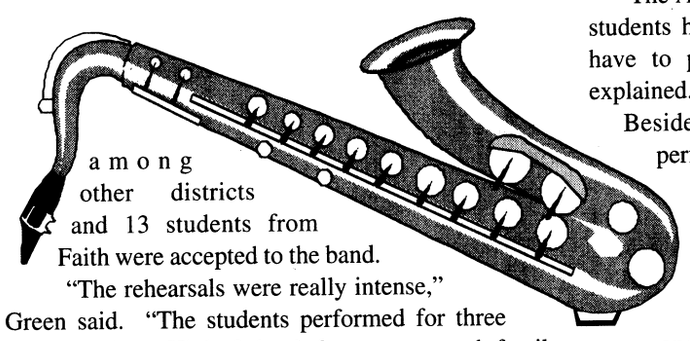
Band members toot their horns at competition

Erin A. Nash
Special to the Bayonet©

Faith Middle School has another achievement to add to it's long list. Thirteen students in Kim Green's band class recently participated in the Georgia Music Educators Association All-District Band.

The band has about 60 seventh-graders who are beginning musicians.

"Most have never played until they walked in my door," Green said.



The seventh-graders have signed up for band, which is part of the curriculum at Faith, at the end of sixth grade or the beginning of seventh grade.

"The seventh-graders are learning how to play and learning first-year skills, which they expand upon in eighth grade. I tell them they are my junior varsity, preparing to move on to varsity," Green explained.

Students who wish to join the band must rent the instrument they want to play, although some of the larger instruments are available on a first come first serve basis.

The average cost of an instrument is $25-$30 and the instruments range from flutes, clarinets, saxophones and trumpets to french horn, tuba percussions and the baritone trombone.

The All-District Honor Band was a weekend festival held March 19-21. The group auditioned in Columbus among other districts and 13 students from Faith were accepted to the band.

"The rehearsals were really intense," Green said. "The students performed for three days at Shaw High School for parents and family members."

About 31 students received medals at the March 28 Cello and Ensemble Music Festival held at Columbus State University.

"Students worked solo, in a duet, trio or ensemble. They performed in front of a judge and were rated on their performance. The judge then provided constructive criticism," Green said.

"It is exciting to see the growth our band students experience each year, both at Faith and at the festivals," said Dr. Beth Middlemiss, principal of Faith.

The Cello and Ensemble Music Festival was voluntary for students. The students prepared for six weeks for the festival.

Students are also able to audition for the All-State Band.

"The All-State Band is very difficult to make. The students have a list of criteria they must meet. The have to prepare for a state-level audition," Green explained.

Besides these activities, the Faith band also performs a holiday concert in December and a spring concert in June. The advanced band also performs during on-post activities.

"We're all proud of their accomplishments," Middlemiss said. "When you're listening to the honor band and witness the standing ovation that they receive, it confirms the work taking place here at school with Kim Green as well as the work done at home."

Students who are thinking of signing up for band in the seventh grade need to understand the dedication they must have, Green said.

Students are expected to practice on their instrument daily, 20 minutes for beginners and 30 minutes for advanced students, Green said.

Green also recommends practice during the summer and encourages lessons and participation in a band camp at Columbus State University.

"Students should want to take it because they're interested in it," Green said. "They need to understand it's a lot of work. It takes discipline, but it is very rewarding."

Weight loss, management: Goals and getting started

Dr. Virginia Yates
Martin Army Community Hospital

Editor's note: This is part one of a two part series on weight loss and management.

In the past, patients were instructed to reduce weight until they reached their ideal body weight. Often, this meant a reduction of 50 percent of their body weight. In 1995, both the U.S. Department of Health and the Institute of Medicine in Washington, redefined successful weight loss to be five to 10 percent of a person's body weight and to keep the excess weight off for at least one year. The recommendations were changed to more realistic goals because many studies show people lose no more than 10-15 percent of their weight after one year of trying.

Unfortunately, many people are disappointed unless they can lose more than 25 percent of their body weight. Such a high goal can be associated with failure, shame and frustration. Dr. Thomas Wadden, a psychologist at the University of Pennsylvania School of Medicine, studied college age men and women concerning their attitudes on body weight. The women as a group, were dissatisfied with normal weight, having goals for weight that were not realistic. The male weight goals were within a normal range.

Weight should be assessed according to health factors, body fat, and illness, instead of what is ideal or average. Weight losses of five to 10 percent are associated with lower blood pressure, lower blood glucose and lowering of certain cholesterol levels. Patients who lose weight report decreases in the severity of sleep apnea, joint pain, heart and gynecologic complaints. Along with an improved appearance, one will often experience less anxiety, depression and more interest in proper eating and exercise.

A person who thinks about making gradual lifelong changes will be the one who keeps it off. Are you willing to exercise five days a week? Or are you willing to reduce the amount of food you eat everyday?

Exercise refers to moderate-intense activity for at least 30 minutes (cumulative) each day. A study published in the American Journal of Nutrition in 1990, showed regular physical activity to be the best predictor of success for keeping weight loss off. Another bonus of exercise is the addition of muscle or what we call lean mass. One pound of muscle will increase your metabolism to burn about 100 more calories per day while you are at rest.

Today's dietary trend is to avoid fad diets and develop healthier eating habits. Dietary changes such as smaller portions, consuming lower fat and sugar items are associated with the most success. Small changes such as switching to milk with a lower percentage of fat can make a difference.

Some of the leading weight loss experts suggest writing down everything that you eat. Often, we're amazed at how easily the calories can add up when we do this. This can help us face the truth about how much we eat in a day.

A dietitian is valuable in providing education on the food pyramid and portion sizes. The dietitian can also provide sample menus and meal plans. This health benefit is available free by referral at the hospital.

Recently, much has been written about the glycemic index of food. Some scientists and physicians believe you can curb your hunger by eating foods that do not change your blood sugar quickly.

Researchers at the University of Toronto tested various foods and found foods with a high glycemic index cause a fast boost in blood sugar. The body responds by raising insulin levels. Finally, you end up even hungrier and are likely to look for more to eat.

Generally, the recommendation is to avoid trying to satisfy your hunger with refined carbohydrates such as sugar, candy, pastries, dried fruits and sweetened cereals. Instead, eat whole grains, fruits like apples and oranges, milk or yogurt, meat and nuts which will not raise your blood sugar quickly. These items are best if combined; such as sugarfree yogurt with a piece of fruit or a turkey sandwich on whole wheat bread as a snack. Your hunger will be satisfied more easily and you won't be back in the kitchen in an hour searching for something else to eat.

Next week, we will explore over-the-counter and prescription drugs used in weight loss.

tricare q&a

Martin Army Community Hospital

Q: I am covered by Tricare Standard and I have other health insurance through my employer. Who pays what on my medical claims?

A: If you have another health plan in addition to Tricare, the other plan must pay whatever it covers before Tricare will make any type of payment determination. Federal law requires that Tricare pay after all other plans except for Medicaid and certain policies specifically designated as Tricare supplements.

Submit your claim to the other health insurer first. After the other insurer has processed your claim, then Tricare will coordinate benefits, which may pay up to your out-of-pocket expenses. Regardless of coordination, Tricare will never pay more than it would have paid if you had no other insurance.

Q: What happens after I submit my claim to the other plan?

A: The other plan will process your claim, then send you an Explanation of Benefits (EOB), which explains how the claim was handled. You or your medical provider must then submit the claim, along with the EOB from the other insurer, to Palmetto Government Benefits Administrators (PGBA), the Tricare Southeast and GulfSouth Regions claims processor. The PGBA claims address (which changed April 1) is Tricare — Region 3/4, Claims, P.O. Box 7031, Camden, SC 29020-7031.

Claims sent to the previous PGBA claims address will be forwarded.

Q: After the Tricare claim is submitted, will I still owe my doctor? If so, how much?

A: You may owe nothing after both the other insurer and Tricare have made their payment determinations, as long as the medical services you obtained are covered by both plans and the combined normal benefits of the plans are equal to 100 percent of the charges. In addition, for both plans to pay, the precertification, referral and other requirements of both plans must be followed.

The EOB is designed to help you understand how your benefits have been coordinated. It is important for you to pay close attention to the EOB's and medical bills or statements that you receive and respond to them when necessary.

The total amount allowed, the payment amount and the balance owed to a provider are based on numerous factors. These factors include participating provider status, the Tricare allowable and the amount paid by the other health insurance. If you have questions about these amounts, contact the PGBA Tricare Claims Line at (800) 403-3950.

If you receive a bill from your doctor or hospital after the insurance plans have completed processing your claim, check the amount billed against the AAmounts Allowed@ and AAmounts Paid@ listed on the EOB's. Please be aware that most providers are limited by law in the amount they may bill Tricare beneficiaries. If you still have questions about the bill, contact the provider who billed you or the PGBA Tricare Claims Line listed above.

Q: If the EOB states that the payment paid by Tricare is $0, does that mean that I have to pay the remaining amount?

A: Not necessarily. It may mean that the other health insurance covered the entire amount due. You may, however, be responsible for your usual copayments, cost shares and any amounts applied to your deductible. The EOB includes an explanation for each payment determination. You may refer to the ARemarks/Reason Code@ box on the EOB for the explanation.

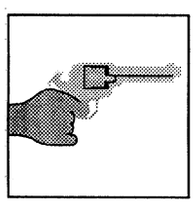
Please remember that the EOB is not a bill. Do not remit payment to a doctor or hospital unless you have received a bill specifically requesting payment. You may call the PGBA Claims Line to verify that the amount billed by the provider is correct.

DPW offers safety and administrative information

DPW Customer Relations

Residents of Fort Benning's housing areas are encouraged to cut this out and place it in a convenient location for future reference.

Make yourself at home and enjoy your stay in family housing. This quick-reference is intended to make your stay more enjoyable.



If you have ideas or ways DPW can improve this service, call the DPW Information line at 545-2118.

Fires

Follow these guidelines to ensure safety from fires.

- Dial 911 to report all fires and gas odors.
- Do not smoke in bed.
- Gasoline and other related flammables may not be stored in quarters.
- Do not leave stove tops or ovens unattended while on.
- Store matches and lighters out of reach of children.
- Test smoke detectors monthly.

Weapons

You must register privately owned weapons with the Military Police in Bldg. 2637. The telephone number is 545-3646. Some other guidelines for storing weapons are:

- Keep firearms secured and away from children.
- Store ammunition and weapons separately.
- Weapons may not be carried in automobiles or on your person except to hunting and shooting ranges, etc.

Carbon monoxide

Your furnace and water heater are inspected annually. If you wish to conduct your own test, a carbon monoxide tester is available for checkout by calling 545-8323.

Lead paint

Those quarters built before 1978 (the vast majority of Fort Benning quarters) contain lead-based paint. The lead paint has been contained through a process called encapsulation. No safety problem exists.

Baby sitting

Children under the age of 12 may not be left unattended in quarters. Baby sitters must be certified. An approved baby sitter list is available at the Family Child-Care (FCC) Office. The telephone number is 544-1623.

Poisoning

Keep poisonous substances (oven cleaner, bleach, cleansers, etc.) out of reach of children.

If a poisoning occurs, read the label of substance (if available) and follow its directions. Call the hospital emergency room at 544-1502 or 544-1123

Privately owned pools

Swimmers must be attended by an adult.

Small or inflatable pools don't need a cover or fence if emptied after each use; all other pools require a cover or fence.

Automobile safety

The speed limit in all family housing areas is 15 mph and is strictly enforced.

Check behind your vehicle when pulling out, and don't let children play in or around cars. Use extreme caution when using jackstands and do not leave them unattended.

Work orders

Residents in the Bouton Heights and Davis Hill areas should call 689-5400 for repair work needed in their quarters (includes emergencies). Residents of Perkins Place and McGraw Manor should call 689-1773. All other residents must report routine and emergency and other work orders to 545-2135.

U-Do-It Center

The Self-Help (U-Do-It) Center, Building 385, hours of operation are 8:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. Tuesday to Saturday. The phone number is 545-3963.

Pets

Pet registration is required at the post's Veterinary Services Clinic, Bldg. 260. The telephone number is 545-4444.

A maximum of three pets is allowed per family.

Owners must clean up after exercising pets in common areas. Pets must not be allowed to bark excessively. Also, pets must be fenced or on a leash.

Utility conservation

- Turn off outside lights before retiring and inside lights when not in use.
- Keep windows and doors closed when heating and air conditioning is on; change filters monthly.
- Heat to a maximum of 68 degrees; cool to a minimum of 78 degrees.

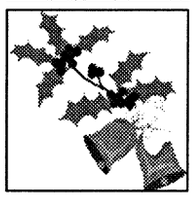
Service orders should be called into 545-2135.

Installation of items

Installation of fences, satellites, antennas, sheds and all portable structures require post approval.

Submit a request for approval to the Family Housing Office, Bldg. 399, Olson Hall, or call 545-2987.

These items may not be attached to any housing structure and must be placed in rear yards.



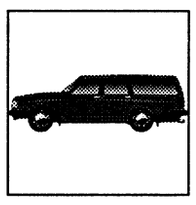
Community life

Treat other residents as you wish to be treated.

Contact your Community Life noncommissioned officer first for assistance concerning relations with other residents.

The Community Life Office is located at Bldg. 359 For more information, call 545-2910.

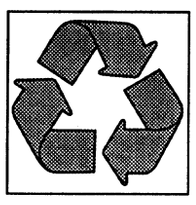
Holiday decorations



Exterior electrical displays and decorations are permitted, but decorations of any type are not permitted on roofs.

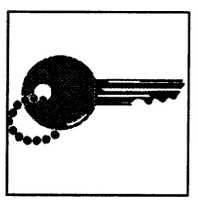
Recreational vehicles

Recreational vehicles more than 22 feet in length (including bailers) must be parked in the recreational vehicle lot. Call 545-7978 for information.



Vehicles under 22 feet may be parked in approved parking areas within the housing areas, not on grass.

Automobiles



Parking is on a first-come, first-served basis, except in areas with driveways, carports or garages.

Park in authorized areas (no parking on grass or patios).

Recycling

Everyone is encouraged to recycle. A recycling brochure is available at the Family Housing Office, Bldg. 399, or by calling 545-2990.

Keys and lock-outs

Duplicate keys are available by visiting the Family Housing Office, Bldg. 399.

If you are locked out of your quarters during normal operating hours (7:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday to Friday), contact the housing office at 545-7312; after hours, during weekends and holidays, contact the Military Police desk at 545-3214 for assistance.

Clearing quarters

Schedule your pre-termination appointment 30 to 45 days prior to departure with the housing office in Bldg. 399. The telephone number is 545-2990.

Perform all self-help work identified by the inspector during pre-termination appointment. Routine service orders must be completed prior to your final inspection.

An approved list of cleaning teams is available in the housing office.

Weather

Tune in to your local radio or television station for warnings.

Installation personnel can obtain current weather information by calling 545-3824.

ask the judge

Rick Parker
Office of the Staff Judge Advocate

Q: What are the requirements for automobile insurance in Georgia, and is there anything I need to know about buying it?

A: Every person operating a motor vehicle that is required to be registered in Georgia must have, at a minimum, a policy of liability insurance on the vehicle, which will pay up to $15,000 as a result of injury to one person, up to $30,000 as a result of injury to more than one person in one accident and up to $10,000 as a result of damage to property belonging to another person. Liability insurance is the kind of insurance that pays for damages to others caused when you act carelessly or negligently.

Liability insurance

Why is liability insurance important? If you cause someone damage or injury due to your carelessness, you can be required to pay that person for his or her damages, medical expenses, pain and suffering and the like. Most of us simply don't have the money available to take care of those kinds of expenses, and these days, medical expenses alone can be astronomical.

Insurance represents a pool of money all of us pay into that can be tapped to pay for injuries and damages when necessary. The limits described above are minimum limits. You can, at your option, purchase more than the minimum required insurance. These days, with medical costs being so high, having more than the minimum amount of insurance is not a bad idea, particularly if you own your home or have other significant property you want to protect from being used to satisfy claims filed against you.

State law

The minimum state law requirements only apply to liability insurance. Be aware that if you have a loan on your vehicle, you probably are required by the bank to have collision and comprehensive insurance on your car. This is the insurance which pays for damage or loss to your car, no matter who might be at fault. It also pays for damage or loss due to theft, vandalism and weather.

Liability insurance required by the state does not satisfy bank requirements. If you are required by the terms of your loan to have this kind of insurance and you don't get it, the bank will purchase a policy which only covers the bank's interest in the vehicle (the balance of the loan) and add the cost of the insurance to your loan. This type of insurance is extremely expensive compared to regular collision and comprehensive insurance.

Insurance options

When purchasing liability, collision or comprehensive insurance, you should shop around. You can go to agents which only sell one company's insurance policies (such as State Farm or Allstate), or to independent agents who sell policies from a number of different companies.

Although coverages may be the same, different companies have different styles of handling claims. Check with friends and acquaintances about their experience with insurance companies.

Most policies are sold for a minimum six month term of coverage, and most insurance companies require you to pay the premium for the full six-month period up front. Some companies will make arrangements for you to pay the premium in monthly payments, but this is usually through a premium finance agreement. This is a loan and you should pay attention to the interest rate being charged. Also, if you decide to cancel your policy during the middle of the term, you will likely still wind up owing some money to the company which financed your premium.

Lowering costs

If you are purchasing collision or comprehensive insurance, and you want to keep the cost down, you may want to consider a higher deductible. A deductible is an amount of money that you have to pay towards the damage to your car, out of your pocket, before the insurance starts picking up cost. Most policies offer a standard $250 deductible, but the premium on a $500 deductible is significantly lower. Of course, this means that you would have to pay the first $500 in damages out of your pocket. The higher deductible and lower premium is simply a gamble you take that your vehicle is not likely to suffer damage.

If you have questions about insurance requirements or problems concerning an insurance policy, call the Legal Assistance Division for an appointment at 545-3281.

This week's article provides information on bedding plants for family housing residents, yard waste pick-up and installation policy on garden plots.

Fresh bedding plants arrive weekly

The Self-Help (U-Do-It) Center is receiving a shipment of spring bedding plants with fresh shipments each Wednesday. These plants will be offered to family housing residents through May or until supplies are exhausted. To pick up a flat, stop by the Self-Help (U-Do-It) Center during normal business hours, which are 8:30 a.m. to 4 p.m., Tuesday through Saturday. The center is closed Sunday, Monday and holidays.

Spring clean up reminder

All curbside pick-up of yard waste must be in biodegradable paper bags or durable plastic or metal containers marked "Yard Waste." Yard waste in other type containers will not be picked up. Paper bags are available at the Self-Help (U-Do-It) Center, Building 385.

Planning a back-yard garden

As you get ready to plant your pea patch, we would like to take the opportunity to familiarize our readers with the installation's guidelines on vegetable gardens (USAIC Regulation 210-5). They are:

•No area of the lawn will be destroyed for vegetable gardens.

•Vegetable gardens may be planted where flower beds are normally placed, adjacent to the building.

•Residents may cultivate common use areas (open areas) which are at least 150 feet from the building. Garden plots in these areas will not exceed 150 square feet.

•A resident using a common use area will obtain approval from the chief of the housing division, through submission of a letter or memorandum along with a sketch or a map indicating location and size of proposed garden.

•Residents desiring to cultivate large garden plots must obtain approval from their sponsoring major command.

•Major command can obtain areas upon request to DPW, Building and Grounds Division along with a FB-144R (Record of Environmental Consideration). A sketch or map including location and size of area will also be required.

If you have questions that were not covered in the above information, call Ben Anderson at 545-8323.

Comments and questions

If you have questions or topics that you would like to be addressed in the DPW "Information Corner," call Glenn Todd, DPW customer relations specialist, at 545-2117 or write to the Directorate of Public Works, Building 6, Room 409, ATTN ATZB-PWC (Glenn Todd) Fort Benning, GA 31905.

Easter celebrates the sacrifice of Christ

Chaplain (Lt. Col.) William C. Shelnutt, IX
The Infantry Center Chapel

Good Friday, the Friday preceding Easter, is celebrated by Christians as the anniversary of the crucifixion of Jesus Christ. No other two events in all of history have impacted humanity more than the crucifixion and resurrection. With the crucifixion, total and complete reconciliation to God was purchased. The resurrection announced the completion of God's plan to redeem mankind to himself.

reflections

GOOD FRIDAY

Good Friday is five days after Palm Sunday. For many years, Good Friday was called God's Friday. In other countries around the world, Good Friday is referred to as Big Friday, Holy Friday, or Silent Friday. Yet, without eyes of faith, nothing good could manifest itself on this day.

Crucifixion was a common method of execution for criminals who were not Roman citizens. It was meant not only to torture and kill, but to remove any dignity in that death.

After being ridiculed before Pontius Pilate, Jesus was beaten, mocked, spit upon, stripped of his clothes and nailed to the cross. This cross was then lifted up and dropped into a hole, forcing shock waves of pain throughout his body. Splinters from the wood were driven deep into his flesh which was already raw from the flogging he had just endured. And to make things worse, no one thanked him for his sacrifice, but instead, mockers insulted and taunted him. Jesus was not a criminal but he was crucified between two thieves.

The cross was a terrible instrument of agonizing torment and death. But now, for believers, the cross of Jesus has become synonymous with life. Christ's death is the good news of victory over sin and death, and Good Friday is the commemoration of the death of Jesus Christ for the sins of the world.

EASTER

To the Christian, Easter is the celebration of the resurrection of Jesus Christ. It was on Easter Sunday that the friends of Jesus first learned that he was alive again. "The Empty Tomb had a message for the disciples as it has for us. It says to science and philosophy, 'Explain this event.' It says to history, 'Repeat this event.' It says to time, 'Blot out this event.' It says to faith, 'Believe this event.'"

During the French Revolution, somebody said to Talleyrand, bishop of Autun: "The Christian religion — what is it? It would be easy to start a religion like that." "Oh, yes," Talleyrand replied. "One would only have to get crucified and rise again the third day."

So, as we look toward Easter, remember that Jesus' grave is empty. He is alive! His sacrifice on the cross brings to each believer — new life. His invitation to all is to believe and receive the gift of his salvation and to enjoy fellowship with him that transcends time and space.

Charles Swindoll said, "The decision to accept Christ in faith is the most important decision you will ever make for it carries not only eternal hope, but significance for day-to-day living as well."

Christianity is the only world religion that claims to have a living founder. That fact alone requires our attention and decision on what we will do with him.

Pioneers go undefeated, top Zig Zag Zoo for 6-0

Spc. Michelle J. Davis
Bayonet staff writer

The Fort Benning Pioneers soccer team placed another notch under their belt Sunday as they defeated Zig Zag Zoo 8-2 on Columbus State University's soccer field, Sunday.

The Pioneers, who are sponsored by the 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment, are 6-0 and the only undefeated team in the Columbus Men's League so far this season.

"We've played most of the toughest teams once this year, so I think we should have no problem the remainder of the season," said player John L. Monroe, commander of Company C, 1st Bn., 29th Inf. Regt.

According to Monroe, about half of the team is made up of Soldiers from 1st Bn., 29th Inf. Regt., while the other players come from all throughout post.

"We've got riggers, MP's, engineers — just about someone from everywhere on post," Monroe said.

This is only the team's second year in the league and their first playing in the 'A' league.

"We went undefeated last year in the 'B' league, so we thought we'd move up and try some of the better teams," Monroe said.

Monroe contributes much of the Pioneers success to the team's physical fitness.

"You can see it in any of our games by the second half," he said. "Most teams complain they don't have enough people to substitute in while our players never want to be taken out," he said. "We also tend to be more physical on the field and beat our opponents to the ball."

In addition to holding practices twice a week the team has also held scrimmages against the U.S. Army School of the Americas soccer team.

"We've played them a few times just for fun," Monroe said. Although the season ends in May, Monroe said the team is already looking forward to winning the end-of-season tournament.

"We have a good combination of offense and defense," Monroe said. "A typical score for one of our games is 4-1 or 5-2."

The Pioneers face the FC Falcons 3 p.m. April 18 at Memorial Stadium and Sting 3 p.m. April 25 at CSU's soccer field.

Women's basketball team takes gold at SMCC

Spc. Michelle J. Davis
Bayonet staff writer

The Fort Benning women's basketball team "The Bandits" brought home the gold last month after winning the Southeastern Military Conference Championships at Keesler Air Force Base in Biloxi, Miss., March 1.

The women's team, which is comprised of 10 Soldiers from various units around post, beat out four teams to take the championship.

"This is the first year we've won the tournament," said Tammy White-McKnight of U.S. Army Infantry Center Military Police Company. "The icing on the cake was beating the best team in the conference for the championship.

During the regular season, the Bandits traveled to various military installations around Georgia, Alabama, Mississippi and Florida to compete.

"Everything came completely out of our own pockets," White-McKnight said. "That means you really love the sport."

Player Glema Gordon, a platoon leader with the 608th Ordnance Company, 36th Engineer Group (Combat), said that in addition to paying their own way, working around the players' diverse schedules was also a challenge.

"We're all in the military and that comes first so we've all had to work the best we could around everyone's schedules," Gordon said.

Despite the various challenges, the team was 10-6 heading into the end-of-season tournament.

Gordon attributes the Bandit's success to the overall team's dedication and professionalism.

"We really pulled together and were there for each other," Gordon said. "Our coach also had a lot to do with our success; he's one of the greatest coaches I've ever had."

Coach Robert H. Jackson of Columbus has lead the Bandits since 1993 and will continue to volunteer as long as they let him.

"I like coaching and this is my way of giving back to the community," Jackson said. "This is a very talented group of women and I look forward to working with them next year.

In addition to a few players who may try for the All-Army women's basketball team, Gordon said a couple of the players have also been tagged for possible positions with the Women's National Basketball Association (WNBA).

No matter what, though, the team is definitely looking forward to next year's season, Gordon said.

"We may lose three to four players, but Fort Benning is so big, I'm sure there will be people to step up and give us a hand."

The team will hit the courts in August when they conduct try-outs for the team and practice for the season, which begins in October.

Teams compete in annual TRADOC bowling tournament

Nicole Longstreath
Special to the Bayonet©

The annual Training and Doctrine Command (TRADOC) telegraphic bowling tournament was held Mar.ch 30-April 1 at the Main Post Bowling Center.

Two teams, a men's team and a women's team, represented Fort Benning in competition that included competitors from other military installations throughout the United States.

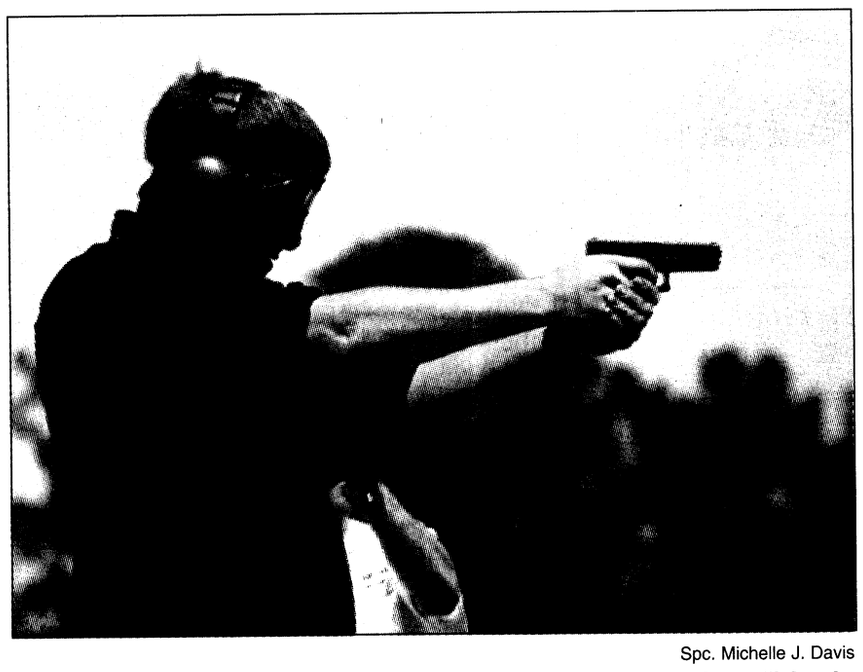
The 12 team members, six in each team, were chosen from a group of 30 applicants by Daisylnn Arrington, operational assistant at the Main Post Bowling Center.

After a week of tryouts, that began March 9, the players were chosen.

"In March, we do a scratch elimination tournament, from that tournament, we take the highest six females and males scores," Arrington said, "Then we make up the TRADOC tournament team."

The men's and women's teams, who were able to bowl for free, went on to compete in scratch, no handicap, competition, which meant that what they bowled was their final score.

Even though the teams from other installations were not present at Fort Benning, they were able to compete telegraphically, sending their scores via phone, e-mail or fax.



"Each installation sends off their scores to TRADOC and they take all of the scores that are sent to them and determine the winner," Arrington said.

Although the tournament involved bowlers from across the country, some involved at Fort Benning were somewhat dissatisfied with the lack of publicity the tournament receives.

"Soccer and baseball on post get publicized, I don't know why bowling doesn't get as much publicity," said W. C. Petty, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment, competitor in the tournament.

Arrington attributes the lack of players and publicity to the non-monetary prizes.

Shooters compete in Old South Classic VI Glock match Saturday

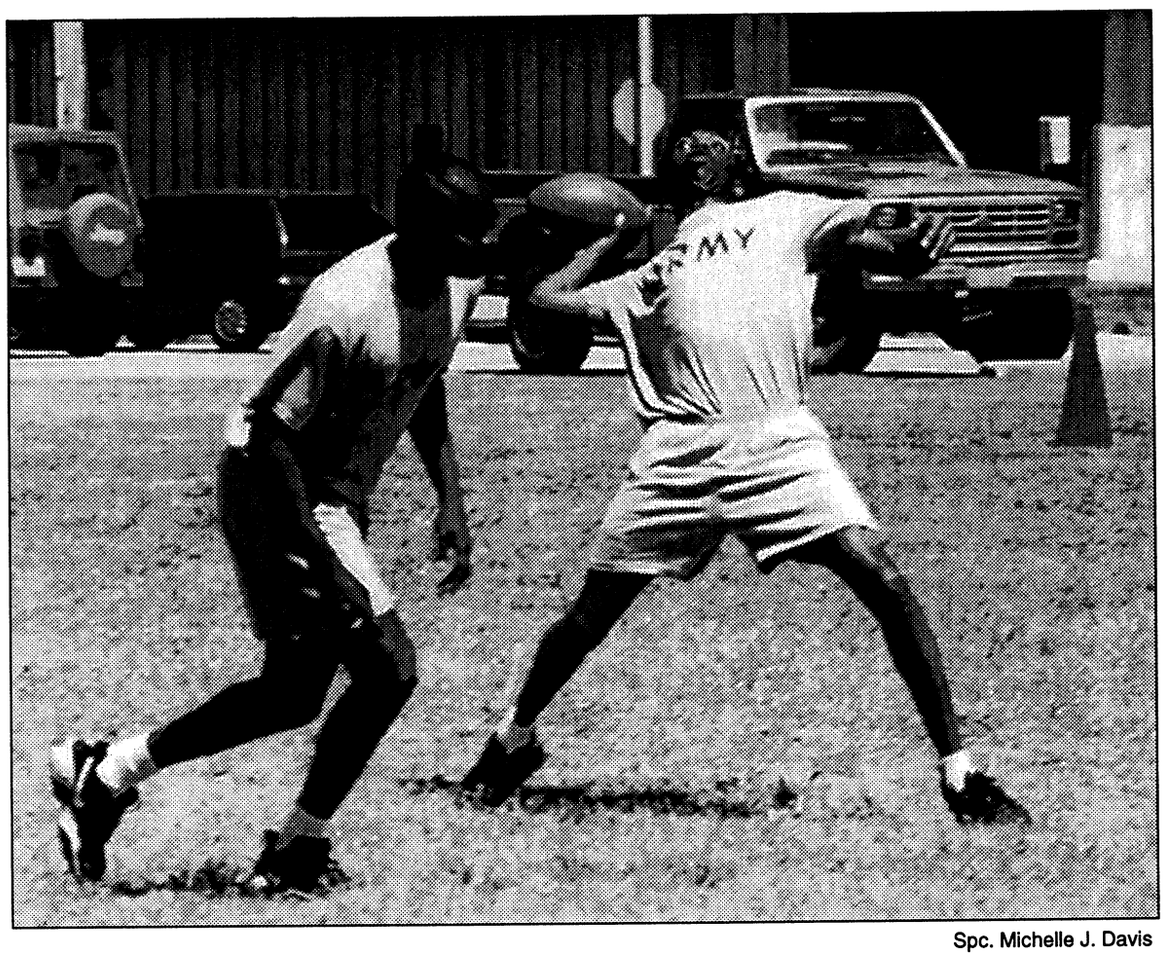
Spc. Michelle J. Davis
Bayonet staff writer

More than 300 pistol enthusiasts flocked to English Range Saturday and Sunday to participate in Old South Classic VI, a Glock Sport Shooting Foundation pistol match.

The match, which required the use of a Glock pistol, kicked-off the first of 24 GSSF matches scheduled at ranges around the United States.

"We normally get a good turnout from this event and it's our second biggest event," said Chris Edwards, director of the GSSF organization.

This was the sixth year the event was held on Fort Benning.



"The club here was very receptive to our organization when we first contacted them in 1992," Edwards said. "Now, we continue to hold them here because we always have good volunteer help from the community and it's a great facility for these types of matches."

The match was broken down into three stages known as the Glock 5-7-9, Glock' M and Glock plates.

During the Glock 5-7-9, the competitor faces cardboard targets where they get a limited amount of shots to fire within a certain amount of time.

The Glock' M stage allows the competitor to shoot at both cardboard and steel targets with a limited amount of

During the Glock plates stage, the competitor must knock down six, six by eight inch diameter steel plates. Although there is no specific time to complete this mission, the shooter's score is divided by how many seconds it takes to get all six targets.

"For this event, it's pretty much the faster you are, the better you do," Edwards said.

While the competition seems to draw serious competitors, Edwards said the match is for shooters of all levels of expertise.

"We like to include everyone from the inexperienced to the seasoned shooter," he said. "We don't really cater to professionals."

One way the event draws more participants is by splitting the event into three categories: amateur-civilian, amateur-law enforcement and competitor classes.

The winners from each of the classes takes home a new Glock pistol of choice while cash awards are given for second and third prizes.

Because of the large number of competitors, Edwards said it takes between two and three weeks for the results to be posted.

"Each participant will receive a full list of the competition results by mail," he said.

Although the Glock match is held once a year, the Fort Benning Rifle and Pistol Club conducts pistol matches the first Saturday of every month beginning at 1 p.m.

For more information on upcoming events, call 689-3371.

Bowling: Two teams from Fort Benning take on teams from around U.S.

"The winners don't win any money, but they do win the title of TRADOC Champions," Arrington said.

Petty, an avid bowler did, however, enjoyed the competitiveness of the tournament and was grateful to the bowling center for the chance to practice before the actual tournament.

"If I am here next year, I would like to compete," Petty said.

According to Arrington, the results for this year's tournament are still pending and the winners will not be announced until June.

Anyone who would like to participate next year is welcome to try out, membership in a league is not necessary. Arrington says the tournament for 1999 will likely begin in March and will end the first week of April.

Rangers tackle obstacle course

Pvt. 2 Amy L. Nyland
Bayonet staff writer

For a squad of rangers from the 4th Ranger Training Battalion, (RTB) tackling the challenges before them resulted in what some may say looked like Swan Lake meets the World Wrestling Federation.

With grace it appeared the rangers floated across some of the obstacles while others required an immediate change of tune to that of bulging veins, red faces and grunts of true grit.

However, no matter how high, tricky or dangerous the obstacle, all the rangers successfully completed the new confidence course located on Indianhead Road, Monday and christened it a worthy opponent.

According to Master Sgt. Nathaniel Crimbley, NCOIC of Operation Training Division, Directorate of Operations and Training, the confidence course was a $65,000 project under the auspices of the Directorate of Public Works that began Aug. 18 and was completed Sept. 19.

The confidence course is the only one located on Main Post and contains 16 obstacles divided into four groups with two rows of eight on each side.

According to Crimbley, the course is under the supervision of the 11th Infantry Regiment, which means the 11th Infantry Regiment is in charge of scheduling and maintenance.

According to Maj. Stephanie L. Beavers, operations officer, 11th Infantry Regiment, the first responsibility of the confidence course is to the program of instruction (POI) or the Soldiers in training, but when not in use it is first come, first serve basis.

However, units must still schedule the use of the course through the 11th Inf. Regt. They must also meet certain requirements such as providing two combat life savers while the course is in use.

Beavers said the confidence course is in a prime location because it is close to the Soldiers.

She said many of the units such as the Infantry Officer Basic Course are within walking distance to the course, which saves on bus transportation.

"It is good to have a course on Main Post because it's accessible," Beavers said. "It's also good to have two because the one at the Infantry Training Brigade gets used so much that many times, it is not available when it is needed. This just gives us more options for training."

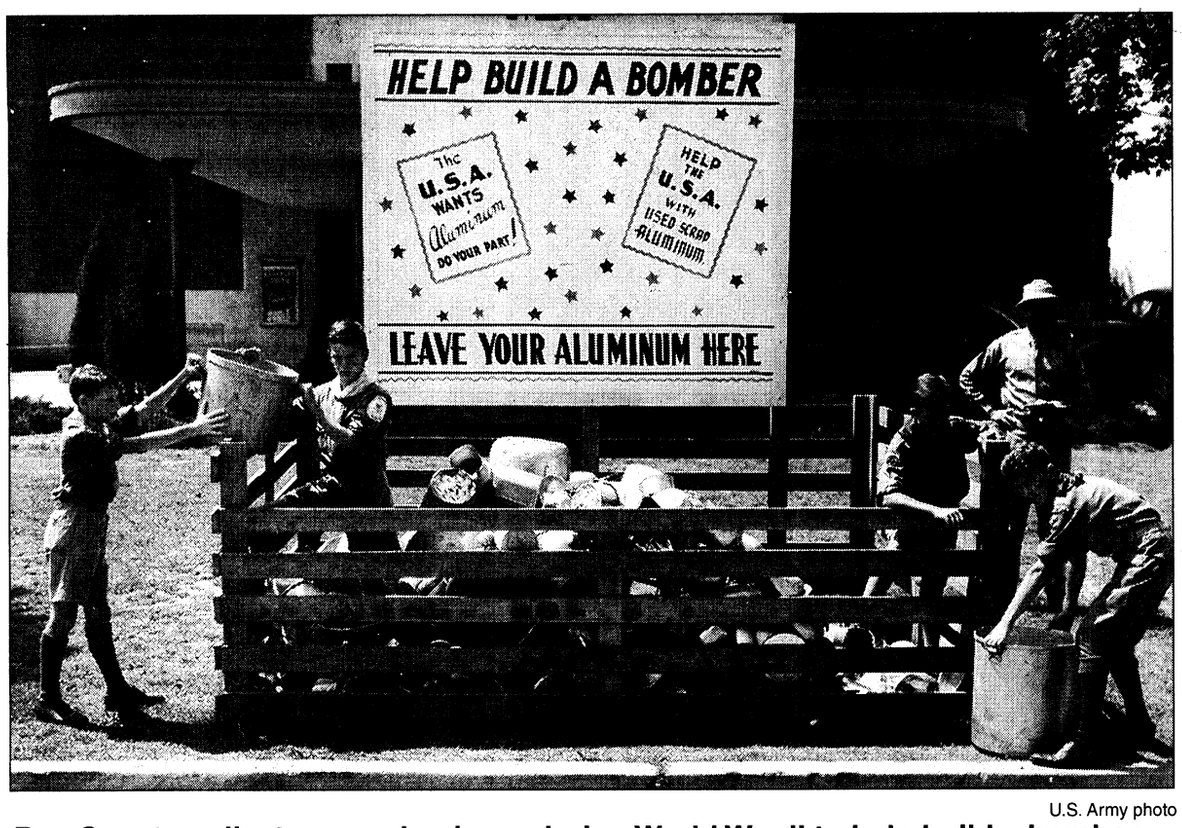
Beavers said the reason the rangers were the first to go through the course is because the RTB is the proponent for the confidence course. The rangers certify the course by testing the obstacles.

"The rangers come out and go through the course to let us know if it is 'good to go'. They check it for safety and make sure there are no other corrections that need to be made," Beavers said.

Pvt. 2 Amy L. Nyland

Two soldiers from the 4th Ranger Training Battalion tackle an obstacle at the new confidence course located on Indianhead Road Monday.

The rangers began the course by running across a series of logs, which required them to balance while the logs rolled back and forth freely. The rangers proceeded to pull, climb, crawl and weave as they attacked the course and tested it in true ranger fashion.



The testing paid off because half-way through the course a malfunction occurred with one of the obstacles. While none of the rangers were hurt, Beavers said this is the reason that they must certify the course.

"Everything else on the confidence course went fine and I'm glad that the certification served it's purpose," Beavers said.

"It's important we make sure we know what needs to be done to maintain safety and the rangers help us with that, she added."

According to Sgt. Scott A. Thomas, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 4th RTB, confidence courses provide a good cardiovascular workout along with upper body strength building.

"This is definitely a good course, it is close to the one we use in RTB," Thomas said. "A few of the obstacles were pretty tough, but everybody overcame the course with teamwork and perseverance."

Historians study Fort Benning

Nicole Longstreath
Special to the Bayonet©

Authors of the book, Fort Benning, The Land and the People, Sharyn Kane and Richard Keeton made an appearance Thursday at Fort Benning. The duo came to Donovan Technical Library and later the Fort Benning Officers' Club to sign copies of their book that tells the story of the land we call Fort Benning.

Imagine 96,000 acres of tents, housing made of salvaged materials, a few post offices, and most of the time, lots of mud.

In 1922, this is what Fort Benning was like, according to Kane and Keeton.

Until 1924, this was reality for Soldiers at the post that now encompasses a sprawling 180,000 plus acres. During that year, a new commander, Brig. Gen. Briant Wells, formed a plan to permanently enhance the post with tree-lined streets and elaborate architectural structures. His plan also included an emphasis on recreation, including the construction of Doughboy Stadium in 1924.

This plan started a building frenzy that lasted 15 years and employed the unemployed during the Depression.

Historical Structures

One of Fort Benning's most well-known buildings is Ridgeway Hall, the U.S. Army School of the Americas, built in 1935. The original Infantry School was designed by the then famous New York architectural firm, McKim, Mead and White.

The Infantry Center Chapel, built in 1935, is another historical structure built to enhance the morale of the Soldiers. The chapel was constructed to accommodate Catholic, Protestant and Jewish worship and boasts a 100-foot-tall steeple.

The 24th Infantry Theater at Main Post also has some history behind it. The all-black 24th Infantry Regiment built the theater in 1933.

Famous Figures

Fort Benning has been the home of many Soldiers who have become historical military figures.

Prior to Hollywood's depiction of him in the movie, Patton, George S. Patton trained the Second Armored Division at Sand Hill. His old headquarters is now behind the Infantry Museum.

Five-star Gen. Omar Bradley once resided in Riverside as the post commander in 1941. Bradley

Safety follows post 'bomb squad'

EOD protects community from explosives

Nicole Longstreath
Special to the Bayonet©

The call came in to the Fort Benning 89th Explosive Ordinance Disposal Detachment (EOD) at 1:50 p.m. April 8.

Prisoners working near the intersection of Macon and Chadsworth roads discovered a potentially explosive device.

Soldiers from the EOD were dispatched to the site by Columbus area 911 service and by 2:30 p.m. the devices were safely disposed of.

"It was just another day," said Staff Sgt. Timothy Rodriguez, describing the moment he found the deteriorated items, including smoke and thermite grenades, which burn at 3,800 degrees fahrenheit.

Soldiers bound for the EOD receive six months of training in fusing systems and ordinance recognition along with tactics on approaching potentially dangerous items.

Once the Soldiers reach the EOD, they constantly train for the next call.

When that call comes, the EOD is immediately dispatched to the site of a possibly dangerous situation.

First, it is determined if the item can be safely detonated on site. If determined safe, residents of the area are advised not to go near their windows until the object is detonated.

When an item is deemed too hazardous for the area it was found in, it is safely packed in a sand-filled explosive safe. The device is then transported to an area where it awaits detonation at a later time.

Fort Benning's equivalent to the "bomb squad" is not just responsible for the areas of Fort Benning and Columbus.

According to Staff Sgt. Eliesed Ramos, the EOD handles calls from as far south as the panhandle of Florida all the way to southwest Georgia and most of Alabama.

At Fort Benning, if an area is believed to contain explosive objects, it is marked, "Keep out," or "DUD," every 50 feet.

If Soldiers find a potentially explosive object while training or on duty, they are advised to inform their chain of command

If a civilian or a Soldier off duty finds an unfamiliar item, Rodriguez warns persons to call law enforcement, who then call EOD.

"Call the military police and stay away from it," Rodriguez said. "Don't even think about touching it."

Even though the handling and detonating of devices like artillery simulators is serious business, some at EOD say their job gives them a reputation for being a little crazy.

Ramos says despite criticism and jokes from other units, his job is safer than they may think.

Soldiers from the EOD even have a dud-retrieving robot to pick up items that are extremely deteriorated and dangerous.

"They (other units) may think we're crazy, but this job is pretty safe."

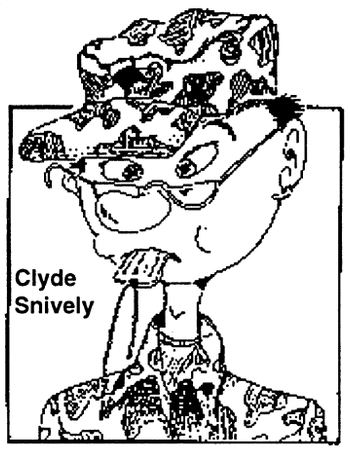
Volunteers deserve gratitude, appreciation

Spc. Clyde Snively
Bayonet columnist



This might not be considered an accepted reason for volunteering, but after reading Sunday's Ledger-Enquirer about a 76-year-old man who volunteers, I'm thinking, "there might be something to this volunteering."

commentary

For those of you who missed the story, the man volunteers his time leading kindergarten kids and first and second graders in what we Army grunts would consider physical training. Makes them more active, keeps them in shape. Why did he volunteer? Because his 7-year-old CHILD is in that class and he wanted to make sure his son got plenty of exercise. And, oh yes, he also has a 4-year-old.

So I'm thinking, "maybe there is something to this 'you're only as old as you feel,' business."

I know, the brickbats are armed. You want to come after me because I would volunteer for all the wrong reasons.

Hey, I know a lot of volunteers and none of them volunteer to feel bad. They don't volunteer to have a lousy time. They don't volunteer because they're masochists. They volunteer because they want to do some good, but also because they love people and like to help.

Ask the Soldiers who volunteer their time at the Special Olympics. Sure, the first time some of them may have gone because they were ordered to volunteer, but once they do it, there's no holding them back. They can't wait for the next Special Olympics because they get so much out of helping those kids. These kids shower the volunteers with mega doses of unconditional love.

Or ask the Soldiers who volunteer as Big Brothers or Big Sisters, those who spend time with kids teaching them to read, or work with Habitat for Humanity building homes.

They will tell you they get a lot more out of volunteering than those they volunteer to help. While this might not be accurate; those being helped truly need and appreciate the volunteers, the fact remains, this is one of the few win-win situations left in the world today.

Fort Benning would not be the post it is if it weren't for the legions of family members and retirees who volunteer at Santa's Castle, Martin Army Community Hospital, Army Community Service and American Red Cross.

Kids wouldn't be scouts or playing organized sports if it weren't for the volunteer coaches and parents.

Family members of deployed Soldiers rely on volunteers to help them make it through separations and how many of us got free assistance with our tax returns this year?

We get out of life what we put into life. Volunteers truly understand this.

They may not be getting rich as volunteers but they are truly rewarded with the appreciation shown to them by those they help.

Volunteers complete variety of tasks, keep post running

Staff Sgt. Lori Egan

Volunteers help out everywhere on Fort Benning.

commentary

They are essential to the Youth Services sports programs. Without the men and women who volunteer their time and talents, many Fort Benning children would not be able to participate in team sports like soccer, baseball and football and learn about sportsmanship and teamwork.

Volunteer organizations like the PTOs help the schools raise money for needed supplies and even state-of-the-art computer equipment. Very few people need an entire box of donuts, but when the PTO sells them at $3 a box, a lot of offices in Infantry Hall suddenly smell like a bakery.

Volunteers help agencies like the Red Cross help people in times of need, like the victims of the recent tornadoes. On Fort Benning, Red Cross volunteers make it easier for people to get from the parking lot into Martin Army Community Hospital. They offer classes in baby-sitting, adult and children CPR and now there is a class for pet CPR.

Santa's Castle and the Army Community Service food locker wouldn't exist without the help of volunteers — volunteers who raise money and shop for toys and food.

The Officers' Wives' Club and the Enlisted Wives' Club raise money for scholarships and other worthwhile charities.

All these things happen because of volunteers.

The Bayonet has been fortunate to receive the work of volunteers.

In the summer of 1996, Linda Lee lent her organizational talents to the chaos of a newsroom. She organized the morgue, which is where copies of the paper for competition are stored. There is only supposed to be a year's worth of papers in the morgue at a time. I think she cleaned out at least two years' worth of old papers and organized the ones we needed.

After she finished with the morgue, she cleaned up the filing system and the alibi file, which is where we maintain hard copies of the information we put in the paper.

Last summer, when the Bayonet was short of staff, we were lucky enough to have a young woman who wanted to study journalism at the University of Georgia volunteer. Susie Kim wrote stories, typed in briefs, and covered Fort Benning events for the paper in her spare time while working two part-time jobs. This summer she won't be able to come back to Fort Benning, but she is trying to line up another volunteer to work this summer for us.

I've asked a number of people who volunteer why they do it and the replies are mostly the same — enjoyment. Most of the people volunteer because they enjoy it, doing the job makes them feel good, it's a job that needs be done and they're able to help out.

Not one person said they volunteer because it looks good on a resume, but it does.

How to get your news in The Bayonet

Editor's note: Many people call the Bayonet staff with questions about how to get information in the paper or with erroneous information about deadlines, so we have compiled the following for your information.

Our mission

Our mission is to provide timely, accurate and truthful information that supports Army goals and directives.

As Fort Benning's authorized newspaper, we are dedicated to giving you the most complete coverage possible. In order to do this, we rely on members of our audience to keep us informed about their units' or directorates' activities.

Requesting coverage of news events

Some events we cover include brigade-level changes of command, changes in post policies or procedures and other postwide events. Unfortunately, we do not have the manpower to cover everything on post, so we focus on the events that affect most of the post.

Also, due to our limited number of personnel, we prefer that requests for coverage be submitted at least two weeks in advance.

There are a few events that we do not send a reporter to cover such as parties, dinners, dining events, dances, balls, teas, coffees, club and organization meetings. The staff also is unable to cover elections, award presentations, changes of command below the brigade level, check presentations and group photos.

Army Regulation 360-81, which governs the production and content of Army newspapers, states that covering such events is not a function of the post newspaper or the Public Affairs Office.

Deadlines

Film, photos, stories, letters to the editor and other news items intended for The Bayonet must arrive in our office no later than noon Friday prior to the next week's publication.

You may leave stories, film and photos for publication in The Bayonet's drop box located in the Information Office, Room 111, Infantry Hall, Building 4.

Copy must be typed and doubled-spaced, except for letters to the editor which may be handwritten. Everything else must be typed.

You may fax briefs or announcements only. However, we need the original typewritten copy of stories (anything longer than one page).

The Bayonet staff reserves the right to edit all stories for publication. We cannot guarantee when or if submitted stories will appear in the paper. Stories that are submitted after the deadline will be published in the next week's paper.

Post sets week to remember Holocaust victims

In recognition of remembering the Holocaust, the week of 19-26 April is set aside as "Days of Remembrance" for victims of the Holocaust. The theme for this year's observance is "Children of the Holocaust: Their Memories, Our Legacy."

Following World War II, many of the survivors chose the United States as their new homeland. Our task today is to educate and look forward to the day when genocide and international hate and national violence disappear.

I encourage all Soldiers, family members and civilian employees on Fort Benning and in the surrounding community to participate in the many observance activities scheduled during the week.

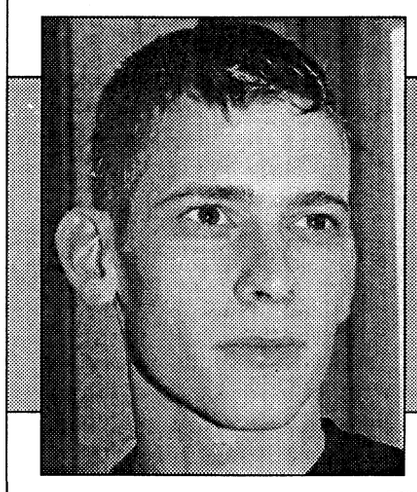
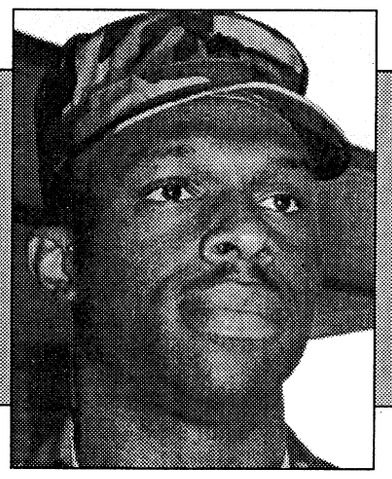
VARIOUS VOICES

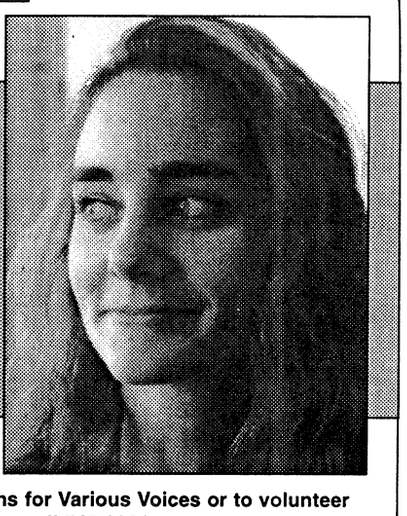


How does volunteering benefit the community?

Spc. James K. Banks III, U.S. Army Dental Activity — "When you volunteer for coaching you become a mentor. It helps give enthusiasm to play and steers youth in the right direction."



Spc. Linda M. Slaughter, 32nd Medical Battalion, Fort Bragg, N.C. — "Volunteers benefit the community when Soldiers are deployed and volunteers pitch in to help out the families who are left alone."



Spc. William S. Zeigler, Company D, 202nd Military Intelligence Battalion, Fort Gordon, Ga. — "A lot of things around post wouldn't get done without the help of volunteers."

Spc. Michelle Chatman, Company A, 203rd Forward Support Battalion, 3rd Brigade, 3rd Infantry Division (Mechanized) — "Volunteering to do the littlest things help. My neighbors help me out by watching my son so I can go pay the bills."

Sgt. Brian A. Parks, Battery A, 1st Battalion, 10th Field Artillery Regiment, 3rd Brigade, 3rd Infantry Division (Mechanized) — "Things like coaching intramural sports is a real commitment. Volunteers organize the team and motivate players."

Cassandra L. Keith, Camden County, Ga. — "Volunteering shows the humanity of people and that they care about what happens to others."

Doctrine development time cut by two months

Jim Caldwell
TRADOC News Service

FORT MONROE, Va. — Army doctrine development time will be slashed by six to eight months as part of a program to make doctrine more relevant and accessible to the Army in the 21st century.

New doctrine publications available from an internet web site will dramatically reduce the number of printed manuals. The numbering system for Army doctrine field manuals will also be changed to conform to the joint doctrine identification method.

"The average production time now is 16 to 18 months from the time you decide to rewrite a current field manual until it is actually in the user's hand," said Brig. Gen. Edward T. Buckley Jr., deputy chief of staff for doctrine (DCSDOC) for Training and Doctrine Command.

Buckley said that changing the method for numbering and titling doctrine manuals will make a seamless link between Army and joint doctrine.

When the Army's key warfighting manual, Field Manual 100-5, "Operations," is updated, it may become Army Publication 3.0, "Operations." That matches Joint Publication 3.0, the overarching doctrine of how all of the nation's services fight together.

Although changing the numbering system of Army doctrine publications has not yet been approved, surveys of major commands, corps and divisions in the United States and overseas revealed unanimous support for aligning Army doctrine with the joint system. A similar survey of TRADOC commanders and commandants received the same response.

"Revising the Army doctrine numbering system and hierarchy will groom young Army officers for joint operations, and it's easier for the non-Army joint staff officer if our system is aligned with joint doctrine," Buckley said.

DCSDOC staffers are working with developers from TRADOC's deputy chief of staff for training (DCST) organization to make doctrine development more efficient. A module that will enable doctrine to be created has been added to the Army's Automated Systems Approach to Training (ASAT) program.

"ASAT permits authors to write doctrine, coordinate and update it," said Ed Carberry, of DCST's Army Training Support Center at Fort Eustis, Va.

ATSC specialists have also placed Army doctrine on five-CD-ROM disc set, for which hand-held readers are being developed. All Army doctrine publications, as well as those for tactics, techniques and procedures are now on five CD-ROMs.

Units will no longer have to carry crates of doctrine and tactics, techniques and procedures publications to the field, as Buckley remembers doing when he was a lieutenant.

Compared to today, very few copies of doctrine manuals will be printed. Users with proper access can download the new manuals from the web site, which will be part of the Army Doctrine and Training Digital Library (ADTDL).

"In the not too distant future, all users of Army doctrine will log onto the ADTDL web site and field manuals will be automatically downloaded onto their hard drives," said Maj. Ray Pribilski, of DCSDOC's joint and Army doctrine directorate.

DCSDOC is heading an effort to capture TTPs for the digitized combat units.

"Doctrine for the digitized force will be very similar to doctrine for the current force, but the tactics, techniques and procedures will be different," Buckley said.

TTPs will spell out how Army XXI forces and today's Army of Excellence units can operate together on the same battlefield.

Another part of DCSDOC's program is an "out reach" to the reserve components.

"What we're trying to do as we modernize is to make sure that we routinely get the input of the National Guard and Army Reserve to ensure that the content of doctrine and our methods of developing and distributing it are relevant to their environments," he said.

A mail-out was made to Guard and Reserve units, and is being followed up by on-site briefings.

"They're part of the Total Army," Buckley said. "So it's important to ensure that the capabilities that they need are, in fact, there for them in the 21st century."

AER offers scholarship for dependent children

Army Emergency Relief

The AER has an education scholarship program for undergraduate study by dependent children.

Scholarship assistance is a small secondary program to provide emergency financial assistance.

Those eligible for AER scholarship assistance include dependent children of Soldiers on extended active duty; Reserve Component Soldiers on continuous active duty for more than 30 days; Soldiers who retire from active duty due to time in service, by reason of physical disability or upon reaching the age of 60 (Reserve Components); Soldiers officially on the Retired Reserve list, but not yet receiving retired pay; and the dependent children of deceased Soldiers who died while on active duty or after retirement. Funds for scholarships are limited. Information is available at the installation AER office; the phone number is 545-2536.

Rangers gear up for competition

Spc. Michelle J. Davis
Bayonet staff writer

Rangers from around the U.S. Army are gearing up to compete in the 16th annual David E. Grange Jr. Best Ranger Competition May 1-3.

The competition is open to any ranger-airborne qualified Soldier and will push competitors through numerous events including long-distance runs, rappelling exercises and road marches.

"They come from around the world for this event," said Harry Ikner, Infantry training specialist for the Ranger Training Brigade. "We have teams coming in from Germany, Panama and Hawaii among others."

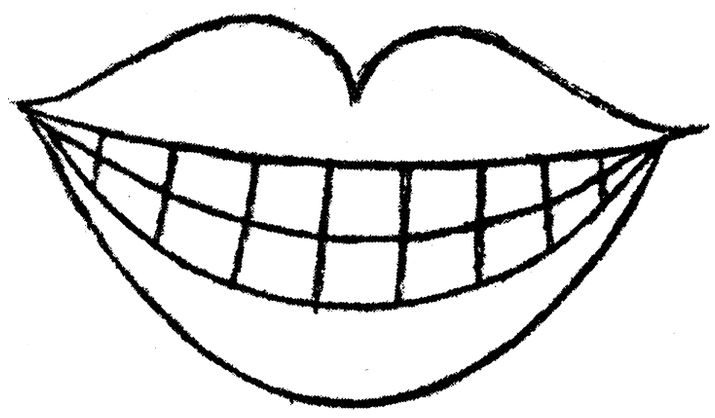
Ikner said the competition is the ultimate test of skill and endurance for the rangers.

"It's going to be three days of some of the most mental and physical stress," he said. "It's rated as one of the hardest competitions in the world."

About 38 two-man teams are expected to participate in the event, which tests Soldiers not only on their physical endurance, but also on land navigation and weapons qualification among other skills.

Although the participants have an idea about what areas they should focus on in preparation for the competition, the exact events aren't announced until the day of the competition.

"They don't know what they will be tested on until they walk up to that event," Ikner said. "Every year we make it different so that those who have gone through it before won't know what to expect."



At the end of the competition, one team will take the top spot, but Ikner said it is a great accomplishment for all the teams which participated.

"It's great for the Soldiers and it's great for the units the Soldiers represent," he said. "Just to make it through all three days is an accomplishment in itself."

The awards ceremony for the competition is tentatively scheduled for 10 a.m. May 4 on Hurley Hill where Association of the U.S. Army president, retired Gen. Gordon R. Sullivan will be the guestspeaker.

New IRR stratification model meets requirements, improves readiness

U. S. Army Reserve Personnel Command

Tracks are being laid for a new train which will drive personnel management and Soldier readiness for members of the Individual Ready Reserve.

The Pre-trained Individual Manpower Stratification model, developed at the Army Reserve Personnel Command, is designed to identify those Soldiers who have the skills and training needed to meet the needs of today's military operations.

Members of this population include Retired, Standby and Individual Ready Reservists called on to support the Army's warfighting mission.

PIM Stratification also tells personnel managers those areas where shortfalls exist or reservists are not ready for mobilization.

"It identifies the most critically needed skills and gives us the most qualified and ready Soldiers to fill the positions," said Lt. Col. Nicholas Amodeo, chief, Personnel Proponency Office at AR-PERSCOM.

Amodeo developed the PIM Stratification concept, which puts the focus of personnel management on mobilization requirements.

Joyce Dyer, deputy chief of PPO, using advanced commercial software, developed the extensive model. It provides a detailed breakdown of the PIM population into four categories, based on whether the Soldier is a mobilization asset and whether the Soldier meets readiness standards.

"This model tells us where to concentrate our efforts," Amodeo said. "It tells us where we have Soldiers with the skills required for mobilization but who aren't ready for some reason. These are the Soldiers personnel managers will work to fix as the highest priority," he said.

"Fixing a Soldier" may be as simple as obtaining an updated address or may be more in-depth, such as reclassification or training.

"PIM Stratification puts IRR personnel readiness in sync with the Army's mobilization requirements," Amodeo said.

"For the first time, we can detail this population down to the grade and MOS (military occupational specialty) level," Amodeo said. "This tells us exactly who we have in order to support mobilization requirements and where we need to concentrate our efforts to fill shortages."

PIM Stratification impacts several areas of IRR management: realignment towards wartime requirements, life cycle management of these populations, and the workload management and resource management at AR-PERSCOM.

"PIM is the train engine. Whatever tracks we go down in the future, PIM stratification will drive it," said Capt. Chris Priest, a personnel proponency integration officer in PPO. "With this focus on wartime requirements, we can tailor our solutions accordingly and give our staff direction. Ultimately, it assists in prioritizing the workload of the management directorates."

PIM Stratification can be applied to any scenario, but currently, all personnel lifecycle management decisions are being based on two near-simultaneous major-theater wars.

Amodeo compared the need for detailed management to a long-distance drive.

"You don't check your fuel three blocks after filling up," he said. "You know you have a full tank. After three to four hours of driving, you'd better check to see where your gauge is. We're at that point now with the IRR. We must understand our population down to the smallest detail."

Amodeo and his team detailed the entire scenario and provided feedback to Army headquarters within 12 hours.

"And we don't just give them numbers," Amodeo said. "We can give them an analysis of our ability to provide Army Reserve support to any operation.

"We can tell them who we have ready to go and where we have shortages."

For now, the PPO office is testing IRR reclassification methods on members of the Army Medical Department (AMEDD) population. Beginning in September 1997, the office sent out letters to selected AMEDD officers in the IRR, notifying them of their status as mobilization assets.

"The letters are designed to help them make choices about their careers," said Priest, who assists in monitoring the test.

"Some of them choose retirement, some request discharge and others elect to continue," he said. "But others with service obligations may be reclassified depending on their branch, grade, mobilization status and the needs of the Army."

"Some people may think the goal of the IRR realignment is to get rid of Soldiers with skills we don't need," Amodeo said. "But the true goal is to provide complete lifecycle management to the IRR using warfighting requirements.

"We are asking them to take charge of their careers and realize what it means to be a mobilization asset," he said.

For the next few years, IRR realignment will continue throughout the entire population. As a result, life-cycle management will be enhanced and the PIM population will increase its relevance as a true asset to military operations.

Counterintelligence field needs Soldiers

Army News Service

WASHINGTON — The counterintelligence field needs Soldiers to fill more than 125 positions. Applications are currently being accepted for reclassification to Military Occupational Skill 97B.

Soldiers in this field are serving around the world supporting force protection, information operations and technology protection. They are involved in collection, operations, analysis and production, and investigations.

It takes a special person to be a counterintelligence agent, Staff Sgt. Gerald Gurtiza said. He is assigned to III Corps G-2 Counterintelligence and Security Division at Fort Hood, Texas. A counterintelligence agent for more than eight years, he said that often times it is human intelligence that gives the commander the human aspect of the battlefield.

Since agents deal with people, maturity and a keenness to human nature as well as being good at interviewing and having good report writing skills, are plusses he said.

"Technology is able to let the commander know where forces are and what is going on from a distance, but we let the commander know what the enemy is thinking. We provide the human contact with locals and refugees, so we can give the commander a different perspective on intelligence gathering."

Many agents find themselves at the forefront of operations worldwide. Gurtiza has served in Croatia in the former Yugoslavia, and participated in Operation Joint Endeavor in Bosnia, as well as in Haiti as part of the U.S. Support Group-Haiti. He said he finds the work very rewarding.

"I like the Army and I know what we do is critical," he said. "I like people and understanding others is very fascinating to me and gives me insight about myself too."

Sgt. 1st Class Traci Goodwin with the Ramstein Field Office, Heidelberg Detachment, Region IV, 650th Military Intelligence Group in Germany, has participated in Operation Joint Endeavor and Joint Guard in Bosnia, and has worked with security and intelligence personnel from nations such as Great Britain, Canada, Belgium and France.

"It was a great experience and I made some good friends."

Even though the 97B application and reclassification process is time consuming and should only be undertaken by those with a genuine interest and desire, Goodwin said the rewards are well worth it.

"I would recommend qualified Soldiers to this field because of the unlimited potential for personal and professional development ... being a CI agent requires a large degree of dedication because, the job is not always pleasant or easy."

Prerequisites can be found in Army Regulation 611-201. Soldiers' servicing counterintelligence office processes applications for interested soldiers in the ranks of corporal, specialist and sergeant. This is a controlled MOS and falls outside normal retention and reclassification channels. Soldiers serving overseas, including Alaska and Hawaii, who desire to submit applications should be within 12 months of their date of estimated return from overseas; CONUS soldiers should have a minimum of 24 months time on station.

Rangers tackle Green Hell Obstacle Course

Sgt. Marc Turchin
Bayonet staff writer

FORT SHERMAN, Panama — Training week one ended with the Soldiers of 3rd Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment, going through the Green Hell Obstacle Course. The course offers many obstacles and different terrain features for those who are tasked to tackle it.

Rangers from Company A showed up at the course's front gates bright and early the morning of April 3. Company C followed a few hours later, who was followed by Co. B and Headquarters and Headquarters Company. A briefing about each obstacle on the course was given to the Soldiers prior to them climbing the first obstacle. After the company's leaders went on a walk through, it was time for the Soldiers to get their chance.

"Five, four, three, two, one, go," yelled the timekeeper. Teams of six, seven and eight went through the course together. The first obstacle was a five-foot wall. All had to jump over the wall. Next was a steep climb up a hill riddled with vines and roots protruding from nearly every direction. Once the rangers reached the top of the hill, they walked on two wood balance beams. Only five meters from the balance beams was the weaver. The weaver is a 15-foot obstacle with wooden boards going horizontally across it. Rangers must twist their bodies through the boards by going under one board and over the next. The weaver is built so the first portion has the person moving in an upward direction and then downward on the other side.

"The weaver was one of the more technical obstacles on the course," said Pfc. Brandon Koth, Company C. "You have to use strength and coordination to get through it."

The squads helped each other get through the course, which Koth admitted was a bit difficult.

"I found the course challenging at places," he said, "but I had been through the weaver before because the Darby Queen (Obstacle Course) at Fort Benning has that obstacle."

After completing the weaver, the rangers moved down a cliff to the beach. Each used an already placed rope to climb, slide, or in some cases, fall down the cliff to reach the bottom. The squad then picked up a medical litter with one of the squad members in it and ran around a predetermined area and then back to the site where they picked up the litter.

"Our strongest obstacle as a squad was the litter carry," said Cpl. Adam Nash, Co. C. "We made up a lot of time there." Nash said although his squad did well with the litter carry, the terrain took its toll on the squad throughout the course.

"The terrain here is a lot more challenging here than at the Darby Queen," he said. "There's more hills, mud, roots and you have to climb cargo nets on cliffs."

The cargo nets followed the litter carry.

But getting to the nets was an obstacle in itself.

Rangers watched where they stepped due to the slick rocks they had to run on getting to the nets. On more than one occasion, rangers found themselves losing their footing or falling altogether.

Each obstacle had a safety person standing by giving advice and ensuring everyone did the obstacle to the standard. The cargo net was no different.

"Get up there ranger," encouraged the safety person. "If you climb towards the center, it's a lot easier," he said. One by one,

Soldiers graduate OSUT after seven-day FTX, 25-K roadmarch

1st Lt. Loran Montgomery
Company C, 1st Battalion, 38th Infantry

Soldiers from Company B and C, 1st Battalion, 38th Infantry recently completed the final phase of One Station Unit Training (OSUT).

These Soldiers participated in the new Infantry Training Brigade seven-day field training exercise (FTX). The FTX began with the obstacle course, followed by a 20-kilometer foot march to Young Range, where the Soldiers participated in night infiltration training.

After the training, the Soldiers moved to the FTX site where they established platoon defensive positions. The trainees dug fighting positions, prepared range cards and learned about the fundamentals of a defense.

Following defensive operations, Soldiers conducted three days of day and night situational training exercises. During the FTX, the Soldiers practiced day and night military operations on urban terrain.

The FTX culminated with a 25-kilometer night foot march, which includes crossing the Upatoi Creek and ends at the Infantry Museum.

"I liked the FTX," said Pvt. 2 Aaron DiFranco of Knoxville, Tenn. "I wish we could have been in the field more. It was tough, but you have to suck it up and drive on."

Pvt. Randy L. Caddell with the Iowa National Guard added, the FTX was "tiring, but fun."

The night training drew varied reactions. DiFranco said "the ambushes and squad tactical movements, and learning different ways of doing things from different drill sergeants was the best part of the FTX."

"The best part about the FTX was the night training when Drill Sergeant (Staff Sgt. Tim) Russelburg took the squad out. It was cool to learn form his experiences," said Pvt. Scott Newmyer from Apple Valley, Calif. However, Caddell felt that "night movements were a bit treacherous at times, but they showed you how to move and attack at night, which is something I didn't think the Infantry did before I joined."

"I liked liked the whole FTX except for the 15 miles on the way back," said Pvt. John Walker of Columbus, Ohio.

"The march back was the thing I disliked the most," Caddell said. "It started raining before we moved out at 11 p.m. and it didn't stop until around 2 a.m. And 15 miles is a lot longer when you're walking than when you're driving."

At Sacrifice Field, the Soldiers participated in a Crossed Rifle Ceremony about the importance of what the accomplishment and the significance of completing Infantry OSUT. They then received their Crossed Rifles, the Infantry branch insignia, which indicates the completion of all training requirements and the trainees have earned the Infantry MOS.

IOBC Co B completes weapons training

2nd Lt. Darryl W. Lyon
Company B, 2nd Battalion, 11th Infantry

Company B, 2nd Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment, recently completed two days of weapons familiarization training at Wagner Range. Company B settled into a round robin train up on the M-60 machine gun. Four stations provided familiarization with the operation, performance, assembly and disassembly of this critical crew served weapon.

As an added bonus, Sgt. 1st Class Paul Capp (3rd Platoon cadre) gave the Bushmasters a detailed look at the new M-240B machine gun. The M-240B, while already being used at some units, has not yet been rolled out to the entire Army. The weapon is less prone to jam, while maintaining a substantial rate of fire. Co. B was the first Infantry Officer Basic Course class given the opportunity to fire the M-240B.

Every Soldier knows the raw, violent power of the M-60 machine gun. There is no sound quite like it. The Bushmasters of Company B rotated through a live-fire range and learned (or was reminded) of the respect demanded by this weapon. The night brought a spectacle of fire power as tracer rounds brightened the night sky, ricocheted and burned out after 900 meters.

The M-60 is only one part of the arsenal available to an Infantry platoon. Intermingled among the fire teams is the platoon's secondary level of automatic weapon, the M-249 light machine gun. With an effective firing range of 800 meters, the squad automatic weapon (SAW) adds considerable firepower to a fire team. The Bushmasters also focused their attention on this weapon at Wagner Range. The cadre introduced the weapon, showed the proper steps to clear, load and fire and displayed the necessary steps for disassembly and assembly.

As with the M-60 range Co. B spent the afternoon firing live lead down range. All who fired the SAW got an appreciation for the flexibility, durability and accurateness of the weapon. The night fire was even more impressive as the cadre opened up eight lanes to automatic machine gun fire.

As the Army's new millennium leaders, Co. B became familiar with two of the most important weapons at a platoon's disposal.

In the weeks remaining, the Bushmasters will become more-and-more tactically proficient in squad and platoon tactics. Critical to this proficiency is the appropriate application of the platoon's crew served weapons and squad assault weapons. When Co. B reaches this level of expertise, a new generation of leaders will graduate IOBC and move on to command Army Soldiers.

3rd Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment, completes riverine STX in Panama

Sgt. Marc G. Turchin
Bayonet staff writer

FORT SHERMAN, Panama — The boats' engines purred while traveling down a river with thousands of jellyfish floating near the surface, the men onboard used the quiet to rest. They have been on the move since morning.

Walking over hills, climbing cliffs, hacking through thick jungle vegetation there is still more to do. They carry only the bare necessities — M-4 rifles with grenade launchers, squad automatic weapons (SAW), load carrying equipment, 30- to 60-pound rucksacks filled with socks, shirts and sleeping gear, communication radios and of course, water and meals ready to eat.

These men represent one company from 3rd Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment in Panama going through the Jungle Operation Training Center (JOTC).

The mission, called the riverine situational training exercise (STX) is one of three STX's the rangers will go through before returning to Fort Benning.

The ranger's operation began around 4 a.m. when a CH-47 Chinook helicopter landed just behind the unit's barracks at Fort Sherman.

The battalion's Company A loaded equipment and themselves onto the chopper and moved to a predetermined site.

It took the Chinook multiple trips to transport the more than 140-man company to the site.

Once there, the company set-up a perimeter of security and waited while darkness faded into daylight. The rangers spent the next eight to 12-hours conducting a "welcome to the jungle" walk that many said was like no other.

"That was some of the roughest terrain I've ever been in," said Pfc. Reggie Nolan, SAW-gunner for 3rd Platoon, Co. A. "There was a point where we were having to use our hands to pull ourselves up over cliffs."

If it wasn't the terrain, the vegetation affected the company's movement.

"There were plenty of points where you just have to say 'I'm either going around or going through' and it's just easier to go around," said Cpl. Steve Kowatch, acting squad leader, 3rd Platoon, Co. A.

Another factor the Soldiers worried about was the temperature.

"The first day we went out was the hottest day since we'd been here," Kowatch said. "It was easily in the high 90s. We were soaked with sweat as soon as we started."

Moving through the jungle as platoons and using machetes, their hands and at times their weapons to push the vegetation out of their way, the company methodically walked the 2.7 miles to the next portion of the mission — linking up with Team Red, the boat operating element.

"They're taking their time due to the heat and because they have long movements coming up," said Capt. Larry Perino, assistant operations officer for the battalion. "The smart elements pace themselves because they know they have all day to link-up."

"The guys were completely smoked," Kowatch said. "They had given everything they had throughout the day and we thought we were going to catch some rack time before we went down the river," he said. It turned out, according to Kowatch, the plan had them scheduled to reach the link-up point, then move down the river the next day. But that didn't happen.

The company reached the link-up point, then proceeded down the river. The ranger's boat link-up point had a lot of history behind it.

The link-up point was where the Atlantic Ocean meets the Chagres River. The remains of a 17th-century Spanish fort, Fort Lorenzo, sits atop a 200-foot cliff just meters away from where Team Red linked up with the company. Through classes taken the week prior to the STX, rangers learned the mouth of the Chagres is where hammerhead sharks meet to mate.

They also found out that legendary scuba diver and ocean historian Jacques Cousteau was attacked by one of those hammerhead sharks.

Crocodiles also call the Chagres home. But none of that seemed to bother the rangers.

The company moved down the river as platoons, as they did in the jungle.

The darkness kept the rangers from being seen, but also kept them from seeing water obstacles such as animals, tree trunks and the twists and turns of the river.

For those reasons, a ranger manned the tip of each boat, wearing night-vision goggles to ensure safe passage along the river.

"The whole river trip was sort of eerie," Kowatch said. "It was like something out of a dream."

The boats carried the rangers approximately five or six miles. When the river ride began, all six boats could fit across the river side by side with room to spare.

By the time they neared the end point, it was completely black outside and only one boat could fit between the river banks.

Moving closer to the disembarking point, the boat drivers turned off the engines and the rangers paddled the final 200 meters.

Kowatch said the two other platoons from the company arrived at the drop-off site earlier and already prepositioned a patrol base.

"Once we had 100 percent accountability, it was time to rack out," Kowatch said. "I was ready for some shuteye."

Some got more shuteye than others. The platoon pulled 33 percent security throughout the night. This means one ranger for every three had to pull security.

Day one came to a close around 12:30 a.m. But the night didn't go as smoothly as one might think.

"There were noises going on all the time," Nolan said. "There were things flopping around in the water, monkeys yelling and critters chirping. It was pretty wild."

Nonetheless, the mission continued only a few hours after the previous one ended.

Kowatch said his platoon was awakened around 4 a.m. They gathered the gear and when the sun returned, they starting walking again. This time it was about a mile or so, he said.

"We were headed to link-up with another squad," Kowatch said. "They already had eyes on the objective and knew where it was."

According to Perino, the platoons were supposed to move to an objective rally point (ORP), have the platoon leaders conduct a reconnaissance, then wait until the next day to raid the objective.

"Our plan was to have decentralized operations giving the platoon and squad leaders plenty of time to work with their Soldiers," Perino said.

"This gives the leaders the opportunity to teach individual rangers skills such as movement techniques and land navigation."

But the platoon didn't wait for the next day. Kowatch said his platoon was running behind.

"We were short on time because it took longer than expected to link up with the other squads," he said. "We had to climb up these huge cliffs on the way there." He said the entire movement to link-up with the squads was up hill.

Minutes after linking up with the other squads, the platoon began the movement to take the objective.

Kowatch's squad was out front. He was the point man. The plan was to move as close to the objective without being seen, before conducting their raid, knowing the enemy was moving around in the area.

Nolan said this is when things can get a little crazy.

"As soon as you start walking, you're heart starts pumping," Nolan said. "The adrenaline is definitely flowing."

Kowatch agreed with Nolan, but had his own reasons.

"I figured if I'm going to walk this far, I'm going to make these guys suffer," he said. "I humped two days through the jungle to hit the objective and we're going to hit it no matter what, so I was ready to go."

Moving as a platoon through the jungle, according to Kowatch, was even slower than with a squad. But he thought the platoon did pretty well.

"As a platoon, you usually make a little more noise," he said. "But there were times when I didn't know if anyone was behind me."

Kowatch's intelligence report told him the enemy had a listening post on the outskirts of the objective. He said he moved to within 15 meters of the person manning the post.

"The guy turned around and looked right at me so I shot him," Kowatch said. "From there on out, everyone started laying down fire."

While Kowatch's squad laid down fire onto the objective, two other squads moved to another side of the objective and began to assault the objective.

Kowatch said it was pretty much over in about 15 minutes. The odds were against the eight-man opposing force who was outmanned nearly five to one. The platoon consolidated their people and equipment and then withdrew from the objective.

"We were probably on the objective no more than about 35 minutes total," Kowatch said.

Luckily for Kowatch, this was only an exercise as he and the rest of his squad were killed by a machine gun concealed by a tree.

"I felt like crap," he said. "I felt like I failed my men. Next time I know to be a little more cautious."

While Kowatch's platoon raided one objective, two others were supposed to be hit also.

"We try and make near simultaneous hits," Perino said. "Tactically, if one gets hit before the others, it puts the unattacked enemy at a higher state of readiness, it could cause them to withdraw and we don't want that."

In Co. A's case, this did not happen. The two other objectives were hit earlier. But this seemingly had no effect on the objective Kowatch's platoon hit.

With only Kowatch's pride hurt instead of eight real casualties, Kowatch and his platoon packed their stuff up and headed for transportation back to Fort Sherman. But the trip back didn't come without a little reflection from some of the troops.

"Some of the guys were pretty upset about the objective," Kowatch said. "I mean we walked that far for two huts. We expected maybe five or 10 huts, not two grass shacks," he said. Kowatch also saw both sides of the argument.

"I guess in a real-world situation two grass huts would be a relief. It went down pretty easy and that's good," he said.

Kowatch said this exercise was good for the rangers and could easily be real one day.

"I thought the exercise gave the guys an opportunity to actually hump through the jungle and see what it was like," he said. "With our missions, we could definitely be going through terrain like this."

The company was back at Fort Sherman a few hours later.

The rangers had less than 24 hours before their next STX would begin. They used the time to rest, relax, eat some hot food and get ready for the next exercise.

While Kowatch and Nolan's company will move on to another STX, one of the other companies will begin their riverine STX.

Panama: Green Hell Obstacle Course provides muddy motivation for rangers

the rangers heeded his advice and reached the top, only to come right back down another cargo net located 10 meters away.

"Hurry up, hurry up, let's go," Nash yelled to his squad. Nash was the first person up the initial cargo net and one of the last to come down. From the top of the net, he directed his squad down the net. "You're almost there," he screamed. "A little farther, keep going."

Nash and Koth agreed the course helps the squad work as a team. "It's not a team event, but sometimes you have to help your buddy out," Nash said. "It just strengthens the bond we already have as a squad."

Strength is what helped the rangers get through the next couple of obstacles.

The Soldiers next had to climb an eight-foot log drenched with water, just to cross a rope bridge that stood eight feet above the ground. After crossing the bridge, the squads had to slither and pull themselves across eight-foot ropes on their stomachs, head first. The next obstacle required the rangers to swing on a rope and get over a log placed horizontally in front of them. Some made it over on their first attempt. Others didn't and fell into the four-foot deep brown water below them.

Those who did make it over on their first try only prolonged getting wet by a matter of seconds — the next obstacle was the low-crawl under barbed wire. A fire hose spraying gallons of water rained down on the competitors and the barbed wire obstacle giving the rangers a virtual pool of mud to gravel through.

"I thought the mud obstacle was motivating," Koth said. "You're already tired by that point and you know only have a little more to go."

Needless to say, all competitors were completely drenched and muddy following the obstacle, leading to the final obstacle, nearly the same one that started the course, a five-foot wall.

All were required to jump over it and their time ended when the squad reported to the timekeeper.

Nash's squad finished with a time of 20:22. Koth's squad finished with 20:32.

"It was a fun obstacle course," Nash said. "It was a good time. The guys said 'hey, let's go have some fun,' it was good, physical training."

ACAP institutes new concept for employer visits

Army Career and Alumni Program

The Army Career and Alumni Program (ACAP) encourages employers to visit the center any time. This is the new employer day concept at ACAP, said Chick Eagle, ACAP counselor.

The 1998 employer day concept is to encourage employers to recruit at Fort Benning, one at a time in the ACAP Center.

"Employers like the idea because they are the only game in town that day," Eagle said.

"This benefits both the separating Soldier and the employer because they get to spend more time together, learning about each other," he said.

"We think by hosting employers individually over the entire year rather than in large job fairs, more separating Soldiers will be able to meet with recruiters," Eagle said. Timing can be very important in the job search and this new concept seems to create a larger window of opportunity for Soldiers no matter when they separate.

"Recruiters of all kinds frequent the ACAP Center because they have found what we already know, that separating Soldiers make outstanding employees in any industry," Eagle said.

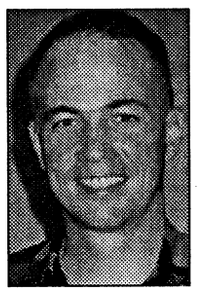
Soldiers have the training, experience, technical and managerial skills employers want including a solid work history and clean background checks, according to Eagle, which is why businesses send recruiters to Fort Benning.

Companies and placement firms not able to come to Fort Benning, regularly place job vacancy notices in the Department of Defense and Army Transition Bulletin Board and Hot Lead programs. Separating Soldiers, spouses and civil service workers can use these job search tools as part of ACAP transition services. With the recent addition of Internet access on all computer terminals, Soldiers have access to military, federal and non-federal civilian job listings at the ACAP Center.

Upcoming events for job seekers can be found in the Bayonet each week, in flyers sent to each unit on post, by checking the ACAP Bulletin Board in Infantry Hall outside Classroom 30 and by visiting the ACAP Center in Soldiers' Plaza.

Commanders and supervisors may also request an ACAP briefing that explains the purpose of the program and the services provided. This briefing is ideal for professional development or training day sessions.

For more information about local ACAP services and to schedule briefings, please visit the ACAP Center in Soldiers' Plaza, Building 2634 or call 545-2308 or 545-2309.



volunteer of the week

Name: Capt. Frank W. Tate
Award or recognition: Instructor of the Quarter
Unit: Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment
MOS: 15A
Job title: Instructor and doctrine writer
Years in service: 10 years
What were your reasons for joining the Army?
An exciting career of service and following in the footsteps of the men of my family.
Define your style of leadership.
Hands-on leadership with emphasis on Soldiers
What person has most influenced your military career?
My father, Donald R. Tate and grandfather, retired Command Sgt. Maj. James R. Tate
What were your reasons for choosing your MOS?
I wanted to be a helicopter pilot. I have always loved helicopters.
Describe a memorable moment in your military career.
I most remember the pride I felt when I took command of my cavalry troop.
What are your future career plans?
I intend to command a cavalry squadron.
What others have to say about you?
Capt. Tate is probably one of the smartest and technically and tactically competent officers I know.

Job Title: contract specialist
Years on the job: 16 years government service
What were your reasons for joining civil service?
I was searching for a smooth transition from the military to civilian employment. I wanted to stay involved with the military in some manner. Civil service work allows me to continue working as I travel to different installations with my military spouse.
Define your work ethic.
To have pride in my work and I try to have a positive attitude, always.
What person has most influenced your career?
My first Contracting officer, Malissa Williams. She had such a strong moral character, truly enjoyed the acquisition field, she was very acquisition wise and a leader who led by example.
If you were your supervisor for a day, what improvements would you make?
I would make a honest effort to keep the lines of communication open between employees and management. Miscommunication is a terrible thing.
Describe a memorable moment in your career.
While on active duty I was selected by Department of the Army as the first female coach-athlete of the All-Army Track and Field team. As a civilian it was contracting for the closure ceremonies, relocation of troops at Fort Ord, Calif., one of the first large installations which closed. It was a thrill to process the contract to relocate the drill sergeant statue from main post to the enclave, I actually kept the picture.
What are your future career plans?
To continue to move upward in the acquisition field and work on complex service contracts or at a Project Management Office. She always provides solutions to any problems. She makes herself do whatever is necessary to get the job done.
What do others have to say about you?
Alicia is an employee who has a "can do" attitude. She shows great initiative and has a great rapport with both our customers and contractors. She always provides solutions to any problems. She makes herself do whatever is necessary to get the job done.A true asset to the directorate.

FORT BENNING, GEORGIA 31905
USA INFANTRY

History: Still in the making

would command troops that captured 300,000 enemy Soldiers during World War II.

A coach of the All-Army Football team in 1926, Dwight Eisenhower went on to become supreme commander of the Allied Forces in Europe during World War II before he served as President in the 1950's.

Before his position as chairman of the Joint Chief of Staff, Colin Powell served two tours of duty at Fort Benning.

International Conflicts

Fort Benning also has been a valuable post during international conflicts involving the United States.

According Kane and Keeton, Desert Shield and Desert Storm weren't the only operations that Fort Benning trained Soldiers for.

"Fort Benning has given a great deal to operations in Bosnia, Haiti and the Middle East," said Frank Hanner, Director of the Infantry Museum. "Most Infantry units sent over were trained at Fort Benning."

"Many of the troops sent to Desert Shield and Desert Storm processed through Fort Benning for deployment," said Ken Strumpler, Director of Logistics.

Fort Benning even opened up a new port in Jacksonville, Fla., to accommodate the need for Soldiers during the crisis in the Gulf.

"We opened up the port of Jacksonville, which ran for a year," Strumpler said. "Units would come to Jacksonville, load on ships and ship out of that port (to the operations)."

Fort Benning trained Rangers for the Korean War, trained 129,000 new Soldiers for fighting in Vietnam and "played a key role in the victory against Iraq," according to Kane and Keeton's book.

"If you don't have Fort Benning, you don't have a confident Infantry," Hanner said.

Fort Benning has also served as the backdrop for several movies, including the Hollywood adaptation of the film, Green Berets starring John Wayne.

Women's Contributions

November 1973 ushered in the first female graduates of Airborne School. Pvt. Grace Hammack became the first woman at Fort Benning to be named Soldier of the Year.

Archeological Significance

Dr. Chris Hamilton, cultural resource manager for the Directorate of Public Works, has another take on Fort Benning history.

When the Creek and Yuchi left in 1827 and 1836 during the Trail of Tears, they left behind what today is considered valuable remnants of the past according to Hamilton.

"We have more than 2,500 known ancient, archeological sites on Fort Benning and 250 to 300 that are eligible for the National Registry of Historical Places," Hamilton said. "It's quite a balancing act to conserve land and history, while continuing to advance and keep training up to date."

USARSA Soldier succumbs to heart attack

Benning Blvd restricts traffic

The out-bound lane of Benning Boulevard will be restricted to one-lane traffic during the period of April 20 through May 22 from Custer Road for approximately 1/4 mile. One lane will remain open during this period but traffic will move slower than normal due to construction personnel and equipment. Everyone is encouraged to use alternate routes during this period, especially during the lunch and afternoon rush periods. The southbound lane entering the installation will not be affected.

DPW has contracted to repair storm drains at six locations along this area to improve drainage under Benning Boulevard. The work to be accomplished includes digging, patching and asphalt resurfacing.

For more information, call Richard Chancey at 545-4749.

Controlled burning set

Controlled burning of woodland areas will take place April 20-25. If weather permits, the following areas will be affected: B-4, K-9, K-21, 0-8, 0-11, Q-2, R-l, T-4, T-5, X-1, AA and Harmony Church. Burning will occur in pine stands within these compartments to enhance endangered species habitat and training areas. Personnel proposing to use these areas for recreational purposes must vacate these areas prior to 9:30 a.m. daily. Training units using compartments adjacent to those listed above may experience drift or residual smoke and are reminded to exercise caution while traveling in these areas due to the potential for reduced visibility. Units utilizing ranges and training areas are reminded to remove flammable debris, such as pinestraw, leaves and trash from around structures in accordance with USAIC Regulation 210-4,Paragraph 5-22, Organizational Maintenance.

For more information, call is Jack Greenlee, Natural Resources Management Branch at 544-6120.

Youth Services gives community ride with carnival

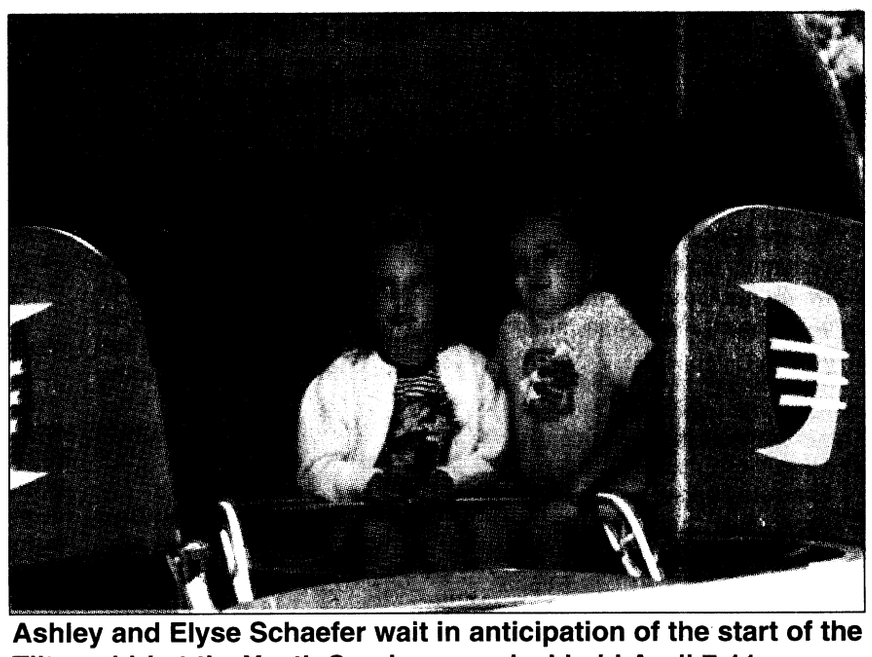
Erin A. Nash
Special to the Bayonet©

The Fort Benning community had something new and close to home to participate in during spring break week April 7-11. Youth Services conducted it's first ever carnival, complete with rides for adults and children, games and food.

"We did a little better than I expected. The wrist band nights ($10 for unlimited rides) were very popular" said Linda Laine, acting director of Youth Services. "A lot of people didn't know it was going on."

Laine also said she spoke to a lot of people and every comment she got was positive.

"People told me they were glad there were no alcoholic beverages and that the carnival is compact, so they always knew where their children were," Laine explained.



"We came to have fun, to do something different," said Michelle Ryan, nanny of Ashley and Elyse Schaefer, daughters of Robin and Capt. Malcolm Schaefer, Company A, 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment. "It's good because it's localized and you don't have to travel,"

The rides and games were part of Belle City Amusements. Laine said they were very good because the rides and games were very clean.

All the funds raised go back into the Youth Services program to support summer programs like Teen Discovery and to purchase equipment for the sports program.

Laine hopes to have another carnival next year, and is grateful for the help she got this year.

"We did pretty well for a first-time event. All the MPs were wonderful. I look forward for it to come next year."

Ashley and Elyse Schaefer wait in anticipation of the start of the Tilt-o-whirl at the Youth Services carnival held April 7-11.

Office seeks comments on Georgia WIC Program

Georgia Department of Human Resources

The Public Health Division of the Georgia Department of Human Resources will hold public hearings in this area during the month of April to receive comments on the state plan for the operation of the Women, Infants and Children (WIC) program.

WIC provides nutrition counseling and supplemental foods such as milk, eggs, cheese, cereal and infant formula to low income pregnant and post-partum women and their children.

Citizens are invited to give suggestions on how to improve WIC services in their communities.

Persons who wish to speak should register in person at the beginning of the hearing.

One of the public hearings for the Columbus District will be held from 9 to 10:30 a.m. Tuesday at the Youth Services, Building 1056, McIver Street.

Other hearings planned for the Columbus area are 4 to 6 p.m. Tuesday in the Community Room of the Wilson Rental Office at 3101 9th Ave., or 9 to 11:30 a.m. Thursday at the West Central Health District, Columbus Health District, District WIC Office at 2100 Comer Ave., Columbus.

Individuals who are unable to attend the meeting may send their written comments by May 1 to Rolando A. Thorne, Interim Director, DHR WIC Program, 2 Peachtree Street, Room 8-300, Atlanta, GA 30303.

WIC is an Equal Opportunity Program. Anyone applying for or receiving WIC benefits who feels discriminated against because of race, color, national origin, age, sex or disability may write to the Administrator, Food and Nutrition Service, USDA, 3101 Park Center Drive, Alexandria, VA 22302.

For more information about the meetings, call Jackie Miller, WIC coordinator, at 321-6286.

Schools to celebrate Earth Day April 22

Directorate of Public Works

Fort Benning will celebrate the 28th anniversary of Earth Day April 22. The 1998 Directorate of Public Works Environmental Management Division (EMD) Earth Day theme Be Smart — Do Your Part (Conserve — Protect — Recycle) was chosen to mirror the 1998 Army Earth Day theme, One Mission, One Environment, One Future: Preserve the Balance. The Earth Day theme reflects the Army's commitment to integrating environmental practices into all mission operations.

In celebration of Earth Week 1998, the EMD sponsored an Earth Day art contest for students in the Fort Benning School District. The art contest was open to all media including: sculptures, paintings, drawings, posters. A selection board consisting of employees from the EMD judged each project. Winners were selected and will be announced during Earth Week. During April 17-24, everyone is encouraged to visit the Earth Day display in Infantry Hall featuring works from the entries submitted.

In conjunction with Earth Day activities, the EMD will announce the recipients of the Individual and Organization Environmental Stewards of the Year. These awards are given annually in recognition of environmental excellence.

Earth Week activities will end with an Environmental Awards luncheon held in honor of individuals, activities and units that have exceeded the standards of environmental stewardship for the April 97-98 time frame 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. April 24 at the Kelley Hill Recreation Center.

AAFES announces recall of hazardous baby monitors

Army and Air Force Exchange Service

DALLAS — The Army and Air Force Exchange Service (AAFES), in cooperation with Gerry Baby Products of Denver, Colo., and the U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission (CPSC) announces a hazardous recall of Model #618 rechargeable baby monitors sold under the Clear Choice brand name.

When an electrical short occurs, the rechargeable battery can cause the monitor's "parent" unit to smoke and flame. One report of flames and four reports of smoke coming from the monitor's parent unit were made to Gerry Baby Products, with no injuries or property damage reported. The model number is found on a silver plate on the front of the monitor's AC adapter.

The monitor consists of a "baby unit," placed near the babyt, a parent unit, a recharging base for the parent unit and AC adapters. All of the units are white with a light blue accent color. Because it houses the battery, only the parent unit presents the hazard.

Consumers should immediately disconnect and throw away the blue battery pack found inside the parent unit.

CONUS AAFES customers should contact Gerry Baby Products, anytime 24 hours a day, at (800) 273-3521 to receive a free replacement black battery pack with a safety fuse. AAFES customers overseas can write to Gerry Baby Products at 1801 Commerce Drive, Piqua, Ohio, 45356 to receive the free replacement black battery pack with safety fuse.

Until the replacement battery arrives, consumers can use the parent unit safely powered by the AC adapter with the battery pack removed.

Weight loss and management part II: Prescription and nonprescription diet pills

Dr. Virginia Yates
Martin Army Community Hospital

This is Part II of a two part series on weight loss and management

There has been much research on methods for weight reduction. The findings all show that regardless of what methods a person uses, the weight will return unless the person is willing to change eating or activity habits for the rest of a lifetime.

Diet pills and other diet drugs should only be used for obese persons. This is because the weight risks have to be greater than the risky side effects of diet drugs. The need for weight loss should be assessed individually. Not all people who weigh the same amount have a health problem. The medical community now recognizes that total weight loss goals should be based on medical outcomes like lowering blood pressure, lowering blood sugar, lowering cholesterol and improving ease of movement

All diet pills work on two basic concepts. They either decrease how many calories you take in or increase how many calories you use up.

The drugs that decrease calories you take in make attempts to decrease your appetite, lessen food absorbed in your stomach or make you feel full quicker. Drugs that increase the calories you use up generally work by increasing your body's "fight or flight" chemicals. When these chemicals are increased, you tend to become more active.

Attempts are being made to find drugs that may lower the desire to eat at the level of the brain. Generally, drugs that raise the level of serotonin at the brain have gained the greatest acceptance. Unfortunately too much of a good thing can also be bad, and so drugs like Redux, which increased serotonin in two ways, were found to have side affects too dangerous for public use.

This year, the prescription drug Meridia was released. It raises the level of serotonin and another chemical called norepinephrine at the brain. Norepinephrine is one of the "fight or flight" chemicals. There are serious risks to blood pressure when Meridia is used and the drug is not prescribed to people with known heart disease.

You have heard the risks of many prescription diet medications on television. You may not realize the potential problems associated with over-the-counter weight reduction products to include some of the natural or herbal products.

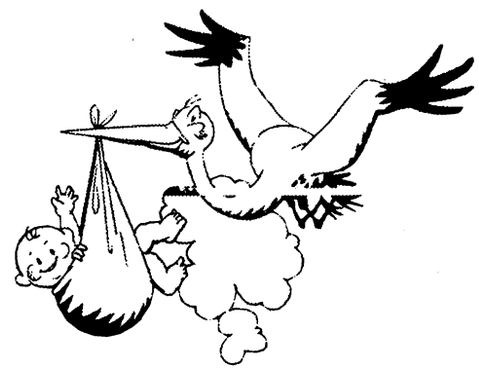
Most over-the-counter diet pills rely on decongestants like phenylpropanolamine, phenylephrine, and ephedrine as the stimulating element. Ma huang in herbal diet aids is ephedrine. These drugs carry the same serious side effects on blood pressure, especially when the doses are higher than is seen in the decongestant forms.

The other widely used stimulant in diet pills is caffeine. The doses vary but can equal up to five cups of coffee. In herbal aids, the ingredient that is similar to caffeine is guarana. The stimulants are included to make you become more active.

To date, isolated abilities of chemicals in pill form to burn fat have not been discovered. Chromium picolinate is occasionally advertised as a fat burning substance. It has been associated with weight loss in subjects who exercise. But it has also been associated in weight gain in subjects who take it and do not exercise.

L-carnitine is an amino acid found naturally in foods and is also carried in several diet aids. So far, research has only shown it may help lower cholesterol in kidney dialysis patients.

Psyllium, pectin, glucomannan, kelp, gums, and chitosan are all various forms of substances included in diet pills to put bulk in your digestive tract and decrease how much fat or sugar you absorb.



Some of these bulk agents swell quickly when in contact with water and have been reported in blockage of the swallowing tube (the esophagus) and even death. We do know it is difficult for vitamins and minerals to be absorbed if too much fiber is added to the diet. Caution should be used to avoid excess use of these products.

This article is provided to educate you on precautions in diet aids, especially since so many are available over the counter and the consumer is often unaware of potential associated problems. Diet aids should not be taken by pregnant women or children.

As always, the only proven long lasting results are seen with increased activity and healthier lifelong eating habits. Fortunately, these habit changes are available for all of us.

Agency offers tips to keep children safe

Family Advocacy Program

Child abuse affects everyone and is the entire community's responsibility. The greatest protection we can give our children is to provide them with constant access to caring and trustworthy adults. No parent can do it alone. It takes a community-wide commitment to caring. Parents should feel confident that others are working for their child's safety as much as they are. The following are tips to help raise safe children.

Build self-esteem

•If children or teenagers feel good about themselves, they will not be as vulnerable.

•Children and teens with a strong sense of their own worth will not be easily swayed or tricked by sexual abusers.

Talk and listen

•Close parent-child relationships are an important aspect of protecting and supporting children.

•Often abusers gain the child's cooperation by warning the child that no one will believe him if he tells.

•Children and teenagers need to hear a clear message early and often from the adults around them: "I care and I will listen to you."

•Make a habit of talking regularly about ordinary activities and what sorts of things make your children and teens feel sad, happy, or angry.

•Sharing stories of your own growing up experiences, both positive and negative, helps your children learn that they are not alone in facing tough decisions.

•Sharing your experiences also helps children and teenagers to get to know their parents as real people.

Supervise and plan

•Make sure that infants, toddlers and preschoolers are carefully supervised by parents, reliable family members or other appropriate caregivers at all times.

•Know where your older children and teens are and who they are with.

•Agree on plans for after school, inviting friends to the house, going out with friends. Get involved in their activities, become familiar with their behavior, and aware of their attitudes.

•Develop a safety plan with your children in the event something unexpected happens outside of the home and you are not immediately available for help.

•Children can learn to be careful without being afraid of people.

Rehearse and practice

•Encourage the development of problem solving skills. Even young children can practice "what if" situations. Parents and children can rehearse what to do or say.

•Together parents and children can come up with different ways to handle real life situations.

•Take advantage of TV, current events and everyday occurrences to discuss family rules and expectations.

Teach

•Children and teenagers need information that supports healthy sexuality. From toddler to adolescence, parents and other caring adults can provide information on normal sexual behaviors, thoughts and feelings, in a way that makes children comfortable and aware of what is happening to them as they grow.

•Learning about sexuality and sex from parents gives parents the opportunity to stress important underlying values such as respect for self and others.

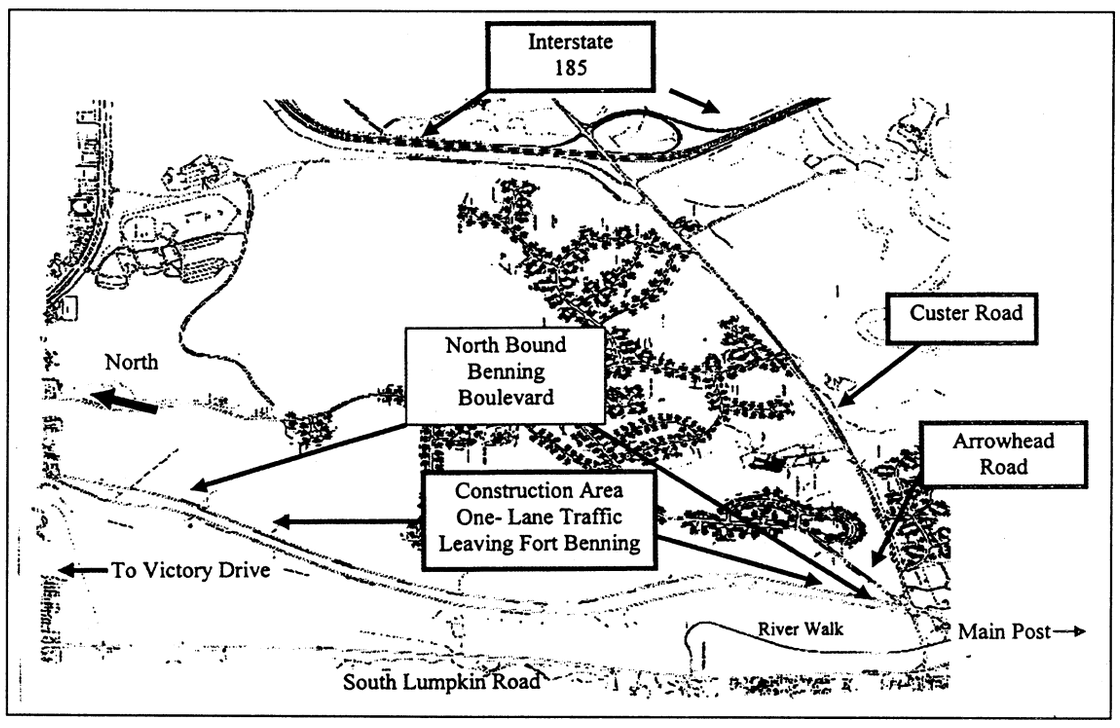
•Children are naturally curious and very interested in their bodies. From an early age, along with learning the names of other body parts, they can be taught the correct terms for their private parts in conjunction with daily activities like bathing and toileting.

•Teaching about all body parts in a matter-of-fact manner accomplishes two important tasks. It makes it clear to children that questions about their bodies and about sex are accepted, and it also provides them with the words to use if someone has tried to touch them or hurt them.

•When parents provide ongoing information about sexual development and behavior they send a powerful message of support.

•Children learn that their parents are aware of their growth and development and that sex is a topic that parents are willing to talk about.

•Children and teenagers talk about sex anyway. It is better for them to get the correct information from a parent, rather than wrong information from someone else.



•By providing opportunities to talk about sexual matters, parents may also be able to identify children and teens who are troubled about sex and arrange for help before problems occur.

There are many resources available to assist parents. For more information, call Becky Welch, Family Advocacy Program manager, at 545-6969.

This week's article provides information on a Benning Road construction project and bedding plants being offered to family housing residents.

Benning Boulevard traffic restriction begins April 20

The out-bound lane of Benning Boulevard will be restricted to one-lane traffic (see map) during the period of April 20 through May 22 from Custer Road for approximately 1/4 mile.

One lane will remain open during this period, but traffic will move slower than normal because of construction personnel and equipment. Everyone is encouraged to use alternate routes during this period, especially during the lunch and afternoon rush periods. The southbound lane entering the installation will not be affected.

DPW has contracted to repair storm drains at six locations along this area to improve drainage under Benning Boulevard. The work to be accomplished includes digging, patching and asphalt resurfacing.

For more information, call Richard Chancey at 545-4749.

Next shipment of fresh bedding plants arrives April 29

The Self Help (U-Do-It) Center has received a shipment of spring bedding plants with fresh shipments. The next shipment is due in April 29. These plants will be offered to family housing residents through May or until supplies are exhausted. To pick up your flat, stop by the Self Help (U-Do-It) Center during normal business hours, which are 8:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday. The center is closed Sunday, Monday and holidays.

Comments and questions

If you have questions or topics that you would like to be addressed in the DPW "Information Corner," contact Glenn Todd, DPW customer relations specialist, at 545-2117, or write to the Directorate of Public Works, Building 6, Room 409, Attn: ATZB-PWM (Glenn Todd), Fort Benning, GA 31905.

Soldiers set example for world

Chaplain (Maj.) Ruben D. Colon Jr.
Chaplain, US Army School of the Americas

The American Soldier is truly the guardian of that treasure we hold dear, and that is so well expressed in scripture, namely, "Love the Lord your God with all your heart, soul and with all your mind, this is the first and great commandment, and the second is like unto it, you shall love your neighbor as yourself." (Matthew 23:37-39)

reflections

We all saw on television, during the Gulf War, the scores of Iraqis who surrendered to our Soldiers. The amazement of it all was that the enemy was treated with dignity and respect.

This image brings to mind the basic lessons of values we learn at a young age, through church or temple, which are transferred into the way we treat others throughout our lives.

Our vision is to treat others with as much dignity and civility as is humanly possible and that in itself is next to Godliness. We learn to identify these values as ethical, because they are related to the divine. In a word, God is revealed to us by how well we interact and treat our neighbor.

We see that played out in a big city, by the police who sacrifice and place their lives in harm's way. A fireman saves lives by constantly endangering his or her own life. A doctor who treats infections faces the danger of being exposed to deadly illness.

People from different shores come to America to see and learn what makes the democratic system work for the United States. They want to know how our democracy has lasted longer than any other in the world today. It all stems from that basic value of care for one another.

As the Chaplain at the United States Army School of the Americas (USARSA), I have once again been assigned to a unit where the ministry of God is visible and a witness to me.

It is a place where military officers and enlisted personnel from South and Central America come to participate and learn how an atmosphere can be created that functions with the best interest of people in mind. A place where teaching others the importance of justice, freedom and decency for all people is the standard. For in the end, that is why our country was formed.

At USARSA, the U.S. Soldiers lead the way in becoming examples for others to follow. Our instructors are the best trained American NCO's and officers chosen from the Army ranks to teach what we treasure most, the respect for human decency, by upholding the democratic principles of our Constitution.

Evil and malice will always be the intentions of a few who prey upon the weak of this world. We do not live in a perfect world, but we yearn for a little heaven on earth.

In whatever assignment, in Europe, Asia or South America, our Soldiers have tried to bring a little of God's Kingdom by sharing the importance of God's call to us as we follow the rule: "Love the Lord your God with all your heart, soul and with all your mind, you shall love your neighbor as yourself." (Matthew 23:37-39)

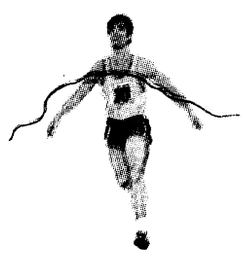
Gun club schedules night match — The Fort Benning Rifle and Pistol Club will conduct a night pistol match at 7 p.m. May 2 at English Range.

The match will consist of a course of fire shot once in daylight, once at night with ambiant light only and once at night with a flashlight.

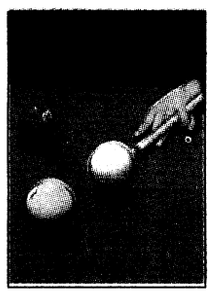
The preregistration fee is $15 and $18 the day of the match. All proceeds from the match will benefit the American Red Cross for Alabama disaster relief.

For more information, call Jim Graham at 689-3371.



Horse show set — The Fort Benning Hunt Club has scheduled an exhibition horse show at 1 p.m. Saturday at the post stables.

The show will feature demonstrations of various horse breeds and disciplines including dressage and show jumping.



The show is open to the public and is free of charge.

For more information, call 689-3945.

Team needs runners — The Army Ten-Miler is set for October. Training is already underway for the event. The team is looking for males who can run two miles in under 11 minutes and 10 miles in under 56 miles. Women should be able to run 10 miles in under 70 minutes.

Runners interested in competing in the event can call 2nd Lt. John F. Detro at 544-1912 or 544-1909.

Rec center plans tourneys — The Kelley Hill Recreation Center conducts chess, pool and spades tournaments throughout the week.

Chess tournaments are conducted at noon the last Saturday of each month.

Eight-ball pool tournaments are held at 7 p.m. each Thursday and spades tournaments are held at 1:30 p.m. every Sunday.

The recreation center offers pool, table tennis, air hockey, foosball, table games and music free.

The center is open 10 a.m. to 7 p.m. Sunday, noon to 9 p.m. Monday and Thursday through Saturday.

For more information, call 544-3079.

Pioneers take on Sting — The Fort Benning Pioneers soccer team will take on the FC Falcons at 3 p.m. Saturday at Memorial Stadium.

The team is currently undefeated in the Columbus Men's League with a record of 6-0.

USAMU rifle coach receives award for superior service

Paula J. Randall Pagan
U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit PAO

For producing champions, breaking records, improving training — and saving the government some money at the same time — a U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit coach was recently recognized for his outstanding accomplishments.

Frank Briggs, International Pistol and Rifle Team Coach and former head coach of the Service Rifle Team, received the Superior Civilian Service Award in ceremonies March 20 at Sharpe Hall at Fort Benning.

The award, equivalent to the military Meritorious Service Medal, was given for his "superb leadership and innovative training techniques as coach of the USAMU Service Rifle Team," according to Bob Aylward, USAMU deputy commander.

While the head coach for Service Rifle from 1995 to 1998, Briggs produced 28 national and interservice champions and set 13 national records.

"Due to his innovativeness, he created a team that consistently dominated Service Rifle competition," Aylward said. "He did the impossible by winning the 1997 1,000-Yard National Team Championship using the M-16A2 — what people said could never be done."

Briggs made an immediate and highly visible impact upon his assignment to the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit," according to D.I. Boyd, USAMU chief of competitions.

"Frank's introduction of progressive training techniques resulted in the Army Team wrestling the Service Rifle Interservice and National Championships from the Marine Corps for the first time in 10 years," Boyd said. "His comprehensive knowledge of firearms, wind effects and ballistics contributed to the final phase of the research and development of the match grade M-16A2 rifle and ultimately in its successful fielding as the premier rifle used in national match competition."

Briggs said his success would not have been possible without the great shooters and gunsmiths of the Army Marksmanship Unit.

"I was so proud of the way the Service Rifle shooters came together as a true team rather than a bunch of individuals shooting, they became a team that worked with each other and took care of each other," Briggs said. "They're a great bunch of guys — very hardworking and true champions."

Taekwondo students qualify for Junior Olympics

John W. Peeler
Bayonet correspondent

After 12 grueling hours of competition, 10 students from the Fort Benning Taekwondo School recently qualified to represent Georgia in the 1998 Junior Olympics in Orlando, Fla. July 8 to 13.

The championships, conducted at Effingham High School in Springfield, Ga., pitted more than 300 taekwondo students from across the state vying for positions for the tournament in Orlando.

This year's tournament, hosted by the Savannah Taekwondo Academy and sanctioned by the U.S. Taekwondo Union, opened with the traditional playing of the U.S. National Anthem and the Korean National Anthem sung by Donna Bouchillon.

After the introduction of special guests, the crowd watched as Tricia Daniels, World Twirling Champion and Miss Majorette of America, put on a twirling demonstration. Daniels decorated her routine with tumbling and creative dance enchanting the crowd to a standing ovation.

Following the demonstration, competition began with the forms divisions. Eleven students from the Fort Benning Taekwondo school entered the tournament and won 13 Gold, four Silver and four Bronze Medal.s. First place winners in the forms division included Tamara Becker in the female division and Justin Christy, Michael Peeler and Tremon Thornton in the male divisions. Stephen Ott and Joseph Cozart walked away with Silver Medals in the male divisions with Ashley Weigandt winning a Silver Medal in her female division. Bronze Medal winners in the female divisions were Kim Jones and Lindsay Cozart with Tremaine Thomas winning a Bronze in his male division.

Taking home Gold Medals in the sparring events were Becker, Christy, Cozart, Jones, Peeler, Thornton, Weigandt and Lindsay Cozart. In addition, Thomas won a Silver Medal and Ott won the Bronze Medal in their male sparing divisions.

Students from the school will begin preparing for their next major event, the Junior Olympics.

For more information on the school, upcoming tournaments and athlete resume's, Jones and Peeler created and maintain a website for the school at http://www.geocities.com/Tokyo/Ginza/7493/TKD.html.

Faith students race to finish line with jogging club

Club offers students chance to compete in sports

Spc. Michelle J. Davis
Bayonet staff writer

Although the Fort Benning middle school does not have organized sports teams, it offers after school activities to allow students the opportunity to practice and compete in various sports.

One such opportunity for students attending Faith Middle School is the Jogging Club.

The club has more than 20 members this year and is supervised by Susan Emerson, one of the school's physical education teachers.

Emerson, who has been with the club for more than 15 years, said the club is a great opportunity for the students.

"It gives them something to do after school and it's something they can really work at and look forward to," Emerson said. "We have many of talented runners in the club right now."

The club begins holding meetings in September where they focus on cross country events. The club ceases operations in November until early spring when they start up again with track and field events.

"We're a jogging club so we mostly focus on the long distance events, but we do have some students who compete in field events like the long and high jumps," Emerson said.

Since the club is not an actual school team, finding other students to compete against has been a challenge.

"In the past, we have held track meets at Doughboy Stadium on post, but last year we found a school that allows us compete in their track meets," Emerson said.

One school that allows the club to participate in area track meets is Smith's Station Intermediate School in Smiths, Ala.

The club competed in a meet Tuesday against Smith's school in addition to schools from Auburn and Opelika.

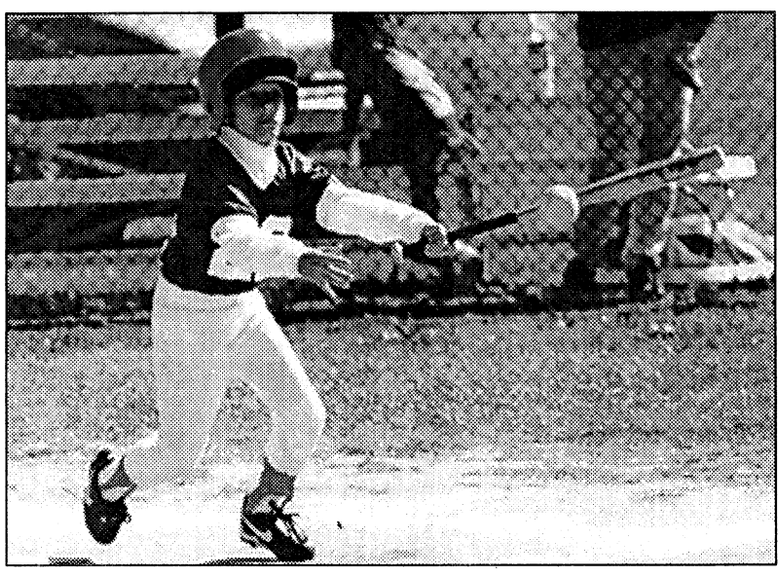
This was the third and final track meet for the season. Emerson said she wouldn't have been able to bring the students to any of the meets if it hadn't been for the numerous volunteers.

"There have been a few parents who have just been outstanding by helping out with transportation," she said. "Without their help, my job would have been impossible."

Club member Ebony Morish said the club has helped her get in shape and prepare for future competitions.

"The club is helping me get ready for high school where I want to join the track team," she said. "My goal is to one day go to the Olympics."

Seventh-grader Debbie Wettrich also joined the club to improve her running.



"I'm not really good at running and I figured this was one way that I could improve on my time," she said.

The club, which holds weekly meetings, is preparing for a 5K run around the Six Flags over Georgia amusement park in support of the National Arthritis Foundation. After completing the race, the students will receive free admission to the park.

USAMU: coach makes impact

— very hardworking and true champions."

"Coach Briggs has provided exactly the right kind of leadership that builds great teams," USAMU Commander Col. Arch Arnold said. "The Service Rifle Team has dominated the opposition under Coach Briggs' watch. He is a winner who inspires our Soldier-shooters to reach their full potential within the framework of the team concept. I expect the same great results from his teams as he moves now to be our International Pistol and Rifle coach."

"I'm really excited about working in my original area of expertise — international shooting — and being involved in the World Championships," Briggs said. "My big goal now is the 2000 Olympics. We're going to ensure our international shooters have the best equipment and most advanced technology so they'll have a great opportunity to win world and Olympic titles. I'm pretty optimistic that many of our shooters will represent the United States in the Olympics."

A resident of Columbus, Ga., Briggs started shooting in 1949. He graduated from Forest Hills High School in Queens, N.Y., where he won the Outstanding Service Medal, created especially for him. He received a bachelor of arts degree in history from St. John's University of Jamaica, N.Y., in 1957, where he was the university's Outstanding Athlete of the Year, a two-time member of the All-American Shooting Team and a charter member of its Athletic Hall of Fame.

New juvenile misconduct policy to take effect June 1

Spc. Michelle J. Davis
Bayonet staff writer

A new sheriff is coming to town and Fort Benning youth may want to think twice before committing any offense on post.

Beginning June 1, juvenile offenders will face increased punishment for their crimes under a new juvenile misconduct policy.

The policy, which was modeled after other installations' juvenile programs, took nearly a year to develop.

"In a nutshell, the policy identifies a Juvenile Misconduct Action Authority (JMAA) who will conduct misconduct hearings," said Anne Norfolk, an attorney-advisor for the office of the Staff Judge Advocate and one of the authors of the policy.

Sgt. Maj. Arthur A. Van Allen, garrison sergeant major, was named the post's first JMAA.

During the misconduct hearings, Van Allen will hear evidence presented from both the military police and offender before reaching a conclusion on whether the misconduct occurred and what administrative action will be given as punishment, Norfolk said.

"The penalty can be anything as simple as counseling, to a letter of warning stating that if the misconduct occurs again, further action will be taken," Norfolk said.

While some offenders may receive a light penalty, the JMAA can impose a curfew that restricts the offenders' travel on post, revoke Morale, Welfare and Recreation privileges, terminate family housing or recommend exclusion from post.

Van Allen may also use community service frequently as a means to reinstill responsibility in the offenders. In addition to having the offender complete the hours of service, the juvenile's sponsor will have to supervise the work.

"Children need to be held accountable for their actions and parents play a major role in that learning process," Van Allen said.

During the service, the child and sponsor will report to a specified area where the offender may pick up trash and pull weeds among other details. .

"They are going to be very visible in the community," Van Allen said. "People are going to see them and hopefully that will make some people think twice before committing any misconduct."

Once the policy is in effect, Van Allen said the hearings will be scheduled every other Saturday.

Parents of the juvenile offenders will be notified of the hearing they are requested to attend.

Although parents have to consent to the hearing, Norfolk said that rejecting the JMAA jurisdiction may bring alternate administrative action such as termination of government quarters, exclusion from post or referral to the juvenile court system in Columbus.

"Given the current concern, post crime is still absolutely below most communities in quantity and degree of seriousness," Van Allen said. "We want to keep it that way and are committed to providing the best, award-winning, family-oriented community we can."

Even so, Van Allen said he hopes to see a significant reduction in the number of juvenile misconduct cases within the first 90 days of the policy.

"What we've created is simple, direct, to the point and effective," Van Allen said. "We're just trying to prevent these young offenders from growing up to be thieves and going into the adult prison system."

The policy originated last year, after a committee composed of representatives from around post determined there was a need for procedures to handle juvenile misconduct on the installation, Norfolk said.

She added that the bulk of Fort Benning's juvenile cases involve shoplifting and more than 90 cases were reported from the Main Mall Post Exchange alone this year.

"This represents a considerable loss of funds and will not be tolerated in our facilities by our own family members," Van Allen said.

Although the Muscogee and Chattahoochee Counties have juvenile court systems, Norfolk said the post could only refer serious offenses.

"They don't have the capability to handle all of our juvenile misconduct cases," she said. "We refer almost nothing because they have a full caseload of their own."

Chief of Preventive Medicine warns: avoid over hydration

Sgt. Marc G. Turchin
Bayonet staff writer

The spring and summer months bring warm and hot weather. Everyone has heard the age-old adage of "drink water to stay hydrated."

But with that, comes the danger of drinking too much water and becoming over hydrated.

"That can have some severe consequences," said Maj. William Corr, chief, Preventive Medicine. "Basically, what happens is the water dilutes the salts in your body, particularly sodium."

Knowing if someone is suffering from over hydration can be difficult because the symptoms are similar to that of a heat injury.

Corr said some of the symptoms include nausea and sweating. Severe conditions can include confusion, seizures and even death.

What Corr recommends is following guidelines announced recently by the U.S. Army Research Institute for Environmental Medicine to track water intake.

He said a person's water intake should be no more than 1.5 quarts per hour. He also said the intake should not exceed 12 quarts per 24 hour period.

Corr added that in most cases, over hydration victims feel bloated.

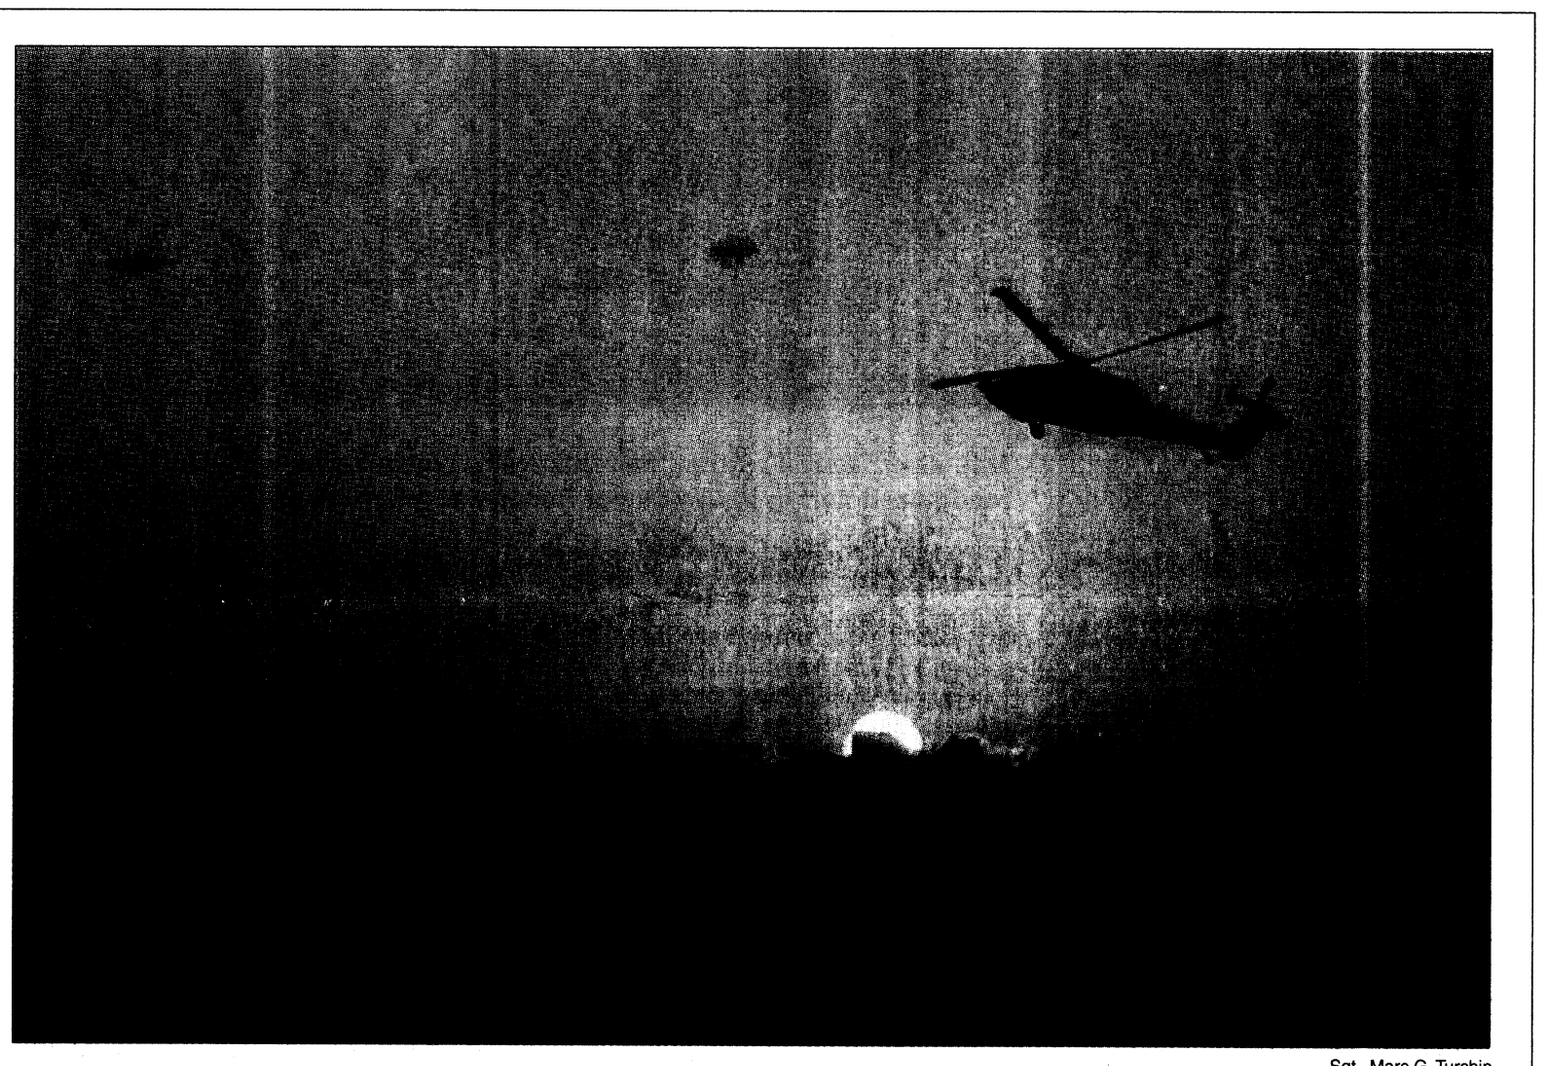
"The stomach can only process 1.2 quarts of water per hour," he said. "Sometimes people who drink lots and lots of water will throw it up." He said those who do vomit due to over hydration, can vomit repeatedly.

"All it takes is two to four extra quarts (of water) to push someone into the over hydration state."

Over hydration, while not widely publicized, does get medical attention. Corr said Fort Benning averages six to eight cases a year. But, eight out of 10 people who suffer from the symptoms, according to Corr, experience a heat injury, rather than over hydration.

If someone is suffering from either, there is a policy concerning transportation of victims to medical facilities.

First, if the victim has a change of mental status or is confused, then that person should be taken to a medical facility, Corr said.



"If your buddy doesn't know who he is, what he's doing, where he's at or what time of the day it is, he should be evacuated to a medical facility," Corr said.

According to the policy, if the person being treated isn't getting better, the person should be brought to a medical facility. If the person is suffering from a heat injury, a quart of water should be administered every 30 minutes. If after the first quart, the person's condition has not improved, then the person should be seen by a medical professional. If they have not recovered by the second quart, they should be seen by a medical officer

If a person vomits more than once, he also needs to seek medical help.

Finally, if someone has doubts about someone else's medical status, that person should also be taken to be seen by a medical professional.

By following the guidelines and watching how much water is taken in throughout the day, almost anyone can avoid over hydration.

Liaison provides help, support to crime victims

Nicole Longstreath

Being the victim of a crime can be a difficult and traumatic experience. Dealing with investigators, legal issues and red tape can make it worse.

For victims who are active military and family members, help goes by the name of Cenneta Gunn, victim witness liaison for the Victim Witness Assistance Program.

Victims are referred to Gunn after they visit the Criminal Investigation Division (CID) or if a victim feels he needs assistance, he can visit Gunn without a referral.

"A victim is a person who has had a crime committed against him," Gunn said. "That can be a person who had his house or car broken into or someone who has been assaulted or raped."

The program was established to inform victims on the status of the suspect and the happenings of the trial, if the incident goes to court.

Gunn

"Victims have a right to see that the offender is punished. They also have a right to know about the suspect and outcome of the case," Gunn said.

As the victim witness liaison for the program, Gunn said her responsibility is to help the victims with appointments for medical attention, legal advice and counseling by a civilian counselor or a chaplain. Being in her position also means doing some of the counseling herself.

"I help counsel the victims before, during and after their testimony," Gunn said.

Being aware, Gunn said, is the Airborne Festival honors paratroopers past and present

Pvt. 2 Amy L. Nyland
Bayonet staff writer

The air seemed alive with history as people young and old came from far and near to share a common thread.

Some may say that the elite who gathered for the 21st Annual Airborne Awards Festival April 16 helped create a porthole to the past as stories of heartache, tragedy and heroics filled the ears of the interested.

Most were strangers while some have been friends for more than 50 years, but almost all were connected by the roots they planted in the Airborne community.

The festival began with an Airborne in Action Demonstration where paratroopers were able to relive their first airborne experiences as they watched an example of the training an airborne Soldier receives.

The festivities continued as the people moved to the Airborne Walk to attend a ceremony honoring all airborne Soldiers past and present.

During the ceremony, Commanding General, Maj. Gen. Carl F. Ernst, spoke about his admiration for the paratroopers who carved a place for themselves in airborne history.

"You wouldn't believe what an honor it is for this paratrooper to be among you," Ernst said. "You are the legends we talk about everyday to the youngsters in jump school. You are the legends who make airborne what it is. It is you that we hold up as models," Ernst added.

Guest speaker, retired Gen. Frederick J. Kroesen, talked of the spirit and dedication of airborne troopers and the vital role they play in today's Army.

"I expect that those of us here today and those of us responsible for the building of this monument realize that today's American Airborne trooper will only embellish and burnish the legacy that we created for him," Kroesen said.

Tragedies remind us of need for responsibility

Staff Sgt. Lori Egan
Bayonet assistant editor

The boys in Arkansas pulled a fire alarm and then shot their classmates as they left the school building.

A boy in Kentucky killed his friends during a before-school prayer meeting.

commentary

A Soldier at Fort Bragg opened fire on a morning PT formation.

A man in Scotland killed the children in a day care center.

A little boy in an inner city who was shot when the police thought the plastic gun he was holding was real.

Almost every day there is some horrible news in the paper with guns involved.

In the Columbus area, two guns made it to two different schools in as many weeks.

Luckily, tragedy was averted when administrators were told of the guns and action was taken.

When my daughter was a toddler, a terrible tragedy happened in Boise, Idaho.

A little girl went to play at the neighbors. There was a loaded gun in a shoebox under a bed. The children she was playing with found it and the little girl was shot in the head.

This tragedy influenced my daughter's upbringing. It is sort of ironic, with me in the Army, but Jessica isn't allowed to play with guns of any sort — no water guns or super soakers, no cap revolvers. The neighborhood children who play with guns and point them at each other are told to go home.

I'm trying to teach my child that we never point a gun, even a toy one at another person.

Before Jessica goes to a friend's house to play, I ask the parents if there are weapons in the home. This way I can make sure Jess knows the dangers before she starts to play.

I know a gun is an inanimate object and can't operate without a person, but sometimes weapons get in the hands of people who are crazy and children who don't know any better.

Fort Benning's rules regarding weapons are pretty simple:

•The owner needs to register privately owned weapons with the military police in Building 2637 within 72 hours of arrival on post.

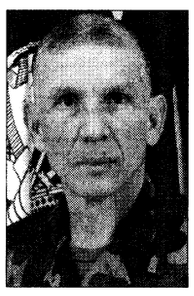
•The privately owned weapons must be stored in the arms room or in family quarters.

•Keep the weapons unloaded and the ammunition secured separately.

•Weapons will not be carried in a concealed manner.

•Hunters must complete a Hunter Safety Course. Information about the course can be obtained by calling 545-3267.

•Children younger than 12 are not allowed to use a gun, including BB guns without parental supervision.



Fort Benning's guidelines for weapons seem pretty straightforward, but just the other day a concealed, loaded weapon was found in the car of a person who works here.

It is not enough to know the rules when weapons are involved. The rules need to be reinforced.

Responsibility should to be taught at every level, every age. Children must be taught about the dangers of guns. It amazes me how parents teach children to stay away from fire and then give their 5 year old a BB gun for Christmas and not supervise its use.

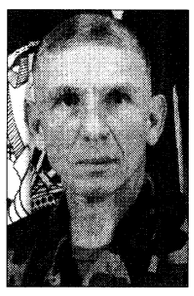
I hope by teaching my daughter the dangers of guns, I can avert a tragedy like the one that happened while we were in Boise.

CG thanks volunteers

Wednesday was another great day at Fort Benning. It was a great day because we were able to publicly acknowledge the contributions of some very special folks — our Fort Benning Volunteers. In a day of constrained resources — both people and money — a post like Fort Benning could not provide the quality services and programs we do without the help of our post volunteers.

We paid special tribute to 20 selected volunteers who represented the hundreds we could not individually thank. These are the people who: lead family support groups; work as soccer, football and basketball coaches in our post youth activities program; lead leadership seminars to help train the wives of Infantry Officer Advanced Course captains to work with Army families at the company level; work in the Army Family Team Building Program to provide numerous leadership and other type courses to family members; assist with the activities of the Red Cross as it supports Soldiers, their families and the local community; help Soldiers and their families with taxes through the Army Community Services Program; transport patients from the parking lot to the hospital in golf carts; lead religious activities for new Soldiers and officers; and provide the leadership and "person power" necessary to care for Soldiers, family members and our retiree community. These are but a few of the many areas where our volunteers serve.

Ron Nelson



Maj. Gen. Carl F. Ernst and his wife Linda pose with the volunteers recognized during the Volunteer Recognition Ceremony Wednesday.

I was especially pleased to accept a symbolic check of more than $1 million representing the contributions of our post volunteers. This represented 170,000 hours contributed at minimum wage only!

While our total number of volunteers went down from last year, hours contributed by our volunteers actually went up by more than 1,000 hours! What more can be said? We have a great group of volunteers who make Fort Benning a great place to live, work and play. They are true heroines and heroes who give of themselves every day to help make Fort Benning a great place — the best in the Army. On behalf of all of us who benefit from your service — let me say "Thanks for the great job and for your selfless generosity."

CG proclaims April Child Abuse Prevention Month at Fort Benning

Whereas, child abuse prevention is a community problem and finding solutions depends on involvement among people throughout the community;

Whereas, statistics of children who are abused and neglected escalate each year;

Whereas, the effects of child abuse are felt by whole communities, and need to be addressed by the entire community;

Whereas, effective child abuse prevention programs succeed because of partnerships created among social service agencies, families, schools, religious organizations, law enforcement agencies and the business community;

Whereas, all citizens should become more aware of child abuse and its prevention within the community, and become involved in supporting parents to raise their children in a safe, nurturing environment.

Now, therefore, I do hereby proclaim April as Child Abuse Prevention Month at Fort Benning, and call upon all Soldiers, families, citizens, community agencies, religious organizations, medical facilities and businesses to increase their participation in our efforts to prevent child abuse, thereby strengthening the community in which we live.

— Maj. Gen. Carl F. Ernst

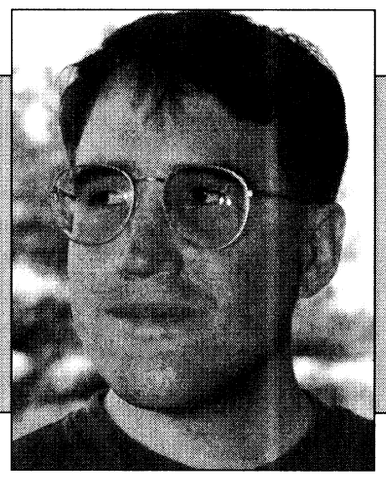
DCA thanks community

On behalf of the Directorate of Community Activities (DCA), I would like to thank those individuals, companies, and organizations who made the Annual Easter Egg Hunt such a tremendous success.

More than 1,500 people attended the Easter hunt. The hunt, which was held at Riverside, the home of Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Ernst, on April 4, could not have been possible without the support of the following sponsors: TIC Federal Credit Union, Military Benefits Association, USPA & IRA representatives, Pioneer Military Lending, who gave so generously to this event, as well as Buffalo Rock Pepsi, the Fort Benning Commissary and the Fort Benning Post Exchange, which provided products and giveaways.



Additionally, thanks to all the volunteers who gave their time so selflessly to make this event successful. Such dedication truly makes Fort Benning a better place to live, work, and play for all our Soldiers and their family members.

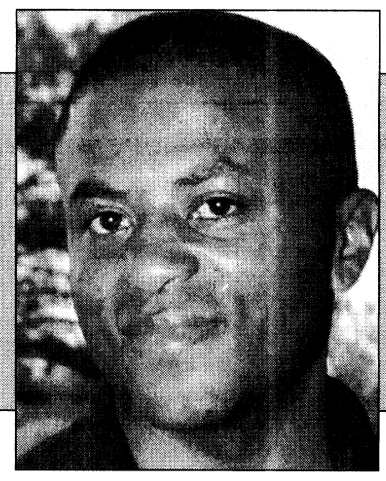
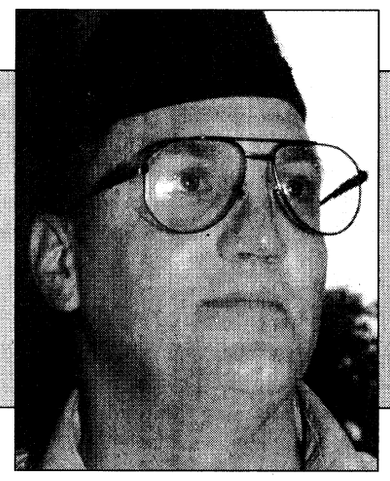
Do you think gun control laws should be stricter?



Lauren Moroz, Boston, Mass. — "While I believe in the constitutional right to bear arms, it is too easy for just anyone to be able to get a gun."



Sgt. Damon Smith, Company A, 310th Military Intelligence, Fort Meade, Md. — "Gun control should be handled on a more personal level. Parents should be responsible for keeping weapons out of reach from their children."

Pfc. Roselyn Ho Ching, Company A, 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment. — "I think people should be allowed to have guns, but they definitely need to learn how to be more responsible and use them in the proper places and situations."

Sgt. Donald A. Webb, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 29th Infantry Regiment — "I don't think parents should have guns in the house because kids can always get to them. At best, keep them under lock and key."

Sgt. 1st Class Vernon F. Humphrey, U.S. Army Medical Department Activity — "American citizens have the right to bear arms, but convicted felons should lose that privilege."

Judith Lowe, American Red Cross, Atlanta — "I think the laws to buy weapons should be stricter. Most accidents happen in the home where many involve children."

Victim: Safety measures prevent crime

Being aware, Gunn said, is the best way to prevent even becoming a victim.

Gunn gave an example of an assault of a female jogger who was running on the jogging track near Infantry Hall. The track was well lit but part of it borders a dark, wooded area where the victim was attacked.

"Use common sense," Gunn said, "If you are out at night, stay in well lit areas."

Gunn also advises people to avoid alcohol use when with unfamiliar people, stating that many physical and sexual assaults are alcohol related.

Unfortunately, some victims are very familiar with their offenders.

For victims whose offender is a service member, in a situation like domestic violence or child abuse, a victim could possibly be entitled to monetary compensation for up to 36 months, if committing that crime is one of the reasons why the service member is dismissed.

For crimes that are committed in Georgia, victims could get up to $5,000 compensation for such things as medical expenses, lost wages, counseling expenses or funeral expenses. Civilian compensation is provided through the Office of the Governor Criminal Justice Coordinator Council Program.

If the victim is not military or a family member, yet comes to Gunn for assistance, Gunn said her duty is to help the victim seek medical attention, legal services and possible counseling. The victims are also referred to the civilian Victim Witness Assistance Program in their local area.

According to Gunn, if the assault occurred in Georgia, each victim can be entitled to up to 36 months of monetary compensation.

Dealing with the victims of crimes involving assaults can be "emotionally draining," Gunn said.

"I don't think I will ever become desensitized to what I hear everyday. I really feel for the victims," Gunn said. "This job can be very emotional. I cry with them."

National Crime Victim's Rights Week was observed April 19-25. During this time, Gunn said, the achievements of crime victim advocates were celebrated throughout the nation.

Airborne: Draws crowd

Later the Airborne Walk came alive as another monument was added to the 26 that already inhabit it's walkways.

The monument is dedicated to former members of Airborne Advisory Team 162, called the Red Hats.

The Red Hats served in Vietnam as advisors to the Vietnamese Airborne Brigade from 1962 to 1973.

The Red Hats monument also honored America's airborne Vietnamese allies and their involvement in the Vietnam War.

Guest speaker and former Red Hat Lt. Gen. Joseph W. Kinzer, Commanding General, Fifth U.S. Army, offered his praise of the Red Hats efforts.

"I feel a deep sense of pride, honor and humility that I have been selected to offer a few remarks on behalf of more than 1,200 paratroopers who served so admirably as advisors along our Vietnamese counterparts," Kinzer said.

"I just hope that all those who visit the Airborne Walk will have a better understanding of the role we played in the conflict in Vietnam during a unique period in the history of America's Army," he added.

After the ceremony ended, many people lingered behind each for his or her own reasons.

Some seemed to absorb the camaraderie while others seemed to enjoy the solace of their memories as they admired the monuments that represent a legacy created by years of dedication.

"I've been coming since May of 1985 and this event is special because it represents so much of what so many have given, especially those who paid the ultimate price," said Henley P. Woods Sr., chairman of Airborne Walk committee.

"I'm airborne and we lost a lot of good guys and close friends. It's only right that I come, out of respect for the guys that didn't make it and show my appreciation for the Airborne people," Woods said.

The festival's grand finale brought participants to Fryar Drop Zone. While there, the crowd observed an Airborne Operation and witnessed the birth of another batch of Soldiers to join the ranks of the airborne society.

Controlled burning set

Controlled burning of woodland areas will take place April 27-May 3. If weather permits, the following areas will be affected: B-4, K-9, K-21, 0-8, 0-11, Q-2, R-l, T-4, T-5, X-1, AA and Harmony Church. Burning will occur in pine stands within these compartments to enhance endangered species habitat and training areas. Personnel proposing to use these areas for recreational purposes must vacate these areas prior to 9:30 a.m. daily. Training units using compartments adjacent to those listed above may experience drift or residual smoke and are reminded to exercise caution while traveling in these areas due to the potential for reduced visibility. Units utilizing ranges and training areas are reminded to remove flammable debris, such as pinestraw, leaves and trash from around structures in accordance with USAIC Regulation 210-4,Paragraph 5-22, Organizational Maintenance.

For more information, call Jack Greenlee, Natural Resources Management Branch at 544-6120.

IG office seeks three inspectors

The Inspector General's Office needs three Soldiers to join the Fort Benning Inspector General's Branch. These positions require three Soldiers with the MOS 92Y40-supply inspector, needed by Sept. 1, 63H40-automotive inspector, needed by Oct. 1, and CMF 1140-assistance, investigation NCO, needed as soon as possible.

Soldiers eligible for the positions will have no more than 2 and one half years on station as of the availability date or possess assignment orders. If selected the Soldier will be assigned to the IG office for two years. For more information, call Maj. Bob Popowski at 545-3961 or 545-4780 no later than april 10.

Regulations require proper PT uniform

Normal PT hours are 6 to 7:30 a.m. Monday through Friday.

Due to training requirements, the Infantry Training Brigade conducts PT from 5:30 to 7 a.m. Monday through Saturday.

The 75th Ranger Regiment conducts PT from 6:30 to 8 a.m. Monday through Friday.

All Soldiers participating in physical training as a unit or as individuals during the time periods listed will wear the Army gray PT uniform with white athletic socks.

Soldiers who want to wear gray or black colored spandex shorts (above the knee length) under their PT shorts may do so. This is an individual decision and not a requirement.

Distinctive unit PT uniforms are authorized for wear by the 75th Ranger Regiment, Ranger Training Brigade, Physical Fitness School, School of the Americas, other service instructors, LNOs and allied students.

During cold weather conditions, the black knit cap and black leather gloves with green inserts will supplement the cold weather uniform. The decision to wear the black cap, leather gloves and green inserts rests with the unit commander.

Hats, sweatbands or other headgear other than the black cap are not authorized for wear.

Peak moving season is here. Soldiers who have their reassignment orders should call the transportation office at 545-3156 to make an appointment for shipment or storage of household goods to avoid delays. Ten copies of orders are required. For more information, call Linda Kelley at 545-6010.

EO plans heritage program

The Equal Opportunity Office will sponsor an Asian and Pacific Islander American Heritage program at 11:30 a.m. May 5 at the Main NCO Club. The public is invited. This year's theme is "Trade and Cultural Exchange for the Betterment of the Community."

The guest speaker will be Dominador Manio, assistant principal of Spencer High School in Columbus.

The distinguished guest will be Bobby Peters, mayor of Columbus.

Tickets are $6.50 and can be purchased from your equal opportunity advisor or the Equal Opportunity Office, Building 2509.

The committee is also requesting recipes for Asian/Pacific Islander food dishes.

For more information, call the Equal Opportunity Office at 545-6665 or 545-3196.

Drop box available for job applications

Based on a cooperative effort between Local Union 54, American Federation of Government Employees, the Southeast Civilian Personnel Operations Center and Fort Benning's Civilian Personnel Advisory Center, a drop box has been installed inside the front entrance of Meloy Hall Building 6.

The box allows applicants the option of submitting job applications via this means.

It also makes it easier to guarantee that the deadline for applying for a position is met and reduces the cost of postage.

Employees are encouraged to take advantage of the drop box service and to make certain that applications are placed in the drop box prior to the closing date announcements.

For more information, call the Directorate of Civilian Personnel, Management Services Division, at 545-5562 or 545-7657.

SFC selection board to meet

A department of the Army selection board will convene May 27 to consider Soldiers for promotion to sergeant first class.

Also, the board will review records for possible elimination under the Qualitative Management Program.

All eligible Soldiers must review their personnel qualification records.

Soldiers who meet eligibility criteria must have a current photo. To schedule an appointment, call 545-4417.

Complete-the-record evaluation reports are authorized. Eligibility criteria must be met.

Noncommissioned officers who meet eligibility criteria must review their personnel records and authenticate their personnel qualification record, which goes to the selection board.

Contact your personnel sergeant or call the Adjutant General Personnel and Operations Division at 545-2872 or 545-5640.

Awards to be given

The Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff awards the Joint Meritorious Unit Award to individuals assigned to the designated areas during the periods indicated below:

- U.S. Army Commander in Chief, Europe (Forward) Command and Control Detachment (Operation Quicklift), Split Croatia from July 3, 1995, through Aug. 11, 1995.
- Joint Logistics Support Element, Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, from Jan. 20 through April 15.
- Joint Task Force 160, Operation Sea Signal, from May 20, 1994, through April 15.

Purchase the JMUA ribbon through normal supply channels. Adjutant General Personnel Operations and Services Division, Records Sections, Building 2620, updates your military personnel records.

The chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff also awarded the Joint Meritorious Unit Award to individuals that participated in Operation Uphold Democracy from Sept. 4, 1994, through March 31, 1995.

For more information, call 545-3341 or 545-4702.

Benning Blvd restricts traffic

The out-bound lane of Benning Boulevard will be restricted to one-lane traffic now through May 22 from Custer Road for approximately 1/4 mile.

One lane will remain open during this period but traffic will move slower than normal due to construction personnel and equipment.

Everyone is encouraged to use alternate routes during this period, especially, during the lunch and afternoon rush periods. The southbound lane entering the installation will not be affected.

DPW has contracted to repair storm drains at six locations along this area to improve drainage under Benning Boulevard. The work to be accomplished includes digging, patching, and asphalt resurfacing.

For more information, call Richard Chancey at 545-4749.

WWII vet visits ITB

The Infantry Training Brigade will host a World War II veteran as guest speaker for its observance of the "Days of Remembrance."

Dr. Morton B. Waitzman of Atlanta will be the guest speaker at 6:30 p.m Monday at the Infantry Training Brigade Regimental Chapel, Building 3220.

ACAP offers many opportunities for separating Soldiers

Army Career and Alumni Program

Separating Soldiers may find rewarding second careers with manufacturing and production companies.

"Many separating Soldiers find opportunities, good pay, benefits and chances for advancement in the manufacturing and production segment of industry. In the local area you can find spinning mills and clothes production, battery and small engine manufacturing, jet engine components, printing production, textile equipment manufacturing, building products and many more," said Chick Eagle, Fort Benning's Army Career and Alumni Program counselor.

"Soldiers have developed many of the skills and experience needed by the manufacturing companies in the Columbus, Georgia area as well as around the country. Skills with machinery, equipment operation and maintenance, creating safe work environments, dedication to on time mission accomplishment and strong supervision and management make our Soldiers qualified to begin second careers in manufacturing. Soldiers begin by filling key positions on manufacturing or production lines and rise quickly based on their desire and ability to higher level supervisory positions. This is a trend we have heard about over and over from Soldiers and companies," said Eagle.

"Manufacturing companies seem to offer excellent pay and benefits packages depending on the industry, location and degree of skilled workforce. After an initial waiting period, employees receive medical and dental programs, 401K and profit sharing retirement savings and investment plans and life insurance options as well. A good benefits package can add as much as 25% to the salary. Good manufacturing companies will offer a good benefits package to stay competitive and attract top workers into their work teams," said Eagle.

For job search and scheduling information, separating Soldiers should visit the ACAP Center in Soldiers' Plaza, Bldg. 2634 or call 545-2308, 545-2309.

Army Ranger receives first Maj. Gen. Garrison award

Army News Service

The Staff Judge Advocate of USSOCOM recently named an Army Ranger the first recipient of the Major General William F. Garrison award.

Sgt. 1st Class Norman A. Farnsworth, the senior legal NCO for the 75th Ranger Regiment, Fort Benning, received the award recently in ceremonies here. The Garrison award recognizes the special operations judge advocate commissioned or warrant officer, or enlisted soldier, who makes the most significant contribution to the legal support to special operations forces.

Farnsworth, a former member of the 160th Special Operations Aviation Regiment and the regiment's Non-Commissioned Officer of the Year, was characterized as a "trusted legal advisor" by Capt. Michael Ryan, Regiment Judge Advocate, 160th SOAR. "Farnsworth routinely provided accurate, timely legal support in high pressure situations, both in garrison and while deployed," he said.

The annual award is named for retired U.S. Army Maj. Gen. William F. Garrison. While on active duty, Garrison commanded the Joint Special Operations Command, Fort Bragg, N.C. "He was a commander who appreciated lawyers and included them as an integral part of the command team," said Col. Thomas R. Lujan, SJA for USSOCOM.

Lujan, and four other military lawyers, all of whom served under Garrison at during their careers, created the award and named it for him. Lujan said the five men chose Garrison because of their great respect for him, and his great respect for the field of law and the soldiers in it.

"Maj. Gen. Garrison had the unique ability to inspire people to achieve things that they believed, in their heart of hearts, that they really could not accomplish," Lujan said.

Lujan sees Farnsworth as an appropriate choice for the first Garrison award. "It stands as a fitting tribute to Maj. Gen. Garrison's respect and admiration for the non-commissioned officers corps," he said.

JOTC: Rangers go to Panama, become jungle experts

Sgt. Marc G. Turchin
Bayonet staff writer

After spending three weeks in and out of the jungles of Panama, members of the 3rd Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment, returned to Fort Benning April 18.

The rangers spent their time in Panama going through the Jungle Operation Training Course (JOTC).

This marked the first time the battalion had been to the jungle school since 1995.

According to battalion commander and four-time veteran of JOTC, Lt. Col. Michael Ferriter, this rotation challenged the rangers.

"We came in here with a whole bunch of new rangers and new leaders. The school provided a good training area and a good leadership opportunity," he said. "It also allowed everyone to step up and fulfill the role of squad or team leader and carry the men through the jungle and through the live-fires. Everyone did great," he said.

The rangers got the chance to encounter the jungle during their first week of training classes.

For four days, rangers learned about jungle mines and booby traps, squad react to contacts, jungle living, waterborne operations and land navigation, what most considered to be the toughest class.

"You're fighting vines constantly," said Staff Sgt. John Donaldson, battalion reenlistment NCO. "Visibility was no more than about 20 meters at best."

While land navigation may have been the roughest class, the rangers enjoyed the warm water and learning new skills during the waterborne classes.

During this class, the rangers learned to tie rope bridges, pack and swim with rucksack floats and capsize zodiac boats.

"I'd have to say waterborne was the best of the classes," he said. "It's been a couple of years since I trained with the boats."

The first week ended with the rangers taking on the Green Hell Obstacle Course.

The timed obstacle course included terrain features of the Panamanian jungle — steep hills, thick vegetation and cliffs.

"Our strongest obstacle as a squad was the litter carry," said Cpl. Adam Nash, Company C team leader. "We made up a lot of time there."

The next week would prove to be some of the hardest times spent in Panama as the rangers ventured deep into the jungle for three situational training exercises (STX).

Ferriter said the jungle provided plenty of work for the rangers.

"The biggest challenge for the rangers is the environment," Ferriter said. "Once they can cope with the environment, they can get on with the business of fighting and winning."

Throughout the STX had the rangers completing many tasks. There were raids, ambushes and react to contacts. The Soldiers walked several miles in the jungle, paddled zodiac boats and conducted patrols and reconnaissance missions.

One STX required the rangers to complete a 15-mile roadmarch in the middle of the night. All three companies remained in the jungle, conducting two of the STXs back-to-back, for nearly six days.

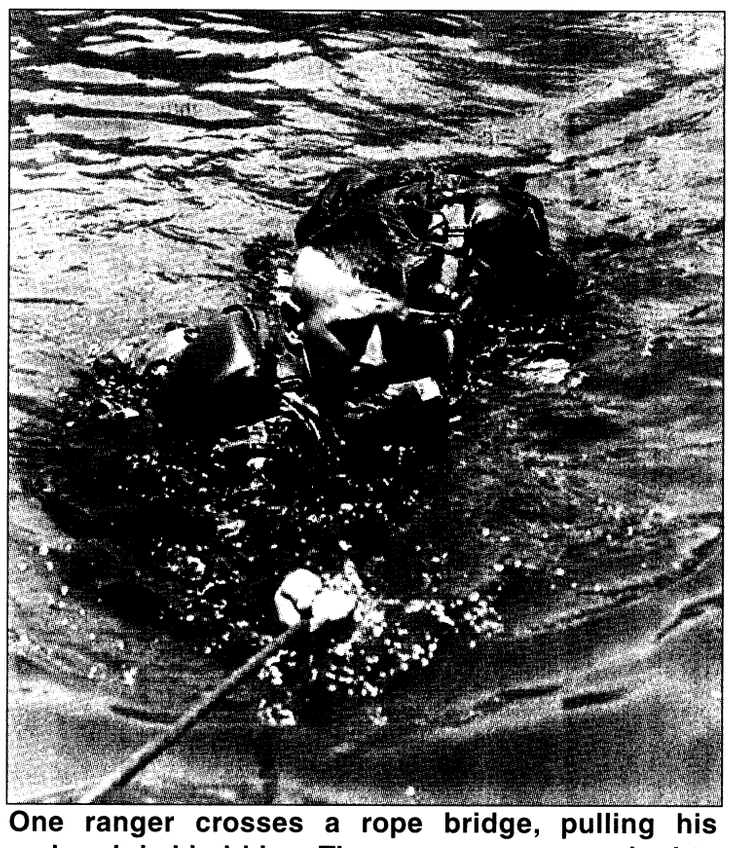
"I thought the exercises gave the guys an opportunity to hump through the jungle and see what it was like," said Cpl. Steve Kowatch, acting squad leader, Company A. "With our missions, we could definitely be going through terrain like this."

Kowatch's battalion commander, Ferriter, said he wanted the training performed at the lowest levels.

"We opted to establish STXs for the squads and platoons and have a platoon evaluation so that most of the men would receive training everyday," he said. "This allowed us to get a high pay off and great resolution training from most of the men, most of the time."

With the Panama deployment behind him, Ferriter said his men had nothing but good things to say about the JOTC.

"One squad leader told me this was the best training that he's had and he's learned more in the last three weeks then he's learned in his entire period as a squad leader," Ferriter said.



Ferriter agreed, but had his own opinions about the deployment.

"I think we just set a real good pace and tempo, we did some good hard work, had a relaxing day, then some more hard work, then some days of rest and relaxation and it worked out just fine for us."

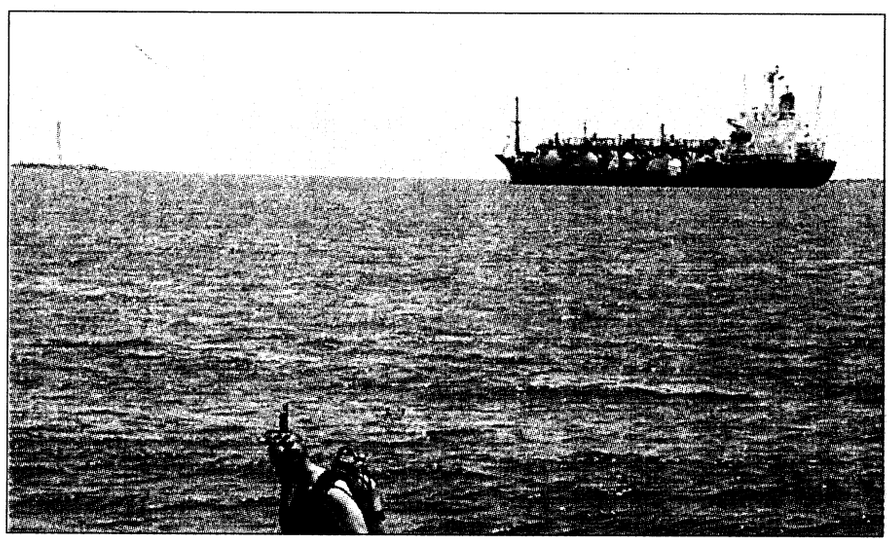
One ranger crosses a rope bridge, pulling his rucksack behind him. The rangers were required to build rope bridges to cross water obstacles.



Rangers work through the litter carry obstacle, part of the Green Hell Obstacle Course.

After learning how to build rucksack floats, rangers make an attempt to tread water and then swim. This was only one section of the waterborne training during the first week of the deployment.

During the react-to-contact class, rangers return fire on the opposing force.

Holocaust observance set for today at Faith

Equal Opportunity Office

A "Days of Remembrance" for Victims of the Holocaust Program is set for 11 a.m. today in Faith Middle School. The guest speaker is Andre Kessler, chairman of Speakers Bureau of Children of the Holocaust Survivors, Marietta, Ga.

The Holocaust was an event contemporaneous in large part with World War II — but separate from it. In fact, Nazi plans for "extermination" and genocide often took precedence over the war effort — as trains, personnel, and materials needed at the front were not allowed to be diverted from the death camp assignments.

In 1979, a Presidential Commission described the Holocaust as, "the systemic, bureaucratic annihilation of six million Jews by the Nazis and their collaborators as a central act of state during the Second World War, as night descended, millions of other people were swept into this net of death."

National efforts to remember the Holocaust can be traced back to the actions of General Dwight D. Eisenhower, Supreme Commander of the Allied Forces in Europe. When his troops liberated the death camps, he vowed that the memories of the horror he and his soldiers witnessed would not be forgotten.

His writings show that Eisenhower first forced himself to visit the camps, in order to be in position to give first-hand evidence of events if ever, in the future, there developed a tendency to charge the allegations merely to "propaganda." Taking a stand against this possibility, General Eisenhower requested that members of Congress and leading American newspaper editors come to Europe to see the "indescribable horror" for themselves.

U.S. efforts to remember the Holocaust can be seen as a continuation of these early efforts. The United States Holocaust Memorial Council (USHMC), established in 1980 by Public Law 96388 coordinates local commemorative programs and ceremonies throughout the United States.

The post Equal Opportunity Office sponsored a poetry and essay contest for the eighth-grade students at Faith. The first place winners in both the poem and the essay are published with this article.

The winners' prizes were sponsored by Columbus Bank and Trust and the Army and Air Force Exchange Service.

Children of the Holocaust memories are our legacy

Holocaust is used by historians to describe the massacre of six million Jews by the German Nazi regime during World War II.

On the nights of November nine and ten, 1938, storm troopers burned 267 synagogues and arrested 20,000 people.

Lacking weapons, weakened by disease and starvation, and isolated from the Allies (who were apparently apathetic about their fate), Jews nevertheless fiercely resisted the Nazi throughout the war.

Dranienburg was one of the first concentration camps; all the while the rest of the world looked on.

Concentration camps killing was an atrocity for they had nasty methods such as: cyanide gas, electrocution, phenol injections, flame-throwers and hand grenades.

After World War II began in September 1939, 3 million Polish Jews were subjected to a Blitzpogrom of murder and rape.

Ultimately to the world this is the worst atrocity ever.

Seven hundred-thousand died of disease in the next two years (1939-1941), the Nazi toyed with the idea of deporting all Jews to Nisko, a proposed reservation in the Lublin area, or to Madagascar.

The worst act committed by the strike squad occurred at the Babi Yar ravine in Kiev, where 33,771 Jews were machine-gunned.

Dream

I walked out of my room, down the stairs
And out the front door.
My pace was set by the grim soldiers behind.
Outside the streets were filled with sadness.
Clinging tightly to the hem of my skirt,
I stepped into the dark cattle car.
Mama, papa, sister, and brother followed.
The room filled quickly, and the door was locked.
Jostling, and bumping from side to side the cattle car drove on.
The soldiers whistled outside,a nd spoke of their leader
So horrible and fierce.
They spoke of what they'd do to us and mother cried.
Papa whispered to be brave, I nodded and looked down
The cars had stopped.
The light filtered in, and we cringed,
The brightness hurting our eyes.
Filing out, we formed great lines,
The air blew thin and cool.
"Men to the left!" The soldiers shouted,
And so our family was split in two.
Mama cried even harder now,
But bravely I stood strong,
One foot ahead of the other,
A step at a time I moved on.
The guns pressed into our backs
Sometimes making us fall.
Babies cried and dogs barked
As our long journey progressed.
I saw ahead of me the border line of a city.
Next to me my mother's face
lit up with hope,
People began to talk quickly,
They were going to set us free.
"Run you, Jews you dirty animals run!"
The soldiers cried.
Mother and sister ran but I stood still,
And watched carefully, warily.
A soldier came and picked me up,
He put me back in the car
"Smart child." He said in a deep sad voice.
Then I said goodbye.
I sat with five others and watched with terror filled eyes,
As the snarling dogs were released.
The people fell one after another,
My mother and sister with them.
Sadness built up in me and I began to scream.
The soldier held me back
The door to the car shut tightly
And everything went black.
I woke up screaming in my bed,
The TV played loudly.
My mother was holding me,
comforting,
And tears streamed down my face.
"It's just a dream," my mother said.
but deep down I knew it wasn't.
this happened to people before
I was born and I was sorry for it.

This poem is in remembrance of the 1.2 million children who died at the hand of Hitler. For their memories which will be part of our legacy.

PTO volunteers help schools educate children

Erin A. Nash
Special to the Bayonet©

Parents are an integral part of their child's education and one of the best ways to get involved in a child's education is through the parent teacher organization (PTO). The PTOs of today are thoroughly involved in all aspects of a school, especially volunteering.

Cynthia J. Calix, PTO president at Stowers Elementary for two years, started off as a volunteer for her two sons' classes.

"I began to volunteer because I was interested in the school and what my boys were doing," Calix explained.

Principal Glenn Hughes explained that the PTO officers are nominated by staff members and parents and voted upon by parents. He also emphasized that every parent is a member of the PTO, not just those actively involved. Hughes said it is each parent's responsibility to be involved with their child's education.

The PTO supports the student body, Hughes explained.

"This is the month of the military child and every child will go home with a certificate from the PTO. The PTO also supports field days and staff appreciation barbecues," Hughes said.

Stowers also is planning to construct a Freddie Stowers memorial garden sponsored by the PTO and surrounding community, which will include a water fountain. Calix said it is the largest thing the PTO has ever worked on.

Hughes also said the school has an open-door policy and parents and even others who are interested are encouraged to come in and pick up a volunteer packet.

"It's very easy to do," Calix said. "Mr. Hughes is very supportive. It's real easy to jump right in."

"For me, to volunteer was like, 'Why wouldn't I?'" Calix explained. "There's no reason not to. You want to know your kid's teachers and know the teachers they might have. Children love to see their parents come to their door. Kids try to do better, be more responsible and try harder when their parents are there."

Hughes also encourages parents to take that first step and come to the school. He believes parents will feel very welcome.

The PTO at White Elementary meets once a month.

The goal of the White PTO is to provide the best support needed to foster a warm and loving place where children learn, develop social skills and pursue personal interests.

The PTO focuses their efforts on providing children the best opportunity to learn.

"We do whatever we can do to support the administrators and teachers," Eldridge said. "We want to get parents involved in the classroom. If parents are involved, the kids are able to meet their potential."

The PTO has focused on technology, reading and writing this school year.

Teresa Sawyer, a fifth-grade teacher, explained how the PTO purchased CD-Roms on information in all curriculum areas. The PTO also was able to fund and begin the Accelerated Reader program.

"The PTO is really involved in supporting academics," Sawyer said. "They are really involved in the advancement of technology."

Through the help of the PTO, Mel Vaillant, a first-grade teacher, was able to acquire eight CD-Roms for a computer in her classroom.

"I got the Jumpstart Math and Reading programs, which make it more fun to learn for the students. It challenges all the children, no matter what level they're at."

Barbara Proctor, kindergarten teacher, also obtained CD-Roms.

"The teacher knows what the class needs the best. It's right here and students can work on their own levels."

Rosalind Ortega has been PTO president at Loyd Elementary for two and a half years. Although only seven are actively involved in the PTO, they were able to furnish the library with new books. Ortega said that although there is a low number of PTO volunteers, the PTO is strong.

"We have good teacher participation. It's a great school and we enjoy it," Ortega added.

Ortega will leave Fort Benning within the next few months and is trying to find someone to replace her.

"Our PTO consists of a group of dedicated, hard-working parents who are on duty on a daily basis, providing students, faculty and staff with support in numerous ways," said Debra Mabry, principal of Loyd Elementary. "This volunteer program is designed to recruit and promote parent involvement within the school. The task might be reading to students in the media center, assisting students in the cafeteria, making or sharing hobbies, crafts, careers or directly assisting the teacher through a lesson or unit enhancement activity."

"Our volunteers feel and know the importance of being a part of their children's education," added Mabry.

Del Hicks, principal of McBride Elementary, said the PTO at McBride is great with the support they give the school and the children.

"They've sponsored field days, the fall festival, the accelerated reader program and more," Hicks said.

President Jesus Mancillas and treasurer Jennifer Mancillas send out a PTO newsletter every month to keep parents informed.

"We have a wonderful PTO," said Vicki Rogers, principal of Dexter Elementary. "They are so much a part of the school. They have a number of projects, like Popcorn Tuesday, where students can buy a bag of popcorn for $.25 to take home for an after-school snack."

Rogers also said the focus of the PTO is to support the curriculum and instruction process. The PTO supports the school by offering student incentive awards and assisting in classrooms, labs and the media center. The PTO contributes greatly to the overall school climate.

"On any given day, you will see parents volunteering their time, talents and expertise in the school," Rogers said. "You will see them serving in the capacity of co-teachers in classrooms, the library media center and technology labs.

"As co-supporters, you will find them coordinating Popcorn Tuesday or special projects such as the Staff Appreciation Luncheon or Family Night Picnic.

"Wherever they are, whatever they are doing, you will see bright smiles and cooperative spirits in support of our instructional program. These parents are team players in the educational program of Dexter School."

Spencer High School has what vice principal James Tanksley calls, "a PTSA (parent, teacher and student association) actively working with the school system."

Spencer's PTSA sponsors many activities, including campus beautification, books for the library, a job fair for students, parents and the community and teacher and student appreciation activities among others.

"Our PTO volunteers play an important role at Wilson School," said Phyllis Parker, principal of Wilson Elementary. "This year our PTO published the first Wilson PTO cookbook. They are involved in many activities throughout the school, including assisting in classrooms, the media center and physical fitness testing. Our volunteers are responsible for running the school store, Popcorn Wednesday and the fall festival.

Parent volunteers can be seen on a regular basis at Wilson. They are very much a part of the whole program the time they volunteer is well appreciated."

For more information, call Sgt. Maj. Michael R. Pflanz at 545-3485.

Medicare Part B open enrollment continues — The current open enrollment period for Medicare Part B is through Tuesday. As the military health system has been resized in recent years, some beneficiaries need to rely more on civilian health care services, which may be cost shared through the Tricare or Medicare program. For Medicare eligible beneficiaries, it is important to be enrolled in the optional Medicare Part B program and pay a monthly premium (usually deducted from your Social Security check) to cover the Part B services. Although it requires a premium, Medicare Part B is a cost-effective option for most people.

Smoking causes health risks for everyone

Dr. Virginia Yates
Martin Army Community Hospital

Information about cigarette smoking isn't just for smokers anymore. Research is finding that even those who have never smoked but who have been exposed to others smoking can suffer health risks.

Scientists have shown that both children and adults exposed to second hand smoke have changes in their cholesterol that give them increased risk for heart disease. Parents who smoke have learned that their children often have more ear infections than children never exposed to smokers. The risk for Sudden Infant Death Syndrome (SIDS) also increases in families where parents smoke.

On March 8, 1994, the Department of Defense announced it would no longer allow smoking in military workplaces. This ban was applied to both military and civilian personnel working in military buildings.

Interestingly, the ban was probably more difficult for military people to comply with than any other working group in the country. Smoking rates among enlisted men exceed the national average by nearly 20 percent. More than half of adult male and female adults in the military smoke. Compare this to approximately 25 percent of same age non-military adults in the country. These numbers come from a 1997 American Heart Association publication.

Cigarette smoking was rare before this century. Before this century, lung cancer was so rare that only about 100 cases had ever been reported in medicine. In the 1930's a near epidemic in lung cancer appeared and the epidemic continues as the leading cause of cancer death in both men and women.

While some may argue that other things besides smoking can cause lung cancer, 87 percent of lung cancer can be traced to cigarette smoking. Cigarette smoking also increases risks for cancer throughout the body including the head, neck and digestive system.

Cigarette smoking is the most preventable cause of early death in the United States. Of the more than two million deaths per year, almost half of them are the result of cigarette smoking. The deaths occurred from cancer, heart disease and the breathing problems of emphysema and chronic obstructive lung disease (COPD).

According to the Surgeon General, cigarette smoking is the most important thing a person can change to prevent heart disease and heart attack. Cigarette smoking gives a person under the age of 50 more risk for heart attack than a person over the age of 50 who does not smoke.

Cigarettes contain chemicals that actually change how quickly the arteries in our bodies clog with harmful cholesterol. These changes lead to heart attacks, strokes and deadly weakening of the largest blood vessel in the body, the aorta. Sadly, even second hand smoke can create harmful cholesterol changes in people.

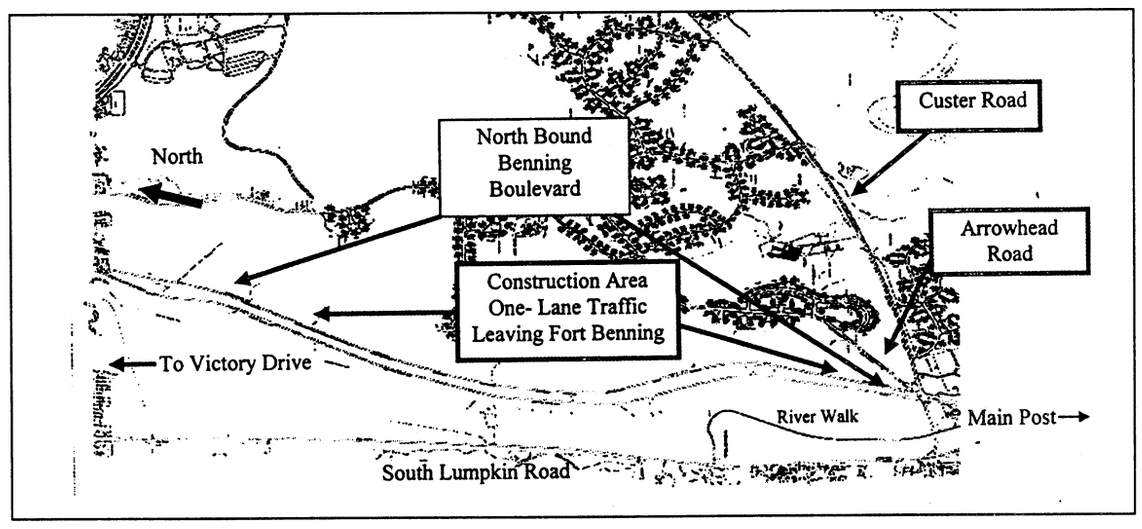
A person recently asked me why it has taken so long for us to learn that cigarettes are bad for us. This information is not new. In 1964, the Surgeon General announced that cigarette smoking caused cancer. The Surgeon General was stating the results of a study done by the Department of Health, Education and Welfare. In 1966, the federal government began requiring warning statements on cigarette packages about health.

Few among us are naive enough to think cigarettes, tobacco and nicotine aren't addictive. Health providers know that to quit smoking isn't easy. Help is available at no charge through the Martin Army Community Hospital.

Those who have quit "cold turkey" by just stopping and never requiring help are inspirational. Manytimes, however, these people have been told an illness they have experienced is related to their smoking.

In fact, the ability for patient and doctor to relate an illness to smoking has been shown to be the best motivation for quitting.

For others, a smokeless nicotine withdrawal system can help. These systems have been shown to have the best effect when combined with a physician education program. Two such programs using the nicotine patch exist at Martin Army Community Hospital.



One program meets for five consecutive evenings in the Family Practice Clinic on the first floor of the hospital. The next class meets May 4-8. Register by calling 544-3065.

For those who prefer daytime classes, the Internal Medicine Clinic conducts a class on the seventh floor of the hospital. This class meets on the first and second Monday and Wednesday of the month. The next class times are May 4, 6, 7, 11, and 13. To register, call 544-1261 or 544-1255.

For both these programs, at least four classes must be attended to be enrolled in the free nicotine patch program.

For those who want to do some further reading on the topic of quitting, the book: Take Care of Yourself has a chapter which includes tips for quitting. Interested persons can also request smoking literature by calling (800) 4-CANCER.

This week's article provides information on road construction that will effect Benning Boulevard until May 22.

Benning Boulevard traffic restriction begins

The out-bound lane of Benning Boulevard will be restricted to one-lane traffic (map below) through May 22 from Custer Road for approximately one mile. One lane will remain open during this period but traffic will move slower than normal due to construction personnel and equipment. Everyone is encouraged to use alternate routes during this period, especially during the lunch and afternoon rush periods. The southbound lane entering the installation will not be affected.

DPW has contracted to repair storm drains at six locations along this area to improve drainage under Benning Boulevard. The work to be accomplished includes digging, patching and asphalt resurfacing.

For information, contact Richard Chancey at 545-4749.

Education, prevention is key to combat child abuse

Family Advocacy Program

Since 1983, Child Abuse Prevention Month has become a nationwide observance. The month of April was established as the time of year when organizations, businesses, hospitals, schools, religious organizations and social service agencies join forces to promote public awareness of child abuse and its prevention.

Everybody at Fort Benning plays a special role in improving the welfare of our children. Whether or not you work directly with children, by combining your unique skills with a general knowledge of child abuse issues, you too can make a difference in the life of a child. Education and public awareness is the key to prevention. The Family Advocacy Program hopes that you will find the following information valuable and will join with us to help prevent child abuse and neglect.

Child abuse

The term "child abuse" can be defined as any behavior directed toward a child by a parent, guardian, caregiver, other family member, or other adult, that endangers or impairs a child's physical or emotional health and development. Child abuse includes four major categories: physical abuse, sexual abuse, emotional abuse and neglect.

Signs of possible physical abuse

•Unexplained injuries, especially those located on parts of the body not usually affected by normal childhood activities, (such as eyes, mouth, back, thighs, buttocks, genital areas, etc.).

•Repeated injuries such as bruises, welts or burns, especially those where the shape of an object used to produce them is visible, (for example an electric cord, hair brush, belt buckle, board, cigarette, etc.).

•Unexplained fractures, (to the nose, face, ribs, legs, arms, etc.).

•Denial on the part of parents that anything is wrong, unlikely explanations for the child's injuries, delay in obtaining medical care or inadequate care given, injuries which occur with increasing frequency or severity.

Child neglect?

Child neglect is the continued failure to provide a child with necessary care and protection including adequate shelter, food, clothing and medical care. Children left without appropriate supervision, especially young children, for extended periods of time are included in child neglect.

•Child appears poorly nourished or inadequately clothed.

•Child appears consistently tired or listless and always seems as though no one cares. Attendance at school may be inconsistent.

•Child demonstrates a consistent lack of good hygiene or an obsession with cleanliness.

•Child is left alone regularly over long periods of time or in dangerous situations.

•Child shows evidence that medical needs are not being met.

Emotional abuse?

Emotional abuse is the most difficult form of child abuse to verify. It includes both verbal assaults and the withholding of positive emotional support. Although the scars may be invisible to the naked eye, emotional abuse wounds the spirit, frequently leaving its marks for a lifetime. Victims of emotional child abuse are "hit" everyday with the power of words which are demeaning, shaming, threatening, blaming, intimidating, unfairly critical or sarcastic in nature.

•Child displays behavior that is extreme, such as a pattern of lying, stealing, fighting or is overly aggressive or acts out inappropriately.

•Child may appear defensive, shy or overly dependent.

•Child may be verbally abusive to others by using the same language and demeaning terms she or he has experienced.

Sexual abuse and its effect on children?

Incest, sexual molestation, rape, sodomy, child pornography, exhibitionism and exploitation are terms most often used when describing child sexual abuse. Those who sexually victimize children suffer from an emotional or psychological dysfunction, usually as a result of their own previous sexual victimization.

They often have severe sexual problems and difficulty relating to adults. Many are adults with whom the child is familiar, and they may repeatedly abuse the same child. An adult who is a stranger to the child will often abuse that child only once but will continue to abuse other children.

The abuse can be:

a. non-physical — for example, indecent exposure, obscene phone calls, or "peeping toms";

b. physical — including genital or oral stimulation, fondling and intercourse; and

c. violent abuse — rape and other forms of sexually violent behavior.

•Incidents may occur only once or be repeated many times, sometimes over a number of years.

•A single seemingly minor incident, such as indecent exposure, fondling or an obscene phone call may cause temporary emotional disturbances such as embarrassment, fear, confusion, guilt, anxiety and a distrust of adults or strangers.

•A more severe incident, such as incest, rape, sodomy, exposure to pornographic activity or other forms of sexual violence may have a lasting effect on the child.

•Behavioral problems such as withdrawal, difficulty at school, aggression, running away, nightmares, extreme depression or anxiety may result.

•Physical signs of sexual abuse may include genital swelling, cuts or bruises, venereal disease and pregnancy. Symptoms resulting from emotional harm often do not surface until adulthood.

Discovery of a sexually abused child

•First and foremost, do not deny the problem. Believe what the child tells you no matter how unbelievable it sounds.

•Control your emotions. Fear and anger on your part are natural reactions but may be frightening to the child. Let the child know that your feelings are not directed at him or her.

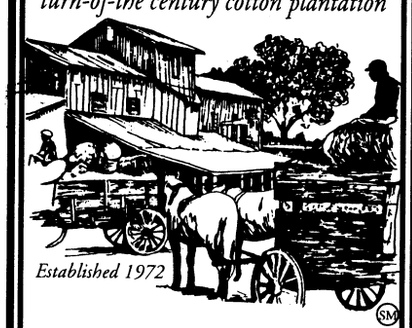
•Never blame, punish or embarrass the child.

•Reassure the child that he or she is safe and it was right to tell you. Let the child ask questions and then provide answers that can be understood.

•Find out as much as possible about the events leading up to, during and after the incident, but do so delicately. If the molester was a stranger, get a description of the face, clothes, location and car.

•Immediately contact a physician for treatment of physical injuries and the police to report the abuse. Provide them with as much information as possible to better ensure their appropriate intervention.

•Seek counseling for both the child and yourself as soon as possible. Immediate intervention can help prevent long term lingering effects of the abuse.



Remember

•Keeping children safe is the responsibility of everyone. The more we know about the problem of child abuse the more we can do to prevent it. We all must do our part. This information has been provided to you by the Family Advocacy Program and the National Council on Child Abuse and Family Violence.

For more information on Child Abuse Prevention, call Rebecca Welch, Family Advocacy Program Manager, 545-6969.

Simple things remind us of God's way

Chaplain (Capt.) Terry W. Austin
USAIC Staff Chaplain's Office

My children came home from church one day with some WWJD clothing on. I did not have any idea what WWJD meant. So, like any other concerned parent, I asked what the initials WWJD meant. The answer, What Would Jesus Do? What a great reminder for our children, to honor Jesus Christ by the things they do.

reflections

Scripture teaches us to be Christ-like. We should be the image and character of God. Not that we will ever obtain the status of God, because we cannot. But, our conduct and actions can be seen by others in order to bring them to God.

We are tempted to do wrong in our lives. In fact, our society has many pitfalls for us to stumble into and become stained in the sight of God. His wonderful mercy and grace allow for forgiveness, but we would be much better off to do the right thing in the first place.

What better way than to ask yourself, before you do something you are unsure of, "What Would Jesus Do?"

I am proud of my children and all children for wanting to do what Jesus would do. But, there is more to this lesson.

A very nice lady working at the dry cleaners gave me a red WWJD bracelet. She wanted to put it on me as I stood there in uniform, and I politely told her it would clash with my uniform. But she insisted I take it and put it somewhere to remind me to do the right thing.

Imagine that, me a chaplain in the United States Army needing to be reminded to do what will honor Jesus Christ. What a concept. Well, I think it is great. I put the WWJD bracelet around the gearshift of my truck to remind me to ask the question "what would Jesus do?" It reminds me always of my Lord and my desire to do His will. That is a good lesson for anyone.

Recently I saw a senior officer, while in civilian clothes, with a WWJD bracelet and necklace on. It reminded me of my WWJD bracelet hanging around the gearshift on my truck.

The scriptures teach all of us who claim to be Christians to do what Jesus Christ would do. It is not just limited to our children, teenagers or the folks in the other church. Each one of us could honor the Lord more by our actions if we would ask the question "What would Jesus do?"

Please, allow me to encourage you to honor Jesus Christ with your life. First of all, by committing your life to Him and then living for Him each day. You will find many challenges in your life, but you can always come to the right decision by sincerely asking yourself the question: What would Jesus do?

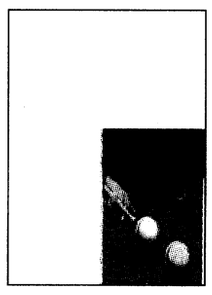
Gun club schedules night match — The Fort Benning Rifle and Pistol Club will conduct a night pistol match at 7 p.m. May 2 at English Range.

The match will consist of a course of fire shot once during daylight, once at night with ambient light only and once at night with a flashlight.

The preregistration fee is $15 and $18 the day of the match. All proceeds from the match will benefit the American Red Cross for Alabama disaster relief.

In addition to the pistol match, the tactical rifle match that was scheduled for April 19 has been rescheduled for 1 p.m. May 3 at English Range. The match had been postponed due to inclement weather.

For more information, call Jim Graham at 689-3371.

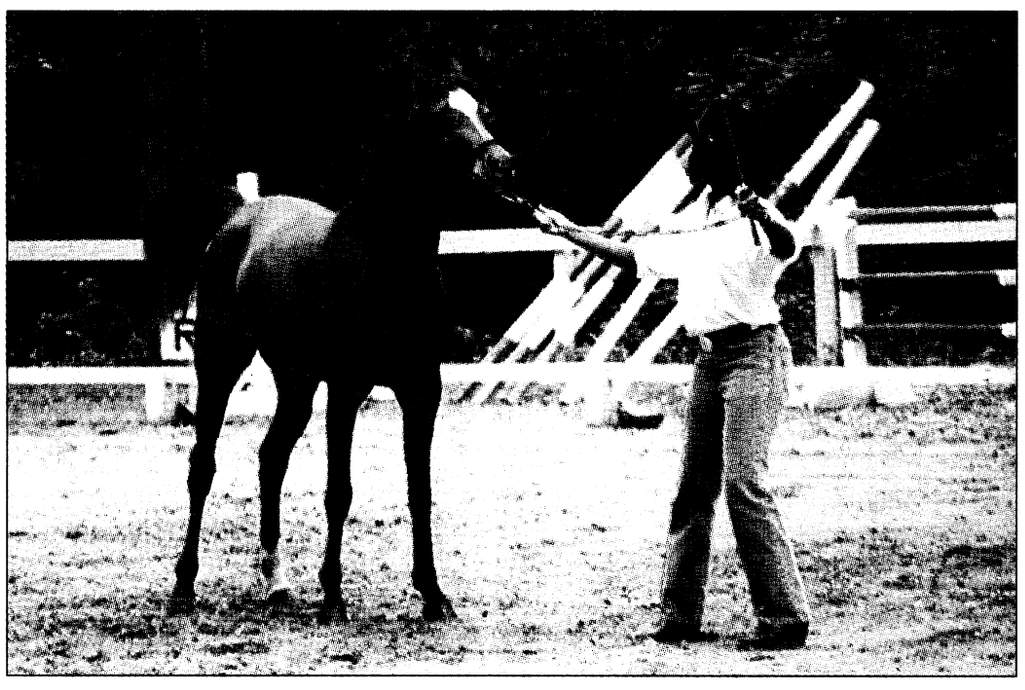


Team needs runners — Runners who wish to represent Fort Benning at the annual Army 10-miler Oct. 11 in Washington D.C. should mark their calendars for May 15. A preliminary qualifier for the team will be held to coincide with the "Burn the General" run. Preliminary qualifiers will train with the U.S. Army Physical Fitness School. A definitive qualifying race will be held approximately six weeks before the Army 10-miler to determine the team of five men and five women who will represent Fort Benning.

For more information and to pre-register, call Capt. Danny McMillian at 545-6386 or Maj. Kathy Towers at 545-4317.

Ranger run set — The 5th Ranger Training Battalion is sponsoring the 2nd annual Mountain Ranger Run May 16 in Dahlonega, Ga. The 15-kilometer course begins at Camp Frank D. Merrill and winds through the Chattahoochee National Forest. Entry fee is $20. A mile fun run has also been added around Mosby Army Airfield. Cost for the fun run is $15. The airfield will be the sight of aircraft displays and military demonstrations.

For more information, call 864-3367.



Rec center plans tourneys — The Kelley Hill Recreation Center conducts chess, pool and spades tournaments throughout the week.

Chess tournaments are conducted at noon the last Saturday of each month.

Eight-ball pool tournaments are held at 7 p.m. each Thursday and spades tournaments are held at 1:30 p.m. every Sunday.

The center is open 10 a.m. to 7 p.m. Sunday, noon to 9 p.m. Monday and Thursday through Saturday.

For more information, call 544-3079.

Hunt Club puts on show, receives community support

Spc. Michelle J. Davis
Bayonet staff writer

The Fort Benning Hunt Club conducted a horse show Saturday to show community members the diversity of horse breeds and disciplines housed in its stables.

More than 100 people came out to the club to witness the free event, which allowed visitors to tour its facilities and meet its inhabitants.

"We had a really great turnout. We got about what we were hoping for," said club vice-president Patty Gordon.

Gordon said the show was the club's first show in some time and just a taste of what the stable has planned for the future.

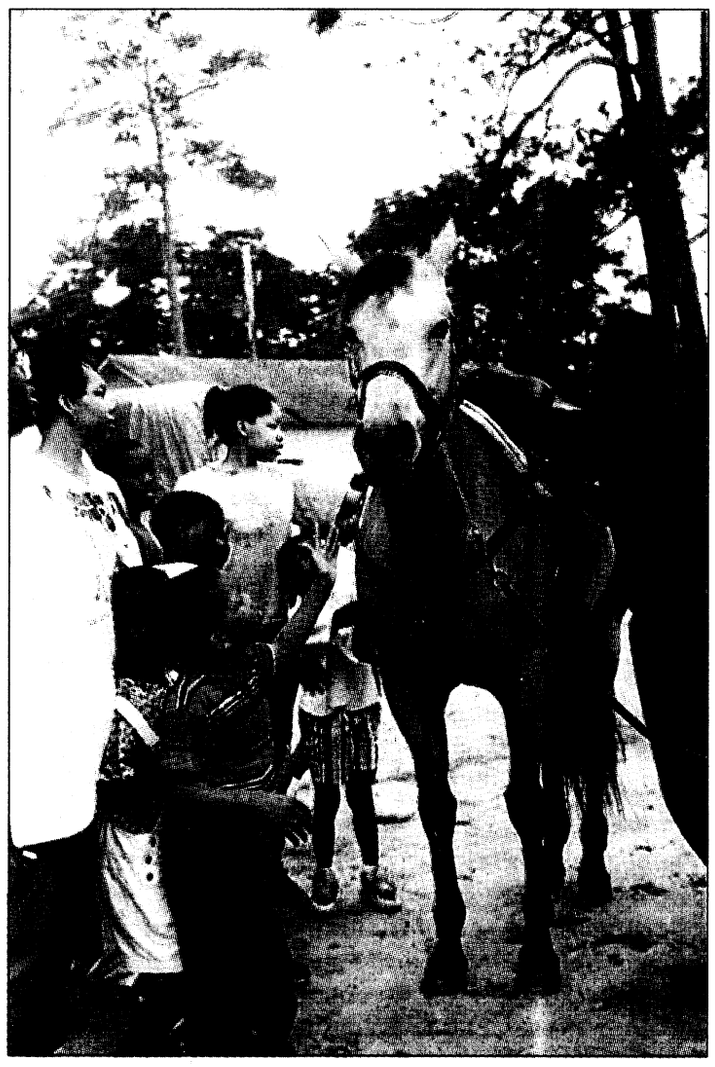
"The purpose of this event was to introduce fans to what they might expect from future shows," she said.

The first part of the show introduced the crowd to various horse breeds. Among the breeds exhibited were Morgan, Paint, Arabian and Quarter horses. As the horses entered the arena, a narrator announced each breeds' unique features and capabilities.

In addition to showing the different breeds to the crowd, members of the club also demonstrated some of the various riding disciplines.

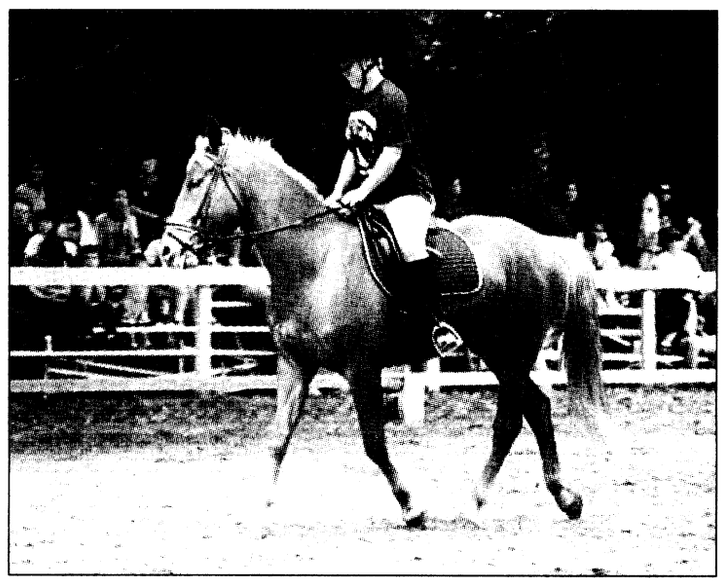
A western pleasure riding demonstration was given as well as a lower training level dressage test and show jumping demonstration.

"Our overall goal is to provide interesting, low-cost entertainment on post for the community," Gordon said. The club is already planning additional shows for later this summer.



The money raised through concessions will go towards improving community and youth activities at the stable.

Although the club has been making improvements to the facilities over the past few months, it has also been trying to expand its services.



"We're getting a few more ponies for lessons and we now have two instructors that are available for lessons," Gordon said.

The stable office is open Monday through Saturday from 8 a.m. until 4 p.m. Although a majority of the horses kept are privately owned, the club has horses available for lessons and rentals.

For more information on the hunt club and it's facilities, call 689-3945.

Stable visitors gather around Antonio Graves and his horse as he adjusts his horse's tack.

OCS candidates win joint military competition

Officer Candidate Robert W. Ford Jr.
Army Officer Candidate School

Fort Benning's Army Officer Candidate School made history recently, when it won the eighth Joint Military Athletic Competition (JMAC) in Montgomery, Ala., Saturday. It was the first time that Army OCS students competed in what had been a contest between the Air Force and Navy commissioning programs. When the competition ended, the Army had placed first, the defending champion Air Force placed second, while the Navy was third.

More than 40 officer candidates from Company B, 3rd Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment (OCS), in Class 3-98 went to Maxwell Air Force Base to compete in eight athletic events. Events included volleyball, tug-of-war, litter carry relays and a three-mile run.

The 99 officer candidates that make up Class 3-98 began OCS only seven weeks before the event.

"We had other training requirements we needed to focus on, so we didn't have time to train specifically for JMAC," said Capt. Victor L. Thompson, commander of Co. B, 3rd Bn., 11th Inf. (OCS). "But we have a very good PT program and this class had a 287 average on their last PT test, so we knew we were in good shape for the competition."

That is not to say that the Soldiers didn't take the competition seriously, said Col. Victor J. Bero, commander of the 11th Infantry Regiment, adding that they knew the competition would be extremely intense.

"I went to West Point and I know what the Army-Navy and Army-Air Force rivalry is all about and it is as intense here," Bero said.

"We knew we were defending the honor of the Army, and it's a long way from Montgomery, Ala., to Columbus, Ga. We didn't want to have to walk back," said Army Officer Candidate Kelly D. Hall from Muskegon, Mich., who was in charge of the competition.

Overall, the Army team placed first in three events and second in the remaining five events. Highlights from the events included Army Officer Candidate Paul Dubbeling's completion of 361 sit ups in seven minutes to help the Army team place first in the Male Physical Fitness Relay. Dubbeling is a native of New York, N.Y. Army Officer Candidate Christopher L. Fairley who hails from Kennesaw, Ga., scored more than 100 points better than the next competitor with his 782 points on a 500 point scale in the Air Force Physical Fitness Test. Army Officer Candidate Elayne Staggs performed 105 push ups in the Female Physical Fitness Relay to help the Army team place second.

Officer Candidate Robert W. Ford Jr.

Officer Candidate Christopher Fairley challenges a Navy Officer Candidate during the Super Physical Fitness Test.

JMAC wasn't just about the athletic competition though. The Air Force sponsored several social gatherings to promote interaction and discussion among the participants. "The candidates will remember this day for the rest of their lives. The victory, coupled with the interservice exposure, will stay with them throughout their careers. This is where joint training begins," said Lt. Col. Bruce W. "Andy" Anderson, commander of 3rd Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment (OCS).

The next JMAC in September is tentatively scheduled to be hosted by the OCS School at Fort Benning.

"The standard has been set and it won't be easy to get the JMAC trophy away from the Army now," said Bero.

Task Force 1/30 to return Sunday

USAIC Public Affairs Office

The first increment of Soldiers from Task Force 1-30 return home Sunday.

Some 285 Soldiers are scheduled to land at Lawson Army Airfield at 9 a.m.

Another 400 Soldiers return at 9:45 p.m.Wednesday, with two planeloads arriving Thursday. The Thursday aircraft are scheduled to come in at 12:40 a.m. with 102 passengers and at 10:30 p.m. with 399 passengers.

Task Force 1-30 has been in Kuwait as part of Operation Intrinsic Action since the first week of January. Although this was a normal rotation for them, the situation grew tense when Iraq defied United Nations orders to allow weapons inspectors free access to all suspected sites.

During their three months in country, Soldiers conducted Infantry and armor training to include live-fire exercises.

The public is invited to attend the welcome-home ceremonies. The location for the arrival is different than from times past. The aircraft will disembark in front of Building 301 (near the tower).

AER campaign approaches May 15 deadline

Army Emergency Relief

Helping the Army take care of its own is the theme of the 1998 Army Emergency Relief campaign that runs through May 15.

"This year's goal is $155,000 and unit, directorate and office appointed keypersons are encouraged to enthusiastically solicit all eligible personnel for their contributions," said Al Deane, installation AER officer.

According to Sgt. 1st Class Jorge Rentas, installation AER campaign coordinator, keypersons also are reminded to turn in weekly contributions collected to the AER office located in Building 2643, Soldiers' Plaza, during the hours of 8 to 11:30 a.m. or 1 to 4:30 p.m. Monday through Friday.

The AER campaign has been conducted by the Army each year since 1947. The AER exists solely to help the Army care for its own. Since AER is the Army's own organization, the campaign solicits funds from active duty and retired Soldiers only.

Major campaign objectives are: increase awareness about AER for all Soldiers (active duty and retired, and dependents including spouses and orphans of deceased Army members); publicize procedures so all Army personnel know how to obtain AER assistance in times of need; and to raise funds to support AER assistance programs.

The annual fund campaign is the only time each year when Army personnel are asked to help their own organization and their fellow Army members.

Contributions to the fund allow AER to fulfill its mission of helping Army people in times of distress and misfortune.

According to figures reported at the national headquarters, the AER has provided more than $647 million dollars in assistance to more than 2.5 million Army people worldwide, active and retired, and their dependents since it was founded. More than $34 million in AER assistance in 1997 was provided to more than 54,000 Soldiers and their families. These figures include

ACOE reps travel to Washington

Sgt. Marc G. Turchin
Bayonet staff writer

Fort Benning has won yet another Army Communities of Excellence (ACOE) Award and a handful of community members traveled to Washington Wednesday to pick up the post's latest hardware.

Fort Benning is this year's winner of the Best Large Army Installation in the United States.

Representatives from various departments left Lawson Army Airfield Wednesday afternoon. The ACOE ceremony was held in the Pentagon's Courtyard Thursday morning.

Post Commanding General Maj. Gen. Carl F. Ernst along with Fort Benning's chief, quality management division, Directorate of Resource Management, Sarah McClaney, accepted the award from Army Chief of Staff Gen. Dennis Reimer and Sergeant Maj. of the Army Richard Hall.

"Thanks Fort Benning," Ernst said. "You did it again, hooah!"

Judge Advocate Office receives LAMP Award

Erin A. Nash
Special to the Bayonet©

Fort Benning's Office of the Staff Judge Advocate (SJA) was awarded the Legal Assistance Military Personnel (LAMP) Award April 28 at a ceremony held at Building 4.

"The LAMP award is to recognize an individual or group accomplishment," said Col. James D. Schmidli, staff judge advocate. "Our legal assistance center was worthy of the award because day in and day out, we take care of Soldiers. We also take great pride in the service we can provide to retirees."

The LAMP award is given for exceptional achievement or for exceptional service to, or support of, the military legal assistance effort.

Jane M. Winand, Chief of the Legal Assistance Division, drafted the nomination for SJA, which outlined the highlights of what SJA has done for Fort Benning Soldiers.

Winand explained the strength of the Legal Assistance Division lies in the personnel. The Division consists of three civilian attorneys who are licensed to practice in the state of Georgia, two military attorneys, a paralegal that serves as a Deputy Georgia State Child Support Enforcement Officer and four legal clerks. The attorneys have a combined total of 60 years of legal experience which includes six years spent in an Atlanta area Public Defender's Office and seven years in private practice.

The Legal Assistance Division has continued to provide innovative in-court representation and extensive legal services both in the office setting and during deployment processing despite limited resources, according to Winand.

Fort Benning was tasked with processing all Soldiers and civilians who deployed to Bosnia and Germany in support of Operations Joint Endeavor and Joint Guard. This increased the Legal Assistance caseload by more than 10,000 clients, Winand added.

Electronic filing of tax returns has been provided as part of the installation tax program since 1992. For the 1996-1997 tax season, tax assistance was provided for more than 13,800 clients. The Atlanta office of the Internal Revenue Service, which monitors the Georgia Volunteer Income Tax Assistance (VITA) Program, informed SJA that their tax office prepared more than 25 percent of the returns electronically filed under the Georgia VITA Program.

"There was very keen competition," said Leonard L. Loeb, chair of the standing committee of the LAMP award. "What put them over the top was the outstanding job they did in crisis (handling an overload of clientele) — it was superb."

"It's exciting to win the award," Winand said. "It's nice to get recognized by other people."

Rangers begin the battle for 'best' title today

4th Ranger Training Brigade

The 16th annual David E. Grange Best Ranger Competition begins today at 5:45 a.m. with competitors conducting a five-mile run followed by the Malvesti Obstacle Course at Camp Rogers in Harmony Church.

This military competition, conducted in three days, is considered one of the most difficult, physically demanding and mentally stressful non-combat events that any Soldier can compete in. The competition will consist of 13 events executed continuously without respite over a 72-hour period.

At last year's event, 33 two-man teams began the competition, only 10 teams were able to complete the competition. This year 42 teams plan to start the competition, which ends Sunday evening with a "Super Supper." An awards ceremony and a Rangers in Action Demonstration will be at 9:30 a.m. Monday at Hurley Hill.

Strip maps to all of the event sites are available at the Ranger Training Brigade (RTB) information booth located at Camp Rogers. Spectator friendly events include the spot jump on Lee Drop Zone, the weapons firing at Malone 18, the 9 mm pistol firing on Brann Range, the ranger stakes events at Todd Field, the obstacle course at Camp Darby and the water confidence test and helocast events at Hurley Hill.

Concession stands will be available. All spectators are strongly encouraged to drink plenty of water because of the high temperatures at this time of year. Questions about the competition may be directed to the personnel at the RTB information booth at Camp Rogers.

For more information on the events, see the schedule on A-3.

Volunteers

Collective efforts save post $1.4 million

Staff Sgt. Lori Egan
Bayonet assistant editor

Have you ever wondered who coached Youth Services soccer, football and baseball games or wondered how Santa's Castle was able to supply toys for children at Christmas. Or did you wonder who was driving the golf cart at Martin Army Community Hospital that gives patients rides to and from the building to their cars or helped a family member learn more about the Army? The answer is quite clear ... Fort Benning volunteers.

Volunteers saved the post more than $1.4 million with their time and talents. During the Volunteer Recognition Ceremony April 22, Commanding General Maj. Gen Carl F. Ernst accepted the symbolic check and promptly gave it to his wife Linda.

"The impact of the volunteers was phenomenal," Ernst said. Volunteer hours were computed at minimum wage.

"During this time of tight resources, these volunteers have a sense of purpose, a belief in the individual to make things better," Ernst said.

"They are people who give of themselves unselfishly to the tricommunity. They are the true heroes and heroines," Ernst added.

•Brenda Barger was recognized for her work with both the Officers' Wives' Club (OWC) and the American Red Cross.

•Nayda Badille was recognized for her work as an Army Family Team Building instructor.

•Teresa Bliss was recognized for her work as the vice president and treasurer of the Stowers Elementary School Parent Teacher Organization and room mother.

•Paula Bundy was recognized for her work as 2nd Battalion, 58th Infantry Regiment, Infantry Training Brigade, family support group (FSG) leader.

•Krista Dickerson was recognized for her work at White Elementary School where she volunteers with the PTO, and offers her services in the classroom and the office.

•Rebekah C. Elder was recognized for her work as the FSG coordinator for the 1st Bn., 30th Inf. Regt., 3rd Brigade, 3rd Infantry Division (Mechanized).

•Margie Ferriter was recognized for her work as a certified facilitator and trainer for Leadership Seminar, a pre-command course for IOAC wives.

First impressions are not made the second time around

Karen A. Ellis
Bayonet editor

commentary

Time and again, I've heard the phrase: "you never get a second chance to make a first impression."

During the course of my travels to work as the editor of several military publications, always searching for a challenging, yet rewarding post newspaper to attach my name to, I've kept that phrase in my head to apply it to the image I've chosen to project on a new job and the impression I'd like a new location, job to present to me.

It seems that phrase must be a part of Fort Benning's unspoken motto. Before I even arrived here, personnel officials from the Civilian Personnel Advisory Center sent me a detailed welcome packet, which explained when and where I was to begin civilian in-processing procedures at Fort Benning.

The packet also included a detailed map of the post (much appreciated) and I was even given the name and telephone number of the person who would assist me when I got here. Imagine that, Fort Benning actually had someone waiting there to assist me.

Not to mention the words of welcome I received from members of the Public Affairs Office where I would be working. Their offers to assist me in relocating to Georgia were sent via the mail and through numerous telephone conversations.

The initial contacts I had with persons from the post truly left an impression on me as I journeyed here along Interstate 40 East from Oklahoma. I'm thinking: I am truly impressed.

When I arrived at Fort Benning, I entered the post from Interstate 185. As I cautiously entered the post, I was greeted by a banner which read: Fort Benning Georgia, Best Army Installation in the World!! While reading on, it said: Presidential Award for Quality-1997, I'm still driving onto post and I continue to read the banner: Army Communities of Excellence CINC Award 94,95,97. OK, cars are whizzing past me as I read the last line of the banner: Chief of Staff of the Army Award: 93, 94, 95, 96, 97 and 98.

No matter how busy, no matter how many telephones were ringing at or near the desks of some of the offices I had to visit, everyone took the time to welcome me to Fort Benning and to provide me with the information I needed to completely in-process. Personnel in the payroll office (whom I will always hold dear — especially on paydays) went out of their way to ensure my paycheck would continue from my old civilian payroll office to the new payroll agency.

From the military personnel who ensured my vehicle was registered properly, to the gracious medical personnel who signed me up for a new employee physical, they were all very helpful and considerate. I will always fondly think of these people throughout my time here. The impressions they left with me have made me reach the conclusion: stop here Karen, and do your best to give the impression you want the Bayonet newspaper to be the best Army installation paper in the world with the best staff possible in the world!

letter

Community members make a difference

I wanted to take this opportunity to send out some heartfelt "thank you's"... to the anonymous person who placed the call to The Bayonet about Evan's can drive for Mr. Johnson; Nicole Longstreath for the wonderful article she wrote; Staff Sgt. Lori Egan for putting us in touch with Mr. Johnson; Mr. Johnson for graciously accepting our gifts and most of all, to the wonderful community that supported the project.

The one comment we heard again and again was how badly everyone felt for Mr. Johnson when they read his letter to the editor regarding his missing groceries, and how glad they were to be able to assist in the can drive. If it were not for the generosity of the community, there would not have been any gifts to take to Mr. Johnson. Evan may have been the catalyst, but your donations made it a success!

I wish to clarify one point, we collected $70 in cash and checks, which were given to Mr. Johnson to spend at his discretion, as well as 20 bags of donated groceries. The trip to the commissary for dairy products and household goods was our family's donation. I did not feel we had the right to spend his money for him.

We met Mr. Johnson when we delivered the groceries to his home. He is a friendly man, with a warm smile. Mr. Johnson is far from "needy." He is a proud man and because of circumstances beyond his control, had a need. Mr. Johnson, a retired veteran, who has spent his life in service to his country, church and community (as a Fort Benning Scout Master and through the House of Mercy), was very touched by the donations and appreciative of them.

If you see a feature on the news or read an article that touches you, and you think, "Boy, I'd like to help," do it. Don't worry that your donation is too small or that the incident happened too far away or that you're a stranger — you count. Call the reporter of the article or news segment. Call the Red Cross or contact your church to see what is needed and how you can help. Just think if everyone gave $1 or donated one item ... wow! Those things add up. Even a card or letter matters to someone who has lost everything.

Thank you again to everyone who participated in the project! Evan and Lauren deeply appreciated the kind words, notes and gestures.

— Jo Johnson

Law day celebrates foundation of individual freedom, liberty

Whereas, the United States of America has been the citadel of individual liberty and a beacon of hope and opportunity for more than 200 years and to millions who have sought our shores, and

Whereas, the foundation of individual freedom and liberty is the body of law that governs us, and

Whereas, the Constitution of the United States of America and the Bill of Rights are the heart of that body of law, which guarantees us many freedoms — including, among others, freedom of religious belief, freedom to have and hold property inviolate, freedom of assembly, freedom of speech, freedom of press, freedom of petition and due process of the law, and

Whereas, this year marks the 41st annual nationwide observance of Law Day, and the Congress of the United States and the President by official proclamation have set aside May 1 as a special day for recognition of the place of law in American life,

Therefore, I as Commanding General of Fort Benning, do hereby designate May 1, 1998, as Law Day U.S.A. and call upon all Soldiers, civilian employees, military retirees and family members to commemorate the role of law in our lives.

— Maj. Gen. Carl F. Ernst
Commanding General

545-BOSS

Dial 545-BOSS is the commander's action line for Soldiers, family members and civilians to call when they have problems or complaints that can't be resolved elsewhere.

While it is not a substitute for the chain of command or for agencies established to provide assistance, the line offers another means of communication between Fort Benning's community and commanders.

The Bayonet features some of the calls that may benefit other members of the Fort Benning community.

Call: The caller was interested in knowing when there will be a Fort Benning swim team.

Directorate of Community Activities response:

The Services Division of DCA advertised a solicitation about a team and received only one response. The solicitation required the offeror to provide additional information such as insurance documents and a proposed schedule. They failed to provide this information. Youth Services and Non-appropriated Fund Contracting have taken every measure to work with them. The solicitation was canceled because the contractor was non-responsive. The solicitation will be readvertised in the upcoming weeks.

Call: The caller was disappointed to hear that the Main Post Arts and Crafts Shop will be closed and would like to see it remain open.

Directorate of Community Activities response:

The manager of the Arts and Craft Branch of DCA explained to the caller that DCA is in the process of soliciting for a contract to operate the Arts and Crafts Program. A contractor will be able to provide more programs that customers want such as ceramics, fine art, small crafts and framing.

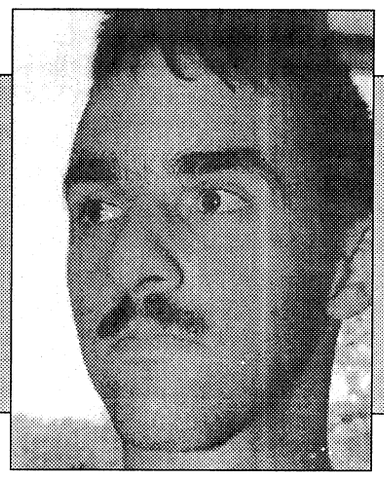
Call: The caller wanted to know if the post is going to get an orthodontist as promised.

Dental Activity response:



The Dental Activity action officer said a full-time active duty board certified orthodontist is scheduled to arrive in late August.

Post prepares for Military Appreciation Week

USAIC Public Affairs Office

A leaner, more Soldier friendly Military Appreciation Week (MAW) is in store.

The knock heads, twist arms, kick tail, Fit-to-Win unit competition is still intact with unit commanders urging their troops on for bragging rights about who's got the baddest unit on post.

The sporting events run the entire week, culminating with the Commanding General presenting the Fit-to-Win trophy during Friday's AUSA picnic.

The winners of the Mr. or Ms. AUSA will also be crowned. There will be two winners, representing large and small commands.

Both winners receive a ton of awards plus a trip to the AUSA National Convention in Washington this October.

The week begins May 11 with two very different events.

The early event is a softball game (loosely speaking) between the colonels and the sergeants major. The colonels, coached by Col. John Latimer, Fort Benning chief of staff, are tired of losing to the sergeants major and are recruiting lieutenant colonels to play on their team.

"I want someone who can do more than hobble," Latimer said during a secret meeting of officers.

That game is scheduled for 2 p.m. at Gowdy Field.

The Silver Wings, rangers, Infantry Center Band will be on hand with several thousand Soldiers when the Commanding General throws out the first pitch at the start of the RedStixx' Military Night Baseball game at 7 p.m. at Golden Park.

Unit representatives have $2 tickets. The paratroopers will jump in the game ball while the rangers demonstrate their crowd-pleasing skills.

Soldiers with plans to leave the military, their spouses and civilians are invited to the AUSA job fair at Infantry Hall on Thursday.

The day-long event is expected to draw more than 60 business and industrial representatives who know former soldiers make good employees.

Those attending the fair should dress appropriately and bring resumes if they are serious about finding a job.

Also that day golfers and floggers will be invited to try their luck at a myriad of prizes. Soldier teams tee off in the morning with corporate teams playing in the afternoon.

Planning to golf, sign up early. The slots fill fast.

And of course there's the Bass Tournament for anyone who thinks he can outwit a fish. Once again the 29th Infantry Regiment will sponsor this popular event.

Friday is the week's climax.

It begins with what was once called the "Burn the General Run."

But after last year, it could be more appropriately termed, "Burned by the General Run," as few runners were able to best Maj. Gen. Carl Ernst who takes the run seriously. As a consequence, AUSA ended up with a stack of "I burned the general" certificates and quickly ran out of the "I was burned by the general" certificates.

Awards ceremonies, crowning of Mr. or Ms. AUSA and a picnic culminate the morning with activities wrapping up around noontime.

IG office seeks three inspectors

The Inspector General's Office needs three Soldiers to join the Fort Benning Inspector General's Branch. These positions require three Soldiers with the MOS 92Y40-supply inspector, needed by Sept. 1, 63H40-automotive inspector, needed by Oct. 1, and CMF 1140-assistance, investigation NCO needed as soon as possible.

Soldiers eligible for the positions will have no more than 2 and one half years on station as of the availability date or possess assignment orders. If selected the Soldier will be assigned to the IG office for two years. For more information, call Maj. Bob Popowski at 545-3961 or 545-4780 no later than april 10.

Regulations require proper PT uniform

Normal PT hours are 6 to 7:30 a.m. Monday through Friday.

Due to training requirements, the Infantry Training Brigade conducts PT from 5:30 to 7 a.m. Monday through Saturday.

The 75th Ranger Regiment conducts PT from 6:30 to 8 a.m. Monday through Friday.

All Soldiers participating in physical training as a unit or as individuals during the time periods listed will wear the Army gray PT uniform with white athletic socks.

Soldiers who want to wear gray or black colored spandex shorts (above the knee length) under their PT shorts may do so. This is an individual decision and not a requirement.

Distinctive unit PT uniforms are authorized for wear by the 75th Ranger Regiment, Ranger Training Brigade, Physical Fitness School, School of the Americas, other service instructors, LNOs and allied students.

During cold weather conditions, the black knit cap and black leather gloves with green inserts will supplement the cold weather uniform. The decision to wear the black cap, leather gloves and green inserts rests with the unit commander.

Hats, sweatbands or other headgear other than the black cap are not authorized for wear.

Clinics to close for training

All clinics, except Love Dental Clinic, will be closed today for Commander's Call and mandatory training.

Patients with emergencies should seek treatment at Love Dental Clinic.

Only Love Dental Clinic will be open on the May 22 training holiday.

Red Cross offers HIV AIDS course

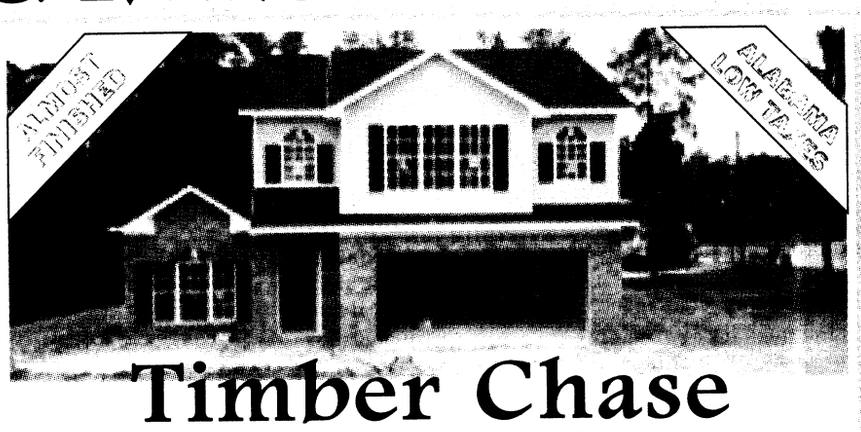
A new HIV-AIDS presentation will be offered from 10 a.m. to 11 a.m. May 23.

The class will be held at the Red Cross building and is free of charge to the Fort Benning community.

EO plans heritage program

The Equal Opportunity Office will sponsor an Asian and Pacific Islander American Heritage program at 11:30 a.m. May 5 at the Main NCO Club. The public is invited. This year's theme is "Trade and Cultural Exchange for the Betterment of the Community."

The guest speaker will be Dominador Manio, assistant principal of Spencer High School in Columbus.



The distinguished guest will be Bobby Peters, mayor of Columbus.

Tickets are $6.50 and can be purchased from your equal opportunity advisor or the Equal Opportunity Office, Building 2509.

The committee is also requesting recipes for Asian and Pacific Islander food dishes.

It could have been a scene from any war movie. Through the colored smoke, the "rangers" raced to the next tree to hide from the opposing force while they fired their weapons at the objective during a movement-under-fire operation.

The "rangers" however, were women.

Fifty wives of Soldiers from the 4th Ranger Training Battalion (RTB) and other female participants took part in the first Jane Wayne Day, a day set aside to demonstrate for the women what a day at the 4th RTB was like.

The event which was described as a "day of fun" by Lt. Col. Eric Hutchings, battalion commander, was held April 18 at the Hurley Hill demonstration area and Victory Pond.

According to Hutchings, "the event was designed to provide the wives with a distillation of the training ranger students would receive."

"The wives are very important to us," Hutchings said. "This is an opportunity to give them a safe and fun extract of what we do."

The participants were assigned to companies by Co. A commander, Capt. Darrin McMahon and then assigned a squad leader from the battalion.

To ensure each of the women made it through each event safely, each participant had a designated "ranger buddy," that helped them through anything they needed assistance with.

With a minimum amount of assistance, the wives tackled a 60- foot rapelling tower, a 40-foot log walk and rope drop, a 500-meter boat movement, a movement-under-direct-fire and a laser-tag type operation called military laser integrated system. All of these experiences culminated with the final event, which consisted of an anti-armor ambush using squad automatic weapons, M-60s and M-4s on a BTR-60 armored personnel carrier.

Going feet-first down the rapelling wall or falling 40 feet into Victory Pond didn't seem to phase the wives, however one thing did ... camoflauge paint.

"I have never worn camoflauge before, I hope I don't break out," said Patty Smith, wife of Staff Sgt. Scott Smith, Co. A, 4th RTB.

Many at the event liked the idea of spouses participating in Jane Wayne Day.

"I am glad I had a chance to see what the guys do everyday, like rapelling," said Michelle Moran, wife of Staff Sgt. Jim Moran, Co. A, 4th RTB.

"It's fun for these ladies to experience what we teach ranger students, like the movement under fire," McMahon said. "They know now that this is tough and they come out with a better understanding of what we do."

"I think it is a good thing for my wife to participate in an event like this," Moran said. "Now when I come home from a day of work, she knows what I have been through."

However, the event wasn't held just to show the wives how much their husbands endure everyday.

Moran said the event was to bring together the families from the battalion.

"We started Jane Wayne Day to let our wives know they are number one," Moran said.

New Soldiers complete bayonet assault course

Infantry Training Brigade

The cadre and Soldiers of Company D, 1st Battalion, 50th Infantry Regiment, Infantry Training Brigade, conducted the Rifle Bayonet Assault Course March 19.

The Rifle Bayonet Assault Course challenges Soldiers to fight close quarter combat with fixed bayonets on their M-16A2 rifles.

"Through the haze of smoke, explosions of artillery and grenade simulators and bursts from the M-60 machine guns, our Soldiers were exposed to realistic training," said Capt. Karl Strellner, company commander. "These Soldiers received a good dose of what an Infantry Soldier does today," said 1st Sgt. Marlin Wilcox, company first sergeant. He added, "no Soldier will leave this exercise until he correctly demonstrates all the movements associated with this course."

The course is designed for Soldiers to employ thrusts, head butts with the butt of the weapon, high crawls, low crawls and back crawls through a simulated combat environment.

"Every Soldier comes out of this course somewhat changed and closer to understanding the difficulties of being an Infantryman," said Staff Sgt. Robert Olsen, a drill sergeant assigned to the company.

For many of the family and friends in attendance, it was their first time seeing actual military training.

Several parents commented on the aggressiveness of their once passive sons.

Martha Cordid, who drove from Virginia to see her son, did not recognize him at first. Cordid lost more than 30 pounds since attending basic training. Cordid's mom said, "My son has grown into a man, since I last saw him."

"Basic trainees who come here overweight typically do lose a lot of weight," said Sgt. 1st Class George Roth, Cordid's platoon sergeant.

The course lasted for nearly two hours, then the Soldiers took showers. After showers, the Soldiers began preparing for their mid-cycle barracks inspection. Their reward for passing was a two and a half-day pass.

"These Soldiers deserve the break; however, they will be challenged with a long footmarch when they return," Wilcox said.

ITB drill sergeants join together to turn civilians into Infantrymen

2nd Lt. J.E. Escandon
Co. B, 1st Bn., 50th Inf. Regt., ITB

Walking around the Sand Hill area, a visitor will no doubt encounter several drill sergeants. Although they all wear the same hat, the patches and badges on their uniforms will tell the story of who they are and where they have been.

Sitting in a room full of drill sergeants someone may hear not only stories about their experiences as instructors, but stories about the training they have done and the places and units where they have served. Inevitably, all of this will lead to jokes about particular MOSs or units, as well as who has what qualifications — who's airborne qualified and who's not; who's a combat veteran, who has a Ranger Tab and who doesn't. But when the drill sergeants leave the room to begin training young Infantrymen, all of the good natured humor stays in the room.

There are a variety of types of Infantry that a Soldier can serve with — Airborne, Air Assault, Light, Ranger, and Mechanized. However, oftentimes, an Infantry Soldier will serve with only one or two types of Infantry during their careers. An Infantry NCO will have contact with NCOs from other types of Infantry during PLDC, BNCOC or ANCOC, but even that exposure will be very limited in scope.

In most cases, a squad leader serving in the 101st Airborne Division will not understand the dynamics of what a section leader in a Bradley Fighting Vehicle (BFV) equipped Infantry battalion does or how he trains. Although both men are Infantry NCOs, they lead very different careers and have different experiences in training and in war. However, there is one place in the Army where the NCOs from varying Infantry MOSs and Infantry units serve together during a two-year tour. That place is the Infantry Training Brigade (ITB).

While serving in the ITB a drill sergeant can expect to be assigned to a company that may have as many as 11 other drill sergeants. These drill sergeants have varying MOSs — 11B, 11C, 11H and 11M, come from a variety of units around the world and come from an even wider range of cultural, racial and ethnic backgrounds. They hold the rank of staff sergeant or sergeant first class and have been squad leaders, section sergeants, platoon sergeants, or even platoon leaders. The one aspect they have in common is they are all graduates of the Drill Sergeant School and have accepted the responsibility of turning civilians into Infantrymen.

During their two-year tour each drill sergeant may train as many as 400 Soldiers. Upon graduation, the instructors can take pride in the fact that these Soldiers will be among the best Infantrymen in the world.

While drill sergeants can take pride in this contribution when they return to line units, they may also return with a greater appreciation for their fellow Infantry NCOs.

Two such sergeants who have already gained this experience are Sgt. 1st Class Daniel Bullock and Sgt. 1st Class Jason Shipley. Bullock and Shipley are serving in Company B, 1st Battalion, 50th Infantry Regiment as senior drill sergeants. While they perform the same duties to accomplish their mission, they come from very different backgrounds.

Shipley, who has been on the trail for almost two years, is an 11M and has been both a platoon sergeant and platoon leader at Fort Riley, Kan. Shipley has spent weeks at the National Training Center, Fort Irwin, Calif. and the Combat Maneuver Training Center, Hohenfels, Germany, training in mechanized warfare operations. He put that experience to use during Operation Desert Storm while serving as a dismounted squad leader in the 3rd Armored Division. As an 11M, Shipley is trained to use the BFV to fight at long ranges and to maneuver over long distances in short periods of time.

Bullock, who has been a drill sergeant for a little more than six months, is an 11B. His Infantry experience has been much different than Shipley's.

Having served in the 7th Infantry Division, Fort Ord, Calif., the 5th Ranger Training Battalion, Dahlonega, Ga., and the 101st Airborne Division, Pathfinder Detachment, Fort Campbell, Ky., Bullock has walked countless miles carrying his equipment on his back, while training to conduct raids, ambushes and other small unit patrolling missions. Like Shipley, he is a combat veteran, having served with the 9th Infantry Regiment, Fort Lewis, Wash., during Operation Just Cause in Panama.

"Both drill sergeants have proved themselves to be instrumental leaders and trainers while assigned to the ITB and have gained a reputation for excellence from their superiors, subordinates and peers," said Capt. Keith Rautter, company commander. One of their most notable contributions to the Infantry has been the dispelling of myths which permeate the Infantry community, Rautter said. As most Infantrymen know, the four Infantry MOSs have stereotypes and stigmas attached to them, whether it be referring to 11Ms as "Tankers" or viewing rangers as "all brawn, no brains." Certainly, there is much bantering among drill sergeants about each other's MOSs and former units. However, Shipley and Bullock have learned these stereotypes are just that — stereotypes. Assignment to the ITB has brought them together in order to teach the basic skills all Infantrymen must learn, in that process they have gained mutual respect for one another, as well as the skills that each man possesses regardless of MOS or unit, Rautter said.

"I used to think of 11Ms as less aggressive, less physical and underestimated their leadership abilities," Bullock said, a former ranger instructor. After working with Shipley, Bullock said he realized this is not the case. He said Shipley has taught him numerous leadership and problem solving techniques, as well as showing him the "ins and outs" of training new Soldiers.

Throughout his career, Shipley said he often viewed light Infantrymen as having a less demanding job than 11Ms.

After all, "11Bs don't have to control as many maneuver elements or have an MOS that requires as much technical or mechanical expertise as 11Ms must have." Shipley said he now has a greater appreciation for the light Infantry NCO. He has come to admire Bullock's knowledge of such things as mountaineering and field craft, and he believes Bullock is "one of the most professional NCOs that he knows."

The OSUT environment has fused these two Soldiers into a team.

As the only E-7s in the company, they set the example for all of the other drill sergeants and the trainees, Rautter said. Working together to solve everyday problems, they have ensured a professional environment which fosters the development of young Infantrymen.

At the same time, they have brought the Infantry community closer together.

profile in excellence

Name: Staff Sgt. Paul R. Johnson
Award or recognition: Army Achievement Medal
Unit: 5th Ranger Training Battalion
Job Title: Ranger Instructor
Years on the job: Three years

What were your reasons for joining the Army?
My father was in the military. I grew up in the cub scouts, webelos and boy scouts. I spent most of my days outdoors and the military seemed like the next logical step. Green is still my favorite color.

Define your work ethic.
Elements that train hard together, stay together. I believe in realistic hard training. When people suffer together at any level, it draws them closer. The tighter they become the smoother they will work together.

What person has most influenced your military career?
Sgt. Frank D. Winters was my first team leader. He shaped and molded me into a young ranger. He was killed in a helicopter accident in 1987.

If you were supervisor for a day, what improvements would you make?
I would institute the supervisor for a day program. Subordinates would trade places with the leadership and vice versa. I would take a hard look at the enlisted promotions.

Describe a memorable moment in your career.
On Dec. 20, 1989 at 1 a.m., everything I trained for was testable, and I felt good, confident of my fellow rangers. This is a confident feeling that all Soldiers should have in combat.

What are your future career plans?
To continue to provide Soldiers with the necessary tools and skills to survive in combat.

What others have to say about you:
Staff Sgt. Johnson is extremely technical and tactically proficient. He has a sincere dedication to duty. You can always count on him to accomplish the mission. He always gives 110 percent and then some. He consistently goes the extra mile when training Soldiers.

— Sgt. 1st Class Nick Bielich

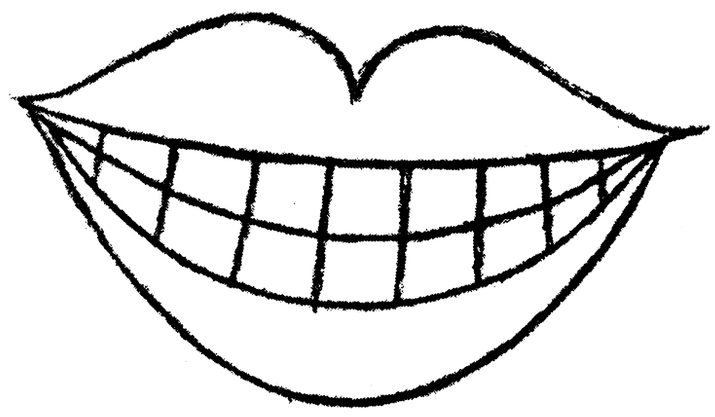
Scholarship provides opportunities abroad

U.S. Army Personnel Command

Annually, the U.S. Total Army Personnel Command (PERSCOM) Olmsted Scholarship Selection Board convenes to select seven of the Army's top captains to present to the Olmsted Scholarship Foundation as candidates to the Olmsted Scholarship Program. The PERSCOM board will convene Jan. 13, 1999 and the Olmsted Foundation Board will make the final selection of three scholars in April 1999. Applicants will be notified as soon as each of the board results are released.

The Olmsted Scholarship Program promotes the idea of military officers immersing themselves in a foreign culture while the officer studies a foreign language in a field of his or her choice. The scholar is expected to become familiar with the customs and people of the host nation. They are expected to travel extensively and acquire a familiarity with the host country scholars have formed friendships with natives of the host country.



After the officer has completed his or her two years at the foreign university, he or she may be afforded the opportunity to attend the Command and Staff College, if selected, and return to a troop assignment for field grade qualification.

Nominees must meet the following eligibility criteria: be regular Army; have the potential for future military service; have a minimum of three-active federal commissioned service years, but not more than 11 by April, 1999; have a minimum graduate record examination score of 500 verbal and 500 quantitative; have a minimum undergraduate grade point average of 3.0; meet Army height and weight requirements; branch qualified at captain level; have a minimum defense language aptitude battery score of 85; must not be competing for any other Army sponsored program, fellowship or scholarship; must not be serving or owe a utilization assignment or will complete full utilization assignment not later than May 1999; must be able to complete full scholarship tenure; and hold the rank of captain.

Army captains interested in an Olmsted scholarship must request and receive permission to compete from PERSCOM. Requests to compete must be in letter format and endorsed by the first field supervisor. Submit request to compete to own career branch, PERSCOM.

General officers are requested to strongly encourage their top captains to apply for this most prestigious scholarship and experience.

Earth Day

Students honor earth with poetry readings

Col. Ron Green helps five poetry contest winners plant a Live Oak tree at White Elementary April 23.

Students from White Elementary School were honored April 23 at an Earth Day celebration recognizing poems the children wrote for a poetry contest about trees.

While proud parents and classmates looked on, the children each read their poems about the benefits of trees to the crowd.

"Trees give us pencils ... and books for school," said second-grader Laura Pignato, daughter of Anna and Maj. Carlos Pignato, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment.

According to third-grader Emilio Rodriguez, son of Annette and Capt. Fernando Rodriguez, Co. B, U.S. Army School of the Americas, trees are essential for survival.

"We take care (of the trees), they give us air," Rodriguez said.

Another winner, fourth-grader Jerod Marks, son of Kimbra and Spc. Randall Marks, Co. B, 203rd Forward Support Bn, 3rd Brigade, 3rd Infantry Division (Mechanized), wrote about his opinion of the mistreatment of trees by humans.

Marks began his poem with a question, "Trees give us gifts, but what do we give them?"

First-grader Kevin Taylor, son of Phyllis and Lt. Col. Wendell Taylor, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 36th Engineer Group (Combat), shared the same frustration.

"Leave the trees alone," Taylor said in his poem.

Fifth-grader Shannon Tidwell, daughter of Sheila and Capt. Tony Tidwell, 690th Medical Company (Ground Ambulance), 36th Engineer Group (Combat), wrapped up the readings by voicing her opinion on the planting of trees.

"Planting a tree always pays," Tidwell said.

"In a complex society, we have to be aware of our natural resources," said Dr. Judy Archer, principal.

"Celebrating Earth Day is an important and intregal part of our education program."

Before addressing the crowd, Col. Ron Green, garrison commander, assisted the Holocaust survivor visits Faith, recounts tragic past

Pvt. 2 Amy L. Nyland
Bayonet staff writer

> "People need to know that the Holocaust was a real event. There are a lot of people who still say it didn't happen."
> — Andre Kessler
> Speakers Bureau for Children of Holocaust Survivors chairman

The acts were so unspeakable they have been branded into the pages of history forever. A moment in time when the value of human life seemed nonexistent and an immense hatred destroyed 11 million people.

The Holocaust may undoubtedly go down in history as one of mankind's cruelest events. It's effects will most likely last forever, marked by the millions who were never given the chance at life and the survivors who are living to tell about it.

Students at Faith Middle School were able to take a trip in time April 24, when guest speaker Andre Kessler, a child of a Holocaust survivor, visited the school and spoke about his own personal tragedy.

Kessler, born in Bucharest, Romania, recalls his first memories of World War II and the fear and isolation he felt.

In 1942, Kessler's father was arrested and taken to a labor camp in Romania, leaving him and his mother to fend for themselves and ultimately find a way to survive.

Kessler and his mother survived by hiding out for five years in a closed off apartment with blackened windows and sheets shoved under the door to block sound.

A man who Kessler described as a righteous gentile and credits his life to, stood guard outside the apartment door for 16 months.

Even though Kessler remembers not being able to talk to anyone and almost never having enough to eat, he refers to him and his mother as the fortunate ones.

Kessler spoke about the murder of millions of people and gave detailed descriptions of the horrors they had to endure while in concentration camps.

He also talked about losing 80 percent of his family to the holocaust.

"I really had no idea what 80 percent of my family was," Kessler said. "A few years ago when my mother was visiting, we were watching a program and someone spoke of losing 70 percent of their family. I noticed my mom had stopped watching and I asked her what she was doing. She said she was counting and that she could only remember 120 members of our family that had been killed. That is when I fully understood what 80 percent represented," he said.

Kessler spoke about his life after the war was over and his father's return in 1945. He recalled the events that brought him to America and the hardships.

He also gave his reasons for traveling to talk to people about a past that played such a tragic role in his life.

"The question I get asked the most is 'Andre, why do you take time out of your schedule to speak to different schools and churches?'" he said. "The answer is very simple. Somebody a lot smarter than me once said, 'if we forget history we are doomed to repeat it.'"

Kessler said he finds it extremely important to reach children and educate them about the Holocaust and it's effects.

"We are all born without hatred," Kessler said. "When we come into this world, we are color blind. As we grow older we are taught hatred and begin to notice the differences. It is very important to get it across to kids that we are all the same."

"If I can change one child's mind after listening to me speak about not judging someone else, then I have accomplished something," he said.

Kessler mentioned the fact that one in five Americans isn't sure the Holocaust really happened.

"People need to know that the Holocaust was a real event," Kessler said. "There are a lot of people who still say it didn't happen. Unfortunately, we are losing our survivors. In 20 years, there may only be one living eyewitness to the Holocaust. It is up to the children to remember and tell the stories and say 'Oh, yes, there was such a thing.'"

Kessler noted that during a survey, 80 percent of people picked the Holocaust as one of history's most important lessons.

"Most people know the Holocaust just isn't about what the Nazi's did to Jews, but about what some humans did to other humans," Kessler said. "It's about the loss of humanity."

CG praises Fort Benning schools

Soldiers who are parents of Fort Benning students gathered April 24 at Loyd Elementary for the annual "A Soldier's Breakfast" to hear Commanding General Maj. Gen. Carl F. Ernst speak on the issue of being a parent while in the Army.

Ernst began his speech by praising the Fort Benning school system.

"We have a marvelous education system and our test scores are above the national average," Ernst said.

Ernst attributed the high test scores to the involvement of the parents at Fort Benning and said the event was symbolic of what should be happening all over the country.

"If we had events like this in all schools (across the U.S.), we would see fewer headlines about the breakdown of families," Ernst said.

As a parent, Ernst said he has learned the importance of becoming involved in a child's education.

"The role of the parent, the school and the child is a partnership," Ernst said. "When parents become more active in your children's education, children begin to see the importance of education."

One parent at the breakfast said he and his child are involved with the school.

"My son had me up at the crack of dawn saying, 'Get up, Dad,'" said Staff Sgt. Laumel Lloyd, Company A, 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment. "He was excited about me coming to this."

Ernst stressed parental responsibility throughout his speech.

"The education of the child should be the mission and the responsibility of the parents," Ernst said. "The school system can't do it alone, they need the support of the parents."

Ernst sympathized with the parents, assuring them he dealt with the same issues while raising his children.

"Military duties such as field time and being deployed keeps (the Soldiers) busy," Ernst said. "It is difficult to make time to be involved in the school."

To stay involved with a child's activities, Ernst suggested asking children about their school day on a regular basis.

Stay involved, Ernst said, and not just when the school holds a function especially for the parents, but everyday.

"Anytime you have an opportunity to support teachers and the school system, take advantage of that," Ernst said.

Ernst also emphasized the idea that staying involved will eventually pay off for parents.

"You have to show your child you are interested, active and involved because if you do, you will be able to look back and say, 'My child had a good education because I was involved and I knew the school was doing a good job,'" Ernst said.

Lloyd shared Ernst's ideas on being involved

"I think it is important to be involved because I always know what is going on with my son at school," Lloyd said.

Teachers challenge students in writing contest

First and third-grade students from Dexter Elementary School were challenged by their teachers in a writing contest to have their works published in a nationally recognized anthology of poetry.

The result was eight poems being chosen to be published in the Anthology of Poetry by Young Americans.

In an effort to foster creativity in their students, first-grade teacher Cynthia Works and third-grade teacher Joyce Flatt encouraged their students to write poetry along with a poetry unit they were studying at the time.

"Getting their poetry published gives them confidence," Works said. It helps them with individual thinking because they realize their poems are their own," Works said.

Works said she began a curriculum of poetry in response to the Terra Nova standardized test in which students were required to use critical thinking skills to give original answers.

"I tried to introduce the students to all kinds of poems to show them they don't always have to rhyme and they don't have to write like their classmates," Works said. "By exposing them to different types of poetry and literature, it gets them thinking about different poetry."

Works also believes that encouraging children to write poetry fosters a sense of individuality."

So many kids want to follow the crowd and I tell them, 'Go out on your own,'" Works said. "I try to teach my students to keep in mind that while I may view things one way, another student may see it another way but that doesn't make any way wrong."

Individual thinking and communication are also things that the students learned, Flatt said.

"Writing poetry helps them realize just the right word to get a

Cancer: Prevention and Detection

Dr. Virginia Yates
Martin Army Community Hospital

If all trends continue, more than one million people in the United States will be diagnosed with cancer this year. More than half a million people this year will die of the disease.

Some studies suggest up to one third of these deaths could be avoided by early detection. Other studies show that some cancers may be preventable with changes in lifestyle. This means persons can take responsibility for their own prevention and survival from cancer.

Prevention

While there is overwhelming evidence demonstrating the relationship between cancer and smoking, many people continue to smoke.

Although excessive sun exposure causes some varieties of skin cancers, many people continue to intentionally seek excessive and unprotected sun exposure.

Diet and nutrition research shows that diets low in fat and high in fiber may prevent some cancers of the digestive system. Low fat diets may decrease the risk for developing breast cancer. The National Cancer Institute encourages Americans to eat five or more servings of vegetables and fruit because numerous studies associate a decreased risk of prostate, bladder, esophagus and stomach cancer from these diet additions.

Chemicals that are being studied for their ability to reduce cancers include non-steroidal anti-inflammatory drugs (NSAIDS), calcium compounds and retinoids (a vitamin A relative).

Drugs such as aspirin and ibuprofen are being looked at alone and in conjunction with other drugs for the ability to prevent some colon cancers.

Some forms of calcium are being studied for their ability to prevent new colon cancer in people with polyps and previous colon cancers.

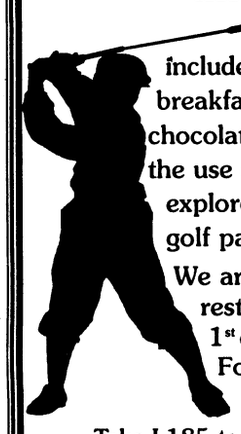
Retinoids are being studied for the ability to prevent skin, head and neck, cervical and lung cancers.

Recently studies about the drugs tamoxifen and finasteride have made news. Tamoxifen, an anti-estrogen, may prevent breast cancer in some high risk women. Finasteride, a drug used to shrink benign prostatic hypertrophy (BPH), is being studied for ability to prevent prostate cancer. Finasteride prevents testosterone from being converted to the hormone that stimulates prostate cancer.

Detection and screening

The American Cancer Society predicts the number of new cases of cancer for Americans in 1998 will be as shown in the table provided. Basal and squamous cell skin cancers are extremely common but are not included. The other most common types of cancers are shown.

A large study called the Prostate, Lung, Colorectal and Ovarian Cancer Screening (PLCO) Trial is being done on 148,000 men and women in the United States to see if certain tests will reduce the number of deaths from these cancers. The study will determine if detecting cancer earlier will prolong the patient's life.



Learn the methods to examine yourself and family members for some types of cancers. The skin is one area where family members are often the first to recognize a mole, sore or freckle that is unusual or changing as a cancer. People are encouraged to learn from their doctor how to palpate their own breasts and testicles for cancer. Learn to recognize a change in the bowel movement to bloody dark or black in color as a possible indicator of cancer.

Some cancers are tested every year through a physical exam. Others are tested less often or only after a certain age.

Next week, recommendations for cancer screening and other important health maintenance practices will be reviewed.

Know signs of heart disease

Capt. Kareece Larry
Martin Army Community Hospital

Heart disease is the number one cause of death in the U.S. of both men and women, but the symptoms are not always the same for the sexes. That is why women must be persistent and follow up on any factor that may put them at a greater risk for heart disease.

Some of the more common heart conditions are high blood pressure, rheumatic heart disease, congestive heart failure, congenital heart disease and atherosclerosis, which could lead to a stroke, angina pectoris (chest pain) or heart attack.

According to the American Heart Association, some of the common warning signals of a heart attack are:

•heavy, squeezing pain in the center of the chest, which lasts for several minutes. Pain may extend to the arm, shoulder, neck or jaw.
•anxiety
•sweating
•nausea, vomiting
•shortness of breath
•dizziness
•fainting

As mentioned earlier, women's symptoms differ from those of men. A Gallup poll conducted by a Washington, D.C., hospital center found that 64 percent of physicians are not even aware of the different symptoms in men and women. The following is a summary of these symptoms that all should be aware of.

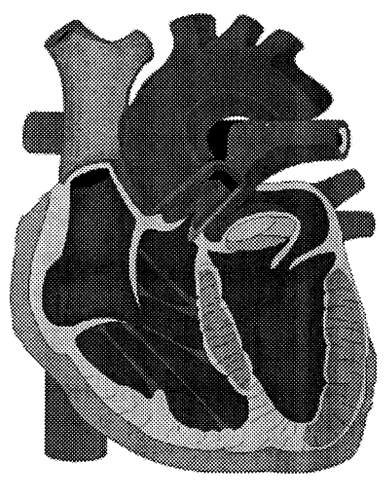
Women's symptoms

• Tightness or pressure in the chest may be considered mild compared to men's symptoms. These symptoms may radiate down left arm

• Fatigue can be the same as or more extreme than most fatigue

• Feeling light-headed and possibly fainting

• Swelling of legs and ankles



• Frequent shortness of breath, may wake at night and be unable to catch breath

Men's symptoms

• Crushing chest pain that often radiates to the neck and jaw, may spread across the shoulder and down arm

• Sweating without exertion, or more sweating than usual

• Nausea without reason

• Rapid heartbeat that comes on suddenly

Women may not have these symptoms but have risk factors such as hypertension, obesity, high cholesterol, diabetes, a smoking habit or sedentary lifestyle and should be tested appropriately.

In addition to a stress test, an echocardiogram should be ordered.

There are six ways to help prevent heart disease:

•control high blood pressure
•control diabetes
•exercise regularly
•eat a healthy diet
•don't smoke
•reduce stress.

63rd Engineer Company FSG held Easter Party

1st Lt. Tyamona R. Penister
63rd Engineer Company (CSE)

The 63rd Engineer Company (CSE), Family Support Group hosted an easter party April 11.

The festival began with a lunch of hot-dogs, chips, soda and dessert provided by the family support group. It then moved into its highlight; a picture session with the Easter Bunny, Liegh-Anna Lavoie.

After all the children received a photograph, the Easter Bunny separated them into different age groups and led them outside to participate in an Easter egg hunt around the barracks grounds.

Those children who found the most eggs for their age group received a prize of a bottle of bubbles or an activity coloring book. Also, a prize was awarded to any child who found a special egg identified by its shinier texture. All who participated in the Easter egg hunt received a medallion for their achievements. Once Easter baskets were full and the Easter Bunny had no more eggs to hide, the party came to a close.

Officials remind parents not to shake babies

Georgia Department of Human Resources

One hundred thousand plastic door hangers for infants' rooms will go to Georgia parents this year to remind them never to shake a baby. The hangers are a gift from the Georgia Department of Human Resources Division of Family and Children Services (DFCS) as part of the ongoing "Parent'Hood" child abuse prevention campaign.

The hanger distribution began in April, which Governor Miller proclaimed Child Abuse Prevention Month in Georgia. Shaken Baby Syndrome (SBS) is the focus of this year's public awareness efforts.

An estimated 10-12 percent of the 2,000 children who die each year nationwide from abuse and neglect are victims of SBS and more than 18,000 suffer permanent disability, according to David Hellwig, director of DFCS Child Protective Services Unit.

"A lot of people don't realize the terrible harm caused by violently shaking a baby," he said. "A baby's incessant crying can enrage a caretaker. The hangers advise coping with crying by checking to see if the baby is hungry or has a fever, then rocking, holding or taking him or her for a car ride. If nothing is effective, it's best for the caretaker to put the child in the crib and take some time to calm down."

The majority of SBS victims are under age one, and an estimated 79 percent of the perpetrators are men, either fathers or boyfriends of the mother.

"Our recent public awareness efforts, such as "Parent'Hood — It's a Man's Thing, Too" encourage men to learn how to care for their children, and Shaken Baby Syndrome messages fit right in," Hellwig said.

The hangers will be distributed by county DFCS offices, First Steps programs, Children 1st and Community Action Agencies.

Justice and religion draw line in society

Capt. George R. Smawley
1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment

Law Day is the time each year when we are asked to take a moment and consider the way in which the law affects us as individuals and as a society. Ultimately, the issue comes down to justice: how we manage relationships between and among individuals and between individuals and their government.

reflections

As people of faith, we ought to consider the notion of justice in its practical terms and the authority that directs us to do what is right everyday, for ourselves and for others.

The most obvious directive is the one that requires us to obey the law.

Paul writes that only wrongdoers need fear the authorities and those who do good will receive praise for the same (Romans 13:2-3) and he sets out principles for Christian living consistent with the law of society (Romans 12:1-15:3).

The need to enforce society's standards of decency and order are echoed in the writings of Peter, who wrote of the need to punish evildoers and praise those who do good (I Peter 2:14). Nowhere is this more the case than in a democracy. This is where we are blessed with a system that is, by and large, highly responsive to the needs and desires of the community.

At a personal level, Moses tells us "not to pervert justice or show partiality and not to accept bribes for such blinds the eyes of the wise and twists the words of the righteous ... follow what is altogether just, that you may live and inherit the land which the Lord your God is giving you," (Deut. 16:1-9:20).

From this we know that justice must be displayed equally, without regard to social class, race, sex or religion.

Benjamin Franklin was once quoted as saying that "without justice, courage is weak." Those of us in the military have an unique understanding of courage, especially moral courage and know it is critical to our success as leaders. It is part of everything we do and when we fail to uphold the standards, the courage to do anything else is naturally and irrevocably compromised.

But the application of justice is never easy. If we presume that God's word is truth and the principle of justice is non-negotiable, how do we mark the application of justice where the standards of justice seem mired in a haze of contradictions. How do we know that what we are doing is right?

Is an outstanding Soldier who commits adultery with another Soldier's wife still a good Soldier, still a leader? Is a woman who steals from the government less culpable than one who steals from a neighbor? Does an officer who regularly skips out of work early have the moral authority to take action against a private who misses a formation?

Does justice demand that we confront those who commit wrongful acts, or is it enough that we, in our own minds, recognize the act for what it is and leave it to someone else to resolve?

How far are we able to look the other way or accept compromise in matters of law, ethics and morality, even when it may appear politically prudent to do so?

For people of faith, this is especially difficult because it is nearly impossible to abdicate the values that underlie everything we do and everything we are from the notion of doing what is right morally, ethically and in accordance with the law that orders and preserves us as a society and a country.

Religious teaching asserts that we must never be afraid to act and to affirm ourselves in the things we know are right.

We should remember that and remind ourselves that above all, justice depends upon the faithful adherence to the values that motivate our lives and the application of those values in our relationships, leadership and treatment of others.

Directorate of Public Works Information Corner

Directorate of Public Works

This week's article provides information on a schedule change for the Supply and Equipment Division during the annual inventory, the recently completed an Environmental Compliance Assessment System Review and the Directorate of Public Works Organizational Day activities on May 15.

Supply and Equipment to close for inventory

The DPW Supply and Equipment Division will close for inventory May 15-17. The Supply Division will reopen for business at 10 a.m. May 18.

For more information or emergency issues during this period, contact Bina Dale at 545-1114.

Officials complete ECAS review

Representatives of Headquarters, Training and Doctrine Command, and Center for Health Promotion and Preventive Medicine (CHPPM) recently completed the inspection phase of an Environmental Compliance Assessment System (ECAS) for Fort Benning.

The ECAS is a comprehensive audit program designed to look at all aspects of the Environmental Management Program for Army military installations.

DPW spent several weeks in preparation for this inspection. Units and activities throughout the installation were notified of the pending inspection and pre-inspections were completed.

The previous ECAS in 1994 resulted in 257 total findings. The results of this ECAS revealed a significant improvement in environmental management throughout the installation with a total of 117 findings, 12 of which were positive.

These improvements were noted at the unit and activity level. During the daily informal out briefs and the actual inspections, many of the inspectors made positive comments about the environmental program management throughout the installation. All units and activities are encouraged to keep up the good work and strive to maintain their quality environmental programs.

The areas with the most findings were a result of the continuing reduction in both manpower and financial areas. None of the findings indicated a systematic program management problem.

DPW is now in the process of reviewing the draft ECAS findings to determine corrective actions and resource requirements. The comments will be provided to CHPPM, in order to issue the final report.

From the final report, DPW will develop an Environmental Corrective Action Plan, which is submitted to TRADOC for approval to implement the recommendation.

DPW plans Organization Day May 15

DPW is conducting its Organizational Day activities from noon to 4 p.m. May 15. Staffing levels will be minimal to allow as many DPW employees as possible to participate in the activities. The DPW Work Reception Section and DPW duty officer will coordinate all services and emergency responses.

The work section phone number is 545-2135 and the duty officer phone number is 545-7264.

Comments and questions

For questions or topics that you would like to be addressed in the DPW "Information Corner," contact Glenn Todd, DPW customer relations specialist, at 545-2117, or write to the Directorate of Public Works, Building 6, Room 409, ATTN: ATZB-PWM (Glenn Todd), Fort Benning, GA 31905.

Poetry: Students celebrate Earth Day the children in planting a Live Oak tree outside the school.

"Earth Day helps us recognize the responsibility we have to care for our planet," Green said. "Children are the future of our nation."

The garrison commander also said learning responsibility for the environment now could be beneficial for children later in life.

"They are learning individual responsibility now for things around them like the environment," Green said.

Green said children who participate in Earth-conscious events become more interested in helping the environment.

"With their continued interest and involvement, our environment will continue to flourish, much like the tree we planted today," he said.

thought across," Flatt said.

In the end, Works thinks the students enjoyed the entire experience.

"I think they learned to like writing, which is good because they will need writing skills all through school and for the rest of their life," Works said.

"Because of this assignment, I learned to write better," said first-grader Christine Green, daughter of Andria and Warrant Officer Constatine Green, Detachment D, 24th Personnel Support Battalion, 3rd Brigade, 3rd Infantry Division (Mechanized).

Green has been writing for quite a while, she said, ever since she expressed a desire to write and asked her parents to buy her a notebook to write her poetry and short stories in.

After seeing the movie Harriet the Spy, which is about a sleuthing youngster, Green was inspired to write her poem about nosiness entitled Your Nose.

Another first-grader whose works were chosen to be published in the anthology, Sarah Prewoznik, daughter of Sheri and Chief Warrant Officer 4 Timothy Prewoznik, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment, said that she thought it would be fun to enter the contest.

"I was hoping I would win," Prewoznik said.

Prewoznik was inspired to writer her poem called Stage Fright after auditioning for an after-school theater group called the "Broadway Eagles."

Having their poetry published is something that Flatt thinks is important at this age.

"Having their poetry published makes them feel like they are successful," Flatt said, "They believe people find value in what they have written."

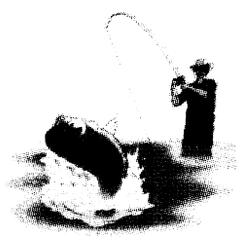
Gun club schedules night match — The Fort Benning Rifle and Pistol Club will conduct a night pistol match at 7 p.m. Saturday at English Range.

The match will consist of a course of fire shot once during daylight, once at night with ambient light only and once at night with a flashlight.

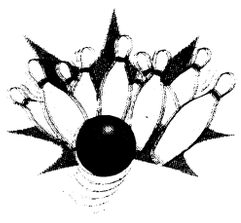
The preregistration fee is $15 and $18 the day of the match. All proceeds from the match will benefit the American Red Cross for Alabama disaster relief.



In addition to the pistol match, the tactical rifle match that was scheduled for April 19 has been rescheduled for 1 p.m. Sunday at English Range. The match had been postponed due to inclement weather.

For more information, call Jim Graham at 689-3371.

Team needs runners — Runners who wish to represent Fort Benning at the annual Army 10-miler Oct. 11 in Washington D.C. should mark their calendars for May 15. A preliminary qualifier for the team will be held to coincide with the "Burn the General" run. Preliminary qualifiers will train with the U.S. Army Physical Fitness School. A definitive qualifying race will be held approximately six weeks before the Army 10-miler to determine the team of five men and five women who will represent Fort Benning.



For more information and to pre-register, call Capt. Danny McMillian at 545-6386 or Maj. Kathy Towers at 545-4317.

AUSA sponsors fishing tournament — The Association of the U.S. Army is sponsoring an open Bass tournament May 14 at Uchee Creek. This is an amateur tournament and is open to military and civilian personnel.

Post prepares for Military Appreciation Week

Spc. Michelle J. Davis
Bayonet staff writer

Military Appreciation Week is scheduled for May 11-15.

More than 15 separate events are scheduled during the weeks' activities including anything from volleyball to bowling.

Each event falls under a specific cup for which the winners in each event will collect a certain amount of points.

The three cups include:
* Commander's Trophy,
 "Follow Me" Cup and
 Benning Team Cup.

The Columbus RedStixx will sponsor a Military Appreciation Game May 11. Pre-game activities will begin at 6 p.m. and the game against the Capital City Bombers will follow at 7:15 p.m. Tickets will be sold at discounted prices for military members and their families.

The Military Appreciation Week mini-picnic is scheduled for 8:30 a.m. to noon at York Field May 15 and the awards ceremony is set for 10:30 a.m. on York Field.

Soldiers named to World Team

USAMU Public Affairs Office

More than a dozen Soldiers of the U. S. Army Marksmanship Unit have been named to the U.S. World Championship Shooting Team.

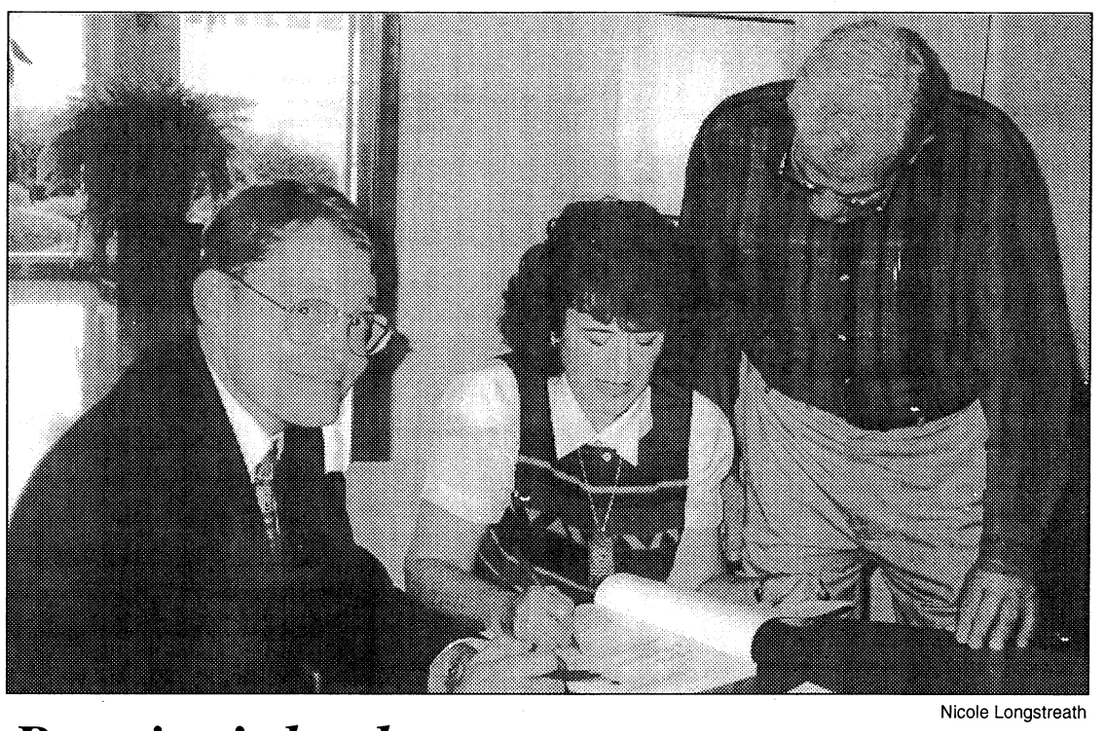
The USAMU hosted the World Championship Team Selection Matches April 15-25, which selected the U.S. team to compete at the 1998 World Shooting Championship to be held in Barcelona, Spain, in July.

International pistol shooter Daryl L. Szarenski won the Gold Medal in the Men's Free Pistol Match and secured a spot on the World Championship U.S. Pistol Team. Shooters who made the Men's Junior Pistol Team were Terry S. Bradley, who won Gold Medals in the Junior Air, Sport and Rapid Fire Pistol matches, and Travis A. Jorgenson, who took the Silver Medal in the Junior Free Pistol Match. Renee D. Cunningham received the Bronze Medal in the Junior Women's Sport Pistol Match and made the Junior Women's Team.

Running target shooters Lance D. Dement, who took first place in the 10-meter Mixed Match, and Armando R. Ayala, who won the 10-Meter 30+30 Match, were named to the U.S. Running Target World Championship Team.

International rifle shooter Glenn A. Dubis, who won Gold Medals in the Air Rifle and Smallbore Prone matches was selected to the team. Kenneth A. Johnson, who won the Gold Medal in the men's Three-Position Rifle Match and the Silver Medal in the Air Rifle Match, and Thomas A. Tamas, who received Silver Medals in the Smallbore Prone and Men's Three-Position Rifle matches, were also named to the team. Jason A. Parker, who won the Bronze Medal in the Men's Three-Position Rifle Match, and Lance S. Hopper, who received the Silver Medal in the Men's 300-Meter Prone Match and finished fourth in the Smallbore Prone Match, made the team. Wanda R. Jewell, an Army-reserve officer and USAMU Support Officer, took the Silver Medal in the Women's 3x20 Match and was named to the team.

James T. Graves and Theresa E. DeWitt also made the U.S. Trap Team, while Bret E. Erickson and David R. Alcoriza made the U.S. Double Trap team. Alcoriza took the Gold and Erickson the Silver in the Double Trap Match. Graves also took the Gold Medal in Skeet and was named to the Skeet Team. Shawn C. Dulohery, who won the Bronze Medal in Skeet, was also named to the Skeet Team.



More than 250 shooters, including 22 Olympians and a Medal of Honor winner, competed in the four Olympic shooting disciplines —International Pistol, International Rifle, Running Target and Shotgun.

Post picks up ACOE award

Sgt. 1st Class Larry Lane
USAIC Public Affairs NCOIC

The Fort Benning community was once again awarded for its outstanding quality, receiving the Army Chief of Staff's Army Communities of Excellence Award, April 30, during a ceremony at the Pentagon, Washington, D.C.

With cheers of "Hooah" and applause from Fort Benning attendees, Commanding General Maj. Gen. Carl F. Ernst and Chief of the Quality Management Division, Sarah McLaney picked up Fort Benning's winning trophy from the Army Chief of Staff, Gen. Dennis J. Reimer.

"To the Fort Benning team, I have to tell you, I am very, very proud of you and what you represent," Ernst said to those attending the ACOE events. "You represent the greatness of Fort Benning, the selfless service and all of the things we talk about. Whether you are Soldiers, civilians, retirees or local community supporters, I am very proud and privileged to be the commanding general of Fort Benning and to be among you."

Fort Carson, Colo. was the Army's Overall Winner, but Fort Benning seemed to steal the show with a representation of about 60 leaders from post, delegates from the cities of Columbus, Ga., and Phenix City, Ala., and Georgia U.S. Representative Mac Collins.

The varied group seemed to illustrate what Ernst described as one of the fundamental keys to Fort Benning's success in the ACOE competition, that is, the tricommunity working together to improve the region's collective excellence.

"Fort Benning, Columbus, Phenix City — it's one community that shares an area of the Chattahoochee," Ernst explained. "We're interdependent. There's not one of us that could do a good job without the work of the other."

The award ceremony was presided over by Reimer who lauded the communities for their success within the ACOE program.

Sgt. 1st Class Larry Lane

Commanding General Maj. Gen. Carl F. Ernst and Quality Division Chief Sara McLaney bring back the Chief of Staff's Army Community of Excellence Award for the sixth straight time. Ernst was joined at the Pentagon by about 60 people from Fort Benning, Columbus and Phenix City for the April 30 ceremony.

"Although we are recognizing communities, we are actually recognizing the people within those communities," Reimer said. "These are the people who work so hard to win the ACOE award, to improve the overall quality of life and to assure we provide the nation a trained and ready force. A full spectrum

Return: Soldiers come home after months in desert

Nicole Longstreath
Special to the Bayonet©

As the desert-camo clad Soldiers stepped from the plane, the people who awaited their return couldn't contain their excitement.

Screaming wives and children welcomed Soldiers from 3rd Brigade, 3rd Infantry Division (Mechanized) back from Kuwait with flowers, balloons and signs that read, "Welcome home, daddy," and "We missed you."

After a quick formation and a few words from Commanding General, Maj. Gen. Carl F. Ernst, the Soldiers were released to their families for 20 minutes to catch up after four months of deployment.

"Four months is a long time to have to do everything on my own, like raising children," said Sarah Hertig, wife of Staff Sgt. Michael Hertig, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 1st Battalion, 30th Infantry Regiment, 3rd Bde., 3rd Inf. Div. (Mechanized). "I am so glad he is back."

As the Soldiers greeted loved ones they hadn't seen in four months, many family members were looking forward to getting back to normal.

"It will be difficult, but I am looking forward to getting used to one another again," said Linda Robinson, wife of Sgt. Kevin Robinson, 2nd Battalion, 69th Armor Regiment, as her husband kissed and greeted the three children he had been apart from, Tony, 11, Tiffany, 10 and Tevin, 22 months.

Tiffany said she was looking forward to spending time with her father at the park.

"I am happy my daddy is home," Tiffany said, "Now we get to have fun like we used to."

Unfortunately, tensions between Iraq and the United Nations surfaced while Soldiers from Fort Benning were deployed to Kuwait and most feared another major conflict.

"I was actually more worried about everyone here worrying about us," Hertig said. "If we had to get involved, we were ready."

"It's a relief to have him home," Mrs. Hertig said about the conflict in the Gulf. "I was nervous at first but I calmed down after going to the Family Support Group meetings. They gave us all of the information we needed to know."

"I just prayed about it and hoped nothing would happen," said Cherry Smith, wife of Sgt. Everitt Smith, HHC, 1st Bn., 30th Inf. Regt.

"Being pregnant, I was more emotional than normal," said Emily McDonald as she held their 7-week-old daughter, Haley.

McDonald was not the only wife who gave birth while the Soldiers were deployed.

Chris McMillion, wife of Sgt. Eric McMillion, HHC, 1st Bn., 30th Inf. Regt. gave birth to a baby girl, Caitlain, only five days before her husband returned home.

"He will play a big role in her life," McMillion said, "The birth is just as important as anything else, but (compared to the next year of her life) he didn't miss much."

According to Sgt. McMillion, 20 minutes of family time after four months of deployment was just not enough.

"I want to leave, now. I have been in the same BDUs for the past 18 hours," McMillion said, "I have a new baby, I want to go home and play with her."

Although not all of the returning Soldiers came home to newborns, all were anxious to get home to their families.

"I am looking forward to falling in love with my family again," Hertig said.

MAW sports begin Monday

USAIC Public Affairs Office

A leaner, more Soldier friendly Military Appreciation Week (MAW) is in store.

The knock heads, twist arms, kick tail, Fit-to-Win unit competition is still intact with unit commanders urging their troops on for bragging rights about who's the best unit on post.

The sporting events run the entire week, culminating with the Commanding General presenting the awards during Friday's AUSA picnic.

The winners of the Mr. or Ms. AUSA will also be crowned at that time there will be two winners, representing large and small commands.

Both winners receive a ton of awards plus a trip to the AUSA National Convention in Washington this October.

The week begins May 11 with two very different events.

The early event is a softball game (loosely speaking) between the colonels and the sergeants major. The colonels, coached by Col. John Latimer, Fort Benning chief of staff, are tired of losing to the sergeants major and are recruiting lieutenant colonels to play on their team.

"I want someone who can do more than hobble," Latimer said during a secret meeting of officers.

That game is scheduled for 2 p.m. at Gowdy Field.

The Silver Wings, rangers and Infantry Center Band will be on hand with several thousand Soldiers when the Commanding General throws out the first pitch at the start of the RedStixx' Military Night Baseball game at 7 p.m. at Golden Park.

Ranger Training Brigade Cadre will be selling game tickets for 50 cents each or $1 for a family. The paratroopers will jump in the game ball while the rangers demonstrate their crowd-pleasing skills.

Soldiers with plans to leave the military, their spouses and civilians are invited to the AUSA job fair at Infantry Hall on Thursday.

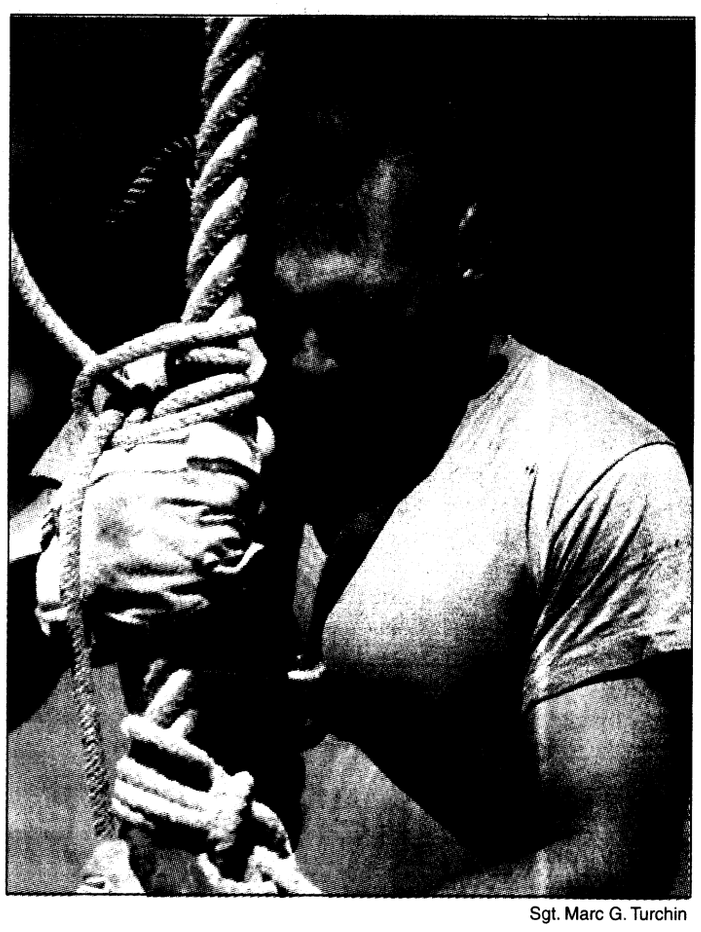
The day-long event is expected to draw more than 60 business and industrial representatives who know former Soldiers make good employees.

Those attending the fair should dress appropriately and bring resumes if they are serious about finding a job.

Also that day golfers and floggers will be invited to try their luck at prizes. Soldier teams tee off in the morning with corporate teams playing in the afternoon.

Planning to golf, sign up early. The slots fill fast.

And of course there's the Bass Tournament for anyone who can outwit a fish. Once again the 29th Infantry Regiment will sponsor this popular event.



Friday is the week's climax. It begins at 9 a.m. with what was once called the "Burn the General Run."

But after last year, it could be more appropriately termed, "Burned by the General Run," as few runners were able to best Maj. Gen. Carl Ernst who takes the run seriously. As a consequence, AUSA ended up with a stack of "I burned the general" certificates and quickly ran out of the "I was burned by the general" certificates.

Awards ceremonies, crowning of Mr. or Ms. AUSA and a picnic culminate the morning with activities wrapping up around noontime.

Concentrate

Staff Sgt. Mark Bartosch, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 4th Ranger Training Battalion, prepares himself for the Prusik Climb during Ranger Stakes portion of the 16th Annual David E. Grange Best Ranger Competition May 1 through 3. Forty teams entered the competition only to see 24 teams finish. See page A-6 for more photos and complete coverage of the competition.

AER campaign

Drive for donations benefits Soldiers

Pvt. 2 Amy L. Nyland
Bayonet staff writer

She received the news of her father's passing shortly after arriving at Fort Benning. Struggling to get her husband and two children settled after the move, the death of her father presented a new challenge in the wake of an emotional and financial storm.

Sgt. Buffy L. McPhee, Company A, 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment, learned her father had cancelled his life insurance policy after a dispute with the insurance company. Being an only child, McPhee was left to assume the responsibility of paying for her father's funeral expenses.

Having no where else to turn McPhee sought refuge and found a helping hand at the Army Emergency Relief office.

"It was rough," McPhee said. "I didn't have anybody to turn to. I decided to take a chance on AER and I told them my story and situation. By the end of the day, I had finished the paper work and I was fortunate to get a grant to help pay for funeral and travel expenses. They took care of everything."

"You just never know when something like this can happen to you," she said.

McPhee said it is scary to think about what she would have done if she hadn't received assistance.

She said she feels lucky to have a place such as AER to turn to if the situation calls for it.

"People need to know how important it is to contribute to the AER," McPhee said. "If you donate, you are not only helping fellow Soldiers, you may also be helping yourself some day."

According to Sgt. Maj. Arthur Van Allen, garrison sergeant major, the AER helps the Army care for its own by providing loans and grants to all active-duty and retired Soldiers and their dependents in a time of need or crisis.

Van Allen said loans and grants are provided for everything from helping to pay for a major crisis, such as a death in the family to automobile breakdowns.

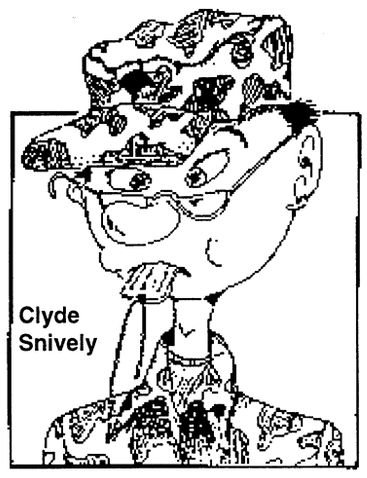
Every year the AER campaigns to raise money for its cause. This year's campaign ends May 15 with an ultimate goal of $150,000.

Van Allen said each year AER gives out thousands of dollars to hundreds of Soldiers on Fort Benning.

He said that Fort Benning is made up of 12 Major Subordinate Commands and under one MSC nearly a quarter of a million dollars was given to Soldiers for assistance in 1997 alone.

"This program helps so many people, literally hundreds of Soldiers each year," Van Allen said. No one ever expects something to happen to them, but if it did, at least they have some place to turn to."

Van Allen said the AER relies on the contributions of Soldiers and that everyone should consider giving a little.



"You don't have to give a lot," Van Allen said. "In fact, we aren't asking you to give a lot, but if you have the capacity to donate, do so because this is helping those closest to you."

Sgt. 1st Class Esteban Ibanez, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment, said he is an example of the AER supporting its own.

Week set aside to appreciate military

Spc. Clyde Snively
Bayonet columnist

Armed Forces Day is a day set aside each May to recognize members of our armed forces. Well, guess how we recognized them. We recognized them by asking them to set up displays, put on demonstrations and march in parades on what is normally a day off — Saturday.

commentary

Well, as much as I like marching in parades, or explaining how an anti-tank weapon works — it's really like showing off, I also like my time off.

A few years back when a retired three-star general, Ben Register, was president of the local Association of the U.S. Army chapter, he decided more emphasis should be placed on making Armed Forces Day fun for Soldiers. So he devised Military Appreciation Week.

And the rest is history — AUSA corporate members kick in to sponsor Soldier events with prizes. The ultimate outcome is, guess what — no displays, no work on Saturday.

But I do have a gripe about the whole thing. I never get picked to be on any of the teams. It was like that when I was a kid. If I didn't own the ball, I either didn't get to play or was always picked last.

It's the same here. "Snively, if you want to participate, you can be the water boy for the soccer team." Or, "Snively, why don't you enter the 10,000 (snicker, snicker) meter run."

Davinsky, our outdoors person, suggested I enter the fishing derby.

"Ha, ha, Davinsky, you gotta be smarter than the fish if you expect to catch any so that leaves me out."

She then suggested golf. "Ha, ha, Davinsky, you gotta be coordinated to play golf, so that leaves me out."

Nihil, who was listening in, suggested bowling. One good thing about bowling is you don't need to be too smart and you'll almost never lose your ball. However, there's always the chance of dropping it on your foot or someone else's foot, so I declined that opportunity too.

Maybe I'll just hang around the job fair looking forlorn; someone will have pity on me and hire me.

Oh, wait, there are two things I can do. I can go watch the colonels play the sergeants major. Watching the colonels bat and field is a great morale booster. Then, cheered by that, I can head on over to the RedStixx game.

I love greasy food, I love cold beer and I love to cheer for the home team.

Okay, so Military Appreciation Week will be all right after all.

And for the finale, I can always go watch the Commanding General turn Fort Benning's finest into ground round as he runs them into the ground Friday morning.

Spouses' role deserves recognition

Erin A. Nash
Special to the Bayonet©

Today, if you don't already know, is Military Spouse Appreciation Day. That's great that we spouses get recognition, but the point of the whole day should be that we are appreciated year-round, not just one day. Being a "ranger wife" is certainly hard in itself, but I don't really feel that I have it that bad.

commentary

There are other spouses who have three kids at home and a spouse in Korea for a year and other spouses whose husband or wife is in a foreign country for six months. Nevertheless, every military spouse, male or female, deserves more recognition than just a day.

Never in my wildest dreams had I ever imagined I would be a military wife. I fancied myself more of a doctor's wife, shopping and luncheons during the day and eating the supper the maid cooked with my husband at night. Never did I imagine my dogs and cat would be some of my closest confidantes, my shoulders to cry on and my nightly bedmates. But, like they say, you can't help who you fall in love with. I happened to fall in love with my husband (then boyfriend) two months before he left for basic training. That will be three years ago in August and I can honestly say they have been the hardest, most trying three years of my relatively short life.

By April of 1996, I moved to Georgia, as a fiancee. I had only slightly understood what military life meant — it is something you cannot fully understand until you actually experience it, kind of like jumping out of a plane. Someone can tell you about the experience until they're blue in the face, but until you're actually jumping out of that plane, you cannot fully comprehend it.

I believe being a military spouse is one of God's ways of weeding out the strong from the weak. Strong spouses deal with the late nights and frequent deployments. They don't blame their spouses for their dedication to their career and their country. They stay faithful through thick and thin and are always ready to tell about their pride in their spouses. I have the utmost respect for strong spouses and nothing but contempt for weak spouses, those who constantly complain about how bad they have it. It takes a special person to be a military spouse.

So, to all of my fellow military spouses, I extend my congratulations, whether you've been a spouse for two months or 20 years. For our military spouses to perform well at their jobs, they need to have a stable home life and that's never easy, especially in a military environment.

I could probably write a large book about how much praise and recognition is due to military spouses. So today, if you know a military spouse, if it happens to be your own spouse, let them know they are appreciated. You'll never know how much of an impact those few words can make.

CG thanks spouses for support

Today is Military Spouses Day. Would be remiss if I did not note the significance of this special day. There was a time when the old hard-core Army sage would proudly announce to a Soldier with a family problem that, if the Army had "wanted you to have a wife, it would have issued you one."

We have come a long way! More importantly, we are on the right path.

Spouses have the burden of taking care of the "home fires" while Soldiers are away for training, TDY, on duty and now, frequent deployments. And it seems to be a rule, that if there is a family crisis, the Soldier will be gone. (Linda, my wife, proudly wears a T-shirt proclaiming "when he was needed he was TDY.")

Our spouses have to settle the family after moves — new schools, new friends for the children, learning the ropes of hospital, commissary, PX, etc.

Spouses, you are asked to do a lot and you do. We ask you to put up with a lot and you do. We thank you too little or not at all and you continue to do.

Thank you for helping your Soldier to be a better Soldier.

Thank you for supporting family support groups and your Soldier's unit to be better and more ready.

Thank you for helping to make Fort Benning the best place in our Army for families. Thank you for being an Army spouse, a vital and important part of this great Army of ours.

P.S. Sunday is Mother's Day. To all the Mothers — Happy Mother's Day! Thanks for being great moms. You deserve far more than sons or daughters can ever repay.

Soldiers help Soldiers with AER donations

My Uncle Jim was a small man physically. I out grew his hand-me-down jeans in the fifth grade, which is also about the time I started to pick him up off the ground to give him giant bear hugs. It was my only defense — he used to pinch my cheek and bite my ears. I hated that.

Uncle Jim was a meat cutter by trade, but he was a man with many interests, which included carpentry, gardening, photography, nature and jewelry.

When I was a child, my Uncle Jim grew hen and chicks in one of his flower gardens. Of course he told me some long yarn about why the plant was named after a chicken and her brood.

One spring he helped my mom plant her garden. Mom used to agonize over the depth of each hole and one time she actually had a yard stick to measure the distance between the plants. Uncle Jim watched her for a few minutes and then started tossing plants where he thought they should be planted. It was a really pretty garden that year.

commentary

In addition to his many interests, Uncle Jim also smoked. He was diagnosed with lung cancer nearly two years ago. He died last year while I was at BNCOC.

I was able to fly home for the funeral because of an Army Emergency Relief interest-free loan.

AER is Soldiers helping Soldiers. A lot of people don't like to talk about how sometimes they need a little financial help but AER is available to help with interest-free loans and grants. AER helps Soldiers who need help with setting up housekeeping in a new area to helping Soldiers go home for funerals.

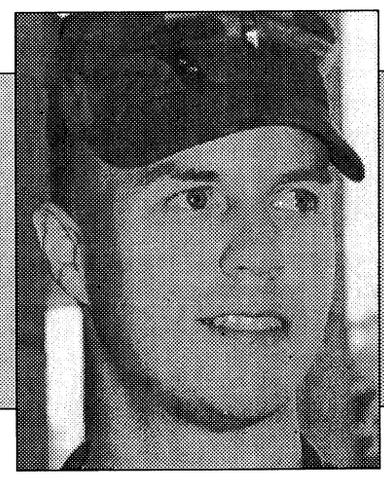
Because of the loan I was able to spend time with my family reminiscing about Uncle Jim and the man he was. My family still misses my uncle but my sisters, mom and grandmother proudly wear the jewelry Uncle Jim made from the semiprecious stones he travelled the west looking for.

Last year, AER helped more than 1,000 Fort Benning Soldiers and family members with nearly $853,000. I was one of them. Thank you.

VARIOUS VOICES

How do you think people can show their support for the military?

Sgt. James M. Hollyfield, Company A, 1st Battalion, 38th Infantry Regiment, Inf. Training Brigade — "Soldiers should tell others about the good things the military offers and the good things they do."



Hazel Combs, Cusseta, Al.a — "By hanging a flag outside your residence at all times."

Bonnie L. Bollin, family member — "Being more supportive of the families within a company while other Soldiers are away. Everyone can also be more aware of their neighbors and lend them a helping hand if they need it."

Retired Sgt. 1st Class Philip W. Smith, Columbus — "I think businesses should offer more military discounts such as hotels and automotive shops."

2nd Lt. Sean I. Remley, 2nd Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment — "When people enlist, they should do it because they want to and not just for the money and benefits. If you are aren't 100 percent into the military, then you are not dedicated to your job."

Jeannette L. McClung, family member — "People can really show their support by getting involved with different organizations and alliance groups such as American Red Cross and family support groups that promote the military."

Soldiers test equipment to improve night fighting

Pvt. 2 Amy L. Nyland
Bayonet staff writer

When the sun begins to descend the horizon and a blanket of darkness slowly settles, a new and ominous danger is presented to Soldiers in combat.

The night becomes an instant enemy as Soldiers senses are diminished and the blackness threatens performance.

However, the Army is hoping to control nature and hopefully save lives by creating technology to help alleviate problems created by an absence of light.

According to Dutch Waldheim, project analyst, Dismounted Forces Division, Fort Benning's Night Fighting Experimentation Facility (NFEF) which is part of the U.S. Army Dismounted Battlespace Battlelab (DBBL), was established in May 1995.

Waldheim said the NFEF was created to train Soldiers with night vision equipment 24 hours a day in a controlled environment.

The NFEF was designed to decrease training deficiencies with night fighting equipment and also to test advances in its technologies.

Waldheim said the NFEF became a product of the Army's night fighting advanced war fighting experiment.

He said after Desert Storm, a requirement was identified for increased training in the area of night vision. As a result, the "Own the Night" initiative was established by the Department of the Army (DOA).

"We did well in Desert Storm, we accomplished our mission which was the liberation of Kuwait. But after action reports started coming in and it was determined that maybe we didn't do as well at night as we liked," Waldheim said.

Although the NFEF is specifically directed towards dismounted Soldiers, the training is important to Soldiers involved in all areas of combat, Waldheim said.

According to Waldheim the NFEF is divided into three parts, beginning with classroom instruction which familiarizes Soldiers with the concept of night fighting and the use of Night Vision Goggles (NVG's).

Soldiers then use computer simulators to give an idea of what they may see when looking through thermal sights.

The training ends with a trip through specially designed night fighting testing lanes.

The lanes were created to represent environments associated with the forest, jungle, desert and urban terrain during night time situations.

Soldiers must negotiate the lanes which include obstacles associated with the environments such as fallen trees, tunnels, inclines, declines and a climbing wall, all with the use of NVG's.

The lanes also incorporate common tasks such as first aid and the use of maps and compasses.

Waldheim said that since its opening, more than 10,600 Soldiers have gone through the NFEF.

"By training with NVG's it increases a Soldier's survival capability on the battlefield," Waldheim said. "However the key thing is, it increases a Soldier's night time situational awareness."

According to Jerry W. Barricks, project analyst, the NFEF helps build self-confidence and increases lethality on the battlefield.

"The NFEF totally integrates everything in the field of night vision into one area where you can come through and gain a working knowledge of the effects of night vision," Barricks said.

The DBBL has been successful in addressing the issues concerning nightfighting to include advancements in technology.

Waldheim said that the hopes of the future are to combine image intensification or NVG's and thermal devices to create a complete nightfighting package.

There are also plans for construction on an expanded reconfigurable facility, he said.

"This facility really helps me to become familiarized with the equipment," said Pfc. Mustafa L. Thompson, Company B, 1st Battalion 15th Infantry Regiment. "I will be able to know what to do to take control of a situation that may require it's use."

"The course is outstanding," said Sgt. 1st Class Courtland E. Pegan, Company B, 1st Battalion 15th Infantry Regiment. "We get to use the skills we've learned that we usually only use in the field and apply them to all different situations."

AER: Helps Soldiers in need

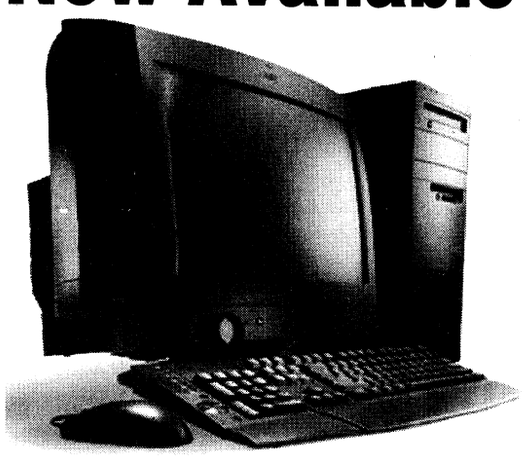
"I needed to get my fuel pump repaired on my car and I couldn't afford it at the time," Ibanez said. "I went to AER and they were very helpful. I was able to get my car repaired and I'm grateful."

Ibanez said the AER is an outstanding program that goes out of its way to take care of Soldiers and their families.

Spc. Christopher Bizzell, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment, also benefitted from AER assistance.

Bizzell said after PCSing from Fort Riley, Kan., with his wife and four children he experienced financial strain because of expenses from the move.

He said AER was able to help him get his feet back on the ground and regain some stability.



"This program benefits everybody," Bizzell said. "When you are giving to AER you are helping those in a time of need. Nobody can be certain that they might not be in a similar situation someday," he said.

As the AER campaign comes to an end everyone should be reminded that the money they contribute isn't going into the hands of people they will never have contact with. This money stays close to home helping friends, family, neighbors and co-workers, and even possibly themselves some day.

ACOE: Fort Benning takes home another trophy

force. A total force capable of whatever the nation wants us to do."

Reimer detailed the equation installations should use when striving for installation excellence.

"We talk about readiness being equal to training plus quality of life," he said. "When you talk about ACOE, you really recognize your belief and commitment to that equation."

Other attendees of the ceremony shared what they felt made Fort Benning an excellent installation and community.

"There's a great relationship between the military and civilian personnel," said Drill Sergeant of the Year, Staff Sgt. Clifford Drysdale. The Infantry Training Brigade trains about 15,000 Soldiers each year, he said, and the key is the smooth relationship within the diverse workforce.

"We are looking real good and it's the whole team combined that helps us maintain our high success rate. When you have the military and civilians working so well beside each other, it just makes the entire system a lot easier. There's no red tape and no stoppage."

Fort Benning has an extensive retiree population, often witnessed in the chapels on post, said Master Sgt. Robert Bush, senior youth minister NCO. The retirees' contribution to the Fort Benning community is extremely valuable, Bush said, whether through volunteering time or by merely sharing Army experience with you Soldiers.

"Retirees only strengthen what we do with the limited numbers and resources we have in the chaplain program," he said. "They continue to come to worship services. They take part in Soldiers' lives. They donate, time, equipment and are truly concerned for our Soldiers."

Master Sgt. Jose Morales, the post equal opportunity advisor praised the command's "climate" for equal opportunity issues.

"I think with Fort Benning's racial mix of our community, we all get along very well," Morales said. "The command supports all of our observances and we have good turnouts, so that's an indicator that we have the support for racial awareness."

The Fort Benning team was also honored at a reception sponsored by U.S. Congressmen Mack Collins, Sanford Bishop and Senator Max Cleland.

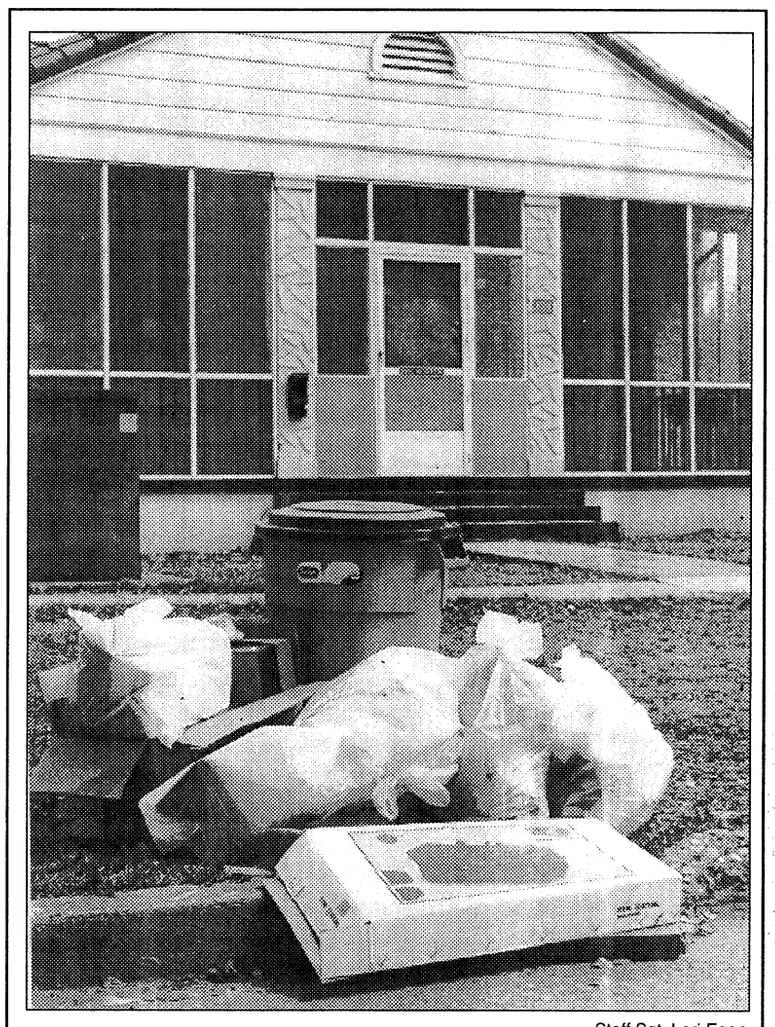
During the reception, Collins related a discussion he had with members of the House of Representatives about how Fort Benning's focus on the Soldier is one of the keys to the fort's success members. "It's still the home of the Infantry. You can have all of the technology in the world that you want, but if you do not have that Soldier, you are not going to have the best defense you can have."

"This is why you are first. You're first in training first in readiness and first in quality of life."

This is the sixth trip to the ACOE ceremonies for Fort Benning, which won the Chief of Staff of the Army ACOE award consecutively from 1993-1998.

Fort Benning is also the winner of the 1994, 1995 and 1997 Department of Defense Commander-in-Chief's Award for Installation Excellence and the 1997 Presidential Award for Quality. After Fort Benning dominated the CINC award with back to back wins, a new rule was inacted that curbs an installation from winning the award year after year.

Sarah McLaney the chief of the Quality Management Division, Directorate of Resource Management said she expected Fort Benning to back on the top next year. Fort Benning is applying for the State of Georgia Quality Award which will put the fort in competition with Georgia industry.



"A lot of the installations are looking at this as the real test — can you stand up to industry standards," McLaney said. "We'll be competing with the best industries in Georgia and I believe we'll do well matched against big business."

Military and civilian Fort Benning community members are hooked on winning, McLaney said and have an "infectious enthusiasm" about competition.

"People like to be known as the best of the best," she said. "Even when you are the best of the best, there's always areas we can improve."

After several years of being involved with the ACOE program, McLaney said excellent leadership and a workforce that works as a team are what makes Fort Benning a winner every year.

"From leaders to the people at the 'worker bee' level, everybody is pulling together as a team," she said. "That's why we're successful, because it's a team effort. To be successful, people have to be involved — to be better tomorrow than we are today."

1998 Infantry Ball set

The 1998 Army Infantry Ball will be held at 6 p.m. June 10 at the Columbus, Georgia Convention and Trade Center Iron Works. The Infantry Ball will include the presentation of the Doughboy Awards as well as the celebration of the 223rd Birthday of the Army.

All who wish to attend should contact 544-8095 or 544-9644 by June 1.

Programs to be considered for post

Representatives from Embry-Riddle Aeronautical University will be at Fort Benning 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. May 13 to discuss college programs that are being considered for the Fort Benning area.

The programs include Associates and Bachelors in Science for Professional Aeronautics, Bachelors in Science and Masters in Management of Technical Operations and an Independent Study Program.

Those interested in discussing the programs should stop by Classroom 52 in Infantry Hall.

Appointments needed to ship goods

Peak moving season is here. Soldiers who have their reassignment orders should call the transportation office at 545-3156 to make an appointment for shipment or storage of household goods to avoid delays. Ten copies of orders are required.

For more information call Linda Kelley at 545-6010.

SFC selection board to meet

A department of the Army selection board will convene May 27 to consider Soldiers for promotion to sergeant first class.

Also, the board will review records for possible elimination under the Qualitative Management Program.

All eligible Soldiers must review their personnel qualification records.

Soldiers who meet eligibility criteria must have a current photo. To schedule an appointment, call 545-4417.

Complete-the-record evaluation reports are authorized. Eligibility criteria must be met.

Noncommissioned officers who meet eligibility criteria must review their personnel records and authenticate their personnel qualification record, which goes to the selection board.

Contact your personnel sergeant or call the Adjutant General Personnel and Operations Division at 545-2872 or 545-5640.

Benning Blvd restricts traffic

The out-bound lane of Benning Boulevard continues to be restricted to one-lane traffic until May 22 from Custer Road for approximately 1/4 mile. One lane will remain open during this period but traffic will move slower than normal due to construction personnel and equipment. Everyone is encouraged to use alternate routes during this period, especially during the lunch and afternoon rush periods. The inbound lane will not be affected.

volunteer profile

Name: Heidi Cerjan

Hometown: Gaithersburg, Md.
Volunteer job title: 2nd Vice President (Programs)
Volunteer organization(s): Officers' Wives' Club (OWC), Protestant Women of the Chapel (local and regional levels) treasurer for both

Why do you volunteer?
The military community "gives" families so much; volunteering allows me to "give" something back with my time and talents. I love being a part of the community and feeling as if I've left something of myself behind — that I made a difference.

What do you like most about volunteering?
I like meeting new people. Volunteering quickly tucks you into a new post when you first arrive and keeps you as busy as you want to be during your stay.

What are your interests and hobbies?
I enjoy crafting, stained glass and shopping.

What do others have to say about your contributions? Heidi has "caught the spirit" of OWC and is filled with enthusiasm. Because of her energy and insight, OWC has featured entertaining and stimulating programs throughout the past year.

AUSA job fair set for Thursday

Army Career and Alumni Program

The Association of the U.S. Army (AUSA) and the Georgia Department of Labor will sponsor the annual Military Job Fair from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. Thursday in Infantry Hall, Building 4. The fair is open to any Soldier (active, retired or separated), civilian employees and any family members interested in the job search.

"It is highly recommended that personnel in the ACAP process or nearing a separation point attend this important event," said Debbie Henshaw, counselor at the ACAP Center.

Many advantages can be gained by job seekers attending job fairs.

The first advantage is the opportunity to gather information about a wide range of potential employers and potential civilian careers. By talking with recruiters from many companies and agencies, job seekers can compare their skills with the requirements of the positions available.

Second, the fair is an opportunity to practice interviewing skills. All attendees should look sharp in their duty uniform or appropriate civilian professional dress. Blue jeans and t-shirts are not professional. Practice describing and selling your skills and experience when asked about your professional background. For those who have attended the ACAP job search workshop, review some of the interviewing material to better prepare.

Third, in regard to submission of resumes and the completion of applications, it is important to remember there will be opportunities to do so at the job fair. Copies of resumes are not mandatory for attendance, but will be helpful to give to selected employers or to help with completing job applications. It might be wise to gather job specifics, company data and names and addresses of the point of contact and mail cover letters and targeted resumes after the fair.

Attendance at the job fair is one of the steps in the job search process. If you find employers interested in your skills and experience and you have presented yourself well, be prepared for follow-up action. Many Soldiers have found excellent jobs with companies they first met at a job fair.

Take advantage of this annual opportunity to get up close and personal with employers.

For more information about the job fair and job seeker strategies, call the ACAP Center at 545-2308 or 545-2309.

Soldiers gain awards for second quarter honors

Nicole Longstreath
Special to the Bayonet©

Every quarter, Soldiers and NCO's deemed worthy of the titles "Soldier of the Quarter," and "NCO of the Quarter," are chosen by a board of sergeants major to represent Fort Benning.

A ceremony honoring the nominees was held April 23 at the Main NCO Club to announce the winners.

Winners for the 2nd Quarter of 1998 were:

Spc. Mark Tate, 203rd Forward Support Battalion, 3rd Brigade, 3rd Infantry Division (Mechanized) and Cpl. Jason Cavanaugh, Company C, 2nd Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment were chosen to hold the titles of Soldier and NCO of the Quarter.

While Tate was called to duty in Kuwait, Cavanaugh was busy "going the distance," according to Staff Sgt. Roger Fiest, instructor, Co. C, 2nd Bn., 29th Inf. Regt.

"He (Cavanaugh) is an outstanding Soldier," Fiest said. "He is willing to go the distance to learn more about his job." The nominees for the 2nd Quarter of 1998 were:

Rangers compete for top title

Spc. Michelle J. Davis
Bayonet staff writer

Fourth time's a charm. Well, at least that's true for Sgt. 1st Class Eric Riley of Company A, 4th Ranger Training Battalion (RTB), who along with partner Staff Sgt. Thomas Smith of Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 4th RTB, took top honors during the 16th annual David E. Grange Jr. Best Ranger Competition May 1-3.

The duo was one of 40 teams from units around the Army that began the grueling three-day competition, but had only 24 teams completing all 13 events.

"It feels great to finally win and have it out of the way," Riley said.

Smith's mother, Elizabeth O'Bryant, traveled all the way from Australia to watch her son compete in the competition, which has been dubbed one of the military's most physically demanding events.

"He's always wanted to do this even before he went to Ranger School," she said. "When he gets his mind set on something, there is no stopping him."

In preparation for the competition, Riley and Smith endured four months of training, which included additional endurance runs, roadmarches and marksmanship training among other activities.

Smith said the team probably wouldn't have been able to make it without the help and expertise of their coach, Sgt. 1st Class Eric White of Co. C, 4th RTB.

"Some days it would be cold or rainy and we wouldn't want to train, but he always got us up and pushed us," he said. "We really owe him a lot."

Although each of the competition's events was designed to challenge the competitors both mentally and physically, Smith said the toughest obstacle was the land navigation course, which kicked-off the third and final day of events.

"It covered a lot of distance over rough terrain and by that time we were smoked anyway," Smith said.

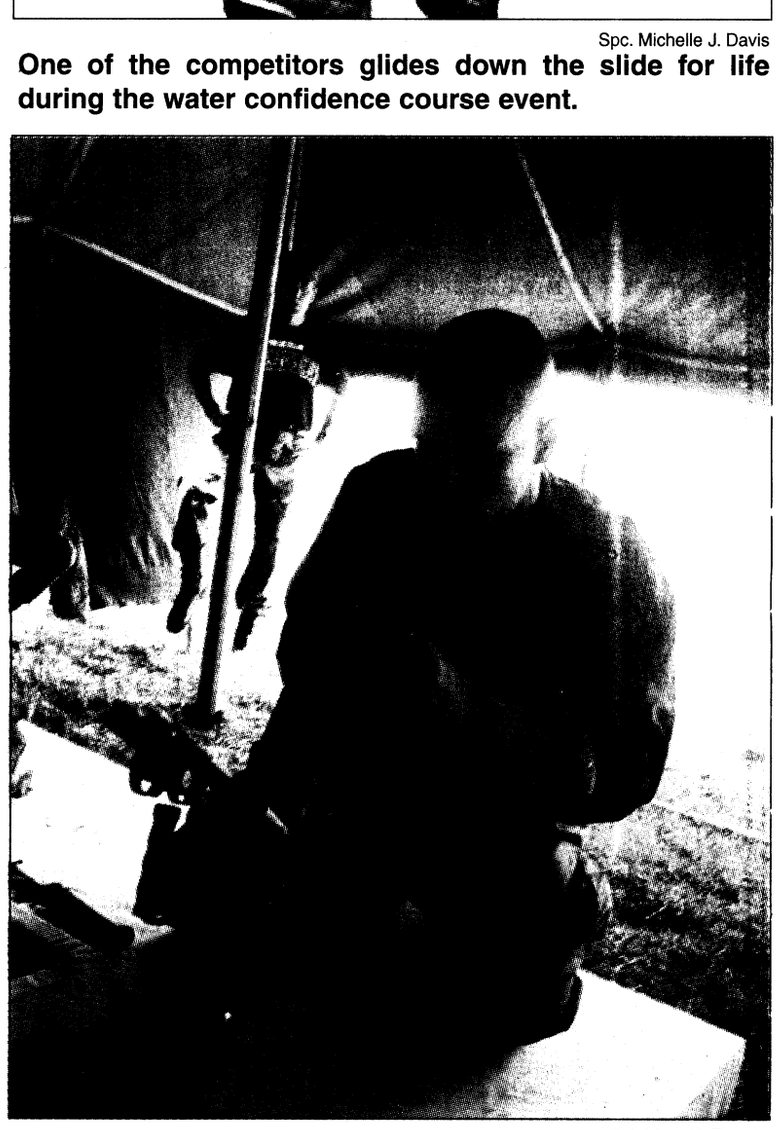
Although the event drained the Soldiers, Smith said they just tried to stay relaxed and focus on the remaining events.

"Riley had planned out each event so we knew how well we had to do in each event to stay at the top," Smith said. "We knew we were pretty strong at the helocast event so we didn't worry."

Harry Ikner, Infantry training specialist for the Ranger Training Brigade, said there were several first time occurrences for this year's competition.

"This was the first year a mechanized Infantry team finished the competition," he said. "We have had teams enter, but this year teams from the 1st Infantry Division and 3rd Infantry Division completed the competition."

New events were also added this year including the bayonet rifle assault course and room clearing events. In addition, participants were also required to complete a 9 mm pistol course wearing protective masks.



"Each year we try and change a few things so the competitors never know exactly what's next," Ikner said.

Ikner said plans are already in the works for next year's competition.

"We always keep high standards for this competition," he said. "Soldiers know this and train accordingly."

Although only one team claimed the title of being the Army's "Best Rangers," each of the 24 teams that finished the competition were praised during the award ceremony for enduring the 72 hours of competition.

"There are very few (Soldiers) like you," said retired Gen. Gordon R. Sullivan, president of the Association of the U.S. Army. "We take strength from your tremendous accomplishments and applaud your effort."

Fort Benning schools emphasize importance of gym class during ...

Phys Ed

Spc. Michelle J. Davis
Bayonet staff writer

Walk into any of the schools on Fort Benning and you'll find students reading, writing ... swinging at pitches, dribbling to the hoop or even leaping over obstacles.

Although math, science and English are the basis for most classes, many often forget the importance of physical education (PE).

"PE is very important," said Adam Weinbaum, a PE instructor at Stowers Elementary. "It allows children to be active and relieves the stress from other classes."

Pam Koon, who teaches PE at Dexter and Stowers Elementary Schools, added that perhaps their biggest job as instructors is to introduce and encourage students to take part in physical activities and overall fitness.

"Our main goal is fitness and to develop a love for it so they will continue to develop their skills throughout their life," she said.

Students receive their first taste of gym class in elementary school where they attend the class anywhere between two and three times a week for about 30 to 40 minutes.

"It doesn't make out to be that much time, but we always make the most of it," said Nancy Wadrop, a PE instructor at Wilson Elementary School.

Wadrop added that with the younger grades, PE is a time to focus on basic motor skills dealing with hand-eye and hand-foot coordination.

For most of the classes, the teacher will choose one sport and focus on the skills surrounding that sport for a certain amount of time.

"We always start with the basics because each student may be at a different skill level and some of the students may have never had PE before," Koon said.

According to Weinbaum, another important aspect of physical education programs is diversity and attitude.

"PE must be fun. If the students don't have fun, they're not going to want to do it," he said. "But, if the students enjoy it, they are more likely to participate and get involved in more physical activities."

In addition to encouraging physical fitness, Weinbaum said he also tries to prepare his students for their move to middle school.

Students at Faith are also re-introduced to basic skills of certain sports.

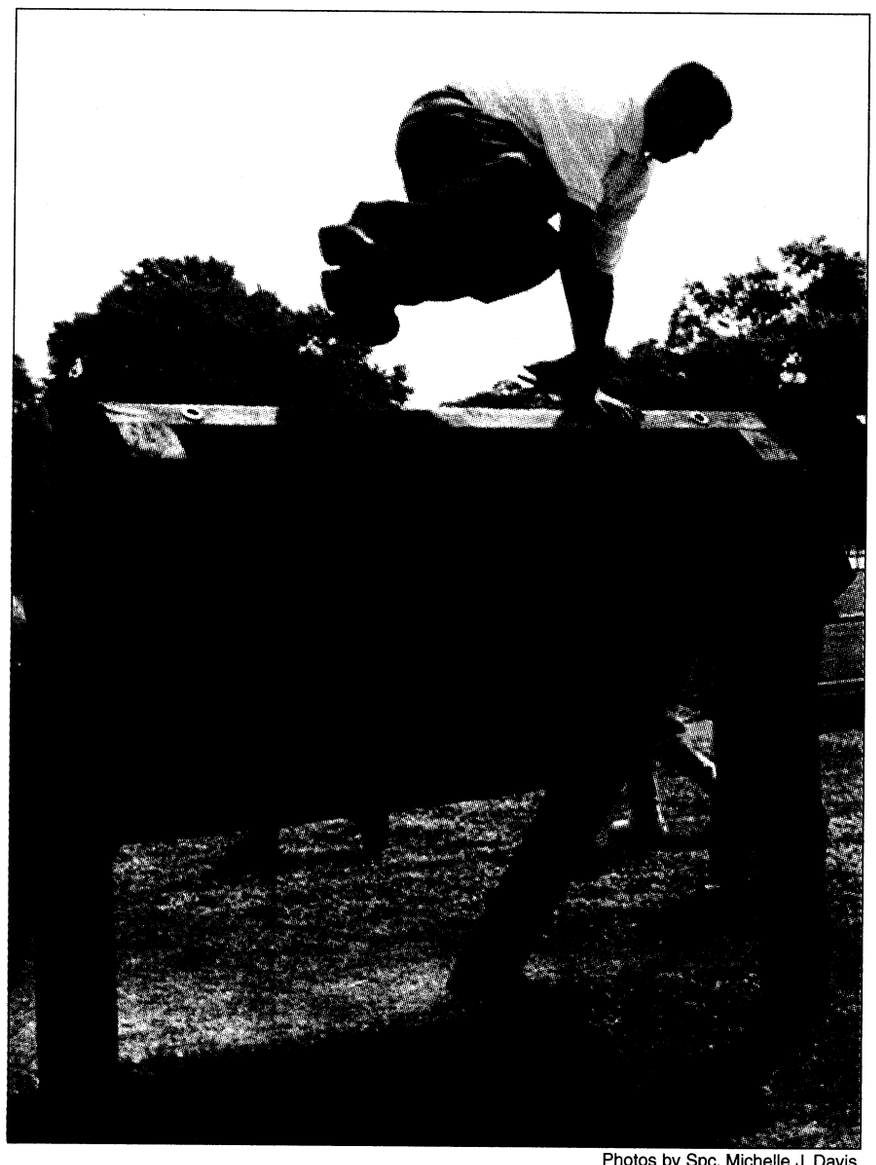
"We start the younger grades with more simplistic skills and then they progress to more advanced levels," said Scott Denney, a PE instructor at Faith.

One example Denney used was softball. When students first begin, they may use a different ball with relaxed rules, but as students progress, they begin playing with a regular softball and typical game rules.

In addition to introducing sports, Faith also regularly administers the Presidential Physical Fitness Test, which resembles the Army Physical Fitness Test. The events of the presidential test include pull-ups, the sit and reach and a mile run.

"We just administer it so students can get more practice at the events and it lets them see where they stand," Denney said.

Although none of the schools on Fort Benning participate in interscholastic sports, many schools offer extracurricular activities that students can join to get additional experience and practice.



Faith school offers intramural programs after school to allow students the chance to further tone their skills and compete against each other. Faith's Jogging Club has also given its members an opportunity to compete in track events against other schools.

Stowers also has an after-school program, but students can only attend on the recommendation of their teacher.

"It's based on good behavior," Weinbaum said. "They have to be good during the day to be allowed to attend the after school session."

At Dexter, Koon began a before school PE program where students can come in early and get an extra half-hour of activity.

"It's very popular with the students," she said. "The gym is always packed and the kids are always anxious to learn and try new things."

SJA sponsored the mock trial as part of Law Day, which is an opportunity to expand awareness of the laws and justice system and their valuable impact on our lives. Law Day is held every year on May 1.

"This year's theme is 'Celebrate Your Freedom,'" said Capt. Tamara Herdener, administrative law attorney, Judge Advocate General office. "It's to remember how lucky we are that we live in a country where the system exists that

Students communicate with deployed parents via e-mail

Erin A. Nash
Special to the Bayonet©

Deployments are always hard on families, but Dexter Elementary School came up with a solution to help students keep in touch with their parents — e-mail.

Students started e-mailing their parents from the "Mouse House," the computer lab, in January when Soldiers from 3rd Brigade were deploying to Kuwait.

C.J. Baker, 10, a fourth-grader, was one of those students.

"I e-mailed my dad to tell him what mom and I were doing and what was happening here," C.J. said, son of Michelle and Sgt. Joseph Baker, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 1st Battalion, 30th Infantry Regiment, 3rd Brigade, 3rd Infantry Division (Mechanized).

"C.J. told me about how he was playing basketball, how many baskets he made and the scores of the games," Joseph Baker said. "He also broke his arm and told me the color of his cast.

"I also mailed him a ton of pictures. It was nice to know I could keep in touch. I didn't always have the opportunity to talk on the phone and the phone costs a lot more."

E-mail also kept the deployed parents informed on how their children were doing in school.

"I was happy to e-mail my dad," said first-grader Mei-sean Lee, 7, daughter of Yarmice and Sgt. Sean A. Lee Sr., Co. C, 2nd Bn., 69th Armor Regt., 3rd Bde., 3rd Inf. Div. (Mech.). "I told him I got a good grade on a spelling test."

Fourth-grader Hayley Heineken, 9, daughter of Libby and 1st Bn., 30th Inf., commander Lt. Col. Tom Heineken, thought that having the opportunity to e-mail her dad was "wonderful."

"I told him what I wanted us to do when he got home," Hayley said. "It was also good because I could tell him stuff we were doing at home and school. When I was having a bad day, it made me feel better to e-mail a message."

Hayley's younger sister Savannah, a first-grader, told her dad how she lost a lot of teeth and that she missed him.

"The kids were very excited about it," Libby, a first- and second-grade teacher at Dexter, said. "It gave them a great deal of satisfaction because they can send their messages immediately. They can share with their parents what they're doing in school."

Besides e-mail, students were also given deployment coloring books and red, white and blue paper chains. Students removed a chain each day until their parent returned home. There was also a bulletin board in the school's hallway with pictures of Kuwait that Sgt. Baker had taken and sent home, as well as various news articles.

"The students are very proud of what their parents are doing," Libby said.

Proper use of car seats, seatbelts saves lives

Directorate of Public Safety

Vehicle accidents are still the number one killer of children under age five. More than 50,000 child injuries occur in cars. Every year, more than 700 children under age five die in car accidents. A parent would never think of letting a child play in traffic ... yet they allow children to ride unbuckled.

Patricia Owens of St. Louis Mo., knows the importance of restraining a child — it only took the death of her three-month-old daughter Jasmine.

Owens was driving on an outer road of the highway when it began to rain. She lost control of her vehicle. The car turned in two complete circles, swerved and finally ended up running into a telephone pole. Owens walked away from the accident with minor cuts and bruises. Jasmine, unfortunately suffered major brain damage.

Jasmine fought for her life as much as she possibly could, but everyone knew that she wasn't going to make it. Jasmine lived only two days after the accident when it was decided that she should be taken off the life support system.

Jasmine received the injuries because she was not put in the proper child restraint equipment. Jasmine's mother thought she would be alright in a regular baby seat that she kept her in around the house, but due to the impact, Jasmine was thrown out of the seat and ended up under the dashboard.

"If I had only placed her in the correct car seat, my daughter would be here today," Owens said.

"We can't change the traumatic past incidents that occur in our life, but we all can change the future by following recommended guidelines," said Regis Beighley, Safety manager, Directorate of Public Safety.

"Your child's safety depends on your willingness to use the equipment correctly and use it every time your child rides in a car. More than half of all child safety seats are used incorrectly," he said.

"An unrestrained adult can be thrown into other passengers and cause serious or even fatal injuries. Your children need you alive and they learn from what they see. Always secure your child in an approved safety seat, then secure yourself with a seat belt. The one time you don't, may be the one time you wish you had," Beighley added.

Information Corner 'Essayons'

Directorate of Public Works

This week's article provides information on the Directorate of Public Works (DPW) Organization Day, Supply and Equipment Division's annual inventory and proper management procedures for fluorescent light tubes.

DPW plans organization day May 15

DPW is conducting its organizational day activities from noon to 4 p.m. May 15. Staffing levels will be minimal to allow as many DPW employees as possible to participate in the activities. The DPW Work Reception Section and DPW duty officer will coordinate all services and emergency responses.

The work section phone number is 545-2135 and the duty officer phone number is 545-7264.

Supply and Equipment to close for inventory

The DPW Supply and Equipment Division will close for inventory May 15-17. The Supply Division will reopen for business at 10 a.m. May 18.

For more information or emergency issues during this period, call Bina Dale at 545-1114.

Properly dispose of fluorescent tubes

Most fluorescent tubes on the market contain mercury, a substance that causes damage to the nervous system as well as birth defects. For this reason, care must be taken in the handling and disposal of these bulbs.

Breaking fluorescent tubes is dangerous because it releases mercury into the air and poses an environmental and health hazard. If a fluorescent tube is accidentally broken, ventilate the room immediately by opening a window and turning on a fan. Leave the room until all vapors have been exhausted. Wear gloves and sweep up broken glass and place it in a plastic bag for disposal. Any food exposed to the vapors should be thrown away. Hands should be washed thoroughly with soap and water after cleaning up the glass.

Fluorescent tubes used in the home can be placed on the curb for disposal in the landfill. If possible, tubes should be carefully packaged in the original packing containers to avoid breakage until they are safely in the garbage truck. Tubes should not be placed outside until just before pickup so that children will not be tempted to play with them

More stringent rules apply to tubes generated at the work place. At work, fluorescent tubes must be managed as a hazardous waste. Tubes used at the work-site cannot be placed in dumpsters. The local DRMO sends Fort Benning's fluorescent tubes to an off-post recycler where the mercury and other chemicals are reclaimed. Fluorescent tubes should be packaged in the original containers, carefully labeled with a yellow hazardous waste label and taken to the DRMO through normal turn-in procedures.

All rules pertaining to hazardous waste management apply to waste fluorescent tubes. Workers who place fluorescent tubes in dumpsters are violating the law and could be subject to criminal prosecution.

Recently, Phillips Lighting began manufacturing tubes with a low-mercury content that are not hazardous waste when they go bad. These tubes have a green cap on the end of them, making them easy to identify. DPW Self Help stocks these tubes for issue on-post. The ability to dispose of these "green" tubes in the normal trash and the added safety of the lower mercury content make them an attractive replacement to other fluorescent tubes.

For more information on fluorescent tube management by military and civilian units, call Deborah Gamble or Michael Nuckols at 545-4766.

Tricare now has mail-order pharmacy

Martin Army Community Hospital

As of April 1, the Tricare national mail-order pharmacy program was fully operational in all areas where the Defense Department's Tricare managed-care program operates.

As the final Tricare regions — in the Northeast and Mid-Atlantic states — become operational around mid-1998, the national mail-order pharmacy program will extend to those regions as well. The following persons are eligible to use the national mail-order program in Tricare areas:

•Active-duty service members worldwide;

•All persons who live in areas where the Tricare program is in operation;

•All persons who are enrolled in managed-care programs at former Public Health Service hospitals known as uniformed services treatment facilities (USTFs). These hospitals are also called "designated providers" in Tricare regions;

Tricare-eligible persons who live overseas and have APO or FPO addresses;

Medicare-eligible persons who are listed in the Defense Enrollment Eligibility Reporting System (DEERS) database and who live within the ZIP code service area (roughly a 40-mile radius) around a military medical facility that has been closed under the Base Realignment and Closure (BRAC) program. If you're a Medicare-eligible person who lives outside a closed medical facility's service area (also called a "catchment area"), you may still qualify to use the national mail-order pharmacy program if you obtained prescriptions at the military hospital within a year of its closure. If you fall into this category, call the DEERS Support Office, in Monterey, Calif., to establish your eligibility through a "declaration of reliance."

You can reach DEERS by calling toll-free (800) 334-4162 (California only); (800) 527-5602 (Alaska and Hawaii only); and (800) 538-9552 (all other states).

The national mail-order pharmacy program replaces all other mail-order programs that have been operated by Tricare contractors. The contractor for the program is Merck-Medco, of Maple Grove, Minn. The toll-free telephone number is (800) 903-4680.

Under the program, you can get up to a 90-day supply of non-controlled medications (or up to a 30-day supply of controlled medications) at a cost of $4 for active-duty family members or $8 for all others. There are no co-payments for active-duty service members. Shipping and handling is free.

Prescriptions will be filled with generic drugs when possible. Name-brand products may be substituted if the prescribing physician documents medical necessity for the name-brand medication.

DIABETICS

You may be eligible to receive your diabetic supplies AT NO COST to you if you qualify.
Diabetic supplies for Medicare or Private insurance patients will be shipped directly to your home.
We do all the paperwork.

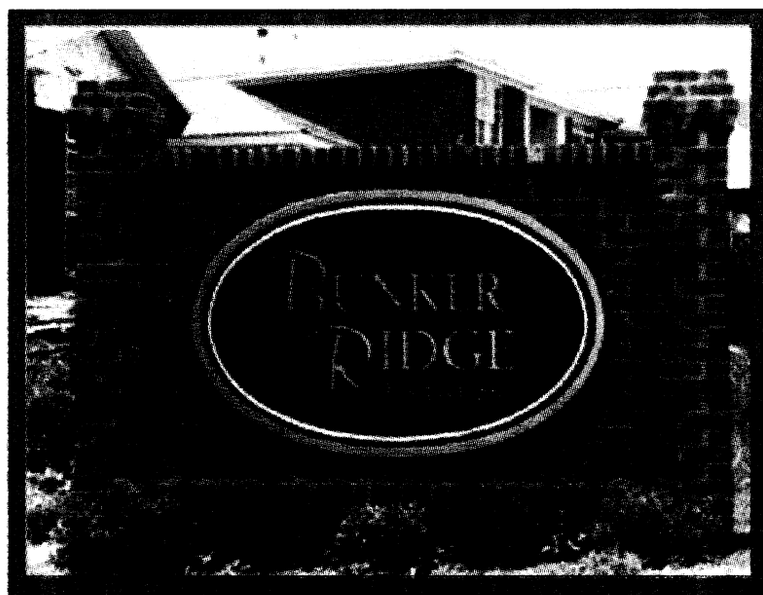
Institute offers springtime recipes to add more vegetables to diet

American Institute for Cancer Research

As health experts recommend eating more fruits and vegetables every day, there's no better time to heed this advice than springtime, when asparagus, spinach, strawberries and papaya are making their seasonal debut.

Spring's arrival encourages people to start spending more time in the produce aisles of the supermarket, choosing from a variety of delicious fruits and vegetables at their seasonal peaks.

The American Institute for Cancer Research reports that eating the recommended five servings of fruits and vegetables each day could lower cancer rates by more than 20 percent. Yet, most people don't include enough of these foods in their diet. By experimenting with different fruits and vegetables, and exploring new ways to prepare them, these nutrient-filled foods can become a regular part of the daily meals and part of an overall healthier way of life.



For instance, young spinach leaves, so readily available in spring, can make delicious salads. Try combining spinach with orange sections and serve with a low-fat tropical dressing. Simply blend 1/4 cup of store-bought mango chutney with two teaspoons of lemon juice, three to four tablespoons of low-sodium chicken bouillon (to make desired thickness) and one to two teaspoons of oil for a simple-to-make salad.

Grilled asparagus is another way to celebrate the return of spring. Simply brush the spears lightly with olive oil and grill until just tender, about seven to nine minutes, turning every three minutes or bake the asparagus at 475 degrees fahrenheit in a single layer on a baking sheet and serve with a sauce made from cornstarch-thickened orange juice.

For a fruity dessert using fresh strawberries, try making Citrus Berry Ice. It's light and not overly sweet. In a saucepan, soften one envelope of unflavored gelatin in one cup of orange juice and about three tablespoons of lemon juice. Add 1 1/2 teaspoons of grated lemon rind and 1/4 cup of sugar. Stir over low heat until the gelatin and sugar are dissolved, then cool. Stir in 1 1/2 cups of fresh, mashed strawberries (no sugar added) and 1/2 cup of unsweetened applesauce. Pour the mixture into a shallow pan and freeze until firm, about four hours. Serve as a refreshing, non-fat springtime treat.

For a free brochure with more information on how fruits and vegetables can help lower cancer risk, send a self-addressed, stamped (55 cents) envelope to: American Institute for Cancer Research, Dept. FF, P.O. Box 97167, Washington, DC 20090-7167.

The American Institute for Cancer Research is the only major cancer charity focusing exclusively on the link between diet, nutrition and cancer. The Institute provides a wide range of consumer education programs that have helped millions of Americans learn to make changes for lower cancer risk. AICR also supports innovative research in cancer prevention and treatment at universities, hospitals and research centers across the U.S. The Institute has provided more than $44 million in funding for research in diet, nutrition and cancer. AICR's Internet Web site address is http://www.aicr.org.

Mother's Day: Holiday sets record for most phone calls in a day

Chaplain (Capt.) Matthew Goff
3rd Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment

Did you know that different holidays are known for setting records?

reflections

For instance, Thanksgiving Day is the number one day of the year for people to attend movies. Christmas Day is the number one day for gift giving. Valentine's Day is the number one day for giving flowers.

But it is Mother's Day that holds the record for having the most phone calls made on a single day.

In fact, each year a record number of calls are made on this special day of recognition. Children call home to express their love and appreciation to their mothers. Husbands tell their wives, mothers of their children they love them.

I can remember several Mother's Days when I tried to "reach out and touch" my mother only to hear, (beeping tone), "all circuits are busy, please try your call again later."

And I did, sometimes until late into the night. I just had to get through. Why? Because it is important for my mother to hear from me on this special day. Just as it is important for your mother to hear from you.

Sometimes I think it must have been the retailers (WalMart and Kmart) or the card makers who came up with this holiday as an attempt to put one more hand in our pocketbooks. But actually it was one daughter, Ana Jarvis, who began a campaign in 1907 to establish a national mother's day following the death of her own mother.

Local churches were the first to celebrate an annual Mother's Day. Then in 1914, President Woodrow Wilson proclaimed the event a national holiday to be held each year on the second Sunday of May. Truly, mothers deserve our honor and recognition.

Every day mothers give out hugs, wipe away tears, help children discover the joy of learning, instill values, pack lunches, make houses into homes, pass on faith and help sons and daughters become responsible citizens. Virtues that describe mothers include loving, nurturing, giving and sacrificing.

The Bible tells the story of many mothers who lived out these virtues for their families.

Jochebed, the mother of Moses was such a woman (Exodus 2:1-10). There is also Hannah, the mother of the prophet Samuel (1 Samuel 1-2), Mary, the mother of Jesus and Eunice, the mother of Timothy (1 Timothy 1:5). Each of these women demonstrated the kind of loving selflessness that raising children is all about.

Every day, mothers throughout the country and around the world live out this same kind of love and sacrifice in ways that are less dramatic but just as significant.

Mothers sacrifice time and personal preferences; share love in the joys and sorrows, ups and downs, triumphs and tragedies of daily life with children; give, even when tired and sometimes unappreciated by the little ones in her care. She nurtures the children God has entrusted to her.

Sunday, as sons, daughters and husbands prepare to honor our mothers, let us do so with the realization that being a mother is a high calling from God. And remember to call your mother. Help set a new record this year.

Speaking of records, Father's Day must hold the record for the most neckties given as gifts in a single day.

The Martin Army Medical Mentor

... a community service from Martin Army Community Hospital

Dr. Virginia Yates
Martin Army Community Hospital

While many people are very conscientious about prevention and maintenance on cars, the same number are not as careful about their bodies. Many cancer deaths could be prevented by earlier detection and treatment.

Skin cancer

According to the Public Health Service, skin cancer is the most common cancer in the United States. All adults should know how to inspect the skin for abnormal or suspicious bumps, lumps, scars or freckles. Any colored or pigmented mole or freckle should be shown to a doctor. This is especially true in fair skinned individuals. How often a person should be screened for skin cancer is usually decided individually and is based on whether a person has a history of skin cancer or is a high risk from years of sunlight exposure.

Colorectal cancer

Colorectal cancer is the second leading cause of cancer death in the United States. Generally, the best way to check for cancer in this area is to look with a lighted tube called a flexible sigmoidoscope. An additional or even alternative test, depending on the situation, is an X-ray called the air-contrast barium enema. When and how often this should be done is under debate. Many doctors start when patients are 50 years old and recheck every three to five years. Others base testing on a family history of colon polyps and cancer.

Another test that is done to look for colorectal cancer is the stool occult blood test. A sample of the stool (feces) is placed on a special card and a chemical is added to look for blood. Blood in the feces can indicate cancer. Blood in the stool can make the feces black, dark or bright red.

Prostate cancer

Prostate cancer is the most common cancer in men after skin cancer. It is estimated that one of every 10 men in the U.S. will develop prostate cancer. A digital (finger) rectal exam is recommended annually after age 40 to feel both the prostate and the rectum. (Women are also examined rectally to feel for cancer in the rectum.)

Breast cancer

Breast cancer is the most common cancer among women in the United States. A woman has a one in nine chance of developing breast cancer in her lifetime. Women age 18 and older should have a breast exam performed by a health professional during a periodic exam. This is usually done when the Pap smear is done. The American Academy of Family Physicians recommends a clinical (professional) breast exam every one to three years from age 30 to 39, then every year after age 40. Women should be taught self breast examination, usually at age 18 and are encouraged to check breasts and underarms every month.

The mammogram is also a part of the breast cancer screen. The American Cancer Society recommends mammograms every one to two years beginning at age 40 and then every year at age 50.

Testicular cancer

Cancer of the testicle is the most common cancer in white males age 20 to 34 years. The American Cancer Society recommends a testicular exam should be done every three years from age 20 to 39 then annually beginning at age 40.

Cervical cancer

The Pap smear tests for cervical cancer. The American Academy of Family Physicians recommends yearly Pap tests for sexually active women or age 18 and older. After a woman has had three or more consecutive normal tests, the Pap test can be done less frequently at the physician's discretion, but not less often than every three years.

Special thanks to Dr. Marie Trenga, Family Practice Department for her assistance on this article. The screening recommendations are those published by the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services.

Trial: Teaches about justice

we are innocent until proven guilty."

SJA presented the mock trial, State vs. Ortiz, in which Spc. Manny Ortiz was accused of stealing a girl's bike. SJA held three mock trials during the day and during this particular trial, Lt. Col. Dana Chipman was the presiding judge. Col. James D. Schmidli was the judge for the previous trials held earlier that day. The trial was also complete with court reporter Kathryn Perdue and bailiff Brenda Hain, who chose seven students to serve as a jury and swore in each witness.

Prosecutor Capt. David Barrett and defense counsel Sgt. Raymond Dodd each presented their case as true to life as possible. They each called witnesses and explained the process of the trial to students as they performed.

Anuaite Mubangu, a Dexter Elementary student, played the girl whose bike was allegedly stolen by Ortiz. Military policeman Staff Sgt. Mike Scaliatine was featured as a witness and Faith vice principal John Ulferts played Fred Florsheim, a shoe salesman and a character witness for the prosecution.

Barrett and Dodd questioned each witness. Chipman explained to the student jury the responsibility placed on them to find Ortiz innocent or guilty. Barrett and Dodd gave their closing arguments and in the interest of time, the jury was asked to render a decision based on the evidence they had seen and heard.

Three students thought Ortiz was guilty and four found him not guilty. Herdener explained that in a real trial, at least two-thirds of the jury has to agree in order to reach a final verdict.

Amy C. Lefler, 12, a sixth-grader, daughter of Cynthia and Lt. Col. Thomas Lefler, U.S. Army Dental Activity, felt Ortiz was guilty because of evidence the prosecution presented which said he stole the bike because he didn't have enough money to buy his own daughter a bike.

"It was hard to decide," Lefler said. "We needed more evidence."

Meganlee Siegfried, 12, a sixth-grader, daughter of Dian and Staff Sgt. John Siegfried, 1st Battalion, 38th Infantry Regiment, Infantry Training Brigade, said being part of the jury was scary.

"We needed to ask more questions to find out if he was guilty or innocent," she said.

"This was good for the students to see what a military trial would be like," Herdener explained.

"It was a lot of fun to be in the trial," Ulferts said. "Captain Herdener did a brilliant job — it was an interesting and amusing script that taught the students what the judicial system is all about. The students were very attentive. The JAG office did a terrific job."

Golfers drive in money for engineering programs

Nicole Longstreath
Special to the Bayonet©

Members of The Society of American Military Engineers (SAME) held a golf tournament May 1 at the Follow Me Golf Course to benefit engineering programs at Fort Benning and in Columbus.

The tournament consisted of 44 two-man teams who were preflighted by handicap into four separate flights. The tournament was "two-ball scramble," which meant the best score was taken from each hole played by the team. The SAME teams competed for a first place prize of $250.

SAME consists of military members and businesses involved with military engineers. Many civilians considered the event to be beneficial to their individual businesses.

Ken Hudson, business manager for Brown and Root Services Corporation, has been golfing for 10 years and said a tournament like the one held May 1 is a good social event.

"I think this tournament is a good environment for business relationships," Hudson said. "It takes down perceived barriers between companies by fostering a partner-type relationship and gives companies a forum to discuss issues."

Alex Silva, project manager for Williams Engineering in Auburn, Ala., agreed a golf tournament was an ideal place to discuss business issues.

"It is a relaxed setting, this is not as tense as an office," Silva said.

Winners from the first flight were:

1st place - Kenny Bell and John Bustamante with a score of 62.

2nd place - Chad Andrae and Leon Dunagan with a score of 63.

3rd place - Don Conner and Joe Ford with a score of 66.

Winners from the second flight were:

1st place - Terry Baker and Ralph Vickery with a score of 70.

2nd place - Lee and Mary Henderson with a score of 71.

3rd place - Hal Herrin and David Banks with a score of 71.

Winners from the third flight were:

1st place - Clive Huckaby and Rusty King with a score of 72.

2nd place - Bruce Sturcken and Steve Porter with a score of 72.

3rd place - Steve Smith and Aldon Jenkins with a score of 72.

Winners from the fourth flight were:

1st place - Keaven Moreau and Rodney Alles with a score of 78.

2nd place - Rich Thompson and Johnny Hardy with a score of 80.

3rd place - Bob Walker and Ricky Cannon with a score of 82.

Military Appreciation Week kicks off Monday

Spc. Michelle J. Davis
Bayonet staff writer

Fort Benning is gearing up for Military Appreciation Week, which is set to begin Monday.

Soldiers are still needed to participate in the different activities scheduled throughout the week including anything from volleyball to bowling.

Even if military members have not signed up for any of the 15 events, everyone is invited to come out and cheer on their favorite teams.

Each event falls under a specific cup for which the winners in each event will collect a certain amount of points.

The three cups include:

* Commander's Trophy,
 "Follow Me" Cup and
 Benning Team Cup.

The Military Appreciation Week mini-picnic is scheduled for 8:30 a.m. to noon at York Field May 15 and the awards ceremony is set for 10:30 a.m. on York Field.

The Columbus RedStixx will sponsor a Military Appreciation Game Monday. Pre-game activities will begin at 6 p.m. and the game against the Capital City Bombers will follow at 7:15 p.m. Commanding General Maj. Gen. Carl F. Ernst is scheduled to throw out the first pitch. Military members can buy tickets for 50 cents per person and $1 per family.

For more information, call Capt. John Hanson at 544-6911.

Stand Down Day highlights importance of safety

USAIC Public Affairs Office

In an effort to provide a safe and healthy environment for the Fort Benning community, all members are encouraged to participate in a variety of safety related activities during Safety Stand Down Day Thursday.

Commanders and directors will plan and conduct programs relevant to their mission. Programs should include a review of accident causes and participation in a variety of safety related activities.

"This day is important because it allows people to concentrate on safety," said Regis Beighley, Infantry Branch Safety Office safety manager. "It shows the importance of every employees' and Soldiers' well-being. Safety is no accident. It needs to be planned and thought out. The Safety Stand Down Day is a good day to review safety plans."

> Infantry Safety Branch Office safety manager

Most units are planning to brief Soldiers and civilians on:

- •Heat injury prevention,
- •Water and boating safety,
- •Privately owned vehicle inspections,
- •Office inspections,
- •Heat injury prevention,
- •Security inspections,
- •Safe sex,
- •Hazardous chemicals,
- •Preventive maintenance, checks and services (PMCS) on vehicles,
- •Alcohol and drug prevention and abuse,
- •HIV and AIDS prevention,
- •Environmental awareness,
- •Suicide prevention,
- •Discussion on hazardous chemicals,
- •Safety and fire department briefing,
- • Driving under the influence,
- •Supply issues in regards to safety and a spill response and team training session will also be held.
- •Weapons safety, a fire drill, poisonous plant identification,
- •Electrical safety,
- •Auto, boating, water, sports, fitness, pool and traffic safety,
- •Inspection of equipment,
- •Review of Material Safety Data Sheets,
- •Storm safety classes,
- •Proper lifting techniques,
- •Insect bites,
- •Hearing and eye protection,
- •Snake bites and their identification and
- •Food safety.

Safety Stand Down Day has been in existence for 10 years at Fort Benning, it was a Training and Doctrine Command initiative.

Fort Benning plans to recognize the following units for their safety records May 29 during the CG Two-Star Breakfast:

- •11th Infantry Regiment,
- •29th Infantry Regiment,
- •36th Engineer Group (Combat) and
- •Directorate of Public Safety.

These awards are given to units that have maintained a 20 percent accident rate less than the previous year, Beighley said.

"It is hoped that the major subordinate commands will give out awards to individual units and people with good safety records.

"For example, a driver can be given an award for not having a traffic violation or accident in a year."

In accidents last year, three people from the Fort Benning community were killed. One in a POV, one on a motorcycle and one in a boating accident on Uchee Creek, Beighley said.

"We have to stay alert at all times. An accident occurs when we least expect it.

"Look around and report safety hazards to immediate supervisors."

Post celebrates military

Sgt. Marc G. Turchin
Bayonet staff writer

One of the common events around this area every May is Military Appreciation Week (MAW) and this year's competition began Monday.

The week provides the post community with a variety of events and competition to either attend or take part in. It culminates every year with the "Burn the General" run, which will be held this morning beginning at 9 a.m on York Field. As usual, the Commanding General Maj. Gen. Carl F. Ernst, will begin 30 meters in front of the rest of the runners.

Today is also the wrap-up ceremony for MAW at 11 a.m. in front of Infantry Hall. The winners of the Commander's and Follow Me Cup and the Benning Team Cup will be announced during the ceremony. The 11th Infantry Regiment is the defending champion of all cups.

As of close of business Tuesday, the 29th Infantry Regiment was in the lead in the "Follow Me Cup" competition with 50 points, followed by the 11th Infantry Regiment with 43 and the 36th Engineer Group (Combat) with 38.

In the "Benning Team"contest, the 11th Infantry Regiment held a slight edge over the 36th Engineer Group (Combat) 12 to 10. The 29th Infantry Regiment followed closely with 8 points.

The week began with many events including beach volleyball at the Kelley Hill Recreation Center, track and field events at Doughboy Stadium, basketball at the Briant Wells Field House and bench pressing also at the Briant Wells Field House.

One of the highlights of Monday's activities was the Celebrity Softball game at Gowdy Field and Military Appreciation Night with the Columbus RedStixx at Golden Park.

It was the commanders vs. the sergeants major in the softball event. The commander's captain, post Chief of Staff Col. John Latimer led his team to an 8-5 win over last year's winning enlisted team.

"Both teams played an excellent game," Latimer said. "The real key for our victory was our coaching strategy of no practices. Had we practiced as much as the sergeants major, we would have hurt a lot of our players."

The Ranger Training Brigade sponsored Military Appreciation Week at Golden Park to see the RedStixx take on the Capital City Bombers.

The night began with the rangers demonstrating some hand-to-hand techniques. They were followed by the post's Command Exhibition Parachute Team, the Silver Wings. Five parachutists landed on the baseball diamond with the captain of the team, Sgt. 1st Class Michael Elliott, carrying the baseball used for the first pitch during his flight from 10, 000 feet.

The first pitch was thrown by 8-year-old Gunnar Hanson, son of Capt. John R. Hanson, 4th Ranger Training Battalion. The RedStixx lost the game 11-6.

Check next week's Bayonet Sports section for a complete wrap-up of all the competitions.

Sgt. Marc G. Turchin

A member of the commander's softball team makes an attempt to score a run as the ball is thrown to the catcher from the outfield during the celebrity softball game Monday at Gowdy Field. The runner was called safe and the commanders went on to win the game 8-5.

National Police Week is celebrated May 10-16 to honor the police of today and to honor the memory of those who have died protecting law and order.

The U.S. flag will be flown at half-staff today in honor of National Peace Officers Memorial Day.

The nation's law enforcement officers protect our neighborhoods and highways from crime and varied disasters. Within the past decade, more than 1,600 officers have been killed in the line of duty.

Army family issues surface during meeting

Harriet Rice
Army News Service

Establishing a retiree "Bill of Rights" was one of five recommendations made by delegates to the first Army Family Action Plan "process action team" (PAT), which met April 26-30 at Fort Belvoir, Va.

Other top issues surfaced by the 18 PAT delegates involved the need for financial-planning education, remote-site compensation, additional marriage counselors and a more flexible dental plan.

This was the first year a PAT meeting was held instead of the full Department of the Army-level AFAP planning conference. Last year it was decided that the AFAP planning conference would be held only every other year and a smaller process action team would continue to work issues in the alternate years.

For five days, PAT volunteers from 12 major Army commands worked 46 issues that had survived scrutiny by chains of command to reach the Department of the Army level. The delegates' mission: whittle that number down to the five items they considered the most critical to the Army's quality of life and present those issues and recommended fixes to the 29 members of the AFAP General Officer Steering Committee.

In addition, the group was asked to name the five most valuable services in the Army today.

Medical and dental benefits topped the list, followed by housing, child development services, youth services and the commissary. These benefits were briefed by Army National Guardsman Maj. Barry Richmond from Ninevah, Ind. He and five other delegates were selected by their peers to present issues to the AFAP General Officer Steering Committee, chaired by Army Vice Chief of Staff Gen. William W. Crouch.

Retiree rights

Leading the list of issues from the process action team were retirement benefits and entitlements and their perceived erosion. Donald Bohnsack, a retired warrant officer from Fort Leavenworth, Kan., told the committee, "Most Soldiers don't know the difference between entitlements and benefits and there's a big difference.

"They think there's an erosion because there's a base closure. The PX and the commissary go away; your medical facilities go away. But these are benefits, not entitlements," continued Bohnsack. Turning to entitlements, he said, "People who came in (to the Army) in 1985 were promised retirement at 20 years, 50 percent. In 1986 it was changed. We who came in prior to 1986 did not lose anything. A lot of them think they will. It's more education than anything else."

The proposed retiree "Bill of Rights" would lay out for Soldiers exactly what they can expect upon retirement based on when they came into the Army and in which retirement plan they are enrolled.

"The bill of rights is a popular issue right now," said Maj. Gen. David Ohle, assistant deputy chief of staff for personnel. "It's popular in the Army, in Department of Defense and in Congress."

Other steps urged were developing an educational plan to communicate and market Soldier benefits and continued funding of the Army Career and Alumni Program.

Financial management

In addition to education on their retirement entitlements, career Soldiers need to learn to manage their finances and stay out of debt. That was at the heart of the issue presented by Fort Carson's Staff Sgt. Michael Foster, representing U.S. Army Forces Command.

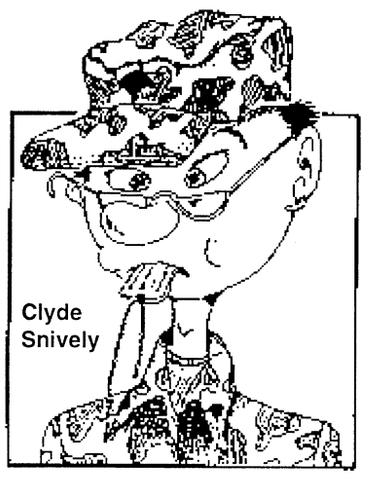
Foster cited $30 million in bad checks at AAFES in fiscal year 1996 and AAFES Deferred Payment Plan accounts delinquent by $20 million.

"Commanders and NCOs have stated that this is one of their biggest problem areas that takes up a large amount of (their) time. Most Soldiers coming into the military today have received very little or no financial training," Foster said.

The team recommended a full-time command financial specialist position at battalion level throughout the Army, similar to a program currently in place at Fort Hood, Texas.

Command Sgt. Major Benjamin Palacios, III Corps, has seen first hand the success of the Fort Hood program.

"I fully support this. We are saving a lot of Soldiers from indebtedness."



Palacios tied Soldiers' financial problems to the "lack of Safety Day: Exercising caution will help keep yourself, others injury free

Spc. Clyde Snively
Bayonet columnist

commentary

Not sure if God really looks after fools, but someone sure must. As I look back on my short life, I often wonder how I managed to make it to where I am now.

What brings this to mind is the safety class we had in the office. Boy was it overdue.

We went around the room sharing "dumb things that can get you killed."

Nihil was the first to go. She said that if you don't "ground" a helicopter when hooking up a sling load you could get electrocuted.

"Yah, Nihil, like we in public affairs really need to know that."

Then I remembered the time the artillery guys were short-handed and recruited me to assist with hooking up a load of ammo. Now I know what the guy with the rod was doing. What I still don't understand is how Nihil knew this. Olleo capitalized on that one. She said, "speaking of static electricity, you guys with pickup trucks need to remember not to fill a gas can while it's sitting on the bed of the truck."

"Why?" we all demanded to know in unison.

"Because the static electricity coming off the pumps could set off a spark and cause the gasoline to explode," she said knowingly and since she was a captain and assigned to the combat engineers, we knew she spoke the truth.

"Speaking of pickup trucks," Nihil, the brand new truck owner who's becoming quite the spring butt, chirped in, "don't ride passengers in the back of pickups unless the back's enclosed. You could throw them out and kill them," she said, solemnly.

"Yeah," Turge said, "especially if you're driving. Heck, the way you work your clutch, it's possible to get thrown through the windshield."

"That's what seat belts are for, dummy," Nihil snapped back.

"Speaking of getting blown up, I'm surprised I haven't been blown away when I spill gas on my hot lawn mower. I almost never wait for it to cool down before refueling," Boss Man said.

"Yeah, and I bet you're the kind who doesn't wear hard-tipped boots or tries to clear the chute before the blade stops spinning," Olleo piped up again.

"Oh, shaddup," Boss Man said, getting a little testy.

"I always make sure my deer stand is secure and I'm tied into the tree," Deer Slayer said.

"Is that dear stand or deer stand," Turge asked.

"Yeah and is that tied in or chained in?" Boss Man asked, trying to regain his humor.

"As journalists we need to be aware of carpal tunnel syndrome," I ventured meekly. Growing bolder, I suggested that we should get up from our computer terminals at least hourly and stretch to keep our backs from cramping and our eyes from crossing.

"Snively," Deer Slayer said, "if you ever sit at your computer for more than 15 minutes, I want to know about it."

"Groovy Toolooly," Ma Editor said, "we haven't even talked about boating safety and this is the start of boating week."

"I can tell you I hate it when bass boats speed by and try to tip my canoe," Davinsky said.

"Yeah, how fast do those guys think bass can swim anyway," I wondered.

"Well, that's a good reason for life vests to be worn by all boaters and an even better reason to not drink and boat," Ma Editor, said, unperturbed by the interruptions.

Carolyn, who went through the civilian health and fitness program, reminded everyone, "You are what you eat, so if you want to live healthy, you need to eat healthy."

I admitted that Carolyn really looked sharp since she went on her rabbit diet but that I thought her eyes were beginning to turn pink.

After all that, we'd really built up our appetites. So we adjourned to the Pizza Buffet for lunch and a food fight — no, not the kind where you throw food at one another, but the kind where you fight off Turge. You need to be fast or strong to keep him from getting all the pieces before you get your chance.

So, in honor of "Safety Stand Down Day," my advice-don't be a fool. Even God grows weary after awhile, so take it upon yourself to protect yourself from the obvious as well as the not so obvious.

Parents should shoulder responsibility of their children

Nicole Longstreath
Special to the Bayonet©

When anyone has a child, he or she has an obligation to society to either teach the child responsibility for his or her actions or to find a set of parents who will.

I was taught an important lesson when I was caught covering for a friend who had bought marijuana. I learned quickly not to do it again as a result of a stiff, month-long "grounding."

commentary

I also learned to have a healthy fear of my parents. My father's stern voice and index finger pointed directly in my face told me, "Don't even think about doing that."

My parents taught me responsibility. Why haven't so many other parents done the same?

I was taught to be responsible for my actions at an early age while I watched people I went to school with get into trouble for the same thing over and over again.

I don't know if these kids were just slow and didn't realize if they smoked in the bathrooms at school they were probably going to get caught or if they knew they were going to get caught and didn't care because no one was waiting at home to punish them.

Two years ago, my cousin, who is six years older than me, was sent to an eight-week-long, federally funded "boot camp" to avoid a prison sentence.

He has been in and out of trouble, probation and jail for as long as I can remember and still owes me $120 since 1993.

Since this "boot camp" was federally funded, that means taxpayers, like me, paid for my cousin to be taught responsibility because his mother didn't teach him.

Now, my cousin hasn't been a minor in a while, so his mother couldn't really be held liable for his actions; however, parents of the alleged assassins in Padukah, Ky., and Jonesboro, Ark., could be.

They should be.

If children are raised in a home where they are taught responsibility at an early age, they don't steal firearms and start picking off classmates at random.

Now, I know that is at the opposite end of the spectrum from my cousin stealing car stereos, I don't think eight weeks of a drill sergeant in your face, yelling and ordering you into the front leaning rest position will rehabilitate anyone, nor will a couple months in jail (my cousin proved that). Basic training wasn't supposed to be punishment anyway.

Knowing their parents are paying a hefty fine or seeing their mother in that safety orange prison jumpsuit with the letters "DOC" on the back just might.

Obviously, we can't completely control how the government spends the taxes we pay them, but taxpayers shouldn't have to pick up where irresponsible parents left off — paying to rehabilitate someone else's children.

Safety Stand Down Day set for Thursday

Fort Benning continues to save lives and preserve resources by fostering safe attitudes and implementing risk management. To advance our goal of providing a safe and healthful place for us to work and live, I am designating May 21, as Safety Stand Down Day. If essential training or critical events preclude participation on this day, commanders will designate an alternate date.

Commanders and directors will plan and conduct programs relevant to their mission. The program should include a review of accident causes and participation in a variety of safety related activities.

We owe each Soldier and employee our best effort in ensuring their safety. Follow me, safely!

545-BOSS

Dial 545-BOSS is the commander's action line for Soldiers, family members and civilians to call when they have problems or complaints that can't be resolved elsewhere.

While it is not a substitute for the chain of command or for agencies established to provide assistance, the line offers another means of communication between Fort Benning's community and commanders.

The Bayonet features some of the calls that may benefit other members of the Fort Benning community.

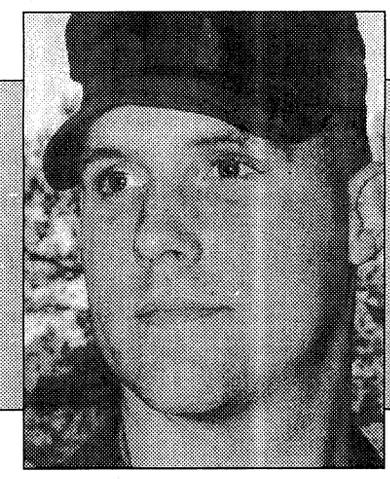
Call: The caller would like to know why there is no assigned parking in McGraw Manor.

Directorate of Public Works response:

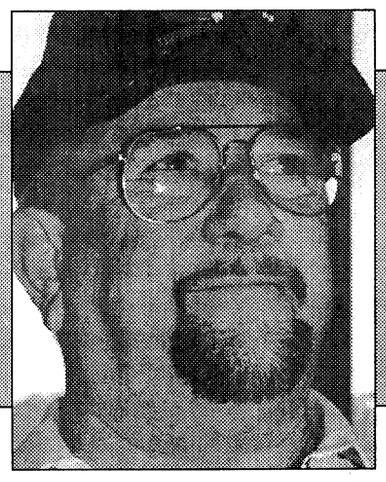
It was explained that parking within McGraw Manor is on a first-come, first-serve basis. One parking space per unit is provided adjacent to the quarters. The DPW is working on a project to provide additional parking spaces, which should be completed this year. The caller was advised to contact the Community Life Office NCO if the occupants wanted to voluntarily assign parking spaces for the residents of the building. However, parking would not be enforced by the provost marshal.

VARIOUS VOICES

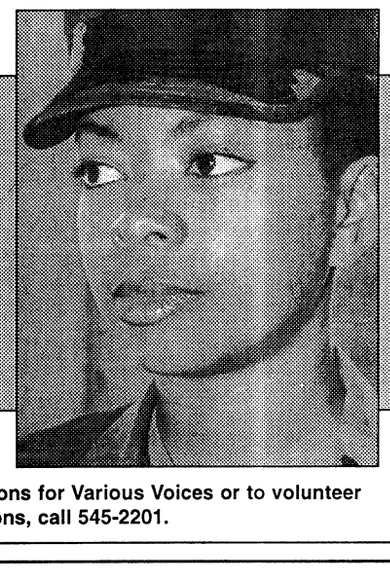
Do you think parents should be held responsible for their child's actions?



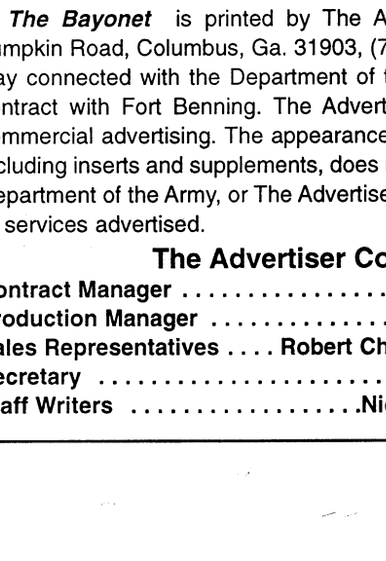
Staff Sgt. Curtis E. Clemons, Headquarters and Headquarters Battery, 1st Battalion, 10th Field Artillery, 3rd Brigade, 3rd Infantry Division (Mechanized) — "Yes, everything starts at home with the parents. That's where children pick up the most information."



Rebeca Highfill, family member — "Yes, because they are the ones who raised them and should have taught them values at home."



Janice W. Jones, family member — "Yes, but it depends. Sometimes, parents aren't doing what they should and sometimes, they just can't control their kids no matter what they do."



Spc. Keith A. Russell, HHB, 1st Bn., 10th Field Art., 3rd Bde, 3rd Inf. Div. (Mech.) — "Yes, because children follow their parents' example and follow in their footsteps."

Retired U.S. Air Force Lt. Col. Charles E. Beam, Lagrange, Ga. — "Yes. When parents are responsible for their children, children grow up to be responsible. They are the ones who bring the child into the world and have a responsibility to raise them right."

Cpl. Sherry Chipman, 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment — "Yes. Parents need to raise their children how they see fit. Timeouts alone are just not working. They just need to let a mother be a mother and father be a father."

AFAP: Meeting answers questions

Soldier pay." He described how a private first class, married with two children, lives on $1,670 a month. "By the time he pays his rent and everything else, ... that Soldier has a disposable income of $17. What can a soldier do with $17? If he has a flat tire, he can't even take his family out to dinner at McDonald's. So he has to fall back to moonlighting, his spouse working, running up the credit cards," said Palacios. By working with command financial specialists, he said Soldiers learn to manage their money more efficiently.

Sgt. Major of the Army Robert E. Hall supported parts of the solution that recommended incorporating personal financial management training in Army school systems, but he expressed reservations about establishing a full-time position in units.

"I'm not sure we can afford sergeants first class out of the force at battalion-level Army wide," Hall said. "There are other good programs out there. The secret to this is getting it into the NCO education system where we train leaders. Then every sergeant, every squad leader, every first sergeant becomes an expert in financial management."

Brig. Gen. Evan R. Gaddis, commander of the U.S. Army Community and Family Support Center, said that CFSC is already paying a civilian firm to develop this type of training.

"What I have to do now is get with Training and Doctrine Command," Gaddis said. "We're already working to get this into the (Army) schools."

Remote pay

If meeting living expenses is a problem at a large installation where all Army services are available, what happens to Soldiers who are assigned duties at locations geographically remote from those services? They suffer. That was the heart of the issue discussed by Lisa Marcum, wife of a Fort Knox enlisted Soldier recently selected to be an Army recruiter.

"There are many Soldiers living in isolated areas such as recruiters, Army National Guard and ROTC staff. These Soldiers incur increased costs without compensation, which leads to major financial difficulties," Marcum said. "Our recommendation is to compensate (them) for the additional expenses. By doing this we would increase the morale and quality of life for these soldiers and their families."

Crouch acknowledged the problem. "This is a toughie," he said.

"I think this is a very appropriate issue, and it will be part of our study. It will help us in our efforts," he assured the group.

Marriage counseling

Very often it is money problems that contribute to volatile marital relationships, according to the PAT findings. Sometimes couples need and seek outside help in the form of marriage counseling. But, as U.S. Army Pacific Command's representative, Spc. Daniella Rosario of Fort Richardson, Alaska, pointed out in her briefing, there is a shortage of professional marriage and family counselors.

"When families of Soldiers are left behind upon deployment, they are left in a place they are not familiar with. They experience difficulties adjusting to overseas environments," said Rosario.

While there are chaplains available, she pointed out, not all of them are trained marital counselors. Cultural diversity frequently precludes the use of local civilian counseling services, and some people are uncomfortable seeking help from a chaplain not of their religion. Rosario concluded by asking the Army to increase the number of family counselors overseas and social-work assets.

The Army chaplain on the Steering Committee, Brig. Gen. Gaylord T. Gunhus, responded by explaining how $42,000 is spent annually to train 12 family-life chaplains who are assigned to Family Life Centers.

Dental benefits

Presenting the fifth and final issue — an appeal for more flexibility in the family member dental plan — was U.S. Army Europe's representative 16-year-old Chris Hansen of Wiesbaden. Though his issue was serious, Hansen elicited laughter as he introduced himself.

"I have a feeling I was chosen because I was the only member of our group with braces."

The existing dental plan does not include such procedures as general anesthesia and extended orthodontics, Hansen said. Office of the Surgeon General representative Brig. Gen. John Parker agreed. He said that families with children between the ages of 6 and 16, when it is important to have good orthodontics, "may want to pay $10 a month to have this in their dental plan. In the long run, this is the right way to go. I think we should pursue this."

"This conference underscores the ability of the Army to listen to itself introspectively, to accept problems and deal with issues and try and solve them," Crouch said. "That's part of our doctrine... It's been working for years, and our Army is better for it."

Heritage program celebrates diversity

Nicole Longstreath
Special to the Bayonet©

Three-hundred people gathered May 4 at the Main NCO Club to celebrate Asian and Pacific Islander history.

Luncheon participants were treated to a buffet of Asian cuisine before a speech presented by guest speaker Dom Manio, vice principal at Spencer High School.

After presenting a brief chronology of Asian history, Manio spoke of the need for diversity in American culture.

"Non-Hispanic whites have dominated our culture," Manio said, "The solution to our problems is learning culture education for the betterment of our community."

Equal Opportunity adviser Sgt. 1st Class Evelyn J. Richardson also believes in the need for diversity.

"All cultures have some value to society," Richardson said. "It is good to have diversity and a variety of cultures in America."

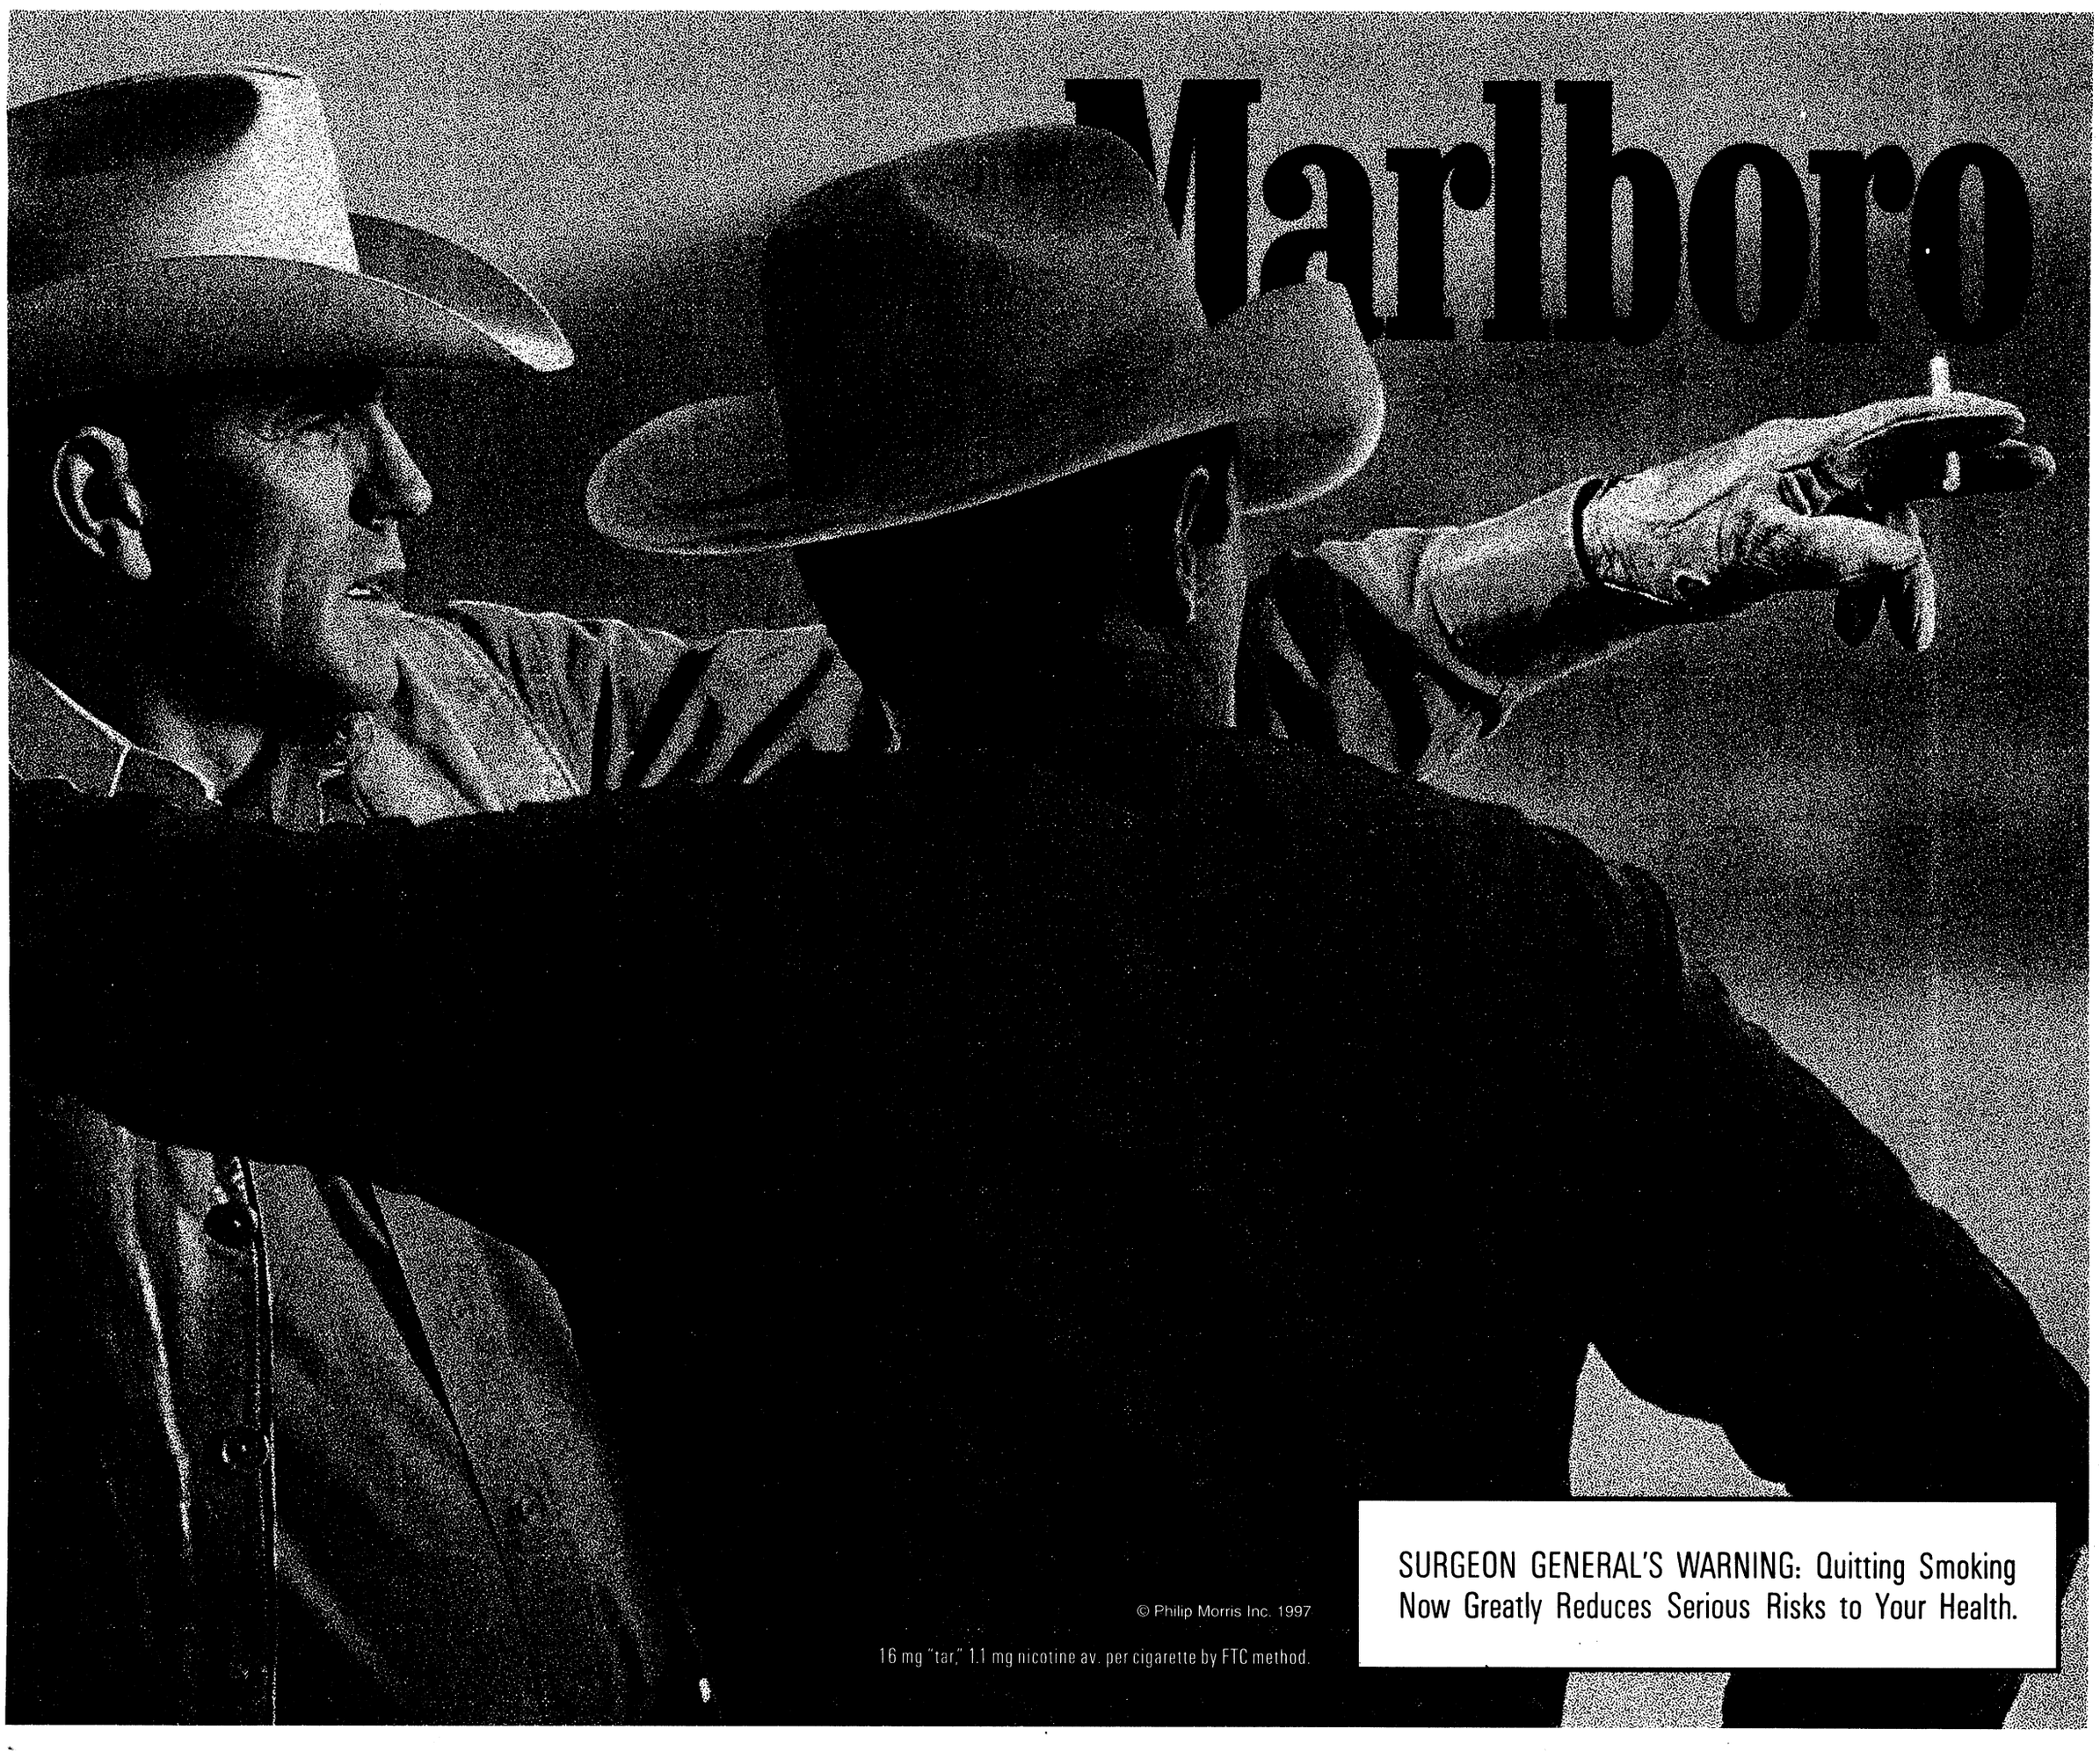
Manio said diversity in leadership was key to making things work in America.

"Every person has their own unique way of doing things," Manio said, "The more diverse a group is, the more you have to use different styles and strategies of leadership."

Cultural diversity, Manio said, is something we as Americans should pursue.

"Many cultures contribute to the richness of our community," Manio said. "Let us learn more about one another. In understanding, there is respect."

Manio said respecting one another was just the right thing to do.



"If I want to be respected, I have to respect others," Manio said, "But you have to give respect first before you can expect respect."

After Manio's speech, the crowd watched as representatives from several Asian and Pacific countries entertained the crowd with samples of their countries' dances. The presentations included dances from the countries of Korea, India, China, Philippines, Tahiti and Samoa.

Anjie Kumar, Federal Womens' Program manager for AAFES and a native of the Fiji Islands said that the dances made her feel at home.

"They were all so great," Kumar said, "When we (Asians) are so far away from home it is good to know we have some of our culture here."

Soldiers need transportation appts

Peak moving season is here. Soldiers who have their reassignment orders should call the transportation office at 545-3156 to make an appointment for shipment or storage of household goods to avoid delays. Ten copies of orders are required.

For more information, call Linda Kelley at 545-6010.

1998 Infantry Ball set

The 1998 Army Infantry Ball will be held at 6 p.m. June 10 at the Columbus Convention and Trade Center Iron Works. The Infantry Ball will include the presentation of the Doughboy Awards as well as the celebration of the 223rd birthday of the Army.

For more information, call 544-8095 or 544-9644 by June 1.

ID card office changes hours

Beginning June 1, the office hours for the Main Post ID Card facility will be 8 a.m. to 4 p.m Monday, Tuesday and Friday, 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. Wednesday and 8 a.m. to 1 p.m. Thursday. The facility will close every Thursday at 1 p.m. for training.

Main Post ID Card Branch has an appointment system available for more convenient service. Personnel with appointments have priority over walk-ins and are seen within five minutes of their scheduled appointment time.

Walk-ins are always welcome but appointments are highly encouraged. The appointment desk number is 545-4068. Operating hours are 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday, Tuesday and Friday, 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. Wednesday and 8 a.m. to 1 p.m. Thursday. The facility will close every Thursday at 1 p.m.

SFC selection board to meet

A Department of the Army selection board will convene May 27 to consider Soldiers for promotion to sergeant first class.

Also, the board will review records for possible elimination under the Qualitative Management Program.

All eligible Soldiers must review their personnel qualification records.

Soldiers who meet eligibility criteria must have a current photo. To schedule an appointment, call 545-4417.

Complete evaluation reports are authorized. Eligibility criteria must be met.

Noncommissioned officers who meet eligibility criteria must review their personnel records and authenticate their personnel qualification record, which goes to the selection board.

Contact your personnel sergeant or call the Adjutant General or Personnel and Operations Division at 545-2872 or 545-5640.

Benning Blvd restricts traffic

The out-bound lane of Benning Boulevard continues to be restricted to one-lane traffic until May 22 from Custer Road for approximately 1/4 mile. One lane will remain open during this period but traffic will move slower than normal due to construction personnel and equipment. Everyone is encouraged to use alternate routes during this period, especially during the lunch and afternoon rush periods. The inbound lane will not be affected.

For more information, call Richard Chancey at 545-4749.

Controlled burning set

Controlled burning of woodland areas will take place Monday through May 24. If weather permits, the following areas will be affected: B-4, K-9, K-21, 0-8, 0-11, Q-2, R-1, T-4, T-5, X-1, AA and Harmony Church. Burning will occur in pine stands within these compartments to enhance endangered species habitat and training areas. Personnel proposing to use these areas for recreational purposes must vacate these areas prior to 9:30 a.m. daily. Training units using compartments adjacent to those listed above may experience drift or residual smoke and are reminded to exercise caution while traveling in these areas due to the potential for reduced visibility. Units utilizing ranges and training areas are reminded to remove flammable debris, such as pinestraw, leaves and trash from around structures in accordance with USAIC Regulation 210-4, Paragraph 5-22, Organizational Maintenance.

For more information, call Jack Greenlee, Natural Resources Management Branch, at 544-6120.

Army Education Center lists hours

The Army Education Center, and the Army Learning Center, will be closed May 22 in observance of Memorial Day. Normal hours of operation will resume on May 26.

Special Forces briefs continue

The Special Forces recruiting office conducts briefings at 6 p.m. every Tuesday and 10 a.m. and 2 p.m. every Wednesday in McVeigh Hall, Building 75B, Room 408. For more information, call Sgt. 1st Class David Boyer at 545-3079 or 545-6778

Change of command set

A change of command ceremony for Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 2nd Battalion, 54th Infantry Regiment, Infantry Training Brigade is set for 9 a.m. June 12 in Building 3240.

Regulations require proper PT uniform

Post regulations require that Soldiers wear the standard Army physical fitness training uniform for PT from 6 to 7:30 a.m. on duty days, whether units organize PT or Soldiers conduct it on their own. Reflective vests are required.

The only approved exceptions are the U.S Army School of the Americas, the Ranger Training Brigade and the 75th Ranger Regiment. These units have an exception to wear a different uniform, but they must remain uniform.

did you know?

15th Infantry Regiment

Have you ever wondered about some of the names Fort Benning buildings or fields have? Sometimes the posted signs don't tell enough of the story.

A lot of Fort Benning's buildings are named after Soldiers who served here.

More than 125 veterans from the 15th Infantry Regiment Association who converge on Fort Benning this week for the annual Can Do Rendezvous will learn more about the buildings and fields when they take a tour of the post.

Not only did many of these veterans spend an integral part of their careers here in the Chattahoochee Valley, some of them have left an indelible mark on the post, as can be seen by many of the buildings and landmarks named in their honor.

Gen. George C. Marshall (then a lieutenant colonel) was commander of the 15th Infantry Regiment from 1924-1927, during the Chinese Expedition. Marshall later served as the Assistant Fort Benning commandant and General of the Army during World War II. The Marshall House, which serves as a temporary residence for visiting General Officers and Marshall Auditorium in Infantry Hall were named in his honor.

The Audie Murphy Fitness Center was named for the most decorated Soldier of World War II, the 15th Infantry's Lt. Audie Leon Murphy. This Medal of Honor recipient distinguished himself on countless occasions while serving in Company B, 1st Battalion, 15th Infantry in North Africa and Europe from 1943-1945.

Fort Benning's guest house, Olson Hall, carries the name of Capt. Arlo L. Olson, a Medal of Honor recipient who was killed in action near the Volturno river in Europe while serving as a company commander in the 15th Infantry during World War II.

The field adjacent to the Officer's Club is home to the China Gate, a gift to the 15th Infantry from Chinese citizens in 1925 in gratitude for protection afforded them by the regiment during the unification of the Republic of China. The marble gateway was presented to the Infantry School in 1938 upon the 15th's return from it's 25 years of service in China.

The 15th Infantry's China Room is currently located in the 1st Battalion, 15th Infantry headquarters on Kelly Hill. It is home to a compilation of artifacts from the regiment's rich history from it's service in China through World War II and Korea, and 40 years in Europe during the Cold War, culminating in its current status in the 3rd Infantry Division at Fort Benning.

War crime trial still holds interest today

Nicole Longstreath
Special to the Bayonet©

The mock trial of Confederate Capt. Henry Wirz, first American ever tried, convicted and executed for a war crime, has been an element of Fort Benning's Law Week festivities for the past five years.

Although this commander of a prisoner of war camp in Andersonville, Ga., was convicted and executed for multiple acts of cruelty and murder, Capt. Todd Milliard, legal instructor, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment, said he believes the trial to have been suspect and thinks Wirz never murdered anyone.

"Wirz didn't actually kill anyone with his own hands ... there is no evidence he did," Milliard said.

Milliard believes the trial to be suspect because some 75 witnesses were available to come testify on Wirz's behalf but were barred from testifying by the government.

Wirz has also done research that leads him to believe the government's star witness was a Union Army deserter and fabricated parts of his testimony in which he testified that he witnessed Wirz actually murder someone with his own hands.

"The government's star witness was a professional actor," Milliard said.

Another problem Wirz ran into during his trial was the fleeing of his defense team.

At the beginning of the trial, Wirz was assigned five defense attorneys. When the closing arguments were made, Wirz had only two.

"After the judge denied the witnesses' testimony on Wirz's behalf, three of the defense attorneys walked out right before the closing arguments because they knew there was no way Wirz would get a fair trial," Milliard said.

Nowadays, military personnel charged with crimes are legally entitled to counsel and, according to Milliard, they are not allowed to quit if the going gets tough.

"The trial defense service has an ethical duty to represent the defendant," Milliard said.

Lt. Col. Dana Chipman, deputy staff judge advocate, said that possible military defendants have a much better chance for a fair trial these days.

"The military tribunal is usually made up of sergeants first class to command sergeants major and majors to colonels and I am confident that military judges reach the right result," Chipman said.

The government also cannot bar any witnesses from testifying if the defense can prove the person has information relevant to the trial.

Even though Milliard believed Wirz could have received a better trial, he thinks the reason for his conviction and execution were mostly political.

"His side lost the war," Milliard said.

Although not a cold-blooded murderer by Milliard's standards, Milliard agrees with the court that the horrendous conditions at Andersonville could have been prevented and lives could have been saved.

"The big issue was: should Wirz have obeyed orders or should he have tried to make the conditions better for the prisoners," Milliard said. "This trial shows how a leader in the military can become accountable for war crimes that occur under his watch."

Chipman believes events like mock trials are a good way to get people thinking.

"Recent events have demonstrated issues that suggest that war crimes continue," Chipman said. "It never hurts to think about individuals making those decisions," Chipman said.

According to Milliard, this particular trial has been done every year for the past five years because of the historical connections and the proximity of Andersonville to Fort Benning.

Andersonville is located approximately 60 miles southeast of Fort Benning and is also the home of The Prisoners of War Museum.

This year's actors in the mock trial of Capt. Henry Wirz were:

Prosecuting attorney — Milliard,

Defense attorney — Sgt. Raymond Dodd, Co. A, 1st Bn., 11th Inf. Regt.,

Judge — Chaplain (Capt.) Jonathan Gibbs, HHC, 1st Bn., 11th Inf. Regt.,

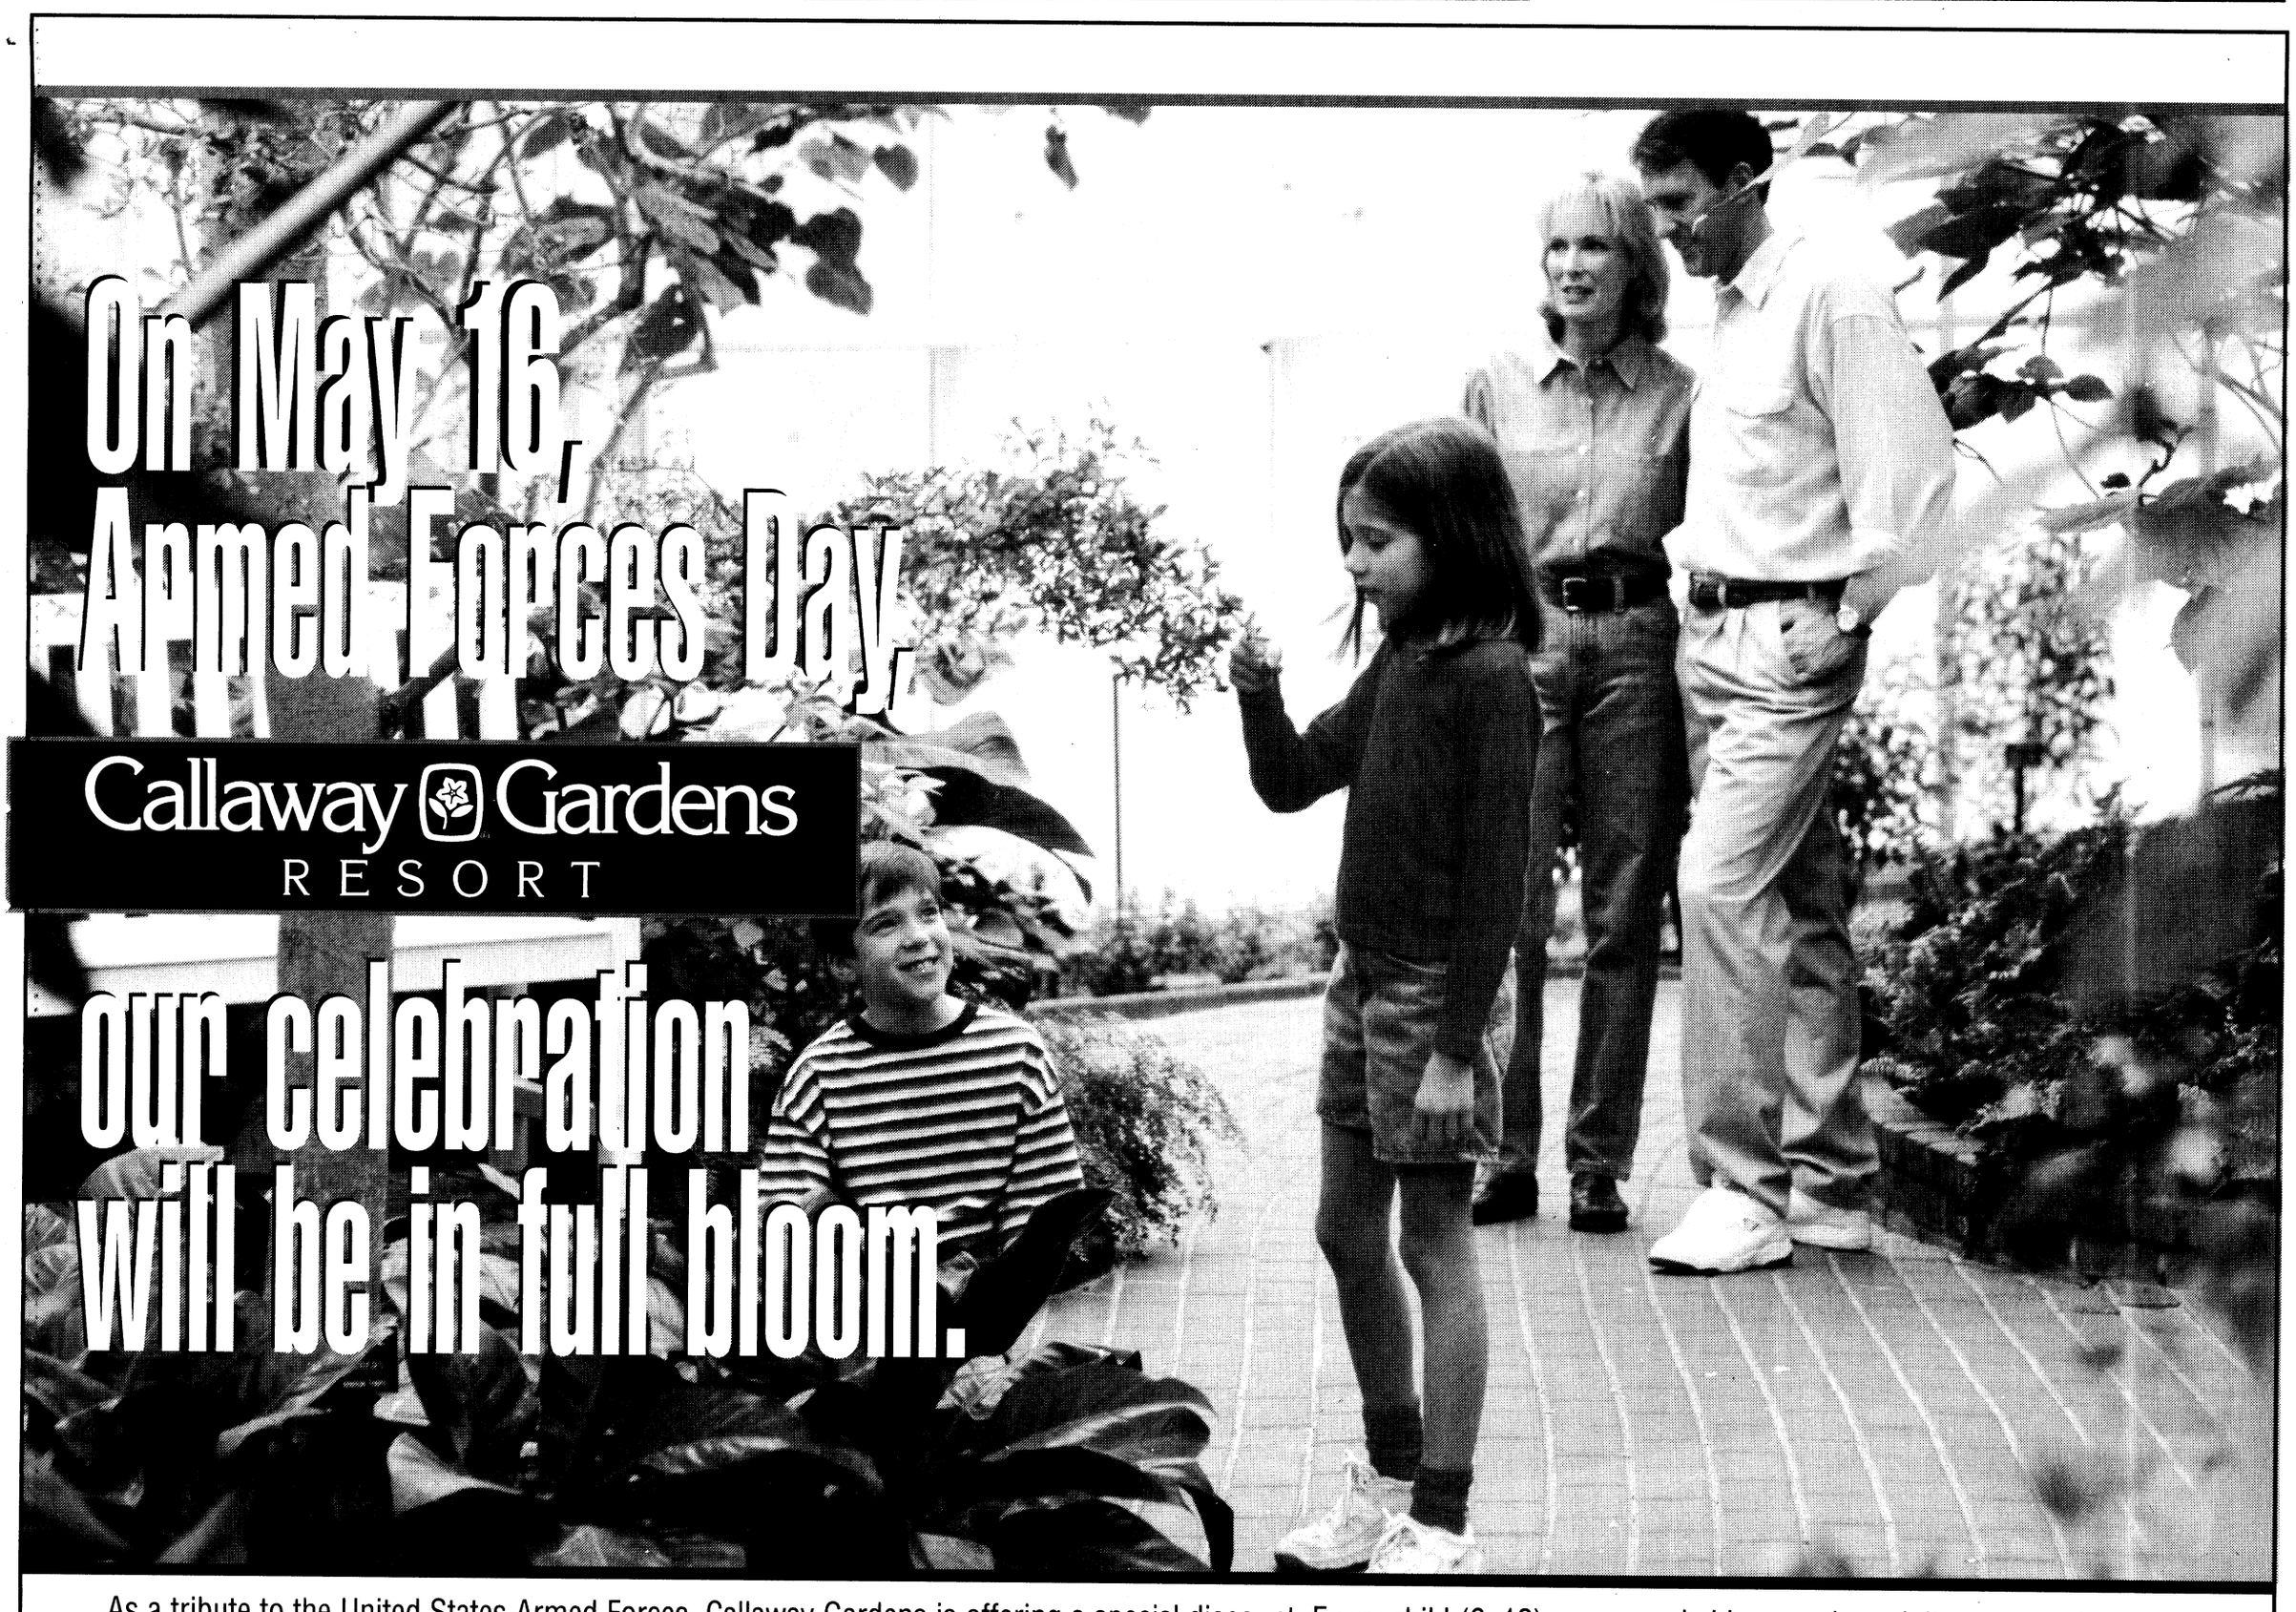
Capt. Henry Wirz — attorney, Larry Harris of Marianna, Fla.

Nation celebrates the 41st anniversary of Law Day

Capt. Tamara Herdener
Office of the Staff Judge Advocate

The Fort Benning community was encouraged to join in celebrating our freedoms as American citizens. The theme of the 41st Law Day was: "Celebrate Your Freedom." The theme focused on America's greatest strength. According to promoters of Law Day, "It is freedom that sets us apart from most of the world's nations. It is freedom that many nations continue to fight for."

"Law Day gives us the opportunity to reflect on how the law protects our freedom to express our opinions, vote for our leaders, choose our religion and pursue our livelihood," promoters said. In order to protect and pass on those freedoms, many brave Americans made the ultimate sacrifice.



"As Soldiers and civilian employees of the United States, the commemoration and celebration of Law Day should have a special meaning because all of us have taken an oath to support and defend the Constitution of the United States."

Army adds high-tech helicopter to arsenal

Gerry J. Gilmore
Army News Service

WASHINGTON — Imagine an 11,000-pound dragonfly that is hard to kill, has almost 200-mph-speed, can see in the dark and carries a deadly sting.

Don't ask Godzilla to swat this insect: it is one of ours. Known as the "RAH-66 Comanche," it is the Army's newest helicopter, now undergoing developmental flight-testing.

Department of Defense employees and broadcast and print reporters were invited to get up close and peer into a Comanche prototype's cockpit and take a spin aboard a flight simulator as part of a display set up May 6-7 in the Pentagon's courtyard.

An intelligence-gathering, light attack aircraft, the high-tech Comanche is scheduled to replace the "Cobra" and the OH-58 "Kiowa" helicopters during the first decade of the next century, said Arthur W. Linden, program director of contractor Boeing Sikorsky's Comanche team.

The two-seat Comanche boasts twin turboshaft engines that produce about 1,500 horsepower each, enabling the helicopter to reach 190 mph at full-throttle, Linden said. A forward-mounted, three-barreled, 20-mm Gattling Gun and rockets or Stinger or Hellfire missiles deliver the Comanche's "sting."

Test pilot Lorren Stiles said he has logged about 91 hours aboard the Comanche, which is about 46 feet long from the tip of the front rotor to the tail. The helicopter weighs about 8,600 pounds empty and carries another 3,000 pounds with pilot, navigator and combat load.

Stiles said the Comanche is packed with state-of-the-art technology that helps it survive on the battlefield to locate the enemy and pass on information to friendly forces.

"Everything about the Comanche is new," Stiles said. "It is fast, agile and is designed to be less observable. It's stealthy and very small, visually, making it hard to knock down with shoulder-launched missiles.

"Its nose carries sensors that a scout needs to find targets. The pilot wears an advanced helmet that displays performance, navigation and targeting information on the inside of the visor. An infrared-TV sensor can present night imagery to the pilot on the same display," he said.

Advanced technology also makes the Comanche easier to fly, Stiles said.

"Performance-wise, it is meeting or beating our expectations," he said. "It's pleasant to fly as a test pilot because it's doing things that I expect it to do; it's not surprising me.

"It has a radically different control system that integrates all the controls except power in one hand; there are no pedals. It's a fly-by-wire system (electronic and computer-actuated controls instead of mechanically actuated) so there is stability augmentation all of the time to help fly the aircraft. The computer is really flying the aircraft," he said.

The Comanche is designed to "get up close to the action and locate where the enemy is," Stiles said. Scout aircraft like the Comanche perform a mission much like that of the old horse cavalry, he said.

"It (gathers) intelligence about the enemy ... (which) also helps the commander plan routes (of travel) ... suitability of roads, (potential) threats," Stiles said.

Army program analyst Ada L. Mason got up close and peered into the Comanche prototype's cockpit May 7 in the Pentagon's courtyard.

"I've never seen the inside of a helicopter and I was interested to see what it looked like," said Mason, who works for Resource Services Washington, Office of the Secretary of the Army. "The Comanche looks narrower than in its pictures. I think it is important for our national security to keep up in technology."

The Army wants about 1,200 Comanches, with fielding scheduled to begin in December 2006, Linden said. At around $14 million each, the Comanche isn't cheap, but Linden said its technology pays for itself.

Gerry J. Gilmore

Army Civilian employee Ada L. Mason checks out the Comanche's cockpit May 7 at the Pentagon display.

"The key to this aircraft is all of the advanced technology that it provides," he said. "This is the first new helicopter that this industry has built for the U.S. military in over 20 years, since the days of the Blackhawk and the Apache. It provides stealth technology, composite fuselages, bearing-less main rotors and fly-by-wire controls, all of those things we don't have on current helicopters.

"The Army wants the Comanche to be low-cost in operation and from the beginning we designed it to be easy to maintain. We believe that when we get it out in the field it will save the Army money in maintenance, versus the aircraft that they're flying right now. It has a two-level maintenance system, instead of three-level, and like modern cars, it has an on-board diagnostic system," Linden said.

The Comanche is "a fully digitized aircraft," Linden said. Its computer system has the ability to identify problems and automatically make corrections without pilot input.

"It has the capability, in a certain sense, to 'heal itself' when something goes wrong," Stiles said. "There are back ups for virtually everything. If the primary (computer) system fails, the pilot is told that it has failed, but it automatically reconfigures to the backup. No single failure is going to prevent the aircraft from performing its mission."

Investing in advanced technology like the Comanche enables the Army to stay abreast of potential threats, Linden said.

"There are an awful lot of threats out in the world. The Comanche will allow the Army to do a better and more complete reconnaissance job at less cost," he said.

Medics training keep mission first, Soldiers healthy

Sgt. Marc Turchin
Bayonet staff writer

One may think injuries were bound to occur during the 3rd Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment's recent deployment to Panama.

The rangers spent three weeks in a tropical climate where temperatures can reach 100 degrees in the jungle and the terrain had the Soldiers climbing small mountains and struggling through thick vegetation. There were a few rangers who ensured the battalion's Soldiers remained healthy.

"We brought a little bit of everything down there because you never know what's going to happen," said Sgt. 1st Class Robert Miller, senior medic for the battalion. Miller said he and Sgt. 1st Class Mike Nesbitt, company operations and training NCO, and Capt. Chris G. Pappas, battalion surgeon, reviewed the deployment very carefully about three months ago.

"We discussed our plan and said 'Hey, this is how we will be successful based on the projected problems and how we'll treat them while we're down there,'" he said.

No matter what training a platoon was undergoing, a medic was always available because each platoon has it's own medic. Each company has a senior medic who oversees the platoon medics. As the battalion senior medic, Miller was responsible for making sure everyone received the necessary medical care. Miller was also responsible for ensuring the battalion's medics were trained and prepared for any type of emergency.

"If anyone goes down, I have to make sure I can take care of them," said Spc. Brian Medaris, platoon medic for the battalion's mortar platoon, Headquarters and Headquarters Company. "You're part of the team. You take care of the boys and make sure everything is done right."

Medaris said he prefers working with the rangers in the field rather than the aid station.

"You're one on one with the guys," he said. "You build up a rapport with them, they trust you and they know that you're going to be there for them."

The trust may have been there, but the medics didn't have much triage to tend to.

"I think this deployment went very well," Pappas said. "I have six pages of who went to sick call, but we had nothing other than minor injuries. There were no gunshot injuries or serious heat injuries," Pappas said.

Pappas compared the 3rd battalion's deployment to other deployments to the Jungle Operations Training Center (JOTC) and said he learned from other unit's mistakes.

"One other unit had a gunshot injury and there was a delay in transportation and there were some issues with noncompliance with chemoprophylaxis — an antibiotic that minimizes the risk for infection," Pappas said. "Before we came down here, we educated the chain of command — we told them what we needed and why. They were very receptive."

The battalion's medics also conducted continuous operations as their responsibility goes beyond medical treatments.

"I'm part of the fire team until someone gets hurt and then I turn into the medic," Medaris said. "You have to learn how to patrol, where to shoot and not to shoot until someone needs medical assistance."

But in any circumstance, the medics have a system to take care of the rangers.

First, the medic identifies the problem.

"He'll do an initial assessment," Miller said. He'll follow the A,B,C's — the clearing of the airway, breathing and circulatory status to rule out any life-threatening emergencies. If there is a life-threatening emergency, he provides adequate intervention."

Next the medic will manage the victim.

"If the person is having a heat injury, the medic would probably initiate some normal saline, get a glucose finger stick to see what the victim's sugar level is and most likely give the victim some sugar," Miller said.

Then the medic would stabilize the victim.

"He'd stabilize the victim by whatever means necessary to get the person ready for transportation," Miller said. Finally, the patient is transported from where he is, to a medical facility by either air-ambulance or ground transportation, Miller said.

In this case, the terrain hindered some of the medical staff, Medaris said. The vegetation was so thick at times Medaris said he nearly had to lie on top of the victim to treat him.

"There was a lot of bush to cut through to get to the patients," he said. "I had to try and work around roots and rocks — it's a little bit different then in the states where a lot of the terrain is flat."

The medics also did other types of training on other types of terrains.

Using an UH-60 Blackhawk helicopter and the local air-ambulance unit, the medics practiced extracting rangers from the water using a medical horse collar, which was lowered from the helicopter. Miller said the medics had to first call the air medical evacuation in to the local unit and give them the information needed. This information includes the type of emergency, where the victim was and what type of evacuation was needed. Once the helicopter arrived, Miller said, the medics had to hitch the victim to the horse collar, make sure the victim was secure and watch as the victim was raised into the helicopter.

Because the rangers were around the water a lot of the time while in Panama, Miller said this type of operation enhanced the mission.

"This helped familiarize these guys to water and air medical evacuation procedures, the aircraft and gave them hands-on practice in case they had to do one of these at night or under adverse weather conditions." he said.

Miller said no matter the mission, the battalion's medics are qualified to handle anything.

"I have very confident senior medics," Miller said. "Everyone of my company senior medics are ranger qualified, is a nationally registered paramedic, an advanced cardiac life-support provider, a prehospital trauma life-support instructor and has extensive experience as a platoon and company senior medic. We have a very confident crew and with their credentials, that's the ultimate standard right there."

IOBC students participate in squad training at Garnsey Range

Infantry Officer Basic Course

Infantry Officer Basic Course students of Company B, 2nd Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment, participated in squad training exercises last week at Garnsey Range. Lieutenants were given classes on how to plan and prepare situational training exercises to be implemented at the squad level. Each Infantry Officer Basic Course (IOBC) student was allowed the opportunity to be a platoon leader, squad leader and squad member during the training exercise. The introduction given to each lieutenant involved realistic planning and execution of missions.

The training week for IOBC students began with an introduction to hand grenades.

Each student went through a class and practice session learning how to employ live hand grenades. Once each student was given proper instruction by the range NCOs, four live hand grenades were thrown.

The situational exercises were up next.

One NCO was in charge of each lane and was present to oversee training execution and safety. Lane NCOs evaluated lieutenants on their performance as platoon leader and gave an overall evaluation on squad performance.

In the role of platoon leader, each student planned, prepared and evaluated a situational exercise.

In the planning phase, a situation is developed and an emphasis is placed on an offensive battle drill. Acting as the platoon leader, each lieutenant has to decide what is important for the execution of his exercise and what learning value will be gained from performing the lane. Each IOBC student was given the opportunity to plan the lane and then go out with a squad and evaluate the actual execution of the lane.

Finally, each student had the opportunity to be a squad member. As a squad member, lieutenants received direction and supervision from their peers. They learned what it is like to carry equipment such as an M-60 machine gun or the extra barrels, ammunition and tripod equipment that an assistant gunner bears. Though being a squad member is not an evaluated position, lieutenants soon realize that it bears a great deal of importance and is not always easy, said 2nd Lt. John Schneider, Co. B, 2nd Bn., 11th Inf. Regt.

Once the squads had gone through several formal evaluations live-fire training took place.

Two lanes, squad attack and point ambush, were conducted as live-fire exercises. Emphasis was placed on safety as students maneuvered into position and fired live rounds at pop-up targets. Live claymore mines were employed during the live-fire exercises.

Retired general speaks at ITB formal

Spc. Jamie T. Karl
1st Battalion 38th Infantry Regiment

One of the Army's most respected leaders and one of America's foremost military told more than 800 cadre and family members from Fort Benning's Infantry Training Brigade (ITB) they carry a heavy burden in preparing tomorrow's Infantrymen and the job will not get any easier.

Retired Gen. Carl W. Stiner, commander in chief of the U.S. Special Forces Command during Operation Desert Storm, was the guest speaker at the Infantry Training Brigade's 1998 Spring Formal in March. The event was hosted by ITB Commander Col. Abraham J. Turner and his wife, Linda.

Stiner, a former commander of the 1st Infantry Training Brigade in the late 1970s, stressed the importance of ITB's role in today's Army.

"No one else has the effect on a human life in the way you do," Stiner told the ITB cadre, addressing specifically the drill sergeants. "And no one else has a greater responsibility," he said, adding that the young Infantry Soldiers being trained now may be tested soon, on the field of combat.

Focusing on the future of the Army — and the challenges the Army already faces, — Stiner said that the nation's adversaries have learned from our past conflicts. Next time, there will not be time to prepare additional forces or build political allies, he commented.

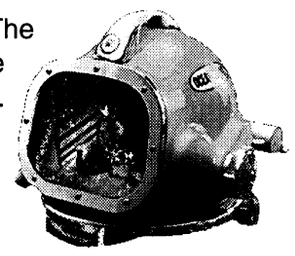
"Tremendous challenges will certainly come for the Army in the near future," Stiner said, "challenges we will be required to meet if the United States is to continue to hold its position as the premier global power."

The retired general noted that U.S. troops have been used in 28 separate operations since 1989. In those 28 separate operations, the Army was 60 percent of the manpower, according to Stiner.

Despite the increase in the number of deployments and global peacekeeping missions, domestic social spending and defense costs have flip-flopped, Stiner said. Today, 50 percent of the nation's budget goes to social programs, like Medicare and Medicaid, while only 15 percent is spent on the nation's defense, Stiner told the audience. That is completely opposite of the budget a decade ago.

Unless both the executive and legislative branches in Washington become more responsive and supportive, he warned, "military readiness will decline." That is something the country cannot afford, Stiner said, especially at a time when we do not even know who the enemy is.

Following Stiner's speech, Turner presented the general with the ITB bronze drill sergeant hat award. Turner also reminded the ITB personnel of the significance of their jobs, and ITB's commitment to producing the world's finest Infantrymen.



"If Soldiers fail to meet the standards here," Turner said, "they will only fail in their next platoon. We can't let that happen.

"We won't let that happen."

White House fellows seek Soldiers, Officers

Adjunct General

The President's Commission on White House Fellows annually selects exceptionally promising individuals from all sectors of American life to serve as White House fellows.

The purpose of the White House fellows program is to provide gifted and highly motivated young americans some firsthand experience in the process of governing the nation and a sense of personal involvement in the leadership of society.

Fellows write speeches, help review and draft proposed legislation, answer congressional inquiries, chair meetings, conduct briefings and otherwise assist high-level government officials. They are assigned to work with senior White House officials, cabinet secretaries or other deputies. In the past, fellows have worked for the Vice-president, the White House Chief of Staff, the National Security Council, Central Intelligence Agency and the Peace Corps.

NCOs must meet the following eligibility criteria: be a United States citizen; must not be serving in or will complete recruiting duty, drill sergeant duty or Active or reserve component duty no later than June 1999; have completed appropriate NCO education programs for grade and years of service; must be able to complete full fellowship and a two year follow-on assignment; not pending any uniform code of military justice action; not competing for any other army sponsored program, fellowship or scholarship; meet army height and weight requirements; hold the rank of sergeant first class or higher and possess a graduate degree.

Officers must meet the following eligibility criteria: be a U.S. citizen; not have more than 19 active federal commissioned service years, as of September 1999; not competing for any other army sponsored program, fellowship or scholarship; be able to complete full fellowship and a two year follow-on assignment; be branch qualified at current grade; have no adverse actions pending; not serving in or owe a utilization assignment or will complete full utilization assignment not later than June 1999; meet army height and weight requirements and have a graduate degree.

Eligible active duty army officers and enlisted Soldiers, managed by the U.S. Total Army Personnel Command (PERSCOM), desiring to compete must request and receive permission from PERSCOM prior to competing. Eligible officers, request to compete must be in letter format, endorsed by the first field grade supervisor. Enlisted Soldiers must submit their request to compete on a Department of the Army (DA) form 4187, it must be endorsed by chain of command, through colonel. Officers must submit a request to compete directly to their own career branch, PERSCOM. Enlisted Soldiers must submit a request to compete along with current Department of the Army (DA) form 2A & 2-1, a copy of all evaluation reports and a current military photo directly to commander, PERSCOM, ATTN: TAPC-EPM-A, Alexandria, Va. 22331-0454.

Division, PERSCOM will forward applications directly to those granted permission.

Completed applications must be postmarked to the White House Commission no later than Feb. 1, 1999. The final selection of fellows by the White House Commission is scheduled for June 1999. The fellowship year begins September 1999 and ends August 2000. Personnel selected will move to the Washington, DC area.

General officers are requested to strongly encourage their top Soldiers to apply for this most prestigious fellowship and tremendous experience.

Civilians receive awards for excellence

Jim Caldwell
TRADOC News Service

FORT MONROE, Va. — Carlisle Barracks, Pa., was named the Outstanding Training and Doctrine Command Civilian Personnel Advisory Center for 1997 and its chief, Carol Tebo, won the Leadership in Civilian Personnel Administration award.

The honors were among the Annual TRADOC Civilian Personnel Excellence Awards for 1997.

Honors also went to two Fort Sill, Okla., offices. The CPAC received the Outstanding TRADOC Civilian Personnel Advisory Center award and the nonappropriated funds organization won the Outstanding TRADOC NAF Personnel Office award. Barbara Ritchie is the NAF personnel chief.

Willie Varner, chief of management services division at the Fort Benning CPAC also won the Leadership in Civilian Personnel Administration award.

Four individuals won the Outstanding TRADOC CPAC Consultant Award, they are:

Ursula Hughes — Fort Benning
Stephanie Carpenter — Fort Benning
Sharon Henson — Fort Gordon, Ga.
Debra DeGraff — Fort Huachuca, Ariz.

The awards are presented each year to individuals and organizations for contributions which aid mission accomplishment, outstanding customer support and actions which greatly benefit regionalization of civilian personnel management.

AUSA offers help for separating Soldiers

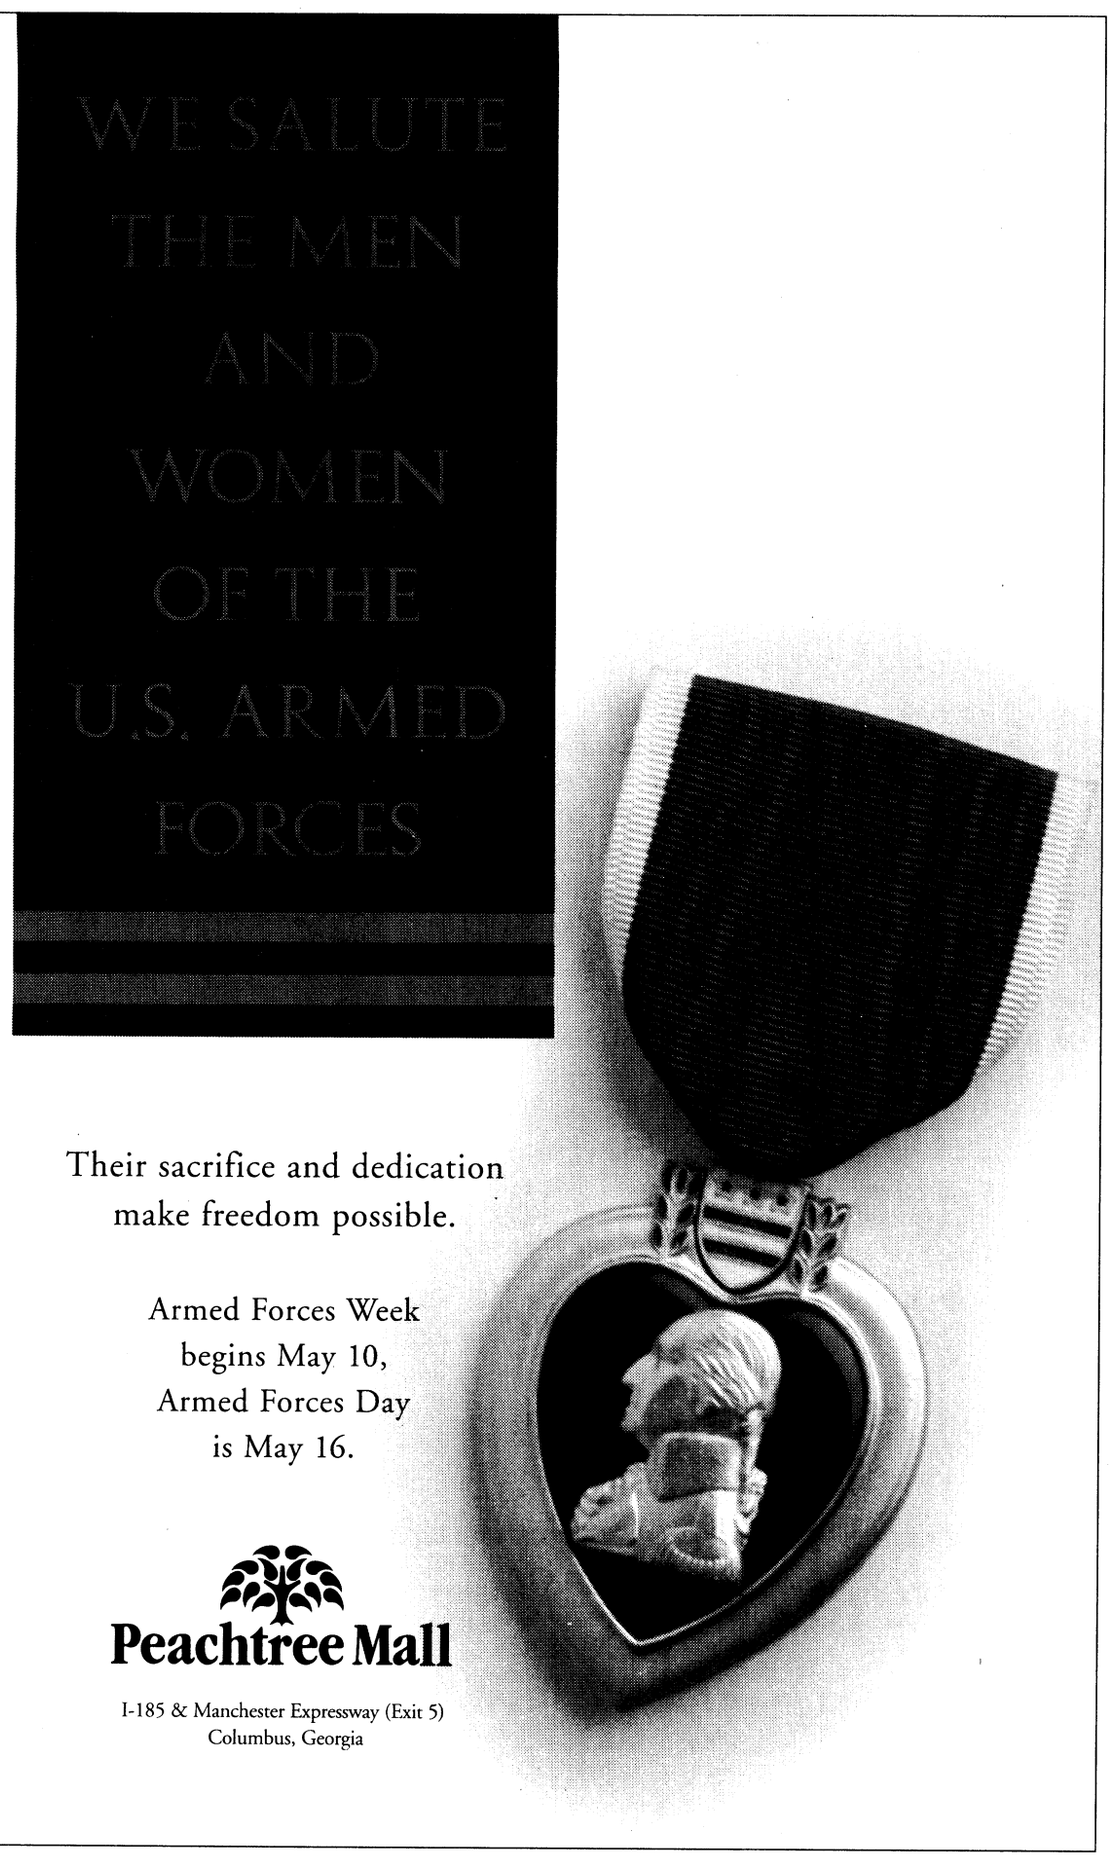
Army Career and Alumni Program

"The Association of the U.S. Army (AUSA) and the Georgia Department of Labor went to a great deal of effort to organize the 1998 Military Job Fair on May 14 in Infantry Hall," said Chick Eagle, a Fort Benning ACAP Center counselor.

Some participants may wonder what is next for a separating Soldier. The next step is to analyze the information and experience from the fair and make an assessment of qualifications vs. job requirements and conditions.

Many company recruiters and representatives at the job fair gave away hundreds of brochures, business cards and other material providing valuable information about specific products and services. Each recipient of information should now have a solid starting point for conducting more research into those organizations if interested in employment.

Company brochures can also provide information about the purpose and recent successful history of the organization. Additionally, company goals, long range market strategy, career opportunities, benefits, work environment and how to apply may be included. Business cards are valuable to job seekers because they provide name, address and phone number of a point of contact in the company. Serious job seekers will use the information to an advantage when preparing cover letters and targeted resumes.



As a result of preparing and sending a targeted resume, the chances of being invited for an interview are increased. Using the information found in company literature enhances performance in the interview.

"By demonstrating in the interview company knowledge and citing examples where your background training and experience can help the company achieve their goals, will do much toward getting that job," Eagle said.

The ACAP Center presents preseparation briefings and counseling to separating Soldiers, spouses and Department of the Army civilians. Workshops are also conducted to teach the vital components of the job search process.

"It is not always the best qualified person who gets the job but the one best prepared for the job search," Eagle said.

For more information about ACAP services and events contact the ACAP Center, 545-2308 or 545-2309.

Their sacrifice and dedication make freedom possible.

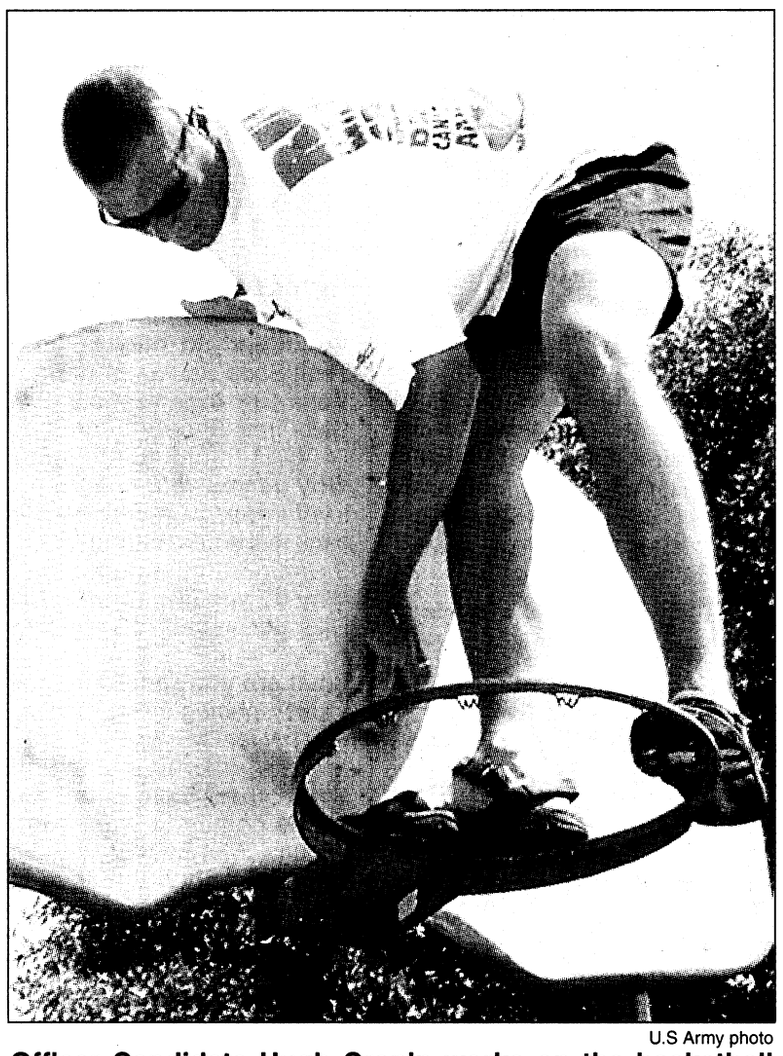
OCs help restore playground

Officer Candidate Christopher Curley
Co. B, 3rd Bn, 11th Inf. Regt. (OCS)

Officer Candidate School is a 14-week long course involving physical exertion, an academic program and leadership training to transition enlisted and warrant officer Soldiers to the commissioned officer corps.

To help the candidates of Company B, 3rd Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment (OCS), make this transition the course emphasizes the importance of strong commitments to the Army core values.



According to Capt. Victor L. Thompson, company commander, one of the most important of these core values is selfless service. To provide a practical example of how exhibiting selfless service can effect others, OCS has a tradition of performing a service project to help those in need in the Fort Benning community.

"The Army needs to return to the core values," said Thompson. "Community service is one of the more important ways to emphasize the importance of a strong commitment to values."

OCS Class 3-98 chose the Tot Town Child Development Center as the beneficiary of its community service project. Specifically, the candidates worked on improvement of the center's playground equipment.

"There are all kinds of ways to give back to the community and this is a way to give back to the same community that gives so much to us," Thompson added.

"The wooden equipment and swing sets are very weatherworn, but still in good shape physically," said Officer Candidate Paul Dubbeling, of Phillips, Wis., the project's main coordinator.

Officer Candidate Hugh Cronin works on the basketball hoop at Tot Town.

Candidates spent an afternoon sanding, painting, priming and replacing sand around swing sets.

"We all appreciate it," said Leda Brown, the Tot Town Child Development Center Coordinator. "(The officer candidates) did a tremendous service. It was 30 Christmases on one day."

The Tot Town Child Development Center is available to the children of military members assigned to Fort Benning and to all civilian employees. It provides childcare facilities and a place to play for children of all ages.

"The children were so excited about (the officer candidates) being there. They were fascinated," Brown said. "(The officer candidates) were digging, moving things doing things that the children wanted to watch. It was a very good role model that shows that you can do something for free, and you don't have to be paid to do something."

By late afternoon, the playground had a new look and the officer candidates had a new perspective on selfless service.

"By contributing to the welfare of the community, one truly becomes a member of it," said Officer Candidate Michael Perry, of Annover, Minn..

"Often people are reluctant to participate in community service projects," said Officer Candidate Peter Michael, of Lancaster, Penn. "The benefits I see here from this project will inspire me to volunteer for future projects."

Rangers help Panama's elderly

Staff Sgt. Brian Thomas
USASOC PAO

COLON, Republic of Panama — Jungles exist in different forms.

After two weeks of the "wait-a-minute vines" and black palm of Fort Sherman's Jungle Operations Training Center (JOTC), rangers from 3rd Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment, entered a jungle of a completely different make — an urban jungle of shanties and trash-strewn streets.

Their mission was not a typical one either.

Regarded as one of the world's most highly trained light infantry units, the Fort Benning-based rangers were in Panama March 27 to April 17 to conduct jungle training at Fort Sherman. Given two days of rest and recreation on April 15-16, most of the battalion headed across the isthmus for Panama City's nightlife.

One small group, however, found a different calling.

Chaplain (Capt.) Matthew Goff, the battalion chaplain, led 46 rangers April 16 into one of Colon's poorest neighborhoods armed with goodwill and tools, instead of the typical ranger load of M-4 Carbines and Squad Automatic Weapons.

Considered Panama's second city, this once bustling Atlantic port now suffers from high unemployment rates and extreme poverty.

Goff brought his Soldiers into Colon's urban jungle to repair a Salvation Army home for the elderly.

The idea for the project came from an after-action review completed by 2nd Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment, after its Soldiers worked on a similar project during a JOTC rotation in November 1997, he said.

"It gives the guys who may not like to go out on the town a way to do something constructive with their time," Goff said. "They feel useful and can feel good about themselves for helping out those who are as poverty-stricken as the folks here in Panama.

"I think having almost 50 guys volunteer to do this project is a great reflection on these rangers who are willing to spend their free time to do some hard work to help out people they don't know. It's a great project for us as rangers to be able to participate in."

The Salvation Army home needed better security for its residents. In the neighborhood, the existing windows allowed thieves to steal from those in the home. The rangers removed the windows and frames and with decorative brick created a secure barrier that still allowed ventilation.

They also repaired some of the building's plumbing, replaced doors, painted on the inside and cleaned up the grounds around the home during a full day's worth of work.

The surrounding neighborhood was an eye-opener for many of the young rangers, especially those in Panama for the first time.

"It's a very rundown part of town," Goff said. "Some of the buildings just next door are rubble.

"There are big piles of broken down buildings all around and piles of trash. It's a pretty rough neighborhood.

"Most of the guys have not been in Panama before and not only Panama, but in a neighborhood like this," said Sgt. Lilo Santana, Company C,. "It's a great experience for them to know how other people are going through life and what they can do to help them."

The rangers who volunteered came on their own free time.

"That's the great part about this," said 1st Lt. Eric Oliver, Co. A. "There wasn't really an incentive given, these guys are just all volunteers.

"We had a great response from the rangers to volunteer and it speaks a lot for them that they would sacrifice their R&R time to come out and help."

Personal satisfaction from knowing they were helping others was a common motivation for many of the rangers.

"It makes you feel good to realize you're giving back to the community and not just always taking from it," said Cpl. Kevin Sharp, Co. C. "I wish I could speak their language and talk to them because I think being able to speak with them would minister to them even more than working on their home.

"Hopefully they appreciate this and it gets them away from the stereotype of the obnoxious Americans coming to their country. Hopefully they realize there are people in America that care about them and are willing to give their time and effort to help them out."

"The Word"

American Fidelity Life Insurance Company
May 1998

One of the primary functions of the Million-Dollar Round Table is to elevate the professional standards and prestige of life insurance agents.

It is an adherence to these values that prompts us to enclose the MDRT Code of Ethics. We believe it appropriate to renew our dedication to these principles.

Code of Ethics

I pledge myself to:

- Always place the best interests of my clients above my own direct or indirect interests
- Maintain the highest standards of professional competence and give the best possible advice to clients by seeking to maintain and improve my professional knowledge, skills and competence.
- Hold in the strictest confidence, and consider as privileged, all business and personal information pertaining to my clients' affairs.
- Make full and adequate disclosures of all facts necessary to enable my clients to make informed decisions.
- Maintain personal conduct which will reflect favorably on the life insurance industry and the Million Dollar Round Table.
- Determine that any replacement of a life insurance or financial product must be beneficial for my client.
- Abide by and conform to all provisions of the laws and regulations in the jurisdictions in which I do business.

1997 Annual Report

February 1, 1998

Dear Stockholder,

WHY SHOULD YOU BELIEVE YOUR COMPANY IS ONE OF THE VERY STRONGEST, SECURE AND LIQUID FINANCIAL INSTITUTIONS IN THE INDUSTRY?

Compare these facts with any other financial institution.

1. Our policyholders have $207,849,797 deposited in Funds with the company.

2. Your company has over $306,000,000 in United States Government Bonds to provide security and liquidity for these funds. We have no Loan Backed Bonds, Structured Securities, Derivative Instruments or Junk Bonds.

3. We know of no other insurance company with a better track record for interest paid on its policyholder's Funds during the past 19 years. A 12.21% average.

4. Your company is growing on a profitable basis so we can continue to provide value, service, and security now... and in the future.

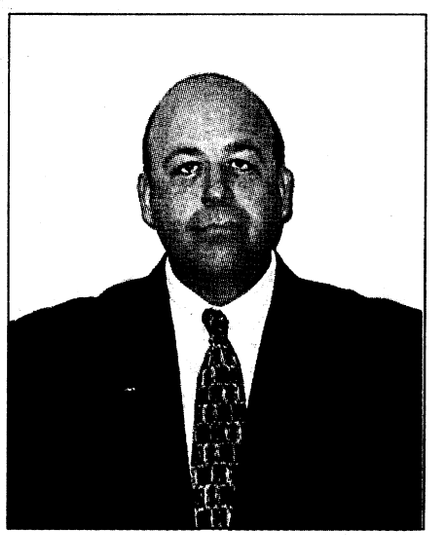
HOW ARE WE ABLE TO CONTINUE YEAR AFTER YEAR AS ONE OF THE LEADERS IN THE INDUSTRY FOR INTEREST PAID TO OUR POLICYHOLDERS?

1. The cost efficient Home Office Headquarters is out of the high rent district.

2. Our computer center cost is shared by three banks and two other insurance companies... a substantial savings.

3. Our existing sales force is stable and long term; Our outstanding product line attracts the top salespersons.....this helps keep recruiting and training costs to a minimum.

4. Our investment costs remain very low.



Our superior products and our ability to continue to pay the top interest rates depend on an overall efficient operation. Every analysis has convinced us of the soundness and vitality of your company and to this we all remain dedicated.

Sincerely,

R. E. Mauch
President

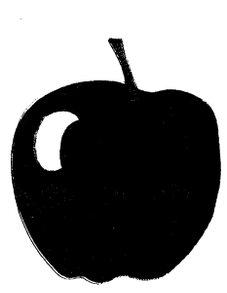
Parents play important role in school

Faith PTO stays active in school curriculum



Erin A. Nash
Special to the Bayonet©

Parental involvement is an important part of any school and Faith Middle School is no different. The parent-teacher organization (PTO) is involved in a large part of the daily curriculum at Faith.

"Our PTO is very, very active and supportive," said Beth Middlemiss, Faith principal.

Two PTO members, secretary Jean Fry and vice-president of volunteers Cindy Lefler are co-chairs of the parent pilot writing program, in which parents critiqued student's writing.

"They recruited 15 parents who participated in an extremely successful writing project," Middlemiss said. "The students looked forward to what the parents had to say about their writing — their writing improved and the parents also gained a lot from it."

The PTO also coordinated several tours for the Fort Benning community and supported the student ambassadors who invite fifth-graders to see the school in action and all that it's about and what they can expect in their next school year.

The PTO board meets monthly for long-term planning and to review the previous month. They also help the School Leadership Team to write the school year plan and evaluate it at the end of the year.

Margaret Kerchief, the fund-raising vice president, and Lucinda Spinelli, treasurer, have worked almost daily at the school in support of school programs and initiatives.

"Our president, Col. Frank Stone, assists in many ways," Middlemiss said. "He finds speakers and a variety of committees to come to Faith. He's an invaluable coordinator of all efforts."

Other PTO officers include Margaret Kerchief, vice president of funding, Jean Fry, secretary, Lucinda Spinelli, treasurer, Diane Payne, teacher appreciation and Annette Reyes, outreach and parent liaison.

Middlemiss said the goal of the PTO is to involve more and more parents.

"The PTO is active in so many areas — they're informed about what's happening in the school," Middlemiss said.

Middlemiss also said that every parent is considered a member of the PTO, and she expects and hopes all parents will be involved.

"I can't imagine not having the PTO at Faith," Middlemiss said. "They're supporters, communicators, participants and questioners. They are an integral part of our program."

Students horse around during Derby Day

Spc. Michelle J. Davis
Bayonet staff writer

The 124th running of the Kentucky Derby may have been held in Louiseville, Ky., May 2, but students at White Elementary School had their own run for the roses May 5 during the school's Kentucky Derby Math and Science Day.

During the derby day, students 'horsed' around with a variety of hands-on activities which focused on elements of math and science including counting, measuring and estimating.

"The derby day was something we started last year to let students have fun and learn at the same," said Cynthia Hill, a third and fourth grade teacher at White.

Hill explained that each year White School sets aside a day where they emphasize certain subjects and focus around a theme.

A committee composed of Hill and fellow teachers Janie Pride and Nan Boyett came up with idea of derby day and planned activities for each grade level.

"The kids really loved it last year, so we thought we would try it again," Hill said.

The day's festivities began at 9 a.m. as each class gathered on the school's track to watch their own running of the famed race.

Horseman Mark Combs of Columbus saddled up Pride's throughbred Brio and galloped five laps around the track to show students the actual distance of the mile and a quarter race.

First-grader Craig Barreras, son of Maj. Kevin and Paula Barreras, pets Janie Pride's horse Bubba during Derby Day festivities at White School May 5.

"It's all over in about two minutes," Hill said. "Some of the other exercises we did involved estimating what activities students could do in two minutes."

Other activities included designing jockey silks and measuring themselves by hands as horses are measured.

Students also learned about basic horse care and got an up-close look at Brio and Pride's other horse, Bubba.

"It was a lot of fun," said third-grader Blair Young, daughter of Capt. Kevin and Judy Young of Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 3rd Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment. "We learned all about the Kentucky Derby and horses."

The derby day wrapped up as the classes sat down to watch the colt "Real Quiet" outrun his opponants during Saturday's race at Churchhill Downs.

"The kids really seemed to enjoy it," Hill said. "This is definitely something that we would like to continue. Next year, we hope to add technology as one of the subjects."

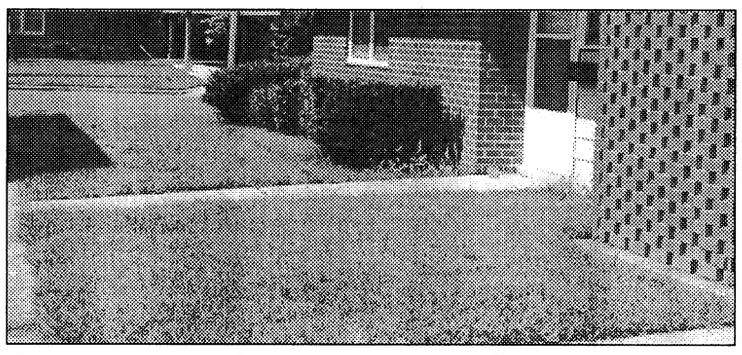
Spring cleaning

Post regulations require grass to be cut and edged. Two examples are shown — what to do and what not to do. The photos were taken in Upatoi Court Tuesday.

During the post cantonment, approximately 80 tons of material was removed to be sent to the regional landfill.



Approximately 10 tons of material was recycled through the Recycling Center and Defense Reutilization and Marketing Office. More than 12 tons of concrete rubble was recycled in the field as check dams for erosion control near cleanup sites.

The Martin Army Medical Mentor

Doctors treat depression with medicine, counseling

Dr. Virginia Yates
Martin Army Community Hospital

Everyone knows what it feels like to be sad. This can also be described as having a depressed mood. This can be a brief feeling that does not interfere with the day; however, for millions of people, this sadness can become a problem that requires help.

What makes this sadness or depression a medical illness? One sign is that the feelings just won't go away no matter what is done to work through the sadness. The sadness might be the dominant mood more than half the time. Another sign of depression is what doctors refer to as vegetative signs.

Vegetative signs can be vague to the person experiencing them. They include:

•Lack of enjoyment in things that used to be interesting or pleasurable;

•Guilt;

•Changes in appetite — from not eating at all to gorging;

•Trouble sleeping or staying in bed until late in the day without the energy to get up;

•Lack of energy to accomplish simple tasks;

•A heavy and burdened feeling or jittery and nervousness;

•Trouble concentrating.

One of the most concerning symptoms is thoughts of suicide or killing someone else. While these thoughts may be extreme, it is not an uncommon one. Suicidal thoughts are experienced by two thirds of the people with major depression. Fifteen percent of the people with a recurrent depression will die by their own hand.

Suicide is the third leading cause of death for young Americans age 15 to 24. The rates have tripled since the 1950s. The most frequent victims are young white males. The suicide rate among black teens age 15 to 19 more than doubled between 1980 and 1995. There are 18 attempts for every completed suicide.

Dysthymia is the word used to describe a milder persistent form of depression. Some have now proposed a new category called sub-syndromal for the very small depressions. All types can progress to more severe forms.

Just as with the treatment of other medical illnesses like hypertension, treatment varies according to the severity of depression.

Psychotherapy was around before medications were discovered for the treatment, which is still a large part of the therapy for depression.

It has been long known that stimulants have a mood elevating effect. A fortunate observation in the late 1950's expanded the world of antidepressant medications. Doctors noticed tuberculosis patients taking the TB medication iproniazid were less depressed. This began the use of monoamine oxidase inhibitors (MAO's) for depression.

Now in the fourth generation of antidepressants, these medications have the same effectiveness as earlier generations but with far fewer side effects. Just as with hypertension, however, some people may need more than one medication to treat the illness.

The most commonly used category of drugs currently being used are the selective serotonin reuptake inhibitors (SSRI's), which include Prozac, Paxil, Zoloft and Luvox.

The over-the-counter herbal, less concentrated form of these medications is St. John's Wort. Be aware that prescription drugs are inspected by far stricter standards than are the over-the-counter medications. Impurities in the over-the-counter medications can lead to some unexpected adverse reactions.

Contrary to some popular notions, antidepressant medications are not "happy pills." They do not change basic personality traits or lessen inhibitions. In fact, some people say they can't tell they are taking a medication. Some of the more common comments are that people notice they cry less easily and spend less time dwelling on sad thoughts than before the medication.

Special thanks to Dr. John Stasinos, Psychiatry Clinic, for his assistance on this article.

Motorcycle deaths outpace auto accidents

Directorate of Public Safety

During fiscal year 1998 there have been eight motorcycle fatalities and 19 accidents involving Army personnel worldwide. One of these fatalities included a Fort Benning Soldier stationed at Dahlonegha, Ga. He was killed when he hit a pick up head-on after going around a curve.

Compared with cars, motorcycles are especially dangerous, said Regis Beighley, Infantry Safety Branch manager. Per mile traveled, the number of deaths on motorcycles is about 16 times the number in cars.

•Motorcycles often have excessive performance capabilities, including especially rapid acceleration and high speeds.

•They're less stable than cars in emergency braking and less visible.

•Motorcyclists are more prone to crash injuries than car drivers because motorcycles are unenclosed, leaving the rider vulnerable to contact hard road surfaces.

This is why wearing a helmet is so important. Helmets are the principal countermeasure reducing crash-related head injuries, the leading cause of death among helmetless riders.

Helmets decrease the severity of injury, the likelihood of death and the overall cost of medical care. Just like safety belts in cars, helmets can't provide total protection against head injury or death, but they do reduce the incidence of both. The National Highway Traffic Safety Administration estimates that helmets reduce the risk of death in a motorcycle crash by about one-third overall and the risk of fatal head injury by 40 percent. Helmets are even more effective in preventing brain injuries, which often require extensive treatment and may result in lifelong disability.

Editor's note: Free Motorcycle Safety Courses are available on Fort Benning, For more information, call 545-5043.

Faith: Armed Forces Day celebrates services ability to work together

Chaplain (Capt.) Len Kircher
2nd Battalion, 69th Armor Regiment

reflections

Armed Forces Day was created to replace separate Army, Navy and Air Force Days. The single-day celebration stemmed from the unification of the Armed Forces under one department — the Department of Defense.

Each of the military leagues and orders was asked to drop sponsorship of its specific service day in order to celebrate the newly announced Armed Forces Day. The Army, Navy and Air Force leagues adopted the newly formed day. In a speech announcing the formation of the day, President Truman praised the work of the military services at home and abroad.

"It is vital to the security of the nation and to the establishment of a desirable peace," he said.

Celebrating Armed Forces Day has served several purposes. From its inception almost 50 years ago, it has served as an opportunity for civilians to learn more about the armed forces' mission in promoting national security.

It also was designed to increase public understanding of the role of the military in a democratic society. It is a day for the military to show off its state-of-the-art equipment. And, most importantly, it was a day to honor and acknowledge the people of the Armed Forces of the United States.

Gen. Omar Bradley said: "Faith, not suspicion, must be the key to our relationships. Sacrifice, not selfishness, must be the eternal price of liberty. Vigilance, not appeasement, is the byword of living freedoms. Our Armed Forces in 1950 — protecting the peace, building for security with freedom — are "Teamed for Defense ..."

It's interesting that Bradley would be so forceful in his depiction of the necessity of the services to work together in the defense of our nation. You'd think that something like working together for the defense of our nation would be a given. More so, however, is the emphasis on faith in working together. And this faith is wrapped up in the faith that our elected civilian leadership rests in the military and the duty we in the military have to respect those appointed over us.

I served in Saudi Arabia during Desert Storm. I was able to see first-hand the absolute necessity of the services working together. I had complete faith in my sister services that they would do their duty. Thank God our Air Force did what they did. Thank God the Navy was offshore doing what they do. Thank God for Marines manning posts around the Kingdom and the other people in the various branches fulfilling their responsibilities of feeding, clothing, refueling and supplying ammunition so that our military could finish the task our nation had called us to accomplish. I never set eyes on most of them but I knew they were there and knew also that they were Americans doing the right thing. There was never a day I doubted that we would be successful.

I've jumped out of an aircraft on numerous occasions and I had absolute faith and confidence in those jumpmasters to do their duty. My faith in their abilities and their tremendous professionalism took away any fears or lack of confidence I may have had in myself. They knew what they were doing. I had faith in them.

I've watched Soldiers stand post around the world from Checkpoint Charlie to Khafji, National Training Center and Panama and have always marveled that these young men and women come from around our country to unite and stand together in the defense of our nation. They suffer the hardships, endure the separations and put their lives on the line daily for something that can't be touched or seen.

It's faith, as Bradley said, and that faith is what sets us apart from every other nation in the world. It is a great privilege we have been given to serve. John F. Kennedy said it very well: "Word to the Nation: Guard zealously your right to serve in the Armed Forces, for without them, there will be no other rights to guard."

Jesus' ascension into heaven fulfills promise of redemption

Chaplain (Capt.) David Kirk
1st Battalion, 15th Infantry Regiment

Forty days ago, Christians worldwide celebrated one of their most significant and special days, namely Easter.

reflections

This, of course, is the day Christians believe and remember as the day of Jesus' resurrection from the dead. Jesus appeared to and spoke with his disciples numerous times during a period of seven weeks that followed according to the scripture accounts in Acts 1:3. As this time was coming to an end, Jesus gathered his disciples together one more time.

Jesus said: "When the Holy Spirit comes upon you, you will be filled with power and you will be witnesses for me in Jerusalem, in all of Judea and Samaria, and to the ends of the earth." (Acts 1:8)

After saying this, Jesus blessed them and was taken up to heaven as the disciples watched.

Tradition tells us that he ascended on his own power before their eyes. As Jesus continued to ascend, a cloud hid him from their sight. The disciples continued to stand there and stare up at the sky for some time.

It was at this point that two men dressed in white suddenly stood beside them and said "Galileans, why are you standing there looking up at the sky? This Jesus, who was taken from you into heaven, will come back in the same way that you saw him go to heaven." (Acts 1:10-11) At this point, the disciples returned to Jerusalem to wait for the Holy Spirit as Jesus had promised.

Jesus came to earth as the promised one of God.

Adam and Eve committed the first sin and were expelled from the garden. Their expulsion from the garden is symbolic of the loss of grace and the inability to come into God's kingdom.

God, however, loves us very much. God did not close heaven permanently. It was only for a time. He promised, in time, to send his only Son who would redeem us. By his holy act we would be permitted to enter into God's kingdom.

Jesus' suffering and death were the redemptive work. It was completed and sealed with his resurrection. Jesus' ascension into heaven brought things to full circle. Redemption had been gained for us by Jesus. God's promise was fulfilled.

God continues to work marvels in our lives. Jesus promised to send the Holy Spirit to the disciples. The coming of the Spirit is referred to as Pentecost.

Jesus' ascension is the first sign of another promise. It is the hope of all Christians. Jesus first, then we as his followers. Those who do witness to Jesus are reminded of a promise. Those who are faithful to him are called to be with him in the kingdom. Jesus said "There are many rooms in my Father's house, and I am going to prepare a place for you." (John 14:2) Jesus has gone before us. Now we are to follow. God has promised and guaranteed it in the person of Jesus.

For more information, call 545-4272.

5th RTB holds Ranger Run — The 5th Ranger Training Battalion is sponsoring a 15K Mountain Ranger Run Saturday at Camp Frank D. Merrill in Dahlonega, Ga.

The run is being held in conjunction with Camp Merrill's annual open house. Start time for the race is set for 8:30 a.m. and open house festivities will run from 9:30 a.m. until 4 p.m.

Activities will include weapons displays, mountaineering, rappelling, high altitude parachuting and hand-to-hand combat demonstrations.

For more information, call 864-3327 or 864-3367.

Club holds matches — The Fort Benning Rifle and Pistol Club will conduct a tactical rifle match 1 to 5 p.m. Sunday at English Range. Preregistration fee is $15 or $20 the day of the match. Shooters can compete in any of the eight categories.

The club will also hold a tactical pistol match at 7:30 p.m. June 6. Participants will shoot three times — once in daylight, once with a flashlight and once without light. Preregistration fee is $15 or $18 the day of the match. New shooters can register for $10.

For more information, call 689-3371.

Faith, local schools dominate track meet

Spc. Michelle J. Davis

The Faith Middle School Jogging Club celebrated the end of the track and field season with a Friendship Track Meet May 7 at Doughboy Stadium.

In addition to a dozen Faith students, more than 30 students from area schools including Chattahoochee County Middle School, St. Anne's and Our Lady of Lourdes participated in the event.

The runners competed in any of 10 events including 100-, 200-, 400-, 800- and 1600-meter races or relay events.

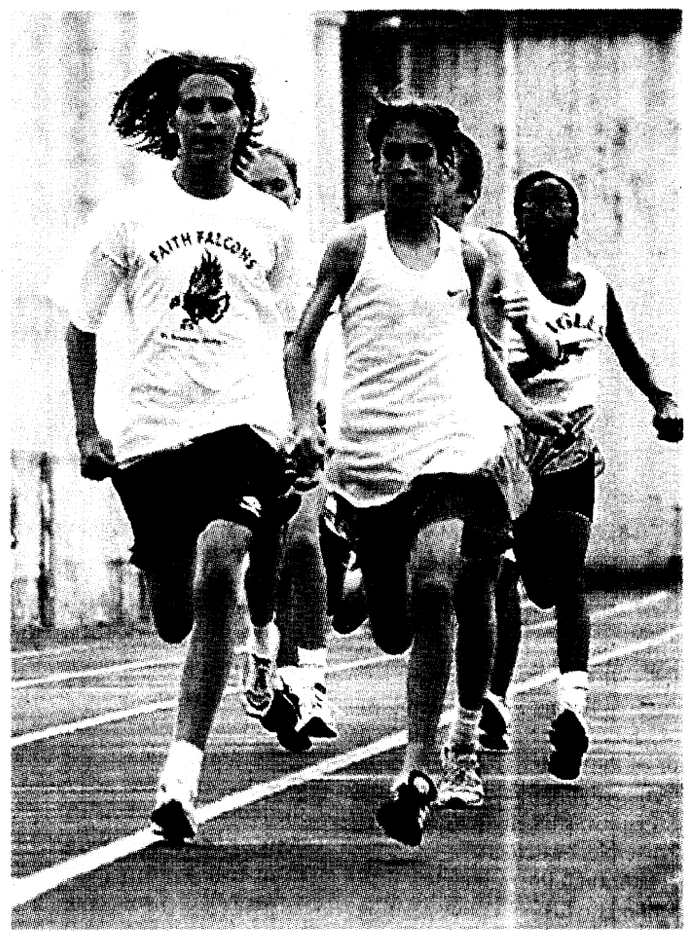
"We had a really great turnout and I was glad the other schools were able to make it," said Susan Emerson, a physical education teacher at Faith who also runs the school's jogging club.

Faith students dominated the long distance races as Bobby Reyes and Sam McChrystal took first and second in the boy's 1600-meter race. Natalie Rowe and Dominique Doyle also placed high as they captured second and third places in the girl's 1600-meter race.

In the 400-meter race, Rafael Agosto took second in the boy's race and April Gabehart took third in the girl's.

Reyes and McChrystal once again took first and second places during the boy's 800-meter race and Rowe cruised into second during the girl's race.

In the 200-meter race, Agosto took third in the boy's competition and Jacki Diaz and Gabeheart took home first and third place finishes.



Although the track meet was the last official function for the club this school year, the club has scheduled a few more meetings including an awards ceremony Thursday.

"This is where we give out awards for those who have improved the most and awards for attending jogging club meetings," Emerson said. "We have so many talented runners here. I just hope they will continue running whether they return to Faith next year or continue on to high school."

Doyle, a seventh-grader, said she plans on coming out again next year to participate in the club.

"I like the club because we get to do a lot of different activities and meet a lot of new people," she said. "Plus, Ms. Emerson is helping me improve my running."

The jogging club is already planning events for the following school year when they will start back up with cross-country in the fall.

AMU Soldiers win medals, gear up for World Match

USAMU Public Affairs Office

Nine Soldiers of the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit won 16 medals in the International Grand Prix of Shooting, held May 5-10 at Phillips, Pool and Hook ranges.

More than 400 competitors from 26 countries competed in three Olympic shooting disciplines — International Pistol, International Rifle and Shotgun.

James T. Graves won the Gold Medal in the Men's Trap Match. In the Women's Trap Match, Joetta R. Novinski won the Gold Medal and Theresa E. DeWitt took the Bronze.

DeWitt also won the Gold Medal in the Women's Double Trap Match, Novinski took Silver and Sandra Honour of Canada got the Bronze. In the Men's Double Trap Match, David R. Alcoriza won the Gold while Bret E. Erickson took home the Bronze.

Shawn C. Dulohery took the Silver Medal in the Men's Skeet Match.

Glenn A. Dubis won the Gold Medal in the 300-Meter Free Rifle 3x40 Match and Stephen C. Goff received the Silver Medal. In the 300-Meter Standard Rifle 3x20 Match, Goff brought home the Gold Medal while Dubis took the Bronze. In the 300-Meter Prone Match, Thomas Tamas received the Silver Medal losing to Daniel Burger of Switzerland.

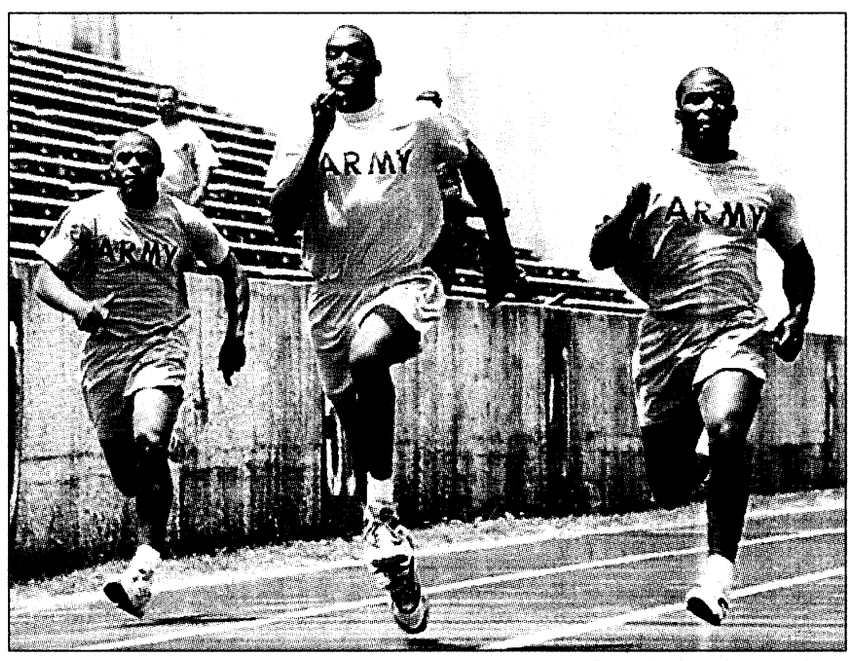
Dubis won the Gold and Goff took Silver in the Men's Free Rifle Three-Position Match.

Other winners in the Grand Prix included Artem Khadjibekov of Russia, who won the Gold Medal in the Men's Air Rifle Match, followed by Konstantin Prikhodtchenko of Russia with the Silver and Maik Eckhardt of Germany with the Bronze. In the Women's Air Rifle Match, Ljubov Gaikina of Russia won the Gold Medal, Han Na Yoo of Korea took the Silver and Soo Young Kang of Korea took the Bronze.

David Vondrak of the U.S. won the Gold in the Center Fire Pistol Match, with Sergey Pyijanov and Sergey Aliferenico, both of Russia, receiving the Silver and Bronze.

In the Rapid Fire Pistol Match, Ralf Schumann of Germany took Gold while Aliferenico took Silver and Emil Milev of Bulgaria received Bronze. Tanu Kirikov of Bulgaria got the Gold in the Free Pistol Match followed by Uwe Potteck of Germany with the Silver and Vigilio Fait of Italy took Bronze.

In the Sport Pistol Match, Galina Beljaeva and Svetlana Smirnova, both of Russia, won the Gold and Silver Medals while Diana Yorgova of Bulgaria took Bronze. Mihail Nestruev of Russia won the Gold in the Standard Pistol Match while Pyijanov got the Silver and Vivek Singh of India took the Bronze.



Boris Kokerev of Russia won the Gold in the Men's Air Pistol Match. Pyijanov once again received the Silver and Fait took the Bronze.

In the Women's Air Pistol MaTch, Beljaeva won the Gold and Rhonda Bright of the U.S. took Silver. Mirostawa Sagun of Poland took Bronze.

The Grand Prix allowed the shooters to prepare for the upcoming World Cup to be conducted at the Wolf Creek Olympic Shooting Complex in AtlantaTuesday through Sunday. The Atlanta World Cup will offer nations the opportunity to win country quotas for the 2000 Olympic Games and allow athletes to meet individual qualifying standards for Olympic participation at the 2000 Games in Sydney, Australia.

After the World Cups in Atlanta, Guatelmala, Munich and Milan, USAMU international shooter will be gearing up to compete in the 1998 National Championships in Atlanta in June and the 1998 World Championships in Barcelona, Spain in July.

Outdoor center offers whitewater rafting trips

Nantahala Outdoor Center

If you have always dreamed of drifting down a lazy river or fighting your way down whitewater rapids, the Nantahala Outdoor Center (NOC) in Wesser, N.C., may be able to fulfull your dreams.

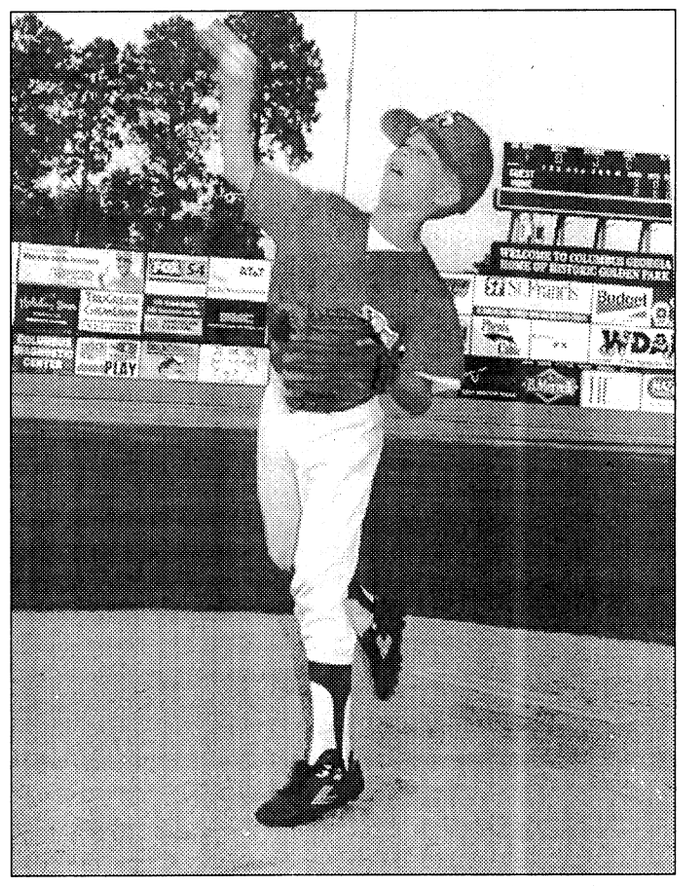
Depending on age and experience level, the outdoor center offers a variety of trips on any of five rivers, which range from bumpy Class II rapids to 'hold-on for your life' Class V rapids.

One trip offered is on the Nantahala River, which is located in the Nantahala Gorge, just outside of the Great Smoky Mountain National Park. This river trip is aimed toward beginners and novices. The eight-mile stretch carries passengers through mild Class II rapids for most of the run. The trip culminates with a powerful blast through Nantahala Falls, a Class III rapid which puts a final touch on the trip. Their is a 60-pound weight minimum for this trip.

The French Broad River is one of the oldest rivers in the world. This is a Class II river that again finishes with Class III and IV in rapids. A guide-assisted raft trip down this historic river will take passengers along densely forested river banks and rich farmlands. NOC offers both full-day and half-day trips ranging from five to eight miles. Passengers must be at least 8 years old. The French Broad can be a quick trip out of town or an historic adventure through time. The river is located about 25 miles north of Asheville, off of Hwy. 25/70, past Marshall.

The Ocoee River is best described as a roller coaster. Consistent Class III rapids keep the rafter guessing which rock the next big drop is lurking behind. "Table Saw" and "Diamond Splitter" rapids hint as to what lies ahead. The sights and sounds of the Cherokee National Forest accompany this 4.5 mile trip in Southeastern Tennessee. For this trip, passengers must be at least 12 years old.

The Nolichucky River is a natural flowing Class III-IV run. The trip starts in North Carolina and travels one of the deepest gorges in the East into Tennessee. Long and technical rapids such as "Quarter Mile" and "Jaws" make the "Noli" one of the most exciting raft trips available. This is a river of many personalities as it is home to big water in the spring or lower levels in the summer. Passengers must be at least 13 years old. The river is located 50 miles north of Asheville, just off Hwy. 23, near Erwin, Tenn.



The Chattooga River is best known for the hard-knocks it gave Burt Reynolds in the movie Deliverance. Rafters will experience Class IV and V rapids if spending the day on Section 4, or will have a moderate trip through mostly Class II-III water on Section 3. Declared a National Wild and Scenic River in 1974, the Chattooga offers the most pristine and isolated full-day trip in the Southeast. The river is located 13 miles east of Hwy. 76, near Clayton, Ga.

These rivers offer a great diversity for whitewater. Be it a float trip, or a paddle-clinching trip, the Nantahala Outdoor Center wants to get you on the water.

The NOC also offers facilities including The Outfitter's Store, three restaurants and day-camp facilities. Guide-assisted raft trips and rentals offer two different ways to "skin this cat." Raft and inflatable kayak rentals are available through the NOC only on the Nantahala. The NOC is located 13 miles southwest of Bryson City, N.C. on Hwy. 74.

In addition, the NOC offers a Subaru Citizen Race Series July 11, 25 and Aug. 1. The race is informal for paddlers who have no hope of making the 2000 Whitewater Olympic Team.

For more information, call the NOC at (800) 232-7238, or check their web page at www.nocweb.com.

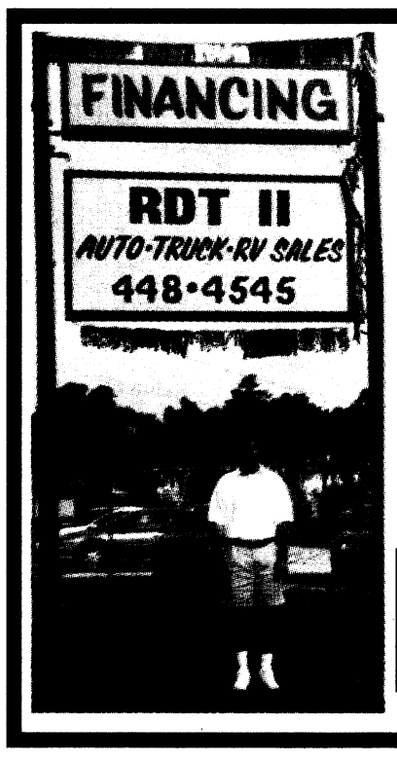
Team needs volunteers for 1998 Games

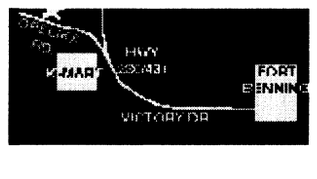
Jenni Palocsik
National Kidney Foundation of Georgia

Team Georgia is scouting for athletes, volunteers and sponsors to help plan and promote activities in the state of Georgia for the 1998 U.S. Transplant Games, sponsored by Sandoz Transplant and presented by the National Kidney Foundation. An Olympic-style competition for recipients of life-saving transplants of all kinds, the Games will be held August 5-8 on the Ohio State University campus in Columbus, Ohio.



With an anticipated 1,500 transplant athletes from across the country participating, the 1998 U.S. Transplant Games promise to be the largest-ever gathering of transplant recipients. Transplant athletes — including kidney, liver, heart, lung, pancreas and bone marrow recipients — will compete for gold, silver and bronze medals in one or more of 14 sports, including bicycling, bowling, golf, racquetball, swimming, tennis and track and field events.

The Games will also feature special programs such as Kids' Time for children from 2 to 11 years old; and a 5K road race promoting organ donation awareness that is open to all.



More than 55,000 Americans are currently waiting for transplants of vital organs. Nine to 10 people die each day waiting. In Georgia alone, more than 850 are awaiting organ transplants.

The National Kidney Foundation of Georgia is one of 51 Affiliates of the National Kidney Foundation, the major voluntary health agency dedicated to preventing kidney and urinary tract diseases, increasing the health and well-being of individuals and families affected by these diseases and increasing the availability of all organs for transplantation.

Transplant athletes from Georgia may register for the 1998 U.S. Transplant Games by joining Team Georgia. To become involved with Team Georgia as an athlete or for planning pregame events and activities, call Judy Bellenger at (404) 248-1315 or outside metro Atlanta at (800) 633-2339.

THE BAYONET CLASSIFIEDS

THANKS BAYONET

"MR. BIG VOLUME!"
BILL HEARD CHEVROLET USA
World's Largest Chevy Retailer

Date: May 11, 1998

TO: The Advertiser Company, printers of The Bayonet

RE: THANKS!!!

Just a quick memo to let you know how much I appreciate the additional sales Bayonet advertising has generated for Bill Heard Chevrolet.

Being the world's largest Chevrolet retailer, and having a reputation of quality service to our customers before, during and after each sale is critical to the continued growth and success of Bill Heard Chevrolet. Our reputation, though, means nothing to all of the new arrivals at Fort Benning if they don't even know we're here. And that's where The Bayonet plays such an important role in getting our message to Fort Benning.

Our consistent presence in The Bayonet for the past year has produced a significant increase in our military business. We see the results of our ads in The Bayonet every day as soldiers and civilians come to the dealership with a copy of our ad in hand, asking to see a particular car that is in the ad, or inquiring about our special military financing for all ranks. They know before they even get here that we're here to serve them.

Again, many thanks for helping us get our message out to Fort Benning.

Public Notice

Violation: The water system failed to collect the required number of lead (Pb) & copper (cu) samples.
The Safe Drinking Water Rules of the Georgia Dept. of Natural Resources established the minimum number of drinking water samples to be analyzed by each public water system.
The water system reports that it failed to submit or have analyzed the required number of drinking water samples during the compliance period 6/1/95 to 9/30/95.
The public has no assurance of safe drinking water when the supplier fails to monitor the drinking water quality.
The supplier has taken corrective actions to insure that an adequate sampling program will be maintained. However, tap water sampling for lead (Pb) and copper (Cu) was performed during the spring of 1997. Analyses were performed by the GA Dept. of Natural Resources laboratory. Test results indicated that there was no Pb or Cu contamination in the Ft.Benning water supply. Request sampling is scheduled for the summers of 1998-2000.
Any questions should be directed to the contact person listed below.
Emil Matula, 706-545-4203 or 545-2400.

Soldiers give blood for DNA collection

Pvt. 2 Amy L. Nyland
Bayonet staff writer

For the last six years, Soldiers have been lining up to give the Army a drop of blood that carries a nearly flawless identity code.

Made famous from the likes of O.J. Simpson and Dolly the cloned sheep, DNA contains a complex genetic map that makes each person unique.

Using this map as a tool, the Army has made DNA sample collection mandatory and the process of identification more precise.

According to Sgt. Richard Moffitt, medical lab technician, Department of Pathology, Martin Army Community Hospital (MACH), the Army began DNA sample collection in 1992 after it was authorized by the deputy secretary of defense.

> "No, the Army is not cloning anybody, that is not what DNA collection is for."
> — Sgt. Richard Moffitt
> Medical lab technician

Moffitt said the sole purpose of DNA sample collection is to have an accurate way to identify a Soldier's remains.

He said past methods of identification such as I.D. tags or fingerprints weren't always efficient or precise because they could not be used in certain incidents.

"The main reason why we do this is if a Soldier becomes unidentifiable by sight, we can identify them by using a DNA sample," Moffitt said. "This process helps ease the minds of family members in the case of a 'true loss' because it is so accurate."

According to Moffitt, the sample collection process is relatively simple. A Soldier gets his or her blood taken and it is smeared on an absorbent card and allowed to dry. It is then packaged and sent to the Armed Forces Institute Repository, where it is bar coded and remains on file.

The samples are then kept on file for fifty years or destroyed at the request of the donor after they have completed their military obligation.

"We often have people come in here and ask if the military is going to clone them," Moffitt said. "No, the Army is not cloning anybody, that is not what DNA collection is for."

According to Spc. Kimberly L. Lambo, pathology medical lab technician, DNA collection is the best form of identification because you can use almost anything as a sample.

Lambo said it could be as simple as a drop of blood, a strand of hair or skin

"A perfect example of this right now is in the case of the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier," Lambo said. "They are going to identify him using DNA and that is exactly its purpose."

According to Moffitt, any Soldier who deploys is required to provide a DNA sample.

Moffitt said the Army plans to conclude DNA sample collection on all active duty members by the end of fiscal year 98.

PAO seeks feedback

Sgt. Marc G. Turchin
Bayonet staff writer

The Public Affairs Office (PAO) wants to hear from the community.

Beginning this week, the PAO offers a survey asking for community members' opinions about The Bayonet and USAIC -TV Channel 4.

"The survey is meant to better the services provided by the PAO," said Rich McDowell, post public affairs officer.

"This is a way we can monitor what the readers and viewers like and dislike," he said.

Post Commanding General Maj. Gen. Carl F. Ernst is urging the community to fill out the survey in hopes of making Fort Benning a better place to live and work.

"I am genuinely interested in feedback on how well we keep you informed," he said in a letter accompanying the survey. "I consider this to be one of the most important surveys you will be asked to take."

Some people and units may receive the survey in the mail, but most can get the survey in The Bayonet during the next few weeks.

Some of the questions include: To what extent do you find The Bayonet a reliable source of news about what is going on at Fort Benning? How much of The Bayonet do you usually read? How often do you watch USAIC-TV? Why do you watch USAIC-TV?

"This lets us know what sort of things people are looking for in our products," McDowell said. "Our goal is to put out the best possible informational product. We need to hear from our customers to ensure we are completing our mission."

This week's survey is located on page A-8. The survey can be mailed back to the PAO at this address:

Fort Benning Public Affairs Office
Building 4, Room 608
Fort Benning, GA. 31905

The survey can also be sent through distribution, dropped off at the information booth inside Building 4 or faxed to The Bayonet at 682-0095.

Post plans Memorial Day observance

Staff Sgt. Lori Egan
Bayonet assistant editor

Memorial Day is not just a day to have a family picnic, but the day the country set aside to remember the men and women who have died for our country.

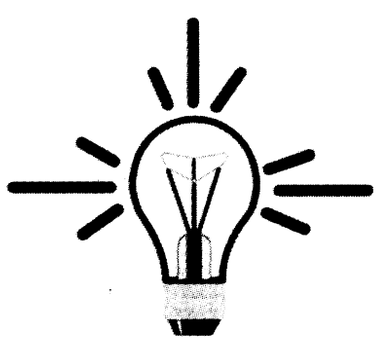
Fort Benning's observance will be at 9 a.m. Monday at the Main Post Cemetery. The guest speaker will be Commanding General Maj. Gen. Carl F. Ernst.

Memorial Day was first formally observed in 1868; however, Decoration Day, a precursor to the holiday, began in Columbus, Miss., when women decorated the graves of Confederate Soldiers. Soon the unkept graves of Union Soldiers were also being cleared and flowers laid beside them. The practice soon spread to other communities.

Memorial Day is a time to remember more than one million fallen Soldiers who are buried in cemeteries across the United States and in foreign lands where they died.

"The reason Memorial Day is so important is it gives us the opportunity to reflect on the people who defended our country against armed enemies," said Frank Hanner, director of the National Infantry Museum.

"This should be an important day for the Soldiers, sailors, airmen and Marines who serve today. They need to go and pay their respects to those who have paid for our freedom with their service and their lives.



"It is important for service members today to lead the way in remembering our war dead because if they don't teach their children about the importance of the holiday — these children will grow up thinking that the day is just a day off for a picnic.

"It is important to teach children the significance of the holiday because no one else is going to do it."

These words are inscribed at Arlington National Cemetery: "Not for fame or reward, not for place or rank, not lured by ambition or goaded by necessity, but in simple obedience to duty as they understood it, these men suffered all, sacrificed all, dared all — and died."

Residents experience power outage

Pvt. 2 Nicole M. Graham
Bayonet staff writer

The lights went out on Custer Road and other areas of Fort Benning Tuesday night leaving more than 1,500 families without electricity from 6 p.m. to approximately 1 a.m. Other areas on post were without power until 3 a.m.

A substantial electrical failure was the reason for the extended outage, according to the Directorate of Public Works' Exterior Electric Shop (EBS).

It was concentrated to the family housing areas off Custer Road, but included other areas of post, said John Carroll, EES supervisor.

"It was necessary to shut down the power in some of the other areas on post to insure the workers' safety," he said.

Some residents even experienced a rare occurrence of dimmed lights because of the low voltage, Carroll said.

Physical violence

Programs available on post to deal with abuse

Pvt. 2 Amy L. Nyland
Bayonet staff writer

Army life is most often not an easy one. Among a Soldier's everyday stresses they must also deal with continuous moves and lengthy absences from their spouse. All of this can place an added strain on a family and cause pressures to build, sometimes taking a turn for the worse and sometimes becoming violent.

The Army is proving once again it takes care of its own by providing a number of services for Soldiers who may feel they are walking on a fine line.

According to Rebecca Welch, Army Community Services Family Advocacy Program manager, the Army offers a variety of programs and services to help prevent and protect Soldiers and their families from crisis, such as child and spousal abuse.

Welch said the Family Advocacy Program (FAP) is just one of the services offered to Soldiers and family members.

She said the FAP is a specialized program that aims at preventing child and spousal abuse through education and specific programs.

"Education is the most important element in reducing child and spousal abuse incidents," Welch said. "The more people who are educated will be able to recognize the signs of abuse and know where to get help. They will be able to protect themselves and those around them," she said.

FAP programs

According to Welch, the FAP gives mandatory troop and commander briefings. The FAP also offers other programs for Soldiers, many of them aimed at parents.

One of these is a mandatory program called the First Steps Program for mothers who just gave birth.

First Steps Program is a prevention program because it offers support to mothers, Welch said. The program helps reduce the risk of child abuse by educating and informing mothers about what is available to them if help is needed.

Another prevention program is the Respite Child Care program. Respite Child Care provides temporary child care relief for parents who may be stressed and possibly "walking the line."

"Respite Care is a great prevention program because it offers parents a break from the stress they may be feeling," Welch said. "This is essential for parents who may have a spouse who is deployed or a new baby and have no opportunity to get away."

Additional services

The FAP also has a partnership with the Chaplains Family Life Center, Social Work Services and numerous tricommunity services.

Welch said it is imperative that all the programs work together to provide the best services to families on post and off.

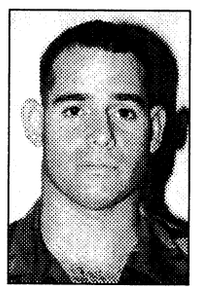
Long weekends can be used for almost anything

Sgt. Marc G. Turchin
Bayonet staff writer



It's another four-day weekend and if it weren't for a wedding, I'd be on my way to Florida. It helps that I'm from there and I can always find something to do or I can also find nothing to do.

commentary

When the command gives us four-day weekends, we need to take full advantage of them.

This is when Soldiers can spend some serious quality time with the family (I do in Florida), take in some of the near and far attractions, get totally submerged in a hobby, watch 96 hours of sports (I could also do that) or just about anything else. No matter how the time is spent, it is meant for the community members to enjoy themselves and unwind.

Let's start with quality time with the family. What is Memorial Day without having a barbecue or picnic? Get the grill out, get some steaks (my personal favorite), chicken or burgers and spend a few hours together preparing and then eating some serious grub. Nothing brings families together like food. With the expected weather for this weekend, it should be perfect.

If the weather is too hot, then maybe a holiday weekend movie is the thing. A friend of mine and I once spent a long weekend hopping from movie theater to theater seeing about half a dozen movies total. Godzilla is now playing and after seeing it, avoid it at all costs. Movie theaters are a great place to spend time because the time before and after the movie (and in my case, during the movie) people can have nice long talks about anything. I like to get to movies early enough so I can talk to the people I am with while waiting for the movie to start. Calm me a freak or weird, but I enjoy things like that.

For the more adventurous types, the attractions in the South are like no other.

In nearby Atlanta, there's Six Flags. This place has just about something for everyone. Yes, the park will probably be a little crowded, but nevertheless, it's a great way to spend one or two days.

There's always the beaches. Destin and Panama City in Florida are pretty cool places to go. The beaches are nice and contrary to what people may think, can be romantic and quiet. For the couples out there, Fort Benning's Destin resort is the perfect place to go and get away from everything. It has its own private beach, swimming pool, jet ski rentals and offers deep sea fishing, plus the added feature of the sun going down around seven or eight at night. This by itself can be a real mood setter and who knows, this could lead to anything.

Another idea is to head down to Orlando and visit Disney World, Epcot, the MGM Studios, Disney's new Animal Kingdom, Universal Studios or Sea World. Enough said.

Now, this next idea may not appeal to everyone, but I'll go with it anyway.

Sporting events are not just a four-day weekend event, it's an every weekend event. But with four days, there's that much more time to watch. This weekend there's the annual Indianapolis 500. Even though I'm not into any type of auto racing, annual sporting events are sort of a religious thing for the sports extremist (ask any avid sports fan).

Then there's baseball and the basketball playoffs. This weekend kicks off the college baseball regionals and begins the wrap-up of the NBA playoffs. There is so much to watch and not enough televisions in the house to watch them all.

The local sports bars will surely have one or the other on their multiple TV screens. If you are like me, this weekend allows you the time to count the days until college football season while I'm watching some other sport. At last count, it's 107 days.

This four-day weekend is brought to you exclusively by these sponsors: all the veterans who have sacrificed their lives so that we may continue our way of life. I would ask that everyone enjoy this weekend to the max, but remember what the price was that we have this time off. Millions of Americans lost their lives defending this country and we all owe it to them to take a moment this weekend to personally thank them.

Whether it's attending a Memorial Day ceremony, visiting with families who have lost loved ones in defense of our country or just stopping for a moment to give thanks, I think all of us owe a heart-filled thanks to everyone who has served before us.

The four-day weekends allow us a lot of time to do a lot of things. Take my advice and don't let the weekend slip away without enjoying it — there aren't too many four-day weekends to take advantage of.

Soldiers practicing theft protection keep valuables

Spc. Clyde Snively
Bayonet correspondent

"Barracks thief." The very phrase conjures up visions of a rat prowling in the night. Sneaking from barracks room to barracks room, snatching up any valuable left lying about. Or going into barracks vacated by Soldiers deployed to fight our country's wars or execute some peace mission.

commentary

Romanticists would probably tell you a Soldier will fight and die for his country.

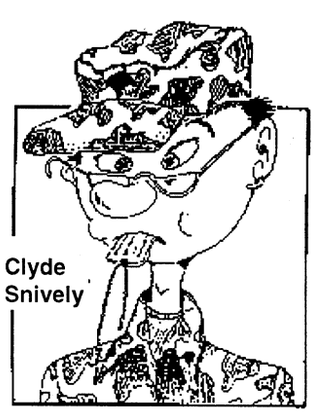
Realists will tell you Soldiers fight and die for their buddies.

What can be more damaging to unit cohesiveness than to have a barracks thief in a unit and having Soldiers looking over their shoulders wondering, "Is it him? Is he the one?"

I've often wondered how someone could turn against his fellow Soldiers and steal their billfolds, watches and even stereos and TVs.

Is he that desperate for the money? Does he do it for the thrill of it, or does he just hate his buddies?

Nor do these low lifers limit themselves to barracks' rooms.



They even hit the barracks' parking lots, smashing windows to get at the car stereos and CD players and cell phones.

Nor is the thievery limited to our go-to-war units. Basic trainees often find themselves victims of some enterprising thief, losing their valuables, despite the many warnings from drill sergeants about securing these items when they aren't around.

"But hey, these are my buddies, can't I leave my billfold unsecured while taking a quick shower?"

Nope.

I had an old timer tell me how when he went through basic training at Fort Jackson, his company posted sentries armed with blank adapters at each stairwell, especially on pay days.

"We were told we were guarding against the homeboys coming on post to rip us off, but I really think the drills feared other Soldiers coming to the barracks and just didn't want us to lose faith in our buddies," old-timer said.

I do have fond memories of the day when Soldiers in a neighboring unit caught a barracks thief. Pitched him right out the third floor barracks window, they did.

He broke both legs and got pretty banged up (not sure if getting banged up happened before or after the "fall.")

I'm not one to advocate violence, but ....

And then I'm talking to this lovely lady, a person who would move heaven and earth to help anyone with a need and noticed she seemed kind of teary-eyed.

"Wow, she got bit hard by the flu bug," I'm thinking, when she tells me that just before I stopped by her office, someone else was there when she wasn't and stole her purse.

You know, credit cards, money, pictures of the family. The whole nine yards.

"I just feel violated," she sobbed.

Seems she's not the first in her building to get hit by the thief.

It's a shame when we can't walk out of our offices for a couple of minutes and not have to worry about having something stolen.

We in the Bayonet office are always leaving- or were leaving things lying around. I hope we learn our lessons from others misfortunes. Hate to have to do a report of survey for a camera: "And when did you last see your camera," "Oh, it was sitting on my desk when I went to lunch ...."

Think safety this holiday weekend

Privately-owned vehicle (POV) accidents continue to be the number one killer of Soldiers. During the first five months of fiscal year 1998, 53 Army Soldiers have been killed in POV accidents throughout the Army.

We will remember those who gave their lives for this great nation May 25. The weekend also marks the start of summer season activities. Throughout the summer protect yourself by following these rules:

•Drive sober and alert. Use a designated driver when drinking alcoholic beverages.

•Wear seat belts.

•Obey all traffic laws, especially the speed limit.

•Drive during daylight as much as possible.

•Swim only in waters protected by lifeguards and wear approved life jackets while boating.

•Treat all weapons as if they were loaded.

•Attend a motorcycle safety course (545-5043) if you plan to buy a motorcycle.

Our goal throughout the Army and Fort Benning is to be accident free. We need your help to achieve that goal and to protect our most valuable resource — our people — our Soldiers, their families and our civilian workforce.

— Maj. Gen. Carl F. Ernst
Commanding General

Rangers name bayonet assault course for Medal of Honor recipient

Nicole Longstreath
Special to the Bayonet©

A camoflauge drop cloth was moved aside to unveil a new name for a new bayonet assault course at Fort Benning's 4th Ranger Training Battalion. (RTB).

Retired Col. Lewis L. Millet, recipient of the Medal of Honor for a successful bayonet charge in Korea, was honored May 15 when 4th RTB named their bayonet assault course after him.

The bayonet, many said at the battalion, is an essential weapon in times of war.

"You can't always count on mechanized weapons," said Maj. Steven Townsend, executive officer, 4th RTB.

"If the (mechanized) weapon fails and the Soldier can't use grenades, the bayonet is still a weapon available to the Soldier to destroy the enemy," said Sgt. 1st Class Brian Salvi, Co. C, 4th RTB.

After giving two examples of Soldiers who either used a bayonet to defend themselves against an attacker or killed their attacker before they died, Millett said, "The bayonet is the the ultimate last weapon."

Since the "ultimate last weapon" can sometimes be dangerous to the trainee learning to use it, 4th RTB has taken many safety precautions to ensure the safety of the ranger students.

"There is an instructor at every obstacle and medics at the midpoint and the end," Townsend said, "If a student is injured, we blow a whistle; the students are instructed to stop immediately when they hear that whistle."

According to Salvi, the use of the safety features seems to save students from injury.

"We have been accident free since October," he said.

Since every Soldier who uses a bayonet risks severe injury, Millett said fear was not an option for the bayonet-equipped Soldier.

"Have no fear," Millett said, "A Soldier with fear will not do the job."

Millett said physical fitness also played a key role in being a successful Soldier.

"To be successful, you have to be strong and in good shape," Millett said.

Millett is speaking from past experience, according to him, his family has been on the front lines for more than 300 years.

The Medal of Honor recipient said his family was destined to be recognized for their military service.

"The first Millett who was killed in action was in 1675 during an Indian massacre in Massachusetts," Millett said.

According to Townsend, Millett seemed like the perfect candidate for this occasion.

"We picked someone who is worthy and represents the bayonet assault course," Townsend said, "We chose Millett because he received the Medal of Honor for his successful bayonet charge in February 1951 in Korea."

"We have to recognize people who made this country what it is today," said Sgt. Robert Ross, HHC, 4th RTB. "A lot of people wouldn't be here if it weren't for Soldiers like Millett."

Abuse: Programs help families

"One of the services we have a partnership with is the Chaplains Family Life Center (CFLC)," Welch said. "They are great because they help the prevention process by providing counseling for families."

According to Chaplain (Maj.) Frederick "Bud" Rupel, chief of Chaplain Family Life Center, the CFLC gives all types of counseling to married couples and army families.

Rupel said the CFLC also offers a variety of classes such as parenting classes and couples communication classes.

He said the parenting classes help parents become more efficient in interacting with their children.

"These classes are really beneficial because they help parents learn how to discipline their children in a way that is constructive rather than destructive," Rupel said.

He also said that the couples communication class teaches couples how to talk things over in a way that doesn't develop into violence.

"We try to help couples find peaceful solutions," Rupel said. "However, we want them to find the solutions on their own. We kind of look at ourselves as coaches on the sideline. We give couples a plan and we help them along by having them look at issues in a different light."

Rupel said the CFLC saves Army families a tremendous amount of money because instead of going downtown and paying $85 an hour for counseling services they receive the best care available at no charge.

According to Welch, Social Work Services (SWS) is another vital program that helps families in crisis.

Welch said SWS becomes involved when prevention fails and violence erupts.

The SWS provides treatment for offenders such as anger management and counseling.

She said if someone is in trouble or they know of someone in trouble they can contact SWS for help.

For people who feel they may be in danger, Welch said FAP has a partnership with surrounding spouse abuse shelters such as Russell County Shelter and the Columbus Alliance for Battered Women.

"The Army does not tolerate abuse of any kind," Welch said. "They will try everything to keep the family together safely, but in a worse case scenario if things do not improve the offender may face legal action."

She said if people choose to get help it doesn't mean they are weak. It just means they are strong enough to admit they have a problem and are willing to do something about it.

Rupel said the Army has a pro-active approach to helping communities, but it is up to the individual to do something for themselves before it is too late.

"We are not out to destroy anyone's career, we are out to help families," Rupel said. "I would tell a Soldier who is having a problem, to go get help, because it's not worth them getting to an exploding point, when it can be prevented."

To find out more about the services available or for any questions, contact the FAP at 545-6969.

BETTER OPPORTUNITIES FOR SINGLE SOLDIERS

Program, president seek support

Pvt. 2 Nicole M. Graham
Bayonet staff writer

The new president for the Better Opportunities for Single Soldiers' (BOSS) hopes to receive support from single Soldiers at Fort Benning.

Spc. Michael J. Bieller, Company A, 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment, assumed the position of president in March.

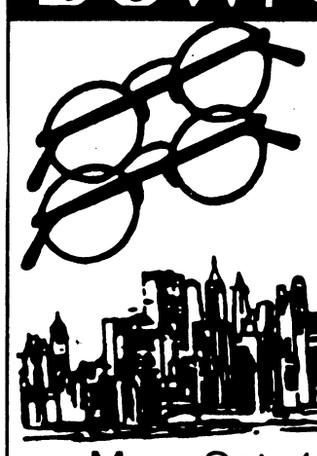
"The BOSS program was originally started to improve the quality of life for single Soldiers and to provide more equality between married Soldiers and single Soldiers," Bieller said.

Launched by the Army's Community and Family Support Center (CFSC), the BOSS program was tested in five pilot sites in 1989. The program then became an Army wide program in 1993.

Bieller, who was a BOSS representative at Fort Lewis, Wash., for four years, said he wants this to be a great program, but it needs the Soldiers' support.

"I want to help the Soldiers out," Bieller said, "But you need to support the program to get something in return ."

Bieller said it is necessary to the program to have the support of the Soldiers.



Bieller is currently looking for volunteers for a Muscular Dystrophy Association program set for Aug. 8-14 in Atlanta. Soldiers will get a chance to interact with children when volunteering as camp counselors for children affected by the disease.

A musical festival is planned for December, with proceeds to benefit the BOSS program.

New fundraising ideas are always welcome from the Soldiers, Bieller said.

For more information about BOSS, call Bieller at 545-1500.

IOBC students lend support while tutoring kids

2nd Lt. Brandon del Pozo and 2nd Lt. Mark Ferguson
Infantry Officer Basic Course

Saturday mornings are usually reserved by Infantry Officer Basic Course (IOBC) students for sleeping in and taking a respite from the pre-dawn physical fitness sessions and field problems which characterize the course. On April 18, however, some 20 Infantry lieutenants woke up a little earlier than the rest to engage in some mental exercise in the form of tutoring local students in math, reading and science.

Students of Company B, 2nd Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment, lent support to an ongoing tutoring program led by Lonnie Jackson of the Combined Communities of Southeast Columbus.

For the past 15 years, teachers, teachers aides, parents, college students and Soldiers have tutored children at the Eastway and Davis Schools of Columbus.

The tutors were met by more than 70 students who wanted to brush up on their skills in various subjects. While the tutors may have missed out on a little sleep, the students missed out on the cartoons and sports that may fill an elementary school student's Saturday mornings, so the bottom line was that both parties had made a commitment to be there.

"These kids are going the extra mile to help themselves, to better themselves," said 2nd Lt. Darryl Lyon, a National Guardsman at IOBC. "I was glad to be a part of that."

2nd Lt. Michael Bajema of 1st Platoon, Co. B, 2nd Bn., 11th Inf. Regt., tutored a student in math for an hour and then another in first-grade reading.

"My one hour of tutoring for each student let him know that there are adults in their community who care about them. For that reason, those 60 minutes were more valuable than just the time spent there actually teaching."

"Even though I'm only here for a few hours, this program is big enough to ensure that someone will be here in my place next week and same students can receive tutoring week after week," said 2nd Lt. Lee Crognale.

IOBC students have been coming out to tutor for the last six years of the program, and MR. Jackson is grateful for their efforts. "It definitely makes a difference," he said. "This one-on-one work gives them a better opportunity to receive the direction and help needed to be successful."

Those interested in tutoring can call Jackson and the CCSC at 687-5357 or 321-9596.

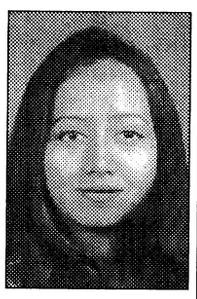
Thrift Savings Plan open season ends July 31

Douglas J. Gillert
American Forces Press Service

WASHINGTON — The semiannual open season for the Thrift Savings Plan ends July 31.

During this period, eligible federal civilian employees may enroll in the federal government's 401(k) investment fund. You must be a federal employee for at least six months before you can enroll in the plan. Current participants can change their future contributions or the way they invest their contributions.

Thrift Savings Plan participants can allot their investments to three different funds. The C fund, which diversifies investments in stock markets, is the riskiest but potentially the highest yielding fund. The F fund invests in notes, bonds and other obligations that return the amount invested and pay interest at a specified rate over a period of time. And the G fund invests in short-term, nonmarketable U.S. Treasury securities specifically issued to the Thrift Savings Plan. Investments earn interest at a rate equal to average market securities with four or more years of maturity.



For the 12 months ending March 31, the C fund returned 47.83 percent, the F fund returned 11.94 percent and the G fund returned 6.56 percent.

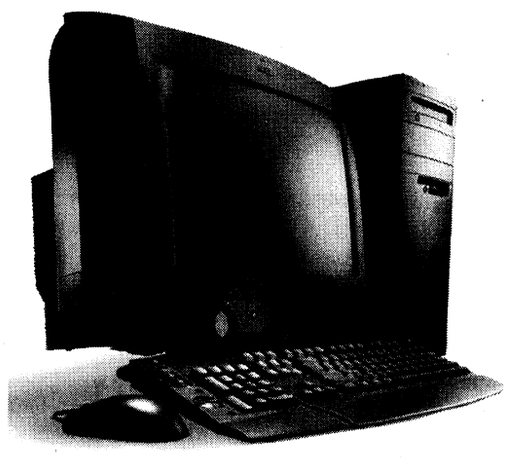
All contributions to the plan come through payroll deductions. The amount you can invest depends on your employment status. Civil Service Retirement System employees may contribute up to five percent of their basic pay.

Federal Employee Retirement System (FERS) employees may contribute up to 10 percent of their basic pay. FERS employees also receive matching agency contributions for the first five percent they invest.

Thrift Savings Plan brochures and forms are available at civilian personnel offices and on the Internet at www.tsp.gov. The next open season runs Nov. 15-Jan. 31.

In memorium

A memorial service was held Thursday for Rungtawan Reynolds, 31.



She died Tuesday morning. Born Sept. 9, 1967, she was the wife of Sgt. Robert Reynolds and the mother of three sons, Robbie, 7; Chris, 6; and Cody, 4.

A funeral service will be Tuesday at the Lawrence E. Moon Funeral Home, 906 West Flint Park, Flint, Mich., 48505.

Those who wish to make a monetary donation can call the garrison commander's office at 545-1500.

1st. Lt. William Walker
63rd Engineer Company (CSE)

'Tis the season' — the construction season, that is. The 63rd Engineer Company (CSE), under the command of Capt. Robert H Carr, has identified a ten-month window, during which the company will focus on post construction projects. This construction season runs from February to November.

In order to "kick off" this construction season, the 63rd deployed to the field from March 20 to April 2. During this FTX, the company moved 178 Soldiers and 130 pieces of engineer equipment, including scrapers, graders, bulldozers, dump trucks, and SEE trucks, to the field. Training to doctoral standards, the company deployed to five different tactical assembly areas, from which the platoons conducted construction, and as tactical, missions. Some of the tactical missions included reconnaissance patrols, route recons, bridge recons, defending convoys against attack, and defending unit positions against attack.

First platoon's construction mission was a 1.6-mile road upgrade, which started at Duke Range and ran Westward. Second platoon worked on a 3.5-mile road upgrade, which runs through Fort Mitchell Land Navigation Course. Third platoon was assigned the Griswold Range upgrade, which included the upgrade of 5.2 miles of road and construction of a 1900 meter by 30 meter firing platform. All construction projects were conducted as if in a tactical environment, which meant the Soldiers had to maintain security of the project site at all times. During the FTX, the company moved more than 15,000 cubic yards of soil, placed six 60-foot culverts, and placed 500 tons of gravel. The Soldiers worked an average of sixteen hours per day, throughout the exercise, and the Soldiers conducted a reverse-cycle period for two days of the FTX. The maintenance platoon worked long and hard to ensure that the engineer equipment could hold up to the high OPTEMPO that the line platoons were demanding. The Soldiers of the maintenance platoon spent many sleepless nights trying to fix broken equipment or performing recovery operations. Their hard work paid off in an operational readiness rate of 95 percent at the end of the exercise.

The company's OPTEMPO will not slow down throughout this construction season Carr said. The 63rd has number of projects lined up, that will benefit the post. Each line platoon is directed to deploy to the field, for at least one week, during the platoon's green cycle. Also, the entire company will deploy once every quarter. Sgt. 1st Class Scott Dexter said, "so when you see us rolling by, we are saving you, as well as Fort Benning, lots of dollars." Our next major mission is to deploy the company in support of HAMMER Focus in June.

Soldiers learn chemical protection, NBC training

Spc. D. Stewart Howell
Fort McClellan News

A Japanese religious cult shocked the world March 20, 1995 by committing a previously unthinkable act — using a chemical weapon in a terrorist attack.

The blast that devastated the lives of hundreds on board that unsuspecting subway train was a sobering reminder of just how vulnerable American citizens and institutions are to acts of terrorism here at home.

As ghastly as the Tokyo Subway incident was, however, counter-terrorism experts report these scenes of destruction and the loss of lives are minor when compared with what could happen if domestic or international terrorists unleashed weapons of mass destruction to advance their personal or political agendas. National policy makers, military leaders and local authorities have recognized the seriousness of the threat of chemical or biological terrorism and are taking action.

Since its opening in 1987, the Chemical Defense Training Facility (CDTF) has served as the principle training center in the area of realistic NBC defense to help American citizens and their allies combat such threats at home. Operating joint readiness, awareness and response training for service members from all branches of the U.S. Armed Forces, the CDTF is one of the only facilities of its kind in the world to produce decontamination training in a toxic environment.

As the only live chemical agent training center within the Department of Defense, the CDTF also plays a key role in improving personnel survivability in domestic and civil chemical and biological incidents. In cooperation with the U.S. Army Chemical School at Fort McClellan, the CDTF trains more than 5,000 students a year from federal, state and civil organizations. These include law enforcement officials, emergency first responders and NBC specialists from more than 34 countries who have all experienced the physically and mentally demanding training offered at the facility.

"This training is critical to Soldiers and their civilian counterparts," said Stephen Cook, operations specialist and deputy chief, CDTF. "Because emergency first responders such as police officers and fire personnel are going to be the first people to react to possible terrorist incidents, their training will give the advantage they need to protect lives."

To qualify them as experts in combating these threats, the more than 40,000 students who have trained at the CDTF have all met the potentially hazardous challenge of venturing into a live agent environment to test their skills and their trust in their protective equipment. In its 11 years of operation, the CDTF has never had anyone exposed to an agent.

The CDTF is proud of its training and safety records. It has never missed a single day of training and has completed more than 300,000 man hours supporting operations without accidents or incidents.

"We just got a thank-you card this week from one organization whose personnel completed the course and have now moved on to put their training to use," Cook said. "Because of what they learned here, they now have the confidence necessary to go out and put their training to use protecting lives."

Chemical and biological terrorism are looming threats in today's society. Aum Shinrikyo, a fanatical leader of a Japanese cult, unleashed sarin gas on the Tokyo subway system. This terrified millions, giving government and security forces around the world a wake-up call to be mentally and physically prepared to combat NBC security threats both on the battlefield, and in the civilian sector.

Experts say training at the CDTF is invaluable. According to Cook, it provides realistic and challenging training that enhances individual proficiency and confidence. U.S. officials and independent analysts agree it's only a matter of time before the U.S. will be forced to grapple with the specter of nuclear, biological or chemical terrorism. NBC experts contend that the safety of our troops and the security of our nation will be strengthened by the improved emphasis on NBC readiness, and counter-terrorism. But the clock is ticking. Because military members at every level and in all kinds of units may one day be subjected to chemical attack, they must know how to survive under these conditions to be able to fight and win.~

"The training we offer here certifies an individual as a chemical expert and gives them the credibility they need to go out and train others," Cook said.

"The live agent training is our equivalent of pushing a parachutist out of an airplane or training on a live fire range. This training offered here is the best of its kind in the world."

One Station Unit Training expands to nine weeks

Pfc. Carrie L. Fortner
Fort McClellan News

One Station Unit Training throughout the Army will soon be lengthened one week to better train Soldiers on the Army's seven core values.

The 54 hours of additional instruction in Army values — loyalty, duty, respect, selfless service, honor, integrity and personal courage — will be implemented in October.

"The goal of the expanded training is to not only make the training experience more rigorous, but also to provide additional human relations and allow more time for the addition of Army values into our newest Soldiers," said Lt. Gen. William Bolt, deputy commanding general, Initial Entry Training, Training and Doctrine Command. "The intent is to challenge new volunteers and have them emerge from IET as proud values-based Soldiers."

For Military Police and Chemical trainees, values training will begin when they arrive at Fort McClellan and will continue throughout their time in training here.

The extra week of training will be integrated into the normal common tasks training that occurs weekly within the basic training phase of OSUT.

"Equal opportunity training starts whenever Soldiers enter at the 39th Adjutant General Battalion and it is dispersed throughout the first six weeks of OSUT," said Sgt. 1st Class Frank Minney, equal opportunity advisor, Training Brigade. "The new Army values training will be dealt with much the same way. It will be spread throughout the basic training phase."

Though the addition of a week of basic combat training is new, the teaching of Army values is nothing new. Training units here already take strides to ensure that soldiers have a strong values-based foundation.

"The extra week will help emphasize the importance of Army values to the soldiers," said Staff Sgt. Ernest Raper, drill sergeant, Company A, 787th MP Bn. "We already integrate values training into everyday training from the day they get here to the day they graduate. Without values there is nothing to guide the Soldiers to accomplish the correct mission."

Another 27 hours of training, including prevention of sexual misconduct and harassment, will also be implemented; however, these lessons will be given in the context of Army values.

"Let's say the value for the week is respect," said Col. David Buckley, director of individual training in TRADOC's deputy of chief of staff for training organization. "You talk about the value of respect for yourself and respect for others. If you live that value, then things like rape do not happen in your unit. You don't let that happen in your unit, or in any environment that you can influence."

Besides imparting Army values in new Soldiers, the additional week of training will give them more time for learning how to be a Soldier. Soldiers will still be required to meet traditional training standards, including M16A1 rifle and hand grenade qualification and the Army Physical Fitness Test

"We found we needed more time in basic training to ensure that the recruits completed basic combat training at the appropriate physical levels, having gotten all of the tasks and training skills that we felt were necessary," said Gen. William W. Hartzog, commander of Training and Doctrine Command.

As an increasing emphasis has been placed on values Army-wide, it is expected that when Soldiers leave their training units, values will be reinforced at their new duty stations. This training will therefore translate into readiness.

"Basic training is where you first have an opportunity to mold a Soldier and give them a foundation," Minney said. "The foundation is critical as to what type of Soldier they will be. The impact of this training will be quality Soldiers going into the field already aware of the importance of Army values."

SMA Hall visits training installations to assess issues

Guadalupe Stratman
Army News Service

FORT LEONARD WOOD, Mo., — Sergeant Major of the Army Robert Hall has visited 28 installations since November 1997, talking with thousands of Soldiers in the process. Fort Leonard Wood Soldiers got their chance to meet the Army's top enlisted Soldier in April.

Hall has traveled more than 54,000 miles and talked with 12,000 Soldiers in small groups, meeting junior and senior enlisted troops, listening to their concerns. He visited Fort Leonard Wood April 21-23, focusing on drill sergeant and training issues. One of his first priorities was to assess drill sergeant morale.

"As I talked to drill sergeants, on a scale of one to 10, their morale probably ranged from about a 'six' to an 'eight,'" said Hall. "I don't think drill sergeants have lost the faith. I think we have hit them with a lot of policy changes very quickly."

Morale here is the same as at other installations, said Hall.

Aberdeen Proving Ground, Md. took a "big hit" with sexual misconduct cases dealing with drill sergeants, said Hall.

Fort Leonard Wood also had 15 sexual misconduct cases involving drill sergeants. Of the 17 sexual misconduct cases on Fort Leonard Wood, 13 ended in courts martial and four resulted in "other than honorable" discharges.

"I think drill sergeant morale is coming up, but it's still pretty fragile," said Hall. "Now when I go out, I tell them I expect them to maintain the standards and I expect them to enforce the standards."

"I want them to make all the corrections that they are supposed to make, and they are supposed to do it the right way," said Hall sternly; adding that he wants that reflex to be second nature for drill sergeants.

"They should not sit back and think before they make a correction as to how this is going to look politically. They should go out and just make the corrections that noncommissioned officers need to make."

As Hall interacted with initial entry Soldiers, he asked them to name off the seven Army values and why they joined the military.

The Army has always had values, said Hall, dating back to Baron Friedrich von Steuben at Valley Forge in 1775 when he established those attributes and traits that a NCO should have.

"I think we have to be a value-based force," said Hall. "I think there's no doubt that the young men and women that we're recruiting today to be the Soldiers of tomorrow bring their own set of values into the military. We just have to understand that the values they bring in may not always be consistent with what we expect for a Soldier. That's why it's important that we teach, train and reinforce the seven Army values."

While at a different installation, Hall said, he was asked what he thought was the most important of the Army values.

"It took a few seconds to think about it," he said, "but then I realized leadership was the most important value. The Army values are leadership. Leadership is Army values."

"The values apply to every Soldier who wears the uniform, from E-1 through O-10 active, Guard and reserve," said Hall. "Gen. (Dennis) Reimer, (Army Chief of Staff) will live by this same set of values that he expects that private that you're picking up this afternoon to live by. And I'll do the same."

As Hall visits the Army's various installations, he tells his peers about concerns and issues of the enlisted Soldier. He does this through staff meetings with the Army staff, Army Chief of Staff and Secretary of the Army.

Hall also has testified before congressional subcommittees on three occasions about Soldier issues.

Rangers open training to community

Spc. Michelle J. Davis
Bayonet staff writer

More than 175 miles northeast of Fort Benning lies a small Army camp tucked away in the midst of the Appalachian mountains. Although Camp Frank D. Merrill may not be big in size, it serves as home to the 5th Ranger Training Battalion (RTB) and more than 3,000 Soldiers, who pass through its gates each year for the Mountain Phase of the U.S. Army Ranger School.

More than 1,500 people traveled to Dahlonega, Ga., Saturday to take part in the battalion's annual open house.

During this one-day event, the 5th RTB opened the camp's doors and invited community members to take a sneak peak at the training Soldiers receive at the camp in addition to viewing some of the equipment, techniques and capabilities used by rangers everywhere.

The day's festivities began with a 15K Mountain Ranger Run, which attracted more than 280 runners from Georgia and the surrounding states.

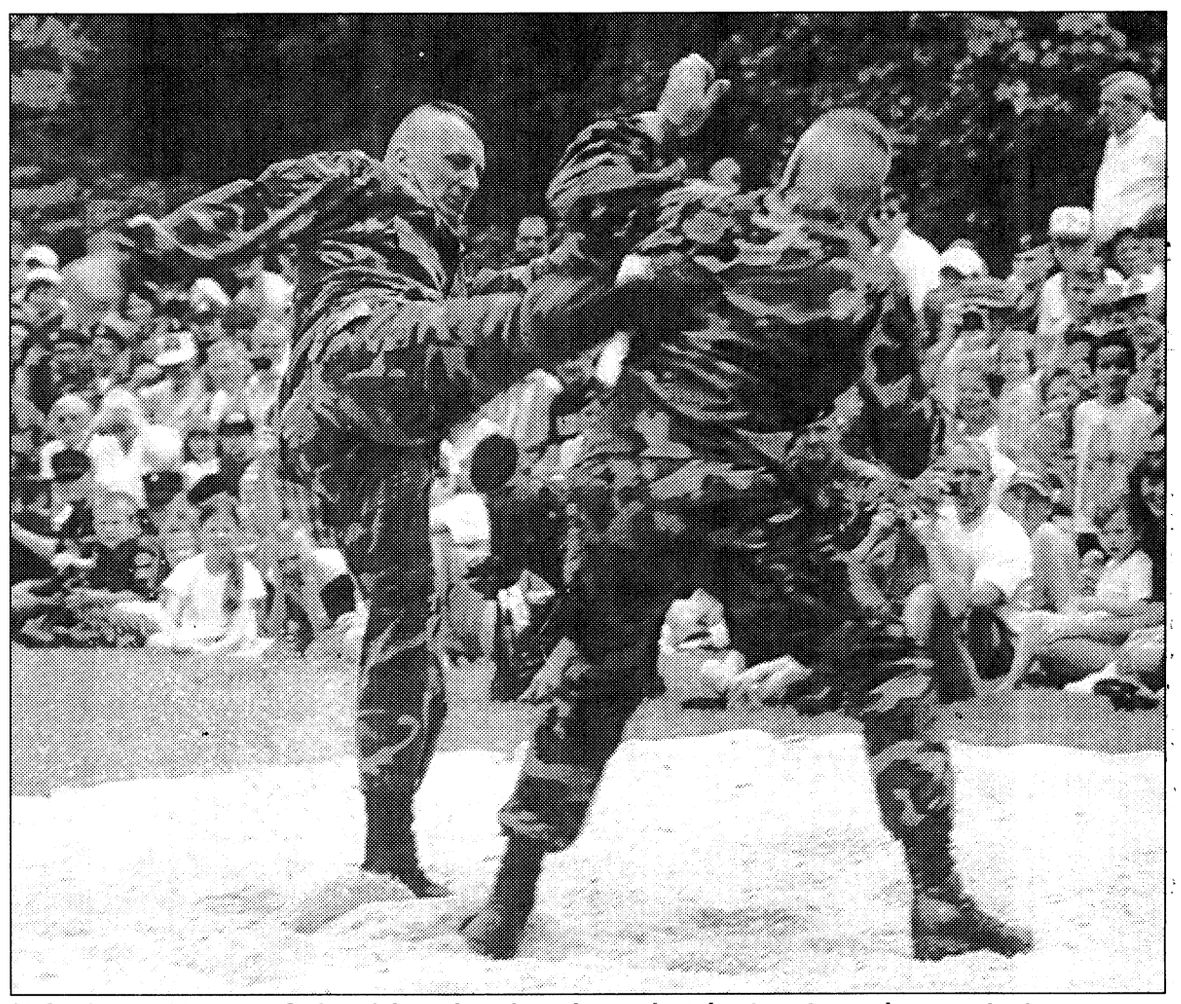
"We had a really good turn-out for the run as well as the open house," said Capt. Keith Smith, commander of Company C, 5th RTB, and ranger run coordinator. "We weren't sure if the weather was going to hold off, but it worked out."

Once the run wrapped up, visitors were welcome to view various equipment displays and try out an M-4 rifle or M-60 machine gun.

While the line for the weapons' demonstration never dwindled, the rangers-in-action and mountaineering demonstrations also drew a crowd as rangers demonstrated hand-to-hand combat techniques as well as rappelling and mountain climbing techniques.

Carole Kolofske of Mableton, Ga., traveled to Dahlonega after her son told her husband about the open house.

"The demonstrations were just incredible," Kolofske said. "We are retired Air Force. We've traveled around, but in our 30 years of military experience, we've never seen anything like this."



Although the battalion has a year to plan for the next open house, Smith said they are already developing ideas for next year's festivities.

"One thing we would like to try and do is get more involvement from the ranger community," Smith said. "This year, we had a few organizations hold reunions in conjunction with the open house and that's something that we would like to see more. They are a big part of the military and have helped make it what it is today."

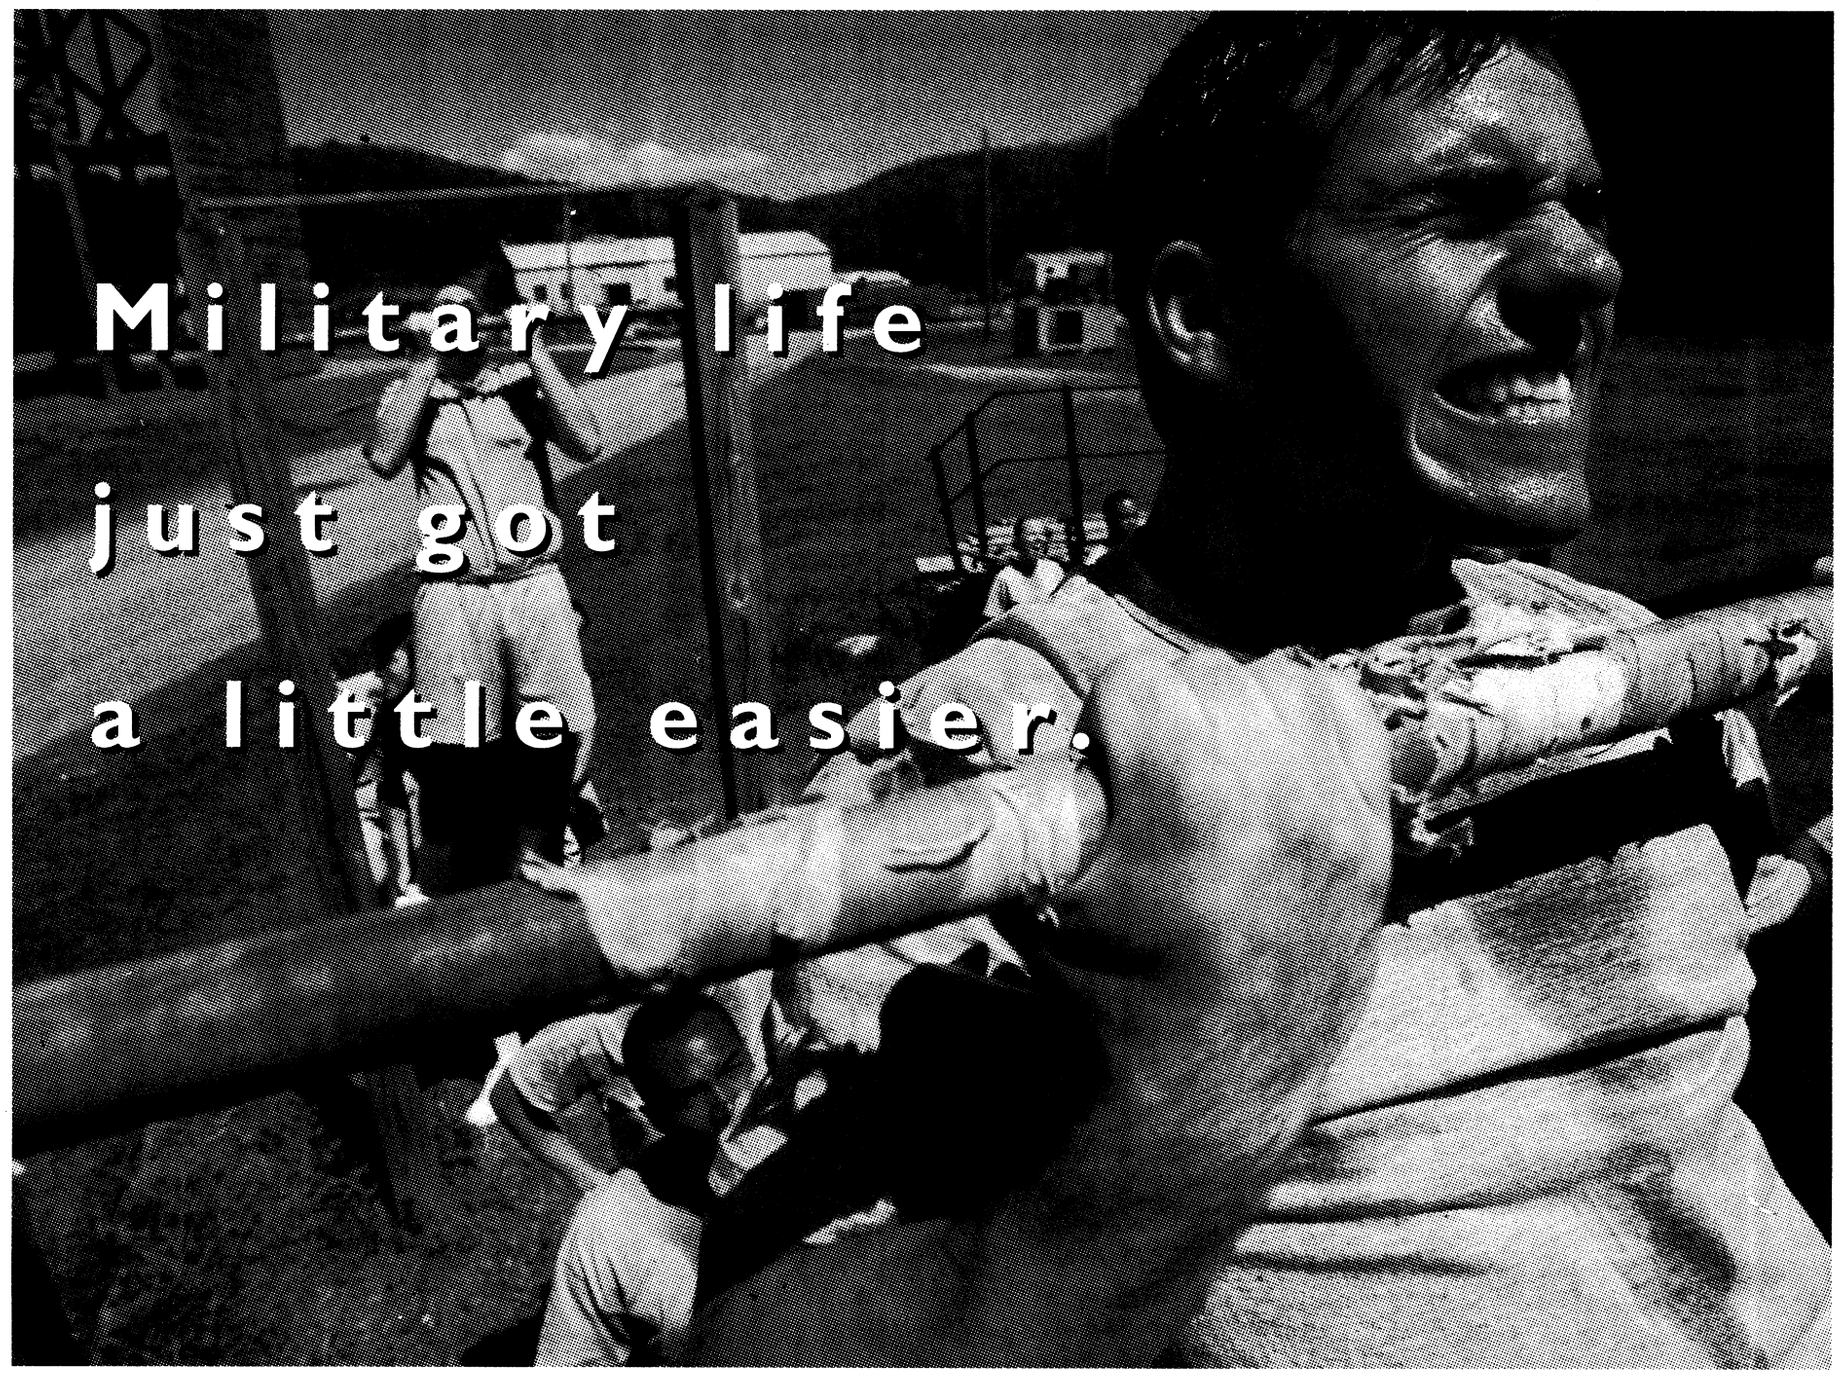
Army adds missiles to weaponry

Army News Service

REDSTONE ARSENAL, Ala. — The Army gave approval May 1 for the Army Tactical Missile System Block IA program to enter into full rate production and to award within a month a one-year contract for production of 170 missiles.



The approval for full rate production, which was made in an acquisition decision memorandum signed by the Acting Secretary of the Army Robert Walker follows a successful 48-month engineering and manufacturing development phase during which 11 test flights and other technical and operational tests were conducted. The Army acquisition objective for ATACMS Block IA is 652 missiles.

The ATACMS is a long-range, ground launched missile system consisting of a surface-to-surface guided missile with an anti-personnel or anti-materiel warhead consisting of M-74 fragmentation bomblets. ATACMS missiles are used to attack targets such as surface-to-surface missile sites, air defense systems, logistics elements and command, control and communication complexes that are well beyond the attack capabilities of existing cannons and rockets.

ATACMS missiles are fired from the Multiple Launch Rocket System M-270 launcher and the missiles are deployed within the ammunition loads of corps Multiple Launch Rocket System battalions or division artillery MLRS batteries.

The ATACMS Block IA missile is designed for the "deep strike," attaining nearly twice the range of the Block I missile. The additional range of the Block IA missile is achieved by reducing the M-74 bomblet payload while increasing the accuracy by integrating global positioning system components.

The ATACMS Block IA, like its earlier version, is air transportable and operates in most weather conditions, day or night.

Officers receive promotions

Sgt. 1st Class David L. Poindexter
1st Platoon, 63rd Engineer Company (CSE)

At 8:45 a.m. April 16, Lt. Col. Wendell L. Taylor, Deputy Commander, 36th Engineering Group (Combat) promoted three 2nd lieutenants from the 63rd Engineer Company (CSE) "Skill to Build Family," 2nd Lt. Carmen M. Hancock, 2nd Lt. Tyamona R. Penister and 2nd Lt. John T. Tucker III to first lieutenant in the 36th Engineer Group (Combat) Motorpool. Capt. Robert H. Carr, commander, 63rd Engineer Company (CSE), assisted Taylor in the pinning on of the new rank. Col. A. Allen Rasper, Commander, 36th Engineer Group (Combat) was present to witness three 2nd lieutenants go from gold to silver.

The tradition has it that newly promoted first lieutenants must endure a ceremonial wetdown before the company considers them to be full-fledged first lieutenants. In keeping with tradition, the three new first lieutenants planned a christening event to be long remembered. Each officer stood between two 5,000 gallon motorized water distributors operated by Spc. Fred Shaw and Spc. Jamie Schwickerath.

The lieutenants voluntarily dropped to do push-ups while Carr and 1st Lt. Eric Searcy hosed them down in front of the formation using fire hoses connected to the water distributors. After a thorough soaking, cheers from the visitors and 63rd Soldiers, the group congratulated each first lieutenant on their promotion. The reception immediately following the thorough wet down was held adjacent to the 63rd Engineer motorpool bay.

ACAP pledges to assist Soldiers

Army Career and Alumni Program

"Fort Benning's ACAP Center has an important mission to make sure separating Soldiers receive information, counseling and advice regarding transition benefits, entitlements and services to assist with adjustment to civilian life.

"The ACAP Center is first, an agency created to be the focal point for transition assistance matters and referral to service providers, then secondly to directly assist with a separating Soldier's job search," said Chick Eagle, one of Fort Benning's ACAP Counselors.

"The ACAP Center staff has pledged to create a positive, supportive and caring environment for separating Soldiers, family members and civil service workers. Personnel in transition feel many stresses and they need such a place to re-focus on their next career. ACAP Center counselors and automation specialists actively assist by identifying, referring and resolving individual concerns about the transition process," Eagle said.

"This information office in Soldiers' Plaza has built a reputation on providing top quality and responsive customer service to separating Soldiers and family members. With available resources, the ACAP Center pledges to apply all effort to satisfy customer needs," Eagle said.

The Center is open from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. each day in Soldiers' Plaza with the exception of Thursday afternoon when it is closed (3 to 5 p.m.) for in-service training.

For ACAP eligibility and scheduling information, please call or visit Building 2634 in Soldiers' Plaza at 545-2308 or 545-2309.

Stowers celebrates America with patriotic program

Erin A. Nash
Special to the Bayonet©

With the hot, muggy weather and American flags as far as the eye could see, one would of thought it was the Fourth of July. In actuality, though, it was Stowers Elementary School and they were putting on a program called "Celebrate America" for parents and friends, a crowd that was estimated at 1,800.

The program was part of an idea principal Glenn Hughes had to put on a patriotic program to help instill patriotism in the minds of the students and music teacher Lorri M. Blanchard wrote and directed the program.

"I came up with the idea of a time machine going back in history late one night and just started writing it. I wanted to cover history and still keep it in the present," Blanchard said.

The program started with the introduction of historical figures like Betsy Ross and Freddie Stowers, for whom the school was named.

Stowers, played by fifth-grader Henry Tuaoi, 11, son of Susana and Sgt. Henry Tuaoi, Company C, 1st Battalion, 30th Infantry Regiment, 3rd Brigade, 3rd Infantry Division (Mechanized) took spectators back in a time machine to watch history happening. In between the short skits, ranging from the signing of the Declaration of Independence to Betsy Ross and her flag, students from all grades sang different songs, from pre-kindergartners singing Teach Me About My Freedom, first-graders singing You're a Grand Old Flag and Knowledge is Power by third-,fourth- and fifth-graders.

"I liked playing Freddie Stowers because it was fun. I liked respresenting the time machine," Tuaoi said.

Blanchard started working with the students on the program in February.

"I saw the kids once a week and then we had two dress rehearsals," Blanchard said.

Staff Sgt. Craig Irwin, Company C, 3rd Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment, came to see his son Alec sing.

"It's good to see the kids having fun and to see they have good spirit in their country and that they're learning about it in school," Irwin said.

The program ended with Hughes singing God Bless the USA on top of Stowers' roof and the Statue of Liberty and Uncle Sam also making surprise appearances on the roof.

Erin Nash

Fifth-graders Henry Tuaoi, Christy Johnson, Nikki Young, Catiffany Banks and Valerie Wilson perform at Stowers.

"It was an exceptional evening," Hughes said. "It was a great opportunity for the students to perform to show their patriotism. It was good for the community; we enjoyed the evening together. We also had great support from the command on post and our staff worked tremendously hard."

Hughes promised the crowd they would indeed do the show again next year.

Parents and students also enjoyed food and drink and the entertainment of a horse show, brass quintet and hand-to-hand combat by the rangers.

Grade schoolers discover next level of education

Erin A. Nash
Special to the Bayonet©

School vacation is just around the corner, yet fifth-graders from Dexter and Loyd Elementary Schools are already looking towards the next school year, when they will move on to Faith Middle School. Students recently had the opportunity to tour Faith and see the dynamics that make up the middle school.

The fifth-graders started with a viewing of Odyssey of the Mind, followed immediately by a video that explained physical education, after-school activities, Spirit Day, Family Night and more.

Principal Dr. Beth Middlemiss then explained to the students there are two teams of sixth-graders, the Dazzlers and the Dynamites and five teachers per team, who each teach a different subject. She also went on to explain there are eight periods in a day. She also emphasized the separation of the grades.

"Each grade has it's own separate wing. You won't have classes or eat lunch with seventh- or eighth-graders," Middlemiss said.

Middlemiss told students they also have the choice of electives, classes they get to choose and take for approximately six weeks. They include art, chorus, band, Spanish, industrial arts and technology.

Middlemiss also told the fifth-graders the rewards of being a good student.

"We have dances, parties and a principal's lunch for students who achieve all A's on their report cards," she said.

Gerald Madler, a counselor, told the students they will have an exciting three years at Faith and went on to explain the three R's the counselors focus on: respect, responsibility and resources.

Robyn Hughey, a counselor, told the students, "We'll help you make good choices,"

The fifth-graders were then split into four groups and were given a tour of the school by a sixth-grade teacher and a student ambassador.

The group led by Pam Tate and a student ambassador toured the media center, the seventh-grade wing, the office and the sixth-grade wing where the group stopped in Tate's classroom and found out what Tate's class was learning about that day.

They saw the chorus and band room, the gym, the art classrom and ended the tour in the industrial art classroom.

"It was cool. I thought it might be kind of boring, but it turned out to be cool," said Dexter fifth-grader Ashley Maignan, 11, daughter of Janet and Sgt. Freddie Dupree, Company B, 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment. "I like that we get to take electives because you can choose what you want."

"I'm pretty nervous about going to sixth-grade because in fifth-grade you're at the top of the school, but it might be easier because we have our own wing," Maignan said.

Hughey said the tour is to prepare the students in advance for what's expected of them at Faith and to ease the transition.

"It also helps them get an idea of faces, like who they can touch base with and someone they can come to if they have questions," Hughey said. "I also told them if they are a little, nervous then they're normal."

Wilson Elementary School

'Butterfly project attracts students' attention

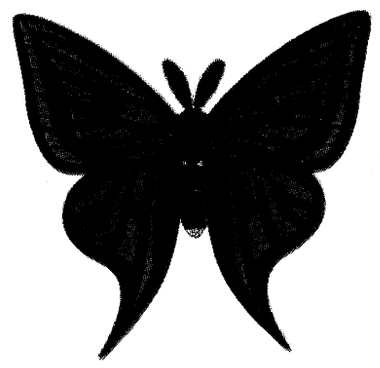
Nicole Longstreath
Special to the Bayonet©

Many people on Fort Benning may not know much about butterflies, but any student at Wilson Elementary School would be able to tell someone that butterflies taste with their feet and hear with their hair.

Students at Wilson are not only learning about butterflies, but they are taking an active part in the environment through a program called "The Butterfly Project."

Teachers at Wilson are using information about butterflies to make learning a more hands-on experience.

"We use butterflies as a vehicle to get across concepts that we would teach anyway," said media specialist Dr. Wanda Person.



"We thought the Butterfly Project would be a creative way to tie in the curriculum," said education technologist, Melanie Keating. "This is a good way to bring the school together because it seems to be something everyone is interested in."

To teach concern and respect for the environment, teachers at Wilson have developed a butterfly newsletter staffed by the students. Students have also cleaned up areas around the school to plant "butterfly gardens." These gardens are filled with butterfly-attracting flowers to help beautify the community as part of the School-Community Action Project.

Fourth-grader, Idris Spellman, grandson of retired Staff Sgt. Lori Reynolds thinks planting the gardens is an important part of the butterfly program and is helpful to the school.

"I think the program helps the school because it makes it look better," Spellman said.

Before participating in the program, Spellman didn't know much about butterflies, but has since learned about the stages a caterpillar goes through to develop into a butterfly and is now an active participant in the school's butterfly newsletter as it's photographer and reporter.

"The students are starting to realize if we don't take care of our world, we will lose things," Keating said. "The first will be delicate creatures, like the butterfly."

Faculty and students at Wilson are also taking advantage of the educational opportunities provided by the Internet. They can access sites about endangered species of butterflies and participate in interactive butterfly sites.

Not only are the students learning an appreciation for the environment, they are communicating via the Internet with schools in Japan, France and England who are using the same butterfly program.

"It is important for students to take an active role," Person said. "They have a stake in making things the best they can be, that includes their academics."

Person also said active involvement, like planting the gardens, helps children with self-esteem.

"This helps so much with self-esteem," Person said. "By planting the gardens and being actively involved, they get to see the fruits of their labor."

"The children are taking pride in their area. They are cleaning up areas and planting the gardens," Person said. "There is a lot of pride developed anytime you accomplish something."

Wynnsong offers families alternatives to movies

Pvt. 2 Amy L. Nyland
Bayonet staff writer

Amidst the blood and guts, bad language and nudity in current big screen movies another side to the box office exists. General admission or G-rated movies have become a rarity as America's demand for explosive entertainment has surpassed the likes of Mickey Mouse and Benji.

However, as parental concern grows over what their children watch, the demand for quality programming rises.

According to Gary Greene, general manager of the Fort Benning Main Mall Post Exchange, because of requests from the community for family programming, the Wynnsong 10 theater is offering a G-rated movie matinee test.

Greene said the test which began May 16 and runs through July 18 will offer a G rated movie aimed towards families and children at 12 p.m. every Saturday for $3.50.

"We were getting requests from the community for more family entertainment and AAFES decided to give it a try," Greene said. "We are just reacting to the movement of parents being sensitive about what their children are watching."

Greene said the Wynnsong 10 has always been receptive to G-rated movies and has done everything to bring new releases to the theatre. However, because of a predominant demand within the industry for higher rated movies, the Wynnsong 10 is still limited by what it can show.

"The industry must always meet the demands of the customer and currently the demands are not in the direction of G-rated movies," Greene said.

According to Greene, the Wynnsong 10 will show older G-rated movies throughout the next 10 weeks.

Greene said the test is being run in the interest of the community.

"We are always monitoring our customers ," Greene said. "When the community offers us an idea we need to listen to the customer and respond. That is why we are offering this test."

Greene stressed the fact that the test's success depends completely upon the community's response.

"The test is exactly just that, a test," Greene said. "The results are going to show us if there is enough participation to continue showing G-rated movies on Saturdays."

He said AAFES is not trying to change or sensor the theatre in any way. Offering G-rated movies on Saturdays will not hinder the showing of higher rated first run movies.

This Saturday's matinee will offer the movie Little Nemo.

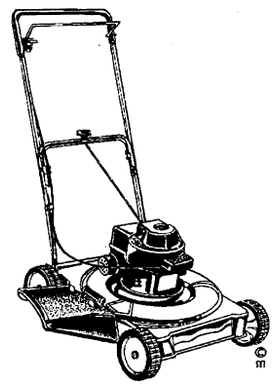
Lawn mowers: Debris from discharge shoot can travel up to 200 mph



Directorate of Public Safety

Each year, many people are seriously injured by lawn mowers. Being hit by something thrown by a mower is dangerous because the speed of debris coming out of the discharge chute has been clocked at 200 miles per hour.

The following are ways to protect yourself and your family.

•Wear eye and hearing protection. Sturdy shoes are essential. Avoid loose clothing. Wear pants that cover your legs.

•Inspect the area to be mowed. Pick up stones, toys, metal fragments and anything else that could become a flying missile.

•Check oil and refuel in a well-ventilated area before starting. Never refuel while the motor is running or hot.

•Make sure all guards are in place.

•Clear the area of children and pets.

•Mow in daylight only and when the lawn is dry.

•Stand clear when starting the mower. Keep feet away from the mower blade and always stay clear of the discharge chute.

•Push, do not pull your mower. Mow laterally across a slope — not up and down. If on a riding mower, the rule is the opposite.

•To make repairs, clear the discharge chute, or change the cutting height — stop the mower and disconnect the spark plug.

New drug helps men with impotence

Dr. Virginia Yates
Martin Army Community Hospital

An estimated 10 to 20 million men in the United States suffer with impotence. Impotence refers to erectile dysfunction and can involve either attaining or sustaining an erection.

During the past several weeks, physicians have received an overwhelming number of calls and visits from patients inquiring about the new impotence pill, sildenafil, better known as Viagra. The Food and Drug Administration announced approval of the drug in late March and began to release it in mid-April.

Unlike previous impotence treatments, Viagra does not directly cause penile erections, but affects response to stimulation.

The drug acts by enhancing the action of a natural chemical in the body, nitric oxide. This causes blood vessels to relax and results in increased blood flow. The drug especially affects the enzyme PD5, a chemical found mostly in the penis.

The drug also has a slight effect on PD6, an enzyme in the retina of the eye. This regulates the part of the eye used for night vision called the rods.

Three percent of Viagra users have reported blue tinge in the vision as their vision mechanism is altered. The color change is temporary and is not believed to cause a permanent defect in the eye. Ophthalmologist Harris Amin recorded reversible electrical changes at the retina associated with Viagra.

Like so many medical discoveries, sildenafil was a drug designed originally for a different use. The drug was first tested in England as medication to treat angina or heart pain.

Interestingly, many subjects in the experiment did not want to stop the experiment because of the side effect on erection.

Because of the effect on the cardiovascular system, Viagra cannot be taken by people using drugs called nitrates. Nitrates include the drugs nitroglycerin, Ismo, and Isordil. The concern is for a deadly drop in blood pressure when the drugs are mixed.

Other reported side effects include headache, facial flushing and indigestion.

Before being released, Viagra was tested on more than 3,000 men with impotence associated with a variety of causes to include prostate surgery, spinal cord injury, hypertension, diabetes and coronary artery disease. While Viagra does not work for every impotent man, there is no cause of impotence that has not shown response, according to University of Southern California urologist Dr. Harin Padma-Nathan.

Sixty to 80 percent of men who took Viagra reported improved and sustained erections, compared to 20 percent improvement in the men taking the placebo. (Placebos are blank pills that look like the real medication but contain no drugs.) Men with diabetes or prostate removal had less improvement than the other groups.

The pill is taken one hour before sexual activity. No more than one pill should be taken in a day. The effects of the pill last in the range of 30 minutes to four hours. They are taken only on the days needed.

Some physicians see potential for the use of Viagra in women with sexual dysfunction. Dr. Irwin Goldstein, urologist at Boston University School of Medicine, is researching this concept. A study with women and Viagra is currently underway in Europe and results are expected within the next two to three years.

Currently, Viagra is not carried on the Martin Army Community Hospital formulary.

Foundation stresses electrical precaution importance during summer months

Georgia Firefighters Burn Foundation, Inc.

As the weather gets warmer and the days are longer, there is construction, remodeling and yard work being done. During this time, the Georgia Firefighters Burn Foundation would like to stress a few basic precautions that could save lives.

A lot of the work to be done uses electricity. Electricity is silent, colorless, odorless and is commonly taken for granted. Every year electrical accidents kill and disfigure many people.

While doing chores that require electricity, the Georgia Firefighters Burn Foundation reminds people to use the following safety suggestions:

•When trimming the trees and shrubs, be careful to stay clear from power lines. If the work that needs to be done is in a close proximity of this equipment, notify the electric company prior to beginning.

•If any digging is to be done in the yard, contact the electrical company for locations of underground facilities.

•Water acts a conductor for electricity. Battery-powered tools would be the safest route; but, if this is not feasible, take extra precaution to locate water and damp spots, then rope them off.

•Do not overload outlets or use equipment that has broken or frayed places on the cord. Also never run extension cords under carpets or mats.

•Children should not be accessible to any of the tools, electrical outlets or facilities mentioned above. If for some unforeseeable reason there is a child present, make sure that he or she is in a safe area and unable to wander in your workspace or anywhere else where there is the possibility of danger.

For more information on electricity or other fire safety tips, contact the GFBF office at 404-320-6223.

Celebrates 40 Years of Evangelical Witness in Columbus!

Early in 1958, three Hispanic families started to meet in their homes for Bible Study and fellowship. Little did they know that forty years later the Spanish Baptist Church would be celebrating those beginnings.

From their homes at Baker Village they would move to a different home every week.. No curriculum, no preacher, no "house of worship." Today it sounds as though we are taking of the Christian church of the first century.

Mrs. Marguerite Waldrop, the first Religious Education Director for Ft. Benning, became interested in commencing Spanish Bible Study at the fort, due to the influx of Hispanic military servicemen and their families. She and the Post Chaplain, (whose name still unknown), were approached by the group that was meeting in their homes seeking a place where they could have their Bible Study and also add worship to their schedule.

By this time Martin Army Hospital was coming to completion and some of the bays or wards were being vacated. By the later part of 1958, the Hispanic Congregation was meeting at the old hospital. Mr. Pablo Navarro, a retired Army NCO, and his wife Fautina, would teach, preach and minister to a fast growing congregation.

Since Sgt. Navarro was a Baptist, he sought fellowship with the Columbus Baptist Association and the Georgia Baptist Convention. Due to some personal matters, Sgt. Navarro returned to his native Puerto Rico, in the year 1963.

Upon Sgt. Navarro's recommendation, Dr. Leslie Williams, Columbus Baptist Association Director of Missions from 1957-1967, and Dr Lloyd Corder, Director of Language Missions, Home Missions Board invited then SP4 Eliu Camacho-Vazquez and his wife Carmen to minister at the congregation. By this time the Congregation was meeting at the Building 2611 at Fort Benning for Sunday School and Worship. Camacho, a member of the newly formed 11 th Air assault Division, was transferred to the 90th Replacement Station assigned to the Post Chaplain with the responsibility of the Hispanic Congregation and the maintenance of the Sunday School buildings in the 2600 block. He was being supervised by the now deceased Mrs. Marguerite Waldrop.

Uncle Sam transferred SP4 Camacho to Ft. Bragg, NC and then the 8th Special Forces Group in the Canal Zone, Panama.

The Congregation continued its witnessing with a number of lay persons taking care of the Bible teaching and the preaching.

In 1964, the Reverend Abdiel Silva and his wife Lydia, assumed the responsibility of the congregation. He sought mission status with Benning Park Baptist Church. During his ministry the mission grew and relocated from Ft. Benning to a house Youman St., close to the sponsoring church. Deacon Ted Ramos with other members of the congregation were responsible for the transformation of the house to a place of worship.

Reverend Silva and his wife traveled every weekend from their home in Atlanta. In 1964, through a cooperative agreement of the sponsoring church, the Columbus Baptist Association, and the Home Missions Board, Miss Ada Fernandez moved to Columbus to do missionary work among Hispanics. Through weekly Bible Studies, making arrangements for English as a second language classes and other ministries, she was instrumental in the growth both spiritual and physical of the congregation.

Both, Reverend Silva and Miss Fernandez left the field in 1981. He went to strengthen the work in other parts of Georgia and she became a Catalytic Missionary in the area of Warner Robins, Georgia, where she is still serving.

The first resident pastor arrived in 1982. Pastor Reverend Jesus Martinez, a native of Cuba and his wife Blanca served until his retirement in 1997. During his tenure the mission sought sponsorship from First Baptist Church, Columbus. First Baptist assumed some financial responsibility and helped the congregation acquire the present property. Five years after Pastor Martinez started his ministry in Columbus, the mission sold the property at Youman St. and bought the land and a house on 4238 St. Mary's Road. On May 23, 1987, the beautiful new facilities were dedicated.

The weekend of May 22-24; the mission not only celebrates eleven years of being in the new building but also forty years of evangelical witness in Columbus.

The persons that have been mentioned in this article were servants that the Lord used for the continuity of His work here. There were thousands not mentioned here that were vessels used in witnessing, ministering, keeping the properties and being the steadfast anchors for the continuance of this work.

The Spanish Baptist Church takes this opportunity to thank the communities of Ft. Benning, Columbus, and Phoenix City for your support through the years. Words do not express our gratitude toward the First Baptist Church for your mission mindness and to the Columbus Association for their fellowship and encouragement.

COME CELEBRATE WITH US! AND TO GOD BE THE GLORY.

Department of Ministry & Pastoral Care

When I reflect on the importance of Memorial Day, one passage of scripture seems so appropriate, the 3rd Chapter of the book of Ecclesiastes. Verse one of Ecclesiastes in the 3rd Chapter, says "To everything there is a season, and a purpose for everything under the Heavens."

reflections

To further paraphrase the following seven verses into one capsule, I have attempted to state it in my own words. "A time to get and a time to lose, a time to be born and a time to die, a time to kill and a time to heal." Memorial Day, for me, is a time to heal. Many men and women died valiantly giving their lives for their country. I am humbled by the many sacrifices so many people have made for our great country and nation. We are all blessed to enjoy the freedoms in our country due to the patriotism and valor of our fallen comrades.

As I continue to reflect on the deep importance of Memorial Day, I am reminded of an elderly woman I met at the Fort Benning Cemetery. I was preparing to conduct a funeral for one of our soldiers and I noticed her placing flowers on the grave of her long lost husband. I was afraid to approach her or even say anything to her because I noticed the tears trickling from her eyes. I mustered up enough courage to give her a greeting for the day. She noticed that I was a Chaplain and she felt comfortable in sharing her story about the loss of her husband. The encounter with this elderly woman will always remain a powerful experience for me. She helped me to understand the importance of Memorial Day from her own personal experience. The loss of her husband empowered me to gain some new insights into the real meaning of Memorial Day.

So many great Americans have died to preserve our nation. It is a privilege and honor to know those who have lost loved ones in wars past. This elderly woman gave me a gift in sharing her pain and joy. Her pain was the loss of her husband. Her joy was the pride she felt in knowing and loving a great soldier. The tears represented the healing that we need to experience in order to gain the proper focus for this great observance.

Remember, "To everything there is a season and a time for every purpose under the Heavens."

Boating under influence law to change

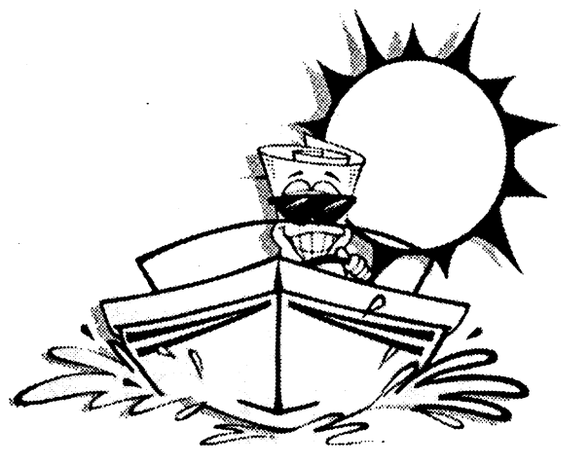
J.R. Addington
U. S. Coast Guard Auxiliary

Don't get caught operating a boat under the influence. The law gets tougher June 1.

According to information released by the Georgia Department of Natural Resources, boaters might want to think twice before operating a boat under the influence of alcohol this summer. Penalties for people arrested for boating under the influence (BUI) will become stricter June 1.

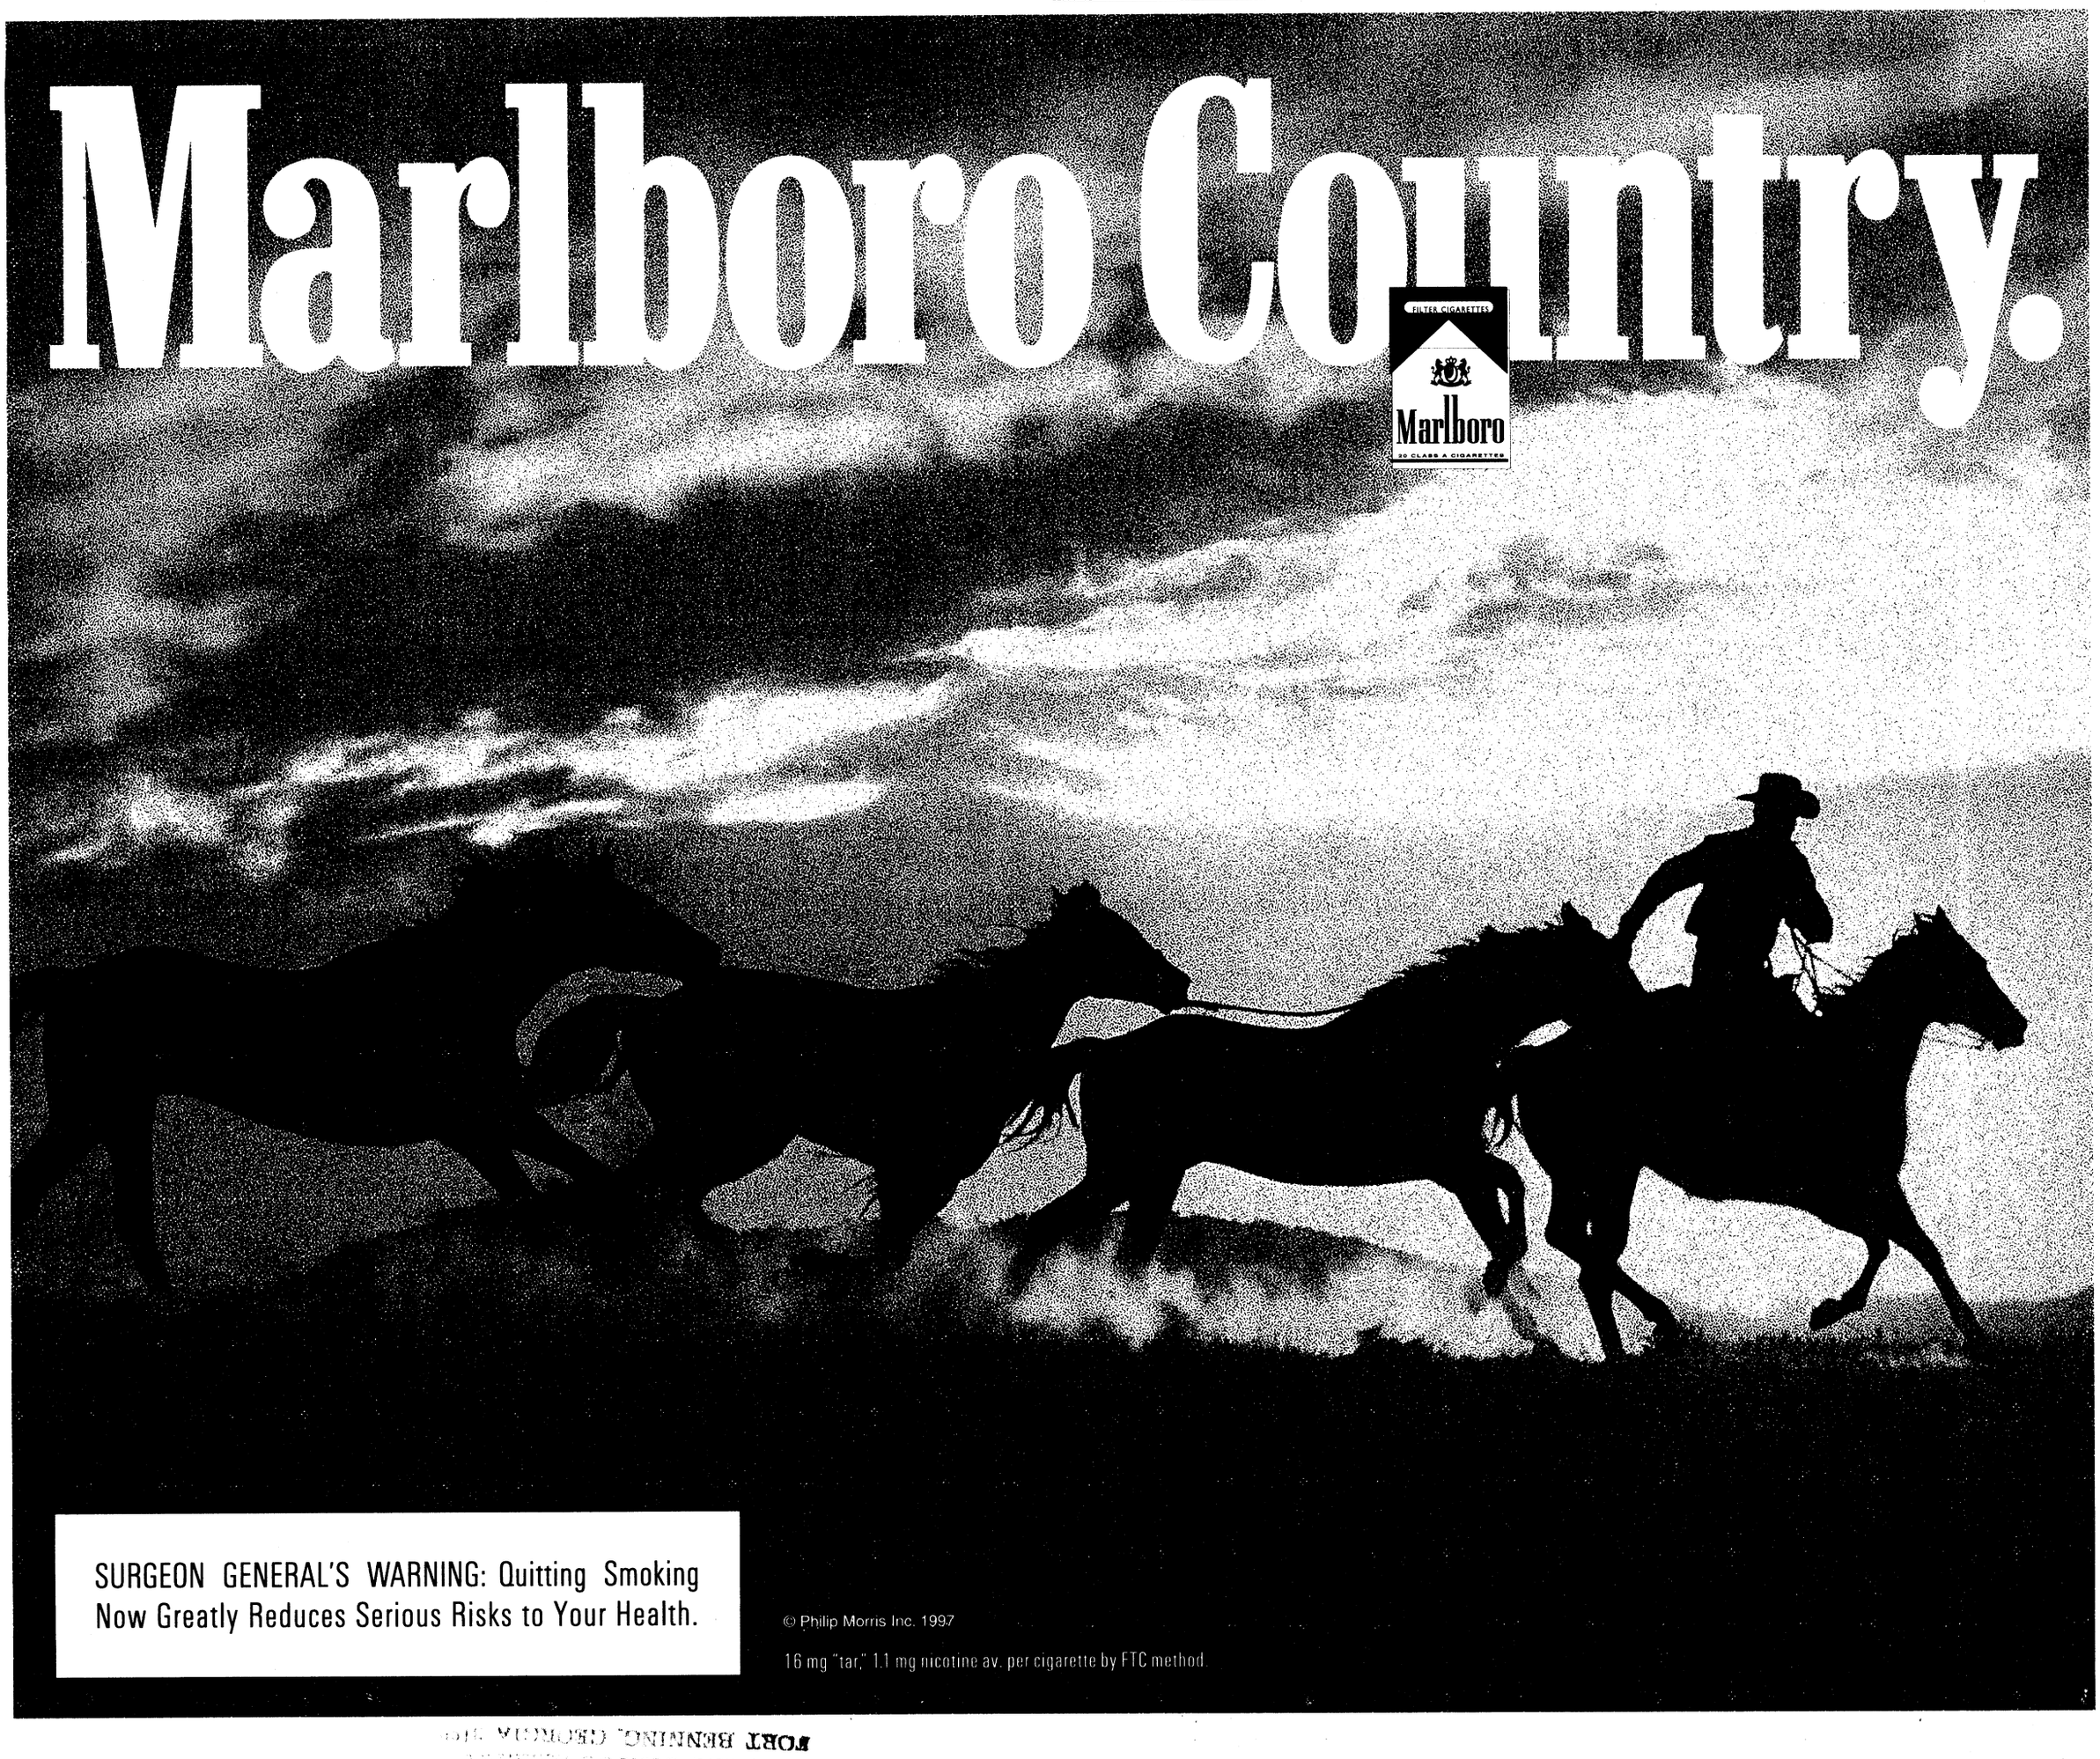
People who are arrested for BUI may lose boat operation privileges for up to a year for a first-time conviction, three years for a second conviction and five years for a third conviction. However, boating privileges can be reinstated after a specified waiting period: 30 days for a first conviction, 120 days for a second conviction and five years for a third conviction if proof is submitted that they have completed a DUI Alcohol or Drug Use Risk Reduction Program approved by the Georgia Department of Human Resources. Persons who are convicted will be charged with a misdemeanor, which is punishable with up to a $1,000 fine and up to twelve (12) months in prison.

The new law establishes a "zero tolerance" blood alcohol level of .02 for people under age 21 who are caught operating a boat under the influence of alcohol or drugs. Minors who are arrested for BUI may face misdemeanor charges.



The new law also creates misdemeanor offenses for "endangering a child" if a boat operator transports a child under 14 while under the influence of alcohol or drugs.

It also allows for the revocation of boating privileges for up to a year for people who refuse a sobriety test when suspected of operating under the influence of alcohol or drugs or people whose blood, breath or urine test shows the presence of illegal drugs or an alcohol level of .10 or higher.



In addition to the Georgia state law, operating a boat while intoxicated is prohibited by Army Regulation 210-5 and 190-5 and is punishable under Article 111 of the Uniform Code of Military Justice. U.S. Army Infantry Center Regulation 21065 prohibits the use or consumption of alcoholic beverages in a boat. The regulation also prohibits the transportation or procession of alcoholic beverages in a boat when the manufacturer's seal has been broken or the bottle, can or keg has otherwise been opened.

Military week concludes with run, awards ceremony

Spc. Michelle J. Davis
Bayonet staff writer

After a week's worth of sporting events and activities, Military Appreciation Week (MAW) ended May 15 as more than 4,500 Soldiers from around post gathered on York Field to take part in the annual "Burn the General" run and MAW awards ceremony.

Although the past year's run proved Commanding Gen. Maj. Gen. Carl F. Ernst was hard to catch, Ernst allowed all formations to pass before finishing behind the 498th Medical Company, 36th Engineer Group (Combat), which recently returned from a six-month deployment to Bosnia.

"It looked like they were ready for me this year because everyone ran my little rear end into the ground," Ernst said.

Following the run, an awards ceremony was held to recognize winners of the three sports cups and individual events.

The 11th Infantry Regiment and 29th Infantry Regiment tied for the "Follow Me" cup, which was composed of eight events including events such as chess, bench press and the triathlon.

The Benning Cup was also awarded to the 11th Inf. Regt., which collected the most points for the beach volleyball, basketball, softball and soccer events.

The Infantry Training Brigade walked away with the Commander's Trophy, which is made up of the Fit to Win and combat cross country events.

Although the sporting events and activities were a big part of the appreciation week, Ernst said he hopes all Soldiers keep in mind the real meaning behind MAW.

"I hope they (Soldiers) learned that there are a lot of people out there who have faith in them, believe in what they do and appreciate what they do," Ernst said.

MEDDAC ends USARSA's bid for softball championships

Spc. Alberto Betancourt
USARSA Public Affairs Office

Armed with hot bats and solid defense, the U.S. Army Medical Department Activity quashed the U.S. Army School of the Americas' "3-peat" bid as the Military Appreciation Week softball champions, 15-8 at Gowdy Field May 14.

"As long as we keep our mental mistakes down, we should win," said Harry Tharp, coach for MEDDAC, the 1997 Intramural Post Softball Champions, prior to the game.

Wasting no time, MEDDAC opened up the first inning with a roar, scoring five runs behind a powerful home run by Mark James, who hit two homers in the game.

Meanwhile, after committing three errors on the field, USARSA's bats were silent in the bottom half of the first. MEDDAC led 5-0.

MEDDAC added one more in the top of the second off a Sidney Crawford double and a Kenneth Gore RBI single, extending the lead to 6-0.

USARSA took advantage of a crucial error by Crawford in right field to erase the goose egg, but still trailed 6-1 after two innings.

MEDDAC bats continued their onslaught in the third inning. Andre Harenski led off with a single. He later scored off of a Joseph Williams' triple. Mark James walked and with man on first and third, Tharp blasted one over a charging Arturo Haywood, USARSA's left-center fielder, to clear the bases and extend their lead 10-1.

After two innings of "pop-up" syndrome, USARSA's bats finally came alive. Ivan Brenes and Jose Rivera singled. Nathaniel Benitez scorched an RBI double, followed by Juan Gastaliturri, who pushed Rivera in with a fielders' choice.

Helped by two USARSA errors and another home run by James, MEDDAC added four more in the top of the fourth inning, increasing the lead to 14-3.

MEDDAC third baseman Lance Tomiczek errored helping USARSA open up a five-run inning. After the error, Andy Ramirez, Tony Chavez, Jose Victoria , Brenes, William Lendof and Rivera all singled, closing the gap to 14-8.

Both sides went quiet in the fifth inning, but MEDDAC added one more in the top of the sixth.

Plagued once again with "pop-ups," USARSA went down quietly in the sixth and seventh inning, handing their crown over to MEDDAC.

"It was an honor for me to coach our team into the championship game for the third year in a row," said Lendof, USARSA coach. "This year's team was older, but their experience and dedication made them a special team."

Students edge instructors during football classic

Spc. Alberto Betancourt
USARSA Public Affairs Office

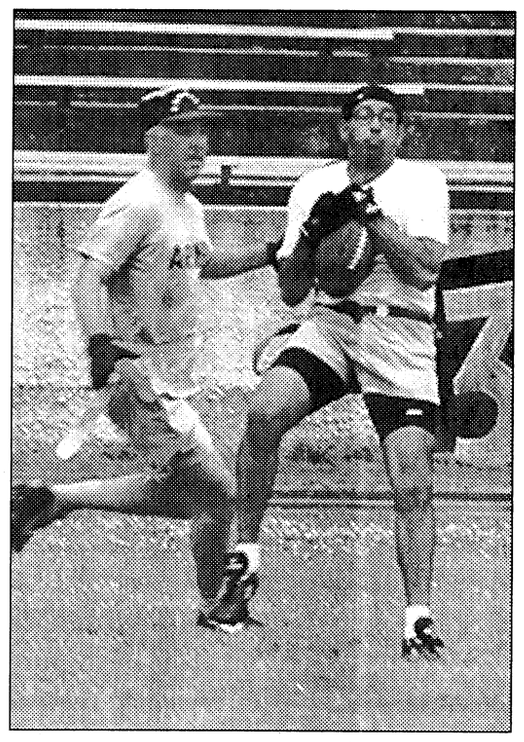
A running attack supported by a strong defense, helped the Matadors, students from the U.S. Army School of Americas' Command and General Staff Officer Course, edge the Instructors from the school, 14-7, during the annual football game Saturday.

"We've been working together for two weeks," said Jeff Baker, coach and quarterback for the student Matadors. "Everyone was involved. We wanted to play hard and win. The defense won this for us."

Offensively, both sides sputtered during the first quarter. Baker used his motion with Efren Garcia at running back. Garcia managed to bob and weave through the Instructors' defense setting up good field position for the Matadors several times in the quarter. However, they failed to score.

With the Matador's defense closing all running gaps, Mark Burger, quarterback for the Instructors, went to the air several times, connecting with Valmore Lugo for large gains. Like the Matadors, they also failed to score ending the first quarter 0-0.

Burger opened the second quarter with another connection to Lugo. On the next play, and with his pocket crumbled, Burger darted through the Matadors' defense for a score. The touchdown was nullified on a penalty for guarding the flag. With first and goal, Burger found Tony Chavez unattended in the end zone for another score. This time it was good and after the extra point, the Instructors led 7-0.



Defensively, the Instructors boxed in the Matadors' running game. This forced Baker to the air. With the drive in jeopardy, he hit Salvador Gomez long, keeping it alive. Garcia got back his wheels zigzagging close to the end zone setting up a first and goal. A few plays later, Baker faked to Garcia and kept it himself for the score. The extra point was good, tying the game 7-7.

As time was running out in the first half, Burger bootlegged around the left corner and was ready to score. Unfortunately for the Instructors, Dave Baker was playing "heads up" defense, as he dove for Burger's flag denying the touchdown. The half ended 7-7.

Garcia ignited the Matadors with a 70-yard kick-off return to open up the second half. This set up another Baker quarterback sneak for six. The extra point was good. The Matadors led 14-7.

Neither defense gave an inch in the fourth quarter keeping the offensive teams quiet. Despite their efforts, the Instructors couldn't get the momentum late in the game losing 14-7.

"I came out here with my old men," said Franklin Montalvo, coach for the Instructors. "We did what we could and they beat us."

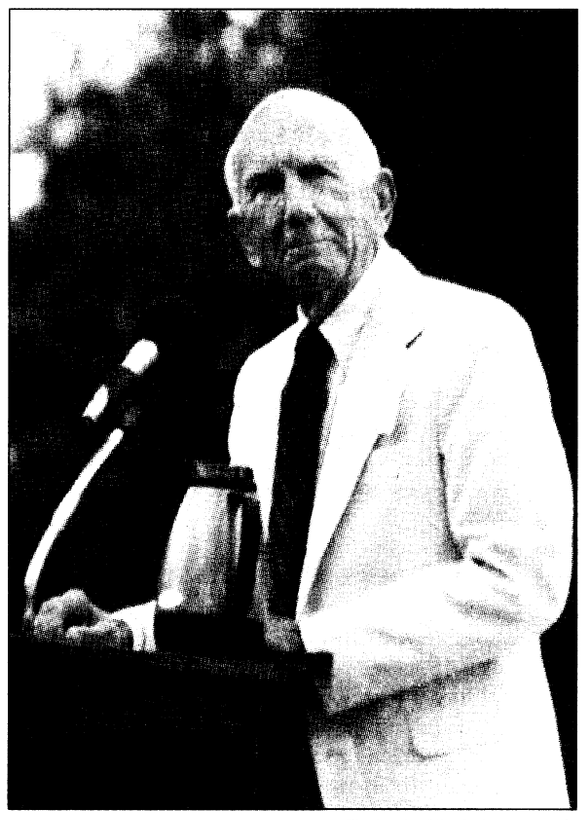
Veterans dedicate memorial

Nicole Longstreath
Special to the Bayonet©

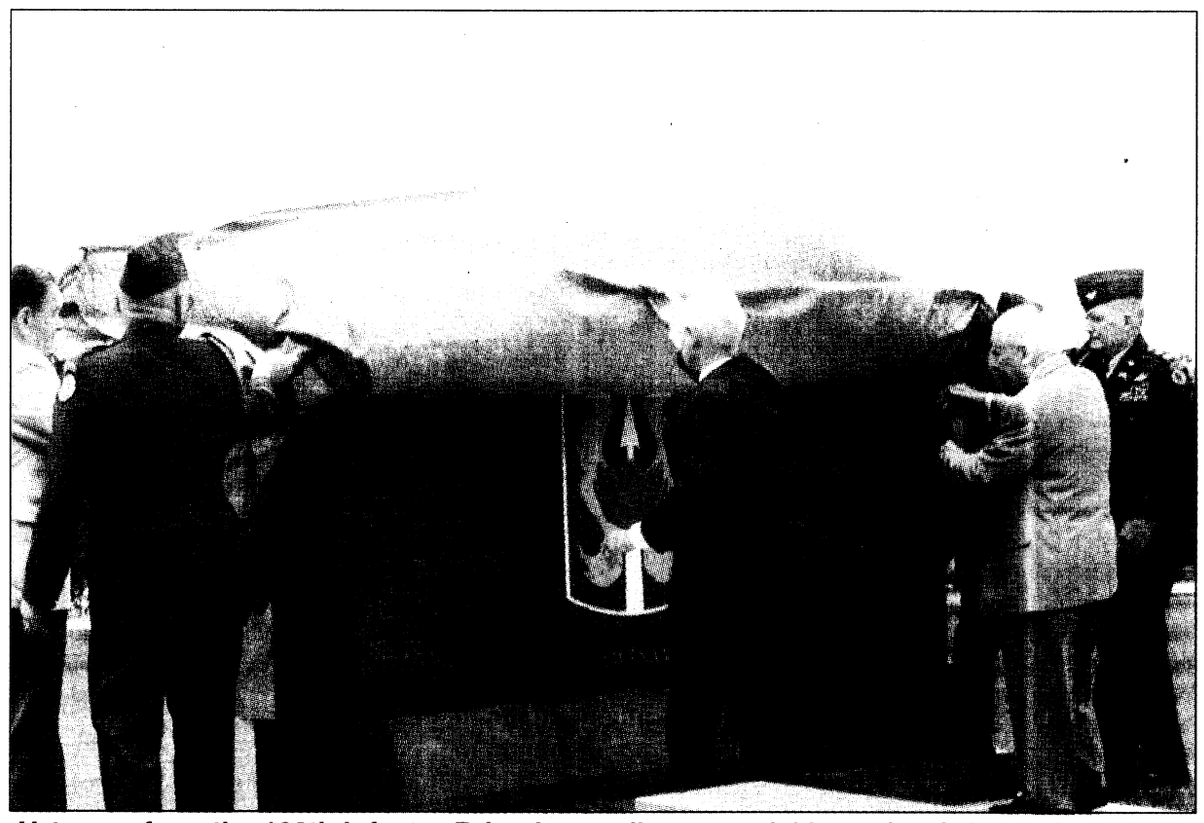
The song Amazing Grace evoked tears from veterans of the 199th Infantry Brigade as they remembered their fellow Soldiers at a ceremony held Sunday at Sacrifice Field.



The unit, also known as the "Redcatchers," was activated June 1, 1966, at Fort Benning during the Vietnam War. More than 25,000 Soldiers were assigned to the unit, 753 of whom never returned.

The ceremony was held to unveil a monument recognizing the unit and to honor those 753 Soldiers.

"This memorial symbolizes the dedication of the brigade, the death of 753 people and how grateful those of us are who returned from Vietnam," said veteran James Diamond.



Others at the ceremony considered the memorial to be a form of closure for members of the unit.

"This monument fulfills the obligation to the dead," said guest speaker, retired Lt. Gen. J.G. Smith, former deputy commander of the 199th Inf. Bde. from 1968-1969. "For most of us, it's enough to know there is a tangible memorial, something we can come back to."

Veterans from the 199th Infantry Brigade unveil a memorial honoring fellow veterans and Soldiers who gave their lives during the Vietnam War.

"This memorial means we are home and it is closure to me," said veteran John Campbell. "Back in 1967, when I came home from Vietnam, it was to rocks and jeers."

Diamond said he had no more hard feelings against the civilians who gave the returning Soldiers a sour reception.

"I had no hard feelings against the people that ridiculed us because I knew they didn't understand what we were doing over there," Diamond said.

Because the war was so unpopular, Frank Hanner, director of the Infantry Museum, said, it is important to commemorate what the Soldiers accomplished in Vietnam.

Whether the public understood the Vietnam War, Hanner said, was not as important as the public remembering the event and the Soldiers who served in it.

"It's time we healed our nation and made sure those who were willing to serve our country are remembered," Hanner said.

Remembrance, Diamond said, was an essential part of the healing process.

"This memorial brings back a lot of memories, good and bad, that are helpful in getting over the hardship," Diamond said, "When you try to hide the memories, they surface in other ways."

Nearly 300 community members gather for holiday service to remember price of freedom

Pvt. 2 Nicole M. Graham
Bayonet staff writer

More than 300 community members came out to the Fort Benning Cemetary Monday morning to honor those who sacrificed their lives for their country, and to acknowledge the service members who continue to fight to keep our nation free.

During the Memorial Day service, Commanding General Maj. Gen. Carl F. Ernst spoke to the crowd about the significance of the holiday.

"Declaring Independence wasn't good enough," Ernst said. "It was five years before freedom was secured by the bayonets of the Infantry in Yorktown."

"Freedom isn't free," Ernst said. "It is very expensive. What price freedom? The American Revolution cost 4,500 American Soldiers' lives — a pretty high price."

Despite the ultimate price, Soldiers and other service members have continued to die in defense of preserving freedom.

Ernst said more than 7,200 military and family members, representing all services, rest within the confines of the Fort Benning Cemetary alone.

"We have died on nearly every continent," Ernst said, "Our nation, our national colors have become the embodiment of God's freedom throughout the world."

According to Ernst, more than a million service members have given their lives in battle, not for themselves, but for their country's freedom.

"They died for freedom around the world," said Ernst, "Many still lay where they died, still not yet found.

"They purchased freedom with their blood and their lives, not for themselves, but for their country and for mankind," Ernst said.

A wreath was placed on a grave of the unknown as three volleys and the solemn sound of taps hung in the air as a a sign of respect for those who died.

Power outage on post causes discolored water

Pvt. 2 Amy L. Nyland
Bayonet staff writer

Residents on Main Post and other isolated areas of Fort Benning who experienced the power outage Monday may also notice their water running a little dark.

According to Roy Bethel, chief of Energy and Utilities Division, Directorate of Public Works, residents who are experiencing discolored water have no need to be concerned.

Bethel said because the power outage caused pumps to shut down at the water plant, a surge in the water lines caused a hammer-like effect to knock off coating within the water lines and stir up sediment.

He said the result was dark or discolored water running through the tap.

"There is no reason for alarm or concern," Bethel said. "There is nothing wrong with the quality of the water, it's perfectly safe."

Bethel said all of the chemicals and sediment that are causing the discoloration are normally in the water, but because they were knocked loose from inside the pipes and stirred up, it's more noticeable.

He said it usually takes a couple of days for the water to clear and DPW has been speeding up the process by flushing the fire hydrants to clear the sediment out of the water lines.

Residents who are affected should let their tap run for a short time to allow the water to clear.

When washing clothes, residents are advised to check the water for discoloration.

Clinton announces Sec. of Army nominee

White House Public Affairs Office

The President announced his intent to nominate Louis Caldera as Secretary of the Army Wednesday.

Caldera, of Los Angeles, Calif., is currently the managing director and chief operating officer of the Corporation for National Service.

Caldera graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point in 1978. After serving for five years on active duty with the Army, he enrolled at Harvard University where he received a law degree and masters of business administration in 1987.

The secretary of the Army is the senior civilian in the organization, and is responsible for all matters pertaining to Army manpower, personnel, reserve affairs, installations, environmental issues, weapons systems and equipment acquisition, communications, and financial management. The secretary leads a work force of more than one million Soldiers and 270,000 civilian employees.

Infantry Center nominates Doughboy awardees

Capt. April N. Olsen
USAIC Public Affairs Office

Retired Gen. Fred C. Weyand and retired Sgt. Maj. of the Army William G. Bainbridge will be honored with Doughboy Awards June 10 in recognition of their many contributions to the Infantry. Both men will receive the awards during the 1998 Infantry Ball.

The Doughboy Award, a chrome-plated doughboy helmet similar to those worn by Soldiers during World War I and World War II, is awarded annually by the Chief of Infantry on behalf of the Infantry community.

"The Doughboy Award is given to a distinguished Infantry officer and Infantry NCO," Lt. Col. Scott Armbrister, deputy chief of staff of the U.S. Army Infantry Center, said. "It is the highest award bestowed upon any Infantryman for his dedicated service to the country."

Weyand fought in World War II and the Korean War before taking command of the 25th Infantry Division in 1964. He took the 25th to Vietnam in July 1965. Weyand served as the commander of the II Field Force in Vietnam from 1967-68. His actions during the 1968 Tet Offensive have been accredited with saving Saigon from North Vietnamese occupation. A few years later, after serving as the vice chief of staff of the Army, Weyand became the 27th chief of staff of the Army in 1974. Weyand retired in 1976 after 36 years of service.

Bainbridge served in World War II and Vietnam. He entered the Army in 1943 and was captured during the battle of the Bulge while serving with the 106th Infantry Division. After liberation by the U.S. 6th Armored Division, Bainbridge returned to the United States and was discharged. He returned to active duty in 1951. In 1962, he served as the sergeant major of 1st Battle Group, 28th Infantry, 1st Infantry Division. He went to Vietnam with this battalion and halfway through his tour became the Sergeant Major of II Field Force. He also served as the sergeant major of the U.S. Army Infantry Training Center, First U.S. Army, U.S. Army Pacific, and was the first sergeant major of the Sergeants Major Academy. Bainbridge became the sergeant major of the Army in July 1975. He retired in July 1979 after more than 30 years of service.

Each year, the Chief of Infantry sends out a letter requesting nominations for the award to active duty and retired three and four star general officers, retired and active duty corps level and above command sergeants major and former sergeants major of the Army. Those nominations are voted on by the same members of the Infantry community and the results are tabulated at Fort Benning.

The term "doughboy" originated from the practice of rushing raw recruits to Europe in World War I. The term was originally used during the border conflicts prior to World War I in Texas, where Soldiers trained along the Rio Grande and became covered in white dust of the adobe soil. Mounted troops called them "adobes." This degenerated to "dobies," which became doughboys.

Past recipients of the Doughboy Award include Bob Hope, H. Ross Perot, Bill Mauldin, Robert J. Dole, and Retired Generals Colin L. Powell, Richard E. Cavazos, Matthew B. Ridgway, and Retired Lt. Generals David E. Grange Jr., and Harry W.O. Kinnard.

Bainbridge is the third noncommissioned officer to receive the award, following Command Sgt. Maj. Frank C. Plass in 1997 and Command Sgt. Maj. Theodore L. Dobol in 1996.

Satisfy your "to do" list one thing at a time

Pvt. 2 Amy L. Nyland
Bayonet staff writer

If you are anything like me, which is a scary thought, you are the kind of person who has a gazillion things you always want to do, learn or try.

commentary

I remind myself when I have spare time I should be doing something worthwhile. But instead, I'm beckoned by the call of something else, such as eating or sleeping and my list just piles up.

In fact, my list has become so extensive that I have begun to divide it into categories to separate everything in my mind.

The first category is actually more of a "to do" list. It names things that I really need to do, like learn how to cook flan or hummus.

Learning how to macrame has always been on the top of my "to do" list along with creating a web page dedicated to the Indigo Girls and getting hydraulics for my new truck is not far behind.

I also need to learn how to count without using my fingers.

My "to do list " goes on and on, but those are just a few examples.

The next category lists the "practical" things I really want to do. These are the sensible things I would enjoy doing.

It includes things such as learning to play the guitar, levitating objects with my mind, and setting up my own 1-900 number.

I'm positive all of these will become a reality someday, but for now I'm a victim of time.

The last category, contains some of the more impractical things I have dreamed of doing or fantasized about.

Some of these things include singing a duet with Donny Osmond, decoding a message from outerspace that has the blueprints to a cool space machine and winning the title to Miss Mountain Mama by juggling Moon Pies.

These are all dreams held dear to my heart and are about as probable as Michael Jackson's son growing up normal. Yet I never loose track of them, because I will never give up on my dreams.

Recently I have accomplished something that would probably fall under the list of practical things I would enjoy doing.

For some reason, I really wanted to learn how to salsa. I'm not sure if it's because of my extreme love of the movie Dirty Dancing or whether I wanted to do more on the dance floor than flop around, but I made up my mind to learn the "Latin love dance."

I was fortunate enough to meet someone who helped me accomplish my dream. He took time and risked injury to teach me how to salsa.

We set up a mock dance floor in his room and he proceeded to teach me the steps and turns and spins and bumps and grinds. I was surprised at how quickly I learned the dance.

I also know I did quite well because this person escaped with only minor injuries, none requiring stitches. So now I'm partially salsa certified and very proud my list has decreased in size.

I know most people out there have lists that are probably comparable in size to mine. I also know I'm in no position to tell people what to do, but my best advice is go out there and do the things you want, one at a time.

I know my life somehow has more meaning now that I know how to salsa.

I'm guessing if everyone out there found one thing they really wanted to do and then did it, we would all be much happier people.

Soldiers need to understand what it means to serve

Maj. Robin M. Smith
Army News Service

We were Soldiers assigned to the maintenance battalion, Camp Humphreys, Korea, in the summer of 1993. No one would have envisioned such a dreadful occurrence would befall our organization, but it did.

commentary

We had lost one of our own. As I joined members of my battalion at the post chapel to pay last honors and respect to a fallen comrade, I cannot convey adequately the feeling of loss we shared as the first sergeant conducted roll call. When he called the sergeant's name — once, twice, three times — there was utter silence. For we all knew there would never be an answer to this call, this Soldier had lost his life in selfless service to his nation.

Maybe you are thinking, "O.K., what does this have to do with honor?"

It has much to do with honor. Honor means special esteem or respect, reverence; glory or recognition; honesty and integrity in one's belief and actions.

None of these words alone truly reflect or define honor for me. Honor is an emotion of the heart and soul; an inherent quality one feels. Honor is embedded in the service we as Soldiers provide to our country and how well we provide that service. Truly the sergeant who lost his life gave it in honor to our nation.

Honor does not boast. Little is known of the true sacrifices and commitment Soldiers perform to advance the goals of our nation: democracy and peace. How many really consider the source of freedoms we enjoy? Soldiers today must fully understand what it means to serve.

A misconception is that honor is for the heroes of the past. Well, there are modern day heroes and there is a hero within each of us. I challenge and expect all Soldiers to fully exemplify professionalism. As we strive to serve our country, leaders must educate and lead by example.

Leaders, be a great role model and take care of Soldiers and they will emulate those around them. Emphasize military history while maintaining a clear focus on the future of the military. Acknowledge the courage of those who have gone before and have the conviction to continue to render the same selfless service.

Last month the officers and NCOs of Headquarters Battalion, Fort Belvoir, Va., conducted a historical tour of the Civil War Defenses of Washington, D.C. Interestingly, the very roads now traveled to and from work, and the communities surrounding our nation's capital, were once sites of supply routes or avenues of approach, logistics centers and defensive positions and forts.

Without the history lessons, how would one conclude the cost of the blood, sweat and tears of our brothers and sisters of yesteryears in order for us to live as we do today.

More than a century later, we are at the threshold of digitized battlefields. Through the transition of the Army, honor has remained constant. Honor today may be a Soldier retiring after 25 years service or a unit receiving recognition after an exceptional performance on a deployment.

In either case, it is the professional Soldiers who stand mission ready to heed duty's call.

It is an honor to be a Soldier in the United States Army. Neither the rank I achieve nor the positions I hold, not even my name will be important. Rather it will be the contributions I have unselfishly given as a result of loyalty and commitment to a great nation.

It is difficult to pinpoint honor to a single definition. It is a state of being. Honor is the summation of the other Army values — duty, courage, integrity, loyalty, respect and selfless service. When all is said and done, honor remains.

A Biblical scripture states, "Greater love has no one than this, than to lay down one's life for his friends." (John 15:13).

It is an honor to serve my God, my country and my family. I will not falter in my service nor trade my experiences that come from it.

Editor's note: Smith is commander, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, Special Activities at Fort Belvoir, Va.

545-BOSS

Dial 545-BOSS is the commander's action line for Soldiers, family members and civilians to call when they have problems or complaints that can't be resolved elsewhere.

While it is not a substitute for the chain of command or for agencies established to provide assistance, the line offers another means of communication between Fort Benning's community and commanders.

The Bayonet features some of the calls that may benefit other members of the Fort Benning community.

Call: The caller said residents of the post should be aware of the policy concerning headlight covers on post.

Directorate of Public Safety response:

It was explained to the caller that the prohibition against headlight covers is a Georgia state law and not a post policy. Headlight covers are not legal unless they are installed as original equipment on a vehicle by the factory. The caller was made aware it is each individual's responsibility to become familiar with laws and statutes of the state. Ignorance of the law is not an acceptable defense.

Clinton approves new NATO members

Former Warsaw Bloc countries first to join since Spain in 1982

Linda D. Kozaryn
American Forces Press Service

BRUSSELS, Belgium — The United States four years ago proposed opening the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO) to new members. That proposal is fast becoming a reality.

On May 21, President Clinton signed accession ratification documents at a White House ceremony to make the United States the fifth nation to approve the admission of Hungary, Poland and the Czech Republic to NATO.

The three would be the first new members since Spain joined the alliance in 1982. The Senate had approved adding the three former Warsaw Pact nations with an 80-19 vote April 30.

Canada, Denmark, Germany and Norway have also approved the admissions to date, but all 16 NATO members are required to ratify new members.

NATO officials would like the process to be finished before the alliance's 50th anniversary summit, to be held in Washington April 24-25, 1999.

Western allies formed NATO in 1949 as a united front against aggression. The original members were the United States, Great Britain, France, Italy, Norway, Denmark, Iceland, Canada, Portugal, Belgium, the Netherlands and Luxembourg. Greece and Turkey joined in 1952, followed by West Germany in 1955.

Enlarging NATO benefits both new and old members, Clinton said.

"For the 60 million people who live in Hungary, Poland and the Czech Republic, they now know that what they build in peace they will be able to keep in security."

The 16 current members, he said, gain new allies ready to contribute troops, technology and ingenuity needed to defend allied territory, provide mutual security and pursue vital interests.

"We want to imagine a future in which our children will be much less likely to cross the Atlantic to fight and die in a war, but much more likely to find partners in security, in cultural, commercial and educational endeavors," Clinton said.

The United States supports NATO expansion, Partnership for Peace and all efforts toward European integration and unity, the president said.

"Our goal is to help to build a Europe that is undivided, free, democratic, at peace and secure; a Europe in which Russia, Ukraine and other states of the former Soviet Union join with us to make common cause; a dynamic new Europe with partnership for commerce and cooperation."

Reaching this goal requires more work, building closer ties among Partnership for Peace nations and strengthening NATO ties with Russia and Ukraine, Clinton said.

"We must achieve deeper reductions in our nuclear forces and lower the limits on conventional arms across the European continent."

The president praised the new members and Partnership for Peace nations for supporting NATO operations in Bosnia.

"We have to see through our efforts to secure a lasting peace in the Balkans, and we cannot walk away until the job is done," he said.

Europeans can continue to count on the United States, Clinton vowed.

"We remind the world that tomorrow, as yesterday, American will defend its values, protect its interests and stand by its friends."

While critics have said NATO enlargement would cost too much, Clinton certified that adding the new members will not increase the U.S. share of NATO's common budget, nor will it obligate the United States to subsidize the three countries.

He told the Senate enlargement will not detract from America's ability to meet its other military requirements. DoD officials estimate the U.S. contribution to expansion will be $400 million over 10 years.

At the Pentagon following the White House ceremony, Army Gen. Wesley K. Clark, NATO's supreme allied commander for Europe, said that officials in the three invitee nations greeted the Senate vote with "an enormous sense of pride and a tremendous sense of relief." These countries have "long sought an association with the United States," he said.

The NATO commander told reporters the new allies have borne the responsibilities of providing adequate resources and they have realistic plans in place.

"Based on my visits to the three countries, they've got some good people leading their armed forces who can handle these plans. So I feel very comfortable about that."

Clark praised Hungarian, Polish and Czech troops for doing a "very credible job" serving among their counterparts in Bosnia. "We can be very proud to have these people with us in NATO."

Defense secretary names reform initiative director

American Forces Press Service

WASHINGTON — William P. (Bill) Houley, 59, is the new director of the Defense Reform Initiative.

Houley, 59, is the principal adviser to Defense Secretary William S. Cohen on all matters relating to the initiative. He is responsible for ensuring Department of Defense (DoD) applies the business principles U.S. industry has used successfully to become leaner and more flexible and to remain competitive in world markets.

The Defense Reform Initiative evolved from findings in the Quadrennial Defense Review. It is also aimed at ensuring DoD support elements are agile and responsive to support warfighters. The U.S. armed forces are rapidly applying new technologies to change the way they fight, Deputy Secretary of Defense John Hamre told the House National Security Committee in early March.

Hamre told the congressional committee the initiative has four pillars:

•Re-engineering by adopting the best private-sector business practices in defense support activities;

•Consolidating and streamlining organizations to remove redundancy and moving program management out of headquarters and back to the field;

•Competing many functions now being performed in-house to improve quality, cut costs and make the department more responsive; and •Eliminating excess infrastructure.

In addition to overseeing the Defense Reform Initiative, Houley will serve on the Defense Management Council. According to Hamre, the council oversees Defense Reform Initiative efforts and ensures they stay on-track, and proposes additional initiatives to further streamline DoD's business operations.

Houley spent nearly 35 years in the Navy and retired in November 1994 as a rear admiral. Among his assignments, he was commander of the Naval Submarine School, director of Navy training and education, director of Navy personnel policy, and director of strategic and theater nuclear warfare on the staff of the chief of naval operations.

Houley also served as commander, Submarine Group 2, and director of Navy science and technology requirements and test and evaluation. He completed the Harvard University Senior Management Course and was designated an acquisition professional.

Houley joined Lockheed Martin Corp. (then Martin Marietta) in February 1995 as head of international anti-submarine warfare programs in Syracuse, N.Y. In 1997, he transferred to Lockheed Martin Federal Systems in Manassas, Va., with responsibility for international submarine programs.

Peace grows in Bosnia; violence in Kosovo

Linda D. Kozaryn
American Forces Press Service

BRUSSELS, Belgium — While peace thrives in Bosnia, growing violence in Kosovo presents a tough challenge, U.S. Army Gen. Wesley K. Clark said last week in Washington.

NATO's supreme allied commander Europe and head of the U.S. European Command talked with reporters May 21 at the Pentagon about NATO's peacekeeping operation in Bosnia and the escalating crisis in Kosovo.

Overall, Clark said, NATO-led stabilization forces have made "remarkable progress" in Bosnia during the last year. They separated warring factions, demobilized armies and stored weapons. Civilian officials held national and local elections and refugees are returning home. "The rule of law is taking hold in that country," Clark said.

The Republic of Srpska, in particular, under the new leadership of Prime Minister Milorad Dodik, has taken important steps toward aligning its government more closely with the West, Clark said. "That in itself is an enormous step forward."

The peace implementation mission aims at achieving specific results rather than setting a time limit, he said. This new policy is having a positive impact.

"Those who believed they could sit on the sidelines and wait out the deployment have recognized that's no longer an option," Clark said. "They've got to get with the program and follow through on the obligations they undertook at Dayton."

To ensure reconstruction continues, NATO's 39-nation peacekeeping force will remain in Bosnia indefinitely, the NATO commander said. The follow-on force will remain at its current strength of about 35,000 until after the September elections. Beyond that time, officials will conduct six-month assessments of the security situation before any troop reductions, he said.

New multinational specialized units, operating as part of the stabilization force, will help local police and the International Police Task Force maintain control when needed. An Italian carabinieri battalion and an Argentine gendarmerie battalion are slated to serve the first six-month rotation. Several other countries are also considering providing troops.

These specialized units are not intended to replace local police or take away their responsibility to provide law and order, Clark said. Noting they are not a law enforcement agency, and have no specific role in the capture of war criminals, he said, the new units will be deployed whenever necessary to help deal with riot control.

The stabilization force mandate regarding war criminals will also remain the same, Clark said. If NATO-led troops encounter war criminals, the troops will detain them and turn them over to civilian authorities.

"We've proved that we will do that, and the consequence has been that the activities of the war criminals have been greatly restricted," he said. "I have information that indicates a number of them no longer stay in Bosnia. They've had to give up their previous activities there and seek refuge elsewhere. This is an indicator that the policy is indeed working."

About 6,900 of the 8,500 American troops now supporting Bosnia operations will remain after the current mandate ends in June, Clark said. More than 20,000 U.S. troops deployed when the mission started two years ago, Clark noted.

"We're continuing to see reduction and, therefore, proportionate decrease in the burden it puts on the armed forces," he said. As part of an effort to spread the mission load beyond U.S. units in Europe, units of the 1st Cavalry Division of Fort Hood, Texas, will replace those of the 1st Armored Division in Bosnia this fall.

Although American troops in Bosnia frequently grumble about being restricted to base and other protective measures, Clark said, the security situation warrants the restrictions.

"The rule that's in place right now is the rule that makes the best sense," he remarked.

While NATO officials are heartened by progress in Bosnia, Clark said, they are deeply concerned about Kosovo. "We've been very disappointed to see the repression by the Serb ministerial police there, and we're also concerned about the growing propensity to violence and the reported influx of weaponry into Kosovo from outside."

Ethnic Albanians make up about 90 percent of the population in Kosovo, once an autonomous province in southern Yugoslavia, now Serbia. In 1989, Serb authorities took away their autonomy and since then, Clark said, Kosovars have waited to regain their rights.

Violence in the region has escalated as Serb police clash with Kosovo Liberation Army. So far, the crisis has not spilled over into Bosnia, and NATO authorities are taking steps to help prevent that from happening.

In a separate May 21 appearance in Washington, Defense Secretary William S. Cohen and German Defense Minister Volker Ruehe said the United States and European allies are united in applying diplomatic and economic pressures and seek a political solution in Kosovo.

"We have indicated in the past that we support greater autonomy for the Kosovars and we also encouraged Mr. Milosevic to exercise greater restraint," Cohen said. No options have been ruled out, he added.

Ruehe said allied options include a no-fly zone over Kosovo and sending observers to the troubled province. Germany and other NATO and individual nations are helping beef up border security in Albania and the Former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, or FYROM. A U.N. force of about 750 U.S. and Nordic troops already patrol FYROM's border with Serbia and Albania. The mission, slated to end in August, is under U.N. review.

Clark said a NATO team inspected Albania's border area and called it challenging for anyone trying to move supplies into Kosovo.

"The terrain is extremely difficult. It's an underdeveloped area, so the kinds of host-nation support that we're used to relying on probably wouldn't be there," he explained.

"The real problem is not at the border between Kosovo and Albania. There is no danger of Albania being attacked," Ruehe said. "The real problem is in Kosovo — the dictatorship, police state and lack of autonomy."

Clark said recent talks between Serb President Slobodan Milosevic and Kosovo's Albanian leader Ibrahim Rugova are a hopeful sign. "We have to take and nurture that now and seek a solution to this potentially terrible problem through dialogue and negotiation," he said.

New targets provide cost-efficient training for Patriot missile system

Sandy Riebeling
Army News Service

REDSTONE ARSENAL, Ala., — The Patriot missile system now has a new target in the sky, developed at Redstone Arsenal. The POTA-Tow is a specially designed, cost efficient, aerial tow target that allows troops to build training confidence without breaking the bank.

The POTA-Tow, pronounced like the vegetable, is an 80-pound missile-shaped target that is towed behind an unmanned MQM 107 drone, used in training exercises for the Patriot. Drones, also used as aerial targets, are unmanned jet-shaped aircraft, about one-third the size of a fighter jet and cost $260,000 each. They are launched and flown by remote control.

The POTA-Tow costs $12,000 each.

The new target is expected to save $4 million during the next two years, by shooting POTA-Tows in training exercises instead of the drones, saving the drones to fly another day.

With increasing target costs, the Patriot project office recognized the need for a less costly target. In search for an alternative to the MQM 107, Donald Grundt, Patriot test system integration lead test engineer, initiated efforts, about a year and a half ago, in conjunction with the Target Management Office, to develop a low cost tow target.

"They needed something that could be towed a mile behind the drone, with non-reflective tow line, at 200 meters per second and a special radar cross section," said Tony Still, project director of the Patriot Omni-directional Training Aerial Tow, in the Target Management Office.

A missile distance-scoring device, co-developed for the POTA-Tow, is also housed in the target to provide the closest point of approach for missile intercepts.

The toughest challenge was finding the non-reflective towline able to handle the task without breaking, Still said, who has already developed into production two other tow targets. Up until now, steel cable has been used in Tow targets.

When tracking this target, the Patriot "sees" something much bigger because of the special radar cross section inside the target. Non-metallic line is needed to properly acquire and track only the target, and not the tow cable.

Still turned to Kevlar, a material that had been tried twice before, but abandoned because of breakage.

"We had two breakages during the early development," said Still, "but we changed the tension that we wrap it on the spool and the method it deploys out of the tow. We've had great success since those changes."

Initial testing of the prototype was done with an F-16 to check flight characteristics including stability, aerodynamics, altitude and air speed. The target was reeled back in and put through further testing with the T-38 to check the RCS tracking and tow line strength.

The POTA-Tow passed its first field test with flying colors during the Roving Sands annual training exercise at McGregor Range. The target performed perfectly with three planned misses and four hits.

"We still have a slight problem with the drag," said Still, referring to pull or wind resistance of the mile long line, which slows the speed of the drone. "We can't go quite as fast as we'd like because of the drag on the line."

The POTA-Tow will be in development for another three to four months. A product contract is planned immediately after development.

Editor's note: Riebeling is a writer with Redstone Arsenal's public affairs office.

POTA-Tow

What: A specially designed, cost efficient, aerial tow target for the Patriot missile system.

Cost: $12,000. The new target is expected to save $4 million during the next two years.

How: The POTA-Tow replaces drones as targets, saving the drones to fly another day.

Why: The Patriot Project Office recognized a need for a less costly target.

Development: The POTA-Tow will be in development for another three to four months.

Cooperative Jaguar exercise includes NATO forces

Linda D. Kozaryn
American Forces Press Service

MONS, Belgium — U.S. and Russian forces are among the 3,000 troops from six NATO and 11 other nations taking part in Cooperative Jaguar 1998, a ground, air and maritime Partnership for Peace exercises in Denmark.

Troops began arriving May 18 at the northern city of Frederikshavn. The exercise scenario called for a NATO-led peacekeeping force to deploy to a country troubled by economic distress, ethnic tensions and the breakup of its military forces. The two-week exercise culminated with a noncombatant evacuation exercise held May 24.

A civil affairs team, four F-16 fighters, a maritime patrol aircraft and a battalion staff officer made up the U.S. contingent. The Russian Federation fielded a 25-man naval Infantry platoon and several staff officers. NATO officials said this is the first time Russian forces have participated in a Partnership for Peace exercise in a NATO-member country.

Throughout the exercise, NATO officials said, ground troops practiced peacekeeping operations, while nearly 40 ships and about 30 aircraft tested their ability to operate effectively in a NATO-led joint, peace support operation.

Overall, Partnership for Peace exercises develop interoperability in such areas as peace support, search and rescue and humanitarian relief operations and they provide the foundation for effective military cooperation, NATO officials said. The partnership program's fundamental goals are to build dialogue, transparency, trust and confidence between NATO and partnership nations.

Other NATO nations participating in Cooperative Jaguar are Denmark, France, Germany, Norway and the United Kingdom. Partnership nations are Austria, the Czech Republic, Estonia, Finland, Hungary, Latvia, Lithuania, Norway, Poland, Romania and Sweden.

OCS class 3-98 gains knowledge

Senior Officer Candidate Robert Ford
Officer Candidate School

Fourteen weeks after it began, Officer Candidate School Class 3-98 will take the final step towards becoming officers. Graduation for the 97 new second lieutenants will be held at Marshall Auditorium Wednesday. The commissioning oath will be performed at various locations across Fort Benning after the graduation ceremony.

Most candidates have mixed emotions when it comes to graduation from OCS.

"All the pressure feels like it has been lifted off my shoulders, but I am also sad to leave the NCO side of the house" said Jerry J. Hall, from Anaheim, Calif.

"I'm going to miss the one-on one relationship and the camaraderie that NCOs have," Hall said. "I don't want to lose contact with the Soldiers."

"It will be sad to see all the friends that I have made go off to our little corners of the world, but hopefully with the small Army of today, I will serve with many of these people again soon," said Derrick I. Schmeck from Redding Pa.

Class 3-98 had members from all the Army's components including the regular Army, Army Reserve and National Guard.

Dennis W. Terry of Daytona Beach, Fla., who was a sergeant first class before he came to OCS, had a chance to get a unique perspective on each type of OCS Soldier.

"It was tough going back to not having the control of an E-7 and other people having control over you," Terry said. "That was tough. My roommate was a college option who came directly from basic training, but it was great to help someone and mentor him."

Senior Officer Candidate Robert W. Ford Jr.

Senior Officer Candidate Dennis Terry leads Class 3-98 through the OCS arches Wednesday.

Many of the candidates were NCO's; however, a small number of candidates enlisted under the college option program. These Soldiers report to OCS immediately after basic training.

Terry is Class 3-98's Distinguished Honor Graduate and the winner of the Jess Walls Award.

"I am very proud of being the distinguished honor graduate. There are some very outstanding people here in Class 3-98," he said. "What makes it a little bit more prestigious is to be the Jess Walls winner (Walls was a member of the first OCS class and went on to become the 11th Infantry Regimental commander). Knowing the caliber of people standing on each side of me who could have easily been the distinguished honor graduate is what makes me feel so honored," he said. "People from OCS Class 3-98 will make a difference in the military and even outside of the military."

The phrase most often heard around the OCS battalion is "Standards, no compromise," which is meant to remind the candidates they are required to maintain the highest Army standards in every area, said Capt. Richard D. Crowther, senior TAC officer for Company B, 3rd Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment. The course is designed to show the candidate that they are capable of achieving the highest standards.

"It was very physical, very physically demanding," Elizabeth A. Natale from Medway, Mass., said. "I thought I could do it. But it was more challenging than I expected." The company raised its PT average from 250 to 290 during the three months.

The course also challenges each Soldier's leadership ability.

"I learned a lot about myself and a lot about my leadership style," said Chris O. Blanding from Fort Riley, Kansas. "During the course, I realized I have a tendency to micromanage but now I learned to delegate authority and trust my subordinates."

"It will help me know how I can improve in the future."

Natale agreed, "I'm nervous but also excited. I can tell that I've changed while I was at OCS. I think differently now and it brought on a whole new perspective about what it takes to be a leader."

Team conducts tests on aviators

Frank Kelly
U.S. Army Aeromedical Research Laboratory

The Sustained Operations Team at the U.S. Army Aeromedical Research Laboratory provides research that sustains and enhances aviator performance and develops ongoing crew-safety measures. Since its inception more than a decade ago, the team has conducted seven studies, ranging from the effects of various drugs on aviators to the effects of fatigue on flight performance. Drug agents used were atropine sulfate, triazolam, dextroamphetamine and zolpidem tartrate.

Atropine sulfate shots can combat the effects of airborne chemical agents. Aviators who mistake a chemical situation and inject the drug experience performance difficulties in the real-world, demanding conditions of aviation. However, tests revealed they were still likely to return to base without severe life-threatening complications.

Triazolam can help aviators sleep. Aviators' ability to perform well-practiced maneuvers after eight hours of triazolam-assisted sleep was tested, as well as whether or not performance would decrease shortly after the dosing. Aviators who may need to be awakened for some reason during the night should be aware that the time to awaken is slow under triazolam. Also, in some individuals, the details of the night activity may not be remembered in the morning.

The prophylactic administration of dextroamphetamine minimized the effects of sleep deprivation on flight performance, central nervous system arousal and mood. It prevented declines in performance, especially in the morning and improved physiological and psychological indicators of alertness. However, use of dextroamphetamine should be considered a short-term countermeasure for fatigue.

The zolpidem study involved exposing aviators to three sleep-deprivation periods during which they completed cognitive tests, electrophysiological evaluations, and questionnaires. Zolpidem can rapidly induce sleep, making maximum use of a brief rest period. The volunteers were tested following a two-hour nap induced by zolpidem, a two-hour nap without zolpidem and a two-hour forced-rest period. The study was counterbalanced and double-blind. The rapid onset of zolpidem's action can be of significant benefit when there is only a brief period available for sleep. However, to minimize problems, individuals who plan to use zolpidem should pretest themselves in a safe environment where performance demands are not imminent and allow enough time from awakening to avoid sleep inertia.

A team project in progress deals with sustaining wakefulness of aviators using submaximal exercise as an alternative to stimulants. Aviators are not allowed to sleep for up to 40 hours and must perform various tasks that involve complex mental operations. The aviators exercise at set times during one deprivation period. Aviator performance is then compared to another sleep deprivation period without exercise sessions. Preliminary results suggest that submaximal exercise may increase both physiological and cognitive alertness measures in sleep-deprived aviators.

Future projects of the team include investigating the efficacy of a new generation of stimulant drugs for sustaining aviator performance levels in continuous operation scenarios. Additionally, real-time monitoring of pilot workload using EEG telemetry is in the works. These are just a few examples of how the team contributes to USAARL's overall mission to "Protect, Project and Sustain" Army aviators during peacetime and on the battlefield.

volunteer of the week

Name: Cynthia Calix
Hometown: Ashland, Ala.
Volunteer job title: Parent-teacher organization president
Volunteer organization: Stowers Elementary School

Why do you volunteer?
I recognized a need for parental involvement and thought that the PTO would be a wonderful way to promote parental participation at Stowers.

What do you like about volunteering?
I like providing a service to the school and being involved with my children's education.

What are your special interests and hobbies? Traveling and gardening.

What do others say about your contributions.
"Mrs. Calix is an inspiration to other volunteers. Serving as the PTO president, Mrs. Calix has contributed by volunteering in the classrooms, media center, office, nurse's office, computer lab and all after-school special projects. Any project that Mrs. Calix is involved in has always been a success."

MACH gets new commander

Pvt. 2 Amy L. Nyland
Bayonet staff writer

Martin Army Community Hospital (MACH) received a new commander in a change of command ceremony May 20 on Martin Army Parade Field.

Col. Lester Martinez-Lopez assumed command of MACH from Col. Everett W. Newcomb III who will be reassigned to the Headquarters staff, Department of the Army, Washington, D.C.

Martinez took command of MACH after serving as the director of Health Services and commander, U.S. Army Medical Department Activity and commander, Blanchfield Army Community Hospital, Fort Campbell, Ky., from June 1996 until May 1998.

Martinez was born in Mayaguez, Puerto Rico, and began his Army career in 1978 at Fort Bragg, N.C., where he received his specialty training in family practice.

He graduated from the School of Medicine at the University of Puerto Rico in 1978 and completed his Master's Degree in Public Health at Johns Hopkins University in 1983.

He also received aerospace medicine training at Brooks Air Force Base, Texas.

Martinez's extensive military career includes numerous assignments and commands including chief, Department of Family Practice and Community Medicine at MACH from 1990 to 1993.

In 1994, Martinez was assigned as the commander of the 86th Combat Support Hospital, Fort Campbell Ky. He also served as commander of the 86th Combat Support Hospital, Force 86 (Medical) and chief medical officer, United Mission in Haiti, from May 1995 until October 1995.

He attended the Army Medical Department Officers' Basic and Advanced Courses, the U.S. Army Command and General Staff College and the Army War College.

Martinez is also a diplomate of the American Board of Family Practice and the American Board of Preventive Medicine.

Martinez is married to the former Lydia E. Ramirez-Kurtz and has three sons; Lester II, Luis J. and Lucas R. Martinez.

Curtis Flatt answers questions about Bonnie, his Search and Rescue dog.

Search and rescue dog helps community in various ways

Pvt. 2 Nicole M. Graham
Bayonet staff writer

Man's best friend can be found in homes across America. They are usually found playing fetch or burying bones around the yard. Dogs can be more than just companions. They can be a set of eyes for the blind or assist in finding those who are lost or missing.

Children at Dexter Elementary School had the opportunity to meet a Search and Rescue (sar) dog May 21.

Curtis Flatt, Georgia K-9 Rescue Association volunteer, visited the school with his sar dog Bonnie, to teach the children what a sar dog does.

"It is just a big game to her," Flatt said.

Bonnie has been doing sar for years, Flatt said.

"Bonnie's training started when she was six months old. It took about a year to get her field ready," Flatt said.

"There is no particular school where you can teach dogs how to search and rescue. We train the dogs ourselves."

"She (Bonnie) knew how to do most of the things already (sit, speak, crawl). I just had to teach her to do them when I wanted her to do them," Flatt said.

Flatt has also taught Bonnie a type of sign language created to suit the dog's needs.

Bonnie will sit, speak and crawl when Flatt gives arm and hand signals.

"Bonnie knows sign language so if she gets too far away and she can't hear my commands, we can communicate," Flatt said.

"Bonnie had to learn to crawl so she could go under logs and barb wire fences we sometimes encounter in wooded rescues," Flatt added.

"When someone new comes into the unit we help train their dog," Flatt said. "There are 12-13 dogs in the unit right now."

"We do a lot of water work," Flatt said. "We have more boating accidents and drowning around here than anything."

"When we have a water search, we try to start downstream and work our way upstream," said Flatt.

"The body gives off gases whether they are dead or alive and when the gases rise to the surface of the water, the dogs can pick up the scent. When the dogs stop smelling the area we assume we have passed it because of the way the current flows. Then another dog is brought in as a kind of verification," Flatt said.

"We are only called out by law enforcement agencies. We will not take calls from private citizens because of crank calls," Flatt said. "It is always a group effort."

Not just one dog takes credit for anything.

Bonnie is just a regular dog, but when the harness, which is her work uniform, goes on, she knows it is time to work, Flatt said.

School board meets, discusses various topics

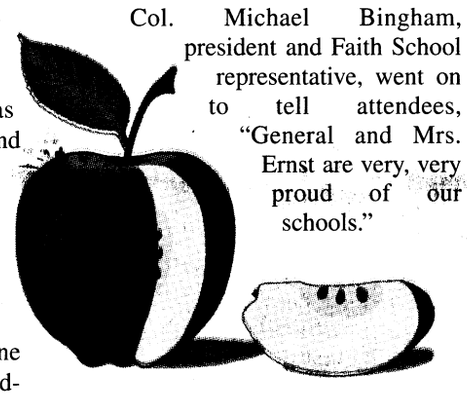
Erin A. Nash
Special to the Bayonet©

Fort Benning's school board held its monthly meeting Tuesday. Among the topics discussed were the status report of school-home partnership (SHP), recognition of teachers and support personnel, the 1998-1999 school year calendar and the superintendent's report.

Dr. Dell McMullen, superintendent of Fort Benning schools, recognized five individuals who made contributions to students in the schools.

She first recognized Faith Middle School teacher Sidney Crews. Crews coaches students for competition. In the regional MathCounts competition, Faith won fourth place out of 11 middle schools.

McMullen also recognized sixth-grader Geoffrey Ellerson, who won the Top Trophy Award out of all participating sixth-grade students in the Muscogee County School District's Middle School Math Tournament.



Marge Brasfield, a fourth-grade teacher for gifted students at Dexter Elementary, was recognized for her work in the Georgia Mathematics League Contest for fourth- and fifth-grades. Brasfield also coaches the Math League and Chess Club.

Student Cameron Latham was recognized as "Another Einstein" and Monique Saunders was named "Mathematical Wizard."

Dexter teachers Cynthia Works and Joyce Flats students' work was published in the National Anthology of Poetry by Young Americans. First-graders Sarah Prewoznik and Christine Green from Works' class and third-graders Brian Watts, Brittany Hays, Nicole Ryder and Meggan Bond were honored for having their poetry published.

Cindy Calix, a parent at Stowers Elementary, was recognized for her more than 2,400 volunteer hours logged over the last two years. Calix also volunteers in the special needs classroom, serves as an officer with the parent-teacher organization and organized the Stowers parents resource room and established the Freddie Stowers Memorial Garden.

All recognized teachers received a compass pin, and students received a certificate.

Col. Michael Bingham, president and Faith School representative, went on to tell attendees, "General and Mrs. Ernst are very, very proud of our schools."

Kathy Einhorn, curriculum director, then gave a status report of the SHP. She highlighted each school and what they were doing as a part of the SHP.

Becky Willoughby, a language arts teacher at Faith, spoke of Faith's training for parents and teachers in the administration and grading of the DoDEA writing assessment tests.

"Everybody got involved," Willoughby said. "The parents were motivating; they were wonderful. It's a team effort; Faith is definitely a team. We have learned so much this year."

The community involvement team of Lt. Col. Steve Eldredge, SHP command representative, Kim Crowell, first-grade teacher at Wilson Elementary and Phyllis Parker, principal at Wilson, spoke of their recent trip to Washington D.C.

"The biggest message that came out of Washington was the use of the larger community," Crowell said. "We need to know more about each other. As partners (parents and teachers), we need to form more of a bond."

The next business was that of the 1988-1999 school year calendar, presented by Richard M. Skinner, assistant superintendent. The Fort Benning school year calendar tries to follow the Muscogee County calendar as close as possible for winter and spring break to accommodate teachers and parents.

The board voted unanimously for the approval of the calendar.

McMullen ended the meeting with the superintendent's report. She spoke of the "Celebrate America" program held at Stowers last week and musicals at Dexter and McBride. She also recognized the Faith Odyssey of the Mind Team who left Tuesday for Orlando, Fla., to compete in the World Finals.

When it comes to keeping the interest of a 4-year-old, many parents are still searching for the answer. Fortunately, a certain teacher at Dexter Elementary may have found the secret.

Pre-K students were entertained by Columbus State University professor of biology, Dr. Brian Schwartz on the metamorphosis of frogs May 14 in a presentation that kept the preschoolers "spellbound" as their teacher, Peggy Gindville, described it.

"They did not move for 35 minutes and that is a sure sign you have the attention of a 4-year-old," Gindville said.

Schwartz came prepared with models of frog eggs, tadpoles and frogs, including colorful, yet poisonous examples from South America. He even brought along a story book about frogs to help relate to the children.

While Schwartz was able to offer valuable information about frogs, the professor was astonished to discover how much the preschoolers already knew about animals and the changes they go through.

The students were able to tell Schwartz frogs hibernate when it is cold, that some are poisonous and all frogs are oviparous or produce eggs.

"They actually knew quite a bit about animals," Schwartz said, "I was so impressed at how bright they were."

Even though these youngsters may not know how to spell the word "oviparous," they have demonstrated they will tell anyone what it means.

"We talk about animals all of the time," Gindville said. "They understand oviparous animals are born from eggs and viviparous animals are born from their mothers."

Gindville said since teaching preschoolers about the change in animals is a part of the curriculum, they might as well teach them what the process is called.

"Instead of saying, 'tadpoles become frogs,' we might as well say, 'this is called metamorphosis,'" Gindville said.

Talking and learning about animals at such a young age is the best time to learn, Gindville said.

"If we teach them these things now, they will never lose it," Gindville said. "They learn about these things better at this age because they are interested and curious."

"Because young children are so interested, it is a good time to teach them," Schwartz said. "They lose curiosity as they get older."

Gindville also explained why frogs are a good topic for youngsters.

"All little children love frogs and insects," Gindville said. "They have an innate interest in these things and who better to find a frog or a toad than a 4-year-old."

"I like the babies (tadpoles) because they are cute," said Frankie Rivera, daughter of Carolyn Rivera-Lugo Foley and Chief Warrant Officer 4 Dionisio Rivera-Lugo, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 75th Ranger Regiment.

Rivera's classmate, Patricia Revolinsky, daughter of Valerie and Maj. Jonathan Revolinsky, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 317th Engineer Battalion, 3rd Brigade, 3rd Infantry Division (Mechanized), said she likes to pet the frogs she catches and fortunately hasn't developed any warts yet.

The children genuinely seemed to enjoy the presentation, Gindville said, and even learned some things she hadn't taught them.

"When tadpoles turn into frogs they still have their tails for a while," said Trey Montgomery, son of Spc. Ted Montgomery, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 2nd Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment.

Revolinsky further explained this tadpole phenomenon.

"Their tails get little and they get front feet and back feet," Revolinsky said.

Finally, Brenton Webb, son of Tammy and Sgt. Donald Webb, 586th Engineer Company (Assault Float Bridge), 36th Engineer Group (Combat), lent a friendly warning to fellow frog fans.

"The bright ones are poisonous and you shouldn't pet them," Webb said.

Gindville said Schwartz coming to their class was definitely a valuable learning experience for the children.

"By the time he left, they understood metamorphosis," Gindville said.

While other preschool students may be learning the alphabet, Gindville's students are heads and tadpole tails above other students their age when it comes to knowledge of frogs and metamorphosis.

Directorate of Public Works

This week's article provides information about Sunshine Road and an update on the Fort Benning Recycling Program.

Sunshine Road closes one lane

Because of road failure, a section of Sunshine Road near the intersection with Jamestown Road is reduced to one-lane traffic until further notice. The speed limit has been reduced to 15 mph. For more information, call Bill Bunt, Directorate of Public Works Range, Roads and Grounds Branch, at 545-3725 or 545-5275.

Recycling makes sense

Recycling reduces disposal costs, conserves natural resources and minimizes environmental problems associated with land disposal.

Rules

Curbside recycling collection is weekly on the same day that garbage is collected. Residents are provided with a brown recycling bin. The bin must be placed at the curb by 7 a.m. Do not put the container out prior to 6 p.m. on the previous day. Remove empty containers from the curb on the day of collection.

The following items are collected for recycling. Because of market conditions, the items collected for recycling may change from time to time.

•Aluminum cans

•Plastic food and beverage containers with the PETE 1 or HDPE 2 logo. Plastic containers should also be flattened.

•Glass food and beverage containers. Rinse and remove tops from glass and plastic containers.

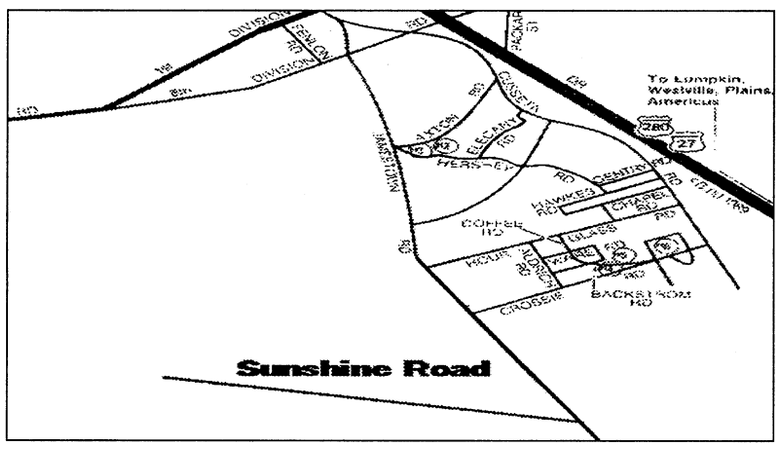
•Paper products that can be recycled are newspapers, magazines, bags, newspaper flyers, office and school and non-corrugated paperboard boxes (flattened).

•Rinsed steel and tin cans

•Corrugated cardboard — flatten and place next to recycle bin. One box can be used to store the remaining cardboard.

•Furniture and large household appliances — place on curb on the day of pickup. To arrange for pickup of refrigerators, freezers and air conditioners, call DPW Customer Services at 545-2117.

Personal items



Personal items such as tissue, napkins, bandages, diapers, pet bedding, pizza boxes or any other contaminated items should not be set out for recycling.

Unacceptable items can result in public health problems to others and cannot be tolerated in recycling bins. Rejected items must be removed immediately from recycling bin.

Yard waste

Place leaves and grass clippings in a plastic or metal durable waste container (preferred) or in paper bags. Paper bags can be obtained at DPW Self Help Shop, Building 385.

Put yard waste out by 7 a.m. Monday. If a durable plastic or metal container is used, it will be returned to the curb after being emptied into the collection vehicle. Small limbs are acceptable if less than three feet long and two inches in diameter. Tie small limbs into a bundle. Do not place them in bags. Do not put soil in yard waste bags. Bags weighing more than 50 pounds will not be picked up.

Recycling makes a difference

With everyone's help, recycling offers great promise for improved management of solid waste. Fort Benning has exceeded federal and state solid waste reduction goals with its waste reduction, recycling and yard waste composting programs. Resident support not only has helped exceed these goals, but considerable landfill disposal capacity has been conserved for material that cannot be economically recycled.

In 1994, 562 tons of waste were recycled. In 1995, 890 tons were recycled. In 1996, 8,500 tons were recycled and in 1997, 14,000 tons were recycled.

Tips for solid waste reduction

•Recycling is more than just setting out recyclables; it is buying, recycled products and products with high recycle content.

•Reduce the amount of unnecessary packaging.

•Consider reusable products.

•Maintain and repair durable products.

•Reuse containers and other items.

•Borrow, rent and share items used infrequently.

•Sell or donate unwanted or unneeded material.

•Compost yard waste.

•Educate others about waste reduction and recycling.

•Be creative — find new ways to reduce waste.

For more information about recycling, call Walter Nichols at 545-1007 or Thomas Moore at 544-6142.

Comments and questions

For questions or topics that you would like to be addressed in the DPW "Information Corner," call Glenn Todd, DPW customer relations specialist at 545-2117, or write to the Directorate of Public Works, Building 67, Room 409, ATTN:ATZB-PWM (Glenn Todd), Fort Benning,GA, 31905.

ask the judge

Jane M. Winand
Office of the Staff Judge Advocate

Q: While I was visiting my mother in Philadelphia, someone broke into my car and stole my purse. Now I'm really worried that someone will get my personal information and ruin my life and credit history. I reported the theft to the police. Is there anything else that I can do?

A: You obviously did the right thing by reporting the incident to the police. Thieves make money by selling identification and credit cards to other criminals who then use these cards to access your bank accounts, to buy items on your credit and open other accounts in your name.

There is a limit on your liability for the misuse of your credit cards. You must notify the credit card company immediately and you are only liable for the first $50 charged. However, the real danger is when the criminal finds out personal information about you that he can use. Social Security numbers, bank account numbers, ATM card passwords and telephone calling card numbers, in the wrong hands, can cause great trouble for the true holder of the number or account.

Thieves use this personal information to impersonate you, spending as much money as possible before moving on to the next victim.

The term for this scam is "identity theft." Even though you do not have to pay the bills these criminals have made, you may find you now have a terrible credit report as a result of the theft and cannot easily clear it. You may have difficulty writing checks, securing loans, renting an apartment or getting a job because of adverse credit report entries.

The Federal Trade Commission suggests the victim of a purse snatching take the following steps:

•Notify police immediately and get a copy of the report to use if necessary in dealing with your accounts.

•Cancel each credit and charge card and get new account numbers.

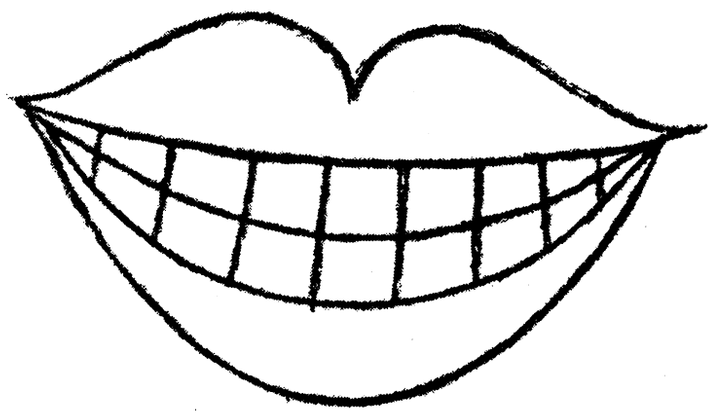
•Report missing cards to the major credit reporting agencies: Equifax, (800) 525-6285; TRW, (800) 680-7289; and Trans Union, (800) 422-4879. Ask them to flag your accounts and add a victim's statement to the files.

•Report the loss to your bank. Cancel checking and savings accounts and open new ones. Stop payments on outstanding checks.

•Get a new ATM card, account number and personal identification number.

•Call your utilities, including the telephone company. Tell them that someone may try to get new service using your identification.

•Report a missing driver's license to the motor vehicle department. Get a new number that is not your Social Security number.



•Change the locks on your home and car if keys were taken. An identity thief can gain even more information.

Although you are the innocent victim of a crime, you must take the responsibility for ensuring the damage done is minimal.

For more information about consumer issues, make an appointment to meet with an attorney by calling the Legal Assistance Division at 545-3281 or 545-3282.

Untreated hypertension can lead to stroke

Dr. Virginia Yates
Martin Army Community Hospital

A diagnosis of hypertension or high blood pressure is made if an average of two or more blood pressure measurements on at least two doctor's visits are systolic of 140 or greater or a diastolic of 90 or greater.

Blood pressures are given as two numbers, like a fraction. The systolic pressure is the number on the top of the fraction and the diastolic pressure is the number on the bottom.

Hypertension occurs in more than 60 million Americans. It is more common in men up to age 50 after which it is more common in women. Approximately 15 percent of Caucasians and more than 25 percent of blacks have hypertension. The prevalence of hypertension increases with age.

Most of the time the cause of hypertension cannot be found. Some factors that can make the blood pressure higher include medications such as decongestants, estrogens and anti-inflammatory medications, caffeine, nicotine, dietary sodium and a stressful lifestyle.

Last year, a study in The Archives of Family Medicine suggested that anxiety and depression may be strong risk factors for developing hypertension.

A study published in Hypertension using transcendental meditation for stress reduction in older African Americans showed a 10 to 13 mm drop in systolic pressure and a six to eight mm drop in diastolic pressure. These results were consistently better than the results achieved in the groups that were not given education or muscle relaxation techniques as alternative stress reduction methods.

Weight control is a major factor in preventing hypertension. The Nurses Health Study at Harvard has shown that a gain of 44 pounds in adulthood before age 45 increased the risk for developing hypertension fivefold and doubled the risk if after the age of 55.

In another study, people older than 60 who reduced weight by four pounds and decreased salt intake by 900 mg caused a significant drop in blood pressure.

Food recommendations to lower blood pressure are essentially a heart-healthy diet, which includes low fat dairy items, low salt foods such as fresh fruits and most vegetables and low animal fat intake.

Left untreated, hypertension causes damage to the heart, blood vessels, kidney and brain. The leading cause of stroke is poorly controlled hypertension.

The American Heart Association gives the five warning signs of a stroke:

•Weakness or numbness in the face, arm, leg or one side of the body

•Sudden loss of vision, particularly in one eye

•Sudden difficulty talking or understanding speech

•Sudden severe, unexplained headache

•Sudden falls or dizziness

Many people ask about monitoring blood pressure at home. The best readings are received with the traditional stethoscope method.

Last year, The American Journal of Hypertension published a study of electronic blood pressure devices. Generally, the type with the cuff around the arm are more accurate than the finger insertion devices. Because home blood pressure measurements tend to be lower than those at the doctor's office, some doctors recommend that blood pressure readings at home should stay below 135 over 85.

The most important thing people who have hypertension can do is take the medication to control blood pressure. This is especially important for those at increased risk for system damage from high cholesterol, diabetes or other heart disease. Stop smoking, lower cholesterol, maintain control of blood sugars and moderate exercise can all make lifesaving changes.

Editor's note: The Martin Army Community Hospital Community Nursing will sponsor a blood pressure screening 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. today at the Main Mall Post Exchange.

Precautions keep outdoor grilling safe

Directorate of Public Safety

It's that time of the year when people put the grill out back on the patio and barbecue. Precautions can help make sure the cook cooks the food without getting burned.

Always place the grill on a level surface so it won't topple over. Make sure the grill is in an open area where the wind won't blow sparks and smoke toward buildings or people.

To start the fire, line the bottom of the grill with heavy duty aluminum foil, stack the charcoal briquettes in a pyramid shape and generously soak each briquette with charcoal lighter fluid. Wait several minutes then ignite with a long wooden match or toss a lit match on the charcoal. Never use gasoline, kerosene or cigarette lighter fluid to start a fire. You may use an Underwriters' Laboratories listed electric starter and dispense with fluids completely.

If the fire isn't going strongly enough, never add more starter fluid to make a bigger fire. Instead, use hand bellows to fan the fire, or tuck bits of paper or twigs under the charcoal and light them with a long match.

Once the grill is burning, never leave it unattended. Before putting any meats on the grill, trim off excess fat so it doesn't drip onto the coals and cause flare ups. Keep a spray bottle full of water on hand to douse any flare ups that do start.

Don't wear clothes that are loose enough to flap into the flames when grilling.

Wear short sleeves or roll up long sleeves.

Used cars to be sold for as low as $99.00 and up.

Local Muscogee county dealership is having a massive used car Slasher Salesm Event and will be selling vehicles for as low as $99.00, this Saturday, May 30th, Rain or Shine.

Columbus, GA. Budget Car Sales has announced its plan to have a $99 dollar used car Slasher Salesm event this Saturday, May 30th.

Joe Kennedy, General Manager of Budget Car Sales says, "This sale is necessary due to recent fluctuation in the used car market and the heavy influcts of 2&3 year old lease returns". During this one day $99 dollar Used Car Slasher Salesm event, every used vehicle will be sold for thousands below its retail price!

All cars will be on display at Budget Car Sales located at 6225 Veterans Parkway, Columbus. Registration will begin at 7:00 am. At 10:00 am all vehicles will be opened so that buyers may inspect vehicles. The retail price will be posted on the windshield of each vehicle. When the sale begins at 11:00 am, whoever is sitting in the vehicle when the event begins, will have first chance to purchase that vehicle at the slashed price. Prices will be slashed one time to the rock bottom price, with some vehicles as low as $99! When the sale is completed for the day, Budget Car Sales will resume business as usual.

Joe Kennedy said that "customers can expect the slashed prices to be very close to public auctioning pricing, without the auction fee." Due to the response to this event Joe Kennedy has agreed to have all trades, lease returns and auction purchase available for sale. The Slashersm approach to selling used vehicles is revolutionizing the way used cars are being sold and allows everybody to get a great deal on a used car or truck.

In addition, all customers responding to this sale will receive a FREE PAGENET PAGER just for stopping in.

Budget will have buyers on hand to take your trade-ins, as well as special finance and credit analysts to get you prequalified before the sale. Kennedy said, "If you've had a problem obtaining auto financing before, we will have some of the most liberal lenders in the area at this event. Just bring in a current payroll stub and a valid driver's license.

We have a multi-million dollar inventory available for this event. Our total inventory will be close to 200 used cars & trucks for this event.

Joe Kennedy further stated that he believes that this is the "absolute best opportunity for anyone seeking a used car or truck to get the best deal ever. Budget Car Sales has been a strong supporter of the community and the community has been a supporter of Budget Car Sales. This is our way of saying thanks." This event allows the dealer to reduce his inventory as well as the customer to get a car or truck for as low as $99.00. Any questions can be directed to 706-327-6888 at Budget Car Sales.

Pentecost continues to influence lives

Chaplain (Maj.) Frederick "Bud" Rupel
Chaplain Family Life Ministries Center

Without a doubt, the critical event in the formation of the Christian church is the day of Pentecost nearly 2,000 years ago.

reflections

In Hebrew history, Pentecost was celebrated on the fiftieth day after the presentation of the first harvested sheaf of the barley harvest. It also coincided with the fiftieth day from the first Sunday after Passover.

Pentecost was also known as the day of the first fruits because it was the day when the first fruits of the wheat harvest were presented to God.

But this particular day of Pentecost would be one the likes of which Jerusalem had never before witnessed.

Jerusalem was filled with pilgrims who had come there to celebrate Pentecost. On the lips of many of these pilgrims were the events that had shaken the city. Jesus of Nazareth had been executed following a ministry that had won him many followers and many enemies.

Eventually, his enemies won out and he was executed on a Roman cross. But now his followers were claiming he had risen from the dead and there was an empty tomb to help prove their claim.

Among the throngs that filled Jerusalem on that Pentecost were a group of 120 followers of Jesus gathered together in an upper room.

Many Christian historians feel it was the same room where Jesus had spent his last hours with his disciples before his execution.

Among the 120 were Peter, James, John, the remaining 11 disciples and most likely Mary and Mary Magdalene.

Just before Jesus ascended into heaven, he told his followers to wait for the promise of the Father, the baptism in the Holy Spirit, all of which sounded so confusing to them.

But wait they did.

Ten days had passed since the Ascension and the 120 were still waiting, wondering and praying when suddenly the room in which they had gathered was filled with the sound of a gale-like wind.

Whether or not there was an actual audible sound remains unimportant.

What remains important is the fact the Holy Spirit of God came upon those 120 in power. Not only was this manifestation, but Acts 2:3,4 says, "They saw what seemed to be tongues of fire that separated and came to rest on each of them. All were filled with the Holy Spirit and began to speak in other tongues as the Spirit enabled them."

So profound was this event that the neighborhood was suddenly filled with a crowd of people trying to find out what had happened.

What happened would change the course of history because the 120 were filled with the power of God to be witnesses of Christ.

Peter, remember him, who had a gift of putting mouth in motion without first thinking of the consequences (walking on water, denying Christ) stood up and preached the first sermon of the Christian church.

The result — 3,000 became believers in Christ.

So what to make of that event nearly 2,000 years ago? That single event in that upper room ushered in the Christian church.

As a chaplain endorsed by a Pentecostal denomination, I am often asked what about all this Holy Spirit stuff. I can only reply that I personally need the power of the Holy Spirit at work in my life.

The outpouring of the Holy Spirit on Pentecost made a difference then, and it continues to have a profound impact today.

Precautions help avoid Heat Stress

University of Georgia Cooperative Extension Service

The sun beats down. The road seems to be on fire. All that a person can do is sit somewhere cool. And that's the best thing anyone can do, because that stress can be a real danger to many people when a heat wave hits. Heat stress is caused by the body's inability to adjust to sudden increases in temperature. The elderly are especially vulnerable. It puts a dangerous strain on the heart and blood pressure and can lead to heat exhaustion, heart failure and stroke.

Signs of heat stress include: dizziness, rapid heartbeat, diarrhea, nausea, cramps, throbbing headache, dry skin (no sweating), chest pain, weakness, mental changes, breathing problems and vomiting.

Here are ways to avoid heat stress by keeping cool:

•Use an air conditioner if available or go someplace that does such as a library, shopping mall, senior citizen center or movie theater.

•If an air conditioner is not available, use a fan to draw in cool air at night and to keep air moving during the day. While air movement during the day may be hot, it will still help the body to keep cool by speeding up the rate sweat evaporates. Be sure the fan does not blow directly on the body. There is danger from dehydration.

•Take cool baths or showers. They provide relief from heat because water removes extra body heat 25 times faster than cool air. Try placing wet towels on your body for a quick cooler.

•Wear light weight, light colored, loose fitting clothes and wear hats or use umbrellas to keep out of the sun.

•Drink more water during hot weather; don't wait until you are thirsty. If you are under a doctor's care, check to see how much water you should be drinking.

•Avoid alcohol. It acts as a diuretic, resulting in faster water loss. In addition, alcohol can promote a sense of well-being causing a person to become less aware of the danger signs of heat stress.

•Curtail physical activity during extremely hot weather. Activity adds to heart strain.

•Avoid hot food and heavy meals. Digesting them adds heat to the body.

•A relative or neighbor is encouraged to check on those who live alone.

Heat stroke can kill your pet

University of Georgia Cooperative Extension Service

Each year, more than 200 dogs suffer heat stroke in Georgia. Most of them die and many suffer because their owners leave them unattended in a car.

Dogs and cats begin to suffer in 90 degree temperature and they can't take off their fur like we take off clothes or sweat away the heat like people do.

Dogs sweat in two places — on the tongue and between their toes. So it's crucial that they avoid extreme heat.

Animals with heat stroke may show symptoms of rapid breathing, vomiting or a starving expression in the eyes. Immediate therapy is essential for the animal to survive. Immerse the animal in cold water and seek the assistance of a veterinarian.

But, it's best to avoid the problem. Ensure that pets have plenty of shade and fresh water when traveling. Leave pets at home while shopping in town. Never leave pets alone in a parked car. After an hour in the sun, the interior of an automobile can reach 150 degrees.

Intramural softball season winds down

Spc. Michelle J. Davis
Bayonet staff writer

Just as the National Basketball Association season is winding down, the post intramural softball league is also coming to the season's end.

According to Carol Gearheart, intramural sports coordinator, more than 30 softball teams from units around post participated in the intramural softball league, which began its season in April.

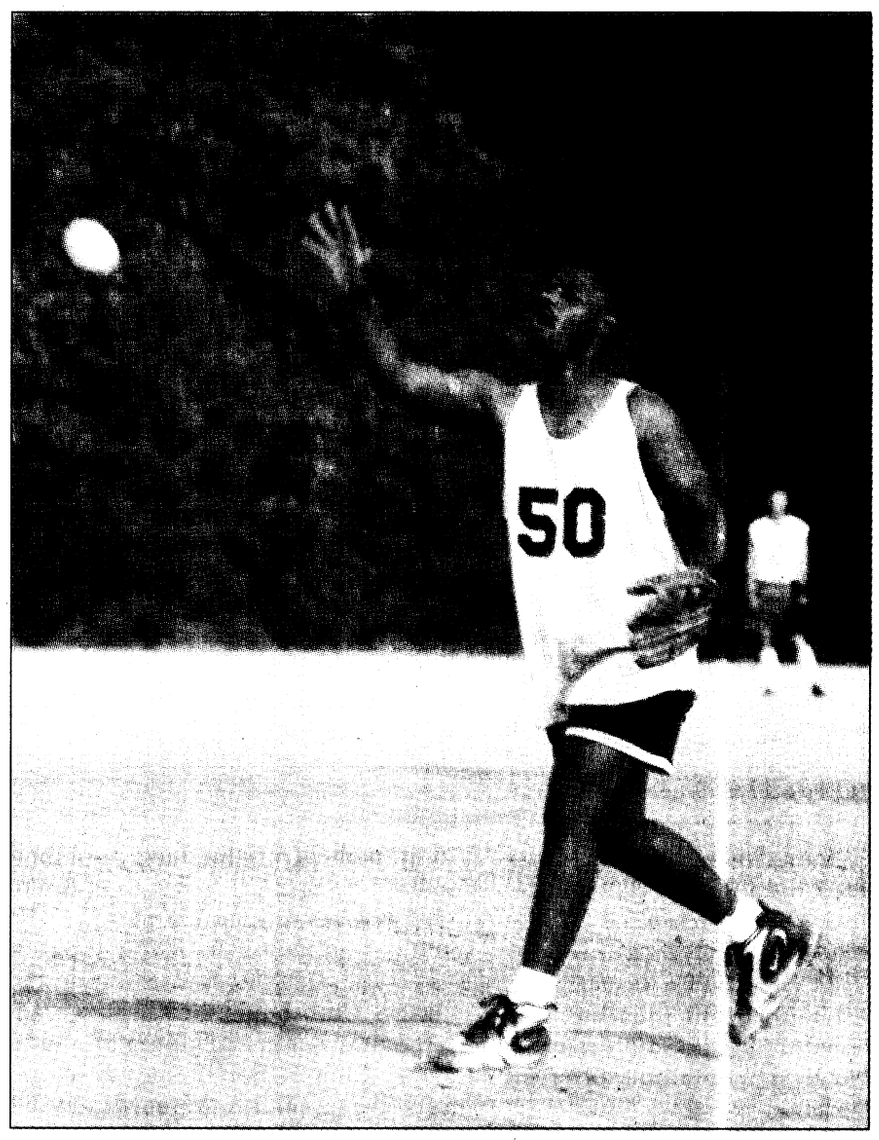
The league was split into three divisions: 3rd Brigade, 3rd Infantry Division (Mechanized), 11th Infantry Regiment and 29th Infantry Regiment combined division and 36th Engineer Group (Combat) division.

Most of the regular season games will wrap-up by Monday before the teams head into the end of season tournament, which is tentatively scheduled for June 8-18.

Gearheart said slots for the tournament will be given to teams with the best records from each division.

A softball meeting is scheduled for 1 p.m. Tuesday at Gowdy Field to discuss the end of season tournament.

Although this softball season is wrapping up, a second season of softball will begin this summer.



Gearheart has already scheduled an organizational meeting for 1 p.m. July 7 at Gowdy Field to prepare for the second session.

In addition to softball, intramural volleyball is also on the back stretch of its season. Six teams from around post participated in the league this year, which played its games Tuesdays through Thursdays at Kefurt Physical Fitness Center.

"We're still working to set up the end of season tournament for volleyball," Gearheart said. "We didn't really have as strong a turn-out as we normally do."

As for Youth Services' sports, a summer basketball league is scheduled to start back up in the beginning of June.

Teams are aleady in the process of being picked for the summer league, but YS is also sponsoring a basketball camp for children ages 6-15. Registration for the camp will be Monday through June 12 at the Youth Center.

Bryan Glover, Co. B, 317th Eng. Bn., releases a pitch during team practice in preparation for the upcoming tournament.
