Harleys to rally for troops

Melissa House
Bayonet staff

Chattahoochee Harley-Davidson will sponsor a "Rally for the Troops" March 19. Cyclists and spectators will meet at 9 a.m. in the parking lot of the Columbus Civic Center, and at 10 a.m., the parade of motorcycles will travel along Victory Drive and onto Interstate 185 to Exit 12 and the Chattahoochee Harley Davidson dealership.

Event organizer Jennifer Miller said the rally was modeled after a similar event held by a dealership near Fort Lewis, Wash. Miller, an Army brat, helped with that rally long-distance because her father was stationed there at the time.

"After seeing how many people showed up and how much money we raised, and how I felt, as a family member, I thought we needed to do something like this for our Soldiers," Miller said.

Because she considers Columbus home, "our Soldiers" and her Soldiers are the ones deployed from Fort Benning.

The Washington event drew almost 1,600 when they thought they'd have 300. Miller is already anticipating a great attendance at this event.

One of the goals is to raise money for the Soldiers and families. In order to meet that goal, the March 19 rally will include vendors and raffles. Fundraising for the event began in December.

"We got everyone involved," she said.

The rally will be completely family-friendly, with face-painting and other activities for children. Texas Roadhouse is providing the food, and Haywire will entertain the crowd.

The 3rd Brigade commander, Col. Steve Salazar, will phone in from Iraq at 1 p.m. to speak to the crowd, and five Soldiers will get to talk with their families as well.

A group from Auburn University will film the event and transfer it to DVD to send to the Soldiers in Iraq.

The main raffle prize is a 2005 Black Cherry Road King motorcycle. The bike, a touring model with a windshield, saddlebags and a passenger seat, retails for $17,800. The bike is on display at the dealership.

Raffle tickets for the bike are $100, and only 400 will be sold. The winner does not need to be present to win.

Miller said proceeds from the bike raffle and T-shirt sales will support the 3rd Brigade, and money raised from other raffle items and sales will be divided among other deployed units on Fort Benning.

A Sledgehammer Soldier, Capt. Ted Campbell, designed the T-shirt.

To give her an idea what the attendance will be, Miller is taking registration from motorcyclists and offering discounted early T-shirt purchases.

Those buying T-shirts early will pay $12 instead of the regular $15 and will receive five free raffle tickets for chances to win items other than the motorcycle.

Shirts are available at the dealership, on-line or through the 3rd BCT Family Readiness Group liaison, Kim Akers.

Miller said she's had registrations come in from as far away as Texas and T-shirt purchases from across the country.

"The response from Soldiers' parents has been amazing," she said.

The bikes will rally, rain or shine.

"We don't want people to forget we have guys over there," Miller said, "and we hope to inspire people to do something."

Parking at the dealership is limited, so carpooling is recommended.

Video: Helps families feel closer

CEO's wife, who heard a story on National Public Radio about Soldiers who were missing much of their family's lives while deployed.

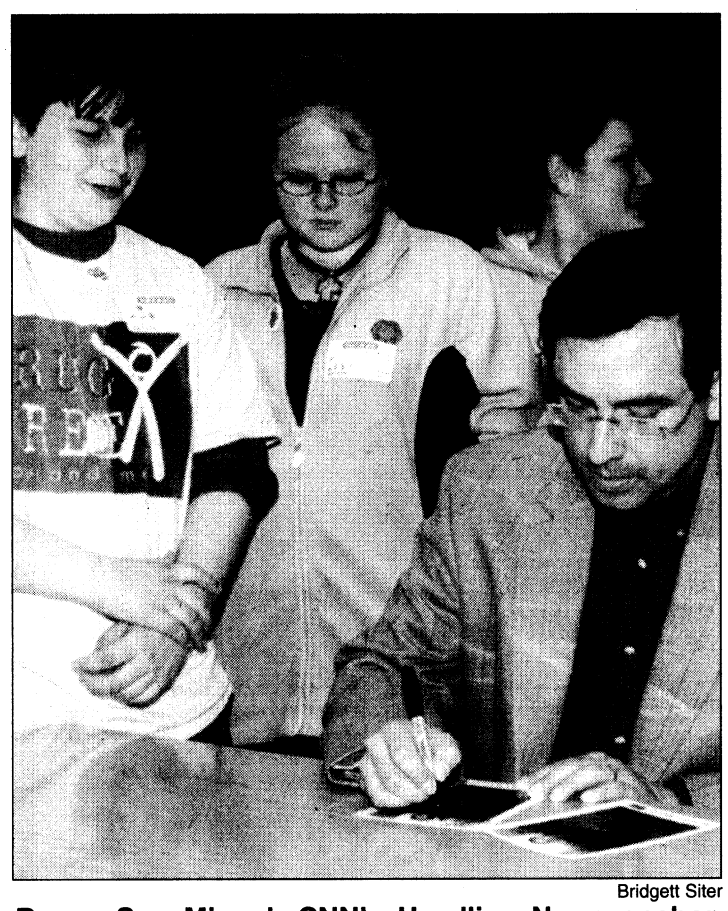
"She felt like it was just heartbreaking to hear about people being overseas and missing the birth of babies," Allen-Tate said. "What we do at HomeMovie.Com was a perfect fit to give a glimpse of home to troops overseas. When we heard about the idea, the entire company just went nuts, and we all started working round the clock to put this thing together."

The concept is simple. Family members go to www.homemovie.com and fill out a free sign-up form. Then they make a video and mail it to HomeMovie.Com. The first 30 minutes of the tape will be encoded, and an e-mail will be sent to both the family and the service member letting them know when the video has been put online and what the password is.

Tawny Archibald Campbell

Avery Pierce, 2, blows a kiss to her daddy while mom, Courtney, makes a video to send to HomeMovie.Com.

Videos will remain online for a year, so families can send the link to friends and family. Only one tape per military service person is permitted.



HomeMovie.Com also offers a program for military members to send videos in monthly for $10 per tape.

"You just imagine how hard it would be to be separated from you family for so long, and we feel like we have some small thing we can offer here," Allen-Tate said. "It's not a miracle, but it will let them come home for a little while, if only for thirty minutes. It's more than an e-mail or a photo or a phone call. It's almost like a hug from home."

Submissions must include the name of the service member, their military e-mail address and the name of the video tape. Mail videos to HomeMovie.Com, 31 West Chewuch Road, Winthrop, WA 98862.

Once videos are encoded, they will be returned at no charge.

For information or to sign up for the free service, visit www.homemovie.com or call (877) 576-8777.

information about the war.

"These are Soldiers' kids who watch the news hoping to catch a glimpse of their dads or moms in Iraq," Blanchard said.

"Yes, they know the value of around-the-clock news."

Jasmine Raw, the daughter of British liaison Sgt. Maj. Andrew Raw, dreams of becoming a news anchor one day.

Being part of the media team has helped her become comfortable speaking in front of a camera. And it's made her aware of the importance of news programs.

"Watching (the news) helped me understand the U.S. better." said Raw, who's lived in the United States nearly a year. "There's so much going on, especially the elections and the war and all. The news helped me understand a lot of it."

Monster shopping sale

Tawny Archibald Campbell

Sisters Jonkita and Brianna Mosby, 15 and 12, fill their shopping carts with discounted items during the March Madness Sale from 7 to 10 p.m. Saturday. More than 580 customers stormed the Fort Benning Commissary, and by the end of the sale, the Commissary sold 16,876 items and brought in $41,597.99. Gary Hensley, store director, said evening sales are scheduled about three times a year. It takes a staff of 16 on registers, three managers and numerous baggers to take care of all the customers, some who waited in line up to 45 minutes to check out.

Spend time with God

Chaplain (Capt.) Charles D. Wood
4th Ranger Training Brigade

What would I do if Bill Gates, Michael Jordan, or better yet, the president of the United States, told me he wanted to make an appointment with me for breakfast?

Just imagine if one of these men said, "I'm very concerned about your life, and I'd like to help you. I want to set you up for success. In fact, I'd like to set aside a little bit of time each day, just to see how things are going and give you a little coaching."

Would I take them up on their offer? Would I jump at a chance to spend time with a person who had the wisdom and resources to help me live a successful life? You bet I would!

There is someone who wants to meet with us daily who is more influential than these three men put together. Not the president, but the Creator of the universe. He desires to spend time with us each day. Amazing, isn't it? God wants to spend time with me.

For the past 25 years, I have taken God up on his offer. There are three principles that have been guides for my daily time with God.

Develop a relationship, Jesus did it, and my time with him helps others.

I read in Exodus 33:11, "Inside the Tent of Meeting, the Lord would speak to Moses face to face, as a man speaks to his friend."

The God of all creation, the master of the universe, had a friendship with Moses. I believe God wants that same kind of relationship with us.

Secondly, Jesus spent time with God. We see in the scriptures, "The next morning Jesus awoke long before daybreak and went out alone into the wilderness to pray." (Mark 1:35)

As I consider the priority the son of God places on time alone with the father, it challenges me. It places a sense of urgency in my own heart. His need to relate with the father stirs me to do the same. If the son found it important to spend time with the father, I will too.

Lastly, my time with him helps others. I cannot count the times, as a young enlisted Soldier or now as a chaplain, that God has used my personal time in the Bible and prayer for others.

The prophet Isaiah experienced this, "The sovereign Lord has given me his words of wisdom, so that I know what to say to all these weary ones. Morning by morning, he wakens me and opens my understanding to his will." (Isaiah 50:4)

So let me encourage you to spend a little time in the Scriptures and in prayer each day. Allow him to speak to you through his word. Pour out your concerns, desires and thankfulness as you seek him in prayer. You may find life is more peaceful, organized and hopeful as you meet with your God.

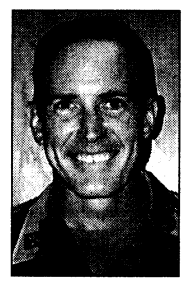
Financial landmines can stink up life

Chaplain (Maj.) Jeffrey Hawkins
Chaplain Family Life Center

REFLECTIONS

My backyard is full of landmines. No, I do not live in Cambodia. No, I do not have United Nations mine-clearing missions being executed on the far side of our pool. Nonetheless, I do have landmines at my house.



These are the kind of landmines that furry, four-legged creatures deviously plant at irregular intervals. Come to think of it, I guess these landmines could also be classified as a biological weapon. Dog owners, if you've ever stepped on one of these babies in the middle of a moonless night while reaching for the garden hose, you know what I mean.

Well, I'm not here to talk about those type of landmines this week, but I am here to remind everyone of some financial landmines, which, though they don't smell as bad, do far more damage in the long run.

If you want to make a mess of your finances, stop reading — go ahead, try to run the minefield without a strip map!

If, however, you'd prefer to gain your financial independence and stop your financial slavery, then look closely at the sector map below and take close note of where the financial landmines are and how to avoid them.

• Landmine No. 1 — Feeding the more monster. Simply put, this means putting out more than you have coming in. An old cliche says "if your output is greater than your intake, then your upkeep will eventually become your downfall." Experts call it a "consumptive lifestyle" — our parents called it "keeping up with the Joneses." Whatever you call it, I call it Landmine No. 1.

Hawkins

When you don't discipline yourself to enjoy the freedom that comes with having something left over (savings) each month, you are undoubtedly headed toward "stepping in it!"

Landmine No. 2 — Living without a budget. Would you ever put a baby on the 13th floor balcony without a railing? Absolutely not. You'd say, "That's irresponsible ... that's dangerous!"

You wouldn't feel that the railing is an unnecessary and burdensome restraint — that it's just there to take away that child's fun, would you?

It's the same with the "railing" of a budget. It's irresponsible and dangerous to live without one. The absence of a budget causes anxiety, while a good railing can actually allow you to have tons of fun within its well-placed boundaries.

Landmine No. 3 — Buying and selling cars. Probably the most emotional and least cost-effective decisions we make revolve around the shine and smell of our autos.

You want to know the best car to own? The one you already have. The longer a car is driven, the cheaper it becomes to operate.

Sorry, I like new cars too, but playing musical chairs with autos is a disastrous financial decision.

Landmine No. 4 — The debt trap. Think of debt as a slow, almost indetectable injection of cyanide into your jugular vein. It will kill you financially. It works on you both ways. It costs you additional money by having to pay out interest. And it costs you money that you could have been making by saving and earning interest. It's the double-edged sword of financial kamikaze.

If you're in it, get out of it. Army Community Service is a great place for help. If you haven't stepped on that one, don't.

Want more help accomplishing the above? Let us help you here at the Family Life Center in Soldiers' Plaza with some financial coaching or referrals to our money experts at ACS.

Call us at 545-1760 or come introduce yourself to me at 11 a.m. Sundays at the CrossRoads Contemporary Chapel on Kelley Hill.

The service is for everyone.

SPORTS

Lacrosse is considered to be America's first sport because North American Indians developed the sport to resolve conflicts, heal the sick and develop strong warriors. They played the game to prepare for war, with a playing field as long as 15 miles and as many as 1,000 players on each side.

Kiera Gallagher, 15, is the only Fort Benning student on the Columbus High School varsity cheerleading squad, which took second place in state competition.

Kiera Gallagher didn't set out to bust any stereotypes. She just wanted to cheer.

But as the only Fort Benning student on the Columbus High School varsity cheerleading squad, that took first place in regionals and second place at state, and the only cheerleader on the school's lacrosse team, the 15-year-old sophomore is hoping others will begin to see cheering, her sport of choice, for what it is — competitive, precise and grueling.

"I think people don't realize how tough it is or how much training goes into it, because we work so hard to make it look so easy. It's not," said Kiera, the daughter of Col. William and Lisa Gallagher. "I think most people do stereotype (cheering) until they actually do it. I'd probably do the same if I weren't in both sports and had something to compare it to."

Kiera began cheering in the seventh grade after playing soccer, basketball, cross country and skiing. She enjoyed them all and looks forward to trying new sports, but cheering "has stuck," she said. It's a sport that compliments every other, including lacrosse, her latest interest.

As the lone cheerleader on the team, Kiera's teammates looked askance at her early on, but no more. As for the occasional good-natured teasing:

"I don't let it bother me," she said. "I just show them."

And she does, her lacrosse coach said.

"She did have to go out there and prove herself ... to the other girls," said John Kocian, who coaches and teaches at Columbus. "Her cheering has definitely given her the stamina and the speed and the leadership skills she needs to be a good lacrosse player,"

Kiera said the stereotypical pom-pom squad at the Friday night football game is only one aspect of the sport. Far more time is spent preparing for competitions.

She spends most weeknights at the United gym in Columbus where she's a member of a traveling team. They're in Orlando this weekend for a national competition.

"As much as it's time consuming, you just get on board the train and make that your family time," said Lisa,

Turnovers got the best of A Company, 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment, causing them to fall to the 4th Ranger Training Battalion, 37-31, during intramural basketball Tuesday at Audie Murphy Fitness Center.

"It wasn't a very exciting game the first half," said Nick Rose, A Co. "The second half, we made some adjustments on offense and went to a man-to-man defense, that's when we got close."

A Co. was down 22-14 at the half and powered back to within two on a four to 10 run, spurred on by Rose and teammate Robert Tellier.

"The second half we started out real slow, and they went on a run," said Donald Berry, 4th RTB. "The biggest thing for us was they made a bunch of fouls. We tried to play smart and pass the

• Tiger out of the woods

Tiger Woods is back on top, ranked No. 1 in the world, with a one-shot win over Phil Mickelson at the Ford Championship at Doral. Lefty's been on a streak, but is Tiger finally back in his old groove?

• Illinois, Kentucky upset

Illinois is no longer the unbeaten (29-1). They lost, 65-64, against unranked Ohio State March 6 with a three-pointer by Ohio State reserve forward Matt Sylvester, with a mere 5.1 seconds left in the game. No. 3 ranked Kentucky was also upset in a 53-52 loss to Florida. March Madness will be a great show if the upsets continue.

• And the rivalry continues ...

ESPN.com senior writer has written a book, The Devil Wears Pinstripes, in which he explores the differences and the rivalry between Red Sox and Yankee fans. A definite read for me, a member of the Red Sox nation, although April 11 at Fenway Park is good enough satisfaction for endless years of frustration.

who shuttles Kiera and her younger siblings, Maggie and Joe, from one after-school activity to the next. "I certainly never pictured myself a cheerleading mom, but after seeing what it's done for Kiera and Maggie, how driven and disciplined they are, I can say its been a good thing."

Kiera likens competitive cheering to "team gymnastics," and successful cheerleaders must be proficient in gymnastics, tumbling and dance.

"It takes a lot of commitment," she said, ticking the prerequisites off on one hand, "a whole lot of strength in your legs and upper body, intense cardiovascular training, teamwork … It's a contact sport, so you have to expect bruises and injuries."

In spite of the stress injuries from cheering and the bloody knuckles from lacrosse, Kiera said sports keep her temper on an even keel.

"I actually think I do better when I'm in a bad mood, because I put all that energy into what I'm doing," she said. "I know I always feel better after a really intense practice or a tough game."

Kiera and her family will move to Germany this summer. She's thinking about trying her hand — or feet — at track.

ball more."

With 5:25 left in the game, A Co. was down by eight points when Tellier netted a three-pointer and a few minutes later capitalized on a fast break with to bring A Co. within three.

The final three points of the game were made off of a series of Berry's free throws, which clinched the game for the 4th RTB.

"The last five minutes of the game we put a press on them and made our free throws," Berry said. "That's how we won the game."

Rose said they were feeling pretty good about the game until things fell apart.

"The last minute of the game killed us," Rose said. "We had about eight turnovers and we didn't have good shots or passes. I think the guys just got nervous."

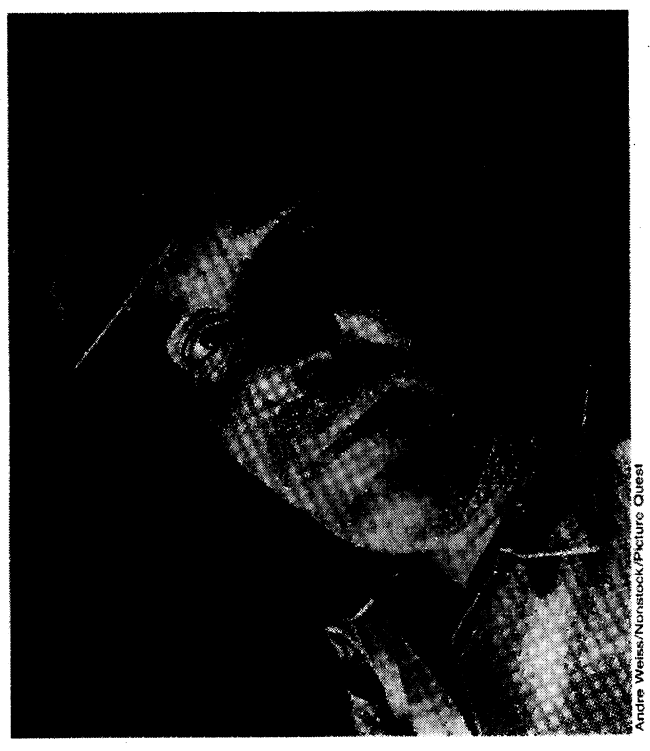
Your sunny smile deserves a work environment to match.

At the southernmost tip of the continental U.S., the greatest asset of Key West, FL is its balmy, sub-tropical weather. The sun shines almost every day on Lower Keys Medical Center, the city's sole health care provider and largest employer. We rely on the care and dedication of our staff to make LKMC a warm and comfortable place for every patient. We are seeking:

Critical Care Services Manager
Current BLS & ACLS certification required; BSN preferred.
Candidates must have previous ER & ICU experience with proven managerial skills.



Risk Management/ Performance Improvement Manager
State of Florida Risk Management license required.

ICU RNs • ER RNs • Med/Surg RNs
Medical Technologist
Microbiology Area Coordinator

We offer competitive salaries and great benefits including relocation allowance. Apply today to Lower Keys Medical Center, Attn: Human Resources, 5900 College Road, Key West, FL 33040. Phone: 305-294-5531, Ext. 4761, Fax: 305-296-2520, E-mail: mary.kelly@lkmc.hma-corp.com

WHEN YOU'RE WAITING FOR A TRANSPLANT, WHAT'S MORE IMPORTANT: YOUR MEDICAL STATUS OR YOUR FINANCIAL STATUS?

André Weiss/Nonstock/Picture Quest

Contrary to rumors you may have heard, the transplant waiting list is completely blind to wealth or celebrity status. Once you're on the list for a donor organ, what really counts is the severity of your illness, time spent waiting, blood type and other important medical information. Call 1-800-355-SHARE or visit www.shareyourlife.org for honest information on organ donation. And remember, if you want to be a donor, you must tell your family or it may not happen.

TALK TO YOUR FAMILY ABOUT DONATING LIFE.

Inside

The students and staff at Faith Middle School are debating a standardized dress code. That's like having a modified uniform policy. They want to know how parents and students feel about the possibility. Surveys will be sent home with grade cards next week. There due back April 1. Include your include e-mail address if you want the results.

What in the Sand Hill's going on here, Soldier? You WILL read A-10. Got that? You WILL read A-10, and you will learn more about the Infantry Training Brigade's mud bath early this week at the obstacle course. Have I made myself

Rick Atkinson, the author of In the Company of Soldiers and The Long Gray Line, spoke Tuesday at Marshall Auditorium during the Combat Leader Speaker Program, A-15.

The weekend forecast? Expect Thunder in the Valley. The annual air show draws thousands, so come early and expect to walk. You'll be glad you did. Thunder in the Valley is one of the region's most anticipated events. B-1

Poplar Place will be the popular place to be March 25 through 27. The Poplar Place Farm Horse Trials will draw nearly 400 horses and riders, including four Olympians. C-2

Reserve chute modified

Center pull designed for easier access

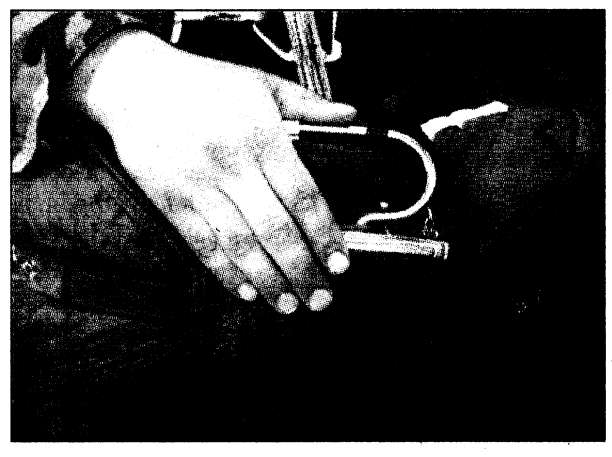
"You stand a better chance of being killed on I-185 between here and Exit 7 than jumping out of a military aircraft."



That's how Command Sgt. Maj. Donovan Watts assessed the evolution of the Army's parachute.

Watts, the 1st Battalion (Airborne), 507th Parachute Infantry Regiment's top NCO, detailed the latest modification to the reserve chute Tuesday as today's graduating class prepared to jump.

Honor graduate Pvt. Josh Inmon made his own assessment.

"I still get nervous about the jump, about remembering what to do and when to do it," he said. "But I'm not

Pvt. Joseph Aguirre eyes the wall of muddy water about to descend on him, learning an important lesson about being a Soldier — get used to getting dirty. His one station unit training unit, 1st Battalion, 50th Infantry Regiment, tackled this back-crawl-through-sludge-under-barbed-wire challenge while completing the Sand Hill obstacle course Monday morning.

Those entering Fort Benning at the 1st Division Road gate should be prepared for a new traffic pattern beginning at approximately 9 a.m. Monday after the morning surge.

The construction is proceeding ahead of the original start date of June, said Folke Ahlquist, U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, Savannah District.

Dean Miller, project manager with the master planning branch of the Directorate of Public Works said the altered traffic patterns will be clearly marked and all motorists will still be required to show identification before entering post.

Traffic coming in from Cusseta on Highway 27/280 will still be able to enter post at the 1st Division gate, but

Soldiers-ONLINE debuts

Army News Service

The March 8 debut of SoldiersONLINE marked a new approach to communicating with Soldiers and their families.

Located at www.army.mil/soldiers, SoldiersONLINE combines the immediacy of news that affects Soldiers today with the in-depth feature reporting of the Soldiers Magazine staff.

Throughout the Army, there are many efforts underway to communicate via the Web, but other than the Army's official Web page at Army.mil, Soldiers would have to know where information is posted or spend extra time searching.

SoldiersONLINE will solve that problem by giving Soldiers the tools to get all the information they need from one location, said Chuck Jenks, manager of Army.mil.

"This approach is significant, because the Army is now consolidating its communicative efforts in an innovative way," Jenks said. "If Soldiers need to find information related to pay or benefits, health care, education, family life, or daily news and feature information, they can locate that information by simply going to SoldiersONLINE."

In charge of this effort is Gil High, editor-in-chief of Soldiers Magazine.

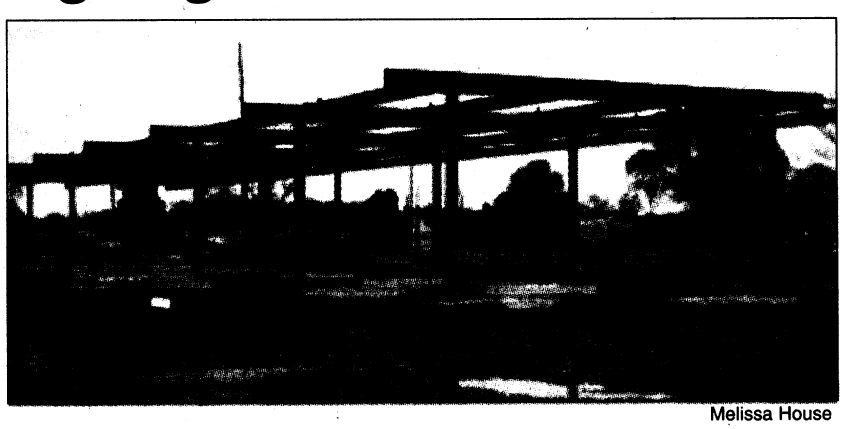
Dixie Road to get gas station, PX



Melissa House
Bayonet staff

Construction is well underway on a new AAFES shoppette and gas station at the intersection of Dixie and Lumpkin Roads set to open in September.

The new facility will have almost 9,000 square feet and 14 multiproduct dispensers, said Glenn Schubert, the general manager of the Fort Benning Consolidated Exchange. Patrons will also be able to purchase diesel and ethanol fuels and use the new car wash.

The Dixie Road shoppette will become the post's 24-hour shoppette.

"The shoppette is in an excellent location and will provide for greater convenience," he said. "It will also reduce the stress currently placed on the two major gas dispensing locations we have." All of the existing shoppettes will remain open.

Melissa House

Construction is underway on the new Dixie Road shoppette.

Construction on the $4.2 million facility began in October 2004.

Site superintendent, Matt Wills said most of the major structural steel and below-ground utility work is finished and the roof should be on the main building in a few weeks.

"We've been hindered a little bit by weather," Wills said, "but we're still basically on schedule."

Schubert said the shoppette will have video rental and a Church's Chicken with a drive-thru.

MEET THE MANAGER

Serving those who serve

Bridgett Siter
Bayonet staff

What qualifies one to be a "price surveyor?" I'm curious because I think I may qualify for the job.

Not that the job is available, mind you.

But if it were, surely all the shopping I do with my daughters would make me a likely candidate. ("Honey, look at the price!" "Omigosh, would you look at that price?!" "Child, do I look like I'm made out of money? Look! At! The! Price!")

So if I were given the opportunity to ask an AAFES price surveyor one question, that question would be, "What the heck is a price surveyor, and should I be getting paid for this?"

Which is why I'm really excited to get the chance to meet the price surveyor at the Main Mall Post Exchange Wednesday during the "Meet the Manager and Price Surveyor" event between 11 a.m. and 1 p.m.

You can, too.

But don't even think about applying for the job, because the job is secure. I know this because the PX not only beats the prices you'll find off post, but it'll match a price should you actually find one lower.

That means the price surveyor is doing a darn good job. She probably should get a raise. (Here I speculate, using the word "her," but I'd bet my checkbook I'm right.) I think I'll tell her that when I see her Wednesday.

Once a month, typically the third Wednesday of the month, you can meet an AAFES manager between 11 a.m. and 1 p.m. right outside the Main Mall PX. Ask anything you want, and feel free to offer a suggestion.

But before you go, I suggest you consider this: AAFES has been supporting American troops for nearly 110 years. They've taken their wares on the road and around the world wherever our Soldiers have served.

So before you compare them to any other store in town, ask yourself, when's the last time a megamart chain deployed to Iraq?

Hmmm.

Maybe we should all think about meeting the manager Wednesday to thank him or her (or them) for providing a service military families consistently rank among the most important benefits the military offers.

No question about it.

Chaplains trading spaces highlights Easter

John Carvahlo
Auburn University

They turned the fireplace into a tarantula terrarium? Such is the premise of Trading Spaces, where neighbors re-decorate for each other, with the help of a professional.

At CrossRoads Contemporary Chapel this month, the chaplains aren't examining drapery fabric samples. Instead, they are "Trading Places" with chaplains from other Army posts.

Sunday, Chaplain (Capt.) Jeff Struecker traveled from Fort Lewis in Washington to Chapel Next at Fort Bragg, N.C. Fort Bragg sent Chaplain (Capt.) Cody Vest down to CrossRoads at Fort Benning.

CrossRoads completed the circle by putting Chaplain (Maj.) Jeff Hawkins on a plane for Fort Lewis.

"Well, we try hard to build services that are creative, contemporary, and captivating ... this is just one more way we want to say to folks who haven't tried chapel or church in a long time, 'Come on out — we'd love for you to experience a chapel for people who don't go to chapel!'"

For CrossRoads, the switch highlighted their theme for the month: Trading Places: What Jesus Did For You At Easter.

Week-by-week, CrossRoads is taking a different angle on how, at the Easter season, Jesus Christ "traded places" with us, dying on the cross for our sins.

"It's just a great place to connect ... especially during deployment," said one wife. "I've found the place I was always looking for."

"Easter is going to be a great celebration. We have an exciting service planned," Hawkins said. "And here's going to be a potluck to give our wives of deployed Soldiers a familiar place to share the day along with the children's very own Easter Egg Hunt right after service."

The family at CrossRoads is glad to share the chaplain with other chapels — and he promises not to redecorate the nursery.

CrossRoads Contemporary Chapel service is a postwide service that meets on Sundays at 11 a.m. at Kelley Hill Chapel. For more information, call 545-9014.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

CrossRoads provides comfort to family

Although my husband is deployed, the children and I remain here waiting. We have grown used to coming to CrossRoads, and it was something that we were able to establish before Daddy left. It is so important to the kids, and even me, to feel like we are still living the life we all knew — it's just now we are doing it without Daddy for a while. It's routine and it's crucial to feeling like we have some order in our lives.

In my whole marriage I have never been able to get my husband to attend service until we found CrossRoads. I really am not sure why he decided to come. Maybe it's because he did not have to "dress up" or because he is a drummer and I told him that live music was played, including "a guy who plays the drums."

For whatever reason he came. And liked it and kept coming back until he deployed.

He called from Kuwait and said, "I wanted to catch you before you went to service." We spoke and he mentioned how nice it was to look at his watch (which has two time zones) and know what our schedule was and know we would be getting ready to go to CrossRoads. He also mentioned how he wishes he could hear the sermon every week; perhaps I could bring a small tape recorder and tape the service.

I am nine months pregnant and have two other children to care for while he is away. He will miss our baby's birth and her whole first year. It is a sad reality for a lot of Soldiers and their families.

I know that when I attend CrossRoads, I feel at ease with what I hear and what is being said, because it is so close to home — you talk about issues that are actually relevant and something I can relate to. You have true understanding of what the Soldiers and what the families left behind go through during such times of separation. The military asks so much of these Soldiers and their families. They sit in service one week here on U.S. soil, safe, and the next they are sitting in a tent halfway around the world, getting ready to battle with those who would see peace, personal freedom and religious freedom doomed. It's knowing that at 11 on Sunday morning, the children and I will be sitting in the Kelley Hill chapel listening to people who preach our reality, who understand our issues and who are there when we most need them.

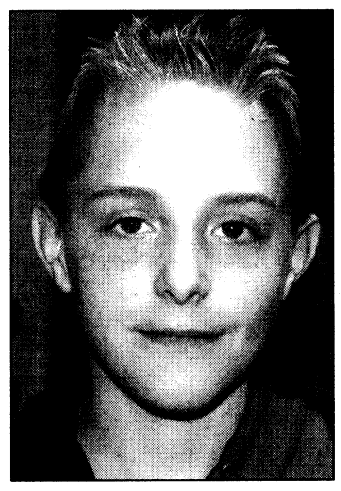
This service is a blessing to me. There is an invisible thread that is attached to my heart and it leads straight over to this small chapel on Kelley Hill.

Every Sunday I feel it pulling me to come and be around others who are in the same boat or who have been there before.

It lets my kids see that when they go into this house of God, there are pictures playing on the screen of Soldiers in uniform, and people who know what the word "deployment" even means, and chaplains who have a founded heart, who do the work of Christ and the work of a Soldier.

I drive past the empty barracks and company areas and it reminds me that even the buildings are waiting, for the guys to come home. But there is still one building that has life in it, where people won't stop coming.

It's here at the chapel. Although there are Sundays when I cannot make it because of illness or other obligations, it is a huge comfort to know it will be there next weekend and the weekend after. And that nobody will judge me and ask me why I wasn't in church last weekend. They will instead smile and welcome me every time I walk through the doors to the chapel.



Thank you for this service and I look forward to time spent worshipping here while I wait for my husband's return.

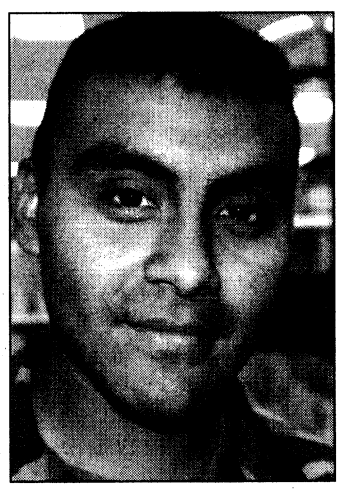
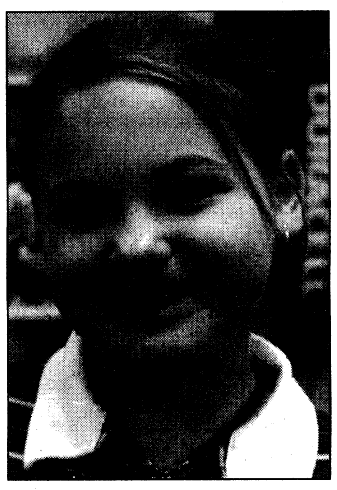
VARIOUS VOICES

If you could ask an AAFES manager one question, what would it be?
(Responses by Eric Doss, operations manager)



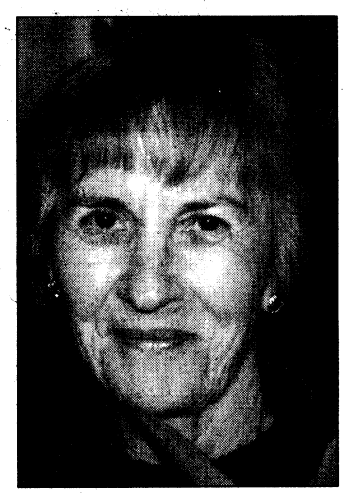
Colton Williams, first-time shopper at the PX — "Is it like a Wal-Mart?"

(We don't like to be compared to Wal-Mart or any other store. We're dedicated to the troops. That's why we're here, and that's why we're in the desert. Wal-Mart is not in the desert.)



Nekita Miller, family member — "As more and more Soldiers and their families come to Fort Benning, will there be more job opportunities?"

(Always, and not just here, everywhere, even abroad. Go to AAFES.com. No more paper applications.)



Spc. Isreal Benavides, 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment — "I shop here three of four times a week for music. When will you expand your music department? I need more selection."

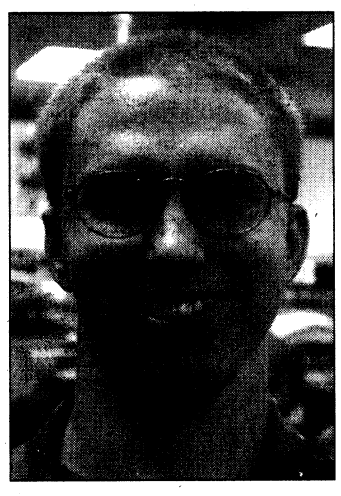
Kristin Smith, family member — "Do they have a variety in the catalogue? Can I find odd sizes there?"

(Yes and yes. We continue to try to add variety to the store also, and we're working on carrying more odd sizes instore also.)



Magdalene Morales, family member — "The only question I can think of is 'How do they do it so well?'"

Clara Kirk, family member — "The price of green tea pills is two dollars higher here. Do you price match?"

Reintegration important part of redeployments

Spc. Eliamar Castañon
Assistant editor

After a yearlong deployment, the Soldiers of the 498th Medical Company are finally home. But before they could take the long-awaited redeployment block leave, they had to go through a reintegration process.

The purpose of the reintegration was to make sure the Soldiers have all their medical, dental and personnel information updated and in order, as well as their equipment and weapons maintained and turned in, said 1st Sgt. Alonzo Dixon, 498th first sergeant.

"A lot of times we're in places where we can't get from point A to point B to get our medical and dental issues taken care of," Dixon said. "This system ensures everything is up to date."

Upon redeploying, the Soldiers received classes on suicide prevention, reunion training, critical incident awareness, normalization of experiences, chaplain briefings and medical readiness evaluations.

During the reintegration process, Soldiers also maintained and turned in their weapons and equipment.

Chaplain (Capt.) James Rozmiarek, 14th Combat Support Hospital, said this time around, the chaplains took a different approach to the reintegration briefings they gave the Soldiers.

Rozmiarek said the 14th CSH chaplains hosted an off site for the spouses to voice their struggles during the deployments and their concerns about the redeployment.

"We took the information the spouses shared with us and incorporated it into our briefings with the Soldiers. We hope that with the spouses' feedback, the Soldiers would learn about the struggles the spouses had during the deployment."

The chaplains provided the Soldiers with the tools to deal with the trauma they may have experienced during their deployment.

The Soldiers' mission while deployed was to transport the dead and wounded from the battlefield, Rozmiarek said.

"We gave them the tools to ensure they know how to get help if they need it after experiencing any traumatic (events,)" he said.

Sgt. Stephen Boroff, a 498th crew chief, has been through the reintegration process two times and said he is familiar with it.

"I've been married for four years, have a two-year-old daughter and have been deployed for a year and a half," Boroff said. "We have both grown and changed a little during each deployment. This process helps us get to know each other again."

This is the first time chaplains had an off site with the spouses before redeployment, and Rozmiarek said they received a lot of good feedback from both the spouses and the Soldiers.

On the health side of the house, Soldiers went through the same Soldier Readiness Processing they went through before deployment.

The SRP process included updating of immunizations, physicals, community mental health, Tricare briefings and redeployment health assistance, said Valerie Bell, MEDDAC mobilization coordinator.

"We make sure they have all their medical records updated and they take care of any injuries they might have received while deployed," Bell said. "If they need to see a specialist, we refer them to one. If they need to replace their glasses, we replace them."

Dental Activity also gets an opportunity to review the Soldiers' records and make sure they are updated.

The Soldiers of the 498th completed their reintegration process and began their 30-day leave period March 16.

Col. James Madison, Dental Activity, examines Chief Warrant Officer Charles Andrews, 498th Medical Company, at Bernheim Dental Clinic as part of the reintegration process.

Brass from all branches to train as warriors together

New kind of war calls for new kind of training

Spc. Nikki St. Amant
Bayonet staff

The U.S. Army Infantry Center is ramping up for one of the final pilot phases of the proposed new Basic Officer Leader Course.

Starting July 10, the single company of 200 new officers will undergo six and a half weeks of intense combat training.

This single-site pilot is one of the final steps the Army is taking in preparation for the full-scale transition scheduled for June 2006.

The course differs from current OBC doctrine in that its sole focus is combat training and leadership.

"This is a rigorous, tough course," said Lt. Col. Marlon Blocker, the Fort Benning BOLC commander. "These officers will spend 80 percent of their course time in the field learning warrior tasks, battle drills and combat tactics. And it's not just the experience of walking through the training so they know the information, it's also teaching these young leaders how to train their Soldiers."

Officers currently receive initial training at West Point, Reserve Officer Training Corps or Officer Candidate School prior to commissioning and then proceed to branch-specific training.

Under the new Officer Education System, incoming leaders will receive, for the most part, the same training before commissioning (Phase One), come on active duty and report to BOLC for core combat skill and leadership training (Phase Two) before going on to branch specific courses (Phase Three).

"Not only will this provide the Army with competent, confident officers capable of reporting to their first units as immediate value added," Blocker said, "but it will allow the branch courses to focus on their core doctrine. The end result is officers who are better prepared to lead and train Soldiers."

BOLC students from all branches will train together rigorously on tactically oriented tasks like urban and convoy operations, advanced rifle marksmanship, GPS and advanced land navigation, combatives, battle drills and other core warrior tasks, Blocker said.

The move towards Armywide implementation of BOLC will continue with a four-site pilot beginning in January at Forts Benning, Bliss, Sill and Knox.

BOLC will be a significant addition to the heavy student load here at Fort Benning. But Blocker said the post is prepared for the additional 400 students per cycle.

He said the 11th Infantry Regiment has already secured two barracks buildings within the Airborne School and Officer Candidate School complexes, which will be ready when the July pilot launches.

And equipment isn't an issue either. Blocker said the new courses have been coordinated extensively with the Training and Doctrine Command and the program is well resourced. Training officers will be exposed to the best equipment and training aids the Army has to offer.

"We will be creating well-grounded, more tactically and technically proficient officers in all branches," he said.

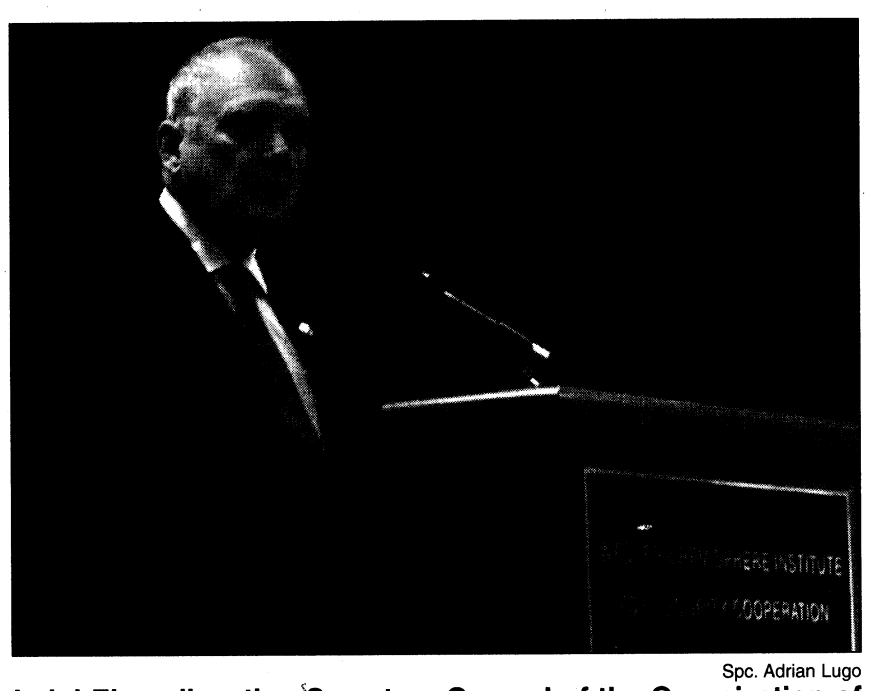
Bolívar award honors human rights icon

Spc. Adrian Lugo
WHINSEC Public Affairs



A lifetime of labor in the field of democracy and human rights was honored during the annual Western Hemisphere Institute for Security Cooperation's Simón Bolívar Lecture, Monday.

Acting Sec. Gen. Luigi Einaudi, of the Organization of American States, became the fourth honoree in the Institute's history to present a lecture on his life's work.

WHINSEC Commandant Col. Gilberto Pérez introduced the speaker to the 300-plus audience in Pratt Hall as "someone who was the driving force behind-the-scenes pushing for peace, harmony and liberty across our hemisphere — across our Americas."

Einaudi spoke first on the seemingly lower-profile issues facing the region concerning poverty and narco-trafficking, which are, at times, mistakenly viewed as "other countries' problems."

"My conviction is that the current collective agreement of unified security cooperation is inherently flawed ... but that's not to say that it can't be fixed," sated Einaudi.

Spc. Adrian Lugo

Luigi Einaudi, acting Secretary General of the Organization of American States, speaks of the potential in this world region.

"More than simply focusing on trade and politics, taking more aggressive multilateral efforts to stopping so-called internal issues such as drugs, kidnappings, illegal human and arms trafficking is the best way ensure a united, free and prosperous Americas," he said.

Speaking during a press conference after his lecture, Einaudi spoke on how instrumental institutes like WHINSEC are in effectively addressing these "internal issues."

"You need the WHINSECs in the world because they are as simple as an insurance policy to ensure hemispheric stability and cooperation for the future."

Einaudi also spoke on the unity and resolve he has witnessed from nations across the western hemisphere after the terrorists attacks on Sept. 11, 2001.

"This was the first time in the (OAS)'s history that all nations declared officially that an attack on one of their members was an attack on all," he said.

"That kind of solidarity and cooperativeness is something the United States, especially, cannot afford to let flounder."

He also lauded some of the achievements his organization has made over the years, such as establishing a peaceful resolution between the once warring nations of Guatemala and Belize, and organizing successful relief efforts in Haiti.

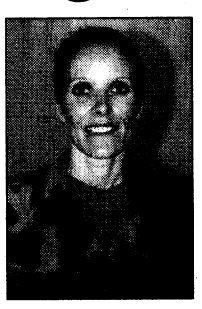
"I feel that there is more promise in this part of the world than in any other, because of our common history and culture. With the right steps, we just might be able to establish a lasting peace and democratic Americas."

Before his lecture Einaudi was presented a bust of Simón Bolívar for his contributions to peace and democracy in this hemisphere, by Pérez.

Einaudi has a distinguished 50-year record of service to the U.S. and to the nations of the Americas.

In his most recent position as acting Secretary General of the OAS, Einaudi served as secretary to the political bodies and carried out diplomatic efforts to reduce tensions in several countries.

He helped broker talks related to the maritime and territorial differences in Central America — between Belize and Guatemala, as well as Honduras and Nicaragua — and has supported demarcation of the El Salvador-Honduras border.



Fort Benning celebrates women's history with lunch

Honoree delivers inspirational key-note speech

Tawny Archibald Campbell
Bayonet staff

Women throughout American history have demonstrated a strong will and desire to better themselves and their fellow man can change the world.

Sgt. Maj. Jennifer Pearson, Sergeant Major of the Directorate of Morale, Welfare and Recreation, spoke of the role women have played in American history and the character it takes to make a difference.

Pearson

Pearson was the speaker at the Women's History Month Luncheon Wednesday.

"When asked who my female role model was while growing up, my mother immediately comes to mind," she said. "She stayed at home and cared for me and my five siblings while my father as away in the Navy. My mother was a saint."

Col. Charles Cornwell, Fort Benning's chief of staff, described Pearson as a role model herself.

"She was the first woman in the Ranger Training Brigade where she served for six years," Cornwell said. "When we were looking for a Sergeant Major we found out we had a hero in our backyard, and Sgt. Maj. Pearson is one of the best."

Pearson said she had never seen herself as a role model, and wished she had a strong female role model when she first came into the Army, but the highest-ranking female she saw was a sergeant E-5.

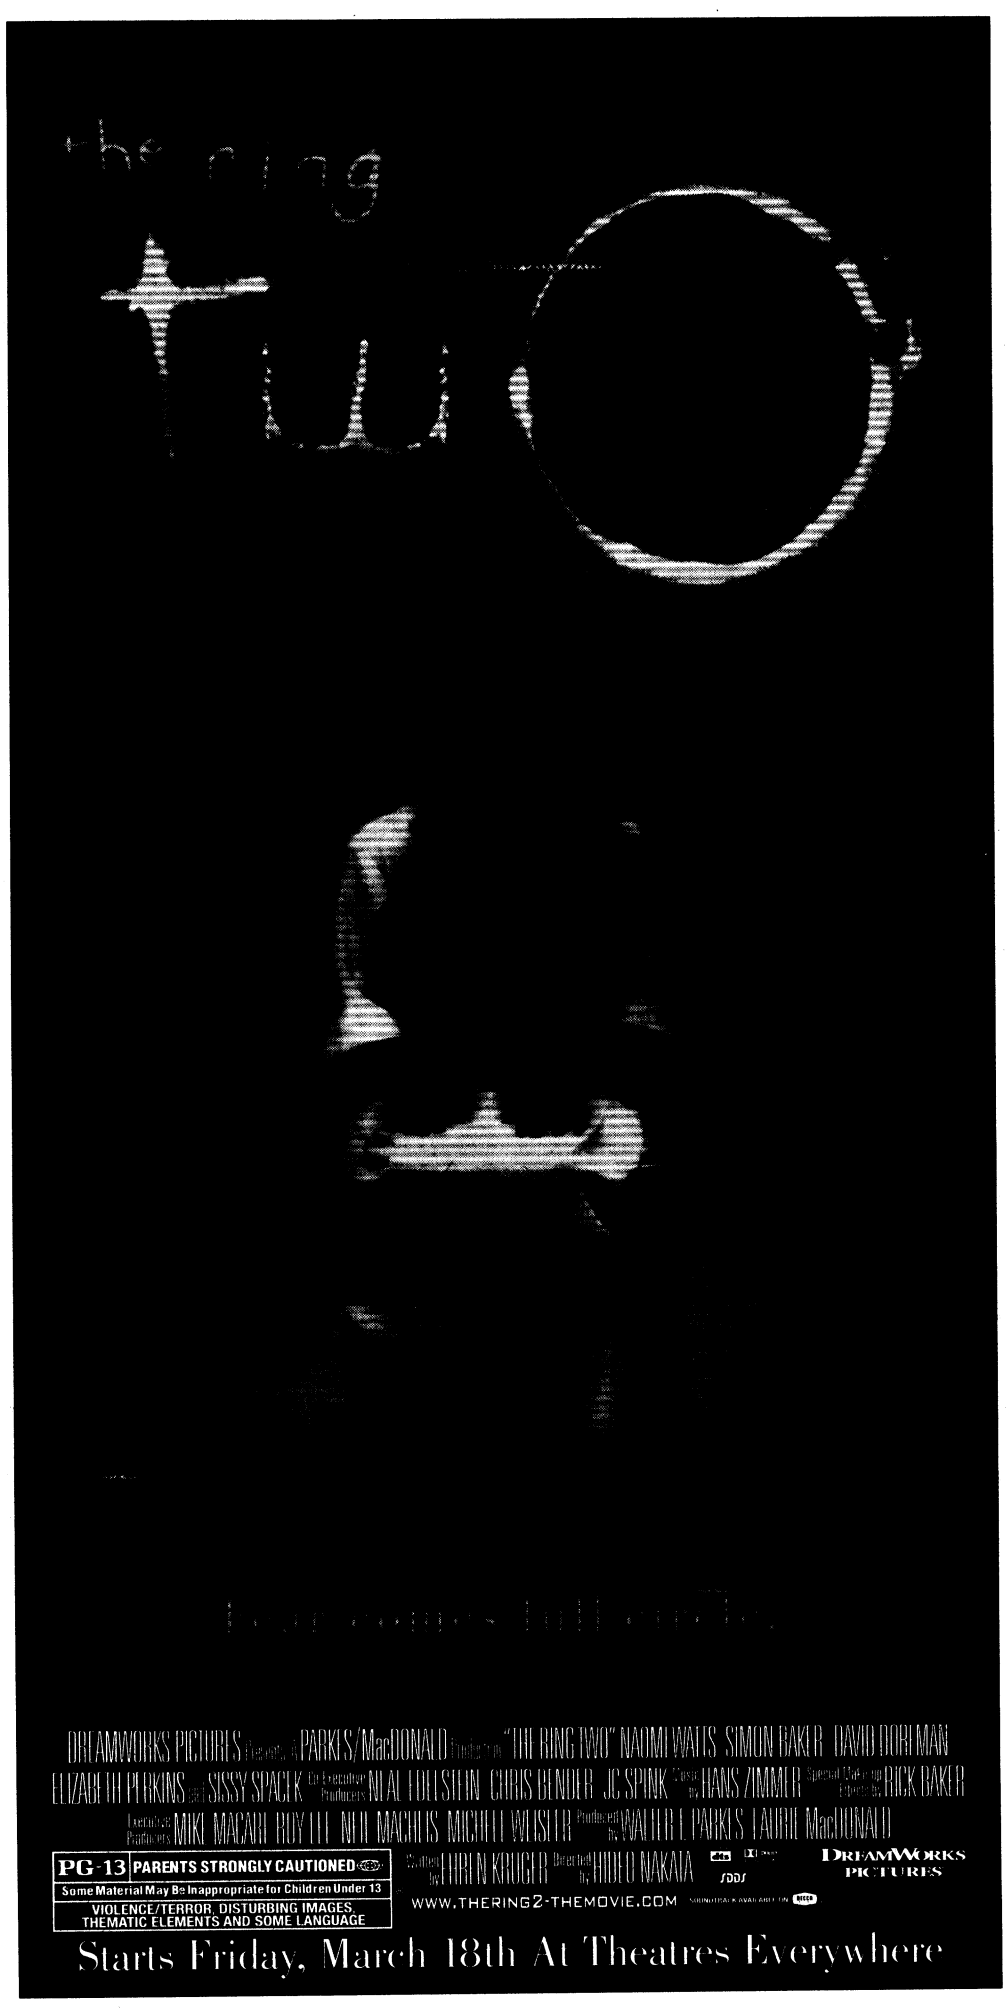
"It was then I decided my goal would be to become a sergeant major," said Pearson, a mother of two. "I wanted to show female Soldiers that we could have babies, raise our children and still be good Soldiers.

In hindsight, Pearson said if there was something to prove, it would be that, regardless of who you are or your gender, the sky is the limit, but you must take the first step.

"What is truly important is not what I have done, or what I do — it's who I am," Pearson said. "I believe it's that which is deep inside us, our heart and soul, that really counts.

"What truly defines people is not, and should not be, how famous, popular or powerful they are. What really matters is a person's character."

Pearson went on to describe several women of character.



One of those was Rosa Parks, who taught conviction and courage when she turned the wheels of the civil rights movement, she said.

Another hero, in Pearson's eyes, is Col. Rhonda Cornum, a prisoner of war in Iraq in 1991, who was shot down and survived the wreck only to be captured by Iraqi soldiers.

Even though she was badly injured, she worried more for the safety of her fellow Soldiers than for her own comfort, Pearson said.

Pearson asked the audience if they had ever wondered if they possessed the qualities that make up the character of these women.

"When I lay my head on my pillow at night, I want to know I made a positive difference in someone else's life — even if it was just a simple smile or a thank you," she said. "May each of us, male and female, help strengthen and encourage each other, just as iron sharpens iron, and make a difference in the lives of others."

Journalist speaks about media, military

Emphasizes importance of working together

Melissa House
Bayonet staff

Pulitzer Prize-winning journalist and author Rick Atkinson spoke to Soldiers Tuesday as part of the Combat Leader Speaker Program.

Brig. Gen. Benjamin Freakley, post commander, first met Atkinson during the Gulf War in 1991, and invited him to speak about combat leadership and the role of the media and the military.

Atkinson spent two months in Kuwait and Iraq in 2003 with Maj. Gen. David Petraeus, commander of the 101st Airborne Division (Air Assault). Freakley said Atkinson's book, In the Company of Soldiers, was an "intelligent, vivid and well-formed account."

"Rick Atkinson lived the Army values as a journalist serving with Soldiers," Freakley said, "and showed personal courage when the bullets were flying."

"I make my living as a historian these days," Atkinson said. "I am not a combat leader. I never have been and I never will be. But I have, for decades, watched, studied and written about men who have."

Atkinson's book, The Long Gray Line, follows the lives of young officers from West Point's Class of 1966 who went to fight in Vietnam. He has also followed Soldiers in Mogadishu and Iraq.

"I am with them every day," he said.

Atkinson shared the traits he felt set good leaders apart: luck, self-discipline, physical fitness, will, hardness, technical proficiency and open-minded flexibility.

Luck, he said, is not something beyond a leader's control, but "the golden residue of preparation."

He said even great generals like Eisenhower believed in luck and carried seven lucky coins in his pocket. Eisenhower and Patton also illustrated technical proficiency when they decided to take a tank apart and reassemble it — with no parts left over.

Atkinson

Now armed with the list of distinguishing traits, Atkinson told the audience to "go forth and do good, but when you do, there will probably be a reporter there to question you."

He said he is routinely disarmed by a journalistic profession that's rude, shallow, slipshod and lazy, but he also believes in a healthy republic there should be a healthy skepticism.

"The media is an inescapable part of your job as a leader from here on out," he said, "and you should employ the media as a conduit to pass information to your families.

"But don't make the mistake of forcing a square peg into a round hole. What you do and what Soldiers do is very different than what journalists do."

Journalists, he said, want to tell fair, comprehensive and accurate stories and provide the public with a vivid understanding of what happens, whether it be a local sewer district or events in Najaf or Fallujah.

"The fate of every Soldier in this room depends on what the American people decide, collectively, should be done with our military," he said. "We want them to be so informed they are wise."

The trouble today, he said, is there is a "gulf of great magnitude" between the military and the rest of society, but the country at large should feel personally invested in the military.

"The media reaches many, and is the medium for your message as leaders, to highlight (Soldiers') needs and sacrifices," he said, "You have no choice but to work with the media. The media is critical for morale and recognizing and dealing with that is part of the demands of leading in the 21st century."

Working with the media, he said, requires knowing the rules of the road — the difference between "on record," "off record" and background conversations and knowing what kind of conversation you're having before you have one with a reporter.

"A relationship with a reporter is a step-by-step thing," he said. "You'll feel your way along, but the most legitimate reporter is interested in knowing what you do and why you do it, because it's like taking apart a watch — or a tank — they want to find out what makes you tick and your unit tick."

Atkinson said the Soldiers in the audience are part of their own "greatest generation," measuring up to their grandfathers, and better educated and more fit.

"You have a great story to tell," he said. "It's not an unvarnished story, but a good story. Bad things will happen in war and bad things will happen to good Solders in war. Be prepared. Be proactive. You have the whole world watching."

Rangers earn valorous combat awards

Kim Laudano
75th Ranger Regiment

Editor's note: At the request of the Soldiers who received the awards, their names have been withheld.

Three valorous awards were presented to Army Rangers during a combat awards ceremony March 8.

Brig. Gen. Benjamin Freakley, post commanding general, recognized eight Rangers with combat awards, including a Bronze Star Medal with valor device, two Army Commendation Medals with valor devices, two Bronze Star Medals, two Joint Service Commendation Medals, a Department of the Air Force Commendation Medal and a Department of the Navy Commendation Medal.

The awards recognized the Rangers for accomplishments during missions in support of Operation Enduring Freedom and Operation Iraqi Freedom.

"It is an honor to represent the Army in presenting these awards to the Rangers here today," Freakley said. "The 75th Ranger Regiment sets the standard for the Army to follow and the justification for these awards is representative of how the Rangers continue to lead the way in combat."

A Ranger reconnaissance team sergeant was presented the Bronze Star. According to his award citation, the Ranger's leadership under fire helped defeat a coordinated enemy attack on an objective.

A Ranger assistant team leader was presented an Army Commendation Medal with valor device.

According to his award citation, the Ranger's actions and courage under direct enemy fire helped his comrades defend their position against a numerically superior force.

A Ranger reconnaissance team sergeant was presented an Army Commendation Medal with valor device. According to his award citation, the Ranger's actions and courage under direct enemy fire helped his comrades initiate accurate and lethal fire into an unsuspecting numerically superior enemy force.

Also in attendance was Lt. Col. Jeff Bannister, deputy commander, 75th Ranger Regiment. He said it is not only important to recognize the regiment's contributions to the Global War on Terrorism, but also the individual acts of valor and achievement.

"So much of what Rangers do in support of the Global War on Terrorism goes untold because of the nature of our job in the special operations community," Bannister said. "These ceremonies are an opportunity to remind Rangers we know they are working hard, making contributions, and we truly appreciate their hard work and dedication."

The heart and dedication of our Rangers makes this organization successful in the Global War on Terrorism, Bannister said.

"These Rangers have deployed multiple times with the regiment and are continuing to make significant contributions to the success of the missions we support," he said.

"Their actions in combat reflect their commitment to this nation."

nervous about the equipment. I trust it completely."

Fort Benning's Airborne students have been training soft loop, center-pull reserve parachutes for six months.

The 82nd Airborne Division at Fort Bragg, N.C., has them, and the rest of the Army will gradually make the switch from the right-side release, Watts said. That will likely take two years to complete.

The modifications, which took two years to research and test, include the repositioning of the rip cord to protect it from exposure to left or right movement and making it easier for a left-handed jumper — or one with an injured right hand — to release the reserve in the event of a main chute malfunction.

The metal grommets that hold the locking pins (that secure the rip cord) have also been replaced with fabric cords for easier release.

> "I still get nervous about the jump, about remembering what to do and when to do it. But I'm not nervous about the equipment. I trust it completely."
> Pvt. Josh Inmon
> Honor graduate

"The Army is so focused on safety and performance issues that we've perfected the parachute and now we're working on the 'what ifs,'" Watts said. "The chances are you'll never have to use it."

ONLINE: Delivers news fast

"SoldiersONLINE will improve our ability to provide Soldiers and their families with relevant, accurate and timely information daily," High said. "We have a great opportunity to combine the daily news operations of ARNEWS with the more in-depth features of the magazine staff.

This will create a more complete picture of the Army to our Soldiers."

High said SoldiersONLINE will not replace Soldiers Magazine.

SoldiersONLINE will provide daily news and feature information, but will also deliver radio and video streaming capabilities, Jenks said.

"We have to continue to innovate the way we communicate," he said.

"Time and space are valuable assets. By reducing the time it takes for information to reach Soldiers, we improve efficiency and help grow well-informed leaders."

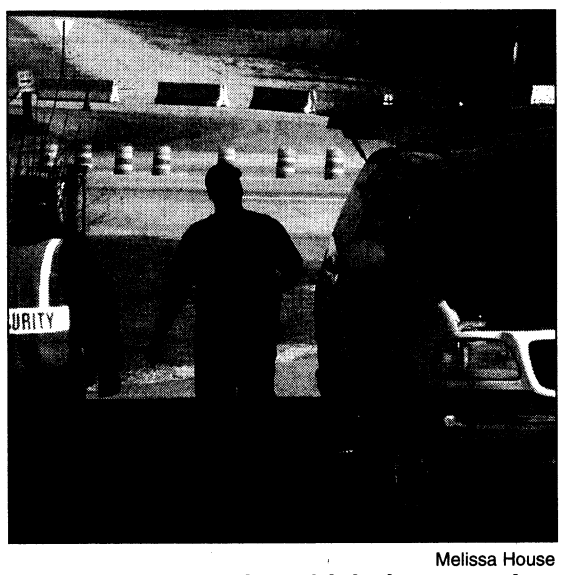
ACP: Should not slow post traffic flow southbound traffic entering post will travel one mile farther south and enter at 8th Division Road.

There won't be a southbound exit onto 27/280 at 8th Division Road. Instead, an old gate, located south of the 4700 block on Old Cusseta Road, will be pressed into service for southbound traffic. The gate will be exit only and a break in the median will allow for a left turn onto 27/280 northbound, Miller said.

"Overall, there shouldn't be a big impact on traffic," Ahlquist said.



Provost Marshal Lt. Col. Sean Finnegan echoed that in a press conference March 15 at the 1st Division access control point.

"With 3rd Brigade deployed, there's lighter than usual traffic coming through this gate for Kelley Hill," Finnegan said. The ACP is part of the ongoing, $48 million construction project to upgrade security on post.

Finnegan said the ACP will resemble the one at Sand Hill and will be reconfigured with two inbound lanes and one lane outbound.

Richard English, the construction project manager, said the project should meet the overall completion date set for January 2006.

Connor Bros. Construction, has finished the ACP at Sand Hill. The Eddy Bridge ACP is approximately 88 percent complete and the Benning Road ACP and Visitor Center project is 25 percent complete. All construction should be complete around June 2006.

Optical lab tech finds satisfaction in helping others

Spc. Nikki St. Amant

Spc. Nikki St. Amant

Spc. Nicole Beck, Medical Activity Optical Fabrication Laboratory specialist, prepares a lens for cutting Tuesday afternoon.

Tucked away on the back side of the airborne training complex is a small, nondescript building that houses a group of six Soldiers.

"It is small, but that's good," said Spc. Nicole Beck of her detachment. "You get to know everyone, and it's a close-knit bunch."

Beck's journey to her position at the Medical Activity's Optical Fabrication Laboratory began in October 2001, when she joined the Army as a 91H, optical laboratory specialist.

"I was cooking, and my husband was watching TV when he said, 'Come check this out,'" she said. "I thought it (September 11, 2001) was a movie, but it was real. It could have been my family. I wanted to kick some butt."

The Wolcottiville, Ind., native said she knew she wanted to leave the hometown of 600 she grew up in, and she wanted to help people.

"I don't really like the sight of blood — extreme trauma is something I don't think I could deal with," Beck said. "I can't handle that, but I still wanted to help."

So she knocked out basic training and headed to Fort Eustis, Va., for advanced individual training. Though assigned to Fort Eustis, 91Hs actually conduct their training with Sailors at nearby Yorktown Naval Base.

The six-month course teaches aspiring techs basic eye anatomy, the mechanics of sight and light, and the use and maintenance of a variety of lens fabrication equipment.

"Yes, we make the big brown glasses everybody hates so much," Beck said.

After graduating from AIT, she headed to Fort Hood, Texas, where she deployed to Iraq with the 704th Division Support Battalion.

"For a while I was scared being over there," she said, "and I second-guessed my decision to join for a little while. But then I realized I didn't have it nearly as bad as so many others."

After Fort Hood, she PCSed to Fort Benning in December 2004 and is adjusting to being attached to a large MEDDAC unit for the first time.

Fort Benning's Optical Fabrication Laboratory supports the entire post, including the heavy demands of Soldier Readiness Processing, Martin Army Community Hospital and the 30th Adjutant General Reception Battalion on Sand Hill.

Beck said the lab is capable of producing 200 sets of lenses a day when fully-staffed. It's a fast-pace environment she enjoys.

"The pace has its pros and cons, but I definitely like it better this way," she said. "It makes days go faster."

More than halfway into her enlistment, the 25-year-old is happy with her job and choice to join the Army.

"I'm staying in for my full 20 years," she said. "I love what I do and even though there are some down sides to being military sometimes, you get so much out of it."

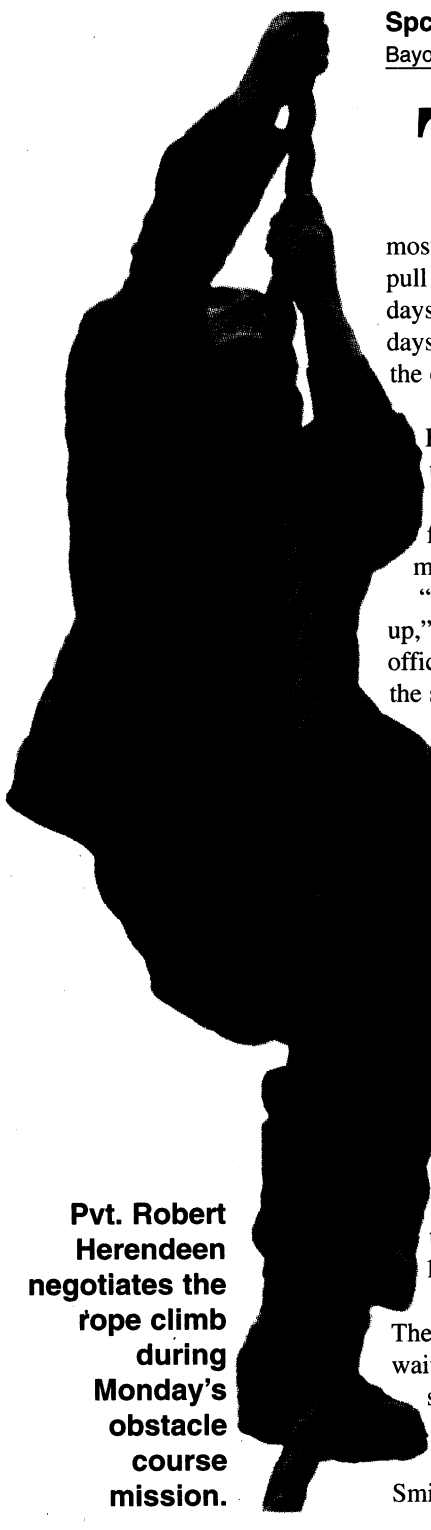
Ad Council
WHAT A CHILD LEARNS ABOUT VIOLENCE A CHILD LEARNS FOR LIFE.



A drill sergeant pushes a Soldier's head down into the water when he refuses to get wet and keep his head down. The Soldier risked injuring himself on the barbed wire. The unit, the 1st Battalion, 50th Infantry Regiment, completed the Obstacle Course Monday morning as part of week-two training.

Teamwork begins with competition

Spc. Nikki St. Amant
Bayonet staff

The goal Monday was to increase fitness, toughen soft hands, begin building the fire that will become a warrior spirit and, most importantly, foster teamwork that will pull young Infantrymen through the long days of training that lie ahead and the darker days of war which await many of them on the other side of graduation.

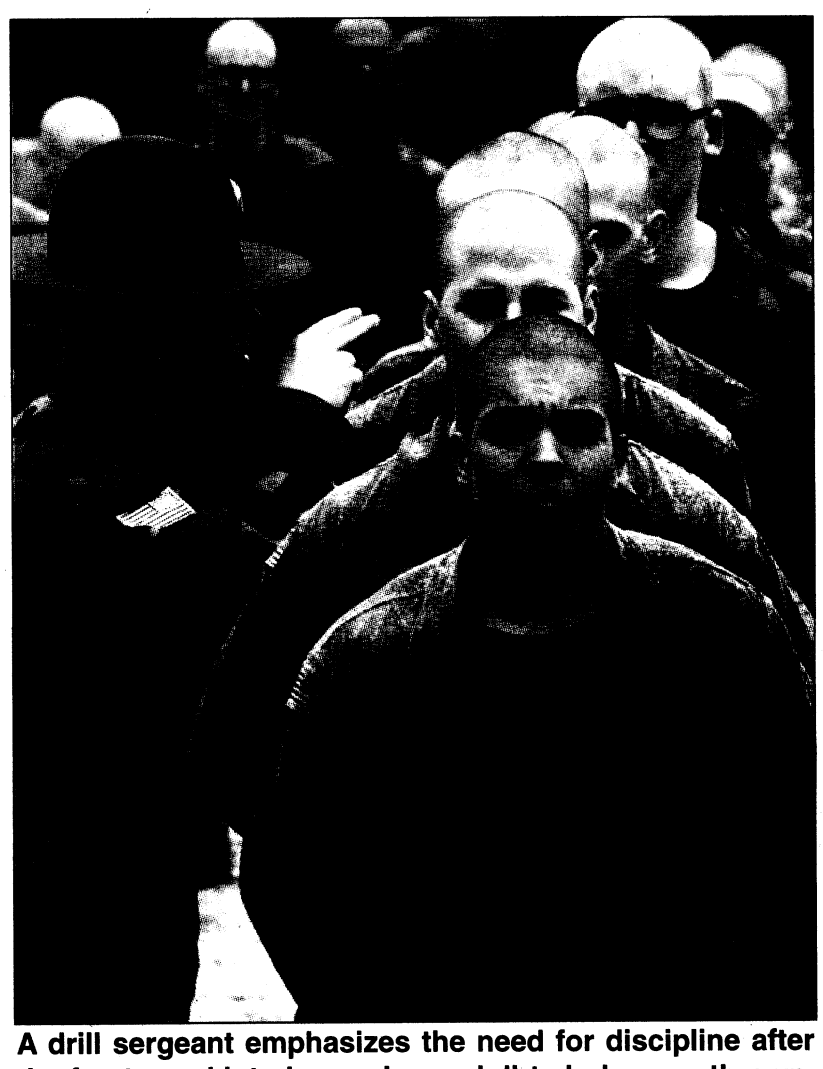
The troops of B Company, 1st Battalion, 50th Infantry Regiment, started the day with a physical fitness test before rallying at the Sand Hill obstacle course for a morning of sweat, sandy mud, sore muscles and battered knees and elbows.

"I've told my drill sergeants to fire them up," said 1st Lt. Willie Bowen, executive officer. "We'll get them psyched up, but at the same time, their buddies will begin talking them up.

"This is where we see the beginning of teamwork and camaraderie. By sparking a little rivalry, they start identifying with each other and pulling together with the common goal to beat the other platoons."

Broken up into 10-man squads, the entire company navigated the roughly 400-meter course, which included about a dozen obstacles. The average time during the first iteration was 15 minutes.

"Hey Cupcake! There's a cheesburger waiting at the end of this, so you better be running the whole way, man!" said Pvt. Drew Smith to battle buddy Pvt. Anthony Strahin.



> "Hey Cupcake! There's a cheesburger waiting at the end of this, so you better be running the whole way, man!"
> Pvt. Drew Smith to Pvt. Anthony "Cupcake" Strahin
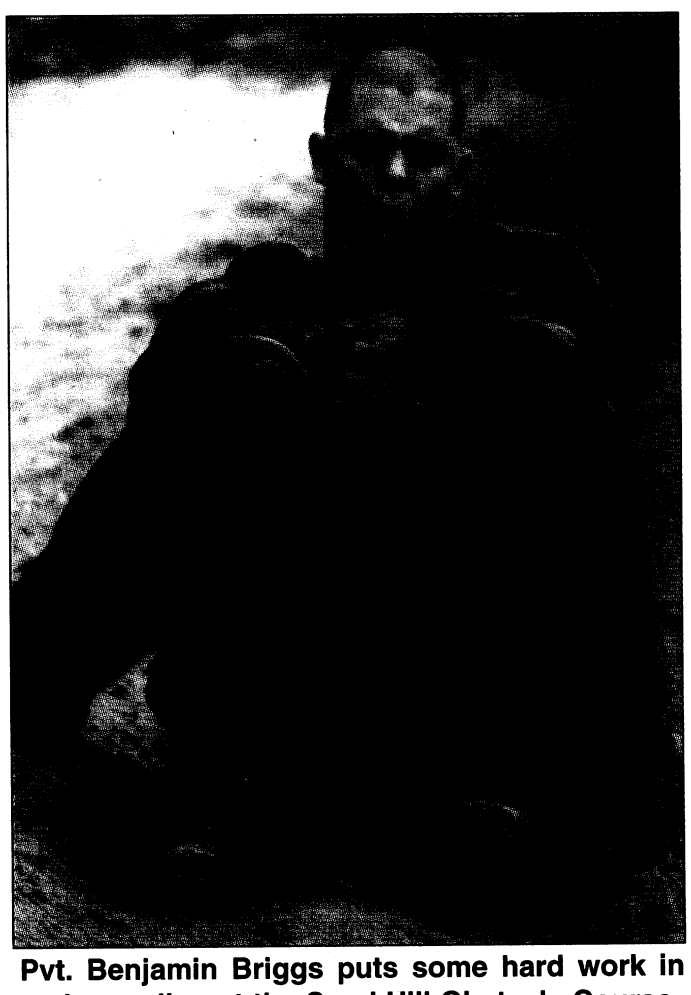
> 1st Battalion, 50th Infantry Regiment

And then they did it again.

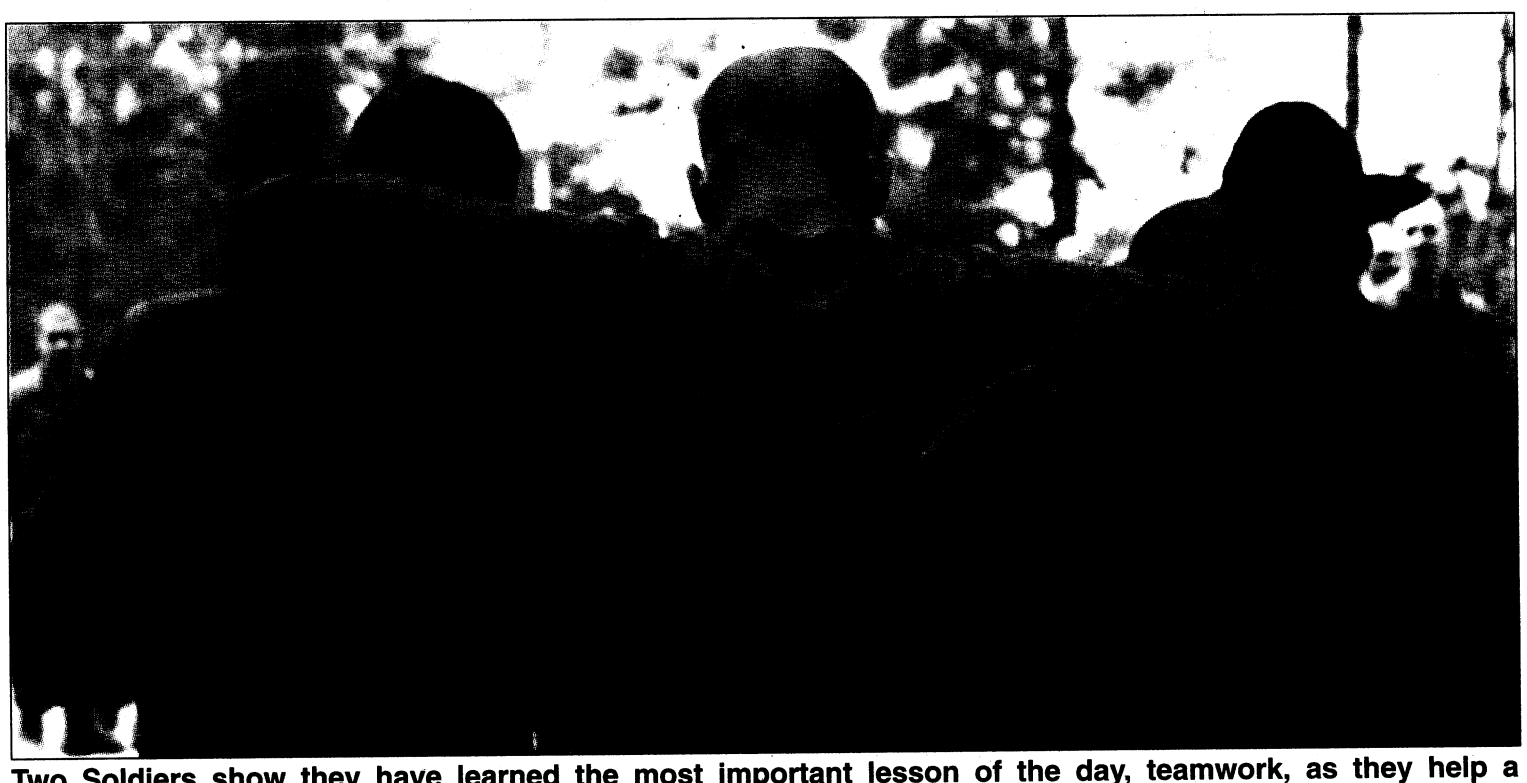
The second pass was marked by a stronger sense of unity within each platoon. Mottos were screamed between obstacles, teammates stuck together, and Soldiers cheered the weakest links forward through the muck and across the physical barriers. There was laughing, battle cries and frustrated charges all along the winding course.

Although tired, wet, sore and filthy beyond recognition, the Soldiers seemed to be having a good time.

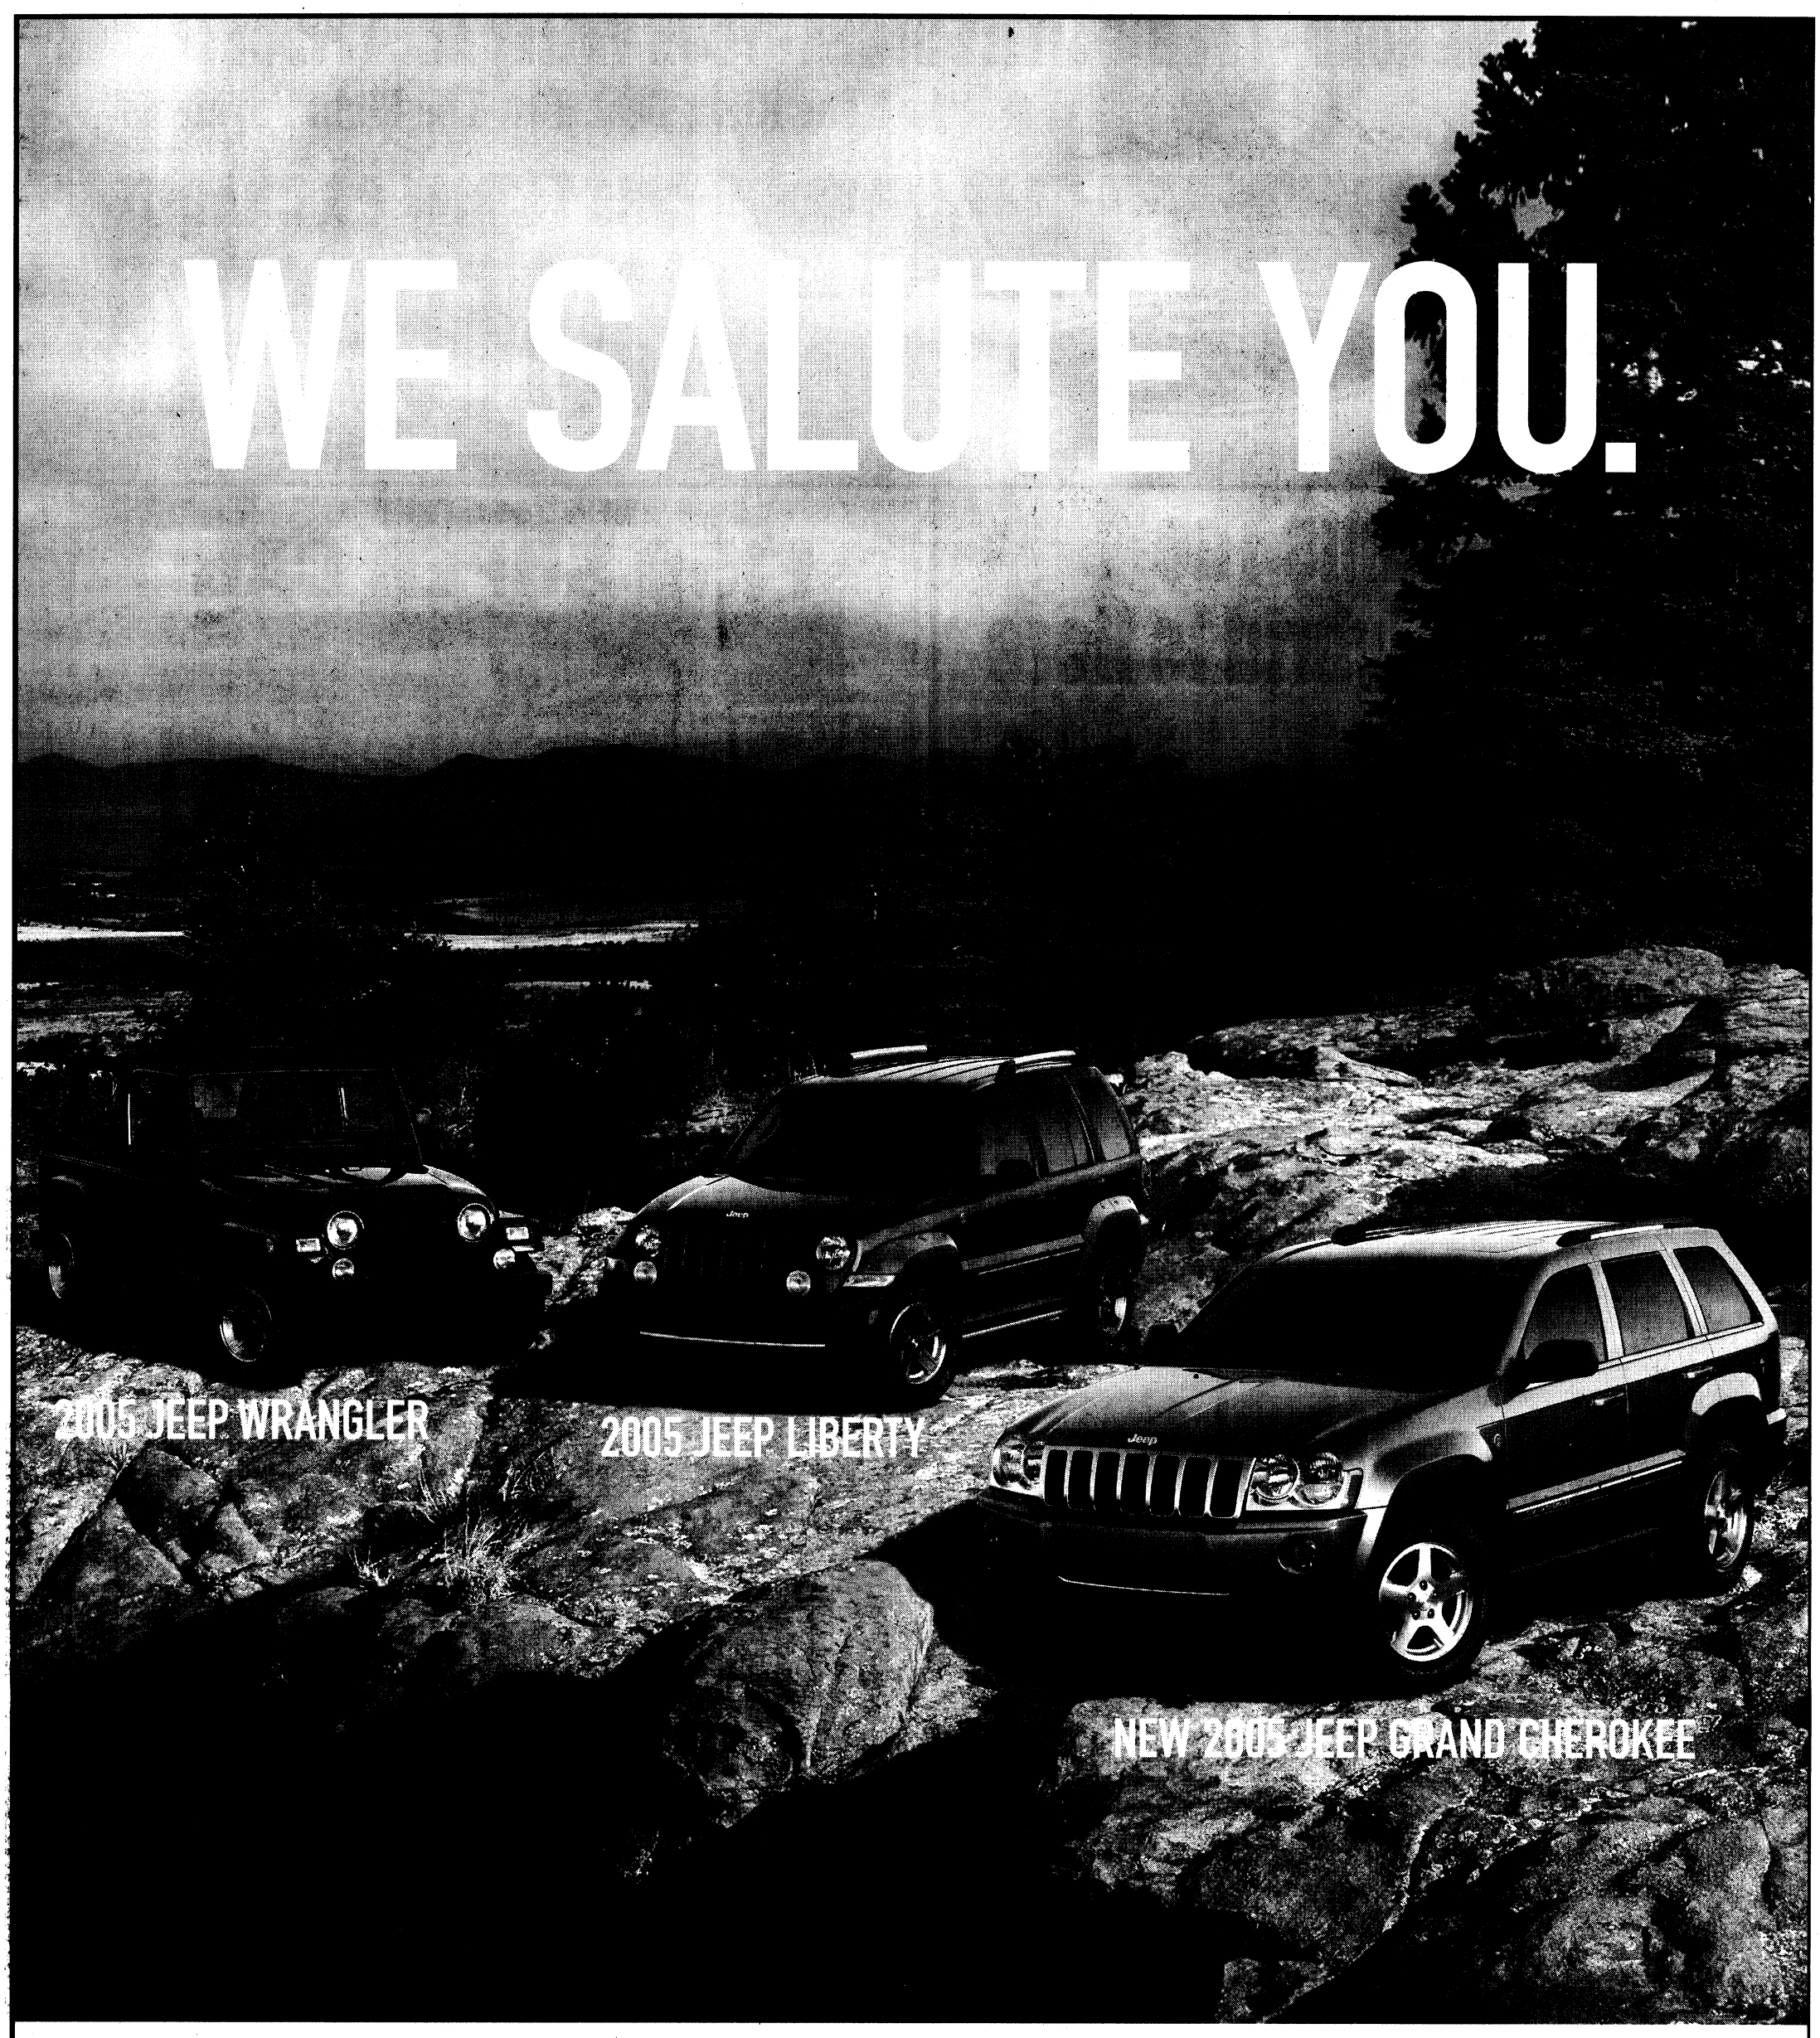
"This is going to get us into shape and they want to see us start working together as a team," said Pfc. Joshua Beck. "It has been fun, and that's part of the reason I joined as an Infantryman. I didn't want to do some boring job; I wanted some excitement."



A drill sergeant emphasizes the need for discipline after the fun turned into horseplay and dirt clods were thrown.



Pvt. Robert Herendeen negotiates the rope climb during Monday's obstacle course mission.



Two Soldiers begin their second run through the obstacle course. Their first task is a 50-meter dash split in half by a ditch which must be jumped.

Pvt. Benjamin Briggs puts some hard work in crab crawling at the Sand Hill Obstacle Course.

Two Soldiers show they have learned the most important lesson of the day, teamwork, as they help a wounded comrade off the field of battle. The unit will do the obstacle course again just before graduation.

COMMUNITY

In 1895, the War Department directed post commanders to establish an exchange at every post. The first real test of the Post Exchange system came in 1917, when the United States entered World War I. Unfortunately, exchanges couldn't meet the needs of the greatly expanded Army, so in 1918, the secretary of war commissioned a committee to study morale overseas. In 1919, the committee recommended the Army provide a system for troop "canteens." The term "PX" wasn't used popularly until the 1920s.

RCI moves forward with plans

Residents should fill out housing survey

This street scape represents the new houses that Clark Pinnacle will build in McGraw Manor and Custer Terrace.

Residential Communities Initiative will present its Community Development Management Plan to the Department of the Army next month.

The plan covers three areas — development, finances and property management — which includes identifying the number of houses to demolish and replace, as well as managing and marketing the quarters to increase occupancy during construction.

The 10-year plan is to replace all but the historic housing on Fort Benning, said Ron Smith, RCI manager. That's 3,367 sets of quarters.

Smith anticipates construction will begin next spring in the 800-family Patton housing area, across Custer Road from Sand Hill.

When Patton is finished, work will begin in McGraw Manor, where all houses will be demolished and replaced. All housing areas will be "de-densified," Smith said, and McGraw Manor will go from 952 to 599 units.

After the May Base Realignment and Closure decision, RCI may need to program new houses for new units coming to Fort Benning, Smith said. Land is already set aside for additional housing.

Local church hosts The Upper Room

Opens Wednesday with Military Appreciation Night

Bridgett Siter
Bayonet staff

You can see Carol Graham next week at Cornerstone Church of God. But you'll see very little of her.

Graham, the wife of a Kelley Hill Soldier serving in Iraq, will play Mary, the sister of Martha, in Cornerstone's annual Easter production, The Upper Room. As Mary, she'll be covered from head to toe, not so much as a hair peeking out of her costume.

"I try very hard to get the details right," said Judy Ebert, the retired Fort Benning school teacher who's produced, directed and often written the musical for more than 30 years. "The teacher in me wants to teach people something they didn't know."

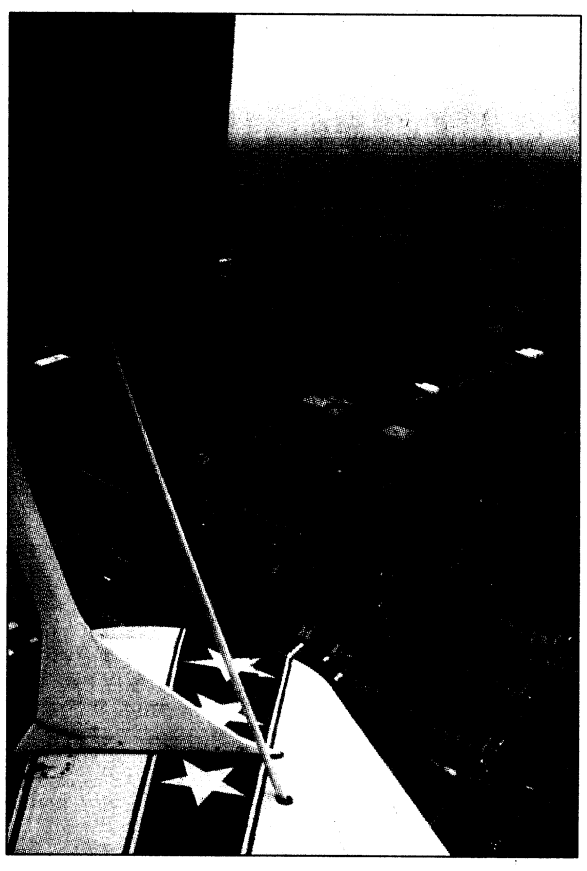
Ebert carefully studied ancient culture to design a set and costumes that would honestly reflect first century Jewish customs. Men wore prayer shawls, and women were covered from head to toe. Their hair was never uncovered in public.

Ebert's attention to detail is also evident in the professionally designed set — "which rivals anything you'll see at the Springer" — and the development of complex characters, particularly the disciples, whose perspectives of the Easter story make The Upper Room fresh and moving.

"I want the audience to see the characters as very human, making human mistakes like we all do," Ebert said. "I want them to see that Jesus uses ordinary people and does extraordinary things with (them.)"

Ebert expects the 400-capacity church to be filled each night, Wednesday through March 27. Wednesday is Military Appreciation Night. Refreshments will be served after the show, which starts at 7 p.m. Doors open at 6 p.m. Admission is free. A nursery is available for children 5 and younger, but Graham said older children will enjoy the musical.

"It's a family affair," she said.



The church is located at 7701 Lloyd Road, between Double Churches and Williams roads in Columbus.

Marty Flournoy takes The Bayonet photographer Tawny Archibald Campbell for a ride over Fort Benning in his Pitts S-2A biplane Tuesday in preparation for the Thunder in the Valley Air Show this weekend. Children's rides, food and aerial rides will be available at the event.

A Pitts S-2A biplane circles Fort Benning's Main Post. The plane, built in 1971, has a 19-foot wing span and a 200 horse power engine. The red, white and blue plane will be on display at the Thunder in the Valley Air Show Saturday and Sunday.

Resource officers, DARE program pays off in schools

MPs teach drug abuse prevention

Bridgett Siter
Bayonet staff

Call them resource officers, DARE officers, school MPs or crossing guards. Whatever. The truth is, they're all that and more.

Fort Benning's seven resource officers — that's their official title — are assigned to post schools, where they serve as crossing guards. They also teach DARE, Drug Abuse Resistance Education, and occasionally resolve conflicts between students.

"They're called Soldiers, MPs, counselors, mentors, role models, teachers — even babysitters," said Sherena Wilkins, the civilian supervisor in charge of the program. "I call them the cream of the crop."

Wilkins said the one-year assignment is considered a reward for good service. It's a coveted position, though misconceptions are more common than not.

"People want the job because they want the opportunity to make a difference in the lives of Soldiers' children," she said.

The ways they make a difference are as varied as the students they serve in Fort Benning's six elementary schools and one middle school. But the characteristics that qualify them for the job are the same, Wilkins said.

They're carefully screened and interviewed and must have an affinity for children, strong mentoring skills, and a personality suited for the sometimes monotonous but never predictable environments in which they'll serve.

Sgt. Jessica Mitchell is the only two-time resource officer. She returned to the program this year after deployments and reassignments created a vacancy at Loyd Elementary.

Last year, Mitchell, a petite mother and stepmother of four, developed a rapport with the students at Faith Middle School. She attended dances and ball games, often traveling to out-of-town games on weekends with her toddlers in tow.

To me, DARE is like a nightlight that clears away the darkness that is drugs, alcohol, tobacco and peer pressure. Although none of these have been a problem for me, DARE has helped my negative opinions toward drugs grow stronger. DARE has taught me many things, such as cigarettes have more than 200 known poisons, and when it comes to things like peer pressure, there are multiple solutions. Thank you DARE.
— Alex Schwartz, fifth grade, Stowers

It was that dedication to duty that won the hearts of her students who turned to Mitchell with their personal problems. One student confided he was thinking about joining a gang. Another sought help for self-destructive behavior.

"She was mutilating herself, cutting herself," Mitchell recalled. "Even after I left the school, at the end of the year, her family would call me at home, I'd put on my uniform and go to her house. You grow to really care about these kids. It's more than a job."

Mitchell saw another young boy's misbehavior at school as a side effect of the fear he was feeling while his mother was deployed. She counseled him and stayed in touch with his grandmother. When she returned, the boy's mother wrote Mitchell a letter.

"She said, 'It made my deployment easier just knowing you were here for my son and my mother,'" Mitchell said. "That's what makes this (job) worthwhile. It's the most rewarding thing you'll ever do in the Army. Just the hugs and smiles and thank yous — that's the greatest reward. That's

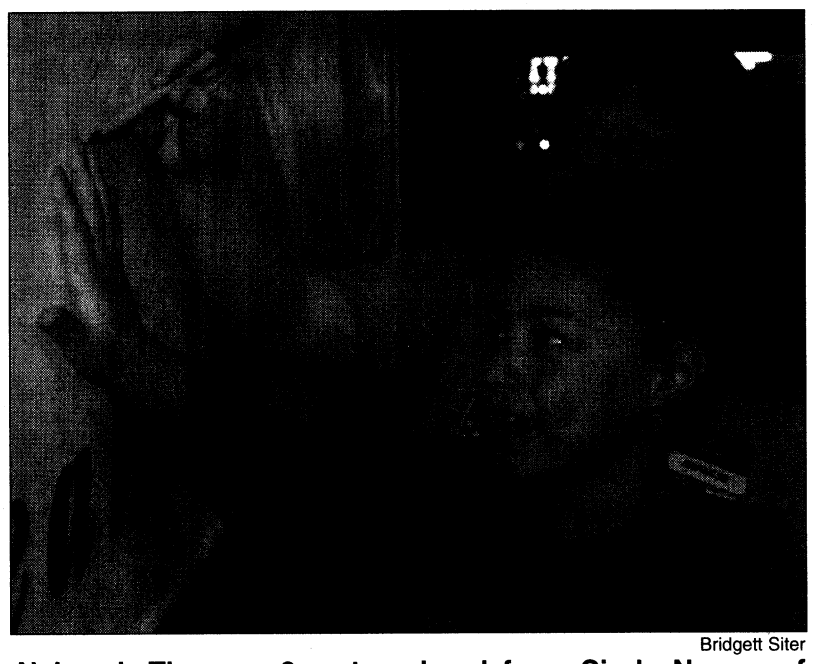
A banner day at AAFES

Bridgett Siter
Bayonet staff



The folks at the Main Mall PX have undertaken a banner task, and they're hoping Fort Benning families will lend a hand.

AAFES is collecting messages and signatures to send to troops in Afghanistan and Iraq. A banner, which reads "We all have a hand in securing freedom," will be posted in the mall daily between 11 a.m. and 1 p.m.

When a banner is filled, it will be shipped to a PX overseas and replaced with a new one at the mall.

AAFES has been committed to the military for more than 109 years, said Eric Doss, operations manager.

"This is just another way we want to show it."

PreK classes — Child and Youth Services has three full-day Georgia Lottery-funded PreK classes on post for the upcoming school year. Each has a short waiting list.

These classes are for children who were 4 years old on or before Sept. 1, 2005, and live in the state of Georgia.

Pre-registration is from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. through April 15 at Building 359.

For more information, call 545-2079.

Book signing — AAFES will conduct a book signing from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. Saturday with Ronald W. Johnson, author of Honduras to Haiti: Five Years in the Life of a Special Forces Sergeant.

Copies of the book will be available for $12.45.

CPR Saturday — The American Red Cross will offer CPR Saturday, certification in adult, child and infant CPR, Saturday.

There are three sessions to choose from: 9 to 11 a.m., 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. and 1 to 3 p.m.

The sessions are free. Classes will be in Building 2626, Soldiers' Plaza.

For more information and to register, call 545-5194.

OSC scholarship — The Officers' Spouses' Club is offering scholarships for traditional and continuing education students who are family members of active duty or retired Soldiers.

Applications must be postmarked by Saturday. Guidelines are available at the OSC Thrift Shop, Bit of Benning, Sayers Library and area high school guidance counselor's offices.

To receive an application by e-mail, send a request to hhallows@earthlink.net.

For more information, call Heather Hallows at 687-2662.

Red Cross classes — The American Red Cross will offer the following classes:

• Lifeguard training: 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Saturday and Sunday, March 26-27; $125 with ID card; Briant Wells pool, ARC office.

• Baby-sitting training: 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. March 26; $32; ARC Building.

All attendees must register and pay in advance. For more information, call 545-5194.

Blood drive — There will be a blood drive from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. Thursday at Building 2626, the American Red Cross office.

For more information, call Lane Brown at 317-3529 ext. 25.

New tax center hours — The Fort Benning Tax Center is now open the following hours: 8:30 a.m. to 7 p.m. Monday through Friday.

The tax center will also be open from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. March 19 and April 2.

The tax center is located in Building 1678, Ingersoll Street, across from the Wynnsong movie theater.

For more information, call 545-4267.

Reclamation sale — There will be a reclamation sale from 8 a.m. to noon April 1 at 224A Upton Ave.

Cash is the only form of payment accepted. For more information, call 545-1104.

Bluegrass Express Tour — The Martha White Bluegrass Express Tour is headed to Fort Benning. Rhonda Vincent and The Rage will perform at 6 p.m. April 1 on the lawn of Riverside.

Admission is free and open to the public. Bring lawn chairs and blankets; no coolers or pets.

For more information, call 545-8031.

Passover Seder — The Regimental Chapel on Sand Hill will celebrate the Passover Seder from 6 to 9 p.m. April 23.

Sign up by April 15 with your unit chaplain.

For more information, call Chaplain (Maj.) Jose Resto at 544-9496.

Red Cross volunteer positions — The American Red Cross has the following volunteer positions available: station chairman, chairman of volunteers, records chairman, hospital volunteer coordinator, office assistant, shuttle drivers and others at Martin Army Community Hospital.

Days and times are negotiable.

For more information, call 545-5194 or stop by Building 2626 in Soldiers' Plaza.

Resident survey — Family Housing residents will receive an official Army resident survey in the mail this month.

This survey is an opportunity to provide honest feedback on current housing conditions. Information from this survey will be invaluable in the future as the Residential Communities Initiative developer begins to make important changes to the housing inventory.

Residents are asked to complete the survey and return it in the self-addressed envelope.

Spouse Support Group — The Chaplain Family Life Center offers a spouse support group for spouses of deployed Soldiers, from 6 to 8 p.m. Thursdays.

The support group has changed locations due to the response. The group will now meet at the Sightseeing Road Chapel. Child care will be provided. Pre-registration is required.

For information or registration, call 545-9014.

Women's Conference — The 2005 Women's Conference will be from 7:45 a.m. to 3 p.m. April 27 at the Officers' Club.

The goal of the conference is to bring the women of the Fort Benning community together, show appreciation for the sacrifices an Army wife makes and to provide an arena for military wives to learn, grow and have fun.

Registration fees are $10 for ranks E-1 through E-4 and $15 for ranks E-5 and up.

There will be one-hour workshops, a guest speaker, door prizes, breakfast and lunch.

Free child care is available at Tot Town if registered by March 25.

For more information, call Michelle Furney at 689-6537.

What is head and neck cancer?

Dr. Christine Gourin
MCG Health System

Head and neck cancers are small, but can be devastating. According to the Yul Brynner Head and Neck Cancer Foundation, these types of cancers account for 3 percent of all cancers in the U.S., and an estimated 45,000 men and women developed head and neck cancer in 2004.

Particularly in the South, head and neck cancers originating in the lining of the mouth and throat are of particular concern because there is a known link between the development of head and neck cancer and the use of tobacco products (including smokeless tobacco) and alcohol.

Eighty-five percent of all head and neck cancers can be attributed to tobacco, and the additional use of alcohol increases risk. Men, African-Americans and those older than 50 are also at greater risk. It is vitally important that those at risk educate themselves about this form of cancer and receive regular early screenings.

What is head and neck cancer?

Head and neck cancers are those that arise in certain structures of the head and neck, including the mouth or oral cavity, the salivary glands, the sinuses and nasal cavity, the pharynx and larynx (structures in the neck), lymph nodes in the neck, the thyroid gland and skin cancers. Brain tumors and eye cancers are usually not considered to be head and neck cancers.

What are symptoms?

According to the National Cancer Institute, symptoms of head and neck cancers may include difficulty swallowing, a change or hoarseness in the voice, a sore throat that does not go away and a lump or sore throat that does not heal. Other symptoms specific to certain areas of the head and neck include:

• Oral cavity: A white or red patch on the gums, tongue or in the mouth; swelling along the jaw; and unusual bleeding or pain in the mouth.

• Sinuses and nasal cavity: Chronic sinus infections or blockages that do not respond to treatment; nosebleeds; frequent headaches; swelling or other problems with the eyes; and pain in the upper teeth.

• Salivary glands: Swelling under the chin or around the jawbone; numbness or paralysis in the facial muscles; and pain in the face, chin or neck that does not go away.

• Pharynx and larynx: Ringing or pain in the ears; pain when swallowing; trouble hearing, breathing or speaking; and frequent headaches.

• Neck cancer: Pain in the neck or throat that does not go away.

How do you diagnose head and neck cancers?

It is important that those at risk for head and neck cancers be screened early. Screenings include an actual physical examination in which a physician visually inspects the mouth, nasal cavities, neck, throat and tongue using a small mirror and lights. The physician will also feel for lumps along the neck, jaw, cheeks, gumline and along the lips. More intensive screening tools include endoscopy, X-rays, CT scans, MRI scans and biopsies.

Check with your local hospitals or clinics to see if they offer free physical screenings during Oral, Head and Neck Cancer Awareness Week, April 11 to 17.

Remember, it's never to early to diagnose cancer. If you are at risk, take steps now to help ensure your good health down the road.

Hospital offers class for OTC meds

Terry Beckwith
MEDDAC Public Affairs Office

We are in that transition time of the year — not quite winter, not quite spring. Everyone around you is sniffing and coughing.

Hopefully you were one of the smart ones who got a flu shot this year. If you are feeling a little under the weather, there is hope for you and your family.

The MEDDAC team came up with a little family helper for their patients.
Pharmacy and Community Health nursing staff developed a one-hour class for Tricare-eligible staff members and patients.

"We would rather assist our patients than have them wait in the Emergency Room for minor cold or flu symptoms, so the pharmacy staff came up with the Self Care Class for patients," said Lt. Col. Dave Andersen, chief, Pharmacy Services.

"We are offering selected over-the-counter medications for all patients who attend the class and obtain their self care card."

The program is open to all permanent party active duty, their family members ages 18 and older, retirees and the eligible family members of retirees.

"It's a very simple process," said Dr. Cathy Dement, clinical pharmacist. "Patients sign up and attend the class, where an overview of over-the-counter medicines is given. Of course, if the symptoms continue past a week, we will encourage patients to schedule an appointment with their primary care manager."

The class takes about an hour and is given at Martin Army Community Hospital's Baugh Conference Room.

There is another step in the self care concept.

"Self care intervention can save patients time, aggravation, suffering and money," said Patrice Cartwright, Community Health nurse.

"By doing a self assessment, many minor ailments like headaches, upper respiratory problems, gastrointestinal and women's health issues can be resolved with over-the-counter medications. We are happy to offer this service to our patients along with other programs like smoking cessation, to name one."

So how do you become a card holder? Simply call the pharmacy at 544-4666 and schedule your class date.

Agency plans to increase parking fee

Public hearing set for March 31 in DNR boardroom

Georgia Department of Natural Resources

ATLANTA — To help generate funds lost to state budget cuts, the Georgia Department of Natural Resources is recommending a parking fee increase at state parks.

If approved by the DNR board, the daily parking fee will increase from $2 to $3 and the annual pass will increase from $25 to $30.

The only exception is Tallulah Gorge State Park with a $4 daily parking fee that will not increase.

The proposal was announced at a DNR board meeting and a public hearing is scheduled for 10 a.m. on March 31 in the DNR boardroom.

Parking fees for family size vehicles have not been raised since their inception in 1992 when they generated $1.3 million. The forecast for 2005 is $2.23 million.

ParkPass funds are returned directly back to Georgia's 63 state parks and historic sites for maintenance and construction projects. Recently, fees were used to renovate campgrounds at Magnolia Springs, Fort Yargo, Mistletoe and Crooked River state parks; renovate cottages at Tugaloo State Park; renovate the lodge lobby at Amicalola Falls State Park and update exhibits at New Echota Historic Site.

ParkPass revenues have also been used to buy playground equipment, grills, historic site exhibits, trail signage, beach sand, landscaping, bear-proof trash cans and other improvements.

Historically, Wednesdays have been "free days" when visitors could skip paying the daily parking fee.

The proposed rule changes would also give the DNR authority to halt free Wednesdays at parks where the natural, historic or cultural resources are being negatively impacted by overuse.

Officials expect this to affect only a few parks that are often filled to capacity on Wednesdays.

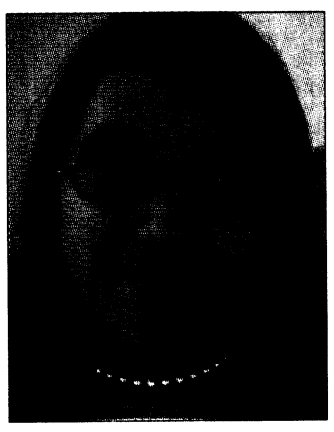
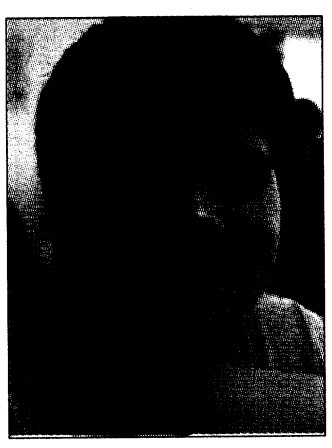
Fort Benning youth in the news

What was the best or worst gift you ever received?



Anthony Montgomery

"My best gift ever was when my daddy came home from Iraq. All the anxiety and worry disappeared the minute I laid eyes on him. He's the best dad in the world, and I know his job is important. He isn't just fighting for my freedom, he's fighting for other people's freedom. I wish he could be home forever."



Brittany Czekalski

"The best present I ever got was a lime green teddy bear from my boyfriend for Valentine's Day. It's special because he's special."

Kiana Loeak

"The worst present was a practical joke from my friend's dad. My family was at their house for Thanksgiving, and I told them I liked their rolls. Those rolls were really good. Guess what I got for Christmas? He wrapped up a roll. It wasn't one left over from Thanksgiving — that would be too funny. No, it was a regular, fresh roll."

Ian Walker

"When I was little, my dad introduced me to the Eagles, and I always wanted to play like them. My parents got me a guitar about three years ago. That was my favorite gift. I started taking lessons about six weeks ago. I haven't learned to play Hotel California yet, but I'm working on it."

RCI: Solicits residents suggestions

RCI kicked-off a housing analysis March 14 to determine the local market's ability to provide housing for Soldiers and families. That six-month study will determine the final number of RCI units.

Starting this month, RCI will mail surveys to Family Housing residents, who should complete the survey as soon as possible.

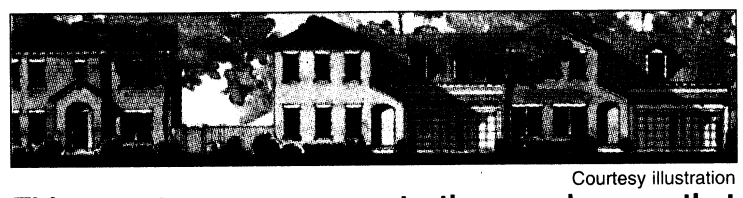
"It's a pretty extensive survey," Smith said, "and really important. It will tell us what residents want to see in the housing areas."

Smith said the RCI team met with several focus groups, whose members looked at the proposed plans and gave suggestions to improve the designs.

"The specifications are out on the street now for pricing construction costs," Smith said. The project will be $630 million of new construction.

Chris Hirst, vice president of construction for Clark Pinnacle, the firm contracted to build and manage the housing, said he's receiving proposals every day from companies that want to work on the project.

The houses, he said, will be wired for state-of-the-art phone, cable and Internet. They will have at least three bedrooms and two bathrooms. The smallest houses will average 1,900 heated square feet.



Other features include solid-surface countertops, fenced patios, and two-car garages. Each house will also have two off-street parking spaces.

Many of the Clark Pinnacle team are former military, Hirst said.

"We take our job seriously," he said. "We're not only building houses, but building homes for Soldiers and families."

Houses will be single-family or duplexes with sidewalks on both sides of the streets.

The plans also include six new pools and four clubhouses for post residents.

DARE: Officers advocate for kids

what it's all about."

Spc. Blake Nuss replaced Mitchell at the middle school this year. The father of a 4-year-old boy spent a year in Iraq, a fact that helps him relate to Faith students. Recently, when a student's father was killed in Iraq, the students turned to Nuss with their fears.

"Usually they ask basic questions, like what kind of packages they can send," he said. "But after that, the whole school was really sad, the students, the teachers — everybody. I just tried to say what I could say to make them feel better, but I didn't lie about it — I didn't say it wasn't dangerous, because they're old enough to know better and they can tell if you're not totally honest."

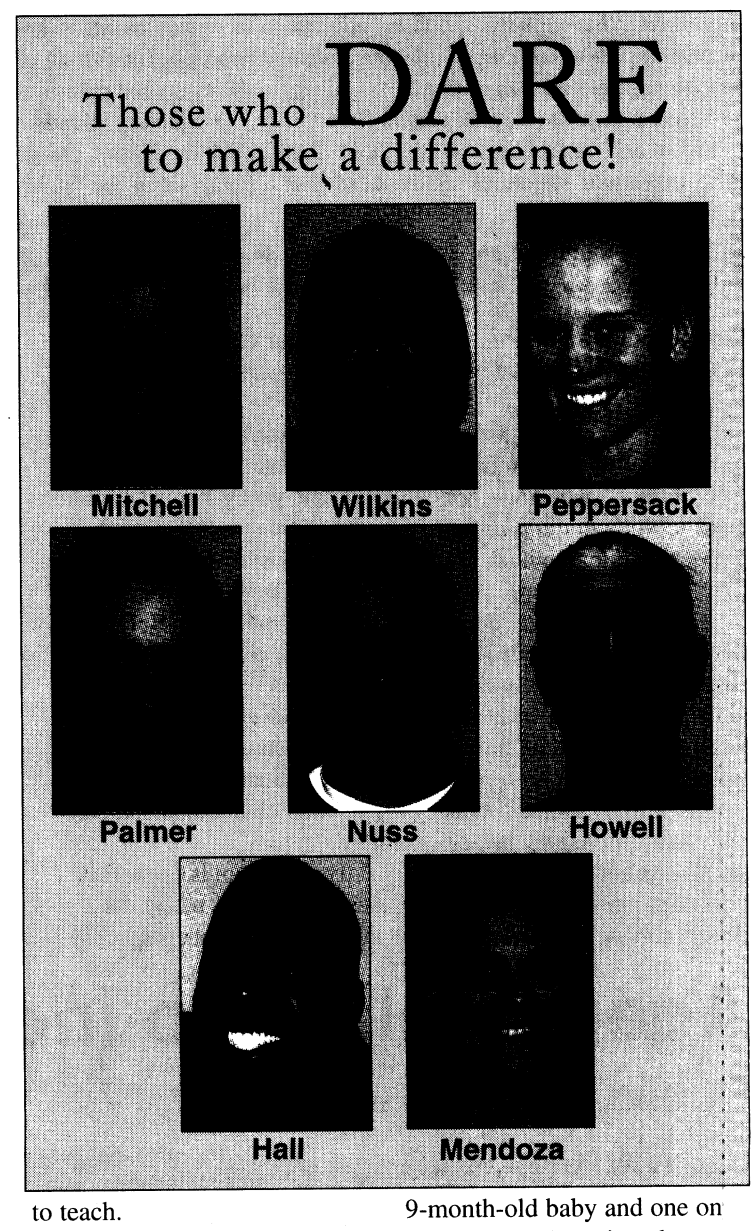
Like all the resource officers, Nuss teaches DARE, a national program founded by the Los Angeles Police Department in 1986 to educate students on the dangers of drug abuse. At Fort Benning, the 10-week course is taught to fifth-, seventh- and eighth-graders, though parts of the curriculum are adapted for others grades.

Nuss' believes his candor pays off when he's teaching DARE. He recently asked how many of the students have seen someone smoking marijuana, and more than half the class raised their hands.

"I think part of our job is to educate parents and teachers," he said. "They need to keep an open and running dialogue with their kids. They're so much smarter than we give them credit."

Though he's trained to detect drug or gang-related behavior, Nuss doesn't see himself as a disciplinarian.

"That's not my job, unless the law has actually been broken. But the principals do rely on me when a student has a problem, because sometimes just talking to an MP helps," said Nuss, who has documented only three cases of physical violence — fist fights — this year. Discipline problems are down 60 percent at the school since the program started two years ago.



"These kids are not as bad about teasing and bullying as you'd find somewhere else," he said. "I think it's because they're used to moving around and meeting different people and seeing different cultures. They accept differences better. As a whole, I think they're better disciplined."

Meet the other resource officers:

• Spc. Regina Howell believes Fort Benning teachers are supportive and creative when dealing with Soldiers' children.

"There's such a coming together at a time like this," said Howell, who works at White Elementary. "I think our job is also to be an advocate for these kids, but the teachers and counselors really stay in tune with what's going on with the kids. We all work together."

• Working at McBride Elementary has only reaffirmed what Spc. Colleen Peppersack knew two years ago when she joined the Army — she wants to teach.

• Spc. Jakara Hall enjoys his job at Stowers Elementary, but it's only deepened his desire to work with troubled children. He plans to work in a juvenile detention facility when he leaves the Army.

"I think I can make a bigger difference," he said. "I want to be a positive role model."

• Spc. Mary Mendoza has a 9-month-old baby and one on the way. She's assigned to Wilson Elementary.

• Spc. Joshua Palmer spent a year in Iraq before serving as Dexter Elementary School's resource officer. He hopes The Bayonet readers will better understand the role of resource officers in post schools. And he hopes they'll slow down in school zones.

Explore religion, spirituality

Chaplain (Lt. Col.) Ronald Smith
USAIC Chaplains Office

REFLECTIONS

In personal and professional arenas, we learn that certain subjects are taboo. I am reminded of what my own parents said to me as a youngster — you do not talk about politics or religion.

These subjects will either silence or incite people to share their unmitigated opinion. The vast importance of these two subjects is often ignored, because we fear rebuttal. To stay silent is safer.

At the risk of closing down thoughts or dialogue, I would like to spotlight a few questions regarding spirituality.

For many of us, spirituality is a journey that takes us through various terrains, some easy and others demanding. I think we all care about deeper matters, like "Why am I here?" "Why do I exist?" and "What's it all about?"

Despite opinions that vary from approval to disdain, the vast majority of Americans believe in God or a higher power.

Questions regarding our religious and spiritual beliefs often circle our heads like fog over a river. We face life certain and uncertain about some of the big questions.

Smith

People seek answers in many different ways, including spirituality manifested as religion.

To define spirituality and religion in one article limits me to some succinct answers.

Like stepping into a stark room, with none of the decorations we like to see. Most of the rooms of our lives are filled with things we like, or can afford.

Spirituality can be decorative or drab. Our comfort level of religion varies greatly. To be spiritually religious could cause us great pain if we do not allow ourselves to see the benefits.

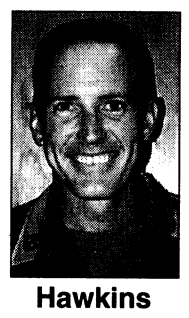
Since antiquity, the study of spirituality has evolved along a number of pathways.

Each new era is born from advanced experience and knowledge.

What is beyond spirituality today may be more accepted as part of tomorrow's practice of spirituality.

Turn focus to who you are

Chaplain (Maj.) Jeffrey Hawkins
Chaplain Family Life Center



"How do you do?" she asked, as I took the seat next to her on the flight from Fort Lewis to Fort Benning.

"Fine, thanks!" I replied.

"What is it you do?" she asked.

This is always a tough one. You see, once the cat's out of the bag and I let on that God and I are personal friends, i.e., I'm a minister, the conversation does a nosedive.

Something about being stuck next to a minister on a cross-country flight usually leads people to smile uncomfortably and hide their copy of Cosmo or Maxim or involuntarily regurgitate their church attendance history for the last 48 months.

Hawkins

Neither, I might add, is very comfortable for me, either.

That's why I've taken up a bit of a game the last several times I've flown. I don't lie — that would be against Army values and a few biblical ones, too.

But I phrase things very carefully in a way that provides a much better shot at the conversation making it off the ground as opposed to crashing before we taxi.

It goes something like this: "How do you do?" she asked.

"Fine, thanks!"

"So what is it that you do?" she asked.

"Me, oh, well, I'm ... I'm into investments (eternal).

"Really?" she said. "I could use a lot of help with mine — who do you work for?"

"Well," I said, "I work for my father's (heavenly) firm — he's been in the business ... well, since forever."

After a little chit-chat around the topic at hand, I mention that I'm actually a chaplain.

Interestingly, on a trip this weekend, she had no idea what a chaplain was.

And we had a very meaningful conversation. I told her what I do for a living is help people answer the far more important question of "who they are."

Today, I encourage you to focus less on what you do and more on who you are and who you want to be.

For more help or encouragement, call the Family Life Center at 545-1760 or introduce yourself to me at CrossRoads Contemporary Chapel at 11 a.m. Sundays on Kelley Hill.

Bench notes

Erin Nash

• March Madness
The NCAA Tournament starts today. I'm not a huge basketball fan, but this is college sports at its best, and I'll definitely be following the games, looking for great plays and hopefully some last-minute shots to win.

• Johnson prevails
Jimmie Johnson won the UAW-DaimlerChrysler 400 in Las Vegas March 13. Johnson edged out local boys Kyle and Kurt Busch. Rookie Kyle finished second. Big brother Kurt said no more advice — obviously he doesn't need it, Kurt, if he edged you out.

Earnhardt Jr. has fallen to 27th in the standings, after a disastrous clip of Brian Vickers' car in the 12th lap. Junior, stop driving like Tony Stewart. Only he can get away with stuff like that.

• Warm up the bats
The wait is almost over. Major league baseball swings into it's regular season April 3 with the Boston Red Sox at the New York Yankees. Most other teams start their regular season play that week.

The curse is gone — can the Sox win another in the next 86 years? Granted, I can die happy now, but future generations need to find out what it's like to watch it live.

• What to watch
NASCAR — Golden Corral 500 from Atlanta Motor Speedway, 12:30 p.m. Sunday on FOX. Seriously, Oprah, how about some tickets?

College basketball — Hmm, maybe some playoff games? Check local listings for teams and times.

Out of reach

Tawny Archibald Campbell

Timothy Henry, MEDDAC, takes a shot while Vincent Hall and Yong Kim, A Company, 14th Combat Support Hospital, defend. MEDDAC beat A Co., 57-31, Tuesday at Audie Murphy Gym.

Game decided within first few minutes of play

Tawny Archibald Campbell

With five minutes left in the first half, MEDDAC had already secured a 20-point lead over A Company, 14th Combat Support Hospital, and they weren't letting up.

MEDDAC would continue to run up the score shutting A Co. out, 57-31, Tuesday at Audie Murphy Fitness Center.

"We came out in a zone the first half and our guard was quicker than theirs, so we had the opportunity to penetrate to the hoop," said Willie Williams, MEDDAC. "We dished off or made the easy shots."

Williams said his team's strategy was to identify any outside shooters and limit shots inside the three-point line.

"On offense they let us get a couple of easy shots," he said. "They came out slow and lazy. Basically they handed the ball to me and I had the first six baskets of the game."

Jeremy Runyon, A Co., agreed that the first two minutes of the game they came out flat and didn't play aggressive.

"We had no energy," he said. "They went up on a nine to zero run in the beginning of the game. The fire first eight minutes we didn't even show up on the court. It was like no body came to play. Once we got behind in the first of the game, it was downhill from there."

By halftime, MEDDAC still had a dominant lead, 34-13.

A Co. switched to a man-to-man defense after the half, and powered back a little. Anthony Clark hit a short jumper with 15:05 on the clock and broke the 20-point barrier. He was followed two minutes later by Christopher Harris, who scored from the top of the key to bring A Co. within 15 points.

"The man-to-man was because the zone was not working," Runyon said. "This way we would get a body up on the players and be more aggressive, but you can't play man the whole game."

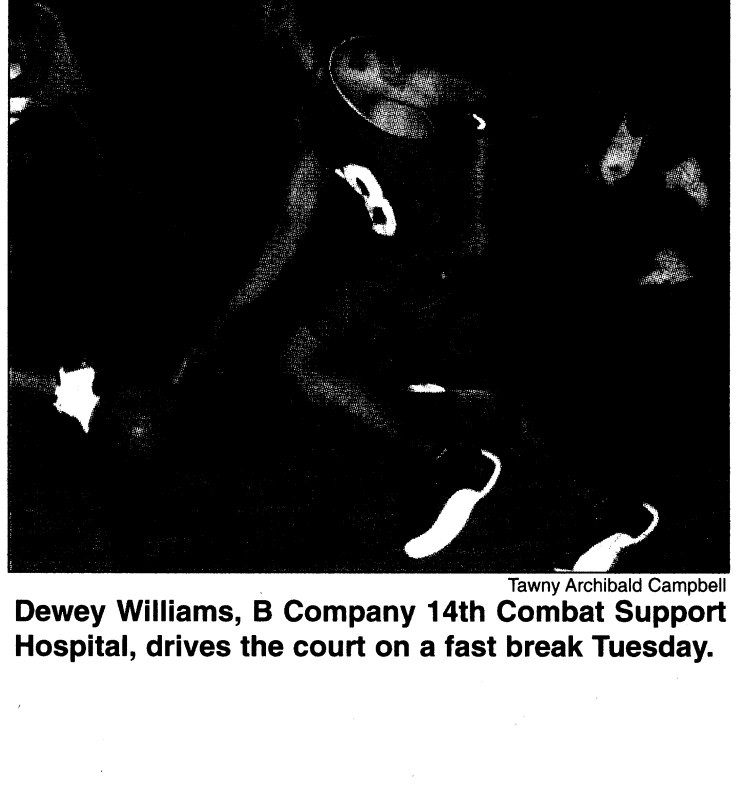
A Company, 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment, overcame a 10-point deficit to squeak past B Company, 14th Combat Support Hospital, 42-40 in basketball action Tuesday at Audie Murphy Fitness Center.

Just minutes into the first half, B Co. sprinted out to an early 10-1 lead over A Co., and by the half, B Co. held a 17-13 lead.

"The first half we played lethargic and didn't get the shots off, but we kept the defense up," said Thomas Watson, coach for A Co. "They had the lead, and I gave the team a pep talk and we switched to a two-three zone to keep up the motivation and we watched for the open passes. We just kept pushing the ball and taking it to the hole."



With 6:01 on the board, the lead had swapped hands and the score was 34-27, A Co.

Robert Tellier, A Co., hit a jumper inside the three-point line to give A Co. a nine-point lead.

Andre Lockell, B Co. matched the shot with one of his own followed by a swisher by Michael Commock, A Co. The points see-sawed back and forth, being matched shot for shot when B Co. laid it on thick and started to inch closer.

"The 1/29th came out and played with a lot of heart, and

1LT wins Army arms match

Paula J. Randall Pagán
U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit

The assistant state marksmanship coordinator for the New York National Guard won Day One and Day Two of the All-Army Small Arms Championship.

Army National Guardsman 1st Lt. Rodney W. Richmond beat 147 other Soldiers to win the Chief of Staff of the Army Rifle Match March 15 with a score of 217 points out of a possible 250 points.

He also won the March 14 Secretary of the Army Rifle Match with a score of 216 points.

Staff Sgt. Leslie D. Lewis of the Army Reserve Small Arms Readiness Group took second place March 15 with a score of 216 points.

Staff Sgt. Jared Van Aalst of Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 3rd Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment, came in third with 210 points.

Van Aalst also took second place, only one point behind Richmond, in the March 14 match.

Maj. Rhonda L. Bright of the Army Reserve Small Arms Readiness Group finished third in the Open Category and was the highest female finisher.

In the Novice Category March 15, the winner was by Sgt. Joel S. Micholick of Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 3rd Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment, with a score of 197 points.

He was followed in second place by Sgt. Richard F. Hartley of the Army Reserve 321st Engineer Battalion with 196 points, and Sgt. 1st Class Kevin W. Bittenbender of the Pennsylvania National Guard with 192.

March 14, the Novice winner was Pfc. Lee L. Vampola of Company B, 3rd Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment, with a score of 208 points.

Micholick took second place with 206 points.

Sgt. Christopher D. McGuire of the Wyoming National Guard came in third with 189 points.

The U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit is hosting the All-Army Small Arms Championships with the U.S. Army Infantry Center through March 24.

Horses in forces to run courses

Poplar Place Farm

More than 375 horses and riders are coming to the Poplar Place Farm Horse Trials March 25 through 27.

The horse show times are 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. The schedule of events is: Friday — dressage; Saturday and Sunday — cross country and show jumping.

The riders include four of the five Olympic riders who competed on the 2004 U.S. Olympic Team in Athens, Greece. The 2000 Olympic Gold Medal Individual winner, David O'Connor, and his wife Karen O'Connor, who has competed on several United States Olympic teams, will be competing in the event as well.

Admission costs are $10 per vehicle for a one day pass, and $15 per vehicle for the entire weekend.

The admission gate proceeds will benefit the American Cancer Society. This project is being sponsored by the AFLAC Relay For Life team.

Tickets will be sold at the horse show, but are available in advance.

For more information, call 563-3746.

Poplar Place Farm is located on Highway 27, 14 miles north of Lowe's.

MEDDAC: Pulls through

With less than six minutes left in the game, A Co. began to slow down and MEDDAC took advantage of their winded state.

James Stubbs, MEDDAC, hit a sideline jumper followed by teammate Chris Moffett who drove the ball down the middle of the key for two more.

Stubbs added a three pointer with 2:13 on the clock followed up by a hook shot by Moffett. A Co. was only able to add two points to MEDDAC's eight-point run.

"It surprised some of our guys when they jumped out with the man , defense," Williams said.

He talked about their strategy and the unexpected late-game charge that took the win.

"It took a while for us to identify their weak players. When we identified the weak guard we isolated him and went man on him. But after the first half ended with us up twenty points, we didn't see them coming back (to win)."

High scorers in the game included Williams with 21, Moffett with 15 and Clark with nine.

29th: Wins with last shot

both teams showed great tenacity on both ends of the court," said Jarvis Smith, B Co. coach. "At first it looked like they were a sleeper.

"We had perimeter shooters and made big shots, then they got some low post shots and it put them back in the game.

"The last three-minutes we added energy and realized time was not on our side."

B Co. changed from a zone to a man defense and the move paid off.

Lockell hit a three-pointer followed by teammates Brian Morrison, with a jumper, and Dewey Williams with a breakaway lay-up to make the score 40-38, and give B Co. hope that they could still pull out a win.

Down by only two points, with only 0:13 on the clock, both teams moved to a full-court press. Nick Rose, A Co., made a lay-up when his team broke out of the press to tie the game.

B Co. had possession with 0:08 on the clock when Morrison banked in a shot to bring them to 42-40 when the buzzer sounded.

"That was a great game," Smith said. "Those are the kind you like. What really cost us was we missed the easy shots. This game would have been a battle whether se had jumped out to that lead or not. It was a great game."

Leading scorers were Tellier and Rose, each with 11 for A Co., and Lockell and Tommy Skanes each with 12 for B Co.

Upper-body strength key to functionality

Tawny Archibald Campbell
Bayonet staff

Upper-body strength is essential for Soldiers deployed in support of the Global War on Terrorism, wearing body armor and load bearing equipment that weighs nearly 70 pounds.

With Soldiers being placed in physically demanding combat situations, there is a need for them to become more prepared, realizing the PT they do converts to functionality in the field.

The balance of upper-body strength and functionality is what the Army has been trying to achieve for years, said Maj. Shawn Scott, physical therapist with the Physical Fitness School.

For instance, the function of the push-up is to help Soldiers in a prone position, push off the

A total of 100 trees on Fort Benning will be removed. Removal began in February and will continue through April. It takes one to two days to remove each tree.

Officials stress safety

Spc. Nikki St. Amant
Bayonet staff

After a Soldier and his wife were killed while riding a motorcycle two weeks ago, post officials are emphasizing the importance of adherence to safety and education requirements for motorcycle enthusiasts.

Army and post regulations require:

- all persons operating a motorcycle on post to carry certification of completion of the post motorcycle operator's course.
- all motorcycle operators and passengers to wear the following safety gear: Department of Transportation-approved helmet, eye protection, long-sleeved shirt or jacket, long pants, over-the-ankle shoes, full-fingered gloves and a high-visibility reflector vest at all times.

Military personnel found operating a motorcycle on post without meeting the requirements will have their motorcycles impounded immediately. Civilians not meeting requirements will be denied entrance to the installation.

The Motorcycle Safety Association offers the following safety tips:

- Helmets are the most important safety measure. Riders wearing helmets are three times more likely to survive head injuries.

Motorcycle accident kills Soldier, wife March 13

Spc. Eliamar Castañon
Assistant editor

A CONUS Replacement Center Soldier and his wife died in a motorcycle accident March 13 in Brundidge, Ala.

Sgt. Alto Dansby, 40, and his wife, Cheryl, 48, were traveling by motorcycle in a residential area approximately 95 miles from Fort Benning when a sports utility vehicle backed out of a private driveway and did not notice the on-coming motorcycle, said Lt. Col. Gary Spry, commanding officer at the CRC.

The motorcycle struck the SUV, causing serious injuries to both motorcycle riders. Both were taken to hospitals in Troy and Dothan, Ala. They died of multiple trauma March 13.

"He enjoyed life, never complained and was a Soldier who never gave me any problems," said Master Sgt. Kenneth Lee, Dansby's friend and NCOIC. "He would have a cup of coffee every morning and then come to me and ask, 'What's on the menu for today, boss?' He would do anything he was told to do, no questions asked."

Dansby and Lee were two of 30 Soldiers from the 900th Ordnance Company (Maintenance), who had volunteered to come to Fort Benning to

ITB drill sergeants die in car crash

Annette Fournier
Bayonet staff

Two senior drill sergeants died in a car accident March 5 on Riverchase Drive in Russell County, Ala.

Sgt. 1st Class John Tucker was driving with passenger Master Sgt. William Balinski when Tucker lost control of the vehicle. The car hit a bridge pylon and caught fire upon impact, according to Phenix City Police. Witnesses to the accident tried to pull them out of the vehicle, but the fire was too hot for them to get close enough to help.

Tucker and Balinski worked together as trainers at the Infantry Training Brigade's 1st Battalion, 329th Infantry Regiment. Both men were in a reserve unit in Michigan, and reported to duty at Fort Benning when they were activated May 6, 2004.

Both men were dedicated NCOs who were an asset to their unit, said Company Commander Capt. William Similo. Like many of the personnel who

SLOW DOWN

Think of your mother

Bridgett Siter
Bayonet staff

I live a mile from the speedway, a quarter-mile stretch of Veterans Parkway that's popular with local street racers. Some nights I lie awake listening to the engines rev and the tires squeal, and I wonder how long before I hear the crunch of metal against metal or metal against concrete.

At first it was a minor nuisance, this noise. But I'm taking it much more seriously after the recent spate of accidents attributed to street racing. Particularly the one that claimed the life of a friend's son. He was my son's age.

"You can imagine what I'm going through," his mother said, as we stood beside the casket.

No, I can't. I cannot conceive, cannot begin to comprehend the pain she's going through. The horror of her reality is more than the worst I can imagine. It hurts to think about, but I think about it. A lot. Every time I hear the squeal of tires.

My son travels that stretch of road frequently, often after dark. Of course, in his '71 Volkswagen van, Thomas can't reach the kind of speed one needs to qualify as a street racer. But neither could he get out of the way fast enough if he met one coming around a curve.

There are answers to this problem. Education, of course, is the pat answer, but it shouldn't be discounted. I dare say my son and a couple hundred of his peers took to heart the lessons they derived from the death of a very fine young man —slow down, don't think it can't happen to you, and think of the people who would rather die than see you dead. Think of your mother.

The other answer is stricter laws and more law enforcement. That, of course, is a finance problem — another story for another day.

As for me, I'm going another route. Literally. I'll take the long way home and instruct my son to do the same, rather than travel that dangerous section of road. That means I'll be shopping at different stores, eating at different restaurants and buying gas farther from home.

I'm not much of an activist, so I'm making these choices for practical reasons, as others will. But along the way, if shopkeepers and business owners, spurred by a drop in revenue, demand resolution (speed bumps? more traffic lights?) so much the better.

Stalled on the technological highway

Melissa House
Bayonet staff

Do you ever feel as if you're standing on the edge of the technological super highway just watching the cars whiz by?

I had one of those moments earlier this week.

One of the "computer doctors" came to our office to fix a problem with our e-mail.

Being the inquisitive reporter I am, I couldn't help but listen as he explained the new computer system and how it accounted for the trouble we were having.

So, the story goes like this — see if you can follow along.

Microsoft has come up with a new, hierarchical structure involving servers and domains. It's called an architecture and, within this architecture, the Army domain is now called an enterprise.

"Not to be confused with the starship Enterprise," our computer fixer quipped.

I did have to laugh, because I just had a feeling that was going to be one of the only parts of the story I could even relate to.

Then, the Armyship Enterprise, has a bunch of "forests" under it. Those forests, I think, are supposed to be each of the Army posts, or maybe the posts are the "containers," which was the term he used right after forests.

I decided it was time for a quip of my own — something smart about not being able to see the forest for the trees — which is just about how I felt at the moment — utterly confused.

At the lowest level, the printers, computers and users (we humans) are all called "objects," and the new system applies policies to each object every 90 minutes. The bottom line — this new system should save millions of dollars in computer and printer down time.

I guess that's good news for the Army, and it's probably good news for our computer expert. I'm sure it means less painful days on the job for him and a significant decrease in work backlog.

But then there's me. I'm the one who's stalled at the edge of that technological super-highway. I know just enough about to computers to make me dangerous. And, not only am I a danger on my home computer running Windows-based programs, but I'm also a danger at work, where I had to learn the ins and outs of Apple computers.

And just to illustrate how stalled I am, I've been hand feeding paper into a 1996 vintage laser printer because the USB ports on my home computer won't work. That means my high-speed 20-page per minute color printer/copier/scanner won't work. I've run disc doctors, disk defragmenters, disk cleanups and disc repair on the blasted thing, to no avail. And I've been hand-feeding the printer for nearly three months.

That's just sad.

Give me a pile of scrambled words and I'll give you a 500-word essay. Give me a list of animals, and I can tell you what the babies are called. But if you give me a computer with "issues," I'll be sunk.

I'm hoping the computer guy hires out. I have a few computer projects for him.

Preparation key in emergency

Lori Egan
Bayonet editor

This has been a test of the emergency broadcast system.

Every Saturday at noon, if you live on Fort Benning or in Columbus, you hear the test.

It's been around since the 60s when President Kennedy initiated the system to address the entire country in an emergency.

Later the Federal Communications Commission, Federal Emergency Management Agency and the National Weather Service expanded the system to be used for state and local emergencies, which is why we hear it Saturdays.

Perhaps I've become complacent about the Saturday test, because it took a small child to point out that there are different tones to the test — three to be exact.

During the two minute severe weather test, there is a voice message, which we've all heard, and then the first tone tested is the tornado warning.

My coworkers have asked me not to try to describe the sound of the tones used on Saturdays because of the noise.

But the first tone is an "alert tone" used for tornadoes, and it lasts for 60 seconds. The second tone, which is a thunderstorm warning, is a "wail tone." The test tone lasts only 15 seconds. The wail tone is broadcast when wind speeds are 55 mph or greater.

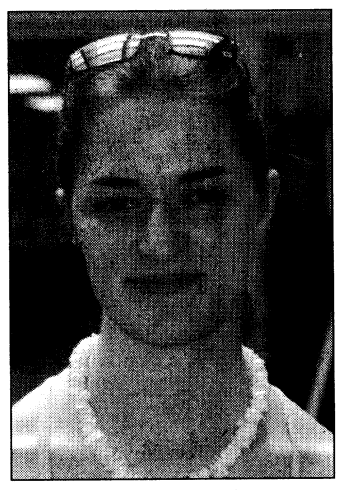
The last tone is the "all clear."

There are 48 locations in Columbus where the alert is broadcast and if you're outside, you should hear it. But you might not if you're inside or your hearing has been compromised by spending too much time on the firing range, which is probably why I didn't hear the severe weather alert Tuesday afternoon. (I was inside, and my hearing is shot.)

But I know what to do when the severe weather alert is sounded. No, it's not send the child outside to see what's going on (that only happened once; I was new to the area.)

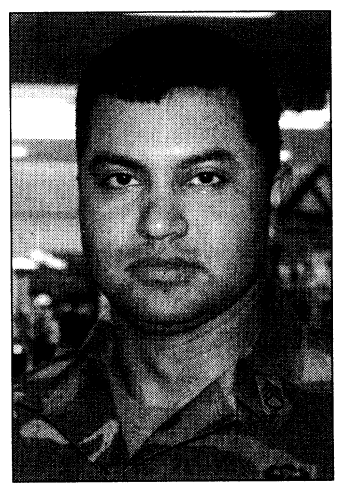
If there is a tornado warning, seek shelter immediately. Stay away from the windows. If you're in an office building, go to interior hallway on a lower floor if a basement or designated shelter area isn't available.

If you're at home, say cooking dinner on a Sunday night, once again, don't send the child outside to find out what the noise is. Instead, go to the basement if you have one. If not, go to an inside wall away from all windows and stay down. Halls, bathrooms and closets are good places for shelter.



If you live in a mobile home, go to the nearest community shelter or sturdy building.

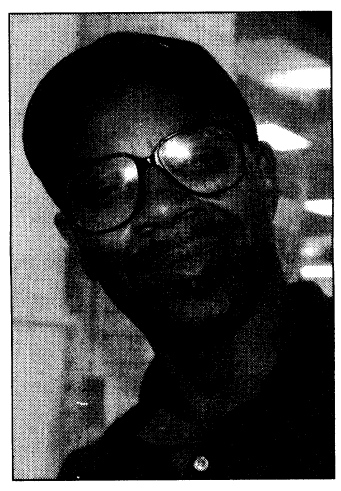
Disasters happen, and the Red Cross recommends having a basic disaster supply kit ready. It should include at least three gallons of water per person, canned food and can opener, first-aid kit and essential medications, clothing and bedding, battery-powered radio, flashlight and extra batteries, and special items. Keep important family documents in a waterproof, portable container.



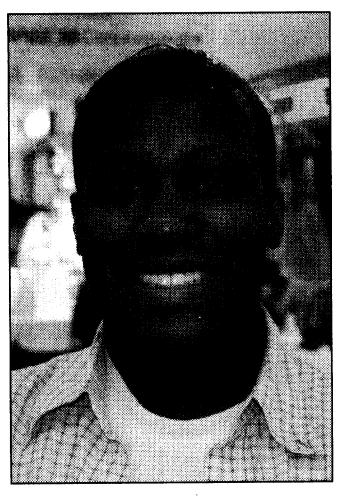
For more information about putting your family's disaster plan together, go to www.redcross.org or www.fema.gov.

VARIOUS VOICES

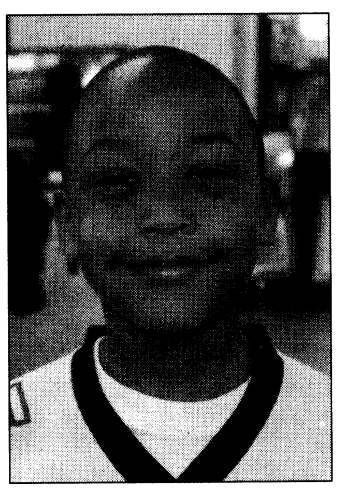
What are important safety tips for drivers?



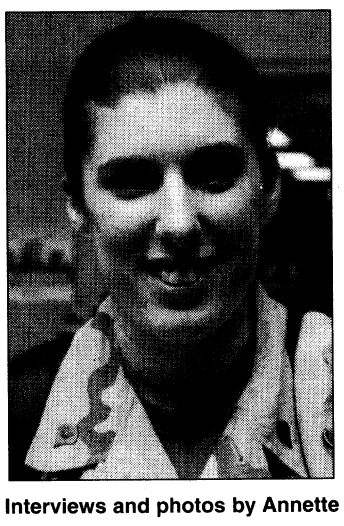
Angel Gaskins, family member — "You need to pay attention to the road and watch out for other drivers. People shouldn't drive and eat, especially messy stuff, because then you're thinking about your food and not the road."



Staff Sgt. Carlos Salazar, 1st Battalion (Airborne), 507th Parachute Infantry Regiment — "If you're taking a road trip, get enough rest the day before. Make sure you maintain your vehicle, like checking the brakes. Be safe, because you are responsible for your family and your Soldiers."



Jennifer Klein, family member — "I live in a wooded area, so I need to watch out for deer. And don't put on makeup while you drive. Don't swerve around on the road or speed. The most important thing is to pay attention to other drivers."



Huey Wright, AAFES employee — "It's important to watch speed. People go around sharp corners and don't slow down, or they switch lanes around curves. You may be in a hurry, but just leave a little earlier then you don't have to speed."

Spc. Alex Kinley, 110th Corps Support Battalion, Georgia National Guard — "Never drink and drive! Don't eat or talk on your cell phone while driving. Pull over if you have to do those things. Mostly just use common sense."

Jaylin Conner, 5, family member — "When you're in the car, you buckle your seat belt and lock your doors. The person driving is supposed to keep their eyes on the road because you want to be safe and not get hurt."

Spc. Jennifer Sheldon, 14th Detachment, 25th Infantry Division — "Do a good inspection of your vehicle before driving a long distance. Make sure you don't talk on your cell phone or eat while you're driving. You need to focus on the road."

Soldiers learn marksmanship in cutting-edge facility

Annette Fournier
Bayonet staff

Annette Fournier

ITB student, Pvt. David Fuchs, practices his aim with the rest of A Co., 2nd Bn., 54th Inf., in the EST 2000 facility at Sand Hill. The eight-range facility was officially opened March 24.

Fort Benning officially opened the Warrior Marksmanship Training Center March 24 at Sand Hill. The center has eight indoor training ranges, with room for 15 shooters on each range.

The Engagement Skills Trainer 2000 uses video simulations to help Infantry Training Brigade and Basic Combat Training Brigade Soldiers increase their accuracy and learn when deadly force is needed, without shooting a single live round.

The EST 2000 systems will improve marksmanship and help the Army save money on ammunition, said Fred Roberts, program action officer, Systems Division G3.

Roberts said Soldiers are showing a marked improvement the first time they go to a live fire range after practicing in the EST 2000 facility.

The weapons used in the system are real weapons that were modified to work with compressed air. The weapons are linked to a computer system via cords that make it communicate with the system. The system was engineered so the weapons make the sound of a gunshot and have 90 percent of the recoil, so Soldiers get the experience of firing without using live ammunition.

The system uses 11 different types of weapons specially configured for the system, with more on the way. So far, some of the the weapons configured for the system are the M-9, M-4, M-249, M-16, M-240, M-203, M-2, MK-19, M-1200 shotgun and the AT4.

On the range, Soldiers line up in front of three large screens, and shoot at a projected image. The computer detects where he aims and records his accuracy.

The screen can show either a range, so Soldiers practice basic marksmanship, or a scenario in which Soldiers decide if the situation requires deadly force.

The range scenes have a line of targets, and at the end of each set, a graph showing the Soldiers accuracy is displayed, along with dots that show where the firer's shots went. With this follow-up information, Soldiers see where they tend to miss shots, how much they are improving, and trainers can evaluate the progress of individuals.

In squad collective training, the squad leader trains Soldiers on critical tasks that are easier to train in the EST 2000 facility because of time or safety. Beyond the range practice, in shoot-don't shoot training, Soldiers use logic and reason to decide when to shoot by watching live-action scenarios.

Typical scenarios in the system include a bank robbery, a riot, and a hostile individual running toward a checkpoint. If a Soldier shoots before threatened, the scenario freezes and a giant message flashes across the screen: "Defend your actions," so they can figure out what they did wrong. After firing pre-emptively, Soldiers can learn from mistakes and improve through further practice.

Another type of scenario shows a scene with small figures jumping out and shooting at them. The Soldier tries to shoot the small moving figures. The targets run through various locations, like deserts, urban areas and woods. Right now the system has more than 517 video scenes and more are being added all the time, Roberts said.

For Soldiers who grew up playing video games, using the high-tech system seems natural.

"It's not complicated, and I like using the system because it helped me improve my shot," said Pvt. Jacob Saxer, 2nd Battalion, 54th Infantry. "The weapons feel realistic, but they have less kick. I think it's amazing."

The youngest Soldier in ITB, 17-year-old Pvt. Andrew Dressler, prefers the live-fire ranges, but sees the benefits of the EST 2000.

"I think every Soldier prefers to shoot the real thing, but it has helped my accuracy," he said. "The weapons (in EST 2000) are more sensitive so you can misfire easily, but I like that we get more range time."

worked with them, Similo had known both men for six years.

"Both of them would go out on a limb for Soldiers, and put extra work in whenever they could," he said. "It's a hard blow to lose them, and they'll be greatly missed."

Balinski enlisted in 1989. He participated in a combat jump into Panama during Operation Just Cause, and served in Kuwait and Saudi Arabia during the first Gulf War.

Balinski was promoted to master sergeant in September. He was a hardworking, dedicated NCO, always pushing his troops to do their best, Similo said.

"He ensured the standards were met. Soldiers thought he was tough, but afterward said they were glad he'd been their instructor because it made them better at their job."

Tucker enlisted in 1988 and served in Panama. He was a stickler for details and insisted upon the highest standards for Soldiers he trained and worked with, Similo said.

Soldiers who knew Balinski and Tucker have been calling the unit with condolences for the families. Both men's families live in Michigan.

"I know they both missed their families, but they were definitely proud to serve and knew their families supported them," Similo said.

Balinski leaves behind his wife Teresa and their daughter, 12, and son, 9. His funeral will be Saturday at noon, and burial will be at Saint Phillips Neri Cemetery in Columbus, Mich.

Tucker leaves behind his wife Bonnie, and their two sons, 12 and 5. Services are today at 11 a.m. at Mount Pleasant Cemetery in Wales, Mich.

Marksmanship competition provides training

Soldiers have to shoot well, DCG says

Paula J. Randall Pagán
USAMU Public Affairs Office

"Being able to shoot, being a marksman, is what being a Soldier is all about."

That's what Lt. Gen. Anthony R. Jones, deputy commanding general and chief of staff of the Army's Training and Doctrine Command, told nearly 200 Soldiers at the 2005 U.S. Army Small Arms Championships awards ceremony March 20.

Soldiers from across the country took part in the All-Army Pistol and Rifle Championships March 12 through 24. The U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit hosted the All-Army Small Arms Championships.

Rifle matches were shot from 200 to 500 yards. Pistol matches were fired under combat time standards at seven to 25 yards. One team match included a timed two-mile run with weapons and full combat gear. Long-range matches were fired at 600 to 1,000 yards. Competitors also attended rifle, pistol and long-range training classes.

Jones

"I know that now you're more confident marksmen and better Soldiers, and I ask that you take this training back to your units and share it. It's tremendously important," Jones told the competitors. "Go back and tell your leaders about the good training that the Army Marksmanship Unit and Fort Benning provide. I think there's none better."

USAMU Commander Lt. Col. David J. Liwanag said the experience gained in these matches translates into better trained and confident Soldiers, "ready to meet the challenges of the global war on terrorism."

After last year's All-Army Competition, competitors from Fort Benning's CONUS Replacement Center applied the training to their own unit training, Liwanag said, which resulted in a weapons qualification increase from 30 percent to 90 percent.

"The competition gives all competitors the opportunity to spend a week on the ranges fine-tuning the skills necessary for successful shooting," said USAMU's Spc. Sean P. Watson, who won the U.S. Army Small Arms Overall Individual Championship and the Service Pistol Individual Championship. "The pressure of competition keeps the shooters motivated and focused."

Staff Sgt. Jared N. van Aalst, 3rd Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment, won the Service Rifle Individual Championship. He said the value of the competition is the confidence it instills.

"In the All-Army competition, the firing is done from known distance ranges at more than 200 meters," he said.

"Most shooters don't have the confidence to shoot more than 200 meters."

Army to train sexual assault advocates

Eric Cramer
Army News Service

Army commanders were told this week to begin selecting advocates to help victims of sexual assault.

Unit Victims Advocates will ensure victims are aware of their rights and help them obtain services, said Lt. Col. Mary Dooley-Bernard, deputy director of Family Programs and Family Advocacy Program manager, U.S. Army Community and Family Support Center.

She said the UVAs are part of an Armywide effort to help with problems relating to sexual assault.

Since the Sexual Assault Action Plan was approved in August, the Army has been enacting policy training, education, incident response, victim services, investigations, and improving program.

Mobile training units will train 1,000 UVAs, selected by commanders. UVAs are a victims first line of response, Dooley-Bernard said, but victims can also talk to medical staff, chaplains and installation advocates.

"The victim can choose which avenue to use," she said. "We want to empower the victim."

The Army will begin placing Special Assault Response Coordinators to provide oversight.

There will be one full-time SARC at each of the 15 major power projection platforms and three at selected power support platforms. The Community and Family Support Center is training domestic violence advocates to respond to sexual assault and at smaller installations, victim advocate coordinators will serve as SARCs.

In garrisons, the SARCs will be civilian contractors, and will be military personnel at the brigade and higher levels in deployed units.

"We're working to make it clear that the Army doesn't tolerate sexual assault," Dooley-Bernard said. We have to make certain we are training our Soldiers that sexual assault is wrong."

Bush notes Operation Iraqi Freedom's accomplishments

Terry Lukach
American Forces Press Service

WASHINGTON — Two years ago, U.S. and coalition forces disarmed a brutal regime, freed the Iraqi people and defended the world from a grave danger, President Bush said during in his weekly radio address.

"Before coalition forces arrived, Iraq was ruled by a dictatorship that murdered its own citizens, threatened its neighbors and defied the world," the president said. "We knew of Saddam Hussein's record of aggression and support for terror. We knew of his long history of pursuing, even using, weapons of mass destruction. Because we acted, Iraq's government is no longer a threat to the world or its own people."

Bush praised the courage and determination of the Iraqi people in taking charge of their own destiny. "In January," he said, "over eight million Iraqis defied the car bombers and assassins to vote in free elections."

This week, he noted, Iraq's Transitional National Assembly convened for the first time, and will draft "a new constitution for a free and democratic Iraq."

The new constitution will be presented to the Iraqi people in a national referendum in October. A permanent constitutional government will be chosen in elections planned for December.

Bush said Iraqis are proud that they are building a government that answers to its people and honors its unique heritage.

Millions of Americans saw that pride, the president said, in Safia Taleb al-Suhail, who was present during the president's State of the Union address in January and embraced the mother of Marine Corps Sgt. Byron Norwood, who was killed in the assault on Fallujah.

Addressing all of the members of America's armed forces who participated in Operation Iraqi Freedom and their families, the president expressed "the heartfelt thanks of the American people."

"I know that nothing can end the pain of the families who have lost loved ones in this struggle," he said, "but they can know that their sacrifice has added to America's security and the freedom of the world."

The president said Iraq's progress toward political freedom has opened a new phase in coalition efforts in Iraq. As Iraqi forces become more self-reliant, Bush said, Americans will increasingly assume a more supporting role. "Then our troops will return home with the honor they have earned," he said.

Bush said the victory in Iraq also is producing signs affecting the broader Middle East.

"Today, women can vote in Afghanistan, Palestinians are breaking the old patterns of violence, and hundreds of thousands of Lebanese are rising up to demand their sovereignty and democratic rights," the president said. "These are landmark events in the history of freedom. Only the fire of liberty can purge the ideologies of murder by offering hope to those who yearn to live free."

Graduation means all 27 Iraqi battalions now operational

Sgt. Lorie Jewell
American Forces Press Service

KIRKUSH, Iraq — With the graduation of nearly 1,500 soldiers at the Kirkush Military Training Base March 20, all 27 battalions of nine brigades in the new Iraqi army are now operational.

Graduations last week at Numaniyah sent more than 3,000 new soldiers to units throughout Iraq, officials said. Next week, another 600 soldiers are expected to graduate from the Iraqi Training Battalion — adding roughly 5,000 new soldiers to the Iraqi army ranks.

The graduated soldiers are with the 13th, 14th and 15th battalions of the 5th Brigade, 3rd Division. They took an oath to protect their country, remain proficient in their soldiering skills, and obey the orders of their superiors. The graduation ceremony was the culmination of almost three months of training in basic soldiering skills.

"Training is an essential tool to a combat soldier," said Iraqi Gen. Am Jad, deputy chief of staff for training for the Iraqi army, in addressing the soldiers. "Be sure to carry everything you have learned here onto the battlefield."

Am Jad urged the soldiers to be "defenders of the defenseless." He also called the graduation, and the completion of the force generation that began last summer, a new turning point for Iraq's army. He thanked the U.S. and coalition forces that make up a base support unit at KMTB for their help in training the soldiers.

Sgt. Lorie Jewell

Almost 1,500 newly trained Iraqi soldiers march in graduation ceremony at the Kirkush Training Base March 20.

"We will be the light to lighten the darkness in this country," Col. Sabre, 2nd Regiment commander, told the soldiers. "We will protect the integrity of this country."

Sabre also thanked the base support unit, the Ministry of Defense, and the people of Iraq "for their belief in this army." He said the soldiers will protect them from terrorism.

"But understand, this will take time and patience until we eradicate those who are against us," Sabre said. "The strength of our belief will guide us through the threat of terrorism, and we will work side by side, force by force, to protect our country."

U.S. Army Sgt. 1st Class Charles Marchione, an adviser with the base support unit, said there was a marked improvement in the soldiers from when they arrived at the base as new recruits. The biggest strides, he said, have come as a result of developing a strong corps of noncommissioned officers. In the old Iraqi army, NCOs had no more authority than the most basic level soldier, he said.

"Now, we have the NCOs working more with the troops, taking care of their soldiers," Marchione said. "So they've made big improvements, but a lot of it is from having leadership."

Marchione said he is confident enough with the soldiers he helped train to go into a fight with them. His greatest fear in going to battle — whether with Iraqi or U.S. troops — is not knowing the people he's fighting with.

He doesn't have that fear with the soldiers he watched graduate.

"We have the camaraderie," Marchione said. "That's what's been built here."

The soldiers were released for a short period of leave after the ceremony. Many of them were planning to travel for as much as 10 hours to see their families. Their spirits were high, though.

"I'm very happy," said one soldier, through an interpreter. "I'm ready to go to the fight. I will fight terrorists not just here, but all through the world."

Some were soldiers in the old Iraq army. They said the difference from then and now is like "blue and white." Now, they are trained to be defenders. They believe they have more technical skills as well, and credit U.S. soldiers who trained them.

A few soldiers also offered thanks and praise to President Bush.

"We like Mr. Bush," one soldier said. "He saved us from the former regime."

herstory?

How well do you know herstory?

•1779 – Congress awards "half" a military pension to Margaret Corbin, who fought alongside her husband in the Revolution.

•1784 – Hannah Adams is the first American woman to support herself by writing.

•1833 – First co-ed college is opened in Ohio.

•1849 – Women doctors are permitted to practice medicine legally.

•1865 – Dr. Mary Walker is awarded the Medal of Honor after she is held in a Confederate prison camp, accused of spying. Walker remains the only woman ever awarded the medal.

•1890 – Women begin to wear knickers instead of skirts while bicycling.

•1911 – Europe celebrates International Women's Day.

•1913 – 5,000 women march on Washington, D.C., for the right to vote.

•1920 – The 19th Amendment is ratified giving women the right to vote.

•1923 – An Equal Rights Amendment is proposed. It has never been ratified.

•1941 – Annie G. Fox is the first woman to be awarded the Purple Heart after Pearl Harbor is attacked.

•1945 – 5 percent of those who serve in World War II are women.

•1953 – 2 percent of Korean War veterans are women.

•1959 – Yeoman Anne Dervartanian, of the Women Accepted for Volunteer Emergency Service (WAVES), is the first woman to attain the rank of E-9.

•1962 – Lorena Holden, the wife of the commander of the 1st Battalion, 38th Infantry Regiment, is tasked to develop a wives support system at Fort Benning. The "Rotoplan Center" behind what is now the National Infantry Museum on Baltzell Road becomes the prototype for Army Community Service. Family readiness groups "spin" off this during the Vietnam War.

3 percent of Vietnam veterans are women.

•1987 – Event is expanded to become a monthlong celebration.

•1991 – 13 percent of Persian Gulf War veterans are women.

•1999 – Staff Sgt. Nancy Sellers is the first woman to be named Fort Benning's Black Hat of the Year.

• 2000 – The Enlisted Wives and Officers' Wives clubs replace the word "wives" with "spouses" in their titles. Men are welcomed, few show up.

•2003 – There are 147.8 million females in the U.S. and 143 million males.

There are 1,219,134 active duty men in the military and 215,243 active duty women.

Nearly 3 million females participate in high school athletics this year. That's up from 800,000 in 1972.

•2005 – Condoleezza Rice becomes the first woman secretary of state.

The Good Wife's Guide
Housekeeping Monthly, 1955

Fifty years ago women may have been making WAVES or WACS or whatever, but at home they fulfilled their true calling.

"A good wife always knows her place," read Housekeeping Monthly's 1955 Good Wife's Guide. "Your goal: Make sure your home is a place of peace, order and tranquility where your husband can renew himself in body and spirit."

A noble goal, and one we're all still working on if the popularity of HGTV is any indication. We still strive to make our home a haven for the whole family. We're the queens of our castles, and we Feng Shui the furniture and faux paint the walls to make our kingdom worthy of our royal offspring and his highness. We do it because we enjoy it.

Our fathers and grandfathers were the kings of their castles, but their wives mere servants, if Housekeeping's guide is to be believed.

Here's what it had to say about the duties and expectations of a good wife:

• Have dinner ready when he gets home.

• Prepare yourself for his homecoming by touching up your make-up, and "put a ribbon in your hair."

• "Be a little gay and a little more interesting for him."

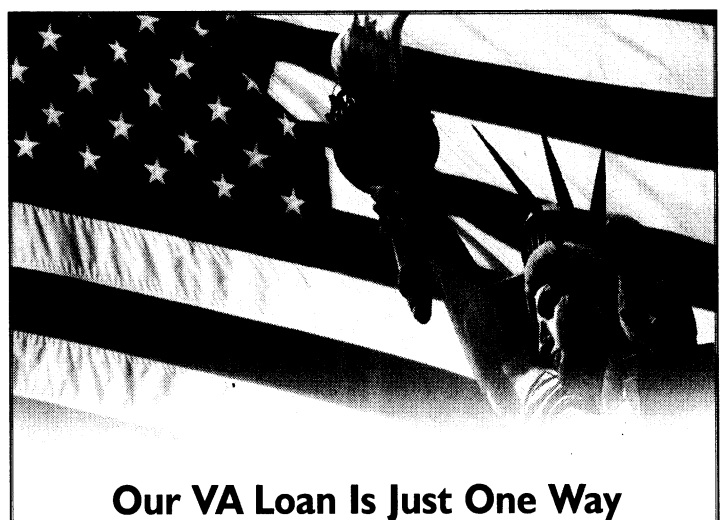
• Prepare a fire in the fireplace, because "catering to his comfort will provide you with immense satisfaction."

• Show sincerity in your desire to please him.

• Let him talk first. Remember, the topics of his conversation are more important than yours."

• Arrange his pillow and offer to take off his shoes. Speak in a low, soothing and pleasant voice.

• Never complain if he comes home late or goes out to dinner or other places without you. Instead, try to understand his world of strain and pressure and his very real need to be at home and relax.



• And my personal favorite: Don't complain if he's late for dinner or even if he stays out all night. "Count this as minor compared to what he might have gone through that day."

Pfc. Olivia Riggs, 988th Military Police Detachment, helps renovate the building her squad calls home. The 21-year-old is looking forward to moving on to college.

212 Ways to Be a Soldier

Troop learns discipline on job

Spc. Nikki St. Amant
Bayonet staff

She has been working in a small office in the 988th Military Police Company's motorpool, scraping caulk off windows, painting and dirtying her hands in things never listed in her job description.

But that is part of the reason she joined the military — to get some discipline for when the going gets rough.

Olivia Riggs knows something about rough going. She grew up one of seven children, moving all over the place, and guesses you could say she's from Illinois.

At 17, she graduated high school and took off for Cincinnati. Alone.

"I really just wanted to be on my own," the private first class said. "I had a basketball scholarship, but I didn't follow through on it and do everything I needed to do before the season started. I just kind of partied and did my own thing for a year until I decided it was time to do something. I guess that's why I joined the Army."

Needing discipline to make it on her own two feet, Riggs looked forward to basic training at Fort Jackson, S.C.

"We were in the sandpit after every meal," she said. "I don't think anyone actually likes that, but the thing I expected was discipline, and I think I have gained a lot since I have been in."

After basic, the tall ball player headed off to Fort Lee, Va., for advanced individual training as a 92A, automated logistical specialist.

The Army spent three months training her in a range of responsibilities. Prescribed Load List duties, use of the Standard Army Retail Supply, Standard Army Maintenance, and Unit-level Logistics Systems, handling and sorting of warehouse goods, repair parts ordering and distribution and a variety of other accounting and receiving tasks are all part of the entry-level training for 92As.

After AIT, Riggs came to Fort Benning. She discovered her new-found discipline can be a valuable trait.

Her assignment in the motorpool has kept her working outside of her MOS most of the time. The unit has only eight humvees, which she and six other Soldiers are responsible for ensuring parts are available for. Those eight vehicles are borrowed from another unit.

The rest of her time is filled with a variety of other tasks, like her current mission helping renovate the building her squad calls home.

Though the mission seems less than challenging now, Riggs knows a higher duty awaits in the future.

The 988th is expecting to deploy on the next rotation to Iraq.

Riggs appreciates the lessons the Army has taught her.

"When I get out, having military experience will help me move forward," she said.

That direction seems to lead to a bright future. The young Soldier is a self-described right-brained poet and artist.

She is confident in her abilities and plans to pursue her dreams in film school, believing that creative side will give her an edge as a director and writer.

"I'll probably end up going to USC. I hear they have a good film program there."

Strength: Train for job

ground and run, like in three to five-second buddy rushes. Pull-ups translate to Soldiers pulling casualties off the ground, climbing over walls, through windows or into the back of a vehicle.

The two main motions Soldiers deal with when performing job-related tasks are pushing and pulling, Scott said, that is why these exercise are so integrated into Army fitness training.

"The reason we work with the upper body is to prepare Soldiers for the task or mission they will perform in a real-world situation, like climbing in a window in Baghdad," Scott said. "If they don't have the upper-body strength to do that, we haven't adequately prepared them for the challenge."

Climbing pods and pull-up bars have been installed on Main Post and Sand Hill to help Soldiers strengthen their upper bodies and increase functionality, Scott said. The climbing drills are designed to improve upper-body and core strength and the ability to climb and negotiate obstacles. These drills include the straight-arm pull, heel hook, pull-up, leg-tuck and alternating grip pull-up.

"You shouldn't train to test, you should train for functionality of job performance," Scott said.

"If you can do eighty-five push-ups on the PT test, that is great, but if you can't perform the function of your job, it doesn't matter," he said.

Safety: Crucial to survival

• 20 percent of crashes result in serious head and neck trauma.

• Not all wrecks are avoidable, but immature riders and car drivers not seeing motorcycles are two of the biggest factors in avoidable crashes.

• Motorcycles are roughly a fifth the size of normal passenger vehicles and very difficult to see in profile or at night.

Riders should be aware of other drivers' blind spots and maintain safe distances from vehicles in all directions.

work at the CONUS Replacement Center.

During his 23 years in the Guard, Dansby had been part of many deployments, including Operation Desert Storm and Desert Shield. He deployed to several Central and South American countries for engineer humanitarian projects.

Lee knew Dansby since 1989 and said he was a great Soldier. When not activated by the Guard, Dansby was a truck driver, which is how he met his wife.

"She would come visit him on the weekends when he didn't go home and they would act like kids," Lee said. "They really enjoyed being with one another."

Lee said Dansby was visiting Cheryl for the weekend in Brundidge when the accident happened. Dansby had picked up his wife from work on his new motorcycle.

"He had been riding bikes since he was a teenager," Lee said. "We were supposed to take the motorcycle driving safety course together when my bike was out of the shop. Now I don't know if I'll ride my bike at all.

"It was just one of those things ... if they had gone by a second later the SUV would've pulled out before they got there and missed them, or they could've passed with no harm done," he said. "But when something happens that fast, there's just no way to react to it."

The funeral service for Dansby and Cheryl was at 11 a.m. March 16 in Brundidge at the Richland Baptist Church.

Dansby and Cheryl are survived by a daughter, Shannon Luna of Eureka, Calif., and two sons, Brandon Wilks of Eureka, and Richard Wilks II of Kahuku, Hawaii, his mother, Ruby Dansby of Dothan, and Cheryl's mother, Elaine Nunes of Eureka.

Dansby's awards include the Army Commendation Medal, Army Reserve Component Achievement Medal with silver oak leaf cluster, National Defense Service Medal with bronze service star, Southwest Asia Service Medal two bronze stars, Global War on Terrorism Medal, Armed Forces Reserve Medal with an M device and a number two, NCO Professional Development Ribbon, Army Service Ribbon, Army Reserve Component Overseas Training Ribbon with a fifth award, Kuwaiti Liberation Medal - Saudi Arabia, Kuwaiti Liberation Medal - Kuwait, Alabama Operation Desert Storm with one bronze star, Faithful Service Medal of Alabama with a silver Saint Andrews cross.

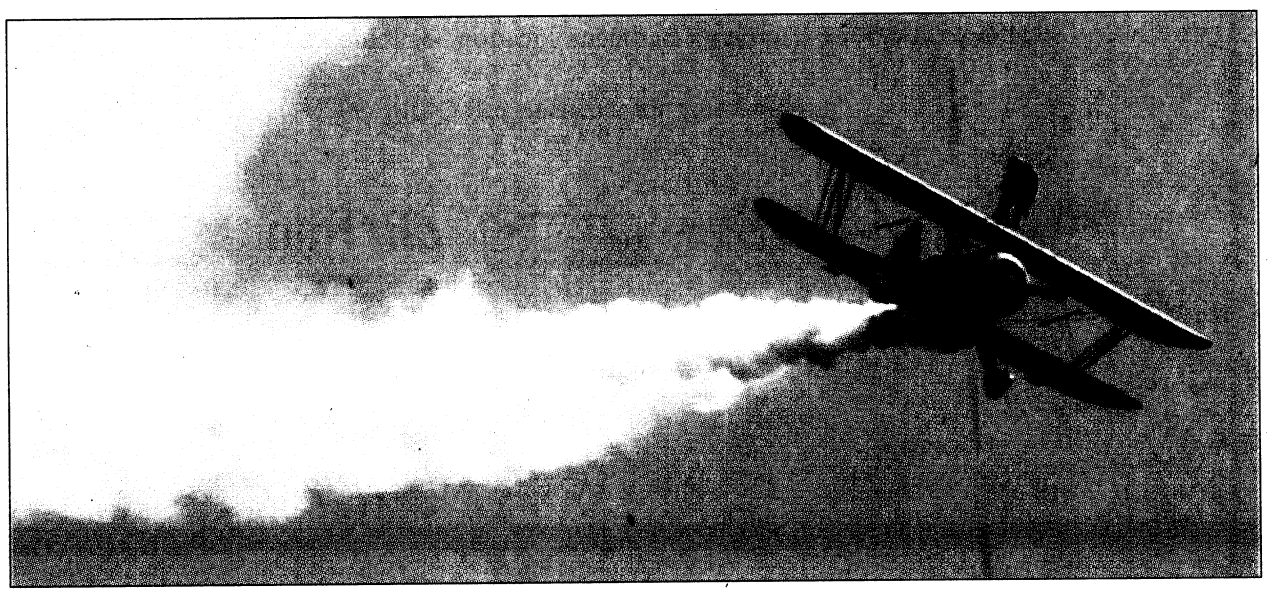
A WORLD of SERVICES. A SINGLE purpose.



Kyle Franklin stands on the world's only jet-powered Waco biplane, piloted by his father Jimmy.

Thunder rolls in the valley

Sgt. 1st Class Bryan Patrick, of the Silver Wings, parachutes into Thunder in the Valley Saturday.

Headliners Jimmy and Kyle Franklin and their 1940 Waco biplane, modified with a T-38 jet engine, soar over Columbus Metropolitan Airport during the Thunder in the Valley Air Show.

It only took a second, but in that second Pfc. Ricardo Sotero and Pvt. Marco Vallejo experienced the thrill of a lifetime.

The Fort Benning Soldiers participated in a stunt at the Thunder in the Valley Air Show Saturday that left their hands shaking and their eyes as big as saucers.

The Soldiers stood on either side of the runway, each holding a 10-foot pole straight up in the air. Attached to the poles was a ribbon, strung across the tarmac.

"They wanted us to hold the poles so a plane could fly through and cut the ribbon," said Vallejo, E Company, 1st Battalion, 329th Infantry Regiment.

"It was a rush. I've never been to an air show, and that was just amazing."

Sotero and Vallejo were with a group of about 600 Sand Hill Soldiers who attended the first day of the two-day event.

Fort Benning had an unmistakable presence at the event, which started with the Silver Wings jumping in to the sound of patriotic music, followed by the Rangers performing a fast-rope demonstration.

There were also several displays of military vehicles, old and new.

"Many in the community know Fort Benning is here. But when they meet the Soldiers and see the guys who have fought (in Iraq) or will fight there, we all just get goose bumps," said Robert Kemp, marketing director for Thunder in the Valley.

"I can tell you that unequivocally, every person here swelled with pride to see and talk to (the Soldiers). It gave us a chance to say thank you," he said. "Look at what they do for us. This is the least we can do for them. It keeps it all in focus."

Highlights of the event included a World War II aerial engagement with pyrotechnics and Jimmy Franklin and the world's only jet-powered Waco biplane. His routine included wing walking by his 23-year-old son Kyle.

"I thought for a local show it was exceptionally well done," said 83-year-old Austin Sands, a former WWII Army and air show pilot. "That Waco was wild. I have over eighteen thousand miles in the air and wouldn't fly that damn thing. That Waco — I've never seen one like that before. It was amazing up there."

The grand finale was the 29-ton, car-eating, fire-breathing Robosaurus. The steel monster rounded out each day's events by chewing up and setting fire to several junked cars, much to the delight of onlookers.

"He's a toy for children of all ages," Kemp said. "When Robo was performing, I was looking back at the crowd and to see the faces it was just 'Wow!' The word everybody said was 'awesome.'"

Who would've thought it? Americans purchase more candy at Easter than Halloween.

Sunrise tradition continues

Tawny Archibald Campbell
Bayonet staff

This year's annual Fort Benning Easter Celebration Sunrise Service will be at 7 a.m. Sunday at Doughboy Stadium.

The sermon, "Only the Strong Survive," will be presented by Chaplain (Maj.) David Acuff, the U.S. Army Infantry School ethics instructor.

"The sermon will hinge on my ethics teachings and the questions of 'Why be good?' and 'What happens to good people?'" Acuff said.

"People should attend this event to affirm or reaffirm in their mind that goodness does overcome evil and death."

The sermon will point out that not all good people succeed, and Christianity doesn't promise you will always be successful, but it does promise that you can be triumphant in the end, Acuff said.

In addition to the sermon, The Infantry Center Chapel choir will perform.

"We do the service at sunrise, because the disciples discovered the empty tomb of Jesus at sunrise," Acuff said.

"This is an old tradition. Some people in the choir have been doing these for thirty-five years."

Acuff suggests bringing a blanket to the outdoor service, which will be moved to TIC Chapel if it rains. The service in open to all worshippers regardless of religious affiliation.

Annual event draws crowd to Riverside

About 2,500 people flooded the grounds at Riverside for the annual Easter Eggstravaganza Saturday morning.

Organized by the Directorate of Morale, Welfare and Recreation and Child and Youth Services, the two-hour event boasted 4,000 treat-filled Easter eggs, face painting, a climbing wall, inflatables, a basketball shoot, train rides and more.

"It's been fun because I did good in the games and got candy eggs," said Cetreese Foushee, 7. "I missed the Easter egg hunt, but that's OK because I get to go hunt eggs on Sunday."

Wanda Foushee, Cetreese's mom, said they arrived too late for Cetreese's age group's hunt, but she was impressed with the other activities available for the children.

"The kids can come out and have things to do and get candy — their favorite," Foushee said.

Linda Laine, Eggstravaganza project officer, said this year's event was a big success.

"It was a wonderful turnout and great to see so many families together," said Brig. Gen. Benjamin Freakley, post commander. "There are a lot of families with deployed spouses here, and it is the least we can do for them."

"We do this for the kids," Laine said. "That's what this is all about, the kids. I think everybody has had a great time, and if they didn't come out they missed a great event on a beautiful day."

Composers create at Wilson

Wilson Elementary School celebrated Creative Composers Week March 21 to 25 as part of Music in Our Schools Month.

The initiative, launched 20 years ago by the Music Educators National Conference, gives schools around the world an opportunity to highlight music in life by participating in the annual World's Largest Concert and other activities.

This year's theme for the month is "Music: The Heart of Education."

Creative Composers Week brought the art of music composition from the preK classes to fifth-graders during music periods throughout the week.

Wilson music teacher Dina Watts said she worked her students up to the activities several weeks in advance.

The instruction began with basics of music composition like chords, harmonies, melodies, backgrounds, styles and different instruments, and continued as students were instructed in maintaining a steady beat with the help of a metronome and were encouraged to add their own melodies to structured background music.

Those basic tools were all put together during the week as students moved to the beat of their own drum and began playing their own music.

Other Music in Our Schools Month activities were coloring pictures of musical instruments for the PreK classes and writing poems about music for older students.

"Music gives every child an opportunity to expand their minds," Watts said. "It correlates with other subjects and helps students flourish. It is a mind- and heart-opener. Music can bring out that special something in a child you wouldn't even have known was there otherwise."

Donation makes Benning bloom

Local developer gives azaleas

Annette Fournier
Bayonet staff

Volunteers spent a day digging in the dirt to help beautify Fort Benning March 17.

Nearly 60 Soldier and civilian volunteers planted 699 Piedmont native azaleas donated by John F. Flournoy, Flournoy Development.

The azaleas were planted at sites along Fort Benning Road, Sigerfoos Road, Victory Drive and in front of Riverside.

When Flournoy bought the plants, he originally wanted to plant them along Interstate 185 to continue efforts by the Columbus group, Gateway, to beautify the interchanges. When Flournoy spoke with Commanding General Brig. Gen. Benjamin Freakley at a dinner party, he got the idea to beautify the entrance into Benning and the drive to the new Infantry Museum site.

"I thought it would be a really nice feature," Flournoy said. "It will make a great first impression for visitors, and it's a beautiful, hardy plant that is indigenous to the area."

Another Columbus business owner decided it was a good idea and got involved. At the request of Flournoy, Larry French, a landscape architect with French and Associates, the company landscaping the new Infantry Museum, planned the layout of the flowers. French donated his time to help with the design because he wanted to help beautify post.

"It's already a beautiful entrance, but we wanted to make it look as good as it could," French said.

Shaw Infrastructure and Directorate of Public Works employees dug the holes for the plants and transported them to the planting sites.

Master Sgt. Dorothy Loyal, garrison NCOIC, organized the delivery and planting, and found the volunteers for the project.

"We're so glad to have people from the Columbus community involved and supporting Fort Benning. It's important to beautify post and the Columbus area. This was such a positive experience, we would be open to working with them in the future.

"We're grateful to John Flournoy for donating the plants, and to the Soldiers and civilians who volunteered their hard work," Loyal said. "We initially planned four days for the planting, but they did such a great job we got it all done in one day."

Loyal will supervise the planting of 75 to 100 more plants when Fort Benning receives the next shipment.

ASK THE JUDGE

Anthony R. Tempesta
Office of the Staff Judge Advocate

Q: How long should I keep my old income tax returns?

A: How long should you keep a copy of your old income tax returns? Three years after filing? Seven years? Indefinitely?

Indefinitely is the best answer.

Many people stop thinking about a tax return as soon as that year's refund check arrives, or the payment check clears. This should not be the case however, as many items that can appear on a tax return can have significance many years later.

For example, if you are renting out your house, you will need to track the amount of depreciation claimed over the years, in the event that the sale of the house results in a taxable gain. Residential rental property can be depreciated over a 27.5-year period, so it may be necessary to go back many, many years.

If you have made deductible or nondeductible contributions to an IRA, it may also be necessary for you to see how those amounts were treated in your tax returns decades later.

Make a copy of your tax return before you mail it off, and just file it away. If you electronically file your return, then print out a copy of the return and file that. Prior year returns can be obtained from the IRS, but the process is lengthy and expensive.

The Tax Center provides free e-filing for Soldiers, family members, retirees and civilian employees. The hours are 8:30 a.m. to 7 p.m. Monday through Friday and 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. April 2. It is located across from Wynnsong movie theater on Ingersoll Street. There is a satellite office in the Main Mall Post Exchange. It is open from 10:30 a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday through Friday. For more information, call 545-4267 or the Office of the Staff Judge Advocate at 545-3281 or 545-3282.

Expect fun, prizes, information at women's conference April 27

Free child care registration deadline today

Melissa House
Bayonet staff

Mark your calendars for the second Fort Benning Women's Conference from 7:45 a.m. to 3 p.m. April 27 at the Officers' Club.

The conference, "Bloom Where You are Planted," is designed to bring Fort Benning's women together, show appreciation for their sacrifices and provide an opportunity for them to learn, grow and have fun.

The emphasis is on the fun, said Michelle Furney, this year's conference chair.

"I'm an enlisted spouse," Furney said, "and when I was an E-1 wife, I never got out, never did anything. Now, with the world the way it is and with our husbands deployed, I want them to have a day of fun."

The day of fun, she said, includes being able to drop your children off at Tot Town for the day, for free, and then treat yourself to yoga, self defense, "Death by Chocolate," money management, real estate, nutrition, organization or craft classes.

This year's conference is going to be a bit different than last year's, Furney said. This year, attendees don't have to preregister for classes, but can choose once they arrive, based on which classes are available during each of the four scheduled sessions. Vendors will have booths set up in one of the hallways

In order to register for the conference and the child care, those interested can print out forms from www.benningmwr.com, then mail them in.

Registration for the conference is ongoing, but the deadline to register for free child care at Tot Town is today. Conference planners will have a booth set up 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Saturday at the Main Mall Post Exchange where they will answer questions and accept registrations, Furney said.

Registration fees are $10 for spouses of E-1 through E-4s and $15 for everyone else. Furney said breakfast, lunch, goodie bags and chances to win a number of door prizes are included in the fee.

Furney said she has attended a few Town Hall meetings to get the word about the conference out

"I've been stressing — 'It's a day of fun.' It's not college, it's not an FRG meeting. It's a day of fun for you. It's your day."

The conference is sponsored by the Family Advocacy Program and the Directorate of Morale, Welfare and Marketing.

For more information, or to receive a registration form, call Furney at 689-6537 or visit www.benningmwr.com.

Web sites provide plenty of Army info

Spc. Eliamar Castañon
Assistant editor

The Internet is the new form of communication and information research. There are many Web sites that can help look for anything from how to buy a car to how to get rid of the smell of smoke.

For service members and their families, there are special Web sites that can help them get information on anything from PCSing to scholarships, career opportunities and buying or selling homes before a PCS move.

Although there are many Web sites that provide information for free, there are also those that charge a membership fee for their services. Readers beware. If you go about it the right way, you can find the same information for free on any of the following Web sites.

Military.com

Military.com is for all branches of the armed forces and provides information that can benefit not only service members but also their families. Membership to research the Web site is free.

On the site, you'll find links to headline news, complete coverage on Iraq and Afghanistan, and Army benefits.

Military families can benefit by logging on to the different links that provide such information as promotion alerts, military careers and job searches.

The Relocation link has all the information needed to move from one duty station to another, including truck rental companies, storage facilities, public school profiles, spouse employment opportunities, city profiles and online address changes.

There is also a link for entertainment. Sign up to receive a trivia question every morning and earn points.

www.onestoparmy.com

The ideal relocation Web site, Army Housing One Stop is the one-stop source for Army Housing information worldwide.

The Web site provides links to every installation in the world including on-post housing floor plans, installation photos, Basic Allowance for Housing information, housing office numbers, housing programs, personal property information and relocation assistance.

Along with the extensive information sources you can also sign up for the installation housing waiting list online, see maps of the installation and the surrounding community and research the various services offered to service members and their families at each installation.

www.defenselink.mil

DefenseLINK is the official Web site for the Department of Defense and a main starting point for finding U.S. military information online.

The mission of DefenseLINK is to provide official, timely and accurate information about defense policies, organizations, functions and operations.

The information on the Web site is cleared for public release in accordance with applicable DoD policies.

On DefenseLINK, people can research archives for information on various units, organizations and see the latest news on the continuing Global War on Terrorism.

www.defendamerica.mil

Another DoD Web site, Defend America, has various links to help get news from the front lines and offers a link to hundreds of other Web sites that provide reliable information to Soldiers and their families.

www.militaryonesource.com

A 'How may we help you?' link allows for Web searchers to get help on parenting and child care, military life, education, everyday issues, financial assistance, emotional well-being, addiction and recovery and much more.

The Web site also features a child care and a summer camp locator for families. The Web site offers a toll-free number that allows you to speak with a live representative about different items on the site. Web site visitors may log on and sign up for free access to all the links.

www.militarycity.com

This Web site is the culmination of all the Military Times newspapers. As a Web site member, users can log on and read the Army Times, Navy Times, Air Force Times and Marine Corps Times.

Among its other services, military.com offers the current week's newspaper, pay charts and calculators, tax assistance, Tricare help, special reports and chat rooms.

www.Survivingdeployments.com

This Web site is set up for those military spouses who have to explain to their children why their parent has been gone for so long.

The Web site features articles on how children react to stress, what kids need, activities to do with your children and tips on what the spouse may do to deal with the stress. The Web site offers links to various helpful Web sites for the entire family, including the children.

www.deploymentkids.com

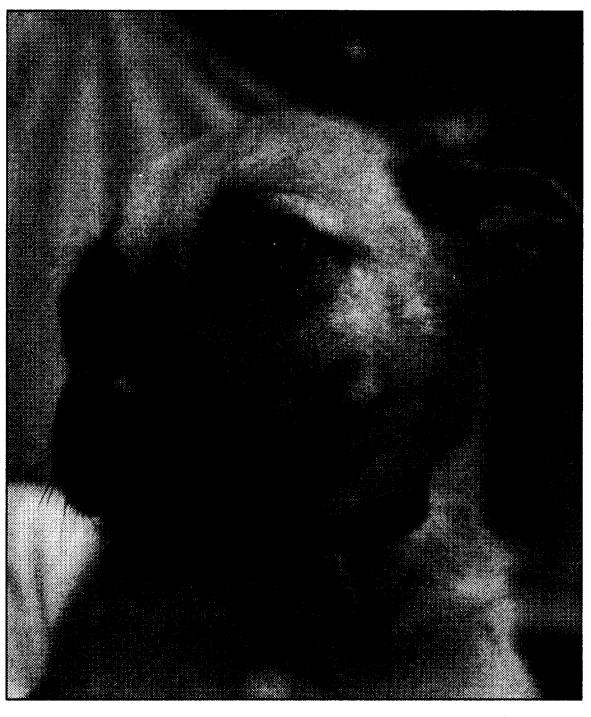
This Web site was designed for the kids. Children can log on to the Web site and learn about different and creative ways for children to write to their deployed parents. Also, parents can download educational games for their children and teach them to keep a journal.

www.emilitary.org

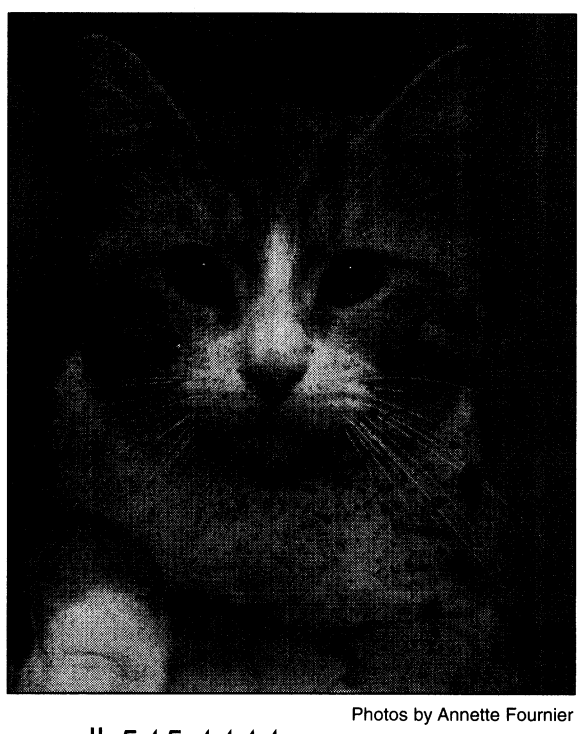
The Military Family Network offers emilitary.org as its information source for military families around the world.

The Web site features various links to family readiness groups leadership information, spouse employment links, military parents, spouses of Soldiers and a military family support forum where you can read various entries that other family support group members have submitted.

www.sarahsmiley.com



This Web site is dedicated to military spouses, from a military spouse.



Sarah Smiley is a Navy pilot's wife and a the writer of Shore Duty, a column that is published in many papers around the world.

Her Web site features helpful advice for military families by military families, simple yet effective ways to show support, a military moving guide and a collection of stories and articles about military life.

Street racing, thrills not worth lives

Spc. Nikki St. Amant
Bayonet staff

There's nothing like pushing the edge. There's nothing like dumping the clutch and feeling hundreds of horses tear away beneath you as you hurtle away from a cloud of hot rubber.

There's nothing like taking a tight line on rails around a corner at 60 or so miles an hour and actually being able to feel the tread on your tires sticking to the road in all the right places, while the other guy babies the brakes and falls behind.

There's nothing like running next to another car and feeling that surge of adrenaline as you each fight for a yard, a foot, an inch of ground while the wind roars past, the painted lines fall behind like dominoes and the engine gets ready for another gear — until something goes wrong.

Whether it's throwing a rod through the hood, a tire blowing as the engine hits redline in fifth gear, the heart-in-your-throat feeling as you hydroplane out of control or the silent eternity that fills the head as the car hits a patch of gravel at 80 mph on a curve it's taken a thousand times and fate takes over where driving skill cannot, knowing you are about to die erases every reason you ever had to get in the car in the first place.

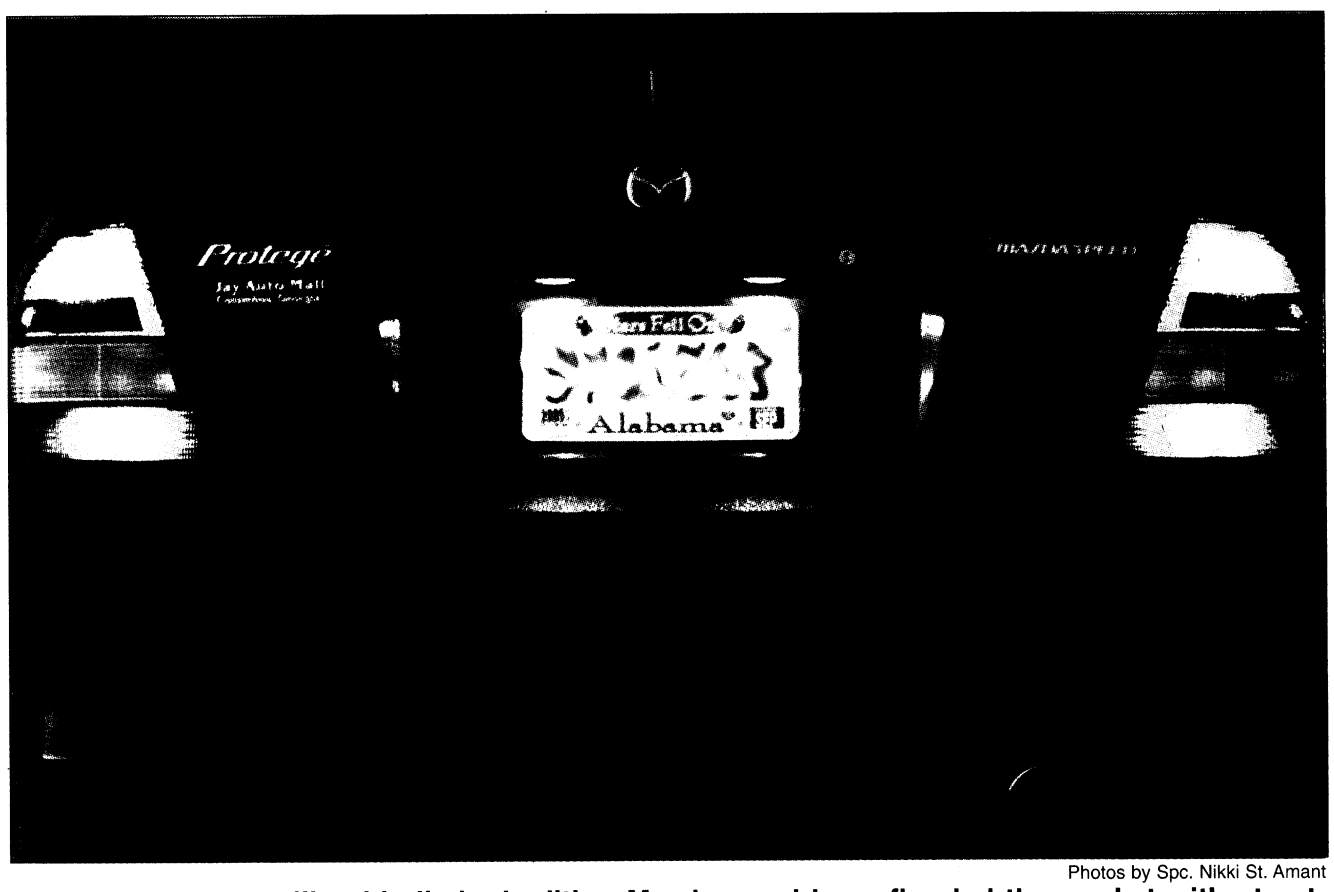
The problem is some people don't realize it isn't worth it until it is too late.

"I've lost three friends to the street, and I miss every one of them, but they died doing something they loved," said racing afficionado Red Line.

The racer spoke only on the condition of anonymity, thus the name Red Line is manufactured.

Line's three friends all died illegally drag racing. One died on a California highway when he cut across three lanes of traffic, lost control and was ejected from the vehicle He wasn't wearing his seatbelt. One died in Las Vegas after he clipped the bumper of the other racer's vehicle while trying to pass him, crashed into a billboard at more than 100 mph and the steering column crushed his chest. The third was killed when he lost control during a race, hit a curb, rolled three times into oncoming traffic, was struck by a delivery truck going 60 miles an hour and his nitrous leaked, causing an explosion.

Line got his start in the underground street racing scene 10 years ago, in San Diego at 19 years old. He's seen a lot of good races and he's seen a lot of good races go bad.



"I race," he said. "Not nearly as much now, but I do it. I know it's dangerous, but if you love it, you love it. You gotta do what you gotta do."

The reformed speed demon said there are always risks when cars are pushed to the limit, but legal racing dramatically reduces the possibility of a catastrophic accident and almost eliminates the risk to bystanders.

Line said there are precautions and preparations that can be taken and made to minimize the risks involved with legal racing:

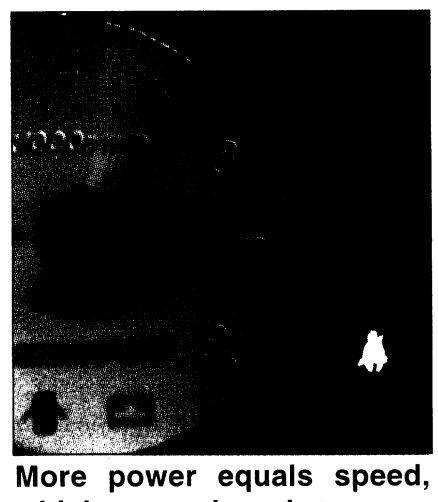
- Talk to other racers. Listen to their stories. Follow their advice on techniques, equipment and dos and don'ts.
- Performance driving or racing schools are a good investment, especially for beginners with less than three years of solid experience.
- Get your RPMs going on the legal tracks, not on the streets. No cops, no traffic, no potholes or surprise turns make for a safer, more enjoyable ride. It takes innocent bystanders out of the equation.
- Buy the safety gear you need. People dump thousands into engines and exhausts, but won't spend hundreds on racing seats with five-point harnesses, drilled rotors, performance brake pads, a fire extinguisher and a helmet.

"It comes down to maturity level," Line said. "Most of the old dogs have learned their lessons. They stay off the streets because they have seen the wrecks, been arrested and seen their beautiful cars towed off and auctioned, payed thousands into speeding tickets and buried friends.

Photos by Spc. Nikki St. Amant

Souped-up imports like this limited-edition Mazdaspeed have flooded the market with street-ready, economical cars targeted at young, fast and furious performance junkies.

"The young guys go out and buy the hottest ride on the market, hop behind the wheel and think they are Mario Andretti," he said. "They think they are invincible. They don't realize it can happen to them — until the cuffs are on their wrists, or their best friend dies on the concrete in a pool of blood, or they take out Soccer Mom with five kids in the Dodge Caravan on the way to practice."



That inexperience and immaturity is one of the most dangerous aspects of racing, Line said.

Every car is different. Each model handles differently, brakes differently, accelerates differently and responds differently when driver control is compromised. Line said becoming one with the car is the most crucial aspect of a driver's skill development.

"I can't just jump into Joe Blow's car off the street and be able to drive it safely — even after years of driving experience," he said. "It takes time to get to know the car, to see where the line in the sand is. That is the most important lesson you can learn about racing a car. Don't take more from your car than it can give. Know the limit."

The NHRA's nationally known Street Legal Drags program has helped get huge numbers of racers off city streets and to the tracks where they can race in a safe, legal environment.

One of those tracks is the Silver Dollar Raceway, about 60 miles away in Reynolds, Ga. It is the closest quarter-mile paved track. For $20, racers can spend most Friday nights competing in heads-up races against cars of all classes. The number of passes is unlimited.

More power equals speed, which can be dangerous when safety measures like seatbelts aren't used.

Power of Easter evident in Atlanta murder case

Chaplain (Col.) Joel Cocklin
USAIC Chaplains Office

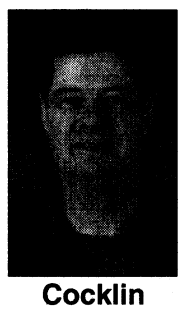
REFLECTIONS

The major themes of Easter — the power to bring good out of bad, light from darkness, healing in sickness, life from death, and right actions out of poor choices — were covered by the national media two weeks ago.

The tragic killings by a prisoner in Atlanta first appeared to be a typical story of human rage unchecked.

But as it unfolded, it became apparent this was not a story about violence — it was a story of spirituality.

This tragedy could well have been taken from the pages of Scripture.



The story began with the public murder of three people. The murder escaped for a time, and at midnight, after killing again, he met a widow from whom he heard words so transforming that he emerged from the darkness and entered the light again.

What happened between Ashley Smith, so like every biblical widow left with a child to raise, and Brian Nichols, who entered her apartment as the dangerous Barabbas "freed" from prison, has stunned everyone.

It shouldn't, because it simply reinforces the reality of Easter.

In this twist of events, we see the spiritual themes of faith and forgiveness, death and resurrection, darkness and light that fill the feasts of Passover and Easter.

Ashley Smith hit a nerve when she talked to Nichols about her belief that all things have a purpose and there was a purpose in his coming to her apartment that night.

Cocklin

Remember, she did not condemn or preach to him, but read to him, with his permission, from the Scripture and from chapter 33 of Rick Warren's The Purpose Driven Life.

In Psalms 107:20, the Bible says, "speak the word and my soul shall be healed."

Smith did not soften her speech for Nichols, but took the risk that faith often demands by going with Nichols to get rid of the pickup truck he had allegedly stolen from his last victim.

He safely put his gun away, a reminder of another dark night, when Jesus told Peter to lower his weapon.

Once back at Smith's apartment, Nichols bound her and taped her mouth, but he also had the decency to cover her eyes while he got undressed to take a shower.

Like so many seekers of wholeness before him who have entered the biblical pools of healing, he entered the shower a dead man and emerged with enough new life to surrender when the daylight came.

To everyone's surprise, not a shot was fired.

No one else was hurt, as the reality of Easter once again demonstrated that the power of light can overcome the darkness.

What difference has Easter made for you?

Tame your Jabberwocky

Chaplain (Maj.) Jeffrey Hawkins
Chaplain Family Life Center

As a 4-year-old, my daughter was terrified by a particular character in the classic Alice in Wonderland, the Jabberwocky. All would be going well, and then somehow or another, she would "experience" the presence of the Jabberwocky and all would not go well.

She's no longer 4, she's going on 19, and best that I can tell, Jabberwockies haven't concerned her in the least for quite some time now.

Not all the folks in our military families are so lucky.

Hawkins

Look around, and you'll see there are still a lot of Jabberwockies on the loose out there, extracting an awfully high toll on the hearts and heads of many of the folks we care about.

It's called trauma.

And trauma not well dealt with can become Post Traumatic Stress Disorder — a Jabberwocky that can hunt you down and, at a minimum, pester you rather ruthlessly. At the worst, it can make your life a living hell.

How do you get a Jabberwocky in your life? Most any trauma will do. However, two traumas in particular seem to impact us in ways that other Jabberwockies may not.

The first is child sexual abuse.

The second, which can be more stubborn than most, is one that wears camouflage: the trauma of combat.

What does it look like when someone's got a Jabberwocky chasing them?

Symptoms of PTSD may look something like this: being "ambushed" by unwanted memories or re-experiencing the event, numbing and avoidance, hyperarousal (little things set you on edge), unregulated emotion (sobbing uncontrollably at times or the opposite, stonefaced and unfeeling).

It's long been recognized that individuals who deal PTSD are frequently only one caring relationship away from getting back to a place of wholeness and joy.

Many who are married find the patience, understanding and support of their mates the key to recovering a richer life.

Need help with your Jabberwockies?

Call us at 545-1760 or join me at 11 a.m. Sundays at the CrossRoads Contemporary Chapel on Kelley Hill.

The World Cup Stacking Association changed its name in January to the World Sport Stacking Association, and "cup stacking" is now recognized worldwide as "sport stacking." More than 1,000 stackers will compete in the 2005 World Cup stacking Championship April 9 at the Denver Coliseum in Denver, Colo.

Stackers square off in cup competition

With a slap of the hand, the clock was running and cups flew.

Cup Stacking, or "Sport Stacking" as it is now known, is in its fourth year at Fort Benning. The annual postwide competition was held Monday at the Child and Youth Services Gym.

Students from six Fort Benning schools and a school from Atlanta participated.

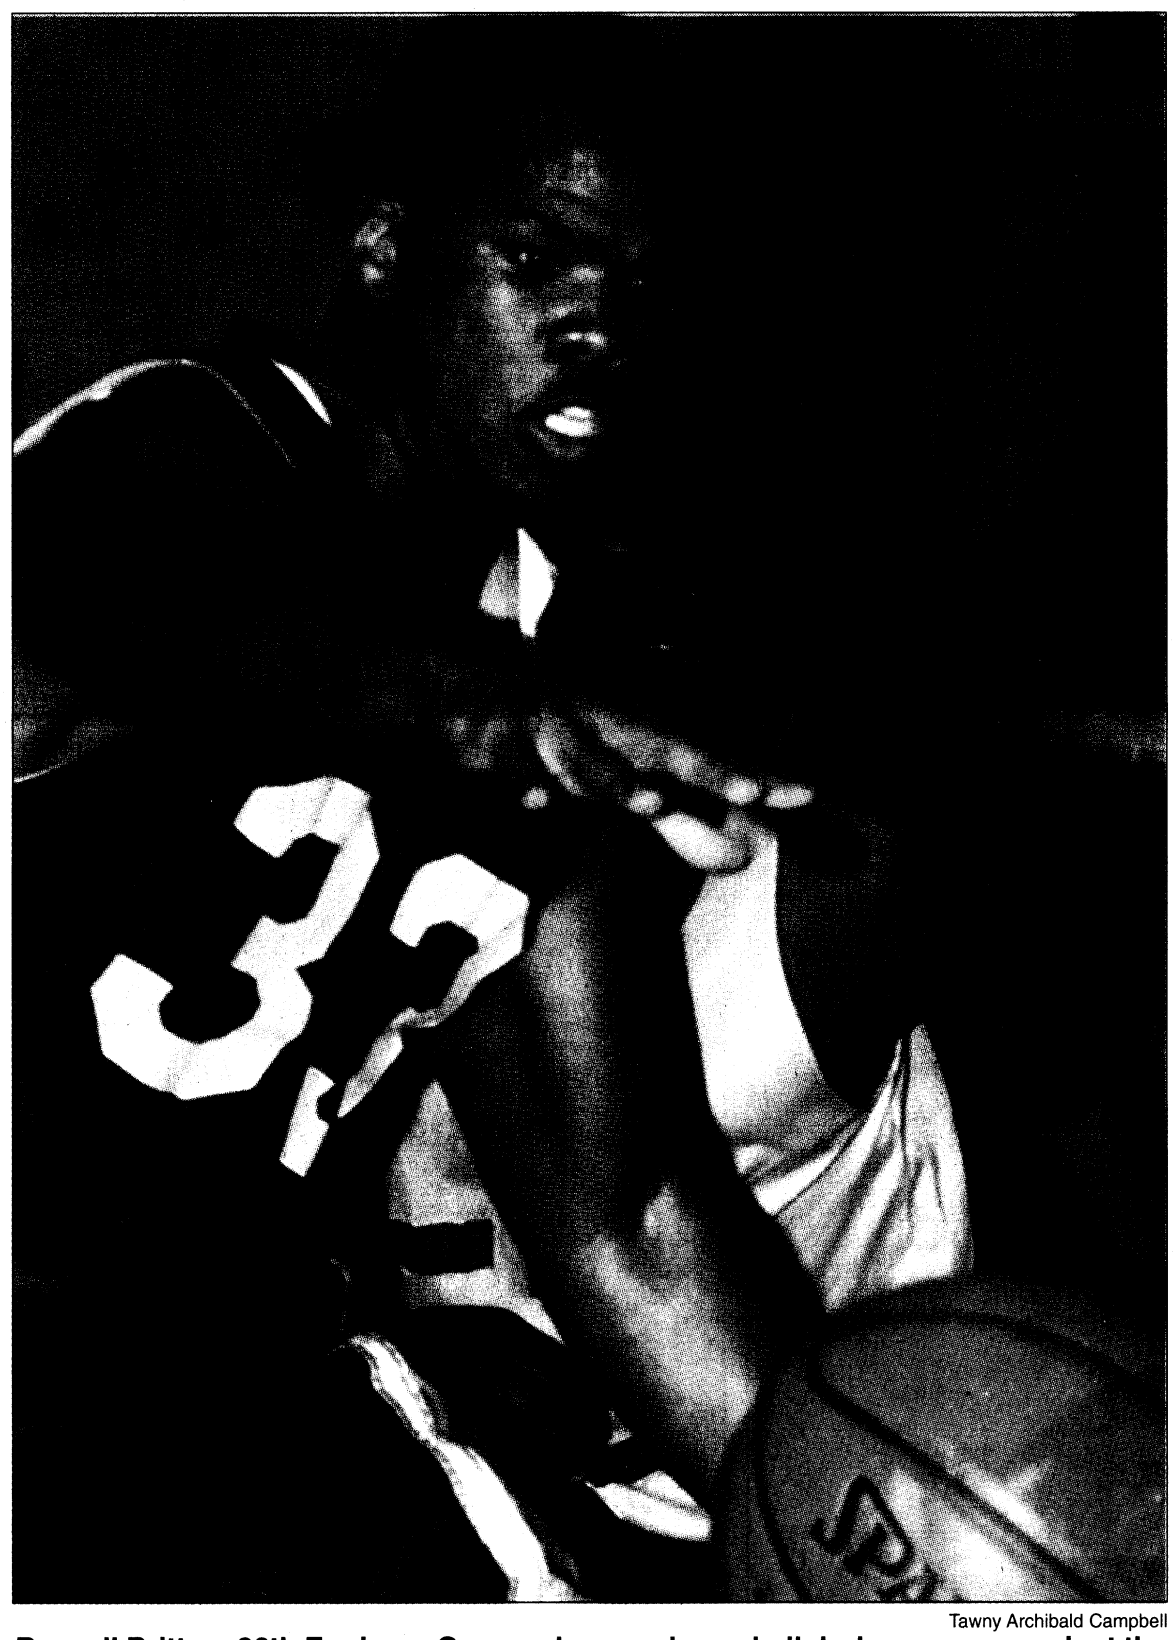
Pam Koon, a physical education teacher at Dexter Elementary, introduced the sport on post after reading about it online.

"It's relatively new," Koon said. "I thought it would be fun. It's been crazy ever since — cup crazy."

The rules are simple, said Sherri McKendree, PE teacher at Loyd Elementary. Each event is timed, and three basic stacking sequences are used.

"You stack the cups in sequence and down stack in sequence," she said. "If you fumble, you have to fix the mistake before you can move to the next stage."

Koon said stacking helps increase focus, requires use of both sides of the brain and helps with sequencing and concentration.



"These kids are really into this," Koon said. "They buy their own stuff, they stack all weekend, stack in the car, they stack at night — it is a positive addiction."

The top eight students in each grade, at each school, were chosen to compete in the championship.

"These are the best of the best," Koon said. "And this is the grand tournament of the year."

Engineers hit court, 63rd topples 36th

Tawny Archibald Campbell
Bayonet staff

In a game that was fairly evenly matched, the 63rd Engineer Company managed to top the 36th Engineer Group in a down-to-the-wire win, 57-52, Tuesday at Audie Murphy Fitness Center.

The teams played nip and tuck the first half, neither one jumping to much of a lead and each battling for possession of the ball, striving for containment on defense.

"It was a low scoring first half," said DeWayne Evans, 63rd, referring his team's 21-20 half-time lead. "The 36th played a good defense and that kept the score low."

Even though the defense may have been good, Russell Britton, 36th, was not happy with the way he and his team played.

"The first half we made some bad decisions and threw the ball away," he said. "We didn't play like we should and that's how they got the one point lead going into the half."

The battle for the lead continued through the second half and both teams were tied with 15:01 left on the scoreboard.

The 36th managed to climb to a 41-32 lead, but they didn't keep it for very long.

"We made substitutions when we were on a run," Britton said. "It was a bad coaching decision. The team on the court didn't mesh with the unit."

The lead was short lived.

Steven Showers led the 15-2 run when he hit a three pointer for the 63rd, followed by Taren Wilson with two buckets. Evans added a jumper to round out the run and snatch the lead.

"We got together and said we were going to play tough defense and chip at the score a little," Evans said. "We wanted to make them play tough. At the ten minute mark we knew we had time to come back and win."

Bench Notes

Erin Nash

• Edwards double dips

NASCAR's newest star Carl Edwards won both the Busch and Nextel Cup races in Atlanta March 19 and 20. He went up high to edge out Jimmie Johnson and wrapped up his weekend with his signature move, a backflip.

• Forget the fines

Baseball players and owners agreed to drop the fines associated with a positive steroid drug test and just enact suspensions. Good job, guys, what's $10,000 to a guy making millions? Ten games and the public humiliation for a first offense might actually work.

• What to watch

The Sweet Sixteen, of course. The road to the final four is heating up — after a week of first-round upsets and some predictable games, this week of basketball coming up is going to be the best yet.

• Bonds away

Barry Bonds will miss at least half the regular season, if not the entire season, after knee surgery.

Bonds blasted the media, as usual. Guess Barry never heard the old adage, "If you don't have anything nice to say..."

• Silas fired; James scores

The Cleveland Cavaliers fired head coach Paul Silas and his son, assistant coach Stephen Silas, March 21. Assistant coach Brendan Malone has taken the helm as interim head coach.

The day before, Cavs' star LeBron James scored a franchise record with 56 points — and they still lost to Toronto.

AMU service pistol pro takes overall award

Paula J. Randall Pagán
U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit

A Soldier of the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit beat 123 competitors to win the All-Army Small Arms Championship March 20.

Spc. Sean P. Watson, a Service Pistol Team member, won the Overall Individual Championship, an aggregate of the service rifle and the service pistol individual championships. Spc. Craig S. Nelson, USAMU gunsmith, took second place, and Sgt. Robert S. Park II, USAMU service pistol shooter, came in third. Staff Sgt. John M. Buol, a Reservist in the Small Arms Readiness Group, won the Novice Division.

The Army Service Rifle Championship included matches fired March 14 to 17 — the Secretary of the Army Rifle Match, Chief of Staff of the Army Rifle Match, Commanding General U.S Infantry Trophy Match and the All-Army Excellence in Competition Rifle Match.

The Army Service Pistol Championship included matches fired March 18 and 19 — the Secretary of the Army Pistol Match, Chief of Staff of the Army Pistol Match and the All-Army Excellence in Competition Pistol Match.

Wrestler takes state, sets Olympic goal

Spc. Nikki St. Amant

One of Fort Benning's own won the 105-pound weight class at the Georgia State Wrestling Championship March 5.

"I expected to go there and just wrestle my best, because that's what I do," said 12-year old Joey Denova, a seventh-grader at Faith Middle School, who has wrestled since kindergarten.

Winning doesn't come easy, Denova said, though he has taken numerous state championships and tournaments.

"I really had to work at this. I don't think wrestling comes easily to anyone. There's a lot you have to learn," he said.

Arms: Competition closes

The Secretary of the Army Match included a rifle match and a pistol match. The winners were Watson, Park and Nelson in first through third. Buol won the Novice Division. Nelson was the winner of the Chief of Staff of the Army Match, followed by Park then Watson. Buol took the Novice Division.

Watson won the Army Service Pistol Championship, followed by 1st Sgt. Joel P. Kaczorowski of Fort Bragg in second place, Park in third place and Nelson in fourth.

Watson also won the Excellence in Competition Pistol Match.

A Sniper Platoon Soldier of the 3rd Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment, won the U.S. Army Service Rifle Individual Championship. Staff Sgt. Jared N. van Aalst beat 147 Soldiers to win by 28.

Kaczorowski was the winner in the Secretary of the Army Pistol Match, in which Watson was second and Park was third. Fegley took the Novice Division with Barrows in second place and Buol in third.

Staff Sgt. Keith N. Sanderson of the Small Arms Readiness Group won the Chief of Staff of the Army Pistol Match. Buol was the Novice Division winner.

Sgt. 1st Class Jeffrey D. Stehling of the Texas National Guard won the Infantry Trophy Rifle Match. Gerhardt won the Novice Category.

Sgt. 1st Class Mark A. Benson of the Pennsylvania National Guard won the Excellence in Competition Rifle Match.

The Small Arms Readiness Group Army Reserve Team of Buol, Gerhardt, Staff Sgt. Leslie D. Lewis and Sgt. John F. Arcularius Jr. won the Army Rifle Team Championship.

The New York National Guard Team won the Commanding General Infantry Trophy Rifle Team Match.

The 75th Ranger Team won the Sergeant Major of the Army Rifle Team Match. Van Aalst had the highest individual score with 231 points out of a possible 250.

Richmond, who won day and two of the All-Army Small Arms Championship. He also won the Chief of Staff of the Army Rifle and the Secretary of the Army Rifle matches.

The USAMU Team of Watson, Nelson, Park and Cpl. Walter E. Craig Jr. won the General Patton Pistol Match, which included a timed two-mile run.

The USAMU Team won the Sergeant Major of the Army Pistol Team Match.

Denova: Dreams big

Coach John Wright started Fort Benning's team last year and feels grateful to have an athlete of Denova's caliber.

"Joey has been a great role model to the rest of the kids," Wright said. "For his age, he's probably the most technically proficient wrestler I've seen."

Denova said coming to Fort Benning and starting the new season with a team that was itself just beginning, was a challenge easily mastered.

"It was weird coming here. My brother and I didn't know anyone," Denova said.

"But Coach Wright is great and the team is a good bunch of people."

Denova has one more year with the younger classes before he moves to high school, but he doesn't think his wrestling career will slow down there.

"I really like baseball and football, but if it came down to choosing, I would choose wrestling," he said. "And I'll go with it all the way to college and beyond. My dream is to wrestle in the Olympics."

Wright has every confidence in the rising star.

"Joey's got the potential to wrestle as long as he wants to," he said. "He is blessed with raw talent, but he has built this awesome work ethic to develop it. He takes nothing for granted."

Hoops: Cobb seals win

Even with the run, the 63rd wasn't out of the woods. They had a one-point lead with less than a minute left in the game.

With the score at 53-52, Wilson made both bonus shots with 0:27 on the clock. With only a three-point lead, teammate Johnny Cobb was fouled and sunk both bonus shots to secure his teams victory.

Britton said the game was intense from the start to finish.

"We did outstanding," he said.

"We're going to regroup and come back next week with the same intensity."

Leading scorer in the game was Britton with 22 points.

Columbus Ballet to perform Swan Lake Act II

Columbus Ballet

Columbus Ballet resumes its annual spring offering this year with new artistic director David Herriott at the helm. Columbus Ballet will perform the world's most beloved ballet Swan Lake Act II at the historic Springer Opera House at 7:30 p.m. Thursday and April 1.

In addition to the beautiful lakeside scene from Swan Lake, there will be new classical and dramatic works on the same program. The variety of this performance will appeal to every member of the family.

The performance will be a feast for the eyes and ears from the classical beauty of Swan Lake to the energetic new works by Beth Griffin and Joanna Ahlman to the dramatic and sometimes lighthearted work by Herriott about the life of Charlie Chaplin.

The second act of the ballet Swan Lake is indeed a complete ballet within itself. Swan Lake was originally choreographed by Lev Ivanov in Russia in the late 19th century.

The second act is closely identified with the story of the entire ballet for itself for in this act the worldly Prince Siegfried first sets eyes upon a beautiful Swan Queen by the side of the lake.

Prince Siegfried is enchanted by this maiden swan and their ensuing pas de deux reveals their almost instantaneous love for one another.

This classical standard has become famous as a touchstone in the careers of many ballerinas, including Margot Fontaine, as they not only portray the fragile Swan Queen, Odette, but also her nemesis, the sinister swan, Odile, in Act III.

Columbus Ballet's Ahlman will dance the role of Odette partnered by Peter Swan as Prince Siegfried. Yes ... Swan. Swan dances professionally with the Atlanta Festival Ballet Company. He has also danced with the Gainesville Ballet Company and has been a guest artist with many companies in the region. He will also partner Anna Rodriguez for the dynamite Black Swan pas de deux as she dances the role of Odile in an excerpt from Swan Lake's third act.

Columbus Ballet's company of 20 talented dancers will assume the swan corps of dancers doomed to live by the evil Von Rothbarts's spell. They must live their lives as swans by day and can only be young maidens from midnight to dawn. The music was composed by Tchaikovsky.

Peter Swan will portray Prince Siegfried in the Columbus Ballet's Swan Lake Act II. The ballet will be performed at 7:30 p.m. Thursday and April 1 at the historic Springer Opera House. Tickets are $12 for adults and $8 for students, seniors and military.

Ahlman's new work, entitled Fight to Surrender, is strongly modern dance-influenced ballet on pointe. It consists of six segments that deal with the confusion surrounding us and our struggle to find serenity in life.

Ahlman has chosen several contemporary composers to compliment her very original choreography. Rachel Singletary and Anna Rodriguez lead the company in this piece.

Danse Macabre by composer Camille Saint-Saens is inspired by Henri Cazali's poem of the same name.

In the poem, Death sits near a graveyard teasingly playing an out-of-tune violin while beckoning a grim assembly of skeletons to arise and dance at the stroke of midnight.

Death is portrayed by Beth Maroney and partnered by Josh Rebuck as her sentinel. Associate director Griffin's choreography invites onlookers to spend a night with the living (and dancing) dead.

The program ends with an intriguing look at the life of actor Charlie Chaplin set to music composed by Chaplin himself and choreographed by Herriott.

Entitled simply Chaplin, this ballet traces the life of the silent film star with scenes that reflect his childhood in England, the love of his life that he leaves behind in London, his movie madness, his romantic relationships, his sadness and also his artistry.

Chaplin will be portrayed by Will Ennis, a gifted actor, singer and dancer familiar to Columbus audiences. Jane Sutcliffe will be the love of his life and dance with him to the familiar music Smile.

Tickets are $12 for adults and $8 for students, seniors and military. Tickets can be purchased at the Springer box office, 103 10th Street, through tickets.com or by calling (888) 332-5200.

Guess Who — A sarcastic father (Bernie Mac) has plenty to say about his daughter wanting to marry a white boy (Ashton Kutcher).

Guess Who is rated PG-13 for sex-related humor.

Miss Congeniality 2: Armed and Fabulous — The story catches up with FBI agent Gracie Hart (Sandra Bullock) shortly after she has successfully disarmed a threat against the Miss United States Pageant while working undercover as a contestant in Miss Congeniality.

Having become a media celebrity following her heroic pageant exploits, Gracie has been spending more time lately at the salon than the shooting range, working the talk show circuit and promoting her book.

When her friends are kidnapped in Las Vegas, Gracie's all-out efforts to jump back into action to save them puts her at odds with the FBI top brass who don't want to risk losing their mascot and fear she might not be up to the job anymore.

Miss Congeniality 2: Armed and Fabulous is rated PG-13 for sex-related humor.

The Ring Two — The story picks up six months after the horrifying events that terrorized Rachel Keller (Naomi Watts) and her son Aidan in Seattle.

To escape her haunting memories, Rachel takes Aidan and moves to the small coastal community of Astoria, Ore., to start fresh.

However, Rachel's resolve quickly turns to dread when evidence at a local crime scene — including an unmarked videotape — seems eerily familiar. Rachel realizes that the vengeful Samara is back and more determined than ever to continue her relentless cycle of terror and death.

Also starring Sissy Spacek and David Dorfman.

The Ring Two is rated PG-13 for violence and terror, disturbing images, thematic elements and language.

Ice Princess — Brainy Casey Carlyle (Michelle Trachtenberg) has never quite fit in. Caught between her fantasy of becoming a championship figure skater and her strong-willed mother (Joan Cusack), who has her on the fast track to Harvard, she can only hope to be like Nikki, Tiffany and Gen (Hayden Panettiere) — three elite skating prodigies competing on the U.S. Figure Skating circuit.

Ice Princess is rated G.

Hostage — A police officer is wracked with guilt from a prior stint as a negotiator.

When a mafia accountant is taken hostage on his beat, he must negotiate the standoff, even as his own family is held captive by the mob.

Starring Bruce Willis, Jimmy Bennett and Jonathan Tucker.

Hostage is rated R for strong graphic violence, language and drug use.

Robots — Set in a world populated entirely by robots, this is the story of a young genius, Rodney (Ewan McGregor), who wants to make robots capable of making the world a better place, but he finds his dream being challenged by a corporate tyrant and a master inventor, Big Weld (Mel Brooks), while also being seduced by a sexy corporate robot, Cappy (Halle Berry).

Also starring Robin Williams and Greg Kinnear.

Robots is rated PG for language and suggestive humor.

The Pacifier — Vin Diesel stars as Navy SEAL Shane Wolf, who thought he was prepared to take on any duty, no matter how perilous or impossible — until he tried baby-sitting.

Assigned to protect the five out-of-control children of an assassinated scientist working on vital government secrets, Wolf is suddenly faced with juggling two outrageously incompatible jobs: fighting the bad guys while keeping house.

Also starring Brad Garrett, Lauren Graham, Brittany Snow and Carol Kane.

The Pacifier is rated PG for action violence, language and rude humor.

The Jacket — A military veteran (Adrien Brody) returns to his native Vermont suffering from bouts of amnesia. When he is accused of murder and lands in an asylum, a well-meaning doctor puts him on a heavy course of experimental drugs, restrains him in a jacket-like device and locks him away in a body drawer in the basement morgue.

Also starring Keira Knightley, Kris Kristofferson and Jennifer Jason Leigh.

The Jacket is rated R for violence, language and brief sexuality and nudity.

Be Cool — This movie details the continuing adventures of Chili Palmer, strong-arm debt collector turned Hollywood movie producer.

By the time the story begins, Chili has abandoned the fickle movie industry.

His adventures, this time around, concern the music industry where he becomes the promoter of a struggling singer who is being pursued by the Russian mafia.

Starring John Travolta, Uma Thurman, Vince Vaughn and Danny DeVito.

Be Cool is rated PG-13 for violence, sensuality and language including sexual references.

Cursed — An estranged brother and sister living in Los Angeles, mourning the recent loss of their parents, are brought together by a savage werewolf attack.

The attack forces them to fight for survival, against both the beast and the dangers of its virulent curse.

Starring Christina Ricci, James Brolin, Portia De Rossi and Shannon Elizabeth.

Cursed is rated PG-13 for horror and violence terror, sexual references, nudity, language and a drug reference.

Diary of a Mad Black Woman — Helen McCarter (Kimberly Elise) seemingly had the perfect life with husband Charles (Steve Harris). On their 18th wedding anniversary, Charles announces that he wants a divorce.

Diary of a Mad Black Woman is rated PG-13 for drug content, thematic elements, crude sexual references and violence.

REVIEW

Canseco gets Juiced, others play hide and seek

Erin A. Nash
Bayonet staff

I watched the entire steroid inquiry by the House Government Reform Committee March 17 in awe. Talk about some must-see TV.

Current players Rafael Palmeiro, Curt Schilling, Frank Thomas and Sammy Sosa, and retired players Mark McGwire and Jose Canseco were subpoenaed to speak to the committee about the problem of steroids in major league baseball.

Thomas showed up via video teleconference, was sworn in and never heard from again.

Committee members asked some hard-hitting questions. One pointedly asked McGwire if he ever did steroids.

McGwire was as evasive as a greased pig and sounded like my old 45s when they had a scratch: "I'm a former player," and, "I'm not here to talk about the past," over and over and over ...

Canseco was the only one to admit to steroid use (no jokes here, please), and Sosa was a parrot to Schilling and Palmeiro, agreeing with whatever they said.

Schilling is a man I highly admire and respect, but he confused me. It reminded me of a certain flip-flopper from last fall. Schilling is very outspoken against steroid use, yet says it's not a problem.

When I first heard about Jose Canseco's new book Juiced: Wild Times, Rampant 'Roids, Smash Hits and How Baseball Got Big, I thought to myself, "Why wouldn't he tell the truth, blow the top off this whole steroids thing?"

Self-proclaimed as "The Chemist," Canseco writes about being the first man in baseball to use steroids, and how he turned countless other players on to them, the most famous being Mark McGwire who was half of the Oakland As "Bash Brothers" in the 80s. Canseco was the other half.

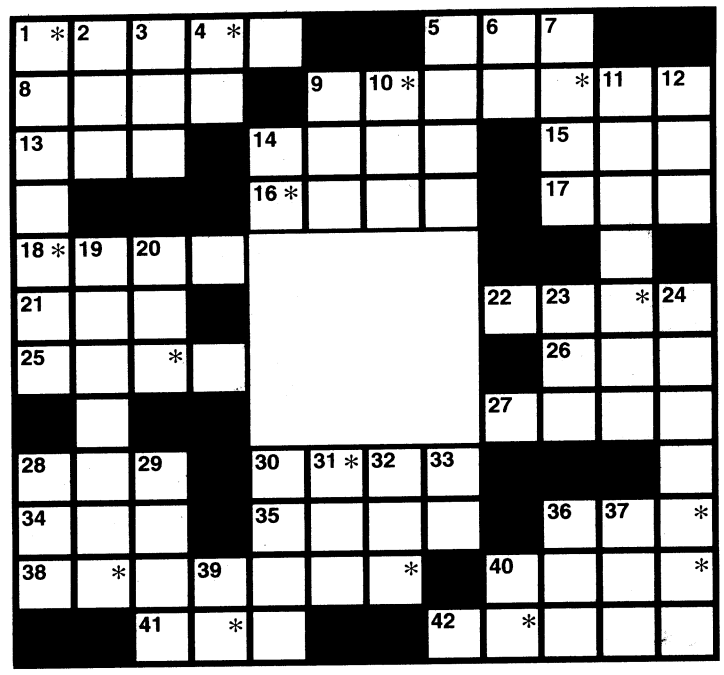
Throughout the book Canseco laments being Cuban, how he will never be the "All-American" guy, like a Cal Ripken or McGwire. At times he seems to be proud to be Cuban but then rails against it, how it has hurt him, both personally and professionally.

I recommend the book for most everyone, except teenage boys. I'm against steroid use, and wish baseball would just be baseball, raw natural athletics.

Canseco does make a point that baseball lost it's luster and fan base after the strike in 1994, and both owners and players needed to do something to get that base back.

Steroids was the answer for him and most other players he said.

I understand the point he was trying to make, that he seemingly stretched throughout the book, that if you can drive in 20 more homeruns a season and up your payday $5 million a year, who wouldn't?



Maybe it's time for both players and owners to own up and just play baseball, drug free.

Ted Williams is probably thawing in his freezer.

Vice Chief of Staff for the Army Gen. Richard Cody awarded Capt. Charles Greene the Bronze Star and Purple Heart March 24 at Infantry hall. While serving as an advisor to the 22nd Battalion of the Iraqi Intervention Force, Greene was shot in the head during a sniper ambush in Mosul. A-10.

Mark your calendar now for the weekend of April 22 through 24. That's when "the best of the best" converge on Fort Benning for the 22nd annual Best Ranger Competition. It's a must see for the whole family. That's the same weekend as the 36th annual Riverfest in Columbus, another crowd pleaser, with its Salisbury Fair and 5K run. So be sure to set aside an hour or two to hear Smashmouth, Phil Vassar and Sugarland. Read more about the Best Ranger Competition on A-3 and the Riverfest Weekend on B-1.

Two sniper platoon Soldiers of the 3rd Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment, took the top prizes in the All-Army Long-Range Rifle Competition, hosted by the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit March 12-23. C-1

Operation Varsity, the largest airborne operation conducted during World War II, came on the tail-end of the Battle of the Bulge more than 60 years ago. Soldiers of the 507th Airborne Regiment, which was attached to the 17th Airborne Division, were among the first to hit the ground March 24, 1945, at 9:48 a.m. Operation Varsity capitalized on the gains of the Battle of the Bulge, which started in December 1944.

While successful in crossing the Rhine River into Germany, the mission also proved to be the single worst day in airborne history. More than 1,100 paratroopers were killed on the first day, 522 were wounded, and 840 were listed as missing in action.

Airborne Soldiers commemorated the anniversary of Operation Varsity March 24 by jumping onto Fryar Drop Zone.

"I'm scared to jump. Every time. If you aren't scared, you're either crazy or stupid. But I'm sure I don't feel anything like what those guys felt," said Staff Sgt. Nelson Ortiz. "It is an honor and a privilege to take part in this jump today. Those men were better men than we are today."

Ortiz and 142 other Soldiers jumped out of two C-130s onto Fryar Drop Zone as part of the 1st Battalion (Airborne), 507th Parachute Infantry Regiment's annual Operation Varsity commemoration ceremony.

OCS HALL OF FAME

Benning to recognize 35 in ceremony

Melissa House
Bayonet staff

The Officer Candidate School will hold its annual Hall of Fame Induction Ceremony at 3 p.m. April 8 in Marshall Auditorium.

The Hall of Fame dates back to 1958, when Maj. Gen. Herbert Powell established the drive to honor Infantry OCS Medal of Honor recipients and other distinguished graduates.

Today, graduates of any active Army OCS program are eligible for induction. Induction is automatic for graduates who receive the Medal of Honor or who attain general officer rank. Other nominees are considered based on their command positions, critical military assignments, wartime service record and civilian service to the nation.

This year, 35 OCS graduates were selected by the panel, said Capt. Dustin Heumphreus, Hall of Fame project officer.

Five inductees who were selected in previous years will also attend this year's ceremony, he said.

Gen. Omar Bradley is credited with establishing the format, discipline and code of honor used at OCS today.

More than 100,000 candidates enrolled in OCS between July 1941 and May 1947. Approximately 7,000 officers were commissioned during the Korean War and more than 49,000 during Vietnam.

This year's inductees include a father and son pair. Retired Col. Dan D. Jennings Jr. received his commission as an Infantry officer through OCS in May 1942.

His son, Col. Dana Jennings III was commissioned in 1981 and is currently a student at the Army War College.

Post chooses NCO, Soldier of Year

6th RTB Soldier wants to win Best Ranger

Staff Sgt. Justin Conner always wanted to be a Soldier, but that wasn't enough — he wanted to prove to himself he was the best.

Conner did just that March 24, when he was chosen as Fort Benning's NCO of the Year.

But he's not done yet.

Assigned to B Company, 6th Ranger Training Battalion, Eglin Air Force Base, Fla., Conner has split his time between training for the Soldier of the Year competition and the Best Ranger Competition. He trains from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. each day for the Ranger competition, and when he's not in the field, his head is buried in a book studying for the Army Soldier of the Year board.

Conner

"I wanted to be in the Army because there is a lot of respect that goes with it," the 28-year-old said. "I like to challenge myself. The 6th RTB gave me an opportunity to compete for the NCO of the Quarter and I'm still going strong. I hope to have success in representing Fort Benning before the Command Arms Center board in June."

Along with juggling his job and training, he still manages to find

Soldier joins Army for family, confidence

Tawny Archibald Campbell

While growing up in Haiti, Pfc. Jeanelle Joseph remembers watching her cousin, a Marine, walk down the street with confidence and pride.

"She had respect, like she owned the world," Joseph said. "I wanted that confidence."

Now, as Fort Benning's Soldier of the Year, Joseph has exemplified the Army values and has the same confidence and pride she saw in her cousin. She has also proven to herself that the decisions she made two years ago have paid off.

Joseph

Joseph didn't join the military to gain awards or recognition. She joined because she wanted to be like her cousin, and she wanted to experience a sense of family and togetherness, something she never really had as a child. Her mother lives in Haiti, and her father in New York. She has a brother, but they were never really close, so the military seemed to be the perfect solution, she said.

"I like the idea of the family thing," Joseph said. "When I went to basic and advanced individual training, I had that."

MOVING ON

Getting to know you ...

Annette Fournier
Bayonet staff

I've finally unpacked the last box from moving to Fort Benning about six months ago. I'm established in my home, but it's tough to feel at home in a new community.

To meet people, I decided to get involved in local activities. I called volunteer organizations in Columbus, but nothing piqued my interest, so I tried a pilates class and remembered why I hate doing pilates. I sang with a choir briefly, but the practice times didn't work with my schedule. I even managed to drag a friend from work to a Latin dance class. It was a blast to do the cha-cha and the salsa, but after the class was over, I hadn't met anyone I could bond with.

Bit by bit, I've met great folks at Benning, but I'm always looking to meet more. I'm excited that I got a part in Benning's Backstage's production of Woody Allen's Don't Drink the Water. I haven't acted in a while, and there is certainly not an Emmy with my name on it, but it's a lot of fun. And spending hours on end in rehearsal, it's nearly impossible to not get to know people.

We're a few weeks into rehearsal now, prepping for the performances May 6, 7, 13 and 14 at Kelley Hill Recreation Center.

I'm so glad I decided to get involved. It's a funny show, and the unique personalities of the actors is what makes it entertaining. Finding a great group of people with a common interest is a perfect way to find a niche as a newcomer.

If you're a newcomer looking for your own niche, here are a few post activities you might want to check out. Of course, I recommend trying out next time Benning's Backstage has an audition call.

• Better Opportunities for Single Soldiers: Soldiers can make friends, go to events and volunteer. There are still openings for their cruise from Key West to the Bahamas Nov. 14 to 19.

If you want to get involved, their next meeting is April 29 at the Kelley Hill Recreation Center. For more information, or to register for the cruise, call DMWR at 544-8031.

• Family Readiness Groups: FRGs hold social events about once a month, depending on the unit. DMWR will sponsor an FRG social in which qualified technicians will teach basic car maintenance and attendees can chat and have refreshments at the Auto Skills Center April 22 from 7 to 9 p.m. If interested, contact your FRG leader.

• Intramural Sports: For sports enthusiasts, softball teams are forming. Throughout the year, Benning offers basketball, football and other sports for Soldiers, and some teams allow civilians to join as well. Talk to any of the folks at the post fitness centers for more information and ask about pick-up games Saturday mornings.

• Crossroads: Connections can be made at the Crossroads' contemporary church services, 11 a.m. Sundays in the Kelley Hill Chapel. Socials follow the service the second and fourth Sunday of each month.

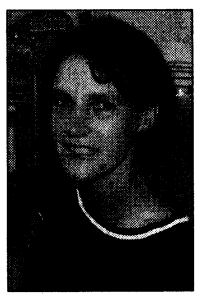
Crossroads has several small, weekly discussion groups meeting for spouses of deployed Soldiers, a singles group, a youth group, one for married couples, a parenting group, and one for people wanting to renew their faith. Call Crossroads at 545-9014.

Those are just a few of the opportunities to meet people on post. Beyond Fort Benning, Columbus and Phenix City have volunteer activities, classes, clubs, churches and more. Whether you're still unpacking or feel like you've been at Benning forever, there are many opportunities.

Go ahead and get involved. You never know who you'll meet.

Amuse 'em with pet stories

Melissa House
Bayonet staff



If you ever read my commentaries, you know I'm not opposed to going above and beyond the call of duty with my research.

I've managed to uncover more obscure and sometimes interesting tidbits of information. And, since my brain is a storehouse for useless trivia, most of what I learn will be with me for a long time.

So, what's this week's offering? Well, I stumbled upon a Web site devoted to presidential pets. It's not just a Web site, there's an actual presidential Pet Museum somewhere in Maryland, near Washington, D.C.

There's a list of all the presidents and their pets, along with, what some may find interesting, details about the pets.

Did you know there has been a pygmy hippo, a wallaby, a tiger, and an alligator in residence at 1600 Pennsylvania Ave?

Do you know which president has the record for the most pets while in office?

I'm not going to tell you, you'll just have to see for yourself, but the White House was described as a veritable zoo.

Let's just say that this museum's curator must be quite dedicated to her cause. Her mother created a portrait of the Reagan's dog, Lucky. The portrait hangs in the museum.

The portrait, however, isn't your standard watercolor, oil, pen and ink or even paint-by-numbers. It boasts some of the dog's fur. Ewwww?

(The museum, by the way, boasts the largest collection of presidential pet memorabilia in the country.)

The stories recorded on the site, few that they are, are pretty funny.

Zachary Taylor apparently had a short-lived canary. Seems they tried to provide him with a female companion, who turned out to be male and killed him. Oops.

And I bet you didn't know that the one night President Gerald Ford had dog duty for his golden retriever — the regular caretaker informed the president the dog needed a late-night trip outside — Ford decided to slip out of the White House with the pooch without informing the Secret Service. While he was out, they battened down the hatches for the night, and Ford had to alert the guards that he was locked out.

Visit the site — www.presidentialpets.com — and have a chuckle or two. Just think, if you're a pet owner, there's a place for you someday at the White House and in the Presidential Pet Museum.

And the bikers go rolling along

Elsie Jackson
USAIC Public Affairs Office

Ahh, spring ... that time of year when serious cyclists liberate their bikes from indoor trainers and cheerfully hit the open road, and wannabe cyclists liberate themselves from their sofas and tearfully hit the Riverwalk.

This month, cyclists of all varieties can roll out for two good causes, the second annual Kudzu Classic tomorrow, which will put helmets on the heads of kids in Marion County, Ga., and the first ever Wheels to Heal Ride in Columbus.

The Columbus Cycling Club is sponsoring the Kudzu Classic, which features distance options of 30, 50 and 104.5 miles. In lieu of an entry fee, the ride organizers are asking for a donation of a Consumer Product Safety Commission approved bike helmet.

Registration opens at 7:30 a.m. at the Marion County Courthouse in Buena Vista, where the 50- and 104.5- mile options begin and end. The 30-mile option begins and ends in Draneville, Ga., at the Tri-County High School. All routes will be marked, and maps will be provided to all registered participants.

The ride begins at 8 a.m. There won't be any official support-and-gear stops or support vehicles, but the routes all pass through a number of small towns with convenience stores where you can buy sports drinks and snacks to nourish you back to the courthouse.

April 17, an 8 a.m. rolling start from the Columbus Civic Center will kick off Wheels to Heal, a fund-raiser for the John B. Amos Cancer Center. Three route options (20, 64 and 100 miles) are available. The entry fee is $35 through April 15 and $40 after. Except for the start and finish, the longer rides are on Fort Benning.

All riders will receive a pair of cycling gloves as part of their participation gift (aka "schwag bag"). Entry forms are available at Country's Barbecue, WTVM, Columbus Regional Medical Foundation and on Broadway at Ride On Bikes. You can also register online at columbusregional.com.

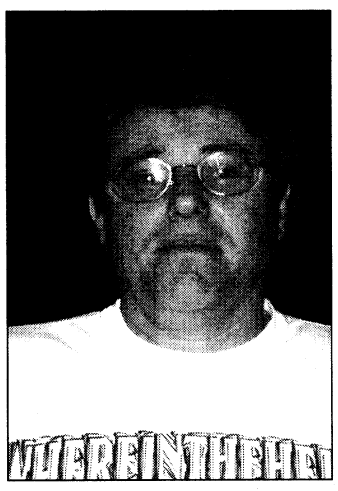
The Wheels to Heal ride is fully supported, with rest stops along all three ride options.

All three options are great rides, it's for a good cause, and you get some nice parting gifts. Other than a tailwind, what more could you ask for?

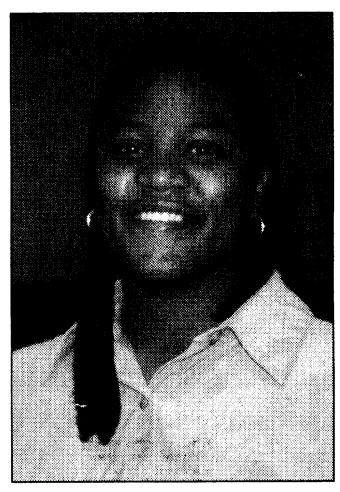
I'll be there, though I'm restricted to the short ride (still recovering from injuries sustained from being peeled off a sofa).

Look for the pink socks. And make sure you smile cheerfully when you blow by.

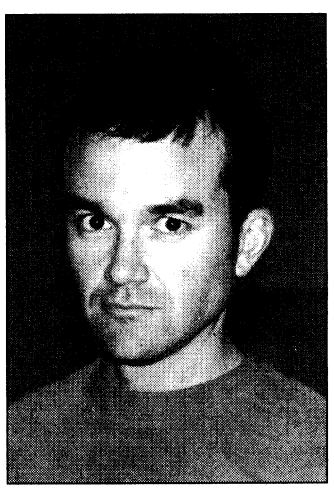
VARIOUS VOICES



We asked the cast of Benning's Backstage's Don't Drink the Water why they get involved in post activities?



Erica McNally, family member — "I'm new to the Army, new to Fort Benning and new to acting! I was looking for activities and ways to meet people. Also, I feel like the Army is a community, and this is a perfect example. The people here are friends regardless of rank or unit."



Shirley Bouie, Columbus — "I like to get involved in lots of things. I coach volleyball, I'm finishing my Ph.D, and I volunteer with Big Sisters and Make a Wish Foundation. I always wanted to be in a play, so I thought, why not? Everyone here is so nice, it's like having an instant family."

Twyman Brock, Martin Army Community Hospital — "I got involved with Benning Backstage a few years ago, and got hooked on it. I've been around the Army my entire life, and this gives me a chance to give something back. It's really rewarding."

Letitia Mallory, family member — "My husband is deployed, and I wanted something to keep me busy. I'm also a key caller with my family readiness group. I think people should get involved and keep themselves occupied. You meet new people, and it's a lot of fun."

Maj. Louis Schwartz, MEDDAC — "I auditioned for Don't Drink the Water because people told me I have the right kind of personality. It sounded like fun. Usually when I have free time, I spend it with my kids."

Jennifer Tripp, Columbus — "I've been in plays in Columbus, and there's so much more a feeling of community on post. The cast really comes together as an ensemble. Plus, my brother is in the Army, and this is a way for me to show support."

Devaughn Hailstock, Columbus — "My boyfriend is in Iraq, so I wanted something to keep me busy. This is also good, because I want to build a bigger circle of friends, and the people here are great."

RTB ramps up for Best Ranger April 22-25

Event to focus on practical military skills

Bridgett Siter
Bayonet staff

"It's the best of the past, fine-tuned." When pressed, that's how Maj. Michael McNally described the 2005 Best Ranger Competition, April 22 to 25.

As the operations officer for BRC's host unit, the Ranger Training Brigade, McNally is one of a "panel of planners" who began blueprinting the 22nd annual event last fall.

As always, RTB officials are keeping a tight lip about the details — a skeletal description will be released on the eve of competition. But McNally revealed this much: the planners relied heavily on feedback from last year's BRC, when the wartime optempo cut the number of competitors to an all-time low — 18 two-man teams. Of the 36 competitors, 21 were combat veterans.

"They said they wanted it to be more focused on military skills," McNally said. "Last year, we focused mostly on fitness and endurance, and we'll continue that, of course. But we're definitely stressing practical military skills and events this year."

The BRC is a 60-hour "Ranger Olympics," of sorts. It was established in 1982 with the objective of identifying the best two-man Ranger team in the Army through back-to-back, high-intensity events.

Teams are awarded points based on time and precision. Competitors frequently catch short naps here and there, depending on how early they complete each event, because no sleep is "programmed" into the schedule.

In a typical year, 50 teams start and less than half finish.

Still, each year, planners strive to make the competition more challenging, McNally said, and Rangers from around the world — now from the Army, Air Force and Marines — volunteer to compete for the title.

Though new events or twists on old events are added each year, BRC planners stay true to the Ranger roots, McNally said. Some events are designed to test skills the Rangers would use on today's battlefield, and others, like the hatchet throw, harken back to the days of Maj. Robert Rogers, the 18th century Ranger pioneer for whom the RTB's Camp Rogers is named. The competition begins and ends at Camp Rogers, and most of the action takes place within 60 miles of the camp.

McNally said planners for this year's BRC took a close look at past competitions and drew from what they believed were the most challenging events.

Though no one's confirming or denying, this year's competitors can expect to be tested on their marksmanship, land navigation and water skills. They can count on a roadmarch, a PT test, spot jump and obstacle course.

The public can count on plenty of excitement, said Elsie Jackson, public affairs specialist for Fort Benning. The BRC typically draws thousands of spectators. The Day Stakes on Todd Field and the Water Confidence Course at Victory Pond are "very spectator friendly," Jackson said.

The BRC also draws more media attention to Fort Benning than any other event, she said. National media, including the Outdoor Life Network and ESPN, are frequent guests. This year's competition will be aired on the Military Channel June 6. An events schedule will be published in The Bayonet April 22.

By the numbers

- The BRC is 60 hours with no programmed sleep.
- The average competitor is 28-years-old, 5 feet, 10 inches tall and 165 pounds.
- 26 percent of competitors have competed before.
- It takes about 45,000 feet of caution tape to rope off the course
- Teams share a rucksack load of about 120 pounds.
- Attrition rate averages 60 percent.

249th saves six from raging flood waters

Spc. Nikki St. Amant
Bayonet staff

As Chief Warrant Officer Michael Brooks spent the evening hours of Easter Sunday tinkering in the welding shop at Lawson Army Airfield, his crew lounged inside watching reruns of Lost, confident the weather would keep them grounded for the rest of their 24 hours of duty.

"I didn't think there was any way we would be flying that night," Brooks said. "There were weather advisories and tornado warnings."

Then the phone rang.

It was just before 8 p.m., and the Russell County, Ala., Sheriff's Department needed assistance. After 10 inches of rain soaked much of Alabama and Georgia during the weekend, waterways overflowed in small communities like Hurtsboro and Pittsview, Ala.

Brooks' unit, the National Guard's 249th Medical Company (Air Ambulance), specializes in evacuations and stepped in when emergency agencies realized they were in over their heads.

With 400- to 500-foot ceilings, wind, rain and darkness, local agencies were unable to airlift six stranded residents from a small community eight miles west of Pittsview.

Equipped with night vision devices and extensive experience in turbulent weather, the 249th team successfully navigated the 21 miles from Fort Benning to the area, rendezvoused with emergency vehicles at the scene and airlifted six people in two trips.

"With some calls, you make a huge difference and with others, they shouldn't even have called you," Brooks said. "On this one we made a difference."

Brooks said the water surrounding the elevated area where the evacuees congregated looked like a moat. By the team's second trip, the water had crept closer by several feet.

Though the 249th flies countless hours in training and conducting search, rescue and evacuation missions in the military and civilian communities, Sunday's operation was not an easy one.

"There is no such thing as routine in this business," said Chief Warrant Officer Leonard Nalbone.

When they approached the scene, emergency vehicles in the area turned on their lights to guide the chopper to a safe landing point.

"Those guys did a really good job," Brooks said. "It's nice when you are airborne in that kind of weather, even with all of our gear, to look toward the horizon and have those beacons to look for."

The 249th Medical Co. is based out of New York and Rhode Island. It provides support to Fort Benning, Fort Knox, Ky., Fort Stewart, Ga., Fort Campbell, Ky., and the Ranger Training Brigade camps in Dahlonega, Ga., and Eglin Air Force Base, Fla.

The 249th was originally activated to fill the gap left by Fort Benning's own 498th Medical Co. when the unit deployed to Iraq more than a year ago. The 498th returned last month and will wrap up block leave and transitional operations before resuming their mission.

Installations to get higher priority of funding

Plan is to fund installations at 90 percent

Eric Cramer
Army News Service

WASHINGTON — The Army has implemented a new policy that will increase annual funding for installations, Secretary of the Army Francis Harvey said March 23.

Army leaders have set a goal of funding installations at an annual rate of 90 percent of validated requirements for base operations services and for sustainment, restoration and modernization, he said.

"Well-being of Soldiers is a number-one priority for me," Harvey said.

"We decided to fund 90 percent of both what is called the BOS and SRM ....

"This is a significant change from past policy."

Harvey said the Army will also continue an aggressive barracks modernization program to bring all Army barracks up to the current standard.

"I want that cleared up this year," he said.

"We can't ask our Soldiers to go into harm's way and then ask them to live in substandard housing."

The Army will continue to program the goal of 95 percent for SRM set by the Office of the Secretary of Defense.

The new BOS and SRM policy will increase funding for installations.

The Army Budget Office will distribute the funds in phases through the Assistant Chief of Staff for Installation Management and the Installation Management Agency.

Harvey said the funds will come from other parts of the Army's budget as the Army identifies programs lagging in execution during its annual budget review.

"We have reprogramming flexibility," he said.

"I just reprioritized the funding."

He said the funding will be provided in a number of phases.

IMA will program the funds to provide infrastructure upgrades and services that have been most lacking during recent months.

Funding installations to 90 percent of requirements provides a more predictable level of funding that gives garrison commanders more control in managing their communities, he said.

Army Chief of Staff Gen. Peter J. Schoomaker has also supported the funding change.

"Our installations serve as our flagships of readiness," Schoomaker said.

"The environment in which our Soldiers train, our civilians work, and our families live plays a key role in attracting, recruiting, and retaining the high quality people the Army needs.

"To enhance combat effectiveness and enrich the workplace setting, we are reinforcing our commitment to our Army family."

IMA planners are working to implement the new funding for maximum impact on the installations, they said.

WHINSEC delegates visit Mexico

Jo Kennedy
WHINSEC Public Affairs Office

Secretary of State Condoleezza Rice recently visited Mexico to renew discussions with the country's neighbor to the south. At the same time, a Fort Benning delegation was also strengthening the bond between U.S. and Mexican militaries.

During a four-day visit to Mexico, Commandant Col. Gilberto Perez from the Department of Defense's Western Hemisphere Institute for Security Cooperation, met with Mexican military officials.

"We received a very warm reception in what looks like an improved level of Mexican participation at the Institute," said Perez, who travels throughout the year to promote WHINSEC's mission. WHINSEC instructs civilian, military, and law enforcement leaders in hemispheric security topics.

WHINSEC Operations Officer Maj. Eric D'India said the Mexican navy will likely be the first military branch to send additional officers to the U.S. to train.

"They are very open to working with us," he said. "We could see a naval officer here as early as this summer."

GI Bill can be used for Georgia job training, apprenticeships

Annette Fournier
Bayonet staff

Veterans with active-duty service can receive almost $12,000 and current National Guard and Reserve Soldiers can receive up to $3,300 in tax-free benefits for on-the-job training or apprenticeships through the Georgia Department of Veterans Service.

Former active-duty service members enrolled in the program can receive up to $753 a month, and members of the Reserves and National Guard can earn up to $216 on top of their regular salary. The VA may pay retroactively for work done over the past year.

The program was designed so service members could use their benefits for other forms of education, other than just attending college. For some, especially those who need to support a family, it can be a better option, a representative with the Georgia Department of Veteran Services said. The program supplements entry-level wages and facilitates better training in a veteran's career field.

Eligible veterans start with 36 months of benefits. While enrolled in the program, the participant receives 75 percent of their monthly payout for the Montgomery GI Bill. If a veteran later decides to go to college, the left over money is still available for use.

The program is designed for recently hired or promoted veterans with an honorable discharge who are eligible for GI Bill benefits.

To qualify for the program, job training must lead to an entry-level, paid position, must be full-time (at least 120 hours per month), and a veteran must be supervised at least 50 percent of the time. The hours worked must be documented and reported, and the learning process must last at least six months.

A veteran is only eligible if they were hired within the last two years and work in a job in which they do not have prior experience. A position must be entry-level to qualify.

Many companies participate in the program, as well as local, county and state law enforcement agencies, the Department of Corrections, and local fire departments.

There are 42 companies in Columbus that currently have veterans participating in the on-the-job training and apprenticeship program. Any company is eligible for the program, as long as the veteran meets the requirements.

Companies that participate are not put under additional strain, a representative with the Georgia Department of Veteran Services said. Veteran Services determines eligibility and does all the paperwork enrolling an individual, and then sends the paperwork to the company for approval.

To learn more, go to www.military.com. To apply, see the Web site at sdvs.georgia.gov and select State Approving Agency, or e-mail saaga@mindspring.com or call (404) 656-2306.

Airborne: Remember jump

above Fort Benning, old men stood below on the drop zone and remembered what it was really like that day in Europe.

"The weather was bad and there was a lot of flack," Martin Cullen said. "I was scared, but I'd look around at the others and see a guy who was 5-foot-2 and 110 pounds and think 'If he can do, I can do it.'"

Cullen was a private first class with the 17th Airborne Division and jumped into enemy terrain with his battle buddies, many who never came home.

"It was chaos. Planes were getting hit and dropping guys in the wrong spots," he said. "A buddy had to cut my friend out of a tree so he wouldn't get shot. Guys were just hanging from trees getting shot at before they hit the ground."

Cullen's memories of a different time and a different war hit Soldiers today hard.

"Their generation was just of a different caliber," said Ortiz.

Operation Varsity wasn't the first time Cullen saw combat. Earlier the same year, he contracted severe trench foot in the same area along the Rhine. He was shipped back to England with frozen hands and feet. Doctors expected to amputate, but Cullen recovered and returned to the front, this time jumping from a plane.

His wife Marge said the ceremony brought back lots of emotions.

"It makes you cry a little bit, and it makes you choke up," she said. "It makes you proud to come to things like this, but you always think maybe this is the last one when you get older. The ones who didn't make it for this one missed a great event."

Editor's note: Staff writer Tawny Archibald Campbell contributed to this article.

NCO of Year: Wants win time to spend with his wife Deanna and 5-year-old daughter, Peyton.

"It's not easy, I'm not going to lie," he said. "But it's worth it."

Capt. Jake Kurtzman, Conner's company commander, describes Conner as the hardest working guy in his company.

"He's dedicated himself to do this, and he studies all the time," Kurtzman said. "At every board they say he's the most professional and most proficient there. He just wants to excel and represent his unit as best he can.

"He's a master of his trade back at 6th RTB. He's a great Ranger instructor and a good family man who is dedicated to his wife and daughter."

Spending quality time with his family is at the top of his free-time activities, followed by playing football and basketball, boxing, camping and fishing.

But for now, most of those activities are on hold, at least until the Best Ranger Competition is over at the end of the month.

"You have to completely commit yourself to the goal," Conner said. "This is something I have wanted to do for a long time, to compete against the best in my field."

Kurtzman said the hard work and commitment Conner has shown is contagious in the unit.

"He's a great example," Kurtzman said. "We have another Soldier starting the NCO process, and he is trying to meet the standards Conner set."

"He's a role model to other Soldiers, and they speak highly of him and want to be like him. I think he'll reach his goal and be a command sergeant major someday."

Soldier: Grows up in Haiti

Joseph joined the Florida Reserves in December 2002 and went to basic training in Fort Leonard Wood, Mo., a month later.

"I didn't ask for a bonus or for the best MOS, I just wanted to go," Joseph said.

In June 2004, she decided to go active duty and was assigned to B Company, 2nd Battalion, 54th Infantry Regiment, at Sand Hill as a supply specialist.

"The Reserves was not challenging enough for me," Joseph said.

"I decided if I was going to do this, I was going to do it full time. My mom doesn't really understand what I do here, because there is no military in Haiti. She doesn't understand that this is a career for me.

"She's proud of me, but if I were to tell her today that I won Soldier of the Year, I would have to sit down and explain it to her, step by step, and she still wouldn't get it."

To prepare for the Soldier of the Year competition Joseph had to pass five boards and went before 12 pre-boards. She "sacrificed" her Christmas Exodus to study for a January board, and she wakes at 3 a.m. to study.

"I even study in my sleep," Joseph said. "I run, do pushups and sit-ups in my sleep, and then I wake up exhausted."

However, Joseph said now she can see the fruits of her sacrifices and understands why she studied so hard.

"What really set her above the rest was her preparation, and she owes a lot of the credit to the NCOs who coordinated the boards, especially First Sergeant Cedric Burnes," said Capt. Jeff Huston, Joseph's company commander.

"She's in a company where she is the only (lower enlisted) Soldier. Everyone else is an NCO. That's why I really tip my hat to the NCOs who are in the company. She had a lot of help getting prepared, and she was more prepared than she thought she was."

Within the past nine months Joseph excelled and has been decorated with three Army Achievement Medals and two Army Commendation Medals.

"She is the type of Soldier I can tell to do something, and I know it's getting done. She needs very little guidance," Huston said. "She has great personality and is very flexible, very adaptable and very diverse. She's an excellent Soldier, but at same time, she can separate herself by doing cross-stitch, reading and going for her associate's degree. Her biggest strength is multi-tasking."

Joseph is now preparing to compete in the Armywide Soldier of the Year competition at the Combined Arms Center this June.

"She has already begun preparing for that," Huston said.

"She does foot marches on her own, she qualifies with her M-16 and is honing all her Soldier skills. I think her chances (of winning) are very good."

Vice Chief of Staff awards captain Bronze Star for valor, Purple Heart

Spc. Nikki St. Amant
Bayonet staff

Capt. Charles E. Greene received the Bronze Star with valor device and the Purple Heart from Vice Chief of Staff of the Army Gen. Richard Cody in a ceremony March 24 in Infantry Hall.

Greene's awards stemmed from his deployment to Iraq from September 2003 to February 2004. Greene worked as an advisor to the 22nd Battalion of the Iraqi Intervention Force. While assigned to the unit, he was involved in several combat engagements and was shot in the head during a sniper ambush in Mosul.

His leadership, courage and tactical proficiency were essential to the accomplishment of the unit's mission to provide security and stability to the region before, during and after the January elections, according to his award narrative.

It is highly unusual for the vice chief of staff to award individual decorations. Cody traveled to Fort Benning for Greene's award ceremony at the request of Gen. David Petraeus. Petraeus, the Multi-National Security Transition Command-Iraq commander, hand-picked Greene for the assignment with the 22nd, but couldn't come back to the United States to award him his decorations.

Greene's wife, Cynthia, said her husband is a humble man, and she wasn't surprised when he chose not to make any remarks during the ceremony.

"He's one of those people whose reputation speaks for itself. His uniform speaks for itself," she said.

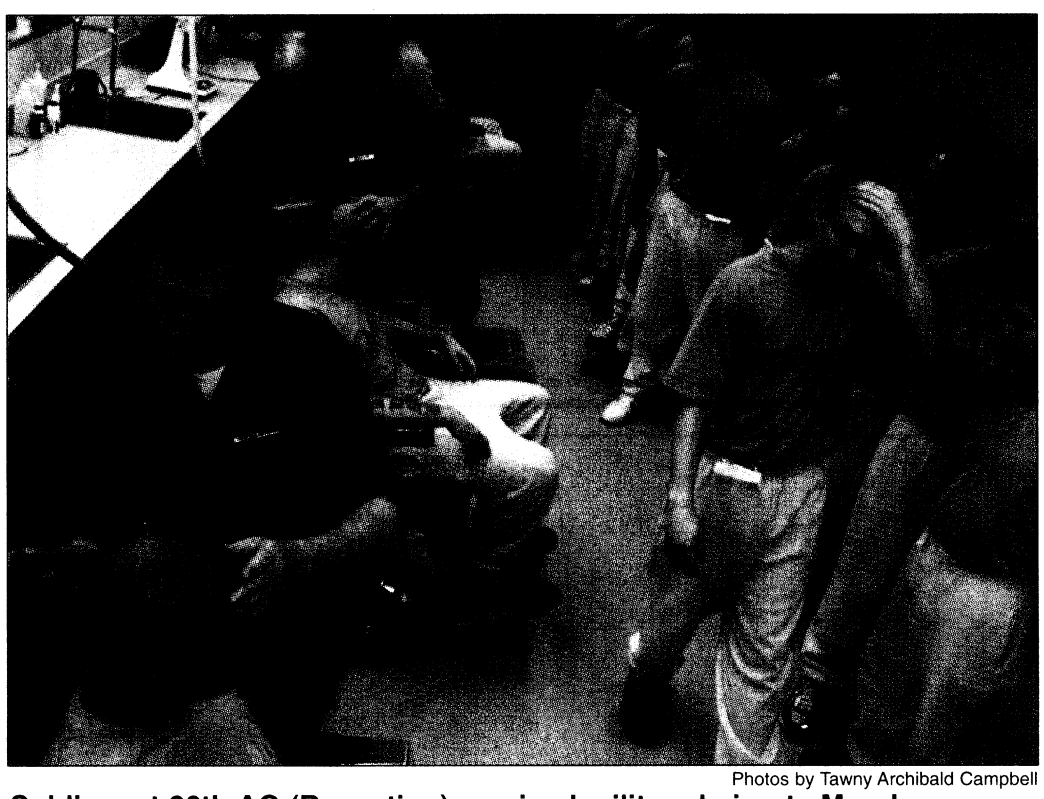
Cynthia said humility isn't the only trait that makes Greene the man he is. He is known around the world for his courage, determination and personal pride.

"He's always been this kind of guy," Cynthia said. "I wouldn't expect anything else.

As an enlisted Soldier with the 75th Ranger Regiment in 1990, he was in a training accident involving mortar rounds. He was sprayed with shrapnel up and down his body. He returned to work in a matter of weeks. He still carries the shrapnel.

In 2003, he fell from a deer stand in Texas and broke six vertabrae in his spine. Doctors predicted he would be unable to work for five to six months. Greene said, "Nobody is going to take my command." He returned to duty 30 days later, and was in Iraq 90 days after that.

Lying in bed on life support after surgery in Germany for his gunshot wound, he wrote a note to medical staff. "Okay, you've patched me up. When can I go back?" it read.



Greene continues to recover from his wounds. He has lost hearing in his left ear and has problems with his equilibrium, but his doctors are impressed with his recovery and say his eardrum has begun to rebuild itself.

NEWS FROM THE FRONT

3rd Brigade making history

3rd Brigade Combat Team PAD

BAQUBA, Iraq — History was made March 24 in the province of Diyala at the Provincial Government Building, otherwise known as the "Blue Dome," in Baquba, Iraq.

In a formal ceremony, Ra'ad Hameed Juwad assumed duties as governor of the Diyala Province. Abdullah Rasheed Hassan peacefully stepped down from his position as appointed governor, a position he has held for nearly two years.

The ceremony marked the first democratic and peaceful transition of power in the Diyala Province.

Elsewhere in the province, every Battalion Task Force in the "Sledgehammer" Brigade Combat Team has been working to bring peace and stability to Diyala Province.

The 203rd Forward Support Battalion deployed custom made up-armor troop transport vehicles for safe troop transport.

B Company installed the up-armored system to transport troops to Logistical Support Area Anaconda, in Balad, for R&R. The trucks have double layered HARDOX steel side walls, a HARDOX steel floor with Kevlar blankets, low profile seats, three-point seat belts and a roll cage.

The up-armored truck is part of a detailed Combat Logistics Patrol, which includes a dedicated cadre and permanently assigned security platforms to ensure safe transport of our nation's most precious cargo … our Soldiers.

The 203rd FSB also conducted Operation Lightning Eagle, a reconnaissance and information operation mission around Forward Operating Base Warhorse March 19.

During the operation, Soldiers distributed leaflets to Iraqi citizens in the village of Al Dulaimi.

The mission determined that the two major tribes in the area are concerned about the fact that irrigation water was cut off when a culvert collapsed on FOB Warhorse.

Soldiers informed local citizens the culvert is being repaired and irrigation water will soon flow again. The mission was completed when Soldiers delivered toys and clothes to local children.

On Forward Operating Base Gabe, the 2nd Bn., 34 Armor Regt., conducted a Joint Training Skills Course to teach Iraqi army and police combat and peacekeeping skills. As more Iraqi security forces are trained, Diyala security forces continue to demonstrate increased capabilities.

Iraqi security forces in Diyala are also demonstrating increased responsibility and continued resolve to defeat insurgent forces and secure peace.

In conjunction with this valuable training, 2-34 delivered new weapons, body armor and office furniture to the Jedida police station.

The Iraqi police have shown tremendous professionalism while working with TF 2-34; and the delivery of new equipment will enhance their ability to continue proactive law enforcement in their community.

In two small villages, Bodiger and Al Jizani, 2-34 Soldiers in C Co. conducted a community outreach visit.

These visits enable Soldiers to work together with local communities and Iraqi Security Forces to address the needs of the local citizens. 2-34 Soldiers gathered information about the general quality of life in each of the towns.

The assessments also provide a medium for Iraqi communities to voice their opinions.

On another visit in As Saddah, 2-34 Soldiers working with Iraqi army soldiers and Iraqi children handed out handbills to passing motorists.

These handbills encouraged people to report anti-Iraqi forces activity to their local joint coordination center.

This demonstrates the resolve of the Iraqi army to defeat the anti-Iraqi forces activity as well as the strength and determination of Iraqi children to live in a free and peaceful Iraq.

To improve overall security in the region, Task Force 2-34 and a number of Diyala police chiefs met at Forward Operating Base Gabe March 20 to discuss ways to better coordinate joint operations between Coalition and Iraqi security forces. The meeting allowed the police chiefs to voice their concerns and their ideas.

In the Task Force 2-69 Armor Battalion area, Soldiers also work closely with the local population. Members of 1st Platoon, D Company 2-69 Armor and Maj. Sean Hood, the Civil Affairs Team leader, recently delivered supplies to the Khalis Hospital.

As the region becomes increasingly secure, more supplies are arriving and the Khalis Hospital is able to improve medical care.

2-69 Soldiers are also working closely with the 204th Iraqi Army Battalion to enlist the help of the local citizens in an ongoing effort to improve security.

Recently, the 204th along with Engineers from 1st Platoon, D Company, 2nd Bn., 69th Armor placed billboards along roads and at checkpoints. The signs warn drivers if the area has been used by anti-Iraqi forces to emplace roadside bombs, and gives two emergency numbers that can be used to report suspicious activity.

2nd Bn., 69th Armor Soldiers also work closely with the Iraqi police every day.

In addition to working with Iraqi police, 2-69 Soldiers work every day with the Iraqi Army. On March 19, Iraqi soldiers from 4th Platoon, B Company, 204th Iraqi Army Battalion conducted squad-level training with 2-69 Armor's Iraqi Army Cadre at Forward Operating Base Scunion. The training focused on dismounted patrolling, reporting procedures, and basic rifle marksmanship. This training enhances the 204th Iraqi Army Battalion's ability, effectiveness, and motivation.

In the Mukdadia Area, Task Force 1-30 works closely with the Iraqi army and the Iraqi police every day.

On March 17, Task Force 1-30, and the Iraqi police passed the message that the population can depend on the police to provide them with security. Moreover, the police were supplied with educational booklets to disseminate to local citizens.

Task Force 1-30 has also conducted a number of combat operations with the Iraqi Army's 205th Battalion. Together, Task Force 1-30 and the 205th Iraqi Army Battalion have captured over a dozen suspected terrorists.

They have also seized:

70 sticks of TNT; 70 antitank mines; 30 blasting caps, three blocks of C-4 explosive; 30 feet of detonation cord; one rocket propelled grenade launcher; three rocket propelled grenade rounds; 15 81 mm mortar rounds; two 60 mm mortar rounds; one 120 mm tank round; 14 pistols; 72 AK-47 magazines, fully loaded; 13 magazines for 9 mm pistols; one bayonet; one flare pistol

Task Force 1-30 is also involved with the Iraqi Army Academy. On March 21, the Iraqi Army Academy on Forward Operating Base Normandy graduated four officers from its first combat leader's course. The officers will report back to their respective units having undergone rigorous training covering subjects from leadership values to close quarter's battle.

The instructors at the Academy are confident their work will directly influence the future security of Iraq.

In down town Baquba, Soldiers from Task Force 1-10 Field Artillery regularly conduct joint operations with the 213th Iraqi Army Battalion.

NEWS FROM THE FRONT

A day in the life of 36th Eng.

Sgt. Jason Sewell
36th Engineer Group

Each section of the 36th Engineer Group has an important role in the success of the daily activities and missions.

And everyone here, from private to the group commander, will tell you the same.

This is a "day in the life" look at what the 36th Engineer Group is doing in Iraq.

The design management team loads into two light, medium tactical vehicles and two humvees and travels to the "master plans" shop, where they assign tasks to all its members from surveying to drawing plans.

By this time, the S-6 communications shop has already switched shifts.

The night operations NCO, Sgt. Terry Meeks, hops a ride to the dining facility to get breakfast before heading to his trailer to sleep the day away, and the morning shift takes over.

The time is now 1000 hours, and the personal security detachment is gearing up for convoy operations.

The PSD has been charged to escort Col. James Brooks to the many places he travels within Iraq.

Though they stay busy and in the line of fire, the PSD remains confident in their equipment and faithful to the charge that has been set for them.

Sgt. Chad Shier, the PSD NCOIC, ensures the vehicles are in tiptop shape and each member has all the required and special parts of the convoy uniform.

The S-3 handles engineer tactical operations throughout Baghdad for the group. There is always someone in the tactical operations center 24 hours a day, seven days a week.

During the day, Master Sgt. Bruce Machado and Maj. Michael Fitzgerald call the shots. At night, Capt. Eric Dirks and Staff Sgt. Tony Harris keep their eyes and ears open for any calls from route clearance patrols and other nighttime operations.

In the next part of this series, we will take a stroll to the chaplain's office and finish at the motor pool. We will also cover the missions of the Supply Section, the S-1 Administrative, and S-2 Security Shops.

Though this part of the article is over, the story is only beginning.

On April 1, 1998, Burger King took out an ad in USA Today introducing a left-handed Whopper with condiments placed in such a way as to prevent "dripping" out the right-hand side. Thousands of customers ordered the burger before the company announced the next day that it was an April Fools Day joke.

April is Child Abuse Prevention Month

Rebecca S. Welch
Family Advocacy Program

Since 1983, Child Abuse Prevention Month has become institutionalized nationwide. During April in observance of Child Abuse Prevention Month and Month of the Military Child the Army Community Service Center Family Advocacy Program at Fort Benning and organizations, businesses, hospitals, schools, religious organizations, and social service agencies are joining forces to promote public awareness of child abuse and its prevention.

• Every individual in the Fort Benning area has a special role to play in improving the welfare of our children. Whether or not you work directly with children, by combining your unique skills with a general knowledge of child abuse issues, you too can make a difference in the life of a child. Education and public awareness are the keys to prevention. The Family Advocacy Program hopes that you will find the following information valuable and will join us in helping prevent child abuse and neglect.

What is child abuse?

The term "child abuse" can be defined as any behavior directed toward a child by a parent, guardian, caregiver, other family member, or other adult that endangers or impairs a child's physical or emotional health and development. Child abuse includes four major categories; physical abuse, sexual abuse, emotional abuse, and neglect.

What are the signs of possible physical abuse?

• Unexplained injuries, especially those located on parts of the body not usually affected by normal childhood activities, (e.g. eyes, mouth, back, thighs, buttocks, genital areas, etc.).

• Repeated injuries such as bruises, welts or burns,

Plans set for Riverfest

Smashmouth, Sugarland to headline

Historic Columbus Foundation

The 36th annual Riverfest Weekend will light up Columbus with national headliners, food, events, cultural and historical activities, art, and fun for kids and adults alike, April 22 to 24 in downtown Columbus's historical district, on Broadway and Front streets.

Festivities kick off with the Kitchen Tour of Homes, Culinary Demonstrations and Fine Art Exhibition Preview Party April 21. Attendees can tour six Historic District homes, some of which have never been open to the public.

One festival feature, the Salisbury Fair showcases art, crafts, traditional arts and crafts, a kids' fun zone, flea market, 5K and one-mile fun run, costumed "Pooch Promenade, "Wacky Hat" contest, "Teen Battle of the Bands," fireworks and a food court.

Kids can experience favorites such as sidewalk chalk art, the Birds of Prey Show, World of Broadcasting, animal displays, newspaper hat making, face painting and hands-on art projects. Children can also participate in the Pooch Promenade, a costume parade for pets.

Visitors can experience the culture of India with a Mehendi (henna) hands station, the Rangoli and Kolam station in which rice powder will be used to create geometric designs, a dance performance and workshop, and information booths and food tastings.

In the Native American primitive skills and cultural presentation, representatives from the Creek people will demonstrate drumming, dancing, storytelling, and hands-on skills.

In the Pig Jig, about 30 teams will compete to cook the best barbecue April 22. Visitors can taste the barbecue of five teams competing for the "People's Choice" award, and watch the Iron Chef barbecue battle. Everyone is invited to enter the contest and showcase their culinary skills in the Iron Chef competition. National vendors will offer a vast array of treats, from gourmet desserts to greasy delights.

The festival's four stages are booked solid throughout the festival. Headliners include the platinum-selling band Smash-mouth, country artist Phil Vassar, country trio Sugarland. Other featured music includes jazz, bluegrass, contemporary gospel and folk. At a battle of the bands, local teens will compete for $400 in prize money.

Proposed bill would make pit bulls illegal in Ga.

Melissa House
Bayonet staff

You may have heard about legislation making the rounds in the Georgia House of Representatives that would ban pit bulls.

Sponsors of House Bill 78 would make it illegal for anyone to "import, sell, transport, carry, own, keep or otherwise possess any live pit bull within the state." The term pit bull includes American pit bull and American Staffordshire terriers and Staffordshire bull terriers, or any dog displaying the majority of physical traits of those breeds. Hearings were held on the bill on Feb. 17.

Gerald Wilson and his wife, Robin, are opposed to this and other breed-specific legislation and are championing their cause.

"We see the other side of what the media puts out," Gerald said. "There's a lot of sensationalism, and that has caused problems for the breed."

He said few people have the opportunity to find a pit bull in its normal state.

"Their history in the U.S. generally has nothing to do with them chewing up on children and the elderly."

In fact, Gerald said, the pit bull is one of the most decorated dogs in the history of the military. President, Theodore Roosevelt had a bull terrier.

Robin is the Georgia and Alabama representative for the American Canine Foundation, a group fighting breed-specific laws across the country. Pit bull bans exist in several states and in Ontario, Canada, and the United Kingdom.

> "Pits have gotten a bad reputation at the hands of irresponsible owners and any dog treated aggressively will be aggressive."

> Georgia and Alabama representative for the American Canine Foundation

Robin made four trips to Atlanta to discuss the proposed bill and said she found a lawmaker who was generally uninformed. She provided him with data from 1965 to the present on the 40 different breeds involved in fewer than 500 fatal attacks.

"The fact is that any dog with teeth will bite given the right conditions," Robin said. "Pits have gotten a bad reputation at the hands of irresponsible owners and any dog treated aggressively will be aggressive."

She's adamant that breed-specific legislation, like House Bill 78, deprives dog owners of their Constitutional rights to due process and equal protection under the law.

"It's wrong to single out a breed and its owners," she said. "Fatal dog attacks are an education problem." She urges parents to learn about basic canine behaviors and to teach their children about dogs and bite prevention.

Robin said she had not had much exposure to the pit bull breeds until about three years ago, when she, as part

ASK THE JUDGE

Anthony R. Tempesta
Office of the Staff Judge Advocate

Q: Must someone accept a power of attorney?

A: A common legal question is whether or not a business must accept a power of attorney.

Each year, Army legal assistance offices prepare tens of thousands of powers of attorney, but are they good in all cases?

Technically, a power of attorney, which gives someone (the grantee) the right to act on someone else's behalf (the grantor), does not have to be accepted.

It is not a good business practice to refuse one, however, because the reason why a power of attorney is used is because the grantor cannot be there to conduct that business.

When a power of attorney is refused, the most common reason for rejection is that it is considered to be too broad.

A general power of attorney, in which the grantor gives the grantee unlimited power, may not show specific intent in the eyes of some banks, creditors and real estate companies.

To ensure that the grantor really wants to give that power, some companies require the use of their own power of attorney or specific language that they have chosen.

Fortunately, this is the exception rather than the rule, but it happens on occasion.

Anyone who plans to use a power of attorney should contact the business where it will be presented ahead of time, and ensure that the existing power of attorney will be accepted.

of the Lonesome Dove Animal Rescue, began taking in dogs to prevent them from being euthanized in area shelters. Last year, the nonprofit organization rescued more than 600 dogs, including 80 to 100 pit bulls.

"I got a lot of hands-on with the pits," she said. "And we saw how wonderful this breed is."

Robin is talking specifically about the American pit bull terrier, a dog she says is very popular and used for a variety of things, but one also misidentified and more maligned than any other breed. Lonesome Dove has pit bulls that are certified as pet therapists through the Delta Society.

"These dogs go to schools and nursing homes," disproving the generalization that pit bulls and pit bull mixes are inherently aggressive dogs, she said. Her favorite rescued dog, Halo, came to the shelter severely malnourished, with a a logging chain embedded in her neck.

"She's a good example. If ever a dog had a reason to hate people — this dog did," she said. Halo is now one of the certified therapy dogs.

Robin said the breed's ability to focus on tasks makes them good at agility and even search and rescue. Lonesome Dove runs criminal background checks on any person adopting one of the pit bull breeds or pit bull mixes.

Robin said Lonesome Dove rehomes a number of dogs surrendered by military families due to housing situations and permanent changes of station, She offered a few words of wisdom for owners and prospective owners.

"Don't get an animal on impulse. They take a lifetime of commitment. If you want something that will never cause trouble — get a pet rock," she said. "And if you have to move and can't take your animal, start looking for a home early. We can't help you if you're leaving tomorrow."

Abuse: Societal, not Army, problem

especially those where the shape of an object used to produce them is visible, (e.g. an electric cord, hair brush, belt buckle, board, cigarette, etc.).

• Unexplained fractures, (e.g. to nose, face, ribs, legs, arms, etc.).

• Denial on the part of parents that anything is wrong, unlikely explanations for the child's injuries, delay in obtaining medical care or inadequate care given, injuries which occur with increasing frequency or severity.

What about child neglect?

Child neglect is the continued failure to provide a child with necessary care and protection including adequate shelter, food, clothing, medical care, etc. Children left without appropriate supervision, especially young children, for extended periods of time are included in child neglect.

• Child appears poorly nourished, or inadequately clothed.

• Child appears consistently tired or listless and always seems as though no one cares. Attendance at school may be inconsistent.

• Child evidences a consistent lack of good hygiene or an obsession with cleanliness.

• Child is left alone regularly over long periods of time, or in dangerous situations.

• Child shows evidence that medical needs are not met.

What is emotional abuse?

Emotional abuse is the most difficult form of child abuse to verify. It includes both verbal assaults and the withholding of positive emotional support. Although the scars may be invisible to the naked eye, emotional abuse wounds the spirit, frequently leaving its marks for a lifetime. Victims of emotional child abuse are "hit" everyday with the power of words which are demeaning, shaming, threatening, blaming, intimidating, unfairly critical, or sarcastic in nature.

The child displays behavior that is extreme, e.g. may be involved in a pattern of lying, stealing, fighting, or is overly aggressive, acts out inappropriately.

• Child may appear defensive, shy, or overly dependent.

• Child may be verbally abusive to others by using the same language and demeaning terms she or he has experienced.

What about sexual abuse and its effect on children?

Incest, sexual molestation, rape, sodomy, child pornography, exhibitionism, and exploitation are terms most often used when describing child sexual abuse. Those who sexually victimize children suffer from an emotional or psychological dysfunction, usually as a result of their own previous sexual victimization.

They often have severe sexual problems and difficulty relating to adults. Many are adults with whom the child is familiar, and they may repeatedly abuse the same child. An adult who is a stranger to the child will often abuse that child only once but will continue to abuse other children.

The abuse can be non-physical — for example, indecent exposure, obscene phone calls, or "peeping toms," physical — including genital or oral stimulation, fondling and intercourse; and violent abuse — rape and other forms of sexually violent behavior.

• Incidents may occur only once or be repeated many times, sometimes over a number of years.

• A single seemingly minor incident, e.g. indecent exposure, fondling, or an obscene phone call, may cause temporary emotional disturbances such as embarrassment, fear, confusion, guilt, anxiety, and a distrust of adults or strangers.

• A more severe incident, e.g. incest, rape, sodomy, exposure to pornographic activity or other forms of sexual violence, may have a lasting effect on the child.

• Behavioral problems such as withdrawal, difficulty at school, aggression, running away, nightmares, extreme depression or anxiety may result.

• Physical signs of sexual abuse may include genital swelling, cuts or bruises, venereal disease, pregnancy, etc. Symptoms resulting from emotional harm often do not surface until adulthood.

What to do if you discover a child has been sexually abused

• First and foremost, DO NOT DENY THE PROBLEM. Believe what the child tells you no matter how unbelievable it sounds.

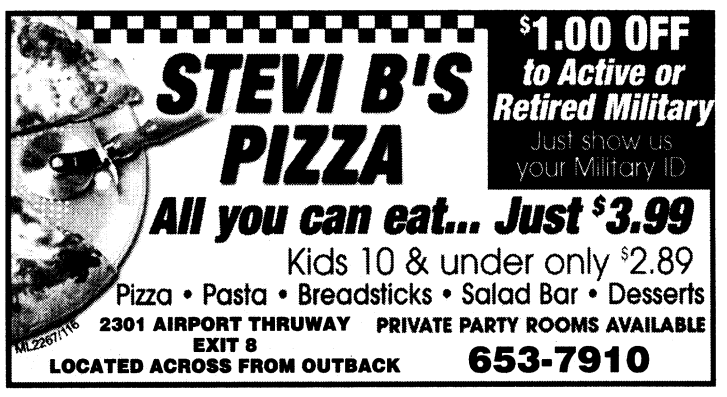
• Control your emotions. Fear and anger on your part are natural reactions but may be frightening to the child. Let the child know that your feelings are not directed at him or her.

• NEVER blame, punish, or embarrass the child.

• Reassure the child that she/he is safe and that it was right to tell you. Let the child ask questions, and then provide answers that can be understood.

• Find out as much as possible about the events leading up to, during, and after the incident. BUT... do so delicately. If the molester was a stranger get a description of the face, clothes, location, car, etc.

• Immediately contact a physician for treatment of physical injuries and the police to report the abuse. Provide them with as much information as possible to better ensure their appropriate intervention.



• Seek counseling for both the child and yourself as soon as possible. Immediate intervention can help prevent long term lingering effects of the abuse.

Remember

• Keeping children safe is the responsibility of everyone. The more we know about the problem of child abuse the more we can do to prevent it. We all must do our part. This information has been provided to you by the Family Advocacy Program and the National Council on Child Abuse and Family Violence.

For more information on Child Abuse Prevention, call Family Advocacy Program Manager at 545-7517.

Watch your words

Chaplain (Maj.) Patrick R. Basal
Installation Chaplains Office

REFLECTIONS

"People can tame all kinds of animals and birds and reptiles and fish, but no one can tame the tongue. It is an uncontrollable evil, full of deadly poison. Sometimes it praises our Lord and Father, sometimes it breaks out into curses against those who have been made in the image of God. And so blessing and cursing come pouring out of the same mouth. Surely, this is not right! Can both fresh water and salt water flow from the same spring? Can you pick olives from a fig tree or figs from a grapevine? No, and you can't draw fresh water from a salty pool."

— James 3:7-12

Here we go again. Our friend James is revisiting the problems we have controlling our tongues. He recognizes how powerful an impact our speech has on how we live our lives. His warnings of the dangers we face and the damage we cause with our speech is well worth heeding.

James' word pictures in the first 12 verses are powerful images of what happens when we do not control our tongues.

He compares the tongue to the reins of a horse and a rudder on a ship to show us the impact speech has on our lives.

He compares our words to a great forest fire or poison to impress upon us the need to watch what we say.

It's so easy to criticize or say something cutting about one another.

It's so tempting to gossip and spread rumors. But what about the person we hurt with our wagging tongue, and what damage have you done in that person's life and their relationships with others?

How do we go back and correct what we have done? Apologizing doesn't always heal the wound or repair the damage, but it is a place to start.

The one who has his or her tongue under control has a mature faith.

James' warning must not be ignored. Just as fruit on a tree identifies the tree, and the quality of the water characterizes the source, our speech is a good indicator of our spiritual condition.

Can we have Christ in our hearts and spew gossip, rumors and slander?

Can we profess to be a child of God and have no regard of the lies that fall effortlessly from our lips?

Can we bless God with our lips on Sunday and spread rumors and gossip the rest of the week?

Are your prayer requests a disguise for gossip? Are you truly helping the other person by telling others, or are you doing more harm spreading rumors in the name of "Christian love?"

The product from our mouth is a good indicator of the state of our heart.

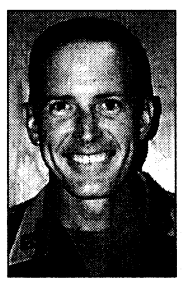
If people only hear our words, would they consider us one of God's children?

If our words are our only fruit, what kind of tree would we be called?

Our lives may be the only Bible some people may read.

I want you to follow and subscribe to a simple formula, and apply it before speaking to any person or subject that is perhaps controversial. It comes from the book A Passion for Preaching, by Alan Redpath: THINK before you speak!

T — Is it true?
H — Is it helpful?
I — Is it inspiring?
N — Is it necessary?
K — Is it kind?



Weed out the unnecessary

Chaplain (Maj.) Jeffrey Hawkins
Chaplain Family Life Center

As I stood looking out the front doors of the chapel, there was no escaping it — Easter was only one week away, and though I had great hopes for a beautiful bed of spring flowers to greet seekers on the biggest day of the year, I was staring at a gnarly patch of of ugly weeds.

That patch of untapped potential was a living illustration of a quote I heard long ago — "Where there's no gardener, there is no garden."

Isn't it funny that in life we often think we can toss out a few seeds, put our schedules and relationships on autopilot and somehow come up with a stunningly beautiful garden, "smelling" like roses, without the careful pruning, care and nurture that any garden takes.

Hawkins

Have you ever found yourself wondering, "How on Earth did my life get like this?"

It's as if to say, "Where did all these weeds in my life come from — I wanted this gorgeous garden, and I've got a patch full of weeds choking the life out of me?"

If you've ever felt like that, you're not alone.

But there is hope, because where there is a gardener, there can be a beautiful garden.

How do you tend the garden of your life? In the bestseller First Things First, Stephen Covey talks about "Quadrant II Organizing." Essentially that means, as the gardener of your own soul, you best tend your life by first identifying what's important in your garden. You see to it that it grows. But you also spot what's unimportant, or merely urgent, and apply weed killer to those things.

In the Army, as well as in other walks of American life, it's far too common to fall prey to "urgency addiction." Many things can be urgent, but unimportant.

"You've got mail" flashes on your computer. The phone rings ... again. Appeals for this, that or the other bombard your daytimer. Activities pop up, like crabgrass, choking out any hope of clear space on your calendar. What to do? It's time to do some weeding.

How do you determine what's truly important versus what's merely urgent?

Well, more often than I care to admit, I have to use the "casket test." When the weeds get so tall and the demands on my time so many that I can barely figure out where I'm standing in the garden, I ask myself this question: "Who's going to cry over the casket at my funeral?"

Now I'll admit that's a little morbid — but it's also a great weed eater. It's very helpful in putting first things first.

More often than not, the answer helps me choose between the important things (and people) in my life and those things (and people) that are relatively unimportant or merely urgent demands.

As you tend your garden this week, here's wishing you your own gardening tool to pull up the weeds of urgency and unimportance so the things that matter most can blossom.

For information, call the Family Life Center at 545-1760.

"Sad folks wake up and say, 'Nuther day.'
I wake up and say, 'There she is again! There it is!
I get on my knees and pat the earth and say,
'God, you done it again!
God, you done good!
Thank you, feller ... friend."

THE BAYONET SPORTS

In 1940, on the eve of a mass parachute jump at Fort Benning, a paratrooper named Aubrey Eberhardt watched a movie about Geronimo, the 19th century Apache leader. Eberhardt told his buddies he was going to shout "Geronimo!" the next day when he jumped, to prove he wasn't scared. He did, and they followed suit. It wasn't long before all paratroopers adopted the war cry, and of course, the nation soon followed. Once again, the Infantry led the way.

• Fred de-Funk-ified

Fred Funk, 48, won The Players Championship in a soggy Ponte Vedra Beach, Fla.

This weekend the guys will hit the links in the BellSouth Classic in Duluth, Ga., a warm-up to The Masters, Thursday through April 10 in Augusta. Can Lefty win back-to-back?

• Final Four

I was glued to the Elite Eight games, watching major upsets and overtimes — for the best of college basketball, the Final Four starts at 6:07 p.m. Saturday night on CBS with Louisville taking on Illinois, immediately followed by Michigan State going against North Carolina at 8:47 p.m.

The NCAA Championship from St. Louis, Mo., is at 9 p.m. Monday on CBS.

• Dude, where's my show?

Venus and Serena Williams will star in a six-episode "reality" series this July on ABC Family. Who's next, Barry Bonds?

• What a weekend

This weekend is going to be a great sports weekend on TV.

Saturday afternoon is the PGA, followed by the Final Four Saturday night.

Sunday will start with NASCAR, the Food City 500, 12:30 p.m. on FOX, and cap off with the MLB season opener, the Boston Red Sox at the New York Yankees at 8:05 p.m. on ESPN2.

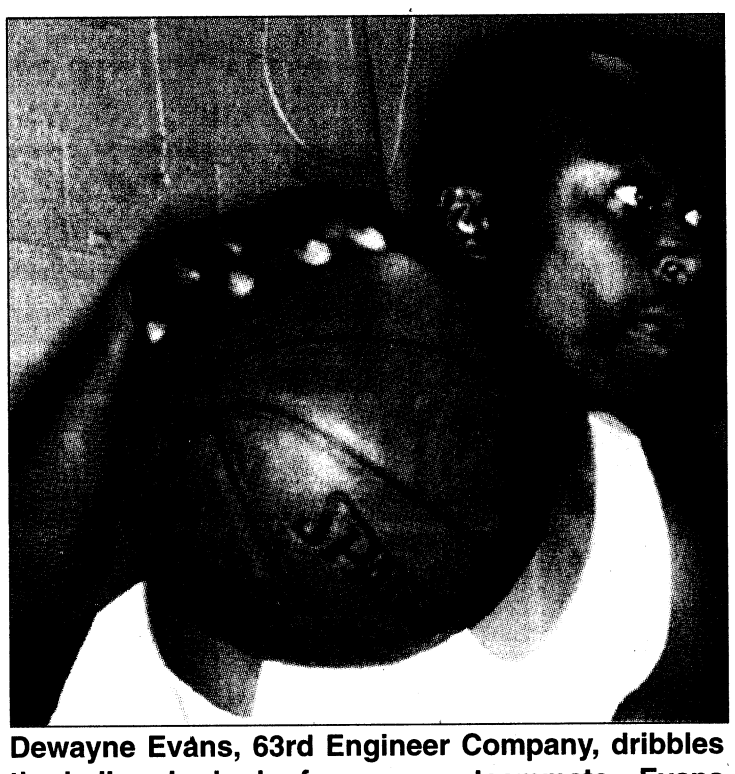
Six Soldiers of the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit shot their way onto the 2005 U.S. Shotgun World Championship Team during the USA Shooting Spring Selection Match March 16 to 26 at Hook Range.

Olympic Bronze Medalist Sgt. 1st Class James "Todd" Graves and Sgt. Mark L. Weeks were named to the Men's Skeet Team. Three-time Olympian Sgt. 1st Class Bret E. Erickson made the Men's Double Trap and Trap teams.

1996 Olympian Sgt. 1st Class Theresa E. DeWitt and 2004 Olympic alternate, Staff Sgt. Joetta R. Dement, made the Women's Trap Team, and Pvt. Joshua M. Richmond made the Junior Double Trap World Championship Team as well as the U.S. Championship of the Americas Team. The conditions didn't seem to inspire any of the other double trap shooters to the same success.

Erickson, a 2004 Olympian in this event finished with a 41 in the final, for a total score of 572. Two-time Olympian and reigning World Champion, Glenn Eller of Houston, Texas, was third with a 568.

Richmond led the junior men's finishers with a 555 total score. Richmond will be joined by National Development Team members Matthew Drexler and Corey Sidorek at the Championship of the Americas Games later this year.



This was the second of two selection matches to choose the U.S. World Championship Shotgun Team and Championship of the Americas Team.

The 63rd Engineer Company out-ran, out-shot and out-played the 30th Adjutant General Battalion in basketball Tuesday night at Audie Murphy gym.

The 63rd took off with a 10-0 lead in less than seven minutes and never really looked back. 30th AG spent most of the first half trying to catch up.

Other than a nice three-pointer by Jamal Reid, 30th AG's play on the half was unremarkable, leaving them down nine points going into the second half.

With the score, 26-17, as the whistle blew to start the period, 30th AG came out fighting. Within minutes, the 63rd found itself defending a narrow two-point lead after Marvin McNeil hit a nice jump shot to bring 30th AG within striking distance.

After more than six-minutes without scoring, the 63rd finally broke the spell, scoring two with a shot by David Odem. But 30th AG was close on their heels. A three-pointer by Howard Galloway tied the game at 30-30.

That was the closest 30th AG came though. A string of fouls and a three-pointer by the 63rd's Scott Mays all contributed to a 12-point run that gave the 63rd a commanding lead at 42-30.

The two teams traded points until the last minute of the game. With the score at 51-42, 30th AG gave up a slew of fouls in an attempt to stop the clock. Too little, too late left the team 10 points down when the buzzer went off.

The win brings the 63rd Engineers up to a 6-3 record and drops 30th AG to 3-3.

"We started off too slow." said McNeil. "We waited too long to try to catch up and never got any momentum going."

"We had a lot of hustle from the get-go," said Dewayne Evans of the 63rd. "The first half was a little slow, but in the second, we got a little tenacity and started to play a little defense."

High scorers were Evans with 17 points and 10 assists and Galloway with 17 points.

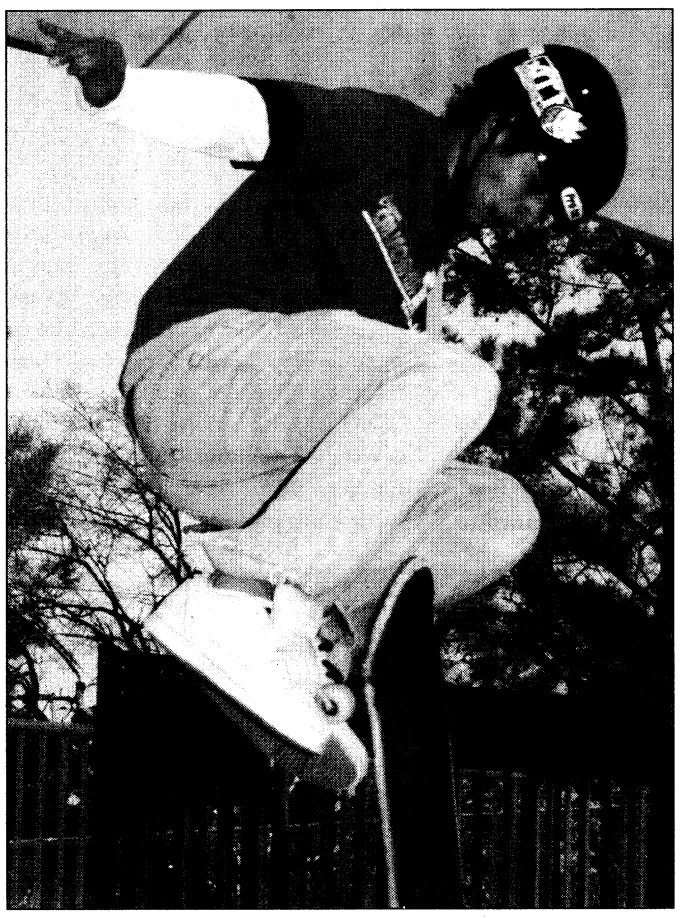
Rangers lead way in long-range rifling

Snipers win two classes in small arms matches

Paula J. Randall Pagán
USAMU Public Affairs Office

Two Sniper Platoon Soldiers of the 3rd Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment, took the top prizes in the All-Army Long-Range Rifle Competition. The competition was part of the All-Army Small Arms Championship hosted by the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit here March 12 to 23.

Staff Sgt. Jared N. van Aalst won the U.S. Army Long-Range Sniper Class Rifle Championship and Staff Sgt. Robby D. Johnson took the 2005 U.S. Army Long-Range Service Rifle Class Championship. The All-Army Overall Long-Range Rifle Championship was an aggregate of three matches that were fired March 21 to 23 at distances of 600, 800 and 1,000 yards at Maertens Range.



Taking second place in the Overall Long-Range Sniper Class Championship was 2nd Lt. Jason E. Keohler of Fort Bragg, N.C. In second place overall in the Long-Range Service Rifle Class was Pfc. Brandon K. Green of AMU.

An Army Reservist of the 94th Division, 1st Sgt. Scott Anzivino, won the 1,000-Yard Sniper Class Long-Range Rifle match and Green took the Service Rifle Class.

The Sniper Class winner in the 800-Yard competition was Sgt. Christopher L. Carter of the 3rd Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment, and Johnson was the Service Rifle winner.

Sgt. 1st Class Kevin W. Bittenbender of the Pennsylvania National Guard won the Sniper Class 600-Yard Long-Range Championship; Johnson was the Service Rifle Class winner.

Turkey calls fill woods

Col. Mike Beasock
Bayonet correspondent

If you were wondering why the woods have started sounding noisier lately, it probably has something to do with turkey hunters. Last Saturday kicked off the turkey hunting season in Georgia and hundreds of camouflage-clad turkey hunters fanned out across the woods of Fort Benning in search of turkeys.

It all started well before daybreak as hunters raised owl calls to their lips and "hooted" in hopes of causing turkeys to gobble on their roosts in trees. It wasn't just hoots they were making, however, but a special tune that is supposed to sound like "who cooks for you, who cooks for you all." The theory is that gobblers just can't help themselves and reflexively gobble in response to an owl's hoot, thus giving away their location.

Just after dawn, many hunters switched their tactics and started using crow calls to locate turkeys and the woods became filled with the sound aack, aaaack, aaaaack. While many hunters successfully called in flocks of crows eager to see what all the excitement was about, a few lucky hunters actually got the "shock gobble" response they wanted from a big tom turkey.

With hearts pounding with excitement, hunters then took off in the direction of the gobble sounds. Stopping a few hundred yards away from the suspected locations of the gobblers, many of the hunters then set up and concealed themselves in makeshift blinds. With decoy turkeys positioned strategically nearby, the tactic now became one of luring gobblers to the hunter's location. The major advantage hunters have during the spring is that gobblers are preoccupied with mating. This allows hunters to use turkey calls to convince a gobbler to come within shooting range in pursuit of a hen.

With a wide assortment of turkey calls in their arsenal, the hunters began the fine art of "talking turkey" or, at least, how humans think turkeys communicate. Using mouth calls, wooden box calls, and peg and slate calls, the hunters unleashed some of the finest, sweetest, and most realistic hen yelps, clucks, and purrs known to man and bird.

Animal behaviorists assert that wild turkeys can recognize individual "voices" and moods of other birds over long distances. This apparently explains why my best yelps, clucks, and purrs only served to scare away a big gobbler on opening morning. A few of the more skillful hunters, however, were more successful and succeeded in harvesting some nice gobblers on opening day.

More than 40 years ago, Grandma gave you Series E Savings Bonds. And you forgot about them—until now. You were cleaning out boxes of junk when you found a treasure... those old Series E Savings Bonds. Even though they're no longer earning interest, they could still be worth more than 5 times their face value. So why not redeem those old bonds at your local financial institution?

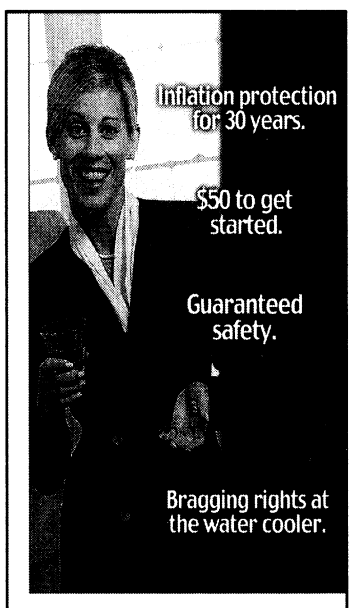
At Regency Hospitals you'll work with a group of people who truly appreciate your training and experience, and who work with the same dedication you've been trained with. We treat criticaly ill patients who require acute care for a longer time period than traditional hospitals are set up to provide.

It is with a strong commitment to quality healthcare that Regency Hospitals have grown into a national company with an outstanding clinical reputation. As everyone knows, this kind of reputation does not come easy. First, we hire dedicated people who go the extra mile; then we provide the tools, technology and atmosphere in which they'll thrive.

If making a difference in peoples' lives is important to you, we want you on our team at Regency Hospital of Central Georgia, Regency Hospital of South Atlanta, or any of our hospitals across the country.

We are looking for the following positions to complete our growing teams:



Dedicated Nurses for Clinical, Management and Marketing Positions • Allied Healthcare Professionals • Patient Advocates • Materials Managers

35 officers and former officers will be inducted into the Officer Candidate School Hall of Fame today at 3 p.m. in Marshall Auditorium. What advice would they give Soldiers about to embark upon careers as officers? Meet the inductees on A-10, and read how they responded to that question on A-11.

The 3rd Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment chefs make headlines with their culinary art on A-3.

Meet the reluctant competitor — and his teammate — who won last year's Best Ranger Competition. Read what the competitors have to say about this year's BRC, April 22-25, on A-5.

The Commanders' Cup Basketball Tournament begins Monday at 6 p.m. at Audie Murphy Fitness Center and continues through April 18. For more information, call 545-1940.

Army fields CROWS in Iraq

CROWS Nest base of ops for training team

The Army fielded 10 more Common Remotely Operated Weapons Systems in the Operation Iraqi Freedom theater during the last few months.

The CROWS system is a relatively new technology, originally developed for armored security vehicles and later developed for the Infantry.

The system allows gunners in a range of vehicles to fire a suite of crew-served weapons from within the armored protection of the vehicle. Previously, it was necessary to expose the gunner to elevated danger in a turret.

Airborne veterans to visit

300 expected to attend ceremony

Melissa House
Bayonet staff

Veteran paratroopers from the Army's airborne units will visit Fort Benning for a day of activities April 14.

The visit is part of an annual Airborne Awards event held at Fort Benning and in Atlanta every year.

The day begins with a special Airborne 5000 demonstration at 10 a.m., followed by an 11 a.m. ceremony at the Airborne Walk, said Maj. Robert Risdon, operations officer for the 1st Battalion (Airborne), 507th Parachute Infantry Regiment.

Following an al fresco barbecue lunch near the Airborne Walk, the guests will travel to Red Cloud Range, where they can fire a number of current Infantry weapons, then see an airborne operation and graduation at Fryar Field.

Risdon said they expect to host more than 300 veterans and their guests in this, the 28th year of the Airborne Awards. He said his unit added the Red Cloud Range and Fryar Field events last year, but only had to make minor modifications to the plan to prepare for this year.

Since the event comes on the heels of the 60th anniversary of the 1944 Normandy invasion, Don Lassen, editor of the Airborne Static Line and a D-Day veteran, said this year's program promises to be "fun-filled and extremely exciting."

The mayor of Ste. Mere Eglise, Marc LeFevre, will attend the festivities and make presentations to the veterans of the invasion. Each veteran will receive a specially designed, 60th anniversary license plate. Maurice Renaud, the son of the wartime mayor of Ste. Mere Eglise, will also attend.

Risdon said the airborne veterans "still have a lot of fire in their bellies" and he enjoys talking with them during their visits.

"They're so humble," Risdon said, "and they're here thanking us for what we do, when they made so many sacrifices years ago."

Lassen encouraged veterans to make the trip to Fort Benning.

"If you haven't been there lately, it's a trip you will particularly enjoy," he said.

The guest speaker at the formal activities is retired Lt. Gen. Dick Seitz, a World War II veteran of the 517th Parachute Infantry Regiment, who later commanded the 82nd Airborne Division.

OCS names Patterson Award winner

Award part of OCS Hall of Fame ceremony

Tawny Archibald Campbell
Bayonet staff

After 13 years as an enlisted Soldier, Adam Marsh decided it was time to see the flip side of the coin. He became an officer.

And even though he has only been commissioned since December 2004, he is taking the officer world by storm.

Now, 2nd Lt. Marsh is being honored with the Patterson Award, an award given to the Army's outstanding Officer Candidate School graduate for 2004.

The award is named for Capt. Robert P. Patterson, who served as the Secretary of War during the Truman years. It was established in 1952 and recognizes the recipient's accomplishments in leadership, academics, aptitude and character.

Marsh

"I didn't know anything about the award at first," Marsh said. "When I was in OCS, I was brought up for a leadership award because I had the highest academic average. I think because of that I was nominated (for the Patterson award).

"I'm pretty happy about it and now I get to go to the OCS Hall of Fame."

Marsh's desire to be in the Army began when he was a child in Mississippi, looking up to Soldiers and wanting to be one of them.

"That is all I ever wanted to be," Marsh said. "Growing up as a kid, all I ever wanted to do was be in the Army. I did Junior Reserve Officer Training Corps in high school and got an ROTC scholarship for college, but I was in a hurry to join and didn't want to wait four more years, so I signed at seventeen."

He went to basic training and advanced individual training at Fort Benning, then went on to Airborne School.

After completing the Ranger Indoctrination Program, Marsh was first assigned to the 75th Ranger Regiment and later served as a Ranger instructor with the 6th Ranger Training Battalion.

Marsh is a graduate of the Ranger School, Jumpmaster School, Pathfinder School, Military Freefall School, Military Freefall Jumpmaster, Total Army Instructor Certification Course and Tactics Certification Course along with several others.

He is currently attending the Infantry Officers Basic Course and working on completing his degree in

You might be a Southerner if ...

Spc. Nikki St. Amant
Bayonet staff

In my book, if you didn't grow up living south of Interstate 10, you aren't from the South. I think everything north of that strip and below the Mason-Dixon line should be called the Lower Eastern Central Zone.

Why? Because we are different down there. With a capital D.

The terrain does fit the bill of the beautiful South. The live oaks draped in Spanish moss and cypress knees poking up through swamp water makes for gorgeous scenery.

But if you see past the local flora and fauna, the people are a different breed. They are a hard folk. Tempered by more than 200 years of survival in a harsh land of swamps, marshes and mosquitoes, they are prudent, tough and imbued with a vibrant love of life unrivaled anywhere I have ever visited.

These people do not often meet the stereotypical standard of Southern hospitality.

If I didn't know you and you came to my door while I was growing up, I probably wouldn't invite you in for dinner. I would give you directions to the nearest McDonald's, suggest the dollar menu, tell you to have a nice day with a beautiful Southern smile on my face and shut the door.

That wasn't mentioned in the brochure was it? We are not like Aunt Bea from The Andy Griffith Show. At least not with strangers.

But if you are within the ring of family and friends, the circle of trust I dare say, what's mine is yours down to the clothes on my back. In a land where the majority of the population is in the lowest class while a miniscule few live high on the hog, we learned that in the absence of prosperity, family and friends are our saving grace.

But there are poor masses all over the "South" you say. True. What sets us in the coastal areas apart is the magnificent mixture of cultures.

In my area, it's all Cajun. Spending a year in my hometown for some people is like living on Mars. We talk really different. Broken French different.

We listen to different music. Zydeco music is the rag-tag beat we dance our Cajun dances to.

We celebrate with fantastic festivals — anything and everything from sugarcane to Mardi Gras and crawfish, God's gift to mankind.

Our food is unlike any in the world. Jambalaya, boudin, gumbo, etouffee — all filled with this amazing variety of seafood, wild game, sausages, spices and herbs that, once again, reflects the variety and zest for life and antacids we enjoy.

All along the rest of the Gulf Coast there are small little worlds very different from our Northern friends. Populated by Spaniards, Italians, French, Portuguese, Cubans, Caribbean Islanders and a smattering of other exotic peoples, the land is distinctly different from the North.

We have hung on to our heritage. It hasn't been drowned in the melting pot just yet. Our cultures mix, mingle and share, but each still stands on its own two feet. It's priceless. I celebrate our differences and don't want to be thrown in with everybody else south of the magical Mason-Dixon line.

I encourage y'all to come down and visit sometime. I promise I'll put on my manners. I won't send you to McDonald's. We'll sit by the bayou and have some chicken-andouille gumbo while we talk about voodoo and how to spear a big bullfrog by lamplight before we leave in a pirouge to go dance the Cajun two-step while the Mardi Gras parade rolls by.

And then you can decide for yourself if the true South is the same as the Lower Eastern Central Zone.

My two cents (Keep the change)

Bridgett Siter
Bayonet staff

"Where does the South end and the North begin?" someone asked the other day. Greater minds than mine have wrestled with that question since the Civil War, and I certainly don't propose to offer a definitive answer. But I've been asked to contribute my two cents worth. You should value it as such.

I spent the first 20 years of my life north of the Mason-Dixon and the last 20 years south of it. I've seen that many of the stereotypes about Southern behaviors and culture proliferate in the North. A redneck is a redneck is a redneck, whether he parks his pick-up at the speedway in Darlington or Indy.

And once the Yankees got a stranglehold on Atlanta, it was only a matter of time before Southern women wore white slingbacks on Easter Sunday — a full two months before Memorial Day — a practice their genteelly bred grandmothers would consider uncouth.

The blurry line between the North and South goes unnoticed by the general population on either side, I suspect. South is vaguely "down there" somewhere, and North is where I-75 will get you if you by-pass Atlanta.

Though Fort Benning is unquestionably geographically South, it's a cultural crossroads. Here, many a Northerner samples Southern life for the first time and finds it's not what he expected. How could it be, given that this region is populated with more transplanted aliens from the North, East and West than one can shake a stick at?

Which is why you can ask a half dozen Fort Benning residents where the dividing line lies between the North and South, and you'll get seven different answers. There's always one schizophrenic in the crowd.

A couple of years ago, I went shopping with a friend and fellow Fort Benning resident, who had spent her youth here, there and everywhere as an Air Force brat.

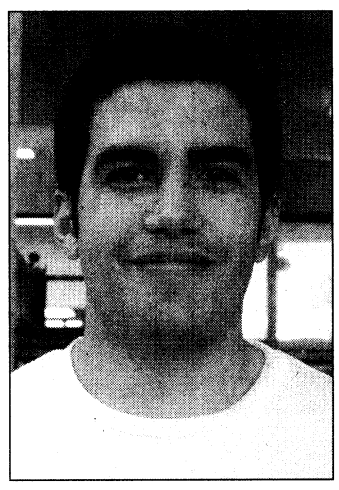
"I need to buy a winter coat," I heard her tell the sales lady. "I'm moving up North."

"What do you mean 'up North?'" I said. "I thought you were going to Fort Bragg."

North Carolina, her "North," was Vacationland South when I was growing up in Indiana.

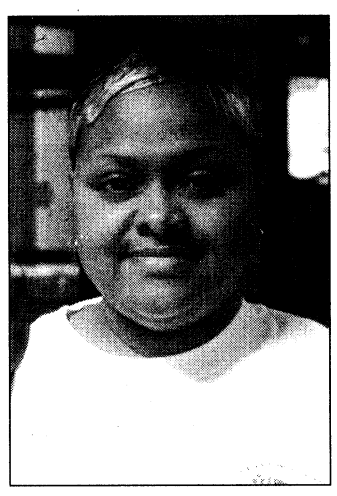
I always considered my Tennessee cousins to be Southern. They had to be — they spoke with that characteristic drawl, a drawl that got more and more pronounced the farther south I traveled. Or so I thought, till I moved to Florida — which, for the geographically impaired, is as far south as it gets this side of the Gulf. The Southern drawl somehow didn't make it to Miami. (This lends credence to my grandma's theory that there never would've been a Civil War if the South had simply offered the North a timeshare.)

It's occurred to me to wonder a time or two:



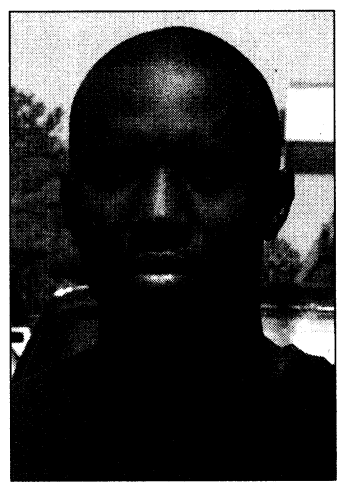
Why is it we never hear any debates about the geographical delineation between the East and West?

And where exactly is the Midwest? I cringe every time I hear Indiana described as "Midwestern." Not that there's anything wrong with the Midwest, mind you, but shouldn't that description be reserved for those states that actually lie over there in the middle of the west, wherever that is?

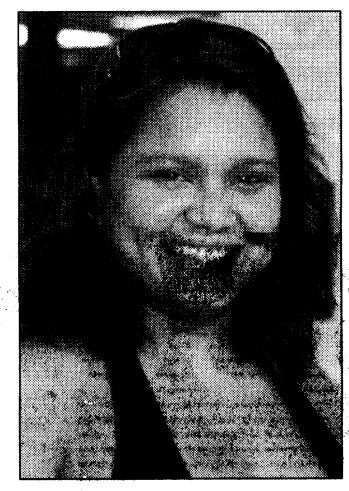


Oh well, that's another question for another day, and I've run out of change. That's my two cents worth.

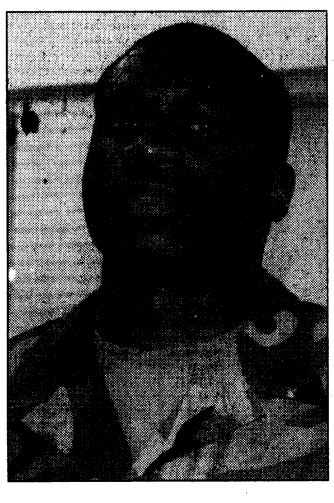
VARIOUS VOICES



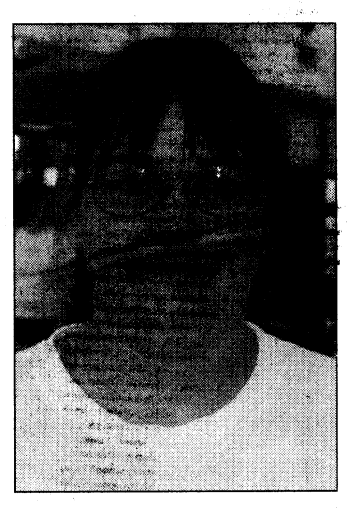
What is it about the South that makes it the South?



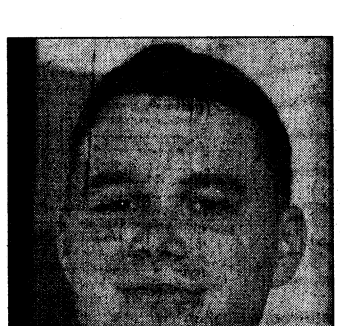
Joel Rivas, family member — "It's a state of mind. The South has a sense of community, and it's laid back. And, of course, the accent identifies a Southerner. The farther North you get, like into Virginia, people start talking like Northerners."



Latresa Blackman, family member — "I think it's the the way Southerners go about life and our whole demeanor. We're laid back and friendly. A person's more likely to hug you than shake your hand. The best thing about the South is our food, and most Northerners love it."



Sgt. Taren Wilson, 63rd Engineers — "It's all about Southern cooking, like collard greens, macaroni and cheese, fried chicken, and sweet potato pie. The heat and the humidity also make it the South. It's hot but there's a breeze, and everybody's out in shorts already."



Maria Jemison, family member — "The people are very nice, and the food is very good. It's very quiet here, not like in a city. I don't know much about the differences between the South and the North. I'm from Peru, and I've only lived in the South."

Sgt. Anthony Herrington, MEDDAC — "It's the heat and all that red clay. Really, it's the people and the hospitality. I'm from Ohio, and I think Southerners are more likely to return eye contact and be friendly. That's what I enjoy."

Gerri Armstrong, family member — "Southerners are very polite. If you said 'yes sir' to someone in Colorado, where I'm from, they would look offended. I think the South begins at Tennessee. That seems to be where the heat and humidity start."

Staff Sgt. Brenden Leahy, McGuire Air Force Base — "I'm from Michigan. I think Kentucky and below make up the South. There's definitely Southern hospitality, but I think people are nice anywhere you go. Actually, what really defines the South for me is sweet tea."

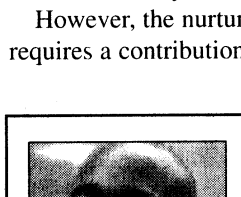
Focus on preventing child abuse, neglect

"Children are our future — our most precious resource, the leaders of tomorrow. We need to nurture children, protect them, defend them and see in them all the promise and hope of our communities and our country.

Since 1974, we have been committed by law, by regulation, and by action to take an active role in making sure child abuse and maltreatment are eliminated.

Abuse and neglect hurt children now and undermine their potential to achieve great leadership and caregiving in the next generation. Nurturing and protecting are the focus of the family. Yet, everyone has a part to play in protecting children and preventing child abuse.

Never pass up an opportunity to protect a child and stop someone from making a mistake. Our military and civilian professionals have specific responsibilities to ensure the safety of children.



However, the nurture of children requires a contribution from everyone. Only caring communities can produce caring competent children and youth.

Each and every child is special, and each and every child deserves the chance to grow and mature and be part of a peaceful world.

Therefore, I declare April 2005 Child Abuse Prevention Month at Fort Benning and call upon all Soldiers, families, citizens, community agencies, religious organizations, medical facilities and businesses to increase their participation in our efforts to prevent child abuse, thereby strengthening the community in which we live.

Let's do all we can to protect our children.

Ranger chefs get gold for dishes

Six-man team brings home 12 medals

Annette Fournier
Bayonet staff

"I had practiced the whole routine, and at the last minute they sprang a different fish on me. I had never filleted a fish in my life, and I ended up being the first person on the team to win a gold medal!"

Pfc. Michael Healy, chef with 3rd Ranger Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment, was not expecting to win medals at the U.S. Army's annual Culinary Arts Competition March 5 to 18. But he did just that, bringing back two gold medals, for his best of show fish fillet and a team effort field cooking competition.

The 3rd Ranger Battalion's Culinary Arts team brought home 12 medals in all, half of them gold.

The Fort Lee, Va. competition brought together the best chefs from the Army and the other services to compete for team and individual awards. The team placed fourth overall. This was their first time competing in the events.

The members of the award-winning team were NCOIC Sgt. 1st Class Mark Morgan, Staff Sgt. Gilbert Liddell, Pfc. Billy Daugette, Pfc. Donald Moore, and Sgt. William Floyd and Healy.

Most teams competing brought 20 to 30 man teams but 3rd Ranger's Bn. cooking staff consists of 15 men who work in shifts to cook three meals a day for 800 Rangers.

Several chefs volunteered for the competition, but only six could go, because the others had to keep the 3rd Bn. Ranger's fed.

"I would have loved to have gone," said Pfc. Timothy Ripley. "But we knew we still had a mission here. The rest of us had to step it up to make up for the guys going to compete."

The Ranger chefs were stepping it up both at Benning and at the competition.

"I think every day we were the first ones to get to the competition, and the last to go home," said Floyd. "The other teams would say, how can you do it? We'd just laugh, because we're used to hard work."

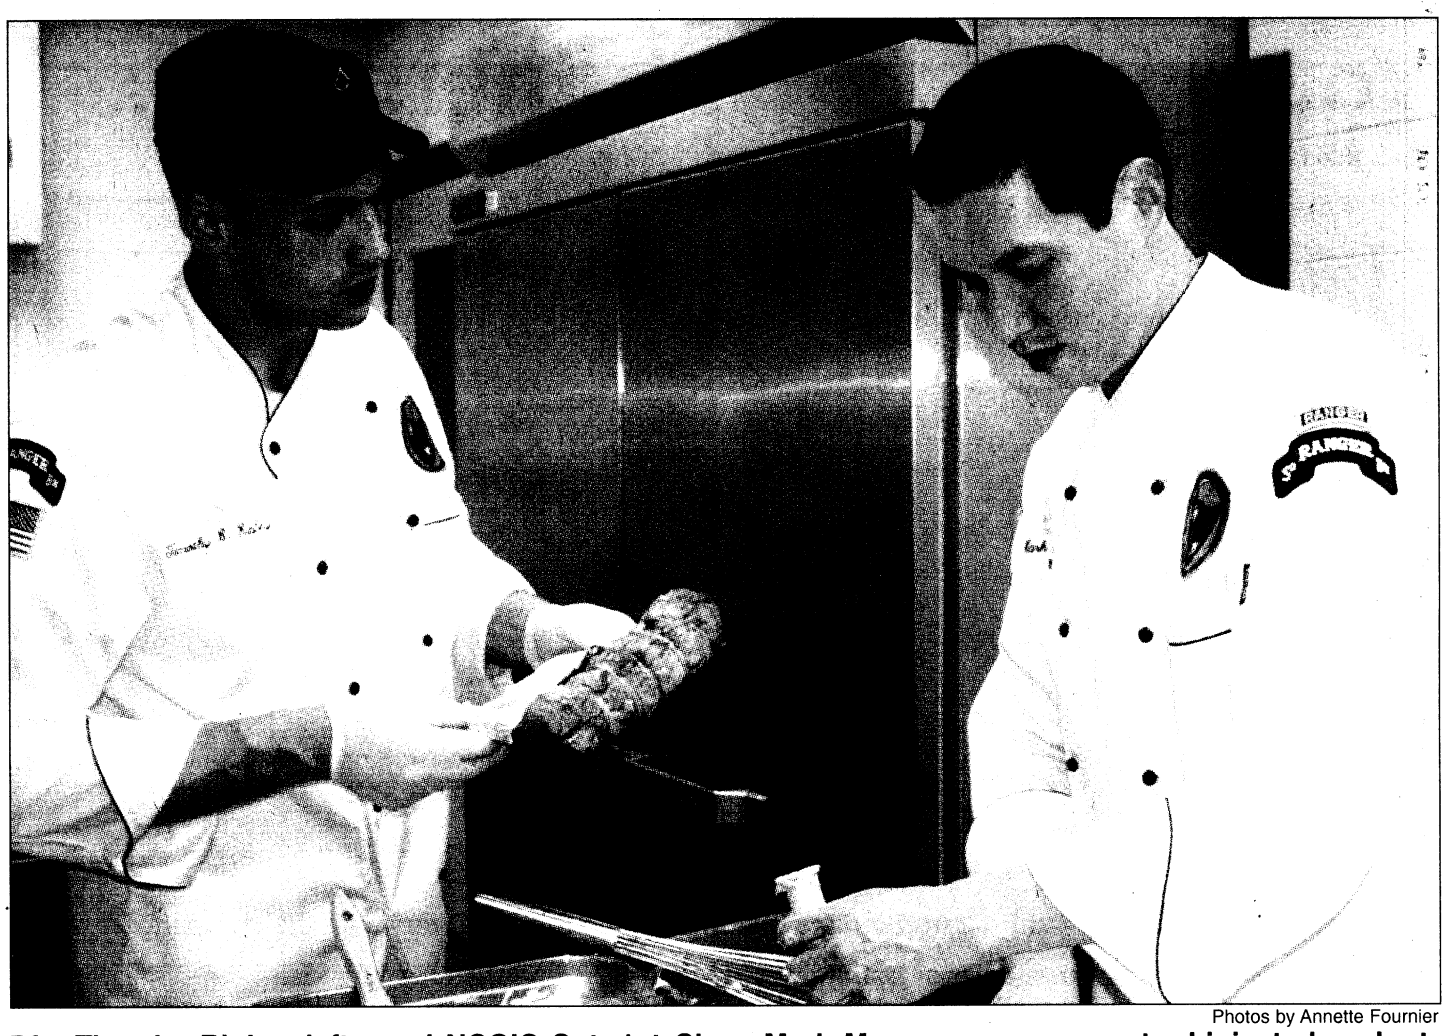
The Ranger chefs who competed are all combat veterans. Not only are the Soldiers masters of cuisine, but also train and deploy like any other Ranger.

Every Ranger cook must be airborne qualified and complete the Ranger Indoctrination Program or the Ranger Orientation Program.

The Rangers were modest about their skills but dedicated to their missions, both Army and culinary.

"We have a pride thing being in 3rd Ranger Battalion.," Floyd said. "We never want to fall short, so we sacrifice other things to get the job done."

The chefs prepared their award-winning dishes for display in the 3rd Ranger Dining Facility April 1.



The team worked for 72 hours to prepare the delicious and aesthetically pleasing dishes.

The winning meals included entrees like smoked pheasant breast stuffed with herbed farce, pesto-crusted salmon skewers, crawfish and stuffed morel fricassee, shrimp with mango salsa, blackberry mousse with hazelnut cake and tiramisu with espresso ice cream, to name a few.

The chefs said they're pleased with their performance in the competition.

"The whole team did really well, and this was only our first time competing," Moore said.

"We're already looking forward and planning for next year," he said. " Next time we want to bring home all gold."

Drill sergeants inventory 3rd Platoon Soldiers' belongings on their first day with the company.

Fill week is the first three days of training for new recruits. Soldiers are picked up at reception and brought to the company area, organized into platoons and introduced to their drill sergeants.
During fill week, Soldiers are briefed on Army customs and courtesies, wearing the uniform, performing physical training exercises, moving through the chow line, making their bunks and much more.

Editor's note: The Bayonet's Tawny Archibald Campbell will follow B Company, 1st Battalion, 19th Infantry Regiment, through 14 weeks of training, offering a look at training for new recruits at the Infantry Training Brigade.

New solicitation policy published

Leaders should read, heed

Melissa House
Bayonet staff

In the wake of several incidents of Soldiers being improperly or illegally solicited on Fort Benning, post officials have published a new policy memorandum governing commercial solicitation.

Policy Memorandum 210-7-5 was signed Jan. 24 by Col. Charles Cornwell, chief of staff of the Infantry Center and School.

The memorandum serves as a reference for commanders at all levels and contains a fact sheet with detailed information on life insurance solicitation, education services and prohibited practices.

Among the prohibitions are solicitation in training units or at training events and solicitation of Soldiers on duty.

Debbie Knipe is the point of contact for the Directorate of Morale, Welfare and Recreation, the post agency responsible for issuing permits for commercial solicitation. She said the impetus for the policy memorandum was the improper solicitation of the initial entry training Soldiers in their unit areas.

Knipe said insurance agents wishing to do business on post must fill out the appropriate paperwork in the DMWR Commercial Solicitation office and show a valid state business license. Individuals are issued a Fort Benning Form 5 and receive a photo ID, good for one year.

Solicitation of Soldiers in the grade of E-1 to E-3 who are not attending schools is restricted to specific times and locations, and those who wish to purchase life insurance must first receive counseling from their chain of command and will be required to wait a minimum of seven days before the unit will process the allotment forms.

A list of authorized solicitors is published in USAIC Circular 210-7. Unauthorized solicitors should be reported to the DMWR and the Directorate of Public Safety.

Currently, American Amicable, American Fidelity and Madison National Life Insurance Companies are suspended from soliciting on Fort Benning.

'Team that almost wasn't' reveals secrets to success

Bridgett Siter
Bayonet staff

You may not know them by name, but you've seen their faces on billboards around Columbus and Phenix City.

Sgt. 1st Class Colin Boley and Sgt. 1st Class Adam Nash are the Best Rangers, and will be until April 24, when this year's winners cross the finish line.

Boley and Nash opted not to compete this year. The optempo at the 75th Ranger Regiment is grueling, and with eight combat deployments between them, the 3rd Battalion Soldiers chose to spend what little spare time they have with their families.

Boley, 29, has two children. Nash, 28, has a son.

Both Soldiers joined the Army in 1995 and attended Ranger School in 1997, though they didn't meet until 1999.

Both are former competitors — Nash once and Boley three times, including 2000, when he and Staff Sgt. Glenn Smith placed second.

That was enough for Boley. He had absolutely no intention to participate last year. He returned from Afghanistan less than two weeks before the competition and turned down two bids to compete. Until he and Nash were paired.

"I wasn't motivated. I hadn't trained, and I'd done it before, so I knew what I was getting into," Boley said. "I didn't think we could win — didn't think we'd see day two — and I hate to lose. I just didn't want to do it."

Boley and Nash didn't start the BRC "with the mindset of winning," they said. They believe it worked to their advantage.

"Our strength was our sense of humor," said Nash, who started the competition with a bad case of tendinitis. "We kept saying we were doing it for the T-shirts. We turned everything into a joke."

When pressed to account for their success, beyond the humor, Nash and Boley said they used tactics the casual observer might consider "sensible" or obvious — such as dumping water from their boat to make it lighter before toting it uphill to the finish line.

"That comes from experience," Nash said. "It may seem like common sense, but when you've been without sleep for a couple of days, nothing makes sense."

Nash said he'd be training up for this year's BRC if he hadn't won last year.

Boley said his BRC days are over. It's time to focus on what's most important to him — his family and his job.

'This is it' former competitors say

Bridgett Siter
Bayonet staff

The Best Ranger Competition is IT. Capital I. Capital T. IT. Capt. Corbett McCallum and Sgt. 1st Class Gerald Nelson are ready for it. Anxious for it even. Tired of waiting for it.

They've been training since January, running, road marching, swimming and weight training daily.

"There's nothing tougher out there. No better way to challenge yourself. This is it," said McCallum, half of the McCallum — Corbett team sponsored by the Ranger Training Brigade's 4th Ranger Training Battalion.

McCallum, who competed in two Army 10-Milers, the Iron Man Florida and a handful of marathons and triathlons, finished the BRC in third place last year with (then) Staff Sgt. Jeffrey Lewis. The two won seven of the 15 events, more than any other team, and theirs was the only team to land both Rangers in the target area on the spot jump.

They had a lot of luck last year, McCallum said, and winning the BRC takes 80 percent skill and 20 percent luck. Still, he believes they didn't push themselves hard enough the first day, overconfident perhaps because there were only 18 teams in the running.

"You look back at all the things you should've, would've, could've done differently," he said. "I was a rookie. It was my first year, and it was a killer course. This time I'm mentally stronger. I'm ready for it."

Nelson competed in 1999, placed fifth in 2000, and trained for the competition in 2003. But it was cancelled that year as the military was prepping for war in Iraq. Nelson thought his BRC days were behind him.

When it became obvious Lewis' training schedule would keep him from competing this year, McCallum asked Nelson to be his partner. At 37, 10 years older than the average competitor and seven years older than his teammate, Nelson said this is his final go around.

"I thought it was over for me," Nelson said.

"I'm more than ready, I'm hungry for it. Those other times were fun, but I'm not doing this for fun anymore. This is it. I'm going out there to win.

But win or lose, McCallum and Nelson said they'll keep the BRC in its proper perspective.

"It's great, but it's not the greatest thing a Ranger can do," McCallum said. "Leading troops — doing your job — that's the most important thing you'll ever do in your career."

Nelson agreed.

"We're here because we want to be here. It's optional," he said. "And when all is said and done, it's a great achievement for the individual. But there are Soldiers out there doing something much more important, and they're not doing it for themselves."

Drill sergeants eye Best Ranger with confidence

Bridgett Siter
Bayonet staff

As a rookie, a Reserve Soldier and a drill sergeant, Staff Sgt. James Roush figures he's the underdog going into the Best Ranger Competition. And he figures to use it to his advantage.

"No one's going to be betting on us," said Roush, who's never even attended a BRC.

"We won't have that kind of pressure."

Roush, 25, and his partner, Staff Sgt. Derek Riley, 28, will represent the Infantry Training Brigade at the 22nd annual Lt. Gen. David E. Grange Jr. Best Ranger Competition April 22 through 25.

Riley competed in 2000 with the 82nd Airborne Division. Roush is a first-timer, and historically, first-timers are a long-shot.

A Reserve Soldier has never competed before, and a drill sergeant team has never won.

But both Roush and Riley served with the 75th Ranger Regiment. They know Ranger skills, and they're training around the clock to prep for the physical aspect of the competition.

"We're ready," Riley said. "We're confident. We've put down the miles, and we're mentally strong."

Roush left the Army at the end of his first enlistment, shortly before 9-11. He was studying history at Indiana University when his Reserve unit, the 1st Battalion, 329th Infantry Regiment, was activated last May. He figures this is his one and only shot at Best Ranger.

"I'm just glad to get the opportunity to compete," he said. "The work schedule for drill sergeants is crazy, and the fact that the command has allowed us to do this says a lot. It would be great to win this for the drill sergeants. What a motivator."

When Riley joined the 1st Battalion, 50th Infantry Regiment, in December, he opted out of this year's competition, deciding instead to concentrate on honing his drill sergeant skills.

But when Roush's first teammate busted his knee and his second fell ill, Riley gladly stepped up.

"I always had it in the back of mind to compete again," he said. "There's nothing else like it. Day one of Best Ranger is like game seven of the World Series."

CROWS: Fielded in Iraq

Fielding Team to assist with the operation.

Staff Sgt. Robert Jones, project NCO for crew-served weapons, Small Arms Division, DCD, deployed with the team from Jan. 28 to March 29 and helped train five of the squads receiving the new system.

"The mission was a huge success," he said. "The Soldiers loved it. We are providing them with a capability they didn't have before."

The CROWS provides shoot-on-the-move capability with 98 percent accuracy. As a patrol or search and destroy tool, its arsenal is fully stocked. It comes equipped with either a heavy thermal weapons sight or forward looking infrared night sight, laser range finder out to 4,000 meters, display panel, control panel, sensor and control grip. The mounted system is capable of 360 degrees rotation and -20 degrees to 60 degrees elevation movement.

After establishing a base of operations, referred to as the "CROWS Nest," at Logistical Support Area Anaconda, the training team fielded the systems and trained users from five units stationed within the theater.

While Jones didn't have the chance to accompany the squads during any enemy engagements, he has received positive feedback from them since his return.

During two separate missions, CROWS squads identified and destroyed an IED and engaged insurgents conducting drive-by shootings. The car was destroyed at a range of 1,400 meters at night.

The two-month mission was only one small step in a greater mission to field more than 300 systems over the next two years. As the program develops, Jones said the number fielded at a time will increase.

OCS award: Marsh earns it business management.

Marsh decided to become an officer about two years ago when he realized the military was going to be a career, and since he had some college under his belt, it only made sense to him.

"It's a culture shock to go from a noncommissioned officer to an officer," Marsh said. "People look at you differently. I even see it. I look at a formation and say 'Look at all the lieutenants over there.' Then I realize they are part of my class. I've even tried to salute some of my peers, because that is what I was used to doing."

Once Marsh finishes IOBC in September, he will go to Fort Campbell, Ky., where he will deploy to Iraq. When he returns, it's back to Fort Benning for the Infantry Captain Career Course.

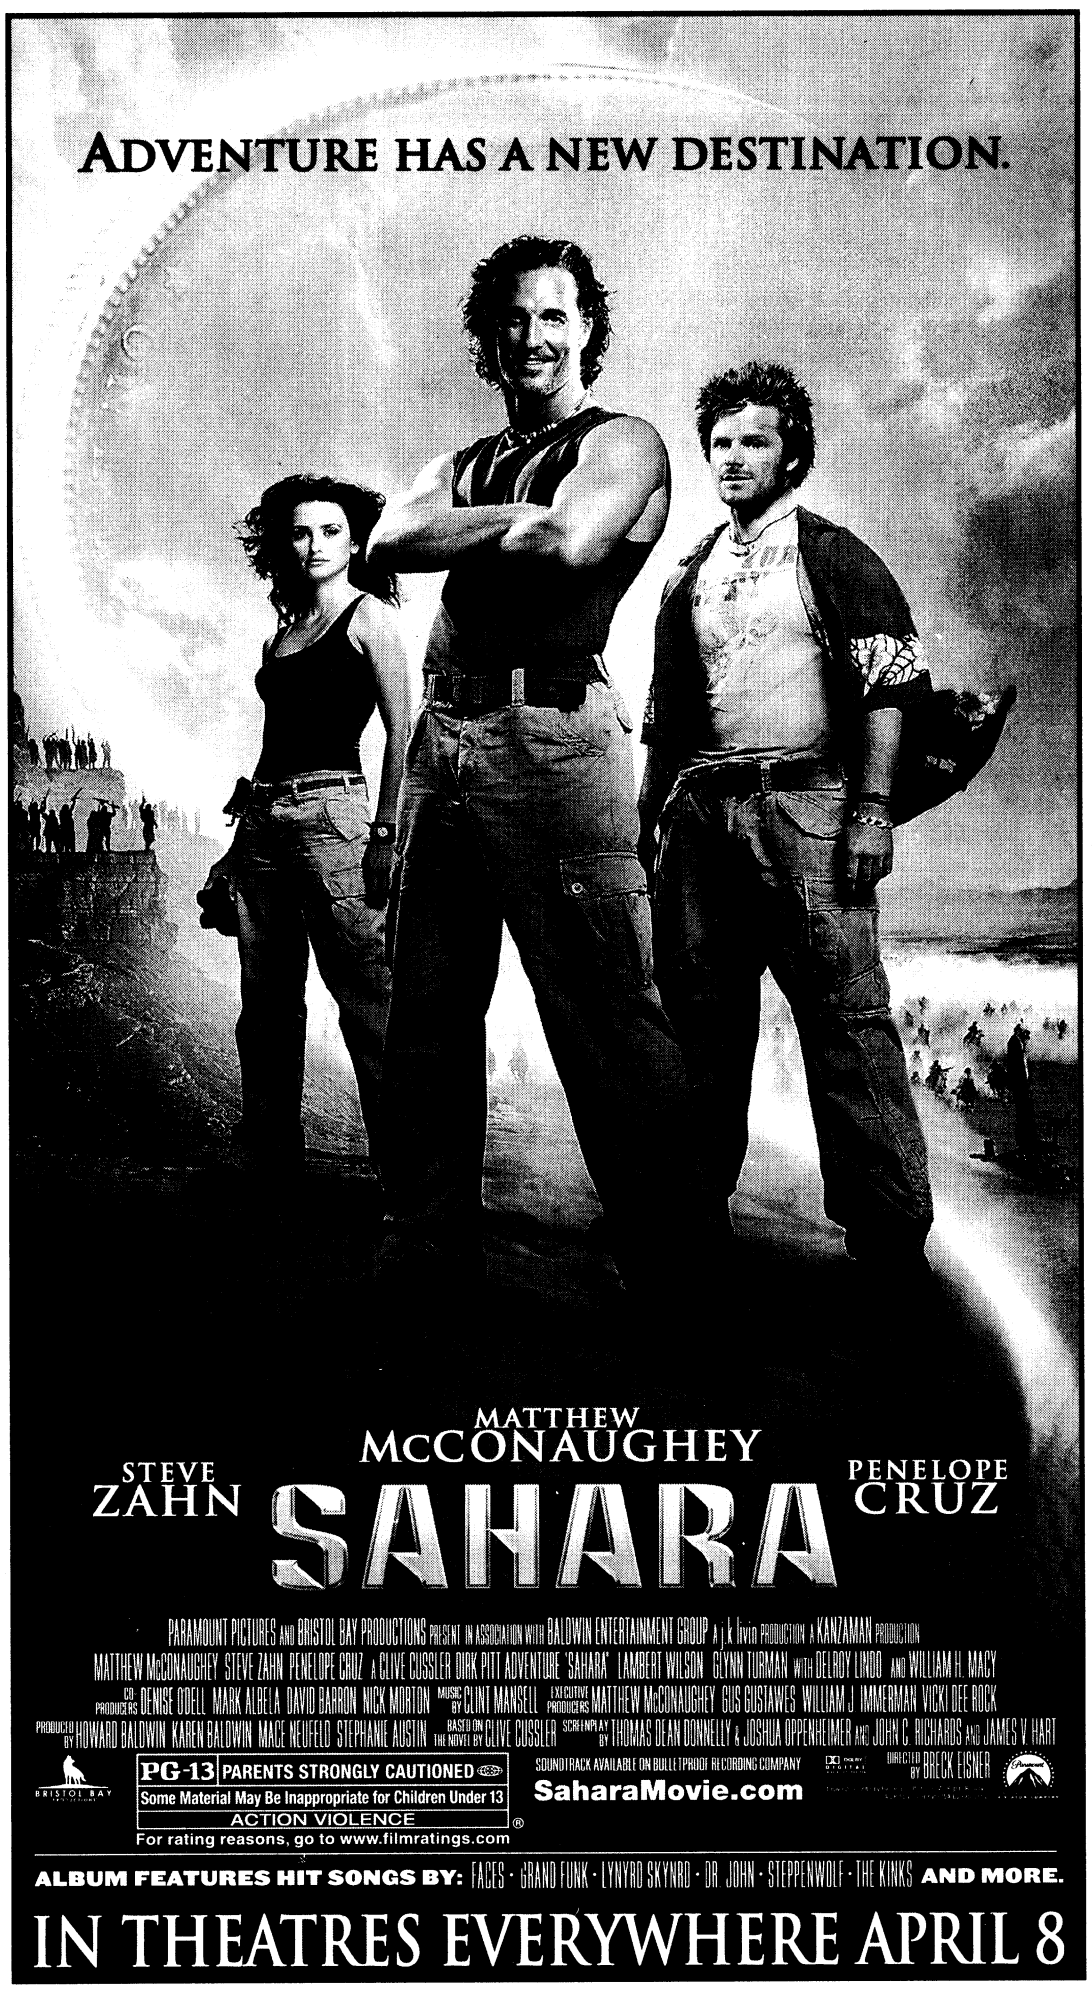
Being with the Rangers, Marsh was deployed a lot, and after four years of that, he promised his wife they would have more time together. Even though that time isn't now, he said he at least has an idea of when that will be.

"What's neat about the officer corps is they have my next few years mapped out for me," he said. "I'm looking forward to serving as an officer. In the NCO corps, it seemed like the whole career was one big marathon and I was continually running.

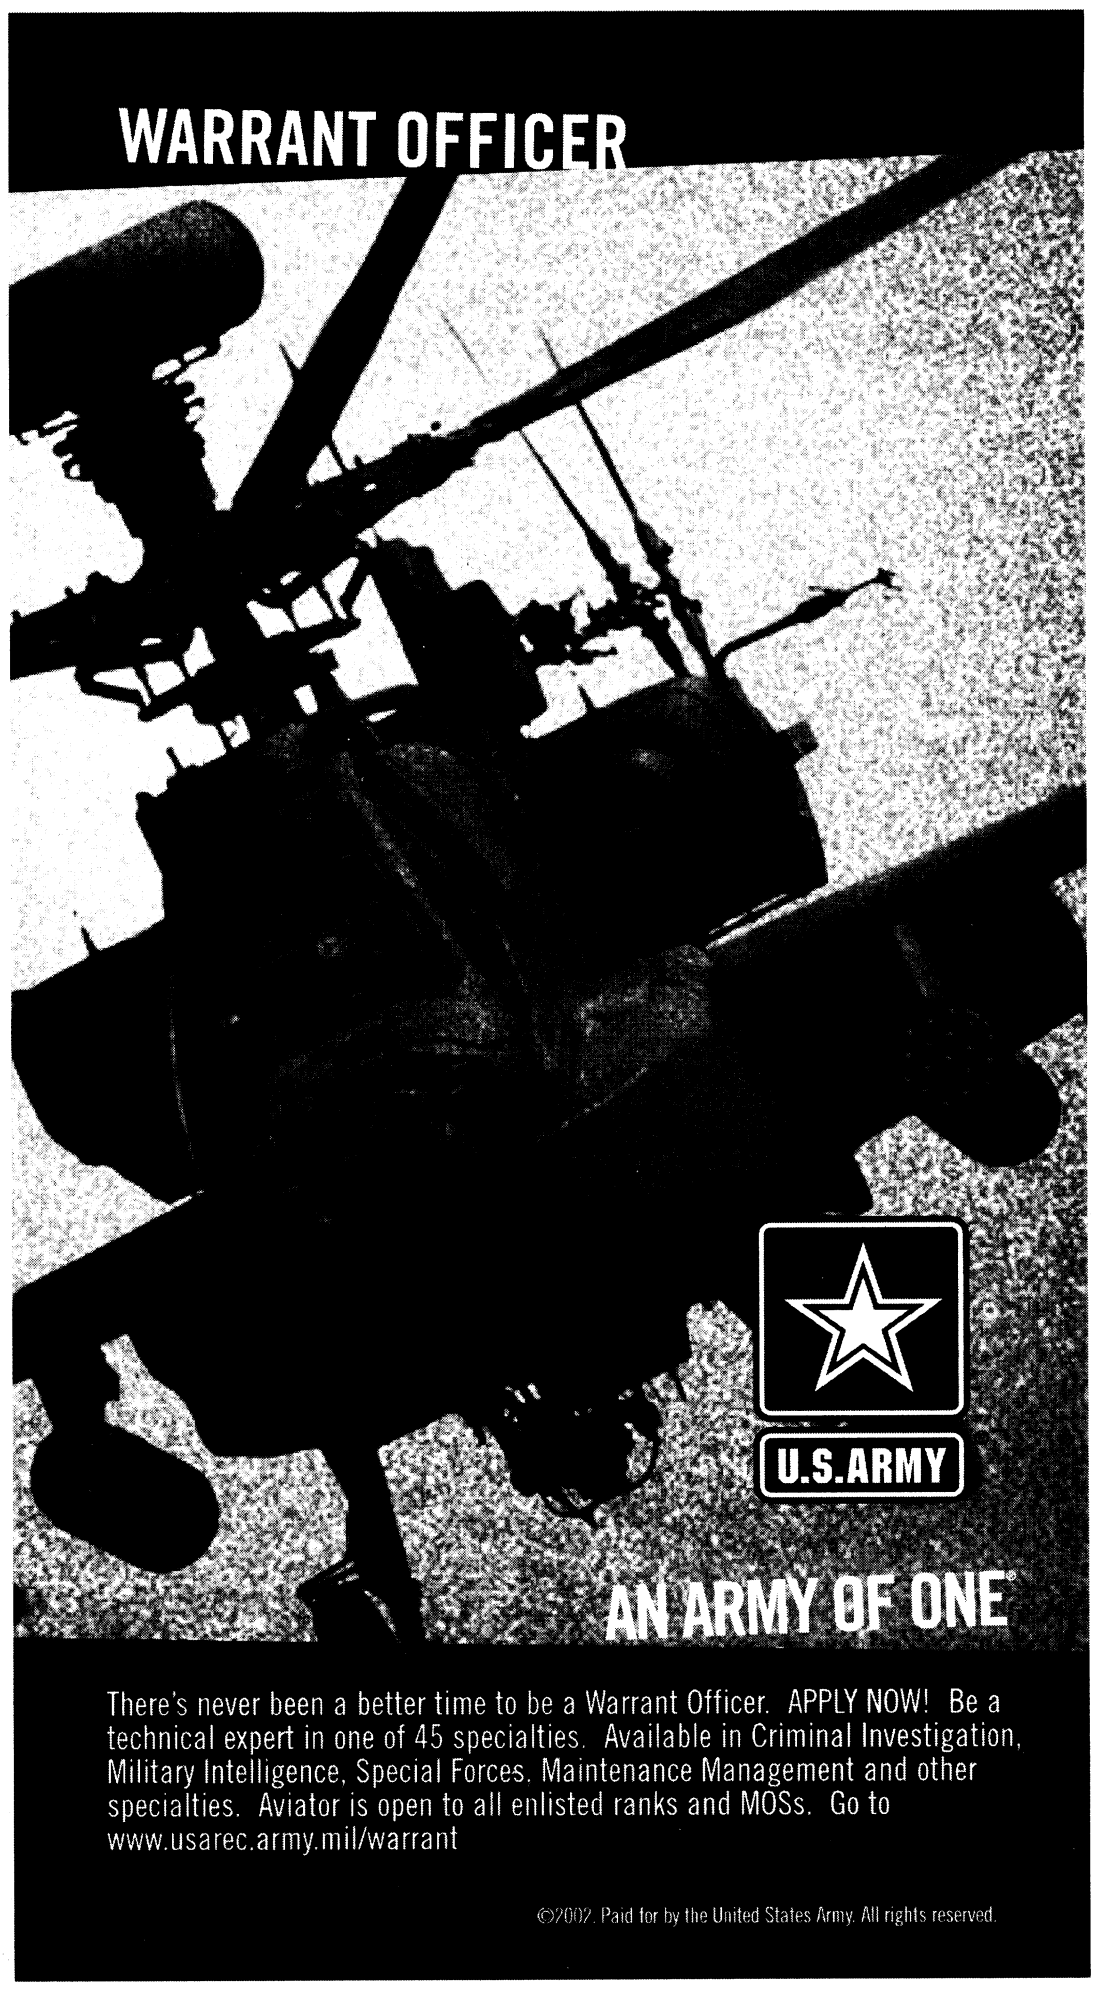
"As an officer, it is more like intervals, and you get a little more rest."

That rest will come after ICCC when the Army sends him to 18 months of college so he can complete his degree. He also hopes to use that time to reconnect with his wife, Liberty, and his three children — Angelo, 9, Kaela, 8 and Bernadette, 7.

For now, Marsh is honored to receive the Patterson Award, working hard to keep up with his college and military work schedule and trying to be the best officer he can be.



"I feel like I really have big shoes to fill, especially since my portrait will hang in the Patterson Room of the OCS Hall of Fame," Marsh said. "It's a pretty humbling thing."



Bluegrass

Lori Egan

Rhonda Vincent, left, and Mickey Harris with The Rage, harmonize during the concert in Infantry Hall April 1. The Martha White Bluegrass Express Tour rolled in to Fort Benning with Vincent and other Rage members; fiddle player Hunter Berry, banjo player Kenny Ingram and guitar player Josh Williams who played the guitar, for a concert on the lawn of Riverside, the commanding general's home. However, a severe weather forecast forced the concert to move indoors. Fort Benning Chief of Staff Col. Charles Cornwell joined the musicians on stage when they sang Passing of the Train. Cornwell provided the train whistle. Later he helped Vincent distribute some Martha White T-shirts by throwing them to the back of the auditorium where Soldiers with E company, 1st Battalion, 50th Infantry Regiment, were sitting. Ruth Lasley and Benjamin Johnson, both 4, went on stage where Benjamin sang Long Black Train. After the concert, Vincent and The Rage signed autographs, CDs and DVDs, and talked with the crowd. The band will play May 6 at the Georgia Southern University Performance Arts Center in Statesboro, Ga.

Congratulations OCS Hall of Fame inductees. The OCS Hall of Fame induction ceremony is at 3 p.m. today in Marshall Auditorium in Infantry Hall.

Hall of Fame inductees share thoughts

The Bayonet staff asked Officer Candidate Hall of Fame inductees to share stories and observations from their careers and advice for new OCS graduates. Here are responses from the five alumni who responded.

Col. Michael V. Shute, Class 1-77

What advice would you give officer candidates embarking on careers as commissioned officers?

1 – Take the time to experience your Soldiers' hardships

2 – Accept risk but don't be reckless

3 – Live the Army values

4 – Admit when you're wrong

5 – Lead by example

6 – Be passionate about the Army and your Soldiers.

What is you favorite memory from your time in service?

Watching the many fine subordinate officers and NCOs I've had the privilege to serve with, excel in their profession.

What was your most difficult assignment?

My assignment as an Infantry brigade executive officer was the most difficult. Although very challenging, it was, next to my squadron command, the most rewarding. With today's optempo, it is an assignment where you feel you just can't do enough.

What do you think has been the greatest improvement in the Army since your commissioning?

The emphasis the Army has placed upon caring for the Soldier's family. Soldiers enlist, families re-enlist.

Retired Col. William C. Kueffer, OCS 1970

What advice would you give officer candidates embarking on careers as commissioned officers?

Find a mentor (a senior officer you admire, other than someone in your direct chain of command) and ask for guidance in order to get another perspective.

Let no one question your integrity or give them cause to question it. Do not abuse the authority entrusted to you, and always remember a commander is responsible for everything his unit does, both good and bad.

Do not rely solely on technology to save the day. Be capable of performing tasks assigned. Know your job. Develop a working knowledge of a foreign language which will be useful to the service and to yourself. Do your research, know your subject. Look after your troops. Finally, be the last to eat and the first to lead. Keep in mind, at all times, that you are in the "profession of arms."

What is your favorite memory from your time in service?

I have a collective one of camaraderie, joint accomplishments with fellow officers, the bittersweet taste of both winning and losing, and finally, pride in my unit accomplishing its mission, whatever it might have been.

What was your most difficult assignment?

Being a survivor assistance officer and body escort officer for a fellow officer and friend.

What do you think has been the greatest improvement in the Army since your commissioning?

As the French philosopher Karr said, "The more things change, the more they remain the same." The Army is a dynamic force, both physically and technologically. However, the core is its Soldiers, officers and leaders. Today, survivability on the battlefield has greatly improved, medical care is quicker and firepower is second to none. But one thing will always remain the same — there is nothing in front of the Infantry but the enemy.

Retired Col. Billy L. Pierce, Class 2-74

What advice would you give officer candidates embarking on careers as commissioned officers?

Be all you can be: consider it a privilege to wear the uniform in the U.S. Army. Always take care of your Soldiers, do this at all cost. Don't ask your Soldiers to do anything you would not be willing to do. Set the example in appearance, APFT, and morals.

What is your favorite memory from your time in service?

Being associated with professional brothers and sisters in uniform from across the nation for 36 years.

What was your most difficult assignment?

Taking command of a rag-tag artillery firing battery as a 1st Lt. during the 70s and whipping them into shape as the best firing battery in the battalion.

What do you think has been the greatest improvement in the Army since your commissioning?

Modern warfare technology and tactics on the battlefield enabling precise first time hits and a professional, all volunteer military.

Col. Mark A. Cosgrove, Class 1-83

What advice would you give officer candidates embarking on careers as commissioned officers?

As a subordinate commander or staff officer, it is your responsibility to always provide your commander with the best information and recommendations you possibly can, in order that he or she may make good, informed decisions. During the decision cycle, do not hold back if you have something to contribute. Be sure of your facts and communicate clearly. Once the decision is made, salute smartly and execute to the best of your ability.

What is your favorite memory from your time in service?

I have had many great experiences over the last 30 years. I have been an NCO, Warrant Officer and commissioned officer. My best memories occurred as an aviation attack company commander. The experience of training with and leading an attack company was second to none. Of course, the best part was gunnery. I think any Soldier gets a charge out of mastering a weapon system. The bigger the system, the better. We had a really big system.

What was your most difficult assignment?

My current assignment as the J-3 for the MING. I make decisions and recommendations regarding the mobilization of National Guard Soldiers and units which affect the lives of those Soldiers and their families. We have had a number of our deployed Soldiers wounded and, to date, four killed in action. This responsibility weighs heavily on me.

What do you think has been the greatest improvement in the Army since your commissioning?

The continued movement toward the "Total Force" concept. I have the perspective of having been on active duty with the regular Army and active duty with the National Guard. It is clear to anyone involved with current operations that the Reserve forces are integral to the Army's success on the battlefield. I've witnessed continued movement toward parity between the AC and RC with regard to equipment and resources. We are not there yet, but when I was as a second lieutenant, Guard equipment was sometimes two and three generations behind our AC brethren. Today we are closer to having "One Army."

One major issue which has improved and strengthened our Army is professional education requirements which apply equally to active and Reserve components. The requirement for NCOs and officers to continue their military education has immeasurably improved our capabilities as a force able to defend our nation.

Col. Wes Weiner, Class 4-78

What advice would you give officer candidates embarking on careers as commissioned officers?

Fight to get assigned to serve in the field with Soldiers. Serve as a commander at every opportunity. Put the Soldier first in the question ... Is this good for our Soldiers?

What is you favorite memory from your time in service?

Welcoming my wife home from combat after she served with the 11th Air Defense Brigade in Saudi Arabia for eight months.

What was your most difficult assignment?

Serving in Bosnia as the Coalition Press Information Director during the time of integration of Byrcko (1999-2000), commanding Soldiers for 52 months at the company, battalion and brigade levels; followed very closely by serving as an Inspector General at HQ, U.S. Army Europe.

What do you think has been the greatest improvement in the Army since your commissioning?

Strengthening and recognizing the value of the NCO corps as well as developing the combat training centers while formally instituting an Army culture of after action reviews at major training and field exercises.

Wigle Hall

Hall home to distinguished OCS alumni

Melissa House
Bayonet staff

Tucked away in the middle of the Officer Candidate School area is a small, white building that looks like any other building on Fort Benning.

But one indication of its importance is the shiny, 6-pound Confederate cannon outside the entrance. Rumor has it, OCS candidates regularly shine the cannon.

The building is Wigle Hall, the OCS Hall of Fame, home to OCS memorabilia and photos of its distinguished graduates.

It sits near the intersection of Burr and Riordan streets, in close proximity to Infantry Hall and the Airborne Walk.

On June 24, 1958, family and friends of 2nd Lt. Thomas W. Wigle gathered to dedicate the building in his honor. Wigle received the Medal of Honor for his actions on Sept. 14, 1944, near Monte Frassino, Italy.

As the executive officer of K Company, 135th Infantry Regiment, 34th Infantry Division, Wigle took charge of one of the company's platoons attempting to seize strongly fortified hill position.

He led the men up three terraced stone walls, drawing and returning enemy fire. Wigle died in one of the buildings atop the hill while trying to force the 36 German soldiers to surrender.

Wigle's parents, his widow and 15-year-old daughter, Diane, attended the dedication ceremony. The June 26, 1958, edition of the Bayonet included the story and photos, describing the building as "modernistic."

The building's foyer includes a portrait of Wigle, painted by his father, A. Palmer Wigle, an Army photo, biography and Wigle's Medal of Honor hang with the portrait.

The foyer is home to photographs of all Medal of Honor recipients who graduated from the OCS.

The 1958 dedication also marked Wigle's induction as the first OCS Hall of Famer. Since 1958, more than 2,200 graduates have joined Wigle in the Hall of Fame.

Photos of the inductees cover the walls of the building's largest room. Induction into the Hall of Fame is automatic for any graduate who receives the Medal of Honor or attains general officer rank.

Other nominees are considered based on their command positions, critical military assignments, wartime service record and civilian service to the nation.

Wigle Hall is attraction number 22 on the Fort Benning Historic Trail.

MEDDAC improves services, systems

Col. Donald Bradshaw
MEDDAC

Over the last several months at the Fort Benning Medical Department Activity (Martin Army Community Hospital and our outlying clinics) have gone through substantial change. As the MEDDAC commander, I want to thank all our patients and their families for your understanding during this challenging time.

First, we implemented an entirely new electronic record and recordkeeping process (CHCS II), which greatly enhances your record availability and our access to your medical information. The training and implementation required a large commitment of time and therefore adversely impacted access to care.

Bradshaw

Second, we deployed more than 70 MEDDAC staff, brought in more than 50 mobilized Reserve Soldiers, hired additional civilian employees and started multiple contractors to fill the void and meet your expanding needs. We integrated them into our system and ensure their function as part of the team, which expanded our system but again, the learning curve was steep and thereby impacted access.

We stopped new MEDDAC Tricare Prime enrollment for all but active duty in September 2004 to allow us to go through this period. Having gone through this time, we now have reopened MEDDAC Tricare Prime enrollment for all Prime eligible patients (65 years old and younger).

What did we gain during this time? Fully trained medical teams, which deployed in support of our Soldiers in Iraq, Afghanistan, Honduras and several CONUS locations. An excellent system of medical records — for example, we had a Soldier evacuated in Iraq through Germany who had no paper records when he arrived. Due to this record system we could track his care, thus giving him more timely care without having to repeat laboratory tests and X-rays. This record system saved him pain, time and frustration and saved us time and money.

FMA Live! teaches through music, motion

Tawny Archibald Campbell
Bayonet staff

What do racecars, Velcro walls, sumo wrestlers and gigantic pies have in common? They are all used to teach students the joys of science through music and motion.

FMA Live! Where Science Rocks, a program sponsored by NASA and Honeywell Hometown Solutions, visited Faith Middle School March 31 as part of a 23 school nationwide tour.

The program, named for Sir Isaac Newton's second law of motion — force = mass x acceleration — is a multimedia show that presents Newton's laws of motion and the universal law of gravity in a compelling and memorable way that entertains as it educates.

Candi Hall, an actress and spokesperson with FMA Live!, said the program incorporates live music, performances and video to inspire the next generation and teach about the importance of learning math and science.

"One of the reasons Honeywell put this together is to focus on the job markets in the fields of math, science and engineering," Hall said.

"These fields are growing three times faster than other fields, and yet the number of youth going into these fields is declining."

Honeywell and NASA combined efforts to create a program that could speak to kids on their level and encourage interest and enthusiasm for science, she said.

NASA projects that the first human to walk on Mars is sitting in a middle school or elementary school classroom somewhere in the United States.

Hall said they hope to be able to inspire that student and others to literally reach for the moon.

"This brings science to life for

Music series starts April 17

Melissa House
Bayonet staff

Warmer spring weather means the return of the U.S. Army Infantry Band's concert series.

This year's series kicks off at 3 p.m. April 17 on the lawn at Riverside, the commanding general's residence. The Top-40 combo, "Iron Mike," will perform its "Rock Steady" concert, entertaining the crowd with hit tunes from the 1960s to today.

Iron Mike will play a variety of musician's songs. Some of the featured artists whose music will be covered are James Brown, Jerry Lee Lewis, Outkast and Linkin Park. Iron Mike performed April 1 as part of the Academic Success Center's "Pride Day."

Staff Sgt. Tom Babbit is Iron Mike's NCOIC and has been performing with the group for almost two years.

"We can tailor the music to any age group, from basic trainees to World War II veterans," Babbit said. "We can play whatever they grew up listening to."

He said the concert will feature about 20 songs and last longer than an hour. It will be a mix of instrumental and vocal numbers showcasing the talents of Spc. Alfonso James.

Concert-goers may bring picnic lunches and lawn chairs or blankets, but should leave their pets at home.

In the event of rain, the concert will be cancelled.

Soldiers volunteer at Baker Village

Program provides mentors, fun

Tawny Archibald Campbell
Bayonet staff

It didn't take long for Randerious Banks, 9, to find himself in the middle of a kickball game March 30 at Baker Village.

Surrounded by Soldiers, Banks felt like he was in heaven.

"The best thing I did today was play with the Soldiers," Banks said. "When I get big, I want to be a Soldier and help kids. I'll play with them and give them toys and stuff."

Banks was one of dozens of children who turned out to participate in the monthly Kickball and Story Hour sponsored by Fort Benning's Better Opportunities for Single Soldiers program, Directorate of Morale Welfare and Recreation Soldiers and civilians.

The last Wednesday of each month, from 3:30 to 5 p.m., close to 50 Soldiers make their way to Baker Village as part of the Baker Village Initiative, overseen by the DMWR.

Baker Village is an impoverished housing area in Columbus that is seen as a dead end with no way out for many of the children who live there, said Sgt. Maj. Jennifer Pearson, DMWR sergeant major.

The outreach program offers opportunities for leadership, mentoring and role modeling for Fort Benning Soldiers and civilians, and an opportunity to make a difference with underprivileged children.

"I've been coming out here since November, when the program started, because I truly love it," Pearson said.

"I know the children by name, and they know me. It's a great excuse to get away from the desk and have fun."

Pfc. Jeremy Oldfield, BOSS president, said the goal of the program is to provide positive role models for the children.

"Hopefully they will see me as a friend," Oldfield said. "I look forward to coming and it makes me feel good to do something productive. I don't know if we can change the neighborhood, but we can change the children themselves."

Pearson said the monthly Baker Village activity has grown in leaps and bounds over the past four months. Last month, more than 75 children came out to play.

"The most important thing is they see us come back," Pearson said. "They see us come out and spend time with them.

"They remember me just like I remember them. We have nothing to do with this community, but we come out, and we care.

That is what matters the most."

CONTRACT REVIEW

Let lawyers look at contract before signing

Capt. Chad McFarland
Office of the Staff Judge Advocate

The Fort Benning Legal Assistance Division offers a new service to Soldiers and their family members for reviewing contracts on a walk-in basis.

Legal assistance attorneys will be available to read and help you thoroughly understand the contract before you sign it.

This free legal advice is a huge asset for service members and their families by helping prevent situations where they discover too late that they did not get the bargain they thought or are bound to obligations they did not consider.

It is always better to get legal advice before you sign a contract rather than after you have already signed.

Few things can be done in this day and age without a contract being involved. Whether it's purchasing a car, buying a new home, signing up for cellular phone service, or even giving the school permission to take our kids on a field trip, we form agreements that bind us to certain terms.

Almost anything you buy, sell, borrow, loan, rent, repair or trade involves a contract. Like it or not, we all face circumstances that require us to enter some form of legal agreement.

Once a contract is entered, the law says we are bound by certain obligations set forth under the agreement.

Essentially, contracts are legal agreements between two or more people which create an obligation to do or not do a particular thing. Contracts provide for the rights and obligations of the parties to the contract and protect those parties in case a problem arises.

Because legal obligations arise once a contract is entered, it is essential that you understand both the advantages and liabilities that arise under the contract before you sign it.

Once you have signed a contract, it will normally be too late to change your mind or to say you did not know or did not understand what was in the contract.

Therefore, if you have questions, you should always get the answers before you sign.

For more information, call the Legal Assistance Division at 545-3281.

Protect children always

Rebecca S. Welch
Family Advocay Program

The Army Family Advocacy Program is a specialized program designed to prevent child and spouse maltreatment. The main focus of FAP is to develop prevention programs that contribute to a healthy life. A lot of people get the wrong idea about the program believing we are out to punish the Soldiers and their families if an incident is reported or if a call is received for help on child and spouse abuse. This is a misconception.

We provide training to help educate the families and direct them to services to assist them in meeting their needs before an incident occurs or a problem arises. We are available to help the families solve their problems, not to create a problem for the families.

Services are provided to families who are vulnerable to the kinds of stress that can lead to abuse. When families seek help or a problem has been identified, referrals are made to other treatment programs on and off the installation that provide services for Soldiers and their families involved in family violence.

In order to strengthen the families and prevent the recurrence of abuse, we encourage voluntary self-referral through education and awareness programs.

Violence intervention

The FAP manager may provide crisis intervention to Soldiers and family members in emergency situations. Cases involving family violence intervention, that need long term treatment and follow-up, are referred to Social Work Service.

Parent education

Traditionally it has been assumed that parenting is instinctive and that people "just know" how to take care of and raise children. It now seems clear that parenting is a learned behavior, influenced by personal history and experience, as well as the opportunity to observe and practice specific skills.

Parent support programs assist parents to "get off to a good start," to interact more effectively with their children, and to create and maintain a safe home environment.

This program also teaches parents basic skills in physical care, supervision, and psychological nurturance, appropriate to a child's age and stage of development. Classes are offered through the Chaplain's Family Life Center at 545-1760.

Families who need child care while enrolled in daytime classes can receive free child care through Family Advocacy.

Troop education

Classes are mandatory and are provided on an annual basis for all military personnel on the dynamics of spouse and child abuse, the availability of treatment services, and the Army's policies regarding family violence. Units can schedule briefings by calling the FAP training specialist at 545-6957.

Victim advocacy

The Victim Advocacy Program provides support and assistance to each person who is a reported victim of domestic violence through the victim advocate coordinator. The advocate provides direct services to individual victims of spouse abuse. For more information, call 545-4013.

New parent support/first steps

The New Parent Support/First Steps Program provides emotional support, parenting education, referrals to community resources, and follow-up contact to parents with newborns, thereby helping to develop healthy family relationships to reduce the risk of child abuse/neglect. The FAP funds the New Parent Support/First Steps Program, located at Martin Army Community Hospital.

Each first-time mom receives a tote bag filled with educational materials to include: a First Steps Calendar, nursery rhyme cassette tape for baby, tub tester, "101 Ways to Praise Your Child" magnet, etc. New Parent Support/First Steps volunteers are assigned to work with new parents for up to one year after the baby is born.

Respite child care

Respite Care is temporary child care for the purpose of relieving parental stress and providing a nurturing and developmentally appropriate environment. Respite Care can be provided for families when both Soldier and spouse attend parenting classes or counseling. Respite Care will not be used in place of foster care or abandoned children. This program is designed to provide child care relief for families who are stressed because of a family problem and who are participating in treatment programs.

Safety education for children

The FAP has developed a post-wide safety education program that offers sensible guidance on personal safety and child sexual abuse prevention for children, their parents, and youth and child care staff. This program emphasizes the important supervisory and protective roles of adults and the community members who interact with children. School counselors coordinating with the FAP conduct classes on a continuous basis.

Community education

Education for the community regarding family violence, the extent and nature of child abuse/neglect and spouse abuse, reporting mechanisms, and available services is provided by the FAP.

Military community education involves making FAP services known, accessible, and attractive to those who can best use the services to improve their family functioning. This program is designed to promote military community support and to encourage early referral. The FAP promotes "Child Abuse Prevention Month," "Month of the Military Child," and "Domestic Violence Awareness Month," and participates in unit organizational days, unit support groups, health fairs, etc.

Command education program

Commanders are briefed at all levels on the nature of spouse and child abuse and the means to prevent domestic violence. Information is also provided to the commanders on FAP policies, procedures, available resources, command responsibilities in the areas of identification, reporting, coordination, rehabilitation, and administrative or judicial options. Installation commanders will receive a briefing within 45 days of assuming command.

Foster care

Foster care is a voluntary or court-mandated program for abused/neglected children. It provides 24-hour care and supportive services in a family home or group facility for children who cannot be cared for by their own families, and need substitute care. The FAP has a memorandum of agreement with the Department of Family and Children Services to provide foster care. Families interested in becoming foster care parents may contact their local Department of Family and Children Services.

Spouse abuse shelters

The FAP contracts with the Russell County Shelter and the Columbus Alliance for Battered Women to provide a 24-hour residential facility or temporary accommodation to ensure there is a safe, temporary place to stay, with emotional and material support to victims of spouse abuse and their children. The shelters also offer counseling, transportation, and community services, including legal, medical, and financial help to spouses. Individuals may contact the shelters directly — Phenix City at 297-4401 or Columbus at 324-3850 for placement.

Sayers Library hosts events

Workshops, crafts, family fun planned

Directorate of Morale, Welfare and Recreation

It's National Library Week, a time to celebrate the contributions of libraries, librarians and library workers to their schools, campuses and communities.

"Books. Magazines. Videos. CDs. Databases. Internet access. You name it — Sayers Memorial Library has something for everyone," said librarian Sherrie Floyd.

As part of this annual event, the library will host the following programs and events:

• A basket-making workshop is planned for 6 p.m. Thursday. Kellie Clinton will host this workshop. There is no charge to watch, but if you would like to make a basket, the cost is $8.50. For those making baskets, bring a bucket and heavy duty scissors. Class size is limited so sign up now.

• Family Fun Time will be at 2 p.m. April 17. Winnie the Pooh will be the theme for April and everyone will learn new crafts based on this timeless classic.

• The Afterschool Program will be at 4:30 p.m. April 21 and is open to all grade-schoolers. This program offers storytime, trivia questions and crafts. This month's theme is Bingo and Spring Trivia.

National Library Week 2005 marks the fifth year of The Campaign for America's Libraries, a multi-year public education campaign sponsored by the American Library Association and libraries across the country to speak loudly and clearly about the value of libraries and librarians in the 21st century. More than 20,000 libraries in all 50 states are being reached "@ your library," The Campaign for America's Libraries.

"National Library Week is only a great time to see what's new "@ your library" but also a time to stand up and speak out as a library advocate," Floyd said.

"There are lots of opportunities to help Sayers Memorial Library — be a reader for preschool story time, help cut craft projects, organize a book discussion group, help the staff put away books, set up a display or process new material to checkout."

For more information about National Library Week, upcoming events or ways to volunteer, visit Sayers Memorial Library in Building 93 on Wold Avenue or call 545-4911.

MEDDAC: Changes in processes

We have an integrated team with active-duty Soldiers, mobilized Reserve Soldiers, Department of the Army civilians, contractors and volunteers who give us more flexibility, broader experience (especially from our mobilized Reserve Soldiers and contractors) and a fresh look at our processes.

We have expanded our medical capabilities — for example, Winder Troop Medical Clinic is now open from 2 to 8 p.m. every day for any Soldier (no family members or retirees) to get care rather than going to the emergency room or off-post. We've expanded the parking lot (thanks to the 36th Engineer Group and the installation).

The pharmacy has a "concierge service" to assist in answering questions, patient flow and screening prescriptions from downtown — all of which has decreased waiting time for information and medication pick-up.

We are starting self-care classes that enable patients to pick up selected over-the-counter medications from the pharmacy without a prescription after receiving some training

What is coming?

First, continued commitment to the highest quality care provided or coordinated for our patients.

Second, continued expansion and innovation in support of our Soldiers (active, mobilized, retired) and their families. For example, a new clinic in support of the incoming new brigade, a consolidated troop medical clinic on Main Post (groundbreaking this month) and a laser eye center to do refractive surgery (fall 2005).

Third, continued upgrades and modifications to the present facilities improving the safety, flow and appearance of all our buildings. It will cause some confusion as we move services around during construction and upgrades — please be patient, the end result is really worth it.

Again, thank you for your support, your continued service and your understanding.

For more information, contact our Patient Liaison Office (first floor entrance of MACH or 544-1817) or MEDDAC Marketing and Public Affairs (first floor hallway or 544-4276).

Jessica Ridley, an eighth-grader at Faith Middle School, participates in an experiment during an FMA Live! assembly demonstrating Newton's Law of Action and Reaction. FMA Live! is a multi-media presentation that teaches science through music and motion.

FMA: Fun science

them," said Dr. Julio Gonzalez, school principal. "The goal is to get the students interested in science related fields. The teachers will take the lessons learned today and add them to what they are already teaching."

FMA Live! focused on three laws of motion and used demonstrations and songs to help students remember what the law is and how it works.

Velcro walls were used to show inertia, go-carts were driven across the stage to illustrate action and reaction, and Sumo wrestling and a huge soccer ball showed that if force stays the same and mass changes, there will be no affect on acceleration.

All three of Newton's Laws were demonstrated by plowing a futuristic hover chair with a nervous assistant principal strapped into place into a gigantic cream pie.

"I already knew (the laws), but they went into more detail and they were easier to remember," said Jessica Ridley, a student used in one of the demonstrations. "I enjoy science. It's my favorite class, and this made science really entertaining with all sorts of experiments."

Ridley said the combination of music, dancing, demonstrations and participation from students and teachers helped students get excited about science and want to learn more.

"When you put (science) on stage," Ridley said, "it makes everything more elaborate and fun."

Real idols identified

REFLECTIONS

Chaplain (Lt. Col.) Ronald Smith
USAIC Chaplains Office

I confess, I have watched the American Idol saga. I have a favorite, but I am not so sure I would refer to any of them as my American idol. All too often, we are tempted to think a person who is talented or blessed with some outstanding attribute can be our idol.

An idol is an image used as an object of worship, a false god, one that is adored, often blindly or excessively and could be something visible but without substance.

In recent weeks C-span, the cable network, aired a series of documentaries from Walter Reed Army Medical Center featuring wounded and recovering Soldiers from Iraq and Afghanistan.

I watched intently, as did many others, the unfolding stories of the lives of both young and not so young Soldiers as they recounted their harrowing combat experiences.

Soldiers candidly, sometimes with tears, related how they had been injured, and how it had affected them physically and personally.

They recalled how the trauma had impacted their fellow Soldiers, and then the painful process of recovery and the ongoing difficulties of getting past and through their injuries.

Each of these brave Soldiers were thankful to be alive. They did not solicit themselves as idols or heroes, but you couldn't keep from seeing each of them as someone who was very special.

Smith

They talked about how those around them had reacted, how supportive and helpful many had been in not only saving their lives, but also in walking with them on the road to recovery.

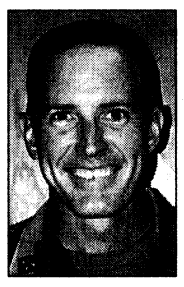
Somberly, each of them was coming to grips with the limitations and losses that will forever change their lives. They spoke of unanswered prayers, of anger, fear, and even rejection.

But not one of them spoke of giving up, of quitting or wallowing in their own pity. Their faith and focus must encourage us.

I have a new American idol now. I'm rooting for all of them.

The faith displayed by these heroes should make each of us aware of how precious and fragile our lives can be.

The writer of the book of Hebrews in the New Testament said, "Now faith is being sure of what we hope for and certain of what we do not see." Those Soldiers know what they can hope for — do we?



Win war against anxiety

Chaplain (Maj.) Jeffrey Hawkins
Chaplain Family Life Center

The Army and those associated with the Army are getting increasingly used to fighting wars. At one time, many of us would have had trouble locating Iraq and Afghanistan on a map, but now they have become places with which a good number of us are all too familiar. Wars are, in fact, the reason the Army exists to begin with.

The people of the Army are a people familiar with war. Yet there is a less familiar battle some of our own Army family, Soldiers and family members alike, wage on a daily basis. It's a war that uses IEDs of a different sort: Improvised Emotional Devices.

These emotional bombs can go off unexpectedly in an instant, lodging their emotional shrapnel in the soft parts of our lives, sometimes seemingly inextricably. It's a war that is often very private, very excruciating, very frustrating and very lonely. It's the war of anxiety.

Hawkins

Do you know or love someone who is fighting a war with anxiety? It can manifest itself in several different ways.

First, there is agoraphobia (panic disorder). Many times this begins with a spontaneous "panic" incident of some sort and evolves over time to include a debilitating fear of a variety of things (driving, shopping, etc.).

Next would be phobias of a specific type (flying, heights, snakes, etc.). Social phobia is a type of anxiety that revolves around a fear of embarrassment that keeps a person from speaking or being noticed in public.

Generalized anxiety disorder is a category given to symptoms of anxiety that don't include panic attacks, but do include worry and tension that interferes with living and pleasure. Obsessive-compulsive disorder is characterized by unwanted or intrusive thoughts that lead a person to take repetitive actions or compulsions.

Lastly, Post Traumatic Stress Disorder is a type of anxiety some in this community are familiar with. This is simply a pattern of anxiety that follows a severe stress.

If you think you have any of these symptoms, look for next week's article. For more information or help, call the Chaplain Family Life Center at 545-1760 or join me at 11 a.m. Sundays at CrossRoads Contemporary Chapel on Kelley Hill.

Bench notes

Erin Nash

• UNC reigns

The University of North Carolina men's basketball team beat Illinois, 75-70, April 4 for the NCAA title.

UNC coach Roy Williams finally got a championship after being the losing coach twice.

• Harvick wins in small field

No. 29 Kevin Harvick started last in the Food City 500 April 3 and won. No racer had ever started in the 43rd position at Bristol and won.

Sunday is another race, the Advance Auto Parts 500 at Martinsville Speedway. It can be seen at 12:30 p.m. on FOX.

• First steroid bust

Major League Baseball has had it's first suspension since it's enactment of the anti-steroid policy.

Tampa Bay Devil Rays' center fielder Alex Sanchez has been suspended for 10 days for testing positive.

Sanchez plans to appeal the suspension.

• Masters returns

The first major tournament of the PGA season, The Masters, takes place this weekend in Augusta.

Defending champion Phil Mickelson is on top of his game this year, having won the BellSouth Classic last weekend after a four-hole playoff against four other golfers.

Rain has affected eight of the 14 tournaments this year — here's hoping for a beautiful, sun-filled weekend for the guys.

All-Army finalizes wrestling roster

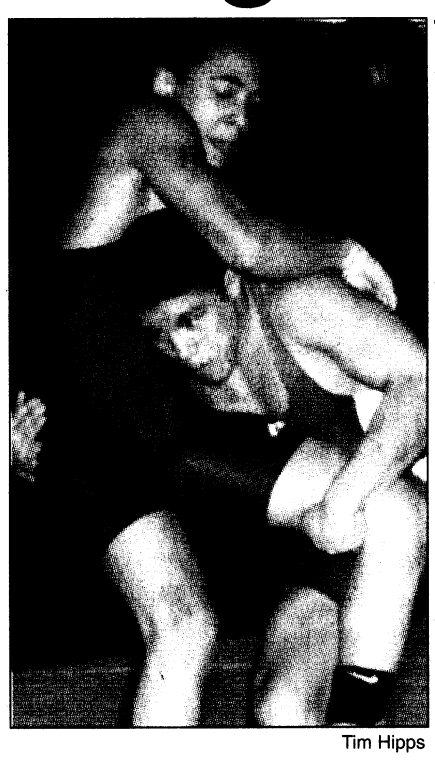
Army shows Team USA what they're made of

Tim Hipps
Army News Service

FORT CARSON, Colo. — The 2005 All-Army wrestling team roster was finalized March 17 in an exhibition match against Team USA contenders.

Two-time U.S. Olympic Trials champion Staff Sgt. Keith Sieracki and 2002 Greco-Roman super heavyweight world champion Staff Sgt. Dremiel Byers led the Soldiers to a 7-7 tie in the event, sponsored by Army Morale, Welfare and Recreation.

Sieracki moved up to the Greco-Roman 84-kilogram weight class and said he is committed to making another Olympic run for the 2008 Beijing Games. He got the All-Army team rolling with a victory against Team USA's Abraham Haddon.



Spc. James Henderson of Fort Bragg, N.C., earned a spot on the All-Army roster with a win against Fort Carson's 2004 Olympian Sgt. Oscar Wood in the 74-kilogram freestyle division. Wood stepped up from 66-kilograms, his normal weight class, to give Henderson a taste of world-class competition. Henderson responded with a takedown in the first period and won the match two periods to one under new rules implemented this season by the International Federation of Associated Wrestling Styles.

"I knew that Oscar wasn't ready," All-Army wrestling coach Staff Sgt. Shon Lewis said. "I wanted him to wrestle up a weight class, but he hasn't had any freestyle training in practice. Henderson put the pressure on Oscar, and that's what I wanted to see."

Former Marine turned Army Sgt. Jess Hargrave of Fort Carson defeated Team USA's Cory Posey out of the clinch in the first two periods of their 74-kilogram Greco-Roman match.

"I wanted him to wrestle Posey, who has been a mainstay at the Olympic Training Center," Lewis said of Hargrave. "He's a newbie for the Army and I wanted to see if

Are Sox old, dirty laundry this year?

Erin A. Nash
Bayonet staff

Ahhh, I can breathe again. It's been five long months, five terrific months, for this Red Sox fan.

I still get a tear in my eye when I see the replay of Keith Foulke throwing to first for the final out of Game 4 of the World Series, ending the 86-year drought for the Red Sox. But now a new day has dawned.

The first game of the 2005 Major League Baseball season started April 3, with the Boston Red Sox playing the New York Yankees.

The Yankees won, 9-2, and I don't care. My husband told me to change the channel, he didn't want to see the Sox losing, especially to the Yankees. But I love baseball, I love the Sox, no matter if they're winning or losing.

They're still the world champs, and I'm going to proclaim myself a diehard Sox fan.

I came across a link on ESPN.com, where 19 ESPN employees, from ESPN The Magazine to sportscasters and others made their picks for World Series champs, American League champs, National League champs and Wild Card champs. It's interesting, to say the least.

Only three picked the Red Sox to win the World Series again. Most picked the Sox as Wild Card winners, but ultimately thought the team would fail to win the American League pennant. The National League picks were split between the Braves and Marlins.

I have to go with the Braves, especially since the acquisition of local boy Tim Hudson and moving John Smoltz to the starting rotation.

The Cubs and Cardinals were also big picks. Sure, the Cards were in the World Series last year, but they went down in four games. Maybe LaRussa has something up his sleeve for this year.

Also big in the American League were the Twins and Angels.

My baseball knowledge is provincial — it pretty much rests in the hands of the Red Sox, and ends with the Yankees, only because it's fun to dislike them so much.

This year will be a great year for baseball, beyond steroids and suspensions, and maybe MLB can get back to baseball, and give the fans something to cheer about, something to root for.

Wrestling: Army athletes compete

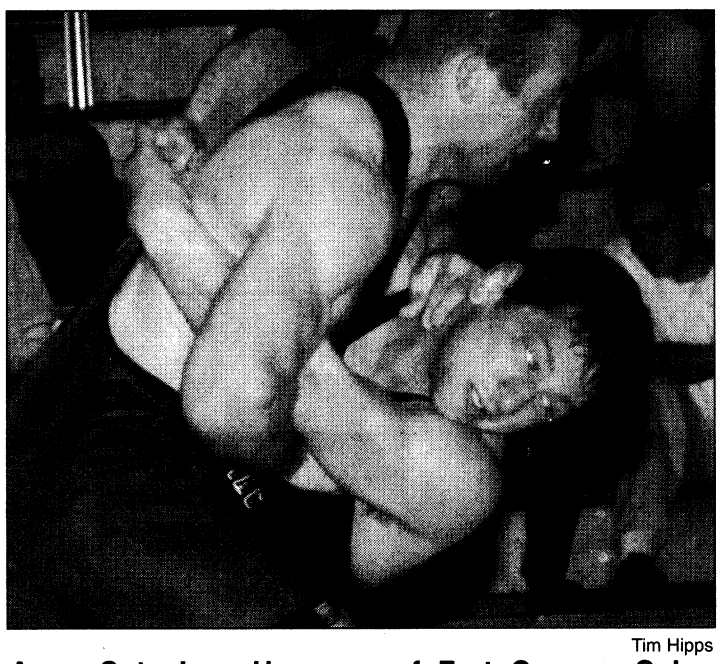
he could pull it out."



Army Sgt. Al Sankey, another former Marine, prevailed two periods to one over Team USA's Brandon Ruiz in a Greco-Roman match at 96 kilos. Pfc. Everette McDaniel won the final two periods against 1st Lt. John Lopez in an All-Army wrestle-off at 96 kilos freestyle.

Byers ended the exhibition by defeating Team USA's Russ Davie in back-to-back periods. Byers returned to Fort Carson March 22 from a tour of Hungary and Poland, where he finished third and first respectively in international tournaments.

The final score was unofficial because some of the wrestlers are neither Soldiers nor Team USA members.

At any rate, Fort Carson's community was treated to an evening of big-time amateur wrestling that attracted a crowd of about 600 to the mountain post's Special Events Center.

In addition, Lewis invited national-caliber female and high school wrestlers to compete in the event.

Tim Hipps

Army Sgt. Jess Hargrave of Fort Carson, Colo., takes down Team USA's Cory Posey during a 74-kilogram Greco-Roman match March 17.

"My main objective was to give them exposure and show them we have a program they can come into and the Army will help them obtain their goals," he said of Californian Marcie Van Dusen and Connecticut's Tina Pihl, who competed in a women's 55-kilogram freestyle match.

"Because of the success of (Sgt.) Tina George, a lot of female (wrestlers) are interested in coming into the Army," he said.

Van Dusen and Pihl both train at the U.S. Olympic Training Center in Colorado Springs, Colo.

The event also featured a 132-pound freestyle match between two-time Arizona high school state champ Henry Cejudo, a reigning Colorado high school state champion, and Colten Palmer, a two-time state high school champ from North Carolina.

"The purpose of that match was to show the community that we have a lot of up-and-coming athletes here in Colorado Springs who are thinking about coming into the Army," Lewis said.

Palmer was in town to check out the Army's wrestling program while preparing for the FILA Junior National Championships.

Lewis said he plans to have the All-Army team train through the Armed Forces Wrestling Championships March 31 and April 1 at the OTC. He has his sights set on seeing the Army win the fourth Greco-Roman team title in five years at the U.S. National Wrestling Championships April 29 and 30 at Las Vegas.

"We're not overlooking Armed Forces, but we can definitely make some corrections and adjustments from these matches tonight," he said.

WHEN YOU'RE WAITING FOR A TRANSPLANT, WHAT'S MORE IMPORTANT: YOUR MEDICAL STATUS OR YOUR FINANCIAL STATUS?

Andre Weiss/Nonstock/Picture Quest

Contrary to rumors you may have heard, the transplant waiting list is completely blind to wealth or celebrity status. Once you're on the list for a donor organ, what really counts is the severity of your illness, time spent waiting, blood type and other important medical information. Call 1-800-355-SHARE or visit www.shareyourlife.org for honest information on organ donation. And remember, if you want to be a donor, you must tell your family or it may not happen.

Inside

Here's a bit of interesting trivia: Did you know Americans spend more dollars per capita on taxes than on food, clothing and shelter combined? Here's another fact, not so trivial: Today is the last day to file income taxes without penalty. If you don't have all the information to complete your return, you can request an extension with Form 4868. It must be mailed or e-filed by today. The Tax Center, on Ingersoll Road across from Wynnsong Theater, is open today. For more information, call 545-4267.

Post aces retention mission

Fort Benning Soldiers stay Army, re-enlist

Melissa House
Bayonet staff

Although the Army appears to have had trouble meeting its recruiting goals in the past few months, Fort Benning hasn't had any difficulty keeping its Soldiers.

The post retention NCOs put big numbers on paper for the second quarter of fiscal 2005, meeting 100 percent, or more, of retention goals for the 11 Training and Doctrine Command units.

Now, more than halfway through the fiscal year, Sgt. Maj. Lyle Hogue, the command career counselor, said he's pleased with the command emphasis on retention and impressed by Soldiers' decisions to commit to the Army.

Although recruiting and retention are often lumped together, Hogue said, they're "distinctly different." He's been involved in one or the other for 16 of his 21-year Army career, including four years as a recruiter in Boston.

"You're dealing with a different dynamic with recruiting than when you're dealing with Soldiers," he said. "Soldiers evaluate risks. Civilians can't really evaluate that risk, because they only see what's on TV or hear through secondhand stories."

The Fort Benning Soldiers who re-enlist, Hogue said, already have the warrior spirit instilled in them and a sense of patriotism and service to country that motivates a lot of them to stay in the Army past their initial enlistment.

The challenge, he said, is in

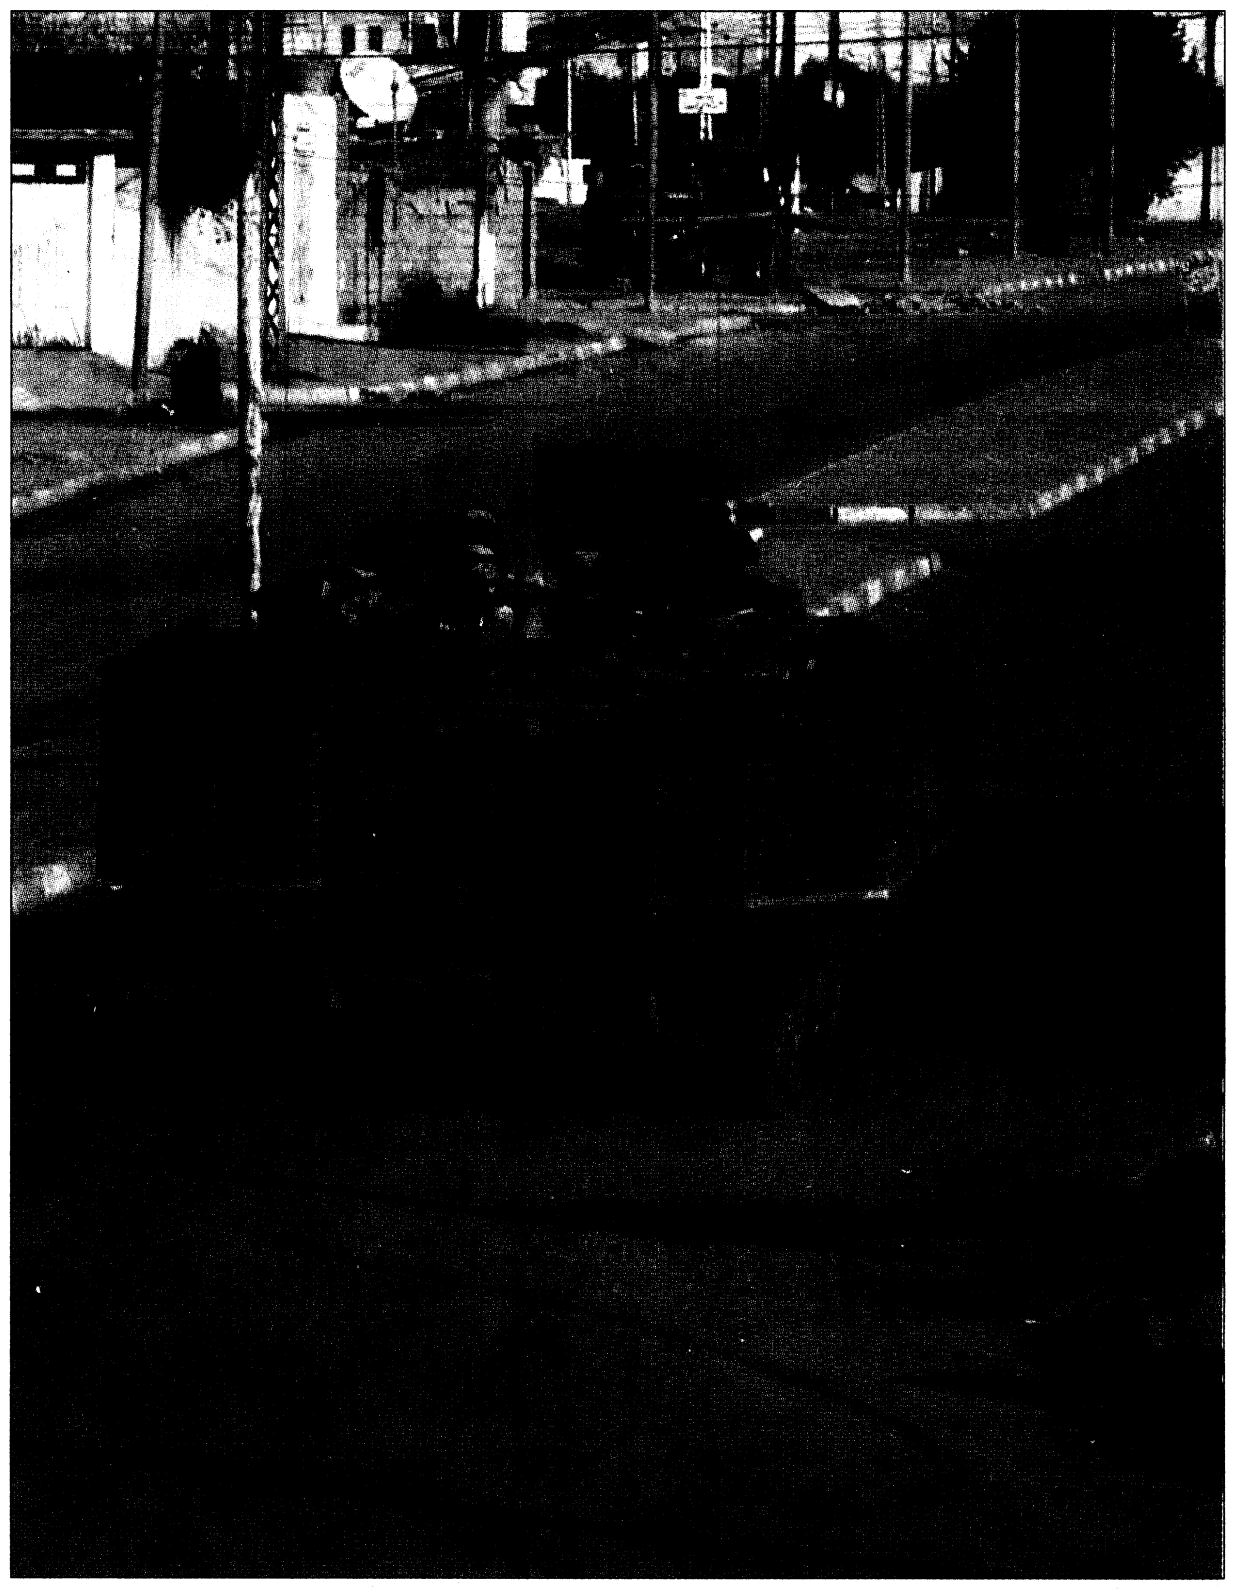
Stryker meets Army expectations

Combat vets give feedback on program

Spc. Nikki St. Amant
Bayonet staff

In response to recent press coverage criticizing the Army's Stryker program, the Fort Benning Stryker manager said the negative perspective is being played up by those in the defense world who have been against the Stryker program since its beginnings.

"There have always been two schools of thought about combat vehicles," said Col. Don Sando, chief of TRADOC Systems Management-Stryker/Bradley. "Tracked versus wheeled vehicles. There is a requirement on the battlefield for both. The problem is those who oppose the program will always focus on the negative."



The Stryker platform was born in 1999 at the direction of then Army Chief of Staff Gen. Eric Shinseki. With an evolution from concept to development, testing and fielding spanning only four years, Stryker's launch in 2003 made it the most rapidly produced and fielded system in the Army's history.

Sando said he thinks the Army balanced the need to test and refine the equipment while providing a critical capability to Soldiers on the ground as quickly as possible.

"No matter how good your development and testing is, until it's used in combat, you'll never have it exactly right," he said. "From day one, we have identified problems and worked to correct them. You always want to refine and make the system better. The development always continues."

Sando cited the Bradley fighting

Army visit

Secretary of the Army Francis J. Harvey, right, and Brig. Gen. Benjamin Freakley, Fort Benning commanding general, shake hands with Rangers following a Rangers in Action demonstration April 8. Harvey visited Fort Benning April 7 to 8. While here, he observed Soldiers conducting physical training, MOUT and basic rifle marksmanship training, both on the range and at the post's new Warrior Marksmanship Facility. He received briefings and had a round-table discussion with Infantry Captains Career Course students.
Sworn into office Nov. 19, Harvey is responsible for an annual budget of $98.5 billion and a workforce of more than 1 million active-duty, National Guard and Reserve Soldiers, 220,000 civilian employees and 15 million acres of land.

BRAC process ongoing

Samantha L. Quigley
American Forces Press Service

WASHINGTON — Base Realignment and Closure 2005 is in full swing, and this round is important for many reasons, said Philip Grone, deputy undersecretary of defense for installations and environment.

"In order to support ongoing force transformation, to improve the joint utilization of our assets, to convert waste to warfighting … all of those things are important in and of themselves," Grone said in an interview with American Forces Press Service and the Pentagon Channel on Monday.

"But the timing of BRAC for 2005 is also important because it provides a platform, an opportunity, for us to assess the sites and select the sites for

GET READY, GET SET...

Yeah I'm free, free fallin'

Spc. Nikki St. Amant
Bayonet staff

My whole military career I have wanted to go to Airborne School. One thing or another always kept me from going. But on April 3, I got the opportunity of a lifetime. I got to do a 14,000-foot tandem jump from a tiny aircraft with one of Fort Benning's own Silver Wings Command Exhibition Parachute Team, and it was free.

That's right. I said free.

The things we do in the name of work. Every once in a while I actually do get to have a little fun on the job.

Not to say that I wasn't scared. It was really windy, and I might as well have been looking down on the Earth from the moon as high as it seemed we were.

But when the moment of truth came, I blurted out an expletive, swallowed a ball of fear that felt like molten lava, and rolled out the door. To try to put the feeling into words does it injustice, but I, of course, will.

It was exhilarating. Dropping like a stone through the air at somewhere between 120 and 180 mph puts life into perspective.

I'm not sure if it was overcoming the fear or the adrenaline that comes with laughing in the face of death as you plummet toward the ground that made it such a rush, but it was just about the best feeling I have ever experienced.

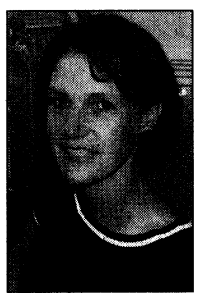
The fear disappeared after our first somersault out the door. We broke into our arches and cruised the currents, while the cameraman filmed my ridiculous cheeks flapping in the wind. (An arch is when you arch your body back as far as you can, like you are laying face down in a cereal bowl.) We did some turns and enjoyed the scenery, while I fought back thoughts like "what if the chute doesn't open?"

After what felt like forever, my tandem instructor pulled the cord and after a two-second delay that felt like another eternity, we were jerked up into a standing position.

The excitement doesn't stop when the chute goes up. He let me take over and told me how to do turns. At one point, he had me pull hard on the right, and we turned almost horizontal to the ground. That was fun. I had passed the waiting time on the ground reading about parachuting accidents, and one of them involved a similar situation, but the poor guy's chute collapsed. So with visions of Nikki pancakes dancing through my head, I screamed my fool head off, and my instructor laughed his head off and tried to reassure me that everything was OK.

After that, we spiraled down for awhile, and he took control to position us for re-entry.

I was expecting a broken tail bone and some scrapes and bruises, but despite the wind, we managed to pull off a perfect tandem landing directly in front of the hangar.



I was stoked. I couldn't believe I was alive. We jumped out of a perfectly good plane at 14,000 feet, freefell forever and landed in choppy winds without a single bump or bruise. I felt like standing on the bow of the Titanic with my arms spread wide and screaming "I'm the king of the world!"

So finally I got to scratch something off that lifelong "To Do List" I have been compiling since I was 6 years old. I still haven't seen the Pyramids up close and personal, and I doubt I'll get a night alone with Brad Pitt, but those seem so trivial after the ride of my life.

To the Silver Wings: Thanks you guys!

Spring into spring cleaning

Melissa House
Bayonet staff

Ah, spring. The birds are chirping, the bees are already buzzing, and the flowers are blooming.

Ah, spring. Baseball and lawn mowing and spring cleaning. I was good up until the last part — the part about the cleaning. With three boys, a 57-pound dog, hamster, gerbil, mouse, salamander and fish, there's always something, or someone, needing to be cleaned at my house.

I love the idea of spring cleaning, really, I do. But I'm an unperfection perfectionist, a compulsive list-maker with a wealth of good ideas.

I've started my spring cleaning list, well, lists actually, and hope to get at least a few things checked off by the time spring cleaning rolls around next year.

Invariably, my list includes tasks involving paint, nails, screws or shovels, which leads me to believe I've strayed from cleaning and have entered the world of home improvement.

I'm guessing my spring cleaning efforts might be a bit more productive if I could limit myself to cleaning and decluttering tasks, like those waiting for me in the basement, my personal nemesis.

But when my idea of spring cleaning also involves rearranging furniture, deep cleaning everything, organizing, decluttering and recycling, I'm doubting I'll get much accomplished.

Spring cleaning must be the time when all of us who made New Year's resolutions get a second chance. If you didn't get anything crossed off your New Year's list — like I didn't — now is the chance to get things done.

So, here's how to do it. Get your pencil and paper and make a list. Start sequentially. Check your cabinets and figure out what cleaning supplies you need to buy, then go crazy.

And you can bet, when I'm done shopping, I've purchased every new cleaning product on the market, and usually in sufficient quantities to create a cleaning kit for each floor of my house and for each of the bathrooms. Mops? I have a few, because, in my quest to begin spring cleaning, its's time to decide which is best — the traditional string mop, the hands-free, or the new-fangled butterfly mop. But buckets? Sadly, only one.

The sky's the limit for the rest of your lists. You can group tasks by category, by floor or by room. And while you're making your lists, make lists for your spouse and your kids.

I listen to the birds chirping and the bees buzzing while I'm making my lists, and the next thing I know, spring has given way to summer. And, by then, I figure, it's too late to start the spring cleaning, so I put away my lists until next year.

Celebrate National Library Week

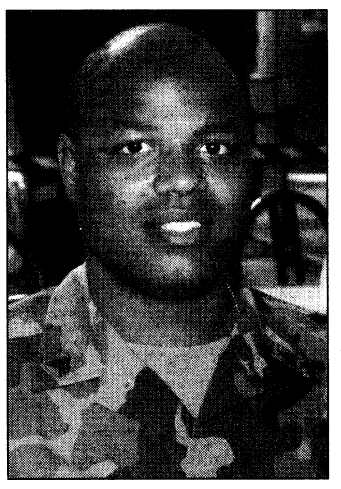
This week, Fort Benning libraries, along with libraries in schools, campuses and communities across the country celebrate National Library Week, reminding the public about the valuable contribution of our libraries, librarians and library workers and that there is something for everyone at our library.

Libraries have always been part of the American dream — places for education, self-help and lifelong learning. Today, they are at the forefront of the information age, making information accessible in multiple formats to people of all ages.

Libraries offer us a world of opportunity just for the asking. It is easy to take our libraries for granted, because they are always there for us. National Library Week is the perfect opportunity to see what you can do for our library so it continues for generations.

— Brig. Gen. Benjamin C. Freakley
Commanding general

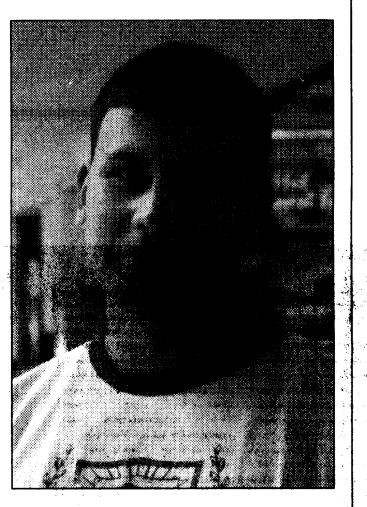
did you know...



- There are an estimated 117,859 libraries in the U.S.
- The first public library opened in Warsaw, Poland, in 1747. Other libraries were accessible only to the elite and scholars.
- The Library of Congress holds 28,689,159 books, the most of any library in America.
- No one knows when Ptolemy founded the ancient library of Alexandria, but it was partially destroyed by fire in 47 B.C. in a siege by Julius Caesar. Antonius later gave it to Cleopatra as a gift. The library was also a university, with room for 5,000 students.
- According to surveys, 62 percent of Americans have a library card.
- Library use increases during recessions.
- The Vatican library was established in 1451 and is rumored to hold ancient scientific, religious and secret texts. Access is granted only to scholars whose proposal is approved by Vatican officials. About 6,000 volumes are added each year.
- Valuable or archaic books should be stored at 50 percent humidity and never touched by hands, because skin oil damages delicate paper.
- The American Library Association helps collect books for deployed Soldiers. To donate books, go to the Web site www.booksforsoldiers.com.

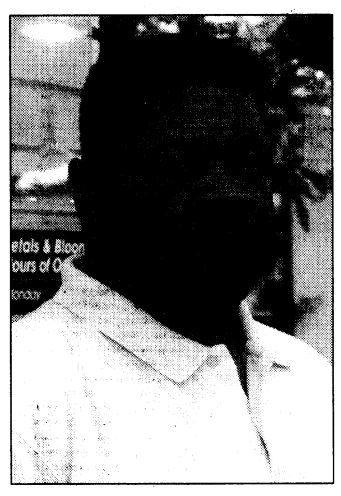
VARIOUS VOICES

What extreme sport or activity have you tried or would like to try?



Veronica Carson, family member — "I've always wanted to bungee jump. I'm a Sagittarius, so I'll try anything once, but I just can't do that. It looks like fun, but I think I would get up there on the rope and get ready to jump and say, 'No way, get me out of here!'"

Sgt. McKinley Anderson, 14th Combat Support Hospital — "I would love to hang glide. It doesn't look daring or scary to me. It looks relaxing. I used to scuba dive, but that uses too many muscles. You get so tired swimming you can't even enjoy it."

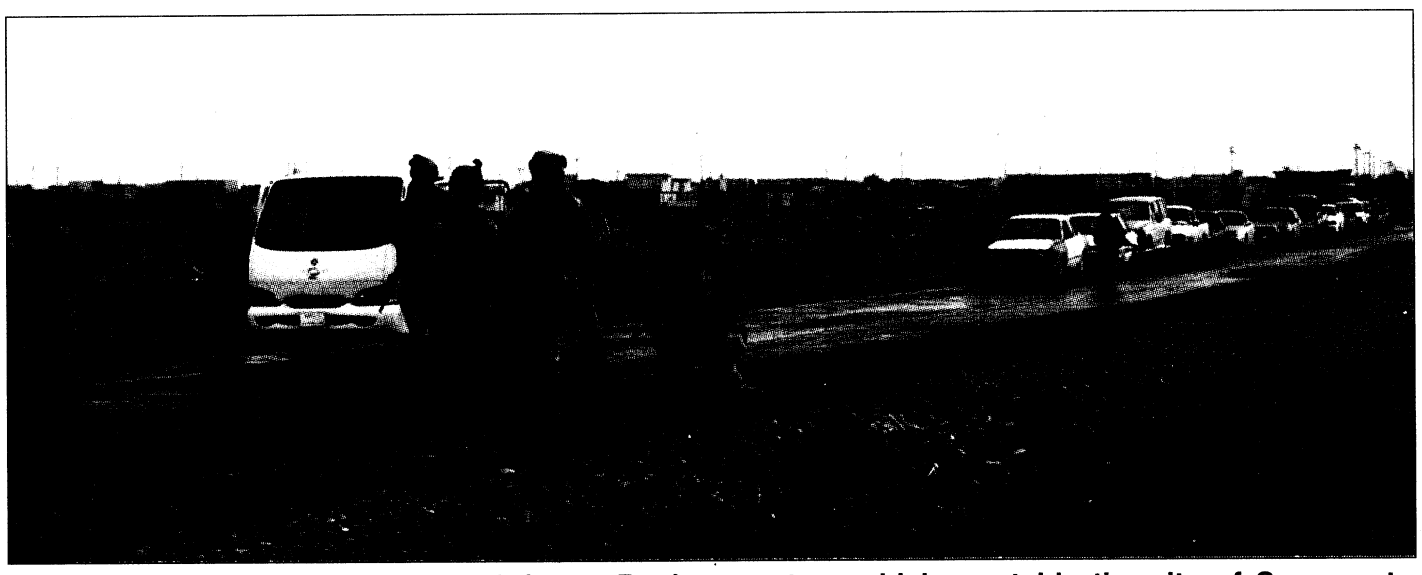


Ansley Rebstock, family member — "I would love to bungee jump or skydive. They both seem like such a rush. Some things are too extreme for me. I wouldn't want to do something like feed sharks. With my luck, I'd get in the cage and it would break open!"

Spc. Anthony Cerezo, 718th Engineer Company — "I went bungee jumping, and that was such a thrill. I would like to skydive, but I think that's the limit of what I would try. I'm a daring person, so I'll try pretty much anything, as long as I see someone else do it first!"

Staff Sgt. Janna Gaddy, 14th Combat Support Hospital — "I bungee jumped, and it was incredible, but I'll never do it again. It was kind of like being airborne. You're scared until you feel your chute come out, but once you know you're safe, it's fun."

Retired Chief Warrant Officer T.J. Hamm, Columbus — "I've always wanted to hang glide, but the opportunity has never presented itself. I was a pilot when I was in the Army, and I guess I'm just born to fly. It's such an adrenaline rush."



Michelle Nietzold, family member — "I would absolutely love to skydive. It would be such a thrill. I want to try it because I'm terrified of heights, so I feel like if I could do that, I could do anything."

AER campaign on target to meet goal

Spc. Eliamar Castañon
Assistant editor

Today marks the end of week seven of the Army Emergency Relief Campaign on Fort Benning, with $150,000 in contributions made so far and two weeks left to reach the goal.

The current contribution total is only $25,000 short of this year's AER campaign goal of $175,000, said Lionel L. Grant, installation AER officer.

Fort Benning's deadline for AER campaign contributions is April 30, but Grant said people can make contributions to AER at any time during the year.

He said the first three weeks of the campaign were slow, but they quickly picked up.

"We're on target so far considering the 3rd Brigade and the 36th Engineer Group are gone," Grant said. "I'm very confident we will meet our goal by the end of our campaign."

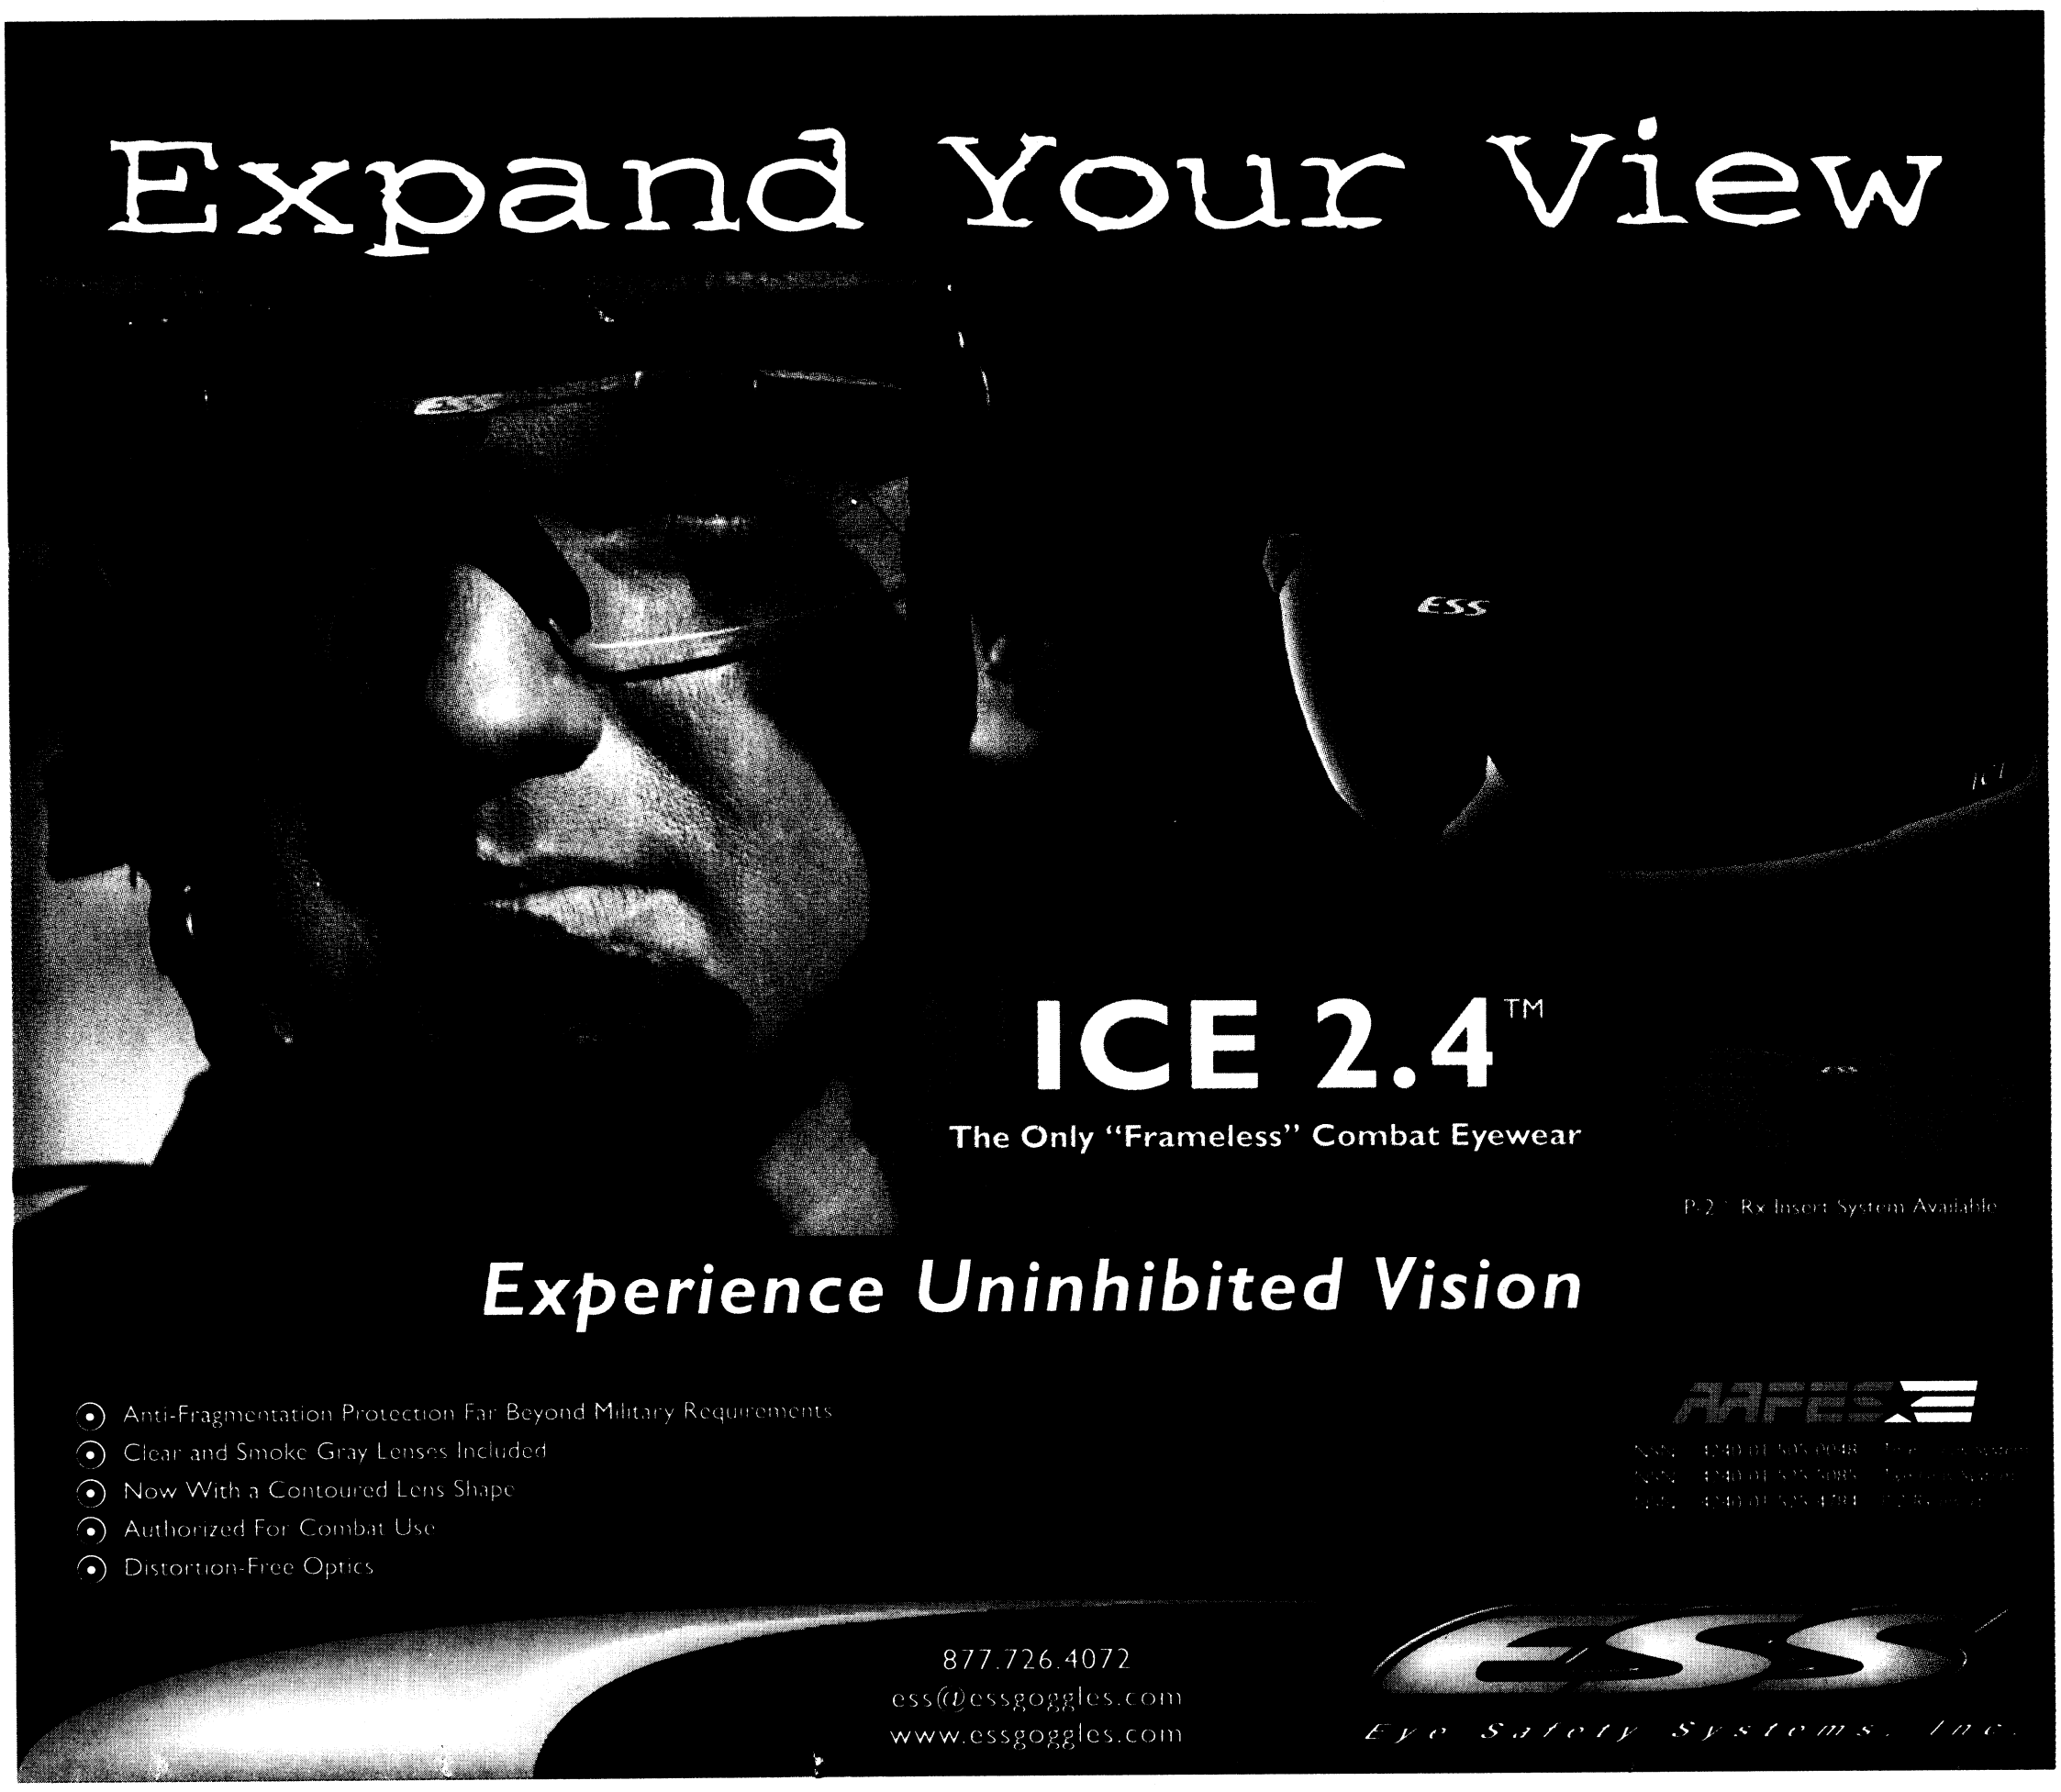
Commands have the option of sending deployed Soldiers contribution forms to allow them to contribute, but Grant said Fort Benning didn't do that.

"Our Soldiers are out there accomplishing a mission," he said. "Although AER contributions are important, what they are doing is important too and there's no need to distract them. They've got enough on their minds."

The money Fort Benning and other installations contribute to AER is funneled into a central bank, and from there, all contributions are consolidated and made available worldwide by the AER headquarters. AER is a private, nonprofit organization incorporated to provide emergency, financial assistance to Soldiers, retirees and widows.

In 2004, widows and retirees accounted for $205,000 worth of AER disbursements, said Donna Carter, assistant AER officer. Active-duty Soldiers accounted for $730,000 of the disbursements — a total of $930,000.

"It's important that retirees and widows contribute to AER as well as active-duty Soldiers because they can also receive AER assistance," Grant said. "But one does not have to contribute to AER to receive assistance."



After April 30, if anyone would like to make a contribution to AER, they may do it by going to Building 2624 in Soldiers Plaza or visit the AER Headquarters Web site at www.aerhq.org.

Silver Wings to do tandem jumps

Spc. Nikki St. Amant
Bayonet staff

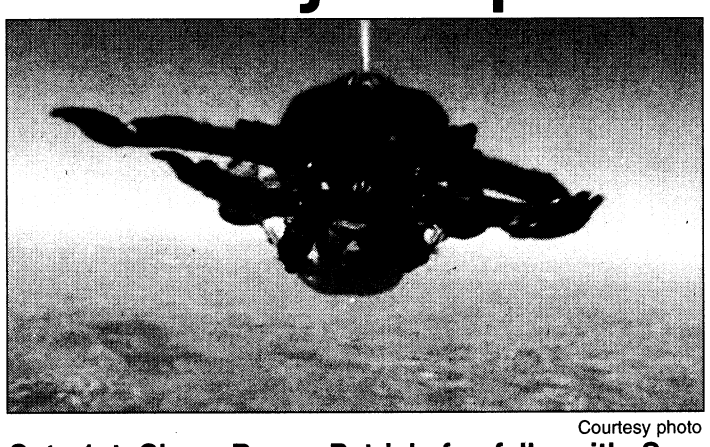
Fort Benning's Command Parachute Exhibition Team, the Silver Wings, is preparing to take on a new mission in the next few months.

The team will take visiting VIPs up in the air and allow them to tandem jump, showing them the kind of training and dedication that goes into making a Soldier.

Two of the team members, team leader Sgt. 1st Class Bryan Patrick and assistant team leader Staff Sgt. Tim Santellanes, are certified tandem guides.

A tandem jump is when two people are attached together and jump out of an airplane, freefall and then land together.

The two are in the process of accumulating 50 tandem jumps each before beginning the new program. The idea is when the VIP's feet touch the ground again, he will have a better idea of the risks Soldiers take and the training it takes to prepare them for those risks.



It also will serve as a valuable recruiting tool, giving civilians the opportunity to see what it can be like to become a Soldier and learn to conquer fear and master a skill, Patrick said.

"This gives the community an opportunity to interact on a one-on-one basis with Soldiers and builds support for the Soldiers who are deployed," Patrick said. "This puts the military right in their front yard."

Patrick also said he believes the program will benefit the post by fostering the interest and support of local officials by exposing them to an exciting aspect of military life.

Though this particular Silver Wings mission is just starting, Patrick's experience is proven. With over 2,500 freefalls, he is an expert at what he does.

He and Santellanes received their tandem training at Fort Bragg, N.C., in December and have been taking active-duty military personnel on tandem jumps to continue their training in preparation for the launch of the VIP tandem program in the future.

NSPS Q&A

Civilian Personnel Advisory Center

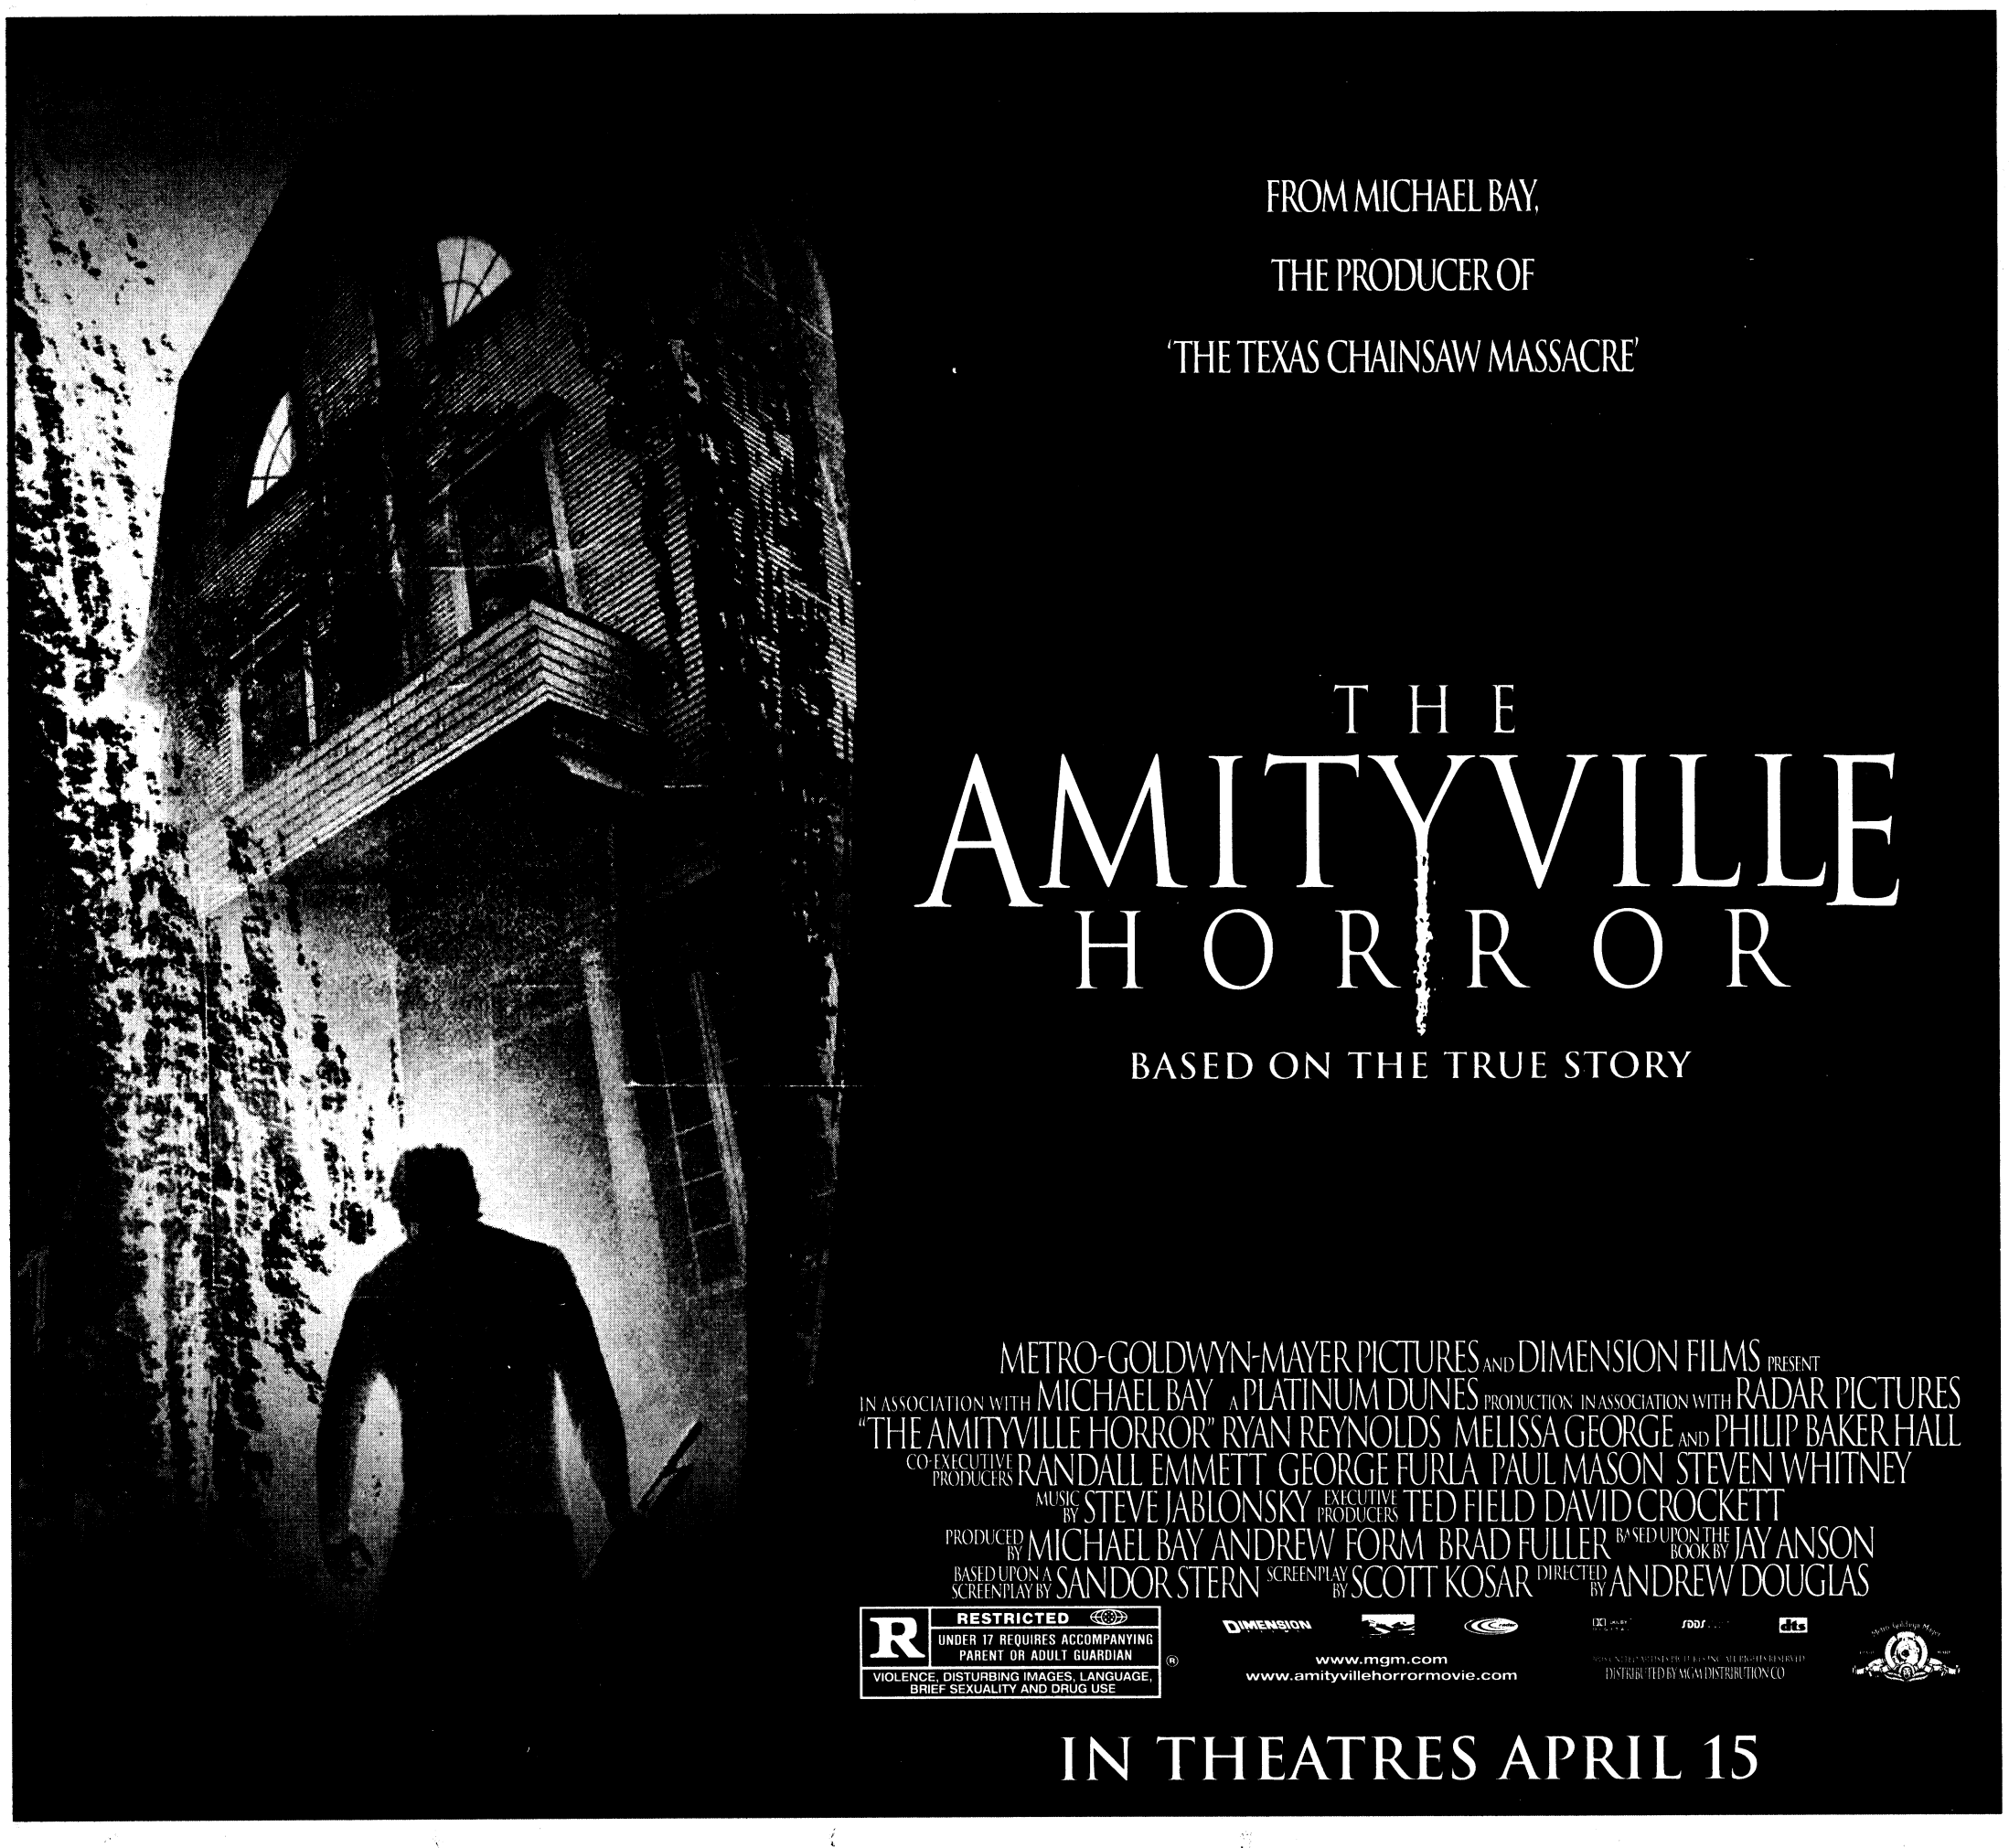
MYTH

NSPS does nothing to help with national security.

FACT

Not true. The mission of DoD is national security, and civilians play a vital role in supporting that mission. National Security Personnel System provides the Department the tools necessary to recruit, retain, and manage the civilian workforce to accomplish our critical mission in a more effective and efficient manner.

NSPS will also provide flexibilities so we can reduce our reliance on the military to perform jobs that civilians can and should perform, freeing up the military to perform its war fighting duties.



NSPS is a mission-driven, performance-based system that motivates, recognizes, and rewards excellence, which will result in an overall improvement to mission effectiveness, and enhanced national security. This is critical in the global war on terrorism.

MYTH

Under NSPS, DoD civilians can be assigned anywhere in the world, even to a war zone, with little or no notice.

FACT

Currently DoD can reassign employees, including reassignment to overseas locations, when necessary to support the mission. We do this under today's system. This authority is unaffected by NSPS. One of the goals of NSPS is to reduce its reliance on military to perform jobs that could be performed by civilians.

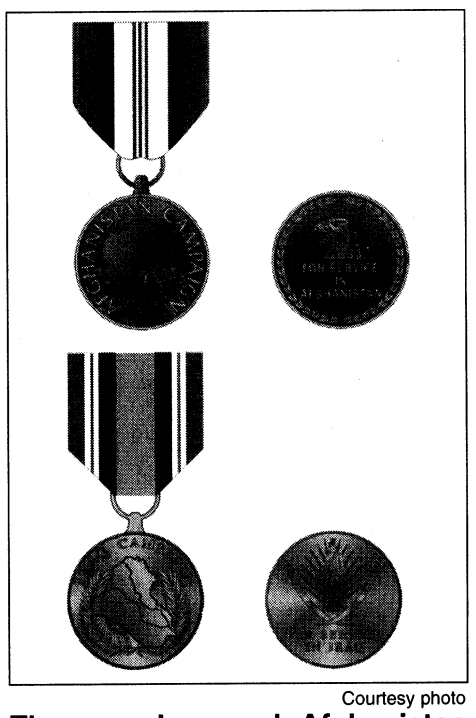
Army announces criteria for Iraq, Afghanistan medals

Eric Cramer
Army News Service

WASHINGTON — Soldiers can put on the new Iraq and Afghanistan campaign medals after the Department of the Army approved the final implementation rules April 8.

Soldiers are eligible for the Afghanistan Campaign Medal if they: served in direct support of Operation Enduring Freedom on or after Oct. 24, 2001, until a future date to be determined by the Secretary of Defense or the cessation of the operation. The area of eligibility includes all the land area of Afghanistan and all the air space above the land.

Soldiers are eligible to receive the Iraq Campaign Medal if they: Served in direct support of Operation Iraqi Freedom on or after March 19, 2003, to a future date to be determined by the Secretary of Defense or the cessation of the operation. The area of eligibility encompasses all land area of the country of Iraq, the contiguous water area out to 12 nautical miles and all air spaces above them.



Soldiers must serve 30 consecutive or 60 non-consecutive days in either area, or be engaged in combat during their service; be wounded or injured requiring evacuation from the area.

The medals replace the former Global War on Terrorism Expeditionary Medal.

Denise Harris, assistant chief of the policy section, military awards, U.S. Army Human Resources Command, said the currently serving Soldiers need no orders to receive the medals, and that battalion-level commanders generally determine eligibility.

"Typically, the commanders will send a service roster of the award to the personnel center, and it will be included in the Soldiers records," Harris said. "So the commanders will make the recommendation."

Soldiers who already have the GWOT Expeditionary Medal, for service in Iraq or Afghanistan, may apply for the new medal in lieu of the earlier one, Harris said.

Courtesy photo

The new Iraq and Afghanistan campaign medals were authorized April 8.

"All they have to do is take their orders to their personnel office, and the personnel center will change the records," she said.

Once a Soldier elects to receive a campaign medal in lieu of the GWOT-E, the GWOT-E will be removed from the Soldier's records and he or she will only be authorized to wear the new campaign medal, Harris said.

However, it is possible for a Soldier to wear both the GWOT-E and one of the campaign medals simultaneously. For this to occur, the Soldier must have been deployed to theater on two different occasions to earn the two awards independently, Harris said.

Harris said the ribbons for the new awards are in the supply chain now, but the medals won't be available for issue until May 1.

Rangers induct distinguished brigade members

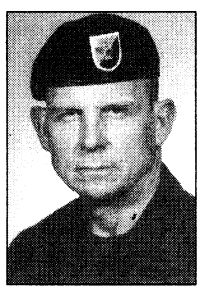
Bridgett Siter
Bayonet staff

The Ranger Training Brigade will host the Distinguished Member of the Brigade induction ceremony Thursday at 1:30 p.m. at Pruden Hall, brigade headquarters, on Camp Rogers. The ceremony is open to the public.

"This is one way we identify and recognize those who have influenced the way we do things here at the brigade or its predecessor, the Ranger Department," said Master Sgt. Larry Haddix, the brigade's acting operations sergeant major.

The following 10 Rangers will be honored:

Maj. Gen. John G. Van Houten

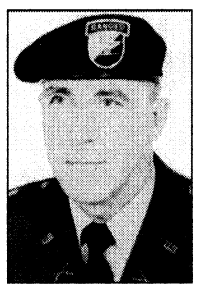


Van Houten was the first commander of the Ranger Training Command. Following the outbreak of the Korean War, he supervised the formation and training of 14 Ranger companies which served in Korea. After seeing the exploits of these units, the commander of the Second Army, Lt. Gen. Edward Brooks said, "We'd have a better combat Army if all the men were graduates of that (Ranger) course."

Houten followed this advice and began training individual Rangers. With uncompromising standards, he established a permanent school, the Ranger Department, to serve and raise the standards of Soldiers throughout the Army.

Van Houten is responsible for authorizing the combat veterans of these Ranger companies to wear the black and gold Ranger Tab. After Korea, Van Houten became the first Ranger Department commander, and Ranger School became a permanent fixture for elite Army training. Van Houten is known as the father of the U.S. Army Ranger School.

Col. Robert A. "Tex" Turner



Turner was commander of the Ranger Department from 1982-1985 and a member of the Ranger Instructor Patrolling Committee from 1966-1968. Turner implemented the Desert Phase of Ranger School. For more than 12 years, 132 classes and approximately 20,000 Rangers conducted live-fire exercises and desert training.

During his 31 year career, Turner served twice in Vietnam and earned the Silver Star for gallantry. In 1970, during an attack on fire support base Henderson, Turner jumped from a hovering helicopter into hostile fire and assisted the Soldiers in their fight against the enemy. Though wounded by mortar fire, Turner continued to provide support and even carried a Soldier to the helipad for medical evacuation.

Turner is a 2000 Ranger Hall of Fame member and the honorary colonel for the Ranger Training Brigade.

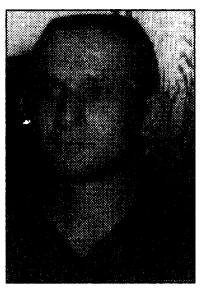
Col. Elliot Sydnor

Sydnor commanded the Ranger Department from 1977-1980. He refined and implemented performance-oriented training, which gave instructors and students clear, non-negotiable standards for evaluation.

Sydnor commanded the 327th Airborne Infantry Regiment, 101st Airborne Division, in Vietnam in 1968.

In 1970, Sydnor, as the Ground Forces commander, prepared and led the daring raid on the POW Camp at Son Tay, North Vietnam.

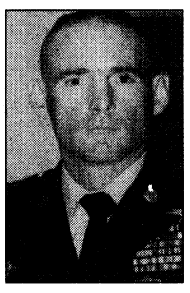
In 31 years of service, he earned the Distinguished Service Cross, Silver Star, Legion of Merit with Oak Leaf Clusters, Distinguished Flying Cross, the Bronze Star with "V" device, and the Vietnam Cross of Gallantry with Silver Star. Sydnor was inducted into the Ranger Hall of Fame in 1992.



Lt. Col. Keith Antonia

Antonia commanded the 5th Ranger Training Battalion from 1999-2001. He also served as the assistant chief of the Long Range Surveillance Leaders Course and the first A Company commander of the 4th Ranger Training Battalion when the Ranger Training Brigade was established. Antonia was the Distinguished Honor Graduate and won the Darby Award for class 4-84. He participated in Operations Urgent Fury and Just Cause.

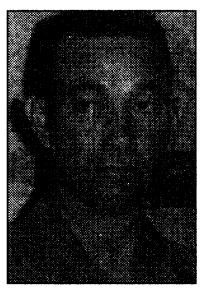
He served in the 75th Ranger Regiment as company commander and later as the Regimental Senior LNO and Regimental S3. Antonia completed 238 parachute jumps in his 18-years on jump status. His awards include the Bronze Star Medal, Master Parachutist Badge with Combat Star, and the Combat Infantryman's Badge.



Maj. William Spies

Spies served eight years with the Ranger Department as an instructor, chief of the Benning Ranger Committee, and the Ranger Department deputy director. Spies used his Vietnam experience with the 1st Force Reconnaissance Battalion to make training more realistic and valid. He also helped implement the change to task, conditions, and standards in the Ranger Course. He also implemented performance oriented training.

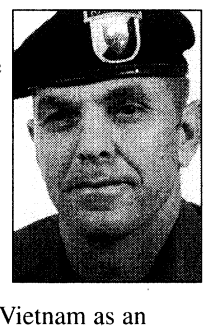
Spies helped the Infantry Center form 1st Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment, staffed the first Ranger Battalion Operations Field Manual, and served as the Infantry Doctrine Officer of the Combat Developments Command. In 2000, Spies was inducted into the Ranger Hall of Fame. He retired with the Legion of Merit, Vietnam Cross of Gallantry, two Bronze Stars and two Purple Hearts.



Command Sgt. Maj. Frederick E. Weekley

Weekley was the command sergeant major of the Ranger Training Brigade from 1987-1992. During his 25 year career, Weekley devoted his time and effort to serving with and training Rangers. He served 18 months in Vietnam, followed by a tour as ground advisor to the 81st Company, (Ranger) ARVN Airborne Division. During this time he was awarded the Silver Star and four Bronze Stars, three with the "V" device for valor, and the Purple Heart.

Weekley was the last sergeant major of the Ranger Department and the first command sergeant of the Ranger Training Brigade. He remains the longest serving command sergeant major in the history of the Ranger Training Brigade. Weekley also served in the Florida Phase of Ranger School as an instructor, first sergeant and sergeant major of the Ranger Camp before becoming sergeant major of the Ranger Department. Weekley will be a 2005 Ranger Hall of Fame inductee later this year.



Command Sgt. Maj. William Mixon

Mixon served as the Ranger Department sergeant major from 1967-1969. In 1959, he was the honor graduate of Class 2-60. Mixon told the Ranger story and demonstrated the Ranger standard to presidents Eisenhower, Kennedy and Johnson.

Mixon helped make Army survival videos and authored FM 21-75, Ranger Training. After 35 years, he retired as the command sergeant major of the 18th Airborne Corps. Mixon is a 1997 Ranger Hall of Fame member and was the 2000 Doughboy Award winner.

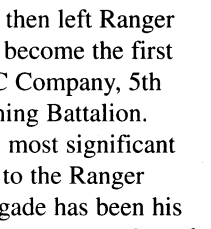
Command Sgt. Maj. James H. Collier

Collier served as the sergeant major of the Ranger Department from 1974-1978. After completing two tours in Vietnam as an advisor for the Vietnamese Airborne Division and the 81st Airborne Ranger Group, Collier came to the Ranger Department with the same leadership and determination he demonstrated in combat.

He implemented task, conditions, and standards in the Ranger Course. He also implemented performance-oriented training. Because of his leadership, professionalism, and dedication to lead from the front, superiors and subordinates alike adopted these new standards.

Beyond his significant contributions to the Ranger Department, Collier helped the Infantry Center form 1st Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment, and presented them their first colors. Collier retired after 28 years of service with the Legion of Merit the Soldier's Medal, and Bronze Star with Oak Leaf Cluster. In 2002, Collier was inducted into the Ranger Hall of Fame.

Command Sgt. Maj. Michael A. Kelso



Kelso served multiple tours with the Ranger Training Brigade, most notably, as the command sergeant major from 1999-2002.

He instituted the Distinguished Member of the Brigade program. In his 32 year military career, Kelso served 11 years with the 75th Ranger Regiment.

Kelso was inducted in 2003 into the Distinguished Member of the Ranger Regiment. He also served with the Rhodesian Light Infantry and participated in six combat parachute assaults. Kelso is currently serving the Army as the U.S. Army Infantry Center's Command Sergeant Major.

Sgt. Maj. Mike Ramsey

Ramsey served multiple tours with the Ranger Training Brigade.

He also served in the 75th Ranger Regiment as a squad leader, platoon sergeant and first sergeant. He then left Ranger Regiment to become the first sergeant of C Company, 5th Ranger Training Battalion.

Ramsey's most significant contribution to the Ranger Training Brigade has been his selfless service as a member of the Mountain Ranger Association.

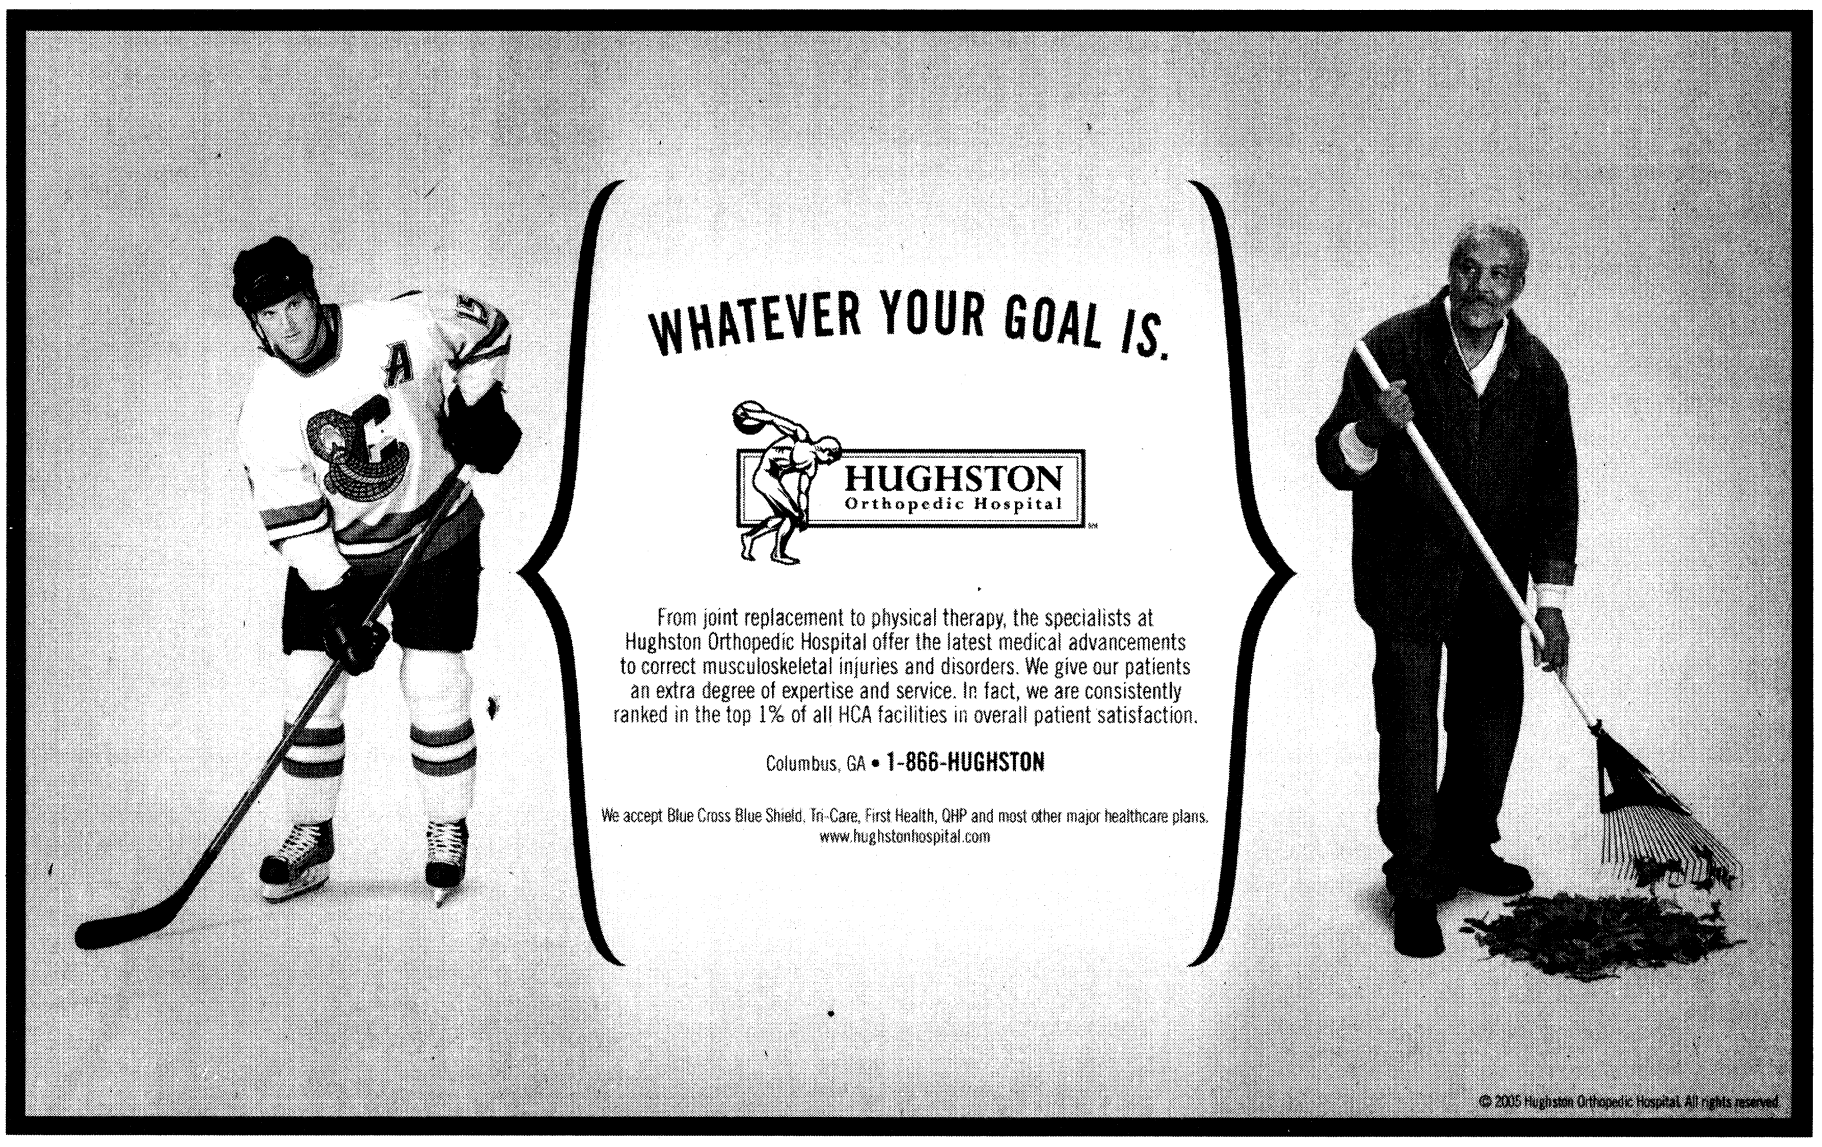
His tireless efforts to support Rangers and their families resulted in a significant increase in quality of life. Ramsey retired from the Army in 1994 with the Combat Infantryman's Badge and Master Parachutists Badge.

Pruden Hall

Staff Sgt. Robert Pruden was a 20-year-old reconnaissance team leader serving in the Quang Ngai province of Vietnam in 1969, when his team came under heavy fire during an ambush mission. Pruden charged the enemy to draw fire away from his men.

Twice he was wounded and twice he got back up. The third shot killed Pruden, but not before he killed several of the enemy, called for evacuation and saved his men.

None of that surprised Pruden's father, Larry. He knew Robert, the second of 13 children, would be the first to dive in where there was danger. He was a born leader, Larry said, when he visited Fort Benning with his wife, Marlys, in December.



The couple traveled to Fort Benning from their home in Minnesota to visit Pruden Hall, the headquarters of the Ranger Training Brigade, which was dedicated to Pruden in 1991.

On the couple's third trip to Fort Benning, they gave brigade officials their son's Medal of Honor, presented to Pruden's family by President Richard Nixon in 1971.

The medal is displayed at Pruden Hall, where Pruden's photograph hangs in the Ranger Hall of Fame where the Distinguished Member of the Brigade induction ceremony will be held Thursday at 1:30 p.m..

Army legend credits success to training, Soldiers

Puckett lauds teamwork, confidence

Bridgett Siter
Bayonet staff

"Personal growth through safe adventure."

It's almost laughable to hear retired Col. Ralph Puckett use that slogan, given the harrowing experiences that earned him the Distinguished Service Cross, two Silver Stars and five Purple Hearts during his 22 years of service with U.S. Army Rangers.

But it was exactly that — his experience with the Rangers — that taught him the importance of teamwork and the life-altering benefits of overcoming extreme challenges.

He applied those principles — and that slogan — to the company he founded after he retired from the Army in 1971, a company he called Discovery, because it was designed to help people discover their inner strengths through extreme adventures, such as white-water rafting, rock climbing and surviving in the wilderness. He took great measures to ensure the safety of those who participated in the program, but they didn't always know it.

"There was a very real connection there, as I see it, between them and Rangers," Puckett said. "Soldiers, Rangers in particular, develop confidence and teamwork because they do things that are extremely challenging. Even their training is extremely challenging.

"The people who (participated in Discovery) would have to do things they thought were impossible and they perceived as dangerous. It taught them teamwork and built their confidence."

Puckett regularly preaches teamwork and confidence when he speaks. And he's in much demand as a speaker on post at graduations and the Infantry Officer Basic Course, locally at civic events, churches and schools, and as far away as Korea and Afghanistan, where he met with Rangers in December. And he's a frequent guest writer for the Columbus Ledger-Enquirer.

No matter what the venue, Puckett is always, unabashedly, pro Ranger.

"We have very fine Soldiers today, and Rangers are the cream of the crop," he said. "I like to say Ranger training is the best life insurance for the battlefield you can get — for the leaders and the Soldiers they lead. It's the icing on the cake."

Puckett was a first lieutenant in 1950 when he formed and commanded the first Ranger company since World War II, the 8th Army Ranger Company, in Korea, the only Ranger company that wasn't trained at Fort Benning.

Months after its formation, Puckett was wounded when his company, though outnumbered 600 to 71, captured a Chinese stronghold and repelled five counter attacks.

On the sixth counter attack, Puckett was wounded a second and third time. He ordered his men to withdraw, but he stayed behind to fight. Two Rangers returned, fought back the Chinese, and dragged their commander to safety.

His extraordinary valor was recognized in 1992 when Puckett, who was wounded twice in Vietnam, was among the first to be inducted in the Ranger Hall of Fame and again in 2003 when he was named Distinguished Member of the Ranger Training Brigade.

Though he was, in fact, never a member of the 75th Ranger Regiment — it wasn't formed until 1984 — the secretary of the Army chose Puckett to serve as the regiment's honorary colonel eight years ago, in spite of a policy that requires an honorary commander to have served with the regiment. Such was Puckett's influence on the Ranger community.

Last year, when Puckett was named West Point Distinguished Graduate, Col. Craig Nixon, the regiment's commander, said the honorary regimental commander deserves all the accolades he's acquired because "he embodies what we strive for."

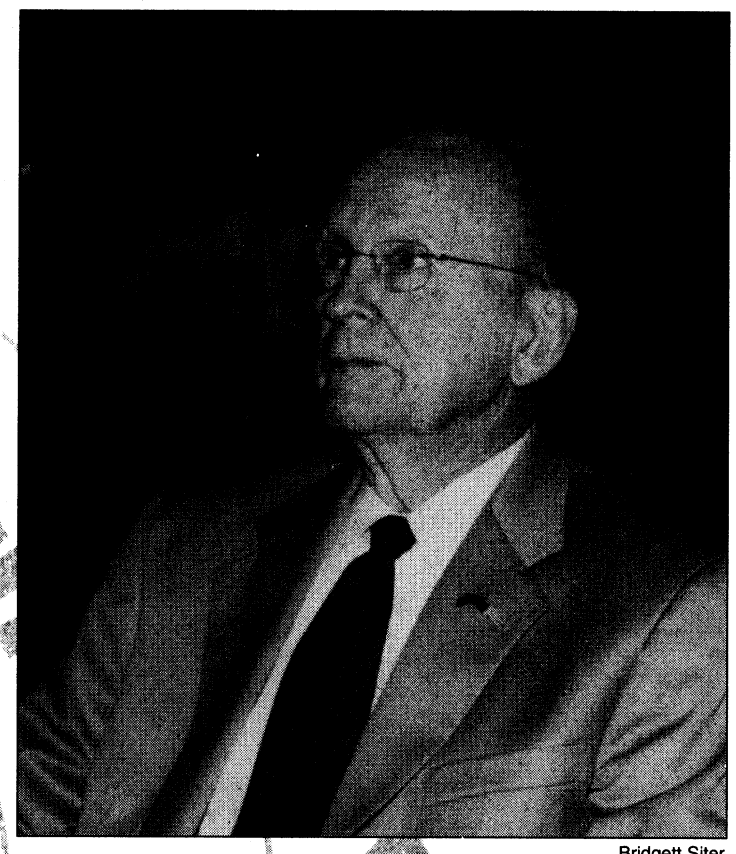
"(He's a) quiet professional and a true gentleman," Nixon said. "He's the ultimate mentor to the senior leadership and young Soldiers alike."

Puckett said these honors and awards humble him.

"But all that I have accomplished in my military career, I owe to my Soldiers," he said. "They deserve all the praise."

These days, when he speaks, as he did recently at West Point's Infantry Ball, Puckett tells young officers and cadets they can count on their Ranger training to set them on the path to success.

"I hear the same thing over and over," he said. "'Colonel Puckett, when I get a platoon, I know eighty percent of my Soldiers will be combat veterans. I've never been to combat, sir.'



"And I tell them, 'If you've got that Ranger Tab, they know you've got what it takes to lead them.'"

As the Ranger Training Brigade gears up for next week's induction ceremony for the Distinguished Member of the Brigade and the 22nd annual Best Ranger Competition, Puckett said he's preparing for what is traditionally an exciting time for the Ranger community.

"It's a very exciting time of year, particularly the competition," he said. "It's a competition to see who is the best of the best, and from my perspective, as an observer, it showcases what is important about Rangers — their teamwork and training and pride.

"The Best Ranger is probably the greatest challenge these (competitors) will ever face, including combat," he said. "Certainly not everyone can compete, but it shows what human beings are capable of if we aspire to be better than we are.

"They've worked themselves up to being the best that they can be. That's what being a Ranger is all about."

Retired Col. Ralph Puckett, the 75th Ranger Regiment's honorary colonel, described his trip to Afghanistan to Jordan High School students Tuesday. Puckett is often asked to speak about his military experiences, particularly the years he spent with the Rangers.

"I hear the same thing over and over, 'Colonel Puckett, when I get a platoon, I know eighty percent of my Soldiers will be combat veterans. I've never been to combat, sir.' And I tell them, 'If you've got that Ranger Tab, they know you've got what it takes to lead them.'"

ITB Soldiers step up road march

Tawny Archibald Campbell
Bayonet staff

The traditional battle march and shoot is just that, a road march followed by a live fire, but Capt. John Westbrook wanted his company to experience more.

Soldiers in E Company, 1st Battalion, 329th Infantry Regiment, did more than just road march March 25.

They transported supplies, treated casualties, reacted to an improvised explosive device and indirect fire.

"My Soldiers know how to march and put one foot in front of the other," Westbrook said. "The whole idea of the battle march is to get their heart rates up before they shoot. I wanted them to apply everything they have learned so far and have them run through what I call the gauntlet."

Westbrook, who took command about five weeks ago, isn't sure if his company is the first to change training. So far, the feedback from the Soldiers and cadre has been very positive, he said.

"This was a collective effort," he said. "It's really a field training exercise that stresses the Soldiers mentally and physically with changing scenarios."

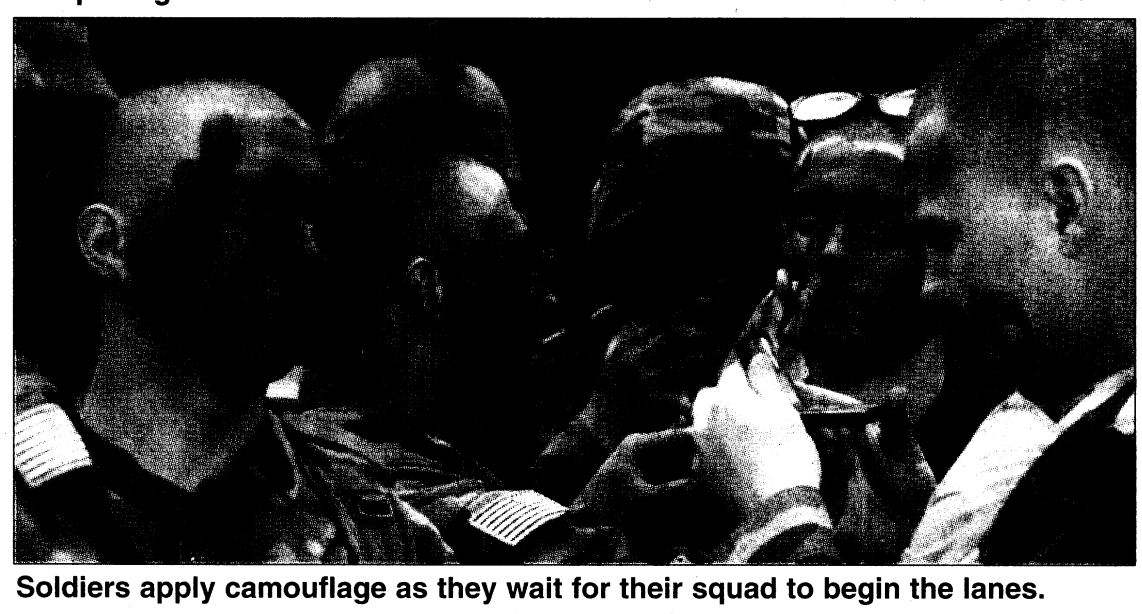
Soldiers were told they would support a field observation base and go on a resupply mission. Each squad of nine carried two 10-pound water canisters, three ammo cans and an aid bag on the mission.

As the Soldiers moved into the woods, an IED strike wounded one of their comrades, who was treated with a field dressing while the others pulled security.

At the second point, the wounded Soldier was reconstituted into the group and the Soldiers crossed an open field where they reacted to indirect fire. At point three, they regrouped, moved tactically to point four, and established security.

From point four to point five, a pneumatic gun fired at the Soldiers as they maneuvered through the individual movement tactics lane.

Finally, the squad donned their rucksacks and ran a quarter of a mile to the range, where they occupied battle positions and engaged the enemy.



"In the active Army, you need to continually adapt to changing situations," Westbrook said. "It's one thing to qualify with a weapon when you have all the time in the world to shoot. It's another when you are sweaty and tired and your weapon is dusty."

Staff Sgt. Kirk Shuppert, a company drill sergeant, said this training teaches Soldiers how to react under pressure and to work as a team. They learn to respond effectively when being chased or fired upon, and they understand the challenges of shooting when they are physically and mentally exhausted.

"This is good training," said Pvt. Garnett Hall. "It helps us practice the skills used in the field. And the more you practice the better you'll be."

Pvt. Drew Sanders signals for the members of his squad to gather after completing the individual movement tactics lane of the road march and shoot.

Soldiers apply camouflage as they wait for their squad to begin the lanes.

Pfc. Peter Lettieri gets ready to "engage the enemy" after the road march.

Legal specialists handle multiple tasks

> "There are sacrifices you make along the way. Personal ones. But in the end, you want to be able to look at your family or your kids and say 'I did something important.'"

> Sgt. 1st Class Vicki Dowdell
> OSJA, Criminal Law Division NCOIC

Sgt. 1st Class Vicki Dowdell has spent more than 10 years working in the legal arena. Currently assigned to the Office of the Staff Judge Advocate as the NCOIC of the Criminal Law Division, she reminisced on how different things are now within the 27D MOS and the Army.

When she went through school a decade ago, 27Ds, or legal specialists, learned how to transcribe courtroom proceedings and handle basic paperwork. She said it is a different story today.

Legal specialists assigned to the OSJA now work in one of four main areas — criminal law, legal assistance, administration or trial defense.

Their responsibilities range from doing legal research, assisting in courts-martial, processing chapters, claims and Article 15s, to providing routine legal assistance like will and advanced directive preparation, powers of attorney and separation agreements. They do PT and common task training.

That's a far cry from just typing.

Soldiers like Pfc. Jessica Poirrier are coming into today's Army and finding themselves submerged in a hustle-and-bustle environment with strict deadlines, mountains of work and volumes of regulatory and procedural doctrine to learn.

New Soldiers usually end up at the brigade level for their first assignment, where they have a chance to get their feet wet before moving to higher commands. Poirrier has had to learn the ropes under fire.

"Coming here is crazy. We are talking courts-martial every day. It's a great opportunity to learn."

The world of legal specialists doesn't stop at the courtroom door though. They also provide administrative support to the JAG office.

Soldiers like Sgt. Gloria Jackson are responsible for running a mini-company single-handedly.

"I'm basically the S-1, S-2, S-3 and S-4 for the entire office," she said. "I process awards, orders, supplies, maintain the law library by updating regulations and policies, provide status reports, maintain rosters, key controls and personnel files. It's like working for everyone at the same time."

Dowdell said she thinks the administrative position is one every legal specialist should fill so they understand the scope of the job.

That scope changes when war breaks out though.

Deployments happen for 27Ds just like every other job in the Army. Dowdell said the intensity of the job skyrockets in the field.

Most people think the legal troubles would decrease in a combat environment, but it is to the contrary, she said.

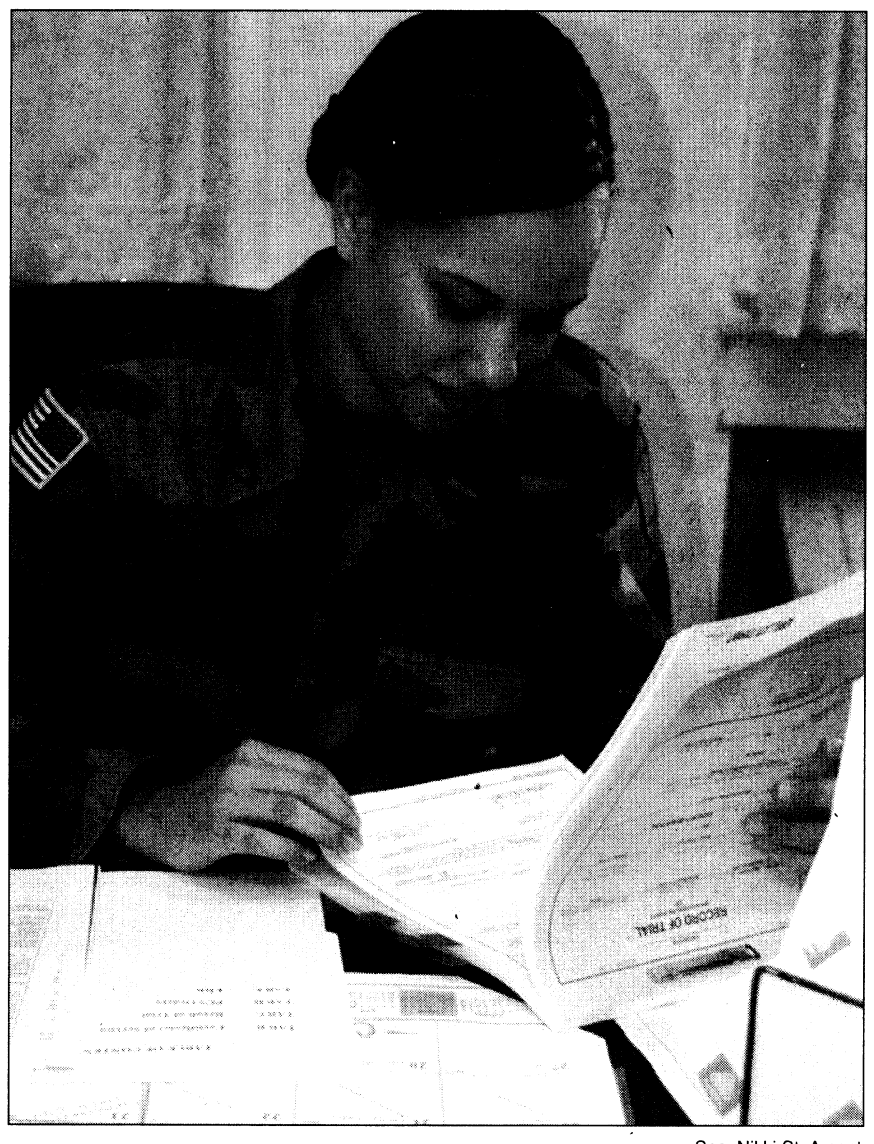
"When we deploy, it's not a whole office," Jackson said. "It's a few people. And you do everything you do back here and more."

Jackson has been to Iraq and back as a legal specialist and knows firsthand the pressure that comes with the burdens of war.

"We aren't any different than anybody else," she said. "We are out there pulling guard duty, doing convoys just like them. Plus, we're doing our normal job."

In addition to providing regular legal support to Soldiers and units, deployed JAG detachments adjust fire to deal with a whole new field of legal mines.

JAG personnel find themselves working side by side with unit commanders who seek them out for legal advice about potential targets, laws of war and rules of engagement issues as well.



"We are definitely in the mix," she said. "We end up giving regulatory guidance to the commanders on the ground."

Dowdell said tort claims also become a factor when civilian property is destroyed during combat operations and the public seeks compensation.

Even though the responsibilities are overwhelming and the duties are endless, all three of the legal specialists seemed satisfied with their niche in the Army.

They noted the good side of what they do and why they do it. The one-big-happy-family environment around the office, the smile on a Soldier's face when they come looking for help and find it, and the feeling that their hard work is appreciated by an involved command structure all contribute to their satisfaction with their job. "For me, it's about continuing this in the future," Dowdell said. "I want to be an attorney. I came in with one plan — to do my three years and get out.

"Now, 13 years down the road I'm still here. There are sacrifices you make along the way. Personal ones. But in the end, you want to be able to look at your family or your kids and say 'I did something important.'" meeting the expectations of the "first term" Soldiers who joined the Army following the Sept. 11, 2001, attacks.

Retention: Meets goals for quarter

Fort Benning exceeded its retention goals for those initial term Soldiers — 103 percent for the second quarter and 109 percent for the fiscal year.

Those numbers, Hogue said, are the result of having a good and dynamic retention team, from the commanding general to leaders at the lowest level, and to a group of NCOs selected to run battalion-level retention programs.

"The centerpiece of the reason why we do well is we talk to (the Soldiers) right when they get to the unit," Hogue said.

"Someone talks to them about their plans, their goals, and then we keep that conversation going."

Soldiers are eligible to sign a new enlistment contract a year prior to their ETS date, but Hogue said one year out is too late to start talking with someone. He said Soldiers here know their leaders care about them, so "alarms and bells go off when a Soldier says he thinks he wants to get out."

"We're not going to keep everybody," Hogue said, "but we try to treat the Soldiers like family, and you're not going to let a family member (leave the Army) unprepared."

Spc. Lewis Atchison signed a three-year contract in January, which guaranteed him at least one year stabilization at Fort Benning and a six-month college option.

Atchison, a 4th Ranger Training Battalion Soldier, who has been in the Army for five years, turned down two job offers in the civilian sector to re-enlist.

"This is what I wanted to do," Atchison said. "And I have the full support of my wife."

Hogue said credit for the retention success also rests with the entire tricommunity. About half of the Soldiers in the post's TRADOC units re-enlist to stay at Fort Benning.

"I give a lot of kudos to Columbus, to Mayor Poydasheff and the city council," Hogue said. "The Soldiers feel their families are taken care of and the community is safe. Everything is very positive for retention."

While the recruiters may be struggling now, Hogue thinks things will turn around for them during the summer months.

"The Army's working hard to get the correct message out and we have the right policies in place to have a successful, all-volunteer Army," he said. "This is the first, long-term war with an all-volunteer Army and it's working. Soldiers are saying, 'We're a nation at war. It's not time for me to go.'"

Hogue said the post's retention NCOs also have a responsibility for transitioning Soldiers into the Reserves, a mission they're meeting to the tune of more than 105 percent.

"The Reserve Soldiers are standing shoulder-to-shoulder with active-duty Soldiers in Afghanistan and Iraq," he said. "It's important we keep their posture levels strong."

forces that will return to the United States as a result of the broader global-force posture realignment that the secretary and the department have undertaken."

DoD uses the process to reorganize its installation infrastructure to most efficiently support its forces, increase operational readiness and facilitate new ways of doing business, according to the BRAC Web site. The first BRAC occurred in 1988, and more followed in 1991, 1993 and 1995.

Congress authorized BRAC 2005 in the fiscal 2002 National Defense Authorization Act. The selection criteria were published in February 2004. In March of this year, President Bush appointed the members of an independent BRAC commission.

The next big BRAC deadline is May 16 when Secretary of Defense Donald Rumsfeld must make his recommendations for realignments and closures to Congress and the commission. By Sept. 8, the commission must send its findings to the president, who has until Sept. 23 to approve or disapprove the commission's report.

Grone said that initially all installations are considered for closure or realignment.

"By statute all military installations are to be treated equally," he said.

"Throughout this process we are assessing all of our installations and functions and missions in an equal way so that we can have a defensible package of recommendations to provide to the independent commission."

There are several criteria for selecting a base for BRAC action, but one top consideration is the installation's current and future mission capabilities and the impact on operational readiness of the total force, including the impact on joint warfighting, training and readiness.

"In this round of BRAC, the joint cross-service groups that we have established have greater breadth (than BRAC 1995)," Grone said. "So rather than looking at, as we did in 1995, depot maintenance in this round of BRAC, we're looking at all the of the industrial activities of the department on a joint basis."

Medical functions, headquarters and support, education and training, intelligence, supply and storage are all being assessed from a joint perspective, he said. This will help provide the most efficient military structure.

Grone noted that jointness is a "key aspect" of this BRAC. "The decision process in this BRAC is joint from top to bottom in this round of BRAC," he said.

Another important criterion when the commission considers an installation for a BRAC action is the availability and condition of lands, facilities and associated airspace both at both existing and potential receiving locations.

That availability also extends to homeland-defense training missions.

Bases chosen for closure or major realignment can expect the process to be completed within six years from the approval of recommendations.

Also, Grone said, a series of policy reforms will enhance the DoD's ability to move forward to close or realign a base as expeditiously as possible to allow the economic redevelopment of the areas affected.

"All the communities that support our military installations do so very solidly with a great deal of cooperation and partnership," he said.

"But as a result of what we must do to enhance the military mission, it's inevitable that there will be some bases, as excess capacity, will no longer be required."

Stryker: 'Doing more than expected'

vehicle as a perfect example of the progression of a platform from raw first fielding to fine-tuned reliability and functionality. The Bradley has been on the ground for more than 25 years, but has gone through four or five generations. Each generation improved on the previous.

The negative points cited in the Washington Post's story published March 31 were almost all problems the Army and Sando were already aware of and have either been corrected or are actively in the process of being corrected.

Sando stressed that the Army has researched the Stryker extensively and taken feedback directly from combat veterans, which shows the benefits clearly outweigh the developmental challenges the fledgling program is handling.

"We have taken surveys and conducted debriefings of Stryker units immediately upon redeployment in an effort to identify anything we can improve. The majority of the feedback is extremely positive and we have acted on needed improvements," he said. "We have had a conference, which included all the Stryker brigades and all the TRADOC schools, where we discussed the good, but we focused strongly on what needed to be fixed. That is what we owe to the Soldiers."

He said he is confident the complications — electronics malfunctions, armor and weight concerns and seatbelt issues — are part of the normal evolution of any new system.

The Army is in the process of producing a crew ballistic shield, which will protect Soldiers in the hatch from RPG fire not currently stopped by standard slat armor and the seatbelts are being replaced.

The weight issues, it turned out, were not as serious as the Washington Post story initially reported. It said 11 tire and wheel assemblies had to be replaced a day because of excessive armor weight, implying that was for one vehicle. In the April 4 Aerospace Daily and Defense Report, Lt. Col. Perry Caskey, Stryker System Synchronization officer with Army Force Development, said that statistic was actually based on an entire Stryker brigade combat team and represented less than four-tenths of 1 percent of a total of 2,480 tires and assemblies.

> "The Stryker is fast, quiet, survivable, reliable, and lethal. Most important, it delivers the most valuable weapon to the battlefield: a Soldier."
> Lt. Col. Michael Kurilla
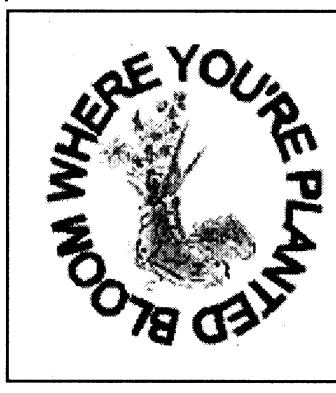
> 1st Battalion, 24th Infantry Regiment
> Stryker Brigade Combat Team

Sando stands behind the Stryker and is determined to continue development and improve on already impressive statistics.



One Stryker in Iraq over the course of six months was hit by a suicide car bomb, nine IEDs, eight direct RPG hits and a barrage of small arms fire. The crew sustained six wounded but no deaths. All the Soldiers are still fighting in Iraq and the Stryker either continued to fight or was repaired in 48 hours.

He said the 1st Cavalry Division in 1970 in Vietnam was responsible for 4,500 square miles. One Stryker brigade in Iraq is responsible for four times that area. After 18 months of continuous use, Strykers are showing a 95 percent operational readiness rate even after average mileages have far exceeded the initial anticipated workload.

"The Stryker is doing a lot more than we ever expected it to," he said.

That is being backed by the most reliable source there is — the guys on the ground.

"In urban combat, no better vehicle exists for delivering a squad of Infantrymen to close in and destroy the enemy," according to Lt. Col. Michael Kurilla, 1st Battalion, 24th Infantry Regiment, Stryker Brigade Combat Team, in a letter to the Washington Post editor April 5. "The Stryker is fast, quiet, survivable, reliable, and lethal. Most important, it delivers the most valuable weapon to the battlefield: a Soldier."

• Tiger turns green
Tiger Woods, No. 1 in world PGA rankings, won his fourth Masters tournament April 10. Despite Tiger's awe-some shot on the 16th hole, the tourney went into sudden death on the 18th, where Tiger sunk a 15-foot putt to beat Chris DiMarco, who choked after a great first two rounds.

• Sox ring in opener
The Boston Red Sox, 2004 World Series champs, received their rings and the championship banner was raised at Fenway Park April 11. A born Yankee-hater, I respected the Yanks as they applauded the Sox. Sox fans also had some tongue-in-cheek applause for relief pitcher Mariano Rivera, who has blown saves against the Sox, and for Alex Rodriguez when he made a routine play. The Sox won, 8-1.

• NFL draft heats up
The San Francisco 49ers, who went 2-10 last year, have the first round pick in the April 23 NFL draft. Names being thrown around include Auburn running backs Carnell Williams and Ronnie Brown and USC wide receiver Mike Williams.

• Gordon cruises to win
Jeff Gordon won his second race of the year at Martinsville April 10, edging out Kasey Kahne. Coverage of this week's race, the Samsung, Radio Shack 500 at the Texas Motor Speedway, starts at 12:30 p.m. on FOX.

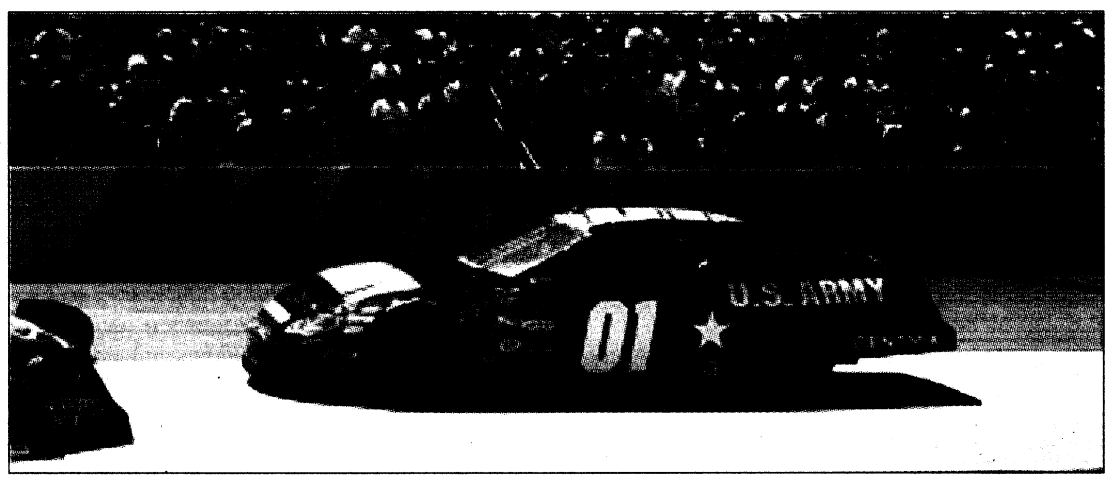
Nemechek, Army get 1st top 10 finish

Maj. William Thurmond
Army News Service

MARTINSVILLE, Va. — Soldiers are quite familiar with the Warrior ethos that says, "I will never quit."



In Martinsville Sunday, the Army NASCAR team demonstrated that they, too, know how to battle through adversity and get the job done.

While Joe Nemechek finished Sunday's Advance Auto Parts 500 in the 10th position, the same spot where he started the race 263 miles earlier, it could have been a lot worse. All afternoon, mechanical and tire problems conspired to disappoint the team for the third weekend in a row.

The race victory belonged to Jeff Gordon, who posted his second win for the year. Following Gordon was Kasey Kahne, who for the fifth time finished second in NEXTEL Cup competition. Rounding out the top five were Mark Martin, Ryan Newman and Rusty Wallace.

"We ground our way to a top ten today," said Nemechek.

Intramural soccer season kicks up fun

David Mellars, of Los Lobos, shoots for a goal during a scrimmage against the Rock Force Tuesday at Doughboy Stadium.

Ever heard these terms — tackle, fullback or goal line? It sounds like football, doesn't it? Well it is, just not the American version of the game.

These are terms familiar to soccer players, and this week kicks off the Fort Benning intramural soccer season at Doughboy Stadium, where players and spectators alike will be getting more familiar with these terms and many more associated with the sport.

Don't worry if you don't know much to begin with, because many of the players are learning too, said Joel Silva of 2nd Battalion, 19th Infantry Regiment's team, the Rock Force.

"Our skills are very limited," he said Tuesday at a scrimmage against Los Lobos, a team from WHINSEC. "I've played a couple of pick-up games, but there are only about three guys here who have played seriously."

Silva said he thought about playing basketball, but because of vertical challenges he decided soccer would be a better choice.

"The (basketball team) offered to let me be the water boy, but then said they didn't need someone this short, and it's not softball season yet, so I'm here," he said. "The game is pretty easy. It's a ball, and you kick it from one side of the field to the other and have fun."

The game is a little more complicated than that, but on the field, teams help each other figure out the rules of the game.

"Not everybody knows about soccer, so this is a good chance for people to come out and laugh at those of us trying to play the game," Sylva said.

"I guess you could say soccer is like golf, without the carts. We chase the ball."

Larry McCoy, league director, said this is the first time he knows of that a soccer league has been set up on post. This season will sport four teams — Los Lobos, Rock Force, WHINSEC and HHC USAIC's Mean Machine.

Games will be played at 6 and 8:30 p.m. every Tuesday and Thursday at Doughboy Stadium. The season will run from April through the middle of May.

"This is the first event for me to oversee, so I'm learning too," McCoy said. "I'm enjoying seeing a lot of ball being kicked and seeing the guys enjoy themselves. You get a lot of motivation just watching them."

Even though this season is small, McCoy hopes people will come out and support the teams, become interested in the game and come out to play next year.

Jeff Jackson, from Mean Machine, said soccer is the fastest growing sport in the US, and THE international sport.

"The Army is a cross-section of society, and we have players from all backgrounds and walks of life," he said.

"It's a way for groups of people to come together. All you need is a ball, and you can fill in the rest."

Described as "a spectator sport with non-stop action," Jackson encourages people to come out and get a taste of what the rest of the world has been crazy about for years.

Post Soldier preps for All-Army triathlon

Veteran of 50 triathlons to compete

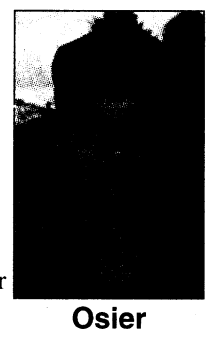
Melissa House
Bayonet Staff

Some people join the Army to see the world, but for Spc. Michael Osier, it was more about getting help for paying for his student loans for college and graduate school.

Now, with three years in 3rd Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment, and three deployments under his belt, Osier, currently assigned to A Company, 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment, has the opportunity to return to his previous career — elite triathlete.

He's been selected for the All-Army Triathlon team and is training for the 2005 Armed Forces Triathlon Championship June 15 through 18 at Naval Base Ventura, Calif.

A veteran of 50 triathlons, Osier has competed throughout the U.S., Mexico, and Australia and twice was invited to Korea. He cut back on his racing to concentrate on school, earning a bachelor's degree in physical education, then enrolled in a master's of exercise science degree.



"I just didn't finish my thesis," Osier said. "I'm not much of a writer."

So, he joined the Army, and now has the opportunity to pursue his favorite sport, hoping for a spot in the Army's World Class Athlete Program. Osier read an article that said the WCAP was looking for athletes, so he got his application ready.

Ken Wetherill, Fort Benning's Sports director, helped Osier with the application and was pleased when Osier landed an invitation to the AFTC event.

"If he places, he'll go to the military Olympics equivalent," Wetherill said. "This is big time."

And placing at the AFTC event is exactly what Osier has set his sights on. The top six male and female finishers qualify to represent the U.S. at the 2005 Conseil International du Sport Militaire Triathlon Championship, held at NBVC, Calif., June 22-27. Osier wants to be one of them.

Osier

"It's now just a matter of training and getting back to a level of fitness," Osier said. To get ready for the Olympic-distance event — 1500m swim, 40K bike and 10K run — Osier is training about 15 hours a week. He'll swim 15,000 yards, bike more than 100 miles, and run more than 30 miles in a week's training.

"It's all quality training," Osier said. "I have my long days, my fast days and my tempo days. And my wife is supportive. She's watching my diet and not letting me drink soda."

He plans to compete in some shorter, faster, sprint-distance events to help build his fitness for the Olympic-distance as well as race against last year's AFTC champion, Ensign Tim O'Donnell in Memphis, Tenn., in May. But having already competed against, and been mentored by, some of the big names in the world triathlon scene, Osier said it's just an opportunity to see how his training is progressing. He'll use Fort Benning's Reverse Sprint Triathlon on June 4 as a "final tune-up" for the AFTC.

At 6 feet and 170 pounds, Osier is a fairly typical triathlete.

"I've been told I'm not superb in one event, but fairly good in each," Osier said. He said he didn't have a favorite event, but said he wished he had a better run and "definitely wished" he had a better swim. "It helps to have a good swim," he said.

So, with the support of his chain of command, Osier's training toward his goal. He re-enlisted in December and will be promoted May 1.

"The Army has definitely taken care of me and my family," he said. "I wanted to be proud to be an American and proud to be an American Soldier. I can't wait to get the Army gear and go race."

ITB's HHC beats 63rd Engineers

Tawny Archibald Campbell
Bayonet staff

In a game where every shot counts, shutting a team out of the key can be detrimental — and that is just what Infantry Training Brigade's HHC Garrison did.

In the first game of the Commander's Cup Intramural Basketball Tournament, the ITB's HHC showed the 63rd Engineers what it takes to win, pounding them 60-40, Monday at the Audie Murphy Fitness Center.

"We came out focused," said Joey Wilcoxson, of ITB HHC. "Before this we had lost a couple of games, and to come into the play-offs and come out with a really big win is really good."

The 63rd grabbed the tip-off and the teams started trading baskets.

"In the first three to five

If you're going to ride, do it right

Elsie Jackson
USAIC Public Affairs Office

True or false: Bicycles should be operated like cars.

True. And false.

Yes, cyclists and motorists are equal in the eyes of the law, but the equivalent of two vehicles involved in a fender-bender takes on new meaning when one of the vehicles is a bicycle. As one local roadie often points out, "I don't ever push the point. If I'm on my bike and you're in a car, I may have the right of way but you're still going to win."

Dozens of bicycles will be rolling across down the Riverwalk and fanning out across post Sunday morning in the Celebrity Classic "Wheels to Heal" bike ride, a fundraiser sponsored by the Columbus Regional Healthcare Center. You may be one of them. Or you may be one of the motorists sharing the road with a larger than usual number of two-wheelers.

There's one basic rule for drivers. Slow down, give the cyclists a wide berth whenever and wherever you can, and pass on the left with caution. And please, don't think you're doing them any favors by laying on your horn to "warn" them that you're pulling around. A safe cyclist rides in a consistent and predictable way. Help them stay that way by not startling them with a blast from your horn. And yes, expect them to stop at red lights, yield and stop signs.

Of course, there are other differences between drivers and cyclists. For starters, the cyclists dress differently. No nondescript colors, or shoelaces three feet too long for them. And when was the last time you saw someone in a car wearing a helmet?

Wearing a helmet is mandatory for anyone riding a bicycle on Fort Benning and for anyone under the age of 16 in the state of Georgia. And by Georgia law, wearing a helmet means fastened securely.

Every year, about 800 people are killed in bicycle related crashes, about 200 of them are under the age of 15. Of that number, 90 percent of the deaths involved a motor vehicle. Statistics show that two-thirds of the fatalities involved brain injury.

Of greater numbers are bicycle-related hospital emergency room visits; 567,000 annually, of which 350,000 are children. Almost half of the crashes happened in a driveway or a sidewalk, and most likely occurred less than five blocks from home. Of those children, 130,000 sustained a brain injury which could have been prevented or greatly reduced by a properly worn helmet.

Helmet use reduces the risk for head injuries by as much as 85 percent and brain injuries by as much as 88 percent. One 1991 JAMA study stated that if all cyclists wore helmets, one life would be saved every day and one head injury would be prevented every five minutes.

Thanks to an almost universal industry standard, buying a good helmet is as simple as finding one approved by the Consumer Safe Product Commission. Older helmets with American National Standards Institute, Snell Memorial Foundation or American Society for Testing and Materials may still be out there. Properly worn, they're still way more effective than going without.

CPSC approved helmets are available at local department stores for as little as $8 for a child's helmet and $15 for an adult's. Yes, you can spend a lot more, but a good basic helmet is certainly affordable.

Riding on post also means wearing a reflective vest during hours of limited visibility, using a headlight, and equipping your bike with reflectors on the back and sides. During daylight hours, cyclists should wear bright colors, making themselves as conspicuous as possible.

Ten Commandments of Bicycling

(SOURCE — League of American Bicyclists website www.bikeleague.org)

1. Wear a helmet for every ride and use lights at night.
2. Conduct an ABC Quick Check (air; brakes; check cranks, chain, cassette, quick releases; check it over) before every ride.
3. Obey traffic laws: ride on the right, slowest traffic farthest to right.
4. Ride predictably and be visible at all times
5. At intersections, ride in the right-most lane that goes in your direction.
6. Scan for traffic and signal lane changes and turns.
7. Be prepared for mechanical emergencies with tools and know-how.
8. Control your bike by practicing bike handling skills.
9. Drink before you are thirsty and eat before you are hungry.
10. Have fun!

The 64- and 100- mile Celebrity Classic Wheels to Heal routes will snake the cyclists along 10th Mountain Division Road. The routes cross main post and lead out to Fryar Drop Zone and back on the Jamestown Loop.

HHC: Beats 63rd, 60-40

minutes of the game, we scored back-to-back. At the start of the game, it looked like an even match," Wilcoxson said.

ITB HHC switched to a two-three zone and started to close off any inside shots, forcing the 63rd to fire from outside the three-point line, but the ball kept falling short.

"The zone killed them," Wilcoxson said. "They just couldn't penetrate it."

Capitalizing on their missed shots, HHC started to run the ball and hit the easy shots. By the half, they had a 12-point lead.

"They got off to a good lead, and we got off to a bad one," said Taren Wilson, of the 63rd. "At one point we were down by twenty-eight points and we just couldn't overcome the deficit."

HHC did have an advantage over the 63rd. They had one player on the bench who could be substituted to offer tired players a break.

"Because eighty percent of our team is deployed, we had to scrounge up a fifth man just to play tonight," Wilson said. "We got off to a slow run and they got us winded early. Other than that, we played good ball. Once they got the lead, they didn't increase it."

With this loss, the 63rd is now in the loser's bracket of play, with a record of 7-5, but they aren't worried.

"We'll be OK," Wilson said. "How we play next will depend on how many men we have. If we have more, we will run, if we are short a man we will try to keep the game at our tempo."

Wilcoxson said ITB HHC is now 6-3, and is planning on taking the lessons they learned from this game into the rest of the tournament.

High scorers were Anthony Cole of ITB HHC and Wilson.

Top 10: Win by Nemechek

"The Army car was strong early and then it got really loose and we went to the rear of the field. Once we put on four new tires, the car started to haul. But we stayed patient. The guys did a great job in the pits and we managed to avoid any big trouble."

A caution at lap 493 led to a quick decision to pit for four fresh tires, a move that the team hoped would give them an advantage in the closing laps.

With three laps to go, the Army car passed both Jason Leffler and Matt Kenseth, and was still moving to the front when the checkered flag fell.

Sunday's result was good news for the team and a personal victory for Nemechek.

It was the team's first top 10 finish of the 2005 NEXTEL Cup season.

And it was Nemechek's career best on the famed Martinsville short track, where in his previous 21 races his best finish was 14th place.

"It was our best finish of the year, but not our best race of the year," said Ryan Pemberton, the Army Chevrolet's crew chief. "We raced really hard. We battled through a lot of stuff, and it's good fun battling through all that. The team worked real well together."

As the team packed up to return to their Concord, N.C. garage and prepare for next weekend's Texas race, Nemechek reflected on the impact of Sunday's performance and the remainder of the season.

"Hopefully those demons that plagued us in the past four races have gone someplace else," said Nemechek. "This was a big lift from a team morale standpoint. This team has plenty of fight and character and there are going to be better finishes for the Army team as the season progresses."

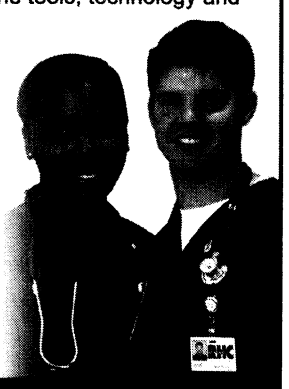
UNSUNG HEROS...



At Regency Hospitals you'll work with a group of people who truly appreciate your training and experience, and who work with the same dedication you've been trained with. We treat criticaly ill patients who require acute care for a longer time period than traditional hospitals are set up to provide.

It is with a strong commitment to quality healthcare that Regency Hospitals have grown into a national company with an outstanding clinical reputation. As everyone knows, this kind of reputation does not come easy. First, we hire dedicated people who go the extra mile; then we provide the tools, technology and atmosphere in which they'll thrive.

If making a difference in peoples' lives is important to you, we want you on our team at Regency Hospital of Central Georgia, Regency Hospital of South Atlanta, or any of our hospitals across the country.

We are looking for the following positions to complete our growing teams:

Dedicated Nurses for Clinical, Management and Marketing Positions • Allied Healthcare Professionals • Patient Advocates • Materials Managers
Excellent salary and benefits package

(There's no punch line.)

What do you get when you mix Christianity, Judaism and Islam? In many parts of the world, it's a recipe for disaster. Yet in America, it's a formula that has peacefully endured for over 200 years. In fact, not only has it endured, it's flourished.

The pundits may say that the ability for different faiths to coexist here comes from a lack of intensity and passion for any religion in America. But nothing could be further from the truth. Because we are free to choose which religion, if any, we'd like to follow, it enables us to have a deeper, more personal relationship with our faith than would otherwise be possible.

And because no one religion needs to feel threatened by another, we can look to the similarities that unite us, instead of focusing on the differences. Two hundred million Christians, Jews, Muslims, Buddhists and Hindus agree. To learn more about freedom of religion, visit rememberfreedom.org. Or, feel free to ask the spiritual leader of your choice.

FREEDOM. APPRECIATE IT. CHERISH IT. PROTECT IT.

Warm Springs commemorates Roosevelt's life on anniversary of his death

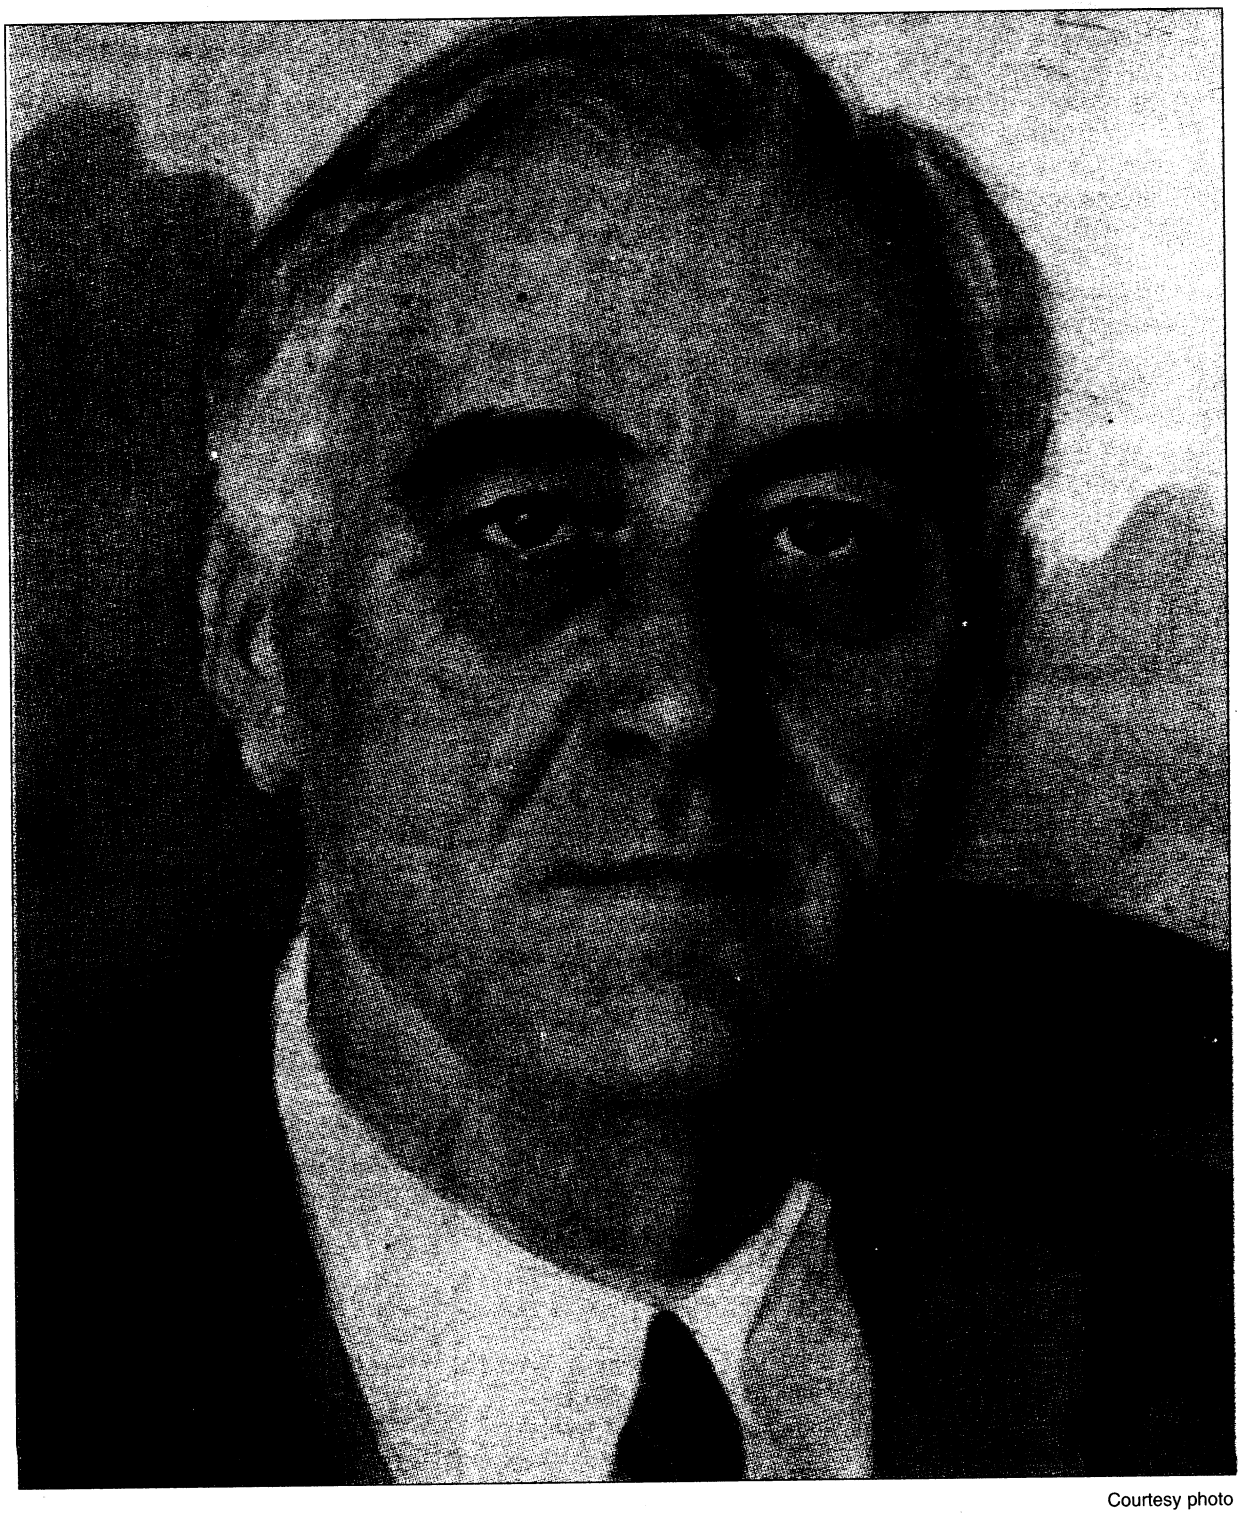
Bridgett Siter
Bayonet staff

Sixty years ago today, President Franklin D. Roosevelt was laid to rest in Hyde Park, N.Y. His soul, locals say, still lingers in Warm Springs, Ga., the tiny farming community he called home.

Roosevelt was stricken with polio more than 20 years before his death on April 12, 1945. He came seeking relief in the mineral-rich, warm spring waters of Pine Mountain. He found it, albeit temporarily, and returned again and again for lengthy stays at his simple, little white cottage, which became known as the Little White House.

Roosevelt frequently conducted business from Georgia, though most Americans didn't know it. A good deal of them didn't know the extent of his disability; he worked so hard to hide it.

The only president elected four times, the founder of what would become the March of Dimes, the man who led the nation out of the Great Depression and through World War II, Roosevelt was a giant in the eyes of the American public, who seldom saw him using a cane or wheelchair, so adamant was he about preserving his image.



His untimely death, the result of a stroke suffered while posing for a portrait — the famous "Unfinished Portrait," now on display at the Little White House Historic Site — sent a shockwave across the country. Hundreds of thousands of mourners lined the tracks, as a slow-moving train carried the president's body from Georgia to New York.

Nowhere more than Warm Springs was the president mourned. It was here he wandered through the hills in his customized car, with its hand-operated gas pedals and brakes, stopping here and there to chat with the farmers who struggled to eke out a living during the Depression. FDR was a people's president, if ever there was one.

That's why his life and legacy is celebrated every year in Warm Springs on the anniversary of his death. Last year, a new 11,000 square foot museum was dedicated on the site of the Little White House. It chronicles his life, his struggle with polio, his marriage to Eleanor, his fifth cousin once removed, and the various programs and policies he instituted to facilitate the nation's recovery from the Depression.

Touring the museum and the Little White House takes a couple of hours, so visitors should plan to spend the afternoon in Warm Springs and experience the charm and hospitality FDR found so compelling.

Stop by the Warm Springs Welcome Center to learn more about the town's history. Tour the original Warm Springs hospital and dip your hands into the warm water. Spend a couple of hours perusing the antiques shops and while away a few minutes with an ice cream cone and a rocking chair — if you can find one unoccupied.

President Franklin D, Roosevelt was posing for a portrait at his home, the Little White House, in Warm Springs, Ga., when he suffered a fatal stroke April 12, 1945. The original Unfinished Portrait is on display at the Little White House Historic Site.

Good luck. Most days, the town brims with visitors.

To experience the full flavor of Warm Springs, you'll want to dine at the Bullock House, a buffet style restaurant that specializes in Southern dishes like fried chicken and turnup greens. You might have to wait, but it's worth it.

Warm Springs is about 40 miles north of here on Highway 85 Alternate/U.S. 27 Alternate. That's Exit 7A, Manchester Expressway in Columbus.

The Amityville Horror — On Nov. 14, 1974, police received a frantic phone call that led them to a nightmarish crime scene at the Defeo residence in Amityville, Long Island — an entire family had been slaughtered in their beds.

In the days that followed, Ronald Defeo confessed to shooting his parents and four siblings while they slept, claiming "voices" drove him to commit the grisly murders.

One year later, George and Kathy Lutz and their three children moved into the house, thinking it would be their dream house. But shortly after settling in, bizarre and unexplainable events began to occur as George was plagued by nightmarish visions and haunting voices from the evil presence still lurking within the residence.

The Amityville Horror is rated R for violence, disturbing images, language, brief sexuality and drug use.

Fever Pitch — This is a contemporary romantic comedy about a high school teacher (Jimmy Fallon) who meets and falls in love with a successful businesswoman (Drew Barrymore).

Although their lives are vastly different, the relationship seems perfect, until baseball season begins and she has to compete with his first true love: the Boston Red Sox.

Fever Pitch is rated PG-13 for crude and sexual humor and some sensuality.

Sahara — Master explorer Dirk Pitt (Matthew McConaughey) takes on the adventure of his life when he embarks on a treasure hunt through some of the most dangerous regions of North Africa.

Searching for what locals call "The Ship of Death," a long-lost Civil War battleship filled with coins, Pitt and his wisecracking sidekick (Steven Zahn) use their wits and clever heroics to help Dr. Eva Rojas (Penelope Cruz), who believes the ship may be linked to several mysterious deaths in the same area.

Sahara is rated PG-13 for action violence.

Beauty Shop — Gina Norris (Queen Latifah) is a long way from the Barbershop — now she's in Atlanta making a name for herself at a posh southern salon with her cutting-edge hairstyles.

But when her flamboyant, egotistical boss (Kevin Bacon) takes it one criticism too far, she leaves his salon to open a shop of her own, taking the shampoo girl (Alicia Silverstone) and a few key clients (Andie MacDowell, Mena Suvari) with her.

Gina buys a rundown salon and inherits an opinionated group of headstrong stylists (including Alfre Woodard), a colorful clientele and a sexy upstairs neighbor (Djimon Hounsou).

Beauty Shop is rated PG-13 for sexual material, language and brief drug references.

Sin City — Sin City is a violent city where the police department is as corrupt as the streets are deadly.

Marv (Mickey Rourke), a tough-as-nails and nearly impossible to kill street fighter, goes on a rampage of vengeance when a beautiful woman, Goldie (Jaime King), who he sleeps with once, is killed while lying in bed with him.

Also starring Bruce Willis, Benicio Del Toro, Clive Owen, Josh Hartnett and Brittany Murphy.

Sin City is rated R for sustained strong stylized violence, nudity and sexual content including dialogue.

Miss Congeniality 2: Armed and Fabulous — The story catches up with FBI agent Gracie Hart (Sandra Bullock) shortly after she has successfully disarmed a threat against the Miss United States Pageant while working undercover as a contestant in Miss Congeniality.

Having become a media celebrity following her heroic pageant exploits, Gracie has been spending more time lately at the salon, working the talk show circuit and promoting her book than at the shooting range.

When her friends are kidnapped in Las Vegas, Gracie's all-out efforts to jump back into action to save them puts her at odds with the FBI top brass, who don't want to risk losing their mascot and fear she might not be up to the job anymore.

Miss Congeniality 2: Armed and Fabulous is rated PG-13 for sex-related humor.

Robots — Set in a world populated entirely by robots, this is the story of a young genius, Rodney (Ewan McGregor), who wants to make robots capable of making the world a better place, but he finds his dream being challenged by a corporate tyrant and a master inventor, Big Weld (Mel Brooks), while also being seduced by a sexy corporate robot, Cappy (Halle Berry).

Robots is rated PG for language and suggestive humor.

The Ring Two — The story picks up six months after the horrifying events that terrorized Rachel Keller (Naomi Watts) and her son Aidan in Seattle.

To escape her haunting memories, Rachel takes Aidan and moves to the small coastal community of Astoria, Ore., to start fresh. However, Rachel's resolve quickly turns to dread when evidence at a local crime scene — including an unmarked videotape — seems eerily familiar.

Rachel realizes that the vengeful Samara is back and more determined than ever to continue her relentless cycle of terror and death.

Also starring Sissy Spacek and David Dorfman.

The Ring Two is rated PG-13 for violence and terror, disturbing images, thematic elements and language.

Hostage — A police officer is wracked with guilt from a prior stint as a negotiator. When a mafia accountant is taken hostage on his beat, he must negotiate the standoff, even as his own family is held captive by the mob.

Starring Bruce Willis, Jimmy Bennett and Jonathan Tucker.

Hostage is rated R for strong graphic violence, language and drug use.

THINGS TO DO

Port Columbus Candlelight Tour
today-Saturday

For the second year in a row, the Port Columbus Civil War Naval Museum will be converted, at 6:30 p.m. today and Saturday, into various scenes around Columbus the night the Yankees invaded the city in April 1865.

It was a night of confusion and panic, and visitors will be escorted to various important sites in Columbus to witness what happened during that wild night.

From the bridge to the cannon emplacements to the gate of the Navy yard to the porch of the Mott House where a Confederate officer was killed, this amazing night will be brought to life.

Port Columbus is located on Victory Drive.

For more information, call 327-9798.

CSU theatre
today-Sunday

Columbus State University's Department of Theatre will stage Aristophanes' classic Greek comedy, Lysistrata, at 7:30 p.m. today and Saturday and 2 p.m. Sunday in the Fine Arts Hall Auditorium.

Directed by theater professor Lisa Cesnik, the play is about a group of Athenian women who pledge to abstain from all intimate relations until their husbands agree to a peaceful resolution to an ongoing war.

The content is intended for mature audiences.

For ticket information, call the CSU box office at 569-3179.

Youth Orchestra pops concert Sunday

More than 110 students from eight counties in Georgia and Alabama will perform their annual Youth Orchestra of Greater Columbus' pops concert at 1 p.m. Sunday at the Columbus Convention and Trade Center.

This year's theme is "Salute to the Movies."

Enjoy a catered lunch while hearing the orchestra perform Pirates of the Caribbean, Forrest Gump, Lord of the Rings, Jurassic Park, Under the Sea, Harry Potter and other popular movie scores.

For more information, call 256-3614.

Chicago
Tuesday-Wednesday

Broadway's popular musical Chicago is the kiss-and-tell tale of Roxie Hart, a nightclub singer who murders her lover but is acquitted with the help of a sleazy lawyer.

The showstopping music of John Kander and Fred Ebb includes such tunes as All That Jazz, Razzle Dazzle and Class.

The recipient of six Tony Awards, two Olivier Awards, a Grammy and thousands of standing ovations, Chicago is sensational.

Chicago will be performed at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday and Wednesday at the RiverCenter Bill Heard Theatre and the show is recommended for those 13 and older.

Tickets are $40-$65 and can be bought at tickets.com, by calling (888) 332-5200 or by visiting the RiverCenter box office, noon to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Riverfest weekend
Thursday through April 24

The Historic Columbus Foundation, Inc. will host the 36th Riverfest Weekend Thursday through April 24.

Festivities kick off with the Kitchen Tour of Homes, Culinary Demonstrations and Fine Art Exhibition Preview Party Thursday. Attendees can tour six Historic District homes, some of which have never been open to the public.

Riverfest includes the Salisbury Fair, the Greater Columbus Memphis in May Pig Jig Barbecue Cookoff, the Folklife Village and much more.

The Salisbury Fair features fine arts and crafts, a kids' fun zone, flea market, 5K and one-mile fun run and a teen battle of the bands.

The festival's four stages are booked solid.

Headliners include the platinum-selling band Smash-mouth, country artist Phil Vassar and country trio Sugarland.

Riverfest hours are 6 to 11 p.m. April 22, 10 a.m. to 11 p.m. April 23 and noon to 6 p.m. April 24.

Admission prices are $15 for all access, $2 for children ages 5 to 10 and children younger than 5 are free.

For more information, visit columbusriverfest.com.

A Night in Vienna
April 30

The Columbus Symphony Orchestra will present a pops concert, A Night in Vienna, at 7:30 p.m. April 30 in the Bill Heard Theatre.

A Night in Vienna will feature music of the Strauss family including the Blue Danube Waltzes, The Radetzky March, Perpetual Motion and more.

Tickets are $16 to $19 for students, children and enlisted military; $20 to $25 for seniors (60 and older) and $22 to $28 for adults.

Tickets are available through the RiverCenter box office, noon to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday, online at www.tickets.com or by calling (888) 332-5200.

For more information, call the CSO office at 323-5059.

COMMUNITY

The United Nations identified volunteerism as a central goal in 2001, the International Year of Volunteers. The UN Volunteer Program sends assistance to150 countries. Here in the United States, volunteering is a priority for many people. About 63.8 million Americans volunteer each year, donating an average of 52 hours a year. To find local volunteer opportunities, check out volunteermatch.org.

Helping hands to be recognized by CG

Spc. Eliamar Castañon
Assistant editor

We won't always know whose lives we touched and made better for our having cared, because actions can sometimes have unforeseen ramifications. What's important is that you do care and you act.

— Charlotte Lunsford

During national volunteer recognition week, Army Community Service will host the Fort Benning Volunteer Recognition Ceremony from 4 to 6 p.m. April 21 on the lawn of Riverside, home of Commanding General Brig. Gen. Benjamin Freakley.

During the ceremony, Freakley will recognize the individual volunteers and groups who have made a difference by giving their free time to help others.

"This is one of the biggest events on post this year," said Becky Welch, acting director of ACS.

"This is the perfect opportunity and location to recognize the work these people have done."

Units, organizations and directorates nominated volunteers from their organization, and all nominations were reviewed by a panel and tallied up Monday, Welch said.

During the ceremony, 23 individual awards will be presented to recognize the impact the volunteers made on the Fort Benning community, said Sarah Hertig, Army Family Team Building and Army Family Action Plan coordinator.

There will be 20 Volunteer of Excellence Awards, a Youth Volunteer of Excellence Award, a Retiree Volunteer of Excellence Award and a Family Readiness Group Volunteer of Excellence.

Volunteer organizations that help the community and post will also be recognized along with the traditional FRG of Excellence Award, Hertig said.

Did you know?

Every hour worked by a volunteer is worth $17.19, according to Points of Light Foundation and Volunteer Center National Network, an organization that leads efforts in volunteerism.

Fort Benning's 2,457 volunteers accumulated a total of 113,270 hours, meaning they volunteered $1.9 million worth of time to the Fort Benning community.

Post has 'clean sweep'

Melissa House
Bayonet staff

Fort Benning is looking a little tidier thanks to the combined efforts of post residents and Soldiers participating in the annual spring cleanup, which ended April 8.

Garrison command Sgt. Maj. Donald Fortson said the cleanup focused on "dead fall" — removing leaves and dead trees and bushes — and cleaning up the streets and sidewalks.

This year, units were assigned to clean ranges in addition to the main cantonment areas they are typically assigned to maintain.

Fortson said the units made great improvements at the ranges, which will make them easier to maintain in the future.

Other areas tackled were vacant and abandoned quarters, abandoned vehicles, overflowing dumpsters and the post's 56 common-use playgrounds.

"We're in the final phase of renovating the playgrounds," Fortson said. "Repair, replace, remove."

Fortson said he saw an overall improvement in the efforts this year because of the scheduled, post-cleanup inspections held earlier this week.

Units will receive cash prizes based on the appearance of their assigned areas.

Large units can earn $10,000 and smaller units are competing for $5,000.

"It has gone pretty smoothly," Fortson said.

"People have gotten it into their heads the importance of taking pride and ownership of their 'footprint.'"

Bridgett Siter

Spc. Michael Stoner, the Infantry Center Band's pianist, will play the Steinway at the Officers' Club Supper Club during special events. The 1944 grand piano was returned to Fort Benning last week after a $10,000 restoration.

When it comes to the 7-foot Steinway grand piano that now graces the Officers' Club Supper Club, Spc. Michael Stoner is as close to a resident expert as it gets here at Fort Benning. The 23-year-old Texas native knows a thing or two about what he called "the Cadillac of grands."

This much he knows:

• If unleashed, the collective tension of the piano strings would crush a Volkswagen.

• A recording of it solo, played very loudly, will shake the speakers in his pick-up.

• And — heads up, folks — a 1944 Steinway classic, valued at $62,000, is no place to rest a coffee cup.

The Bayonet readers will remember when the Steinway was discovered more than a year ago backstage in Marshall Auditorium. No one knows how long it sat there, covered in dust and, of all things, egg shells. It remains a mystery.

Andy Williamson, a Steinway technician from Atlanta, visited post in February 2004, to assess the piano's value and restoration costs. Williamson said company records show the piano was manufactured, mostly by hand, in 1944, and delivered to Fort Benning the following year. At that time, it would've cost less than $3,000.

1st Sgt. Wendy Thomson, of the Infantry Band, which is responsible for the piano, said it was likely played at the Main Post Theater, The Infantry Chapel or the original Infantry School, now the Western Hemisphere Institute for Security Cooperation.

"Where it's been, it's hard to say," Thomson said. "But we believe it's footprint is all around post."

Fort Benning funded the piano's $10,000 restoration, which included new interior "action" pieces, strings and keys, and the addition of a wheeled tripod, so it can be moved easily. The Steinway was delivered to the Officers' Club April 5, and Stoner played it two days later for a formal event. After he cleared away the coffee cups.

"We'll have to find some way to let people know just what we've got here. We can't have it used as a coaster," Thomson said. "After all it's been through, proper care is the main thing. But we want people to be able to enjoy it again."

Philip Brooks, a Columbus High School senior, is participating in a NASA-accepted science project.

Teen creates out-of-world experiment

Vinegar eels tested for waste management project

Tawny Archibald Campbell

Philip Brooks is a self-proclaimed nerd, a little geeky, he might say. For him, that's just part of life.

While other 18 year olds are playing sports or partying, he's playing with microscopes, watching microorganisms swim around in a Petri dish, building robots, designing Star Wars costumes and working on his car.

At school he can be found spending a lot of time in the science lab working on a series of experiments. NASA chose one of those experiments for further testing and research.

When trying to find a project they could send to NASA, Philip said he, along with a group of students and teachers at Columbus High School, started looking for something unique.

"We thought, what obscure project can we do that would actually matter?" Philip said.

"Then we found something. It's not something you'd want to look at, but we are going to have a hard time keeping waste management under control in space."

The project they created is commonly known as the vinegar eel experiment. Philip said it's designed to take a few links out of the food chain and help manage waste on space ships.

"We have chemical means to control waste, but what about bacterial?" he said.

The idea is simple. On a space bound vessel, there is limited space, and the human occupants create waste. Microscopic organisms called vinegar eels, found in undistilled apple vinegar, decompose matter. The eels are also commonly used as fish food. Larger organisms, like fish, eat the eels, and people eat the fish.

"The eels cut a couple of links from the food chain," Philip said. "And they are cheap and hardy."

The NASA-accepted experiment would be used in three different tests to determine just how well these eels can survive in different environments.

One project places the experiment on a space shuttle to test effects of space on the eel's life process. Another project sends the eels up on a high altitude balloon that sits on top of the atmosphere to test radiation and cold.

The third experiment has been selected for use on the NASA Centrifuge at the Jet Propulsion Laboratory in California. This project tests the eels in hyper gravity.

"The whole project has taken about one and a half to two years, so far," Philip said. "We had to write proposals, take the projects through ground trials and resubmit everything."

Once NASA scientists use the experiments, they send them back to the students, who then compare the post-experiment data with previously gathered

ASK THE JUDGE

Capt. Luis A. Morales
Office of the Staff Judge Advocate

Q: What travel expenses can National Guard and Reserve members deduct?

A: For tax years after 2002, National Guard and Reserve members who stay overnight more than 100 miles away from home while in service, such as for drill or meeting, can deduct unreimbursed travel expenses as an above-the-line deduction. The deduction is limited to the rates authorized for federal employees for such expenses, including per diem in lieu of subsistence.

For 2004, taxpayers will use Form 2106, Employee Business Expenses, or 2106-EZ, Unreimbursed Employee Business Expenses, to figure the deduction amount.

The deduction is then entered directly on line 24 of Form 1040, with the letters "RC" to the left and the deducted amount on the dotted line. The total must be subtracted from line 10 on Form 2016 or from line 6 on Form 2106-EZ. Qualified travel expenses include transportation, meals and lodging.

To consult with someone regarding your taxes, go to the Fort Benning Installation Tax Center and speak to a tax advisor.

The Tax Center is open through today and is located at Building 1678 (across from the Wynnsong Movie Theater).

For more information, call 545-4267.

Commissary answers common questions

Cherie Huntington
Defense Commissary Agency

Next time you mentally review your "portfolio" of military pay and benefits, take a good look at the one that can put money back in your wallet every day — the commissary benefit.

What makes commissaries so different from commercial grocery stores?

Our cost is your cost. Unlike civilian grocery stores, commissaries don't sell for profit, and you do not pay sales tax.

Commissaries represent the military's non-pay benefit, and the U.S. government covers associated expenses such as employee salaries and operating costs.

That's how commissary customers save 30 percent or more over commercial grocery stores.

A family of four shopping consistently at their commissary saves more than $2,700 annually, and single shoppers save nearly $1,000.

Why do I pay a surcharge?

The 5 percent surcharge funds building new commissaries and renovating existing stores, so every patron is a "stockholder" in the nearly 280 commissaries worldwide. Even with the surcharge, you still see savings of 30 percent or more annually.

Set by Congress, the surcharge has remained at 5 percent since 1983. It is a way service members help pay for their commissary benefit while reducing taxpayer cost.

Why don't commissaries offer "savings cards" like other grocery store chains?

Many grocery stores offer "savings cards" customers show at checkout to save on that week's specials. Your passport to savings is your ID card.

You save a bundle on your overall grocery bill, not just on "loss leaders" advertised to lure you into a store.

Though your average savings at the commissary is 30 percent or more, certain departments offer even greater bargains, primarily in the perimeter of the store. In produce shoppers can find 33 percent savings; and on meat, a whopping 39.3 percent savings.

In high-cost locations such as overseas bases, commissaries save patrons more than 38 percent, and in Hawaii, more than 50 percent.

Why are some items cheaper "outside the gate?"

There's a common sales technique of "loss leaders" in the civilian retail world. Businesses offer certain popular items at prices below cost, taking a loss on those items. They bank on the probability that you'll buy other items at profit-making prices while in their store so they can recoup losses on loss leaders.

You'll find great bargains all over town, and if you buy only those specific items, you'll indeed save on those items.

Yet what about your valuable time and expensive gas expended in all that price chasing?

Your commissary offers at least 30 percent savings overall, so compare grocery bills rather than the price of a can of green beans.

Sure, maybe you found a cheaper can of green beans downtown, but what about savings on other items?

Check out the price comparison boards in the commissary, and keep your eye on the big picture: Your commissary saves you more.

CHILD ABUSE PREVENTION

Protect our children at all times

Helpful hints for healthy parenting

Rebecca S. Welch
Family Advocacy Program

Are you a hurried parent who could benefit from hints on how to enhance communication with your kids, tips on getting along better or guidelines on how to improve your relationship with your children? Please read on.

The parenting tips that follow provide a fresh perspective, an opportunity to build on your own positive parenting skills so when difficult issues arise, you already have a strong foundation to build on.

BUILD CONFIDENCE

Be positive

• Look for ways to give compliments.

• Give hugs.

• Remember to laugh with your child.

Emphasize your child's strong points

• Praise special, unique traits in your child.

• Help your child understand nobody's perfect and that's OK.

• Help your child understand everyone is good at something and not so good at other things.

Give your time

• As parents, you are all probably short on time and may often feel overwhelmed with all your responsibilities. However, it's important for you to know the best gift is to give your child regular, undivided attention.

• If you're experiencing guilt, you need to work through it and work on specific times to be with your children. You could begin by scheduling monthly "dates" together.

Say "I love you"

• Give this message in different ways. Try nonverbal as well as verbal.

STAY CONNECTED

Listen

• Give your full attention. Keep good eye contact, nod and even touch your child.

• Listen for feelings. There are no wrong feelings. Acknowledge your child's feeling, then reflect those feelings back. (Don't interpret, either repeat their words or use similar words to reflect your child's feelings.)

• Keep your talk to a minimum. Simply saying you understand and care may be enough. Being there for them is the most important.

Take time to be with your child

• Read a book or watch TV together. Talk about the book or program. Use this time to give your full attention to your child.

• If you're a working parent, call your child from work just to say "hello" — not to remind him or her about chores or homework.

• Make time for regular heart-to-heart talks with your child. Keep conversations free and open.

USE POSITIVE DISCIPLINE

Set rules

• Determine what rules are important. Set limits and boundaries. Make sure everybody understands the rules and consequences.

• Apply rules consistently. If you make an exception, make sure your child understands it's a special treat (i.e., staying out later than usual).

• Rules are flexible in that they're appropriate to the age of the child.

• Physical discipline is almost never effective.

Address a problem

• Respond to the problem as soon as possible.

• Be firm. You're the parent. Do not underestimate your parenting ability.

• Keep calm, use your anger in a positive way. Address the problem, discuss the consequence, follow through. Don't blow up!

Criticize the behavior only

• Choose your words carefully. Address the behavior, not the person. For example, you could say, "I'm upset you hit your friend," instead of "You're a bad boy for hitting."

HELP IN PROBLEM-SOLVING

Define the problem

• Try to help your child solve the problem, don't solve it for him or her. Teach your child how to problem-solve.

• Ask your child what exactly the problem is. What are their feelings about it?

Brainstorm about ways to solve the problem

• Talk about every possible solution with your child. List to them. Discuss and weigh the outcomes of potential solutions.

Pick the best solution

• Talk about, and role-play if necessary, the way you or your child will implement the solution.

Discuss the outcome

• Did the solution work? Why or why not? If not, talk with your child about trying another solution.

If you need further information, please contact the Family Advocacy Program at 545-7517.

Commissary customers support ban

Double bagging thing of past

Bonnie Powell
Defense Commissary Agency

Earth Day approaches April 22 and "Just Say No" buttons on cashiers and awareness posters in commissaries are the decor of the day. The principle aim is to control rising grocery bag costs by reducing double bagging in commissaries worldwide, and to encourage a switch from plastic to paper in U.S. commissaries, but the environmental approach is a great side benefit.

"We've heard from our customers and they've been supportive," said Patrick B. Nixon, acting director and chief executive officer of the Defense Commissary Agency. "Several have suggested we offer a discount for bringing in bags. As providers of a valuable military benefit, we sell groceries at cost, so we can't offer discounts for returned bags. But we certainly do encourage customers to help us control costs — and think about the environment."

"I never realized how much of a benefit the commissary is until I moved to a high-cost area," said Capt. Joseph J. Malizia, Aberdeen Proving Ground, Md. "From now on when I go to my commissary I will support the effort by asking for paper bags."

Customers also suggest bringing bags back to the commissary to reuse, or buying canvas or mesh bags that can be used over and over again.

"Yes, I would bring in bags to be used again for myself," said Air National Guard Chief Master Sgt. Steve Logue, McConnell Air Force Base, Kan. "I believe people would help, and want to help, if they understand why."

"The use of canvas totes is another means of reducing costs," said Nancy Little, a Langley Air Force Base commissary shopper.

"The commissary sells perfect-sized totes for around $5 and we find they are stronger and more durable, and double bagging is not an issue. We feel we are not only helping cut costs but also doing something good for the environment."

"When I put a display of canvas bags up front customer comments were positive and three of the bags were purchased before I even finished getting the rack up," said Sam Tresenriter, store director at Offutt Air Force Base, Neb., commissary.

Commissaries will soon be stocking another reusable grocery tote in mesh.

On Earth Day 2005, the installation commander and community leaders will be bagging groceries at the commissary at Fort Meade, Md.

"The bags will be decorated by our youth with messages about the importance of recycling and protecting the environment," said Fort Meade commissary store director Paul Rhodes. "It all ties in very well."

Customers may bring paper or plastic bags back to the commissary to use for their own grocery order, but commissaries are not able to recycle bags for anyone other than the original user due to health concerns. Baggers may also refuse to use recycled bags if they appear damaged or contaminated.

Similar symptoms cause confusion

Danielle Wong
MCG Health, Inc.

Pollen is here, and so are the sniffles and sneezes of allergy season. But when you experience symptoms such as congestion and pressure that "just won't go away," it may be time to schedule an appointment with a sinus specialist.

"Many people who go to the doctor with what they believe are cold or allergy symptoms actually have sinusitis involving a bacterial infection," said Dr. Stil Kountakis, director of rhinology and sinus surgery at MCG Health System.

Sinusitis is common in the South due to greater humidity and a higher rate of allergies, and may also be caused by particularly narrow ducts, cysts or polyps blocking the normal flow of mucus through the sinuses.

With chronic sinusitis, sufferers experience frequent bouts of nasal congestion and are more susceptible to bacterial infection.

"It is important for patients to receive timely treatment of sinusitis, before it has the chance to develop into something more serious and difficult to treat," Kountakis said.

Through a physical examination and history of the symptoms, doctors can diagnose sinusitis with a degree of certainty.

An examination of the nose and throat can determine whether sinusitis outlets are blocked.

Specialized tests are usually reserved for severe cases or to distinguish sinusitis from other conditions.

Treatments may include simple antibiotics to clear up a bacterial infection, identification of allergens that may be causing the sinusitis, or in severe cases, endoscopic surgery to remove cysts or other blockages which may be present in the sinus cavities or nasal passages.

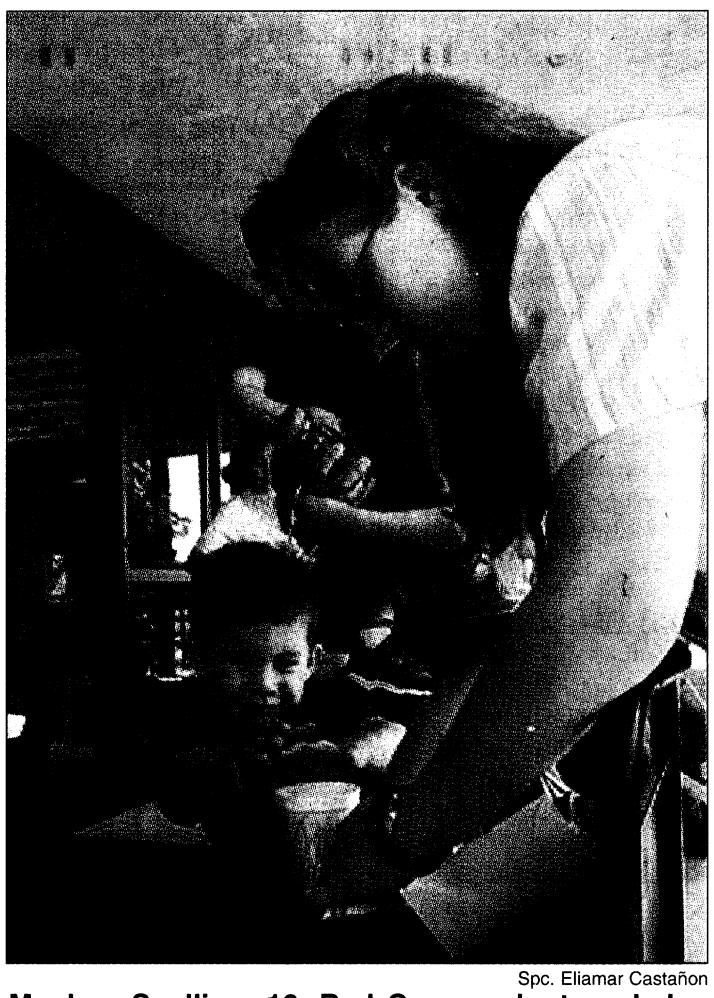
Red Cross to 'hire' young helping hands

Search is on for teen volunteers

Spc. Eliamar Castañon
Assistant editor

The Fort Benning Red Cross has application packets for this year's Summer Youth Program ready for pick up.

The program gives teenagers the opportunity to volunteer their time during the summer to different organizations around post.



Meghan Snelling, 16, began volunteering with the Red Cross last summer as part of the Red Cross' Summer Youth Program and she hasn't stopped since.

"I started volunteering as part of the Summer Youth Program and I liked it so much I continued to do it," Snelling said. "It has been a very fulfilling experience and a good way to pass the time."

A home-schooled student, Snelling volunteers at Sayers Library on Main Post helping with the many programs that the library offers for children in the community.

Misa Whiteford, public service librarian and Snelling's supervisor, said having volunteers like Snelling has been a tremendous help to the library. She's already requested the Red Cross send her four volunteers this summer.

Volunteers who join the summer program must be 13 to 18 years old and may work from 8 a.m. to noon Monday through Friday from June 6 to July 15, said Michele Walton, Red Cross health and safety director.

Spc. Eliamar Castañon

Meghan Snelling, 16, Red Cross volunteer, helps Emiliano Leyva, 4, plant watermelon seeds into a styrofoam cup he decorated during Sayer Library's craft time Tuesday morning.

Youth may volunteer at any of the Fort Benning libraries, Martin Army Community Hospital, the Vet Clinic and the Infantry Museum, among other places.

"We try to give the youth a choice of places to volunteer," Walton said. "It's a good opportunity for the youth to meet their volunteer hour requirements for their schools. It's also a great learning experience and they could walk away with some really good skills."

Packets may be picked up at the Red Cross office in Soldiers' Plaza and must be returned by May 20. There will be a parent meeting May 3 and a volunteer orientation June 3.

For more information, call 545-8221.

Volunteers: Accounted for $1.95 million worth of time

There were 2,457 in 2004 who volunteered a total of 113,270 hours, Hertig said. According to the Points of Light Foundation — a national volunteer management organization that keeps track of volunteers and hours — Fort Benning volunteers have volunteered an equivalent of $1.95 million worth of their time.

"Not all of our volunteers log all their hours, or the number would be much larger," Hertig said. "Some volunteers don't think it's important to log their hours because they are doing it out of love.

"But it's important they log their hours, so we can identify the areas where our volunteers are making a difference."

Volunteer invitations and certificates are ready for pick up in Building 2624 in Soldiers' Plaza. There will be door prizes, give-a-ways for the volunteers and a reception after the ceremony. The U.S. Army Infantry Jazz Ensemble will perform.

Awardees will receive a framed certificate of appreciation signed by Freakley and an appreciation plaque. Group awards will receive trophies. All awardees will have their photo taken with Freakley.

The ceremony is open to the public.

In case of inclement weather, the ceremony will be held at the Supper Club in the Officers' Club.

Brooks: Hopes to change world via eels and robots information to see if their hypothesis has been met. Then they send their finding back to NASA.

"Philip's biggest asset is he is focused, serious a hard worker and willing to put the time into the details to get things right," said Dr. Chris Spraggins, co-moderator of the Columbus High Space Program. "With the eel project he was in a team of three who shared responsibilities, but he took over the leader role."

Spraggins said the attention to detail Philip shows and his persistence and patience will help him in all aspects of life.

"It's a good experience for people who plan to do this in the future," Philip said. "You get to know the ins and outs of NASA and meet great people."

Even though Philip doesn't see himself working with vinegar eels or space waste management in his post-high school future, he does see this experience as a way to help him get to his goal — becoming a mechanical engineer.

"Philip has always been an inquisitive boy," said his dad, Col. Jim Brooks, via e-mail from Iraq. "Though he was always physically fit and participated in sports as a small boy, he really was more interested in researching, designing and building things."

When he was 10 years old, Philip attended a NASA Space Camp which helped "jumpstart his desire to be an engineer and work on robotics for NASA," Jim said.

Throughout his life, Philip has been constantly looking for new, fun ways to build and learn.

Besides the vinegar eel project, he is also working on robotic experiments using prototypes from Fort Benning.

"Whether building complex, scale-sized robotic systems, making models of the latest 'warhammer' type games, fixing cars or helping in the Boy Scout program, Philip has excelled in everything he has signed up for," Jim said.

Philip plans to continue working on NASA experiments until he graduates this spring and heads off to Texas A&M for college.

"NASA has helped teach me specific routes to go through to get something," Philip said. "I know if I put my nose to the grindstone, I can get anything done."

Fish for purpose

Chaplain (Lt. Col.) James R. Foxworth
Infantry Training Brigade

1st Sgt. Gary Hartzell shared this little booklet, The Fisherman's Guide to Life, with me. The book has several anecdotal examples and quips about fishing and life — in fact, the book is subtitled "Nine Timeless Principles Based on the Lessons of Fishing."

For people who love to fish and to impact people's lives for the good of God and humanity, this book is indeed timeless.

In this article, please indulge me in one of my passions, fishing and finding purpose in the way we spend our time.

Zane Grey, the great western and outdoor writer wrote, "If I fished only to capture fish, my fishing trips would have ended long ago."

And so it is with most of us who love to fish.

The thrill of the catch is often overshadowed by the thrill of the chase and the enjoyment of nature.

Jesus loved and respected fishing and fishermen. In fact, two of his disciples were fishermen, Peter and Andrew (Matthew 4:18-19).

He used the example of fishing to illustrate to Simon Peter, and several disciples, the concept of true faith.

Jesus instructed these men to leave their nets and "become fishers of men ..." What a concept for us to follow as people of faith.

If I had space to write I would explore some of the implications of this biblical example, but I do not, that may be better left for a sermon.

One of the greatest concepts one can grasp as anglers is "Fishermen become part of the waters they fish."

As naturalist John Muir put it, "When one tugs on a single thing in nature, one finds it attached to the rest of the world." Only when we approach the water with respect, excitement and dedication do we gain its fullest measure of enjoyment and become successful anglers.

The fish aren't always biting, but we can always enjoy the beauty God has created for us all.

I talk to many people daily. The one thing they seek is purpose: "Why am I here?"

It can be said of most of us that we strive for significance, success and peace within ourselves.

If we find one thing we really like to do, and if it is "God honoring," feel confident that you are supposed to do it.

And so it is with the simple things of nature, if we understand the implications and reasons we do things and see behind the thing or object itself, we can learn far more than how to catch fish.

Keep on fishing, tugging on that line and by the way, enjoy the beauty of nature and people as you go.

I hope to see you on the water.

Steps help healing, battle can be won

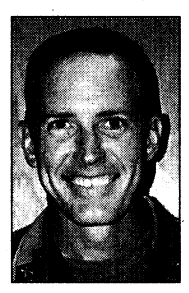
REFLECTIONS

Last week, I talked about the Army, and those of us associated with the Army, getting increasingly used to fighting wars. By now, fighting the Global War on Terrorism is a battle-drill we're all pretty familiar with.



Yet there is a battle that is less familiar that some of our own Army family, Soldiers and family members alike, wage on a daily basis. It is the war of anxiety. It's a war that's often covert and surreptitious.

It's often invisible to everyone else; it can sneak up on you silently.

Do you know or love someone who is fighting a war with anxiety? Last week I mentioned that this enemy can manifest itself in many different ways: panic disorder, phobias, generalized anxiety disorder, obsessive-compulsive disorder or Post-Traumatic Stress Disorder.

The good news is, just like the GWOT, these are battles that can be won.

If you, or someone you know is struggling with anxiety, pass these steps along and encourage them to "work these steps" with our team of trained coaches at The Chaplain Family Life Center.

Hawkins

Step No. 1 — Become a student of your anxiety. Make a journal of your personal history and what makes your anxiety go up and down.

Step No. 2 — Build your own armor against attacks. The only food your personal dragons eat is your own fear. Starve them of your fear while you build your own armor.

Step. No. 3 — Get into your discomfort zone. Only repeated walks in the woods at night get you comfortable in the dark — it's the same with any other anxiety. You've got to gently, but consistently, stretch your boundaries to win this war.

Step No. 4 — Get a platoon of support. The Army never sends anybody out alone to fight the enemy. You shouldn't either. Create or join an informal or formal support group with folks fighting similar dragons.

Step No. 5 — Eliminate your external causes of anxiety.

Know what pushes your buttons and then modify your plan of attack to avoid these "minefields."

Step No. 6 — Evaluate your need for medicine and counseling in your cure. There's no shame in a diabetic taking insulin — there is no shame in someone with a chemical deficiency taking Paxil in order to feel better. Use technology to your advantage.

Step No. 7 — Create a low-anxiety standard operating procedure for your life. Take charge of your battle plan.

Take the fight to the enemy — manage anxiety, don't let it manage you.

Step No. 8 — It's a marathon, not a sprint — plan for the long haul.

Turn setbacks into springboards by being a lifelong learner of what works for you.

If the last two weeks of articles on anxiety have piqued your interest, then let The Chaplain Family Life Center help you by calling 545-1760.

Or, introduce yourself to me at 11 a.m. Sundays at CrossRoads Contemporary Chapel on Kelley Hill. It's a postwide service for everyone.

I look forward to meeting you.

Benning begins civilian conversion

Puts Soldiers back in war-fighting roles

Melissa House
Bayonet staff

As part of a push to get Soldiers into units, the Army is filling many garrison slots with civilians. The military to civilian conversion is taking place now at Fort Benning, affecting Training and Doctrine Command units and the Installation Management Agency.

"Once it started, it happened pretty quickly," said Brandon Cockrell, chief of Plans, Analysis and Integration at the Infantry Center. "We're pulling military out of the typical staff sergeant roles and placing them in warfighting roles."

The Army is converting these jobs to help meet the demands of fighting the Global War on Terrorism and is implementing the plan through the Civilian Personnel Operations Center network. The CPOCs are responsible for recruiting high-quality candidates to fill the vacancies.

An Army civilian personnel bulletin said the initiative "enhances the Army's force capabilities, reduces stress on the force and spreads the operational tempo over more units. The conversion is a critical link to kick-starting the additional modular brigades."

In all, 240 positions were converted on Fort Benning as part of the 8,360 positions selected for conversion worldwide.

According to Hans Knoff, director of the Civilian Personnel Advisory Center, 199 TRADOC positions were converted and 145 have already been filled. Sixteen of the 31 military positions in the IMA were filled as of April 15.

Cockrell said he gets a weekly update from the CPOC to show the Drill sergeants battle for DSOY title

Competition held, winner not yet announced

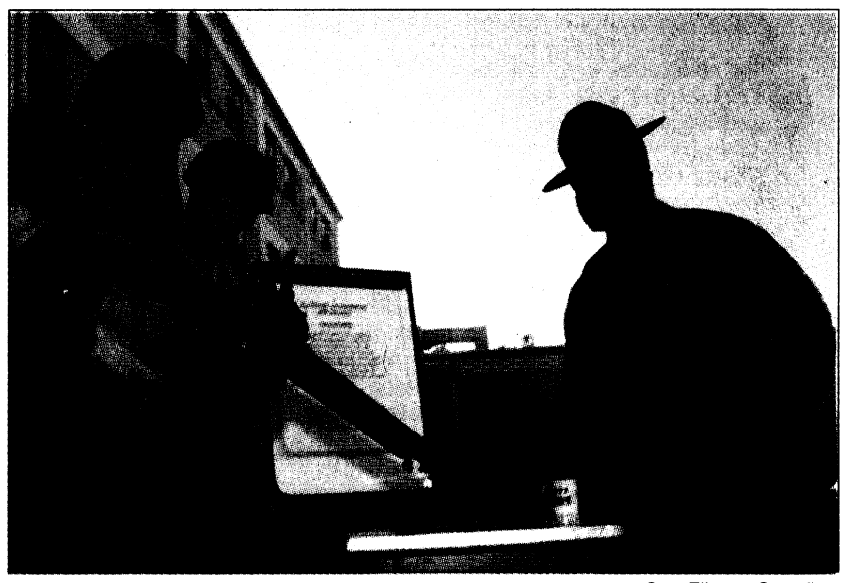
Drill sergeants from the Infantry Training Brigade, the Basic Combat Training Brigade and Drill Sergeant School battled for the title of Drill Sergeant of the Year.

Monday was the first day of the three-day event to determine which drill sergeant will represent Fort Benning at the Training and Doctrine Command Drill Sergeant Competition in June at Fort Monroe, Va.



The competitors are Sgt. 1st Class Clifford Cheeseman, representing BCTB; Sgt. 1st Class James Hill, representing ITB and Staff Sgt. Roger Matherson, representing the Fort Benning DSS.

"Drill sergeants are the foundation of the enlisted corps. Without them, there wouldn't be any set standard," said Sgt. 1st Class Ronnie Blount, 2004 Drill Sergeant of the Year runner-up.

Blount said the competition is held to select the one person who best embodies what a drill sergeant should be.

When Soldiers get to basic training, their drill sergeants teach them the basics, Blount said. Once Soldiers get to their new units, they'll be prepared to learn different techniques.

Military police to get back up on post by 2006

New battalion to provide relief for post MPs

Spc. Nikki St. Amant
Bayonet staff

Fort Benning military police can rest a little easier knowing reinforcements are on the way.

Directorate of Public Safety officials confirmed a new battalion of military police is expected to begin arriving as early as October.

"This is going to be great," said Capt. Kevin Pelley, deputy provost marshall. "This will help rotate deployments fairly and relieve the guys who have been here a while."

While the first signs of the new unit will come in the form of equipment and some headquarters detachment personnel, the unit will not likely be operational until spring next year at the very earliest, Pelley said. Individual companies will stand up throughout 2007 and into 2008.

The new battalion will consist of a headquarters detachment, three combat support companies and one law enforcement company.

The unit is being formed as part of Army upsizing directed by Secretary of the Army Francis J. Harvey.

Currently the 988th Military Police Company is the only deployable military police unit on post. The new battalion's two additional combat support companies will provide relief for the 988th.

It returned from an Iraqi deployment last year and has been warned it will deploy on the next OIF rotation.

Brandon Cockrell, chief of Plans, Analysis and Integration, said problems aren't expected with the influx of personnel even though a funding source for the new unit remains undetermined.

"It's always a good thing when Fort Benning grows," he said. "At this time, we aren't anticipating any problems accommodating their arrival."

BROTHERS IN ARMS

Rangers bond like no other

Erin A. Nash
Bayonet staff

I've been a spouse within the 75th Ranger Regiment for nearly nine years. During this time, I've been to countless balls, Ranger Rendezvous and the many functions that go along with being part of the Ranger community.

What impresses me most about the Rangers is the bond, the brotherhood. It's like none I've ever seen.

I was at the barbecue for Ranger Rendezvous in 1997, when I saw a little old man sitting at the end of the table, and several young Rangers crowded around him. I asked a person listening to him who the man was, and he looked at me like I was crazy.

"That's the Phil Piazza, one of Merrill's Marauders in World War II," was his response.

So I listened to Piazza's war stories and was just in awe of this man. I could see how the Rangers idolize Piazza, because I do too.

There are names every Ranger knows: Medal of Honor recipient Col. Robert Nett, and Col. Ralph Puckett, the honorary colonel of the 75th Ranger Regiment. These men are just two of many Rangers who fought in many wars and sacrificed much.

These are the men the Rangers idolize, and there's no doubt why. But go to any Ranger event, and the older Rangers are there, encouraging, reminiscing and mentoring.

Last year at the Best Ranger Competition, I saw many former Rangers cheering on competitors. Wow, I thought, here are the men these current Rangers want to be like, and they're here to support the Rangers competing.

I was interested in this, so I asked my husband about this bond.

"It's a brotherhood of mutual respect," he said. "It's like they're our older brothers and we're their younger brothers, and you watch out for each other."

I've seen and heard about the lengths that Rangers will go for their brothers, and I'm constantly amazed. They've seen wars, whether it be World War II or the mountains of Afghanistan.

They live the Ranger Creed. They see Rangers they worked with years ago, and they'll stop and reminisce for hours. They mourn their lost Ranger buddies and train the new ones.

I'm envious of this bond between Rangers, because it is like no other. While these men might not be biological brothers, they are brothers, in every sense of the word.

Sign an organ donor card, it's painless

Melissa House
Bayonet staff

I'll admit it. I can be a bit like flypaper. Some things just stick with me. So, small wonder the subject of organ donation stuck, in this, National Donate Life Month. And if you're reading this, it's not too late to become an organ and tissue donor.

My ID card expired at the beginning of the month, and when I went to get a new one, the Soldier pulled up my information on her computer and asked if I was still an organ donor. She handed me my new card, complete with a small "Donate Life" emblem underneath my photo. Wow.

I can't explain why I was struck by that, but I was. I proudly showed my new card to my co-workers, and then said it is a shame someone had to ask you if you wanted to donate your organs.

"I'm not going to be using them after I die," I said. "Why shouldn't someone else get them?"

Today, there are more than 88,000 Americans waiting for organ transplants. The number hasn't changed much in the two years since President Bush signed the proclamation making April National Donate Life Month. And, while 74 receive their new organs each day, 17 die waiting.

The United Network for Organ Sharing and the Organ Procurement and Transplantation Network track the data and analyze trends.

That data showed the transplant waiting list increasing by 130 percent in the last 10 years.

The demand for organs continues to grow steadily, as does the number of transplants. The best news is the survival rate is increasing as well.

In January, there were 2,273 transplants and 1,164 donors — including 516 living donors. But 88,153 Americans are still waiting, including the 44 babies under the age of 1 who have been added to the list since Jan 1.

A computerized matching system, first created in 1977, tracks the candidates and helps match them with organs as they become available. Organs are matched by blood and tissue typing, organ size, medical urgency, waiting time and geographic location. I'd have to say it's a fair system, getting the right parts to the right people, no matter who you are.

The more I read, the more I realized just how much of an impact my eventual death might have. I can potentially donate 12 organ and tissue items when I die.

Since the beginning of the year, 1,385 candidates with my blood type have been added do the waiting list, 69 of them in Georgia. I can't say I'm ready to die, but I sure hope to go out with a bang and help as many people as I can.

Although Saturday marks the official end of National Organ and Tissue Donor Awareness Week, it's not too late to make a difference. Decide to become an organ donor. Take my word for it, or do the research yourself.

But if you decide to become a donor, share your decision. Let your family members know, so they don't have to make that decision under stress. Your decision could save a life, and make a world of difference to someone.

You can get information and download donor cards from www.organdonor.gov and shareyourlife.org.

Last year my cousin, Christine, got one of the organs she needs to prolong her life. Christine has lived with diabetes her entire life.

When we were kids, she gave herself daily injections while the rest of us ate cookies and ice cream, sweet treats she would never be able to have. She has managed it well her whole life, but in the last few years, it has progressively gotten worse.

About three years ago, she started going blind. She could no longer drive or read or cross the street without someone holding her hand. At the same time, she started to have more trouble controlling her blood sugar and would lose consciousness or stop breathing.

Bit by bit, life, as she knew it, eroded away. She lost her job, couldn't be left alone in case she stopped breathing, and had to move back home with her parents. It was a good thing she did.

One day her mother came home from grocery shopping to find Christine laying on the kitchen floor, her face blue and her heart stopped. My aunt called 911 and did CPR, barely saving her life. If she had taken five minutes longer in the store, Christine would be dead.

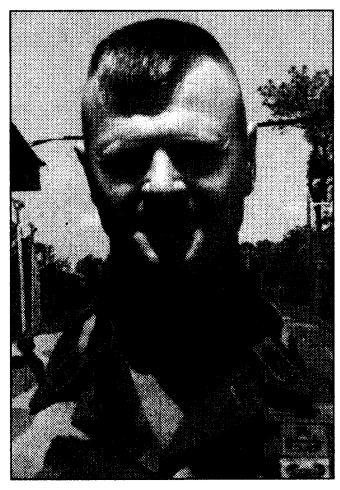
As a 26 year old, her body just seemed to be shutting down, and we started to wonder if she would see 27. She spent so much time in the hospital, it was an oddity when she was actually at home. Doctors gave her a ray of hope, a new kidney and new pancreas would help, and might cure her diabetes forever.

The kidney wasn't a problem. After testing her siblings and parents, Christine got one of her father's kidneys. It was a long, difficult recovery process for both of them. But it helped, a lot.

Her blood sugar is more stable, and she passes out less often. After some surgeries, she has gotten some of her eyesight back, but she's still constantly in the hospital.

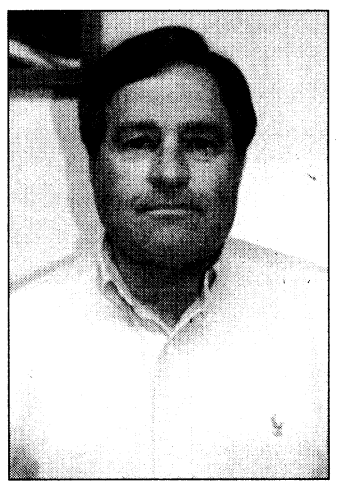
But things have improved. She married an Army chaplain's assistant who grew up with a family member with diabetes and understands the challenges of living with it. They're thinking of starting a family — adopting, her body can't handle the stress of childbirth. So there's a happy ending to the story.

Maybe. Basically, she's living on borrowed time. Unless she gets pancreas, Christine will die. There's no question. She's slowly working her way up a long list of recipients, who move off the list either when they get their organ, or they wait too long, and no longer need it.



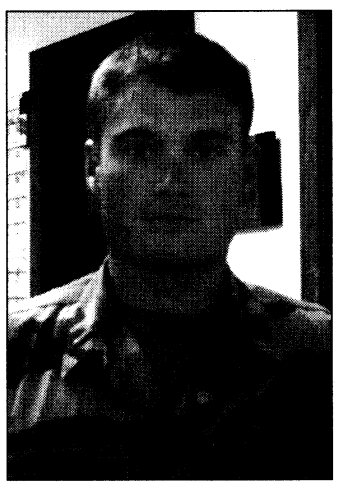
I've never understood why people do not donate their organs. Once a person is gone, they certainly not using them anymore. And what a beautiful legacy. You can give someone else the gift of life, and in a way, isn't that living on?

If your daughter or your father needed a kidney, would you give it to them? What about a stranger? There are a lot of people out there, somebody's mom or sister or cousin, who need your organs.

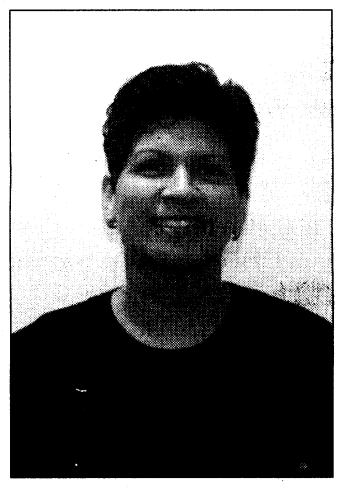


So please, don't take them with you. Donate your organs, and give someone a second chance at life.

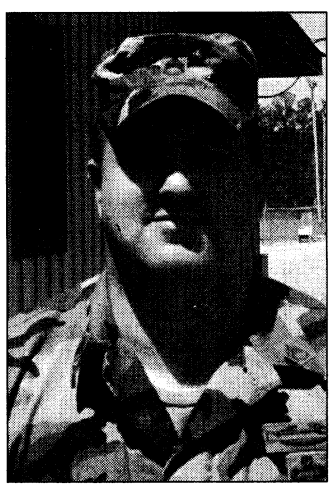
VARIOUS VOICES



What is your favorite part of the Best Ranger Competition?

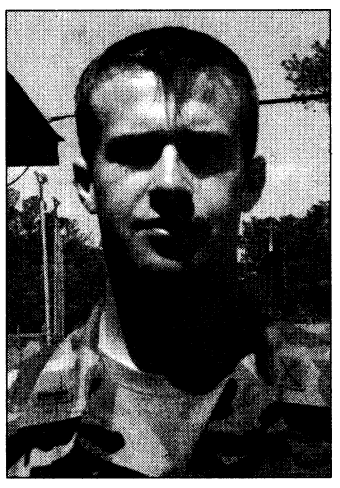


Master Sgt. Greg Slater, Warrior Training Center — "The best thing about Best Ranger is that it embodies the warrior spirit. Rangers make the impossible possible because of their never fail, never quit attitude. When you're watching the competition, you get inspired to be a better Soldier by seeing what these guys can do."



John Delffs, Office of Infantry Proponency — "My favorite event is the nighttime road march event because it weeds out the competition."

2nd Lt. Charles Simmons, Warrior Training Center — "A lot of these guys haven't been in Ranger School for a while, and to get themselves into such good physical condition to be able to compete is amazing. The best part is seeing people push themselves and have that kind of dedication."



Jeannette Calderon, TISM-Stryker — "My favorite is the weapons assembly during Day Stakes."

Staff Sgt. Mike Moore, Warrior Training Center — "The best part is watching guys do the gut check for 62 hours. Even if a guy finishes dead last, you say, hey, great job. I competed in Best Ranger in 1992, and the best part for me was learning from the senior NCOs that it's better to work smarter, not harder."

Retired Lt. Col. Selby Rollinson, Protocol — "I like watching the helocast and water confidence test because it's easy to observe, and I like helicopters."

1st Lt. James Burkett, Warrior Training Center — "This is the first time I've been here for the competition, but I think the best part will be seeing guys from so many units challenging themselves and showing off their skills."

Standing Orders still drive Ranger training

Bridgett Siter
Bayonet staff

The tactics and skills taught at the U.S. Army Ranger School today evolved from Maj. Robert Rogers' Standing Orders.

Rogers, a New Hampshire native, honed his warfighting skills while serving in the Colonial Army. He carefully studied the strategies the Indians used to wage war on colonists and turned the tables on them and their French allies. While other troops seldom strayed far from their frontier forts, Rogers went on the offense, leading his scouts on raids into enemy territory.

Rogers listed his keys to success as "standing orders," and Ranger units still consider them a valuable teaching tool

Though modern weaponry and intelligence has advanced beyond anything Rogers could have imagined, the mission of the Army Ranger today is much the same as it was then — find the enemy and beat him at his own game.

In the 250-plus years since the French and Indian War, Rogers' tactics have been modified and employed during every major war in which the U.S. has been involved.

During the Revolution, Col. Daniel Morgan led a highly successful "Ranger type" troop of Infantrymen called "Morgan's Riflemen." And Francis Marion, "The Swamp Fox," organized a ornery band of Ranger types who swiftly thwarted the English army's every attempt to gain ground in the Southern states.

By 1813, "Ranger" was the accepted term for the unorthodox, aggressive warfighter. That year, 12 Ranger companies were listed in the Army register.

Less than 20 years later, more than 600 mounted Rangers fought in the Black Hawk War. The concept of a Ranger cavalry caught on, and for a brief period they were very successful, none more so than the legendary Texas Rangers, who protected the republic from Mexican and Indian attacks.

During the Civil War, the Confederate Congress passed the Partisan Ranger Act authorizing Rangers to conduct bold raids on Union supply lines. Among the most successful was "Ranger Morgan," Gen. John Hunt Morgan and Col. John Mosby, who controlled an area in Virginia known as Mosby's Confederacy.

Rangers were not employed again until World War II, when the 1st Ranger Battalion was activated under the command of Maj. — later Brig. Gen. — William O. Darby, for whom Fort Benning's Camp Darby is named. Darby's Rangers were lauded for their success in North Africa, and soon after, more battalions were added. By the end of the war, there were six Ranger battalions.

Brig. Gen. Frank D. Merrill led the 5307th Composite Unit (Provisional), including a band of "marauders" who fought in the harsh Japanese-occupied jungles of Burma alongside and against primitive tribes of headhunters and cannibals.

The 5307th was never classified as a Ranger unit, but Merrill's Marauders became famous for their daring exploits and Ranger-style operations. The unit was later designated the 75th Infantry.

The lineage of today's 75th Ranger Regiment dates back to these World War II Rangers.

At the outbreak of the Korean War, morale was low in the Army. Banking on the success and traditionally high level of motivation Ranger units exhibited during World War II, Army officials established the Ranger Training Command at Fort Benning, and 15 Airborne Ranger companies were activated by 1951.

Later that year, the Army chief of staff, Gen. J. Lawton Collins, directed Ranger training be extended to all combat units.

Thus the Ranger Department was created, and the first class of graduates were given a simple black and gold tab in 1952. The department became the Ranger Training Brigade in 1987.

During the Vietnam War, 14 Ranger companies were organized, mostly comprised of volunteers who had not graduated from Ranger School, a practice that is still being used today.

The 1st and 2nd Battalions, 75th Infantry (Ranger), were activated in 1974 respectively at Fort Stewart, Ga., and Fort Lewis, Wash. The 3rd Battalion was later located at Fort Benning.

The unit is now known as the 75th Ranger Regiment. Like those Vietnam-era companies, the regiment is comprised of "tabbed" Rangers who have graduated from Ranger School and "scrolled" Rangers who have passed the regiment's Ranger Indoctrination Program for junior enlisted and Ranger Orientation Program for senior NCOs and officers.

Like Ranger training as a whole, Ranger School has evolved since its inception more than 50 years ago. Designed to simulate the stresses of close combat, it is one of the Army's most rigorous, elite schools, with an attrition rate of nearly 50 percent. Students come from foreign countries and all services.

Before they can attend Ranger School, students are carefully screened and must certify successfully in 26 Ranger common tasks, such as using night vision devices, employing claymore mines and proficiency with a military map. Though Airborne school is not a prerequisite, it is strongly encouraged.

Most brigade-level units host pre-Ranger courses to prepare their Soldiers for the stress of Ranger School. Though officials are quick to discount the notion that pre-Ranger is a "weeding out" process, it can be argued that it serves dual purposes. Sending a Soldier to Ranger School is an investment that pays dividends in the success of a unit.

It's a 61-day, three-phase school, including 19 days at Fort Benning, 21 at Camp Merrill in Dahlonega, Ga., 18 at Camp Rudder in Eglin Air Force Base, Fla., and back to Fort Benning for graduation. The Fort Bliss, Texas, desert phase was "phased out" more than 10 years ago.

Ranger School training centers around a basic scenario: The flourishing drug operations of the enemy forces, "the Cortinian Army," must be eradicated. To do so, the Rangers will have to take the fight into enemy territory, the rough terrain around Fort Benning, the mountains of North Georgia and the swamps and coastal areas of Florida. The Rangers students are given a clear mission, but it's up to them to determine how best to carry it out.

Fort Benning is the home of the Ranger Training Brigade and its 4th Ranger Training Battalion, which hosts the "crawl" phase of Ranger School, where students, in two-man "buddy" teams, learn the fundamentals of mission planning. This phase is critical to success, as it lays the groundwork for phases two and three, the "walk" and "run" phases.

At Benning, students must successfully complete the Ranger Assessment Phase, which includes many of the tasks Best Ranger Competition spectators have become familiar with — the Malvesti Field Obstacle Course, the Darby Queen, the Prusik Climb and the log-walk-rope-drop. Here they also learn the basics of close combat, using a pugil stick, a knife or bare hands.

At the 5th Ranger Training Battalion, the students learn mountaineering skills, and at the 6th Ranger Training Battalion, they must demonstrate tactical and technical proficiency in swampy terrain leading a platoon size patrol. This phase includes small boat operations and an extensive "do-or-die" field training exercise.

All in all, Ranger School students will participate in three Airborne operations and 10 air assault operations. They are "graded" on their ability to lead at various levels in various situations.

And here's the kicker — they can be "peered out," the Ranger School equivalent of being voted off the island by their classmates.

If a student performs successfully, but suffers an injury that keeps him from finishing, he may be "recycled" at the discretion of the battalion or brigade commander, meaning he'll be given an opportunity to heal and finish the course with the next class.

Eleven Ranger classes graduate each year at Victory Pond. Family members are treated to a Rangers In Action demonstration before each ceremony to give them an abbreviated glimpse of what "their Ranger" has endured during nine weeks of training.

The event is open to the public, as is the annual Lt. Gen. David E. Grange Best Ranger Competition, which starts today at Camp Rogers.

The BRC, which started in 1982, was the brainchild of a group of civilian Ranger boosters of sorts, the Chairborne Rangers, headed by Dick Leandri, who became an honorary member of the Ranger Hall of Fame in 1992. Leandri envisioned a "Ranger Olympics" and wanted the event to honor his friend, Grange, a former commander of the Ranger Department.

Leandri, who died in 1998, lived long enough to see his dream established as the military's premier competition, annually drawing hordes of spectators and national media. Grange makes it a point to attend each year, as do dozens, sometimes hundreds, of former Rangers, including many Hall of Famers.

Only twice has the competition been cancelled due to the Army's increased optempo in times of war. This year, like last year, the number of teams will be considerably less than the competition draws during peacetime.

That's not necessarily a good thing for competitors. Last year, in a bid to ensure the winners weren't slighted in after action reviews — to erase any suspicion a smaller playing field meant an easier competition — brigade officials designed a competition prior competitors called the toughest ever.

By the end of tonight's land navigation challenge, planners and the 23 competing teams will know if they've recreated last year's success.

Week 2 — Gas Gas Gas

Photos by Tawny Archibald Campbell

After learning the proper use of their protective gear, Soldiers move through the CS gas chambers.

Week two at the Infantry Training Brigade begins with nuclear, biological, chemical training. Soldiers learn the proper use of the protective mask and walk through a chamber of CS gas while wearing protective gear. Soldiers also run an obstacle course and confidence course. They learn radio communications and day and night land navigation skills and techniques. Throughout the week, Soldiers also continue to have classes on the Army values.

Editor's note: The Bayonet's Tawny Archibald Campbell will follow B Company, 1st Battalion, 19th Infantry Regiment, through 14 weeks of training, offering readers a look at training for new Soldiers at the Infantry Training Brigade.

DSOY: Winner to represent post DS

During the competition, competitors are evaluated to make sure they do know the "basics."

The first day of the competition, the competitors were evaluated on their abilities to perform hands-on tasks such as teaching Soldiers how to set up a claymore mine, assemble and disassemble the M-16 and perform first-aid tasks. Following the hands-on testing, the competitors moved out to the Malone ranges to zero and qualify with an M-16.

Tuesday, competitors were tested on their land navigation skills at the 4th Ranger Training Battalion land navigation site, where the competitors had to find five out of six points.

The second part of day two of the three-day competition was the modulation portion of the competition, where the competitors had to pitch modules from memory, Blount said.

The modules covered everything from drill and ceremonies to PT.

The hardest day for the competitors was the final day, when they individually faced a board of sergeants major.

The competitors were questioned extensively on the procedures and policies of the initial entry program, the TRADOC regulations for the drill sergeant program and all other military manuals and regulations.

"You can study all you want, but you'll never know what they're going to ask you," Hill said.

Although the competition is over and the winner is already known, the name will not be announced until May 13 during the official Drill Sergeant of the Year ceremony.

The winner of the competition will become the liaison between ITB, BCTB, drill sergeants and the command group.

Conversion: Frees up Soldiers progress in filling the positions.

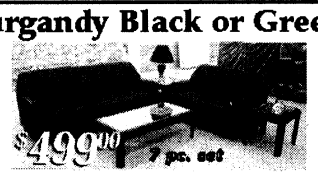
"They're moving quickly because they realize the importance of filling these jobs," Cockrell said.

With 66, the 29th Infantry Regiment had a large share of the converted jobs, many of which were in logistics and administrative MOSs.



Debra Tyler, the 29th Regt.'s civilian personnel liaison, said those conversions were spread throughout the regiment, while 10 motor vehicle operator positions were converted in the 1st Battalion, 29th Inf. Regt.

An entire ammunition platoon assigned to Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 2nd Battalion, 29th Inf. Regt., was also converted to civilian employees, leaving a large void to fill.

"Twenty-nine have already been hired for the (ammunition supply point)," Tyler said, "and many of these civilians are prior military."

TSIRT trains thousands for combat

CRC training key to troop readiness

Spc. Nikki St. Amant
Bayonet staff

Spc. Nikki St. Amant

Navy Chief David Black provides cover as battle buddy Maj. Brian Benham performs first aid on a casualty during TSIRT.

In support of the Global War on Terrorism, Fort Benning serves as a major projection platform. Every week, the post's CONUS Replacement Center trains and processes hundreds of deploying Soldiers, Departments of the Army and Defense civilians, contractors and members of other armed forces branches.

Every one of those deploying individuals completes Theater Specific Individual Readiness Training.

TSIRT is conducted by the activated Reserve unit the 108th Division, out of Concord, N.C., under the auspices of the 29th Infantry Regiment, working in concert with the civilian contractor, Omega Group.

The training covers basic, core skills dictated by the Training and Doctrine Command. Classes cover topics like NBC, first aid, individual searches, vehicle searches, convoy procedures, IEDs, individual and buddy team movements and nine-line medevac procedures. Each class is followed by a practical exercise, which is closely supervised by instructors, who provide immediate feedback.

"A lot of Soldiers take these skills for granted until they come into a situation where they have to negotiate against the enemy," said Omega Group instructor Marion Dashiell. "This is very important training. These are basic skills that everyone needs. You always have to go back to basics and constantly reinforce them."

Dashiell speaks from experience. He retired six months ago. His last position was as the brigade command sergeant major of the 1st Brigade, 3rd Infantry Division in Fort Stewart, Ga. He helped lead the charge into Baghdad in OIF 1.

"What is important is a lot of these guys will go over (deploy) and be incorporated into units and have to automatically engage the enemy," he said. "It is all about getting back to basics. Each individual needs to know what their duties are, what their responsibilities are."

The TSIRT course incorporates a wide range of training in a relatively short two-week period. To ensure students stay on track and absorb the information, instructors maintain strict supervision and provide immediate feedback and coaching.

"We firmly believe in coaching along the way," said Master Sgt. Ray Presnell, the TSIRT acting first sergeant. "Our instructors are always one step ahead."

That instructor supervision continues even through the final practical exercise — a buddy team reaction course called Haskin's Alley.

The alley is a mock up of an urban street Soldiers may find themselves on in Iraqi cities. They have to navigate the street while identifying IEDs, differentiating between combatants and civilians, engaging armed enemies, providing first aid under fire and reacting to sniper fire. They have seven minutes to complete the course and are graded step by step by an instructor.

"I've been in the Navy for 18 years," said TSIRT student Chief David Black.

"I've always been out at sea and never had to worry about this kind of stuff. This is my first time playing Army, and it's been a real learning curve for me."

Black is being deployed to the Central Command headquarters in Qatar. His battle buddy for the exercise, Maj. Brian Benham, is en route to the Security Assistance Training Management Office in Iraq.

"Haskin's Alley was the best part so far," Benham said. "It brought everything, all the training, together in one nice, neat package."

Launched only six months ago, the TSIRT course has adapted and overcome the challenges of setting up a course and successfully trained thousands of Soldiers and civilians destined for hostile-fire areas around the world.

"I think our success is because of the hard work and dedication of instructors on the site," Presnell said. "The people we are sending out forward deployed are satisfied. They feel prepared."

Dashiell said this training is one of the most important steps troops take before leaving.

"This is the last line of defense for our Soldiers before they deploy," he said. "We are giving them the basic skills they need to survive and come home."

Elber Smith, who served with the 504th Parachute Infantry Regiment, and Mike Bigalke, a living history artist from Marengo, Ill., dressed as a World War II paratrooper, salute a tattered flag which flew over the World Trade Center after the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks. The flag was donated by the World Trade Center Association.

Airborne Award ceremony draws hundreds to Eubanks Field

They're called "the originals," members of the Army's first Parachute Test Platoon. Of the original 47, there are only seven left, four who still attend reunions like last week's 28th annual Airborne Awards Festival on Fort Benning's Eubanks Field.

Benjamin Reese is one of them. He was a farm boy from Southwest Georgia in 1939. Jobs were hard to come by, and every time Reese got his foot in the door, the boss's brother, cousin, nephew or neighbor needed it worse. So Reese volunteered for the Army. A week later, he was a "$21-a-month private."

Less than a year later, the supply clerk signed his name to a list of volunteers willing to join an experimental airborne unit, "the test platoon," the very short-lived predecessor to 501st Parachute Battalion.

"I had never been in an airplane in my life," said Reese, 88, who made four combat jumps in his 30-year career. He made his first training jump from a C-33 onto a much smaller Lawson Airfield.

Fortunately, he missed the briars that framed the swampy landing strip.

Unfortunately, he landed on a hangar ramp.

"The officer had the plane swoop in real low, and he yelled, 'You OK, Reese?' I said, 'Yeah, I'm alright,' and it took off for another round," he said. "That's the way we did it. You went around once, and let a guy out. If he made it alright, we made another round."

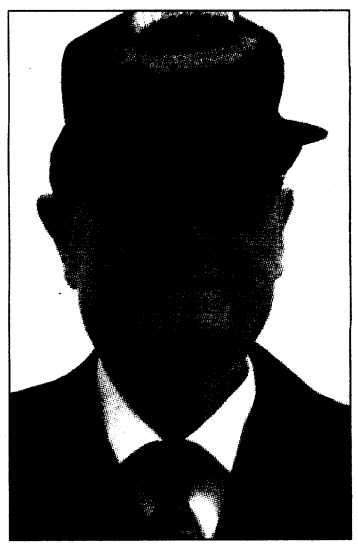
Reese shared his memories April 14 during the festival, which started on Eubanks Field with an Airborne 5000 demonstration, followed by a memorial ceremony at the Airborne Walk, a visit to Red Cloud Range and an Airborne graduation on Fryar Drop Zone.

Nearly 200 spectators, mostly veterans of World War II, Korea and Vietnam, huddled in blankets to ward off the chill, as the Silver Wings descended with smoke upon the Airborne Walk.

The Infantry Band played, the widow of a test platoon paratrooper placed a wreath at the center of the memorial, and a rifle team fired a salute to fallen paratroopers.

"We pause to remember these great warriors," said retired Lt. Gen. Richard Seitz, guest speaker for the event, himself a master parachutist. "They left us a legacy of freedom, and it is our duty to pass it on."

"Freedom," Seitz said, "does not equal peace."



"No, peace without freedom is worse than no peace at all," he said, before saluting "today's troopers" who are fighting for freedom around the world.

After the graduation, the veterans boarded chartered buses for Atlanta, where various memorials, programs and dinners were scheduled.

Editor's note: The Bayonet received word at press time that Loyd McCullough, an original Test Platoon member, died earlier this week. His funeral will be Monday in Dayton, Ohio.

"One time I was speaking to a class here, and I said, 'They do try to make us think we're somebody.' The general — Brigadier General Freakley — he came up to me and said, 'You are somebody — do you here me? You are somebody.'"

April program features armor officer

Melissa House
Bayonet staff

The Combat Leader Speaker Program will be held at 4 p.m. Wednesday in Marshall Auditorium. The program, sponsored by the Combat Arms and Tactics Division, brings high-caliber guest speakers to speak to students in the Infantry Center's professional development courses.

Retired Lt. Gen. Donald Holder Jr., who retired in 1997 after more than 31 years of service, will be the keynote speaker. Holder was commissioned as an armor officer after graduating from Texas A&M University and served much of his career overseas in Germany. His combat experience includes a tour in Vietnam as a troop commander in the 1st Infantry Division and commander of the 2nd Armored Cavalry Regiment during Operation Desert Storm.

Holder has a master's degree in history from Harvard University, and served as the commanding general of the U.S. Army Combined Arms Center, Fort Leavenworth, Kan. In 1998, he advocated reform of the Army's Professional Military Education system, saying it "will be pivotal in determining the effectiveness of the U.S. armed forces in the next century."

Military affected by AIDS

HIV-positive Soldiers can "stay Army"

Spc. Nikki St. Amant
Bayonet staff

We know there are Soldiers in the Army who are HIV-positive. While a person may not join the military if he is HIV-positive, if he contracts the virus after he is in the military, he may remain in the service as long as he is healthy enough to perform his duties.

On Oct. 25, Sgt. Justin Kinlock was convicted of 10 counts of aggravated assault at Fort Jackson, S.C., for having unprotected sex with 10 women without informing them he was HIV positive.

We know now that HIV-positive Soldiers don't always do the right thing. Just because a person wears a uniform and says he is perfectly healthy does not mean it is always so.

"Take the STD rate outside the (post) gate and multiply it by five inside the gate," said Capt. Seth Randle.

Randle is a Community Health nurse and coordinator of the HIV program on Fort Benning.

"There is a misconception that just because someone is in uniform that means they aren't sick or don't have HIV," he said. "There are Soldiers who do have HIV and they can look perfectly healthy."

While Randle declined to comment specifically on whether there are HIV-positive Soldiers assigned to Fort Benning, he left room for individuals to come to their own conclusions.

"Given the HIV infection rate across the general population, and considering Fort Benning as being the size of a small city, one may reasonably assume, by looking at the numbers, that it is possible there are Soldiers on Fort Benning who have the HIV virus," he said.

Randle also noted the possibility there are Soldiers and civilians on post and in the local area who are unaware they have the virus and are transmitting it to others.

He said Soldiers are only required to be tested every two years and may contract the virus and pass it on at anytime between tests.

The tests themselves are not 100 percent fool-proof either. The CDC reports that while most people will produce detectable amounts of antibodies within two to eight weeks, some take as long as six months to build up enough antibodies to render a positive test for infection. That means if a person has a test in early July, it is possible he has the virus and contracted it anytime between January and the test, and it will not show up, leaving him with a false sense of security. That person may then go out and have unprotected sex with any number of people until the next time he is tested, exposing them, and anyone they have sex with, to the virus.

The CDC also warns that many civilians rarely, if ever, are tested for HIV and, if infected, may go as long as a decade or more before exhibiting any symptoms at all. The uniquely long time between infection and the appearance of AIDS symptoms in HIV-infected people affords the disease a greater opportunity to spread among the population before it is identified.

"Always wear a condom," Randle said. "If you are going to have sex at all, use a condom. Oral, anal, vaginal or otherwise. Abstinence is the best way to be safe, but if you won't do that then only have sex with a person in a monogamous relationship who has been tested for HIV and other STDs. Stay away from IV drug users and prostitutes."

There are almost 600,000 people living with HIV or AIDS in the United States today. Get tested. Be safe. Use protection. Don't trust the other person's word — it's your life on the line.

Days of Remembrance

In remembrance of victims of the Holocaust, the Equal Opportunity Office will host this year's "Days of Remembrance" commemorative service from 11 a.m. to noon May 4 in Marshall Auditorium in Infantry Hall. The guest speaker is the Honorable Aaron Cohn, Juvenile Court, Chattahoochee Judicial Circuit. For more information, call 544-7262

Army mandates IA training

In an effort to protect data from internal and external threats, the Army established a directive requiring all computer users Armywide to complete information assurance training no later than June 4.

Users can complete their IA training requirement by logging onto the Army e-Learning Program. For more information, log on to www.us.army.mil or access Army e-Learning at http://usarmy.skillport.

PPE survey

The Army and the DoD have launched a survey studying the effectiveness of Personal Protective Equipment. The survey seeks information regarding incidents involving PPE. Survey responses will be used by to improve protective equipment. The survey is available at www.infantry.army.mil/surveys/ppe/ppe.htm and takes five to eight minutes to complete.

5th RTB Open House

The ninth annual Ranger Run and Open House will be at Camp Frank D. Merrill in Dahlonega, Ga., May 7. There will be a 5K and 15K run, a 34K bike race, a duathlon, a six-member Ranger Team Challenge competition and a one-mile fun run around Mosby Army Airfield. Proceeds benefit local charities.

The run, held in conjunction with the 5th Ranger Training Battalion's Open House, will highlight Ranger combat techniques, mountaineering, hand-to-hand combat and static displays.

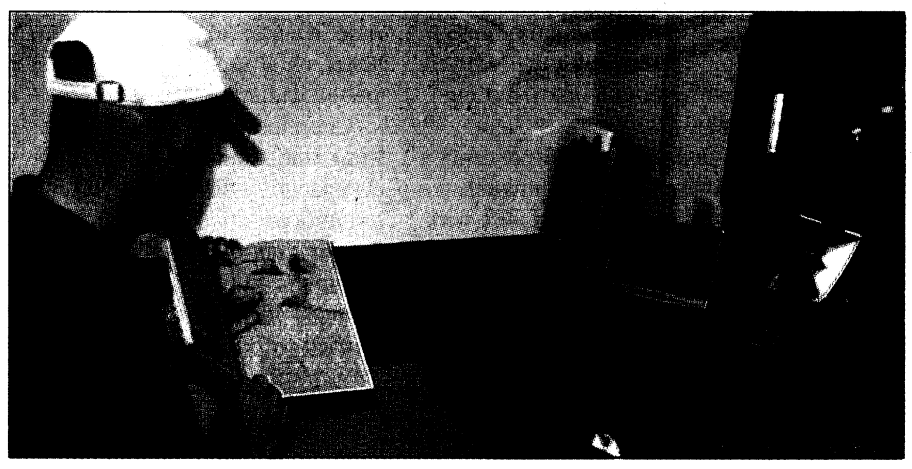
The first Chicken Soup for the Soul book was published in 1994. Since then, the books in the series have sold more than 65 million copies and appeared on the New York Times Bestsellers List. The more than 80 titles include three books in Spanish. If you're a veteran, volunteer, teen, mom, ocean lover or golfer — there's a book for you.

Library offers video messaging to Soldiers

Spc. Eliamar Castañon
Assistant editor

Fort Benning's libraries are offering a new service to help Soldiers and their families keep in touch.

The Video Messenger will allow Soldiers and civilians who are away from home to make a video tape while they read a book for their children.



The Community and Family Support Center — an organization that provides support to Soldiers and their families — has made available Video Messengers to Fort Benning libraries.

With the Video Messenger, Soldiers and civilian's away from their families can visit any library on post and make a free video, said Sherrie Floyd, a librarian at Sayers Library.

"The system is set up primarily for parents who want to read a bedtime story to their children," Floyd said. "But Soldiers may come in here and read a poem or send a message to their loved ones, too."

The CFSC sent Fort Benning several Video Messengers to sign out to units or keep in post libraries where they can be easily accessed.

Columbus Riverfest comes to town

Erin A. Nash
Bayonet staff

The Historic Columbus Foundation, Inc. will host the 36th annual Riverfest, along the banks of the Chattahoochee River, today through Sunday.

Gates open at 6 p.m. today.

Music is a large part of the Riverfest, and tonight local artist Keni Thomas will perform at 7 p.m. Following him is the country band Sugarland at 8 p.m., opening for country star Phil Vassar, performing at 9:30 p.m.

Saturday night hard-rock band Forced Entry will play at 8 p.m., followed by Smashmouth, playing on the main stage at 9:30 p.m.

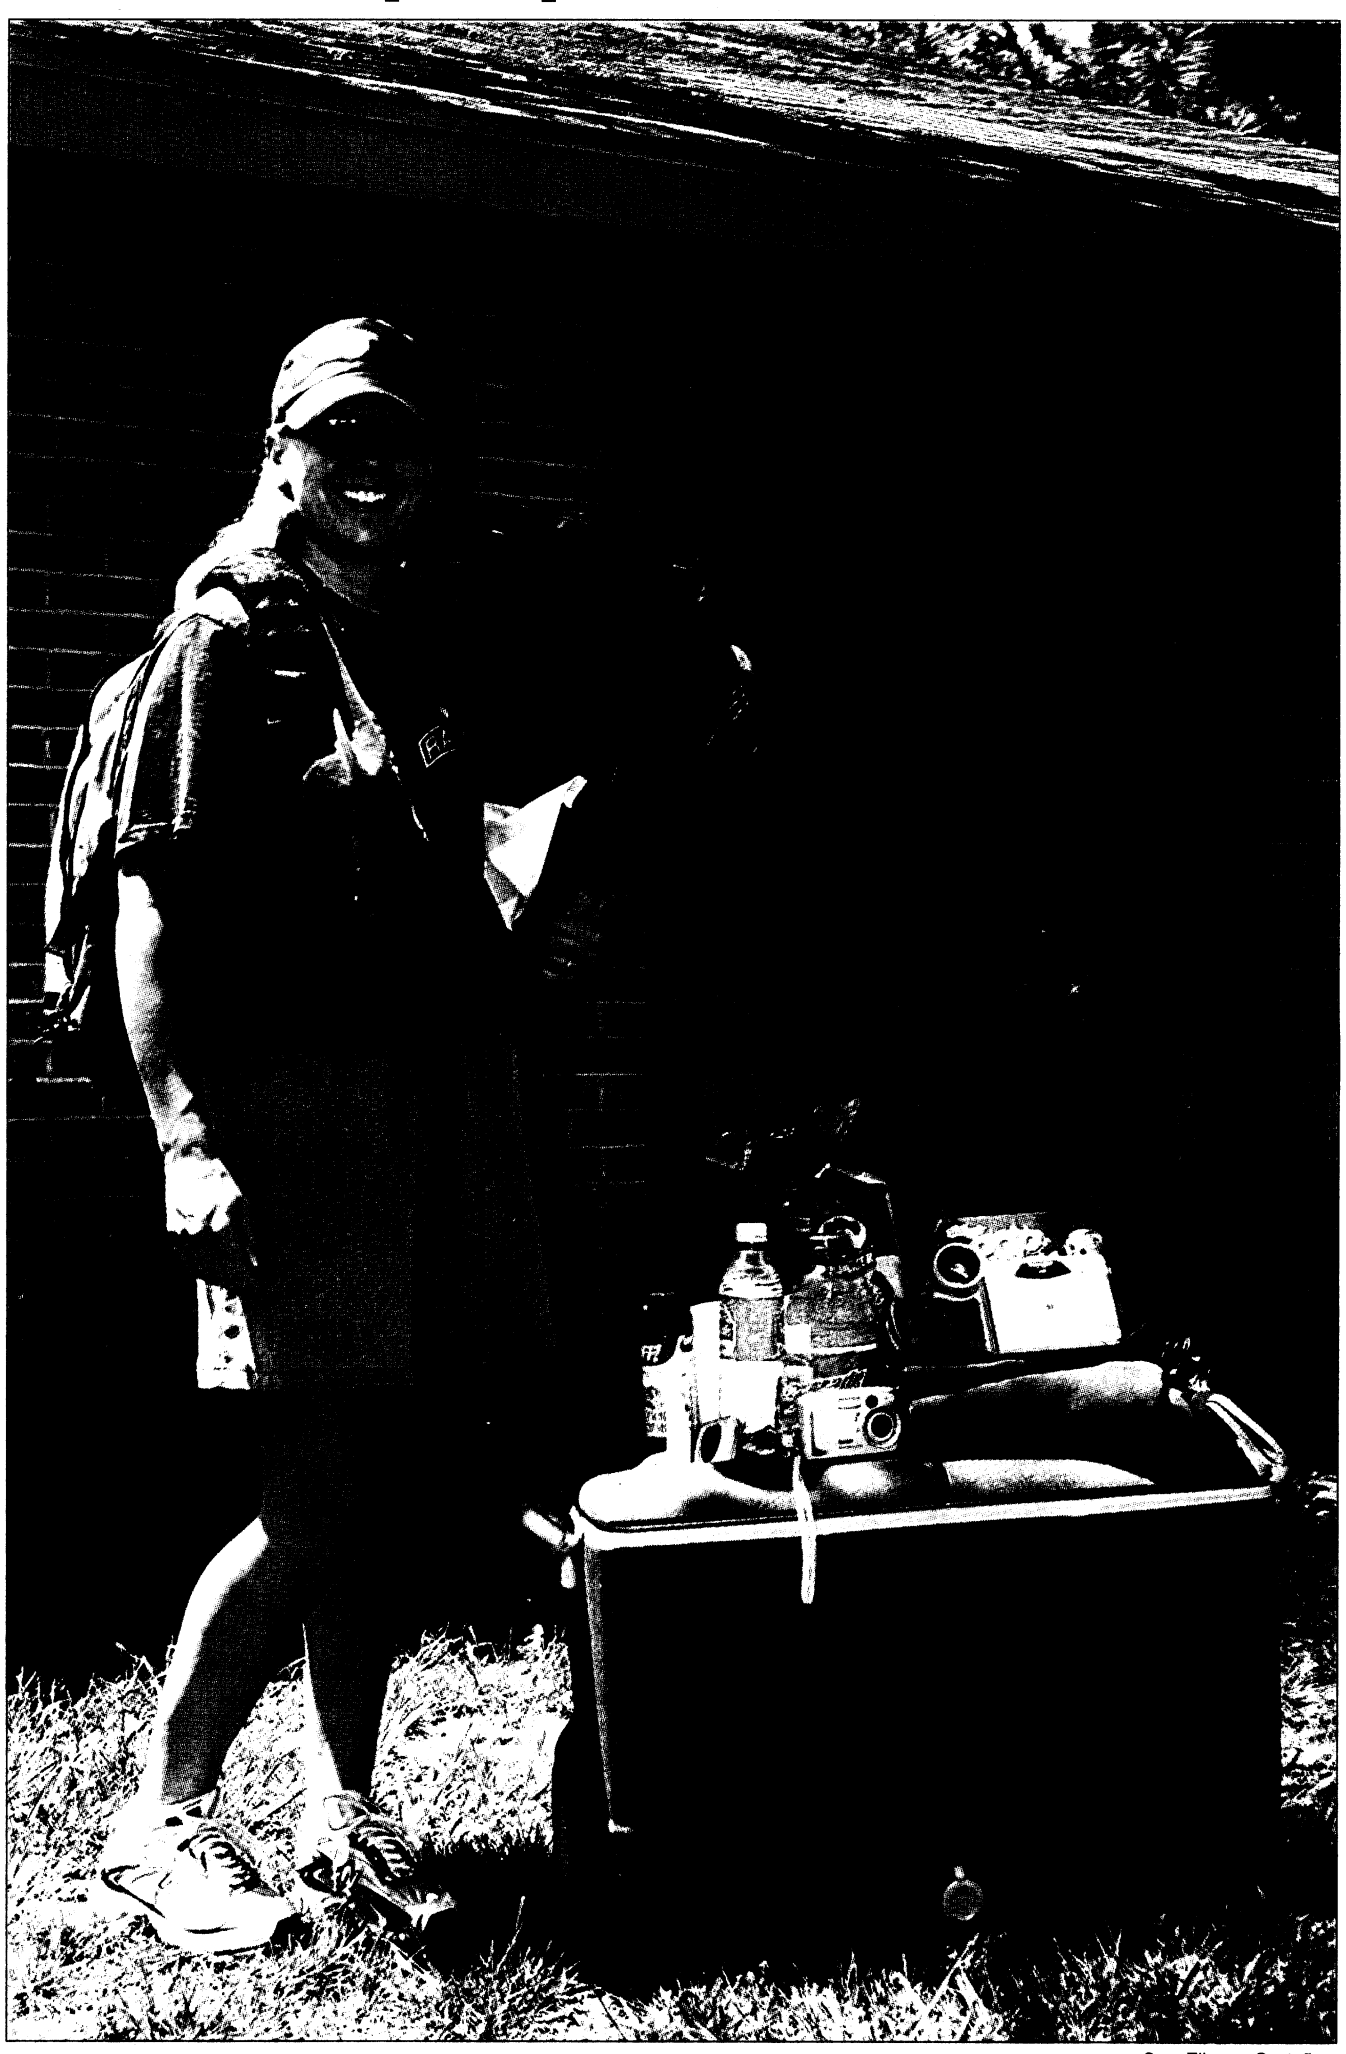
Saturday's festivities begin with the 8th annual 5K and one-mile fun run.

The one-mile fun run and walk begins at 8:30 a.m., followed by the 5K at 9 a.m. They start on the RiverWalk behind Golden Park.

For more information about the run, call Debbie Lipscomb at 322-0756.

Gates to Riverfest open at 10 a.m. Saturday. Local band Lakeside, who will perform on the food court stage at 4:55 p.m., will produce a DVD of Riverfest activities to be distributed to deployed Soldiers, featuring their performance and messages from families of Soldiers currently deployed.

Commanding General Brig. Gen. Benjamin Freakley will kick off the concert.



Family members of deployed Soldiers can get a pass to Riverfest daytime activities Saturday.

Passes are available between 10 a.m. and 5 p.m. at the AUSA ticket booth near the Gate 5 entrance with a military dependent ID card.

Riverfest returns with many favorites, including the Salisbury Fair, Folklife Village, Native American Primitive

How to prepare for Best Ranger

Spc. Eliamar Castañon

Erin Nash is ready for this year's Best Ranger Competition. She's packed water, snacks, an umbrella, a sweater, a digital camera, a video camera, sunblock, sunglasses, bug spray, comfortable shoes and clothing, and a chair.

Erin A. Nash
Bayonet staff

The Best Ranger Competition starts today, and the competitors are still pretty fresh. It will be a different story by Sunday afternoon, when muscles are weary and eyelids droop from lack of sleep.

The same could be said of the competitor's family and friends who will be taking in the events — this said by a voice of experience, who spent most of the weekend following my husband last year. He and his partner won, so luckily I can be a spectator this year.

But I did pick up some helpful hints for enjoying the weekend, without feeling like one of the competitors by the end.

• Hydrate. Last year was sunny and warm. I grabbed my cooler and stocked it with Gatorade and plenty of bottled water. I also threw in snacks (especially recommended if you're toting a little one along). I never drank so much water in my life, but it is necessary to stay hydrated.

• Sunscreen is a necessity, and a hat. Certain events, like Day Stakes at Todd Field, are all-day events in one area, so bring your own chair, and even an umbrella.

• Wear comfortable shoes. I spent the weekend in my running shoes — anything with a heel is going to hinder you. There is a lot of walking, especially if you're following a competitor from event to event, and terrain can be rough at times, especially the Darby Queen Obstacle Course. You'll save yourself a lot of precarious walking and be comfortable at the same time.

• Ask if you don't know. While we do offer maps in The Bayonet, driving around trying to find events can be confusing. Leave early — it's better to be early than miss something. If you get to an event, don't be afraid to ask someone if you're at the right place or where you should park. The Soldiers are there to help you. There are also assigned areas for media, so unless you have a media pass, don't try to park there.

• Speaking of media, if you're a family member, introduce yourself to the media. It's always fun to see yourself or your competitor on ESPN or in the local newspaper. Last year I was interviewed by several TV stations and print media. It was fun, and these people are just doing their job, so

Shares method for dealing with deployments

Melissa House
Bayonet staff

Tammy Logan's an Army brat. Growing up during the Cold War, she never had to cope with deployments. But now, as an Army wife, she's a veteran of five deployments in nine years of marriage.

Her husband, Jim, currently deployed to Kuwait with the 233rd HET, should be coming home soon. She and their 8-year-old son, Toby, weathered this deployment just like they did last year during Operation Iraqi Freedom 2 and OIF 1 in 2003 — making a chain of love.

And the story of the chain of love was recently released in Chicken Soup for the Military Wife's Soul, in a chapter called "I Miss You So."

Logan visited www.militarysoul.org, the Military Soul project site, after hearing about it at a family readiness group meeting. The authors were looking for stories to pay tribute to military spouses, particularly wives.

"I read the requirements and said 'why not?'" Logan said. But when she sat down to write, the words just didn't flow. It wasn't until she had a redeployment window for July 2003, that she said everything came together.

"I just wrote," she said, "but I didn't want to talk about life as a military wife." So she called her family and asked them for ideas.

The result is Logan's story about the construction paper chain she and Toby create every time Jim deploys. They make one chain each day he is gone. On one side they write the date and on the other, how they felt that day. The chain begins and ends at the front door, the door Jim walked out of and the door he'll come home through.

"It's not just a simple chain," Logan said. "It's messages."

Logan

Logan received an e-mail saying her story had been selected as one of the top 140, and was asked to be one of 40 who screened the stories for final selection. She did, and was a bit nervous when she read a few other chain stories. Only the top 101 would make the book.

Logan said they rated the stories according to certain factors — did it give you goose bumps or make you cry? — and waited for the final outcome.

"Some of the stories are heart wrenching," she said. "There are stories from Vietnam. And chapter eight — it's the worst chapter." The chapter is titled "An Officer at the Door."

Logan didn't tell Toby she had written the story until it made the top 140.

"He was so excited," she said. "He said 'my chain, my chain.' He was excited because other kids could do what he did and it could help them. And Toby's the one who keeps me going"

Though Logan said initial reviews describe the book as heartwarming and helpful, she doesn't plan to write

ASK THE JUDGE

Anthony R. Tempesta
Office of the Staff Judge Advocate

Q: Will divorce affect my taxes?

A: Divorce can have a tremendous impact on a Soldier's taxes.

For income tax purposes, marital status is considered only as of Dec. 31. So, if you are married January through November, then divorce in December, you cannot claim a married filing status for that year even though you were married for almost the whole year.

The opposite is also true, so that if you are single for almost the whole year then marry in December, you cannot file as a single taxpayer for that year, and must use a married filing status.

Deductions for dependents are also affected by divorce. When a husband and wife with a child split, only one of them can claim the child as a dependent. Normally the right to claim the child as a dependent will be addressed in the parties' divorce decree, and it is not automatic that the parent paying child support can claim the child as a dependent. Also, contrary to popular belief, child support payments are not deductible.

Considering the change in filing status and number of dependents, a divorce can have a significant effect on a Soldier's taxes. If, for example, a Soldier's pay is withheld all year long as married with four dependents, but due to a divorce he files as single and claims only himself, he could end up owing hundreds of dollars in taxes.

Soldiers facing divorce should consider to adjust their tax withholding, (using IRS Form W-4) to minimize the effect on their taxes. It is usually easier to take home a little less each month than to write a big check on April 15.

For more information, call the Office of the Staff Judge Advocate at 545-3281 or 545-3282.

CHILD ABUSE PREVENTION

Never OK to shake baby

Rebecca S. Welch
Family Advocacy Program

Shaken baby syndrome describes the serious injuries that can occur when a young child is severely or violently shaken.

Young children, especially babies, have very weak neck muscles and do not yet have full support of their heavy heads.

When they are shaken, their fragile brains move back and forth within their skulls. This can cause serious injuries such as:

- Blindness or eye damage
- Delay in normal development
- Seizures
- Damage to the spinal cord (paralysis)
- Death

Shaken baby syndrome usually occurs when a parent or other caregiver shakes a baby because of anger or frustration, often because the baby would not stop crying.

Although shaken baby syndrome is a serious form of child abuse, many parents are unaware of the injuries that shaking can cause. Remember, it is never OK to shake a baby.

If you or someone else shakes your baby, the most important step is to get medical care right away. Immediately, take your child to the pediatrician or emergency room. Don't let embarrassment, guilt, or fear get in the way of your child's health or life.

If your baby's brain is damaged or bleeding inside from severe shaking, it will only get worse without treatment. Getting medical care right away may save your child's life and prevent serious health problems from developing.

Be sure to tell your pediatrician or other doctor if you know or suspect that your child was shaken. A doctor who is not aware that a child has been shaken may assume the baby is vomiting or having trouble breathing because of an illness.

Mild symptoms of shaken baby syndrome are very much like those of infant colic, feeding problems, and fussiness. Your pediatrician should have complete information so he or she can treat your child properly.

When your child cries, take a break — don't shake

Taking care of an infant can be challenging, especially when an end to the crying seems nowhere in sight.

If you have tried to calm your crying child but nothing seems to work, it's important to stay in control of your temper.

Remember, it's never OK to shake, throw, or hit your child.

If you feel as though you could lose control:

- Take a deep breath and count to 10.
- Take time out and let your baby cry alone.
- Call someone close to you for emotional support.
- Call your pediatrician. There may be a medical reason why your child is crying.

For more information on child abuse prevention, call 545-7517.

Tips: To enjoy Best Ranger 2005

smile and tell the media how great your Ranger is and how proud you are of them.

• Me and my then 4-year-old son went to almost every event last year. This was pretty rigorous for him, and he often got bored waiting to see dad at the next event. Bring lots of toys and games (I had my son doing math workbooks) to keep them busy. Also, keep track of your kids. The Ranger instructors who are trying to make sure the competition goes smoothly don't need to be keeping an eye on your kid.

• Let your Ranger come to you. It's tempting to want to talk to your Ranger whenever you see them, to see how they are holding up. But a bit of advice: Let them come to you. I figured this out toward the end of the first day, when my normally upbeat husband was cranky and tired. When he had time he would walk over to the the yellow tape and we would go over and talk to him. Also realize they are focused solely on the competition, usually the next event.

Keep things light, tell him you love him and that he's doing great. Don't ask him why he didn't do the dishes the day before or the dog ate another Lego set and needs his stomach pumped.

If your Ranger buddy is competing, cheer them on — loudly.

The guys love the encouragement.

I cheered for all the teams, because the guys competing have a whole lot of guts, and I had a lot of respect for all of them. Clap hard, yell loud and be nice! Enjoy your weekend taking in the Best Ranger Competition. It's a great time, so have fun and watch these great guys do amazing things.

Videos: Help families stay in touch

Donovan Library, located inside of Infantry Hall, will also get a Video Messenger since there are many Soldiers attending classes at Infantry Hall.

One of those Soldiers is 2nd Lt. Brian Archer, an Infantry Officer Basic Course student who has been there since January. He expects to be away even more once he completes school at Fort Benning. Being away from his family is hard for Archer, but he said it's even harder for his 5-year-old son.

"It's harder for him, because we don't get to have any interaction," Archer said. "This system will allow him to get to see me while I'm away. It's a good system, and it's good to have it available here."

Archer said once he gets to a unit he would love to get a hold of a Video Messenger and give his Soldiers an opportunity to send videos back home while they are down range.

To make a video and send it home, a Video Messenger is set up in a study cubicle at Sayers Library. There are plenty of children books for Soldiers to read while making a video recording.

Floyd said they have a limited amount of tapes so Soldiers are welcome to bring their own. There are no appointments necessary.

For more information, call 545-2527.

THE ARMY CELEBRATES EARTH DAY 2005

Earth Day is an international celebration of events demonstrating support for environmental stewardship. The first Earth Day was celebrated on April 22, 1970. That first Earth Day was supported by more than 20 million Americans with the desire to become involved in environmental activities. The Earth Day event marked the beginning of the modern environmental movement, including the first major pieces of environmental legislation: the Clean Air Act and Clean Water Act. This year marks the 35th Anniversary of Earth Day. The Army's theme for Earth Day 2005 is "Sustaining the Environment for a Secure Future."

The 2005 Earth Day Message from the Secretary of the Army states that the Army's theme reflects the Army's commitment to meet current and future needs of Soldiers, their families, and the Nation through sound stewardship of environmental resources. The 2005 Earth Day Message stresses the importance of everyone doing their part to successfully conserve our environmental resources.

Fort Benning's Environmental Management Division has a display in Infantry Hall showcasing key Army environmental accomplishments. Also, environmental specialists are visiting the DOD schools to promote environmental stewardship through recycling and reuse.

Get taste of India at Mayuri

Delicious dishes make Mayuri great

Annette Fournier
USAIC Public Affairs

If you have never had a mango lassi from Mayuri Indian Cuisine in Columbus, you are truly missing out.

At Mayuri, there is something for everyone on the menu and large buffet, which is continuously refilled with fresh, hot platters. The restaurant has dishes from south and north India, giving customers a chance to experience the richness and diversity of authentic Indian cuisine.

Mayuri's food is excellent, and definitely worth trying. The dishes are very flavorful, with rich and spicy sauces. There are also many mild sauces and chutneys. The portions are generous, the prices reasonable, all in a pleasant atmosphere.

Everyday Mayuri has a diverse selection of dishes in the buffet. Dishes made with chicken, lamb, goat, and seafood simmer in sumptuous sauces or are slow-baked in a tandoori oven.

The buffet also has several vegetarian dishes, with main ingredients like paneer, lentils, okra, eggplant, spinach and chick peas. The buffet includes rice, soups, breads like nan and papadam, several types of chutney and pickles, desserts, ice cream and freshly sliced fruit and vegetables.

Rami and Vijaya Reddy, from Andhra Pradesh, India, opened Mayuri in October. While they are both natives of southern India, the Reddys have traveled extensively, and offer food from six regions of India.

The Reddys named the restaurant Mayuri after the national bird of India, the peacock. Revered for it's beauty and spiritual significance, the peacock lives wild in India, and is the symbol of the Hindu god Krishna.

The Reddys felt the native bird was an ideal symbol to represent their business because of its importance in India. For the Reddys, starting Mayuri was more than a way to make money, it's a way to introduce authentic Indian culture and food to Columbus.

To keep their cuisine authentic, the owners make frequent trips to Atlanta for fresh fruits, vegetables and Indian spices, because they are unable to buy them in Columbus. And all those fresh ingredients pay off in flavorful dishes.

"It's really important to us to make every dish with the authentic spices," Vijaya said. "If you miss one spice, it's not right, and it messes up the flavor. We want people to be able to really experience what India has to offer."

Mayuri is a must-try for both those who love Indian food, or those who would like to try something new.

The family owned and operated restaurant offers a military discount of 15 percent off dinner and $1 off the lunch buffet. Mayuri is open seven days a week for lunch and dinner, and they have carry-out,and do banquets and catering.

again. The third-grade teacher at White Elementary School said she uses her experience as a teaching point for her students.

"It's a good opportunity to try to get my students to write," she said. "I tell them I'm an example of how an everyday person can be published — that they can write about anything whenever they want."

Here, two Fort Benning residents share their favorite chicken soup recipes, and the commanding general's enlisted aide shares a great appetizer to go with them. Enjoy.

Chicken Soup Stock and Soup - Natalie Webb, Australia

2 4-pound roasting chickens
2 large yellow onions, unpeeled and quartered
3 carrots, unpeeled, halved
2 celery stalks with leaves, cut in thirds
2 parsnips, cut in half
10 sprigs fresh parsley
8 sprig fresh thyme
10 sprigs fresh dill
1/2 head garlic, unpeeled, cut in half crosswise
1 Tbsp Kosher salt
1 tsp whole peppercorns

Place ingredients in an 8-10 quart stock pot. Add 31/2 quarts of water. Bring to a boil, then simmer, uncovered for one hour. Remove chickens, let cool and remove meat. Set meat aside and return carcasses to the pot and simmer 3 more hours. Strain contents and chill. Remove surface fat. The stock can be frozen to use later. To make soup, return stock to the pot and reheat, adding 2 cups diced carrots, 2 cups diced celery and 1/8 cup minced fresh parsley. Shred the reserved chicken meat into large pieces and add to stock. Simmer 5 minutes to cook veggies and heat chicken. Season to taste and serve.

Chicken Corn Soup - Kay Cocklin, 35-year Army spouse

4 cooked chicken breasts
4 cans chicken broth
3 cans water
1-2 packages frozen corn
1 stick butter or margarine
1 small onion, optional
salt and pepper to taste

Heat broth and water. Melt butter in a small frying pan, then saute onions until caramelized. Add onion, corn and seasonings to the broth. Cook until corn is soft. Add cubed chicken and heat thoroughly.

Cheese Straws - Sgt. 1st Class Roy Richard

1 pound shredded sharp cheddar cheese
1 1/2 cups flour
1 cup softened butter
1 tsp salt
1/4 tsp red pepper

Preheat oven to 375. Blend cheese in food processor until it forms a ball. Let rest 30 min. Add remaining ingredients and blend for 30 sec. Press through a cookie press using a star form. Bake 8-10 min.

Celebrate prayer

Chaplain (Capt.) David K. Beavers
29th Infantry Regiment

On May 5, Americans of all faiths will celebrate the 2005 National Day of Prayer. Alluded to by the Continental Congress and made law in 1952, this event sets aside a day in which the nation's focus turns to God.

As noted by the National Day of Prayer Task Force, "It enables us to recall and to teach the way in which our founding fathers sought the wisdom of God when faced with critical decisions. As we join in this national event, it is important for us to reflect on what it means for a nation to be at prayer.

The first act of being a nation in prayer is evidenced by a focus on God instead of a focus on the secular or the self. As we gather with millions of people across the nation, we are not in prayer for our own particular wants or needs, but are seeking the guidance of the almighty for our national leaders.

We are not praying that they listen to our particular opinions or ideas; rather, that they turn to God whose wisdom surpasses understanding for direction as they make decisions affecting the entire world.

This fact brings about the second point of being a nation in prayer; this is a day of unity. We come together despite different interpretations of scripture, political backgrounds or regional divisions for the betterment of our country. The National Day of Prayer is a day that brings us all together as we seek the guidance of God.

It is in turning to God and uniting as one that leads to the understanding of the active role involved with prayer. As we pray for our leaders, we are called to do more than offer up eloquent phrases to God. We are challenged to follow through.

The story is told of a man who lived many years ago. He was very affluent and living life to the fullest. As he was preparing for a dinner party he was hosting, he was horrified to learn that he had forgotten to get enough ice.

He quickly walked to the corner store to pick some up and was on his way home when he noticed a little girl begging for money or food. She was in tattered clothes and looked as though she had not bathed in several days.

The man just shook his head at a society that could allow such things to happen to innocent children. He was so distressed by this scene, that he could not enjoy his own party.

Finally, much later, as he was cleaning up from his party, he turned to God in prayer and asked directly why God wouldn't do something for this little girl. It was then he was faced with a blinding light. The man fell to his knees as he looked in awe at the sight before him. It was then that God spoke in response to the man's question, "I did do something for the little girl. I created you."

With prayer comes our asking and our imploring, but also our call to action. We gather together to pray, yes, but also to work to make our nation a better place.

We unite to help our leaders and to help each other, and to follow the leading of our Lord, not just on the first Thursday in May, but everyday.

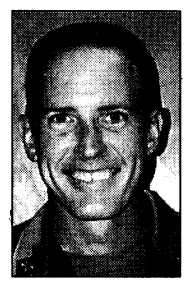
Take hike with life review retreat

Chaplain (Maj.) Jeffrey D. Hawkins
Chaplain Family Life Center

REFLECTIONS

"Go take a hike!" That's what my sister, seven years older than I, used to tell me when I'd catch her and her boyfriend making out.



Now, I'm presuming that you're not making out right now, or else you'd have better things to do than be reading this column ... but I'm going to tell you to "go take a hike" anyway!

And when you go on that hike, I want you to take along a couple of key tools: a notebook, a pen, anything that helps you connect with God (music, Bible, devotional book, etc.) and some Post-it notes. You're going to take a Life Review Retreat.

A what, you say? Yup. A Life Review Retreat. In Special Forces when you are alerted for a mission, you go into a phase called "isolation phase."

You're literally cut off from the world and the news around you, and you give your exclusive attention and focus around the clock from several days to several weeks to nothing but visualizing the mission ahead and how best to achieve it.

Well, that's a lot like you're going to be doing on your Life Review Retreat. You want to "isolate" yourself from the hustle and bustle of the world around you for a few hours (if you can somehow, some way work out an overnighter that's even better) and give your exclusive attention and focus to visualizing your life mission and how best to achieve it.

Hawkins

There are lots of things you could do on a Life Review Retreat, but here are some suggested areas you might want to take a look at to ensure "mission success."

First, you might try scaling yourself on the six C's of life success (1=not so hot; 10=I'm doing great). How connected am I to God? How committed am I to be all he has made me to be? How compassionate is my heart toward giving to others? How much am I in community with others? How well am I allowing myself to be coached by a mentor? How well developed of a compass (a Life Review Planner) do I have?

These are the foundation stones for developing a life well-lived. They've got to be in place to build a strong house on top of them.

Next, you might want to ask yourself, "What's the one thing I want to get out of my Life Review Retreat?" and "If I could ask only one thing of this time, what would it be?"

Million-selling author of The Purpose Driven Life, Rick Warren, talks about discovering your "shape" (who God made you to be). Your shape has an impact not on just the way you can serve God in his world and in his church, i.e., your spiritual life, but it also impacts your personal life, your vocational life and your relational life.

If you don't understand your shape, then it's likely that you'll feel frustration, fatigue and fear in what you're trying to do. If you do understand your shape, then the benefits are focus, fulfillment and fruitfulness.

Which would you like for the rest of your life?

Interested? Want to learn more about a Life Review Retreat, or get a coach to walk you through the experience?

Let the Chaplain Family Life Center help you by calling 545-1760. Or, I'd be delighted if you introduced yourself to me at CrossRoads Contemporary Chapel at 11 a.m. Sundays. CrossRoads is on Kelley Hill and it's a postwide service for everyone. I look forward to meeting you.

"Lord, if I come through this, please let the experience contribute to my brother's blessing."

R & R

Can't compete in this year's Best Ranger Competition? No problem, there's another title up for grabs. On August 28, 2004, (then) Officer Candidate Daniel Robbins ate four Ranger Burgers in 11 minutes and 56 seconds, beating the previous champ by two seconds. Think you're up for the challenge? They're flipping burgers at The Four Winds all weekend long. If you claim the title, be sure to send us a photo at fbbayonet@mindspring.com.

It's time to thank Mom for dinner

Bridgett Siter
Bayonet staff

The Best Ranger Competition is like homecoming around here, minus dinner on the ground. For that, you'll have to drop by the Four Winds Restaurant on Highway 26, about halfway between Camp Rogers and Camp Darby.

Four Winds is known for its Ranger Burger. In fact, the restaurant itself is best known as "the Ranger Burger." I've often wondered why the owners don't make the name change official. Ask a Ranger for directions to Four Winds, and he'll scratch his head. Ask him for directions to the Ranger Burger, and he'll give you grid coordinates.

Donald and Susan Cox bought the restaurant in 1979, and they inherited the name. Susan, who absolutely did not want the business to start with, agreed to run the place until Donald retired from the Army in 1980. It took him two days to decide he wasn't cut out for it, and Susan's been running it ever since.

She does a mighty fine job of it, I might add. From the beginning, she recognized the value of her camouflaged clientele — the Soldiers and hunters who frequent the place — and their typically voracious appetites.

She "played with the menu" — that's what she called it — until she created a sandwich to appease a monster appetite and please a palate weary of MREs. The result: a pound of beef sandwiched between sesame seeds with cheese, bacon and the works.

When Susan was satisfied she'd created a sandwich Rangers would be proud of, she asked the Ranger Training Brigade commander for permission to name it the Ranger Burger.

"He said we could do it as long as we kept up the standard," Susan said. "I've been doing my utmost to keep up the standard ever since."

The Ranger Burger, introduced 20 years ago, quickly caught on, and consuming one became a rite of passage for Ranger School graduates.

"When they get that little tab, they come out here," Susan said. "It's like an initiation."

Not to be outdone, pathfinders, snipers and gunners came looking for a burger to call their own. Now, the Four Winds menu reads like a Who's Who among hooah.

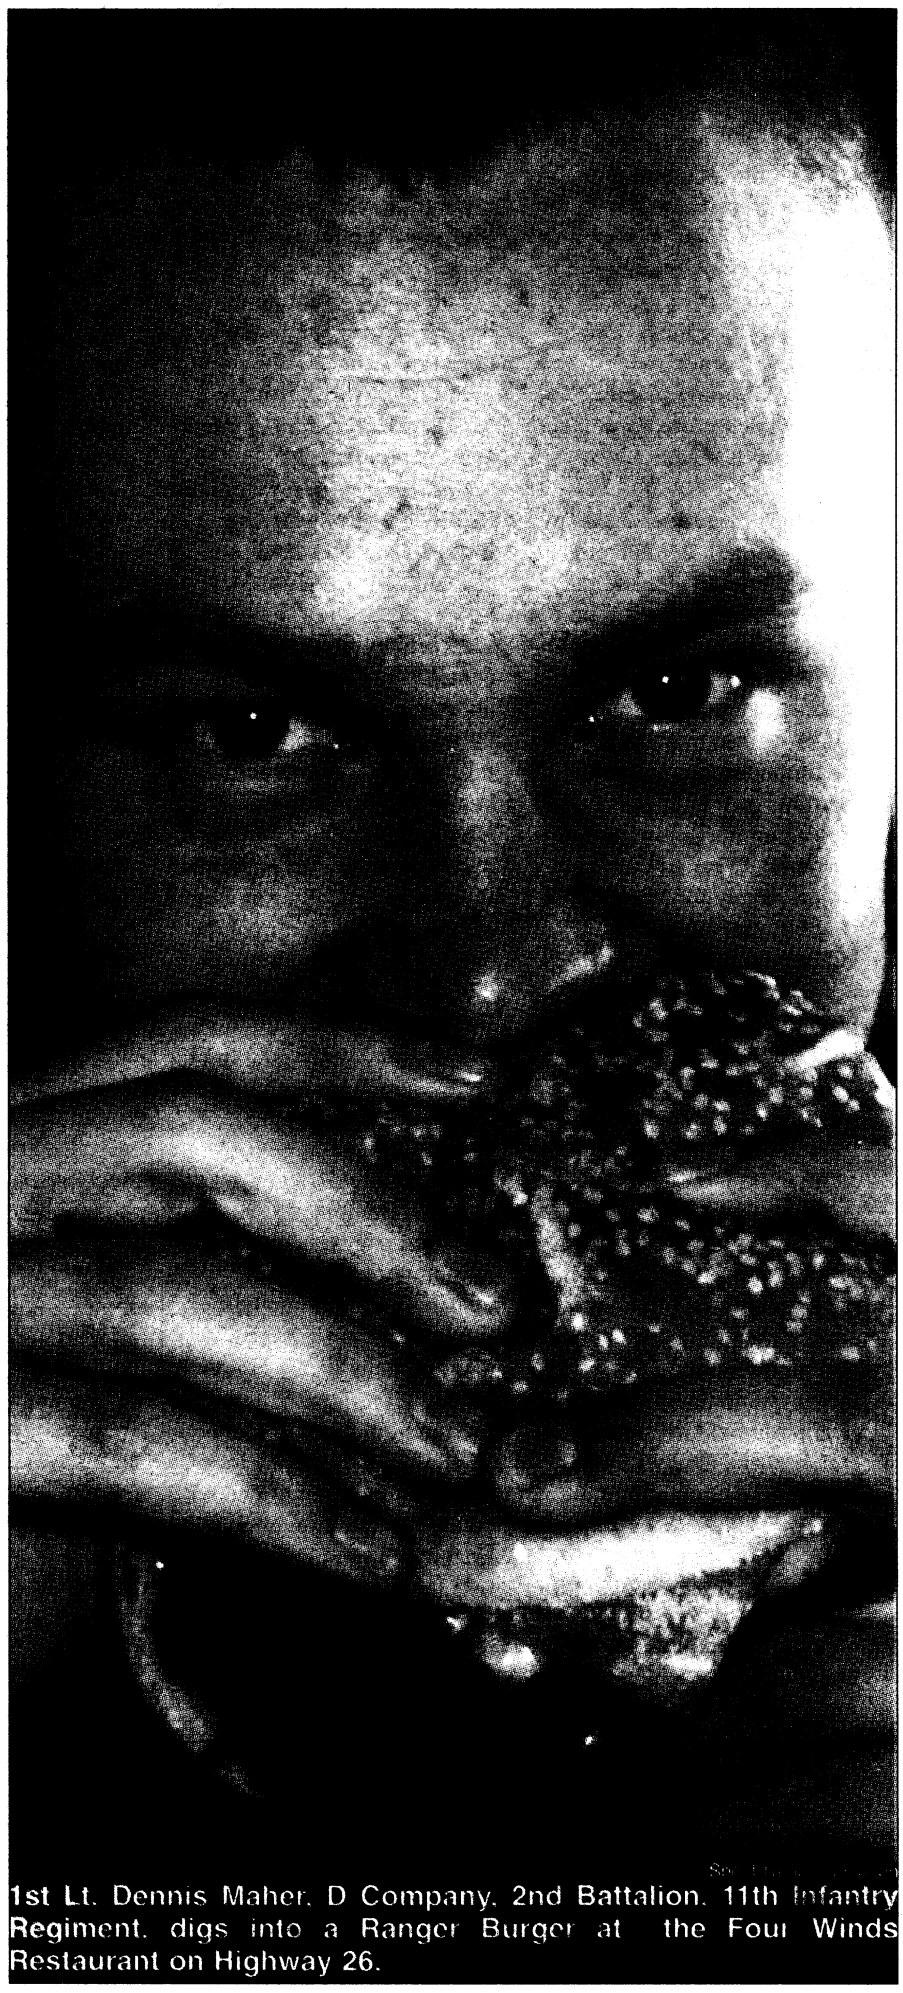
All told, there are eight sandwiches dedicated to Soldiers, twice that many if you count the junior portion option. But what self-respecting Soldier would order a Combat Burger lite?

Susan used to open her restaurant at odd hours to accommodate the Rangers' training schedule. They've been known to road march in, and she's been known to make a batch of burgers and cart them out to the woods for those who couldn't leave their station. Those who've been around a few years call her Mom.

These days, Susan stays a little closer to home, with good reason. Donald was badly injured during what was apparently a robbery attempt a few years back. He's still recuperating. Susan continues to nurse him along while keeping the burgers flipping at the Four Winds. Some days are harder than others, she said, but she keeps her focus on good service and good food.

"When I was a kid, we were so poor we never went out to eat," she said. "When I was eight, I told my mom I was going to have a restaurant some day where people could afford to eat and they'd get their money's worth. That's what I try to do. I don't want anybody to go away hungry."

Fat chance, what with Four Winds' massive menu, which includes breakfast, lunch and dinner. Susan and her crew make salads, steak, fish, chicken, roast beef, pork chops and more. Lots more.



The appetizer menu includes fried pickles, and as a fried pickle connoisseur, I can assure you they're the best fried pickles within a 50 mile radius. But don't take my word for it.

The Four Winds is typically open Monday through Thursday from 6 a.m. until 9 p.m. and Friday and Saturday 6 a.m. until 10 p.m.

But Susan will have the grill up and running Sunday during the Best Ranger Competition. Be sure to stop by on your way to or from Camp Darby.

And, please, be sure to thank "Mom" for her dedication to Soldiers for 26 years.

Call ahead, if you'd like, to place your order, at 989-3401, or just drop in. Expect a crowd this weekend, but don't let that sway you. A Ranger Burger is worth the wait.

1st Lt. Dennis Maher, D Company, 2nd Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment, digs into a Ranger Burger at the Four Winds Restaurant on Highway 26.

The Interpreter — Nicole Kidman stars as African-born U.N. interpreter Silvia Broome, who inadvertently overhears a death threat against an African head of state scheduled to address the U.N.'s General Assembly.

Realizing she's become a target of the assassins as well, Silvia's desperate to thwart the plot — if only she can survive long enough to get someone to believe her.

Also starring Sean Penn and Catherine Keener.

The Interpreter is rated PG-13 for violence, sexual content and strong language.

King's Ransom — Anthony Anderson stars as Malcolm King, a wealthy and arrogant businessman whose ex-wife-to-be has plans to take him for everything he's worth in their divorce settlement.

Determined to avoid losing his fortune to her, Malcolm plans his own kidnapping with the help of his dim-witted mistress and her ex-con brother. Unfortunately for Malcolm, he is not the only one with a kidnapping plot.

Also starring Jay Mohr, Donald Faison, Regina King and Leila Arcieri.

King's Ransom is rated PG-13 for crude and sexual humor and language.

A Lot Like Love — This movie is a romantic comedy about destiny, connection and the frequent fuzzy line between chance friendships and happily ever after.

The movie traces the relationship of Oliver (Ashton Kutcher) and Emily (Amanda Peet) who met on a flight from Los Angeles to New York seven years ago — each of them declaring that they couldn't be more wrong for each other.

A Lot Like Love is rated PG-13 for sexual content, nudity and language.

The Amityville Horror — On Nov. 14, 1974, police received a frantic phone call that led them to a nightmarish crime scene at the Defeo residence in Amityville, Long Island — an entire family had been slaughtered in their beds.

In the days that followed, Ronald Defeo confessed to shooting his parents and four siblings while they slept, claiming "voices" drove him to commit the grisly murders.

One year later, George and Kathy Lutz and their three children moved into the house, thinking it would be their dream house.

Shortly after settling in, bizarre and unexplainable events began to occur.

The Amityville Horror is rated R for violence, disturbing images, language, brief sexuality and drug use.

Fever Pitch — This is a contemporary romantic comedy about a high school teacher (Jimmy Fallon) who meets and falls in love with a successful businesswoman (Drew Barrymore).

Although their lives are vastly different, the relationship seems perfect, until baseball season begins and she has to compete with his first true love: the Boston Red Sox.

Fever Pitch is rated PG-13 for crude and sexual humor and some sensuality.

Sahara — Master explorer Dirk Pitt (Matthew McConaughey) takes on the adventure of his life when he embarks on a treasure hunt through some of the most dangerous regions of North Africa.

Searching for what locals call "The Ship of Death," a long-lost Civil War battleship filled with coins, Pitt and his wisecracking sidekick (Steven Zahn) use their wits and clever heroics to help Dr. Eva Rojas (Penelope Cruz), who believes the ship may be linked to several mysterious deaths in the same area.

Sahara is rated PG-13 for action violence.

Beauty Shop — Gina Norris (Queen Latifah) is a long way from the Barbershop — now she's in Atlanta making a name for herself at a posh southern salon with her cutting-edge hairstyles.

But when her flamboyant, egotistical boss (Kevin Bacon) takes it one criticism too far, she leaves his salon to open a shop of her own, taking the shampoo girl (Alicia Silverstone) and a few key clients (Andie MacDowell, Mena Suvari) with her.

Gina buys a rundown salon and inherits an opinionated group of headstrong stylists (including Alfre Woodard), a colorful clientele and a sexy upstairs neighbor (Djimon Hounsou).

Beauty Shop is rated PG-13 for sexual material, language and brief drug references.

Sin City — Sin City is a violent city where the police department is as corrupt as the streets are deadly.

Marv (Mickey Rourke), a tough-as-nails and nearly impossible to kill street fighter, goes on a rampage of vengeance when a beautiful woman, Goldie (Jaime King), who he sleeps with once, is killed while lying in bed with him.

Also starring Bruce Willis, Benicio Del Toro, Clive Owen, Josh Hartnett and Brittany Murphy.

Sin City is rated R for sustained strong stylized violence, nudity and sexual content including dialogue.

Miss Congeniality 2: Armed and Fabulous — The story catches up with FBI agent Gracie Hart (Sandra Bullock) shortly after she has successfully disarmed a threat against the Miss United States Pageant while working undercover as a contestant in Miss Congeniality.

Having become a media celebrity following her heroic pageant exploits, Gracie has been spending more time lately at the salon, working the talk show circuit and promoting her book than at the shooting range.

When her friends are kidnapped in Las Vegas, Gracie's all-out efforts to jump back into action to save them puts her at odds with the FBI top brass, who don't want to risk losing their mascot and fear she might not be up to the job anymore.

Miss Congeniality 2: Armed and Fabulous is rated PG-13 for sex-related humor.

MEDDAC undefeated in tourney

Tawny Archibald Campbell

Marvin Tookes, BCTB, tries to steal the ball from Ross Seidel, MEDDAC, during tournament play Tuesday at Audie Murphy Fitness Center. MEDDAC went on to to win the game, 55-41.

A slow start can't stop a team determined to win, and MEDDAC wanted nothing more than to stomp out BCTB Tuesday at the Commander's Cup basketball tournament.

They got their wish. MEDDAC won, 55-41.

"We started off real slow, but after a review of our mistakes at the half, we came out and played hard defense," said Christopher Moffett of MEDDAC. "We controlled the offense and that controlled the tempo of the game."

In the first 12 minutes of the game, it looked like fans were in for an even matchup, but in the last few minutes of the half MEDDAC turned up the heat.

"Toward the end of the first half, the score started to open up, so we decided to try man-to-man defense," said BCTB coach Trenika Cullers.

That's when things got bad.

"Going man is an automatic green light for us to take over the game," Moffett said.

BCTB was down three points at the half, but six minutes later the deficit was at 10 points, and growing.

"The turning point came after the half when I hit a jumper right off the bat," Moffett said. "That was motivation for the whole team. We had some key steals and a lot of tough defense.

"Our defense was our offense tonight."

MEDDAC went on to gain a lead of 49-30, raking in eight unanswered points.

"This game was a challenge," Cullers said. "The other team hustled just as much as we did, but we didn't have enough support on the bench to give our team a break."

MEDDAC's still undefeated team in tournament play.

Boston Marathon results

The 109th running of the Boston Marathon was April 18. Men's winner was Ethiopian Hailu Negussie with a time of 2:11:45. Women's winner, Catherine Ndereba of Kenya, won her fourth Boston Marathon in 2:25:13.

Armstrong to hang up the yellow jersey

Lance Armstrong, 33, announced April 18 his decision to retire from cycling following the Tour de France in July.

Armstrong will be attempting to win his seventh straight Tour de France title.

MNF changes hands in 2006

Monday Night Football will begin broadcasting on ESPN in 2006. ESPN paid $1.1 billion for an eight-year contract. Sunday Night Football will move to NBC in a six-year, $600 million-a-year deal.

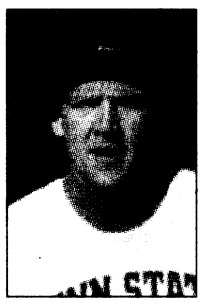
Red Sox fans pay

Chris House, a season-ticket holder at Fenway, lost his tickets after swinging on Yankee rightfielder Gary Sheffield last week. A fan who threw beer is not allowed to purchase tickets. Stop giving Sox fans a bad name!

Kahne, Biffle victorious

Kasey Kahne won the Busch Series race April 16, started third in the Nextel race and then his engine blew, dashing any hopes of a two-win weekend.

Greg Biffle won his second race of the season April 17 at the Samsung, Radio Shack 500 in Texas. He crashed his "fast" car in practice and used his back-up.



Soldier heads to world competition

Makes cut for global games in Switzerland

Tawny Archibald Campbell
Bayonet staff

A Fort Benning Soldier qualified for the World Duathlon Championships during a National Qualifier April 10 in Birmingham, Ala.

Sgt. 1st Class Shannon Swords will join three other qualifiers at the world competition in Switzerland Aug. 22.

Swords

The duathlon in Birmingham consisted of an 8K run, 55K bike and another 8K run. Swords completed the 44-mile course in 2:35:11.

It was his first duathlon competition.

"I've been training for triathlons and my run is strong and biking comes in second," Swords said. "So I figured I could tough the bike out enough to do the second run and get back in a fair time."

And that's what he did. Swords came in second in his age bracket, one second behind the first place winner.

"He's a great runner and he can be a great duathelete," said Mike Osier, a Fort Benning triathlete who convinced Swords to compete in Birmingham. "I knew he ran and he liked to bike as well. I thought this would be a competition of his caliber."

Osier said he thought Swords had a good chance of qualifying for the worlds, but Swords wasn't really sure.

"It was definitely an eye-opener for him," Osier said. "He realized he could run with the best guys and with a little focus he would race with the best."

At the duathlon, Swords raced professional athletes and passed several of them.

"They had the pros out there too, and I beat four of the pros," Swords said. "Once you beat the pros, you have a resume and you can get a pro card."

A pro card means special placement in races and can lead to sponsorship, which helps with pricey travel costs. But if an athlete goes professional, he loses his college eligibility. Swords still has four years of college eligibility, so he is debating whether or not he will get a pro

Red Rebels pull off softball tourney upset

Sweep loser's bracket after first round

The 608th Ordnance Company's Red Rebels pulled off a miraculous comeback in the Unit Level Softball Tournament April 15-17 at Knappenberger Field.

The Red Rebels lost their first game of the tournament, 20-4, then played virtually non-stop and fought through the losers bracket to win the tournament, said tournament organizer Ken Weatherill.

"My hat is off to this group of Soldiers," Weatherill said. "I've been around a lot of tournaments and have never seen a team pull that off before."

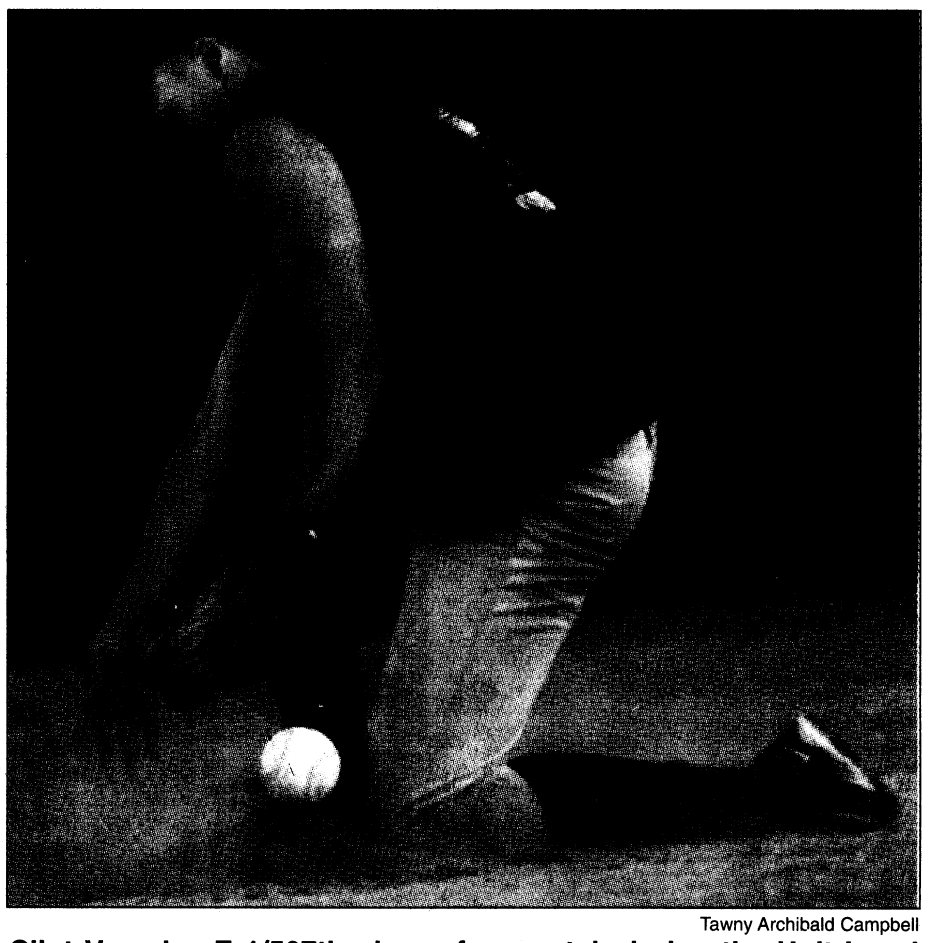
Gerardo Pulido, shortstop for the team, describes the first game as "an interesting beginning."

"The coach brought us together and told us to get our heads back in the game," Pulido said. "We played eight games and since we were in the losers bracket we had to win every game to make it into the championship game."

Brian Pettit, Red Rebel's coach, said the first game didn't go well because he didn't have his players in the right positions.

"We moved people around and it was smooth sailing," Pettit said. "Then we enjoyed all the wins, especially beating the Nuggets in the championships."

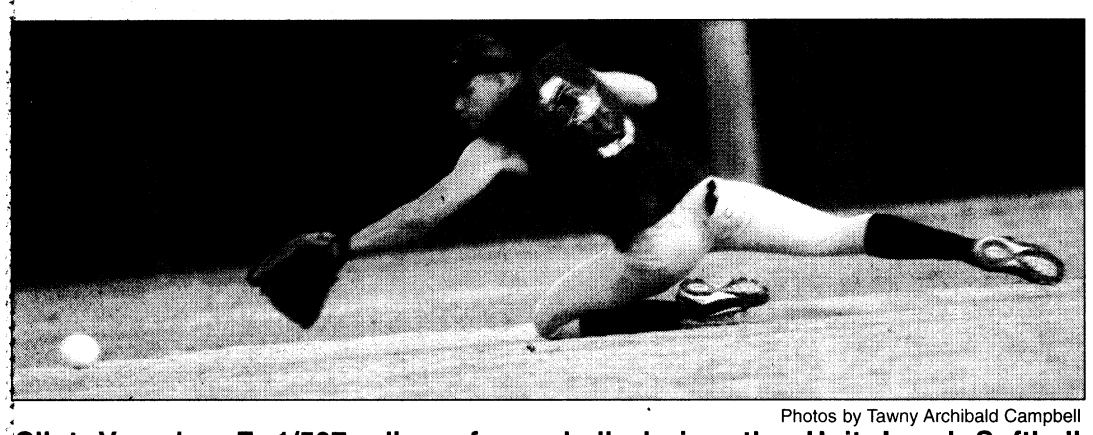
During the first game of the championship, against the Nuggets, the Red Rebels won with a score of 15-3. Because it was double elimination, they had to play a second game.



"The score was close," said Pettit. "We were down 8-2 in the second game and came back to beat them 15-12."

The three-day softball tournament hosted 11 teams from across Fort Benning for a total of 21 games.

"We're here for the love of the sport," said Richard Fuller, of the 30th AG team. "It's been a fun tournament and worth our time to come out."



"It's about us chasing our childhood dreams," said teammate Frankie Patterson. "We can't play hardball anymore, so we come out here and play softball."

The spring tournament is a way to get teams trained and ready for league play, which is set to start in May, said Fred Woods, with DMWR sports.

"It is one of those things where if we don't have it, the teams won't be ready for league play," Woods said.

The overall tournament MVP award went to the Red Rebel's Jason Smalls, who hit two crucial home runs during the championship.

The Golden Glove award went to Smalls' teammate Jeremy Rodriguez, who had only two errors in eight games.

Duathlon: New challenge card before worlds.

But even without a pro card, he will have to train as a professional athlete. At the World Championships, the course will be much longer — a 10K,150K bike and a 30K run. That takes the race from 44 miles to 116.2 miles.

"Basically I have to up my mileage," Swords said. "I'll need to triple my mileage on the bike and ride 250 miles a week. I'll up my run miles to 80 miles a week."

But don't think training for the duathlon is all he's doing. He is also training for triathlons, and he'll be running in the Army 10-Miler qualifications.

2005 Mountain Ranger Run, Mountain Bike Race & Duathlon
To Benefit Local Charities
07 May 2005

RUN & SEE GEORGIA Since 1989

The 9th Annual Mountain Ranger Run Association offers the most challenging and scenic cross-country/trail course that the North Georgia Mountains can provide. This race will be held in conjunction with the 5th Ranger Training Battalion's Open House. The Open House will highlight US Army Ranger combat techniques, military mountaineering, hand-to-hand combat, and static displays.

5K/15K Mountain Ranger Run
Both races start at Camp Frank D. Merrill and wind through the Chattahoochee National Forest in a hilly loop along non-paved Forest Service roads & trails. Come up early and run the morning away.

34K Mountain Ranger Bike Race
For the somewhat more adventurous crowd, this course is 34K in length. The course is challenging enough for advanced riders yet forgiving enough for beginners.

15K Ranger Team Challenge
If your organization, club, or business can get a team together to tackle this course; enter our Ranger Team Challenge. Each team must consist of 6 members. Your team must stay together throughout the 15K course. The team entry fee is $100 per team and team registrations must be mailed in together.

Mountain Ranger Duathlon
New this year, a duathlon to include the 5K run/34K bike/2 Mile run

Chief of Staff says Rangers set standard

Bridgett Siter

"I'm proud of you," the Chief of Staff of the Army told the Rangers who completed the 22nd annual Best Ranger Competition.

Gen. Peter J. Schoomaker spoke at the Best Ranger awards ceremony Monday at the Ranger Memorial. He presented the winners, Capt. Corbett McCallum and Sgt. 1st Class Gerald Nelson, the Order of Saint Maurice and Colt .45 pistols.

He lauded the teams who participated in the three-day, 60-hour Best Ranger Competition for their willingness to accept the challenge. Of the 23 teams that started the competition Friday morning, only 11 crossed the finish line Sunday afternoon.

Every year, Schoomaker said, the Best Ranger Competition gets better.

"And this one was no different. It sounds like some pretty tough stuff.

"Now that so many of you finished, we ought to raise the bar just a little bit more," he said. The crowd laughed and the competitors groaned.

Schoomaker arrived at Fort Benning fresh from a reunion, of sorts, of Soldiers involved in the attempted rescue of American hostages in Iran 25 years ago.

"That was one of the lowest points in my life — failing to rescue those fifty-three Americans," Schoomaker said. "It's a wonderful bookend to come here from there."

Army chief visits Fort Benning

Schoomaker talks about retention

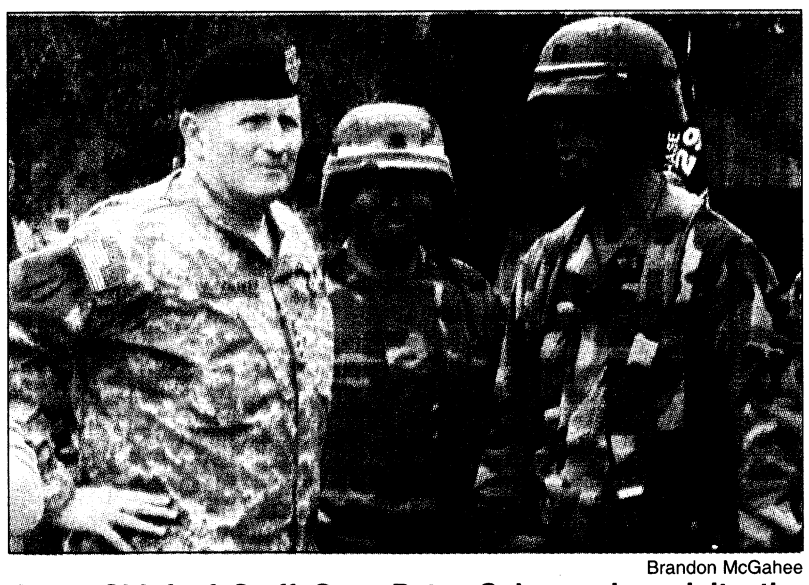
Spc. Nikki St. Amant
Bayonet staff

Chief of Staff of the Army Gen. Peter Schoomaker visited the installation April 25 to speak at the 2005 David E. Grange Best Ranger Competition award ceremony, but spoke with media briefly on topics like the Global War on Terrorism, BRAC (base realignment and closure) and retention.

Schoomaker said great progress has been made in Iraq, evidenced by the January democratic elections.

"We had those elections because there were boots on the ground," he said. "The political process is now moving ahead."

"The youth of this country are stepping up, and, quite frankly, that's what keeps me going."



Despite the challenge of a two-front war, the state and future of the Infantry is solid, according to the Army's highest ranking officer. But he voiced concerns on the readiness of the military for conflicts worldwide.

"Historically, we have entered unprepared into conflicts," he said. "We must always be ready."

He said Army Reserve and National Guard retention shortfalls are occurring because, generally, more Soldiers are remaining on active duty. He said the Army has raised the bar for initial recruits but is meeting and exceeding its goals.

Schoomaker declined to delve into the details of the upcoming BRAC decision, but said it is continuing.

"When it's all said and done, people will see it is a good idea," he said."

Given the option to revisit Ranger School or combat, Bill Mixon would likely choose the latter.

"The Ranger course was tougher," said Mixon, who retired as a command sergeant major in 1983, with two combat tours in Vietnam and more than 1,500 parachute jumps.

"I got more sleep in combat than Ranger School," he said. "The Ranger course is the equivalent of three combat missions. The only difference was they weren't firing live ammo at us. I think."

Mixon and eight of his comrades reminisced about their days with the Ranger Training Brigade or its predecessor, the Ranger Department, April 21 during the annual Distinguished Member of the Brigade Induction Ceremony at Pruden Hall.

"These are legendary Rangers," said Col. K.K. Chinn, RTB commander. "We have such a proud history because of these gentlemen."

BEST RANGER

BRC brings out the best

Bridgett Siter
Bayonet staff

I met a few heroes last weekend at the Best Ranger Competition. Not the competitors. They're all great guys — "world class warrior athletes," the general called them, and I agree. But I'm very conservative with the word "hero."

No, I'm talking about the mother of one of our competitors, Sharon Hunt, whose son, Sgt. 1st Class Gerald Nelson, was half of the winning team.

Each year at Best Ranger, I try to keep my eye on a couple of families, to follow them through the event and see the competition from their perspective.

I got lucky with this time. I happened to latch on to Nelson's family early on. By Sunday, I'd learned this about Sharon: She raised four children of her own and a passel of foster kids. Now that they're grown and on their own, Sharon and her husband have adopted six girls, siblings who would have otherwise been farmed out one by one.

Now I have four children of my own, the youngest well on her way to independence. No more dirty diapers, shoelaces or strained peas. No more need for sitters. And we're almost done with braces. Motherhood is the most rewarding thing I've ever done or likely will do, but I cannot imagine starting over.

So naturally, I asked Sharon about her decision. Why would a full-time professional administrator with no "ties" opt to start all over? Her answer was simple: "They needed us."

Sharon and her husband are heroes in my book. Like Rangers, they've decided to go the extra mile, to give more of themselves than anyone could rightfully expect.

In my job as a reporter, I frequently meet amazing people like the Hunts, though more often than not, they're Soldiers or former Soldiers.

I'm blessed to rub elbows with heroes, in an age when true heroes are few and far between. We have more than our fair share around here, as I suspect they do at Fort Bragg, Fort Campbell, Fort Drum, etc.

And nowhere do I find them so plenteous as the Best Ranger Competition. There, each year, "old Soldiers" gather in disguise, like Clark Kent in street clothes, their "Superman" costumes relegated to the back of the closet long ago. I'm talking about heroes with names like Grange, Puckett, Leuer, Spears, Purdy, Spies and Turner and I could go on and on.

To be part of the Best Ranger Competition in some small way, to simply be there in the presence of great warriors, on and off the field, is to be part of something bigger than oneself. No wonder we at The Bayonet fight for the privilege of covering it each year. We want to tell the world about it.

Thank you Col. K.K. Chinn, the Ranger Training Brigade, the competitors — all who make it happen each year.

Everyday heroes everywhere

Annette Fournier
USAIC Public Affairs

Volunteers whose efforts have contributed to Fort Benning were recognized April 21 by Brig. Gen. Benjamin Freakley. Of course, not everyone who has volunteered their time and effort to Fort Benning was recognized, but I guess if you're one of those people, you already know it.

I'm always amazed by those type of people. You know the ones I'm talking about, the energetic, upbeat, go-getters who are involved in so many activities and organizations, you wonder how they have any time for themselves, or time to sleep or eat for that matter.

It takes a special kind of person to give so much of him or herself, and to do it just because it's the right thing to do.

Of course there are those who get recognized for their work, but the vast majority of people don't do it for awards and certificates to hang on the wall. It's not for money or prestige. It's just to help.

There are others who may not be in an official volunteer position but recognize when someone needs help and step up to the plate. It doesn't even have to be something big.

Just doing that little thing to take the pressure off someone else or let them know you care can make all the difference.

These are people for whom kindness and lending a helping hand are second nature, just ordinary people who are willing to go to extraordinary lengths to help a stranger.

At Fort Benning and around the armed forces in general, I would have to say there are a lot of ordinary heroes. I see it all the time around post.

One of these heroes could be the person who sees a neighbor or friend in need and goes to assist.

Even the smallest thing, like baby-sitting or running errands, can make a huge difference for an overwhelmed mom raising kids by herself while her husband is deployed.

Or maybe more importantly, people who lend emotional support to each other in the tough times. Someday that help might be returned in a time of need.

Another way I've seen it is in the welcoming nature of military families. Army families understand what it's like to be the new person in town and go out of their way to make newcomers feel welcome. When I've moved in the past, I've never had so many people willing to go out of their way to help me. I can understand why people refer to the Army as a family.

Maybe it's because there are so many outstanding people both in the Army and supporting the Army. Soldiers are people willing to sacrifice themselves for a cause, and to put the mission before all.

Military spouses and children are the glue keeping the Army family together, by helping each other out and supporting the Soldiers so they can stay focused on the task.

It's wonderful to recognize the volunteers who work to improve Fort Benning, but there are far more amazing people and acts of kindness than can ever be recognized in a ceremony.

And really, helping out is not about recognition. It's just about seeing someone in need, and doing something about it.

Summer was almost over and my friend Kevin was about to start high school. He was the youngest of three children, was very outgoing and a good athlete. He also enjoyed helping his father work around the house.

Early one morning Kevin's father asked him to do some landscaping in the front yard.

Kevin quickly went to the garage and grabbed the weed eater and an extension cord. He stretched out the cord, plugging one end into the weed eater and the other into an electrical outlet.

As Kevin got started, his dad failed to notice some significant but obvious dangers.

First, he didn't notice that Kevin was standing barefoot on grass still wet from the morning dew.

Second, he didn't notice the frayed insulation on the extension cord. Kevin, who was in a hurry to get the job done so he could spend time with his friends, also didn't notice or understand these apparent dangers.

Within minutes, tragedy struck. Shelia, a friend of Kevin's who lived across the street, saw what happened and screamed for help as she ran toward Kevin's motionless body.

A few seconds later Kevin's dad told Shelia to call an ambulance.

Kevin's dad quickly disconnected the extension cord and checked his son for signs of life.

By the time the ambulance arrived, Kevin had stopped breathing. The ambulance crew rushed Kevin to the hospital, but it was too late. He was pronounced dead.

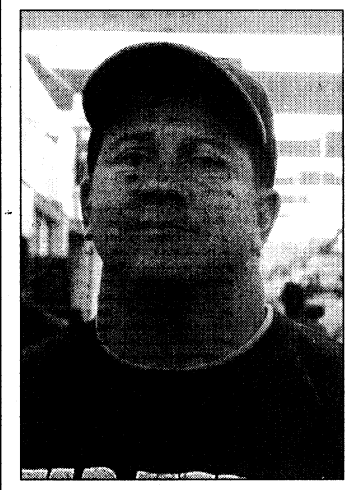
Afterward, Kevin's father couldn't stop asking himself how he could've let this happen.

This was a tragic incident for the entire family. The church was overflowing when I went to the funeral to pay my last respects to Kevin.

As I sat inside the church, I couldn't help but think of how this happened. Kevin was so young and had his whole life ahead of him. Yet he died because some obvious hazards were ignored in the process of doing a simple, everyday chore.

The lesson from Kevin's death was clear to his father, and should be to the rest of us in the Army who have families.

How often do we leave safety at the gate when driving off post to go home?



Is it because we think home is so non-threatening that our families won't get hurt?

If that's what we think, we are blinding ourselves to the hazards that might be right there in our own front yard.

Editor's note: Minnick L. Eargle is a tactical safety specialist for 18th Airborne Corps at Fort Bragg, N.C.

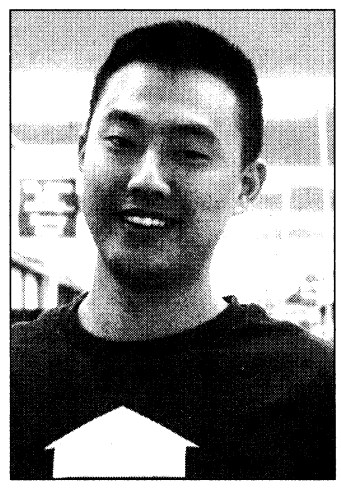
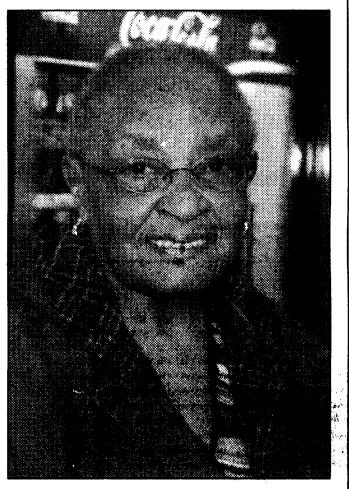
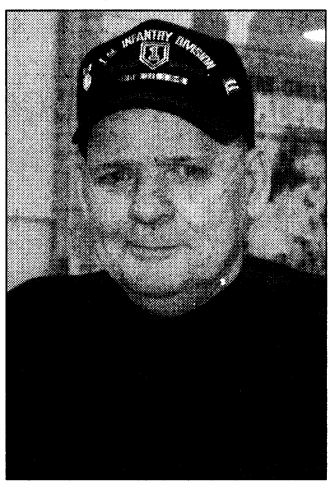
VARIOUS VOICES



Why is it important for people to volunteer?

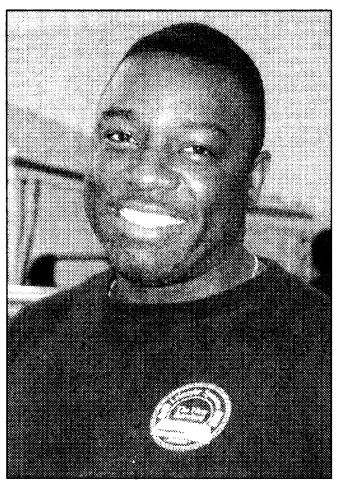


Retired Petty Officer 1st Class Ricky Manley, Columbus — "I volunteer whenever I can. The Lord won't give it back to you if you don't take care of people. I used to coach Little League, and now I work with troubled teenagers and help the poor through my church. It's important to help people."



Lori Truax, family member — "It's really important to volunteer with schools, especially if you're a parent. I have three kids, and I try to stay involved with their schools, so I know what's going on and can help out. It's important because your kids know you care, and there are no surprises."

Jaewon Choi, family member — "I should volunteer, but I don't. I think it's really important to support community groups like homeless shelters and places to help the poor and troubled teens. I figure if I support them, then maybe they will help me or my family if we ever need it."



Mary Phelps, family member — "Volunteering is important if you want to be part of the community. It's about giving to others. I've been volunteering with my church since I moved to Columbus in 1972. I love to do it, because I learn so much from other people."

Retired Sgt. 1st Class David Jones, Columbus — "I volunteer three days a week at St. Francis Hospital. I help families and visit patients. I do it because there are lots of people who need help. Plus I don't want to just sit around at home. This keeps me busy."

Sgt. Maj. Janell Word, CONUS Replacement Center — "I volunteer with teenagers at a school. It's important, because they're our future, and the kids today need positive mentors to guide them. It's a way to invest in our future."

Retired Sgt. 1st Class Jean Renesco, Columbus — "I just moved here, but I want to get involved in the community, especially something like Little League coaching. It's good to help kids, because it keeps them straight and out of trouble."

Rangers: Induct newest members commander of Human Resources Command, said the honorees were "receiving their dues" for giving of themselves as Rangers.

The "theme of the day," said Anderson, who commanded the RTB from 1996-1998, was giving, and he quoted St. Luke 6:38.

"It says, 'Give, comma, and it shall be given unto you,'" he said. "You give first. It's a biblical principle that works for everybody. You understand the cycle.

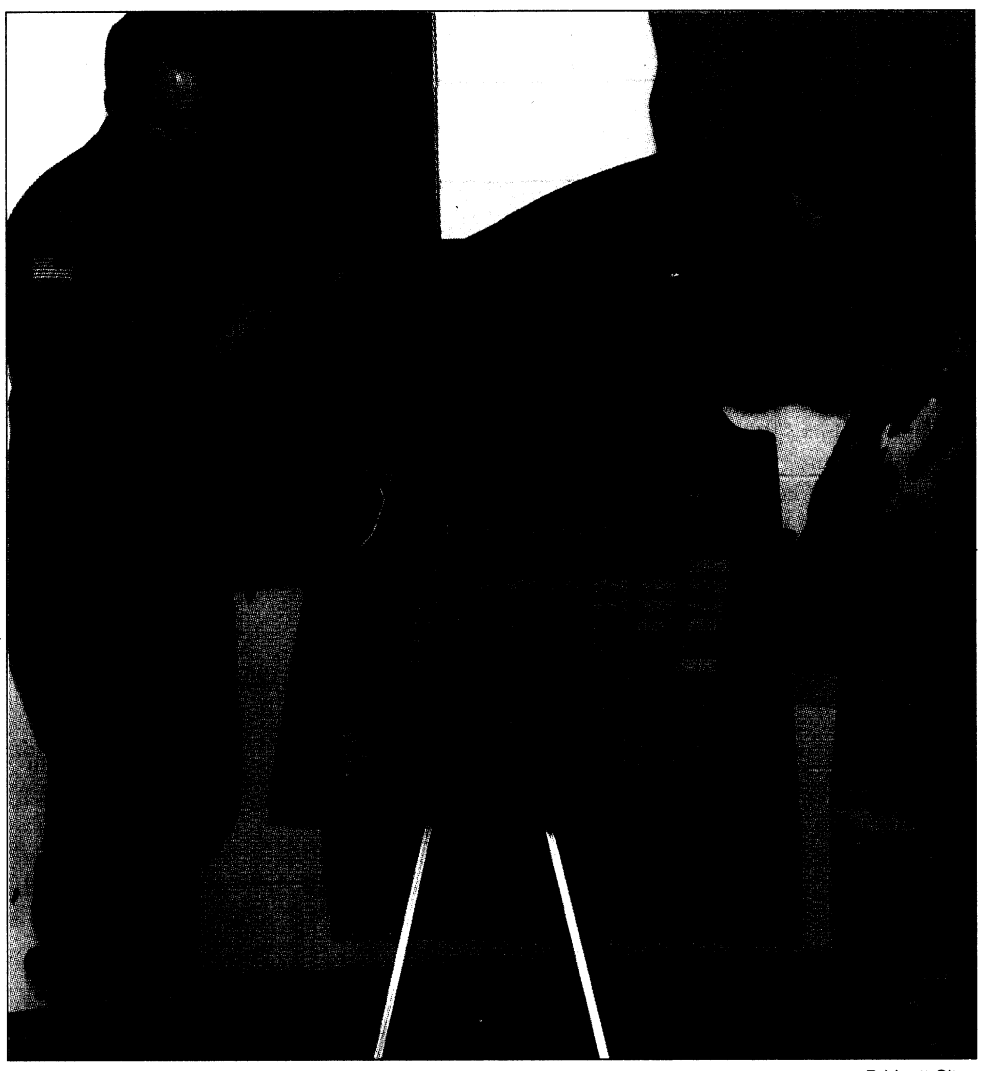
"Today is our chance to give back," he said. "As Rangers, you gave a lot to me. This is what you get back; appreciation, acknowledgement, respect and honor."

Anderson listed the ways Rangers have "given" to the Army.

Field artillery units are using Ranger techniques, he said, and "regular old Army units are doing night live fires to Ranger standards." Soldiers are doing PT every day, and "now the whole Army road marches" — a "gift" from the Rangers, he said, and the Army borrowed from the Ranger Creed when establishing its own.

"And finally, the black beret, a touchy subject," he said. "You gave that to the Army, and the Army is better for it. I'm going to report to you that Rangers still lead the way."

Retired Maj. Bill Spies, a former Ranger Department deputy director, said he was honored to be among "such a good bunch of people" as he was being inducted.



"I'm going to remark on what the general said earlier about it being better to give than receive," Spies said. "I can tell you it works. I've never been on the receiving end of a raid, but I've 'given' a few. I can verify it is better to give than receive."

Retired Col. Elliot Sydnor, Ranger Department commander from 1977-1980, was the ground forces commander of the raid on POW Camp Son Tay in North Vietnam in 1971. American forces tried to rescue 55 POWs, who had been moved to another site shortly before the raid.

Sydnor said the raid was "a failure," but in the long run, the mission proved beneficial to the POWs, who were moved to better conditions and treated much better, and to Soldiers today who still study Son Tay in Army schools. The mission, he said, was proof Rangers "are not God."

"But they do perform miracles," he told the crowd. "I was part of one of those miracles when I came here for training in 1953. They taught me what I needed to know to be successful."

Besides Mixon, Spies and Sydnor, the brigade inducted the late Maj. Gen. John Van Houten, retired Col. Robert "Tex" Turner, retired Lt. Col. Keith Antonia, retired Command Sgt. Maj. Fred Weekley, retired Command Sgt. Maj. James Collier, retired Sgt. Maj. Mike Ramsey, and Command Sgt. Maj. Mike Kelso, the Infantry Center's command sergeant major.

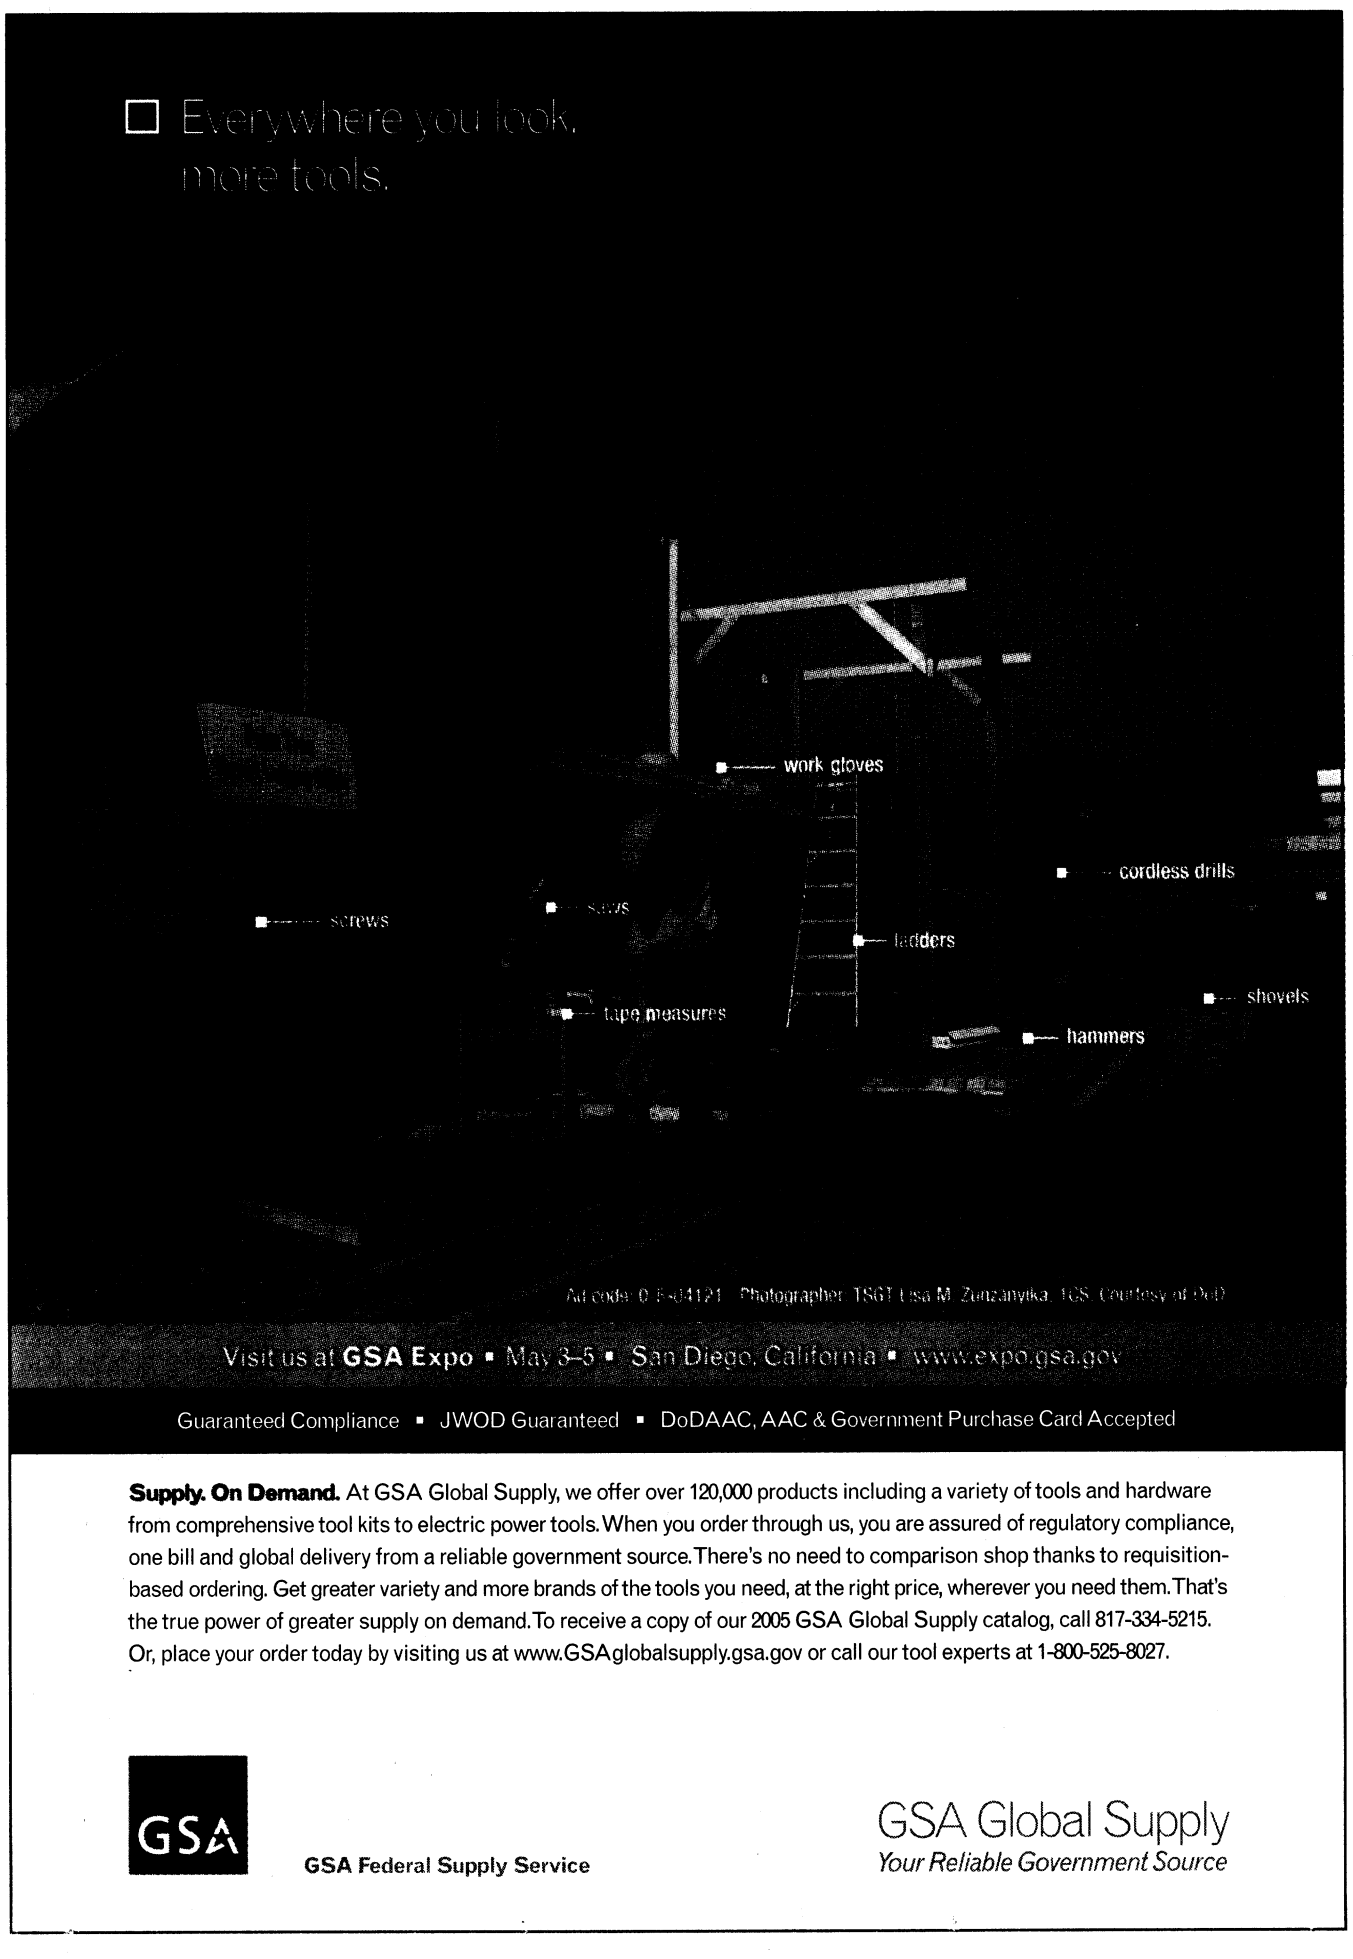
The U.S. has a history of entering conflict unprepared, he said. When Gen. Creighton Abrams created the Ranger battalions in the early 70s, his vision was for Rangers to set the standard for the Army. Today's Rangers are doing just that, Schoomaker said, and their warrior ethos is permeating the Army.



"We have a great Army and great armed forces today that are ready for this dangerous century we're headed into," Schoomaker said. "That's largely because of this (Ranger) standard. From where I sit, we're headed in the right direction. Had these Rangers and this standard been present 25 years ago when the U.S. troops tried to rescue those hostages, it would've been a different story," he said.

Original Test Platoon member buried Monday

McCullough remembered as hero

Bridgett Siter
Bayonet staff

Don Lassen lost one of his heroes last week.

Lassen was a high school student in 1940, when newspapers across the country introduced the Army's latest weapon, a small group of Soldiers who volunteered to be part of an airborne test platoon.

"I wanted to be like them," said Lassen, 82, who joined the Army right out of high school and went to war with the 82nd Airborne Division.

Monday, Lassen traveled to Dayton, Ohio, for the funeral of one of the last of the original Test Platoon Soldiers, retired Warrant Officer Lloyd McCullough, who passed away last week at the age of 92.

"He was my hero," said Lassen, an airborne historian and the editor and publisher of Static Line, a publication popular with former Airborne Soldiers.

"He was one who would attend all (the reunions). He kept going. I'm going to miss him."

McCullough made it a point to attend reunions at Fort Benning and speak to Airborne School graduates.

"I spent fifteen years down here training troops, and it's good to be back once again," McCullough said in May 2003 during a celebration of the 63rd anniversary of his first jump.

Lassen said McCullough and his comrades, three other original test platoon members who frequently attend reunions, keep the story of those first few daring paratroopers alive for young Soldiers who cannot imagine an Army without an Airborne force of thousands.

Lassen believes there are about five of the "originals" left. They were pioneers, he said, and their willingness to participate in the airborne experiment speaks volumes about them.

"They were members of the Test Platoon," he said.

"What the hell more can I say about them?"

McCullough spent 30 years in the Army and served in the Pacific during World War II.

He was also trained as a parachute rigger, so his family was pleased to see a contingency of riggers from Fort Benning in his color guard, said Lt. Col. Sean McCaffrey, commander of the 1st Battalion, 507th Parachute Infantry Regiment.

Hughston Clinic makes large donation to museum

Foundation gets contribution to help museum

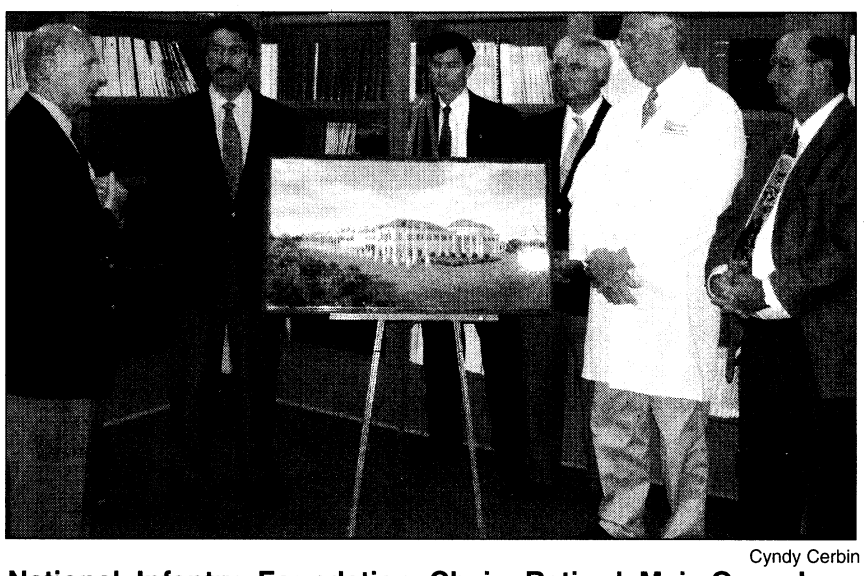
Columbus' Hughston Orthopedic Hospital and 13 surgeons joined forces to make a $217,000 donation to help build the new National Infantry Museum and Heritage Park.

The gift, presented by Hughston CEO Don Avery at a news conference Tuesday, is in honor of Dr. Jack Hughston, who died in September. Hughston founded the clinic in 1949 and was considered a pioneer in the field of sports medicine. He was a lifelong supporter of the military.

The fund-raising effort was spearheaded by Hughston chief of staff Dr. Carlton Savory, who was an Infantry officer in Vietnam before becoming a doctor. He retired as a colonel in 1987, but was recalled to duty several years later during Operation Desert Storm.

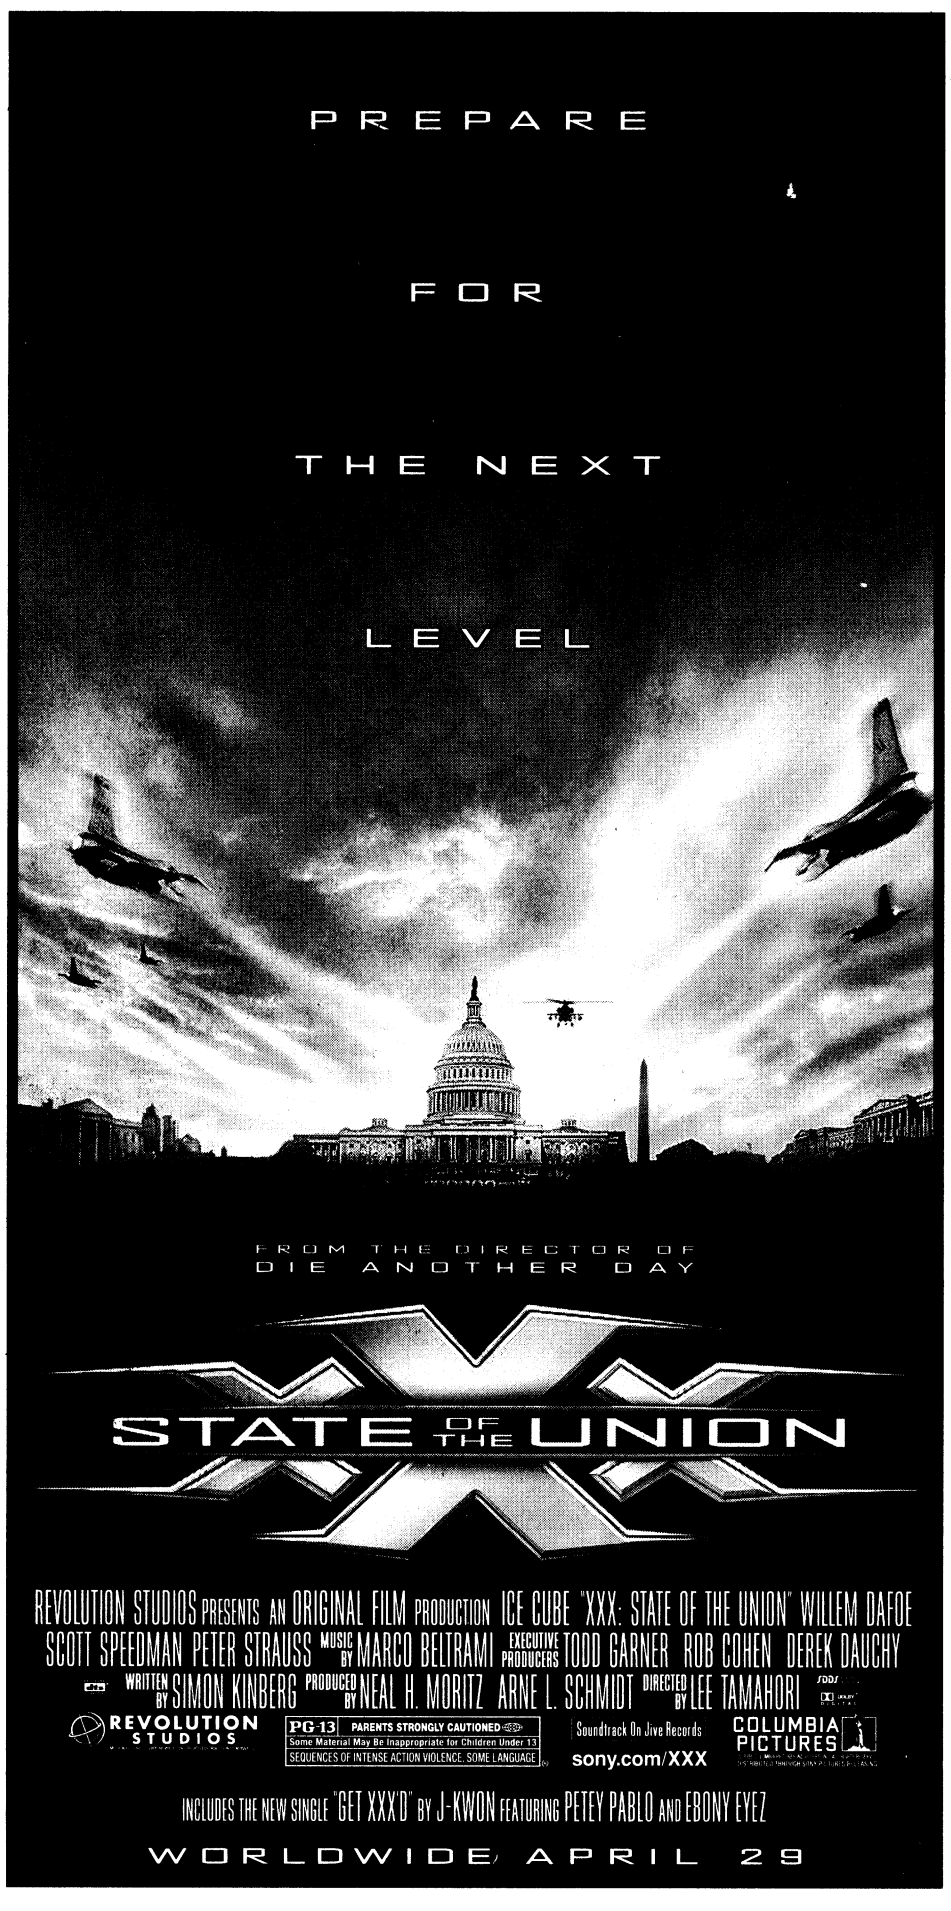
In accepting the gift, National Infantry Foundation chair retired Maj. Gen. Jerry White said, "This is the first time we've seen co-workers come together to make a major contribution. We hope it will inspire others to join the effort, too."



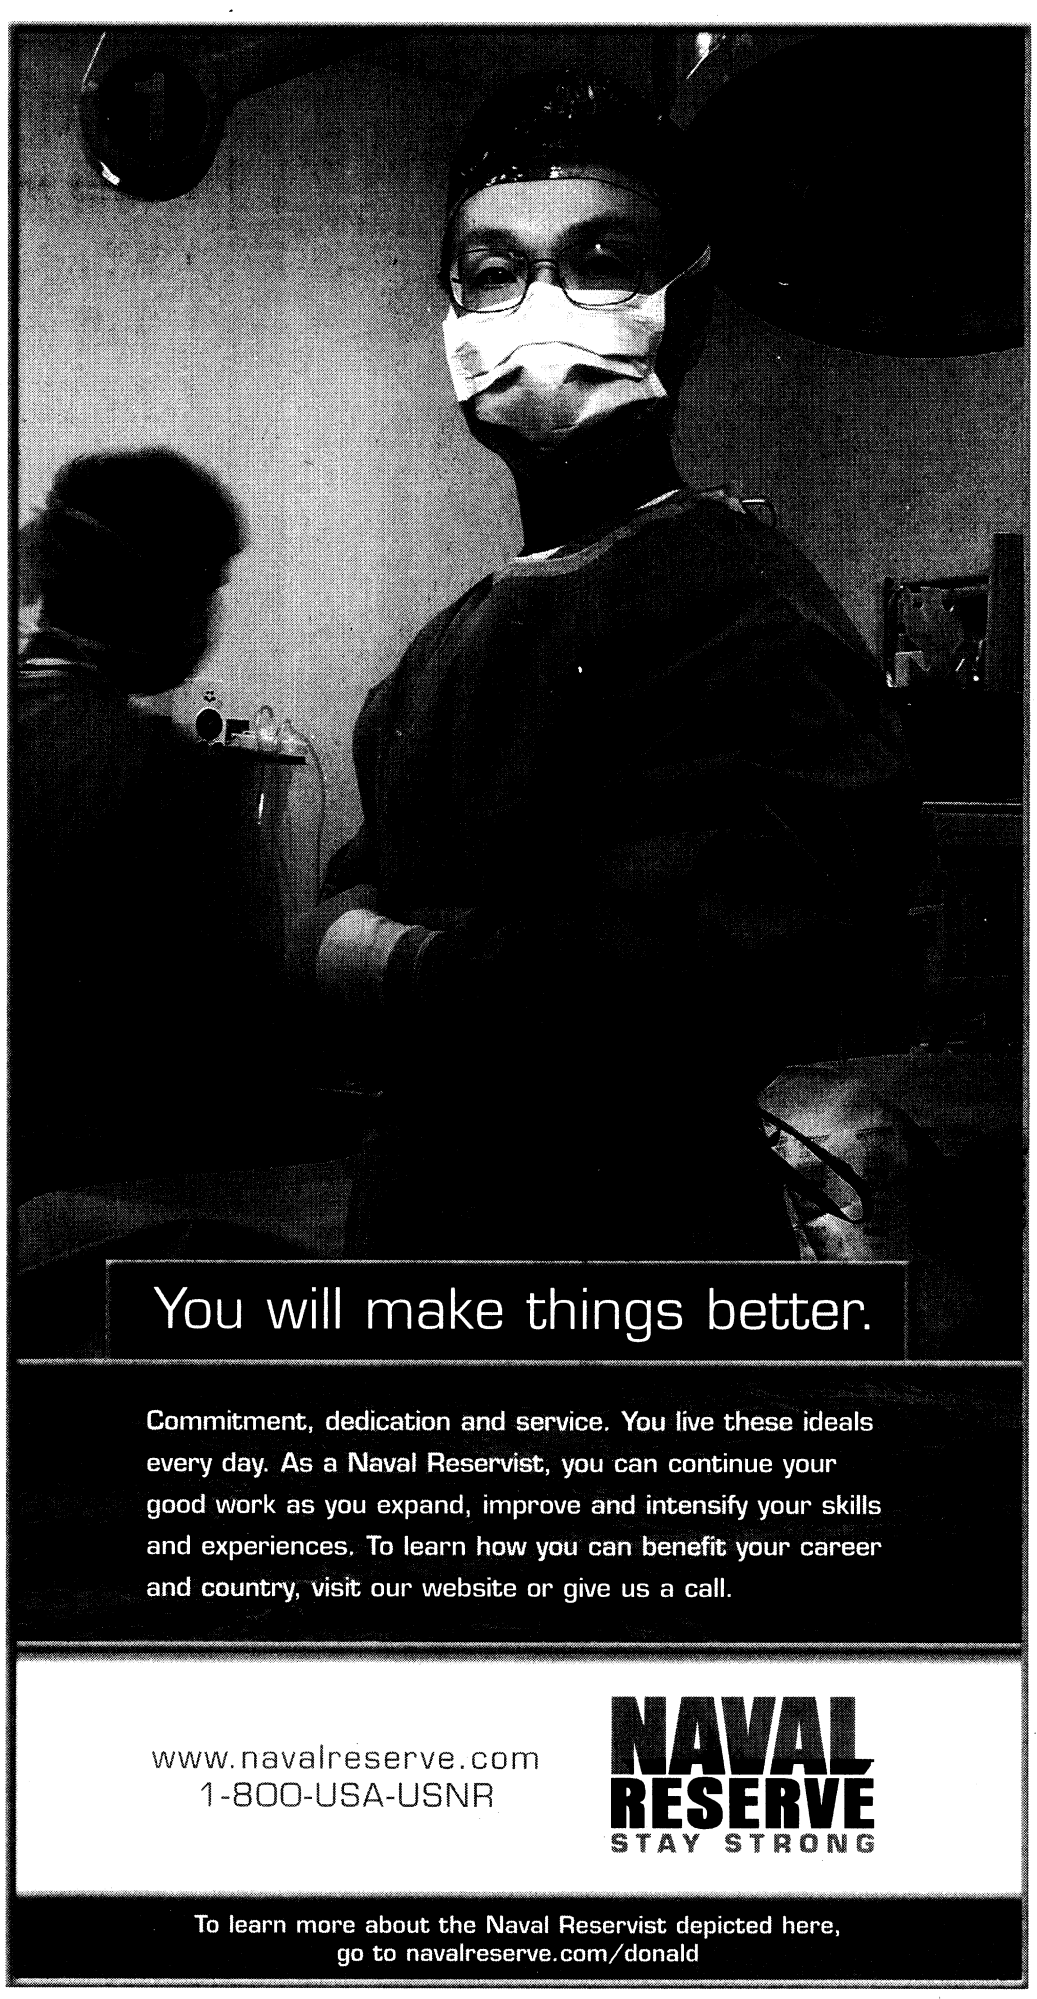
The $217,000 donation included $50,000 from Hughston Orthopedic Hospital.

The rest came from Drs. Robert McAlindon, Champ Baker, Thomas Bernard, Kenneth Burkus, John Dorchak, Patrick Fernicola, Fred Flandry, Crow Gudger, Kurt Jacobson, David Rehak, Carlton Savory, John Waldrop and Thomas Walsh.

Savory also announced the inaugural event of the Hughston Leadership Lecture Series. Retired Lt. Gen. Hal Moore, who co-wrote We Were Soldiers Once ... and Young, is the featured speaker at the event Tuesday. The intent of the series, Savory said, is to raise awareness of the museum project.



The Foundation is now more than halfway toward its project goal of $75 million.



Work is underway on the Heritage Park portion of the project, and when more funds become available, construction will begin on the museum.

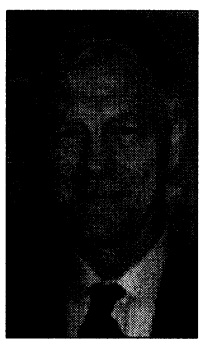
Officer shares combat experiences from Vietnam, Saudi Arabia

Addresses key elements of small unit leadership

Melissa House
Bayonet staff

Retired Lt. Gen. Don Holder shared his thoughts on combat leadership Wednesday in Marshall Auditorium. Soldiers from Fort Benning's units and military schools gathered to hear the 31-year Army veteran who saw combat in Vietnam and in Southwest Asia.

"He is a great warrior, scholar and Army leader," said Commanding General Brig. Gen. Benjamin Freakley. "He understands training, understands training Soldiers and taking care of families."



As an Army scholar, Holder is one of the principal authors of Army Field Manual 100-5 and is widely published in scholarly journals, Freakley said. As a combat leader, Holder's Soldiers "understood the warrior ethos when they attacked Iraqi soldiers in the Battle of 73 Easting during Operation Desert Storm."

Holder, an armor officer who commanded the 2nd Armored Cavalry Regiment, shared his background and thoughts on leader responsibilities, operations, discipline and training.

"My experience in Operation Desert Storm was in contrast to what I saw in Vietnam," Holder said, sharing a list of lessons learned. "Security is worse when it is raining. Everyone's a rifleman. Everyone needs to know first aid and how to adjust artillery. Dogs have value. Monkeys are useless."

Holder said he arrived in Vietnam in 1969, with three years in the Army under his belt. At 25, he had already lost his father, commander of the 11th Cavalry Regiment, to combat. He had lost friends, classmates and Soldiers.

"I arrived with a mixed mind," Holder said. "I was well-grounded in the Army, but I had doubts and was in the middle of making career decisions. By the end of a year, I had submitted my resignation."

Holder

He said his second troop command lacked stability, discipline and training. He contrasted that with his experience watching the crisis developing in Kuwait and Saudi Arabia. At that time, he was commanding the 2nd Armored Cavalry Regiment.

"It was a much better organization," he said. "The company-level commanders and NCOs were rock solid and prepared for what they were going to do."

As Holder prepared to deploy with the 2nd ACR, his mentor, Col. Bud Page, wrote to him. Page told him his Soldiers needed to have faith in their commanders, their equipment, faith that fire support would be provided on-call, and faith that they could win — and they would need individual recognition and compassion.

Leader Responsibilities

"There are many elements to a campaign. Leadership is number one. Everything else is number two." Bertolt Brecht

Holder shared the story of a platoon mortared in Vietnam. Their lieutenant moved his men during the night and failed to report that they were in the new position. Within minutes, the lieutenant was on the radio, he said, screaming they were under mortar attack.

"You can survive a lot of mistakes — even mistakes that get people killed," Holder said, "But you cannot survive not being truthful with your subordinates."

Along with being truthful, Holder shared his list of top leader responsibilities, including:

- Trust your instincts
- Be consistent, but not predictable
- Be fair and tough
- Share information
- Be in charge
- Don't play favorite
- Someone is always in charge
- Formal and basic discipline

Discipline

Holder illustrated the importance of discipline in combat with the story of the death of a specialist in the unit — one of only two Soldiers from the troop killed in action.

When the tank broke down, Holder said, the specialist began walking off for help. But he was the gunner, and unit policy was that someone always manned the machine gun. When he heard enemy soldiers coming, he scrambled to get back on the tank and was hit by a rocket-propelled grenade.

Basic discipline, he said, has to be done religiously, or it gets lost.

"And someone always has to be in charge," Holder said. "Everybody has a chunk of operations. Every part of the chain of command should bear the most weight it can."

Operations

"Introduce your units to the fight rapidly ... don't creep into it. Force them into it with all the speed and violence possible." Col. Bud Page

Holder said the actions of G Troop, at 73 Easting, where the unit fought the Iraqi Republican Guard and 12th Armored Division, was one example of a commander doing all the right things.

"They had perfect distribution of fires and actions on contact," he said, because the time spent on battle drills during training held the unit together after the first shot in combat.

Training

"The best form of welfare for the troops is good training." Gen. Erwin Rommel

"Training is a vital thing before combat," Holder said. "You have to focus on the basics like map reading, weapons, first aid and battle drills. And Army doctrine works, even in combat."

National Guard hosts train-the-trainer session

Bridgett Siter

Staff Sgt. JJ Howington traveled from Camp Blanding, Fla., to train with some of the Army's newest weapons systems, which are being fielded to National Guard units. Here Howington, who served in Iraq more than a year, "sights" an M-240 B machine gun with an infrared aiming light.

29th Inf. Regt. instructs Guard Soldiers

Bridgett Siter
Bayonet staff

Sgt. 1st Class Samuel Webster spent 10 years with the Marines. He served in Desert Storm and Somalia. But he'd never laid eyes on an M-240 B machine gun until last week at Fort Benning's Warrior Training Center.

Webster was one of 34 National Guard Soldiers, NCOs from Regional Training Institutes, who attended a weeklong AIMSS course — Advanced Infantry Marksmanship Strategies and Standards — hosted by the Special Assistant to the Commanding General-Army National Guard and instructed by Soldiers from the 2nd Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment, AIMSS Committee.

"A lot has changed," said Webster, who joined the National Guard nine years ago. His field artillery unit from Phoenix, Ariz., will deploy to Iraq later this year.

"The military has come a long way since I was active duty," he said. "Most of this stuff is new to me, but we'll need to be up on it before we leave (for Iraq.)"

Webster and his classmates took part in the first of its kind "train the trainer" course, an abbreviated version of the 29th's two-week AIMSS course.

A mobile training team typically takes the course to units around the country, bringing them up to speed on the latest laser aiming devices, optics and night vision devices.

Last week, the National Guard took the opposite approach, bringing Guardsmen from around the country and Puerto Rico to train them at the WTC, home of the Guard's PreRanger and Air Assault courses.

"A lot of the states haven't fielded these systems to their Guard units yet, or they're just getting around to it," said Master Sgt. John Switzer, who helped develop the course for the Guard. "We want to train the Soldiers who will go back and train their Soldiers so we're one step ahead of the equipment."

Regular Army Soldiers are introduced to some of these weapons in basic training or their line companies.

Soon, National Guardsmen will receive AIMSS training at ANCOC, BNCOC, the Light Leaders Course and the Military Occupational Specialty Qualification Course.

"They're not going back to basic, so they've got to get this training somewhere else," he said. "This way, no matter what your rank, if you're a Guard Soldier, you have a pretty good chance of being trained to use this equipment in the next couple of years."

Sgt. Daniel Howard, an AIMSS committee instructor, said deployed Guard units have already received some of these weapons.

"They're everywhere the regular Army is now, so they need to know how to use it," he said.

Switzer said the SACG will host the training again in the fall.

Week Three — Conquering fear

Building Confidence at Eagle Tower

Soldiers in B Company, 1st Battalion, 19th Infantry Regiment were put to the test in week three of their training at Infantry Training Brigade, first by conquering Eagle Tower.

"Eagle Tower is designed to help Soldiers overcome their natural fears. It builds confidence in their own abilities," said company commander, Capt. William K. Lewis. "

We do it twice a cycle, once during week three and again later in the cycle. (Completing the tower twice) gives them a chance to go back and do the slide for life."

At Eagle Tower, trainees cross three rope bridges — the two-rope bridge, the commando crawl and the three-rope bridge. After crossing the last bridge and reaching a platform, they climb down a cargo net, tie their own Swiss seat, climb a wooden ladder and rappel down the 34-foot tower.

During week three, recruits are also tested on their Soldiering knowledge during the phase one testing. Here, they are tested on their knowledge of common tasks, nuclear, biological and chemical abilities, knowledge of their chain of command, rank and general orders. Soldiers also receive further instruction on the Army values and start preparing for basic rifle marksmanship.

Editor's note: The Bayonet's Tawny Archibald Campbell will follow B Company, 1st Battalion, 19th Infantry Regiment, through 14 weeks of training, offering readers a look at training for new Soldiers at the Infantry Training Brigade.

After learning to tie his own Swiss seat, Pvt. Jesse Spielman rappels down Eagle Tower as part of week three's training at the Infantry Training Brigade.

SOLDIER OF FORTUNE

Spc. Nikki St. Amant
Bayonet staff

Few can claim they have walked the war-torn veld of Rhodesia, fought side by side with commandos, witnessed the carnage of battle, time and time again, and lived to tell the tale.

Among the few is Mike Kelso, the U.S. Army Infantry Center command sergeant major. Some remember him as the Ranger Training Brigade command sergeant major. A few may even recall his days with the 3rd Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment, in the 1980s and early 1990s. But to almost all, his first experience with combat is but a whisper of a legend.

From the time he was born, Kelso always wanted to be a professional soldier.

Too young to fight in Vietnam, the 17-year-old Kelso enlisted into the Army in September 1973 and took a slot in the 82nd Airborne Division. Wanting to go to war, he grew frustrated with the routines of a peacetime Army.

Then he picked up the very first edition of the magazine Soldiers of Fortune. There were two stories covering the conflict in Rhodesia. At the time, the Rhodesian army was fighting a vicious bush war against Marxist insurgents attempting to overthrow the government. At the end of one of the articles, there was an address for those interested in fighting to write for more information.

"People can call me a mercenary," he said. "That's fine. I'm OK with that. I'm proud of that. I did what I had wanted to do since I was a little boy. By professional soldier, I mean that going to war was our business."

After being discharged from the U.S. Army, he wrote off to the address, expressing his intent to join. He received a contract in the mail six weeks later and reported for duty in 1977.

He spent more than 15 grueling months battling terrorist insurgents across African plains with the 3 Commando, Rhodesian Light Infantry. He participated in six combat jumps, a task that comes second nature to a Rhodesian commando.

"I knew a guy, my troop sergeant, who had done 50 combat jumps," Kelso said. "And there wasn't any jump pay for it either. That was just the way we did business."

He wasn't the only American toughing it out in the trenches for the sake of guts and glory. Along the way, the young trooper met other U.S. citizens caught in the firestorm of foreign war.

Frank Bataglia hailed from Miami, was a Vietnam veteran and served in the Spanish Foreign Legion before finding his way to Rhodesia. Kelso knew both Bataglia and his wife, who joined the Rhodesian Air Force as a rigger. Bataglia was killed on an operation into Zambia.

Kelso said losing friends hardened him for years of soldiering ahead.

"It certainly showed me what war was really like," he said. "The happy times, the sad times, the camaraderie that exists between warriors and the sadness at losing your warrior buddies."

He lost warrior buddies like Sgt. Hugh McCall, a New York City native who befriended Kelso shortly after he arrived. McCall was killed while on his last patrol in the bush before he was to return to the United States.

While Kelso quickly learned the horrors of combat, he also found the satisfaction victory bears after the guns fall silent and the dust settles.

Facing long odds and grim consequences, Kelso took part in a historic attack wherein a meager force of 144 Rhodesian soldiers took on an overwhelming enemy formation of more than 5,000. With the help of heavy air support, the outnumbered Rhodesians left more than 1,200 enemy combatants dead on the battlefield.

"It ingrained in me a confidence that perhaps I didn't have prior to joining the Rhodesian army," he said. "I've kept that confidence for twenty eight years. It was that confidence that gave me the courage to volunteer for the 1st Ranger Battalion when I came home."

That choice was the beginning of a long, illustrious military career which carried Kelso through the ranks above his peers.

Now, decades down the line, it isn't the blood or the battles he is quickest to recall. Surprisingly, it is the novelty of his experience in a foreign country. The host family he spent passes and holidays with, the wild game he saw while patrolling the bush, the thatched mud huts natives called home are the pictures he paints in his mind.

"Just being there, in Africa, was awesome," he said. "To have the opportunity to live a National Geographic experience was unbelievable."

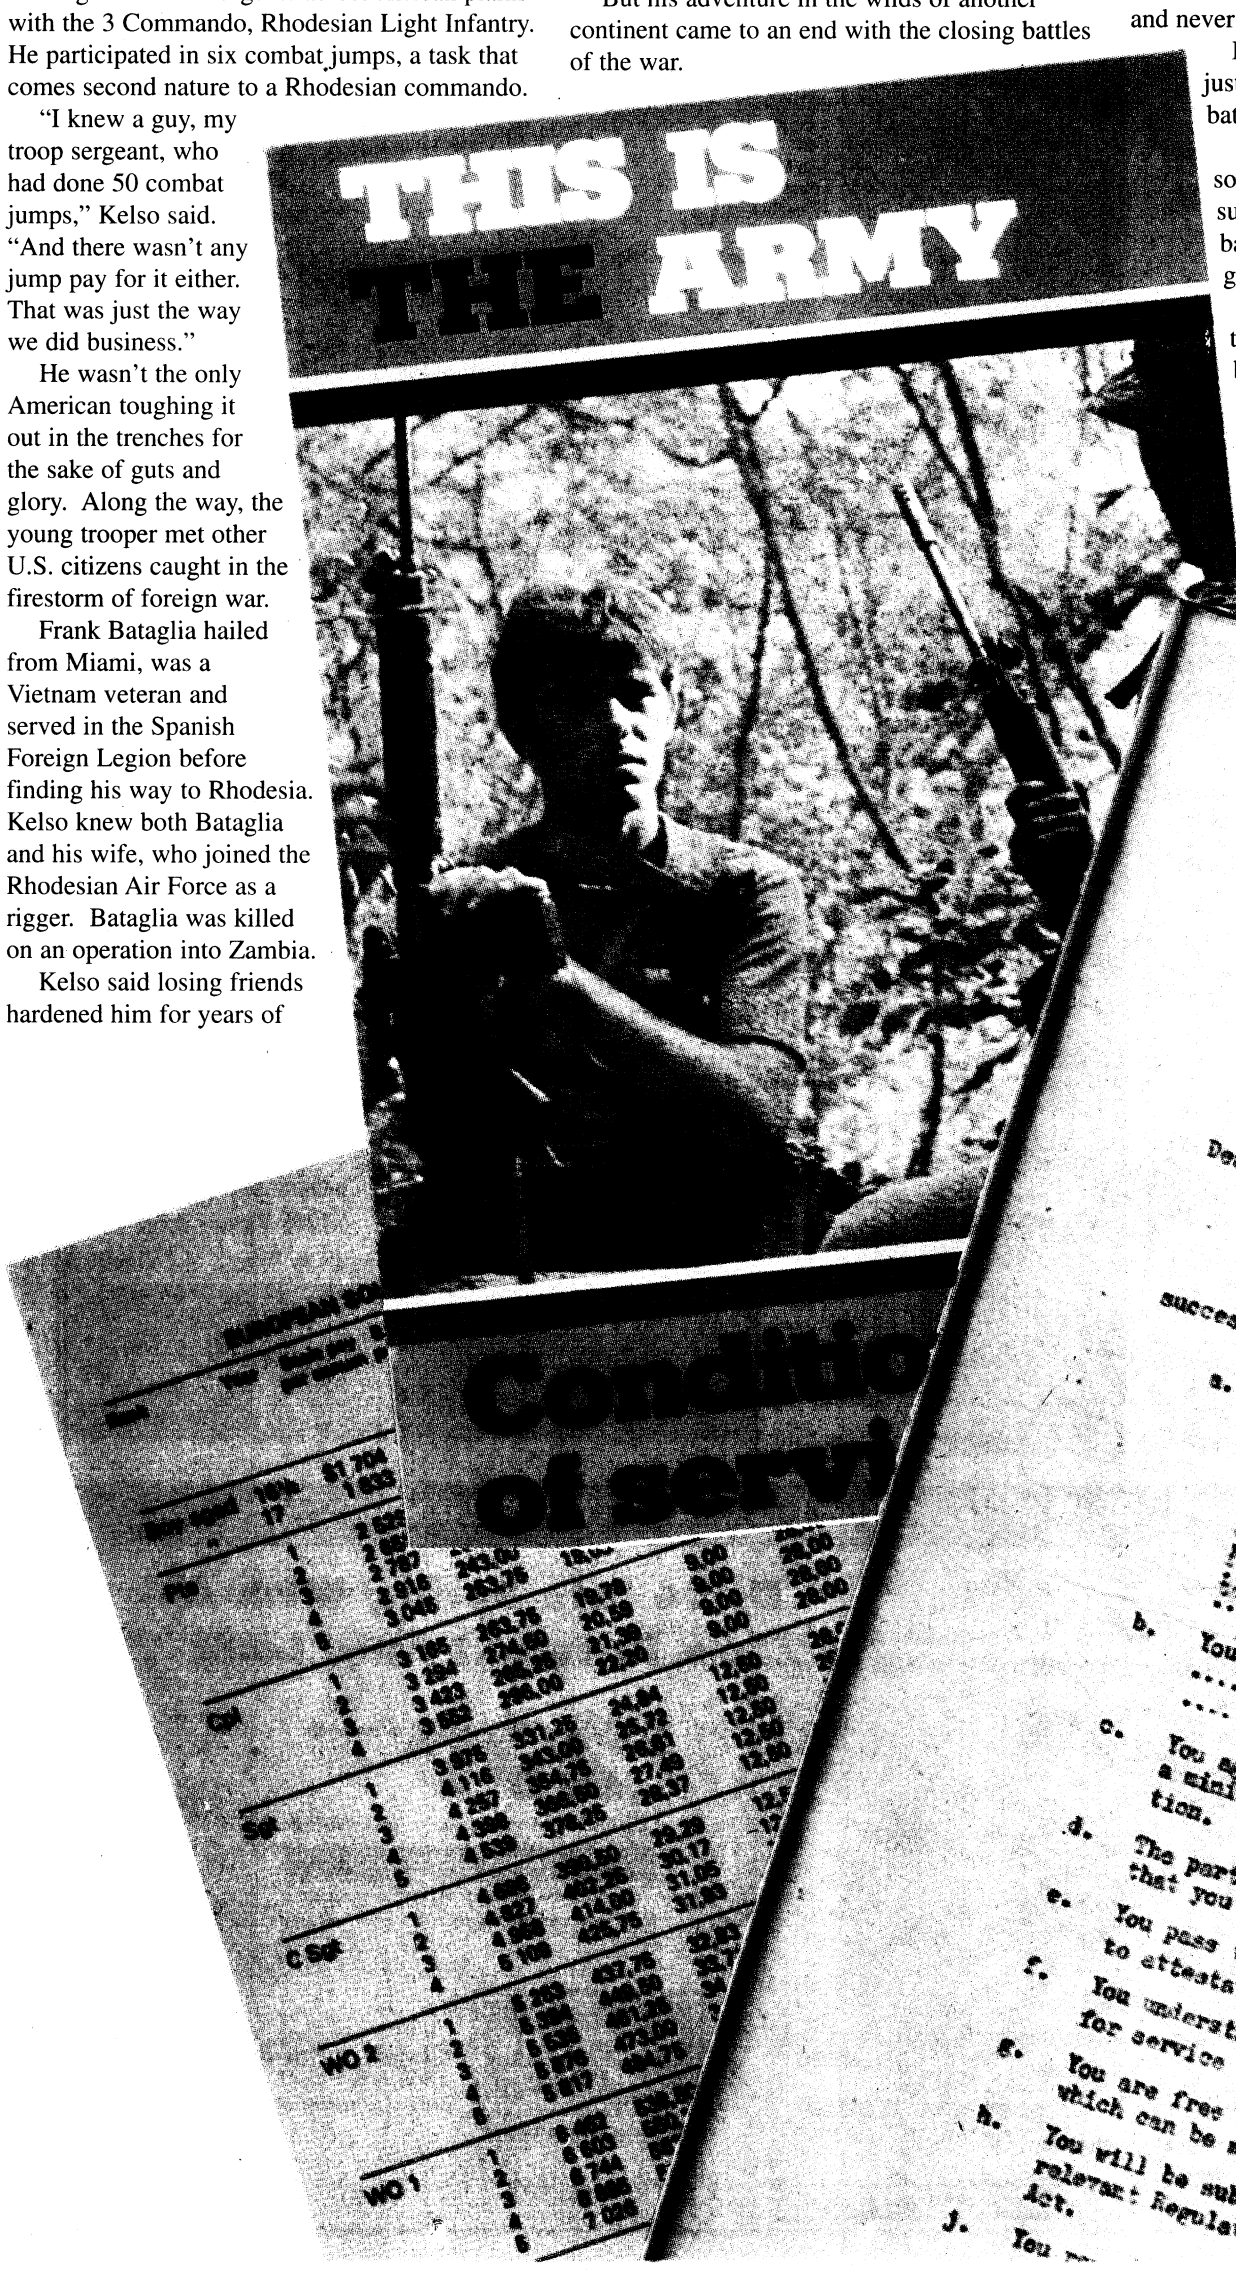
But his adventure in the wilds of another continent came to an end with the closing battles of the war.

Courtesy photo

Command Sgt. Maj. Mike Kelso in 1978 during a patrol into Zambia with the Rhodesian army.

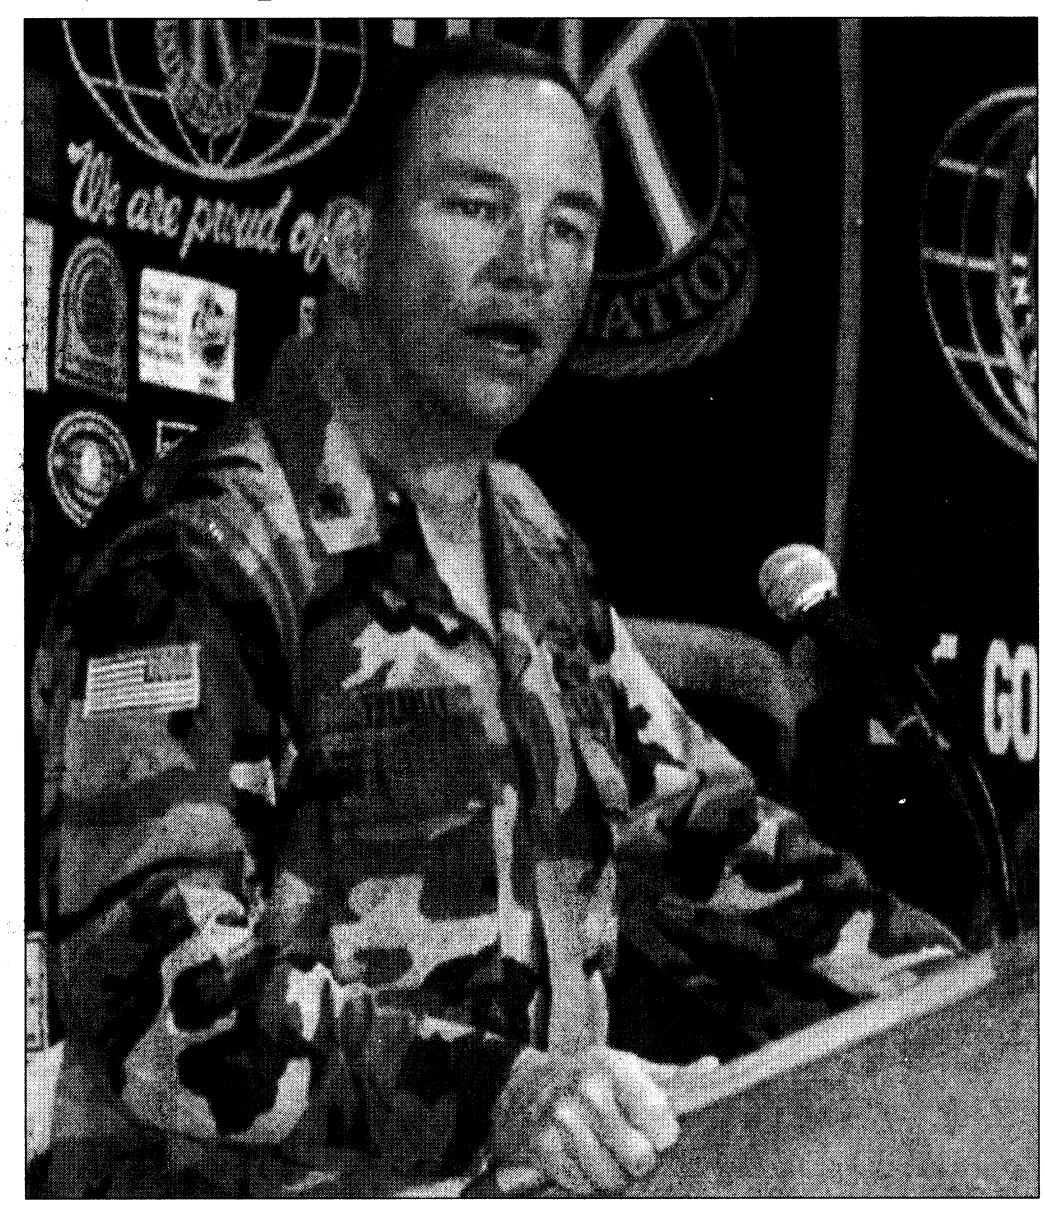
"We lost," he said. "I went home on leave and never went back."

How does a command sergeant major justify going AWOL in the midst of battle?



"It's one thing for a professional soldier to risk his life and lose it in support of his own country, but when the battle is clearly lost and all hope is gone...

"We fought the good fight, did what they asked us to do. But when it became obvious the war was lost, well, dying didn't make much sense."



So he came home. Returned to his country and a cause worth dying for. He joined the Army. Again. He volunteered for the Ranger option and began making his way in the world.

He has faced many enemies and traveled far to distant lands throughout the years in the name of duty, honor and country. He has walked with Rangers and fought with heroes. But it's a Rhodesian flag which hangs on his wall, surrounded by yellowed newspaper articles. Articles that breathe life into the legend of a long ago war and his days as a soldier of fortune.

WELL DONE FOLKS!

Job descriptions crucial for civilian employment

Civilian Personnel Advisory Center

The position description, commonly referred to as the PD by federal workers, briefly describes the major duties and responsibilities of a position or a number of positions.

The "standard of adequacy" as defined by the Office of Personnel Management is met when the PD contains sufficient information for the position to be classified.

Positions must be classified before employees can be paid. The position description serves as the official record of the work assigned by management to an employee.

Classification of the position involves determining pay plan, title, series and grade. The grade translates into how much an employee is paid for performing the work he or she is assigned. Every employee should have a copy of their position description.

The Human Resources Perspective

The human resources office uses position descriptions for the following purposes.

- As a definition of the functions and responsibilities of a job.
- As a mechanism for recruitment (determining qualifications)
- For advising on employee training and development
- For establishing and updating performance standards
- For reorganization, realignment or reductions in force planning.
- For determining Fair Labor Standards Act status (exempt or nonexempt).
- For developing internal or external announcements

The Employee Perspective

An employee uses a position description:

- As a tool to understand his or her area of responsibility during orientation
- For understanding new assignments or working conditions
- For understanding and establishing training objectives and developmental goals
- As a jump start for recommending improvement to work
- To file a classification appeal

The Supervisor or Manager perspective

A supervisor or manager uses position descriptions:

- As tools to manage their organizations
- As a basis for developing performance plans
- To assist employees at all levels to acquire a greater understanding of their assigned duties
- To introduce new employees to their positions
- To clearly delineate work assignments and detect overlaps or gaps in those assignments
- To reassign or fix functions and responsibilities of their assigned organization
- To evaluate work performance by a comparison between what the employee accomplishes and what is required by the position description
- To assist in hiring and placing employees in positions for which they are best suited
- To improve workflow and technical for work accomplishment
- To make decisions concerning reorganizations, realignments and reductions in force

The importance of position descriptions cannot be over emphasized. In order for the PD to be an effective tool, it must be kept current. When a position description becomes outdated, it no longer reflects the manager's intent for the organization. Position descriptions should always reflect, promote, and enhance the overall goals of position and pay management.

Good position and pay management is also reflective of the mission, economy and efficiency of operations, employee motivation, career development and ladders, recruitment and retention, and also provides for a balance of trainees to full performance level positions.

NSPS Q&A

Civilian Personnel Advisory Center

MYTH

I will lose my job security and there will be layoffs.

FACT

No jobs will be eliminated because of NSPS. In fact, under NSPS there may be more opportunities for civilians as military positions are converted to civilian.

By easing the administrative burden routinely required by the current system, managers will turn to civilians first when assigning vital tasks.

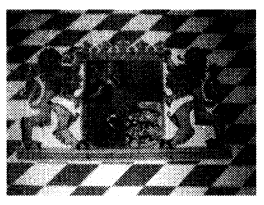
MYTH

Seniority and veterans' preference will no longer count in the event of a reduction in force.

FACT

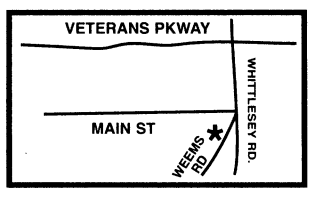
Not true.

Veterans' preference eligibles are still retained over employees without veterans' preference in RIF.



Also, seniority continues to be a factor in RIF.

However, because National Security Personnel System is a performance-based system, the proposed regulations give greater weight to performance in RIF retention by placing performance ahead of length of service.



Employees competing for retention under RIF who have the same performance ratings will be retained based on length of service.

Editor's note: This is the third of a weekly series on National Security Personnel System explaining the system.

Sledgehammer Soldiers' mission to impede IED production

Spc. Natalie Loucks
3rd Brigade Combat Team PAO

Spc. Natalie Loucks

Pfc. Gene Kemper, right, a squad designated marksman with 1st Battalion, 30th Infantry Regiment, observes the area before he and the squad move forward to the next objective.

MUKHISA, Iraq — Soldiers from B Company, 1st Battalion, 30th Infantry Regiment, 3rd Brigade Combat Team, 3rd Infantry Division, Task Force Liberty, along with support elements from Brigade Troops Battalion, 3rd BCT, prepared their vehicles and themselves in the darkness of the early morning April 12 at Forward Operating Base Warhorse.

The mission of Operation Hammer Rain, said 2nd Lt. Chardon Hyde, B Co., was to hamper the ability of the insurgents to make improvised explosive devices.

The task of the operation was to search houses in the town of Mukhisa and seize high-value targets, "high-value" because intelligence indicated they were engaging in, or preparing to engage in terrorist actions.

Hyde said the Soldiers looked for weapons and materials with the potential to be become lethal weapons like IEDs.

According to Iraqi law, each family in the town is allowed one AK-47 and one loaded magazine.

If more than the permitted amount was found in any house, the weapons and ammo were taken.

Those who were apprehended were flex-cuffed, tested for explosive residue on their hands and face and placed in the back of M-2 A2 Infantry Fighting Vehicles.

Hyde said the weapons, any suspicious matter and the detainees were taken to FOB Normandy to be investigated.

"The severity of what they have been charged with and what they have been found guilty of decides what will happen to them," he said.

"What is also looked at is the information and what evidence is known about them."

Hyde said he was pleased with the mission.

"Tactically, the mission went well," he said. "The Soldiers did what they were supposed to do and the support was there like it was supposed to be. Overall, it was a good mission militarily."

Staff Sgt. Felix Cruz, a squad leader for 1st platoon, agreed.

"We captured some of the personnel that were on the list," he said.

"Our mission was accomplished."

Mail brings 'home' to Marne Soldiers

Spc. Natalie Loucks
3rd Brigade Combat Team PAO

FOB WARHORSE, Iraq

"Where is my mail? Did we get any mail? How long before my package gets here?"

Countless questioning about Soldiers mail is a daily occurrence for Sgt. 1st Class Marlon Daniels, post master, 300th Adjutant General Postal Unit on Forward Operating Base Warhorse.

"I try to ensure the Soldiers' packages and mail will get here," Daniels said. He is the mediator between the troops and the postal services — and he loves it.

"Mail is a huge morale booster. It's a tie to home and a Soldier's need," he said.

If there are any missing pieces of mail and the missing mail is brought to the attention of the post office on Warhorse, Daniels said his Soldiers will take the names of the recipients and try to locate the missing pieces.

Daniels and his Soldiers of the 300 AG Postal Unit out of Chicago, in addition to Warhorse, conduct postal operations out of FOB Gabe, FOB Scunion and FOB Normandy. Mail clerks from these bases will travel to Warhorse to pick up parcels belonging to Soldiers of their base.

"Scunion is so close that we usually just take the mail to them," Daniels said.

Spc. Carvella Sarchione, Spc. Dewain Graeen, Pfc. Cesia Bear and Spc. Jeff Thorne agree the best part of the job is meeting people from different units and getting used to seeing them everyday. The Soldiers all work for Daniels and the 300 AG Postal Unit.

Although, the postal service at Warhorse is efficient, mail doesn't just show up. It must make the lengthy trip from Logistical Support Area Anaconda.

Truck drivers from Kellogg, Brown & Root Construction Company work to get the Soldiers what they long to have — their mail.

Mark Turberville has been in Iraq for 14 months and said he plans on staying for another year. He proudly said the best part of the job is working with "the best people in the world — the Soldiers."

The mail trucks, which are armored with metal plates on the front of the vehicles and have metal fencing over the windows, travel with military convoys everywhere they go, said Jerald Goad of KBR, who travels with the mail.

"I will be here as long as there is mail to be delivered," he said, laughing. "Or until my wife says it's time to come home."

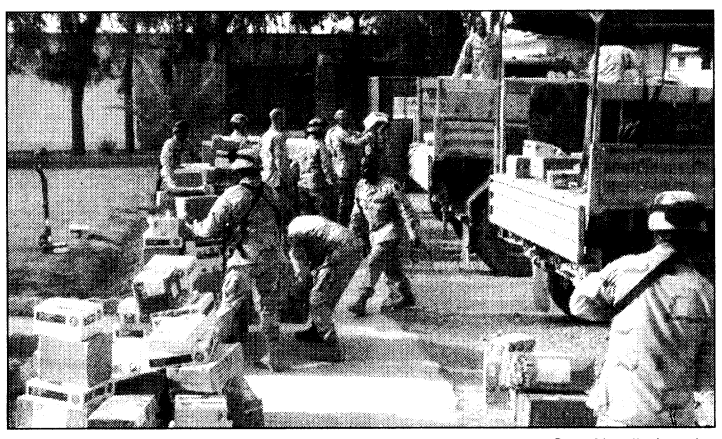
Turberville said he has already been shot at, mortared, hit with improvised explosive devices and rocket propelled grenades, but he still loves what he does.

Maurice Works has been working with the "Pony Express," a nickname given to the mail carriers traveling from Anaconda, for four months and said the job is highlighted by all the people he has encountered and continues to meet along the way.

"Mail is a touch of home and that's what important," Goad said.

Works and Goad are veterans from the Vietnam War and say they understand what its like to go without ties to home. They say that's why they do what they do.

Soldiers appreciate 'snail mail' delivery



Capt. Chaz Cannon
2nd Battalion, 69th Armor Regiment

FOB SCUNION, Iraq

These days, with all of the technological improvements and advancements, "snail mail" may seem like a thing of the past.

Not so in the 2nd Battalion, 69th Armor Regiment, 3rd Brigade Combat Team, 3rd Infantry Division, Task Force Liberty. When the mail arrives at Forward Operating Base Scunion, usually by the truckload, Soldiers love it.

Many Soldiers offer to help unload the myriad of brown boxes and orange mail card bags.

Spc. Natalie Loucks

2nd Battalion, 69th Armor Regiment, Soldiers unload and sort mail.

"It's nice to hear from home every now and then, in the form of a letter as opposed to just e-mail," said Capt. Carlos Moya. "With 'snail mail,' food and movies come, too."

Although every Soldier has access to a computer, telephone and Webcam, some still like to receive a letter.

Many Soldiers said they enjoy re-reading letters from home during their down time.

It helps to keep them focused on their family while they are in a combat zone.

"It brightens your day to know people back home are thinking about you," said Capt. Mike Jones.

"I just think it's more personal," added 2nd Lt. Warren Withrow.

Many wives or girlfriends send letters with their husband's or boyfriend's favorite perfume sprayed on it.

At any rate, Soldiers greatly appreciate any and all "snail mail" they receive from back home.

It's always a good feeling to get some recent DVDs or some junk food that is not readily available in theater.

COMMUNITY

According to the Bureau ofLabor Statistics, 64.5 million people did at least one hour of work during fiscal 2004. That's 28.8 percent of the population. Those ages 35 to 44 were most likely to volunteer, and those in their early 20s were the least likely. The most common reason for not volunteering — lack of time.

Fort Benning's volunteers were honored April 21 in a ceremony at Riverside. The ceremony recognized the latest in a longstanding tradition of volunteer effort by volunteers logging thousands of hours.

"At the end of the day, the American Soldier is a volunteer," said commanding general Brig. Gen. Benjamin Freakley. "And behind every Soldier volunteer are these volunteers who allow them to go forward and fight.

We pause today to recognize every one of them who have given of themselves so others could receive and so we could have an installation of excellence."

Commanding General Brig. Gen. Benjamin Freakley, left, accepts a symbolic check from Sarah Hertig, at the Volunteer Appreciation Ceremony at Riverside April 21. The check for more than $1.9 million, represents the value of the more than 2,400 volunteer hours.

Although 2,457 volunteered their time and talents both at Fort Benning and supporting the post's partnership efforts, 20 received Volunteer of Excellence awards. Special awards were also given for the Family Readiness Group,

Curtains up on comedy

Dinner theater ready for May opening

Annette Fournier
Bayonet staff

Benning's Backstage Dinner Theater will perform the Woody Allen comedy, Don't Drink the Water, May 6, 7 , 13 and 14 at the Kelley Hill Recreation Center.

The off-the-wall comedy centers around Walter and Marion Hollander, an uncouth couple from New Jersey, who cause an international incident when they go on a European vacation.

While in an un-named Eastern-block country, the Hollanders take photos in a restricted area, and are forced to flee to the American embassy for help.

The Hollanders situation is only made worse when the ambassador's son, the bumbling Axel Magee, infamous for his international blunders, tries to help.

Magee has his hands full, between a meddling assistant ambassador arranging spy trades with the communist police, the Hollanders lounging around the embassy in bathrobes while VIPs visit, and a hun plotting daring escapes while performing magic tricks.

Annette Fournier

Susan Hollander, played by Erica McNally, makes the moves on love interest Axel Magee, played by Maj. Louis Schwartz, MEDDAC, in Benning's Backstage dinner theater production of Don't Drink the Water. It will be performed May 6, 7, 13, and 14 at Kelly Hill Recreation Center. Doors open at 6:30 p.m.

Somehow, the Hollanders have to find a way to sneak out of the embassy before it's blown up by rioters. Through all the madness, Magee and the Hollander's daughter, Susan, fall in love, much to her parents' chagrin. A cast of crazy characters and witty dialogue makes this show a must-see, and will bring lots of laughs to audience members.

The first show will be performed May 4 for Soldiers from Basic Combat Training Brigade.

The cast of 11 actors are enthusiastic about the show.

"You take a normal person and put him in an abnormal situation, and you're going to see some funny stuff," said Jerry Klein of his role as Walter Hollander, a caterer turned suspected-spy, Walter Hollander.

Klein has performed on television and over 50 plays, and is excited to participate in his first show with Benning's Backstage.

"It's a great show because it's funny and wacky," Klein said. "It's Woody Allen at his best."

The only active-duty Soldier in the play, Maj. Louis Schwartz, MEDDAC, will play Axel Magee in his first acting role.

Governor visits post

Tours site of future Infantry museum

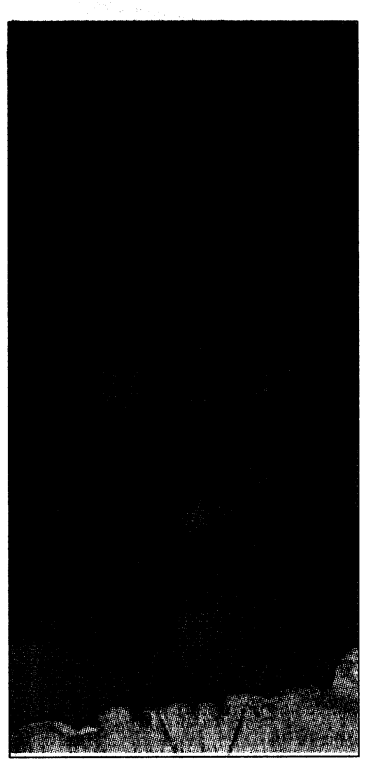
Cyndy Cerbin
National Infantry foundation

Georgia Gov. Sonny Perdue dodged earth movers and rock piles to survey the site of the new National Infantry Museum and Heritage Park during his visit to Fort Benning and Columbus last Friday.

Perdue

"This is the right place to honor these Soldiers, and it's the right time to do it," Gov. Perdue said, as he walked among the buildings of World War II Company Street. "Preserving these buildings represents a significant contribution to our nation's history — and there is no place more fitting than Fort Benning, the home of America's Infantry."

Just before the tour, the governor met with Brig. Gen. Benjamin Freakley, commanding general, and retired Maj. Gen. Jerry White, chairman of the National Infantry Foundation, in Infantry Hall's Bayonet Room to view a video about the project and learn more about the plans.



"The governor was very impressed with the overall plan for the National Infantry Museum project and the progress we have made to date," White said.

"He was keenly interested in our efforts to honor Soldiers and preserve the legacy of the Infantry."

"Infantrymen deserve this museum, and the museum is worthy of the support of the community and of the state," . Perdue told reporters.

The National Infantry Foundation has raised about $40 million, and is more than halfway toward its fund raising goal.

Project leaders showed the 1940s-era buildings that were moved and are being restored to recreate a typical World War II Company Street to Perdue, Freakley and White as they toured the site.

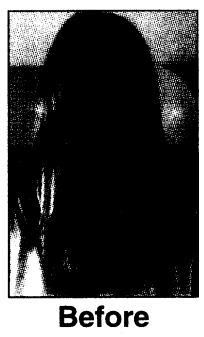
Brooke Smith, 9, models her new haircut. She donated 10 inches of hair to Locks of Love.

McBride student has heart of gold



Melissa House

Brooke Smith's haircut makes her look like a young Dorothy Hamill, and she has a heart that's pure gold.

Last month, Brooke sported hair well past her 9-year-old shoulders. This month it's gone — donated to the Locks of Love program.

Brooke said she got the idea to donate her hair after seeing a story on a talk show. A girl her age had just donated her hair to the nonprofit organization that provides hairpieces for financially disadvantaged children who are suffering from long-term hair loss.

"I thought I might be able to do that," Brooke said. But the donated hair must be at least 10 inches long, so Brooke had to wait a few months until it grew long enough to cut and send.

Before

After

Her mother asked her if she was sure she wanted to cut her hair.

"I told her I knew I'd be helping and knew they'd be praying for me," Brooke said, so her mom took her to the salon and picked a hairstyle.

"I was kind of nervous," she said. "I've always had it long. At first, they cut it a little wrong, so they had to cut it shorter."

She said they followed the mailing instructions her mom found on the Internet, sending the ponytail to Florida in a waterproof mailing envelope. Florida, she said, is where Locks of Love takes the hair and makes it into wigs for children who have lost their hair.

Del Hicks, the principal of Mc Bride Elementary, where Brooke is in the third grade, said her actions are an example of how his students show concern for others.

"We're so proud of Brooke," Hicks said.

Brooke said she's told some of her friends with long hair they should get their hair cut and donate it too, but hasn't had any luck yet. She's also planning on making it a regular event. She thinks she'll cut it again once it gets long enough.

Iris Kimbley teaches Brooke in an enrichment class and in math and isn't surprised at what she's done.

"We have such caring students," Kimbley said.

"Hers was a big step, but she's a neat, bright little girl and very helpful."

And Brooke, who is active in McBride's Woodland and Technology Clubs, isn't going to stop with just donating her hair. She has her sights set on another goal.

Her next project?

"If I win the art contest," she said, "first prize is fifty dollars. I'm going to send half to kids who need it in Africa. If I only get second, that's twenty-five dollars. I'll send half of that."

ASK THE JUDGE

Anthony R. Tempesta
Office of the Staff Judge Advocate

Q: How can money become "abandoned property?"

A: All states have a "dormancy period," in which money that is left unclaimed or inactive for a certain period of time is considered abandoned.

One example would be a savings account in which the account holder made no contributions or withdrawals for a number of years.

Other examples include an uncashed payroll check or income tax refund check.

The dormancy period varies from state to state, but in both Georgia and Alabama for example, bank accounts that are inactive for five years are considered abandoned.

Once an account is considered abandoned, the bank is required to report that information to the state. After a period of time, the property is usually transferred to the state's abandoned property office.

To avoid abandonment, account holders should make occasional transactions.

States routinely maintain custody of millions of dollars of abandoned property, hoping to find the rightful owners.

It is a good idea to check with the abandoned property office of each state you have lived in — there is no charge to do so and you may find a windfall!

Commissary answers common questions

Bonnie Powell
Defense Commissary Agency

May is Commissary Awareness Month, or CAM as it is also known, and the emphasis is on nutrition and savings.

"Making healthy choices is our focus this year," said Patrick B. Nixon, acting director and chief executive officer for the Defense Commissary Agency.

"Customers can choose to get healthy and stay healthy by shopping their commissary for nutritious, fresh food at 'healthy' savings of 30 percent or more. That's it plain and simple."

Customers can look forward to a number of popular activities at their commissary during CAM celebrations in May.

"There will be a worldwide case lot sale, and single service and young military member tours, as well as health and wellness tours," said Nixon. "And it's National Physical Fitness Month, too, a good time to 'exercise' your right to save money by shopping every single aisle of the commissary."

Customers near and far can find out when their favorite commissary will have its case lot sale during the month of May, although a few stores will start in late April or extend into June. A special Web page, at www.commissaries.com, is up and running with a list of store dates and links to each commissary's spotlight page where customers can find details such as store hours and some sale items, if available.

Case lot sale savings typically average up to 50 percent or more over regular retail prices on paper goods, canned goods, cleaning supplies, beverages and more.

More than 70 single service member programs worldwide for the Navy, Army and Marines, as well as the Air Force First Term Airmen centers, are signed up for the chance to participate in fun and informative commissary tours and the annual competition to win "bonus bucks" for best participation and creativity during the tours.

Programs also get $100 in commissary gift certificates to use for prizes and drawings during tour events. Gift certificates and prizes are donated by the Consumer Awareness Team, an industry outreach committee.

The commissary tour theme for 2005, "It's Your Choice, Make It Healthy," ties in with Tricare's new "Healthy Choices for Life" campaign aimed at combating alcoholism, tobacco use and obesity among military members and their families.

"It's Your Choice, Make It Healthy" is DeCA's partnering effort to educate customers about the advantages of using the commissary benefits for healthy, fresh foods — and at lower prices than can be found anywhere outside the gate.

CHILD ABUSE PREVENTION

Violent homes damage youths

Rebecca S. Welch
Family Advocacy Program

When family violence occurs in a household, everyone is affected, said Rebecca Welch, Family Advocacy Program manager.

Parents often attempt to minimize the effects of their violence on their children due to their own lack of awareness, fear, and guilt. Often they will say that "the children were asleep," "the children don't know about our fighting," or "we would never let the children get hurt."

In fact, Welch said children are often present during incidents or they are in another room of the house where the screams, thuds, and shouting can be heard. Although they may not be physically injured in the altercations, the emotional and psychological damage of witnessing the violence can remain throughout their lives.

From years of working with families, Welch said reports obtained from parents concerning the effects of family violence on their children will frequently be inaccurate and often uninformed.

It is essential that each child in the family be interviewed and assessed concerning the impact of family violence on their personal lives. Some of the effects the social worker, teacher, day care worker, etc., may observe include, but are not limited to:

• Child's lack of sleep. The children wake up during fights and often are unable to go back to sleep. They are often tired at school.

• Lack of parental attention, affection, and nurturance. Their parents are focused on their own problems.

• Poor school performance. They are often unable to concentrate or focus on schoolwork.

• Loss of friends and increased isolation. The children fear that their friends will learn about the violence or that a fight might occur when friends are present.

• Running away. This often occurs when fear or tension level becomes intolerable.

• Chronic fear for own, siblings, and parent's safety.

• Depression.

• Anxiety. They become alarmed at any indication of parent anger or tension.

• Accidental physical injury during parental altercation.

• Physical injury when intervening to break up a fight.

• Child has to assume adult responsibilities making it their job to call the police and having to protect younger siblings.

• Adolescents are likely to date controlling or exploitative individuals.

Threats, overheard or directed at children, are often discounted as a source of harm. Threats, however, are often drastic: a threat to kill or to seriously injure a parent is extremely frightening to a child. Children frequently scream and cry for the abuser to "not hurt mommy or daddy," and sometimes are threatened with death or injury to themselves if they try to help the victim.

Sometimes children are punched, slapped, or beaten in their attempts to help a victimized parent. Children's experiences have included, for example:

• Chair thrown at 5-year-old child

• Ten-year-old child hit with broom handle; chipped teeth, broken cheekbone, facial cuts

• Four-year-old child hit with fist in the stomach; internal hemorrhaging

• Fourteen year old beaten and thrown out of the house

Each child's experience will be different, and each child's reaction will be intensely personal.

Many children will need professional counseling. Most will need information and education concerning domestic violence in order to lessen the likelihood of either victimization or abusive behavior as adults.

The pressure of family violence creates conflicting loyalties for children. A few questions to be considered are:

How does a child express affection to a parent who batters the other parent?

If both parents act violently, to which parent is the child loyal?

What should the child do about the violence?

On the other hand, reporting violence to school or police often evokes fear and guilt for the child. Children may ask themselves, for example:

What happens if (the abusing parent) is arrested and goes to jail?

Will my parent lose his or her job? Will it be my fault?

What will happen to my family?

Will there be a divorce?

Will we have to move? Where will we go?

Welch said that there are no easy answers to these questions and that it is a burden for children to carry all of this around on their shoulders.

Most of the time, an abusive spouse may attempt to control the information revealed to authorities by threatening harm to both victim and children. This is likely to be the situation when a parent refuses to permit the children to talk with service providers.

When this type of situation occurs, a coordinated and comprehensive utilization of investigatory services is needed, due to the high correlation between spousal abuse and child maltreatment.

Welch said that when this happens the Family Advocacy Victim Advocate is available to assist the victim and children. The advocate will link the family to services that will prevent further potential victimization.

For further information on Victim Advocacy, you may call 545-7517.

April is Occupational Therapy Month

Lt. Col. Steven M. Gerardi
AMEDD Center and School

Each year, thousands of Soldiers suffer illnesses or injuries that hinder their job performance. Occupational therapy helps people engage in the activities that give life meaning. April is National Occupational Therapy Month.

Army occupational therapists and occupational therapy assistants help Soldiers achieve effective occupational performance. They work in a broad range of settings, from Combat Stress Control detachments and Combat Support Hospitals to Army Medical Centers. They help clients develop "skills for the job of living" in four main practice areas: ergonomics, hand therapy, physical rehabilitation, and mental health.

Fitting the Job to the Worker

Ergonomics is the science of matching the job task to the worker. Army occupational therapists use ergonomic principles to protect Soldiers' health and enhance their productivity. As experts in analyzing activity and adapting environments for more effective performance, therapists are instrumental in identifying workplace hazards and implementing interventions to prevent or decrease work related injuries caused by poor biomechanics.

The therapist might improve the occupational performance of parachute riggers by modifying a workstation, adding manual material handling equipment and anti-fatigue mats, adjusting table heights, and instructing the riggers in proper body mechanics. Such efforts result in better outcomes for Soldiers and their units through efficiency, decreased injuries and lost work time, and enhanced quality of life in the workplace.

Hands-on Hand Therapy

Because work involves the use of one's hands, Army occupational therapists are also experts in the evaluation and treatment of conditions that affect the hands and arms. Unlike their civilian counterparts, Army occupational therapists diagnose and treat hand and arm conditions that can be managed without surgery. This ability makes them an invaluable asset when deployed in a combat theater by freeing orthopedic surgeons from the need to manage routine non-surgical cases.

Unfortunately, many deployed Soldiers sustain injuries to their hands that require surgery and occupational therapy. By deploying to combat theaters, therapists are able to treat Soldiers within the theater and avoid the need for evacuation.

For example, for the Soldier with a repaired severed tendon in his thumb, the occupational therapist can make a dynamic splint and rehabilitate the Soldier in theater and keep the Soldier on the job.

Returning Injured Soldiers to Life

In a rehabilitation setting, Army occupational therapists address one of the most important aspects of a Soldier's recovery, the return to a life full of activities they find meaningful and purposeful. The term that occupational therapists use to encompass the range and meaning of "everyday life activity" is occupation. They use the term "occupation" to describe everything people do to occupy themselves, including self-care, social participation, education, work and leisure activities.

For Soldiers who have suffered a debilitating illness or injury, occupational therapy is a bridge on the road to a meaningful life that spans the frightening depths of disability and despair. Therapists and therapy assistants help injured Soldiers regain "skills for the job of living," to do the important everyday activities necessary to participate in a full life.

Combat Stress Control & Mental Health

In war, Soldiers can experience occupational performance deficits that result from psychological trauma and physical injury. Therefore, therapists are vital members of Combat Stress Control units and other mental health teams. Occupational therapists apply their expertise in occupational performance to enhance Soldiers' mental health and keep them on the job in spite of operational stressors or other mental health conditions. Occupational therapy interventions in Combat Stress Control range from advising commanders on ways to minimize the impact of combat stress on their Soldier's mission performance to engaging a battle-fatigued Soldier in therapeutic occupation to restore his confidence and sense of competency. The therapist may work with a battle fatigued Soldier who is overwhelmed by the stress of an artillery bombardment. The therapist may engage the Soldier in an activity he can accomplish at his functional level. The therapist selects an activity that will support the Soldier's warrior identity, reassure him that he can still function effectively and restore his sense of competency. In so doing, the Soldier can see that his condition is transient and he is able to return to duty. A therapist working in support of the Army Substance Abuse Program assists clients with alcohol dependence to enhance their occupational performance by aiding them to develop a lifestyle that supports sobriety. The therapist might help the Soldier identify and explore new leisure pursuits to replace maladaptive habits that involved alcohol .

Whether modifying the workplace to prevent injuries, getting a battle fatigued Soldier back in the fight or rehabilitating an injured Soldier, therapists keep Soldiers' on the job.

Volunteers: Give time to Army

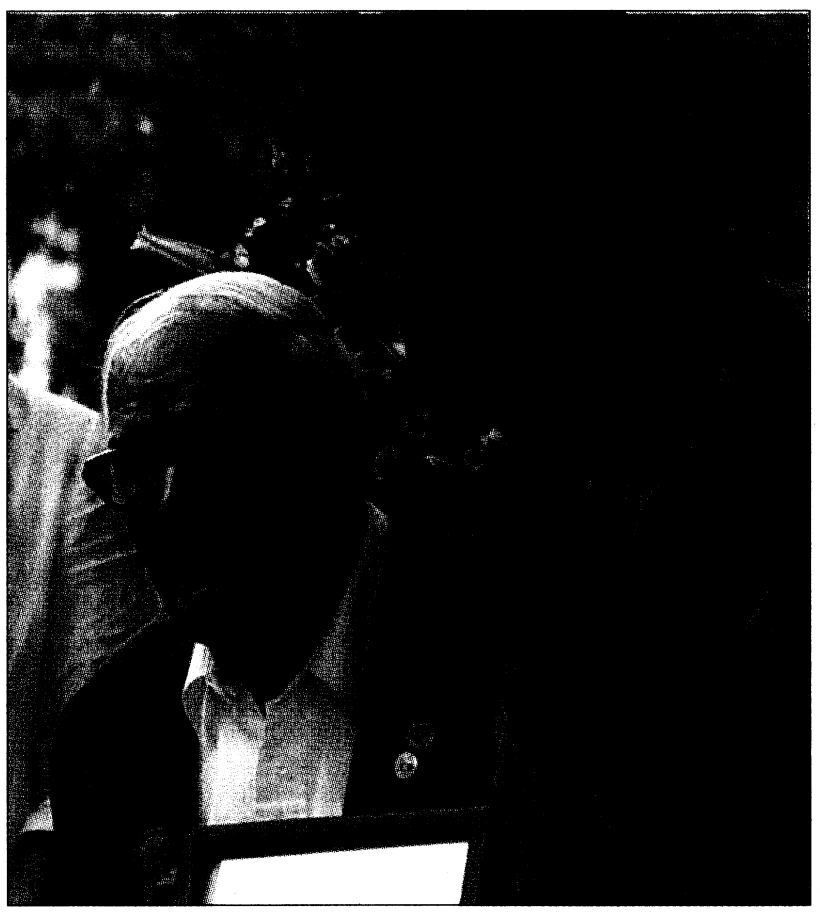
Retiree and Youth Volunteers of Excellence, and award to the FRG of Excellence and the Volunteer Organization of Excellence.

"We are fortunate to have some of the very best, who day after day, make this a great place," Freakley said. Although the volunteer's time is valued at more than $17 an hour, he said that dollar amount valued very little, that the real value was in "human capital."

Freakley thanked the volunteers who gave their "time, heart and love" to more than 50 organizations and community programs, from family readiness groups, partnerships in education, and Scouting to the American Red Cross. Each and every volunteer, he said, made a significant impact.

"If you ask yourselves, 'Did I make a difference?" he said. "Our FRGs were supported, our schools well supported. Economically and socially deprived children have been given hope. And if you want to see women on fire, visit Santa's Castle.

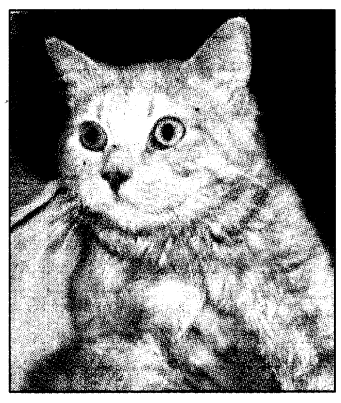


"We need to bundle some of that and infuse it into American society," he said.

Installation Volunteer Ceremony coordinators Rebecca Welch and Sarah Hertig presented Freakley with a symbolic check for almost $2 million – the total value of the volunteers' time. Freakley said he knew there were many volunteer hours were never recorded.

"You've made a huge difference," he said. "So get out there and get after it. Get out and get 10 more."

The last award Freakley presented was to the Fort Benning Girl Scouts, an organization with girls ages 5 to 17.



"The Girl Scouts show that the youth of today make a difference," he said.

Play: Opens May 6 for community

"It's a lot of fun, it's a great family show," he said.

This will be the last show for Benning Backstage's director, Peggy Cornwell, who will move away from the area this summer.

"I'm excited about this show, and I know it will be funny and entertaining. I've done a lot of great shows with Benning's Backstage, so I really hope that someone takes over the theater after I leave, and carries it on."

The dinner theater's menu will include chicken parmesan, vegetarian pasta with a cream sauce, lasagna, salad, rolls, dessert and wine, tea and coffee.

Doors open at 6:30 p.m. for the cash bar, dinner begins at 7 and the show begins at 8. Audience members should arrive at 6:30 for the first-come, first-serve seating. Parties of eight or more can reserve a table by calling ahead.

Local entertainers will perform during dinner. May 6 will feature Hermel Fortin on guitar, May 7, Nicole Gilyard on piano, May 13, Major Brown on piano, and May 14, the combo group, the Golder Airs.

Ticket prices are for $19 for adults and $12 for kids 12 and under. Tickets must be bought in advance by calling 682-1120. For more information, call 689-4342.

Choose wisely

Choice has eternal repercussions

Chaplain R. Paul Lasley
Ranger Training Brigade

Lasley

No one wants to deliberately waste his or her life. Of course, one person's "waste" is another person's "gain."

For instance, depending on your point of view, getting married and having children is a foolish surrender to unwarranted parameters on your life (especially if you are married to a jerk). To others with a different point of view — getting married and having children is a deliberate choice toward the pursuit of personal fulfillment and satisfaction.

Some people look at military service as a waste of a life. Others look at it as noble and selfless patriotism.

The determination of waste or gain is a result of how we view our own personal status in terms of financial, social and even professional success.

Although Christians recognize it is good to have financial, social and professional success and status — we also know not measure our life with professional success or status to determine whether or not our life is a waste or gain.

A Christian with only trace amounts of faith has to know it's possible to be a millionaire and still live a wasted life. Accumulation of wealth does not prevent you from wasting your life.

It is also possible to receive the Medal of Honor or be happily married to a Sports Illustrated bikini model (or if you are a lady, to be married to a Fabio lookalike) and still live a wasted life.

Noble selflessness in and of itself does not prevent you from wasting your life. Christians believe that anything that does not please God or bring honor to the name of Christ, is in fact wasting time in life. To structure life around pleasing God and around deliberate effort to bring honor to the name of Christ, is the one and only path to an unwasted life.

I believe it is impossible to waste your life if you choose to serve Christ.

To live independently from Christ is to run the eternal risk of wasting your life. On the other hand, to live dependently on and in Christ runs the provisional risk of being demonized by secular skeptics.

As Christians, you and I need to choose what is an acceptable risk in life — to live life in an orbit around self-preservation and self-dominance; or to live our life orbited around pleasing God and honoring Christ. To choose the former is the spiritual equivalent of believing the words of Satan when he tempted Christ three times (Matthew 4:1-11) to choose personal comfort and immediate gratification of hunger (when Jesus was in the desert for 40 days of fasting).

I pray that each of us will choose to have abundant life, and have it abundantly (John 10:10). Again, the abundant life is not merely the blessings God may give us socially, professionally or even financially.

The abundant life is having Christ himself as our savior — not simply having gifts that he may give us. Choose wisely — your choice will have eternal repercussions.

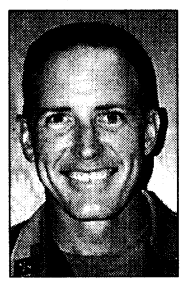
Homefront Heroes to hit beach in May

Chaplain (Maj.) Jeffrey D. Hawkins
Chaplain Family Life Center

REFLECTIONS

There's a hit country song out by Blake Shelton called Some Beach, Somewhere that's got an obvious play on words.

The good news is that there really is some beach, somewhere with your name on it if you are the spouse of a deployed Soldier and are looking for a wonderful way to get away in the midst of your Soldier's combat tour of duty.



On May 20, 21 and 22, Fort Benning is going to experience an Army first — I will be privileged to lead the "Homefront Heroes" retreat for spouses of deployed Soldiers to Panama City, Fla.

This is going to be a three-day, two-night retreat with child care included for those who cannot make the arrangements elsewhere for the weekend.

The purpose of the retreat is to honor the sacrifice being made by our spouses of deployed Soldiers by giving them a "beach break" where they can enjoy hope, help, laughter and learning in a setting just for them.

There will be relaxation and inspiration for a donation of just $11.11 per family. Sound like fun? You can bet your beach ball it will be.

To register for this limited space event, you need to call 545-1760 to have your name placed on the reservation list.

Hawkins

Details, you say? Sure, I've got them.

Again, the Homefront Heroes Retreat will begin the evening of May 20. Transportation to Panama City will occur one of two ways.

You can choose to travel via your vehicle or carpool with a friend who is going. Or you can, when registering, indicate your desire to travel via the Army bus that will also be offering transportation to the beach from Fort Benning.

After check-in and being assigned to private and attractive motel units at Panama City's Naval Support Annex (it sits right on St. Andrew's Bay in Panama City Beach with a lovely private beach), the activities of May 20 will include a welcome and high-energy, fun-filled get-to-know each other session.

Paid child care workers and volunteers will serve any children for whom you were not able to make arrangements during your time in our retreat sessions.

After a good night's rest and a convenient breakfast onsite, May 21 will see you enjoying a mid-morning session designed to offer you the help and hope you deserve as a spouse of a Soldier in the midst of a combat deployment.

Lunch is on us, too, as you get ready to enjoy an afternoon of fun in the sun, or whatever you choose to do with your free time.

After the barbecue the evening of May 21, we'll meet again to discover more tools to help you cope with the challenges of deployment before enjoying a sunset over the bay and a variety of games and movie options before bedtime.

The morning of May 22 will be a "day of rest" as you can opt to enjoy a bayside chapel service designed just for you or more R&R before checking out by 11:30 a.m. and starting the journey back home, inspired and renewed.

Want to save your spot and get more information? Call The Chaplain Family Life Center at 545-1760.

Space is limited, and is offered first-come, first-served.

Also, I'd be delighted to answer any questions for you at CrossRoads Contemporary Chapel at 11 a.m. Sundays. CrossRoads is on Kelley Hill and is open to all.

"Sad folks wake up and say, 'Nuther day."
I wake up and say, 'There she is again! There it is!
I get on my knees and pat the earth and say,
'God, you done it again!
God, you done good!
Thank you, feller ... friend."

• NBA playoffs heat up

Games 3 and 4 of the NBA playoffs are happening this weekend. The only one not on cable is Game 4 of Miami at New Jersey at 3:30 p.m. Saturday. ESPN and TNT will carry the other playoff games.

• Nomar gets repaired

Chicago Cub Nomar Garciaparra will have surgery to repair his injured groin, which happened in St. Louis April 20 when he slipped running out of the batter's box.

• Jackson, Bryant reunite?

The current rumor is that former Laker coach Phil Jackson, who coached from 1999-2004 (and also got the team three championship rings), will meet with Kobe Bryant. It's being seen as a possible return for Jackson.

• NASCAR comes to 'Bama

Kurt Busch drove to victory lane in the Subway Fresh 500 April 23.

Coverage of the Aaron's 499 from Talladega Superspeedway starts at 12:30 p.m. Sunday on FOX.

•Auburn alum go pro

Auburn University made history when Ronnie Brown, Carnell Williams, Carlos Rogers and Jason Campbell were first-round picks in the NFL draft April 23.

Brown will go to Miami, Williams to Tampa Bay and Rogers and Campbell to Washington.

In what many have called one of the best tournaments in years, ITB's 1/19 played three games in a row, beating out BCTB and MEDDAC to come from the loser's bracket and take home the title.

After an edge-of-your-seat victory over BCTB in four overtimes, 1/19 had to play two games against the winner's bracket champion, MEDDAC.

In the first game against MEDDAC, 1/19 jumped out to an early 23-13 lead, a deficit MEDDAC couldn't recover from.

"In the first game, we were already warmed up and they were cold," said Elliot Reid, 1/19. "We had the advantage, and we had a good bench of players."

At the half, 1/19 had jumped to a 29-15 lead. With 11:04 left in the game, Chris Moffett, MEDDAC, drew a foul and swished both of his shots from the line to pull within 10. Teammate Ross Seidel capitalized on a steal with a bucket, and the undefeated team moved within eight points, unable to close the gap for the next nine minutes.

With 1:51 left in the game, Seidel knocked down a three-pointer and narrowed the gap to six. That's when 1/19 went on a shooting spree.

Jottama McCormick hit a free throw followed by a lay-up by Desmond Williams and an assist from Philip Phinise to McCormick ended in a bucket and the clincher.

The first game ended with 1/19 up 55-44.

Because this is a double-elimination tournament, the teams had to play a second game.

The second game looked like a carbon copy of the first, with 1/19 jumping out to an early 17-9 lead seven minutes into the half.

"It was a bad style match-up," said Phillip Moore, MEDDAC coach. "1/19 had too many big guys for us tonight."

MEDDAC's tallest player is only 6'2" and Moore said 1/19 had at least 4 or 5 players at that height or taller. Another deciding factor was the depth of each team's bench. MEDDAC had seven players while 1/19 had 11.

"We played as hard as we can play," Moore said. "They posed a hard task for us. We knew to win we had to come out, play hard and take control of the game. We live and die by our

They both wanted a win, and they wanted it bad. BCTB wouldn't go down without a fight and ITB's 1/19 wasn't willing to pack up their bags and head back up the hill either.

BCTB came out on fire gaining the early lead over 1/19 with a 13-3 run, but once 1/19 got warmed up, they took control of the boards and by the end of the half had nabbed the 32-26 lead.

"It was neck and neck most of the second half," said Joel Benefiel, 1/19.

Robert James, BCTB, said his team opened up toward the end of regulation play and regained a seven-point lead, but with 1:30 left on the clock, 1/19 rallied back to tie up the score.

Going into the first overtime, 1/19 had a distinct advantage over BCTB.

"We started with five players and they had to play the whole game," James said. "We were tired."

Toward the end of the first overtime, 1/19 had the opportunity to end it, right there, but they missed a foul shot and the game went into a second.

"That happened twice," said James. "During the middle of the second overtime, with a minute and a half left we lost Jarael Holston, and for the rest of

Swim, bike, run — 'tri' it yourself

Melissa House
Bayonet staff

I beat Spc. Mike Osier in the pool. Twice. You might remember Osier as the former elite triathlete-turned-Soldier I featured in the sports section a few weeks ago. He has an invitation to compete in the All-Army Triathlon and I beat him in the pool.

OK. I'll share my secret. I got in the pool at 6:10 a.m. He got in a few minutes later.

I can't hold a candle to Mike Osier, but beware — I'm now out there exercising again. It only took one little press release from MWR announcing the first Fort Benning "Reverse" Sprint Triathlon to get me out of bed and into the pool ahead of him.

For those of you not hip on 'tris," the sprint distance is the shortest triathlon. Ours will be a 750m swim, a 20K bike and a 5K run, just not in that order. We'll be doing the events in reverse order, and I'm thanking my lucky stars.

The run, oh the run. My personal nemesis. At least I'll be able to get my worst, most painful event out of the way first. And the 20K bike — well, that will be over almost as quickly as it begins.

I'll be hanging on for the swim. That's where I'm in my element. I never feel quite as home doing any other form of exercise as I do when I'm in the pool. And, now that I'm jumpstarting my second lifetime of exercise, I'm hitting the water with a vengeance. Time to make up for wasting most of my 30s not doing much of anything.

So my first day of swimming went quite a lot like some I remember from college. — up before dawn and into the pool — with a few other interesting parallels.

Between sets, the strong smell of cologne wafted across the lanes. I'm not going to blame it on the guy in the lane next to me, because it could have been any of them. But let me say that cologne and chlorine really don't mix well.

I haven't had such an odiferous experience since my college team trained in Puerto Rico one year during Christmas Break. The guys in the lane next to me had discovered Puerto Rican rum the night before. And if you think swimmers don't sweat, you're wrong. The rum was seeping out their pores that morning. Yuck.

Obviously, I'm a few years out of college. well, almost 15 to be exact. I wage a daily battle with myself to exercise, but between now and June 4, my body is going to win the battle with my mind.

A sprint triathlon is a wonderful thing — short, sweet and to-the-point. If you can run a few miles, ride without training wheels, and even if your only swim stroke is the sidestroke or elementary backstroke, you can come "tri" it out.

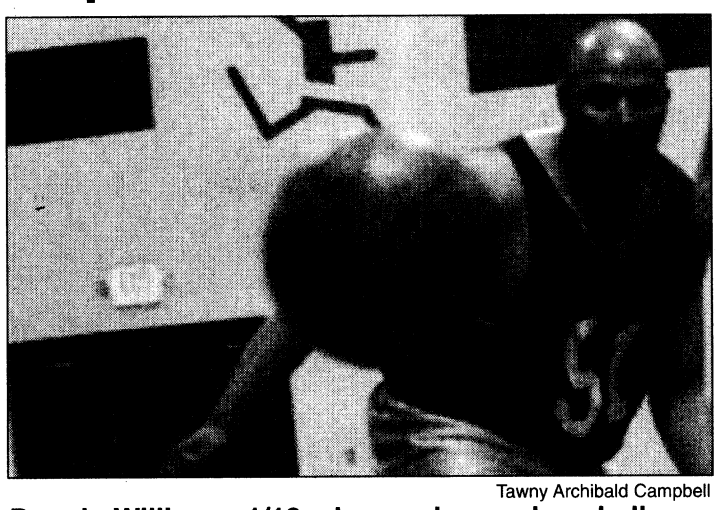
three's and tonight they just didn't fall."



With 4:07 left on the clock 1/19 had a seven-point lead, when MEDDAC started a small rally. Willie Williams hit one of his foul shots and moments later nailed a three-pointer to put MEDDAC within three points of 1/19.

Seeing the chance for MEDDAC to grab the lead, 1/19 went on a run.

Pernell Wilson nailed both of his line shots followed by Reid, who added another from the line.

The six-point lead was short-lived when Moffett downed a three with 1:07 on the clock to put the score at 49-46.

In the next minute of the game, MEDDAC hit one hoop while 1/19 threw up five, knocking MEDDAC out of the winner's bracket with a 56-48 win.

Dennis Williams, 1/19, chases down a lose ball.

"It was a great game with two teams who wanted to be the winner," Reid said. "There was a never-say-die attitude on both ends of the court, but in the end, we closed them out.

"It's sweet, a real good feeling to come out of the loser's bracket and win everything."

the game we played with four players and they had five."

After Holston fouled out, many on the sidelines thought the game was over, but BCTB wasn't ready to give up yet.

"During the second, third and fourth overtimes it was neck and neck, we couldn't really pass each other up," Benefiel said.

But exhaustion and the uneven match-up started to get the best of BCTB.

"We still wanted to win and we had to push through," James said. "About two minutes left in the last overtime they scored and we scored, then they kept scoring.

"It was a rough game and it took a lot of heart for us to play. We played two and a half overtimes with four players. Then the fatigue got to us."

1/19 ended up winning the game, 85-73.

"That was one of the best post games I've seen in a long time," Benefiel said. "In the end the depth of our bench won over. It was really the best game I've played in my career. The only bad thing was that someone had to lose, and I'm glad it wasn't us."

Tawny Archibald Campbell

Dennis Williams, 1/19, tries to stop a Robert James, BCTB, from scoring on a fast break.

James echoed Benefiel's sentiments.

"The semi-finals WAS the championship game," James said. "There is no way the championship game can live up to this. They may get the glory, but the people here will remember our game."

WHEN YOU'RE WAITING FOR A TRANSPLANT, WHAT'S MORE IMPORTANT: YOUR MEDICAL STATUS OR YOUR FINANCIAL STATUS?

André Weiss/Nonstock/Picture Quest

Contrary to rumors you may have heard, the transplant waiting list is completely blind to wealth or celebrity status. Once you're on the list for a donor organ, what really counts is the severity of your illness, time spent waiting, blood type and other important medical information. Call 1-800-355-SHARE or visit www.shareyourlife.org for honest information on organ donation. And remember, if you want to be a donor, you must tell your family or it may not happen.

TALK TO YOUR FAMILY ABOUT DONATING LIFE.
