Spc. Nikki St. Amant

The Hitchhiker's Guide to the Galaxy — Earthman Arthur Dent is having a very bad day. His house is about to be bulldozed, he discovers his best friend is an alien and, to top things off, planet Earth is about to be demolished to make way for a hyperspace bypass.

Arthur's only chance for survival: hitch a ride on a passing spacecraft.

Starring Martin Freeman, Mos Def, Zooey Deschanel and Sam Rockwell.

The Hitchhiker's Guide to the Galaxy is rated PG for thematic elements, action and mild language.

XXX: State of the Union — NSA Agent August Gibbons, fresh off the success of his last renegade recruitment, once again finds himself in need of an outsider.

Gibbons and his new agent Darius Stone, now code-named "XXX," must track down a military splinter group that is conspiring to overthrow the U.S. government.

Starring Ice Cube, Samuel L. Jackson and Scott Speedman.

XXX: State of the Union is rated PG-13 for sequences of intense action violence and language.

The Interpreter — Nicole Kidman stars as African-born U.N. interpreter Silvia Broome, who inadvertently overhears a death threat against an African head of state scheduled to address the U.N.'s General Assembly.

Realizing she's become a target of the assassins as well, Silvia desperately wants to thwart the plot — if only she can survive long enough to get someone to believe her.

Also starring Sean Penn and Catherine Keener.

The Interpreter is rated PG-13 for violence, sexual content and strong language.

King's Ransom — Anthony Anderson stars as Malcolm King, a wealthy and arrogant businessman whose ex-wife-to-be has plans to take him for everything he's worth in their divorce settlement.

Determined to avoid losing his fortune to her, Malcolm plans his own kidnapping with the help of his dim-witted mistress and her ex-con brother. Unfortunately for Malcolm, he is not the only one with a kidnapping plot.

Also starring Jay Mohr, Donald Faison, Regina King and Leila Arcieri.

King's Ransom is rated PG-13 for crude and sexual humor and language.

A Lot Like Love — This movie is a romantic comedy about destiny, connection and the frequently fuzzy line between chance friendships and happily ever after.

The movie traces the relationship of Oliver (Ashton Kutcher) and Emily (Amanda Peet) who met on a flight from Los Angeles to New York seven years earlier — each of them declaring that they couldn't be more wrong for each other.

A Lot Like Love is rated PG-13 for sexual content, nudity and language.

The Amityville Horror — On Nov. 14, 1974, police received a frantic phone call that led them to a nightmarish crime scene at the Defeo residence in Amityville, Long Island — an entire family had been slaughtered in their beds.

In the days that followed, Ronald Defeo confessed to shooting his parents and four siblings while they slept, claiming "voices" drove him to commit the grisly murders.

One year later, George and Kathy Lutz and their three children moved into the house, thinking it would be their dream house.

Shortly after settling in, bizarre and unexplainable events began to occur.

The Amityville Horror is rated R for violence, disturbing images, language, brief sexuality and drug use.

Fever Pitch — This is a contemporary romantic comedy about a high school teacher (Jimmy Fallon) who meets and falls in love with a successful businesswoman (Drew Barrymore).

Although their lives are vastly different, the relationship seems perfect, until baseball season begins and she has to compete with his first true love: the Boston Red Sox.

Fever Pitch is rated PG-13 for crude and sexual humor and some sensuality.

Sahara — Master explorer Dirk Pitt (Matthew McConaughey) takes on the adventure of his life when he embarks on a treasure hunt through some of the most dangerous regions of North Africa.

Searching for what locals call "The Ship of Death," a long-lost Civil War battleship filled with coins, Pitt and his wisecracking sidekick (Steven Zahn) use their wits and clever heroics to help Dr. Eva Rojas (Penelope Cruz), who believes the ship may be linked to several mysterious deaths in the same area.

Sahara is rated PG-13 for action violence.

Beauty Shop — Gina Norris (Queen Latifah) is a long way from the Barbershop — now she's in Atlanta making a name for herself at a posh southern salon with her cutting-edge hairstyles.

Gina buys a rundown salon and inherits an opinionated group of headstrong stylists (including Alfre Woodard), a colorful clientele and a sexy upstairs neighbor (Djimon Hounsou).

Beauty Shop is rated PG-13 for sexual material, language and brief drug references.

Sin City — Sin City is a violent city where the police department is as corrupt as the streets are deadly.

Marv (Mickey Rourke), a tough-as-nails and nearly impossible to kill street fighter, goes on a rampage of vengeance when a beautiful woman, Goldie (Jaime King), who he sleeps with once, is killed while lying in bed with him.

Also starring Bruce Willis, Benicio Del Toro, Clive Owen, Josh Hartnett and Brittany Murphy.

Sin City is rated R for sustained strong stylized violence, nudity and sexual content including dialogue.

Army tests eye protection

Pvt. Duncan Kiruthi, B Company, 1st Battalion, 50th Infantry Regiment, tries out combat eye protection at Malone 9 Wednesday.

According to statistics from the Office of the Surgeon General, eye injuries represent almost 16 percent of all injuries in Iraq and Afghanistan since March 2003.

Currently, deploying Soldiers are issued combat eye protection, but now, around 400 Infantry Training Brigade Soldiers are trying several different types of CEP that might eventually be issued to all Soldiers.

Col. Chuck Adams, the OTSG senior optometry consultant, said the goal is to achieve a culture change from vision correction for some Soldiers, to eye protection for all.

"We're talking about putting eyewear on half a million Soldiers," Adams said. "And it's not so much about which product we choose, but the training. Combat eye protection is embraced for deployed Soldiers. We need to embrace it for all Soldiers."

As part of the Military Combat Eye Protection Program, the OTSG and the team from PEO-Soldier at Fort Belvoir, Va., are hoping the Soldiers in B Company, 1st Battalion, 50th Infantry Regiment and D Co., 1st Bn., 329th Inf. Regt., will have some

Bats send residents packing

Endangered species infest Bouton Heights

Tawny Archibald Campbell

"The bats are driving us batty," said Pat Burns, chief of the Family Housing Branch, referring to the bat infestation in Bouton Heights that is causing the evacuation of approximately 270 homes.

The clean-up started last fall with vacant homes, and in April, housing officials started notifying residents of the problem and the need to relocate.

The issue came to light after a survey of quarters found an endangered species of bats had taken up residence in many neighborhood attics.

Jim Wiggins, chief, Housing Division, Directorate of Public Works, said it will take two to four months per home to seal off, clean up and make the homes habitable again.

Ninety homes have been completed, and 90 more will be vacated, their residents relocated to the completed quarters, Wiggins said. When those are complete, the process will continue.

During a town-hall meeting earlier this year, a housing representative talked to residents about the issue. Housing officials called residents to notify them of the situation.

Rumors started to run rampant through Bouton Heights as people learned about the impending moves and received misinformation on the reason for the relocation, Burns said. Wiggins said he's trying to make the moves go as smoothly

608th Soldiers deploy to Iraq

Spc. Eliamar Trapp
Assistant editor

Hugs, tears and "I love you's" were shared at the 36th Engineer Group's complex Thursday morning as the Soldiers of the 608th Ordnance Company headed for Iraq.

The Soldiers were notified of their deployment in January and spent the last four months preparing, said 1st Sgt. James Huffstutler, company first sergeant.

"The Soldiers are constantly training for deployments because our mission as ammunition specialists is an important one," said 1st Lt. Audrey Matthews, platoon leader of deploying Soldiers. "We need to be able to get ammunition to the Soldiers in the front lines when they need it. If we can't do that, then the other Soldiers are in trouble."

Matthews and Huffstutler said the Soldiers are well prepared for this deployment and couldn't wait to deploy so they could hurry up and return home.

The 608th Soldiers returned from a 13-month deployment to Iraq in April 2004.

During this deployment the 608th will be supporting the 206th Combat Support Battalion, National Guard unit from New York, Matthews said.

The 608th will be gone for 12 months or until mission complete.

Designate driver if drinking, boating

In 2002, 4,062 people were reported injured and 750 killed in boating incidents. Among those who died, approximately eight out of 10 were not wearing life jackets. Alcohol was involved in 38 percent of boating fatalities. All this according to a study done by the National Center for Injury Prevention and Control.

That said, the sun is out more often than not nowadays, backyard pools are being set up and boats are being hauled to the nearest body of water.

As fun as water recreation may be, it is important that everyone know the basic water safety rules and laws to avoid serious accidents during what would otherwise be a fun day.

Lewis Higgins, a financial assistance analyst with the Directorate of Resource Management and a flotilla staff officer with the Coast Guard Auxiliary, said most water related accidents happen on weekends during the summer.

"A lot of the accidents are alcohol related," he said. "Driving a boat while intoxicated is just as bad as driving a vehicle. There should always be a designated driver."

The Coast Guard Auxiliary is a group of civilian volunteers who help the Coast Guard. When not working with the Coast Guard, one of the auxiliary's main missions is to promote boating safety.

STAMP OUT HUNGER

And pile it on the postman

Bridgett Siter
Bayonet staff

Why do we love the mailman so? Gone are the days when he — or she — delivered stacks of letters from friends and family afar. These days, friends and family are part of the Friends and Family Plan. They call. Or they e-mail.

Seldom do they write.

Still, we wait with bated breath for the postman. Like Pavlov's dogs, we scamper to the mailbox, tails wagging, anxious to see what he's left for us.

Of course, it's bills, always bills, and lots of them.

The mailman is the ultimate "middle man." He delivers the "dues" one day and shows up the next with his hand out.

I imagine, back at the post office, there's a line waiting— bankers, repairmen, doctors, dentists, some guy from Visa and a perky lady in a pink twin set (100 percent cotton, machine washable) from the Home Shopping Network. They've all got their hands out, waiting for the middle man to hand over my check. He probably gets a cut.

I think — now this is just me thinking, mind you, you're responsible for your own behavior — I think we should heap vengeance upon the postman.

Heaps of vengeance, I say.

And I know just how to do it.

Next Saturday, May 14, is the 12th annual Stamp Out Hunger campaign, sponsored by the the National Association of Letter Carriers. Once a year, the guys and gals in blue collect nonperishable foods, canned, boxed or bagged, from patrons along their regular mail routes and distribute it to local food banks. I'm sure it's their way of trying to redeem themselves. Whatever.

I suggest we heartily support this endeavor. I suggest everyone — you, you, you, and me — leave heaps of food, the heavier the better. Bags and bags of canned good would be great. Spaghetti too, it's fairly heavy. And tubs of powdered drink mix. Throw in dry cereal, potato chips, dinner mixes and such.

But absolutely no glass. That's just mean.

Every year, the folks in Columbus donate about 50,000 pounds of food. Fort Benning gives less than 5,000. Do you think the mail man delivers fewer bills to Benning? Do you think he "takes it easy" on us? Heck no.

Why should we take it easy on him? Heap it on, I say.

Drag bags full of canned goods to the mailbox, pull up a lawn chair, sit back and watch him tote tons of groceries around the neighborhood. That'll teach him.

The best part about it — vengeance aside — is that all the goods we donate on post stay right here on post. It goes to the Army Community Service Food Bank, where it'll be available for Soldiers and their families who find themselves in financial need.

So there's no need to feel guilty for doing your part to pay back the postman.

Bring on the groceries.

Apathy about hunger hard to stomach

Peace can only last when human rights are respected, where the people are fed and nations are free. — Dalai Lama

While we live in the land of plenty, with obesity at an all time high, 852 million people around the world are starving to death, according to UN estimates.

"Starving to death" doesn't necessarily mean they don't have food. Often people don't get the right mix of vitamins and minerals, resulting in malnourishment, which is just as dangerous as having no food at all. Furthermore, the problem is not food production. There is ample food to fill every belly in the world, but the desperately poor cannot afford to buy food.

The dispersement of wealth plays a massive role. The combined wealth of the richest 225 people in the world is equivalent to the wealth of the poorest 47 percent — 225 people own as much as almost half the world!

It's not just people in other nations suffering. We have hunger and malnourishment within our borders — 33 million Americans don't earn enough to meet their basic food needs. That's one in 10 households. If those 33 million Americans stood in a line, it would stretch from New York to Los Angeles and back.

So how is it some have so much and some have so little? America does try to help with $10 billion a year in foreign aid, a portion of which goes to feed people. Yet American citizens spend three times that annually to lose weight. We spend more on dog and cat food than the UN's entire yearly budget for hunger relief. Does that leave a bad taste in your mouth?

Constant hunger and an unvaried diet without the right vitamins is literally a killer. Every day, 20,000 to 35,000 people die from hunger and hunger-related causes. This year 6 million children younger than 5 will die from hunger.

There is good news. In the 90s, great progress was made in fighting hunger which drastic reduced the number of deaths. Advancements in technology and health care helped alleviate the problem. Yet the 2000s have seen a drop in foreign aid, and the numbers are again climbing.

But there is hope, and people the world over are working to find ways to fight the problem. The World Hunger Organization states that the best ways to combat hunger are through the spread of democracy, the growth of civil infrastructure and the emancipation and education of women.

While giant organizations work to fight hunger in large ways, you can work in small ways. There are so many ways to help, they can't all be mentioned here. Search online and you'll find plenty of ideas. Often what stops us from giving are constraints on time and money, so let me offer a suggestion that's fast and won't cost a dime.

The Hungersite.com is one way to fight hunger without any investment. Go to the site, click on the banner, view a page of ads, and the advertisers will donate a cup of rice to a needy person. By taking one minute of your day, you can literally save someone's life at www.thehungersite.com.

The Hungersite also has links to sites that donate money to buy vitamins for malnourished kids, fund breast cancer research, buy acreage in the rainforest, fund literacy programs, and feed stray and abused animals.

There are ways to help. In the five minutes it has taken to read this article, about 100 people have died from hunger. Why don't you take the next five minutes to see what you can do to help.

You've heard it before. President Woodrow Wilson was pressured into making an official Mother's Day proclamation by the greeting card industry.

I won't pretend to know anything about the economy in 1914 when Wilson set Mother's Day as the second Sunday in May. I can't speak for the greeting card industry either, but I can't imagine the proclamation made much difference.

But it did put an official stamp on a Civil War-era "Mother's Day for Peace" movement led by Julia Ward Howe. Best known for her lyrics to the Battle Hymn of the Republic, she issued a call, in 1870, to recognize wives and mothers who sent their husbands and sons to war.

"Arise then, women of this day! Arise, all women who have hearts! Whether your baptism be of water or of tears."

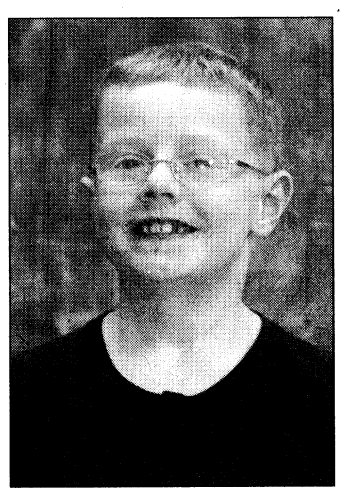
Howe asked that a general congress of women be appointed to settle international questions in the great and general interests of peace.

Howe died before Mother's Day was established, and not long after, the U.S. entered World War I. Howe's words make me wonder how many wars might have been avoided if we'd had that "general congress of women."

The parallels between Howe's time and today are quite noticeable.

We're a nation at war, yet again. Mothers across the country are sending their sons, and now daughters, off to war.

I'll admit, I'm not very attached to the majority of our national observances. I, personally, can live without Mother's Day. I don't need the pampering or recognition for being a mother, even hot on the heels of a three-day mother's "Thunder Run" — with an appendectomy for my oldest son (day one), an almost flooded basement (day two) and a gerbil loose in the house (day three).

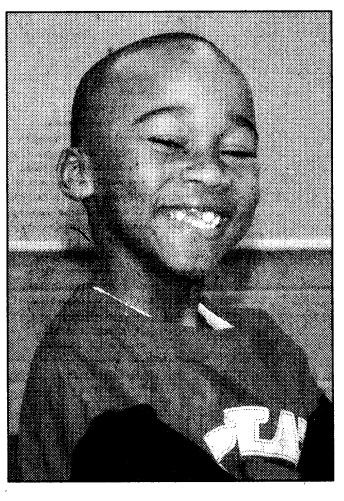


I'm going to have to, once again, give big kudos to my mother. She's one of those moms who sent me off to war in 1990 and my brother off to war in 2003 and again earlier this year.

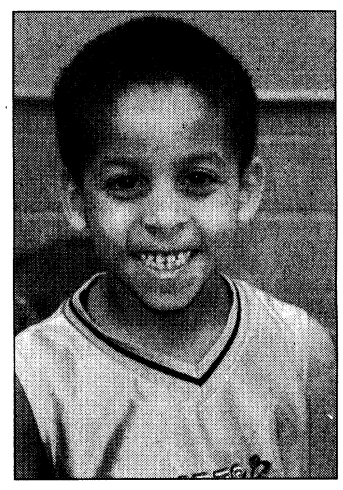
Mother's Day is about recognizing her efforts to raise her family and the strength she still shows. It's not about me chasing a gerbil around a basement littered with cockroach carcasses, although I give her credit for letting me have rats for a science fair project. No rodent phobias in our family.

This holiday is about my mother, and all other mothers like her, waiting for their sons and daughters to return, all the while praying for peace.

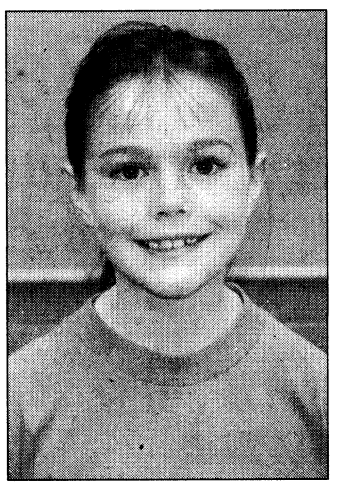
VARIOUS VOICES



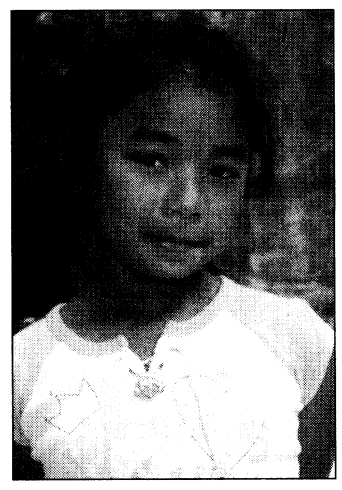
What makes your mom special?



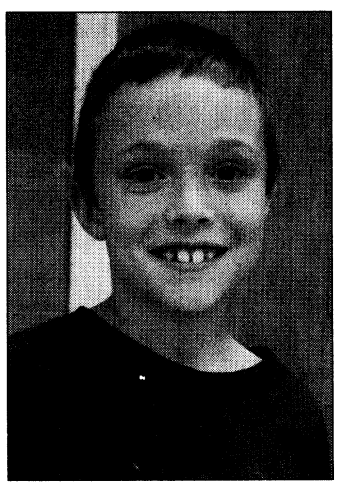
Bradley Judy, 8 — "My mom is awesome because she helped me win this video game one time when I didn't know what to do. She's usually not very good at video games, except for Pac Man and Atari games. She plays baseball with me, and she's a better pitcher than my brother."



Kaitlin Jackson, 8 — "My mom is great because she knows what's right for me and takes care of me. We play Twister and Candyland. She teaches kindergarten, and she's awesome. I bet she could teach the whole world."



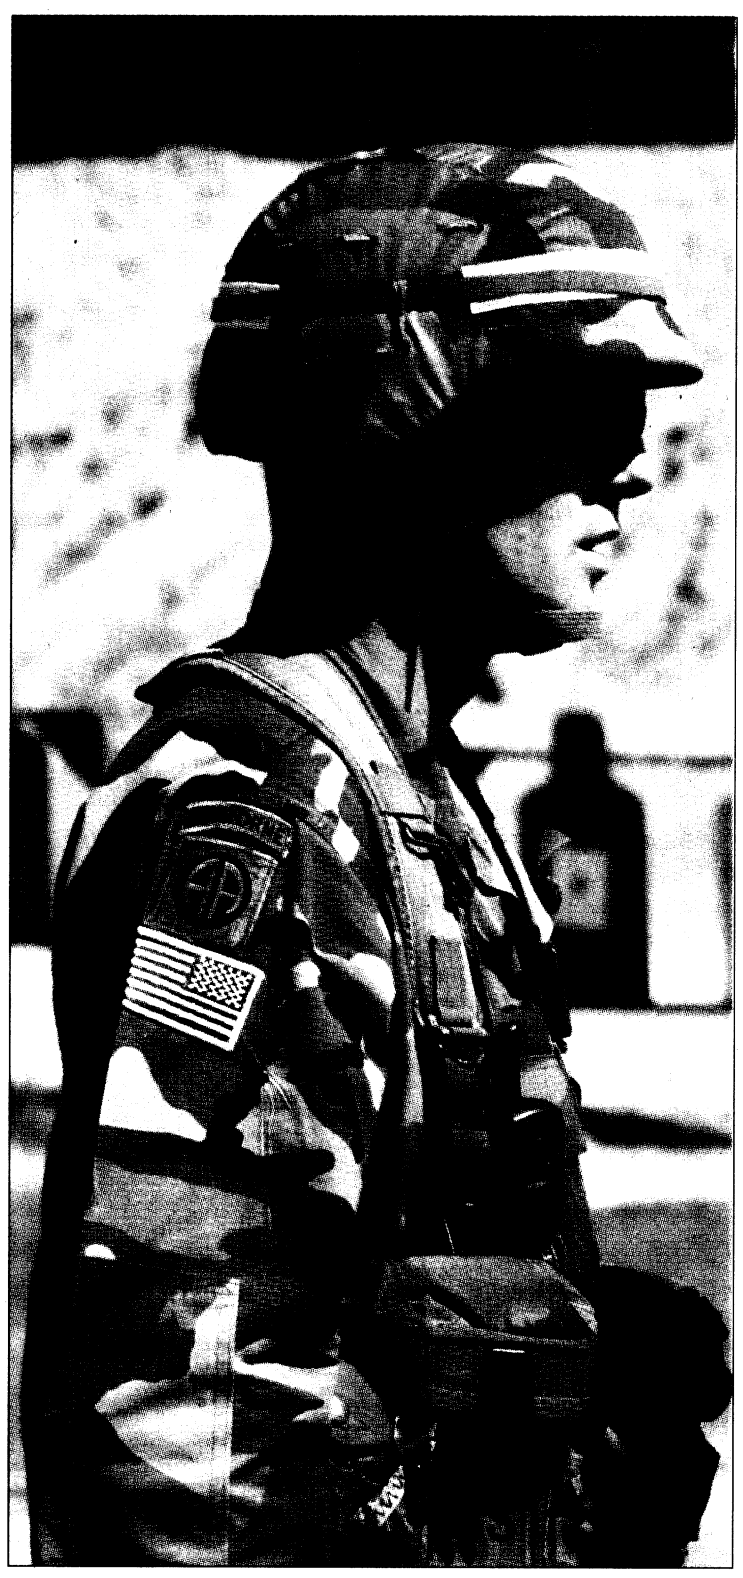
Kordell Braxton, 7 — "My mom plays video games with me and my baby brother. We go to Hollywood Connection and go roller skating and play the video games upstairs. She's cool because she always lets my friends come over."



David Flores, 6 — "My mom plays baseball with me and I help her take care of my two little brothers. She cooks really good rice and beans and chicken. My favorite thing about her is that she gives me lots of big hugs. I love her very much."

Sierra Baker, 8 — "My mom is really great. She takes me grocery shopping and to the mall. She makes the best lasagna in the world. She always says, "I love you" to me and my baby sister."

Genie Chhuon, 8 — "My mom watches movies with me and my little brothers. I love it when she makes coconut pudding. She buys me clothes and toys, and she's nice to everybody. She's the best mom ever."



Bradley Sain, 7 — "My mom always plays with me and my brother. We play marbles and video games. She's a teacher, so I stay after school with her until she's done. I don't mind because she's a nice mom."

CEP: Critical for deployed Soldiers, useful in training good feedback on three sets of spectacles.

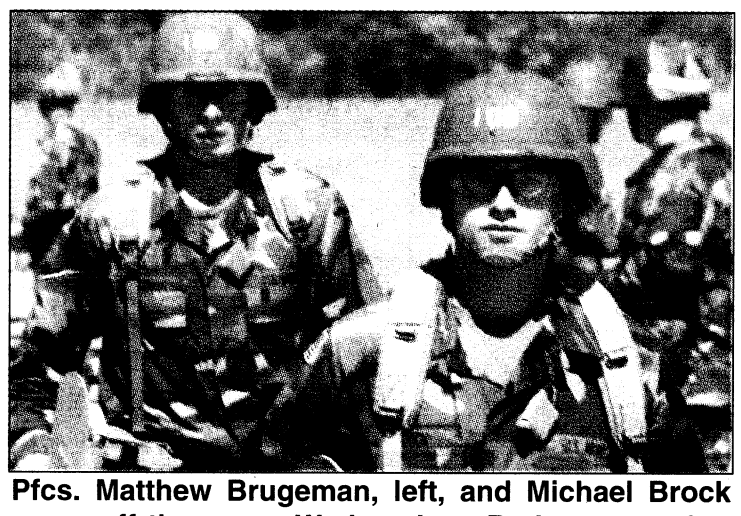
"Eye injuries hit the radar post-1972 and the Arab-Israeli Wars," said Lt. Col. Emery Fehl, chief of optometry at Martin Army Community Hospital and the post's MCEPP liaison. In subsequent years, the Army researched and developed spectacles and goggles designed to combat a laser threat by blocking certain wavelengths. That, he said, is where the Army's current offerings, with their multiple lenses came in. But the eyewear adopted in 1994 and issued in 1998 didn't pass muster with Soldiers.

Sarah Morgan-Clyborne, who has been working the eyewear issues with PEO-Soldier for about 12 years said the second generation items, intended to provide spectacles and goggles that would share lenses, provide ballistic protection and support prescription lenses, was unsuccessful.



"We did not design a frame that was acceptable to Soldiers," Morgan-Clyborne said. "Protection was important, but not a motivating factor."

The missing factor? "It was a great product," Adams said, "but it doesn't look like an Oakley and doesn't look cool."

So the Army entered the formal contracting process with several commercial vendors, Morgan-Clyborne said, and also receives unsolicited proposals.

"We evaluate (the eyewear) for industry safety standards and ballistic fragmentation protection, then rank the products and place them on an authorized protective eyewear list," she said.

Individual commanders can select eyewear for their unit from that list.

Pfcs. Matthew Brugeman, left, and Michael Brock move off the range Wednesday. Both are wearing the clear lenses for their CEP and Brock has prescription inserts.

Right now, the ballistic protection piece is more important than the laser threat, Fehl said.

Of the 345 eye injuries evacuated from Iraq and Afghanistan after March 2003, three Soldiers are totally blind and 44 have total loss of vision in one eye.

But eye injuries aren't limited to combat operations.

Adams said one of his first patients as a young doctor in Germany was a sergeant with a prosthetic eye because of an accident on a range.

"We want to protect Soldiers' vision," Adams said, and one of the ways to do that is by issuing CEP to every Soldier.

Fort Benning is the only installation conducting the CEP test, and Fehl said the end number of around 400 makes this test more valid.

"This is the right place to do this testing," Fehl said. On April 8 and 9, the two companies received a mass issue of the first set of CEP, the UVEX XC. Soldiers wore them during field training for two weeks, then critiqued them.

On Wednesday at Malone 9, Soldiers from B Co., 1st Bn., 50th Inf. Regt., were putting the second set — ESS ICE 2 spectacles — through the paces on the range. The Soldiers have yet to see the Revision Sawfly, the third set they'll test. Based on the data, the company will wear the preferred CEP during their seven-day capstone field exercise.

Pvt. Duncan Kiruthi, a B Co. Soldier, doesn't normally wear eye protection. In the first day on the range, Kiruthi had reservations.

"I'm not feeling confident," he said. But Kiruthi thought since it was his first time firing a weapon it would get better and didn't expect the eyewear to be a factor. One of the company's drill sergeants, Staff Sgt. Jefferson Negus, said the Soldiers, and some of the cadre, have been putting the CEP on every time they don their Kevlar and equipment.

"The glasses are getting a full set of abuse," Negus said. "We've had breakage, but we haven't seen a pattern. They seem to be fitting the durability standard. He said he felt much more protected and the two glasses he's tried are light enough not to bother him. Negus, a combat veteran who served with the 101st Airborne Division (Air Assault) in Mosul, said his unit had eye protection, but it was a personal choice whether or not to wear it.

"That's what we're trying to change," Adams said. "We want to instill the feeling that something's missing when they walk outside (without eyewear). Soldiers are willing to walk around garrison with a little bit of blur, but out in the desert, they want the best possible vision. They must train as they fight."

Training as they fight means Soldiers would be issued CEP, frame of choice and protective mask inserts for those Soldiers needing corrective lenses, and CEP for those without a need. The Army currently only issues S-9 glasses to initial entry Soldiers who need vision correction.

Issuing the CEP to all Soldiers is a move Negus thinks is long overdue.

"I don't think the Soldiers see the value in them yet, " Negus said. But another of B Co.'s Soldiers likes the idea and said the glasses are working well for him.

"They have saved me a couple of times already from getting an eye injury," said Pvt. Joseph DeLair, "especially during land nav walking through the woods and bushes."

While the CEP will cost between and average of $16 to $40 per Soldier, Adams said it will be partially offset by no longer issuing the S-9 glasses Soldiers don't like.

"It's tough to talk numbers," Adams said. "But the important point is — if you lose one eye, the Army pays a Soldier upwards of $1 million for disability."

Fort Benning commemorates Holocaust with ceremony

Witness to camps speaks at event

Cohn

As a young combat operations officer in Gen. George Patton's 3rd U.S. Cavalry Regiment, Maj. Aaron Cohn was horrified to discover skeletal survivors of the Ebensee, Austria, concentration camp.

Following this shocking revelation, a decorated World War I lawyer from Vienna extracted Cohn's promise to "Tell the world what has happened here so we will never be destroyed by such monsters, again."

Thursday, as the guest speaker for the Fort Benning's Days of Remembrance Ceremony honoring victims of the Holocaust, Cohn talked about the inhumanity, death and destruction found at the end of World War II.

He encouraged the audience in Marshall Auditorium at Infantry Hall to continue embracing the ideals of life, liberty and justice.

Cohn decried the current cultural trend to trivialize and even dismiss the atrocities committed at the Nazi death camps.

He urged all Americans to gain strength from cultural diversity, and continue striving to model a working democracy for the rest of the world.

Col. Charles Cornwell, chief of Staff, U.S. Army Infantry Center, introduced Cohn.

Born in 1916, the Columbus native graduated from the University of Georgia Lumpkin School of Law and was admitted to the bar in 1938. He was commissioned as a cavalry officer in 1937.

The recipient of many awards, Cohn was honored in 1982 by the U.S. Holocaust Memorial Commission as an official liberator of the concentration camp at Ebensee in 1945.

Cohn was appointed judge of Juvenile Court of Columbus in 1965.

In 2001, the House of Representatives passed a Resolution in recognition of his lifetime of service, and designated the regional youth detention center in Midland, Ga., the Aaron Cohn Regional Youth Detention Center.

Cohn concluded his speech by noting that "Liberty and justice go hand-in-hand.

"Thank God for our military policies."

Did You Know ...

Several Infantry, Armor and Airborne units and divisions involved in the liberation of Nazi concentration camps trained at Fort Benning during World War II.

David Stieghan, the Infantry Branch historian, said the 10th Armor Division liberated Landseerg concentration camp in 1945, and the 4th Infantry freed the inmates of a Dachau sub camp.

The 1st Infantry and the 82nd Airborne Division were also involved in emancipating the Nazi prisoners.

Fort Benning's Officer Candidate School also trained most of the Junior Infantry Officers involved with World War II.

He said once residents receive notice that their court is being cleared, they will be asked to go to Meloy Hall to look at houses in Bouton Heights, Custer Terrace, Indianhead Terrace, Upatoi, McGraw Manor, a new area within McGraw Manor called McBride Place or Davis Hill.

"We aren't going to give you three keys to inadequate houses and have you choose right there," Wiggins said.

"I want everyone in a house that I would move my family into.

"We want you to move as soon as possible, but we want you to be happy."

Wiggins said Housing will pay for the move, including relocating a fence and switching telephone and cable from one residence to the other.

Before residents can clear their current home, they will be required to mow and edge their lawn, clean out all appliances, sweep the floors and return any painted walls to their original color.

Wiggins said all residents in homes that have not been cleared will have to move as soon as possible and his staff+ will work with people on a case by case basis.

"One woman had surgery and can't move for six weeks," Wiggins said. "We skipped her house and will move her with the next ninety houses. If you can give me a good enough reason, we will work with you."

Also, if people are moving to another installation within the next few months, Wiggins said they will not make them move twice.

All residents have to do is let the housing office know of the situation.

August Pruitt, a resident of Bouton Heights who was notified of the move last week and moved out of her home on Tuesday, summed up what many residents are feeling.

"I know this is something we have to do, but when you're home alone — my husband is in Iraq — and have four children, it gets really frustrating," she said.

"When they told me I had to move, I felt like 'not again,' we just moved four months ago.

"The government has done its part in informing us and taking care of us because of the move, but all the unpacking will be horrendous. It's just an expensive pain."

NSPS Q&A

Civilian Personnel Advisory Center

MYTH

I will lose pay under NSPS and I won't get credit for the time I've already spent waiting for my next within grade increase.

FACT

Employees will not lose pay upon conversion to NSPS. Employees will be converted into NSPS at their current salary. In many cases, employees will receive a salary increase equal to the amount they have earned towards their next within grade increase (this is known as the "WGI buy-in").

MYTH

There will be no locality pay under NSPS.

FACT

The proposed NSPS pay system includes a locality-based component of pay called a "local market supplement" that is paid in addition to an employee's basic pay. The local market supplement will be based on market conditions related to geographical and occupational factors, and may differ from one occupation to another in a given locality area. Employees will be entitled to increases to the local market supplement, unless they are performing at an unacceptable level.

MYTH

NSPS is just a way to freeze the pay of DoD civilians, since we're no longer entitled to the automatic January pay increase or within-grade increases.

FACT

The annual January pay increase, as we know it now, will change. The proposed pay rules provide for periodic "rate range" adjustments, to adjust the minimum and maximum rate of a pay band. When a minimum rate of a pay band is adjusted upward, employees will receive an equivalent increase. There are no "steps," similar to the GS system, in a pay banding system. Instead, pay increases and performance bonuses are based primarily on your performance rating. Unacceptable performers are not eligible for pay increases under the proposed system.

MYTH

Under NSPS, funds for salaries and bonuses will no longer be certain.

FACT

DoD is committed to ensuring civilian compensation is protected. In fact, the law requires that the aggregate amount of money allocated for civilian compensation for organizations under NSPS cannot be less than the amount that would have been allocated under the existing system. Under NSPS, the overall amount of money that would have been used for the annual January pay adjustment, within grade increases, quality step increases, and similar payments, will be used for civilian pay, and those funds will be protected. However, the proposed NSPS pay system will distribute those funds based primarily on performance

MYTH

My supervisor will not be prepared and equipped to fairly and objectively rate my performance, and will not be held accountable for exercising his responsibility under NSPS.

FACT

Supervisors and managers will have an important role in determining performance-based pay increases. The flexibilities proposed in the NSPS regulations bring with them an increased need for accountability.

This includes employee accountability for performance, as well as supervisory and managerial accountability for the proper exercise of the authorities of NSPS.

Extensive training will be given to supervisors and managers, both military and civilian. Training will focus on improving skills needed for effective performance management: setting clear expectations; communicating with employees; and linking individual expectations to the goals and objectives of the organization. Supervisors and managers will be held accountable for how effectively they use the tools provided by NSPS.

They will also be subject to the pay and performance provisions of the system, and their pay will be affected by how well they perform their duties as supervisors and managers.

Editor's note: This is the fourth of a weekly series on National Security Personnel System explaining the system.

PURCHASE THE BEST VALUE PREPAID CARD AT YOUR MILITARY EXCHANGE

AT&T Global PrePaid Cards offer low rates that are optimized for military personnel calling home to the U.S.

The 550-Unit AT&T Global PrePaid Card offers deployed soldiers the best value when calling to the U.S. from Operation Enduring Freedom and Operation Iraqi Freedom.

★ Where can AT&T Global PrePaid Cards be purchased?

Buy yours at your local Exchange or online at www.aafes.com. Friends and family of military personnel can also purchase Cards for you at this site. When deployed in Iraq, Afghanistan and Kuwait, Cards can be purchased at the Exchange, where the price of the 550-Unit Card is the lowest.

When calling within the U.S., 1 unit equals 1 minute of calling. When making international calls from overseas, more units are used per minute of call time and the number of units is different based on the country you are calling from. For example, when using the 550-Unit Card, for calls made from OEF/OIF to the U.S., 1 minute equals 3 units of call time. So the 550-Unit Card is good for 183 minutes of calling. For information on other countries, just call the 800 Customer Service number on the back of your Card.

★ Optimized military rates. Great AT&T benefits:

- Minutes never expire.
- Low rates. Remember, prepaid cards bought at other retailers may have higher overseas rates.
- Recharge with AT&T Autominutes® and never run out of minutes.
- Toll free Customer Service available 24/7.

Cheney says: America safer, 'not yet safe'

Al Qaeda off-balance but still wants to hit U.S.

Gerry J. Gilmore
American Forces Press Service

WASHINGTON — Although the United States has achieved many victories against global terrorists since the Sept. 11, 2001, attacks, the homeland remains in harm's way, Vice President Dick Cheney told federal law enforcement officials Monday.

Following Sept. 11, the Department of Homeland Security was created, along with a host of other initiatives designed to thwart another terrorist attack on America, Cheney said to students and staff at the Federal Law Enforcement Training Center at Glynco, Ga.

"America is safer" today, thanks to the implementation of legislation and programs — such as Project BioShield, the Patriot Act and the establishment of a national intelligence director — that increase homeland security.

"But," the vice president cautioned, "we are not yet safe."

Al Qaeda, the terrorist group that perpetrated the Sept. 11 attacks, "is wounded and off-balance and on the run," Cheney said.

However, Osama bin Laden's organization remains "very active," as al Qaeda continues to recruit while plotting "to find ways to hit us," Cheney said.

Those seeking to strike the United States again "are hoping that our country will grow complacent" after U.S.-coalition military victories against terrorists in Afghanistan and Iraq, he said. It's therefore paramount, the vice president emphasized, that the United States "never lets down its guard."

Cheney said he's been "immensely impressed" with the work conducted at the Federal Law Enforcement Training Center.

"Vigilance, and professionalism, and adaptability" are key components of national security, he said, and they are "the watchwords" at the center.

The training center was established in Washington in 1970 as part of the Treasury Department to provide standardized training for government law enforcement officers and agents, according to the organization's Web site. The facility moved to Georgia in 1975, and in 2003, it was placed under the Department of Homeland Security.

The center, Cheney said, has "stepped up to meet the needs of a new and very different era for law enforcement."

The top priority for U.S. intelligence and law enforcement agencies since the Sept. 11 attacks is "countering and investigating terrorist activity," he said.

U.S. homeland-defense organizations have quickly acted "to develop the equipment and procedures to protect against (weapons of mass destruction), radioactive material, and vehicle-borne explosives," as well as providing additional air marshals, airport baggage screeners and visa and passport security officers, Cheney said.

Cheney also told the assembled law enforcement officials that he and President Bush appreciate their efforts, adding that their hard work "is paying off."

He also praised the worldwide efforts of U.S. service members, saying "a good number of the people who work and train" at the center are military veterans or have loved ones serving overseas in the war against global terrorism.

DoD warns about insurance, investment rip-offs

MWR wants comments about unscrupulous ways

Rudi Williams
American Forces Press Service

WASHINGTON — Defense Department officials are working to thwart insurance and investment marketing practices that exploit military personnel.

"You really have to be a little bit skeptical if somebody says if you invest a little bit of money with us today, you'll have a great deal of money tomorrow," said Air Force Col. Michael A. Pachuta, DoD's director of morale, welfare and recreation policy.

"Also, you should shop (for investment opportunities) like you would for anything else. Don't buy the first thing. Make some comparisons."

Congress raised concerns last fall after press reports documented abusive insurance and investment sales practices at some military installations, including Fort Benning and Camp Pendleton, Calif. This caused DoD to step up its efforts to improve oversight and enforcement of policies.

Brand-new service members are sometimes enticed to go off base to what they think are investment seminars that end up being insurance sales pitches, the colonel said.

"Unfortunately, our policies don't apply off the installation," he continued. "So we have to rely on financial education, which we've tried to improve at the first basic-training opportunities with our new service members."

Pachuta recommended that troops ensure there are no combat-exclusion clauses in life insurance that they buy.

"We're going to be in harm's way, and it doesn't make any sense to have a policy that won't cover those kinds of events," Pachuta said.

He encourages service members to seek counseling and advice for financial matters through base family support centers and legal offices.

Service members should be on the lookout for such things as something presented as a savings plan with an insurance component to it. That's a red flag, he said. Before buying insurance, service members should compare what the premium would be for a rate of coverage compared to that for the same amount of coverage through the Servicemen's Group Life Insurance program.

About 96 percent of service members have SGLI, and 92 percent of them have opted for full SGLI coverage of $250,000. More than 160,000 service members have military pay allotments for supplemental commercial life insurance. The premiums they pay total over $190 million per year, according to DoD statistics.

"SGLI, to a large extent, especially for single service members who have no dependents, should fulfill most of their insurance needs," Pachuta said. "But a lot of times, our young service members are looking at putting away some money. And some of these insurance sales pitches are disguised as savings plans, although there's an insurance aspect to it that wasn't explained clearly when they signed up."

Pachuta suggests that service members who want to open a savings account should consider the Thrift Savings Plan.

"It's a tax-deferred plan, and there are not many investments, other than tax-free bonds, that have the same kind of advantages that TSP has," he said.

DoD officials are rewriting parts of the department's commercial-solicitation policy to enhance enforcement. This includes a requirement for installations that detect policy violations to report them to their service headquarters, and from there to DoD. The aim is to keep a record of violations to have them available for installations to check when a new insurance agent wants to do business on the installation.

Pachuta said there are 14 prohibited practices in DoD's commercial-solicitation directive, such as soliciting without an appointment, soliciting door-to-door, and soliciting individuals during duty hours at their work places.

> "You really have to be a little bit skeptical if somebody says if you invest a little bit of money with us today, you'll have a great deal of money tomorrow."
> Col. Michael A. Pachuta
> Director of DoD Morale, Welfare and Recreation policy

"Those are the kinds of policies that limit where, when and how an insurance or investment solicitor can make contact and solicit someone on the installation," he said. "We've also been concerned about agents having access to allotment forms and having them there for the service member to sign on the spot. And even the agent taking those forms to finance to get them processed.

"We think that really steps over the line," Pachuta said. "Pay is a personal decision a member has to make and they need to be the one to process any kind of allotment for an investment or insurance that goes through the military pay system."

He said financial education is the key to stopping service members from being ripped off by unscrupulous insurance agents and companies.

"The department kicked off a financial-readiness campaign about a year and a half ago with 28 federal and nonprofit private organizations that specialize in financial education, such as the Securities and Exchange Commission, Department of Treasury, and National Association of Securities Dealers," Pachuta said.

"These are large, reputable organizations that have good information. They have great Web sites, great training tools, and they provided us information we can use in our financial-education programs.

Pachuta said DoD policies apply to any military or civilian employees as long as the transaction takes place on a military installation.

"That has been the problem," he said. "Some people have been enticed to go off the installation to carry out these business agreements. So we're interested in working with the federal and state regulatory agencies to broaden our oversight."

He pointed out that DoD policies cover insurance and investment agents who operate overseas, as well. The companies have to apply to DoD each year for permission to operate on U.S. military installations overseas.

Pachuta said he'd like to hear from individuals who have been taken advantage of by such unscrupulous practices. People can send comments to him at Michael.Pachuta@osd.mil no later than June 20.

He also recommended that anyone who has a problem with an insurance product contact the appropriate state regulatory agency.

"They're the ones that have a strong hammer if there has been a legal or ethical violation," he said.

The Securities and Exchange Commission or the National Association of Securities Dealers are oversight bodies for investment products.

"So if someone feels they've been taken advantage of in the financial-investment arena, those are the agencies they should contact," Pachuta said.

The colonel said that to his knowledge no one has been targeting service members deploying to Iraq or Afghanistan.

"The problems we've become aware of have been primarily in training environments," he said.

Boating: Water safety high priority for everyone

Higgins said summer weekends are when most water related accidents happen. On that note, below are a few tips on how to stay out of trouble while enjoying the outdoors.

Boating safety

• Georgia state law states that the minimum age to operate a vessel or personal watercraft without supervision is 16 years old. Anyone operating a vessel or watercraft must carry an operators license.

• Play it safe. While in a vessel or watercraft, all children under the age of 8 must wear a personal floating device at all times. Each person on a water craft is required to have a PFD on board. Anyone riding a jet ski must wear a PFD.

• If you can't see them, they can't see you. Vessels must be equipped with navigation lights when operated between sunset and sunrise and during periods of limited visibility.

Water skiing

• Once again, if you can't see them they can't see you. Water skiing is only permitted from one hour after the sun goes up to one hour before the sun goes down.

• All vessels towing a skier must have a competent observer at least 12 years old watching the skier or a mirror with 78 square inches viewing area.

• In order to tow a skier, a watercraft must have two mirrors with a viewing area of 10 square inches each. The mirrors cannot be mounted on the steering mechanism.

• Be aware of your surroundings. All vessels must stay 100 feet away from a 'Divers Down' flag.

Rules of the "Road"

Here's the easy but tricky part.

"Driving a boat is a lot like driving a car," said Cliff Hughes, Directorate of Morale, Welfare and Recreation, recreational program manager, "you have to pay attention to what and who is around you at all times."

Hughes said that many of the reported accidents at Uchee Creek are because of people running into things with their boats.

To avoid such accidents, the Uchee Creek staff ensures that everyone who rents a boat or watercraft from the marina take a boating safety course and know how to run the equipment.

Also, anyone renting a boat has to sit through a 30 minute safety video to enure they understand the basic safety rules.

They also get a hands on lesson from the Uchee Creek staff on how to operate the boat.

"We go to great lengths to make sure our boaters are safe and they understand how to operate the boats," Hughes said.

• Avoid "road" rage. A vessel overtaking or passing another vessel may pass on either side, but the vessel being passed has the right of way.

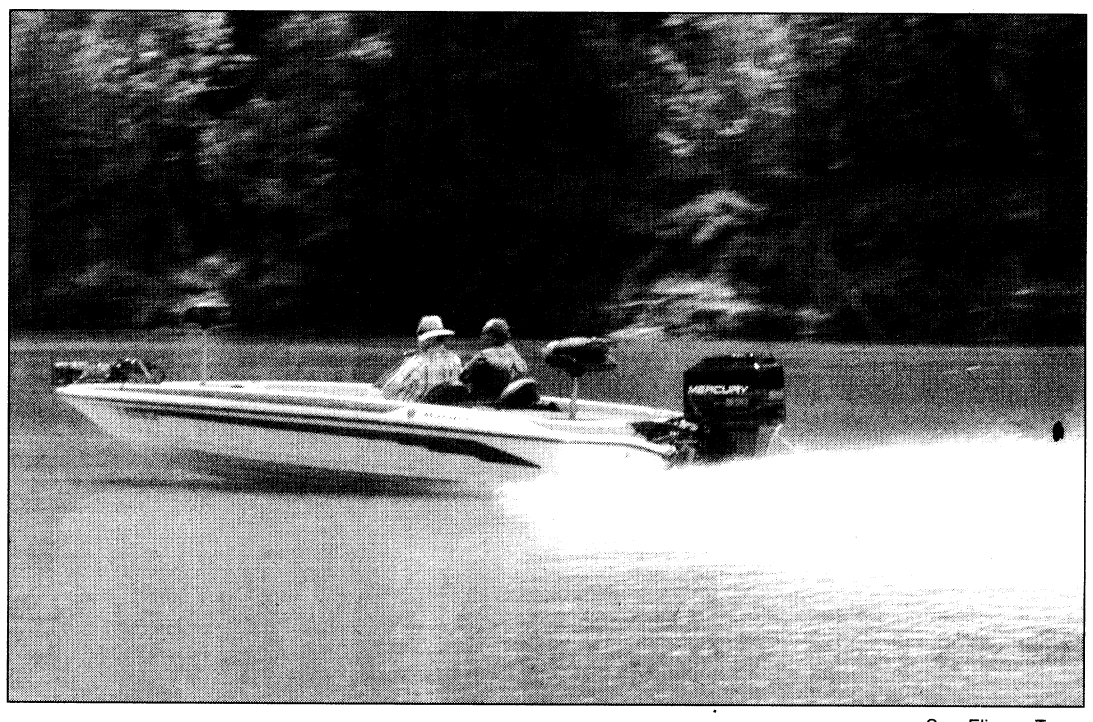
• When meeting another vessel head on, wave hello and keep to the right.

• When crossing another vessel, the vessel on the right has the right of way, so slow down and let it go through.

• When operating in a narrow channel, all vessels will keep to the right of mid channel.

• Obey all restrictive signs and buoys. Operate at an idle speed around gas docks and loading docks.

• All accidents involving death, serious injury or a disappearance from a vessel must be reported to the proper authorities within 48 hours.



Swimming

• Use the buddy system. Never swim alone in unsupervised areas.

• Don't dive or jump into unfamiliar water. Keep in mind that shallow water or submerged trees or rocks may cause injury or even paralysis.

• Don't stay in the water too long, especially when the water is cold.

For more on swimming and boating safety, laws and regulations, visit www.vesselsafetycheck.org, www.uscgboating.org or www.americasboatingcourse.com.

Spc. Eliamar Trapp

Cliff Hughes, recreational program manager, said most of the boaters at Uchee Creek go there to fish although some people do take out jet skis and catch waves the fishers leave behind.

Brig. Gen. Benjamin Freakley umpired the first pitch, a "steeerike," and Elizabeth Smith, 9, a third-grader at Loyd, was the catcher.

Hundreds of Fort Benning school children attended the ceremony, which was sponsored by DMWR, the Defense Commissary Agency and Wisk, as part of Wisk's America Needs Dirt campaign.

The 101st Airborne Division's Screaming Eagles jumped onto Gowdy Field to deliver the baseball Ripken used to throw the first pitch.

"It's about the kids," Cal Ripken Jr. told a crowd during the April 29 rededication of Gowdy Field, which was named in honor of Harry "Hank" Gowdy when it was first dedicated in 1925.

Bridgett Siter
Bayonet staff

The event was sponsored by the makers of Wisk laundry detergent, but the theme of last week's Gowdy Field rededication was dirt and dark clouds.

Cal Ripken Jr., former two-time All-Star MVP for the Baltimore Orioles, said in spite of the dark cloud that hangs over professional baseball, kids today are bright enough to see past the scandal and know that "there are no shortcuts to success."

"There's nothing like hard work and doing it from within," said Ripken, who's work ethic made headlines in 1995, when he broke Lou Gehrig's record for consecutive games played — 2,130. Ripken's streak didn't end until 1998, when he played his 2,632 straight game.

Another baseball legend and hard-working hero was on hand for the first dedication of Gowdy Field 80 years ago. Harry "Hank" Gowdy answered the call twice when a dark cloud hung over the nation.

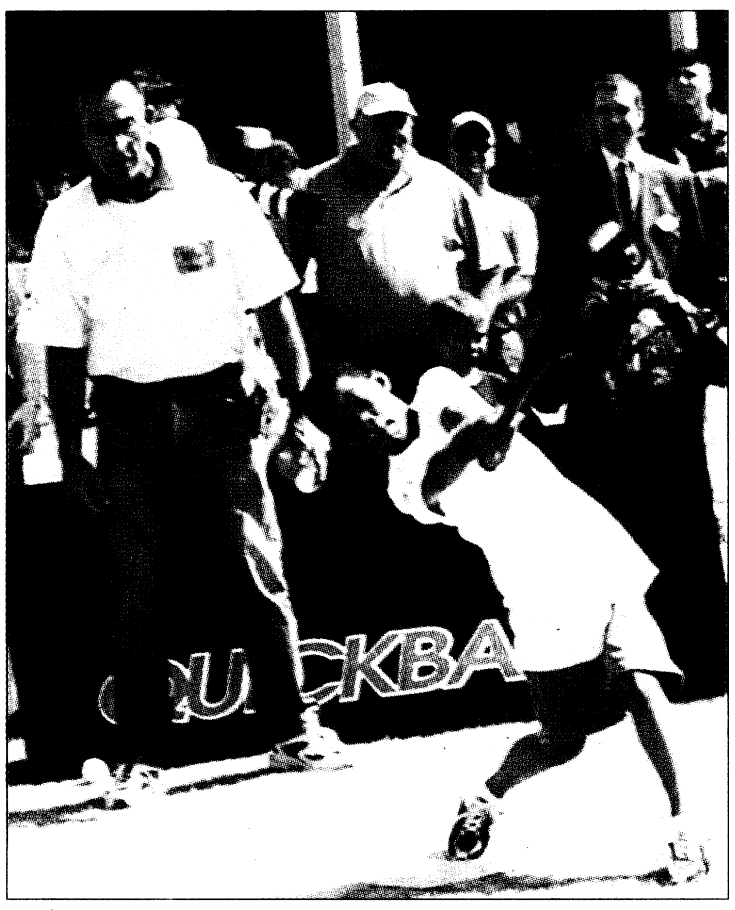
Gowdy, who was named MVP for the 1914 World Series' "Miracle" Boston Braves, put his Major League career on hold in 1917 to serve in the Army. He went to war with the 166th Infantry Regiment, part of the "Rainbow Division," in Europe.

Gowdy returned to baseball in 1919 and played with the Braves until 1923, for a total of 17 years in the Majors. He was a Major League coach when World War II broke out, and once again he exchanged uniforms. At 53, he was commissioned as a major and served as the chief athletic director at Fort Benning.

Brig. Gen. Briant Wells signed a proclamation naming Fort Benning's new baseball field after Gowdy in 1924, and a year later, the New York Giants played the Washington Senators in the opening game.

The field was Fort Benning's recreational hub for many years, but eventually fell into disrepair. For a while, with more and more children turning to other sports, there seemed to be very little interest in resurrecting Gowdy Field. That's a phenomenon Ripken has seen across the country.

"Seems to me there are more and more backstops coming down," he said, citing a a study that shows 90 percent of this nation's youth spend 90 percent of their time indoors.



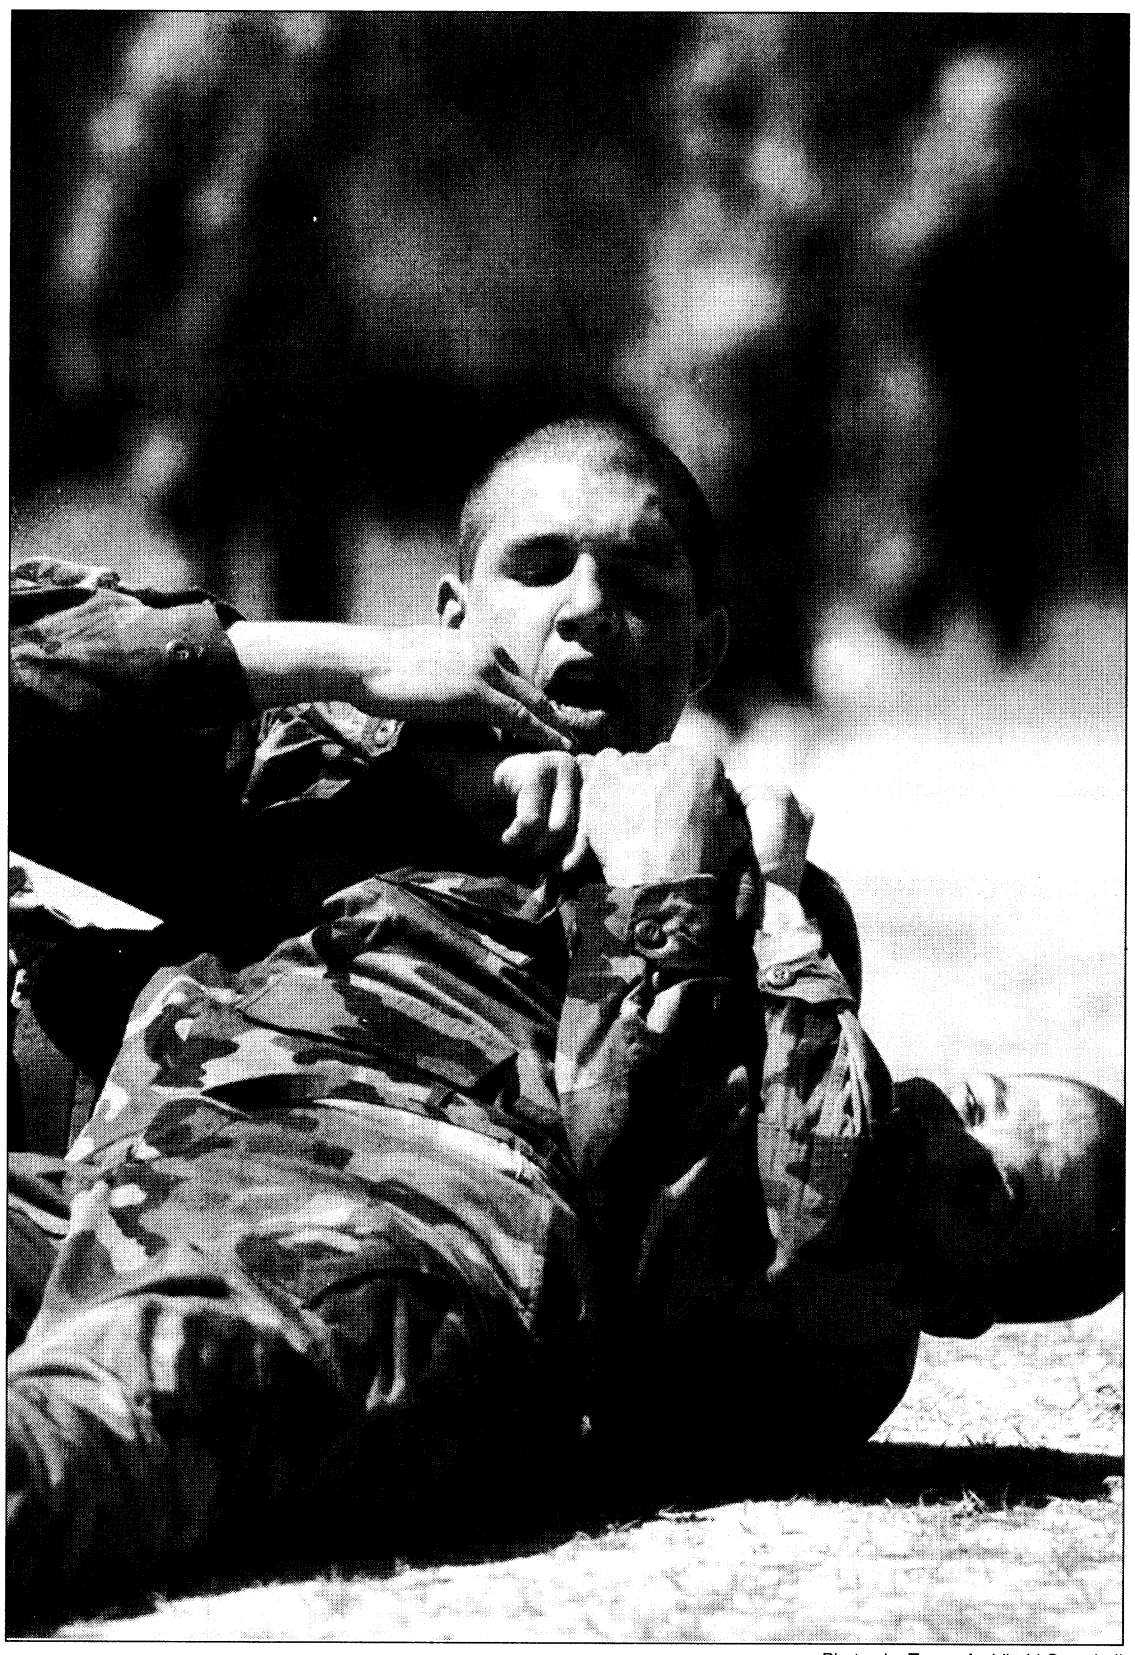
"I thought it would be a good goal to see how many backstops I could put up around the country, because I believe baseball is the best way to encourage kids to get outdoors and get dirty."

Toward that end, Ripken teamed up with Wisk detergent to promote the company's "Win a Dream Field" contest, with the grand prize being a field "makeover." Fort Benning was one of the grand prize winners. Out of more than 1,600 communities, post residents amassed 64,360 "Wisk" points by purchasing 6,436 bottles of the laundry detergent at the commissary.

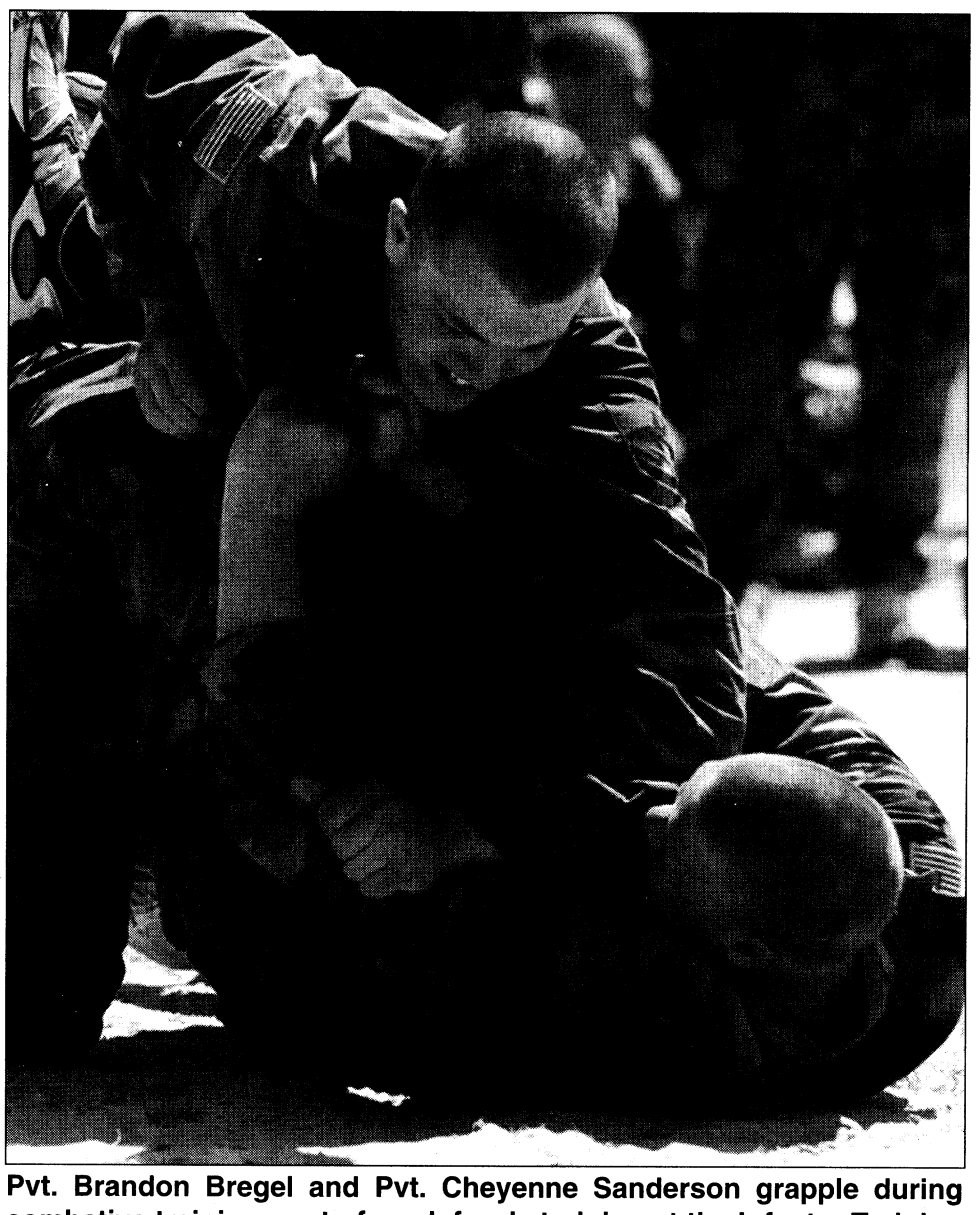
That's $32,000 worth of Wisk, or 130,000 loads of laundry, said Tom Milks, the deputy director of commissary systems for the East.

"This is all because of you," he told the crowd of nearly 500.

A member of the Fort Benning parachute exhibition team, the Silver Wings, and the 101st Airborne Division's Screaming Eagles jumped onto the field to present Ripken with the baseball he used to throw the ceremonial first pitch, as Gowdy did 80 years ago.



Fort Benning students took turns at bat as Ripken pitched.



Nearly 300 students from Loyd Elementary attended the ceremony. Ripken welcomed them onto the field, occasionally tossed balls at them and offered them tips to improve their batting.

Recruits learn fighting techniques

Infantry Training Brigade's week four is dedicated to teaching new Soldiers basic rifle marksmanship, proficiency on the live fire ranges and confidence in themselves and their weapons. Combatives is also taught during this portion of training to instill the warrior ethos and give recruits confidence in their ability to defend themselves and their buddies in the event that they do not have a weapon.

Editor's note: The Bayonet's Tawny Archibald Campbell will follow B Company, 1st Battalion, 19th Infantry Regiment, through 14 weeks of training, offering readers a look at training for new Soldiers at the Infantry Training Brigade.

Feliz Cinco de Mayo!
Thursday was Cinco de Mayo, which commemorates the Mexican Army's victory over the French at the Battle of the Puebla, May 5, 1862. On Cinco De Mayo, many Mexican-Americans celebrate their cultural heritage with music, traditional foods and parties.

Project Linus provides blankets, comfort

Recipient says blanket is symbol of love

Tawny Archibald Campbell
Bayonet staff

The blue and orange fringed blanket is only three months old, yet it bears the signs of wear that only come after countless hours of use. The fleece throw has absorbed tears, warmed weary shoulders and been a source of comfort and security to its 11-year-old owner.

Chyna Salie sees the blanket as a symbol of love and generosity. A group of Girl Scouts, participating in Project Linus, gave Chyna and her two younger brothers each a blanket shortly after their father was killed Feb. 14 while serving in Iraq.

"It's sort of like a 'little blankie' to me," Chyna said. "It's not that I carry it around everywhere with me, but I go to bed and sleep with it every night. It reminds me that somebody cares."

Project Linus is a nonprofit volunteer organization that distributes blankets to children who have been traumatized, suffered a loss, been injured or are ill, said Bridgette Colburn, a volunteer with the Columbus chapter of Project Linus, which helped organize the effort to get blankets to the Salie children.

The project was founded on Christmas Eve 1995 when an article was published, profiling a young girl who had been going through intensive chemotherapy. In the article she said her security blanket helped her get through her treatments.

After seeing the story, a Colorado woman decided to make security blankets to donate to the local children's cancer center, and Project Linus was born. The project is named after the Peanuts cartoon character, Linus, who is never without his baby blue blankie.

Now the blanket project has more than 250 chapters around the country and thousands of blankets have been distributed to children throughout the world.

Path to friendship

Good Samaritan comes to aid of injured schoolmate

Bridgett Siter

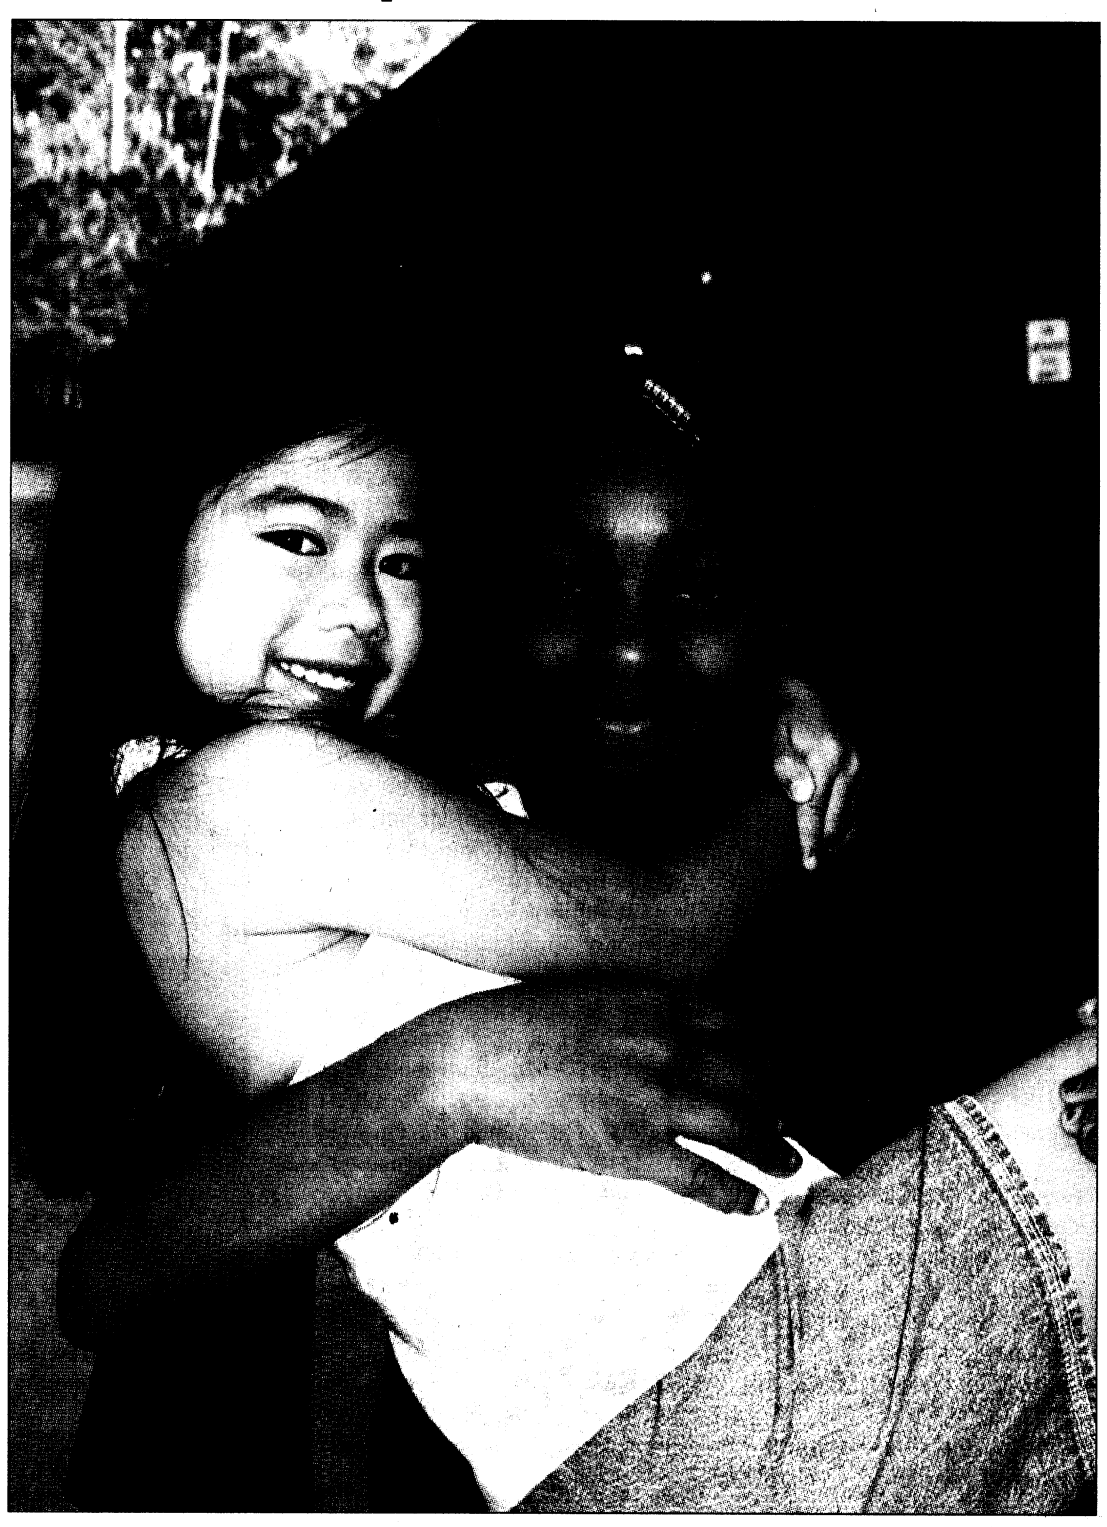
Aryana Ybay is going to be just fine, thank you — no loose teeth, no scars, no permanent damage.

But Kieara McCaskill didn't know that when she scooped up Aryana, bloody and scared, and carried her to the nurses office.

"There was blood everywhere," said Beverly Keese, the nurse at Stowers Elementary School, where 5-year-old Aryana and 9-year-old Kieara attend. "It looked really bad, a lot worse than it turned out to be, thank goodness."



The girls were on the walking path on the way to school from their homes in Davis Hill last month, when a boy on a bicycle collided with Aryana, sending her face-first into the pavement. She was covered in blood, Kieara said, and it frightened the other children on the path, who ran in all directions.

Kieara didn't know the younger girl, though the two crossed paths often on the way to and from school. But the third-grader has a little brother of her own, and if he should get hurt: "I'd want someone to take care of him for me," she said.

Aryana paid a visit to the emergency room, where she was treated and released. Her wounds have healed nicely.

The blood was washed from Kieara's coat and sweater.

The only reminder of the frightful incident is a framed certificate of appreciation Stowers' principal presented to Kieara and the friendship that has grown between the two.

Range noise reason for relocation

Homes don't meet RCI guidelines for acceptable noise levels

Tawny Archibald Campbell
Bayonet staff

It's too noisy in Bouton Heights. That's what a new survey shows, and it means that certain residents within the housing area will have to leave their homes.

The noise generated by firing ranges near one area of Bouton Heights exceeds the noise levels mandated by the Residential Communities Initiative regulatory guidelines.

The residents within the affected area will be relocated to McBride Place at the government's expense, according to a letter to be sent by Col. Ricardo Riera, garrison commander. The relocated families will send their children to McBride Elementary at the beginning of the next school year.

"Once the new quarters are built in Patton Village (across from Sand Hill), you will be in the first group to move into them," Riera's letter states. "You will be contacted by the family housing office to schedule your move as quarters become available in McBride Place."

McBride Place is an area within McGraw Manor. The homes families will move to are located between Moon Street and I-185, said Jim Wiggins, chief of the Fort Benning housing division. He said the residents will need to move out of their homes by Nov. 15.

Fort Benning officials have not yet decided what they will do with the vacated homes, but they could be turned over for use by the Directorate of Morale Welfare and Recreation or used for guest housing.

They could also be used to house single Soldiers. The homes are located in an area designated noise level three, which prevents families from living there, but would allow single Soldier to occupy the homes.

"These are the newest quarters on Fort Benning," Wiggins said. "They were built in 1975 and 1976, and we haven't had any complaints of the noise that we know of. But we need to have families out prior to the RCI takeover."

Ninety-four single level units are considered to be within the noise level three areas. These houses include all of Buker Street, Bennet Court, Storey Court, Michael Loop, Leisy Court, Dunn Loop, Johnston Loop, 1st Calvary Division Road and 26 houses on Doane Loop.

"Nobody wants to move. I understand that," Wiggins said. Unfortunately it is just something we have to do.

"We will try to make it as painless as possible for the families. The bottom line is that those within noise level three have to move."

Wiggins said the housing division will cover all moving costs and will pay for fences, phone and cable to be moved from one residence to the other.

If residents have questions on the moves, or to find out if they are on the list to move, they can call 545-3047 or 545-2988.

Vacation Bible School runs June 13-17

Serengeti Trek theme of non-denominational VBS

Spc. Eliamar Trapp
Assistant editor

Pack up the kids' safari gear, because they're going to the Serengeti Trek — well, not literally.

That's the theme for this year's Vacation Bible School sponsored by the Fort Benning chaplains.

This year's VBS is scheduled from 9 a.m. to noon June 13 through the 17 at White Elementary School.

The program is nondenominational, specially designed by a company called Group, said Lolita Allen, VBS director.

She said the program helps children understand about the love of Jesus and gives them a chance to interact with other children.

Allen said each day ends with a story with a "cliffhanger ending" that leaves the children trying to figure out the answer and has them ready to come back the next day.

VBS registration is open for children in preK through sixth grade at no charge.

Parents can register in room 122 of Meloy Hall, Building 6 or after their Sunday church service, Allen said.

"And we always need workers and helpers," Allen said.

"We can use just about anyone who loves God and children and who is energetic enough to keep up with the kids."

The VBS program requires about 40 volunteers to be station leaders and crew chiefs. Station leaders run the different stations the children go through and crew chiefs guide the children from station to station.

If there are children too old to sign up for VBS, they can sign up to be crew chief assistants and help the crew chiefs with the children.

There is a mandatory meeting for all people interested in volunteering from 6:30 to 9 p.m. May 12 at Meloy Hall, Building 6.

For more information, call 545-4715.

ASK THE JUDGE

Anthony R. Tempesta
Office of the Staff Judge Advocate

Q: How can I be billed for international calling rates when I dialed a telephone number in the United States?

A: You would know if you were making a telephone call outside the U.S., wouldn't you? Surprisingly, you might not.

To call outside the U.S., you must first dial a country code prefix most of the time. But there are dozens of area codes in the Caribbean that are actually billed as international calls from the U.S., such as 664 (Montserrat), 758 (St. Lucia) and 809 (Dominican Republic).

Telephone scams are frequently set up where callers are asked to dial such a number, usually claiming that a prize has been awarded and the winner must call in to receive the prize. When the caller does so, the person on the other end of the telephone tries to keep the caller on the line for as long as possible in order to increase charges. Charges to these telephone numbers can run as high as $25 a minute.

Another telephone scam targets people who have placed lost pet ads in the newspaper. The scammer contacts the lost pet owner and claims that someone he knows has taken the pet and moved from the area, and gives a name and an 809 area code number where that person can be reached. As stated before, 809 numbers are billed at the international rate, and the scammer keeps the lost pet owner on the phone as long as possible to run up the bill.

Do not call a telephone number if you do not recognize the area code, as these calls can cost a lot more than you would think.

Army goes live with Web registry for child care

Helps parents with child care decisions

Shadi May
Army News Service

SAN ANTONIO, Texas — The U.S. Army Family Child Care program now offers the ArmyFCC.com — a Web-based information and referral tool for parents considering using home-based care.

The FCC program provides military members or qualified civilians a home away from home for their children through military family members or independent contractors in individual housing units located on a military installation, in government-controlled housing off the installation or civilian housing off the installation.

"We hope ArmyFCC.com will allow parents to view the program in a way they haven't been able to do before," said Marilyn Judge, director of Fort Sam Houston FCC. "Getting information out to the perspective parents is very helpful to us, parents and providers."

A virtual tour of an FCC home offers parents, who may be reluctant to visit a series of homes in order to make a selection, pictures and information they need to know to make an important decision.

"It's making our referral process much more efficient," Judge said. "The providers will make their own updates from their home computers."

The Web site also allows the providers to tell, in their own words, what they do and what is important to them and gives each one an equal chance to impress prospective parents.

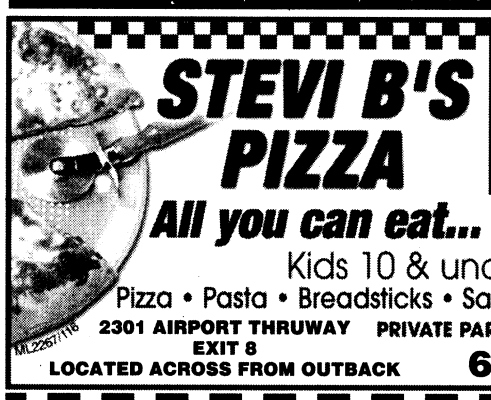
"It is an opportunity for us to showcase our homes and really introduce ourselves as independent businesses," said Shawn Lowery, an FCC child-care provider at Fort Sam Houston. "The program helps break the baby-sitter stereotype, moving us to a new category."

The secure section offers protection to both the providers and the parents so that only eligible parents can view provider information.

The Central Enrollment Registry staff at each installation will assist in the search process and can answer questions parents may have about individual FCC provider profiles. To make it a fair process for all families, parents must request child care through the installation's CER office.

The officials said that, although ArmyFCC.com gives parents an advance start in selecting the best placement for their child, it does not guarantee a space in a specific home and parents should not use ArmyFCC.com as a substitute for the parent and provider interview.

As the number of temporary duty trips and deployments rises, the FCC program makes life easier for Soldiers and their diverse work hours by offering full-day, part-day and hourly care. FCC's special services include 24-hour and long-term care during mobilization and training exercises, evening and weekend care, and care for special needs children and mildly ill children.



In order to benefit from any CYS programs, to include FCC services, families must complete a registration process and pay a registration fee, but it is not necessary to complete the registration process to place a child's name on the waiting list.

The installation Central Enrollment Registry office follows DoD, Army and installation policies for managing waiting lists. When a child's name comes to the top of the waiting list, a CYS registration clerk will contact the parent to offer the vacancy and provide information on the process of selecting a program or individual provider.

"I think it's great that the providers are getting this kind of support and attention," said Judge. "They put in long hours to provide child care, and they are not as visible as an activity taking place in a facility. It gives them proper exposure."

Blankets: Help children in need

Fort Benning chaplains and their assistants hand out blankets to pediatric patients at Martin Army Community Hospital and volunteers with the Columbus chapter make sure other hospitals and charity groups have the blankets to give to children they help.

"I got involved through my church," Colburn said. "A lady (there) has a daughter who requires a lot of medical care. A blanket was delivered to her when she had surgery in Atlanta, and (the mother) brought the idea back to us."

The local chapter is only a year old and already they have given out more than 200 blankets.

Tom Fox, a volunteer chaplain at MACH, has been handing out the blankets to pediatric patients since August. He said the blankets are given to newborns on up to 18-year olds.

"I was told, when we have pediatric patients, blankets are to be given to them to provide support, security and comfort," Fox said. "I sort through the blankets to find one appropriate for the gender and age. Then I deliver it to them, we talk a little and I tell them about the organization that made the blanket.

"I think (the children) are just impressed that somebody cares, that a complete stranger did something for them, and they will probably never meet that person."

Colburn said she doesn't volunteer for the kudos, but when she gets a letter back thanking her for her efforts, it doesn't go unnoticed.

"I am just happy to be able to give them some joy," she said. "Sometimes it's nice to see how a life has been touched."

Deanna Salie said her family was affected by the kindness of those who volunteer with Project Linus.

"It touched me that total strangers would take the time to consider my children and to think of ways to comfort children they have never even met," Salie said. "(The blankets) give them the knowledge that in a time of war and so much upheaval, there are still people who are kind enough, and caring enough that they would take time to consider the needs of someone else's children."

Salie recognizes the majority of the volunteers have jobs, families and other obligations, yet they still take the time to lift the spirits of children in the community.

"I would like to thank them for what they've done," she said.

"No matter what the response has been for what they are doing, I want them to know that one person or organization can make a world of difference to one child who has lost a parent, or who is injured or sick. Thank you all."

To become involved in Project Linus go to www.projectlinus.org or call Becky Motes, chapter organizer, at 324-3399.

Doing his work

Chaplain (Maj.) George G. Gonzalez
USAG Chaplains Office

After Jesus is raised from the dead, there is a wrinkle in the story line that has to be resolved. The resurrection brings Jesus back among us, which is good news — but by his own admission Jesus has to leave so the spirit can come.

So Jesus has to be removed from the scene again somehow. Since he has already conquered death, the usual departure is not an option. He has to leave by another door.

The Evangelists don't agree, however, about when and where that historical door opened.

When we start casting around for the facts concerning the historical Jesus like this, we put ourselves at risk of missing the story in favor of the history.

The gospel writers are each trying to consolidate a generation's worth of theological reflection into a concise paragraph, so they employ symbols to emphasize their points.

Places are archetypal; that is, they mean something when the name is evoked, much like the way the name of your hometown is so much more than just another place.

Jerusalem is the holy city where they glory of God chose to dwell. A mountain is the preferred location of divine expression and revelation, as Moses learned at Sinai and Jesus reminds us at the Transfiguration.

Bethany is the last place a dead person, Lazarus, was raised up. The Mount of Olives is where Jesus often prayed and also chose to spend his final hours once before.

All of these locations are fitting backdrops for the departure of Jesus because they all have great symbolic meaning to the early Christians. What the gospel writers may be saying above all is that the last place you and I encountered Jesus — wherever that may be — is significant first and foremost because of Jesus, not merely because of the place. It is best not to enshrine a location when it is the encounter that matters.

The Gospels give different accounts of Jesus' ascension into heaven, but the message is the same: Christ now has no hands on Earth but ours ... what happens to the glorified body of Jesus is really out of our control, and perhaps none of our business.

The real important things is, we have work to do and we are "commissioned" (by our own baptism) to fulfill this prophetical and missionary job.

Reserve space now for beach getaway

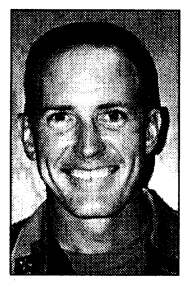
REFLECTIONS

Do you have a Soldier in Iraq or Afghanistan right now? If you do, then you're a HomeFront Hero. Do you know what you're entitled to as a HomeFront Hero? Well, how about a three-day, two-night little getaway to a place called Panama City Beach? That's right. As part of the HomeFront Heroes retreat, I'm offering all spouses of deployed Soldiers a chance to get some R&R of your very own. (I can actually hear the cheering across post in my office right now!) But you'll have to respond fast, because space is limited.



On May 20, 21 and 22, Fort Benning is going to experience an Army first — I will be privileged to lead the "HomeFront Heroes" retreat for spouses of deployed Soldiers to Panama City, Fla.

This is going to be a three-day, two-night retreat with child care included for those who cannot make the arrangements elsewhere for the weekend.

The purpose of the retreat is to honor the sacrifice being made by our spouses of deployed Soldiers by giving them a "beach break" where they can enjoy hope, help, laughter and learning in a setting just for them.

There will be relaxation and inspiration for a donation of just $11.11 per family.

Sound like fun? You can bet your beach ball it will be.

Hawkins

To register for this limited space event, you need to call 545-1760 to have your name placed on the reservation list.

Details, you say? Sure, I've got them.

Again, the HomeFront Heroes Retreat will begin the evening of May 20. Transportation to Panama City will occur one of two ways.

You can choose to travel via your vehicle or carpool with a friend who is going. Or you can, when registering, indicate your desire to travel via the Army bus that will also be offering transportation to the beach from Fort Benning.

After check-in and being assigned to private and attractive motel units at Panama City's Naval Support Annex (it sits right on St. Andrew's Bay in Panama City Beach with a lovely private beach), the activities of May 20 will include a welcome and high-energy, fun-filled get-to-know each other session.

Paid child care workers and volunteers will serve any children for whom you were not able to make arrangements during your time in our retreat sessions.

After a good night's rest and a convenient breakfast onsite, May 21 will see you enjoying a mid-morning session designed to offer you the help and hope you deserve as a spouse of a Soldier in the midst of a combat deployment.

Lunch is on us, too, as you get ready to enjoy an afternoon of fun in the sun, or whatever you choose to do with your free time.

After the barbecue the evening of May 21, we'll meet again to discover more tools to help you cope with the challenges of deployment before enjoying a sunset over the bay and a variety of games and movie options before bedtime.

The morning of May 22 will be a "day of rest" as you can opt to enjoy a bayside chapel service designed just for you or more R&R before checking out by 11:30 a.m. and starting the journey back home, inspired and renewed.

Want to save your spot and get more information? Call The Chaplain Family Life Center at 545-1760.

Space is limited, and is offered first-come, first-served.

Also, I'd be delighted to answer any questions for you at CrossRoads Contemporary Chapel at 11 a.m. Sundays. CrossRoads is on Kelley Hill and is open to all.

"O God, Bless all the men here with long hair and all those with no hair and help them to love each other for Christ's sake, Amen."

Julie of The O.C. striving to be better mom

John Crook
© Zap2it

If you were asked to compile a list of candidates for TV mother of the year, odds are good you might forget to consider Julie Cooper-Nichol of The O.C., the Thursday Fox drama nearing the end of its second season.

After all, last season, Julie indulged in a guilt-stricken but torrid affair with one of her teenage daughter Marissa's (Mischa Barton) hunky classmates (Chris Carmack).

And her relentless social climbing and obsession with status helped drive away first husband Jimmy (Tate Donovan) while upping Marissa's already heavy booze intake.

But since she was introduced as a shallow, stereotypical socialite in the show's 2003 pilot episode, Julie actually has undergone something of a transformation, said actress Melinda Clarke, Julie's off-screen alter ego.

"When we first met Julie, she was there mainly to represent everything the Cohens are not," Clarke said, referring to the good-hearted clan that adopted troubled teen Ryan Atwood (Benjamin McKenzie) on the nighttime soap. "Julie spoke in this kind of a smiling Stepford manner, but underneath the smile was the subtext of 'Jimmy, I want a divorce.'

"Ultimately, she has been shown to be much more dimensional than that. There has been a real arc to the character, and as flawed and misguided as Julie is, the most important person in her life is her daughter Marissa — and I'd like to say Kaitlin as well, but we haven't seen much of that character so perhaps that isn't quite as well-established," Clarke said, laughing.

The actress is alluding to Julie's younger daughter, who supposedly is away at boarding school and has almost never been seen since the show's early episodes.

"I like to say I have her tied up in a closet somewhere," Clarke said.

Still, she firmly believes Julie is genuinely trying to repair her fractured bond with the troubled Marissa, even if her clumsy attempts at a reconciliation only seem to drive the girl farther away.

"Julie's intentions are good, but her manner, the way she goes about things, is just intensely wrong," Clarke said. "She does love her daughter very much, but she doesn't know how to have a successful relationship with her — with almost anybody, for that matter.

"I'm sure that comes from her past, and (series creator) Josh Schwartz has said to me that Julie probably has one of the most interesting and textured pasts. We've only seen a fraction of how she managed to actually get to this position of society in Newport."

Clarke is understandably eager to explore that "interesting past," which O.C. fans recently have learned included making a porn tape during an earlier, more desperate point in Julie's life.

"What I have been told about Julie's past is actually quite a bit darker than I had expected," Clarke said.

"I've always imagined that Julie had an abusive or an absent father, since her mother had to work herself to the bone at two jobs and was on welfare and facing the worst possible of situations, which is what ultimately drove Julie to do erotica.

"I actually had a very strong reaction to that story line when I read it, and it wasn't easy for me. It's just that being a mother myself, I immediately thought, 'Oh, great. Now I can't let my daughter watch this!' "

That would be Kathryn Grace, Clarke's 5-year-old daughter with husband Ernie Mirich and a frequent guest on the set of The O.C., although Clarke is very careful about what she does and does not allow her daughter to see.

Melinda Clarke says her role as Julie Cooper-Nichol on Fox's Thursday drama The O.C. has deepened from a superficial start to a more fully dimensional depiction of a deeply flawed but loving mother.

"I don't let her watch me kissing other men, especially young men like Chris Carmack," Clarke said. "If you ask her what she thinks of her mom on TV, she'll say, 'I like her, but she's me-e-e-e-an!' She was only 3 when I started the show, so I have worked hard these past two years making sure she understands that it's not real.

"She thinks Mischa is her sister, since she plays my daughter on the show, and she actually has called 'action' and 'cut' on the set before, so I'm going to have to watch that. She's kind of bossy."

While Clarke insists that Julie looks and acts far more like a grown-up than she herself does in her off-camera life, the actress does seem to have a far clearer perspective on what motherhood means to her.

"Having a child has changed my life tremendously because, obviously, you have this other life that you're suddenly responsible for, 24/7," she said.

"It's one of the most difficult jobs in the world, but also the most rewarding. What I do for a living is fun, whereas motherhood has given me a connection with my daughter that is deeper than I have ever experienced. It's always growing and mind-blowing."

Bench Notes

Erin Nash

•Gordon takes 'Dega

Jeff Gordon held off Tony Stewart and a depleted field of drivers in the Aaron's 499 May 1.

Don't forget coverage of this week's race from Darlington is Saturday at 7 p.m. on FOX.

• Rincon suspended

Minnesota Twins' relief pitcher Juan Rincon was suspended for 10 games after testing positive for performance-enhancing drugs. MLB commissioner Bud Selig is trying to stiffen the penalties, with a lifetime ban after a third violation.

• NBA awards Wallace

Ben Wallace, center for the Detroit Pistons, won his third NBA Defensive Player of the Year award. Wallace also won in 2002 and 2003.

• Giddyup

The 131st running of the Kentucky Derby will be shown at 6 p.m. Saturday on NBC.

Get out your hats and stir up a pitcher of mint juleps.

• Yanks shake it up

After a disappointing April, New York Yankees manager Joe Torre is changing up the roster and lineup. Hideki Matsui moves from left field to center for an ailing Bernie Williams.

The Big Unit might be on the DL for a stiff groin. This is what $200 million buys.

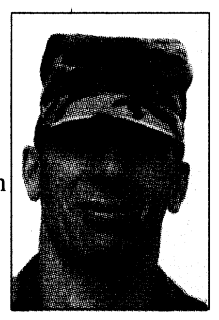
Local runners tackle Boston's best

Chatelain, Madler run historic route

Tawny Archibald Campbell
Bayonet staff

Larry Chatelain and Lisa Madler have a few things in common.

They're both older than 40, both started running marathons about three years ago, and both just completed one of the premiere marathons in the country — the Boston Marathon.



Unbeknownst to each other, Chatelain and Madler both donned their favorite running gear and laced up their racing shoes April 18 to run a 26.2 mile course that has been trod by some of the world's best and fastest distance runners.

Chatelain, 43, a first sergeant at 1st Battalion, 19th Infantry Regiment, finished the race in 3:15:15, and finished 1,929 overall, placing him in the top 10 percent of all registered runners.

Madler

Madler, 42, a seventh grade language arts teacher at Faith Middle School, finished in 4:27:41 and came in 13,336 overall.

Chatelain

Each ran for their own reasons, but both came away with the same excitement and enthusiasm that comes from running in arguably the best marathon on the country.

"I ran because I wanted to prove to myself that I can run this marathon," said Chatelain, who has now completed five marathons.

"Another reason I ran is because this is the oldest marathon run in the United States, and I guess I just wanted to be among those who can actually say they have finished it."

Both Madler and Chatelain said they weren't looking to

Los Lobos kicks up another win

Tawny Archibald Campbell

In a 6-0 win, Los Lobos shut out the Mean Machine in intramural soccer action Tuesday night at Doughboy Stadium.

WHINSEC's Los Lobos showed USAIC's Mean Machine just how soccer is supposed to be played.

"We kept the pressure on them at their end of the field the majority of the game," said Richard Lawless, goalie for Los Lobos. "We had a good defense and the back line did a good job. They stopped anything that came through. Then our forwards outmaneuvered their defense and we are able to score."

As the game started, both teams were evenly matched as they passed the ball back and forth across the turf.

"Their passes were more crisp and accurate than ours," said Jeff Jackson, Mean Machine's coach. "They became more aggressive than we did. They wanted the ball more."

During the first half, Los Lobos gained control of the center of the field and put the first point up on the board with a shot by Pablo MacKay. He was followed by Jorge Buchan who added another ball to the net.

"They had a pretty good defense, but we had a couple of breakaways early into the first half," Lawless said. "We had another score (by MacKay) late in the first half."

At the half time, Los Lobos had the lead, 3-0.

Buchan hit the back of the net early in the second half, and Mean Machine turned on the pressure but couldn't get the ball past the goalie.

Jackson said they missed the goals because they got too excited and forgot the fundamentals.

With two minutes left, Willington Zambrano shot one past the goalie to give the undefeated Los Lobos the 6-0 lead and the game.

"We played fairly consistent soccer tonight," Lawless said. "We continued to press and had good ball control."

"They just wore us out," Jackson said.

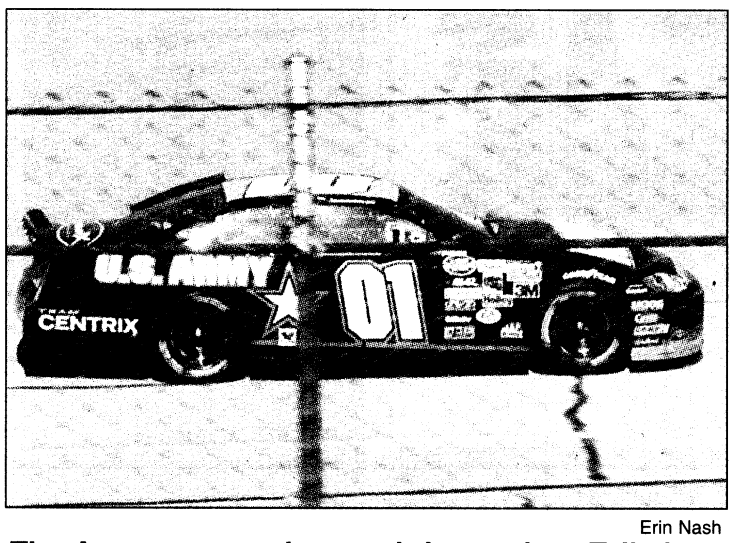
Talladega thrills NASCAR newbie

Erin A. Nash
Bayonet staff

I'm a NASCAR newbie. Within the last year, I picked my driver (Dale Earnhardt Jr.) and have watched almost every race. I admit I wasn't sure which driver I was supposed to dislike or what the difference between a restrictor and non-restrictor plate race was, but like I said, it's all new to me.

So, through several degrees of separation, I was able to go (for free) to the famed Talladega Superspeedway with my husband, son and my husband's co-workers for the race May 1. Boy did I learn a lot.



Even though I wasn't born when Woodstock (the real one) happened, I couldn't help but think this was, in a way, a modern-day, sportslike Woodstock. As soon as we were approaching the speedway, there were campers and tents as far as the eye could see. Nevermind the mud — it was tent city.

Everyone had on their racer's gear, from backpacks to hats to coolers and more. I had my No. 8 hat, so I fit in fine.

Our seats were about 50 yards from the start-finish line, and we were 12 rows up. I noticed immediately we were in Earnhardt nation, with a few Jeff Gordon and Kevin Harvick fans thrown in the mix.

Once Gordon took the lead, it was a free-for-all for the Junior fans.

I realized that as a Junior fan, Gordon was my nemesis. And whoever took the lead away from Gordon was our hero, unless it was Junior himself.

Erin Nash

The Army car raced around the track at Talladega May 1.

Talladega Superspeedway is a 2.66 mile track, and everyone was on their feet (most of us took a break during cautions and the red-flag stop after the 25-car crash), so it was kind of hard for a short girl like myself to see a whole lot.

I figured I'd try not to strain my eyes and watch the cars as they passed by, but catch them as they rounded turn one and as they came around turn 4.

What amazed me the most was the speed. Sure, if you're watching it on TV you know they're going fast, but there's nothing like watching it in person.

Feeling the cars go by at speeds of more than 150 miles per hour and the vibrations beneath your feet and through your body is awesome.

I'd highly recommend some sort of eye protection, as I got some debris in the chest a few times. There's just no way around that.

I'd love to go to another NASCAR race, soon. I'd probably learn a lot more about what it means to be a real NASCAR fan.

race as much as they wanted to enjoy the experience and bask in the excitement of the event.

"The main thing, about Boston, was the spectators," said Chatelain, who drew cheers from the crowd as he ran past in his bright yellow SpongeBob SquarePants t-shirt. "From start to finish you just feel the excitement from them. They don't even know you but they are rooting for you the whole way."

Madler said as the race started, spectators were standing three to four people deep, but by the end of the race they were stacked eight and 10 deep.

"When I got to the last eight miles, the spectators just started getting thicker," Chatelain said. "The last three to four hundred yards the spectators were just so thick, and they were so loud your could feel the vibrations from them screaming all through your body. It was just electric.

"Those last few hundred yards, my legs felt like rubber. But because of the spectators, and seeing the finish in sight, all the pain just went away — at least until after I crossed the finish line, then all the pain came back."

Madler said she will never forget how many spectators and runners there were. A total of 18,319 people ran in the event, 254 of whom were from Georgia.

"As I looked ahead, it was like a sea of balloons bobbing up and down in front of me," said Madler as she described the runners. "They were twisting and turning along the route. It was amazing."

Both runners trained for months before the marathon, running between 40-60 miles per week, and each found they had much to learn when it came to running a race of this magnitude.

"I was not prepared for the 17 miles of downhills and my legs were shot," Madler said. "It was a fight. My mind was ready, but my body wasn't. From mile twenty-three to twenty-six, it took me fifty minutes. I wasn't sore, but I think I just bonked and my race was over early."

She also learned tricks, like bringing a garbage bag to sit in and bringing enough food to eat before the race.

"I will know better next time what to plan on," said Madler, who plans on entering a qualifier race later this summer so she can run the Boston Marathon again next year.

Chatelain, on the other hand, has already qualified for next year's race, but doesn't plan on running it in 2006; instead he will run in Cincinnati. He's still a little star-struck from this year's race.

"For me, running this marathon is like a NASCAR fan being able to drive in the Indy 500," Chatelain said. "I ran with Alan Culpepper, who came in twelfth in the Olympics (and fourth in this year's race). He and I started to the sound of the same starter gun. Some people just don't understand, but I've run in races with world-class athletes, people who make thousands of dollars running. I'm just a runner, but now I can say I ran the Boston Marathon."

Soldiers deploy to Iraq on yearlong mission

Spc. Eliamar Trapp
Assistant editor

A component of the 608th Ordnance Company left Fort Benning with 12-month orders to Iraq May 5 in support of Operation Iraqi Freedom III.

The Soldiers were notified of their deployment in January and spent the months since preparing.

"The Soldiers are constantly training for deployments, because our mission as ammunition specialists is an important one," said 1st Lt. Audrey Matthews, platoon leader. "We need to be able to get ammunition to the Soldiers in the front lines when they need it."

This is the second deployment for Spc. Tomeka Merricks, a 608th Soldier. As motivated and ready to go as she is, it still hurts to leave.

Soldier dies in rollover

Donna Hyatt

A memorial service was held for Pfc. Matthew A. Beyerlein at the Infantry Center Chapel Tuesday.

Beyerlein

Beyerlein was traveling northbound on I-185 April 30 when his vehicle left the roadway, crossed the median into the southbound lane and came to rest upside down in the Upatoi Creek.

Beyerlein died at the Columbus Regional Trauma Center May 1.

Capt. Steven M. Devitt, 988th Military Police Company commander, said Beyerlein was the company guidon bearer and "a shining example for all and the embodiment of the warrior ethos.

"He took the lead on any mission we gave him, and exceeded the standards in all areas of Soldiering," Devitt said.

Sgt. Matthew Mclean said he remembers Beyerlein as "a man with a very big heart. He was always motivated and happy to be here."

Beyerlein is survived by his parents, three brothers and a sister.

Funeral services were held earlier this week in Grand Rapids, Mich.

5th RTB commander awarded Bronze Star

Flohr will be military assistant to sec. of army

Bridgett Siter
Bayonet staff

Not much can be said about the actions that lead to Lt. Col. Doug Flohr's Bronze Star. He was responsible for establishing a forward operating base for a joint task force in Iraq two years ago.

The rest is classified, but when the details come out, and they will one day, "history will be very kind to Doug Flohr," said Col. K.K. Chinn, commander of the Ranger Training Brigade.

Chinn awarded Flohr the Bronze Star Saturday during the 5th Ranger Training Battalion's annual open house at Camp Merrill in North Georgia.

Flohr, who took command of the 5th RTB after returning from Iraq, was caught off guard by the award.

"I had no idea. I'm surprised — stunned actually," he said. "I'll just say this; You do your part in a combat situation without thinking about it a whole lot. This represents, to me, all the Soldiers who fought with us, who do what they do without thinking about awards or medals."

Flohr said he feels "pretty overwhelmed" by the award when he thinks of those who earned it before him.

"You read about Word War II veterans getting it, and to think now you've got one — that's pretty powerful," he said. "I was just happy to be a part of the (operation). Now I'm just happy to be in the company of a lot of good men."

It's the meaning behind the medal Flohr said he'll cherish. As for the medal itself, he'll send it to his father in West Virginia.

In what amounts to "the second overwhelming thing in three days," Flohr learned Monday that he's been selected to serve as the military assistant to the secretary of the army.

Bridgett Siter

Lt. Col. Doug Flohr, right, was awarded the Bronze Star Saturday by Col. K.K. Chinn in a surprise ceremony during the 5th Ranger Training Battalion's annual open house. Flohr, commander of the battalion, will serve as assistant to the secretary of the army.

ARMADILLOS ON MY MIND

Right or wrong, whale is state animal

Annette Fournier
USAIC Public Affairs Office

Do you know what the state animal of Georgia is? If you've read Various Voices, you can see most people don't. Strangely enough, it is the right whale.

Funny, I don't recall ever seeing a whale floating along the Chattahoochee. OK, fine, so it's an endangered species, and it's the only great whale in waters along the Georgia coast, but is it really so special?

With all the biodiversity in Georgia, there are so many interesting animals to choose, from the great blue heron, to the coyote, the alligator, or every Infantryman's favorite, the red-cockaded woodpecker. What about hogzilla?

But I have my candidate for the state animal picked out. It should be the armadillo. When I moved here, I had no idea there were armadillos in Georgia. How exciting! I was quickly informed by Georgians that there is absolutely nothing exciting about armadillos digging up the lawn. But to a Northerner, an animal-person like me, this critter is amazing. Up there, raccoons and squirrels are about as exciting as it gets.

Apparently, because armadillos have almost no body fat, they have to eat constantly and cannot handle cold weather. This limits them to the South.

Now you might not agree with me — nobody has so far — but armadillos are such cute, interesting, different animals that they're definitely worth the coveted title of Georgia state animal.

I found out about the armadillos after seeing one lying on the side of the road. I am hoping I will get to see one actually alive while I'm here, and hopefully not in front of the bumper of my car. I would be sad if I hit an armadillo, since it was bad enough when I ran over a turtle. Actually, I almost hit a cow once, so I suppose hitting an armadillo is preferable to a 1,500 pound bovine.

But apparently, as some Georgia natives informed me, a dead armadillo on the side of the road is a common sight. Armadillos eat carrion, so when they toddle out to eat roadkill at night, they end up becoming roadkill.

They don't have the best eyesight, and when they're approached by a predator, they jump to scare it. This may work well in the wild, but apparently it is not successful against the grill of a car.

But they're fascinating little critters. Did you know there are over 20 species of armadillos?

Most species live in South America, including the giant, the screaming hairy and the pink fairy armadillo. In North America, we have only the nine-banded armadillo, which despite all the roadkill, is doing much better than its South American counterparts. Most of them are endangered.

When I got curious about them, I started wondering what type of animal they are. They look reptilian with the shell, but they're actually mammals, because they give live birth, lactate and have some hair on their stomachs.

Armadillos can delay birth of their young up to two years if they are under stress. This ability has helped them survive and colonize new areas.

Armadillos are useful for medical research. They always give birth to identical pups, usually four. During gestation, one egg splits and the four zygotes share the same placenta, so the four pups are genetically identical.

Medicines are tested on them because the identical genes means medicine will affect each pup the same way, eliminating other factors that could impact research. Armadillos have been used for research on typhus, trichinosis, multiple births, organ transplants and birth defects.

They can be used for leprosy research, as their body temperatures are low enough for them to contract it, and they don't have a strong immune system. But don't get scared of the armadillos in your backyard. The only way to catch leprosy from an armadillo is to eat an infected one that was not thoroughly cooked. Supposedly their meat tastes like pork.

There are a million interesting facts about these creatures. They're great swimmers and can hold their breath up to six minutes.

Because of their heavy shell, they suck air into their intestines to float. They have four toes on the front feet and five on the back, and walk on their toes. If threatened by another armadillo, they can stand up on their back legs and tails and box with their front feet.

So jump on the bandwagon and lobby for the underdog! Why does the right whale get all the glory as the state animal? Come to think of it, what about the left whale? When is the last time a whale dug up your yard or tottered in front of your car?

Ok, maybe those aren't convincing arguments, but I still think armadillos are adorable, and worthy of recognition.

Cancer — get mad, get even, get walking

Melissa House
Bayonet staff

Tonight is the Relay for Life, so don't bother calling me at home. I'll be loading up the kids and heading over to Shaw High School's Kinnett Stadium in time for the official 7 p.m. kick off.

My boys are clamoring to go to "that place where you walk around the track all night," and they even want to bring a few friends. The more the merrier, and Team Bayonet is going to need all the merriment we can get.

If you've read some of my past commentaries, you know about my cancer connection — my grandmother, a cancer victim; two aunts, a dear friend and another dear friend's mother, all breast cancer survivors; and an uncle who has survived prostate cancer. When I sit to write the list of those I'm walking in memory and in celebration of, it takes a few minutes and costs a few tears as well.

And I'm not the only one. All of us have been touched by cancer. But this year, our office cancer connection got even stronger.

One of our team won't be walking with us, but supporting a family member recently diagnosed with cancer, and facing a bleak prognosis.

So tonight, I'm more than touched. I'm hopping mad and I hope you'll be mad right along with me.

It's long past time to find a cure for cancer in all its forms. To date, the American Cancer Society has thrown more than $2.5 billion into research, but people are still dying.

Get mad, get even and come walk with us. Or, if you don't like to walk, consider reaching into your pocket and making a donation. We'll love you for it.

Show support safely and wholeheartedly

Bridgett Siter
Bayonet staff

I'm by no means an alarmist. Quite the contrary, in fact, I tend to think we're all safe, despite overwhelming evidence otherwise.

In my world, the bad guys wear T-shirts that say "Bad Guy," and they live way over there somewhere. I don't warn my kids to wear clean underwear in case they get in an accident, because I don't believe they're going to get in an accident and I hate to do laundry.

And once, back in my younger days, I actually walked at a very fast pace carrying scissors. Very fast. I do live on the edge.

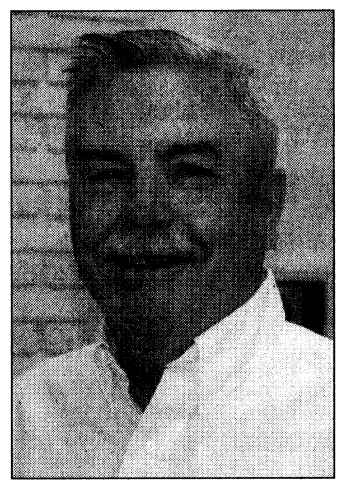
That said, I'm no fool. I know better than to invite trouble.

So I've become a bit concerned about something I'm seeing around town, namely bumper stickers that read, "Half of my heart is in Iraq." Now, I don't shy away from talking about my husband's job, and those close to me (and everyone reading this) know he's gone frequently. But I don't advertise. There are better ways to show my support — safely.

I'm not overly concerned about the "Support Our Troops" ribbons. They're fairly ambiguous, and everyone has them. But there's a big difference between that and "Keep My Soldier Safe." The bad guys can read between the lines. Why not get a vanity plate that says VULNRBL?

Last night, on my way home, I drove through the Wal-Mart parking lot and counted the bumper stickers that seemed to indicate the driver was driving single. I counted two. Not bad, unless you consider the potential consequences.

If we could crawl into the mind of a predator, I'm betting he would be thinking something like this: "I think I'll commit a criminal act against a stranger tonight. I'll drive around the parking lot until I spot a potential victim, someone alone. I'll narrow the field by scoping out the cars. The pick-up with the Realtree sticker is probably not a good bet. The pink pick-up? Maybe. Ahhh, what's this? ... Half my Heart is in ... ? Bingo."



Do yourselves a favor ladies — scrape off the bumper sticker and replace it with a "Rottweiler On Board." Save the sweet sentiments for your Soldier.

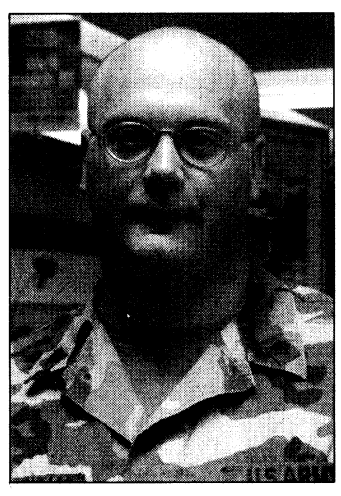
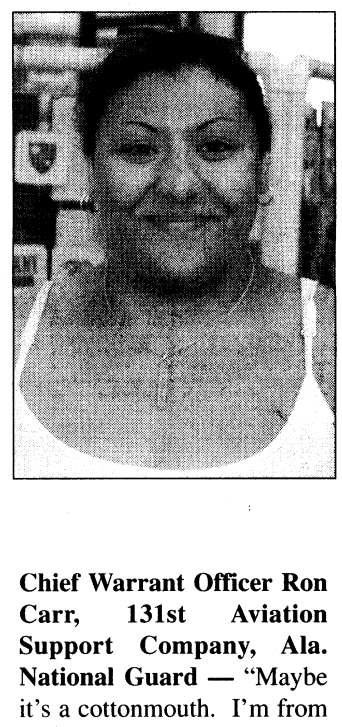
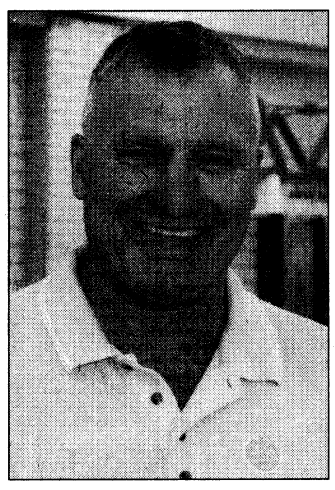
VARIOUS VOICES



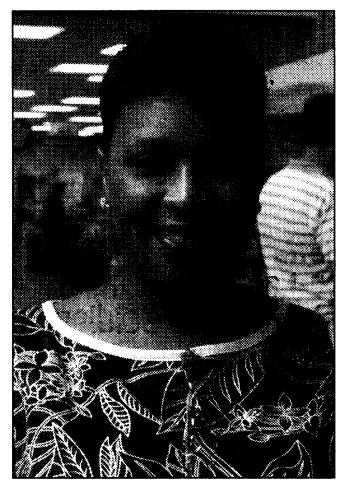
Can you name Georgia's state animal? (See commentary at left for answer)



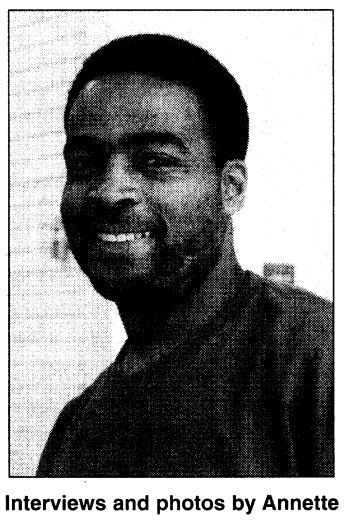
Retired Col. Gordon Rogers, Columbus — "I'd say it's the cougar or maybe the black bear, because there are still bears in the mountains of North Georgia. I'd even say it could be the armadillo."



Beverly Henry-Terry, family member — "I think it must be a squirrel, because you see them everywhere!"



Spc. William Blasingame, 1st Battalion, 10th Field Artillery Regiment — "I would think it must be a Georgia bulldog. I guess it's not, but it should be. I wouldn't be surprised if it was an armadillo, because you see them so much."



Krystle Rodriguez, family member — "I guess it might be a deer, because I see them on Fort Benning and all over the place. I think it should be a bulldog, because it fits Georgia and Fort Benning. We're strong."

Chief Warrant Officer Ron Carr, 131st Aviation Support Company, Ala. National Guard — "Maybe it's a cottonmouth. I'm from Texas, so I don't know much about Georgia, but I know that Texas' state animal is an armadillo."

Felicia Vickers, family member — "When I think of Georgia, I think of a Georgia peach, so I guess the animal is probably a bulldog. Those are our symbols, so it should be something that represents the state or the people."

Master Sgt. Scotty Johnson, 81st Regional Readiness Command Public Affairs Office — "Georgia's state animal has to be the woodpecker. I don't know which type, just one of the ones you see all the time. I think the state animal should be something indigenous to the area."

Soldiers get situational training at McKenna

Learn to deal with civilians on urban battlefield

Donna Hyatt
Bayonet staff

It's a volatile situation for Soldiers in certain parts of the world.

Who's on their side? How can they keep a kind deed from inciting a riot? When do they stop a potential homicide bomber, and how?

Scenarios such as these played out for nine days at McKenna Village, where Soldiers learned the finer points of defusing potentially hostile confrontations while protecting themselves and each other.

Capt. Charles Canon, platoon trainer for the 2nd Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment, designed the open-ended, multi-response exercise based on current overseas situations and personal experience.

"The idea is to have my men face scenarios they might encounter in an ambiguous environment," he said. "Based upon the course of action they take, they'll see their decisions followed to a logical and realistic conclusion."

Several wives of the Soldiers acted as insurgents. Colleen Middleton, wife of 2nd Lt. Tim Middleton, arrived with their youngest son to lend support to the mission.

Colleen has five children, but she brought only Andrew, almost 2, because she "didn't want the older ones to remember Dad in this type of situation when they watch news reports on television after he deploys."

Middleton said having his wife and child present through the confrontations "added an unexpected emotional realism and greater awareness for the safety of my loved ones in potentially explosive situations."

Andrew apparently slept through it all.

To lend more realism to the drill, the insurgent leaders spoke only their native tongues, forcing Soldiers to rely upon the services of an interpreter, just as they would in a real-life environment.

Following each confrontation, Canon assessed the Soldiers' actions and staged the next scenario based on the results.

Many of the trainees commended the subtlety and diplomacy involved in each situation.

Lt. Oscar Rayford, a member of A Company, 2nd Bn., 11th Inf. Regt., said that in addition to understanding MOUT operations and self discipline, "We're learning how to let civilians know our main purpose is to help them."

Emphasis was placed on Soldier safety and situational awareness while learning to defuse antagonistic situations.

Canon, his trainers and the trainees concluded the field exercise May 10 with a 16-mile march into a trapped ditch.

Columbus Water Works making waves on post

Partner working hard to improve water systems

Melissa House
Bayonet staff

Columbus Water Works took over water and wastewater management operations on Fort Benning Oct. 1, 2004.

With the signing, CWW entered into a 50-year agreement with the Army.

"They're partners, not contractors," said Larry Baca, of the Directorate of Public Works' Operations and Maintenance Division. "For a fifty-year relationship, we want something more than a contract."

And for their part, CWW came out of the starting gate at full speed, sinking about $3 million into equipment and other areas.

Steve Davis, CWW's vice president of engineering, said the company likes to think it has brought a new dimension to Fort Benning.

"There's attention to water and wastewater that's never been there before," he said.

Much of that attention occurred in the first two months of the contract, when the CWW staff made equipment-related improvements and established standard operating procedures for Fort Benning's antiquated water and waste water systems.

In the past, Fort Benning had trouble with the wastewater treatment plant. CWW jumped right on it.

"Wastewater is a health issue," said CWW's senior vice president, Cliff Arnett, "and the plants were not in compliance (with Georgia regulations). In the past nine years, there have been no violations in our South Columbus plant. That's what we're striving for."

And two months after CWW took over, the Fort Benning plant came into compliance.

"Water is precious to all of us," Arnett said. "Not only what we take out of the river, but what we put in. Our downstream friends ought to appreciate what we're doing."

And conservation is also a big part of the CWW effort on post, Arnett said. CWW identified an overflowing water tank in the Harmony Church area that was wasting about half of a million gallons of water daily.

Davis said CWW just finished the design and bid phase for two contracts for water mains and booster pumping stations to post. The plan is to hook into the CWW's water system through a 30-inch water main that leaves Benning Hills and crosses Victory Drive.

He expects the first load of water pipe to arrive next week, and work will begin on the Columbus end and move toward Fort Benning.

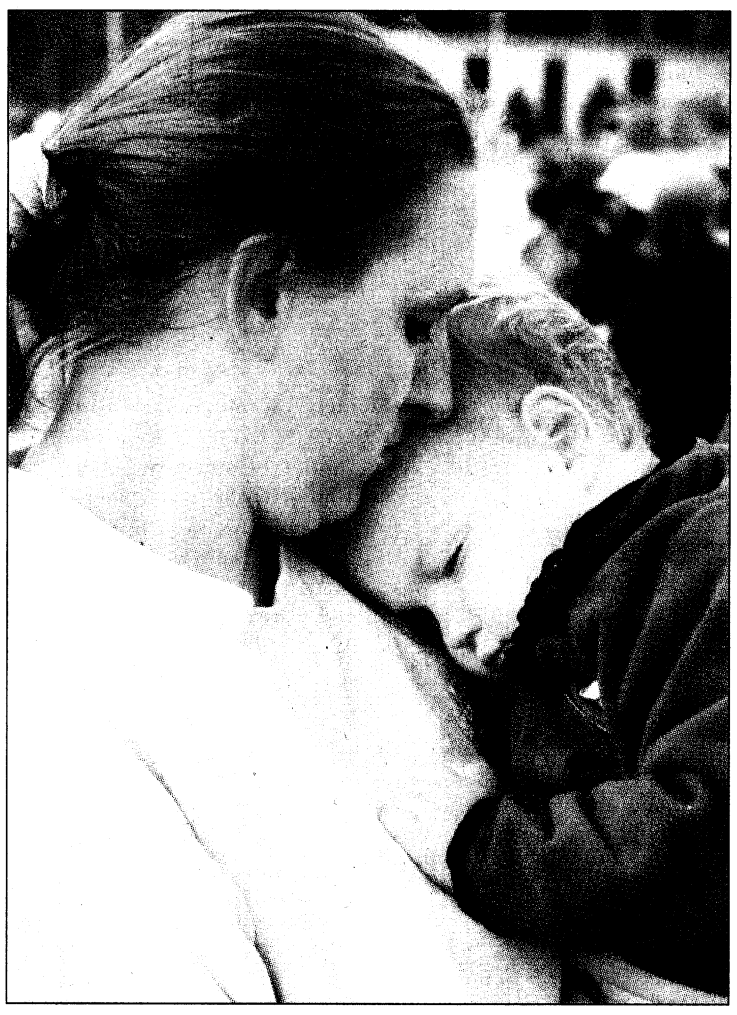
Residents will be notified of any temporary traffic disruptions caused by installing the new pipe, and CWW hopes to lay pipe near the schools during the summer.

By winter 2006, Davis expects the two post wastewater plants to go off line — replaced by a new booster and pump to the Columbus plant.

The old and new systems will run in tandem for six to 10 months to work out bugs and ensure reliability before the CWW decommissions the old facilities.

"Our milestones are clearly interconnecting the (Fort Benning) water and waste water (with Columbus) and decommissioning the old systems," Arnett said.

The interconnectivity will make the water service more reliable and efficient.



Once the systems are decommissioned, CWW will reduce the number of employees dedicated to maintenance from 28 to 16.

"But we're a twenty-four seven operation," Arnett said. "We don't get to take a nap."

He said they're also preparing for additional requirements that may arise as the result of any new units or new construction.

Tommy West, CWW's Fort Benning coordinator, said the progress thus far is the result of a lot of hard work from everybody.

"We've been pleased and we appreciate the cooperation from everyone down there," he said.

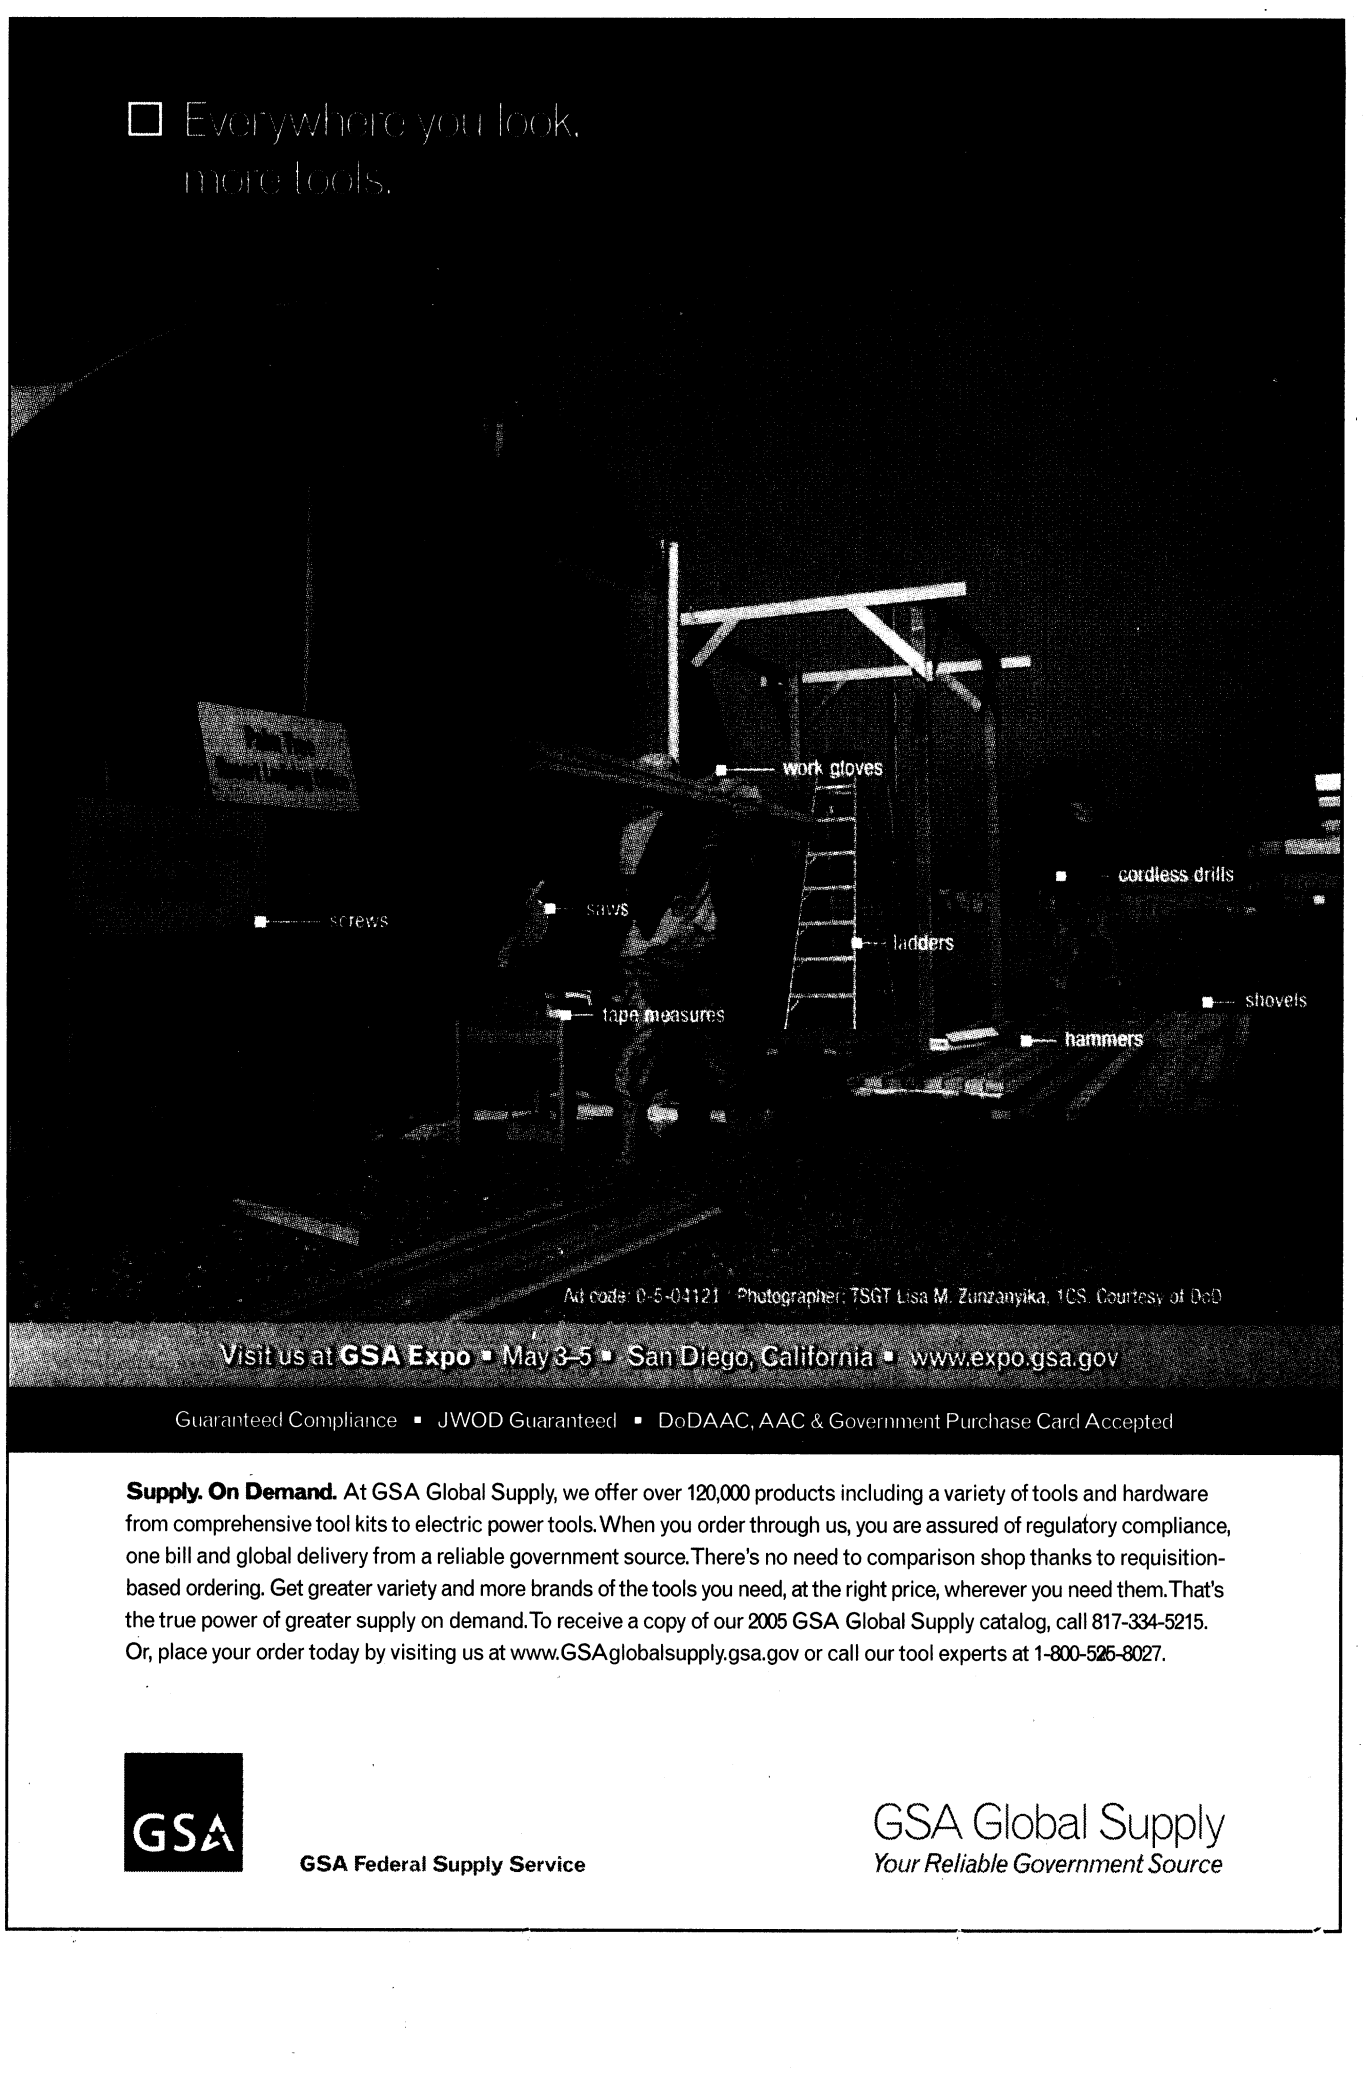
Quintaviusmoten, and this will be the second time I leave him for a year," Merricks said.

"He knows I'm leaving, and he was fine up until he saw the buses."

Matthews and 1st Sgt. James Huffstutler, company first sergeant, said the Soldiers in his company were leaving well prepared for to serve in this deployment.

"(They were) ready to go so they could hurry up and come home," Huffstutler said.



Jeanetta Catron and her husband, Spc. Jeremy Catron, are new to the unit and they are dealing with the effects of a second deployment in a year.

"It makes it easier to know he's going because he's in a small unit," Jeanetta said.

"His chain of command, the Family Readiness Group and my family have been a great source of support."

The 608th Soldiers returned from a 13-month deployment to Iraq in April 2004.

During the current deployment, the 608th will support the 206th Combat Support Battalion, a National Guard unit from New York.

OCS grad adds gold bars to Silver Star

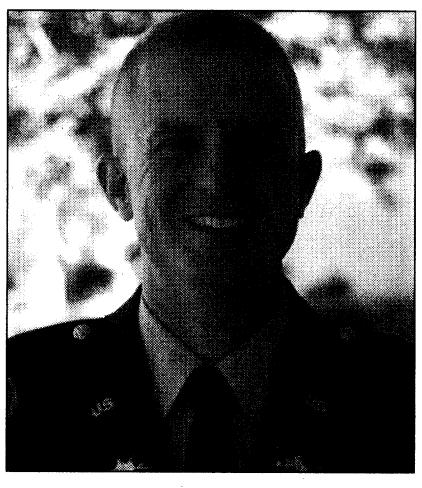
Melissa House
Bayonet staff

If he had been a baseball player, newly-minted 2nd Lt. Craig Hobbs would have been a pitcher, he thinks.

But growing up the youngest of 11 children in a small farming community, there wasn't a lot of time for baseball. Instead, Hobbs helped his parents and siblings on the family farm in Newfane, N.Y.

Hobbs said he enlisted in the Army in 1990 because, although his parents pushed for all of them to attend college, he just wasn't ready.

On Hobbs' third day of basic training at Fort Knox, Ky., Saddam Hussein's soldiers invaded Kuwait. That event, Hobbs said, became the focus of the remainder of his training to become a 19D cavalry scout.



"I was completely out of my element," he said. "It was a learning experience for me on multiple levels."

Hobbs flew to Germany, where he joined the 1st Armored Division, deploying to Saudi Arabia on Christmas Eve, 1990.

"I felt lost," he said. "But my section sergeants and squad leaders were good about taking care of the new guy and focused on what was important."

Hobbs saw a little action during Operation Desert Storm, but he never saw a map and never knew where he was on the ground during that deployment.

When he returned to Germany, his unit deactivated, so he was reassigned to "Iron" Troop, 3rd Battalion, 2nd Armored Cavalry Regiment, which also deactivated, sending him stateside to Fort Ord, Calif.

Hobbs

Then came time to ETS. This was prompted in part by the death of his close friend from basic training and watching medics pull the pilots out of a downed Cobra helicopter at the National Training Center.

"I was smart enough to know I was ready to go to school," Hobbs said, "but not smart enough to have a plan."

At his parent's insistence, Hobbs enrolled in Alfred University in Alfred, N.Y., working toward an associate's degree in math and science.

"But I really didn't have the focus," he said.

Transferring to the University of Montana to study microbiology didn't help. He dropped out, and since he was still in the National Guard, realized the active Army was still an option.

Back on active duty and assigned again to "Iron" Troop, now at Fort Polk, La., Hobbs spent time "rediscovering" himself during an 11-month deployment to Bosnia, earning a reputation, he said, as being a horrible follower but a great leader. He also met his future wife, Christina. When it came time to reenlist, Hobbs wanted to do something more, so he chose the 3rd Infantry Division.

"I wanted to be high speed, I guess," he said.

Hobbs and Christina married over a four-day weekend after he moved to Fort Stewart, Ga., and he was in Basic NCO Course on 9/11. He returned to his unit as the senior scout in the scout platoon, where he said his platoon leader and platoon sergeant harnessed his energy training Soldiers.

Hobbs said he was a guy who was sitting in the "we're going to war" camp, so he trained his Soldiers hard.

Then came Operation Iraqi Freedom I, and the scout platoon from 4th Battalion, 64th Armor Regiment, began to push north into Iraq, making initial contact with Saddam Hussein's troops in An Najaf, then moving into Karbala.

"When we left Karbala, it was a beautiful day, " Hobbs said. "The sun was shining. The temperature was great.

"Then (1st Battalion, 15th Infantry Regiment) stopped and it turned into a mad minute — a melee."

Hobbs and his scouts had to fight in place, stuck in the middle of the road, after the tank crew in front of them abandoned their vehicle.

"Then it was sensory overload," he said, and although a reconnaissance by fire is not one of the principles of reconnaissance, a recon by fire is what came to mind. His gun crews began firing and the hours of rehearsals and reload drills paid off.

"I didn't have to say a thing. They knew what to do. All I had to do was the command and control part," Hobbs said. "And that's why I got what I got."

> "My dad used to say the worst decision is indecision. That really came into play that day. My decision was recon by fire, and if you have well-trained guys, that makes your decision easier."
> 2nd Lt. Craig Hobbs
> Silver Star recipient

What (then) Staff Sgt. Hobbs "got" was a Silver Star for gallantry in action that day — April 3, 2003 — for his actions in defeating an enemy ambush along Route Cubs. According to witness statements, had the ambush been successful, it would have been devastating for the scouts and for much of the 1st Bn., 15th Inf. Regt.

"The guys were awesome on the guns," Hobbs said. "I got all the information I needed to make decisions. I didn't have to worry about guns going quiet or going down.

"My dad used to say the worst decision is indecision," he said. "That really came into play that day. My decision was recon by fire, and if you have well-trained guys, that makes your decision easier.

"Things got a little hairy," he said. "It's funny what you remember. There was a female fighting from a Fox vehicle with us, putting down fire wherever we were."

Then her weapon jammed, and Hobbs saw her banging the machine gun up and down on her vehicle until the feed tray opened up.

"It was all about teamwork," he said. "You can't do it by yourself."

Hobbs returned from Iraq early, and one of his squad leaders, Sgt. Matthew Dewitt, took over the section.

"He lost both forearms in Fallujah," Hobbs said. "We worked side by side for three years. That's the downside — when your Soldiers get hurt and you're not there."

Hobbs said Officer Candidate School "just fell into place" for him. His father, who died in 2002, had wanted him to become an officer.

"I told him the NCO corps was a great thing," Hobbs said. "It hurts to leave. They really are the backbone of our Army."

Hobbs became the first in his family to receive a commission. His family pinned the gold bars on his shoulders after his OCS graduation ceremony Thursday

During his OCS board, Hobbs said he was asked if he could change anything in his past, what would it be.

"I wouldn't change a thing," he said. "What I've gone through has gotten me where I am today."

"My Mommy"

I love my mom, she is the bomb.
My mom is so cool
Cause she knows how to use power tools.
She's always the one to clean the house
But never the one to kill the mouse.
My mom always grants our wishes, but she hates to do all the dishes.
My mommy stays home to take care of us, and she always puts up with our fuss.
She tucks us in at night, and scares away
the fright.
She always wakes us with a song.
And I love my mommy all day long!

Sledgehammer Soldiers take on possible insurgents

3rd BCT finds weapons, insurgents

Spc. Natalie Loucks
3rd BCT PAO

MUKHISA, Iraq — Soldiers from B Company, 1st Battalion, 30th Infantry Regiment, and support elements from Brigade Troops Battalion, 3rd Brigade Combat Team, prepared for Operation Hammer Rain April 12 at Forward Operating Base Warhorse.

Their mission was to seize items used to make improvised explosive devices, arrest suspected terrorists, and destroy the insurgents' financial base by taking out key supporters, said 2nd Lt. Chardon Hyde, 1st Bn., 30th Inf. Regt.

Soldiers assigned to Operation Hammer Rain searched houses in Mukhisa and seized enemy combatants and suspects considered "high-value targets" based on intelligence indicating they were engaging in or preparing to engage in terrorist activity that could threaten the safety of the civilian population or Army personnel.

The Soldiers conducted searches in residences in Mukhisa, looking for weapons and materials that could be used to construct lethal weapons, such as IEDs.

Under Iraqi law, each family in the town is allowed one AK-47 and one loaded magazine. Soldiers seized weapons and ammunition in any household that owned more than that.

The suspects were flex-cuffed, tested for explosive residue on their hands and faces, and taken to FOB Normandy for further investigation, Hyde said.

"The severity of what they have been charged with, and what they have been found guilty of, determines what will happen to them," Hyde said.

Chiarelli

Maj. Gen. Peter Chiarelli will be featured in the next Combat Leader Speaker Program, scheduled at 4 p.m. Monday in Marshall Auditorium.

Chiarelli, an armor officer, was commissioned through the Reserve Officer Training Corps at Seattle University in 1972. He holds a master's in public administration from the University of Washington and is a graduate of the National War College.

As a company grade officer, Chiarelli served in the 5th Cavalry Regiment, 9th Infantry Division, Fort Lewis, Wash., returning there in 1990 as the commander of 1st Battalion, 1st Inf. Regt., 9th Inf. Div., and in 1996 as the commander of 3rd Brigade, 2nd Inf. Div.

Chiarelli has been the commanding general of the 1st Cavalry Division, Fort Hood, Texas, since August 2003, and recently returned from a yearlong deployment in support of Operation Iraqi Freedom.

Father pins Silver Star on son

BAGHDAD, Iraq — Staff Sgt. William T. Payne of the 1st Cavalry Division received the nation's third highest award for heroism in combat Feb. 27 during a ceremony held at the crossed sabers monument in central Baghdad.

Maj. Gen. Pete Chiarelli, the division commander, presented the award, and Payne's father pinned it on him.

Carl Payne, a Department of the Army employee working in Iraq and a retired Army tanker, said he "could never be more proud," of his son.

"I'm glad he was recognized for (what) he did, but it is tough to know he risked his life in a situation like that," the senior Payne said.

Payne, an Infantryman assigned to A Company, 1st Battalion, 9th Cavalry Regiment, is credited with rescuing Soldiers from a disabled Bradley fighting vehicle while under fire.

"I've read a lot of citations since I've been here," Chiarelli said, "but none that talks of any greater act of heroism than what he did."

During the late morning hours of Sept. 12, 2004, Payne's battalion was wrapping up an operation on Haifa Street. As Bradley fighting vehicles patrolled the streets, Soldiers on the ground set up defensive positions to pick up Soldiers who had manned observation posts throughout the night. A car laden with explosives rammed the back of a Bradley, disabling it. Its rear ramp was engulfed in flames and the cargo hatch blew off.

Payne's squad provided cover fire, while he and Spc. Chase Ash ran 50 meters to the burning vehicle under enemy fire. Payne helped two of the crewmen out of the turret and turned his attention to the Infantrymen inside the crew compartment. One by one, he pulled them up through the damaged cargo hatch.

Maj. Gen. Pete Chiarelli awarded Staff Sgt. William Payne the Silver Star. Payne's father, Carl, is pictured at right.

Within seconds of retrieving the wounded Soldiers, the vehicle's load of ammunition began to cook off from the heat and fire. According to Payne the whole incident lasted nearly five minutes.

Once back in a safe position, a medic treated the wounded Soldiers until they could be evacuated.

Payne credited the success of the mission to his Soldiers.

"My squad was there for me — that's what it comes down to," he said.

If you had your taxes prepared at the Fort Benning Tax Center thank a volunteer!

Eighteen Soldiers and six civilian volunteers helped Soldiers, Department of Defense civilians, retired military and their families send their tax forms to the Internal Revenue Service.

After intensive training with the IRS and in-house training, the Tax Center opened its doors Jan. 18.

Capt. Luis Morales, officer in charge of the Tax Center, commended the volunteers for preparing 3,909 federal returns, with 3,499 filed electronically. Morales said he was "most impressed with the level of proficiency" attained by the volunteers.

Morales and his crew also mobilized to training units every weekend, helping recruits with their tax paperwork.

By the time the Tax Center closed April 22, the volunteers had tabulated $5,827,938 in revenue and helped their clients save $700,874.

Ad Duluiyah army company trained by Task Force 1-15

Spc. Natalie Loucks
3rd BCT PAO

FOB MACKENZIE, Iraq — "The soldiers are doing great; they have come a long way," Staff Sgt. George Orange, Non-Commissioned Officer in Charge of Obstacles Section, 1st Battalion, 15th Infantry Regiment, 3rd Brigade Combat Team, Task Force Liberty, said as he watched the 203rd Iraqi Army company soldiers execute a stack maneuver as they prepared to enter a mock building looking for "Ali Baba," a nickname given to the fictitious enemy.

The goal of the American Soldiers of Task Force 1-15 Infantry is simple: train the Iraqi army company to be able to handle the security of the city of Ad Duluiyah.

This 'simple' objective cannot be accomplished without the hard work, determination and cooperation of both the American Soldiers of TF 1-15 Inf. and the 203rd IA company.

"They know why we are here," Orange said. "They are willing to work with us for one common purpose ... to get rid of all of the insurgents."

Orange said training is conducted to the same standards as the U.S. Soldiers are held to. The IA soldiers conducted raids, patrol formations; like wedges, reactions to enemy contact, and area security. The training site has ranges and a mock building built and used to train the IA soldiers on techniques used to search and clear rooms.

The U.S. instructors take their Iraqi counterparts though the training exercise step-by-step. Once the concept of the exercise is grasped, the soldiers will run through what they have just learned.

"Since they have been training, their patrols have gotten a lot better," Orange said. "They've improved so much; they are more confident in what they are doing."

The IA company conducts training at the Joint Coalition Center directly outside the main gate of Forward Operating Base Mackenzie.

Orange said the soldiers are ahead of their training schedule and are presently conducting training missions that were originally scheduled for August through October.

"The 3rd Brigade Combat Team has stepped it up a notch and is conducting advanced training with these (203rd IA) soldiers."

Not only are the Soldiers of 1-15th Infantry providing the soldiers of the 203rd IA company with the skills they need to defend their city, they are also supplying them with the latest equipment. When the soldiers look good they feel better and in turn, perform better, Orange said.

"We just got them knee pads and they love them," Orange said. "They saw the American Soldiers with them and they wanted to wear them.

"Now we just have to teach them to put the pad around their ankles when they aren't training," Orange said as he bent over to help adjust one soldier's knee pads.

Outside of training, the 203rd IA company along with Soldiers of TF 1-15 Inf. are working hand in hand to uphold the security of the city of Ad Duluiyah, the main city in the task force's area of operation.

"They pick up techniques from the American Soldiers while they are out on missions," Orange said.

Already, soldiers of the 203rd IA have found over 15 improvised explosive devices and apprehended a terrorist that held a day job as a teacher in Ad Duluiyah.

Maj. Abeb Al Karim Naji, the commander of the 203rd IA company said most of the people of Ad Duluiyah are appreciative of the work that his soldiers are doing and respect the professional attitudes of the company and their U.S. Army counterparts.

Abeb said the supporters cooperate greatly with the military forces by providing intelligence, but he said he would like to see more cooperation from some of the tribes within the community. The Iraqi Army company is currently over 200 soldiers strong but, despite the company's successes, he said a further 250 to 300 soldiers are necessary.

"They're doing a great job," said Abeb through an interpreter. "I greatly appreciate what the American Soldiers are doing for my company."

Soldiers awarded for rescuing Egyptian hostages

American Forces Press Services

CAMP LIBERTY, Iraq — One Soldier received a Bronze Star and eight received the Army Commendation Medal April 5 for rescuing two Egyptian hostages from terrorists in Baghdad Feb. 7.

Four Egyptians working for the mobile cell phone company Iraqna were kidnapped Feb 6. Less than 24 hours later, Soldiers from 2nd Battalion, 15th Field Artillery Regiment saved two hostages and detained two terrorists after they pulled over a suspicious vehicle while on a routine patrol in their area of operations.

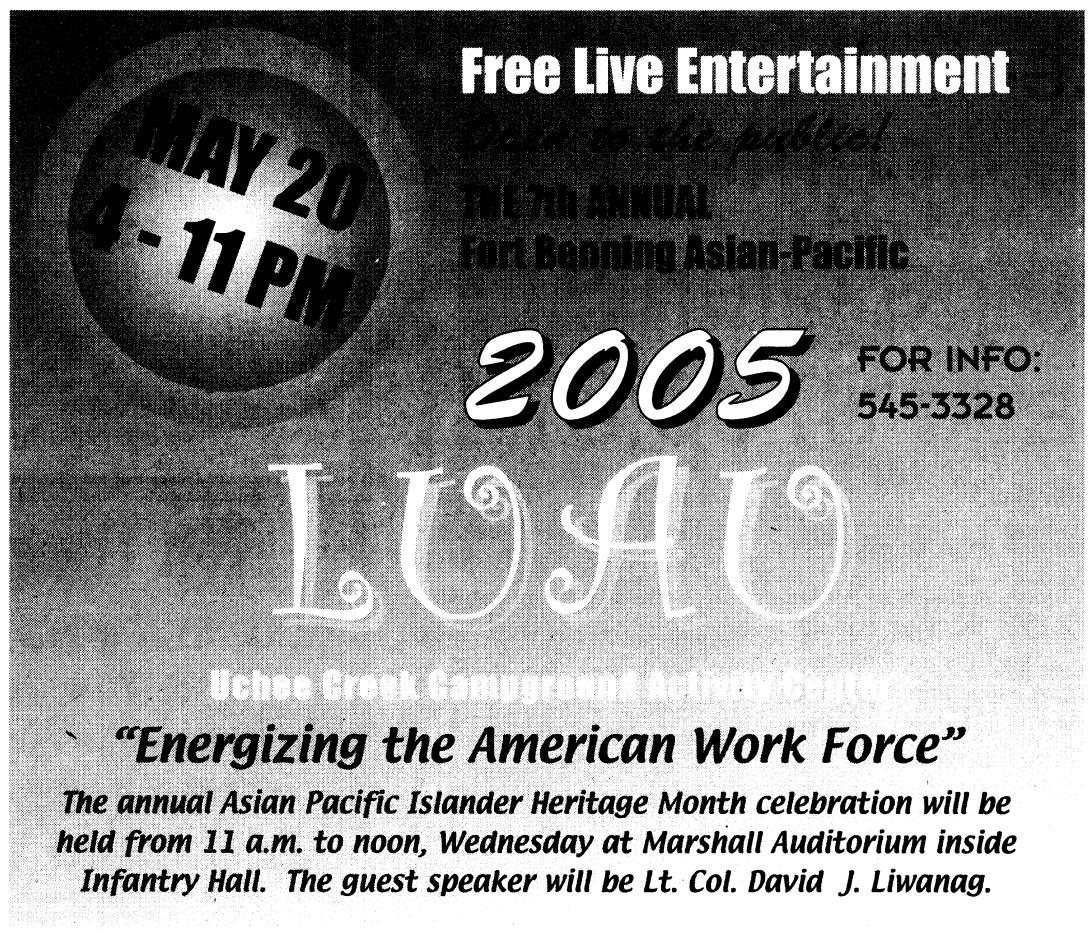
1st Lt. David Lucas, a battery platoon leader, noticed a vehicle sagging low to the ground. Believing it to be a possible vehicle-borne improvised explosive device, Lucas ordered his convoy to stop the vehicle.

"I told my driver to cut them off so we could search them," Lucas said. "Before we even stopped, they stopped. Two guys jumped out and bolted in opposite directions."

The convoy gave chase to the terrorists. One managed to escape, while the other was detained with assistance from an Iraqi civilian.

While his Soldiers pursued the terrorists, Lucas and the Soldiers in his Humvee detained a terrorist who remained in the vehicle.

Sgt. 1st Class Michael Carlan, a platoon leader, had the detainee open all the doors and finally the trunk.



Carlan approached the trunk expecting to find an explosive device, but instead found two people blindfolded and handcuffed.

"One guy was so happy we found him, he came up and kissed my hands," Staff Sgt. Joey Washington said.

"It's the best feeling in the world knowing we saved two guys' lives," Arneman said. "It makes the job worth doing."

The hostages were released to the Egyptian Embassy and the other two Egyptian workers were rescued later in the day, Lucas said.

Lucas received the Bronze Star for his part in the rescue and the his eight Soldiers received ARCOMs.

Week Five — Steady, aim, fire

During week five training at the Infantry Training Brigade, recruits from 1st Battalion, 19th Infantry Regiment, practice the proper safety steps to follow when their machine gun misfires. Soldiers turn away to protect their faces in case a round explodes and raise their arms to signal nearby cadre.

Recruits train, qualify at ranges

Week five at the Infantry Training Brigade includes a lot of time at the ranges and hands on training with weapons — specifically the M249 and the M240 machine guns.

During the first part of the week, basic training Soldiers prepare for basic rifle marksmanship qualification, which is completed midweek. Qualification includes hitting 23 out of 40 targets in the prone supported position, prone unsupported position and the kneeling position.

The last part of the week, recruits are introduced to automatic weapons and learn misfire safety procedures. They learn to zero the weapon, which includes aligning the sight, target and bullet. Recruits also learn assembling, disassembling and functions checks on the machine guns.

They also receive instruction on how to use the M68 close combat optics sight system.

The 5th Ranger Training Battalion's A Company held a Rangers In Action demonstration with a focus on hand-to-hand combat. The Rangers faked kicks and rolled with the punches to make the combatives demonstration look real.

Forty years ago, 5th Ranger Training Battalion instructors weren't welcome in Dahlonega, Ga. Camp Merrill, in the Chattahoochee National Forest, just up the road a piece from the tiny mountain town, was still new, and Vietnam-era stereotypes about Soldiers were colorful and controversial.

It took a few years for the locals to warm up to the Rangers, but they did, eventually, as more and more of the camp cadre retired in the area, put down roots and went to work alongside the natives.

When the folks of Dahlonega took a shine to their Rangers, their attitudes did a one-eighty. They began to worry about their Rangers. Were they getting enough sleep? Enough food?

Well, the obvious answer was no. Ranger School, by design, pushes students to their limits. They're sleep deprived and hungry, as they would be in combat. And the second phase of Ranger School, at Camp Merrill, where mountaineering skills, combat techniques and rough-terrain patrolling are taught, is particularly grueling.

To allay concerns, Camp Merrill cadre encouraged the townsfolk to come see for themselves what Ranger training was all about. They planted the seed, so to speak, for what would eventually become one of the largest and most popular events in a tourist town known for its regular "events," festivals, parades and whatnot.

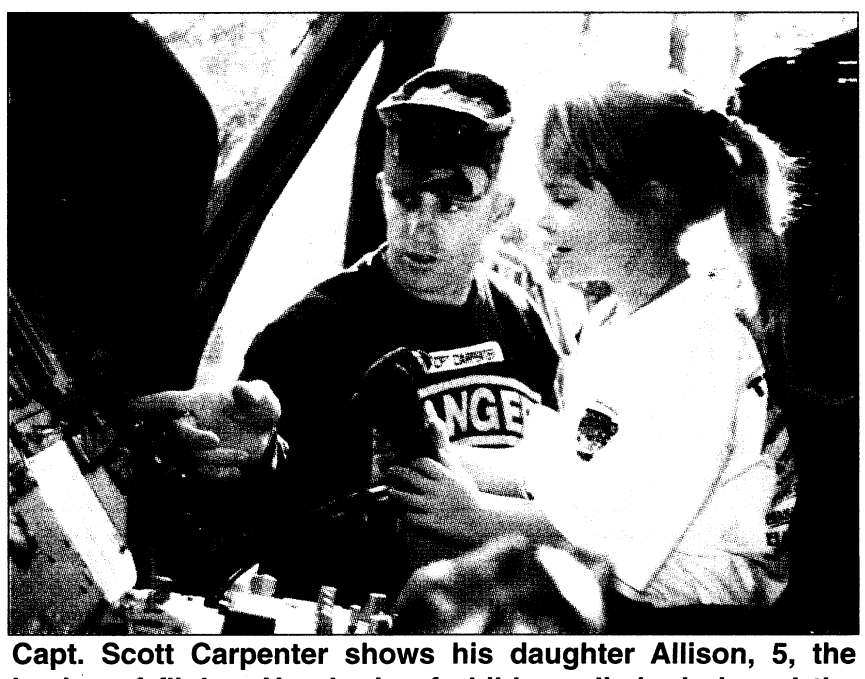
The 5th Ranger Training Battalion Open House draws thousands to the camp each year, and Saturday was no different — or different only because it exceeded everyone's expectations. Cadre planned for 3,000 visitors. At last count, at least 4,000 showed up for the event, which included a Mountain Ranger Run, a big draw in itself. Nearly 500 runners participated in what was actually a series of races, including a run-bike-run duathlon and a formidable 34K bike race up, up, up and down the Tennessee Valley Divide.

The races started early, with runners snaking out from the starting line in all directions — the 5K went here, the 10K there, and so on. When the dust cleared, a second wave of visitors arrived. By 10 a.m., the camp was crawling with curious locals, anxious to see Rangers in action, fast roping, fighting and falling from the sky.

The open house featured a demonstration not unlike the Rangers In Action held regularly on Fort Benning, but with an emphasis on mountaineering. Demonstrations included rappelling, hand-to-hand combat, a free-fall parachute jump, and a patrol insertion and extraction using helicopters.

The RIA demo, entertainment of the spectator sort, was sandwiched between periods of hands-on activities — a climbing wall, firing range, face-painting and the like.

"They wake me up all the time with those things," said a woman, who obviously lives near the camp, as she exited the machine gun tent. "I figured I might as well have a shot at it."



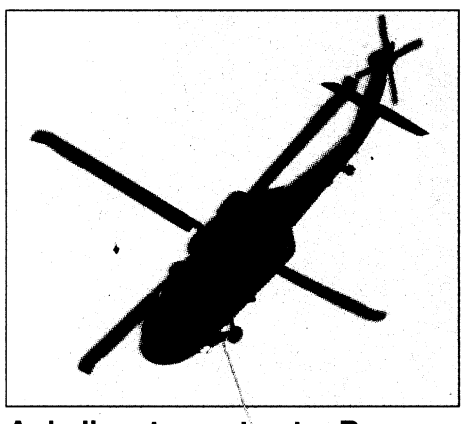
Midway through the six-hour open house, the crowd paused to honor the fallen Rangers whose names are listed on a marker at the bridge crossing of Fallen Ranger Memorial Road. It was a solemn moment in an otherwise festive day, as 11-year-old Ricky Carter thanked the Mountain Ranger Association for adding his father's name to the list. Tom Carter, a former Ranger, was killed in Iraq in 2002 while working as a civilian contractor.

Steven Hawk, the association's chairman, said the memorial stands appropriately at a spot Ranger School students cross on their way to and from Mosby Airfield.

"Every Ranger at some point in his career crosses this bridge," he said. "It's a rally point. And I believe the spirits of these fallen Rangers will be here regularly to encourage our Ranger students to drive on."

The Rangers long ago won the hearts of the people of Dahlonega, said Lt. Col. Doug Flohr, battalion commander. And the success of this year's open house is indicative of the consistent support the locals offer.

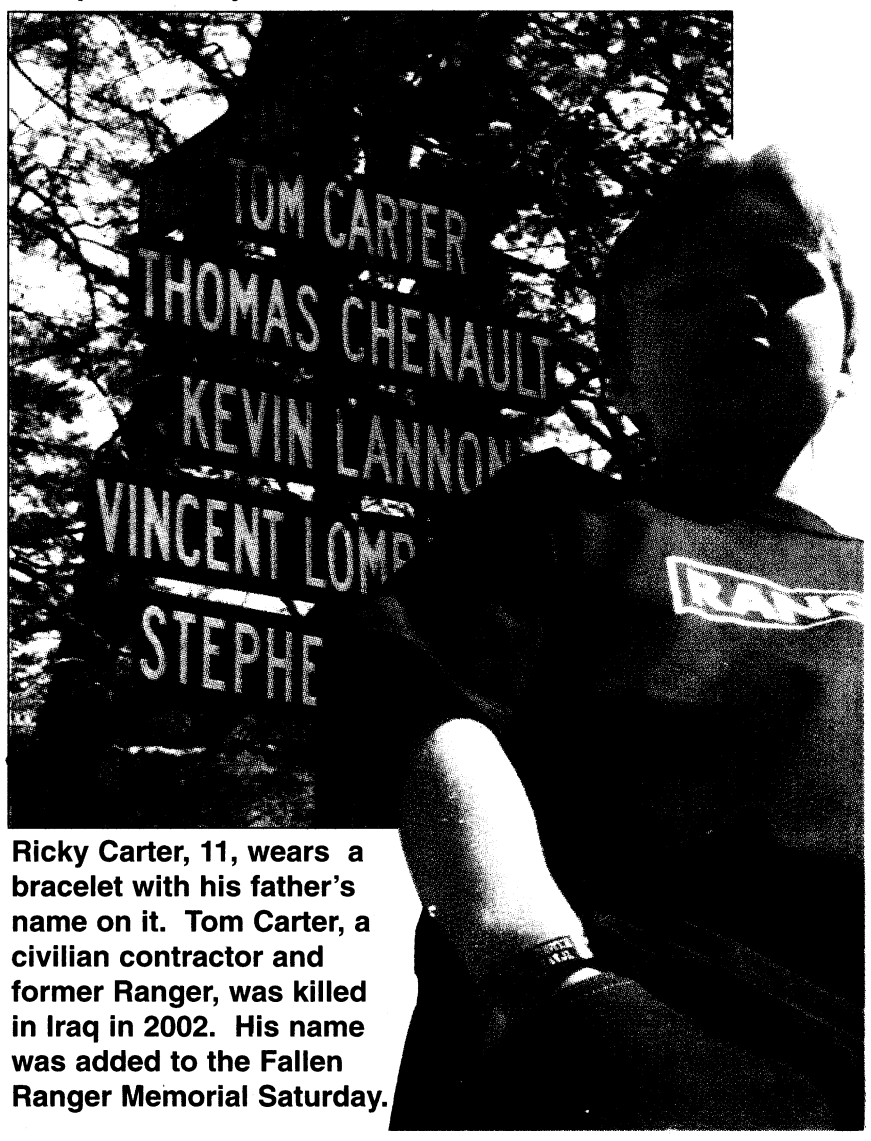
In return, the nearly $10,000 raised during the event will be distributed among local charities.



Capt. Scott Carpenter shows his daughter Allison, 5, the basics of flight. Hundreds of children climbed aboard the three helicopters before they departed the airfield in a dramatic kick-off to the Rangers In Action demonstration.

Nearly 500 people participated in the Mountain Ranger Run, which included 5K, 10K, 15K runs, a 34K bike race and a run-bike-run duathlon. White crosses and flags dotted the race route and the streets of Camp Merrill. The crosses were inscribed with the names of deceased veterans from Lumpkin County.

Cade Runyon, 4, and his dad, Sgt. 1st Class Derek Runyon, participate in the fun run.



A helicopter extracts Rangers from the field during the demonstration Saturday.

The 75th Ranger Regiment's Regimental Reconnaissance Detachment jumped onto Mosby Airfield.

Ricky Carter, 11, wears a bracelet with his father's name on it. Tom Carter, a civilian contractor and former Ranger, was killed in Iraq in 2002. His name was added to the Fallen Ranger Memorial Saturday.

Soldiers train Baghdad police on survival skills

Spc. Mary Rose
Army News Services

BAGHDAD, Iraq — Iraqi police are learning to keep themselves alive in a police officer survival course instituted by U.S. Army military police as part of the Police Partnership Program.

Many of the police who are going through the course will become part of the Emergency Response Force, a team that will be trained to react in special situations in Baghdad.

The beginning phase is a five-day course taught by a military police squad from the 401st MP Co., 720th MP Battalion, 42nd MP Brigade. The course entails first aid, searching vehicles, removing suspects from vehicles, handcuffing techniques and improvised explosive device and vehicle-borne improvised explosive device awareness.

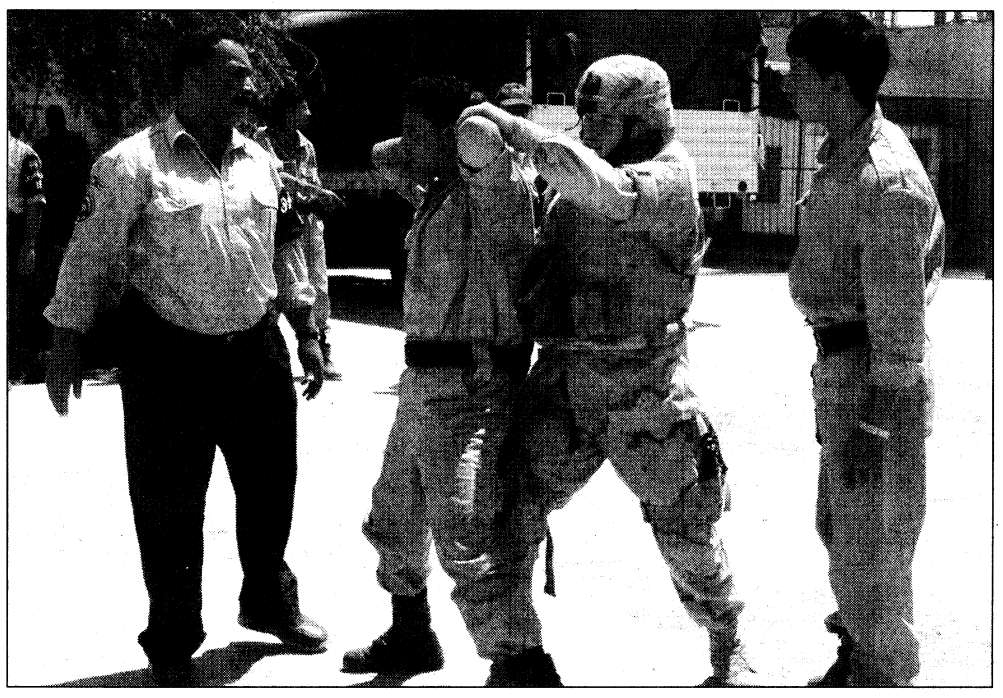
The Partnership Program links military police and Iraqi police to learn from each other and become better officers.

The 42nd MP Bde. is also partnering with the Iraqi Police leadership at Baghdad Police Headquarters to become a more competent staff.

Staff Sgt. Starsky Smith, the noncommissioned officer in charge of training for the 401st MP Co., said the response teams will be able to respond to and control emergency situations.

There are 157 emergency response force recruits currently going through the training.

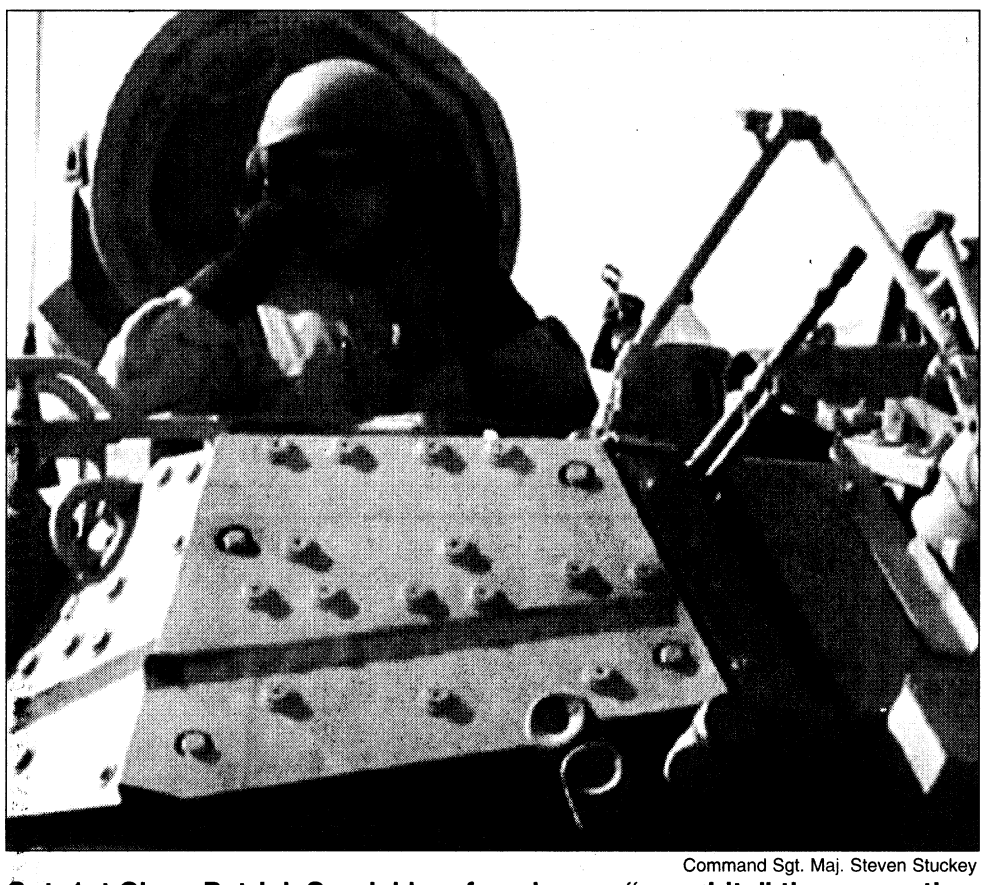
During Tuesday's first aid training, vehicle search and suspect extraction training, the officers went through many different hands-on techniques to ensure they understood what they are supposed to do in different situations.



"We are continuously training the police to make them a strong force in Baghdad," said Beth Hurlburt, Iraqi Police operations officer, 42nd MP Bde.

Not all of these Iraqi police officers will be part of the Emergency Response Force, officials said. About 30 percent of them will be trained to become trainers.

The Iraqi policemen will be tested on what they have learned and will take a physical fitness test to assist the Iraqi police leaders and MPs in the process of choosing the most suitable recruits to continue on with higher training.



After the best are picked, they will continue their education with special weapons and tactics trainings.

"They will be able to teach others what they've learned," Hurlburt said. "We are making them self-sustainable. You can never train too much."

Sgt. 1st Class Patrick Sandel has faced more "near hits" than any other Soldier in the 256th Brigade Combat Team.

'Lucky' Soldier in Iraq holds unit record for most near hits

Encounters hone quick reaction skills

Spc. Erin Robicheaux
Army News Services

BAGHDAD, Iraq — Thirteen improvised explosive devices, five mortar attacks and one vehicle borne improvised explosive device — sounds like an insurgent Christmas carol, but it is actually the score card of a 256th Brigade Combat Team Soldier.

Sgt. 1st Class Patrick Sandel with 3rd Battalion, 156th Infantry Regiment, attached to 1st Battalion, 156th Armor Regiment, has faced encounters more times than any one Soldier in the 256th BCT.

He counts it a blessing everyday that he is still alive.

Sandel said the very first time he ventured into his area of operation he was met with a mortar attack.

A few days later, he hit the first IED.

Only now has the onslaught begun to slow down.

"November and December were busy for us," the DeRidder, La., native said.

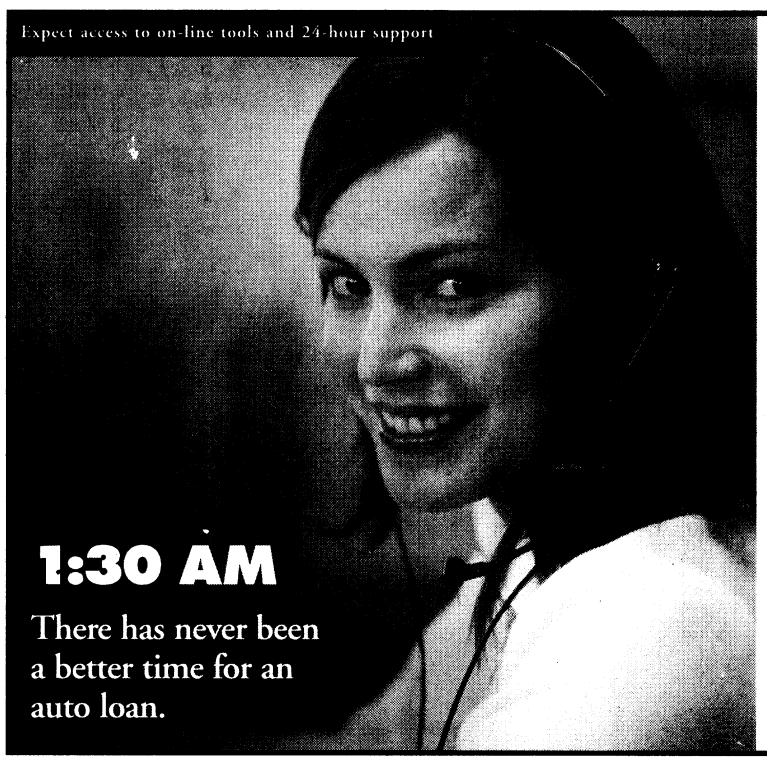
"Right now it's been three weeks since I've been hit, and that's the longest I've gone without any in a while."

Sandel said whether his platoon is conducting mounted or dismounted patrols, the reaction to an attack has improved with each incident and is now second nature.

Recently, the platoon lost Sgt. Seth Trahan, from Crowley, La., to an IED attack.

Until this happened, getting hit seemed like it was just part of the job, Sandel said.

"We weren't complacent on the patrols, by any means," he said, "but until it killed somebody, getting hit was a routine thing."



Command Sgt. Maj. Steven Stuckey, sergeant major for 1st Bn., 156th AR, said he feels Sandel's spirit and enthusiasm for his job have not diminished, even in the face of such adversity.

"A lot of the guys who get hit by IEDs get scared and start to wear down, but Sandel has not," Stuckey said.

"He never stops and he's always high spirited. His Soldiers like to go out with him, and I think they'd do anything for Sandel."

Wilson Elementary students spent May 6 participating in Operation Shock and Fun, the school's annual field day.

Activities began at 9 a.m. with a parade around the Indianhead Terrace housing area, led by a Stryker fighting vehicle. Then it was games, games, games until 11:30 a.m. when the Silver Wings jumped onto campus.

The events were organized by the P.E. teachers, and honor roll students from Faith Middle School and Soldiers from the Basic Combat Training Brigade helped with games, including a hula hoop and jump rope contest, wet sponge race, sack race, beach ball volleyball and more.

Drowning second leading killer of kids

Spc. Eliamar Trapp
Assistant editor

The sun is out today, but with the unusual Georgia weather, it could rain tomorrow and fill up the empty kiddie pool in your back yard. You know, that pool your infant crawls to when you're not looking?

In 2000, there were 3,482 drownings in the U.S. That's an average of nine people per day — 943 of those victims were children between the ages of one and 14 years old, according to statistics from the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention.

Drowning remains the second leading cause of injury-related death for children between those ages.

"Swimming is a necessity for everybody, I don't care how old you are," said Michele Walton, American Red Cross health and safety director.

"You never know when it can save your life or the life of somebody else."

The Red Cross has begun registration for the Learn-to-Swim Program. The summer swimming lessons begin May 30 and will be conducted at four different pools on post.

The swimming lessons offered by the Red Cross are instructed by certified Red Cross water safety instructors and are offered for adults as well as children.

The Learn-to-Swim program is a progressive swimming program that introduces children to swimming and develops their swimming skills.

"Even if it's not with the Red Cross, all parents need to take their children to swimming lessons," Walton said.

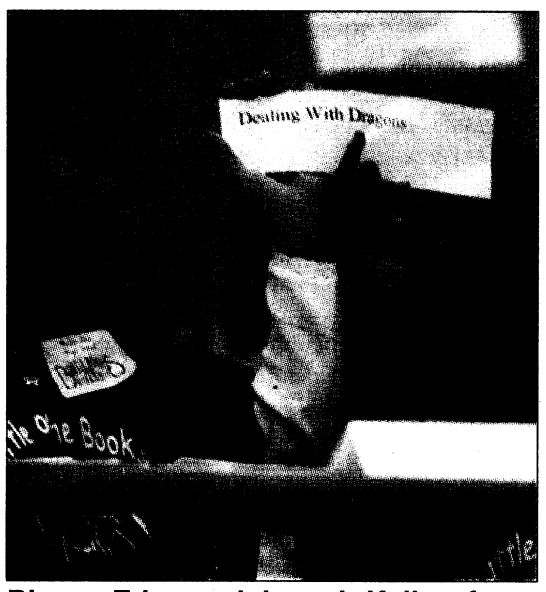
Benning students battle with book knowledge

Competition tests memory, understanding of books

Tawny Archibald Campbell
Bayonet staff

Fourth and fifth graders from five Fort Benning schools put their book knowledge to the test Tuesday at the Battle of the Books competition at the Columbus Public Library.

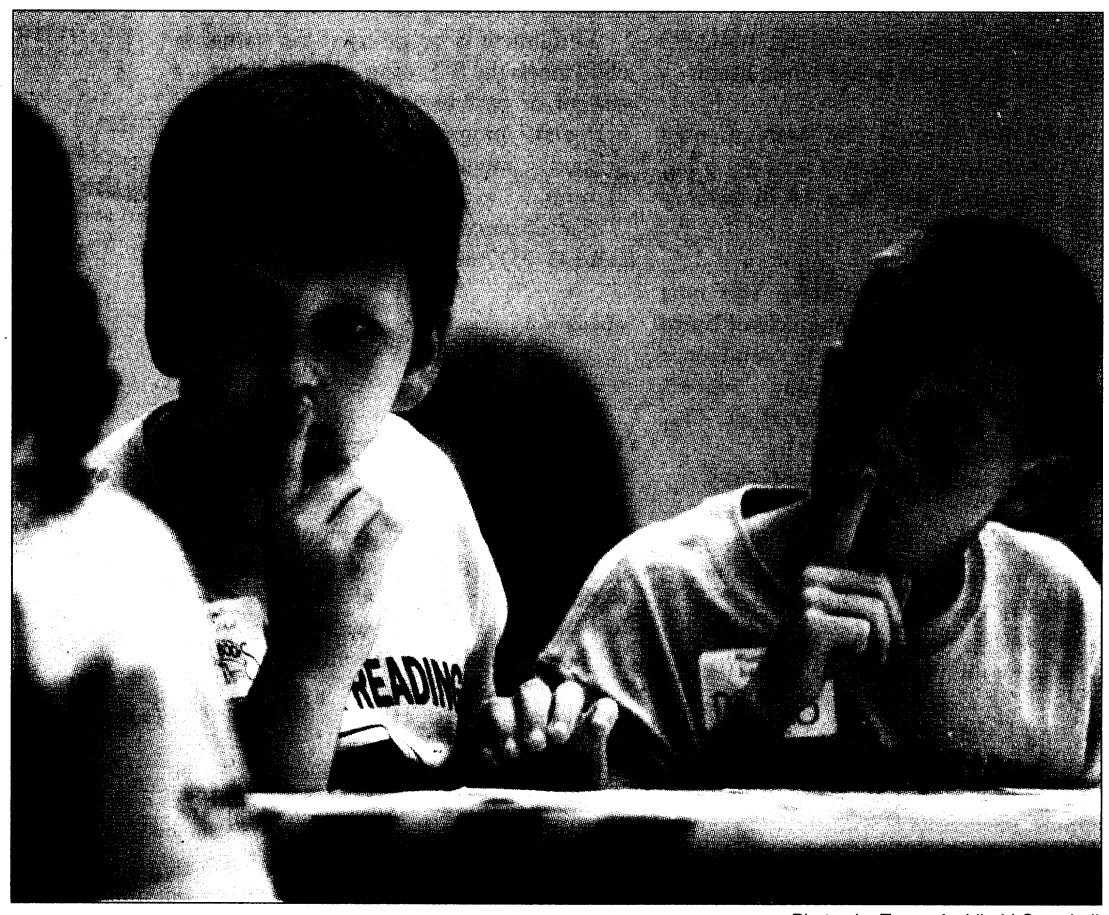


The battle, played out with books instead of bullets, is part of the National Battle of the Books.

Students were given a list of 30 books to read at the beginning of the year. The competition tested their knowledge of the books' details and authors.

"Kids normally don't get a pat on the back for being a bookworm, and for children who love to read, this is a great way to reward them," said Sheila Brown, a fifth grade teacher at White Elementary School.

White's fifth-grade team took first place, answering only two questions incorrectly.



The second place award went to the fifth grade team at Loyd Elementary School, and third place went to the fifth graders from Dexter Elementary School.

Bianca Eden and Joseph Kelley, from the Loyd fourth grade team, hold up their answer to a question during Tuesday's Battle of the Books.

The winners were given a certificate of achievement and a $5 gift certificate to Barnes and Noble.

This is Fort Benning's second year participating in the Battle of the Books competition, but nationwide, it includes competition at regional, state and national level.

ASK THE JUDGE

Anthony R. Tempesta
Office of the Staff Judge Advocate

Q: Can a chain mail letter be a scam?

A: Many chain letters are more than just junk mail. They are frequently scams as well. A chain letter scam typically asks for a small amount of money and promises a large profit in return.

A common chain letter scam sends you a list with 10 names and addresses on it. The list's instructions say that you should make 10 copies of the list, then send 10 separate $5 cash payments to the first name on the list, then cross out the first name, add your name at the bottom of the list and mail the list to 10 new people.

The letter claims that as new people on the list mail to other new people, your name will move up the list so that when your name gets to the top of the list, you will receive thousands of dollars in the mail. Fifty dollars in cash and 10 postage stamps sounds like a pretty small investment to make thousands of dollars, and it is exactly that sort of appeal that makes this scam so successful.

This sort of scam is better known as a Ponzi scheme, in which only individuals at the top of the list or pyramid make money. This happens because individuals at the bottom can only move up by attracting new paying participants, and sooner or later the scheme collapses when no new participants can be found.

Simple math shows the chain mail cannot fulfill its claims. As the original chain letter already had 10 names on it, the letter's recipient would come into the list at person number 11. Given 10 new mailings at each level, it would require 100 billion participants in the chain to move the eleventh person on the list to number one.

Since the Earth's population is less than 7 billion people, it is mathematically impossible to move up the list to number one.

Chain letters like this break down after the first or second names on the list, which are usually aliases for the same person, receive a small number of payments — people coming in at the bottom of the list never get paid.

The best legal advice is to never send money based on a chain mail letter.

WATER: Poses danger to children

class. Instructors take one day and focus on teaching the students about water safety.

Students learn various water safety skills including the fundamentals of using life jackets, safe diving rules, how to open an airway for breathing and eventually become familiar with CPR without mouth-to-mouth contact.

The lessons are taught by certified Red Cross instructors who cover the following levels:

- Level 1 — Water Exploration provides an orientation to aquatic exploration and creates a sound foundation for aquatic and safety skills.
- Level 2 — Primary Skills expands on fundamental aquatic locomotion and safety skills.
- Level 3 — Stroke Readiness increases swimming skill competency and teaches safety and non-swimming rescue skills.
- Level 4 — Stroke Development introduces the breast stroke and side stroke and develops confidence and competency in strokes and safety skills beyond preceding levels.
- Level 5 — Stroke Refinement continues stroke refinement and introduces the butterfly, surface dives and springboard diving.
- Level 6 — Stroke Proficiency develops maximum efficiency and endurance for strokes and introduces flip turns.
- Level 7 — Advanced Skills encourage lifetime fitness, refine strokes learned in previous levels, develop springboard diving and learn advanced rescue skills.

Here are a few tips on how to stay out of trouble while enjoying water recreation activities:

Spot the Dangers

• Never fool around or run besides water.

• Keep away from the edge of canals; the water is often very deep.

• Beware of locks and weirs as water flows very quickly.

• Always follow the advice of a lifeguard and find out when and where it is safe to swim.

Look for signs or flags which tell you where it's safe to swim.

• Don't go alone.

Never go swimming, fishing or boating without a buddy.

• Have a friend who can help if you're in trouble in the water.

Even if they can't help, they can go get help.

• Always make sure someone knows where you are going to swim and when you plan on getting back.

Poolside rules

• Don't use floatation devices as a substitute for supervision.

• Don't leaves toys that may attract a child into a pool in a pool area.

• Never assume someone else is watching your child.

• Don't leave chairs or other items of furniture where children could use them to climb into a fenced pool area.

• Equip doors and windows that exit to a pool area with an alarm.

• Maintain constant visual contact with children in a pool or pool area.

• Don't think you'll hear a child in trouble in the water — child drowning is a silent death, with no splashing to alert anyone that the child is in trouble.

Learn to help

• Keep calm. Think before you act.

• Help if you can reach the victim without putting yourself in danger.

Shout as loud as you can.

• Install a poolside phone with emergency numbers programmed into speed dial.

• Keep a first aid kit poolside.

• If you can't reach the person, and no one comes when you shout for help, call 911.

American Red Cross Summer Swim Schedule

• The Fort Benning DMWR pool opens Saturday. The pool is open to Wellness Center members and Non-Wellness Center members with military ID card. Entrance fees are included with Wellness Center Memberships. Pool hours are 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Saturdays and Sundays. The pool is located next to the Officers' Club.

Commissary awards college scholarships

500 military students benefit

Defense Commissary Agency

It is May, and the color green is bursting forth, but for 500 diligent students it's not just the "garden variety" green found in the back yard.

It's more like Federal Reserve green.

Thanks to the Scholarships for Military Children program, 500 students are receiving $1,500 scholarships to apply toward college tuition this fall.

"We're excited to report that the scholarship program continues to be a success in helping military families defray the costs of education," said Defense Commissary Agency acting director and chief executive officer Patrick Nixon. "We're proud to be associated with a program that has awarded nearly $4 million to more than 3,000 students since its inception in 2001."

Scholarship Managers, a professional scholarship firm, selects winners based on academic merit, participation in extracurricular and volunteer activities, and the quality of their essays.

Scholarship Managers notifies recipients by letter prior to the public announcement of winners.

The full list of scholarship recipients and sponsors is posted online at http://www.militaryscholar.org.

The Scholarships for Military Children program is funded by manufacturers and suppliers that provide support for commissaries worldwide and administered by Fisher House Foundation, a nonprofit organization responsible for building comfort homes near military medical centers.

The foundation bears all costs of the program so that every dollar donated goes for scholarships.

The Defense Commissary Agency operates a worldwide chain of commissaries providing groceries to military personnel, retirees and their families in a safe and secure shopping environment.

Authorized patrons purchase items at cost plus a 5 percent surcharge, which covers the costs of building new commissaries and modernizing existing ones.

Shoppers save an average of 30 percent or more on their purchases compared to commercial prices — savings worth about $2,700 annually for a family of four.

A core military family support element, and a valued part of military pay and benefits, commissaries contribute to family readiness, enhance the quality of life for America's military and their families, and help recruit and retain the best and brightest men and women to serve their country.

Fort Benning schools register students for fall

Fort Benning Schools

Registration for new students will take place 8:30 a.m. to 3 p.m. June 6 through 10 at your assigned school. Verification for returning students will take place during the month May.

Look for information from the school for dates for verification. It will be necessary for parents to register at each school if they have children in more than one of the Fort Benning school.

The following documents are required for registration or verification:

Returning students

Parents of all returning students must provide military ID and verification of housing.

Sixth-grade students must show proof of varicella (chicken pox) vaccine or proof of immunity.

From fifth grade to Faith Middle School

Students promoted from fifth grade to Faith Middle School's sixth grade will need to verify registration at their neighborhood school.

Beginning June 6, verification will take place at Faith Middle School, 1375 Ingersoll Street.

Transferring students new to Fort Benning

Parents should bring previous school records if available, verification of housing, military ID, and child's social security card.

PreK, kindergarten, and first grade require a legal birth certificate.

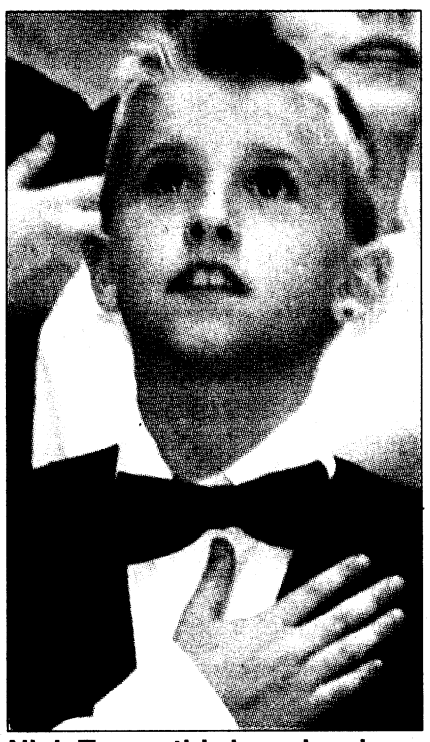
A Georgia certificate of immunization is also required, which is available through Martin Army Hospital. Immunization information will be available at registration.

Students entering school for the first time (preschool, preK or kindergarten)

Parents must provide a legal birth certificate, verification of housing, military ID, and child's social security card.

Georgia certificates of immunization and eye, ear, and dental examinations are also required.

These certificates are available through Martin Army Hospital.



Immunization information will be available at registration.

Verification of housing does not need to be an official statement from housing. It may be a recent bill with printed name and address.

Proof of immunity includes a physician or health-care provider's statement or medical record.

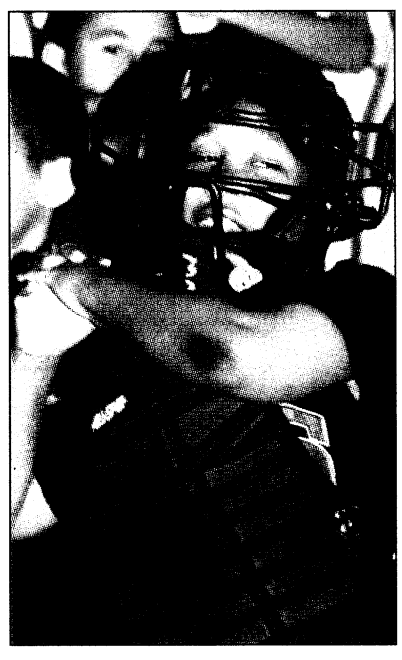
Kadesha Shannon and Jasmine Lee, fourth-graders, perform a traditional Shaker dance to the tune of Simple Gifts.

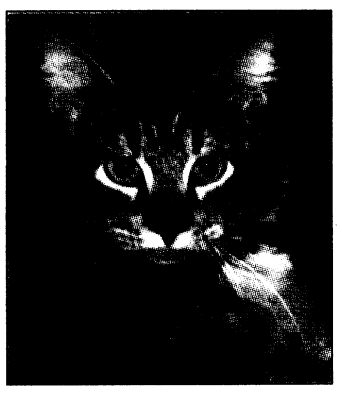
Stowers celebrates traditions

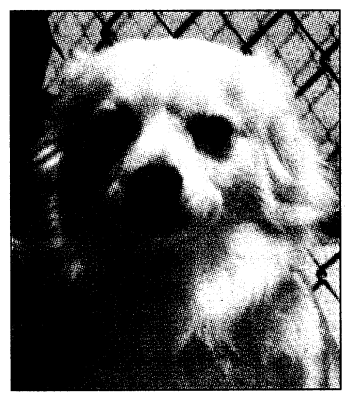


It's as American as apple pie and almost as sweet, Stowers Elementary School's annual Celebrate America concert.

About 400 students entertained their parents Tuesday night with traditional tunes, like My Bonnie Lies Over the Ocean, and patriotic classics, including The Star Spangled Banner and America, the Beautiful.

Stowers' chorus teacher, Elizabeth Custodio, directed the program.





A nervous TeBray Ward tries to remember his line.

Inspiration first

Chaplain (Lt. Col.) Ruben D. Colon Jr.
USAIC Chaplains Office

"Inspiration" was the word a first sergeant used to motivate his company. He said in a loud voice, "Men, without inspiration you will never accomplish the mission."

The first sergeant was deliberately forceful, very motivating and an admired leader. At one moment, he reminded his young Soldiers that at the heart of a successful mission, individuals had to train and work hard. That was how objectives were achieved.

To emphasize his point, he used the example of a man whom he later identified as a hero.

"Why, I know of a man," he shouted, "who worked harder than anyone I know, and he would always drive straight to his goals. He looked neither left nor right. He pressed forward with only one purpose in mind, to accomplish his goals. Neither friend nor foe could delay or divert him from his course. All who stood in his path did so at their own risk. Men! What would you call such a man?"

From the rear of the formation, a new arrival to the unit answered, "A truck driver!"

Of course the young troop missed the point on 'inspiration' entirely.

The disciples of the first day of Pentecost rejoiced, as they were given their mission by the Lord.

"Peace be with you. As the father has sent me, even so I send you" (John 20:20). And after he had said this, he breathed on them, and said the them, "Receive the Holy Spirit" (John 20:22). Suddenly, the Holy Spirit came upon them and they were inspired.

The contagious valor of the Apostle Paul and the small band of early Christians who were able to turn the world upside down was not inspired by unmotivated individuals with half-lived ideas. The source of their inspiration was the genius of the spirit of God, which breathed into their innermost being the presence of a living Lord.

And so it is with us. The inspiration we need to experience the same contagious audacity of those early Christians comes from one source. The breathing of the Holy Spirit into our souls empowers us to share in the celebration of a Lord who looks out for us.

Happy are we who have reached down into our souls, and there encounter God. In doing so we also encounter the source of life's meaning and purpose. We discover a reassurance we can depend on, and a love we can trust.

The challenge we have as we enter into the season of Pentecost demands that we reach down into our souls and continue to depend on our Lord, and as a result, discover what he is doing for our lives. Be inspired today and everyday, because you are filled with the Holy Spirit.

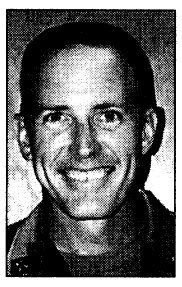
REFLECTIONS

Wow! The idea of sun and fun, laugher and learning, must really be a hot idea, because slots for the HomeFront Heroes retreat were wiped out in less than 48 hours.



Those who just weren't as quick on the draw as others can get on a stand-by list, and should a cancellation occur, they may have the opportunity yet to stick their toes in the sand at the Naval Support Annex's Beach in Panama City for some R&R designed just for spouses of deployed Soldiers.

To be placed on the stand-by list or have questions answered, call 545-1760.

On May 20, 21 and 22, Fort Benning is going to experience an Army first — I will be privileged to lead the "HomeFront Heroes" retreat for spouses of deployed Soldiers to Panama City, Fla.

This is going to be a three-day, two-night retreat with child care included for those who cannot make the arrangements elsewhere for the weekend.

The purpose of the retreat is to honor the sacrifice being made by our spouses of deployed Soldiers by giving them a "beach break" where they can enjoy hope, help, laughter and learning in a setting just for them.

Hawkins

There will be relaxation and inspiration for a donation of just $11.11 per family. Sound like fun? You can bet your beach ball it will be.

To register for this limited space event, call 545-1760 to have your name placed on the reservation list.

Details, you say? Sure, I've got them.

Again, the HomeFront Heroes Retreat will begin the evening of May 20. Transportation to Panama City will occur one of two ways.

You can choose to travel via your vehicle or carpool with a friend.

Or you can, when registering, indicate your desire to travel via the Army bus that will offer transportation to the beach from Fort Benning.

After check-in and being assigned to private and attractive motel units at Panama City's Naval Support Annex (it sits right on St. Andrew's Bay in Panama City Beach, with a lovely private beach), the activities of May 20 will include a welcome and high-energy, fun-filled get-to-know each other session.

Paid child care workers and volunteers will serve children.

After a good night's rest and a convenient breakfast onsite, May 21 will see you enjoying a mid-morning session designed to offer you the help and hope you deserve as a spouse of a Soldier in the midst of a combat deployment.

Lunch is on us, too, as you get ready to enjoy an afternoon of fun in the sun, or whatever you choose to do with your free time.

After the barbecue the evening of May 21, we'll meet again to discover more tools to help you cope with the challenges of deployment before enjoying a sunset over the bay and a variety of games and movie options before bedtime.

The morning of May 22 will be a "day of rest." You can opt to enjoy a bayside chapel service or more R&R before checking out by 11:30 a.m. and starting the journey back home, inspired and renewed.

Want to save your spot and get more information? Call The Chaplain Family Life Center at 545-1760.

Space is limited, and is offered first-come, first-served.

Also, I'd be delighted to answer any questions for you at CrossRoads Contemporary Chapel at 11 a.m. Sundays. CrossRoads is on Kelley Hill and is open to all.

Raymond gets lots of love as CBS airs final episode

© Zap2it

If parting truly is sweet sorrow, it's time for fans of Everybody Loves Raymond to brace themselves.

The Emmy-winning CBS sitcom will end its nine-year run Monday, although fans will still be able to get their fix of the misadventures of Ray Barone and his clan through DVD sets and syndicated repeats.

Preceded by an hourlong Raymond retrospective special, the 30-minute finale is being kept under wraps ... but Doris Roberts, who has played the fictional Ray's perpetually meddling mother, Marie, hints that it involves "Ray's worst nightmare."

It's also guaranteed to involve his wife, Debra (Patricia Heaton); his policeman brother, Robert (Brad Garrett); and his father, Frank (Peter Boyle).

In separate conversations, the series' five principal stars recently discussed the high emotion of filming the last show, and the overall impact Raymond has had on their careers and lives.

Q: The filming of the final episode had to be delayed twice because Patricia had laryngitis. Did that heighten already high emotions?

Romano: The day and the night we finally did the finale, you sensed the ending of it all, and I was very worried how I was going to feel in the days and weeks after. I mean, every ounce of creative energy I had went into this for nine years, and it's immediately over. Call me in June and you'll get a better sense of how I'm handling it.

Heaton: I liken it to being at the memorial service of a friend who lived a full and prosperous life. There's a lot to celebrate, but you'll still miss them.

One of the producers pointed out to me that in nine years, we'd never had to cancel a shoot, and I thought it was amazing that the last one we'd ever do had to be postponed.

Boyle: That was like a sign from above, like nobody wanted to let go.

Q: Are you comfortable with the show ending now?

Heaton: (The producers) don't want to beat it into the ground. Everybody wants to leave on an "up" note. Ray continued to work as hard from the first day of the pilot right up through the last episode.

He was always tweaking things, sitting in the writing and editing rooms, and I think you always saw that quality come through.

Garrett: We knew for a year that this was going to be it, and we were all really holding it together.

Then came the curtain call, and we were just mush. It really hit us.

Sure, the money for doing a 10th year would have been astronomical — especially for Ray, and rightfully so — but there's something really great about the integrity of feeling the best thing you can give back to the audience is leaving on time.

Q: Raymond was hardly a hit when CBS initially aired it on Fridays.

When did you sense the tide turning in your favor?

Romano: Once they put us on Mondays, I probably knew at the end of the first year. Cosby was our lead-in, and not only did we hold onto the ratings; we improved on them. I knew creatively that we had something worthwhile, and we were getting critical praise.

We still didn't have a great big audience, but we had gone from 80th place to 15th place.

The cast of Everybody Loves Raymond bids farewell to its television home for the past nine years as CBS airs the sitcom's final episode Monday. An hour-long retrospective precedes the finale.

Q: What sort of direct response have you gotten from fans over the years?

Roberts: What amazes me and pleases me, anytime I've gone anywhere in the world, is that people say the same thing to me ... "I love you."

It's the idea that if you laugh at me and the shenanigans I've made happen on the show, you can laugh at your own parents. You have to do that sometimes. That's better than to be angry.

Boyle: My wife and daughters and I just took a trip to the Bahamas, and when we got there, people recognized me.

We got a lot of reaction from the locals. The show plays everywhere.

Q: You've been on sort of a farewell tour for the past two months, since the cast's appearance on Oprah. How has the long goodbye been?

Romano: It actually eases the sudden ending of it all. There's so much other stuff happening, it feels like the show is still going on.

I'm still going to the office I have on the lot, but the only weird thing was when I went by the set one day. Anne Heche filmed a pilot there. The whole stage looked different. That kind of weirded me out.

Boyle: I already miss the show and the gang, because I'm in New York and they're all in L.A. It feels bittersweet.

Mindhunters — On a remote island, the FBI has a training program for their psychological profiling division, called "Mindhunters," used to track down serial killers.

SPORTS

What's happening in sports this week? Soccer play-offs run Monday through Thursday at Doughboy Stadium. Intramural softball starts on Tuesday at Gowdy Stadium, and the second Army 10-Miler qualifier is May 20 at Santiago Gym.

Bench notes

Erin Nash

• Biffle conquers Lady in Black

Greg Biffle has three wins under his belt this season after taking the checkered flag May 7 at Darlington.

The Saturday night race coverage is on FX, not FOX, at 7 p.m.

• Rocket makes it 330

Houston Astros' pitcher Roger Clemens got his 330th win May 9 and broke an 11-game on-the-road losing streak. The Rocket moves to ninth, ahead of Steve Carlton, on the list.

• Sunny for Phoenix

Phoenix Suns' point guard Steve Nash (no relation) nabbed the most valuable player of the NBA title, edging out Shaq. Sun's coach Mike D'Antoni was awarded Coach of the Year.

• Long shot wins derby

Despite 50-1 odds, jockey Mike Smith rode Giacomo to victory May 7 at the 131st running of the Kentucky Derby. Closing Argument finished second and Afleet Alex rounded out the top three.

• Homeruns dry up

Thank goodness we have people who make a living figuring out statistics. They've tallied up the numbers and have found out that homeruns are at their lowest since '02. There's talk this is tied to the crackdown on steroids.

Who'd a thunk it?

Also, Barry Bonds is out at least another two months following knee surgery.

Eleven teams from around the world converged on Fort Benning last weekend for the 2005 USA Rugby National Military Club Championships.

The matches took place on Blue Field, where some of the best military teams in the world took turns on the pitch, or field, to determine which team was truly the best.

Teams included: West Point; Fort Campbell; Fort Bragg; a Marine team from Quantico; the President's XV, which included players from across the country; the Royal Air Force from Mendenhall, England; the Columbus/Fort Benning Cruise-a-Matics; US Forces Europe; US Coast Guard; KARMA, an Air Force select group; and Mandaloosa, a combined Air Force team from Florida.

The tournament included two categories — club and open. Club team members must all be military and from the same installation. Open teams can have up to 10 civilian players and can combine players from different installations.

West Point beat Quantico 37-27 for the club championship title. KARMA topped the Coast Guard 29-5 in the open division, and the Columbus/Fort Benning Cruise-a-Matics trampled Mandaloosa 27-3 in the consolation bracket.

Ray Davis, event chairman, said the Fort Benning fields were "the best they've ever been" in the 11 years Fort Benning has hosted the event since 1990.

"The facilities here are great, and Fort Benning gives us a lot of support," he said.

Davis said tournament participation is down because of deployments. Before 9-11, typically 25-30 teams competed.

Brad Russell, of the Cruise-a-Matics, prepares to dish the ball off to a teammate.

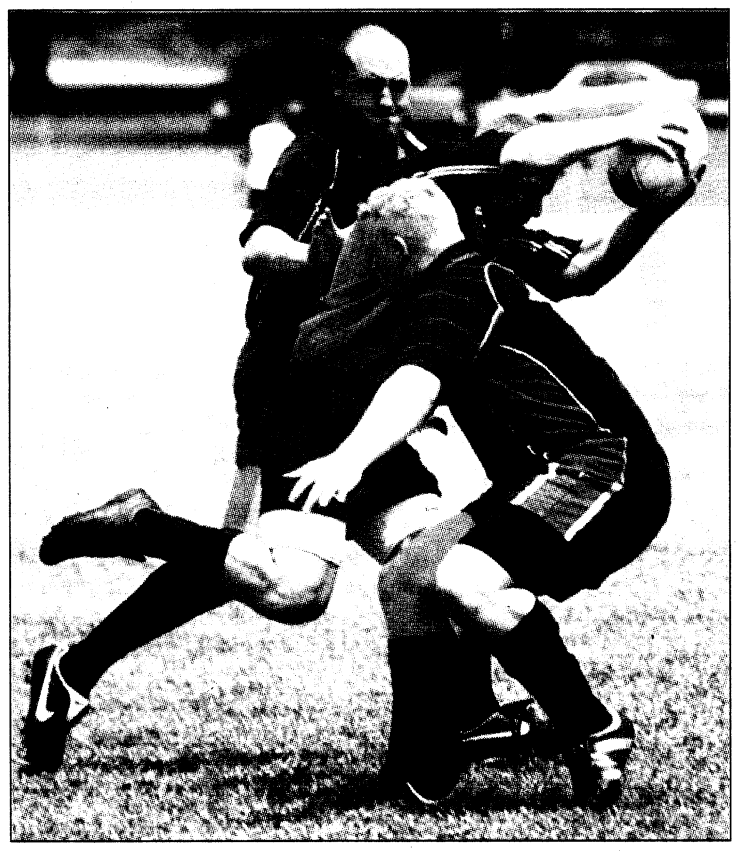
This was the third trip to Fort Benning for Christopher Mendonca, of the Mandaloosa Rugby Club.

"This is the tournament everybody wants to come to if they are serious about rugby," he said. "It is great because the pitch is beautiful, the weather is beautiful and it's a beautiful post."

Mendonca said rugby is becoming so popular, particularly on military installations, because any type of person can play. It's less about skill and more about tenacity.

"It you have heart, you can play," he said. "Rugby is like an organized mosh pit, but there's a common respect on the field for each player. It is a sport with a lot of honor."

Rugby began in England in the 1850s and is essentially football without helmets or padding. A rugby ball is similar to a football in shape, but slightly larger.



Blocking isn't allowed, but tackling is. The ball is moved forward by running or kicking — never passing.

Each team has 15 players on the field at one time, and they must all play offense and defense during each 40-minute half.

"It's a game more oriented toward speed and distance than strength and power," said Jim Muldoon, pitch superintendent.

The next chance to see a rugby game will be during a summer tournament, June 18 at the Columbus/Fort Benning Cruise-a-Matic rugby pitch, located behind the Dolly Madison factory off Victory Drive.

For more information on the tournament, to find out about the sport or to join the Cruise-a-Matics team, call Ray Davis at 587-9393.

Duck pond to open with fishing rodeo

Bass Club members help little fishers

Fishing season at the Sand Hill Duck Pond opens May 21 with a Kids Fishing Rodeo.

Registration begins at 8 a.m. and the fishing tournament will begin at 9 a.m.

Military youth ages 1 to 15 will have two hours to fish, and awards will be presented an hour later, said Gary Hartzell, event organizer.

"The pond is stocked by the Georgia Department of Natural Resources and managed by the Fort Benning natural resource people, Hartzell said, and "it's designed specifically for kids' fishing."

The pond is located just past the entrance to Kanell Field.

Registration will take place behind the Headquarters Service Company, Infantry Training Brigade building next to the pond.

The annual rodeo marks the opening of the pond for the summer season, Hartzell said.

The person who catches the most fish in his or her age group will be declared the winner. Ties will be decided by the weight of the catch.

Fishing licenses are not required, Hartzell said, but participants must bring their own gear. Members of the Fort Benning Bass Club will assist novice fisherman.

Last year 68 kids caught 278 fish.

"I'm a fisherman and I think the best thing you can do with your kids is take them fishing," Hartzell said. "(Fishing) teaches persistence and it makes you humble."

There will also be a fishing rodeo June 4 at Russ Pond.

For more information, call Dorrie Wagner at 545-1853.

Benning to grow with BRAC proposal

Bridgett Siter
Bayonet staff

"Welcome to Fort Benning, Home of the Infantry and Armor."

Or: "Welcome to Fort Benning, Home of the Maneuver Training Center"

Or maybe ...

It's too early to say what it will be called, but if approved, the Base Realignment and Closure commission's recommendation to bring the Army's armor school and center from Fort Knox, Ky., to Fort Benning would mean one thing for certain, said the post's commanding general.

"The music of freedom has added pieces to its orchestra," said Brig. Gen. Benjamin Freakley, referring to the 300 64-ton M1A1 and M1A2 tanks that would come with the U.S. Army Armor School.

Freakley's approach during a May 13 press conference was indicative of the collective response on and off post to Defense Secretary Donald Rumsfeld's announcement earlier that day.

Though no one expected Fort Benning to be closed, certainly a loss of personnel was a major concern. As it turns out, Fort Benning is "confirmed as a significant focus for realignment recommendations," Freakley said, and local officials are excited about the probability of growth.

As the U.S. Army Maneuver Center, the post stands to gain nearly 10,000 personnel and $460 million in construction over the next four years if the president and Congress approve the proposal.

That translates to more money off post, as roughly 2,200 Armor School cadre, civilian employees and their families frequent local businesses.

"It's excellent for Fort Benning, the City of Columbus and the region," said Columbus Mayor Bob Poydasheff. "I certainly

Although the Soldiers of the 498th Medical Company (Air Ambulance) returned to Fort Benning March 4 from a deployment to Iraq, their equipment remained in Kuwait. The 13 UH-60A Black Hawk helicopters arrived at the Charleston, N.C., port May 1 and 2. Aircraft must undergo extensive maintenance within a year of redeployment. To allow the unit to train during this period, only half of the aircraft are serviced at one time.

Benning Soldier drowns

Fishing trip on Chattahoochee turns deadly

A Fort Benning Soldier drowned in the Chattahoochee River May 25 while fishing with friends.

The recent Ranger School graduate, a hold-over student with the 2nd Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment, was enjoying time off, awaiting orders for his next duty assignment.

According to eye-witness accounts, 2nd Lt. James May, 25, slipped into the water beneath the 13th Street Bridge on the Phenix City side of the river. He was apparently trying to cross between two islands of rocks.

The Chattahoochee is known for its treacherous undercurrent, and witnesses said the water rose quickly just as May was attempting to cross.

"Our hearts and prayers go out to him and his family," said Brig. Gen. Benjamin Freakley, post commanding general, during a press conference May 13.

"We appreciate the mayor, the fire department and emergency services' reaction to this tragic event," Freakley said.

Columbus Fire and Emergency Medical Services divers spent nearly five hours searching for the body May 25, and Georgia Power held back the water at Oliver Dam. The body was found the following day.

May joined the National Guard in September, 2001 and went on active duty two years later.

Sgt. 1st Class Horace Terry, an Infantry Officers' Basic Course instructor, said he was impressed with the character of the quiet, truthful young man from Powder Springs, Ga.

"Nobody had anything bad to say about that man. You could depend on him," Terry said. "He wasn't afraid to ask questions, and you could tell he wanted to learn all he could learn. If he'd lived, he'd have been General May one day."

May was buried Wednesday in his hometown.

His friends who were fishing with him accompanied the body home.

Conference held to discuss sustainability

Kris Gonzalez

Post officials and community leaders met at the Columbus Convention and Trade Center May 10-12 to lay out goals for accommodating Fort Benning's projected expansion during the next 25 years.

"We're going into a major period of growth, change and transformation on Fort Benning," said Chuck Walls, deputy garrison commander.

The purpose of the Sustainability Goal Setting Conference was to design a blueprint for the post as it prepares for an influx of Soldiers and weapons systems while still maintaining the environment and improving the community's quality of life.

"Being a power projection Army, operating with ever-dwindling resources, and supporting increased commitments present daunting challenges for Fort Benning," said Brig. Gen. Benjamin Freakley, the commanding general.

John Markham, Integrated Training Area Management coordinator, describes a program to restore eroded ranges during the sustainability conference tour May 10.

"These challenges will require us to better manage for the future to accomplish our mission, safeguard people's quality of life, and protect human health and the environment," he said.

The conference was the third in a series of workshops intended to develop long-term plans for Fort Benning's Installation Sustainability Program. The program, which began here in March 2004, allows Fort Benning to accomplish its mission of training and deploying Soldiers while preserving the environment and establishing partnerships with the surrounding community.

BUCKLE UP AWARENESS MONTH

May 31, 1991 — I was 17 and indestructible. A regular Friday night for my friends and I. We were party-hopping and decided to hit the next party.

So we got into my friend Melisa's Jeep CJ-7 and took off. We buckled our seatbelts, never guessing that in the next few minutes they'd save our lives.

Growing up, I remember never wearing a seatbelt, climbing around the car and laying in the back of the station wagon. Then the statistics started coming out about seatbelts and how they saves lives. My mom, a registered nurse, made us buckle up from there on out.

Seatbelts became a habit, like brushing our teeth before going to bed. I always wore my seatbelt, and my friends did too. It was the first thing I did when I got into any car, and felt naked if I didn't automatically put it on.

We were on the the backroads of Cape Cod, a wooded area with winding roads.

I don't remember much, just another passenger in the backseat next to me telling Melisa, "There's a really sharp corner up here."

Then came the sensation of being on a rollercoaster, turning upside down, dirt swirling around my head. The ride came to an abrupt stop, and an arm came through the Jeep window to help me out.

I got out of the Jeep, looked at it and realized it was upside down on the road. Luckily, New England weather is still cool in May, and Melisa still had the hardtop on the Jeep — otherwise it probably would be a different story, and I wouldn't be here to tell it.

All five of us in the Jeep survived, albeit with bruises and scrapes and a lot of tears, joyful tears of disbelief. We survived.

We learned later that Melisa took the corner too fast, hit a patch of sand and the Jeep flipped several times before coming to a stop after it snapped a utility pole.

The seatbelts saved our lives.

My mom went down to the junkyard the next day to see the Jeep. The junkyard worker told her that when it first came in, he had figured that everyone in the Jeep had been killed — it looked that bad.

But because of a seatbelt, I'm here today — physically fine, but with some emotional scars of coming that close to death.

If you wear your seatbelt, thank you. If you don't, get into the habit now. Even if you're the best driver in the world, there are others who might not be as good as you.

Teach your kids safety now — keep them in the backseat, in a car seat, booster seat, whatever is age appropriate for them. Don't let your next car ride be your last.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Soldier concerned about traffic

As a Soldier, I am concerned about the traffic problems on Fort Benning.

One of the biggest problems is stagnate traffic at the South Lumpkin and Benning Road gate. There is a yield sign at the intersection of Custer and Benning roads. The sign was necessary because of heavy traffic entering through the Benning Road gate, which has been closed for months.

Discourteous drivers on Custer Road hinder the traffic coming on post from South Lumpkin. They do this when they turn left onto Benning Road so fast their cars are almost on the two right wheels.

Whenever you turn left onto a two-lane road, you are supposed to veer onto the inside lane — it's the law in 50 states. There are also no MPs in the area to cite these drivers.

Also,impatient drivers coming from the Custer Road housing areas are in such a hurry, they cut off the traffic coming through the South Lumpkin gate. This happens every morning, Monday through Friday. The yield sign isn't there so inconsiderate drivers can disobey traffic rules. It's there to regulate traffic coming from the Benning Road gate, currently closed.

For the off-post drivers forced to yield at that intersection because of the impatient Custer Road drivers, please understand that you are yielding to the wrong flow of traffic.

You cause stagnation at the South Lumpkin gate when you yield to those drivers who fail to stay in the inside lane of Fort Benning Road.

I would like to see MPs stationed there to stop this inconsiderate behavior and a postwide requirement for each unit to teach traffic considerations and laws to all Soldiers stationed here.

— Sgt. 1st Class Daniel M. Longstreet, Sr.

Provost Marshal replies

The yield sign at the South Lumpkin and Custer Road intersection warns drivers turning right from Lumpkin Road toward Main Post to yield to all vehicles, not just cars coming from the Benning Road gate.

The statement, "Whenever you turn left onto a two-lane road, you are supposed to veer onto the inside lane —it's the law in 50 states," is incorrect. There is no federal law governing (left turns onto a two-lane road) or most other traffic laws.

We are authorized, under federal code, to assimilate Georgia Code to enforce traffic laws on post. Georgia Code 40-6-120 states, "Whenever practical, the left turn shall be made to the left of the center of the intersection and so as to leave the intersection or other location in the extreme left hand lawfully available to traffic moving in the same direction as the vehicle on the roadway being entered." This is not something we would ticket a driver for, because the law allows the driver to make the decision of when (a left turn is) practical.

Georgia Code 40-6-72 concerns stop and yield signs, and clearly states that the driver at the yield sign must yield to any vehicle on the road with the right of way.

I understand drivers are frustrated with the wait times to clear this intersection during the construction of the new Access Control Point, but the drivers who are being inconsiderate and moving into the right lane as part of their turn are not committing a traffic violation the MPs could ticket.

Special to The Bayonet

Yea, only seven more days until school's out, pools open, and summer is finely here!

As the end of the school year nears, some of us think about our favorite classes and teachers — the ones we'll actually miss.

Well, if you ask just about anybody at Faith Middle School, they won't hesitate to say that Anne Shaw and her class are definitely, without question, their absolute favorites.

Let's face it, at this point in the year, we're all tired of school, and our brains are filled to capacity. We need the summer to let all that knowledge settle and make room for more.

We're beyond learning.

So what's the secret to teaching the unteachable? For many of us, the answer is clear if you look at Mrs. Shaw and her elective class, "Applied Technology."

It's not necessarily that we yearn to learn about everything she teaches — after all, it's industrial arts and sometimes you just don't want to get dusty. No, it's not just what she teaches, but how she teaches. She makes learning fun, she's funny, and she respects us and treats us like young adults.

In return, we respect her. That's probably why there seem to be fewer discipline problems in her classroom.

Mrs. Shaw teaches us to be kind, humorous, safe, and of course, how to use lots and lots of tools with funky names.

No matter how my day has gone, walking into her classroom and seeing her there always puts a smile on my face.

I think everyone has a teacher who means to them what Mrs. Shaw means to me — a special teacher you wish you could take with you next year. And the next.

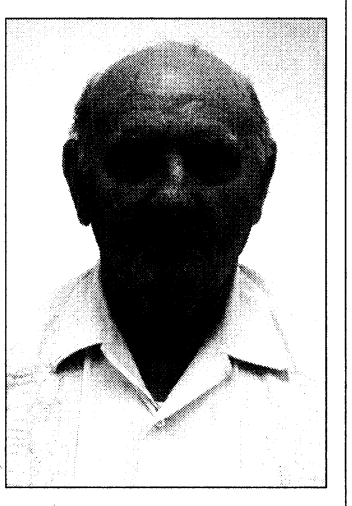
It's the teacher that is always there to help you and to laugh with you.

The teacher that is not only willing to teach you, but to learn with you. And isn't afraid to admit it.

It's the teacher that makes you dread the dismissal bell, because you wish you could stay in his or her class all day.

Whether it's an elective teacher, an academic teacher, counselor, librarian, secretary, or lunch lady — thank God for the lunch ladies — or all of the above, return the favor this year and put a smile on their faces.

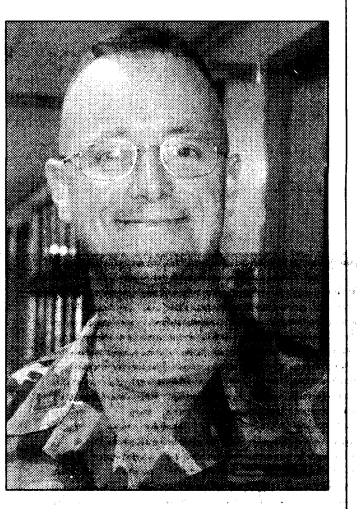
While you're giving hugs, swapping yearbooks, sharing jokes and tears, don't forget to thank that special teacher for a great year.



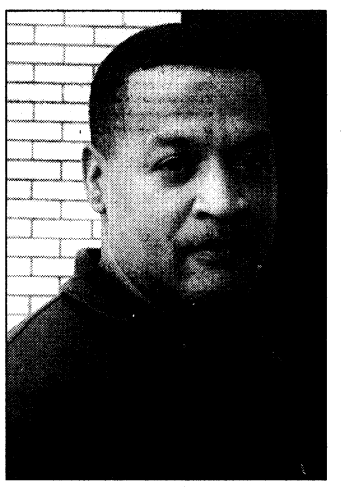
Thanks so much Mrs. Shaw.

VARIOUS VOICES

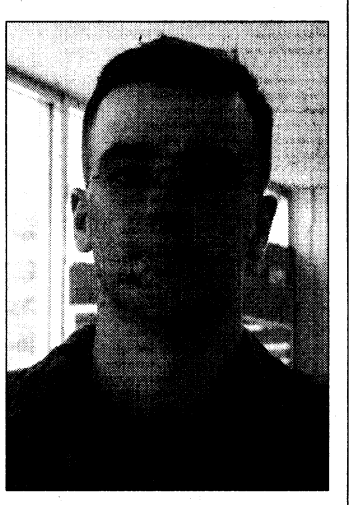
What is the most reckless thing you've seen someone do while driving?



Staff Sgt. Paul Watson, U.S. Army Infantry Center — "I saw a guy cut across three lanes of traffic and pull into the turning lane without looking. The cars in that lane were turning, so they couldn't see him and someone smashed into him from the side."



Hubert Webb, AAFES — "A guy totaled me out when he ran a red light. He was speeding because he wanted to beat the light, and he hit my car, forcing me into a telephone pole. I was OK, but it hurt my wife a little. It's not worth it to put other people in danger just to make the light."



Gwen Pleban, TSM Close Combat Missile Systems — "Just the other night, I saw a guy pull around in front of me, then suddenly shoot across four lanes of traffic. He almost hit my car, and he was going way too fast."

Capt. Ted Preister, 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment — "I see people two or three times a day driving erratically while talking on cell phones. It's a huge distraction. People get into the habit of doing it, and lose their focus on the road."

Billy Arnold, Directorate of Training — "People driving and talking on cell phones are reckless, because they don't pay attention to the road. Also people slowing down to view an accident is a problem."

Capt. Kay Lecher, German Army — "I can't believe it when I see people talking on cell phones while driving, because it's banned in Germany. If you get in an accident while you're talking on the phone, your insurance doesn't cover it. You have to pull over to the side of the road if you want to talk."

Dave Stieghan, Infantry Branch History — "People drive while talking on their cell phones, and they talk with their hands. Sometimes I'll see someone driving with a cell phone in one hand and putting on lipstick with the other."

Gen. Byrnes visits post

Melissa House
Bayonet staff

Officer Candidate School Class 04-05 welcomed one of their own in Marshall Auditorium May 12.

Gen. Kevin Byrnes, commander of the Army's Training and Doctrine Command was the guest speaker at the graduation ceremony for 121 newly minted lieutenants. Post commander Brig. Gen. Benjamin Freakley introduced Byrnes as a personal role model and a role model for "thousands of NCOs and officers across the Army." As the TRADOC commander, Byrnes oversees 33 Army schools, including OCS, on 16 installations.

"He has said the Army has underimagined its potential," Freakley said, "and he is encouraging leaders to be flexible and adaptive — looking to the future to produce the best for the Army."

Byrnes began by talking about the importance of the OCS, a program producing officers for the Army, primarily in times of war, since 1941.

"As you begin this service as an officer in the greatest Army in the world, know that the Army is committed to your growth as individuals and as leaders," Byrnes said. And most important, providing the best training, leadership and equipment so the men and women in uniform can succeed."

Byrnes

Byrnes said the fate of the nation had been on the line five times between the Revolutionary War and the Cold War and each time, the military was called upon.

"Then on 9/11, everything changed," Byrnes said. "We had the sixth challenge to our future, to the democratic way of life. We'll not back down, it's about national security. It's a small-unit war and you're going to carry this on your shoulders."

He said the efforts in Iraq and Afghanistan are for a noble cause and great things happen every day, although much is missed by the press.

"The significant progress is how we are viewed in our country," he said. "Our nation is squarely behind us and our profession is held in high esteem. This force is certainly the most seasoned and experienced we've had since Vietnam and as committed as any we've fielded."

Fifty-eight percent of OCS class 04-05 had prior service as enlisted Soldiers, and Byrnes said the new lieutenants would find that many of their young Soldiers would have combat experience.

"Leverage the talent and experience of your Soldiers," he said. "They don't care who you are. All they want to know is — are you competent and do you care. Keep in mind our Soldiers will always be our most precious asset.

"Next month is the Army's 230th anniversary," Byrnes said. "For 230 years, it has served the nation well. We've been through an awful lot. In the 20th century, more than 630,000 have paid the ultimate price. Never let the nation

A few minutes with Gen. Byrnes

Melissa House
Bayonet staff

Gen. Kevin Byrnes sat down to talk about the Army, Fort Benning, and the Officer Candidate School after the May 12 graduation ceremony.

"Wow. They really are impressive," Byrnes said of OCS Class 04-05. "We might have been impressive then (in 1969), but those just coming up have great skills. They just have to go out and listen to their NCOs and they'll be wonderful."

Byrnes was 19 when he began OCS, something he said is unheard of today, except in the rarest of instances. Today's candidates are warrant officers and even master sergeants with a great deal of combat experience.

"I'm thinking about the contributions they'll make from day one," he said.

These days, he said, Soldiers are proud to wear their uniform and Americans are proud to be in the company of Soldiers.

"There's a difference in the way the nation respects the military now," he said. "When we graduated, we were told to take our uniform off at the airport. That had to change."

Although the Army of the 1960s had its core values, Byrnes said things like warrior ethos and the Soldiers' Creed make for a much more disciplined, but equally committed Army today.

Byrnes said there was no Officer Basic Course in his day — just basic and advanced individual training and 23 weeks of OCS.

"I don't know that we were as well trained," he said. Running a fire direction center as a new lieutenant, he said his Soldiers were all college graduates.

"I learned from them and I had good NCOs as well," he said. "They were committed."

Byrnes spent a few hours visiting training on post, not as a inspection, he said, but as recognition for what the leadership has done.

I really like what I'm seeing at Benning," Byrnes said. "The Soldiers in (one station unit training) are getting the training they need. This place is indispensible to an Army at war and you can see that in the accomplishments of the Army at war."

Byrnes said he looks to the Infantry to lead the way and set the standards.

"They've done it and they've done it well," he said.

When asked about OCS Class 04-05, Byrnes laughed. He handed a certificate to each graduate as they crossed the stage, taking time to talk with many of them.

"It's funny when you hear someone in the audience yell and the Soldier sheepishly tells me, 'That's my grandmother, or that's my mother.'" he said. "They're officers. They have combat experience, but they're a little embarrassed. They still revert back to the human dimension."

Vietnam vet encourages Soldiers to beat all odds

Roever rallies troops with survival story

Donna Hyatt
Bayonet staff

Epiphany — the sudden perception of the essential meaning of something.

Dave Roever was burned beyond recognition in Vietnam when a phosphorous grenade he was poised to throw exploded in his hand just six inches from his face. For Roever, epiphany came while holding a burned Soldier in Iraq.

Of all the millions of people in Baghdad, only Roever, who'd survived despite all odds, understood exactly what this young man was experiencing.

He leaned over to the Soldier's ear canal and said, "You are not just a Soldier, you are a sacrifice for the cause of freedom, and I've come from America to say thank you."

At that moment, it hit him. He'd endured the agony of dismemberment and disfigurement from long ago to give hope and encouragement to a new generation of Soldiers fighting a different type of war.

Now, it's Roever's mission to go wherever in the world the military asks him to go and speak words of wisdom, inspiration and thanks to the men and women who voluntarily give themselves to the service of our country. He prefers the remote outposts like the Sunni Triangle and "wherever the USO doesn't go."

Roever

At Sand Hill Chapel Monday, Roever wove the horror of his tragic accident with humorous anecdotes, hair-raising war stories, biblical principles and genuine appreciation for the Soldiers in the audience.

"We all have scars," he said. "Some of us wear them on the outside of our bodies, and some of us wear them on the inside.

"A scar is a healed wound. I can let that old wound stand in my way, or I can look at it as a challenge," he said.

"Every challenge is an opportunity to rise up and make myself better. I'm more than a conqueror, I'm an overcomer. You don't ever give up. You're better than you think you are."

The founder and president of two non-profit corporations and the author of four books, Roever is building a retreat for severely wounded military personnel and their spouses called Camp David Colorado.

Situated upon the 164-acre Eagle Summit Ranch, the Colorado camp will focus on recovery using the principles of faith, hope and love.

Since 1993, Roever & Associates have operated a non-government organization in Vietnam, acting as a liaison between the local government and the U.S. military while focusing on humanitarian aid. He is considering opening another such operation in Iraq.

In an effort to help hurting veterans come to terms with the Vietnam war, Roever founded the Journey Back program in 1998.

Designed to be a hands-on Vietnamese visit focusing on mental and spiritual healing, the overseas trip proved so successful, Roever now returns every year with new veterans.

When asked if he had anything special to say to the Soldiers at Fort Benning, Roever said, "There's a price for freedom, and it's not free, and we all know it. It's a time of war, and they're thinking of others first. To you who are willing to pay this price, I say thank you."

Working extensively with the Department of Defense, Billy Graham's international crusades and Promise Keepers, Roever's calender is booked worldwide into 2007.

Conference: Established future goals for Fort Benning community, and environmental programs to establish better lines of communication and to operate more efficiently and effectively, said Jay Brown, Fort Benning's sustainability planner.

"By applying the principles of sustainability, Fort Benning will be the Army's flagship installation, capable of supporting Army operations throughout the world," Freakley said. "We have to establish aggressive, realistic and quantifiable goals."

"Sustainability is not just a neat idea anymore," Walls said.

"It's going to have to be a way of life if we want to be here ten to thirty years from now."

Fort Benning is one of the Army's largest training installations, spanning more than 182,000 acres and training and equipping approximately 100,000 Soldiers in 2004.

Increased missions in support of the Global War on Terrorism means more Soldiers will come to Fort Benning to train and deploy.

"The intensity of training is not going to let up," Walls said. "We have to be able to adequately train our Soldiers before we send them off to war."

Missions increase the demand for natural resources. Sustainability slows down or eliminates depletion of these resources.

"We have to maintain our training, and the key to success is unrestricted access to land, water and air space," Freakley said.

Karl R. Rabago, guest speaker and director of energy for the Houston Advanced Research Center in Texas, said "growth and demand are on a collision course with declining resources," and "there should be enough sense of obligation in every one of us to propel us into action."

"If we don't change the path we are on, we're going to run into trouble," he said.

"Sustainability means living, working and acting today as if you really do believe there is a tomorrow."

Rabago said getting the maximum use out of resources may ensure they will be around when needs are more critical. To achieve that, the Army needs to change the way it expends resources.

"We're going to have to let go of some tired, old ideas and some of yesterday's thinking," he said. "We don't have to push aside the things we developed.

"We don't have to throw away the successes of our human race. What we have to do is realize how to do things better."

"It's about changing mindsets on how we solve problems. It's about making investments in the future," said Kevin Palmer of the SAIC Corporation.

Palmer described how military installations and outside communities are already using new technologies, such as tactical hybrid vehicles, virtual training (for exercises too expensive and too dangerous to undertake live), and microbial fuel cells to run computers (powered by organic household waste).

"The military has always been at the forefront of making social changes," Palmer said.

"There are newer technologies, and there are newer approaches we can use to resolve the issues we face as a community, as a nation and as a species."

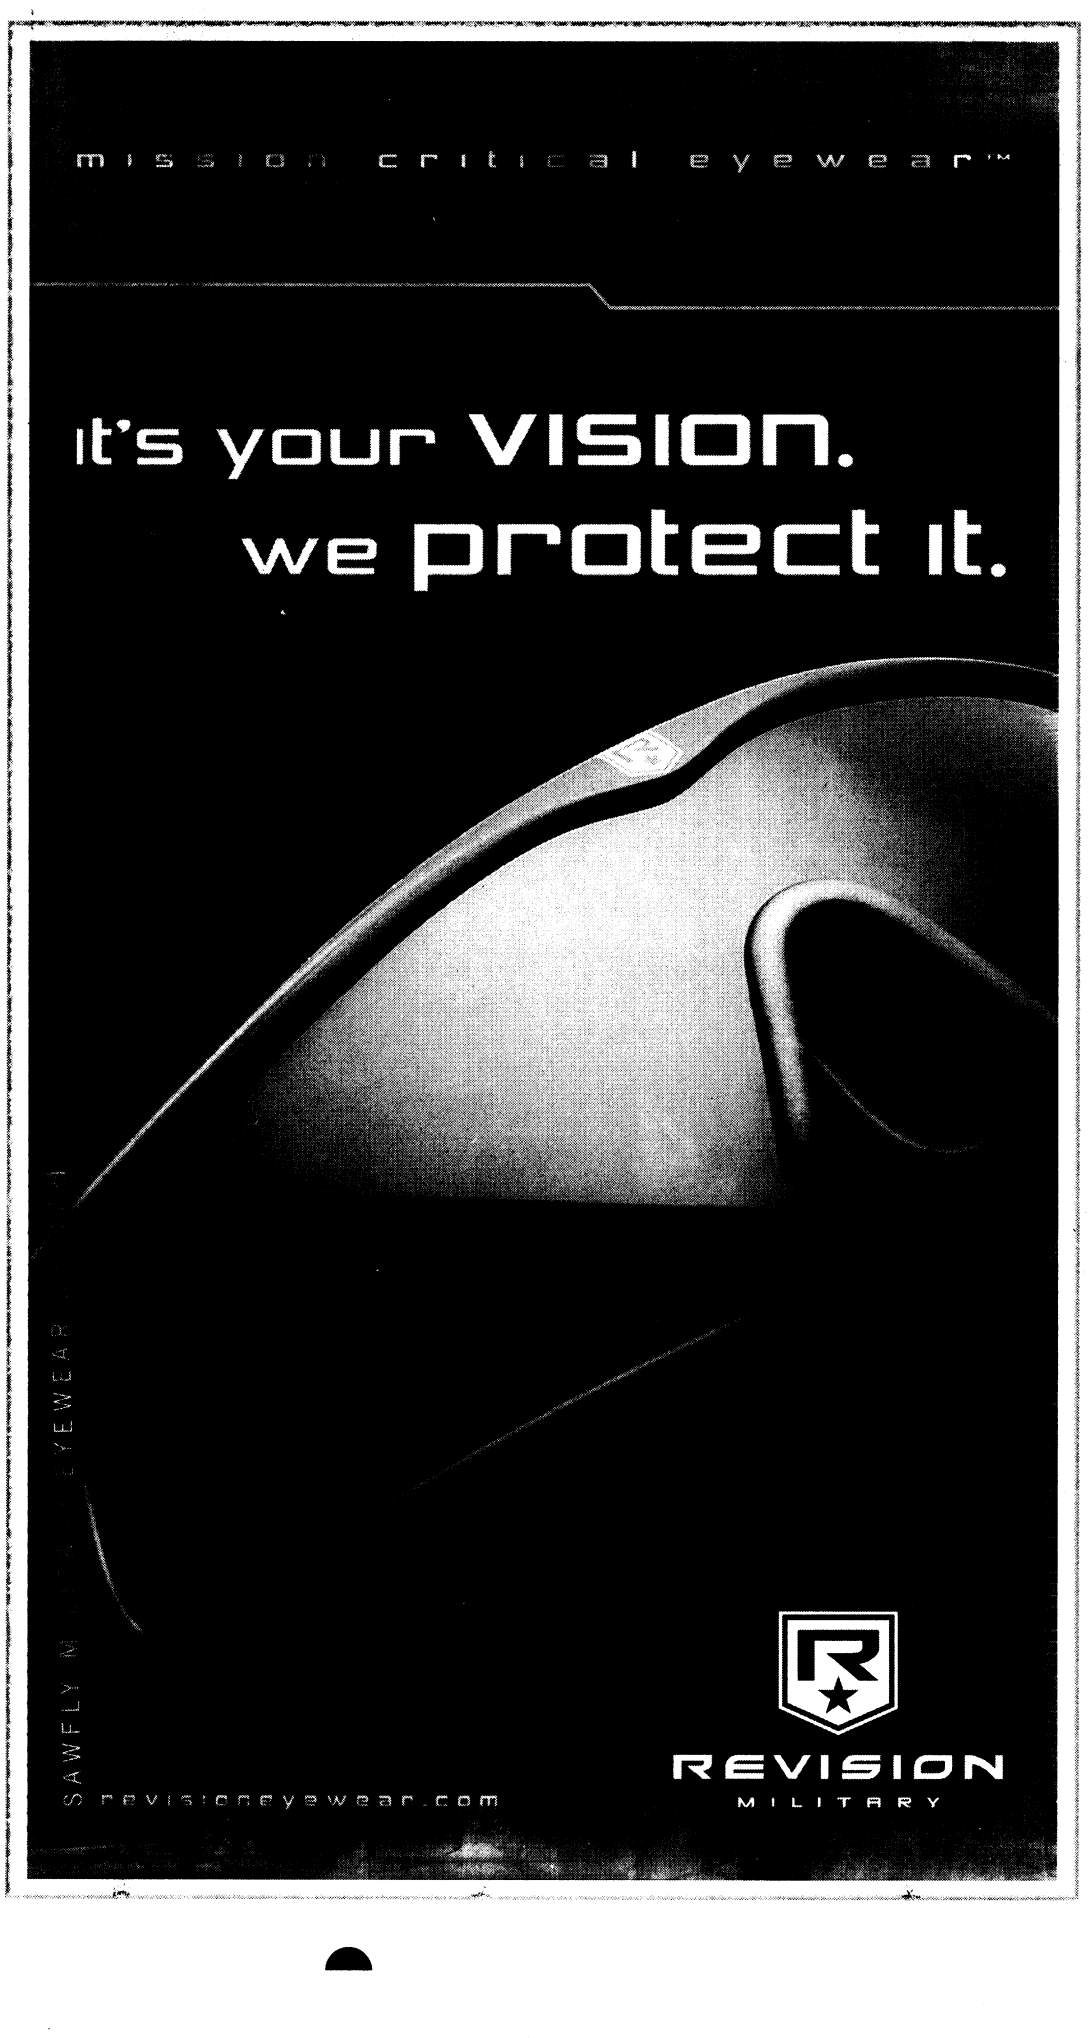
Palmer described how recycling or reusing resources proves to be an advantageous way to impact the environment. Biofuels (made from trees, grass and algae), such as bio-diesel, could provide a significant amount of fuel for tactical vehicles, saving the installation in costs, reducing tons of pollutants per year, and allowing the military and the country to be less dependent on outside fuel.

"Sustainability equals security," Rabago said. "Security is about freedom from fear of privation or want, today and tomorrow."

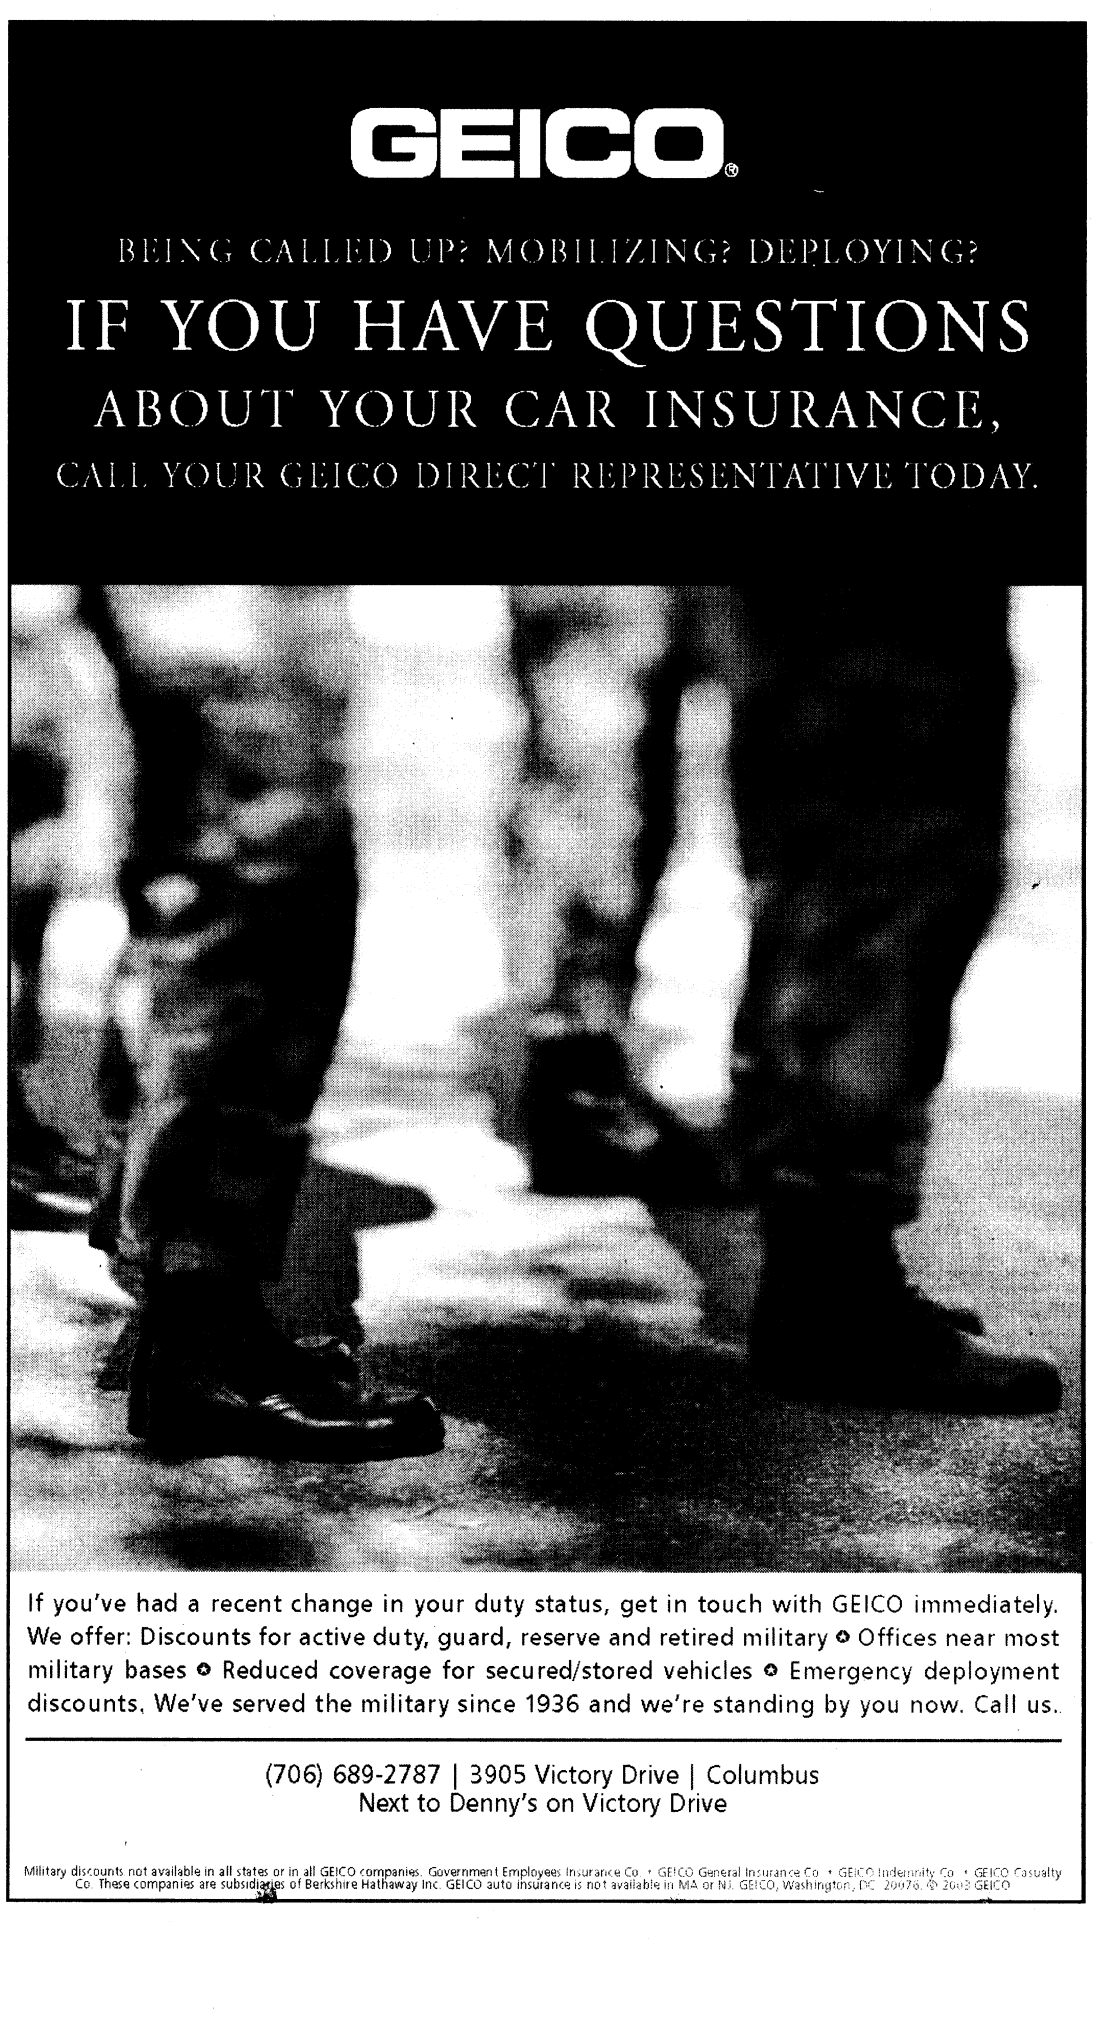
"Sustainable installations are less vulnerable to attack," he said. "They allow valuable resources to be devoted to warfighting, and they impose less wartime stress on neighborhood communities."

"A sustainable installation allows Soldiers to do their mission," he said. "Soldiers perform better knowing their dependents are happy, healthy and safe. It gives them something to fight for."

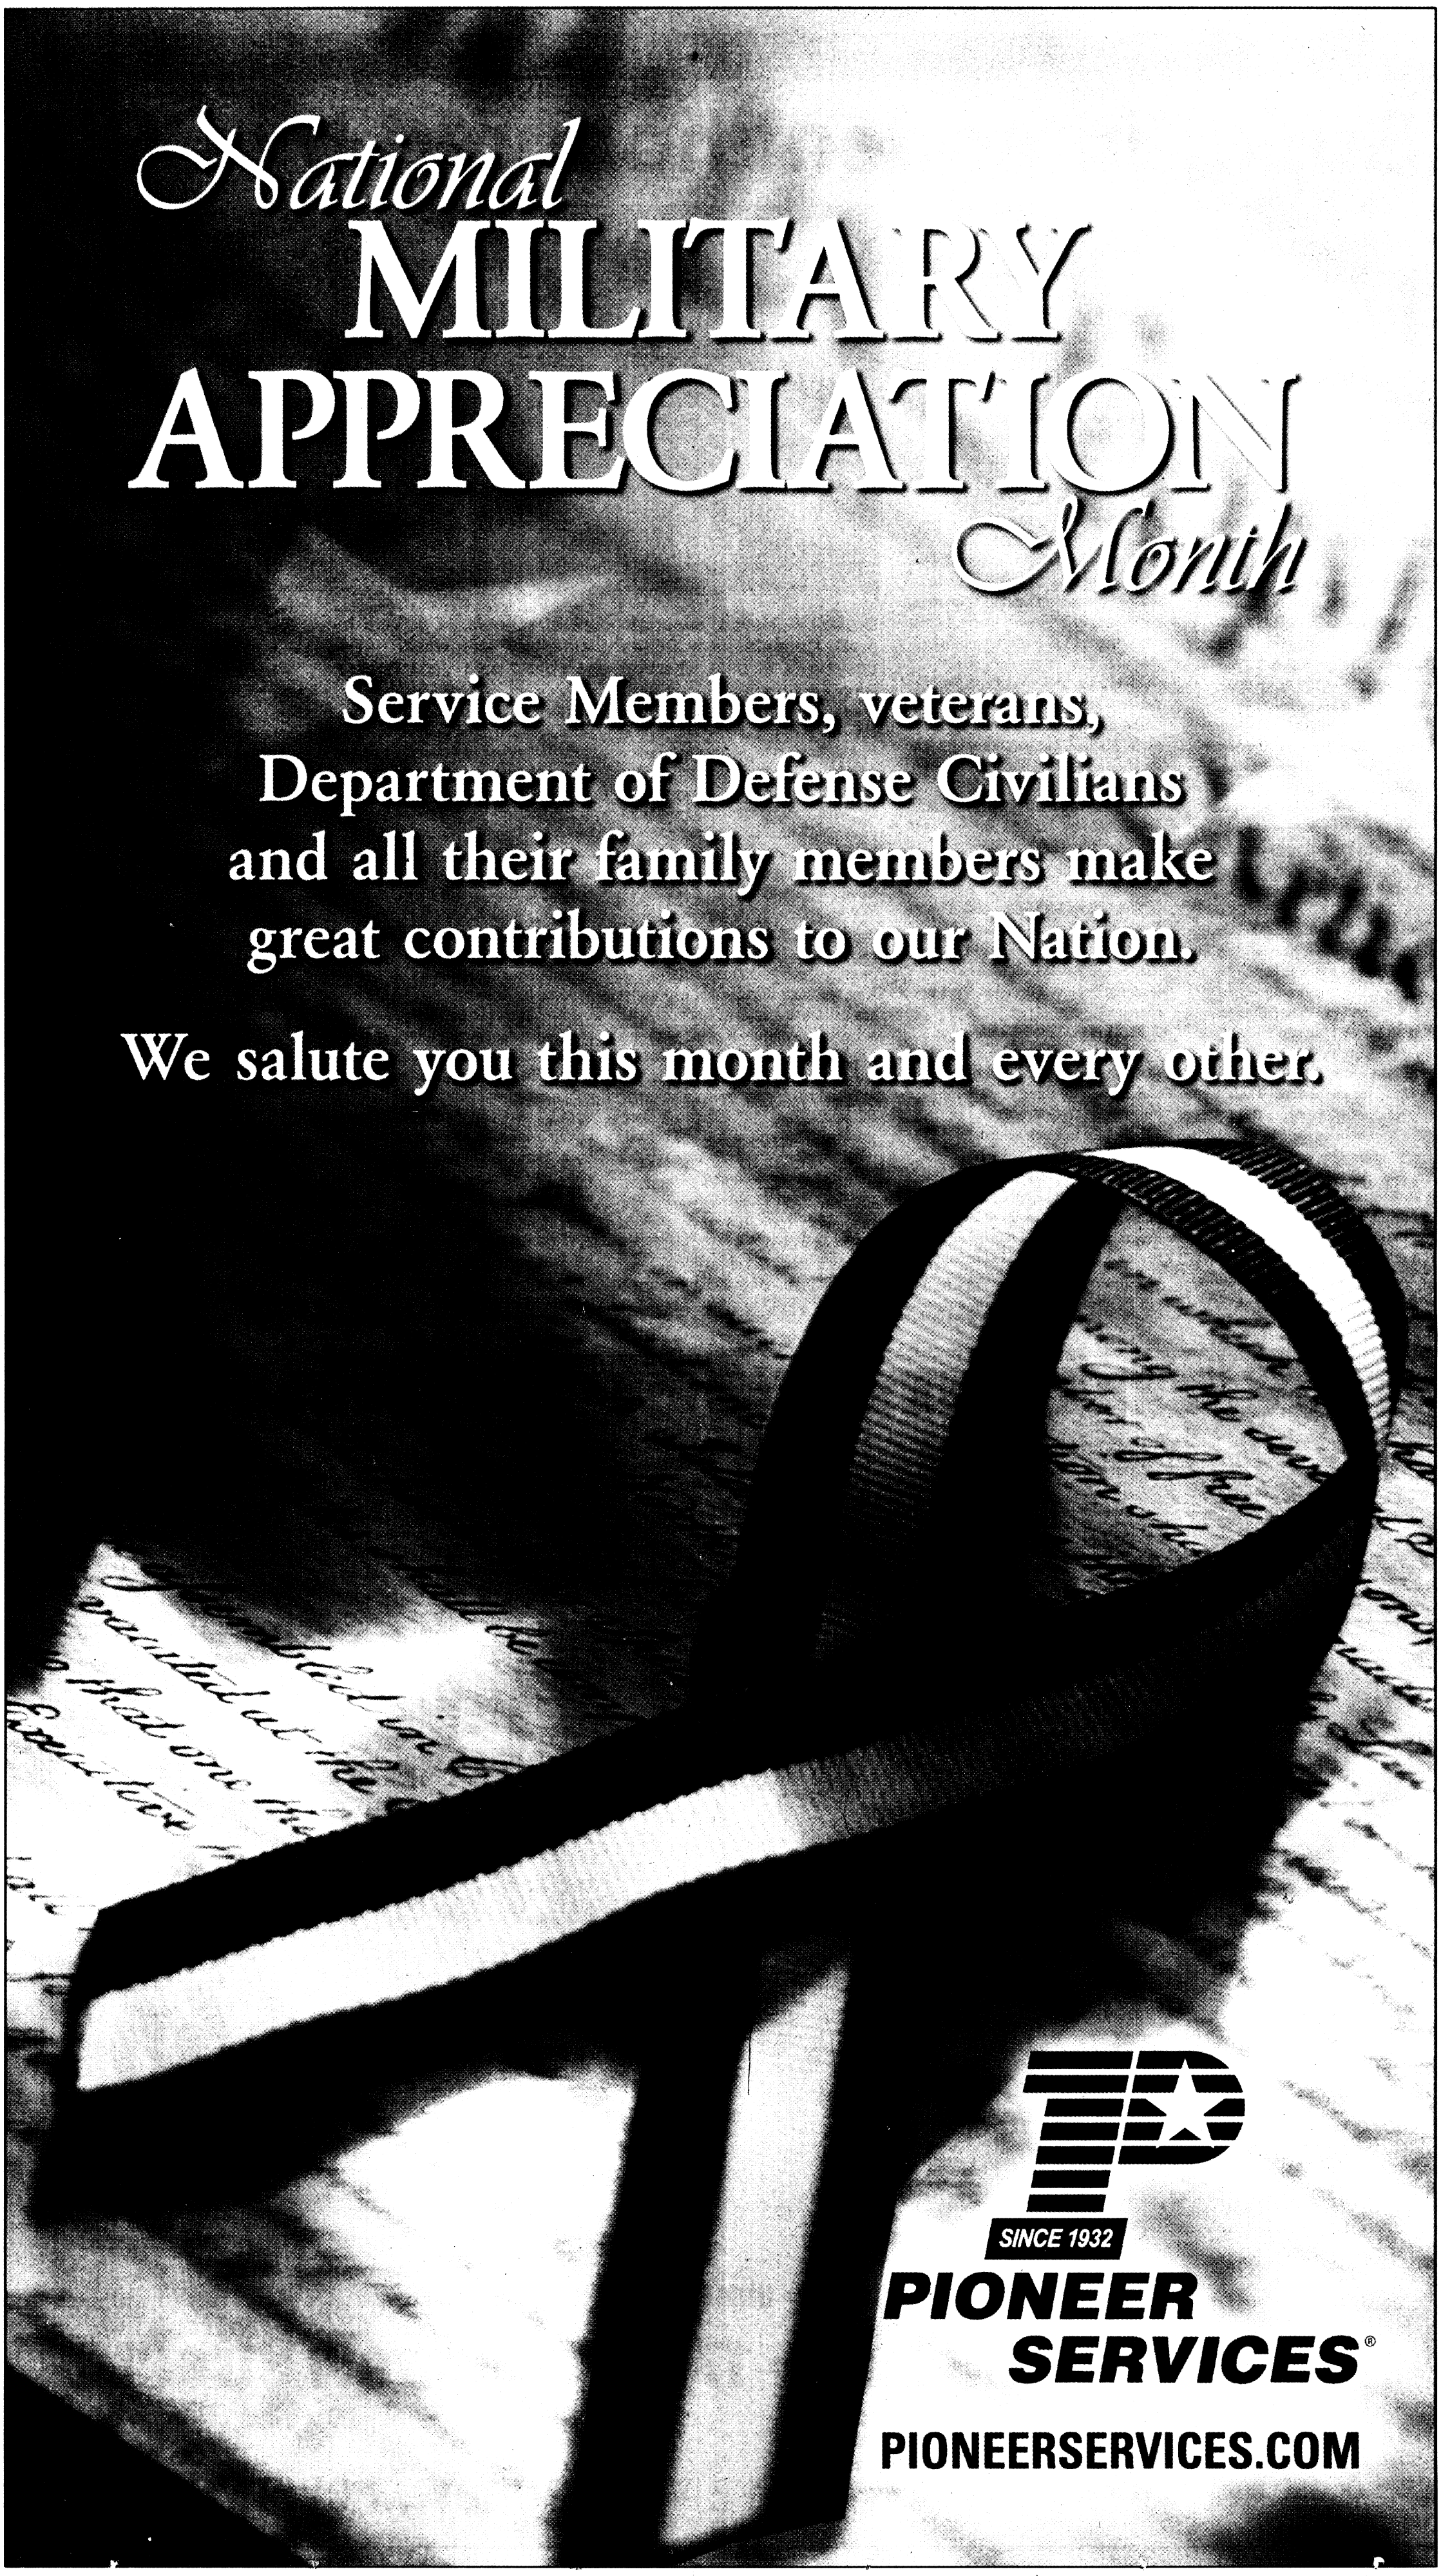
Rabago said the key is striking a balance between being self-sufficient and an appropriate amount of dependence on surrounding areas.



"If you get resources from only one place, one day you'll come up dry," he said.



Freakley asked today's leaders to consider the impact their actions will have on the Soldier of tomorrow.



The young guy from Sand Hill who is in his first day of training today will be the command sergeant major of Fort Benning in twenty-five years.

"What kind of home will he live in? What kind of ranges will he train his Soldiers on?" he asked. "What kind of constraints or unconstraints will he have on air, land, and water? It's up to us today to give him the right resources to be that command sergeant major and accomplish what he needs to accomplish twenty-five years from now."

"Tomorrow is real even if we're not here to see it," Rabago said.

'Super'intendent honored by CSU

Bridgett Siter
Bayonet staff

Fort Benning's superintendent of schools believes there are worse things than being named after her father's favorite dairy cow.

"My brother, Wayne, was named after the feed we used," Dr. Dell McMullen said last week, as she reflected on a youth well-spent in the tiny town of Crawfordville, Ga., population 700 — which is about the size of Faith Middle School, one of 11 schools McMullen is responsible for as the superintendent of the Department of Defense Education Activity's Georgia, Alabama School District.

McMullen was inducted into the Columbus State University College of Education's Hall of Fame last month, an honor that ranks right up there with … well, little else comes close.

"As far as highlights of my career, it's way, way up there. I'm extremely honored, but not really deserving," McMullen said. "I don't want to sound gushy, but I'm not anything special. Nobody really accomplishes anything of value all by themselves. I had a lot of help along the way, and I work with an incredible team of people now."

The list of those who set her on the road to success starts back at the farm, she said, where life was ideal. Mom woke her up each morning with a song, and dad always had time to play catch. And, yes, she can milk a cow with the best of them.

The house was full of joy, but life was by no means perfect. There were a few years of transferring from school to school as the county tried to come to grips with integration in the early 60s. All things serve a purpose, McMullen said, and that experience helped shape her understanding of what military children endure.

Of course, being a teacher, much less an administrator, was the farthest thing from her mind back then. McMullen figured to become a flight attendant, or "stewardess." But, at 5 feet, 2 inches in heels, she simply didn't qualify.

"You had to be a certain height to reach the overhead compartment," she said. "That was the rule, and I was never one to question rules. I still don't. I figure they're there for a reason."

So McMullen decided on a career in music. As a pianist, she was the pride of Crawfordville, and she would have been content to stay right there. But at her parent's behest, she headed off to Brewton Parker Junior College, population 600, in Mt. Vernon, two hours from home.

"I had only a vague notion of what college might be like. I was scared to death," she said. "I didn't want to go, so Mom said if I didn't like it, I could come home. I packed five outfits, that's all."

McMullen took to college like a fish to water. Unfortunately, she was a very small fish. It was a very small pond, granted, but one brimming with budding musicians like herself, only with more talent.

"That's why I tell people I became an educator by default," she said with a laugh. "I wasn't tall enough or talented enough to do what I really wanted."

That's how McMullen ended up at Columbus State, then Columbus College. After two years at Brewton, she transferred to Columbus to earn a teaching degree, a decision she's never regretted.

McMullen started her career in education at 30th Avenue Elementary in Columbus, where she taught math and science for three years, before transferring to Georgetown Elementary to teach science and physical education.

That led to a very satisfying stint with the new Muscogee County Schools Health Improvement Program. McMullen helped develop a health, PE and nutrition curriculum targeting students in the fourth grade, a time that's pivotal in the development of a child's eating and exercise habits, she said. The program garnered state recognition and launched McMullen into a career as an administrator. She started as an assistant principal at Blanchard Elementary.

Bridgett Siter

Dr. Dell McMullen, superintendent of schools, is greeted by preK students from Dexter Elementary last week. "Her passion is evident wherever she goes," said Vicki Rogers, Dexter's principal.

"What I really wanted to be was a principal," she said. And she must have wanted it badly. It took 24 applications before she had a taker — Loyd Elementary on Fort Benning.

With absolutely no experience with the military, McMullen found herself back in unfamiliar waters, but this time she dove in with enthusiasm. And, she said, she was met with equal enthusiasm and support from the staff at Loyd. Memories of those years are still among those she cherishes the most.

"I had never even been on a post," she said. "That staff was great. They stood with me arm in arm and helped me learn all there was to learn coming from a state to a federal system. It was truly a family at Loyd. I like to think it's still that way at our schools."

Nearly three years later, McMullen was selected to be the assistant superintendent to Dr. Rolla Baumgartner, who remembers McMullen's "unequaled enthusiasm."

"She was always upbeat — absolutely delightful to work with," he said. "(She) has more energy than any ten people ought to have."

That was 17 years ago, and McMullen still looks forward to work each day.

"It's never been more rewarding than it is right now, and certainly not because of the (Hall of Fame) award," she said. "I think, after 9-11, we all became acutely aware of just how blessed we are to be able to work with the children of our military. It's an opportunity to serve."

Like her career, McMullen's ideas about education have evolved over the last two decades, and she cringes at some of her earliest assertions.

"I used to say, 'All children can learn.' I said it all the time till I found myself asking, 'If all children can learn, then why are they not?'" she said. "We've come a long way. We now realize that children learn in different ways, and teaching is only teaching when learning takes place, so we've had to rethink our methods.

"We are in a time when we're so much wiser about how children learn, and our schools are just getting better and better," she said.

McMullen can't comment on the future of on-post schools. It's a subject that's off-limits. But her associates know just how committed she is to the schools she oversees at Fort Benning, Fort Rucker, Robbins Air Force Base and Maxwell Air Force Base. It's a job that keeps her on the road at least three days a week.

It's not unusual to find McMullen in her office at 5 a.m. and on weekends, said Gail Wilson, Fort Benning School's director of accountability and public relations. Wilson, a former Faith principal, has known McMullen nearly 20 years.

"And it's always been perfectly clear where her focus is," Wilson said. "She puts the customer first, and our customers are our children and parents. Her door is always open."

When she's not traveling between posts, McMullen makes frequent trips home to Crawfordville to care for her aging mother. That leaves little time for her newest passion, cooking — particularly country cooking. The grocery store has become her favorite place to shop, she said.

Still, with a plate overflowing, McMullen manages to stay active in the community off post as well. Her list of associations reads like a civics handbook. She's served on the Rotary Club's Board of Directors, the Family Center Board, the Boy Scouts and Girl Scouts boards, the Symphony and Youth Orchestra boards, the Civilian Military Council and more. Much more. Which is why Fort Benning's superintendent was one of the first to be inducted in CSU's Hall of Fame, an appropriate choice, Wilson said.

"She has high expectations for everyone, but especially herself. I think that's what makes her such a great role model," Wilson said. "She's not afraid to take risks and she encourages teachers to do the same, because you have to be willing to try something new if you want to see continuous improvement. For her, I think, that's the bottom line."

Lt. Col. Scott Power, left, takes the guidon from Basic Combat Training Brigade commander, Col. William Gallagher, during the 1st Battalion, 38th Infantry Regiment's change of command ceremony. Power took command from Lt. Col. Bryan Dyer, who is retiring after more than 20 years of Army service.

Lt. Col. Bryan Dyer passed the 1st Battalion, 38th Infantry Regiment, colors to Lt. Col. Scott Power May 16 at Pomeroy Field.

The regiment was constituted and organized in 1917 in the build-up for World War I, spending 22 years as part of the 3rd Infantry Division, and serving in World War II and the Korean War. In 1987, the regiment received a new mission, training Soldiers.

Basic Combat Training Brigade commander, Col. William Gallagher, praised Dyer for his efforts.

"Lieutenant Colonel Bryan Dyer is a Soldier and a warrior," Gallagher said. "And in this past year, Bryan Dyer was instrumental in the Army's transformation of Basic Combat Training. In my view, there is no greater service a commander can do for his subordinates than to better prepare them for war through more relevant, demanding training."

Dyer was commissioned in 1984, serving as a lieutenant in the Republic of Panama and as a captain at Fort Bragg, N.C., where he commanded a company and deployed for Operation Just Cause, Desert Shield and Storm. As a field grade officer, Dyer served in Albania, Kosovo and Afghanistan.

Gallagher said it was clear Dyer applied the lessons he learned in more than 20 years of service in tough Infantry jobs in testing and evaluating new training events.

"There is no doubt, in my professional judgment, that the training you instituted has kept more Soldiers alive," Gallagher said. "It was always very clear that innovative, quality training was the top priority. Your command climate guided a battalion that was full of pride, spirit, values, passion and a commitment to excellence. If I were a new Soldier, I would want to be assigned to 1-38, because the feeling of being in a highly competent, hot-shot outfit is incomparable."

The change of command ceremony marked Dyer's last formation in uniform. The Tucker, Ga., native retired at the same place his Infantry career began.

Dyer said the new Soldiers and cadre on the parade field represented the best America has to offer.

"I'd like for you to think about one thing right now," Dyer told the audience.

"Those new Soldiers in the BDU caps out there, signed up to be Soldiers when the nation needed them the most, while we are at war. These young men are truly special."

Dyer said his two years in command were challenging and demanding, but also rewarding. During that time there was a drastic change in the way the Army conducts basic training, focusing more on warrior tasks and drills, he said.

"Training a warrior is a difficult task," he said. "We went from seventy two hours in the field to fourteen days. Now, we even conduct a moving convoy live fire with Soldiers who have only been in the Army for seven or eight weeks. This has been a major shift in the way we approach training.

"I am very proud of what this battalion has accomplished and the spirit in which we have trained new Soldiers to live the Army values and become warriors."

Dyer thanked his fellow battalion commanders for fostering a non-competitive environment and Command Sgt. Maj. Castlo Rivers, his "battle buddy" and "awesome non-commissioned officer," for being the steady hand in the battalion and having the best interest of the Soldier at heart.

"Being a member of the cadre in a basic training company is difficult," Dyer said. "It isn't about technical skill. It is about getting a new Soldier to internalize the warrior ethos and get that fire in the belly to always place the mission first, to never quit, to never accept defeat and to never leave behind a fallen comrade."

That mission, he said, could only be learned through the personal example of his "Rock of the Marne" drill sergeants and cadre.

"So to the cadre, thanks for all you do every day for our Army and nation," he said. "As I leave today, I know that the battalion will continue to succeed in its mission of training warriors. I know the drill sergeants will make that happen."

Gallagher said the battalion continues to be "in the best of hands" as they welcome Power and his family, saying Power has the "perfect background and dynamic leadership" to guide the battalion.

Power served as chief of the Infantry Center's Office of Infantry Proponency. His previous assignments include 1st Bn., 327th Inf. Regt., 101st Airborne Div. (Air Assault), in Operations Desert Shield and Storm; 2nd Bn., 327th Inf. Regt., 101st Airborne Div. (Air Assault) in Kosovo and with the Light Infantry Task Force Training Team (Airborne) at the National Training Center.

Local waterways treacherous, unpredictable

Safety office offers summer water tips

Kris Gonzalez
Bayonet staff

With 182,000 acres of dry land and only 300 acres of open water, you might not think there is a problem with drownings on Fort Benning.

But, 37 Fort Benning Soldiers have drowned in various waterways, including ponds, streams and rivers since 1964.

Most of the drownings occurred when Soldiers were swimming in areas with no lifeguards present.

Ten Soldiers died in boating accidents, and none of the Soldiers were wearing personal flotation devices.

Four more Soldiers died while training in Victory Pond, and one died while training at a water crossing.

The latest victim is 2nd Lt. James May. He is one of 25 Soldiers who have drowned in the Chattahoochee River locally.

Regis Beighley, Fort Benning's safety manager, said natural waters pose more of a threat to people than swimming pools.

"Any water that doesn't have a lifeguard is an immediate danger," Beighley said. "A river doesn't have a lifeguard."

Beighley said the biggest factor that makes a river dangerous is the current.

"The current can change dramatically," he said. "Even if you're an excellent swimmer, those currents can be so strong, they'll overcome you."

If a nearby dam gets full, the gates are opened, and the additional velocity can increase a normal current's speed of about 5 miles per hour to 15 miles per hour in a matter of minutes, said Lewis Higgens of the U.S. Coast Guard Auxiliary.

Debris, another hazard in river water, is often overlooked, said Joe Emehiser, Fort Benning American Red Cross director.

"The Chattahoochee has a mud bottom, so if somebody goes under, you can't see them," Emehiser said. "You don't know what's down there. You could get caught on tree limbs or tangled by grass."

Hypothermia is a serious danger for anyone who stays in water too long. And, if alcohol is involved, a person's body temperature drops, leaving the person even more at risk of becoming a victim of hypothermia.

Once hypothermia sets in, the person feels numb and it becomes more difficult to move.

The Fort Benning Safety Office offers these tips for surviving a water-related accident:

• Get rid of unnecessary clothing. Learn how to discard your gear before you ever get in the situation. Don't try to swim with your gear on.

"You can always replace equipment," said Emehiser, "You can't replace your life."

• Swim with the current, at an angle toward the shore.

"Never fight the current," said Emehiser. "Let the water work for you." Otherwise, fatigue may overwhelm you.

• Hold on to a boulder or branch. Because algae makes rocks and limbs slippery, this feat may be easier said than done, Beighley said.

• If you're wearing a life vest, stay on your back, face up, with your feet leading the way. This helps prevent head injuries.

• If you don't have a floating device, use your clothing by buttoning up your top collar and blowing air into it, Emehiser said.

• Most importantly, don't panic. Conserve your energy.

If you witness a river accident, here's how you can help:

• Use a tree limb or something similar to pull the individual to safety. If they're very far out, tie clothing together to create a line that they can grab.

• Immediately do CPR if the victim is unconscious.

• Call for help.

CLOSER LOOK

River reality tips:

■ Learn to swim. The American Red Cross offers swimming and water safety lessons year round at Fort Benning.

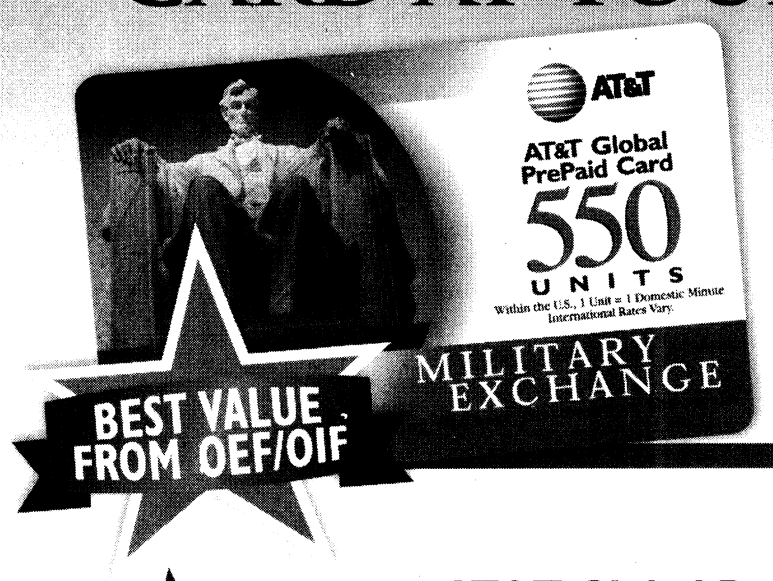
■ Always wear a personal flotation device. It's the law in Georgia for children under 10 years of age to wear a life jacket while on board a moving boat, but adults should be wearing life jackets too, said Beighley.

■ Swim only in areas protected by a lifeguard. If you're going to be in an area where no lifeguards are present, bring a buddy along.

■ Refrain from drinking alcohol beverages while engaging in any water activities.

■ Select an area that is clean and well maintained to avoid debris.

■ Make sure the water is deep enough before entering headfirst. Many injuries occur from shallow dives. Consider wearing a helmet like those worn by white water rafters.



■ Make sure rafts and docks are in good condition.

■ Avoid all water activities above and below a dam.

■ Obey all warning signs.

PURCHASE THE BEST VALUE PREPAID CARD AT YOUR MILITARY EXCHANGE

AT&T Global PrePaid Cards offer low rates that are optimized for military personnel calling home to the U.S.

The 550-Unit AT&T Global PrePaid Card offers deployed soldiers the best value when calling to the U.S. from Operation Enduring Freedom and Operation Iraqi Freedom.

★ Where can AT&T Global PrePaid Cards be purchased?
Buy yours at your local Exchange or online at www.aafes.com. Friends and family of military personnel can also purchase Cards for you at this site. When deployed in Iraq, Afghanistan and Kuwait, Cards can be purchased at the Exchange, where the price of the 550-Unit Card is the lowest.

When calling within the U.S., 1 unit equals 1 minute of calling. When making international calls from overseas, more units are used per minute of call time and the number of units is different based on the country you are calling from. For example, when using the 550-Unit Card, for calls made from OEF/OIF to the U.S., 1 minute equals 3 units of call time. So the 550-Unit Card is good for 183 minutes of calling. For information on other countries, just call the 800 Customer Service number on the back of your Card.

★ Optimized military rates. Great AT&T benefits:
- Minutes never expire.
- Low rates. Remember, prepaid cards bought at other retailers may have higher overseas rates.
- Recharge with AT&T Autominutes® and never run out of minutes.
- Toll free Customer Service available 24/7.
- INFO TO GO available* with weather, sports and more!

★ Visit Camp AT&T.

BRAC: To improve Benning, local community

didn't expect Fort Benning to close, but I did fear a loss of some sort. I was absolutely elated."

This round of BRAC, the first in 10 years and larger than the previous four, calls for the closure of 33 major installations and the downsizing of hundreds more, with a projected savings of $48 billion taxpayer dollars over the next 20 years.

The BRAC 2005 list has been three years in the making, since Congress approved the 2002 National Defense Authorization Act. It's designed to facilitate a joint force postured for the global challenges of the 21st century.

It will, in effect, convert "waste to warfighting resources," Freakley said, creating a leaner, meaner military by reducing infrastructure and melding like operations to reduce costs and increase readiness.

Freakley likened the thought process behind BRAC to that of a landowner struggling to maintain five aging homes. It would best serve him to sell four and improve the one he lives in. BRAC will "make our great installations premier installations," he said.

Though obviously pleased with the BRAC proposal, Freakley urged his audience to use caution when crunching numbers. If the president approves the all-or-nothing recommendation, he'll send it up to Congress by late September. The outcome won't be known until November at the earliest.

"This is a proposal from the secretary of defense to the nation on how we can best care for our nation's resources," he said. "The decision process is ongoing. We have to be careful with numbers."

Fort Benning fared well in the proposal, Freakley said, for several reasons. The posts "ownership" of its airspace, a byproduct of housing the Airborne School, carried a lot of weight, no doubt, "since the Army is becoming more and more reliant on air."

Also, with 184,000 acres of mostly undeveloped land, an increase in training will not encroach upon areas that present zoning problems. Armor training will likely be located in the Northern portion of the installation.

Freakley said the relationship between Fort Benning and the local community and the post's historically "high marks for environmental care" were also taken into consideration.

Approval of the BRAC commission's recommendations for Fort Benning would mean:

• The formation of a U.S. Army Reserve Center on post, which will consolidate 15 Reserve centers.

• Fort Benning would host the 81st Regional Support Command's Equipment Concentration Site, currently housed at Fort Gillem, one of seven Georgia installations slated for closure.

• Officials may re-evaluate RCI — the Residential Community Initiative — which is expected to spend as much as $615 million on 4,200 new housing units on post. Freakley said he doesn't anticipate a significant increase, but an increase of some sort may be considered.

• The post would likely have three general officers on staff, one with the Maneuver Center and one each for the Infantry and Armor.

• An increase of about 10,000 — from 80,000 to 90,000 — in the number of Soldiers trained here each year.

• The anticipated arrival of the 25th Infantry Division's new 5th Brigade has been cancelled. The brigade will go elsewhere, Freakley said.

• The relocation of Fort Benning's Drill Sergeant School, to Fort Jackson, S.C., where all three Army Drill Sergeant Schools will be consolidated.

Added to the mix will be the already anticipated arrival of 183 Soldiers with the 362nd Engineer Company, more than 400 military policemen who will fill a new battalion headquarters and two MP companies, and about 100 additional Rangers with the 75th Ranger Regiment.

All in all, Freakley said, "Fort Benning will gain new importance as the center for maneuver training" and will "become a focal point for the most critical aspect of the Army, the combat Soldier."

With that prominence comes a significant increase in demands and benefits to the local community, he said.

"It's a big mission, and schools, housing and service providers will feel an impact," he said, but the growth "will be managed carefully."

Fort Benning is committed to being a good neighbor, Freakley said, and that means "doing what's right for our Soldiers, our nation and our community."

Poydasheff anticipates nothing less. He said the thriving partnership between Fort Benning and Columbus will only improve.

"We began game planning early on, a couple of years ago, to develop a closer relationship with Fort Benning," he said. "We all worked to enhance Fort Benning's role in this community and to show our support for the post. That won't change. It will only increase and improve."

Hundreds of people attended the American Cancer Society's 2005 Relay for Life May 13 and 14 at Shaw High School's Kinnett Stadium.

Teams from Fort Benning, Columbus and Phenix City showed their support for finding a cure for cancer by raising a total of $294,212.55, said Denise Dowdy, community income manager with the American Cancer Society.

"The (relay) was a success," Dowdy said. "I can't even begin to tell you how exciting it is to see all of the committee members, team captains, survivors and volunteers come together to make this huge event happen. It's almost a miracle."

Teams set up booths to raise money, selling everything from food, drinks and ice cream to haircuts and raffle tickets.

Dowdy said the annual event is entirely volunteer driven and all those involved should be commended for their hard work.

Following are the individual fundraising results:

• Top Fundraising team: Miles of Hope $1,415.20 per team member

• Most money raised by a first year team: Hardaway High School $480.87 per team member

Many teams use themes and dress in costumes like these colorful characters.

Melissa House

An event volunteer lights the luminarias lining the track. Each luminaria had the name of a survivor or someone who lost the battle with cancer.

Each of the 468 cancer survivors who attended the events released a balloon as a celebration of recovery and life.

The Clifton's house, pictured below, is on Rainbow Avenue, which was named in honor of the 42nd Infantry Division, "The Rainbow Division." During World War I, Maj. Douglas MacArthur, who later became general, said the division, which drew Soldiers from 26 states and the District of Columbia, "would stretch across the country like a rainbow." The Spanish Colonial Revival homes on Rainbow Avenue were built in 1932 for $12,267 each.

"My husband didn't seem excited about the makeover when I first told him about winning it," said Wesley Clifton, whose new living room is pictured here. "Now he invites everyone over to see his new room."

FLIPPING QUARTERS

Donna Hyatt
Bayonet staff

It began as a whimsical "what if" idea based on the popularity of TV home decorating programs.

Looking for a way to show their appreciation to the troops, Susan Freakley, wife of Fort Benning's commanding general, and Eve Tidwell, a Columbus businesswoman, wondered if they could create designer living quarters for Soldiers and their spouses on Fort Benning.

Well, maybe not every Soldier, and maybe not the entire living space, but perhaps one or two could get updated living rooms? The idea caught on like wildfire, capturing the imagination of the Fort Benning and Columbus communities.

Securing the aid of Columbus interior designer Ashley Holt, the Fort Benning Officers Spouses' Club and the Enlisted Spouses' Club held a double raffle — one living room makeover for each club.

Wesley Clifton, wife of Maj. Jeff Clifton, 75th Ranger Regiment, and Sarah Eichmann, wife of Spc. Jason Eichmann, 203rd Forward Support Battalion, 3rd Brigade Combat Team were the lucky winners.

With the help of many local area businesses, Holt transformed their living spaces in one whirlwind weekend.

"I thought they'd take some paint and fabric and change it a little bit," Clifton said, "but it really went from ordinary to extraordinary. It has a nice British Colonial feel. This is really above and beyond the norm."

Eichmann was just as enthusiastic about the change to her home.

"I love it. It's so much more comfortable," she said. "I could've never imagined this. It's great (the people of Columbus) would do this for us."

Brig. Gen. Benjamin Freakley presided over an awards ceremony at the Officers' Club Tuesday, where he thanked the Columbus and Fort Benning communities.

Stressing that he "has a passion for volunteers," the general noted Tidwell's years of hard work and support for Soldiers, and presented her with The Order of Saint Maurice, patron saint of the Infantry, an award typically presented only to men.

Freakley said Tidwell lives up to all the virtues associated with this honor — loyalty, bravery, a sense of duty and an undying devotion to the cause.

A short video of the living room transformations followed the awards, and the club members toured the two new living areas after the dinner ceremony.

Sarah Eichmann, whose Custer Terrace dining room is pictured here, sent photos to her husband, Spc. Jason Eichmann, in Iraq. "It's support like this that allows us to focus on our jobs, because we know our families are being taken care of," he said.

Nextel offers free phone calls

Nextel Partners, Inc.

In recognition of Armed Forces Day, Nextel Partners and Bill Heard Chevrolet are inviting all Columbus-area military personnel to a free calling event at the local auto dealership.

Service members can make a local, long-distance or international call to reconnect with family members, loved ones and friends across the country or overseas.

Nextel and Bill Heard Chevrolet will also collect international calling cards and Army and Air Force Exchange Services gift cards at the event to sent to Columbus-area service members stationed overseas.

"Recognizing the sacrifices made by members of the military and to honor our armed forces serving in Columbus and around the world, we want to provide the troops with the opportunity to reach friends, families and loved ones throughout the U.S. and overseas," said Kyle Kennedy, general manager of Nextel Partners. "It's often difficult for military personnel to easily and affordably connect with loved ones, and this event will help make that connection to a welcome voice from home," he said.

Service members can make calls at Bill Heard Chevrolet from noon to 4 p.m. Saturday. Bill Heard Chevrolet is located at 3615 North Manchester Expressway in Columbus.

Tips to help stay cool this summer

MEDDAC

Here are a few reminders to get you through the summer heat:

• Drink plenty of water. During the summer months we tend to spend more time outside.

It is important to drink water throughout the day to replace the fluids you have lost from your summer activities and hard work.

To avoid dehydration, stay away from caffeinated and alcoholic beverages.

• Maintaining a well-balanced diet will help you replace the salt and minerals your body loses from sweating.

Avoid skipping meals.

• Wear loose, light-colored clothing for ventilation.

It is important to wear sunscreen of at least 15 sun protective factor and reapply frequently. This will help prevent sunburn which can be painful and cause dehydration.

Limit your time in peak hours of sunlight (10 a.m. to 4 p.m.) or seek shade.

Summer activities should be planned around this time to escape the hot sun.

• Pay close attention to young children and those at high risk of heat injuries.

Children may not pay attention to thirst or other signs of dehydration.

It is important to monitor children's water consumption to ensure they are drinking adequate amounts of liquids.

Identify those around you who are high risk of heat injuries. Use the buddy system to monitor those who are at high risk.

Heat injuries can be prevented. For more information, visit http://chjppm-www.apgea.army.mil.

Let's make this summer safe and enjoyable.

Morgan Sanders, a Faith Middle School seventh-grader, reads a classmate's journal during an end-of-year We Support Our Troops celebration for Juanita Patrick's seventh-grade language arts students. The student's corresponded with the deployed parents of their classmates throughout the year and displayed the letters, postcards and mementos from Iraq during the daylong celebration May 12.

Yellow Ribbon Room makes life easier

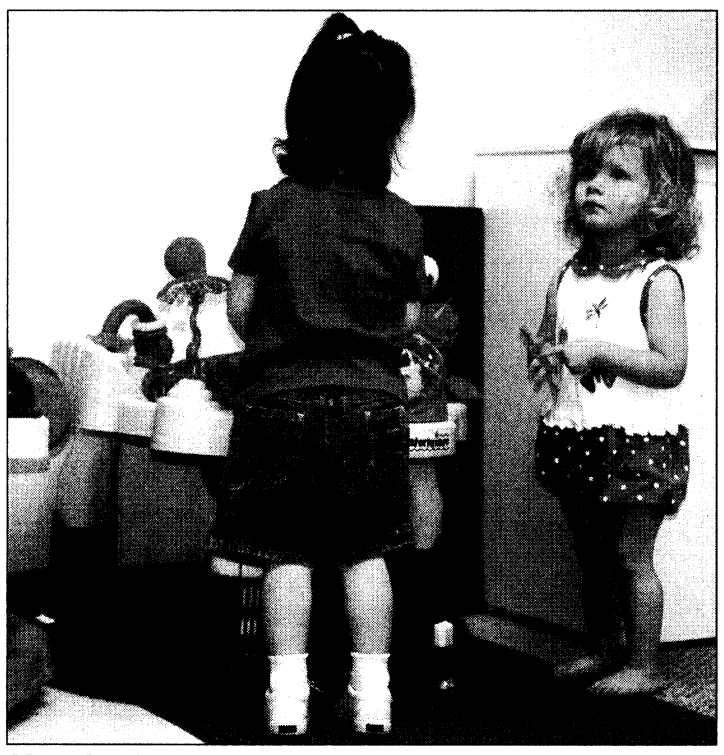
The Yellow Ribbon Room for the 3rd Brigade Combat Team's 1st Battalion, 10th Field Artillery Regiment, is open and equipped with computers, a refrigerator, coffeemaker, children's toys and a television.



Spouses of Soldiers deployed to Baquoba, Iraq, needing a secure Internet connection are welcome in Building 9170.

Steve Hesler, president of the Chattahoochee Valley-Fort Benning chapter of the Association of the United States Army, said thousands of dollars were donated by several companies to equip this Yellow Ribbon Room and seven others, in support of deployed troops and their families.

Sandy Risberg, wife of battalion commander Lt. Col. Robert Risberg, praised the post's support for the project.

"This place helps us feel at home," she said. "We feel welcome here."

Family members of deployed Soldiers have access to the room 24-hours a day, seven days a week.

Maggie Howell and Alyssa Mason explore the new toys available in the Yellow Ribbon Room.

Maggie and Katie Howell become familiar with one of the new computers. Although grouped in one room, each station faces a different direction and is separated into cubicles to give spouses a sense of privacy when writing.

Post students read way to free movie

'Follow me to library' great success

Annette Fournier
USAIC Public Affairs Office

Photos by Annette Fournier

Brig. Gen. Benjamin Freakley, post commanding general, walks the students of E.A. White Elementary to the Carmike Theatre as a reward for reading points.

The kids at White Elementary school were treated to movies, a snack and some visitors May 11 as a reward for surpassing the school's reading goals.

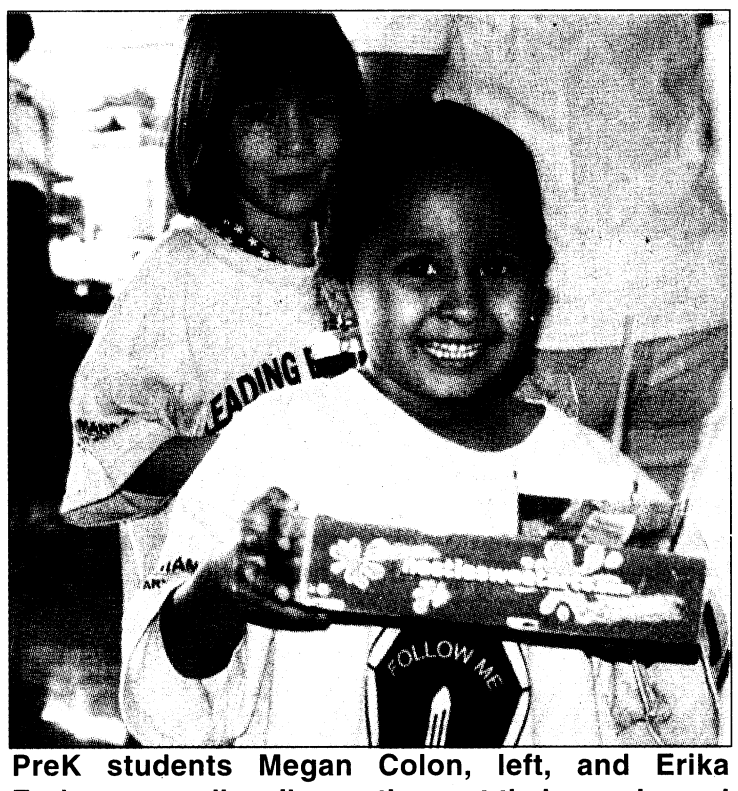
White Elementary's principal, Dr. Tommy Lee, and the Parent Teacher Organization challenged the students to earn 25,000 reading points this year. The children read library books with varying point values, and had accumulated more than 27,000 points by May 1.

To congratulate the kids, AAFES and Carmike Cinemas partnered with school officials to treat the kids to a free showing of Robots at Fort Benning's Carmike Cinemas.

The theater also provided a complimentary soda and popcorn for all 250 students and 40 teachers.

T-shirts printed with this year's motto, "Leading by Reading" were donated to the students and teachers by Bob Jordan and his employer, United Defense, maker of the Bradley Fighting Vehicle. The kids unofficially changed the slogan to "Follow me to the library."

Jordan and United Defense also donated a picture of a Bradley signed by President George W. Bush to the school.



Brig. Gen. Benjamin Freakley thanked Jordan, Glen Shubert, AAFES General Manager, Gabriel Romero, AAFES Service Business Manager, and Wynn Patrick, Carmike Cinemas general manger for their contributions with an award.

Following the awards, the students walked approximately half a mile from the school to the theater with a military police escort.

Freakley and his wife, Susan, walked with the kids from each grade who had accumulated the highest reading points.

The students will try to read enough books to reach 30,000 points before the end of the school year. If they reach their goal, the school has promised an ice cream party.

"I want to come back and have ice cream, so if you don't reach your goal, how about we make the school year longer?" Freakley asked the student body. The kids yelled back a deafening, "No!"

PreK students Megan Colon, left, and Erika Enriquez are all smiles as they get their snacks and head for their seats.

Celebrate diversity

Chaplain (Capt.) Christian Pierce
Martin Army Community Hospital

I do not remember the first time I looked at a picture of Earth from space, but every time I saw this picture I was amazed. It is a complex image, and I find myself drifting in a fantasy of a global process where I am enmeshed in a living web of relationships.

I sense a form of coherence, and there is an emphasis on the whole, rather than individual parts. One of my greatest fears, when looking at Earth, is alienation caused by destruction, where there will not be a single one, but rather innumerable little ones. After all, being a part of a living web of relationships is complicated because of the vast amount of diversity that exists.

Some of humanity's greatest anxieties concern attachment to people and organizations that have a homogeneous appearance in race, political agenda, religion and interest in general. There is an inclination in industrial urban civilization to define oneself as an individual free from the reliance of people who threaten the ecology of the living web with diversity.

Contrary to the best efforts at sterilizing dissimilar concerns, the nature of societal relationships emphasizes the whole rather than the parts, and our individuality is enmeshed as part of the living web. If this is true, then why is diversity so troubling?

Perhaps children offer the best observations to our complicated adult dilemmas. I once had an office that faced a playground. This provided more truth and insight into human complexity than all the books on my shelves. The play and association children exhibited with each other was free of complications and agendas.

They did not form distinct groups, but played in an order of graceful unity. How can this be when there was more diversity represented on that playground than we discover in our entire adult lives. The children did not always agree on how to proceed with their play but they remained united.

Upon further investigation, I discovered that children first establish relationships based on similarities, not differences. A sampled population of children did not see how they were different from any other child. They saw the same hair color, the same body size, the same toy, the same playground. Whatever they could find in common.

As adults, we first establish relationships based on differences. Think about it. When we walk into a room full of people, we first see how everyone is different. We're relieved when we discover someone who (we think) is just like us. In fact, it would be impossible to be in a room full of people and not share something in common with every person there — just go to the playground and ask children.

Take a look at a picture of earth from space — you are a part of the global process, and you share an important role in the living web of relationships. Recognize our common heritage of humanity, celebrate the vast diversity we live in and may each of our efforts be influenced by children's playground ethics.

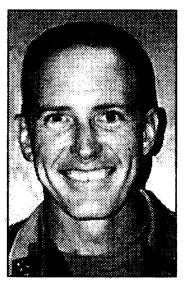
REFLECTIONS



I've gotta tell you ... as I stood, last Friday, on what was recently named "America's Best Beach" and visualized nearly 200 of our "HomeFront Heroes" (spouses of Soldiers deployed) gathering for some relaxation and inspiration this weekend, I couldn't help but anticipate a weekend of impact.

The view from the white sugar sand beach we'll be frequenting was absolutely stunning, and the lineup for our weekend together will be an absolute winner.

Tonight will begin with some energetic "get-to-know-you" time, and Saturday will offer everyone plenty of time to enjoy the beach and then a meaningful session of encouragement and inspiration in the afternoon.

Saturday evening will be lots of fun, as we top it off with creating our own Super Sundaes.

Sunday morning, it's back to the beach as we enjoy an inspirational moment during a gulf-side service with our HomeFront Heroes in mind. It promises to be a weekend that won't soon be forgotten.

Hawkins

After months of playing both mom and dad, preparing all the meals, having a touch of cabin fever and just plain looking for a little R&R in their lives, these war wives are going to be treated to two days of just letting their hair down in an atmosphere of casual fun and meaningful relationship building — all for only $11 per person or family.

Are you the spouse of a deployed Soldier? Sound like something you'd like to get in on?

Though all the spaces for spouses with children were taken within 48 hours of the retreat first being offered, and there is a rather long waiting list, we do have a few spaces for spouses who do not have children or will not need to bring their children for this weekend.

Want more information? Today, Saturday and Sunday, Fort Benning is going to experience an Army first.

I will be privileged to lead the "HomeFront Heroes" retreat for spouses of deployed Soldiers to Panama City Beach, Fla.

The purpose of the retreat is to honor the sacrifice being made by our spouses of deployed Soldiers by giving them a beach break, where they can enjoy hope, help, laughter and learning in a setting just for them.

There'll be relaxation and inspiration. Sound like fun? You can bet your beach ball it will be.

Again, if you don't need child care and would like to squeeze into this event, I encourage you to pick up the phone and give us a call at The Chaplain Family Life Center at 545-1760.

We'll be happy to answer your questions and get you all the information you need to join us for a weekend of fun, sun, learning and laughter.

Tawny Archibald Campbell

Hunter Poythress conducts a weapons inspection during a Civil War re-enactment at Jefferson Davis Memorial State Historic Site, May 14. Festivities were held to commemorate Davis' capture.

Out and about at Jefferson Davis Park

Living history demos honor end of Civil War

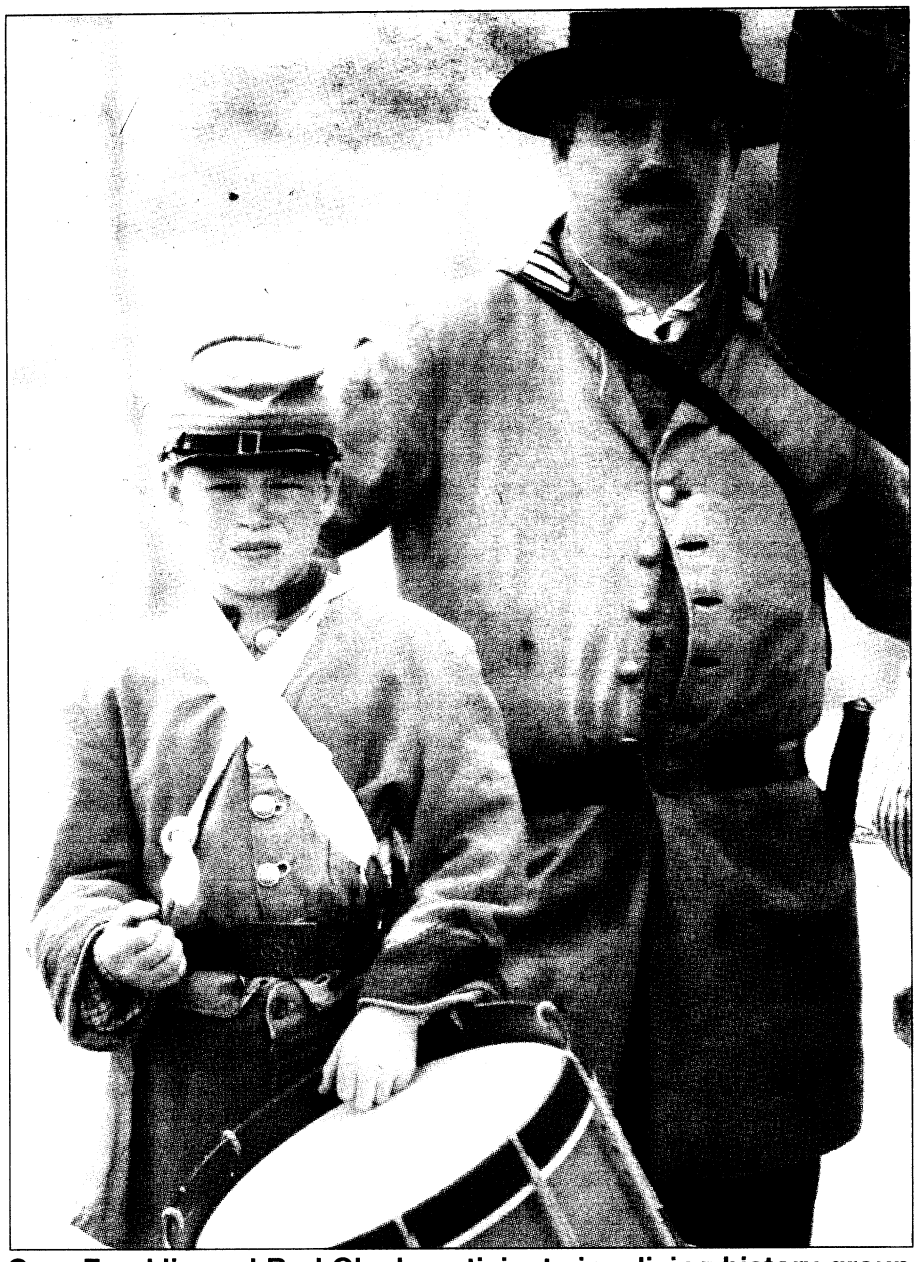
Did you know the Civil War ended on a small piece of farm land only three hours southeast of Fort Benning?

It's true. One hundred and forty years ago Jefferson Davis, president of the Confederate States of America, was sitting under a tree outside the town of Irwinville, Ga., when he was captured by Union forces, May 10, 1865.

Many believe the war ended when Lee surrendered his army at Appomattox in April of 1865, but history tells a different story.

The Jefferson Davis Memorial State Historic Site, located west of Fitzgerald, is the site of that historic capture. The site boasts a museum that houses the stump of the tree Davis was sitting under when he was captured, the carriage axle that marked the original site, battle flags, an 18-minute video of Davis' journey through a South occupied by federal forces and more. The grounds sport several historical markers, picnic tables, grills, a playground, horseshoe pit and a gift shop.



John Hughes, a site interpreter, describes the park as peaceful, and one of Georgia's smallest historic sites.

"It's a small park with a large amount of history," Hughes said. "It is the actual site where the Civil War ended. No other place in the country can say that."

The state park was created in 1920 and has grown from four to 13 acres. On June 3, 1936, on Davis' birthday, the United Daughters of the Confederacy, along with the state of Georgia, unveiled a monument on the exact spot where Davis was captured.

A nature trail has been added along with a living history area, where re-enactors can teach about the Civil War.

Special activities are held throughout the year, including an 1860's carnival in late summer. The site is open 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday, 2 to 5:30 p.m. Sunday and closed Mondays.

Cory Franklin and Rod Glock participate in a living history group representing Soldiers who fought during the Civil War from F Company, 43rd Georgia Military Infantry Regiment.

For more information on the site or for a schedule of upcoming events, call (229) 831-2335.

If you are going to make the drive out to the Jefferson Davis Memorial State Historic Site, you should also visit the nearby town of Fitzgerald.

This small town was founded in 1895 and is the product of a unique chapter in American history.

Not only is it the only city in the United States with that particular name, but it is a planned city, designed by P.H. Fitzgerald as a place where aging Civil War veterans from both sides of the conflict could live out the rest of their lives together.

One stop in Fitzgerald is the Blue and Gray Museum, located on Johnston Street in the Old Depot. This museum houses civil war artifacts, military items, clothing, farm tools, photographs and more. There is also an area of the museum where veterans of all wars are honored including Gen. (Ret.) Raymond G. Davis, U.S. Marine Corps, a Fitzgerald native and U.S. Congressional Medal of Honor recipient.

For information on the museum, call (229) 426-5069 or visit www.fitzgeraldga.org.

While you're in the area, visit Tifton, just south of Fitzgerald on I-75.

Tifton is the home of the Georgia Agrirama, where visitors can travel back to Georgia life in the 1870s and experience the lifestyle southern soldiers returned to. Costumed interpreters bring history to life on the 95 acre official State Living History Museum.

The Agrirama is open 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Saturday. For more information, call (229) 386-3344 or visit www.agrirama.com.

Q: A man leaves home, takes three lefts and ends up back at home, where there are two men waiting for him.
What did he do?

A: He hit a home run

Bench notes

Erin Nash

- Tiger slashed
  After 142 consecutive cuts made in PGA tournaments, Tiger's streak ended when he failed to make the cut at the Byron Nelson Championship last weekend. Woods was a 2 over 72, which put him 1 over par for the competition.

- Manny milestone
  Boston Red Sox slugger Manny Ramirez hit his 400th career homerun May 15 against the Seattle Mariners. The Sox went on to lose.
  Only four other players in the Sox uniform have hit the 400 mark.

- You go, girl
  Danica Patrick was hoping to take the pole position for the Indianapolis 500 May 29, but had to settle for fourth after a bobbling in the first turn of her qualifying lap.
  Reigning IndyCar Series champion Tony Kanaan will claim the top starting position.

- Kahne licks competition
  In his second year of Nextel Cup racing, Kasey Kahne finally drove his Dodge Charger to victory lane at Richmond International Raceway. It's the first time a Charger has won since 1977.

- I can't make this stuff up
  Lowe's Motor Speedway president Humpy Wheeler predicted Jeff Gordon will win the NASCAR All-Star Event Saturday night. Wheeler has been correct nine of 16 times, although he hasn't been right since picking Junior in '01.
  One million dollars is at stake, but no points in the chase for the cup.

Post soccer season ends in tourney play

In the first day of the post soccer tournament, 2nd Battalion, 19th Infantry Regiment's Icy Hot pummeled the Headquarters and Headquarters Company US Army Infantry Center team, Mean Machine, 7-1, Tuesday at Doughboy Stadium.

Icy Hot came to the field ready to play hard against an unpredictable Mean Machine.

"When I have all my players, we're a force to be reckoned with," said Jeff Jackson, Mean Machine coach. "There is no doubt about that."

Unfortunately for Mean Machine, they were missing key players, which gave Icy Hot an advantage.

Icy Hot came out of the gate dominant, when Kyle Lewis pounded in a quick goal, followed by Raymundo Alvarez, who added a second goal within the first 10 minutes of play.

"After that series of goals, we scored about every ten minutes," said Darrell Sickmyre, Icy Hot's coach.

Abdul Rahman Ahmad shot one to the back of the net mid-half to put Icy Hot up 3-0.

The half ended with Lewis chalking up his second goal for the day, shutting Mean Machine out of the first half.

"We started out great and kept the ball at their end of the field," Jackson said.

"We just got tired, and they worked the ball through our gaps — again."

Less than two minutes into the second half, Icy Hot's Chase Fairbanks scored, giving his team a 5-0 lead and shattering Mean Machine's hopes of a comeback.

"After goal four, it was done," Jackson said. "We passed early and passed accurately at the beginning of the game, but we got tired. That's why this is an endurance sport."

With a bench five deep, Icy Hot continued to substitute fresh players while a tired Mean Machine tried to keep up the faster pace..

"Once we scored the first goal in the second half, we knew we had them tired," Sickmyre said. "The second half, we came out and put equal pressure on them. We wore them down by subbing."

Marshall Brett scored the sixth goal for Icy Hot before Mean Machine got one in the net with about 20 minutes left in the game.

Awad Zabanoot, of Mean Machine, punched in a baseline drive, scoring the team's only goal for the night.

The final goal was knocked in by Matt Cesnick of Icy Hot.

"The game was a huge improvement," said Sickmyre. "When we started this season, most of the guys had never played before. Now we play as a team and have equal input from all players."

The unit-level soccer tournament championship game was Wednesday at Doughboy Stadium.

Los Lobos and Icy hot matched up to see who would take home the title.

Results and photos from the championship game will be printed in The Bayonet next week.

30th AG takes home win in season opener

Intramural softball season kicks off at Gowdy Field

The 30th Adjutant General topped the Military Police Activities' Crusaders, 14-12, Tuesday night at Doughboy Stadium in the first day of intramural softball league play.

The 30th AG jumped to an early seven point lead by the bottom of the third inning, but started to give up runs to a tough MPA..

"Then they started to make a comeback," said Shaun Butcher, 30th AG coach. "The first couple of innings we hit the ball well, then we slowed down."

At the top of the fourth inning, Crusader's outfielder Steve Dewitt snagged a ball on a line drive down left center to put his team at bat.

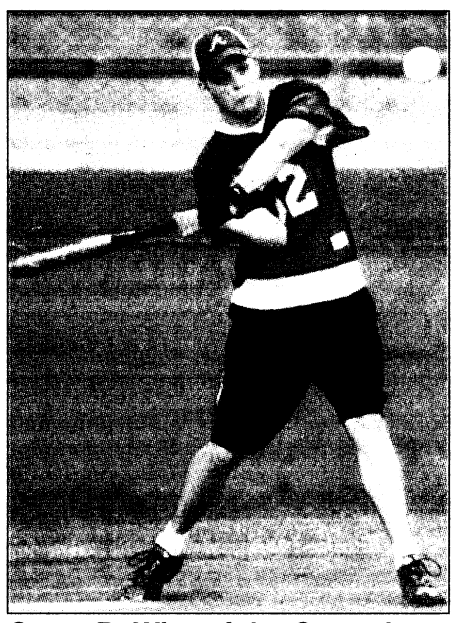
The Crusaders knocked down a few strong hits and sent several of their players home, tightening the gap and forcing 30th AG to make some adjustments.

By the bottom of the fourth, the 30th AG was narrowly holding onto a 10-8 lead.

Butcher said the close score was due to pitching issues on their end.

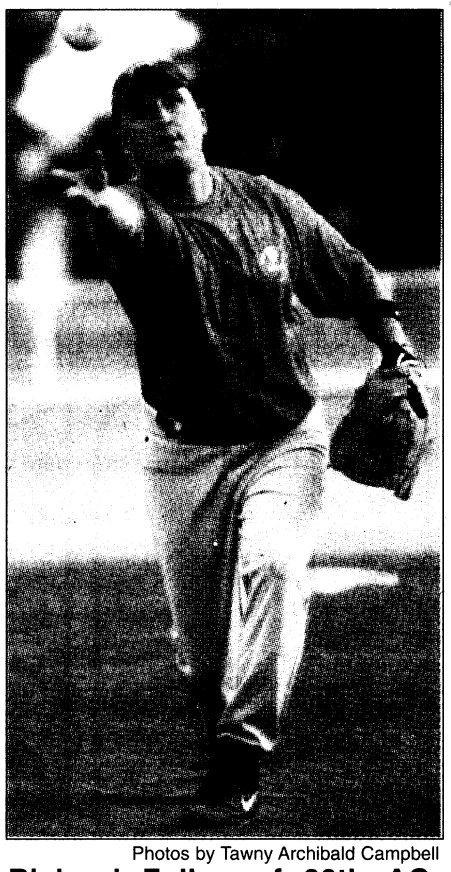
"Our regular pitcher was out, so pitching was slow at first," he said. "We had a pitch change, and after that, things picked up.

"They played tough, we played tough, and it was all about having fun here today."



Butcher said a key to their success was their first two hitters, Mark Rodriguez and Richard Fuller, who managed to get on base every time they came to bat, driving in much needed runs.

Rodriguez also stole three bases and picked up several extra runs.



Butcher said his team hasn't played much together, but will improve as they practice and play more.

"We had first game jitters," he said. "It was up and down all game. We will regain our composure and we will win."

Intramural softball will continue through September with play each Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday nights at Knappenberger or Gowdy Fields. The first game each night begins at 6 p.m., followed by another at 8 p.m.

The House triathlon workout

Melissa House
Bayonet staff

A few weeks ago, I invited you all to join me in signing up to the very first "Reverse" Sprint Triathlon on Fort Benning.

I was so excited I actually tried to sign up the minute the press release came through the office, but they didn't have the registration forms ready yet. So I had to harness that energy and put it into something useful — like training.

And I've been training, somewhat sporadically, ever since. Because I'm a swimmer, that's been the easiest exercise to get motivated for.

I've been in the pool regularly enough that the lifeguard doesn't have to ask my name anymore. She just logs me in.

Biking is a close second and running is a distant third.

But what I found out a few nights ago is the regular swimming actually made my running a whole lot easier.

I got out to pound the pavement and wasn't nearly as winded as I expected and I felt like I was running a whole lot faster than I expected, without being as exhausted at the end. Even my legs don't hurt like I thought they would.

Of course, I wasn't timing that run, so I may be way off base, but I really think I'm on to something with the whole swim thing.

So, to get you started, I'd like to share some observations about getting the most from your swim workout.

- If you're a shy swimmer, get to the pool at 0530 when it opens. You can put in a good 30 minutes before most folks get out of bed.
- Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays seem to be the less crowded days. But a crowded day only means you'll have to share a lane with someone.
- Swim caps are optional – and I'm not talking about the rubber caps with the flowers that your grandmother used to wear.

But if you have hair and don't wear a cap, make sure you bring along a good conditioner to get the tangles out. There's probably nothing worse for your hair than chlorine.

•. Goggles are a must. There's absolutely nothing worse for your eyes than chlorine.

• The wrong suit is a show-stopper. Take it from me.

Here's the deal. I decided to splurge on a new workout suit. Well, actually, I decided that a new workout suit was a wise purchase in light of the extra pounds I've been carrying since last summer's swim season. And my idea of splurging is buying a name-brand suit at a discount store, like Ross or Marshalls, for under $20.

So that's exactly what I did. Suits are like running shoes. The sizes vary from manufacturer to manufacturer. I have my favorite shoes (Asics) and my favorite suit (Tyr).

But what I decided to buy was a Speedo suit in a size larger than my old Tyr suit, to accommodate those extra pounds. It fit pretty well dry. Then I got in the pool.

My new suit was lined in the front. Every time I pushed off the wall, I got a big bubble of air between the front layers of the suit and a big bubble of air on my rear.

I was so buoyant; the lifeguards didn't worry about me sinking. So I struggled through not one, but two workouts in this suit.

For the third workout, I decided to take action. I used a bunch of tiny safety pins to secure the lining to the front. I pinned from the inside, camouflaging the pins in the suit's red, swirly pattern, and got back in the pool.

That cut down on the drag caused by the front bubble, but I couldn't do anything about my rear, since I certainly wasn't pinning the suit to my body.

For the fourth workout, I went back to the old suit, and felt thinner in the process. It's not about the bike. It's about the suit.

Swim, bike, run. Not necessarily in that order, but I sure hope you'll "tri" it with me at 6:30 a.m. June 4. Preregistration ends May 31.

If you're a procrastinator, you can sign up as late as race day for a little extra money.

For more info about the triathlon, call 545-4300 or stop by the Sports Branch offices at the Briant Wells Fitness Center.

Columbus High School has shined during the track and field season with its student athletes.

This year, five students from CHS qualified to participate in the state championships.

Georgia High School Association State Championships for girls took place in Albany May 5 and 6. CHS girls placed eighth overall.

Chasity Williams, senior, placed first in shot-put with a distance of 41 feet.

Vanessa Pizarro, junior, placed fifth in the 1,600 meter run with a time of 5:29 and fourth in the 3,200 meter run with a time of 11:57. She has placed at state two years in a row.

"The hardest thing about the competition is not giving up because the race is long and fast," Pizarro said.

Larry Rosalez-Lewis, junior, Mark Doss, sophomore and Joseph Rhodes senior competed at GHSA State Championships for the boys in Albany May 13 and 14.

"My Mommy"

I love my mom, she is the bomb.
My mom is so cool
Cause she knows how to use power tools.
She's always the one to clean the house
But never the one to kill the mouse.
My mom always grants our wishes, but
she hates to do all the dishes.
My mommy stays home to take care of us, and she always puts up with our fuss.
She tucks us in at night, and scares away
the fright.
She always wakes us with a song.
And I love my mommy all day long!

WHEN YOU'RE WAITING FOR A TRANSPLANT, WHAT'S MORE IMPORTANT: YOUR MEDICAL STATUS OR YOUR FINANCIAL STATUS?

André Weiss/Nonstock/Picture Quest

Contrary to rumors you may have heard, the transplant waiting list is completely blind to wealth or celebrity status. Once you're on the list for a donor organ, what really counts is the severity of your illness, time spent waiting, blood type and other important medical information. Call 1-800-355-SHARE or visit www.shareyourlife.org for honest information on organ donation. And remember, if you want to be a donor, you must tell your family or it may not happen.

Barracks policy changes

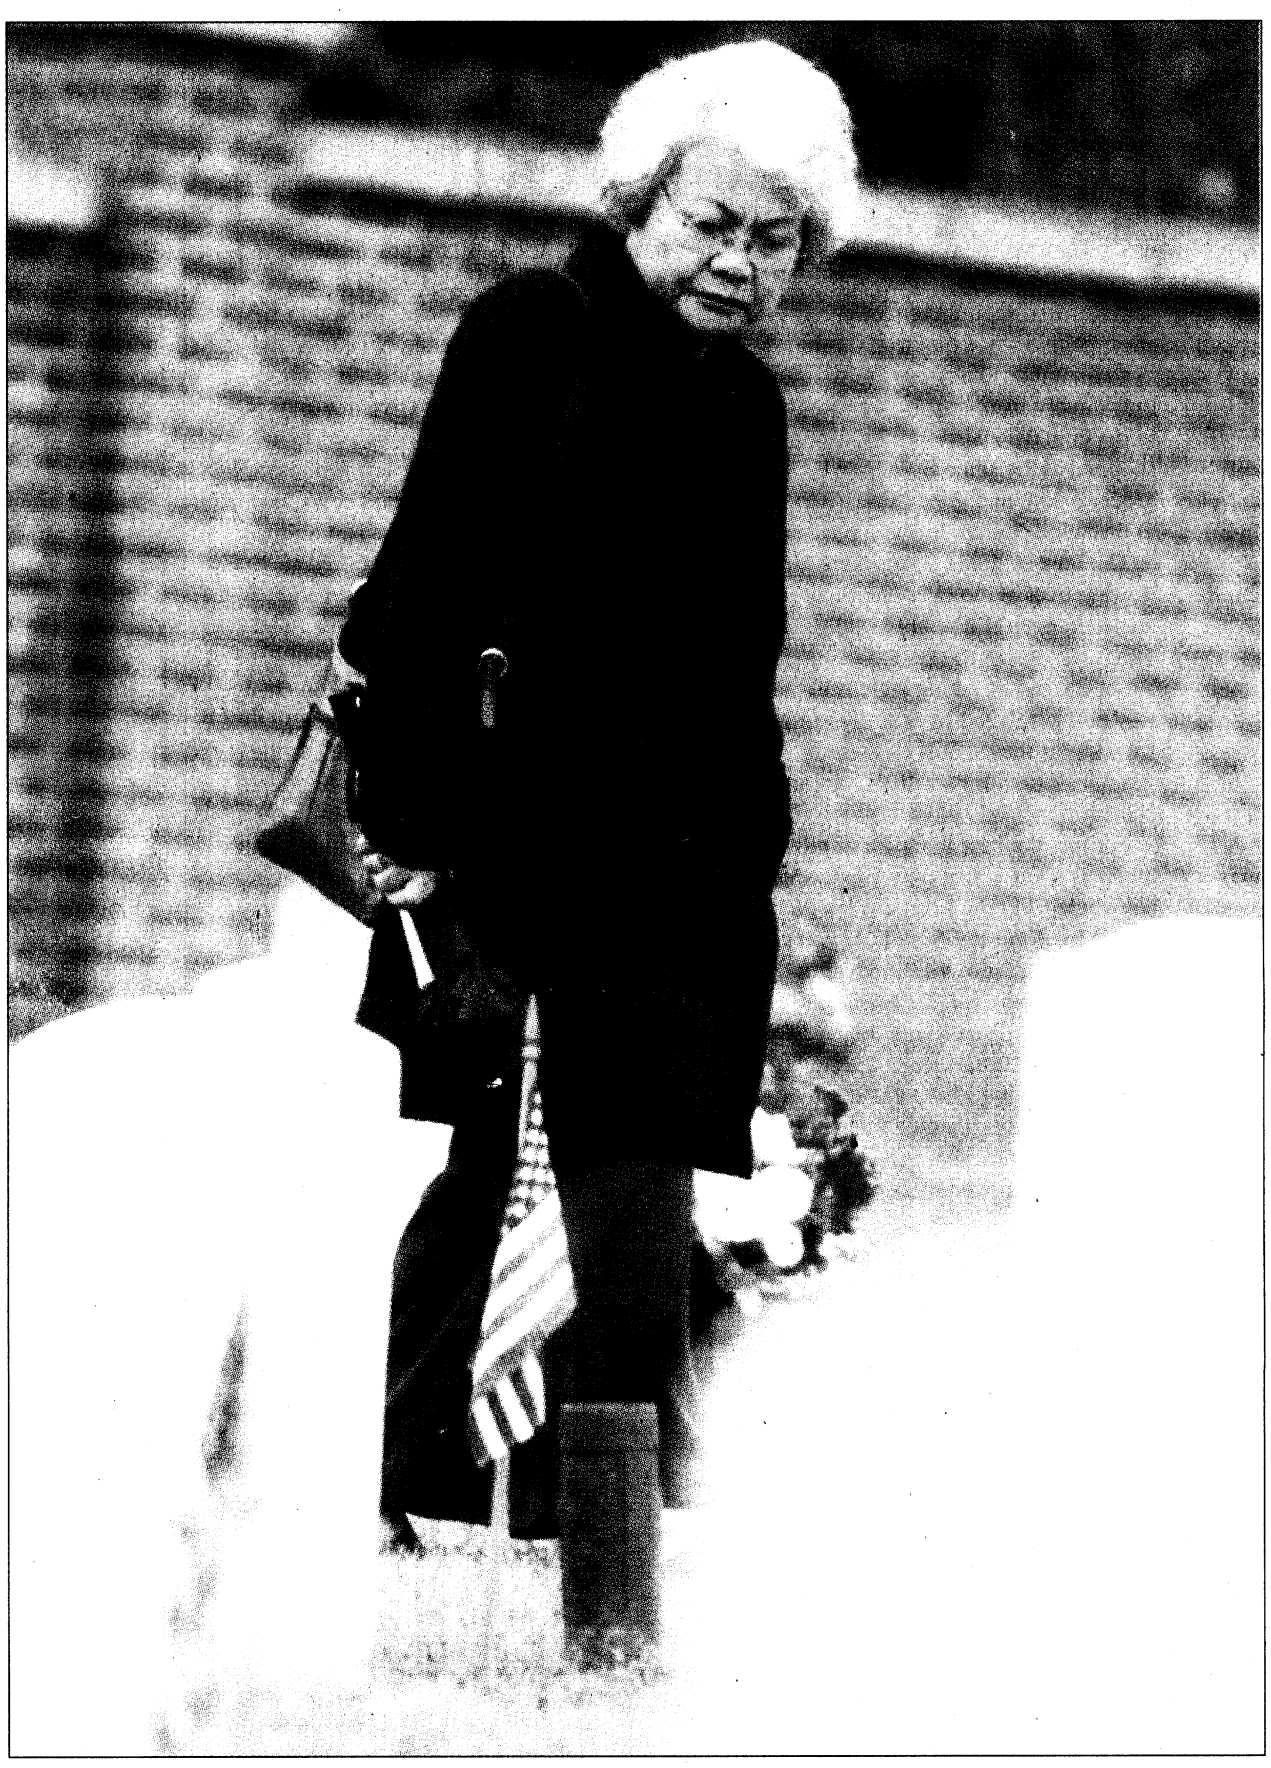
Policy impacts geographical bachelors

Army News Service

WASHINGTON — Married Soldiers who are voluntarily separated from their families will no longer be authorized space in Army barracks under a new policy that went into effect earlier this year.

Vernona Aslim, housing management specialist with the Army Chief of Staff Installation Management, said the new policy is a continued effort to provide quality housing for single Soldiers and to create a better tool in matching up the programming and requirements for unaccompanied personnel housing.

Soldiers entitled to basic allowance for housing at the "with dependent" rate, who are voluntarily separated from their family members, are no longer authorized assignment to permanent party barracks in the continental United States, Hawaii and Alaska.



The policy does not apply to overseas locations.

Aslim said this change comes at a time when the Army is making numerous changes in the way it houses single Soldiers via the Holistic Barracks Strategy approved by the Secretary of the Army in January.

The housing change for geographic bachelors supports the strategy initiative ensuring housing entitlements for single Soldiers can be met and all permanent

Bobby Head doesn't remember much about his father.

He was only 6 years old when Sgt. 1st Class Billy Ray Head was killed.

It was 1969, and Billy Ray was serving his second tour in Vietnam with the 11th Air Assault, 162th Aviation Group, 1st Aviation Brigade.

Head said it took him a couple of years before realized his dad really wasn't coming back.

He thought he saw Billy Ray every time he walked by a formation or saw a Soldier running PT.

"I think I was in denial," Head said. "I thought when lots of my relatives started showing up, we were having a reunion. When I saw my dad in the casket, I said, 'that's not my dad.' I felt guilty later for not knowing to mourn."

That need to grieve for his father and to connect with him in some way is what keeps him coming back to the Fort Benning Main Post Cemetery every Memorial Day, he said.

Head was one of the many family members, Soldiers and veterans who attended this year's Memorial Day service Monday to pay homage to Fort Benning's fallen Soldiers.

Deputy Commander Brig. Gen. James. C. Yarbrough led the ceremony by celebrating the lives of local Soldiers who died "to protect our nation's values and defeat America's enemies.

"We come together on this hallowed ground to bow our heads and say we remember you and your sacrifice and we will never forget," Yarbrough said.

Yarbrough recognized the heroic acts of six Soldiers who died in five different wars.

Benning names 2005 Drill Sergeant of Year

Kris Gonzalez
Bayonet staff

He's known to his trainees as "the enforcer." Fellow drill sergeants say he upholds the Army's highest standards. His friends say he's a good person, a good instructor, and a great NCO. Now Fort Benning has named him the "best of the best."

Staff Sgt. Roger D. Matherson is Fort Benning's 2005 Drill Sergeant of the Year.

Matherson was awarded the title May 13 in a ceremony at Infantry Hall. He was nominated among 500 drill sergeants from various units including the Infantry Training Brigade, the Basic Combat Training Brigade and the U.S. Army Drill Sergeant School.

He will travel to the U.S. Army Training and Doctrine Command headquarters at Fort Monroe, Va., June 20-24, to vie for the Army's 2005 Drill Sergeant of the Year title.

"I'm looking forward to representing Fort Benning at the TRADOC level," Matherson said. "I'll do everything I did to prepare for the post level competition, just twice over. I'll give one hundred and ten percent."

"If he's really motivated to win and represent Fort Benning, he needs to put all his time and effort in the competition," said Sgt. 1st Class Brain J. Rudick, Fort Benning's 2004 Drill Sgt. of the Year. "He needs to be ready mentally, as well as physically."

It's not an easy task, said Command Sgt. Maj. Wayne D. Andrews, Infantry Training Brigade. The hours are long and hard, and the family pays the price, but they also withstand the test of time.

"When the going gets rough, your kids, your wife, your family will always love you. Everybody else can hate you, but they will always love you," said Andrews.

Matherson

Matherson, a drill sergeant who has trained drill sergeants for the past two years, said his buddies urged him to compete for the title, but his wife, Nikisha, was his inspiration.

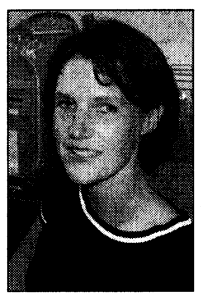
"If it wasn't for her, I probably wouldn't be standing up here," Matherson said. "She encouraged me a lot."

Nikisha, who gave birth to their son 11 days before the announcement, said her husband managed to make every doctor's appointment during her pregnancy. He took his training books to read while they waited in the doctor's lounge.

"He had a tape-recorder and taped things and listened to them on the way to the doctor's office," Nikisha said. "Everything that he could do, he did. He worked very, very hard."

"She sat down and listened to a lot of modules," said Matherson, who was appreciative of his wife's role in receiving the award.

Matherson, along with his competition, Sgt. 1st Class Clifford G. Cheeseman and Sgt. 1st Class James I. Hill, had to present eight modules, or oral presentations, highlighting specific soldiering skills.



The drill sergeants were required to take a PT test, perform hands-on tasks, qualify on their weapons and at land navigation,

MOVING SEASON

More than just furniture

Melissa House
Bayonet staff

I only have two pieces of furniture I'm really attached to. One's a cherry armoire and the other is a matching blanket chest made by my uncle for my wedding and first anniversary.

The pieces have been successfully moved six times in the past 15 years of Army life, due, in part to the fact that I look the movers in the eye and tell them to take exceptional care.

And I have more than a few funny memories of watching the movers wrestle with the weighty armoire — like the time the two big Samoans let the much smaller Filipino push it to the front of the crate. Thankfully, the big guys were in charge of actually safely lowering it to the ground and getting it into the house.

I've had my share of breakage, but it's usually the small stuff. That's the stuff my mother, after 36 years of moving with the Army, told me not to sweat.

I haven't moved in three years now, and this summer, I'm feeling a little antsy.

It ought to be time to purge the closets, the cabinets and basement. It should be time to send the boys into their rooms with paper bags and instructions not to come out until they've filled the bags with broken toys or all those fast food toys they have too many of.

I'm having a hard time coming to terms with the reality of spending a whole fourth year at a post.

But, to borrow a phrase from my coworkers, boy howdy, it's nice to have this summer off.

Don't get me wrong. I love to move. I loved it so much as an Army brat, that three high schools in four years really didn't bug me. I saw amazing things as a child, and I still carry those memories with me.

While I don't remember setting foot in school until I was in the third grade, I do remember going into a salt mine in Austria and crossing the English Channel by ferry during that same time. It's not hard to figure out which experience was more enjoyable.

I have a good time listening to my boys as they dredge up memories from past moves.

My two youngest are very proud of the fact they are Hawaiians, even though they look quite German-Irish. My oldest likes to tell the story of getting bitten by a prairie dog while we were living in Virginia.

There's a set of friends for everyone in the family from each place we've been, and we look to future moves as opportunities to meet up with them again.

Since we're staying put this year, I won't have to worry about how well-wrapped my armoire is, or how well-prepared my children are to head for the next assignment.

We'll be keeping our eyes open for old friends and looking around for new ones.

Pack 'em up, move 'em out

Annette Fournier
USAIC Public Affairs Office

Because I grew up in an Army family, I'm familiar with the frequent moving that goes along with the Army lifestyle. Moving so much was definitely challenging. Like lots of military kids, I attended a myriad of schools, 10 different schools by the time I started high school.

It has always made the question "where are you from?" far too complicated to answer. Now that I work for the Army, I can answer the question in two words, no questions asked. "Army brat."

I've always found that despite the stress and tough times that go along with moving, there are great things about it too.

It's always an adventure. It's invigorating to see new places, try new things and meet new friends. No matter how much I loved the town I lived in before, the new one always has some great things to offer.

Many of the friends I went to college with in Cincinnati have been offered great job opportunities in other places, but have stayed the same dead-end jobs they started in after graduation. They are terrified to leave their home for a chance at something new. They've been traveling down the same streets, seeing the same people since they can remember. They know every back-street in the city, have always shopped at the same grocery store and gone to the same church.

The idea of going somewhere alone and starting over is too overwhelming to consider, even if it could bring great things.

So, instead of taking a chance, they just stay put, paralyzed by fear of the unknown. I wonder if they'll still be there in 10 years, bored with their lives, but afraid to change.

For me, the best thing about moving so much as a kid is that now I'm free to go anywhere. I know I can always go back if I want to. I tell my friends, if you never try something new, you'll never know what's out there.

Every new place I've lived has offered fresh new opportunities and a chance to learn. One thing I love about moving is every region has it's own interesting cultural attributes that make it unique.

If I hadn't moved to Georgia, I would have never tried collard greens or low country boil, although I could live without the sweet tea. If I'd never moved to Cincinnati, I never would have tried the Queen City's signature chili. It's made with lots of cinnamon. Give it a try it if you're ever there.

If my family had never left Nebraska, I would be looking at corn and cows, instead of getting to see blue herons and alligators at the Eufala nature preserve.

If my family had settled down and stayed put in any of the places we lived before, I'd be a completely different person. Every time you move, you change, hopefully for the better. Moving with the Army is really an opportunity to see the world and grow into a person who is free to go anywhere.

Army families are so interesting because of the many places they've lived, places other people only dream of. It's amazing to meet people for whom living in Hawaii, Korea, Panama or Germany was common place.

As I get ready to pack up my boxes again and move on, I can't help but feel sad to leave behind friends here at Benning. It's always tough to leave, but I have to admit, I'm an Army brat at the core. I can't help but embrace the change.

Go ahead and call me Roseanne, Roseanadonna

Donna Hyatt

I have to think about words. Experiences hit me with impressions, better left expressed in pictures — some made by me and some by others. It's just the way I'm wired. To me, the saying "a picture paints a thousand words" is so appropriate.

Last week I volunteered to write a commentary — the first in my life. Ask anyone in the office — this assignment made me squirm.

I can craft words together, but it's not second nature to me. There are writers who weave stories much better than I. In truth, my first inclination is to draw a picture.

So it was, to my chagrin, that my husband (a major history buff who has taught me many details beyond the elementary historical truths we've all grown up with) should be the first to call and tell me the commentary I wrote last week was incorrect. Robert Dole was not a POW in Vietnam.

What I wrote last week was what I was told when I asked why Dole shook with his left hand — he'd been tortured as a POW in Vietnam. And yes, this profoundly affected me.

Perhaps my recollection would've been more poignant if it'd been John McCain, but that misses the point of the initial commentary. There are people who love freedom so much they would be tortured, even die, so that I can pursue the American dream.

When I think more about it, it's amazing that Dole's war record meant so little when he was running for president a few years ago.

I meant no deception in my writing. That one particular, traditional Memorial Day really did change the way I look at life.

A writer I admire very much in these pages told me I'd say more than I ever expected in the commentaries, and I have. Mea culpa. I think I'll go draw in a corner.

We want your feedback

Therefore, I am asking you to take a few minutes to fill out the survey on A-10 and return it to the Public Affairs Office, either directly to Room 604 in Infantry Hall, or by placing it in distribution in your office or unit, or mailing it back to the Public Affairs Office, Fort Benning, GA 31905.

Thank you for helping us improve your newspaper and television programming.

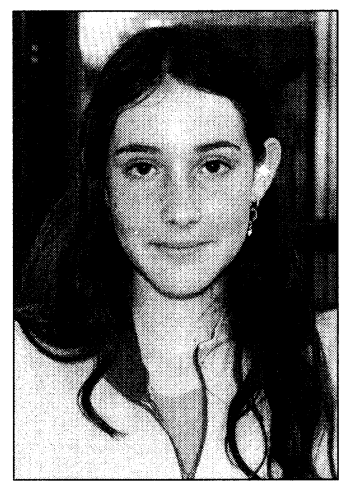
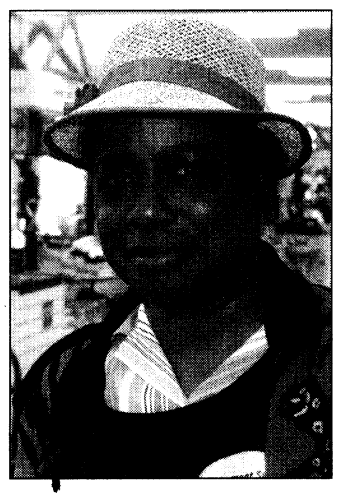
VARIOUS VOICES



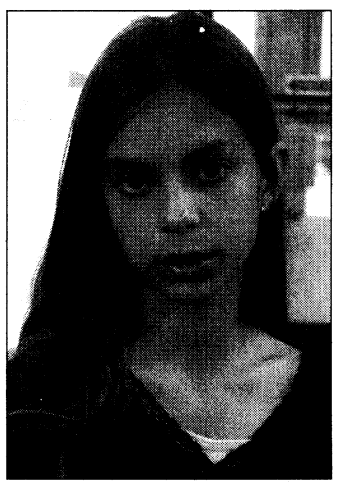
What is one positive aspect of moving?

Rufina Brazil, family member — "We moved several times, and every tour except one was great. From Italy to Panama to Fort Benning, I love getting to know new places. It felt strange not to move after (my husband) retired. I think it's all about keeping a good attitude."

Sgt. Lawrence Brock, 2nd Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment — "I like that whenever you move, you always meet new friends and make new bonds to replace the ones you broke. In the Army, you're always on the go."



Kathleen Bessette, family member — "Moving is hard, but I like making new friends. You get to go to different schools and meet new teachers. My favorite place we've lived was Hawaii."



Retired Master Sgt. Jimmy McCoy, Columbus — "I'm just a country boy from Alabama. I never would have gotten the opportunities I've had if I hadn't joined the military. I love traveling and seeing new places. I wouldn't trade my experiences for all the money in the world."

Staff Sgt. Carolyn Krotowski, 365th Engineer Group — "I think it's good for kids to get used to moving, because they see new places and learn how to make new friends. Even when I was a civilian, I moved all the time for promotions and new opportunities."

Harriette James, AAFES employee — "I think moving is very exciting. I haven't gotten to travel a lot, and I wish I could have had the opportunity to move around more. My home is Talladega, Alabama, and I liked moving to Columbus because it was something new."

Kendra Adams, family member — "I like seeing new places and meeting new friends. My family is moving to Alaska pretty soon. I think it's going to be fun."

Memorial: Praises local fallen Soldiers

"Every generation has had its heroes, and many paid for our freedom with their lives," Yarbrough said. "This ground holds the bodies of servicemen and women of many generations."

He paid tribute to Pvt. William Hart of the 15th Tank Regiment, who died in World War I and was the first Soldier buried here; 1st Sgt. Thomas Grey, one of the Army's only black first sergeants in World War I; Master Sgt. George Ivy, one of the 44 original members of the Airborne Test Platoon who served in World War II; Spc. James Smith, a Ranger from the 3rd Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment, killed in Somalia during Operation Restore Hope; and Capt. Patrick McKenna, an Army aviator killed in Iraq during the Gulf War. Yarbrough specifically acknowledged the valor of Spc. Donald R. Johnston, who died March 21, 1969, during the Vietnam War.

Johnston was killed after throwing himself onto explosives that had been tossed into his bunker by the enemy. He saved six fellow Soldiers.

He was awarded the Medal of Honor posthumously, and Fort Benning's 30th Adjutant General Battalion's reception station is named after him.

With tears in his eyes, Donald's brother, Kenny Johnston, said he hadn't heard his brother's name in a ceremony like this before and was happy his brother's story continues to be told.

"Memorial Day is more than barbecues and parades," Kenny said. "Memorial Day is a day to reflect."

Donald was drafted and served in D Company, 1st Battalion, 8th Cavalry Regiment, 1st Cavalry Division, one year before being killed in the Tai Nay province. Kenny said Donald didn't want to go to Vietnam, but he went, and showed great courage.

Tawny Archibald Campbell

Sgt. Greg Johnson helps place a wreath during the Memorial Day Service at the post Cemetery.

"He just wanted to live life," said Kenny. "He did his duty. He stepped up to the plate. I don't know that I could have done that."

"They didn't celebrate war — none of us do," Yarbrough said, referring to the brave Americans who "shoulder the heavy burden of defending freedom, a cause worth fighting for."

Yarbrough said that without the sacrifices of the 1,296,684 American servicemen and women who died in combat since the Revolutionary War, the European and Pacific continents would have succumbed to aggressive tyrannies, and the world would not exist as we know it.

"They were warriors and guardians of the American way of life," Yarbrough said. "They never quit. They never left a fallen comrade. They never accepted defeat. They gave us freedom today and hope for tomorrow."

Yarbrough encouraged the audience to tell children the stories of war heroes, to teach them to uphold America's ideals and to "respect human dignity and equality for all people, no matter their social, ethnic or religious background."

He also asked that they keep the more than 210,000 American Soldiers deployed around the world in their thoughts and prayers.

"Please know the importance of what your loved ones are fighting for and be assured that they too will lay claim to our legacy of freedom," Yarbrough said.

They're "helping ensure that America continues to shine her beacon of freedom for the world to see."

Retired Maj. John Burke, left, and Lt. Col. Jim DesJardin place a wreath at the 3rd Infantry Division monument May 30.

3rd BCT hosts ceremony

Honors 3rd ID's fallen Soldiers

Melissa House

Tricommunity residents gathered May 30 in front of the National Infantry Museum to pay tribute to veterans of the 3rd Infantry Division.

The ceremony was a joint effort of members of Outpost 60, the Society of the 3rd Inf. Div. and Soldiers of the 3rd Brigade Combat Team.

"Today, we honor the extraordinary service and sacrifices of our Marne Division veterans," said Lt. Col. Jim DesJardin, the 3rd BCT rear detachment commander.

DesJardin read from an official 1968 Memorial Day proclamation by Gen. John Logan, National Commander of the Grand Army of the Republic.

"We should guard their graves with sacred vigilance," DesJardin read. "Let no wanton foot tread rudely on such hallowed grounds ... Let no ravages of time testify to the present or to the coming generations that we have forgotten, as a people, the cost of a free republic."

DesJardin said it was the sacred duty of all to keep the legacy of the nation's patriots fresh.

"We are bound by honor to do so," he said. "The freedoms that so many Americans enjoy did not come cheaply. They were paid for with the flesh and blood of American service men and women and with the tears of those whose lives were changed forever by the loss of a loved one."

Ten Soldiers of the 3rd BCT have died serving overseas in the Global War on Terrorism in the past two years.

"Our Soldiers continue to take the fight to our enemy daily," DesJardin said. "Our days ahead will continue to demand the same level of dedication.

"(Memorial Day) should also be a day we rededicate ourselves to our country and to American's living veterans and their families in memory of the sacrifices they and others have made," he said.

The guest speaker was retired Maj. John Burke, a 3rd Inf. Div. veteran of the Korean War. Burke grew up in a cotton mill town in North Carolina, and said the significance of Memorial Day needed no explanation.

"Why remember?" Burke asked. "America's collective conscience demands that all citizens be aware of and recall the deaths of their fellow countrymen during wartime. By honoring the war dead, we preserve their memory and their service and sacrifice."

Burke said many Americans have forgotten the meaning and significance of Memorial Day.

"No war veteran or their family members need to be reminded of the reason for Memorial Day," he said. "And the Society of the Third Infantry Division has observed Memorial Day since long before it became a national holiday."

Since 1994, the Society's Outpost 60 has held the ceremony at the 3rd Infantry Division monument, which bears the numbers of Soldiers killed in various wars.

Retired Sgt. Maj. John Haynes, the vice president of Outpost 60, is a veteran of the division's 30th Infantry Regiment from 1950 to 1954.

"These ceremonies are a little more touching now, because of age and experience," Haynes said. "If you've been (in combat), you know what (today's Soldiers) are going through."

The new Combat Action Badge features a bayonet and a grenade.

Army announces new badge design

Army News Service

WASHINGTON — The Army announced the design for the Combat Action Badge.

The design was approved by Gen. Peter J. Schoomaker, Army chief of staff.

The Combat Action Badge, featuring a bayonet and grenade, may be awarded to any Soldier performing assigned duties in an area where hostile fire pay or imminent danger pay is authorized, who is present and engaging with the enemy, and performing in accordance with the prescribed rules of engagement.

The award is not limited by branch or military occupational specialty.

"Warfare is still a human endeavor," Schoomaker said. "Our intent is to recognize Soldiers who demonstrate and live the Warrior Ethos."

"The Global War on Terrorism and its associated operations will be the first era of conflict considered for this award," said Lt. Col. Bill Johnson, Human Resources Command chief of military awards.

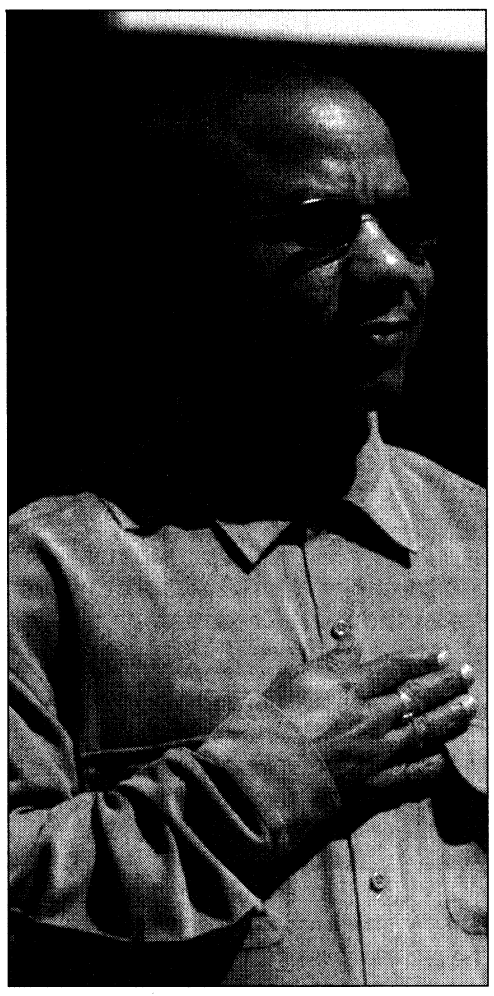
The award became effective Sept. 18, 2001, when President George W. Bush signed Senate Joint Resolution 23.

The resolution authorized the use of military force against anyone responsible for the recent attacks launched against the United States, Johnson said.



The Combat Action Badge should be available late this summer or early fall through unit supply sections and military clothing sales stores Armywide.

Reveille is the raising of the flag in the morning signaling the beginning of the duty day, and retreat is the lowering of the colors in the evening.

On Main Post, reveille is at 6 a.m. and retreat, 5:30 p.m., but times vary on other installations.

There is specific protocol governing respect to the flag according to Army regulation.

At the first note of the prelude of To the Colors, military personnel in uniform are required to stop what they are doing, turn to face the flag and come to attention.

When To the Colors or the national anthem begins, military personnel should salute the flag, holding that position until the last note of music has played.

All Soldiers standing in a formation should only salute when given the order, "Present arms."

If driving a vehicle, a Soldier should pull over and stop, get out of the car and salute the flag or salute in the direction the music is coming from if unable to see the flag.

If a person is riding in a military bus, the only person to get out and salute is the one in charge, while the rest remain in the vehicle.

Service members in civilian clothing should turn to the flag at the beginning of the prelude, remove head gear and stand at attention. When To the Colors or the national anthem begins, service members should place their right hand over their heart. If indoors, Soldiers should stand at attention until the music has finished, according to FM 3-21.5.

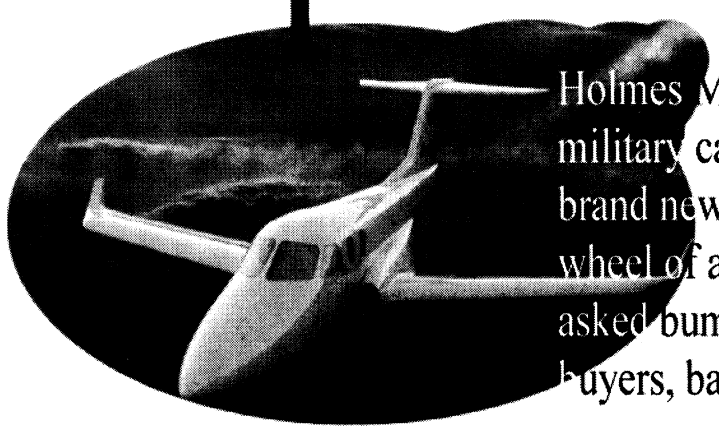
As a courtesy, civilians are also encouraged to show respect when they hear reveille or To the Colors or notice others who have stopped to show respect.

Like Soldiers, they too should stop and face the direction of the flag when the prelude begins and remain in that position until the music stops and the flags are lowered.

The accepted way for a civilian to observe reveille and retreat is to come to attention, remove headgear, and place their right hand over their heart, remaining in this position until the last note of music has played.

If driving, a civilian can pull over and stop the vehicle, step out and place their right hand over their heart.

Historically, reveille was sounded to awaken troops to begin the day. Retreat originally took place at sunset.



It dates back to the crusades, when it alerted sentries they should begin challenging anyone approaching and tell troops to return to their bunks.

In the American tradition, the Infantry used drum beats and other branches used bugles to communicate throughout the day.

In 1867, the calls were standardized throughout every branch.

Today, reveille and retreat are preserved to honor hundreds of years of tradition, and to show respect for the flag.

Sexual assault victims have options

"(Unit Victims Advocates) let that person know they're not isolated. The Army does care."

Rebecca S. Welch
Family Advocacy Program manager

Donna Hyatt
Bayonet staff

Sexual assault is a crime that affects victims physically, mentally and emotionally.

In an effort to streamline medical, legal and psychological treatment options, the Army has instituted the Sexual Assault Prevention and Response Action Plan.

The Unit Victims Advocates, based out of the Family Advocacy Center, located on the second floor of Building 241 on Baltzell Avenue, next to the Infantry Museum, provides support and information necessary for the victim to make positive choices and find help to deal with the trauma resulting from a sexual assault.

Rebecca S. Welch, Family Advocacy Program manager at Fort Benning, said Unit Victims Advocates "respond at the direction of the victim."

"They let that person know they're not isolated," she said. "The Army does care. There are procedures in place to take care of this problem."

Fort Benning's chaplains, mental health professionals, client service attorneys, the Criminal Investigation Division and Martin Army Community Hospital are all involved to make the recovery of the victim as easy as possible.

Citing the military as "a microcosm of society," Lt. Col. Ralph Tremaglio, deputy staff judge advocate, said the Unit Victims Advocate "will ensure lawyer representation for the victim, sit in during judicial reviews, obtain restitution if applicable, and keep the victim apprised of all confinement and release dates scheduled for convicted offenders in their case."

Should the victim wish to maintain confidentiality by visiting an off-post civilian support agency with no military reporting requirements, the advocate will make sure this person gets the right information.

However, Chaplain (Maj.) Jeffrey Hawkins, Family Life Center chaplain, stressed that the Unit Ministry Teams will not report the crime unless the victim requests them to do so.

The Family Life Center is "familiar with treating assault victims because some of the lessons learned in combat translate into the same dynamics as sexual assault," Hawkins said.

In addition to helping victims, the Family Advocacy Program provides mandatory command briefings and troop education to help Soldiers become aware of sexual assault solutions.

Any person, active duty or civilian, who experiences a sexual assault on post is urged to get immediate help.

For more information, call Theresa Sanchez, Family Advocacy victim advocate, at 545-4013 or 545-7517.

PURCHASE THE BEST VALUE PREPAID CARD AT YOUR MILITARY EXCHANGE

AT&T Global PrePaid Cards offer low rates that are optimized for military personnel calling home to the U.S.

The 550-Unit AT&T Global PrePaid Card offers deployed soldiers the best value when calling to the U.S. from Operation Enduring Freedom and Operation Iraqi Freedom — just 19¢ a minute when the Card is purchased at any OEF/OIF location. When purchased online or at other Exchange locations in the U.S. and around the world, it's just 21¢ a minute.*

★ Where can AT&T Global PrePaid Cards be purchased?
Buy yours at your local Exchange or online at www.aafes.com. Friends and family of military personnel can also purchase Cards for you at this site. When deployed in Iraq, Afghanistan and Kuwait, Cards can be purchased at the Exchange, where the price of the 550-Unit Card is just $35.

When calling within the U.S., 1 unit equals 1 minute of calling. When making international calls from overseas, more units are used per minute of call time and the number of units is different based on the country you are calling from. For example, when using the 550-Unit Card, for calls made from OEF/OIF to the U.S., 1 minute equals 3 units of call time. So the 550-Unit Card is good for 183 minutes of calling. For information on other countries, just call the 800 Customer Service number on the back of your Card.

★ Optimized military rates. Great AT&T benefits:
- Minutes never expire.
- Low rates. Remember, prepaid cards bought at other retailers may have higher overseas rates.
- Recharge with AT&T Autominutes® and never run out of minutes.
- Toll free Customer Service available 24/7.
- INFO TO GO available† with weather, sports and more!

★ Visit Camp AT&T.
Before you're deployed, go to www.att.com/mil and check out the Camp AT&T section. It contains information on calling from all the forward-deployed areas, other overseas locations and from U.S. Naval ships.

AT&T

*A surcharge of at least 10 units/minutes (subject to increase) applies to pay phone calls. Units are based on U.S. domestic calling. International rates are higher than U.S. domestic rates, differ according to destination called and are subject to change. Rates may be higher for calls made to or from mobile phones. Tip-offs lead to people, weapons capture

Spc. Natalie Loucks

After suspects have been apprehended, they are tested for explosive residue. Their hands are swiped with a pad then the pad is sprayed.

Iraqi civilians are increasingly reporting terrorist acts against coalition forces, said Maj. Dean Wollan, intelligence officer for the 3rd Brigade Combat Team, Task Force Liberty.

Residents of the Diyala Province have provided the Iraqi and Coalition Forces with information resulting in the capture of high-valued targets, pinpoint locations of insurgent weapons and equipment, as well as locations of roadside bombs known as improvised explosive devices.

"There is a positive momentum," said Maj. Ed House, operations officer for 3rd BCT. "People are tired of getting blown up, tired of their kids not being safe going to school, tired of not having a functioning government, tired of not being able to live their lives."

Iraqi and coalition forces have been able to locate approximately 60 percent of all IEDs before detonation and 25 percent of those found were due to tip-offs from Iraqi citizens, Wollan said. That is a 17 percent increase over the last two weeks.

"There is strength in numbers," House said. "People are becoming more positive about reporting and are willing to take on the insurgents."

House described an incident where an Iraqi citizen noticed an insurgent planting an IED in front of his house. After confronting the insurgent, the IED was removed and the terrorist fled.

On a separate occasion, another citizen observed two insurgents delivering munitions to a shack for storage. When the insurgents left, the man collected the items and took them to Forward Operating Base Normandy. When the resident was offered a reward, he declined.

"The current trend is reporting incidents and unusual happenings tied to insurgent activity," House said.

The reports are usually brought to the local Joint Coordination Center; however, Iraqi and coalition forces have also been notified directly.

Reports from the JCC are called in to the local police station and from there are dispatched accordingly, House said.

In IED incidents, the Iraqi explosive ordnance disposal team responds to the site where they inspect, assess, and defuse the device. If the Iraqi police feel they cannot defuse the bomb, coalition forces are called for technical assistance.

"Iraqi citizens believe in their army and police and have no problem reporting suspicious activity," House said.

As security responsibilities transition to Iraqi authorities, the Iraqi people are beginning to understand their own security forces are a credible deterrent against the insurgency, House said.

"People trust the Iraqi security forces more and are getting over the bad impressions they had during Saddam Hussein's era.

"They are also realizing that coalition forces are not in their country as occupiers," House said.

He said the U.S. military has gained credibility from the Iraqi citizens because of the professionalism demonstrated by Soldiers.

"Our Soldiers are trained to be individual ambassadors, to treat people with dignity and respect," House said.

Wollan believes the civil manner demonstrated by U.S. Soldiers aids in the respect and faith shown by the people of Iraq.

Recently, 3rd Brigade was involved in a combat operation to search for high value individuals and weapons caches.

Wollan said local leaders were so impressed by the professionalism that American and Iraqi Soldiers demonstrated that they turned in a number of terrorists.

Although there is an increase in reports on terrorist actions and the people of Iraq are aiding in the security and freedom of their nation, there is still some fear.

"These insurgents have no problem killing their own people," House said.

Many citizens work on coalition military bases.

"These people are just trying to make a living," House said.

"It takes someone very courageous and who loves their family and their country very much to take a chance like this," Wollan said. "They are the real heroes."

Rewards are offered to citizens who can provide information to the JCC, IA, IP and coalition forces that lead to the capture of high valued individuals and weapons caches.

The value of the reward depends on the amount of ammunition and the type of individual, Wollan said.

Iraqi Security Forces seize weapons caches and detain approximately 50 suspected Iraqi insurgents.

Week Eight — 'NIC'-at-night

Pvt. Jeremiah Dunham keeps his head down while he waits for his platoon to gather around him.

Soldiers low crawl into a formation after completing the night course.

Photos by Tawny Archibald Campbell

Pvt. Samuel Gerking waits for further instructions after finishing the Night Infiltration Course May 24.

During week eight of training, Soldiers are pushed to their limits. They learn to throw hand grenades, engage targets and are taught squad tactical training. During squad tactical training the Soldiers dig individual firing positions, operate as members of a fire team and squad. They also complete the battle march and shoot — where Soldiers march four miles then engage targets. The trainees also receive combat training as they move through the night infiltration course. The strenuous course is designed to give Soldiers a sense of what it's like to be under direct fire in combat. They have to react to direct fire and flares. It also instills the will to continue on even though they are fatigued.

Editor's note: The Bayonet's Tawny Archibald Campbell will follow B Company, 1st Battalion, 19th Infantry Regiment, through 14 weeks of training, offering readers a look at training for new Soldiers at the Infantry Training Brigade.

'How do you like us now?'

Toby Keith Performs for Dragons in Iraq

Command Sgt. Maj. Donald Becker
1st Battalion, 15th Infantry

They told us Jessica Simpson was coming to see us late last month. We were ready — the escorts, the security, the room where she would sign autographs and take pictures, several slips of paper with single Soldiers' e-mail addresses on them.

But at the last minute, our forward operating base southeast of Tikrit was deemed "too dangerous," and she was sent to another FOB.

Now, before you log-on to Jessica's Web site to call her names, please know that the decision not to visit us had nothing to do with her or her entourage; it was a military decision that was made at levels above us. But we do appreciate the fact that she came to Iraq to visit Soldiers. Maybe next time.

To make it up to us, the USO sent us, the Big Dog himself, Mr. Toby Keith.

Toby performed seven songs including Beer For My Horses, The Taliban Song, Courtesy of the Red, White and Blue, American Soldier and my favorite, I Love This Bar.

He had an audience of about 250 Soldiers, many of whom were from our FOB, but some just happened to "stop by" that day from nearby bases.

After his performance, Toby took the time to shake hands and take pictures with everyone. Talk about down to earth.

After the helicopter landed, he and some of his crew were taken to a room to relax until the stage was setup.

When the stage was ready and the sound checks were complete, he headed over to the dining facility where he would perform.

On the way, he noticed a wall that had been knocked over and was told that it had been a mural of Saddam Hussein before Operation Iraqi Freedom.

He walked over to take a look at what was left, and someone asked him if he wanted a piece of it as a souvenir.

A Soldier took a few whacks at it with a steel baton, and when he saw that he was having a hard time breaking a piece of it off, Toby told him, "that's all right, I don't care much about (Saddam) anyway." But a piece was finally retrieved before Toby went in to see the crowd.

The performance was great. Between songs, Toby told the audience how he felt about the American military — and his songs pretty much told us how he feels about the enemy. He's a huge supporter of what we're doing over here and a true American.

and what Matherson said he considers the most challenging of the competition, appear before a formal board.

"It's not one set thing that a drill sergeant does that makes him a drill sergeant, said Command Sgt. Maj. Lonny D. Wright, U.S. Army Infantry School.

"As a noncommissioned officer he must be able to perform well in all tasks in order to be successful."

Matherson said when he began his Army career in 1994 as a mechanized infantryman, he was looking for something different in his life. "I didn't really set a goal for myself, but as my years progressed in the Army, I started getting a feel for it."

Matherson, 30, said he thinks about the drill sergeants who trained him when he was just 19.

"I thought they were knowledgeable and real professionals," he said. "I didn't know anything about the military before I joined, so I learned a lot from them."Now he aspires to be a mentor for new recruits.

"When I get out of the military I want to hear somebody say, 'You were the role model for me while you were in the service. You touched my life in many ways.'"

Matherson is no stranger to being recognized for excellence.

Raised in Saint Andrew, Jamaica, he attended James Ford Rhodes High School in Cleveland, Ohio, and graduated as valedictorian of his 1993 class.

Fifteen years later, he's again at the top of a class, this time among "the best noncommissioned officers in the Army," said Deputy Commander Brig. Gen. James C. Yarbrough.

Matherson and his wife have three children, Makayla, 9, Madison, 5, and Ezekiel, 1 month.

unaccompanied personnel housing facility categories match the identified requirements.

In March, the Army authorized single staff sergeants to live off post and provided the Installation Management Agency with $250 million to repair the Army's most deficient barracks under the Barracks Improvement Program, Aslim said.

Geographical bachelors of all ranks will transition to local community housing through attrition, whether caused by permanent change of station orders, renovations being made through Barracks Improvement Program, deployment, or for the convenience of the government as determined by the local command, Aslim said.

The local on-post Housing Services Office or the Community Housing Relocation and Referral Services is ready to assist Soldiers in securing affordable and safe off-post properties whether they chose to rent or purchase homes.

Friends star Lisa Kudrow makes a welcome Comeback

John Crook
© Zap2it

Forty is a dangerous age for any Hollywood actress — especially if she's Valerie Cherish, the hilariously neurotic star of The Comeback, which begins a 13-episode HBO run Sunday.

Back in her salad days, Valerie (Emmy winner Lisa Kudrow, Friends) snagged a People's Choice Award for her work in I'm It! — a workplace sitcom that eked out a modest run of 97 episodes and added a chimp to its cast before expiring.

These days, however, Valerie's star is in eclipse, which is why she jumped at a chance to do Room and Bored, a new network sitcom pilot. There's just one hitch: The job requires Valerie to open her private life to cameras for The Comeback, a companion behind-the-scenes reality show the same network is producing.

Unfortunately, as we quickly learn just minutes into the first episode, Valerie is an insecure control freak who desperately keeps trying to "spin" every moment to her own advantage, even as she finds herself confronted by a series of comic disasters.

If Valerie seems unusually complicated and fully formed from the first scenes of the opening episode, Kudrow — who also co-created and co-writes much of the series with Emmy-winning Sex and the City writer and executive producer Michael Patrick King — said she has wanted to explore a character like this for quite some time.

"That's the one thing I am most fascinated with: the person who doesn't know how they are coming off," Kudrow said.

"They believe they are coming off one way, while the truth is, they are showing you their whole hand. Some of the stuff is sad, because human beings are complicated beings."

"Lisa and I are both fascinated with the gray areas in people's personalities," King said.

"One of the great things I got to do on Sex and the City over the years was to have characters who had many sides to them. They were smart, yet they made bad mistakes. They were stylish but lonely. It's really fun for us to be on a show again where Valerie can be many contradicting things.

"That's not an accident. I knew I was writing with and for Lisa, who has the ability to light it all up one minute and make you think she is a comic genius, but you know you can also go to the dark places backstage — as we literally did in the pilot."

As the reality cameras remorselessly watch, Valerie struggles to keep her sunny veneer in place even as she is confronted by some startling setbacks. For one thing, the Room and Bored creators have rethought the show, so Valerie no longer is playing one of several sophisticated professional women sharing a home.

Instead, she is polyester jumpsuit-wearing Aunt Sassy, landlady to the sexy, bikini-clad 20-somethings who are suddenly the main focus of the show.

And after Valerie makes an ill-advised attempt to get special treatment during the pilot taping, director James Burrows (playing himself) drags her backstage and gives her a scathing, humiliating reality check.

"Most pilots are, like, 'This is her name. The end,'" King said. "What I love about our pilot is that there is so much story. You actually meet somebody and then watch her sort of eviscerated, and then also see that she is optimistic."

So is Kudrow, especially in terms of the number of possible story lines she and King already have begun exploring for the series.

"If you don't get tired of this character, the show could just go on and on, I think," the actress said.

"Even if Room and Bored eventually went away, Valerie could move to New York and, I don't know, enroll at Actors Studio. I mean, what would this woman do at a real, honest-to-God acting class? Or she could go the other way, try to have a career in gritty independent films.

"Either way, it would be a huge challenge for her. We just have to see how this evolves, really."

For now, however, she and King are having a good time skewering the entire concept of "reality television."

For starters, the only time we get a genuinely spontaneous glimpse of Valerie in the pilot is when she thinks, erroneously, that she has turned off her small "personal diary" camera, which catches an unguarded tender moment between her and her husband.

"It fascinated Lisa and me that Valerie wants the spotlight so much she agrees to do this reality series, but the thing that will then destroy her is the fact that reality TV will eventually see through the cracks," King said.

"She thinks she can spin it. Valerie probably is the last person who would forget the cameras are there, because she has such a performance going on in her head anyway. But if we throw her into a situation where she has something at stake to distract her, you will see the real Valerie."

Actress Valerie Cherish (Lisa Kudrow) agrees to open her life to reality TV cameras in order to land a new sitcom gig in The Comeback, a new comedy series premiering Sunday on HBO.

The Sisterhood of the Traveling Pants — The movie is based on Ann Brashares' best-selling novel about a special summer in the lives of four lifelong friends separated for the first time.

On a shopping trip, the young women find a pair of thrift shop jeans that fits each of them perfectly and they decide to use these pants as a way of keeping in touch over the months ahead.

Starring Amber Tamblyn, Alexis Bledel, Blake Lively and America Ferrera.

The Sisterhood of the Traveling Pants is rated PG for thematic elements, some sensuality and language.

Cinderella Man — Set in New York during the Depression, this is story of James Braddock (Russell Crowe), who takes up boxing to make money to feed his family and ends up becoming quite famous in the process, eventually going up against champ Max Baer.

Also starring Renee Zellweger and Paul Giamatti.

Cinderella Man is rated PG-13 for intense boxing violence and language.

Lords of Dogtown — In the 1970s, a group of teenage surfers from a tough neighborhood known as "Dogtown" in Venice, Calif., pioneered a revolutionary new style of skateboarding.

Riding the waves at the Pacific Ocean Pier, the Z-boys, known for their aggressive style and hard-street attitude, combined the moves of surfing with the art of skateboarding and become overnight sensations and local legends.

Starring Heath Ledger, Johnny Knoxville and Emile Hirsch.

Lords of Dogtown is rated PG-13 for drug and alcohol content, sexuality, violence, language and reckless behavior.

Madagascar — This movie focuses on four residents and "stars" of the Central Park Zoo who are also best friends: a lion (Ben Stiller), a zebra (Chris Rock), a giraffe (David Schwimmer) and a pregnant hippo (Jada Pinkett-Smith).

When one of them goes missing, the other three break out of the zoo looking for him, and eventually all four are captured and put in boxes to ship them back to the continent their species are originally from: Africa.

An accident at sea, however, strands them on the shore of Madagascar.

Madagascar is rated PG for mild language, crude humor and thematic elements.

The Longest Yard — This is the story of pro quarterback Paul Crewe (Adam Sandler) and former college champion and coach Nate Scarboro (Burt Reynolds), who are doing time in the same prison.

Asked to put together a team of inmates to take on the guards, Crewe enlists the help of Scarboro to coach the inmates to victory in a football game "fixed" to turn out quite another way.

The Longest Yard is rated PG-13 for crude and sexual humor, violence, language and drug references.

Star Wars: Episode III-Revenge of the Sith — The third and final installment in the Star Wars prequel trilogy — the third and final Star Wars movie overall.

Anakin Skywalker's turn to the Dark Side of the Force, the continuing Clone Wars and the final fate of the Old Republic should be revealed.

Starring Ewan McGregor, Hayden Christiensen, Natalie Portman, Ian McDiarmid and Samuel L. Jackson.

Star Wars: Episode III-Revenge of the Sith is rated PG-13 for sci-fi violence and intense images.

Mindhunters — On a remote island, the FBI has a training program for their psychological profiling division, called "Mindhunters," used to track serial killers.

The training goes horribly wrong when a group of seven young agents discover that one of them is a serial killer, and is trying to kill the others.

Can the few who are left figure out who the killer is in time?

Starring Val Kilmer, LL Cool J and Christian Slater.

Mindhunters is rated R for violence, strong graphic images, language and sexual content.

Kicking & Screaming — Phil Weston (Will Ferrell) is an average Joe who's had to put up all his life with his overly competitive father, Buck (Robert Duvall).

When Phil decides to coach his 10-year-old son's soccer team, he goes head-to-head for the league championship against Buck, who coaches his own young son on the pre-eminent team of the league.

Old scores come into play, as Phil and Buck find themselves going to extreme measures to win the championship trophy.

Kicking & Screaming is rated PG for thematic elements, language and crude humor.

Monster-in-Law — Unlucky in love, Charlotte 'Charlie' Cantilini (Jennifer Lopez) has finally met the man of her dreams, Dr. Kevin Fields (Michael Vartan).

There's just one problem — his mother. Overbearing and controlling, not to mention volatile, Viola Fields (Jane Fonda) has recently been canned from her job as a star news anchor. Fearing she will lose her son's affections as she has her career, Viola decides to break up the happy couple by becoming the world's worst mother-in-law.

Monster-in-Law is rated PG-13 for sex references and language.

A Persian store owner.

Two police detectives, who are also lovers.

A television director and his wife.

A Mexican locksmith.

Two carjackers.

A rookie cop.

A middle-aged Korean couple.

They all live in Los Angeles. And, in the next 36 hours, they will all collide.

Amanda Parmer and her 10-month old son, Cameron, splash around during the Mom and Tot class at Briant Wells Fitness Center June 1. The class is designed to help children become more comfortable in the water.

Mom and Tot class lets babies explore swimming

She is only 15-months old, but little Madison Hauquitz is already learning the joys of swimming.

Mother, Katie Hauquitz, brings Madison swimming three days a week in the Briant Wells Fitness Center pool as part of a Mom and Tot swimming class, sponsored by the American Red Cross.

"My mom used to take me to swim lessons from the time I was three months old," Hauquitz said. "It got me used to the water and I was never afraid. I wanted to start (Madison) out as early as I could so she won't be scared. My father is afraid of the water, so I know what that can be like."

The three-week class is designed to help young children become familiar with larger bodies of water and help them overcome water anxiety, said Philip Wooddy, Mom and Tot instructor.

"This isn't to teach them how to swim, but we show them how to splash with their arms, kick their legs and blow bubbles," Wooddy said.

"The class teaches kids that water can be fun and helps them get over fear of the water."

"They won't be scared of the bathtub, but this is more water and it's deeper," he said. "Most of the kids are scared (at first), but after a bit they want to get in by themselves."

Amanda Parmer, who comes with her 10-month-old son, Cameron, said she has always loved to swim and wanted her son to grow up liking the water.

"He's really doing well with this, and he really likes it, but it does wear him out," she said. "I like it because it makes us closer. We get to spend time together, and he knows he can trust me in the water, so it gives him that extra assurance that I am here for him. It's a good bond."

Annalisa Churchill, the mother of 18-month old Katrina, said she does everything with her little girl, but participating in something that takes them outside the home and lets them associate with other mothers is refreshing.

"It's like a big bathtub for the kids and they love it," Churchill said. "It's summer and you have to go swimming in the summer."

The Mom and Tot class costs $30 for nine lessons. To register for the class, call the American Red Cross at 545-5194.

Swim lessons available through Red Cross

Tawny Archibald Campbell

It's time to pull out your swimsuit, rub on some sunscreen and jump in the pool.

And if you or your children don't know how to swim, now is the time to sign up for lessons.

The Fort Benning branch of the American Red Cross is offering swimming classes at the four pools located on post.

"Learning to swim is a good safety practice and good exercise," said Joe Emehiser, director for the American Red Cross at Fort Benning.

It's important for kids to have basic swimming skills to ensure their own safety, he said.

"The sooner they learn to swim, the better," Emehiser said.

The Red Cross offers swimming classes for infants as young as 6 months old, and kids up to 13 years old.

The Mom and Tot class is for children ages 6 months to 3 years. It is an introduction course to help children become more comfortable in the water.

The pre-school class, for children ages 4 to 5, is an orientation course. Children learn to walk in chest deep water, bob up and down, understand water safety rules and the importance of wearing a life jacket.

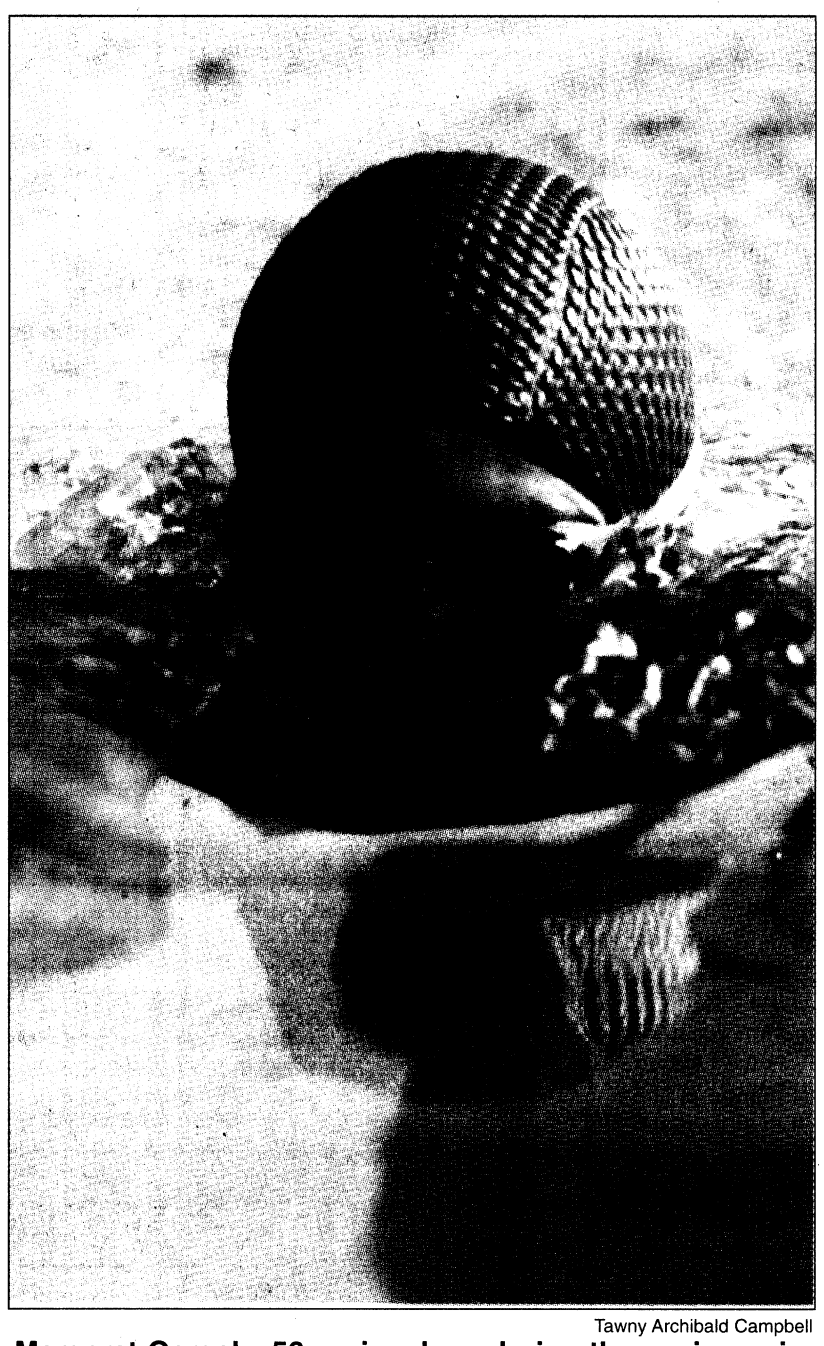
The Level 1 class focuses on water exploration. Children are taught how to get help if someone is in trouble. They also learn breathing techniques, how to float while supported, how to kick and entering and exiting the water safely.

The Level 2 class teaches primary skills. The course is designed to reinforce what they learned in the previous class and teaches children to float and glide on their front and back.

The Level 3 class is designed to help children increase both swimming and rescue skills. The class includes how to jump in deep water with life jackets, float and swim the back crawl and breast stroke.

Level 4 is stroke development, where children can practice and improve their swimming strokes.

Level 5, the final class is stroke refinement. This class helps children practice and perfect the strokes they have learned.



"Parents need to encourage their children to swim," Emehiser said.

Often parents pass on their own fears to children, causing children to fear the water. Parents need to encourage kids to learn to swim and be patient with them while they learn, he said.

"You don't learn how to swim overnight."

Swimming lessons are $30 for nine lessons.

To find out more about swimming lessons or to register your child for a class, contact the American Red Cross at 545-5194.

Fight mosquitoes

Capt. Sidney M. Cobb
MEDDAC

Warm weather is here, and with it comes the nuisance of mosquitoes. Martin Army Community Hospital's Department of Preventive Medicine mosquito surveillance program includes trapping and testing adult mosquitoes for the presence of the West Nile virus. The goal of the program is to monitor mosquito activity on Fort Benning. In order to monitor the mosquito population, light traps that operate from dawn to dusk are placed at locations across post.

Residents can do their part to prevent mosquito bites through personal protection and the elimination of mosquito breeding grounds. The most effective way to control mosquitoes around the home is to find and eliminate breeding sites.

All mosquitoes pass through four life stages: egg, larva, pupa and adult.

The first three stages must have water for development, thus the best option for mosquito control is to target the larval stage.

Post residents can take the following steps to prevent mosquito breeding in their yards:

• Remove standing water that may accumulate in lawn ornaments, flower pots, etc.

• Destroy or dispose of tin cans, plastic containers or any other object that can hold water. Pay special attention to old tires.

• Empty and refresh pet water dishes, watering troughs and birdbaths at least once a week.

• Ensure that garbage cans have tight fitting lids.

• Clean debris from rain gutters and remove any standing water under or around structures or on flat roofs.

• Empty children's wading pools immediately after use.

Adult Mosquito Control

• Keep adult mosquitoes out of the home by using screens on doors and windows.

• Adult mosquitoes rest on weeds and other vegetation. Family housing residents can reduce the number of areas where adult mosquitoes rest by removing brushy areas from around structures and regularly mowing the lawn.

Personal Protective Measures

• Limit time outdoors at dawn and dusk when mosquitoes are most active.

• Wear light-colored clothing with long sleeves and pants.

• Use repellents such as DEET if you are working or playing in mosquito-infested areas. Do not use DEET on infants 2 years or younger, pregnant women or children's bedding or clothing.

• Read repellent labels carefully before using

• Apply the repellent sparingly on any exposed skin (not underneath clothing), avoiding your eyes. If you do get repellent in your eyes, rinse with water immediately. Be sure to wash treated skin with soap and water when you return indoors or when protection is no longer needed.

Insects Commonly Mistaken for Mosquitoes

In many instances, what appears to be a mosquito may actually be another type of insect. Midges are the most widespread and numerous insects resembling mosquitoes. Adult midges are commonly observed flying in swarms or "clouds." Although these midges do not bite, they are quite annoying. Crane flies, often mistaken as very large mosquitoes, are also nonbiting insects that pose no risk to you or your family.

SUMMER START WITH A DART

Bridgett Siter
Bayonet staff

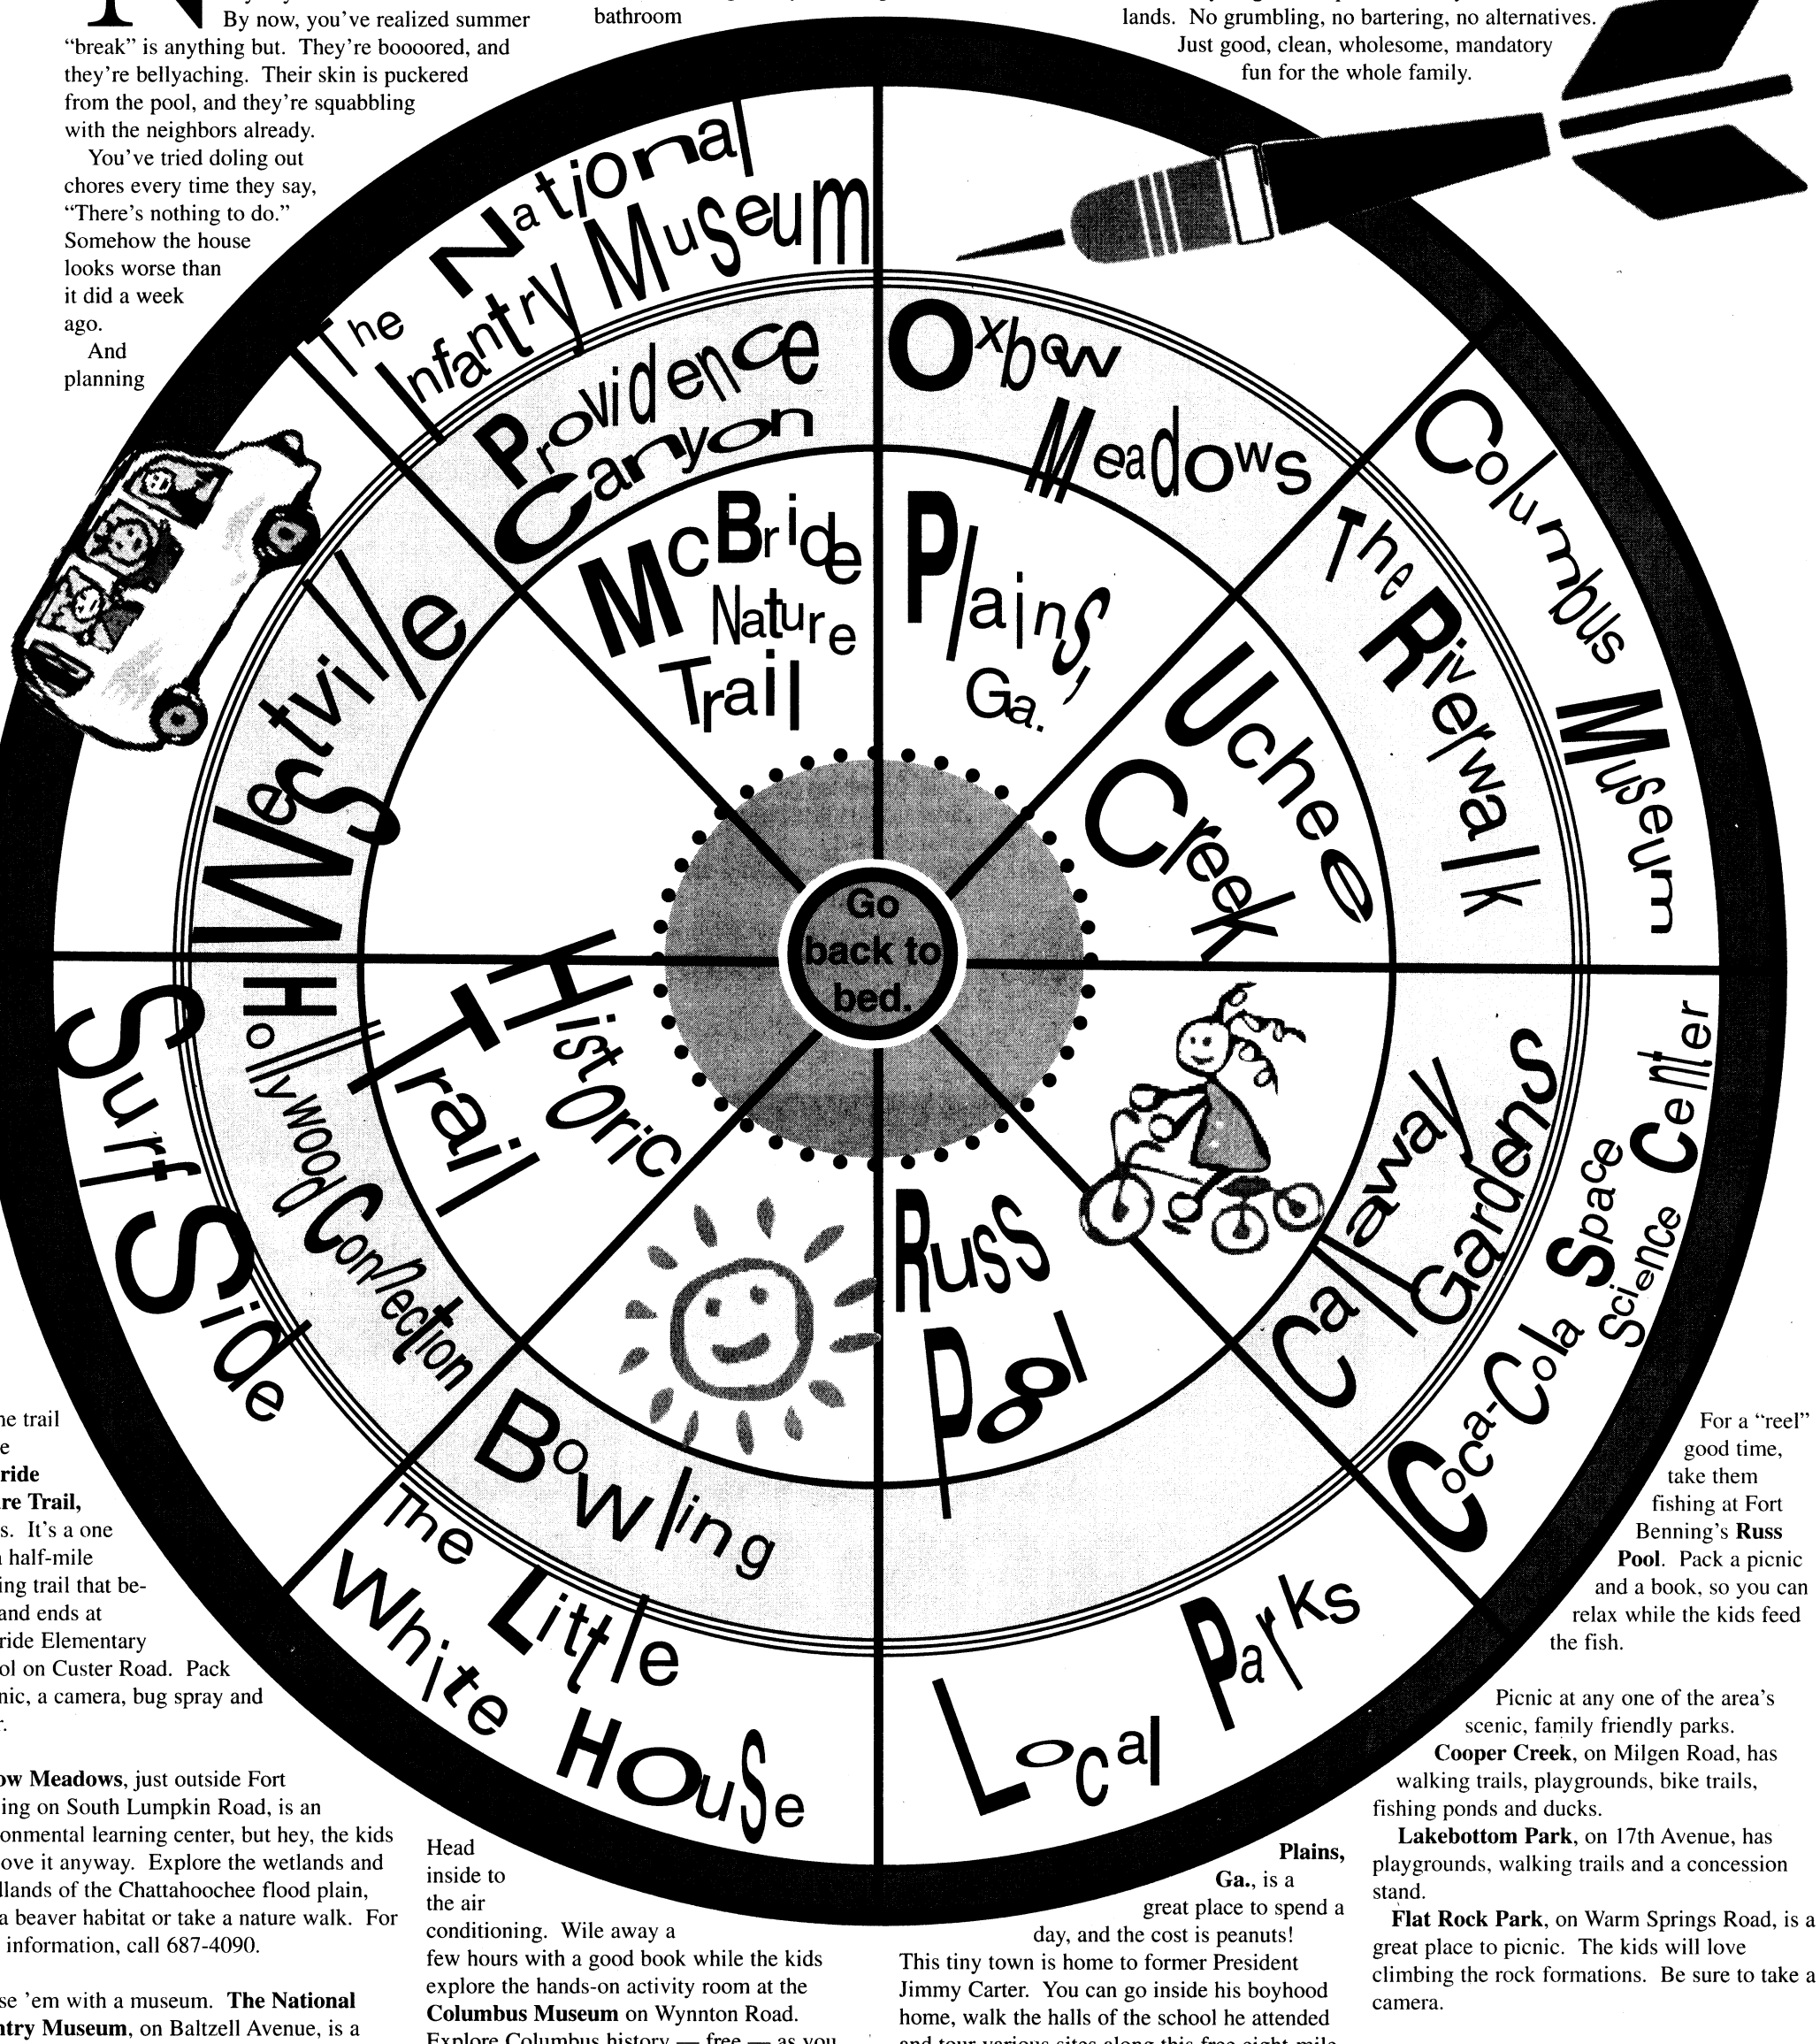
No matter how high the temperature gets, summer vacation is cool if you're out of school. In theory, anyway.

By now, you've realized summer "break" is anything but. They're boooored, and they're bellyaching. Their skin is puckered from the pool, and they're squabbling with the neighbors already.

You've tried doling out chores every time they say, "There's nothing to do." Somehow the house looks worse than it did a week ago.

And planning an itinerary that suits everyone is hard work, and hard work is the antithesis of summer vacation.

Before you pull your hair out — or someone else's — take heart. Take a break. Take a seat and formulate a game plan.



Or use mine. Here's how it works:

Post this target on your refrigerator, a door, the bathroom mirror or someone's back. I recommend staples or tape.

Each morning, designate one person — perhaps the child you like best — to throw a dart at the target. (Substitute a spitball if you're using the bathroom mirror.)

The day's agenda depends entirely on where it lands. No grumbling, no bartering, no alternatives.

Just good, clean, wholesome, mandatory fun for the whole family.

Hit the trail — the McBride Nature Trail, that is. It's a one and a half-mile walking trail that begins and ends at McBride Elementary School on Custer Road. Pack a picnic, a camera, bug spray and water.

Oxbow Meadows, just outside Fort Benning on South Lumpkin Road, is an environmental learning center, but hey, the kids will love it anyway. Explore the wetlands and woodlands of the Chattahoochee flood plain, visit a beaver habitat or take a nature walk. For more information, call 687-4090.

Amuse 'em with a museum. The National Infantry Museum, on Baltzell Avenue, is a treasure trove of relics from the Infantry archives. Sound terribly unappealing to the kids? Take them on a scavenger hunt to see if they can find Calculator the Dog on the first floor, jump towers on the second, and a Raiders of the Lost Ark jeep on the third.

Take a hike! Hike the Historic Trail, which encompasses 26 sites around Fort Benning's Main Post, starting at the National Infantry Museum, where you can pick up a map for your self-guided tour.

Tour the White House — FDR's Little White House in Warm Springs, Ga., 45 miles north of Fort Benning on Alternate Hwy. 27 in Meriweather County. The whole family will enjoy walking through the home Roosevelt loved.

Head inside to the air conditioning. Wile away a few hours with a good book while the kids explore the hands-on activity room at the Columbus Museum on Wynnton Road. Explore Columbus history — free — as you tour the museum's Chattahoochee Legacy. The Columbus Museum also showcases artists of local and national distinction.

Callaway Gardens, in Pine Mountain, offers a new attraction this summer at Robin Lake Beach — Iceberg Island, a floating playground for children 6 and older. While you're there, be sure to see the garden's butterfly sanctuary, the Victory Garden, the Sibley Horticulture Center and the Virginia Hand Callaway Discovery Center. For more information, call (800) 282-8181.

The Coca-Cola Space Science Center, 701 Front Ave., offers out-of-this-world fun for the whole family. The center hosts an ever-changing array of activities designed to intrigue your star-struck child's imagination and feed his curiosity about space travel. To see what's happening at the center, call 649-1470.

Plains, Ga., is a great place to spend a day, and the cost is peanuts! This tiny town is home to former President Jimmy Carter. You can go inside his boyhood home, walk the halls of the school he attended and tour various sites along this free eight-mile, self-guided tour. Pick up a guide at the Plains Welcome Center.

Take a short drive to SurfSide Water Park in Opelika, Ala., and spend the day floating down the lazy river or sailing in the 640,000 gallon wave pool. Or brave one of the four water slides — two flumes and two 70-foot curly-Qs. Admission at SurfSide starts at $14.95. For more information, call (334)821-7873.

Take a stroll along the Chattahoochee. The Riverwalk meanders 10 miles from Fort Benning to downtown Columbus.

Westville, "where it's always 1850," in Lumpkin, Ga., is a living history village, reconstructed from original homes, shops and offices, and populated by curators dressed in period costumes who do a bang-up job of portraying merchants, farmers and shopkeepers from the 19th century.
Westville is open Tuesday through Saturday, from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m., and Sunday, 1 to 5 p.m. Free tickets are often available at the O'Club, the NCO Club or Afterhours.

For a "reel" good time, take them fishing at Fort Benning's Russ Pool. Pack a picnic and a book, so you can relax while the kids feed the fish.

Picnic at any one of the area's scenic, family friendly parks.

Cooper Creek, on Milgen Road, has walking trails, playgrounds, bike trails, fishing ponds and ducks.

Lakebottom Park, on 17th Avenue, has playgrounds, walking trails and a concession stand.

Flat Rock Park, on Warm Springs Road, is a great place to picnic. The kids will love climbing the rock formations. Be sure to take a camera.

Hollywood Connection, on Whittlesey Road in Columbus, offers fun for all ages, from movies to games, putt-putt golf, amusement rides for young children and a game room for the older crowd. Call 571-3456.

Have a ball. Take the kids bowling at one of Fort Benning's two bowling centers. Weekdays are the best time to get a lane. It costs $1.25 per person per game between 9 a.m. and 4:30 p.m. — a bargain in anybody's book. Call 682-7777.

Fort Benning's own Uchee Creek offers lots of fun for the whole family. Rent a cabin or pitch a tent, rent a boat or fish from the bank, but save time for the swimming pool, which features a mushroom fountain. For more information, call 545-7238.

Visit Providence Canyon, "Georgia's Little Grand Canyon," seven miles west of Lumpkin on State Road 39C.

Kids experiment with science

Students get smart at Loyd's annual Discovery Day

Kris Gonzalez

Did you know that no matter how you blow a bubble, it will always form a sphere?

Students of Loyd Elementary School learned about bubbles and more during their annual Discovery Day May 25.

About 260 students participated in a round-robin of presentations focusing on science and technology.

The 30-minute classes explored areas ranging from the simplicities of blowing bubbles to the complexities of building a model town with electricity and running water.

Discovery Day provided many educational experiences and opportunities, said Mitzi Crow, media specialist for Loyd.

Discovery Day was created at Loyd about 15 years ago to expose students to a variety of areas in science and careers in the field, Crow said.

School administrators and teachers sought resources from Fort Benning and the surrounding community and recruited subject matter experts to teach each class.

Amy Waite, outreach coordinator from Oxbow Meadows Environmental Learning Center, talked about her mission at the center. She educated the students about different species of animals and how to preserve the environment to keep every creature safe.

Her turtle exhibit, in which the students got the chance to touch a live African spur tortoise, was a hit among the young scientists, Crow said.

The landing of Fort Benning's Command Parachute Exhibition Team, the Silver Wings, was the highlight for most students, Crow said, but the children seemed to enjoy all of the events.

The students and the teachers loved it, Crow said. The teachers received as much of an education as the students.

"We learned along with the children," Crow said.

Some other facilities represented were the Follow Me Golf Course, the Georgia Forestry Commission, Flint Energies, the Muscogee County Humane Society, Inc., and the Columbus State University Music Department.

Soldiers of the 203rd Forward Support Battalion provided humvee rides for the kids.

Crow said because the students of Loyd look forward to Discovery Day so much, they plan to add more events and presentations next year.

"It's a great celebration for the end of the year." she said.

Kindergartner Michael Chiqawa agreed that Discovery Day is a day worth waiting for.

"It was the best day of the year," Chiqawa said.

School Registration

New student registration will take place June 6 to 10 from 8:30 a.m. to 3 p.m.

The documents needed to register vary depending on your child's situation.
Major documents are Georgia certificates of immunization, proof of residency, legal birth certificate and the child's social security card.

Please contact the school your child will be attending, or call 545-7276 for more information.

Say hello, goodbye

Chaplain (Lt. Col.) Ronald L. Smith
USAIC Chaplains Office

In the high season of the PCS shuffle, we can forget how to say goodbye and hello. Life in the Army ia a series of transitions. The willing and healthy person accepts this and deals with it. Unwilling and unhealthy people fight and put off, even deny, transitions.

But changes come, whether we choose them or not. Children are born, relationships change, jobs terminate, roofs leak, people die.

Transitions simply happen.

We are blessed in the Army with various organizations that help ease this process. Amidst the transitions, a great thing happens — we make lifelong friends.

I have found my best friends in the Army. Faith and fate brought us close to many of our nation's greatest Soldiers and family members.

In the next week we say goodbye to Chaplain (Col.) Joel and Kay Cocklin, whose family has made a tremendous difference in our lives, and we all will miss them.

Somehow, we can say our hellos and goodbyes in the aloha tradition of using the same word for both greetings. We've come to realize we have not lost that relationship, but have been blessed to have had great people in our lives.

Smith

The writer of the Gospel of Luke tells of two followers walking hurriedly away from Jerusalem, hoping to hit Emmaus by nightfall. Adrenaline fueled their journey. They were together, yet alone. On a dismal road to Emmaus, two people felt their hearts strangely warmed in an hour of empty coldness. Then they met their risen Lord. They said goodbye to one dream and began to embrace the possibility of a more profound reality.

Aware of resources that, in anguish, they had forgotten, they started to claim the resurrection — first his, then theirs.

They began a task that changed this world. This is one of the great paradoxes of life, and one of the great truths. We gain by losing. We hold fast by letting go. We say goodbye in order to say hello in a whole new way — hello to new realities, new opportunities, and new people.

It is the wisdom of the scriptures. It is the wisdom of the ages.

How to raise a modern day knight

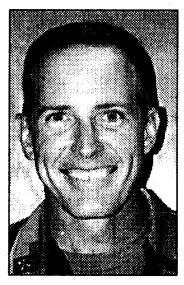
REFLECTIONS

How many of you have boys? There's something special about them, isn't there? I have one of my own, and I've watched a bunch of them, too. Anybody who says there is no difference between boys and girls, those who say that it's all environmental or upbringing, probably haven't had children.



In all my days, I've never seen a little girl pick up a Barbie and use it as a baseball bat. I've never seen a little girl "get to know" another little girl by "embracing" her in a headlock and wrestling her to the ground, giddy with laughter as they exchange a mutual, puppy-like pounding.

And I've certainly never smelled a pack of girls that came anything close to the biochemical hazard posed by six boys in a minivan after soccer practice.

There is something unique about parenting little boys who grow into young men, isn't there?

Through the years, I've gained respect for a balanced approach that calls for energetically affirming the strengths and uniqueness of a child's gender, whether male or female.

And when it comes to helping little boys become "big men" (in more than just the physical sense) one of the most meaningful and indelible tools you can use is the "power of ceremony."

Hawkins

How does a boy know when or how to become a man? There are many answers to that question, but certainly one way is through the power of ceremony.

What sort of ceremonies, you ask? Well, there are four that Robert Lewis recommends in his book, Raising a Modern Day Knight.

The first ceremony that serves as a milestone for a man is marking the onset of puberty. Though we did something quite different in terms of a ceremony for our daughter, our son's ceremony will take him to the woods.

And there, with me, his grandfather and any male family members I can muster, we'll take him down a "path" in the dark woods. Along the way, I'll reveal four key temptations that will challenge him to stray from the path as a godly man.

Each marker will be met with an appropriate scripture encouraging him to stand firm and grow to be a man God can bless.

The evening will end with him opening letters around a crackling fire from all the godly male figures in his life, commending him to walk with God, stay on the path and become a man of character, conviction and vision.

And then we'll pig out on some hearty chow, laugh and do that male bonding thing as he's blessed into the journey of manhood.

What's the second ceremony to mark a young man's entry into manhood? It's graduation from high school.

Graduation celebrates perseverance. But more importantly, the ceremony a dad can plan helps a boy deal with the vast increase in personal freedom that's about to come his way. One way to do this is to arrange a special breakfast or dinner, again with a collection of exemplary male role models.

Can you think of a better way to raise a modern day knight than to have a family, especially a dad, create four, personally tailored, high-impact ceremonies just for the son he loves? I can't.

What are the other two ceremonies to help young boys become godly men? Tune in next week as we take a look at them.

All-Army team deadlines draw near

Sports director hopes for stacks of local packets

Tawny Archibald Campbell
Bayonet staff

The deadline to apply for a slot on one of the All-Army teams is nearing.

Five sports have deadlines before the end of the summer, said Ken Wetherill, Directorate of Moral, Welfare and Recreation's Sports director.

"The goal is to get as many athletes into trial camps as possible," he said. "Consider that we are the third largest installation in troop density and the sixth largest in space. We should be in the top ten percent of installations being accepted into the All-Army trial camps."

Those who are interested in applying for one of the sports teams will be required to complete a packet, and if chosen, will be sent to a trial camp. If they make it through the trial camp, they will attend an armed forces camp and compete against other branch teams.

"One of the great feel-good stories of the 2002 Winter Olympic Games was when an Army bobsledder took the gold," Wetherill said. "Something like that starts at your installation sports office."

Wetherill said he has four packets in hand to send to All-Army, but would like to have at least one packet per sport.

"I would hope that Soldier athletes who have a skill and ability to compete at a higher level of competition would at least come by and talk to me," he said. "I'll guide them through the whole process."

Application deadlines are:

Softball (men) — June 8, trial camp Aug. 8 - Sept. 4 at Fort Lee, Va.

Army 10-Miler (men and women) — July 1, by application only.

Basketball (women) — July 2, trial camp Aug. 17-Sept. 7 at Fort Indianhead Gap, Pa.

Rugby (men) — July 15, trial camp Oct. 7-16 in Fort Lewis, Wash.

Marathon (men and women) — July 15, by application only.

Swimming offers low-impact alternative

Tawny Archibald Campbell
Bayonet staff

Three months ago Capt. David Voorhies, 32, a small group instructor with the Combined Arms and Tactics Division decided to change his workout.

Instead of just running, he decided to incorporate swimming into his PT schedule.

"Now I swim two to three times per week as an alternative to running," Voorhies said. "When you run five days a week, you start to have sore knees and a sore lower back. I've found swimming gives me just as good a workout and it helps with my endurance with out the impact."

Voorhies toyed with the idea of adding swimming to his workout schedule for quite a while before he decided to give it a try.

Then his co-worker, Tom McCarron, started encouraging him, and now they go to the pool to workout together each Thursday morning.

"It is a resource that goes unused a lot," Voorhies said. "There are a lot of people out there running, but there are also a lot of pools here on post. For me, swimming adds variety to your PT program.

"When I swim it makes me feel better about myself, like I've done something. You get a swimmer's high, kind of like a runner's high, and it gets addictive."

Vivian Pedrozo, pool manager at Briant Wells, said there are many opportunities for people of all ages to get involved in the sport of swimming. Whether people want to become competitive swimmers, train for a triathlon or just get healthy, swimming offers something for everyone.

"Swimming works the lower back and both sides of your body at the same time, instead of just arms or legs," Pedrozo said.

"It's a whole body workout and good cardio work. We even have bike racks outside the pools if want to do mini-triathlon."

The pool at Briant Wells Fitness Center also has equipment for specialty training. They have hand paddles, kick boards, pool buoys, zoomers and aqua joggers.

"At the indoor pool we have somewhat of a swimming program set up and we have three sets of workout programs, broken down with distances and drills," Pedrozo said.

"And we always someone have on deck to give pointers and help out."

Coca-Cola 600 throws wall in face of Army

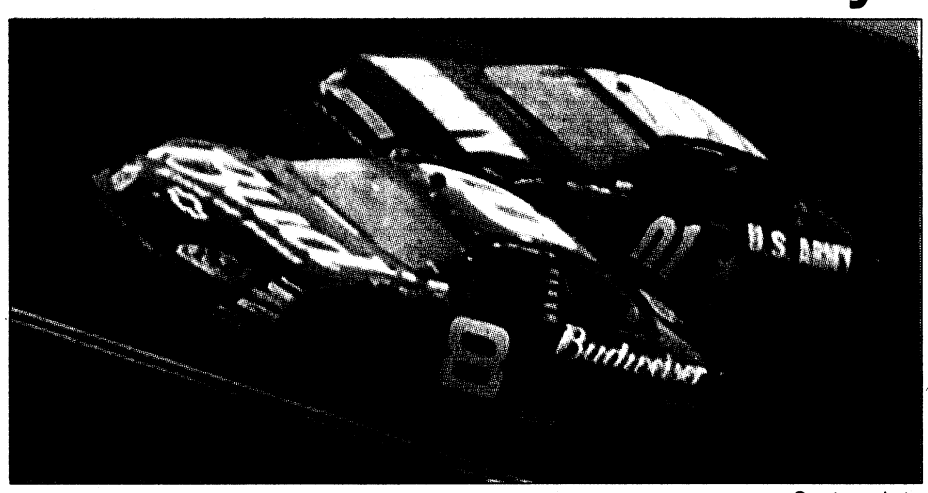
Blow out with nine laps to go hits Nemechek hard

Maj. William Thurmond
Army News Service

LOWE'S MOTOR SPEEDWAY, N.C. — With just nine laps to go in the second-longest Coca-Cola 600 in history, Joe Nemechek seemed poised to drive the Army 01 Chevrolet into Victory Lane.

He was pulling away, gaining almost half a car length over his closest competition each lap. In the team's pit box, anticipation was building, as network TV crews gathered to capture images of the celebration.

Suddenly, it was all over, as Nemechek's right rear tire blew, sending him tail-first into the turn three safety barrier with less than 15 miles to the finish.



Nemechek's spin almost took out the eventual race winner Jimmie Johnson, as Johnson ignored his spotter's advice and drove high to avoid the Army Chevrolet.

When the chaos was over, Nemechek was on pit row with his crew hammering on a damaged race car, while the rest of the remaining field was parked on the backstretch. The incident brought both a race-stopping red flag and the 22nd caution period, a new NASCAR record.

When the race resumed, Johnson went on to pass new leader Bobby Labonte at the finish line and win his third-straight Coca-Cola 600 in dramatic fashion.

Nemechek, nursing his sick Chevy in the closing laps, continued to pass cars, eventually finishing 18th.

"I think I ran over some debris from when Mark Martin got into the wall on the backstretch," said Nemechek in a post-race interview.

Joe Nemechek, driving the Army car, jockeys for position with Dale Earnhardt Jr., during the Coca-Cola 600 Sunday.

"All of a sudden the car started vibrating going into turn three. The tire was flat going into the corner and the back end was bouncing. I didn't have a prayer. I saved it once, but then the tire must have gone all the way flat and the car turned around and slid backwards into the fence. There was nothing I could do but hang on."

"Nine laps to go in the race — incredible, just incredible."

AMU shooters score at World

LONATO, Italy – Several Soldiers of the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit took home medals from the 2005 International Shooting Sport Federation World Shotgun Championships, which were held May 26 to 30.

Sgt. 1st Class James Todd Graves of the Army Marksmanship Unit took the Bronze Medal in the Men's Skeet Championships with a score of 146 out of a possible 150 and an impressive 26 in the tiebreaker to beat Abdullah Alrashidi of Kuwait. Graves also won a quota slot for the United States to compete at the 2008 Olympics in Beijing.

The U.S. Men's Skeet Team finished second in the team standings with a 355 total team score, losing in the tie-breaker to Norway. The U.S. Silver Medal Team was made up of Hancock, Graves and USAMU's Sgt. Mark Weeks.

Pvt. Joshua M. Richmond, 19, of Hillsgrove, Pa., won the first Gold Medal for the United States May 26 in Junior Men's Double Trap. Richmond, who has been a shotgun shooter with the USAMU since Feb. 1, won his first World Championship medal with a total score of 132 points, five points above his next competitor, Byron Swanton of the Republic of South Africa.

Richmond, also led the United States to the medal stand for a second time, in the Junior Men's Team event. Richmond, Matthew Drexler of Kearney, Mo., and Cory Sidorek of Dallas, Pa., won the Team Bronze Medal with a 366 score.

Richmond joined the Army in October and was assigned to the AMU after he completed basic and Infantry training at Fort Benning.

Prime time to start B.R.A.G.ing

Beginning in the early morning hours of June 11, motorists on Fort Benning should be on the lookout for cyclists tuning up for the annual Bike Ride Across Georgia.

The BRAG is one of the biggest cross state rides in the country, said Dr. Benjamin Pike, treasurer for the Columbus Cycling Club and veteran of three consecutive BRAGs.

The event began in 1980 when 120 cyclists left Savannah and made their way west toward Columbus. Only 60 finished the 300-mile trek.

This year's ride will be the first to begin in Columbus, taking riders east to the finish line at Tybee Island.

Pike said organizers expect 2,000 cyclists to participate in the weeklong ride.

"It's well organized and well supported," Pike said.

Although the actual BRAG route won't take the riders through Fort Benning, Pike designed the two June 11 tune-up rides, one of which will bring a number of riders on post.

The first ride is 18 miles on the Riverwalk, starting at the Columbus Civic Center, turning around at Oxbow Meadows. Those interested in the 32-mile option, will start at the Civic Center and wind its way around post, passing the National Infantry Museum and the golf course before heading around the airfield to Fryar Drop Zone and the Uchee Creek Marina.

Pike said the Fort Benning portion will be scenic and include several challenging hills, like the hill coming up from the airfield, commonly known as "Cardiac Hill."

Riders can participate in either of the warm-up rides for free, but will need to sign a liability waiver before entering post.

Waivers and maps will be available at the Civic Center and at Oxbow Meadows the morning of the ride. Riders will also need to carry photo identification

"We really appreciate Fort Benning," Pike said. "We are so fortunate to be next to Fort Benning, not only for bicyclists, but for other reasons."

Although there are some military members in the Columbus Cycling Club, Pike said they'd like to see more.

The club, with a membership of around 300, is open to anyone interested in cycling.

Soldier awarded Silver Star

Kris Gonzalez
Bayonet staff

As day broke, June 3, 2004, in Kufa, Iraq, so too, did the misconception that the Mahdi militiamen were ragtag and disorganized.

Staff Sgt. Robert R. McBride and the Soldiers of Iron Troop, 3rd Squadron, 2nd Armored Cavalry Regiment were about to find out this band of Islamist militants was well equipped and more prepared than the coalition forces had ever expected.

In an effort to safeguard their mortar position, the Shiite combatants used everything from small arms fire to rocket propelled grenades and mortars to attack the American forces as they moved in on their stronghold.

But by midday, McBride would help his troops annihilate the enemy, seize a cache of weapons and earn the Silver Star.

"It started out just like any other day," said McBride, as he recalled the events that led up to the raid for which he would earn the fourth highest medal in the Army.

Fourteen months into their deployment, McBride said he and his

CG set to move

Lori Egan
Bayonet editor

Maj. Gen. Benjamin Freakley, Fort Benning's commanding general, got his marching orders Wednesday — to Fort Drum, N.Y.

Freakley will take command of the 10th Mountain Division (Light) and Fort Drum according to an announcement made by the chief of staff of the Army.

He will replace Maj. Gen. Lloyd J. Austin who will become Central Command's chief of staff.

Being selected to command the 10th Mountain Division is both humbling and a great honor, Freakley said. The unit has a huge mission — fighting the war on terror in both Iraq and Afghanistan.

Freakley said he had seen dramatic changes at Fort Benning during the nearly two years he has been here — changes driven by war.

The change of command is scheduled for August.

Fort Benning's incoming commander is Maj. Gen. Walter Wojdakowski. He is coming from U.S. Army Europe and 7th Army where he served as the special assistant to the commanding general.

Wojdakowski is no stranger to Fort Benning. He was stationed here from 1997-1998 as the deputy commanding general. He also served as the commander of the 11th Infantry Regiment.

Defibrillator helps save man's life

Successful outcome due to joint effort

Spc. Eliamar Trapp
Assistant editor

A man's life was saved by Fort Benning emergency response personnel and good Samaritans after he suffered a heart attack outside Infantry Hall June 3.

Jimmy Lawson, 46, a construction worker, collapsed in the bed of a truck outside Infantry Hall after complaining of heartburn earlier that morning.

Maj. Paul Cunningham was looking for a parking space outside Infantry Hall when he noticed a commotion around one of the construction workers.

He was informed by Lawson's co-workers that Lawson was a diabetic and they thought he was having a "sugar attack." Cunningham began evaluating Lawson and found no pulse.

Before Cunningham began CPR, another bystander, who happened to be a medic, took over until Fort Benning firefighters Eric Webster, Craig Grooms and Mark Trzpuc responded to the scene.

"When we arrived at the scene, there were bystanders performing CPR," Webster said. "(Lawson) was blue in the face and he wasn't breathing on his own. If this had happened to him while he was alone at home ... "

Webster and Grooms hooked the automatic external defibrillator to Lawson's chest and waited for it to analyze his heart rhythm. The AED advised them to shock Lawson to get his heart going again.

"We shocked him two times before his heart began beating and he started to try to breathe," Webster said. "The AED is a very good life-saving tool."

Shortly after Lawson's heart started beating again, the paramedics arrived and took him to Martin Army Community Hospital.

Trzpuc, who's also an emergency medical technician, took over the oxygen mask for the paramedics to allow them to help Lawson in other areas.

"It takes six minutes without oxygen for brain cells to start dying and the person to suffer permanent brain damage," Trzpuc said.

Webster, Grooms and Trzpuc followed the paramedics to Martin Army. Lawson was later transferred to St. Francis Hospital in Columbus.

"He was a lucky man," Trzpuc said. "He was lucky that he collapsed where there was a bystander who knew CPR, and he was lucky we arrived on the scene early with an AED."

Keep safety first this summer

Spc. Nikki St. Amant

AAAAHHHH!
Once again, the land is basked in golden sunshine as we begin the ages old ritual of summer fun.

Gone are the icy winds and freezing rains. They go slowly but peacefully, escorted out to the cacophony of songbirds, crickets and small children who don't know how to be seen and not heard.

With the subtropical days of full-blown summer just around the corner, come nostalgic memories of seasons past.

I can remember so many wonderful things that make this season my favorite.

I almost died white water rafting in Tennessee one year. A shoe popped off and was floating away and I (with no life jacket on because I am INVINCIBLE WOMAN!) made a flying leap into the maelstrom to catch it.

I found myself clinging to a rock and struggling to get my head out of the torrential water often enough to not drown. Thank God for big brothers who come to the rescue!

On that same trip, a young man had too much to drink and decided to cliff dive from a ledge that was not open to the public.

It was a beautiful, deep lagoon, except for the rock, three feet under the surface, with which he collided. The genius then crawled out of the water delirious and pouring blood, walked onto the two-lane scenic highway and fell on his face. Luckily, he lived.

I remember camping with my dad back in the good old days when kids could live through anything, and I was allowed to take off into the forest alone at 5 years old. My dad would sit back at camp drinking beer with my uncles while I traipsed around the Smokies. Then I got lost. Thank God for friendly, non-pedophiliac hikers!

I recall several summers when a normal 95-degree, 95 percent humidity day turned into hell on earth because in the course of having a good time with friends, I neglected to drink anything between sunup and sundown.

It was never full-blown heatstroke, I don't think, but the vomiting and sweats and inability to stand sure put a damper on the next day's activities. Thank God for moms who are nurses and have no qualms about force-hydrating you under threat of permanent house arrest.

And then there was the summer we went to visit family in Biloxi and a drunken driver hit my cousin head on as she was coming home to have dinner with us. There is no cute little remark about that. She was 23, and she didn't make it to the hospital.

Summer can be awesome or it can turn into tragedy. I got lucky most of the time. Don't play the odds. Be safe and chances are you'll enjoy years of wonderful memories.

A life jacket: $29.99. A bottle of sunscreen: $3.99. A bottle of water: $1.19. Adult supervision: 10 seconds every minute. Not drinking and driving (or boating or swimming): free. Making it through summer to remember it fondly in winter: PRICELESS.

Motorcycle safety needs to be top priority

Motorcycles are high-risk vehicles due to increased acceleration, sensitive steering, reduced visibility to others and lack of protection.

The fatality rate is more than seven times greater on a motorcycle than on four-wheeled vehicles.

To combat this risk, Soldiers, on and off post, and Department of Defense civilians on official duty status who ride motorcycles must adhere to the following standards.

• Wear the proper safety equipment, including a high visibility reflective jacket or vest, a Department of Transportation approved helmet, full fingered gloves, leather boots or over-the-ankle shoes, long pants, long sleeved shirt or jacket and eye protection. Eye protection must be shatter resistant glasses, goggles or face shields.

• Complete a Motorcycle Safety Foundation Course. The course is available through the Fort Benning Safety Office located in Building 18 on Vibbert Ave. For more information, call 545-4010.

• Drive with high beam lights on and motorcycles need to be equipped with the rear view mirrors on each side of the handlebars.

• Never loan a motorcycle to anyone unfamiliar with it.

Enforcing the standards, on and off duty, is the responsibility of military and civilian leaders at all levels. This applies to all activities from military training to recreation. I empower anyone, regardless of rank, with the authority and the obligation to correct unsafe behavior and conditions. Follow me safely!

Commanding General

All-American fans should show all-American respect

Annette Fournier
USAIC Public Affairs

One of my favorite summertime events is heading out to the ballpark to take in the great American pastime. Nothing beats a great baseball game, even without the peanuts and Cracker Jacks.

As the Atlanta Braves took the field there were wild cheers from the slightly tipsy crowd watching the game from the restaurant area of the stadium. Then came time for the official beginning to every sporting event, the National Anthem.

At the "please stand," most of the fans stood. OK, most stood with their beers in their hand, which prevented them from removing their baseball caps or covering their heart.

I had a hard time hearing the choir of schoolkids singing "Oh, say can you see..." over the chatter of people in the bar. Especially two women sitting nearby, talking loudly during the song. Although they did quiet down long enough to take bites of pizza and sip drinks.

One wore a tight tank-top with the flag stretched across the front.

Now I'm not a real stickler for rules. I figure as long as you turn toward the flag and stand quietly and respectfully (preferably without the beer glass so you can cover your heart), the sentiment is there, which is what's important.

It takes so little effort to pay respect to the flag, but it means so much. Taking the time to respect the flag is honoring the generations who have defended our freedoms. We're united by a remarkable culture which honors freedom, democracy, and human rights, sadly still a rarity in much of the world. It's important to remember and be thankful for what we have in this nation.

As Flag Day and the 230th birthday of the Army are celebrated June 14, I hope Americans will stand up and show their colors. Maybe people will even set their beer down during the anthem.

Christmas spirit can't take summer off

Bridgett Siter
Bayonet staff

Only 198 days till Christmas. Don't you hate that? The countdown, I mean. It starts earlier each year, artificial urgency contrived to jump start your holiday fervor.

It has the opposite effect, on me, anyway. It's a real countdowner. I don't want to think about Christmas till the mercury drops below 50.

But something happened a couple of weeks ago that put me in a jolly frame of mind. (Stop right here if you don't want to be in a jolly frame of mind. I understand. It's hot outside.)

I was standing in a long line in the sweltering heat of the PX parking lot during one of those really good tent sales. I'm talking 75 percent off. My cart was loaded.

So was every else's, which is why the line was inching along.

The heat tends to make me grouchy, so I'm not usually chatty or witty or generally convivial at moments like this. Even 75 percent off can't put a smile on my face in this kind of heat.

I noticed the gal with the cart behind me. It was loaded with DVD players, good and cheap. Must've been six or seven boxes, and she didn't look to have six or seven kids.

Now the heat, which put a damper on my mood, didn't make a dent in my curiosity. I'm nosy by nature. So I faked a smile.

"You must be Christmas shopping for everyone," I said, leaving the statement dangling in the heat without a question mark.

"No, I'm getting them for Santa's Castle. It's hard to find good gifts for teenagers, you know," she said.

And she said it without even faking a smile, which means she was every bit as miserable as me.

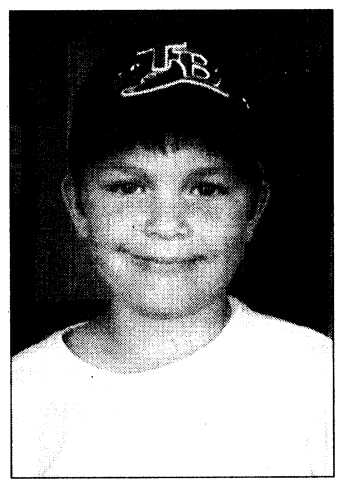
But I was standing there being miserable while waiting to buy some really great gifts for ME. She was standing there being miserable thinking about some kid somewhere who would rather have a DVD player for Christmas than a cheesy snow globe or a sweater.

We didn't chat anymore. It was too hot, and my curiosity was sated. But as I waited — and waited and waited — I wondered how many opportunities I've missed already to make somebody's Christmas.

How many times have I passed a clearance rack and thanked God my boys don't play with action figures anymore?

How many sales fliers have I ignored? How many coupons have I failed to clip because

• we already have one of those thingys, (Doesn't everybody?)



• my kids are too old for that, or

• Christmas is six months away?

I'm feeling like a bit of a Scrooge and wondering how long it will take to train myself to shop less selfishly. I hope it doesn't take long. There are only 198 days 'till Christmas.

Audie Murphy Club unveils memorial wall

NCOs pay tribute to WWII hero

Kris Gonzalez
Bayonet staff

Though he only stood 5 feet 5 inches in his 46 years of life, Audie Murphy was a giant on the battlefield and his unwavering bravery in the face of war gave him a legacy that Fort Benning Soldiers hope to make last a lifetime.

The NCOs of the Fort Benning Sergeant Audie Murphy Club dedicated a new memorial wall honoring the man for whom their club is named.

The SAMC unveiled the exhibit on the wall in front of the Donovan Library in Infantry Hall June 2. It is adorned with photos and accolades belonging to Murphy, who served with the 3rd Infantry Division and became the most decorated Soldier of World War II.

Sgt. 1st Class Michael Morton, SAMC president, designed the wall after researching Murphy's history and war records, and found that this little man was a man with "a lot of heart."

"He's the epitome of selfless service," Morton said. "His motto was 'You lead from the front.' That's exactly what the man did. I could only hope to be as honorable as he was."

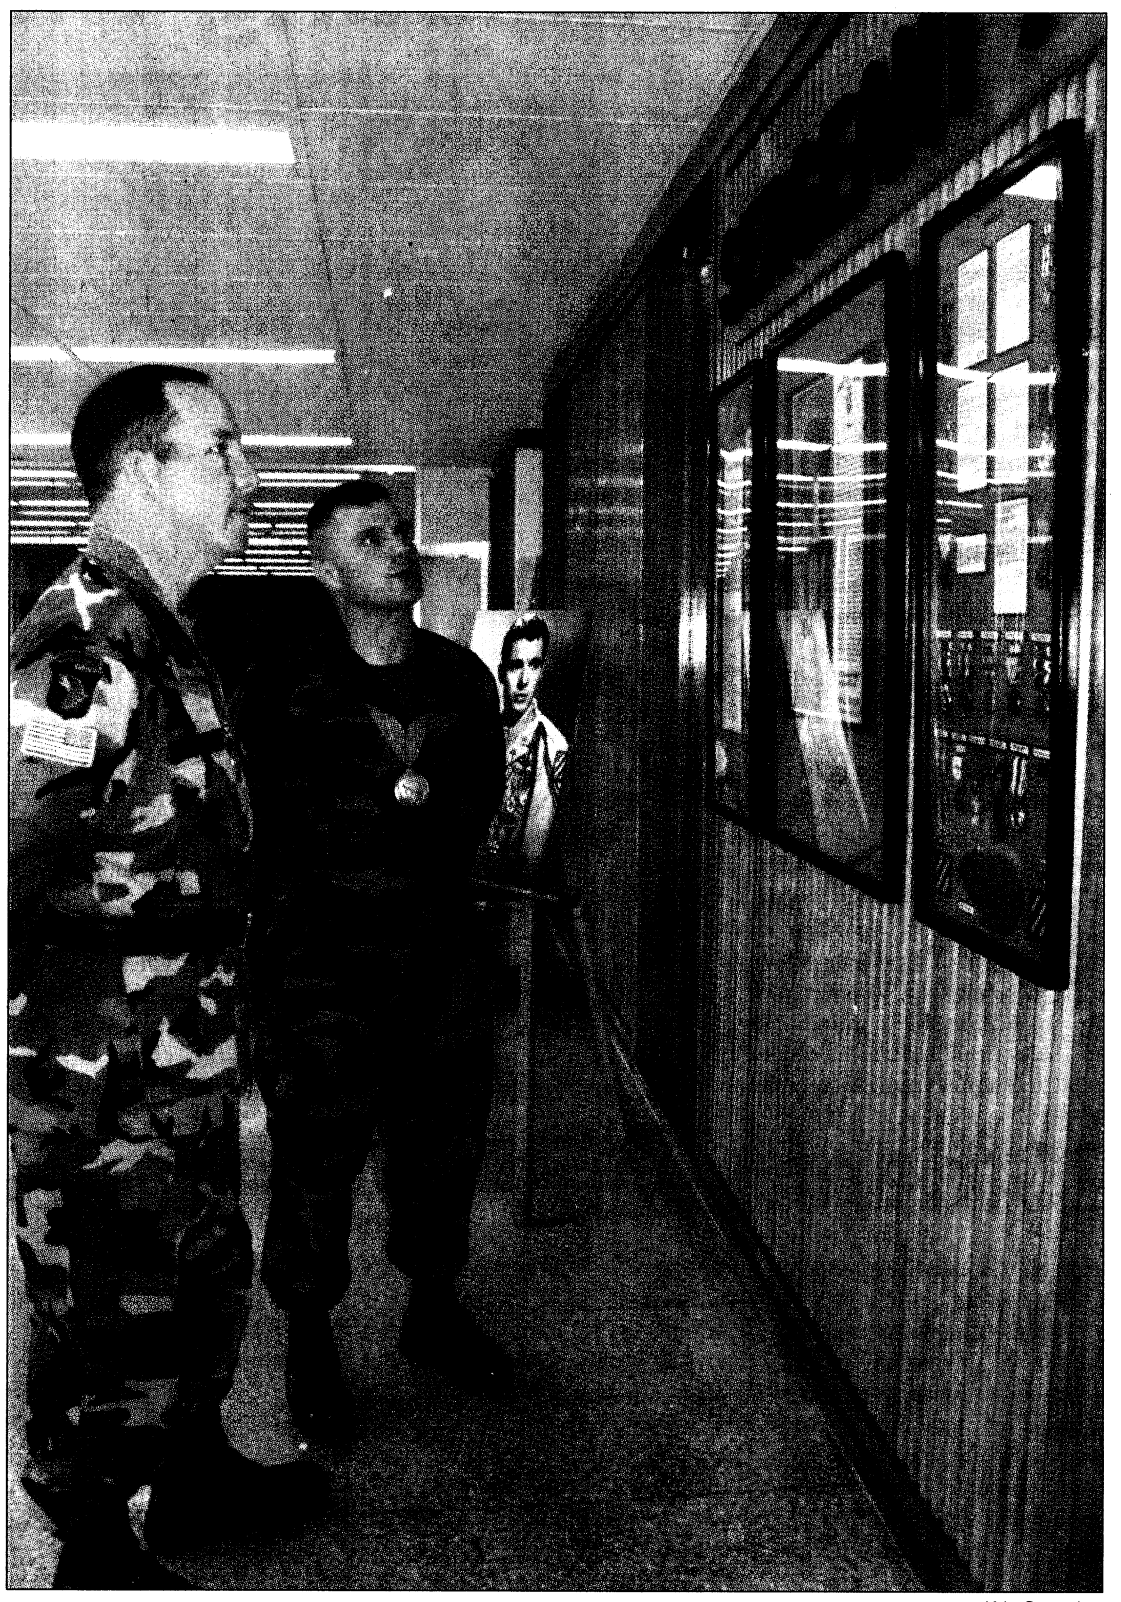
With the help of SAMC vice president, Staff Sgt. Salina Hernandez, club members, and eight media specialists from the Training Support Center, Morton launched the project to highlight Murphy's military career and to honor the NCOs who strive to follow in his boot prints.

Bobby Jones, visual media lead for TSC said everyone on his team wanted to work on the project when they read about Audie Murphy and felt Morton's passion.

"The memorial shows it doesn't matter how tall you are or where you come from or how many times you've been rejected," Jones said. "If you work hard, stay focused, strive to be the best, and always do the right thing, people will notice."

Jones said that every day, at least one person working on the project would point out another fact about Audie Murphy that was "just unbelievable."

Murphy enlisted June 30, 1942, as a private when he was 18 years old.



By 1944, he was a staff sergeant and had served with B Company, 1st Battalion, 15th Infantry Regiment in North Africa, Italy and France.

That same year, Murphy was discharged from the Army and commissioned as a second lieutenant. He became the commander of B Co., and led his men in an assault near Holtzwihr, France, against an approaching enemy of more than 200 troops armed with six tanks.

For his efforts in the counterattack, which saved his company and forced the Germans to withdraw, Murphy was awarded the Medal of Honor.

Maj. Gen. Benjamin Freakley said Murphy's heroism represents the truest example of living Army values.

"He was highly loyal to his fellow Soldiers. Clearly, to be adorned like that," said Freakley as he pointed to a portrait of Murphy wearing 33 awards, "(it) gives you a picture of what personal courage is all about."

Kris Gonzalez

Sgt. 1st Class Michael Morton, right, shows Maj. Gen. Benjamin Freakley the new memorial wall dedicated to Audie Murphy in front of the Donovan Library.

Morton thanked the commanding general for his support in completing the project and inducted Freakley as an honorary member of the SAMC.

"General Freakley is the kind of person we look for in our members," said Morton. "He's always looking out for the welfare of Soldiers and their families."

> "His motto was 'You lead from the front.'"

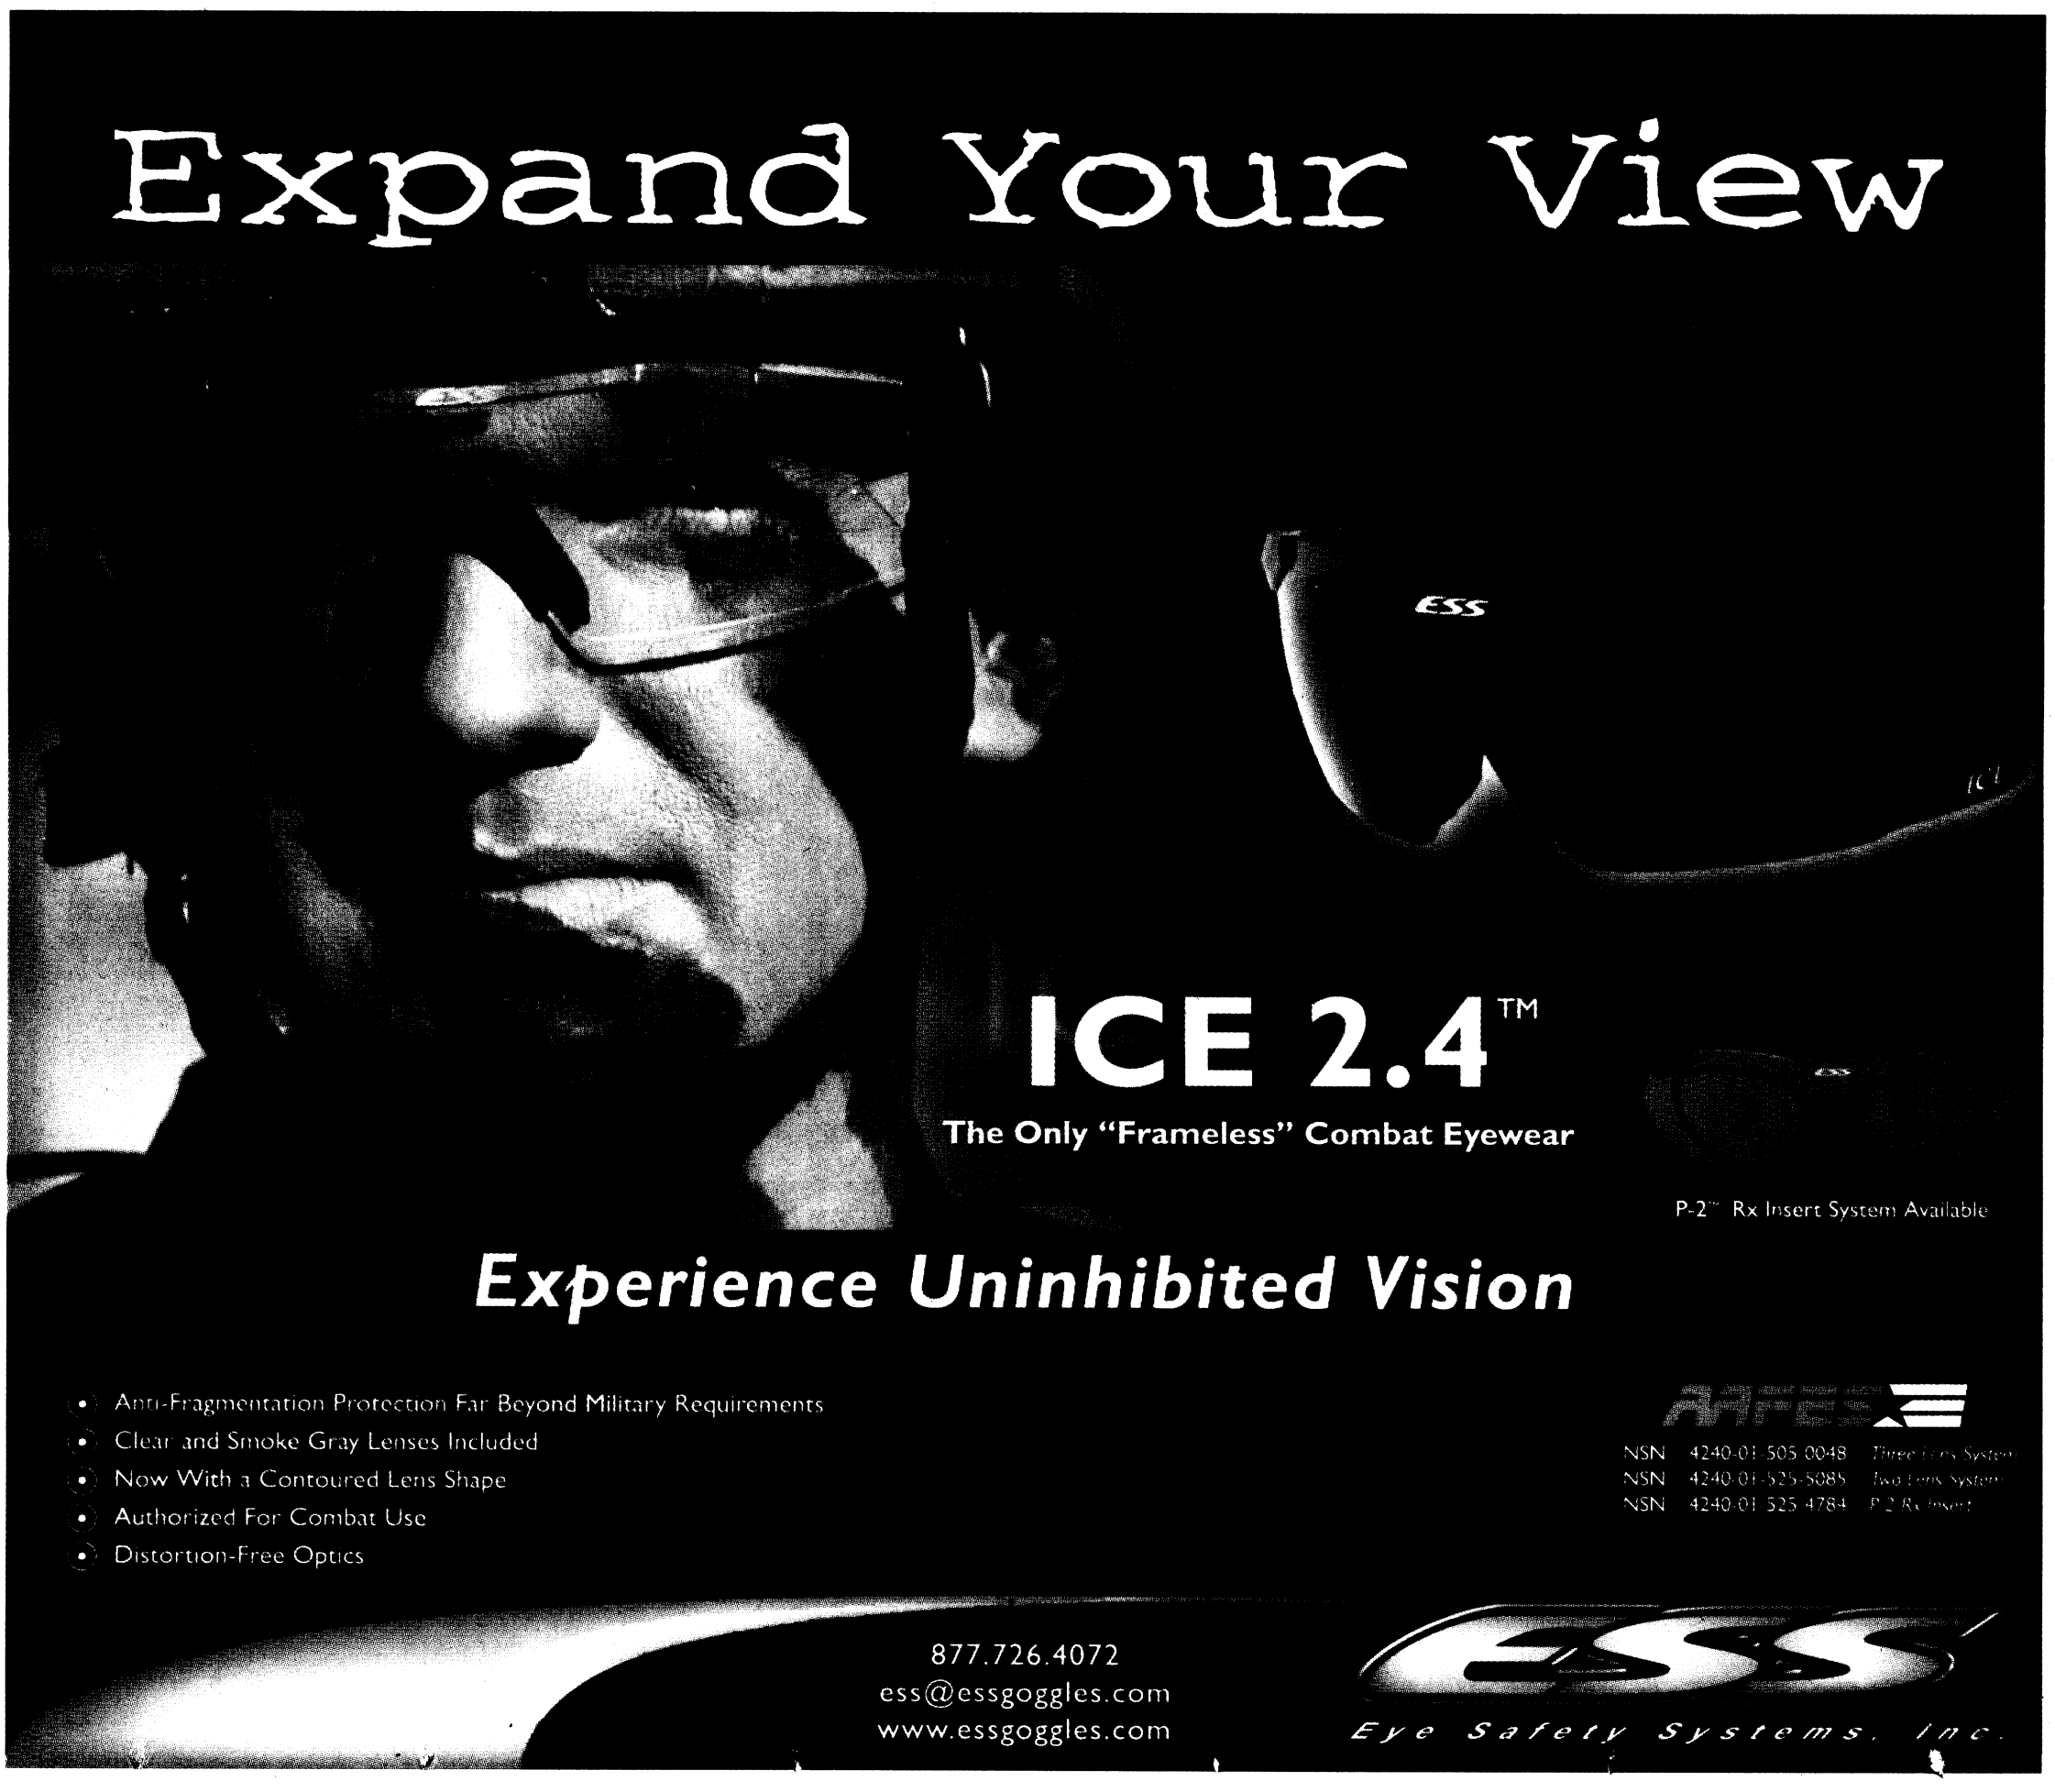
"I'm shocked," Freakley said. "It's very humbling. I know what the NCOs have to go through to get in the Sergeant Audie Murphy Club. It's a great honor for them to consider me for this."



The SAMC will hold an induction ceremony at noon today in Classroom 6 Infantry Hall for two NCOs selected to join the club —Staff Sgt. Heidi Miranda, of Headquarters and Headquarters Co. and Staff Sgt. Mark Strong, of B Co., both with the 2nd Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment. They are the first two NCOs to be inducted in two years.

To be selected as a member, each NCO was recommended by someone in their chain of command, based on their level of proficiency, professionalism and motivation, Morton said. They competed at formal boards at the battalion, brigade and installation levels.

"They can't just go to the board and answer questions. They have to be super strong NCOs," Morton said.

"Being a member of the SAMC is one of the highest honors an NCO can receive," he said. "Inducting a member is like saying 'This is the professional of professionals.' That's the kind of person they want, the best of the best."

Holt ready for 'Meeting the Challenge'

Accepts 30th AG guidon from Richardson

Melissa House
Bayonet staff

Soldiers of the 30th Adjutant General Battalion (Reception) bid farewell to outgoing commander, Lt. Col. Christine Richardson, and welcomed Lt. Col. Charlie Holt in a change of command ceremony Tuesday.

Richardson, who took command of the battalion in May 2003, earned praise from subordinates and superiors alike.

Col. William Gallagher, the Basic Combat Training Brigade commander, relayed the words of a noncommissioned officer in the battalion.

"She listened to each one of us, but there's no doubt who was in charge," the NCO told Gallagher.

Gallagher said Richardson had earned the respect and confidence of every Soldier she worked with by developing a "remarkable command climate."

"You built and sustained momentum," Gallagher told Richardson. "We can see your standards of excellence."

Gallagher said Richardson was instrumental in making "new Soldiers, who arrived neutral — leave fired up."

"You took the piece of the Army entrusted to you," he said, "and you built up its strengths and shored up its weaknesses. And the 30th AG has been recognized as the best reception battalion in the Army. You've been a superb battalion commander and when you drive out the Fort Benning gate, you will be missed."

The 30th AG Bn. was constituted in 1942, deploying overseas to Algeria to process Soldiers returning from hospitals and handling combat replacements. Deactivated in 1945, the unit was reactivated at Fort Benning in 1983 and is one of only five battalions of its kind in the Army.

The 30th AG Bn. supports both the BCTB and the Infantry Training Brigade, receiving, processing and shipping new Soldiers to units for initial training, living up to its motto, "Meeting the Challenge."

Richardson said she began command with a "vision of having a first-rate organization and providing fully processed Soldiers."

Melissa House

Lt. Col. Charlie Holt, left, accepts the 30th Adjutant General Battalion (Reception) guidon from Basic Combat Training Brigade commander, Col. William Gallagher Tuesday.

"I gave that vision to the officers, NCOs and civilians," she said. "They took off and never looked back. In the past two years, we've processed more than 40,000 Soldiers."

She said she was fortunate to be part of a unit with a good command climate and thanked her company commanders and first sergeants for always giving her an honest day's work.

"You are the best in the Army," she said. "I will truly miss being around you."

The last eight months of her command, she said were the best once her "battle buddy," Command Sgt. Maj. Larry Daniel, joined the unit.

"To the Soldiers out there — many of you have only been in the Army since Wednesday night," Richardson said, "Thank you. You are about to embark on the greatest adventure of your life. Do not let your country down."

Richardson's next assignment is with the Deputy Chief of Staff of the Army, G-1, as the chief of the Officer Selection Board Policy Branch.

Holt, who began his career as an enlisted Soldier in the Georgia Army National Guard, earned his commission from North Georgia College in 1986.

His previous assignments include the 1st Battalion, 5th Infantry Regiment, Korea; 2nd Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment; Germany, Alaska and Puerto Rico.

His awards and decorations include the Defense Meritorious Service Medal, the Joint Service Achievement Medal and Airborne, Pathfinder and Expert Infantryman Badges.

Gallagher said Holt's background, made him "ideally prepared for command," and felt Holt would sustain the battalion's momentum.

"I am proud the Army has given me this opportunity," Holt said. "I will do my best to accomplish the battalion's mission."

1st Bn., 29th Inf., wins DA maintenance award

Melissa House

Soldiers from the 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment, accepted a Department of the Army maintenance award Wednesday in Infantry Hall.

Maj. Gen. Benjamin Freakley, commanding general, presented the 2005 Superior Performance of Duty in Maintenance Excellence award before the battalion's quarterly training briefing.

"This great regiment is about excellence, Freakley said. "Today's award is one more indicator of how great this battalion is in the regiment," Freakley said. "I didn't want this to come in the mail. This award is no small thing whatsoever."

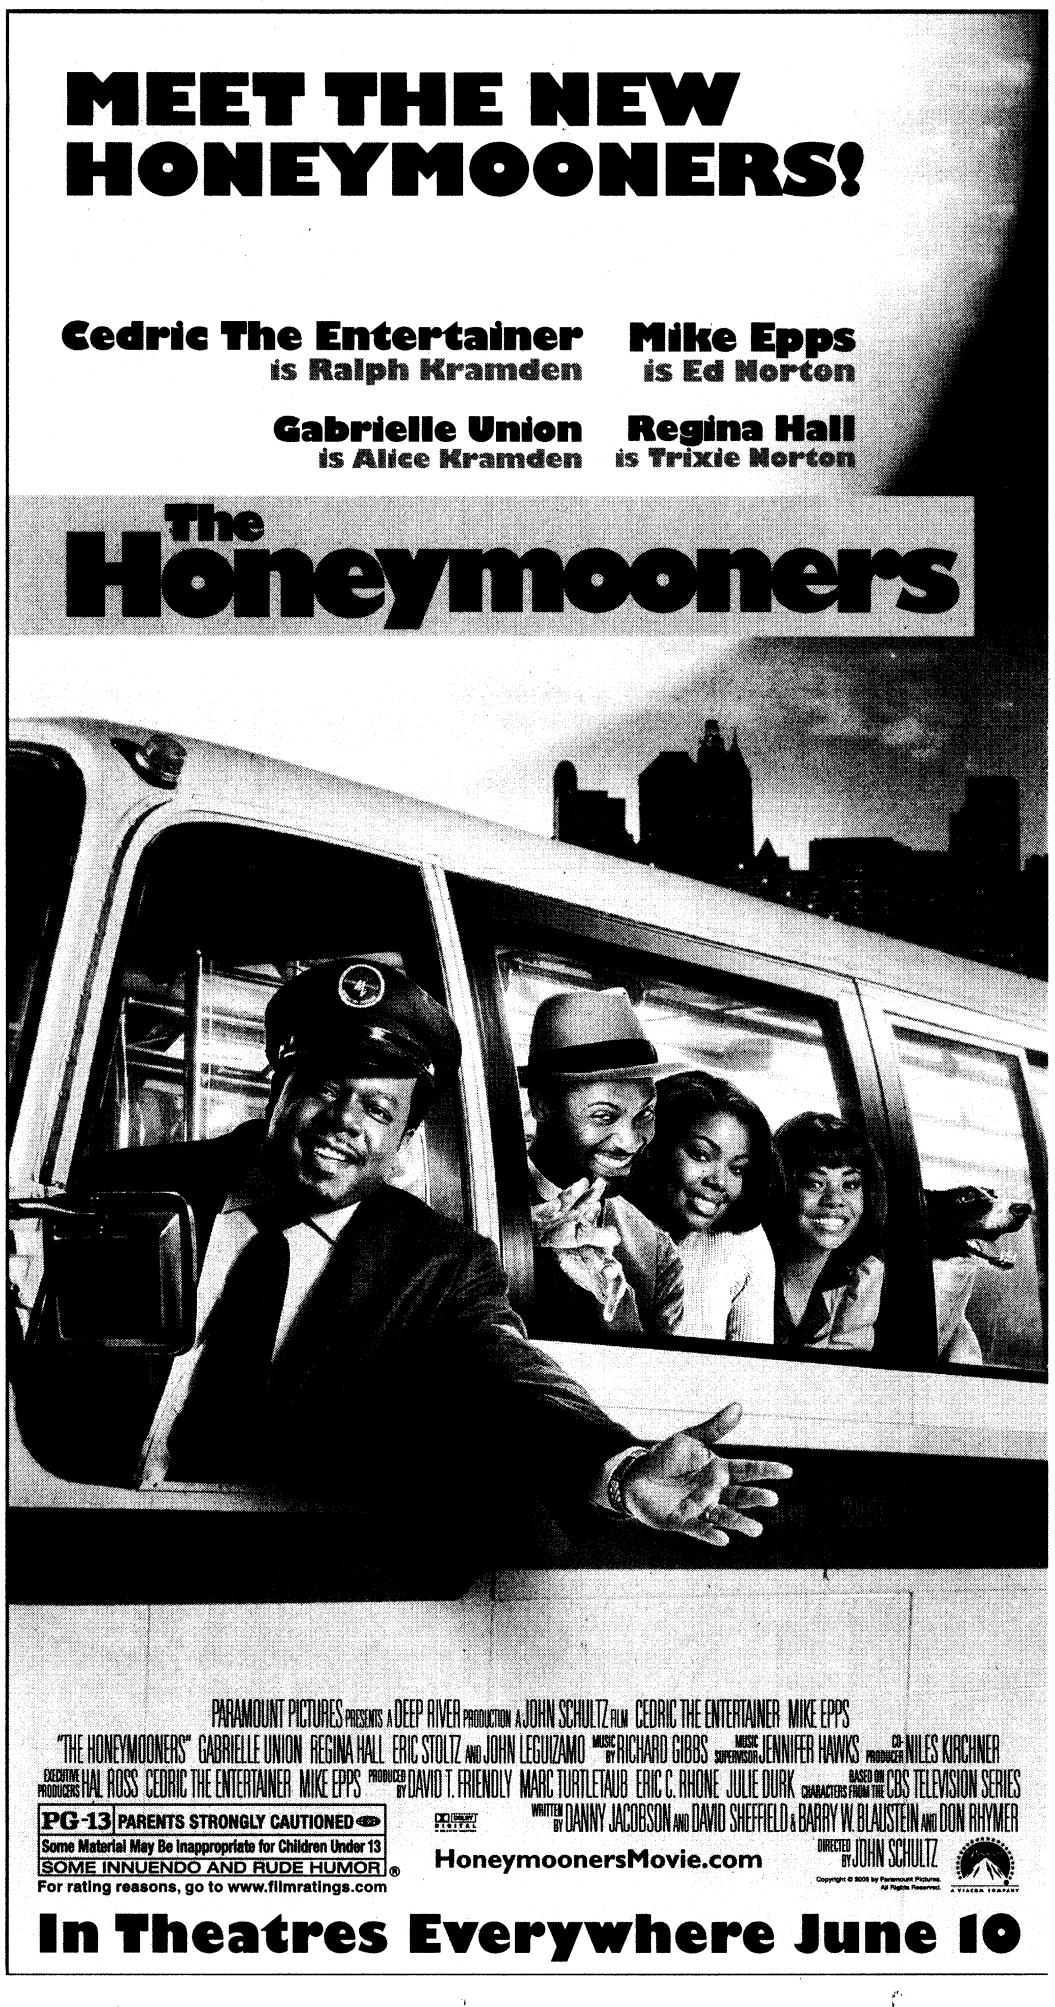
And this is not the first time the unit has received a maintenance excellence award, said Master Sgt. Deric Overton, the battalion motor sergeant. Last year, the battalion was the runner-up in the training and Doctrine Command in the Table of Distribution and Allowances Large Unit Category.

But, for Overton and Spc. Norman Washington, the battalion's Unit Level Logistics System clerk, there was no pressure to win.

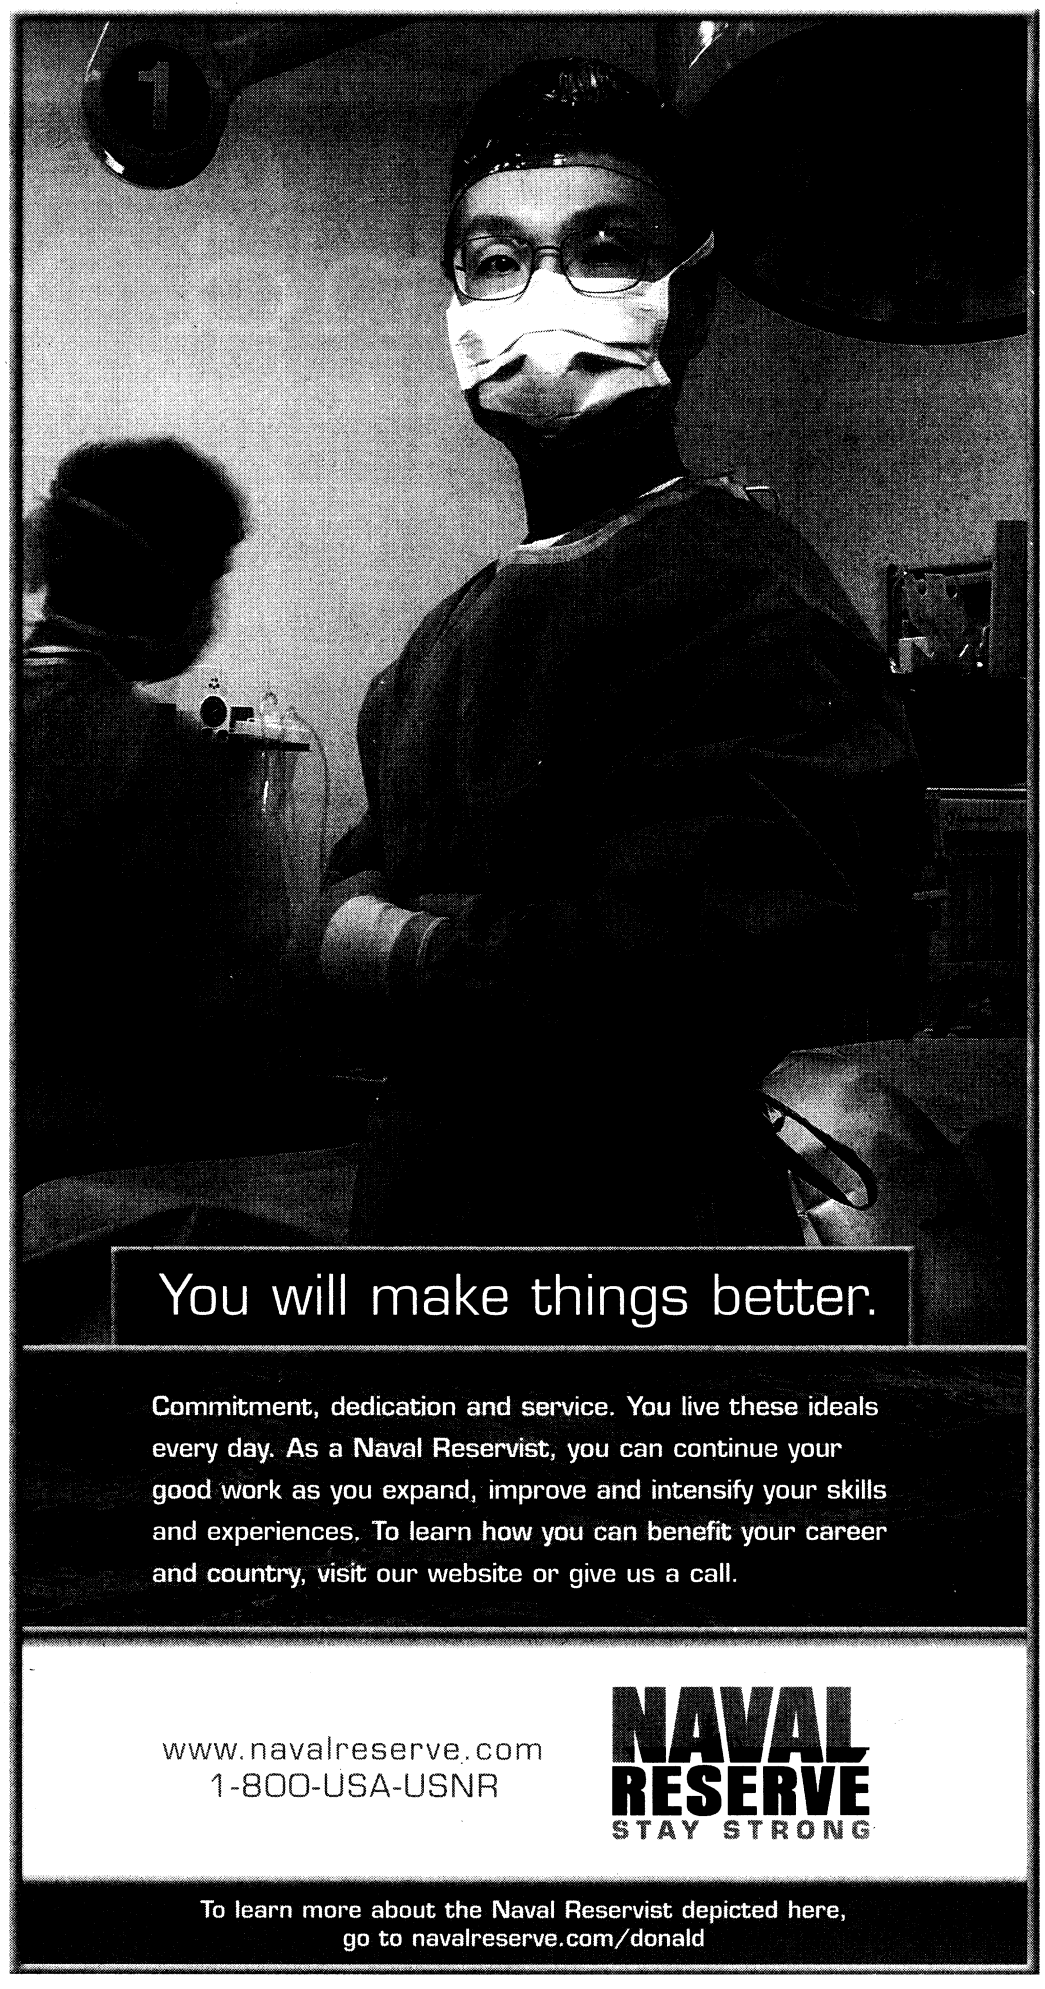
"It just feels good to try to keep that standard," Washington said.

Overton said the unit provides vehicles for "anyone on post who needs them," from their fleet of 75 tracked and 90 wheeled vehicles. The unit supports all schools on Fort Benning, including the Infantry Officer Basic and Primary Leadership Development Courses and the master gunner course.

The battalion's maintenance section has approximately 70 Soldiers and civilians keeping the vehicles up and running.



The section has to prepare a book containing information on the maintenance sections and how they operate, the unit's operational tempo and the missions it supports.

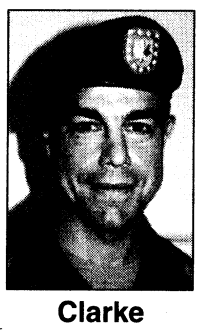


Then, Overton said, a team arrives at the motor pool and inspects every area of the operation.

"The systems we have set up can't be beat," Overton said. "This is how we operate every day. The team can come back any day and we'll be doing things the same. We don't just do all this for the award inspection."

And the award, he said, was the payoff for a lot of hard work.

The award evaluated the unit's mission accomplishment, effective resource management, innovative logistics management and Soldier quality of life.



CID Battalion bids commander farewell

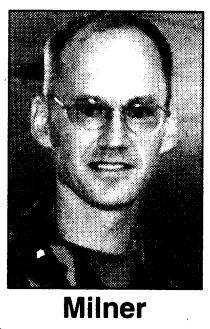
After receiving the Meritorious Service Medal in a private ceremony attended by Soldiers and his immediate family, Lt. Col. Gary Milner bid farewell to the Soldiers of the Fort Benning Criminal Investigation Division and turned command over to Lt. Col. Kevin Clarke June 7.

"What sort of accolades do you give a fellow who is so utterly professional, so imbued with common sense and is such an exceptional leader and Soldier?" asked Col. Dennis Thompson, commander of the 3rd Military Police Group, CID.

"Fifteen years ago, when Gary Milner was an Officer Advance Course student, I was his small group leader," Thompson said.



Clarke

"I knew then that Gary was an exceptional officer who would do great things for the Army.

"He has not failed in this expectation. He has led this great unit ably and well for the last two years.

Thompson said Milner "has trained, equipped, deployed, redeployed and reintegrated more CID Soldiers than most other like-size organizations in the entire CID community."

The Benning CID Battalion has eight subordinate units located throughout the Southeast United States, Puerto Rico and Honduras.

Milner

During the past three years, about 25 percent of the battalion's Soldiers deployed in support of Operation Iraqi Freedom, Operation Enduring Freedom and the Department of Defense's Criminal Investigative Task Force.

"The Army is a great place," Thompson said, "and you do a lot to ensure the values of the Army are maintained."

Milner has been reassigned to serve as director of Plans and Operations for the U.S. Military Police School at Fort Leonard Wood, Mo.

"It has been my honor for the past two years to command these awesome Soldiers we call special agents," he said.

"The agents are supported by the best civilians and support Soldiers in the Army, and together we pulled off some pretty miraculous things.

"These outstanding men and women are called on by the Army to investigate some of the most serious crimes committed," he said. "No matter what the call or the location, you have stepped up and given the Army a first class product. Thank you for what you do every day."

Milner said Soldiers solved approximately 95 percent of the 1,600 investigations conducted during his two-year command.

Milner welcomed Clarke to his new command.

"Cherish every day, because the next two years are going to fly by. The battalion is ready for new challenges," he said.

Clarke, a native of Edison, N.J., entered the service as an enlisted Infantryman in 1986.

While serving in the Army Reserve, he was commissioned in 1988 as a distinguished honor graduate through ROTC from Rowan State College.

Prior to his arrival at Fort Benning, Clarke was the Anti-terrorism and Force Protection Branch chief, U.S. Southern Command in Miami, Florida.

Required safety course 'good medicine,' students say

All riders on post must take basic or advanced course

Practice what you preach.

Those are the words Chaplain (Maj.) David Acuff lives by. That's why he spent June 3 on his motorcycle, practicing slow curves and steady brakes on the scorching black-topped pavement of Lawson Army Airfield. Acuff, who took up motorcycle riding more than 30 years ago, preaches practice to new cyclists.

"Repetition. It's a good thing," he said.

Acuff was one of six students in the Experienced Rider Course, one of two classes taught by retired Sgt. 1st Class Mike Snapp, of Freedom Rider Training, the company contracted to certify anyone and everyone who rides on Fort Benning. The four-hour ERC is for riders with at least six months or 3,000 miles under their belt. The 20-hour Basic Rider Course is for everyone else.

Certification is mandatory for anyone who wants to ride on Fort Benning, Soldier or civilian. More than a year ago, Fort Benning's commanding general evaluated the post's motorcycle policies and launched an up-tempo safety and education initiative.

Why? There are 1,175 motorcycles registered on Fort Benning, but that's a pittance compared to the 66,000 registered automobiles.

There is no comparison, said Snapp, noting that three Fort Benning Soldiers have died in motorcycle crashes since the beginning of the year. One crash also killed the Soldier's spouse.

"In a car, when a bug hits your windshield, it's no big deal," he said. "But a fifty caliber sniper beetle will knock you off your bike. You've got to be prepared."

How does one prepare for a sniper beetle or any one of the countless "variables" a cyclist encounters on the road?

You can't know everything that's waiting around the bend, Snapp said, but you can "maximize your safety" in various ways. For instance, you should always be in the right frame of mind.

Bridgett Siter

Mike Snapp, left, of Freedom Rider Training, teaches motorcycle safety courses on Fort Benning. Everybody who rides a motcrcycle on Fort Benning must be certified.

That means ...

"Different things to different people," he said. "I've gotten on my bike before, and it just didn't feel right. I parked it. You've got to be in tune with your bike and your mental acuity. You can't have an off day on a bike."

Amen to that, said Acuff, who took a spill during a Sunday afternoon ride in 1987.

"The best safety lesson for a motorcyclist is to slap that pavement one time. You'll think twice," Acuff said. "You can quote me on that."

There's no substitute for experience and common sense, Snapp said, but a motorcycle course, even for the seasoned rider, can mean the difference between life and death.

"You may know it all, and you may have known it so long it's second nature," he said. "But it's a good idea to take a refresher course to bring it back to the forefront of your memory, to remind yourself the right way to do things."

Snapp uses teaching techniques familiar to most Soldiers — drills and acronyms.

"SEE — search, evaluate and execute," he told his students, and "T-CLOCS? Somebody tell me what that stands for? Tires, controls, lights, oil, chassis, side stand. Right. Check your bike before you ride — every time."

Spc. Nathan Murray, who's been riding his Harley seven months, said the BRC was good medicine.

"It helps. I've learned some good maneuvering techniques," he said. "The drills I'm familiar with, but it's good to practice."

Snapp offers free motorcycle safety classes every weekend. Upon completion, students will receive a certification card that will be honored on any Department of Defense installation.

It has no expiration date, but Snapp recommends a refresher course now and then.

Applications for the course are available at Fort Benning's Safety Office, Building 18 on Vibbert Avenue.

CRC mission becomes more complex

Deploys Soldiers worldwide

Bridgett Siter
Bayonet staff

CRC could stand for Confusing, Really Confusing. But it doesn't.

It stands for CONUS Replacement Center. CONUS is an acronym for Continental United States. So it follows that the CRC is actually the Continental United States Replacement Center. Which means what?

Nowhere on Fort Benning will you find a more complex mission — much less a complex name — or an eclectic group of "students" than the CRC, the gated "village" off Highway 280 in the Harmony Church area of post, less than a mile from the Ranger Training Brigade.

Command Sgt. Maj. Stuart Smith has been at the CRC one year. It didn't take him long to recognize the common misconceptions about the center or its mission.

"This is not a Reserve component organization," Smith said, though two Reserve units are currently working there.

"We don't mobilize, we deploy," he said. A layperson might not know the difference.

And, he said, "eighty percent of our deployees are civilians." Who knew?

Fort Benning's CRC was stood up in 1995 to supply individual replacements to units stationed in the Balkans. Now, the center is responsible for preparing individuals, as opposed to units, to deploy to any of a number of areas around the world to "plug in" to jobs where they're needed.

The CRC is comprised of five companies. Headquarters deals with redeploying individuals — those returning from overseas assignments — and D Company deals exclusively with Individual Ready Reserve Soldiers.

In two-week cycles, Companies A, B and C take servicemen and women from every branch, active and Reserve, civilian contractors, linguists, employees with the Army and Air Force Exchange Services, the Red Cross, the Drug Enforcement Agency, the Defense Intelligence Agency and so on, through a series of classes to prepare them for deployment.

You name it, if they're going overseas, they'll "process through" one of two CRCs, here or at Fort Bliss, Texas, which deploys exclusively to Iraq, Smith said.

This year, for the fourth year in a row, Fort Benning's CRC will process more than 12,000 individuals, 25 percent more annually than the center typically processed before the Global War on Terrorism. It's a monumental task, given the current state of affairs abroad, Smith said.

Every Soldier must be a warrior, but every individual, Soldier or not, must be prepared for service in a potentially hostile environment.

That means AAFES employees who have never worn an Army uniform will learn to recognize an IED. It means civilian contractors will learn a little battlefield first aid, the basics of search and seizure, how to deal with the media and what to do in the event of a nuclear biological attack. And some individuals who have never handled a weapon will become familiar with the M-16 rifle and 9 mm handgun. Deployees get one day of training before qualifying with both weapons.

"We have one day to do what (the Basic Combat Training Brigade) and (the Infantry Training Brigade) does in two weeks of range training," said retired Command Sgt. Maj. George Mock, project manager for the Omega Training Group, which provides instructors for the CRC.

"Some of these people have never even held weapon before, but they will qualify before they leave here," he said.

As the "theater matures" in Iraq and Afghanistan, more and more jobs are filled by civilian contractors — builders, interpreters and the like, Mock said. Even now, the military is using servicemen and women in nontraditional jobs, as evidenced by the increase in the number of sailors who process through the CRC on their way to the desert.

"Everybody's a warrior now," Mock said. "We've got artillery patrolling and truck drivers being shot at. Everybody needs to have basic warrior skills. That's what we do here."

To make matters more complex, CRC instruction must be tailored to some degree to the individual's needs.

For some students, or "deployees" as they're called, that means "theater specific" training designed to prepare them for situations, dangers and culture unique to their destination.

"We have to be flexible in what we do," Mock said. "The training is always evolving, always subject to change, depending on what's happening over there. Right now we're doing (nuclear biological and chemical) training, but that could change. As you know, no WMDs have been found, and we're told some units pack their masks up when they get there. So maybe we'll quit teaching that. Who knows?"

A two-week cycle starts every Sunday with about 200 deployees, often more. Tents are sometimes needed to supplement the center's capacity to sleep 590.

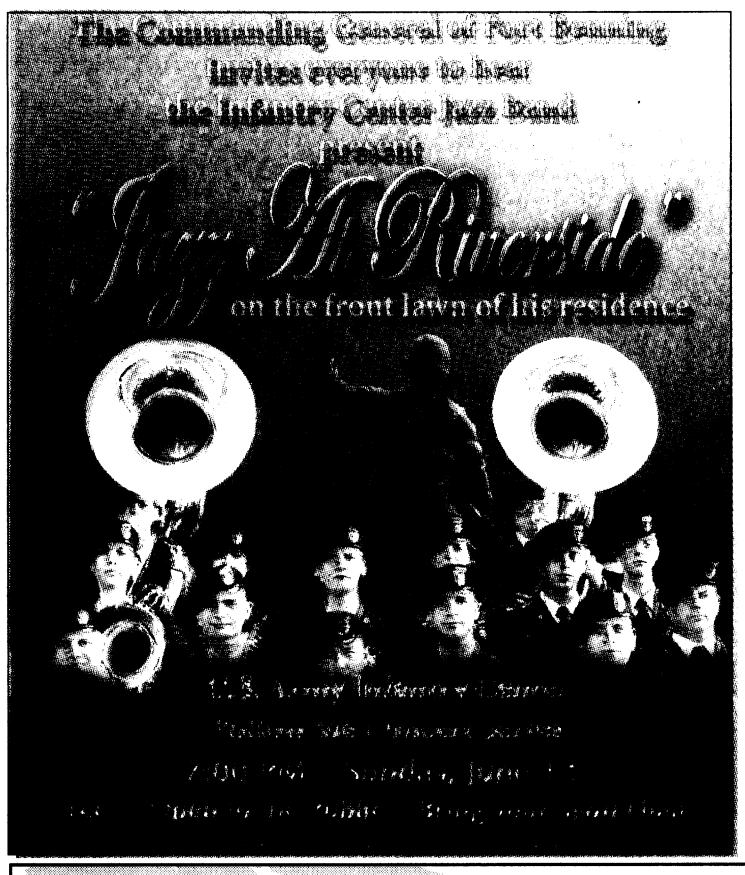
The first two days are spent inprocessing, paperwork and the like. Medical records are carefully screened, and if the deployee can't account for all his shots, well, he gets shot again. And again. It's not uncommon, Smith said, for a deployee to need seven or eight shots to bring his medical records up to date.

Wednesday of week one, the deployees are taught the Department of the Army's policies on fraternization, sexual harassment, suicide prevention, Army values, rules of engagement and the Geneva Convention.

"Death by PowerPoint," Smith called it. That's when deployees have to be nudged to stay awake.

But Wednesday afternoon, everyone's alert and attentive for the two hour block of instruction on IEDs, Mock said. They know it's the number one killer in theater.

The latter part of the first week, civilians and contractors will get basic, hands-on training, in first aid and NBC. That's it.



Bridgett Siter

At Fort Benning's CONUS Replacement Center, civilians and servicemen are trained to survive in a hostile environment and use weapons some of them have never handled.

The end of week one is the end of CRC training for non-military deployees. They're shipped out, effectively cutting the class size more than half.

The next week is spent on more intensive and extensive combat-related training, such as short-range marksmanship, attack and ambush procedures, movement under fire, handling grenades and machine guns, map reading and more. Much more.

"It's a complex mission, but it's essential to the way we're doing things in the (military) today," Smith said. "Other branches and civilian organizations are relying on us, because we already have the systems in place to do what we do. And we do it well."

Soldiers were accustomed to skirmishes as they swept the area in search of insurgents and weapons.

He said the raids were normally short and one-sided with his Soldiers coming out on top. McBride said when the militants began detonating daisy chain, antitank mines, he realized this raid was going to be different.

"When they started to blow those things," McBride said, "I thought 'Wow, it's going to be a rough one.'"

McBride and his men pushed forward to carry out the mission — to take over or destroy an Iraqi school being used to store weapons and ammunitions.

"Once you start a mission, you can't stop," McBride said. "There's no going back."

Soldiers of the troop's tank platoon maneuvered an M-1 Abrams tank to knock down a section of the 6-foot rock wall that surrounded the schoolyard, said 1st Sgt. Russell Reimers.

A Soldier who could see over the wall called in a report warning McBride of six insurgents moving in on him. McBride entered a classroom and crossed to the other side of the building. Once he caught a glimpse of the insurgents, McBride threw a fragmentation grenade

McBride recalled his thoughts after seeing that the blast had cut one Iraqi in half.

"A very long time ago an old warrior told me that an Infantryman's job is to kill people and break things," McBride said. "I accepted that as my lot in life, so as I killed and saw killing, I looked upon it as my job. I will forever feel that way and I am proud to be a warrior tested in battle."

McBride and Spc. Devon Rogers began focusing on the roof of the building, where militiamen were firing AK 47s at them. McBride said he felt confident knowing Rogers had his back.

"Rogers and I were on opposite ends of the balcony and tossed our grenades to the roof from there on the count of three," McBride said. "It is a great thing to trust a Soldier."

After securing the rooftop, McBride and his driver Spc. Nicholas Pangelinan climbed to the roof to make sure it was clear. It was not until they were ready to come down that they fully understood how exposed they were. They looked at each other as if to ask, "What the heck are we doing up here?" McBride said.

They climbed down to join the rest of the Soldiers as they continued to pummel the enemy and secure the site. When the smoke cleared, McBride and his Soldiers had killed 10 insurgents and captured one 120 mm mortar system, two 82 mm mortar systems, AK 47s, RPGs and ammunition.

The day after the raid, the Mahdi army sent three militiamen to surrender to the American forces.

On June 6, Moqtada al-Sadr issued an announcement ordering a cease-fire in Najaf and Kufa. The truce lasted only until August, but McBride said he and his comrades set the stage for future operations against the Mahdi army and the rest of the Iraqi insurgency.

A year later, Fort Benning Commanding General Maj. Gen. Benjamin Freakley awarded McBride the Silver Star.

"It's great to be in the company of heroes," Freakley said. "To stand in the presence of a man who put his life in the hands of the enemy, that's the kind of man I want to be around."

McBride credits the tough training he's had in his 18-year military career for "pulling off" what he did in Iraq, but he also acknowledged that even the most realistic training doesn't completely prepare someone for the havoc of war.

"The simple fact of knowing there is no "green key" for your life tends to turn one up a notch," McBride said. "I have seen men who were not very skilled in training turn into fantastic warriors in battle and JRTC heroes forget which way is left and right."

McBride recognized the Soldiers of Iron Troop for maintaining cohesion during a battle in which they were split up to fight in different directions.

"Nothing that day nor any other day could have been done without a cohesive team effort," McBride said. "And having a team like that, you feel like nothing of this world can hurt you."

"I am so very proud of my men. They were magnificent warriors." McBride continued. "They shook the pillars of heaven that day."

He also thanked his wife, Patricia, and his two kids, Catie, 15, and Robert, 13, for their support.

"It makes what I do so much easier knowing that the home front is secure and that they accept what I do as a good thing," McBride said.

AEDs use a voice box, lights and text messages to guide the operator through a series of instructions and how to to apply the pads to a person's chest. The defibrillator then analyzes the heart rhythm and instructs the operator whether or not to shock the heart.

Defibrillators are set up in airports, government centers, museums, physician offices and other normally crowded locations around Columbus. AEDs are also found at MACH and on all emergency service vehicles.

"You never know when someone is going to collapse from a heart attack," Webster said. "The sooner you can get an AED in that situation the better. Anything you can do helps a person under those circumstances, even if it's just performing CPR until help arrives."

Webster said firefighters get very little opportunity to meet the families they help. But he's glad to know that they helped save Lawson.

"In our job field, nine out of ten times the situation does not turn out for the best," he said. "It's good to know that this time things worked out for the best."

Rising heat temperatures cause rising heat injuries

Use common sense outside under sun

Donna Hyatt
Bayonet staff

Born warm blooded, the human body constantly tries to maintain an even temperature. The warmer the environment becomes, the harder sweat glands work to cool the body.

According to the Centers for Disease Control, National Institute for Occupational Health and Safety, sweating is of no benefit unless it evaporates from the skin.

Fort Benning poses a special challenge to people. Excessive exposure to a hot and humid environment can bring about a variety of heat-induced disorders.

Lt. Col. Karen O'Brien, chief of Family and Community Medicine at Martin Army Community Hospital said that people need "to take frequent rest breaks, drink plenty of water, eat properly and avoid high exertion in the middle of the day.

"Because Soldiers (and their families) come here from all over the country, a lot of them from the north, they should take timed rest breaks, use shade, take cold showers or use air conditioning when they can," she said. "Cold water cools you down faster."

When feasible, the most stressful outdoor tasks should be performed during the cooler parts of the day (early morning or at night). If that's not possible, O'Brien recommended people take advantage of the buddy system in order to "watch for signs of poor coordination and staggering, dizziness, headaches, muscle cramps or difficulty performing tasks.

In most cases, treatment involves having the victim rest in a cool place and drink plenty of liquids. Soldiers who deteriorate or do not improve after resting for an hour should be evacuated.

Left untreated, heat exhaustion can lead to a much more serious condition known as heat stroke. This occurs when sweating becomes inadequate and the body's regulatory system fails. There is little warning when a person crosses the line.

In more serious cases of heat exhaustion, the victim may vomit or lose consciousness. The body temperature may be 103 to 105 degrees Fahrenheit, but the skin can be clammy, moist, or dry, and the complexion is pale or flushed.

According to the National Institute for Occupational Safety and Health, a heat stroke victim's skin quickly becomes hot, usually dry, red or spotted. Body temperature is about 105 degrees Fahrenheit or higher, and the victim is mentally confused, delirious, perhaps in convulsions, or unconscious. Unless the victim receives quick and appropriate treatment, death can occur. O'Brien said that "any loss of consciousness or significant change in behavior should be treated as heat stroke. Use rapid cooling methods to bring down body temperature."

In the field, Soldiers carry bedsheets soaked in coolers of ice water. Should anyone have significant behavioral changes or faint, they are stripped to their underwear and wrapped in the sheets. Any Soldier who requires this extreme heat-reducing measure should immediately be evacuated to the Martin Army Community Hospital emergency room.

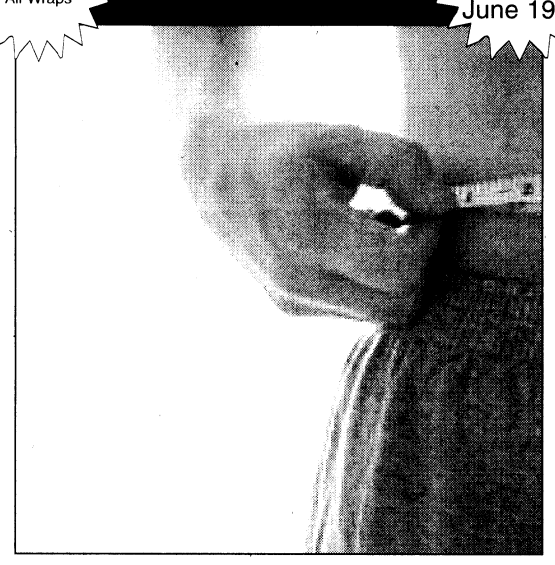
"Contrary to popular belief," O'Brien said, "people who are cooled rapidly with ice sheets do not go into shock. All Soldiers should be familiar with the location of Automatic External Defibrillators in case of cardiac arrest due to excessive heat.

"Those at home can take advantage of air conditioning, showers or the pool."

While the very young and elderly are at most risk for heat-related problems, O'Brien said anyone with skin problems such as sunburn or poison ivy, or taking allergy medications containing antihistamine are also at risk because the body's ability to sweat has been impaired.

People who are combating hypertension, diabetes, or are chronically ill or obese, are at an elevated risk for heat-related problems and should take extra precautions during heat spells.

While drinking plenty of water is recommended, drinking excessive amounts of water can deplete the body's sodium levels, leading to seizures, even death.



Known as "water intoxication" or hyponatremia, sometimes athletes participating in extreme events such as triathlons or long-distance running try to avoid dehydration by drinking too much water. Diluting some salt in the drinking water, or consuming a sports beverage, will help the body maintain a healthy balance of blood sodium. The NIOSH also recommends sufficient sleep and good nutrition to help maintain a high level of heat tolerance.

Things everyone should know about heat injury prevention

The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, Department of Health and Human Services offers the following tips:

- Drink more fluids, regardless of your activity level. Don't wait until you're thirsty to drink. If your doctor generally limits the amount of fluid you drink or has you on water pills, ask how much you should drink while the weather is hot.
- Don't drink liquids that contain caffeine, alcohol, or large amounts of sugar. These can actually cause you to lose more body fluid. Also, avoid very cold drinks because they can cause stomach cramps.
- Stay indoors and, if at all possible, stay in an air-conditioned place. If your home does not have air conditioning, go to the shopping mall or public library. Even a few hours spent in air conditioning can help your body stay cooler when you go back into the heat.
- Electric fans may provide comfort, but when the temperature is in the high 90s, fans will not prevent heat-related illness. Taking a cool shower or bath, or moving to an air-conditioned place is a much better way to cool off.
- Wear lightweight, light-colored, loose-fitting clothing.
- Never leave anyone in a closed, parked vehicle.
- If you must be out in the heat, limit your activity to morning and evening hours. Cut down on exercise. If you must exercise, drink two to four glasses of cool fluids each hour. A sports beverage can replace the salt and minerals you lose in sweat. However, if you are on a low-salt diet, talk with your doctor before drinking a sports beverage.
- Try to rest often in shady areas. Protect yourself from the sun by wearing a wide-brimmed hat, sunglasses and putting on a sunscreen of SPF 15 or higher (the most effective products say "broad spectrum" or "UVA/UVB protection" on their labels.)

Week Nine — Mortar Training

For Soldiers at the Infantry Training Brigade, week nine is a milestone. Soldiers are given a weekend Family Day pass in honor of completing the Basic Training portion of their Infantry training. Ahead of schedule, one platoon at B Company, 1st Battalion, 19th Infantry Regiment, began their Advanced Individual Training. These mortarmen were introduced to the M-252l 81 mm mortar and were required to pass a five part-exam to earn their skill identifier.

Editor's note: The Bayonet's Tawny Archibald Campbell follows B Company, 1st Battalion, 19th Infantry Regiment, for 14 weeks, giving readers a look at what new Soldiers are experiencing at the Infantry Training Brigade.

SHAC facilitates combatives training on Sand Hill

Staff Sgt. Johnny Hill and Sgt. 1st Class David Combes, of A Company, 2nd Battalion, 19th infantry Regiment, learn combatives moves at Sand Hill Army Combatives. The SHAC, located in the old Sand Hill Pool House, is designed to give Sand Hill cadre a place to learn and practice combatives.

Staff Sgt. Johnny Hill and Sgt. 1st Class David Combes, of A Company, 2nd Battalion, 19th Infantry Regiment, learn combatives moves at Sand Hill Army Combatives while Staff. Sgt. Roberto Calzada, of E Company, 2nd Battalion, 58th Infantry Regiment, looks on.

It took one idea, two willing cadre, lots of command support, 80 hours of hard labor and thousands of dollars in equipment to turn the Sand Hill Pool House into the SHAC.

Sand Hill Army Combatives is the brainchild of Sgts. 1st Class Christopher Shield and Jon Preston, Headquarters Service Company, Infantry Training Brigade.

"We came up with the idea in January when we were driving by the Sand Hill Pool one day," Preston said. "We said, 'That place has been closed down for nine years, why not use it for a combatives area?'"

The pool house was slated for demolition, so the two sergeants had to work fast. They cut through the necessary red tape and had the building signed over to HSC.

"In keeping with the chief of staff of the Army's policy that all Soldiers must have combatives training, we have started the SHAC program," Shields said.

"We have built and opened our own fight house, just like the one on Main Post, only smaller."

Within three months, Shields and Preston had worked many long hours to prepare the building for its grand opening on May 9.

"It was a self-help project," Shield said. "The women's side of the pool house was filled with changing booths, so we had to tear all of them out and we had to tear the benches on the men's side out and clean everything."

The team also chopped down weeds growing outside and took a pressure washer to the building.

"We did a lot of scrubbing and bleaching," Shield said. "But now that the place is up and running, the entire program runs itself."

The facility houses speed bags, uppercut bags, boxing gloves, head gear, Muay Thi kick pads, boxing focus mitts, about 1,200 square feet of mat space to practice ground fighting, military doctrinal reference books, instruction manuals and much more.

"We have everything you need to give instruction to Soldiers," Shields said. "The SHAC has three purposes. First, it will be used to conduct cadre certification in combatives. Second, it will provide cadre with a place to prepare for periods of instruction that we have to give the Soldiers. The third is so cadre will have a place to prepare for upcoming competitions."

The SHAC is already quite popular and is booked up for the next three weeks, Preston said. It's open to cadre on Sand Hill.

"We gathered together all the skill level one, two and three combatives people, gave them a tour and issued combinations," Shields said.

Today marks the SHAC's four week mark and more than 45 cadre have been trained in the building.

Preston said the SHAC is open 24 hours a day. Any cadre with a combatives skill level one, two or three knows the building's lock combination, and can let others in to use the facility.

"We've actually started a club, Sand Hill Army Combatives Club, now," Preston said. "It is a place where we can come together, work out and compete."

Preston said they just wrote the constitution and by-laws, so the club is still in its infancy stage, but the goal is for members to travel and compete in tournaments around the country. They have already been invited to a tournament in Florida.

For information on the SHAC or the SHACC call 544-0196 or 544-0184.

Sand Hill hosts first combatives tournament for Soldiers

All Sand Hill cadre invited to participate

Cadre from Sand Hill will battle it out in the first Sand Hill Combatives Tournament at 9 a.m. Saturday at Santiago Gym.

"This is the first of what we hope are several combatives tournaments," said Sgt. 1st Class Christopher Shields, event organizer. "It's designed to promote competition and proficiency."

The tournament is free, and open to all cadre at Sand Hill. Six teams have preregistered, including a team with a female fighter.

"The tournament came about when Staff Sergeant Chris Hisler called me up one day and said 'I'm a combatives guy and my commanding officer said he wants to have a tournament,'" said Sgt. 1st Class Jon Preston, event organizer. "I said to come down and we'd talk about it.

"Three guys and a dry erase board dreamed up this (tournament) within three hours."

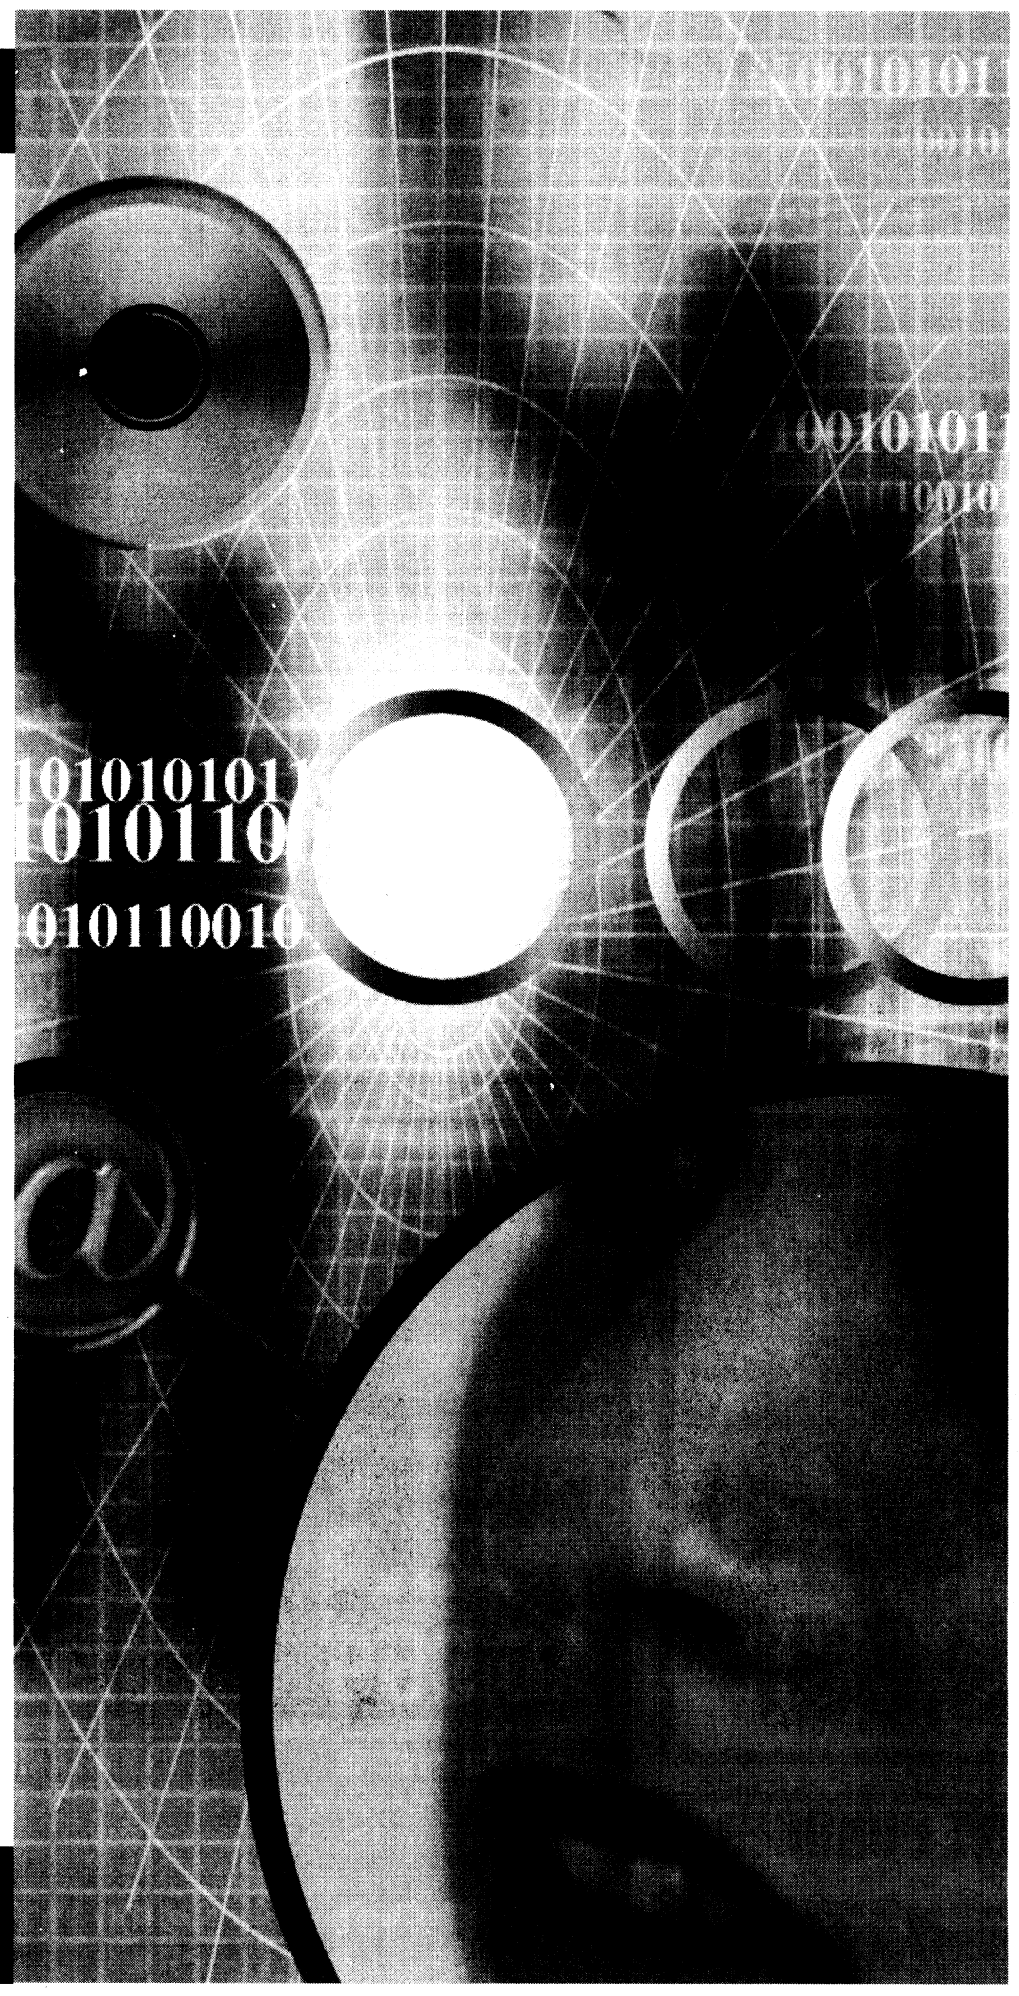
The format is for one four-person team per unit. There are no weight or skill level categories and it will be team single elimination.

Each fighter is guaranteed at least one fight.

"We chose this format because when a four-man fire team leaves for a mission, you don't get to measure up your opponent first," Preston said. "And, if you lose a man, you still have to carry on with the objective."

Preston said 80 percent of the competitors are drill sergeants, but they also have company commanders, supply sergeants and executive officers on the teams.

"They are all Soldiers, and that's the bottom line," Preston said. "We didn't want to exclude anyone. At the end of the day, the Soldiers are going to be better for competing.



"They will either gain the confidence that they can beat anyone, or they will realize they need to get back in the gym. It's better to know here than three thousand miles away in Iraq."

The event is free and open to the public.

"Hi, I'm writing you this letter because something went wrong. It may or may not have been my fault, but it was time. I just want you to know I tried to do the right thing. I came here to help people who couldn't help the situation they were subjected to. Maybe someday they will be able to enjoy freedom as we do. As for me, it was an honor to be able to experience that freedom. It was an honor to fight and die with an American flag on my shoulder. Honor. That's a big word ..."

The final words in Deborah Tainsh's book, Heart of a Hawk, Eye of the Eagle, are her son's final words. Sgt. Patrick Tainsh was killed Feb. 11, 2004, by a roadside bomb in Baghdad. His letter arrived at the Harris County home of retired Marine Sgt. Maj. David and Deborah Tainsh 10 months later. It provided a fitting finale to Deborah's manuscript, which lay "finished but not complete" on the dining room table.

"That's Patrick's message to us. It's honor," Deborah said Sunday during a book signing ceremony at the Columbus Public Library on Macon Road. "In his (letter), he said everything I couldn't say. That's just what the manuscript needed."

Heart of a Hawk, Eye of the Eagle is the tale of one family's journey toward healing, Deborah said. Four months after Patrick's death, she began to write about his own journey, from youthful rebellion, angst over the death of his birth mother, his animosity toward Deborah, his father's new wife, his lack of direction and a battle with drugs.

Ultimately, it's a story of triumph, as Deborah recounts Patrick's "bootstrap" experience, his decision to straighten

Ten-year-old Tricia Hall calls Deborah Tainsh "Grandma." The two have a lot in common. Tainsh's son was killed in Iraq last year, and Tricia's father died in a jump accident six years ago. Through TAPS, Tainsh and Tricia said they've found a family that helps them heal.

Soldiers gave 5,000 hours to local students

School is out for summer, but the best interests of the students were in mind as Fort Benning honored its Partners in Education Tuesday at Loyd Elementary School.

Since 2001, Fort Benning units have partnered with schools both on and off post. Benning's School Liaison Officer, Dewayne Baldwin, said there were around 20 partnerships that first year. This year, 34 partners spent more than 5,000 volunteer hours working with students in the tricommunity area.

"We really take pride in education here at Fort Benning," Baldwin said. Because Fort Benning's main mission is training Soldiers at the Infantry School, he said it was important to share the same zeal with the community.

Fort Benning Schools Superintendent, Dr. Dell McMullen, gave her thanks to the military partners.

"We say we know what you do, but we really don't know all of it," McMullen said. "You do so much and we come to you and ask for things and you just say yes."

McMullen said research shows the most important factor in a child's success is a "sincere, genuine connection with one adult," a connection she said the military partners were making through the PIE program.

One fish, two fish...

Spc. Nikki St. Amant

Saturday will be remembered by catfish far and wide as the day of all days. The day Russ Pool was overrun by 84 conquistadors armed with poles twice their height, sharp hooks and a smelly assortment of worms, chicken livers, and chopped-up hot dogs.

When all was said and done, hundreds of fish found their way into five-gallon buckets during the Child and Youth Services Fishing Rodeo Saturday morning. But they didn't die in vain.

Fort Benning Bass Club public affairs representative Randy Blake said the annual event not only celebrates National Fishing Week, but serves a higher purpose as well.

"One of the reasons we do this is to keep kids off the street," he said. "If we can get them interested in fishing by hosting events like this, that is one way to accomplish that goal."

The club teamed up with CYS to throw the rodeo and casting contest which drew a sizable crowd despite the deployment absences the post is experiencing.

For the kids, it was almost all about having fun and, of course, a little about winning.

"I would have liked to have caught more," said last year's winner Nick O'Steen. He pulled in 16 fish this year, but placed second. "But I won last year and I go fishing all the time, so it's just for fun."

Dell Conley, 5, hauled in a monster four-pounder and called it quits after that. Winning the biggest fish category by two pounds wasn't a thought in her mind.

"It was fun, but it was hard to pull him in," she said.

Some of the snared fish were released back into the pool to spawn future generations of bottom-feeders for post youth to practice their angling on. Some of the more unlucky casualties were destined for grills and frying pans later in the afternoon. All served their purpose.

As the event came to a close, the masses dispersed in all directions with their buckets, tackle boxes and rattling fishing poles. On almost every face there was a smile as the little conquerors went back to their homelands telling war stories of the ones that got away.

Salon offers free makeovers to wives

Kris Gonzalez

For spouses of deployed Soldiers, finding time to relax can be stressful.

Between tending to their usual responsibilities and taking on additional household tasks, it can be difficult for the spouse left behind to schedule something as simple as a hair cut, let alone a pampering session at the spa.

But a group of lucky military wives added a little "bliss" to their beauty regimen thanks to the generosity of stylists from a local beauty salon.

Billy McLendon, owner of Bliss Salon in Columbus, closed shop early to regular patrons June 7 and opened the doors to allow military wives two hours to indulge in what might normally be considered routine beauty care.

He and his workers invited 20 wives to enjoy free hair consultations, a shampoo and conditioning, hand and scalp massages and a make-up touchup. Waxing services were provided upon request.

"It is a chance for us to give back to these guys (deployed Soldiers) and their wives," McLendon said.

"It's something we set up to say 'thank you for what you do and for supporting your husbands,'" said Cindy Sigmund, speaking on behalf of her mother-in-law, Janice Sigmund, who helped coordinate the makeovers but could not be there Tuesday night.

"It's our way of letting let them know they're appreciated," said stylist Shell Hallahan. "We want them to know they're not forgotten."

Hallahan, whose husband has been in Iraq since November with the 36th Engineer Group, said she knows how difficult it can be for the spouses to find time for themselves.

"It's nice to be able to give them a break from it all," Hallahan said.

Lisa Lebo, who is from Baltimore, said her hair doesn't fare well in the humidity of Fort Benning and took advantage of the invitation for a much needed haircut.

"She (Amanda Collins) did a great job," Lebo said as she scrunched her freshly dried curls in the mirror. "It was very generous for (the stylists at) Bliss to volunteer their time."

Lebo has an 11-month-old baby and her husband, Capt. Paul Lebo, is serving in Iraq with the 2nd Battalion, 69th Armored Regiment. Lebo said it's her husband's third deployment with the same unit in three years.

Lebo found out about the free beauty treatments through an e-mail from the family readiness group.

Mimi Jones, wife of Sgt. 1st Class Blakley Jones serving in Iraq with the 1st Battalion, 10th Field Artillery, found out about the salon through an FRG e-mail as well.

Jones said she loved how her stylist, Matt Phillips, sculpted her hair.

"It is absolutely gorgeous," Jones said. "I didn't think it would ever look like this."

Jones said she was going to e-mail her husband a photo when she got home.

"There's no telling what he might do to those Iraqis (once he sees the picture),"

PIE: Gives to students, units

Baldwin showed a video of Fort Benning Soldiers deployed to Iraq, a video he said moves him every time he sees it and highlights the reason for the partnerships — the children. One of the pictures showed Iraqi students carrying schoolbooks smiling as they ran alongside Bradley fighting vehicles.

"We certainly have a lot to be thankful for — the units in Iraq today and all the great units on Fort Benning that have prepared Soldiers to fight and protect our freedom to learn," said Maj. Gen. Benjamin Freakley, commanding general. "It has been a great year in our schools and we are thankful for the work of all involved."

Freakley shared a few of the PIE success stories illustrating teachers, partners and industry supporting and encouraging students.

"Just a short time ago we were at Spencer to pledge to work hard with Partners in Education and make a positive impact on students," Freakley said. "And our PIE is a true testament of the level of support and commitment to our schools. It's the right thing to do."

Freakley highlighted the fact that the more than 5,000 volunteer hours were donated while two of the post's major units, the 3rd Brigade and the 36th Engineer Group were deployed or deploying. He said he expected the program would only continue to grow and improve with the return of the units and with the arrival of the maneuver center.

"It is our job to impart wisdom and knowledge to influence future generations," he said. "We can teach the benefits of service, sacrifice and honor.

"The idea of imparting values early is important," he said. "Kids today are faced with a lot of obstacles. It should be our charge to ensure they overcome and bypass these obstacles."

Although many of Fort Benning's partnership schools are off post in Columbus and Phenix City, the Soldiers' contributions were no less appreciated.

Mike Gaymon, chairman of the Greater Columbus Chamber of Commerce, said PIE was not a "feel good" program, but one waging war on illiteracy and dropouts.

"The war facing education is difficult to win," Gaymon said. "We believe PIE is putting the resources, time and talent up against the enemy and we know it will unlock the door to the future for our community. Follow me. Follow PIE."

The Basic Combat Training Brigade earned top PIE honors for volunteering more than 1,200 hours with its partner school, Wilson Elementary. BCTB commander, Col. William Gallagher accepted a special wooden box and a homemade apple pie on behalf of his Soldiers.

BLISS: Day at salon

Jones said. "He might just say 'I'm homeward bound.'"

Jones laughed and said she thought her hair looked so good, she just might go to the mall afterward to show it off.

Another wife, Jeanett McClung, wife of Dennis McClung of F Company, 1st Battalion, 15th Infantry Regiment, laughed as she remembered her next stop.

"I'm going to an FRG meeting to show off my new 'do," McClung said.

McLendon said Bliss will offer another makeover day for military spouses sometime in next few months. Only 15 women out of the 20 wives scheduled showed for their makeovers. Because the salon received more than 200 calls from wives interested in receiving the makeovers and only 20 slots can be offered, McLendon said next time the salon will take the names of each caller and enter them in a drawing.

TAPS: Helps with grief

out his life the only way he knew how, through the military, where he found a sense of purpose.

"He was proud to be a U.S. Army Cavalry Scout," Deborah said. "He died a hero, and he died saving the lives of other Soldiers. He died fighting for a cause he believed in. There's honor in that. If we had to lay our son down due to drugs, there would've been no honor in that."

Heart of a Hawk, Eye of the Eagle is now in print and available for purchase. Proceeds from the book will help others on their journey, through Tragedy Assistance Program for Survivors, Inc., or TAPS, a nonprofit support organization that provides a wide range of free services to those affected by the death of a loved one in the armed forces.

Over Memorial Day weekend, Deborah and David joined hundreds of survivors at the annual TAPS Military Survivor Seminar in Washington, D.C.

"Miracles happened for us last weekend," she said. "I saw my husband really open up for the first time. Not only was he able to talk about what he's been through, but he also helped someone else who's going through it. TAPS is awesome. We made family immediately."

Tricia Hall can attest to that. The 10-year-old calls David and Deborah "Grandpa" and "Grandma," because "they're just like our family." TAPS brings together people who share a common, tragic bond — people "who can relate," said Tricia, and sometimes being able to relate is better than being related.

Tricia, who attended the event Sunday with her mom and four siblings, was only 4 when her father was killed. Her memories are vague, but precious. She remembers sitting on his back while he did pushups, and she remembers him tossing her up in the air.

She wept when Deborah showed a video sent to the Tainshs by Patrick's unit, the 2nd Division Cavalry "Eagles." The "Army music" and the pictures of men in uniform made her think of her father, she said. It made her sad, an emotion she's learned to live with through TAPS and the organization's annual Good Grief Camp for kids.

"You need to cry sometimes," she said. "It's good to cry. It helps."

At camp, kids make crafts, play games and swim, said Tricia, who's been there five times. But they also talk about their memories and their sadness, and they hug a lot.

"Here, people say they understand, but not really — not unless they've had it happen to them. But at camp, everyone can relate to what you've been through. It helps more and more each time. It's awesome," she said, echoing Deborah's description.

And Deborah agreed with Tricia's earlier assertion.

"It's OK to cry," she told her audience. "It's OK to smile. Because we're here to celebrate life. The gifts that come at a time of trouble are incredible if you look hard enough. Through Patrick, we have the gift of a new family."

Heart of a Hawk, Eye of the Eagle is available at local bookstores. Or contact Deborah at www.deborahtainsh.com.

Bargains on parade

After flaunting their fashion bargains at the PX, the models treated Burger King customers to an impromptu show. Here, Lisa Miller's outfit would have cost $92 at the PX, $133 off post.

As a surprised customer looks on, Ray Charfauros models an ensemble that costs $139 at the Main Mall Post Exchange. The same outfit costs $186 at a popular competitor in Columbus.

As a price surveyor, it's Cindy Neace's job to make sure customers get a real bargain at Fort Benning's Main Mall Post Exchange. She's convinced they do, so much so, she put her belief to the test when Tito Green, a PX employee, suggested a price comparison fashion show. Six PX employees took to the runway Wednesday sporting outfits available at the PX. Neace announced the price difference between each ensemble and an identical one at popular retailers off post. On average, each outfit costs between $40 and $50 less at the PX, though the difference was as much as $90 at times.

Live eternal life now

Chaplain (Capt.) Michael L. White
CONUS Replacement Center

"I have come that they might have life, and that they might have it more abundantly." John 10:10

I think all of us want to go to heaven and live forever.

According to the Bible, this is available to anyone who accepts Jesus Christ for who he is and what he did to make salvation possible.

This reminds me of the story about a zealous pastor who wanted to make sure everyone in his congregation was ready to go to heaven.

One Sunday, while preaching on the topic of heaven, the pastor paused his sermon and asked, "All right, now — everyone who is ready to go to heaven, raise your hand."

Everyone in the congregation raised his or her hand, except for one gentleman. The pastor looked with surprise at him and asked, "Brother Joe, don't you want to go to heaven?"

"Sure I do, pastor," said the man.

White

"Then why don't you raise your hand?" the pastor asked incredulously.

"Well, I thought you were gettin' up a group to go right now!"

Despite this longing to live forever, few of us are ready to die right now in order to be living our eternal life.

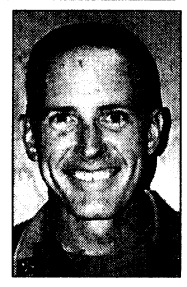
By the description in the Bible, heaven must be a beautiful and wonderful place, and everlasting life may be the best part of all, but perhaps it is fear that holds us to this old world: fear of pain of death; fear of separation from loved ones left behind; maybe even fear that we may not actually get into heaven.

When we place our faith and hope in Christ, fear must yield to calm assurance. Hope is the greatest single item we have in the good news, and lends itself to preparing all of us for what lies beyond this life. After all, that's why Jesus came in the first place, isn't it?

Raise a modern day knight, part II

Chaplain (Maj.) Jeffrey D. Hawkins
Chaplain Family Life Center

REFLECTIONS



Last week we talked about the uniqueness and challenge of raising little boys to be big men ... in more than just the physical sense. That's going on right now in our house as we're transitioning from the stage of Legos to the stage of licenses.

In fact, I sat up late last night just so I could watch a rough and tumble football flick that my 14-year-old son begged me to see with him — and the thought struck me ... my daughter asked me to do many things, but one of them was never to stay up late to watch a football flick about the famed pigskin coach Bear Bryant.

Though many, if not most, of the deepest needs of males and females are similar, plenty of things are different in bringing up boys, aren't they?

Clinicians and researchers will tell you there is a physical difference between boys and girls in the synapses of the brain, overall body fat content, muscle mass and even the sheer thickness of the skull (no jokes, ladies). All I know is that my daughter's tennis shoes never smelled like my boy's!

So how do we raise a modern-day knight — how do you help form a little boy into a young man of deep character, maturity and conviction? As mentioned last week, a key way is through the power of ceremonies — four to be exact.

Hawkins

The first, I said, was a ceremony that marks the onset of puberty.

For team Hawkins, that will take the shape of some meaningful moments in the woods between my son and the men from our family who have had and will have the most impact on his life.

It focuses on being very honest and discussing the temptations he's going to face and how to overcome them by staying spiritually strong in a close walk with God.

The second ceremony was graduation from high school. A special breakfast or dinner, again with a collection of exemplary male role models, can leave a huge impact as those "Knights of the Round Table" learn how best to navigate his newfound freedom.

What are the final two ceremonies to help young boys become godly men? Ceremony number three is graduation from college, and it's at this moment that youth ends and he is welcomed, as a man, to the Roundtable himself as a fellow knight.

You can mark the transition in another special weekend, giving a priceless gift. For me, it will likely be giving my son a handsome ring with the Hawkins crest engraved in it.

It's expensive, and it's supposed to be — to communicate the priceless blessing that's taking place.

Lastly, a boy becomes a man through a final ceremony of marriage. Of all the ceremonies, this is the only one that is public, and it is a ceremony of fidelity and promise.

It's a ceremony centered on being a "promise keeper" — a man who keeps his promises to the God he serves and to the woman he loves.

The idea is that for each of these ceremonies you creatively incorporate at least four of these things: the element of surprise, an intensely spiritual focus, symbols to mark the moment and a blessing from dad.

Want more coaching or help on how to raise a little boy to be a big man?

Give us a ring at the Chaplain Family Life Center at 545-1760 or come see me at 11 a.m. Sundays at CrossRoads Contemporary Chapel on Kelley Hill.

John Hudson, a 25 year-old professional golfer, hit two consecutive hole-in-one shots in the Martini Tournament at Norwich, England in 1971.

James and Romano swing away in Making the Cut

Any weekend duffer knows a casual round of golf with friends can be full of comic possibilities.

Drives gone awry, fairway shots into the drink or even bad cart driving can provide plenty of fodder for laughs for years to come.

That's the principle at least partly at work in HBO's Ray Romano & Kevin James: Making the Cut, which debuts June 18.

It shows the two sitcom stars, stand-up comedians and pals, as they attempt to qualify for the final round at February's Pebble Beach National Pro-Am.

But it isn't completely fun and games. James, the star of CBS' The King of Queens, and Romano, whose Everybody Loves Raymond just ended a nine-season run on the same network, are both semiserious golfers.

They make the trip to the Northern California golf mecca each year to test themselves on a world-class course against like-minded celebrities and pros such as Tiger Woods, Phil Mickelson and Vijay Singh.

The hourlong special provides a behind-the-scenes look at the goings-on at the seaside tournament as players fight the course, the elements and the pressure to make it to Sunday.

"Ray and I played in the tournament quite a few times," said James, a co-executive producer on the project with Romano and several others.

"We always thought, not only for others to see, but how great it would be having footage of ourselves just playing, so we can document it and show our kids.

"Then we thought, You know what? The general public, golfers and others, might be interested in a behind-the-scenes look at what it's like to play.

"Everybody knows that Pebble Beach is the mecca of golf and a lot of people have played there. They want to know what it's all about and what it's like, and we give them an insider's view."

"It's a great thing to have documented," Romano said, "but also we thought it would be something that is entertaining.

"It would be something for a golf fan. ... Hopefully, it's going to be funny.

"And there's going to be some drama to it because if you're a golf fan, at least, you know the allure of making the cut at Pebble.

You know, like the history of Jack Lemmon trying to make it for his whole life and never making it.

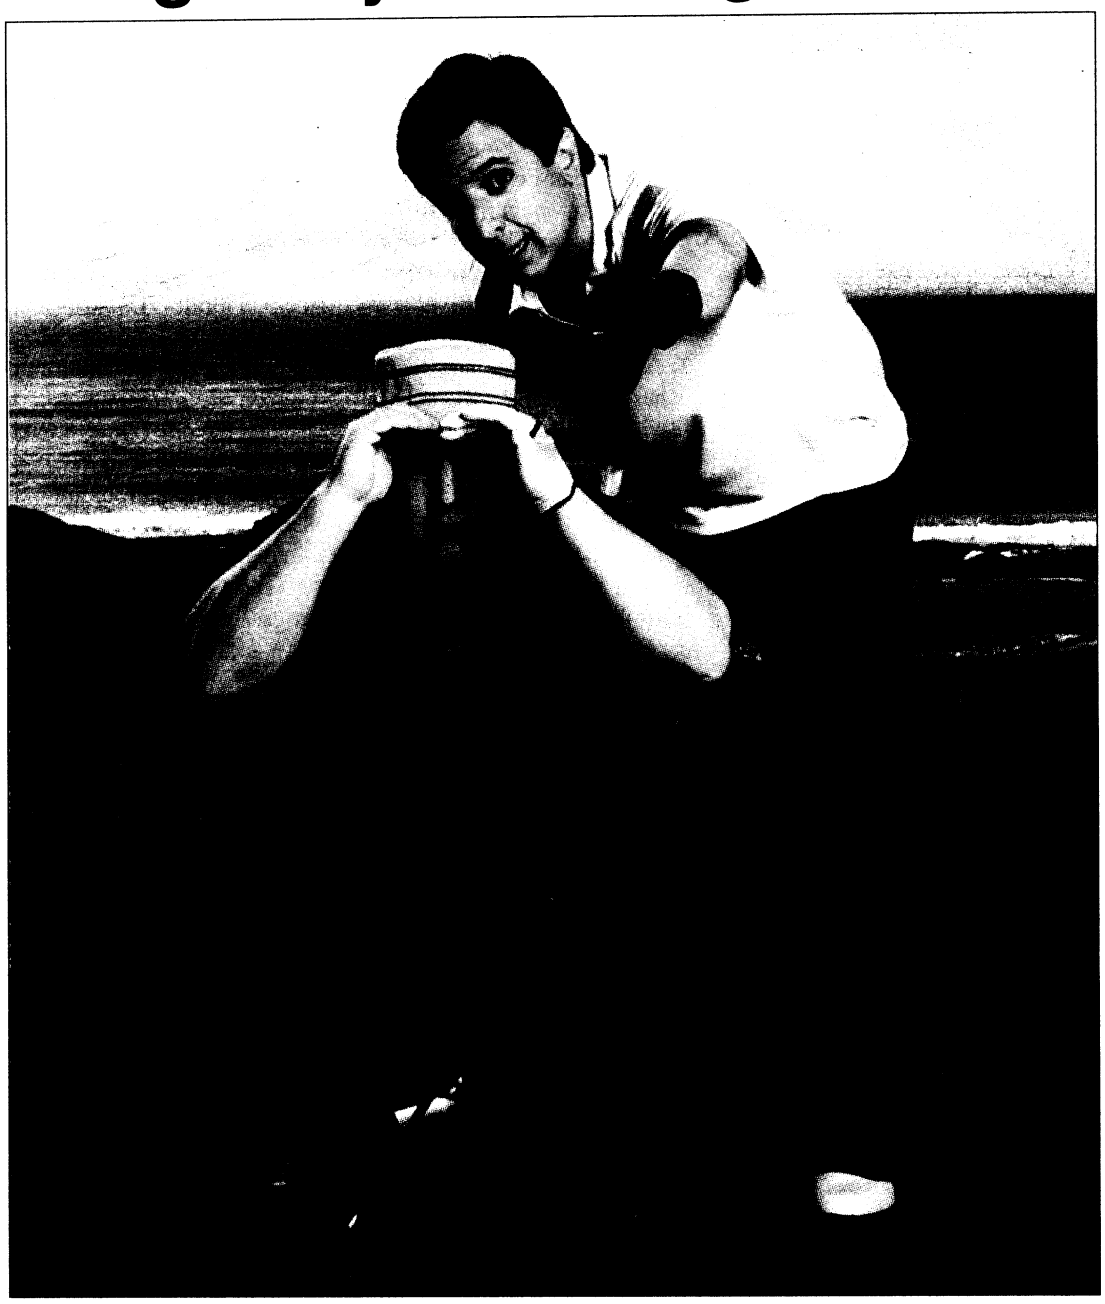
"So there was a lot for us, and we just thought, 'Let's do something that's entertaining.' "

Among the things viewers will become acquainted with are the conditions players must face.

First, there is the Northern California weather, which in February is usually cool and damp.

There is Monterey Bay, which provides wind, fog and an ample target for stray shots.

And there are the local flora and fauna, which have a way of coming between ball and hole.



For Romano and James, one such beast was the ice plant, a thick, low-growing vegetation that adorns the fairways at Pebble Beach and makes life miserable for those who hit into it.

"An ice plant is a plant that's impossible to hit out of," James said. "It just grabs your club, and (no matter how hard you hit it), you're going to hurt your hand."

"The only way you get it out," Romano said, "is once in a while you get lucky, and it just lays right on top like it's on a tee. ... You're just punching it like five feet out.

"Yeah, I've been in it a lot, so I'm good at it."

Another factor was the gallery. As comedians, both Romano and James know how to handle a crowd.

Kevin James (left) and Ray Romano bring their experiences at this year's Pebble Beach National Pro-Am to HBO in Ray Romano & Kevin James: Making the Cut debuting June 18.

But trying to drive a ball straight or sink a long putt with spectators looking on takes a level of concentration they often don't need to use. Still, said James, "each year, you learn to take the crowd out of it a little bit more.

"You have more fun with that and you're a little bit more used to that.

"I mean, we're comedians. We're not really used to hitting a golf ball in front of a gallery of thousands.

"Again, you never really totally get used to it, but you just know what to expect, at least."

After the ball is struck, things can loosen up. Oftentimes a bad shot can be played for humor, and everyone can come away laughing.

"You're nervous on the first tee," Romano said, "but the gallery knows that you are not a professional golfer, so it's actually a win-win situation." Added James, "If you hit a bad shot, it's accepted."

"It's funny for them," Romano said.

"Yeah, they have a good time with that," James said. "You could joke off of that. "But if you hit a great shot, they don't expect that, (and) they just erupt. It's amazing.

"It's a great feeling."

The Honeymooners — New York City bus driver Ralph Kramden and his feisty wife Alice struggle to make ends meet. Despite Ralph's many get-rich-quick schemes and motivational speaker tape series, they've managed to save some money and, along with their best friends Ed and Trixie Norton, they seem to have almost enough money for a down payment on a Brooklyn duplex.

Starring Cedric the Entertainer, Mike Epps, Regina Hall and Gabrielle Union.

The Honeymooners is rated PG-13 for innuendo and rude humor.

Mr. & Mrs. Smith — A married couple (Brad Pitt and Angelina Jolie) are getting bored with their quiet domestic life.

What they don't know, however, is that they're both assassins, secretly hopping the world and killing for hire.

But their separate lives are about to collide when each finds out their next target is their own spouse.

Mr. & Mrs. Smith is rated PG-13 for sequences of violence, intense action, sexual content and strong language.

The Adventures of Shark Boy & Lava Girl — A 10-year-old outcast is shunned by classmates and forced to spend summer vacation alone.

With his two imaginary friends (Shark Boy and Lava Girl) he goes on a mission to prove dreams can become reality.

Starring Taylor Lautner, Taylor Dooley, Cayden Boyd and George Lopez.

The Adventures of Shark Boy and Lava Girl is rated PG for mild action and rude humor.

High Tension — Two worlds collide disastrously — a rusted delivery van barrels through cornfields; meanwhile, Alex has brought her friend Marie to spend the weekend at her parent's farmhouse to escape the hectic pace of Paris.

Behind the van's wheel, the driver looks at ripped photos of young women; at the same time, the girls get ready for bed, dishing girly gossip.

At the end of the road lies an isolated house, caught in the van's headlights; as the girls close their eyes, an intruder is about to turn their innocent dreams into a relentless and bloody nightmare.

Starring Cecile de France, Philippe Nahon, Frank Khalfoun and Maiwenn Le Besco.

High Tension is rated R for graphic bloody killings, terror, sexual content and language.

The Sisterhood of the Traveling Pants — The movie is based on Ann Brashares' best-selling novel about a special summer in the lives of four lifelong friends separated for the first time.

On a shopping trip, the young women find a pair of thrift shop jeans that fits each of them perfectly and they decide to use these pants as a way of keeping in touch over the months ahead.

Starring Amber Tamblyn, Alexis Bledel, Blake Lively and America Ferrera.

The Sisterhood of the Traveling Pants is rated PG for thematic elements, some sensuality and language.

Cinderella Man — Set in New York during the Depression, this is story of James Braddock (Russell Crowe), who takes up boxing to make money to feed his family and ends up becoming quite famous in the process, eventually going up against champ Max Baer.

Also starring Renee Zellweger and Paul Giamatti.

Cinderella Man is rated PG-13 for intense boxing violence and language.

Lords of Dogtown — In the 1970s, a group of teenage surfers from a tough neighborhood known as "Dogtown" in Venice, Calif., pioneered a revolutionary new style of skateboarding.

Riding the waves at the Pacific Ocean Pier, the Z-boys, known for their aggressive style and hard-street attitude, combined the moves of surfing with the art of skateboarding and become overnight sensations and local legends.

Starring Heath Ledger, Johnny Knoxville and Emile Hirsch.

Lords of Dogtown is rated PG-13 for drug and alcohol content, sexuality, violence, language and reckless behavior.

Madagascar — This movie focuses on four residents and "stars" of the Central Park Zoo who are also best friends: a lion (Ben Stiller), a zebra (Chris Rock), a giraffe (David Schwimmer) and a pregnant hippo (Jada Pinkett-Smith).

When one of them goes missing, the other three break out of the zoo looking for him, and eventually all four are captured and put in boxes to ship them back to the continent their species are originally from: Africa.

An accident at sea, however, strands them on the shore of Madagascar.

Madagascar is rated PG for mild language, crude humor and thematic elements.

The Longest Yard — This is the story of pro quarterback Paul Crewe (Adam Sandler) and former college champion and coach Nate Scarboro (Burt Reynolds), who are doing time in the same prison.

Asked to put together a team of inmates to take on the guards, Crewe enlists the help of Scarboro to coach the inmates to victory in a football game "fixed" to turn out quite another way.

The Longest Yard is rated PG-13 for crude and sexual humor, violence, language and drug references.

Star Wars: Episode III-Revenge of the Sith — The third and final installment in the Star Wars prequel trilogy — the third and final Star Wars movie overall.

Anakin Skywalker's turn to the Dark Side of the Force, the continuing Clone Wars and the final fate of the Old Republic should be revealed.

Starring Ewan McGregor, Hayden Christiensen, Natalie Portman, Ian McDiarmid and Samuel L. Jackson.

Star Wars: Episode III-Revenge of the Sith is rated PG-13 for sci-fi violence and intense images.

Best Ranger to air Thursday

Military Channel to air 3-hour special

Bridgett Siter
Bayonet staff

I got a sneak peek at the Military Channel's three hour special on the Best Ranger Competition, which will air Thursday, starting at 8 p.m.

As a seasoned fan of the BRC, and one whose job gives me a better-than-your-average-spectator perspective, I was delighted with the film. I suspect you will be, too, whether you've ever attended the event or not.

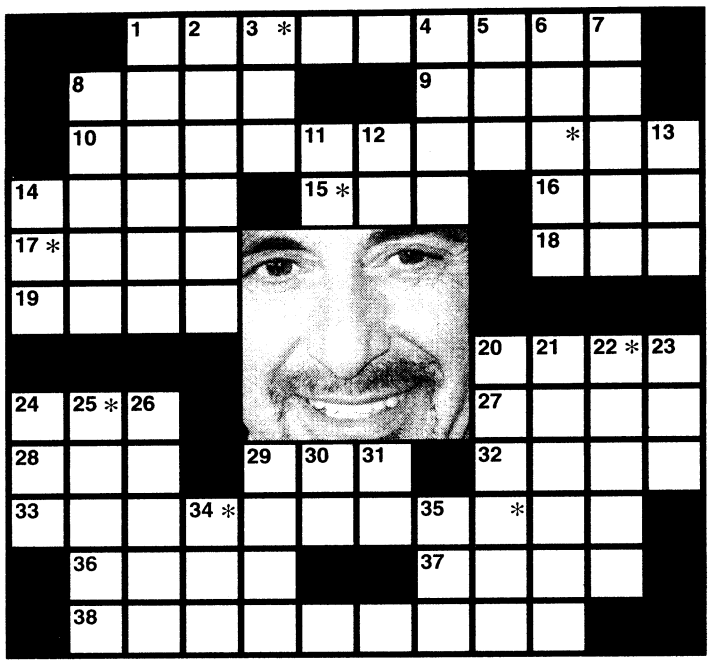
And here's why:

The Military Channel, which is associated in some way with the Discovery Channel, goes behind the scenes at Best Ranger events where we — yes, even we reporters — don't typically get to go. Even if I could traipse out in the woods at 3 a.m. to catch a glimpse of the competitors doing land nav, I probably wouldn't.

So here's your chance to see the 2005 Best Ranger teams storm the McKenna MOUT site, stumble through the dark woods during land nav, and drag themselves, wet and weary, out of the water on the other side of Victory Pond. You'll even get a bird's eye view of the spot jump.

What's more, the Military Channel uses a highly effective technique they call "Mission File" to introduce what we journalist types call the "human interest aspect." During periodic breaks in the competition footage, you'll meet the competitors and their families and learn a little about what it is that drives them to compete in "the world's toughest competition" — the producer's words, not mine.

The filmmakers do a bang-up job of putting it all in perspective. They explain the competition's relevance through a series of Ranger history flashbacks, starting with Maj. Robert Rogers, whose tomahawk tactics laid the groundwork for one of the Best Ranger staples, the tomahawk throw. Aha! That's why they do that.



I especially liked the bit about Operation Urgent Fury, when Rangers marched 25 miles in Panama to help oust Manuel Noriega in 1989. This piece profiles Col. K.K. Chinn, the Ranger Training Brigade's commander, who was part of that mission.

The film features frequent, fast-paced, split-screen graphics and a peppy, up-beat soundtrack, something BRC organizers might want to incorporate. Imagine the competitors road marching to the tune of Eye of the Tiger. Maybe not.

All in all, the Military Channel produced a first-class documentary about a world-class event. It's been a long time coming. With this kind of exposure, the world will finally recognize the BRC for what it is — "the world's toughest competition." Those are producer's words, not mine. But I agree.

BEST RANGER
Competition will be featured on NBC's Today show June 16

Bench notes

Erin Nash

• NBA finals start

Reigning champs Detroit Pistons are taking on the San Antonio Spurs in the NBA finals, which started Thursday.

My pick, for the sheer fact that they had more rest time and I'd like to see someone else win, are the Spurs in six games.

• Biff wins, gains points

Greg Biffle won the MBNA RacePoints 400 June 5 at Dover International Speedway. Tony Stewart bumped the back of Jeff Gordon, taking him out of the race — a typical Tony the tiger move.

• NASCAR points standings

Jimmie Johnson is still in the points lead, though Biffle trails by just 46. Sadler is third, Newman fourth and Stewart jumped into fifth, knocking Gordon into 11th place, 350 points behind Johnson.

• Finals schedule

Even if you're not a basketball fan, I recommend tuning in for the NBA finals — it's always a good watch. Game two is at 9 p.m. Sunday, game three at 9 p.m. Tuesday and game four 9 p.m. Thursday. All games are on ABC.

• MLB draft

Justin Upton, a shortstop from Virginia, was the number one draft pick for the Arizona Diamondbacks. His brother BJ was the second pick in the '02 draft. They are the highest drafted siblings in history.

• French Open results

Spaniard Rafael Nadal, who was seeded No. 4, won the French Open.

Belgian Justine Henin-Hardenne won the women's finals.

And they're off

Runners hit the pavement for the first leg of the "Reverse" Sprint Triathlon Saturday. The event was the first of its kind on Fort Benning and drew about 90 competitors. All-Army triathlete, Mike Osier, shown on the far left in the white shirt, won the event.

More than 90 compete in triathlon

Athletes of all shapes and sizes lined up to participate in Fort Benning's first "Reverse" Sprint Triathlon Saturday.

The event was organized by Ken Wetherill, sports director for the Directorate of Morale, Welfare and Recreation.

"It was a good turnout," Wetherill said. "For the first year, it went well."

About 50 volunteers from the Infantry Training Brigade, the Better Opportunities for Single Soldiers program and the Fort Benning community helped pull off the two-hour event.

Among the participants were three All-Army athletes. Mike Osier, the overall winner, will compete June 18 in the All-Army triathlon in California. Shannon Swords, who came in second, is an All-Army 10-Miler runner and Jose Solis, whose Carl Gregory Ride-On Bike team placed first, is an All-Army cyclist.

"You have to be excited about the fact that All-Army, elite athletes, showed up on race day," Wetherill said.

"It made it fun for us to watch the competition and see who would prevail. It was an easy read event. The only thing was — would (the winner) be Osier or Swords." he said.

"It was fitting that Mike Osier, who leaves for California to compete in the All-Army triathlon, took home the medal."

Swords was the first to complete the run with a time of 16:48 — 49 seconds ahead of Osier.

"It was an unusual format because the triathlon was in a reverse, something I've never done," Osier said. "It was pretty much an open 5K race and I just wanted to run as fast as I could. That was actually the fastest I've run this year, and I was happy Shannon was only ahead of me by a minute. If he could have outrun me by two minutes it would have been a different race."

Osier passed Swords on the back half of the bike leg, traveling an average of 24.3 miles per hour.

"My whole goal on the bike was to catch Shannon," Osier said. "I could see him the whole way and it was a matter of pushing a bigger gear in order to close the distance.

"I left my comfort zone for sure, but to lead him into the swim was good."

Both Swords and Osier said if it had been a traditional triathlon the results may have been different.

"The bike leg killed me. I don't even have to think about that one," Swords said.

"I don't like being chased, I like chasing people. With this being reversed, my best event was at the beginning and everyone was chasing me. Then, at the end of the bike leg, I looked over and saw Mike. He went by me like I was sitting still."

Osier hit the pool and increased his lead, finishing the triathlon in 1:02:58.

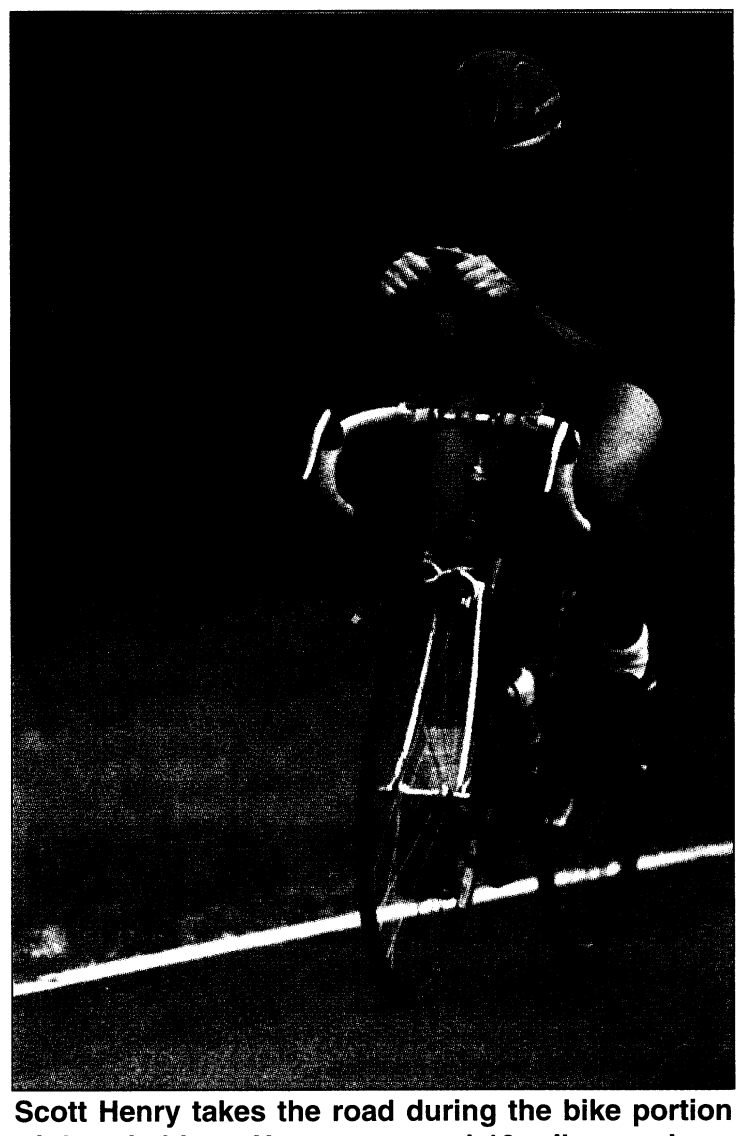
"I knew the race was over when I hit the pool," Osier said. "And he did too."

Swords came in second with a time of 1:05:25.

The swimmer from the Carl Gregory Ride-On Bike team, came in third with a time of 1:06:17.

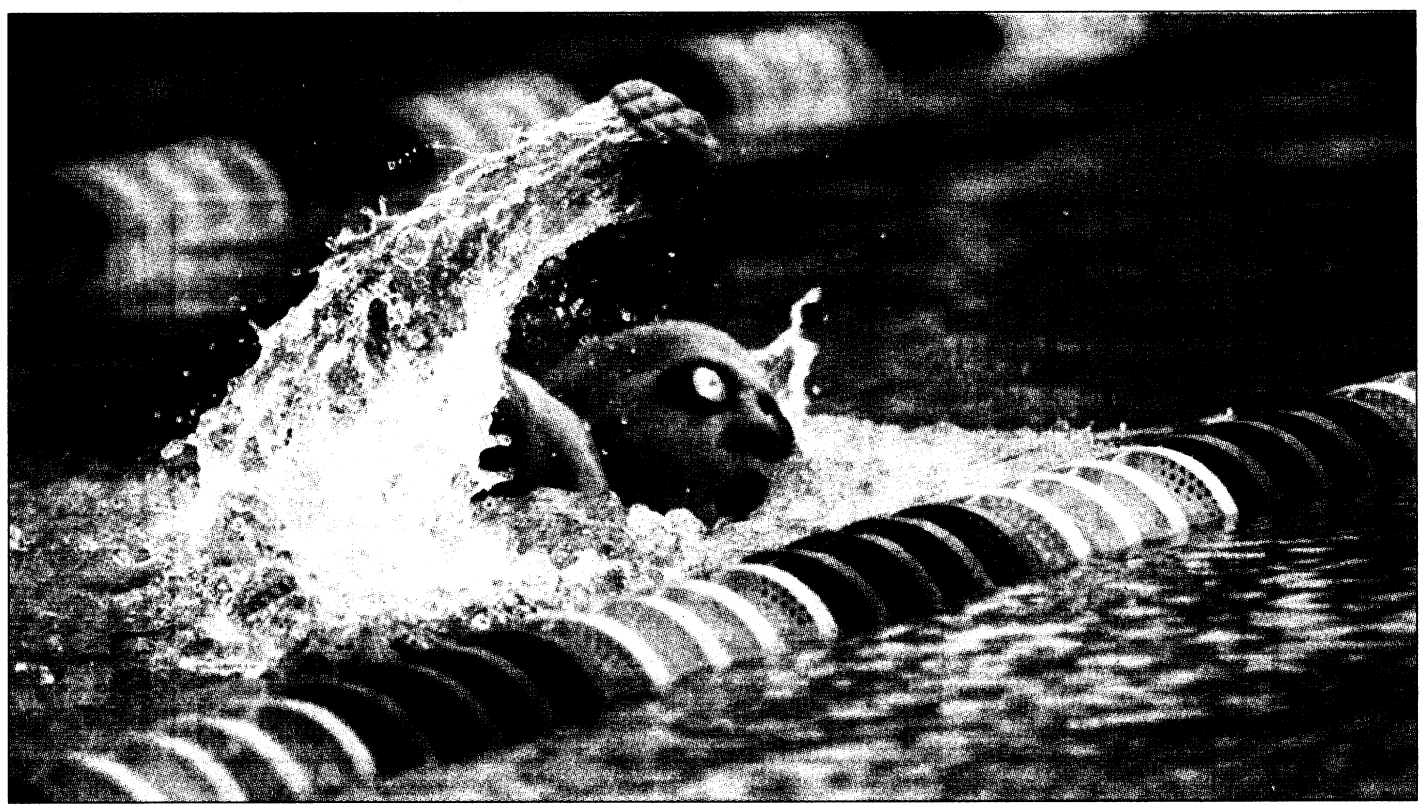
The top female competitor was Samantha de la Haye with a time of 1:21:43.

Osier and de la Haye received a medal, wreath, bottle of sparkling grape juice and a five night vacation to Florida. Medals were also given to the top three finishers in each age category.



"Overall I thought (the triathlon) was very well organized," Swords said. "There was some good competition out there, and this showed that Mike is definitely ready for nationals.

"I don't mind getting beat as long as it is by someone who has trained as much, or more, than I have."

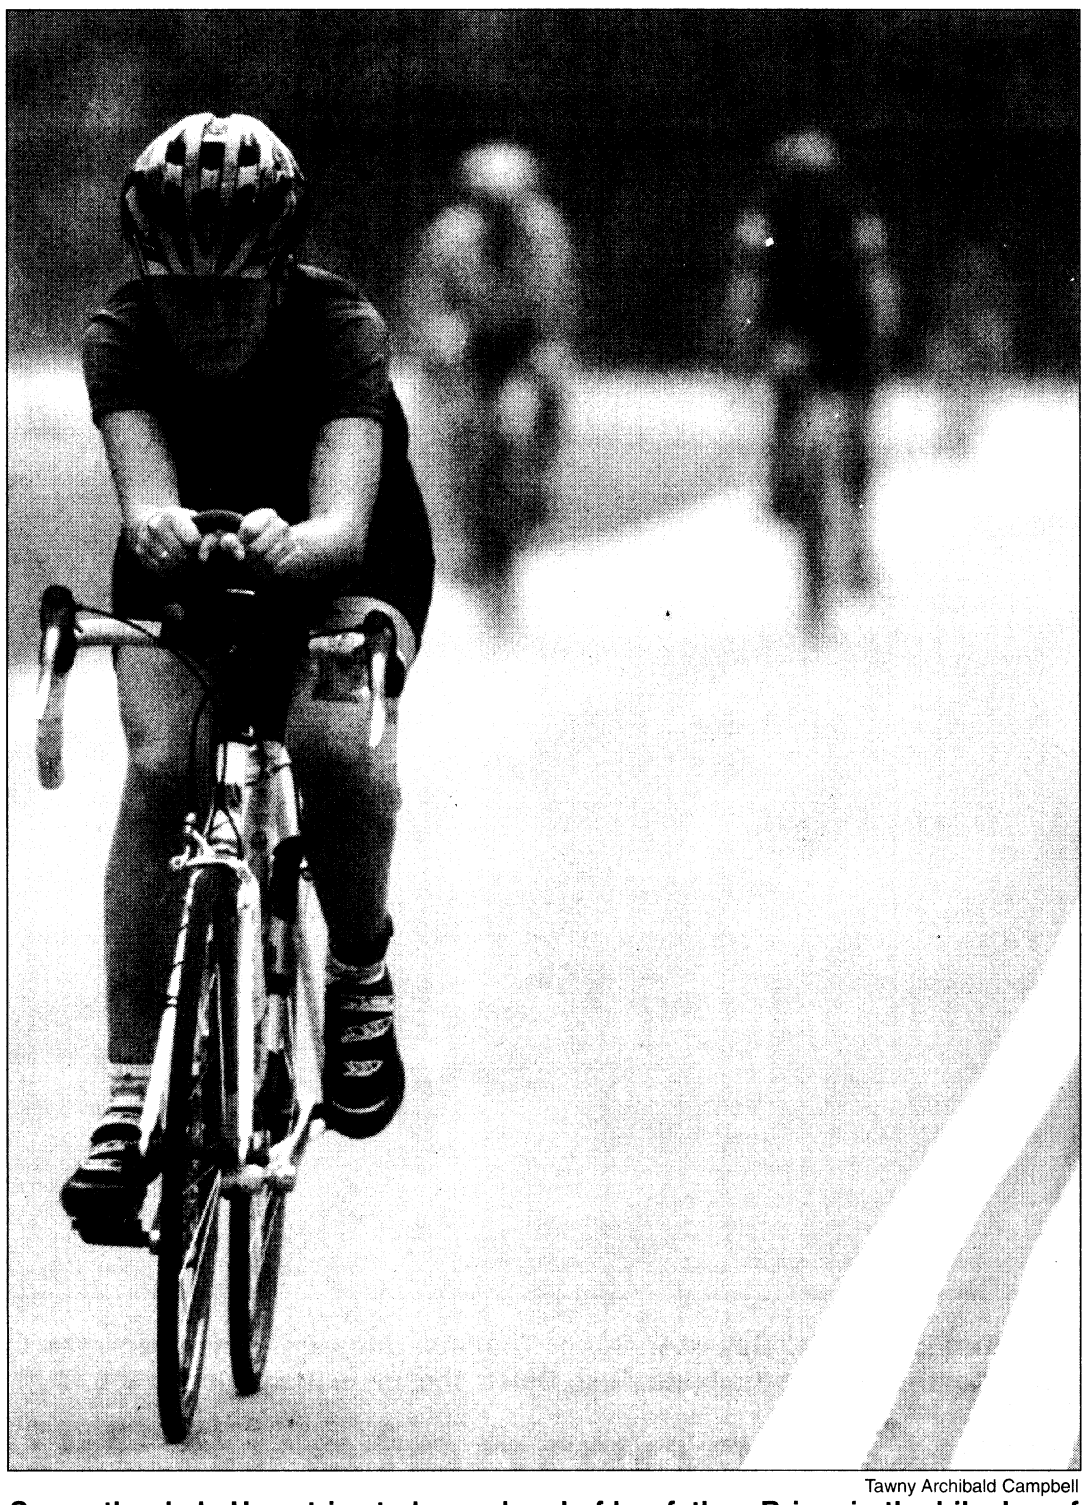


Both Osier and Swords, who have competed in numerous triathlons, were impressed with how well the event went.

"Ken did one of the best jobs I have ever seen organizing a race, from advertisement, to registration, to layout, to safety," Osier said. "I was very impressed on how he did this race and I hope that next year he will have the opportunity to do this again.

"I think this is a great introduction race for anyone."

Scott Henry takes the road during the bike portion of the triathlon. Henry averaged 19 miles per hour on the 20K bike leg.



A swimmer powers through a 50 meter length of the Carey Pool during the Reverse Sprint Triathlon Saturday. Swimmers had to swim a total of 750 meters — 15 lengths — before crossing the timing mat.

Triathlon is family affair

Dad, daughter battle for bragging rights

Samantha de la Haye tries to keep ahead of her father, Brian, in the bike leg of the triathlon. Brian passed her halfway through the ride, but Samantha had the last laugh beating her dad in the swim and winning the overall female title.

British liaison officer Brian de la Haye wasn't all that surprised when his daughter crossed the finish line one minute and 23 seconds ahead of him.

The surprise was that Samantha, who has only competed in two triathlons, was the top female competitor in the Reverse Sprint Triathlon Saturday.

"My dad entered both of us in the race without telling me," said Samantha, who found out about the race after stepping off a plane from Scotland. "In truth though, it was just what we both needed to motivate us into doing some exercise. We trained together almost every day for three weeks. As a result, we were equally fit on the day of the race."

Samantha said the race started fast and it took her a while to get into a rhythm.

"Subsequently, I was quite conscious that I was ahead of any other females and, more importantly, my dad," she said. "I was amazed to keep my place in the field of runners throughout the 5K and finish the run in good time. Next was the cycle, and I just got away as my dad was finishing the run."

She knew the cycle was where Brian could catch her — and he did, just before the halfway point.

"I kept him in sight for the rest of the bike ride and he didn't make up too much ground," she said. "I have never been so glad to jump into a pool as I was after that cycle. I am not a fast swimmer, but I am consistent and I quickly closed the gap between myself and the competitor in front.

"At this point, I was somehow in front of my dad — strange."

The race between the two was tight throughout the competition. Samantha had a 13 second lead on her dad coming out of the run portion, but by the time she hit the pool, she was only holding a four second lead over her father.

Brian said his excuse for losing to his daughter was that he ran halfway from the bike transition to the pool before realizing he had forgotten his goggles, so he had to go back for them.

However, the stats show that even without the slow transition, he still would have lost to his daughter.

"I like to think that is the reason she beat me, but I know better," he said. "She definitely had the edge on me this time."

Samantha said she is just happy to have finished the cycle, with her goggles, and was able to overtake her dad in the transition area.

"This was undoubtedly what clinched my marginal lead over my dad," she said.

The real determining factor came when Samantha outswam Brian by one minute and 16 seconds, finishing with a time of 1:21:43.

"The day before the race she had just heard she passed her degree course, so she was on a bit of a high," Brian said. "She was just flying when she hit the triathlon. She had a very successful bit of a time there."

Brian said his daughter was pleased with her overall performance.

"She shaved a minute off her run time, the cycle was better than she had feared and she is always fairly strong on the swimming portion," he said. "I'm very proud of her. There is a lot of 'Mickey taking' within the family — is daughter going to beat Dad or is Dad going to hold on. I am very proud, and would have been surprised if I had beaten her."

Samantha said there is no way she could have predicted the outcome before the race, but it was nice to exit the water before her dad.

"I was chuffed to beat my old man, although if he hadn't forgotten his goggles it would have been a very close race," she said.

"I am very proud of my dad, and his was no mean accomplishment either. He came in second in his age group and was carrying an old injury. I very much enjoyed the whole event, and owe my success to my training buddy — my dad."

Post TMCs to consolidate

Kris Gonzalez
Bayonet staff

A $6 million project to build a Consolidated Troop Medical Clinic was launched June 10, 50 years after a $6 million contract was awarded to construct Fort Benning's Martin Army Community Hospital.

The project, which will consolidate troop medical clinics 1, 2 and the Aviation Medicine Clinic into one 27,000 square foot structure, will cost $6,626,000 to build. On June 8, 1955, the Jordan Company of Columbus had been awarded a contract to build a nine-story, nearly 400,000 square foot hospital for $6,091,000.

The new facility, which will be located between Indianhead Road and Lavoie Street, will replace older buildings and provide modern services that do not currently exist in the three clinics, said Shiloh A. Hendricks, administrator in the Department of Family and Community Medicine.

The CTMC will offer new benefits, such as an expanded treatment room and more health care provider offices, Hendricks

Fasnacht

1st Lt. Michael J. Fasnacht, 1st Battalion, 15th Infantry Regiment, died after an IED detonated near his Bradley fighting vehicle while on patrol.

"(Fasnacht) was the epitome of an Infantry officer," Capt. Aron Hauquitz said, during a memorial service held at the Kelley Hill Chapel Tuesday. "He was tough, fearless and passionate — a true Infantryman. Even more than that, he was a friend to me," Hauquitz said. He went on talk about Fasnacht's devotion to his wife, parents and Soldiers.

Hauquitz repeated what Lt. Col. Gary Brito, commander of 1st Bn., 15th Inf. Regt., said during a memorial service in Iraq June 12. Brito talked about Fasnacht's desire to become a platoon leader.

"I remember the look of despair on his face when I told him he'd have to wait a while, because all platoons were full," Brito said. "I told him he was going to be an assistant S-1. He told me 'I don't know anything about being an S-1, but I'll do

Post directorates test new weapons

Munitions used for close combat fired

Donna Hyatt
Bayonet staff

Taking their cue from post combat Soldier surveys, Talley Defense Systems demonstrated weapons and munitions at Griswold Range June 9 in a live fire exercise for the Directorate of Operations and Training, Soldier Battle Lab, the Directorate of Combat Development and the 29th Infantry Regiment.

Designed for close combat and useful in urban terrain zones, the experimental M-72 anti-structure munition and the M-141 bunker defeat munition shoulder launchers are smaller than the AT4 currently used by the Army.

Waiving the opportunity to personally test the new weapons, Maj. Gen. Benjamin Freakley, commanding general of Fort Benning, called for the youngest Soldiers of the 29th Inf. Regt. to test the weapons.

The munitions were fired from a distance of 150 meters at targets simulating structures typically found in combat situations, such as concrete block walls, brick and plywood walls, and standard earth and timber bunkers.

FATHER'S DAY

Snow White, the dwarfs and dad

Annette Fournier
USAIC Public Affairs Office

As Father's Day rolls around again, I have been thinking about dads. Mine in particular.

There are so many things about my dad that make him unique. He grew up in a small town in Maine, in an area known as "Little Quebec," because the people who lived there were all first- or second-generation Americans, whose families had moved down from Quebec.

My dad spoke only French until his early teens. Occasionally the French accent still comes through, especially in his t's and th's, which he interchanges. My siblings and I are amused endlessly by it. "I thought I told you" becomes "I tought I thold you." Thailand get pronounced Thighland, and it's somehow not as appetizing when he wants to use the thongs to get salad.

He still speaks French fluently, and he's always delighted when he meets a French speaker to chat with. In fact, he's generally pleased to chat with anybody. To my dad, strangers are just friends he hasn't met yet, and he has an amazing ability to connect with people. He has a charismatic personality and it's impossible not to like him.

He's also quite the storyteller. He could fill entire volumes with his stories and his knowledge of this or that. When I was a kid, his endless stories drove me crazy. I would ask him a question about history or some social situation, and have to clear my calender for the rest of the day while he explained. The other day when I heard a kid ask his dad how WWI started. The dad gave the pat answer about the assassination of Archduke Ferdinand. The whole conversation took about three minutes. That would have never flown with my dad.

As a history buff, he would've established the historical setting for what happened and why it happened, all the different players in the scenario and what developed because of it. By the end of the conversation, my head would be spinning and I'd have more questions than when I initially asked. But he told these endless stories and explanations of history so that I would understand the complexity of situations, and so I'd learn to be inquisitive. He taught me to look at the bigger picture and the "how" and "why" of life. Nowadays, we can spend hours talking, discussing anything and everything, especially debating politics and history.

His favorite subject has always been military history. He has a library of books on wars and loves watching WWII movies and the Military Channel. When I call home, I hear sounds of explosions and gunfire from the TV in the background and mom sighs, "We're fighting World War II in the living room again tonight."

The only thing that competes with his love for WWII movies, is his love for the Weather Channel. Few things thrill him more than a good hurricane, tornado or mudslide. One of the ways I know my dad cares is that he'll call to let me know there's a front or a storm on the way.

He was very excited when the tropical storm was on it's way, pondering if it would get to hurricane status and telling me to make sure I had enough candles and non-perishables and bottled water and ... you get the picture.

While cold or warm fronts don't thrill me, I love my dad's passion and enthusiasm for topics he's interested in.

He's also a joker. Nobody can make me laugh like my dad, although his puns are sometimes painful. His favorite joke, which I've heard more times than I can count, came about because there are seven kids in my family. Yes, seven. Dad's favorite line is, "I never knew when I married Snow White, the seven dwarfs came with the deal!"

This joke has spawned an immense collection of seven dwarfs kitsch at my parents' house from friends and family who have also heard the joke a million times. My folks have the Snow White needlepoint on the wall, the Snow White pillow on the couch, the seven dwarf figurines, and Snow White snowglobes and music boxes to name a few.

Now the seven dwarfs have gone forth and proliferated. It's so cute to see my dad as a grandpa. In fact, Tuesday my dad became a grandpa again as my sister's son, grandchild number 15, was born. Dad couldn't be prouder. He's been bragging non-stop to the neighbors. Maybe that's what makes a good dad — someone who is always proud of you, wants to teach you and make you smile. A good dad is someone who wants to see you grow up to be a good person and in turn a good parent.

Or maybe it's just about getting to spoil the grandkids.

Practice summer safety

Many families will travel great distances to be with relatives in a renewal of family ties this summer. Others prefer to spend the holiday fishing, boating, swimming or enjoying other outdoor activities, like those at Fort Benning. We must all be alert to the fact that there are many hazards associated with our summertime activities.

The accidents, which cause the most deaths during this period, involve driving and water activities. Ignoring good safety practices costs lives. Fasten seat belts when you are in a vehicle, take frequent rest breaks and always drive sober. Swim only in authorized areas with lifeguards on duty; and wear personal flotation devices while on a boat.

Prior to the upcoming four-day weekend, commanders and directors will inspect all Soldiers' privately owned vehicles. Leaders will ensure Soldiers, traveling further than 150 miles take the Next Accident Assessment at the Web site https://safety.army.mil/home.html. Completion of the assessment must be documented.

Have fun and enjoy a safe July 4th.

BUGGED ABOUT THE TIE?

These honey-do lists are hard to swallow

Melissa House
Bayonet staff

In case you've forgotten, we're trying to help you remember that Sunday is Father's Day. Get out there and buy that card, or that tie, or the Old Spice aftershave.

I bought all of those for my dad, at one time or another, when I was growing up. One year, I had my bubble burst when I heard my mother say that Dad preferred to pick out his own ties. I thought I had perfected the knack of finding just the right tasteful tie.

As a result, I've never suggested that my boys buy my husband a tie. I can count the number of times he's worn a tie (out of uniform) in the past 15 years on one hand.

I thought it would be fun to do a little research on some downright hardworking dads — ones that never rate even the most cliched of Father's Day gifts.

They're not human, but these dudes go above and beyond the call of duty in parenting their young.

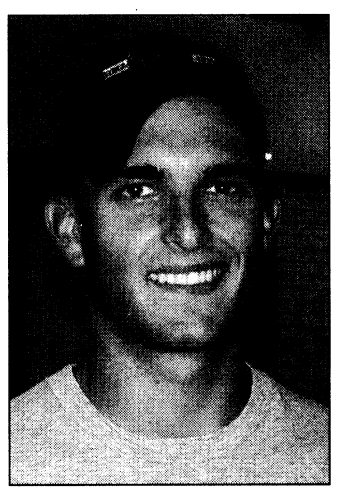
Red fox dads are quite attentive, providing their nursing mates with fresh food every four to six hours. I guess that's a little like breakfast in bed. As the pups get older, he trains them to find food and teaches them self-defense skills.

Male marmosets begin raising their young a few weeks after the babies are born, toting them around on their backs, which seems safer than the hardheaded catfish's technique. Dad catfish carries up to 48 marble-sized eggs in his mouth for 60 days.

Male emperor penguins lose up to half of their body weight during the two months they sit, shivering in the Arctic cold, to hatch their eggs, which explains why the female penguins fight for the plump men.

Seahorse dads are the ones that become pregnant, carrying their eggs in a pouch for up to six weeks. I bet that sounds pretty hooah to anyone who has given birth to a 9- or 10-pound baby without pain medication (not me). What seahorse babies lack in weight, they make up in quantity.

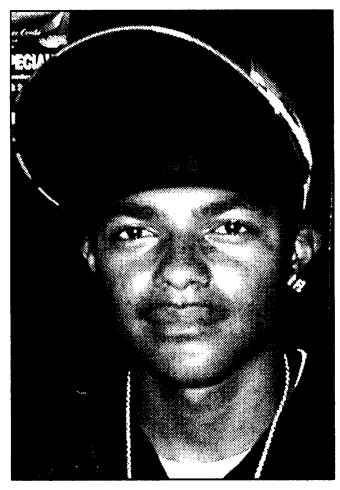
The seahorse may be the best example of a father, but I have a favorite of my own. I'm awarding this year's greatest dad tie to the giant water bug, probably the only male insect doing any kind of parenting.



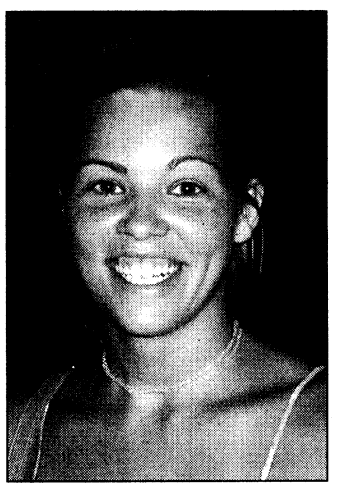
Once his mate lays about 150 eggs on his back, she leaves. Dad carries them for a month, doing deep knee bends to keep them aerated, of all things. He stops eating for the last week — to keep from accidentally eating the kids.

VARIOUS VOICES

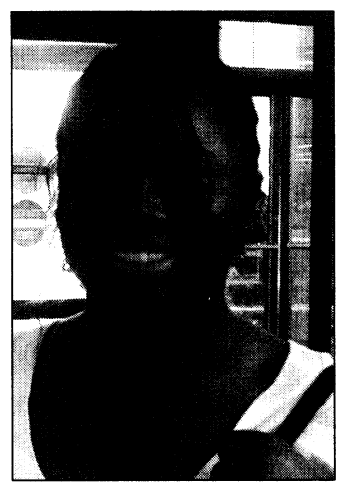
What do you like best about your dad?



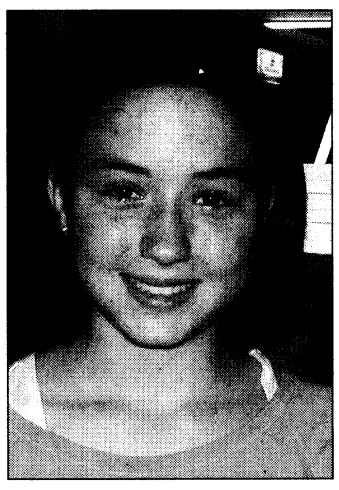
Danielle Brewster, family member — "My dad is really loving and caring. He works hard and is really good at his job in the National Guard. I like that even though he and my mom are divorced, they're still nice to each other, which makes it easier for me."



Pvt. Kevin Parsons, Ranger Indoctrination Program — "My dad is the coolest guy. When I was a kid, we were always going camping, hunting, or fishing. We still do lots of outdoor stuff when we get together. He's like my best friend."



Chamblee Johnson, family member — "My dad is really loving and caring. I like that he helps our country by being in the Army. When we spend time together, we like to play video games. We play the challenge games so we can play against each other. He's a nice dad."



Eloy Perez, family member — "My dad is very strict. If it wasn't for him, I think I would have gotten into a lot of trouble growing up. Now that I'm older, I understand why he was so strict, and I respect his views. I want to spend a lot more time with him before I leave for college in the fall."

Kasey Edds, family member — "My dad passed away recently, so Father's Day is kind of tough for me. My best memories with him are playing baseball with him as a kid. The whole family would come out and play. He was a great man."

Chastity Short, family member — "My dad is the best. He schools me and shows me how to be a good person. He is always there for me and my brothers."

Danielle Bennett, family member — "My dad is nice and fun to be around. I like that we go on road trips. We actually live in Missouri, but we're here to visit my sister while her husband is overseas. I like that my family is close and really loving."

OIF airborne combat medic tells all in memoir

Book provides closure after hard deployment

Spc. Eliamar Trapp
Assistant editor

As a small child, Elissa M. Lonsdale climbed trees and threw down her airborne G.I. Joe's. She never imagined she too would one day fall from the sky.

Now a staff sergeant combat medic working in the emergency room at Martin Army Community Hospital, Lonsdale looks back at the memory and laughs, "Who would've thought?"

Lonsdale joined the Army in 1997 as a senior in high school. She was not raised in a military family. The only girl out of five children, Lonsdale shocked her parents.

"At that time, my father was trying to talk my oldest brother into joining the Marines. I wanted to be on my own, travel and prove to myself that I could do it," Lonsdale said. "I surprised them."

Fred Lonsdale, her father, said she'd never even mentioned joining the military.

"She just came home one day and said, 'After I graduate, I'm going in the Army,'" her dad said. "I didn't know what to say. I am very proud of her and how far she has come. All of my clients know about my daughter in the Army."

Elissa became a combat medic.

After completing basic training, advanced individual training and Airborne School, she was assigned to Fort Bragg, N.C.

"I went to see her at Bragg and the equipment she was carrying weighed more than she did," Fred said. "As a parent I was concerned but I didn't say anything because I knew she was confident in herself."

Her self-confidence and determination earned her the expert field medical badge as a private first class at Fort Bragg.

"It took me two tries, but I finally got it," Elissa said. "I wanted to prove to myself that I could get it."

After spending three and a half years at Bragg, she moved to Vicenza, Italy, where she became part of the 173rd Airborne Brigade and deployed with the unit to Iraq.

That's where her story really starts.

"These years have definitely been an experience," Elissa said, an experience made even more unforgettable after her deployment to Iraq.

"I was sent to Iraq on the Fourth of July," she said. "I thought it was ironic I was going to war on that very day. I decided I would keep a journal."

Her journal would help her turn her experiences into a book — Blood, Tears and IV's: Memoirs of a U.S. Army Medic in Operation Iraqi Freedom.

In the book, Elissa recounts the good and the bad that comes out of war from a combat medics' perspective.

She tells the stories about the help her unit provided to Iraqis and even insurgents, but, more importantly, to her fellow Soldiers.

"In some ways this book is closure for me," Elissa said. "It's been almost two years and every once in a while I still have nightmares ... but I have memories that will last me a lifetime. Some good and some bad, but hey, you can't have everything perfect."

After her unit returned from Iraq in February 2004, Elissa said many of the Soldiers in her unit were command referred to see a psychologist to deal with post traumatic stress disorder.

Her doctor recommended she turn her journal into a book as "self therapy."

"I sat down one weekend and just started writing," Elissa said. "Once I began, I couldn't stop. Everything just came to me and I finished it that weekend."

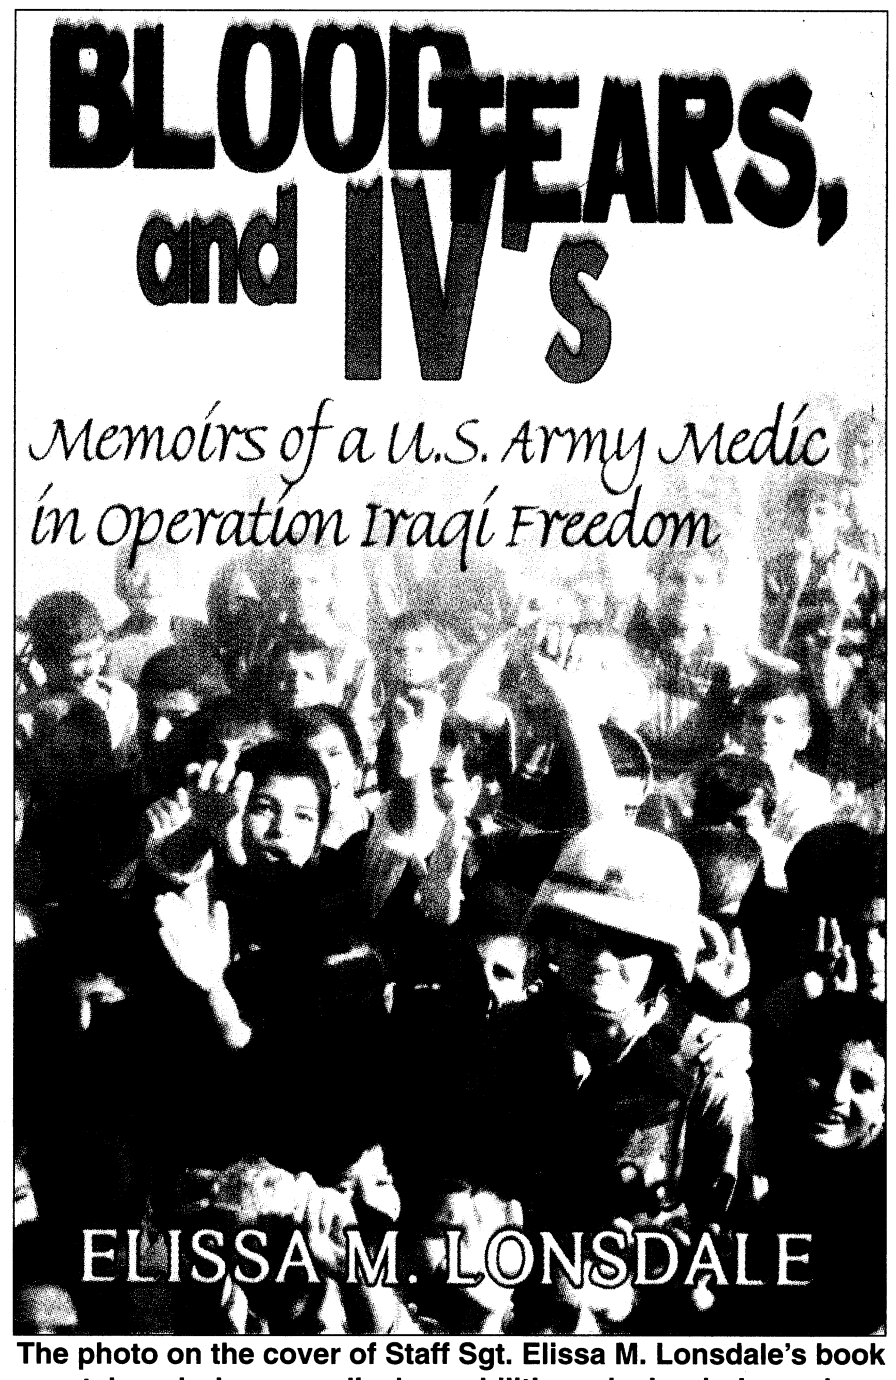
She hadn't thought much about publishing the book until she met Chuck Dean, a 173rd veteran who served in Okinawa. He was visiting the Soldiers of the 173rd and giving a seminar on PTSD. Dean also wrote several books about his time in the military.

Lonsdale

He edited the book for Elissa six chapters at a time and helped get it published. Blood, Tears and IV's: Memoirs of a U.S. Army Medic in Operation Iraqi Freedom will be released July 7 and is already available for pre-order online.

"This is just another way of proving to myself that I could do something," Elissa said. "If I got anything from this, it is the bonds I've made with the people who have helped me with it and those who I deployed with. I know I'll be e-mailing them until I'm fifty."

The 24-chapter book includes photographs of Elissa and her buddies and a few of Soldiers treated at her aid station.



"It's a small book, but after reading it, I know the content is worth every penny," her father said.

Elissa is currently training to become the ER supervisor. She has received a letter of acceptance from the Airborne School to become an instructor, or 'blackhat,' at Fort Benning.

"I love training Soldiers," Elissa said. "If I could go back to a field unit or to a training position, I would. There's nothing better than being out there getting dirty while training troops."

Fred said Elissa's come a long way from the teenager who used to sleep until noon every day during the summer.

"While Elissa was deployed, her commander wrote me a letter to inform me how well she was doing," Fred said. "He also told me that she was the only medic on a convoy when they were attacked, and said she did an outstanding job. That meant so much to me."

The convoy Fred is talking about was ambushed on Elissa's 25th birthday.

Three Soldiers, and friends of Elissa's, were injured during the attack. Elissa had to move fast to treat them.

She recounts the aftermath of the attack in her book:

"With overwhelming emotion and adrenaline, I stood there and watched the birds lift off. It was amazing. I knew those were my buddies and my comrades up there, and that they were going to be okay. The feeling of knowing I accomplished my job under these circumstances was incredible."

Panther battalion gets new commander

Kris Gonzalez
Bayonet staff

Lt. Col. Jesse Ward relinquished command of the 2nd Battalion, 47th Infantry Regiment, to Lt. Col. Dixon Gunther in a ceremony at the Pomeroy Field on Sand Hill Tuesday.

Ward, who assumed command June 25, 2003, will become the Basic Combat Training Brigade deputy commander.

The BCTB commander, Col. William Gallagher, said it was Ward's upbringing in Griffin, Ga., and his "backbreaking work" in a "sweltering textile mill" that made him a "great battalion commander."

"Jesse Ward is a great American success story," Gallagher said.

"He learned that people matter, your word is your bond, you lead by serving, and you are loyal to those who count on you."

Gallagher said Ward guided the battalion to a new level of quality and the battalion's accomplishments reflect Ward's leadership.

"(It is) a highly professional, cohesive and disciplined battalion where the training is tough, where everyone is treated right, and where Soldiers are inspired by the leadership," Gallagher said.

"He's been the ideal role model in command of new Soldiers."

Ward said the successes of his command were due to the caliber of the leaders and Soldiers.

"I was blessed with the finest cadre," he said.

Ward said he thought the battalion's drill sergeants are outstanding for transforming civilians into Soldiers in only 48 days. He said the more than 4,000 Soldiers trained in the battalion during his tenure were trained with one purpose in mind — "to fight, win and survive on the battlefield."

Ward, who said he's never been a "yes man," thanked his own leaders for their role in his successes.

Gunther

Ward

"It has truly been a pleasure coming to work every day despite the couple of occasions where we were in complete and utter disagreement," Ward said to Gallagher.

He praised the battalion executive officer, Maj. Greg Way, for being the "best XO on Sand Hill," and he recognized the camaraderie he shared with the battalion Command Sgt. Maj. Thomas Zoch.

"There is absolutely no daylight between us on issues, as we think very much alike," said Ward, who also commended Maj. Gen. Benjamin Freakley for being the "most energetic, enthusiastic and passionate" commanding general he has met in a long time.

"I appreciate the energy and vision he brought with him to Fort Benning," Ward said.

But the people Ward said he owed the most gratitude to were his wife and children.

"Marrying Robin Buffington was the smartest thing I ever did," he said. "Truly, they (Anna and Matthew) and Robin are the reason I get up every day and put on the uniform."

The incoming commander is no stranger to Georgia. He was commissioned as a second lieutenant in 1988 after earning his bachelor's degree in political science from the University of Georgia. He's a graduate of the Airborne, Ranger, Air Assault and Bradley Commander's courses.

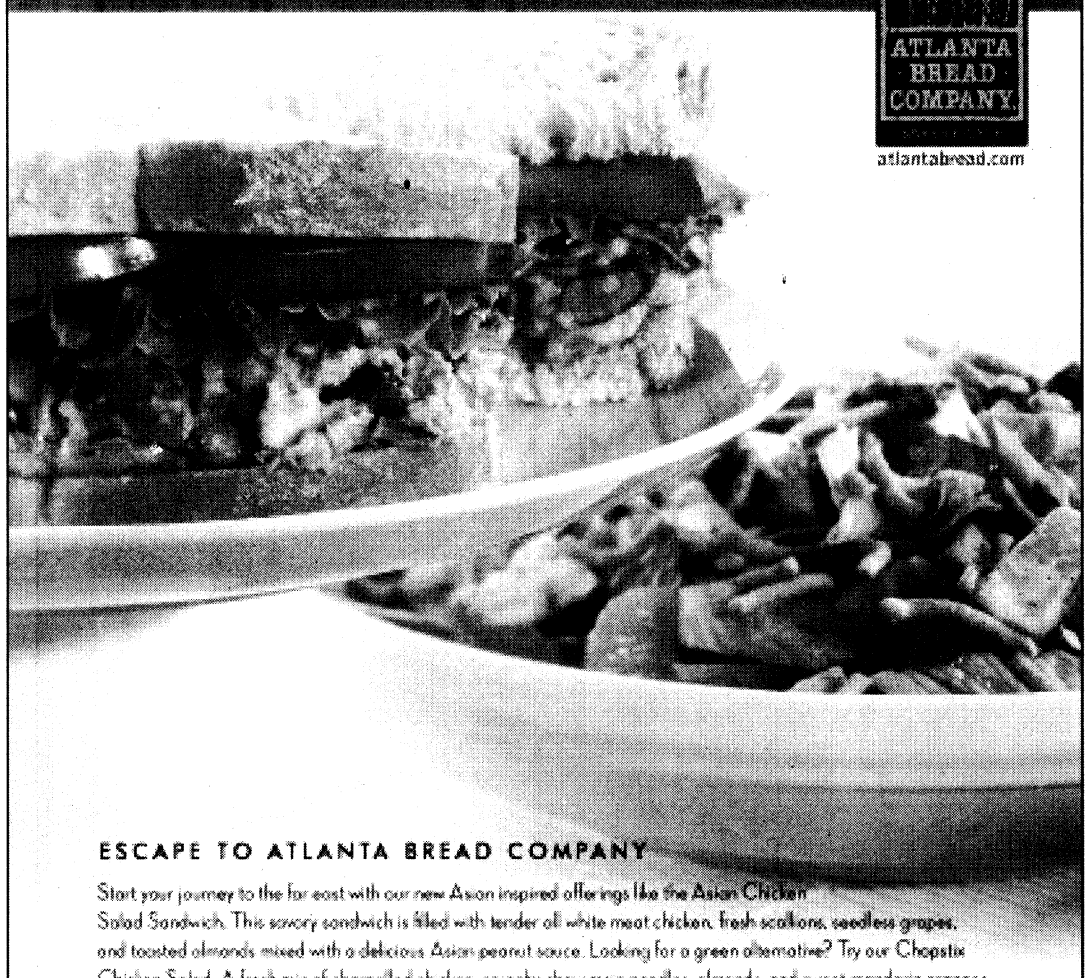
Gunther has served in Texas, Alaska, Louisiana and Washington. His last assignment was the ground operations officer for the U.S. Southern Command in Miami, Fla.

Gallagher said Gunther's background and leadership experience make him the ideal choice to guide the battalion "to even higher levels of excellence."

Ward said Gunther "will lead this unit to greater things."

Gunther, "honored and humbled to have the opportunity to take command," said he will endeavor to be a commander who, as his dad used to put it, "contributes more light than heat."

Gunther brings with him his wife, Katie, and two sons, Sean and Jack.



Brandon McGahee

Cerjan takes command of 1/29 from Flowers

Tawny Archibald Campbell
Bayonet staff

Lt. Col Jack Flowers relinquished command of the 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment, to Lt. Col Robert Cerjan Wednesday at York Field.

Flowers, a Georgia native who assumed command in 2003, will remain at Fort Benning as the chief, Infantry Futures Group and chief, Office of Infantry Proponency.

During his command working with the Bradley, Stryker and Expeditionary Force Company, Flowers and his battalion trained more than 1,530 students to lead mechanized warriors and perform as master gunners. The unit trained students in 51 courses for a total of 115,893 hours, drove 140,000 miles and held more than 150 displays and demonstrations.

"When I think about the will to train, fight and win, I think of this Outrider Battalion in front of us today, and Lieutenant Colonel Jack Flowers," said Col. Frank Harman III, commander of the 29th Infantry Regiment.

"This training battalion and training battalion commander have done so much to ensure training support, excellence and Soldier readiness."

Harman referred to the battalion's support of the Infantry Training Brigade, Ranger Training Brigade, 11th Infantry Regiment, 75th Ranger Regiment and a multitude of skill courses.

"Jack Flowers ensured tactical commanders and their Soldiers had the required skills set to fight and win on both the conventional battlefield and the asymmetric battlefield," Harman said. "All of us, who have had the privilege to command a battalion, know the battalion becomes a part of you, physically, mentally and emotionally, and that battalion takes on your personality.

Cerjan

Flowers

"The 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment has definitely taken on Jack Flowers' personality — tough, determined, disciplined and standards-based."

Flowers thanked the battalion for allowing him to serve and said he is confident turning the unit over to Cerjan.

"There is no officer I know more qualified to lead the Outriders than Rob Cerjan," Flowers said. "It's been my pleasure and privilege to serve with him twice before. He is a superb leader and Soldier."

Cerjan is returning to his old stomping grounds. He was assigned to the U.S. Army Infantry School as a small group instructor in 1996 and later assumed the duties as the chief of Leadership in the Combined Arms and Leadership Division.

"Lieutenant Colonel Jack Flowers and I have known each other for the majority of our careers, and I could not think of a better person, or friend, to follow in command," Cerjan said. "Jack, thank you for all your assistance and for the reputation that you have established over the last two years."

Benning Soldiers jump into Normandy during anniversary

Bridgett Siter

The 1st Battalion (Airborne), 507th Parachute Infantry Regiment took the lead on planning Fort Benning's involvement in D-Day anniversary events.

Put yourself in their jump boots.

That was Col. K.K. Chinn's thought as he parachuted into Ste. Mere Eglise, Normandy, June 6 on the anniversary of the famed massive D-Day jump of 1944. High winds and overcast skies delayed, and very nearly canceled, this year's annual anniversary jump.

"But it was nothing like what they went through sixty-one years ago," said Chinn, commander of the Ranger Training Brigade and one of 110 Soldiers who traveled from Fort Benning to participate in the event.

"These guys did it in the middle of the night with nothing like we have today," he said. "They didn't have maps, GPSs, no communication whatsoever, no radios … Put yourself in that situation, and it's mind boggling to think what they went through and what they accomplished."

In years past, there was no need to "put yourself in their jump boots." Their jump boots were occupied. For more than 10 years, D-Day veterans joined the re-enactment jump themselves. This year, fewer than 100 veterans attended the event, and none took to the skies.

This year's celebration, which included festivals and several leader development programs, was low key in comparison with last year's 60th anniversary, when President Bush joined leaders from around the world for what was likely the last of the milestone D-Day celebrations.

"The numbers are dwindling, naturally. We won't see another one like last year," said Command Sgt. Maj. Douglas Greenway, the RTB's command sergeant major, who jumped into Normandy for the second time. The experience was no less moving or humbling than the first, he said.

The LDPs included stops at various battle sites, where Fort Benning Soldiers, who'd been tasked to do the research, led a discussion — a 61-year "after action review" of the battles.

The tour also included various cemeteries, including the Normandy American Cemetery, the final resting place of 9,386 servicemen, most who died during the 80-day Battle of Normandy.

Hard put to pick a favorite memory, Greenway said the commemorative jump "was definitely one of the highlights" of the trip.

"You jump out of that plane, and France opens up below you, and thousands of people are down there on the ground cheering and applauding. There's nothing like it," Greenway said. "It makes you want to come home, snatch up the family and put them on a plane and head back there, so they can see it for themselves."

Maj. Bob Risdon, the operations officer for the 1st Battalion (Airborne), 507th Parachute Infantry Regiment, the unit that took the lead in planning Fort Benning's involvement in this year's event, said the annual weeklong celebration serves dual purposes.

"The people over there really appreciate everything the Americans did for them, and they show it," Risdon said. "But you'll find a lot of veterans who feel the same way about the French. They opened their arms to the Soldiers, took them in and gave them food and water and shelter, and they've never forgotten it. It's a great mutual respect."

The jump was the last for Command Sgt. Maj. Mike Kelso, Fort Benning's command sergeant major, who retires next month. Kelso, who has made about 200 jumps and seven in combat, was the first one out of the plane June 6.

"If a guy has to make his last jump, and it can't be in combat, Normandy's the next best thing," he said.

Fasnacht: Remembered as dedicated leader

everything I can to help the battalion.'"

Not long after that conversation, Fasnacht became the leader of 2nd Platoon, B Company.

"He took off running and never looked back," Hauquitz said. "He led from the front. He was a natural leader. His death was not in vain. His actions were heroic in measure, and he will not be forgotten."

Fasnacht, 25, was commissioned as an officer Dec. 26, 2002. Following his military schooling, he was assigned to Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 1st Bn., 15th Inf. Regt., as the assistant adjutant officer until he was reassigned to B Co.

Fasnacht attended Airborne School, Air Assault School, Infantry Officers Basic Course, Ranger School, Mortar Leader Course and the Bradley Leader Course.

Fasnacht is survived by his wife, Tresa Fasnacht, his mother, Marny, and his father, Raymond E. Fasnacht.

CTMC: Expected to make doctor visits easier said. And, because the new building will house three clinics, management will find it easier to shift personnel to meet the need of units served.

The clinic is expected to accommodate 150 to 200 patients per day, or about 37,800 per year, Hendricks said.

"The principal benefits to the Soldiers are the ability of MEDDAC to provide timely medical evaluation and treatment closer to where Soldiers live and train, and ultimately return those Soldiers to training sooner," Hendricks said.

"No longer will Soldiers have to leave their TMCs and travel to the hospital to obtain most laboratory and X-ray tests," he said.

Medical personnel will be able to collaborate face-to-face as they work on difficult cases, provide each other backup at times of high demand and produce faster test results, Hendricks said.

The building was designed by the Cromwell Architects Engineers of Little Rock, Ark., and will be built by Speegle Construction of Niceville, Fla. The U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, Savannah District, that supervised the construction of the MACH half a century ago, will oversee the new project, which is expected to be completed by October 2006.

Planning for the facility was guided by the Health Facilities Planning Agency which collaborated with healthcare providers, representatives from radiology, pathology, pharmacy and physical therapy, Hendricks said. The HFPA team was very open to suggestions and they conducted group discussions until a consensus was made, Hendricks said.

They "covered every aspect of the clinic, from the size of the rooms and the flow of the clinic, to providing the most up to date and state of the art equipment," Hendricks said.

Thomas Boutwell, of the HFPA and on-site manager, said he felt great embarking on such a project and working with this team of professionals. Hendricks agreed that it was "fascinating to observe the whole process of creating a clinic" both from a clinical as well as administrative stand-point.

Weapons: To help Soldiers train

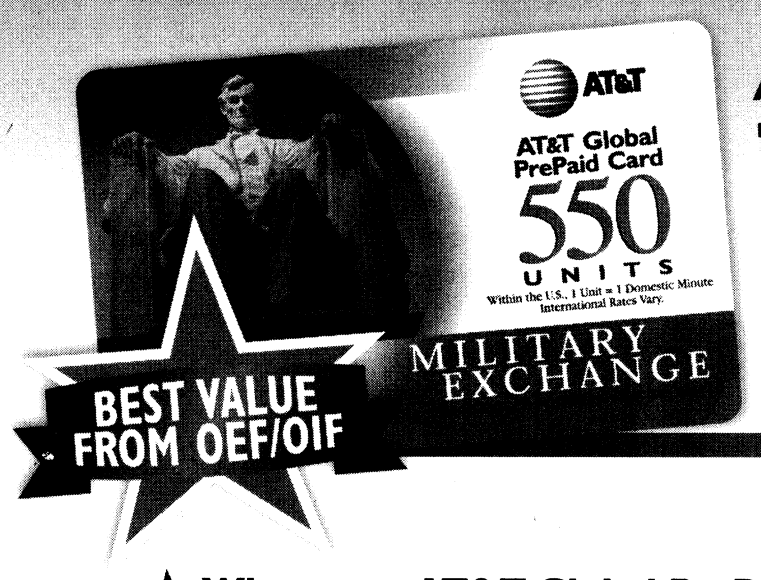
In addition to firing from an outdoor test stand or from the shoulder, the effectiveness of safely firing an antiarmor round from within a wood and metal frame structure was also demonstrated.

Spc. Brian Blick, an AT4 instructor with the 29th Infantry, fired a BDM sub-caliber trainer with a 21 mm rocket insert followed by a live munition, against an earth and timber bunker.

Following the successful impact on target, Blick told Freakley that the training device was "almost identical to firing the live round."

Pleased with the results and answers produced by Blick, the commanding general presented him with a CG coin.



Confessing that he "didn't want to miss in front of all these people," Blick said he "thought (the BDM sub-caliber trainer) was awesome. I liked it a lot."

Although several engineering modifications are still needed to bring these new devices to the troops, the M-141 BDM is currently used by Soldiers in Operation Enduring Freedom and Operation Iraqi Freedom to destroy bunkers and enemy positions in buildings.

Slow down when driving on and off post. Follow all speed limits. It's not only the smart thing to do, it's the law.

PURCHASE THE BEST VALUE PREPAID CARD AT YOUR MILITARY EXCHANGE

AT&T Global PrePaid Cards offer low rates that are optimized for military personnel calling home to the U.S.

The 550-Unit AT&T Global PrePaid Card offers deployed soldiers the best value when calling to the U.S. from Operation Enduring Freedom and Operation Iraqi Freedom — just 19¢ a minute when the Card is purchased at any OEF/OIF location. When purchased online or at other Exchange locations in the U.S. and around the world, it's just 21¢ a minute.*

★ Where can AT&T Global PrePaid Cards be purchased?
Buy yours at your local Exchange or online at www.aafes.com. Friends and family of military personnel can also purchase Cards for you at this site. When deployed in Iraq, Afghanistan and Kuwait, Cards can be purchased at the Exchange, where the price of the 550-Unit Card is just $35.

When calling within the U.S., 1 unit equals 1 minute of calling. When making international calls from overseas, more units are used per minute of call time and the number of units is different based on the country you are calling from. For example, when using the 550-Unit Card, for calls made from OEF/OIF to the U.S., 1 minute equals 3 units of call time. So the 550-Unit Card is good for 183 minutes of calling. For information on other countries, just call the 800 Customer Service number on the back of your Card.

★ Optimized military rates. Great AT&T benefits:
- Minutes never expire.
- Low rates. Remember, prepaid cards bought at other retailers may have higher overseas rates.
- Recharge with AT&T Autominutes® and never run out of minutes.
- Toll free Customer Service available 24/7.
- INFO TO GO available† with weather, sports and more!

★ Visit Camp AT&T.
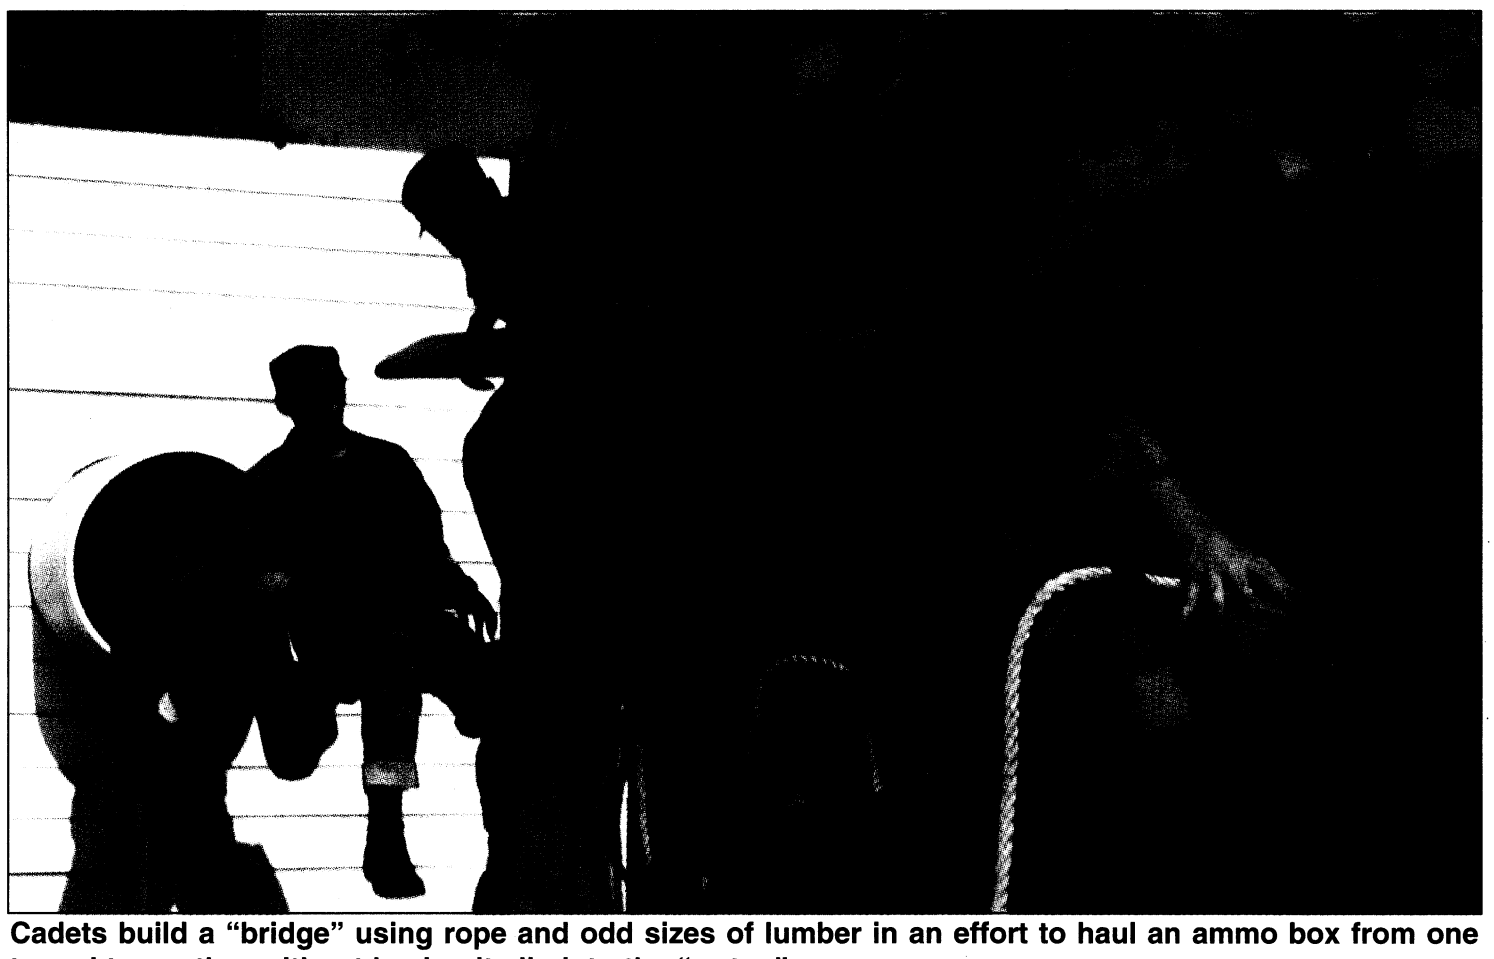
Before you're deployed, go to www.att.com/mil and check out the Camp AT&T section. It contains information on calling from all the forward-deployed areas, other overseas locations and from U.S. Naval ships.



AT&T

*A surcharge of at least 10 units/minutes (subject to increase) applies to pay phone calls. Units are based on U.S. domestic calling. International rates are higher than U.S. domestic rates, differ according to destination called and are subject to change. Rates may be higher for calls made to or from mobile phones. At each station throughout the obstacle course, cadets stopped to help each other, shouting encouragement and lending a hand (or two) along the way.

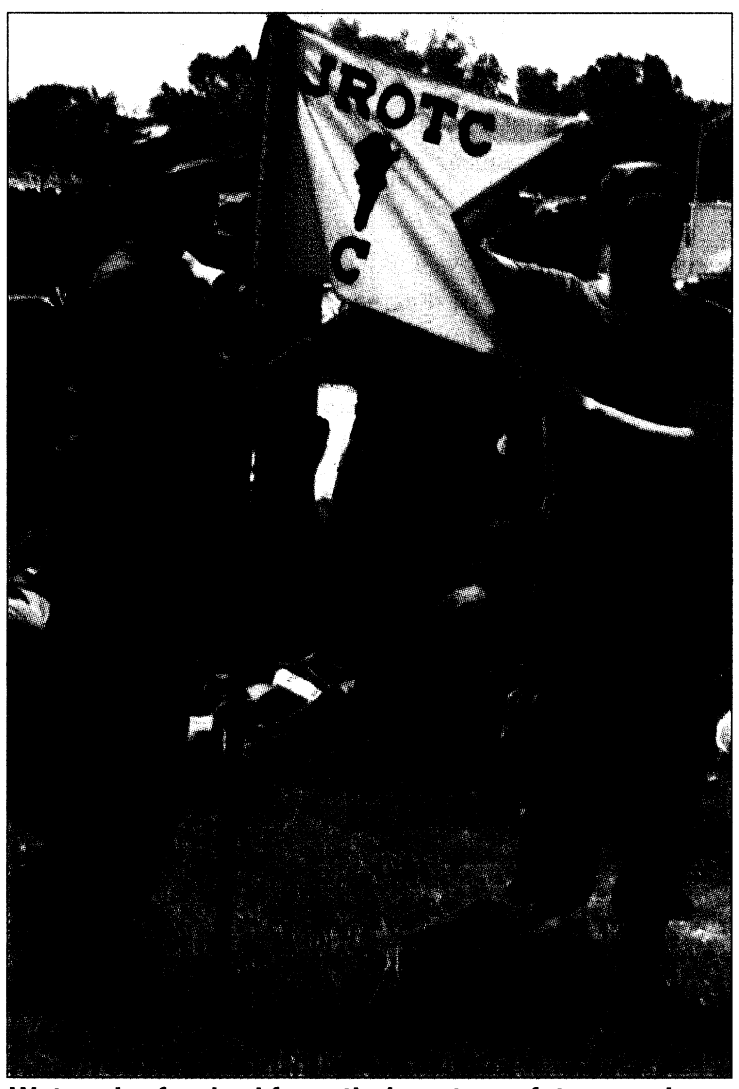
Cadets build a "bridge" using rope and odd sizes of lumber in an effort to haul an ammo box from one tunnel to another without having it slip into the "water."



Relying on her instructor, this blindfolded student anticipates plunging into the pool below as she is guided to the edge of the diving board.

Atlanta JROTC students learn ropes at Fort Benning

Donna Hyatt
Bayonet staff

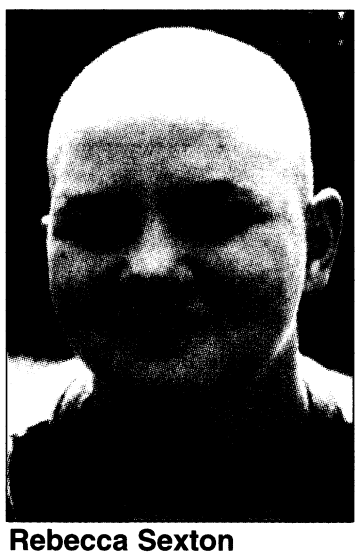
Almost 300 teenagers from Atlanta and surrounding areas descended upon Fort Benning this week for the Junior Reserve Officer Training Corps leadership training course.

JROTC is designed to teach high school students the value of citizenship, leadership, service to community, personal responsibility and a sense of accomplishment.

Wet and refreshed from their water safety exercises, these two young men proudly display their guidon. Four companies were formed from the 16 Atlanta-area high schools that attended the training event.

Retired Col. Arthur L. Holmes Jr., director of Army instruction for the Atlanta schools and camp commander of this week's training event, said this year's program also exposes the students to "the fun side of Army life."

"It motivates the kids and teaches them teamwork," he said. "This is really what it's all about."



The fun included four days of land navigation, water safety, confidence and obstacle courses, self defense, rappel training, jumping from a 34-foot tower, and math and science courses.

The students were housed in the dorm rooms at Columbus State University and shuttled to different sites throughout the hot, humid days.

"This is the best thing," said Rebecca Sexton, a 17-year-old senior at East Paulding High School in Hiram, Ga. "I've decided to join the Army this August in the delayed entry program and leave for basic training when I graduate next May."

Sexton has already chosen to become an aerial experimental vehicle operator.

"We're not recruiting anyone to go into the military," said Holmes, "even though a lot of them make a decision to do so. It's a great opportunity for them.

Rebecca Sexton donated her hip-length hair to the Locks for Love cancer charity before summer break.

Our main focus is patriotism, leadership and citizenship."

Atlanta Public Schools created the first JROTC in 1918, two years after Congress established a nationwide program.

Now comprised of 10 units, enrollment for the Atlanta JROTC in the last school year was approximately 21 percent of the total high school enrollment.

Many of the Atlanta area's principals and administrators traveled to Columbus for an awards ceremony Thursday night.

Following JROTC training, Holmes estimates that "about 20 percent of our students opt to go into the military."

Depending on teamwork to create an evacuation route for a wounded Soldier, these students are now learning the importance of making a secure pallet before attempting a transport.

Combatives tournament first of kind at Sand Hill

2nd Bn., 54th Inf. Regt. nabs trophy, bragging rights

Tawny Archibald Campbell
Bayonet staff

The team from 2nd Battalion, 54th Infantry Regiment, left Santiago Gym with the first ever Sand Hill Combatives Tournament trophy Saturday.

The competition was fierce, as teams from seven of the 10 Sand Hill units grappled to see who would walk away with bragging rights.

Coming into Saturday's tournament, Sgt. 1st Class Jon Preston, event organizer, said he had a pretty good idea who would win the title, and the guys from 2nd Bn., 54th Inf. Regt., didn't let him down.

"From the get go they immediately organized a team," Preston said. "They had a solid team and it showed they had been practicing."

The team's captain, Capt. Ben Fielding, with C Company, is no stranger to grappling. He's the Child and Youth Services wrestling coach and wrestled throughout high school and college.

"This was an outstanding tournament, the first of its kind at Fort Benning," Fielding said. "This got the ball rolling for future combatives tournaments here."

Fielding said the tournament was good for the participants and spectators.

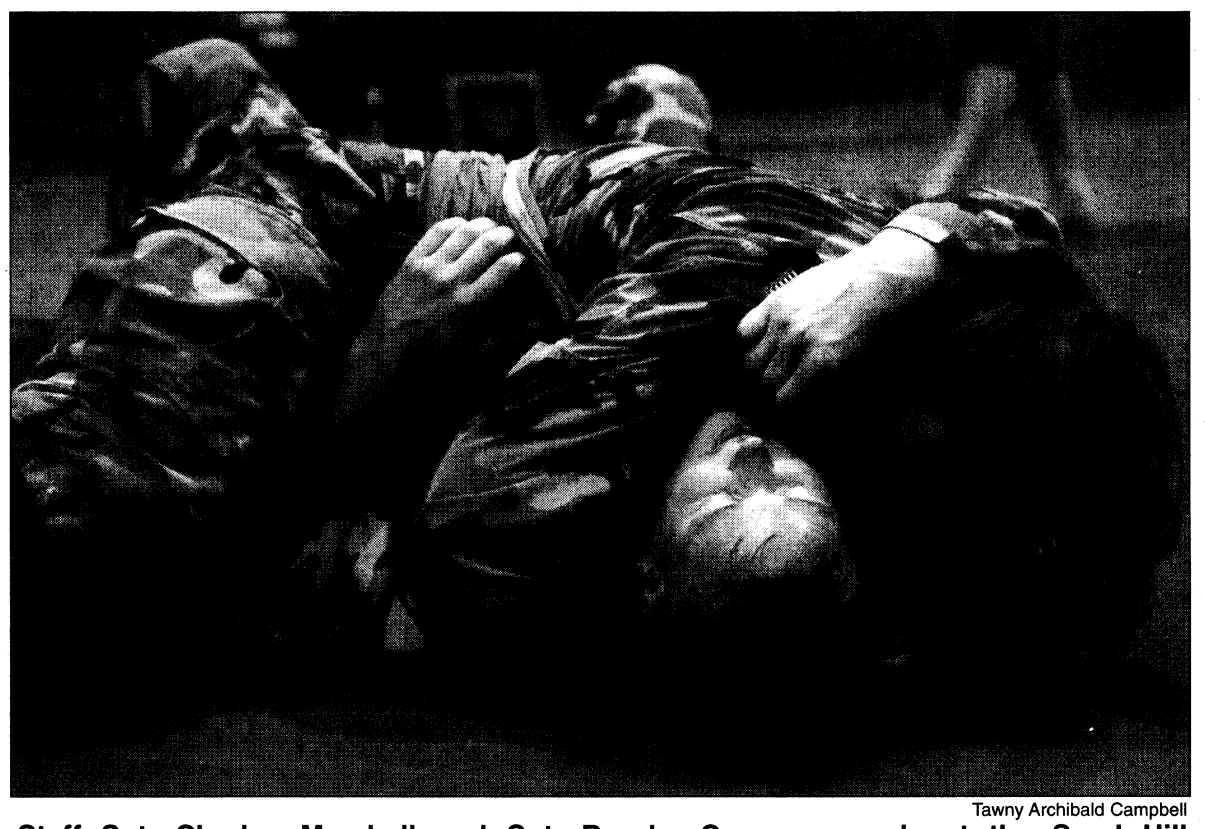
"It showed the basic trainees what it means to have personal courage and what it takes to roll on the mat. They saw their drill sergeants and company commanders compete, and it showed them that, hey, we practice what we preach, and we do it at a high skill level."

Fielding's team also included Staff Sgt. Charles Marshall, Sgt. 1st Class Peter Delgado and Staff Sgt. Richard Sanchez.

The second place team was from 2nd Bn., 58th Inf. Regt., and third place was a tie between 1st Bn., 19th Inf. Regt., and 1st Bn., 329th Inf. Regt.

"Historically, we don't like events to end in a tie," Preston said.

"But every match was so close that the Soldiers (from both teams) needed to be recognized."



Preston said he was extremely proud of all the Soldiers who competed.

"Even guys who didn't win in a match today are light years above those who didn't show up," Preston said. "And when the dust settles, people will see how this pushed them to do better."

Sand Hill cadre struggle for dominant positioning during the Sand Hill Combatives Tournament Saturday.

Only female in tournament says 'Why not?'

Tawny Archibald Campbell
Bayonet staff

Sgt. Brook Corson stood out among her peers Saturday. She was dressed like everyone else and had the same training as her competitors, but she was the only female to compete in the Sand Hill Combatives Tournament.

Corson, with 1st Battalion, 50th Infantry Regiment, is surrounded by male Soldiers, so competing in a male dominated sport is not unusual for her. So, when she heard about the competition, she thought, "Why not?"

"I'm not doing this as a woman thing, because there are no males or females on the mats," Corson said. "We're competitors. And it's all about technique.

"It wasn't meant to be this way — me as the only female. It just happened," said Corson, who is committed to learning more about combatives. She works out at Sand Hill Army Combatives an hour each day. She also trains at a combatives school in Phenix City three nights a week.

Sgt. 1st Class Jon Preston, combatives tournament organizer, said Corson is an example to those around her.

"She hates the fact that we put the spotlight on her," Preston said. "But her being here shows that she is a Soldier first."

Corson didn't win any of her bouts on Saturday, but she isn't giving up.

"This is my first Army tournament and I have learned a lot," she said. "I hope to get better and compete more."

Besides combatives, Corson is one of the few females to compete in intramural softball. She is also a triathlete.

Yeah, the noise from Fort Benning ranges can be hard on the ears, but so can the 4th of July. The noise of the average firecracker is 150 decibels — 160 at close range. That's less than the sound of an ambulance siren. Noise levels of 140 decibels can cause hearing damage after just one exposure.

Early celebration means more fun

Festivities, fireworks bigger, better

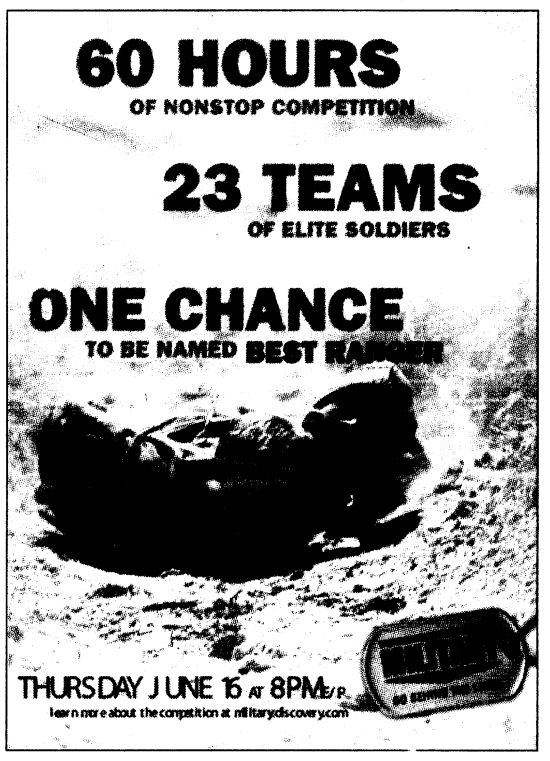
Following a long-standing tradition of celebrating Independence Day before the 4th of July, Fort Benning's festivities will begin at 4 p.m. June 30 on York Field.

As in years past, the celebration offers something for everyone, including the nearly 500 basic trainees who will be bussed in from Sand Hill to attend the event.

Military equipment will be on display, and the Rangers will perform a "SPIES and FRIES" mission where Soldiers will be inserted and extracted by helicopter near York Field. Fort Benning's Silver Wings will jump.

Live entertainment is scheduled throughout the afternoon and evening ranging from patriotic music performed by the U.S. Infantry Center Band, to a concert by country musician David Staton, who performed in January at the send-off ceremony for deploying Fort Benning Soldiers.

A flag pageant will precede the fireworks display, which should be the largest fireworks show on post to date.



There will be 22 kid-friendly rides. Wristbands allowing unlimited play for the evening are available for $7, or $25 for four.

Refreshments will be available from a number of vendors.

Admission and parking for the event are free, and the public is welcome to attend.

Other celebrations in the tricommunity include Thunder on the Hooch — A God and Country Celebration, which starts at 10 a.m. July 4 on the banks of Chattahoochee River in Columbus and Phenix City, the Old Fashioned 4th of July, from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m., in Pine Mountain, Ga., and the celebration at Westville, Georgia's working 1850 town.

Military Channel hosts Rangers

Bridgett Siter

Col. Tex Turner took command of the Ranger Department in 1982, shortly after the first Best Ranger Competition. Back then, it cost about $11,000 to move 50 teams from Camp Rogers on Fort Benning to Camp Merrill in North Georgia and Camp Rudder in Florida. The competition progressed much the way Ranger training progressed, which made it difficult for the audience to follow.

Turner was in charge of the competition the next two years. He changed the venue to make it "spectator friendly," videotaped it and "invited the world."

"It caught on quick," said Turner, now retired and living in Williamsburg, Va. "We had spectators all over the place and good press. But nothing like this. I never thought I'd see something like this."

"This" was the private screening of the first hour of the Military Channel's three-hour BRC special. Turner was among nearly 30 guests invited to the event June 9 at Discovery Channel headquarters in Silver Springs, Md., just outside Washington, D.C. Discovery is the parent company of the Military Channel, which has existed less than a year.

The three-hour BRC special, which aired Thursday night for the first time, is "a landmark achievement in our brief history," said David Karp, the Military Channel's general manager. "It has drama, humor, ingenuity, intensity and passion — all essential components of a great story. This was a very exciting opportunity for us."

Michael Hoff, of Michael Hoff Productions, recognized the BRC's "untapped potential" after watching news clips of last year's competition. He contacted Ranger Training Brigade officials last summer, before the Military Channel's debut, and began to negotiate the rights to film, which meant several trips to Fort Benning and a crash course in Ranger history. It also meant hours and hours of "land nav" through the woods and lakes and rural trails of the competition course as Hoff developed his own strategy to win the BRC ratings competition.

He brought eight film crews and about 20 journalists to cover the event in April and positioned them in areas along the route traditionally off limits to civilians.

Granting Hoff unprecedented access resulted

Kids learn Bible lessons with Serengeti theme

More than 140 Fort Benning children showed up this week for a Serengeti Trek. The trek was the theme for this summer's Vacation Bible School — an annual, multidenominational venture.

"It's flowing like a river," said VBS director Lolita Allen, as the children filed into the White Elementary cafeteria for a quick snack between stations Wednesday. The program, for children in preK through fifth grade, presents Bible lessons that are reinforced in each activity the children participate in, including snack time.

Allen said the preK children participate in "Cub Club" activities, while the older children are divided into mixed-age groups of about 10 kids, each with a crew leader and an assistant.

"The mixed age groups put the older kids in leadership roles," Allen said. "They like that."

Many of Allen's crew leaders are teens or young adults, including her son Brandon, who is leading the games station for the second year.

Cormac Burns, 7, gathers noodles during VBS "Wild Games" Wednesday at White Elementary.

"The first year, I was a little scared," Brandon said. "I just like it when a kid comes to me at the end of the day and says he liked the games. I feel like I reached somebody."

Brandon said he made sure the trekkers had a water break to cool off after finishing their

Garrison commander meets with residents in noise zone

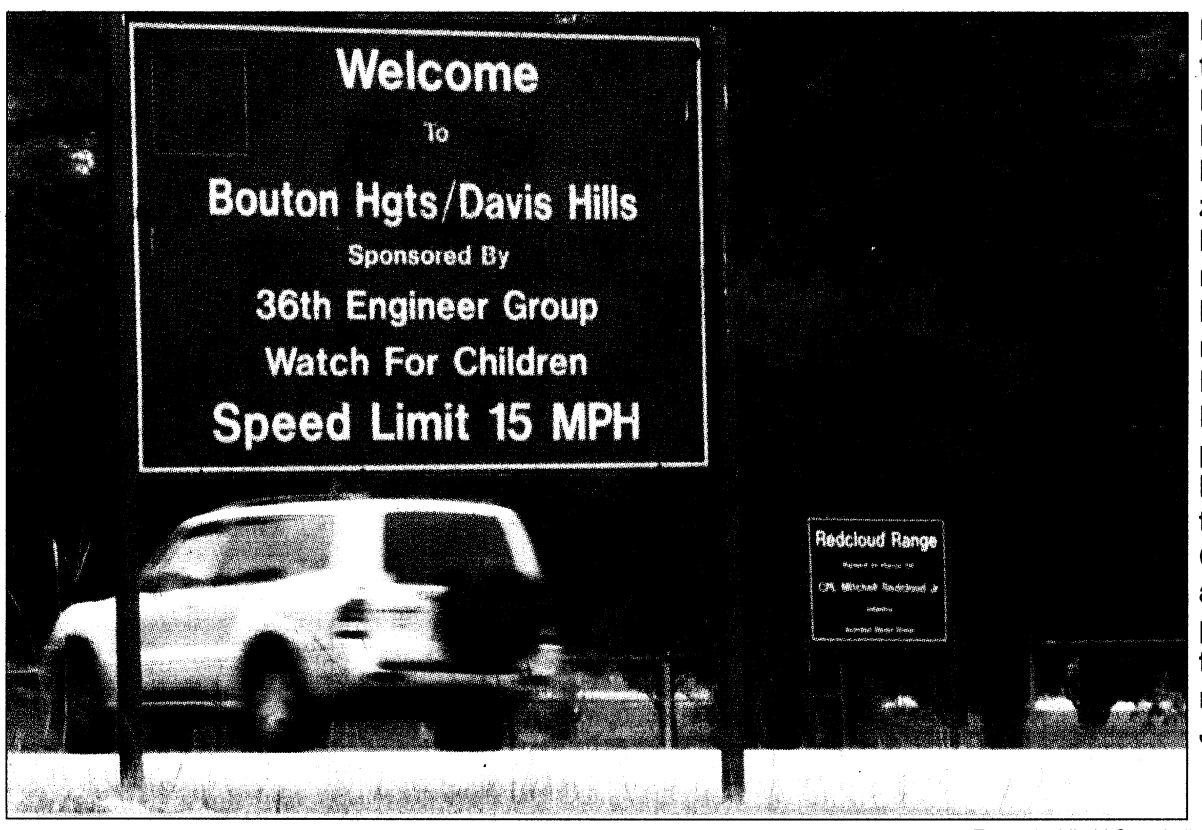
58 families affected by range noise

Tawny Archibald Campbell
Bayonet staff

In a town hall meeting June 2, Col. Rick Riera, garrison commander, addressed a group of 30 residents about the impending moves of 58 families living in the "noise level three zone," an area in Bouton Heights exposed to a potentially hazardous noise level from Redcloud Range.

The meeting was to discuss the options for residents living within the flagged area and to explain why the families were contacted to move.

Riera explained that originally 320 houses were identified as possibly being affected by hazardous noise from the range. After further research and modeling, this number was reduced to 94 units.



Due to Army regulations and legal liability implications, these homes cannot be transferred to the Residential Community Initiative. Only 58 of the quarters are currently occupied by families, Riera said.

The plan now is for these homes to remain Army property. By doing this, Riera said, families will have a choice of when and where they will move.

Families moving to other installations or those leaving the military within the next six to nine months shouldn't be affected, Riera said.

But families who will be here for several years will have to move eventually.

See NOISE, B-3

Fifty eight families in the Bouton Heights' "noise level three zone," will have to relocate, because the noise from Redcloud Range is potentially hazardous to the residents. Col. Rick Riera addressed the problem in a town hall meeting June 2.

Common sun questions answered by Dr.

Dr. David Scott Lind
MCG Health System

As Depression-era humorist Will Rogers once said, "I never expected to see the day when the girls would get sunburned in the places they do now."

Since Rogers' day, popular culture has dictated even skimpier outfits for the beach and pool, for both men and women.

And more sun exposure means an increased risk of skin cancer.

More than 1 million skin cancers are diagnosed annually. The majority of these could be prevented by protecting skin from sun exposure.

Below is a list of common questions about the best way to protect your skin.

1) Is it OK to tan if you are wearing sunscreen?

Tanning indicates a change in your skin, so no tan is healthy or safe. Use a broad-spectrum sunscreen that blocks both UVA and UVB rays with an SPF of at least 15 (30 or higher if you have a history of skin cancer).

Remember you need to apply sunscreen about an hour before going outside. Reapply sunscreen every two hours, more often if you are swimming.

2) How often should I wear sunscreen?

It is best to wear sunscreen every day. You should routinely use sunscreen if you will be exposed to the sun for more than 10 to 15 minutes. Driving, sitting in your office in front of a window and walking outside expose you to the sun. So try incorporating sunscreen application into your daily schedule.

Products such as moisturizer and sunscreen combos and spritzable sunscreens make daily application a little easier.

3) Do African-Americans or others with dark skin need to worry about sunscreen?

Yes. Darker skin still tans, burns and is just as susceptible to skin cancer.

4) Don't I need sun exposure to ensure I get adequate levels of Vitamin D?

You only need about 5 to 15 minutes of sun exposure two to three times a week on your face and hands for your body to produce a sufficient supply of Vitamin D. In addition, milk and other Vitamin D-rich foods and multivitamins are excellent sources of Vitamin D.

5) Do I still need to wear sunscreen during the winter or on cloudy days?

The sun may not feel hot during the winter or on cloudy days, but the UVA and UVB rays are still there and are being absorbed by your skin. So remember your sunscreen and your protective gear even when the weather is not hot.

6) Is it safe to tan in a tanning bed?

Tanning beds use ultraviolet light, similar to the UVA and UVB rays emitted by the sun. In fact, the effects of UV exposure are intensified in a tanning bed. Spending an hour in a tanning bed is equivalent to spending several hours outside in the sun.

7) Doesn't a tan help you look healthier?

Too much sun actually ages you prematurely. Compare skin on your face and hands with skin on a part of your body that is not regularly exposed to the sun and see the difference. It's another compelling reason to protect your skin from the damaging effects of sunlight.

This summer, protect your skin from sun exposure through regular use of sunscreen, and make it a habit that you continue throughout the year.

Fire prevention tips for children

Better Business Bureau

Teaching children the importance of home fire prevention and protection is essential year-round, but should receive special attention during the summer months, particularly if children are home alone.

The three main steps for protecting your family from the threat of fire are minimizing fire hazards, installing smoke detectors and fire extinguishers and developing a family escape plan.

One of the most likely places to find fire hazards is in the kitchen. Children who operate the stove and other appliances without supervision should be taught what to do in case of a cooking fire. For example, if the contents of a pan catch fire, they should know to turn the heat off and cover the pan with a lid to smother the flames. Never throw water on the fire. In case of an oven fire, close the oven door and turn off the heat.

Other household fire hazards can involve overloaded extension cords, and running electrical cords under rugs, behind radiators or over hoods or nails.

Summertime tips include keeping the barbecue a safe distance from the house, and never leaving a burning grill unattended, especially if young children are nearby. Also, store flammable and combustible liquids away from potential sources of heat and sparks.

Smoke detectors should be placed outside each sleeping area in the home, on each floor, including the basement. If you need to purchase a smoke detector, check the installation, use and maintenance instructions to see if they are clear and complete. Also, look for the label of a recognized testing laboratory, such as Underwriters Laboratory. Once installed, remember to test smoke detectors periodically, according to the manufacturer's recommendations.

Inspect fire extinguishers once a month yourself to make sure they are fully charged. Once a year, take extinguishers to a service dealer (located in the Yellow Pages under "fire extinguishers") for inspection and recharging.

Despite the best preventative measures, your house could still catch on fire, and your family should be prepared by having a well-rehearsed escape plan. Draw a floor plan of your house. Figure out at least two exits from each room, especially the bedrooms, and have someone assigned to assist very young children or elderly persons. Agree on a meeting place, away from your home, so you can determine that everyone has gotten out of the house. And remember, get out of the house first, then call the fire department from a neighbor's house.

day and tie in with the lesson and the Bible point of the day. Wednesday's focus was the story of King Nebuchadnezzar sending Shadrach, Meshach and Abednego into the fiery furnace.

Sgt. 1st Class Greg Wilder, an Infantryman assigned to C Company, 2nd Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment, led the children on a "Bible Expedition" through a skit about the fiery furnace. To help the children understand how hot the furnace was, he melted metal wire with a blow-torch, accompanied by a chorus of oohs and aahs.

Wilder said his fellow volunteers told him he had great patience with the kids, and said if his situation permits, he'll do it again next year.

"It's good that the different churches on post can get together and do this," Wilder said.

"It's open to everybody. It's a chance for parents to get kids out and exposed to the Bible."

Another one of the daily activities was "Chadder's Adventure," where the children watch a video about Chadder the chipmunk.

The story, Allen said, always ends with a cliffhanger to keep the kids excited about coming back the next day to find out if Chadder gets out of trouble.

At the end of the day, the children gather in the cafeteria to sing and dance.

Rangers: Attend private screening in unprecedented footage, said Col. K.K. Chinn, the Ranger Training Brigade commander.

"This year's coverage of the BRC was by far the best I've seen in the six years I've been associated with it," said Chinn, who attended the screening with RTB officials and the four members of the first and second place teams. "The camera angles, the shots, the dialogue are the best I've seen. It showcases the U.S. Army Ranger as it should, and that was the focus when the competition started back in 1982. That was the goal."

Hoff is pleased also with the results.

"I get the opportunity to make a lot of TV shows, and sometimes I get a little jaded," he said. "This experience changed all that. I'll never forget it. It was an amazing inspiration and one of the great emotional highs for my company."

No doubt more and more networks will pursue in-depth BRC coverage, Karp said, but he believes the Military Channel and the RTB has established a partnership that will stand the test of time.

"We pride ourselves in providing the best in high quality, world class entertainment," he said. "And I think the Rangers of Fort Benning represent the best of the U.S. armed forces. So I think it's a great match. They trusted us to work behind the lines and to stay out of the way of the competition. We're thrilled with the results."

The Military Channel BRC special will air again Sunday at 8 p.m. and Aug. 28 at 8 p.m.

Noise: Level potentially dangerous

Within 18 months, Riera said new homes in Patton Village, across from Sand Hill, should be ready for occupants. Families living in the noise level three zone should be able to move directly into the Patton Village homes.

But regardless of when or where the families move, the 94 homes in the noise level three zone will need to be vacated eventually, Riera said.

Each family needs decide how they want to address the impending moves and find out what is best for them, he said.

"I don't have the ability to change the issues that brought us to this point," Riera said, referring to the noise level study. "But I have the property and I will maintain the property for as long as I can. Even then, those houses will all be demolished within thirty-six months."

Holly Ortman, a resident in the noise level three area, said she was grateful to hear Riera explain things in detail so residents could better understand what is going on.

"I think (his plan) will work for most residents," said Ortman, who realizes not everyone is going to be happy with Riera's plans. She feels he is making the effort, so she, and other residents, should come the rest of the way.

"It's give and take," she said. "I would have loved to stay (in this house) for five more years — but at least I know he is trying.

"I hope Colonel Riera can come through for us like he is trying to do, because a lot of us are banking and praying on this."

Cross-country jumping is one of three tests that takes place during horse trials competitions. The other two are dressage and show jumping. Poplar Place, near Hamilton, Ga., offers family-oriented entertainment with horse shows and competitions. There will be a Grand Prix, with a $25,000 prize, Aug. 6. The next U.S. Eventing Association, U.S. Equestrian Federation recognized horse trials are Sept. 2-4.

Horse trials fun at Poplar Place

Jessica Egan
Bayonet correspondent

Poplar Place had its horse trials June 10-12. For those of you who are "non-horsey," this means they had a competition.

Like many horse-oriented kids, I dragged my mom out of bed, picked up a friend and made it to Hamilton, Ga., by 7:30 a.m. in time to get the jump judge briefing.

Some of the country's top riders compete at Poplar Place, including U.S. Olympians Karen and David O'Connor, who weren't there last weekend.

Poplar Place horse trials are a three-day event with dressage, and cross-country and show jumping.

Dressage is a difficult sport, where the horse and rider complete prescribed classical movements — it's like an equine ballet.

Cross-country jumping is a timed event and requires nerves of steel because of the height and width of the jumps. The jumps are modeled after natural obstacles like logs, hedges and water jumps.

Show jumping is timed also, and riders must race the clock to jump a series of oxers (a hedge with a guardrail), combination jumps and walls.

Spectators can go on the cross-country course to get a better view while watching the riders and horses maneuver the obstacles. My favorite place to watch cross county is the water obstacle midway through the course.

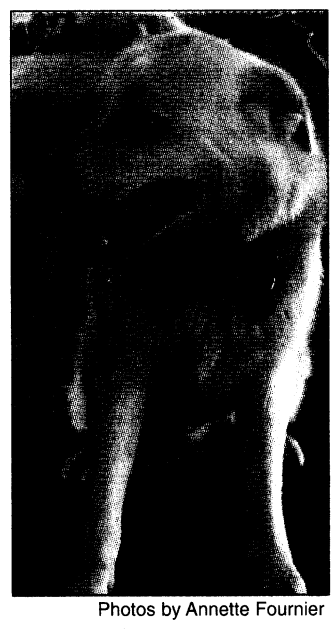
Those not excited about being up close with horses jumping and galloping along the course can view show jumping from the benches on the hill that overlooks the arena.

Show jumping is more formal than cross country, so riders wear jackets, like in dressage. (Cross-country jumping requires a protective vest.)

Poplar Place is family-oriented entertainment. You don't have to be an animal lover to be amazed by what these horses can do. Just remember to exercise caution around horses, bring a hat, sunscreen and comfortable shoes and then get out there.

Poplar Place is 14 miles north of Lowe's on Highway 27.

There will be a dressage show from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday and Sunday, which is free and open to the public.



The next official horse trials is Sept. 2-4. The O'Connors are expected to compete. Admission for the horse trials is $10 per vehicle for a one day pass, or $15 per vehicle for the entire weekend.

For more information or to volunteer at Poplar Place, call Allina Strickland at 563-3746.

God calls us to honor our fathers

Chaplain (Lt. Col.) Ron Smith
USAIC Chaplains Office

We were sitting in a small, flat-bottomed boat, and my father was giving me a lesson in fly fishing. He demonstrated how to cast the fly softly on top of the water, simulating an insect landing lightly on the water.

He was good at it. I was learning.

It was just after Father's Day, and I had given him a set of popping bugs for fly fishing. They were cheap, but I felt proud that he was actually using them.

Father's Day can cause us to remember the good things about our fathers, or for some, the bad things.

Smith

I was blessed to have a good father, and I know the values and strengths he gave me were blessings. I also know many were not blessed to have that privilege.

We can't change the past, but we can make good and lasting memories for our children.

Being a good father today is a big challenge. There are lots of detractors that keep us from being the best we can be.

Having good kids makes it easier, but kids are sometimes a copy of us.

I read recently about the beginning of Father's Day. Contrary to popular belief, it was not established to help Hallmark sell more cards.

Mrs. John B. Dodd first proposed the idea of a Father's Day in 1909. She wanted a special day to honor her father, William Smart, a Civil War veteran who was widowed when his wife died giving birth to their sixth child. He was left to raise the children by himself, on a rural farm in eastern Washington State.

After Mrs. Dodd became an adult, she realized the strength and selflessness her father had shown in raising his children as a single parent.

In 1924, President Calvin Coolidge supported the idea of a national Father's Day. But it wasn't until 1966 that President Lyndon Johnson signed a presidential proclamation declaring the third Sunday of June Father's Day.

Twenty years after that fly fishing trip, my dad lay in a recovery room after exploratory surgery. He awoke to bad news — the cancer was inoperable.

With tears in his eyes, he said, "I guess we won't be going fishing anymore."

I still choke back the tears when I think of that moment, yet those words confirmed my feelings. Dad was a great dad. He was great because he took the time and made the effort to bring me into his world.

Father's Day is not easy. Being a father is not easy.

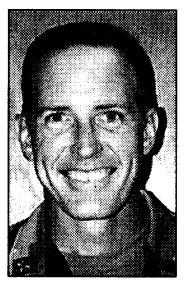
The seventh commandment in the book of Exodus tells us to honor our fathers and mothers so that we may live long in the land God has given us.

It is a high calling to be a father, and perhaps even a higher calling, as a son or daughter, to honor our parents.

It is all up to us.

Gold Star wives can offer each other strength, support

Support groups provide strength in numbers



Chaplain (Maj.) Jeffrey D. Hawkins
Chaplain Family Life Center

REFLECTIONS

It's long been recognized that one of the most powerful tools for coping with life's crushing blows, traumas and tragedies is a support group (technically put, a collection of folks going through, or having been through, the same stuff, whatever that stuff may be — OK, so it wasn't so technical).

In the military community, I've been privileged to lead support groups for Soldiers going into combat, Soldiers experiencing combat and Soldiers coming home from combat.

I'm also enjoying the honor, right now, of talking with spouses of Soldiers via a support group, predominantly wives, whose mates are at the tip of the spear.

Hawkins

That's the "Keeping It Together While The Army's Taken You Apart" support group.

We have lots of different support groups.

One support group we don't have, and a group I want to see if there is a need for, is a support group for Gold Star Wives, i.e., a support group for those women who have lost their husbands to war.

As the price paid for freedom mounts, Fort Benning is making its own down payment on freedom's future with the lives of some of its best and brightest.

Too often, this offering of "the last full measure of devotion" leaves behind a wife and, frequently, children whose world has been incalculably upended.

I suspect none of us can truly understand what a war widow must go through from the minute she sees someone like me walk up the driveway in Class As with a notification officer.

Then there is the lonely playing of Taps at a fresh graveside and the myriad of life's details and challenges that follow the loss of a wife's Soldier, mate and best friend.

The only people who can really feel the chasm of that pain are those who have been there, done that — fellow Gold Star Wives.

That's why, this week, via this article and others that I'll be writing for the local newspapers, I'm casting a net. I'm asking if there are Gold Star Wives out there.

I want to know if there are ladies (or even men) who have experienced the loss of their mate due to war or its ravages and are open to forming a support group here in the Columbus, Fort Benning area.

These individuals may have experienced the loss of their mate from as far back as World War II, Korea, Vietnam — or the loss may be as fresh as The Global War on Terrorism.

In any of these cases, I'd like to hear from anyone who would be interested in getting together with others who have experienced this loss ... a loss like no other.

There is strength in numbers, and my hope is that should there be a need in our area, together we could offer strength to each other.

If you have lost your Soldier, Sailor, Airman or Marine to combat and are here in the Columbus area, would you do me the honor of contacting me at either 545-9014 or jeffrey.d.hawkins@us.army.mil? I'd like to chat with you and hear of your strength.

You can also find me at The Chaplain Family Life Center, Building 2606 in Soldiers' Plaza or at CrossRoads Contemporary Chapel, at 11 a.m.Sundays at the Kelley Hill Chapel. I look forward to serving you.

Bench Notes

Erin Nash

• Finals bounce on

The Detroit Pistons finally figured out they were down two games to none to the San Antonio Spurs and decided to show up June 14, when they won their first game of the series.

As of press time, the Spurs are leading 2-1.

• Tyson wimps out

After all the smack talking, Mike Tyson wimped out and wouldn't leave his corner after the end of the sixth round.

Kevin McBride won by a TKO. Mike's since retired — go figure.

• Phil returns to L.A.

Former coach Phil Jackson signed a contract June 14, returning as coach to the L.A. Lakers, despite having written a scathing book about his time with the team. Jackson signed a three-year contract, rumored to be about $7 to $10 million a year, the highest paid NBA coach ever.

• Edwards flips at Pocono

Carl Edwards did his signature backflip after winning the Pocono 500 June 12. It was his first time racing at Pocono, and he prepared for it by playing video games. Guess he was smart to skip the Busch series race in Nashville, which was delayed a day due to weather.

• College World Series

The College World Series Double Elimination in Omaha, Neb., is going on now, and the championship series, a best-of-three, will be June 25, 26 and 27 (if necessary). I've been watching, so I'm prepared to pick a winner when the two final teams start play.

Solis balances Soldiering, cycling

Melissa House
Bayonet staff

Tawny Archibald Campbell

Jose Solis pedals during the bike leg of the Fort Benning "Reverse" Sprint Triathlon June 4. Solis, who has competed for the Puerto Rican national cycling team and rides against pro-cyclists, will try to continue his training after he deploys next month.

Jose Solis could be an All-Army cyclist, but he doesn't want to quit his day job — being a Soldier.

The Puerto Rico native first caught the cycling bug at age 14, then gave it up when he joined the Army and became a cavalry scout in 1986. After a 16-year break, he got back in the saddle, the bike saddle, in 2002.

Solis said he discovered his ability for cycling on his daily bike ride to and from school.

"I started to wonder why I got to school before my friends did," he said, "and they had their parents driving them." After trying a number of other sports, Solis knew cycling was for him.

In 2002, Solis was asked to join a triathlon team, getting another taste of cycling after his long absence.

"I got on the bike and I thought 'I still got it," he said. His wife, Maggie, bought him a new bike, and Solis gives her the credit for his cycling success.

Within six months of returning to Puerto Rico, Solis was winning races. He made the Puerto Rican national team and represented Puerto Rico and the Army at races there and in Venezuela and Columbia.

"It was great," Solis said. "I was back at full speed, and I decided I was going to keep doing this."

And "doing this" means cranking out about 350 miles a week, on average, all the while training around his work schedule. Once he returned to Fort Benning, Solis got back together with his old cycling partners and began training hard. He finished a year of courses at the Western Hemisphere Institute for Security Cooperation, and said he had to practice time management every day, carving out time to train after completing his school requirements and family activities.

The work paid off, he said, because he started winning races here. And with winning, came sponsorship from Columbus businesses, Carl Gregory and Ride on Bikes.

"Thanks to their support, I'm able to help local cycling folks as well," he said. "The ten to fifteen Fort Benning cyclists are excellent riders and I use all my experience to give it straight to them."

Solis said he's blessed to be able to ride on post — he can ride for four hours and never leave the installation.

His training is paying off. During this year's cycling season, which began in February and ends in October, Solis has had several strong finishes.

In his third-place finish in the Union City Mayor's 100 km race, he was narrowly edged out for second by a cyclist who has been riding on the pro-circuit for the last seven years.

In April, Solis made one of his three recent trips to Puerto Rico to ride in the five-stage, 300-mile Tour de Puerto Rico. He said the pros used that race as a train up for the Tour de Georgia.

"They went to Puerto Rico for the heat," he said, "because the temperature there was about twenty degrees warmer than what they would race in in Georgia."

That race consisted of time trials, road races and a criterium — a series of laps. Solis finished 16th in the fourth stage of the race and 13th in the final stage. At 39, he was the second oldest rider in the final stage.

"Why do I keep doing this at my age?" Solis asked. "To give my kids a good example that once you set your mind to something, your commitment and discipline are key components.

"And I love to eat, so this makes a good balance," he said. His balanced exercise regimen is six days of training, whether it's cycling, running, swimming or weightlifting. Monday is his only day off.

"It sounds like a lot, but once you've been doing it so long, it's easy," he said. Solis also takes a training vacation from the end of October until the day after Thanksgiving.

Now riding his fourth and fifth bikes — after the one Maggie bought in 2002, Solis finds ways to make his mandatory physical training time work to his advantage when he competes against athletes who spend six hours a day on their bikes.

Solis rides a lightweight, 16 pound Giant bike for races and a 30-pound Specialized bike for training.

To add even more weight to his training rides, Solis carries heavy tools and fills his pockets.

Solis said his least favorite parts of the multi-stage races are the time trials, preferring to ride the longer distance road races.

"The road races are the ones where you can really test yourself, and that's how you know if your training and diet and rest is working," he said.

"The road race gives you the challenge of the hills and I love the hills," he said. "That's where I shine. I try to break away on the toughest hills."

But there are no hills in Solis' immediate future. He has volunteered to deploy and will leave Fort Benning July 5 to join the 13th Corps Support Battalion overseas.

"I'm happy to deploy," Solis said, "because I come back to Benning."

And when his gaining unit found out he was a cyclist, he said they told him to bring his bike.

63rd Engineers drive past HSC, 20-16

Home runs give 63rd lead in close game

Tawny Archibald Campbell
Bayonet staff

Two home runs were key to the 63rd Engineer's 20-16 win over Headquarters Service Company in intramural softball Tuesday at Knappenberger Field.

"We batted well and we fielded okay," said Jason Cowman, 63rd team captain. "We had two in-the-park home runs — one with three runs batted in. That helped us take the lead."

HSC was the first up to bat and chalked up their first point when Brian Banks drove in an RBI.

HSC brought in four more runs before the the Engineers took their turn at bat.

Fourth on the batting order, Johnny Cobb, 63rd Engineers, hit one deep, bringing in two RBIs and starting the team's momentum. The first inning ended with 63rd up 6-5.

The second inning was slow. At the top of the inning, Robert Taylor hit an RBI, the only run of the inning.

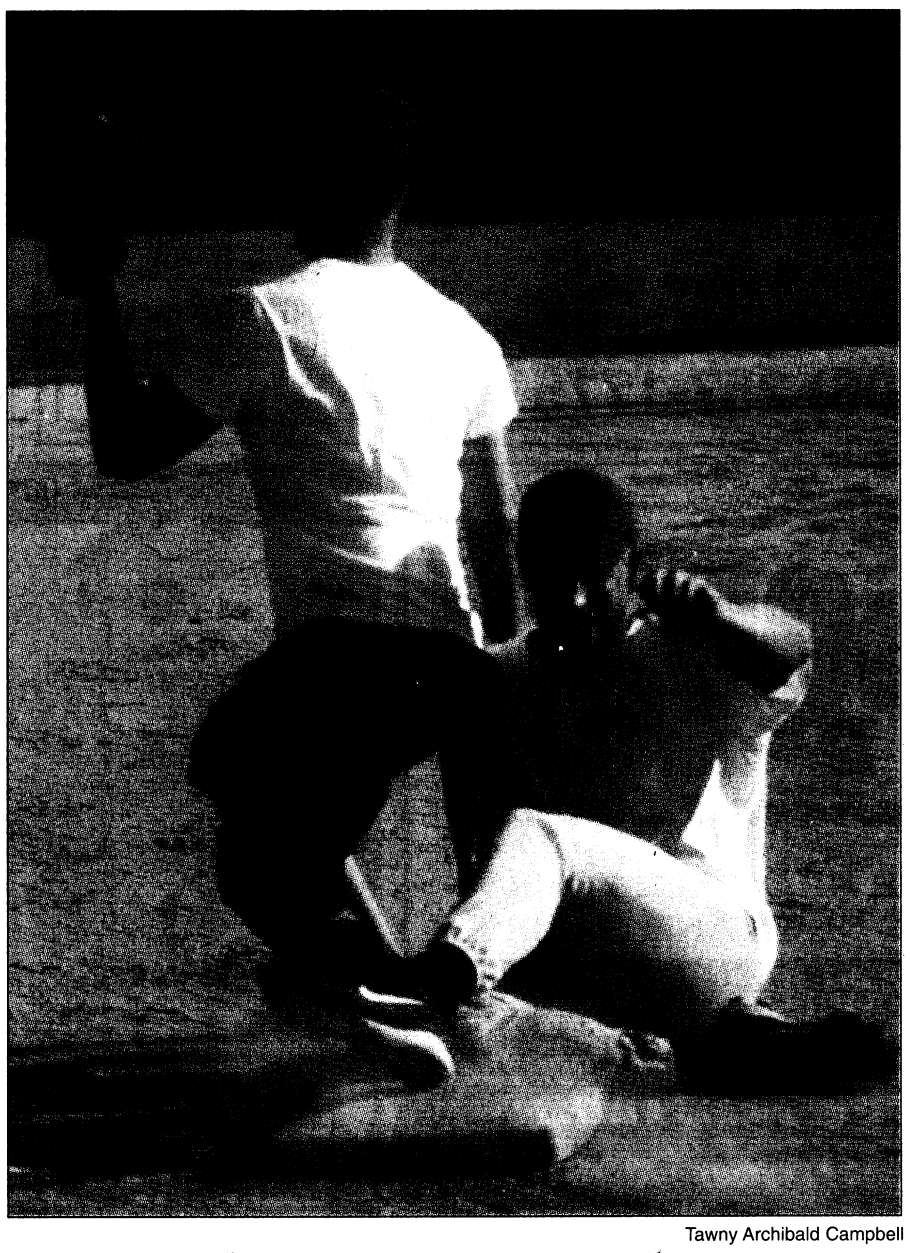
Both teams made a major turnaround in the third and fourth innings. HSC scored eight runs, and the 63rd added nine of their own. Cowman and Cobb both hit home runs.

By the top of the fifth, 63rd had a 19-16 lead over HSC. They shut HSC out of the inning and brought in another run before the game was called.

"We played a good game," said Chris Byrd, HSC team captain. "They just played a better one."

Byrd said his team did well at bat but made critical fielding errors. He said the heat of the evening played into their mistakes.

"The heat beat us up," he said.



Despite the loss, Byrd said this is the best his team has played this season.

Cowman said his team also did well at bat, but needs to work on fielding.

"We need to close up the gaps and make less errors," he said. "We did well though. At the end of the game, we picked up the defense and kept them from scoring for two innings.

"We capitalized on them not scoring, took the lead and won the game."

HSC is 0-3 and the 63rd is 1-1.

Tawny Archibald Campbell

Anthony Kinney, of the Headquarters Service Company, slides into third just before Brian Baker, of the 63rd Engineers, nabs the ball. The Engineers beat HSC 20-16 in the intramural softball game Tuesday.

"When I was a boy of fourteen, my father was so ignorant I could hardly stand to have the old man around. But when I got to be twenty-one, I was astonished at how much the old man had learned in seven years."

Mark Twain

I will be your father figure: Celebrating television dads

Jay Bobbin, John Crook and Kate O'Hare
© Zap2it

Father knows best. At least on television, usually.

Father's Day prompts thoughts of beloved home-screen dads who have imparted warmth, advice and, on occasion, much-needed discipline.

The results likely have helped not just the characters' offspring but also viewers, since more than a few parents and children have probably taken some cues from televised father figures.

In honor of the weekend's holiday, we nominate the following as best TV dads:

Mike Brady (Robert Reed), The Brady Bunch (ABC, 1969-74): No matter what his hairstyle or how big his architecture project, Mike was never too preoccupied to dispense sage advice to his blended family.

Charles Ingalls (Michael Landon), Little House on the Prairie (NBC, 1974-83): Life wasn't easy in late 19th-century Minnesota, but if you wanted someone who was both rugged and compassionate, Laura Ingalls' dad was the man.

John Walton (Ralph Waite), The Waltons (CBS, 1972-81): Someone else from the Charles Ingalls mold, this patriarch of a large Depression-era brood let everyone in the household know who was boss simply through his silent strength.

Sheriff Andy Taylor (Andy Griffith), The Andy Griffith Show (CBS, 1960-68): The modest, plain-speaking widower's love for son Opie (Ronny Howard) was evident in every breath he took and every life lesson he taught.

Steven Keaton (Michael Gross), Family Ties (NBC, 1982-89): You simply have to applaud a liberal who could be as accepting and supportive of a son as fiercely conservative as Alex (Michael J. Fox).

Dr. Harold Abbott (Tom Amandes), Everwood (The WB Network, 2002-present): He may be persnickety, prissy, dogmatic and demanding, but Dr. Abbott also has a huge heart and an abiding love for his family. While the show is mostly about the paternal failings of Dr. Andy Brown (Treat Williams), it's Abbott who shows viewers again and again how a flawed man can still be a great dad.

Martin Crane (John Mahoney), Frasier (NBC, 1993-2004): The retired policeman found his sons baffling, infuriating and often embarrassing ... yet he still loved them with all his heart.

Ken Reeves (Ken Howard), The White Shadow (CBS, 1978-81): Technically, he wasn't a dad, but a basketball coach. Still, for a bunch of young guys in a hostile inner-city environment, Coach Reeves was often the closest thing to a dad they had.

Reeves didn't always succeed, but he never stopped trying, and he never stopped believing his players could have a better life.

Lucas McCain (Chuck Connors), The Rifleman (ABC, 1958-63): Tough when he had to be, which was often, rancher and widower McCain always turned tender when it came to his son, Mark (Johnny Crawford).

Ozzie Nelson (Ozzie Nelson), The Adventures of Ozzie & Harriet (ABC, 1952-66): It's an absolute lock that no one could have played David and Ricky's dad better.

Howard Cunningham (Tom Bosley), Happy Days (ABC, 1974-84): Although he worked hard at his hardware store to ensure a comfortable life for his family, "Mr. C." still found the energy to chase "Mrs. C."

John Schneider is a current television example of good parenting as Jonathan Kent, the Earth father of Krypton-born Clark Kent — who will become Superman — on The WB Network series Smallville.

around the couch every now and then.

He also kept his home open to his kids' large, lively, unpredictable circle of friends.

Jim Walsh (James Eckhouse), Beverly Hills, 90210 (Fox, 1990-2000):

Being the father of teen twins wasn't easy, especially if said twins were Brandon and Brenda (Jason Priestley, Shannen Doherty).

But Jim always strove to be a true friend to his kids.

Jonathan Kent (John Schneider), Smallville (The WB, 2001-present): To the usual rites of raising a youngster, add the complication that you're the Earth father of a child from another planet..

Steve Douglas (Fred MacMurray), My Three Sons (ABC, 1960-65; CBS, 1965-72): A pipe, a sweater and a level head were trademarks of this parent.

The Rev. Eric Camden (Stephen Collins), 7th Heaven (The WB, 1996-present): Balancing a higher calling with basic parenting can be tricky.

This minister continues to perform the juggling act commendably.

Ben Cartwright (Lorne Greene), Bonanza (NBC, 1959-73): The Ponderosa patriarch may not have been the greatest husband in the world — his wives all seemed to have the life expectancy of mayflies — but he made a powerful father figure nonetheless to his three headstrong sons, none of whom had the same mother.

Batman Begins — In the wake of his parents' murder, disillusioned industrial heir Bruce Wayne (Christian Bale) travels the world seeking the means to fight injustice and turn fear against those who prey on the fearful.

He returns to Gotham and unveils his alter ego — Batman, a masked crusader who uses his strength, intellect and an array of high-tech deceptions to fight the sinister forces that threaten the city.

Starring Ken Watanbe, Morgan Freeman and Michael Caine.

Batman Begins is rated PG-13 for intense action violence, disturbing images and thematic elements.

The Perfect Man — Teenager Holly Hamilton (Hilary Duff) is tired of moving every time her single mom Jean (Heather Locklear) has another personal meltdown involving yet another second-rate guy.

To distract her mother from her latest bad choice, Holly conceives the perfect plan for the perfect man — an imaginary secret admirer who will romance Jean and boost her shaky self-esteem.

The Perfect Man is rated PG for mildly suggestive content.

The Honeymooners — New York City bus driver Ralph Kramden and his feisty wife Alice struggle to make ends meet.

Despite Ralph's many get-rich-quick schemes and motivational speaker tape series, they've managed to save some money and, along with their best friends Ed and Trixie Norton, they seem to have almost enough money for a down payment on a Brooklyn duplex.

Starring Cedric the Entertainer, Mike Epps, Regina Hall and Gabrielle Union.

The Honeymooners is rated PG-13 for innuendo and rude humor.

Mr. & Mrs. Smith — A married couple (Brad Pitt and Angelina Jolie) are getting bored with their quiet domestic life.

What they don't know, however, is that they're both assassins, secretly hopping the world and killing for hire.

But their separate lives are about to collide when each finds out their next target is their own spouse.

Mr. & Mrs. Smith is rated PG-13 for sequences of violence, intense action, sexual content and strong language.

The Adventures of Shark Boy & Lava Girl — A 10-year-old outcast is shunned by classmates and forced to spend summer vacation alone.

With his two imaginary friends (Shark Boy and Lava Girl) he goes on a mission to prove dreams can become reality.

Starring Taylor Lautner, Taylor Dooley, Cayden Boyd and George Lopez.

The Adventures of Shark Boy and Lava Girl is rated PG for mild action and rude humor.

High Tension — Two worlds collide disastrously, when a rusted delivery van barrels through cornfields while Alex has brought her friend Marie to spend the weekend at her parent's farmhouse.

Behind the van's wheel, the driver looks at ripped photos of young women.

At the same time, the girls get ready for bed, dishing girly gossip.

At the end of the road lies an isolated house, caught in the van's headlights.

As the girls close their eyes, an intruder is about to turn their innocent dreams into a relentless and bloody nightmare.

Starring Cecile de France, Philippe Nahon, Frank Khalfoun and Maiwenn Le Besco.

High Tension is rated R for graphic bloody killings, terror, sexual content and language.

The Sisterhood of the Traveling Pants — The movie is based on Ann Brashares' best-selling novel about a special summer in the lives of four lifelong friends separated for the first time.

On a shopping trip, the young women find a pair of thrift shop jeans that fits each of them perfectly and they decide to use these pants as a way of keeping in touch over the months ahead.

Starring Amber Tamblyn, Alexis Bledel, Blake Lively and America Ferrera.

The Sisterhood of the Traveling Pants is rated PG for thematic elements, some sensuality and language.

Cinderella Man — Set in New York during the Depression, this is story of James Braddock (Russell Crowe), who takes up boxing to make money to feed his family and ends up becoming quite famous in the process, eventually going up against champ Max Baer.

Also starring Renee Zellweger and Paul Giamatti.

Cinderella Man is rated PG-13 for intense boxing violence and language.

Lords of Dogtown — In the 1970s, a group of teenage surfers from a tough neighborhood known as "Dogtown" in Venice, Calif., pioneered a revolutionary new style of skateboarding.

Riding the waves at the Pacific Ocean Pier, the Z-boys, known for their aggressive style and hard-street attitude, combined the moves of surfing with the art of skateboarding and become overnight sensations and local legends.

Starring Heath Ledger, Johnny Knoxville and Emile Hirsch.

Lords of Dogtown is rated PG-13 for drug and alcohol content, sexuality, violence, language and reckless behavior.

Madagascar — This movie focuses on four residents and "stars" of the Central Park Zoo who are also best friends: a lion (Ben Stiller), a zebra (Chris Rock), a giraffe (David Schwimmer) and a pregnant hippo (Jada Pinkett-Smith).

When one of them goes missing, the other three break out of the zoo looking for him, and eventually all four are captured and put in boxes to ship them back to the continent their species are originally from: Africa.

An accident at sea, however, strands them on the shore of Madagascar.

Madagascar is rated PG for mild language, crude humor and thematic elements.

Driving safety big concern

Donna Hyatt
Bayonet staff

Research by the National Highway Transportation Safety Administration concludes that 32 percent of all motor vehicle fatalities in the United States were caused by driving above the posted speed limit or driving too fast for prevailing conditions.

Regis Beighley, safety manager said, "An accident usually occurs because of more than one thing.

"When you're going too fast, the chance of making a (driving) correction becomes less effective. Speeding is definitely a risk factor."

Master Sgt. Patrick Murphy, operations with the Fort Benning Military Police, said the recent post traffic fatalities, "all involved excess speed, in addition to other factors." He said distractions, such as talking on cell phones or eating while driving are contributing factors

Heat safety key training priority

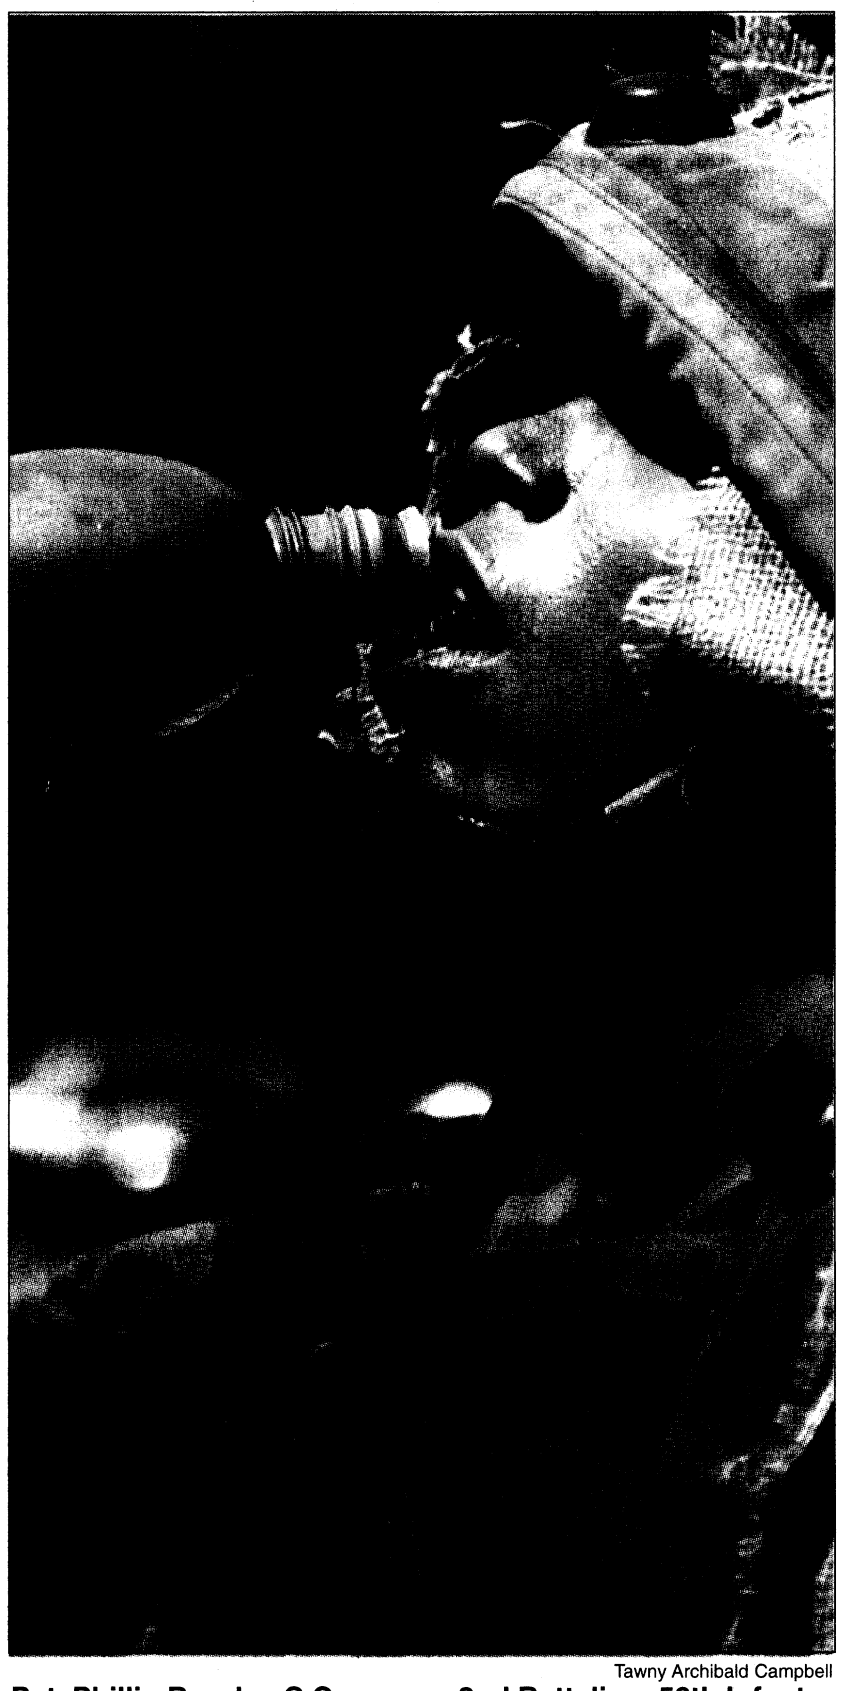
Spc. Eliamar Trapp
Assistant editor

Each year, the Fort Benning Infantry Training Brigade trains more than 22,000 Soldiers to become the Army's Infantrymen.

But with Fort Benning being one of the hottest installations with the mission of training Soldiers, heat casualties are at times inevitable due to the scorching Georgia summers.

With the temperatures as high 108 degrees with 80 percent humidity in the summer, the number of heat casualties in Soldiers training can sometimes rise.

"We do everything to keep these Soldiers safe while training and not take away from the training they need for combat," said Sgt. Maj. Alan Gibson, Training and Operations sergeant major for ITB. "We train all of our leaders and drill sergeants on handling hot weather situations in a Leader Check Ride, which is mandatory for all personnel assigned to ITB."



During a Leader Check Ride, leaders receive training on leader standards, proper care and treatment of Soldiers, administration and safety — especially heat casualties.

During Check Rides, leaders learn how to properly apply iced sheets to Soldiers and how to use a wet bulb to monitor temperature, Gibson said.

Iced sheets are just that, sheets kept in an ice cooler at all training sites. The sheets are used to cool off a Soldier who's experiencing heat injury symptoms.

A wet bulb is also required at all training sites to determine humidity. Using a wet bulb in conjunction with a thermometer, drill sergeants can monitor the humidity in the air and determine the heat

Because of the high temperatures, Soldiers were required to move into heat category five. They removed their undershirts and roll up their pant legs and shirt sleeves to help cool down and prevent heat-related injuries.

Billed as Fort Benning's largest fireworks display ever, the fireworks will be the candle on the cake for the post's celebration of Independence Day June 30.

Fort Benning has celebrated Independence Day before the Fourth of July since 1998 when retired Maj. Gen. Carl Ernst, who was the post commanding general from 1996 to 1999, wanted Soldiers to be able to celebrate with their families on July 4th, said Morgan Rabatine with the Directorate of Morale, Welfare and Recreation.

Maj. Gen. Benjamin Freakley, post commanding general, inviting the tricommunity to the celebration, highlighted the $15,000 fireworks display and the "spectacular, spectacular Independence Day program," which will include a free concert by country musician David Staton, who sang during the January send-off ceremony for Soldiers with the 36th Engineer Group and 3rd Brigade Combat Team.

Also planned during the day is a SPIES and FRIES demonstration by the Rangers, and the Silver Wings, the command exhibition parachute team, will jump in. This will be the second time the Wings have jumped on to York Field for the Independence Day ceremony

Soldier dies, 3 injured in car accident on post

A Fort Benning Soldier died and three civilians, including a 2-year old child, were injured in a two-car accident on I-185 near Custer Road on post June 13.

Sgt. Racquel Smith, 23, was pronounced dead at the scene by responding paramedics. She was assigned to Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment.

Smith, wearing a seat belt and driving an Oldsmobile Alero, was accessing I-185 from Marne Road when she lost control of the vehicle, fishtailed, crossed the median into oncoming traffic and was struck on the passenger side by a Ford Explorer.

Traffic investigators estimate Smith was doing a minimum of 65 mph when she was struck by the Explorer, which was traveling the speed limit of 55 mph.

The three civilians in the Explorer were transported to the hospital said Master Sgt. Patrick Murphy, military police operations NCO. One was released and two were hospitalized with serious injuries. Their conditions are unknown.

The accident remains under investigation.

Smith, a truck driver, was promoted to sergeant in May, just two years after joining the military. Close friend Spc. Rachel Williams, said the young NCO was an inspiration.

"She was completely selfless," Williams said. "She would do anything for anybody. She was happy and she wanted to help make other people happy."

Williams also said Smith would be remembered for her leadership and drive to succeed.

"She made her E-5 in two years and swore she'd make E-6 in four," Williams said.

"She wanted to be a sergeant major, to make a career out of the Army, and she was going to make it happen.

"It was a privilège and an honor to escort her body to her family. Losing a friend who I loved dearly kind of made me lose my motivation at first, but then it made me want to keep going. I want to finish what she started. No, I will finish what she started. She was so dedicated. That's something I will never forget."

Slowing down for my family's sake

Spc. Nikki St. Amant
Bayonet staff

I've gotten nine speeding tickets in the last year and a half. Five of those were for going between 20 and 30 miles over the speed limit. One was for going 110 in a 55. The streets are my personal rally playground and my car is my best friend.

Even though I am the greatest driver on the face of the earth, and even though I am invincible and would surely walk away unscathed from any crash I might find myself in, I sold my car.

Somewhere inside of me, deep underneath the bubbling fervor for blacktop and boost control, a tiny, eensy weensy flame was lit. That fire is called fear.

I'm scared of dying. I'm scared of going to jail. I'm scared of what my husband will do if I get another ticket. But mostly, I am scared of leaving my kids alone in this world without me. (Oh yeah, I'm the greatest mom in the world, too!)

So, I let go of my car — my baby. I know it isn't her fault. It's mine. But it's like putting a needle in a junkie's hand and expecting him not to shoot up.

This was probably one of the hardest things I've done in my life. I love my car. I love going fast. I love the windows down and the music up. I love daring the road to throw curves my way. I love it when someone wants to play tag with me in traffic. Zoom zoom baby. But it was time to let go. My nine lives are up.

And when my number hits, it isn't going to be pretty. But I won't suffer at those speeds. It is the people around me who will. The two little girls who love me and need me. My husband. My parents. My friends. The strangers whose lives are ruined when I smash into them at 80 or 90.

I can stomach something happening to me, but I can't take the thought of the people around me being hurt. It's not fair to them. So I'm letting go of the demon, prying the monkey off my back, climbing down from the bull. It's all over.

I bought a base model Chevy Cobalt. I cried like a baby in the dealership after I took the last spin in my Mazdaspeed. (The salesman who rode shotgun with me on that last ride almost cried out of fear.)

I cried the whole way home in my new ride. I cried at work the next day. I cried on the phone to my husband. He relented. He said if the car makes me that happy to go back and get it.

So, I did. I went back and argued with the dealership for three hours and got her back. I felt alive again! I had my freedom, my youth, my soul back! So I'm back on the bull with eight seconds to go, wishing the monkey wouldn't hold onto my back so tight and being smothered by my co-dependent demon named Mazdaspeed, but I'm armed now.

Armed with fear for my life, my family and my happiness. I've learned my lesson. I would rather keep my car and have to tune down our relationship and RPMs than have to give her or my life up.

I am an adult now, and it's time to grow up, whether or not I'm a Toys R' Us kid. So, I'll hit the roads and stay alive at 55. Just don't ask me to turn my music down, OK?

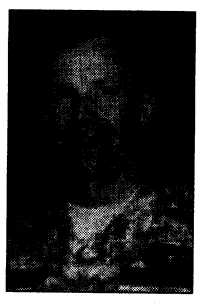
Drivers should observe posted speed limits

Tracy A. Bailey
USAIC Public Affairs Office

The speed limit from the I-185 Access Control Point South to right before Dixie Road is 55 miles per hour. Not 65 or 70. Not even 60. It is 55 mph. The posted speed limit drops before Dixie Road, so you don't plow through the stop sign or yield sign onto Dixie Road and collide with the cross traffic. Going northbound from Dixie Road as you drive toward Columbus, the posted speed limit is 55 mph and then it slows down to 35 and then to 25 as you leave the installation.

Now that we have this information established, let me tell you why I'm on my soapbox. Three Soldiers have died on this stretch of I-185 since Sept. 22, 2004. Two Soldiers in the last eight weeks. And no, these Soldiers were not obeying the posted speed limit. I know speed is not the only factor in an accident, but in most cases, it makes a significant contribution.

I come through the I-185 checkpoint six days a week. No matter what time of day or night, everyone seems to be rushing from point A to point B with a total disregard of the posted speed limit or their fellow drivers.



The other morning on my way to work, I was tooling along at 55 mph on I-185 (after the checkpoint) and decided to count the number of vehicles that passed me. Between the area where the speed limit increases to 55 mph and the turn to Dixie Road, 10 vehicles passed me. And the funny thing is I pulled up behind them at the stop sign.

Are we all in such a rush to get to wherever we're going that we have to create a dangerous situation in order to get there? Don't get me wrong, I love my job and strive to be on time every day, but I love my family more, and I would rather be five minutes late than be dead. Because that's what speeding does. It kills.

So my soapbox message to you is, slow down and obey the posted speed limit no matter where you are — your family and your unit will thank you for it.

Thanks for listening, and go ahead and wave to me on your way out tonight. I'm the one in the gold Camry, going home to my family and doing the speed limit.

Following basic guidelines increases driving safety

Recently a Fort Benning Soldier was killed when her privately owned vehicle ran off I-185 just north of Marne Road.

Two other Soldiers were killed in car accidents on that stretch of highway in the past two years. One exited the road at Upatoi Creek and the other hit a tree. All three drivers were exceeding the speed limit.

Vehicle operation is the leading accidental killer of Army Soldiers, 95 so far this year.

However, by following a few basic guidelines, you can dramatically decrease your chances of having an accident.

• Obey the speed limit. The speed limit is the top speed for ideal conditions. Adverse weather, increased traffic, road construction, darkness and pedestrians require speeds below the limit.

• Drive alertly. Plan your trips so that you start out well rested. Take frequent breaks while driving, at least once every two hours.

• Never mix driving with drugs or alcohol. Use a designated driver whenever alcoholic beverages are involved.

• Drive defensively. The poor driving of others can cause you great expense and pain.

• Always wear your seat belt. If you're not wearing your seat belt, what's holding you back?

Drive like your life depends on it and as if you're accountable and responsible for harm or injury to others. When driving, safety should be your top priority.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Better safe than sorry on road, reader says

As I turned on to the North Bypass from Moon Road a few days ago on my way to work, I noticed a black BMW flying along doing about 95 mph. I checked my speedometer, as I thought I was moving a little slow, but I was up to 65. As she passed, I noticed she was putting on her make-up, smoking a cigarette and talking on her cell-phone ... a master at multi-tasking, I thought.

For the price people pay for those super cars, I thought it would include turn signals, but not this one. As she turned on to the off ramp to I-185 it was an "aim and go" maneuver. Boy, she must have the best job in the world, because she's going like hell to get there.

I slammed on the brakes to let in cars entering I-185 rather than have them run me off the road, since they didn't seem to know how to yield.

The speed limit is still 55 miles per hour through town. Go 55 and see how long it takes for someone to fly past your car like you're standing still.

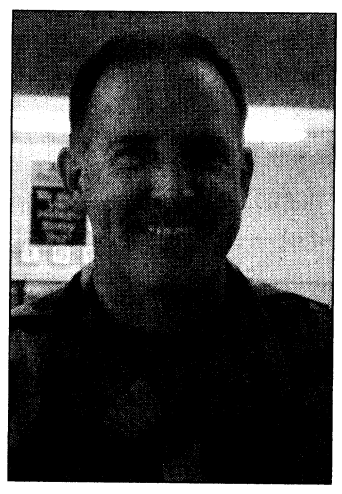
Next came a guy in a Chevy pickup going 95 mph with three others right on his bumper weaving through traffic. I thought the "BMW lady" had the best job in the world, but it must be the Chevy pickup guy.

As I entered Fort Benning, I slowed down to 45 mph only to be passed by everyone. We all stop for the ID check and guess who's sitting in the center lane? I pass the Chevy pickup in the left lane ... proceed through the ID check and move to the center lane at 45 mph as the sign says. Here came the Chevy pickup in the right lane at 65 mph moving left and right between traffic. He crested the hill and disappeared from view.

I passed the area where three Soldiers have been killed in the past couple of years from speeding, losing control of their vehicles, in a hurry to go where? I wondered how this could happen, all within 100 meters of each other.

I eventually pulled into the parking lot of Infantry Hall and met the Chevy pickup going the wrong way, looking for a place to park close to the door. I parked my truck and could see the driver of the Chevy finally park his pickup and climb out of his truck. I turned and entered Infantry Hall.

I realized it must be me ... I have the best job in the world and I arrived safely and not too stressed out.



Taking the time to get to work safely by obeying the speed limit still leaves time to sip on a cup of Seattle's Best and thank the good Lord for giving me patience and keeping me safe on my way to work!

For me, the bottom line is, it's better to be safe than sorry.

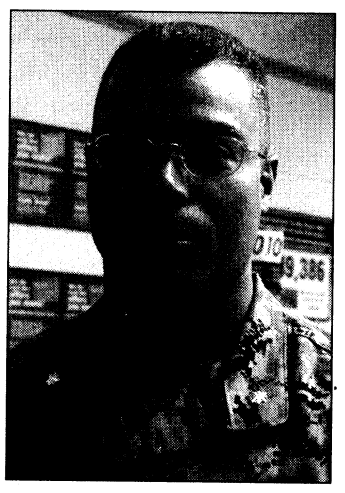
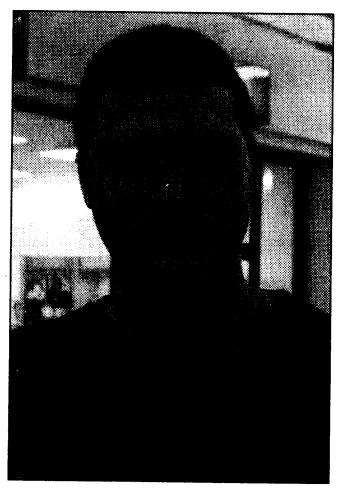
VARIOUS VOICES



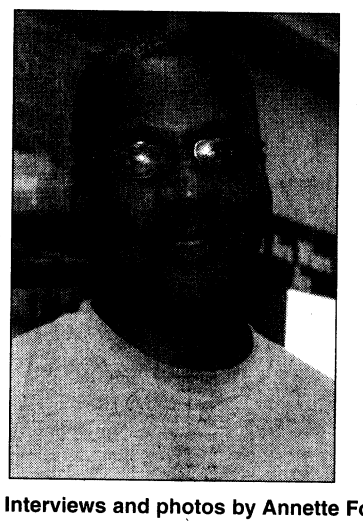
Why is it important to drive safely?

Chaplain (Maj.) Jeff Hawkins, Family Life Center — "Our Soldiers and their families are the most precious thing we have — far too precious to lose even one. We've seen some losses lately and it's absolutely tragic. Whatever it takes for us to stay safe is worth it."



Retired Petty Officer 2nd Class Lisa Holman, U.S. Navy — "I can't believe it when I see people who don't have their kids in car seats. I have 2-year-old twins, and the first thing I do is buckle them in their seats. Not everyone is going to be a safe driver, so you have to be cautious for your kids."

Maj. Roberto Richards, U.S. Marine Corps — "You need to drive safely because it saves lives. You need to slow down and and pay attention, but getting enough rest is important too. My brother and his wife were killed in an accident because he fell asleep behind the wheel."



Heather Sherrill, family member — "You should drive safely because you and your passengers are precious cargo. We got hit New Year's Eve by a drunken driver, and luckily the accident was minor, but it's scary to think what could have happened."

Edward Wulff, Columbus — "It's important to set a good example for your kids. If you drive like a maniac, they'll do it, too. My kids are so important to me. I want to teach them to be responsible citizens."

Anna Candelaria, family member — "It's important to be a safe driver, because you have to protect your life and the lives of others. You should be aware of other drivers, wear your seat belt, and be courteous, like using a blinker when switching lanes."

Sgt. Jackie Sumpter, 1209th Quartermaster — "A lot of accidents happen these days because people aren't paying attention, or they're being reckless. People shouldn't talk on cell phones and everybody should slow down. Take your time. You're going to get there."

Navy liaisons ease way for deploying Sailors

Say Army-Navy 'game' a good fit

Bridgett Siter
Bayonet staff

Two years ago, the Navy was "in danger of becoming irrelevant" in the Global War on Terrorism, said Command Sgt. Maj. Stuart Smith, of Fort Benning's CONUS Replacement Center.

That year, less than 300 Sailors processed through the CRC, the unit responsible for training and deploying individuals — not units — to deploy to any one of 30 areas around the world to "plug in" to positions where their career specialty was needed.

These days, the CRC sees three times that many Sailors each year, mostly JAG officers, corpsmen (the Navy's equivalent to the Army's medics), intelligence, supply specialists, and masters at arms (the Navy's equivalent to the Army's military police). Typically, they're on their way to Afghanistan or Iraq.

"It's a matter of getting into the fight," said Cmdr. Matt Gibbons, one of two Navy liaisons at the CRC.

"It was a question of how can you take a service and make it relevant to the current situation. The Navy's finding more and more ways to step up and say we can help here and here and here."

The Sailors who pass through the CRC have missions as varied as one can imagine, Gibbons said.

But his mission, and that of his partner, Senior Chief Petty Officer Larkin Whetstone, by definition, is simple. But it's never easy.

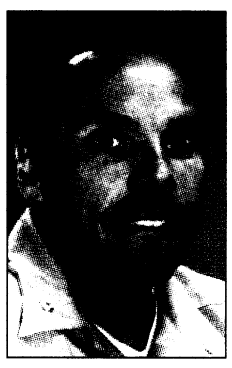
"Our mission — our only mission — is to take care of our shipmates," Gibbons said.

And, on average, they have 18 to 35 "shipmates" inprocess each week at the CRC, where they'll be trained to serve in a potentially hostile environment using tactics and weapons atypical to the Navy.

"The 9 mm tactics you use in a humvee or on a crowded street in Iraq are going to be very different than the 9 mm tactics you've been trained to use in the Navy, where the object is to get the bad guy off the ship," Gibbons said.

"What they learn here is relevant to what they'll encounter over there."

Both liaisons, former active-duty Sailors, are mobilized Reservists on orders to Fort Benning for one year.



Whetstone, who owned a software company in Tennessee before being activated, arrived in February. The father of four said the software industry will pass him by before his tour is up.

"But that's OK. That's part of life," he said. "You know that as a Reservists, you can be called at any time, and the only acceptable answer is, 'Aye aye.'"

Gibbons joined him in March. A safety director for an Illinois company on the New York Stock Exchange, Gibbons is also a father of four.

His job will be waiting for him, but the kids — they don't wait.

"Life goes on when you're away," he said. "That's the hard part, but it's harder for them than us, I think. They have to take care of everything without us."

Gibbons

"As more and more people see what's going on here, and more and more Navy guys are sent over, it's only going to keep growing. I think if the Army gets its way — and I know the Navy wants to play — I see this place as truly a joint center for liaisons from all the services."

Cmdr. Matt Gibbons
Navy liaison

With just under 10 percent of the CRC's total number of "deployees" coming from the Navy — a number that's likely to increase as the Navy takes charge of the prison at Guantanamo Bay — the liaisons believe their jobs are as relevant as the training the Sailors receive.

"When we got here, to be honest, I thought we'd be CRC 'customers,'" Whetstone said. "That's not been the case at all. They've allowed us to be partners with them, and it's made us a lot more effective, I think."

Take, for example, the training Sailors receive at the CRC to use an M-16, a weapon they're not typically issued. A JAG officer serving in Abu Ghraib recently e-mailed to thank the liaisons for jumping hurdles to make sure he was issued an M-16. During a recent uprising at the prison, the officer said, that rifle saved his life.

"It just made sense to get him one. If you're trained to use it here, you're probably going to need it over there," Gibbons said.

"The CRC could've probably taken care of it, if they were aware of the problem, but obviously, being Army, they're not always going to be aware of Navy problems.

"They've bent over backward to accommodate us, to give us what we need to take care of our shipmates," he said.

Gibbons spent two weeks last month going through the CRC training to make sure he "completely comprehended" what the deployees go through. It had an added benefit.

Now, he knows exactly where to find Sailors at every stage of their training.

Instead of waiting for the Sailors to come to them with their problems, Gibbons and Whetstone visit the Sailors throughout the day, during training breaks, to alleviate any problems.

"Now, we can solve most problems the same day," Whetstone said. "When they see us coming, their faces light up."

When others see them coming, Soldiers and civilians alike, they're often perplexed, Gibbons said. Though the "Navy presence" on Fort Benning is growing, it's still an unusual sight.

With the installation home to a great number of foreign soldiers, those who don't recognize the liaison's uniform typically mistake them for foreigners.

The Navy culture, too, is foreign to most Soldiers, they said, and therein lies their only real discomfort on post. Just last week, Whetstone passed an officer on a covered breezeway. As is the Navy regulation, he was not wearing his cover, so he could not return the Soldier's salute.

"The same goes for PTs. We don't salute when we're wearing PTs," Whetstone said. "It's mainly things like that — no big deal — but they bother me, because I think this guy probably wonders why I didn't salute."

That'll likely change, Gibbons believes, as more and more Sailors pass through Fort Benning. Last month, the SEALS sent 70 support personnel, linguists and such, to CRC. They liked the training, Gibbons said, and they'll send more.

"It's growing. As more and more people see what's going on here, and more and more Navy guys are sent over, it's only going to keep growing," he said.

"I think if the Army gets its way — and I know the Navy wants to play — I see this place as truly a joint center for liaisons from all the services. It just makes sense."

Whetstone

"When we got here, to be honest, I thought we'd be CRC 'customers.' That's not been the case at all. They've allowed us to be partners with them, and it's made us a lot more effective, I think."

Injured Soldiers find rehabilitation in water

Aquatics therapy helps Soldiers heal

Tawny Archibald Campbell
Bayonet staff

For the past seven years, Staff. Sgt. Jesus Rios has spent a lot of the time in deep water.

As a physical therapy technician with the physical therapy clinic at Martin Army Community Hospital, Rios spends several hours a week poolside, teaching aquatics therapy.

Between himself and Staff Sgt. Lisa Brantley, a physical therapy technician at Winder Health Clinic on Sand Hill, the two help hundreds of Soldiers a year take to the water so they can get back into the field.

"Aqua therapy gives (injured patients) an area to do things in a nonweight-bearing environment," Rios said. "The water is therapeutic because it is warm and provides patients with basic resistance."

Brantley described aqua therapy as a preparatory stage for people who need physical therapy but their bodies aren't quite ready for it yet.

"The water will take the weight and pressure off the injury and still allow (the patient) to get a good workout," Brantley said.

The benefits of aqua therapy include an increase in balance, coordination, strength, endurance, range of motion, circulation and muscle tone, she said. It also protects joints during exercise, reduces stress, decreases swelling and pain.

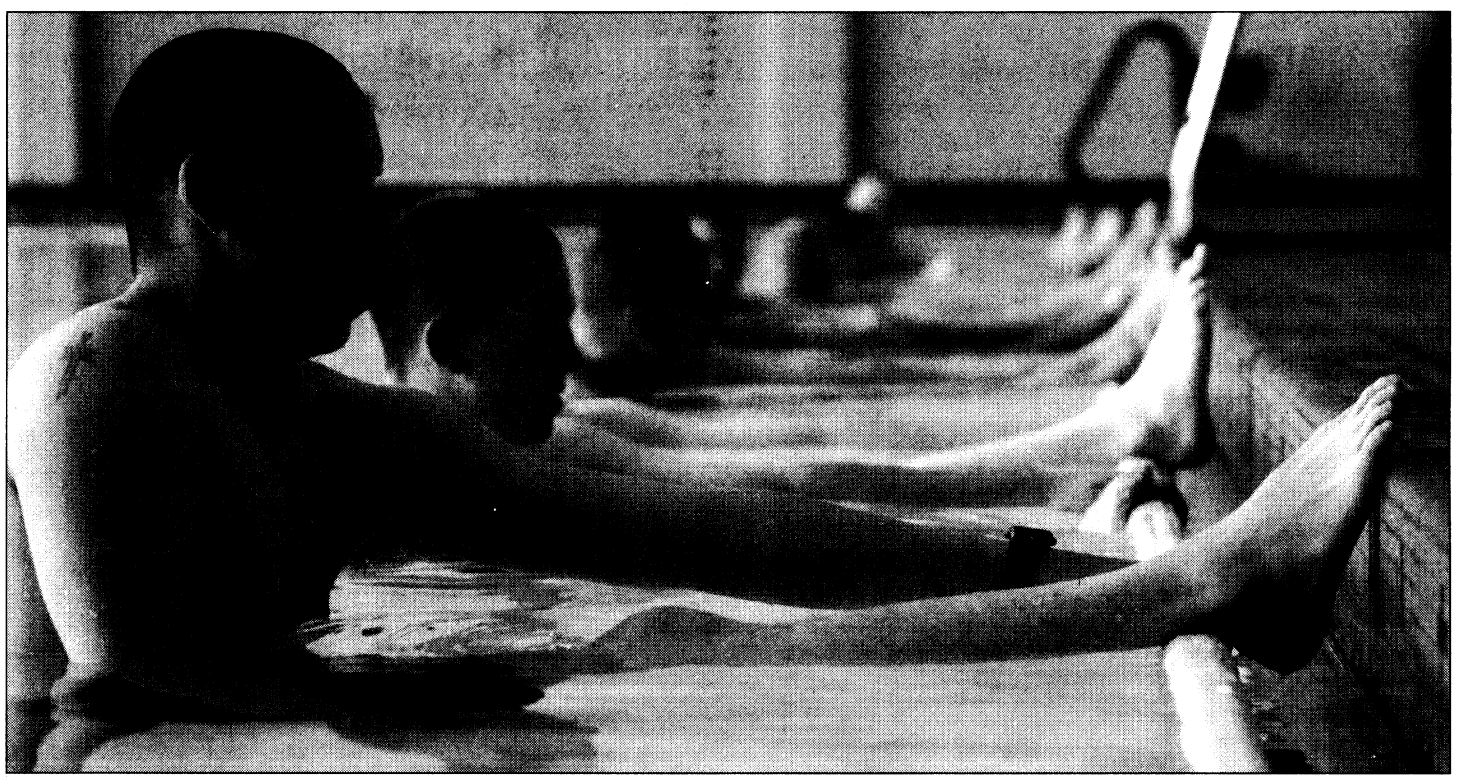
People who can benefit from the water therapy include, but are not limited to, people with arthritis, knee and shoulder pain, neck and back pain and pregnant women, Brantley said.

Aquatic therapy enables a much faster rehabilitation time for Soldiers.

"The main reason for the physical therapy is it helps with the attrition rate," Rios said. "If the Soldier has a problem, in physical therapy we can help them work around that. Most Soldiers think if they have an injury, that's it, they will have to get out (of the Army.) But that's not true."

Rios said physical therapy can't get the Soldiers back to 100 percent of what they used to be, but it can help work with their limitations so they can have a more normal life.

Rios said most of his patients are Soldiers in training that come to Sand Hill and do more exercise in the first few weeks than they may have done in the previous several months.



Many of their injuries include stress fractures, knee injuries and back injuries, which can all be helped with aqua therapy.

Depending on their motivational level, and how closely patients follow their physical therapy plan, Rios said about 85 percent of physical therapy patients will return to at least 95 percent of normal activity.

"The most important thing about physical therapy is knowing that it's the patients' responsibility as to how they will recover," Rios said. "If they follow the plan set out for them, they will recover. If they turn from the plan, that's when the set backs will come."

The physical therapy clinic is located on the eighth floor of MACH.

To be treated at the clinic, Soldiers must have a physician's referral. Aqua therapy is from 8 to 9 a.m. Mondays at Briant Wells Fitness Center for permanent party Soldiers and 8 to 9 a.m. Wednesdays for trainees.

MEDPROS supports unit readiness

Dr. Cynthia Borel
MEDDAC

The Army's Medical Protection System is the standard source of individual and unit medical readiness for tracking the Human Weapon System. Due to upcoming changes in the unit status report, the USAMEDCOM MEDPROS Program Office has developed a MEDPROS USR report tool to assist commanders in identifying delinquencies in their personnel's medical readiness.

The AR 220-1 (unit status reporting) is expected to be implemented by Sept. 15. Although aspects of medical readiness have always been part of determining personnel availability in AR220-1, the revision places added emphasis on individual medical readiness. The IMR elements in the revised AR 220-1 are:

- Immunizations — requires the routine immunization profile.
- Periodic health assessment — requires current physical exam as defined in AR 40-501 para 8-19.

The impact the new IMR reportable fields have on the USR personnel rating may be significant if commanders are not vigilant in reviewing their personnel medical readiness in MEDPROS. For example, if a Soldier is delinquent in one of the routine adult immunizations or does not have a current physical exam, then the Soldier is non-available for deployment due to immunizations and or health assessment.

The MEDPROS USR tool provides a snapshot of the unit at the time the report is retrieved. It can be used to complete the USR worksheet and report and to resolve medical delinquencies before they are reported.

For example, if commanders run the report before the USR is due, they can identify delinquent Soldiers and get their medical readiness updated before the USR report date.

In order for this tool to be effective, commanders must ensure their Soldiers' medical data is available and current in MEDPROS, and also that the personnel data is updated in the Electronic Military Personnel Office, which is the USR source of assigned personnel.

Commanders are also encouraged to ensure they maintain sufficient MEDPROS users within their units. For MEDPROS access, go to www.mods.army.mil. MEDPROS Readiness coordinators are located in each medical region, and can be contacted through the POC link on the MODS Web site.

For more information or MEDPROS training needs, call 545-7304.

Rangers honor McKenrick during farewell

Welcome new commander to 4th RTB

Bridgett Siter

Lt. Col. Terrence McKenrick, left, relinquished command of the 4th Ranger Training Battalion to Lt. Col. Jim Mingus, right, June 17. Col. K.K. Chinn, center, is the commander of the Ranger Training Brigade.

In the two years Lt. Col. Terrence McKenrick led the 4th Ranger Training Battalion, more than 6,000 Rangers were tabbed, the battalion produced the first- and second-place Best Ranger teams, undefeated basketball and softball teams, a USAIC Instructor of the Quarter, three USAIC Volunteers of the Month and a Fort Benning Volunteer of Excellence.

Though McKenrick "leaves some pretty big boots to fill," it's not the size of his shoes that concerns Lt. Col. Jim Mingus.

"It's the height thing I can't get used to," Mingus said, as he lowered the microphone several inches before addressing the crowd gathered at the Ranger Memorial for a change of command ceremony June 17.

Mingus is by no means a short man, but his predecessor, at 6 feet, 4 inches tall, towered head and shoulders above the crowd as he thanked his Soldiers and his family for their unwavering support.

"These awards are recognition of all the guys you see here in the tan berets," McKenrick said, after being awarded a Meritorious Service Medal. He was also inducted into the Order of St. Maurice.

His wife, Liz, and kids, Christian, Mariah and Justice, allowed him to give 110 percent, McKenrick said, a necessary sacrifice during wartime.

While Liz was looking after the wives of the 4th RTB, McKenrick "poured his heart and soul into this unit," said Col. K.K. Chinn, the commander of the Ranger Training Brigade.

"We're winning this Global War on Terrorism because of Rangers," Chinn said. "Terry and this battalion are at the root level — training the best computer on the battlefield and the most lethal weapon in the U.S. Army."

McKenrick was "hand-picked" by Lt. Gen. Ricardo Sanchez, Chinn said, to serve as the joint staff operations director for the 5th Corps in Germany and then in Iraq.

Mingus, his replacement and longtime friend, will fill his boots quite nicely, McKenrick said.

"He's more than up to the challenge," he said. "He's the only guy in the Army who's commanded two Long Range Surveillance companies."

As such, Mingus is "uniquely qualified to lead a unique unit," Chinn said.

Besides being responsible for the first phase of Ranger School, Ranger graduations, Rangers In Action demonstrations and regular taskings around post, 4th RTB cadre also instruct the Reconnaissance and Surveillance Leaders Course, where reconnaissance leaders "are trained to find the enemy so our world's finest finishing force can kill him," Chinn said, and that's a tall order.

"This is the most complex, challenging and demanding battalion in the Ranger Training Brigade," he said. "The only time they are not training is during Christmas break."

That said, Mingus thanked his own wife and kids in advance "for the support and sacrifice" they'll give during the next two years.

Mingus, whose military service includes a lengthy stint with the 82nd Airborne Division and the 75th Ranger Regiment, comes to the 4th RTB from Fort Bragg, N.C., where he served as the lead planner and chief of current operations for the Joint Special Operations Command.

Mingus and his wife, Amy, have four children, Samantha, Nathan, Zoe and Luke.

Combat leader set to speak June 28

The next Combat Leader Speaker Program is scheduled for 4 p.m. June 28 in Marshall Auditorium.

The series, sponsored by the Combined Arms and Tactics Directorate, brings a variety of military leaders from combat arms branches to share their experiences.

The June program features retired Command Sgt. Maj. George L. Horvath III, a 32-year veteran of the Infantry, who joined the Army in 1960.

Horvath served in every infantry noncommissioned officer leadership position from team leader to command sergeant major of both the U.S. Forces Command and U.S. Army Europe and Seventh Army.

Horvath spent much of his career in Europe and has also served in Korea. His combat experience includes two tours in Vietnam serving as a platoon sergeant with the 4th Battalion, 21st Infantry Regiment and as the senior advisor to the 21st Vietnamese Ranger Battalion.

In 1986, while assigned as the command sergeant major of III Corps, Horvath was instrumental in getting the original Sergeant Audie Murphy Club up and running at Fort Hood, Texas. The SAMC now has more than 3,500 members Armywide. Horvath was inducted into the Ranger Hall of Fame in 2004.

Show: To have best fireworks in post's history

since the team was reactivated last year.

Part of this year's celebration includes a working field hospital set up in front of Garner Field in front of Meloy Hall and across from York Field by the 14th Field Hospital.

The 36th Engineer Group will provide a heavy equipment transporter, a common bridge transporter, a palletized load system and D-7 bulldozer.

"We'll have more military displays than we've had in the recent past," said Jim Shoemaker with DMWR as he listed the other static displays — a Black Hawk, Stryker, humvee, Bradley, a mortar and small arms displays.

Vendors will have food and drink for sale and there will be an area with children's rides. There will be 19 inflatable rides, a bungee run, velcro and rock walls, and wristbands, that allow for unlimited rides, will be sold for $7 each or $25 for four. The Infantry Band will play during the flag pageantry and will kick off the fireworks playing the Stars and Stripes Forever. The public is invited to attend.

"So many times in Columbus, people say 'what can we do for Soldiers?' Well, deeds, not words, time," Freakley said.

"If you really want to appreciate Soldiers, come out here for our Independence Day celebration. Be with our Soldiers who will be here, and thank all of the young men who are in basic training for what they're doing and what they're about to do."

The Independence Day celebration starts at 4 p.m. Thursday on York Field. Parking is free.

Marine fulfills boyhood dream of military career

Marine liaison retires after 23 years

Kris Gonzalez
Bayonet staff

Just like many boys growing up in Mississippi during the 60s, young Robert Kirk Rice liked to "play Army." Turning sticks into makeshift rifles and raw cotton bolls into grenades, no weapon or piece of equipment was too difficult to craft with a little imagination.

Using two-way radios on his parents' farm taught the young warrior the dynamics of communication plans and the effect of a quick reaction force.

When he heard his mother, Ann, say on the radio, "KFS-869 Base to Unit 1, Come in Herbert, over," and saw a dust cloud surrounding his Dad's pickup heading straight toward him, he said, he learned the importance of a good escape and evasion plan.

Hunting helped sharpen his patrolling, stalking and tracking skills.

It was never a surprise that this boy who ran through the countryside singing the Marine's Hymn, would later march to the same beat and make a career out of living in the field.

The boy who "played Army" but dreamed of being a Marine, joined the Naval ROTC while attending the University of Mississippi.

His first assignment took him to North Carolina, where he spent two years establishing a foundation for the rest of his military career.

In 1992, he was sent to Los Angeles during a time of civil unrest. Rice, as commander of an element of Marines, would be sent in to prevent looting and restore order after the riots following the Rodney King verdict. He and his men would be called to bring peace to a gang-infested territory where drive-by shootings made an American city a "war zone."

"When they saw us Marines standing on the street corner dressed in full combat gear, with our bayonets, they (rioters) knew we meant business," Rice said. "The word amongst the gangs was 'the biggest, baddest gang had just moved into the neighborhood.'"

Three years later, he would face warlords in a third-world nation, Somalia, and use unconventional firepower to subdue mobs of hungry and disgruntled Somalis.

Taught to treat others with dignity and respect, Rice gravitated toward people with like minds and common values. He found mentors in his own commanders, like Col. Jim McGhee, who Rice said was fair to everyone. Rice said McGhee and others along his path helped him develop his own common sense approach to leadership.

"I realized early on to treat everybody right," Rice said. "I asked myself, 'How would you like to be treated like dirt for no good reason?' These Marines need compliments and encouragement and someone who would get down and fight with them. If the Marines are tired, wet and hungry, than you better be tired, wet and hungry too.

"Not every Marine joins the Corps to become the commandant or the sergeant major," Rice said. "It's our job as leaders to realize this and respect this and to remember to return this person to society in a healthy, productive manner — better than when he came in."

It was this approach that earned him a tremendous reputation among the Marines, and he has been highly regarded among senior officers as well as his peers, said long time friend and colleague, retired Col. Bruce Judge, now assistant chief of staff for manpower at the Training and Education Command, Quantico, Va.

"He's a Marine's Marine," Judge said. "He's as good as a Marine could be."

Rice said he will cherish the hardships as well as the good times he shared with his fellow Marines.

He said he won't miss the "freezing or sweating" his "butt off or being shot at," but he will miss the opportunity to lead in combat and personally witness "selfless courage and compassion in action."

"I observed America's finest defending America on one street corner, helping to rebuild a nation on another, and feeding the world's underdogs or caring for their sick and injured on a third," he said.

"I will always remember that very few, if any, successes were truly mine alone, but rather they were the result of gaining the respect and trust of my fellow Marines, regardless of rank, and all of us reaping the mutual benefit that none of us were willing to let the other down, for any reason," he said.

But the person who would back him the most, Rice said, he met on a blind date in 1979. He said it was love at first sight when he saw Melanie Firsher. That night he told his college roommate he had met his future wife, and five years later, they tied the knot. Melanie continues to stand by his side 26 years later.

"Melanie has supported me in anything I've ever wanted to do," Rice said. "Open communication between us was key. We decided if we were going to make this (serving the Marine Corps) a career, we'd talk about what it was going to be like and what was going to be the price."

Sometimes the price would seem small, like extending their engagement and keeping a long distance relationship for two years while she pursued a job as a travel consultant and he moved to North Carolina.

But the payoffs were big for for Rice and his wife, who raised "three beautiful daughters." Twenty-three years after Rice launched his military career, they finally get to settle down, enjoy their home and tend to each other.

Marine Detachment changes command

Soldiers, Marines, their families and friends gathered at Eubanks Field Monday to bid farewell to Marine Corps Lt. Col. R. Kirk Rice, as he retired from 23 years of service, and to welcome the new U.S. Marine Corps Detachment commander, Lt. Col. Richard D. Hall.

"We're here to pay respect," Deputy Commander Brig. Gen. James C. Yarbrough said to Rice, as he honored him for his service to Fort Benning, the Marine Corps, and the country. "We're here to recognize how you improved the lives and careers of the Marines you've led."

Rice, who assumed command of the detachment in May 2001, assisted more than 4,000 Marines and Sailors through programs like the Airborne, Sniper, Jumpmaster, Pathfinder, and Javelin Gunner courses.

He recruited Marines to serve as primary instructors for the Airborne and Ranger courses.

"You made them better Marines," Yarbrough said. "The Corps will represent your standards. You've left behind a bigger and better force."

Within his own career, Rice trained at the Amphibious Warfare School at Quantico, Va. He dodged bullets while in Los Angeles during the riots of 1992.

He engaged in combat just three years later in Mogadishu, Somalia, during Operation United Shield.

But Yarbrough said Rice's real legacy lives in the people he has left behind.

"You'll never be able to take a calculator and count the Marines you've touched and inspired," Yarbrough said. "Those you touched twenty years ago have reached out and passed your good standards and habits down to so many more generations of Marines, and it continues to grow like a pyramid."

Rice passed the detachment guidon to Hall, another seasoned veteran, and welcomed him as the new detachment commander.

"Your reputation precedes you and I know that the Marines of Fort Benning will continue to flourish under your leadership," Rice said.

In turn, Hall said, "If I can influence training in any way, shape or form to make us better be able to survive, fight and win, I want to be here."

Hall referred to his new cadre as superb Marines.

"I'm here with the cutting edge," Hall said. "These guys are training the forces to fight. From what I've seen of the men I've met, my success is guaranteed."

Hall brings with him his wife, Amy and their nine children: Joshua, Rachel, Rebecca, Jacob, Hannah, Sarah, Josiah, Leah and Marah.

IOBC command changes as leader heads west to NTC

Lt. Col. Jeffrey W. Dill relinquished command of the 2nd Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment to Lt. Col. Geoffrey D. Ellerson Wednesday in a ceremony on York Field.

Dill will become the senior light Infantry and Airborne trainer at the National Training Center in Fort Irwin, Calif.

Col. Mark Ritter, commander of the 11th Infantry Regiment, recognized Dill for his calm demeanor and steady leadership style.

"Jeff personifies the quiet professional and is a commander who sincerely cares about his Soldiers and the mission," Ritter said. "He was given a sacred trust by our nation to train her sons, to lead Infantry platoons in combat and win — and he has done that magnificently."

"Initially, I questioned whether my deliberate, methodical and slightly passive personality might not quite be the thing for the Infantry Officer Basic Course," Dill said. "I think we figured out early that at that point in time, it was a good thing."

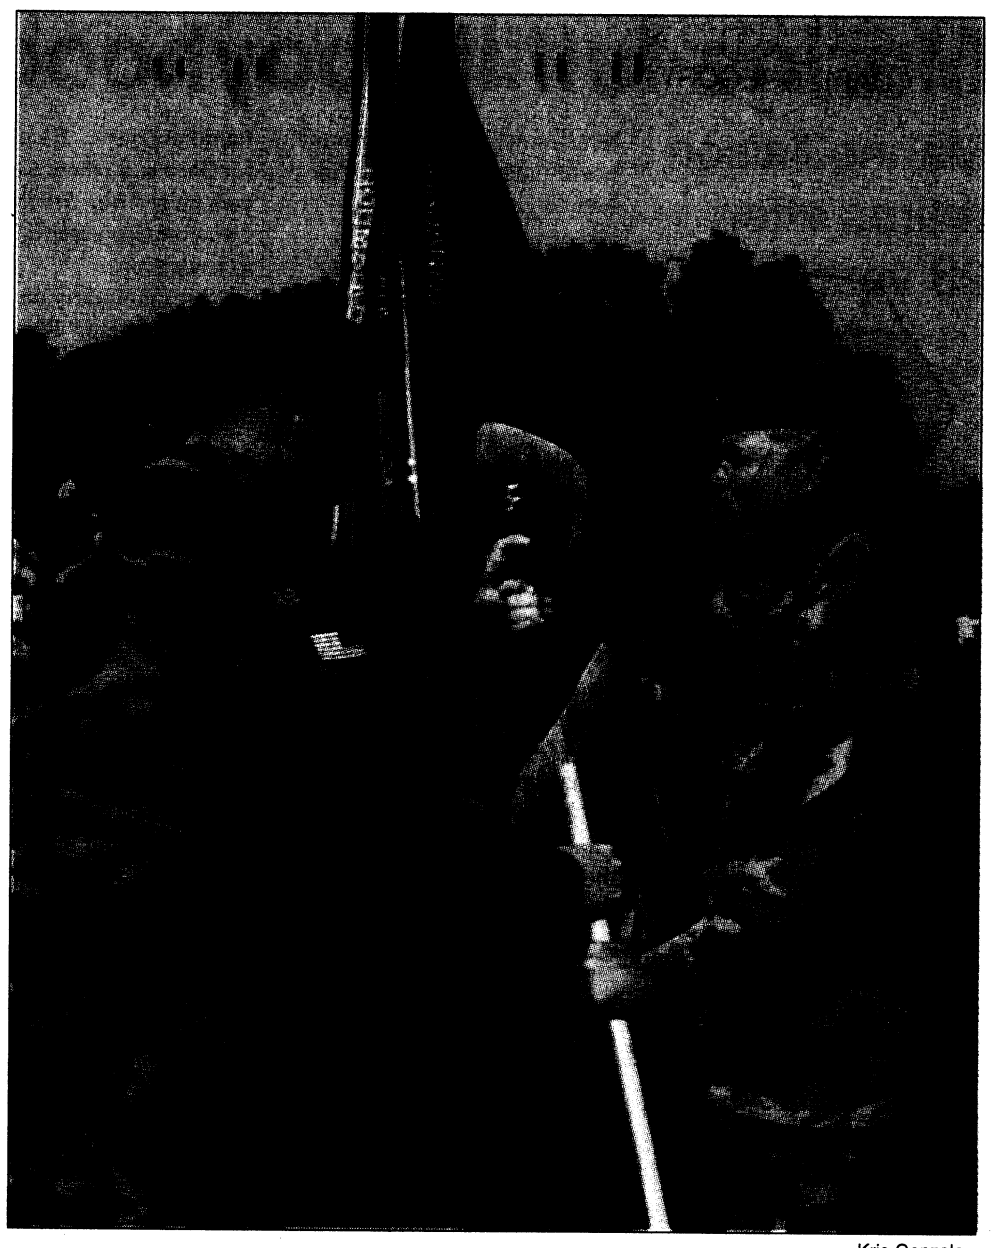
Dill thanked Ritter for giving him the most rewarding job in his 24 years of military service.

"I truly appreciated the very liberal left and right limits and confidence you displayed in us," he said. "Your non-intrusive, yet expectant leadership provided purpose, motivation and direction to me and my cadre."

Ritter said Dill led his cadre to become one of the "best groups of Soldiers " in the Army.

"Day in and day out, they constantly supervised and trained their Infantry lieutenants in the most high-risk program of instruction at Fort Benning," Ritter said. "Their multiple complex movements and multiple live fire exercises were designed to produce an Infantry officer who can lead his platoon to win in combat."

The battalion mission is to train Infantry platoon leaders to succeed at war by participating in battle drills, platoon operations and combat focused physical training. New lieutenants become experts in Army doctrine, tactics, techniques and procedures. It's the only unit common to all Infantry officers in the Army.



Dill welcomed Ellerson, who he said understands the battalion's mission as a a former company commander in the battalion.

"Before you stands a solid outfit, ready to go forth and train Infantry leaders to do the nation's bidding," Dill said. "Good luck to you and Wendy as you take the 2nd Battalion, 11th Infantry on to new heights."

Ellerson, a graduate of Georgia Southwestern College, was commissioned in 1988. His assignments range from being a military observer for the United Nations Transitional Authority to Cambodia, to his most recent assignment as chief of the Coordination Planning Group at the U.S. Military Training Mission in Riyadh, Saudi Arabia.

He has served in California, Louisiana and Kansas, and deployed to Haiti and Bosnia. His uniform is decorated with the Combat Infantryman's Badge, the Expert Infantryman's Badge, the Parachutist's Badge, and Airborne and Ranger tabs.

Ellerson brings with him his wife Wendy and their five children: Nikolas, Geoffrey, Joshua, Christopher and Alexis.

Heat: Awareness key to safe training of Soldiers category for the training.

Another measure taken to ensure safety is the monitoring of food and water intake of Soldiers, Gibson said.

In preventing heat injuries, all training elements at Fort Benning must follow the U.S. Army Infantry Center Regulation 40-14.

The Fluid Replacement Policy for Warm Weather, better known as the Heat Category Chart, is found in USAIC Regulation 40-14, and shows the amount of training allowed as well as the water intake necessary during the various heat categories.

"We will modify training for Soldiers and their uniforms and still get the value of training our warriors in the field," Gibson said. "We must acclimate our Soldiers for the harsh environment so they know how to take care of themselves when (these) situations occur in places like Iraq and Afghanistan."

The Soldier acclimation process takes place during the first three weeks of training. This is the time when all Soldiers are closely monitored to see if they are potential heat casualty victims.

Data gathered by the Army Medical Surveillance Activity shows that the first three weeks of training are crucial in identifying hot weather casualties among Soldiers.

According to the Training and Doctrine Command regulation, once Soldiers are identified as heat casualties, they are observed throughout the training by a marking on their equipment. The marking ensures they can be quickly identified by cadre.

According to the Army Medical Surveillance Activity, most heat injuries happen between April and September, with July being the hottest month.

The same study showed Soldiers in the first 18 to 24 months of active duty have significantly higher rates of heat injuries.

"We can't afford to lose Soldiers from negligence during training, the cost is too high," Gibson said. "We need them trained and on the battlefield."

For more information on heat prevention or for heat prevention posters and cards, go to at:http://chppm-www.apgea.mil/heat, or in USACI Regulation 40-14.

Caution: Hourly fluid intake should not exceed 1 1/2 quarts. Daily fluid intake should not exceed 12 quarts.

*Work/rest times and fluid replacement volumes will sustain performance and hydration for at least 4 hours of work in the specified heat category. Individual water needs will vary ± 1/4 quarts per hour.
*NL = No Limit to work per hour. Rest means minimal physical activity (sitting or standing) and should be accomplished in shade if possible.
Wearing body armor adds 5 degrees Fahrenheit to WBGT Index.
*Wearing all MOPP overgarments adds 10 degrees Fahrenheit to WBGT Index.
 Suspend physical training and strenuous activity. If an operational (nontraining) mission requires strenuous activity, enforce water intake to minimize heat injuries.

to traffic accidents.

"Most people think that they're more likely to have an accident while driving in a new location, but it's in locations we're familiar with that the accidents usually occur," Beighley said.

"We rely on our past experiences, so we become complacent and don't pay attention to our surroundings. This can lead to driving too fast or getting distracted by the radio, a cell phone or passengers in the back seat.

"Probably the worst distraction," he said, "is thinking about other things. When driving becomes second nature, we stop concentrating on what we're doing."

The NHTSA has found that something as simple as changing a CD is more of a driver distraction than eating or dialing a cell phone.

In addition to paying attention to surrounding activity, the American Automobile Association said tire maintenance plays a critical role in vehicle handling, driving safety and braking capability.

Beighley and the AAA recommended a quick way to measure tires for safety is by inserting a penny upside-down between the tread. If any part of the tire covers President Lincoln's head, the tires are still safe. If Lincoln's head is completely exposed, it's time to buy new tires.

"In a lot of the accidents I've investigated here on post, the tires are bald, or very near bald," said Beighley.

The Department of Transportation advised maximizing safe travel by planning trip routes ahead of time, maintaining enough distance between vehicles and checking blind spots before changing lanes,

Beighley also recommended wearing seat belts and taking breaks from driving every two hours.

"Driving is a dangerous operation. It's the second leading cause of Soldier death after combat," Beighley said. "Armywide, we've had 95 Soldiers killed in vehicle accidents already this year."

This year on post there have been seven fatalities so far, three of them happening to motorcycle drivers.

Fort Benning's Directorate of Logistics offers a four-hour defensive driving course for Army motor vehicle drivers under 26, and a motorcycle safety course open to anyone who drives a motorcycle on post.

This Independence Day weekend, the Secretary of Defense, Fort Benning's commanding general, the Infantry Command's chief of staff, Beighley and Murphy all stress, "Don't drink and drive."

One person dies from alcohol-related vehicle injuries every 30 minutes, and more than 1 million people were injured in traffic accidents involving alcohol, according to the NHTSA.

In the state of Georgia, more than 35 percent of traffic deaths are connected to alcohol consumption.

Although most people take driving for granted, "it's really a privilege," Beighley said.

"Drive like your life depends on it, because it does."

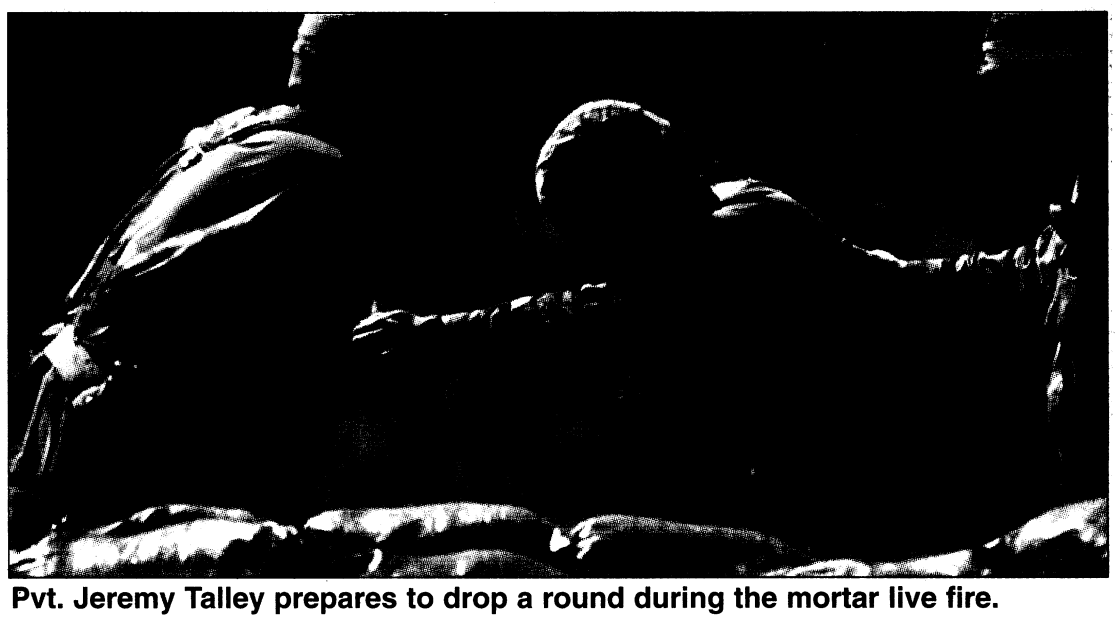
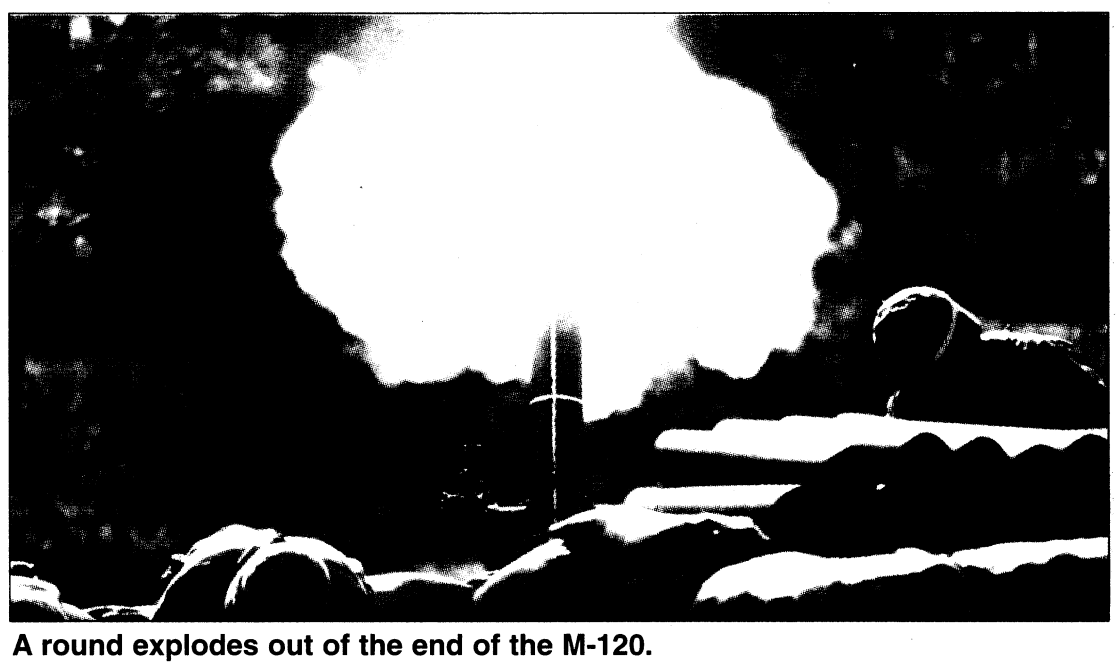
Weeks 10 and 11:

ITB training gets hot 'n' heavy

Photos by Tawny Archibald Campbell



Pvt Michael Arnds takes the lead and moves cautiously between two buildings as he and his fire team practice entering and clearing a building during military operations in urban terrain training June 17. Soldiers of the Infantry Training Brigade learn MOUT techniques during their 11th week of training.



Pvt. Kaiser Vaivau practices entering a window during training. Soldiers learn several ways to enter and clear a room during MOUT training.

Pvt. Matthew Sampson gets his chance to "hang a round" during the mortar live , June 9. The mortarmen receive two weeks of individualized training to get their 11C mortarman identifier.

Pvt. Jeremy Talley prepares to drop a round during the mortar live fire.

A round explodes out of the end of the M-120.

During week nine and 10, the Infantrymen and mortarmen receive specialized training. The Infantrymen learn convoy and squad tactics, while the mortarmen spend two weeks learning about the M-252 81mm and M-120 120 mm mortars. They spend a week conducting train-up exercises and then get an opportunity to "hang a round" during the live fire.
Week 11 is all about MOUT. Soldiers incorporate skills previously learned in this more advanced type of combat. Using reflex fire techniques, they learn to enter buildings and clear rooms. They also learn how to move tactically in built-up areas.

Editor's note: The Bayonet photographer Tawny Archibald Campbell will follow the Soldiers from B Company, 1st Battalion, 19th Infantry Regiment, through 14 weeks of training, offering readers a look at training for new Soldiers at the Infantry Training Brigade. Check each week for photos documenting their progress.

Ailing Jackson continues volunteer efforts

Seeks someone with same desire to serve

Bridgett Siter
Bayonet staff

Lonnie Jackson was in the Army 22 years. He's been serving all his life.

"You know how people say, 'He's in the service,' or, 'He was in the service.' Service is a way of life. You don't quit serving when you get out of the Army," said Jackson, who retired as a sergeant in 1968, and again in 1972, after volunteering to reactivate and serve a second tour in Vietnam.

A native of Talladega, Ala., Jackson joined the Army in 1946 at 17, because it was "the natural thing to do."

During his career, including his service with the engineers during the Korean War, he distinguished himself simply as a steadfast, organized Soldier.

Organization skills are essential to a good engineer, Jackson said. His came in handy after his retirement from the Army, when he took up residence in South Columbus and became frustrated with what he called the "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde" quality of Columbus.

"You know, I retired off Sand Hill, where it was spotless. The Army keeps things clean. The Army says you've got two hands — use one to

Program provides FUNtastic reading

Tawny Archibald Campbell
Bayonet staff

Katie Howell is a regular, but not at some coffee shop or beauty parlor. She is a regular at the library, and she doesn't come alone.

With 4-year-old John and 2-year-old Maggie in tow, Howell has made it a part of her weekly schedule to come to Sayers Memorial Library to participate in story hour and the FUNtastic Reading! Summer Reading Program.

The program provides each child with a reading log and a bookmark. Children who log at least 10 books during the program will get a prize. Also, each week there are programs with activities, crafts and story time designed for children of specific ages.

"I've always loved reading, and I want my kids to enjoy it too," Howell said. "The (summer reading program) is a good way to keep them interested in books."

Each night before bed, "since they were itty bitty," Howell has read her children books.

"Books make them more well-rounded and they see the world in a different way," she said. "John now has an imagination that you can't believe." Howell can see how spending time during the summer at the library can have benefits.

"It is a social time and a learning time," Howell said. "It makes reading fun and not so much of a drag."

Sherrie Floyd, a librarian of more than 20 years, said the whole purpose of the summer program is to help younger kids learn and to teach them that reading can be fun.

"If they can see reading is fun, maybe they will choose a book over an X-Box," Floyd said. "When you help a child learn to read it opens up a whole world of learning."

That's Floyd's passion — introducing children to a world of books and showing them things they never would have imagined before.

"I come to work every day and I feel like I can make a difference in someone's life through reading," she said. "If I can help a child love to read, then I've made a difference in their future."

The reading program, Floyd said, teaches them that love of books and helps encourage children to think of the library and books as fun.

"That's why we make the summer reading program so much fun," Floyd said. "This way they will make reading a part of their life."

The program also helps the parents.

"It gives the kids an opportunity to share something enlightening with the parents; something they can do together," she said. "Since not everyone is trained to read a book to a child, parents can come and learn so they can make reading more exciting at home."

There are two programs scheduled each week. The 3 to 5 year olds meet at 11 a.m. on Tuesdays and those ages 6 and older meet on Thursdays.

"The program is designed for specific age groups, so the books are age appropriate, but anyone is welcome, no matter the age," Floyd said. This week's theme is "Monkeys Going Ape!" After the story time, children can stay and make crafts.

The program will continue through July 21. For more information call Sayers Memorial Library at 545-4911 or 545-7141.

Women honor Soldiers

Daughters donate gift to Infantry

Kris Gonzalez
Bayonet staff

Infantrymen helped them grow up to be honorable women. Now, the Daughters of the United States Army want to honor those who served and support the Infantry.

The Fort Benning chapter of the DUSA donated $250,000 to be National Infantry Foundation. The funds will be used for the National Infantry Museum project.

Chapter president, Sally Lasseter, presented a check to the foundation chair, retired Maj. Gen. Jerry White, Monday during a ceremony at her Columbus home.

The money will be used to build a gallery dedicated to Infantrymen and those who supported them, like their families, White said.

"Sacrifice is not just from the Soldiers," he said. "When a Soldier gets killed, that's a terrible thing, but the family pays the ultimate price because they have to suffer that loss for the rest of their lives."

The first of its kind in any military museum, the gallery will portray the many contributions made by military spouses and family readiness groups.

Lasseter said she hopes it will be a place where Soldiers,

Snellville residents lead Operation Sandbox for troops

Civilians team up, help out war effort

Donna Hyatt
Bayonet staff

Wanting to send a little bit of cheer to the troops overseas during the winter holiday season, a mother and daughter sponsored by their church, started packing boxes for Soldiers stationed in Iraq.

Not just any boxes, but boxes filled with items specifically for each individual Soldier.

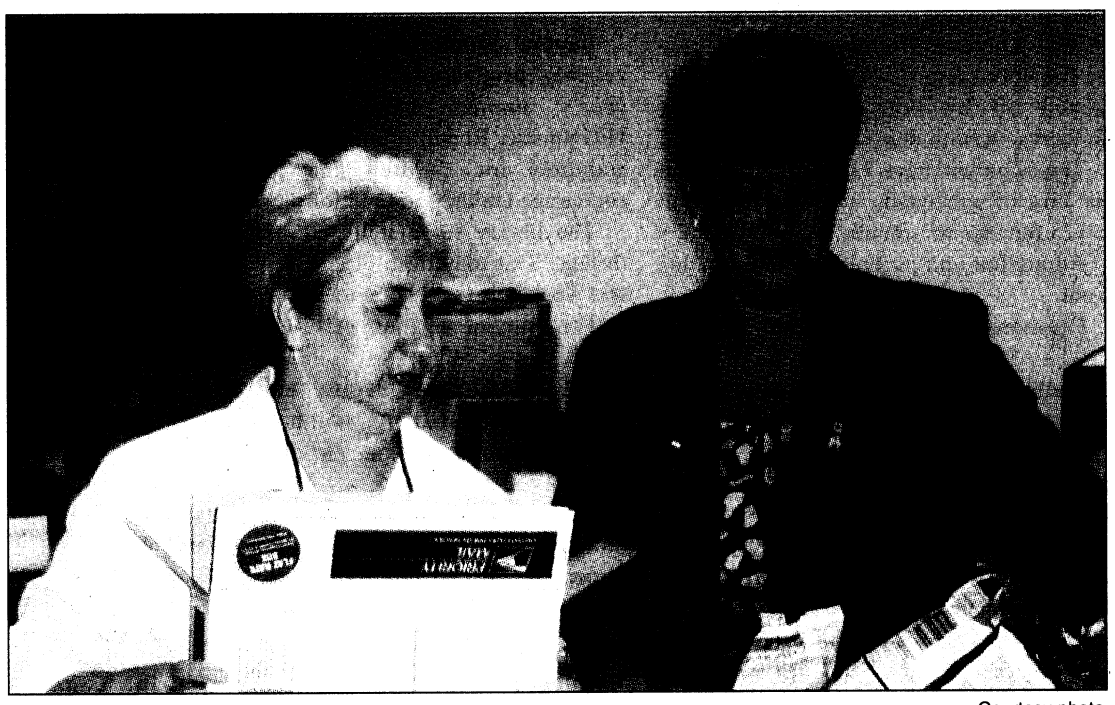
"They write and tell us what they need," said Virginia Pearson. "We get requests for things like insect repellent, sunscreen, flyswatters, even Kool Aid. Every box is packed with love and put together especially for that person."

Originally conceived as a holiday project for one 32-man unit, the idea mushroomed into weekly packing sessions operated from a corner of the Park Place Baptist Church fellowship hall in Snellville, Ga.

Four or five people pack boxes every week. Pearson calls it "a labor of love." They've put together over 3,000 personal boxes since the end of November, and have no thought of stopping now.

"We don't worry about the money. It always comes in when we need it," said Pearson. "People stop by and donate all kinds of things. The Georgia Welcome Center gave us 50 big bags of peanuts to send."

They put up drop boxes in local stores for people to donate items or money, and Pearson said the response was overwhelming.



Pearson speaks at places like the American legion and local churches, looking for money to pay the postage, and people always come through.

"Whenever I go to the grocery store for milk and bread, I'm always picking up something my Soldier might need. While standing in line talking with people about this project I've been handed money to keep the operation going.

"We get attached to the recipients of these boxes because each one is packed just for them. I know this sounds crazy, but we talk to these boxes because we really care about the person who will receive it."

The names of the first recipients for their care boxes came from the anysoldier.com Web site, but "since then, it's all word of mouth," said Pearson. "We set up a Web site called Operation Sandbox GA for Soldiers to write and tell us what they need but can't find over there.

"Or people will ask us to put their son or daughter, fiance or friend onto the list, and we always do. It's for anyone over there." To help keep track of all the requests, they bought a computer. "I've had to learn how to use it," said Pearson.

Mary Wiggins, left, and Terry Nalbanian prepare individual care boxes for Soldiers overseas. Operation Sandbox GA relies solely on contributions.

"It's not something I was interested in learning before now."

Word of mouth spread earlier this year to Gov. Sonny Perdue, who instituted Senate Resolution 119 in the Georgia General Assembly, recognizing the outstanding efforts and patriotism of Operation Sandbox GA.

"What an extraordinary experience," Pearson said. "This couldn't have happened without the help of everyone."

For more information on how to help with time or donations, or submit the name of a Soldier to receive a care box go to www.operationsandboxga.com.

Five steps to permanent weight loss

Kristen Jaskulsky
MCG Health System

With summer here, most people are focused on getting their bodies "bathing suit ready." The following is a list of five ways that men and women can not only get fit, but stay fit throughout the year.

Step No. 1 — Know yourself and be realistic. Take the time to figure out what your "problem areas" are in terms of bad habits, including late-night eating, skipping breakfast, drinking large amounts of sugary beverages, oversized portions and limited activity. Select a few areas to work on so you do not become overwhelmed. Make sure your goals are achievable; this will help you stick to your plan.

Rather than focus on a magic weight or clothing size, look at healthy living parameters such as lower cholesterol, lower blood pressure and lower blood sugar levels.

Step No. 2 — Look at the time. How you time your meals is crucial. When you skip breakfast, eat a small lunch and are starving by dinner, it's easy to overeat. Instead, space your calories out throughout the day. Too many calories at one time cannot be used by the body and are stored as fat.

You should never feel stuffed or starved; aim to eat enough so that you are content and comfortable. Also, read labels to determine correct portion sizes and stick with them.

Step No. 3 — Avoid crash diets. If their promises seem too good to be true, they probably are. Although crash diets may seem to work in the short term, you are likely losing only water weight, not fat. In addition, if you drastically decrease your calories, you can slow down your metabolism and make it more difficult to lose weight down the road. Make good health a goal you live with for the long term.

Step No. 4 — Stay hydrated. Nothing beats water. If you're not a water drinker, try sugar-free drinks. Try to avoid sodas and juice drinks, which provide extra sugar and calories.

Step. No. 5 — Get moving. Make exercise a habit and stick with it. Choose an activity that you really like, such as hiking, aerobics, swimming or tennis. Remember, if you find something you enjoy doing, you are more likely to continue with it on a regular basis.

Tips to conserve energy

Erin Kinoshita
WalshComm

Energy consumption is on the rise, and the depletion of fossil fuels has become a growing problem in the United States. According to the Department of Energy, the U.S. uses almost $1 million of electricity a minute, which is equivalent to approximately $525.6 billion each year. On a smaller scale, the average American family spends nearly $1,500 a year on utility bills alone, with 60 percent acquired from electricity bills.

Chances are your expenses may rise during the summer months, in part because children are home from school and many people relax the tight control they had over their utilities in the winter. The common phrase, "reduce, reuse, recycle" has become synonymous with saving energy and resources, and the sizzling months of summer will be more enjoyable and affordable if families consider these quick and easy energy saving ideas.

To help combat excessive summer expenses, Mike Sullivan, director of education for Take Charge America, provides the following 10 quick and easy everyday tips for families to save energy during the summer:

Vigilance is the key — Be extra mindful about turning off lights when leaving a room and closing windows and doors when the air conditioner is on. Simple preventative actions can have a big impact in the long run.

Monitor outdoor water usage — Turn off automatic lawn timers during rainy weeks and consider watering during the early morning and late afternoon hours to prevent evaporation. Attach a spray nozzle to the garden hose when watering outdoor plants and use a broom to clean sidewalks and driveways, rather than spraying them down with a hose.

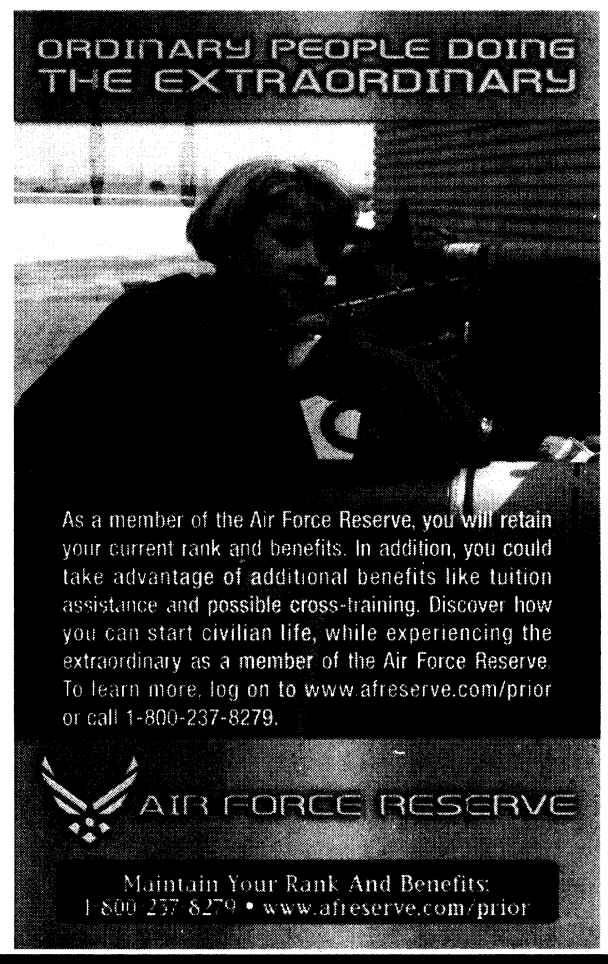
Monitor indoor water usage. Take showers instead of baths and turn off the faucet when brushing your teeth and doing the dishes. If the dishwasher must be used, run full loads and adjust water-level settings to increase efficiency.

Control computer settings. Computer usage in many homes increases during the summer, mainly because children are home from school. If the computer won't be in use for more than five minutes, set it to hibernate or sleep mode to save energy.

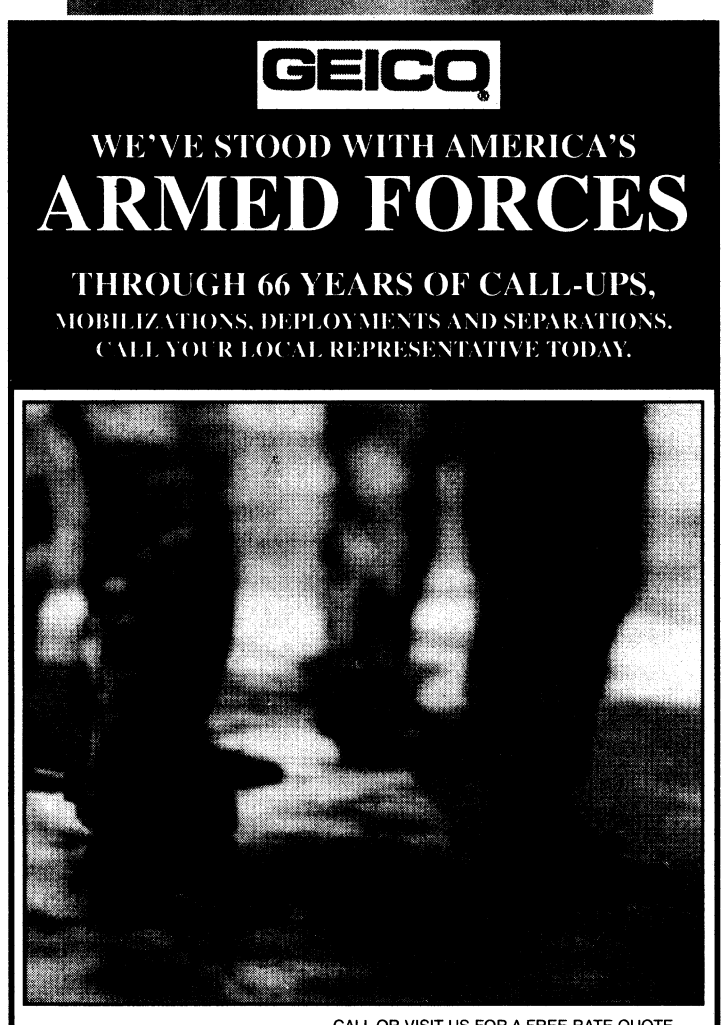
Avoid cooking in the oven. If possible, consider cooking and re-heating meals in the microwave or on an outside grill rather than in the oven. If the oven must be used, pre-heat it only when necessary and while in use, avoid opening the oven door unless absolutely necessary.

Minimize appliance usage. Large indoor appliances such as dishwashers, washing machines, dryers and water heaters generate lots of heat. To maintain cooler temperatures indoors, use appliances sparingly and late in the evening.

Wash full loads of laundry. Use cold water for both the wash and rinse cycles. Laundry can be air-dried and put into the dryer for the last five minutes to ensure softness and save energy. Overdrying clothes wastes energy and can accelerate wear and tear on your clothes.



Enjoy the sunshine. Avoid using electric lights during the day; open a curtain or two to brighten a room and enjoy the natural light! Sunshine can also be an energy saver during presummer months when passive solar heat can warm a room effectively, rather than using electric or gas heat.



Curb aggressive driving habits. Rapid acceleration, extreme braking and speeding are not only unsafe practices, they can increase gas mileage greatly. With the current cost of gas rising, look for ways to reduce gas consumption such as avoiding excessive idling and using cruise control whenever possible.

Carpool. Commuting to work, school and home can be relatively inexpensive if sharing the drive with others. Public transportation can be extremely convenient and biking or walking are healthy choices that should be considered.

Jackson: Says service way of life

pick up trash," he said. "This area of Columbus was littered something awful. It looked bad. I figured something had to be done."

So Jackson organized a clean-up drive and founded an organization, the Combined Communities of Southeast Columbus, to ensure the care and upkeep of this area was a priority with all facets of its very diverse population.

The annual clean-up drive caught on, and it caught the attention of Georgia state officials who eventually adopted Jackson's antilitter pledge for the state. ABC even paid Jackson a visit and featured his "drive," literally and figuratively, on the evening news.

In 1983, with his beautification initiative going strong, Jackson expanded the mission of the Combined Communities. That was about the time local schools and athletic organizations began to require athletes to perform well in school. Sports programs, Jackson said, are essential to the success and safety of any community. Simply put, they keep kids active and off the streets.

So Jackson spearheaded a free tutorial program for schoolchildren. To date, more than 22,000 children have participated in the program, which includes a Saturday session throughout the school year and a summer school program at Eastway Elementary.

Jackson counts the tutorial program as his greatest success. He's proud of all "his kids," he said, especially those who return, years later, to serve as tutors themselves.

The high school students, teachers, fraternity members and Soldiers who volunteer as tutors serve as "mentors and motivators," he said. They use mantras, such as "I can be anything I want to be if I put my mind to it," to encourage students.

"We're like cheerleaders," Jackson said. "We motivate the way the Army does. You have to be enthusiastic about what you do if you want to be a success. I don't care if you're digging ditches, you've got to be excited about it."

Jackson still gets excited about what he does, though he oversees much of it from home. At 76, the once a strapping 6 foot, 2 inch, 270 pounder is now confined to a wheelchair. The inoperable, incurable cancer the doctors found last month has left him feeble and tired and more than 100 pounds lighter.

"They said I don't have very long to live, but I'm still going," he said. "I'm doing pretty good."

Jackson's last major public appearance was the annual Pre-Memorial Day Ceremony May 21 at the Vietnam Memorial Wall in Columbus, a wall Jackson helped build and a ceremony he launched about five years ago. His purpose was two-fold. Vietnam vets hold a special place in his heart, he said, and an early ceremony draws a more diverse crowd.

"I like diversity. I believe in diversity," he said. "There's not a more diverse place than South Columbus. We've got blacks, whites, Koreans, Filipinos, Japanese — you name it.

We're rich. By having a Pre-Memorial Day ceremony, we bring together all these people who'd go in different directions if we held it on Memorial Day."

It's the diversity that makes the ceremony a success, Jackson said. It's diversity that makes the tutorial program and the clean-up drive successful. And only diversity and unity will keep Southeast Columbus from becoming "Mr. Hyde" after he's gone.

"I've been trying for years to get someone interested," Jackson said.

President Clinton was interested. He invited Jackson to the White House to talk about the success of his program.

Washington politicians were interested. They presented Jackson with the Jefferson Award for Public Service at a state dinner in his honor.

Brig. Gen. Benjamin Freakley was interested. He presented Jackson the Military Order of Saint Maurice.

But it's a different kind of interest Jackson's looking for now. A pat on the back is all well and good, he said, but if someone doesn't take charge of the Combined Communities ... well, he doesn't like to think about that possibility.

"No, no, no. I just don't want to see these programs go away," Jackson said.

"We need someone, someone dedicated to the cause, someone interested in kids and Soldiers and keeping this community clean. We need someone to step up."

Daughters: Investment worthwhile especially basic trainees, will be able to take their parents and say, "see we're a part of the Infantry family."

"It's hard to imagine we'll get a gift that is any more appreciated than theirs," said Foundation executive vice president Greg Camp. "They have already given in a very real sense with their personal sacrifices."

For many decades, Infantrymen who served at Fort Benning met and married women of Columbus, Lasseter said. And as daughters of Army Soldiers married other Soldiers and changed their names, these women wanted to establish a way to locate each other and rekindle old friendships. For that reason, DUSA was founded in Fort Benning in 1928.

Back in the late 20s early 30s, the women were asked to volunteer for various causes, most notably, the Red Cross, Lasseter said.

The DUSA opened up the first post day care center, Tot Town, to provide care for the children of the wives who volunteered. It was privately run until 12 years ago when they turned it over to the military.

Throughout the years, the DUSA invested the money it had collected from running the center and various fund-raising events.

By 2003 they had saved $250,000 and decided they wanted to spend it in a way that would benefit all military families.

"They (DUSA) want to make a difference and show they care about our Soldiers who have fought for 250 years," White said. "It is significant when an organization contributes this much. We hope that other organizations follow suit."

The room, dedicated to Infantrymen and their families, is just one facet of the estimated $75 million museum project. To date, the foundation has raised about $40 million and it hopes to open its doors in 2007.

Heat leads to car troubles

Summer car tips keeps autos running

Leni Kass
Bacons Information, Inc.

Heat and friction are the main reasons wear occurs in an automobile.

These forces can significantly reduce fuel economy. As the weather becomes hot and muggy this summer, increased stress occurs on all critical moving parts for the millions of vehicles that will venture out on the roads this vacation season.

Safe travel, avoiding breakdowns and maximizing fuel economy is the recommendation this summer from "The Car Doctor," Joel Burrows, veteran trainer at Precision Tune Auto Care. Preventative maintenance is the key for a good travel experience.

Vehicles run on a fine film of fluids and properly servicing these fluids and their respective filters can have a significant effect on vehicle reliability and fuel economy.

Rubber components are prone to wear and tear through the life of the vehicle. The wear is often not visible to even the most experienced service professional, especially when it comes to tires and hoses.

Now that most car owners use self-service stations, it's up to owners to become more knowledgeable about car care by performing inspections of fluids, belts, hoses and tires.

• Fluids: Checking the oil should be done after the vehicle has been turned off for at least three minutes and is on a level surface.

With engine oil pan designs, this is the only accurate way to get a correct oil level reading. Remove, then wipe clean the oil dipstick, reinsert it, and then take it out again to check the level of the oil.

Most dipsticks have "add" printed at a marked point. Anything below may indicate the need to add oil.

Don't have a dipstick? Don't worry.

Certain vehicle designs do not have dipsticks. These vehicles will have oil-monitoring systems that alert the driver when the vehicle is low on oil.

Consulting the vehicle's owner's manual can be very useful in determining not only how to check the oil in the vehicle, but the correct amount and type of oil to add as well.

For better performance and a longer lasting engine, the oil should be totally changed every 3,000 to 5,000 miles, depending on climate and driving conditions.

How do you tell if the oil is dirty?

"Even experts have a difficult time with this question," Burrows said. "Depending on how frequently the oil has been changed will determine how quickly the oil 'appears' to be 'dark' on the dipstick instead of a clear gold color."

Burrows recommends keeping a careful record of how many miles or how long between oil changes, to help stick to a strict maintenance schedule. All fluids should be serviced regularly. Fluids are the heart beat of your vehicle's life support system.

• Filters: The oil filter should also be changed every time you change the oil. The oil filter removes micro fine particles from the oil that can act as an abrasive to critical moving engine parts. If the filter is not changed regularly and becomes restricted, then something called a bypass valve in the filter will allow dirty oil to circulate through the engine. Vehicles contain numerous filters and the best preventative maintenance is to service them regularly.

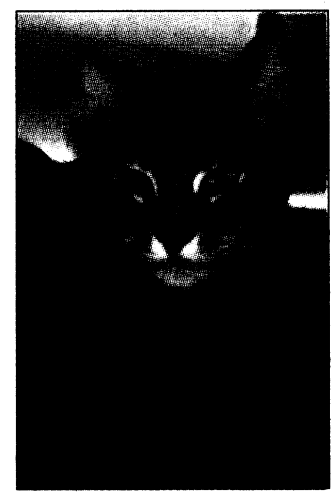
• Belts and hoses: To inspect belts and hoses, simply look at them. If the belts appear to be cracked or worn, it's time to have new ones installed.

Through inspection, drivers can eliminate costly repairs resulting from their failure on the highway. Hoses need replacing when they get soft or start to bulge. Hoses can be tricky in that they wear from the inside, so limiting your inspection to just a look can over-look a potential wear issue.

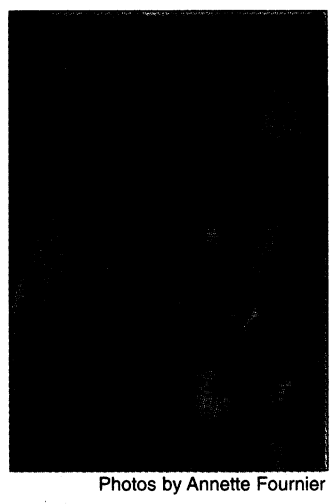
An ASE certified technician can perform a cooling system pressure test, which allows the greatest opportunity to determine if a weakness exists in rubber cooling system components.

• Tires: Make sure tires are properly inflated. Using a tire air pressure gauge, check your tires at home or at your nearest gas station to make sure your tires are not warmed up.

Tires should be inflated when cold and the proper inflation level can be found in the vehicle's owner's manual or on the driver's side door jamb, gas cap cover, or trunk deck lid. Tires wear from the inside out and while the tread and appearance of the tires may look acceptable, internal wear may be an issue.



The most common reason for wear is improper tire inflation. If your tires are more than five years old, recent studies suggest having them replaced, regardless of their condition. Also, proper tire inflation is critical for fuel economy.



Consumers who are car care aware can get a lot better efficiency from their engines and emit fewer pollutants this summer.

Having carbon deposits removed from the vehicle's air intake system and fuel injectors is one of the best ways to increase fuel economy in today's sophisticated computer controlled vehicles. Talk to your professional service provider about this valuable and fuel saving service.

God speaks to our lives during separations

Chaplain (Maj.) Terry Simmons
Basic Combat Training Brigade

"For I know the plans I have for you," declares the Lord. "Plans to prosper you and not to harm you, plans to give you hope and a future." (Jeremiah 20:11)

The God of Israel was speaking to the people of Israel. Israel was in exile far away from their home.

They were away from the ones, the things and the familiar they held important and dear.

As we in the military attend our training here or even deploy and separate from our loved ones, we feel the same emotional turmoil and concerns.

No one likes separations, but we understand the responsibilities we choose in being in the military and defending our country and home.

Yet in our separations or hard times apart, God is speaking to our lives and situations today.

First God says, "I know." God knows all. Israel felt alone and abandoned. They said the enemy even made fun of them — asked them to sing their glad songs while in captivity.

Israel responded by saying they will

REFLECTIONS

Simmons

hang their musical instruments on trees and not play them or sing their favorite songs. That's when God speaks out and says, "I know how you feel."

God made us and knows us better than we know ourselves. He also knows the pain and promised to stand with us in the midst of it. God knows the pain will not last forever.

Israel could not understand the "why" of things. Maybe you never have wondered why, but I have. But knowing the why has never lessened the pain.

I have sat with many couples whose partner or child wanted to know why. But those questions, or the answers, never gave any help.

Knowing the why has never given satisfaction or peace in pain.

God knows where we are and what situations we walk in. We are never alone because God knows and he is there.

Second is that God has a plan. That plan is not one of harm.

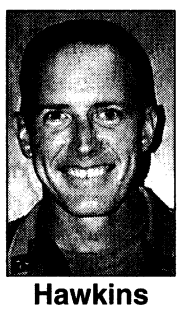
God says his plan is to prosper, to give hope and a future. Many felt God deserted them, but when they least expected it, God expressed his desire to bless them.

To be blessed in a far away place? To be blessed when we feel alone and deserted? The answer is yes.

As we are apart, remember that God wishes to bless. And not only to be blessed, but to have a future.

Future means this will all pass and we will go on. We will be triumphant in this life and we will be reunited with loved ones after those separations.

Call upon him and see if the Lord is true.



Real, deep, abiding fulfillment comes from many sources

Chaplain (Maj.) Jeffrey D. Hawkins
Chaplain Family Life Center

"People, places and things are the gifts of life, not the source of life."

I read this quote from relationship expert Gary Smalley this week, and it made me think of that classic country song, Looking For Love In All The Wrong Places. Have you lived enough of life to figure out that fulfillment — real, deep, abiding fulfillment doesn't come from the momentary buzz or tingle that people, places or things can give?

It comes from somewhere and something else, doesn't it? Smalley says, "If our lives were like a cup, each one of us would love to fill it with wisdom, love, joy and peace. We'd like to have our lives overflow with positive emotions and genuine fulfillment in life. At a very early age, we begin to look for what we think can fill up our cups with these positive qualities.

Hawkins

Unfortunately, most of us look to one of three sources, or all three, for the fullness of life we really want. Yet, like a mirage, these sources shimmer with fulfillment, but only bring dust to our souls."

Source No. 1 — Looking to people to fill our cups. The first place many of us tend to look is toward people. We think, "If I am to really have my needs met and be happy, I must have another person in my life." However, those who look for people will ultimately find that they cannot fill our cup.

Friends can be a tremendous source of help and encouragement at times, but even they can disappoint us over the long haul. We can look to friends as the source of positive emotions, but at times they, too, can punch holes in our emotional lives.

Tragically, some people will have an affair to try to "fill their cup." The sweet taste of stolen waters may seem to fill up one's life, but it's actually like drinking ice-cold saltwater. The burning aftertaste of sin can burn huge holes in our cups and leave us emptier and more miserable than we imagined.

Source No. 2 — Looking to places for fulfillment. "We need a home! That's it, we need a place with a beautiful view and trees that are the envy of the neighborhood. If only we had the right place to live in, our cup would be full." How many of us have echoed these words? Or perhaps, a vacation or a new office with a window — these certainly would fill our cup to the brim.

Then we buy that special home or go to that remote island, live in it for a short while, and suddenly our life begins to go wrong. Why? Because, no matter how pretty or fulfilling places look, they don't fit inside our personal cups.

Source No. 3 — Looking to things for fulfillment. How about more money so we can buy more things? Many of us feel that, if we just had more money, we'd be happier in life. But study after study of people who strike it rich shows this isn't the case.

I've met people throughout the country who have little money and are miserable. And I've also met those with lots of money who are miserable. I've known people who have mountain cabins and third cars who feel fulfilled. And some people I know barely have bus fare, and they also feel fulfilled.

The reality? We can never pour enough people, places or things into our personal cups to keep our lives filled and overflowing with the contentment we want so much.

So what do we do? We seek the first source of life. Matthew 6:33 says, "But seek first his kingdom and his righteousness, and all these things will be given to you as well."

In my life, when God is in first place, he promises to meet all my needs. I try to love God with all my heart. In other words, he's the highest priority in my life.

When I focus on Jesus Christ as the sole source of my life, an amazing thing happens. Because he loves me and actually possesses the wisdom, love, peace and joy I've always wanted, he alone can overflow my cup.

That's exactly what he promised to do for his children: "This love ... surpasses knowledge — that you may be filled to the measure of all the fullness of God" (Ephesians 3:19).

Can you be any more filled than full? Absolutely not!

Protestant Sunday School will not meet in July. It will begin at 9 a.m. Aug. 7 at Custer Terrace Chapel.

Gladiator shields Rome's next ruler in ABC's lavish Empire

John Crook

The ultimate fate of the Roman republic sits on the broad shoulders of a resourceful gladiator in Empire, a lavish six-hour limited series bowing with a two-hour premiere on ABC Tuesday.

The epic adventure, which continues on the next four successive Tuesdays and bucks the "all reality" slate of original network programming airing elsewhere, stars an international cast headed by Jonathan Cake (The American Embassy) and newcomer Santiago Cabrera.

Cake, who plays Tyrannus, the fictional gladiator at the heart of the story, said that he was wary about committing to a "toga project" that could easily go terribly wrong.

"I felt like the reason no one did a 'sword and sandal' movie for so long before Ridley Scott did Gladiator was because it's an incredibly tough genre to do," the 36-year-old English actor said.

"The capering ghosts of Monty Python hang around it, and for good reason: It's a genre that's easy to mess up, easy to parody.

"Then I read the script, and I thought that the person who wrote it, Thomas Wheeler, had an incredibly strong grasp of Shakespeare, actually, and how Shakespeare wrote historical dramas, which was to worry less about the politics of it and to focus on these extraordinary characters.

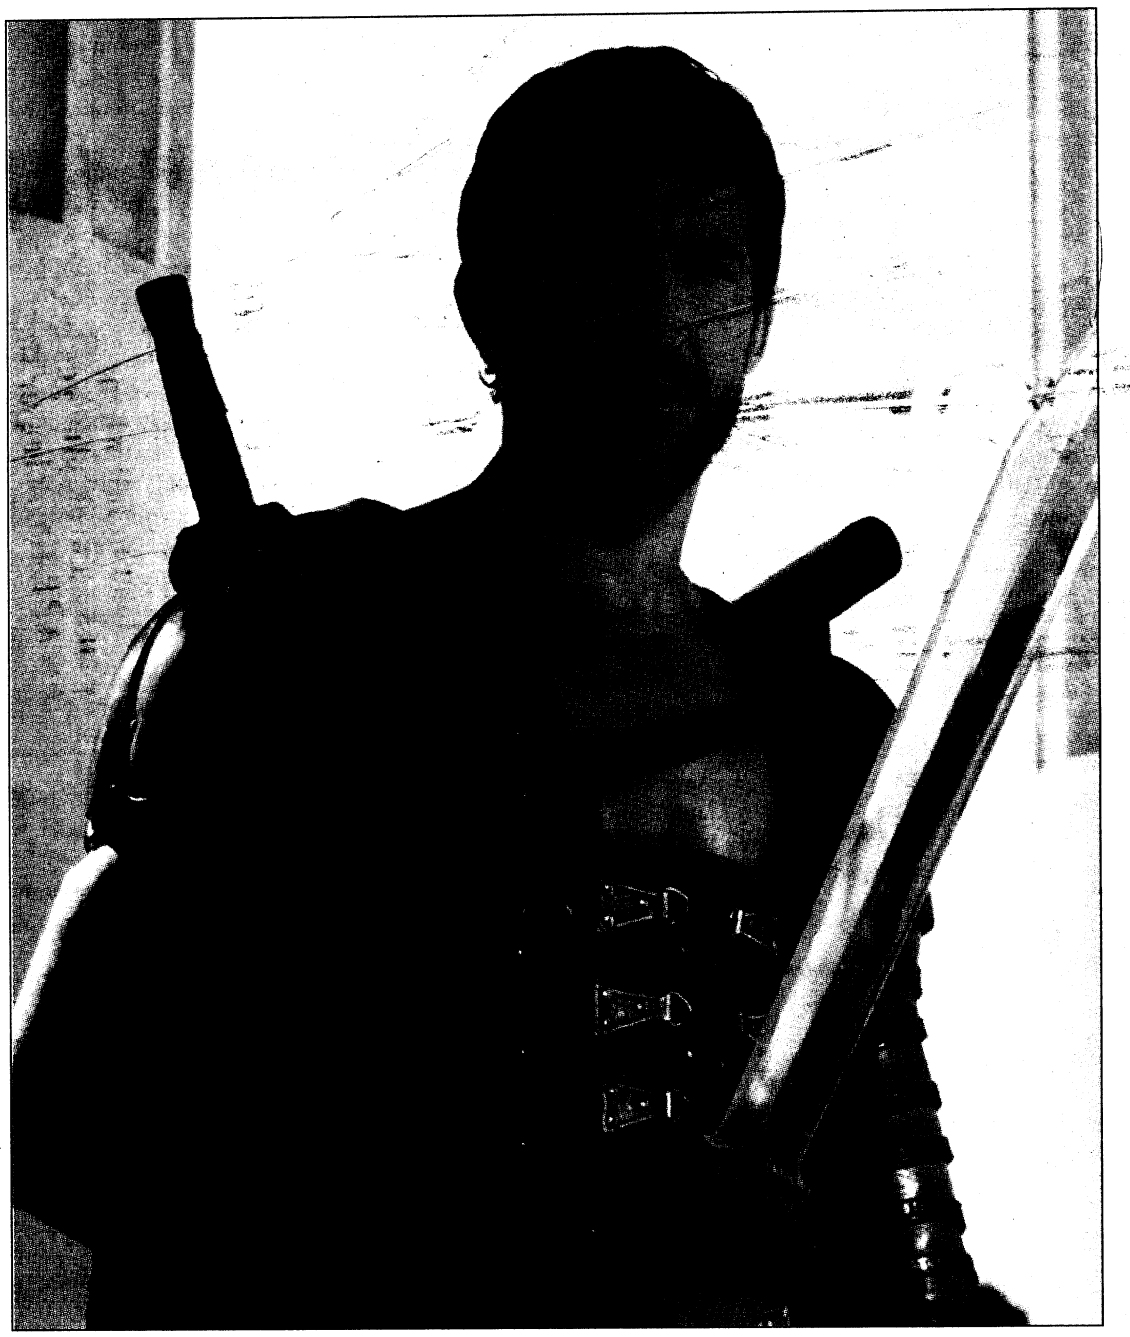
"I think Thomas is very accurate about the politics, actually, but in the finished thing he manages to give you a sense of these world-changing events that are happening because of the whims ... of these extraordinary people.

"He really captures something about ancient Rome, a mixture of the history and texture along with, of course, this absolutely helter-skelter adventure."

The story opens in 44 B.C., as Julius Caesar (Colm Feore) returns from Spain to find his Roman republic neglected by a corrupt Senate drunk on its own power.

Admiring the arena skills of Tyrannus, Caesar offers the celebrated gladiator his freedom in return for his service and friendship.

Tyrannus is unable, however, to prevent the fatal attack on Caesar by Brutus (James Frain), Cassius (Michael Maloney) and their co-conspirators, arriving only in time for the dying Caesar to make him swear to protect his successor, Octavius (Cabrera), Caesar's 18-year-old nephew.



The two men are forced into exile, where Tyrannus has his hands full trying to protect the handsome but headstrong Octavius from the multitude of enemies who surround them on every side.

"I think his uncle saw a high intelligence in Octavius more than anything else," Cabrera, 27, said of his often brash and naive character.

"At the end of the day he was the ultimate politician, I think. Caesar saw in Octavius a mix of intelligence and sensitivity he thought the people would recognize.

"I could easily see them sitting at a table at Octavius' house, at lunchtime, and Caesar giving his very intimate thoughts about what is going on in Rome and this boy just taking it all in from a very young age.

"It is his destiny, so when the time comes his hidden strengths and talents come out. He still has to grow, however, from being a brattish innocent into a passionate and nearly ruthless leader and strategist."

Jonathan Cake stars as Tyrannus, a celebrated gladiator who risks everything to protect the young heir of the murdered Julius Caesar, in Empire, a six-hour limited series premiering Tuesday on ABC.

Empire was filmed on location in south central Italy, a spare-no-expense decision both actors say they found invaluable.

"The locations manager was keen to impress on us that many of the places we shot had never been seen on film before," Cake said.

"It just makes everyone's jobs easier when you are standing there actually touching ancient stones instead of a set that wobbles. That goes very deeply into what a scene is about, because you feel the weight of history. It's like putting on the perfect costume or finding just the right sword.

"If you have the right backdrop, if it's real, it dignifies everything you do. Just the fact that this was the weather, the smells, the atmosphere, and then being in the actual places gave such a reality to the thing," Cabrera said.

"You'd put these costumes on, this armor, and I would just feel like going for a run. You feel so athletic, as opposed to them restricting you.

"Quite the contrary. I'd get on a horse wearing that armor and feel as if I had been riding a horse all my life. It was very empowering."

Bewitched — Hot-shot actor Jack Wyatt (Will Ferrell), set to star as Darrin in a film version of the '60s TV series Bewitched, finds his ideal Samantha in unknown actress Isabel (Nicole Kidman), who just happens to be a witch in real life.

Bewitched is rated PG-13 for language, including sex and drug references and partial nudity.

Herbie: Fully Loaded — Lindsay Lohan stars as Maggie Peyton, the new owner of Number 53 — the free-wheelin' Volkswagen bug with a mind of its own — and puts the car through its paces on the road to becoming a NASCAR competitor.

Herbie's got some new tricks under his hood.

Also starring Matt Dillon, Michael Keaton and Justin Long.

Herbie: Fully Loaded is rated G for general audiences.

George A. Romero's Land of the Dead — In a modern-day world where the walking dead roam an uninhabited wasteland, the living try to lead "normal" lives behind the walls of a fortified city.

A new society has been built by a handful of enterprising, ruthless opportunists, who live in the towers of a skyscraper, high above the hard-scrabble existence on the streets below.

Outside the city walls, an army of the dead is evolving. Inside, anarchy is on the rise.

Starring Simon Baker, Asia Argento and Dennis Hopper.

George A. Romero's Land of the Dead is rated R for pervasive strong violence and gore, language, sexuality and drug use.

Batman Begins — In the wake of his parents' murders, disillusioned industrial heir Bruce Wayne (Christian Bale) travels the world seeking the means to fight injustice and turn fear against those who prey on the fearful.

He returns to Gotham and unveils his alter ego — Batman, a masked crusader who uses his strength, intellect and an array of high-tech deceptions to fight the sinister forces that threaten the city.

Starring Ken Watanbe, Morgan Freeman and Michael Caine.

Batman Begins is rated PG-13 for intense action violence, disturbing images and thematic elements.

The Perfect Man — Teenager Holly Hamilton (Hilary Duff) is tired of moving every time her single mom Jean (Heather Locklear) has another personal meltdown involving yet another second-rate guy.

To distract her mother from her latest bad choice, Holly conceives the perfect plan for the perfect man — an imaginary secret admirer who will romance Jean and boost her shaky self-esteem.

The Perfect Man is rated PG for mildly suggestive content.

The Honeymooners — New York City bus driver Ralph Kramden and his feisty wife Alice struggle to make ends meet.

Despite Ralph's many get-rich-quick schemes and motivational speaker tape series, they've managed to save some money and, along with their best friends Ed and Trixie Norton, they seem to have almost enough money for a down payment on a Brooklyn duplex.

Starring Cedric the Entertainer, Mike Epps, Regina Hall and Gabrielle Union.

The Honeymooners is rated PG-13 for innuendo and rude humor.

Mr. & Mrs. Smith — A married couple (Brad Pitt and Angelina Jolie) are getting bored with their quiet domestic life.

What they don't know, however, is that they're both assassins, secretly hopping the world and killing for hire.

But their separate lives are about to collide when each finds out their next target is their own spouse.

Mr. & Mrs. Smith is rated PG-13 for sequences of violence, intense action, sexual content and strong language.

The Adventures of Shark Boy & Lava Girl — A 10-year-old outcast is shunned by classmates and forced to spend summer vacation alone.

With his two imaginary friends (Shark Boy and Lava Girl) he goes on a mission to prove dreams can become reality.

Starring Taylor Lautner, Taylor Dooley, Cayden Boyd and George Lopez.

The Adventures of Shark Boy and Lava Girl is rated PG for mild action and rude humor.

High Tension — Two worlds collide disastrously, when a rusted delivery van barrels through cornfields while Alex has brought her friend Marie to spend the weekend at her parent's farmhouse.

Behind the van's wheel, the driver looks at ripped photos of young women.

At the same time, the girls get ready for bed, dishing girly gossip.

At the end of the road lies an isolated house, caught in the van's headlights.

As the girls close their eyes, an intruder is about to turn their innocent dreams into a relentless and bloody nightmare.

Starring Cecile de France, Philippe Nahon, Frank Khalfoun and Maiwenn Le Besco.

High Tension is rated R for graphic bloody killings, terror, sexual content and language.

The Sisterhood of the Traveling Pants — The movie is based on Ann Brashares' best-selling novel about a special summer in the lives of four lifelong friends separated for the first time.

Starring Amber Tamblyn, Alexis Bledel, Blake Lively and America Ferrera.

The Sisterhood of the Traveling Pants is rated PG for thematic elements, some sensuality and language.

Cinderella Man — Set in New York during the Depression, this is story of James Braddock (Russell Crowe), who takes up boxing to make money to feed his family and ends up becoming quite famous in the process, eventually going up against champ Max Baer.

Cinderella Man is rated PG-13 for intense boxing violence and language.

SPORTS

Best of the Best. Congratulations to Spc. Mike Osier, 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment, for placing fifth overall in the Armed Forces National Triathlon last weekend. He has now qualified for the Conseil International du Sport Militaire, the Olympics for the military, this weekend in Ventura, Calif.

Bench notes

Erin Nash

- NBA finals

Yes, we are a weekly newspaper, so by the time this comes out there will be a winner — unfortunately, as of press time, game seven is looming for Detroit and San Antonio.

- Kiwi rules at Open

New Zealander Michael Campbell hung on to outlast Tiger Woods and the rest of the field at the 105th U.S. Open at Pinehurst.

The course proved tough — Campbell finished even, Tiger at two over.

- Biffle makes it five

Greg Biffle won the Batman Begins 400 June 19, despite Tony Stewart having led the most laps.

It's the third time this season Tony led the most laps but didn't finish first. Jimmie Johnson still leads in points.

- NASCAR race

NASCAR drivers will have their first road race Sunday at Infineon Raceway in Coverage starts at 2:30 p.m. on FOX.

Jeff Gordon won last year, but after the last few weeks I'd be surprised if he finished in the top 10.

- College World Series

As of press time, four teams are vying for the final two berths in the College World Series.

Florida, Arizona State, Texas and Baylor are those teams — check ESPN to see who's playing and who'll win.

Interservice Pistol Championships

USAMU wins it all in competition

Paula J. Randall Pagán
USAMU Public Affairs Office

For the first time in more than two decades, a Soldier with the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit can claim the title of Interservice Pistol Champion.

Despite being down by 10 points after Day 3 June 15, Sgt. Keith A. Sanderson of the Army Marksmanship Unit came back to win the Interservice Pistol Championships Individual Grand Aggregate June 16 by nine points over Army Reserve Staff Sgt. James Henderson who took second place; Marine Gunnery Sgt. Brian Zins finished third, four points behind Henderson in the 46th annual Interservice Pistol Championships.

Sanderson

Henderson beat Sanderson by one point to win the Service Pistol Individual Championship June 16 and Staff Sgt. Adam E. Sokolowski of the USAMU took third place.

The USAMU Service Pistol Team won the Interservice Pistol Championships Team Grand Aggregate, beating the second-place team of the Marine Corps by 78 points; the Army Reserve Team took third place, nine points behind the Marines. The USAMU Team was coached by Sgt. Brian W. Rost and team members were Sgt. 1st Class Roger C. Jacobson , Sanderson, Sokolowski and Spc. Sean P. Watson.

The USAMU Team, coached by Rost, also won the Service Pistol Team Championship by 14 points over the Reserve Team, which took second place. The USAMU Team coached by Master Sgt. Steven M. Howa took third place; shooters were Sgt. 1st Class Eric G. Daniels, Staff Sgt. Robert M. Mango, Sgt. Robert S. Park II, Spc. Timothy M. Barber and Pvt. 2 Christopher J. Jones.

Rost's team took a commanding lead in the overall team competition June 15. The Army won the .45-Caliber Team Championship by 12 points over the

Wet game ideal for Charlie Rock

Hit-N-Run honors fallen Soldier

Tawny Archibald Campbell

Not everyone likes to play in the rain, but Charlie Rock seems to think a bit of the wet stuff is their four leaf clover.

Charlie Rock, from C Company, 2nd Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment, beat out Hit-N-Run, from 233rd HET, 14-4, in intramural softball, Tuesday at Gowdy Field.

Hit-N-Run was a bit under the weather throughout the game, having come from a memorial service for one of their friends and Soldiers, Sgt. Anthony Jones, who was killed in Iraq June 14.

They took to the plate first and managed to chalk up two runs in the first inning, but fell apart once they took to the field.

As Charlie Rock took their turn at bat, it started to rain. The downpour seemed to have positive affect on the team who sent 10 players across home plate.

By the end of first inning, Charlie Rock had a decisive 10-2 lead.

"We are used to playing in this kind of weather," Bernard Smith, of Charlie Rock said. "Two of our three games have been in the rain and we have won every one."

Luck for either team didn't hold out long — the second inning was scoreless. Two runs came in for Hit-N-Run during the third inning and Charlie Rock managed to bring three runners in.

The fourth inning was a repeat of the second — no score.

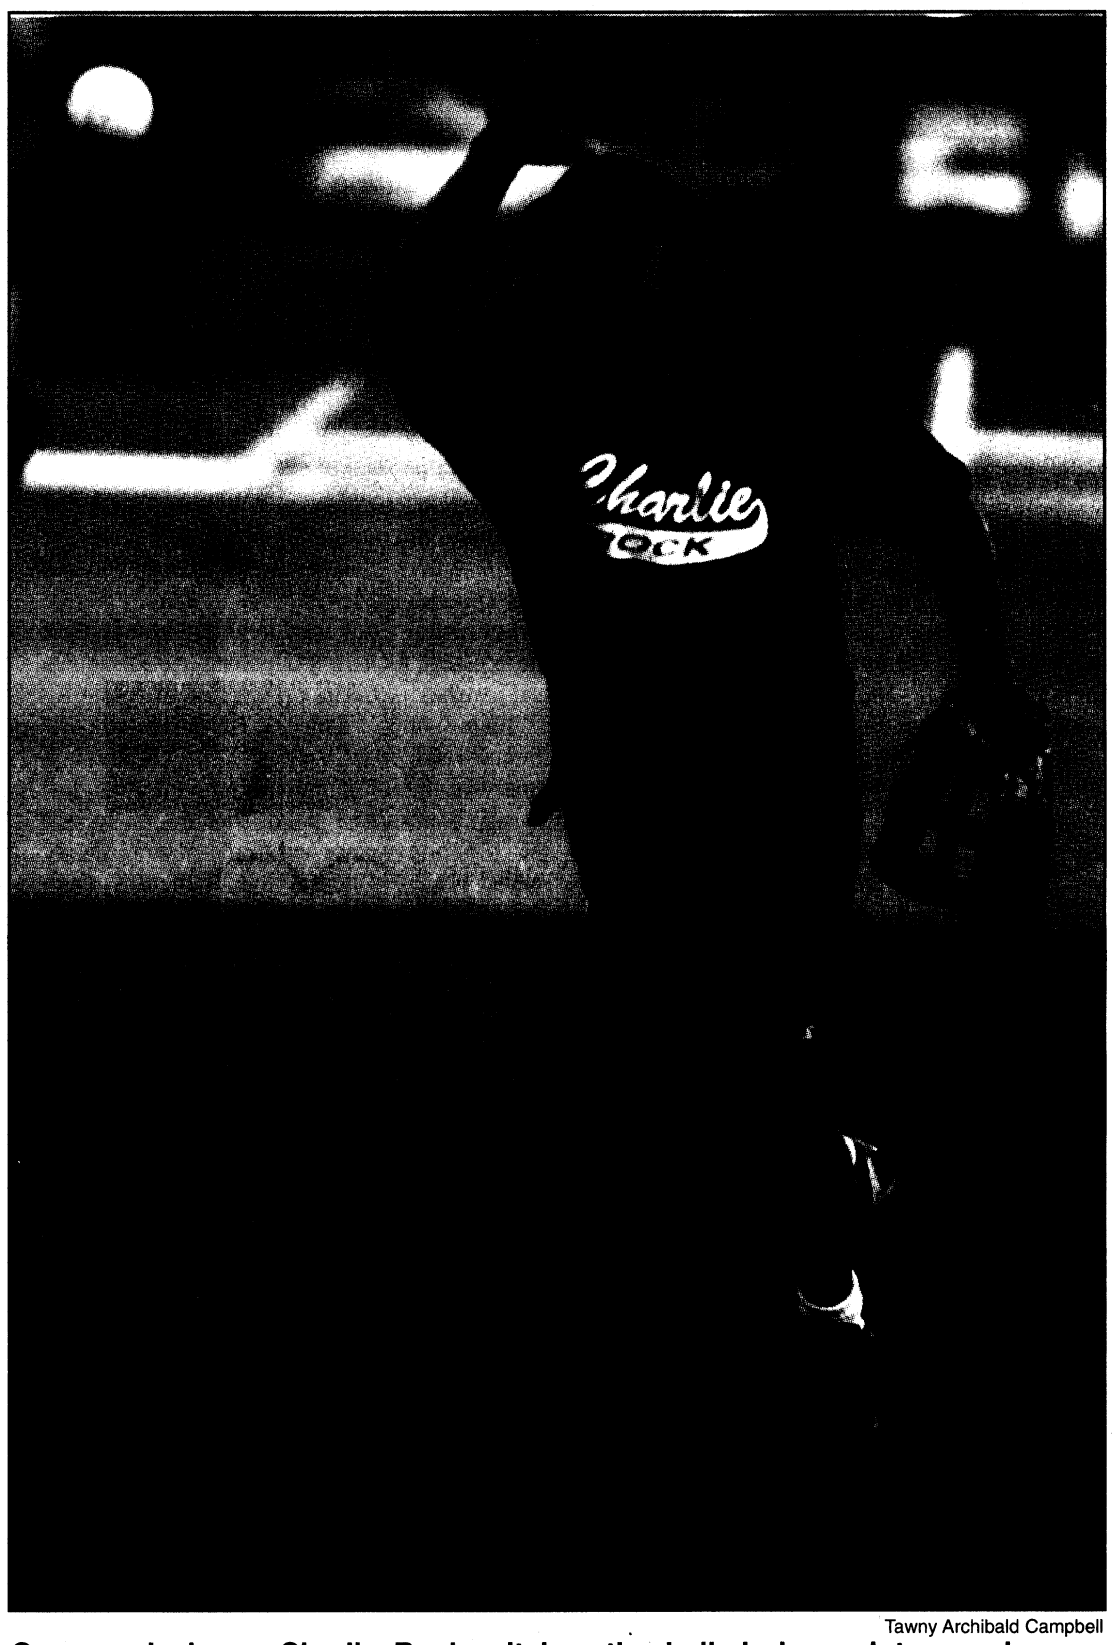
"We had a lot of errors and the rain didn't help any," said Dennis Graves, Hit-N-Run. "We also had the memorial for one of our Soldiers earlier in the day and we weren't mentally in the game — but we tried. We played the game tonight to keep our mind off of (the death)."

Hit-N-Run remained scoreless the rest of the game, but Charlie Rock managed to bring one more runner in to end the game, 14-4.

"I thought we played good as whole, especially since we never practice," Smith said.

Gregory Jackson, of Charlie Rock, said the play that made the fame for them was when Jose Torres caught a high fly out deep.

"It brought it all together for us and we knew we could win the game," Jackson said.



When asked why the team fell apart after the first inning Jackson said it was because the team got too excited.

"They were overjoyed and instead of waiting for a great hit, they would just swing," he said. "When you come out of a great inning the adrenaline hits and you forget about what got you there. You go flat."

Graves cut straight to the chase in describing how his team played.

"We had bad weather and we played bad," he said. "There was a lot on our minds, but we still came out and played as a team.

"We remembered a lost Soldier today, a lost family member. It makes you think, baseball is just for fun. Life is life. Don't take it too seriously."

14th CSH powers way to softball victory

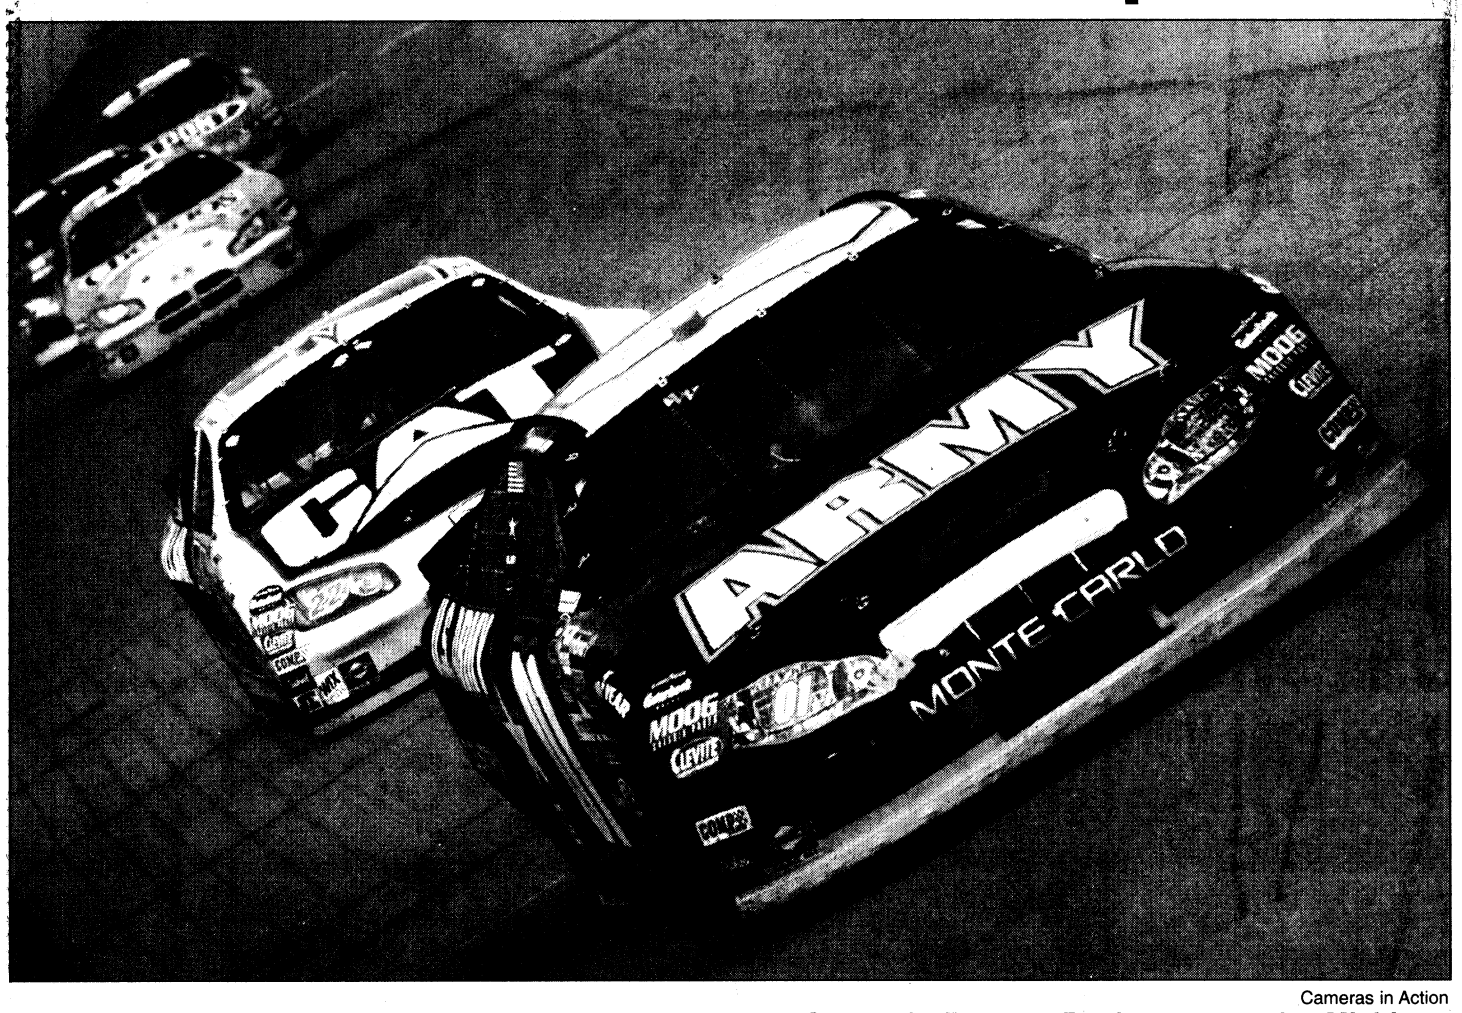
A double play, three home runs and tight pitching all added up to a 14-8 win for the 14th Combat Support Hospital over the 641st Area Support Group Wildcats, during softball Tuesday night at Gowdy Field.

The CSH jumped out to an early 5-2 lead during the first two innings, and showed their dominance on defense when the second baseman swiped up ground ball, tagged his plate and threw the ball off to first base for a double play that ended the inning.



During the third inning the CSH expanded their lead, bringing in three runs to the Wildcat's one.

"The game started off a little cool for us, but we warmed up in the middle and played solid ball," said Michael Snisky, of the Wildcats.

"The first runs we scored motivated us," said teammate Arthur Kelly, "and then Timothy

Nemechek cruises to 6th-place finish in Michigan

Cameras in Action

Joe Nemechek's 01 Army Chevrolet is out front during Sunday's Batman Begins 400 at the Michigan International Raceway. Nemechek finished the race in sixth-place.

David Ferroni
Army News Service

BROOKLYN, Mich. — Once Joe Nemechek moved into the top 10 on Lap 87 of 200 in Sunday's Nextel Cup race, he never looked back and went on to take the checkered flag with a solid sixth-place finish.

The U.S. Army Chevrolet driver ran a consistently strong race that saw him post his second top-10 result in as many weeks.

"This is how we're supposed to be performing," said Nemechek, who collected a season-high third-place finish last week at Pocono Raceway. "We really feel like we gave a few races away this year and now we're back on track. Our qualifying effort's back — everything's back. For some reason we've missed it for a few races, but not now."

Nemechek started Sunday's Batman Begins 400 in the 11th position but fell back in the opening stages of the race due to a loose-handling race car. An early change to the 01 Chevy set the machine in motion and Nemechek quickly drove toward the top 10.

Running third with just 30 laps remaining, a final yellow-flag was waved and Nemechek brought the 01 Chevy down pit road.

"We got two tires on that last stop with 25 laps to go and for some reason my car got really tight in and loose off the corners," Nemechek said. "I went to pass the (No.) 97 and he took the air off the spoiler and got me loose and three or four or five cars got by me. So then I had to work to pass all of them back before the end of the race.

"I think our U.S. Army Chevy was better than sixth-place," he said. "We got up there to the front and I thought we'd be a top-two or three finishing car today.

"We'll take it. It's a good run. We're back on track. I really thank the U.S. Army and MB2 Motorsports. I've got great cars and great engines — we're on a roll.

The Nextel Cup Series will compete at Infineon Raceway road course in Sonoma, Calif., Sunday.

second place Marine Corps Team. This win put the Army Team 22 points ahead of the Marine Corps Team. Barber's Team took third place in the .45-Caliber Team Match.

Sanderson won the .45-Caliber Individual Championship with a score of 891 points out of a possible 900. Zins finished two points behind in second place and Sokolowski finished third with an 884.

Zins took the 2700 Aggregate Individual Championship, followed by Sanderson in second place and Henderson in third. This championship was an aggregate of the .22-Caliber Match that was shot June 13, the Center Fire Match that was fired June 14 and the .45-Caliber Match that took place June 15.

Barber won the Excellence in Competition Match, followed by Marine Pfc. Ben R. Footer in second place and Jones in third.

In the second day of competition June 14, the Army Team won easily and shooters of the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit took six of the top eight spots in the individual matches.

The USAMU Team of Jacobson, Sokolowski, Sanderson and Watson won the Center Fire Team Championship; the Marine Corps Team took second place, 12 points behind the USAMU Team and the Army Reserve Team finished third, 21 points behind the Army.

Zins won the Center Fire Individual Championship with a score of 890 points out of a possible 900, followed by Henderson trailing three points behind in second place. In the following six spots were the following USAMU Soldiers: Sanderson, Jacobson and Mango at 881 points; Sokolowski at 878 points; Park with 872 points; and Daniels at 870.

June 13, Henderson won the .22-Caliber Individual Championship, with Zins just two points behind in second place and Sanderson and Marine Gunnery Sgt. Richard T. Gray three points behind Zins in third. Following close behind were Marine Reserve Sgt. Jason P. Hedrick, Army Reserve Staff Sgt. Jon Rosene, Sokolowski, Marine Sgt. Matthew H. Prykryl, Army Reserve Staff Sgt. Fritz Ficke and Jones.

The Marine Corps Team took the .22-Caliber Team Championship, just two points ahead of the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit Team. The All Guard Team, made up of Army and Air Force National Guard shooters, finished third.

Sanderson won the Combat Pistol Match June 17 and Sokolowski won the Warm-Up Match June 11. All the winners were presented their plaques and medals at the awards banquet conducted June 17 at the Columbus Iron Works Convention and Trade Center; Infantry Training Brigade Commander Col. Scott A Henry was the guest speaker and presented the top awards.

The U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit hosted the Interservice Pistol Championships June 13 to 17 at Phillips Ranges. Nearly 80 members of the military competed for the chance to win plaques and medals and for the bragging rights to call themselves the military's "Top Gun." Military personnel from the Army, Army Reserve, Army National Guard, Navy, Navy Reserve, Air Force, Air National Guard, Marines, Marine Corps Reserves and the Coast Guard competed in the matches.

"We are a nation at war. Our expertise with issued small arms must be comprehensive, both as individual shooters and as collective instructors," USAMU Commander Lt. Col. David J. Liwanag said.

"This year we take the first step in developing and improving the overall proficiency of all Department of Defense pistol shooters with an introduction to the joint-service Armed Forces Skill at Arms Meeting combat match formats using standard issue service pistols and ammunition."

For more information on the Interservice Pistol Championships, contact Michael J. Behnke, USAMU chief of competitions, at (706) 545-7841 or michael.behnke@usaac.army.mil. Rados hit an infield home run."

Not to be outdone, Christopher Hall, of the CSH, hit an infield home run at the top if the fourth inning, and Bobbie Reuter hit his first home run of the night.

The fifth inning was scoreless, and at the top of the sixth the CSH had a 9-4 lead.

Reuter started off the sixth inning with a bang when he sent the ball past the fence for his second homer of the night.

The final inning brought in three more runs for the CSH and four for the Wildcats.

Kelly said his team had a solid outfield and good pitching, only walking one player the entire game. But a late start in the season and having only pulled a team together two weeks ago hurts them on the field.

"We are still warming to the game and starting to learn how to play with each other," Snisky said. "If we can get out fielding together and get solid players the right positions, I think we can break five hundred by the end of the season."

Josh Epperson, coach of the CSH, said he was proud of how his team played. They hit well, fielded well and played solid defense with few errors.

"There was never a time when we knew we would win," Epperson said. "You never know you have it. Someone can always make a mistake and you can loose it in the last inning. We just have to play one pitch at a time."

Epperson said one of his team's weak points is always trying to hit a homerun instead of placing the ball.

"They try too hard," he said. "It's not that they can't hit the home runs but they need a lot more control."

The CSH came in second last year in intramural softball, and Epperson hopes his team will end up on the top of the bracket this year.

"We just need to keep with our solid defense and our offensive hitting," Epperson said.

Slow down when driving on and off post. Follow all speed limits. It's not only the smart thing to do, it's the law.

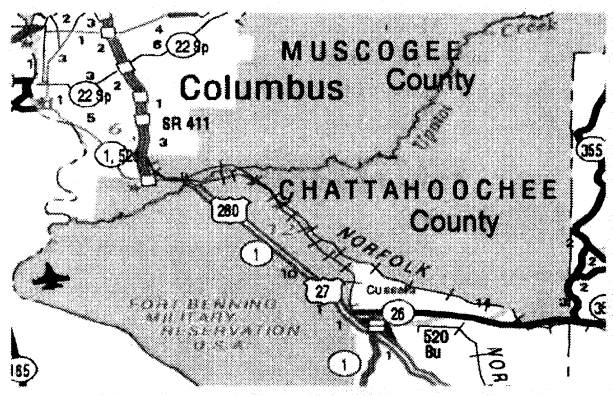
ENSURING THE SAFETY OF YOUR DRINKING WATER

We are pleased to present our first annual drinking water quality report for Fort Benning. As you will see in this report, the drinking water supplied under the operation of Columbus Water Works has met or exceeded all EPA and state drinking water standards.

The effect of contaminants on human health is constantly being studied by scientists. As more is learned, new standards will continue to be set for the treatment of drinking water. Columbus Water Works strives to use the best available technology in order to be able to meet future standards.



Billy G. Turner,
President of Columbus Water Works

Welcome Fort Benning

Beginning October 1, 2004, the Columbus Water Works began providing Fort Benning with water and wastewater services. Under the fifty-year contract, the Columbus Water Works will initially operate the existing Fort Benning facilities and will eventually tie Benning users onto the Columbus Water Works system.

SOURCE OF WATER

Fort Benning gets its water from a surface water source, the Upatoi Creek, a tributary stream to the Chattahoochee River. Water is withdrawn from Upatoi Creek under permit # CS2150002. This provides Fort Benning with a safe and dependable supply of water.

Source Water Assessment Plan (SWAP):

In the Spring of 2003, Fort Benning completed a Source Water Assessment for the surface water treatment plant. The source water for the surface water plant is Upatoi Creek and the Upatoi Creek watershed above the source water intake. The SWAP is required by the Safe Drinking Water Act and Georgia Drinking Water Rules. The purpose of the Plan is to identify potential sources of contamination throughout the watershed, and determine the risk (susceptibility) that the sources pose to the Fort Benning water supply intake. The kinds of facilities, from where substances could be released to the Creek and make their way to the water intake, include gas stations in surrounding counties, Fort Benning sanitary sewer lift stations and pipelines, commercial carriers on paved roads, Fort Benning motorpools, CSX and Norfolk Southern Railroads, a Kelley Hill drum disposal site, and a salvage operation in Chattahoochee County. A complete list of all 81 potential Pollution Sources (PPS), their substances of concern, and the assessment methods is in the SWAP. Based on the assessment, the overall susceptibility of the drinking water supply intake is rated High. For information contact James Stephens at 689-2646.

TREATMENT PROCESS

Alum is added to the water taken from the creek to cause the finely divided mud particles to clump together so that the mud and other particles will settle to the bottom of the settling tanks by gravity. The clear water is then filtered and disinfected with chlorine to make the water biologically safe. Phosphate is added to the water to make the water non-corrosive, and fluoride is added to help prevent dental cavities.

COLUMBUS WATER WORKS LABORATORY

Notice to immuno-compromised people

Some people may be more vulnerable to contaminants in drinking water than the general population. Immuno-compromised persons such as persons with cancer undergoing chemotherapy, persons who have undergone organ transplants, people with HIV/AIDS or other immune system disorders, some elderly, and infants can be particularly at risk from infections.These people should seek advice about drinking water from their health care providers. EPA/CDC guidelines on appropriate means to lessen the risk of infection by Cryptosporidium and other microbial contaminants are available from the Safe Drinking Water Hotline (1-800-426-4791).

A Message from the EPA

Drinking water, including bottled water, may reasonably be expected to contain at least small amounts of some contaminants. The presence of contaminants does not necessarily indicate that water poses a health risk.

The sources of drinking water (both tap and bottled water) include rivers, lakes, streams, ponds, reservoirs, springs, and wells. As water travels over the surface of the land or through the ground, it dissolves naturally occurring minerals and, in some cases, radioactive material, and can pick up substances resulting from the presence of animals or from human activity.

Substances that may be present in source water include:

- Microbial contaminants, such as viruses and bacteria which may come from human, agricultural or wildlife sources.

- Inorganic contaminants, such as salts and minerals, can be natural, from stormwater runoff, or from industrial or domestic wastewater discharges, oil and gas production, mining or farming.

- Pesticides and herbicides, may come from agricultural, stormwater runoff or residential use.

- Organic chemical contaminants, may come from industrial or domestic processes, stormwater runoff, and septic systems.

- Radioactive contaminants, can be naturally-occurring or the result of mining or other human activities.

To ensure that tap water is safe to drink, EPA prescribes regulations that limit the amount of certain contaminants in water provided by public water systems. U.S. Food and Drug Administration regulations established limits for contaminants in bottled water, which must provide the same protection for public health.

Important Drinking Water Definitions

Term	Definition
AL	Action Level (AL): The concentration of a contaminant which, if exceeded, triggers treatment or other requirements which a water system must follow.
MCL	Maximum Contaminant Level (MCL): The highest level of a contaminant that is allowed in drinking water. MCLs are set as close to the MCLGs as feasible using the best available treatment technology.
MCLG	Maximum Contaminant Level Goal (MCLG): The level of a contaminant in drinking water below which there is no known or expected risk to health. MCLGs allow for a margin of safety.
MRDL	Maximum Residual Disinfectant Level (MRDL): The highest level of a disinfectant allowed in drinking water. There is convincing evidence that addition of a disinfectant is necessary for control of microbial contaminants.
MRDLG	Maximum Residual Disinfectant Level Goal (MRDLG):The level of a drinking water disinfectant below which there is no known or expected risk to health. MRDLGs do not reflect the benefits of the use of disinfectants to control microbial contamination.
NA	Not Applicable
ND	Not Detected
NTU	Nephelometric turbidity units
ppm	Parts per million means 1 part per 1,000,000 (same as milligram per liter) and corresponds to 1 minute in 2 years, or 1 penny in 10 thousand dollars.
ppb	Parts per billion means 1 part per 1,000,000,000 (same as microgram per liter) and corresponds to 1 minute in 2,000 years or 1 penny in 10 million dollars.
TT	Treatment Technique (TT): A required process intended to reduce the level of a contaminant in drinking water.
<	less than
≥	greater than or equal to
(a)	Fluoride is added in treatment to bring the natural level to the EPA optimum of 1 part per million (see definition of ppm).
(b)	Turbidity is a measure of the cloudiness of water. We monitor turbidity because it is a good indicator of water quality and the effectiveness of our filtration system.
(c)	This level is based on a system-wide 4-quarter running average of several samples, as required by EPA testing protocol.
(d)	Water from the treatment plant does not contain lead or copper. However under EPA test protocol, water is tested at the tap. Tap tests show that where a customer may have lead-soldered copper pipes, the water is not corrosive. This means the amount of lead or copper absorbed by the water is limited to safe levels. Flushing the line before drinking will ensure your safety.

More information about contaminants and potential health effects can be obtained by calling the Environmental Protection Agency's (EPA's) Safe Drinking Water Hotline (1-800-426-4791).
