Army announces Stop Loss changes

Many active-duty soldiers effected by decision

Army News Service

Assistant Secretary of the Army (Manpower and Reserve Affairs) Reginald J. Brown approved partially lifting stop loss for selected officer specialties and enlisted Military Occupational Specialties (MOSs) affected by Stop Loss 1 through 3.

Stop loss allows the Army to retain soldiers in the service beyond their date of separation or retirement for an open-ended period. Those affected by the order generally cannot voluntarily retire or leave active duty or separate from the service as long as reserves are called to active duty or until otherwise relieved by proper authority.

The decision to partially lift Stop Loss 1 through 3 will affect 370 soldiers in the active Army between now and Sept. 30, the end of the fiscal year.

Lifted from Stop Loss 1-3 in officer specialties:

- 48E Foreign Area Officer (EURASIA)

Enlisted Military Occupational Specialties:

- 81T Topographic Analyst
- 92R Rigger
- 96D Imagery Analyst
- 96H Common Ground Station Operator
- 96Z Intelligence Senior NCO
- 97L Translator (Ready Reserve — Russian and Spanish Linguist only)
- 97Z Senior Human Intelligence NCO
- 98G Cryptologic Linguist (All Components — Russian and Spanish Linguist only)
- 98H Communications Interceptor
- 98J Electronic Intelligence Analyst
- 98K Signal Collection Analyst
- 98Z Senior Signal Intelligence NCO

Brown also approved a fourth increment to the Army's limited Stop Loss program. Stop Loss 4 will affect 261 soldiers in the active Army. This stop loss increment expands the coverage of the three previous stop loss increments to additional skills and specialties for both the active Army and the Ready Reserve. The affected skills and specialties are those considered essential to the national security of the United States.

Affected by Stop Loss 4:

Officer Specialties:

- 30 Information Operations
- 34 Strategic Intelligence
- 53 Information Systems Management

Enlisted Military Occupational Specialties:

- 13C Field Artillery Automated Fire Support Specialist
- 13D Field Artillery Tactical Data Systems Specialist
- 13E Cannon Fire Direction Specialist
- 14E Patriot Fire Control Specialist
- 52E Prime Power Production Specialist
- 55D Explosive Ordnance Disposal Specialist
- 96U Unmanned Aerial Vehicle Operator;

No warrant officer specialties are affected by either action.

The overriding consideration for current stop loss decisions is not to exceed the fiscal year 2002 total active Army end strength by more than one percent.

Active Army end strength is currently projected at 484,000, including soldiers affected by Stop Loss 1 through 3.

The Army can only execute Stop Loss 4 if an equal number of active Army soldiers are lifted from Stop Loss 1 through 3 — a zero sum gain against fiscal year 2002 end strength.

The Army continues to reevaluate stop loss on a monthly basis and use it as a tool to maintain unit readiness.

Bradley: Celebrates 25th anniversary of service to U.S.

The Bradley was given its proper recognition when it was honored for 25 years of support during a ceremony outside Infantry Hall Tuesday.

"The Bradley has been through quite a few battles," said retired Master Sgt. Notley Reavis, a former Bradley master gunner.

"It really is the soldier's vehicle."

Reavis was the vehicle's first master gunner when the it was introduced in 1977.

During the Bradley ceremony, Reavis received the Order of St. Maurice award for his contributions to the Army.

"He really has been here from beginning to end," said Monica Manganaro, Fort Benning spokeswoman.

"He's been a force of continuity."

Although Reavis retired from the Army in 1988, he has continued to work on the Bradley as an employee of a private company near Fort Hood, Texas, which assists the Army in decisions to keep the vehicle on the edge of changing technology.

"I'm proud of how the Bradley has evolved," Reavis said.

"Because it has a digital system, we will always be able to incorporate more systems into it. It will always be able to improve with the times."

The idea for the Bradley arose out of a need for a more capable combat platform to accompany tanks on the battlefield.

By Operation Desert Storm, the Bradley was able to provide nuclear, chemical, and biological protection to all its crew members.

"The Bradley is one of the most essential pieces of our military fighting force," Reavis said.

"I have dedicated my life to making sure it will never fail us."

The vehicle was named in 1981 after General of the Army Omar N. Bradley, a former World War II general and chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

South Lumpkin gate extends hours for workers

Times shift to help out common man

Pfc. Brian Trapp

Bayonet staff

The winds of change arrived for post personnel who use the South Lumpkin Road access control point.

The operating hours of the gate are shifting to 5:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. beginning June 17.

The shift in time coincides with the time when many people are leaving post.

"The change was made in order to accommodate work schedules or for people coming on and leaving post. It's just that simple," Sgt. 1st Class Michael Snapp, training NCO with the Directorate of Public Safety.

The change allows soldiers who don't leave work until later in the afternoon to still use the access point.

"The change will help me out a lot. Because of all the traffic, it gets a little backed up at that intersection in the evening," said Sgt. James Mick, training NCO with 2nd Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment. "The time change may relieve some of it."

The time shift will reap more benefits than just giving post motorists a more convenient trip home in the evening, Mick said. It will give an opportunity for families to spend more time together.

"The extra time will give me the chance to use the exit, and it will cut 15 minutes off of my driving time," Mick said. "Otherwise, I have to drive to a different exit, and that takes away from time I could spend with my family."

Pin on point to captain changes for first lieutenants

Time-in-grade cutback helps promotions

Pfc. Brian Trapp

Bayonet staff

The promotions to first lieutenant and captain are being accelerated by reducing the promotion pin-on point to captain.

A recent change in the National Defense Authorization Act, Title 10, U.S. Code, has been changed to allow services to promote officers to the grade of first lieutenant and captain after 18 months time in grade, through Oct, 1, 2005.

The change was effective May 28, and will begin Oct. 1 by gradually accelerating promotions with officers on the captain Army Competitive Category promotion list.

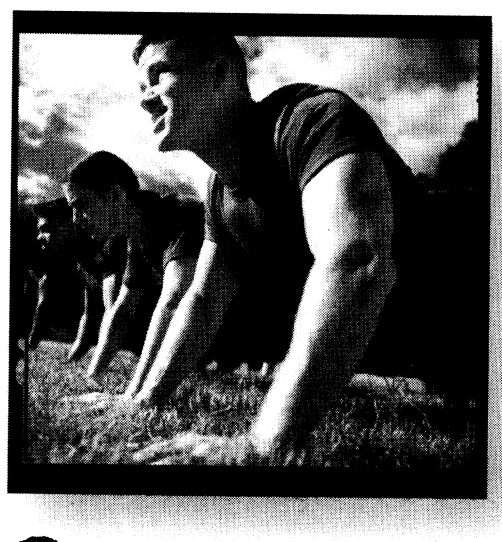
The change reduces the promotion point from 42 months time in service to 38 months.

The shortage of captains started accelerating promotions to company grade officers, said Klaus Bourne, human resources assistant and officer promotions clerk with Adjutant General.

"I think the change is great," said 1st Lt. Jason Slutsky, ammunition support, platoon leader with 29th Infantry Regiment.

"It will recognize first lieutenants already in a position where they have the responsibilities of a captain."

Promotions beginning in October will be in accordance with the following projections:



- October — 2262 promotions,
- November — 158 promotions,
- December — 347 promotions.

This will exhaust the fiscal 2002, Captain, Army Competitive Category, Promotion Selection List.

"I think it's the soldier who makes the position, not the position that makes the soldier," Slutsky said.

Soldiers learn how to save lives

First aid class gives tools to help injured

Sgt. 1st Class Robert Healy, 10th Mountain Division, was wounded in Operation Anaconda fighting the war on terrorism March 8. His buddies' quick reaction and first aid saved his life.

The soldiers of B Company, 2nd Battalion, 54th Infantry Regiment, encountered a small taste of what Healy and his buddies endured during first aid training on Sand Hill Monday.

The soldiers completed the first portion of first aid, where they learned how to set a pressure and field dressing, evaluate a casualty and set a tourniquet.

"This is a culture shock to some of these soldiers," said Staff Sgt. Tom Scott, senior drill sergeant. "Some of them came in here not realizing how seriously soldiers get injured in war."

The drill sergeants expressed the importance of what they were learning.

Yang checks the pressure dressing on Percefull.

"These soldiers will be deployed somewhere in the near future, and what they're learning is going to save their buddy's life," Scott said.

Throughout the class, drill sergeants asked soldiers questions to help them retain the information.

"They were keeping us on top of our game," said Pvt. Chris Davis. "They presented us with the information, and it is our job to retain the information and use it in a time of need."

The drill sergeants stressed a lot of importance on evaluating a casualty.

"If you don't know how to evaluate a casualty, then you will not know how to treat the victim," Scott said.

"Knowing that I would be using these skills one day made me listen extra carefully," said Pvt. Darren Orta.

"One day, it's going to be my buddy out there injured and depending on me to help him out. That's when my training will get me through the steps I need to do to help him."

On guard!

Sgt. William A. Graves

Pvts. Robert King and Jason Resnik, 1st Battalion, 50th Infantry Regiment, square off in a semifinal pugil stick match Tuesday on Sand Hill. Resnik went on to lose the heavyweight championship to Pvt. Joe Kohler. Pvt. Chris Johnson beat Pvt. Russ Walters in the lightweight championship, and Pvt. William Hanson defeated Pvt. Dimitry Lobanov for the middleweight crown. All three champions were from B Company's 1st Platoon Warlords, who took home the guidon streamer for their effort.

Kohler said all the soldiers had a good time beating each other up, and it was a great way to blow off stress caused by an eight-mile road march earlier in the day.

Rangers cautious as training heats up

'Heat is your worst enemy,' medic says

Bridgett Siter
Special to the Bayonet©

War doesn't stop when the mercury rises, so Fort Benning's 4th Ranger Training Battalion continues to turn out warriors throughout the summer, training cautiously but diligently under the sizzling sun.

Last week, nine ranger students suffered heat injuries, four of them serious enough to be hospitalized, two clinically diagnosed as heat stroke. Not a surprising occurrence given the extreme temperatures, but unusual because of the number of casualties, said Sgt. 1st Class Mark Rasdall, the medical platoon's senior medic.

"That's a busy week," Rasdall said. "Temperatures were around 90. Humidity 100 percent. Soldiers from cooler weather regions who hadn't acclimated. That spells trouble."

The RTBs been heading off that kind of trouble for years, training proactively to prevent weather-related injuries. In fact, Rasdall believes the battalion is way ahead of the standard when it comes to hot-weather training.

"Ranger training can't stop. We have to keep going, no matter what the weather. But we take more precautions than most anywhere in the Army," said Rasdall, noting the RTB assigns at least four medics to every training activity.

Ranger instructors must attend a hot-weather injury prevention class every year, and each class of trainees is briefed on the proper way to monitor themselves and their ranger buddies for heat injuries. They're also required to carry at least two one-quart canteens at all times.

"We've got students monitoring themselves and each other, instructors monitoring their students, and medics on hand to monitor everybody and administer fluids at the first sign of a problem," Rasdall said. "We catch these problems in the early stages before they turn into life-threatening situations."

> "Acclimation takes two to three weeks at least. We don't have that kind of time. We recommend these soldiers don't even come during the summer months. But if they do we want to keep an eye on them."
> Sgt. 1st Class Mark Rasdall
> Medical platoon senior medic

To start with, ranger students with a history of heat-related injuries are "tagged" with a red sticker "so instructors can keep an eye on them," Rasdall said.

Soldiers from foreign countries and cooler climates, such as Fort Drum, N.Y., or Fort Lewis, Wash., are also tracked.

"Acclimation takes two to three weeks at least. We don't have that kind of time," he said. "We recommend these soldiers don't even come during the summer months. But if they do, we want to keep an eye on them."

Like all Army units, the battalion modifies their uniform during Heat CAT 4 and 5, rolling pants when possible and replacing ballistic helmets with field caps when walking.

Medics carry a Kestrel Device to keep a constant temperature and humidity reading, information they use to keep commanders abreast of potentially dangerous weather conditions.

The battalion has also discovered one of medicine's best-kept secrets — the "ice blanket," a "very simple, very effective method of bringing down the body's core temperature," Rasdall said.

"It's so simple, it's ingenious. It's a hospital sheet completely submerged in ice and water. When the body core temp goes to 103, you cocoon the victim in it. It rapidly brings down their temp."

During the worst of summer's heat, the medics keep a sharp eye out for a myriad of heat-related problems, Rasdall said, including cramps and exhaustion, which can lead to heat stroke. Extreme temperatures and improper hydration can also cause severe muscle break-down, a life-threatening condition known as rhabdomyolysis.

Overhydration is also a problem — less common, but extremely dangerous, Rasdall said.

"Water intoxication it's called. It'll fool you. You drink too much water, and it has nowhere to go so it starts filling other body cavities, including the brain. So it alters your state of mind.

"Same signs and symptoms as a heat injury, but not easily treated," Rasdall said. The battalion typically sees one case of water intoxication each year.

Of course, dehydration isn't the most common problem. Sunburn is. Students are required to bring sunscreen to ranger school, but they don't always apply it liberally.

All the training is for naught if soldiers don't heed the experts' advice, Rasdall said.

"I guess it's the nature of the soldier to be hard-headed. They try to push through, to keep going when they feel a little off.

"They'll ignore early — warning signs because they're afraid they'll be dropped," he said.

"But if we can get them in here early, we can stop the problem before they have to be recycled or sent home."

Movers working to deliver goods faster

DoD hoping for several improvements

Angela Sachitano
Special to the Bayonet©

Families transferring from one post to the other this summer, beware.

The wait for delivery of household goods once soldiers arrive on post may be anywhere from 14 to 21 days.

"My family and I have been sleeping on the floor for a week, and we still have two more weeks of this," said Sgt. Oscar Angel of the 1st Battalion (Airborne), 507th Infantry Regiment.

Angel and his family arrived at Fort Benning from Fort Bragg, N.C., last week.

"We just weren't expecting this," Angel said. "The post can only tell us that the moving companies are behind."

Fort Benning transportation has contracts with all 11 moving carriers in the surrounding community, yet goods arriving on post are still backed up several weeks.

"We have 150 shipments arriving on post every day and another 100 families a day trying to move their goods off post," said Linda Kelley, chief of Personal Property for Transportation. "Our employees are working six days a week trying to accommodate all the paperwork alone. We are stretched, and there is only so much this office can do."

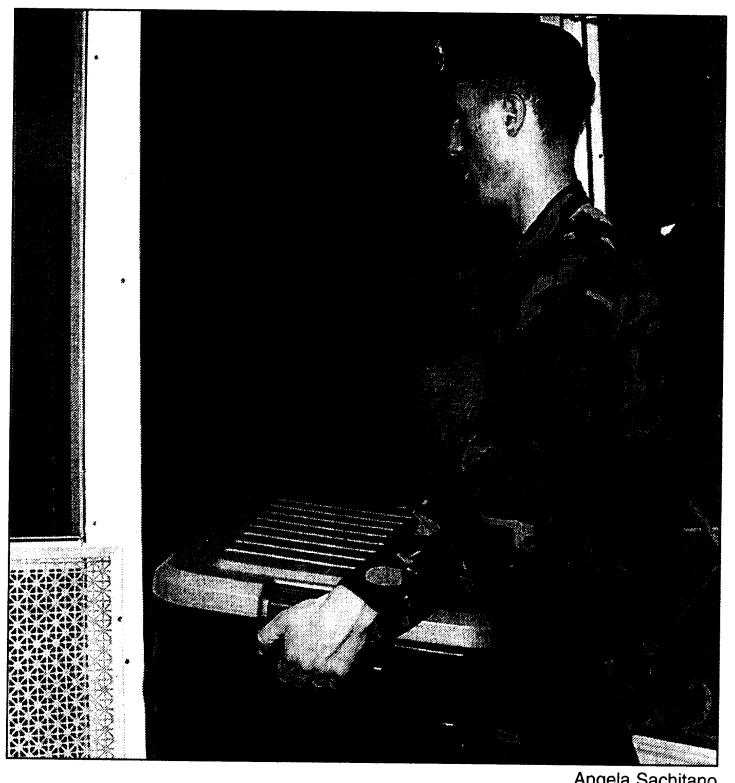
The Army is in its "peak" moving season. During the next several months, thousands of families across the country and oversees will transfer from one post to another.

"Many new soldiers just aren't aware of what the process is when they have the government move their belongings," said Ronald Johnson, chief of Transportation Office. "Housing should be the first stop for soldiers who have orders."

Fort Benning counselors are on hand to prepare families for the entire moving process from pick-up to delivery. Soldiers should be briefed on their moving options, the costs and the wait time to receive their goods at the next post, Kelley said.

"I don't think soldiers take advantage of the counsel sessions as much as they should," Kelley said. "Many are in such a rush, and they want things their way. The best thing families can do is educate themselves on the process."

The process is complicated and the sooner the soldier contacts the housing office the better, Kelley said.



For instance, outbound transportation needs at least 30 days notice to pack and ship goods, Johnson said.

Families who know their delivery address ahead of time may avoid some of the hassle with direct delivery. That's when the same carrier who picks up the belongings also delivers them.

"Soldiers may get their items quicker with direct delivery, but keep in mind the carrier is only required to give a two-hour notice before delivering the goods," Kelley said. "If families aren't reachable, they miss their chance and are put at the bottom of the waiting list."

That's what happens to the majority of Army families

Safety counts

Sgt. William A. Graves

Safe swimmers are smart swimmers, said Emmy Stevens, lifeguard at Carey Pool, pictured here during lap swim Wednesday. "Be careful and watch what you're doing. Carelessness causes accidents," Stevens cautions young and inexperienced swimmers. "Obey the posted swimming establishment rules and listen to everything the lifeguards say because sometimes you may not know if you're doing something wrong."

Expo to offer screening

Health habits, issues will be among topics of discussion

Muscogee County Physicians Foundation

Free health screens and activities for the community and educational sessions for health professionals will be highlights of the third annual Men's Health and Fitness Conference and Expo June 21-22 at the Columbus Convention and Trade Center, 801 Front Ave.

Activities begin June 21 with a conference for health professionals.

Participants may choose from among 10 educational programs related to men's health.

The event concludes June 22 with a free Men's Health and Fitness Expo from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. Activities include health screens for various cancers, HIV and sexually transmitted diseases, diabetes and cholesterol and blood pressure checks.

Other screens include body fat analysis and checks for oral health, bone density and hearing. Information also will be available on nutrition, sleep disorders and depression.

Pharmacists will be on site to discuss medications, proper dosages and drug interactions.

There also will be live entertainment, demonstrations, exhibits, give-aways and free CPR classes.

"Men have unique health-care needs and men's health has become a critical public health concern," said Dr. Michael Gorum, Columbus neurosurgeon and chairman of the event planning committee.

The incidence of stroke is higher among men than women, as are life-threatening depression, AIDS and deaths from heart disease and cancer, he said.

"That's why this expo is so important," Gorum said. "It's an opportunity for men to learn about good health habits and receive free health screens to detect developing health issues before they become serious problems."

Support for the two-day event comes from the business community, local health-care organizations and pharmaceutical companies. The Muscogee County Physicians Foundation and Muscogee County Medical Society are joint sponsors and CB&T is the presenting sponsor.

Other sponsors and screening partners are the Georgia Department of Community Health, the West Central Health District, Three Rivers Area Health Education Center, WTVM-The News Leader, Pfizer U.S. Pharmaceuticals, Pharmacia, GlaxoSmithKline, Columbus Diagnostic Center, the Columbus Health Department, Columbus Regional Healthcare System, Doctors Hospital, Hughston Sports Medicine Hospital, St. Francis Hospital, TAP Pharmaceuticals and the W.C. Bradley Co.

The following documents are required for registration or verification:

Returning Students

Bring an updated shot record and the child's social security card.

Sixth-grade students must show proof of varicella (chicken pox) vaccine or *proof of immunity. Verification of post housing must also be provided.

Students Transferring to Another Fort Benning School

• From McBride to White — Students attending McBride Elementary School and promoted from third to fourth grade will need to verify registration.

• From Fifth to Faith — Students promoted from fifth grade to Faith Middle School's sixth grade will need to verify at Faith Middle School, 1375 Ingersoll Ave.

Transfer Students

Parents must provide school records, verification of housing, military ID and child's social security card. Pre-K, kindergarten and first grade require a legal birth certificate.

A Georgia certificate of immunization is also required when transferring a student..

These certificates are available through Martin Army Community Hospital. Immunization information will be available at time of registration.

Students Entering School for the First Time (Pre-K, or Kindergarten)

Parents must provide a legal birth certificate, verification of housing, military ID, and the child's social security card.

Georgia certificates of immunization and eye, ear, and dental examinations are also required. These are available through Martin Army Community Hospital. Immunization information will be available at registration.

*Proof of immunity includes a physician or health care provider's statement or medical record.

Verification of housing does not need to be an official statement from housing. It may be a copy of a recent bill with printed name and address.

Officers rally, relax at restaurant opening

New club offers food, drink, fun

Angela Sachitano
Special to the Bayonet©

Most soldiers are familiar with the meaning of a rally point.

Rally point is used in military situations and refers to a meeting place for soldiers. That's exactly what supporters of the Fort Benning Officers' Club restaurant, The Rally Point, hope officers will do.

"We reinvented an atmosphere that is relaxed and fun with character," said Col. Joe Torres, garrison commander. "We want this to be our officers' first stop after work or when they want to enjoy music, sports games and good food."

Officers have long wanted a place they could look to for casual drinking and dining, Torres said. The Rally Point has been a part of the Officers' Club for more than 15 years, but renovations began two years ago.

Officers of all ranks, past and present, filled the place to get a close-up look at the finished results June 7.

"This place reminds me of something you'd see downtown," said Maj. Scott Lopez, executive officer of the 2nd Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment. "I look forward to coming here to relax and unwind with my buddies."

With vintage decorations and colorful walls, the theme of the Rally Point resembles popular restaurant chains like TGI Fridays and Bennigans.

"The Officers' Club board members worked long and hard on ideas for the club," said Torres. "They knew what was important to our men and women here."

Just what is important to the officers?

"Better food, a wide selection of appetizers and beer is a good way to start," Torres said.

"Officers don't have to worry about tipping or waiting to be seated either."

That's because officers grab a table or booth with menus already on them. When they order their food at the bar, the bartender gives them a buzzer, and they are notified when their food is ready.

"It's really a great idea," said 1st Lt. Nelson Parrish, training officer of the 2nd Battalion, 29th Infantry. "I wasn't a member here for awhile. I'm excited about the new restaurant so I've become a member again."

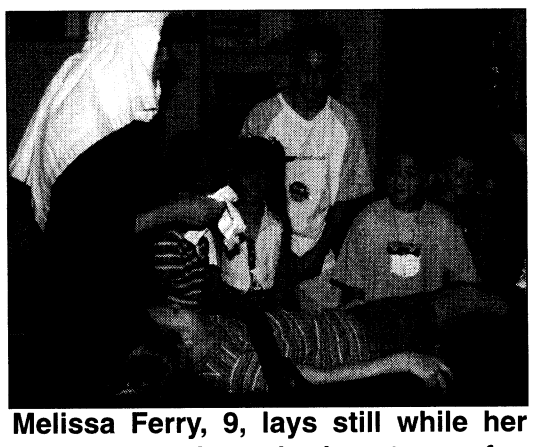
Restaurant organizers hope to draw huge crowds during sporting events as well.

Seventeen televisions, including flat screens and big screens, align the walls of the Rally Point.

"Our IOBC and Captains' Course guys are a big target for us," Torres said. "We hope they enjoy all it has to offer."

Officer families who live on post may also enjoy the broad array of lunch items. Party trays are also available.

"We looked at several ideas when renovating the Rally Point," Torres said. "We juggled the possibility of building a new facility on the golf course, but the board members wanted to keep the tradition here at the original club."



And if all goes as well as opening night, the new Rally Point may be a tradition for many officers for a long time to come.

Vacation Bible School

Autumn Rodriguez, 7, puts a slice of cheese on a snack she is making for the pre-schoolers during her first activity period.

Melissa Ferry, 9, lays still while her class goes through the steps of a burial process done in Jerusalem during Biblical times.

Ryan Crossno, 11, watches as the butterfly he made in arts and crafts goes flying through the air.

Children learn about Jesus

The Catholic Vacation Bible School wraps up today at Dexter Elementary. More than 50 children participated in the week-long festivities, which included arts and crafts, games and singing.

The children learned about many different things in the Bible. Each day they learned a lesson from the Bible, including a demonstration of the burial process of ancient Jerusalem.

Post: Helps families with moves simply because they don't know the home address at their next assignment.

Goods are picked up by one carrier and delivered by another. When the goods arrive at the next assignment, they are immediately put into storage and the family is added to the bottom of a list.

"It's difficult to track where your goods are and what exactly is going on with them," said Korina Acacia, wife of Pfc. Thomas Acacia, 1st Battalion, 30th Infantry Regiment.

The Acacias arrived on Fort Benning in mid- May and were told they would have to wait two weeks to receive their household goods. They finally received their goods a week ago.

"We lived on an air mattress. It was not fun," Acacia said. "We knew we had to be patient."

Patience and understanding will go a long way, but even the Department of Defense has acknowledged Army transportation is in need of major changes.

The DoD is working on a transportation make over to be implemented in 2004.

"The DoD understands the need to give soldiers more control over the moving process," Johnson said. "It won't be long before soldiers start seeing changes."

Some of the changes the DoD is looking at in 2004 include:

"The DoD is looking for the most cost-effective solution."

Ronald Johnson
Chief of Transportation Office

- Guaranteed drop off and pick-up times,
- One carrier from start to finish,
- A Web site for soldiers to keep track of moving status,
- An 800 number with customer service hotlines,
- Claim service within 45 days of reported damage.

Pilot programs are being tested on some posts already with hopes of finding the best solution. Last year, Fort Benning took part in one program that required the post to use an outside vendor as an agent for the moving process.

Although many soldiers said the program worked smoothly, Johnson said the DoD concluded it was not the best financial decision.

"The DoD is looking at the most cost-effective solution," Johnson said. "It's happening slowly, but it is happening."

In the meantime, soldiers may want to consider the self-procurement, formerly known as the DITY or Do It Yourself move. The government guarantees a reimbursement of up to 95 percent of what the family spent to move belongings on their own. Families can choose to rent a moving van or find a carrier on their own.

"Whatever families decide to do, they need to talk with a counselor to make sure they are spending within the government-refund price range," Johnson said.

For those who are waiting for their belongings, one solution is the post Lending Closet, located in Soldier's Plaza. The Lending Closet offers essentials for families until they receive their belongings. Kitchen appliances and dishware, folding tables and chairs, floor mattresses and ironing boards are a few of the items available at no cost.

"The items the post Lending Closet lended us were a lifesaver," Acacia said. "We don't know what we would have done if we had to buy all new items."

And as the DoD works to get the ball rolling on changes, employees at the Fort Benning Housing Office hope families will plan accordingly and be flexible.

"Soldiers are our primary concern," Kelley said. "We need to know immediately any information they have about their move."

Scholarships for Military Children Program announces recipients

Fort Benning teen-ager awarded $1,500

Scholarship Managers

One of the military community's premier benefits has become even more valuable to 520 college and high school students.

The second annual Scholarships for Military Children Program winners have been announced and the "honor roll" is impressive. More than 5,100 students applied for the scholarships at commissary locations worldwide.

Jake Kirkwood of Fort Benning, is a recipient of a $1,500 college scholarship. Fort Benning is one of nearly 280 commissaries operated worldwide by the Defense Commissary Agency. Jake's parents are Maj. John and Nancy Kirkwood. Jake is enrolled, or plans to enroll, at Georgia Institute of Technology.

Jake's school and community activities include: National Honor Society, soccer, Student Computer Hotline, Computer Club and Magnet Club.

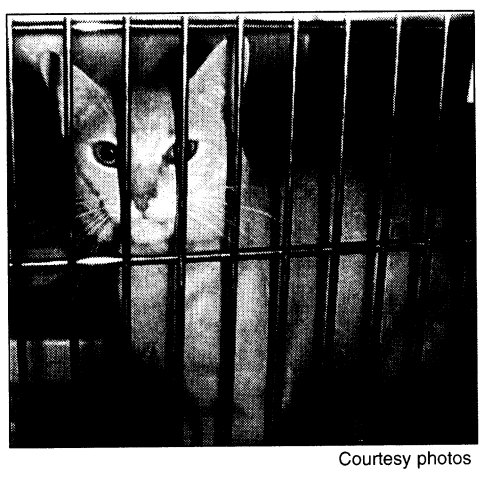
The Scholarships for Military Children Program was initiated in 2000 by DeCA to award scholarships to graduating high school seniors or college-enrolled students. The scholarship program is open to qualified sons and daughters of members of the U.S. Armed and Uniformed Services including active duty, retirees, guard and reserves, as well as children of deceased personnel.

Applicants for the 2002 program were required to maintain a 3.0 grade point average, participate in voluntary school and community activities, demonstrate leadership qualities and write an essay on "How my activities have enriched my community."

Manufacturers and organizations that do business with the commissary system funded the scholarships with money ordinarily used for various other contests and promotions.

Jake's scholarship was funded through the generosity of Kraft Foods, Inc.

The Fisher House Foundation administered the Scholarships for Military Children Program through Scholarship Managers, a professional scholarship management services organization.



Fisher House is known for building the military comfort homes near military medical facilities.

"We couldn't be happier with the positive response to the program, the growth of the program and the caliber of both the applicants and recipients," said Air Force Maj. Gen. Robert J. Courter Jr., Director of the Defense Commissary Agency.

The recipient quality for 2002 was extremely high. "The grade point averages of the winners are in the 3.8 range," said Bernard T. Cote, President of Scholarship Mangers. "But what's particularly impressive is the level of extracurricular and community volunteerism military children display. It reflects a level of maturity not seen in applicants from other scholarship programs."

Father's Day celebrates creator also

Give thanks to the Lord for all he's done

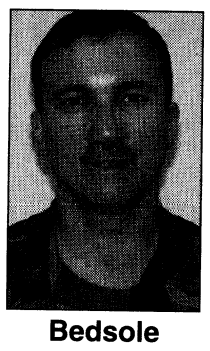
Chaplain (Maj.) Timothy K. Bedsole Sr.
36th Engineer Group

Father's Day is here and it is a time for us to thank our fathers who loved us and cared for us. It is a time for us to reflect on our priorities in life and what we will pass on to a future generation.

This October I had the distinguishing honor of performing a service for an old friend from my first unit, Rob.

His father passed away and the family requested I perform the interment service at Arlington National Cemetery.

I had never met Rob's father so I was a little uncertain about what to say that would comfort the family.



When I read the biographical information on the father I had no problem deciding what to say. Simply put, the message came.

To see the son is to see the father. Jesus said these words in the Gospel of John, "Anyone who has seen me has seen the Father."

Rob's father had served our country from World War II through Vietnam in the U.S. Army. He landed at Normandy, fought in the Battle of the Bulge, and served with Patton's 4th Armored Division. Later, he served in Korea and helped develop the Kevlar body armor.

His other credits of service are too numerous to list here. Suffice it to say he served his country with distinction. He had a distinguish career and had dedicated himself to the betterment of mankind.

REFLECTIONS

Bedsole

My words could not adequately describe the character of Rob's father. But I didn't need words. I had something better. I had the privilege of serving with the son.

For more than two years I served with Rob. I observed his actions in combat as a young armor platoon leader. I saw him struggle with tragedy and with troops.

I watched him agonize over his decision to leave the Army. Through it all I admired his character, his strong faith and the high values he held.

He was an outstanding leader. From the first time I met Rob I felt he was a man of high character with a serving heart.

He was the best at all he did. I did not fully understand where this came from until I read the information about his father.

Then, I understood why Rob had such a strong personality. To see the son is to see the father.

Rob's father instilled in him the values I admired. I never met Rob's father but I saw the results of his work.

He had invested himself in his family. As Rob put it, he did not just teach his young boys to walk, he perched them on top of fences to give them better balance.

He did not just teach his boys to play catch; he taught them to toss eggs back and forth to give them soft hands.

He was a father who passed on his values to his children. I saw the reflection of Rob's father in Rob. To see the son is to see the father.

Now back to the subject of Father's Day. I want to challenge you to take the time to invest in your children's lives.

If you are not a father then take the time to invest in your community's youth. They are our future. It is a wonderful way to paint a picture that someone can view in 50 or 100 years after we are gone and say, "I see his father."

Oh by the way, if you are looking for a good example to follow I want to encourage you to look no further than our heavenly father.

How do you find him? To see the son is the see the father. See you in church.

Marriage better through intimacy

Chaplain (Maj.) Raymond Koop
Family Life Ministries Center

Marriage may be the most risky adventure routinely undertaken by people in our society. Parenting is a close second. Forty-five percent of first time marriages will end in divorce.

Divorce rates in second marriages are even higher. Other marriages appear stable, but may be unsatisfying and miserable.

According to Mike Mason, marriage counselor and author, there is nothing in the world worse than a bad marriage, and at the same time nothing better than a good one (The Mystery of Marriage, Mason, 1985, p. 24).

Koop

Scripture describes marriage as a mystery (Ephesians 5:32). The mystery of marriage is found in the union of husband and wife (Genesis 2:24). In becoming one flesh (Genesis 2:24) a husband and wife create a harmonious synergistic relationship (Matthew 19:6).

Physical intimacy readily comes to mind, yet, there is more. Intellectual intimacy fosters admiration and respect. Emotional intimacy develops caring friendships, heart friends and soul mates. Spiritual intimacy creates harmony, communion and unity in marriage. Volitional intimacy forms commitment, loyalty and trust with our partner.

Don't think that marriage means we lose our identities, or that we become an enmeshed blob. There is no "cookie cutter" mold for how a great marriage should look.

Pairs figure-skating create a visual demonstration of the unity and harmony in marriage. Just like in figure-skating, to have a good marriage you need to work on it.

Would you like to make your marriage better? Free counseling and support are available. Contact the Chaplain Family Life Ministries Center at 2606 Dixie Road, Soldiers' Plaza, 545-1760, or e-mail me at koopr@benning.army.mil.

Families pack bait, head for Russ Pond

Children cast lines, reel in many fish, win prizes

Pfc. Brian Trapp
Bayonet staff

Seventy children and their families spent their first Saturday morning of summer vacation sitting on the banks of Russ Pond at the Youth Services Fishing Rodeo.

The children competed against each other for the most fish caught in the set two-hour time period.

"This is the first year we came out, and it's a great event," said Lisa Judy, who was with her two sons. "It gets parents out with their children, and there aren't many opportunities out there like this for free. It's good to have nice places like this close."

The children all tried to reel in as many fish as they could to win prizes ranging from fishing poles to tackle boxes.

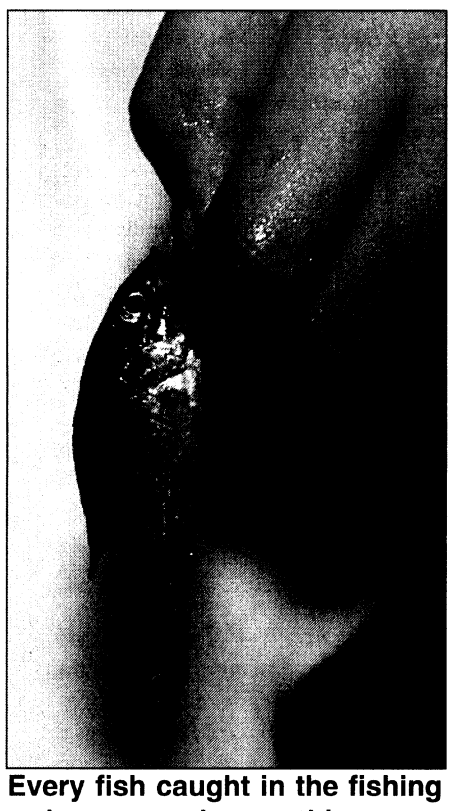
Unfortunately, not all the anglers found their own hot spot in the pond.

"I haven't had one bite all day," said Shelby Urrutia, 12.

Still, the slow morning didn't discourage his overall experience.

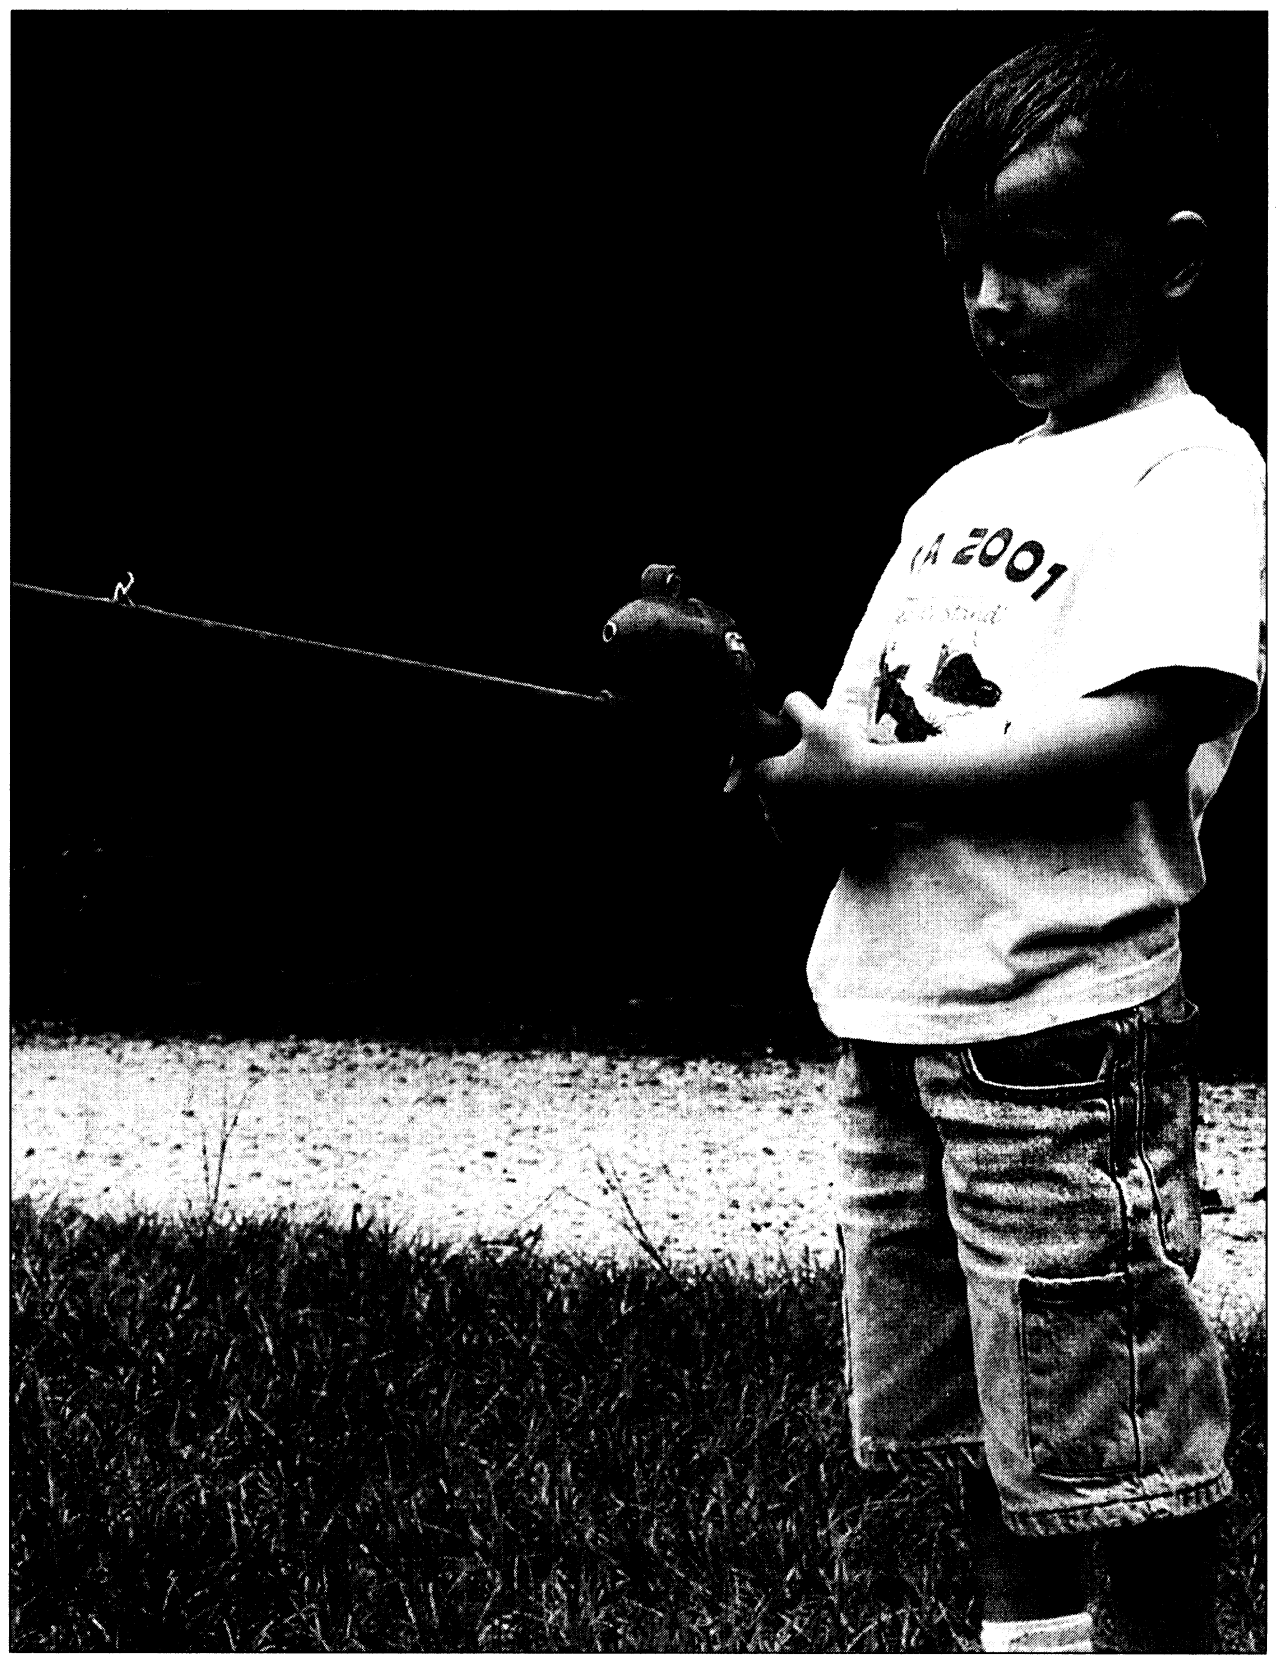
"I like fishing, it's something to do to waste time, and I have a lot of that after school let out."

The fishing competition has more rewards than just prizes, it gets families involved with each other in healthy activity.



"When I was boy, my dad and I fished all over the installation," said Pete Swiderek, chief of Conservation Branch with Directorate of Facilities Engineering and Logistics. "It was a lot of fun, I used to be a real bass slayer. Fishing is a fun and easy outdoor activity for families."

Russ Pond, only for children 15 years old or younger, is stocked with catfish, and the fish are also fed catfish food on a regular basis,



"There should be a lot of fish in there at the medium size range," Swiderek said.

Russ Pond is a quality of life issue for the post, Swiderek said. It provides a nearby family activity.

Russ Pond is not the only place of it's kind on post. Next to the pond is Russ Pool, which is geared to younger children, and the Sand Hill Duck Pond is scheduled to open later this year.

Every fish caught in the fishing rodeo counted, even this one.

Seahorses hold off Roaddawgs

Never-give-up attitude gives team win

Pfc. Chris Stephens
Bayonet staff

Behind a revitalized offense, the Seahorses defeated the Roaddawgs, 12-8, in intramural softball action on Knappenburger Field June 6.

The Headquarters and Headquarters Company Seahorses fell behind in the early innings to the 104th Transportation Company Roaddawgs.

The turning point of the game was when the Seahorses came out in the third inning with three runs and in the fourth inning with two runs, behind the bat of outfielder Michael Bethea.

"We couldn't lose our focus after getting behind early," Bethea said. "We had to just keep working, and we would eventually score some runs."

The Roaddawgs came out in the first two innings and scored 6 runs. By the end of the second inning, the Roaddawgs led the Seahorses, 6-1.

In the third inning, Bethea smacked the daylights out of the ball into the gap in left-center field.

"I knew immediately I would hit all four bases," Bethea said. "I made solid contact to the deepest part of the ballpark."

Bethea led the team going 3 for 4, with a homerun, two doubles, two runs scored and four runs batted in.

The Roaddawgs came back in the bottom of the fourth and scored two runs to make the score 8-6 in their favor.

Pfc. Chris Stephens

Michael Bethea plants swings at a pitch as defenders in the background look to make a play.

In the top of the fifth inning, Donald Tomancky, second baseman, knocked in two with a double to put the Seahorses back on top.

"The fifth inning is what changed it all for us," said TJ Smith, designated hitter. "We didn't make the easy outs, and our communication broke down. By doing that, we took ourselves out of the game."

The Seahorses didn't stop after the fifth inning. A string of five straight hits helped the team produce four runs in the inning. The highlight of the inning was Romancky hitting a bases-clearing triple.

"It felt good to pull away in the end," Romancky said. "We used the fundamentals to win the game."

Romancky ended the game 4 for 4, with a triple, three doubles, two runs scored and three RBIs.

"The key to the game is fundamentals," Smith said. "Without them, your out of luck.

"The important thing though is that we had fun out here. That is why I am out here, and most of these guys are. It really boosts our morale."

43rd joint-pistol competition begins Monday on post

Paula Pagan
USAMU Public Affairs

The U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit will conduct the 43rd annual Interservice Pistol Championship Matches Monday through Thursday at Phillips Range.

The matches are sponsored by the National Guard Marksmanship Training Center of Camp Robinson, Ark., and registered with the National Rifle Association of America.

According to USAMU Chief of Competition Michael J. Behnke, approximately 100 shooters from the Army, Navy, Air Force, Marines and Coast Guard — active, Guard and Reserve — are expected to compete in the championships.

Each shooter will compete in a 900-point aggregate with each service weapon — .22-caliber, .45-caliber, center fire and service pistols — in 27 matches consisting of slow-fire at 50 yards, timed and rapid fire at 25 yards and the National Match Course at both 25 and 50 yards.

The schedule is as follows:

The Army Shooting Adventure Package will be available for competitors and members of the media. The ASAP is a 28-foot-long laser shooting arcade, which allows people to test their shooting skills.

Saturday — .22-Caliber and Center Fire Pistol Warm-Up matches, which are also open to civilians, 9 a.m. to 1 p.m.

Sunday — Fort Benning Rifle and Pistol Club NRA .45-Caliber and Service Pistol Warm-Up matches, which are also open to civilians, 9 a.m. to 1 p.m.; barbecue for team captains, hosted by Country's, at 6 p.m.

Monday — .22-Caliber Interservice Individual Championships, 8 a.m. to 12:30 p.m., and .22-Caliber Interservice Team Championships, 1:30 to 3 p.m.

Tuesday — Center Fire Pistol Interservice Individual Championships, 8 a.m. to 12:30 p.m., Center Fire Interservice Team Championships, 1:30 to 3p.m.

Wednesday — .45-Caliber Interservice Individual Championships, 8 a.m. to 12:30 p.m., and .45-Caliber Interservice Team Championships, 1:30 to 3 p.m.

Thursday — Service Pistol Interservice Individual Championships, 8 a.m. to 12:30 p.m., Service Interservice Team Championships, 1:30 to 3 p.m.

Rifle, pistol shooters remain steadfast during competition

Paula Pagan
USAMU Public Affairs

In six competitive rifle, shotgun and pistol matches in late May and early June, unit sharpshooters brought home a bevy of gold, silver and bronze honors.

In the Georgia State Service Rifle Championships, Cummings, Ga., June 7 to Sunday, USAMU service rifle shooter Sgt. 1st Class Grant L. Singley won the championship, and teammate Sgt. Emil Praslick III took third. Singley also won the Excellence in Competition Match, followed by Praslick in second place.

The USAMU Service Rifle Team, coached by Sgt. 1st Class Charles E. Coffey, won the Georgia championship's Team Match. Team shooters were Singley, Praslick and Staff Sgts. Norman L. Anderson and Lance S. Hopper. The USAMU Team, coached by Sgt. 1st Class Steven C. Young, snared second place in the Team Match. Shooters were Sgt. 1st Class Scott A. Boyd, Pvt. Liana L. Bombardier and Staff Sgts. Kyle A. Ward and Tobie L.

TSC loses bid to contractor

Civilian company takes service

Pfc. Chris Stephens
Bayonet staff

Fort Benning's Training Support Center received word June 14 that a recent Training and Doctrine Command study resulted in Omni Corporation of Ozark, Ala., being chosen to provide audio and visual services on post beginning January 23, 2003.

Omni Corporation's bid of more than $5 million will save Fort Benning $433,555 over a five-year period, according to bid documents.

The decision will affect 19 civilians currently working at TSC. TSC provides training aids and audio visual support to both Fort Benning and the Infantry School.

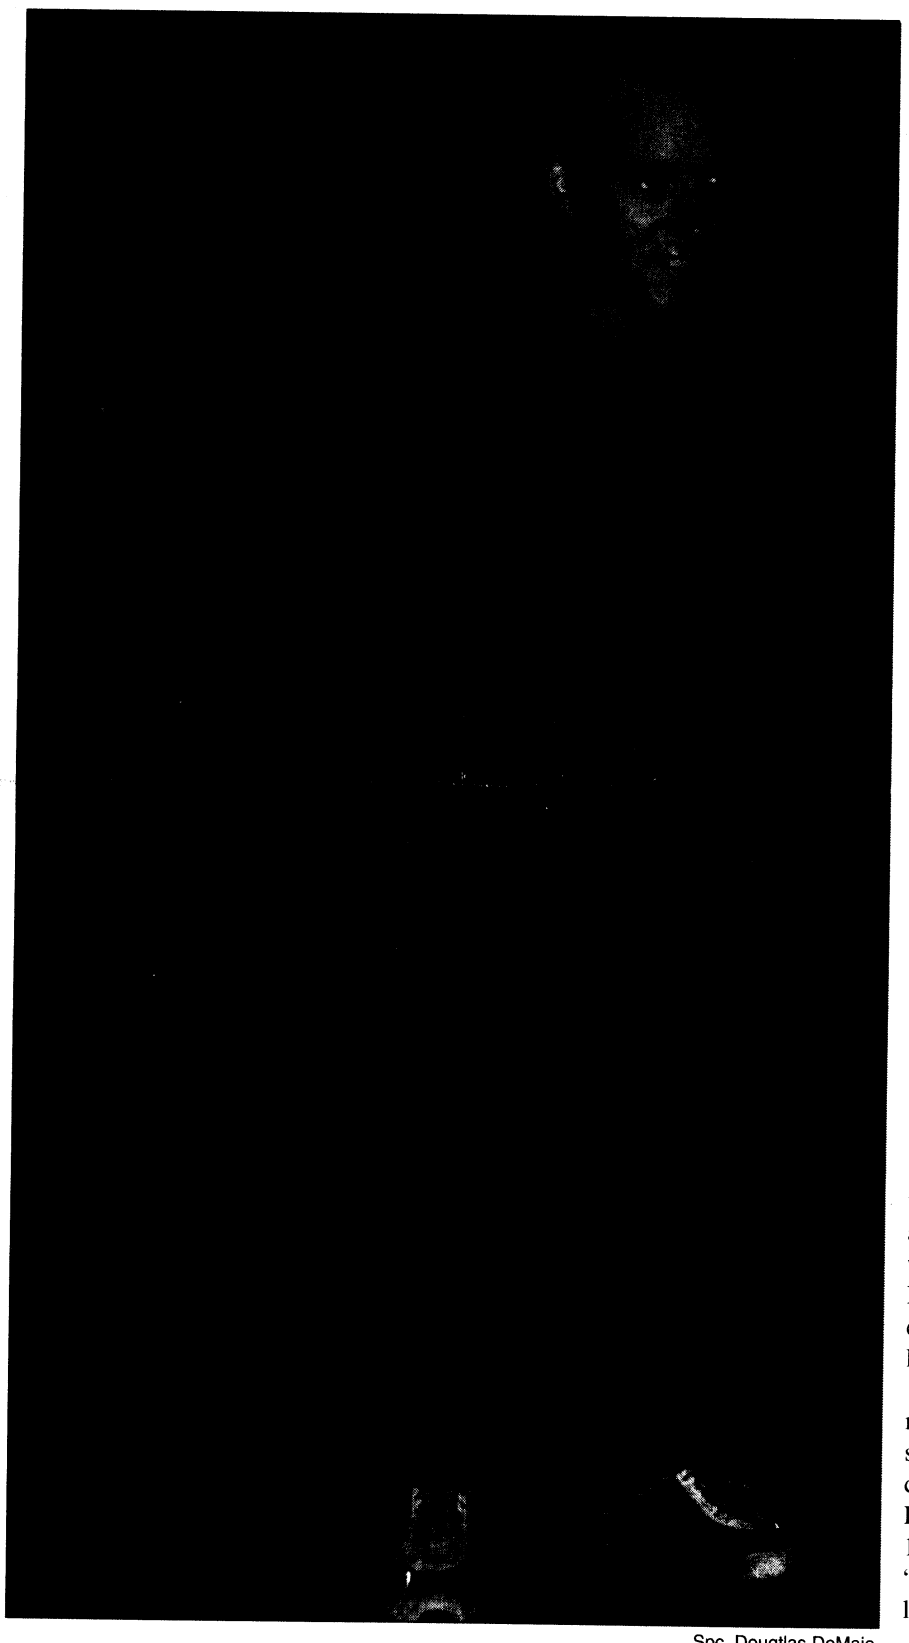
"Our major concern is taking care of our employees," said Col. Joe Torres, garrison commander. "We will provide information and assistance to help them make the right decisions.

"This will have no effect on the operation," Torres said. "It will be a smooth transition."

The TRADOC study was a commercial activities (A-76) study conducted to determine whether those functions should be contracted out to private industry or remain as government operated functions using an in-house workforce.

It is part of an Armywide program determining the most cost-effective methods for providing services on post.

"Employees will be helped in finding another job," Torres said. "The employees are eligible for placement assistance in finding other positions through the Army Career and Alumni Program (ACAP) and for registration in the Department of Defense Priority Placement Program.



"We will also provide the employees information on separation incentives, severance packages, retirement options, job counseling and other transition programs."

Training fits transformation

Calisthenics, drills meet standards

Pvt. Austin Johnson, 2nd Battalion, 19th Infantry Regiment, uses free weights during physical readiness training

With the transformation of the Army to become more agile, versatile, lethal, survivable and sustainable, soldiers are beginning to see some changes.

One of those changes apparent to basic training soldiers is the physical readiness training, which focuses on building strength, agility, speed and coordination through untraditional Army physical training, such as calisthenics, plyometrics, dumbbell drills and movement drills.

"I think it is very appropriate for infantry soldiers," said Col. Tom Hayden, Infantry Training Brigade commander. "The exercises focus on the types of things we expect soldiers to do in the field."

It does a much better job working on the muscles and movements soldiers will use in combat, Hayden said. It focuses on explosive movements and leg oriented workouts.

"It builds the leg muscles, which is useful," said Capt. Ron Anzalone, company commander for D Company, 1st Battalion, 19th Infantry Regiment. "Soldiers carry heavy loads of equipment."

Imagine soldiers deployed in a hostile region sending surveillance robots over their targets instead of sending soldiers in to do the surveillance.

With the help of the Dismounted Battlespace Battle Lab (DBBL), soldiers will soon experiment with this new technology for use in the war on terrorism and other future combat situations.

DBBL is conducting experiments in support of the Micro Air Vehicle Advanced Concept Technology Demonstration. with the MAV ACTD, the lab is attempting to provide soldiers and commanders in the field with a tool that will enhance situational awareness and provide a better understanding of the environment around them. This system, if successful, will increase soldiers' and commanders' situational awareness at battalion levels and below.

"By doing this, not only will it allow the soldiers more situational awareness, but also it will save lives," said Mike Barnes, program manager for DBBL. "The soldiers will have

Fort Benning celebrates Army birthday

Infantry soldiers inducted on special day

Pfc. Brian Trapp

Fort Benning celebrated the Army's 227th birthday with two Infantry Training Brigade company graduations and a cake cutting ceremony at Kanell Field on Sand Hill, June 14.

"This is a great day for the United States," said Command Sgt. Maj. Michael Kelso, U.S. Army Infantry School command sergeant major. "These 227 years have been the foundation of the Army, and the backbone of the Army has always been the infantry."

Kanell Field was a fitting location to celebrate the birth of the Army as the infantry soldiers set out to start their military careers, said Maj. Gen. Paul Eaton, commanding general.

During a battle in Pyongyang, Korea, Pvt. Billie Kanell threw himself on top of a grenade to protect his comrades Sept. 7, 1951. Overcoming fatigue and extensive wounds, he rolled over and shielded them from a second grenade.

This is an example of the indomitable courage and gallant self-sacrifice the Army continues to display today, 227 years after its birth.

Eaton's wish for the graduates was that they follow Kanell's example.

"Go forth, do your best and protect your buddy," Eaton said.

The graduation ended with a cake cutting ceremony, where the commanding general and two of the newest ITB graduates, Pvt. Jose Garcia with 2nd Battalion, 19th Infantry

Local youth inspires creation

School travels to Washington for birthday

WASHINGTON D.C. — Seven-year-old Handley Boyd was made an honorary private in the Army at its 227th birthday celebration, June 14.

Handley, a first-grader at Blanchard Elementary in Columbus, Ga., is responsible for the creation of the 39-by-24 1/2-foot patchwork American flag that flew above the ceremony at the Pentagon.

Handley inspired his mother, Michele Boyd, to pursue the creation of the flag with his reaction to the events of Sept. 11.

"I was looking on TV and I saw them drop the flag on the Pentagon," Handley said. "I got big crocodile tears, and

RESPONSIBILITY

Inherent part of Army values

Lori Egan
Bayonet editor

COMMENTARY

The other day I overheard a couple of soldiers talking about responsibility.

"You have to stay in your lane," one private first class said to another. "You have to get your work done so your squad leader can get his done. Be responsible, man. Don't make him check up on you."

First of all, I liked hearing one junior enlisted soldier telling another soldier to be responsible and to get his work done. This on-the-spot correction means soldiers are looking out for their battle buddies, making sure they're doing the right thing.

Sometimes I hear "old-timers" talking about how things were a lot different when they were in the Army.

Times have changed, but the basics of military life remain the same ...

responsibility for one's actions and responsibility to others — the core of the Army values:

Loyalty, duty, respect, selfless service, honor, integrity and personal courage.

My daughter and a few classmates at Dexter Elementary School built a Web site about the seven Army values. They interviewed classmates, parents, teachers and local heroes: retired Lt. Gen. Hal Moore and retired Col. Bob Nett who received the Medal of Honor during WWII.

When the interviewees talked about the seven values, inherent in each response was personal responsibility — liability for one's own conduct:

• Marty described loyalty as "sticking with something you said you were going to do," which for me means responsibility.

• Jessica said loyalty was "fighting for your country and standing up for what's right." Taking responsibility.

• Beth described duty as "doing your job and fulfilling your obligations."

• Danielle said duty was "doing what's expected of you."

• Gen. Moore described duty as "selfless devotion ... sacrificing the 'me first' attitude and replacing it with a commitment to others — God, country and family." He said duty at work means completing the tasks assigned, and achieving results, not succumbing to distractions.

I understand this as being accountable, another word for responsible.

And so it goes for each of the values ... examples of responsibility.

Vacation vexation redefines family's summer plans

Bridgett Siter
Special to the Bayonet©

COMMENTARY

Vacation — (va ka' shen) n. (root word 'vacate' — to take leave of one's senses) a period of rest, respite from work

Yeah right. You won't find it in Webster's, but I'm certain "vacation" is a generational curse visited upon those of us who weren't smart enough to learn from our parents' mistakes.

My own parents are wonderful, God-fearing folks, who raised their brood of seven to be like-minded — sober, honest, hard-working people. If they had any vices, they kept them to themselves. Except for one.

Every spring Dad would gather us round the kitchen table and plot out plans for a Super-Duper Summer Vacation Supreme. That was then, when a summer vacation was a given. Everyone did it. When you returned to school in the fall, the teacher would assign you an essay — "What I did over my summer vacation" — and she'd expect to read about a real vacation, none of this "I sat around the house and played PacMan."

No sirree. Summer meant long, long road trips, usually in a southerly direction, preferably with an exotic destination. "Grandma's house" would get you a C at best, Disney World an easy A, and a trip out of the country practically guaranteed a scholarship to the college of your choice.

Now Dad could plan vacations to rival Chevy Chase, each year's more exciting than the last. And each year it became more and more a challenge to plan a first-class vacation on a blue-collar salary. Champagne tastes, beer budget.

So we'd pack the tents in the back of the truck, hitch up the little Scotty camper and head south toward the Smokies or Myrtle Beach or Florida. Realizing that half the fun was getting there, we'd stop along the way and set up camp at some cut-rate camp site with a name more befitting a cemetery — something like Peaceful Valley or Trail's End.

We kids would head straight for the swimming pool, such as it was, beat the algae off the surface, dive in and enjoy the beginning of the summer's first ear infections. Mom would begin her vacation back at camp, making dinner for nine over a miniature cook-top in the camper — which, at 100 degrees, was little more than an oven on wheels.

Once, when I was probably 10 or 11 and hadn't yet become completely self-absorbed, I wandered back to camp, curled up on a bunk, and watched Mom cook. She shooed the flies, swatted mosquitoes, fried the chicken and mopped her brow with the finesse of a conductor. I swear I heard an orchestra. And it dawned on me, just then, that vacation wasn't really a vacation for Mom. Just mobile work, without the benefit of air conditioning.

Flash forward 25 years, and here I sit, grilling chicken over an open fire. Swatting mosquitoes. Shooing flies. Listening to my oldest son complain about the heat and my youngest complain about the dead batteries in his Walkman. It's summer vacation.

Staring into the flames that are charbroiling our supper to perfection, though my daughter will say it's burned, I have a revelation. I am my mother. Minus the little Scotty camper with the avocado curtains. And I vow to myself with the passion of Scarlet O'Hare that "God as my witness, I'll never vacation again!" At least not without air conditioning and room service.

So we've redefined the concept of vacation around here. My family, like most, is immersed in the stuff of summer — football practice, swim lessons, church camp and family reunions. That leaves precious little time for vacations as we once knew them. And that's OK by me.

Instead we take advantage of what Fort Benning has to offer — a day at the pool, fishing at Russ Pond, Fourth of July fireworks at York Field, and a weekend or two at an Uchee Creek cabin, with air conditioning, of course, and a front porch swing to while away the hours. Short periods of respite amidst the chaos of summer. Such a novel idea. Mom would be proud.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Soldiers, thank you

I want to thank the young men with the Better Opportunities for Single Soldiers program who came to visit the residents at Franciscan Woods, which is an assisted living facility, for their Memorial Day celebration.

Many of the elderly men who reside there are veterans. My father-in-law is one.

He so proudly tells the story of how at age 40 he saw many other younger men marching off to war. He absolutely could not stand it that he was not "doing something" (which is strongly against his entire character) so he approached the Marines. They would not have him and then he tried another branch. They would not have him and suggested he try the Air Force (Army Air Force then, I believe?). They did accept him and he proudly served, giving 100 percent of himself. Some of his best stories are of the war in which he served.

A group of men, and I wish I could name each of them, but I cannot, came to visit, and they spent much time talking to the elder gentlemen sharing "war stories," speaking as well as listening.

I was so touched because each of these men were so loving and kind and seemed genuinely interested in "Pa" and his buddies.

My husband and I had no idea this was going to occur. This was a Tuesday night, and we always have dinner with Pa on Tuesday night. What a surprise to witness all of this.

Needless to say, Pa was just so very happy. His mind is much like a child's now and to see these men treat Pa the way they did touched my family and me greatly. I just wanted to hug each of them so very tightly. What a wonderful group of men.

I really don't know what to say, but thank you. It was good to see Pa interested in life again. These men were wonderful. I tried to tell them thank you, but I don't think I could possibly relay how thankful I really was. It was also refreshing to see men their age so clean-cut, strong, vibrant, handsome and so very, very respectful and kind. That just does not happen much today.

Congratulations to the commanding officers and men who taught them how to be soldiers and God bless their parents.

Ya done good!

Army: Studies benefits from physical readiness training essential for every unit, said Lt. Col. Bill Rieger, commandant for the U.S. Army Physical Fitness School. It's the foundation inherent in current and future operational environments.

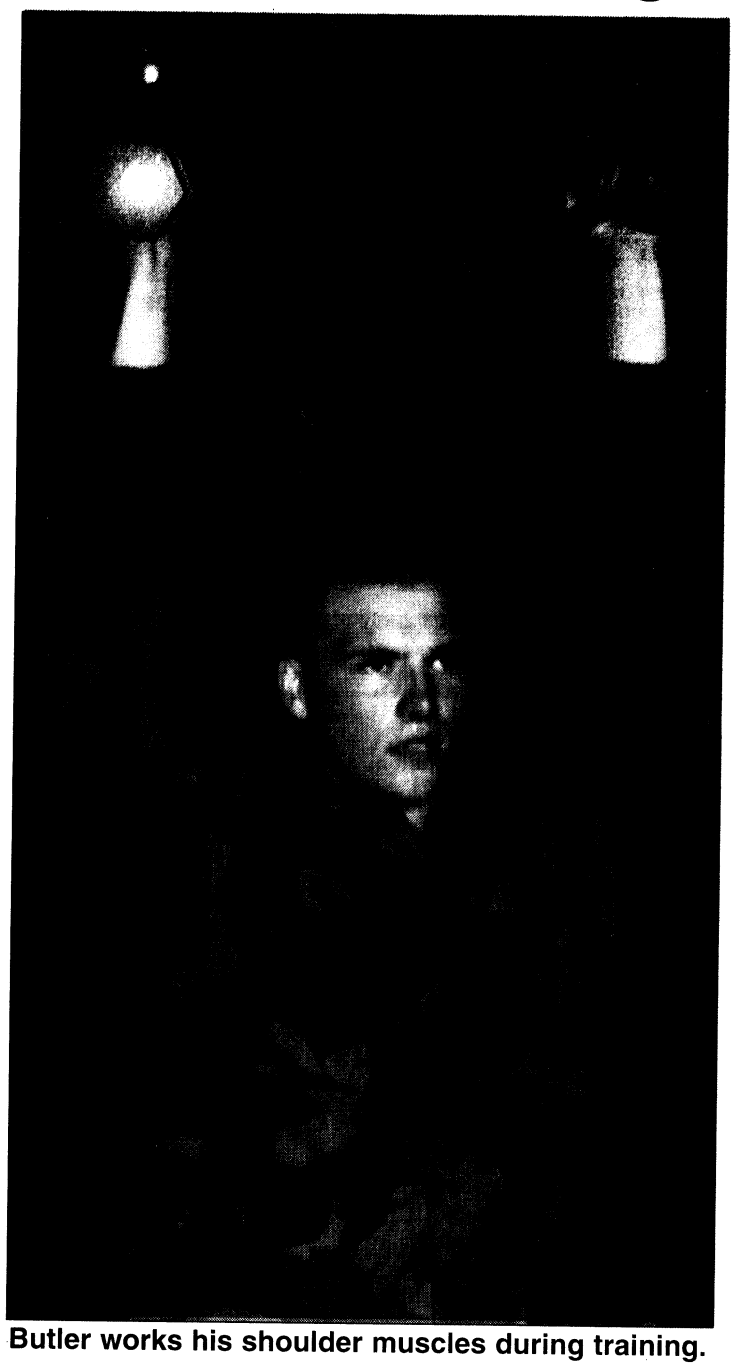
"All Army training is based on the principle of 'train as you fight,'" Rieger said.

With that in mind, training for the Army Physical Fitness Test is also a matter to consider, said Anzalone, who is commanding his troops through their 12th week of basic training and PRT.

"The PRT has a lot of positives to it," Anzalone said. "But there is still a need to incorporate long distance running, pushups and sit ups.

The need to meet the standards of the APFT is important, which is why Anzalone has his soldiers do pushups and situps on a regular basis, he said.



"It's good to have a variety of exercises mixed with the calisthenics," said Pvt. James Cross, 1st Bn. 19th Inf. Regt.

ITB is in the basic test phase of the PRT, Hayden said. In general, the brigade likes it.

"It would be nice if we could extend our PT by at least another half hour," said Pvt. William Carroll, 1st Bn. 19th Inf. Regt. "But we understand there is a training schedule to meet."

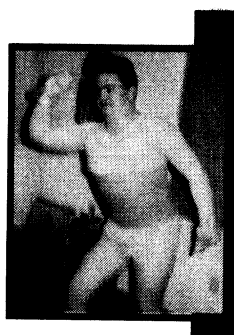
Commanders and soldiers alike, worry about overuse injuries during PT, Rieger said. There are studies that say PRT has more favorable injury and fitness outcomes.

According to a study Rieger received from Fort Jackson, S.C. comparing one basic training battalion, using traditional physical training, against a second basic training battalion, using the PRT, the PRT unit fared better.

Butler works his shoulder muscles during training.

According to the study, the rate of first time successes and final successes were higher on the APFT for the second battalion.

The injury rate for the second battalion was lower than the first, and the APFT scores for both battalions were similar in the two-mile run and situps. The first battalion scored higher on their pushups.



However, the study is just one of many and ITB is collecting data to determine a study of their own, Hayden said.

From the looks of it, the PRT is the physical enhancement program soldiers need to be more, agile, versatile, survivable and sustainable when they meet the enemy on the battlefield, Rieger said.

NCO Academy receives new commandant

Commandant brings new view to NCOA

Pfc. Brian Trapp
Bayonet staff

The new commandant for the Henry Caro Noncommissioned Officer Academy was welcomed May 30. Command Sgt. Maj. Charles Raper returned to Fort Benning for a fourth time, but this is his first assignment in Infantry Hall.

"This is like coming home for me," Raper said. "I've spent 11 years on Fort Benning. This is more of a home than my home town. The majority of my Army friends and family are here."

Raper

Raper now is in a position only 16 other command sergeants major have been.

"It was an honor to be selected for this position," Raper said. "I can make more of a positive impact on sheer number of soldiers that come through here than I could at any other assignment in the Army."

Being commandant isn't much different from what he was doing at 2nd Battalion, 35th Infantry Regiment, Schofield Barracks, Hawaii, he said. Except, instead of enforcing the commander's policies, he'll put out his own.

"It's been a lot of fun here," Raper said. "This is a big learning experience — coming from being the sergeant major of a field unit to the school house. I'm going from training an infantry unit, to training people from all over the world."

Raper has experience serving as commandant of the Ranger Indoctrination Program, and as an instructor for Ranger School, the Joint Readiness Training Center and Platoon Confidence Training Center.

"He has a wealth of knowledge and experience to offer the academy," said Command Sgt. Maj. Michael Kelso, command sergeant major of U.S. Army Infantry School, who has known Raper for more than 20 years.

Raper has served the Army for 27 years, seven of those as a command sergeant major.

Raper's years in the Army have taken him across the globe. He even had the opportunity to ski in the foothills of the Alps while stationed in Germany.

"When we were with Army Special Operations in Europe together, I found out he couldn't ski to save his life, but we had some great adventures in Munich," Kelso said.

Throughout his 27 years of duty assignments, Raper enjoyed them all.

"I've never been any place in the Army I didn't like," Raper said. "It's a matter of attitude. You can always find a bright spot where you are. If you focus on the positive, rather than dwelling on the negative, it will help you be successful."

Self described as, "hard but fair, with absolute adherence to the standards," Raper is serious about remaining tactically and technically proficient.

"He is a no nonsense noncommissioned officer, and he looks out for the welfare of his soldiers," Kelso said. "He will be a great commandant to the NCO Academy."

Popular restaurants on the table

Residents ready for new choices

Angela Sachitano
Special to the Bayonet©

It's lunchtime, everyone's favorite part of the day besides quitting time.

The clock starts ticking with only an hour to find a place to relax and grab some good grub.

But every place is packed with people. Lines are 15-20 minutes long. The food is the same-old boring sandwiches and pizza.

Sound all too familiar?

"We know there is a need out there for sit-down restaurants," said Al Gelineau, acting director of community activities. "And there is an interest from the restaurant industry to build here on post as well."

It's only a matter of time before some well known restaurants are right around the corner, Gelineau said.

Fort Benning has been working with the Department of Army Community Family Support Center in Washington to bring a popular steakhouse and a family sit-down restaurant to Fort Benning within the next year.

"The process is a very detailed one," Gelineau said. "We must get everything approved through Washington."

The concept of bringing popular chain restaurants on military installations has been in the works for several years, but in the past few months the Department of Army has really buckled down on the details, Gelineau said.

"Fort Benning may be one of the first installations to see the idea take off," Gelineau said. "Right now, DCA is working on proposals to present to various restaurant chains around the community."

Interested vendors will have 30 days to submit a request and then the process to build begins, Gelineau said.

"We're targeting successful restaurant chains that are already popular with our soldiers," Gelineau said. "We want to change the stereotypes of what eating on post is like."

Some ideas that have been thrown around are Golden Corral, TGI Friday's and one of the popular steakhouse chains. But Gelineau said nothing is even close to being confirmed yet.

With close to 80,000 people on Fort Benning on any given day, there is potential for restaurants to make big money on post, Gelineau said.

Soldiers and civilians agree.

"It's so frustrating. I've been working on post for two years and heading to the same one or two fast food places on post for lunch every day," said John Passailigue, a Fort Benning helicopter maintenance employee for Lockheed Martin. "Everyone I know says the same thing. We just don't have the time to drive off post in the 45 minutes or so we have for lunch."

Now that Bradley's Restaurant is strictly pizza and subs, soldiers and civilians have even fewer choices.

Reggie's is also being renovated. The restaurant will eventually be an evening sports pub, and will not open for lunch starting July 1.

"We are looking at putting a chain restaurant next to Reggie's within the next few months," Gelineau said. "One restaurant in particular has shown significant interest in the location. We are waiting to get the final approval before we announce the name."

In the meantime, officers will be able to dine at the new Rally Point, located inside of the Officer's Club, but other soldiers and civilians will have to look elsewhere for a restaurant style, sit down environment.

"Everyone is going to have to be patient as we go through these changes," Gelineau said. "We are determined to make this happen."

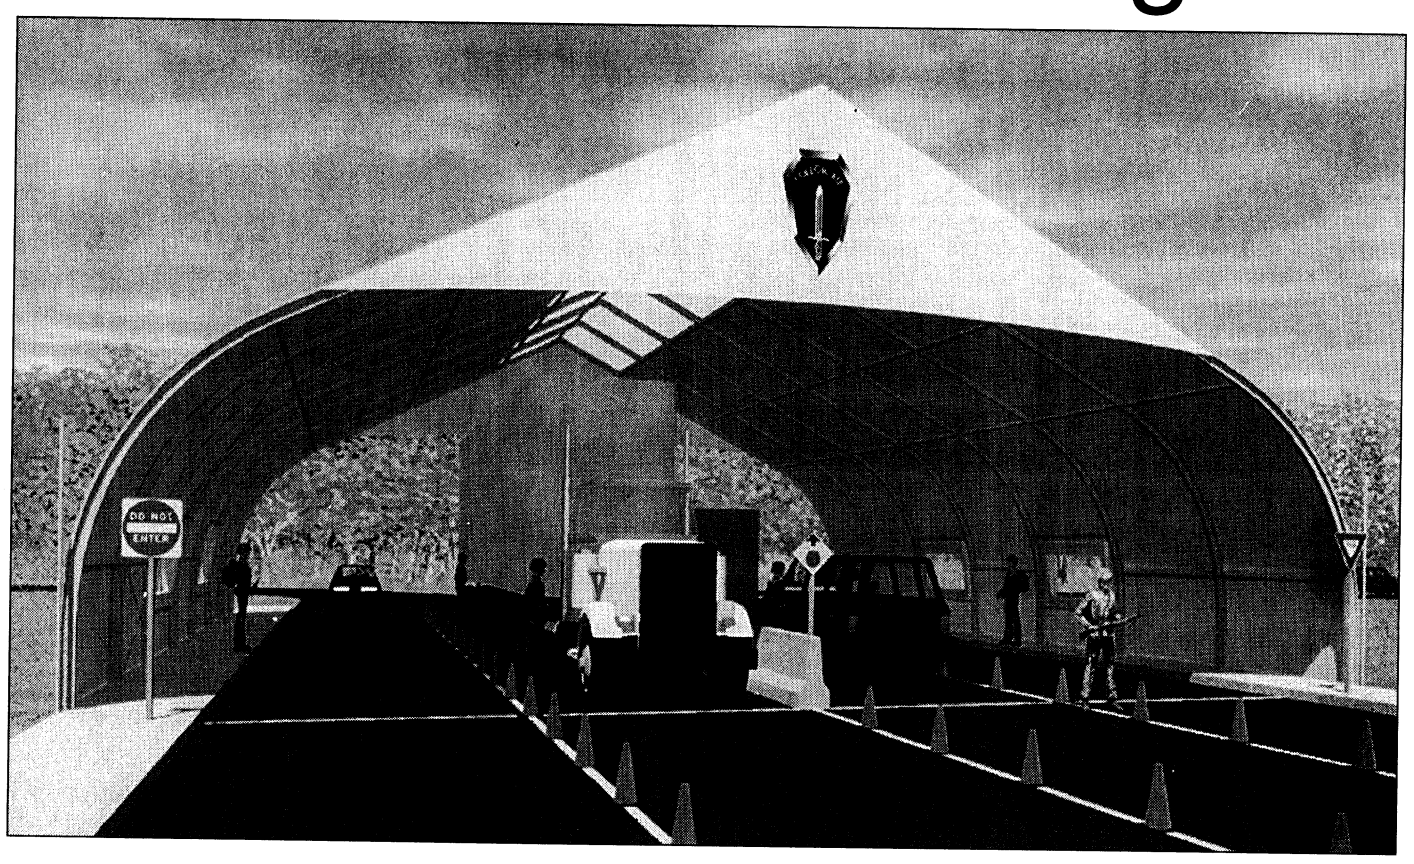
Drivers beware: construction closes gates

Fort Benning officials have announced changes to the tentative construction schedule, which are:

■ Benning Boulevard inbound closed today through approximately June 28. South Lumpkin access point will be open 24 hours a day to alleviate impact. Outbound Benning Boulevard will not be affected.

■ Custer Road is closed to all inbound and outbound traffic, alternate routes will be Interstate 185 and South Lumpkin Road.

The reasons for closings is construction on the roadway and overhead shelter emplacements. (see picture)



During construction of the sprung shelters, lanes will be closed. To alleviate the impact, motorists should be aware of the following:

■ The Sand Hill access point has moved from 11th Airborne Road to the next access road, 2nd Division Road.

■ 1st Division Road will change to 8th Division Road (will be open Monday through Friday from 5 to 9 a.m. and from 3 to 7 p.m.) on both sides of Hwy. 27.

■ The Eddy Bridge and Sightseeing Road will be rerouted through 82nd Airborne Road around Lawson Army Airfield. Physical training will not be authorized on this road until further notice.

■ All Uchee Creek and 165 traffic must take Dixie Road or Indianhead Road to 82nd Airborne.

Shelters similar to this will be built at all Fort Benning access control points.

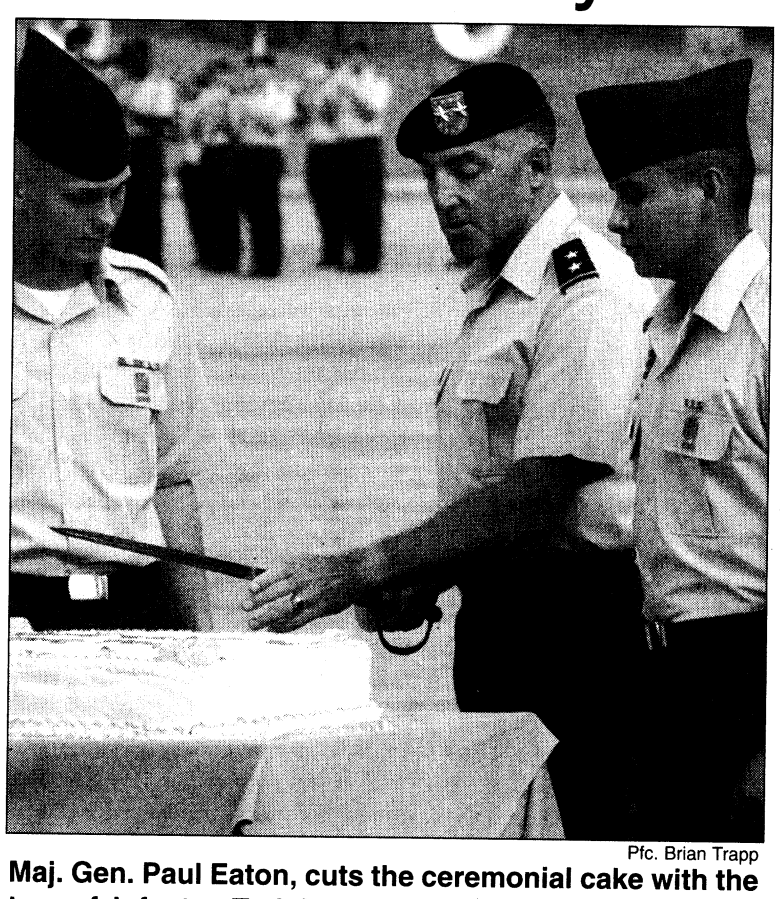
Regiment, and Pvt. Justin Nellums with 2nd Battalion, 58th Infantry Regiment, cut the Army's birthday cake with a saber.

"It was an honor to be able to cut the cake with the general, but I was really nervous that I would do something wrong," Garcia said. "I just feel great that I graduated. Now, I get to serve my country while I travel around the world."

The soldiers seemed to stand taller as they marched off the graduation field to begin their contributions to the Army's heritage.



The young men's predecessors helped make some pivotal changes over the years, Kelso said. With the help of the new infantrymen, the Army may continue to advance through transformation toward the future.

"The Army has changed a lot since I was in during the late 60s," said Roger Nelson, Army veteran, who came to the ceremony to watch his son graduate.

Even small changes have improved the quality of life for soldiers.

"From what I have seen, they have made great strides forward, in the facilities, uniforms, equipment, and food," Nelson said. "I remember they used to have this field rations they called lima beans and ham, but it was actually just beans floating in fat. Things are a lot better now."

Regardless of technological changes, the Army still keeps the same values its had for the past 227 years, Nelson said.

said, 'I want to do that some day.'"

The flag is composed of 12-by-14-inch squares, designed by the students with their memories, messages of support, and pictures of Sept. 11.

About 270 faculty, students and family members of Blanchard attended the ceremony, as well as Congressman Mac Collins of Georgia.

The ceremony included remarks from Sgt. Maj. of the Army Jack L. Tilley and Army Chief of Staff Gen. Eric K. Shinseki. Both remarked not only on the birthday celebration, but also thanked the Blanchard students for their contribution.

"They are here to share with us this wonderful gift and symbol of their patriotism. The magnificent flag hanging behind me — its great proportions exceeded only by the care and love that went into making it," Shinseki said.

"Thank you for this demonstration of sympathy for the suffering we all experienced on Sept. 11 and for this symbol of strength and resolve to help overcome our pain."

Handley, Secretary of the Army Thomas E. White and 20-year-old Pfc. Rafael Lozano, the youngest soldier in attendance, joined Tilley and Shinseki in cutting the cake with a cavalry-style saber.

"It was an honor to be up there. I never imagined myself being up there with secretary of the Army, the sergeant major of the Army, and the chief of Staff," Lozano said.

MAV: To help infantry

a better perception of what they are going into."

The MAVs being produced in the ACTD will be developed in a spiral-development process. These platforms will use ducted fan technology, have a vertical take off and landing capability and will transition from vertical to horizontal flight, similar to a fixed wing platform.

The platforms developed first in the process will be demonstrated in December of this year at Fort Benning. These first platforms will be the electric MAV or E-MAV. The next vehicles in the spiral development process are the diesel or D-MAV, which will follow in fiscal 2004 and the objective or O-MAV — a diesel/electric hybrid — in fiscal 2005.

These initial experiments are designed to identify the issues surrounding the use of MAV by dismounted soldiers involved in close fights.

"The MAV takes video of an objective and sends it back to a small monitor so soldiers in the field can see what they are up against and what the area looks like," Barnes said. "Right now, in some cases, soldiers are being sent in to conduct area surveillance, which may expose them to the enemy. By using the MAV to conduct surveillance, we are reducing the risk to soldiers."

The DBBL is currently conducting experimentation to determine what types of cameras and sensors could provide the most capability for the MAV.

"We are looking at cameras and sensors with different fields of view, different resolutions, and different sensing techniques to determine which systems or combinations of systems provide the most value," Barnes said. "Throughout the experimentation process, we will be collecting data to help identify the characteristics, capabilities and limitations of the cameras, sensors and MAV itself.

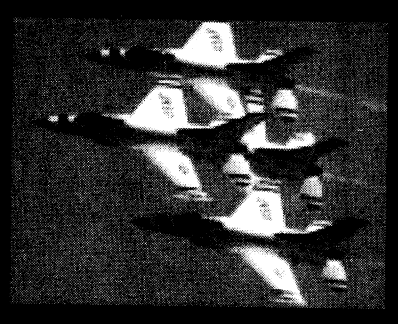
"Basically, we are just doing our homework to insure that we understand all the issues surrounding the use of cameras and sensors on a MAV. We are trying to see which one provides soldiers in the field the most usable information. The total weight for the MAV air vehicle will be approximately five pounds, so camera/sensor selections will be critical. We want to ensure that the MAV is capable of providing the best surveillance."

The results of the camera experimentation will help the program manager and the makers of the MAV develop a system with a camera or sensor that can be used effectively by soldiers and commanders in the field. As each of the three types of MAVs are developed, DBBL will conduct experimentation using soldier operators during training. All of the information collected will support modeling and simulation efforts and the requirements determined through the Directorate of Combat Developments.

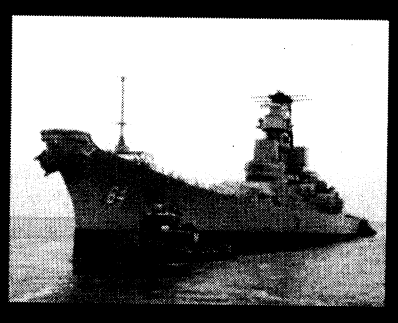
"The soldiers conducting operations in the field know what they need to accomplish the mission," said Mike Kennedy, DBBL project officer. "We will put the MAV in their hands, and they will use it during missions. Then, they will be able to tell us what worked and what didn't work. The data collected and soldier feedback will be incorporated to make the design of the MAV better."

One of the new concepts being looked at is a "perch and stare" capability. This capability will help the MAV stay in the target area and conduct its mission without having to fly or hover, making it an energy saving measure.

"We will be able to land a MAV on top of a building, ridge or other area, turn the engine power off, but leave the sensors on," Barnes said. "This way we can still view what is going on, while reducing power consumption. The ability to perch and stare will extend mission duration considerably."



The soldiers participating in the experiments will gain valuable experience in using the MAV and when the program is over, some of the MAVs will stay with the units for training and other purposes.



"In the final phase of this ACTD, we will leave a residual package with the user, which, in this case, is the 25th Infantry Division in Hawaii," Barnes said. "These platforms will be theirs and they will be able to use them in the most efficient way because throughout the process of experimentation they have gained experience. Their work will help develop doctrine and tactics, techniques and procedures that will affect the rest of the Army using small unmanned air vehicles."

PLDC tackles land navigation course

Soldiers' skills evaluated as future leaders

Pfc. Brian Trapp

A key element to fighting a war against terrorism is leadership and the ability to maneuver through unfamiliar territory. Soldiers of the Primary Leadership Development Course were practicing these skills as they were tested on their land navigation Tuesday at Wendy Range.

"Land navigation is an important skill for a leader, especially on the battlefield," said Staff Sgt. Ron Fredrick, PLDC instructor. "The soldiers will be able to read a map to find where they are, where they're going and able to call in coordinates for fire support."

Not all soldiers come to PLDC prepared to complete all of the tasks in the land navigation portion, but they come up to standard with the help of the instructors, he said.

"A lot of soldiers come here without prior training in land navigation," said Sgt. 1st Class Marian McClain, range NCOIC. "The small group leaders have to work from zero in a short amount of time to bring them up to standard."

The soldiers are trained in many aspects of land navigation and map reading, such as plotting grids, shooting an azimuth, taking pace counts and studying terrain features.

The objective for the day was to have all the soldiers find three out of four points in less than three hours to receive a "go," McClain said.

Spc. Robert Kimbro was the first soldier to complete the course. He took a little more than an hour to correctly identify all four points.

"The instructors taught us well," Kimbro said. "This was the most physically demanding and the most fun thing we've done so far."

Coming in first was proof of his accomplishment of learning the skills needed in the field, he said.

"I've been in the Army for nine years, and this is the first time I've done land navigation training like this," Kimbro said. "As a leader, I will make sure my soldiers know this information."

During the test, Sgt. Jonathan Ellingson used the NCO ideals of be, know and do to finish in second place.

"Part of being a leader is knowing where you are and where you're going," Ellingson said. "Confidence in my skills and where I was going helped me complete the course quickly and accurately."

KOREA — THE FORGOTTEN WAR REMEMBERED

Jim Caldwell
TRADOC News Service

WASHINGTON — In hopes of bringing the Reds back to the truce table, the U.S. launched massive air raids against previously banned targets in the north, 50 years ago this week in Korea.

June 20, 1952 — Medals of Honor are presented posthumously to eight Marines. They raise the total of Marines who have earned the Medal of Honor in Korea to 74.

The Defense Department reports that the numbers of American casualties in Korea have reached 110,611. That includes 19,400 dead.

June 20-26 — The 179th Infantry Regiment soldiers, 45th Infantry Division, are in positions on Porkchop Hill, Outpost Eerie and Old Baldy, so-called because artillery from both sides has stripped the crest of all vegetation.

Since relieving their sister battalion, the 180th, June 16, 179th soldiers have fought off platoon- through battalion-level Chinese attacks.

The Chinese are now trying to use tunnel warfare to catch U.N. troops unaware. Soldiers of the 45th ID have blown up some tunnel entrances and opened other tunnels.

The Chinese who want to surrender are taken prisoner.

Chinese prisoners taken in this area will later tell interrogators of officers who shot men who tried to dig their way out of collapsed tunnels to surrender to the Americans.

On June 26, the 179th changes from defense to offense. Regiment Commander Lt. Col. Joseph C. Sandlin decides to take out a Chinese position about 1,000 yards away from Old Baldy's crest. The enemy is in a strong position to threaten American troops on Old Baldy and Porkchop Hill.

Early in the morning, soldiers evacuate Old Baldy while eight Air Force tactical fighters bomb, rocket and strafe the enemy. When they're finished, 179th artillery and mortars give the communists a heavy passing.

After the artillery lifts, a 179th reinforced company attacks from the left. A 180th company attached to the 179th and supported by a tank goes at the Chinese from the right.

Despite the tank, heavy small arms and automatic weapons fire keep the two units from advancing for about an hour. Then the Chinese suddenly withdraw. The GIs fill in the vacated positions, and come under a heavy artillery barrage.

As soon as the shelling lifts, the Reds rush back into the trenches and the Americans fight them hand-to-hand. They drive the enemy back over the hill where the positions had been dug in, but cannot pursue them. When they start over the crest, withering machine gun fire stops them.

The 179th sends another company to join the fight, and its soldiers try to flank the Chinese on the right. Again, effective fire from the enemy stops them.

Two American tanks join the fight by trying to crest the hill. One turns over and the other throws a track. But before the tanks are out of it, they hit the Chinese and cause them critical damage.

It's enough for two platoons to chase the enemy out of their positions.

When dark comes troops are trying to dig in and survive heavy shelling on Old Baldy and other posts. There is no counterattack during the night.

June 23-26 — On June 23, several Fifth Air Force F-86 squadrons fly cover for Navy planes as 35 Skyraiders and 35 Phantom jets attack the Suiho power-generating dam on the western part of the Yalu River. When Navy pilots exhaust their ordnance, 79 Air Force F-84 Thunderjets and 45 F-90 Shooting Stars hit the dam.

There are more than 200 MiG fighters on airfields in Manchuria, but the pilots stay on the ground. One does take off but flies away in the opposite direction.

B-29 Superfortresses and other combat aircraft hit two power generating plants at the Chanjin Reservoir and two others at the Pujon Reservoir in the east above the seaport of Hungnam.

On June 24 and June 26, U.S. aircraft pound the reservoir sites again, but do not return to Suiho. On June 25, Air Force aircraft drop 250 tons of bombs on troop concentrations on enemy front lines.

Pilots said the Suiho dam was 70 to 90 percent destroyed and the Pujon plants were wiped out.

This begins a two-week blackout in North Korea.

From the beginning of the war, the Air Force wanted to hit the power plants on the Yalu, but U.S. leaders forbid it because they didn't want to bring the Chinese into the fight. Even after the Chinese entered the war, the policy stayed in effect.

Gen. Matthew B. Ridgway, as U.N. supreme commander, vetoed requests to add them to the target list. Reportedly he wanted to wait until the enemy dragged their feet in the truce talks and then the power stations could be hit to motivate them to get serious about making progress at the truce table.

After Gen. Mark Clark became the U.N. supreme commander, he immediately saw the power plants as legitimate targets. So when Lt. Gen. O.P. Weyland, Far East Air Force commander, proposed to attack them, Clark agreed. The joint chiefs of Staff also agreed and President Harry S. Truman gave his permission.

The only restrictions were to hit the Yalu River dams on the North Korean side of the river and pilots must not stray into Manchurian air space.

The attacks create an uproar in Great Britain. Labor leaders in Parliament denounce the raids June 24 as possible sparks for World War III.

Prime Minister Winston Churchill admits that he wasn't consulted before the attacks but they presented "no change" in the British-U.S. war policy.

June 25 — Weyland says that the bombing raids are "a gentle hint of more to come if the commies want it that way."

Clark makes a speech on the second anniversary of the war's beginning. He says the United Nations is prepared for "the bitter, bloody fighting of 1950 and 1951" if the Reds want to begin another offensive.

In Moscow, the Tass news agency rages, "American air pirates have started the massive bombing of peaceful towns which have not military objectives."

At Panmunjom, North Korean Lt. Gen. Nam Il warns the U.N. negotiators against taking a "dangerous step" to try to make the communists abandon their "reasonable and unshakable" truce demands.

Americans on the home front aren't affected by the international furor. They think that if it will end the war center, the power-generating plants should be wiped out.

Communist guerrillas blow up a train in southwest South Korea. An American soldier is among the 46 people killed. The communists take 80 passengers as prisoners.

Infantry Magazine hits Web

Internet site offers soldiers faster, convenient access

Pfc. Chris Stephens
Bayonet staff

Infantry Magazine is now online for everyone's viewing pleasure.

The magazine was put online to increase the audience, expand the readership and expose more soldiers to infantry issues.

"This is going to benefit any soldier who reads our magazine," said Russ Eno, Infantry Magazine editor. "Now soldiers can get the articles written in the magazine earlier online than in print."

The reason is it takes longer to print and distribute than it does to put it on the Web site, he said.

"With either the print form or the online form, it will still not cost a dime for a subscription to the magazine," Eno said. "It was something that was needed badly for the infantry.

"It's a good resource just a click away," said Capt. Geoff Fuller, aide-de-camp. "As long as you have a computer, you can be updated on what is going on with the infantry.

"Plus, the stories written pertain to someone else's experience in a less than normal situation, and that will help you if you're ever in the same situation."

The online magazine is getting an enormous response.

"Just from the magazine being online we've gotten more response to our magazine," Eno said. It has broadened our readership.

"More and more soldiers are seeing it online, and are asking for a printed subscription. So the online version is doing great works for the printed version, too."

Wardog night!

Team shows appreciation to soldiers

The Columbus Wardogs put on a show for members of the 29th Infantry Regiment at the Columbus Arena during the Regiment's Appreciation Night Saturday..

Despite the Wardogs 50-31 loss to the Birmingham Steeldogs, there were numerous soldier-intensive activities that seemed to keep fans happy, like a:

- Pre-game football tournament,
- Rappelling demonstration by two soldiers from the arena's rafters,
- Reenlistment,
- Awards presentation,
- Remote-control car race.

For more information on the Wardogs, call 653-7789, or (888) 332-5200 for tickets.

Program teaches way to find job

Service offers free advice to job seekers

Janet Hathoway
Bayonet correspondent

"So, tell me about yourself." This simple question can bring a job interview to a dead halt before it begins, said Mark Mills, Employment Readiness Program Manager at Army Community Service. One verbal misstep can lead a job hunter into a minefield.

"This is not the time to tell your prospective employer that you are married with three kids. It is your best shot at telling your future boss how your best skills will benefit his company," Mills said.

The next most common question that will cause sudden death in an interview is, "What do you know about our company?" Mills said. This question will leave those who are ill prepared looking like a deer caught in the headlights. Research the company before the interview to familiarize yourself with the company's mission, products and focus. The more informed you are about the business, the better your chances at landing the job.

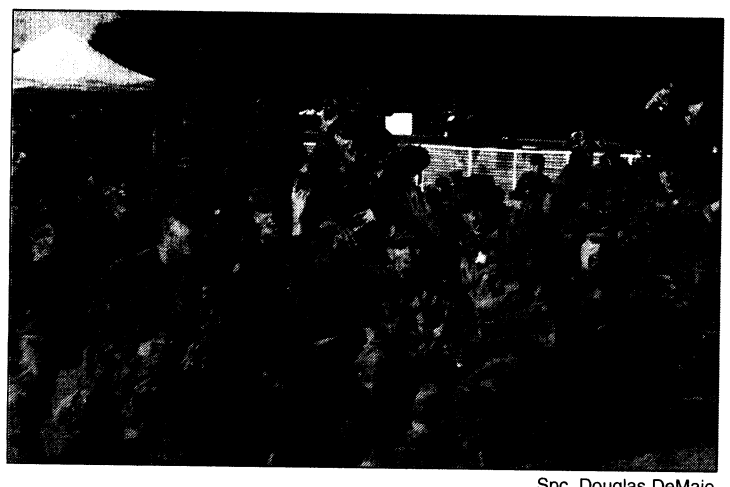
"You have to know the details about the company to which you are applying. You need to be able to show the interviewer you are sincere in your desire to work for the company," Mills said.

To go to an interview uninformed about the company, forfeits the job, he said.

These common mistakes are made during interviews every day in Columbus, but there is no reason for a Fort Benning family member to make these mistakes, Mills said. The Employment Readiness Program at ACS focuses on preparing family members for success in the civilian job market. Mills' mission is to teach the Job Strategy Workshop. This workshop is aimed at preparing family members to overcome the mistakes commonly made in resume writing, dressing for success, interviewing and landing that perfect job.

Since Oct. 1, 2001, he has helped 661 family members find jobs in Columbus and the surrounding area, hosted two job fairs that included 163 companies from 11 states and assisted thousands of clients in their quest for career satisfaction. And in his spare time, he produces a weekly job vacancy list which includes Columbus and the surrounding area.

How do job seekers know if resumes are working for them?



"If you have sent out twenty resumes and have not been called for an interview, that is an indication that your resume needs to be revamped," Mills said.

You may know you are highly qualified, but if your resume doesn't highlight your skills and abilities then the employer will never know.

"The purpose of the resume is to get you selected for the interview — to get your foot in the door," Mills said, "The call for an interview is confirmation that you are qualified. Once you are there you must sell your qualifications based on how they apply to your prospective employer."

The best resumes are concise and well organized. Be specific about skills, education and experience, but do not reword the same skills repeatedly. Resumes should reflect required skills rather than Soldiers anticipate the concert at Weatherby Field.

Basic training soldiers alleviate stress

Concert provides fun for soldiers

Basic training soldiers felt as though they were having a "Cheeseburger in Paradise" Saturday night, when they were given an evening to relax and listen to live music at Weatherby Field.

This is one way to tell soldiers the Army is thinking about them and their welfare, said Sgt. 1st Class Paul Levasseur, drill sergeant for C Company, 1st Battalion, 19th Infantry Regiment. Music is a great way to alleviate stress.

"After eight weeks of training on Sand Hill, it's a relief to listen to some music and forget about the world," said Spc. Gregg Cambareri, 1st Bn., 19th Inf. Regt. "This concert is a new experience for us. It gives us a chance to see some new faces and talk to one another about things other than field manuals and training."

The concert is good for soldiers to see other soldiers, said Col. Tom Hayden, Infantry Training Brigade commander. Furthermore, it beats paying $40 or $50 to see a concert in Atlanta, Ga.

Acres, a radio-friendly rock n' roll band from Atlanta, played more than two hours for the ITB and Basic Combat Training Brigade soldiers.

"It is an honor for us to be here," said Jen Lowe, Acres percussionist. "I think music all around is a good morale builder.

"Hopefully, they forgot about their day and enjoyed the music."

Something else the soldiers had an opportunity to forget was the chow hall food, Levasseur said.

At the concert, organized by Morale, Welfare and Recreation — Directorate of Community Activities, soldiers were able to eat pizza and drink soda they aren't usually allowed to consume during basic training.

The event took an incredible amount of planning, Levasseur said. The food, music and people really made this concert enjoyable.

"This has given us a chance to unwind and relieve some built up stress," said Pvt. Darrius Rollins, 1st Bn., 19th Inf. Regt.

MWR planned the concert with ITB and BCTB for more than six months, Hayden said.

More concerts will take place at Weatherby Field throughout the year. Currently, all the concerts scheduled are only for basic training soldiers, but by next summer, it is possible the entire post will be able to attend certain events, such as the All-Army Concert Series.

For more information on the band, visit www.acresmusic.com.

New cleaning contractor optional for residents

Bridgett Siter
Special to the Bayonet©

Fort Benning's new and exclusive contract with a local cleaning company has caused confusion among many post residents.

Since The Bayonet reported an agreement between Thomas Brand Siding Company and Fort Benning's housing office, residents understood the contract to mean they would be required to pay the contractor to clean their quarters.

Not so, said Kenneth Hankins, chief of housing. The new contract simplifies the clearing process for soldiers who want to "pay and go," but they still have the option of doing the cleaning themselves or hiring an outside cleaning team to do it. If they choose that option, they're required to stay until their final housing inspection.

"The regulation says the Army will provide a cleaning source for the soldier, but that doesn't stop them from hiring whoever they want or from doing it themselves," Hankins said. "The only difference is if you hire the contractor, you're free to leave.

"If you do it yourself, you'll have to stay till the inspection."

Hankins said 95 percent of post residents elect to pay a cleaning team.

In the past, that meant selecting a team from a pool of contractors provided by the housing office. Prices varied among contractors.

Now, with a representative from Thomas Brand on site when the new housing office opens this summer in Building 6, residents will find it more convenient and economical, Hankins said.

With prices ranging from $112 for a two-bedroom home to $125 for a three-bedroom, Thomas Brand offers "very reasonable prices, much less than many other posts," Hankins said.

list job summaries. It is very important to keep good records of previous employment and make sure all relevant skills and abilities are included in the resume. Most common mistakes on a resume are desperate-sounding objectives and use of military terminology. The objective should be a concise, specific statement that lets the employer know what one's goal is, rather than a plea for work. Everything in the resume should reflect the goal stated in the objective.

A mistake made by family members and military members alike is the use of military terminology in resumes. The civilian population probably will not understand the implied skills behind acronyms like PLDC or FRG leader. The civilian world only cares to know about skills that transfer to their job market. Instead of military acronyms, use civilian buzz catch phrases like, "facilitated group training," or "attended leadership training," which will have more impact on your target audience.

"Unless you are a Medal of Honor winner, don't list military awards on your resume," Mills said. "Being a sharp shooter doesn't really offer a transferable skill to the civilian job market."

Mills also advises in his classes to keep in mind proper dress for an interview has a huge impact on chances at landing the job. Your appearance will make a statement from the moment one walks into the room.

"Accessories can detract from your qualifications. Make sure your qualifications for the job are what the interviewer remembers, not your tattoos, piercings, fingernails, or hair color. Columbus is a conservative job market," he said.

Mills suggests keeping a portfolio readily available including your resume, work history, education, certificates, and diplomas.

Taking this portfolio to the interview with you enables you to immediately access any information requested. This may give you an edge over another candidate and shows you are highly organized and detail oriented — two qualities all employers want in their staff.

Sound tedious? Don't despair. Military family members really do have advantages in the local job market. Financially, it is beneficial for companies to hire family members because they do not need benefits such as medical and dental care. Since the average assignment for a family at Fort Benning is one to three years, employers do not have to worry about retirement benefits or tenure for family member employees.

Advantages for the local employers do not stop there, said Sherry LeSesne of Randstad Temporary Staffing. LeSesne knows both sides of the family member employment issue since she is a family member as well as an employment recruiter.

"Family members generally have more college education and diverse job experience to offer employers," she said.

LeSesne admits moving can hamper career goals for family members.

"Even if you have great skills, in small towns you have to contend with the local pay scales, and they can vary greatly. It is hard to accept low pay when you have great skills."

LeSesne's advice to fellow family members is to always keep resumes current and be open to the opportunity of no-fee temporary staffing agencies when on short assignments.

She does believe that changing jobs due to frequent military moves is not always a deterrent for career success. Frequent career changes give family members the added value of adaptability.

"It is easier for family members to adapt to work environments because of diverse experience. They have probably encountered Type-A personalities, micromanagers, and difficult coworkers and already have the skills to adapt."

Those just starting out in their career should keep in mind the transferability of their chosen career path. Some career fields are easier to move than others. Careers such as nursing, teaching, clerical, retail sales and food service are easily transferred. Other careers do not fare as well, Mills said.

"Social science fields do not transfer well from place to place due to licensing requirements and because they require the worker to know details about the community that they will provide services. That experience can only be gained from time in the target community," he said.

To ensure success in the job hunt, enroll in the Job Strategy Workshop at ACS, Mills said. Pre-registration is required and space is limited. Applications are available at ACS, Building 2624, Soldiers' Plaza, or call 545-4043 for more information.

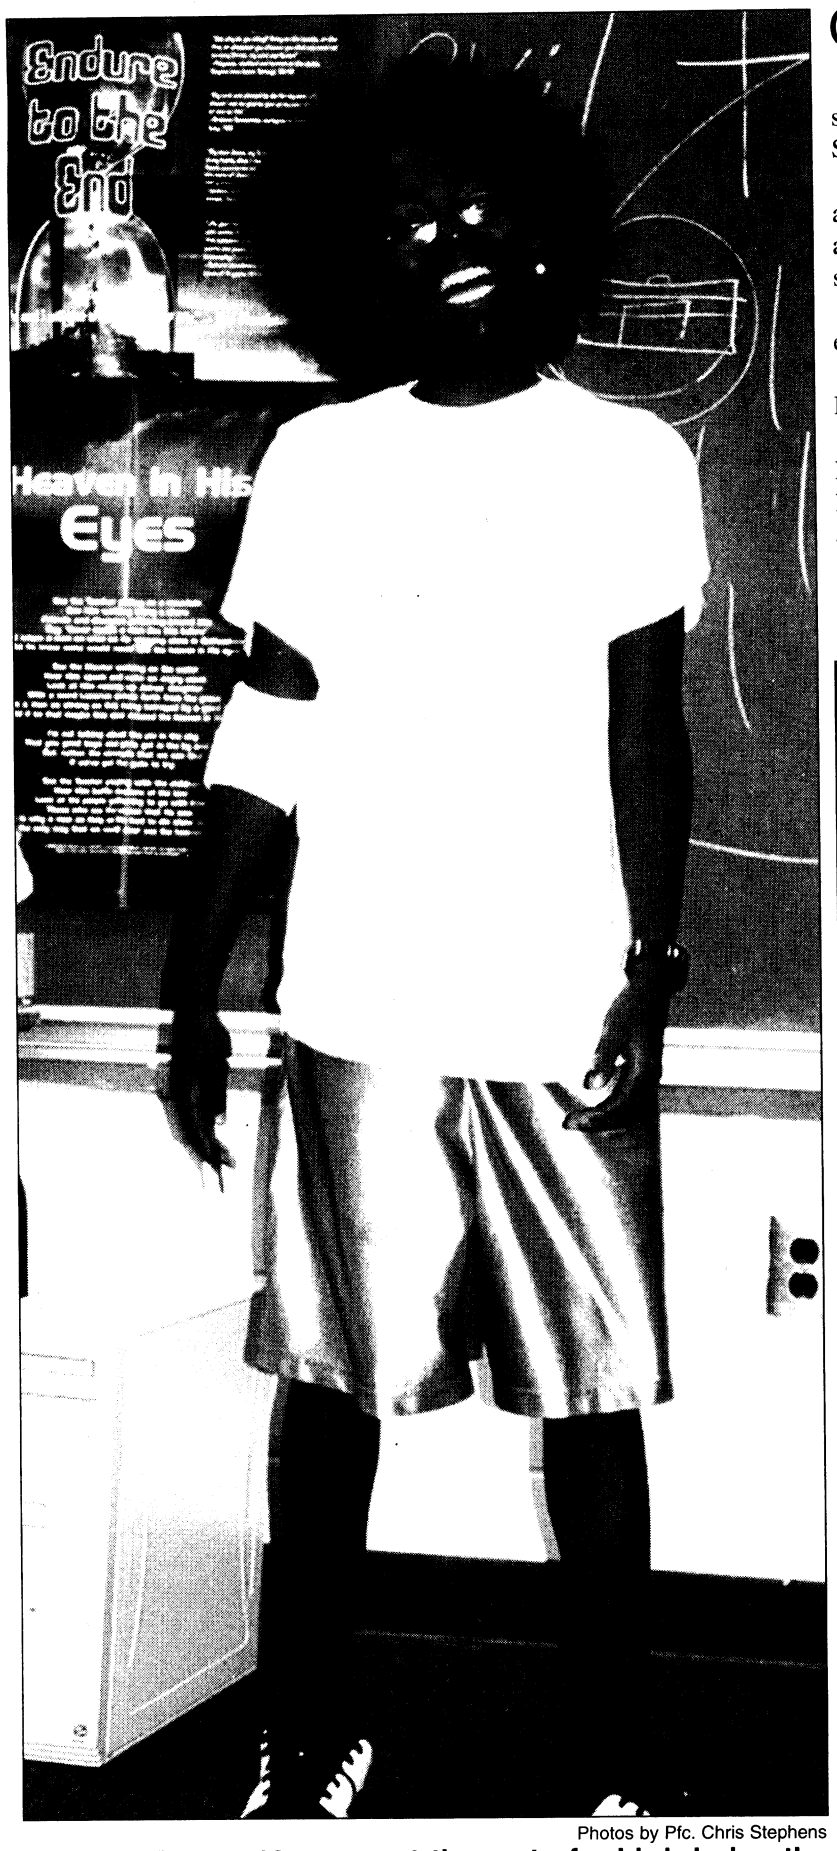
Vacation Bible School

Children live by faith

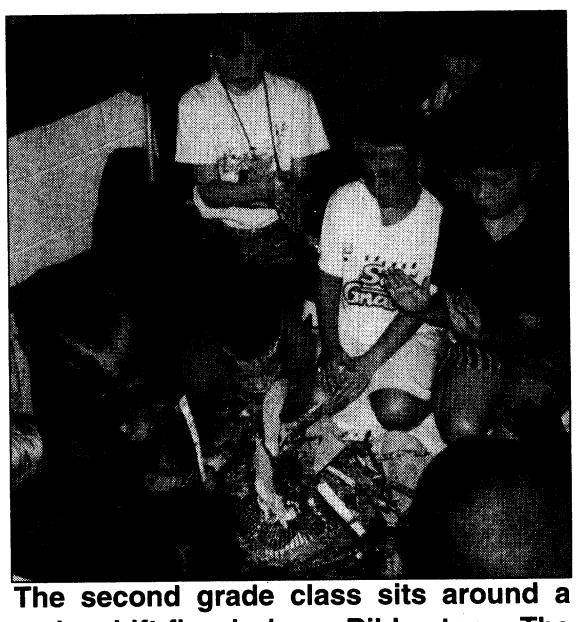
Fort Benning's Protestant Vacation Bible School started Monday and ends today at White Elementary School.



The theme of the week was Faith Mountain, with an emphasis on living by faith. Among the many activities were music, games and various Bible stories.

More than 100 children from preK through eighth grade participated in the program.

Volunteers for the Bible school came from Pinehurst Baptist Church in Columbus.



"It has been a wonderful week," said Beverly Law, Vacation Bible School director. "The kids have really responded well and are doing what is asked of them.

"The most important thing I want the children to get out of this week is to understand that Jesus loves them and that he died on the cross for them."

Army families make moving adventurous

Angela Sachitano
Special to the Bayonet©

They're here. The PCS orders you've been waiting on for months. Now it's official where you are going and when you will be heading out.

This is a first in a series highlighting the hot spots of road trips while venturing to other posts around the country.

This week's vacation road trip looks at the drive from Fort Benning to Fort Lewis, Washington.

If the idea of driving from Georgia to Washington state sounds exhausting and overwhelming, the truth is, at times it very much is.

"There are several routes you can take," said Wanda Coar, travel agent at Century Travel in Columbus. "The total driving distance is somewhere around 3,200 miles. That means driving time can be close to 55 hours on the road."

55 hours on the road?

As of right now, the Army isn't moving personal vehicles, so chances are families are stuck with the drive. But before they pull out the map and calculate the quickest way to get from here to there, Coar said families should take advantage of the trip.

"I have soldiers and their families come to me year-round looking for an affordable way to take a vacation," Coar said. "Cross country trips like this can be a lot of fun and won't break the bank."

Hundreds of Fort Benning families will receive orders to Fort Lewis, Wash., this summer, and they will have several routes to choose from.

Travel agents agree heading northwest for the great plains of South Dakota and Montana may be the best bet.

"Families will get the chance to visit some of the nation's most interesting venues along the way," Coar said.

Planning where to stop and where to stay while in town can be overwhelming, Coar said. That's why it's best to get on line to mapquest.com or randmcnally.com and calculate an exact itinerary.

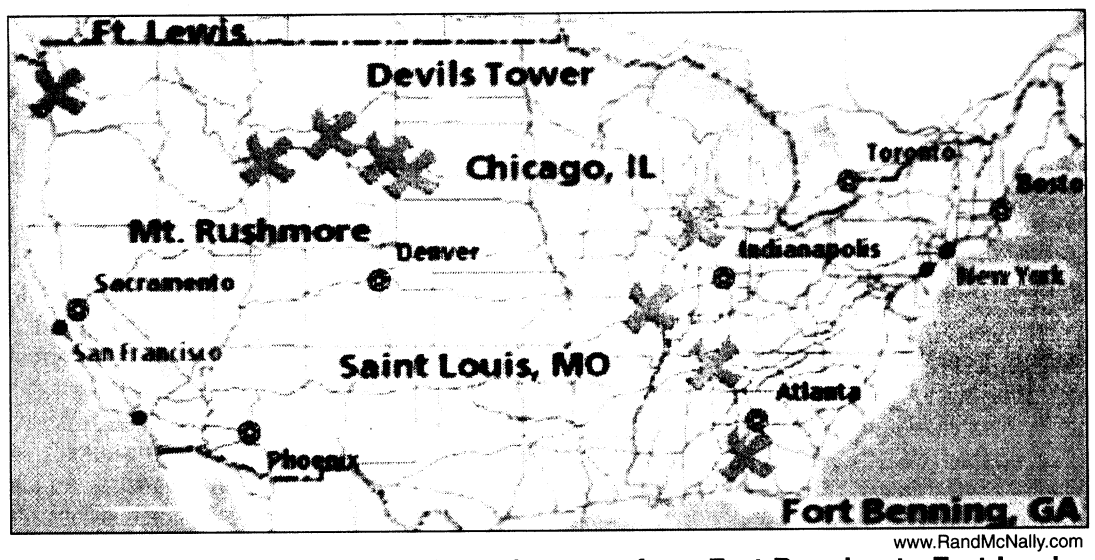
"Families traveling to Fort Lewis from Columbus may want to visit Nashville, Tennessee as their first stop out," Coar said. "The Country Music Hall of Fame even offers a military discount."

The driving time from Columbus to Nashville is about six hours but well worth it, Coar said.

The area is home to the Grand Ole Opry, the newly renovated Country Music Hall of Fame, the Jack Daniels Bourbon Distillery and a vast array of historic mansions including the estate of President Andrew Jackson.

After a day or so in Nashville, families can make their way about 300 miles west to St. Louis, Mo.

"St. Louis is famous for it's blues and jazz scene and of course the St. Louis Arch," Coar said.



The Arch was built to signify the "gateway to the west" and is truly a site to behold. For a few bucks, families can take a ride to the top of the Arch and see the land of three nearby states.

If soldiers are in the mood for baseball, they can then head about six hours north and into Chicago where the Cubs are playing all summer long at Wrigley Field.

"Chicago is a city that many say has a way of making visitors feel part of the neighborhood," Coar said. "Chicago has endless entertainment, sporting events and music festivals."

One show that is making a name for itself in Chicago is known only as the "Blue Man Group." The show features men with painted blue faces and the subject of the show has been kept a secret. Tickets can be purchased on line for around $25-$50 a person.

"The next few days of the trip will depend on how far families want to drive during a day," Coar said. "From Chicago, families will likely want to visit Mount Rushmore."

www.RandMcNally.com

This maps shows attractions along the route from Fort Benning to Fort Lewis.

Mount Rushmore is 932 miles away and surrounded by the beautiful mountains and national parks of South Dakota.

From Mt. Rushmore, families can take a short two hour drive to the nation's first national monument, Devils Tower, located in Northeast Wyoming.

"Devils.Tower is actually the core of a volcano exposed after millions of years of erosion," Coar said. "It's probably best remembered for scenes shot there in the 1978 movie Close Encounters of the Third Kind.

Three hours north in the reservation of the Northern Cheyenne Indian Reservation, is the untouched Little Big Horn Battleground. Little Bighorn is where General Custer fought his last battle against the Sioux and Cheyenne Indians in 1876.

Families can drive around the battlefield listening to a tape detailing Custer's last battle.

"The tape gives soldiers a clear picture of what it was like to be part of the Army during that time," said Janine Gwinn, wife of Capt. Jeremy Gwinn, a student in the Infantry Captain Career's Course.

After visiting the Little Bighorn Battlefield, families are on the last stretch of the trip as they drive through the desert badlands of Montana and into Yellowstone National Park.

With eroding geysers, fishing streams, camp sites, waterfalls, and an endless array of wildlife, Yellowstone is a place many will never forget.

"Soldiers who are traveling from one duty station to the next may be able to get into the park for free if they show their orders," Coar said

Just one more day of driving and families will soon arrive in Northwest Washington, home of Fort Lewis.

"The memories that can be made from a cross country trip like this is priceless," Coar said. "During the summer kids look forward to this sort of thing. It's good quality time."

For more information on planning a cross country trip log on to randmcnally.com or mapquest.com.

Summer vacation important to children

Chaplain (Capt.) Leslie Forbes-Mariani
13th Corps Support Battalion

As a child, I thought the summer was the best time of the year (except maybe Christmas). School was out, the days were longer, and the pool was open. My parents worked very long and hard hours in our family business during the winter and spring months, so in the summer, they tried to spend quality time as a family.

Thinking of what to write, I thought of summer and the long hot days playing as a child. I remembered the significant times of family and great fun.

My mom was creative and smart in trying to develop a family bonding of fun, spirituality and love. These are some of the great ideas she used in the family summers, which I have employed also.

One: Each summer throughout the country, as in my hometown, communities have outdoor cultural events like plays and concerts.

These events can help to develop the exposure you and your family have to the arts. I remember my grandma and I spending the afternoon on the grass in front of the event stage. We would wait for it to start as we held our place for the family, even eating our dinner like it was a picnic. When my parents got off work, they came and joined us and it was grand.

We saw different kinds of dance, drama and comedy and listened to jazz and opera (not my most favorite). The best part was when my sister and I wiggled and dance in the evening breeze, and no one worried if it was disturbing anyone.

Two: My mother would read a book we picked out for 20 minutes or so a day, (maybe a chapter). I can still remember the sound of her voice and knowing her attention was with us.

Mariani

She would ask us questions and let us tell her our thoughts — we felt so grown up. Even on our short vacations, she found the time to read to us.

Three: We took short local camping trips throughout the summer. My parents would alternate who worked and who stayed out in the woods with us during the day.

We hiked, swam, fished and generally had a good time. But the best was when we were all together for dinner and roasting marshmallows over the campfire or playing table games. Can you believe it — no television, cell phones or game boxes? It was just my family having a great time together.

Four: We would plan theme vacations. We visited all the zoos, wild animal parks and the petting zoos along the way. We had to look for the distinguishing qualities of each (almost like an after-action review).

We had books on animals and did some research along the way. We took pictures and enjoyed the beauty of God's creation.

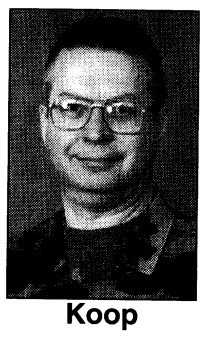
The dam trip was the best. We traveled to all the dams and dikes learning about hydroelectric power, water conservation and the water reclamation projects. We traveled down inside some of the dams and felt the great power of our water resources. Again, making a family project in documenting the trip.

You see we concentrate on how we can better do our jobs and develop networking and in general involve ourselves in activities that legitimately need our attention to the point of neglecting the family development. How do you plan on fostering and developing espirit de corps in your home? God is concerned about our families. He desires us to be in unison, in a loving home at peace.

It takes hard work, creativity and time, but the results are better than all networking you could do.

Peace in the home is like the very best stress reliever any one could prescribe. Sometimes being creative with the time you have can open opportunities to be with the ones you love.

Our jobs can take time from our family, but what of the time vegging in front of the television? Take time with your family — you might be surprised how inspiring, and wonderful they are. What is your summer plan? God, family and country.



Is fidelity in marriage an outmoded idea?

Chaplain (Maj.) Raymond Koop
Family Life Ministries Center

Some evolutionists reduce sex to being the way the strong dominate the species. Infidelity is viewed as normal. Fidelity is the exception rather than the rule.

Elizabeth Taylor once remarked that one enters marriage the first time for love, the second time for money and the third time for friendship. Another wit said, "I think I'll get married a few times before I settle down."

Despite these cynical views of marriage, every couple that has come to me to be married has expressed that they plan to be married to each other for the rest of their lives. Permanence in marriage is still the ideal.

Koop

In the movie Unfaithful, a girlfriend remarks to actress Diane Lane that no one escapes unhurt from an affair. All affairs are destructive.

Jesus taught, what God has joined together, let man not separate (Matthew 19:6). God hates divorce (Malachi 2:16). Divorce tears apart the souls of the husband and wife. It is a gut wrenching emotional roller-coaster that often leaves couples and their children brokenhearted.

God designed marriage to be taken very seriously. Marriage can be both permanent and satisfying. A good marriage takes commitment, work, forgiveness and love.

Fidelity in marriage reaps great rewards. A loving marriage provides safety, security, wellness and intimacy; the admiration and respect of friends and neighbors; the legacy of children and grandchildren; as well as wealth.

Would you like to make your marriage better? Free counseling and support are available. Contact the Chaplain Family Life Ministries Center at 545-1760.

Soldier selected for All-Army tryouts

Dreams, goals becoming reality

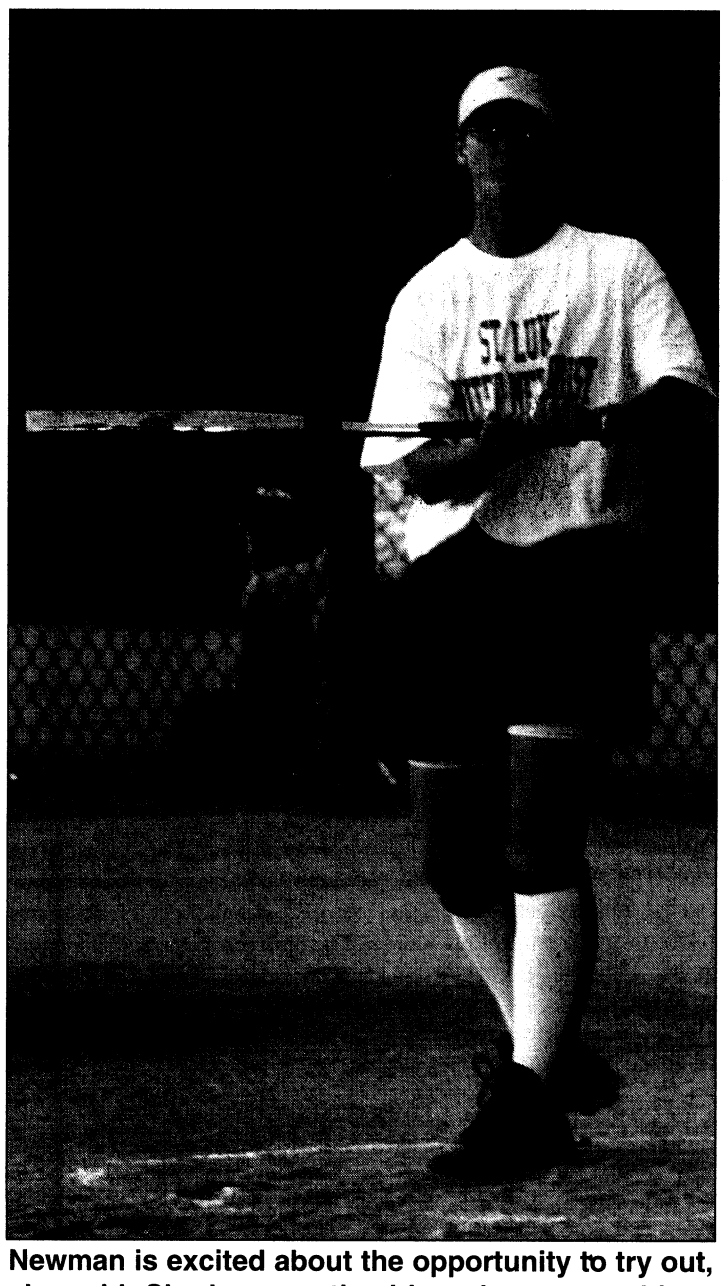
Spc. Douglas DeMaio
Bayonet staff

The word is out. The All-Army softball team has selected a 29th Infantry Regiment soldier to try out for the defending U.S. Army champions.

Playing at the top of her game, Spc. Tammy Newman is ready for the challenge and fulfill her long time goal, Newman said.

"I'm excited about the opportunity," she said. "This is what I wanted to do when I joined the Army."

The Department of the Army informed Andrew Snoddy, post sports director, of Newman's acceptance. Snoddy will give Newman orders to travel to Fort Indiantown Gap, Pa., where she will compete against 19 female soldiers to earn one of 13 spots available on the Army's best softball team.



Newman said she's gained more understanding of softball over the years and attributes some of her softball knowledge to coaching a group of girls called the Lady Magic.

"They kept me in shape and got me better prepared," Newman said. "I love softball, and they helped love it even more."

Snoddy helped Newman prepare her application for the All-Army team, said John Newman, Tammy's husband.

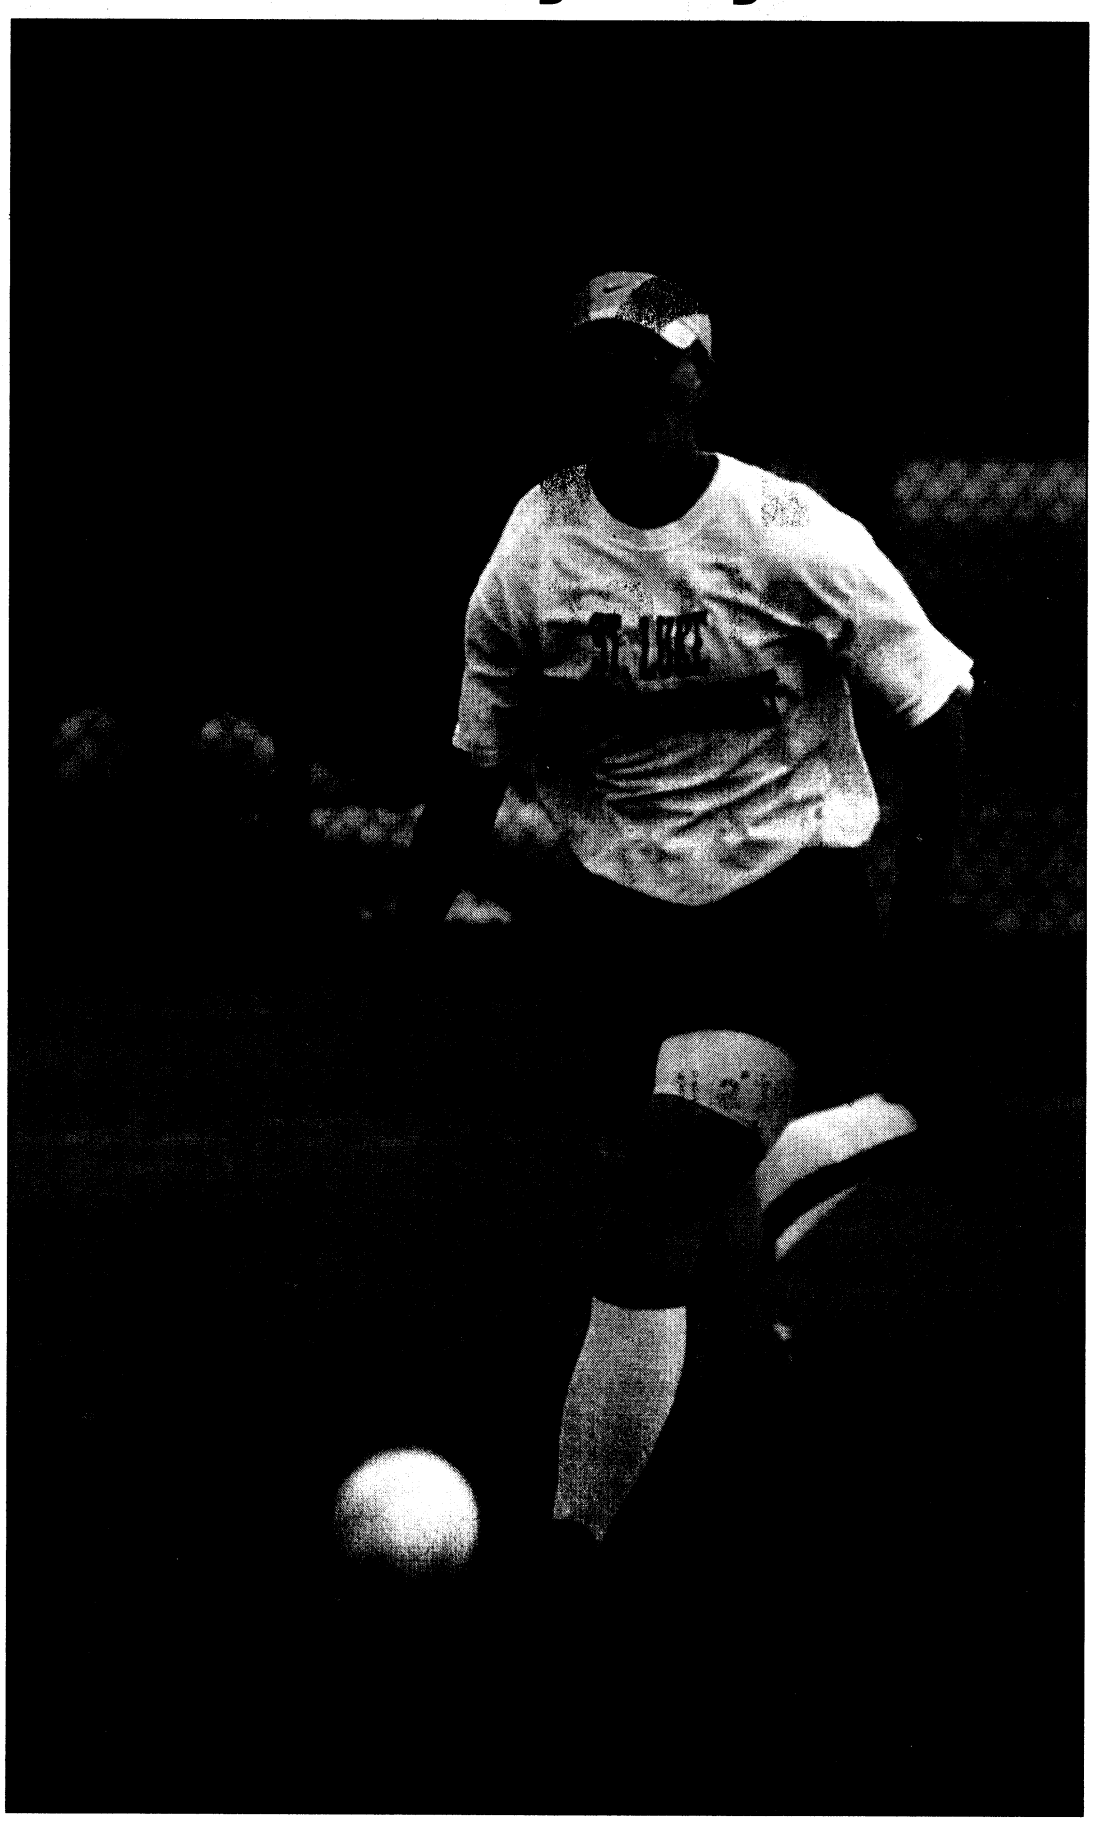
"He really helped us out," John said. "He showed us how we should prioritize Tammy's accomplishments."

At age 12, Tammy lettered in softball at Rolla High School in Rolla, Mo. She signed a letter of intent to play for East Central Junior College in Union, Mo. In Georgia, she has played and won several American Softball Association championships on both co-ed and women's open divisions.

Newman is excited about the opportunity to try out, she said. She has practiced long hours to achieve her goal to represent the Army on the softball field.

"The selection board is impersonal," Snoddy said. "That packet must represent you in the best light."

Throughout her time on Fort Benning, Tammy's unit has supported and encouraged her to go out for the All-Army team for more than a year, she said. Her husband has been the catalyst for Tammy's recent success, too.



"We practice every night," John said. "I'll hit balls to her. She'll spend time hitting the ball off the tee.

"She also works on the little things that are important like running mechanics and studying players hitting habits, so she can position herself accordingly to make the play.

"If the ball hits her glove, she'll catch it."

"She's just like a little kid — like she's playing in high school again," John said.

Tammy is a goal oriented person, and when she's pointed in the right direction, she will achieve what she sets out to do, John said.

Fathers, sons compete together in tournament

Tournament day of fun for tandems

Pfc. Chris Stephens
Bayonet staff

Fathers and sons came together Saturday for the Father-Son Basketball Tournament at the Youth Services Gym.

The annual tournament brought together children and parents of all ages to see who was the best father-son tandem.

The tournament was broken down in three age categories: 8-10, 11-13 and 14-18.

"The idea of it is to have the dads and sons spend the day together having fun," said Dorrie Wagner, acting sports director for youth services.

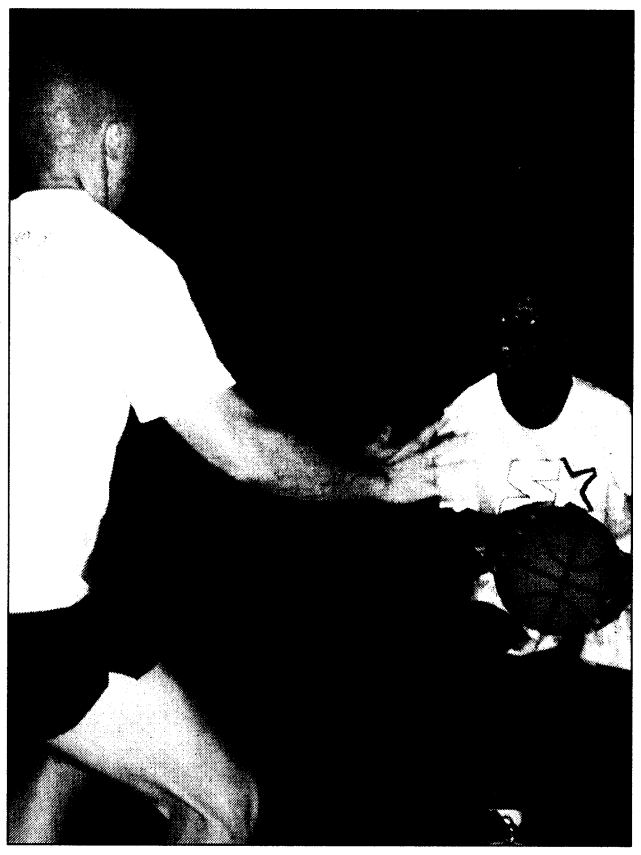
Youth Services met its objective, said Maurice McFarland Sr.

"My son and I don't get to spend much time together. So for me, playing a fun game with my son is something I will treasure forever. I treasure each moment I spend with him."

The sons agreed.

"I enjoyed the time with my dad," said Malik Turner, 9. "We tried our best and almost won. But, I still had fun anyway."

The tournament offered a competitive atmosphere, McFarland said.



Both fathers and sons played hard to win each game. The fathers gave their sons more shots to allow them to improve their game.

"The idea is you want to win," McFarland said. "However, I wanted it to be more of a learning experience for my son. I tried to get him more involved and let him have the ball more and take more shots than me."

Even though the sons had the ball more than their fathers, the fathers still got a great workout doing what they could to get their sons the ball..

"Fighting for every rebound is tough," McFarland said. "You want to get the ball so you can allow your son another shot and to help boost his confidence."

Throughout the tournament, the teams showed great sportsmanship, Wagner said.

Pfc. Chris Stephens

Darius Woldridge, 10, concentrates on shooting the ball over David Meyer.

"The key to the tournament is to keep a positive attitude," Wagner said. "The tournament is more fun if everyone is out here for the fun of it."

The teams fought hard in each age category. But, like in all sports, there is one team that comes out on top as the winner.

Up next for the Youth Services is a summer basketball league. The league is currently looking for coaches and assistant coaches.

For more information call Wagner at 545-3070.

Ranger Joe's finishes season undefeated

Bridgett Siter
Special to the Bayonet©

The final game of the Columbus Industrial Men's Open Softball season turned into a mere play date for Ranger Joe's, June 12, when they defeated Feathers & Friends 16-2. Or 27-6. Or maybe it was 28-7.

Feathers & Friends ran afoul with the umpire in the fourth inning, when they introduced a player wearing an unauthorized jersey. Industrial league regulations prohibit such bodacious behavior, so the umpire "called" the game — meaning he walked off the field.

But the undefeated Joe's weren't ready to call it a night, and up by 14 runs, they could afford to be generous. Play continued until sometime late in the fifth, when by mutual consent, both teams parted company.

The final score? Well, that depends who you ask. But no one's disputing the fact that Ranger Joe's won.

Joe's got off to a slow start with three up, three down, and the 9-8 Feathers & Friends came on strong, when Matt Dorrill drove in two runs with a solid hit to left field. From there, it went south for the flock.

Ranger Joe's scored five runs early in the second, thanks in part to defensive errors. John Clark popped one over the left-field fence and drove in three.

The second inning ended when Feathers & Friends' Brandon Pratt hit the ball down the center for a double play.

Ranger Joe's came on strong in the third, led by left-handed hard-hitter Pat Harris. Feathers & Friends' outfield errors worked in Joe's favor, as one right after another singled and doubled.

After three up, three down for Feathers & Friends, the Joe's once again took the plate, hitting round the line-up before the umpire called it quits. Score 16-2.

"Nothing but batting practice. We're just here to have fun," said Jimmy Armstrong, Ranger Joe's coach. "Let's keep on playing."

And they did … on and on and on, batting round twice before Feathers & Friends shut them down. The score, unofficial or otherwise, was 23-2 at the bottom of the fourth.

A series of singles and a double upped the score to 23-6, but by now, who's counting?

Ranger Joe's found a magnet in left field at the top of the fifth. Pop, pop, pop. Tony Oakley put one out. Then Clark put another out. Then another by Tom Siter.

Feathers & Friends took the bat with a score of 27-6, when Joe's pitcher William Lendoff made them an offer they couldn't refuse — bat through the line-up, no matter how many outs. And just to shake things up a bit, the Joe's all switched positions, infield and out.

After five successive outs, Feathers & Friends scored another run and ended the game on a high note.

Race to determine six-person teams

Soldiers ready to continue tradition

Spc. Douglas DeMaio
Bayonet staff

After skipping a year due to 9/11, Fort Benning is preparing for the 18th annual Army 10-miler competition.

The Morale, Welfare and Recreation — Directorate of Community Activities is sponsoring three qualifying 10-mile races.

All races will be held at 7 a.m. at Santiago Fitness Center June 22, July 20 and Aug. 17.

The best times posted by active duty military personnel during the qualifiers will determine two six-person teams, said Andrew Snoddy, post sports director.

There will be one male and one female active-duty military team representing Fort Benning.

"For those who like to run, this event will be a lot of fun," Snoddy said. "It's an opportunity to spend time with individuals of a similar mind-set."

One individual with a strong mind-set for running is Staff Sgt. William Northcut, training NCO for Infantry Training Brigade.

Northcut represented Fort Drum's, N.Y., team in Army 10-Miler in 1999 and 2000.

"Competing with a team is a really good idea," Northcut said. "Preparing for the race is a lot of fun.

"Each person on the team motivates their teammate to do better.

"For me personally, training for the Army 10-Miler has put my body in the best shape I've ever been in."

Not only is this a great opportunity to get in shape, it's a chance to represent Fort Benning in the nation's capital, Snoddy said.

"Those who are selected for the teams will have their traveling expenses paid for," Snoddy said. "The race actually goes through our nation's capital, and there are many national treasures to see during the race."

The course passes by the Lincoln Memorial, the Capitol and the Washington Monument.

"Historically, Fort Benning has participated in this event since the '80s and has always finished in the top 10 every year," Snoddy said. "We're looking forward to continuing the tradition."

Everyone is encouraged to participate in the three qualifiers, but must understand the six-persons teams will only be selected from active duty military members, Snoddy said.

Hospital faces doctor shortage

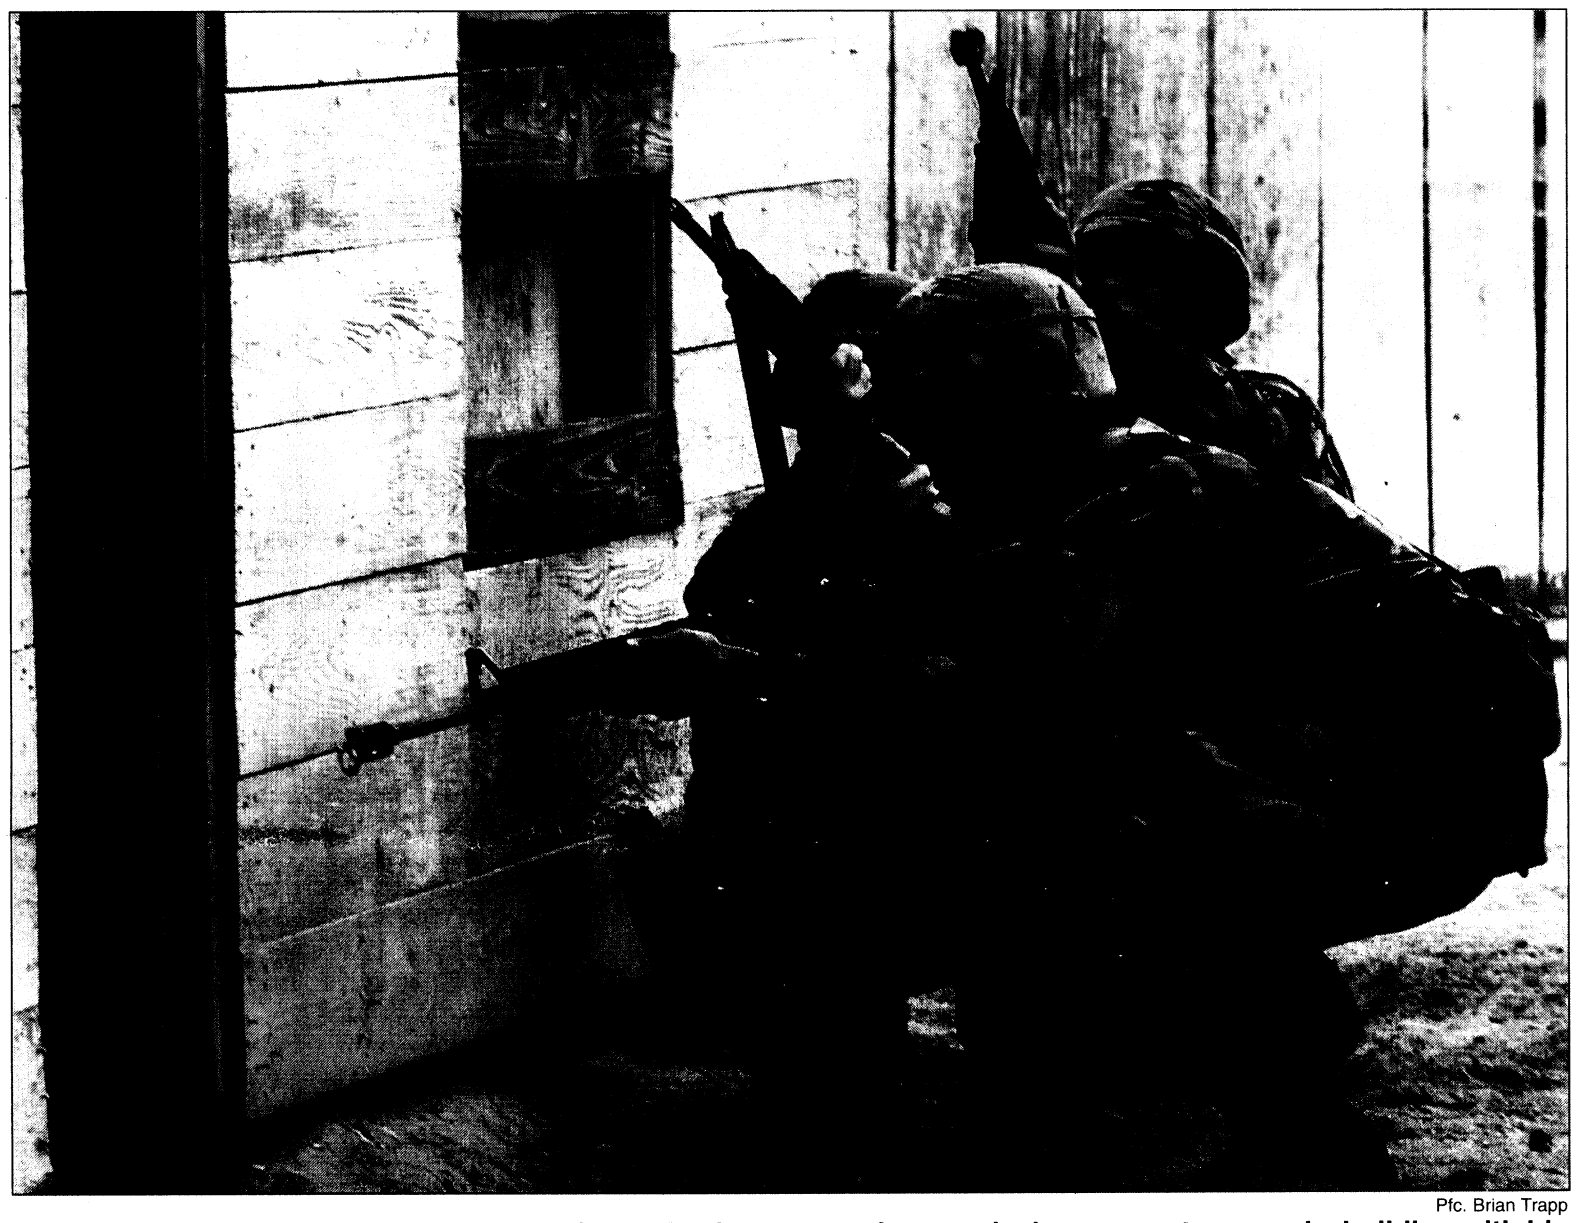
MACH to hire more civilian physicians

Angela Sachitano
Special to the Bayonet©

A shortage of physicians at Martin Army Community Hospital may require soldiers and families to re-evaluate their need for immediate care this summer.

Ten of the hospital's 18 family practice providers have been deployed, leaving the facility understaffed until at least September.

"We anticipated a shortage happening as a result of September 11," said Col. Gale S. Pollock, commander, Martin Army Community Hospital. "Our doctors are needed with the deploying units. We are doing everything we can to accommodate this."



In addition to the shortage of family practice physicians, three of the eight pediatricians are gone, as well as three of the five internal medicine providers. The hospital is also operating with only 40 percent of its support staff in place.

Two dozen changes to take effect

Staff Sgt. Marcia Triggs
Army News Service

WASHINGTON — The most current uniform policy regulation went online June 25, and clarification of the Army's tattoo policy is only one of two dozen changes or updates that will take effect Aug. 1.

The one change people won't see in the regulation is males having the authority to carry umbrellas. The Army is not ready for that change, said Master Sgt. Kittie Messman, the uniform policy noncommissioned officer for the Army's G1.

Last December the Army announced that changes were being staffed, and the tattoo policy is one that underwent the most modifications.

"Under the old regulation, it stated that tattoos were prohibited on the face, neck and head. ... Now, it states that tattoos are not to be visible in the Class A uniform with trousers. So there is a common standard for both males and females," Messman said.

Soldiers who currently have tattoos on their hands will be "grand-fathered" and allowed to keep them, Messman said, as long as the tattoos are inoffensive.

Counseling requirements for commanders with soldiers who have tattoos are also outlined in the updated regulation. Offensive tattoos anywhere on the body are prohibited, but tattoos that are not offensive need to be documented in a written report at the discretion of the commander.

To eliminate subjective opinions from one command to the next, the soldier will present the written documentation at his new assignment, Messman said.

Other items that were revised include hair, nails, contacts, cell phones, pagers, headgear, "camelbaks," desert battle-dress-

look CLOSER look look look look look look

Some of the highlights of the Army uniform changes are:

- Dreadlocks are prohibited for all soldiers. Prohibited hair dye colors include purple, blue, pink, green, orange, bright fire-engine red and neon colors,
- If soldiers use dyes, tints or bleaches, they must choose those that result in natural hair colors,
- Women are authorized to wear braids and cornrows; baldness is authorized for males, either natural or shaved,
- Males are not authorized to wear nail polish and they must keep nails trimmed to the tip of the finger. Females must keep nails trimmed no longer than 1/4 inch, as measured from the fingertip. Two-tone or multi-tone manicures and nail designs are prohibited. Prohibited nail polish colors include bright fire-engine red, khaki or camouflage, purple, gold, blue, black, white and neon colors,
- Tinted or colored contacts, and contacts that change the shape of the iris are prohibited, as they are not medically required. The only tinted contacts authorized are opaque lenses (when prescribed for eye injuries) and clear corrective vision lenses,
- All soldiers are exempt from wearing headgear to evening social events (after retreat).

Millennium Challenge will help fight war

Angela Sachitano
Special to the Bayonet©

The eyes and ears of the country's most powerful generals, admirals, senators and other political figures will soon be on a team of Fort Benning soldiers.

Seventy-three men and women from the 29th Infantry Regiment have been chosen to communicate the Army's latest developments during the 2002 Millennium Challenge, at Fort Irwin, Calif., July 24 through Aug. 15.

I PLEDGE ALLEGIANCE

Court short circuits

Elsie Jackson
USAIC Public Affairs Office

COMMENTARY

And now, from the people who defended a murderer with a legal defense based on Twinkies, comes one unhappy camper who went to court because he didn't want his daughter to recite "the Pledge of Allegiance" in her school.

And won. Sort of.

I don't have a problem with this guy's opinion. You know what they say about opinions. They're like noses. Everyone's entitled to one.

Diversity is a good thing. Tolerance, especially religious tolerance, is how our country got its start. As Americans, it's our middle name.

But tolerance is a two-way street. This dude needs to meet the folks he doesn't agree with halfway, and the 9th U.S. Circuit Court wasn't the place.

So this guy's a free thinker. He's bringing his child up as a free thinker. Good for him. But since when has a minority been able to dictate to a vast majority? When did it change to "the minority rules?"

Instead of clogging up a court system, wringing an almost immediately reversed decision and reinforcing stereotypes about California being "the granola state," he should have used the issue as a springboard to talk about his beliefs, how not everyone agrees about every issue, and how "different" doesn't equate to "wrong," it just means "not the same." And he could have used the issue to teach her coping skills that would not have offended anyone without compromising any beliefs.

This child could have learned to just not say the words her father finds so offensive while reciting the Pledge of Allegiance. Her father could have asked that she be excused from the classroom while reciting the pledge. If he felt that strongly about it, why wasn't she being home schooled?

Instead of learning the fine art of compromise, she's learned that if you don't agree with the majority, take them to court. Wonder what she's going to do if she doesn't like the color scheme the prom committee picks?

Minority groups, small religious sects and people with opinions that are not widely shared are accommodated all of the time. I'm sure that this guy would have been, too. It's what being tolerant is all about.

What I really want to know is, if this father feels this strongly about saying "'under God," is he habitually defacing all of his money by scribbling over the "In God We Trust" on the back of his cash? Is he driving on roads that were paid for with that money? Does he make his family avert their eyes every time they go past a church?

Can he accept songs like "God Bless America" as an American tradition?

Or does he read between the lines of every reference to God as an attempt to sway from his beliefs?

Pretty close-minded thinking for an open-minded free thinker isn't it?

Maybe it's time he switched from Twinkies back to granola.

Let's put a bowl out for him in the middle of the road.

War on terrorism brings new meaning to Fourth of July

Jim Garamone
American Forces Press Service

COMMENTARY

For the first time since Vietnam, the United States is at war during Independence Day.

The global war on terrorism brings new meaning to the Fourth of July. The celebration of U.S. freedom is muted in many homes because of death or the absence of loved ones off serving the country.

July 4, 1776, was also celebrated during a time of war. As the Second Continental Congress voted for independence in Philadelphia, the British fleet sailed into the harbor of New York to land soldiers.

Americans knew from the moment the Declaration of Independence was approved that they were embarking on a new course. The war for independence had started in April 1775 when Patriot and British forces traded volleys at Lexington and Concord, Mass. The Continental Congress established the Continental Army June 14, 1775, and appointed George Washington as its commander the next day.

From the first shots until July 4, 1776, Patriot forces would battle the British army or their Tory allies (colonists loyal to Britain) in more than a dozen significant face-offs from northern New York to South Carolina and countless unrecorded minor ones. War affected each and every Colonial family, whether Patriot or Tory.

When Congress passed the Declaration of Independence, no one knew what form "these United states" would ultimately take. The Colonies, after all, were just a loose collection of English-speaking settlements that had been founded for a variety of reasons — nation-building not being one. Continental distances in the age of horse power were daunting, and every possibility existed that the Colonies would go their separate ways once independence was won.

But even during the war, Washington and other Patriot leaders strove to make sense of the price in blood that Americans were paying for independence. Washington knew that "these United states" would be an experiment that could only succeed if independence were secured on the pillars of justice and freedom.

Washington didn't want Americans to exchange one tyrant for another, or another set of tyrants. The Revolution had to have meaning beyond just winning American independence.

Freedom and justice are worth fighting for. Americans from the Revolution to the War on Global Terrorism have realized that. Americans don't fight for plunder or territory. They do fight in defense of their homes, to establish peace and for the basic rights of human beings.

July 4th this year will have celebrations. Fireworks will go off and Americans will join with friends and family to celebrate all that is good about being Americans.

But Americans must remember the great evil done to America and what the country stands for as they celebrate independence.

"If you're interested in fighting evil, you can do so by doing some good — by mentoring a child, by going to a shut-in's house and say, 'What can I do to help you?'" President Bush said during a speech June 19. "You see, it's those small acts of kindness that really end up defining the true character of this country.

"I believe that out of the evil done to America (on Sept. 11) will come incredible good," Bush said. "The world is going to be more peaceful. America will be more secure. And millions of Americans understand that serving something greater than yourself in life is an important part of having a full life."

The Fourth of July is the most American of holidays.

In a time of war, it is the time to celebrate together and work together to make America worth the blood sacrificed by so many.

INDEPENDENCE DAY

Country depends on service

At a critical moment during the Revolutionary War, when his army was surrounded and in danger of being destroyed, General Washington issued this order: "Put only Americans on guard tonight." Washington knew, at that moment of crisis, he could rely on those citizen-soldier volunteers who had left behind their families and farms to risk everything for the cause of freedom.

Thanks to their service and sacrifice, America achieved her independence. And every July 4th since, Americans have come together to give thanks for our freedom and what our country has become: the freest, most creative and dynamic nation on earth.

This Fourth of July across America, families will enjoy picnics, and parades, and the uplifting beat of Stars and Stripes Forever. But our celebrations are tempered by the knowledge that the freedoms we hold sacred and dear have once again come under attack.

So today, as in General Washington's time, we take comfort in the knowledge that Americans like you are on guard tonight — soldiers, sailors, airmen, Marines and Coast Guardsmen.

Like the Minute Men who dropped their pitchforks and took up rifles to defend their new nation in 1776, each of you stepped forward to defend America against the new threats of this new century.

Through your service and sacrifice, you help make every day Independence Day for the United States of America.

Our people are free because your hearts are brave. And so on this Fourth of July, we stop to say to each of you: Thank you for what you do for our country.

Retirees remind riggers of job's importance

Parachute packers proud of their role

Angela Sachitano
Special to the Bayonet©

"I will be sure always."

That's the motto of E Company, 1st Battalion (Airborne), 507th Infantry Regiment.

The soldiers, also known as riggers, are responsible for keeping the parachutes safe for every man and woman who jump on Fort Benning.

"There are a lot of people who are still nervous about jumping," said retired Chief Warrant Officer and former rigger Coy McDonald. "They need to have confidence the riggers are doing things correctly. I learned many valuable lessons as a rigger."

McDonald and 112 other former Army riggers reunited on Fort Benning the week of June 24 to revisit their old stomping grounds.

The crew of retired generals, colonels, Golden Knights and other distinguished soldiers all had one thing in common. Somewhere on the path of their military career, they were responsible for packing, inspecting and securing the parachutes of rangers, airborne and jumpmaster troops.

"I get invited to a lot of reunions," said retired Brig. Gen. Sherman Williford, a rigger from 1959-1963. "I chose this one because this was my first assignment at the age of 18, and I owe a lot to these guys. The leadership I received from fellow riggers paved my way to success."

The rigger company has paved the way for many successful soldiers including thousands of females, who until the 1970s were prohibited from rigger school.

"I became a rigger in 1983," said retired Maj. Brenda Warren. "As a female, I enjoyed taking part in such an important part of the military."

And riggers say taking part in such an important role only benefits soldiers in the future.

"When you spend time as a rigger, you are never afraid to jump," McDonald said. "You know the time and effort that is put into making sure your chute will open when it's supposed to. That's why riggers have gone on to fill some of the most important roles of the Army."

The reunion was the first time some of the retirees had seen each other since they began their military career several decades ago.

Although they had many questions for each other, the real curiosity was aimed at the Fort Benning riggers working today.

"I have many questions for the men and women securing the parachutes now," said retired Sgt. Pat Geraghty, a rigger from 1958-1961. "Parachutes have gone through extraordinary changes, and I can only imagine how that has affected the responsibilities of the riggers."

"The quick-release buttons were a long-awaited change," said Capt. Rich Glisson, commander of E Company, 1st Battalion (Airborne), 507th Infantry.

"The parachutes are also modified so you can steer them. Every fold and knot these men make as they prepare these parachutes are a result of those changes."

Glisson escorted the former riggers through the rigger shed to get a close up of just how things have changed since they were riggers.

Angela Sachitano

Pvt. Ryan Daily explains the current rigger process to retired Sgt. Pat Geraghty June 27.

"It's amazing how all these men are working on one chute at once," Geraghty said. "Each rigger carefully checks the other's work. I remember the feeling of wanting to be 100 percent confident these were safe. One mistake could cost a soldier his life."

And riggers know that.

"Riggers are some of the most important members of the Army," Williford said. "I am proud to have been a part of the team. I would encourage any soldier aiming for a successful military career to consider being a rigger."

Rangers to induct 16 into Ranger Hall of Fame

Ceremony to honor action of heroes

USAIC Public Affairs Office

When the audience for the Ranger Hall of Fame Ceremony for 2002 gather in Infantry Hall's Marshall Auditorium at 4:30 p.m. Tuesday, they will witness the induction of 16 U.S. Army Ranger alumni who served their country with distinction.

Although three recipients will be inducted posthumously, onlookers and well-wishers will see firsthand soldiers who embodied the Army values during their entire military career — loyalty, dedication, respect, selfless service, honor, integrity and personal courage.

• Robert L. Carr penetrated behind enemy lines in Burma to free a trapped Marauder unit after a 10-day blockade had exacted heavy American casualties, forcing Japanese forces to retreat.

• Autrail Cobb established a profound record of heroism in the Vietnam War, and today senior leaders hone their leadership skills under his mentorship at the Joint Readiness Training Center.

• James H. Collier laid his life on the line while serving in two combat tours in Vietnam, and today he serves veterans as the District Manager and Veteran Coordinator for the Tennessee Department of Labor.

• Glenn H. English Jr. was mortally wounded while saving the lives of fellow Rangers who were trapped in a burning personnel carrier.

• Charles E. Getz exposed himself to hostile fire to eliminate the enemy, and with only a bayonet, dived into underwater caves and captured 17 enemy, their weapons and equipment.

• James E. Hopkins left his practice at Johns Hopkins Hospital to serve in Merrill's Marauders and was instrumental in improving the helmet and developing lightweight combat vests.

• Lester E. Kness, during a German counterattack and while wounded, led a group of rangers in a fierce firefight defending the outpost.

• Charles Rickard Laws Jr., as a combat engineer, personally removed hundreds of land mines in Vietnam and increased the mobility of friendly forces.

• Harris L. Parker served two combat tours in Vietnam, and his ranger skills contributed to the team effort of his fellow U.S. advisors.

• Edward W. Pucel saw combat in World War II and the Korean War. He parachuted into enemy territory about 50 miles behind enemy lines to blow up an important railroad tunnel, disrupt communications and supply lines.

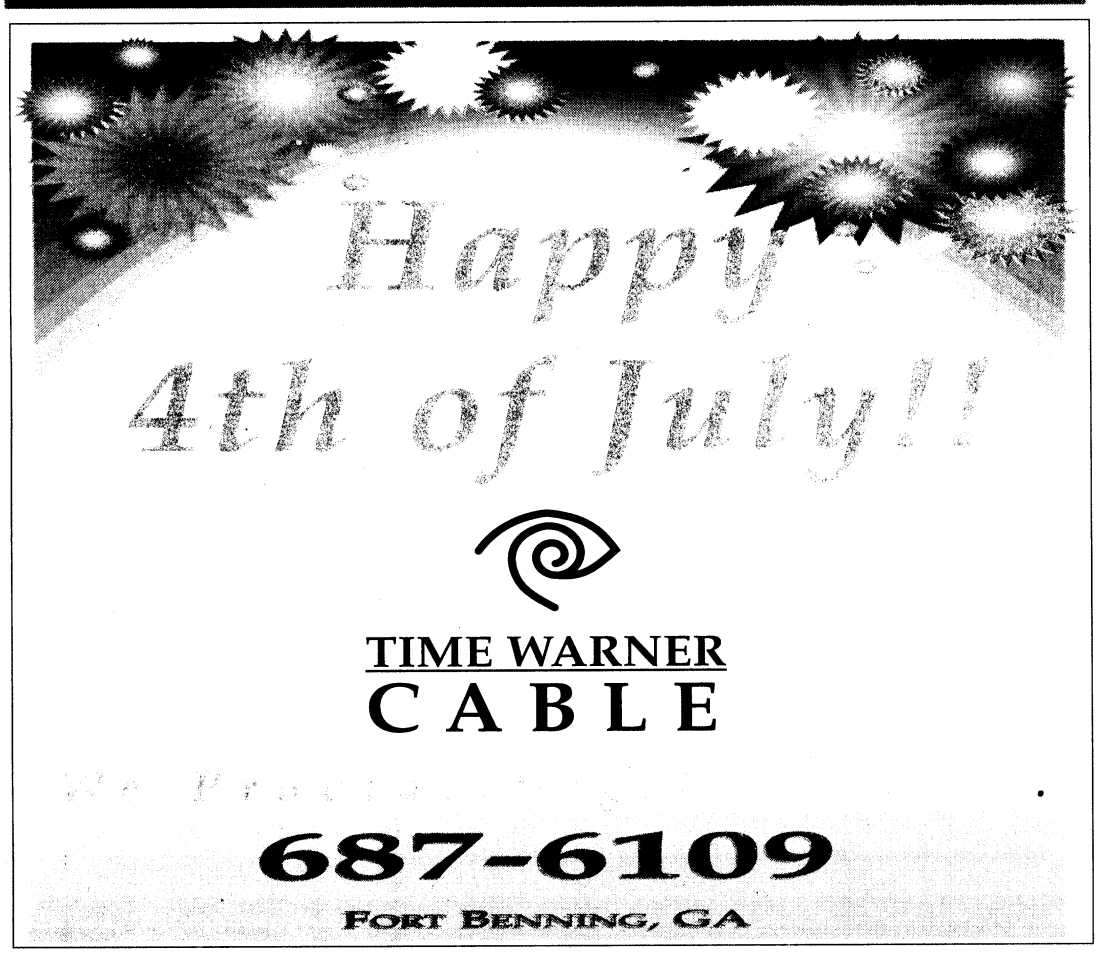
• James D. Rogers, while in Vietnam, elected to remain behind to provide fire for the withdrawal of the wounded and shouldered his comrade in arms and carried him under intense fire to safety.

In 1983, Rogers was inducted into the Officer Candidate School Hall of Fame.

• Kenneth W. Stauss provided command and control for two simultaneous combat parachute assault airfield seizure operations during Operation Just Cause. He is buried near the final resting place of William O. Darby, leader of the Darby Rangers during World War II.

• Dennis L. Thompson withstood solitary confinement for three years while his captors attempted to beat and starve him into submission.

• Victor D. Valeriano returned a number of enemy grenades thrown into his position, which caused the enemy to withdraw.



• Richard D. Wandke served two tours in Vietnam. Though wounded, he was able to keep his company in contact with a superior force for 13 hours.

Family members of deceased rangers English, Pucel and Stauss will stand in for them at the ceremony.

The guest speaker is retired Brig. Gen. Richard J. Eaton, no relation to Maj. Gen. Paul Eaton. Steve Thiel will be the master of ceremonies.

Battle Boar Battalion changes command

Professionals made job 'easy'

Pfc. Brian Trapp

Brig. Gen. Lloyd Austin hands the battalion colors to Lt. Col. Wesley Gillman June 28 at the battalion's change of command.

The executive officer for the Infantry Branch with Personnel Command in Alexandria, Va., returned to 3rd Infantry Division to be the 81st commander of 1st Battalion, 30th Infantry Regiment, in a ceremony on Essebagger Field June 28.

Lt. Col. Wesley Gillman succeeds Lt. Col. Audy Snodgrass, who will stay on Fort Benning to be the deputy commander of 11th Infantry Regiment.

"I've had the easiest job in the world, Battle Boars," Snodgrass said. "We have such a bunch of professionals I haven't had to do more than give an occasional nudge. I haven't had to work hard because we have soldiers who want to make it happen."

"They say a commander's worth is based on the number of tubas he gets in his band, (at the change of command ceremony) and you have three, so you must be pretty good," said Brig. Gen. Lloyd Austin, deputy division commander.

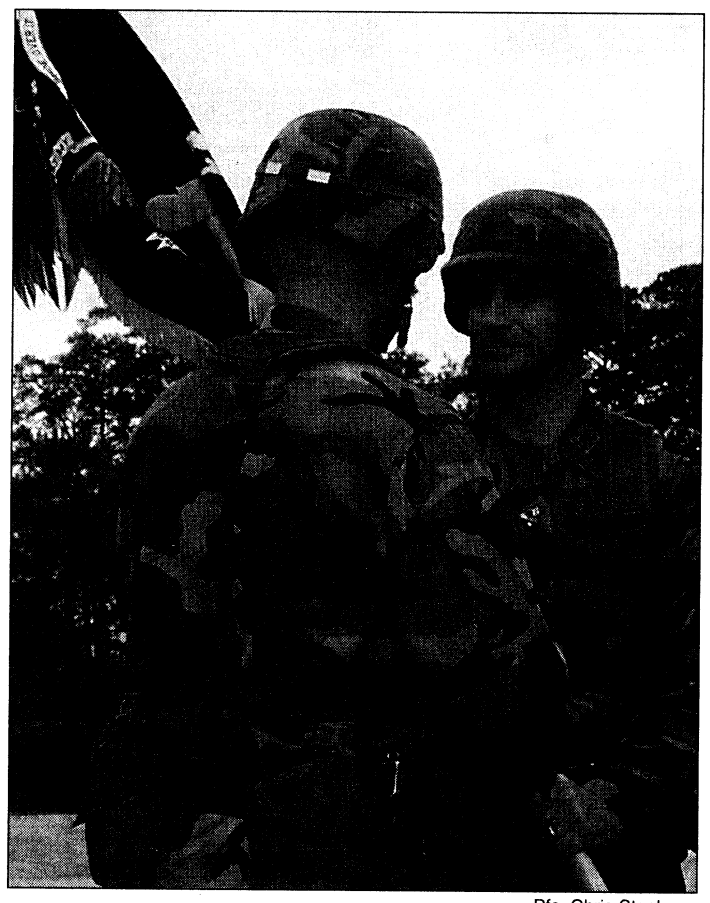
"A unit's leadership may change but the ethos and personality will stay the same," Austin said.

Snodgrass said goodbye to the battalion that worked under his command for approximately 742 days.

Gillman was first assigned to the 3rd Infantry Division in Germany and served as a platoon leader, support platoon leader and as a battalion logistics officer. After attending the Infantry Advanced Course, he returned to Germany and served as the battalion motor officer and as a company commander in Aschaffenberg, Germany.

He also served as an operations analyst and systems manager at the U.S. Army War College in Carlisle Barracks, Pa., and served as the battalion operations officer for 2nd Battalion, 7th Infantry Regiment.

"It's an honor to be back in the 30th (Infantry Regiment) and back to Fort Benning surrounded by all these great soldiers," Gillman said. "I look forward to continuing the standards of excellence."



Gillman is a 1984 graduate of the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, N.Y. He attended the Naval Postgraduate School in Monterey, Calif., and received a Master of Science in operations research. He also graduated from Infantry Officer Basic and Advanced Courses, Ranger School, Bradley Infantry Fighting Vehicle Commander's Course, Combined Arms Staff Service School and the Command and General Staff school.

Some of his decorations include the Bronze star medal with V device, Meritorious Service Medal with three Oak Leaf Clusters, Army Commendation Medal with three Oak Leaf Clusters, Kuwait Liberation Medal, Parachutist Badge, Combat Infantryman Badge and a Ranger Tab.

'Mailed Foot' battalion gets new commander

Commander looks forward to challenges

Pfc. Chris Stephens

Col. Thomas Hayden hands off the battalion colors to the new commander Lt. Col. Allen R. Smith.

A former Fort Benning Ranger and Airborne graduate made his return to the Home of the Infantry as he took command of the 2nd Battalion, 54th Infantry Regiment, June 26 in a change-of-command ceremony on Kanell Field.

Lt. Col. Allen R. Smith took command of the battalion nicknamed "Mailed Foot" from Lt. Col. Derek A. Miller, who is heading to Germany to work at Combat Maneuver Training Center in Hohenfels.

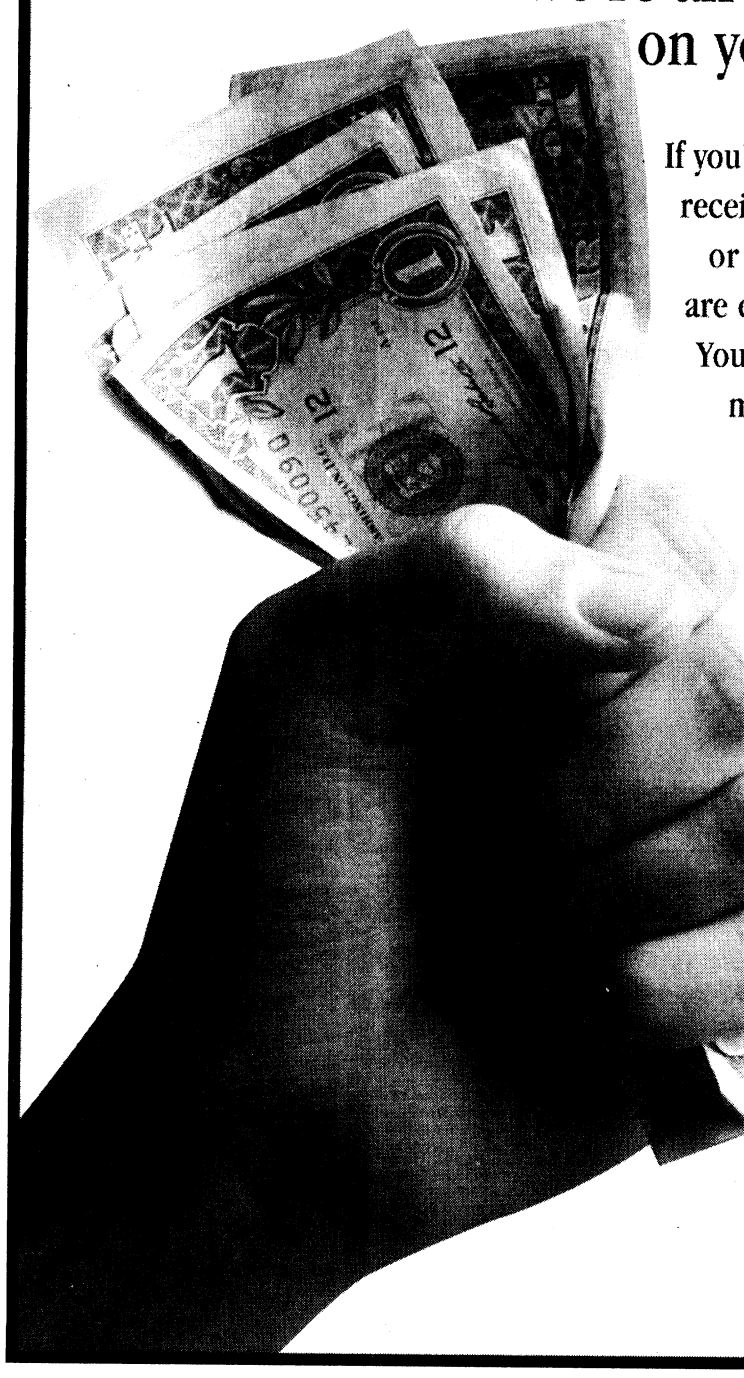
"I'm looking forward to my assignment in Germany," Miller said. "It is going to test me in every area and is going to offer many challenges to my job."

Smith is coming from the Joint Readiness Training Center in Fort Polk, La., and said he looks forward to the challenge of working with other officers and NCOs in helping transform civilians into soldiers.

"We will continue to train outstanding soldiers in this battalion who will, in the near future, make a significant contribution to the Army," Smith said.

Smith has also served in a variety of assignments which include service with the 82nd Airborne Division, Reserve Officer Training Corps at Georgia Military College, the 25th Infantry Division (Light).

Smith, a native of Mount Holly, N.C., received his commission from North Carolina State University in 1982.



He also graduated the Infantry Officer Basic and Advanced Courses, Ranger, Airborne and Jumpmaster Courses, Combined Arms Services Staff School and the Command General Staff College. During his 20 years of service, Smith has earned the Meritorious Service Medal, the Army Commendation Medal, and the Army Achievement Medal. He has also has been awarded the Ranger Tab, the Expert Infantryman's Badge and the Master Parachutist Badge.

The new battalion commander has been married for 17 years to his wife, Donna. They also have two children, Kathryn, 11, and Patrick, 4.

"I have to thank my wife and my children for helping me throughout my military career, Smith said. "Without their constant support and love, I would not be here assuming command of this battalion."

SMA urges focus on force protection

Top NCO urges all to stay alert

Dennis Ryan
Army News Service

WASHINGTON — Sgt. Maj. of the Army Jack Tilley urges everyone — troops, civilians and retirees — to focus on force protection to prevent another attack like Sept. 11.

"At one time we had 40,000 people on force protection," Tilley said. "As we get further and further away from Sept. 11, we feel it can't happen again."

Tilley said he is worried about the hot summer and how the stress of working long hours might affect soldiers' concentration.

Tilley

"If you don't stay focused, you could lose your life," Tilley said.

Tilley served in Vietnam from 1967 to 1968 and lost half of his platoon one night.

"We were overrun," Tilley said. "I'm not sure if we could have been more focused. I second-guess myself all the time. Every time I go down to that Vietnam Memorial wall, I look for the names of my friends."

Tilley said there are enough memorial walls to read, so soldiers need to stay alert.

"If you see something wrong and don't correct it, you're part of the problem," Tilley said. "All of us need to stay focused."

Tilley recalled a meeting with the commander of U.S. Central Command, Gen. Anthony Zini, shortly after the embassy bombing in Nairobi, Kenya.

"I talked to General Zini and asked him, 'do you think this is going to happen again,'" Tilley said? "And he said, 'It's just a matter of when and where.' He said they'll watch us for a long time looking for a weakness."

The sergeant major stressed how fire drills and battle drills saved lives on Sept. 11 and how anyone with knowledge of first aid helped the injured.

The 33-year Army veteran also urges veterans to help.

"Our retirees can do so much to help us," Tilley said. "This war on terrorism is going to go on a long time."

The Army's top NCO recalled how he was quite unpopular with the soldiers in Bosnia when he first reported there for duty in 1995.

"They were mad at me because I was enforcing standards," he said. "In the long run, they'll thank you."

Tilley praised the Army Reserve and National Guard contributions over the last nine months.

"We couldn't get the job done without the Reserve and the Guard," Tilley said. "They are doing a wonderful job.

"I can't tell the difference between the Guard and the Reserve. Today they are just as good as regular Army troops are."

> "I talked to General Zini and asked him, 'do you think this is going to happen again?' 'It's just a matter of when and where.' He said they'll watch us for a long time looking for a weakness."
> Sgt. Maj. of the Army Jack Tilley

Tilley advises soldiers to reassess what they are doing and look for ways to improve their performance.

He recalled visiting with wounded soldiers in the hospital in Germany after Operation Anaconda.

"A lot of them had been wounded two or three times, but they weren't looking for a ticket home," he said. "They wanted to be patched up and sent back to fight. The United States has great leadership in President Bush and Secretary Rumsfeld, but they can't do it by themselves. They need all of us to help them."

Process allows officers to choose assignments online

Move helps streamline reaction

Army News Service

WASHINGTON — Army officers are now able to submit their assignment preference statements via the Internet by accessing the U.S. Army Personnel Command home page.

The online preference statement enables officers, for the first time, the ability to view open valid requisitions that assignment managers are working to fill, according to officials.

"In the past, our customers have only been able to see open assignments on various branch web sites," said Jan Frutiger, automation branch chief for PERSCOM's Officer Personnel Management Directorate. "With the online preference statements, officers will have a broader view of the positions that assignment managers are working to fill.

"They will be able to evaluate the special requirements for the position before making their choice."

Branch, grade and area of concentration are the filters for the information that is shown on the preference statement.

Officers can make selections specifically by valid and open requisitions, by location or by specific duty such as joint, ROTC or recruiting.

The assignment manager will then have immediate visibility to this information as he walks through the decision process for filling a requisition.

"The preference statement is what the field has asked for," said Brig. Gen. David Valcourt the OPMD director. "It's going to empower officers to better participate in the decisions that impact their career and help streamline and improve the responsiveness of the officer assignment process."

Officers are able to select their preferences on the PERSCOM home page by clicking on the officer preference statement dog tag.

Soldiers teach Afghan officers ethics

Allies reminded of importance of human rights

Sgt. Don Dees
Army News Service

KABUL, Afghanistan — For one hour each week during training at the Afghan National Army Compound outside Kabul, Afghan officers gather to discuss dilemmas they may face as leaders.

Ethics training plays a role in leadership development in the U.S. Armed Forces, and soldiers from 1st Battalion, 3rd Special Forces Group, charged with training the Afghan National Army, have incorporated it here.

"This may be the most important thing we do here," said Chaplain Jack, who contributes to developing scenarios that the Afghan officers ponder during training.

Due to security concerns, Special Forces soldiers here are identified only by their rank and first name.

Chaplain Jack compares the new Afghan National Army to the early Continental Army under Gen. George Washington.

"When I look around, this is Valley Forge. These guys are the minutemen; they are the ones who answered the call," he said. "We had Baron Von Steuben come help us build a noncommissioned officers corps."

And the Afghans have U.S. Special Forces to help mold their cadre. At a recent session, the scenario found two lieutenants in charge of platoons in the same company patrolling an area known to be sympathetic to the enemy. During the patrol, one lieutenant's platoon is pinned down by enemy fire. The other platoon comes to the rescue, saving the lives of all in the first platoon.

> "In the grand scheme of things, whether an officer can shoot his rifle or not is not as important as whether or not he understands human rights in the context of his role as an officer and his commitment to the government."
> Capt. Stephen
> Special Forces trainer

The patrol continues and both platoons search local houses for signs of the enemy. They find weapons and maps in some homes. In one, the soldiers find a large amount of money.

Instructions are given for confiscating the military items. One platoon leader is called away to the radio as the items are being carted off.

Days later, the lieutenant who took the radio call learns that a family from the village is claiming to have been robbed of their money during the raid. When the two lieutenants discuss it, the one who took the money promises to share the captured money if the other remains silent.

The question posed to the officers by the U.S. cadre was, "what do you do?"

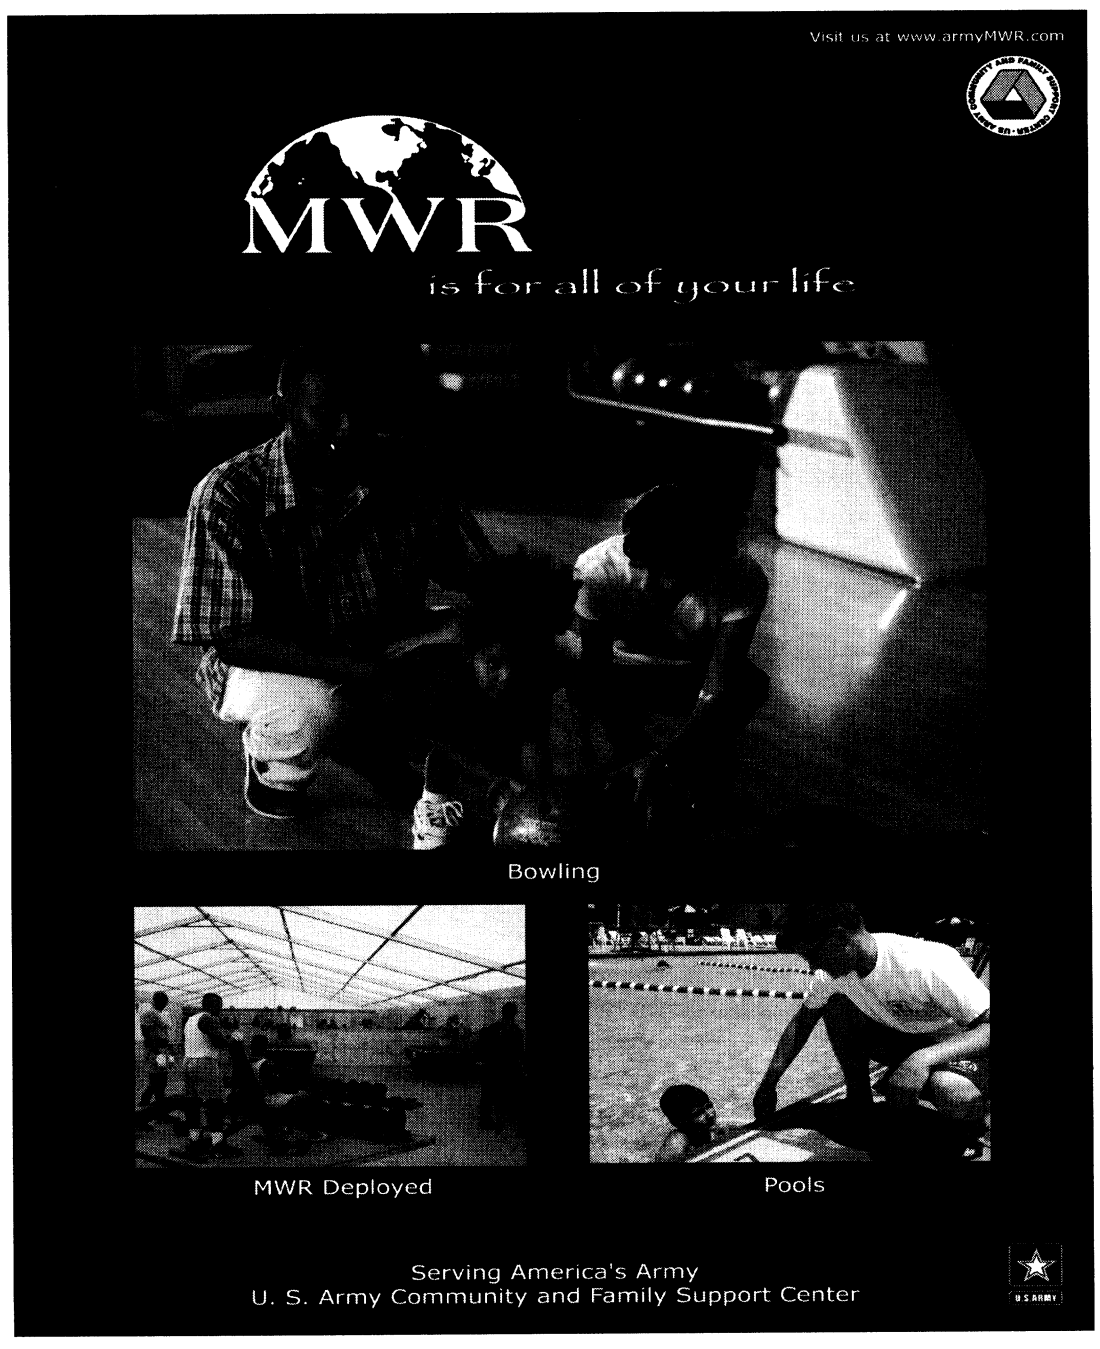
After an interpreter read the scenario to the group, Lt. Col. Kevin McDonnell, battalion commander, called up the two most junior officers in the room to come and discuss the scenario and how they would react.

In turn, each said he would feel gratitude to the officer who saved his life but would still have to notify the commander of the wrongly confiscated funds.

McDonnell congratulated the men on their choices.

"These two men should be proud of themselves for seeing the right solution, and each officer in this room should also be proud of these men," he said.

In a land where media still report illegal police checkpoints for motorist shakedowns, it is difficult for soldiers to see right from wrong.



"If leaders do what is right, soldiers see that and they do what is right. But if leaders do wrong, soldiers see that, and they will follow those examples," McDonnell said.

"In the grand scheme of things, whether an officer can shoot his rifle or not is not as important as whether or not he understands human rights in the context of his role as an officer and his commitment to the government," said Capt. Stephen from Charleston, S.C., another of the Special Forces trainers.

The discussion continued even after the session was adjourned.

"Next time I want a harder scenario," McDonnell said. "These guys are catching on too quickly."

Editor's note: Sgt. Don Dees was a member of the 356th Public Affairs Detachment who recently volunteered for duty in Afghanistan with the 300th MPAD.

Hospital: To hire civilian doctors to alleviate shortage

The Tricare access standards require Tricare patients in need of urgent care to be seen within 24 hours, those who need routine or nonurgent care within seven days, and those who require wellness appointments within 28 days.

Only patients with life-threatening needs will be seen within 24 hours, Pollock said.

Right now, only two doctors are in the emergency room during a shift. Patients who insist on using the emergency room may be waiting for several hours, Pollock said.

For instance, Spc. Dwayne Lizama and his wife, Vanessa, spent close to six hours in the emergency room June 29 because their 17-month-old daughter was throwing up.

"The doctor and the staff were doing the best they could," Lizama said. "All I care about is that my daughter gets the care she needs, and she did."

Nurses also answer phones 24 hours a day to assist soldiers and their families who are not 100 percent sure they need urgent care, Pollock said.

Patients can call 544-CARE and be forwarded to a nurse who will walk them through steps to possibly take care of themselves at home.

If patients still need immediate care and Martin Army doctors are not available, nurses may direct patients to one of the acute care clinics in Columbus.

"All of the hospitals in the military communities around the nation are facing the same obstacles," Pollock said. "Washington is well aware we are understaffed."

To alleviate the shortage, Martin Army Community Hospital is trying to hire civilian physicians as soon as possible. But Pollock admits they are having a tough time finding qualified physicians in such a small surrounding community.

"We need long-term solutions, not just a band-aid treatment," Pollock said.

Pollock and others in the medical community are working to persuade Washington to increase the number of people the hospital is allowed to have on active duty. That way, the hospital can have a back-up staff for times of need.

"Our hospital will recover by the end of the summer," Pollock said. "But we can't guarantee this won't happen again unless changes to the system are made."

Soldiers: Test Stryker, new concepts at exercise linked with one another.

The team from Fort Benning, most from infantry school units under Training and Doctrine Command and the Western Hemisphere Institute for Security Cooperation, will be referred to as the Joint Visitors Bureau during the experiment.

"We have the key task of informing the big decision makers of our country how prepared our armed forces are to fight the enemy, now and in the future," said Lt. Col. Arthur Tulak, deputy commander of the Joint Visitors Bureau. "We have been preparing for this for several months."

During the exercise, Marines, Navy, Air Force and Army personnel will perform simultaneous, joint tactical actions based on a shared understanding of the operational situations of each military force.

The four branches are at separate sites but must stay connected through a digital map of all forces and enemies.

"The Army won't ever go to battle and conduct a mission on its own," Tulak said. "We need to experiment this way to stay ahead of the enemy. The services must become more interoperable and share data."

The Navy will conduct its part of the exercise, Fleet Battle Experiment Juliet, off the California coast while the Marines conduct Mission Millennium Dragon on Camp Pendleton, Calif. The Air Force will conduct its exercise, the Joint Expeditionary Force experiment from Nellis Air Force Base, Nev.

The Army's newly emerging transformation brigade out of Fort Lewis, Wash., will lead the Army's portion of the challenge called Army Transformation Experiment 2002. It will mark the first appearance of the Interim Brigade Combat Team and its new Stryker Infantry Carrier Vehicle.

"The exercise will enable forces to get together and absorb what came out of joint operations in Afghanistan," said Jim Lewis, director of technology and public policy at the Center for Strategic and International Studies in Washington, D.C. "Operation Enduring Freedom showed joint operations were able to work well together against a relatively small opponent. The goal of the Millennium Challenge is to see if they would also work against a more significant adversary."

During its part of the Military Challenge, the Army will focus on its concept of the Rapid Decisive Operation, Tulak said. RDO is an operation designed to quickly resolve a conflict situation through the application of U.S. military forces' superior intelligence collection and processing capabilities, command and control systems and processes, precision targeting and force mobility.

"The experiment focuses on capabilities the military would like to have by 2007," Tulak said. "We want to establish a knowledge network to help service commanders plan in a joint environment."

In addition to the IBCT from Fort Lewis, the 2nd Battalion, 101st Aviation Regiment, Fort Campbell, Ky., 82nd Airborne, and 1st Corps Support Command out of Fort Bragg, N.C., will take part in the experiment, as well as the 3rd Corps Headquarters out of Fort Hood, Texas, the 11th Transportation Battalion from Fort Eustis, Va., and the 32nd Army Air Missile Defense out of Fort Bliss, Texas.

Fort Benning soldiers involved in the Joint Visitors Bureau will deploy July 17.

"We have an important task," said Maj. Maria Goines, chief of Itinerary Section for the JVB. "We have to ensure the key political players who are observing the challenge are given a thorough briefing."

Regulation: Hits Web

uniform insignia, regimental distinctive insignia, physical fitness uniform wear and pregnancy, the explosive ordnance detachment badge and the black mess uniform.

The beret, which is a new clothing item, is addressed in the updated regulation. When soldiers are not wearing the beret outside, they should be carrying it, Messman said.

Soldiers should not attach headgear to the uniform, hang it from their belt or put it in a uniform pocket. This headgear policy has always been in effect, Messman said. However, in maneuver environments placement of the utility cap is at the commander's discretion.

What people have to remember is that the Army regulation is the only publication that accurately spells out proper wear of the uniform, Messman said. Regardless of what media sources put out, soldiers should first seek clarification from AR 670-1, and focus on what the regulation states now, and what will go into affect in August.

The regulation was last revised in 1992 and is reviewed to keep pace with the times.

"The regulation has to change with time," Messman said. "If not we'd still be wearing uniforms from the Civil War."

Soldiers attack in close quarters combat

Soldiers learn battle tactics of modern field

Pfc. Brian Trapp

Some of the Infantry Training Brigade's soldiers spent time learning skills that may one day save their lives and the lives of their buddies at the Malone Military Operations on Urbanized Terrain site June 28.

The soldiers with C Company, 2nd Battalion, 54th Infantry Regiment learned some of the most critical infantry tactical skills close combat and fighting in an urban setting, said Staff Sgt. Scott Ross, drill sergeant with 2nd Bn, 54th Inf. Regt. Every country in the world has urban environments. Today's soldiers must be able fight in them.

"When you enter a room to clear it, you have to make a split-second decision on who your targets are, and this training will help them with that," Ross said.

The soldiers tried to soak in all the information to be able to make those decisions and seemed to enjoy doing it.

"We're learning a lot, and being National Guard, we can use these tactics during a deployment or on the home front helping police with riot control," said Pvt. Trent Garner, with 2nd Bn., 54th Inf. Regt. "This training will save my life someday."

With the chance of having to use this training in the future, meeting the standards were on the minds of many of the soldiers.

"MOUT training is some of the best training we've done," said Pvt. Darrell Grubbs with 2nd Bn., 54th Inf. Regt. "When we get deployed, it will most likely be to an urban environment. Without this, we would get in there and not know what to do."

The soldiers learned movements that would be used in close quarters combat. Engaging an enemy less than 12 meters away, soldiers could be firing from as little as two feet away from the enemy.

Soldiers also learned the situation dictates what they need to do. They received hands-on training with high intensity and precision level MOUT and received a class on surgical MOUT.

"In a high intensity MOUT there is just enemies, us and them — like in the bridge scene from Saving Private Ryan. We can use any means of force with minimal restriction," said Staff Sgt. Craig Pritchard, with 2nd Bn., 29th Inf. Regt.

In precision MOUT, the most common, there are noncombatants and rules of engagement soldiers need to follow.

Surgical MOUT is in the case of hostage rescues, prison operations and raids. These mission are usually carried out by special operations, Pritchard said.

Soldiers react to 'enemy' fire, find cover

Infantrymen learn basic techniques

Spc. Douglas DeMaio

Basic training soldiers from 1st Battalion, 50th Infantry Regiment, spent their first day of advanced individual training Monday learning Squad Tactical Training.

The soldiers learned how to suppress fire, split up into two teams and flank the opposition.

"I'm excited and interested about this training," said Spc. Anthony Ray. "It is very important for us to learn and understand.

"How can we learn anything more advanced until we get this down?"

The training is vital for operations soldiers perform on the battlefield, said Staff Sgt. Thomas Davis, instructor, 2nd Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment.

"We are at war, and this is their job," Davis said. "This is what infantrymen do."

The soldiers learned the basics of movement-to-contact tactics and techniques.

Once soldiers make contact with an enemy, squad members duck for cover and find concealment. Team A, the front part of the squad, moves forward and lays down fire. Before Team B flanks to the right or left of Team A, the squad leader, between Team A and B, communicates through hand signals and voice commands so the squads understand each other's actions.

"If they don't have an understanding of the training, they will be endangering their squad. They need to know how to operate as infantrymen and as a member of a squad," Davis said.

It's basic stuff, Ray said. But to an infantryman, it means everything.

The training provides soldiers with the basic knowledge of commands, signals and fire suppression to overcome an objective, said Staff Sgt. Lawrence Davis, instructor, 2nd Bn., 29th Inf. Regt.

"When these soldiers get assigned to their units, their standard operational procedures may be different," Lawrence said. "There may be different commands or signals for performing the same actions we teach."

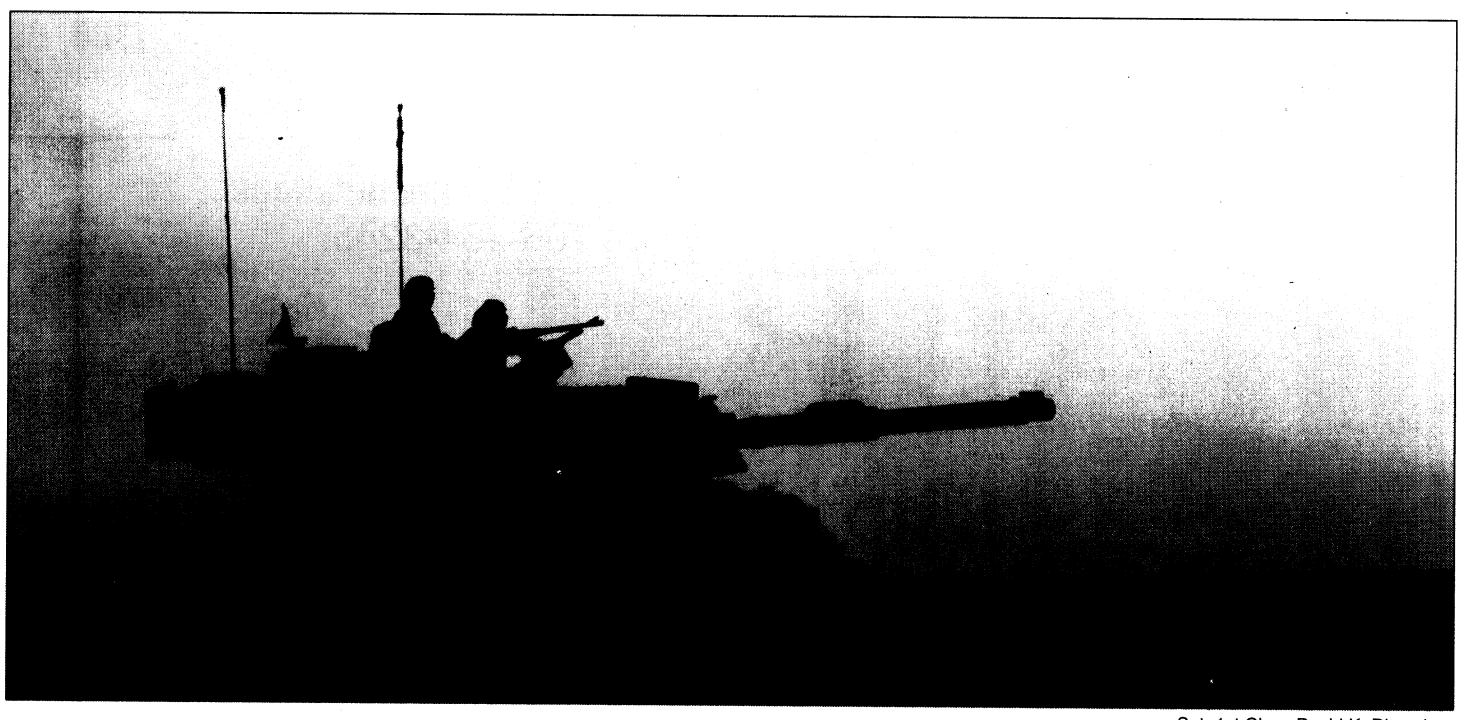
For example, the 82nd Airborne Division, Fort Bragg, N.C., may use purple smoke to signal a team to lift and shift fire, while the 75th Ranger Regiment might use a yellow flare to signal the same thing, Lawrence said.

The instructors are there to provide guidance and constructive criticism, Lawrence said.

"The training provides soldiers with comfort," Thomas said. "If we show confidence in our teaching, then, they will be confident with what they know and how they perform," Thomas said.

Fort Benning soldiers train with Kuwaiti forces

Task Force 1-41 teams up with allies



Pfc. Heather Boyne
82nd Airborne Division

Soldiers from the U.S. Army's Task Force 1-41 and the Kuwaiti Army's 57th Mechanized Battalion executed a coalition joint training exercise in northern Kuwait.

"The Kuwaitis don't stand alone," said Maj. Tim Newsome, operations officer, Task Force 1-41. "They have a good friend, (the U.S.), to help defend themselves."

One way to ensure that the Kuwaiti and U.S. troops can defend Kuwait efficiently side-by-side is to participate in training missions together, Newsome said.

The mission of the exercise was for Task Force 1-41, which is comprised of units from 3rd Brigade (Mechanized), 3rd Infantry Division, to relieve the 57th from designated fighting positions while defending the border of northern Kuwait.

Sgt. 1st Class David K. Dismukes

An M-1 A2 Abrams Tank of Task Force 1-41 moves to relieve Kuwaiti tanks during a coalition joint training exercise June 18 in ncrther Kuwait.

The exercise takes place every six months. It was the last in a sequence of computerized training events that were completed with the Kuwaitis. This was the only event that included real-world training, using real vehicles and soldiers in an operation in the field.

During the exercise, companies from Task Force 1-41 replaced Kuwaiti tanks with M-1 A2 Abrams Tanks at the fighting positions.

Task Force 1-41 would take control of the battle while the 57th pulled back and reconstituted after the exchange.

This creates a cycle in which the Kuwaiti and U.S. soldiers will be able to keep replacing each other to maintain a strong defense in the battlefield, said Maj. John Morris, the task force executive officer.

Overall, the training mission was successful, because it helped both sides coordinate to fight efficiently together, Morris said.

"If there is one thing that the (soldiers) got out of the exercise, it is the confidence to fight side-by-side and succeed," he said.

The Kuwaiti and U.S. soldiers who exchanged fighting positions quickly and efficiently under limited visibility demonstrated that both forces have a tremendous ability to work cohesively in the field, Morris said.

"The Kuwaitis were very responsive to the mission," he said. "They were very motivated about the training and demonstrated professionalism."

This exercise also shows soldiers what their purpose is in Kuwait.

"It shows soldiers we are a coalition partner here to prevent conflict and maintain stability in the area," Morris said.

Training augments the success of the overall mission in Kuwait, and joint training prepares soldiers for war, said Pfc. Derrick Fiedler, a driver and radio telephone operator for the Task Force 1-41 Technical Operations Center.

"It gets us used to operating under stress so soldiers know what to expect; it keeps our skills high," Fiedler said. "An army that doesn't train is an army that is not prepared."

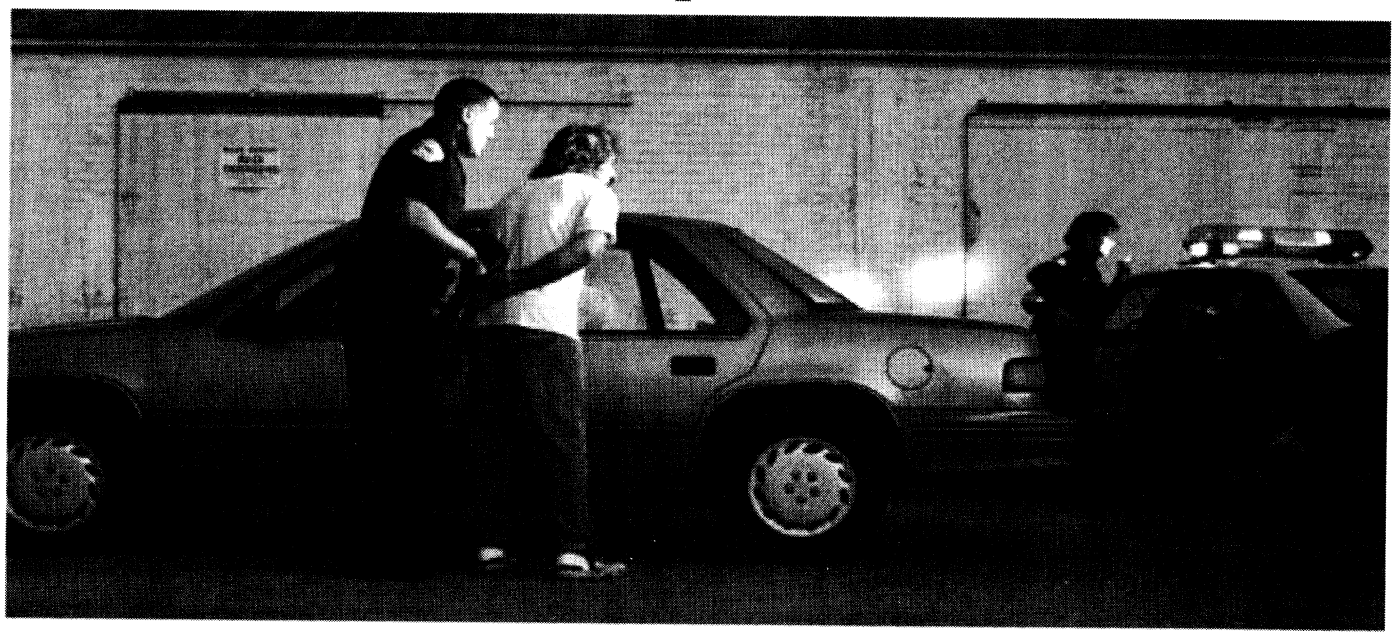
Vehicles Seized By Police To Be Sold Off To Local Car Buyers

Seized, confiscated and impounded vehicles result in unheard of low prices on like-new cars, trucks and sport utilities



Columbus, Ga, While it's still true "Crime doesn't pay" for the criminal, it may turn out to be quite rewarding for some local area car buyers this weekend. Thru Saturday, the criminal's loss is your gain as Rivertown Ford in Columbus will be offering vehicles seized by law enforcement agencies for sale direct to the public.

Buying police and government seized property has long been a great way to get incredibly low prices on cars, boats, even planes and houses. The problem for the public has been finding the auctions and sales where these items were being sold. Plus, many of these events are not open to the public. But that's now all in the past thanks to the Police Seized Vehicle Selloff .

"There are no special permits or licenses needed to shop or buy."

Why are these such bargains? Simply put, it's because the law enforcement organizations that take possession of these vehicles aren't in the car business. The F.B.I., D.E.A., U.S. Marshalls, Government Auctions and local Police and Sherriff organizations all seize vehicles on a daily basis. Additionally, a surprising number of vehicles impounded by the Police for illegal parking or traffic violations are never claimed by their owners. As a result, these organizations must either pay to store the vehicles, or sell them off.

Now, Rivertown Ford has secured many of these vehicles and will pass the savings on to consumers. "We have been planning for this event for over six months. We've scoured auctions throughout the country for these vehicles plus we've become a regular at the local impound lots" said Williams. He also stressed the dealership will make available plenty of other preowned vehicles so this event will include something for every buyer. "Hondas, Fords, Chevrolets, Toyotas, Dodges, Chryslers, Lexus, Nissans, Volkswagens, virtually every make is represented here. Some are even still under factory warranty. But you should get here early because I'm sure the most popular vehicles will sell first. "

The War On Drugs and "Three-Strike" laws have resulted in an overflow of vehicles becoming Police property.

"With these incredibly low prices, some payments are just $97 a month!"

Williams added buying one of these vehicles will be super simple. "There are no special permits or licenses needed to shop or buy. Plus, many buyers can just sign the necessary paperwork and drive home with no down payment. And with these incredibly low prices, some payments are just $97 a month."

"Many buyers can just sign the necessary paperwork and drive home with no down payment."

Williams concluded with a warning that this one-of-kind-event could be a one-time-only event. "It took a lot of work to put this event together and I'm not sure we'll be able to do it again. Make sure you come see us because missing the Police Seized Sell-Off would be a crime!"

Rivertown Ford is located at 1680 Whittlesey Rd in Columbus or call 706-653-7423. For further information and to reserve a vehicle, visit the official Police Seized Vehicle Selloff web site at

'You're in the South, now, honey'

Story by Bridgett Siter
Photos by Pfc. Brian Trapp

The kudzu is an invasive, perennial, woody vine that can grow as much as a foot a day. In the South's moderate climate, it takes just a few years for the kudzu to kill a large tree or cover a small barn.

"You're in the South now, honey. You'll have to get used to the roaches," the kind lady said as she handed me the keys to our first Georgia home and headed out the door.

I stared aghast at the carpet of tiny dead carcasses on the kitchen floor.

"You're in the South now, honey." Her words kept ringing in my ears as I swept a pile onto a dustpan. For just a moment I toyed with the idea of baking her a casserole — that's the kind of thing they do here in the South. But I thought better of it, dumped the little buggers in the trashcan, and made myself a tall glass of sweet tea.

You're in the South now, honey.

Welcome to Georgia — some would say the real South. Florida doesn't count since it's mostly populated with Yankees. Louisiana still belongs to the French, and no one wants to talk about Alabama. This is it, folks.

If you've lived at Fort Benning for more than six months, you already know all you need to know about The South. You can go sit on the porch (no spittin'). The rest of you come with me. I'll show you a thing or two about Southern livin' as you'll know it, way down here on the Chattahoochee.

Lesson 1: Southernspeak — We live in somewhat of a fishbowl on Fort Benning, removed from the stronger influences of Southern society to some degree. We're a melting pot of cultures, a well-balanced society.

But dare you set foot off post for more than a minute, and you'll fall prey to the Deep South Drawl. It's unavoidable, inevitable — and a heckuvalotta fun. Don't fight it.

Before you know it, you'll be spewing words like 'reckon,' 'okeedokee' and 'y'all.' You'll greet your neighbors with 'Hey there' and call little children 'sugar.' You'll forget everything you ever learned about enunciation and drop the letter 'g' from every word that ends with it. You followin'?

You'll learn to pepper your conversation with lots of adjectives and adverbs and otherwise superfluous words. "He's cute," will become "He's a cute little 'ol thang." "Pass the salt," will become "Reckon you could pass me the salt shaker, honey?"

And you'll hate yourself for it.

The bad news: There's no escape from the DeepSouth Drawl. It's as certain as the sun.

The good news: Once you get past your erroneous, preconceived ideas about the intelligence of anyone spewing Southernisms, you'll enjoy the humor and the lyrical flavor of Southernspeak. It's an art.

The bad news: When Uncle Sam deems it necessary to send you packing once again, you'll soon lose your Southern accent.

The good news: You'll take a little bit of the South wherever you go. It gets in your blood. You may lose the drawl in your speech, but you'll never forget the down-home genuine warmth of the South.

Up North, you see, a 'neighbor' is someone who lives next door. Down here, it's everybody you pass on the street. That's the beauty of the South.

Lesson 2: Southern wildlife — Alligators are arguably one of the South's biggest attractions. You can't drive more than 25 miles in any direction without passing a "World's Largest Gator" sign. Don't believe it, honey. My son put it best when he said, "World's largest alligator? That's a crock!"

It's entirely possible you'll never see an alligator around Fort Benning, but they do exist. One snacked on a dog at a local pond two years ago. Don't panic — I'm sure he's long gone, probably stuffed and mounted in a gas station somewhere in Phenix City. With a sign of course — "World's Largest Gator."

Another Southern draw is the lowly armadillo, poor fellow. No one's lining up to gander at the world's largest armadillo, but out-of-towners frequently brake to gawk at their iron-clad carcasses alongside the road.

You see, the armadillo isn't the sharpest knife in the drawer. In proportion to his weight — 10 to 15 pounds — his brain is the smallest of any North American mammal. But he's not without his talents. The armadillo can leap three feet straight up in the air. Little good it does him. With no sight or hearing to speak of, the poor critter doesn't recognize danger until it's right upon him, then he leaps straight up, into the grill of an oncoming car.

Deer are not unique to the South, but here on Fort Benning they own the road. You'll be seeing a lot of them, especially during hunting season. They like to hang out on Main Post, mostly around the golf course and Marne Road, and wave to hunters as they pass on their way out to the hunting areas. Just to show them what they'll be missing.

Feral pigs are abundant here also. And annoying. They're uglier than the armadillo and can't be too much smarter, since they once desecrated the ranger monument and brought the wrath of every ranger on post down upon their heads. It's open season on ferals all year long.

There are lots of pesky critters here on post, not all unique to the South — squirrels, mosquitoes and no-see-ums (pictured here). But non-natives tend to forget these pests exist north of the Mason-Dixon, hence the oft overheard "I've never seen so many squirrels in my life," and "My lands, these are the worst mosquitoes I've ever seen. I've a good mind to go back to the Bronx and take my chances with the street thugs."

Note: It's not a good idea to voice such a proposal in front of a Southerner, who's likely to pack you a lunch and point you in a northerly direction.

Lesson 3: Southern vegetation — The tropicals typically associated with the South — palms and cacti — can be found in Florida. But why fight the crowds in that sun-baked tourist trap, when you can chill in the shade of a perfectly good pine?

Careful, though. Many a Yankee foreigner has fallen asleep under the pines and fallen prey to the kudzu vine, the South's vegetative version of The Blob. It swallows everything in its path, creating giant topiaries out of forests and fences and barns — and tourists, if they sit still long enough. You can see kudzu's handiwork along the Riverwalk on Fort Benning.

Spanish moss is another quaint Southern charm. Old Southern trees, like old Southern gentlemen, often sport long, gray beards. And like old men, they have stories to tell, wisdom to share, if you'll sit a spell and listen.

Contrary to popular belief, Spanish moss doesn't harm trees or humans. Florists often use it on grapevine wreaths and floral arrangements. You can too, if you soak it in bleach to kill the tiny red bugs it harbors, then let it dry in the sun.

Main Post trees are very old, though they don't have beards to testify to it. The Main Post "canopy" was a gift from Fort Benning's founding fathers, who had the foresight to plant hundreds of oaks, birches and maples in the late 1920s.

Much of the Main Post's forest, like its homes, has been carefully preserved to maintain the flavor of the old South.

Of course the South is farm country, and you don't have to travel far from Fort Benning to see sprawling acres of peanuts and cotton. Learn more about the South's agricultural heritage at The Old South Farm Museum in Woodland. Or visit the tiny town of Plains, the home of former president Jimmy Carter, whose soft Southern persona masks the brilliant mind of a world leader.

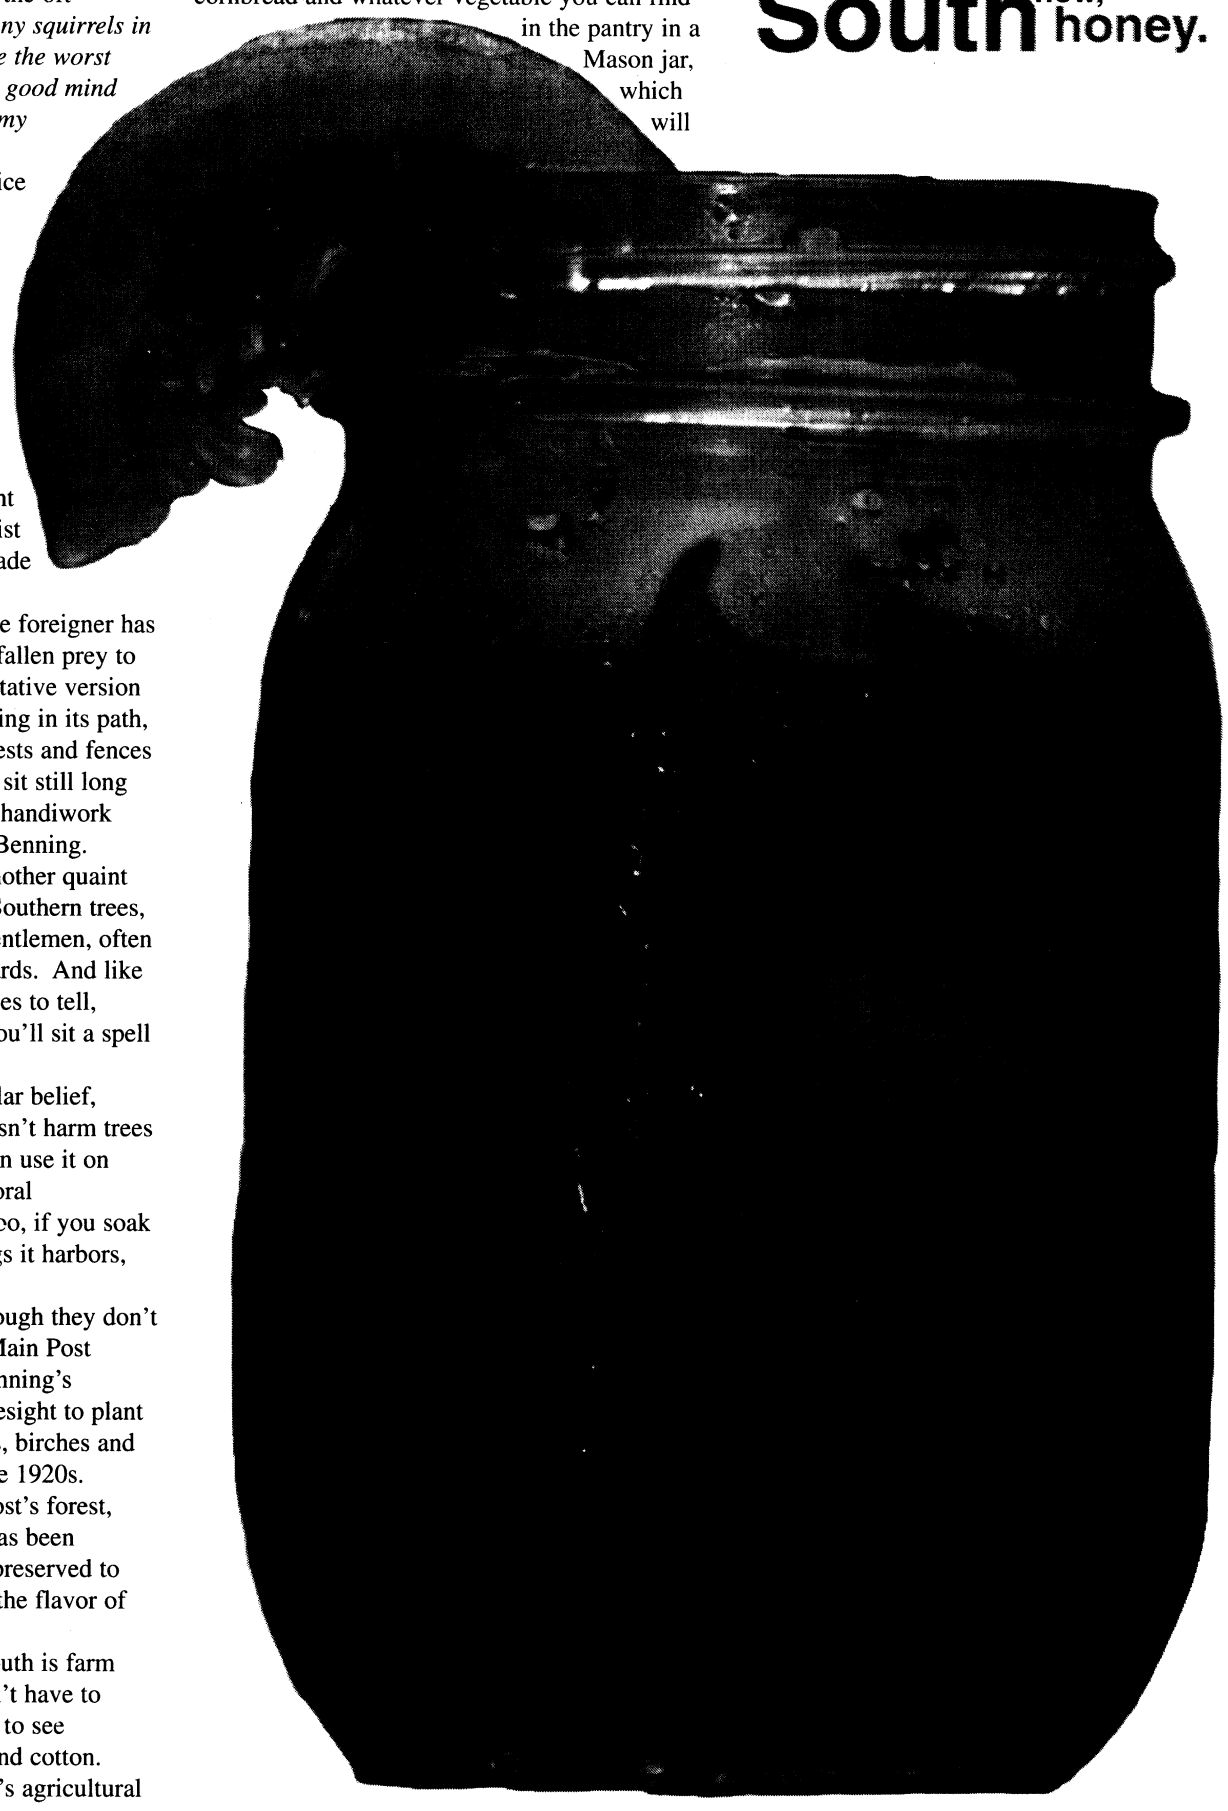
Lesson 4: Southern eatin' — Manners are important, honey, but here in the South common sense rules. If a chicken leg was meant to be eaten with a fork, it wouldn't have come with a handle.

There are really only two rules set in stone for the Southern diner:

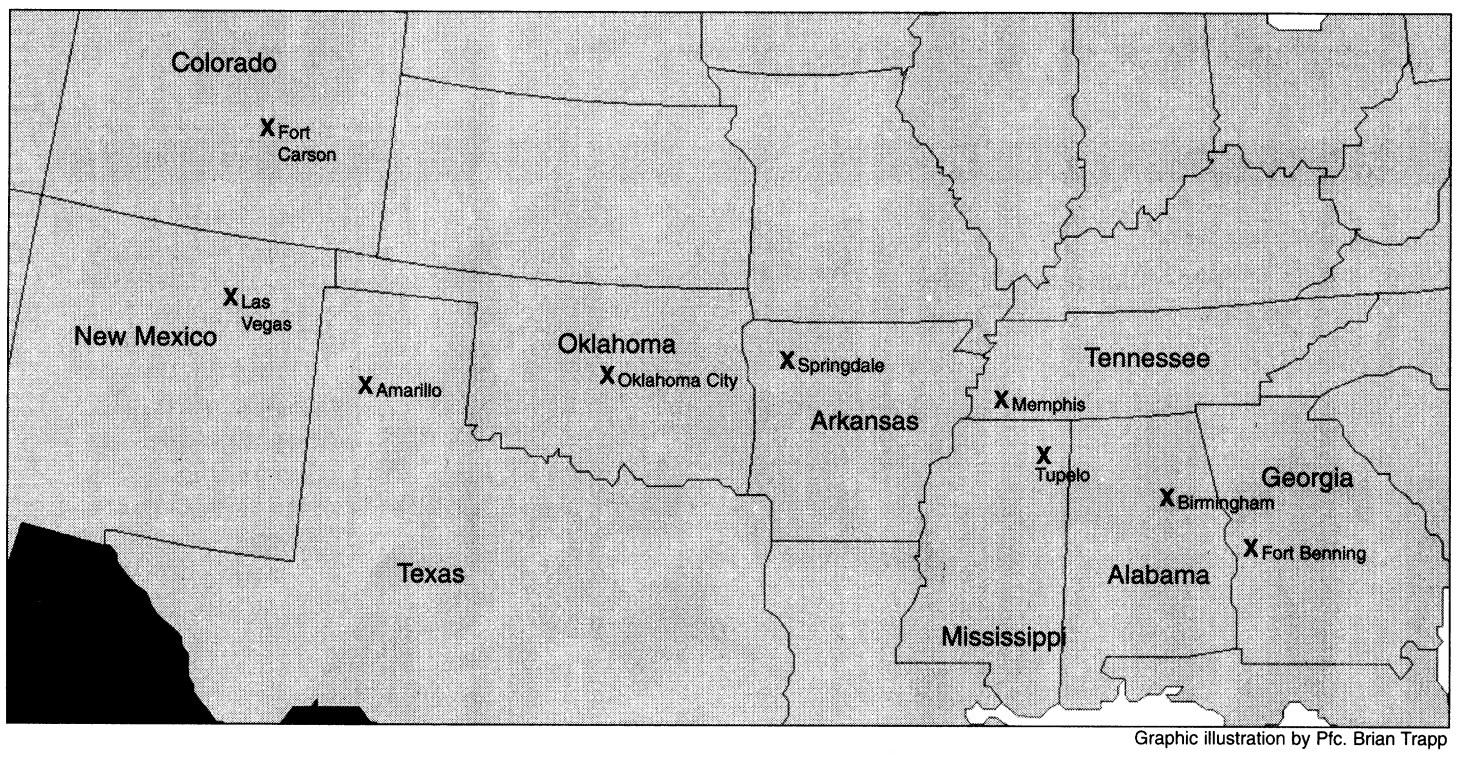
Number one — Always ask the blessin'. This is an honor usually reserved for the oldest mouth at the table. Keep it short and simple, so as not to let supper get cold.

Number two — Always clean your plate. Every last kernel. And if it's barbecue, it's practically a requirement that you lick your fingers.

Southern fare is simple. Lots of meat and vegetables. Lots of breads and biscuits and dumplings. Very little pasta.



Breakfast is a big deal in the South, hence the proliferation of Waffle Houses. You can get your eggs fried, scrambled or fricasseed — but never poached — with grits, bacon and sausage. But if you ask for a bagel, you're sure to hear, "Y'all ain't from around here, are ya?"



True Southerners don't "do lunch." They fix dinner. It's likely to include beans and cornbread and whatever vegetable you can find in the pantry in a Mason jar, which will be used at a later meal to serve sweet tea. Southerners invented recycling.

Supper in the South is still a family affair. It's a meat and potatoes kinda meal with an emphasis on conversation. Sit long, eat much. Come back real soon.

So there you have it, your guide-at-a-glance to life in the South. Clip it and save. It's sure to come in handy — if nothing else, it's great for swattin' roaches.

In case you haven't heard it yet, allow me to be the first to say — Welcome! You're in the South now, honey.

Experts say, traveling 'ultimate adventure'

Angela Sachitano
Special to the Bayonet©

As thousands of military families make their way from one duty station to the next this summer, The Bayonet will highlight several routes soldiers may drive while heading from one post to the next. This week highlights the route from Fort Benning to Fort Carson in Colorado Springs, Colo.

If moving across the country with a car full of kids sounds overwhelming and exhausting, the truth is, it probably is.

Few families look forward to spending days on the road, sleeping in one motel after the other, trying to save money on food by eating ham and cheese sandwiches on crushed bread with crushed chips.

The summer trip from one post to the next doesn't sound like much of a vacation, but travel experts say traveling across the country has proven to be the ultimate adventure.

"We have military families who come to us throughout the year asking for advice on how to plan a cost-efficient trip," said Linda Guerrero, a travel agent with Triple A in Columbus. "If you want to see the country up close this is the way to do it."

Fort Carson in Colorado Springs, Colo., will be the destination for hundreds of Fort Benning families this summer. Thanks to some careful research on randmcnally.com, the following is a road trip mapped out to show families the best that part of the country has to offer.

• First stop, Birmingham, Ala. The Birmingham Heritage Festival will celebrate African-American culture using six stages of local and national acts featuring reggae, jazz, blues, R&B, Caribbean and gospel. Birmingham is only a few hours away and as the first stop can be a very educational visit.

The Birmingham Civil Rights Institute serves not just as a museum, housing exhibits and displays; the institute is also a storehouse and archive of documents and artifacts relating to African-Americans, end race relations in the U.S. during the Civil Rights Era.

The institute includes an Archives Department, which collects and preserves documents and artifacts; and an Oral History Project that focuses on the Civil Rights Movement in Birmingham from the point of view of witnesses and participants.

• Second stop, Tupelo, Miss. Tupelo is perhaps best known as the birthplace of Elvis Presley. Elvis Aron and a twin brother, Jesse Garon, who died at birth, were born to mother Gladys Jan. 8, 1935 in the bedroom of a modest two-room "shotgun shack," built by Elvis' father Vernon at a cost of $180. Both rooms (the second room served as the family kitchen) are open to the public, as are a museum and a chapel, both of which are located behind the house.

The museum features many rare items from Elvis' early childhood in Tupelo, as well as more familiar regalia, including one of the jumpsuits he wore during his days on the Las Vegas showroom stage.

Tupelo is not only on the map because of the King but for several events that happened there even before Elvis was born. The Tupelo National Battlefield is a historic site visitors from all around the country flock to see. General Sherman's forces fought a key battle with Confederate soldiers in an effort to safeguard their supply line during the advance on Atlanta. Exhibits, films, and tours are given daily.

Another must see for families is the Natchez Trace Trail. On their way to the "Old Southwest," early explorers followed the tracks of animals and the established paths of Native Americans. Eventually this series of trails was consolidated and extended 450 miles from the Tennessee Valley into Mississippi. This wilderness road became known as the Natchez Trace, and by 1810, it was one of the busiest routes to the west. Today, the Natchez Trace Parkway parallels the old trail as it passes through Tennessee, Alabama and Mississippi. The original track has been designated as a National Scenic Trail, and portions of it are now open to the public. Eventually, 110 miles of the Natchez Trace in three segments near Nashville, Tenn., and Jackson and Natchez, Miss., will be restored. Trace State Park is only 10 miles west of Tupelo. The state park is among rolling hills and offers developed campsites — most facing the 600-acre lake — cabins, primitive undeveloped tent camping, and 25 miles of multi-use trails covering the park's 1900 acres. All sites are first-come, first-served, but reservations are required for the cabins. The lake was designed so that half is used only for fishing and the other half for water-skiing and fishing, and it is stocked with bass, bream, crappie, and catfish.

• Third stop, Memphis, Tenn. Memphis, on the heart of the Mississippi River, has been one of the most popular cities in the south since the early 20th century and for good reason.

Mud Island, in the heart of Memphis, is a 52-acre river park and entertainment complex dedicated to life on the Mississippi River. It includes the "River Walk," a detailed, flowing scale model tracing the river's course all the way to the Gulf of Mexico, and America's only Mississippi River museum.

Memphis is well known for being the site of Elvis Presley's mansion, Graceland. Each August, fans from around the world descend upon the city for the annual Elvis Week Celebration. Performing and visual arts, theme dances and music are all part of this royal celebration.

The National Civil Rights Museum located on the site of the Lorraine Motel, where Martin Luther King Jr. was shot, is a more somber way of showing us a part of Memphis' history that many are not so proud of.

The museum uses life-sized exhibits to recreate key events in the Civil Rights movement. Visitors can step on the Montgomery Bus and view written and photographic records from the Brown v. Board of Education desegregation trial.

• Fourth stop, Springdale, Ark. This busy city in Arkansas's thriving northwest corner offers numerous cultural opportunities amidst the scenic beauty of the Ozarks. Nearby Beaver Lake has camping, fishing, boating, and most other forms of outdoor recreation. You can visit the excellent Shiloh Museum of Ozark History with its thousands of artifacts and photographs documenting the traditional Ozark way of life. The Arts Center of the Ozarks has theater, dance and musical programs as well as displays of the visual arts.

For families who have ever wondered about the myth surrounding the creation of Wal-Mart, the Wal Mart Visitors Center is located 14 miles north in Bentonville, Ark. Families can visit the old five-and-dime where the Wal-Mart empire got its start, see artifacts commemorating company founder Sam Walton, and learn about Wal-Mart's rags-to-riches history.

The family's first discount dry-goods store has been re-created to look just as it did when "Mr. Sam" opened it a half-century ago.

Pea Ridge Military Park is a 4,300-acre battlefield park that commemorates a decisive Civil War battle in which Union and Confederate soldiers fought for control of Missouri. The fighting, which took place in March 1862, ended with a Union victory. Much of the battle took place near Elkhorn Tavern, a reconstruction of which exists as part of the exhibit.

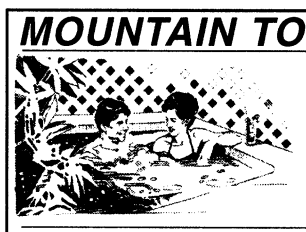
• Fifth stop, Oklahoma City, Okla. Passing through Oklahoma, families will get a kick out of the National Cowboy Hall of Fame.

The museum covers the full spectrum of the Old West, with 10 galleries displaying the contributions of Native Americans, pioneers and cowboys. Visitors can see replicas of a gold mine, a sod house and a Western village. The museum features displays celebrating rodeo heroes, Wild West performers, cowboys and many other Western notables.

The Oklahoma Bombing Memorial is located in the heart of Oklahoma City and tells the story of the day our nation will never forget. The memorial is dedicated to the victims of the Oklahoma bombing.

• Sixth stop, Amarillo, Texas. Set on the rugged plains of the Texas Panhandle, Amarillo is a Western town of cowboys, cattle ranches, and country music. The Big Texan Steak Ranch has weekly Opry Nights, and the American Quarter Horse Heritage Center and Museum informs and entertains. The Don Harrington Discovery Center has a treasure house of hands-on exhibits, a planetarium, and Aquariums of the World.

About 20 miles south of town, Palo Duro Canyon slashes through the landscape, cutting 1,200 feet deep and opening up 90 million years of geology in its color-splashed walls. Here in a handsome outdoor amphitheater, Texas, a musical drama of the 1880s, is presented in the summer.



Palo Duro Canyon State Park is marked by a thousand-foot-deep canyons carved by a branch of the Red River. A historical marker shows the place of the last great Indian battle in Texas in 1874.

• Seventh stop, Fort Union National Historic Site, in Las Vegas, N.M. The first of three forts was built on this site as a Santa Fe Trail supply depot and headquarters for the Ninth Military Department in 1851. The second, an eight-pointed earthwork, was built during the Civil War against the threat of Confederate attack. The third fort, a collection of more than 50 adobe structures, was built between 1863 and 1869, and was in its day the largest fort on the frontier west of the Mississippi. Kit Carson and the New Mexico Volunteers used the fort as a base, and it employed more than a thousand workers. It was abandoned in 1891 and fell to ruins. Here, visitors can still see wagon ruts of the old Santa Fe Trail.

• Eighth stop, Capulin Volcano, Raton, N.M. Capulin Volcano is the cone of a volcano that was active only about 10,000 years ago.

It is one of the few places in the world where you can actually look inside of a volcano. A two-mile road spirals to the summit, ending at a parking area where the crater gives you an opportunity to see the inside of a volcano.

• Final stop, Fort Carson, Colo. Fort Carson, nestled in the Rocky Mountains of Colorado Springs, Colo., is a destination that in itself is its own piece of paradise. Whether it be Pike's Peak or the Seven Falls Waterfalls, families who have been stationed here rarely complain of a lack of things to see and do.

on post

Housing offices — The following housing offices will be closed Friday because of the training holiday — Unaccompanied Personnel Housing (Building 973), Family Housing (Building 1836) and Community Homefinding Relocation and Referral Service (Building 2621).

Clearing quarters — The Fort Benning Housing Division wants to remind families clearing quarters they have two options when it comes to choosing a cleaning crew.

If families use the Fort Benning cleaning division, they will pay one fee to the post and leave the rest up to the Fort Benning cleaning crew.

If families use a cleaning company on their own, they are responsible for payment and cannot leave quarters until a final inspection of the home is completed.

For more information on clearing quarters, call the Housing Division at 545-2993.

Lending Closet — Because of an increase in family need, the Lending Closet is asking all families who have borrowed household goods to return the items borrowed as soon as their belongings are delivered to them.

For more information, call the Lending Closet 545-4485.

OSC Thrift Shop — The OSC Thrift Shop is in need of daily and summer volunteers. In order to be a volunteer at the OSC Thrift Shop, the following guidelines must be met: be a soldier or family member with a military ID card, and be at least 13 years old. The following benefits are immediately available to volunteers working two hours or more each time the Thrift Shop is open for business: first pick of newly consigned merchandise, child care reimbursement for up to two children and more.

For more information, call 687-4830 or go by the OSC Thrift Shop and pick up a volunteer booklet.

Holiday garbage pick-up schedule — Because of the July 4th holiday, there will be no garbage or yard waste or recycling pickup in Family Housing today. Areas normally scheduled for garbage pick up Thursday will be picked up July 8.

For more information, call 545-4332.

Commissary — The Fort Benning commissary will not be closed July 8 to 9 for the "Super Store" reset. The reset has been rescheduled for later in the year.

Unit's family day features jalapeño-eating contest

Sgt. Daniel Monroy
WHINSEC PAO

Families at the Western Hemisphere Institute for Security Cooperation converged at Uchee Creek to kick off the summer with music, dance, food and festivities June 21.

WHINSEC's annual Family Day featured static displays — a UH-60 Black Hawk and an armored vehicle — and different activities for the whole family, said Capt. Luis Rodriguez, WHINSEC, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, commander and chief coordinator of the event.

While children swarmed for a photo with "McGruff the Crime Dog," adults brought their stomachs to the threshold on the Gyroscope Machine, one of the many attractions on hand for the event.

"They're bouncing around nonstop," Spc. Melissa Luciani said, while helping small children onto the Space Walk Inflatable Castle.

"Alex is going to be exhausted after today," Staff Sgt. James Bobadilla said of his 3-year-old son.

"We have boat rides, the Bungee Bull, volleyball, soccer; there's something for everybody," said 1st Sgt. Victor Vellon, HHC first sergeant.

Throughout the day, games and contests were played for prizes, and awards were presented for soccer and volleyball winners.

A cash prize of $25 was also awarded to the person daring to win the jalapeño-eating contest.

Pointing to enough food for 600 people, Rodriguez said the event would not have been possible without the working contributions of the WHINSEC Family Support Group.

"Throughout the year, volunteers came together and raised money by conducting car washes and bake sales. We also would like to thank the Morale, Welfare and Recreation center for their assistance and others at WHINSEC who also contributed to the family day," Rodriguez said.

Setting up and running events were a combined effort of soldiers, officers and family members, Rodriguez said.

"Teamwork makes days like these memorable for the families, especially the children," said Capt. Jorge Nuñez, a Peruvian navy captain and guest instructor at WHINSEC.

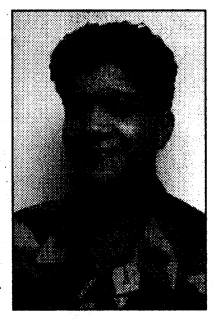
Freedom comes with price we all pay

Rules keep behavior in check

Chaplain (Capt.) Deirdre Stoklein
Family Life Ministries Center

It's 5:20 a.m. Sunday morning. As I prepare to go to the airport, I recall the unpleasant events of my last air trip.



It was just weeks after Sept. 11, and I was the one person from my flight they chose to inspect before boarding the plane.

After security searched me they began to open my lipstick and inspect my unmentionables. I felt violated. But, as my embarrassment and temper began to elevate, I remembered that this was the price we all have to pay for freedom.

It costs something to live in a free nation, and freedom comes with a price.

Our forefathers fought for freedom and established rules to ensure that freedom. What a necessary contradiction. The same rules that hinder certain behavior ensure the freedom of others in our society.

REFLECTIONS

Stoklein

Case in point, in the military, we fight for the freedom to think what we please. But, we cannot always say what we think. If you attempt to force your beliefs, religious or otherwise, upon another person in the military, independence and freedom is threatened.

There are necessary boundaries that shape independence. We base these boundaries on truths that are self evident, that all men are created equal. And yet, equality also has its price.

Truth brings with it limits to equality. John 8:32 reads: "And you shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free."

Unless you're a thief, and the truth has just landed you in jail, freedom has boundaries, and it comes at a significant price.

America is a smorgasbord of culture, religion and race. As a nation and a people we come together with diverse beliefs, backgrounds and cultures.

We are a melting pot of skin tones, worship practices, foods and dress. These United States are united in the face of diversity, and that's what makes America so great.

As an independent nation we eat, sleep and fight for the freedom to be ourselves. With the fight comes the surrender to authority and the rules that govern freedom.

It is my sincere prayer that on this Fourth of July you celebrate with more than beer and hotdogs.

I hope that each of us takes the time to celebrate in prayer that America is a blessed, free and powerful nation.

CHAPEL NOTES

Protestant Women of the Chapel — PWOC is taking its summer break.

Bible studies for women will resume July 18 at 9:30 a.m. The ladies meet in the Custer Terrace Chapel on Craig Drive. Child care is provided.

The summer series is That The World May Know, a video tour through the lands of the Bible with life changing lessons from the Word of God.

For more information, call Krista Moore at 323-0128.

Catholic Women — The Catholic Women of the Chapel meet twice each month to discuss issues concerning them and their religious faith.

They gather from 9:30 to 11:30 a.m. on the first Friday of the month at the Martin Army Hospital Chapel.

Mass is held along with a special program.

They also meet the third Monday of the month at the Infantry Center Chapel Annex from 7 to 9 p.m.

Altar Servers — St. Maurice Parish is in need of altar servers. Training sessions will begin at 9:30 a.m. on July 27 at Sightseeing Road Chapel.

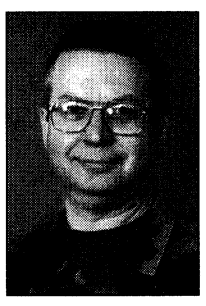
For more information, call Monica Manganaro at 545-3438.

Watch for these danger signs in marriage

Handle conflicts in mature, adult manner

Chaplain (Maj.) Raymond Koop
Family Life Ministries Center

Marriages are damaged when disagreements and conflict are poorly handled.



Studies show the presence of just four danger signs will adversely affect a marriage.

Escalation during disagreements indicates couples are unable to exit heated arguments.

Couples that escalate an argument often become more vocal or use a sarcastic tone of voice.

They do not keep their focus on the problem at hand. They bring up issues from the past.

They are unable to separate the problem from their spouse.

Koop

They tend to rationalize, justify, defend and excuse their behavior.

In addition, they attack the other person by pointing out their partner's mistakes or inconsistencies.

Being insensitive to your mate's feelings is a subtle form of invalidation. Insults, put downs and name calling are more obvious forms of invalidation.

Mind reading is a form of negative interpretations. Instead of giving a person the benefit of the doubt, one marriage partner ignores, discounts, minimizes or re-interprets what their partner says or does.

Withdrawal and avoidance are forms of stonewalling. Avoidance fails to deal with issues in the first place. "I don't want to talk about it," is a common indicator of avoidance.

Setting a time to talk about an issue gets the couple back on track. Pulling away, shutting down or leaving without saying when you will return are forms of withdrawal.

Escalation, invalidation, negative interpretations, and withdrawal or avoidance mean that couples are not as nice, polite, respectful, tactful or civil to those closest to them.

These negative danger signs will destroy a marriage even when couples work to increase the positive aspects in their relationships.

A remedy to these danger signs is found in scripture. "Do not let any unwholesome talk come out of your mouths. Be kind and compassionate to one another, forgiving each other" (Galatians 4:29-32).

Would you like to make your marriage better? Free counseling and support are available.

Marksmen win medals in Atlanta

Fort Benning competitors rally in events

Scott Enten
USA Shooting

ATLANTA — A 2000 U.S. Olympian, Adam Saathoff, 27, an EMT firefighter from Sierra Vista, Ariz., secured the gold medal June 22 in the men's 10 meter running target mixed event at the 2002 USA Shooting National Championships, scoring 387 of a possible 40 points. Koby Holland, 28, of Dillon, Mo., took the silver with a 381, followed by the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit's Sgt. 1st Class Lance Dement, 33, another 2000 U.S. Olympian originally from San Antonio, Texas, getting the national bronze medal with a 378.

In competition at Fort Benning, another USAMU running target mainstay, Sgt. Armando Ayala, 30, a native of El Paso, Texas, took home the gold medal in the men's 50 meter mixed runs event with a score of 380. Dement brought home the silver, also with a 380.Dement was able to add another gold to his collection with a win in the 50 meter 30+30 event with a score of 576 of a possible 600. Hank Gray, 23, of Bozeman, Mont., took the silver at 575, while Ayala picked up the bronze with a score of 571.

Matt Emmons, 21, a University of Alaska at Fairbanks junior from Browns Mills, N.J., claimed his second national medal of these championships with a win June 21 in the men's prone rifle match.

Emmons sank home 10 more solid shots to add another 104.7 points to his score for the national gold medal, a near miraculous performance under these conditions. Emmons was challenged briefly by USAMU shooter Sgt. 1st Class Tom Tamas, 37, of Columbus, a two-time U.S. Olympian and the co-world record holder in this event, but his 1192 qualifying round score coupled with a 103.0 final was just not enough to catch the younger shooter.

Emmons made up for a marginal first day's score of 1162 with an 1173 June 23 to take ahead going into the men's 3x40 rifle medals final round over a pair of USAMU shooters, with two points on Staff Sgt. Jason Parker, 27, of Cusseta, Ga., and five points ahead of Mike Anti, 38, of Winterville, N.C..

e6Parker made a game attempt to overtake Emmons in the ten-shot final, but a weak last shot gave the gold to Emmons.

It was the UAF Nanook's second win of the national meet, with a total score of 2433.1 against Parker's 2432.4.

USA Shooting is recognized by the US Olympic Committee and the International Shooting Sport Federation as the national governing body for the Olympic and international shooting sports in the United States.

Engineer Group soldiers build esprit de corps

Canceled game leads to scrimmage

Sgt. William A. Graves
Bayonet assistant editor

Roughrider Tony Nguyen walked past Seahorse soldiers many times in his short time on post. They were strangers, so he did not talk to them.

Things began to change June 27 during a scrimmage at 6 p.m. the teams played at Knappenburger Field. The 63rd Engineer Company Roughriders were four players short because of the soldiers' operation tempo, so they forfeited the game. Their fellow engineers from Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 36th Engineer Group, lent them players so the teams could play for fun.

"We were happy to give them the players they needed," said Seahorse Joshua Dimitri. "They are an important part of the 36th's team, and anytime we can help them out — be it with mission or a morale activity — we'll do it."

A fun, close 9-7 Roughrider victory was the team's reward.

"It's a morale builder," Dimitri said. "I have some hard days, and knowing I'm playing softball in the evening makes the day go by faster."

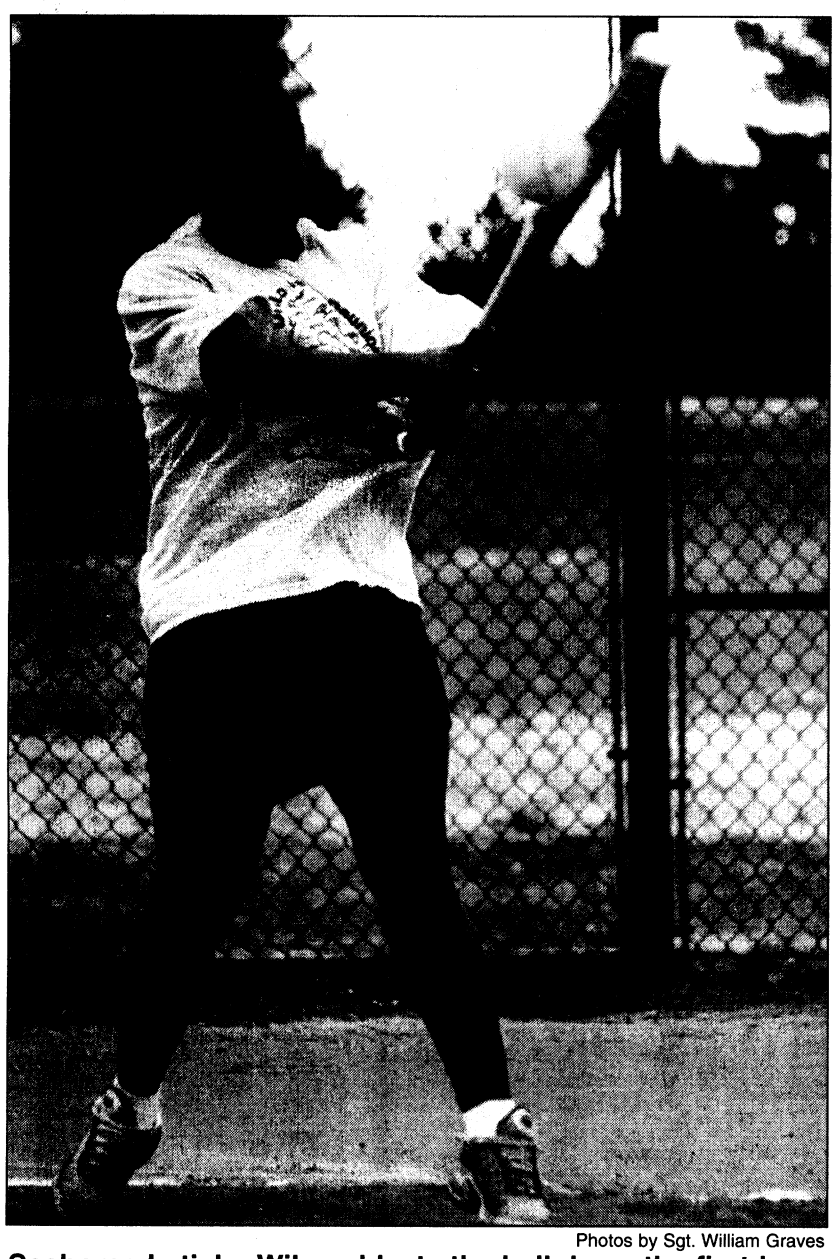
The satisfaction the game brings to soldiers pays many other dividends, he said. Soldiers in high spirits tend to work better and help the unit complete missions to standard more efficiently.

"I think the rest of the season is going to continue to be fun," Dimitri said. "I love the game. I look forward to keeping our winning streak going and doing well in the playoffs."

The regular season has been a struggle for the Roughriders, Nguyen said.

"We've had many projects going on, so our record may indicate we're struggling," he said. "Mission comes first."

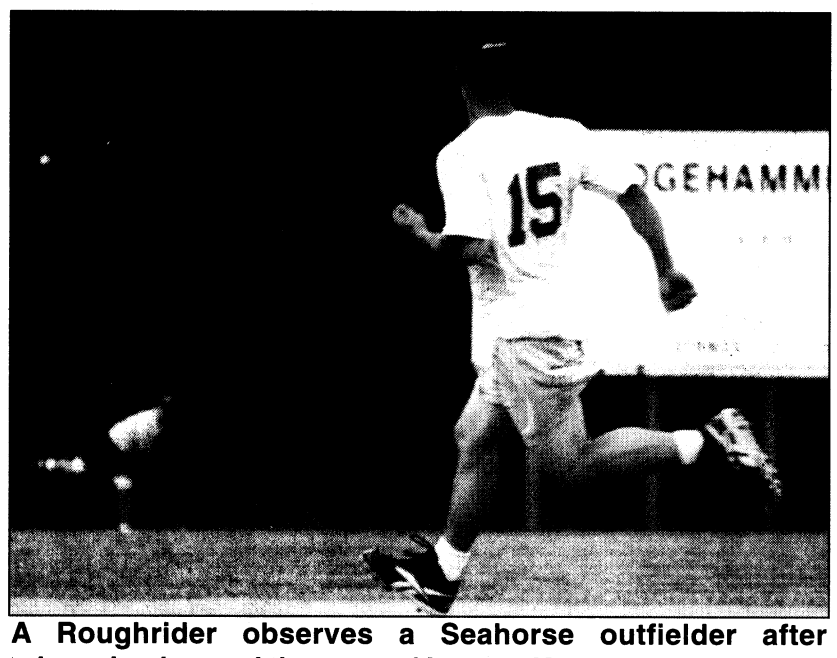
The Roughriders playoff season, which begins July 22, is up in the air. Approximately 85 company soldiers are deploying to Fort Pickett, Va., at the end of the month for three months to help a National Guard unit build a training area for policemen, so the team may lose too many soldiers to continue.



Regardless of record and where they sit in the standing, the team's season has been and will be a success, Nguyen said.

"It's more than just a game," Nguyen said. "It builds a bond. Now, I'm friends with the guys who I didn't talk to before softball. We all joke around about who messed up or who had the best game."

Furthermore, Roughriders used the casual atmosphere the game provided to familiarize themselves with how their opponents do business at work and share pointers on how to perform their missions better.



Still, it wasn't all buddy-buddy on the field, Dimitri said. Competition was fierce as the teams battled for bragging rights and heated up their friendly rivalry. Even company leaders mixed it up. 63rd Engineer Co. 1st Sgt. John Johnson, Capt. Jason Miller, HHC, and Navy Lt. Jeff Brancheau, officer in charge for Design Management, played important parts for their teams.

"It's outstanding to see people in their positions come out and spend their personal time with the units," Nguyen said. "It shows they came about not only the mission, but their soldiers, too, and makes us respect them more and want to work harder to help the team."

LIFESOURCE
Blood Services

LifeSource Blood Services is the largest, full-service blood center in the state of Illinois. LifeSource provides a lifeline between those who need blood and those who can donate blood. To facilitate these lifesaving donations, LifeSource operates 18 fixed-site blood donation centers and conducts nearly 100 mobile blood drives each week throughout the Chicago area. LifeSource is currently hiring for the following positions:

PHLEBOTOMISTS

Build on your health care experience by training to be a phlebotomist. We have several full time positions open on our Mobile Operations Team. Responsibilities include taking vitals, documenting health histories and drawing blood. Requires reliable transportation and the willingness and ability to travel throughout the Chicago area.

MOBILE TEAM LEADERS

This position requires an experienced phlebotomist or other health care professional who has supervisory experience and can function in a lead role. Serve as coach and consultant to a team of seven phlebotomists; act as the on site coordinator and liaison with the sponsoring organization at mobile blood drives; provide hands on assistance and support as needed to maintain high standards of quality and customer service.

PHLEBOTOMY TRAINER

An experienced phlebotomist and trainer is needed to assist in the development and delivery of skilled training programs in phlebotomy and apheresis. Responsibilities include providing orientation and training to new hires; providing updates and re-training to existing staff in the areas of screening, phlebotomy, plasmapheresis and other designated procedures; monitoring employee performance in the field and providing on-going support as needed to maintain high standards of quality.

LOT RELEASE AUDITOR - RN

LifeSource is in need of a quality-focused, detail-oriented RN to join our audit staff. Responsibilities include examining the health histories documented on hard-copy blood donation records each day to confirm donor eligibility and insure compliance with stated FDA guidelines.

For additional information or to submit a resume, please contact the Human Resources department at: LifeSource Blood Services, 1205 North Milwaukee Ave., Glenview, IL 60025-2498. Email: bdiliberti@itxm.org; Phone: (847) 803-7845 or Fax: (847) 803-7870.

Ecstasy use rises among troops

Investigators know exactly what to look for

Angela Sachitano
Special to the Bayonet©

As the drug ecstasy becomes more prevalent among young people in America, the number of soldiers using the so-called "designer drug" is also increasing, said Chief Warrant Officer Paul Bond, drug suppression coordinator for the Fort Benning Criminal Investigation Command.

"We've definitely seen an increase of ecstasy among soldiers around Fort Benning in the past three years," Bond said. "Our CID investigators know the drug is out there and they know how to find who's using it. Soldiers who use the drug need to beware that we are following their tracks closely."

CID is made up of several drug suppression teams with a primary goal of counteracting the flow of illegal drugs onto Fort Benning.

Last month, a state and federal investigation called Operation Xtermination busted more than 80 U.S. Marines and sailors in an ecstasy ring in North Carolina. The bust has put both Fort Benning and Columbus agents on an increased alert, Boyd said.

"We work extremely close with the Columbus Narcotics Metro Task Force," Bond said. "Our agents are undercover patrolling area clubs and hot spots every night of the week."

Military dogs protect post

Handlers, dogs work together, keep post safe

Pfc. Brian Trapp
Bayonet staff

Man's best friend can be more than just a companion. The military working dogs of Fort Benning are an asset to the community and make it a safer and more secure place to live, work and play.

Handlers with the 209th Military Police Detachment had some of their dogs out Monday as part of on-going training with their four-legged partners.

"You can't hide anything from a dog," said Sgt. Anthony Gulli, K-9 handler with 209th Military Police Detachment. "Their sense of smell is just too good. People try to hide drugs in tires and gas tanks. They wrap them with an inch thick of plastic trying to cover up the odor. The dogs are trained to detect and concentrate on just the certain odors and when they go to work all the other smells are filtered out."

Drug dogs are trained to detect six different substances, and explosives detecting dogs are trained for 12 different odors.

Handlers train dogs to detect pure odors, so even if the scent is diluted or masked, traces of it will still be there to be picked up. The dogs are also trained to detect fringe odors. Handlers teach dogs by rolling up a rag and putting it in with a substance for a while. The dog can still locate the odor or even after it has left.

It's similar to putting a couple teaspoons of salt into a glass of water. When the water is boiled away, only the salt remains. It's the same way when someone tries to cover an odor, it will still be there, Gulli said.

A dog, barking, snarling, lunging and drooling at someone can be more intimidating than a line of police, because people usually assume a dog is more likely than the police to injure them, Gulli said.

"The dogs are trained to bite and hold their subject until the command is given to release," Gulli said. "If someone tries to run from a dog, they're going to get caught, and we just have to follow the screams."

To have a dog as obedient and skilled as the working dogs, a lot of time is invested into them and their training.

AUSA talks change

Congressman to discuss legislation

USAIC Public Affairs Office

The Fort Benning chapter of the Association of U.S. Army is sponsoring a meeting on concurrent receipt at 10 a.m. Saturday in Marshall Auditorium in Infantry Hall.

The guest speaker at the meeting with be Congressman Mac Collins, who will discuss congressional action and the current status of concurrent receipt.

Concurrent receipt is the single biggest issue for retired military personnel who are disabled, said Chuck Hunsaker with U.S. Congressman Mac Collins's staff.

Military and veterans groups, to include AUSA, have worked with members of Congress for a number of years to change the legislation which does not allow retired military personnel to receive both retired pay and disability pay.

Changes to the legislation have come close, but the change has never made it completely through both houses of Congress.

Collins has been on a special subcommittee of the house budget committee studying concurrent receipt. He will tell the group about the legislation, where it is in the legislative process, the prospects of passage this year, and answer any question members of the audience may have.

The meeting is open to anyone with an interest in the topic, not just AUSA members.

SOAW protesters appear in local court

Defendants stand trial for November crimes, many found guilty

Bridgett Siter
Special to the Bayonet©

Thirty-seven protesters appeared before a U.S. magistrate this week, charged with violating federal law by trespassing on Fort Benning during the annual SOA-Watch rally in November.

The defendants, members of the SOA Watch who allege some graduates of the former U.S. School of the Americas committed atrocities in Central and Latin America, pleaded their case before U.S. Magistrate G. Mallon Faircloth, who distributed copies of the congressional acts that created The Western Hemisphere Institute for Security Cooperation, which replaced the SOA 18 months ago.

"I ask you to determine whether the democratic process has worked and is working," said Faircloth, according to Jim Houston, a reporter for the Columbus Ledger-Enquirer. The new institute has clearly defined goals, curricula and supervision.

As of press time, 31 of the defendants were found guilty of trespassing after having previously been banned from entering post. Each faces up to six months in prison and a $5,000 fine. One was acquitted. Thirty-one who pleaded guilty await sentencing, including a husband and wife from Elkton, Va.

Ten pleaded not guilty, but admitted by stipulation that they crossed onto Fort Benning during the Nov. 18 protest. Five have demanded a trial in which they will represent themselves.

The defendants, ranging in age from 18 to 72, included the Rev. William Joseph O'Donnell, a Catholic parish priest from Berkeley, Calif., who has been arrested 224 times during the last 46 years.

The youngest defendant, 18-year-old Michael Sobol of Denver, told the magistrate he received school credit for participating in the SOA-Watch demonstration.

DEAR TIFFANY

A letter to the new bride

COMMENTARY

The wedding was simply perfect, understated and elegant. A real classy affair.

You made the perfect pair, you and your soldier — perfectly dressed, perfectly matched, perfectly happy.

And tomorrow you'll board the plane that will carry you from Indiana to Europe, where you'll have the perfect honeymoon.

Perfect.

Then you'll begin your new life together in Germany. Married to each other, married to the Army. It'll be exciting and challenging.

But perfect?

No, never that. The life of an Army wife is never perfect.

I have a feeling you'll not notice at first. Minor irritations like leaking pipes or pay glitches will be overlooked, swept aside, in the glow of newlywed bliss.

Your new home, no your new 'quarters' will look charming and cozy through the eyes of love. And that's what I would wish for you, my sister's daughter — rose-colored glasses.

But one day, sooner or later, perhaps when he's been gone too long — a TDY or field exercise — you'll take a good long look around you at the quarters you call home, the strangers you call neighbors and the commitment (24-7!) he calls work. And you'll see flaws instead of perfection.

That's when the honeymoon ends and the marriage begins.

That's when you remember your vows — "for better or worse" — and paint a wall, lay a rug or hang a picture to make the worst kind of quarters better.

That's when you remember that "forsaking all others" means leaving friends here and there, time and time again. And making new ones along the way.

That's when you realize "in sickness and in health" includes homesickness.

And that's when you remember "till death do us part," and pray for God's protection over your soldier and your country.

The good news?

When the perfect wears off, the pride will shine through — pride in what he does and who he is.

Pride in being married to a soldier.

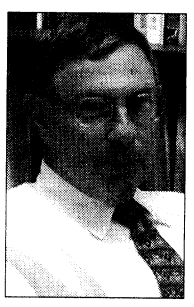
You'll stand and salute every time the flag passes by and expect others to do the same.

You'll get goose bumps when you hear children say the Pledge of Allegiance.

You'll notice license plates with Purple Hearts and feel immeasurable gratitude toward strangers.

You'll defend the Army as surely as the Army defends you.

Your family will miss you, and you'll miss them, but you'll be part of a much bigger family now.



Welcome.

The life of an Army wife is not perfect, but I have no doubt you'll make the perfect Army wife.

Cheating cheats all of us

COMMENTARY

Does watching the evening news ever make you want to scream, "What's wrong with you people!"

And I'm not even referring to the war on terrorism. Heck we don't need terrorists to do us in. We're doing a pretty good job of it ourselves.

I'm not sure which is worse, the cheaters or the people who won't take responsibility for their own actions. But maybe they are one and the same.

We look at Enron and WorldCom and wonder how such crooked people can get to where they are and how they became that way.

But then we pick up the newspapers and read about kids cheating at school. They get caught. Teachers fail them for the course.

Then the daddies and mommies raise holy heck with the principal or the school superintendent and next thing little Johnny or Suzy has a passing grade.

No wonder kids grow up thinking there's no penalty for cheating, no wonder kids grow up with no moral compass, no wonder kids grow up thinking the world owes them a living.

First I find fault with the parents. If I'd been caught cheating on a test, or plagiarizing a paper, I'd still not be able to sit down (I know, we don't spank anymore.)

My parents were more apt to back a teacher who was trying to instill discipline and other values into me, than their son who was out to beat the system.

Then I blame the administrators who cave in to these so-called parents. Have they no backbones? Have they no standards?

Would they want to be operated on by a doctor who cheated on his anatomy exam? "Let's see, I think this little squishy thing is the appendix, or was the appendix on the right side, hmmm?"

My parents held me responsible for what I did or failed to do. If I did something stupid and got hurt doing it, OK, they were sorry I was hurt.

But in their book, we learn by our mistakes, we don't sue everyone within a 50-mile radius because we are inept, clumsy or spastic (Yeah we didn't have politically correct language to worry about then either.)

I don't think the west would have been won if we'd had to rely on the pansies who permeate society today.

Thank God (can I say that?) for the Army.

What this nation needs is an influx of drill sergeants.

If drill sergeants can mold couch potatoes into fighting men and women, if drill sergeants can instill the seven Army values into the "me generation," then they are the ones to save the nation.

There's a program, Troops to Teachers. Instead of sending former soldiers off to get teaching certificates, they need to send teachers, administrators and school board members to drill sergeant school.

I'll betcha the students would sit a lot straighter, pay closer attention and wouldn't dare cheat if some guy or gal wearing a drill sergeant hat was standing in front of them.

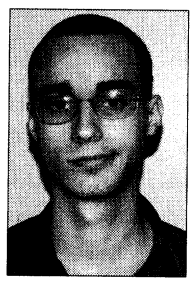
And I'll bet the whiny butt parents who came to complain that Johnny or Suzy can't get into Harvard now because of a C grade would probably think better about the complaining too.

"Let's see, do I really want to tell that guy that I think his standards are too high?"

There are a lot of good folks out there, young and old, in and out of education. We only hear about the anomalies.

Unfortunately, the number of people who want to get ahead at any cost is rising. We need to put the brakes on them.

A tour of duty for people like this certainly would help. The transformation these young civilians go through is uncanny and positive.



Drill sergeants, keep up the good work.

Liars and cheaters, go bury your heads.

COMMENTARY

It's been one year since I joined the Army. There have been many ups and downs, but I've gotten through them.

I joined July 4, 2001. What a great day to join the Army. But I didn't know what I was getting myself into when I raised my hand.

I went to basic training at Fort Jackson, S.C., where I was part of 2nd Battalion, 60th Infantry Regiment.

I loved basic training. I had so much fun. There were many things I learned about myself, and it made me a better person.

Army values, the value of teamwork and the real value of friendship have made me stronger.

I learned more in basic training than I imagined. Sure, I was in the Boy Scouts and I learned a lot of skills, but not as many as I learned in basic.

After graduating from basic, I moved to Fort Meade, Md., to attend the Basic Journalist Course at the Defense Information School.

Fort Meade was a great place to be. The first four weeks I couldn't go off post, but once I could, a bunch of us would go to Baltimore or Washington, D.C., every weekend. What a great place to be.

But, for every joy there is a price to pay.

DINFOS wasn't exactly the easiest school to get through. In fact, it was the hardest 13 weeks of school I had ever had.

English, grammar and composition.

When my papers were graded, tiny mistakes added up, and after a few minus fives and a couple minus ones my grade got low.

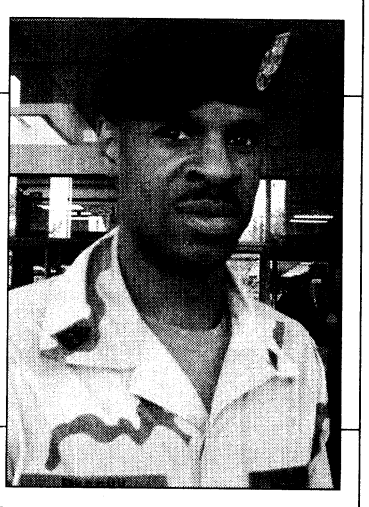
I graduated at the end of January and headed to Fort Benning. Now being from Kennesaw, Ga., which is 20 minutes north of Atlanta, I didn't want to be stationed here. But, I accepted it and began working for The Bayonet.

Going through training totally changed my view on how the military is run. I realize the effort that we put in to make America a safe country. Our jobs as soldiers require us to be on our toes 24 hours a day, seven days a week.

There are also many opportunities I had that I never realized I had.

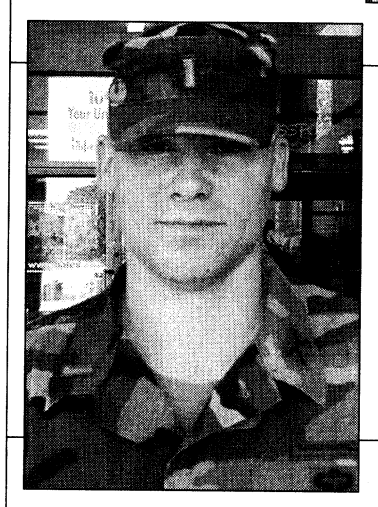
The two main opportunities for me are Airborne School and eArmyU, the free online college program — free laptop, free printer and free Internet access.

The only requirement for keeping the equipment is completing 12 college credits within two years of enrolling in the program. I've started eArmyU and I plan on attending Airborne School.



This year has been a great one, and I look forward to each new adventure and opportunity.

VARIOUS VOICES



What advice do you have for someone marrying a soldier?

Michele Nunweiler, family member — "My advice is to support your soldier wholeheartedly and become involved in unit activities."

1st Sgt. Terrence Murphy, 317th Engineer Battalion — "Be prepared for anything that comes up. The military is very diverse. Support your soldier."

2nd Lt. Cory Roberts, 2nd Battalion, 11th Infantry — "Communication has to go both ways. Be flexible with moves and deployments. Any military spouse needs to understand the expectations the military has. A military spouse can't have an 'I married you, not the Army' attitude."

Retired Master Sgt. Jimmie Jakes, Columbus — "Make sure you're really in love — an unconditional love. Be ready for sacrifice and know how to spend your time when you're apart."

Jeannie Cummings, family member — "A military spouse needs a lot of patience, understanding and stamina. There needs to be commitment to the marriage and to each other. A military spouse has to be a very strong person and a team player."

1st Lt. Jeanne Wiles, U.S. Army Medical Department Activity — "Enjoy the time you have together. Play lots."

West Point grad dies during pre-ranger

Friends mourn all star's death

Angela Sachitano
Special to the Bayonet©

The past week and a half has been especially tough for those who knew 2nd Lt. Zachariah Miller.

Miller, a 2002 West Point graduate and Rhodes scholar was attending the pre-ranger course at Fort Benning when he collapsed during a land navigation exercise July 1.

Miller

Friends say Miller was in superb physical shape and they are confused and in shock as to what could have possibly caused the 22-year-old soldier to collapse.

"He was an all-star at West Point," said 2nd Lt. Matthew Myer, 2nd Battalion, 11th Infantry Regt., and a college friend of Miller's. "Many cadets looked up to him. He set the standard with his brilliance."

Miller was awarded a Rhodes scholarship for his hard work at West Point and was granted acceptance at the University of Oxford in England next year to expand upon his degree.

"It was his goal since high school to be a Rhodes scholar," Myer said. "He was just about ready to live out his dream. Who knows what he would have done with his life and for this Army?"

Miller was originally from Stoneboro, Pa., and had just arrived on Fort Benning for temporary duty last month following his graduation from West Point.

He had successfully completed Airborne School and was one day away from finishing up the pre-ranger course when he failed to return to the base station.

"Members of the 75th Ranger Regiment immediately began a search for him," said Monica Manganaro, Fort Benning Public Affairs spokesperson. "They found him dead that evening at around 8 p.m. We are all in disbelief and left with few answers."

Preliminary results of Miller's autopsy were inconclusive, Manganaro said.

The remaining tests will be performed by the Armed Forces Institute of Pathology, and it could take six weeks before a cause is released to the public.

Meanwhile, friends agree Miller had already achieved in his life more than most people achieve in three lifetimes. Among his many accomplishments, Miller was elected captain of the West Point rugby team and was a tutor to many of his fellow cadets.

"He was one of the most selfless people I knew," Myer said. "To be at a school like West Point and stand out like he did shows what an outstanding individual he was. I and the rest of us who knew Zachariah are going to miss him dearly."

Rangers induct 16 into hall of fame Tuesday

Inductees give praise to partners

Bridgett Siter
Special to the Bayonet©

There was a lot of finger pointing Tuesday at Marshall Auditorium, where more than 300 rangers honored 16 of their own during the 10th annual Ranger Hall of Fame induction ceremony.

One after another, the inductees took the stage, shrugged off any accolades, and pointed instead to the leaders who inspired them, the comrades who fought alongside them and the wives who held it all together back home.

"I didn't get here by myself. It took a lot of good people, NCOs and officers, along the way," said retired Command Sgt. Maj. Autrail Cobb, a former command sergeant major of the Infantry School, who was lauded for 30 years of exemplary service.

"I owe it to the real ranger, my wife, my ranger buddy for 45 years," said retired Lt. Col. James Rogers, an OCS Hall of Fame alumnus who was awarded the Distinguished Service Cross during the Vietnam War.

"There's no greater honor than to be honored by your comrades, but they were right there with me," said retired Master Sgt. Edward Posey, who applauded the men he served with in the 2nd Ranger Company in Vietnam.

But no one denied he was "in the company of giants," as Chaplain (Capt.) Daniel Petsch referred to the hundreds of rangers present, representing every generation of soldiers since World War II.

"They say I'm joining an elite group today. But I say I did that when I graduated from Ranger School," said retired Command Sgt. Maj. James Collier, a former command sergeant major and chief instructor of the Ranger Department.

Indeed, of the more than 50,000 soldiers who have served with ranger units, only 170 have been inducted into the hall of fame, including such notables as President Abraham Lincoln, retired Maj. Gen. Frank Merrill, who led the legendary Merrill's Marauders, and South Carolina Senator Strom Thurmond, an honorary inductee in 1994.

Spc. Douglas DeMaio

Retired rangers, Command Sgts. Maj. Warren "Bing" Evans, left, and Harris Parker and Master Sgt. Edward Posey, right, await their turn to speak during Tuesday's hall of fame induction ceremony.

Former Sgt. Robert L. Carr was inducted posthumously during Tuesday's ceremony. A member of Merrill's Marauders, Carr distinguished himself by braving a hail of Japanese gunfire to rescue two of his injured comrades during a 10-day siege on his unit in Burma. He then returned to his job as artillery spotter, calling in fire only 30 yards away to end the siege. Carr was recommended for a Silver Star for his actions. But ironically, the former muleskinner's records were lost when the mule that was carrying them fell off a cliff.

Carr died Feb. 12, before his family received word of his nomination to the hall of fame. His widow and daughter accepted the honor on his behalf.

"This would have been one of the finest hours of his life," his daughter said. "He would've accepted it in the memory of the Marauders who didn't make it back.

"Dad loved the rangers and he loved being a ranger. He never told many people about it. He just was. He was a ranger everyday, like all rangers, who are heroes every day and everyday heroes."

The guest speaker, retired Brig. Gen. Richard J. Eaton, added a touch of levity to the otherwise reverent occasion.

"I'm tempted to talk about berets," he said, and the crowd laughed. "But I won't. We're here to talk about the Ranger Hall of Fame, an institution that validates the concept of the ranger and everything he stands for — loyalty, selfless sacrifice, honor."

Eaton capsulized the history of the rangers, noting the challenges against their cost effectiveness has been "an on and off battle for years."

"But that's not the case now," he said, as the nation fights the war on terrorism and recognizes the need for highly trained soldiers.

Interstate 185 Inbound to close Sunday

All access control points will be open over the weekend, but Eddy Bridge and Sunshine Road will be rerouted through other Access Control Points.

Interstate 185 closes Sunday at 5 p.m. South Lumpkin Road will remain open 24 hours a day, starting at that time.

Traffic will be re-routed at the Victory Drive exit to Benning Boulevard inbound or South Lumpkin Road.

Traffic can also enter through Custer Road or 1st Division Road.

Col. Joe Torres, garrison commander, suggested:

• People use alternate routes to:

• Use flex time to the maximum extent … allow subordinates to come in at different times so there are not major delays.

• Minimize physical training during this time. Allow soldiers to do physical training on their own.

• Reschedule events, and plan accordingly to get on post.

Changes to TSP to help

Plan easier for employees to access, use

Sgt. 1st Class Kathleen T. Rhem
American Forces Press Service

WASHINGTON — Upcoming improvements to the Thrift Savings Plan for both military and federal civilian employees will make the program easier to use.

Lt. Col. Tom Emswiler, an Army lawyer who directs the Armed Forces Tax Council in the Pentagon, said the most significant change will be that accounts will become daily valued, instead of the current monthly valued. All transactions will be updated daily, he said.

Other changes include better online access to accounts and participant statements expressed in shares and dollars, instead of just dollars as the current statements are.

All changes are due to be implemented Sept. 16. Emswiler said no action is required from participants. However, he cautioned, there will be a two-week period from the end of August until Sept. 16 during which participants will be unable to make certain changes to their accounts or make withdrawals.

"For that two-week period when they're actually transferring accounts into the new record-keeping system, there's going to be a pause in your ability to do certain things," he said. "But otherwise, this is basically going to be seamless."

TSP participants will gain the ability to make changes daily, "but this isn't meant to make you a day trader," Emswiler said. "Think about your long-term investment needs and don't move your accounts simply based on short-term market fluctuations."

He said the Thrift Savings Plan is intended to be a retirement investment plan.

"That means it's a long-term investment. You don't want to just jump around based on short-term needs," he said. "You want to develop your investment strategy based on what level of risk you're willing to accept, whether your needs are long-term or short-term, and then stick with that plan."

For more information on the plan visit www.tsp.gov. A chart outlining the upcoming changes is available at www.tsp.gov/forms/tsplf11.pdf.

FAST classes

Functional Academic Skills Training is a review of basic skills in math and reading geared toward improving a soldier's general technical score. The skills learned are applicable to the individual's military duties. The remaining class is scheduled for Aug. 12-Sept. 3. The class will be held in Building 9004 on Kelley Hill. There will be a morning class (8:30 a.m. to 12:15 p.m.) and an afternoon class (1 p.m. to 4:45 p.m.). A three-hour pretest is mandatory for enrollment and must be completed before the test begins. The pretest is administered daily on a walk-in basis, promptly at 1 p.m. in Building 9004. Testing is also available at 8:30 a.m. by appointment only.

For more information, call Tilden Robinson at 544-3689.

Two-star breakfast

Maj. Gen. Paul Eaton, commanding general, will recognize Fort Benning's outstanding military and civilian personnel and volunteers at the Two Star Excellence Breakfast from 7:30 a.m. to 9 a.m. July 26 at the Supper Club. Tickets are available in Infantry Hall, room 547. Cost is $6.25.

For more information, call 545-4729.

Sergeant Major Board

The Department of the Army selection board to consider soldiers for the promotion to sergeant major will be Oct. 1. Zones of consideration are all master sergeants and first sergeants with a date of rank of Sept. 30, 2000 and earlier with a basic active service date between Oct. 1, 1977 and Oct. 1, 1992. Date of birth is no earlier than Oct. 1, 1951. Because of the implementation of stop-loss, soldiers normally ineligible due to retention control point — BASD is earlier than Oct. 1, 1977 — in a primary military occupational specialty affected by stop-loss will be considered eligible.

Soldiers must have a DA photo. To schedule an appointment, call 545-1381.

For more information, call 545-8861 or 545-5640.

CID

The U.S. Army Criminal Investigation Division is seeking information pertaining to the larceny of two Dell laptop computers, one Infocus portable projector and one JVC VCR from Building 2631, Preventive Medicine, from June 14-17.

Anyone with information should call 545-5237 or 545-5222.

Reclamation sale hours

The new reclamation sale hours conducted at Building 224 will be 8 a.m. to 12 p.m. the first Friday of every month.

For more information, call 545-1104.

AER reminder

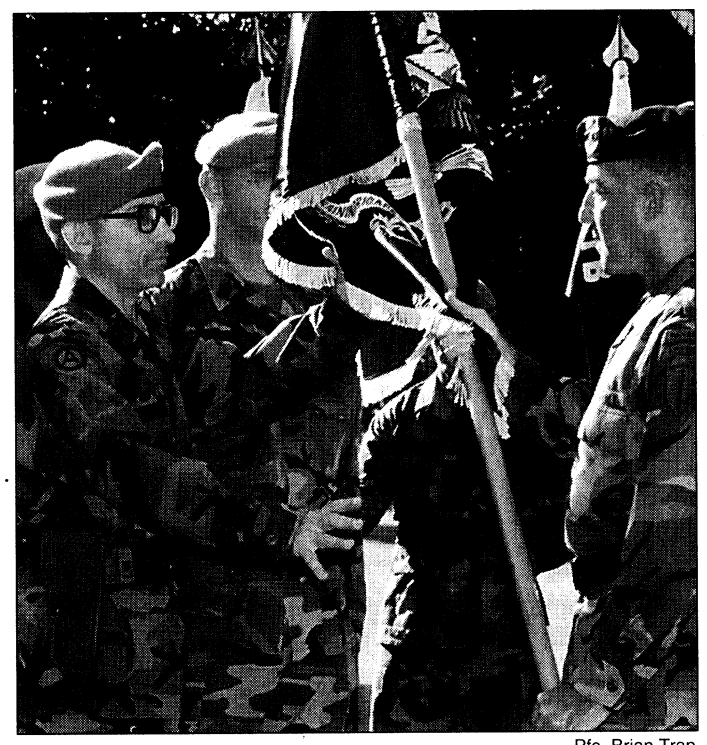
AER clients who are more than 50 miles away from an Army installation with an AER section may seek assistance from another branch of the Armed Forces. Their aid societies are: Navy-MC Relief Society, Air Force Aid Society or Coast Guard Mutual Assistance.

In the absence of these agencies, then the client may request assistance through a chapter of the American red Cross (ARC). Condition list above is the only time Army personnel may seek assistance from Aid societies listed. There is absolutely no reason for clients to travel long distances for the sole purpose of being serviced by AER. By reciprocal agreement these agencies are required to assist Army personnel.

For more information, call 545-3530.

Free education

The HOPE Grant Program will pay all Tuition and Fees for all covered diploma and certificate programs, and up to $100 per quarter for textbooks, for all active duty military and their dependents, 16 years of age or older, who are stationed at Fort Benning and living in Georgia.



All you have to do is fill out the required forms and register. See Clovie Quick, Room 32B, Building 4 (Infantry Hall). Columbus Technical College offers day, evening, and weekend classes in management, computers, office technology, medical, automotive technology, carpentry, and many other subjects.

Interested? Stop by the office during the morning hours Tuesday, Thursday, and Friday. Quick is available during the afternoon hours on Monday and Wednesday.

There's a new 'Kidd' in town

Brigade welcomes commander

Pfc. Brian Trapp
Bayonet staff

Pfc. Brian Trap

Col. William G. Kidd accepts the brigade colors.

The former commander of the 6th Ranger Training Battalion returned to the Ranger Training Brigade to take command of the brigade Wednesday morning in a ceremony at the Ranger Memorial.

Col. William G. Kidd succeeds Col. Hazen L. Baron, whose next assignment is the executive officer to the commanding general of Forces Command.

"It has been a dream for the past two years being the commander of the RTB, and now I have to wake up," Baron said. "Colonel Kidd is the individual to take command of this most severest of schools.

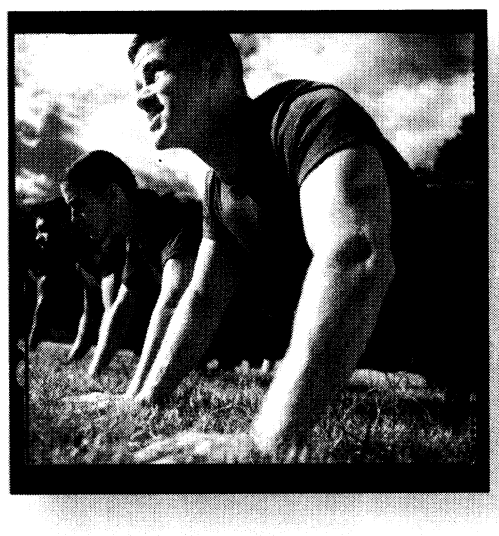
"I pray the big ranger in the sky looks over your brigade the way it watched over mine," Baron said.

It was a bittersweet day of change, said Maj. Gen. Paul D. Eaton, post commanding general. Everyone involved was saying goodbye to one family and welcoming another.

"I have mixed emotions about saying goodbye to the Barons," Eaton said. "We're losing a great command team. They brought an ever greater degree of realism to the Ranger Course."

Kidd has served as a platoon leader, company executive officer and assistant logistics officer for 2nd, Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment, ranger operations officer in U.S. Army Special Operations and Command, Fort Bragg, N.C.

"I'm thrilled to be serving with the brigade again," Kidd said. "I look forward to living here and working with all of you, or should I say 'y'all.'"



During the Gulf War, Kidd served as an assistant operations officer in U.S. Army Central Command and as a military observer in the United Nations Observer Mission in Kuwait. He also was the 6th Battalion, 502nd Infantry Regiment, executive officer in the Berlin Brigade and served as a NATO staff officer.

"We're happy to have Colonel Kidd. He has received high marks from many people," Eaton said. "I look forward to working with you. You're truly steeped with the ranger ethos."

The Birmingham, Ala., native was commissioned through ROTC in 1978 and served three years in the National Guard before entering active service in 1981. Kidd has a master's degree from Webster University.

He is also a graduate of the Ranger Course, U.S. Army Command and General Staff College and the U.S. Army War College.

"I shall work every day to live up to the creed carved on the stones of this (Ranger) memorial," Kidd said.

"Service is a responsibility you don't take lightly."

Dogs: Discourage bad guys from running from police

When a handler gets a dog it takes about a month for the initial training.

In the first week, a handler plays with the dog to gain its trust, then the dog is trained with detection and bite work in a process that takes about a month, to prepare the dog for qualification.

The process takes a lot of time. Handlers can put in 50 to 65 hours a week, and there is also a lot of training done with the dogs during time off, said Sgt. Edward Smart, explosives detecting dog handler.

"The majority of our dogs are more than 95 percent accurate, even though the standard is 90 percent for a drug dog and 95 for an explosives dog," Smart said.

The dogs' accuracy and speed are vital to mission success.

"During a health and welfare inspection one dog can be in and out of a room in less than a minute and accurately identify if there are any substances in there," Gulli said. "If each room was done by hand, it could take hours."

"It's a rewarding job," Gulli said. "I get to see the fruits of my labor when I'm out there with my dog and we are taking drugs out of the community."

Ecstasy: Endangers soldiers lives, careers of ecstasy cases on post, Boyd said the drug is more prevalent among younger soldiers. There have also been a few isolated cases of career soldiers and family members using the drug, Boyd said.

Raves, or all night drug and dance parties, are common among ecstasy users. Investigators said they have not busted any rave parties on Fort Benning and are unaware of raves happening in the barracks or on post facilities.

Partiers take ecstasy because it's a hallucinogen as well as a stimulant. Usually taken in a tablet form, the drug produces profound positive feelings and can make those who take it feel connected with one another, according to the Narconon Drug Research and Rehabilitation Center in California.

The "closeness" among users can be a hurdle for investigators looking to break a case, Boyd said.

"Our biggest obstacle with ecstasy is the people who use the drug tend to be very cliquish," Boyd said. "It's sometimes hard to break in the close-knit circles to find out who's supplying. It's not a drug that we find on the streets."

One of the easiest ways to detect ecstasy is through a urinalysis, and many company commanders are now testing all of their soldiers on a monthly basis instead of the 20 percent of soldiers the Army requires.

"Because I deal with parachutes, I have to make sure my men and women are completely competent and focused at all times," said Capt. Rich Glisson, E Company, 1st Battalion (Airborne), 507 Infantry Regiment. "I test 100 percent of my soldiers every month. There aren't any excuses as far as I'm concerned."

Glisson detected a case of ecstasy from a soldier's urine test more than a year ago and severe punishments followed, he said.

A soldier who is detected using ecstasy or any other illegal drug can be prosecuted by a court martial and receive a dishonorable discharge, as well as jail time.

A regulation handed down just this month requires commanders to discharge a soldier within 30 days if caught with drugs, even on a first offense.

"We know there may be a lot of soldiers out there who need help," Boyd said. "If soldiers come to us ahead of time, we will do our best to rehabilitate them and get them counseling. But once the drug shows up in their urine, we may have no choice but to discharge them."

If that doesn't deter soldiers, then the effect on their mind should, he said.

Studies from the Narconon Drug Center show extreme damage to the pleasure transmitters and other nerve endings in the brains of ecstasy users.

"Many people don't understand what kind of permanent effects this drug has on the central nervous system," Boyd said.

One thing is for sure, every soldier knows the consequences ecstasy will have on their career, Glisson said.

"Soldiers know when they sign up for the Army, the deal is they cannot take drugs," Glisson said. "It's stated to them clearly, and they agree to stay clean. I have little sympathy for the ones who get caught."

Post to display Vietnam Wall Memorial in Fall

Wall will be temporary replica of D.C. memorial

Angela Sachitano
Special to the Bayonet©

More than 58,000 American men and women lost their lives or are still missing as a result of the Vietnam War.

In remembrance of those fallen comrades, every one of their names are held in high respect on the Vietnam Wall Memorial in Washington, D.C.

It's not always easy for soldiers and their families to make the trip to Washington, D.C., to see the memorial in person, so the Columbus owned, Striffler-Hamby Mortuary is sponsoring construction of a replica of the Vietnam Memorial to be displayed on Fort Benning from Oct. 11-13.

"To see the wall in person will offer unforgettable memories," said Angela Garnto, a Striffler-Hamby executive and director of the Fort Benning Vietnam Wall Experience. "As soon as we found out about the project to replicate the wall, we knew we wanted to be a part of it."

Service Corporation International owns Striffler-Hamby and several other funeral homes throughout the country.

Two years ago, the company had the idea of building a replica of the wall and moving the memorial from city to city.

"I and a lot of other veterans are anxiously awaiting the memorial," said retired Col. Biff Hadden, senior vice president of Military Affairs for the Columbus Chamber of Commerce. "The wall is a very personal place for everyone who has served."

At 240 feet long and 8 feet high, the wall will be a 3/4 scale replica of the original and be on displayed at Sacrifice Field for free to the public.

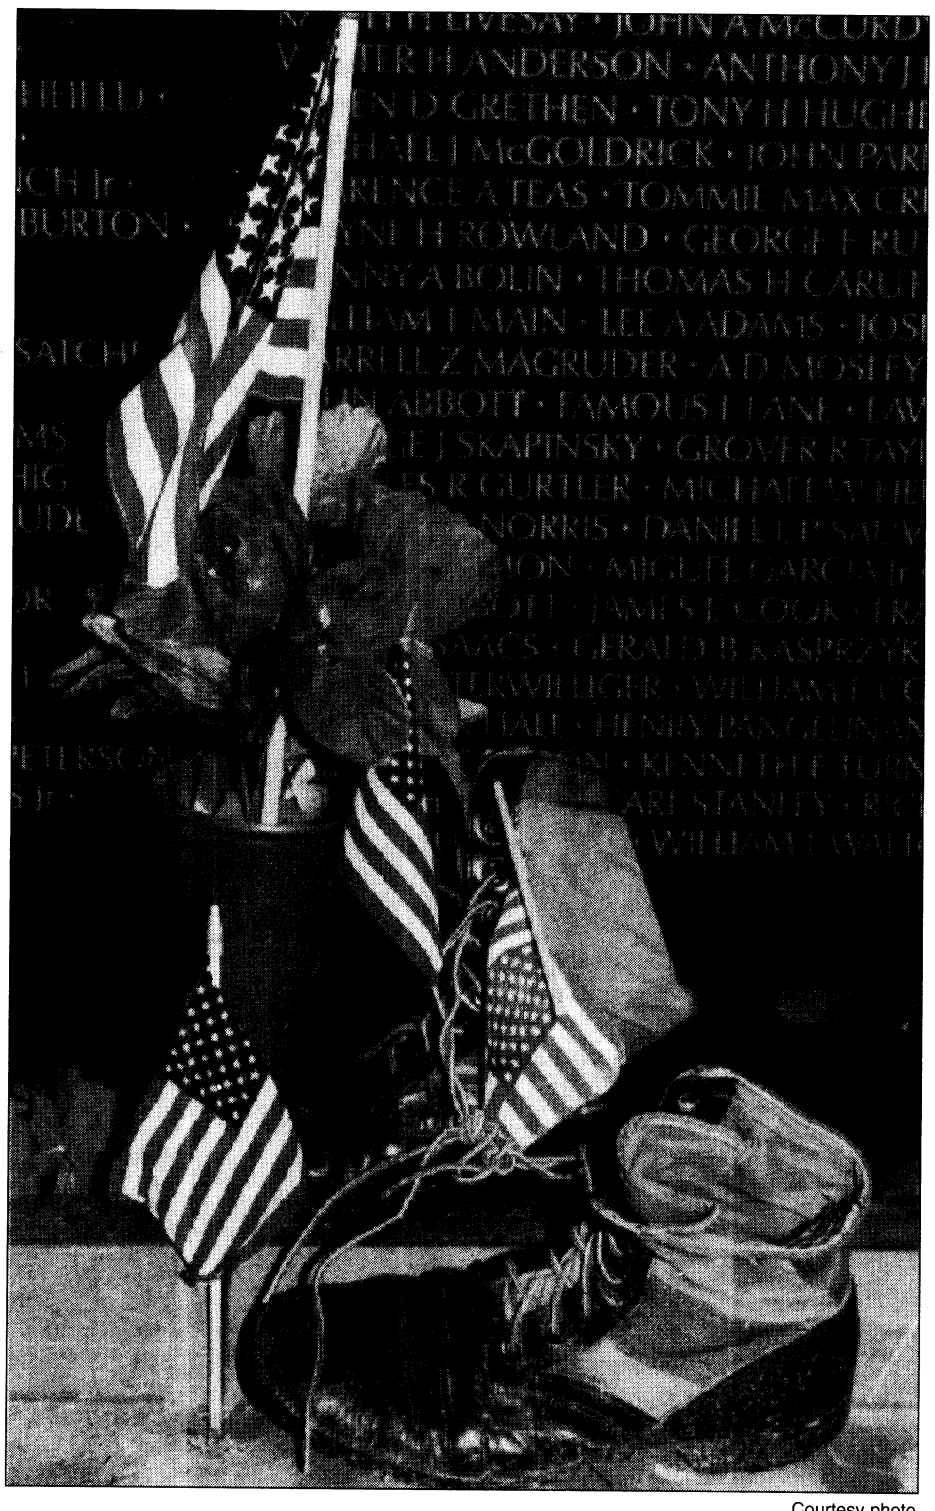
"This is going to be an enormous event," Garnto said. "We have been working with the creators of the original Vietnam wall to make sure this is an exact replica. Our soldiers and veterans need to see this."

The wall will be brought in on an 18 wheeler truck in two sections and will take about 10 hours to construct, Garnto said.

Once it is complete, the wall will be handicapped accessible, with a lighted walkway and shrubbery surrounding the memorial.

"On the three days the wall will be on post, there will be ceremonies, music, speakers, and displays, all in an effort to keep the spirit of the Vietnam vets alive," Garnto said.

The Vietnam Wall committee is actively recruiting volunteers to help set up the wall, as well as volunteers for the hospitality committee, and a safety committee to help control crowds and traffic.



Anyone interested should call 563-2372 to sign up.

In the meantime, veterans will be counting the days until they can share the experience with their community.

"I served in the Vietnam War and lost several friends in the line of fire," Hadden said. "This will be an emotional event for many of us."

Attention Fort Benning Water Consumers

The 2002 Fort Benning Water Quality Report has been printed and mailed to water consumers on the installation.

Additional copies of the report are available at the Environmental Management Office in Meloy Hall room 310, from Joe Wilkins or Patrick Chauvey. Distribution of the report is required by the Safe Drinking Water Act by July 1 of each year. The value of the report is that it explains the quality of the water produced at Fort Benning and the water source. The report is brief, to the point, and written in non-technical terms. It outlines the water treatment processes, lists the contaminants detected by laboratory analyses, origins of those contaminants and their health effects. Importantly, the report lists telephone numbers, web addresses, and mailing addresses of Georgia and federal water regulators, and the American Water Works Association for those who have further inquiries about their water quality.

NCOs get new career guidance

Move to help many soldiers get promoted

Joe Burlas
Army News Service

WASHINGTON — An updated Department of the Army pamphlet will soon provide noncommissioned officers more robust career development guidance on the path to sergeant major.

Replacing a 15-year-old generic Department of the Army Pamphlet 600-25, Noncommissioned Officer Professional Development Guide, the new guide will offer structured institutional and self-development career advice tailored to each military occupational specialty and skill level via the Web later this month.

"The Army has been in need of this publication for some time," said retired Sgt. Maj. Carl Armentrout, chief of Army Development Systems XXI Enlisted Component. "The field asked for better NCO professional development guidance and it is being delivered. It's very extensive."

Updating the NCO guide was one of the recommendations the Army Development Systems XXI task force made to Army Chief of Staff Gen. Eric K. Shinseki last year. According to its charter, the task force was formed in October 1999 to "chart a course for enlisted and warrant officer development and management required in the next century."

Making the pamphlet an e-book allows it to be updated quickly by MOS proponents and other Army officials when changes occur or more current information is available, Armentrout said.

As an e-book, the guide also has hundreds of hyperlinks for more detailed coverage of specific Army subjects and programs. Users can checkout the Army's Credentialing Opportunities Online Web site to see how a MOS compares to a similar civilian profession and what is required to qualify for jobs in that career field. Another link takes users to the Army Education Web site which details information on a myriad of academic degree-building programs and available tuition assistance.

Specifically, the guide lays out the duties, prerequisites, required institutional training and recommended self-development of each MOS by career management field and skill level, Armentrout said.

Armentrout gave an update on other ADS XXI enlisted initiatives:

Career field proponents have made significant progress on the requirement to reduce MOSs to a more manageable level, he said. When the ADS XXI task force formed, the Army had 241 MOSs. The number today is less than 200.

The next step is for Training and Doctrine Command to look across proponents to see what other MOSs might be consolidated for further reductions, Armentrout said. Low-density MOSs that are not inherently military are also being examined for possible outsourcing.

On the need to staff Sergeant Major Academy instructor positions with seasoned senior NCOs, the first batch of 15 report in this summer, with 15 more following in 2003 and another 15 in 2004.

The recent practice had been to staff the academy's 48 instructor positions with sergeants major who had just graduated from the academy's training, Armentrout said. Another fix in the works is lifting a regulatory ban that prohibits command sergeants major who leave command positions for other non-command assignments from returning to command slots.

A similar initiative is under review to field experienced senior NCOs in observer and controller positions at the National Training Center, Fort Irwin, Calif., and the Joint Readiness Training Center, Fort Polk, La.

"Obviously, a command sergeant major who has taken a battalion through the National Training Center a time or two is better qualified to mentor NCOs coming through NTC than someone who has never been there before," Armentrout said.

Colonel indicted for orchestrating scheme

Officer faces 115 years of jail if convicted

Army News Service

WASHINGTON — A federal grand jury in Southern California today indicted an Army colonel in South Korea on charges of orchestrating a scheme in which he solicited bribes in exchange for influencing the award of contracts to two Korean businesses.

The 11-count indictment is against Col. Richard James Moran, who was commander of the U.S. Army Contracting Command Korea, an agency that annually approved more than $300 million worth of contracts. The federal grand jury in Santa Ana alleged that Moran influenced the award of four contracts in exchange for bribes that were paid primarily with $100 bills.

More than $700,000 in cash was discovered when agents with the Army Criminal Investigation Command searched Moran's residence at Yongsan, Korea, Jan. 16. More than $400,000 in $100 bills was found in Moran's bed.

Those charged today were:

- Moran, 56, a 25-year veteran of the Army whose home state is in Maine;
- Moran's wife, Gina Cha Moran, 44, who allegedly solicited some of the bribes for her husband;
- Joseph Kang Hur, 57, of Anaheim Hills, Calif., who is accused of acting as a "consultant" on one of the contracts and collected cash and checks, half of which was paid to Moran;
- Ronald Adair Parrish, 49, who was chief of the Contract Support Division at USA-CCK;
- Businessman Richard Lee Carlisle, 31, of Harrison County, Ind.

The investigation into Moran's activities began when the Army detected irregularities in certain contracts in Korea, officials said.

Army CID conducted an investigation and brought the results to the attention of the Department of Justice.

The FBI and IRS-Criminal Investigation joined the inquiry that resulted in the indictment, said an official of the U.S. Attorney's Office in Los Angeles.

He said the Seoul District Prosecutor's Office and the Korean National Police provided critical assistance throughout the investigation.

Three of the contracts dealt with family housing on the Osan Air Base, barracks at Camp Carroll and barracks at several facilities collectively called Area I. Moran allegedly influenced the award of the contracts after soliciting bribes. The total value of the contracts was nearly $25 million.

Moran, his wife and Hur are all charged with conspiracy based on the solicitation of bribes in relation to the contracts.

Additionally, Moran is charged with four counts of bribery.

The indictment also charges a second conspiracy based on allegations that the Morans laundered some of the proceeds of the bribery scheme.

This charge alleges that they stored bribe money at their residence and then transported it to the United States, where they purchased cashier's checks that were deposited into accounts throughout the country, according to the U.S. Attorney's Office.

Gina Moran is also accused of obstruction of justice for attempting to hide the approximately $700,000 that was recovered from the Morans' residence earlier this year.

This count alleges that Gina Moran moved the money from a couch in the living room to the couple's bedroom after Army CID investigators had searched the bedroom.

If he is convicted of all charges in the indictment, Moran faces a statutory maximum penalty of 115 years in federal prison.

TRADOC Knowledge Online complements AKO

Soldiers to have video teleconference from their desks

Jim Caldwell
TRADOC News Service

FORT MONROE, Va. — When TRADOC Knowledge Online becomes fully operational, soldiers and civilian employees will be able to engage in video teleconferences from their desks and staff voluminous documents without e-mailing them to individuals for review.

"We're providing a tool that complements Army Knowledge Online," said Maj. Brent Ruhlen, project manager for TKN in Training and Doctrine Command's deputy chief of staff for Command, Control, Communications and Computers.

"Some of the features will be a little bit duplicative of AKO, but it will have a lot more features that AKO doesn't have."

Users can access TKN with their AKO password so they "don't have to remember a new one," Ruhlen said. "TKN is currently being run in a pilot phase among the deputy chief of staff organizations at TRADOC headquarters."

"When the pilot concludes in October, we will seek permission and funding to start expanding it to the schools in (fiscal 2003)," Ruhlen said. "We are planning a three-year expansion effort to the schools if we all of the necessary funding."

The order in which schools will receive TKN capabilities hasn't been decided yet, he said.

"We're trying to provide tools that make everyone's life easier and to get information out easier," the major said.

TKN will be a large enough system for people to place their files on it and choose those who can access them.

Most organizations have Web sites, and many of those sites contain information which requires a password to access it.

"We're telling them to go ahead and keep up the site you have for the public, but for your other content that you can't give to the public, stick it in our system and then put in a link to your public site so that users can get all your information," Ruhlen said.

Password-protected Web pages do not contain classified material, but it can be information that shouldn't be available to some groups.

TRADOC headquarters agencies such as the DCS for doctrine or combat developments frequently have to coordinate documents with leaders and users around the Army. If a large document is e-mailed to several locations, it will use up space on servers at those locations.

The project officer can then have the system send an e-mail to all the people involved with the project, explaining the document and how to access it on TKN.

Currently combat developments, along with subject matter experts from training centers and schools, is creating an operational requirements document, which is necessary step in producing and producing and procuring a new system.

"We've also got collaboration tools," Ruhlen said. "You can do online meetings, where you've got chat capability, audio, video, white-boarding and sharing of applications."

He foresees every person in TRADOC being able to add video cameras, microphones and speakers onto their desktop computers. This equipment will be industry standard to be recommended by Ruhlen and his technicians.

"We can cut down on TDY (temporary duty) trips by using these," he said. "We've got the video teleconferencing studios on all the posts, but those are limited in number and if you want to schedule a VTC meeting with somebody at Carlisle Barracks (Pa.) their facility may be occupied.

"With this equipment, you can have a meeting any time, with people at any place. If a user doesn't have a camera and microphone, you can do it via chat-rooms capability. I can do it anywhere I've got a web browser and an Internet connection."

Another feature of TKN is called a "Quick Place."

"It is a virtual team room where, if I've got a project that I'm working on with a team of people, I can set up one of these, customize it and we can collaborate on our project in a secure environment," Ruhlen said. "Nobody else can get in there unless we allow them in."

TKN will be where offices can post local news that would otherwise be sent via e-mail. This includes items such as retirement notices and organizational events.

"That will keep from sending a one-meg PowerPoint slide via e-mail," he said.

The documents saved on TKN will also be saved on a local server. So if the system fails, a person can still access and work on them.

Engineers trains for deployment

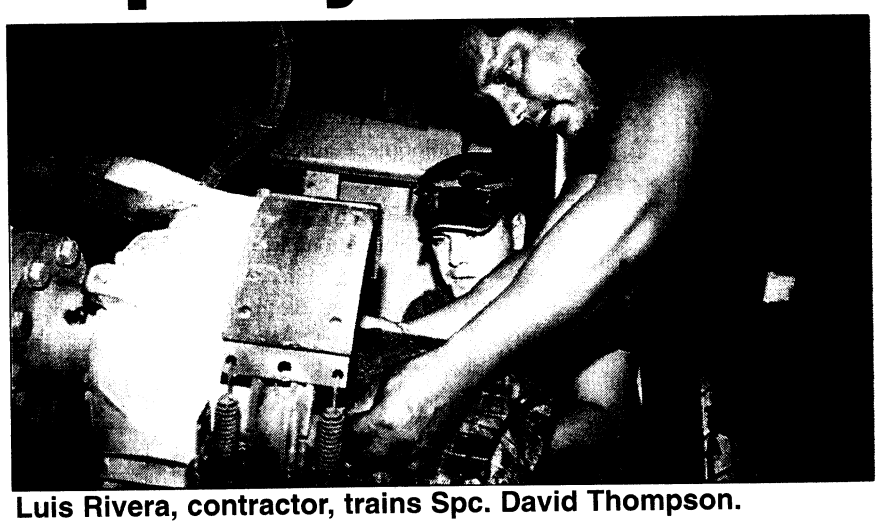
Soldiers prepare for Fort Pickett, Va., mission

Sgt. William A. Graves
Bayonet assistant editor

Approximately 80 soldiers from the 63rd Engineer Company will deploy for three and a half months to Fort Pickett, Va., in early August to build a training area for the commonwealth of Virginia.

"We're eager to take the skills we've trained on during the projects we've done for (the Directorate of Facilities Engineering and Logistics) on post and apply them to a mission that requires deploying and working with (Joint Task Force) 6," said 1st Lt. Darren Fraser, company executive officer.



JTF 6 is an anti-drug military unit that asked the company to build the facility where policemen will train for high-speed chases on a 24-foot wide, 1.2 mile road.

Prior to building the road, soldiers will work on erosion control measures, which include construction of 13 sediment basins, 6,500 linear feet of silt fences, 3,900 linear feet of diversion dikes and five stone construction entrances.

Next, they will clear and grub 260 acres of organic material. This will involve the removal of 75 stumps per acre.

After that, they will build the road, four culverts and 14 check dams, which are made of stone and placed in drainage ditches to slow down water and control erosion.

As it was last year in Douglas, Ariz., when it built a border-patrol road for the task force, the company is ready to accomplish all facets of the mission to standard, Fraser said.

Luis Rivera, contractor, trains Spc. David Thompson.

Fifteen missions the soldiers completed in the past eight months have prepared them for the deployment, he said. From installing culverts at Clear Lake Pond to building a walking trail at Martin Army Community Hospital, the soldiers have helped save the post money, as they have earned valuable stick time on their equipment and vehicles.

"This is a capstone mission for us," Fraser said.

An Organization Contract Augmentation Team from Lear Siegler Services, Inc., has also helped prepare soldiers for the mission, said Chief Warrant Officer Darrell S. Shelby, 36th Engineer Group maintenance technician. The program improves the quality of service of the company's wheeled vehicles and engineering equipment and, ultimately, enhances deployment readiness.

"The soldiers are ready, and the contractors are on line with the services," Shelby said. "They'll be at a 100 percent (operational readiness rate) prior to the deployment."

While the soldiers are in Virginia, the contractors doubt they will have any problems with their vehicles or equipment, said Luis Rivera, head mechanic for the program. When the vehicles leave the maintenance bay, they are almost like new. If soldiers should have problems, the training they have received will help them complete the mission.

The contract mechanics have imparted years of experience to the soldiers so their vehicles and equipment are safe and reliable, he said.

"It's all about helping the troops," Rivera said. "It's been a privilege to work with them for the past three months."

Soldiers appreciate the contractors' help, and they are excited to deploy, said Spc. David Thompson, motorized transportation operator.

"We're all ready to go," Thompson said.

"All we do is train. We understand it is necessary, but working on vehicles and inventorying parts in the motor pool can get boring. Actually doing our job up there will be a good change of pace."

OCS learns squad tactics, communication

Soldiers react under stressful situations

Pfc. Chris Stephens
Bayonet staff

Imagine sitting in the woods. Your whole squad is waiting for you to give the signal to attack the enemy. Then, just before your plan is finished, enemy forces fire upon your squad.

What do you do?

Officer Candidate School Class 05-02 learned the answer in the squad tactical exercise July 1, in which they were tested in many areas of leadership.

"We wanted to see how they would react under stressful situations," said Capt. Tim Hill, A Company, 3rd Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment, commander.

"The purpose of the exercise is to evaluate the candidates on leadership skills and communication."

The commander would give the squad leader a situation and what needed to be done, and the squad leader would devise a plan on how to accomplish the mission.

"I used the plan that I thought would be best in the situation," said Officer Candidate Mabry Schkes, squad leader. "I had the teams move out and cover each other. I reacted to the firing by the enemy and told the team leaders what we needed to do to overtake the hill. The team leaders took it back to their soldiers and, in turn, they executed a great counter-attack."

The other candidates learned valuable lessons during the exercise, said Officer Candidate Brian Kupczyk.

"It's all thinking on your feet and making the quick and accurate decision, he said. On the battlefield, those quick decisions can mean the difference between life and death."

The training encouraged soldiers to compensate and take the initiative to complete the mission to standard, Hill said.

"We used the tactics we were taught without definitive orders," Kupczyk said.

The training should pay dividends for the future second lieutenants, Hill said.

"The war on terrorism will take on many forms," Hill said. "Today's training was just a taste of what they might face, but when you add in all the rest of what they learn here, they should be ready."

NEWS FROM THE FIELD

1-15 prepares to deploy with "warrior ethos"

1st Battalion, 15th Infantry Regiment

As the 1st Battalion, 15th Infantry Regiment prepares for an upcoming deployment to Kuwait, the "warrior ethos" ingrained in these fine soldiers will inevitably be the foundation of their success. Everything the "Can Do" Dragons do is with a focus on combat readiness and effectively destroying any potential threat. Since the summer of 2000, the "Can Do Express" has been rolling at full speed and has yet to slow down. The "Can Do Express" is a term used by the leaders and soldiers of the 1st Bn., 15th Inf., Regt., to affectionately describe the intense operation tempo that keeps the battalion in a constant state of technical and tactical readiness.

The soldiers of this organization are well versed in shooting gunneries, successfully completing combined live fire exercises using both mounted and dismounted troops, conducting long distance foot marches and perfecting battle drills. The sense of pride in their numerous accomplishments is evident in the way the Dragons carry themselves around not only Kelley Hill, but Fort Benning as well. From the time these professionals show up in the morning, to the time they adjourn at the end of a long day, these great soldiers consistently give 110 percent. The Dragons of the 1st Bn., 15th Inf., Regt., continually set the standard for other soldiers throughout 3rd Brigade to emulate.

This "warrior ethos" is a thought process that transcends lessons learned from perfecting battle drills or physical conditioning derived from countless hours of physical training; this mindset is a way of thinking that affects every aspect of these warriors' lives. The "Warrior Ethos" ingrained in these soldiers says that "Your mind is your most powerful weapon …" and, "Don't do your best; be the best!" It is a way of thinking that makes a good soldier great and a great warrior awesome. The "warrior ethos" is alive and well in everything that the 1st Bn., 15th Inf., Regt., Dragons put their hands to. These soldiers possess a mindset that says, "I simply refuse to lose." This infectious spirit can be directly attributed to the unwavering commitment to excellence personified by the Battalion Commander, Lt. Col. Dennis W. Smith. It is his zeal and passion that washes over the battalion and motivates these soldiers accomplish extraordinary feats.

The soldiers of the 1st Bn., 15th Inf., Regt., are learning lessons that will serve them well wherever they go and whatever they do.

Attention to detail, rigorous physical conditioning and the attitude that "failure is not an option" are attributes that these soldiers carried with them as they embarked on their deployment to Southwest Asia. The Dragons continue to add to a proud regimental history, made by the sacrifices of men not unlike themselves, who consistently answered the nation's call with the unwavering response, "Can Do!" You see, these young men are more than mere soldiers;

New Jersey welcomes TF 1-15

Sgt. 1st Class C. Parker
1st Battalion, 15th Infantry Regiment

NEW JERSEY KABAL, KUWAIT — It's no longer just the punch line to a bad joke. The main bodies for the "Can Do Battalion" completed the convergence on New Jersey Kabal in the Kuwaiti desert between May 19 and 24.

The departure from Fort Benning and arrival in Kuwait were activities that were filled with mixed emotion for a number of soldiers within the battalion. Many soldiers were anxious to get on with the deployment for which they had prepared for over a few months, while others arrived in Kuwait with uncertainty as to what lay ahead.

Never had Command Sgt. Maj. Gabriel Ossa been a welcome sight as when welcoming the various units of the battalion into the country as he spoke in the draw yard at Camp Doha. With each entity that drew equipment from lot 5, the professionalism of the Dragons was evident. The teamwork and dedication of the soldiers enabled the battalion to complete the equipment draws well under the standard time allotted, often with hours to spare.

With the soldiers having exceeded the equipment draw standard, they were all anxious to get to the kabal that they would call home. It seemed almost fitting that as the units of the battalion rolled into New Jersey Kabal, the sun was rising, welcoming both the new occupants and a new day.

The kabal itself is still in its infancy and improvements are being made daily. The showers and ever expanding phone lines for morale calls seem to be the high points of New Jersey at this point. The AAFES truck is expected to open any day now and the morale trips to Camp Doha on Saturdays promise to offer much needed relief.

The task force completed its first task force run on Memorial Day. The esprit de corps and cohesion were high as Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 1st Battalion, 15th Infantry Regiment, B Co., 1st Bn., 64th Armor Regiment, C Co., 317th Engineer Bn., B Co., 46th Engineer Bn., A Co., 1st Bn. 15th Inf., Regt., B Co., 1st Bn. 15th Inf., Regt., and the COLT ADA team ran the 5K "inner loop" of the Kabal. This is the first of what promises to be many events that will bring the diversified task force together as a cohesive combined arms team.

The task force is currently planning upcoming training and operations that will hone its war fighting skills and allow them to participate in exercises not easily available at Fort Benning. The Dragons left Fort Benning as an infantry battalion and arrived in Kuwait as Task Force 1-15th and true to the "Can Do" spirit, hit the ground running and don't plan on stopping anytime soon.

Families flock to fireworks

Angela Sachitano
Special to the Bayonet©

The bugs were busy and the humidity was high, but that didn't stop Fort Benning soldiers and their families from packing fields, playgrounds and front yards for the post's Independence Day festivities July 3.

The annual celebration on York Field left on-lookers wide-eyed as the sky was illuminated with the fireworks.

"It's like the movies, how they do that," said 6-year-old Conner Delaney. "I love this!"

For some soldiers, the event was an excuse to get out and meet neighbors.

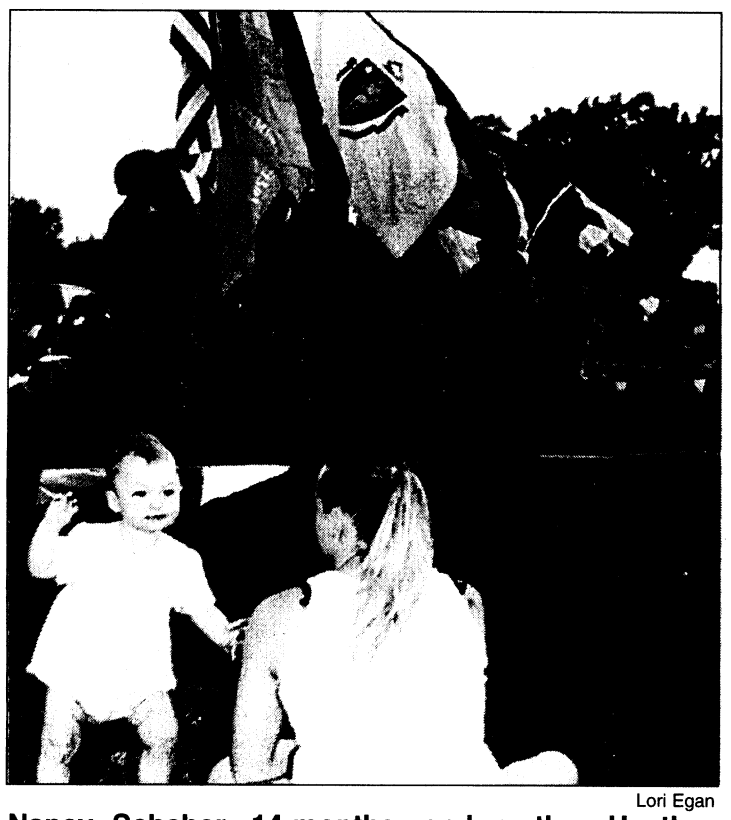
"We decided to have a barbecue in our back yard and invite the neighborhood over," said Capt. Rob Delaney, who just arrived on post this month for the Infantry Officers Career Course.

"We are glad we did. It's a great time celebrating the birth of our country together."

Stephen King, fireworks director, has been in charge of the Fort Benning fireworks since 1993, and this year he said he added several elements to the show.

"Usually we end with a finale, but this year we wanted to begin the show with something spectacular," King said. "I started the show with 56 bangs for the 56 signers of the Declaration of Independence. Then I went on to add 50 more bangs and some illuminating comets for the 50 states."

The show included a pyrotechnic salute of red, white and blue.



"My grandpa used to take me to see the Fort Benning fireworks show when I was little," said King, a Columbus native. "I never dreamed I'd eventually be creating the show myself."

Fort Benning spent about $7,000 on the fireworks, which lasted about 30 minutes, said Sally Ghent, chief, Support Branch of the Community Recreation Division.

The looks on the children's faces during the event proved its success.

"My kids sat silent, staring at the sky with occasional oohs and ahs," Delaney said. "It was the quietest they had been all night."

"And the most patriotic."

Restrictions in effect

Post officials encourage people to conserve water

Pfc. Chris Stephens
Bayonet staff

Mandatory water restrictions are now in effect on Fort Benning.

Residents are now restricted to when they can use water during the day.

"The water restriction is in place because of the drought during the summer months in recent years," said Joe Wilkins, environmental specialist with the Directorate of Facilities Engineering and Logistics. "When you do not get any rain, it puts the total water supply in short supply, and there has to be restrictions on its use."

Residents on Fort Benning living in even numbered addresses can only water on even days, and residents in odd numbered addresses can only water on odd days.

The times for watering are from midnight until noon and 7 p.m. until midnight.

"The times are in place to allow Upatoi Creek, Fort Benning's water supply, to remain at a level where there is still enough water," Wilkins said. "The Upatoi is not that big. The creek flow is at 124 million gallons a day, which is not bad, but we still need to conserve the water."

Fort Benning is in Stage 2 of a five-step system on water restrictions. Stage 1 is a voluntary stage of restriction. The second stage requires the mandatory water restriction from noon to 7 p.m.

The restriction includes filling up wading pools, car washing. sod watering or anything else that requires outdoor water use.

Families who need to water during the hours of noon to 7 p.m., may be granted a 30 day-temporary permit from the Environmental Management Branch.

"If we get to any of the higher stages, it will limit our water use a little bit more," Wilkins said. "I don't see that as a problem, though.

"The water restrictions are there just for the worst-case scenario. We want to make sure we have enough water for families on post for drinking, hygiene, firefighting and for troops in the field."

> "There is still a shortage of water across the state of Georgia."
> Chuck Walls
> Garrison Manager

"Because of the recent rain, a lot of people don't believe that a drought is a major concern," said Chuck Walls, garrison manager. "There is still a shortage of water across the state of Georgia, and we still need to be concerned. Water is a precious resource, and we need to do as much as we can to conserve it."

The water restrictions have been a fixture during the summer on post for a few years.

"This summer is just like all others," Wilkins said. "The water restrictions are there, but we will have no problem getting through it. The community seems to be interested in conserving water, so it should not be that big of a problem for the community."

To apply for a permit or for more information go to the EMB in Meloy Hall, Room 310.

There will be hula-hoops, hopscotch, horseshoes, ping-pong, face painting and plenty of games and activities at Building 1056.

Parents are encouraged to participate in the games and various activities with their children.

Parents can even teach their children some of the games they enjoyed as children. YS plans to make this an annual event that will emphasize the importance of parents and children spending meaningful time together.

For more information, call 545-3070 or stop by YS, Building 1056.

Family housing parking — All quarters on post will be assigned one parking space to give easy access to their quarters.

All residents must ensure that they park only in their designated area or any unmarked area if they have more than one car.

Visitors must also park in an unmarked space. For more information, call your community life office.

Also, guidelines have been set up for front yard decorations.

No fencing is permitted in the front yard of any quarters; front yard decorative borders are permitted, but should not be constructed of greater than one-inch lumber, railroad ties, metal rods or pipes, contain sharp points nor exceed 18 inches in height; prior to installation, occupants will submit a drawing of the proposed front yard decoration border on a fence request form; borders must be well maintained or removed; and no wooden patio or porches are allowed in the front yard.

For more information, call your family housing inspector, Community Life NCO or the Community Life Office.

Clearing quarters — The Fort Benning Housing Division wants to remind families clearing quarters they have two options when it comes to choosing a cleaning crew.

If families use the Fort Benning cleaning division, they will pay one fee to the post and leave the rest up to the Fort Benning cleaning crew to clean their quarters..

If families use a cleaning company on their own, they are responsible for payment. and cannot leave quarters until a final inspection of the home is completed.

For more information on clearing quarters, call the Housing Division at 545-2993.

Lending Closet — Because of an increase in family need, the Lending Closet is asking all families who have borrowed household goods, to return the items borrowed as soon as their belongings are delivered to them.

For more information on how to borrow household goods or where, call the Lending Closet at 545-4485.

OSC Thrift Shop — The OSC Thrift Shop is in need of daily and summer volunteers. In order to be a volunteer at the OSC Thrift Shop, the following guidelines must be met: be a soldier or family member with a military ID card; and be at least 13 years old.

The following benefits are immediately available to volunteers working two hours or more each time the Thrift Shop is open for business: first pick of newly consigned merchandise, child care reimbursement for up to two children and more.

For more information, call 687-4830 or go by the OSC Thrift Shop and pick up a volunteer booklet.

Gimme five THE GRILLIN' WAY

Kay Blakely
American Forces Press Service

When it comes to grilling, most of us think of steaks, chops, chicken or ribs. But you're missing out on some of the best eating of the season if you fail to include fresh vegetables grilled right alongside your main dish.

Grilling's a perfect way to make sure you get the recommended five servings from the fruit and vegetable food group each day. And sometimes, the vegetables can even be the main dish. Such is the case with portobello mushrooms, which are so large and meaty they are often considered the "steaks" of the mushroom family.

Almost any vegetable you would normally steam, boil or sauté can be cooked on the grill. Potatoes, zucchini and yellow squash, sweet peppers, onions, any kind of mushroom, fresh corn grilled in the husk, even tomatoes, are all prime candidates. Cabbage cooked on the grill develops a delicious sweetness I've never been able to duplicate by any other cooking method. Even though I'm normally not fond of eggplant, I love it cooked on the grill.

Try your hand at vegetable grilling and you're sure to come up with a few of your own favorites as well. Grilling is easy, and success is almost guaranteed as long as you keep a few tips in mind:

• Grill vegetables over a medium-to-hot fire. A charcoal fire is ready when the coals are completely covered in gray ash, usually about 30 minutes after the fire is lit.

• Vegetables can be halved, quartered or cut into rounds, but the trick is to cut all pieces roughly the same thickness (no thicker than three-quarters to one inch) so the veggies will cook evenly.

• Be careful not to overcook. Depending on the vegetable and its thickness, a total grilling time of two to five minutes per side is sufficient.

• Brushing vegetables with olive oil or vegetable oil will keep them from sticking to the grill. And certain items, such as asparagus, eggplant and cob corn, will benefit from a 30-minute soak in cold water prior to grilling.

• If you plan to use wooden skewers for kebabs, be sure to soak them in water to prevent smoldering or flaming once they reach the grill.

• For small vegetables that would fall through the grate, either use a hinged grill pan or cook them wrapped in foil.

Once you have a bit of experience under your belt, knowing the specific handling required for each kind of vegetable will become easy. If you're trying it for the first time, though, the following list will probably come in handy. It's a good one to clip and save in your recipe box for reference.

Asparagus: Trim off the tough lower ends and soak in cold water for 30 minutes to an hour if the stalks are a bit wilted. Pat dry, then place directly over the coals, turning every minute or so. Remove when the tips begin to turn brown. (These are really good!)

Bell peppers: Cut peppers in half, top to bottom. Remove stems, seeds and whitish ribs. Cut into strips about two inches wide; brush lightly with oil and grill two to three minutes per side. Or leave the peppers whole and grill until completely blackened. Close the hot peppers in a plastic bag while they cool for 10-15 minutes, then peel off the blackened skin. The crusty skin comes off easily, but it's a messy job. Split open and remove seeds. Eat as antipasto with oil and vinegar, or use in any recipe that calls for roasted peppers.

Cabbage: Cut a large head of green cabbage into four to eight wedges and remove the core. Sprinkle wedges with garlic powder, salt and pepper and generously dot with butter. Arrange wedges back together, as if a whole head again, and wrap tightly in heavy-duty aluminum foil or a double layer of regular foil. Grill over medium coals for 45 minutes to an hour or until tender. After the required cooking time, leave the wrapping intact and move to the back of the grill to keep warm while other menu items finish cooking.

Carrots: Use full size carrots, but not too big — the smaller ones are best. Brush with olive oil and cook over medium to low coals until tender, or brown over higher heat and move to a cooler portion of the grill to finish. They will take at least 10 to 15 minutes to cook.

Corn on the cob: Gently pull back the husks, but don't remove them. Remove the silks and cut off the very tip of the cob. Soak in cold water for about 30 minutes. Pat dry and brush generously with butter. Fold the husks back down and tie or twist the ends to secure. Place over medium coals for about five to eight minutes, turning often to avoid burning. Keep warm on the back of the grill, away from direct heat, while the remainder of the meal is being grilled.

Eggplant: Slice larger varieties into rounds about 3/8-inch thick; smaller versions can be sliced in half lengthwise. Brush with olive oil and grill until they start to brown, about five minutes per side. Drizzle with balsamic vinegar or serve with an Italian salsa verde (garlic, basil, parsley and tomatoes — all fresh and all chopped; add salt and extra virgin olive oil to taste).

Garlic: Take whole bulbs and cut off the root end. Brush with olive oil and place cut side down over a hot fire. Grill for about 10 minutes or until the skin is brown.

Mushrooms: Clean and remove stems. Toss in a bowl with oil, then thread on metal or wooden skewers, or spread them loosely over the grill if they are large enough. Grill four to five minutes for small mushrooms and six to eight minutes for larger ones.

Onions: Sweet varieties such as Vidalias are best, but any onion will do. Peel and slice onions about one-half inch thick, brush with oil and grill about three to five minutes per side. Drizzle with balsamic vinegar, if desired. Onions can also be quartered or chunked and threaded on a skewer with other vegetables for a nice kebab.

Tomatoes: Cut in half top to bottom. Grill cut side down about two to three minutes.

Potatoes: Wash and dry whole potatoes. Rub with vegetable oil. Wrap in aluminum foil and grill 35-40 minutes or longer, turning occasionally. To test for doneness, squeeze gently with a hand protected by an oven mitt. When they give to gentle pressure, they are done. Or, place small new potatoes and fresh green beans on a large square of aluminum foil, dot generously with butter, and season with salt and pepper. Wrap tightly, folding edges of foil securely to prevent butter leaking. Grill for 35-40 minutes. Thick slices of potato can also be grilled directly on the grate. Brush with oil, season with salt and pepper, and cook for about three minutes per side.

Zucchini (or any other summer squash): Small squash can be halved lengthwise, large ones should be cut into one-half inch thick rounds. Brush with olive oil and grill two to three minutes per side. Use a hot fire so they cook quickly and stay firm, but watch carefully so they don't burn.

All of this is so simple, you really don't need to follow a specific recipe, but I've included a couple anyway. They are all exceptionally good. So get grilling and enjoy.

Marinated Grilled Vegetables

1 medium eggplant
2-3 small zucchini or summer squash
1 each red and green bell pepper, seeds and ribs removed
1 medium onion
10-20 mushrooms, stems removed
1/4 cup olive oil
1 tablespoon lemon juice
2 cloves garlic, minced
1 teaspoon dried oregano

Wash vegetables. Mix olive oil, lemon juice, garlic and oregano together. Let sit. Slice eggplant into half-inch thick rounds. Cut squash in half lengthwise or into half-inch rounds. Cut peppers into squares or wide strips. Cut onions into wedges. Toss vegetables with oil mixture to coat evenly. Cover and marinate in refrigerator for at least one hour. Preheat grill. Place everything on the grate and cook 10-20 minutes, brushing remaining oil mixture over the vegetables every few minutes. Remove vegetables from grill as they become done.

Variation: Use 1/4 cup coarsely chopped fresh basil instead of oregano.

Notes: Bottled Italian salad dressing also makes a good, easy marinade. It's especially good on zucchini. Vegetables may be threaded onto skewers before grilling, if desired, rather than grilled on the grate. Serve vegetables hot from the grill, at room temperature or as cold leftovers.

Grilled Portobello Mushrooms

4 portobello mushrooms
1/3 cup canola oil
1/4 cup chopped onion
5 cloves garlic, minced
1/3 cup balsamic vinegar

Clean mushrooms; remove stems and reserve for other use. Place caps on a plate with gills up. In a small bowl, combine the oil, onion, garlic and vinegar. Pour mixture evenly over the mushroom caps and let stand for one hour. Grill over hot coals for about 5 minutes per side, brushing with additional marinade if desired. Serve immediately. Serve as you would a hamburger with all the trimmings, slice and use as a side dish or over lettuce leaves as a salad or serve whole as a vegetarian alternative to steak.

Summit focuses on mobile students, college tuition

Conference lists military family issues

Staff Sgt. Marcia Triggs
Army News Service

WASHINGTON — Transitioning students between high schools and reducing college tuition for military families were the focus of a conference being hosted by the Army July 8-10 in Washington, D.C.

One soldier is paying twice as much to send his child to college because he's not a resident of the state where he's stationed. Then, there's a graduating senior who has attended four different schools since entering the ninth grade.

These are real-life examples that Lt. Gen. James Hill, I Corps and Fort Lewis, Wash., commanding general, laid out before delegates at the Army's second-ever Education Summit. And these are the issues that Army Chief of Staff Gen. Eric K. Shinseki invited educators and post commanders to explore.

"We need schools to do the right thing, not the bureaucratic thing for our children," Hill said. "It's too easy to fall back on what the law or policy says. I encourage everyone to work with your state to change and challenge laws that are obstacles to our mobile students."

Delegates were challenged to: develop a strategy to "institutionalize" recommendations from an Army study on secondary education and to also develop a strategy for military families to gain favorable in-state tuition policies.

On the last day of the summit, delegates briefed Shinseki on how they hope to enhance the education progression of military family members.

The Army is hoping that its Secondary Education Transition Study and Memorandum of Agreement will alleviate some of the challenges of the mobile military child, Hill said. The Army began a study in 1999 to better understand the effects of mobility on high school students and provide recommendations to ease the impact. Out of the study came a memorandum of agreement, which is the framework for establishing common practices among school systems.

There are currently 94 school districts that have signed the agreement, but plenty of others have not, Hill said.

School districts involved in the MOA partnership agree to: improve the timely transfer of records; ease transition during the first two weeks of enrollment; foster access to extracurricular programs; lessen impact of moves at the end of junior year and before and during senior year; communicate variations in school calendars and schedules; create and implement professional development systems; continue child-centered partnerships between installation and supporting school; provide information concerning graduation requirements; provide services for post-secondary study.

While the MOA workgroup discusses ways to reduce the challenges of transitional high school students, Hill also asked that they remember the challenges of children with special needs.

Too often children with special needs get ignored, Hill said. As a parent with a special needs daughter, he knows the challenges too well of moving his daughter from school district to school district and having to advocate for her rights again and again, he said.

As military members move from post to post, they become stateless people, Hill said. Which is why Army leadership is hoping that an agreement can be made that will allow soldiers to get in-state tuition rates.

"This is a tough time to ask universities for such an agreement, because so many people are facing economic woes," said Maj. Gen. Joe Taylor, chief of legislative liaison for the Office of the Secretary of the Army.

"However, our presence in their community represents a non-declining investment," Taylor, said. "I believe it should be attainable for soldiers to receive in-state tuition rates. And as long as there isn't a break in enrollment, that in-state status should remain, with no regard to if the parents have to move."

The idea for in-state tuition is basically common sense, but changes aren't made based on common sense, Taylor said. The delegates are going to have to come up with concrete data and weigh in on the positives, he said.

Washington state has an in-state policy that is favorable to military families, but Hill said it wasn't instituted because of state benevolences. It took the combined leadership of the Army, Air Force and Navy to frame the issue for state legislature, he said.

It was economic logic that brought about the achievement, Hill said.

"The U.S. military in the state of Washington directly influences over $8 billion a year of the state's economy. We told them that we were a dollar-generating constituency, and they listened."

The memorandum of agreement and the in-state tuition policy are both good ideas, Hill said. But a lot of good ideas never see the light of day because they lack staying power, he added. Hill challenged the delegates to come up with data to show that their ideas are better than any others.

Volunteers to create memorial flag for terror victims

Cross stitchers use needle-work for flag

Linda D. Kozaryn
American Forces Press Service

WASHINGTON — Elizabeth A. Barnes of Hampton Roads, Va., is using her needlework skills to memorialize terrorism's victims.

Barnes heads an ambitious volunteer cross-stitching project involving people across the nation and overseas. Her goal is to create a flag of cross-stitched squares 35 feet high and 62.5 feet wide with the names of those who died not just in the Sept. 11 attack, but in all the terrorist attacks over the last 30 years.

The daughter of a Navy enlisted man, Barnes is married to Petty Officer 2nd class James W. Barnes, an electronics technician assigned to a naval communications station in Hampton Roads. She said the Sept. 11 attack made her angry and scared.

"Since my husband was in the military, I couldn't help but remember the bombing of the USS Cole the previous year," Barnes said. Up until Sept. 11, she said, terrorism was something that happened overseas. "Even though you knew it was there, you never truly expected it to come to America."

Deciding to do what she could to help, Barnes originally came up with the flag idea honoring the Sept. 11 victims and the sailors who died in the attack on the destroyer Cole. As she began researching terrorist attacks on the Internet, however, she learned of many other attacks over the last 30 years.

"I don't remember hearing about 90 percent of them," she said. "I was about 7 when the bombing at the Marine barracks in Beirut happened." For three weeks, she combed the Web compiling a list of terror victims. "I know I didn't get them all," she said.

Her list includes about 4,000 names of service members and civilians who died at terrorists' hands overseas and at home. Most recently, she added Daniel Pearl, the journalist executed in Pakistan, and Mark Burnham, the missionary hostage killed during a rescue attempt in the Philippines.

The list also includes 219 Marines, 18 sailors and four soldiers who died in Beirut, Lebanon, in 1983; the 198 people killed in the Pan Am Flight 103 bombing near Lockerbie, Scotland, in 1988; the 168 people who died in the 1995 Murrah Federal Building explosion in Oklahoma City, Okla.; the 19 airmen who died at Khobar Towers in Dhahran, Saudi Arabia, in 1996; and the 17 sailors who died on the USS Cole in Yemen in 2000.

Barnes and her husband designed patterns for the World Trade Center, the Pentagon, each military service and many other organizations. Volunteers provide their own materials at a cost of about $4 per square.

Depending on the needleworker's ability, Barnes said, a cross-stitch square can take from a few hours to a few days to make.

Right now, volunteers have completed about 2,000 squares. People across the country and in Canada, Scotland, the United Kingdom, Italy, Spain, Japan, Guam and the Bahamas are working on another 700.

Barnes is still seeking volunteers to do another 1,500 squares. She hopes to have the flag finished by Sept. 11, the first anniversary of the terrorist attacks on America. She plans to take the massive flag to Washington, D.C., New York City and to the Beirut Memorial in North Carolina.

The flag "documents history that tends to be forgotten," she said. "I want it to be remembered."

Information on the project is available at www.memorialflag.org.

God blesses, encourages us at all times

Leaders gain better soldiers through praise

Chaplain (Capt.) Michael White
2nd Battalion 19th Infantry Regiment

REFLECTIONS

Have I not commanded you? Be strong and courageous. Do not be terrified; do not be discouraged, for the Lord your God will be with you wherever you go. (Joshua 1:9 NIV)

Fear and discouragement are two very powerful emotions, but so are courage and encouragement. Perhaps we tend to experience fear and discouragement more frequently than courage and encouragement because of all the troubles and uncertainties of life, but that need not be so.

We need to keep in mind that, interestingly enough, these opposing emotions are mutually exclusive of one another; that is, where one resides, the other opposing emotion can not co-exist.

Therefore, we can displace fear and discouragement by remembering the powerful encouragement God gave to Joshua.

We may think Joshua had good reason to be afraid and discouraged. After all, his beloved spiritual leader, Moses, had died recently, leaving some very big shoes to fill, and now he was supposed to take over where Moses left off and lead the frightened, oft-complaining, critical and quarrelsome people of Israel into a war against giants and fortified cities.

White

Nevertheless, in the first nine verses of this first chapter in the book of Joshua, God told Joshua no less than three times to be strong and courageous, and that doesn't include the several promises God made to him regarding what God was about to do with and through him.

When God offers such powerful encouragement, how can anyone not be encouraged?

I have a confession to make: I am easily discouraged by the troubles and uncertainties of life, especially by the critics in this world.

I'm sure some of those critics think they'll motivate me to do better if they point out my weaknesses or failures, but their criticism serves only to discourage me and destroy my motivation.

You might not expect this from a preacher and minister of God serving as a chaplain in the Army, but it's true. I am pretty good at encouraging others in fact, I consider that one of God's spiritual gifts to me (see Romans 12:8 but I'm not so good at encouraging myself.

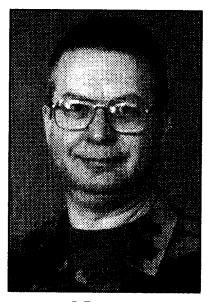
However, I can always find reassurance and comfort and encouragement with God, when I pray to him and read his holy word.

Just as God reassured and encouraged Joshua, so he encourages each of us. Moreover, if we want to be like God (and he did instruct us to be like him, you know), we should work at encouraging others around us. If we all do that, someone will eventually encourage us, too.

Any fool can find fault, tear down, and destroy another with criticism, but it takes a truly wise and godly person to encourage and build up another.

If you are a leader, whether an NCO, or an officer in the military or a civilian, let me encourage you to look for ways to encourage your subordinates and peers, rather than find fault and criticize their efforts.

I think I'm safe in saying that you'll get a reinvigorated, less stressed, more supportive and more cooperative section or unit or friendship for your effort.



Now, may God bless and encourage you, too!

Nagging drives loved ones away

Chaplain (Maj.) Raymond Koop
Family Life Ministries Center

A negative cycle occurs when a spouse persistently and diligently confronts his or her mate about an issue that never seems to get resolved. He thinks she just wants to nag and put me down. She just wants to argue. She thinks he doesn't want to talk to me. He doesn't care. She feels that he doesn't want to resolve the problem.

When a husband distances himself from his wife, his wife turns up the volume. She tries harder to get a response, while her husband tries to avoid a conflict and to withdraw from the emotional intense feelings of resentment, bitterness, disappointment and frustration.

Koop

This gender cycle of pursuing and distancing is common, but not universal. Since men usually are not as verbal as women, they often seek to avoid verbal conflict.

Men tend not to practice and value verbal intimacy as much as women do. Men need to realize that women are not trying to start a fight. Instead, women are trying to resolve an issue in order to get closer and be more intimate with their partner.

Women often feel more responsible for settling differences and maintaining relationships. Because of their high verbal and socialization skills, women seek to resolve conflict in personal relationships more than men. Women need to realize that men are often seeking to avoid conflict and not intimacy with them.

Both men and women avoid things that make them feel anxious or less able to handle conflict. Avoidance and distancing may seem to be good ways for people to avoid unpleasant conversation, but such actions only make things worse. Scripture admonishes us to live in harmony with one another; to be sympathetic, loving, compassionate and humble; and to be a blessing (I Peter 3:8-12).

Dangers found at bottom of bottle

Supplements damage vital organs, body

Spc. Douglas DeMaio
Bayonet staff

Soldiers are required to meet and maintain a physical fitness standard. Muscular strength and endurance are concerns for some while weight and mass are concerns for others.

But then there are some soldiers who are fixated on looking good and feeling strong.

"Strength is a critical component to soldiers' tasks," said Frank Palkoska, deputy commandant for the U.S. Army Physical Fitness School. "Many military occupational specialties require heavy lifting."

Engineers, infantrymen and soldiers in combat arms are just a few personnel required to perform heavy lifting.

For this reason and many others, some soldiers are choosing to pick up a pill before they pick up the iron.

"There are a bunch of different reasons why soldiers choose to take supplements," Palkoska said. "It may make them feel better, look better, enhance their performance or help them meet weight standards."

While supplements are the answer for some bodybuilders, for overweight soldiers and those who are just trying to gain an edge over their peers, weight training and a balanced diet are the answers to the dangers of supplements, Palkoska said. Supplements are not needed to increase muscle mass, gain an edge or lose weight.

"We don't advise supplements," Palkoska said. "We advocate a total body workout."

The reality is supplements like ephedra, mahuang and guarana extract, which contain caffeine, do improve metabolism and muscle performance, but the results are short-lived, said 1st Lt. Julie Hess, chief of clinical dietetics for Martin Army Community Hospital.

"Don't waste money on supplements," Hess said.

Some of these supplements, like ephedrine, are central nervous system stimulants, increasing the body temperature, heart rate and damaging the kidneys and liver, she said. They also dehydrate the user.

They are an artificial way to increase your metabolism and gain strength.

Muscles in the body contain 70 percent water, Palkoska said. Once the body starts having water taken away from it, it begins to have negative effects on the body.

"As hot as it gets in Georgia, when you take these supplements, your risk factor for a heat injury goes up," Palkoska said.

Hess concurs.

"During the summer, we get soldiers coming into the hospital for heat injuries, and we find out they've been using supplements," Hess said. "They're setting themselves up for a heat injury."

Evidence proves taking supplements can constrict blood vessels and overwork kidneys. The body excretes what it doesn't need, so if the body receives too much of anything, it causes stress on the liver and kidneys, which may make them to shut down.

"There is a big misconception that more is better," Hess said. "More can be harmful."

A safety alert put out by Col. Joe Torres, garrison commander, June 21 stated the circumstances of a soldier death, from Fort Hood, Texas, was a direct result of the use of supplements.

"The question you need to ask yourself, is it worth the risk?" Palkoska said.

So what is a soldier to do?

Maintain a healthy diet and exercise, Hess said. Eat seven to eight small meals throughout the day and make sure a minimum of the meals have five servings of fruits and vegetables.

When people want to lose weight, they tend to skip a meal. The body reacts by storing fat, Hess said. Skipping meals hinders metabolism rather than helps it.

Lifting weights is also a good resolution to weight problems, Palkoska said. For beginners, the fitness school advises working out the major muscle groups, such as quadriceps, pectorals, biceps and abdominals. Recommendations are three sets of eight to 12 repetitions.

"Developing the core muscles works a large combination of other muscles," Palkoska said. "The weight training will help maintain or increase metabolism."

For building strength and muscle mass, the Army Physical Fitness Research Institute recommends the overload principle, four to six sets of heavy weight with five to eight repetitions. Strength is gained by exposing muscles to a heavier loads.

For building muscular endurance, Palkoska recommends lifting a weight within reason for three to five sets of 13 to 20 repetitions. This will burn more calories than the other exercises and tone muscles.

"Getting the results you want is more of an art than a science," he said.

Soldiers are responsible for their fitness. Make the smart decision, Palkoska said. Weigh the options available and learn the facts. And one other thing. Drink water.

Choke out!

Spc. Douglas DeMaio

While practicing during a combatives class, Staff Sgt. Charles Hester, 2nd Battalion, 58th Infantry Regiment, uses his legs, while on his back, to hold Capt. John Serafini, 1st Bn., 11th Inf. Regt., in his grasp. Hester applies a cross collar choke, which is used to cut blood circulation to the brain.

Free Agents hammer Seahorses

High-powered offense wins game

Pfc. Chris Stephens
Bayonet staff

Behind the offensive power of the entire lineup, the Free Agents demolished the Seahorses, 16-4, in intramural softball action Tuesday on Knappenburger Field.

The Free Agents of B Company, 2nd Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment, hammered the ball all night against the Seahorses of Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 36th Engineer Group.

"We came out strong swinging the bats," said Vern McClendon, Free Agents' third baseman. "We kept it up throughout the game."

The Free Agents started out strong with five runs in the first inning. The Seahorses came back with two runs of their own in the bottom half of the first inning.

"We started out good by drawing four walks in a row," said Drew Romancky, Seahorses' left-center fielder. "We tried to keep it going, but a few offensive mistakes ended the inning."

Pfc. Chris Stephens

Lisa Wills fails to make contact during a game Tuesday.

After a strikeout, the Seahorses scored another run on a single. Then the very next batter grounded to short, resulting in a double play, which ended the inning.

"The double play saved us from a bad inning," McClendon said. "Strikes weren't being called our way, so it was a perfect way to end the inning."

At the top of the second, the Free Agents once again used defensive mistakes by the Seahorses to score six runs.

"We missed some easy catches and easy groundballs and that really killed us in the second," Romancky said. "This game is all about fundamentals and if you don't execute the fundamentals, then you're in for a long evening.

"We were just a little rusty from the holiday. It will go away before the next game, and we will have a better performance."

David Grey led the Free Agents in offense, going 3-3 with two doubles and three runs batted in.

Team members from both sides said the game is not just for competition, but also for fun.

"We're all out here for the fun of the sport," McClendon said. "It is a fun and competitive atmosphere, and it really boosts our morale to a high level."

Former AMU soldier inducted into hall of fame

Olympian won Bronze Medal in '64 Olympics

Paula Pagán
USAMU Public Affairs

ATLANTA— USA Shooting formally inducted the late retired Lt. Col. Tommy Pool into the U.S. International Shooting Hall of Fame at a private reception for invited guests and the media June 18 at the Holiday Inn Airport North.

The retired colonel won 17 international medals in rifle shooting during a career that spanned from 1959 to 1973, including a Bronze Medal at the 1964 Olympic Games in Tokyo.

Pool began his international competition as a member of the 1959 Pan-American Games Team, winning a team Gold Medal in Three-Position Rifle while setting a world record.

He also won Silver Medals in Three Position Free Rifle, Free Rifle Prone and Free Rifle Kneeling, and a Bronze Medal in Free Rifle Standing. He fired as a member of 1962 U.S. World Championship Team, winning an individual Gold and two Bronze Medals, as well as a Gold, two Silver and a Bronze Medal in the team championships.

A high point in Pool's career came as a member of the 1964 U.S. Olympic Team, with his Bronze Medal in Prone Rifle. As a member of the 1966 U.S. World Championship Team, he was a member of the world record setting Gold Medal winning team as well as picking up another team Gold Medal and team Bronze Medal.

Pool's last international competition came as a member of the 1973 U.S. Championship of the Americas Team, winning a team Gold Medal in Smallbore Prone.

After his retirement from the U.S. Army, Pool served as the public affairs officer for the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit at Fort Benning. He died in 1990. Receiving the Hall of Fame award plaque in Pool's memory was his widow, Nancy Pool, the coordinator of the Excellence in Competition Program and Small Arms Firing School for the USAMU.

Tommy Pool enjoyed life and always had a smile on his face, said Robert Mitchell, chief executive officer of USA Shooting, as he presented the plaque to Mrs. Pool, who tearfully replied, "Tommy would be so honored and so pleased."

Marksmanship competitors travel U.S., Europe, battle in finals

Paula Pagán
USAMU Public Affairs

Shooters of the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit have scored some major victories. The following results are some of their accomplishments:

•U.S. Practical Shooting Association Area 6 Championships, Topton, Pa., June 28 to 30 — USAMU action shooter Spc. Maxient J. Michel was the overall winner and additionally won the Military Division and Junior Division. Staff Sgt. Julie A. Goloski won the Womens Division and took second place in the Military Division.

•International Shooting Sport Federation World Cup, Suhl, Germany, June 24 Shotgun shooter Sgt. William H. Keever received the Bronze Medal in the Double Trap Match.

•USA Shooting National Rifle Championships, Atlanta, Ga., June 20 to 23 — Maj. Michael E. Anti earned the Bronze Medal in the Free Rifle Three Position Championship. Spc. Hattie J. Ponti obtained the Bronze Medal in the Sport Rifle Prone Match.

•Virginia State High Power Rifle Championships, Quantico, Va., June 14 to 16 — Shooting the Magnum, the USAMU Service Rifle Team, coached by Sgt. Emil Praslick III, won the 1,000-Yard Any Rifle Team Match; team members were Sgt. 1st Class Charles E. Coffey and Staff Sgts. Norman L. Anderson, Lance S. Hopper and Jared N. van Aalst. Coffey and Hopper placed second and third in the individual match. Sgt. 1st Class Scott A. Boyd won the 1,000-Yard Service Rifle Championship, followed by Staff Sgt. Tobie L. Tomlinson in second place. Anderson and Sgt. Robert M. Mango took second and third place in the 800 Individual Aggregate.

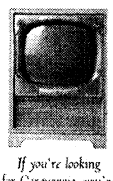
THERE'S NOT ENOUGH ART IN OUR SCHOOLS.



NO WONDER PEOPLE THINK

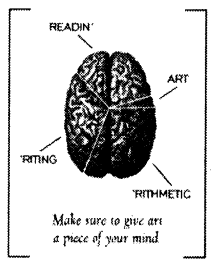
CARAVAGGIO

IS A GUY ON THE SOPRANOS.

A self-portrait of Caravaggio as Bacchus. Honestly, he wouldn't last 10 minutes on The Sopranos.

If you're looking for Caravaggio, you're very, very cold.

It's hard to believe. Here's a 16th-century Baroque master whose bold naturalistic painting style first created a sensation, then a movement. A guy whose life was filled with the turbulence and excess of more than a dozen Mario Puzo novels. This guy who, while troubled, ultimately found redemption and immortality in his art. But does the average kid on the street even know who Caravaggio is?



Fuhgedaboudit.

Too bad. Especially when you consider how much our children can learn from the conflicted life of a great artist like Michelangelo Caravaggio.

He grew up in less than ideal circumstances. Most of his family died in the plague. Much of his youth was misspent on the mean streets of Rome. And as a young artist he struggled for years to make a living. He was angry. Yet the angry contrast between light and darkness in his work is the very reason why it now hangs in countless museums around the world.

If nothing else, it's a case study of the importance of having art as an outlet. Unfortunately, one we're fast removing from our kids' lives.

If the arts are indeed a vital part of your child's education (and studies show you believe they are), then you should demand his or her fair share. To find out how to help, or for more information about the benefits of arts education, please visit us at AmericansForTheArts.org. Because, as Caravaggio would tell you, life without art is torture.

Make sure to give art a piece of your mind.

ART. ASK FOR MORE.

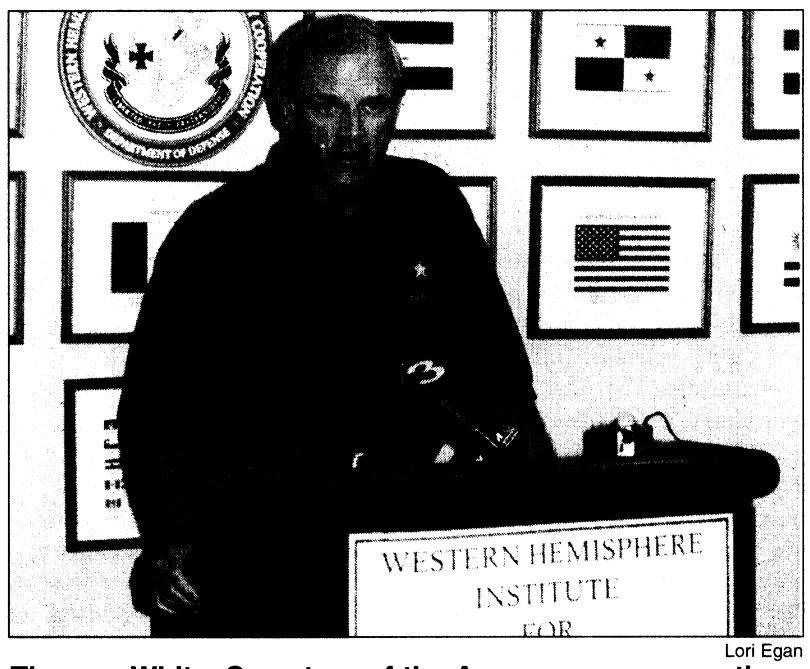
Secretary meets post soldiers

Political issues, Fort Bennings future addressed

Bridgett Siter
Special to the Bayonet©



"There is enough work for everybody. Let me assure you of that," the Secretary of the Army told media and post officials July 11, after a daylong tour of Fort Benning, which included a chat with soldiers recently returned from Afghanistan and a close-up look at basic training.

Retired Brig. Gen. Thomas White denied reports that the decision to relocate the Puerto Rico-based U.S. Army South in Texas was a done deal and assured his audience that rumors of a possible transfer of assets from Fort Benning to Fort Knox was "not the case at all."

"The decision has to be communicated to the Secretary of Defense. He makes that decision," White said, when questioned about a report from U.S. Rep. Mac Collins in early July that accused Army officials of withholding information about the status of Army South. "And also I have a statutory obligation to fully brief the interested members of Congress and talk them through our analysis before any final decision is made. We're still short of that."

White, who began his Army career here in 1967, said it was "great to be back," and called Fort Benning "the heart, the core, of the Army," noting the exemplary training he observed during his visit to the 75th Ranger Regiment, Infantry School, Basic

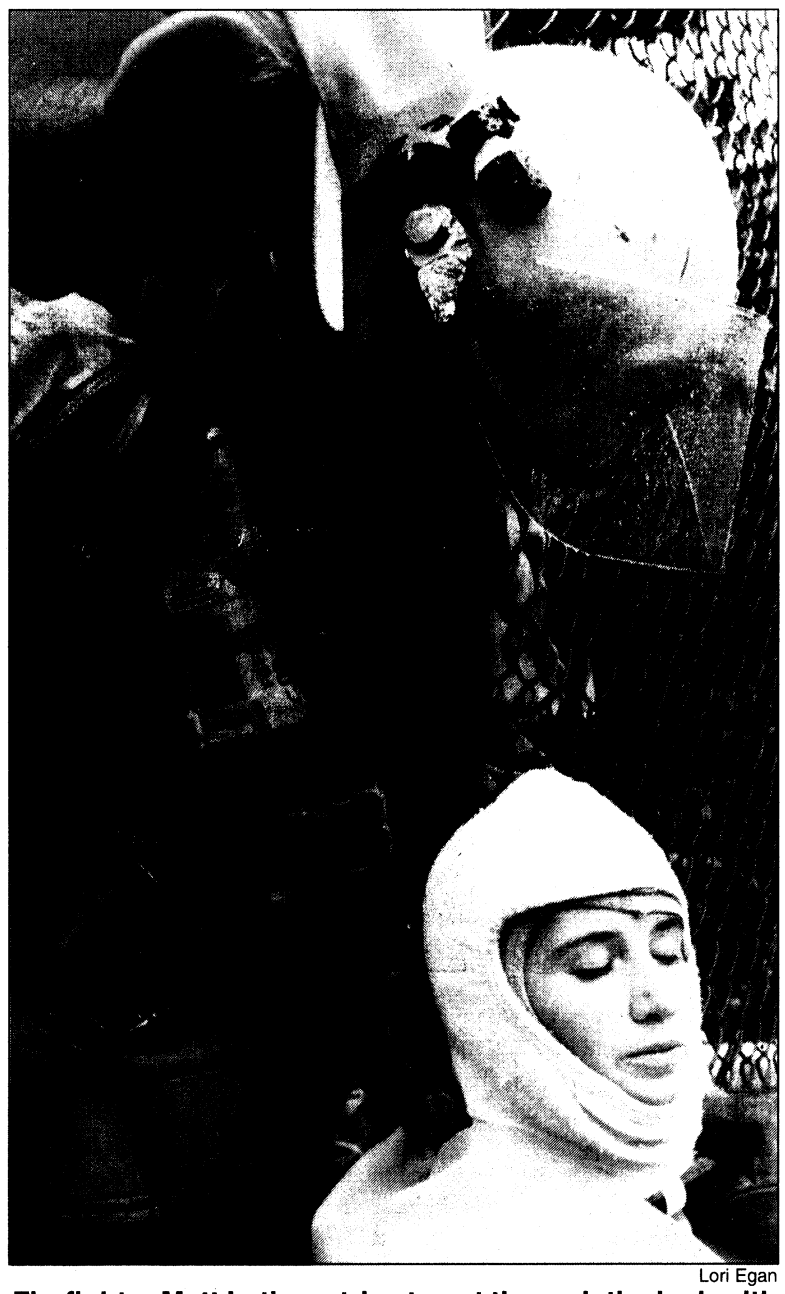
Protester chains self to gate

Firefighters use 'jaws of life' to cut her free

Lori Egan
Bayonet editor

A SOA-Watch protester stopped traffic Saturday when she closed the main gate and chained herself to it.

Incoming traffic on Benning Boulevard was rerouted for nearly two hours as Fort Benning officials explored the safest way to remove the 23-year-old demonstrator.



Rebecca Johnson, from Washington, D.C., cut the chains keeping the gates open, locked the gates closed with a cable lock and then used a U-shaped bike lock around her neck to chain herself to the gate.

Johnson told WTVM she was protesting the sentences U.S. Magistrate G. Mallon Faircloth gave the 36 protesters who were charged with criminal trespass when they crossed onto post in November during the annual SOA-Watch demonstration.

The group continues to protest the U.S. Army School of the Americas, which was closed December 2000.

Faircloth sentenced repeat offenders to the maximum sentence of six months in jail. First-time trespassers received a 90-day jail sentence. Some protesters received six-month probations. Monetary fines were assessed according to the protester's ability to pay.

One protester was found not guilty.

RIF causes job freeze

A-76 projected abolishment of 683 positions

Pfc. Brian Trapp
Bayonet staff

A hiring freeze went into effect Thursday, a move designed to cushion the blow of Fort Benning's impending reduction in force.

The vacancies will leave more job slots for current employees, said Willie Varner, director of Civilian Personnel.

The results of four commercial activities studies, known as A-76, require as many as 683 job positions be abolished to meet the target manpower level by Jan. 25.

The studies concluded that a major portion of functions provided by Directorate of Facilities Engineering and Logistics and the Training Support Division of the Directorate of Operations and Training can be performed cheaper by a contractor.

Adjutant General and Directorate of Information Management functions were also studied. It was determined that these remain inhouse to be

Pay inequity problem for disabled vets

Congressman talks concurrent receipt

Bridgett Siter
Special to the Bayonet©

An age-old law limiting disabled veterans' retirement benefits is archaic and unfair, and merits a close look from Congress, said a group of Army veterans who met with U.S. Rep. Mac Collins at Infantry Hall Saturday.

"Concurrent receipt," the practice of reducing retirement base pay by the amount of disability a veteran receives, was instituted shortly after the Civil War, when the great number of disability claims threatened to bankrupt the fiscally fragile union. For example, soldiers who were awarded 50 percent disability saw their retirement base pay reduced by 50 percent, thereby capping retirement benefits at base pay.

Once common among businesses nationwide, the practice of concurrent receipt was discontinued by all but the military long ago, said Chuck Hunsaker, president of the local chapter of the Association of the U.S. Army.

"To my knowledge the military is the only one that still practices this," said Hunsaker, a member of Collins' staff. "That's the real inequity of this — the guy constantly sent into harms way, the one who has the greatest chance of being hurt, is the only one who doesn't get compensated for his disability. It's unfair."

Hunsaker, who called concurrent receipt "the single biggest issue for retired military personnel who are disabled," was among the 40 veterans present for the meeting. Collins apprised the group, mostly retired Army veterans, on the status of concurrent receipt as Congress prepares for summer recess.

The congressman, who served on a special subcommittee studying the issue for the house budget committee, said the prospect of passing a law revising the policy looks promising, but will likely take several years.

The House of Representatives is considering a bill that will be "phased in over a period of five years for those at 60 percent disability or greater," Collins said.

The Senate version proposes to cover 100 percent of disabled vets, but makes no provision for funding, he said. Therefore, the final decision will probably be closer to the house proposal.

Concurrent receipt is unfair, Collins said, but limited funding stands in the way of immediate resolution. Congress works with only one third of the federal budget, half of which is earmarked for defense. With the nation at war, Congress is currently working with a deficit.

"He laid it on the table — here's what we're trying to do with one third of the discretionary funds," Hunsaker said. "We can only do so much with what we have to work

Sing along with me

Bridgett Siter
Special to the Bayonet©

COMMENTARY

"Mom, make her stop singing that. It's getting on my nerves."

The back seat of the van is Mckenzie's favorite place to sing. Maybe it's the acoustics. Like the singing in the shower, it just sounds better. She's not particularly loud — she's never shattered the windshield. But nonetheless, it drives the other kids crazy.

Sometimes it's "the Barney song." You know they hate that. My boys have decided that Barney is, hmmm, how do I say this? Well, let's say Barney has chosen an alternate lifestyle. Therefore, they find the Barney song personally offensive. Make her stop, please!

Mckenzie says, "It's a free country."

Now I don't like the Barney song either, but it brings my baby great pleasure, and it's a wee bit satisfying to watch the boys writhe in agony. They're teens you see.

But more importantly, Mckenzie's right. It's a free country, and she has the right to sing.

I tell them to tune her out, ignore her, sing along or talk among themselves.

But let the baby sing.

Last week a soldier sent out an e-mail to all post commanders and directorates — an important notice with information to be disseminated to all soldiers and civilian employees.

At the conclusion she added "God bless America."

You know the rest of the story.

Someone — a civilian post employee — took offense.

He responded immediately, admonishing the author and suggesting she limit her references to God to friends within her religious circle.

A soldier — and by proxy the soldier's family — has made a commitment to defend the Constitution of the United States and the rights it protects, among them the rights of free speech and religion.

The soldier in question has not only the right, but the duty to stand up for her belief in God.

She made a promise, swore a solemn oath, pledged her allegiance to God and country when she joined the Army. It's all about loyalty, one of the seven Army values.

Now, it seems we're a nation on the brink of war with itself — a war of words. And in order to win it, those who would fight for the right to speak God's name must speak it frequently and boldly. This is not a time to be silent.

It's still a free country, and — God forbid! — should the courts decided to delete God's name from the Pledge of Allegiance, we still have the right to say it.

There will be those who choose to be offended.

They can tune us out, ignore us, sing along or talk amongst themselves. Uncle Sam's still in the driver's seat, and he says, "Sing, baby, sing."

Editor's note: While we support a person's right to their beliefs, we also recognize official e-mail shouldn't be used for espousing those beliefs.

Now, ain't that America

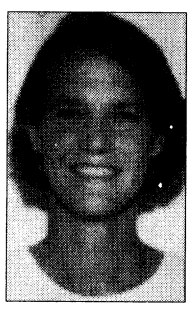
COMMENTARY

Sometimes, it's all about timing, good or bad.

In this case, bad timing left us all feeling pretty good about our country and ourselves.



Our goal was to start for Pennsylvania by 9 a.m. This was a trip born out of desperation. Only three weeks earlier, we arrived at Fort Benning from Kansas. After the second week, my husband deployed.

I was faced with the prospect of keeping my three sons entertained through the summer, while simultaneously (and single-handedly) unpacking the boxes.

I took the easy way out. Off to Grammy's!

Our early start didn't happen. At 11:40, we cleared the front gate, headed in the right direction — north. Then a voice from the back said, "Mom, I'm hungry," and my oldest son reminded me that we still needed an oil change. So we hit Burger King and the Grease Monkey. It was 1 p.m. before I finally set the cruise control.

It was smooth sailing for the first three hours. While my youngest slept, the older two played video games and had their first look at Atlanta.

We made our first pit stop just into South Carolina and the timing would change the rest of our trip.

A few minutes after resuming our journey, we came to a complete stop and would stay there for the next two hours.

We spent the first minutes in our air-conditioned world hoping to move. Then the emergency vehicles started nosing their way through the traffic and the boys had to get out to count them.

Faced with the prospect of a long wait, we went to stand in the shade of an overpass.

There, despite the heat and the long delay, we saw the spirit of America alive and well on the 5th of July.

As we stood there, our collection of individual travelers became a group. One woman loaned her cell phone. Two teen-agers scrambled down the bank and handed out sodas. My boys shared their grapes.

A truck driver and a man in a button-down shirt talked about big rigs. We all laughed as a father and daughter rode their scooters on the interstate.

I was really surprised by this.

I'm used to this sort of camaraderie on military posts, where we all share in a common service to our nation. We welcome new families moving in. We share information in line at the commissary and the PX.

I don't expect to see much of the same attitude outside of the gate, but then, maybe I'm not looking for it.

We drove on.

As the boys began to stir in the early hours of July 6, we passed signs for Harper's Ferry and Antietam. The last stretch sent us through Gettysburg, a meaningful place in the history of our nation, with its monuments and cannons flanking the road.

We were in the homestretch and I had John Mellencamp playing in my head. "Now, ain't that America, home of the free" and what a great place for us to be.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Soldier takes exception to article

This is concerning an article in volume 60, number 26. The title of this article is Fort Benning Soldiers Train with Kuwait Forces. This article concerns me because it is further evidence of the maltreatment of Kelley Hill soldiers by Fort Benning. There are two points which I wish to bring to your attention.

The title of the article references Fort Benning soldiers; however, the body of the article discuss the 1st Battalion, 41st Armored Regiment. 1st Bn., 41st Armored Regiment is not stationed on Fort Benning, it is not part of the 3rd Brigade Combat Team, the 3rd Infantry Division or even the 18th Airborne Corps. 1st Bn., 41st Armored Regiment is part of the 3rd Armored Division out of Fort Riley, Kansas.

There are soldiers in Kuwait from Fort Benning from the 3rd Brigade. I just returned from this deployment early. The bulk of these soldiers make up Task Force 2-69. These soldiers were not mentioned.

The second point of contention is the mention of the M-1 A2 Abrams tank which the soldiers are "training" on.

Neither TF 1-41 or TF 2-69 use this vehicle. Though the Kuwaiti forces use the M-1 A2, we only have two units in this Army that use the M-1 A2, the 7th Cavalry and 4th Infantry Division. The task forces present in Kuwait are using the M-1 A1 Abrams tank. This discrepancy is made even more glaringly obvious by the picture of the M-1 A1 accompanying the article.

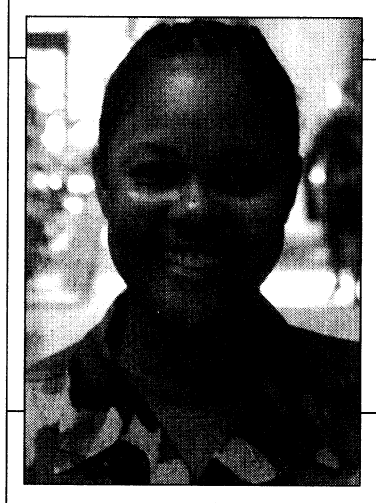
The research done for this article was substandard and a disservice to the troops mentioned in the title of the article.

I have been assigned to Kelley Hill as a tanker for almost four years. In these four years, my fellow 3rd Brigade soldiers and I have been continually treated as unwanted step-children by Main Post (Follow Me) personnel and civilians.

We have not been welcome anywhere we go on this post outside of Kelley Hill simply because of the patch we wear on our left shoulder.

This is pretty shoddy treatment of the largest most deployed combat force present on this post. In my four years with this unit 3rd Brigade has deployed a KFOR rotation to Kosovo, a Brightstar rotation to Egypt and two Intrinsic Action rotations to Kuwait in addition to Operation Desert Spring currently deployed. This is an impressive feat for any unit and deserving of a better degree of treatment by fellow Fort Benning soldiers.

Your recent article only adds salt to the wounds. Due to a lack of concern for correct fact reporting it would be preferable if you just left us completely out of your publication and its circulation.



Christopher Johnson
Fort Benning

Editor's note: Thank you for bringing our errors to our attention. In our haste to provide coverage for Task Force 2-69, we failed to do our homework and check the article for accuracy and relevance — committing the number one sin of assuming. We assumed that since someone in Kuwait was submitting an article to The Bayonet, then the article must be about soldiers from 3rd Brigade.

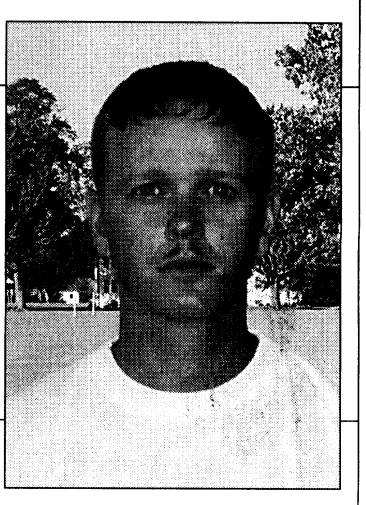
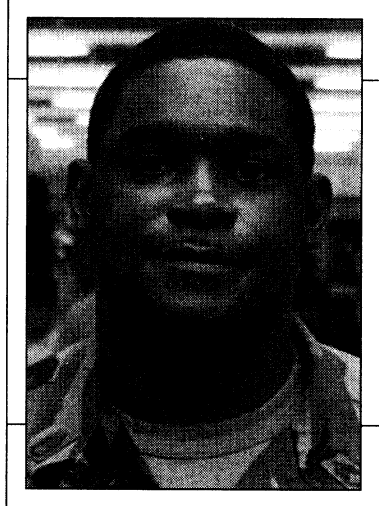
You are absolutely correct — the 3rd Brigade is one of the most deployed units in the Army and one of the best. Because of that and because it's a Fort Benning unit, we are always looking for ways to publicize the many achievements of the Sledgehammer Brigade, just as we seek to publicize the great work of all our Fort Benning units.

VARIOUS VOICES

Do you attend town hall meetings, and how do they impact the community?



Sgt. 1st Class Duwanna Ellis, 203rd Forward Support Battalion — "I don't go. When I get off work I just want to relax. Although, I think it has a great impact on the community when problems are actually resolved."



1st Sgt. Brian Allen, 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment — "No, I've never attended a meeting. However, I've watched them on Channel 4 and there are good questions asked. The meetings provide a direct link to those who can solve problems."

Andrea Wiggins, family member — "No, I don't go to them. If I wanted to address a problem, I would attend one. There is strength in numbers, and those who attend them get the support they need to resolve community issues."

Staff Sgt. Jesse Schmidt, 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry, Regiment — "No. The meetings only make an impact depending on the topics covered and enforcement of any new policies."

Staff Sgt. Keith Stalnaker, 317th Engineer Battalion — "I think they have an impact on the community, but in the two years I've been here, I've never known of a town hall meeting I could attend."

Teresa Broadus, family member — "Personally, they haven't helped me out at all. I don't attend them, nor do I have the slightest idea how to find out when and where they are."

locks were damaged with pliers so that they could not be used to open the locks.

Johnson was charged with criminal trespassing, destruction of government property and impeding the flow of traffic.

Military police also charged Frank Salerno for trespassing. He was videotaping Johnson's actions when he crossed onto the military reservation.

Federal law prohibits political protests on military reservations.

Approximately 20 protesters watched Johnson lock herself to the gate and waited for the Directorate of Public Safety personnel to remove her.

Fort Benning's chief of staff, Col. Charles Cornwell said, "I was proud of the very professional response of all Fort Benning soldiers and civilians as they dealt with the incident.

"We will continue our responsible actions to protect federal property while ensuring the safety of those using it."

with, but we want the overall best for the country. We do understand that that may mean putting the issue of concurrent receipt on the back burner temporarily for the good of the nation."

Jim Rhodes, a retired disabled veteran from Columbus, attended Saturday's meeting.

He agreed that disabled soldiers have been getting a raw deal for years, but took heart at Collins' interest in veterans' affairs.

"I'd love to see the veterans get what they deserve. It's not fair," Rhodes said.

"But I'm impressed that Congress is trying to do something about it. It was brought home to me that this is a funding issue, and I understand that. We're working in the right direction."

White: Visits with media

Training, Western Hemisphere Institute for Security Cooperation and Dismounted Battlespace Battle Lab.

"It's truly one Army. You can see that here," he said. "Fort Benning is magnificent. There's an enormous level of work going on here."

White said he's convinced today's soldiers are prepared for the Army's increased optempo with the war on terrorism and the continued peace-keeping missions abroad.

"Let me just say flat out, I've been with the Army nearly 40 years, and this is the best Army I've ever been associated with. Vietnam, the Cold War Army ... this beats all those Armies hands down. We are more 'one Army' than ever before.

"We've focused on terrorism training for a long time, and it will continue to be a core mission of the Army," he said.

White met with 14 rangers during a private lunch at the Warrior Inn Dining Facility, greeting each with a handshake and "How're you doing? Tell me about yourself."

He questioned the soldiers about their background and career history, occasionally interjecting information about his own career, which included two tours in Vietnam.

"All these CIBs look wonderful," he said of the rangers' newly acquired badges, awarded for combat service during Operation Enduring Freedom.

The secretary also asked the soldiers their concerns and frustrations with Army life.

"He asked what we'd change about (the Army) if we could," said Spc. Ryan Perez. "We talked about money — that was a big one — incentives and bonuses and stuff. And we talked about family life, how it could be made better. He talked about how it was when he was in, and we told him how it is for us. He talked about his experience in Vietnam, and we told him about Afghanistan."

Pfc. Thomas Rosa said White was "very receptive" to their concerns.

"It was a good chance to go straight to the top, to give our opinions to someone who has the power to do something about it. He actually cared about what we had to say."

Reduction: Hits home

performed by federal employees.

The RIF affects more than just the aforementioned agencies. All individuals assigned to perform the job series affected by the RIF are at risk of losing their jobs because of other factors including seniority and Veterans' Preference points, Col. Joe Torres, garrison commander, said.

To help reduce the number of civilians who are losing their jobs because of the results of the A-76 study, the government is offering a VERA/VSIP initiative to encourage long-time employees to retire early.

VERA allows retirement for those age 50 or older with at least 20 years of service, or at any age with at least 25 years of service.

Employees covered by Civil Service Retirement System are subject to a reduction in the annuity of two percent for each year under 55 at separation.

The Voluntary Separation Incentive Program with the buyout law, resignation, early retirement and optional retirement incentives may be offered to encourage eligible employees to separate voluntarily.

The goal is to minimize the need for layoffs as federal agencies continue to downsize and restructure.

The buyout is a lump sum incentive that is equivalent to an employee's severance pay entitlement up to a maximum of $25,000. The payment is fully taxable for purposes of federal withholdings, Medicare, applicable state and local taxes,and Social Security for those covered by that system.

The payment is not counted as basic pay for purposes of calculating benefits such as retirement annuities.

Those who do not take or don't qualify for the voluntary separation incentive program or voluntary early retirement program will have the first right of refusal 45 days before the contractor takes over.

"This plan has been five years in the making, and we are ready to execute it," said an A-76 official.

A briefing will be given after RIF letters go out no later than Oct. 18, explaining rights and entitlements to affected personnel.

"These are difficult times," Varner said. "We have an outstanding work force. They've consistently met the requirements and now it's sad to see it's to the point of a RIF."

Editor's note: Next week's paper will publish an article on the affected positions and job series.

Friends, family mourn retired CSM's death

Association founder killed in crash

"Like a bulldog, he grabbed on to things and would not let go."

Retired 1st Sgt. James Clark
Friend of McCoy

"Anyone can have a famous name, but a good name is born out of honesty, integrity, and character," said Bishop L.D. Skinner, pastor of Bread of Life Christian Church, as he quoted from Proverbs 22, Verse 1. "Such is the life of Command Sergeant Major Robert A. McCoy Sr."

Skinner presided over McCoy's funeral services July 12, three days after the retired airborne sergeant major and founder of the Sergeant Majors Association was killed in a car accident in Newnan.

Soldiers from McCoy's former unit, 1st Battalion, 507th Infantry Regiment, carried his casket covered with the American flag, as friends, family and former soldiers crowded the Infantry Center Chapel to pay their respects to a man they say changed their lives.

"He was a strong pillar of this community," said retired Sgt. Maj. Marvin Alston Jr., president of the Sergeants Major Association. "He had time to listen to you and give you the push you needed. You rarely saw him get upset. He encouraged the people around him to always do and say what's right."

McCoy embarked on a career in the armed forces that spanned some 30 years. He saw action during Vietnam and for his valor and conduct was awarded numerous medals and citations including the Bronze Star Medal, Meritorious Service Medal, Army Commendation Medal, Purple Heart Medal, Army Achievement Medal and a National Defense Service Medal. McCoy served as command sergeant major of 1st Battalion (Airborne), 507 Infantry Regiment, at Fort Benning and retired in 1995.

McCoy

"He was full of life and told a lot of jokes," said retired 1st Sgt. James Clark. "His nickname was Bulldog. Like a bulldog, he grabbed on to things and would not let go. His missions and his goals were always carried out until the end."

The stories of people McCoy influenced were shared with the entire church, as retired soldiers, friends and family members took turns speaking.

"Robert pushed me to stay in the Army, even after we had both been wounded in Vietnam," said retired Command Sgt. Maj. Eddie Roberts. "We were both told we were medically discharged and we had to go home. Robert wanted to continue fighting for our country. Because of his influence, both of us stayed. I owe a lot of my Army career to him."

Although McCoy's military career ended in 1995, he continued to stay involved with military affairs. In addition to founding the Sergeants Major Association, he was also a member of Association of the United States Army and the National Infantry Association. McCoy was also a supporter of the environment. He began his own company, McCoy Environmental, which is responsible for staffing environmental projects, such as oil spills and clean ups.

"This man made a difference," Skinner said. "He touched the lives of everyone he came into contact with."

Many of the people McCoy came into contact with were members of his own church, Bread of Life Christian Church in Columbus. McCoy was a strong advocate for children and donated frequently to the church's youth ministry, Skinner said.

"He loved the young people at the church," Skinner told mourners. "He always wanted to know what they needed."

During the service, many said they needed above all else, reassurance that their friend and hero is in a better place.

"He was a man among men, a soldier among soldiers," Clark said. "He loved his airborne soldiers, and he loved the Lord. His spirit will live on forever."

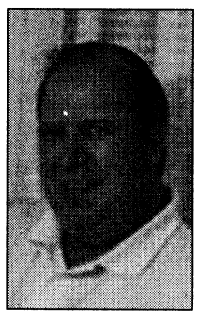
Longtime DOT worker dies in car accident

DOT training chief had great career

"Lowery was a man we all depended on. His death will affect the entire training force."

John Ohrt
Course manager for Basic Combat Training Brigade

Angela Sachitano
Special to the Bayonet©



Every soldier who has trained on Fort Benning in the past decade has been influenced in some shape or form by the initial entry training team chief Robert Lowery.

Lowery was the cornerstone for all matters dealing with Training and Doctrine Command and basic training and was instrumental in developing some of the Army's newest technological training advances.

"Lowery was a man we all depended on," said John Ohrt, course manager for Basic Combat Training. "His death will affect the entire training force."

Lowery died July 11 in a car accident on Highway 165 just outside of Fort Benning near Lawson Army Airfield. Friends say he was on his way home from work when his car apparently veered across the center lane and into an oncoming vehicle.

"Bob was an outstanding worker and he will be missed by this department and all of us who knew him," said Bob Jordan, deputy director of Operations and Training. "We are all still in shock over his death."

Lowery

Lowery, a retired master sergeant and tank commander in Vietnam, was instrumental in developing the file transfer protocol (FTP) Web site for soldiers. Since it's creation, the site has allowed commanders from different installations to download training materials and other essentials to TRADOC no matter where they are located.

"Bob really led the way for getting all of the Army's installations together to standardize training," Ohrt said. "He was a stickler for regulations. He knew the regulations inside and out and stuck by them."

Among other achievements, Lowery is also credited for the recent development of the new weapons system of infantry training courses.

"Bob took the initiative at making sure the new weapons system was incorporated into the soldiers' training routines the right way," Ohrt said. "He was more of a behind-the-scenes guy. Even though he led us in many ways, he wanted to make sure everyone got the credit."

Lowery, a GS-11 at his death, was one of the longest working civil service employees at the DOT, and those who worked with him said it's going to be hard to find someone with as much experience and dedication to the Army.

"He affected everyone he knew on all levels," said Steve Taylor, chief of Course Management Training Development. "From the generals down to the sergeants, everyone knew they could come to him and get the training issues resolved."

Lowery is survived by his wife and two sons. A full military honors funeral was held Tuesday at the Fort Mitchell Cemetery.

Married doctors make post brighter

Husband, wife set to retire, move to Virginia

One can judge the impact of Army careers by their legacy. If the thousands of brighter and more confident smiles are any indication, a Fort Benning husband and wife can walk away proudly.

Fort Benning will soon lose Dr. (Col.) Melvin S. Polk, orthodontist, and his wife, Dr. (Col.) Adolfina M. Polk, pediatric dentist, to retirement.

"I'm really going to miss them," said Brenda Dacus, who has known the Polks since they arrived four years ago and works as Melvin's assistant. "I told someone once, 'If I could tie (Melvin) up and put him in a closet, I would do it to keep him here.'"

Everyone who works or is a patient at Love Dental Clinic would say Fort Benning is a brighter place because of their time here, she said.

"(Melvin) is serious and concerned about his patients' welfare, but he's also fun to work with," Dacus said. "He has a good attitude at work and makes coming to work fun."

Many people enter a position and make changes to fit their desires, but Melvin had the "If it ain't broke, don't fix it" mentality.

"He's open to suggestions," Dacus said. "It doesn't have to be his way all the time."

Melvin is terrific with his patients, too, she said.

For instance, one of Melvin's patients was stationed here at Fort Benning five months ago. She has braces and trusts him so much she has paid for trips from Utah to continue seeing him.

"He's an outstanding man who is committed to and super friendly with his patients," said John Gunn, a patient and Department of Defense civilian at Robins, A.F.B., Ga. "He goes above and beyond what is normally required by a doctor.

"Fort Benning is going to be at a big loss when he leaves. It's going to be hard to find someone to replace a man of his caliber."

The same could be said about Adolfina, Dacus said.

"She's short and petite. She looks like a kid, not a colonel about to retire," Dacus said. "But just because she's little doesn't mean she'll back down from making sure the job is done right."

Adolfina demonstrated her outstanding leadership qualities as the OIC of Love Dental Clinic from November 2000 to May 2002.

"She'll joke around, but she's serious about her patients," Dacus said. "She's real gentle with the kids, and she's good at calming their fears."

Melvin and Adolfina are a great couple whom will be missed by everyone who knew them, she said.

"They will be successful wherever they go. They'll like them as much as we do," Dacus said.

The doctors will retire in September and move to Reston, Va., to work with a group practice.

Melvin has mixed emotions about retiring.

"I look forward to the challenge (of my next position), but when you practice in the military for 21 years, it's all you know. We'll miss our military family," he said.

The couple, who celebrated their 25th wedding anniversary July 8, has been through a lot together. After dental school, Melvin joined the Army in 1981 and Adolfina began a three-year commitment to the National Health Service (Public Health Service). Upon completion, she joined the Army in 1984. They've always been stationed together and have traveled the world, including duty assignments in Asia and Europe.

"The military has met expectations beyond my wildest dreams," Melvin said. "It's given us stability in our lifestyle and the resources to educate our children.

"(Daughters, Melba, 21, Manon, 19, and Megan, 18) are well-rounded people," he said. "They've experienced what a lot of people only talk about with professors in classrooms."

Melvin has had many highlights during his career, he said. While serving as the division general surgeon at Fort Campbell, Ky., he lived 40 miles away from Nashville, Tenn., which the Polks call home.

He also enjoyed his orthodontic residency training while at Fort Knox, Ky.

"In the military, you begin your career as a general practitioner," Melvin said. "I always wanted to become an orthodontist, and I'm grateful the military gave me the opportunity to obtain specialty training.

"With ortho, you really get to know your patients and, in some cases, become friends. They're like part of the family. I find that rewarding."

No place has that happened more than here, he said.

"I have a special place in my heart for Fort Benning because I've spent a third of my career here," Melvin said.

The post Dental Activity staff has helped make his job easier with unparalleled support, especially from those with whom he works the closest, he said.

"All the positive accolades I have received would not have been possible without my assistants (Dacus and Strickland)," Melvin said.

Like Melvin, Adolfina has been fortunate to have excellent coworkers throughout the years, she said.

"We've had a good time and have enjoyed the camaraderie with the soldiers and civilians," Adolfina said. "The people here at Love (Dental Clinic) are a class act."

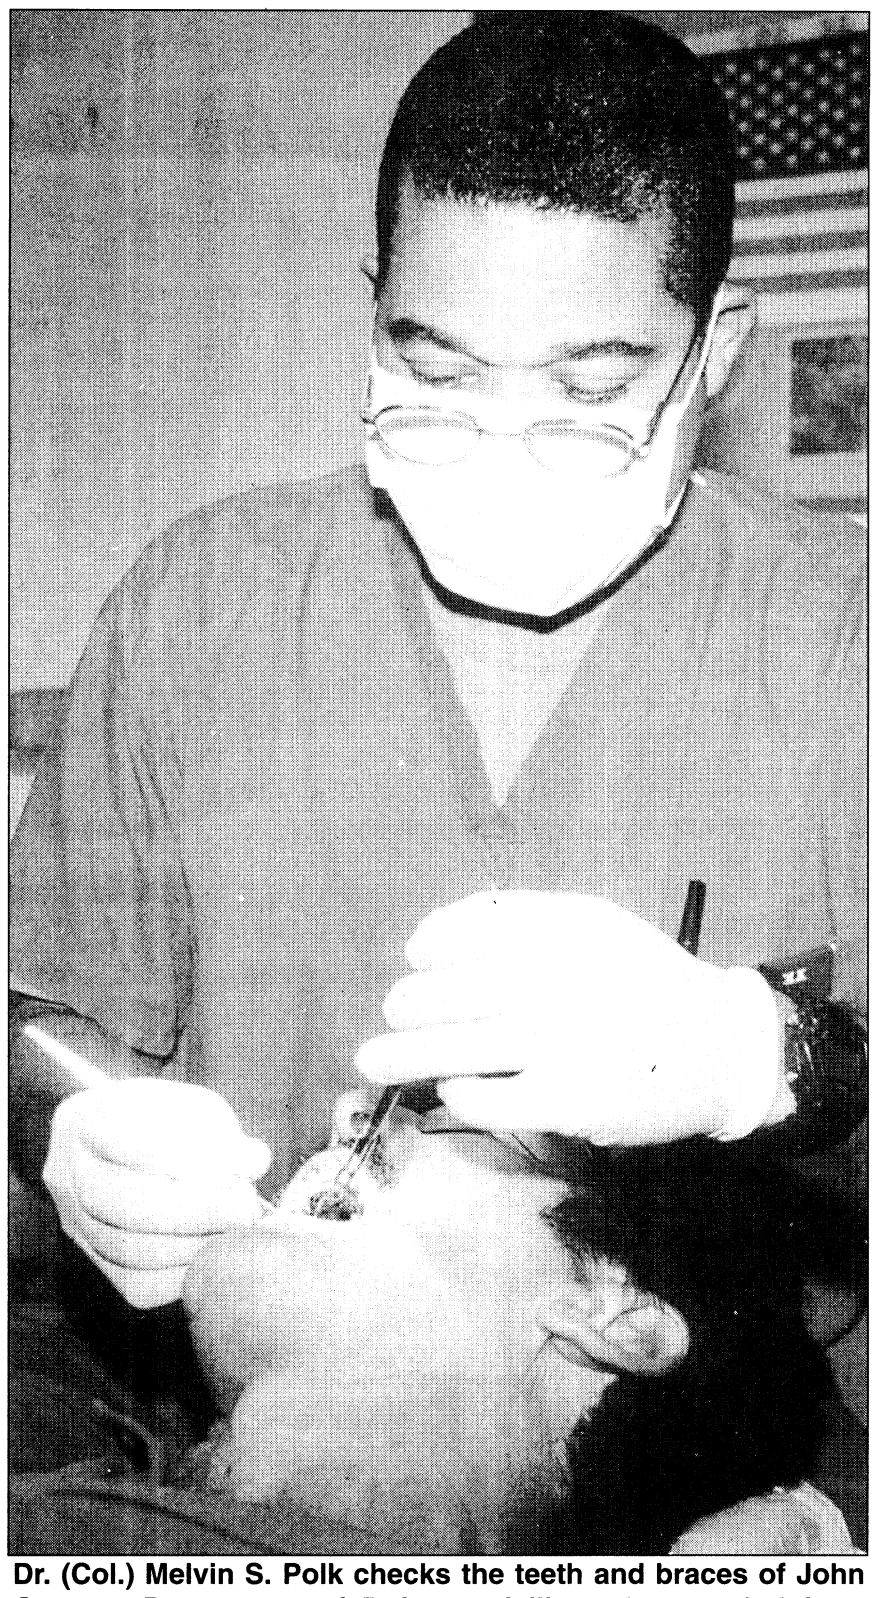
The clinic has been unique, she said.

"I'll miss working with the different specialty areas," Adolfina said. "The clinic is a conglomerate of all dental specialty areas as well as general dentistry. If you have a question about something outside your area of expertise, all you have to do is ask, and they'll help you right away. You don't have to refer patients downtown."

She is thankful that Melvin encouraged her to join the Army after her commitment with the National Health Service because of the diverse and numerous skills the service provided them, she said.

"I was just going to stay in the Army for three years to gain dentistry experience and knowledge," Adolfina said. "However, with every new course and assignment, our careers just snowballed and kept rolling and rolling. One day I turned around, and I'd been in for 15 years, and I said, 'This hasn't been all that bad.'"

The doctors' job satisfaction and children have kept the couple motivated through the years.



"When you enjoy what you do, it's easy to get up in the morning," Adolfina said.

"The children have kept us busy, too. We've been able to work as a team from day one — like an Army of One — so we were able to accomplish things for the military and our family through proper planning and a solid plan to balance the two."

Melvin agreed.

"The Army way of life has been good to us," Melvin said. "In return, we've tried to make things a little better."

Judging by the smiling clean and straight teeth around here, they've done just that.

Dr. (Col.) Melvin S. Polk checks the teeth and braces of John Gunn, a Department of Defense civilian who traveled from Robins A.F.B., Ga., for the doctor visit.

DoD needs $14 billion for war

Military spends $2 billion monthly for war on terrorism

Gerry J. Gilmore
American Forces Press Services

WASHINGTON — America's war on global terrorism will go broke if $14 billion in fiscal 2002 budget supplemental money earmarked for DoD isn't approved by Congress soon, the department's senior money manager said July 12.

DoD Comptroller Dov S. Zakheim told Pentagon reporters that the U.S. military is "burning through" an average of $2 billion a month in prosecution of the war on terrorism at home and overseas.

"We're in a war — we're operating here, we're operating overseas," Zakheim said. "Al Qaeda and the Taliban folks haven't just given up and walked away."

Indeed, in a letter to Congress dated July 3, Defense Secretary Donald H. Rumsfeld acknowledged that the supplemental funds "are needed to sustain our readiness and global operations against terrorism."

If congressional passage of DoD's supplemental is delayed significantly beyond July 15, Rumsfeld wrote, the impact "would likely include inability to meet the military payroll, canceled training, deferred depot maintenance for ships and aircraft, postponed facilities maintenance and repair, and reduced spare parts and supplies purchases that would hurt future readiness."

DoD asked Congress in late March for the additional $14 billion to fund the war, Zakheim said. The initial $17 billion supplemental request has long been spent, he said.

The department needs the new supplemental before mid-August, Zakheim said.

Otherwise, the lack of additional funds will hamper war operations, including transport, maintenance, training, and military and civilian payroll.

If DoD doesn't get the additional funds soon, Zakheim said that Air Force flying hours "will die by the middle of August" and engine maintenance for F-18 planes "would go south."

Navy ships would remain in port. The Army, he said, would have to cancel training at Fort Irwin, Calif. Force protection construction projects, such as barriers at military bases, would have to be curtailed.

Without the supplemental, the department won't be able to pay its military members on Aug. 30, Zakheim said. Up to 35,000 civilians would have to be furloughed.

All of these possible scenarios would hurt military readiness, morale and, possibly, retention, Zakheim said.

The proposed DoD supplemental contains:

• $7.2 billion for conducting military operations.

• $4.1 billion to pay for some 80,000 Guard and Reserve troops called up to active duty for the war.

• $200 million for service members in critical wartime jobs like linguists and other hard-to-maintain specialties.

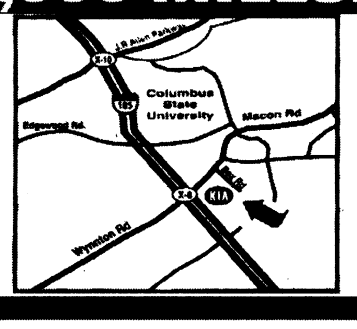
• $500 million to obtain additional precision munitions, such as Joint Direct Attack Munitions.

• $1.6 billion to fund command, control, communications, and intelligence support and classified programs.

• $400 million for coalition support to Afghanistan, Pakistan and other partners in the war on terrorism.

DoD is already $3 billion into its fourth-quarter funding to pay for the war, Zakheim said. Mindful of looming deficits, Congress is now in conference to discuss and negotiate national budgetary matters.

Zakheim said there is a lot of goodwill in Congress as part of ongoing negotiations for DoD's budget supplemental. However, time is running out. The annual monthlong congressional summer recess coming in August normally lasts through Labor Day.



"Sometimes things take time to get sorted out. We're just saying, ... please do so by the beginning of August," he said.

Zakheim said that DoD can't just stop all military operations if Congress doesn't provide the additional money before its recess.

"But," he said, "you reach a point where if you don't have the money, you don't have the money."

Command change promises 'steady' transition

Signature block changes for 'Rock Steady'

The dictionary states that steadiness lacks change, and a rock is a firm and solid foundation.

Tuesday's change of command ceremony for the the 1st Battalion, 19th Infantry Regiment, gave new meaning to the battalion's motto — Rock Steady.

Lt. Col. Michael Hanley succeeded Lt. Col. Bradley Nelson in a ceremony on Kanell Field, on that marked change for the Rock Steady battalion. But the new commander promised to continue the battalion's tradition of "steady training" the world's best infantrymen.

"All regulations and procedures will remain in effect," said Nelson, quickly dispelling any misconceptions about changing the foundation of the battalion.

The new commander expressed his gratitude to those in attendance and said he was excited to be back at Fort Benning, particularly to join the Infantry Training Brigade's Rock Steady battalion.

Prior to commanding 1st Bn., 19th Inf. Regt., Nelson was a tactics instructor at Fort Leavenworth, Kan.

He has a bachelor's degree in criminal justice and two master's degrees, one in public administration and the second is in theater operations.

Nelson has held personnel and training positions in Germany and Fort Bragg, N.C. He has a Ranger Tab, Air Assault Badge, Expert Infantryman's Badge and Combat Infantryman's Badge.

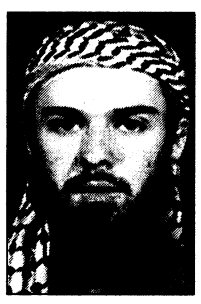
The new commanders awards and decorations include a Bronze Star Medal, Meritorious Service Medal, Army Commendation Medals and Humanitarian Service Medal.

Nelson lives on post with his wife, Andrea, and two children, Stephanie, 14, and Phillip, 10.

As for Hanley, he knows what he's accomplished during his time with the Rock Steady battalion.

"My life's ambition is to serve and train the best soldiers in the Army — infantrymen," Hanley said.

"And I did just that, I accomplished my mission."



Hanley will move to his new job at the Combined Arms and Tactics Directorate in Infantry Hall.

American traitor plea bargains, gets two decades

Taliban soldier agrees to cooperate

Gerry J. Gilmore
American Forces Press Service

WASHINGTON — The American people will eventually see John Walker Lindh's deal with federal prosecutors as an appropriate outcome, Defense Secretary Donald H. Rumsfeld said here Monday.

Lindh

Rumsfeld discussed the Lindh case with CNBC television reporter Brian Williams.

As part of his plea bargain with federal prosecutors signed early that day, Lindh, 21, agreed to cooperate with U.S. military officials to combat al Qaeda terrorists in exchange for a prison sentence of up to 20 years.

"Well, I am delighted that he is going to be off the streets for a good, long time," Rumsfeld said of Lindh's deal.

"Two decades is not nothing."

The "American Taliban" pleaded guilty to two of 10 charges against him: aiding the Taliban and possessing explosives in the commission of that crime.

Had he been convicted of all 10 charges, Lindh could have been sentenced to life in prison.

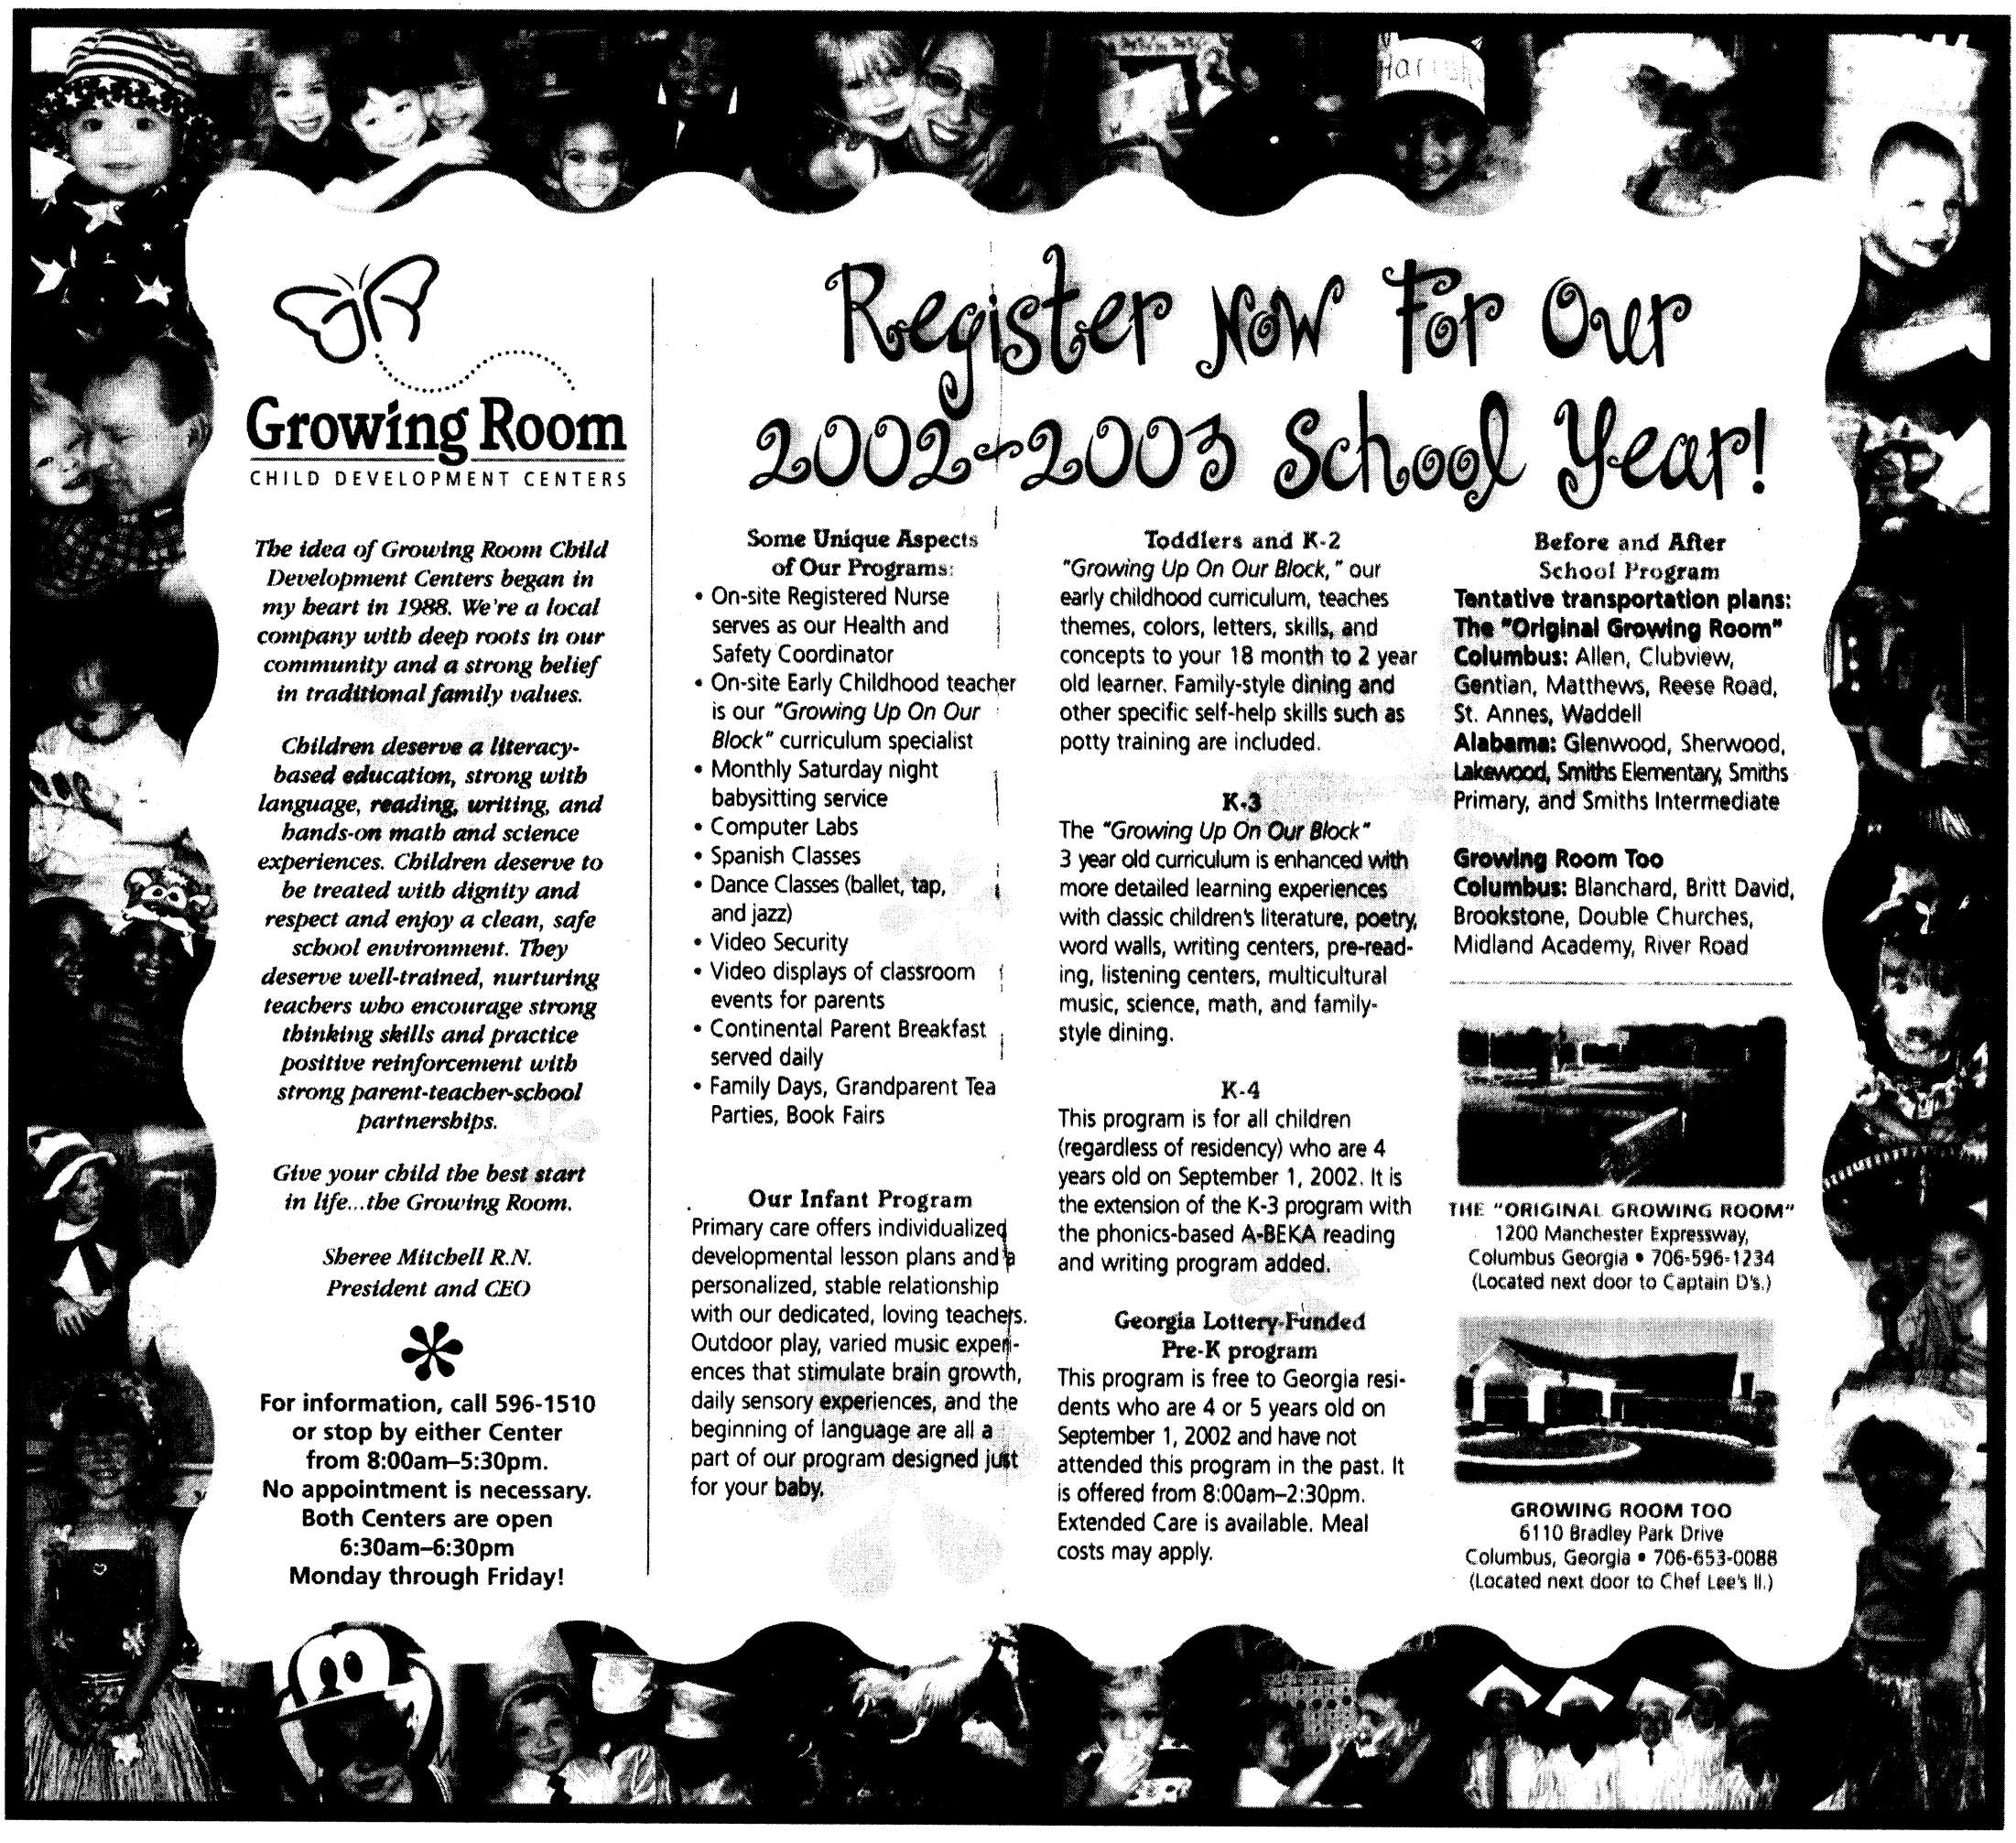
Rumsfeld said Lindh also withdrew charges that he was mistreated while in U.S. military custody in Afghanistan.

Northern Alliance forces captured Lindh Nov. 25, 2001, in Mazar-e Sharif, Afghanistan, following a Taliban-al Qaeda prison riot.

Justice Department officials said Lindh's plea bargain also calls for him to cooperate "fully, truthfully and completely" with the United States, and to testify at grand juries, trials or other proceedings, including military tribunals.

He agreed to participate in debriefings conducted by law enforcement and intelligence officers and will be available for pre-trial meetings with U.S. government attorneys.

He also agreed to take lie detector tests.



Commenting on the plea bargain, Rumsfeld said Lindh "was a relatively low-level person in the al Qaeda, or Taliban, depending on what one wishes to say."

When captured by Northern Alliance troops, Lindh was armed and had participated in a battle that took place in a prison in Mazar-e Sharif, Rumsfeld said.

The Defense Department, was consulted in the Lindh proceedings, but had no part in decisions regarding the plea bargain, he added.

When Lindh's plea agreement is fully and publicly aired, Rumsfeld said, most Americans will agree as to its fairness.

"People will look at the elements of it and nod and say, 'Well, that's appropriate. That's about right,'" he said.

Violence disrupts aid effort in Afghanistan

Afghans need more than forces provide

Linda D. Kozaryn
American Forces Press Service

WASHINGTON — Violence in northern Afghanistan is beginning to cause serious problems, Deputy Defense Secretary Paul D. Wolfowitz said during a Monday visit to Mazar-e Sharif.

Violence in the region, he said, is disrupting the secure conditions needed to deliver the kind of aid and assistance the coalition has been providing and wants to continue.

Speaking at the Jordanian Hospital, Wolfowitz said the facility has treated more than 80,000 Afghans. Others are being cared for at a Spanish field hospital in Bagram, and the U.S. military is doing many humanitarian projects around the country.

"But the need is just enormous, and this is one demonstration of it," he said.

The deputy stopped at the hospital after meeting with Northern Alliance Gen. Dostem, local leader Ustad Muhakkik and other officials. At a news briefing, he recounted how he had expressed U.S. appreciation to the Afghan leaders for the role they played in their country's liberation.

"It is difficult to remember just how dangerous and precarious things were here only eight months ago," he said. "The victory here in Mazar-e Sharif, I believe, was the beginning of the liberation of the whole country."

He said he advised the Afghan leaders that "in some ways, the challenges of war are easier than the challenges of peace, because in war you know who the enemy is and peace is more vague."

The United States is committed to helping in the reconstruction of Afghanistan, Wolfowitz said.

"We've learned a lesson over the last 10 years that we can't afford to just leave Afghanistan to its own devices," he said.

The current goal is to stabilize the country, restore security and promote economic growth and development, he said, "and to do it in a way that doesn't go back to a tyrannical mode of government."

That will require balancing power between the central government and local leaders, Wolfowitz said.

Right now, he said, the central government is still weak. He said an earlier meeting with President Hamid Karzai included talks on training and equipping the Afghan National Army.

Controlling the violence, thereby enabling the international community to continue providing assistance, is key to the country's overall security picture.

"It's very clear to me just from the people we talk to here in Mazar-e Sharif that even these tough generals care a great deal about what happens to their people," Wolfowitz said.

"If they think that if they behave well and do the right things, their people would get assistance, then they will be much more likely to behave well," he said. "If that assistance isn't coming, then we lose one of the greatest sources of influence that we have."

Wolfowitz said that it's impossible to generalize about security in such a huge country.

"The problems are very different in different places," he said.

"There seems to be a little bit of a tendency when there is a problem that occurs in one place, everybody says security in Afghanistan is collapsing," Wolfowitz said. "I think in different places, different solutions are appropriate. We are not approaching this with a doctrine or with a blue print. We are doing it very pragmatically, and when we see a problem we look for the best way to try to solve it."

> "We've learned a lesson over the last 10 years that we can't afford to just leave Afghanistan to its own devices."

During his visit to Afghanistan, Wolfowitz toured the training site for the Afghan army and met with officials at the International Security Assistance Force headquarters in Kabul.

"It is wonderful to have a partner like Turkey," he said. "What Turkey has done with us has been indispensable. Turkey's role on the leadership of the International Security Assistance Force is something that we appreciate very much. It's been done with the kind of professionalism that we come to expect of the Turkish armed forces, and we appreciate it a lot."

Wolfowitz traveled to Afghanistan after a day in Istanbul, Turkey, where he spoke to the Turkish Economic and Social Studies Foundation. In his address, he pointed out the role Turkey can play in regards to Iraq.

Under Saddam Hussein, he said, Iraq slaughters its own people and threatens stability in the region. Using Turkey as a model, a democratic, free-market Iraq "could rapidly build a modern and wealthy society that would be a source of prosperity, rather than insecurity, for its neighbors," he said.

Turkey can also serve as a model for Afghanistan, Wolfowitz said.

TRADOC to select first NCO, soldier of year Aug. 7

Command's winners will face 14 other soldiers

James Caldwell
TRADOC News Service

FORT MONROE, Va. — For the first time ever in Training and Doctrine Command, NCOs and soldiers will compete for TRADOC NCO and Soldier of the Year Aug. 7 at Fort Monroe.

Then from Sept. 23-27, they will compete against NCOs and soldiers from the other 14 major commands, starting with performance demonstrations at Fort A.P. Hill, Va.

"We are excited about this chance to honor our great NCOs and soldiers in Training and Doctrine Command," said Command Sgt. Maj. Anthony Williams, TRADOC command sergeant major.

"Sergeant Major of the Army (Jack) Tilley has given us the opportunity to recognize our great soldiers by creating the first awards program to honor them at Army level."

Until this year NCO and soldier awards programs were primarily at the installations, Williams said. The reason there was no major command program is because no similar program existed at Army.

"Sergeant Major of the Army Tilley must be congratulated on his initiative," Williams said. "He is as pumped up about the program as are the commanders and command sergeants major around the Army."

Currently at TRADOC major subordinate commands, boards are being held to select their top NCOs and soldiers to come to the headquarters.

"Every NCO from corporal to sergeant first class, and every soldier from private through specialist is eligible to compete for NCO and Soldier of the Year," said Sgt. Maj. Rodney Berry, sergeant major for TRADOC's deputy chief of staff for base operations support. Berry is handling all of the details required for arranging the competition at Fort Monroe, while establishing annual procedures to be followed from installations to TRADOC for succeeding years.

"There will be a runner-up for both the NCO and soldier of the year. One reason we have to have a runner-up is if the soldier or NCO is unavailable, the runner-up can step in and represent TRADOC."

There will be six NCOs and six soldiers in this year's program, Berry said.

Rumsfeld says: 'Old ways out, new in'

Adaptability will be critical during war

Linda D. Kozaryn
American Forces Press Services

WASHINGTON — What dangers loom in the days ahead? How might future adversaries attack the United States?

Dealing with future threats will take more than just new, high-tech weapons, said the top man at the Pentagon. It will take new ways of thinking and fighting.

"The ability to adapt will be critical in a world defined by surprise and uncertainty," Defense Secretary Donald H. Rumsfeld wrote in a bylined article in the May-June issue of Foreign Affairs magazine. "As we painfully learned on September 11, the challenges of the new century are not nearly as predictable as were those of the last."

As future enemies acquire weapons of increasing power and range, the defense secretary warned, attacks could grow far more deadly than those of Sept. 11. He said America's new challenge is to defend itself against the unknown, the uncertain, the unseen and the unexpected. To accomplish what may seem an impossible task, he said, requires putting aside comfortable ways of thinking and planning, and taking risks and trying new things.

Using the war in Afghanistan as an example, Rumsfeld said this first war of the 21st century showed that even the horse cavalry could be used in previously unimaginable ways. U.S. and coalition forces used today's laser-guided weapons, 40-year-old B-52 bombers and men with guns on horses in unprecedented ways to defeat a dangerous, determined adversary, he said.

"What won the battle for Mazar-e Sharif and set in motion the Taliban's fall from power," Rumsfeld said, "was a combination of the U.S. special forces; the most advanced, precision-guided munitions in the U.S. arsenal, delivered by U.S. Navy, Air Force and Marine Corps crews; and the courage of valiant, one-legged Afghanistan fighters on horseback."

The secretary does not suggest, however, that the Afghanistan combination is a model for the future.

"The lesson from the Afghanistan experience is not that the U.S. Army should be stockpiling saddles," he said. "Rather, it is that preparing for the future will require new ways of thinking and the development of forces and capabilities that can adapt quickly to new challenges and unexpected circumstances."

Even before al Qaeda terrorists employed American jetliners as weapons, he said, U.S. defense officials were forming a new strategy for the new security environment. They had moved away from the two-major-theater war approach that called for, he wrote, "maintaining two massive occupation forces capable of marching on and occupying the capitals of two aggressors at the same time and changing their regimes."

Instead, he said, they decided to focus on "deterrence in four critical theaters, backed by the ability to swiftly defeat two aggressors at the same time, with the option for one counteroffensive to occupy an aggressor's capital and replace its regime." By no longer maintaining a second occupation force, he said, resources could be freed for the future and for other lesser, current contingencies.

Defense officials also moved away from the Cold War era threat-based strategy to adopt a capabilities-based approach. Rather than focus on who might threaten us or where, Rumsfeld said, defense leaders began to look at how the nation might be threatened and how to deter and defend against such threats.

Rumsfeld compared the change in strategy to a homeowner dealing with burglars.

"You cannot possibly know who wants to break into your home, or when, but you do know how they might try to get in," he said.

"You know they might try to pick your lock, so you need a good, solid deadbolt on your front door."

The same logic holds true for national defense, he said. Defense officials need to examine the nation's vulnerabilities rather than build armed forces to fight a certain enemy.

The nation must prepare to defend against attacks on U.S. space assets and information networks as well as attacks by cruise and ballistic missiles and nuclear, chemical and biological weapons. The nation must also build up its power-projection abilities, precision strike weapons and space, intelligence and undersea warfare capabilities.

Rumsfeld said defense officials are now focused on achieving six transformational goals. Over the next five years, he said funding is being increased in each:

• Protecting the U.S. homeland and bases overseas, 47 percent.

• Projecting and sustaining power in distant theaters, 21 percent.

• Denying enemies sanctuaries, 157 percent.

• Protecting information networks, 28 percent.

• Using information technology to link joint forces, 125 percent.

• Maintaining access to space and protecting space capabilities, 145 percent.

Meeting 21st century challenges will require rapidly deployable, fully integrated joint forces that can reach distant theaters quickly and work with air and sea forces, Rumsfeld said.

It will also require intelligence, long-range precision strike capabilities and sea-based platforms, he said.

A new triad of reduced offensive nuclear forces; advanced conventional capabilities; and new missile, space and cyber defenses, supported by a revitalized defense infrastructure, will form the basis of a new approach to deterrence, he wrote.

U.S. forces must also change the way they think, exercise and fight, Rumsfeld said. If you give a knight in King Arthur's court an M-16 rifle, it's not transformation if he uses the stock to knock in his opponent's head.

"Transformation occurs when he gets behind a tree and starts shooting," he said.

Rumsfeld summed up some of the lessons gleaned from the war in Afghanistan and other recent experiences that apply to the future.

• Future wars will require all elements of national power, including economic, diplomatic, financial, law enforcement, intelligence and overt and covert military operations.

• Joint forces must be able to communicate and operate seamlessly on the battlefield.

• Accepting help from any country, on a basis comfortable for its government, and allowing that country to characterize how it is helping, maximizes both countries' cooperation and effectiveness.

• Wars can benefit from coalitions, but should not be fought by committee.

• Defense of the nation requires prevention and, sometimes, pre-emption.

• Rule out nothing, including ground forces. Enemies must understand that the United States will use every means available to defeat them.

• Put U.S. Special Forces on the ground early to increase an air campaign's effectiveness.

• Be straight with the American people. Support must be rooted in trust, understanding and common purpose.

America's men and women in uniform are doing a brilliant job, Rumsfeld said.

"The best way we can show our appreciation is to make sure they have the resources, the capabilities and the innovative culture not only to win today's war, but to deter and, if necessary, defeat the aggressors we will surely face in the dangerous century ahead," he said.

Camera eliminates surprises

Members of Fort Benning's special reactions team stepped deeper into the 21st century during active-shooter training at the McKenna Military Operations in Urbanized Terrain site July 12. During a slow and deliberate entry into "hostile" environment, the team used a loaner surveillance camera, attached to a 17-foot retractable pole, to improve situational awareness.

"Before, we had to send an individual in the building," said Staff Sgt. Kyle Jenkins, team NCOIC. "With this, we can see someone who is hiding from us."

The leader of the entry team views optics from a 6.5-inch monitor mounted on the vest of the member holding the retractable pole and uses hand signals to tell the pole holder where to position the camera. The camera has an infrared lens to detect natural heat emitted from all objects viewed.

The camera, the SCS-1 SeCam, made by Sciax, allows an entry team to identify potential threats and locate personnel inside a structure without having to expose a team member to fire or give away their positions by using a mirror. This assists members with communication and plan development for a mission, said Capt. Andrew Sullivan, team commander.

The six and a half inch screen is worn on the camera operator's back.

"The purpose of the camera is to give the commander a picture," Sullivan said.

Essentially the camera helps eliminate a surprise factor, which helps lower the risk members take when leading the entry team, Jenkins said. Clearing a building can be a very stressful mission and moving through a hostile environment requires a significant amount of communication.

The SCS-1 SeCam is more than 3 inches long.

Mario Martinez, chief executive officer for High Risk Training Corporation, describes the camera as a tremendously effective tool to clear confined spaces without exposing team members. Squads could also use the system in a way similar to how soldiers clear caves in Afghanistan.

The camera can be used across the board of military and law enforcement activity. That is why the team collaborated the training with Martinez.

"We hope we never have to use this training, but if we do I'm fully confident we will perform the mission to standard."

U.S. customs also took part in the training exercises and learned from Martinez's expertise.

Soldiers train on computer to improve accuracy

Program gives soldiers feedback

Pfc. Chris Stephens
Bayonet staff

In the war on terrorism, soldiers need every tool they can get their hands on to train.

Sometimes it is difficult to get out to the ranges, so some soldiers don't fire their weapons as much as they should.

A year and a half ago, 3rd Brigade received a program from the Army called Engagement Skills Trainer that allows soldiers more chances to fire their weapon.

However, the soldiers don't fire live rounds.

They use cables hooked to their M-16 A2 rifles, that are, in turn, attached to a computer.

The rifle, when fired, shoots a laser at the target, and where the laser hits shows up on the computer.

"The soldiers still wear all of their equipment, and do everything else they would normally do on a range," said Sgt. Ronald George, program trainer. "The only difference is they are inside and are not firing live rounds.

Pfc. Chris Stephens

Sgt. Ronald George watches as Pvt. Michael Ruggles, Pvt. John Baena and Pvt. Michael Stitts take their turn to the test on the program.

"The program shows the soldiers the mistakes they made when firing and what they did correct," he said. "We can tell how they handle the four fundamentals of firing.

"We can see their breathing pattern, trigger squeeze, aiming and if they are holding a steady position or not."

"Instead of a drill sergeant telling me my breathing is messed up or that my trigger squeeze is off, I can see what I am doing wrong and make the corrections myself," said Pvt. John Baena, 1st Battalion, 10th Field Artillery."

The program also gives them time with their weapon and gets them used to firing in the prone position before going into battle.

"Some soldiers do not have as much time as others to get out to the range to zero their weapon and get comfortable firing," George said. "This allows them to get in more practice than they normally would."

The soldiers said they will take the lessons they learned with the program and be able use them out on the battlefield.

"This just gives me one more tool to use that enhances my marksmanship," Baena said. "It's just one more program the Army is providing to soldiers to help us fight the war on terrorism."

Paratroopers convoy to remote Afghan village

Soldiers help bombing investigation

Spc. Jason B. Baker
Army News Service

KHANDAHAR AIR FIELD, Afghanistan — Their first mission was to be a show of force and chance for the newly deployed soldiers of the 82nd Airborne to become acquainted with new surroundings.

The mission changed, though, and the paratroopers of D Company ended up taking their armored Humvees on a long journey as a ground-assault convoy to provide security for an investigation being conducted in the town of Deh Rawod, Afghanistan. The investigation was gathering facts about a bomb that killed villagers there during a wedding party June 30.

"It was a shock at first," said Pvt. Reggie Maas, D Co., 3rd Battalion, 505th Parachute Infantry Regiment, after the unit was awakened at 2 a.m.

Within an hour of the mission change, the troops had their gear together and were ready to be briefed on the plans for the new mission that would last from July 2-6.

"Being in the military, flexibility is the key to success," said 1st Lt. Patrick McDougald, platoon leader.

"We knew there was a lot of attention on this," McDougald said. "The attention was not just from the local people who were affected, but the whole world was watching. We had to show the utmost professionalism."

The soldiers listened to a briefing, rehearsed the route and then moved out of Kandahar Air Field onto the dusty Afghan road during the hottest part of the day.

"The gunners put up with a lot of discomfort," McDougald said. "But they remained focused the entire time. Even though it was extremely hot, well over 100 degrees."

The soldiers manning the 50-caliber heavy machine guns and MK-19 grenade launchers were continually scanning the terrain for enemy during the 16-and-a-half-hour trip.

"It can be pretty tiring," said Pfc. Ernesto Saraba, gunner. "But your life and your buddy's life are on the line, so you stay pretty focused."

By the time the convoy had reached its stopping point for the night, it had been dark for several hours. The convoy rested and prepared for the second leg of the journey.

The five-hour trip from their rest point on to Deh Rawod offered some very rough terrain and a very well-known ambush point, said Lt. Col. Martin Schweitzer, battalion commander.

"The terrain was rough, real rough," Saraba said. "Our Afghan guides kept getting their vehicles stuck. At several points everyone would get out of the (truck) so it could get up a hill and then get back in when it had reached the top."

Some of the civilian trucks the Afghans used were washed down rivers and on several occasions the paratroopers had to rescue the guide vehicles with their Humvees, Schweitzer said.

The convoy put their training to practice and negotiated the ambush point without incident, Schweitzer said.

"We have a series of procedures to prevent the enemy from getting the upper hand," Schweitzer said. "There was no doubt who owned the terrain when they (the convoy) made a stop."

In the town of Deh Rawod, the location of the investigation, it was apparent the people were not happy with the visiting paratroopers, McDougald said.

The convoy's reception started with aggressive gesturing and eventually grew to rock and vegetable throwing, McDougald said.

"I got hit in the face by a piece of watermelon," Saraba said. "I guess a kid just finished eating it and decided to throw it at me. They also threw rocks at my vehicle."

"As soon as our vehicles had passed them they would start throwing stuff," Maas said. "The first rock that hit my Humvee really surprised me."

The soldiers didn't let the reaction of the locals get to them, Maas said. They remained professional and remembered they had an important job to do.

The convoy pulled security in the village for the next two days while the investigation took place. At night the two platoons slept on their vehicles inside a small compound in the middle of the village.

The idea that on the other side of a mud wall that barely came over the top of the convoy's vehicles were possible al Qaeda and Taliban operatives, made the next two nights a little "eerie," McDougald said.

"I was so nervous I didn't know if I would ever get to sleep," Saraba said. "You could see people on top of their houses watching us. I was so tired, I finally just fell right to sleep."

Following the investigation the convoy headed back to a small village, where they rested for a night and redistributed supplies for the journey back to Khandahar the next day.

The route back to Khandahar Air Field seemed shorter, Saraba said. The convoy returned without incident.

"Every soldier knew his role," McDougald said. "That is the reason the mission was a success. The most important thing is everyone made it back safe."

The success of the mission was a direct result of training, said Saraba. Before the battalion left, it conducted training to practice scanning rooftops and windows, which became practical in the rugged terrain and small villages of Afghanistan. Both Saraba and Maas said the experience would help them on future missions. Now that they are back, they are looking forward to getting out again.

Reservists deploying to help fight in war

Support soldiers leave for Japan

Wayne V. Hall
Army News Service

FORT BELVOIR, Va. — Approximately 50 reservists from the Army's 9th Theater Support Command have been activated for deployment to Japan in support of the war on terrorism.

The 9th TSC is a multi-component unit, said Col. Michael Means, deputy commander. He explained that the unit has an active-duty component of some 30 soldiers stationed at Camp Zama, Japan, and the bulk of its troops — some 400 Army Reserve soldiers — are based at Fort Belvoir, Va.

Only a small part of the 9th TSC is deploying in support of Operation Enduring Freedom, Means said. The deploying soldiers will be working with the 10th Area Support Group, headquartered in Okinawa, to support logistical operations in the Pacific region.

"Since the birth of this nation, the citizen-soldier has been a vital part of our nation," Means said, the deploying soldiers, and the family and friends who came to see them off. "Your contribution to help keep America strong and free of terrorism is a very noble cause, so hold your heads up."

"Today we live in troubled times, as reflected by the events of September 11," said Lt. Col. Donald Moore, who is the unit's senior officer for the deploying group. "The 9th TSC was called, and it's time for you to step up to the plate. It's a proud day for all of us, and a great day to be a soldier."

Some of the soldiers said they were caught a little off guard by the deployment, but leaders said they did well in preparing to go.

"We've been preparing for about two months, and mentally for about six months," Moore said.

That preparation has been about more than just making sure the soldiers are ready to go; it included taking steps to prepare the families.

"It's important to let their families know that we're here to support them while their soldiers are gone," Means said. "It's more critical to support the families today than ever before."

"The key is the family support group," Moore said. "That's the key that holds it all together."

Most of those deploying are leaving family behind.

"I'm not nervous yet. I still don't think it's real," said Spc. Latara Martin, a mother of two — Donnesha Streeman, 5, and Darren Nomikos, 7 — who has been a reservist for nearly two years. "My mother is taking care of my children while I'm gone.

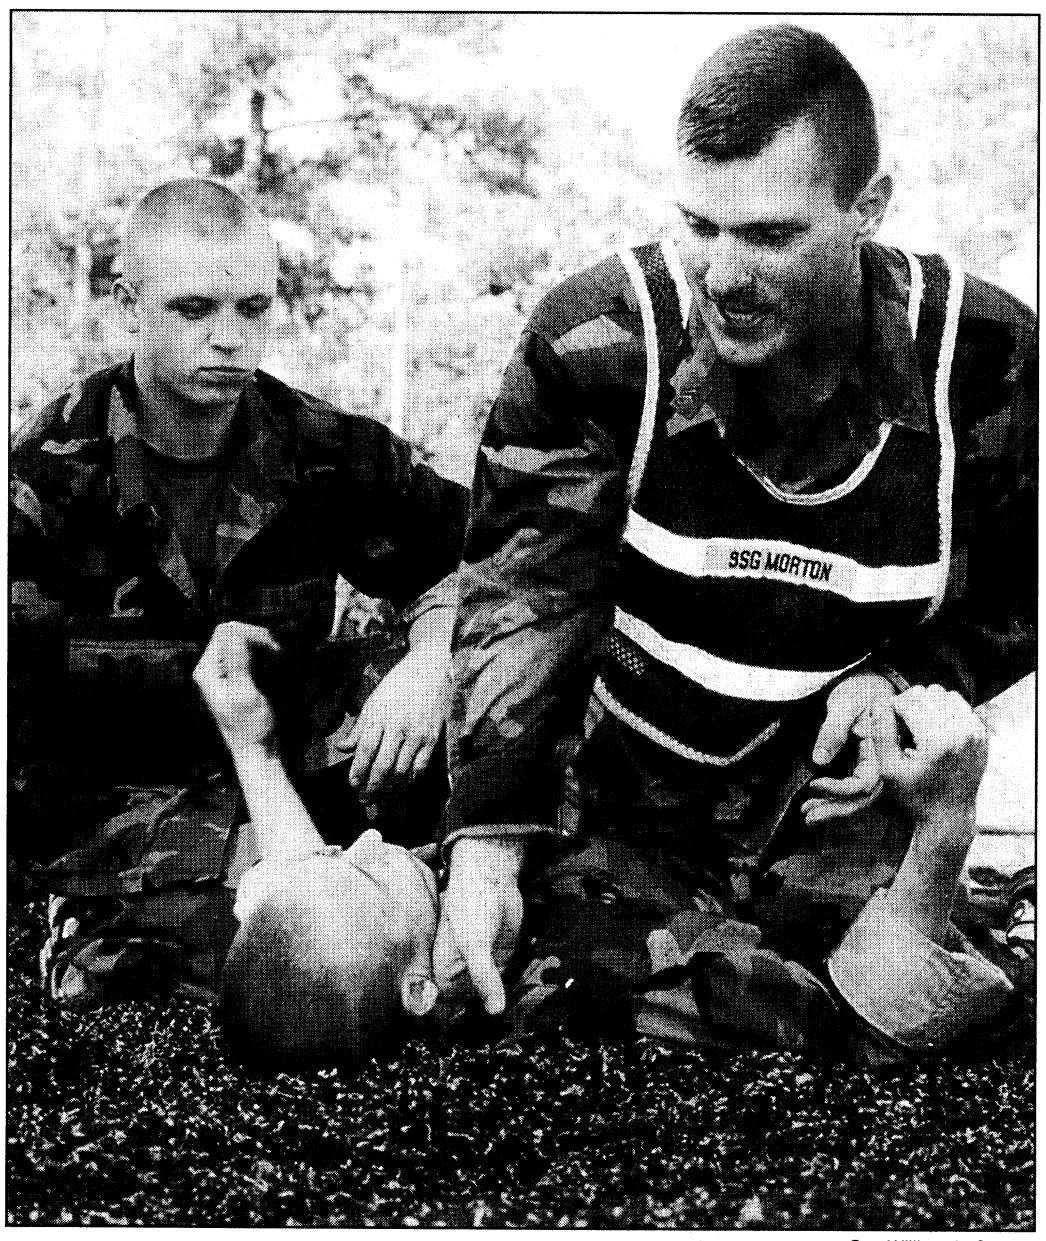
"My daughter is sad because we've never been apart," said Martin, an administrative specialist. "My son is not really sure yet (how to feel) because I'm not gone yet. They understand that it's part of my job, and they're proud of me."

Deploying soldiers are making use of family care plans to ensure those they leave behind are taken care of. Some soldiers, however, said they have encountered challenges.

"This is my first extended deployment, and it will be one of the best tests of my family care plan," said Sgt. Alfred Sullivan, who has been in the 9th TSC since joining the Army Reserve in 1998.

Sullivan is the geographic single-parent of three children, as his wife is an active-duty soldier stationed in Italy.

"My wife was shocked to learn of the deployment," said Sullivan, a logistics automated NCOs. "But I have a good family care plan — they'll be staying with their grandmother in Mississippi."



It is never easy trying to explain a deployment to loved ones, especially those who are too young to really understand what it's all about, said Spc. James Heatherly. He has a 3-year-old daughter, Veronica.

Heatherly is an administrative specialist who has been with the 9th TSC for about a year after spending about 10 years on active duty. His first major deployment was with the 18th Personnel Group (Airborne) for Operations Desert Shield and Desert Storm.

Mia Heatherly said she plans to keep in touch with her husband through phone calls and e-mail.

Heatherly and other 9th TSC soldiers are now at Fort Eustis, Va., where they will undergo mobilization activities for about eight to 10 days. From there they will head to Japan, officials said, to provide logistical command and control for the U.S. Army Pacific Command.

Staff Sgt. Michael Morton, drill sergeant, demonstrates the cross-collar choke hold on Pvt. Ronnie Gray, from Ocala, Fla., as Pvt. Jerad Gard, from Evansville, Ind., observes during hand-to-hand combat training Tuesday at Goodyear Field on Sand Hill.

The soldiers from 2nd Battalion, 47th Infantry Regiment, enjoyed the chance to fight their battle buddies and break away from the monotony of the classroom, Gray said.

"They're getting pretty good at it," Morton said. "Regardless of (military occupational specialty), they're all terrorist targets because they wear the uniform, and they need to know how to protect themselves. We teach them to fight from the ground because that's where most fights end up, so they'll be prepared to defeat the enemy in the future if they find themselves in a similar situation."

Countdown to school

Story and photos by Bridgett Siter

Plains, Ga., is famous for it's peanuts and it's president, former President Jimmy Carter. Take a self-guided tour through town and you'll learn about the young man who went from peanut-farming to peace-making.

The countdown is on. Just 24 days till school starts.

24 more days of perspiration pools on the upholstery.

24 more choruses of "Mom, there's nothing to do," verses one, two and three — "It's too hot out there," "I'm so bored," and "Can you take me and 12 of my friends to the pool?"

24 more days of bedtime bartering. "Please, oh, please, just one more hour? Half an hour? Ten minutes? Pretty please? There's no school tomorrow. Puleeeze?"

24 more days of good ol' summertime.

If the thought makes you break out in a sweat and the thermometer's set on 68, you have a textbook case of summer fever. You got it from your kids.

The antidote is simple and fairly effective. Take a chill pill. Take two, with a tall glass of ice water. Relax. Summer fever, like summer vacation, is not a life sentence. It'll pass in a few days. Here's a list of diversionary activities to keep the crew occupied and satisfied till the first school bell rings and summer fever dissipates for good:

Tell them to hit the trail — the McBride Trail, a one and a half mile nature trail that begins and ends at McBride Elementary School on Custer Road. Remember to carry plenty of water and clean up afterwards.

For a "reel" good time, take them fishing at Fort Benning's Russ Pond. Pack a picnic and a good book, so you can relax while the kids feed the fish.

Amuse 'em with a museum. The National Infantry Museum, on Baltzell Avenue, is a treasure trove of relics from the infantry archives. Sound terribly unappealing to the kids? Take them on a scavenger hunt to see if they can find Calculator the Dog on the first floor, jump towers on the second, and a "Raiders of the Lost Ark" jeep on the third.

Still bellyaching? Tell them to take a hike! Hike the Historic Trail, which encompasses 26 sites around Fort Benning's Main Post, starting at the National Infantry Museum, where you can pick up a map for your self-guided tour.

Visit any one of the dozens of "u-pick-'em blueberry patches that dot the backroads of eastern Alabama. I highly recommend Mr. Kelly's Blueberry Patch, 20 minutes west of Fort Benning, just off County Road 39 in Seale. Call 334-855-9464 to find the best time to stock up on blueberries.

Tour the White House — FDR's Little White House in Warm Springs, Ga., 45 miles north of Fort Benning on Alternate 27 (Manchester Exit off 185) in Meriweather County. The whole family will enjoy walking through the home Roosevelt loved so dearly. Pack a lunch and stop by the president's favorite picnic spot atop Pine Mountain.

Plan a return trip — or two or three. That's how long it takes to hike the 23-mile Pine Mountain Trail. Stop by the visitor's center in the village of Pine Mountain for a trail guide, and spend a few hours traipsing through forests beneath cool Georgia pines.

Head inside to the air conditioning. Wile away a few hours with a good book while the kids explore the hands-on activity room at the Columbus Museum on Wynnton Road. Explore Columbus history — free — as you and the family tour the museum's Chattahoochee Legacy. The Columbus Museum also showcases great artists of local and national distinction.

Take the troops to lunch at the area's most unusual fast food restaurant, Burger King, on Wynnton Road. Housed in a rambling old renovated home, this BK is tastefully decorated with vintage photos and relics from Columbus' early days. It's classy dining with fast food fare.

Picnic at any one of the area's scenic, family-friendly parks. Cooper Creek, on Milgen Road, has walking trails, playgrounds, bike trails, fishing ponds and ducks. Lakebottom Park, on 17th Avenue, has playgrounds, walking trails and a concession stand. Flat Rock Park, on Flat Rock Road, is a great place to picnic. The kids will love climbing the rock formations. Be sure to take a camera.

Go west. Westville, "where it's always 1850," in Lumpkin, Ga., is a living history village, reconstructed from original homes, shops and offices, and populated by curators dressed in period costumes who do a bang-up job of portraying merchants, teachers, farmers and shop-keepers from the 19th century. Westville is open Tuesday through Saturday, from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m., and Sunday, 1 to 5 p.m. Free tickets are sometimes available at the O'Club, the NCO Club, Afterhours and IRT.

It's your lucky day. Calloway Gardens, in Pine Mountain, admits adults free on Mondays, when they're accompanied by a child under the age of 5. Take advantage of the opportunity to visit the garden's butterfly sanctuary, the Victory Garden, Robin Lake Beach or the Sibley Horticulture Center. Be sure to see the "Hunters from the Sky" exhibit at the Virginia Hand Calloway Discovery Center before it closes Sept. 8. For more information, call 1-800-282-8181.

Take a trolley ride through historic downtown Columbus. Ride on brick streets and see grand old Georgia homes, some pre-dating the Civil War. The vintage-style trolley tour takes less than 45 minutes and costs only 60 cents. Tours begin every 45 minutes at the Transfer Center on 9th Avenue. For more information, call 653-4413.

Take a stroll along the Chattahoochee. The River Walk meanders 10 miles from Fort Benning to the downtown Columbus. Cyclists are welcome.

Take a dip in one of Fort Benning's swimming pools or visit one of the three new water parks in Columbus, located at the Shirley Winston Park, Psalmond Road and Rigdon Park. Admission to the new parks is $1 for children under 11, $2 for teens 16 and under, and $3 for the rest of us. For more information, call 653-4506.

Take time out from the fun and take advantage of the AAFES back-to-school sale at the PX.

Mann, oh Mann. The Mann Museum in Opelika, Ala., boasts 35,000 square feet of North American wildlife exhibits, including record-setting Polar Bears and grizzlies, and many hands-on displays. Ever rub a wolf the wrong way? Now you can. Mann Museum is open from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Saturday — except Wednesdays, when it's closed — and Sundays 1 to 5 p.m. Alabama time is one hour behind Georgia time, so plan accordingly. Admission is $7.50 for adults, $5 for kindergartners through high school, and $6 for seniors. For more information, call 334-74[illegible]

Visit Providence Canyon, [illegible]gia's Little Grand Canyon," seven [illegible] west of Lumpkin on Sate Road 39C[illegible] a scenic three-mile trail around th[illegible]yon rim, or take the more challe[illegible] seven-miler, which will lead thro[illegible]naze of canyon floors. Or just sta[illegible] the edge of the canyon, throw your arms in the air and yell "One more week till school starts!" at the top of your lungs. That's no echo you'll hear. That's other parents.

When you're done gawking at huge, dead animals, take a drive to The Good Shepherd Animal Rehab Center in Warm Springs, where you can get up close and personal with a more lively menagerie. To schedule a visit, call 655-2354.

The Coca-Cola Space Science Center, 701 Front Ave., offers out-of-this-world fun for the whole family. The center hosts an ever-changing array of activities designed to intrigue your star-struck child's imagination and feed his curiosity about space travel. To see what's happening today at the space center, call 649-1470

Visit Oxbow Meadows just outside Fort Benning on Lumpkin Road. Oxbow is an environmental learning center, sure, but don't let that put you off. Take the kids to explore the wetlands and woodlands of the Chattahoochee flood plain, touch a turtle, visit a beaver's house or take a nature hike. For more information, call 687-4090.

Plains, Ga., is a great place to spend a day, and the cost is peanuts! This tiny town is home to former President Jimmy Carter. You can go inside his boyhood home, walk the halls of the school he and Rosalynn attended and tour various sites along this free eight-mile self-guided tour. Pick up a guide at the Plains Welcome Center before you start your day. And be sure to stop by The Peanut Emporium to sample the other export Plains is famous for — peanuts.

Make a big splash before school puts an end to summer fun. Take a short drive to SurfSide Water Park in Opelika, Ala., and spend the day floating down the lazy river or sailing in the 640,000 gallon wave pool. Or brave one of the four water slides — two flumes and two 70 foot curly-Qs. Cost of admission at SurfSide ranges from $11.95 to $14.95, but you can get a 10 percent discount with your military I.D. For more information, call 334-821-7873.

Have a ball. Take the kids bowling at one of Fort Benning's two bowling centers. The centers open early (8:30 a.m. throughout the week and 11 a.m. on Sundays) and stay open late. Weekdays are the best time to get a lane. It only costs $1.25 per person per game — a bargain in anybody's book. The Main Post Bowling Center even offers group rates. For more information, call 682-7777.

Hey Mickey! The Columbus Museum offers a variety of ever-[illegible]nging [illegible]ays [illegible]to please adults and children, like the vintage toy show and hands-on activity center. Admission to the museum, on Wynnton Road, is free.

Take your pick! There are lots of "u-pick-'em" berry patches and fruit orchards along the backroads surrounding Fort Benning. Or visit one of several animal rehab centers in the area, including The Good Shepherd in Warm Springs, Ga., where you can meet Billy the Kidd, top left.

MOSQUITO TRAPS

Gas leaks cause recall

Consumer Product Safety Commission

WASHINGTON, D.C. — In cooperation with the U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission, The Coleman Company Inc., of Wichita, Kan., is voluntarily recalling about 136,000 Mosquito DeletoTM Traps.

The mosquito trap's propane regulator can leak propane or allow an overflow of propane gas, both of which pose a fire hazard to consumers.

In addition, the fuel hose attachment sold with the Back HomeTM System can become damaged and leak propane, which poses a fire hazard to consumers.

Coleman has received 28 reports of traps melting or catching on fire as a result of propane leaking, and seven reports of damage to the propane fuel hoses. No injuries have been reported.

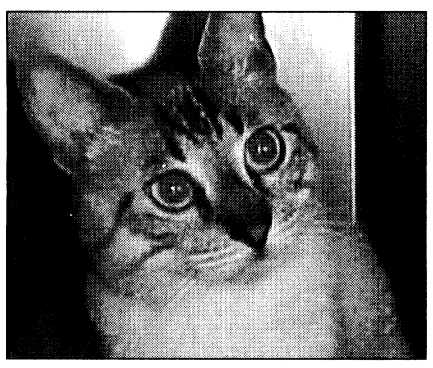
The recalled Mosquito DeletoTM Traps were sold as a part of the Portable System and the Back HomeTM System.

The traps are about 24 inches high, have a green or gray base and top, a black center, and attach to either a 1 pound propane cylinder or a 20 pound propane cylinder with a hose.

The traps have two sets of model numbers: 2950-800 and 2950-801, which can be found on a label on the front of the trap above the words, "WARNING: For outdoor use only."

The recalled Back HomeTM System traps include a 5-foot rubber hose that connects to 20 pound propane cylinders.

The Portable System and Back Home SystemTM mosquito traps were manufactured in the U.S.



Home centers, mass merchandisers, and hardware stores sold these products from March 2002 to July 2002 for between $170 and $200. The products were sold nationwide, except for California.

Consumers should stop using the mosquito traps and propane hoses immediately. Consumers should contact Coleman at (800) 257-5299 anytime, so that a representative can help determine whether their trap needs to be replaced, repaired, or can continue to be used.

For more information, consumers can log on to the company's Web site at www.coleman.com

Family housing parking — All quarters on post will be assigned one parking space to give easy access to their quarters. All residents must ensure that they park only in their designated area or any unmarked area if they have more than one car.

Visitors must also park in an unmarked space. For more information, call your Community Life Office.

Also, guidelines have been set up for front yard decorations.

No fencing is permitted in the front yard of any quarters; front yard decorative borders are permitted, but should not be constructed of greater than one-inch lumber, railroad ties, metal rods or pipes, contain sharp points nor exceed 18 inches in height; prior to installation, occupants will submit a drawing of the proposed front yard decoration border on a fence request form; borders must be well maintained or removed; and no wooden patio or porches are allowed in the front yard.

For more information, call your family housing inspector, Community Life NCO or the community life office.

AAFES birthday party — The Army Air Force Exchange Service will celebrate 107 years of service Thursday at the Main Mall post exchange. All active duty, retiree, reservist and family members are invited to celebrate the occasion.

There will be lots of give-a-ways donated by AAFES contractors and vendors to show the service's appreciation to the customers.

Activities include:

Double hoop competition

Playstation2 competition

Putting green

Ice cream demo

George Foreman Grill demo and give-a-way

Brach's Chocolate Popcorn demo

Red Cross doing blood pressure checks, etc.

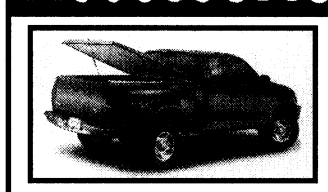
Safe Sitter classes — Safe Sitter classes for girls and boys ages 11 to 13 will be held 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. July 31-Aug. 1 at Health Matters of St. Francis.

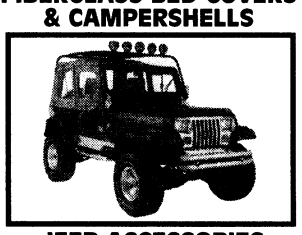
Safe Sitter teaches participants how to handle emergencies when caring for children.

Participants learn safety and security precautions such as what to do if a stranger comes to the door and when and how to call for help. They receive information on child development and age-appropriate activities.

The cost for Safe Sitter is $50 and lunch will be provided both days of the class.

To register your child, call Ask-A-Nurse at 596-4170.





Columbus International Festival — Come out and celebrate the heritage of Columbus at the Columbus International Festival from 2 to 7 p.m. Aug. 11 at the Columbus Civic Center. The festival will showcase countries around the world.

The event is free to the public. For more information call the Mayor's Commission on Diversity at 653-4017.

Head Start — Head Start is a child development program that provides comprehensive services to 3- and 4-year-old children.

Stop by one of the following Head Start Centers: Beallwood, Rosemont, Peabody, Baker Village or Luna from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. Monday through Friday to enroll your child on site. It takes about 15 minutes to apply.

For information, call 649-1696 or 649-1641.

Sun relief

Sgt. William A. Graves

Soldiers with the 157th MP Company, West Virginia National Guard, check IDs at the Custer Road access point Tuesday. The soldiers are glad Fort Benning cares enough about its soldiers and community members to build the Sprung shelters that protect them from the elements, said Capt. Rick Shawyer, company commander.

"It's easier to work through the day when the sun's not beating down on you," Spc. Shaye Conaway said. "I'm sure the drivers we check are happy they don't have to get rained on anymore, too."

The shelters have other advantages.

"The lighting and set up are much better," Shawyer said. "It makes the process faster and lessens the drivers' inconvenience."

Shop commissary every day to save money with manager's specials

Rick Brink
Defense Commissary Agency

FORT LEE, Va. — Commissary customers have a good reason to shop their commissary more often thanks to "Manager's Specials" — short-term sales offering extra low prices on popular products.

"The low prices and short promotional periods of Manager's Specials create a win-win-win situation for commissary customers, the Defense Commissary Agency's and the manufacturers of the products we sell," said Alan Jones, deputy chief of DeCA Marketing Business Unit.

Customers win because they're getting extremely low prices on high-demand products; manufacturers win because the low prices help attract customers to buy more of their products; and DeCA wins because it's able to deliver greater savings to customers, Jones said.

DeCA first tested Manager's Specials in selected commissaries a year ago.

"The enthusiastic response by customers spurred its offering in all of our stores," said Bob Vitikacs, DeCA's executive director for operations and product support.

Because the prices are so low and these are popular products, the sales typically last only three days to a week.

"The short promotional period is why we say 'It pays to shop every day' when we talk about Manager's Specials," Jones said. "Many customers are in the habit of shopping on pay days or monthly, but they need to shop regularly at the commissary in order to take advantage of all the sales we offer them."

> "The short promotional period is why we say 'It pays to shop every day' when we talk about Manager's Specials."
> Alan Jones
> Defense Commissary Agency

The specials are easy to spot in stores because they are prominently displayed with red and yellow "Manager's Special" signs.

Customers can also visit the DeCA's Web page at www.commissaries.com to find the Manager's Specials in their local store. Manager's Specials are a feature on the "Savings Aisle."

Manager's Specials are similar to DeCA's popular Best Value Items program in that they both offer great low prices, Jones said. But that's where the similarity ends.

DeCA launched the BVI program two years ago in response to feedback from young, active-duty military members who wanted quality products that matched or beat commercial grocer's "store brand" products. BVIs are not necessarily the most familiar name brands, but they are consistently the least expensive brands compared to store brands sold in commercial grocery stores. Manager's Specials are generally top-selling, recognizable brands at deeply discounted prices, on sale for a short time.

The Defense Commissary Agency operates nearly 280 commissaries worldwide, providing groceries to military personnel, retirees and their families.

Authorized commissary patrons purchase items at cost plus a 5-percent surcharge, which covers costs of building new commissaries and modernizing existing ones. Shoppers save an average of more than 30 percent on their purchases compared to commercial prices — savings worth more than $2,400 annually for a family of four.

A core military family support element, and a valued part of military pay and benefits, commissaries contribute to family readiness, enhance the quality of life for America's military and their families, and help recruit and retain the best and brightest men and women to serve their country.

Students garden for good cause

e-Club teaches kids about earth, helping others

Angela Sachitano
Special to the Bayonet©

Home and Gardens Network eat your heart out.

The children in the Dexter Elementary School e-Club may know more about harvesting a good crop than most of their parents.

"I've been gardening since I was in kindergarten," said second-grader Courtney Beaton. "It's hard work."

It may be summer, but that didn't stop more than a dozen students from harvesting, washing, and weighing the vegetables in their school's garden July 12. They looked like experts.

"I wanted to help, and I don't mind getting dirty," said first-grader Hannah Vigil-Shuck. "We harvest and today we'll give them to people who don't have a lot of food."

Dexter Elementary School kindergarten teacher Earnestine Ezekiel is the green thumb behind the little hands. She started the e-Club at Dexter in 1994 to help the children learn about the environment.

This year, the children are using their knowledge to help others.

"We decided to grow as many vegetables as we could fit in our garden to give to the homeless," Ezekiel said. "The kids planted these vegetables in early spring, and now we'll be handing them over to one of the local shelters."

The children spent their school lunch breaks watering the garden as well as early mornings during the school year learning about the different crops, Ezekiel said.

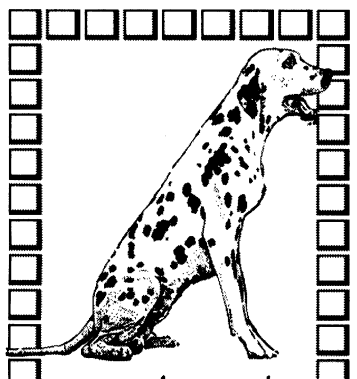
The result is a flourishing garden in the back of the school of potatoes, cucumbers, squash, and peppers, to name a few. The children also planted herbs and dozens of flowers.

"My friends and I like coming out here to help," said 6-year-old William Peters.

"I'm so proud of these kids," said Ezekiel, who was named the Fort Benning Teacher of the Year this year for her innovative ways of teaching. "This club is not mandatory. All of the children involved are here because they like gardening.

Angela Sachitano

Earnestine Ezekiel and members of the e-Club harvest the club's garden July 12.



"Now they want to make sure this food gets to the people who need it."

Residents of the House of Mercy shelter in Columbus will receive the vegetables that will likely last them the rest of the summer, Ezekiel said.

The tally this time around reads 49 pounds of potatoes, 18 pounds of melons, 15 pounds of cucumbers, eight pounds of squash, and three pounds of peppers.

"The children are learning about the benefits of taking care of the earth and of taking care of others less fortunate," Ezekiel said. "My hope is these kids will remember what they learned from the e-Club long past elementary school."

Cast your net on the right side

Follow feelings from heart, mind will become clear

Chaplain (Capt.) Sean Facchinello
1st Battalion, 19th Infantry Regiment

The disciples of Jesus came from many walks of life. Physicians, tax collectors, homemakers, you name it, they followed Jesus.

Some of Jesus' followers were fishermen. They earned their living catching fish — spent a lot of time on the Sea of Galilee.

My wife, Lynne, and I had the privilege of visiting Israel and taking a boat across Lake Galilee where many of the followers of Jesus fished.

One particular day, as noted in the Gospel of John 21:5, Jesus said, "... Friends, haven't you any fish?" These fishermen spent the entire night fishing and coming up empty. Tired and disgusted, they caught nothing. Jesus told them "throw your net on the right side of the boat, and you will find some." There were 150 fish in their nets from that catch, and they could hardly pull them into the boat. Can you imagine the party they had after that catch! What a miracle!

REFLECTIONS

It goes to show us what can be done with God's help. In the Gospel of Mark 1:17, Jesus calls people to "Come, follow me ... and I will make you fishers of men."

Maybe you sang a song about fishers of men in church when you were a child.

Fishing for fish and fishing for people are two different things. Yet how easy it is to forget our own families when we are doing our job or even caring for our families and forgetting to reach them for God.

What I mean is, we may even care for our family, but forget that we need God's help if we are going to be successful at caring, successful at loving and providing for them.

We can be like the fishermen who caught nothing.

But when they met Jesus, they found their successful catch of fish came not from their own efforts but from doing what Jesus said they should do.

Are you tired of coming up with an empty net? Especially when it happens too often?

I recommend putting God into your family. Set forth the time to cast your net on the right side, rather than leaving God out of the family picture.

May God bless your family and grant you success at caring for your home!

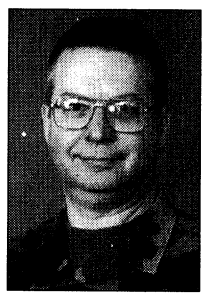
LISTEN CAREFULLY

Attention is key to healthy communication

Chaplain (Maj.) Raymond Koop
Family Life Ministries Center

The speaker-listener technique provides structure that lets couples talk respectfully and safely.

This powerful and simple method helps couples improve their communication skills.



Speakers should break up what they say into one or two sentence bite-size pieces.

By pausing after one or two sentences, speakers allow listeners to fully hear, understand and acknowledge what is being said.

The listener is then able to paraphrase what was said to ensure good communication.

The speaker uses "I" statements to take responsibility for thoughts and feelings and to avoid mind-reading.

By keeping to one topic, the speaker explores all the thoughts, feelings, and options about an issue that will promote better problem solving later.

Koop

A listener listens by carefully attending to what the speaker is saying.

The listener faces the speaker, stands or sits in a nondefensive manner, nods his head, and uses phrases such as, "Ah-huh," "Sure," "OK," "I see," to indicate that they are concentrating on what the speaker is saying.

The listener acknowledges what the speaker is saying by responding with empathetic statements as, "I can tell this is important to you," "I didn't know you felt this way," and "Thank you for sharing this."

After several sentences, the listener should paraphrase what the speaker has said.

This ensures that the listener fully understands the speaker.

Even if he disagrees, the listener should never rebut, deny, defend, justify, rationalize or verbally attack the other person.

The listener encourages dialogue by inviting further exploration. "What else do you feel or think about this issue?"

After fully exploring the issue, the listener asks further questions like, "What do you see as possible options?"

After fully listening, the speaker then listens to what the listener has to say about the issue. Scripture states, "Be quick to listen, slow to speak, and slow to become angry" (James 1:19).

Would you like to make your marriage communication better?

Free counseling and support are available.

Instructor wins world championship

Russian sport uses variety of combat styles

Spc. Douglas DeMaio
Bayonet staff

A Fort Benning combatives instructor has staked his claim as the U.S. and World Champion in the sport of Somba, a Russian form of hand-to-hand combat for soldiers.

Like a gladiator, Spc. James Stelly, 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment, battered and beat his competition to win the World Open Somba Championship in Shreveport, La., June 22.

"It felt pretty good," said the 19-year - old."I never really thought of winning something of this caliber."

Somba is the third recognized style of international wrestling, said Sgt. 1st Class Matt Larsen. With arm bars and leg locks acceptable, but no choke holds allowed in the sport, Somba follows freestyle and Greco-Roman wrestling on the international scene.

"He basically manhandled those guys," Larsen said. "His spirit and fighting ability carried him through the competition."

"I think many of the guys there were more experienced than me," Stelly said, who was a high school state champion in wrestling.

"My stamina is what I think helped me win most of my matches."

Every day Stelly trains soldiers in hand-to-hand combat to help them become lethal with their hands.

Although teaching different martial arts styles and techniques at the combatives school is helpful, Stelly believes his competitive edge comes from practicing with students.

"All the guys at the school are really aggressive, and it helps me get used to that kind of intensity."

Evidently, the intensity paid off, Larsen said. Half of his fights were won by forcing his opponents to submit. He had the most in the competition with three.

Stelly won the championship with a straight arm bar, which can break an arm at the elbow if the opponent doesn't submit. Still, there is room for improvement, he said.

Somba originated in the Soviet Union in 1939. The Russian phrase Somba means — "self defense without weapons." The sport is most famous for its leg locks.

It incorporates judo, jiu-jitsu, grappling, freestyle and Greco-Roman wrestling.

For more information on combatives, call 545-2811.

Youth Services soccer camp helps post children get game

Children learn skills from All Army coach

Pfc. Brian Trapp
Bayonet staff

Approximately 22 children broke the summer routine of waking at noon to watch TV for rest of the day, when they were out at 9 a.m. Monday at French Field for the first day of Youth Services soccer camp.

The weeklong camp helped participants improve their skills, reinforce the fundamentals of the game and taught new moves. There was something for all skill levels in the 4- to 15-year-old range.

"This is the best sport for kids to get involved with," said McDonald Williams, head coach of camp and with the armed forces coaching staff. "The beauty of soccer is you can do well, once you master the fundamentals of the game. More importantly, the game teaches children life lessons about teamwork and communicating the same skills we need in today's world."

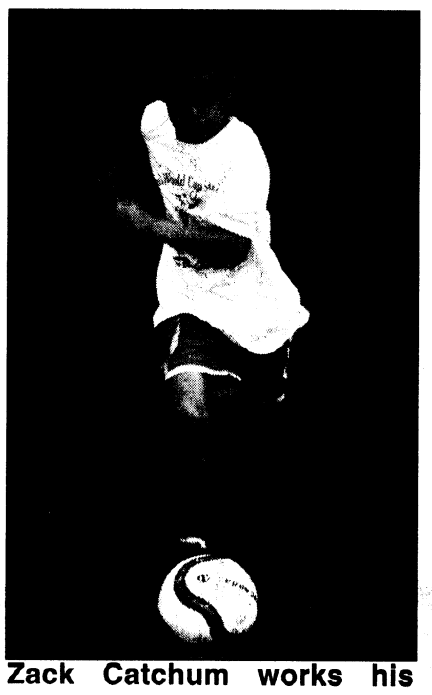
The participants in the 7- to 10-age group went over shooting, dribbling, controlling the ball while running and developing footspeed.

"The camp is great," said Ashley Blake, 12, first-year participant. "We learned a lot of different steps, kicks and shooting. It's just a lot of fun. It gets me out of the house, and I get some exercise. Otherwise, I would probably be sitting at home watching TV."

Williams' lessons have payed off with William Walker, assistant coach at the camp. Williams instructed him when he was about 14 years old, and now Williams is helping him go on to play soccer in college.

The camp offered more than just an edge for the upcoming soccer season.

"Playing soccer helps me get out to meet different people, make friends and work on my social skills," Blake said.



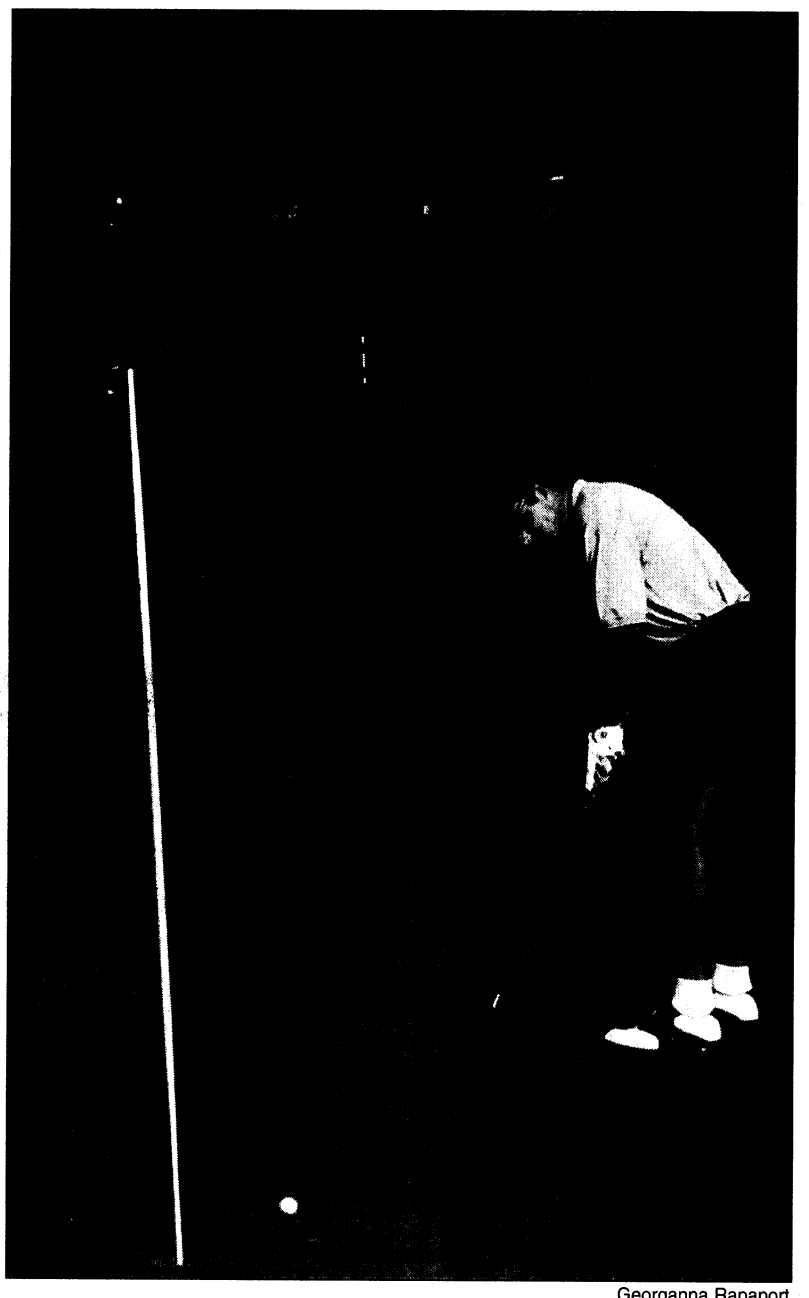
The game also builds confidence in the young players, Williams said. There's a 7-year-old who didn't want to leave his parents' car when he got here. He started out hiding behind his mom, and now he's out here having a great time.

"We're teaching them a whole lot in a short period of time," Williams said. "It's amazing how quickly the children's skills progress; they began improvising on the moves I taught them.

"When we started this morning, some of the children wouldn't even touch the ball with their left foot," Williams said. "Now they are learning skills that will help them throughout their soccer careers."

Williams said the children attending the camp will definitely have the upperhand when the season starts up in August.

"If they can continue to work on the moves we teach and perfect them; it will end up being like Michael Jordan's fade away jump shot. You know it's coming, but you can't stop it," Williams said.



Zack Catchum works his approach for the outside cut.

The course will celebrate its grand opening from course renovations in conjunction with the CG's Pay Day Scramble Thursday. The scramble will begin at 7:30 a.m. There will be numerous prize drawings afterward, including vacations, annual golf memberships and a television.

For more information, call 687-1940.

SPORTS BRIEFS

on post

YS cheerleading camp — Youth Services cheerleading camp registration ends today.

Registration time is from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m at Building 1056.

The camp will be Monday through July 26. It is open to Youth Services members ages 6 to 15. The cost is $40 per child.

For more information, call 545-3070.

Army 10-Miler qualifier — There will be two races to qualify for the 2002 Fort Benning Army 10-Miler team.

The races will be at the Santiago Fitness Center Saturday and Aug. 17. Registration begins the day of the race at 6.

The start time is 7 a.m. Selected military personnel will compete in Washington, D.C., in the 18th annual Army 10-miler race Oct. 20.

For more information, call Lula Mitchenor at 544-9595.

YS aerobics — Youth Services aerobics classes started in July. Registration is ongoing at Building 1056, Monday through Friday from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

The classes are open to children ages 6 and up.

For more information, call 545-3070.

Archery club — The Fort Benning Archers are now accepting memberships to the archery club located on Aldridge Road.

The yearly memberships allow archers full use of the facilities including a key to the indoor range.

Membership costs are $15 for military, $35 for civilians and $45 for families.

For more information, call A.S. Morgan at 327-8375.

Rifle and Pistol Club — Returning members of Task Force 1-30 are eligible for free Rifle and Pistol Club membership through the end of August by presenting identification.

Hours of operation are from noon to 8 p.m. Tuesday, Thursday and Friday, from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday, and noon to 5 p.m. Sunday. The club is located at English Range on Main Post.

For more information, call 545-3171.

Bass Club — The Bass Club of Fort Benning is accepting applications for new members.

It is open to active-duty military and family members 16 and older.

It is also open to retired military and Department of Defense civilians and family members 16 and older.

The club meets the second and fourth Tuesday of the month at Faith Middle School.

For more information, call 685-4975.

Government Vehicles Offered For Sale To Area Car Buyers

Incredible bargains now available to the general public as Government agencies empty and consolidate fleets

Columbus, GA -

You've seen them all over the roads. Vehicles with the word "Government" on their license plates. These vehicles, owned by Federal, State and local governments, are provided to a wide assortment of government employees.

If you have noticed them, have you also noticed most are no more than two to three years old? Why? Because once these vehicles hit a certain age or mileage milestone, they're sold off at government auctions. Generally, these auctions are not open to the public. However, now these vehicles will be made available to all car buyers this Wednesday, Thursday, Friday and Saturday at Rivertown Ford in Columbus, Georgia.

Federal and State budget guidelines require the periodic disposal of government owned vehicles. Now the general public has an opportunity to purchase them at discounted prices.

"We've now found a source that offers both a tremendous selection and unbelievable values."

Rivertown Ford General Sales Manager, Will Johnston, explained how his dealership was able to secure these vehicles and make them available to area bargain hunters. "For years I've heard talk of what incredible buys these vehicles are." says Johnston. "Yet when it came to finding them, we just kept hitting a dead-end. Thankfully, we've now found a source for them that offers both a tremendous selection and unbelievable values."

Johnston added the selection isn't just what you'd expect. "I know I used to think of 'government' vehicles as being a bunch of plain, white cars with no frills. And yes, these kinds of vehicles are available at really low, low prices. But there's a lot more than that" says Johnston. "We've got cars in a variety of colors and equipment options. Plus, we even have trucks and sport utility vehicles. Many are even still covered by the remainder of the factory warranty and have surprisingly low miles."

"Even with just a $99 down payment, some payments are still just $99."

Johnston added "This sale is open to everybody. Many buyers can make a $99 down payment, sign the necessary paperwork and drive home within minutes. And even with just a $99 down payment, some payments are still just $99 a month."

Johnston warned that selection would be good, but limited. "We want everyone to know this is a first- come-first- served sales event. You should get here early because I'm sure the most popular vehicles will sell first. They always do!"

Rivertown Ford is located at 1680 Whittlesey Road, or call 706-653-7420. For further information and to reserve a vehicle, visit the official Government Vehicle Disposal web site at www.governmentvehicledisposal.com

PUBLIC NOTICE

COLUMBUS, GA - This week history will be made as Sam's Club Discount Auto Buying Service will be hosted on the premises of Freeway Ford at 2025 Box Road, Columbus, Georgia. The Sam's Club Discount Auto Buying Service is guaranteed to save customers hard earned money on their new car purchase.

Normally, a person has to be a member of the Sam's Club to take advantage of these discounts but during this special off premises event at Freeway Ford - everyone - member and non members will be able to take advantage of Sam's Auto Club Discount Pricing.

Freeway Ford also agreed to offer their entire used car inventory at Sam's Club Discount Pricing. The entire new and used car inventory will consist of approximately 6.5 million dollars in cars, trucks and SUVs. The new Ford line up will be 2002 model Taurus, Escorts, Focus, Crown Victorias, Windstars, Rangers, F-150s, F-250s, F-350s, Explorers, Expeditions and Ford Escapes.

Customers will also receive the recent announced 0% apr financing for 60 months on most models.

It's a Big Deal!

SAM'S CLUB

Auto Sale

The used car inventory will include all makes and models such as Nissans, Hondas, Lincolns, Cadillacs, Oldsmobiles, Chevrolets, Sierra Pickups, Firebirds, Grand Ams, LeSabres, Bonnevilles, Tacomas, Highlanders, Avalons, Centurys, Corollas, Fords, F-150s, F-250s and several F-350s.

Will Johnston, General Manager, welcomes the Sam's Club Discount Pricing to Freeway Ford, "We've always been up front with our customers regarding our costs, profits and pricing. When I first learned of the 'off site Sam's Club Pricing', I was a little timid about bringing them to host one of these events at my store - mainly because I knew our prices would plummet. But once I learned that's what's in it for me is volume and therefore, possible increased factory allocations, I decided it's well worth the risk of all that lost profit. Plus area car buyers are going to love us for this so, long term, the benefits are going to be invaluable".

"We will also arranged to take trade-ins while still offering these low prices. Drive, push, pull or tow your vehicle - just get it here. Another secret you may not know is your vehicle is worth a lot - no matter what condition it's in or how much you may even still owe on it. You're going to get the big money you deserve."

"Area car buyers are going to love us for this!"

Be sure to arrive early, the most popular, biggest - discounted vehicles will sell fast. You'll never buy a car the same way again!

A76 sets change in motion

Fort Benning has plan for employees

Pfc. Brian Trapp
Bayonet staff

The upcoming reduction in force may be displacing more than just the abolished positions.

Individuals assigned to a job series unaffected by the RIF may be at risk of being displaced because of other factors including seniority and veterans' preference points, said Col. Joe Torres, garrison commander.

There are two methods of placing employees during the second round of a RIF — "bumping" and "retreating."

Employees compete for other positions, and their placement rights are determined by their retention standing (tenure group, veteran preference, years of civil service). Employees will be placed in order of retention level, an A-76 official said.

Bumping is an employee's right of assignment to a position occupied by another employee in another competitive level in the same competitive area. Workers need to remember:

• The employee bumping must be qualified for the position (including any minimum education requirements),

• The employee being bumped must be in a lower retention group.

If a career non-veteran who is qualified for a position held by an employee with veterans' preference, but has less than three years at his position, the veteran could be bumped. In this example, both requirements are met. The non-veteran employee is qualified for the position and is in a higher retention level than the other employee. Length of service is not a factor in bumping. A career non-veteran employee cannot bump another non-veteran employee regardless of length in service.

Retreating is an employee's right of assignment to a position they have previously held or is basically identical to their previous one, when the position is occupied by a lower-standing employee in the same

Sand Hill recruit dies after 1-mile run

Man passed on university, joined Army

A 17-year-old basic trainee died Monday, one week after arriving at Fort Benning.

Pfc. Nicholas O. Williams, of Pinehurst, Ga., complained of dizziness during the "cool-down" phase of a physical fitness test, after completing a one-mile assessment run about 6 a.m.

He was treated by medical personnel on site and taken to the troop medical clinic before being transported by ambulance to Martin Army Community Hospital, where he was pronounced dead at 8 a.m., said Fort Benning spokesperson Monica Manganaro.

Results of an autopsy showed Williams died of natural causes complicated by an enlarged heart. A pre-existing condition, concentric left ventricular hypertrophy, which predisposes a person to abnormal heart rates and patterns, is believed to have been a contributing factor, but final toxicology reports will not be available for several weeks.

The PT test is routine practice for recruits who are awaiting assignment at Sand Hill's reception station.

Williams graduated from Dooly County High School two months ago. According to a published report in the Columbus Ledger-Enquirer, he finished fourth in his class of 120 students and received the Presidential Service Award for completing 150 hours of community service.

The recipient of two college scholarships, Williams decided to pursue his education while serving in the Army.

Smokers need to follow the rules

Regulation sets guidelines for smoking

Sgt. William A. Graves
Bayonet assistant editor

This is the first part in a three-part series that explores smoking in the workplace.

Fort Benning is cracking down on violations of the rules that govern smoking in the workplace.

"The rules are important to protect the non-smokers," said Mary Loudermilk, Personnel Management Specialist with the Directorate of Civilian Personnel. "The ideal state, in my mind, is a reduction in the number of smokers and improved overall health of the smokers.

The current plan is helping the post meet that objective, she said.

"I do not foresee any challenges to the plan because we overcame those in the initial phase of the implementation and negotiation processes," Loudermilk said.

Fort Benning's leadership negotiated agreements with the three unions on post that detail smoking procedures.

Fort Benning Policy Memorandum 600-63-1 dated Jan. 29, 2001, regulates smoking in the workplace. Some guidelines are:

• Smoking of tobacco products is prohibited in all workplaces, in all military vehicles and aircraft, and all official vehicles.

• Smoking is prohibited within 50 feet of entrances and exits. Smoking is permitted in designated outdoor smoking areas.

• Employees will not be denied the right to smoke and will be authorized appropriate break time for this purpose. However, smokers will not be allowed additional time beyond routine breaks to be away from their jobs for smoke breaks. Supervisors will monitor their workers and initiate appropriate action if workers violate this policy.

• Cadre and faculty of any military school will not use tobacco products in the presence or view of students while on duty.

• Smoking is prohibited where it presents a safety hazard, that is, firing ranges, ammunition storage areas, fuel pumps, motor pools, and equipment maintenance shops.

• Smoking is prohibited during the conduct of the Army Physical Fitness Test. This prohibition extends from the beginning of the test until participants depart the testing area.

• The use of all tobacco products in Infantry Hall is prohibited. This includes the use of snuff or chewing/smokeless tobacco. Use of all tobacco products on the cafeteria deck is also prohibited.

• Individuals who violate the policy may be subject to a variety of penalties, depending upon the violation, the status of the offender,

I don't care if you smoke, just don't exhale around me

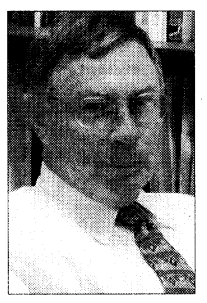
COMMENTARY

There's probably no one more fanatical when it comes to not smoking than a former smoker. I know. I'm one of those people.

I dread standing next to smokers. I might love the smoker dearly, but, to put it mildly, they stink.

It's on their clothes, in their hair. My brother still smokes and while we like having him come visit, when he comes back into the house from his smoke breaks I don't want to sit next to him. Heck, I don't want to be in the same room with him. I've been tempted to spray him down with the dog's flea and tick spray, give him that nice citronella smell. And it still might come to that.



I see that restaurants in Columbus are starting to ban smoking altogether. That's good because in their infinite wisdom, the people who designed restaurants normally have the smoking section up front so the non-smokers have to pass through it.

And is one half-wall going to keep the smoke out of the non-smoking section? "I'm sorry, Mr. Smoke, but you can't cross that line. The non-smokers are over there."

So when I leave one of those restaurants, I smell just like I smelled in my smoking days — stinky. Except when I was smoking, I couldn't smell it. So it was all right then.

Why did I smoke? Probably for the same reason millions of others smoke. I enjoyed it. I liked the taste of the raw smoke coming through my nonfiltered Pall Malls — if you're going to do something, don't do it half— (you know what) — go all the way.

Why did I quit? I didn't like being a prisoner of an inanimate object. Of course I must say that like Mark Twain, quitting smoking was easy. Heck it was so easy, I did it maybe a dozen times.

My technique was flawless. Let a pack of cigarettes sit open for a couple of weeks, then smoke one of those suckers. Yuck. I'd lose the desire to smoke. So that's how I quit.

I'd quit after football season in college, and resume after the track season ended.

I took it up in the Army because we got free cigarettes with our C-rations. And what could be more fun than seeing if you could light up under the eyes of a ranger instructor at night?

So I smoked off and on in the Army. I'd quit for a year or so, then see someone enjoying his cigarettes so much that I had to have one. Next thing you know I was bumming them on a regular basis, then I'd be buying replacement cartons for that person and pretty soon I'd be back to smoking my Pall Malls.

I had my last cigarette the January before I got out of the Army. That was sixteen years ago. It was tough at first. I'd see someone with a pack of Pall Malls and I'd start to salivate. But I'd overcome that desire to go up to him and ask for one and the desire would pass.

I took it one desire at a time. And now I can say I never have that desire anymore, well almost never. Writing this column kind of makes me want to go find a Pall Mall. The good news is I don't know if they sell those coffin nails anymore. Plus as I think about it, only the taste of that last stale cigarette comes to mind and once again, the desire passes.

There's a lot of literature on the streets about the dangers of smoke. How hundreds of thousands of Americans lose their lives thanks to smoking or secondhand smoke. And it's all true. But when you're young, you're invincible, just like Lancelot.

So I'll say this to you young good-looking men and women.

If you're a smoker, you're not very kissable except to another smoker.

Smoking makes you age faster. You develop wrinkles around your lips from sucking on cigarettes, you develop wrinkles on your forehead and around your eyes as you squint from the smoke rising up.

Your clothes don't last as long. Your expensive DVD players, stereos and computers die early deaths as they get coated with nicotine and clog up. You have to clean the windows more often, especially in your car — do you realize that gunk that comes off on your cleaning rag is coating your lungs?

Your teeth and nails and fingers turn yellow.

Above all, how can you afford it? Cigarettes in the commissary are $30 a carton! For me, that's a major investment.

It's a good meal with a couple of drinks. It's a round of golf at a decent golf course. It's two CDs or a movie for two and all the trimmings.

For you one carton a week folks, what could you do with an extra $120 a month in your pocket?

If you ever thought about quitting, make a commitment and do so. Martin Army Community Hospital has a great system — better than the stale cigarette system, I'll bet, to help you. Do yourself and your loved ones a favor. Give the clinic a call at 544-3065 or 544-1255. You could be on your road to recovery.

RESPECT

R-E-S-P-E-C-T, just a little bit!

Elsie Jackson
USAIC Public Affairs Office

COMMENTARY

Aretha Franklin sang about it. Most of us expect it, and couldn't we all use a little more respect?

Respect. You know. To honor. Revere. Hold in high esteem. Regard highly.

Sure it's an Army value, but when you get right down to it, shouldn't respect be a life value regardless of your occupation? For that matter, so are the other Army values, but that's another commentary.

We respect ourselves because we have enough self-esteem to recognize that we deserve to treat ourselves well, and expect to be treated responsibly by others.

We respect others, our elders and people in authority, for example, for their contributions and their accomplishments to our lives.

But respect has another definition too … it also means "to refrain from interfering with."

I take that to mean being tolerant, which is defined as "sympathy or indulgence for beliefs or practices differing from or conflicting with one's own."

Like "respect," "tolerance" has more than one definition, too. It can mean a "capacity to endure pain or hardship." Being tolerant isn't always easy. Sometimes it's downright painful, especially when the viewpoint demanding to be tolerated doesn't come close to agreeing with our own.

Our law enforcement personnel are shining examples of respect and tolerance. The most recent example would be how professionally they treated the young woman who closed and chained the front gate and then locked herself to it. Traffic had to be rerouted for more than two hours. She certainly showed no respect for the people traveling onto post and no respect for the installation.

She, like protesters before her, knew she would be treated with respect. She would have been the first to complain if she hadn't. Clearly part of the "ME-ME-ME generation" it wouldn't occur to her that she owed some respect back.

In that big bell-curve we call "life," those on the far right and far left sides of the curve should be tolerated by those in the middle as we try to respect each other.

But too often, the left and right forget it's supposed to cut both ways.

Do you respect yourself enough to recognize that other points of view aren't personal attacks or tyrannical attempts to make you change your mind? Or are you so egotistical and closed-minded you've convinced yourself that you're the "only one who's marching in step?"

Being tolerant isn't always easy no matter where you stand. Can you matter-of-factly state your points because you've carefully examined both sides of the issue? I can respect that. Or are you a rebel without a clue?

Respect. Tolerance. It's a two-way street. Blocking that street does more than cut off communication between both sides. It cuts your credibility to shreds and no reasonable person will take you seriously.

Without credibility you get no respect. Can you tolerate that?

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Tennesseean enjoys The Bayonet

I live in Tennessee, and I am very thankful for (The Bayonet digital version at www.thebayonet.com). I personally do not know what it is like to be at Fort Benning or in the Army for that matter, but someone very close to me is there for boot camp. It is very hard to be away from someone you love, but for some strange reason, I find a small comfort when I look at this site. I guess just seeing a small bit of what they do and learn helps.

I bet I have read every story and article several times and I am looking forward to learning more. So please I beg you keep this site up. Believe it or not it does help. Thank you.

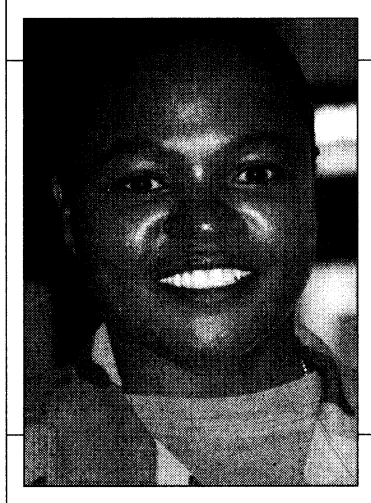
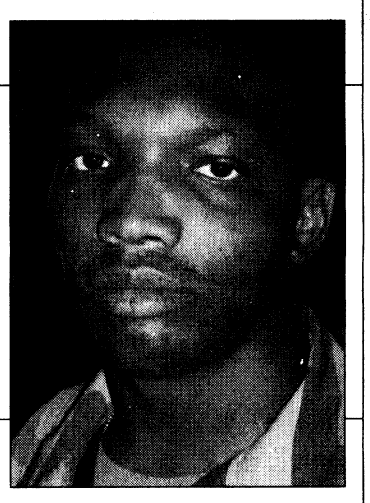
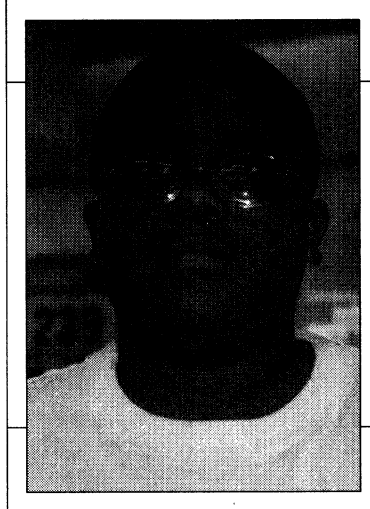
VARIOUS VOICES



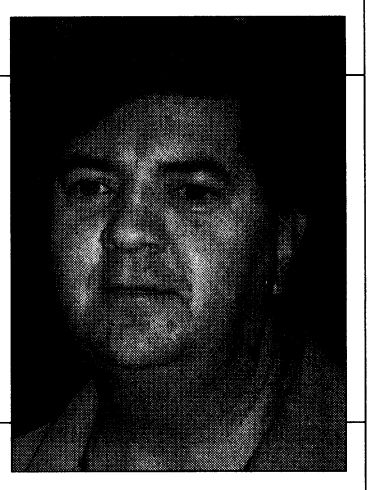
What do you think about non-smoking restaurants?



Capt. Chip Bredfield, 50th Airlift Squadron, Little Rock AFB — "It should be up to the restaurants if they want to separate it. I think, though, they should have two separate rooms for the smokers and non-smokers."



Virgie Minard, family member — "My husband just had triple bypass surgery, because of the smoking he used to do. I don't want to smell it while I'm trying to enjoy a meal at a restaurant."



Sgt. Yvetter Martin, 3rd Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment— "I don't like the idea. It's bad if I want a cigarette and can't have one. I say, 'Smoke them if you got them.'"

Sgt. Andre Moye, 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment — "I think it's good. This way non-smokers won't have the risk of secondhand smoke. Secondhand smoke is a leading cause of cancer."

Ian Morse, 12, family member — "I wish that all restaurants were non-smoking. I have asthma, and I can't stand people smoking."

Ret. Navy Petty Officer 1st Class Gus Yoannon, Phenix City. — "I think it's a good idea. But, if they could just separate the smoking and non-smoking sections with a little more than plastic plants, then that would be okay."

Woodpeckers show signs of increase

New activity observed in 68 clusters

Bridgett Siter
Special to the Bayonet©

How much wood would a woodpecker peck, if a woodpecker could peck wood?

A woodpecker of the red cockaded persuasion would peck as much wood as he could, as long as it's live pine, at least 15 inches in diameter.

Fort Benning's pine forests are home to the red cockaded woodpecker, or RCW, the only woodpecker to frequent live wood. A native of the southeastern United States, the RCW has been listed as an endangered species since 1970, a victim of the south's diminishing pine forests.

But things are looking up. According to statistics from the Directorate of Facilities Engineering and Logistics' conservation branch, the RCW population is on the increase at Fort Benning.

Of 321 "potential clusters," or sites where the RCW could flourish, 242 "show signs of activity," said Michael Barron, a wildlife biologist with the conservation branch, which conducts an annual RCW census. Of those 242, 198 have been positively identified as nesting grounds.

That's an increase of 68 since the branch first began aggressively tracking the RCW in 1996.

"We view this as a sign we're improving here on Fort Benning," said Barron, who believes it'll be several more years before the RCW is completely out of danger.

Fort Benning is one of 15 sites in the southeast designated as RCW "recovery grounds." With 900,000 acres of suitable pine forests, it has the potential to house at least 450 clusters, or families, of woodpeckers, each cluster averaging between two and five birds. Unfortunately, much of those forests have suffered the same fate as others throughout the southeast, disappearing through over harvesting and taken over by hard-wood trees.

Controlled burns, designed to encourage pine growth, have helped re-establish the RCW population to some degree, Barron said.

The use of "artificial cavity inserts" have also been a boon to the bird. RCWs peck cavities in live pines for nesting. By inserting prefabricated pine birdhouses — "government housing," Barron calls them — the woodpeckers can be coaxed into uninhabited territory, where they form new clusters.

"By placing them strategically, we can sort of recruit new clusters where they need to be," Barron said. "It's a 'band-aid' approach that's so far been very successful."

Efforts to re-establish the RCW population have necessarily restricted training in various areas, a fact Barron said will ultimately prove to be in the Army's best interest.

"The RCW population is really an indication of how healthy our ecosystems are. And the more we study and protect the woodpecker, the more we realize they inhabit the kinds of landscapes the military needs for training," he said. "If they're in danger of extinction, it means our forests are in danger. And the Army needs them for training. Any temporary inconvenience will pay off in the long run."

A former Fort Benning ranger and airborne student made his long-awaited return to the home of the infantry as he took command of the Infantry Training Brigade at a change of command ceremony on Kanell Field Monday.

Col. Brian R. Baldy assumed command of the brigade from Col. Thomas W. Hayden, who is heading to Washington, D.C., to work on the Joint Staff at the Pentagon.

"I'm looking forward to the challenges that await me," Hayden said.

"Commanding a great brigade like this has prepared me for that challenge."

Baldy is coming from his assignment as the Infantry Branch Chief and Combat Arms Division Chief Personnel Command at the Pentagon, and said he plans to continue all of the great work Hayden has done.

"It's a great honor to be part of a first class brigade that trains so many infantrymen each year," he said. "I pledge to uphold all of the traditions of the brigade."

Baldy has served in a variety of assignments, which include; the 24th Infantry Division, Fort Stewart, Ga., 4th Reserve Officer Training Corps Region, Fort Lewis, Wash., 60th Infantry of the 9th Infantry Division, Fort Lewis, Wash., United States Military Academy, West Point, N.Y., 14th Infantry, 25th Infantry Division (Light), Hawaii, 503rd Infantry (Air Assault), 2nd Infantry Division, Republic of South Korea, and Army G3 office in the Pentagon.

Baldy received his commission from the Citadel, Charleston, S.C., in 1979. He also graduated from the Infantry Officer Basic Course, Infantry Officer Advanced Course, the Combined Arms and Services Staff School, Command and General Staff College, the National War College, as well as Airborne, Air Assault and Ranger School.

During his 23 years of service, Baldy has earned the Legion of Merit, the Meritorious Service Medal, the Army Commendation Medal, the National Defense Service Ribbon and the Expert Infantryman's Badge.

Senior leaders seek post's support

Fort Benning leads way in change

Angela Sachitano
Special to the Bayonet©

Another brick in the wall of Army Transformation has been laid, as the second out of six brigades designated for transformation is closer to operating the Stryker vehicle.

Approximately 100 senior leaders of the 1st Brigade, 25th Infantry Division out of Fort Lewis, Wash., will be looking to Fort Benning for doctrine support this week, as the brigade takes another step in the transformation to a full-fledged Stryker unit.

The transformation brigade is converging on post, meeting with military intelligence, artillery, armor, logistics and engineer experts from installations around the nation.

"We welcome you, and we want to do all we can to make the transformation a success," said Maj. Gen. Paul D. Eaton, commanding general, to leaders of the brigade during the Senior Leaders Course July 25. "The Stryker brigade is more than the vehicle. It's about the people and the components behind the vehicle. We need your feedback. If you don't like something, tell us."

There are several doctrinal issues Fort Benning is not convinced are right just yet, and the two weeks the transformation brigade is here will be a learning process for all involved, Eaton said.

"We are taking the best of heavy infantry and light infantry and combining it to be a more responsive, agile and flexible fighting unit," said Col. Bob Brown, commander of the brigade. "Our purpose while we are here is to learn how to fight and train this new organization."

The brigade is the second brigade to begin the process of transforming to a Stryker brigade, but the first light-infantry brigade to convert. 3rd Brigade, 2nd Infantry Division, also out of Fort Lewis, was the first to transform two years ago. Four more brigades will eventually make the transformation, a process that takes several years to complete.

"We will eventually have 300 Strykers in this brigade, and we are fielding 9,000 pieces of equipment," Brown said. "We will also be taking advantage of four unmanned aerial vehicles. This is a new way to fight dominant maneuver."

The brigade is six months into the process and looking to deploy by spring of 2004.

It's courses like the one at Fort Benning this week that quickly move the transformation brigade in that direction, Brown said.

"We are looking to these experts during our time here to shed light on the Stryker and all of its capabilities," Brown said. "We will then take this information back and train the soldiers in our brigade."

Since its introduction last year, the Stryker has set the standard for a new way of fighting in the Army, he said. Once utilized, the vehicle will be able to move 60 miles per hour, identify enemies, all the while staying linked to other Strykers during battle. Several units will use the Stryker including medics carrying soldiers and mortar units.

"The last time the Army went through something like this was the air-land battle concept in the 70's and 80's," Brown said. "That concept led the Army through Desert Storm. One can only imagine where the Stryker will take us now."

The brigade will be looking to Columbus as an example of a possible environment of city warfare while here. By learning the details of the city, leaders can access just how swiftly the Stryker can maneuver in and out of urban environments if need be.

"We have a lot to accomplish in the time we are here," Brown said. "This is a dream for all leaders to be on the cutting edge of new technology with the full support of everyone. We will have elevated our way of thinking after we leave here."

Four N.C. soldiers kill wives

Command investigates cause of violence

Spc. Kyle J. Cosner
U.S. Army Special Operations Command Public Affairs

FORT BRAGG, N.C. — Fort Bragg and U.S. Army Special Operations Command officials responded to reporters' questions about the killing of four military wives by their active-duty husbands in a span of less than six weeks during a press conference July 26.

Three of the four accused soldiers had returned from deployments in Afghanistan within the last six months.

Despite suggestions from the media that the killings may have been related to those deployments, Col. Tad Davis, Fort Bragg's garrison commander, told a roomful of reporters that the incidents probably related more to the soldiers' preexisting marital problems than to their deployments in support of Operation Enduring Freedom.

"That's one of the factors that we'll look at during our investigation into each one of these cases, but also what was the relationship, what was going on in that family, what was going on in that household — and then look at all those issues together to see what we can put together as a total picture of what was going on in that family," Davis said.

Davis discounted Afghanistan as a direct factor in the killings, pointing out that duty there was no more stressful than deployments to other theaters.

"We've got several thousand soldiers deployed right now in 30 or more countries around the world," he said. "In many cases, those soldiers are in a stressful, if not more stressful environment, than these soldiers might have been in Afghanistan."

Davis also cautioned against drawing too many connections between the four incidents.

"We've got to judge each and every one of these cases on its own merit and then see what we come up with in the end," he said.

Across post U.S. Army Special Operations Command, Maj. Gary Kolb, the command's public affairs officer, echoed Davis' comments. Three of the accused soldiers belonged to USASOC units.

"I think each case has to be taken differently," Kolb said. "To pinpoint one thing like the war in Afghanistan and say that's the cause is pretty hard to do. Each (case) needs to be looked at individually."

Davis said that although military families are subject to the same problems as civilian families, these incidents were a surprise, as there hadn't been a domestic-related homicide at Fort Bragg in two years.

"In many respects, what we've found is that some (military) families do have problems," Davis said. "But ... we are shocked and extremely surprised with the recent occurrences, and our hearts go out to each and every one of the families, to include the children in particular.

"In whatever way we can, we try to have programs available for (families experiencing problems) — everything from marriage counseling to marriage enrichment programs," Davis continued. "At the same time, we stress to each and every one of our leaders at every level to make sure that they're aware of the circumstances among the soldiers, especially those that are married."

However, such resources can't do much good if soldiers don't take advantage of them, according to Henry Berry, Fort Bragg's family advocacy program manager.

"It's one thing to know that an individual is experiencing a problem — it affords you the opportunity to render assistance," Berry said. "If you don't know, your hands are tied. Then, when a serious incident does take place, you go on a guilt trip. Should we have known? What could we have done? To be absolutely honest ... (these incidents) are mind-boggling ... I was completely caught off guard.

"We're going to look at these cases," Berry continued. "We have to identify what took place to prevent them. It could mean deleting programs, but it will probably mean adding on to our programs."

Whether the accused soldiers came forward for counseling is under investigation, Davis said.

He also said that despite his post's attempts to prevent domestic disputes within military families, sometimes problems could slip through the cracks — with tragic results.

"(These cases have) had a great deal of impact upon our soldiers, their families and our entire community," Davis said. "We are surprised and saddened by the unusual number of deaths, and are concerned about the children that are left behind. Domestic violence is never a pleasant issue, and I can assure you that we take our responsibilities as leaders very seriously."

"We want to make sure that the families back here at Fort Bragg are taken care of," he said. "Stress is something we face on a daily basis...when you add on top of that military life, it increases the stress tremendously, and when you add on top of that the fact that loved ones might be moving into harm's way and danger, that also increases the amount of stress on our families."

Protect yourself from identity theft

Safeguard your military information

Melissa House
Special to the Bayonet©

A recent Army Times article may have left many military veterans concerned about the security of personal information contained in their service records.

As recently as 1999, veterans were advised to file their certificate of release or discharge from active duty, the DD214, with their local courthouse, a practice in effect since the end of World War II. Many of these recorded documents have been used through the years to replace lost or destroyed copies, determine eligibility for benefits, and, in some cases, to recreate the information in entire service records.

But most recently, these documents have been used for the increasingly frequent crime of identity theft. State court system records are not generally protected by any system similar to the Privacy Act used to protect an individual's personal information within the Department of Defense.

Georgia veterans may rest a bit easier, thanks to Governor Roy Barnes. On May 13, he signed an amendment to the Official Code of Georgia making it unlawful to disclose information from military service records or issue copies of those records for a period of 50 years after filing. However, veterans, their next-of kin, and their attorneys may examine the records or receive copies after presenting proper identification.

Records are not to be reproduced or used for commercial or speculative purposes.

Violations of the amended code constitute a misdemeanor, punishable by a fine of up to $5,000.

While personal information may be obtained by other methods, the state of Georgia has taken the necessary steps to help ensure that your DD214 is protected.

Friede McDonald, chief of the Personnel Processing Center on post which oversees retirement services and separations, advises veterans to remain cautious. The Georgia amendment is not a guaranteed fix.

"The DD214 is protected," McDonald said, but the law does not cover the DD215, which makes corrections to the original record. "We're also not sure what will happen at the end of the 50 year period."

A soldier separating from the service at age 20 will be 70 when the information can be released. At that point in time, the individual may need to think about protecting things like retirement assets.

In addition to safeguarding the DD214, veterans should also take steps to protect their information from other sources, such as:

• Remove your Social Security Numbers from checks, driver's licenses, and other forms of identification,

• Do not carry Social Security cards in wallets,

• Shred all financial statements,

• Check financial statements against receipts monthly for accuracy,

• Use secure Internet Web sites for purchases,

• Close unused credit and bank accounts, destroy old credit cards, and shred credit card offers,

• Drop credit card payments in secure mailboxes,

• Order credit report yearly.

Resolving identity theft can be a lengthy and frustrating process. Capt. David Anglin, senior trial counsel with the Staff Judge Advocate. There was a court martial last year involving stolen mail. The individual was using credit card applications to open fraudulent accounts.

The most common identity theft that Anglin has seen involves stolen "starter checks" not pre-printed with any information. On the more sophisticated side, individuals used a flight manifest then went to the Identification Card section and obtained new cards with the fraudulent information at Fort Bliss in 2000.

"They received thousands of dollars in goods," Anglin said.

Four individuals were charged and went to trial.

Anglin said he encourages soldiers and veterans to maintain their finances and financial records.

look CLOSER look look look

To protect your identity from theft: When people find they are a victim of ID theft they should:

- Contact the fraud departments of the three credit bureaus
- Contact creditors for the fraudulent accounts, and then follow their procedures for written notification
- File a police report, and keep a copy of the report as proof.

They "really need to look at their credit card statements," he said, and he has personal experience to back it up. While Anglin was not a victim of identity theft, he did notice a charge on his credit card for a service he did not request.

"The better credit card companies will notify you if they see charges that appear out of the ordinary, and you need to report any problems quickly so they can be resolved," he said.

If people find they have been the victim of identity theft, they should act immediately and:

• Contact the fraud departments of the three credit bureaus. Request that a fraud alert be placed on your file and order copies of your credit reports. Copies are provided free to victims,

• Contact creditors for the fraudulent accounts, and then follow their procedures for written notification,

• File a police report. Keep a copy of the report as proof.

Several legislative acts are in place to help victims. The Fair Credit Reporting Act established procedures for correcting mistakes regarding credit. The Truth in Lending Act limits liability for unauthorized credit card charges, while the Electronic Funds Transfer Act covers automated teller and debit transactions. But the best defense against identity theft is a good offense, Anglin said. People should take steps to protect their personal information now.

Soldiers to receive 40 points for BNCOC

Move to help clerks cut errors, add efficiency

Staff Sgt. Marcia Triggs
Army News Service

WASHINGTON — Soldiers who successfully complete the Basic Noncommissioned Officer Course will be awarded 40 promotion points beginning Aug. 1.

Soldiers will no longer receive four promotion points per BNCOC-course week. This change will lessen administrative mistakes and level the playing field for BNCOC graduates with similar military occupational specialties, personnel officials said.

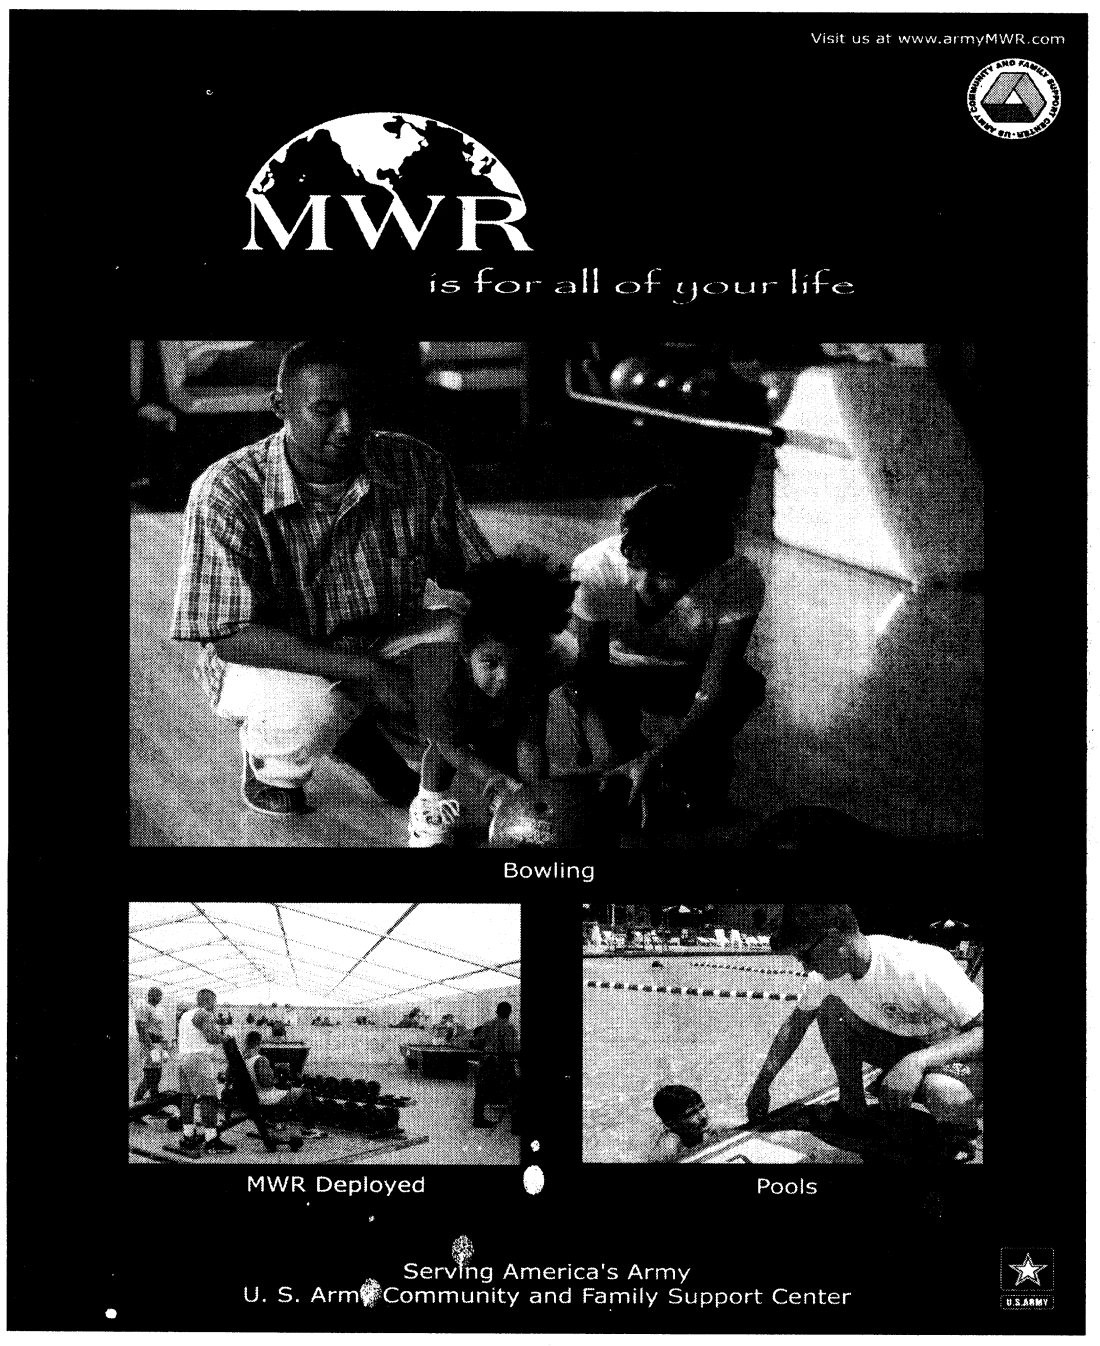
"Clerks will no longer have to do the math," said Sgt. Major Louisa Scott, the chief of Enlisted Promotions, Total U.S. Army Personnel Command.

Under the current system, when soldiers complete both phases of BNCOC — common core and military occupational specialty specific — they submit two Department of the Army 1059 forms to their Personnel Support Branch for points, Scott said.

Then the PSB clerk decides on their own how many points a soldier gets, Scott said. For example, if phase one is five weeks and three days and phase two is two weeks and two days one clerk may give 32 points for eight weeks, but another clerk may give 28 points for seven weeks. By implementing a 40-point standard there's no room for interpretation, Scott said. Some soldiers may have the perception that they are going to lose points because their particular BNCOC is longer than 10 weeks, said Sgt. Major Gerald Purcell, personnel policy integrator with the Army's G1.

"That's not true. The point system will be applicable to every soldier in the MOS, and the cut-off score will reflect that," he said.

Soldiers will still be competing against others in their MOS, and everyone in that MOS will have 40 points, Scott said.



The soldiers most greatly affected are those who are in MOSs that have merged, such as some in the medical field, and those that are planning to merge under the implementation of ADS XXI initiatives, which was designed to consolidate MOSs with similar functions, Purcell said.

Last year several medical skills were combined under the umbrella 91W. After the merge, some soldiers had promotion points based on a 12-week BNCOC course while others had points based on an eight-week course. Other potential merges include personnel administrative specialists (75B) and personnel services specialists (75H) who would be renamed as 42A.

Ranger regiment gets ninth top NCO

Father of four praises God, family, soldiers

Melissa House
Special to the Bayonet©

The former command sergeant major of 2nd Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment, Fort Lewis, Wash., accepted responsibility from long-term-ranger Command Sgt. Maj. Walter Rakow at the Ranger Memorial July 25.

Command Sgt. Maj. Hugh Roberts became only the ninth top NCO in the history of the 75th Ranger Regiment.

Just before the ceremony, Rakow was honored for nearly 20 years of service to the regiment. Through his career, he served in each of the three battalions and in the regimental headquarters. Rakow was awarded the Legion of Merit for his service from April 2000 to July 2002. He was also inducted into the Order of Saint Maurice. Rakow's wife, Laura, was also honored, receiving the Outstanding Civilian Service Medal and the Shield of Sparta as a heroine of the infantry for her 15 years of volunteer service to unit families.

Col. Joseph Votel, the regimental commander, praised Rakow as an "accomplished leader and proficient trainer" who was always "certain of his azimuth." Votel said Rakow impacted numerous rangers, many of whom would carry a favorite "Rakow story" with them.

Rakow spoke about the three pillars of his success; his religion, his family and the rangers. Rakow's four children, Kathryn, Aaron, Nathan and Jacob were all present for the ceremony and heard their father's words of thanks.

His farewell speech was both humorous and serious.

"The lifeblood of the Rangers are the young guys," he said. "It's not the briefings or the badges — it's the boys that matter."

He recalled a time when a ranger platoon was lucky to have 30 soldiers in a time when he said being a ranger wasn't cool. The men he led will remember Rakow's charisma as a leader and his dedication to the soldiers, said Cpl. Shane Misner.

Rakow was key to the NCO leadership in the regiment, he said.

> "The lifeblood of the Rangers are the young guys. It's not the briefings or the badges — it's the boys that matter."
> Command Sgt. Maj. Walter Rakow
> eigth top NCO for 75th Ranger Regiment

Pfc. Richard Sharp echoed that sentiment.

"Command Sergeant Major Rakow showed us the pinnacle of NCO leadership and what we can attain."

Although Rakow's next assignment will be command sergeant major of 2nd Brigade, 85th Training Support Brigade, at Fort McCoy, Wis., he assured the crowd that he would always be a ranger in his heart and a ranger in his mind.

Votel said that Roberts' "exceptional reputation and quiet, certain confidence" made him the right leader for the job, and he charged Roberts with helping lead the regiment to reach the next level of success.

"The strength and reputation of a unit is borne on the backs of its noncommissioned officers," Votel said.

As a result, the regiment and the 2nd Brigade, 85th TSB, will be in good hands, he said.

U.S. Joint Forces exercise to measure capabilities

Collaboration key focus of operation

Master Sgt. Debra Bingham
4th Infantry Division Public Affairs

SUFFOLK, Va. — There's an experiment underway at the U.S. Joint Forces Command at Suffolk, Va., and dozens of locations around the country, but you won't find any test tubes or beakers in this "laboratory."

The experiment, Millennium Challenge 2002, is designed to simulate a realistic battlefield in the year 2007. Part of a Department of Defense-wide transformation process, MC02 will explore new methods of planning, organizing and fighting in a joint service environment, officials said.

The MC02 experiment is taking place at 17 simulation sites and nine live sites across the country.

It's the largest joint military experiment and exercise of its kind in history, with more than 13,500 military and civilian personnel participating. MC02 runs July 24-Aug 15.

Lt. Gen. B.B. Bell, Commanding General of III Corps and Fort Hood, is wearing a different hat during MC02. He's serving as the commander of the Joint Task Force Headquarters. About 200 soldiers from Fort Hood, Texas, worked with Bell at Suffolk prior to the exercise start for a final planning and rehearsal exercise called Spiral 3.

Bell said he is excited about the role Fort Hood soldiers are playing in helping the U.S. Joint Forces Command and Department of Defense explore innovative concepts for battle and command and control.

"We're forward thinking and forward looking. We're trying to harness the power of information and information sphere technologies to better prepare the U.S. Joint Forces for war about five years from now," he said.

During Spiral 3, held the first two weeks in June, military members from all service branches worked together, planning and becoming familiar with the computer-based "tools" linked to the simulation.

One of the experiment's objectives is obtaining information superiority over an adversary. The goal is to rapidly access, share and process information in order to develop plans and execute them — almost simultaneously. The computer-based tools make that possible.

During the experiment, operators can quickly retrieve information from military and governmental agencies, as well as economic and academic sources.

"These tools give us instant communication, instant collaboration and enormous capability to retrieve data to help us in our decision making process," Bell said.

Computer tools also enable commanders and staff to simultaneously talk with each other.

Hundreds of people can be brought together in a virtual auditorium for an interactive meeting, without the "attendees" leaving their workspaces. Bell said the aim is to tap into the knowledge base of people "sitting" in the auditorium.

"It's quite probable that some great thinker, one who is normally buried in an office somewhere, will have an idea or concept or know something about the enemy that is so important to us that we'll be able to grab it and bring it into our thinking immediately," Bell said.

Spiral 3 gave participants a chance to master computer tools and allowed them to leap into the future. Bell said mastering the computer skills was not as difficult as changing traditional military decision-making mindsets and finding new approaches and answers to problems.

"We've got to reconfigure ourselves, both in terms of the way we would perceive fighting today and project ourselves to the way the Joint Forces Command believes we would be able to fight five years from now," Bell said.

Part of that new way of thinking is being explored in a concept called Rapid Decisive Operations.

RDO brings a vast knowledge base, command and control elements and operations together to bring about a desired effect on an adversary.

Bell said it means moving away from traditional, time-consuming sequential operations, where plans are issued from the top and trickle down to subordinate levels, to a faster, collaborative approach. By using technology to communicate, plans and combat operations can be developed simultaneously.

"We can bring our thinking together very, very rapidly and conduct operations quickly and decisively," Bell said.

The collaborative process includes thinking about the kind of effect or impact planners want to have on an adversary, a concept called Effects Based Operations.

"What we're learning in this process is a better way to look at the enemy, in terms of what he is capable of doing, and what kind of effect we want to achieve with regard to the enemy," Bell said.

The effect could be a military action, or it could be economic, information or diplomatic one, he said.. Although MCO2 is an experiment, it is expected to provide insight into how to transform the military to meet future challenges.

Interim armored vehicle tested in DoD experiment

Pvt. Sara Wood
13th Public Affairs Detachment

FORT IRWIN, Calif. — Demonstrating increased joint strategic deployment ability, four C-17 aircraft carrying eight Stryker Infantry Carrier vehicles and 75 soldiers from Fort Lewis, Wash., landed at Southern California Logistics Airport in Victorville, Calif., July 25.

The Strykers and soldiers came from 5th Battalion, 20th Infantry Regiment, 3rd Brigade, 2nd Infantry Division — part of a Stryker Brigade Combat Team.

The role of the SBCT during the Army Transformation Experiment 2002 is to initiate the first Stryker involvement at the National Training Center on an experimental basis, said Warrant Officer Mark A. Miller, brigade mobility officer for the SBCT.

ATEx02 is part of the Millennium Challenge 2002 exercise that is designed to test military transformation concepts across the Department of Defense. The Stryker, the Army's new eight-wheeled, interim armored vehicle, is the first major vehicle to be fielded into the Army in 14 years.

"We're going to put the vehicle through its paces and see what it can do," said Sgt. John Bartlett, vehicle commander with 5th Bn., 20th Inf. Regt.

The SBCT will demonstrate its capabilities in a live and simulated training environment during ATEx02.

The SBCT is able to deploy from the U.S. to any theater within days, Bartlett said.

"It will facilitate a quick reactionary force to go into any hostile area or developing theater and serve as a deterrent," Miller said.

Because the Stryker has wheels instead of tracks, Miller said, it is easier to transport and load on and off vehicles and aircraft.

"It took us minutes to off-load with soldiers," Miller said. "That means that within minutes, we can have a lethal force rolling down the road."

The Stryker is an important part of the Army transformation because of its rapid, strategic deployability and mobility, Miller said.

"It will be a vital piece of equipment in the future Army," he said.

Miller said he expects the Stryker will perform well at ATEx02 and will demonstrate the lethality of the SBCT.

FAST classes

Functional Academic Skills Training is a review of basic skills in math and reading geared toward improving a soldier's general technical score. The skills learned are applicable to the individual's military duties. The remaining class is scheduled for Aug. 12-Sept. 3.

The class will be held in Building 9004 on Kelley Hill. There will be a morning class (8:30 a.m. to 12:15 p.m.) and an afternoon class (1 p.m. to 4:45 p.m.). A three-hour pretest is mandatory for enrollment and must be completed before the test begins. The pretest is administered daily on a walk-in basis, promptly at 1 p.m. in Building 9004. Testing is also available at 8:30 a.m. by appointment only.

For more information, call Tilden Robinson at 544-3689.

Command Awards Ceremony

Fort Benning will conduct a Command Awards Ceremony at 3 p.m. Aug. 9 at the Follow Me statue at Infantry Hall.

The pre-ceremony command brief for awardees and their guests is scheduled for 2 p.m. that day.

For more information, call 545-1132.

NCO, Soldiers of Quarter

The NCO, Soldier of the Quarter Awards Luncheon is at 11:30 Aug. 9 at the Main NCO Club. See your command sergeant major or 1st sergeant no later than July 24 for tickets.

For more information, call 545-1500.

Termination of microfiche

Effective Aug. 15, Officer Records Branch will no longer be sending official military personnel files microfiche to individual officers in the field. Officers will need to view their OMPFs through Army Knowledge Online.

The link is https://ompf.hoffman. army.mil. For more information, e-mail offrcds@hoffman.army.mil.

Women's Equality Day

The U.S. Army Infantry Center Equal Opportunity Office will present a Women's Equality Day Luncheon from 11:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. Aug. 26 at the Officers' Club.

The theme will be "Living the Legacy of Women's Rights Today" and the guest speaker will be Col. Gale Pollock, Martin Army Community Hospital commander.

Cost is $7.50.

See your EO advisor for tickets or call the EO office at 545-6665.

College registration

For fall 2002, Columbus State University and Chattahoochee Valley Community College students should see a counselor at the Education Center prior registering at the college. This prevents problems with the term enrollments and additional drop fees.

For more information, call 545-1436.

Sergeant Major Board

The Department of the Army selection board to consider soldiers for the promotion to sergeant major will be Oct. 1.

Zones of consideration are all master sergeants and first sergeants with a date of rank of Sept. 30, 2000 and earlier with a basic active service date between Oct. 1, 1977 and Oct. 1, 1992. Date of birth is no earlier than Oct. 1, 1951.

Due to the implementation of stop loss, soldiers normally ineligible due to retention control point — BASD is earlier than Oct. 1, 1977 — in a primary military occupational specialty affected by stop loss will be considered eligible.

Soldiers must have a DA photo. To schedule an appointment, call 545-1381.

For more information, call 545-8861 or 545-5640.

Army accepting law school applications

2nd Lt. through Capt. eligible

Office of the Judge Advocate General

WASHINGTON — The Army is now accepting applications to fund law school for eligible lieutenants and captains.

Under the Funded Legal Education Program, up to 15 active-duty commissioned officers may be able to attend law school in the fall of 2003.

The program is open to officers in the grades of second lieutenant through captain. The Judge Advocate General will accept applications from Aug. 1 through Nov. 1.

"The Funded Legal Education Program is an outstanding opportunity for officers interested in becoming lawyers and judge advocates to attend law school fully funded by the Army," said Lt. Col. Laurel Wilkerson, deputy Staff Judge Advocate at Fort Benning. "Officers continue to draw their pay while attending school. It's a great deal."

Applicants must have at least two but not more than six years of total active federal service when training begins, officials said. Interested officers should register immediately for the next Law School Admission Test, commonly called LSAT.

Those eligible should review Chapter 14, AR 27-1 (The JAG's FLEP), officials said. Those interested can contact their local staff judge advocate for further information.

Applicants should send their request through command channels, to include their branch manager at Personnel Command. Copies of the applications should be forwarded to: The Office of The JAG, ATTN: DAJA-PT (FLEP), 1777 North Kent Street, Rosslyn, Va. 22209-2194.

Sand Hill soldiers take break

Approximately 2,600 Sand Hill soldiers took a breather from the pushups and "front, back, go's" that often accompany basic training to attend Morale, Welfare and Recreation's second concert at Weatherby Field Saturday night.

"Before they joined, all of these soldiers saw different aspects of the Army life, and one of them was the USO experience," said Col. Joe Torres, garrison commander. "We wanted to give the soldiers a taste of that tonight and let them know they are a part of a band of brothers."

The concert, which featured a cover band called Kung Pow and food and drinks most soldiers had not tasted for a while, went well, said Al Gelineau, acting director of Community Activities.

"This gives them a big boost to their morale," Gelineau said. "This is what MWR is all about."

Soldiers agreed the night offered them a needed break, said Pvt. Nathan Morales, 1st Battalion, 38th Infantry Regiment, whose company is in its eighth week of training.

"We all had a wonderful time," the Devol, Okla., native said. "We had a chance to think about how much we've accomplished. We're almost done, and tonight gave us another boost to finish training."

Many soldiers, who lined the barrier that separated them from the stage, seemed to enjoy the band and had no trouble laying aside their inhibitions. They screamed, raised their hands and interacted with Kung Pow's female lead singer for two hours.

"The intent was to give the soldiers a relief from the stress of training, and it did," said Staff Sgt. Josef Morris, headquarters, Infantry Training Brigade. "It seemed to be well organized and ran smoothly."

He was impressed with the speed at which the large number of soldiers went through the concession lines, he said.

Pfc. Nathan Beeks and Pvt. Paul Enerson, both from 1st Battalion, 19th Infantry Regiment, went to the first concert while at 30th Adjutant General.

"It's all about (Rest and Relaxation)," said Beeks, from Huntington, Ind. "Both events were awesome — especially the bands."

The concert motivated members of their company, who graduate today, Enerson said.

"It shows how strong the Army is," the Bloomington, Ill., native said. "It makes you feel appreciated. Tonight showed that we matter. Every soldier here is a link in the chain."

DCA is working on plans for additional concerts for Sand Hill soldiers at the field, Gelineau said.

He also envisions special events next year for all post residents to attend, and, possibly, the tri-community area.

Creed's author preaches integrity

Vietnam veteran teaches NCOs leadership

Bridgett Siter
Special to the Bayonet©

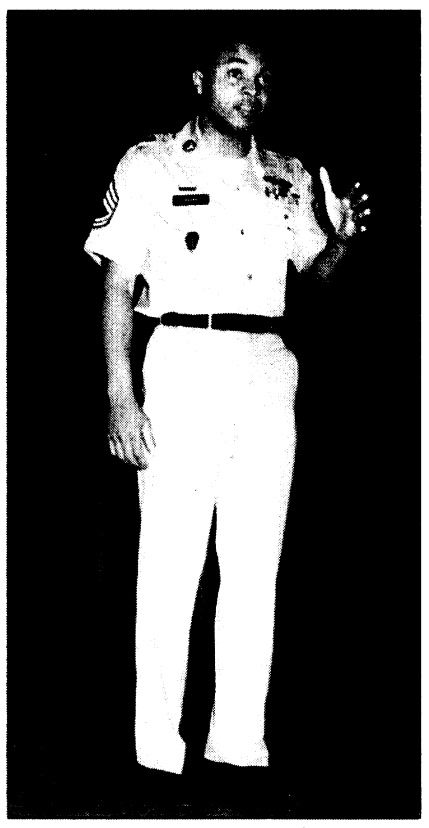
No man is more professional than I. I am a noncommissioned officer, a leader of men.

— from the Creed of the Infantry Noncommissioned Officer, 1973

Nearly 30 years after penning those words, retired Master Sgt. Jimmie Jakes, Sr., still has a heart for the Army's enlisted leaders. A former chief of the Infantry's Leadership Course, Jakes is once again instructing NCOs on the finer points of effective leadership. And it starts with integrity, he said.

"That's where it begins and ends," said Jakes, who spoke to a class from Fort Benning's Basic Noncommissioned Officers Academy July 24. "The NCO, he's the backbone of the Army. His job may be different from that of an officer, but he's no less than anyone else if he has what it takes to be an effective leader. That's integrity."

Jakes retired from the Army in 1982 after more than 20 years in service, including tours in Korea and Vietnam, where, as a squad leader with the 7th Cavalry, he was severely wounded during the bloody battle at Landing Zone X-ray in the Ia Drang Valley.



When Jake's wounds threatened to cut short his infantry career, he accepted a position on the first NCO committee to help develop the curricula for BNCOC, ANCOC and PLDC in 1971. An emphasis on strong moral character was the core of those courses, Jakes said, and it's still the foundation of strong leadership in today's Army.

"Nothing's changed. Where the rubber meets the road, where the sergeant has control of his troops, he still has all he needs to lead and to shape good soldiers," Jakes said. "When a private looks an E5 in the eye, he still sees a sergeant, a leader, and he's depending on that sergeant to instruct and lead with integrity."

An effective leader leads by example, Jakes said, striking a delicate balance between familiarity and distance with his soldiers.

"Those stripes give you authority. They don't give you respect. That has to be earned," he said. "And you earn it by walking a very fine line. They're your troops, but you can't be 'one of the guys.' You have to set yourself apart and be a leader.

"On the other hand, as an NCO, you have to be approachable. You can't be too aloof. You're the one they look to to set the example, and you can't do that from a distance. They need to see you, see you every day. You should be the first to get up and the last to go to bed. You should be the last in the chow line. That's how you lead. That's how you earn their respect."

Sgt. 1st Class Jimmy Jakes at 30.

Jakes cautioned against equating respect with affection.

"I'm not talking about liking or loving you. Maybe that'll come later. Maybe it won't," he said. "They may never like you, but if they respect you, they'll do anything for you."

"Anything," he reiterated, recalling how, in 1964, many 7th Cavalry soldiers didn't like their new commander, then Lt. Col. Harold Moore, whose later account of the Ia Drang battle became the basis for the movie We Were Soldiers, released earlier this year.

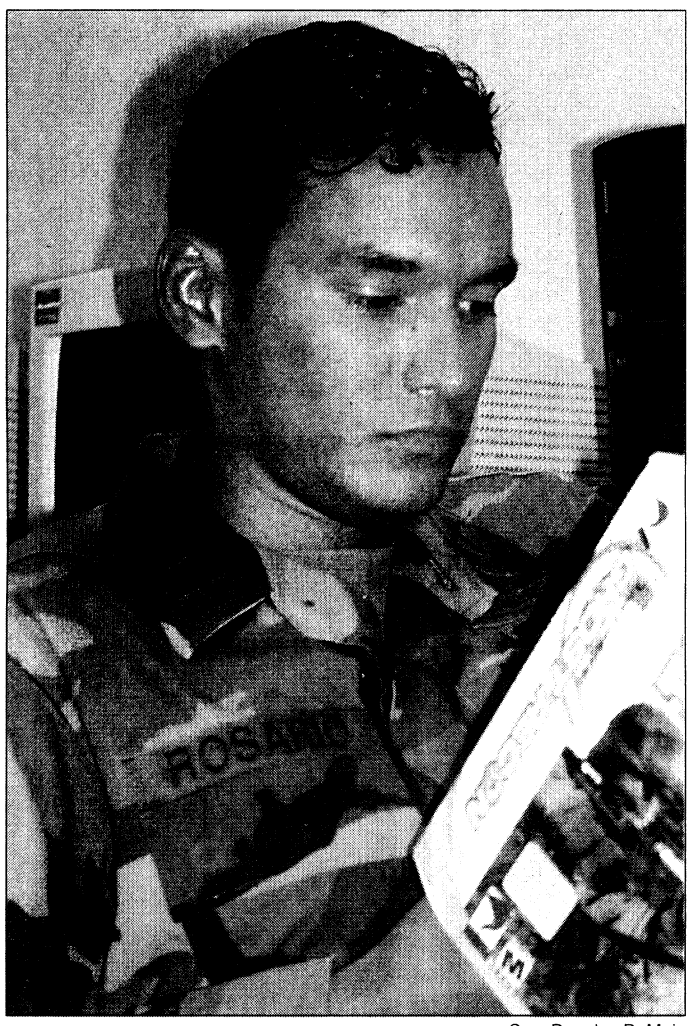
"But it didn't take him long to earn their respect, because he didn't ask anything of them he wasn't willing to do, and by the time we went (to Vietnam) we'd've done anything — anything — he asked us to. We respected him first, but we came to love him because he was a man of integrity."

Jakes believes his experience in Vietnam was the catalyst for his second career as a preacher. He served as pastor of the AME church in Dothan, Ala., for 11 years, before his old battle wounds forced him into retirement.

"I was brought up in church, but I'm convinced Landing Zone X-Ray was the cause of my going into the ministry," the Phenix City native said. "When I was wounded, I was laying there looking up, and it came to me. I said, 'God, if you'll get me outta here alive, I'll do anything for you, even preach.' That was 1965. I went into the ministry in 1987. It took me a while, but I kept my promise."



Jakes kept his promise to serve God in mind, even as he helped develop the courses that would shape Army leaders for years to come.

"You might not talk about God in the classroom, but I've always said everything good — every principle the Army is built on — can be found in the Bible," he said. "When you open the leadership manual, and read all about the principles of effective leadership — integrity, honesty, loyalty .... You can look in the Holy Bible and find those same traits. The Army's not teaching anything new."

A father of four and a grandfather "of a whole bunch," Jakes plans to spend his retirement years writing and speaking.

He's working on two books, one about his experience in Vietnam and subsequent call to the ministry. And he plans to continue speaking to NCOs, living the last lines he wrote for the creed that set the standard for NCOs Armywide — "I will not forget, nor will I allow my comrades to forget, that we are professionals, noncommissioned officers, leaders of men!"

Simulation trains course captains

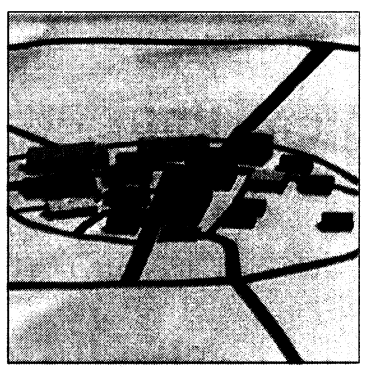
Spc. Douglas DeMaio
Bayonet staff

Marking a new era of training for the Army, the Infantry Captains Career Course is embarking on simulation training for company commanders in military operations in urbanized terrain.

The course will use a simulation game of McKenna MOUT site to train commanders, said Capt. Brent Cummings, small group instructor for the course.

The game, called "Full Spectrum Command," is about 40 percent complete in its design phase, said Rob Sears, project leader from Legless Productions.

"This is the first time a game is being designed and developed for the U.S. Army," Sears said. "I think we're really just scratching the surface with this."



With the game to come out in six months, graduates of the course are providing feedback to the joint venture team of the Simulation, Training and Information Command of the U.S. Army, the Institute for Creative Technologies, Quicksilver Software, and Legless Productions to fix any major problems before the game is finalized.

The game will give commanders a series of scenarios in three phases. In the initial phase, a commander develops tactical plans and strategically places his company's three platoons into a position that will be most effective for the mission.

"They'll have a chance to test their planning skills against the computer," Cummings said. "Commanders can also play against one another."

The second phase, implementation, sends soldiers out to execute the mission, Cummings said. Artificial intelligence is incorporated into the game and adds a chaotic aspect to depict the realities of war.

"(The game's) purpose is to

measure a company commander's ability to be adaptive on the battlefield," Cummings said. "(Chaos) works on their stress levels and abilities to make decisions under pressure."

The artificial intelligence adds in human dynamics, Cummings said. For instance, an order given by the commander could contradict the previous order, and the soldier may not try to accomplish anything. So during the after action review in the third phase, the game addresses these situations.

"I think it has a lot of potential to be a valuable tool for company commanders," said Capt. Andre Takacs, course graduate. "It uses commercial logic that many of us are used to."

The game is run from a CD-ROM on a personal computer, which allows for more repetition, Cummings said. It provides excellent understanding and lifelike situations in the classroom, helps build commanders experience and increases cognitive processes for making logical decisions on the battlefield.

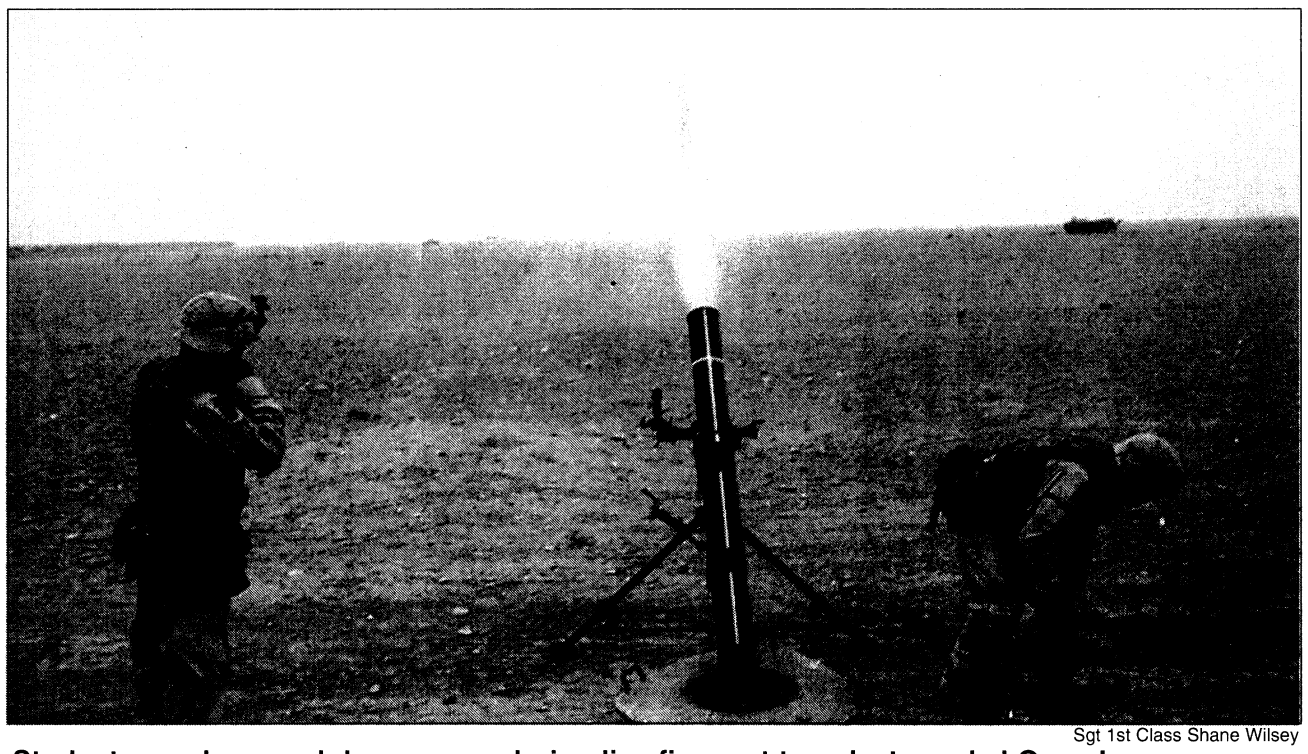
"I think the computer training is great," Takacs said. "However, the simulations will supplement training. It will not take place of training in the field."

"Full Spectrum Command" is merging new technology, the commercial game industry and the Infantry School together to develop a tool which will facillitate cognitive development and adaptive thinking for future company commanders, Cummings said.

"It's exciting," he said.

Post soldiers enhance fire power in Afghanistan

120mm mortars aid in war, effectivness



Pfc. Brian Trapp
Bayonet staff

Soldiers fighting the war on terrorism in Afghanistan needed more fire power, so they called Fort Benning's mortar instructor team to bring over and certify them on 120mm mortar systems to help them "reach out and touch the enemy."

The seven person training team went to Afghanistan to enhance fire support for Operation Anaconda since soldiers there at that time didn't have field artillery at their disposal. The team was attached to 3rd Brigade, 101st Air Assault, Fort Campbell, Ky. They were tasked to train soldiers from three battalions with 187th Infantry Regiment, Fort Campbell, Ky.

"We were really well received," said Sgt. 1st Class Shane Wilsey, mortar instructor. "Everyone was highly motivated, and the chain of command was very involved. They all wanted the equipment faster than we could get it there"

"Everyone was really enthusiastic about getting certified right away. We arrived at 4 a.m. after an all day flight, and they wanted us to start training at 7 a.m. the same day."

Sgt 1st Class Shane Wilsey
Students send a round down range during live fire next to a destroyed al Quaeda camp.

The chain of command requested the 120mm mortar system for its increased range and fire power over the 61mm and 80mm mortar systems.

As soon as the team arrived at Baughman airport, Afghanistan, they were told they had to be very flexible, Wilsey said. The team was warned, but they didn't expect, to follow the troops to Kandahar to finish the classes.

"You could feel the tension there," said Edward Baldwin, team chief instructor. "I spent 22 years in the military and never saw combat. Then I got the chance to go to Afghanistan as a civilian doing what I love training soldiers. It was a great experience."

The team spent 30 days in Afghanistan to certify three classes in their unique setting.

"Outside the compound, you could see camels walking through the mine fields," Wilsey said. "We were hoping to see one explode, but it never happened, I guess they knew where all mines were."

Although not triggered by wandering camels, every few hours the team would hear the mine sweepers set off a mine adding a reminder to the seriousness of their environment and mission. The five-day classes certified the key personnel in the battalion using the trainer concept, so those soldiers could take the information back to their unit to train others.

But to complete the certification, the soldiers and the team had to leave the safety of Kandahar to conduct a live-fire exercise, which was done next to rubble that used to be an al Quaeda training camp.

"There was an eerie feeling out there," Baldwin said. "Once we left post to go to the firing site, it was lock and load. There were still people living out there, watching us go by, and we were observing them, too. You couldn't tell who was on your side and who wasn't. We were told not to take anything for granted in an area where anything can happen."

The live fire went well, Wilsey said. The soldiers felt comfortable with the system during the exercise. The group targeted destroyed tanks near the training site out in the barren vista of the Afghan desert.

It was great to be more directly involved with the soldiers in Operation Anaconda and help them blow away the enemy, he said.

Soldiers learn to be NCOs at PLDC

NCOA school teaches future leaders

Pfc. Chris Stephens
Bayonet staff

The war on terrorism has taken many soldiers through the hot and mountainous terrain of Afghanistan. Battles our country may fight down the road could end up in another desert region or a jungle region.

So how do we prepare the leaders of soldiers to accomplish their mission and get their soldiers back safely?

One way is the Primary Leadership Development Course, a big stepping stone for soldiers' careers.

"At PLDC, we reinforce the basic common tasks," said Sgt. 1st Class David Jorge, small group leader. "There are certain tasks a leader has to know to accomplish every mission, and here we reiterate what they need to know."

Pfc. Chris Stephens

Sgt. Phillip Maxwell shoots an azimuth at his next point during PLDC land navigation training. Maxwell earned a perfect score on his test.

A big thing soldiers need to know is how to patrol, he said. When deployed to Bosnia or Kosovo, it's not just the infantry that does the patrols; everyone does them.

After finishing land navigation, soldiers taught each other different classes in common tasks. Tasks included camouflage, physical fitness and nuclear, biological and chemical training.

Besides teaching classes to their peers, the soldiers are required to learn basic common tasks.

These tasks include drill and ceremony, physical fitness and land navigation.

The soldiers also take three written exams, two on leadership and one on map reading, Jorge said.

"Soldiers make PLDC harder than it really is," said Spc. Heather Showalter. "The hardest part is learning to become a team for a short time with many people you don't know."

If you're in a great team, then the course goes smoothly, she said.

It's not just the soldiers putting in the time and effort at PLDC. The small group leaders dedicate themselves to help soldiers succeed, said Spc. Walter Mack

"The SGLs are very supportive. If there is help needed in an area, they dedicate themselves to ensure it gets done."

The SGLs goal is for soldiers to live by the words Jimmy Jakes wrote in 1973.

"We want to make sure that when these soldiers graduate the PLDC class they are more than ready to live by the NCO Creed and that they can effectively help other soldiers," Jorge said.

Many aspects of PLDC, such as learning a leadership style and implementing it in the proper way, challenge soldiers, Mack said.

"The biggest thing I learned while I was here was that it is much harder to lead a group of your peers than it is to lead a group of your subordinates," Mack said.

At the end of PLDC, the soldiers go on a field training exercise where they work on small unit tactics, patrols, ambushes, defensive maneuvers and offensive operations.

"I just can't wait to be finished," Showalter said. "Not only will I become a sergeant, but I am looking forward to leading other soldiers."

NEWS FROM THE FIELD

13th CSB deploys to Fort Polk, La.

1st Lt. Joseph T. Southwick
598th Maintenance Company

The "Log Warriors" from 13th Corps Support Battalion are taking part in an exercise called "Swamp Trooper" at the Joint Readiness Training Center, Fort Polk, La., until Aug. 28.

The battalion deployed July 24 to provide direct support logistics for 2nd Armored Cavalry Regiment's combat operations and corps level units operating in the area.

The JRTC exercise simulates current real-world scenarios. The 13th CSB will "occupy" a friendly nation that has been invaded by a neighboring country to restore regional balance. The JRTC scenario will force the 13th CSB to overcome factors that U.S. forces encounter when they support other countries. The battalion trained with a focus on real world scenarios that include terrorists groups within the host country aimed at disrupting operations, hostile civilians displaced by U.S. occupation, and an actual opposition force main element that is invading the host country.

All of these elements train year round at Fort Polk to provide visiting units a realistic training environment that mirrors many of today's wartime missions.

The 13th CSB is operating an Intermediate Staging Base and will transition to support from a Logistical Support Area. After occupying the LSA, the tactical scenario will increase and the true test of "just-in-time" logistics, along with the concept of support, will evolve. The key to success is a flexible, yet integrated support plan tied into the maneuver commander's intent.

Many elements of the 13th CSB will play a vital role in support of 2nd ACR. The 598th Maintenance Company will provide direct support maintenance to light wheeled vehicles, Class IX supply support, and has a significant force protection mission.

"This is a prime training opportunity to experience both intensive and timely scenarios in unfamiliar terrain," said Capt. Melissa Eslinger, commander, 598th Maintenance.

"Events such as media relations, civilians on the battlefield, and small unit infiltrations are crucial to rehearse while accomplishing our Combat Service Support," she said.

The 104th Transportation Company is pushing convoys of supplies forward to the Brigade Support Area to provide logistical support. Logistical packages must be available day or night.

The 608th Ordnance Company is providing a platoon to run the Ammunition Supply Point during the 2nd ACR Live Fire Exercise.

Finally, the 110th Supply and Service Company attached to 13 CSB is suppling water, Class III (fuel), and is involved in the Class I (food) mission.

The battalion is poised to facilitate all corps level logistical support to elements operating through or around the 2d ACR's battle space. After months of preparation, planning, and local field exercises, the battalion is poised for its capstone test.

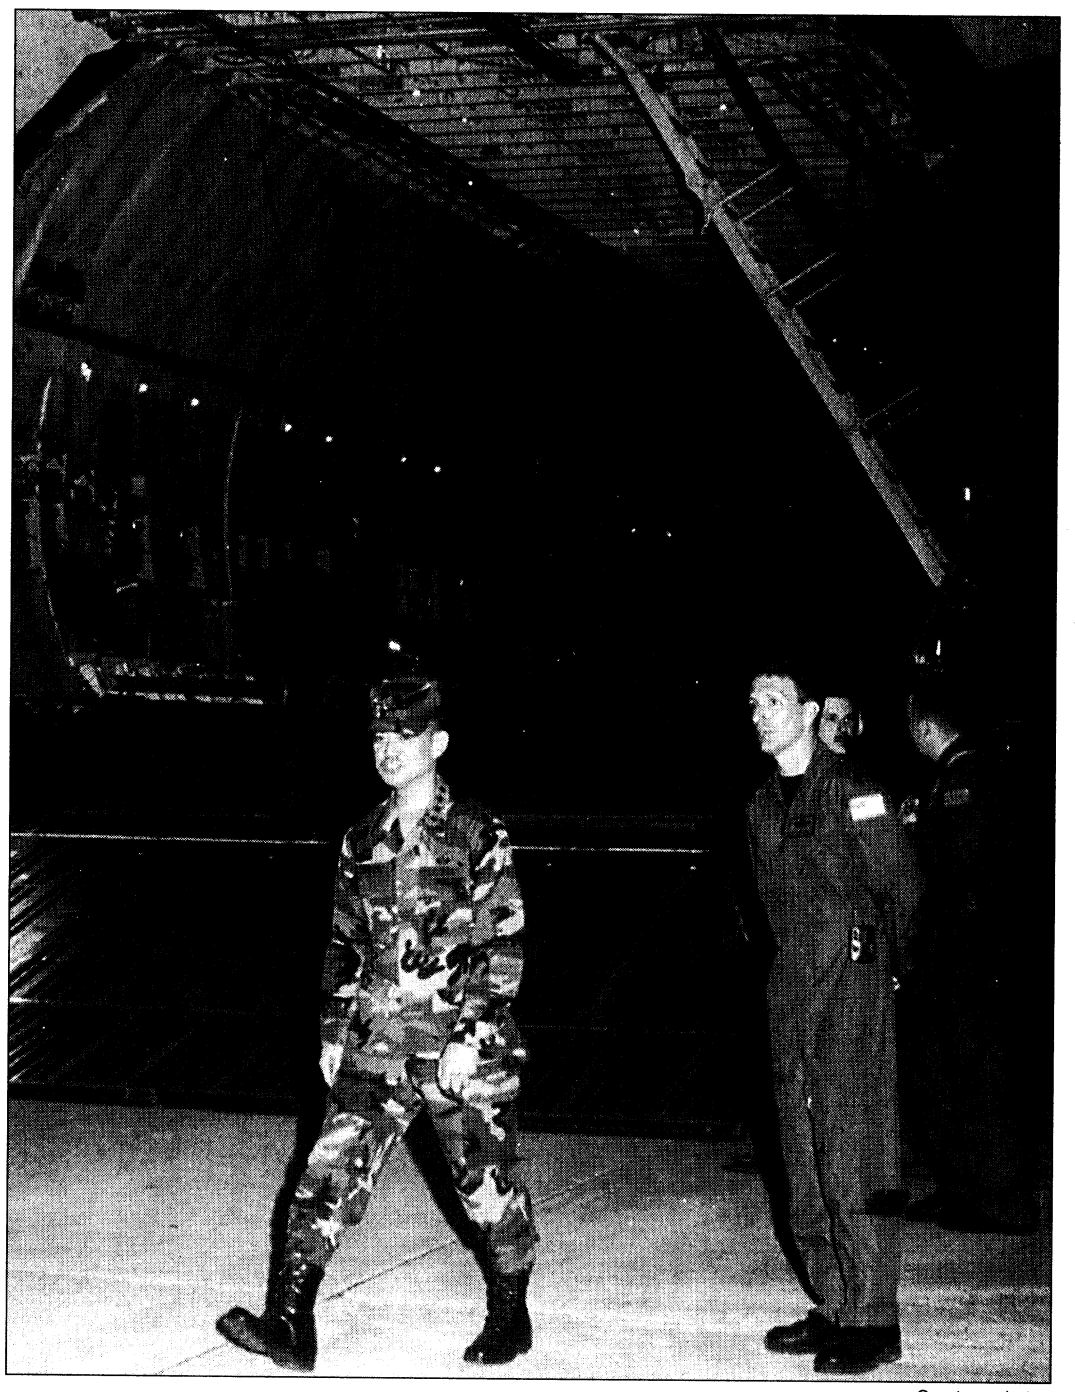
Generals' conference



Fort Benning hosts more than 150 general officers

Fort Benning hosted 156 generals and command sergeants major, to include the Chief of Staff of the Army and the Sergeant Major of the Army in a three-day conference earlier this week. The conference focused on "training a transforming Army."

The senior leaders focused on Army training doctrine, specifically on two Field Manuals that are in draft form, FM 7-0 (Training the Force) and FM 7-1 (Battle Focused Training). The conference goal was to capture key Army training and leader development concepts in order to produce trained and read leaders, soldiers and units.

Two soldiers prepare a night vision exhibit for the conference which hosted more than 156 generals and command sergeants major.

and other relevant factors. Military personnel are subject to punishment under the Uniform Code of Military Justice.

Civilian personnel are subject to possible disciplinary action. Repeat or flagrant violations can result in the removal of personnel from activities such as MWR facilities and the Youth Activity Center or even the installation.

"I don't think (the rules) bother most of us," said an Infantry Hall smoker. "It's the majority dictating to the minority, and if (smoking) is offensive to someone else, so be it."

Still, the smoker said it was interesting how the rules gradually become more strict. For instance, smokers went from being able to smoke inside the cafeteria, to smoking on the deck, to smoking at the gazebo. Furthermore, the Army once issued cigarettes and only gave breaks to those who smoked. But, he conceded, times have changed.

For more information about the regulations regarding smoking in the workplace, call 545-2724.

Post: Hopes to help employees deal with ramificatiojn of A76 studies competitive area but on a lower competitive level.

The three conditions that must exist when retreating are:

• The employee retreating must have previously held the position or one which is substantially the same.

• The employee retreating must be qualified for the position, including any minimum education requirements.

• The job retreated to must be occupied by someone with the same retention standing but with fewer years of civil service.

A non-veteran employee with five years of service could retreat to a position previously held (or substantially the same) if it is currently occupied by an non-veteran employee with four years of service.

All assignment rights during the second round of RIF are limited to:

• Positions no higher than the grade from which being released,

• Positions no lower than three grades or grade-intervals below the grade from which being released. An exception to this is veterans with 30 percent or more compensable disability. These employees may retreat (not bump) into positions five grades or grade-intervals below the grade from which released.

To help reduce involuntary job losses resulting from the A-76 study, the government is offering Voluntary Early Retirement Authority or a Voluntary Separation Incentive Pay to encourage long-time employees to retire early.

There is no guarantee everyone will be able to take different positions, said Hans Knoff, chief of Management Advisory Service Division. The total number of people qualifying for VERA and VSIP are still unknown, so the number of people who will remain when the RIF happens is also unknown.

VERA allows retirement for those age 50 or older with at least 20 years of service, or at any age with at least 25 years of service.

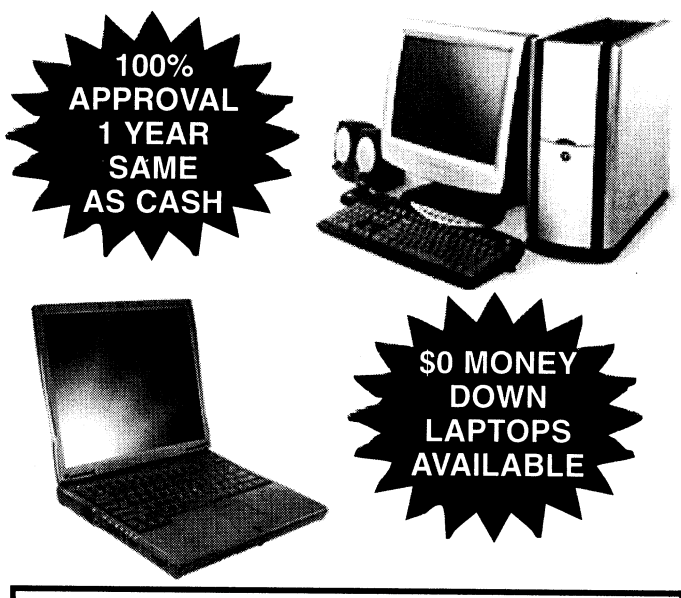
Employees covered by Civil Service Retirement System are subject to a reduction in the annuity they receive of two percent for each year under 55 at separation.

The goal of all these plans is to minimize the need for layoffs as federal agencies continue to downsize and restructure.

Another incentive of the buyout is a lump sum incentive equivalent to an employee's severance pay entitlement up to a maximum of $25,000. The payment is fully taxable for purposes of federal withholdings, Medicare, applicable state and local taxes, and Social Security for those covered by that system.

The payment is not counted as basic pay for purposes of calculating benefits such as retirement annuities.

Those employees affected by the RIF will have the first right of refusal 45 days before the contractor takes over the positions. First right of refusal means the employees will be offered open positions from the contractors before they are hired out.



Some positions in the following job series will be abolished in the affected directorates:

Families turn to ACS for help

Service offers free help, opportunities

Angela Sachitano
Special to the Bayonet©

When Army spouse Melissa Givvines gave birth to triplets a little more than two years ago, she and her husband, Sgt. John Givvines, 2nd Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment, knew it was not going to be easy raising three babies.

"People with three children at different ages say they know what it's like," Givvines said. "But having three infants at the same time is a whole different ball game. It can be overwhelming."

Givvines turned to the Army Community Service center for help, and before she knew it, ACS offered to provide assistance and day care through respite care from the Family Advocacy Program.

"ACS offers just about every service an Army family needs as they build their life around the military," said Marilyn Wallace, chief of ACS.

"The amount of stress that surrounds a military family can be too much at times. That is why ACS is here."

ACS celebrated its 37th birthday July 25, as supporters of the program gathered to reflect on the organization's importance to the whole Army community.

"ACS makes me feel lucky to be in the military," Givvines said.

"I know I am well supported. If I ever need advice or assistance, it's good to know I am not alone."

Some of the services ACS provides include marriage counseling, financial assistance programs, credit and checkbook management classes, healthy parenting classes, support groups for the families of special needs children, victims advocacy programs and access to victims shelters.

"We work with agencies in the Columbus community so we are well connected and always available," Wallace said.

"Most military families are away from their relatives, so they turn to our experts here for support. The difference I have seen our services make in people's lives is remarkable," she said.

The process to take advantage of ACS services is simple, Wallace said.

Families can stop in Building 2624 in Soldiers' Plaza and look at the lists of classes available.

Families can also make appointments to talk privately with trained, professional counselors and nurses about everything from child illnesses or financial management to resume building.

> "ACS offers just about every service an Army family needs to build life around the military."
> Marilyn Wallace
> chief of ACS

"During wartime, we often work with the family readiness groups to get families ready to deal with deployments," said Becky Welch, Family Advocacy Program manager.

"We hold sessions with battalions to educate families on dealing with life while dad or mom is away."

Although ACS is a part of every Army installation, there are still many families who are not aware of the services and how it can help them become a stronger military pillar, Wallace said.

"All spouses should stop by and talk with our counselors at least once to learn about what we have to offer," Wallace said. "There truly is something here for everyone."

ACS hours are 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Monday through Friday.

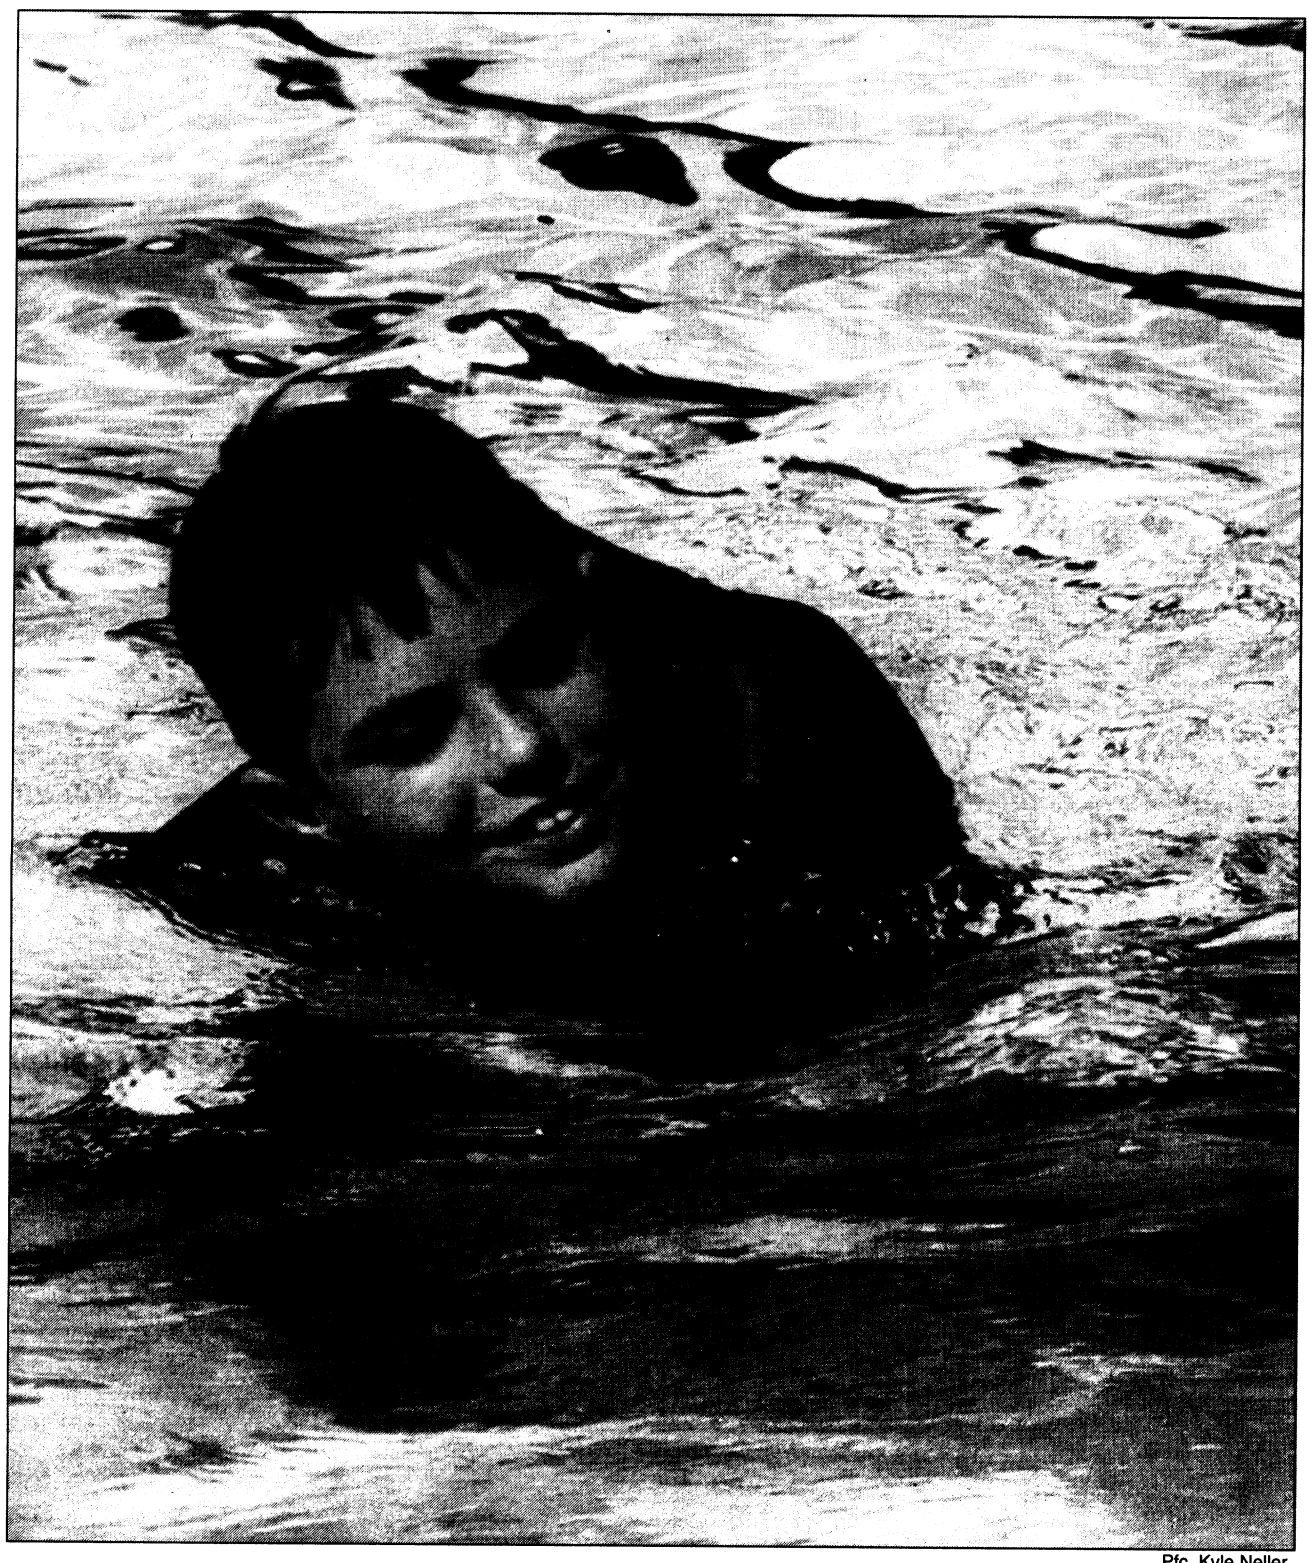
Counselors can also be reached at 545-7517.

Devices help kids stay alive

Post guidelines cover approved pool tools

Melissa House
Special to the Bayonet©

According to the Center for Disease Control, accidental drowning killed 1,003 children under the age of 15 in 1998. Among children aged 1 to 9, drowning is the second leading cause of death from injuries.



As the dog days of summer come to an end, parents and children will be escaping the heat at the pool, and the Fort Benning Safety Office has maintained a written policy to help keep children safe in the water, said Andrew Snoddy of the Community Recreation Division. At the heart of the policy are the guidelines for the use of personal flotation devices in post pools.

The current policy states that "no artificial floats, masks, or fins will be used in the pool area unless authorized by pool managers." Children may only use flotation devices approved by the United States Coast Guard.

"Pool managers have authorization to make case-by-case decisions on flotation devices that may have an American Red Cross or other agency endorsement," Snoddy said. "The pool manager should look at how the flotation device is worn and also check to see if it fits the child properly."

The policy is in effect for Carey, Custer Terrace, Kelley Hill and Bryant Wells pools. The pools at the Officers' Club and Uchee Creek have adopted similar policies of their own. Life jackets are available for use at the Uchee Creek pool.

The Officers' Club pool also requires approved life jackets but allows the use of masks, fins and rafts during the Wednesday evening "Raft Night."

Pfc. Kyle Neller

Tyler Rich plays in the water at the Uchee Creek swimming pool, Tuesday. Uchee Creek provides a fun and safe environment for children to swim.

Life jackets are a way for parents to reduce the chances of their children drowning, according to the CDC, Red Cross and Coast Guard.

Air-filled swimming aids such as "water wings," are not suitable substitutes if a child is not a proficient swimmer.

These can give both parents and children a false sense of security in the child's swimming abilities. Because air-filled aids are generally made of plastic, they can deflate if punctured or unplugged and increase the risk of drowning.

The American Academy of Pediatrics recommends swimming lessons for children aged 4 and older as another way to greatly reduce the chances of drowning, but teaching your child to swim does not mean that your child is safe in water. Parents can check at pool offices on the availability of swim classes.

For more information, call 545-7900.

Chaplains receive national recognition

More chaplains available on Fort Benning

Angela Sachitano
Special to the Bayonet©

Families seeking pastoral counseling on Fort Benning won't have to wait more than a day or so to talk with a chaplain on post.

At any given time, there are 10 to 17 pastoral counselors waiting to give family care, said Chaplain (Maj.) Peter Frederich, deputy director of the Family Life Training Center.

The American Association of Pastoral Counselors recognized the continued success of the post's Family Life Chaplain Training Program this week with its accreditation.

"This is like the Good Housekeeping seal for counseling," said Chaplain (Lt. Col.) George Onstad, director of the U.S. Army Family Chaplain Training Program. "Our soldiers and family members who come here for the help they need are receiving the best the chaplaincy has to offer."

The program on Fort Benning provides education on marriage and family counseling to Army chaplains. Chaplains remain here for 15 months and receive a master's degree in counseling from Columbus State University. From there, chaplains will disperse to other installations, Onstad said.

"The best part about the program being located here on Fort Benning is our soldiers and families have more family life chaplains to turn to than any other post," Onstad said. "During the program, we have six or seven

Thrift Shop struck by lightning

Storm destroys computer files

Angela Sachitano
Special to the Bayonet©

Lines at the Fort Benning Thrift Shop may be especially long over the next few weeks as the store recovers from a massive lightning and thunderstorm which blew out the store's internal computer system.

Lightning struck the store July 2, blowing the chimney to pieces and sending bolts of electricity through the computers.

"It's taken us three weeks to get things somewhat back to normal," said Lori Lane, Thrift Shop manager. "In times like this we realize how important this place is to many people on post."

The shop, which has been taking consignments and donations from families for the past 20 years, had to rewire the entire computer system. Since the computers went down, the store has lost about $15,000 in consignments, and sales are down 25 percent, Lane said.

"We're getting a lot of phone calls from people wondering when they can consign," Lane said. "During the summer months, people are always in a rush to sell their items before or after their move. We are working as quickly as we can."

Up until Tuesday, there wasn't a way to track the consignments because all four computers were out of commission. Two computers are now up and running, but the store is still at a disadvantage, Lane said.

"We're used to working with four computers, but we'll have to make do with the two we have until the others are fixed," Lane said. "We can take consignments now but at a much

Spencer High School registration under way

Muscogee County School District

The Muscogee County School District is making registration easier and more convenient this year for high school students who live on Fort Benning.

High school students who are new to the state and district and who will attend Spencer may now register for the upcoming school year at Spencer High School.

Parents of high school students living on post should bring proof of current address, (such as a housing papers or current utility bill) report card, and student's social security card.

New students also need: birth certificate, immunization certificate and eye, ear and dental certificate.)

Other students who are new to the district or who have moved may register at the Columbus Roberts Center on Brown Avenue Monday through Friday from 8 a.m. through 5 p.m.

Parents must show proof of address (current utility bill, lease agreement, or sales contract on home).

ASK THE JUDGE

Office of Staff Judge Advocate

Q: My spouse and I are going through a divorce. Is he (or she) entitled to part of my military retired pay?

A: In order for a former spouse to be entitled to receive part of a service member's military retired pay, at least some portion of the marriage must have overlapped with the service member's military service.

During the divorce process, the service member may agree to give a percentage of his or her retired pay to the former spouse. If an agreement cannot be reached, a judge will determine what the former spouse will be entitled to receive. While entitlements vary from state to state, it is generally true that the longer the marriage overlapped with the time of service, the more the former spouse will be awarded. Under the Uniformed Services Former Spouses' Protection Act, the maximum percentage of retired pay that a court can order to be paid to a former spouse is fifty percent.

Q: When do payments begin? How can they end?

A: Most states require the service member to begin making payments to his or her former spouse at the date of their retirement. A few states, however, require service members to begin paying once they are eligible for retirement, even if they have not actually begun receiving their retirement pay. Without participation in the Survivor Benefit Plan, the payments will automatically stop if the service member or former spouse dies. Remarriage by the former spouse may also end the payments, depending on the provisions of the divorce decree.

Q: What military benefits may a former spouse be entitled to receive?

A: Depending on the period of overlap between the marriage and the service member's military service, a former spouse may be entitled to PX and commissary privileges, as well as medical benefits.

There are three requirements that must be met before a former spouse can be entitled to PX, commissary, or medical benefits.

First, the service member must have served at least 20 years in the military. Second, the marriage must have lasted at least 20 years. Third, the marriage must have overlapped with at least 20 years of the military service. These requirements are referred to as the "20/20/20 test."

Using a fictitious example, Sgt. First Class (ret.) Robertson served on active duty from 1975 to 1997, he married his wife in 1976, and they divorced in 2001. His ex-wife would meet the 20/20/20 test, because there was 20 years of the soldier's military service (1975-1997), he and his wife were married for 20 years (1976-2001), and 20 years of the marriage occurred while he was on active duty (1976-1997).

If this is the case, then the former spouse is entitled to use of the PX and commissary, as well as full medical coverage.

If the former spouse remarries however, he or she loses his or her right to all of these benefits.

Additionally, former spouses who enroll in their own separate health care plan will lose their right to military medical coverage.

Q: Once these benefits are lost, can they ever be reinstated?

A: Should the former spouse divorce the subsequent spouse, or if the subsequent spouse dies, the former spouse's PX and commissary privileges can resume. Medical coverage however, will only be reinstated if the former spouse's marriage is dissolved through an annulment.

Schools ready to welcome students

Col. Joe Torres
Garrison commander

DoDEA schools will start up Aug. 13. Each school has a program to welcome students and parents (if the training schedule permits — request you allow your soldiers to attend these events.)

Parents are vital links to their children's education.

We are encouraging all soldiers to take an active role in their children's schools.

This is the information for our on post schools only — we have many children who go off post to schools in the local community (please allow those parents to also attend "opening day ceremonies" for their children's school.)

Here is the info on our open houses for on-post schools for parents and children to attend:

Dexter Elementary School — Will host its annual Sneak-a-Peek at 2 p.m. Aug. 12. Parents and students will be welcomed by the principal, and teachers will be introduced in an assembly in the multipurpose room.

Here they will get an overview of the school's goals and its focus related to the Community Strategic Plan. Families will then be dismissed to visit their children's classrooms and receive information about that specific grade level, to include schedules, expectations and curriculum.

The afternoon will close with a summer social on the front lawn, hosted by the PTO.

Faith Middle School — Will host the following events to welcome parents and students:

Tuesday: PTO meeting at 11 a.m. and a new family orientation and barbecue at noon

Aug. 12: Sneak preview for all sixth-graders and new seventh- and eighth-grade students

Sept. 3 : Open house and PTO at 6:30 p.m.

Sept. 6: Faith Middle School's 50th Anniversary Celebration

Loyd Elementary School — Parents and students are invited to attend an orientation to meet their children's teachers and to find out important information about their particular grade level. The orientation will be Aug. 12 at the times shown below.

Students may want to bring their school supplies to their classroom on this day to avoid bringing them on the bus the first day of school.

Pre-K parents and children may drop in anytime between 8:30 and 3:00 p.m. kindergarten: 8:30 a.m.

first grade: 9:30 a.m.
second grade: 10:30 a.m.
third grade: 11:30 a.m.
fourth grade: 1 p.m.
fifth grade: 2 p.m.

McBride Elementary School — Will host "Right Start" — Write Smart and Sneak a Peek, Aug. 12 at 2:30-3:30 p.m.

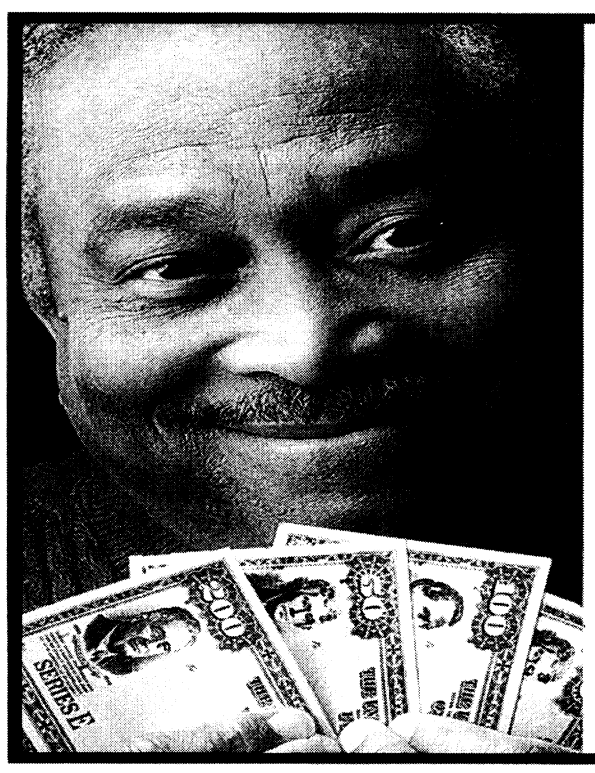
Parents will meet in their children's classrooms to learn how to help their children get off to a good start.

Then they will move to the gym to talk about McBride School's goals and objectives for the Community Strategic Plan, with an emphasis on helping their children learn to write well.

Stowers Elementary School — Will host its pre-K Sneak-a-Peek from 1 to 3 p.m. Aug. 12. Kindergarten Welcome Day will be held from 1 to 3 p.m. Aug. 12. Pre-K and kindergarten parents and children are invited to drop in during at this time.

First- through fifth-grade teachers will host the Very Involved Parent (VIP) activity from 8:45 to 9:15 a.m. Aug. 14. This is an opportunity to sit with your child and enjoy a learning activity.

Open House at Stowers is scheduled for 6:30 p.m. Aug. 20.



White Elementary School — Will host a Sneak-a-Peek for parents and children 2:30-3:30 p.m. Aug. 12.

Parents, along with their children, will visit classrooms at 2:30 p.m., and then meet the principal in the multipurpose room at 3 p.m. to hear about White School's goals and expectations for School Year 2002-03.

Wilson Elementary School — Will host a Sneak-a-Peek in classrooms from 2:30-3:30 p.m. Aug. 12. Each morning at 8:30 Aug. 13-16 parents are invited to the multipurpose room to discuss programs available at Wilson, to include Reading Recovery, Reading and Math Remedial Classes, Literacy Place Reading, Special Education, Technology, Speech and Language Services and the Gifted Program.

Beginning Sept. 6, at 8:30 a.m., the Wilson staff will introduce parents to "First Fridays."

The program will address issues of interest to parents. These First Fridays will include various guest speakers, as well as academic sessions, to help parents use the latest techniques to help their children, who are having problems with schoolwork, at home.

I found buried treasure in my attic.

More than 40 years ago, Grandma gave you some Series E Savings Bonds. So you put them in a safe place and forgot about them — until now. You were looking for old records when you found an unexpected treasure . . . those old Series E Savings Bonds. And even though your old bonds are no longer earning interest, they could still be worth more than 5 times their face value. So why not redeem those old bonds at your local financial institution? To find out more, call 1-800-4US-BOND or write to Savings Bonds, Parkersburg, WV 26106-1328. Old Savings Bonds. They're a treasure worth digging for.

Girl Scout Membership Kick Off — The Girl Scouts of Concharty Council would like to extend an invitation to community members interested in becoming part of their growing team. Join them Saturday as they hold their annual Membership Kick-Off event. This fun-filled day will take place at the Washington Chapel Parish House in Tuskegee, Ala. and will run from 9:30 a.m. to 2 p.m. Central Standard Time. The kick-off is a way for volunteers to preview many of the activities, events and learning opportunities for the Girl Scout program year.

For more information or to register for the Membership Kick-Off, call the Concharty Council office at 327-2646 or (800) 326-8912.

Good Old Fashion Fun — Youth Services is holding a "National Kids Day" 3 to 6 p.m. Sunday by providing a "Good Old Fashion Fun Day."

There will be hula-hoops, hopscotch, horseshoes, ping-pong, face painting and plenty of games and activities at Building 1056. Parents are encouraged to participate in the games and activities with their children. Parents can even teach their children some of the games they enjoyed as children. YS plans to make this an annual event that will emphasize the importance of parents and children spending meaningful time together.

For more information, call 545-3070 or stop by YS, Building 1056.

Beacon College registration — Beacon College and Graduate School will begin its Fall Semester registration at Fort Benning. Students can earn undergraduate degrees in psychology, business and Biblical studies. Students may also earn graduate degrees in Biblical studies, pastoral ministry, counseling ministry, and the Master of Divinity.

Full financial aid, including veterans' educational assistance is available. A representative from Beacon will be on post every Thursday from 1 p.m. to 4 p.m. at Building 2602, Soldiers' Plaza. For more information, call 323-5364.

Tree book — "What Tree Is That?" a pocket guide for identifying trees, is available from The National Arbor Day Foundation. The 72-page guide will help you identify 135 different trees found in the eastern and central U.S.

Dozens of drawings illustrate the trees' leaves or needles and their acorns, berries, seed pods, cones and other identifying features.

To obtain your tree ID guide, send your name and address and $3 to "What Tree Is That?" The National Arbor Day Foundation, Nebraska City, NE 68410.

Student exchange — Hosting a high school exchange student starting this August is like bringing the world to your doorstep.

The Foundation for Intercultural Travel matches international students with host families across the U.S. Families of all "types" are eligible; retired couples to single parent families. Not only two parent families have enjoyed hosting an international son or daughter.

Students arrive before your school's start date and bring their own spending money for clothes, entertainment and other expenses. They have their own medical insurance as well.

Host families agree to provide room and board and to include them as a family member. F.I.T. has one semester as well as academic school year students. All students speak English.

For more information, call toll-free (877) 439-7862.

Registration — Pre-kindergarten registration is now taking place at Childcare Network.

This is the free Georgia pre-kindergarten program and eight locations are serving the community for convenience. The three closest centers to Fort Benning are: 2123 Avalon Rd. 563-4109, 137 N. Oakley Dr. 687-8454, and 4909 Buena Vista Rd. 561-0139.

Registration can be done at any of these centers.

For more information, call Michele Grier at 563-5526.

Also, applications are being taken for lead pre-kindergarten teachers. The individual should possess a diploma, AA or Bachelor's degree in early childhood education. Resumes can be sent to 3009 University Ave., Columbus, GA 31907, or call 563-3798.

Live Entertainment at Afterhours — Don't miss the live performance by Universal recording artist, Miracle, featuring the hit single "Bounce," Aug. 9 at Afterhours. Showtime is 11 p.m. Tickets are $6 for active duty and $8 for civilian. Be sure to arrive early, limited seating available. Tickets available at the door.

For more information, call Afterhours at 689-0887.

OSC gift shop — "A Bit of Benning," a consignment store for homemade crafts, is now open next to the OSC Thrift Shop.

For more information, call 687-3537.

AFTB teaches about the Army — LES, ACS, FRG, RD, PLDC, NTC?!?!

If this looks like a foreign language to you — you are not alone. Let Army Family Team Building start you on the right track to understanding this world called "the Army."

AFTB classes are free, open to everyone, and jam-packed with Army knowledge you will need to thrive in the military environment. The next AFTB Level I class is 6 to 10 p.m. Aug. 20-22 in Family Unit Network (FUN) Center, Building 359, on the corner of Ingersoll and Vibbert Avenues.

For more information or to register for this class, call 545-5377 or e-mail aftb@benning.army.mil.

Hospital classes — A series of classes that address such topics as pregnancy, breastfeeding, anesthesia concerns, labor and delivery, breathing and relaxation exercise, postpartum care, newborn characteristics and parenthood are available. Classes are the first three Tuesdays of each month from 6 to 8 p.m. in the Baugh Conference Room, second floor of Martin Army Community Hospital.

The first class is about breastfeeding.

The second class is a Mother and Baby.

The third class is on labor and delivery anesthesia.

A car seat safety class takes place once a month from 3 to 5 p.m. at the Baugh Conference Room. To reserve a seat and find out the class date, call Community Health Nursing at 545-4041.

The class is limited to 15 participants.

To schedule a HIV/AIDS class call Community Health Nursing at 545-4041.

Family housing parking — All quarters on post will be assigned one parking space to give easy access to their quarters.

All residents must ensure that they park only in their designated area or any unmarked area if they have more than one car.

Visitors must also park in an unmarked space. For more information, call your Community Life Office.

Also, guidelines have been set up for front yard decorations.

No fencing is permitted in the front yard of any quarters; front yard decorative borders are permitted, but should not be constructed of greater than one-inch lumber, railroad ties, metal rods or pipes, contain sharp points nor exceed 18 inches in height; prior to installation, occupants will submit a drawing of the proposed front yard decoration border on a fence request form; borders must be well maintained or removed; and no wooden patio or porches are allowed in the front yard.

For more information, call your family housing inspector, Community Life NCO or the Community Life Office.

Clearing quarters — The Fort Benning Housing Division wants to remind families clearing quarters they have two options when it comes to choosing a cleaning crew.

If families use the Fort Benning cleaning division, they will pay one fee to the post and leave the rest up to the Fort Benning cleaning crew.

If families use a cleaning company on their own, they are responsible for payment, and cannot leave quarters until a final inspection of the home is completed.

For more information on clearing quarters, call the Housing Division at 545-2993.

Lending Closet — Because of an increase in family need, the Lending Closet is asking all families who have borrowed household goods to return the borrowed items as soon as their belongings are delivered to them.

For more information, call the Lending Closet at 545-4485.

Communities need mayors — The Community Life Mayors Program is accepting applications for mayors and vice mayors in all housing areas. For more information, call Evelyn Livermore at 682-5414.

AA meetings — Fort Benning's Alcoholics Anonymous meet at 7 p.m. every Monday, Thursday and Saturday in the basement of Building 241.

The goal of the AA meetings is to support people fighting alcohol addiction. For more information, call 545-4415 or 545-1138.

off post

Parade of Nations and Cena Tipica — The Western Hemisphere Institute for Security Cooperation presents its first "Festival of the Hemisphere" at the Columbus Iron Works on August 29, beginning at 6 p.m.

This festival represents the Institute's participation in Hispanic Heritage Month, and is open to all who wish to attend. The cost is $25 per ticket; tickets will be sold until August 15.

Tickets may be purchased from Cecelia Alexander at Building 35 or call 545-1285. Come and enjoy the evening.

CASA volunteers — CASA volunteers are ordinary people who are caring, honest and committed to doing what is best for a child.

No special experience or knowledge is required. All volunteers are thoroughly trained in courtroom procedure, social services, the juvenile justice system and special needs of children who have been abused or neglected.

CASA welcomes volunteers from all cultures, professions, ethical and educational backgrounds. CASA has a particular need for bilingual volunteers, men and people of color.

The next training session starts Sept. 14. For more information and an application, call 323-3687.

Martin Army Community Hospital offers school screenings

The appointment includes an eye, ear and dental screening. Please bring the child's shot and medical record to the appointment. August appointments will be available every Wednesday for a full day. If you cannot keep the appointment, call and cancel at least 24 hours in advance. To schedule an appointment, call 544-CARE (2273).

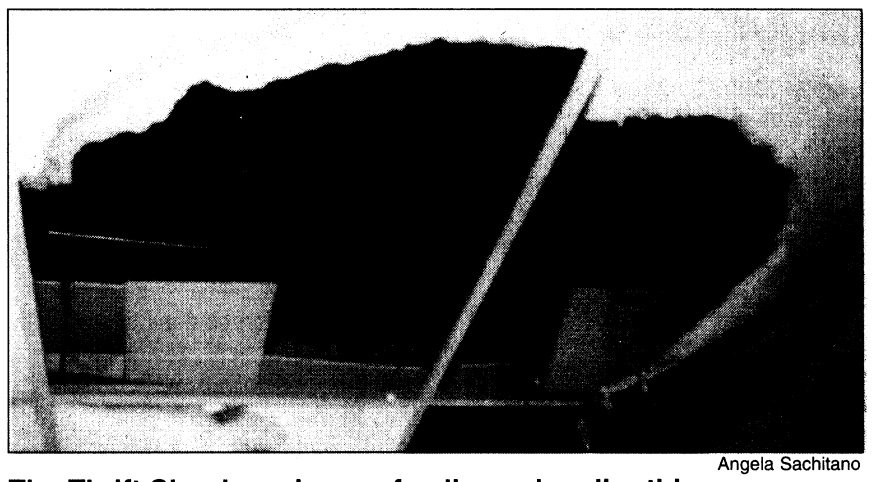
slower pace."

The thrift shop has had its share of obstacles this summer. Earlier in the season, a portion of the aging roof began caving in and collapsed in the back of the store. Then, last month a nearby water main burst and flooded store grounds, soaking everything in its path.

"I've been thrifting here for at least 15 years," said Berta Zavala, a military spouse. "The Thrift Shop is important to many of us, and I can't imagine the post without it. The money it makes helps the lives of so many people on Fort Benning."

The Thrift Shop donates a large portion of its profits to charities like the Red Cross, Boy and Girl Scouts, Little League, Disabled American Vets, local hospitals and local schools.

The shop is also the place many people turn to during a crisis," Lane said.



"A fire wiped out several Fort Benning homes earlier this year and we were able to supply clothes, blankets, and other necessities," she said. "We have worked hard to be a pillar that the community can rely on for needed items."

For now, the shop is going to have to rely on the community to be patient and understanding as things get back to normal.

"We need all the donations we can get to make up for our loss in profits this past month," Lane said. "Our volunteers are working overtime to get items on the floor and looking good."

Donations and consignments are now being accepted from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Tuesdays, Thursdays, Fridays, and on the first Friday of the month from 5 p.m. to 9 p.m.

For more information call 687-4830.

chaplains a year we normally wouldn't have. They are here to mentor families."

Chaplains specializing in the family life ministry must perform a minimum of 300 hours of marriage and pastoral counseling while here, Onstad said.

Last year, Fort Benning soldiers received 2,400 added hours of counseling. Most Army installations are only assigned one Family Life chaplain to handle the marriage and personal counseling.

"Family life chaplains are essential to Army life," Frederich said. "This accreditation means that our training program not only exceeds Army standards, but it exceeds the national pastoral standards as well."

Family life chaplains graduate from the program at Fort Benning and then go on to other posts to train Chaplains there, Onstad said.

"Having these chaplains training here helps compensate for the shortage of chaplains our post and posts around the nation are dealing with," Onstad said. "Our soldiers are lucky to have this program, with all of the chaplains, here."

Family Life chaplains minister to all religious faiths, Onstad said. For more information on how to receive family life counseling, call 545-1760.

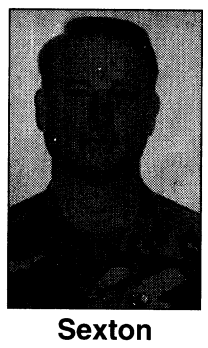
Jesus loves, cares for believers year-round

Feeling weary? Nazarene will help

Chaplain (Capt.) Stephen Sexton
2nd Battalion, 54th Infantry Regiment

REFLECTIONS



We are in the middle of summer, and the heat of the day wears on a person making them feel weary, tired and ready for the end of the day to come.

Summertime heat makes one long for the cool breezes of the fall. Summertime is a time for relaxing under the shade of a tree and sipping on a cool drink of water or the traditional lemonade.

When we are hot and the sun is beaming down on us, summertime brings out emotions we try to keep under subjection. We get snappy, crappy and sometimes down right mean-spirited.

The Bible shares with us in Proverbs 18:24 that a man who has friends must show himself friendly; and there is a friend that sticks closer than a brother.

Summertime friends are the best friends to have. When you are tired, frustrated and weary of the day's events, a friend comes along and lifts your spirits. A friend brings a smile to our face.

Sexton

A friend tells us we are doing a good job and is appreciative of the work we are doing. A friend gives you strength to finish the day. A friend makes your day.

The Bible shares in Proverbs 27:17, iron sharpens iron; so a man sharpens the countenance of his friend. We must all be friends to others.

There will times when you need a friend to help lift you up. It has been proven that a smile helps relieve stress.

A summertime friend is a stress reliever. We all need summertime friends, friends who will be there for us and with us through the thick and thin times. Through the hard times and lean times, through the rough and tough times.

In real life there are times when our friends are not near enough to give us the lift we need. It is in those times we have a friend that can not be seen, his name is Jesus.

Jesus shares with us in John 15:15; I have called you friends. In the heat of the battle, Jesus is there.

When there is no one to help lift us, Jesus is there. When no one says a kind word, Jesus says, "I Love You."

All of us must have summertime friends, those who are there when we need them.

But for the times when we have no one, Jesus is the ultimate summertime friend.

Have you talked with him today?

CHAPEL NOTES

Workers needed — The Fort Benning Chaplain's Office is seeking applications for individuals to serve in a variety of positions in the chapels on post.

These positions include musicians, choir directors, watch care workers, bus drivers and custodians. Interested individuals should call the Fund Manager at 545-4960 or visit the office in Room 512 in Infantry Hall.

Catholic Women of the Chapel — The Catholic Women of the Chapel meet twice each month. They gather from 9:30 to 11:30 a.m. on the first Friday of the month at the Martin Army Hospital Chapel. Mass is celebrated along with a special program.

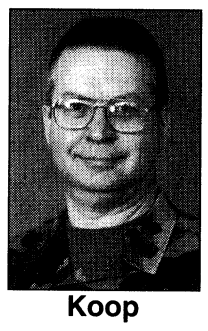
They also meet the third Monday of the month at the Infantry Center Chapel Annex from 7 to 9 p.m.

Protestant Women of the Chapel — PWOC resumed its summer Bible study. They meet at 9:30 a.m. Thursdays in the Custer Terrace Chapel on Craig Drive.

The summer series is "That The World May Know" a video tour through the lands of the Bible with life changing lessons from the Word of God.

TIC fall welcome picnic — The Infantry Center Chapel will hold its fall welcome picnic after the 10:30 a.m. service Aug. 25.

As we welcome newcomers to the community and our returning members, we will focus on our on-going ministries and the opportunities for families to grow and serve in the chapel.



Don't run away from problems

Chaplain (Maj.) Raymond Koop
Family Life Ministries Center

Happiness doesn't automatically come with divorce. A new study on hundreds of unhappy couples says divorce doesn't reduce symptoms of depression, raise self-esteem or increase a sense of mastery.

During the five years of the study, more than a third of the unhappy couples were divorced or separated and the rest stayed married. About one-fifth of those divorced had happily remarried within five years. Contrary to expectations, about two-thirds of unhappy couples who remained committed to each other often were doing better five years later.

The biggest improvements were discovered in the unhappiest marriages. Of the most discontented, about 80 percent were happy five years later, said Linda Waite, a sociologist who directed the research team. Staying married did not tend to trap unhappy spouses in violent relationships.

Koop

Time, marital work and personal change were the three routes that helped unhappy marriages turn things around.

One couple that didn't actively work on their marriage explained, "With time, job situations improved, children got older or better, or chronic ongoing problems got put into new perspective."

Other couples actively worked "to solve problems, change behavior or improve communication."

Some spouses made personal changes that improved their marriage. They found "alternative ways to improve their own happiness and build a good and happy life despite a mediocre marriage." For all practical purposes, the unhappy spouse changed.

Running away from our problems doesn't help. Troubles in marriage can mature us, develop patience within us and make us the better (James 1:2-5).

Would you like to make your marriage better? Free counseling and support are available.

Golf course renovation ends with party

All 36 holes playable, open to public

Spc. Douglas DeMaio

There was a party going on at the Fort Benning Golf Course July 25 during the combined commanding general's pay day golf scramble and grand opening of the newly renovated Pineside course.

It's been more than a year since the two 18-hole courses, Pineside and Lakeside, have been completely open all at once. Certain holes throughout the year were closed to improve the playability and essence of the courses, which is why more than 150 people from the tri-city area joined the celebration of the first official function for the renovated course, said Roger Garrity, manager of outdoor recreation for Morale, Welfare and Recreation.

After some positive words on the re-opening of the courses, Maj. Gen. Paul Eaton, commanding general, looking in the crowd's direction, was preparing to hit the first ball as part of the grand opening when a soldier said, "General, the green is in the other direction."

"The general was put right on the spot," said Celeste Raymond, competitor. "The general said, 'who said that?' and he called a soldier from the crowd, who made the comment, and made him hit the first ball."

The soldier hit the ball toward the fairway on the other hole, Raymond said. Everyone laughed as the soldier did pushups for not landing the ball on the fairway.

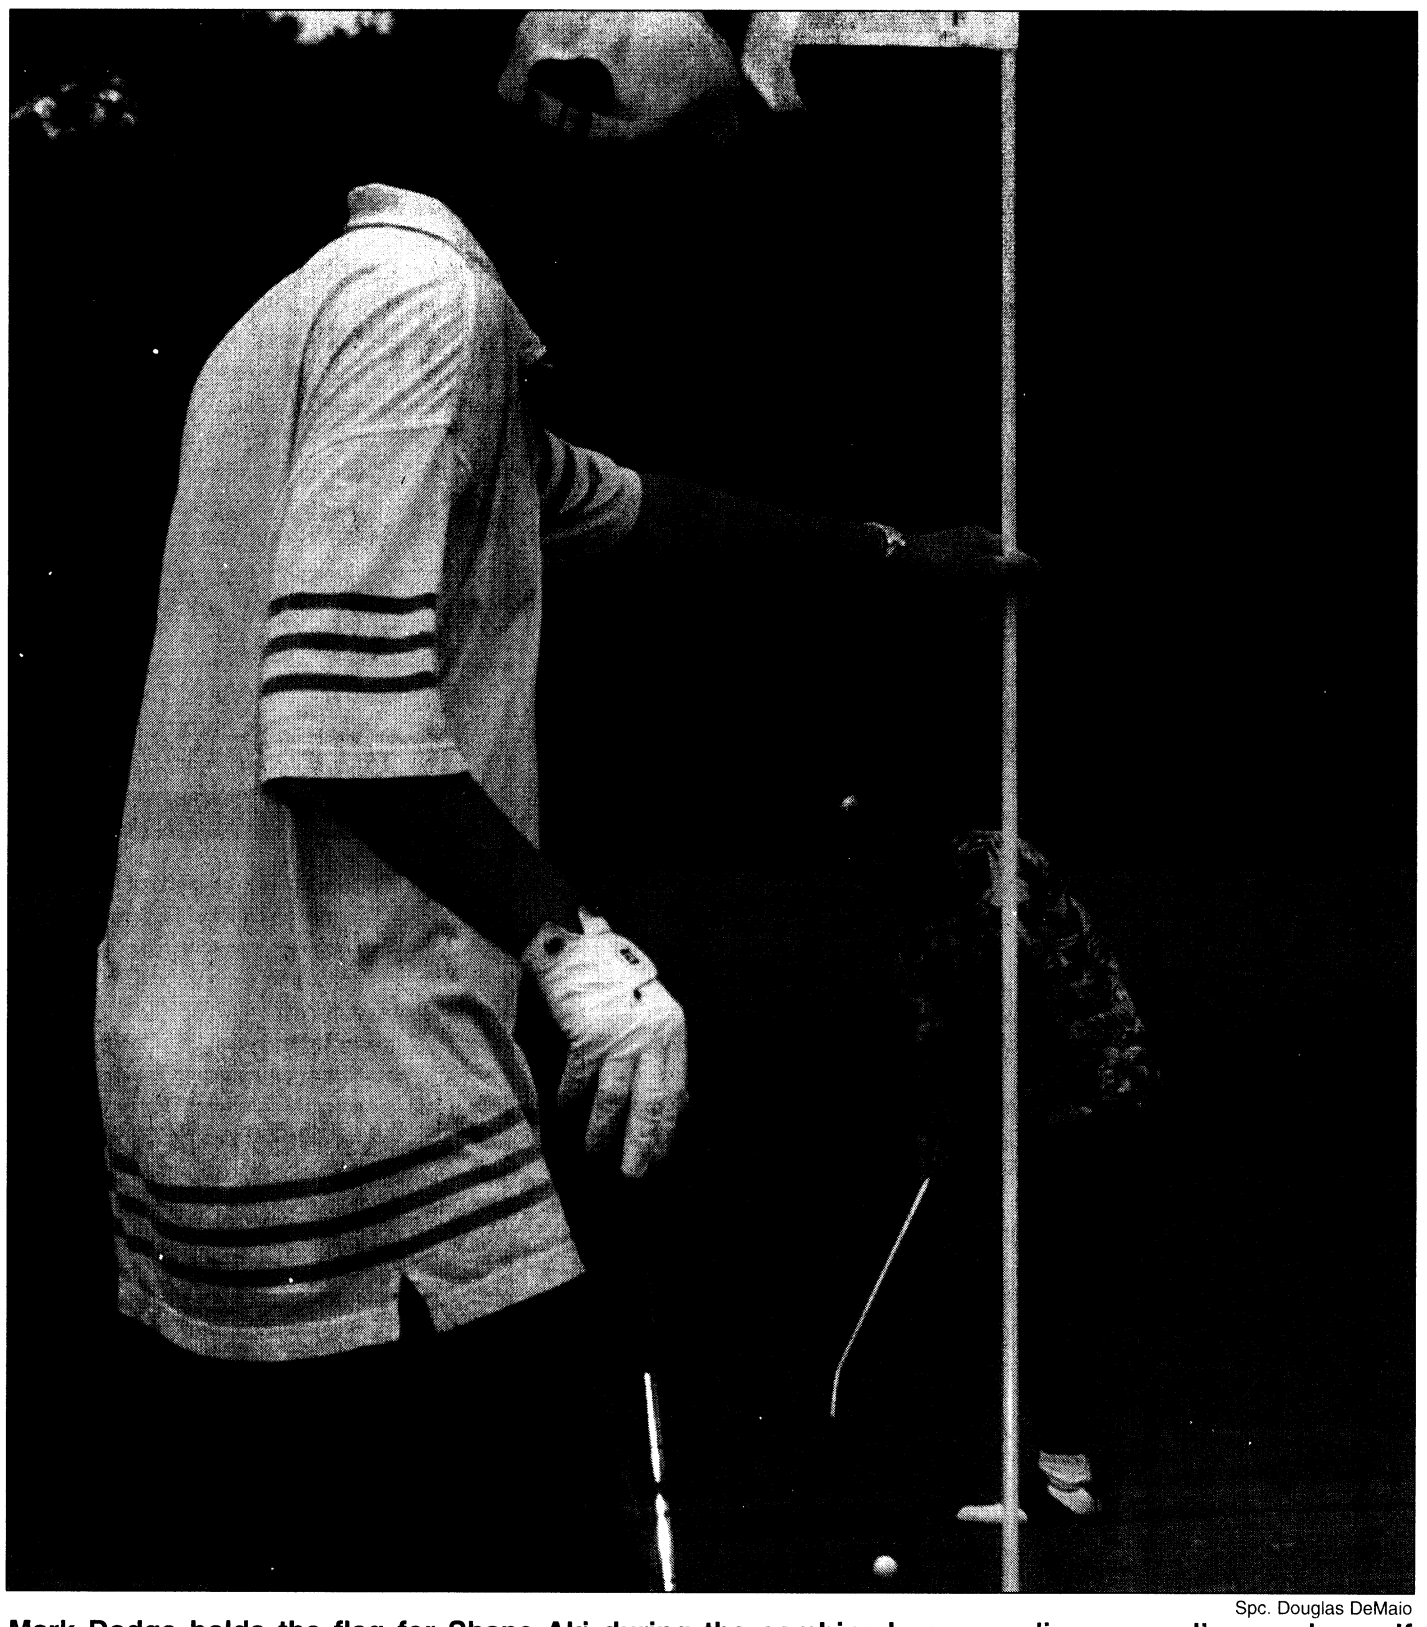
"Fun is what golf is all about," Raymond said. "Just enjoy the environment and have a good time."

And people did, Garrity said, as he mocked and heckled contestants over a loud speaker while they were putting on the new greens.

"I think the players are pretty happy with it," Garrity said of the new greens. "The course is in great condition."

With the addition of the greens from the renovation, the Follow Me Golf Course is making an effort toward increasing player and corporate memberships and to provide a facility soldiers can enjoy.

"We want this course to be better than all of the courses in the surrounding area," Garrity said. "We compete against other courses for revenue to maintain a self-sufficient business."



That is why the course chose to purchase Tifeagle grass, one of the best grasses in the south, and change the contours and moundings of the greens, Garrity said. With the addition of these elements, the course is more difficult, and the surface is more consistent for putting.

"I believe it's well worth the money," said Derek Denny, competitor.

"The greens were spongy and slow, but after two weeks, when the greens settle and become firm, they will be excellent," said Randy Idland, competitor and part of the primary sponsor team for Jay's Auto Mall. "This course is very well laid out, and with all the trees surrounding the course, it provides more of a challenge than courses in the surrounding area.

"Now that the course is open and the word gets out to the public, more people will come and play this course."

"We're moving in the right direction," Garrity said.

Steel Soldiers get run for their money

Headhunters make move late in game

Pfc. Brian Trapp
Bayonet staff

Steel Soldiers took a 19-17 victory over the Headhunters in a head-to-head matchup of two of Fort Benning's top softball teams at Knappenburger Field July 25.

Basic Combat Training Brigade's Steel Soldiers took an early 8-1 lead over the Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 1st Battalion, 30th Infantry Regiment, Headhunters.

At the top of the third inning Steel Soldiers' Kerry Clements, left centerfielder, smashed a double and later scored as the team put up four more runs.

"We have a strong team if we bring our A game," Clements said.

In the fourth, the Steel Soldier sent the ball deep into right field to make an infield home run. He had to duck on his way in to dodge a near out.

The Steel Soldiers chance at bat was shut down with the spring-like jump of Richard Chandler, Headhunters' shortstop, pulling down the final out for the Steel Soldiers.

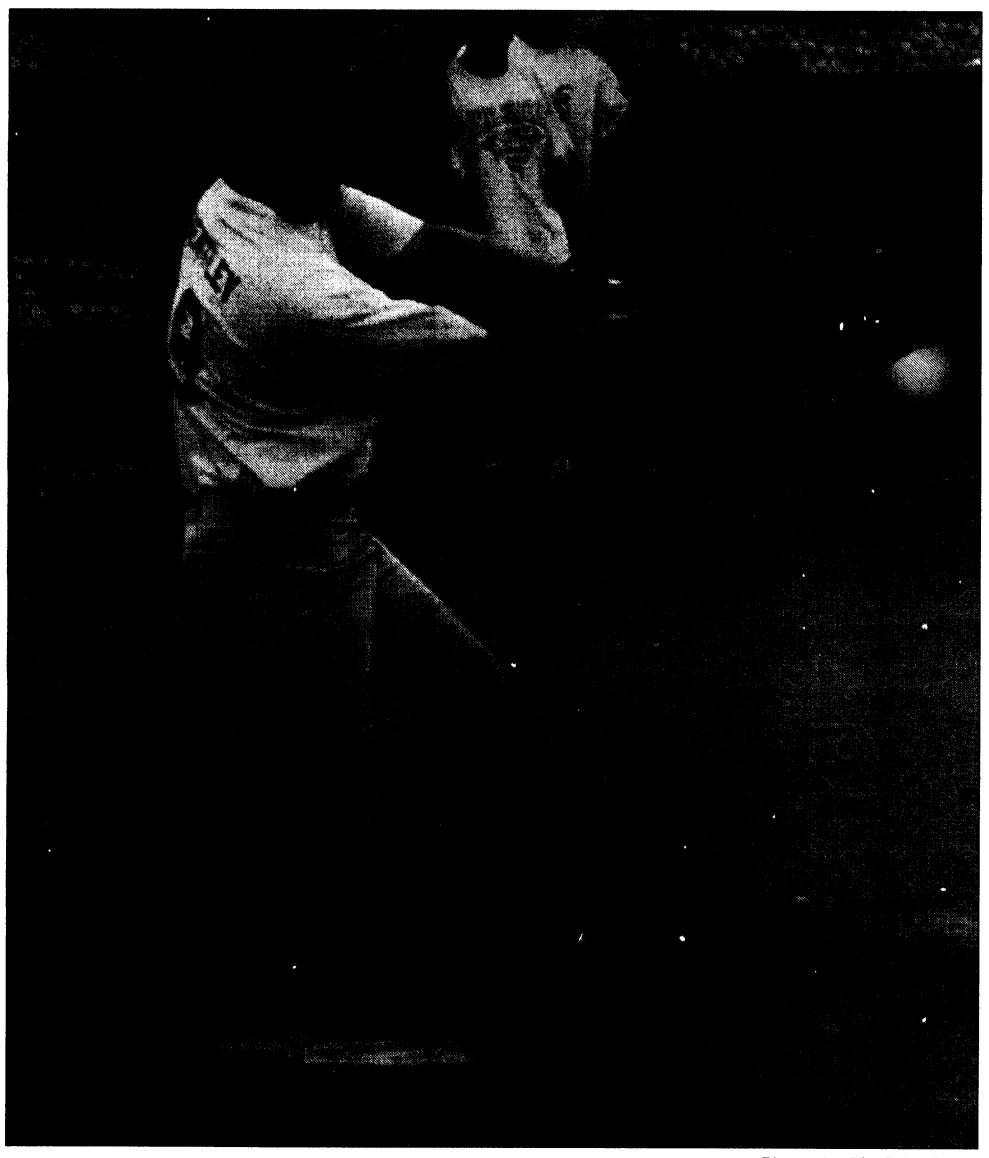
Both teams would have had nearly perfect records, except they each had to forfeit several games because of lack of players.

The hours that many of the drill sergeants and BCTB personnel have to keep and the taskings of 1st Bn., 30th Inf. Regt., took a toll on the number of players they are able to use.

"We do it for fun and don't take it too seriously. We all just like to come out here and have a good time building unit cohesion," said Ramel DeReese, Steel Soldier.

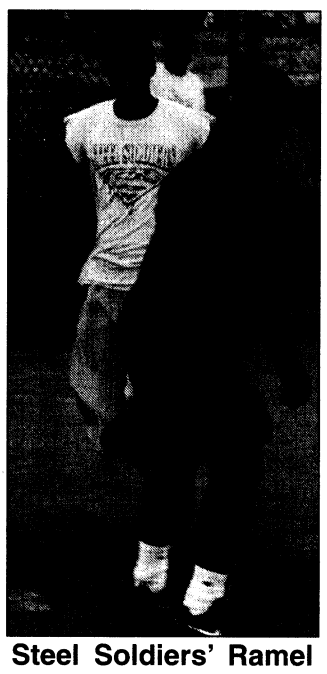
The Headhunters came back with the help of coach Richard Anthony Simmons who went 4-for-4 helping the rally to close the gap in score. Calls of "easy out" came from the Steel Soldiers before a Headhunter came to the plate, but the Headhunters kept on getting on base. With bases loaded, Lynn Price, right fielder, drove in three runs hit deep to left field. The Headhunters weren't slowed down until they had brought the game within reach at 15-9.

The Steel Soldiers got in four more runs at the top of the fifth inning. Then as the night were wearing on, the umpires declared the game would end after the fifth inning.



The Headhunters came out in a display of force. Calvin Sherman, catcher, who went 3-for-3 to make some of his first hits of the season, started the Headhunters out with a double.

He was sent home with the help of a double from William Bradley, Headhunters' pitcher.



Then a tangle in the outfield gave the opportunity for the Headhunters to put in two more runs.

"We started the game strong but near the end of the game, we started missing fly balls," Clements said. "We just squeaked by. We should have been able to beat them by more runs."

"We beat last year's champs (Darby's Rangers, Ranger Training Brigade)," DeReese said. It was a lot like this game where we took the lead in the end. We deserve to take the championship. We're a good team."

Post soldier coaches girls World Series softball team

Instructor's daughter helps represent Ga.

Spc. Douglas DeMaio
Bayonet staff

A Fort Benning soldier will coach a girls 13-14- and 15-year-old softball team during the Softball World Series Friday through Thursday in Eufaula, Ala.

Staff Sgt. Julia Lowthorpe, 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment, will watch her Georgia champions, Marion County Wildcats from the Dixie League, take to the field at 4 p.m. Saturday in the team's first ever game in the Softball World Series.

"It's an opportunity of a lifetime," Lowthorpe said. "It took a lot of hard work, dedication and team cohesion from the girls."

One Wildcat defined the season as a 'change for the better.'

"I think we have a pretty good chance," said 14-year-old Rebecca Larsen, daughter of Sgt. 1st Class Matt Larsen, 1st Bn., 11th Inf. Regt. "We are going to the World Series, and we're going to do our best."

Lowthorpe believes aggressive base running helped the team succeed, and Rebecca said the team's strong defense helped the Wildcats excel.

"When we entered the sixth game five and 0, it hit us that we were a good team," Lowthorpe said of the team from a town with one stoplight.

"I know we are the underdogs, but we'll do our best," Rebecca said. "It's really exciting to get a chance to represent the state of Georgia."

She encouraged post community members to show their support by coming out to the ball game. To get to Eufaula, travel west on U.S. 286, then south 70 miles on U.S. 431 and go east on Ala. 10.

USAMU soldiers win competitions

Team returns from Ohio victorious

Paula Pagán

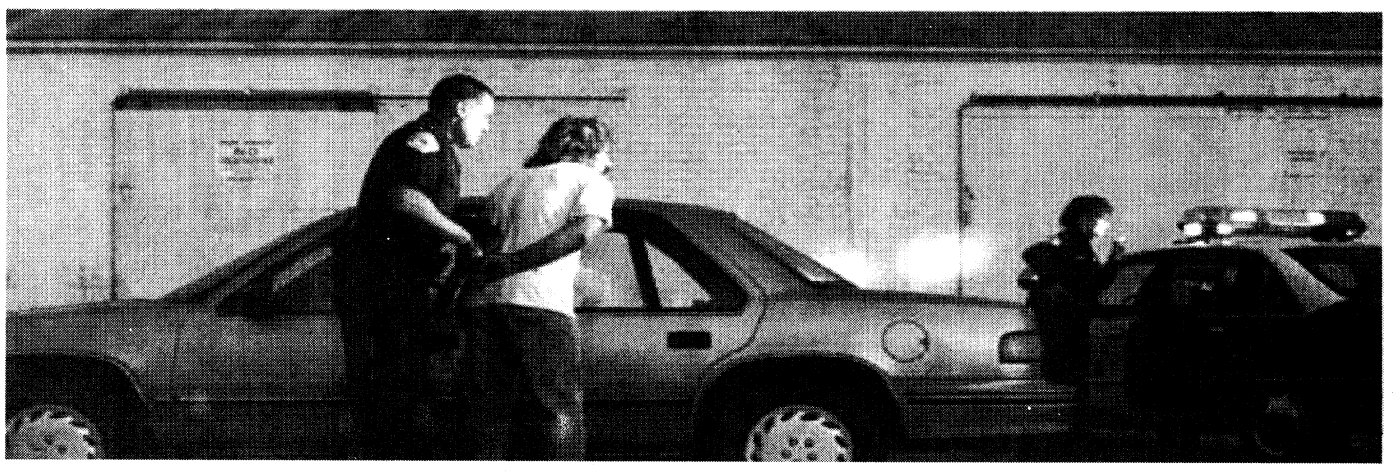
Vehicles Seized By Police To Be Sold Off To Local Car Buyers

Seized, confiscated and impounded vehicles result in unheard of low prices on cars, trucks, vans and sport utilities



Columbus, GA, While it's still true "Crime doesn't pay" for the criminal, it may turn out to be quite rewarding for some local area car buyers this weekend. Thru Saturday, the criminal's loss is your gain as Rivertown Ford in Georgia will be offering vehicles seized by law enforcement agencies for sale direct to the public.

Buying police and government seized property has long been a great way to get incredibly low prices on cars, boats, even planes and houses. The problem for the public has been finding the auctions and sales where these items were being sold. Plus, many of these events are not open to the public. But that's now all in the past thanks to the Police Seized Vehicle Selloff .

"There are no special permits or licenses needed to shop or buy."

Why are these such bargains? Simply put, it's because the law enforcement organizations that take possession of these vehicles aren't in the car business. The F.B.I., D.E.A., U.S. Marshalls, Government Auctions and local Police and Sherriff organizations all seize vehicles on a daily basis. Additionally, a surprising number of vehicles impounded by the Police for illegal parking or traffic violations are never claimed by their owners. As a result, these organizations must either pay to store the vehicles, or sell them off.

Now, Rivertown Ford has secured many of these vehicles and will pass the savings on to consumers. "We have been planning for this event for over six months. We've scoured auctions throughout the country for these vehicles plus we've become a regular at the local impound lots" said Williams. He also stressed the dealership will make available plenty of other preowned vehicles so this event will include something for every buyer. "Hondas, Fords, Chevys, Toyotas, Dodges, Chryslers, Nissans, Volkswagens, virtually every make is represented here. Some are even still under factory warranty. But you should get here early because I'm sure the most popular vehicles will sell first."

The War On Drugs and "Three-Strike" laws have resulted in an overflow of vehicles becoming Police property.

"Many buyers can just sign the necessary paperwork and drive home with no down payment."

Brad Williams, General Sales Manager, added buying one of these vehicles will be super simple. "There are no special permits or licenses needed to shop or buy. Plus, many buyers can just sign the necessary paperwork and drive home with no down payment. And with these incredibly low prices, some payments are just $97 a month."

"With these incredibly low prices, some payments are just $97 a month!"

Williams concluded with a warning that this one-of-kind-event could be a one-time-only event. "It took a lot of work to put this event together and I'm not sure we'll be able to do it again. Make sure you come see us because missing the Police Seized Sell-Off would be a crime!"

RivertownFord is located at 1680 Whittlesey Rd. in Columbus, GA or call 706-653-7420 . For further information and to reserve a vehicle, visit the official Police Seized Vehicle Selloff web site at www.PoliceSeized.com.

DoD plan to soften hit of RIF

DoD program places workers in new jobs

Pfc. Brian Trapp

For those who will be affected by the reduction in force, there is a placement program available to assist employees in locating available jobs.

Employees can register in the Priority Placement Program, a computerized referral system used throughout Department of Defense to place federal employees willing to relocate to other installations.

"This program is useful especially if people are mobile and serious about keeping a federal job," said Hans Knoff, chief of Management Advisory Service Division.

Outbreak no cause for alarm

West Nile Virus dates back to 1930s

Spc. Douglas DeMaio
Bayonet staff

The West Nile Virus is back, and there have never been more cases in a year reported to the Center for Disease Control.

As of Monday, 88 cases of the virus have been confirmed for 2002. Five of the 88 confirmed resulted in death and more than 65 percent of the reports are from Louisiana.

The outbreak is beginning to cause some alarm within the Fort Benning community, said Command Sgt. Maj. Dallas Carter, 2nd Battalion, 54th Infantry Regiment.

"My concerns are for the soldiers in my unit, family members and the Columbus area," Carter said. "Soldiers training in the field are exposed to the risk of this outbreak."

It is important to use bug repellent to help prevent infection, said Spc. Randy Wilson, 2nd Battalion, 47th Infantry Regiment.

"During basic training, we receive safety briefings about spiders, snakes and other animals," Wilson said. "I believe this issue is just as important, if not more important than the other briefings.

In the 1930s, asymptomatic infections and feverish-like symptoms began to sweep across Africa, West Asia and the Middle East. By 1937, in the West Nile District of Uganda, a

Smokers pose risk to selves, others

Habit's effects can include death, suffering

Sgt. William A. Graves
Bayonet assistant editor

This is the second part in a three-part series that explores smoking in the work place.

Smoking caused approximately 440,000 premature deaths in the U.S. annually and approximately $157 billion in annual health-related economic losses from 1995 to 1999, according to the Center for Disease Control Web site.

Most of these premature deaths were attributed to lung cancer, ischemic heart disease and chronic airways obstruction. Smokers are not the only ones who lose. Approximately 38,000 of the deaths during the five-year period were a result of lung cancer and ischemic heart diseases caused by secondhand smoke.

People should remember, smokeless tobacco can cause problems, too, such as bleeding gums and sores of the mouth that never heal, according to the Web site. Eventually users may end up with cancer.

"The good news is it is never too late to quit!" said Dr. (Lt. Col.) John O'Brien, Department of Family Practice and Community Medicine. "The risk of heart disease diminishes almost immediately after quitting."

For cardiovascular disease, the risk to former smokers drops substantially in the first two to three years, and in 10 years, is equal to people who never smoked.

For cancer, after quitting for 15 years, the risk of death is reduced by 80-90 percent, but it will never equal the risk of nonsmokers.

For strokes, an approximate 80 percent reduction in the risk of death is seen within five years.

For emphysema and chronic bronchitis, it depends on when the smoker quits. If a smoker quits:

- By age 40, there may be no detectable difference in lung function between smokers and those who never smoked,
- Between ages 40 and 60, lung

SELFLESS SERVICE

You could learn a lot from a hero

Pfc. Brian Trapp
Bayonet staff

COMMENTARY

True selfless service can only be realized in situations where there's no time to consider all angles of the problem.

At the age of 21, Spc. Michael Fitzmaurice risked his life for his fellow soldiers in the 17th Cavalry, 101st Airborne Division, in Khe Sanh, Vietnam, in 1971.

When three explosive charges were thrown into his bunker, he threw two of the charges back out, then threw his flak vest and himself over the remaining charge to absorb the blast.

Being selfless is not natural to the human mind. It's geared for survival. Fitzmaurice's actions were contrary human nature.

Suffering partial loss of sight and a number of serious wounds, Fitzmaurice charged out of the bunker and engaged the enemy until his rifle was damaged by a hand grenade. While searching for another weapon he fought a North Vietnamese soldier in hand-to-hand combat. He then returned to his original fighting position, refused medical evacuation, and continued to defend his position against the attacking enemy.

Unlike many Medal of Honor awardees, Fitzmaurice survived his act of heroism.

He didn't do it for the award or stop to think about how good it would feel to help the war effort. He acted on instinct. He stopped thinking about himself and did what he needed to do to save the lives of many other soldiers.

Everyone wants to believe he would "do something," but there is no in-between when it comes to true selfless service. If everyone else worried a little bit less about themselves and more for the common good of the community, we'd all be better off.

COMMENTARY

Paranoia is my middle name. I keep my doors locked. I try not to go out after dark alone. When I leave the mall, my keys and police whistle are in my hand and I make a beeline to my car. When I'm cycling on the Riverwalk, I pack a cell phone and pepper spray (which I know how to use) instead of a patch kit and tools (which I shouldn't be allowed to touch).

As our daughter becomes more independent, I try to walk the line between teaching caution and scaring her silly. I don't like being preoccupied with personal safety, and it grieves me to think my daughter would grow up thinking like me.

Then, in the span of a few short months, two junior high cheerleaders disappeared in Oregon. Elizabeth Smart was taken from her bedroom in Utah. Samantha Runnion was snatched from her grandmother's yard. Days after Samantha's murder, two men grabbed Erica Pratt from a Philadelphia sidewalk. Their names join a growing roster, preceded by children like Polly Klaas and Danielle Van Dam.

It occurred to me that in spite of my quirks, I am a functioning adult, and maybe my overly cautious approach helped get me here. I don't ride the Riverwalk after dark unless it's a group ride, but it's not unusual for me to ride solo during the day. It's not all strangers that I avoid, just the few that set off warning bells. It's not unusual for me to shop after dark. But I go to busy, well lit areas.

Before my daughter learned to swim, I took a lot of heat because she was afraid to get in a pool without an adult. I put that fear into her. I wanted her to be afraid of the water until she could swim. But I saw to it that she learned to swim, and now that fear is the healthy respect it should be.

I think that dealing with strangers is the same. For now, she needs to be afraid.

I've coached my daughter, and I hope the rules sink in. Stay in sight. Talk to anyone you want if I'm holding your hand. Don't judge someone by how they look or what they say. Don't let strangers get close enough to touch you, and if they do, scream, "This is not my parent." If we get separated in a crowded area, stand still. If we get separated in a store, don't leave. If you need help, always go to a woman who has children with her. No matter how big someone is, it's going to hurt if you pinch the underside of his upper arm or the inside of his thigh. If you are grabbed, get out of your clothes if that's what it will take to get away and do whatever it takes to stay out of the creep's car. You aren't big enough to battle him into submission, so do everything you can to buy some time.

Some of her little friends take self defense classes. They think that they can defend themselves. Is this your child? Get real. If you were barely four feet tall and weighed 70 pounds, could you defend yourself from an adult male? It's not right that children aren't safe from predators, but this is the real world, and that's how it is.

While we do what we can to change that, we need to protect them. Like it or not, fear may be their best defense.

Moving. We've all done it. With each new house comes the challenge of making it a home, taking a blank space and adding personality to make it comfortable for family and friends. It's an even bigger challenge to do all that without spending a lot of money.

My husband hates to move. He also hates it when I decide to paint. Naturally, I got the urge to paint my kitchen. I bought a gallon of the color I wanted and a gallon of glaze, so I could try a new technique.

I mixed up my small test batch — seven parts of glaze to one part of paint — and went to work with my trusty brush, planning to do one wall. Several hours later, I finished the entire kitchen, all on half a cup of paint. I think I'll be moving that gallon of "Soft Apricot" around for a few years.

I've decided that I hate it when I paint, too. So, I abandoned the paint and turned my attention to a wallpaper border. I had all the right tools from a job I completed under the watchful eye of my mother, who survived 36 years of military moves. Mom has given me some sage advice through the years. She even had wisdom for wallpaper.

"Never hang wallpaper with your spouse," she said. Inevitably, someone wants to slap the paper up, and the other wants to use a magnifying glass to match seams. Without my husband around, now was the perfect time.

At this point, it might be enlightening to mention that my in-laws came to visit last weekend. I still had boxes to unpack, but I was fixated on hanging this border.

I brushed the adhesive on all 15 feet of paper, then tried to hang it at the top of an eight-foot wall with only a short step stool. The blasted thing didn't stick. The next thing I knew, the border turned into a black and tan python, winding around me, the shower head and the legs of the stool. Now, I had another problem. How could I keep it stuck to the wall, hold the rest of the roll and, and move the stool around the room? I desperately needed another hand.

I grabbed the only thing I could find in the bathroom — a plunger. I grabbed the "yucky" end and used the handle to hold the border to the wall while I slid the stool around and around the room. I got that roll up, then the second, then the third. It was the wee hours of the morning when I stepped back to admire my handiwork.

The cost for all this, you might ask?

Discount wallpaper border —$9.48, Adhesive — $6.90, Plunger — $4.95. If there had been a video camera in the bathroom, well, it would have been priceless. And I was lucky, the border was still hanging when I woke up.

When you run out of paper, keep flossing

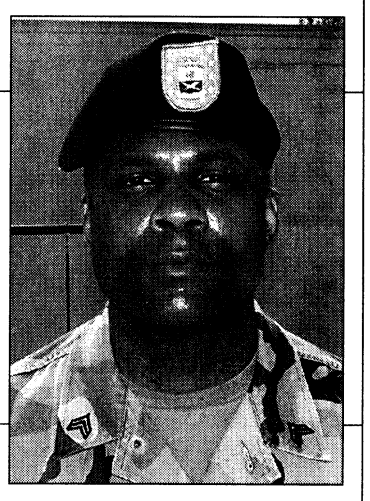
COMMENTARY



Recently I came across a compilation of questionable statistics about longevity, which said people who floss their teeth on a regular basis live an average of 10 years longer than those who don't, mothers of boys have a shorter life expectancy than mothers of girls, and a study of early schoolwork of octogenarians showed that those who wrote longer, compound sentences with bigger words lived longer than those who wrote shorter, less complex sentences, which started me thinking about my own mortality, and now here I sit, flossing, and wondering if the fact that I have two girls cancels out the fact that I have two boys who would otherwise surely be the death of me, and it occurs to me that though I take a fistful of multivitamins everyday, exercise semi-regularly — given the fact I tote laundry up the stairs and down the stairs — and eat enough vegetables to keep Del Monte in de money, maybe there are other things I could and should be doing to maximize my chances of living to see my children's children have children, because I'm certain I'd make a great grandmother, because who better to spoil the diapered darlings than a pampered grandparent, if you get my drift, which I seem to be doing, so let me get back to the subject at hand, which was the pursuit of long life through the use of long sentences, I believe, and though it makes absolutely no sense to me, I'm willing to give it a try, and though it's getting a little more difficult right about now, I'm determined to continue until I run out of

Rock of the Marne welcomes new leader

Commander pledges to keep standard

Pfc. Chris Stephens
Bayonet staff

A former rifle platoon leader received his long-awaited assignment to Sand Hill, as he took command of the Rock of the Marne Battalion at a change of command ceremony Monday on Pomeroy Field.

Lt. Col. James F. Todd assumed command of the 1st Battalion, 38th Infantry Regiment, from Lt. Col. Michael E. Culpepper, who is heading to Kelley Hill to become the Deputy Commanding Officer of 3rd Brigade, 3rd Infantry Division.

"It's been a pleasure to work with all of the soldiers at the battalion," Culpepper said. "I've seen many young, enthusiastic soldiers come and go, and it has made my job worthwhile."

Todd is coming from his assignment as the chief, Plans and Mobilization Division, Directorate of Operations and Training, and said he is looking forward to participating in some of the training with the soldiers.

"I'm real excited about having the opportunity to take command of a first-class battalion," Todd said. "I plan to keep up the standards and get the soldiers ready to go to Advanced Individual Training."

Todd has served in a variety of assignments, which include: the 9th Infantry Division at Fort Lewis, Wash., where he served as a rifle and mortar platoon leader with the 2nd Battalion, 47th Infantry Regiment, ranger platoon leader with 2nd Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment, Operations Officer of 7th Battalion, 6th Infantry Regiment, in Germany, 7th Battalion, 6th Infantry Regiment, during Operation Desert Storm, observer controller at the National Training Center, executive officer of 2nd Battalion, 8th Infantry Regiment at Fort Hood, Texas. and the 4th Infantry Division chief of training at Fort Hood.

Todd received his commission in 1984 as an infantry second lieutenant.

His military education includes the Infantry Officer Basic and Advanced Courses, the Combined Arms and Services Staff School and the Command General Staff College.

Todd is married to Adele Todd. They have five children; James, Daniel, Marc, Paul and Anna.

Heat injury causes death

USAIC Public Affairs Office

The final results of an autopsy conducted on a 22-year-old lieutenant, who died during a land navigation training exercise in July, determined the cause of death was due to heat stroke.

2nd Lt. Zachariah R. Miller, of Stoneboro, Pa., was attending the 75th Ranger Regiment Training Detachment's pre-Ranger course.

When he failed to return to the base station at the end of the allotted time for the land navigation course, members of the 75th Ranger Regiment immediately began a search.

Miller was found dead later that day. He was here following his graduation in June from the U.S. Military Academy, West Point, N.Y.

He was to attend the University of Oxford in England this fall as a Rhodes scholar.

Army secretary talks Bragg issues

Army support of families increases

Jim Caldwell
TRADOC News Service

SUFFOLK, Va. — Secretary of the Army Thomas White told reporters and members of the Joint Forces Command today that Army Transformation is on schedule and that Army leadership is looking for answers to the four murders of spouses of soldiers at Fort Bragg, N.C.

White visited JFCOM headquarters Aug. 1 to receive a briefing and updates on Millennium Challenge 2002, an exercise and experimentation involving all branches of the armed forces.

He said that parts of the Army Transformation Plan announced by Army Chief of Staff Gen. Eric K. Shinseki in October 1999 "are part of our fundamental objectives today."

The goals of Army Transformation included creating network-centric organizations, lighten logistics trails and the Future Combat System platforms that are more lethal with more personnel protection. They will be combat platforms to increase strategic-tactical deployment and operational mobility.

The interim armored combat vehicle, the Stryker, is now being delivered to Stryker Brigade Combat Teams at Fort Lewis, Wash.

A Stryker company deployed to the National Training Center, Fort Irwin, Calif., is operating with an 82nd Airborne Brigade in the Army Transformation Experiment 2002, part of MC02.

"The Stryker Brigade is really one component of the overall Transformation we started three years ago," White said. "And, I think the Strykers being involved in their first joint exercise … is evident of the fact that we're bringing (Transformation) to fruition."

The secretary stressed that the Army will always operate as part of a joint team.

> "There is nothing more important than what we're doing than operating in this joint environment. And we look forward to future exercises in support of JFCOM."
> Thomas White
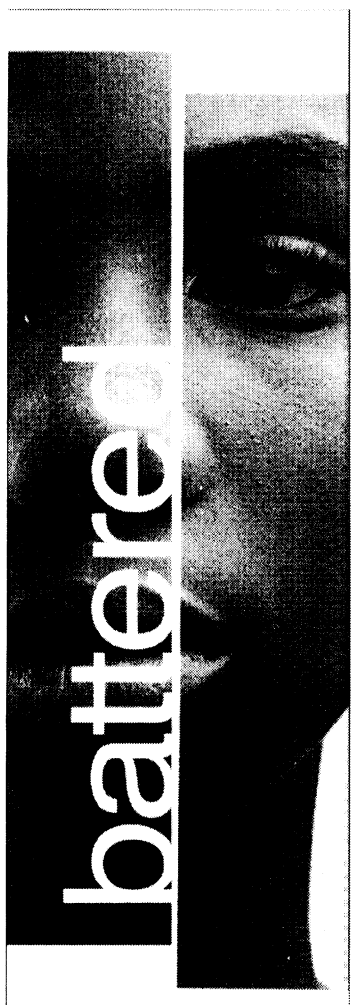
> Secretary of the Army

"The Army exists to be the land component of joint forces," White said. "There is nothing more important than what we're doing than operating in this joint environment. And we look forward to future exercises in support of JFCOM and the enhancement of our ability to operate as a member of the joint team."

When he was asked about the four soldiers at Fort Bragg, N.C., who murdered their wives, White said,



"We're tremendously concerned because it represents a tragic loss of life from the Army family. We are a married Army and the welfare of soldiers and their families is of paramount concern to us."

In response to a question about if there was some connection between duty in Afghanistan and the murders, White pointed out that one of the four soldiers had not deployed to Afghanistan.

He also pointed out that family advocacy programs are active throughout the Army and that it is supported by chaplains and leaders.

"We do an enormous amount with families on a daily basis, but, obviously with the extraordinary situation we've had at Fort Bragg, we've taken it up several notches," White said. "Those issues are under investigation by our leaders at Fort Bragg."

The Benning Boulevard checkpoint will be closed at 11:30 p.m. Saturday and reopen at 11 p.m. Sunday. The South Lumpkin Road checkpoint will be open during that time.

It could happen to any one of us. And if it did, wouldn't you pray for someone to help you put your life back together. We're here for Donna for as long as it takes.

PPP: Helps workers stay in government, relocate available jobs. The most commonly used are the PPP and the DoD placement plan for employees under grade retention.

"There is no guarantee everyone will be placed with this program," Knoff said.

During a mock RIF in 2000, 12 people took jobs elsewhere with the program. Since then a lot of workforce changes have taken place, and those numbers aren't very good indicators of how many people will be affected in the upcoming RIF, said an A76 official.

Personnel can register in the program in October after the RIF letters go out.

Registration in PPP is mandatory for activities within the commuting area when:

• The employee is pending separation without an offer at their current grade as a result of RIF.

• The employee has declined a transfer of function offer.

While registration does not guarantee continued employment, use of the PPP resumes is required at all DoD installations.

Normally, when an installation has a vacancy to be filled that matches the employee's skills and acceptable grade, a job offer is required. Employees should be prepared to discuss with a DCP representative their knowledge, skills and abilities, in addition to where they would be willing to relocate and at what grade level.

Employees can remain in the program for the duration of the 60-day notice period. If the employee is separated, they can remain registered for 12 months after separation.

During this period, placement in an appropriate position, declination of a valid offer, retirement or a personal request will terminate the employee's registration in the program. One valid offer is all that will be made to an employee. Once the employee accepts an offer, the government will pay related travel and transportation costs to the new location to the maximum extent permitted under the DoD Joint Travel Regulations.

Virus: Not reported in Columbus, Fort Benning community woman became the first known person to be diagnosed with the West Nile Virus.

The West Nile Virus has become the second leading cause of encephalitis, a swelling of the brain, according to a memorandum from the Assistant Secretary of Defense, William Winkenwerder, dated July 11. It has spread to almost every state east of the continental divide and is moving westward.

"There is no evidence of the virus present at Fort Benning or in the Columbus area," said Lt. Col. Joaquin Oronoz, chief of Preventive Medicine, Martin Army Community Hospital. "Even in the areas where the virus is circulating, only a few mosquitoes are infected with the virus."

The chance of suffering severe effects from the virus after being infected is less than 1 percent, and of those the chance of death is 3 to 15 percent, according to the CDC.

There is no cure for the disease. Person-to-person transmission is unlikely. There is no documented proof of the virus being transmitted that way, according to the CDC.

Persons over the age of 50 have an increased risk of being infected. However, that doesn't exclude children and young adults from being infected, according to the CDC. The incubation period of the virus to reach encephalitis is three to 15 days.

> "Even in the areas where the virus is circulating, only a few mosquitoes are infected with the virus."
> Lt. Col. Joaquin Oronoz
> chief of Preventive Medicine, MACH

Symptoms of West Nile encephalitis are mild fever, headaches, body aches, skin rash and swollen lymph glands. Severe infections may be noted from high fever, neck stiffness, disorientation, convulsions, muscle weakness and paralysis.

There is no specific therapy for treating West Nile encephalitis. However, intravenous fluids, respiratory support and airway management are some of the supportive treatments in severe cases.

Actions are being taken to reduce or prevent the spread of the disease.

Surveillance programs are coordinating federal, state and local health department reports of all cases of the virus or potential outbreaks. They also identify potential breeding sites and test mosquitoes for the virus.

"To help prevent mosquitoes from breeding, remove standing water from around your home," Oronoz said.

In addition, the Center for Integration of Natural Disaster Information — Science for a Changing World recommends people apply screens to doors, stay indoors during mosquitoes' feeding hours, which often includes dusk and dawn, wear long sleeve shirts and pants, and drink lots of water.

Insect repellent containing DEET is also recommended to reduce the risk of being bitten. Adults should apply repellent containing no more than 33 percent DEET, which is good for eight to 12 hours. For children, it is recommended to apply repellent containing no more than 10 percent DEET and with children less than 3-years-old, repellent should not be applied, according to the CDC.

Smokers: Increase disease risk, help available function levels will be about equal to that of non-smokers who are 2.5-7.5 years older.

• After age 60, lung function will be comparable to non-smokers 5.5-15 years older.

"Current smokers have lung function equivalent to those of non-smokers 10-20 years older!" O'Brien said.

For younger tobacco users, the threat of a premature death is generally not significant. For this group, it is important to point out that there are many non-lethal yet unpleasant effects of smoking, including the cost, bad breath, wrinkles, stained teeth and gum disease, decreased endurance and ability to exercise, cough and sore throat, increased infections and visits to the doctor, stomach ulcers, weak bones, and, for males, problems with erections.

Still, smokers will have one of the following reasons for not quitting, O'Brien said:

• Addiction: The nicotine in tobacco is thought to be second only to cocaine in terms of its addictive potential. Nicotine is actually a chemical that the body naturally produces, and it stimulates the nerves in the body.

Thus, when people try to quit, they experience severe cravings, called withdrawal symptoms. If smokers can get past these initial severe symptoms, they decrease rapidly.

• Habit: After smoking for several years, smoking becomes associated with other activities: driving in a car, eating dinner, drinking a beer, or taking a break from work. It then becomes a challenge to break these strong connections.

• Stress relief: Smoking is used as a manner of relaxation. Someone trying to quit will have to substitute another form of stress relief, such as exercise and meditation.

What should a smoker do to quit?

O'Brien recommended the following:

1. If addiction is the primary obstacle, the use of nicotine replacement therapy — the "patch," nicotine gum or inhaler — will help minimize the effects of the withdrawal symptoms.

2. For many smokers, the use of Zyban/Wellbutrin helps to minimize cigarette cravings and decrease weight gain associated with quitting.

3. The highest quit rates are seen with the combination of one or more of the above medications with a formal smoking cessation class. Martin Army Community Hospital has two locations where anyone can attend these classes:

• Internal Medicine Clinic — Classes are held from 12 to 1 p.m. Monday and Wednesday for 4 weeks.

• Family Practice Clinic — Classes are held from 7 to 9 p.m. Monday, Wednesday and Thursday of the first week, and then on the following two Thursdays.

The Center for Disease Control Web site recommends people:

1. Get ready and:

• Set a quit date,

• Change their environment,

• Review past attempts to quit and learn from mistakes.

2. Seek support and encouragement. Studies have shown that people have a better chance of being successful if they have help. People should tell their family, friends, and co-workers that they are going to quit and want their support.

3. Learn new skills and behaviors. People should:

• Try to distract themselves from urges to smoke,

• When they first try to quit, change their routine,

• Plan something enjoyable to do every day,

• Drink a lot of water and other fluids.

4. Be prepared for relapse or difficult situations. Most relapses occur within the first three months after quitting. People shouldn't be discouraged if they start smoking again. Remember, most people try several times before they finally quit. Smokers should avoid alcohol and other smokers, and remember weight gain, bad mood or depression may result when they quit.

"For smokers, quitting smoking is very difficult, but well worth it," O'Brien said. "I encourage (people) to talk with (their) primary care provider about the reasons to quit and the obstacles (they) will need to overcome.

"For non-smokers, please understand that smokers need our help to quit. Smokers are not bad people, just people that somehow acquired a bad habit. When a smoker is trying to quit, be tolerant of their moodiness, yet supportive of their effort."

Quitting is possible. Just ask Sgt. Joshua Davis, the commanding general's driver. He was one of the 46.5 million people over 18 who smoked in 1999, but he quit Jan 24.

"Everyone who smokes, dips or chews knows that it is unhealthy, Davis said. "Sometimes you just need a kick in the rear to motivate you.

His kick came from the CG.

"When the post commander takes interest in your bad habits, it is a wake up moment," Davis said.

He used a smoking cessation class on post to quit.

"They provided me with the nicotine patches and the classes to help deal with the mental aspect of my addiction," Davis said.

His advice?

"First, you have to want to quit. If you don't want to quit, you won't. Second, get into a program. You will be able to talk to other people who are going through what you are. And last, get an accountability partner, someone who will keep you on track and who you can talk to during the tough moments."

As a result of quitting, he said his mind, body, and spirit feel outstanding.

"I have more energy, and I know that through God anything is possible. If I can break an eight-year habit, anyone can. I still have moments when I want to smoke. But, all I have to do is remember the first month after quitting, and I don't pick one up."

For more information about the smoking cessation program, call 544-3065 or 544-1255.

Ephedrine supplements raise concern

Installations pulling drug from shelves

Angela Sachitano
Special to the Bayonet©

Officers and family members exercising at the Officer's Club Fitness Center will no longer be able to purchase energy drinks containing the herbal supplement ephedrine.

The club has removed all of the popular drinks off the shelves and has decided not to sell them to soldiers, no matter what the circumstances.

"We received a memo from Fort Benning officials not to sell the products because of the potential fatal effects they can have on soldiers working out," said Vickie Gathers, Officer's Club fitness specialist. "Officers try to talk us into it, but we have strict orders now not to distribute those products."

The decision to pull ephedrine from the coolers of the O-Club comes just months after medical reports show two Fort Hood, Texas soldiers died after using ephedrine before a PT test.

The deaths of two Fort Jackson, S.C., soldiers this summer have also been linked to ephedrine, according to the Moncrief Army Community Hospital.

"Ephedra's effects on the body include an increase in heart rate and blood pressure, and it actually has a thermogenic effect, which means it raises the body temperature," said Maj. Eric Lund, chief of preventive medicine at Fort Hood's Darnall Army Hospital. "This puts people who are training in hot weather at higher risks for heat injuries."

Although ephedrine continues to grow in popularity, caution around the drug is also increasing on an international level, according to the Public Citizen's Health Research Group Web site. Health Canada, the Canadian health department, requested a recall of all ephedrine products in January. The United States Navy has also pulled ephedrine from shelves.

"All three military services have documented medical cases where significant adverse events and deaths have occurred among active-duty service members taking dietary supplements containing ephedrine," said Navy Surgeon General Rich Nelson. "This has led to a Navy ban of the sale of ephedrine products at stores on Pearl Harbor and the Marine base Kaneohe Bay."

> "The storm over ephedrine is brewing. This is likely just the beginning. I wouldn't be surprised if ephedrine is banned completely from post soon."
> Vickie Gathers
> Officers' Club fitness specialist

As far as the rest of the military stores and installations, only time will tell what will happen with ephedrine products, Gathers said. The officers club on Fort Benning is sticking to its policy, however, the products can still be bought at the GNC health-food stores on post.

"The storm over ephedrine is brewing," Gathers said. "This is likely just the beginning. I wouldn't be surprised if ephedrine is banned completely from post soon."

WHINSEC students learn about Columbus politics

City officials help teach institute

Lee A. Rials
WHINSEC Public Affairs

Democratic Sustainment Course students from the Western Hemisphere Institute for Security Cooperation took their understanding of U.S. local government to a new level at the Columbus Government Center Wednesday.

Dr. Russell Ramsey, course instructor, with the cooperation and assistance of Columbus City Manager Carmen Cavezza, placed students in the roles of mayor, city councilors and city attorney. At various times, Ramsey was a disgruntled citizen, an experienced advisor, but always the teacher. Cavezza acted in his own official role and added many details of how the city government operates its council meetings. Role-playing students as well as the students who provided the audience asked some very pointed questions to clearly understand what the city government does, its powers and its limitations.

After the session, Cavezza pointed out the difference between life as a military officer and the way a city government works.

"I hope you can imagine the change from being a general to working in the democratic process," he said.

He used the Lincolnian phrase "of the people, by the people, and for the people" to explain that many viewpoints affect the city's decision-making process.

Twenty four men and women are attending the six-week course that offers guidance on appropriate roles of government officials in a democracy. The class members represent military, law enforcement, and civilians from eight countries in Central and South America.

DoD announces proposal for Tricare delivery

New contracts will reward good service

Department of Defense

The Department of Defense Tricare Management Activity released a request for proposal today for a multibillion dollar health care delivery package to serve DoD's 8.7 million Tricare beneficiaries.

"Our new Tricare contracts will reward superior customer service, simplify administration of Tricare, and increase the ability of local medical commanders to best serve their local beneficiaries," said Assistant Secretary of Defense for Health Affairs Dr. William Winkenwerder.

The solicitation will result in the award of three contracts covering the North, South and Western regions of the United States.

Each contract includes a transition period of 10 months, plus five one-year option periods for health care delivery.

Copies of the solicitation are available electronically only and may be downloaded from the Tricare Web site at http://www.tricare.osd.mil/contracting/healthcare/solicitations/MCSS.

Paper copies will not be made available. Questions must be submitted electronically through the Tricare Web site using the "E-mail Questions to the Contracting Officer" option.

Proposals are to be submitted electronically. TMA will announce the contract awards at a later date to be determined. Subsequent solicitation announcements will be forthcoming for other support services.

For updates on the next generation of Tricare contracts, interested parties should frequently check the Tricare Web site at http://www.tricare.osd.mil/pmo/t-nex/.

Army introduces new board system

Move cancels hardcopy files, adds clarity

Army News Service

ALEXANDRIA, Va. — The Army's sergeant-major board meeting this fall will test a new Automated Selection Board System that eliminates hardcopy files and presents records to board members only as electronic files.

Of the master sergeants in the zone for promotion, only those in the medical field (Career Management Field 91) will be in the test population, personnel officials said.

Board members will review individual CMF 91 files (official military personnel file, photo, enlisted record brief and letter to the board president, if submitted) on the ASBS as electronic files.

The board will review hardcopy records for NCOs in all other career management fields, officials said.

The board is scheduled to convene at the U.S. Army Enlisted Records and Evaluation Center in Indianapolis Oct. 1. It will review files for those being considered for promotion to sergeant major and command sergeant major, and for those being considered for attendance at the Sergeants Major Course.

CMF 91 noncommissioned officers should review, update and sign their hardcopy enlisted record briefs and DA Form 2-1 to ensure the board has a current back-up record, personnel officials advised.

They said NCOs can do this with servicing personnel offices as done in the past.

NCOs in the test population should also access their electronic promotion file via the EREC web site at www.erec.army.mil, officials advised.

Once there on the site, CMF 91 NCOs will be able to access their records by clicking on "promotion file." Within the promotion file there are several tabs (OMPF, Photo, ERB and Statements).

OMPFs should be reviewed for missing or incorrect information, officials advise. They said questions or changes to files can be made directly to EREC following the instructions provided on the EREC web site in the "Enlisted Records Division/OMPF" portal.

Customer service representatives are available by calling (866) 771-6357 or DSN 699-3361. Official photos can be viewed by clicking the "photo" tab. EREC is in the process of scanning the current hardcopy photograph that is on file at EREC.

> "Future board members will use 21-inch monitors giving greater clarity than the microfiche ever did"
> George Piccirilli
> Director, Management Support Division, U.S. Army Personnel Command

"We'll scan in approximately 500 photographs for the CMF 91 NCOs prior to the document cutoff date of Sept. 13," said Sgt. Maj. Deborah Seimer at EREC. The remaining photos will be hardcopy.

Regardless of career management field, all NCOs in the zone are asked to process the appropriate SGM/SMC declination statement or CSM acceptance/declination statement in the "statements" tab, officials said.

The first officers files that will test the automated selection process will be the Colonel Army Medical command selection board which takes place from Jan. 21-31, officials said. They added that the next test board will be the Feb. 4 Captain AMEDD promotion selection board. The U.S. Army Reserve Personnel Command in St. Louis began automated boards in February for medical and chaplain boards, an ARPERSCOM official said.

"Officers and non-commissioned officers alike will be notified to review their electronic file through Army Knowledge Online," said George Piccirilli, the director of the Management Support Division in U.S. Army Personnel Command. He said soldiers and officers will essentially validate their own promotion file that board members see. Electronic review of their performance file and photo online is key to the selection process, he said.

"Future board members will use 21-inch monitors giving greater clarity than the microfiche ever did," Piccirilli said. This process will work.

Battle of Hamburger Hill veteran dies in Calif.

Melissa House
Special to the Bayonet©

A former Fort Benning soldier was buried Wednesday with full military honors at the Riverside National Cemetery in Riverside, Calif. Soldiers from Fort Irwin conducted the ceremony.

Retired Master Sgt. Michael J. Murphy was a survivor of the battle of "Hamburger Hill" in Vietnam that was later retold in a 1987 film.

Fifty-six American soldiers from the 101st Airborne Division were killed and 420 wounded during the fight for Ap Bia Mountain May 10-20, 1969. Murphy was a veteran of two armed services, the Air Force from 1959 to 1963 and the Army from 1964 until he retired in 1980.

Murphy received his basic, airborne and ranger training at Fort Benning, and was stationed here during his service as well.

Murphy had a special fondness for Fort Benning, said family friend Kim Cennedy.

"I have family in La Grange now," she said, and when she visited them, she visited Fort Benning to see it for herself. "Mike was so proud of what he had done for his country," Cennedy said.

"He was proud, but humble," said Murphy's widow, Kathy. Murphy jumped into Cambodia and served three tours in Vietnam.

He generally only talked about his wartime experiences with other men, she said. When Murphy would return home, he never told his family exactly what he did.

Instead, "he would tell the kids he was 'on vacation'," she said. Murphy's last assignment was in Turkey during the Iranian hostage crisis.

Murphy received the Silver Star, Bronze Star Medal and three awards of the Purple Heart.

Soldiers train on Malone urban terrain site

Site offers real world training

Pfc. Chris Stephens

Pfc. Chris Stephens

A soldier from 1st Battalion, 19th Infantry Regiment, checks a trap door to clear an area at Malone MOUT. With soaring temperatures, soldiers modify their uniforms by rolling their sleeves, when training in heat category 5.

With the war on terrorism calling on soldiers to deploy around the world to various environments, soldiers continually train for situations that may present themselves in the future.

A Military Operations and Urbanized Terrain site is a mock city that lets soldiers train as they would fight in an urban environment. E Company, 1st Battalion, 19th Infantry Regiment, acclimated itself to the urban environment at the Malone MOUT site Aug. 2.

"We teach them the basics of entering and clearing a room," said Sgt. 1st Class Robert Frye. "When they get to their unit, wherever that may be, all of the details will be set by a unit Standard Operating Procedure on how the unit handles each situation."

The Infantry Training Brigade soldiers trained at the site for two days.

"The first day was the introduction to MOUT training," Frye said. "The second day is when we actually take them through the MOUT site and let them get a feel for movement through the site."

Frye stressed to his soldiers that in today's modern battlefield, very rarely is there a fight where a soldier doesn't have to clear a building.

The soldiers went through the proper procedures on how to enter a building and how to cover for a man who has a weapon malfunction while in the building.

The soldiers went through the exercise in four-man teams. The last soldier was designated the "door kicker." The soldier would kick in the door and move out of the way as his team moved into the building. The soldiers would then follow in close behind.

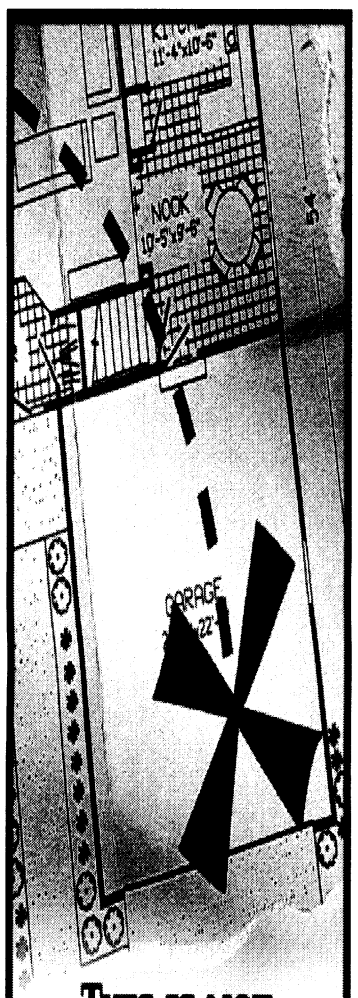
Once inside the building, the soldiers cleared their section and gave a status report when asked for it by the team leader.

While going through the buildings, the drill sergeants told the soldiers to work together as a unit.

"The mission couldn't get done if we didn't work as a team," said Pvt. Jeremy Taylor. "All four of us have a vital role, whether it be to cover the window, front side or back side of the group."

The Army values play a vital role in urban combat, Frye said.

"The fourth soldier that kicks in the door uses selfless service by taking the chance he might be killed once he kicks the door.



"The first soldier uses duty and personal courage to be the first to enter the room. He's exposed to the enemy for a second longer than the others.

"The other fire team members show loyalty by following the first person into the building to clear it," he said.

All agreed it was real world training.

"In a perfect world, the room is going to be empty with only the enemy inside of it," Frye said. "But, this is not a perfect world, and most of the time there is going to be some sort of furniture or equipment in the way of the soldier. The soldier just has to clear it in a safe manner."

"I was thinking about how, in a few months, I could be in Afghanistan or Iraq doing this same exact thing, but only with my life in danger," said Pvt. Joshua Munger. "But, if I am faced with the situation, I'll remember my training and remember to rely on my buddies, and I will be okay."

NBC training more important than ever

Tensions rise while soldiers train to survive

Potential threats of a nuclear, biological or chemical weapons attack are reaching new heights, and Iraqi President Saddam Hussein is cause for much of the concern.

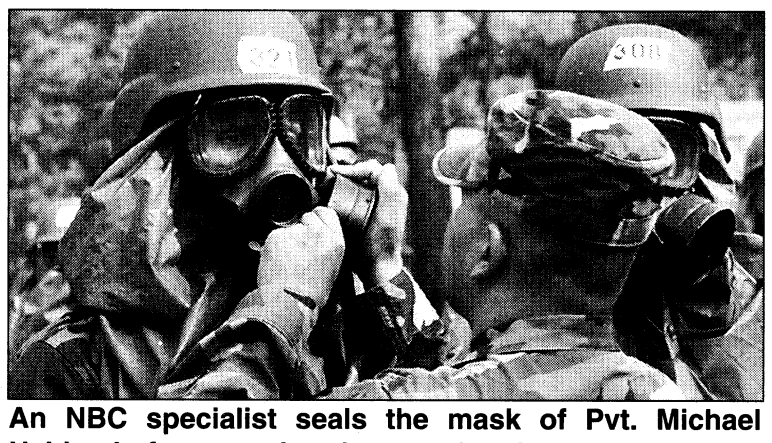
With that in mind, military analysts are discussing a second invasion of Iraq, and basic training soldiers of E Company, 1st Battalion, 50th Infantry Regiment, are preparing themselves for the possibility of war in an NBC environment.

"We take all of our training seriously," said Staff Sgt. Erasmo Evans, drill sergeant for the company. "When they go in the gas chamber, they get a good picture of how serious this training is."

Soldiers went platoon by platoon through the gas chamber filled with CS gas at Britten Range Aug. 2.

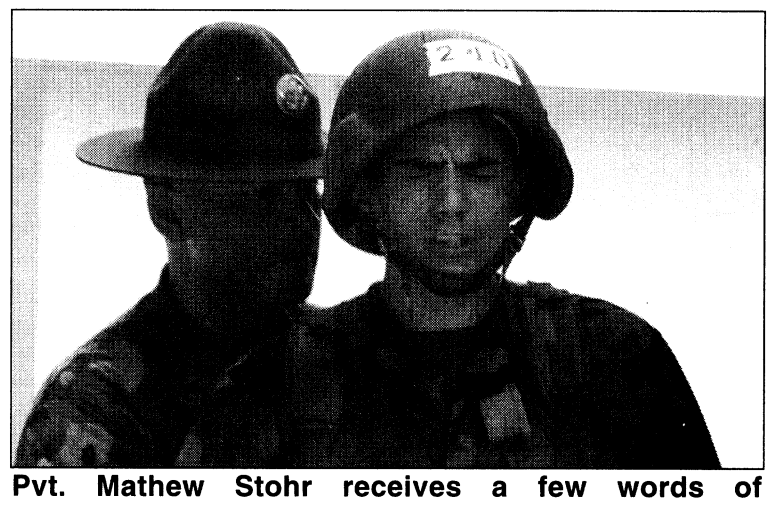
They gained an understanding of how their equipment will work against these potential battlefield threats and got a taste of how potent chemical warfare can be.

"It definitely gets the message across," said Pfc. Aric Reid. "I never want to experience the gas chamber again."



They also learned how to identify, respond and avoid NBC environments and how to protect and decontaminate while in them.

"This training introduces them to threats that exist with weapons of mass destruction," Evens said. "The gas chamber assures the soldiers that they can have faith and confidence in their NBC equipment, and the training may one day save their life."



A soldier is given nine seconds to properly put on his mask and seal it.

During that time, each second becomes more important than the last.

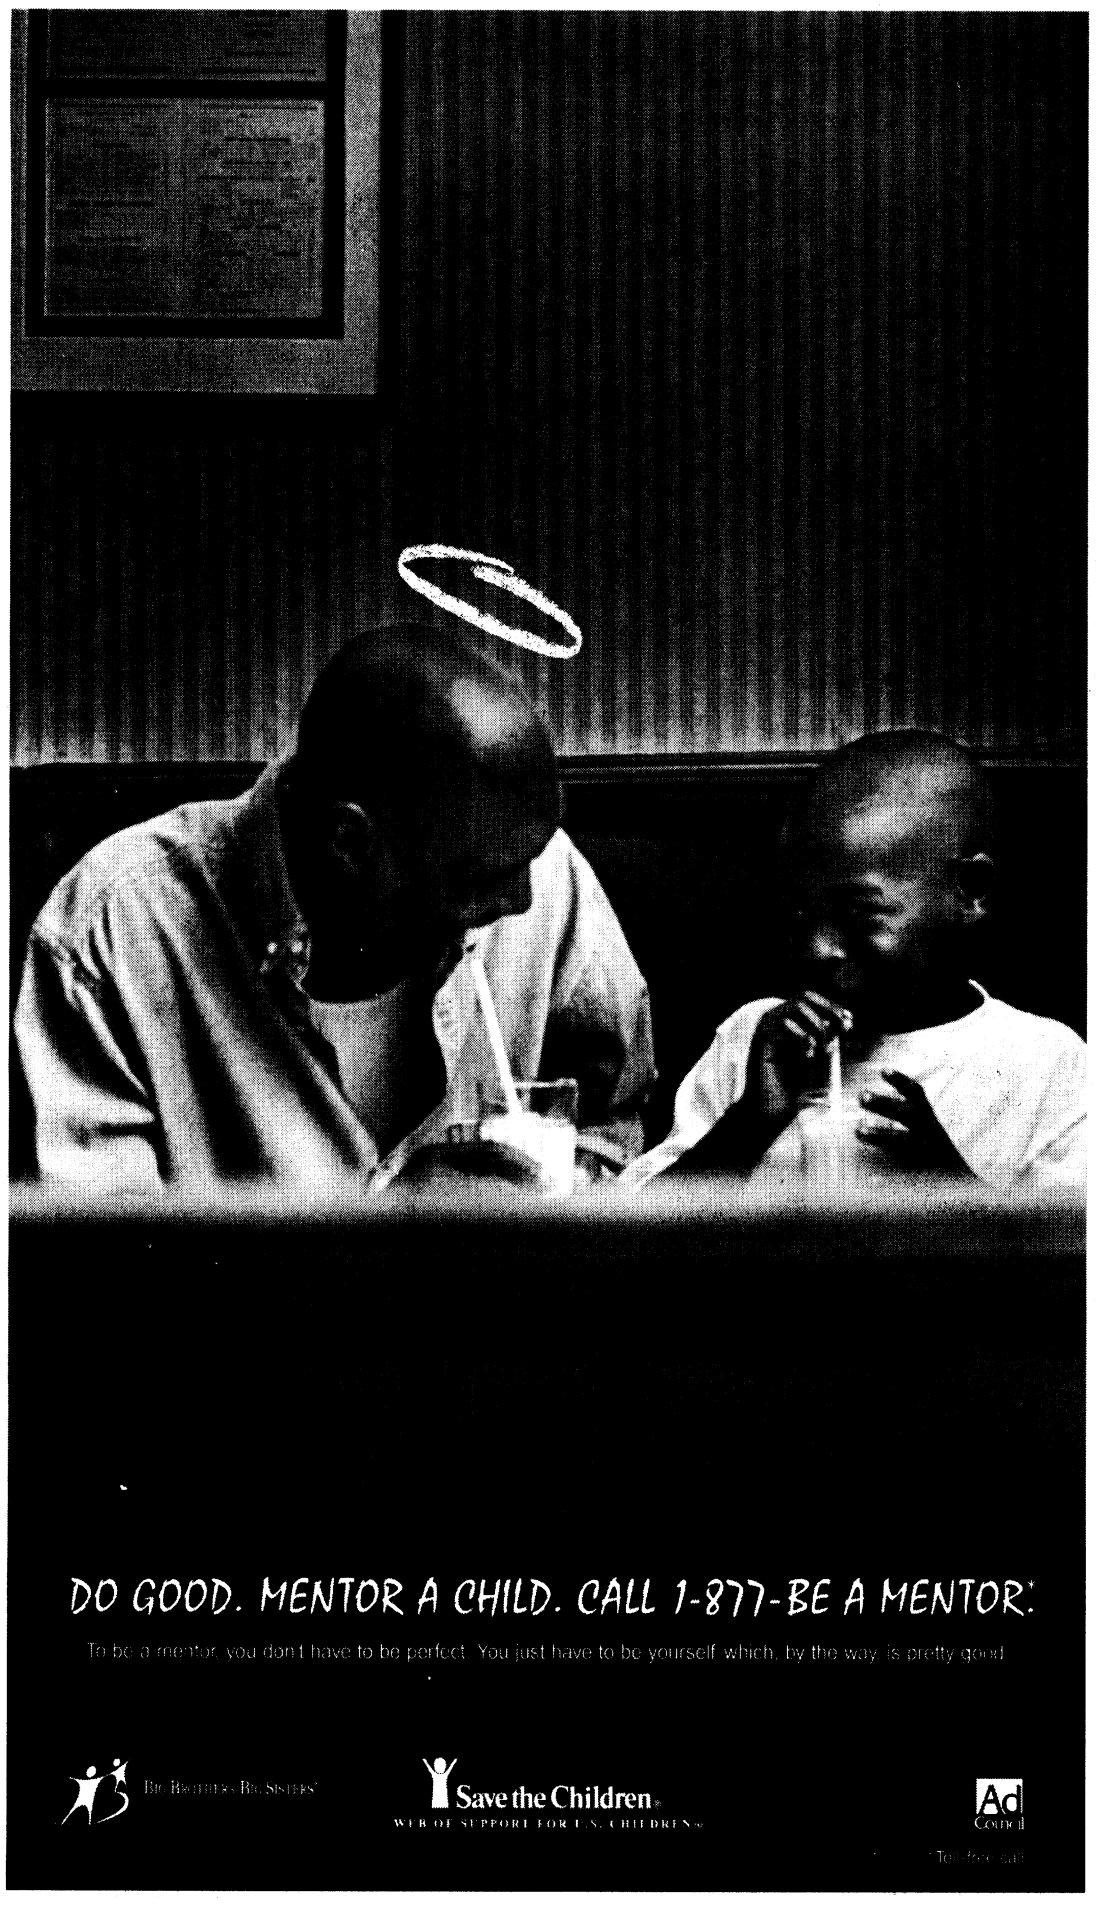
"One second can make a difference between life and death," Reid said on his seventh day of basic training. "The gas chamber won't kill you, but there is stuff out there nations use that will."

An NBC specialist seals the mask of Pvt. Michael Habina before entering the gas chamber Aug. 2.

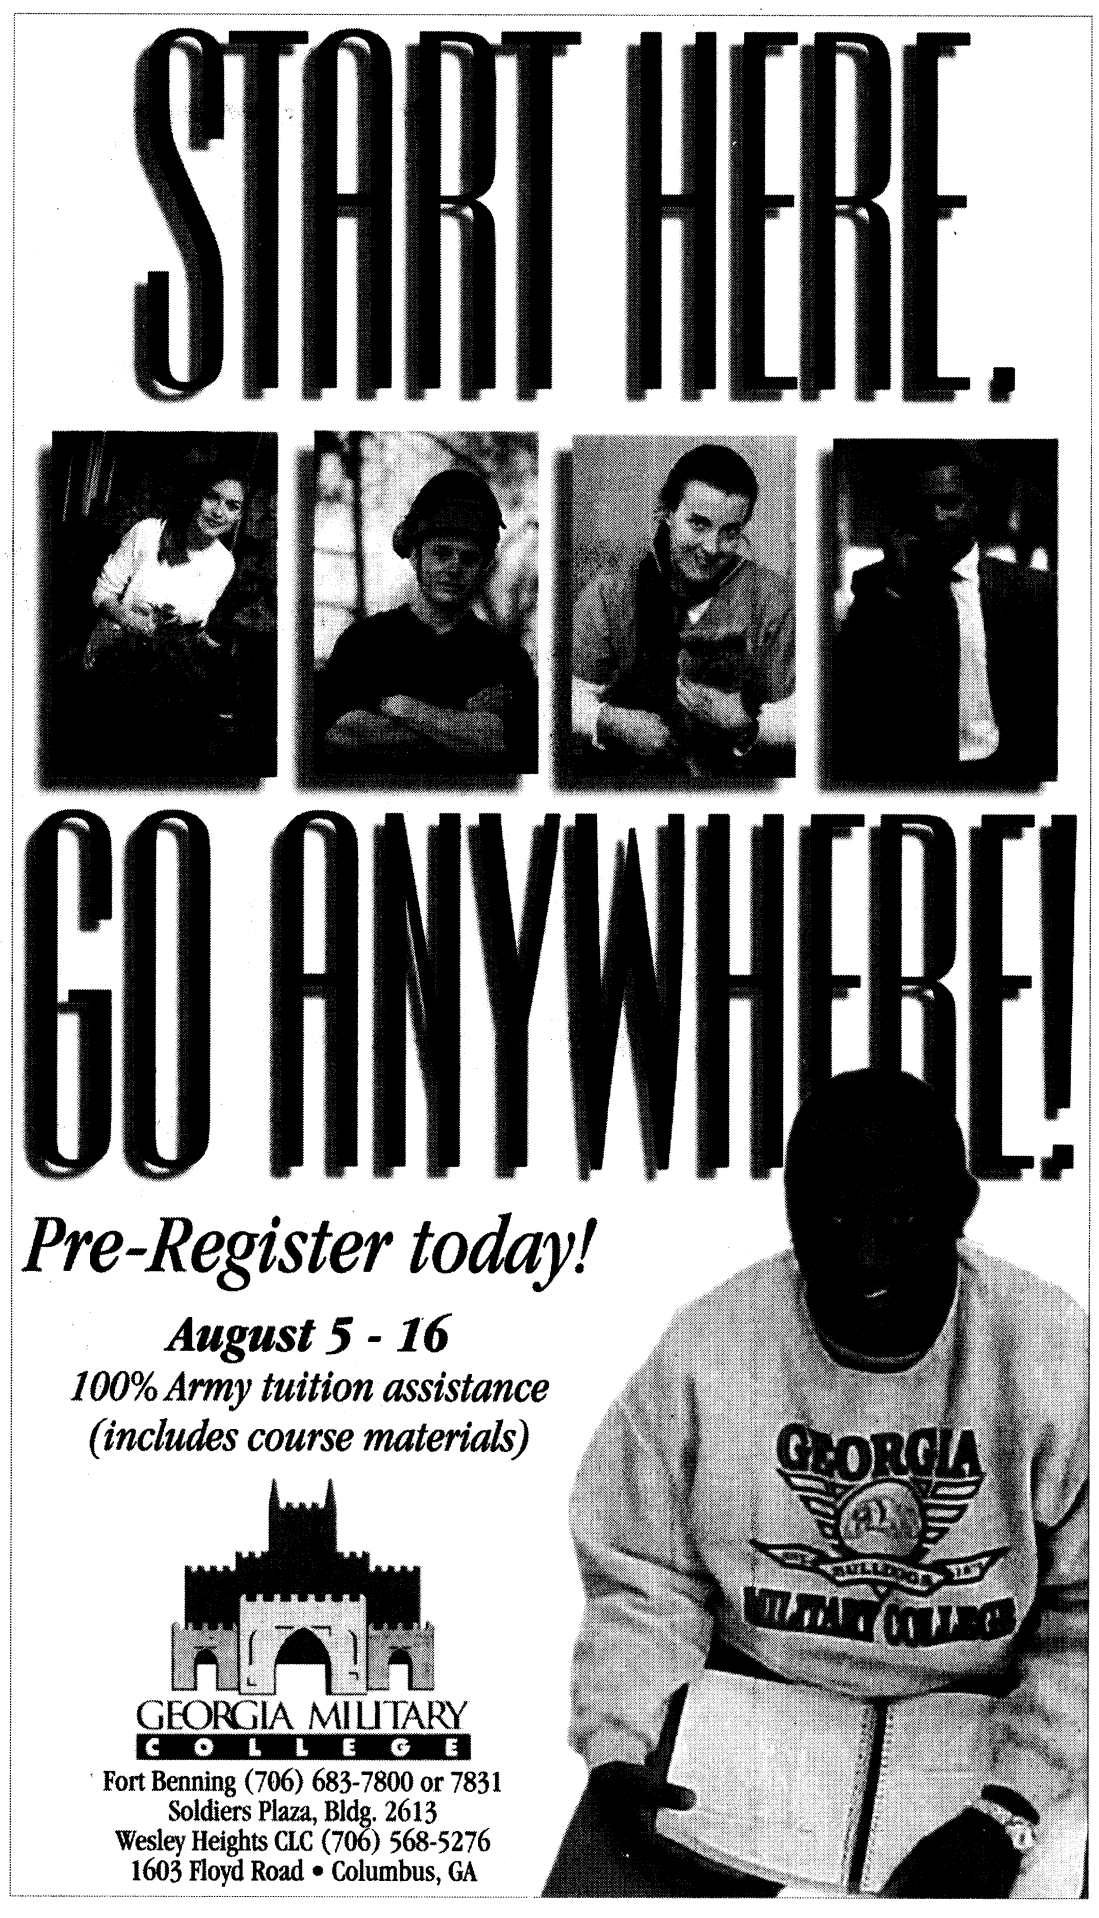
Pvt. Mathew Stohr receives a few words of encouragement as he steps out of the gas chamber.

A mask could be the most valuable piece of equipment a soldier has in a war with Iraq, said Pvt. Zack Szczepanek, 1st Bn., 50th Inf. Regt.

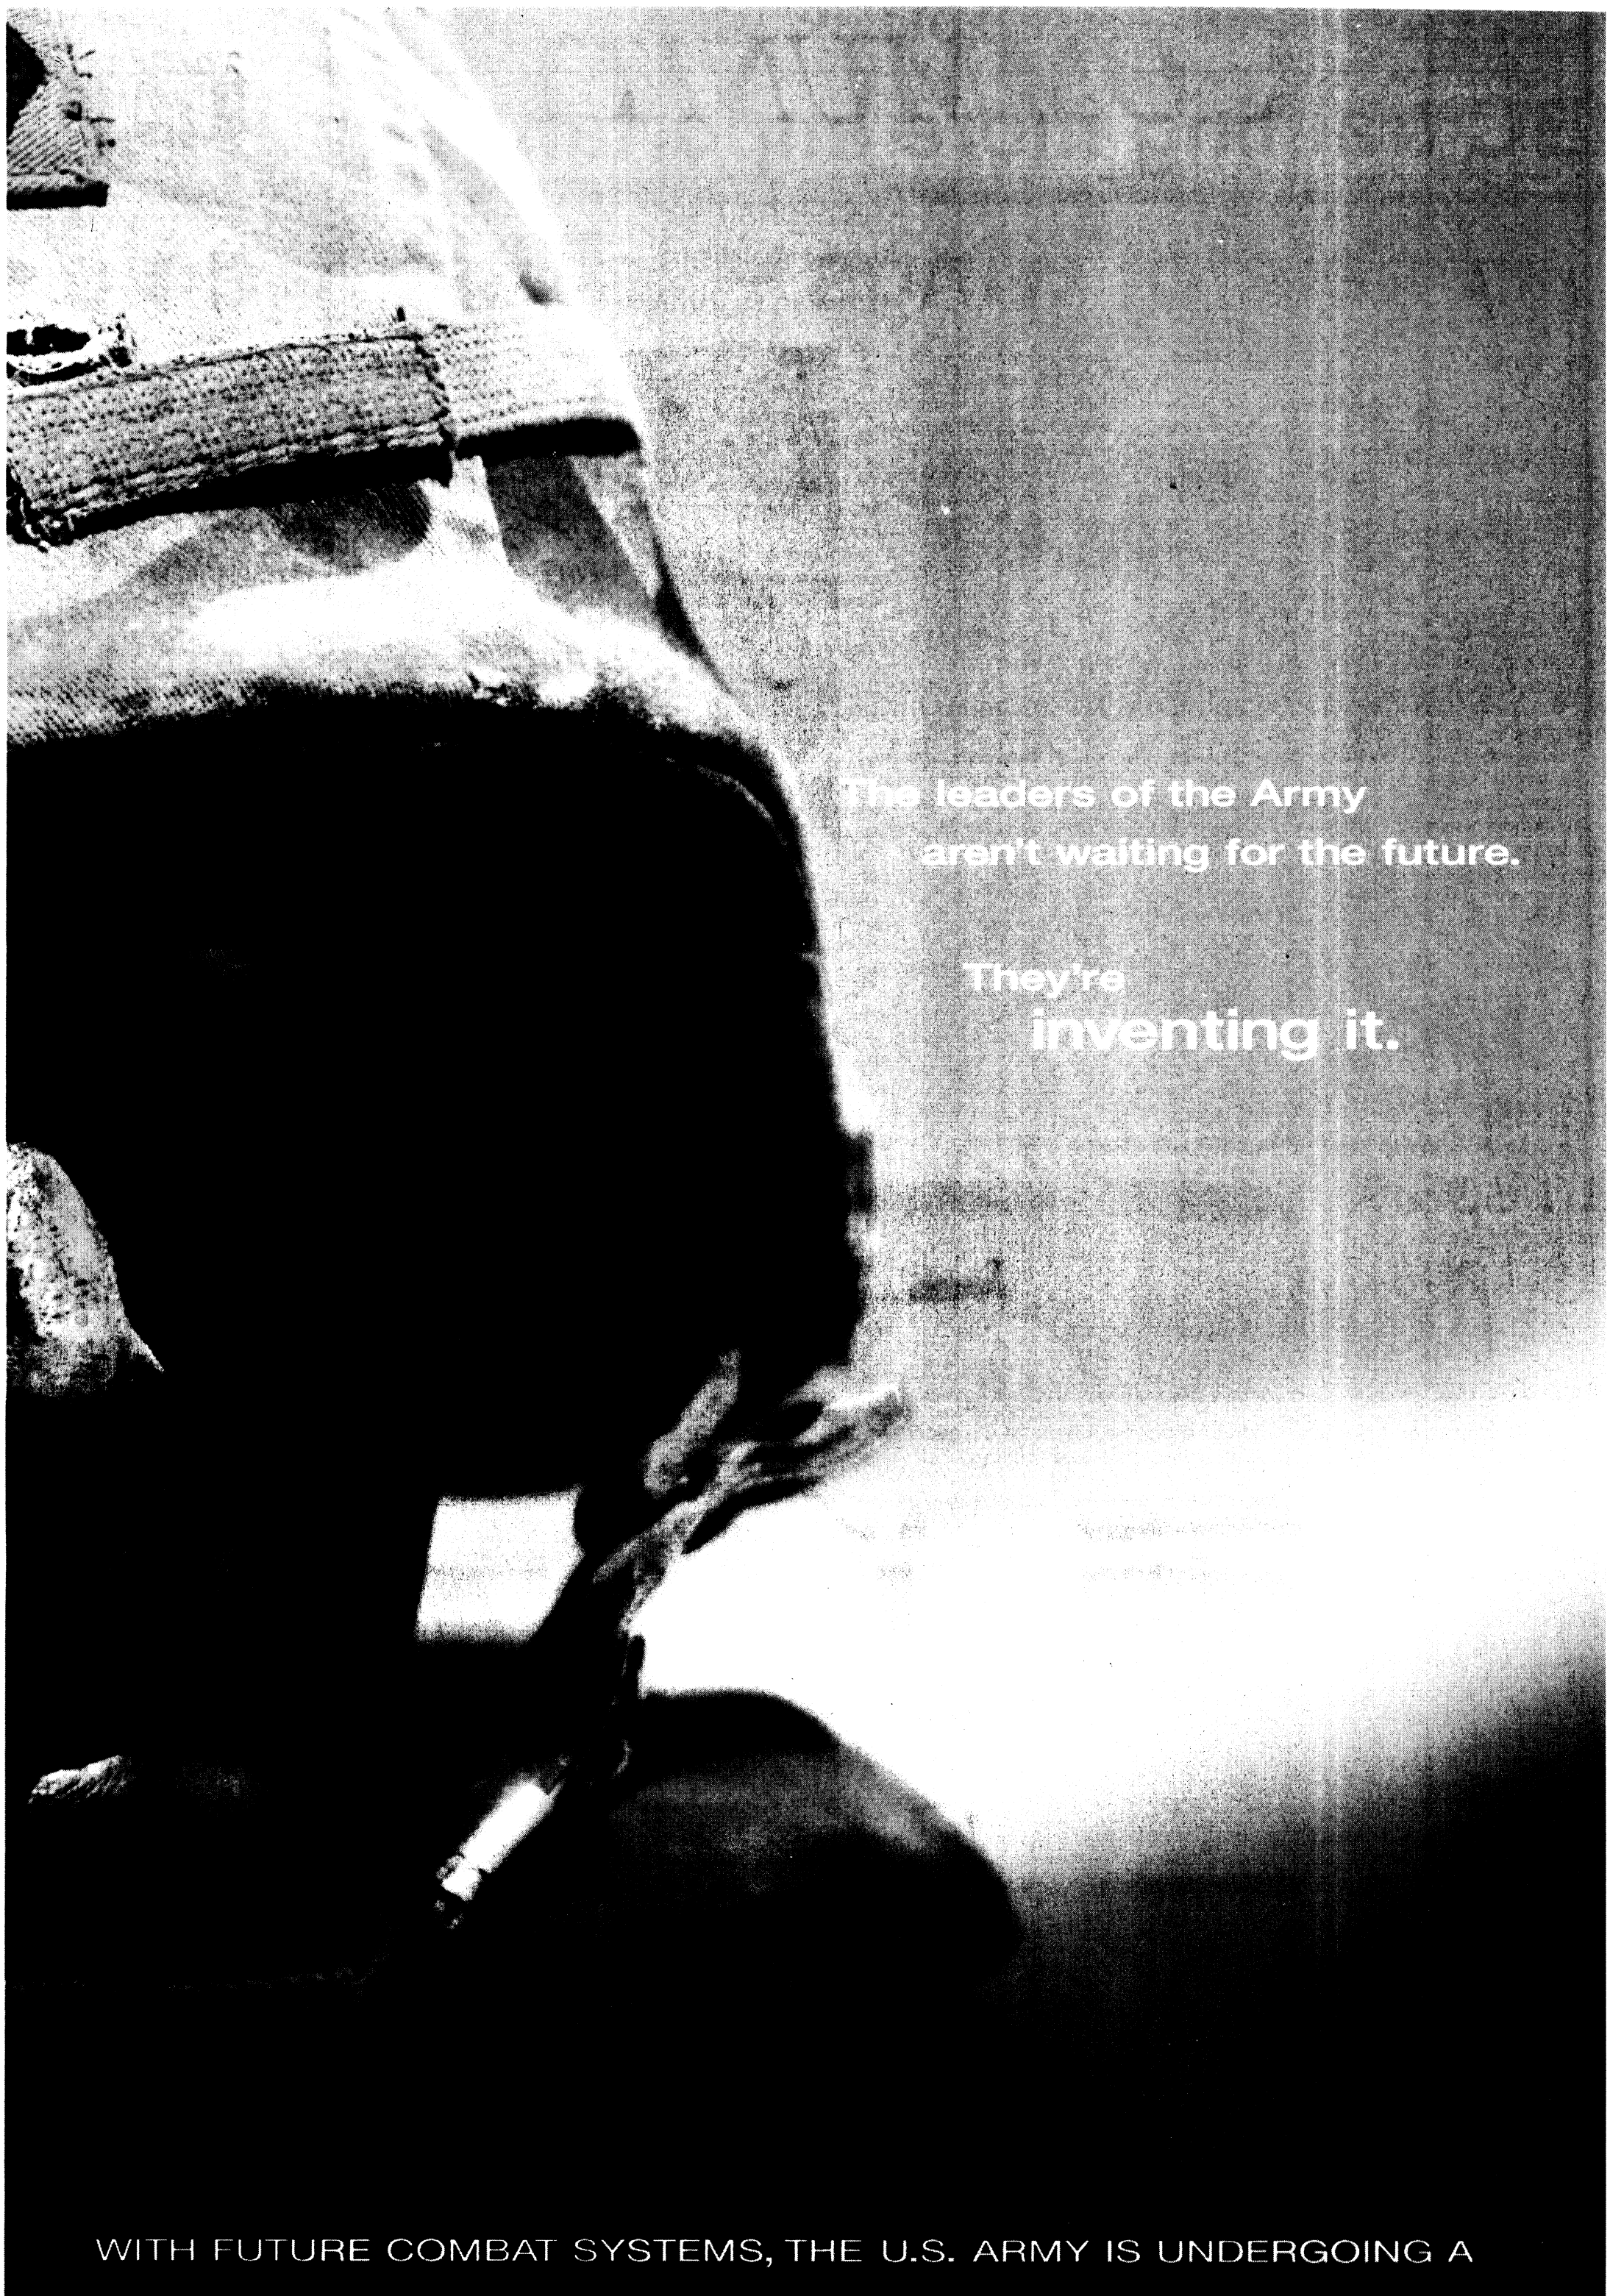
"Other than my M16, a mask is the first thing I would bring with me to war," Szczepanek said.



Szczepanek's drill sergeant, Evens, told him of his experience in Operation Desert Storm.



"The moment we arrived in port, we heard sirens for us to put on our mask," Erasmo said. "We had to have our chemical suit with us 24/7 because the NBC threat was so high."



According to a recent poll on CNN's Web site, 76 percent of those who participated in the poll support an intervention of Iraq.

That is why it's important to keep the mask serviceable, Szczepanek said.

With the possibility of invading Iraq and fighting the war on terrorism, the exercises allowed drill sergeants to describe the valuable lesson of being proactive, Reid said. The experience and current world situation sends a clear message that NBC training is vitally important.

WITH FUTURE COMBAT SYSTEMS, THE U.S. ARMY IS UNDERGOING A REMARKABLE TRANSFORMATION. It's becoming a true full-spectrum fighting force. Lighter, faster, more lethal, more survivable. Able to rapidly project ground power anywhere in the world. And the Boeing team is the partner to help the Army get the job done right. From the national missile defense program to the International Space Station, from the Apache helicopter to the Boeing 777, we've proven our ability to integrate complex technologies and large-scale systems better than anyone else. The heart of the Army is its soldiers. Our world-class FCS team, partnered with the Army and DARPA, will help keep them the best soldiers in the world.

Two sets of wings — silver & gold

Mom, son pin wings on each other

Scott Wybro pinned angel wings on his mother as she faced the greatest challenge of her life — cancer — earlier this year. She returned the favor Aug. 2, as he completed a major milestone in his military career.

Scott, a fourth-year cadet of the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, pinned a tiny gold angel to his mother's hospital gown the day she underwent surgery to remove a cancerous brain tumor Jan.31.

Suzanne has worn the angel ever since — through surgery, through chemotherapy, through good days and bad.

Last Friday was a good day. With the tiny angel on her shoulder, Suzanne beamed at her son as she pinned silver jump wings to his chest.

"I'm so thankful I could be here today. This is a wonderful day," she said, with a tear in her eye, as she patted and smoothed his lapel.

Scott, one of 385 graduates from A Company, 1st Battalion (Airborne), 507th Infantry Regiment, began Airborne training July 14. Seven days later, doctors in Houston, Texas, detected a second growth on his mother's brain, this time a tumor 2 inches in diameter. She immediately resumed an aggressive chemotherapy and drug regimen that often leaves her feeling "out of it."

"She has her ups and downs. We weren't sure she'd be able to travel," said Pete Wybro, Suzanne's husband of 30 years. "She had a very strong will to be here."

Suzanne's trip to Fort Benning was a reunion of sorts. Joined by 22 family members from Atlanta, the Georgia native grinned as she recalled earlier trips to Fort Benning as a USO performer.

As for Scott, Airborne School was his first Fort Benning experience. He said prayer kept him focused when thoughts of his mother made him long for home.

"Sometimes I felt helpless being so far away. But she said she didn't want me to jeopardize anything I've got going. She wanted me to keep going," he said.

"I told him I'll get along just fine. I'm a soldier, just like him, but the enemy I face is cancer," Suzanne said. "He told me 'I can do all things through (Christ) who strengthens me.' That's his favorite scripture."

"It's from Philippians 4:13," Scott said. "It's something I live by."

"It's something I'm learning to live by," his mother said.

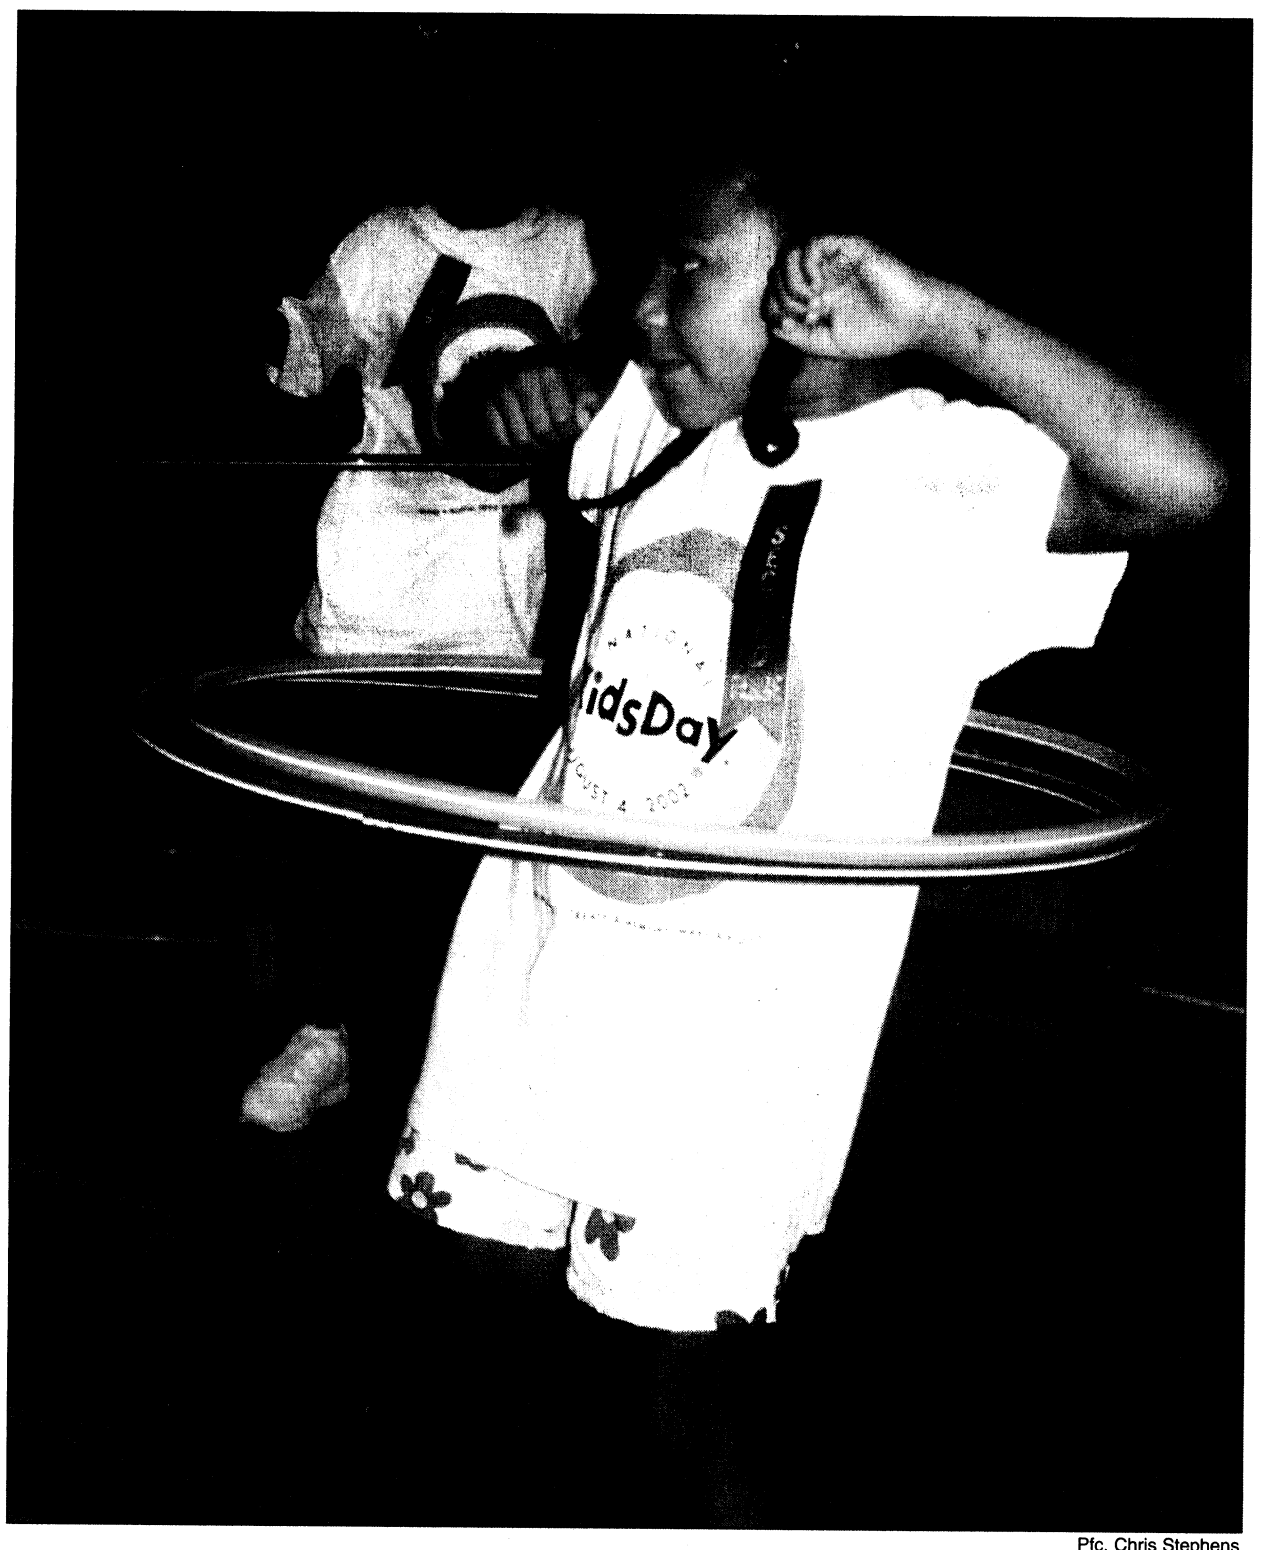
Static can spark gas fires

Gas pump blazes raise concerns on post

Melissa House
Special to the Bayonet©

The Army recently issued an advisory message concerning gas pump fires sparked by static electricity in conjunction with a Petroleum Equipment Institute awareness campaign. Research on 150 fires at the pump concluded that static electrical discharge was the primary cause of these fires.

"We have not had any incidents at Fort Benning," said Rosa Bell, manager of the 24-hour shoppette.



There have been some at other posts, she said, which prompted the message. "All of our pumps have warning stickers," Bell said. The stickers even carry a warning about static electricity.

But what the stickers don't say is what can cause the static to ignite the gasoline vapors. It's not the obvious sources. Cars were turned off, cigarettes were out, and cell phones were off.

Almost all of the 150 cases studied by the PEI involved the person getting back into the vehicle while the nozzle was still pumping gas. There is a great potential for creating a static electrical charge when clothing and car upholstery rub against each other, the message warns. The easiest way to prevent this is to avoid reentering your vehicle while refueling.

Heat-related deaths possible

Car temperatures can rise to more than 120

Angela Sachitano
Special to the Bayonet©

Parents running quick errands may think their children can remain in the car for a few minutes without air conditioning, but beware, even on mild days temperatures inside vehicles can rise to dangerous levels, health officials said.

"When the temperature outside is in the 80's, the temperature inside a car can climb to 125 degrees in 20 minutes," said Ed Saidla, Environmental Health director for the Columbus Heath Department. "Children can die within minutes from heat exhaustion."

It may seem like common sense to some, but every year emergency officials are called to Columbus and Fort Benning parking lots to save overheated children from inside cars. Within the past year, there have been more than 20 incidents of children left in cars in the Columbus-Fort Benning area, Saidla said. Fortunately, here haven't been any deaths.

"I have driven by the commissary many times and seen kids and animals locked in hot cars with the window rolled down," said Fort Benning resident Wendi Delaney. "I wonder

Heat Category 5 causes problems for everyone

Melissa House
Special to the Bayonet©

The recent death of a soldier on Fort Benning called for renewed and increased awareness of the factors contributing to heat injuries and what steps can be taken to prevent them.

Heat stroke is the most severe form of heat illness. It can occur even in people who aren't exercising if the weather conditions are hot enough. Records at the Lawson Army Airfield weather center show that Fort Benning was in Heat Category 5 when the soldier died.

Heat Cat 5 is the most severe heat category. Weather observers here determine heat categories during the summer months using a combination of the ambient, or environmental, temperature and the relative humidity.

An ambient temperature of 85 degrees, combined with a relative humidity of 70 percent makes it feel as if it was 94 degrees. Under these conditions, less severe heat injuries, such as heat cramps or heat exhaustion are likely with prolonged exposure and physical activity.

"July and August are extremely hot months," said Staff Sgt. Bryan Keating, Air Force weather observer at Lawson Army Airfield. "Fort Benning is usually in Heat Category 5 from around 11 a.m. until 8 p.m. daily with our maximum heating occurring at around 5 p.m.

"During the summer months," Keating said, "only rain with a cold front might keep us from reaching Heat Cat 5."

Once the post reaches Heat Cat 5, an advisory goes out automatically by computer to eight or 10 agencies on post, Keating said.

The information goes to Range Control, the 911 service and the post headquarters, among others.

"We also offer that info to anyone who calls our office,"Keating said.

During Heat Cat 5, units take steps to modify uniforms and activities.

Families should also take steps to protect against heat injuries, he said

According to the American Red Cross, children under 4, adults over 65, overweight individuals and those taking certain medications are the most susceptible to heat related injuries.

The best way to prevent these types of injuries is by being aware of the weather conditions, keeping hydrated and taking steps to keep cool. People should:

• Drink plenty of fluids — water is best. A dehydrated person may not sweat enough. Sweat is the body's main method of getting rid of extra heat,

• Wear appropriate clothing and sunscreen,

• Schedule outdoor activities carefully — Individuals new to Georgia should give themselves and their families several weeks to become acclimated to the weather before spending a lot of time outdoors in the heat of the day,

• Closely monitor those individuals at risk for heat injuries,

The best protection is air conditioning, according to the Red Cross.

Heat: Causes deaths in vehicles

what in the world could be going through the mother's mind. It's obvious when kids get overheated, their little faces get so red."

From 1996-2000, more than 130 children in America were killed because they were left in overheated cars, Saidla said. All of the children were under 3 years old.

"Many people also don't realize how quickly kids become overheated," Saidla said. "They're body temperatures increase much quicker than adults."

When left in a hot vehicle, a young child's core body temperature may increase three to five times faster than that of an adult.

This could cause permanent injury or death, Saidla said.

Many parents won't even take a chance, even when they are also in the car.

"I won't even put my child in the car unless it's cooled down first or we have the windows open and cool air blowing at full speed," said Janine Gwinn, a resident of Fort Benning. "I watch for signs that he is overheating. Babies are not supposed to sweat. If my son does, I know he needs to cool off immediately."

Unlocked cars also pose serious risks to children who are naturally curious.

One third of the heat related deaths in 2000 occurred when children crawled into unlocked cars while playing and became trapped.

"Parents need to make sure the cars are locked in the driveway," Saidla said. "They need to talk with their children about the dangers of playing in the trunk and the car."

The SAFE KIDS-General Motors survey, conducted in April, revealed that overall, 9 percent of parents believe it is OK to leave kids unattended in vehicles. Among parents age 18-24, that figure is double.

"No parent deliberately exposes their child to what becomes an oven-like temperature. The price they pay for this ignorance and absentmindedness is unimaginable," said Heather Paul, Ph.D., executive director of SAFE KIDS, a campaign dedicated to getting the warning out about the safety of children in the heat of cars. "These deaths are preventable."

Some tips to prevent heat exhaustion in cars are to:

- Make sure to check the temperature of the car seat surface and safety belt buckles before restraining kids in car seats,
- Use light window covering to shade seat,
- Keep car keys out of children's reach,
- Keep trunk and car locked at all times,
- Never leave kids in cars alone.

Static: Kills people at gas stations

According to the PEI, about 75 percent of the static fire victims are women because they are most likely to go back into the vehicle for various reasons.

"Do not leave the nozzle unattended," Bell said, "even if the pump has one of the hold-open clips on the handle."

Static electricity buildup may not be as likely during humid Georgia summers, but it is something to be especially aware of during winter months and in drier climates.

People should make sure they are free of static charges before they touch the pump for the first time, by touching a metal part of their car before reaching for the fuel handle, according to the Office of Surface Mining.

Post celebrates National Kids Day

Benning families spend day having fun

Pfc. Chris Stephens
Bayonet staff

With the war on terrorism taking many soldiers overseas, the time soldiers spend with their families is diminishing.

To help alleviate that stress, Youth Services held its second annual National Kids Day, to allow families to spend time together and have fun, Sunday.

The day is a Boys and Girls Club program, headed this year by First Lady Laura Bush.

"The purpose of this day is to have the parents and children spend a day together doing various activities," said Quintella Thorn, recreation specialist for Youth Services.

Activities included blowing bubbles, hula hoops, chess, checkers, Ping Pong, paddleball, cards and music.

Resources for the event were provided by Army Community Services.The theme of the event was "Good Old Fashioned Fun."

"Some of the games provided allowed the parents to teach their children games they played as kids," Thorn said.

The approximately 50 children were glad Youth Services orchestrated this event.

"It makes my day better getting to spend time with my parents," said Andrew Rowland, 12. "We get to compete with each other and just relax for a day together."

The children were not the only ones having the fun. Parents ran, jumped, laughed and played with their children through all of the activities.

"I think this is great to spend a day of fun with my family," said Capt. Cecil Henry, 3rd Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment. "Being a company commander, I don't get to spend as much time as I would like with them. I treasure every moment I am with them."

National Kids Day is an annual event held the first Sunday in August.

"Although the theme will change every year, the same basic idea of parents having fun with their children will stay intact," Thorn said.

Change not necessarily bad thing

Jesus will always be role model for all Christians

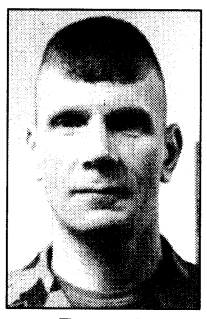
Chaplain (Capt.) Daniel Petsch
Ranger Training Brigade

There once lived a man by the name of Isaac who was well known for his kindness and righteousness. One day he was traveling along a wild and lonely mountain trail when he heard a cry for help. Isaac immediately searched the area and soon found a young man lying at the edge of a cliff, moaning as if he were about to die.

"Help me," the young man begged. "I was traveling along the road when three robbers attacked me. I tried to fight back, but they beat me and ran off with all my possessions."

Isaac gave the stranger some water from his jug and helped him mount his own horse so he could take the young man to the next town and care for him. But the minute the young man sat onto Isaac's horse, he rode off.

Isaac, who knew the mountain like the back of his hand, slid quickly down the steep mountainside, and met the horse thief further down the road. "Stop!" Isaac commanded.



Used to his master's voice, Isaac's horse stood still. "If you want this horse," said Isaac to the young man, "take it as a gift. I don't want you to become a thief on my account."

"It makes no difference to me if the horse is a gift or stolen," shouted the young horse thief. "I shall sell it at the next town."

"For goodness sake, don't do that," Isaac cried. "Everybody there knows me and my horse. When you come with that horse and try to sell it, people will think you have killed me, and they will kill you in return."

REFLECTIONS

Petsch

"Why should you worry if I get killed?" asked the horse thief. "It's my hide, and it shouldn't make any difference to you if I live or die."

"I don't want my friends to kill you, nor do I want you to be killed," Isaac insisted. "Listen to me. I am willing to write you a letter of sale if you promise that you will tell no one of what happened between us."

"The world is full of fools," said the young horse thief. "But so far I have met none bigger than you.

"Sure, go ahead and write me a bill of sale for the horse I stole from you. But I am curious. Tell me why you are acting so foolishly. There must be some trick to all this."

"There isn't," Isaac said. "But should people hear how you treated me, they might be afraid of helping a stranger who is in real need, for fear that what happened to me will happen to them. And that stranger, my friend, could be you."

The young man stared at old Isaac. Suddenly he began to cry. "My father and my father's father were thieves and were hung for their crimes. They taught me all they knew and never cared what would happen to me.

If I could have had a father like you, I would never have become a thief."

"It's never too late," Isaac said with a smile. "Come with me. With God's help, the damage of your childhood can be undone."

"I will!" cried the young man, and he moved in with Isaac and became an honest man.

Virtually everything we learn in life comes by way of the role models we have encountered.

These role models can lead us on the upward path or on the path toward ruin.

This story illustrates a great Biblical truth: regardless of one's cultivated or inherited tendency toward evil and regardless of the negative influences in life, there is always a second chance to change and reform our ways.

The quintessential role model given to us by our loving heavenly father is his son Jesus. By meditating on his life and character, we shall be changed! The time for change is now!

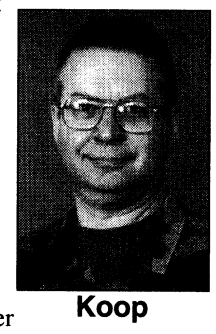
CHAPEL NOTES

Catholic Women of the Chapel — The Catholic Women of the Chapel meet twice each month. They gather from 9:30 to 11:30 a.m. on the first Friday of the month at the Martin Army Hospital Chapel. Mass is celebrated along with a special program. They also meet the third Monday of the month at the Infantry Center Chapel Annex from 7 to 9 p.m.

Protestant Women of the Chapel — PWOC resumed its summer Bible study. They meet at 9:30 a.m. Thursdays in the Custer Terrace Chapel on Craig Drive. Child Care is provided. The summer series is "That The World May Know," a video tour through the lands of the Bible with life changing lessons from the Word of God. For more information, call Krista Moore at 323-0128.

TIC fall welcome picnic — The Infantry Center Chapel will hold its fall welcome picnic after the 10:30 a.m. service on Aug. 25. As we welcome newcomers to the community and our returning members, we will focus on our on-going ministries and the opportunities for families to grow and serve in the chapel.

Tear down barriers to communication



Chaplain (Maj.) Raymond Koop
Family Life Ministries Center

Communication can be improved by removing the filters and by tearing down the barriers to good speaking and listening.

Dr. Savanna McCain, marriage counselor, provides some practical suggestions.

Keep foremost in mind that there are always distracters to good communication. Work hard to speak clearly and unambiguously and to remove known distracters.

Realize that bringing up the past is an exercise in futility. Opening up old wounds delays healing, causes re-infection, and adds to the present problem. Proving your point is self-serving and destructive to teambuilding. Deal with the here and now rather than the past.

Koop

Don't assume that your memory is fail proof. Don't argue over what was or wasn't said. Time, emotions and mental replays of the event distort even the best memories.

Announce your filters and the barriers to good communication when you recognize them.

For example, tell your spouse if you are tired, had a bad day at work or are concerned about other issues.

Look for the best in your partner. Don't assume the worst.

Don't let your negative feelings or bad attitudes minimize the efforts of your spouse.

Scripture implores us to remove barriers to good communication. You must rid yourselves of all such things as these: anger, rage, malice, slander and filthy language from your lips. Do not lie to each other (Colossians 3:8-9).

Would you like to make your marriage communication better? Free counseling and support are available.

Free Agents edge MEDDAC, 16-13

Split-second play at home determines game

Spc. Douglas DeMaio
Bayonet staff

Time was of the essence when the Free Agents, B Company, 2nd Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment, beat U.S. Medical Department Activity, 16-13, Tuesday in the second game of intramural softball playoffs.

MEDDAC was in position to break a 12-12 tie in the bottom of the fifth inning, seconds before time for the game was to expire.

Angel Sanchez was on third, and there was only one out. On a sacrifice, Sanchez tagged up and headed for home.

The lightning-fast arm of Wayne Rice snatched the ball from the sky in rightfield and threw a rocket to home plate.

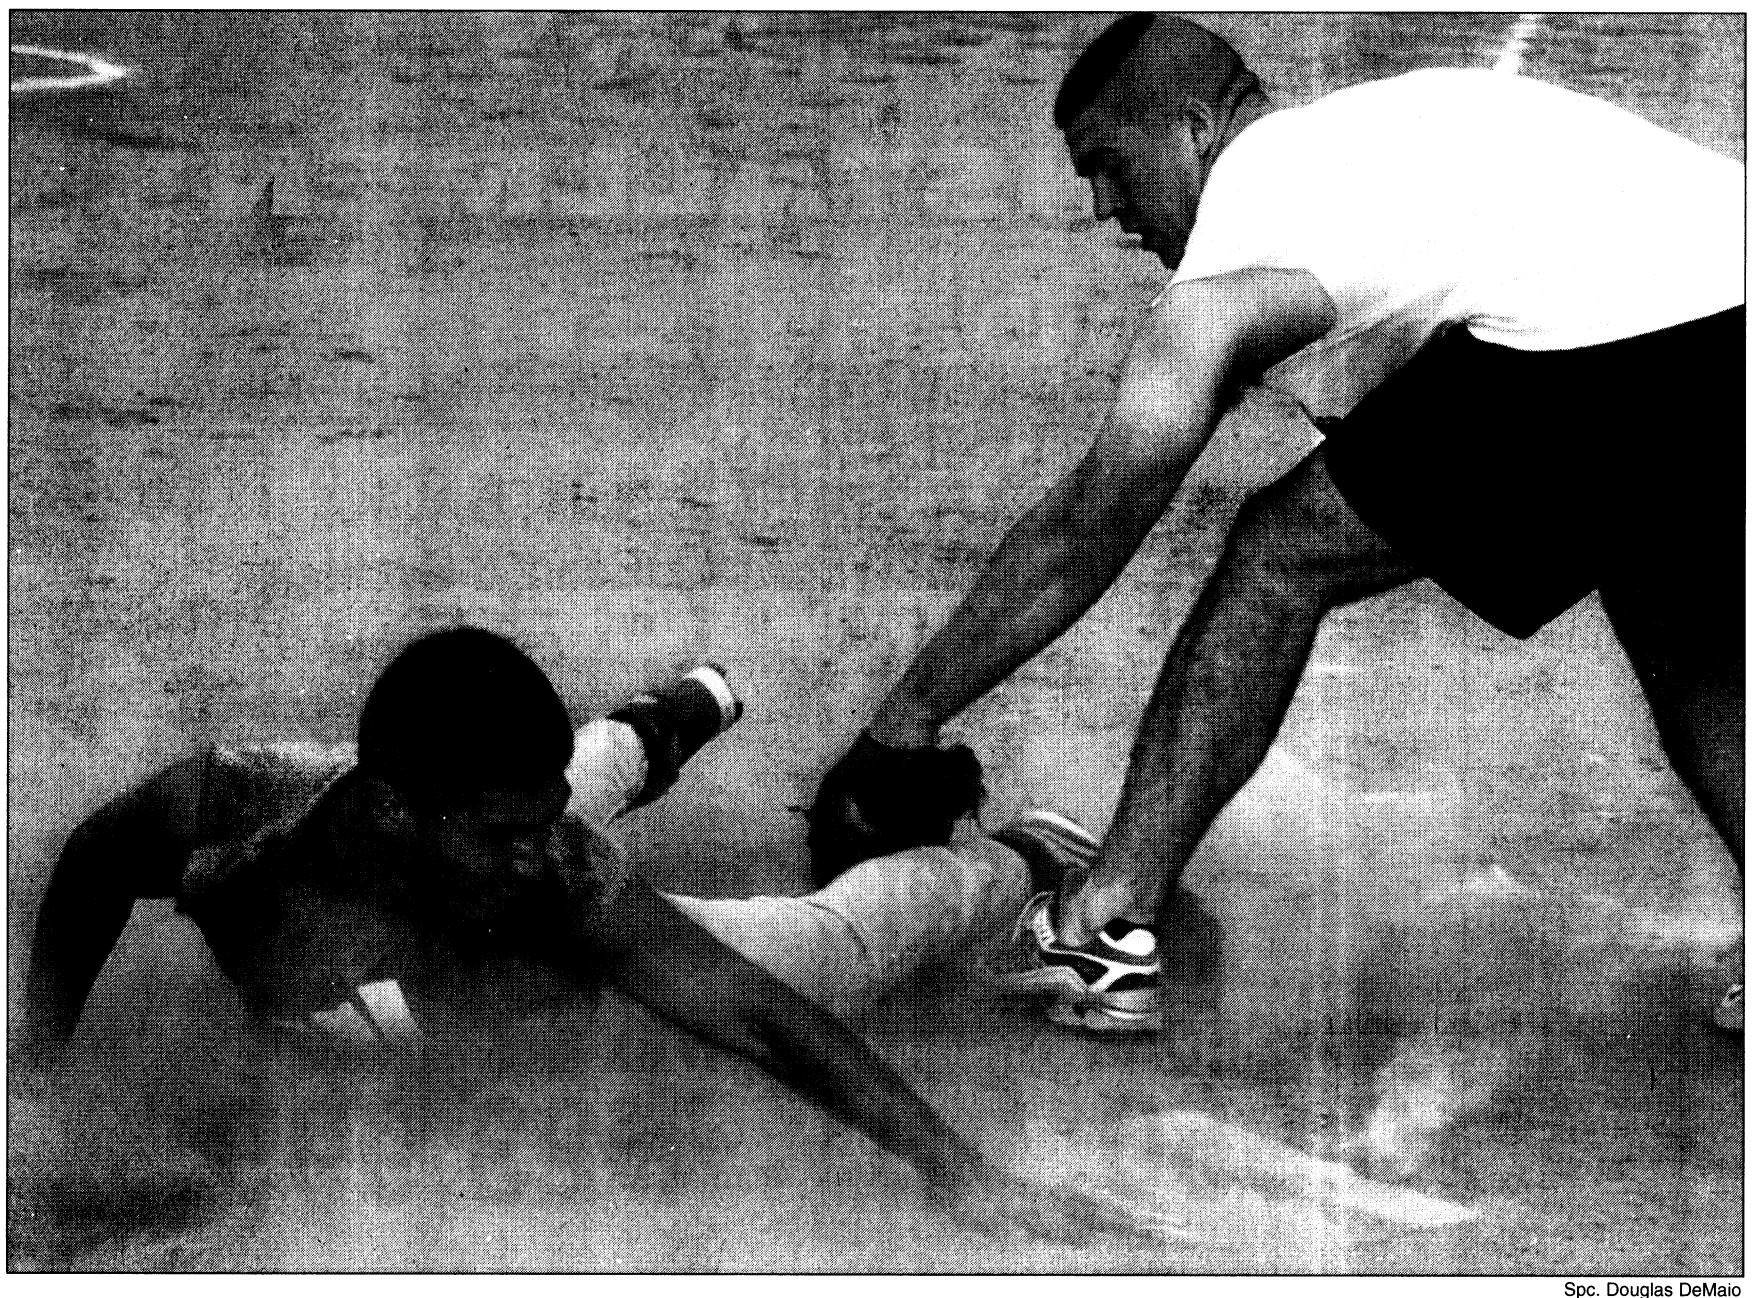
Catcher Jacob Viets caught the ball a split second before Sanchez reached home plate and tagged the runner out.

"That play turned the whole game around for us," said Free Agent Walter Edwards.

At the top of the sixth, Edwards drove in a run, but MEDDAC answered the agents with a run of their own to tie the game, 13-13.

Edwards made a huge play in the seventh inning when he hit an inside-the-park-homerun and broke MEDDAC's back.

"It was a bad game for us," said Free Agent's Rodney Alexander. "We usually play better. I think a couple of plays sparked our game, and we pulled it together for the win."



With the win, the Free Agents advance to the second round of the double-elimination tournament without a loss, which helps their confidence going into their next game, Alexander said.

"We know everybody out here is gunning to be the top dog," Alexander said. "The game did wonders for our confidence and morale."

In the beginning of the game, the offense for both teams flowed as smoothly as the beverages in the parking lot, but the defenses began to settle in and put a lid on the offenses.

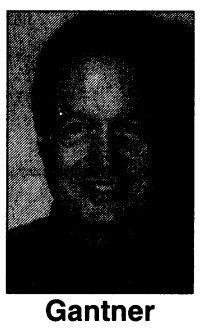
"In the second half of the game, we cut down on our mistakes," Edwards said. "We started to play our normal game."

It was jitters on the part of the Free Agents that kept MEDDAC at bay, Alexander said.

Spc. Douglas DeMaio

Angel Sanchez, MEDDAC, is tagged out by Free Agents' Catcher, Jacob Viets, during the intramural softball playoffs. Sanchez was attempting to score the winning run, but Free Agents' Wayne Rice made a throw from rightfield to avoid the loss.

Winner sets five records at competition



Swimmer sets goals, achieves them

Pfc. Chris Stephens
Bayonet staff

Winning a gold medal at the Olympic Games or at another type of games is something special.

But, very rarely does one see domination by a person in five different events.

Chuck Gantner, acting chief of the Office of Infantry Proponency, achieved this feat at the 2002 Georgia Games, in five different swimming events, July 21, in Augusta, Ga.

Gantner

"I was ecstatic when I won my fifth gold medal," Gantner said. "I've won more medals before, but each time you win, you prove something more to yourself."

Gantner won all of his medals during the swimming competitions. Gantner also set five Georgia Games records in the same day for his age category.

Gantner set records in the 200-meter back stroke, with a time of 2 minutes 55.38 seconds, 50-meter freestyle, with a time a 30.46, 100-meter backstroke with a time of 1:20.27, 50-meter butterfly, with a time of 33.43 and the 50-meter backstroke, with a time of 35.37.

To get ready for the competition, Gantner skipped lunch during work, and instead went swimming at one of the local pools on post.

"I work on all of the strokes when I go to the pool," Gantner said. "It's a great relaxation tool and a great way to relieve stress."

> "The key to this sport for me is to set a goal and stick with it until I achieve it."
>
> Chuck Gantner, on swimming
> Chief of the Office of Infantry Proponency

According to the master's swimming Web site, www.usms.org, training is key during competitive swimming. Not only is the training key, but a person has to love the sport to continue to do it for so long.

Gantner has been swimming since the age of 10. He swam as a child in Piscataway, N.J., and won his first race also at the age of 10.

"I love this sport," Gantner said. "The key to this sport for me is to set a goal and stick with it until I achieve it. Then, I set a new goal for myself and try to achieve that."

Summer shootout — The Georgia Wildlife Federation is proud to present the largest sportsmen's show in the southeast — the 2002 Perry Buckarama.

Happening Aug. 16-18 at the Georgia National Fairgrounds, the Buckarama will feature hundreds of exhibits, big-name speakers, archery and shooting competitions, door prizes and more record whitetails on display than ever before.

Come see the world-record whitetail and meet the hunter who harvested it — Milo Hanson.

Scored by Boone and Crockett judges at an astonishing 213 5/8 points, the Hanson buck will be on display throughout the weekend.

The Perry Buckarama is an educational fundraising event sponsored by the Georgia Wildlife Federation, Georgia's oldest and largest conservation organization and a state affiliate of the National Wildlife Federation.

The Georgia National Fairgrounds are located on Exit 135 off of Interstate I-75. Admission to the show is $7 for adults, $4 for seniors and $ for kids 6-12. Kids under 6 get in free. Parking is free.

For more information, call Doug Rithmire, GWF Show Director, at (770) 787-7887 or e-mail drithmire@gwf.org.

Continuum Health Partners

Formed in 1997, Continuum Health Partners combines the advanced capabilities, vast experience and extraordinary reputations of four venerable health care institutions. Together, Beth Israel Medical Center, St. Luke's-Roosevelt Hospital Center, Long Island College Hospital and Manhattan Eye and Ear Infirmary—each with more than 100 years of distinguished service and tradition—offer patients and practitioners alike a broad spectrum of rewarding opportunities. With 3100 hospital beds, metro-wide ambulatory clinics and private practices and a skilled nursing facility, there are many unique opportunities to enrich your clinical experience and grow both professionally and personally.

Explore our nursing opportunities and discover an atmosphere that is truly innovative. It is an environment where you can help define new standards in professional practice and find a host of new avenues for career growth and fulfillment. We have opportunities within the following specialty areas:

- Cardiac Progressive Care Unit
- Critical Care
- ED
- Med/Surg
- Neurosurgical
- Pediatrics
- OR
- Orthopedics

MUSIC MASTERS

If you yearn to experience the joy of playing piano, but don't want years of weekly lessons, this absolutely beginning class in chord piano is for you. You'll learn chords, not notes, and in just one enjoyable evening, you can learn all the chords needed to play any pop song, any style, any key. And you'll get a healthy dose of insider secrets, how to embellish songs. Tuition is $45, plus $20 for a book and practice cassette collected in class.

Back to School

"C'mon, Mom. Can't you go any faster?"

Whose child is this that can't wait to get to school? She can't be the same little girl who wanted to drop out of the third grade — the child who fell to her knees when the final bell rang last June, threw her hands in the air and cried, "Free at last. free at last. Thank God Almighty I'm free at last."

I don't know who coined the phrase 'The grass is always greener ..,' but I suspect it was a mother of school-age children in the final weeks of summer vacation.

"I'm sooo bored. When will school ever start?" they moan. A veteran of said vacation vexation, I recommend you record their laments and play it back to them in March. In the mean time, take heart — school starts Tuesday.

But before you send out party invitations, better make sure you've done your homework. Have the kids been registered at their schools? Did you pick up a supply list and stock up on the pens and paper and paraphernalia they'll need to get started? Have they been properly vaccinated against the mumps and pox and cooties?

And more importantly, do have the latest, hottest, 'gotta have' gear?

What's that you say? No idea where to start? With less than a week to go, you'll need a crash course in what's hot and what's not with the junior league.

Better hit the ground running, and the best place to start is the shoe department, where no-lace slides are outdistancing traditional sneakers in the back-to-school race. Vintage favorites, like Converse Chuck Taylor's, are following close on their heels.

No-lace shoes are fine, but un-laced shoes are more than a fashion fax paus — they're a safety hazard, and therefore a dress code violation at post schools, where dress policies are determined by school principals.

Faith Middle School's dress code restricts untied shoes, house slippers, flip-flops or any other form of footwear deemed unsafe or inappropriate — a policy that applies to all apparel.

A quick stop at the girl's department reveals ... well, lets just say it reveals. Tube tops, halters and spaghetti straps are hot. Too bad. They're not permitted at Faith.

"Flirt" shirts, which typically brandish wishful adjectives like "cutie," "angel," or "superstar," are permitted, as long as they're not considered obscene and don't promote irresponsible behavior, according to Dr. Kim Crowell, assistant principal at Faith.

Khakis and capris are still on the A list this fall. They've been joined by rugby shirts, terry cloth track suits and anything red, white and blue. Which means Tommy Hilfiger is still popular, though Old Navy is rising to the challenge. All are acceptable, according to Faith's dress policy, as long as they reflect "a positive and respectful attitude toward learning."

But before they can focus on higher learning, young scholars must have the one item on top of every back-to-school list — the ultimate accessory — a set of wheels.

Book bags on wheels, or mobile backpacks, return this fall as the most popular mode of transportation for books. Starting at less than $20 in most department stores, they come fully loaded, with separate compartments for water bottles and cell phones.

Though post schools have not formally addressed the issue of backpacks, students should keep in mind that they can become a nuisance if they're not used properly, Crowell said. They're only to be used to transport school-related items, and should not be offensive.

Faith's "common sense, practical approach" to dress is designed to keep the school safe and learner-friendly, Crowell said. With that in mind, it does not allow:

- sheer clothing, backless dresses, muscle shirts or half shirts
- imprinted clothing with words or phrases that could be interpreted as obscene or conveys a double meaning, or promotes illegal, immoral or unethical activities
- dresses, skirts or shorts that rise above mid-thigh or are excessively tight
- pants that are not fitted at the waist, unless secured with a belt
- exposed underwear
- sunglasses, headscarves, nets, picks or hats
- oversized jewelry or visible piercings, other than earrings
- any electronic communication device (pagers, call phones, etc.) or other item that disrupts the learning environment.

Welcome back

Bridgett Siter
Special to the Bayonet©

Or perhaps I should simply say, "Welcome," since nearly 25 percent of you have children entering Fort Benning schools for the first time. Welcome to Fort Benning, home of the infantry and the best doggone schools in the world.

That's a pretty bodacious statement, you say? I stand by it. Fort Benning schools restored this former home-school mom's faith in organized education. I've been to "the dark side" — public school systems where my third-grader was taught the finer points of "alternative lifestyles" and my son's principal said, "No, ma'am, we cannot make any exception for any child. They must all be treated alike."

You see, at that time, Jacob was struggling with the early diagnosis of a visual perception deficiency, which is a technical way of saying his eyes saw one thing, his brain saw another. Kinda like dyslexia.

That meant Jake needed a few special considerations to succeed in school — nothing complicated or difficult. A spot near the front of the class, preferably near a window, since he reads best under natural light. And he used a tinted overlay on all his worksheets "to make the words behave."

Ahhh, but that was too much to ask of a rigid, cookie-cutter, by-the-book school system.

Disheartened and frustrated, we turned to home schooling, perhaps the best decision we ever made. It forced my husband and I to take complete responsibility for our children's education. We dug deep within ourselves to determine our educational values. It was obvious to us, of course, that our children are all very different, and therefore they learn in different ways and have unique needs.

We wanted a school system that recognizes every child as an individual. One that is willing to make an exception to rote practice when it serves the child best. One that puts children first and allows, even welcomes, our presence and involvement in our children's education.

A pretty tall order, I admit, and one I didn't figure to fill anytime soon.

Then we moved to Fort Benning, and the rest is home-school history.

"Of course we can accommodate Jacob. That's what we're here for, the children," the principal said, and I knew we'd found a "home" school, one that shares our values and understands that every child comes with unique needs.

My job as a reporter has taken me into every Fort Benning school time and time again. I've found my children's school to be the rule, rather than the exception. We're blessed with a school system that exemplifies the very best DoDEA has to offer, and it starts at the top, with the superintendent, and includes a cracker-jack team of principals, teachers, paraprofessionals and support staff. They're the best.

Commandant encourages involvement in schools

As the Fort Benning community celebrates the beginning of a new school year, I am pleased about the opportunities we have to strengthen the bonds between the schools, the command, the community and our families.

We are fortunate to have our own school system at Fort Benning and a very good one, indeed. Active participation by parents will strengthen our school system and enrich our children's educational experience.

As a parent, you are a vital link in your child's education, and I urge you to become an active part of his or her school experience.

Because we so strongly believe that your involvement will make a difference in your child's life, active duty soldiers are encouraged to volunteer in the schools. What you do for your child today will determine, to a large extent, the remainder of your child's life.

I have tremendous pride and faith in the Fort Benning schools, and I am confident by working together as a team, the possibilities for our school system and our community are unlimited. Let me assure you that the school staff and the school board are committed to providing the very best possible education for your child.

Please join me as we work together to offer a world-class educational program for our children at Fort Benning.,

Dear Parents,

As we look forward to making the school year 2002-2003 the best one yet at Fort Benning, there is no doubt that it takes all of us — students, teachers, parents, administrators, support personnel and the military — to make that happen.

The Department of Defense Schools have received tremendous accolades during the past year from such prestigious news sources as the Wall Street Journal, the Washington Post, USA Today, 60 Minutes and National Public Radio for our students' success in outscoring their public school peers in standardized tests, regardless of race, family income and parents' education.

We have solid evidence that we are doing well academically. However, we must prepare our youngsters to make good ethical choices, as well. That is why fort Benning Schools will focus on the Army values of loyalty, duty, respect, selfless service, honor, integrity and personal courage that develop good character.

Good character is what a person is inside. Our character is revealed by how we behave when we think no one else is looking. It is how we treat people who we think cannot benefit us or harm us.

A person of character has good ethical values that discern right from wrong and does what is right even when it is difficult, unpleasant or personally costly. Character, in short, is moral courage. The development of our students' character is a responsibility shared by our schools, families and the Fort Benning community.

We can nurture good character by speaking a common language of Army values at school and at home. We can use every opportunity to discuss with our children which acts exemplify doing the right thing.

Volunteering for school and community projects, keeping our commitments, lending a helping hand to those in need, talking about how others exhibit Army values, always telling the truth and keeping our environment clean are all ways we can promote good character and citizenship. What we do each and every day is much more important than what we say. Our students learn from what they observe and experience.

Please join us in our partnership of working toward a common goal of forming well-educated, happy, socially responsible children, whose lives represent the Army values.

Our future depends on it.

Sincerely,
Dell McMullen,
Superintendent, Fort Benning Schools

Fort Benning schools

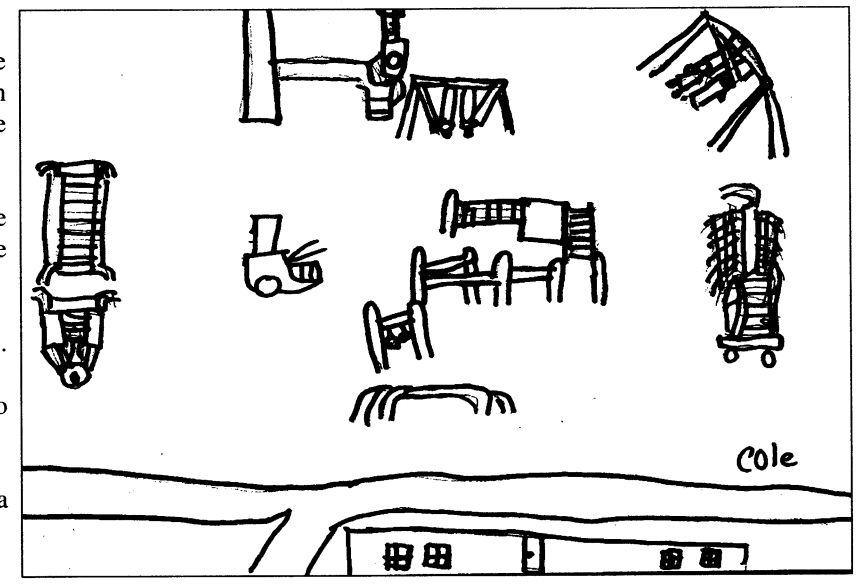
Freddie Stowers Elementary

Stowers is located off First Cavalry Division Road on Stowers Drive and serves more than 600 students from the Davis Hills and Bouton Heights communities. Opened in 1993, the school is named in honor of Cpl. Freddie Stowers, the first black soldier to be awarded the Medal of Honor in World War I.

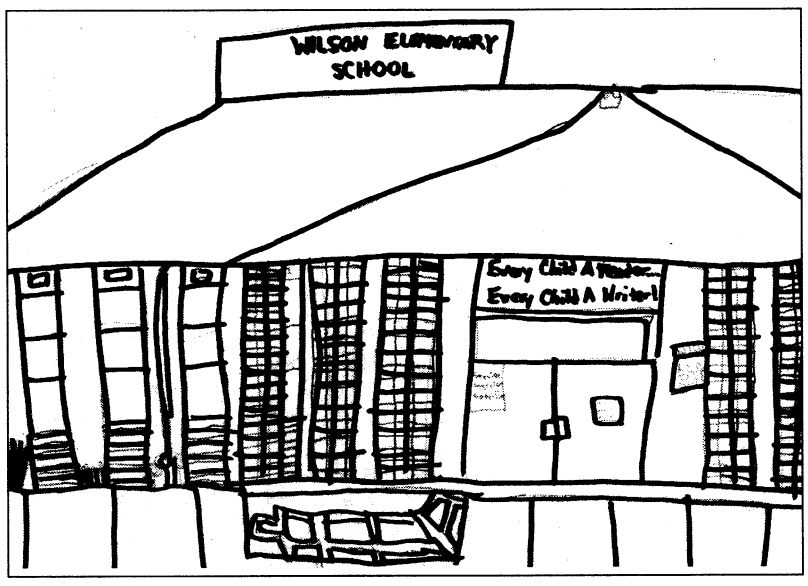
Dr. Tom Dignan is the principal of Stowers. Mike Starrett is the assistant principal.

Stowers continues to emphasize excellence in all areas, and parents play a key role. We are especially proud of our Very Important Parent program, which brings parents into the classroom once a month. At Stowers we believe learning is a family matter.

We hope you'll take advantage of these opportunities to get involved.



Stowers will host a Sneak-a-Peak for pre-K students from 1 to 3 p.m. Aug. 12. Kindergarten Welcome Day is Aug. 12, from 1 to 3 p.m.



First- through fifth-grade teachers will host a Very Involved Parent activity from 8:45 to 9:15 a.m. Aug. 14.

An Open House is scheduled for 6:30 p.m. Aug. 20.

Become a part of our school and you'll see why we say, at Stowers "Everybody is a Champion."

For more information, call 544-2312.

Wilson Elementary

Home of the Wildcats, Wilson is located at 112 Lavoie Ave. and serves more than 400 children from the Indianhead Terrace community. Phyllis Parker has been the principal at Wilson since 1990.

At Wilson, literacy continues to be at the forefront of our curriculum with daily silent reading, response literature journals, writing workshops, book clubs and the "Celebrate Reading" program, all designed to foster a love of literature.

In addition to our outstanding academics and fine arts programs, students have various opportunities to participate in extracurricular activities, including Spanish, photography, reading, drama, craft and computer clubs. They learn about community service through the Kids Care Network, a national organization that encourages philanthropy. Through Kids Care, our students have helped flood victims in Africa, fed hungry children in Haiti, helped build a house for habitat for Humanity, and raised money to aid battered women and children.

Wilson will host a Sneak-a-Peak in classrooms from 2:30 to 3:30 p.m. Aug. 12. Parents are invited to join us each weekday morning at 8:30 Aug. 13-16 to learn more about school programs.

For more information about Wilson elementary School, visit us at wilson@benning.odedodea.edu.

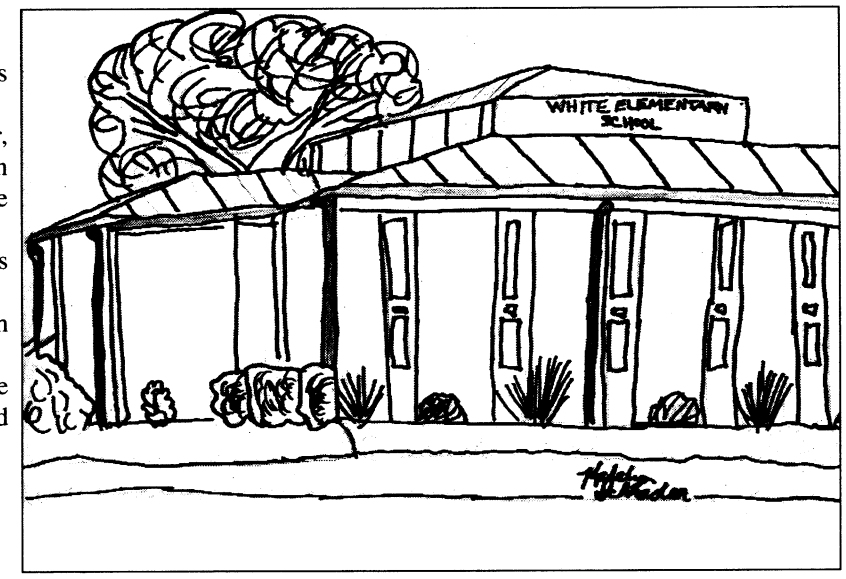
Edward A. White Elementary

White Elementary School, located at 300 1st Division Rd., was opened in 1962.

White is named in honor of Lt. Edward A. White, a Distinguished Service Cross recipient who was among the first of the 1st Cavalry Division to die in Korea in 1950.

The home of the Lions, White serves more than 300 student from the McGraw Manor, Battle Park and Main Post communities, as well as children from Latin American countries who reside on Fort Benning while their parents attend the Western Hemisphere Institute for Security Cooperation.

These students enrich our classrooms by expanding our understanding of various foreign cultures.



White invites all post residents to its annual Hispanic Heritage Celebration each September.

Principal Dr. Tommy Lee has an undergraduate degree from Columbus State University, a master's degree from Georgia State University and a specialist degree and doctorate from Auburn University.

White students are invited to meet their teachers Aug. 13, from 2:30 to 3:30 p.m.

An open house is scheduled Aug. 21 at 6:30 p.m.

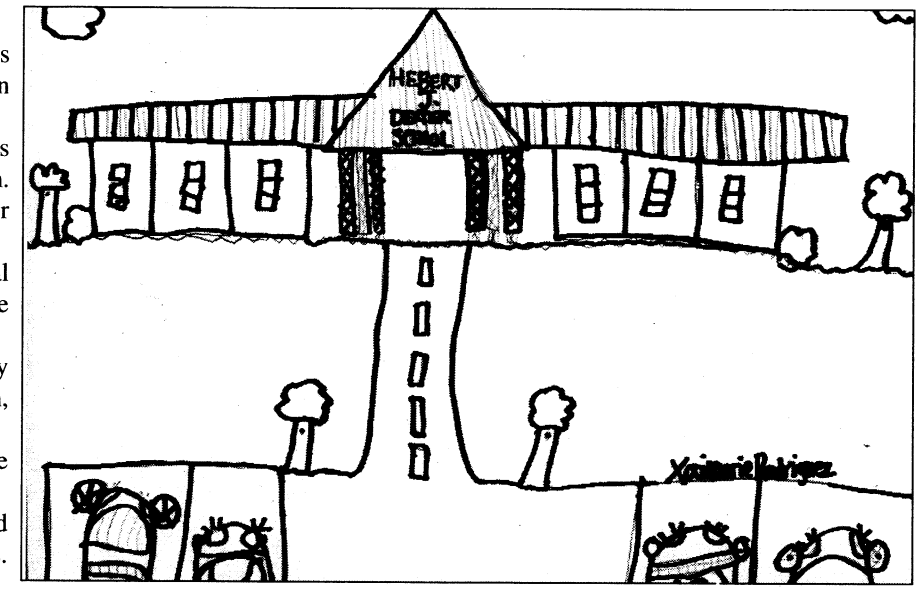
For more information, call 545-4623.

welcomes students

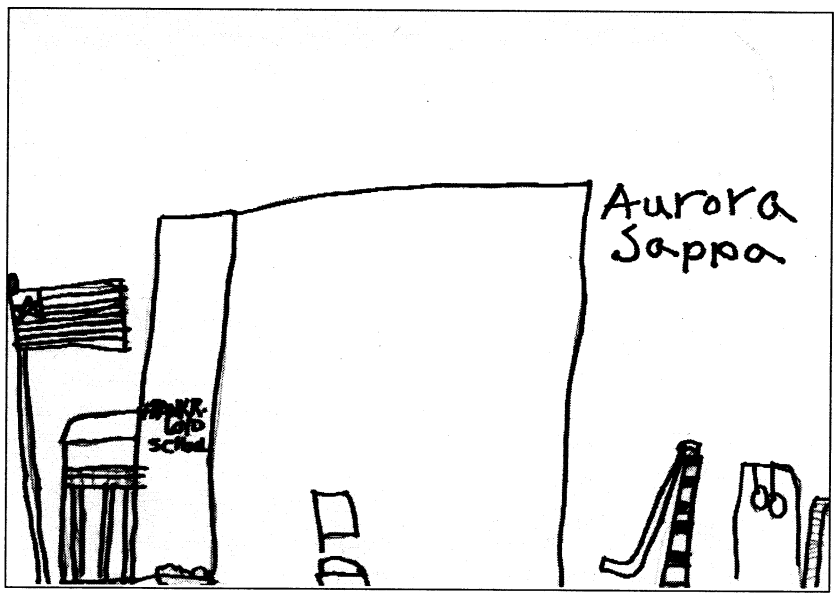
Herbert J. Dexter Elementary

Working Together Toward Tomorrow is the mission of the staff, students and parents of Dexter, located on Yeager Avenue and serving students from Fort Benning's Main Post and Upatoi communities.

Opened in 1969, Dexter was named in honor of Maj. Herbert J. Dexter, who was posthumously awarded the Distinguished service Cross for heroic action in Vietnam. Dexter was a member of the Screaming Eagles of the 101st Airborne Division. Dexter Elementary has adopted Herbie the Eagle as its mascot.



Dexter's history of service to mankind and ecology continues this year with special projects by the K-Club (kindness) and the e-Club (ecology), which was awarded the 2001 National Arbor Day Foundation's Education Award.



Extracurricular programs include safety patrol Peacemakers, Ambassadors, the Early Morning Fitness Club, WDEX television production, the Junior Leadership Team, ThinkQuest, and the Technology Club.

Vicki Rogers has been the principal at Dexter since 1990. Rogers was named the DoDEA National Distinguished Principal in 1996.

Dexter will host a Sneak-a-Peak at 2 p.m. Aug. 12. Parents and students are invited to join us in the multipurpose room for a brief assembly before visiting the classrooms.

The event will conclude with a summer social on the school's front lawn.

Frank R. Loyd Elementary

Loyd Elementary, home to the panthers, is nestled in the woods at 900 Santa Fe Rd. More than 300 students from the Custer Terrace community attend the school.

Built in 1958, the school was dedicated to 2nd Lt. Frank R. Loyd, a 25th Infantry Division soldier who was killed in the Korean War.

Loyd's motto is Creating Excellence for Tomorrow's World, and our goal is for every child to be an independent reader and writer.

Angie McPherson, an 11-year veteran administrator, has been principal at Loyd for three years. She holds a master's degree in special education.

Parents and students are invited to meet their teachers Aug. 12 at the following times: kindergarten — 8:30 a.m.; first grade — 9:30 a.m.; second grade — 10:30 a.m.; third grade — 11:30 a.m.; fourth grade — 1 p.m.; fifth grade — 2 p.m.

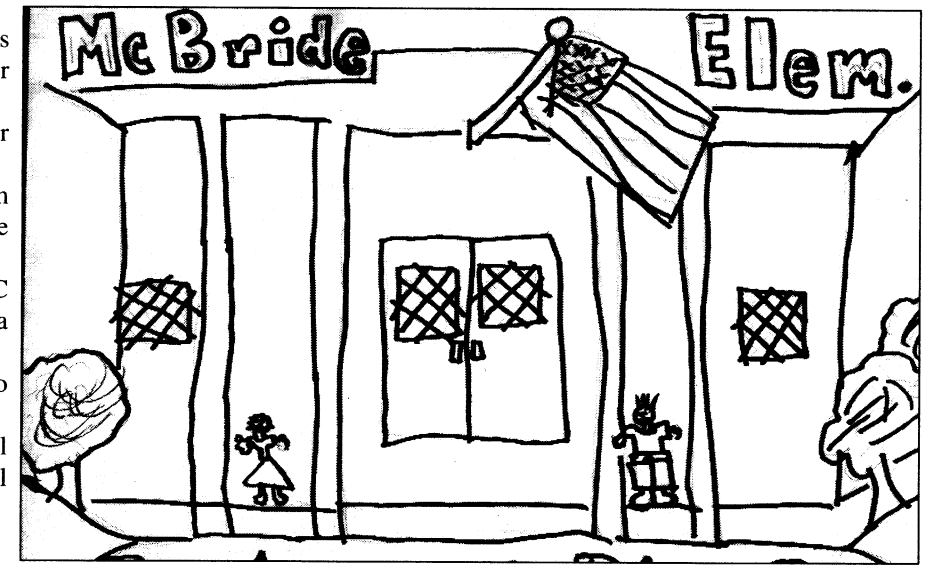
Pre-K students are invited to drop in anytime between 8:30 a.m. and 3 p.m. Aug. 12.

For more information, call 544-3432.

Morris McBride Elementary

McBride Elementary School, 700 Custer Rd., is named in honor of Capt. Morris R. McBride, who was posthumously awarded the Distinguished Service Cross for heroism in Vietnam. The school was opened in 1965.

McBride serves pre-K through third-grade students from the McGraw Manor community.

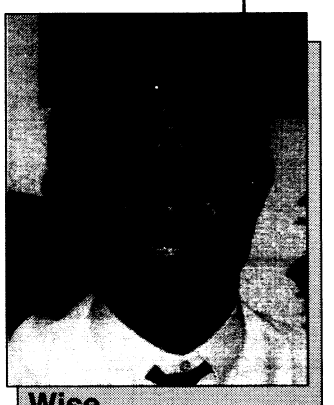


Principal Del Hicks holds a bachelor's degree and a master's degree from Northern Illinois University and an educational specialist's degree from Troy State University.

The Keep Columbus Beautiful Commission presented McBride the KCBC Community Award for Urban Forestry for the school's Woodland Trail Project, a hands-on outdoor classroom open to the public.

McBride will host Right Start — Write Smart and a Sneak-a-Peak from 2:30 to 3:30 p.m. Aug. 12.

Parents will meet their childrens' teachers before joining us in the school gymnasium to learn more about our goals and objectives for the 2002-2003 school year.



For more information, call McBride at 544-9411.

With an eye toward the future, Faith Middle School is making plans to celebrate the past. The 50-year-old school, which shares its anniversary with the Korean War, will honor Korean War veterans, particularly Lt. Col. Don C. Faith, for whom the school is named, September 5 and 6.

Principal Dr. Gregg Mowen said the students of Faith, which is an official partner with the Korean War Commemorative Committee, stand to learn a little about their school's history and a lot about their nation's history from the men who fought alongside Faith.

"Certainly we'll learn about the man, the hero, the school was named for, but we'll also learn a lot about the war from the men who were there. That's invaluable," Mowen said. "And at the same time, it'll give us a chance to honor these men."

Representatives of the 31st and 32nd Infantry Regiments, both of which Faith was commanding at the time of his death in the Battle of the Chosen Reservoir, and members of his family are expected to be on hand for a reception September 5. Veterans will visit the school the following day to talk with students. Details will be released at a later date, Mowen said.

To commemorate the school's historic ties to the 31st Infantry Regiment "Bears" and the 32nd Infantry Regiment's "Warriors," Faith replaced its eagle mascot with a "Warrior Bear."

The change is one of many for the school that "keeps reinventing itself," Mowen said. Last year the school launched various athletic programs, including baseball, basketball, roller hockey, soccer and cheerleading, and extracurricular activities, like the Newspaper Club, drama and mentoring program. Information on these programs will be available after the start of the school year, but parents are encouraged to contact the school for information about volunteering with a team or club.

Faith, Fort Benning's only middle school, services 700 sixth-, seventh- and eighth-graders. This year all three grades will participate in PRIME Time — Putting Responsibility In Motion Everyday — a national program that teaches students to make responsible decisions and take responsibility for their actions.

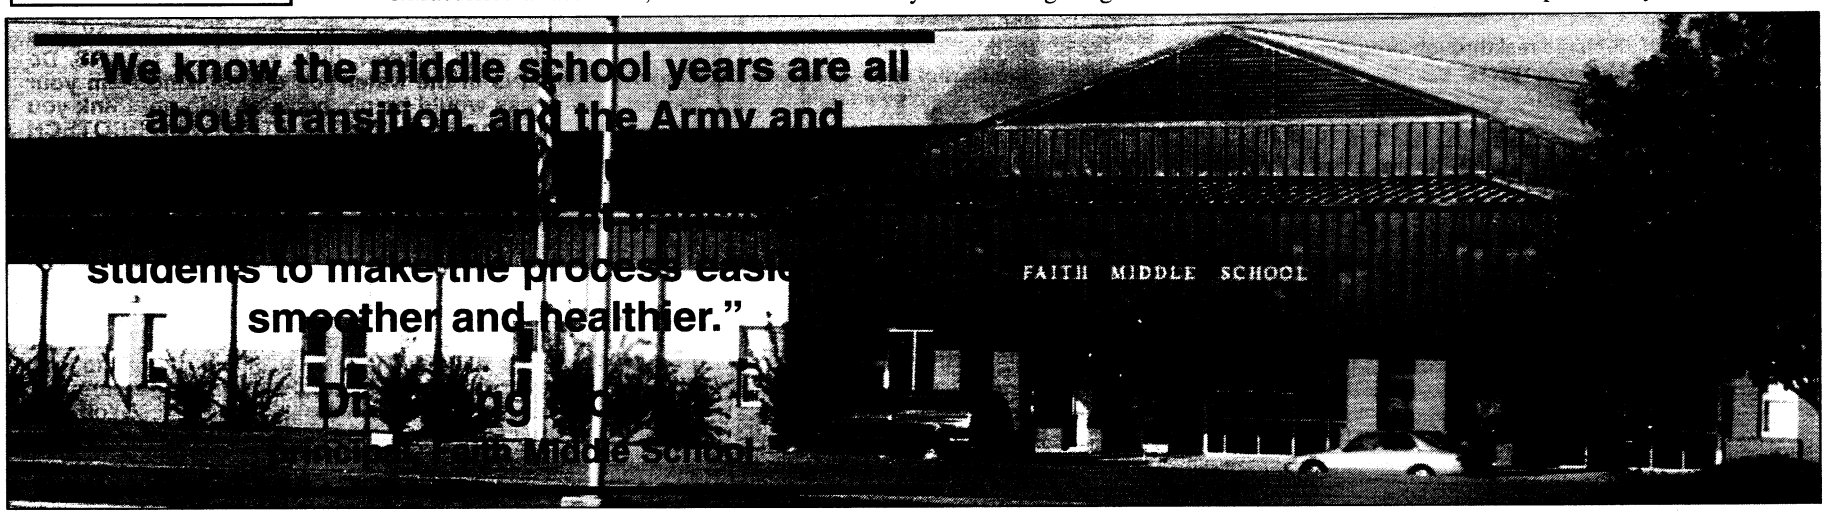
Faith piloted the program for one week last year, setting aside 19 minutes a day, four days a week, for every teacher to conduct a PRIME Time session simultaneously. Staff and students then voted to institute the program this year.

"It's a program that allows them to talk about and deal with issues they don't normally get to delve into in school," Mowen said. "We know the middle school years are all about transition, and the Army and (Department of Defense Education Activity) are taking a close look at transitioning students to make the process easier and smoother and healthier.

"I believe PRIME Time will do that. It'll help them make the usual age-related and relational adjustments, but it'll also help our new students feel at home, get acquainted and feel a part of Faith. I believe it'll have social and academic benefits," he said.

The course will focus on such topics as study skills, problem solving, community service, goal setting and self esteem.

The school is making another change students have been clamoring for, Mowen said. Seventh-graders will be assigned laptop computers, a privilege previously only afforded eighth-graders. Seventh-graders will participate in NetSchools, an online Orion program that expands their ability to research and interact with educational programs around the world.



The cafeteria has been enlarged to accommodate more students, eliminating the need for six lunch periods. Students will eat in three shifts, each about 40 minutes long, 10 minutes longer than their former lunch period.

"Lunch is a social time for these kids," Mowen said. "Many of them speed through their meal to get to the social time. By condensing lunches and extending the period, we believe they'll have more time to eat healthy and still do what's important to them — visit."

Also, in keeping with the times, the 50-year-old institution will adopt a "more holistic approach" to discipline, Mowen said. Rather than an "incident-driven" reaction to behavioral problems, the administration, which includes assistant principals Dr. Kimberly Crowell and Clint Wise, adopted a policy that is more of a "step process," forcing students to take responsibility for their behavior before it gets out of hand, Mowen said.

"There's always consequences for inappropriate behavior that doesn't meet our expectations," he said. "But instead of a one, two, three strikes you're out approach, we'll address each problem or infraction along the way, so students and their parents and teachers can see what direction they're headed in."

Sixth-graders and their parents are invited to a Sneak Preview from 3 to 5 p.m. Monday. They will visit their classrooms and pick up their schedules at that time. Seventh-graders can pick up their schedules from 9 a.m. to 11 a.m. today. Eighth-graders can pick up theirs between 1 and 3 p.m. today.

Do a search on the web on mold, mildew and dust mites and you will see the need for this product. Since the 70's we have done an excellent job sealing our homes to conserve energy. Now we have what the EPA and other environmentalist call Sick Building syndrome. We now have the technology to clean it up. Thunderstorm in a BOX, yes it's true, it kills mold, mildew, dust mites and ODORS. Do you know what is in the water you are drinking from your faucet? My guess would be no, because I do not think you would be drinking it. LIVING WATER with ECOTECH combines three technologies in one compact water treatment. 1. Ozonation 2. Ultraviolet light exposure & photo-oxdiated. 3. High-density carbon block filtration.

I retired from the military Nov. 1994 and I made up my mind that I would never work for someone again. I always gave a 100% in what ever I did and I wanted 100% back. child abduction

It couldn't happen in m

They read like a list from a book of popular baby names ... Casey, Elizabeth, Samantha, Danielle and Erica. Cute, trendy, "now" names. They've all made the "top 10" list over the past six years.

Chances are, you know little girls by the same names — probably several — in your neighborhood or your child's classroom. Maybe you chose one for your own daughter.

With shocking frequency their names have come to be associated with the unthinkable. Abduction.

Their smiles beam at us from snapshots taken during happier times – dance recitals and birthday parties. Their guileless grins remind us of their innocence. Their faces remind us of children we know.

But surely it couldn't happen here...

Kidnapping is nothing new to this country. Nearly 80 years ago the nation reeled when Charles Lindbergh's baby was snatched from his cradle, and once again, when 12-year-old Polly Klaas was kidnapped at knifepoint and murdered in 1993.

But the recent spate of abductions has taken on an even bolder, more daring nature with alarming frequency.

Elizabeth and Samantha disappeared from their own homes, snatched in front of witnesses. Casey was kidnapped when her father left the room for just a moment. Danielle was taken from her bed.

So what makes us so sure it couldn't happen here?

With the exception of an occasional non-custodial "parent-knapping," military posts have so far been exempt from the terror of abduction. Why that's so is a matter of speculation.

"I think we're fine. I think anybody who would do that sort of thing would be scared off by the MPs at the access points," said a Fort Benning mom of two, who asked not to be identified.

Another disagrees.

"If you think about it, there's no reason for us to feel super-secure. We just do," said Shannon Secules, mother of three and a Fort Benning resident.

"Look at all those girls. It happened in the most unlikely places — they're own homes — where everybody feels the most secure. So what makes us think we're any safer?"

Do post residents live with an overly inflated sense of security simply because we've never faced this kind of terror?

According to military police records, there have been no child abductions at Fort Benning. Reports of missing children are given immediate attention, and to date, they've all been located safe and sound nearby — usually at a neighborhood playground or friend's house.

But parents should not hesitate to call 911 if their child is missing, said the Directorate of Public Safety's operations NCO, Staff Sgt. Robert Johns. They should never allow themselves to become complacent about child safety and accountability.

"Never, never leave small children unattended. Post regulations prohibit children under 12 from staying home alone," Johns said.

"Many parents say they can't watch their children all the time. That may be true to a certain extent, but can you afford not to?"

Johns encouraged parents to talk to their children about the dangers of child abduction. And yes, to teach them to be suspicious of strangers.

"You have to be suspicious. Children ar too precious not to be. And teach them to be suspicious, too. Teach them to say no and run away. When it comes to children, 'better safe than sorry' always applies."

Johns said children should be taught to scratch and bite and yell as loud as they can if a stranger touches them.

Older children may discreetly wear a whistle on a "key cord" around their neck.

Parents should also teach very young children how to dial 911 using a toy or disconnected telephone. Never assume a child knows how to handle a telephone.

Children of all ages should be taught to be aware of their surroundings, Johns said. Make a game of it. Quiz them about their surroundings when you travel in the car. After a trip to the playground, ask them to describe what their playmates were wearing. When you tuck them in at night, have them close their eyes and describe their room in detail.

Exercises such as these will train them to be alert to changes in their environment and help make them aware when "a new face" enters the scene.

Parents, too, must learn to know their surroundings. Military families should chec with the police department and local residen before selecting a home in their new town. Crime statistics are a matter of of public record. For instance, a quick check of the Georgia Burea of Investigation's Sexual Offender Registry reveals the names and addresses of 140 convicted sex offenders in Muscogee County — good information if your scouting for a new home.

Military children who are used to the nomadic lifestyle may not be intimidated by strangers. After all, they constantly meet ne people — neighbors, classmates and parents' coworkers come and go frequently.

Marc Klaas, father of Polly Klaas and founder of the Polly Klaas Foundation for Missing Children, believes parents do their children a disservice when they focus their fears on "stranger danger."

"We have to get past this whole stranger danger' thing, and start teaching our children that danger sometimes wears a friendly face," he said in a July 25 interview on MSNBC.

Children, like many adults, tend to believe evil looks evil, he said. But murderers and child molesters are usually skilled at "making friends" with children. If they can gain their trust, even for just a moment, they can get close enough to "grab and run."

Parents should establish a system of "secret passwords" with their children — a funny phrase, a silly rhyme, the title of a favorite book or movie, the name of a favorite stuffed animal or even a nonsensical word. Children should be told to never get in a car or leave school or home with a family friend or relative if they're not "given the password."

Of course, the most obvious safety precautions are the ones we tend to take for granted — locking doors and travelling in pairs. Continue to practice standard safety measures, Johns said, but don't assume they are adequate. As noted earlier, several of the recent kidnappings have taken place in the child's home and in front of witnesses.

Burglar alarms, watch dogs and timed lights placed strategically around the house may deter potential invaders. And Web companies like herbiehydrant.com offer various innovative products to help protect your children.

Older children can use cell phones to keep parents abreast of their whereabouts. With the privilege of owning a phone should certain responsibilities, such as "check in" calls whenever he or she changes locations — from the theater to a restaurant or from a friend's house to the mall.

Children who have access to the internet should be instructed to never give their name, address or photo to anyone they meet online. They should leave a chatroom if the conversation or language becomes obscene and report it immediately to their parents. Sex offenders often meet their prey online.

There are dozens, if not hundreds of measures parents can take to keep their children safe. But there are no guarantees, Johns said. Complacency is a parent's worst enemy.

"Take ever precaution at your disposal to keep your children safe from kidnapp[ers], never assume it can't happen where you live," Johns said. "When you let your down, that's when you become vul[nerable]

Thomas Armstrong delivered a package and a wake up call about security issues to Fort Benning last week.

Armstrong was so concerned about what he perceived to be a lack of security here that he notified the FBI. Local agents passed his observations on to post officials.

According to Armstrong, he entered post in an unmarked van, received directions and proceeded with his delivery. Armstrong wandered through several rooms with a large box in an unidentified building, unaccompanied and unnoticed.

"We have made the necessary corrections to ensure that check point personnel perform their duties to standard," said 1st Lt. Cesar Ocasio of the Directorate of Public Safety. "It is incumbent upon the Fort Benning community

New phone PIN system to save money

DOIM budget causes cuts in long distance

Pfc. Brian Trapp
Bayonet staff

Everyone making long-distance phone calls from a military phone will need a personal identification number beginning Monday.

Without a PIN, these calls won't be possible.

All commercial long-distance and Defense Switched Network (DSN) calls made from military phones will now be accountable to the person through their PIN.

"A monthly phone bill of long distance calls and who made them will be sent to the agencies," said Larry Lalka, chief of architect and plans with Directorate of Information Management. "It's like the phone bill one receives at home."

The change is because of a slated 70 percent cut in the DOIM's budget for long-distance calling, said Paul Yates, DOIM director. The savings from eliminating unnecessary long distance calls are projected at 20 to 25 percent.

"People will be able to see what's going on, and this will make people accountable for their calls," he said.

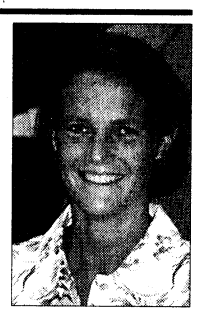
The information management officer or telephone communication officer can pick up and sign for the PIN numbers from the Information Center Building, Building 358.

If the DOIM Telephone Operations hasn't received the PIN number, the organization will not be authorized to place long distance or DSN calls starting Monday.

People will be personally responsible for the security of their PIN and any unauthorized use of the PIN by themselves or others may result in being held financially liable for use, according to the PIN acknowledgement of receipt.

When making a call:

- Dial the number,
- Listen for three beeps,
- Enter six-digit PIN.



For more information, call 545-4660.

ARMY LIFE

Life without the Army?

Melissa House

COMMENTARY

I have been in the military all of my life. From the moment I interrupted NFL Sunday Football (enough years ago), I have been in the Army.

I thought that fact might make it harder to assess how my life might have been different if I hadn't joined the military, but the answer was obvious. I would have been a civilian.

Civilian: (noun): a person following the pursuits of ordinary community life as distinguished from one serving in a police, firefighting, or military force.

It's a little hard to gauge exactly what "ordinary, community life" might be when I've never participated in it. If I had been a civilian, I wouldn't have grown up in seven states and one foreign country. I didn't really understand how different that made me until I started my junior year in my third high school. As a child, I saw things that my peers in this small town in Texas had only read about in books.

While most of my classmates had barely ventured outside of the ARK-LA-TEX- (that area of the country defined these days by Clinton, Bush and the West Nile virus), my earliest memories are of riding trains into the salt mines in Austria and crossing the English Channel by boat. My brother and I actually got tired of touring castles and looking at tapestries, at the sophisticated ages of 7 and 3, and we had to wave to dad from the foot of the Leaning Tower of Pisa because mom was afraid to let us go up.

My personality, I think, was shaped by all of my experiences. I was raised to be independent, adaptable and open-minded. Each new move was not a challenge, but an adventure.

Once it came time to leave home for college, I validated my upbringing by choosing a military school and entering the Army myself. Of course, that decision also altered my life in the form of a husband and three sons who can all alternately be both blessings and curses, depending on the phases of the moon.

Only a few things mean more to me than the chance to serve my country as both a soldier and a spouse. I read somewhere recently that around 44 percent of current Army spouses have some prior experience with the military, either as children or as adults.

That statistic speaks volumes. We choose the Army way of life for ourselves and our families. We give our children opportunities to experience things that most in the civilian world will not. I love to hear my youngest tell people that he is going to be an "army man firefighter tank driver" when he grows up. Even my oldest, with four elementary schools under his belt at age 10, is talking about careers outside the civilian world, waffling between fighter pilot and policeman.

I could sit here and list all the people I met, the things I did, or the places I went as the daughter of a career soldier, wife of a career soldier and just plain soldier, but you'd be bored to death.

When it comes right down to it, if I hadn't joined the Army, I wouldn't be me.

Here, take my seat ... please

COMMENTARY

Can we talk, just the two of us? It's true my commentaries are usually geared toward a larger audience, but this one is just for YOU. I have a really big favor to ask. Really big.

As you read this, I'm a couple hundred miles away, enjoying a trip to the mountains I've had planned for several months. I'm having a great time. But Saturday my heart will be back home. Unfortunately I can't be with it.

See, tomorrow is Katie Turner Night at Golden Park. So what, you ask? Who's Katie Turner, and why should I regret missing a ball game? After all, we're talking about the soon to be defunct Columbus RedStixx, right?

Well, it's this way. Katie was my friend's daughter. She was studying pediatric audiology last year, when, just one month shy of her 24th birthday, she was diagnosed with a very rare form of cancer. Katie died a week later, giving her parents and sisters precious little time to say good-bye.

Faced with pain unimaginable, Dave and Linda Turner did the only thing they knew to do to honor their daughter's memory and keep her dream alive. Rising above their own pain to ease someone else's, they founded the Katie Elizabeth Turner Endowment for hearing impaired children. And just this summer, the endowment reached a milestone. Some little girl or boy will be the first to receive a hearing aid thanks to Katie's parents' relentless efforts to see their daughter's dream become a reality.

Now it's time to celebrate. And what better way than a day at the ball field? It's the American way. The RedStixx ball club, which has supported Dave and Linda's endeavor from the start, is donating $3 of every $4 ticket sold to Katie's kids. Lots of fun activities are planned for the night, including a silent auction. I wish I could be there to help celebrate.

That's where you come in. Could you, would you, won't you pleeease take my seat? Heck, take a whole row of seats. Take the kids, the neighbors, the in-laws and the mailman to the ball park. Eat popcorn and hotdogs and Cracker Jacks. Order a tall frosty glass of root beer and toast the Turners' triumph. Celebrate!

Do it for me, won't you please? Better yet, do it for Katie.

The game starts at 7 p.m., but gates open an hour earlier. Be sure to buy your tickets at the table set up near the ticket booth, so Katie's supporters can be counted.

Thanks very much. I owe you one.

HONOR

Seaman exemplifies Army values

Pfc. Chris Stephens

"We have many honors and traditions in the service. Some good, some bad. But, sir, I wouldn't be here today if it wasn't for our greatest tradition ... honor, sir!"
— Senior Chief Carl Brashear, as played by Cuba Gooding Jr. in Men of Honor

COMMENTARY

Brashear was born Jan. 19, 1931, in Tonieville, Ky., to sharecropping parents. He helped his father tend to the fields until he he joined the Navy at 17.

He was assigned to serve as cook, but Brashear wanted bigger and better things. He didn't want to be a cook. Using his fathers words, "be the best," he fought through discrimination to enter the Navy's Deep-Sea Diving School, becoming the Navy's first black diver.

His adventure didn't end there. After finding a U.S. nuclear bomb dropped in international waters, Brashear saved the lives of two sailors.

When a rope pulling up the bomb broke and the sailors on the line were not getting out of the way, Brashear pushed the sailors out of the way. In the process, a huge piece of steel nearly severed his leg.

He could have gone home and retired, but he hadn't accomplished his goal.

Brashear had his leg amputated. He worked day and night to strengthen his leg so he could show a medical board he was fully capable of accomplishing his diving duties in the new Navy diving suit.

Brashear passed the medical board in 1967 and returned to full-active duty. He became a master diver in 1970, the first black master diver in the Navy.

This is more than just a Navy story. This is a story of honor.

In the Army values system, honor's definition is "to follow all Army values."

Did Brashear exemplify all the values during his career?

He showed loyalty to his country and his seniors by always doing his best.

There's no question that he went above and beyond the call of duty. In fact, he took it to a whole new level.

Though he received little respect because of his color, Brashear still performed his military duties while treating others like they should be treated.

Volunteering for the hard diving assignments takes care of selfless service. He always put his country before himself and he always did what was right, whether someone was looking or not.

He faced fear, danger and adversity, both physical and moral. Brashear represents a great example of what honor means.

He served proudly, while overcoming countless obstacles.

Honor is more than just a word. It is something that is in every military branch's code. Without honor, you have nothing.

Twin eagles: Ranger commander, brother, 'destined for life in uniform' reach rank of colonel

Brothers recount tale of twin triumph

Bridgett Siter
Special to the Bayonet©

John and William Kidd were born eight minutes apart on the second day of April, 1958, in that brief respite between the Korean and Vietnam Wars.

Their father, George Kidd, had been an Army officer in Korea. His father served in World War I — "Saluting Demon they called him, 'cause he'd salute anything. He'd salute a rock," George said. His great grandfather was wounded in the Civil War, and two of his ancestors fought in the Revolution.

So it came as no surprise to George when his boys showed an interest in the military at an early age.

"It was in their blood, I could see that right away," he said. "I have pictures of them at 3 playing with my old Army service equipment, and at 5 raising the flag outside the house. They used to hold regular flag-raising ceremonies, with a bugle and all, much to the neighbors' disdain."

Their father suspected Bill and John were destined for life in uniform.

"If it wasn't for the Army surplus store, they wouldn't have had anything to wear in high school," he said.

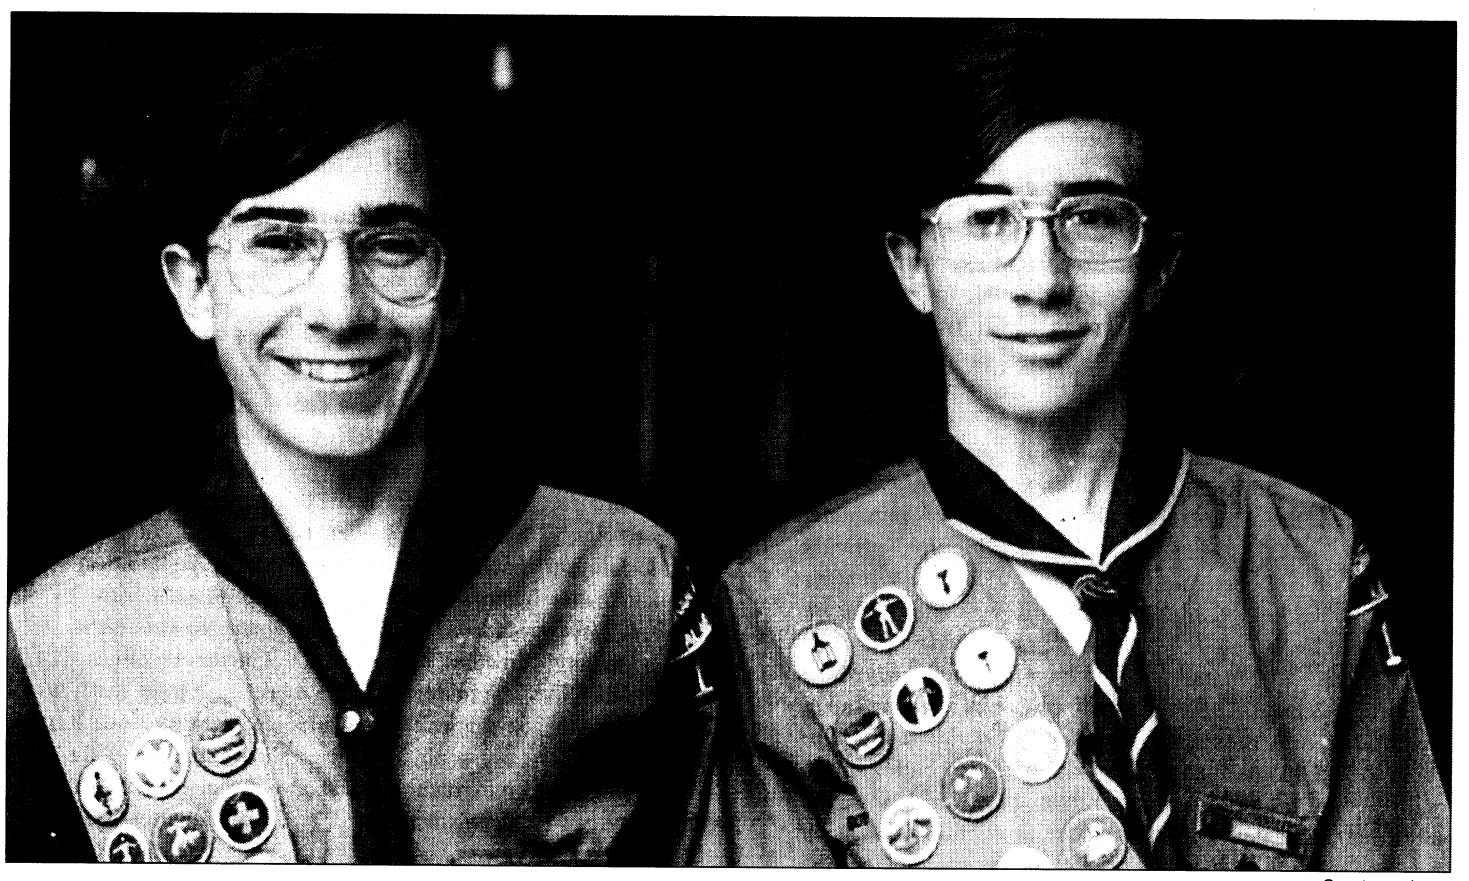
Even the press took note. The Birmingham News ran a photo of the 15-year-old Kidds in their Eagle Scout uniforms in 1973. It was called Twin Eagles, a foreshadow of things to come.

Nearly 30 years later, Cols. Bill and John Kidd are sporting "twin eagles" once again.

Bill recently took command of Fort Benning's Ranger Training Brigade, and John serves with psychological operations with the Joint Chiefs of Staff at the Pentagon. That, in and of itself, is quite an accomplishment, but George believes the fact that twins have reached the rank of colonel is probably an Army first.

"No one's ever been able to tell me of another case like it," he said.

Indeed, many would call John and Bill "a case." From grade-school "switch" pranks — "We dressed alike, right down to the little bow tie," John said, — to basic training, where drill sergeants thought they were seeing double, the fraternal-but-nearly-identical Kidds have made a practice of, well, kidding around.



"Oh, it happens every day. Constantly," John said. "Just last week I was stopped by a two-star and he was just talking away. He had no idea I wasn't Bill. And there's an officer across the hall from me who thought I was snubbing her … because she thought I was Bill. That kind of thing happens daily. It can be a lot of fun."

Even the family gets in on the act.

Janet Kidd was having a coffee in her home, when she noticed her guests migrating toward the mantle, where they cast furtive glances at a photo of her brother-in-law, Bill, and his wife, Kim.

"Uh, Janet," a young Army wife finally asked. "Who's that with your husband?"

"Oh, her? That's his ex," Janet replied.

Courtesy photo

Cols. Bill Kidd, left, and John Kidd were 15 and achieved the rank of Eagle Scout in 1973.

The Kidds' career paths have crossed many times, including a short period when they shared an office at Fort Bragg. And though friends and professional acquaintances can tell them apart when they're together, they're often mistaken for one another when they're apart.

Lt. Gen. Wayne Downing, then U.S. Army Special Operations commander, paused to speak with John shortly after attending an early-morning meeting with his brother.

"He said 'About that meeting…,'" John recalled. "And I said, 'I wasn't there, sir.'

"And he said, 'Well I know damn well you were. You sat right by me.'

"I said, 'No, sir. I wasn't there,' and he started to get all flustered and mad, till someone said, 'Sir, that was the other one.'

"He said, 'Well, fire one of these sons of -------.'"

The twins said they've never felt challenged by their relationship — never doubted their individualities. But the relationship bears some "connections" that defy explanation.

Bill recalled a time during college, when his brother was injured in an automobile accident.

"I had no idea where he was, but I had this sense that something wasn't right. I had to find him. That happens sometimes, this feeling that I need to call or go see him, a kind of urgency."

It's a connection that translates into conversation.

"When we get together, people tell us our conversations are a bit disconcerting," Bill said. "We don't finish our sentences because we know what the other is thinking. Or we don't say anything at all. We just look at each other and nod and know exactly what we mean by it. It's not something we do consciously."

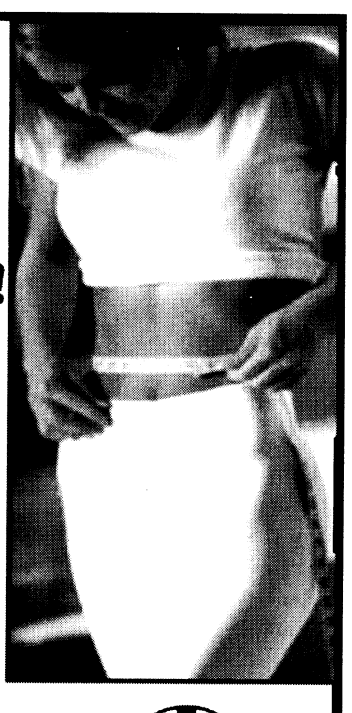
Despite their resemblance and shared history — they both attended the Georgia Military College and Auburn University — the Kidds are very different, they said.

John, the more gregarious of the two, "would be selling used cars if he hadn't joined the Army," Bill said.

"I'm more conservative. He likes hunting and fishing and firearms, and I'm not avid about them. He's an impulsive shopper, and I'm a cheap, miserly, squeeze-that-quarter-till-it-screams kinda guy. But we're really very close."

And there's one minor physical difference that John is grateful for, the difference of a few pounds.

"When I was going up for lieutenant colonel, somebody at Infantry Branch tossed my picture in the garbage. I guess he thought, 'We already have one of this guy,'" John said. "So when Special Forces got a hold of my packet and found my picture was missing, they just went down and borrowed Bill's. He weighs a little less. I figure that might've helped. Who knows, my promotion might be completely invalid. They might take it back if they knew.



"You're not going to print this are you?"

Work force to restructure

DoD authority approves 6,000 buyouts

Willie Varner
Directorate of Civilian Personnel

The fiscal 2002 National Defense Authorization Act provided DoD authority to approve 2,000 civilian buyouts in fiscal 2002 and 6,000 buyouts in fiscal 2003 to support the need for work force restructuring and reshaping.

Unlike the Voluntary Separation Incentive Pay program, this authority provides buyouts up to $25,000 designed to create opportunities for management to restructure, re-engineer, or redesign vacated positions without a reduction in force or eliminating positions. This authority does not change the traditional VSIP authority delegated to commanders for use in conjunction with planned work force reductions in force.

The Special Work force Restructuring Buyout Authority was designed to address the skill imbalances that exist in DoD as a result of the downsizing of the 1990s and the expected work force exodus because of the rapidly escalating retirement eligibility. By fiscal 2005 within Training and Doctrine Command, 35 percent of the current work force will be eligible for regular retirement and an additional 35 percent eligible for early retirement. Therefore, this authority should be used to manage attrition and restructure positions to correct skill imbalances through an orderly turnover in personnel designed to reshape the work force.

Consistent with the president's goals for work force planning and restructuring, this also includes streamlining organizations, reducing the number of high-level managerial and supervisory positions, and filling vacancies with lower-grade personnel when feasible to provide personnel with career opportunities and future promotion potential.

Managers should analyze the need for this tool and the need to leverage restructure opportunities to better align resources to meet long-range considerations, that is mission and technology changes, needed reorganization, changes to skill sets and demographic shifts.

There is no limit to the number of requirements that TRADOC can identify; however, it is unlikely the command will receive authority to meet the total number identified.

Therefore, installations must focus on using buyouts that posture the civilian work force to meet high-priority needs identified in the TRADOC and Installation Command Plans. Since the installation positions are operationally controlled by the Installation Management Agency in fiscal 2003, each buyout requirement identified should indicate whether the position to be vacated is "Mission" or "BASOPs."

TIM headquarters to open

Centralized agency to manage Army's posts, fence funds

Staff Sgt. Marcia Triggs
Army News Service

WASHINGTON — A centralized agency designed to manage Army installations and fence funds for soldiers and their families will open its headquarters Oct. 1 in Arlington, Va.

The Installation Management Agency will execute the concepts outlined by Army Secretary Thomas White when he pledged last year that the service would implement better business practices, said Philip E. Sakowitz Jr., the new agency's deputy director. Sakowitz has spearheaded the Transformation of Installation Management task force since March.

TIM has evolved into more than cutting layers of bureaucracy, Sakowitz said.

It will change the make-up of the Army. He said the Army's plan is to reduce military personnel in garrison.

"The only positions we can say for sure will remain is the garrison commander and command sergeant major," Sakowitz said, inferring other garrison positions will be filled by civilians. IMA has also become a mechanism for making sure the Army is taking care of its personnel, and running to standard, Sakowitz said.

The purpose of the agency is to make sure funds are funneled into programs to which it is allocated. Funding for an installation will be separated into two different pots, and no longer will it migrate between mission and base operations. The outcome is expected to be soldiers better trained for mission, improvement in well-being programs, and better workplace and living conditions on post, Sakowitz said.

Installation management will also be held accountable to a standard, he said.

"All soldiers have a standard operating procedure for doing their job — the Army didn't have one," Sakowitz said. "We hadn't been training to any standards in installation management. However, we have 95 base-operation services, examples are: childcare centers, dining facilities and gyms. We're going to write an SOP for all of them."

As an example of consistent base operations throughout the Army, Sakowitz talked about gym improvements. Plans are currently being written to have all gyms in operation for 90 hours a week, he said. The square footage of the gym will be based on the installation's population and all programs run by the gym, such as intramural teams, will also be under the same guidelines.

Change will not happen overnight, Sakowitz said. It will take about a year before all the standard operating procedures will be written. The headquarters staff will only be 40 percent staffed in October, and fully staffed sometime in 2003.

Soldiers will start to see upgrades in their living quarters and where they work in fiscal 2003, but most changes won't take place until the 2004-2005 time frame, Sakowitz said.

There are a number of changes the Army will undergo under TIM, and one will be the elimination of borrowed military personnel, Sakowitz said.

"Soldiers who work at the gym and basic trainees who pull KP (kitchen-patrol) duty are examples of borrowed military personnel," Sakowitz said. "Most of the time we don't have the funds to man those facilities, so we pull soldiers out of training."

The IMA will be run by Maj. Gen. Andy Aadland, who is currently the commanding general for the Maneuver Support Center, Fort Leonard Wood, Mo.

He will also head up the seven TIM regions. The regions headquarters will be located at Fort Monroe, Va.; Fort McPherson, Ga.; Rock Island Arsenal, Il.; Fort Sam Houston, Texas; Heidelberg, Germany; Fort Shafter, Hawaii, and Yongsan, Korea.

"There are a lot of people who are confused by the TIM regions," Sakowitz said. "They think that we are going from 14 major commands to seven regions. We're going from 14 to one. It's not central unless you go to one."

The MACOMS — such as Forces Command and Training and Doctrine Command — will no longer be the sole management authority for installations.

MACOM commanders will still be engaged in installation matters, as six of the commanders will represent all MACOMS and sit on a newly established installation management board of directors, Sakowitz said. However, the MACOM commanders will not be involved in day-to-day operations.

"I believe in my heart this is good for the Army," Sakowitz said.

Not only will IMA be taking care of people, managing all installations under one umbrella will enable the Army to capitalize on bulk purchasing to save money.

In a speech, Secretary White said that the Army has 300-plus separate contracts with Microsoft, Sakowitz said. That's an inefficient use of money.

"In the future, one contractor could serve all the Army's state or regional supply and utility needs," he said, "and the money saved can go back into well-being programs for the community."

Just as Transformation on the tactical side is developing in stages, TIM will change the Army at a slow but steady pace, Sakowitz said.

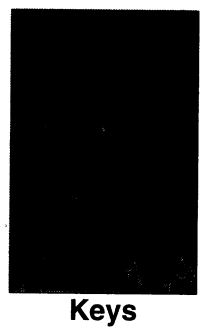
Post inducts four into Audie Murphy Club



Post NCOs accepted to exalted club

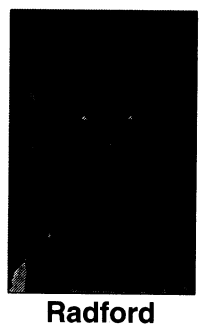
Pfc. Brian Trapp
Bayonet staff

Four new members of the Audie Murphy Club were inducted in a small ceremony Aug. 9 at Marshall Auditorium.

The NCOs nominated by their chain of command for devotion to duty and leadership ability were Staff Sgt. Namu Keys, section sergeant with the 63rd Engineer Company; Staff Sgt. Matthew Mobley, a drill sergeant with 2nd Battalion, 19th Infantry Regiment; Sgt. Eugenia Radford, a petroleum inventory NCOIC, 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment; and Staff Sgt. James Taylor, battalion communications chief, 1st Bn., 29th Inf. Regt.

"The Audie Murphy Club is one of the biggest honors at Fort Benning," said 1st Sgt. William Jones, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 1st Bn., 29th Inf. Regt.

Keys



Club members have the spirit of Audie Murphy, one of the most prestigious NCOs ever, he said.

Keys prepared for the club's board for two years.

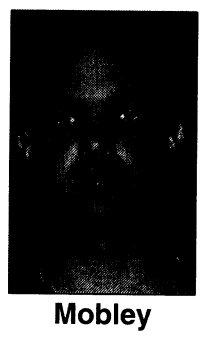
"It's a big relief that I've got it," Keys said. "Now I can help other NCOs get inducted in the club and help soldiers achieve their goals."

For the newly inducted members it isn't the apex of their goal setting.

"This is not the culmination," said Command Sgt. Maj. Gerald Klein, post command sergeant major. "This is just the beginning. These are our best NCOs — who better to help subordinates and show their chain of command why they are Audie Murphy Club members."

Radford

"(Radford) is one of the most outstanding soldiers in HHC," Jones said.



Radford and Taylor really stood out from all the soldiers, in physical training and devotion to their soldiers, he said.

"I found out I was inducted the day of the ceremony," Radford said. "I was waiting on the results, and I was ecstatic when I heard.

"Not only did I pass the board, but I have something to show for it too."

This is the second time Mobley was nominated for the club. He didn't make it during his first try two years ago while in Alaska.

"I didn't have the experience level as an E-5," Mobley said. "Now — I have more experience, and being a drill sergeant gives a lot of different leadership challenges on a day-to-day basis."

Mobley

The questions asked at the board were not typical by-the-book questions of promotion boards, they are more situational type questions. Most of the topics covered were care for soldiers, Keys said.

"I thought they might ask me something I didn't know how to answer," Radford said. "But I went in there and exceeded my expectations."

Everyone in the unit benefits from good leadership, and the inductees' subordinates will go on to be contributing members of their next unit, Jones said.

"(Radford) is a really good NCO. She is very caring and inspires me to do well," said Pvt. Mellania Ballard, who worked with Radford for the past seven months. "I didn't know my job very well coming out of AIT, but she helped me learn it really well. She teaches me something new everyday."

The original club was started at Fort Hood, Texas, early in 1986, according to a club Web site.

In 1993, a command sergeant major was voted into the Sergeant Audie Murphy Club by the membership and then became the Forces Command sergeant major. Soon thereafter, the club became Forces Commandwide, including the Reserves and National Guard.

In 1994, at a sergeant major of the Army conference, the Sergeant Audie Murphy Club spread Armywide to all commands with installations retaining the selection process for their own NCOs. In 1998, it was estimated that the club membership with more than 3,000 soldiers and was steadily increasing.

officer, 5th Corps, Heidelberg, Germany, and said he is looking forward to serving the Army, Infantry soldiers and the Fort Benning community.

"Seeing all of the Infantry soldiers working hard to defend our country is what I love to see," Layfield said. "It's an honor and a privilege to serve here on Fort Benning."

Layfield has served in a variety of assignments to include: rifle platoon leader, support platoon leader, antitank platoon leader, and company executive officer for 1st Battalion, 87th Infantry Regiment, at Baumholder, Germany; commander of Headquarters Company, 2nd Brigade and Bravo Company, 4th Battalion, 6th Infantry Regiment, 5th Infantry Division; battalion operations officer, 4th Battalion, 6th Infantry Regiment; operations officer, Readiness Group, Fort Meade, Md.

After Fort Meade, he served as operations officer in Special Technical Operations Division, operations officer, Current Operations on the Joint Staff in Washington, D.C.; deputy operations officer for Training and battalion executive officer for 1st Battalion, 8th Infantry Regiment, at Fort Carson, Colo.; and commander of 1st Battalion, 15th Infantry Regiment, in Schweinfurt, Germany, where he deployed with the battalion as Task Force Able Sentry to the former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia.

Following Macedonia, Layfield deployed with the battalion, re-flagged as 1st Battalion, 18th Infantry Regiment, to Bosnia, as part of Operation Joint Endeavor.

Layfield was then assigned to operations officer, III Corps at Fort Hood, Texas, where he served as Chief of Force Integration and Force XXI Fielding until assuming command of the 3rd "Greywolf" Brigade, 1st Cavalry Division.

Layfield received his commission in 1978. He holds a masters degree in administration from Central Michigan University. His military education includes the Infantry Officer Basic and Advanced courses, the Combined Arms and Services Staff School, Armed Forces Staff College and the Army War College.

His awards and decorations include the Legion of Merit, Meritorious Service Medal, Army Commendation Medal, Army Achievement Medal, NATO Medal, United Nations Medal, Parachutist Badge, Ranger Tab and the Expert Infantry Badge.

Layfield is originally from Baltimore and is married to the former Vicky Adwell.

and unit personnel to remain aware of their surroundings."

In response to last year's terrorist attacks, the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff mandated that all DoD personnel receive pre-deployment antiterrorism awareness training. This also includes family members traveling on official orders. The chairman further directed that antiterrorism awareness be instilled at all levels of education and training from accession through separation with annual refresher training.

The Directorate of Intelligence and Security, headed by Lt Col. Douglas Raymond, is Fort Benning's triple-hatted agency for issues of antiterrorism awareness.

"In the force protection arena, we conduct individual awareness training to personnel going overseas," said Al Harvey, DIS deputy director.

DIS instructors teach units deploying to places like Southwest Asia. The program is tied into the levy system and instructors conduct PCS briefings every Wednesday. The trainees at ITB and BCTB are briefed twice monthly. And DIS helps develop awareness programs for agencies in the civilian community.

> "Individuals are our first line of defense against terrorism, and our eyes and ears to everything."
> Alice Bass
> Antiterrorism officer

Under the second hat, the Intelligence Fusion cell works hand-in-hand with the military police to receive and review data and issue any terrorism threat alerts.

The third hat is operational in nature, where lessons learned are integrated into the working plan. To do this, the DIS creates Priority Information Requirements, which are changing documents of certain indicators of terrorist activity, Harvey said. PIRs are tailored to individual agencies, such as the post exchange or commissary.

"Individuals are our first line defense against terrorism, said Alice Bass, antiterrorism officer, "and our eyes and ears to everything going on."

People need to be aware of what is happening in their work or living areas, she said, and recognize those things, people or events that are out of the ordinary.

"Many people see things that are strange, but do not do anything," said Sgt. 1st Class Matthew Bonham, also a trained ATO. But if a few people see strange things and report them, it may paint a picture that may be valuable to the Fusion Cell, Bonham said. That one tidbit may open the door for investigators, he said.

"Some reports will turn out to be false alarms, said Bass, but some will not."

Speaking specifically about Anderson's delivery, Bonham said, "just because someone is on the installation doesn't mean that they have legitimate business here." Both Bass and Bonham say that it is important for soldiers and family members both on and off post to verify the documentation of individuals who come to homes and offices to make deliveries or repairs.

Currently, there is no antiterrorism training offered to spouses at Fort Benning other than those moving overseas. That may be something to look into, Harvey said.

Scientists: Visit Benning to help lighten soldiers' load on building and manipulating matter at the microscopic level of four atoms. It can be applied to micromachines, microchips and even to make steel stronger.

The institute plans to study nanotechnology in labs to look for ways to support the soldier and enhance survivability by providing care at a distance, said Edwin Thomas, a professor of material science and engineering with ISN.

The institute has the opportunity to produce hybrid materials by combining substances on the molecular level to create something completely new, he said. This means there's a chance of building lighter, stronger polymers with more flexibility, which could be used in body armor.

The goal of the institute is to address soldier load, and make it smaller, lighter and more mobile, said Chris Kearns, division chief, Division I, Dismounted Battlespace Battle Lab.

Every university is experimenting with nanotechnology in different ways, but ISN has a focus on aiding the soldier, Thomas said.

> "We will have research that won't be just public and published, it will be used by soldiers."
> Edwin Thomas
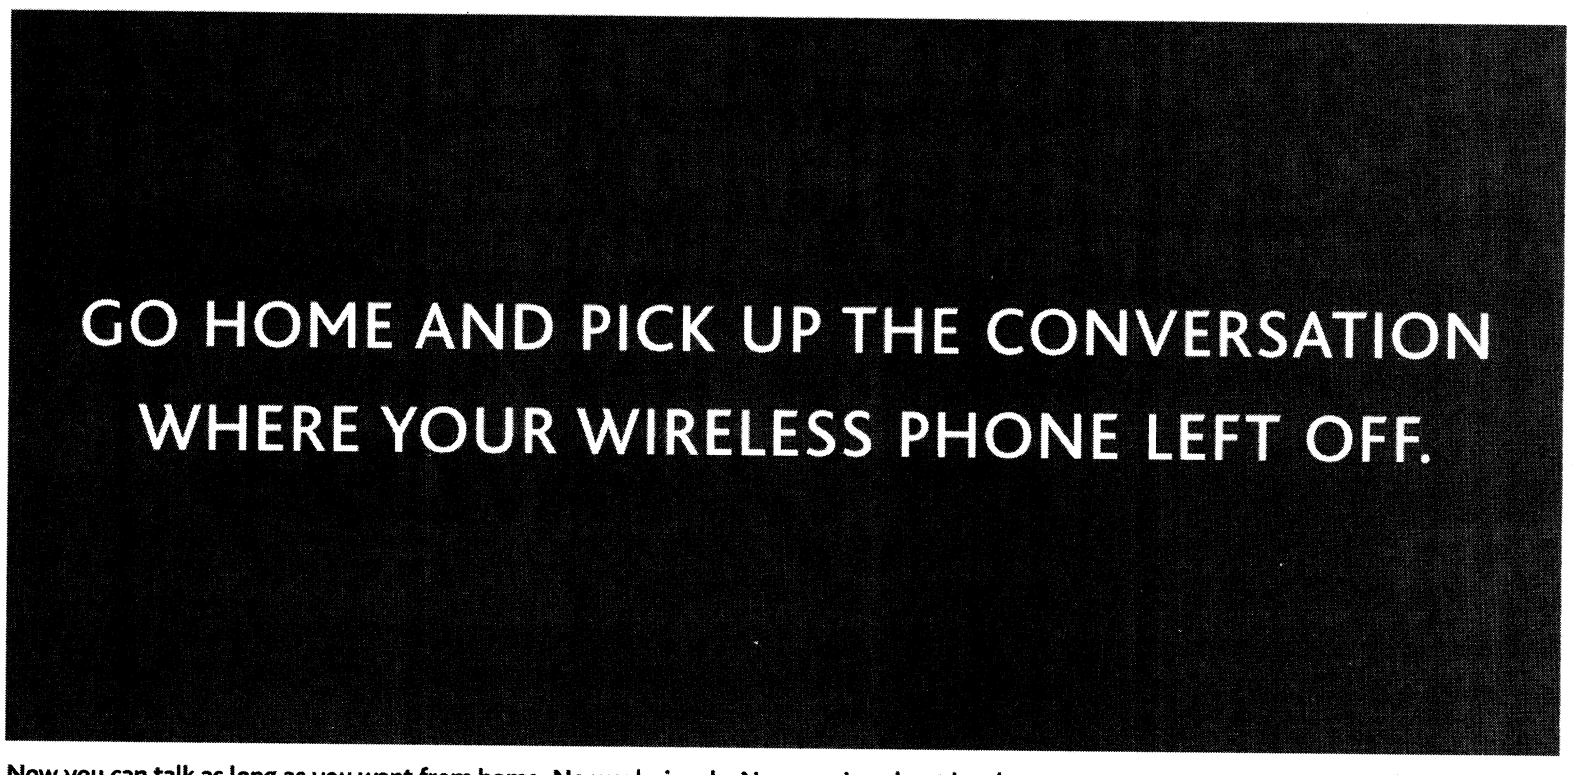
> Professor of material science and engineering with ISN

Those who went on the road march said the march was very difficult and a real learning experience.



The road march helped the institute members get a better understanding of what it feels like to carry a load, the noise it makes and the effects on balance, said an ISN official.

"We will have research that won't be just public and published, it will be used by soldiers," Thomas said. "The program goal is to bring out partial answers in the near future to incorporate things now, instead of spending millions of dollars and 25 years before producing one final product."

ISN is envisioning a Dynamic Battle suit. MIT has dedicated facilities on campus for research and production of soldier nanotechnologies:

- To provide ballistic protection while maintaining mobility and wearable biological sensors,
- To produce nanodevices for soldiers' medical technology. New materials for wound healing and chemical detection, like blood coagulant imbedded in uniforms and are activated when the uniform is breached,
- To research and make exoskeltons and biological agent detection and protection devices,
- To produce liquid armor materials that change properties at different rates of speed to make the soldier mobile, but also resistant to bullets, the thickness of the current BDU.

For more information about nanotechnology and what the scientists are doing to help soldiers at MIT, visit www.aro.army.mil/soldiernano.

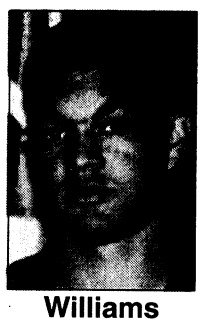
Outstanding soldiers receive awards

Fort Benning announces top soldiers



Pfc. Chris Stephens
Bayonet staff

The Soldier and NCO of the Quarter were announced Aug. 9 at a luncheon at the Main NCO Club.

Sgt. Joseph R. Delage, C Company, 2nd Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment, received the honor of NCO of the Quarter.

Delage, who wasn't at the awards ceremony, is in Germany training with the 1st Infantry Division.

"Sergeant Delage committed himself to winning the NCO of the Quarter," said 1st Sgt. Richard Lainberger, C Co., 2nd Bn., 29th Inf., Regt., "He went above and beyond standards we set for him."

Williams

Spc. Jason C. Williams, A Company, 2nd Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment, received the honor of Soldier of the Quarter.

"I was glad I won," Williams said. "I studied real hard for the post board and ensured myself that I was ready both mentally and physically."

Sgt. 1st Class Morris Jones, platoon sergeant, said he had no doubt Williams would win.

"He spent numerous hours and days preparing for the boards," Jones said. "We put him through many mock boards to ensure he was ready.

"His squad leader, Sgt. Hanz Welo, personally spent time helping him study to get him beyond the standard."

"What really helped me was studying with Sergeant Delage," Williams said. "We spent many weekends and weeknights helping each other study."

Next up, Williams plans to go to the Primary Leadership Development Course.

"I still have a lot to learn in the Army, and I am looking forward to learning something new each day," he said.

However, Jones sees Williams as a good candidate to go to Officer Candidate School.

"He has great leadership qualities and always puts forth 100 percent," he said. "He takes pride in his job and it shows."

Quarterly Command Awards Ceremony honorees

- James Rhodes received a Fort Benning Momento and Infantry Coin for unwavering support of veterans.
- Sgt. Armando Ayala, USAMU received a DA Certificate of Achievement and Infantry Coin for outstanding marksmanship ability.
- Sgt. William Graves, The Bayonet, received the 2001 DA Keith L. Ware Award for 1st Place in an Army journalism competition.
- Sgt. Daniel Monroy, Jr., WHINSEC received a DA Certificate of Achievement and Infantry Coin and Green to Gold Scholarship.
- Richard H. Coreno, Civilian Personnel Advisory Center, received a 2002 Outstanding TRADOC CPAC Consultant Award.
- Deborah D. Holton, former president Officers' Spouses Club, received the Commander's Award for Public Service and Infantry Coin.
- Barbara Summerst, teacher, Wilson Elementary School, Fort Benning, received a Certificate of Achievement as DoD Education Activity Presidential Award Winner for Excellence in Mathematics and Science Teaching.
- Vanessa D. Jackson, DPS, received Certificate from AUSA and Infantry Coin for Civilian of the Quarter.
- Calvin A. Morse, received a USAIC Certificate of Appreciation and Infantry Coin for Volunteer of the Quarter.
- Richard Caravana, DBBL, received a 45-year Length of Service Certificate and Pin.
- James Crowder, DBBL, received a 45-year Length of Service Certificate and Pin.
- Charles T. Williamson, DFEL, received a 40-year Length of Service Certificate and Pin.
- Frank A. Williams, DFEL, received 40-year Length of Service Certificate and Pin.
- Lawrence V. Eggie, DBBL, received a 40-year Length of Service Certificate and Pin.
- Franklin V. Holbrook, RTB, receive a 40-year Length of Service Certificate and Pin.

Post to celebrate women's equality

Melissa House
Special to the Bayonet©

The U.S. Army Infantry Center Equal Opportunity Office is hosting the Fort Benning 2002 Women's Equality Day Luncheon from 11:30 to 1 p.m. Aug. 26 at the Officers' Club.

The theme for the luncheon is "Living the legacy of women's rights today." Col. Gale Pollock, the first female commander of Martin Army Community Hospital will be the speaker.

"We are expecting more than 300 people to attend this year's celebration," said Sgt. 1st Class Edward X. Amaker, chairperson. The committee has been working on the event for the past four months.

"We celebrate a number of ethnic events," Amaker said, "but this one is so important for women, especially in today's world."

Tickets for the luncheon are available for $7.50 from unit EO advisors or the post EO office by calling 545-6665.

War crimes tribunal attorney visits Institute

Prosecutor gives lecture to students

Melissa House
Special to the Bayonet©

Melissa House
Daryl Mundis speaks to WHINSEC students.

A trial attorney with the International Criminal Tribunal for the former Yugoslavia addressed students from the Western Hemisphere Institute for Security Cooperation Tuesday.

Daryl Mundis is part of the team of lawyers prosecuting the high profile case against Stanislav Galic, one of the Serbian Corps commanders before the Tribunal. The trial is in recess now after eight months of the prosecution case. The defense case will begin in September and finish in January, Mundis said.

"The Galic case could have major implications on virtually every military in the world," Mundis said. "In many respects, this case could be more important than the case against Milosevic."

The defendant is charged with violations of two of the four war crimes that fall under the jurisdiction of the tribunal. The first offense is crimes against humanity and the second is violations of the laws and customs of war. For 44 months while Galic was corps commander, the people of Sarajevo were subjected to constant shelling and sniping that killed and wounded thousands of civilians.

"In prosecuting this individual, we try to stick with the safest cases where death or injury involved women and children," Mundis said.

Trials at the ICY are different from the Nuremberg trials because the tribunal only has jurisdiction over individual and cannot indict groups. The jurisdiction covers events that occurred after Jan. 1, 1991, through the present, and is not limited to Yugoslav nationals. NATO military personnel operating in the former Yugoslavia can be prosecuted under the ICY for violations of humanitarian law.

Events in the former Yugoslavia and in Rwanda prompted the move to establish a permanent international criminal court. The treaty entered into effect July 1. Of the 200 UN members, only 78 ratified the treaty, including Great Britain and France, both permanent members of the UN Security Council.

"Seven countries voted against the international court, including the United States," Mundis said. The U.S. had played a key role in establishing the ICY and the Rwanda tribunal. Other opposition came from China, Iran, Iraq and Libya.

"The U.S. may not be confident in the ICC and may fear that the court will become politicized and cause U.S. military and political leaders to be brought before the court," Mundis said. "But the ICC reflects many American values and is designed to prosecute the individuals like Hussein and Khaddafi who the U.S. wants prosecuted."

Since 1991, the ICY has conducted 13 trials involving 32 individuals. Forty-two individuals are in custody in The Hague and remain there through the trial and appeals, Mundis said

A few individuals were found not guilty, but the majority serve sentences ranging from two to 46 years in prisons in eight Western European countries. Eighty-five attorneys and 240 investigators work for the tribunal on cases that will be heard by judges from 25 countries. Judges for the Galic trial are from Denmark, Colombia and Egypt, Mundis said.

The first ICY trial involved a brutal Serbian camp guard who had owned a café in northwest Bosnia. After the war, he went to Germany and took a job in a coffee shop where a group of former prisoners recognized him as he took their orders. German police arrested the man and he would have been prosecuted under German law. The ICY asked for his transfer to Tribunal custody where he was tried and convicted, Mundis said.

"The success of the first few cases should lead to a reduction in the number of future cases," he said, "although most states that ratified the treaty will not provide any business to the court. But Sierra Leone and other African nations who have recently been involved in bloody civil war could provide some cases in the future."

Sponsors help international soldiers

Host program looking for volunteers

Angela Sachitano
Special to the Bayonet

Imagine being in a foreign country for the first time, alone, and with very little knowledge about the people and their customs.

That's what hundreds of international soldiers stationed at Fort Benning go through each year.

"I am honored to be able to come here and study the latest developments of the American Army," said Capt. Shah Zahid, a Pakistani army officer attending the Infantry Captains' Career Course. "I hope to learn as much as I can about the American way of life."

Zahid is one of 450 international soldiers who will study along with Fort Benning soldiers this year. Soldiers come to the U.S. to attend Airborne School, Pathfinder School, Basic NCO course, Jumpmaster School, the Infantry Officers' Basic Course and ICCC.

But exposure to real American life outside of the Army is just as important as what international soldiers learn inside the Army, Zahid said.

"Many of them never have a chance to really see what the American culture is like," said Mary Renteria, International Program officer for the International Training Detachment. "The more exposure an international soldier has to our culture, the better understanding they have about our democracy and way of life."

But many soldiers aren't getting a chance to see the American way of life.

The host family program has close to 30 sponsors dedicated to assisting international students. That's not nearly enough to accommodate all of the international soldiers arriving here, Renteria said.

"People misunderstand sponsorship," Renteria said. "The students don't live in the sponsors' home, and the sponsors don't have to know a foreign language. The sponsor just needs to be willing to be a friend."

Melissa Kendrick, a 33-year-old Phenix City resident, has been a civilian sponsor for three years, and she and her friends often take international soldiers out to dinner and movies.

"We have a lot of fun," Kendrick said. "We want to give them a favorable impression of the U.S. They have a lot of questions, and we have a lot of questions for them, too."

Retired Lt. Col. John Vollentine and his wife, Shirley, are also longtime sponsors and are hosting Zahid while he is here.

"We can't put into words what we have learned from spending time with students from other countries," Vollentine said. "My children used to love to hear their stories and learn about their life back home. We still keep in touch with many of the former international soldiers."

Zahid noticed many names of officers from his own country as he looked through the Vollentine's guest book Tuesday.

It's been several decades since the Vollentines's hosted the young officers, and many are now three star generals in Pakistan, Zahid said.

"I am the first member of the Pakistan army to study with U.S. troops in nine years," Zahid said.

"A small number of people in my country have misconceptions about Americans. If they only knew how wonderful everyone has been to me here, I can't wait to share my experiences with soldiers back home."

International soldiers can be stationed at Fort Benning from six weeks to a year, Renteria said.

Even something as simple as grocery shopping can be difficult for the visitors.

"One wife of an international soldiers saw a picture of fried chicken on a can of Crisco. She bought the Crisco expecting fried chicken," Vollentine said. "She called me and asked me to explain what was going on."

Soldiers who are chosen to come to America to study with U.S. troops are the elite in their country, Renteria said. Zahid has been an officer in the Pakistan army since 1992.

He was accepted into medical school but instead chose to pursue his career in the army.

"The Pakistan army is working with American troops to hunt down al Qaeda and other terrorist groups hiding on Pakistan and Afghanistan borders," Zahid said.

"It is an important mission we are all determined to win.

My experiences here will make me a better soldier in the fight against terrorism back home."

Israeli defense force leader speaks to soldiers

Chief talks tactics, ops during visit

Angela Sachitano
Special to the Bayonet©

Just as the U.S. Army faces technological advances and improvements, the Israeli Defense Force is also facing the same changes, with the realization that its country's entire future depends on how quickly troops adopt to those changes, said Brig. Gen. Gadi Shamni, chief of Infantry and Paratroops Corps for the Israeli Defense Forces.

Shamni spoke to a packed auditorium of soldiers on the latest tactics and operations of the IDF, while visiting Fort Benning Aug. 6.

"What Shamni has done is paint a picture to our leaders," said Maj. Gen. Paul Eaton, post commanding general. "We can learn through the similarities and differences of our two forces."

Israeli troops have many obstacles to overcome on their own land, Shamni said. Region size, varying terrain and more than a hundred different Israeli settlements and villages contribute to the lack of depth for defense.

"We have 1,480 miles of roads that have to be protected for citizens," Shamni said. "We can't use ambushes, snipers or explosives liberally. We have innocent people to watch out for at all times."

Terrorists, on the other hand, have no regard for citizens, and often use civilians as shields, Shamni said. This is one of the IDF's greatest challenges.

"Our soldiers face the difficulty of making a decision to kill a woman or child to defend the force," Shamni said. "This is a situation we all must think about because it is one of the terrorists common practices."

Shamni told Fort Benning leaders the IDF has been given specific instructions from the Israeli government.

Instructions that at any cost include:

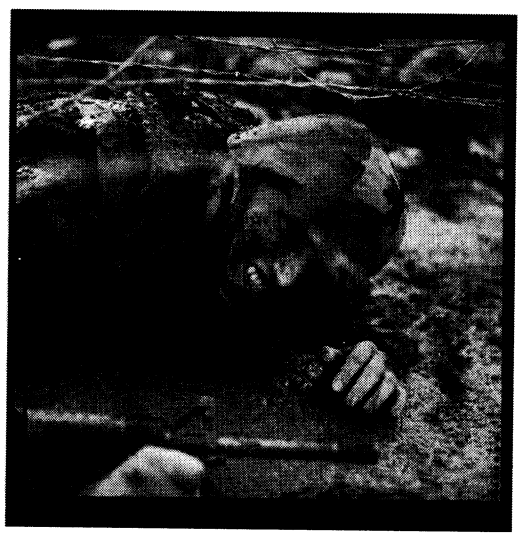
- Providing security,
- Stopping Palestinian terrorism,
- Minimizing the possibility of internationalizing the conflict,
- Preserving the eventuality of returning to a diplomatic track in time.

"Israel has improved its intelligence and data flow over the past year," Shamni said. "We have also constructed a specialized infantry of reconnaissance units, and we are now using unarmed vehicles."

IDF leaders are dedicated to maintaining high moral and ethical standards within their soldiers, Shamni said.

"We have to achieve an ongoing improvement of our units always," Shamni said. "This includes collecting lessons from the field daily and rotating our soldiers through rigorous schools and training courses."

As soldiers took notes, Shamni also told the crowd about the IDF's focus on urban warfare, similar to the United States' transformation concept.



"We have night vision, snipers, and we're looking at camouflage for the urban terrain," Shamni said. "We see many of our future missions being carried out at night."

But Shamni admitted that the IDF must find a way to improve its sniper teams. He said snipers can only shoot around 600 meters and that's not enough.

The enemy has also made significant advances in warfare, he said.

"We are doing all we can to improve our technology," Shamni said as he concluded his lesson. "The problem is, so are our enemies."

'Ranger' medics keep students on course

Platoon offers medics chance to earn tab

Bridgett Siter
Special to the Bayonet©

The 4th Ranger Training Battalion's medical platoon is raising the bar for medics Armywide.

Master Sgt. Mark Rasdall, operations NCOIC, said the platoon is offering medics, or soldiers interested in becoming medics, a chance to "be all that they can be."

"Nowhere else will they get the opportunities we offer," Rasdall said. "In terms of hands-on clinical and trauma experience, there's nothing equal to it, outside of combat. But medics here also get opportunities for schools they won't find anywhere else."

The medical platoon, whose job it is to keep ranger instructors and students fit for training, maintain an on-site aid station and accompany classes in the field where snake bites, heat exhaustion and poison ivy are common maladies.

The platoon also provides medical support for Fort Benning's Long Range Surveillance Leaders Course and airborne and dive operations, and assists local emergency medical teams that respond to 911 calls in the area, particularly traffic accidents on nearby Highway 280.

Besides the basic EMT and CPR training courses required for all medics Armywide, medics assigned to the RTB can attend paramedic courses, advanced training in cardiac life support and pre-hospitalization trauma, scuba and dive medical technician schools, pathfinder, airborne and jumpmaster schools.

But the "real kicker," Rasdall said, is the opportunity to attend Ranger School. Medics assigned to the RTB or 75th Ranger Regiment are the only ones afforded this opportunity. It's not a requirement.

Rasdall's seen 12 of his medics "tabbed" since 1999, and has made it his goal to see three more complete the course before he PCSs to Fort Bragg, N.C., in December.

Armywide, there are less than 70 medics wearing the ranger tab, a fact Rasdall would like to see changed.

"You certainly don't have to be ranger qualified to be a good medic. But I believe you should be able to do anything the students do," said Rasdall, who earned his tab in 1992. "My philosophy, after years in the airborne ranger community, is that in order to know our patients better and get a feel for what they're going through, we should go through it ourselves."

That means medics accompany ranger students during all road marches and runs, as well as airborne and water operations, Rasdall said.

"It gives us face time with the students, so they learn to trust us," Rasdall said. "For so long, there was this fear of coming to see the medics. They thought we'd put them out, I guess. But that's not our job.

"It's a good-cop, bad-cop thing. We let the instructors be the bad cops. It's our goal to keep them all in the course."

Until recently, the medical platoon was authorized only 18 slots, which meant medics worked round the clock to meet the demands of Ranger School, the LRS Leaders Course, water and airborne operations.

Authorized staffing was recently increased to 38, and the platoon currently has 29 on staff — 29 of the best medics in the Army, said 1st Lt. Scott Gilpatrick, the battalion's physician's assistant.

"Their average age is 25. They're given a lot of autonomy, a lot of responsibility for young guys, and they rise to the challenge," Gilpatrick said. "They don't just sit and observe an event. They're constantly dealing with real-world trauma.

"They're professional skills rival any you'll find in the civilian medical community, but they also have unique knowledge and skills they've gained through military training," he said.

Staff Sgt. Bryan Davis, a seven-year medic, is preparing to leave after three years with the RTB's medical platoon.

"This is the ultimate assignment. We see everything here, constantly, from blisters to heat stroke. You can't beat this place for experience," said Davis, who leaves with the confidence he can "handle any job out there."

The RTB's medical platoon, which stood up nearly six years ago, is one of the Army's best-kept secrets, Rasdall said.

"But it's time to get the word out. The medics out here can match anyone anywhere in the Army and win, hands down," he said.

"This kind of training and experience can't be matched, and it can't be beat."

"The quick win the fight," said Sgt. 1st Class Michael Mars, platoon leader. "We treat exercises as though they are the real thing."

Soldiers from A Company, 1st Battalion, 30th Infantry Regiment, spent Monday and Tuesday qualifying crew and platoon levels with Bradley Fighting Vehicles at Hastings Range.

The object of the testing is to beat the time that it would take an enemy to engage a Bradley, Mars said.

Bradley crews and platoons zero their weapons system before the exercise. During the test, they fire from stationary and moving positions.

Soldiers want to go out there and shoot their best, said Capt. Michael Fortenberry, officer in charge of the range. These exercises simulate battlefield situations, and with mechanized units, it's a race against target exposure and time.

With the wind blowing dust over the range Monday, the test seemed as though it could had been in the desert of Iraq, Mars said.

"The exercise seems more realistic because the dust is kicking up," Mars said. "Fort Benning has so many different ecosystems like swamps, forests, lakes and desert land that it makes for a great training environment."

With men on the battlefield and gunners sending ammunition toward the enemy, the platoon has an enormous amount of lethality, said Command Sgt. Maj. Edward Martinez. In addition, the fighting vehicle can get infantry where they need to go in a hurry.

A platoon consists of four Bradley crews and three dismounted squads.

Bradley platoons are very dynamic and are a hard combination to beat, Mars said.

"You have airborne, artillery, light infantry, and then, you have mechanized infantry," Martinez said. "We can do what all other elements can do and then some."

"We have great capabilities to support our dismounted troops by fire," Mars said. "We can saturate the battlefield with fire."

The qualifications are a validation process for the Department of the Army. They are reported to the battalion, then the brigade and finally to division so the units can be deployed if ever the need arises.

"To be qualified to deploy, all 14 of our crews need to be qualified on the Bradley," said Capt. Joseph Anderson, company commander. "These soldiers are stepping up to the plate as they always do."

At a Rangers in Action and graduation ceremony Aug. 9, more than a half dozen special guests were recognized for their service in the Army, but one guest stood among the guests with Air Force wings.

With a military career spanning 35 years, retired Lt. Gen. Charles Cleveland contributed to the progression of the Air Force by studying, planning and facilitating tactical fighter operations and movements within a flight formation.

Cleveland

"He's served his country well," said academy classmate, retired Col. Ralph Puckett, 75th Ranger Regiment honorary colonel.

"We need more people like him. He's a dedicated leader and a man of personal integrity. He's a person I would be happy to follow."

Soldiers were recruited to fill positions in the Air Force, created in 1947. Cleveland, a 1949 West Point, graduate, chose to become an aviator in the Air Force.

"I'm proud of my Army classmates who laid it on the line in Vietnam and Korea," Cleveland said of his classmates who fought on the ground. "But my decision was to fly."

In 1952, during the Korean War, Cleveland's unit, the Fighting Eagles of 334th Fighter-Interceptor Squadron, in Kimpo Air Base, South Korea, engaged in combat, according to his biography. Flying a F-86 Saber Jet with the enemy in the sky, Cleveland was credited with four confirmed MiG kills and grounding more than six others MiGs.

"Instead of 'rangers lead the way,' we said 'check six,'" Cleveland said. "It meant look at your six o'clock position because that's where the enemy will be coming from."

Cleveland sees the rangers having fearless fighting qualities, integrity, selfless service, and a commitment to be the best, he said.

"(Rangers) produce many fine individuals," Cleveland said.

Cleveland has committed to do the same thing throughout his life.

Between 1981-1984, Cleveland was the commander of Air University, Maxwell Air Force Base, Ala.

"I tried to instill duty, commitment and love for each other and country," Cleveland said of his experience at the university. "I've brought integrity and pride of service with everything I've done."

On Aug. 1, 1984, Cleveland retired with more than 3,700 hours of flying jets and 4,300 total flying hours. He's received the Distinguished Service Medal (Air Force), Legion of Merit, Distinguished Flying Cross with oak leaf cluster, Meritorious Service Medal with oak leaf cluster, Air Medal with three oak leaf clusters, Air Force Commendation Medal, Army Commendation Medal and Republic of Korea Order of Military Merit, Chung Mu.

Any advice Cleveland gives is invaluable, Puckett said.

Federal program helps families

WIC provides much needed money

Melissa House

Nearly 90 percent of Army families have children aged 5 and younger, according to the Survey of Army Families IV, published in 2001. The Women, Infants and Children program, federally funded through the Department of Agriculture, was designed just for them.

The USDA started the program more than 20 years ago to provide special foods, nutritional counseling and breastfeeding support and education to low income women and their children up to age 5. WIC gives pregnant women, new mothers and children vouchers for basic foods including milk, cereal, fruit juices and infant formula.

"Data shows that early enrollment in the program, coupled with adequate health care, improves the overall health outcome for both mothers and children," said Jackie Miller, Nutrition Services Director at the Columbus WIC office. "The foods in the WIC program contain key nutrients that are critical during periods of rapid growth," she said."

The aim of the WIC program is to help women have healthy babies and help young children grow up healthy. By promoting good health, the program helps lower the infant mortality rate, Miller said. Georgia has one of the highest infant mortality rates and its WIC program is the eighth largest in the nation.

Approximately 24 percent of Army spouses in the 2001 survey reported using the WIC program between 1999 and 2001. At Fort Benning, there are 2,200 individuals enrolled, and 1,958 drew food vouchers for the month of July. There are more funds available for qualified individuals than are currently enrolled in the program, Miller said.

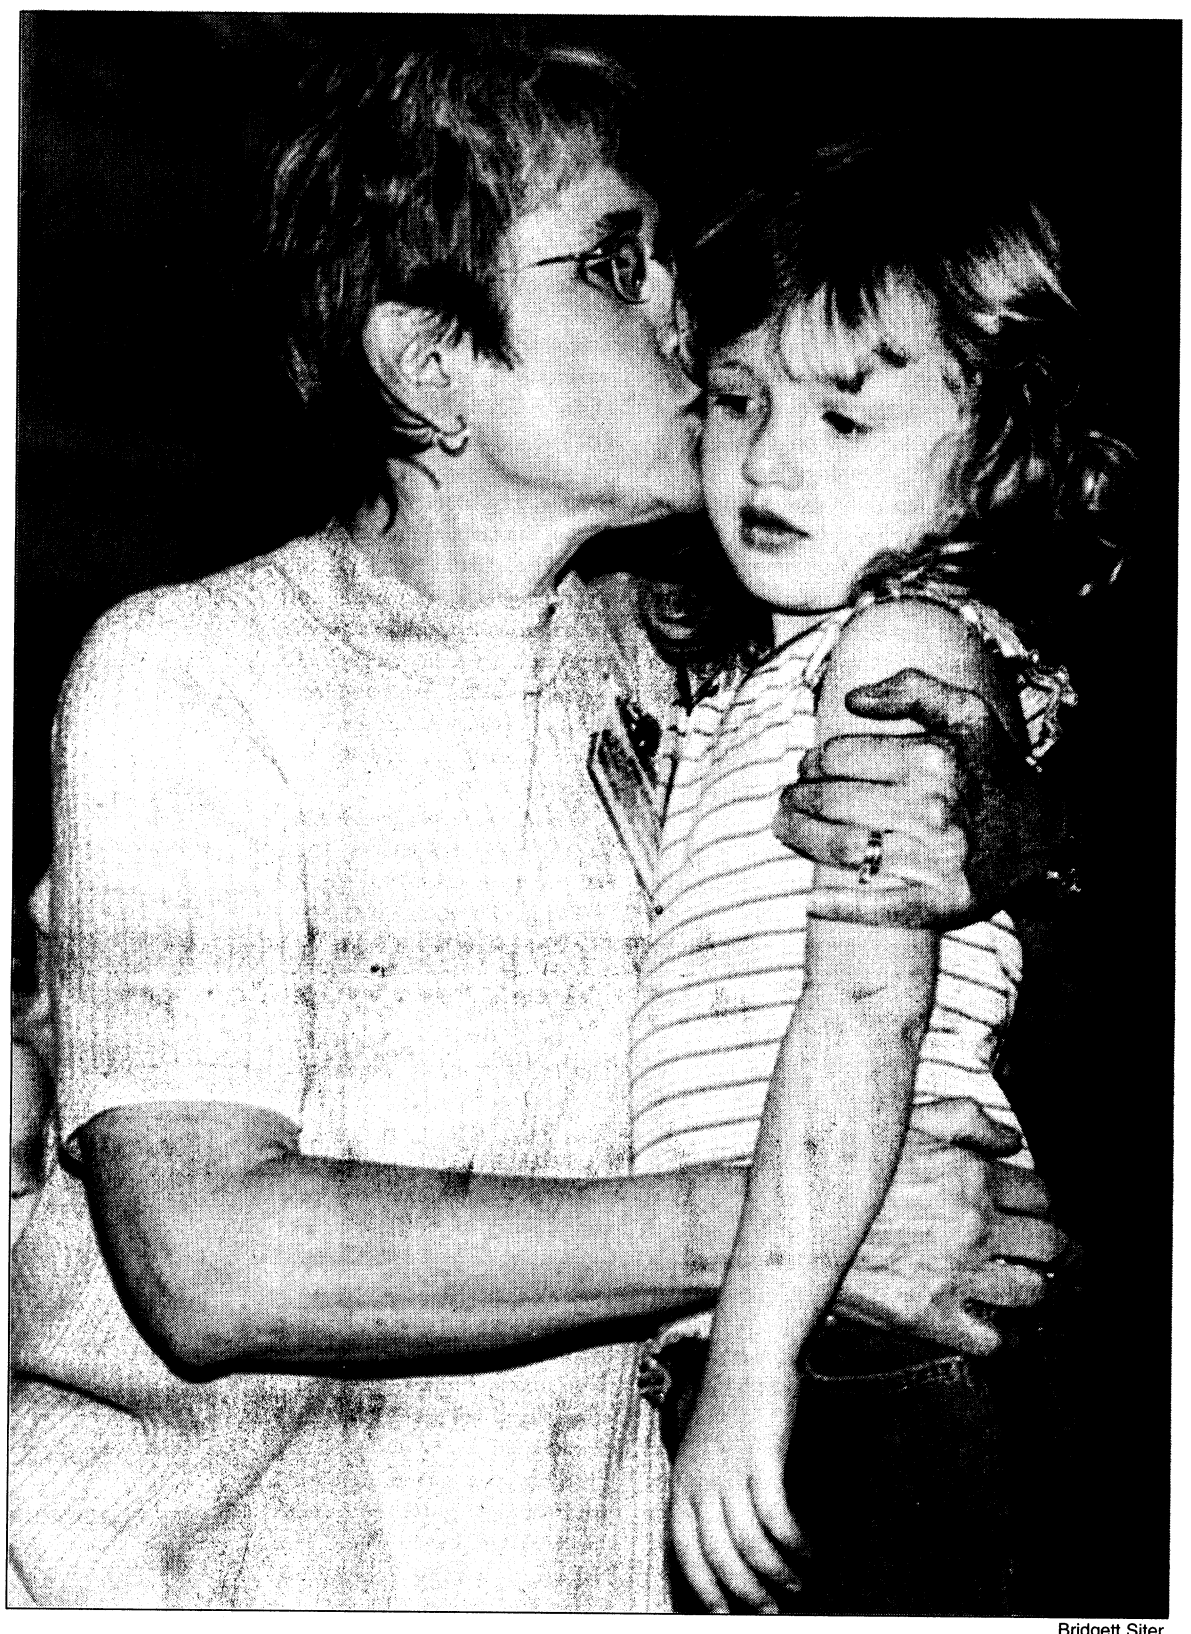
Katie Turner had a vision. It started one summer in high school, when she volunteered at a camp for disabled children. A swimming instructor, Katie noticed she could enter the silent world of her deaf students under water. She longed to help them enter her's.

Turner



Katie was working toward her master's degree in pediatric audiology at the University of Georgia in Athens, when she was diagnosed with Burkitts Lymphoma, a rare and aggressive form of cancer that strikes less than 100 people in the U.S. each year. She died April 21, 2000, just one month shy of her 24th birthday.

For Dave and Linda Turner, the sudden loss of their youngest daughter was incomprehensible. Dave, who retired from the Army in 1993, and Linda, a Fort Benning school teacher, struggled to find meaning in their Katie's death. They wanted to keep her memory — and her dream — alive.

"We talked about trying to make something positive out of this. We could set back and let it destroy us, or we could make something good come of it," Linda said.

Veterans to benefit from volunteers

Uncle Sam is looking for a few good *handy*men ... and women.

House of Heroes, a local nonprofit organization that repairs homes for aging veterans, is gearing up for their biggest challenge yet — 50 homes. Volunteers from Fort Benning will be organized into "teams" to tackle 10 houses.

Greg Camp, former chief of staff and spokesman for House of Heroes, said Fort Benning volunteers stand to benefit as much as the veterans.

"You get a huge sense of satisfaction out of this," Camp said. "It's a great way to say thank you to these former soldiers and their families, but the sense of personal gratification will last a life time."

House of Heroes is designed to honor local heroes — former soldiers or their widows — by restoring their homes that have fallen in disrepair.

"These are people who gave their lives to the military. They're getting up in years, and those little tasks around the house have gotten out of hand — things you and I maintain on a regular basis, like painting, yard work, minor repairing," said Chuck Walls, Fort Benning's garrison manager.

Each team will consist of 10-15 members, men, women and teen-agers, willing to spend a day or two during the week of Sept. 11-18 applying a "little elbow grease" to homes of heroes, Walls said.

Families 'walk to Kuwait'

Wives, children go extra mile

Stephanie Mello
Bayonet correspondent

"Going the extra mile" took on new meaning Thursday for wives of the 1st Battalion, 15th Infantry Regiment, whose husbands are deployed to Kuwait in support of Operation Desert Spring 02-02.

Stephanie Mello

Stephanie Brannon and Heather Schwankhaus push strollers while following Hanson Conkle, Devin Blount and Jason Conkle during their walk.

Wives, families, friends and neighbors of the "Can Do" Battalion held a brief yellow ribbon decorating ceremony at the 15th Infantry Regiment monument, the China Gate, Aug. 8, placing yellow bows and placards with each company logo along the walkway. They then laced up their sneakers and literally kicked off the monumental event by walking the first of the many miles to come. Mothers, wearing specially designed "A Walk To Kuwait" T-shirts, pushed infants and toddlers in strollers as older children marched in time to make the initial mile their own.

The concept of the walk was originally presented as a company-level function to the Battalion Family Readiness group steering committee, but rapidly gathered support and has grown to a nationwide activity.

Moms, dads, friends and neighbors from New Jersey to California, rallied behind the wives and are logging their mileage to help the wives make the ultimate trek. An Internet site link was

AAFES sponsors program to motivate kids

Good grades win students scholarships

Angela Sachitano
Special to the Bayonet©

Returning to school means back to school clothes shopping for many children.

It's an exciting time for students, but mom and dad do have to close the wallet sometime.

Fort Benning students who excel on their report cards, though, will find themselves on several shopping sprees throughout the year, thanks to an AAFES program designated to encouraging kids to excel in school.

The program is called "You Made the Grade" and all students in the sixth through eighth-grade qualify.

The prize?

$50 in coupons from brands like Tommy Hilfiger, Sony, and Nike.

"We want our military children to be the best they can be," said Donald O'Reilly, general manager, Fort Benning AAFES. "We're hoping these coupon books will encourage them to achieve even higher goals."

The books are awarded four times a year to kids with a B or higher average on their quarterly report cards. Each book also comes with an entry form to win one of three college scholarships.

"The scholarships are what we are most proud of," O'Reilly said. "This is a chance for a young kid to have their college partially paid for by the time they reach high school."

The scholarships are worth $2,000, $3,000, and $5,000 and will also be awarded to three different students at the end of each quarter.

Fort Benning children will compete with sixth through eighth graders on all Army and Air Force installations. The program has been available to children for four years, but Air Force children have taken most of the scholarships, O'Reilly said.

"I don't think enough of our parents and children in the Army knew about the coupon books and the scholarships," said Dell McMullen, Fort Benning Schools superintendent. "This year we want to make sure the word is out that this wonderful opportunity is available."

No dividends for SGLI

False info circulating on Internet

Anthony R. Tempesta
Office of the Staff Judge Advocate

False information routinely appears from official-looking sources stating that individuals who have paid SGLI premiums are entitled to policy dividends. Most recently, an online announcement claimed that Congress had passed a bill entitling veterans and current service members to a dividend based upon their prior years of service. This is not true, however.

This problem regarding SGLI misinformation is nearly 40 years old. The dividend "hoax," as the VA refers to it, has its origins in a special dividend that was paid in 1950 to World War II veterans who had National Service Life Insurance policies.

Sometime in 1965, the special dividend news announcements of 15 years earlier resurfaced and were mistakenly published by several newspapers.

Since then the VA has made continuous efforts to stamp out this false story, but the rumor will not go away.

Instead, it has grown in size and scope.

The rumor later expanded to claim that the dividend was available to all veterans (not just those from World War II) and even those who never carried government life insurance.

The latest version states that all active duty service members, reservists, and personnel separated within the past few years are eligible for a SGLI dividend.

Once again, all of these rumors are incorrect. The misinformation continues, prompting hundreds of thousands of veterans to write to the VA and "apply" for this benefit.

Although the amount of letters fluctuates, the VA has received as many as 15,000-20,000 inquiries per week about this dividend.

The bottom line is that dividends are not payable to current service members insured under SGLI or Veterans' Group Life Insurance. SGLI and VGLI are group policies and do not pay dividends. More information can be found at: http://www.insurance.va.gov/inForceGliSite/dividends/special.htm"

PX, Commissary meeting — The Fort Benning PX Commissary Council Representatives' fourth quarter meeting will be from 9 a.m. to 11 a.m. Monday at the Officers' Club Benning Room.

For more information, call 545-3328.

OSC Super Sign-Up Night — The Officers' Spouses Club of Fort Benning will host its Annual Activities and Membership Sign-Up Night from 6-9 p.m. Aug. 22 at the Officers' Supper Club.

The event welcomes organizations, instructors and crafts people from Fort Benning and the surrounding communities.

Some of the participating organizations include the OSC Gift Shop, The Rankin Arts Center, Callaway Gardens, Army Family Team Building and many more.

There will also be an opportunity to sign-up for sewing instruction, language lessons, tennis, racquetball, golf groups and many more.

Everyone is welcome and encouraged to attend.

OSC will offer membership sign-up throughout the evening.

For more information, call Daisy Lewis at 687-3796.

Beacon College registration — Beacon College and Graduate School will begin its fall semester registration at Fort Benning.

Students can earn undergraduate degrees in psychology, business and Biblical studies.

Students can also earn graduate degrees in Biblical studies, pastoral ministry, counseling ministry and the Master of Divinity.

Full financial aid, including veterans' educational assistance, is available.

A representative from Beacon will be on post from 1 to 4 p.m. every Thursday at Building 2602, Soldiers' Plaza.

For more information, call 323-5364.

AFTB teaches about the Army — LES, ACS, FRG, RD, PLDC, NTC?!?!

If this looks like a foreign language to you — you are not alone.

Let Army Family Team Building start you on the right track to understanding this world called "the Army."

AFTB classes are free, open to everyone and jam-packed with Army knowledge you'll need to thrive in the military environment.

The next AFTB Level I class is 6 to 10 p.m. Tuesday through Thursday in Family Unit Network (FUN) Center, Building 359, on the corner of Ingersoll and Vibbert avenues.

For more information or to register for this class, call 545-5377 or e-mail aftb@benning.army.mil.

Hospital classes — A series of classes that address such topics as pregnancy, breastfeeding, anesthesia concerns, labor and delivery, breathing and relaxation exercise, postpartum care, newborn characteristics, and parenthood.

Attendance is encouraged at least three months before the delivery date.

Classes are the first three Tuesdays of each month from 6 to 8 p.m. in the Baugh Conference Room, second floor of Martin Army Community Hospital.

The first class is about breastfeeding. The second class is a Mother and Baby class and the third class is on labor and delivery anesthesia.

A car seat safety class takes place once a month from 3 to 5 p.m. at the Baugh Conference Room.

To reserve a seat and find out the class date, call Community Health Nursing at 545-4041.

It is recommended the class be taken during the seventh month of pregnancy.

The class is limited to 15 participants.

To schedule a HIV/AIDS class, call Community Health Nursing at 545-4041.

Family housing parking — All quarters on post will be assigned one parking space to give easy access to their quarters.

All residents must ensure that they park only in their designated area or any unmarked area if they have more than one car.

Visitors must also park in an unmarked space.

For more information, call your community life office.

Family housing decorations — Guidelines have been set up for front yard decorations.

No fencing is permitted in the front yard of any quarters.

Front yard decorative borders are permitted, but should not be constructed of greater than one-inch lumber, railroad ties, metal rods or pipes, contain sharp points nor exceed 18 inches in height.

Prior to installation, occupants will submit a drawing of the proposed front yard decoration border on a fence request form.

Borders must be well maintained or removed.

No wooden patio or porches are allowed in the front yard.

For more information, call your family housing inspector, Community Life NCO or the Community Life Office.

Clearing quarters — The Fort Benning Housing Division wants to remind families preparing to clear quarters they have two options when it comes to choosing a cleaning crew.

If families use the Fort Benning cleaning division, they will pay one fee to the post and leave the rest up to the Fort Benning cleaning crew.

If families use a cleaning company on their own, they are responsible for payment and cannot leave quarters until a final inspection of the home is completed by an inspector from the housing office.

For more information on clearing quarters, call the Housing Division at 545-2993.

OSC gift shop — "A Bit of Benning," a consignment store for homemade crafts, is now open next to the OCS Thrift Shop.

For more information, call 687-3537.

Lending Closet — Because of an increase in family need, the Lending Closet is asking all families who have borrowed household goods to return the items borrowed as soon as their belongings are delivered to them.

For more information, call the Lending Closet at 545-4485.

AA meetings — Fort Benning's Alcoholics Anonymous meets 7 p.m. every Monday, Thursday and Saturday in the basement of Building 241.

The goal of the AA meetings is to support people fighting alcohol addiction.

For more information, call 545-4415 or 545-1138.

off post

Memorial Service — Calvary Baptist Church will be having a memorial service Sept. 11 in memory of last year's horrific attack on our nation and our liberties to freedom, religion, and our way of life.

For more information, call 322-1491 or 332-7250.

Parade of Nations and Cena Tipica — The Western Hemisphere Institute for Security Cooperation presents its first "Festival of the Hemisphere" at 6 p.m. Aug. 29 at the Columbus Iron Works.

This festival represents the Institute's participation in Hispanic Heritage Month, and is open to all who wish to attend. The cost is $25 per ticket.

Tickets will be sold until Aug. 15.

Tickets may be purchased from Cecelia Alexander at Building 35 or call 545-1285.

CASA volunteers — CASA volunteers are ordinary people who care about children.

They're caring and honest and committed to doing what is best for each child.

No special experience or knowledge is required.

As a CASA volunteer, you will be able to work with confidence.

All volunteers are thoroughly trained in courtroom procedure, social services, the juvenile justice system and special needs of children who have been abused or neglected.

CASA welcomes volunteers from all cultures, professions, ethic and educational backgrounds.

CASA has a particular need for bilingual volunteers, men and people of color.

The next training starts Sept. 14. For more information and an application, call 323-3687.

Tree book — "What Tree Is That?," a pocket guide for identifying trees, is available from The National Arbor Day Foundation.

The 72-page guide will help you identify 135 different trees found in the eastern and central U.S.

Dozens of drawings illustrate the trees' leaves or needles and their acorns, berries, seed pods, cones and other identifying features.

To obtain your tree ID guide, send your name and address and $3 to "What Tree Is That?" The National Arbor Day Foundation, Nebraska City, NE 68410.

Quick divorce may be none at all

Take time, get it done right way

Anthony R. Tempesta
Office of the Staff Judge Advocate

Separation and divorce can cause great emotional and financial turmoil. Also, it is often the legal system seems to make the process more difficult than necessary.

Uncontested divorces in the United States can take six months to a year, and sometimes longer, just to get all of the details worked out. But, it is worth the time in some cases.

The importance of taking such time, to ensure that the legal and economic needs of both parties and any children will be met, is not often understood or appreciated.

It is small wonder then that there is high demand for a way around the system.

There are a number of companies running ads in magazines and on Web sites which promise three-week, one-week, three-day, and even 24-hour divorces.

For a significant fee, these companies offer divorces through the Dominican Republic.

The idea sounds simple: Both parties execute powers of attorney to allow a Dominican attorney to file for divorce on their behalf, and the Dominican judge grants the decree that day.

A Dominican divorce decree usually arrives in the mail a few days later. In a fraction of the time it takes to get an uncontested divorce in the United States, you can get a quick divorce from the Dominican Republic.

Except that it is probably not a divorce at all, at least not in the United States.

While states are not required to recognize foreign court decrees, they usually do if the process producing the foreign decree meets certain requirements.

For example, one requirement is that at least one of the parties was an actual resident of the country that granted the divorce.

Sending mail to a country does not make you a resident of that country, nor does visiting the country for a short time in order to obtain a divorce. "Mail order" foreign divorces are almost always rejected by state courts.

There is a limited exception in the state of New York. New York will recognize a foreign divorce if one party was physically present in the foreign country when the divorce was granted, and the other party agrees to be bound to divorce by the foreign court.

In other words, if the parties do not agree that they are divorced by a foreign court, even New York will not honor the divorce.

Many quick-divorce advertisements cite court cases that have upheld foreign divorces.

These cases are limited to the same four or five New York cases, and in each case one of the parties was physically present in the foreign country when the divorce was granted.

Another advertising claim is that the local U.S. embassy will certify the divorce decree. In reality, however, the embassy only certifies the signature of the judge, much like a notary would do.

Certification by the embassy is no guarantee that a state court will accept the divorce decree.

While many companies promise a quick "mail order" divorce from a foreign court, the result is almost always a worthless court order.

The American system may be slower, but you'll only have to do it once.

Take the time to do things right.

House: Needs volunteers to help fix retirees' homes

"Any amount of time they can give, whether they're skilled at carpentry or plumbing or laying carpet or just willing to apply a little "good ol' elbow grease ... it'll be greatly appreciated," he said.

House of Heroes started three years ago with the repair of one veteran's home. Last year 10 were repaired.

This year's goal of 50 is a response to the president's challenge of volunteers following the terrorist attacks last year.

The schedule of events, which includes a dinner honoring the heroes, will follow the Sept. 11 anniversary.

Most of the heroes are retired NCOs who live in the Oakland Park community off South Lumpkin Road in Columbus, a neighborhood whose affordability and proximity to post made it popular with military families and retirees 40 years ago.

There are hundreds of retirees in the declining community, Camp said. Their years of service, many of which included tours in Korea and Vietnam, warrant a measure of gratitude from local residents.

"The great thing about this program is, not only do they get their homes fixed up, but we get to know them on a personal basis, to learn a little about their lives and their families," Camp said. "It's a way to thank veterans while they're still with us."

Each team will have a captain who will visit the veteran to determine what repairs are needed.

Team members will have an opportunity to meet their heroes at a dinner, as yet unscheduled, before the day of the actual event.

For more information about House of Heroes, or to volunteer on a team, call Chuck Walls at 545-1500 or e-mail wallsc@benning.army.mil.

Family: Keeps dream alive

So when a professor from UGA's Department of Communications Sciences and Disorders suggested the Turners establish and endowment for hearing-impaired children, knew they'd found "the perfect way to celebrate Katie's memory."

Nearly two years ago, with the help of UGA officials, the Turners began a campaign to raise the $10,000 necessary to establish the Katie Elizabeth Turner Endowment to provide financial assistance for families of infants and children who need hearing aids and other assistive devices.

"We will get the money. We will not give up. We can't let her go and not do something to make sense of it," Linda said at the time.

That determination paid off. Katie's endowment fund recently garnered enough interest to purchase a hearing aid for a child in Georgia.

College officials are faced with the task of screening applicants.

Though Linda and Dave are ready to celebrate the milestone, they say they'll continue to fight for more funding, and a local ball club is pitching in to help.

The Turners have long been active supporters of the Columbus RedStixx, and the club has sponsored various fund-raisers.

This one's a bit different.

"It's really a celebration," Linda said. "Just a celebration of Katie."

The RedStixx will donate $3 of every $4 ticket sold for Saturday's game against the the Lakewood Blue Claws to the Katie Elizabeth Turner Endowment.

They'll also ante up the proceeds from a silent auction, featuring autographed sports memorabilia from Big Leaguers Travis Driskill, of the Orioles, and Todd Helton, of the Colorodo Rockies.

And students from Fort Benning's Dexter Elementary School will sign Take Me Out to the Ball Park during the seventh-inning stretch.

Much of Linda's family is traveling from Michigan, Illinois and Ohio to attend tomorrow's game.

It's a reunion of sorts for Linda and her sisters, who haven't been together since Katie's funeral.

It's the support of family and friends that has turned a tragic time into one of hope and possibility, Linda said.

"People are just wonderful. You think this is the worst thing in the world, but people surround you and encourage and lift you up," she said.

"We're encouraged because Katie's foundation is working, and it's wonderful people who have made it possible. So we feel like celebrating."

To join the celebration, purchase game tickets at a table set up outside Golden Parks's ticket booth before the 7 p.m. game.

WIC: Gives children a chance to grow up healthy

The Fort Benning WIC office is located in Building 2613 in Soldiers' Plaza. Counselors there try to identify individuals who may benefit from the program during in and out-processing.

WIC directors are working with the nursing director at the hospital to try to get mothers enrolled early in their pregnancies and to incorporate the program information into healthcare packets, Miller said.

To determine eligibility for WIC services, counselors consider annual household income and the number of individuals in the household.

The Georgia WIC program does not include Basic Allowance for Housing in income calculations.

Mothers and eligible children are weighed and measured and have their hemoglobin checked for iron content during screening. Children are re-examined every 6 months to see how they are doing.

Once enrolled in the program, WIC issues food vouchers that can be used at any participating grocery store.

The transaction is handled like a check. The kiosk at the entrance to the commissary is the Fort Benning voucher issuance site, open Monday through Friday from 8:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m.

Right now, individuals can get a two-month issue of vouchers.

"We are considering a three month issuance for select people," Miller said.

Another component of the Fort Benning WIC is the Farmers Market nutritional program. Local farmers sign up and make Georgia-grown fruits and vegetables available to enrollees.

Each family in the WIC program receives an additional $20 in vouchers for market produce.

"We had $19,000 earmarked for the Farmers Market program this year," Miller said.

Families have until Sept. 30 to use those vouchers. The USDA will determine funding for next year based on how many vouchers are redeemed.

Enrollees who PCS to stateside or overseas locations are urged to see the WIC counselors before leaving Fort Benning.

"We can provide them with a card to use so that their WIC service is not delayed," Miller said.

"WIC is a really good program," she said. "If we educate mom, it benefits the entire family."

For more information, call the WIC Hotline at 1-800-228-9173 or the Fort Benning office at 682-6455.

Walk: Shows families support for deployed loved ones developed by the 15th Infantry Regimental Association to promote the event and even provided an on-line registration and mileage tracking form.

"We are going to (virtually) walk, bike, hike or swim 7,204 miles before the end of November," said Mary Taylor, FRG leader for A Company.

"We wanted to do something positive to show support of our soldiers in the desert and also provide a healthy way for wives to gather and help each other make it through this time," Taylor said. "The news is full of other world situations and the support that those soldiers receive during their deployments. We wanted to send the same message to our guys ... that we love them and they are important to us."

Milestones of the walk including Atlanta, Washington D.C., Paris, France and Cairo, Egypt will be posted monthly to a map located in the battalion rear detachment area so everyone can see how far they've have gone and how far they still have to finish.

Debbie Cranston, B Company, and her two sons, Andrew and Anthony, signed on for the event to show their support.

"I really think it's a good idea and a great way to promote the real meaning of family support," Cranston said. Andrew said he "liked the walk but hated the bugs flying about and tickling me."

Pamela Smith and Angela Blount, two newcomers to Headquarters and Headquarters Company, shared their different reasons for joining the activity.

"I have been with other FRG's that did not have this sense of unity and bonding," Smith said. "It's good to be with a unit that does support its families and promotes cohesion. It's also a great opportunity to meet the other wives and share information.

"I brought my son, Devin, to meet other children and to help him know that his dad is not the only one who is deployed. I came for the exercise and to show support for my husband," Blount said.

Robin Triplett, a friend of Blount and a retired Army family member, walked to show support for her friend.

"I think it is a terrific idea and I'm going to walk everyday until I can't walk anymore," Triplett said.

"Soldiers on Kelley Hill deploy throughout the year and yet many people never know they are gone because we are away from the main stream," said Heidi Charlton, battalion commander's wife. "Decorating the monument is our way of bringing more visible support to their deployment.

"I am really proud to be among the wives supporting this activity. We are all highly motivated and I have no doubt that we will go the entire distance," she said.

Grades: Students get prizes from AAFES

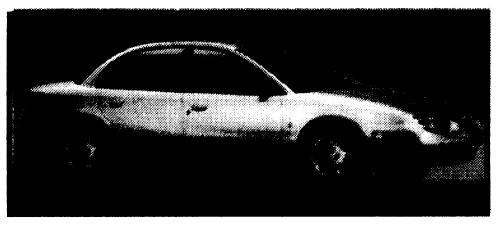
In previous years, children had to walk into the PX themselves with their report cards and claim their prize. This year, Faith Middle School is going to be more involved and will hand the books and scholarship entry forms out at school to those students who qualify.

"By getting the middle school involved, we can make sure children are informed and are getting the credit they deserve for good work," O'Reilly said.

Sixth through eighth graders who attend schools off post and even children who are home schooled also qualify for the program. Those families can retrieve their prizes from the PX by showing proof of their grades, O'Reilly said.

"This year we are hoping an Army child will win one of the scholarships," O'Reilly said. "Let's hope competition with the Air Force kids motivates them even more."



A table with more information on the "You Made the Grade" program will be displayed during the Sept. 3 open house at Faith Middle School.

Strong family life makes better soldiers

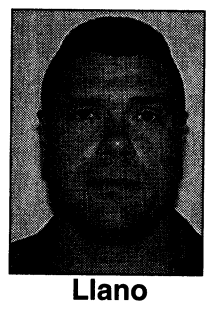
Maintaining loving family takes work

Chaplain (1st Lt.) Josh Llano
3rd Battalion, 47th Infantry Regiment

The 15th verse of Joshua 24 states: "And if it seems evil to you to serve the Lord, choose for yourselves this day whom you will serve.

"But as for me and my house, we will serve the Lord."

After one's relationship with God, the family relationship is the number one priority.



The family is the spring of self-worth, love, satisfaction and meaning.

God and his chaplains bless families.

God joins the husband and wife, and their children are the harvest of that love.

God created the family and meant it to enclose the strongest relationships.

REFLECTIONS

Llano

To nurture a strong family life, we need to encourage strong commitments, which will create a sense of security and love.

Spouses should never need to doubt one another's commitment and care for the other.

For Christians, the family should be as it was for Joshua — a place where the family members learn about, speak about and serve the Lord.

Out of such dedication and security will come family members who feel appreciated.

They will feel that if they were to leave the family, they would be missed and no one could take their place. Communicating love and respect will uphold that sense appreciation and security.

Family members can communicate their commitment, love and respect through words of appreciation and by spending quantity time over a few minutes of quality time.

We must take some time and spend it with the family in order to promote better soldiers.

Families who promote this kind of atmosphere are very blessed indeed during the business of military life. Have you spent time with your family today?

CHAPEL NOTES

Workers needed — The Fort Benning Chaplain's Office is seeking applications for individuals to serve in a variety of positions in the chapels on post.

These positions include musicians, choir directors, watch care workers, bus drivers and custodians. For more information call the Fund Manager at 545-4960 or visit the office in Room 512 in Infantry Hall.

Catholic Women of the Chapel — The Catholic Women of the Chapel meet twice each month.

They gather from 9:30 to 11:30 a.m. on the first Friday of the month at the Martin Army Community Hospital Chapel. Mass is celebrated along with a special program. They also meet the third Monday of the month at the Infantry Center Chapel Annex from 7 to 9 p.m.

Protestant Women of the Chapel — PWOC has resumed its summer Bible study. They meet at 9:30 a.m. Thursdays in the Custer Terrace Chapel on Craig Drive.

Child care is provided.

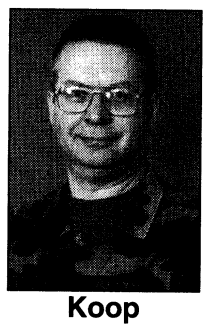
The summer series is "That The World May Know," a video tour through the lands of the Bible with life changing lessons from the Word of God.

For more information, call Krista Moore at 323-0128.

TIC fall welcome picnic — The Infantry Center Chapel will hold its fall welcome picnic after the 10:30 a.m. service on Aug. 25.

Newcomers to the community will be welcomed and the returning members will focus on their on-going ministries and the opportunities for families to grow and serve in the chapel. Everyone is invited to attend this event.

Take break to improve communication



Time outs benefit transmissions

Chaplain (Maj.) Raymond Koop
Family Life Ministries Center

Calling a time out can improve communication. If the argument is escalating, if you feel you or your partner are losing control, if you aren't getting anywhere, if there is misunderstanding, silence or withdrawal, you should take a break from it all.

Proverbs 17:14 states it this way, "Starting a quarrel is like breaching a dam; so drop the matter before a dispute gets out of control."

Taking a time out is not running away from the problem, nor is it childish behavior.

Koop

Taking a break merely acknowledges the conversation is going in the wrong direction or has stalled.

What are the seven rules for taking a time out?

• First, any person should be able to call a time out at any time they desire.

• Second, the person who calls for a time out must say when they will come back within 24 hours to talk to their partner about the issue. Most breaks last from a half hour to an hour.

• Third, use the break time to understand the perspective of your partner and to consider other options. Reflect on what you may be doing to hinder the communication process.

• Fourth, never hesitate to apologize or to seek forgiveness for the breakdown in communication.

• Fifth, always reaffirm your love for one another and your commitment to each other.

• Sixth, shift to a safer way of communicating. Use the speaker-listener technique to provide a safe structure for communication.

• Finally, don't start an important discussion unless you and your partner have the time to talk about it. Trying to settle an issue while driving to work, to chapel or going out for dinner is always unproductive, and sometimes dangerous.

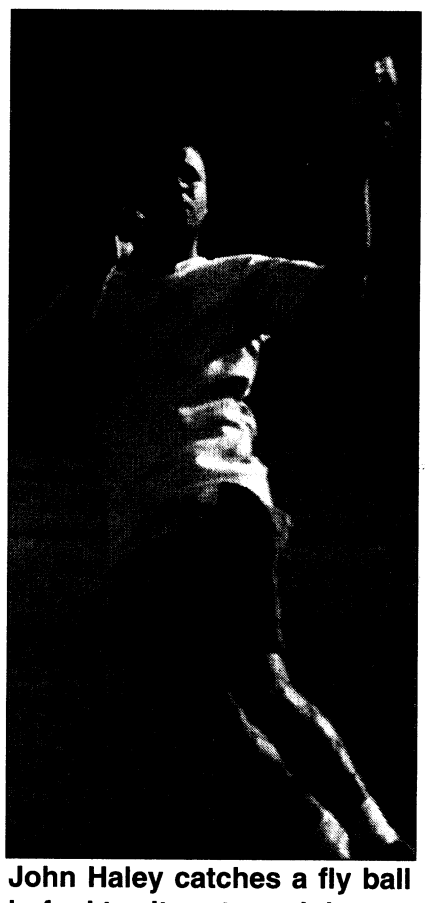
Steel Soldiers slip past Seahorses

Kryptonite doesn't phase semifinal team

Spc. Douglas DeMaio
Bayonet staff

Steel Soldiers from the Basic Combat Training Brigade advanced to the semifinals of the intramural softball tournament Monday with a 16-12 win over Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 36th Engineer Group Seahorses.

"Our strategy was to play our best," said Steel Soldiers' Barry Randle. "We got a good lead and were able to hold it throughout the game."



The Steel Soldiers bombarded the Seahorses with blasts from their bats that made the outfield look like a field artillery range.

Down 9-0, the Seahorses reacted to the firepower of the other team with two runs and closed the gap to a mere seven runs.

In the second inning, it seemed as if both teams had run out of ammunition, but when Steel Soldiers' Ramel Dereese and Reberto Ramos each hit an in-side-the-park homerun in the third inning, they changed the minds of doubters in the crowd.

"With the exception of a few mistakes, we played pretty good today," Ramos said.

Leading 15-2, it looked as though the Steel Soldiers were going to fly away with the victory, but the ball turned to kryptonite in the bottom of the third inning when none of the Steel Soldiers could hold onto the ball.

John Haley catches a fly ball in foul territory to end the top of the fifth inning.

The Seahorses used the errors of the Steel Soldiers and answered their six-run inning with a six-run inning of their own.

Even though the Seahorses managed to score a run in the bottom of the fourth inning to cut the lead to six runs, the Steel Soldiers felt lucky backing their lead to seven runs to finish the top of the last inning.

Steel Soldiers Johnny Williams slides in to third base as Seahorses' Luis Rodriguez tries to tag him out. Steel Soldiers beat the Seahorses 16-12 to advance to the semifinals.

In the bottom of the fifth inning, Seahorses' Jeff Bancheau made a valiant effort to cut the lead to four runs, but the team fell short, and the Steel Soldiers advanced to the semifinals with no loses in the double elimination tournament.

"I'm confident we can beat any team on Fort Benning," Randle said.

Marksmenship Unit takes recruiting van for spin

Ohio trip showcases Army's best

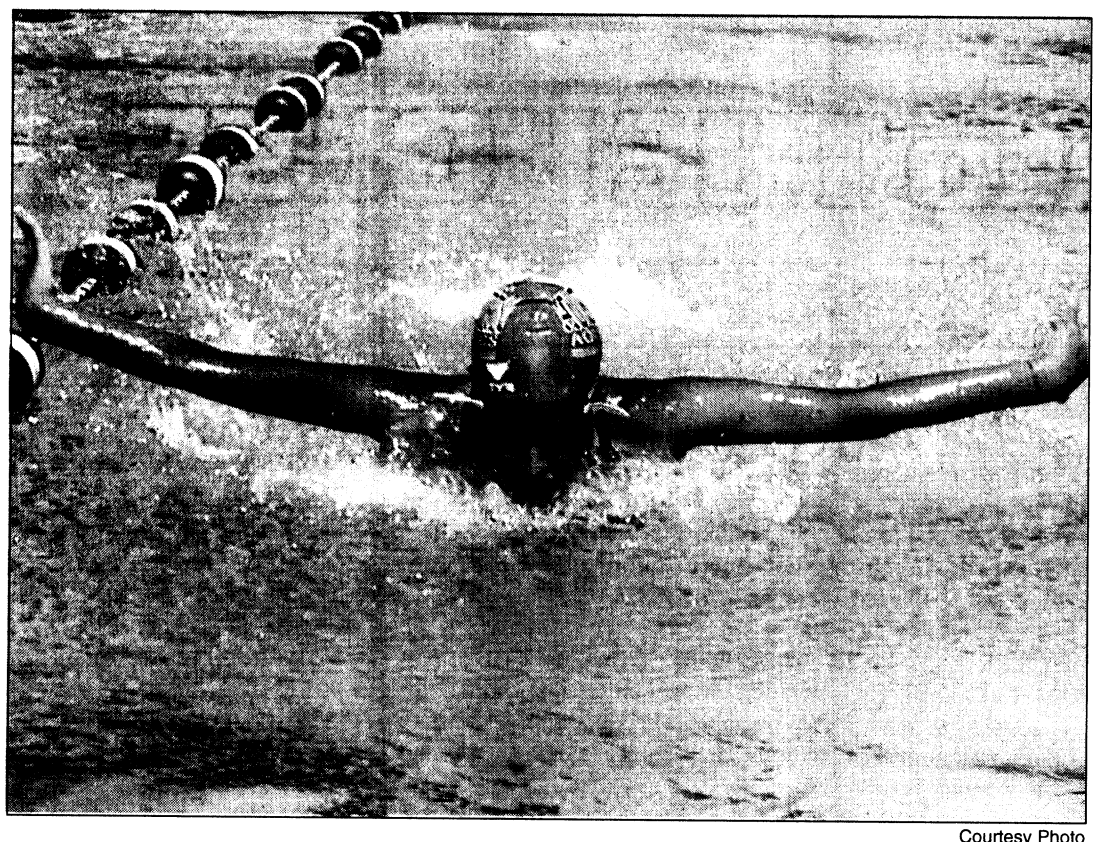
Paula J. Randall Pagán
USAMU Public Affairs

Although soldiers with the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit are best known for their ability to bring home Gold Medals for the Army in shooting competitions, the world-class shooters of the USAMU have been helping the Army with a different mission — recruiting.

Sgt. 1st Class Rand D. Bentson, Sgt. William R. Simmons, Sgt. Justin F. Barberi, Cpl. Robert A. Cesnik Jr. and Spc. Adam J. Bossier supported a recruiting mission during the National Pistol Matches at Camp Perry, Ohio, July 13. The soldiers provided marksmanship training to about 40 Delayed Entry Program members and recruiters of the Toledo, Ohio, Recruiting Company with the Army Shooting Adventure Package — called the ASAP Van.

According to Sgt. 1st Class Steven V. Pullins, USAMU Recruiting Command liaison, the ASAP Van is USAMU's premier recruiting tool. The ASAP is a 28-foot-long, fifth-wheel trailer, pulled by a commercial dual rear-wheel-driven pickup truck, both of which are adorned with "eye-catching" Army graphics. Although the ASAP showcases the Army's best shooters, members of the general public can also test their own skills by shooting at targets using specially modified pistols or rifles.

"The effect of the ASAP is to have an interactive, safe arcade, which provides an avenue for USAMU shooters and prospects to interact one-on-one in a fun environment," Pullins said.



"The DEPs really enjoyed it and a lot of them were very interested in getting more marksmanship training," said Toledo Recruiting Company Commander Capt. Michael C. Wise. "The AMU showed them something new and different that we can't provide. I would definitely recommend using the AMU's ASAP Van to other recruiting stations; it's a great enhancement to the DEP program. The van was a neat way to familiarize them with the Army's weapons in a safe, fun and challenging way."

Bentson, Bossier along with Sgt. 1st Class Theresa E. DeWitt, with the ASAP Van also hosted a similar DEP event during the Service Pistol Interservice Championships at Fort Benning's Phillips Range June 15, to which four Georgia recruiters from Columbus North and South Stations and Dublin and Centerville brought 35 DEPs.

"The DEPs loved it," said Sgt. 1st Class Kelly Price, Columbus North station commander. "They said they couldn't wait to fire real weapons and thought that this training would help them in marksmanship during Basic Training."

"We are here to serve Army recruiters and assist them in making their mission," Pullins said. "Through USAMU recruiting-assistance events, we help recruiters expand their market and reinforce the contacts they have already made."

CAMP PERRY, Ohio — Service rifle shooters from the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit brought home armloads of trophies, plaques, medals and certificates from the Civilian Marksmanship Program National Rifle Matches, held July 30 to Aug. 3 at the Ohio National Guard post on the banks of Lake Erie. Shooting the USAMU's modified M-16 A2 rifle, Sgt. 1st Class Kevin B. McMahon triumphed over 1,309 other shooters to win the President's Rifle Match with a score of 298 points out of a possible 300 points with 15 Xs out of a possible 30 Xs; an X is a bull's eye used in tie breaking. For the win, McMahon received the President's Rifle Trophy Award, a President's Hundred Metallic Brassard Tab and a President's Hundred Certificate from the president of the United States. Sgt. 1st Class Grant L. Singley, the 1996 President's Hundred Champion, took second place with 298 points and 13 Xs. Sgt. 1st Class Lance D. Dement, Staff Sgts. Norman L. Anderson, Christopher S. Hatcher, Kyle A. Ward, Lance S. Hopper, Sgts. Robby D. Johnson, Robert M. Mango, Emil Praslick III, Spcs. Joseph M. Bartoli and Aaron F. Rebout were also awarded President's Hundred Tabs.

In the National Trophy Individual Match, Singley came in second overall out of 1,269 people, only one point behind the winner, U.S. Marine Staff Sgt. David Karcher of Colorado Springs, Colo. For also being the high Army competitor, Singley received the Association of the U.S. Army Trophy, and for being the high Infantry competitor, he was awarded the 25th Infantry Division Trophy.

USAMU shooters winning Gold Medals in the National Trophy Individual Match, besides Singley, were McMahon, Bartoli, Dement, Hopper, Praslick, Anderson, Johnson, Staff Sgt. Tobie L. Tomlinson and Spc. Elisha M. Hoover. Hatcher, Rebout and Pfc. Liana L. Bombardier received Silver Medals, and Ward and Sgt. 1st Class Scott A. Boyd got Bronze Medals. The USAMU Team of McMahon, Singley, Dement, Anderson, Hopper and Hoover beat 82 other teams to win the National Trophy Rifle Team Match; the team coach was Sgt. 1st Class Charles E. Coffey and Ward was the team captain. The USAMU Team of Anderson, Hoover, Hopper, Singley, Mango, Praslick, Boyd and Tomlinson, won the National Trophy Infantry Team Match; Coffey was the coach and the captain was Sgt. 1st Class Steven C. Young.

History Channel to feature USAMU

'The Magnum' to air Wednesday, showcases unit

Paula J. Randall Pagán
USAMU Public Affairs

What do the soldiers of the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit have in common with movie star Clint Eastwood? They will both be featured in a History Channel special on the Magnum, which will air Wednesday at 10 p.m. The show is described in the History Channel's listings as follows:

"The Magnum. It's known as the most powerful handgun in the world, made famous by Clint Eastwood in the Dirty Harry movies. But its origins stretch back more than a century to the Indian Wars of the American West and African safaris where hunters stalked big game. Join us for a review of the history of the biggest, baddest gun available today — unlimited firepower at the pull of a trigger!"

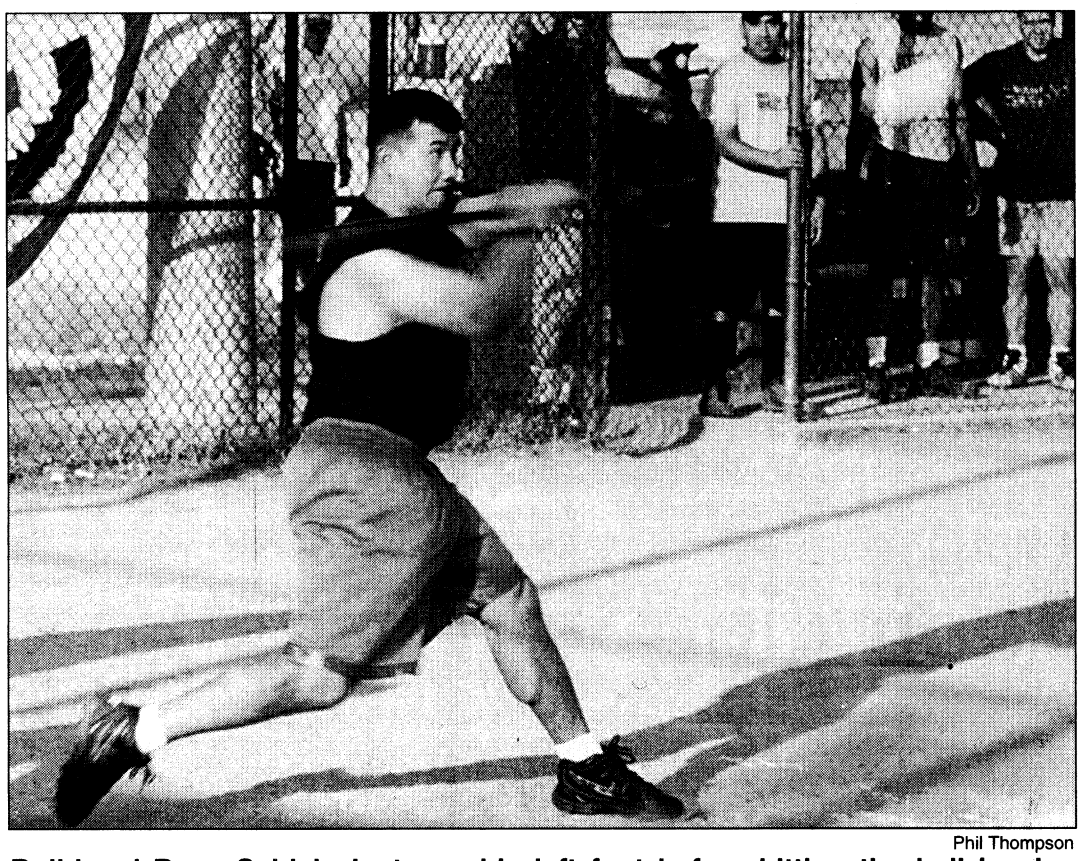
The show, titled The Magnum originally aired as part of the channel's History Alive series March 26. USAMU soldiers are featured at the very beginning and near the end of the show for approximately eight minutes.

The show is closed captioned and rated G.

A film crew from the Digital Ranch production company of California visited the Marksmanship Unit Nov. 29 and videotaped USAMU personnel for The Magnum one-hour documentary. Producer Tom Jennings and his crew spent the day interviewing and filming the soldiers and civilians of the USAMU for the show.

The crew spent the morning at the USAMU ranges filming members of the Service Rifle Team shooting the Magnum. After lunch, Jennings and the crew interviewed some of the USAMU ammunition technicians while they were producing Magnum bullets and talked with USAMU gunsmiths who build the Magnums for the Army shooters.

"I think everything went great," said USAMU Service Rifle Coach Donnie Heuman. "The crew members were highly professional and dedicated to their work. They were very excited about being around the guns and actually being able to film a bullet going down range; they thought that was pretty cool. They made us feel very comfortable and it was a real pleasure working with them. We're hoping to work with them again in the future."



> "The people at the Marksmanship Unit are a great group of people. You can tell these individuals are top-of-the-line, both in their professionalism and how they treated our film crew."
> Tom Jennings
> producer of The Magnum

"The people at the Marksmanship Unit are a great group of people," Jennings said. "You can tell these individuals are top-of-the-line, both in their professionalism and how they treated our film crew. The images were superb and the people made our day at the office a lot of fun. Our visit was just a great experience all the way around and brought a lot more than I expected.

In general, my experience with them was outstanding. I had no idea what to expect and found the guys approachable and easy to work with. You can tell how much they care about what they do, and how willing they are to teach others the nuances of their work.

"By far, the most interesting thing for me was being able to film the bullet in flight," Jennings continued. "The footage is just amazing; you can clearly see the rounds splitting the air as they travel toward the target.

"But I don't want to diminish the other things that we filmed. I found it fascinating, for example, to be standing under the targets while the shooters were punching holes in them from 600 yards. That is not an everyday experience for a civilian."

MEDDAC demolishs Ammo Dawgs, 24-2

Entire team hits well, fields well during playoff game

Phil Thompson
Bayonet correspondent

Members of the 608th Ordnance Company may be demolitions experts, but it was they who were blown up Aug. 8.

U.S. Army Medical Department Activity Bulldogs destroyed the Ammo Dawgs, 24-2, at Knappenburger Field.

The umpires may have called "play ball" to both teams, but it was the Bulldogs who showed the Ammo Dawgs how to play the game and win, said Bulldogs Tony Bevilacqua.

The entire Bulldog team managed to get on base or hit one-, two- or even three-run doubles to contribute to the romping of the Ammo Dawgs.

"I just wanted to hit the ball and help my team," said Bevilacqua, who went four for five.

He missed hitting for the cycle when his last at bat came up feet short of being a home run.

The second, third, fourth and fifth inning were the meat and potatoes of the Bulldogs' run-scoring spree. By extending the lead by more than 21 runs in the fourth inning, the game was called due to the mercy rule.

The Bulldogs dominated both sides of the game, hitting the ball in the right places while keeping a choke chain on the Ammo Dawgs scoring.

"I'm happy about the team's performance, and we really needed the win because it's do or die, and we don't plan on dying anytime soon." said Bulldog Robert Tolbert.

While the regular season was all fun and games, the playoffs instilled a mighty warrior ethos in each of the Bulldogs, he said. The team is all business and out for blood.

Shooters excel at competitions

Marksmen win national events

Paula J. Randall Pagán
USAMU Public Affairs

Shooters of the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit of Fort Benning, Ga., have scored some major victories recently. The following results are some of their accomplishments:

Interservice Skeet Championships, Fort Benning, Aug. 2-4 — USAMU shotgun shooter Spc. Mark L. Weeks won the Men's Interservice Skeet Championship and set a new interservice skeet record. Local Dealer Waiving Down Payments

Rivertown Ford allowing buyers to take over vehicle payments after paying small acquisition fee

Columbus, GA- If you have been thinking about buying a new or used vehicle but thought you'd need thousands in cash or a trade-in for a down payment, there's good news coming to your area this weekend. Now through Saturday at 8PM., special financing arrangements have been made at Rivertown Ford that allow customers to simply pay a $49 acquisition sale fee, then take over payments.

This unique and exclusive finance plan eliminates the need for the consumer to produce a large down payment. All that's required is $49 to cover the administrative costs involved in setting up financing in your name. The payments that are to be taken over are clearly posted on every vehicle windshield. Prices are also clearly posted so shoppers can see the overall savings on each vehicle.

"Some of the payments on these vehicles are just $99 a month."

Stock # 2029251A '99 Mercury Sable. 66 months@7.5% APR. With approved credit, plus tax, and title. See dealer for details Used car buyers from Rivertown Ford searched across Georgia and surrounding states, buying up hundreds of lease terminations, bank repossessions, trade-ins, failed fleet sales and more in preparation for this one-of-a-kind event. They've now been transported to the premises of Rivertown Ford located at 1680 Whittlesey Road. Since these are vehicles other people have already made payments on, customers will save thousands once financing responsibilities are assigned to them. Some payments on these vehicles are just $99 a month.

Consumers that thought they needed thousands in cash for a down payment in order to get low monthly payments are being pleasantly surprised this weekend at Rivertown Ford. All that's needed is a $49 acquisition fee to drive home a new or used vehicle today.

Selection is a big part of what makes this sale so exciting, according to Rivertown Ford's General Sales Manager, Brad Williams. "Chevys, Fords, Dodges, Toyotas & Hondas... cars, trucks & SUVs... all the hottest selling names are here. No matter what kind of vehicle you're looking for, you could drive it home for a $49 acquisition sale fee, then you simply take over payments!"

New vehicle shoppers can also take delivery with just a $49 acquisition sale fee. "Thanks to the financing we've arranged, through 8PM Saturday, Rivertown Ford can offer brand new cars, trucks and SUV for a $49 acquisition sale fee, then take over payments!"

Why would a car dealer arrange financing to make this $49 Acquisition sale possible? Williams explains, "Our allocation of 2003 models will depend in part on how many new and used vehicles we can deliver in the next two weeks. The more we sell, the more we'll get. We've decided to sacrifice profits in an effort to really push our sales volume to the maximum."

Williams speaks from experience when describing his expectations for this event. "By finding a lender that allows us to deliver new and used vehicles with just a $49 acquisition sale fee, we think we're really going to see a big increase in deliveries between now and 8 PM Saturday night. When we've done this sale in the past, it's always been one of our biggest. It's really a win-win situation for everybody... we'll sell a record number of vehicles, and our customers will get some great bargains."

"We've decided to sacrifice profit to really push our sales volume to the maximum."

Because the special funds that make this offer possible are only valid through 8PM Saturday night, customers are encouraged to get here early for the best selection.
Sale absolutely ends Saturday at 8PM and the exclusive location is Rivertown Ford at 1680 Whittlesey Road, across from Hollywood Connection in Columbus. Call 706-653-7420 for more information.

River poses risk to youths

Fence not stopping post kids

Bridgett Siter
Special to the Bayonet©

Post officials call it an "attractive nuisance" — a milelong stretch of land along the Chattahoochee River that's become a popular hangout for Fort Benning youth.

Four children have died in the section of river that runs behind the Indianhead Terrace community — two in 1991 and two in 1987. A fence was erected shortly after the first drownings, and signs were posted to keep residents out.

They didn't work.

"Everybody does it. I do it," said a 14-year-old Fort Benning student who asked not to be identified. "No fence is going to keep them out if they want to go back there."

And they're "going back there" daily.

A ladder is propped against a large tree, whose branches stretch across the water — a natural diving board. A radio sits on a rock nearby, waiting silently for the after school crowd, who'll climb or cut the fence to get to their favorite spot.

The fence has been repaired countless times, according to post maintenance records. A work order is on file at this time for fence repair.

"If they're going back there without a lifeguard or

A hero's welcome

Bridgett Siter

Isabel and Ralph Engeldinger look forward to meeting the House of Heroes team from Fort Benning that will work on their Oakland Park home. The Engeldingers have been burglarized three times — a deadbolt for their front door is the number one item on their "wish list."

Ralph and Isabel Engeldinger bought the little red brick house on Walker Street 30 years ago, before Ralph retired from the Army.

Oakland Park was a neat, clean neighborhood then, popular with soldiers for its affordability and proximity to post.

"Ralph thought he'd be sent to Vietnam," Isabel said. "He wanted Larry and me to have a safe place to live if he got sent away. That was right before he had his heart attack ..."

Times have changed. The once tidy neighborhood, home to many military retirees, mostly veterans of the Vietnam and Korean War eras, has fallen into disrepair and local residents say they no longer feel safe outside after dark.

"It's not a real good area anymore. I'd like to have a deadbolt on my front door," said Isabel, who's making a "wish list" of sorts — minor repairs and upgrades she'd like to see done to her home.

The Engeldinger's home is one of several Oakland Park residents to receive a little TLC from House of Heroes in September. The local nonprofit organization, which honors military retirees and their spouses by repairing their homes, will tackle 50 homes this year. Fort Benning teams will sponsor 10 of those, including the Engeldinger's.

"At first I thought it was a hoax. Then I cried," said Isabel, who received word last week. "I tell you, Ralph is 79. He's slowed down a lot. We both have. I hate to admit it, we

Drop in teen smokers

Numbers show progress for children

Sgt. William A. Graves
Bayonet assistant editor

The majority of daily smokers — 82 percent — began smoking before 18 years of age, and more than 3,000 young people begin smoking each day, according to the Center for Disease Control Web site, www.cdc.gov.

A new study from the state of Oregon shows that students in schools that implement the CDC's school tobacco use prevention guidelines were about 20 percent less likely to smoke.

"This study shows that comprehensive school programs really do work to prevent teen smoking and can be an effective part of a state's effort to prevent and reduce tobacco use," said CDC Director Dr. Jeffrey Koplan.

Post schools have a comprehensive science, health and physical education curriculum, said Gail Wilson, director of accountability, Fort Benning Schools. These programs are integrated and students are taught how to make healthful choices for their lives.

Martin Army Community Hospital also teaches "Tar Wars," a program about the dangers of tobacco and nicotine, to all fifth-graders on post.

"While we have made some undeniable progress in reducing the teen smoking rates, now is not the time to rest upon our laurels" said Rosemarie Henson,

Lightning strikes ITB soldiers

Cadre injured, returned to duty after close call

Melissa House
Special to the Bayonet©

Six cadre members from 2nd Battalion, 19th Infantry, had a shocking experience July 21 — literally. B Company was in the field conducting the end of cycle field training exercise when lightning struck.

Capt. LeShawn Langford, company commander, and five drill sergeants were injured when the lightning struck their tent. Ironically, the company leadership was conducting a risk assessment regarding the weather at the time.

"We had the privates in the lightning dispersion plan," Langford said. "We have them ground all of their equipment and anything metal like watches, then they squat on the ground with their hands over their ears."

That dispersion plan follows the guidelines published by the National Lightning Safety Institute. Unfortunately for the cadre members, their choice of meeting place did not make the institute's list of safe places to be during a thunderstorm.

> "It sounded like indirect fire. We heard a loud boom and then felt the voltage hit us."
> Capt. LeShawn Langford
> Company commander

The lightning struck the generator, traveled through the power cable and also entered through the metal center pole.

"The charge was dispersed through the ground and came up through our feet," Langford said. "It sounded like indirect fire. We heard a loud boom and then felt the voltage hit us."

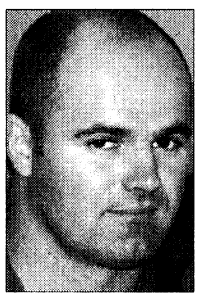
INTEGRITY

Golf course teaches lesson

Spc. Douglas DeMaio
Bayonet staff

COMMENTARY

Integrity is perhaps the hardest of Army values to explain because it applies to almost every thing we do.



The Army says integrity is doing what's right both legally and morally, which is about as broad and accurate of a definition I can think of.

I believe the nature of integrity is not truly learned until the teen years when kids begin to face situations that challenge their morals, character and integrity.

With this in mind, I believe the sport of golf can help a person learn integrity, and it's a way of measuring integrity.

The game teaches patience and decision making, but most importantly, it allows a person to choose to make a virtuous decision.

How easy would it be to play 18 holes but pay for nine?

I know the thought of who will it hurt or who will notice have simple answers, but think about this.

It's called stealing. Yes, it's a piece of land with nice grass and 18 holes, but having integrity on this matter is a simple choice.

OK, perhaps that wasn't the greatest example of integrity, but try this.

An obstacle is between your shot in the rough and the hole. There are three choices. The choice is to play the shot safe, which is to hit the ball to an area allowing for the next shot to be better, play a risky shot, which could be hitting the ball into a worse position than your original lie, or toss the ball in the fairway, without counting a stroke.

Simply put, the third decision won't hurt anyone, but it puts into perspective how you may act when nobody is looking.

Nobody is looking, 15 mph over the speed limit won't hurt anyone.

Nobody is looking, I'll sham on the last set of pushups.

The cashier didn't notice giving me a $20 bill rather than a $10 bill. His mistake.

All these decisions lack integrity.

Doing what is right may not have any advantages, but the reward is being correct.

Ralph Waldo Emerson said it best when he wrote, "The only reward of virtue is virtue; the only way to have a friend is to be one."

The game of golf is flawless, so when you cheat, you don't beat the game. You only cheat yourself and raise doubt in others.

If you want to measure the integrity and trustworthiness of a person, my advice is to play a round of golf with him.

It can be an invaluable piece of information before you place any trust him.

Would it kill you to say thanks

COMMENTARY

For nearly a year now, Fort Benning's law enforcement personnel have been visibly outstanding ... and out, standing ... 24/7 ... in the rain, in the sun, in the dark ... You don't need to get the picture. You've seen them.

And regardless of the weather, the temperature, the humidity, bugs, exhaust fumes and hours, they never fail to smile and greet the drivers who pass through the access points on their way on post. Of course I can't speak for all drivers, just myself, but I have to believe that everyone driving on post is subjected to the same brand of pleasant greeting and efficient screening that I go through every morning.

The first impression visitors get of Fort Benning is often based on their impression of the men and women staffing the access points. They aren't out there by choice, yet they manage to make goodwill ambassadors look like rank amateurs. They must get a block of instruction on good first impressions at MP school.

Even people who aren't necessarily welcome guests on post consistently comment that our law enforcement staffers are always polite and efficient, the consummate professionals.

It's not law enforcement's fault if there's a line in front of you at the access point, but law enforcement personnel are certainly responsible for getting you on your way as quickly as possible. When was the last time you managed to get a cheery "Good morning" out before they did, or thanked them for doing a great job?

We all know the stereotype about "cops" and doughnuts. Well, Fort Benning can't hire a "doughnut dolly" to cart snacks and hot coffee around to all of the access points; we just spent a lot of money on shelters to keep our law enforcement folks out of the direct sun and rain. It was money well spent, don't you think? If that was me out there, I'd appreciate the shade and shelter 24/7 a lot more than a couple of doughnuts.

On second thought, maybe we could work with the garrison on this one and supply both shelter and some moral support. The post has put up the shelters. That leaves the doughnuts up to you. The next time you swing through the drive through at the D-Dunk, how about picking up an extra sackful to slip to that MP that clears you through your favorite access point?

And if you can't remember to do that, at least remember to say "Thank you" for the great job that they are doing.

For all they do, it's the least you can do.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

What's happened to military discipline?

When I was a military wife living in military quarters, we were required to keep the outside of our quarters 'spic and span." The grass had to be mowed and we had to be able to show a work order number for any maintenance required that we were unable to perform ourselves. We also had to have proper window coverings on the inside of the windows.

I am just so disappointed and disgusted to drive along Custer Road from Sand Hill to Main Post and look at the quarters in McGraw Manor. I've seen others on main post as well that are just as bad.

What is happening and why are these soldiers allowed to let the quarters areas look like slum cities when a little bit of effort and elbow grease could make a huge difference? We would have been reprimanded or even kicked out if we persisted in letting our quarters look like some of them do now.

Soldiers make birthday special for 7 year old

My wife and I traveled from Indiana to Fort Benning for our granddaughter's 7th birthday, July 4.

We decided to attend your picnic on York Field July 3, and I told Anna we were celebrating July 4th and her birthday.

After we'd been there a little while, Anna said, 'Grandpa, if this is my birthday celebration, why hasn't anybody said 'happy birthday,' to me?'

I spotted two drill sergeants, one wearing a ranger patch. My son, Anna's dad, is a ranger serving in Afghanistan, so I introduced myself and explained my problem. T hey immediately came over and wished Anna a happy birthday, and I was very grateful. Problem solved.

But it didn't end there.

A few minutes later, a handful of recruits — sent by these drill sergeants, I'm sure — came over and wished Anna a happy birthday.

Within minutes another group came over, this time larger. And so on and so on and so on.

One group after another stopped by that evening. Then a great big bunch stopped to sing Happy Birthday to her. They even gave her their tokens for games and rides.

It was incredible. I'm sure Anna will never forget her 7th birthday. I know I won't.

And it's all thanks to two drill sergeants whose names I do not know.

Thank you.

God Bless the U.S. Army,
Robert Dill,
U.S. Coast Guard (retired)

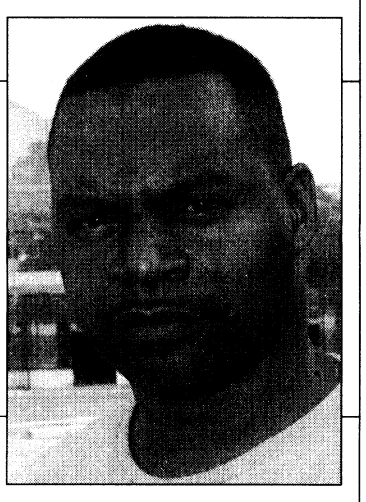
VARIOUS VOICES

Would an increase in the cost of a pack of cigarettes stop you from smoking?



Pvt. Adrian Durazo, 2nd Battalion, 19th Infantry Regiment — "When I was smoking, the price of cigarettes did go up a few times, but it probably wouldn't have stopped me from smoking."

Glenda Nichols, MWR Employee — "It hasn't stopped me yet. When I first started smoking, cigarettes cost 50 cents, and now they're around $3. It's something I do by choice."

Myrl Shiver, family member — "No, I love cigarettes too much. I'm addicted to them"

Sgt. 1st Class David Simmons, NCO Academy — "That is why I'm quitting. With the health risks and increased costs of cigarettes, it is not worth it for me to smoke anymore."

Pvt. Barry Gravely, 1st Bn. (Airborne), 507th Inf. Regt. — "No, smoking is a choice, and I choose to smoke. I'll pay the extra money to keep smoking."

Leah Clark, family member — "No, I don't think an increase in the price of cigarettes would affect my decision to keep smoking."

Test platoon member recalls first jump 62 years ago

The Airborne Walk was full of spectators celebrating National Airborne Day and the graduation of C Company, 1st Battalion (Airborne), 507th Infantry, Friday marked the 62nd anniversary of the first jump made by the Airborne Test Platoon. President George W. Bush signed the proclamation establishing Aug. 16 as National Airborne Day.

The test platoon, established in 1940 at Lawson Field, was made up of two officers and 48 enlisted soldiers. The soldiers were volunteers from the 29th Infantry Regiment, selected for their physical abilities. One of those volunteers, 81-year-old Louie Davis, was on hand for the ceremony.

Davis, originally from Lawrenceville, Ga., was the youngest of three brothers assigned to the 29th in 1940, and he was looking for something different.

"I wanted to be in the mechanized cavalry," he said, "but I missed that chance."

Acting on a dare by his friend, Johnnie Ellis, the two signed up to jump.

"There were times back then that I wished Ellis would back out, but he never did," Davis said. "Twenty-one dollars pay didn't go very far back then, so there was some extra money involved, too."

Davis remembers that first jump as clearly as if it happened yesterday.

"I was the last one out of the stinking plane," he said. "My stomach was clear up in my mouth. The jumpmaster told me to look around and then he hit me so hard I didn't realize what had happened."

What happened was Louie Davis became a part of airborne history.

After he left the plane and opened his eyes, Davis said the sun was shining.

"I could see the river and it was so peaceful up there I thought, 'What in the world was I afraid of?'"

Guest speaker, retired Brig. Gen. William Leszczynski, thanked Davis and the rest of the platoon for their role in getting the airborne legacy started. He praised their courage and their commitment to setting the standard of excellence for the future of the airborne.

"There is no greater tribute to you than to honor you on National Airborne Day," he said.

Leszczynski told the 400 C Company graduates that he was thankful there are men and women today who will "stand up and hook up."

Davis spent many years during his career training the next generation of American paratroopers. He retired in 1960 after serving several years in the Airborne School as the first sergeant of the tower branch. Although he never jumped in combat, he has more than 150 jumps to his credit, including some with the Office of Strategic Services in Africa during World War II and some free fall jumps.

Jumping with the OSS was quite different, Davis said. He was helping train British soldiers and had to use their equipment. The British jumped with only one parachute and had no reserve attached to the front of the harness.

"It is exciting to see airborne troops," he said. "I get that boiling-up feeling like I could do it again, almost."

Airborne graduate keeps wings in family

Graduate honors family tradition

Angela Sachitano

Watching a child graduate from Airborne school is an honor for any father or mother.

It's perhaps even more of an honor when parents know firsthand exactly what their child went through to receive those wings.

"I feel incredible today, because the airborne legacy is still in the blood," said Sgt. 1st Class Bruce Johnson, 2nd Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment. "We all have the wings now. This is a great day for our family."

When Johnson was called to pin the airborne wings on his son, Pvt. Bruce Johnson Jr., Aug. 16, he couldn't help but shed tears as he stood at attention in front of his oldest child — the third generation in the Johnson family to receive airborne wings at Fort Benning.

"I've always looked up to my father," said Pvt. Johnson, "I knew this would make him proud, but I never knew until today how proud I would be of myself."

On the 62nd anniversary of the first paratrooper jump, Johnson knew he was a part of history in the making. After all, he was raised to respect the sacrifices, the courage, and the strength of the U.S. airborne graduate, he said.

"My grandfather was the first in our family to make the jump," Johnson said. "He's too ill to be here today but he is with us in spirit."

The legacy of the Johnson airborne family went on to include two sons and a sister who joined the Air Force.

"These schools build confidence in young boys," Johnson said. "They know they can accomplish anything."

Johnson admits, even with all the airborne experience, his family was still a bit nervous when their 19-year-old son made his first jump.

> "I knew this would make (my dad) proud, but I never knew until today how proud I would be of myself."
> Pvt. Bruce Johnson
> Airborne graduate

In fact, the elder Johnson made sure he was at the airfield the day his son made the first plunge into the open sky.

"It took a lot for him to follow in my footsteps," Johnson said. "At first Bruce Jr. wanted to venture out on his own and he wasn't sure if the Army was for him."

Johnson realized in his last year of high school that the Army could be the opportunity of a lifetime, and an opportunity to find himself, his father said.

"Chances are many of these men standing here today will jump over enemy territory," he said. "It makes all of them all the more heroes in my book."

West Nile Virus headlines causing panic

Only 1 percent become seriously ill

Jim Caldwell
TRADOC News Service

FORT MONROE, Va. — As reports of deaths from the West Nile Virus make headlines, the Training and Doctrine Command surgeon wants soldiers, family members and civilian employees to know that those who become seriously ill from the virus represent less than one percent of all people bitten by virus-carrying mosquitoes.

"According to the Centers for Disease Control, in areas that have shown to be positive for the virus, in terms of birds and mosquitoes, there's less than a 1 percent chance that someone will become seriously ill from any one mosquito bite," said Dr. (Col.) Bernard DeKoning.

Still, as the 12 deaths reported from the West Nile Virus this year indicate, there can be serious complications.

"They tend to occur in people who are older, say in their 50s, and those with disorders of the immune system where you tend to see complications, such as encephalitis, which is an inflammation of the brain and then all the complications that go with that."

Of the people who died from West Nile Virus so far this year, most of them were in their 60s and 70s, he said.

If symptoms do occur they will appear in three to 15 days after a bite from a West Nile Virus-carrying mosquito. Young, healthy people who are infected usually experience "self-limited symptoms."

"That's a little fever, headache, some body aches," DeKoning said. "They'll feel like they have the flu. A virus causes flu; West Nile is a virus.

"The treatment is rest and fluids until you get over it, which can be anywhere from several days to a week, maybe 10 days."

The virus was first reported in the United States in summer 1999. From then through 2001, 149 cases were reported with 18 deaths. As of Wednesday, there are 253 reported cases, including 12 deaths.

The dramatic reporting of deaths from the West Nile Virus and the unsolved mystery of how the virus arrived in the Western Hemisphere may have some people on edge.

West Nile Virus is normally found in Africa, western Asia, the Mediterranean region of Europe and the Middle East. DeKoning said how the virus first came to the Western Hemisphere has not been established.

Mosquitoes get the virus from dead birds as they scavenge for blood. If a human is then bitten, that person receives the virus. However, a young and healthy person's chances of becoming seriously ill from any one mosquito bite are extremely small.

"We don't want to raise the panic level," DeKoning said. "That's always a balance for public health authorities. You want to inform the public and don't want to create a panic.

This year there have been no infected humans, horses or birds on Department of Defense installations. However, there are large populations of virus-carrying birds and mosquitoes around Forts Myer, Va.; McNair, Washington, D.C.; McPherson, Ga.; Andrews AFB, Md.; and the Pentagon.

"There have been no reports from TRADOC installations of infected birds or mosquitoes," said Col. Steve Guthrie, assistant deputy chief of staff for operations at TRADOC. "We've encouraged commanders to have an active command information program to tell people on their installations the actions they can take to reduce the mosquito population in their area, if required, and how to protect themselves if they are exposed to infected mosquitoes.

"We have asked commanders if they find they have infected birds and mosquitoes around their installations to report it to us. The headquarters can assist them in determining the next steps to take to help, as well as assisting any impacts on the rest of TRADOC or the Army."

Guthrie said abatement procedures against mosquitoes that might be infected with the West Nile Virus are the same as those taken to control mosquito populations anywhere.

They include spraying standing water to kill mosquito larva. Aerial and ground-level spraying can be used to kill adult mosquitoes. However, local authorities need to determine if such abatement procedures are required.

People should get rid of standing water in areas around work places and their homes to get rid of possible mosquito breeding sites.

Stronger measures include issuing soldiers tubes of DEET, and insect repellent, and permeating BDUs with permethrin, another repellent.

"We want commanders to develop any abatement and personnel protection programs, based on both their local situation and a risk analysis before expending a great deal of resources," Guthrie said.

"We would like to review their programs that might require significant resources before execution."

look CLOSER look look look look look

Although the West Nile Virus poses the most risk to the elderly and people with compromised immune systems, most people want to avoid the virus. Killing the virus-carrying mosquitoes helps control the illness.

- Get rid of possible mosquito breeding sites such as standing water.
- Empty children's wading pools immediately after use.
- Destroy or dispose of tin cans, plastic containers, old tires or any other object that can hold water.
- Empty and refill birdbaths weekly.
- Weed. Mosquitoes rest on weeds and other vegetation.
- Use a mosquito repellent with DEET.

TRADOC, FORSCOM ask AAFES to remove ephedra products

Soldier's death at Fort Hood prompts request

TRADOC News Service

FORT MONROE, Va. — Training and Doctrine Command has joined with Forces Command in asking the Army Air Force Exchange Service to remove products containing ephedra, a compound normally found in diet products.

What prompted the requests was the death of a soldier at Fort Hood, Texas, who collapsed and died during a run in late April, according to FORSCOM officials.

"This soldier was likely taking a nutritional supplement containing a combination of the herbs Ma Huang and Guarana," said Dr. (Col.) Bernard DeKoning, TRADOC Surgeon. "Of concern are the supplements containing Ma Huang or ephedra, which is a naturally occurring form of the drug ephedrine. That is why this request for removing ephedra-containing products from AAFES shelves for six months until the findings from the Department of Health and Human Services are released."

> "One side effect of ephedra is that it increases the heart rate and puts more strain on the heart."
> Dr. (Col.) Bernard DeKoning
> TRADOC Surgeon

According to a National Football League press release, which FORSCOM obtained, the NFL banned ephedra use among the players beginning July 1. They have added it to the list of substances they test athletes for.

A naturally occurring form of the drug ephedrine, ephedra is called a "fat burner." By burning fat and working out, soldiers feel they can raise their muscle mass, DeKoning said.

"One side effect of ephedra is that it increases the heart rate and puts more strain on the heart," he said.

"The sale of ephedra-containing products by facilities on TRADOC installations is seen by our soldiers as an affirmation that their use is safe and acceptable."

"Soldiers participate in physically strenuous activity, often times in harsh environmental conditions such as high heat and humidity.

"If a cardiac stimulant such as ephedra is in the bloodstream, the heart and the rest of the body may not withstand the strain."

1st Bn., 11th Inf. changes command Tuesday

Former SGI returns as commander

Spc. Douglas DeMaio
Bayonet staff

In a change of command ceremony Tuesday, a soldier formerly assigned to the 11th Infantry Regiment returned to Fort Benning to take command of the regiment's 1st Battalion.

Lt. Col. Alan Neyland succeeded Lt. Col Daniel Dillon to assume command of the 'Do the Right Thing' battalion.

"It's great to be back at Fort Benning, the Home of the Infantry," Neyland said.

Neyland began his career at Fort Benning in 1985 as a small group instructor within the regiment.

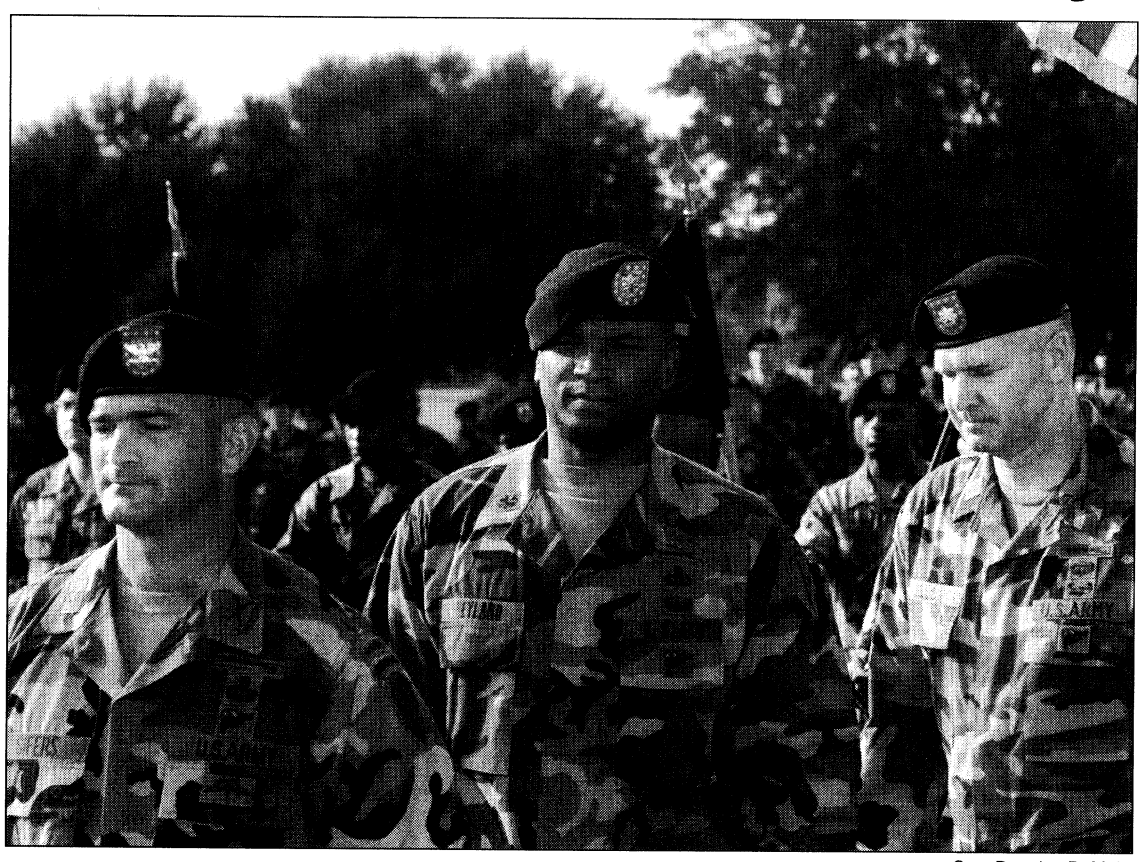
"I'm blessed to be able to come back and serve in one of the battalions," Neyland said.

The battalion supports 27 directorates for the U.S. Army Infantry Center, the Fort Benning Replacement Company, the 283rd Army Band, the Infantry Captains Career Course and the International Student Training Detachment, which oversees more than 600 foreign students.

In an emotional address, Dillon expressed his gratitude for the valued efforts the cadre made to make battalion business run smoothly, and he thanked civilian sponsors for their aid with foreign students.

Working with the battalion's first-class soldiers and staff is what he will miss most, Dillon said.

"It's the people in this organization that made the position great," Dillon said.



As for Neyland, he said he was excited about the opportunity to work within such a great organization.

"I'm glad to be a part of it," he said.

Neyland earned a bachelor's of science degree in administrative education from the University of Kentucky, where he was commissioned.

Before returning to Fort Benning as a battalion commander, Neyland served as the chief of Live Fire Division at the Joint Readiness Training Center, Fort Polk, La., and as an operations officer for both 4th Ranger Training Battalion and Ranger Training Brigade.

He has earned a Ranger Tab, Air Assault Badge, Pathfinder Badge and Expert Infantryman's Badge. His awards and decorations include the Meritorious Service Medal with two Oak Leaf Clusters, Army Commendation Medal with one Oak Leaf Cluster, the National Defense Service Medal and the NATO Medal.

Spc. Douglas DeMaio

11th Infantry Regiment Commander Col. Steve Sifers, left, Lt. Col. Alan Neyland, incoming commander, and Lt. Col. Daniel Dillon, outgoing commander, return to the staging area after passing the guidon.

Info for military jobs available online

Web site describes certification process for civilian jobs

Sgt. 1st Class Kathleen T. Rhem
American Forces Press Service

WASHINGTON — Separating military members can now get help earning professional certification or licenses related to their military jobs for the civilian world before they leave the service.

Where to go? Online.

"There are a lot of people who get out of the military only to find out that they are not prepared, even though they've probably gotten all the training and all the experience that they need to have those credentials," said Sandra Winborne, certification program manager for the Defense Activity for Nontraditional Education Support, or DANTES.

Many military specialties require certification or licensing to perform that job in the civilian world. Some of the more common are information technology and telecommunications jobs, most specialties in the medical and aviation fields, and most types of engineers and mechanics.

Winborne spoke to attendees at the recent DoD Worldwide Transition Assistance Program training conference in New Orleans. She described some information separating service members can find on the DANTES Web site www.voled.doded.mil/dantes/cert/index.htm.

The site describes certifications or licenses required to take a job in a wide variety of civilian career fields. Service members can search based on their occupational specialty or service code. The site describes how well members' training and experience in military jobs prepare them for the tests and what added work members might need to do.

The DANTES site also contains links to information from the Department of Labor and the Bureau of Labor Statistics on what civilian jobs correspond to military specialties.

Winborne also cited an Army site as an excellent information sources for departing members of all the services.

The Army runs Credentialing Opportunities Online at www.army education.army.mil/cool. This is the official site of the GI to Jobs program.

"GI to Jobs" is an Army initiative with the sole purpose of helping military personnel understand the entire process of earning professional certification or licensing before they leave the military, Winborne said.

She said that DANTES maintains memoranda of understanding with more than 50 organizations that provide professional licensing and certification. Many such tests can be taken at the 580 DANTES testing centers on military bases worldwide.

In many cases, financial assistance is available. DoD has signed agreements with some licensing or certification boards to cover the cost of tests given to military people. Many other tests are covered under the Department of Veterans Affairs' Montgomery GI Bill.

Wilborne advised that the Army Reserve and National Guard and the Air Force Reserve will now reimburse members of those services for some tests associated with licensing and certification. Individuals can contact their nearest DANTES testing representative or military education center for more information. Reimbursement procedures are also discussed on the DANTES Web site.

For more information visit www.armyeducation.army.mil/cool, or on using the GI Bill to cover these costs, go to www.gibill.va.gov/education/LCweb.htm.

Water: Safety must be used in Chattahoochee life vests, they're just waiting for another drowning," said Regis Beighley, Fort Benning's safety manager.

Beighley said the steep, wooded area is unpredictable and dangerous. A 14-year-old drowned after he lost his footing and fell victim to the river's rapid current.

And the Chattahoochee, which has claimed 25 soldiers in the past 45 years, is fed from a dam in Columbus.

A siren sounds when the dam is released, Beighley said, but post residents can't hear it.

"Downstream you won't notice a very sudden surge of water. It sneaks up on you," he said. "It catches swimmers off guard, and the current becomes deadly before they know it."

The current isn't the only hazard, Beighley said.

"There have been 15 alligators spotted in the area," he said. "And, of course, the Chattahoochee runs from Atlanta, and we get waste water mixed with rain water."

"A lot of potential contamination.

"I wouldn't swim there.

"No matter who you are or how old you are or how skilled you are, you're at risk in the Chattahoochee," he said.

Garrison officials agree, and they're warning parents to keep their children away from the river.

"It's extremely dangerous," said Chuck Walls, garrison manager. "We can't control the flow of the river, and we can't police everyone's children.

"It comes down to parental responsibility and parental supervision.

"If we find them there, we'll certainly hold the parents responsible."

director of the CDC's smoking and health program. "Since cigarette prices may not continue to increase, a greater emphasis will need to be put on the school-based efforts and media campaigns that have proven effective as part of comprehensive tobacco control programs so that we can help the next generation of children to remain smoke-free."

The dramatic increase in cigarette smoking rates among high school students during the early to mid-1990s is now being reversed, according to a CDC May 2002 press release.

Factors that might have contributed to the decline in cigarette use include a 70 percent increase in the retail price of cigarettes between December 1997 and May 2001, increases in school-based efforts to prevent tobacco use, and increases in youth exposure to both state and national mass media smoking prevention campaigns.

The CDC guidelines recommend that all schools:

• Develop and enforce a school policy on tobacco use,

• Provide instruction about the short- and long-term negative physiologic and social consequences of tobacco use, social influences on tobacco use, peer norms regarding tobacco use, and refusal skills.

Successful programs to prevent tobacco use address multiple psychosocial factors related to tobacco use among children and adolescents, and they:

1. help students understand that tobacco use can result in decreased stamina, stained teeth, foul-smelling breath and clothes, exacerbation of asthma, and ostracism by nonsmoking peers.

2. use a variety of educational techniques to decrease the social acceptability of tobacco use, highlight existing antitobacco norms, and help students understand that most adolescents do not smoke.

3. help students develop skills in recognizing and refuting tobacco-promotion messages from the media, adults and peers.

4. help students develop refusal skills through direct instruction, modeling, rehearsal and reinforcement, and should coach them to help others develop these skills.

For those children who don't follow the program and are caught smoking, the MPs will refer them to their parents.

can't do what we used to. Things just pile up and get behind."

Things like trimming the bushes, washing windows and painting. The shed needs a good cleaning, Isabel said, and she'd like to have safety bars installed in the bathtub.

"Just little things that we can't handle anymore," said Isabel, whose son, Larry, lives in Texas.

Though heavy lifting and hard labor are beyond the Engeldingers' capability now, they remain very active in their community.

Isabel's been volunteering at Fort Benning's Retirement Services for 13 years. Ralph, a veteran of World War II, Korea and Vietnam, volunteers at the Government Center in Columbus. They've both been active in the Catholic Chapel for many years.

It's that kind of selfless service that made House of Heroes officials take a second look at the Engeldinger's application.

"They're great Americans, very giving," said Master Sgt. Earl Smith, assistant operations sergeant for the 36th Engineer Group and captain of the team assigned to work on the Engeldinger's home.

"They're perfect examples of the kinds of heroes we owe a debt of gratitude to — a debt we can never fully repay," Smith said. "But if we can do something, just a little something to help them out, hey, that's great."

Smith is one of 10 team captains recruiting volunteers for the event, which is scheduled for Sept. 16. Each team will consist of 10-15 members — men, women and teens — who will spend a day repairing, cleaning and doing lawn work, said Chuck Walls, Fort Benning's garrison manager.

"It's the kind of chores you and I maintain on a regular basis, like painting, yard work, minor repairs," Walls said. "It takes just a little bit of know-how and good ol' elbow grease to make a big difference for these folks who have spent their whole lives serving their country."

House of Heroes started three years ago with the repair of one veteran's home. Last year 10 were repaired. This year's goal of 50 is a response to the president's challenge of volunteerism following the terrorist attacks last year.

The schedule of events, which includes a dinner honoring the heroes, will follow the Sept. 11 anniversary.

For more information, about House of Heroes, call Chuck Walls at 545-1500 or e-mail wallsc@benning.army.mil.

Lightning: Gives six soldiers 'safety reminder'

Langford was paralyzed for a short time, but declined to go to the hospital, he said.

"I was more worried about the soldiers," he said.

Sgt. 1st Class Brian Knutson, Staff Sgt. Craig Pijut, Sgt. 1st Class Mark Imler, Staff Sgt. Daniel Sheets and Staff Sgt. Joseph Mejie were also injured. Knutson was kept at the hospital several days for observation.

In April, the Infantry Center issued a lightning safety alert due the number of thunderstorms that occur in the area.

Before the July incident, there were three lightning incidents involving Fort Benning soldiers.

Two ranger students were injured in Dahlonega, Ga., in 2000, and an Infantry Training Brigade soldier was killed by lightning in 1998.

Fort Benning officials have taken steps to protect soldiers during training. There are approximately 20 new lightning protection structures being built on Fort Benning, said Regis Beighley, Infantry Branch Safety manager.

The completed structures at the Malone complex have overhead cover and wires that direct the lightning away from the bleacher area and into the ground for the safety of the soldiers.

Compensation feasible for service

Separation pay may bridge gap

Directorate of Civilian Personnel

Employees who are involuntarily separated as a result of the reduction in force Jan. 25 may be entitled to severance pay.

Severance pay is often granted to federal employees who are involuntarily separated from federal service. The amount of the pay is usually based on years of creditable service, basic pay at time of separation and age, if older than 40.

"Severance pay will provide the opportunity to keep a flow of income while seeking another job," said Willie Varner, director of Civilian Personnel.

Employees can receive their severance pay in biweekly payments, or if the employee's request is granted from the DoD, they can take a lump sum, but the lump sum has some obstacles too.

If someone takes the lump sum and then returns to work before he would have stopped receiving biweekly payments. he must repay a portion of the lump sum. The amount to be repaid equals the amount of severance pay from the period from the start of the new job to the end of the severance pay calculation period. The lump sum authority will expire Sept. 30, 2003.

Severance pay is available provided the following conditions are met:

•The employee must have been employed in federal service for at least the last 12 calendar months. This requirement can be met whether the employee is permanent or temporary at the time of separation as long as he has been permanent during this period of service, and there has not been a break in service of more than three calendar days.

For example, an employee who was permanent and then accepted a temporary position (without a break in service of more than three days) is entitled to severance pay upon separation due to RIF.

•The employee must be serving on a full-time or part-time work schedule. Employees on intermittent work schedules are not eligible for severance pay.

•The employee may not be receiving or eligible to receive an annuity under any retirement law or system for federal employees or members of the uniformed services.

•The employee cannot have been given a reasonable offer of another position within the commuting area.

Generally, a reasonable offer is one of similar seniority, tenure, and pay, according to a DCP press release. This generally means there must be the same expectation of continued employment, the same work schedule (full-time or part-time), and the offered position must not be lower than the equivalent of two grades below the employee's current grade.

•The employee must not be receiving compensation under the Federal Employees' Compensation Act, unless this compensation is received concurrently with salary or on account of the death of another person.

A few of the important facts to remember about severance pay are:

•If the RIF is caused by a function being contracted out, employees are entitled to severance pay, even if they accept a job offer from the contractor.

•Normally, severance pay is paid through a series of payments aligned with the employee's biweekly pay periods prior to separation.

The length of time the employee receives the biweekly payments is based upon the amount of creditable federal service and age (if 40 years or older at the the time of involuntary separation). The amount of severance pay will be the same as the employee's basic pay immediately before the separation until severance pay is exhausted. The final payment will consist of only that portion remaining to be paid.

•The total severance pay received may not be more than a year's pay at the amount earned by the employee immediately before the involuntary separation.

•The only deductions made from severance pay are federal and state income tax withholdings and FICA tax, if appropriate.

•Any period covered by severance pay won't be regarded as a period of federal service or employment.

Engineers ready ground for memorial

Wall replica to visit post in October

2nd Lt. Mamie Murphy
36th Engineer Group

Earthwork preparations by the 36th Engineer Group paved the way for the arrival of a traveling replica of the Vietnam Memorial Wall Oct. 11-13.

The 63rd Engineer Company moved approximately 400 cubic yards of soil this week to establish a firm foundation for visitors to walk and the Wall to be displayed.

Preparations for the arrival of the wall began more than a year ago, when Angela Garnto, special events coordinator for Striffler-Hamby Mortuary Inc. sent a request up to bring the traveling replica wall to Fort Benning. The Columbus funeral home's parent company, Service Corp International, owns a scale replica of the Vietnam Memorial Wall, which is displayed all over the country. The wall is 240 feet long and contains all 58,219 names of those who died or are still missing in action as a result of the Vietnam War.

"This shows that the past is not forgotten, we are helping to keep it alive and in people's minds," said Staff Sgt. Leon Williams, 63rd Engineer Co., noncommissioned officer in charge of the earthmoving project.

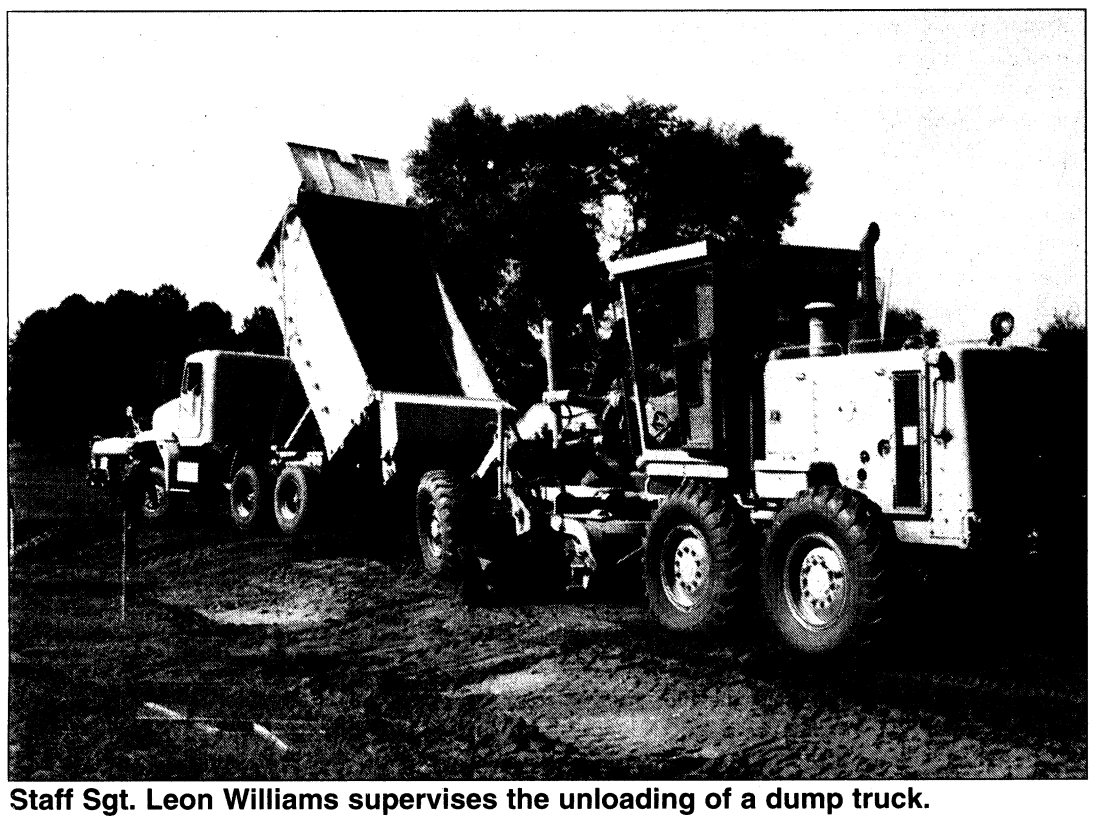
Williams also appreciated the training value for the soldiers involved in the project.

"It's great training for the soldiers to get out here and work in just this little small space," Williams said. "We have two new soldiers, and this is their first duty station, so this is great experience for them."

Williams and his earthmovers knew where they were working and how much soil they were moving because of the efforts of the 36th Engineer Group's survey team.

Led by Sgt. Reginald Tatum, the team of surveyors made the design plans fit the given terrain at Sacrifice Field.

"This was great experience for our soldiers," Tatum said. "We probably have at least 40 man hours into this project. We surveyed the ground, came up with the site plan, then went out and put stakes in the ground so 63rd would know where and how much to cut and fill.



"Not only does this help MOS (military occupational specialty) proficiency, but we get to help the post and do something for the Fort Benning community," Tatum said.

The original Vietnam Memorial Wall, on display in the Constitution Gardens in Washington, D.C., was dedicated in 1982. Designed by then-Yale architectural student, Maya Lin, the Wall is one of the Capital's most visited memorials.

The replica wall will be on display on Sacrifice Field in front of the Infantry Museum, around-the-clock Oct. 11-13. The Infantry Museum will also be open 24 hours a day during this time.

Volunteers are still needed to assist with the wall's visit for committees such as programs and ceremonies, safety, construction and hospitality.

Any interested volunteers can attend an informational meeting 6 p.m. Monday at the Airport Holiday Inn Azalea Room A. Refreshments will be provided.

Soldiers train in basic moving tactics

Classes teach soldiers movements

Pfc. Chris Stephens
Bayonet staff

"I'm up, he's see's me, I'm down."

These words, spoken by E Company, 2nd Battalion, 58th Infantry Regiment, soldiers during Individual Tactical Training Aug. 16 let themselves know what their time frame is to move from one covered point to another.

The soldiers began their first series of six tactical training classes by learning SALUTE reports, five-point safety checks, the three- to five-second rush, high-crawl and low-crawl.

"During these classes, we teach how to survive on a daily basis out in a war zone," said Sgt. 1st Class Juan Aponte, company first sergeant. "We let them know this class will help save their life in combat."

All of these classes teach the soldiers groups of tasks, he said.

The SALUTE reports require a soldier, when he see's enemy activity, to give the size of the unit, in terms of numbers, activity of and location of the enemy, uniform they are wearing, time the enemy was seen and equipment the enemy is using.

"By having the soldiers record vital information, they can relay it back to headquarters, so something can be done about it," Aponte said.

The drill sergeants went over the five-point safety check many times with the soldiers.

"We want them to remember, when getting ready to move, there are five key things for them to do first," Aponte said.

The five steps of a five-point safety check are: place the weapon of safe, close the dust cover, look left, look right and look for next cover area. The three- to five-second rush is a portion where the soldiers have very little time to move in between points.

"Three to five seconds is short," said Pvt. Nick Woodruff. "You gotta move like the wind to get to your next spot of cover."

"The biggest key for most of these soldiers to do stuff they wouldn't normally do, but in a safe manner," Aponte said.

"In a three to five-second rush, the soldiers hit the butt stock of their weapon on the ground. They fall to the ground and roll to their non-firing side," he said. "It is vital when in a war zone, that a soldier does it in a safe manner, so he can continue on with the mission."

The soldiers also worked on the high crawl and low crawl.

"This kind of stuff is fun," Woodruff said. "If the enemy is firing at you, it is the safest way to move. I just remember to keep my rear out of the air and to keep a low silhouette, and I'll be fine."

To paraphrase Gen. George Patton, you don't win a war by dying for your country.

You win a war by making the other guy die for his country.

"A lot of these soldiers are scared because they know that they could hurt themselves or someone else if they don't do the procedure properly," Aponte said. "We get them to that point where they do it safely without even thinking about it."

"We're all infantry, and we're all going to have to do this when we get to our duty stations," Woodruff said. "So we might as well get used to it and have fun with it.

"It's intense training, but if you keep a good head and pay attention, then it is easy to execute."

Garcia readys himself to begin the three to five-second rush.

Armed forces fields new catamaran

Stryker finishes challenge

Fort Eustis Public Affairs Office

FORT EUSTIS, Va. — The Army's future force met what some believe is the future of Army transportation when elements of a Stryker Brigade Combat Team were transported up the west coast this week on a new high-speed vessel.

The HSV-X1 Joint Venture, a giant wave-piercing catamaran, transported soldiers, Stryker armored vehicles and equipment from California to Tacoma, Wash.

The Stryker task force had just finished its participation in Millennium Challenge 02 and the Army Transformation Experiment at Fort Irwin's National Training Center.

The Strykers were loaded onto the vessel at Port Hueneme, Calif., Aug. 11, and they arrived back at Fort Lewis, Wash., Aug. 13.

The Army leased the Joint Venture last year to assess the capabilities of this type of technology for future procurement, officials said.

The ability to transport units intact will greatly reduce the need for large-scale on-shore reception, staging and integration of soldiers, vehicles and equipment, said Chief Warrant Officer 4 Mike Wichterman, operations officer, 7th Transportation Group. Reducing the logistics footprint is paramount as the Army transforms to a faster, stronger, more lethal force, he said.

"For each fighter in the force today, we have a combat service support soldier making sure he's got the beans, bullets, water and fuel needed to carry on the fight," Wichterman said. "The objective theater support vessel will give us a much broader package of dominant maneuver, allowing us to transport the combat unit sets as a complete package.

"We'll be able to insert them without the need for a large combat service support soldier package to assist on the shore executing reception, staging, and onward movement," he said.

The objective vessel will also have a state-of-the-art C4ISR suite (command, control, communications, computers, intelligence, surveillance and reconnaissance suite) on board, giving commanders the ability to obtain real-time information to plan the mission, he added.

"Commanders will be able to maintain situational awareness with their higher headquarters, receiving the same intelligence updates, changes to the operational plan and supporting information," he said. "They can make major changes to the plans while en route to their destination, and be more effective, more lethal in the process."

In October, the Army leased the Joint Venture, a commercial ferry modified for the military, to assess the capability of high-speed vessels to meet the need for faster, more maneuverable watercraft with shallow draft and large cargo capacity.

The 313-foot aluminum catamaran is capable of traveling at speeds greater than 40 knots, Witchterman said.

"It can carry 850 short tons and accommodate 363 personnel, including crew," he said. "It is approximately four times faster than vessels currently in the Army watercraft fleet.

Since April, the vessel has been used to move equipment and personnel in the Persian Gulf in support of Operation Enduring Freedom.

"That was an excellent opportunity for the Army to test the capabilities of high-speed watercraft," said Chief Warrant Officer Billy Davis, the Army skipper of the vessel. "We put the vessel through its paces and were able to gather data in an actual operational environment."

Army combat developers will use the data gathered during the year-long lease period to define the requirements for Theater Support Vessels, the Army's objective high-speed vessels, said Chief Warrant Officer 4 Scott Aimi, Combat Developer assigned to the Combined Arms Support Command, Directorate for Combat Developments for Transportation, Fort Lee, Va.

"Our recommendations can be as simple as adding more personal storage space for the crew or changing the deck covering so it's less slippery," Aimi said.

The future Theater Support Vessels will transport units in hours instead of days, said the Army's chief of transportation, Maj. Gen. Robert T. Dail.

"Shallower draft and greater maneuverability will allow a commander to use austere or degraded ports and bypass predictable choke points, diminishing asymmetrical advantages held by an enemy," Dail said.

"The ability to choose the time and place to quickly initiate action and deliver a complete package of soldiers, equipment, fully fueled and with ammunition will allow a combatant commander to gain operational momentum and positional advantage over an adversary," he said.

789th Ordnance Co. last line of defense

'Bomb squad' supports Secret Service

Pfc. Brian Trapp

Bayonet staff

Many of the members of the 789th Ordnance Company (Explosive Ordnance Disposal) didn't start as ordnance experts.

On everyone's list of reasons for changing to EOD, it eventually gets down to having the chance to "blow stuff up," but there's more to the occupation, than that.

"I switched from maintenance. I couldn't sit behind a desk anymore. Working on computers and doing paperwork all the time didn't hold much interest for me," said Capt. Lawrence Cousins, commander 789th Explosive Ordnance Disposal Company.

"This is the most demanding and challenging part of the ordnance corps. I work and train with my soldiers and get to spend time in the field to use my training."

The company covers Fort Benning and acts as the emergency bomb squad support for 55 counties in Georgia, Florida and Alabama, including Fort Rucker and Maxwell Air Force base. The company is also tasked to support the United States Secret Service to help with VIP visits. They helped with security during the vice president's recent visit to Fort Bragg.

"EOD allows me to solve real-world problems potentially every day and protect property and lives," said Staff Sgt. Brian Curtis, response NCO.

Curtis changed over to EOD from his position as an infantryman four years ago.

EOD allows for more individual work and the units are more close knit, because the EOD community is so small.

Most disposals are pretty easy, especially when the ordnance is where it belongs, like on a range, but when it is in a building or a public place it gets more difficult, and to ensure safety other agencies like the police need to be involved with the disposal, Curtis said.

For instance, there was a piece of ordnance that couldn't be moved and had to be destroyed on site, he said. But, when that spot is only 40 yards from a busy road during peak traffic hours, the police had to come in and close off the road before the ordnance could be destroyed.

"This is the only opportunity to do my wartime mission in garrison," Cousins said. "When we respond — it's not fake and its just as dangerous as if we were in Kosovo. Initial success or total failure, ordnance is unforgiving; if you make a mistake, you don't get a second chance."

The daily training, keeps the detachment prepared for any situation, said Sgt. 1st Class Shawn Thayer, operations NCO. The company does at least 20 hours of EOD training a week while they also take care of the administrative duties of a normal company with a unique mission.

"We are the last line of defense for force protection if a bomb got through the gates, we are the only ones with the training on Fort Benning to render it safe, and destroy it," Thayer said.

The company is looking for soldiers to switch to EOD. E-4s, junior E-5s and officers — captain or below — would be the best, but the opportunity is not limited to those. For more information, call 545-5372 or 545-7117.

NEWS FROM THE FIELD

1st Lt. Christopher D. Pike

1st Bn., 10th Field Artillery Regt.

For the soldiers of 1st Battalion, 10th Field Artillery deployed to Kuwait for Operation Desert Spring, platoon evaluations, better known as Artillery Table 12, was another opportunity to sharpen their artillery skills and demonstrate their ability to live up to their slogan — Unleash Hell!

The training event tests a platoon's ability to execute and accomplish 10 types of artillery fire missions while simultaneously challenging them with various other tactical combat tasks. Three batteries took part in the exercise – A and C batteries from 1st Bn., 10th Field Artillery Regt., and the battalion's attached battery, Alpha 4-1 FA from Fort Riley, Kansas. The event is designed to provide an assessment of a platoon's war fighting capability while serving as a great confidence builder for the platoon's soldiers who demonstrate their knowledge and ability to perform their wartime mission.

The event covered a three-week span during which time each platoon underwent a grueling 48-hour test that thoroughly tested its resolve and endurance.

Fatigue was a significant factor for each platoon as they faced a nonstop pace of fire missions and military tasks to perform. Adding to the challenge was the unforgiving weather conditions of Kuwait's desert, which routinely exceeded 115 degrees Fahrenheit during the day and rarely cooled below 85 degrees at night. Soldiers had to rely on loads of cool water and a large amount of determination to beat the heat and enemy.

The evaluation was controlled by Capt. Mike Adelberg, the battalion's Assistant Operations Officer and lead Observer Controller (OC) for the exercise. OCs controlled the tempo of the exercise to ensure it flowed smoothly and provided platoons a demanding, yet rewarding experience. The 1st Bn., 10th Field Artillery Regt., battalion commander, Lt. Col. Doug Harding, served as the senior trainer and kept a close eye on the actions of each platoon. Also keeping the platoon on its toes was the exercise's opposing force, or OPFOR as they are better known. This force of six 1st Bn., 10th Field Artillery Regt., soldiers and two armored combat vehicles repeatedly attacked the platoon firing blank machine gun ammunition and using pyrotechnics to simulate enemy artillery strikes.

The most demanding task of the evaluation was a simulated chemical attack against the platoon. This training task required the platoon to coordinate and perform an operational decontamination mission in the middle of the night while dressed in protective chemical clothing and masks. Performing the mission in chemical clothing and in Mission Oriented Protective Posture 4. The battalion's chemical officer, 1st Lt. Napoleon Solages and Chemical NCO, Staff Sergeant Walker, assisted the platoon as they cleaned their equipment of the contamination using hot water and several cleaning compounds. Following successful completion of this event the platoon was ready to take to the battlefield once again to provide artillery fires.

At the heart of the Table 12 evaluation is the very essence of a Field Artillery unit — the ability to place timely and accurate fires on the battlefield. Adding realism to this part of the evaluation was the fact that the platoon never knew when or what mission might be requested next. As a result, the platoon had to maintain a constant vigilance, ready to execute any type of fire mission.

The final event of the exercise was an After Action Review (AAR), which brought together the platoon's soldiers and the OCs to discuss the results of the event. Each platoon departed the evaluation thoroughly exhausted, but more highly trained than when they took the battlefield.

Police link area crimes to teens

Increase in thefts puts community on alert

Angela Sachitano
Special to the Bayonet©

A recent string of thefts in Fort Benning housing areas have put police and residents on high alert.

In the past six months there have been at least 180 thefts on post, said Wayde Sterling, investigator for Military Police Investigations.

"Most of the cases involve unsecured items left in carports or in the back yard," Sterling said. "Neighbors turn their backs for a minute and their belongings are gone."

There have also been at least a dozen house break-ins, where residents have come home to find their video games, VCR's and other electronics missing, Sterling said.

"We have an idea who is involved," Sterling said. "More likely than not, teen-agers who live in the areas are responsible. We've had neighbors call and identify people and make reports."

Military police identified five juveniles last month for a string of thefts in the McGraw Manor area, said Staff Sgt. Michael Snow, Operations sergeant for the Directorate of Public Safety. Several teens were also caught vandalizing houses and destroying neighbors' belongings.

"We've made arrests and there are more to follow," Snow said. "We need residents to keep an eye out for unidentified cars and suspicious people."

School lunches focus on nutrition

Low fat lunches priority on post

Angela Sachitano
Special to the Bayonet©

Close to 5 million kids between the ages of 6 to 17 are seriously overweight, and high fat, nutrient-poor foods are still the norm in schools, according to a recent study released by the Physicians Committee for Responsible Medicine.

Although the nutritional content in American school lunches seems to be slipping, Fort Benning school lunches are still focused on nutrition and low fat, said Gwyn Maddox, director of Child Nutrition for Fort Benning Schools.

"We are constantly trying to make improvements on the lunches," Maddox said. "We follow the food pyramid closely and make sure each lunch is filled with nutrition and plenty of choice for the children."

> "We are constantly trying to make improvements on the lunches. We follow the food pyramid closely and make sure each lunch is filled with nutrition and plenty of choice for the children."
>
> Gwyn Maddox
> Fort Benning Schools director of Child Nutrition

Fort Benning schools participate in the National School Lunch Program, a federal program dedicated to making sure schools meet certain requirements for nutrition. The requirements insist the fat content of a child's lunch does not surpass 30 percent, and salt, sugar, cholesterol, and sodium must be kept to a minimum.

"Lunches are not filled with fried foods the way they used to be," Maddox said. "We must report to the state periodically about what is being served. We are very aware of what the children eat."

Last year, Fort Benning schools like Stowers Elementary and White Elementary began a nutritional program where cafeteria managers would talk with children in classrooms about the nutritional content of the lunches.

Children were then allowed to choose from a variety of healthy foods in the cafeteria.

"The program was a success and children became more aware of what was healthy and what was bad for them," Maddox said.

But some parents like Susan Peters, prefer to take matters into their own hands.

"I am not a fan of processed food of any kind for my children," said Peters, who has an 11-year-old, 9-year-old, and a 6-year-old in the Fort Benning school system. "I check out ahead of time what they are serving and if it's chicken nuggets, pizza or hamburgers, I'll make their lunches instead.

"I feel better knowing exactly what they are eating."

But Peters is in the minority.

Infantry Band to play at Riverside

Goal to 'remember, regroup'

Bridgett Siter
Special to the Bayonet©

History repeats itself. While perusing old Officer Spouses' Club year books, P.J. Eaton came across photos of band concerts on the lawn of Riverside.

The wife of Fort Benning's commanding general, Eaton decided to resurrect a musical tradition.

"An old-fashioned evening on the lawn, with the band. That's exactly what we have in mind," she said.

"Bring the family, bring a blanket or lawn chairs and a picnic basket. We'll have a great time."

The first of a series of concerts, featuring Fort Benning's Infantry Band, is scheduled for 7-9 p.m. Sept. 9 in the gardens of Riverside, the home of Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Paul Eaton, at 100 Vibbert Ave. The home will not be open.

Eaton said the concert is scheduled to commemorate the anniversary of the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks.

"It's a way to come together, remember and regroup," she said.

"It's a good time to reflect on those events, certainly, but also to embrace the things we've come to appreciate more than ever — family and friends and simple pleasures."

Chief Warrant Officer Paul Clark, the bandmaster, said the Infantry Band, comprised of concert, ceremonial, top 40 and Dixieland bands that tour throughout much of the year, will perform patriotic tunes, such as Sousa's The Liberty Bell and various Broadway tunes.

Families are encouraged to dress in red, white and blue.

"A lot of different things happened after 9-11," said Col. Joe Torres, garrison commander. "There was a period of remembering those who died. There was a resurgence of patriotism — red, white and blue everywhere.

"And there was a relinking with American values. People began to evaluate their priorities. Family and community became more important," Torres said.

"That's what this concert is about — remembering 9-11 and recommitting ourselves to the values we hold dear."

Hospital offers free prostate screenings

Early detection is key to survival

Maj. France Schanne, M.D.
Martin Army Community Hospital

September is Prostate Awareness Month and Martin Army Community Hospital's Health Promotion Center is joining the American Cancer Society and hospitals nationwide in offering free prostate cancer screenings, counseling and educational literature.

Men, 40 years old and older, can walk in to the Urology Clinic for a free screening, which includes a blood test and brief exam, between the hours of 8 a.m. to 3 p.m. Sept. 11, 16, 18, and 23.

Individuals will need to bring their military ID card and medical records to the free screening.

In 1999, the estimated number of new cases of prostate cancer was 179,300 with 37,000 deaths.

This makes it the most common cancer in men other than skin cancer.

Prostate cancer is two times more common in African Americans than in whites and two times more common in men with a family history of prostate cancer than in men with no family history of prostate cancer.

Prostate cancer is highly treatable when detected early.

However, it is most often silent in its early stages. That is why it is vital to screen for the cancer with PSA and a digital rectal exam.

PSA is prostate specific antigen, a protein secreted into the blood by the prostate. The amount of PSA in blood can be an indication of the risk of having prostate caner.

Men with a high PSA level are more likely to have prostate cancer. Men with an abnormal prostrate on rectal exam are also more likely to have prostate cancer.

African Americans and men with a family history of prostate cancer should begin yearly PSA and rectal exams at age 40. All other men should begin at age 50.

With efforts like Prostate Cancer Awareness, the number of deaths per year is decreasing. This is because surgical and radiation treatment of prostate cancer works best with early detection.

The incidence of prostate cancer is decreasing.

The Health Promotion Center will also provide health educational literature and displays at various gyms, units, the Main Mall Post Exchange and the hospital.

SHOOT!

Time for families to catch up on shots

Adults get chance for vaccination too

National Foundation for Infectious Diseases

Millions of parents are busy getting their kids ready for a brand new school year — buying new clothes, books and supplies and making doctor appointments for annual physicals. But this year the doctor's visit is more important than ever for parents to make sure their children — and the whole family — get caught up on important immunizations. Shortages of a number of vaccines from the last year are now over or ending and the National Foundation for Infectious Diseases and the National Coalition for Adult Immunization want parents to make the back-to-school period a time for a family preventive health check.

"Back-to-school often means vaccinations for children but we also want parents to take this opportunity to assess their own preventive health status," said Susan Rehm, M.D., president, NFID. "Adults often ignore needed immunizations, and this fall is the perfect time for the entire family to catch up on vaccinations."

Due to supply issues, many routine vaccines were deferred causing children and adults to fall behind on their vaccination schedules. While the temporary shortages did not pose a critical health risk, the NFID and NCAI want to make sure that children and adults don't let immunizations lapse as supplies are restored to normal.

Supplies of the tetanus and diphtheria booster for adolescents and adults have completely recovered. Several vaccines that provide protection for younger children are currently returning to normal, including the vaccine for diphtheria, tetanus and pertussis, as well as for measles, mumps and rubella and chickenpox.

"Parents should call their doctors to arrange visits to catch up on any vaccines they or their children missed during the shortages," said Rehm. "Doctors should have these vaccines in their offices now — if they don't, parents should ask for an appointment when they can receive those vaccinations."

Up-to-date DTaP, MMR and chickenpox vaccinations are state mandated for most children upon entering school. Children and infants receive the DTaP vaccine as a three-dose primary series given over a period of seven to 12 months.

At around 11 years old, a Td booster is needed to continue providing protection against both tetanus and diphtheria. Td boosters are recommended every 10 years throughout life, and are often required for adolescents and young adults to attend grade school, high school or college in may states. The chickenpox vaccine can be given to children, adolescents or adults.

A recent study measuring the public's protection against tetanus and diphtheria illustrates why it is important to keep immunizations up-to-date. According to the study, 91 percent of Americans between the ages of 6 to 11 years had protective levels of both the tetanus and diphtheria antibodies, which can be attributed to strong school vaccination requirements for young children. However, the study also showed what happens when people let a Td booster lapse. The proportion of protective levels decreased to 47 percent among persons 20 years of age or older.

Every August the NFID helps sponsor National Immunization Awareness Month to increase understanding about immunization across the lifespan as parents and children prepare to return to school, and the medical community begins preparing for the annual flu season. For more information about immunizations required for children and adults, consumers should consult their physicians or — contact their local public health department. More information about infectious diseases and immunization can also be found by visiting NFID's Web site, www.nfid.org.

Vaccines in shortage earlier now restocked for use

The following vaccines have had shortages or supply problems this year. These problems are now over or are quickly being resolved. Check with your doctor to see when you and your family members can schedule an appointment to catch-up on any missed immunizations.

Chickenpox (Varicella) — Children should get one dose of chickenpox vaccine between 12 and 18 months of age, or at any age after that if they have never had chickenpox. People who do not get the vaccine until 13 years of age or older should get two doses, four to eight weeks apart.

• Chickenpox is a highly contagious virus of the herpes family that can be spread by coughing and sneezing. Out of 1,000 children infected in the U.S. from chickenpox each year, 1.7 are hospitalized and two in every 100,000 infected die.

• Adults are 10 times more likely than children to develop severe complications when infected with chickenpox virus.

Diphtheria, Tetanus and Pertussis — DTaP is a combination of diphtheria toxoid, tetanus toxoid and acellular pertussis vaccine that is administered in a five-dose series to babies and children.

• Diphtheria is a respiratory disease caused by bacteria that can be spread by coughing and sneezing. One in 10 children with diphtheria dies from suffocation, heart failure or paralysis.

• Tetanus is a disease of the nervous system caused by bacteria widely present in much of our environment, which enter the body through a break in the skin. This disease can cause severe and painful muscle spasms and may result in death.

• Pertussis (also known as whooping cough) is a respiratory disease caused by bacteria that can be spread by coughing and sneezing. This disease can cause severe coughing spells and lead to pneumonia, seizures, brain damage and death.

Measles, Mumps and Rubella — Children should get two doses of MMR vaccine, the first at 12 to 15 months of age and the second at 4 to 6 years of age.

• Measles is a respiratory disease caused by a virus that can spread by coughing and sneezing. Five percent of young children develop pneumonia, which in some cases can be fatal.

• Mumps is a disease of the parotid gland and lymph nodes in the neck caused by a virus. Complications include encephalitis (inflammation of the brain), meningitis, deafness and painful swelling of the testes.

• Rubella is a respiratory disease caused by a virus that can be spread by coughing and sneezing. The disease can cause birth defects and mental retardation in infants whose mothers are infected during pregnancy.

Tetanus, Diphtheria booster — For adults and adolescents, a combination vaccine called "Td" protects against both tetanus and diphtheria. After primary immunization against the diseases, a Td booster is recommended beginning at age 11 to 12 years, and continuing every 10 years throughout life.

• Forty to 50 cases of tetanus still occur each year, resulting in approximately five deaths annually in the U.S.

• Although diphtheria is no longer common in the U.S., it remains a problem in other countries and can be spread by exposure to infected persons. One out of every 10 people who get diphtheria will die from it.

Vaccines in short supply —

• Pneumococcal conjugate vaccine, which prevents infection of the bacterium streptococcus pneumoniae, remains in short supply and restricted use.

• The supply of haemophilus influenzae type B (Hib) vaccine, which prevents childhood bacterial meningitis and infection-related mental retardation, is currently limited. Check with your doctor regarding the availability of this vaccine.

Other vaccines that are also routinely recommended for children, adolescents and adults and have not had supply problems include hepatitis A, hepatitis B, meningococcal, polio, pneumococcal polysaccharide and influenza.

Lunch: Helps children grow stronger

Susan Peters packs a school lunch for her daughter, Heather, 11.

Benning kids bring their lunch to school on a regular basis, Maddox said.

"We are doing everything we can to make parents feel comfortable with the food we serve children," Maddox said. "We follow a monthly menu that is available to all parents, and we invite parents to come and eat with their children and check out the lunch when they can."

As part of the National School Lunch Program, Fort Benning must buy less expensive "commodities food" in order to receive cash subsidies and free bonus shipments from the USDA for each meal served, Maddox said.

No matter what is being served, some children are just picky eaters and are accustomed to eating only what their parents provide.

"I like making lunch with my mother in the morning," said Heather Peters, a sixth-grader at Faith Middle School. "We always make sure there is fruit in there, a sandwich and even vegetables."

"I find it convenient and inexpensive to make their lunches," her mother said. "Lunch is about $1.25 when they buy it at school. I can make it for less than that at home."

Arrests: Continue in neighborhoods, residents fight back victim in the Upper Davis Hills string of thefts. When she arrived home from work last week, her new $350 lawnmower was missing.

"This is the most unsafe I've ever felt on a post," Goldsmith said. "I see suspicious cars around here all the time and I've reported them to the police. The theft seems to be out of control."

Goldsmith said she tried to put up a fence to protect her carport from trespassers, but the housing office said it was unauthorized. Now she has resorted to tying her belongings up.

"It's not right that I have to secure every item inside of my own carport," Goldsmith said. "This is my personal property and I deserve to be protected."

Police have stepped up security to make sure at least one road patrol and one bike patrol are surveilling the streets at all times of the day, Sterling said.

Police have even began inspecting residents homes, making notes of unsecured items and leaving reminders in mailboxes for soldiers to lock up their belongings.

"Right now all we can say is there are no guarantees," Snow said. "Whoever is behind these crimes is keeping a close watch on residents and knows just when to strike."

Residents need to be aware of any broken locks on their windows or doors and call housing immediately for repairs, Snow said. Burglaries are often centered around easy access to homes.

"It would also be smart for soldiers to record the serial numbers of their belongings," Snow said. "We've been able to successfully track stolen items at local pawn shops when we have the serial numbers."

But some residents simply aren't waiting quietly for the thieves to make their move. The Fort Benning Mayor's Association is actively recruiting volunteers for a Community Watch Program. As part of the program, volunteers would take turns monitoring the streets of their own neighborhoods on the weekends and at night.

"We tried to start a community watch program last year, but there wasn't a lot of interest from residents," said Evelyn Livermore, president of the Fort Benning Mayor's Association. "We're hoping the recent string of crimes around post will motivate people to help out.

"We have to protect ourselves."

Several of the housing areas on post are without a mayor right now, and the vacancies have hindered the startup of the community watch program, Livermore said. But by next month, many of the mayoral positions will be filled and Livermore hopes the program will be on its way.

"Residents have been complaining to the garrison staff for the last several months about the thefts," Livermore said. "We are all worried this will transcend into something even more dangerous.

"The community watch program will be a good way to keep an eye on what is happening around us."

In the meantime, police are advising residents who go on vacation to stop by the MP station and fill out a vacancy card.

Police will make frequent stops and walk around empty homes while soldiers are gone.

"The MP's are working hard to make sure these crimes don't continue," Snow said. "We all know the importance of feeling safe here and are determined to maintain a sense of security for our residents."

Turn to God during good times

Jesus is the answer in game of life

Chaplain (Maj.) Mark A. Mitera
1st Battalion, 38th Infantry Regiment

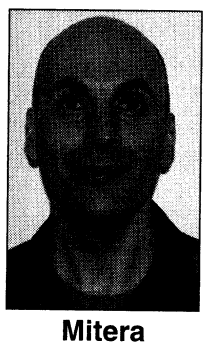
The Bible speaks clearly that God is love (1 John 4:16), which means that God is for you; he's not against you.

If this is true, why do so many people ignore God when their lives are relatively free of catastrophe?

The answer is that they avoid him because of fear. They ask, what might happen if I really allow God into my life?

I have observed that those who avoid God do so because of two common fears.

Fear No. 1: If I allow God into my life, I'm afraid that I might have to give up my fun.



The basic fear is that if I become a Christian by allowing God into my life, the party's over and I'm miserable.

We are very interested in having fun these days, and we don't want to give that up.

Television has given us a particular image of fun, telling us that life is short, so we need to make it count by having all kinds of fun.

Here is what God's word, the Bible, says about this: Doing wrong is fun for a fool, while wise conduct is pleasure to the wise (Proverbs 10:23).

REFLECTIONS

Mitera

The Bible goes on to say that God richly provides us with everything for our enjoyment (1 Timothy 6:17).

He wants you to enjoy life, and he doesn't want to take away your fun.

As you allow God into your life, you will find that real fun is having a clear conscience, having a happy, unified family, being able to laugh in church and being able to truly enjoy the world that God has made.

Fear No. 2: If I allow God into my life, I'm afraid that I will lose my freedom. The world defines freedom as a life without restraint. It defines freedom as doing what I want to do and going where I want to go without anyone telling me yes or no.

But what has this kind of freedom really given us?

Sexual freedom has given us AIDs, social diseases and abortions.

Chemical freedom has given us grade school addicts and the most chemically dependent society in the world.

Credit card freedom has given us 146 easy payments and a trillion-dollar national debt.

We are not as free as we think. The Bible teaches us that with every choice we make, there are consequences involved.

You are free to live any way you want, but once you make that choice, you are no longer free.

Jesus said, "If the Son sets you free, you will be really free!" (John 8:36).

Jesus is talking here about real liberation, not phony freedom. This kind of freedom equates to freedom from guilt, freedom from worry, freedom from bitterness, and freedom from the fear of death.

The antidote to fear is to realize how much God loves you.

John 4:18 says, "There is no fear in love. But perfect love drives out fear."

When you realize the love of God, you won't have to fear losing your fun or losing your freedom.

We need to realize how much God loves us, and then respond by making room for Him in our lives.

CHAPEL NOTES

Workers needed — The Fort Benning Chaplain's Office is seeking applications for individuals to serve in a variety of positions in the chapels on post.

These positions include musicians, choir directors, watch care workers, bus drivers and custodians. Anyone interested should call the fund manager at 545-4960 or visit the office in Room 512, Infantry Hall.

Catholic Women of the Chapel — The Catholic Women of the Chapel meet twice each month. They gather from 9:30 to 11:30 a.m. on the first Friday of the month at the Martin Army Hospital Chapel. Mass is celebrated along with a special program.

They also meet the third Monday of the month at the Infantry Center Chapel Annex from 7 to 9 p.m.

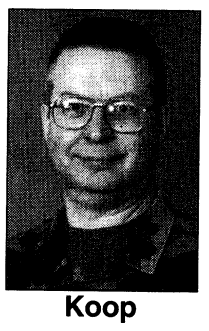
Sunday School — Protestant Religious Education classes for children and adults has resumed at White Elementary School on Sunday mornings at 9 a.m. Transportation from the housing areas is available and day care is provided. For more information call 545-4715

Catholic Religious Education — Registration for all Catholic Religious Education Programs for the 2002-03 school year is taking place after all Masses.

Programs are offered from age 3 through adult as well as Sacramental programs for Baptism, Reconciliation, Eucharist, and Confirmation; the Rite of Christian Initiation for Adults and Children High School Lectionary-based Bible study and youth ministry. Catechists and facilitators are needed.

For more information call the Religious Education Center at 545-5508. All programs will begin Sept. 29.

Parish Welcome — The Fort Benning Catholic Community will hold a Welcome Mass and Picnic at the Uchee Creek Recreation Center Lodge on Sept. 22 at 12:30 p.m.



For more information, or to help with this celebration, call 545-1452.

Express constructive criticism

Chaplain (Maj.) Raymond Koop
Family Life Ministries Center

Everyone in a relationship must be able to do at least two things to survive. A person must be able to listen to the anger and frustration of a partner without getting upset, and he or she must learn to express negative feelings in a constructive way.

Destructive styles of criticism and behavior do not work. Scripture makes this point clear. "Do not repay evil with evil or insult with insult, but with blessing, because to this you were called so that you may inherit a blessing. For, whoever would love life and see good days must keep his tongue from evil and his lips from deceitful speech." (I Peter 3:9-10)

Koop

Mind reading is destructive, for it assumes that you know what your partner intended or is thinking. If you are not sure what your mate is thinking or feeling, ask. Use "I" statements. Say what you are thinking and feeling not what you think your partner thinks or feels.

Griping is unproductive. Saying "You're a slob," assassinates your partner. Say instead: "It bothers me when things are left on the floor instead of being put away."

Catastrophic interpretations escalate arguments. "You always," "You never," and "We'll never" are loaded comments that cast blame. Your partner is not the problem. Work on problems as a team and separate the problem from your mate.

A better way to express concerns is with respect. The Bible says: "A wife must respect her husband. Husbands, in the same way be considerate as you live with your wives, and treat them with respect." One way to express concerns with respect is by saying, "When this happens (fill in the blank), at this (time, place, or situation), I feel (fill in the blank)."

Would you like to make your marriage communication better? Free counseling and support are available.

Rangers win third-straight championship

Good pitching, clutch hitting lead to victory

Sgt. William A. Graves
Bayonet assistant editor

Avenger Jose Encarnation flips to second to get a Darby's Ranger out during the game.

Avenger coach and pitcher Jerry Carter walked Darby's Ranger Tom Siter when he stepped to the plate for the first time at the post intramural softball championship game Aug. 14.

"I know about you Siter," Carter said.

Later, down 5-0, in the sixth inning, Carter didn't walk Siter, and the homerun slugger made him pay with a gargantuan two-run blast to left, breaking the Avengers' back and closing the door on any chances they had of stopping the Rangers' championship streak.

4th Ranger Training Battalion's Darby's Rangers went on to win their third-straight post championship at Knappenburger Field with a 7-0 win over the Avengers from A Company, 2nd Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment.

Confidence in a Ranger victory seemed to run high for the entire season.

"When we lost our last game in the middle of the season, I guaranteed we'd stay undefeated the rest of the season," said Ranger Joseph "Piggie" Hughes, coach and pitcher.

He is not a false prophet. The Rangers swept through the rest of the season and playoffs.

"We have pretty good team cohesion, play well in the field, and get a few big hits when we need them," said Ranger Donald Fox.

The championship game was not different.

"Piggie kept them off balance," Fox said. "He pitched really well for us. He's probably our MVP. He kept us focused and in the game."

Piggie's clutch hitting and Siter's constant round trippers have been a staple for the Rangers for years, and it's not a secret around post they are the team to beat next year, too, he said.

"It comes down to the competition," Fox said. "No one likes to lose."

The Avengers seemed to feel the same way. They kept the Rangers scoreless for the first two innings, as the trash talking flowed from both team's mouths like a gushing septic tank.

The pitchers' dual came to a sudden halt in the third when the Rangers scored five runs.

There seemed to be a glimmer of hope in the fifth inning for the Avengers when they threatened with a two-out rally, but Piggie pitched a ground out and paved the way for Siter's nail in the Avenger coffin.

"Our defense was alright — we only allowed seven runs — but our bats weren't alive," Avenger Bruce Johnson said. "Still, everyone has their head up. We feel pretty good about the season. It was good coming back tonight and beating the (Basic Combat Training Brigade) Steel Soldiers (who earned the third place trophy with a 22-5 loss.) They beat us earlier in the playoffs."

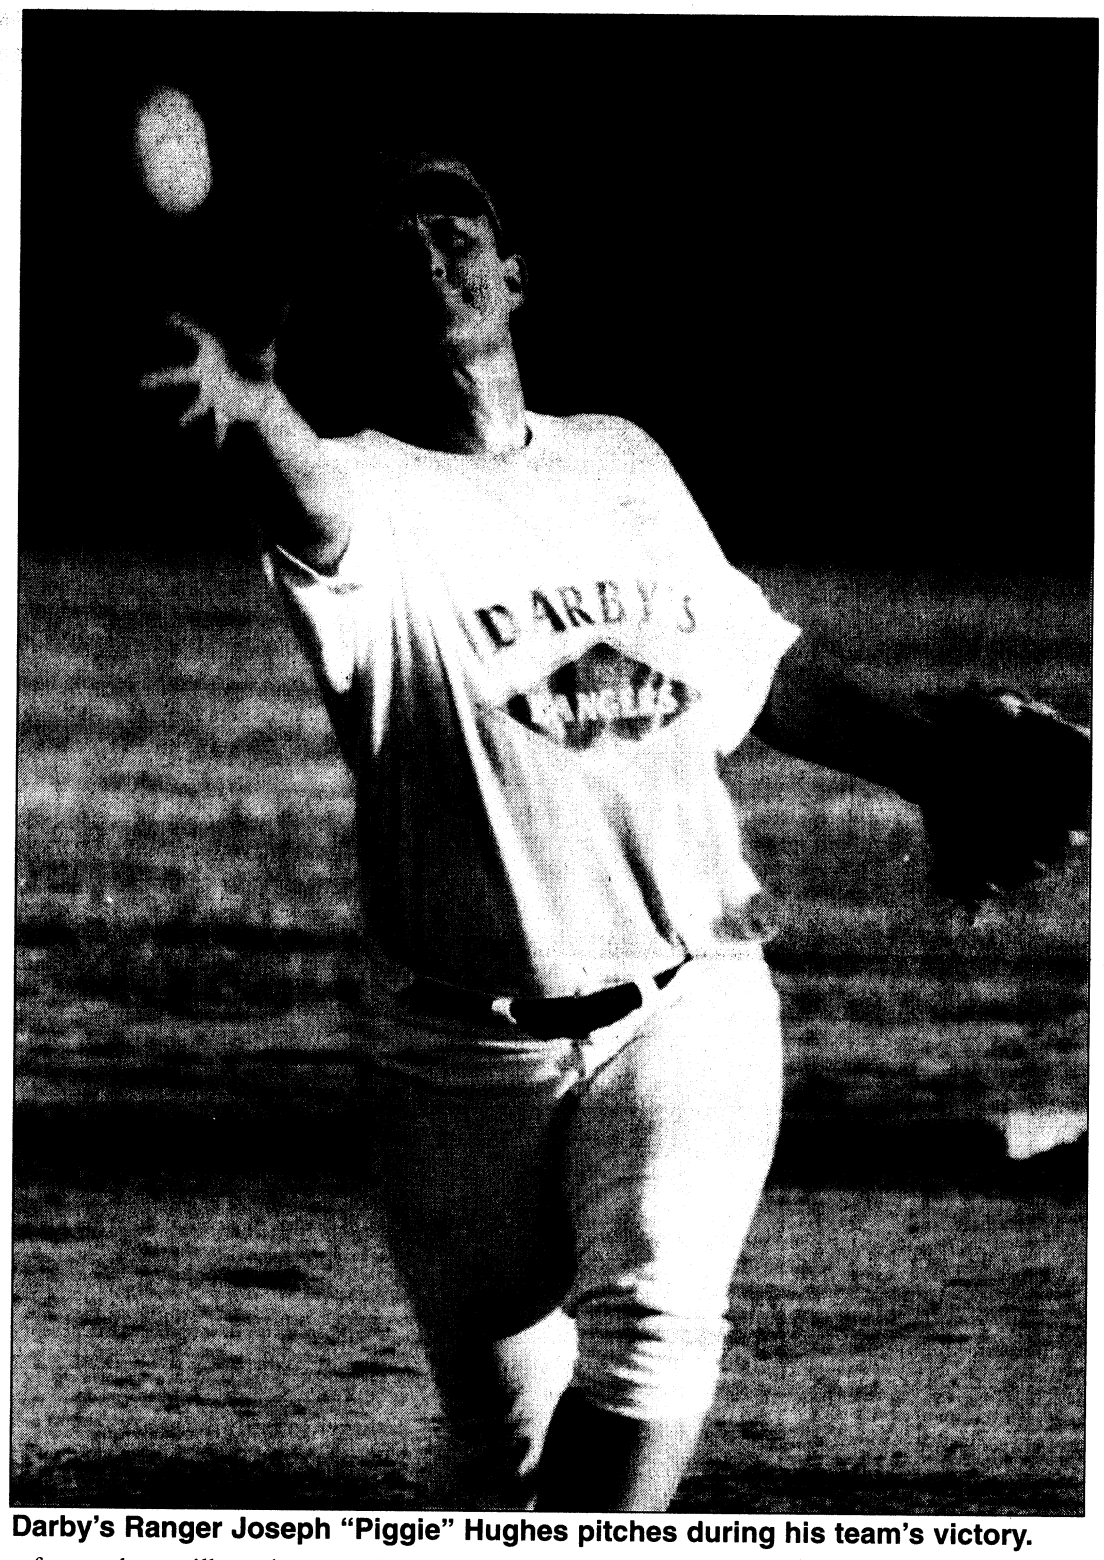
The entire team enjoyed the season, he said.

"(Playing softball) builds great cohesion and esprit de corps. We're to the four winds. We're that diverse. We teach first aid, squad tactics, land navigation and many other things on post, and as result, we don't see much of each other at work. I think we had two practices all year. (The games) brought us all together."

Fort Benning Sports' Office stepped up to the plate to help make a memorable season, Fox said.

"They ran (the softball league) well," Fox said. "The umpires were fair and consistent.

"Deployments happen no matter where you are, and those can lead to canceled games. But, as a whole, the season went well."



The Sports' Office agreed.

"This has been one of the most enjoyable seasons for the players, family members and other spectators," said Andrew Snoddy, Sports Office director.

Although mission requirements may have kept many teams from joining the league, it allowed for something unique, said Carol Gearheart, sports specialist.

"This year's format gave teams a chance to play one another from all over post throughout this season, something they otherwise would not have been able to do," Gearheart said."

"Based on their feedback, it's a format that we'll continue to use," Snoddy said,

Darby's Ranger Joseph "Piggie" Hughes pitches during his team's victory.

Next up for soldiers is intramural flag football season. The coaches' meeting is at 3 p.m. Sept. 5 at Gowdy Field, behind Briant Wells Field House.

For more information about football season, call Fred Woods at 544-1747 or 544-4511 or visit him at Kefurt Fitness Center on Kelley Hill.

Something for everyone at inaugural races

Softball players move over. There's a new sporting event coming to Columbus Labor Day weekend. The event, called InMotionX, features amateur and professional cycling, skateboarding and inline skate events.

"We are excited about this event," said Janice Davis, executive director of the Greater Columbus Sports and Events Council. "It's something that the whole family can be involved in."

The event kicks off on Saturday with the Poker Ride and corporate challenge bike races. The poker ride is a non competitive cycling event where participants receive playing cards at various stops along the route between downtown and the Riverwalk. The rider with the best poker hand at the end of the race wins $300 toward a new bike from Mike's Bikes.

Also on Saturday are kids races, a hand cycle event, as well as inline skating and skateboarding competitions. Skate ramps will be set up near 11th Street all day for individuals to use whenever there isn't a competition going on, Davis said.

Davis hopes that the skateboarding events will show the popularity of skateboarding in Columbus and possibly highlight the need for a skate park in the area.

All of the races have an entry fee, but spectating is free.

"Bring your own chair, grab a spot and enjoy the racing," Davis said.

Those interested in professional cycling will have plenty to view. Professional cyclists George Hincapie and Marty Nothstein are entered in the Criterium, the first of its kind in Columbus. Hincapie competed in the Tour de France on the U.S Postal Service team and Nothstein was a Gold Medal winner at the 2000 Olympic Games in Sydney. Cycling is one of the top sports in the U.S. that does not get much attention, Davis said.

"Everywhere you look, there are bikes attached to cars," she said. "We wanted to have something besides softball in Columbus."

Fort Benning is the site for a second race on Sunday for all categories of cyclists from amateur to professional, said Jonathan Ham, event director. The races, part of the three-day Georgia Labor Day Omnium are 52 and 78 miles. Spectators interested in seeing some of that race can catch the action starting at the intersection of Wildcat and 2nd Armored Division roads near the Sand Hill Malone Complex.

For more information, call 660-1996, or visit www.InMotionX.net.

Hunter safety course registration available

Course mandatory for hunters

Angela Sachitano
Special to the Bayonet©

186,000 acres of vast array of wildlife will attract hunters from all around the region to Fort Benning this hunting season, and the Fort Benning Hunters Safety Branch wants to make sure all involved are legally registered to hunt beforehand.

1st Sgt. Billy Hogue, 2nd Battalion, 19th Infantry Regiment, has already registered both his 11-year-old son and his 12-year-old daughter in the required Georgia Hunter Safety Course. The family spends close to two hours each night reviewing the safety material and when the kids are ready, they will take the test to become certified hunters.

"They've always wanted to go hunting since they were toddlers," Hogue said. "Safety is first and they know that. This course allows them to see up close the responsibility they will have when they hunt."

No matter what the age, hunters born on or after Jan. 1, 1961, must attend a Georgia Hunter Safety Course according to Georgia law, said Harley Chase, safety specialist for the Hunters Safety Branch on Fort Benning. Soldiers and family members who are not already certified to hunt must register for the course as soon as possible. Courses begin in September, just a few days before dove hunting season kicks off.

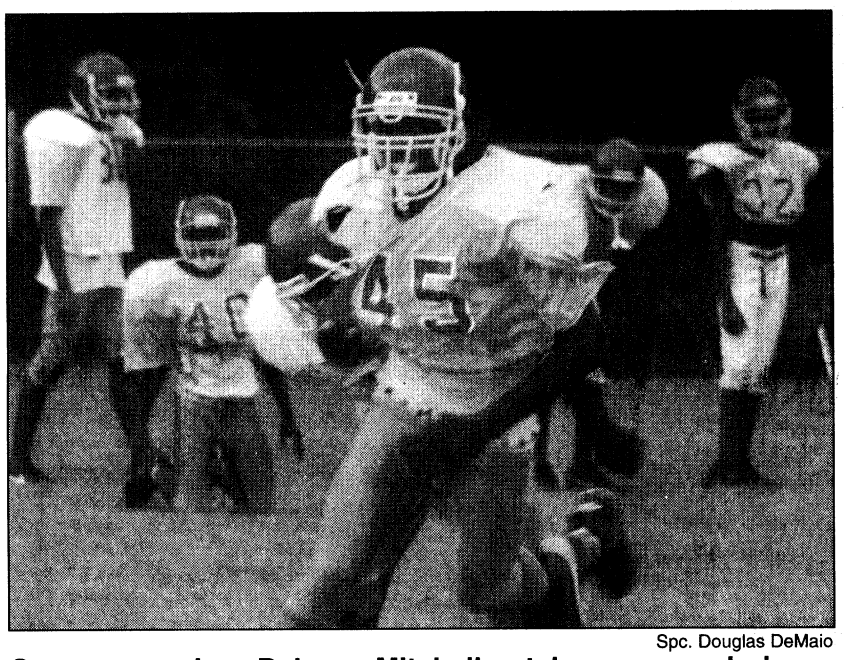
"Participants will have a choice of one of two classes available," Chase said. "One option is to pick up a CD-ROM at the outdoor recreation building on post and then review the course material on a computer in their own home. The other option is to attend a 10-hour long Hunter Safety Course in Infantry Hall."

Whatever option a hunter decides, participants are required to register ahead of time and then take an exam when they have completed the lesson.

"The most important thing is making sure everyone who hunts is aware of the safety issues and the dangers involved," Chase said. "The certification assures us those who are out there know exactly what they are doing."

"I'm excited for the kids to carry on the tradition in our family," Hogue said. "By hunting they are gaining a respect for the outdoors and the importance of controlling the animal population." Participants must achieve a 75 or higher on the exam to receive a certification card and legally hunt on post. The certification is also good in 38 other states including Alabama, Chase said

"The course covers all aspects of hunter safety including tree safety equipment and hunting in groups," Chase said. "We recommend anyone who is interested in hunting this season sign up as soon as possible for the course." Hogue hasn't wasted any time with making sure his children are on the right track. "I want to learn more about being safe so I don't hurt someone," said 12-year-old Cody Hogue. "Usually my dad lets me aim it over his shoulder, I'm excited to become better."



"The Hunter Safety Course is crucial in the development of a hunter," said Hogue, who took the course several years ago. "The state of Georgia needs to also require hunters to give back something to the land, like planting. Taking care of the land is just as important as safety."

Hunters can register for the course and the exam by calling 1-800-864-7275 or log on to www.georgiawildlife.com.

Green, gold ready to battle

Football season begins Aug. 30 for Spencer HS

Spencer High School's varsity football team is preparing for their opening game against Carver High School 8 p.m. Aug. 30 at Memorial Stadium in South Commons.

With more than half the roster filled by underclassmen, the team is young and inexperienced, but that doesn't cause much concern to Coach Collins Jones, who said the team is dynamic and has the potential to upset teams throughout the season.

"We are in top shape," Jones said. "We're an average size team with big players in certain positions, but we'll use our quickness and physical strength to compete."

The man at the helm of the offense will be junior quarterback Jerome Coverson (5' 10", 180 lbs.).

He's very versatile, Jones said. He can run the football and throw it where it needs to be, but he is still in the process of learning how to read the defense.

Senior fullback Ricky Graves (5' 10", 180 lbs.) will lead the offense charge with his powerful running style and agile foot work.

Perhaps the most influential prospect on the Owls' green and gold team is senior tightend Brad Horton (6' 2", 225 lbs.)

Horton is being recruited by more than three South Eastern Conference teams, Jones said. He's diverse and will be playing on both sides of the ball.

The defense is going to shutout Carver," Horton said.

"We want to send a message to the competitions and show everyone this year we're ready to compete," he said.

The team is excited about the season this year and said they want more than anything to compete with soldiers in attendance.

"There would be nothing better than to look in the stand and see a bunch of support from soldiers in uniform," said junior kicker Doug Sparrow (5' 10", 140 lbs.).

"The team will be entertaining and do much better than last year," Sparrow said. "All of the players are in positions they should be in to dominate a game." There is good communication between players on the field, and with repetition, they will mold into an iron curtain, he said.

Everyone will come together on the field and this team will surprise a lot of people this year, Horton said.

People don't give Spencer much credit, Sparrow and Horton said. So this year the team is going to take the credit from them from those who don't give it.

PLAN A DAY: There's Lots to See & Do

Plan your day at Pine Mountain Wild Animal Park where animals of plains, swamps, deserts, mountains and forests are brought together for your pleasure.

You will probably want to plan at least a half day adventure to see all the Park. Many visitors spend the entire day.

SPECIAL EVENTS

Enjoy special animal shows offered seven days a week during the Summer and on weekends in Spring and Fall. Shows usually start about 11a.m. and continue throughout the day. Schedules are posted daily in the main concession area. Some of our special events are:

• Zebra Bus Ride complete with guide is included with your Park ticket during our Summer Season, on the Weekends in Spring and Fall and on all Holidays except January 1st. Enjoy this fun trip and learn more about our animals and the Park. (One ride per ticket unless we have empty seats.)

• Snake Show where poisonous snakes of the Southeastern U.S. will be discussed and visitors may have the opportunity to have their picture taken with a non-poisonous snake. (Summer Only, Snake Pit)

PARK TOUR

A drive through the park will bring you face to face with exotic animals from around the world. Ride in the park's guided Zebra Bus (seasonal) or drive your own car. If you prefer to park your car but want to stay with your family, you may rent a Park Zebra van for $10 (7 passengers) or $13.50 (15 passenger) plus your Park ticket(s).

BARREL OF FUN ARCADE

Be sure to visit our Arcade, located in the Main Concession Building. Try your hand at winning a prize on one of our games of skill or allow one of the "Little Ones" to enjoy one of our kiddie rides. There are even games and ri[illegible]r adults. Bet .... You Have Fun. (Seasonal operation)

Group Events & Parties

Peter Lukken

Plan The Perfect Party

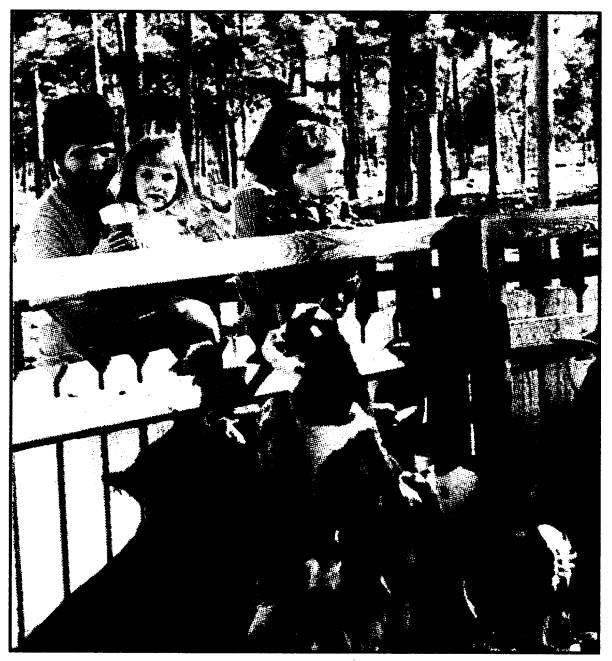
Tired of hosting your child's birthday party at the same fast-food restaurant each year? Would you rather abandon the stuffy country club scene for your parents' 25th or 50th wedding anniversary? Try something totally unique: Host your next party at Pine Mountain Wild Animal Safari!

Treat friends and family, fellow church members or co-workers to a one-of-a-kind gathering on a Wild Animal Safari! We offer special group rates for all types of gatherings, whether it's for a birthday, anniversary, retirement, Halloween or Christmas. We'll also handle family reunions, church outings or corporate events. Whatever reason you have to celebrate, we'll celebrate with you!

Simply call our Group Specialist to plan your event. Phone the Safari at 1-800-367-2751 or call locally at 706-663-8744.

GIRAFFE GRILL

When you visit the Safari, plan a meal at THE GIRAFFE GRILL. There's great food at reasonable prices. Try one of our specialty combos. From the "Rhino Spread" (for the hardy eater) to the "Petite Parrot" (for the small eater). We serve only top quality food. No Soy Burgers Allowed! From 100% Beef Franks to all white meat Chicken Fingers to Grade A Burgers plus a wide selection to fit everyone's taste. We know you will find our food to be "Head and Shoulders Above Other Amusement Park Food!"



Peter Lukken

MEET SHORTY

Since the Stork delivered Shorty the Giraffe our Safari mascot has made numerous appearances at the Safari and throughout the state. He's delighted hundreds of kids and adults as well with his crazy giraffe antics! If you see Shorty be sure you say "Hello". You may wish to have your picture taken with him.

Meet the Babies where a park representative will teach you about the animals while giving you opportunity to pet and take pictures of these baby animals. Animal babies vary with seasons and babies available. (Baby Land U.S.A. or picnic areas.)

PICNIC AREA

Picnic tables are handy for park visitors who wish to prepare and bring their own meals, but remember - no grills are allowed for guests to cook outdoors. (This would pose a possible fire hazard for our animals.)

WELCOME to the Wild Animal Safari,

Your Gateway to Adventure

Welcome to the Wild Animal Safari at Pine Mountain. We mark our 11th birthday in 2002 and look forward to you joining our year-long celebration.

We've seen remarkable growth and continued success since the Safari gates were opened on June 29, 1991. We've come to love and appreciate the creatures, both large and small, that roam this 500-acre preserve.

We've stayed by the side of mama animals, waiting with them and then assisting as they gave birth to a baby or a litter of babies. We've learned the language of the elk's bugle and the bobcat's cry. We've bottle-fed baby bear cubs and rocked little leopards to sleep. We've raised ducks and deer, camels and cougars, bison and boars, and more.

And all the while, we've watched Safari visitors enter our gates to embark on adventures they remember for a lifetime.

Some of our greatest memories are of watching the delight on our visitors' faces as they encounter the animals. Nothing can compare with the sparkle in their eyes as they see a baby zebra feed from its mom for the first time, or a giraffe lower it's long neck to stare at them, or a bunch of baby bear cubs nibbling on each other's ears. It is amazing that, even after 10 years on the job, each day here is still exciting and fulfilling.

The year 2001 was a phenomenal one for us with park attendance at an all-time high. We added a new Big Cat Habitat, our biggest and best exhibit to date. We gained media exposure throughout the state of Georgia with numerous TV and radio show appearances. We added additional vans to our rental fleet. And, we provided more educational programs outside the Safari than ever before, including shows for kids at both public and private schools throughout Atlanta and West Georgia.

Our goal for the future is to continue to strive for a better life for our animals, thereby continuing to provide a quality experience for our visitors. You can help us do this by taking a moment to share your comments or concerns when you sign our Guest Register.

Or come talk with us. We have an open door policy and at least one of us is here almost every day. Come see us anytime you need to and feel free to share suggestions for Safari improvements.

In the past decade, we've watched our animal family grow with births and additions each year. We look forward to more births, more babies and more beaming smiles from you and your family as you become closer to our animal family here.

It is our promise to you that we will continue to enrich the lives of these precious animals, just as they continue to enrich ours.

Keepers of the Gate, Mike & Jason

THE PARK: From Idea to Reality

By Jackie Kennedy

Many visitors to Pine Mountain Wild Animal Park ask owner Ron Snider how the exotic animal wonderland came to be.

Ron Snider, successful owner of Southern Ambulance in LaGrange, Georgia, retired from building ambulances on January 1, 1986. Beginning then, he and wife Vivian spent the next three years traveling all over the world. Their desire was to see the animals of the earth.

In their travels they flew into isolated areas aboard single-engine airplanes or helicopters, landed float planes in rivers, hiked through the wilderness, trekked up mountains, camped out in tents and - through it all - managed to see some of the most magnificent creatures that walk the earth in their natural habitat.

While they would never trade those journeys, the Sniders agree that there was a downside. Vivian doesn't care for flying but had to in order to see those sights. And while most visits were considered safe, there were times when the Sniders grew concerned over unrest in certain locales. The State Department often warned tourists they were taking risks in some countries during troublesome times.

Back home in Pine Mountain after their three-year tour, the Sniders often reminisced of their journeys.

One day they were engaging in such talk when Vivian candidly remarked: "It sure would be wonderful if there was some place around here where you could see all those animals, a wilderness area close to home...We ought to just do that in Pine Mountain."

The couple laughed and changed the conversation.

But a few days later, it came back up. And the next day, it came back up again. And each time they talked about it, the notion became more serious.

The deciding factor came when their son, Curt, dropped by for a heart-to-heart talk with his parents.

For years, Curt had worked for his father's ambulance business and often his sales position required him to travel out-of-state. On this day, he told his parents: "You know, I've been travelling all my married life. I want to be home with my wife and two children."

The Sniders told their son they had been discussing the notion of opening a wild animal park and Curt thought it was a great idea. "At that moment, we decided we'd do it," says Ron Snider. "We came out here the next day and started building."

The Sniders designed and built everything at the park with their own work crews. Ron and Vivian had visited animal parks and game ranches all over the world and knew what it took. And their love for animals often led the way.

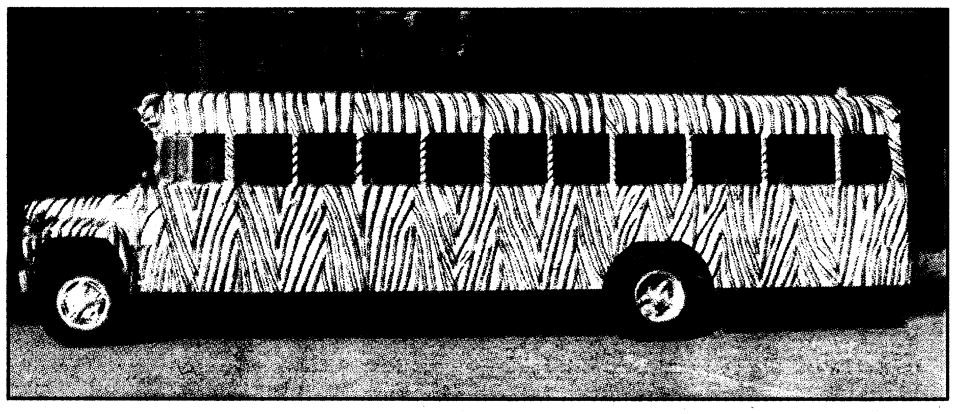
The couple's granddaughter came to work in the park office and together she and Curt handled most park operations during the early years, with assistance from Ron and Vivian.

It's a family business in the biggest way, according to Ron who says even the younger grandchildren know most of what there is to know about the park animals - their names, species, eating habits, etc.

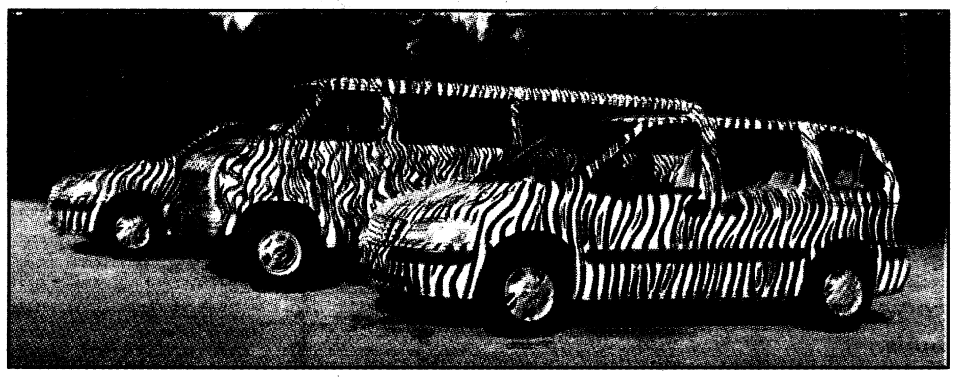
A family business that caters to families, Pine Mountain Wild Animal Park was conceived in conversation and has blossomed into a reality that provides the unique opportunity to see exotic animals from the world over in one central location.

RENT ME . . .

Wild Animal Safari offers a wide range of items for rent to make your stay more comfortable and enjoyable.



You can rent a Zebra Bus (with advance reservation), complete with driver-guide, for only $40.00 per trip through the Drive Thru Section of our Park. The buses vary slightly in seating capacity but most can seat 44 adults or more children according to size.



If your group is smaller you may wish to rent one of our Zebra vans. The vans come in two sizes. Our 7 passenger van rents for $10.00 per hour and our 15 passenger van rents for $13.50 per hour. You drive yourself.

We also rent wheelchairs for only $3.00 and Safari Jeep Strollers for $4.00, so that you might better enjoy your trip through Old McDonald.

Remember you can always use your own vehicle, wheelchair or stroller. These items are offered for your convenience and enjoyment only.

*Prices do not include Georgia State Sales Tax.

Your Safari Survival Guide

More than one million guests have visited this 500 acre wild animal preserve since it opened in 1991. Hundreds of species are represented and more than 1,000 baby animals have been born here.

This park is unlike a zoo, where animals are confined in small, man-made quarters. Most of the animals here roam freely throughout the countryside, mixing and mingling with one another, grazing and watering as they would in their original environment.

The Park consists of a drive-through section, Old McDonald's Farm, a Petting Zoo, Baby Land USA, the Monkey House, Serengeti Gift Shop, Giraffe Grill, two picnic areas, lakes and concession areas.

The Park Staff works hard to ensure your safety, but you must help by strictly following Park Rules. The animals are wild and failure to follow these rules could result in injury to you or damage to your vehicle. Remember, you enter the Park and feed animals at your own risk. The Park is not responsible and can not control the animals or your failure to abide by all rules. Please use "Good Common Sense."

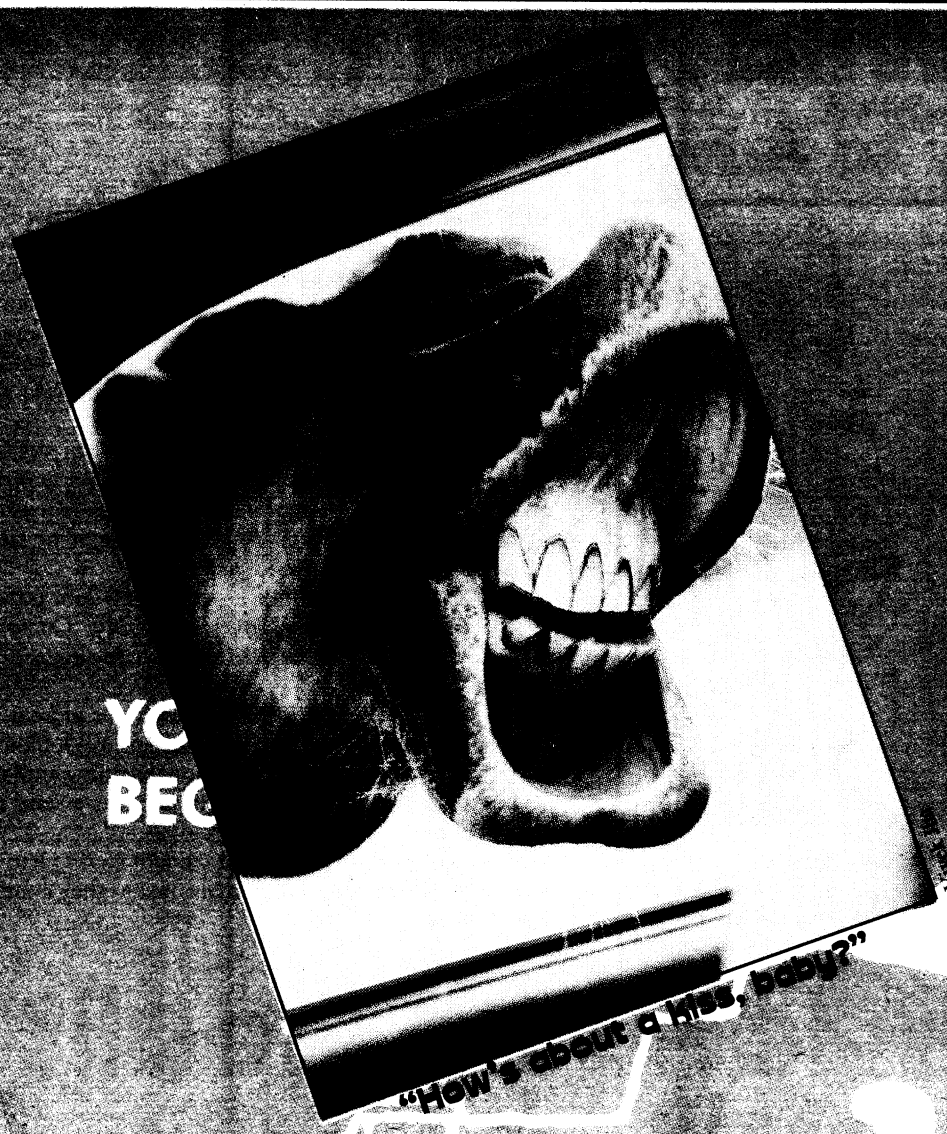
About Our Name

While the park was being built much thought was given in selecting the proper name. Since the Park was located just outside Pine Mountain and Pine Mountain was a vacation destination, it was decided that Pine Mountain should be included in the name. Since the Park would house wild animals, it seemed reasonable to include the words "Wild Animal" in our name. The word Park was added to give visitors an idea of the type of setting. Therefore the name "Pine Mountain Wild Animal Park" was born. We thought we had the perfect name. As the Park became a reality, guests started arriving and our advertising program began, we learned a few lessons.

First, to our surprise, not everyone knew about Pine Mountain or where it was located. In fact Georgia has more than one Pine Mountain.

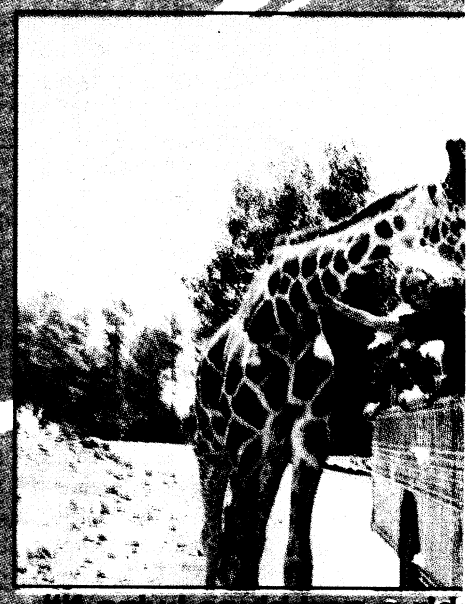
Second, the word Park to many customers signified a small place with swings, picnic tables and a few goats and sheep, maybe even a monkey. Some how we hadn't told people "we had a 500 acre preserve with hundreds of animals from every continent of the world or that they could drive through a wilderness area and see the animals roaming free in a natural habitat."



Third, our name was so long it would not fit on billboards and signs. The "Perfect" Name, Ha!

Now we didn't discover this information overnight. It took about 2 1/2 years before we decided that we needed a change. The question was, How do you make a name change when you have spent thousands of dollars on advertising and 100's of thousands of people had been to the Park and many more had seen our advertising and knew our name? NOT EASY! That's an understatement.

We decided our best way out was to use two names for the Park. "Pine Mountain Wild Animal Park" would be our official name and "Wild Animal Safari" would be a trade name.



The conclusion of this story is . . . If you see either name, you know we are talking about the same place. Hopefully "Wild Animal Safari" will better tell who we are to our new visitors and will help on our billboards. Just remember, what ever name you use, it means fun and excitement in a family environment in a country setting.

What is a Liger?

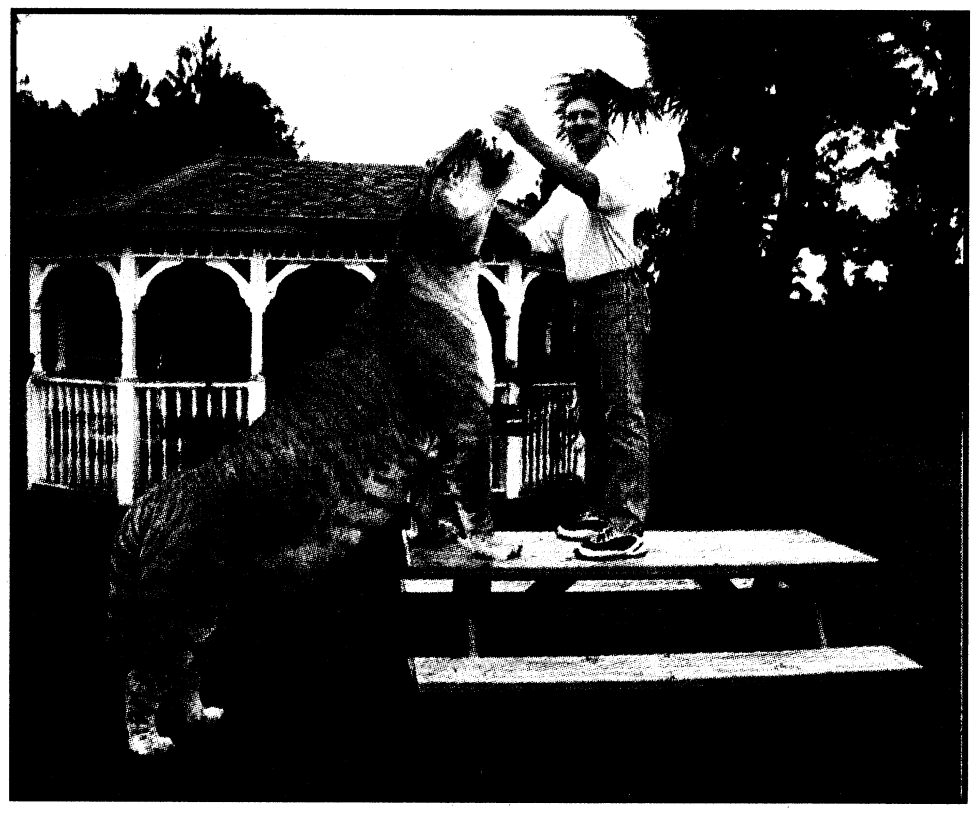
The Liger Story

If you are reading this article or visiting the Park for the first time, the odds are great that you have never heard of , much less seen a Liger. Some of you may not even believe there is such an animal or that a cat could grow this large.

Park founder, Ron Snider, saw his first Liger some 12 years ago when he was building the Park and purchasing the animals.

Snider was visiting an animal dealer in Texas when he saw the largest cat he had ever seen. "That cat was huge and very gentle," says Snider. "I immediately tried to buy him for the Park. But the dealer wouldn't sell him. I first thought this was a ploy to raise the asking price (very common in animal trades) but I soon learned that the Liger was so rare that the dealer wouldn't sell at any price. I left the facility very disappointed because I knew everyone would enjoy seeing such a majestic animal."

Snider never gave up hope that one day he would own a Liger and could display him at the Park for all to see. The search went on for several years with no results.



A new plan was conceived! The Park would breed to produce a Liger. A Liger is a cross between a male Lion and female Tiger. The question was, how do you achieve this? After much research and talk with animal professionals, Snider decided to raise a baby African black maned Lion (Barney, born at the Park) with a baby Bengal Tiger (Troupette, donated by a zoo). Since both were babies, they became buddies at once.

One of our New Baby Ligers "Samson"

Then the wait began to see if they would produce a Liger. As the years went by and no baby Liger was born, Auburn University Veterinarian School was called in to assist. It was determined that both Barney and Troupette were fertile. So why didn't we have any baby Ligers? It was nearing Winter and the decision was made to wait until Spring or early Summer before trying artificial insemination or in vitro fertilization.

Our luck finally changed ... Just weeks before the procedures were to begin, Troupette gave birth to our first Liger cubs. Everyone was so excited. She had two very healthy male cubs (born in May, 1999). They can be seen in the drive thru section at "Cat Condo". These cats will continue to grow until age 5 or 6. When they should weigh close to 1,000 pounds. They are already larger than their father or mother.

A Liger is a cross between a male Lion and female Tiger. It is the largest of the cat family and will weigh up to 1,000 pounds. It stands about 11 to 12 feet tall when standing on its hind legs.

The Liger is believed to inherit the best strengths of both species. This is similar to breeding a horse with a donkey where you receive a mule.

There is conflicting information about what percentage of Ligers may be sterile or fertile. In a 10 year Park study we hope to answer this as well as other questions concerning this great cat.

The Liger face looks more like a Lion and the base color (while it varies with individuals) is closest to the Lion. The Tiger stripes are visible and the white markings on the back of their ears is a Tiger trait.

If the father had been a male Tiger and the mother a female Lion, it would have been called a Tigon and would have been smaller than either mom or dad.

SERENGETI GIFT SHOP

When you come to our Animal Park, you're going on a world wide Safari. It's a photo shoot you're not going to believe. You'll have memories of a lifetime, so make sure you have your camera and plenty of film. Both are available in our Gift Shop along with gifts and souvenirs for everyone. Prices range from $0.25 to several hundred dollars.

Gifts range from lucky rabbits' feet or back scratchers to hand painted items. Or select animals (not live ones) for your very own Wild Animal Safari. We have most sizes and species.

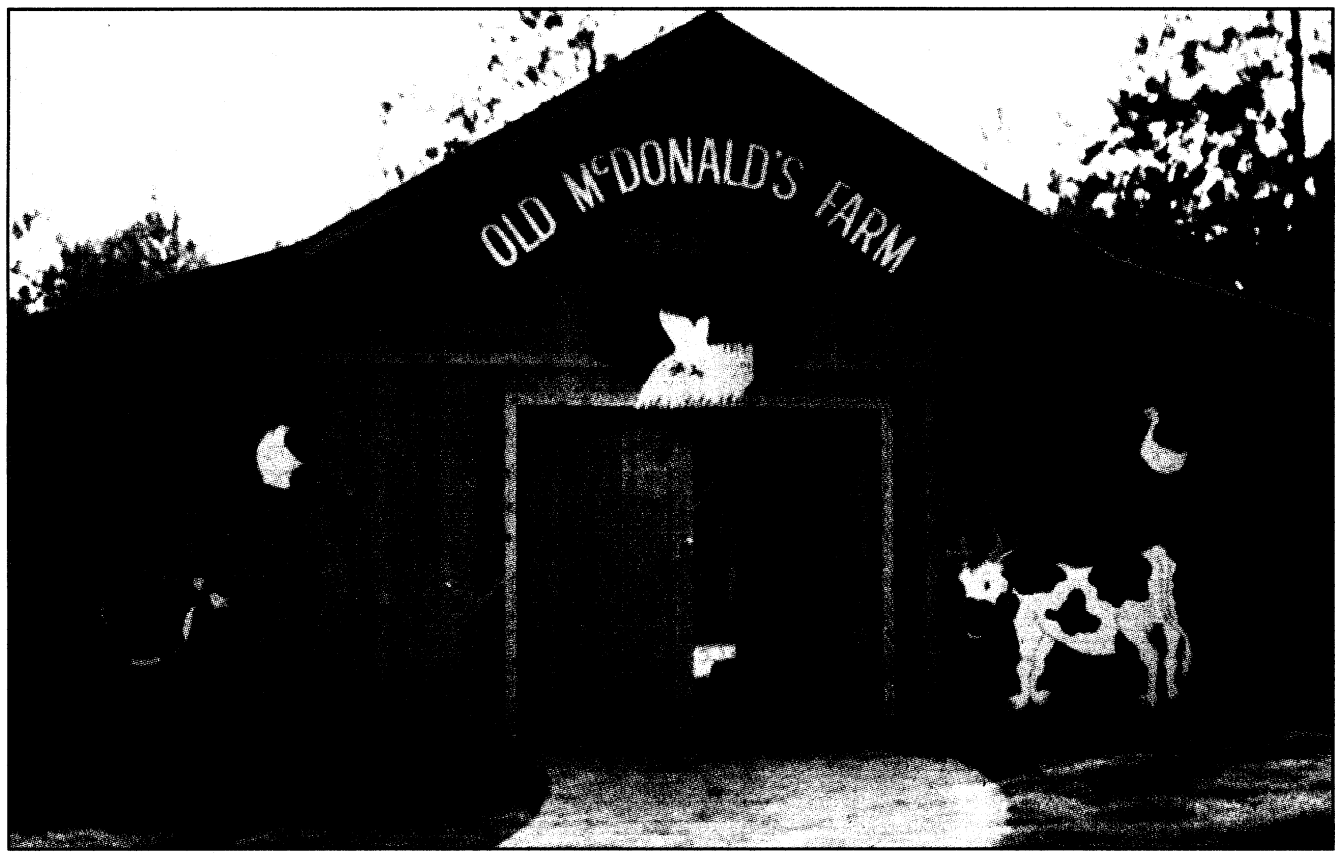
There are many logo products, from Tee-shirts to mugs to spoons to thimbles --- and the list goes on. Hopefully we have your favorites.

We also have the unusual, such as deer antlers, Indian products, peacock feathers, porcupine quills and authentic African wood carvings.

The variety is endless with too many interesting items to mention by name, so be sure and allow enough time to shop and browse our Gift Shop. You'll find our prices very attractive!

To See & Do In The Area

Located just one hour southwest of Atlanta, the town of Pine Mountain lies at the foothills of the Appalachian Mountains and captures all the charm of a small Southern town, all the excitement and amenities of a city and all the friendly faces you can imagine just waiting to share their area with visitors just like you.



Known for its quaint shops, history and Southern cooking, the area is a vacationer's dream for relaxing and enjoy the past.

The Pine Mountain area has emerged from its days as a farming community into a primary tourism location, greatly due to the efforts of President Franklin D. Roosevelt and Callaway's Cason Callaway.

At first glance, Pine Mountain appears to be another small, Southern town. But look closer and you'll find that every building in downtown is occupied and every store is brimming over with merchandise. These shops are locally owned with some of the merchandise made by local craftsmen, artists and artisans.

Besides enjoying the Pine Mountain Wild Animal Park, there is beautiful Callaway Gardens, a 14,000 acre preserve, Roosevelt State Park (Georgia's largest), Roosevelt' Little White House in Warm Springs, Georgia (where the town has been restored and features many shops and restaurants). Pine Mountain also has many other sights and attractions plus Columbus, Georgia is only a few miles away.

OLD McDONALD HAD A FARM

OLD McDONALD IS A MUST SEE!

Welcome to Old McDonald Farm!

- You will delight at the many marvels of nature's finest in our Walk-Thru Section. Enjoy the Petting Zoo, Alligator Alley, Monkey House, Babyland USA, Bear Circle, Wolf's Den, Georgia Wildlife Museum, Snake Pit (Summer Only), Raccoon Resort, and many more wildlife exhibits.
- Daily Shows take place each day during our Summer Season and on Weekends during the Spring and Fall Seasons at Old McDonald. See Daily Show schedule for times.
- For refreshments, film, cameras and special baby food, visit our snack bar located in the Old McDonald Section. (Summer Only)

PETTING ZOO

Our Petting Zoo features a larger area and more animals. It is designed to allow even our smallest visitors to pet and feed the animals and protects the visitor from animals jumping up on them. Visitors circle the outside as animals circle the inside. Special animal food, for the babies, will be available during the summer months. We know you will enjoy this section.

BABY LAND USA

Be sure you visit, Baby Land. You'll be able to sit and watch baby animals run and play. What kind of babies? Maybe baby bears that will be running around, climbing trees or taking a dip in their pool. Maybe our wolf pups will be racing around or yelping at each other. Or perhaps, lion cubs will be learning to roar and loving to purr.

Our babies vary according to the season, so there's no telling which we'll have when you come, but be sure and check us out.

Photo Sessions will be available at scheduled times throughout the day. (seasonal)

GEORGIA WILDLIFE MUSEUM

The Museum features animals native to the State of Georgia. You may be surprised that Georgia has so many native animals, birds, snakes and fish. It is impossible for us to feature all native species so we have carefully selected about 100 for your study and viewing pleasure. We are proud that none of the animals featured were killed for museum mounting (please note signs at entrance).

There are 44 dioramas featured. We believe you will enjoy each one. A sign is furnished with each to help identify the species. We hope it will be an educational experience for both young and old and for native Georgians as well as our visitors from around the globe.

MPs warn drivers to be safe

Slow down, avoid speeding ticket, accident

Angela Sachitano
Special to the Bayonet©

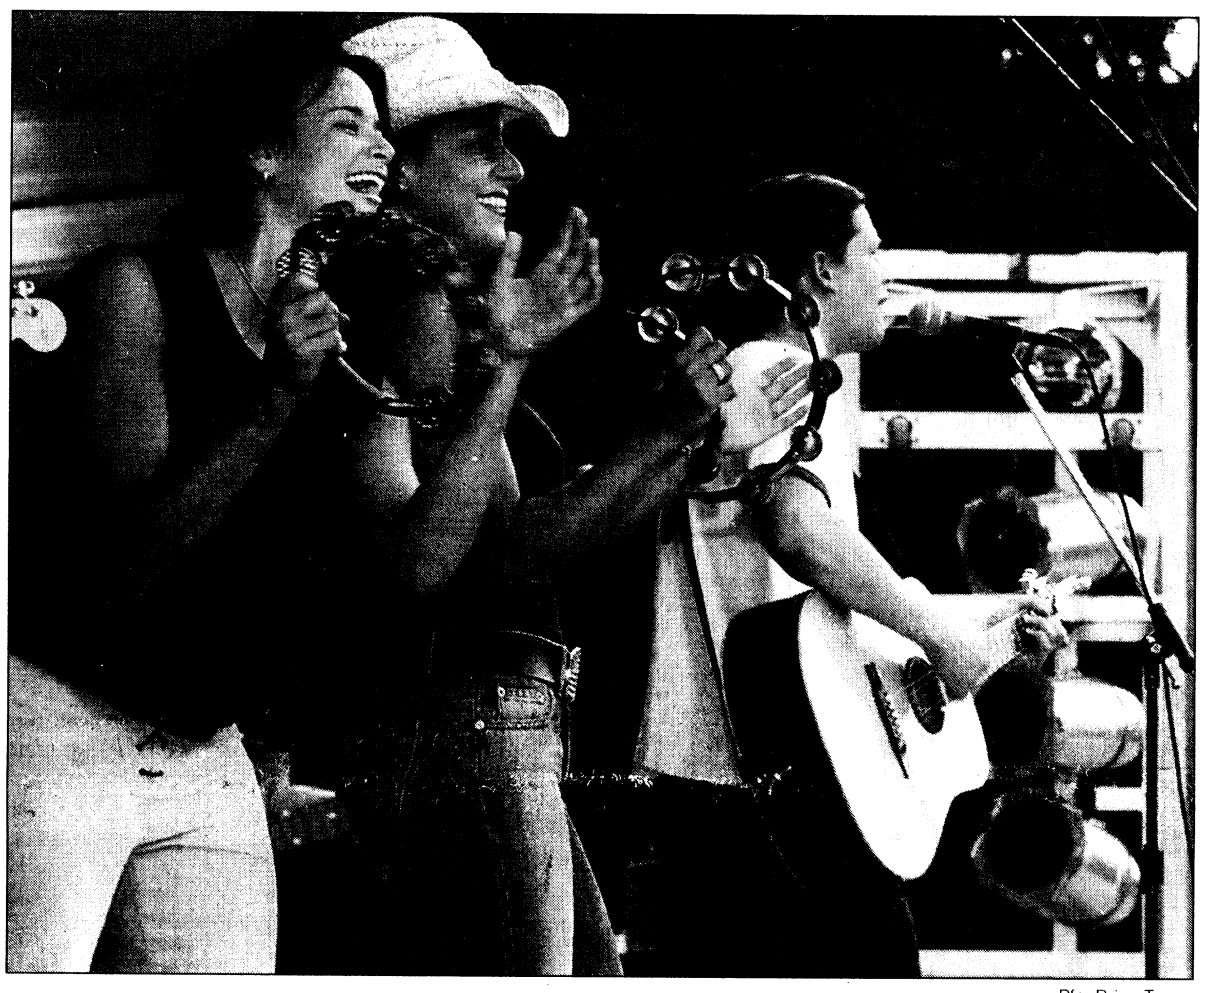
"It's pretty much a given if we pull someone over for speeding they are going to get a ticket."

Staff Sgt. Kevin Sparks
Traffic NCOIC for Fort Benning

People in a rush this Labor Day weekend may want to think twice before speeding on or around Fort Benning.

Police will be in full force on all Fort Benning roads, including Interstate 185 and Highway 27, and they aren't taking any excuses for breaking the law on this holiday weekend, said Staff Sgt. Kevin Sparks, Traffic NCOIC for Fort Benning's Military Police.

"It's pretty much a given if we pull someone over for speeding they are going to get a ticket," Sparks said.



"Holiday travelers like to think they can bend the rules, but that won't be the case with our MPs."

MPs predict Labor Day weekend will be among the highest weekends of the year for traffic infractions and vehicular deaths around Fort Benning.

"Two years ago a pick-up truck hydroplaned and crashed into oncoming traffic, and the year before that a 3-year-old girl was killed because of people being careless on the roads," Sparks said. "Safety is the responsibility of all drivers."

United by the memories of Sept. 11's heroes and victims, the Fort Benning community will come together on York Field and Sand Hill to pay tribute to those men and women.

Army to help chains of command with TIM

Transformation provides more time for quality of life

Pfc. Brian Trapp
Bayonet staff

The Transformation of Installation Management, designed to manage Army installations to create a more efficient and effective corporate management structure for Army installations worldwide, will open its headquarters Oct. 1 in Arlington, Va.

The transformation will geographically align installation management in seven regions worldwide.

The regions are:

- Southeast: Fort McPherson, Atlanta, Ga.
- Northeast: Fort Monroe, Hampton, Va.
- Southwest: Fort Sam Houston, San Antonio, Texas.
- Northwest: Rock Island Arsenal, Rock Island, Ill.
- Europe: Heidelberg, Germany
- Pacific: Fort Shafter, Honolulu, Hawaii
- Korea: Yongsan, South Korea

Fort Benning falls under the Southeast region.

After extensive analysis, these locations were selected to minimize turbulence on the civilian work force and take advantage of facilities and skilled personnel available in the major Army command elements stationed at these locations.

"This means we'll be closer to someone who can help us with problems," said Col. Joe Torres, garrison commander.

The Transformation of Installation Management is part of the Army transformation; it better supports the mission commander by providing better base operations support and base operations dollars, he said.

"This means we'll be closer to someone who can help us with problems."

Col. Joe Torres
Garrison commander

Rationalization of these services will establish equitable standards of service at all Army installations worldwide, streamline the flow of resources and improve the delivery of services to commanders, soldiers and their families, according to a press release from the secretary of the Army.

House of Heroes to help widow keep home

Volunteers to make home repairs

Bridgett Siter
Special to the Bayonet©

Retired Sgt. 1st Class John VonCloedt died May 31, leaving behind his wife of nearly 50 years and a house that's fallen into disrepair.

"But it's all I've got left. I want to hold on to it," said 89-year-old Roena VonCloedt, who suffers from poor circulation and loss of vision.

Old friends drop in to check on Roena at her Oakland Park home, and a neighbor vacuums her floors and takes her to the doctor. But the big chores — the painting and trimming and scrubbing — are beginning to pile up. A botched roof job three years ago resulted in a cracked and leaky ceiling and a carpet that reeks of mildew.

"John couldn't do anything. His heart was bad, and I can't take care of it like I used to," said Roena, who has no children. "But I don't want to give up my home."

She won't have to, if Ben Anderson has anything to say about it.

An engineering technician for the Housing Division, Directorate of Facilities Engineering and Logistics, Anderson is spearheading a team of nearly 15 volunteers

PERSONAL COURAGE

Police display it daily

Pfc. Chris Stephens
Bayonet staff

"Face fear, danger or adversity (physical or moral)."

The final Army value in the LDRSHIP system is personal courage. This value teaches soldiers to put their buddies' life ahead of their own.

However, personal courage goes beyond soldiers. I know firefighters and other public safety officials make sacrifices, but I want to write about police officers.

My dad is a police officer and perhaps the most influential person in my life. Hearing stories of things that happened to him on a daily basis made me wonder if that were to happen again, would he come back alive?

I never knew when I told him goodbye every night before he left for work if I would ever see him alive again.

Police officers have a very dangerous job. They are the targets of many people.

COMMENTARY

Sometimes even their children are the targets of people.

Last year, 228 officers were killed in the line of duty, including the 70 officers that died at the World Trade Center. The 228 deaths represent the sixth deadliest year in the history of the United States.

Since I was young, I knew of the dangers my dad faced. He knew them too. Still, he went out every night and did his job and took pride in it.

It must have taken all my father's courage to go out onto dangerous streets every night to ensure the safety of the community. But he did it because that is what he loves to do.

There are many officers across the United States who gave their lives for the sake of the community and their country.

One officer is John Perry of the Port Authority Police in New York City.

Perry was putting in his retirement papers at the NYC Police Headquarters when the first plane hit the World Trade Center.

Not thinking about himself, Perry rushed the few blocks to the Trade Center Towers and had the courage to run up the stairs to help out with what he could.

Then the tower collapsed ... Perry did not make it out alive.

My father always told me the hardest thing for a police officer to deal with is the loss of a fellow officer. No matter what state they're from, their background or the color of their skin, it hurts when you lose a comrade.

No matter where I am or what I am doing, when I see an officer, I greet him and shake his hand.

The police ensure safety, both yours and mine, in the community without even thinking about it.

Thank you to all of the police officers just like my dad and Officer John Perry.

Reigning queen preps for sale

Bridgett Siter
Special to the Bayonet©

I am the reigning Southeastern United States Yard Sale Queen. Self-appointed.

If you want to wrangle the crown from my head, you'll have to best me in the talent competition. You're chance is coming, but I'm warning you, I've got yard saling down to an art.

Just last weekend I competed in The World's Longest Yard Sale, a 400-mile marathon of wall-to-wall roadside junk, piled beneath plastic awnings and strung from sagging clotheslines.

It was grueling, but I can say I've been there, done that. I didn't get the T-shirt though. No self-respecting scavenger would fork over $10 for a T-shirt that reads, "I survived The World's Longest Yard Sale."

You don't have to go quite that far to bag a really great bargain. They can be found in your own back yard — or your neighbor's front yard actually — at the Postwide Yard Sale Sept. 7.

Some of my best scavenging has taken place right here on post.

Why just a few weeks ago — Aug. 3 to be exact, I remember it well, cause it was my husband's birthday — I had one of those rare yard sale nirvana experiences. I'd bought Tom a trailer for his new motorcycle and snuck it into the driveway so he'd be surprised when he awoke. He was.

"Oh, honey, thank you, thank you, thank you," he said, or something to that affect. "Now we'll need to get a trailer hitch for the van."

"Yeah, how much are we talking about?" I asked, suddenly regretting my generosity.

"Oh, maybe a couple hundred."

I left — to go to yard sales, of course — seething. I knew I should've given him socks.

By the time I'd stopped at a few sales, I'd begun to calm down. They have that effect on me. I managed to forget the whole matter by the time I arrived at a yard sale in McGraw Manor. The man of the house stopped me as I was rifling through his junk.

"Excuse me, ma'am. I couldn't help but notice you drive a Mercury," he said. "I have a trailer hitch for a Mercury. Used it one time, to tow my car from Fort Lewis."

No way, I thought.

"How much?" I asked.

"$75. Paid about two fifty for it," he replied as he headed for his shed, where he dug out a perfectly pristine top-of-the-line Class 5 genuine Reese trailer hitch.

Hotdoggy!

OK, OK. So it's not exactly a miracle. If that doesn't impress you, I've got a dozen more stories just like it, because I am the Queen of Yard Sales.

Wanna see me in action? I'll be blazing a trail around post next Saturday. Catch me if you can.

Better yet, join me. And find out for yourself why yard sale addicts say Fort Benning's Postwide Yard Sale tops the world's longest in the battle of the bargains every time.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Resident takes exception to reader's comments

I'd like to take a moment to respond to a letter concerning the appearance of the quarters in McGraw Manor and other quarters around post.

Have you ever noticed how easy it is to bash soldiers? Usually the basher has no clue what it is like to be a soldier or they were soldiers years ago and will usually tell stories that begin with "When I was a soldier..."

Our parents told similar stories when we were kids about the horrors of walking uphill in the snow in bare feet with 60 mph winds blowing in their faces both ways to school.

Don't get me wrong — I certainly appreciate all the soldiers and their families who have come before me.

What I do take exception to is my fellow soldiers being bashed by them or their family members.

Soldiers and their families are much different now.

The economy today requires both parents to work.

This means there isn't somebody to stay home and take care of the house. Single parents have become an important part of the Army.

The Army has recognized the importance of all its families and has even created numerous agencies and policies to make family life better.

If we went back to the days of "if the Army wanted you to have a family, it would have issued you one," how long would soldiers stay in? Where would the Army get replacements? This would be a task, considering the difficulty all the services have had over the past few years making recruiting quotas.

Today's Army asks a lot of its soldiers. It wants recruits to have clean police records. It also wants them to be smarter, stronger and able to deploy with little notice for unknown periods of time.

The phrase the Army doesn't pay you to think has been replaced with the Army expects you to think.

Working late is the norm, not the exception. If they are not working late, soldiers are busy taking college classes to try to get ahead and improve themselves. After this, comes time for the family.

While the soldiers have changed, the housing hasn't.

The writer used the term "slum cities." Strangely enough, some soldiers who live there describe it the same way, but it has nothing to do with the way people keep their yards.

These quarters are old and small. At the time they were built, soldiers had only one car, if any. Soldiers are now paid a little better than they used to be, so they have a little money for that necessary second car and furniture to make their home comfortable.

By old standards, toys and patio furniture in the yard were probably not acceptable, but today it is a reality.

The Army has even admitted it needs to get out of the family housing business because it is not good at it. Contracted on-post housing is the wave of the future. One project at Fort Meade, Md., will include brand new larger quarters with garages and storage, as well as wall-to-wall carpeting. And oh by the way, the contractor there will take care of all the landscaping and yard work.

Things aren't like they used to be. If the Army wants to keep the high quality soldiers it seeks, things will probably continue to change.

Meanwhile the post's community life NCOs who do a fine job of making sure soldiers are maintaining their yards (I know, they busted me once) will continue to seek out violators of post policies.

However, the war on terrorism, a war different than any other war this country has ever fought, will go on successfully despite a few weeds, tall grass or toys left in the yard.

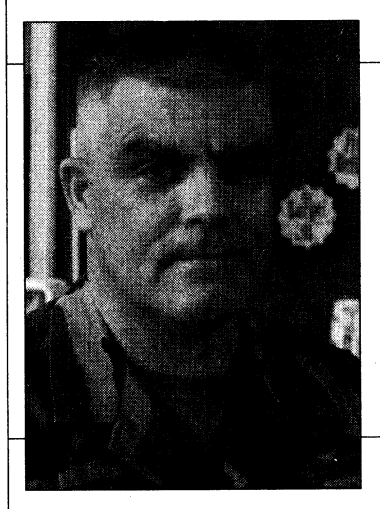
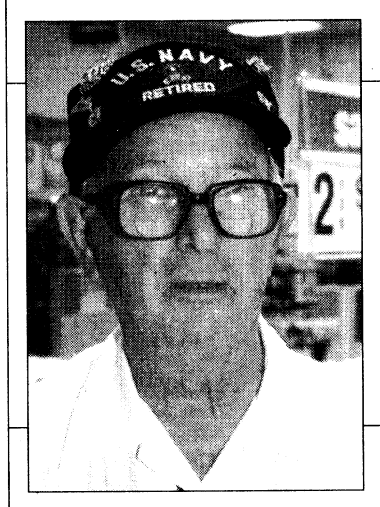
VARIOUS VOICES



What is the best deal you've every gotten at a yard sale?

Sgt. Martha Morton, U.S. Army Dental Activity — "I bought some name brand toddler clothes for 25 cents apiece."



Justine McNutt, family member — "I got a brand new crib and changing table for $50. Both together usually run for over $200."

Col. Paul Melody, 11th Infantry Regiment — "I have never bought anything at a yard sale, but I have sold some stuff. I sold children's clothing that wasn't going to be used anymore.

Casaundra Young, family member — "I got a brand new pair of shoes for $5 with the price tag still on them. The shoes were originally $25."

Retired Chief Petty Officer R.A. Stephens, Largo, Fla. — "I picked up a queen-sized bed for $1 in Seminole, Florida."

Sylvia Smith, family member — "I bought a waterfall sculpture for $2. It was was originally selling for $25."

Freedom House offers Christian atmosphere

Organization provides respite

Pfc. Chris Stephens

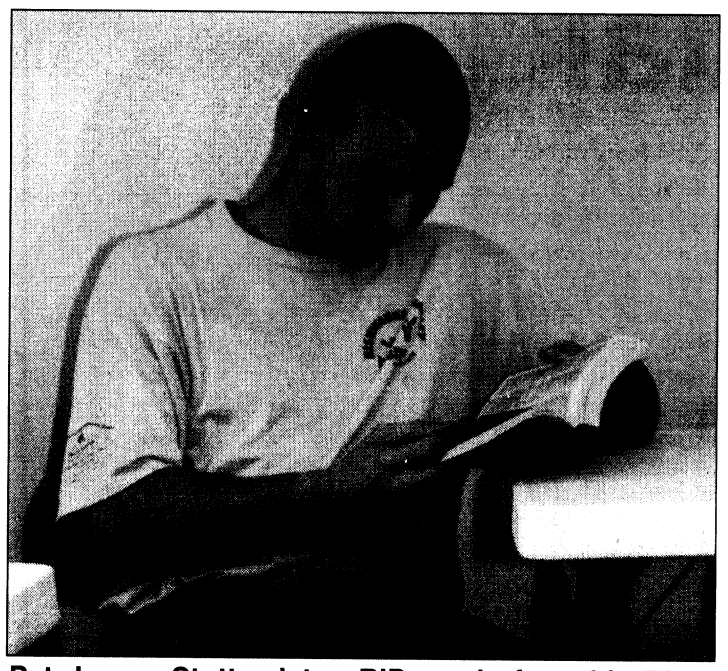
For many soldiers, being away from home is hard. They are not around the same people they are used to, which means they are around some people with different beliefs than them.

However, now there is a free place where soldiers can go to be with people who share their same beliefs and have some good old-fashioned fun, said Bob Ingram, center director for the Freedom House

The Freedom House is a Christian organization that provides a place where soldiers can have fun and learn about God.



"This is a neutral place for soldiers to meet," Ingram said. "We feel it is an outstanding place for us to minister to the military."

The Freedom House offers a living-room atmosphere with a library, game room, kitchen and prayer room.

On Friday and Saturday nights, the center makes homemade meals for soldiers. Soldiers are able to assist in meal preparation if they so choose. The meals range from pizza to spaghetti.

"We offer soldiers a safe and wholesome atmosphere where they can have a little recreation, relaxation and refreshment at no cost to them," Ingram said. "We want them to feel comfortable while they are here.

The center also distinguishes itself as having soldiers from all over the world attend the gatherings.

Pvt. Lanny Stottmeister, RIP, reads from his Bible during a devotional at the Freedom House.

"We've had soldiers from Chile, Colombia and Germany attend our meetings," Ingram said.

Each night at the center begins with greetings. After the greetings and some social time, dinner is served.

After dinner, a devotional is taught to all of the soldiers.

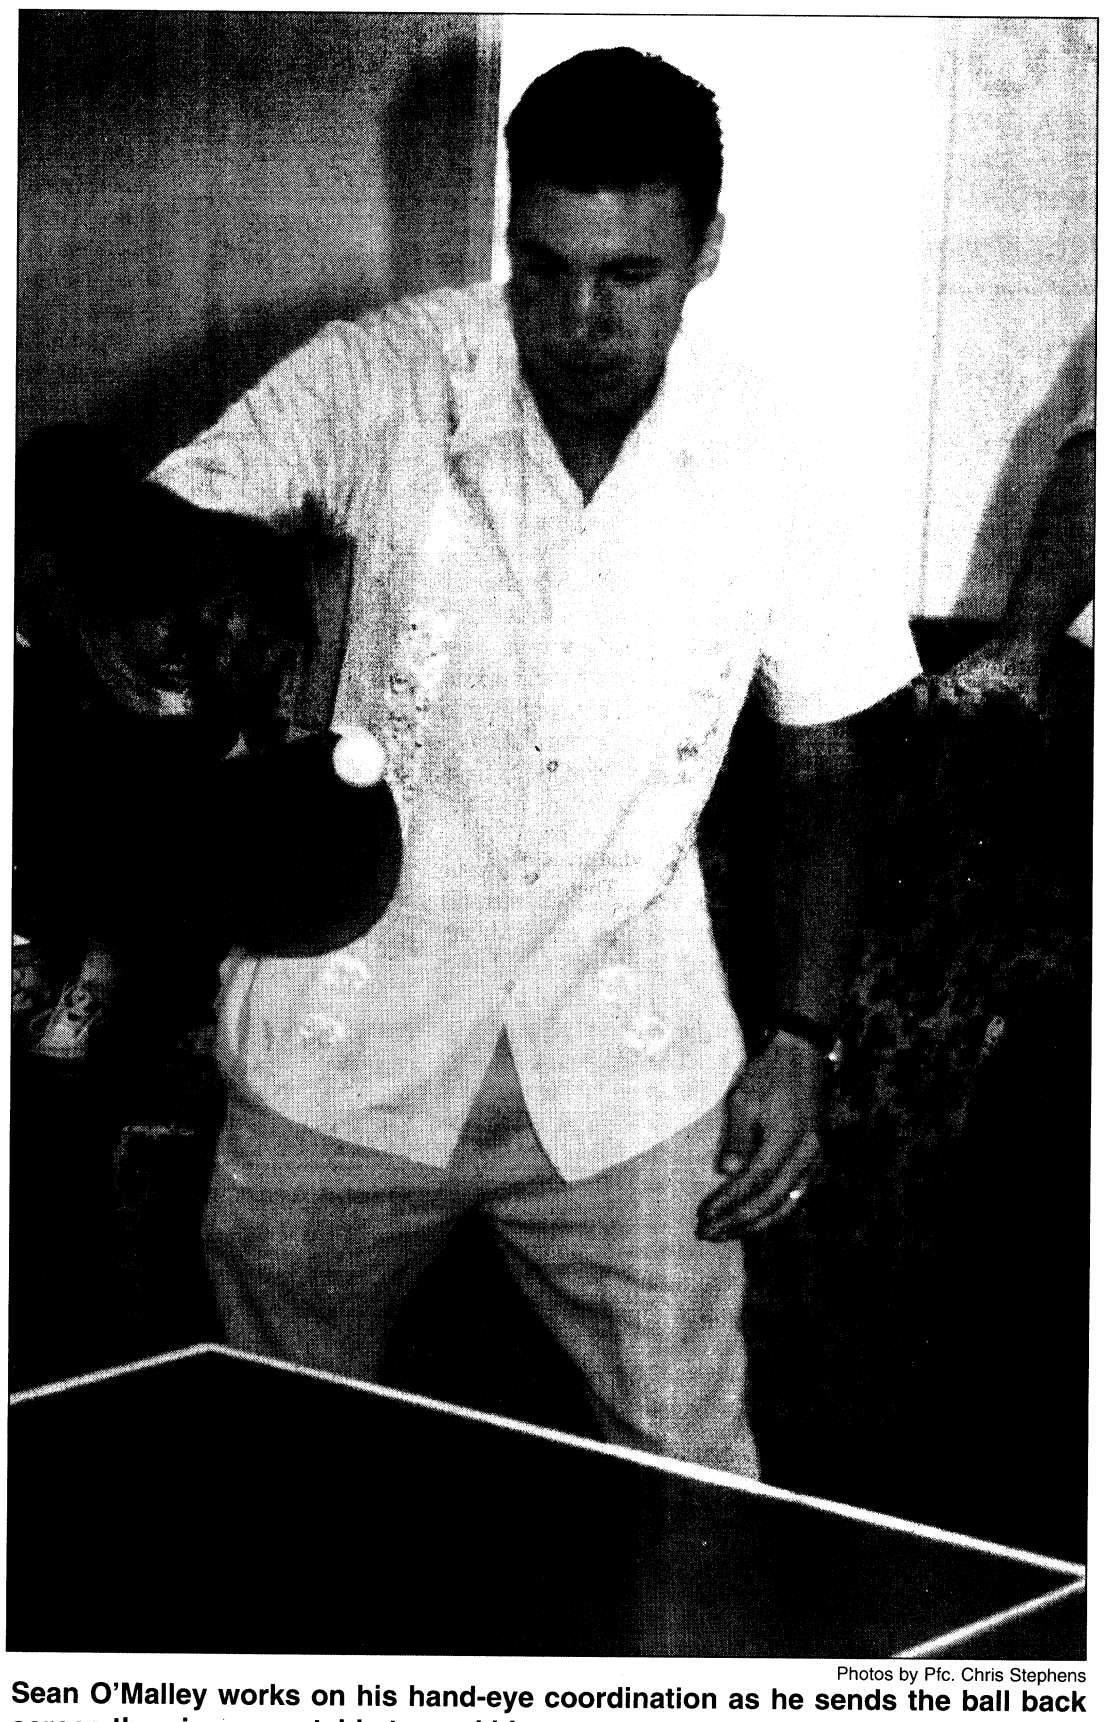
"The devotional is there to let the soldiers know what the real truth is," Ingram said. "We want to do our best to ensure that everyone who walks through our doors can hear the word of God.

"Many nights we have Spanish speaking soldiers in here from the Western Hemisphere Institute for Security Cooperation, so we do the devotionals in both Spanish and English."

Once the devotional is over, the games are brought out and the competitions start.

"This is a great atmosphere to be in," said Pvt. John Grounds, Ranger Indoctrination Program student. "It keeps me out of trouble and gives me a place to hang out with other soldiers. I don't have to worry about problems in the world."

At the end of the night, as the soldiers leave, Ingram reflects on the night's activities.



"When I get home every night, I get that feeling that I touched someone's life at the center," Ingram said.

The Freedom House is a nonprofit Christian organization whose mission is to help people learn about Christ, disciple new believers, to edify believers and strengthen the local church.

The hours of the center are from 3 to 10 p.m. Mondays, Tuesdays and Thursday; 2 to 11 p.m. Fridays with free pizza at 6:30 p.m., and from 10 a.m. to 11 p.m. Saturdays with free food at 6:30 p.m.

Transportation is offered to and from units and can return the soldiers in time to make any formation.

For more information on the center, call 221-5730.

Army offers unconventional jobs

Many people unaware of possibilities

Pfc. Chris Stephens
Bayonet staff

Ninety-one romeo — veterinary food inspection specialist, 56M — chaplains assistant and 91E — dental assistant.

What do all of these military occupational specialties have in common? They are not well known.

"There are many MOSs that people don't know about when they are thinking about joining the Army," said Staff Sgt. Anthony Jenkins, recruiter for the Kennesaw, Ga., Recruiting Station. "Sometimes it just happens when they are at the Military Entrance Processing Station. They hear about it from one of the career counselors and decide that it sounds interesting and take the job."

Fort Benning currently has six Veterinarian Food Inspection specialists. However, there is more to the MOS than what most people think.

"We not only look at the food the pets eat and make sure it is up to standard," said Spc. Tanae Brewington, Gulf coast District Veterinary Unit. "We also check the food that is sold in the commissaries, shoppettes and other places food is sold."

So what do the 91 Romeo's look for?

"We make sure the commissaries and shoppettes are getting what they paid for," Brewington said. "We also make sure the food is edible, that sanitary conditions are staying at a high standard, that meals-ready-to-eat come in good condition and that the overall safety of the consumer is not put at risk."

Also, being a veterinary food inspection specialist for the Army doesn't guarantee you'll be stationed on an Army post.

"It was my job before I became a recruiter," Jenkins said. "Never in the 15 years that I was a 91R, was I stationed on an Army post. Most of the time I was stationed at a naval base, because the Navy doesn't have the job in their ranks, so the Army does it for them."

From the goods that fill your stomach to the goods that fill your spirit comes the 56M, the chaplain's assistant.

Their main job is to help the chaplain with any programs or services he might be doing.

"We help set up the religious services, and we research the various faiths," said Pfc. Wayne Weisser, 2nd Battalion, 47th Infantry Regiment. "Our job is also to help maintain the morale of soldiers by providing programs for them to get involved in."

Another job not mentioned often is the 91E. The dental assistants assist the dentists with various procedures, which include filling cavities, pulling teeth or cleaning them.

Pfc. Chris Stephens

Dental Assistant Pvt. Christopher Moffett, right, helps Capt. Jennifer Kirwan clean Sgt. 1st Class Joseph Colon's teeth Wednesday at Bernheim Dental Clinic.

"It's a real cool job," said Pvt. Christopher Moffett, U.S. Army Dental Activity. "When someone comes in and says that they don't smoke or dip, you look into their mouth or look at their X-rays and can tell that they do."

There are more unconventional MOSs like 92M — Mortuary Affairs Specialist, 81L — Lithographer and 91T — Animal Care Specialist.

Army meets recruiting, retention goals early

Pentagon ceremony acknowledges accomplishments

Joe Burlas
Army News Service

WASHINGTON — Dedicated teamwork, commitment of Army leadership and an effective Web-based ad campaign were among top reasons why droves of people are joining and staying in the Army, said Lt. Gen. Dennis Cavin, commanding general of the U.S. Army Recruiting Command.

The Army announced that it has met all its recruiting and retention goals for fiscal 2002 about six weeks early in a Pentagon ceremony Aug. 22.

The enlistment goals were 79,500 new recruits for the active Army and 28,825 for the Reserve. The retention goal was 49,000 re-enlistments for the active Army.

This was the third year of meeting all recruiting and retention goals after missing some of those goals from 1995 through 1999.

USAREC had a new goal this year — accessing 400 recruits for Special Forces. Normally, "Green Beret" recruiters call soldiers in the ranks of specialists and above directly from the active Army for additional training and eventual assignment to Special Forces units.

The recruiting command exceeded the Special Forces requirement with 445 recruits signed up as of Aug. 8.

"As we gather here this morning, our nation is at war," said Gen. John M. Keane, Army vice chief of staff. "We, as a nation, can never take for granted the young men and women who step forward to take an oath to defend this great nation of ours."

Four soldiers took the oath at the ceremony — one for commissioning as an officer, two for initial enlistments and one re-enlisting for a second tour of duty. They were: Cadet Walter D. Pridgen, who recently graduated the ROTC program at Old Dominion University, Norfolk, Va., and was commissioned as an infantry second lieutenant; Pfc. Allen K. Hawkins Jr. from Spartanburg, N.C., Regular Army; Pfc. Mayra A. Arisas from San Antonio, Texas, Army Reserve; and Sgt. Celena M. Marsh, a personnel specialist with the Military District of Washington, Washington, D.C., respectively.

While the four soldiers were announced to represent all recruits who had enlisted or soldiers who had re-enlisted this year, Hawkins story of how he finally ended up as a private first class was unusual.

Following high school in 1996, Hawkins was ready to sign the dotted line on his Army enlistment contract. Like his father, who had served eight years in the Army, and a grandfather, who had served in the Navy during World War II, Hawkins said he wanted to serve his country in uniform.

However, a car accident left him with serious injuries and impaired judgement.

"I was in a coma for about two months and then stayed in the hospital for another three," Hawkins said. "As I slowly improved, the doctors told my parents that I would never recover beyond a second-grade or third-grade reading level at the time."

Time and hard work have paid off for Hawkins. Close to a bachelor's degree in political science, Hawkins enlisted at 26 to meet his personal goal of serving in the Army and at the same time get some help to pay off some college debts under the Student Loan Repayment Program.

Following basic and advanced training, Hawkins will serve in field artillery as a fire support specialist.

With about 65 percent of high school graduates going on to some form of higher education these days, compared to 49 percent in 1980, Cavin said, many people perceive the Army as the last choice for young people to consider.

Cavin said he has been making progress in changing that perception. Programs like SLRP, Tuition Assistance, the Montgomery GI Bill and eArmyU allow soldiers to serve their country while getting resourcing to continue their education, either while on active duty or after they leave to pursue other goals, he said.

"The Army is not the last choice. It is the first choice for many Americans," Cavin said.

Smarter soldiers joining Army

Recruits have higher scores on tests

Joe Burlas
Army News Service

WASHINGTON — Not only did the Army meet its recruiting goals early this year, but the quality of recruits improved over the previous year.

The Army announced it had met its 2002 recruiting goals of 79,500 new soldiers for the active Army and 28,825 for the Army Reserve in a Pentagon ceremony Aug. 22.

This year's recruiting goal for high school graduates was 90 percent. About 91.3 percent of this year's recruits have a high school diploma, compared to 90.2 percent last year.

Against a goal of having at least 62.5 percent scoring in the top half on the Armed Service Vocational Aptitude Battery for the active Army, 68.2 percent hit or surpassed the mark this year, compared to 63.2 percent in 2001.

Conversely, against a goal of having no more than 2 percent with the lowest acceptable ASVAB score, also known as CAT IV, only 1.37 percent of active-Army recruits made it into the Army's ranks this year. In 2001, the active-Army recruit pool included 1.90 percent of CAT IV soldiers. For the Army Reserve, 95.7 percent had high school diplomas, 69.2 percent scored in the top half of the ASVAB and .6 percent was CAT IV. No 2001 Reserve statistics for these categories were immediately available.

The average age for the active-Army recruit this year was 21. In the Army Reserve, it was 23.1 years.

In the 2002 active-Army recruit pool, 79.4 percent were male, 20.6 female; 65.1 percent were white, 17.5 percent black, 12.8 percent Hispanic and 4.6 other.

In this year's Reserve recruit pool, 69.5 percent were male, 30.5 female; 60.8 percent were white, 20.7 black, 13.1 Hispanic and 5.4 other.

Army to tighten re-enlistment window for all

Move to help Army program replacements

Personnel Command Public Affairs Office

ALEXANDRIA, Va. — Active-duty soldiers will need to re-enlist or extend 12 to three months prior to their separation date, beginning Oct. 1.

The Army announced Aug. 23 that it was reinstating this re-enlistment policy, which had been relaxed since October 2000. The purpose of the tighter re-enlistment window, personnel officials said, is to identify soldiers who desire unbroken service, and for the Army to program replacements for those who plan on returning to civilian status.

"During the past two years about 8 percent or approximately 5,000 soldiers delayed their re-enlistment decision until within three months of ETS," said Ron Canada, chief of the U.S. Army Personnel Command retention office. "The largest categories of these are careerists; that's too many."

Canada expressed his concern that many soldiers may be denied retention after Oct. 1, if they decide to wait it out. A tremendous amount of work processing exceptions to policy will be placed on leaders and counselors if they don't enforce the 12 to three-month re-enlistment window, Canada added.

Leaders are an integral part of the retention business, Canada said.

He said leaders up and down the ranks must ensure that all soldiers are counseled on the re-enlistment window and that they may be denied further retention when within three months of ETS.

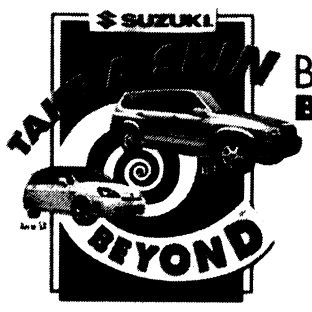
"I need everyone to help out in this effort," Canada said. "It's that important."

Processing procedures for exceptions to the three-month cutoff will require a copy of the soldier's re-enlistment interviews from Department of the Army form 4591-R to validate that the soldier was counseled.

Additionally, the exception will require a statement from the affected soldier with a reason he did not re-enlist within the 12 to three-month window and complete justification as to why exception should be approved.

This information is also being provided to Sgt. Maj. of the Army Jack Tilley to disseminate to command sergeants major Armywide, personnel officials said.

Army Regulation 601-280 outlines in paragraphs 3-6 and 4-1e the re-enlistment window of three to 12 months.



> "During the past two years, 8 percent ... of soldiers delayed their re-enlistment decision until within three months of ETS; ... that's too many."
> Ron Canada
> Chief, U.S. Army Personnel Command, Retention Office

The Army's success in recruiting and retention has postured the Army to once again reinforce that re-enlistment is a privilege, personnel officials said, and therefore requires soldiers to make their retention decisions earlier. Therefore, they are rescinding policy messages 01-02 and 01-03, dated Oct. 5, 2000, and Oct. 13, 2000.

Exceptions to the three-month window will be considered for meritorious cases only, officials said. It must be endorsed by the first general officer in the soldier's chain of command. Requests should be submitted to PERSCOM.
