Environmental Impact Statement official, Benning moves forward with construction

ROD paves way for $2.9B BRAC, Transformation activities

THE BAYONET

The Record of Decision, a document that formally completes the Environmental Impact Statement process, was published in the Federal Register Dec. 12.

The completion of this milestone paves the way for new construction of facilities, ranges and training areas, in accordance with 2005 Base Closure and Realignment Act and Transformation activities.

Jay Brown, BRAC program manager, who spoke to the media outside of the future Maneuver Center of Excellence the day the ROD was published, said the next five to six years will bring about 11,000 to 12,000 new jobs and $2.9 billion worth of construction to the community.

Crews will begin harvesting timber in January in areas where Armor School student barracks will be built, which is only one of the $356 million construction projects already awarded, he said.

The Armor Center and School, currently located at Fort Knox, Ky., will join the Infantry Center and School here to form the Maneuver Center of Excellence, as mandated through BRAC.

Before any construction could begin, though, Fort Benning had to complete an EIS, required by the National Environmental Policy Act.

The EIS evaluated the potential and socioeconomic effects associated with BRAC 05 and Transformation activities, and it provided a full and fair assessment of environmental impacts of the proposed action and informed decision makers and the public of reasonable alternatives, Army officials said.

It required the completion of a number of environmental studies and assessments, of which the

The National Infantry Museum is $1 million closer to completion, thanks to a check from AT&T, presented to Maj. Gen. Jerry White, chairman of the National Infantry Foundation, Dec. 13. The donation will be used to complete construction on the museum, scheduled to open by Veterans Day.

"We're deeply, deeply grateful for the sacrifices of our military personnel; they make those every day to protect us," said Terry Smith, regional manager of AT&T. "That's why we're so pleased to help bring a needed national landmark to Georgia that will commemorate the Soldiers who have served this country and specifically the Infantrymen of yesterday, today and tomorrow."

Free tax preparation available to service members, retirees

Last year, Tax Office staff saved customers $500,000

THE BAYONET
Brenda Donnell

Fort Benning's Tax Office will open in late January through April 15 for all active-duty service members, retirees and their Family members.

About 20 people will be available to prepare federal and state tax returns for those who are eligible, said Capt. Benjamin Hillner, legal assistance attorney, Legal Assistance Division.

The Tax Office helps save money for service members and retirees and gives them an opportunity to have their returns prepared on post rather than going off post to a commercial tax preparer, said Anthony R. Tempesta, Legal Assistance Division chief.

Hillner said having a Tax Office has become a standard at many Army installations, and many of those eligible have taken advantage of the service since joining the military.

Last year, the installation Tax Office served 5,720 service members and retirees and saved them a total of $500,000 for preparation, Hillner said. Refunds totaled more than $6 million.

Post tax return preparers learn the rules and procedures governing federal and state tax returns and relevant aspects of military tax law, and they receive training on the most current tax preparation software, Hillner said.

Perhaps most importantly, they learn to distinguish what kinds of returns are within the scope of their training and which must be referred to paid preparers, such as returns for business owners.

Those in need of assistance can ask for advice at the Legal Assistance Division,

OPINION

Here's the secret to success, more or less

THE BAYONET
Bridgett Siter

I know the secret to success, more or less, when it comes to New Year's resolutions.

The secret to success is "more" or "less."

If you're one of the 48 percent of adults in this country who make resolutions, you've probably already made them. Making them is the easy part. So easy, in fact, that most of those who participate in the ancient tradition — some sources say it dates back to Babylonia — will make more than one.

Less is more when it comes to making and keeping resolutions. The less you make — and the more thought and planning you put into them — the more successful you'll be. Tackle one or two legitimate issues that are very important to you and write them down somewhere you'll see them periodically, maybe on your calendar.

Don't bother posting your resolution on the bathroom mirror or the fridge or any place you'll see it over and over and over every day. In no time at all, it will become invisible to you. Don't believe me? Ask my editor — she put a sticky note on her desk in April to remind her to call the vet in August. The sticky note is still there, and the vet's still waiting.

Sharing your resolution with others is actually better than writing it. The more people you tell, the more likely you are to follow through. That's why, here at The Bayonet, we've put our resolutions in print and posted them (discreetly) on the wall. Sure, my co-worker might get a bit testy here in a few weeks when we keep reminding her she promised to clean up her potty mouth, but she's testy most of the time anyway.

Sharing your resolutions makes you accountable and, therefore, more likely to succeed. As an added benefit, your friends might have creative ideas to help you accomplish your goal. I'm thinking my cussing co-worker will like this stack of cue cards we've printed to help expand her vocabulary: golly, geez, heck, heck-fire, oh crud, holey moley, dang it, phooey, snap, blimey, Shania Twain, bull hockey, boloney and uuuuugh!

Before sharing your resolutions, make sure you've thought them through carefully. Think about constructing them around the concept of "more or less."

One year, I resolved to walk five miles every day, as fitness experts recommend. Five miles around the track ate up an hour and a half of my day. I couldn't do it. Now three miles was very doable. So I adapted my goal — "to walk more every day." It was fairly easy to give up an hour at the track each evening, and I found a number of ways to add "more" walking to my day, like parking my car in the back 40 and taking the (Shania Twain) stairs at work.

The same principle applies to "less." If you're trying to lose weight, resolve to eat more often (five times a day, instead of three) and eat less at each sitting. Resolve to walk more and drive less, to read more, to watch less TV, to laugh more and stress less, to spend more time with the kids, to spend less time with the cell phone, to call your mom more often and spend less money. You get the idea.

Now, I know what you're thinking — the concept of more or less is too vague to achieve any quantifiable success. That's where the plan comes in. Like everything that has ever been designed to make life easier, to make you more healthy, attractive or happy, today's New Year's resolution is more complex than its ancestors, those Babylonian resolutions.

Once you've established a resolution, the more planning and preparation you put into it, the more success you'll experience. If giving up smoking or losing weight — two of the most common resolutions year after year — is really important to you, develop a game plan that might include a consultation with your doctor. Glean tips from online resources and use what works for you.

And here's where it really is important to write it down. Make a list of all the reasons you want to lose weight, give up smoking, learn to dance the tango, whatever. Then list all the ways you might achieve your goal. Maybe you'll check out self-help videos from the library, sign up for a continuing ed class at the community college or fly to Argentina to attend the tango academy.

If applicable, list the steps you'll take to succeed. For instance, maybe you'll try giving up the Camels cold turkey first. That's step one. Then, if you can't deal with the detox, you'll try the patch. Step two. If that doesn't work, you're willing to try hypnotism. Good luck.

The key is to keep trying. Don't give up, no matter what your goal is or how many times you've failed. Remember, the average reformed smoker tries four times before experiencing lasting success. Here's where "more" applies, once again. Give yourself one more chance.

Cyber Patrol: Beware what you post on the Web

ARMY NEWS SERVICE
William J. Buzinski

Every day a dedicated group of Army experts search the Internet looking at official and unofficial Army Web sites and blogs.

They look for potential operational security violations that enemies can use to cause physical harm to Soldiers and their families, and personal information that could help criminals conduct identity theft. Each day they discover OPSEC violations and instances of personal data being posted in a public space. They immediately contact the owner of the information, explain why it should not be posted on a public site, and work with the owner to correct the problem.

These experts belong to the Army's Web Risk Assessment Cell and their work has been very effective. In 2006, AWRAC reviewed more than 1,200 known Army Web sites, plus 500 blogs and unofficial sites. AWRAC officials worked with Soldiers who did not realize the security ramifications of the data they posted, resulting in the removal of such sensitive information as biological, chemical and missile weapon systems on public sites. They also worked to remove information that would have enabled the theft of Soldiers Social Security numbers, dates of birth and home addresses.

The Internet is an incredible forum that allows worldwide exchange of news, opinion and information. It gives people around the world the opportunity to take advantage of the freedom of speech that is so important here in the States and in other free nations.

Yet even with the right to free speech, people normally would not tell the world the combination to the family's safe, where the extra house key is hidden or the route a child takes home from school. Following that same logic, talk of troop movements, weapon systems, upcoming deployments and tactical operations are best kept secret. The same is true for personal information that could result in identity theft. We must discipline ourselves to think before we post information.

Like most information assurance activities, keeping useful information out of the hands of criminals and enemies requires nothing more than common sense. With the sophisticated search capabilities now available, any unsecured site — no matter how small and obscure — is available to the entire world. Thinking twice before posting potentially harmful information is all it takes to help keep Army personnel and their families a little more secure.

This week in Fort Benning history

• A decade after World War I, which the Infantry School News refered to as "the War" or the Great War, the War Risk Insurance Bureau released records of requests and querries received between 1914 and 1918 pertaining to family benefits.

The Infantry School News printed a list of some of the more bizarre and humorous ones, including:

"I havene't heard from John since he was sent to a constipation camp in Germany."

"I did not receive my husband's pay, so I will have to live an immortal life."

"My Bill has been put in charge of a spitoon. Will I get more money?"

• A clever wife helped Army officials bust a bigamist, The Bayonet reported.

An unidentified soldier was sentenced to five years hard labor and a dishonorable discharge after applying for and receiving family allowance for his wife.

As it turned out, he had never divorced the wife he abandoned in 1937. He married again in 1941 and enlisted shortly after under an assumed name.

After his first wife posted her husband's picture in a "missing persons" column, she learned he had joined the Army. When she applied for family allowance for herself and her son, Army officials discovered the ruse.

The report said the second wife was not aware her husband had lied.

• An anonymous writer offered readers something to think about as they look to the New Year. Don't "kill time" during off duty hours, he urged — budget it carefully so as to make room for a healthy amount of recreation, sure, but leave room for self-improvement — "one of the biggest bargains in military life."

The writer encouraged Soldiers to take self-study courses, because "schooling always counts when promotions are passed out."

Reading — but "good stuff" only — is another means of self-improvement, he wrote. Compile a reading list, he said, increase your knowledge of history, science and literature.

The writer made an example of three Soldiers who together purchased a guitar and taught themselves to play. Wasting precious time now only increases one's risk of suffering from painful regret later in life, the author said.

Local citizens deliver cache to battery commander

3RD HBCT PUBLIC AFFAIRS
Staff Sgt. Sean Riley

FORWARD OPERATING BASE HAMMER, Iraq — Members of a Concerned Local Citizen group seized a large cache of munitions east of the city of Al Nijidat, Iraq, southeast of FOB Hammer, Dec. 26.

The cache consisted of 23 rocket motors, two 82 mm mortars, four 81 mm illumination shells, one rocket-propelled grenade, one 115 mm high-explosive tank round, one 106 mm high-explosive anti-tank round and several other explosive items, including an artillery fuse.

The CLC group delivered the cache to FOB Hammer where Capt. Chas Cannon, commander of A Battery, 1st Battalion, 10th Field Artillery Regiment, met with the group.

"The CLC allow us to focus more on governance and economics," Cannon said. "The fact we have helped out there with security allows us to maintain our focus on essential services and the local Iraqi government."

Cannon notified explosive ordnance disposal specialists from the 789th Ordnance Company (EOD), from Fort Benning, who received the cache items.

The EOD unit secured the munitions for disposal.

Cannon believes the CLC provides his unit, recently transitioned from detainee operations in Bucca to the 3rd HBCT's area of operations, with vital information.

"They know the area better than we do," he said.

"We've only been here a couple of months; they've been here all their lives."

Local citizens give an interpreter with C Company, 1st Battalion, 15th Infantry Regiment, interpreter information about himself as 1st Lt. James Short, a platoon leader, oversees the task during an Iraqi Conservation Corps Force sign-up Dec. 27 in Al Huda, Iraq.

FORWARD OPERATING BASE HAMMER, Iraq — Soldiers and leaders of C Company, 1st Battalion, 15th Infantry Regiment, held an Iraqi Conservation Corps sign-up Dec. 27 for citizens of Al Huda.

Capt. John Horning, commander of C Co., said the members of the ICC conduct one of three services in their communities. These services are sanitation, construction, and security.

"A program like this takes the Concerned Local Citizens Program to the next step," Horning said.

"Obviously security is the first concern, but in an area like Al Huda, where security is maintained, this is the right next step."

Horning said local leaders came to him with concerns about the citizens in their villages needing jobs. He advertised the program sign-up by visiting leaders in the company's area of operation.

"Their sheiks recommend and sponsor them," he said. "Then they are entered into the HIIDES system and run through the police data base."

The HIIDES, or Handheld Interagency Identity Detection Equipment System, is used by law enforcement agencies to help in the identification and apprehension of criminals.

The 3rd Heavy Brigade Combat Team has been using the system to quickly identify and catalogue persons of interest during its continuing operations in the Mada'in Qada — in this case, to screen all applicants and check them against a database the brigade maintains.

Horning said members applying for the sanitation "platoon" do not need any experience

However, those who are applying for construction jobs are required to have some kind of trade skill correlated with the job.

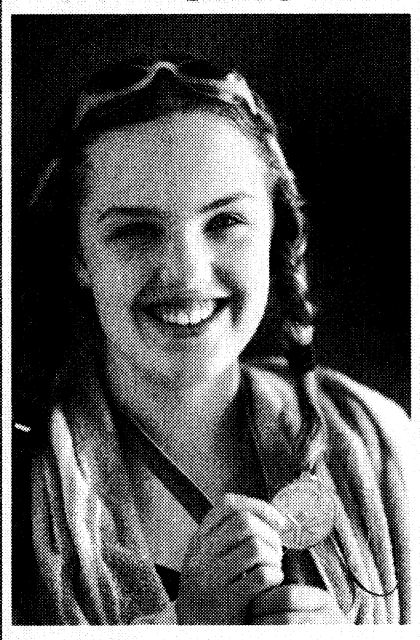
"This program will hopefully help return them to normalcy, and that's what they need," Horning said.

Funding for the ICC comes from the 3rd HBCT, Horning said.

Local citizens who came to the sign-up were excited about the job opportunities.

"I have 13 kids," an applicant said. "I am on my own to make money for my family. In this area, there are a lot of people without jobs. This is a great thing the Coalition Forces are doing for the people here. I hope everyone gets a job. I hope the project is here for a long time."

During a meeting with village leaders before the sign-up began, Horning explained his hope for the project and the good it will do for the community.



"We would much rather be doing a project like this than having to go out and kill the bad guys in your community," he told the leaders.

Horning said he can see two positive outcomes occurring because of the project's success.

"This project is concrete in the sense that we are putting dollars into the economy and people are working," he said.

"Also, we are helping people see the light at the end of the tunnel. We are helping them see hope. They see that things are going to get better."

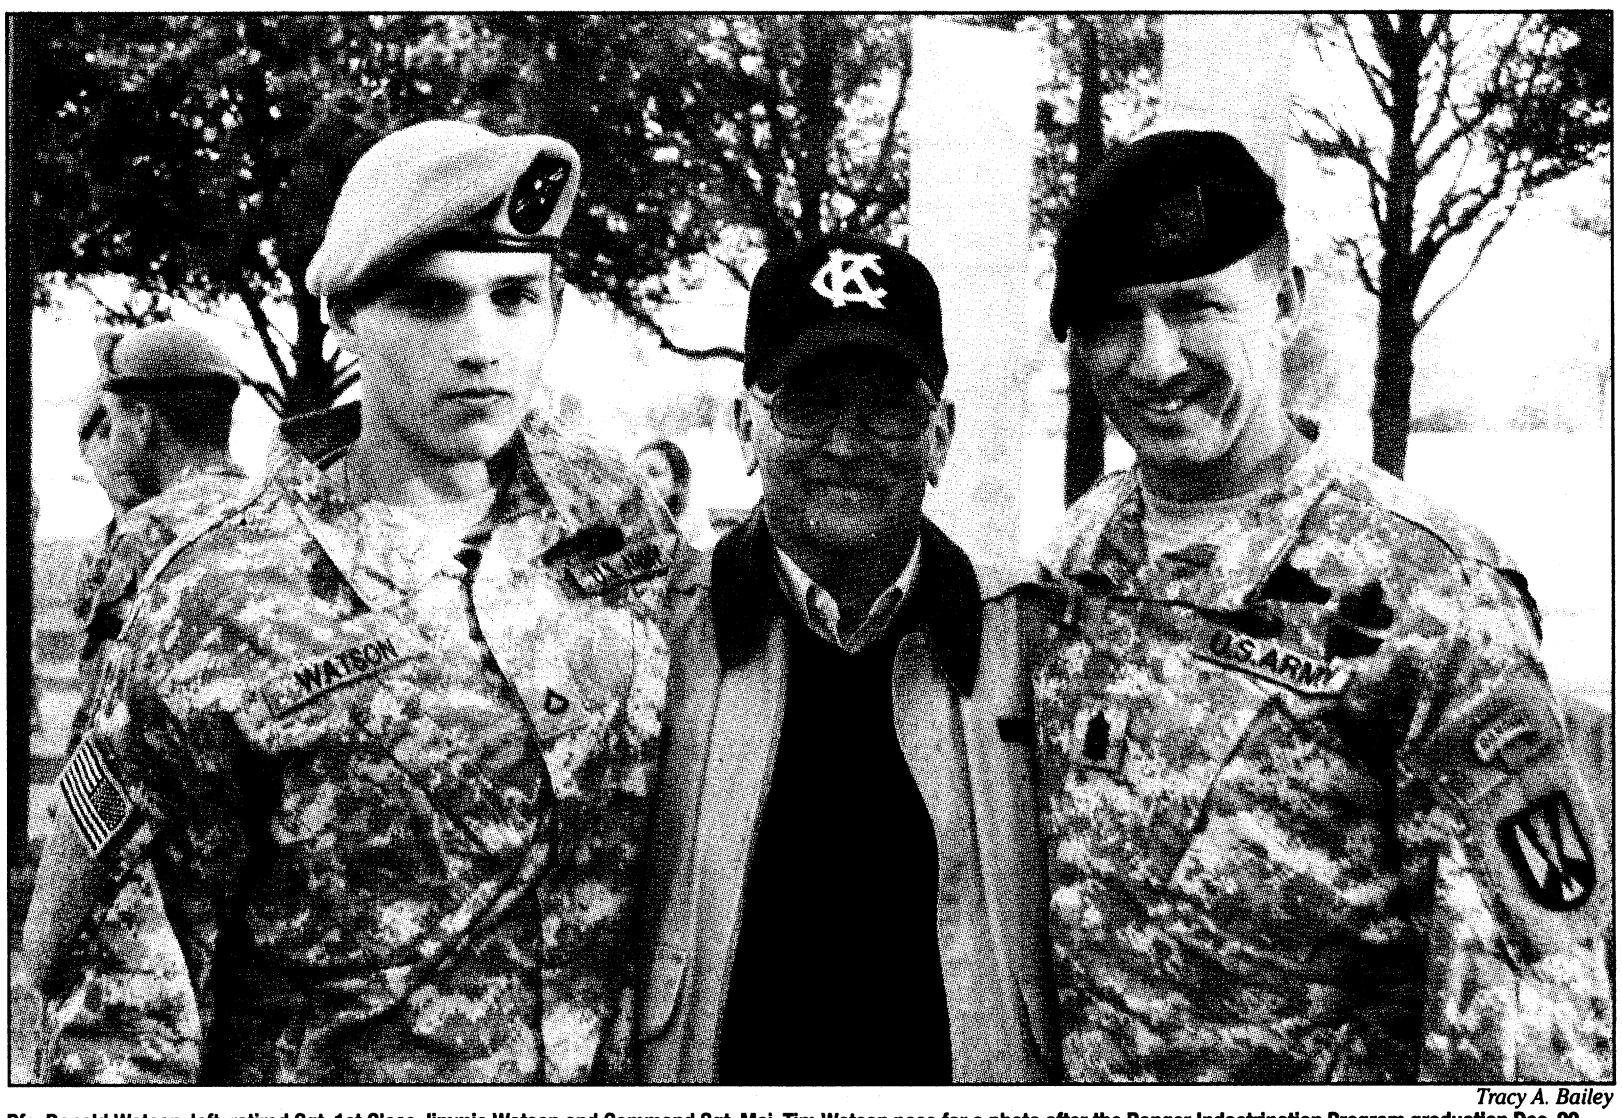
Third generation Ranger joins regiment

Of tough training, father says: "It has to be this way. It is designed to forge a warrior."

75TH RANGER REGIMENT
Tracy A. Bailey

In more than 30 years, three generations of Watsons have raised their right hand and volunteered to serve their country. Jimmie Watson started the tradition. He spent six years in the Air Force before joining the Army in 1975. Watson retired as a sergeant first class after 20 years, three of them with the 2nd Battalion (Ranger), 75th Infantry Regiment, from 1980 to 1983.

Three of his five sons have served with the 75th. His grandson, Pfc. Donald Watson, was the honor graduate of the Ranger Indoctrination Program Dec. 20.



"I am comfortable knowing that my children and my grandchildren are in the Army today, because they are better trained Soldiers," the senior Watson said. "They are very professional."

Graduation for Donny was a special day, he said, not only because his Family was here to share it, but also because the guest speaker was his dad, Command Sgt. Maj. Sean (Tim) Watson, the command sergeant major of the 165th Infantry Brigade at Fort Jackson, S.C.

Tim, who spent 10 years with the 75th Ranger Regiment, told the graduates they are now part of a brotherhood.

"Living as a member of the Ranger Regiment is a way of life," he said. "Life in the regiment and living the Ranger Creed can be quite hard. The rigors, stress and pressures placed on you will be extreme.

"It has to be this way," he said. "It is designed to forge a warrior to become an integral part of a fighting team that is asked to conduct some of the most difficult missions around the world."

Tracy A. Bailey
Pfc. Donald Watson, left, retired Sgt. 1st Class Jimmie Watson and Command Sgt. Maj. Tim Watson pose for a photo after the Ranger Indoctrination Program graduation Dec. 20.

> "There are very few things that are more honorable than service to your nation."
> — Command Sgt. Maj. Tim Watson

Tim said he is proud his son joined the regiment.

"These young men are in for a hard time, and I don't mean just because of the war," he said. "The big thing is for them to keep their heads up, keep working and training and building their skills. There are very few things that are more honorable than service to your nation."

Donny, who was born at Martin Army Community Hospital, is the first member of his Family to be assigned to 1st Battalion. He said he's happy to be a third generation Ranger.

"I think it makes it easier though, whenever I want to relax or slack off, I won't because I don't want to let anyone down," he said.

MPs share, compare training with foreign special forces

THE BAYONET
Brenda Donnell

Thirteen members of Fort Benning's Special Reaction Team and two Soldiers from the U.S.Army Marksmanship Unit shared tactics, techniques and procedures with Argentine Army Special Operations Forces and Civil Disturbance units Nov. 25 to Dec. 7 near Buenos Aires.

Capt. John Nolt, SRT officer-in-charge, 209th Military Police Detachment, said the training gave his MPs a chance to clearly understand pros and cons of U.S. procedures when executing missions.

Every day was different, said Staff Sgt. Kevin Rice, SRT NCOIC, and seeing other ways to accomplish missions gave him options to consider during planning.

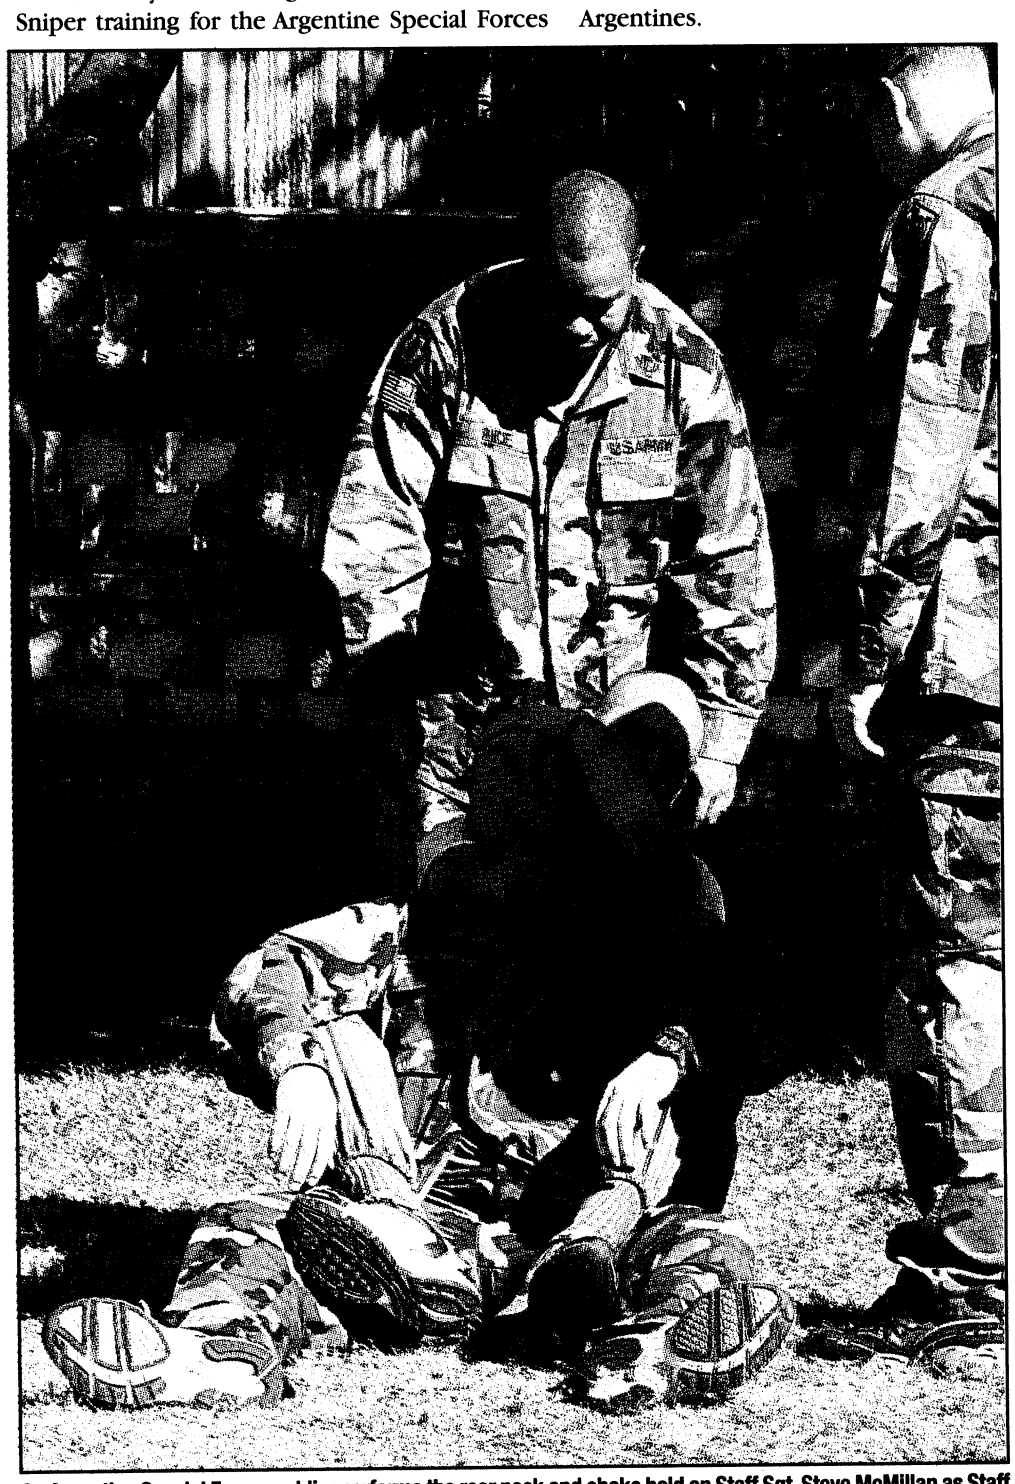
Martial arts, anti-riot and bus assault procedures, marksmanship and room entries were a few of the things the two military units shared and compared.

While SRT is used for last-resort situations, the Argentines often assist civilians, said Sgt. Jonathan Braswell, SRT member.

He said the Argentines have a lot of experience breaching, clearing and entering buildings, having conducted more than 60 such missions.

One of the entry techniques the Argentines use is rappelling from the tops of buildings and entering through windows. Braswell said rappelling was his favorite activity while in Argentina.

Spc. Richard Rutowski, SRT member, fires an MP5 Nov. 26 during marksmanship and weapons familiarization.



Sniper training for the Argentine Special Forces is a lot like the training that Sgt. Shawn Taylor, a marksmanship observer, has received — close quarters at about 300 meters with no worries about detection, as opposed to U.S. military snipers who prefer to be undetected and fire their weapons from long distances.

He said both the U.S. and Argentine units can use most of the sniper techniques and tactics they shared.

They also fired other weapons not commonly available to them, such as MP5s, magazine-fed shotguns and Uzis.

Although U.S. Soldiers can not use everything they learned from the Argentines because of laws and regulations, much of it can be applied to various situations.

Nolt hopes to schedule more training with the Argentines.

SEXUAL ASSAULT HELP SOUGHT

CID is looking for a male wanted for questioning concerning a sexual assault in the Custer Terrace housing area.

He is possibly Hispanic or a light-toned black with short-cropped hair (possibly a military cut), no facial hair, 5 feet 6 six inches to 5 feet 9 inches tall, weighing approximately 140 to 160 pounds.

He was last seen about 12:30 to 1 a.m. July 22 in the Custer Terrace housing area, wearing dark, baggy pants and a dark T-shirt.

Anyone with knowledge of the incident is encouraged to come forward.

Those who do not wish to be identified will be briefed about options to maintain their confidentiality.

MAIN POST ID CENTER CLOSED FEB. 11 TO 13

The Main Post ID center will be closed Feb. 11 through 13 in order to undergo a system upgrade. Normal operating hours will resume Feb. 14.

INFANTRY HALL HAS INTERNET

Computers with Internet access are available in Classroom 20B at Infantry Hall and are open to all CAC card holders. There is a one-time registration process.

A copier with fax and scanner is also available. Users may make as many as 15 copies, and faxing is for official use only.

Downloading must be made to government-issued thumb drives.

TESTING OFFERED ON POST

The Army Education Testing Center services Soldiers, Family members and DoD Civilians.

The Army Personnel Testing Program has standardized tests to determine eligibility for specialized training and supports the Army's personnel selection and classification process, including language proficiency testing.

Aptitude tests, certification, DANTES testing and numerous college examinations are available.

For more information and to schedule an examination, call 706-545-3708 or 706-545-2911 or visit them on the first floor of Building 2612 in Soldiers' Plaza.

They are open from 8 a.m. to noon and from 1 to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday.

EMORY UNIVERSITY PTSD STUDY

Military members are wanted for Emory University's Trauma and Anxiety Recovery Program.

The study is focusing on service members who have returned from Iraq and have post traumatic stress disorder.

Those interested should call 404-712-8300 or e-mail Feea Leifker at fleifke@emory.edu.

Visit www.psychiatry.emory.edu/PROGRAMS/Trauma/index.htm for more information.

RELOCATION READINESS PROGRAM

The Fort Benning Army Community Service Relocation Readiness Program has services to help Soldiers, Family members and DoD Civilians continuously prepare for transition to new duty stations or civilian life.

Some of the services are the Lending Closet and Relocation Counseling.

For more information, call 706-545-7517 or 706-545-4043.

ARMY EMERGENCY RELIEF

A nonprofit organization, Army Emergency Relief provides emergency financial assistance to Soldiers, retirees and their Family members during crisis situations.

AER funds made available to commanders are not limited and are constrained only by the requirement of a valid need.

The AER assistance program is conducted primarily within the Army structure by major commanders, their installation and organization commanders and their subordinate commanders through AER sections.

For more information, call 706-545-2536.

Corby Award honors Army Medical Corps commander

MEDDAC

A university renowned for football but blessed with an equally distinguished, if less widely known, tradition of military service, has honored an Army Medical Department officer with one of its highest alumni awards.

On Nov. 3, the Notre Dame Alumni Association presented the Rev. William Corby C.S.C. Award for distinguished military service to Brig. Gen. Philip Volpe, commanding general of the 44th Medical Brigade, Fort Bragg, N.C.

Volpe, who graduated from Notre Dame in 1977, is also the senior AMEDD officer and the Director of Health Services at Fort Bragg.

The award was presented at the Notre Dame Stadium during the half-time of the Notre Dame vs. Navy football game.

"It is a tremendous privilege and honor to be recognized with such a prestigious award," Volpe said. "I sincerely thank the University of Notre Dame, the Alumni Association, my Family and friends for their unwavering support and encouragement over the years as I serve our nation as a Soldier in the United States Army.

"On behalf of all those who served, and who are currently serving, in the Armed Forces on freedom's frontiers around the world, I proudly and humbly accept the Corby Award and will cherish this moment for the rest of my life."

The Corby Award is conferred annually on a Notre Dame alumnus or alumna for distinguished service in the Armed Forces.

Anyone can nominate service members for the honor, said Pat Trost, senior administrative assistant to the executive director of the Alumni Association.

She said there were 10 nominees this year. The selection is made by the association's internal activities committee.

Volpe received the award by distinguishing himself in compassion and bravery and ministering as a surgeon to American troops in more than 20 years of military service.

Volpe has received the Army Commendation Medal and the Purple Heart.

He was commissioned in 1983 as a captain in the Medical Corps after earning his bachelor's degree in pre-professional studies at Notre Dame and his D.O. from the New York College of Osteopathic Medicine at the New York Institute of Technology, where he was valedictorian.

BRAC: Moves forward with EIS decision, construction to begin most significant was a biological assessment and a biological opinion by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service on suspected impacts to threatened and endangered species on post, including the red-cockaded woodpecker, Brown said.

Other federally protected species here include wood storks (endangered), bald eagle (threatened), American alligator (threatened), Georgia rockcress (candidate) and relict trillium (endangered). Mapping, traffic and socioeconomic studies were also conducted for the EIS. To inform the community about the EIS process, there were two public meetings — May 10, 2006, and May 23. In addition, letters were sent to state and federal agencies.

Public notifications were also published in the Ledger-Enquirer, Tri-County Journal and The Bayonet, inviting interested parties to ask questions and make comments.

Brown said recommendations made by community members during meetings were taken into consideration.

"A perfect example is some residents, who live in the northeastern portion of Columbus, had asked that some of the construction not occur within 150 feet of the installation boundary, and we complied with that," he said.

Brown said although no Fort Knox personnel have relocated here yet, he expects them to begin here in 2010, with the majority relocating in 2011.

Tax Center: Offers free preparation for military, Families

even if they don't have their taxes prepared on post, Tempesta said.

Tempesta said often the first and the last months are the busiest and advises people to be patient, even if they are expecting a large return.

For those who are in a hurry, Hillner warned that there is no guarantee that an off-post civilian tax preparer will get the returns done correctly. In fact, he said if the off-post preparer overestimates the return for a fast refund, and it's more than the taxpayer should have received, he now has the equivalent of a high-interest loan.

Hillner said those who plan to go to the Tax Office should ensure their paperwork is in order when they arrive.

They should bring all tax documents, including W-2s, 1098 and 1099 forms; military identification card; social security card; and a voided check for direct deposit.

To ensure taxpayers have the paperwork they need, Tempesta advises them to think about what they did on their last return and what they have done in the past year, such as having children, getting married, paying off student loans and attending college.

The turn around time for electronic filing is about two weeks, Hillner said, and paper filing takes longer, approximately six to eight weeks.

Services are on a first-come, first-served basis at the Tax Office, so people can drop by the during office hours when it is convenient for them, Hillner said.

The Tax Office will be located in Building 1678, Room G131 in the Garrison Activity Center behind the Follow Me Chapel on Ingersoll Street.

Office hours are Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Friday from 8:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. and Thursday from 10:30 to 6 p.m. The office is closed weekends. Hours may be extended as the deadline advances.

3-D Imax theater, a restaurant and a main gallery with seating for 500 people.

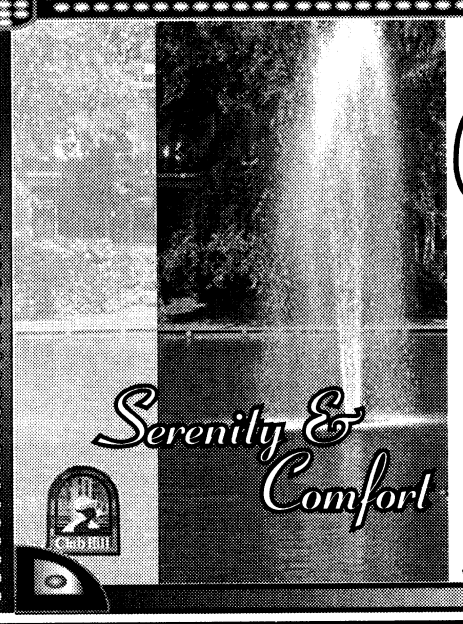
"This is a dream come true for a lot of people," White said. "It's going to have a great economic impact on this community — a $50 million economic impact every year, and it's going to bring into our community at least 500,000 visitors a year and create at least 500 new jobs."

The new museum will have gliders and helicopters hanging from the ceiling above the main gallery. The OCS and Ranger halls of valor will be located on the second floor and the Medal of Honor hall of valor will be on the main floor.

The original Infantry Museum was built around 1920, said Col. Butch Botters, Fort Benning's director of Operations and Training.

"We're excited about putting our artifacts in a 21st century structure," he said.

The new facility will be interactive and located near a new hotel for out-of-town guests.



"It will represent a major attraction nationally," White said. "This will be a facility that you can come and spend days at."

In 2010, the Armor Museum from Fort Knox, Ky., is expected to be relocated here.

"None of us would be here today if it weren't for Infantry Soldiers trained right here at Fort Benning," White said. "This is a tribute to the American Soldier … those Soldiers who, in the last 232 years, have protected the freedoms that all of us enjoy."

BENCH NOTES

Cameron gets axed?

First year Dolphins coach Cam Cameron was fired after a 1-15 campaign Thursday by the team's new boss Bill Parcells. This will mark the hiring of a fifth coach in as many years.

Has anyone gotten the memo yet? Coaching or playing for the Dolphins is a bad luck gig, period.

But maybe Parcells can light a fire under the fish and cause a fry. No wonder they call him Big Tuna.

Big Ticket, big votes

Kevin Garnett aka the big ticket is currently the leading vote getter for the upcoming All-Star Game in New Orleans. Garnett is averaging 19 points and 10 boards per game.

Finally, the votes aren't swayed by popularity or fad play. The most deserving guy on the most deserving team is getting the most votes, plain and simple. Now maybe we can see to it that no Miami Heat players get in. Sorry Wade and Shaq, but you guys are pathetic this year.

Leyritz loses control

It was found that former World Series star Jim Leyritz had a suspended driver's license before he was charged with driving under the influence and killing a woman last week.

The 44-year-old ex-catcher was charged with DUI manslaughter and DUI property damage.

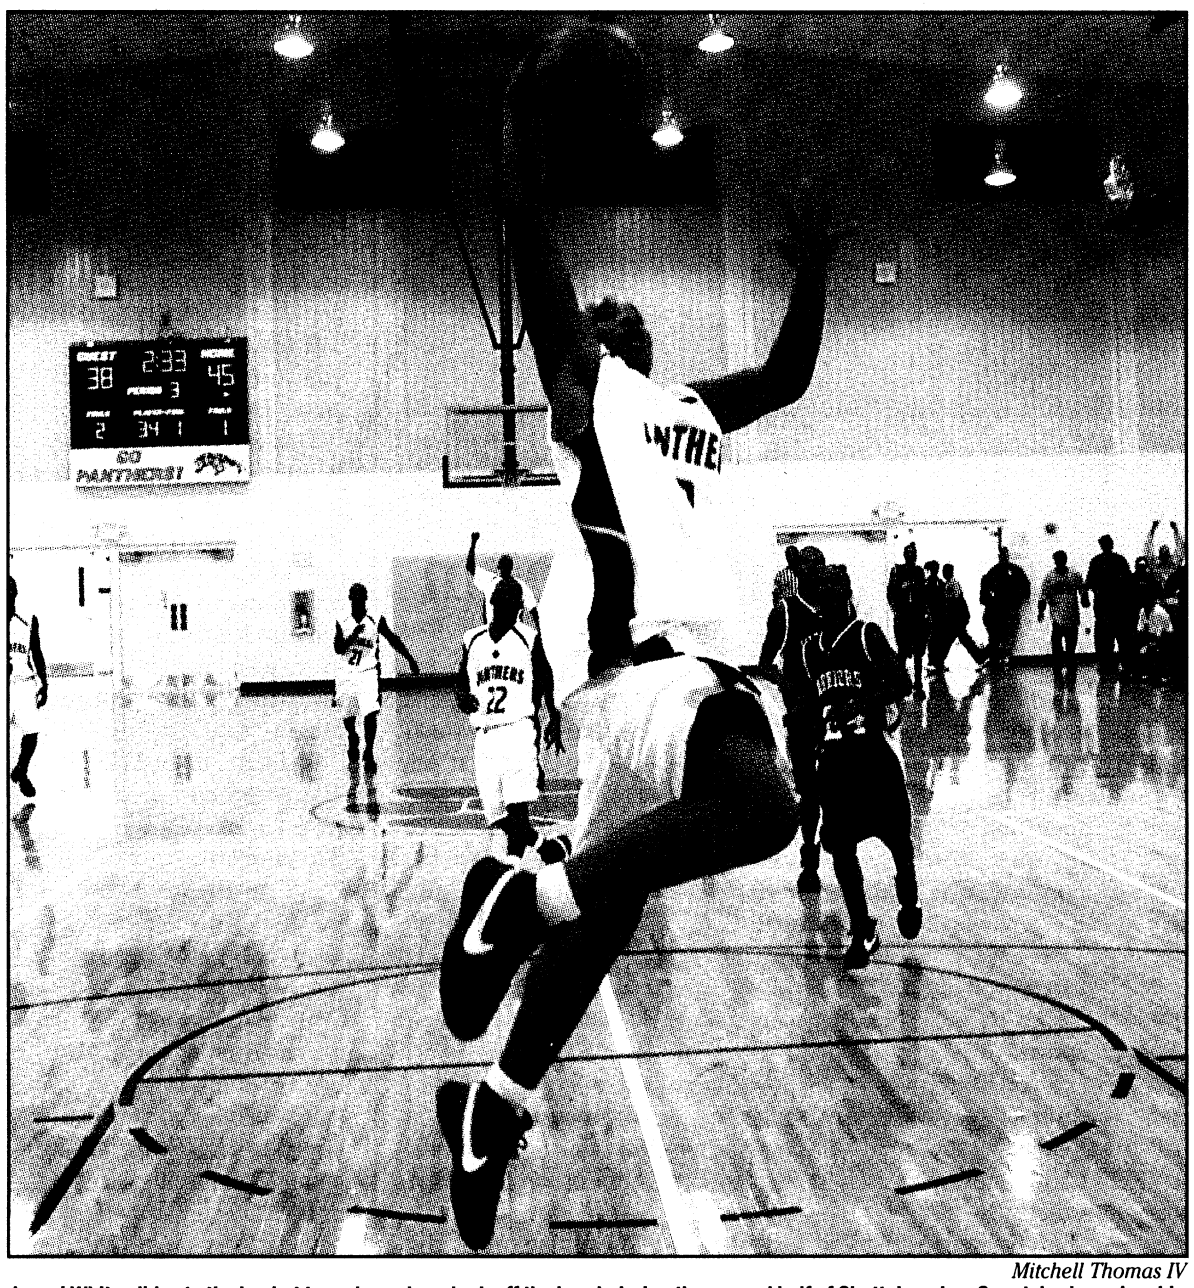
It goes without saying that this is a ridiculous crime. This may even be taken as serious as the Mitchell Report. Well, maybe not.

Gatlin gets banned

Olympic gold medalist Justin Gatlin plans to challenge the four-year ban he received for doping.

A three-member panel voted 2-1 to suspend Gatlin who initially faced an eight-year ban.

Gatlin is said to possibly consider taking the matter to federal court.



Man, I tell you, these runners might as well be on the Mitchell Report, too, because they're dropping like flies. My favorite event in the Olympics might be extinct soon.

NFL vet found dead

Tony Elliot, a New Orleans Saint nose tackle during the 1980s, was found dead in his home Monday.

Elliot, who was 48 years old, had congestive heart failure, high blood pressure and diabetes. He was also paralyzed from the waist down after being shot in 2000. My condolences go out to Elliot's family.

"We practiced harder than we practiced all season and we knew we couldn't lose to them in our building again," said Octavious Staton.

Chattco's practice paid off this weekend.

After losing to Russell County two times this season, the Chattahoochee County men's team got their revenge on their home court beating the Warriors by a 21-point margin Saturday during the championship game of the Panther Holiday Shootout.

Jacovi White, the team's leading scorer, came out energetic early in the first with a spin move in the lane.

After getting fouled, he knocked down a pair of free throws to score the game's first points.

The Warriors man in the middle Rodriguez Thomas drove inside to hit their first basket with just under six minutes to go followed by an athletic move inside to tie the game by Xavier Horace.

But Kelvonte Jones reignited the crowd after making a layup and drawing a foul to make the score 8-4 with four minutes to go in the quarter.

Russell County showed their rebounding prowess early making back to offensive boards, but the Panthers held them out of the paint early on.

Antwan Ross went to the line splitting a pair of fouls shots to give the Panthers a six point lead with 30 seconds left in the first.

The Panthers opened up the second sluggish as

In January, the Army will launch a Wounded Warrior Sports Program for active-duty Soldiers with life-altering injuries including the amputees who ran in October's Army Ten-Miler in Washington, D.C.

Wounded warrior sports program to begin

ARMY NEWS SERVICE
Tim Hipps

ALEXANDRIA, Va. — The Army will launch a Wounded Warrior Sports Program for active-duty Soldiers with life-altering injuries in January, giving them the opportunity to compete at the national level.

The Army will pay for the athletes' registration fees, transportation, lodging and per diem while they compete at selected events. Athletic attire will be issued to the Soldiers, who will represent the Army during competitions.

"The goal is to allow our wounded warriors an opportunity to continue to participate and compete in state and national competitions," said Willie Wilson, acting director of Soldier programs at the Army Family and Morale, Welfare and Recreation Command.

"We have more and more wounded Soldiers staying on active duty who participate in sports. This is an avenue for them to continue their athletic dreams," Wilson said.

The program was designed for Soldiers injured in war — primarily amputees — who have remained athletically active at the installation level, where finding suitable competition can be difficult.

"We're trying to help keep these Soldiers active," Army Sports Specialist Mark Dunivan said. "We want to give them the same opportunity that the able-bodied Soldiers would have to compete in a sport."

The Soldier-athletes must meet established standards to be considered for support in their respective sport. U.S. Paralympic officials served as advisors to help create the program and recommended the qualification criteria.

"Everybody is not going to be a Paralympic athlete, nor does everybody want to be, but everybody wants to be active," said John Register, associate director of outreach and development for the U.S. Paralympic Committee. "This program allows for an avenue that is more greatly needed than the Paralympic side of the house."

Register was an Army World Class Athlete Program competitor in track and field before a hurdling accident led to the partial amputation of his left leg. He competed in swimming at the 1996 Summer Paralympics in Atlanta and won a silver medal in the long jump at the 2000 Paralympic Games in Sydney, Australia.

"The Army is providing opportunities that are not special or different or unique — it's just opportunities that it would provide to anybody else," Register said. "The Army has All-Army Sports programs on its calendar. This is just a seamless transition onto the All-Army calendar that is just taking care of our own. Whether you have the physical disability or not, the opportunity is there for you to participate, and it's no different if you're an able-bodied athlete.

"For WCAP to add this program is phenomenal. It's taking care of Soldiers, and that's the right thing to do. It's for all those troops on the ground who need some place to continue their sports."

The first event is for adaptive skiers, scheduled for Jan. 24 to 28 at Winter Park, Colo. An adaptive snowboarding competition follows at the 2008 USA Snowboarding Association National Championships March 31 through April 7 at Copper Mountain, Colo.

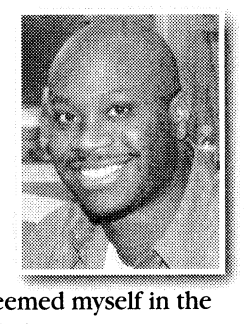
Archery, air rifle and pistol shooting, swimming, track and field, and weightlifting competitions are available for disabled athletes April 17 to 20 at the Desert Challenge Regional Games in Tempe, Ariz.

The Mid-America Games will play host to track and field competitors May 2 to 4 in Stillwell, Kan. The Endeavor Games, scheduled for June 5-8 in Edmond, Okla., will offer archery, basketball, pingpong, shooting, swimming, tennis and weightlifting.

The National Veterans Wheelchair Games, scheduled for July 25 to 29, offer the aforementioned sports, along with air-gun shooting, nine-ball, softball, quad rugby, bowling, handcycling, power soccer and wheelchair slalom.

The 60th National Amputee Golf Championships, slated for Aug. 19 to 22 in Castle Rock, Colo., is the final event on the original list, which is subject to change. A half-marathon and triathlon will likely be added soon.

Instructions for the application process to participate in the Wounded Warrior Sports Program are accessible on the Internet at www.ArmyMWR.com by clicking on Recreation & Leisure, and then clicking on Sports & Fitness.



For more details, ccall Dunivan at 719-526-3908 or send an e-mail to mark.dunivan@us.army.mil or call Peggy Hutchinson at 703-681-7211 or send an e-mail to peggy.hutchinson@us.army.

The fantasy master is back

THE BAYONET
Mitchell Thomas IV

I'm sorry, but I need to take a second to brag just a bit. I had the fantasy football season of all seasons.

In both leagues I participated in, I won first place. Can you believe that?

I placed a lowly ninth the last time I played fantasy football, and I redeemed myself in the grandest fashion.

If you know fantasy sports, you know how unlikely such an occurrence happens.

This was done by a savvy drafting strategy in one league and a mix of luck and good waver decisions in the other.

But I have to give most, rather every bit of my win in the plus league, to the play of my third and fourth round picks, Tom Brady and Randy Moss.

If you remember, before the season started, I predicted the New England Patriots to do big things.

But no one knew they would destroy any and all records held in their respective positions.

There is no way I see anyone spoiling their in-the-bag Superbowl victory.

But before I go any further, I need to express my feelings about some of this year's underachieving players, namely those on my fantasy team.

The biggest disappointments this year came at the running back position.

First and foremost, I am completely disgusted with Seattle's Shaun Alexander. He was my first pick in my plus league, and he got me less than 130 points.

Brady had several solo outings where he got nearly 100 points.

Players like Larry Johnson, Willie Parker and Frank Gore all turned out to be busts for other players in my league.

I have no clue why all the draft experts feel that we should draft running backs first. It makes no sense at all to me.

There is no position on any given day that gets more points than a quarterback.

Plus, you can only play one quarterback a week, and since there are only about a half dozen quarterbacks who stand out, they should be picked as soon as possible.

Another position, with the exception of Moss, that gave me problems was the wide-receiver spot.

The first one I chose was Carolina's supposed stud Steve Smith.

He pulled some impressive numbers the first three weeks of the season but fell apart after starting quarterback Jake Delhomme went down with an elbow injury.

Both replacement QBs Vinny Testaverde, aka Jerry Atric, and David "Jalopy" Carr proved to be wastes of roster space, and Smith's numbers suffered.

Receivers are also way more important than running backs.

In the leagues I play in, you need to start at least four of them a week, and quality receivers are far and few in between.

Another surprise area that I did well in is individual player defenses.

My D was the best in my plus league, but the key was avoiding drafting too many defensive players early.

I grabbed several of my guys off the wire and they did far better than many of the so-called big names a lot of people drafted.

Though I won first place in both my leagues, there are several things I will never do again.

First, I will never draft according to what experts say. They have no clue about your personal league structure.

And secondly, I will never compete in a league based on auto drafting. This feels like training wheels for me. These types of leagues are strictly based on the luck.

The draft is the one and only time a fantasy player has any control, so to win in an autodraft league just feels kind of empty.

Fantasy sports are addicting, and it seems like I'm getting the hang of making the right decisions on draft day.

If only I could go back two months ago and set my alarm clock, I wouldn't be in fourth in my b-ball league. Bummer.

Soldier believes there's 'no excuse for failure'

"The road to success is always under construction. I've never taken the traditional path to any of my successes, but I always know I'll get there."

— 1st Lt. Tammy Brown, 14th Combat Support Hospital

THE BAYONET
Mitchell Thomas IV

When Tammy Brown was asked to described herself in one word, she said the word would be "misunderstood."

But one thing she understands fully is what it takes to succeed.

Brown, a Maryland native, Soldier and athlete, was inducted in the Central Intercollegiate Athletic Conference Hall of Fame in 1999, joining the likes of Harlem Globetrotter Freddie "Curly" Neal, NBA legends Rick Mahorn and Charles Oakley and playground legend Richard "Pee Wee" Kirkland.

She was also named one of the 50 All-Time Greatest Players in the conference.

"Tammy is one of the most unique and talented people I've ever met," said Eric Tucker, Brown's coach at Fayetteville State University in North Carolina. "She is very intelligent and can accomplish anything she puts her mind to."

Brown, a 35-year-old first lieutenant in the 14th Combat Support Hospital, deploys to Baghdad with the 18th Airborne Corps today.

"I love the military, and I truly think everyone should serve," she said. "It taught me a lot about myself. There are adjustments that have to be made coming into the military, but overall, I find the military easy."

Born in Annapolis, Brown said she was labeled a "hot-head" as a youth. She found peace in sports, specifically on the court.

She made a name for herself in Maryland as a basketball star, leading Broadneck High School to the state championship.

She was scouted by a number of schools around the country, eventually receiving a full athletic scholarship to the University of Maryland. But her free ride was cut short after her grades fell.

"There were so many colleges after me, but I didn't have any guidance," Brown said. "I knew I had to do something. After I flunked out, that was my wake-up call. It let me know the real world was waiting for me."

She went back to school, attending Anne Arundel Community College, where she led the nation in scoring. After receiving her associate's degree, she enlisted in the Army in 1994.

While stationed in Germany, she played on the All-Army team, which won the gold medal.

She aspired to become an officer, which led her to the Green and Gold program at Fayetteville State. This is where she met the person who changed her life.

Tucker helped her transition back into the university system.

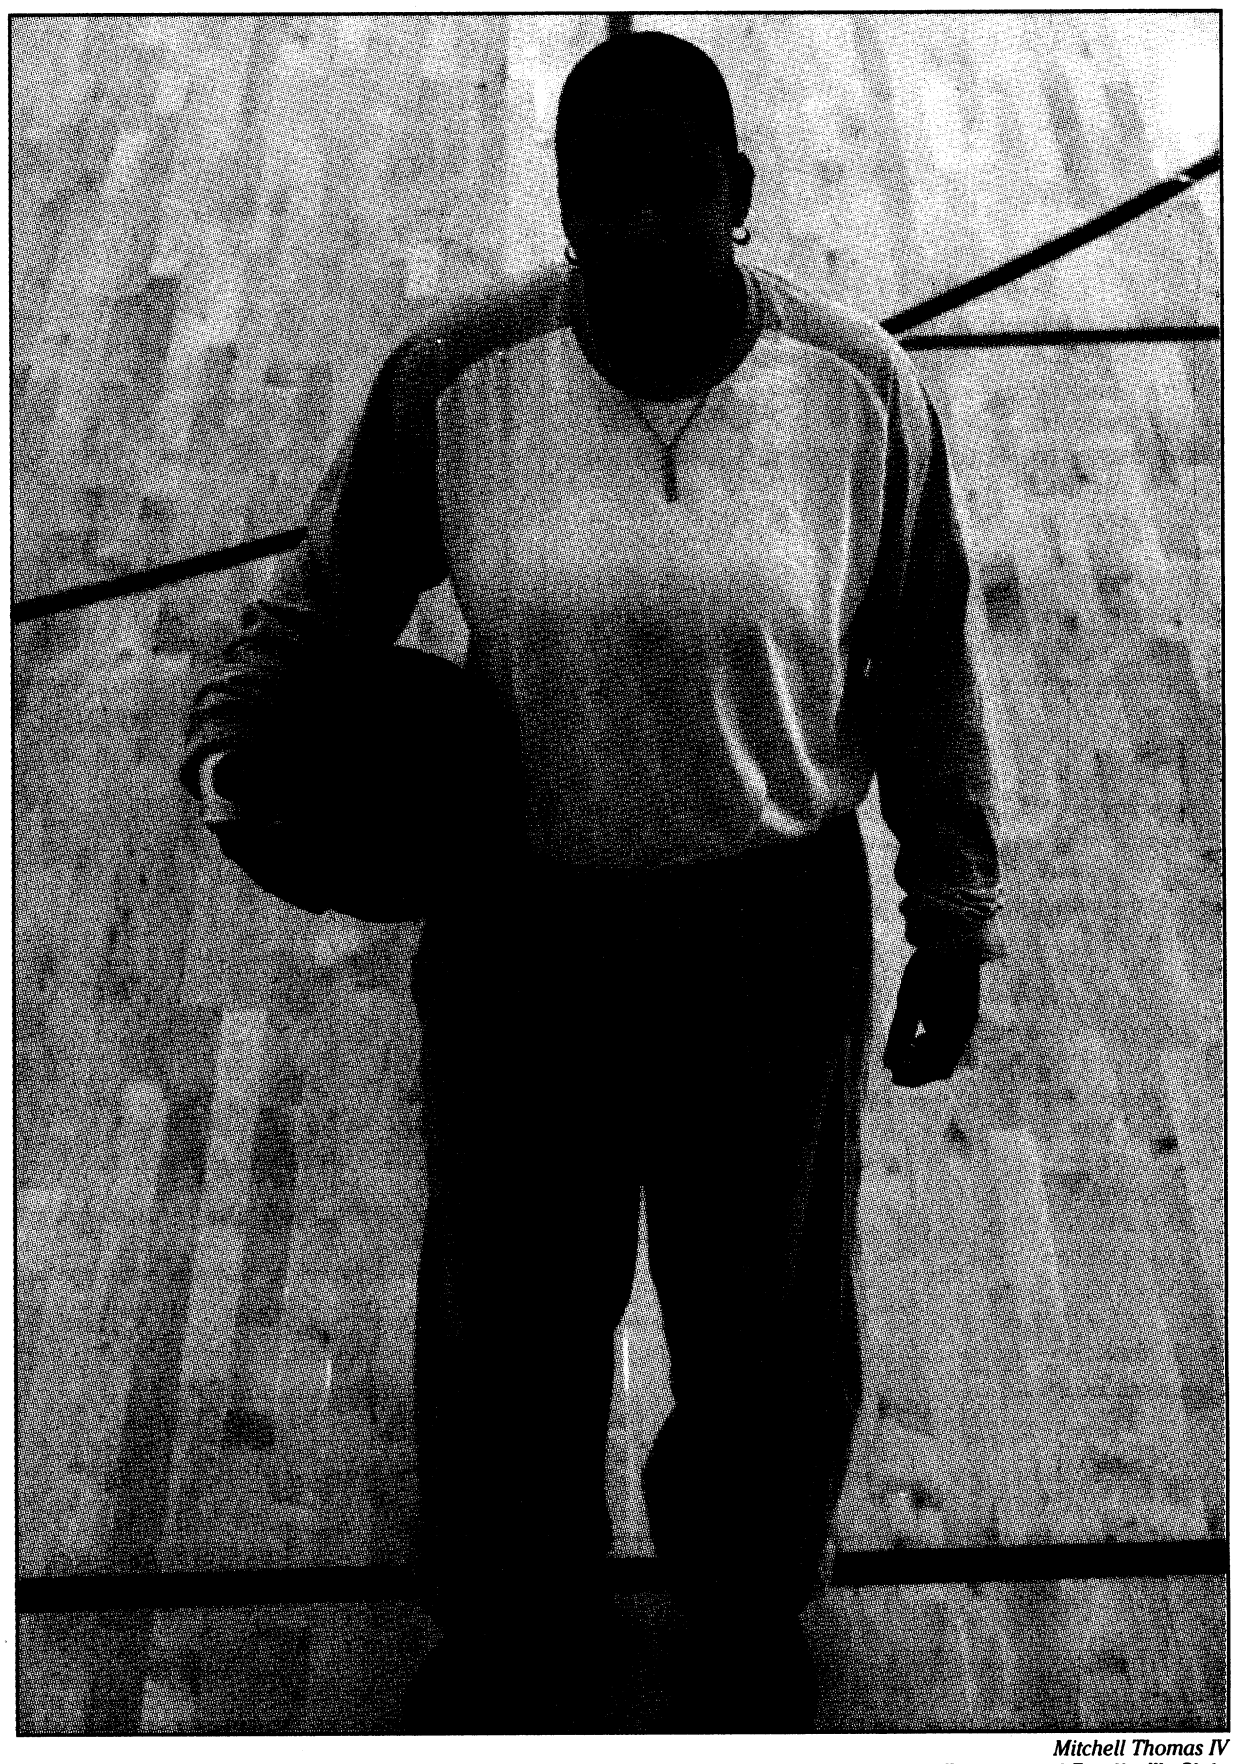
"I saw an immediate determination and toughness in her," he said.

Brown credits Tucker with making her the person she is today.

"I tell you, if it wasn't for Coach Tucker, I have no idea where I would be," she said. "He is the most patient and giving person I've ever known, and he's been a mentor, father figure and friend."

After graduation, Brown's career field was military intelligence. Although she advanced to the rank of captain, she wasn't happy in the field and transferred to the medical field.

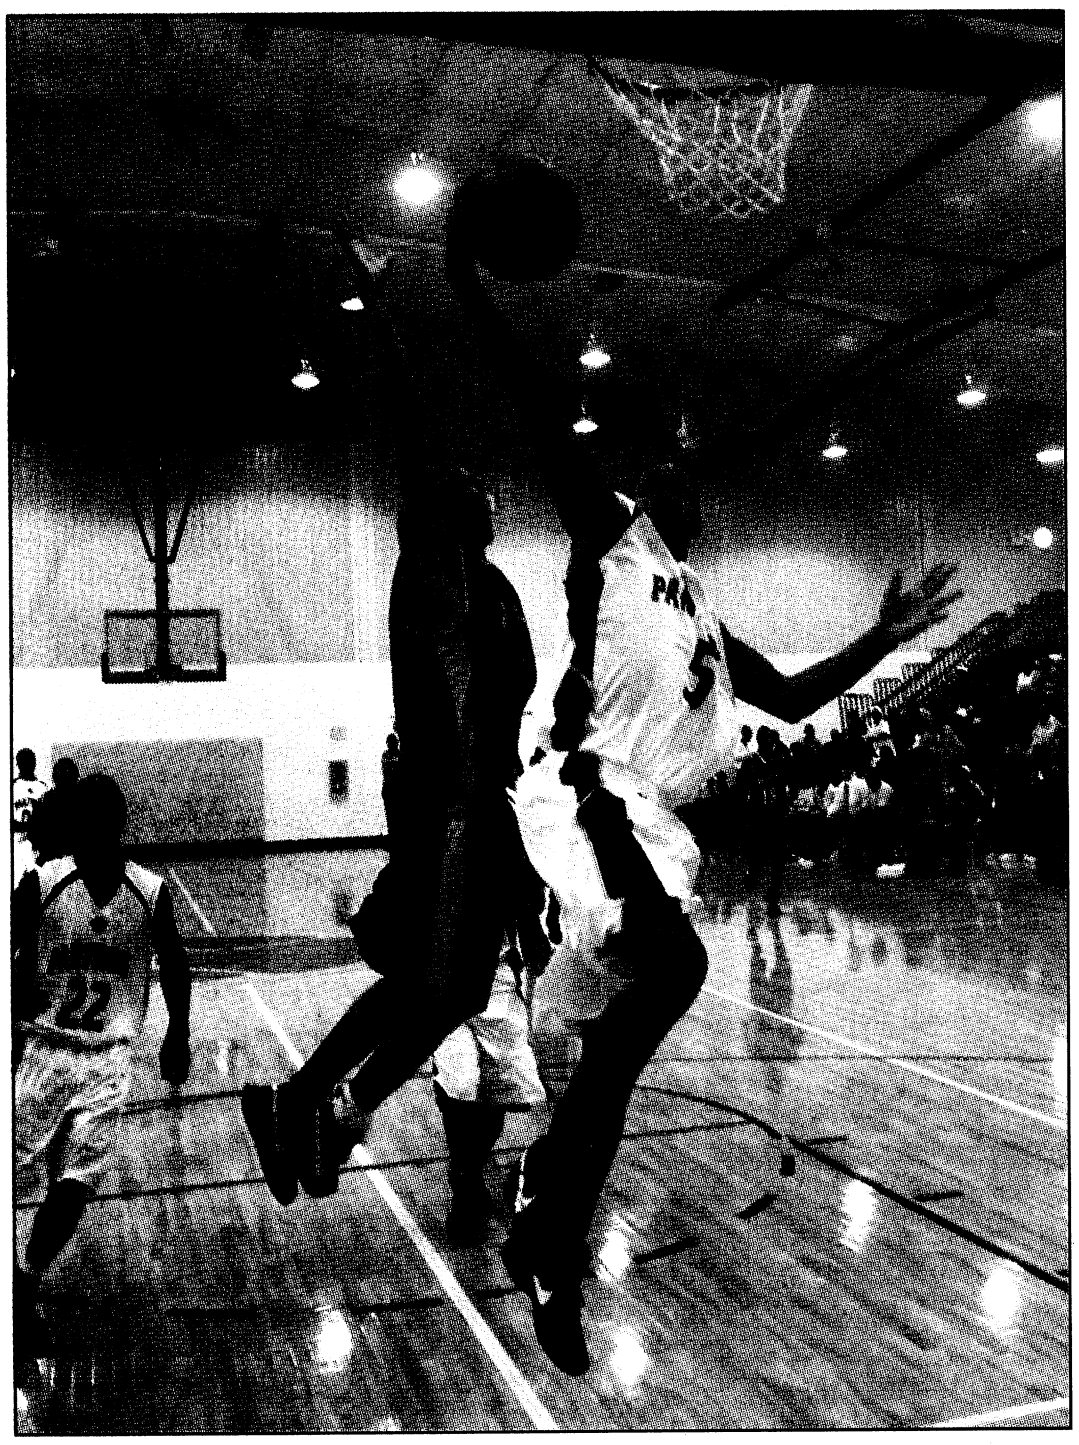
"Intelligence wasn't for me," she said. "Many people told me I was making a mistake transferring out and dropping in rank, but I felt being happy was most important."



While working on her bachelor's degree, Brown did a stint as a high school teacher and realized what gives her the most joy is helping kids. She performs community service regularly and one day plans to open a community center to mentor and tutor children — to provide the guidance for them that she missed growing up.

"I go back to Baltimore, and I see these kids, and it just makes me sad," she said. "There is no story these kids can tell me that I can't relate to. I've been through it all, and I want them to know there is no excuse for failure."

Brown will go back to school in a year to get earn her doctorate in public policy and administration, which will help her fulfill a childhood dream of becoming a judge.



"The road to success is always under construction," she said, "I've never taken the traditional path to any of my successes. But I always know I'll get there."

Octavius Staton drives inside to bank a layup over Russell County's Xavier Horace during the second quarter of the Panthers-Warriors championship game Saturday. Staton scored 14 points in the game.

"We talked about coming together, and these kids worked hard for this win. This is the most unselfish group of kids I've ever worked with."

— Bo Oates, head coach Chattahoochee County

Panthers: Win by 21 points

Russell County capitalized on several turnovers. Kenneth Samuels, the Warriors' sharpshooter, knocked down two three-pointers to cut Chattco's lead down to two points early.

Russell County tied the game for the first game with a give-and-go layup, which quieted the crowd.

But the Warriors' hot streak was cut short as Chattco clamped down on defense, forcing them to turn the ball over again and again.

Tacovi White got the crowd back in the game by taunting the Warriors on an isolation play in the back court.

But the fancy play led to a turnover and a dunk on the inside by Horace, giving Russell their first lead of the game.

Just before the halftime buzzer, Chattco's Gibril Renesca tapped in a missed shot to tie the game 31-31.

In the third, Chattco took over in a big way. Jones scored the first points followed by a quick bucket by White.

Chattco's biggest improvement was on the defensive side of the ball.

They applied pressure all night to Russell County's star players, limiting their shot selection.

"We have preached all year about rebounding, rebounding, rebounding," said Chattco's head coach Bo Oates.

Staton asserted himself in the third quarter as well, making hustle plays on defense and getting inside to create easy buckets for the team.

"I'm a fast player, and I like to play fast," he said. "If I play slow, I don't get the best out of my ability, so picking up the tempo helps things go smoothly."

White gave Chattco an eight-point advantage after making a steal and finishing inside with an easy bucket.

After the Panthers took a 15 point lead, Russell County knocked down a three-pointer near half court with .5 seconds on the clock, cutting the lead to 12.

Early in the fourth, Staton muscled inside to draw another foul.

Russell Country had their chances to get back into the game, but Chattco proved to be too much in the final quarter.

With just under four minutes, the White brothers went to work. Tacovi ran the floor and dished a pass off to Jacovi for a heads up play to give Chattco a 65-52 lead.

In the last two minutes, Jacovi White, Staton and Jones put the finishing touches on the game, drawing fouls and adding to the lead at the foul line.

Jones put back one of his teammate's missed shots to score the final points of the game, knocking off their nemesis, 77-56.

"We talked about coming together, and these kids worked hard for this win," Oates said. "This is the most unselfish group of kids I've ever worked with."

Russell County's head coach Sam Moats knew they didn't bring their best game.

"They beat us on the boards all game, and they played a great style of ball taking it to the hole every time. We were obviously a bit over confident, and they definitely wanted to win."

The Panthers' men's and women's teams will begin regional play today against Stewart-Quitman.

Fitness: Make small changes daily personal trainer on post. The first thing she recommends is being sure of the decision before making any changes.

"You have to make your mind up and know that this is what you want to do." Machado said. "It takes 30 days to break any habit. When you decide to make the change allow yourself time to get used it."

Machado recommended making a log of current daily food intake, times of eating and portion sizes before starting the new program. After starting, she said it's best to make small changes each day.

"Nutrition is 80 percent of weight loss and exercise is the other 20 percent," she said. "What you're eating is far more important than any other part of a healthy lifestyle." Exercise does come into play, but we eat far more than we exercise.

The initial change to your diet should include eating more whole foods including a rainbow variety of fruits and vegetables. She recommends eating leaner meats including top cuts of sirloin, boneless skinless chicken breasts and ground turkey as opposed to beef.

"Things like supplements and even multi-vitamins are unnecessary if you eat a large variety of whole foods because you get it all in your diet," Machado said. "Some of these supplements aren't even absorbed in your system. Nutrients that come from nature also burn more calories."

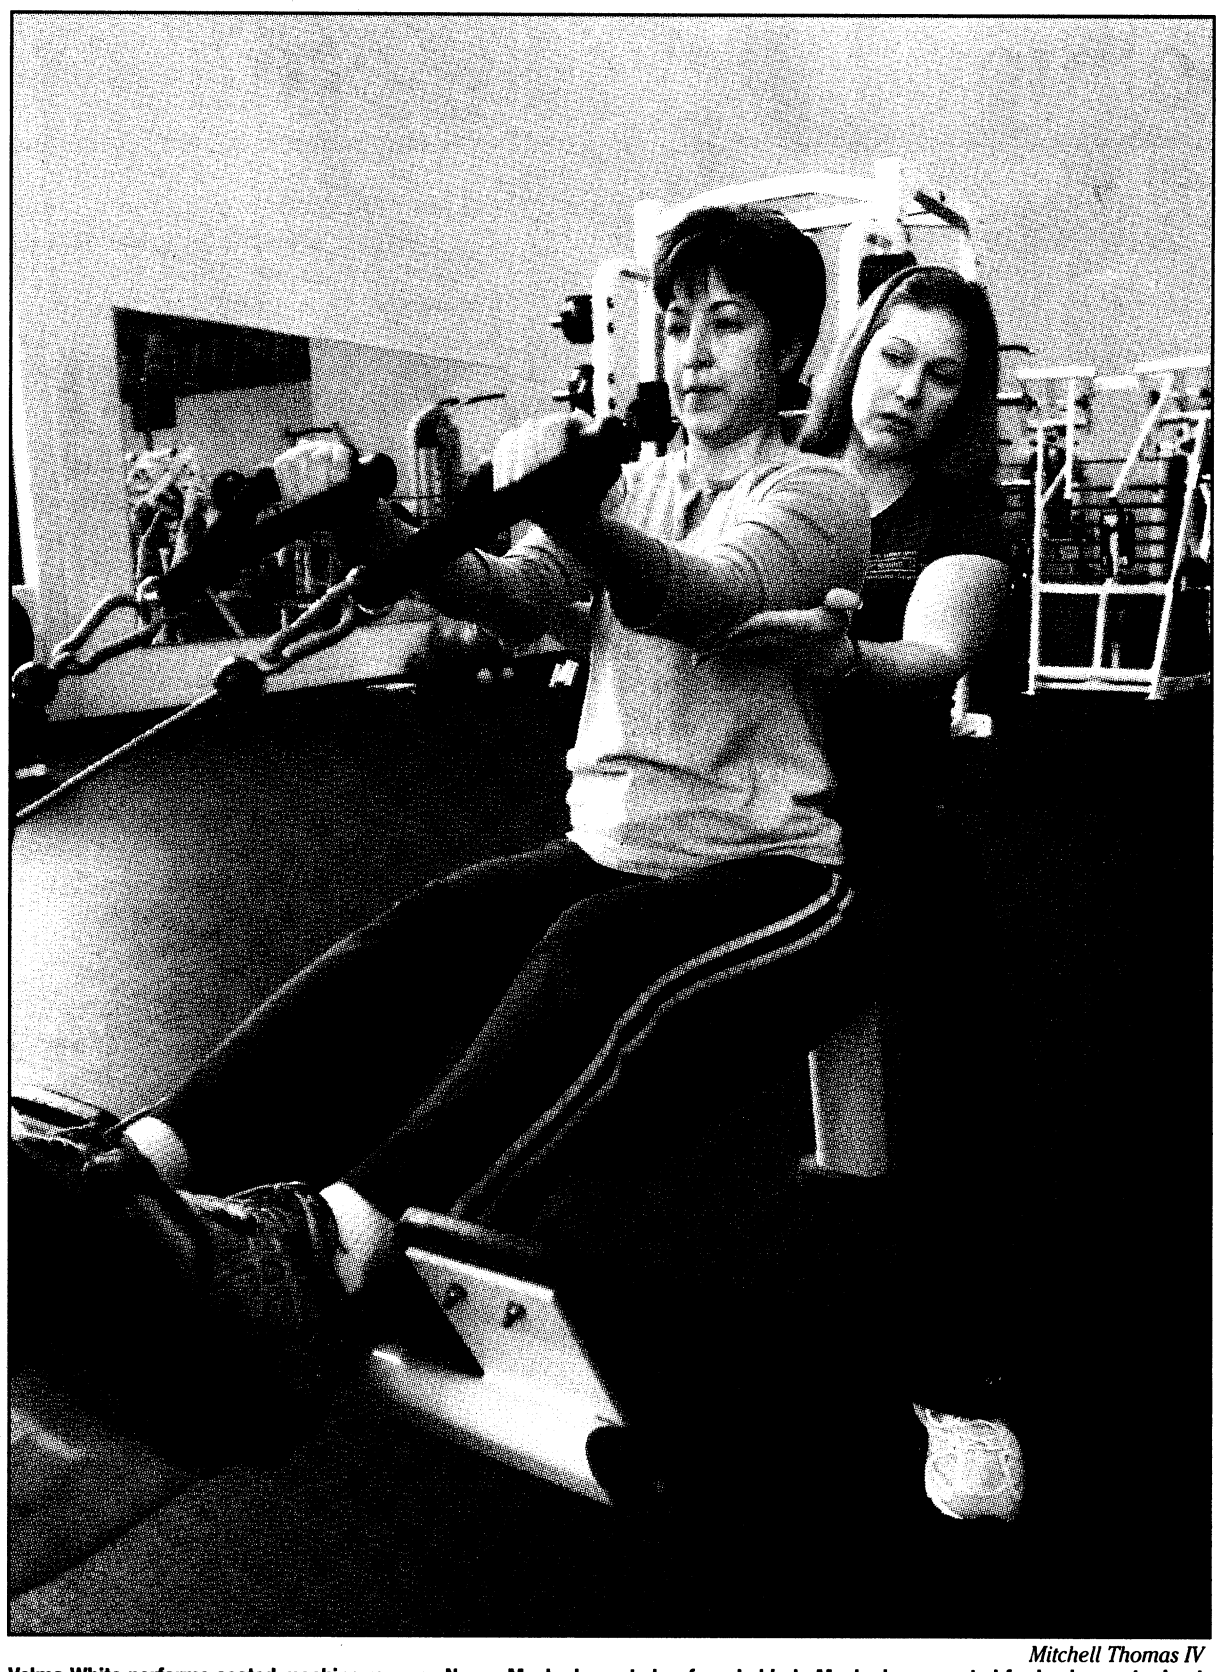
Green vegetables, excluding iceberg lettuce, carry a high amount of vitamins needed daily. She recommends eating romaine lettuce, baby spinach and other dark leaves.

Although fresh produce is the best resource, flash frozen fruits and vegetables are an adequate option.

Foods to avoid include those containing trans and saturated fats and hidden sugars like fructose corn syrup, sucrose, maltose and turbinado.

On the fitness side, Machado recommends seeing a certified trainer to get an initial consultation to assess current fitness levels, target heart rates and body fat measurements so that proper goals can be set.

Once you begin training, she recommends starting with a minimum of 30 minutes a day five days a week. She suggests doing an adequate mix of weight training and cardio which is ideal for muscle gain and calorie burn.



Velma White, the wife of a deployed Soldier, has worked with Machado for the past two months and credits the use of a trainer as the best motivation.

"I knew the holidays were coming up and I wanted to maintain my weight and maybe lose a bit," White said. "Nancy pushes me, and I know when I have an appointment with her that I can't break it, which makes me more accountable."

With so many fad diets and gimmicks, Machado realizes that many get confused about the best options. She insist that the best way is to keep your plan simple while setting reasonable goals

"There is no quick solution to weight loss like taking diet pills," Machado said. "This is a process to better yourself as a whole. You don't do anything you wouldn't do for the rest of your life."

To set up an appointment with Machado, call 706-545-0248.

Last second shot lifts Brown over Army

ARMY ATHLETIC COMMUNICATIONS

WEST POINT, N.Y. — Damon Huffman hit a jumper with 1.7 seconds remaining to propel the Brown University Bears to a 79-78 victory over Army in men's basketball action at Christl Arena on Wednesday, Jan. 2. Senior Jarell Brown tied the Black Knights' single-game record with nine three-pointers en route to a game-high 32 points in the losing effort.

Huffman's jumper from the right wing capped a four-point comeback in the final 21 seconds. The Black Knights led 78-74 after Kenny Brewer knocked down both ends of a one-and-one. Huffman then drove the length of the court and threw in a layup as he was falling down while being fouled. He completed the three-point play to make the score 78-77 with 15.2 seconds left. Army had a chance to extend its lead, but missed the front end of a one-and-one with 11 seconds on the clock. The Bears secured the rebound and called a timeout to set up the game-winning play. Chris Walker had his best offensive outing of the campaign with a season-high 14 points. Sophomore Josh Miller scored seven markers and handed out a career-best 11 assists. His assist total tied for fourth on Army's single-game list. John Moonshower and Brewer added eight points each.

Huffman led four players in double figures for Brown. He hit 6 of 9 shots, including 4 of 7 from behind the arc. Mark McAndrew posted a double-double of 15 points and 10 rebounds, while Chris Skrelja narrowly missed a triple-double with 15 points, nine rebounds and eight assists. Mark MacDonald chipped in 12 points. The Bears jumped out to a quick 7-2 lead, but Army knotted the game at 7-7 on Brown's first three-pointer of the evening with 16:24 to go. The Bears tallied the next six points to take their largest lead at 13-7. Walker ignited Army's comeback, scoring the Black Knights' next seven points. Jarell Brown's second three-pointer gave the Black Knights their first lead of the game at 17-16 with 12:31 to go. The Bears used another 7-0 run to regain their six-point advantage, but Brown scored the game's next six points on three free throws and a triple to tie the game at 23-23. Army scored five of the next nine points to take a slim 28-27 lead after Miller hit a pair of free throws. The Bears quickly retook a one-point lead, but Brown drilled his fifth three of the half to put Army in front, 31-29. Brown scored the next four points to take a 33-31 lead, but Miller found a cutting Walker for an easy lay-in and a 33-33 tie. Jarell Brown drilled his sixth and final three of the half to put Army ahead, 38-35, but the Bears hit a pair of late free throws to go into the locker room down only one at the break.

Black Knight senior Jarell Brown leaps up with the ball during a game against Brown University Wednesday. He tied the Army record with nine three-pointers.

The Black Knights scored on the opening possession of the second half when Doug Williams threw down a dunk to make it 40-37. The Bears scored the next seven points to retake a four-point lead and were able to stretch the advantage to five points on two occasions. Army then went on an 8-0 run on Walker's second three-point play of the night, a three-pointer by senior Grant Carter and a bucket by sophomore Marcus Nelson that gave Army a 55-52 advantage. The Bears quickly erased the deficit with eight unanswered points of their own to take a 60-55 lead.

Miller ended the run with a jumper, and Brown hit his eighth three of the game to tie the game at 60-60. The Bears made three free throws to reclaim the lead, but Brown's final three-pointer of the night tied the game at 63-63 with 4:32 to go. With Army down by two points, Miller hit his only long-range shot of the night to give the Black Knights a 66-65 advantage with less than four minutes to go. Army nursed its lead, extending it to four points at 74-70 on a three-point play by Brewer with 1:28 to go. Skrelja hit two free throws, but Moonshower converted a feed from Nelson with 31.4 seconds remaining to push the advantage back to four points. Two more Skrelja free throws with 22.8 seconds left cut the lead back to one possession, but Brewer hit both ends of a one-and-one to set up Huffman's frantic finish.

The loss marked Army's first defeat in a game decided by three-or-fewer points this season. The Black Knights are now 3-1 on the year in such games. Army ends its season-long five-game homestand on Saturday against Portland at 1 p.m. in the first game of a doubleheader with the Black Knights' women's squad.

FIT FACTS

MWR FITNESS DIRECTOR
Lori Smith

Some of us traveled over the holidays. Others are on their way home.

Unfortunately, with traveling comes the excuse to not work out.

Well, that excuse ends here, because this week's article is about how to keep active — on the road. I know what you're thinking: That darn Lori wants us to stay active all the time; this is my excuse to not work out.

I just want you to be healthy, because I care. Think about it that way.

So, now you've decided to be stay active whenever you're on the road. You need a plan of action — besides that little voice in your head that keeps saying, "Lori wants me to be healthy" — to help you stay focused.

• Before you head out, research the area you are visiting. Look for a park, playground or stadium that could lend itself to working out.

Many places have walking or hiking trails, stairs for running and walking, walking tours of the city or playgrounds for the kids to enjoy.

If you're staying in a hotel, ask the concierge for a map of the city and find out how many destinations you can get to by foot.

Of course, many hotels also have pools and fitness centers. Sure, their fitness center may not be as great as Smith, but it will help you stay active. It's better than nothing.

• Bring along a jump rope or stretchy bands. These are lightweight and easy to transfer and a great way to get in cardio and some resistance training.

There are a number of Web sites that offer instructions to help you use bands or ropes to give every body part a good workout.

Another great option is body weight exercises. Exercises such as push-ups and crunches require no equipment.

Just try to find a routine that works and suits your needs and time.

• Have fun, too. Make sure that you enjoy yourself and make the most of the area you have traveled.

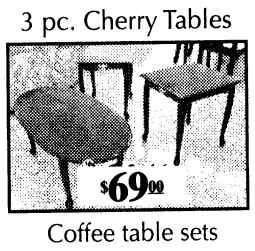
Spend time with Family. Take them for a walk or play with the kids. Just make sure you enjoy this time. Even if you're trying to stay healthy and feel better, it can still be fun.

The point of this week's article is to help you stay active during those vacations or business trips that interrupt your workout routine. Do something — even if it's only for a few minutes, several times a day. Remember, you're doing it for your health, and you will feel much better in the longrun.

And just maybe when you get back to the gym and see me, you might say, "Thanks for making me stay active; I could eat that extra slice of pie and not feel guilty."

I hope you enjoyed the holidays.

Keep reading for next week's article when I want to talk about making and keeping New Year's resolutions.



Until then, send your fitness questions to Lori.Smith6@us.army.mil.

Koger named DODEA finalist

THE BAYONET
Rachel L. Watkins

Margaret Koger, who teaches gifted students at McBride Elementary, was one of the top three finalists in the Department of Defense Education Activity Teacher of the Year Competition.

Koger, who was named the 2007-2008 Georgia/ Alabama Domestic Dependent Elementary and Secondary School Teacher of the Year, was one of 14 district winners to advance to the DODEA competition.

"I always knew I wanted to be a teacher and work with children," said Koger. "Teaching is a calling you know you are meant to do."

In college, Koger tutored elementary school children. Both her mother and grandmother were teachers.

"I think the most rewarding aspect of teaching is seeing students who are curious about their world and who are hungry for knowledge," Koger said. "There is no other job I would rather do."

Koger, a Columbus native, has been teaching for 23 years. She taught five years at Chattahoochee County Education Center and 18 years at Fort Benning. She has taught English, math, science and language arts at elementary grade levels. She currently teaches 26 students.

Phyllis Parker, McBride's principal, has worked with Koger since the 1990s. It was at Wilson Elementary School where Parker and Koger first worked together.

"When she came to Wilson, I knew immediately that she was going to be one of the best teachers I have experienced working with," Parker said. "I say this because each year she was there, she was moved from one grade level to another grade level. She moved right with it and never missed a beat.

"What sets Mrs. Koger apart from other teachers is that she is a lifelong learner — she is excited to learn new things," Parker said.

Koger is spontaneous and adaptable to teaching moments, Parker said.

"She always has a plan. However, that plan doesn't dictate what the students do. If there is a teachable moment, she takes advantage of it," Parker said.

"Whenever I don't understand something, she goes back over it and shows me how to understand it," said Scott McGee, third-grader.

Parker said Koger also helps with staff development, teacher training and Partners in Education.

ESC: 'We're still here'

Members hope new year will see new life for one of Benning's most venerable clubs

THE BAYONET
Bridgett Siter

Bridgett Siter
Kacellia Patrick, left, the outgoing ESC president, Tiffani Cunningham, center, and Belinda Boyett said membership has steadily declined since the start of the war. The ESC board is pictured here with a silver tea set that was used by the ESC long before any of today's members were born.

Courtesy photo
That same tea set was central to many early ESC functions. These days, the ESC board members would like to see the club become what it once was — an engaging source of fun and friendship for the spouses of enlisted Soldiers and retirees.

There were about 30 active members when Kacellia Patrick attended her first Enlisted Spouses' Club meeting four years ago. Today, there are eight — maybe seven, if Patrick and her Family have already pulled that moving truck out of their driveway.

Patrick, who has held the office of ESC president since August, is leaving Fort Benning this month with her husband, Staff Sgt. Jerry Patrick, and their children. He's shipping out to Korea, and she's going home to Ohio, where she'll rely on family to help her through the separation and the birth of the couple's third son.

But she'll miss her "ESC family," Patrick said. They helped her cope here at Fort Benning through her husband's three deployments. They gave her stalwart support, a wholesome social network and a place to "laugh and have a good time" when an evening alone in an empty house was daunting. They were a small band of sisters.

Patrick is confident she's made friends for life, but she leaves fearful that the club will not survive the steady decline in membership she's seen since she joined.

"It has such potential. I want it to get back to where it once was — those Mad Hatter days," she said, pointing to a black and white photo, circa 1970, that pictures a number of women strutting a runway in wildly exaggerated hats.

It's not that Patrick or her cohorts — Vice President Tiffany Cunningham, who will step into Patrick's position, and Belinda Boyett, the recording secretary — really want to resurrect the annual ESC hat show, quaint as it was. They want to see the club become a vibrant, viable resource for the spouses of enlisted Soldiers and retirees.

Patrick said she went reluctantly that first time she attended a meeting, coerced by a neighbor. At previous duty stations, ESC membership was exclusive to the spouses of NCOs, and she didn't figure she'd fit in.

Instead, Patrick said, she found herself having a great time, surrounded by a diverse group of women.

"They were having a tea party. I was impressed, like 'Oh, they actually do stuff here,'" she said.

They did indeed.

At that time, and in the years preceding, the ESC — which had evolved from the early Benning Enlisted Men's Wives' Club, which was started in 1946, to the Enlisted Wives' Club and finally, less than 10 years ago, to the ESC — met regularly for games, fundraisers and community welfare projects.

"They did a lot back then," Boyett said as she leafed through a stack of scrapbooks dating back 40 years and filled with photographs of ESC dances, fashion shows, trips and luncheons.

Like Patrick, Boyett was invited to an ESC meeting by a member, her mother-in-law, during her husband's first assignment to Fort Benning in 2001.

"She dragged me out of the house and said 'You have to get involved. You have to get to know your neighbors, because they will be your family,'" said Boyett, who rejoined the club when the couple was sent back to Fort Benning.

Boyett is also active in other post organizations, including her unit family readiness group. ESC is different, she said.

"I think there are a lot of misconceptions. I think people think we're just like an FRG. And we're not the same, not at all," she said. "It is a social group, but it's more than that, for me anyway. I come and have a good time, and that's important — especially for wives whose husbands are deployed — but it also gives me a chance to get to know so many wives from across post and off post. We have so much in common, and we have so much to offer each other."

Historically, Boyett said, senior enlisted wives were the driving force behind a very successful ESC. These days, she wonders where they've gone.

"Maybe it's the deployments. Maybe they're busy with other obligations," she said.

In fact, the board members have thought long and hard about the decline in membership. Why now, after the organization maintained a healthy membership during the Korean War and Vietnam? Why, when the Officers Spouses' Club still thrives (though membership isn't robust as it once was,) does the ESC struggle to muster interest?

Cunningham seems less disinclined to fret over the "whys." A relative newcomer to the club, she believes it's just a matter of time before the tide turns.

"ESC still exists, and we offer free child care — that's what we have to tell people. We have to get the word out," she said. "I think people just don't know we exist."

Then too, there comes a time for planning. Currently the club meets once a month on a Tuesday at a new office in Building 1677, behind the Follow Me Chapel on Main Post. Cunningham would like to see more meetings scheduled to accommodate more people.

With a home to call their own — the club has met at six sites since Patrick joined four years ago — they can schedule more activities like the blood drive they hosted last month for the post's new blood center.

"I know this club has potential," Cunningham said. "It's a challenge, but I think it's worth fighting for. It would be a shame to see the ESC go away."

ESC members are planning an open house for February at a date to be announced. But interested parties need not wait, Cunningham said. To become a member, or to learn more about the ESC, call her at 706-221-8059.

Membership costs $25 per year.

McBride students win district art, essay contest

Photos by Rachel Watkins
Fourth-grader Quashawndra Jones shows her peers her award-winning drawing. She was the elementary winner for the National Family Week drawing contest.

THE BAYONET
Rachel L. Watkins

Quashawndra Jones and Marisa Miller, students at McBride Elementary, won the 2007 National Family Week essay and drawing contest. They were awarded trophies and $50 savings bonds Dec. 14.

The Family Center of Columbus, which sponsored the contest, is a part of the National Alliance for Children and Families. Fort Benning and Muscogee County students were asked to submit a drawing or an essay about their families.

The entries were judged on style, skill and creativity. One winner was chosen for each category at the elementary, middle and high school levels. Jones, a fourth-grader, and Miller, a second-grader, competed against 700 elementary students. Jones won the drawing contest, and Miller won the essay contest.

"I worked really hard on my drawing," said Jones whose drawing included her brother, 5, and her sister, 11.

Miller has three siblings — two brothers and a sister.

Second-grader Marisa Miller is the National Family Week essay winner in the Fort Benning and Muscogee County district. Here, Miller receives a trophy for her win.

"My Family means a lot to me, because they love me, they are nice to me, and they all take turns with me," she said.

Community CALENDAR

ON POST

FLU VACCINES AT FORT BENNING

Martin Army Community Hospital has vaccines available.

Clinics and times are as follows:

•Family Medicine Clinic and Internal Medicine Clinic — 8:30 to 11 a.m. and 1 to 3 p.m. Monday to Friday.

•Pediatric Clinic — 7:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. Monday to Friday by appointment only. Call 706-544-2273 to schedule an appointment.

For more information, call 706-544-2041.

BALLROOM DANCING CLASSES

Ballroom classes are held from 10:30 to 11:30 a.m. for ladies only and 6 to 7 p.m. for groups every Wednesday and Friday at the Kelley Hill Recreation Center. Both courses are $60 a month. Private lessons by appointment only are available on Saturdays for $20 per lesson.

For more information, call 706-544-3079.

CAREER ADVANCEMENT ACCOUNTS

CAA, an available grant, provides up to $3,000 per year for two years for eligible spouses. Spouses must have a high school diploma, GED or some college, one year remaining at Fort Benning, and two years remaining on current enlistment. Soldiers must be in pay grades private to sergeant or second lieutenant to captain.

The funds can be used to complete post-secondary training of any of Georgia's two-year community and technical colleges. Or the grant can be used for training that will lead to a state-approved credential or license such as an approved certificate from a continuing education program or approved education service provider.

For more information, call 706-545-7397 or go to the Army Education Center at Building 2602 in Soldiers' Plaza.

CO KO DELI OFFERS BREAKFAST

Co Ko Deli at the Fort Benning golf course snack bar now offers breakfast items 6:30 to 10 a.m. every Monday through Saturday including omelets, french toast, eggs, creamed beef over biscuits, pancakes, sausage, grits and hashbrowns. To-go orders are available.

For more information, call 706-682-1937.

EFMP ENROLLMENT

The Exceptional Family Member Program has mandatory enrollment for special needs Family members (child or spouse). Enrollment doesn't hurt the Soldier's career but assists military personnel divisions in considering medical and educational needs of the Family member in the assignment process.

Enrollment is necessary if the spouse or child meets the following criteria: asthma, a current or past mental health diagnosis, a high-risk pregnancy, cancer (past or present), attention deficit disorder or diabetes.

For resource information and referrals, call 706-545-5521.

CITIZENSHIP CLASSES

The International Wives Club and Army Community Service will sponsor citizenship classes this month one evening a week for six weeks in Building 2624, Soldiers' Plaza.

For more information, call 706-687-6471 or 706-545-0403.

SCHOLARSHIPS FOR MILITARY CHILDREN

Applications for the Defense Commissary Agency's 2008 scholarships are available at commissaries worldwide. The $1,500 scholarships are available to unmarried children under the age of 21 (23 if enrolled in school) of military active-duty, retired, Guard and Reserve service members. In order to be eligible, the applicant and his sponsor must be enrolled in the DEERS database, and they must have a current ID card.

The applicant must be planning to attend or already attending an accredited college or university full time in the fall of 2008 or enrolled in a program of studies designed to transfer directly into a four-year program. Applicants are required to write an essay. At least one scholarship will be awarded at each commissary, and the deadline for application is Feb. 20. For more information, go to www.militaryscholar.org.

WOMEN'S CONFERENCE

Save the date: Fort Benning's annual Women's Conference will be March 12. The theme will be "Feed your dreams, nourish your soul."

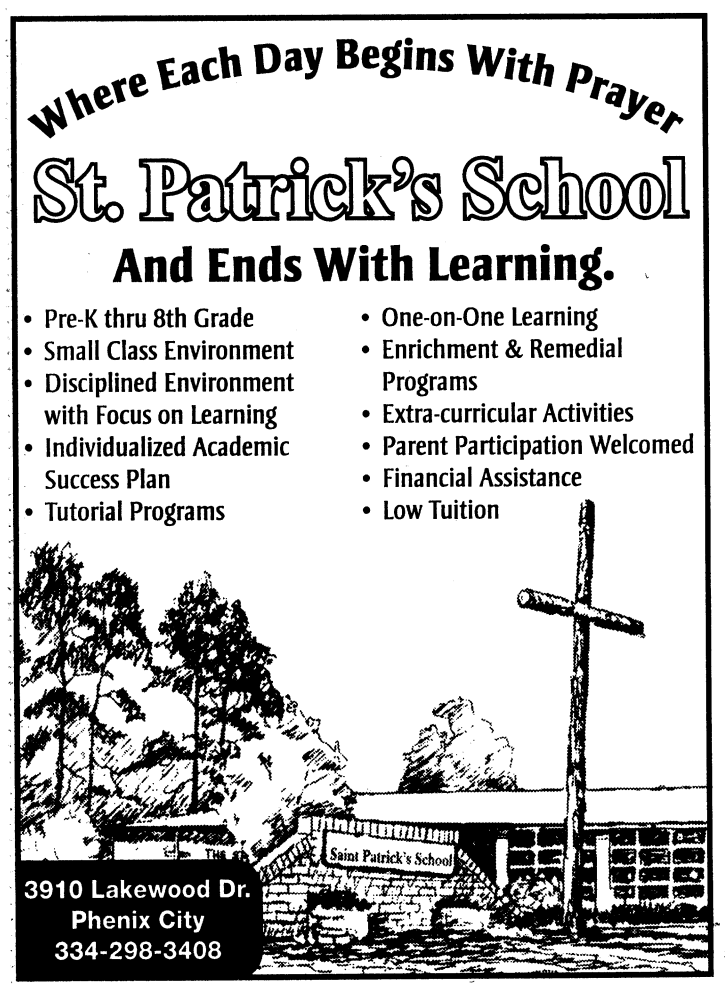
IRAQ STAR

Iraq Star is a publicly funded nonprofit organization that provides reconstructive surgery to disfigured American Soldiers upon their return from Iraq or Afghanistan wars. Iraq Star offers a revision of shrapnel or burn wounds, removing no longer wanted tattoos, locating specialists for intricate surgeries and acting as a facilitator between the Soldier, the military and the specialist.

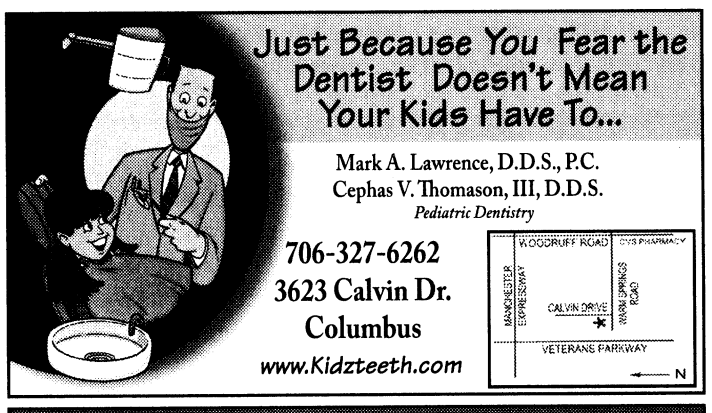
Iraq Star has 142 board certified plastic and reconstructive surgeons in 38 states offering their services free of charge.

The organization provides transportation, hotel accommodations, food, medical supplies and medications.

Angel Flight flies Soldiers to and from their surgery when located within 300 miles of their surgeon.

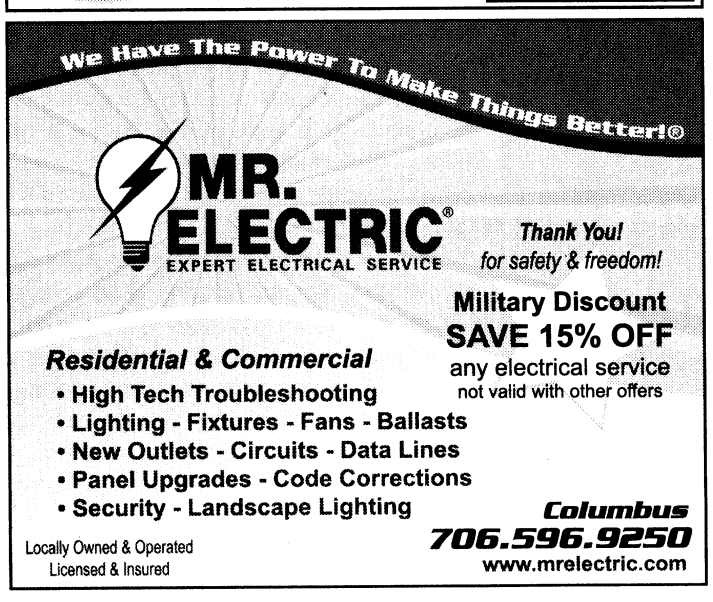


For more information, go to www.iraqstar.org or call 760-568-4039.

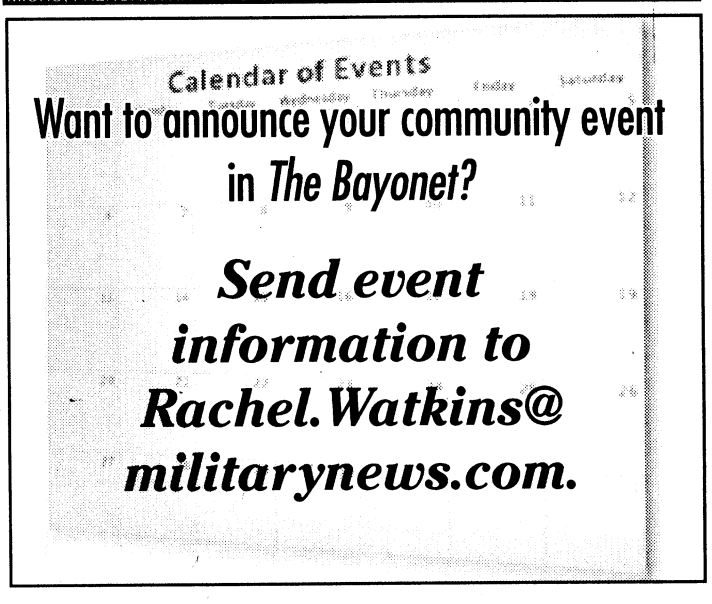


OPERATION OPEN ARMS

Operation Open Arms is a network of businesses and community organizations working together to offer complimentary vacation services and experiences such as lodging, dining, fishing charters, sailing trips and more to active-duty military on temporary leave from a foreign duty station and vacationing in southwest Florida.



Military personnel and their Family members are personally responsible for contacting and making all hotel, fishing and other reservations after viewing the OOA Web site at www.OperationOpenArms.com.



All offers are subject to availability. Complimentary services are available only to active-duty military on temporary combat leave with orders to return to combat; serving in a foreign duty station and on two week leave; or returning to a combat zone without being offered combat leave, such as with U.S. Marines. Military ID, leave form and official orders are required.

Family relationships: Elmer's Glued or Super Glued?

FAMILY LIFE TRAINING CENTER
Chaplain (Maj.) Michael Rash

I did a Google search on "Family relationships." Guess how many hits came up? Only about 8 million. That's enough to keep us reading for quite a while. Why is it that Family relationships are so difficult, so confusing, and yet, so intriguing all at the same time?

You guessed it. Because we all have one or two or more significant Family relationships and — here's the kicker — they're all different, but in lots of ways, they're all the same. Here's what I mean.

Even though science has made tremendous strides in the last decade, you and I each arrived in the same way — with the contributions of a man and a woman.

Now, I don't know about you, but my mom and dad didn't receive an owner's manual when I was born. How'd they know when to feed, bathe, change, rock, soothe and entertain me? Who told them all the important things they'd need to give me so I could develop? The answer to these questions lies in their important relationships.

Strange thing about Family relationships: They're always changing. Just when you think you've got them all figured out, something unpredictable happens, and there goes the balance.

The military doesn't do a lot to sharpen our Family skills. So, how do we expect to get better at keeping our Family relationships strong? Well, just like an athlete — practice, practice and more practice.

True, Families aren't the easiest groups in the world to get along with. Each has its own rules for cooperation. Each has its own expectations of what's needed, what's allowed or what's important. Each has its own history, valued stories and secrets, too. So, why is it that Families are so difficult to navigate, so hard to understand?

If your Family is like mine, the old saying is still true: "By the Family broken; by the Family healed." Most of my best memories in the world involve relationships within my Family. The holiday presents we buy for our Families, the time we schedule to spend with our Families, the greeting cards, e-mails and phone calls we make to our Families.

By the same token, during these times of rushing around, limited budgets and overfilled agendas, who has the power to smolder our enthusiasm with only a small smirk of disapproval? Our Families.

Who has the ability to imprint unkind words forever into our memories? Our Families.

Who has the influence to wallop our spirits with only a simple, "I told you so." Our Families.

During this time of the year, take a moment to ask yourself, "Whose are the most important relationships in my life? When I think of that 'someone special,' who comes to mind?"

When you reflect on your answers, do more than Elmer's Glue those relationships — Super Glue them, and make positive, special memories that last for a lifetime.

And remember, if you'd like to talk about any of your Family relationships, the staff at the Family Life Center is ready to listen.

Green genes

THE BAYONET
Cheryl Rodewig

I love that the Army is committed to being green. The environmentally friendly practices we use are helping to keep the earth, well, green.

But there's another way of thinking green, too, and your mom has been telling it to you for years. Yes, those green, leafy vegetables are one of nature's purest foods — and Americans aren't getting enough.

According to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, less than a third of Americans are eating enough fruits and vegetables, and almost half of their vegetable intake includes corn and potatoes, foods high in starch but less rich in nutrients.

Spinach, brussels sprouts, broccoli and cabbage are being forgotten, not to mention bok choy, kale and collard greens.

These foods provide a powerhouse of benefits. They are rich in vitamins A, C, E and K, fiber, folate and riboflavin. That means they're good for your skin, eyes, immune system, bones and digestive tract. They also help your body fight off the damage caused by free radicals and build new cells.

Best of all, many green veggies contain a generous supply of carotenoids, which researchers believe may aid in cancer prevention.

Let's take spinach as an example. Often hated from childhood, this leafy food plays too small a role in the American diet. With a meager 40 calories per cup, it protects your waist and your health. Along with the already mentioned vitamins, folate and fiber, spinach boasts an abundance of calcium, vitamin B6, potassium, zinc, magnesium, iron and lutein, an effective antioxidant.

It even has 84 percent of your daily requirement for manganese, a powerful mineral that helps your thyroid, blood sugar, bones and nerves.

Here's how you can incorporate this key veggie into your weekly menu. Spinach is freshest in the fall but is available year-round either fresh, frozen or canned.

Canned is possibly the worst alternative because over-processing rids the product of its nutrients, and many canned foods add extra salt. Frozen is a step-up, but raw is best, since the spinach doesn't have to be cooked, potentially destroying more of those vital nutrients. Try adding some to your salad.

Still, eating frozen spinach is better than not eating it at all and you're still getting plenty of vitamins and minerals. I keep some in my freezer and use it in stir-fry, soups, casseroles, dips and all my homemade spaghetti or pizza sauces.

Watch out for adding too much, though, especially if you care a lot for presentation. One leaf too many will turn your sauce or soup to a deep green.

But at my home, we don't mind. The occasional grass-colored but delicious pizza just keeps us thinking green.

Army to get more health care providers

Military-to civilian conversion helps MEDCOM fight shortage

US ARMY MEDICAL COMMAND
Jerry Harben

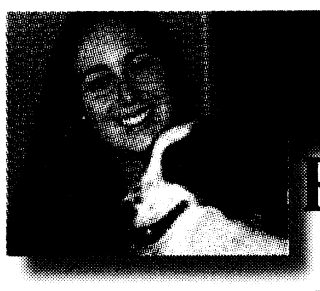
The current shortage of behavioral health professionals facing the Army Medical Department is getting a boost thanks in part to the Army's recent decision regarding its military-to-civilian conversion program.

That program, when carried through to fruition, would have converted 2,715 military medical and administrative positions to civilian positions through fiscal 2009. U.S. Army Medical Command will add 738 military positions in fiscal 2008 and 554 more in fiscal 2009, said Herb Coley, chief of the manpower division at MEDCOM Headquarters. The positions are in addition to a like number converted to civilian employee slots as part of a Department of Defense initiative to get more military personnel into combat roles.

MEDCOM will keep money allotted to hire the additional civilians, meaning the new military spaces are a net addition to MEDCOM strength.

"The Army has demonstrated a clear commitment to the health care of our Soldiers by devoting scarce military force structure to the Army Medical Command through the reversal of programmed military-to-civilian conversions and the concurrent increase in additional government civilians," said Bill Thresher, chief of staff for MEDCOM.

"We continue to have funding for the civilians, then we get the new military spaces and are able to program them to job specialties we need," Coley said. "Thus we are able to respond to growing issues like behavioral health and traumatic brain injuries. Also, we will be able to meet the medical needs of the expanding Army.



"Military authorizations will be redistributed to our hospitals with an emphasis on clinical positions, and with a further emphasis on behavioral health and rehabilitation specialties. Many of the new military positions are doctors, nurses or behavioral-health professionals.

"Geographically, there will be an emphasis on places that are isolated or medically underserved."

Coley said the additional military spaces for MEDCOM are not being taken away from maneuver units.

"More than 2,900 medical slots will be added to the operational force to support growth of the Army," he said.

Resolutions will help you raise well-behaved pets

THE BAYONET
Rachel Houston

While making New Year's resolutions this year, take some time to evaluate your pet care skills. Most of us slip a little during the holidays — giving pets a bite of meatball, not keeping an eye on the kitten or forgetting to give the dog its heartworm medicine.

Make a New Year's resolution to help keep your pets happy, healthy and well-trained by being a good pet owner, and use the tips below to brush up on your pet care skills. The tips are also helpful if you have a new pet in the house.

- Consistency is the key to a well-behaved dog or cat. If you say "no" when your pet chews on something it's not supposed to, mean it, and don't overlook the bad behavior the next time it happens. The chances are good that if you discourage bad behavior from the beginning and remain consistent, the pet will learn quickly and the lessons will stick with it for life.
- Establishing a routine is a good way to stay consistent. Try to feed your pets at the same time each day, and let them outside or take them on walks first thing in the morning, after each meal and last thing at night.

Puppies will need to go more often than that, and try to take them out the same door to the same spot each time.

Eventually they will go to that spot to let you know they need to go out. For kittens, find a good spot for the litter box and keep it there. Take them there often so they can learn to find it on their own.

- With the cold winter weather, playing outside with your dog may not be enticing, but it's important to make sure your pets are getting enough exercise. Bored, under-stimulated pets will find ways to expend their energy — usually in a way we wouldn't approve of like chewing on furniture or running around the house knocking things over.

Take your dog and a ball outside and play a quick game of fetch. It gets the dog running and using up energy in a short amount of time. That is, unless you have a Sheltie, like me, who could chase the ball for days on end without getting tired.

- For some mental stimulation, get a toy that allows you to hide a treat or some peanut butter, making your pet search and work a little to get the reward, suggests the American Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals. Doing some training is another good way to stimulate your pet. Work on "sit," "stay" and "come" and tricks. Many cats like to explore, so set up some cardboard boxes or leave out a paper shopping bag for them to discover.
- Use a calendar to keep track of important pet health events. Mark which days you gave meds and went to the vet. Make it a habit to write down future vet appointments or mark the day on the calendar when you need to set up an appointment. Also write down when annual vaccines will be needed and when you'll need a refill on meds and insecticides.

Well-behaved, healthy and happy pets make great companions and bring out the fun of pet ownership, so set your mind to helping your pets achieve it this year.

Editor's note: This article first appeared in a January 2007 issue of The Bayonet.

Tricare can help patients with New Year's resolutions

TRICARE

FALLS CHURCH, Va. — Need to save money? Tobacco still turning you on? Fighting the battle of the bulge? It seems year after year, those are among the hot topics on most people's New Year's resolution lists.

This year, let Tricare help.

Saving money on regularly used prescriptions got a lot easier in 2007. The new Member Choice Center opened to rave reviews as beneficiaries found they could save a bundle on medications — and have them delivered — by switching from retail pharmacies to the safe, convenient Tricare Mail Order Pharmacy.

Converting from retail to mail order can be accomplished 24/7 via the Web at www.express-scripts.com/tricare or by calling 877-363-1433 to speak to a patient care advocate.

The online MCC has proven surprisingly popular with beneficiaries, the majority switching over with the click of the mouse. In either case, the MCC patient care advocates contact physicians to have prescriptions switched over to TMOP.

Take regular heartburn medications?

The co-pay on Nexium was recently lowered to $3, and a two-year test of over-the-counter medications allows beneficiaries to try Prilosec OTC for free.

More money saved.

Achieving a healthier lifestyle through activities such as exercise, losing weight and quitting tobacco can help save money too — for beneficiaries and for the military health care system.

Tricare's ongoing "Healthy Choices for Life" campaign is aimed at raising awareness of the problems of obesity, smoking and alcohol abuse.

Statistically, service members smoke or chew tobacco at higher rates than the civilian population.

Quitting tobacco is a New Year's resolution that will pay off in healthy dividends, and now there is help through the Department of Defense educational campaign "Quit Tobacco. Make Everyone Proud."

Visit the new Web site at www.ucanquit2.org where users can develop a personalized plan for quitting, play games, listen to podcasts, connect to online cessation programs and even chat with a trained cessation counselor, seven days a week from 8:30 a.m. to 2:30 a.m.

Tricare's "Kick Butts" multi-media feature on the Press Room at www.tricare.mil has even more helpful information, links and a list of some of the smoking cessation programs offered by the services.

Cutting down on alcohol use is also a great New Year's "get healthy" resolution. "That Guy" is a DoD funded peer-to-peer campaign to increase awareness of the problems associated with overindulging.

The campaign is designed to bring home the message by using humor to reach the target audience — young service members. Check out the award-winning Web site at www.thatguy.com.

Tricare is also helping beneficiaries keep "get healthy" resolutions by encouraging clinical preventive services such as flu shots and regular screenings for colon, prostate and breast cancer.

Tricare also now covers the Shingles vaccine for beneficiaries 60 and older and Magnetic Resonance Imaging screening for women who are at high risk of developing breast cancer. Whether it's increasing savings on prescription medications through TMOP or reducing the risk of illness through preventive screenings, just remember it's a brand new year — so make a "healthy choice for life."

ASK THE JUDGE

OFFICE OF THE
STAFF JUDGE ADVOCATE
Anthony R. Tempesta

Q: I need a copy of my daughter's birth certificate. Can I go to Legal Assistance and get a certified copy made?

A: Army Regulation 27-55, Notarial Services, governs when Army Legal Assistance offices may create a certified copy.

Military notaries may make certified copies of some original documents, provided that the notary determines that the copy to be certified is a full, true and accurate transcription or reproduction of the original document.

Military notaries may not make certified copies of public records or of publicly recorded documents when a certified copy of the record document is available from an official source other than a notary.

Such documents include but are not limited to court records, birth certificates, marriage certificates, death certificates, car titles, computer generated tax returns and military leave and earning statements.

However, military notaries may authenticate copies of public records or publicly recorded documents from an official source for two limited purposes.

The first is for military administration, including finance and personnel administration, and the second is for federal administration where allowed by law or other regulation.

Copies of public records or publicly recorded documents authenticated for those purposes must state the purpose for which authenticated. For example, the copy must state "Authenticated Copy for DFAS" or "Authenticated Copy for VA."

The answer to the question, then, depends on the purpose for which the copy will be used.

For example, a client could receive a certified copy of his daughter's birth certificate to enroll her in DEERS, but could not receive a certified copy to put in her baby scrapbook.

Anyone with specific questions should contact the Legal Assistance Division at 706-545-3281 for further information and assistance.

RESTAURANT REVIEW

Rachel L. Watkins
Harry McMahan, owner of the Rankin Quarter since 1989, can tell you just about any history you would like to know about the restaurant.

The Rankin Quarter

THE BAYONET
Rachel L. Watkins

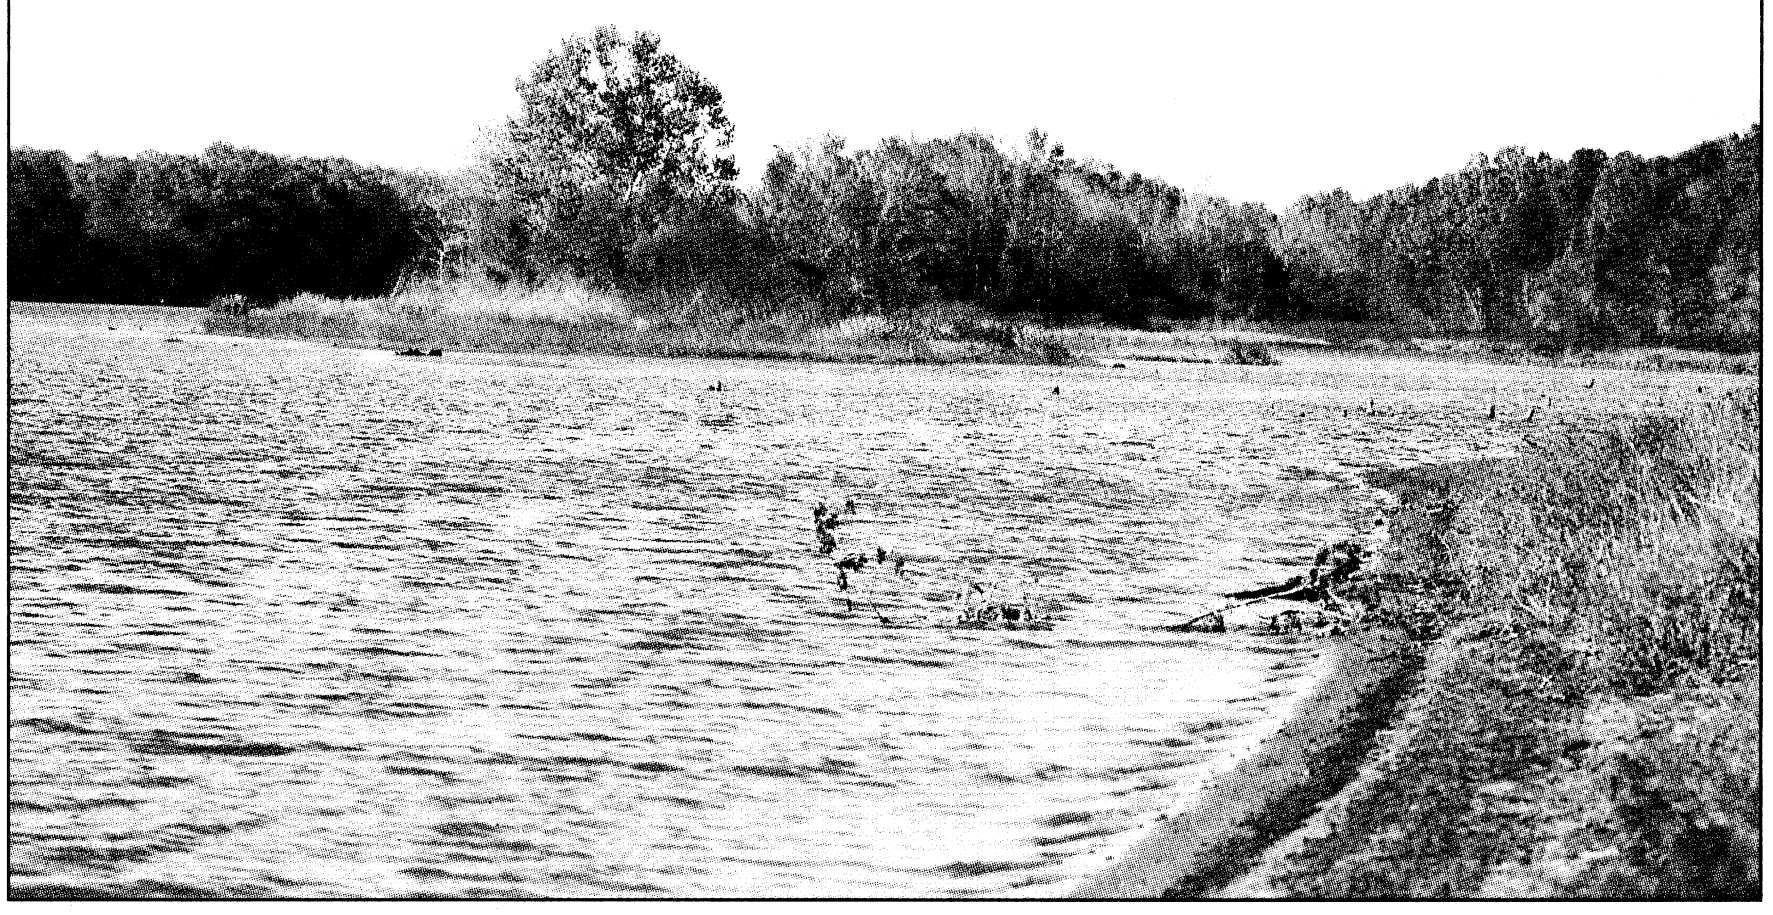
Historical photos of Columbus, Soldiers, maps, ads from the 1800s and bottles from the 1920s decorate the walls at the Rankin Quarter.

Housed in a building constructed in 1880, The Rankin Quarter has been a restaurant since 1895.

It is believed that Oscar Wilde, Franklin Delano Roosevelt and Edwin Booth, among others, attended dinner parties there when they were in town for Springer Opera House events.

It is the perfect place to take out of town guests. The restaurant offers a large variety of soups, salads and sandwiches. Most of the items are named after companies, places or people in this area.

Try the Fort Benning fried or grilled chicken salad for $5.95. It's chicken with mixed greens, cheese, bacon bits, tomatoes and croutons served with your dressing choice. The menu reads, "Enough to make a Soldier salute."



Try the RiverCenter seafood salad for $5.95. It is snow crab, baby shrimp, tomato, pineapple, olives and a pickle spear on a bed of lettuce, and it's served in a fried tortilla shell. The menu reads, "It's usually a sold out show."

I like the Historic Columbus Master Reuben sandwich for $5.25, which is corned beef, Swiss cheese, sauerkraut and thousand island dressing grilled on rye bread. It comes with one side dish.

For $5.75, the Chattahoochee Chicken is worth it, and is made with grilled boneless chicken with barbecue sauce, cheddar cheese, tomatoes and chives and is served with French fries and baked beans.

Vegetarians can try the St. Francis Black Bean Burger for $5.25. It is a meatless patty with spices, peppers, salsa, lettuce, tomato and onion on a wheat bun, and it comes with one side.

The Rankin offers take out and catering. Restaurant hours are 11 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. Sunday through Friday and is located at 21 East 10th Street. For more information, call 706-322-8151.

Thirty miles from Fort Benning, Florence Marina State Park is open every day of the year, providing boats, walking trails, a deep-water marina, picnic tables, campsites with cable TV hookups, cottages and more. Amenities include a swimming pool, miniature golf and the Kirbo Interpretive Center, featuring artifacts like arrowheads and guns and information about Native Americans. Visitors may even spot a bald eagle flying overhead or the occasional alligator near beautiful Lake Walter F. George.

Florence Marina

Nearby state park offers water-lovers opportunities for boating on Lake Walter F. George, fishing at deep-water marina

THE BAYONET
Cheryl Rodewig

About 30 miles south of Fort Benning, in Omaha, Ga., sits Florence Marina State Park.

Spanning 173 acres, this park is a haven for people who enjoy fishing, boating, nature walks and similar activities.

Wooded areas with views of the water provide scenic spots to rest, read or take photos, and several tables, some with shelters, are available for those who bring picnics.

Lake Walter F. George provides an ideal place for the whole Family, including water skiers and boaters.

The deep-water marina allows those wanting to fish the chance to catch bass, bluegill, catfish and other varieties of fish. A deep-water fishing pier is also available.

Motored fishing boats that can seat up to three people are available for rent for $10 an hour or $60 a day.

Life jackets are provided by the park, but visitors must bring their own fishing equipment and anchors.

Guests can bring their own boating equipment.

For those who aren't interested in water sports, the area offers an opportunity for bird-watchers to see bald eagles, egrets and herons. Alligators can also be spotted from time to time.

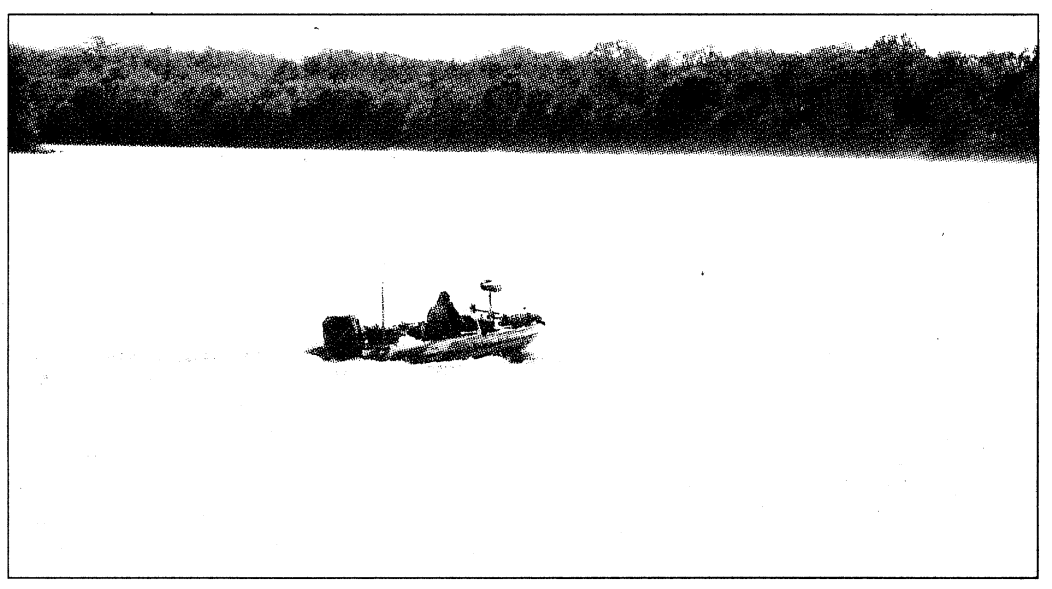
Although the weather is colder now, early spring brings vibrant color. Persimmon and crabapple trees will bloom along the side of the lake. Several flowers, including hydrangeas, wisteria and azaleas, add to the display.

Regardless of weather, the Kirbo Interpretive Center remains open from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m.

The center features information on Native Americans. It also displays several artifacts, including arrowheads, guns, snakes and fish, many dating as far back as the Paleo-Indian period.

For those who wish to stay overnight, there are several campsites and cottages available. Other amenities include a swimming pool, playgrounds, a nature trail and a miniature golf course.

The park is also convenient to Providence Canyon State Park, in Lumpkin, Ga., located about 10 miles away.



It is open year round from 7 a.m. to 10 p.m.

Parking is $3.

OPENING TODAY
ONE MISSED CALL

Beth Raymond (Shannyn Sossamon) is traumatized when she witnesses the gruesome deaths of two friends just days apart.

She knows both of them received cell phone messages days before they died that were recordings of their last moments.

The police think Beth is delusional. Only Detective Jack Andrews (Edward Burns), whose own sister was killed in a freak accident that bears a strange similarity to the deaths of Beth's friends, believes her.

Together, Jack and Beth work to unravel the mystery behind the calls, but then Beth receives a missed call.

One Missed Call is rated PG-13 for violence, terror, frightening images, sexual material and thematic elements.

ALSO PLAYING
JUNO

When Juno (Ellen Page) finds out she is pregnant by her classmate Bleeker (Michael Cera), she is faced with difficult decisions.

With the help of her best friend Leah (Olivia Thirlby), Juno finds her unborn child a "perfect" set of parents: an affluent suburban couple, Mark and Vanessa, longing to adopt.

Juno is rated PG-13 for thematic material, sexual content and language.

ATONEMENT

In 1935, 13-year-old writer Briony Tallis (Saoirse Ronan) falls for Robbie Turner (James McAvoy), the educated son of the family's housekeeper. But since he loves Briony's older sister Cecilia (Kiera Knightley), she falsely accuses him of a crime.

Cecilia and Robbie declare their love, but he is arrested, and Briony continues to seek forgiveness for her childhood misdeed.

Atonement is rated R for images, language and sexuality.

THE GREAT DEBATERS

Professor Melvin Tolson (Denzel Washington), a debate team coach, uses the power of words to shape a group of students, from a small African American college in the deep south, into a historically elite debate team.

Inspired by a true story, The Great Debaters is rated PG-13 for thematic material, violence, disturbing images, language and sexuality.

THE WATER HORSE: LEGEND OF THE DEEP

Angus (Alex Etel), a young Scottish boy, finds an enchanted egg.

He takes it home and soon finds himself face-to-face with an amazing creature, the mythical "water horse" of Scottish lore.

Angus begins a journey of discovery, facing his greatest fears and risking his life to protect a secret that would give birth to a legend.

The Water Horse: Legend of the Deep is rated PG for action and peril, language and smoking.

ALIENS VS. PREDATOR — REQUIEM

Warring alien and predator races descend on a small Colorado town, where unsuspecting residents are caught in the middle of the battle and must band together for any chance of survival.

Aliens Vs. Predators — Requiem stars Steven Pasquale and Reiko Aylesworth and is rated R for gore, violence and language.

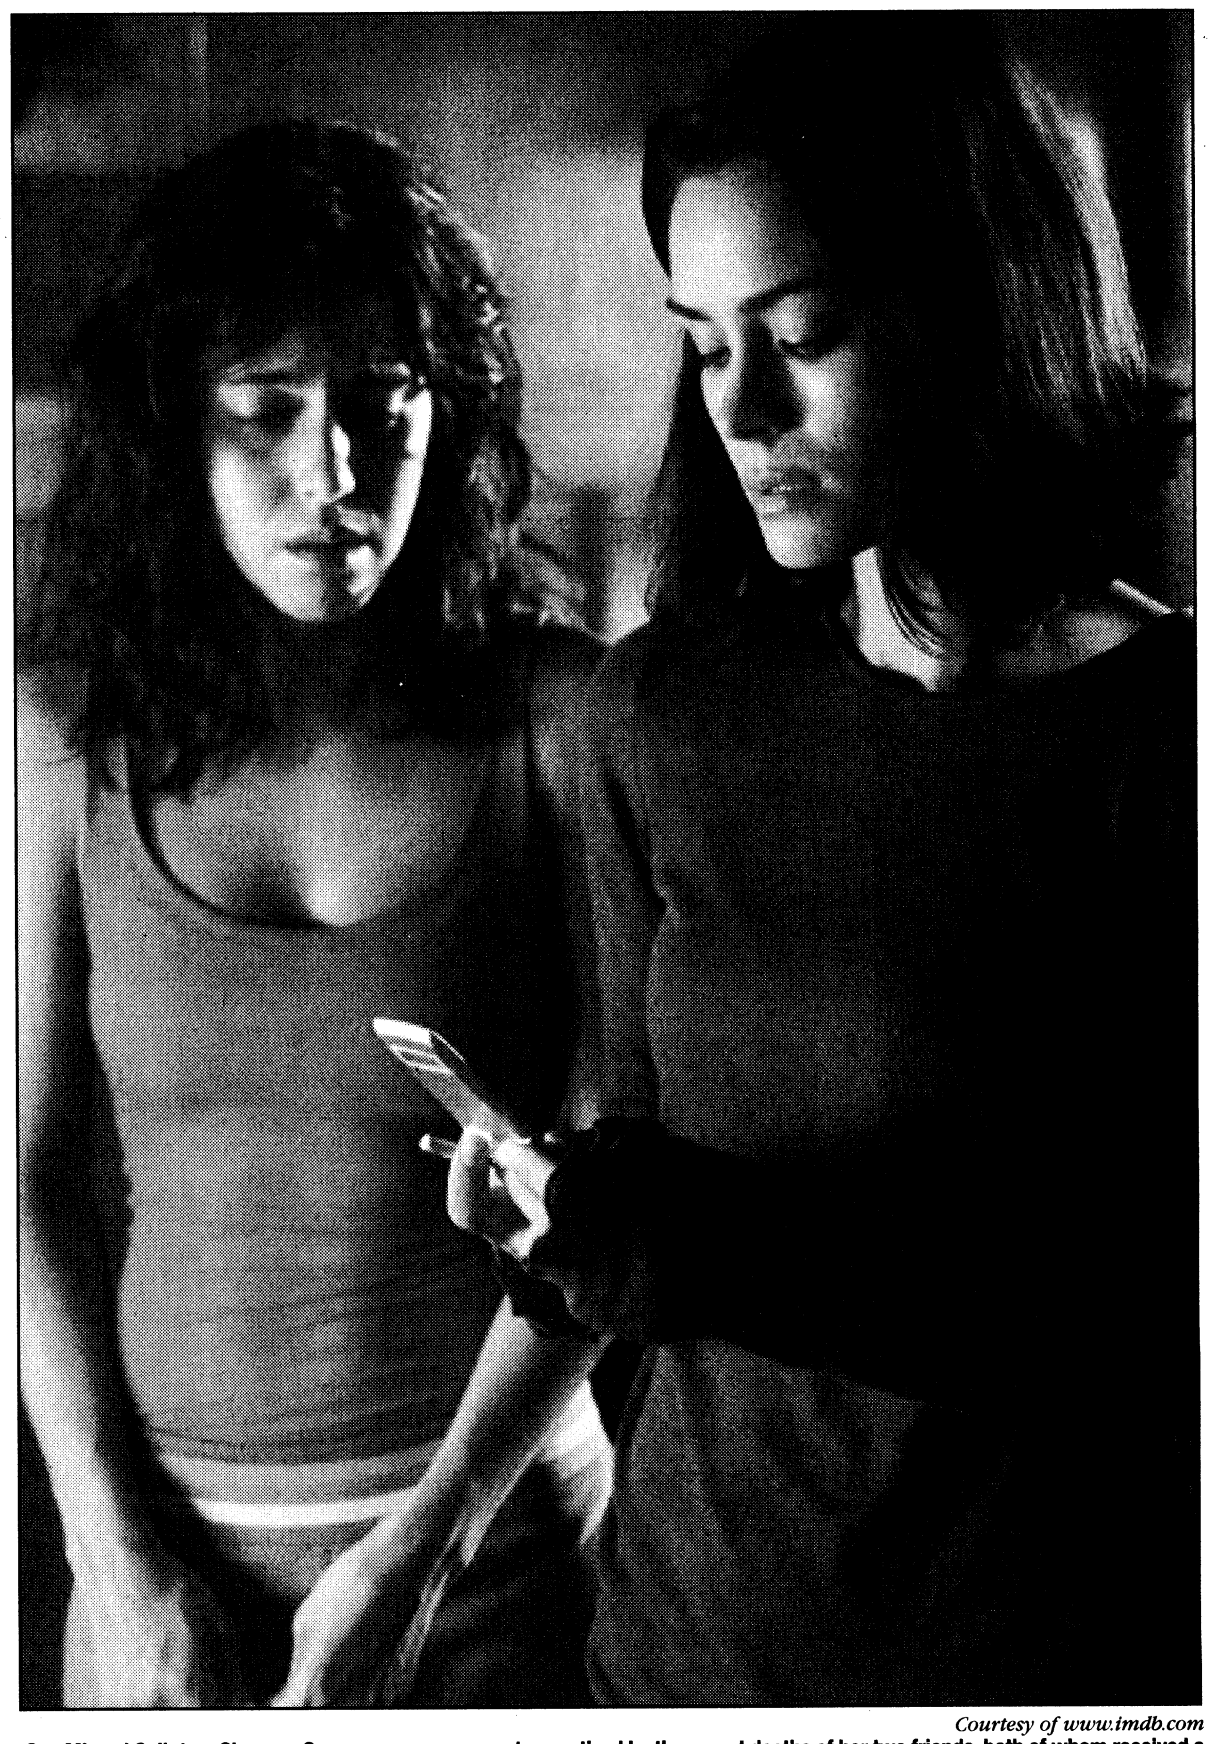
CHARLIE WILSON'S WAR

Based on a true story, Charlie Wilson (Tom Hanks), an alcoholic womanizer and Texas congressman, persuades the CIA to train and arm resistance fighters in Afghanistan to fend off the Soviet Union.

With the help of rogue CIA agent, Gust Avrakotos (Philip Seymour Hoffman), the two men supplied money, training and a team of military experts who turned the ill-equipped Afghan freedom fighters into a force that brought the Red Army to a stalemate.

Charlie Wilson's War also stars Amy Adams and Julia Roberts. It is rated R for language, nudity, sexual content and drug use.

NATIONAL TREASURE: BOOK OF SECRETS



Treasure hunter Benjamin Franklin Gates (Nicolas Cage) seeks the truth behind the assassination of Abraham Lincoln by uncovering the mystery within the 18 pages missing from assassin John Wilkes Booth's diary.

National Treasure: Book of Secrets is rated PG for violence and action.

P.S. I LOVE YOU

A grieving young widow (Hillary Swank) discovers that her late husband (Gerard Butler) has left her a list of tasks revealed in 10 messages, delivered anonymously, intended to ease her out of grief and transition her to a new life.

P.S. I love you is rated PG-13 for sexual references and nudity.

One Missed Call stars Shannyn Sossamon as a woman traumatized by the recent deaths of her two friends, both of whom received a phone message detailing how they would die days before the event actually took place.

SWEENEY TODD: THE DEMON BARBER OF FLEET STREET

Benjamin Barker (Johnny Depp) returns to London after being unjustly imprisoned by a lecherous judge (Alan Rickman).

He sets up shop as a barber, calling himself Sweeney Todd, and, with the help of Mrs. Lovett (Helena Bonham Carter), a pie shop owner downstairs, exacts his bloody revenge.

Sweeney Todd: The Demon Barber of Fleet Street is rated R for violence.

WALK HARD: THE DEWEY COX STORY

Musician and songwriter Dewey Cox (John C. Reilly) leads a rollercoaster life.

He sleeps with 411 women, marries three times, has 22 kids and 14 stepkids, stars in his own 70s TV show, befriends Elvis and the Beatles and tries every drug known to man.

Despite it all, however, Cox grows into a national icon and eventually earns the love of a longtime backup singer, Darlene (Jenna Fischer).

Walk Hard: The Dewey Cox Story is rated R for sexual content, nudity, drug use and language.

I AM LEGEND

Robert Neville (Will Smith) is a brilliant scientist, but he could not contain the incurable, man-made virus.

Somehow immune, Neville is now the last human survivor in what is left of New York City and maybe the world.

But he is not alone. He is surrounded by victims of the plague who have mutated into carnivorous beings who can only exist in the dark and who will devour or infect anything in their path.

For three years, Neville has scavenged daily for food and supplies and sent out radio messages, hoping to find other survivors.

He is driven to find a way to reverse the effects of the virus using his own immune blood before he runs out of time.

I Am Legend is rated PG-13 for sci-fi action and violence.

THE PERFECT HOLIDAY

Nancy (Gabrielle Union) is a divorced mother of three who is so busy raising her children that she's forgotten to take care of herself. Her daughter Emily sensed her mom's sadness, so she asked Santa at the mall for what she overheard her mom say she wanted: a compliment from a man.

Santa, as it turns out, is office supply salesman and songwriter Benjamin (Morris Chestnut), who ended up giving Nancy just what she wanted for Christmas.

The Perfect Holiday is rated PG for language and humor.

ALVIN AND THE CHIPMUNKS

Three chipmunks, Alvin (Justin Long), Simon (Matthew Gray Guble) and Theodore (Jesse McCartney) are adopted by Dave (Jason Lee).

Alvin and the Chipmunks is rated PG for humor.

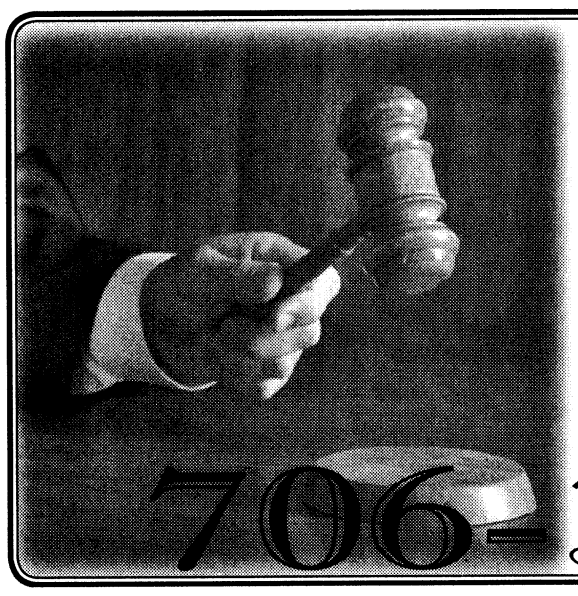
THE GOLDEN COMPASS

In an alternate world, where souls manifest as animals, 12-year-old Lyra (Dakota Blue Richards) starts out trying to rescue a friend who's been kidnapped by a mysterious organization known as the Gobblers. She ends up on a quest to save her world and ours.

The Golden Compass also stars Nicole Kidman, Daniel Craig, Sam Elliott and Ian McShane.

The Golden Compass is rated PG-13 for fantasy violence.

AWAKE



During surgery, a small percentage of people experience "anesthetical awareness," a condition when anesthesia fails during surgery, leaving one completely conscious but paralyzed.

When this happens to Clay, (Hayden Christensen), his new wife (Jessica Alba) is drawn into the drama that unfolds around them.

Awake also stars Lena Olin as Clay's mother.

It is rated R for language and drug use.

Registration for youth soccer begins Monday.

Officer Candidates School streamlines process

THE BAYONET
Brenda Donnell

Officers Candidate School officials cut two weeks from the program to streamline the commissioning process, said Col. Terry L. Sellers, 11th Infantry Regiment Brigade commander.

Changes began Nov. 14, when B Company started the course, said Lt. Col. John B. Shattuck, commander of 3rd Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment. The class is field-testing the new schedule and will graduate Feb. 14.

The most significant change was merging four weeks of field time into one exercise instead of three, he said. One social event was also removed.

"The lieutenant produced is just as good as the one with 14 weeks, but it's done more efficiently," Shattuck said.

Another change is three weeks between classes instead of a variance of three to six weeks, because the Army is requiring an increase in OCS's mission, Shattuck said. In 2004, 1,200 lieutenants graduated. The new schedule will enable at least 2,200 to graduate in 2008.

Shattuck said this increase requires a cyclic and predictable rhythm.The three weeks between classes allows the organization to produce the number of lieutenants required by the Army, while providing the appropriate time to train, certify cadre and prepare for classes.

Soldier and Family Assistance Center to open

Wounded Soldiers and their Families have a new building on Fort Benning to house the dedicated services they need for transition — either to continued military service or civilian life.

Built in just 86 days from the groundbreaking, the Soldier and Family Assistance Center is across the street from the new Warrior Transition Battalion and will house support services and staff, like financial and legal assistance, education and benefits counselors, chaplains and an ombudsman to help with medical processes.

COMMANDER'S COLUMN

New year brings the beginning of the physical transformation to the Maneuver Center of Excellence

COMMANDING GENERAL
Maj. Gen. Walter Wojdakowski

The start of a new year is always an exciting time. This year will be especially exciting at Fort Benning as we continue to train, transform and grow to support the Army and the nation.

We trained over 108,000 Soldiers and leaders at Fort Benning last year and I expect 2008 to be just as busy. In 2008 we began the physical transformation of Fort Benning into the Maneuver Center of Excellence. The magnitude of this transformation is huge.

We have awarded the first group of construction projects for transformation. Construction includes four training battalion complexes, two at Harmony Church and two at Sand Hill.

The first phase of permanent party facilities at Harmony Church will also begin construction. This includes unaccompanied enlisted personnel housing, a dining facility, and administrative facilities to support the new Directorate of Training Sustainment (DOTS), 3/81 Armor Battalion and 16th Cavalry Regiment. In all, this represents over $350 million of construction.

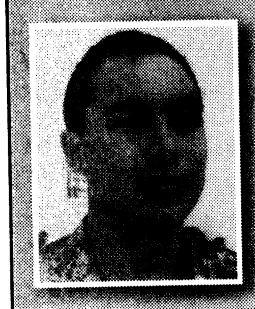
Later this year, we will award the FY08 construction projects, which consist of a training battalion complex and maintenance and instructional facilities at Harmony Church, a new tank gunnery and several small arms ranges in the northern range area, a new Reception Battalion complex at Sand Hill, and utilities and infrastructure upgrades across post to support all of this growth.

The renovation of Infantry Hall will begin as we shut down the six floors of the central tower to create the new headquarters for the Maneuver Center of Excellence.

By the end of this year we will have almost $1 billion of construction underway at Fort Benning.

Most of these projects will take two years on average to complete, finishing just in time to begin moving the first units from Fort Knox in midyear 2010.

That is a lot of construction and we have worked closely with our comrades in arms at Fort Knox to ensure we meet our training needs.



We have had great support from the Army Senior Leaders and from all of the organizations involved in planning and preparing for this transformation. Now the moment is upon us. So, as we go about our day-to-day jobs of training and supporting Soldiers and their Families, I want everyone to be patient with the construction, be positive about the transformation, and help us keep Fort Benning a great place to live and work.

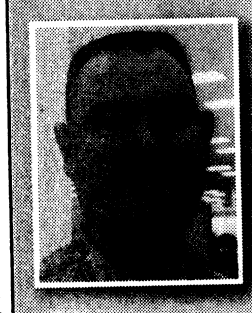
OPINION

VARIOUS VOICES

Why is your job important the Army?

As a motorman, I sit behind the front lines. We support our front line guys and, if necessary, we take over their jobs. If we get ambushed or flanked or something, we're going to need some quick suppressive firepower.

— Pvt. Baotoan Vu
2nd Battalion, 58th Infantry Regiment



I'm the human resource manager, and I make sure pay is correct, records are straight. In order for the Soldiers to go into combat, they have to feel that they and their Families are taken care of. You don't want a Soldier out there worrying about his finances and his personal records.

— Staff Sgt. Shaneeka Davis
U.S. Army Infantry Center

When my husband was deployed, my family readiness group was involved in sending care packages for our Soldiers as well as school supplies for the local children. I think it's important to remain positive and to encourage your Soldier.

— Nicki Coss
Family member

I process all the troops that come back from Iraq and Afghanistan. I greet them at the airport and take them around to the various places they need to go, like medical, finances and certain briefings. That's why my job is important to the Army.

— Staff Sgt. Thomas Dumont
641st Area Support Group, Mobilization Troop Command

I'm an MP, so of course, my job is important: to serve, protect and defend. We protect the Soldiers and the Families on Fort Benning.

— Sgt. Dominique Brown
988th Military Police Company

We're trying to make things happen for the Army. We're trying to make the Army a better place. What I try to do is keep the office running as smoothly as I can to help out everybody.

— Deborah Hill
Manuever Center Realignment Coordination Cell

As an aviator, I'm contributing to the Army's mission overseas and the War on Terrorism with my little part of flying fixed-wing aircraft.

— Chief Warrant Officer Brian Martin
2nd Battalion, 228th Aviation Regiment

Hey, whose kids were they?

THE BAYONET
Bridgett Siter

Try this experiment the next time you find yourself at the park or the playground or anywhere moms congregate with their kids — stand back and holler "Hey, whose kid is that?" Watch those mothers freeze in their tracks.

Let me tell you what they're thinking, every last one of them: "Oh, dear God, please don't let that be my kid misbehaving."

It happens to the best of us, moms and dads alike. The kid bites a classmate or breaks a window or pees in the pool. He lies to a teacher, cheats on a test or gets in a fight in the parking lot. And we take it personally. When our kids screw up, we want to crawl under a rock. I know this from personal experience. I've seen the bottom side of more rocks than I care to count.

So I cringed when I heard about an incident that took place Nov. 29 outside the new PX. My friend Robin Boutin told me that a group of teenagers taunted her son, who wears an eye patch. Nick lost his left eye, suffered a brain injury and lingered in a coma for a month in 2005, when an armor-piercing grenade was dropped through the roof of the Bradley he was riding in during a midnight mission in Iraq. He had to learn to walk and talk again. It took months to get his memory back.

Nick is what the Army calls a wounded warrior, and that patch reminds him every day that he's lucky to be alive.

I imagine the mothers of those teenage girls would be mortified to know that their daughters made fun of Nick, that they laughed and pointed at his patch and made hurtful remarks. I know I'd be looking for a big rock.

Like Robin, I'm inclined to believe that those girls belong to Fort Benning Families. Given that they were strolling around the PX parking lot, that's a safe assumption.

So it's also very likely that they each have at least one parent serving in the military. And I'd be willing to bet at least one of them — and more than likely all of them — knows what it feels like to say goodbye to a Soldier and pray that he makes it home safely. Just like Robin did when she sent her husband and her 21-year-old son, her only child, off to fight in Iraq (they both deployed in the same week).

It certainly wasn't the first time Nick has been the butt of someone's sick joke because of his eye patch. But it's the first time it's happened right here on post, where any right-thinking person over the age of 10 might safely assume anyone of Nick's age wearing an eye patch, riding in a wheelchair or walking with a limp, is probably a wounded warrior. Probably someone you should respect. Probably someone you should thank. And definitely not someone you want to poke fun at, karma being what it is.

So if my daughter were in the crowd that day (she wasn't, I checked,) I'd want to crawl under a rock. And yes, I'd take it personally, because what kind of a parent would I be if I raised a kid to find humor in someone's misfortune, or in this case, someone's sacrifice?

Whoever you are — you who raised those girls — maybe it's not too late. Come out from under that rock and have a come-to-Jesus meeting with your kids. You might want to start with the Army values of respect, honor and integrity.

• The Infantry School News plotted out a travel plan for post motorists headed to Florida. A round trip to Lake City, Fla., (248 miles south of Columbus) was estimated at 1,544 miles through Eelbeck Mill, Ellaville, Americus and Albany, Ga., on to Jacksonville, St. Augustine and Daytona, Fla.

The round-about route was highly recommended, but drivers were warned that many of the roads were clay or gravel and inclined to be impassable on a very rainy day.

• Miss Peggy Arnold won the Infantry School Hunt riding a stubborn horse named Wede.

"We know from experience that it takes some pretty husky flank blows with spurs — sturdier we feel than this young rider could be expected to produce — to get him to take the lead," said the author, identified only as M.F.H. "In some mysterious way, he must have felt the quick beating of the proud little heart whose sturdy legs were so energetically urging him on."

• The post newspaper reported that Mrs. Tuttle, the wife of the Fort Benning sheriff, had been caught speeding in Columbus. She wasn't issued a fine. When the chief of police learned she was married to Capt. "Wild Bill" Tuttle, he said "You've been punished enough."

• The Bayonet ran a front page article about a three-hour experiment conducted by the Parachute School.

"Shattering all previous records," 1,750 paratroopers bailed out of transport planes near Lawson Field at a rate of 10 men every minute. The exercise was heralded as an example "of remarkable precision" and a "masterpiece of control and timing."

• The Office of War Information released the results of a study conducted at scores of Army camps across the country, including Fort Benning, to "investigate drinking conditions" among G.I.s.

The conclusion: "There is not an excessive drinking problem among troops."

In fact, the most popular beverages sold around Army camps were coffee, milk, malted milk and bottled soft drinks, the report said.

"There is vastly less drinking among Soldiers in this war than the last," officials said.

• A special edition of the Benning Herald was devoted to the Army Nurse Corps' 55th anniversary celebration. The post was breaking ground on Martin Army Community Hospital, which would replace the current facility on Baltzell Avenue (now the Infantry Museum).

1963

• The Benning Herald marked the halfway point on the construction of the Infantry School Education Building, or Infantry Hall, which would be completed in the summer of 1964. The $10 million facility "will give the U.S. Army Infantry School a strikingly streamlined, starkly functional and intensely practical headquarters," the writer said.

New Armor Center commander takes charge

Campbell becomes 42nd Chief of Armor at Fort Knox ceremony

TURRET
John Neville

The Army's 42nd Chief of Armor officially took command Monday during a ceremony inside Fort Knox's Sadowski Field House.

Training and Doctrine Commander Gen. William Wallace took the flagstaff from outgoing Knox Commander Maj. Gen. Robert Williams and passed it to new Armor Center Commander Brig. Gen. Don Campbell.

Wallace, who commanded U.S. ground forces in Iraq in 2003, assured Soldiers and community members that Knox will be in good hands.

"I know him personally as a seasoned and superior Soldier leader," Wallace said.

Campbell comes to Knox from Fort Lewis, Wash., where he served as the deputy commander of I Corps.

"Fort Knox, it's great to be back at the Home of Armor and Cavalry," he said. "I'm absolutely thrilled, and I look forward to the next two years."

Campbell praised Williams and his wife, Deb, for maintaining and elevating Armor Center standards.

"Thank you for your superb leadership as the 41st Chief of Armor and the commanding general of Fort Knox," he said.

"It's obvious that you and Deb have been an outstanding team for taking care of Soldiers and their families."

Campbell also acknowledged the mission that lies ahead.

"We have much work to accomplish as we continue to support our way through war and accelerate the readiness of the Army through transformation," he said.

Williams, who is headed to Carlisle Barracks, Pa., where he'll command the Army War College, didn't hold back his feelings about leaving the post he's held since October 2005.

"As anyone who has had the privilege to command knows, being told that you will soon leave can bring on a mixture of feelings — pride, perhaps a bit of disappointment, and even a bit of apprehension are a few that come to mind," Williams said.

He said he thought about asking Wallace if he could stay on as armor chief.

"There is also the nagging feeling that there is more to do and frankly, General Wallace, I even considered calling you and telling you, 'Don't take me out now, coach, the game is not over.' The truth is, and most of you know this, there is never a good time to leave a great place, and this has truly been a great place for Deb and me."

Williams expressed his confidence in Campbell.

"I've known Don for almost 15 years and he is a terrific Soldier," Williams said. "Leaving is difficult, but the idea is made easier knowing that Don and Ann will be taking our place."

Outgoing Armor Chief Maj. Gen. Robert William,right, shook hands with incoming Fort Knox Commander Brig. Gen. Don Campbell Monday during a change of command ceremony inside Sadowski Field House. Williams, who commanded the post since October 2005, is headed to Carlisle Barracks, Pa., where he'll command the Army War College.

"We have much work to accomplish as we continue to support our way trhough war and accelerate the readiness of the Army through transformation."

Campaign offers incentives for 'green' commuters

THE BAYONET
Cheryl Rodewig

The Clean Air Campaign, sponsored by the Georgia Department of Transportation, is offering incentives for commuters who use an eco-friendly way to get to work on Fort Benning, including walking, bicycling and carpooling.

"This is an opportunity each person can take to team up and show that the military cares," said Polly Gustafson, the Fort Benning real property specialist and environmental coordinator, who was part of the first official Clean Air Campaign carpool on Fort Benning Tuesday.

The campaign started in Fort Benning because it was in danger of achieving nonattainment status for air quality, she said. The Environmental Protection Agency defines "nonattainment status" as exceeding state pollution limits several days throughout the year.

Georgia residents who have been driving to work alone can earn $3 a day, up to $180 in three months, by switching to a commute alternative that reduces emissions. Those who already use such alternatives can win monthly cash prizes, and carpools with three or more passengers are rewarded with monthly gas cards of $40 to $60.

Commuters can sign up for these benefits at www.logyourcommute.com/FortBenning.

"We've had a tremendous response so far," said Peter Lukken, Fort Benning's sustainability planner. "The Environmental Protection Agency is looking for the area to do everything possible to cut down emissions. It's a matter of us breathing better."

Lukken, who heads up the Transportation Demand program on Fort Benning, said the reduced number of cars will also help alleviate the traffic jams near the Access Control Points as Fort Benning transitions to the Maneuver Center of Excellence.

"We're going to have a tremendous growth here at Fort Benning," he said. "If you have two people riding together, that's one car less, so it does make a difference. I'm going to sign up for this."

Those who want to carpool can be matched with commuters who live nearby on the Web site.

Gustafson suggested parking at a central location, such as a church or grocery store, after obtaining permission to use a few parking spaces. Carpoolers can then meet at that location and continue in one vehicle.

"This is a positive way to take action to reduce emissions," Gustafson said.

Carpooling will reduce costs for driving to work, help the environment and help reduce the traffic on Fort Benning, she said.

The Clean Air Campaign will track monthly emission reductions and report any improvements to the installation.

For more information, visit the Web site or call Peter Lukken at 706-545-1812.

BOSS program needs president

THE BAYONET
Brenda Donnell

The Better Opportunities for Single Soldiers program is looking for a single, active-duty Soldier of any rank to become their new president," said Noelle Phillips, MWR advisor. "We want someone who is willing to work hard to improve things for single Soldiers," she said.

Phillips said the position is challenging, but also rewarding and fun.

Other qualifications include the ability to speak well in a public forum, because the president gives a lot of briefings and conducts meetings; have good computer skills; be aware of single Soldier needs and desires; and have a minimum of one year left at Fort Benning.

The BOSS program does great things coordinating and orchestrating community service events, such as the House of Heroes, and coordinating recreation and leisure events, Phillips said.

She said they hope to fill the position by Feb. 1. Anyone who is interested should call Phillips at 706-544-1411 or 706-527-8689 or call the BOSS office at 706-544-2741.

Ranger Regt. hosts seminar

Speaker will address generational differences

THE BAYONET
Cheryl Rodewig

Author and psychologist Jean M. Twenge will talk about her book Generation Me and how Army leaders can better reach new recruits at 10 a.m. Tuesday in Classroom 4A, Infantry Hall.

Twenge was invited to talk with senior family readiness group leaders at a conference, and to maximize her time here, she agreed to lead a discussion that would be open to everyone on Fort Benning, said Tracy Bailey, public affairs officer for the 75th Ranger Regiment, which is sponsoring the event.

"Dr. Twenge's book came out about a year and a half ago and since that time, I've actually given several presentations about it," said Art Finch, regiment psychologist for the 75th Ranger Regt.

"Her insights can help leaders better understand this generation of Soldiers that are coming into the military and impact the way we communicate and interact with them to maximize their potential."

The book discusses how, starting with the birth year of 1970, people became more entitled, assertive, confident and yet more anxious than previous generations.

"Like a drill instructor saying, 'Hey, do this,' and the first thing the new Soldier asks is why," Finch said.

"There may be a lot of reasons that Soldier doesn't know why or can't know why but still needs to execute it. We don't have time to ask why. There's actually no room for that."

This talk may help drill instructors and other Army leaders bridge the generational differences, he said.

The seminar is free and open to the public.

For more information, contact Tracy Bailey at 706-545-4260.

Nett: Receives state honor certificate. Had he looked twice, he might've noticed that the final 2 in Nett's birth date — 1922 — had been changed to a 1.

"I was a junior in high school. A neighbor recruited me," Nett said. "He said, 'Bob, don't say a word, just go along with me.' When that recruiter said, 'I see here you're 18,' I said, 'Whatever you say, Sarge.'"

His neighbor got a $2 bonus, and he promised to share half of it with Nett.

"I never did get my dollar. And I don't really want it now, but I would like the interest on it," said Nett, who shared his story, his wine and his home Wednesday with representatives from the state of his birth and the National Guard unit that launched his career, the 102nd Infantry.

Nett was a second lieutenant in 1944 when he earned the Medal of Honor. His company attacked a Japanese stronghold that held back the American's advance for two days near Ormoc in the Philippines. Nett spearheaded an assault under heavy fire and fought hand-to-hand. He killed seven Japanese, and although he was severely wounded twice, he refused to relinquish command of his troops until the battle was won.

At 85, the three-war combat veteran is honored locally with a highway and a building at Fort Benning's Officer Candidate School named after him. His name is carved on a Medal of Honor memorial in Columbus. He's a member of the Ranger and OCS halls of fame.

And a year ago, he was presented the USO's Spirit of Hope Award, an honor bestowed upon those who carry out Bob Hope's mission to support the men and women of America's armed forces.

But Connecticut has never relinquished its claim to Nett. The Col. Robert Nett Leadership Hall at Camp Rowland, Conn., was dedicated in 2004. More than 10,000 Soldiers train there each year. And just last November, Nett was inducted into the state's Veterans Hall of Fame.

> "Connecticut is always in my heart. But I don't want to shovel snow."
> — Retired Col. Robert Nett

"He is Connecticut's number one Soldier, the state's most highly decorated veteran," said retired Brig. Gen. Daniel McHale, former Assistant Adjutant General of the Army for Connecticut.

McHale and Col. Thomas Stefanko, commander of the Connecticut National Guard's 169th Leadership Regiment, flew in Wednesday to present Nett a number of awards and honors from state officials, including the medal he would have worn at the governor's hall of fame induction ceremony.

Nett and Frances, his wife of 64 years, could not attend the event. Both are using walkers, and they leave their Columbus home less and less these days.

That's why McHale and Stefanko paid them a visit.

McHale said the honor of the hall of fame induction had as much to do with Nett's post-Army career as a teacher, his involvement in myriad veterans' advocacy programs and his support for today's Soldiers.

"He's a popular man in Connecticut," McHale said. "In the next gubernatorial election, I'm sure he could be elected as a write-in, as popular as he is."

But Nett wouldn't give it a consideration.

"Connecticut is always in my heart," he said. "But I don't want to shovel snow."

information here. There will be child care available on-site, a TV room with a flat screen and gaming TV, a 10-station computer lab with Internet, faxing and printing capabilities. It's a place our wounded warriors deserve. A place for them to get well."

Last June, the Army announced a series of improvements for wounded Soldiers' medical care and outpatient assistance.

"The Army takes Soldier inpatient and outpatient care very seriously, and remains firmly committed to returning our Soldiers to productive careers and lives," said Army Chief of Staff Gen. George W. Casey June 14.

"We've made improvements but realize there is still work to be done — including work with the complex Medical Evaluation Board and Physical Evaluation Board processes. By no means is everything 'fixed' — but we are aggressively acting on what we can fix now."

Examples of immediate improvements in wounded warrior care included increased priority to transition Families, placing greater focus on Family support and supporting Families in transition, according to an Army press release.

"What's great about the Soldier and Family Assistance Center is that non-medical attendants who aren't 'dependants' are able to help, and get help for, their wounded Soldiers," Hertig said. "I'm glad to see the Army looking beyond who the traditional caregiver would be and taking a nontraditional view in order to take care of Soldiers.

"There will be a dedicated staff to serve the wounded warrior so he can spend time healing," she said.

The $1.2 million facility replaces the temporary location in Ragin Court, a converted set of quarters that housed the services since August 2007.

The ceremony is today at 10 a.m. The public is invited.

Pvt. Derek Clough, D Company, 2nd Battalion, 47th Infantry Regiment, demonstrates for his fellow trainees how to throw a hand grenade from the prone to kneeling position Tuesday at Malone Range 1. Sand Hill Soldiers and cadre returned to training Jan. 4 after a Christmas and New Year's holiday from Dec. 14 to Jan. 3.

Staff Sgt. Vincent Smith, a drill sergeant, tells two trainees to quickly set up their M-249 Squad Automatic Weapon on the firing line Monday at Malone Range 5.

Welcome back

Sand Hill training resumes

Trainees return to "the basics"

THE BAYONET
Brenda Donnell

It was back to training as usual Jan. 4 for drill sergeants and trainees, after almost three weeks off for the Christmas and New Year holidays.

All 153 trainees from D Company, 2nd Battalion, 47th Infantry Regiment, 192nd Infantry Brigade, took advantage of the break to go home, said Sgt. 1st Class Eric Holter, a drill sergeant, who also took time off to visit his Family in Nashville, Tenn.

Returning to training after the long holiday has been a challenge for some of the trainees, Holter said. Some have "temporarily forgotten military courtesies," and some are out of shape.

Trainees like Spc. Kevin March, 42, of Ilion, N.Y., and Spc. Joel Ciaccio, 25, from Greenbelt, Md., used their time off wisely and returned ready, mentally and physically, to finish their training.

March, who will report to Officer Candidates School here after basic training, took advantage of the snow in New York, skiing and playing ice hockey, among other things. Ciaccio ran and did push-ups and sit ups.

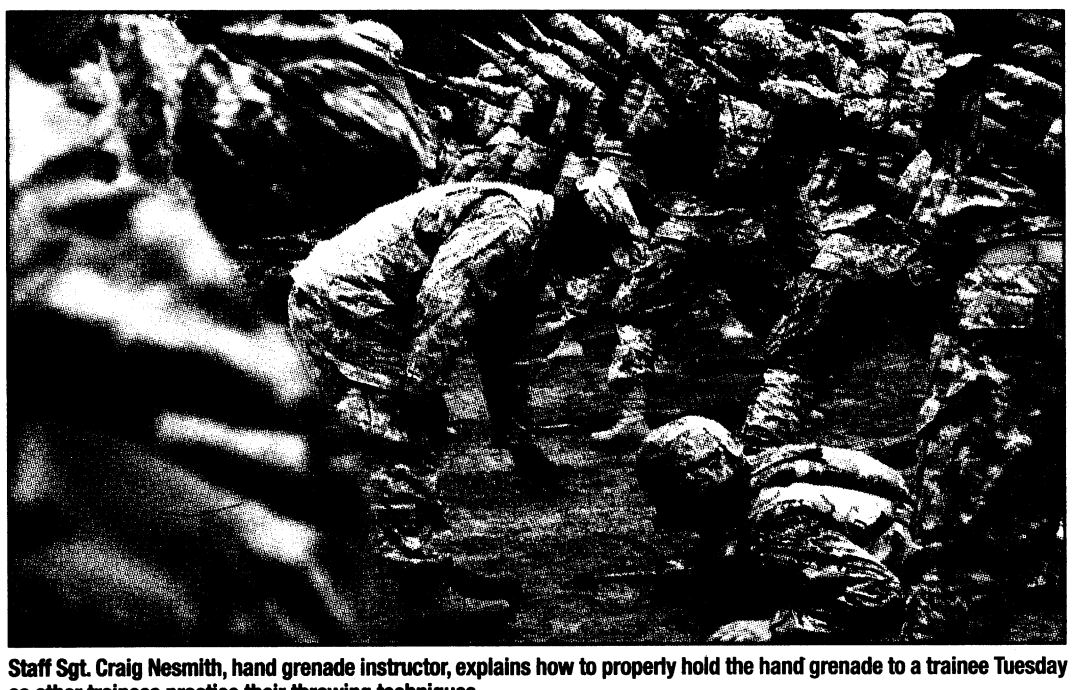
Their holiday activity kept them from falling out of Monday's run, which many recruits had trouble with after returning, said Staff Sgt. Tyson Boelman, D Co. drill sergeant.

March, who retired after 20 years with the New York State Patrol before joining the Army, said the NYSP physical fitness regimen concentrated on the whole body, whereas he thinks the Army concentrates more on core fitness.

Ciaccio, whose next duty station will be Fort Meade, Md., where he will be assigned to the U.S. Army Field Band, said keeping prepared physically was easier than being ready mentally.

Ciaccio has been a musician for many years, and the change of pace during basic training to more physically demanding activities from his usual schedule of practicing the upright bass and electric bass has been refreshing. He said he has always wanted to have a disciplined exercise routine that he likes.

Mentally, he said it was a challenge to come back, and during the holiday, he thought about upcoming events such as two final field exercises and a final Army physical fitness test.



Ciaccio said if he had been given a choice, he would have rather stayed and finished basic training than take leave.

"I'm glad to be back in a routine again," he said.

D Company will graduate Jan. 31.

Staff Sgt. Craig Nesmith, hand grenade instructor, explains how to properly hold the hand grenade to a trainee Tuesday as other trainees practice their throwing techniques.

Trainees take notes, some writing on their hands, Tuesday at Malone Range 1 during hand grenade training.

Iraqi war veterans to share combat experience

Lt. Col. John Valledor will be part of the Combat Leader Program Tuesday.

Four-person panel to visit

THE BAYONET
Brenda Donnell

Four combat veterans from 10th Mountain Division will speak at the Combat Leader Speaker Program at 4 p.m. Tuesday in Marshall Auditorium.

Lt. Col. John Valledor, former commander, Capt. Palmer Phillips, company commander, 1st Lt. Norman O'Neil, platoon leader, and Staff Sgt. Roberto Guadarrama, squad leader will form a four-person panel to discuss their recent deployment during Operation Iraqi Freedom with 2nd Battalion, 14th Infantry Regiment.

"(It's) the first time we have had more than one speaker, but we think they will be able to relate to the entire Fort Benning student population," said Capt. Charles Smith, Operations and Intelligence Officer, Combined Arms and Tactics Directorate.

Smith said CLSP coordinators asked the four Soldiers to speak because they wanted to invite leaders with recent combat experience. They hope students can better relate to these speakers.

The Combat Leader Speaker Program is geared toward students attending courses here, but all Fort Benning leaders may attend.

Former NBA referee to speak at Martin Luther King Jr. Day observance

THE BAYONET
Brenda Donnell

One of the first two black National Basketball Association referees will be the guest speaker Thursday during Fort Benning's Martin Luther King Jr. Day observation from 11 a.m. to noon in Marshall Auditorium.

Kenneth Hudson worked as an NBA referee from 1968 to 1972. He is a youth mentor and inspirational speaker who usually speaks at colleges, such as the University of Georgia, and to business and religious groups. This will be the first time he has spoken at a military installation.

"I'm excited about the opportunity to speak at Fort Benning, but I'm also excited about the job the people at Fort Benning have been doing for our country," Hudson said.

After leaving the NBA, Hudson became vice president at Coca Cola New England, and later, he transferred to Coca Cola Atlanta, where he was director of community involvement and sports promotions.

He wrote a book in 2006, Tree Stumps in the Valley of Redwoods, in which he shares success stories and techniques for students and citizens to become well-rounded and confident.

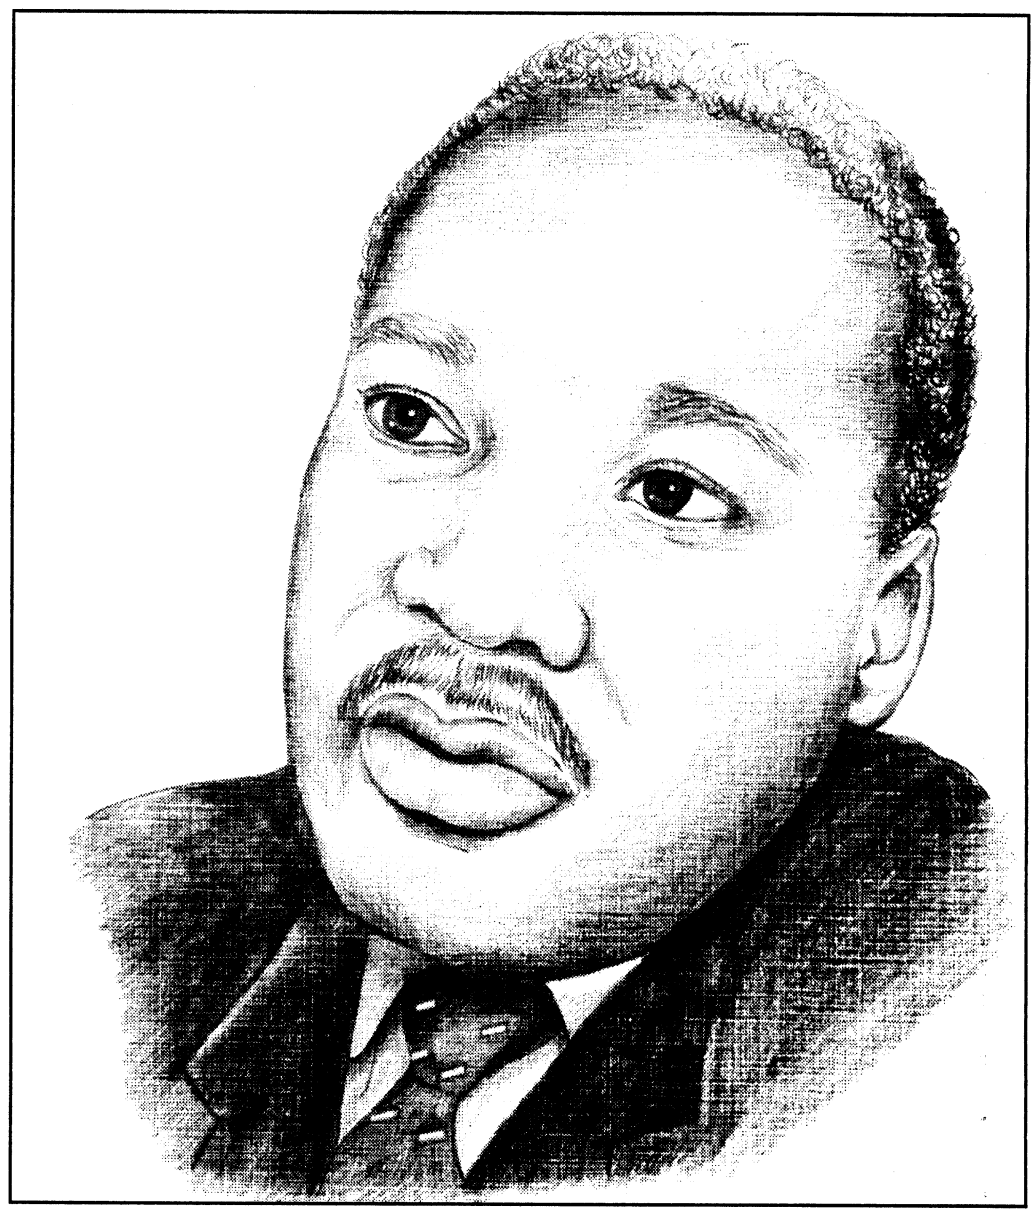
Also during the post observation, which is open to the public, Faith Middle School students will perform a skit, and Spivey Green will give a rendition of King's famous I Have a Dream speech, said Sgt. 1st Class Dwayne August, Ranger Training Brigade Equal Opportunity advisor.

King delivered I Have a Dream March 28, 1963, on the steps of the Lincoln Memorial in Washington, D.C., during the March on Washington for Jobs and Freedom. Five years later on April 4, 1968, he was assassinated in Memphis, Tenn.

King had become well-known throughout America from 1955 to 1956 for leading the boycott of city bus lines, which resulted in the desegregation of Montgomery, Ala., buses in 1956. He led America's civil rights movement and received a Nobel Peace Prize in 1964 for his efforts to end segregation and racial discrimination through non-violent means.

The King holiday was first observed Jan. 20, 1986, after (then) President Ronald Reagan signed a bill Nov. 2, 1983, creating a federal holiday to honor King. It is now celebrated the third Monday of January each year, around the time of King's birthday, Jan. 15. This year, the holiday is Jan. 21.

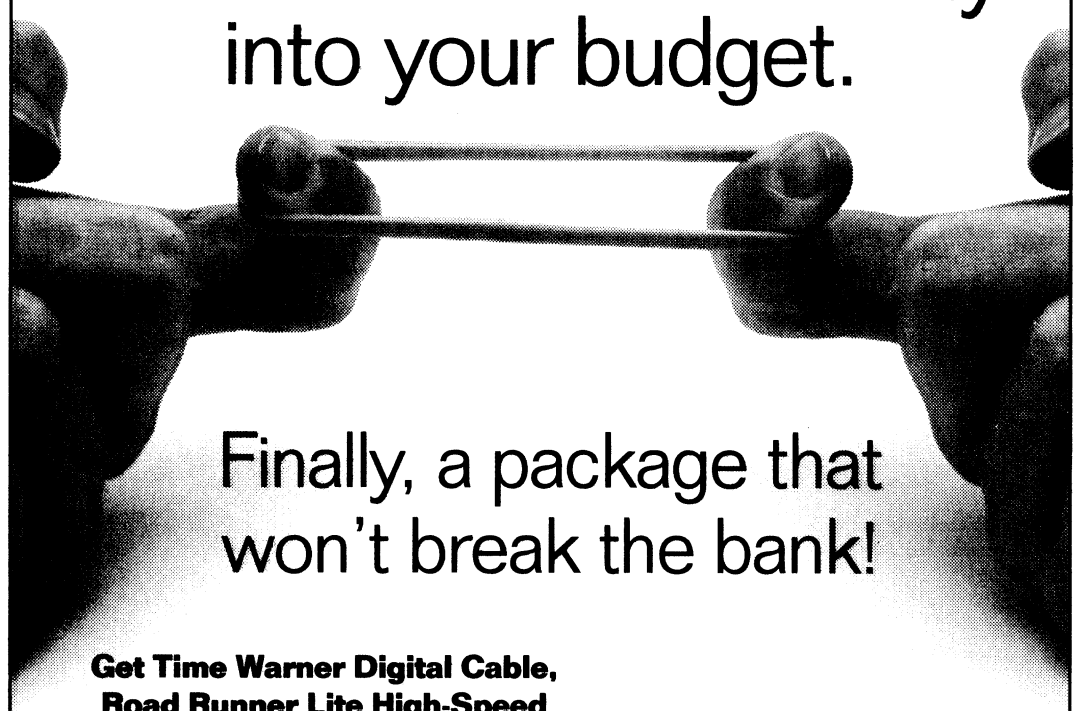
In 1994, the King Holiday and Service Act was designated by Congress as a national day of volunteer service.



Instead of taking a day off, Congress asked Americans to celebrate the holiday by turning community concerns into action.

A new initiative this year, "40 Days of Nonviolence: Building the Beloved Community," encourages families, schools, faith communities and other organizations to promote service projects and educational activities using King's message of nonviolence to right social injustice, according to the Martin Luther King Jr. Day of Service Web site.

Beginning with the King holiday, people are encouraged to participate in food drives and assist their communities with painting or repair projects.



Other suggested activities include studying, discussing and reflecting upon the principles of nonviolent action to form stronger communities; and understanding issues within communities, which lead to violence, and finding ways to address them. For more information, visit www.mlkday.gov and click on the 40 Days of Nonviolence link.

For more information about the post celebration, call August at 706-545-7262 or 706-566-2975.

Falcons want to re-Pete

The Atlanta Falcons are interested in hiring USC's head coach Pete Carroll after their most tumultuous season in recent memory.

Carroll, who coached for two NFL teams in the 90s, is currently on vacation and has not given the Falcons any word as of yet.

Carroll wasn't very good back in his last pro run, but the 76-14 USC mastermind can do no worse than Petrino did this year. Time to step up to the big leagues, bro. Oh I forgot, the Falcons are a little league team.

Cats chew up the Clovers

The Charlotte Bobcats knocked off the league's best Boston Celtics on the road, 95-83, Wednesday.

This was only the Celtics fourth loss of the season. A part of this was because of the absence of Ray Allen who didn't play because of a pinched nerve in his neck. This is crazy because the Bobcats are one of the East's worst teams. But I'm not yet convinced that the Irish are championship ready. Or maybe I'm just hating on them because, well, I always have.

Rocket gets stalled

New York Yankees part-time pitcher Roger Clemens will not have to face Congress just yet. His hearing, previously scheduled for Jan. 16 has been postponed to Feb. 13.

The hearing will address his supposed use of steroids in 1998, 2000 and 2001 that was released in the Mitchell Report.

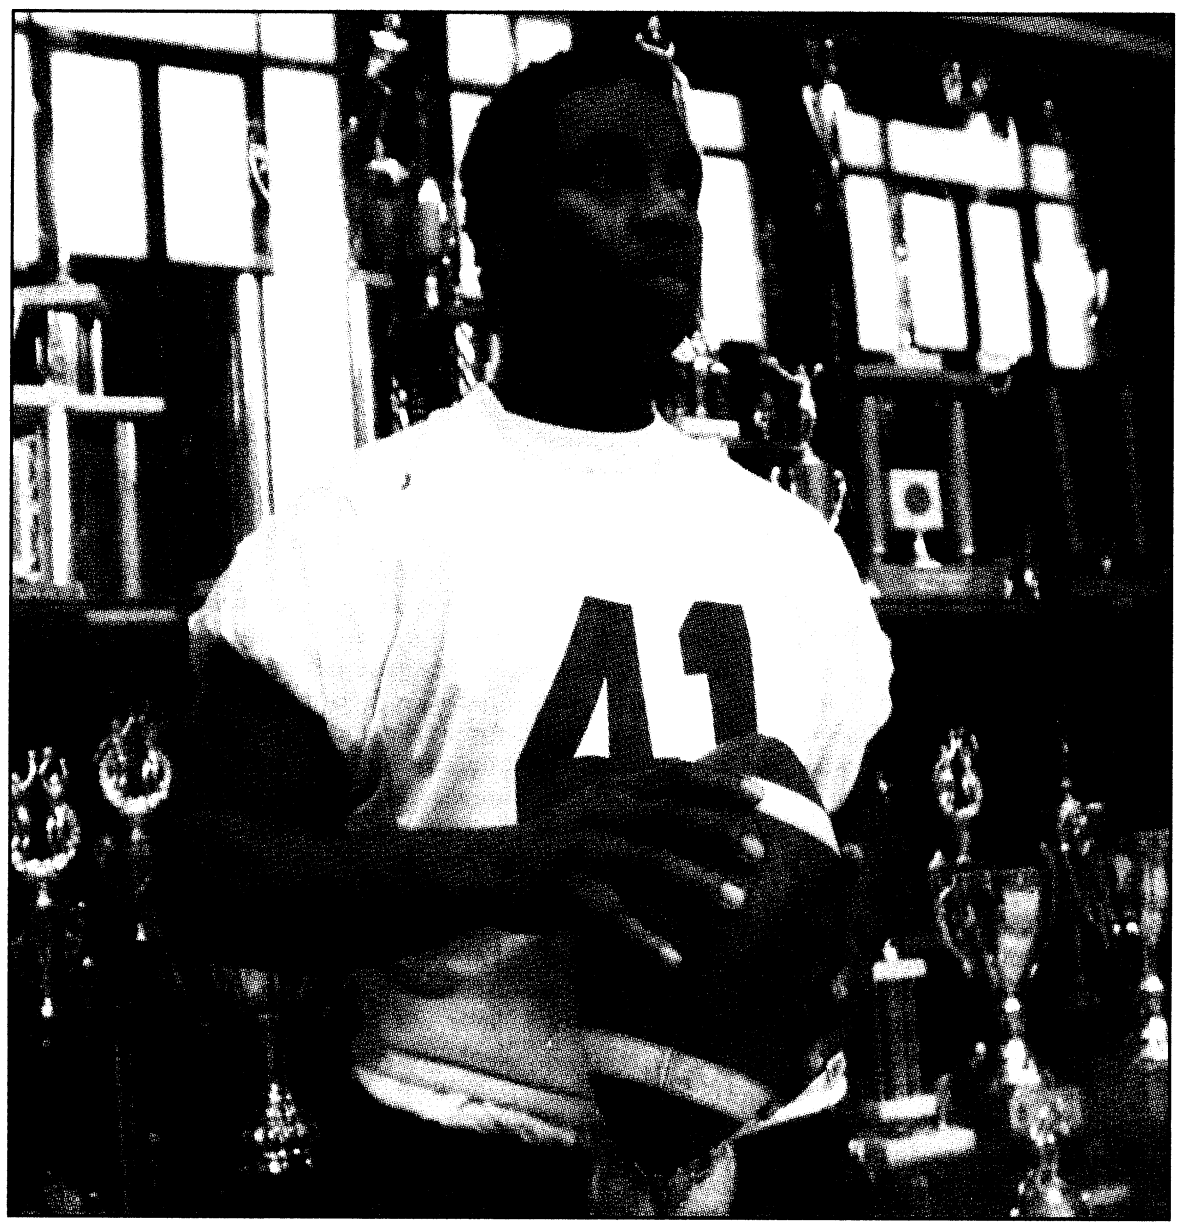
I'm not saying he did it, but after hearing his answers on 60 Minutes Sunday, he needs all the time he can get. The Rocket is definitely no rocket scientist.

Gibbs gets back on track

Legendary Washington Redskins head coach Joe Gibbs is heading back to NASCAR after resigning from the team Tuesday.

Gibbs, who turned control of his NASCAR team to his son after rejoining the NFL, is said to be looking forward to returning to the world of racing, but may still have a roll with the Redskins.

That it is, my NASCAR bench nets for the year. Until next January.



Trinidad wants gift box

Felix Trinidad, who recently celebrated his 35th birthday, said his ultimate gift would be a defeat of Roy Jones Jr. Jan. 19.

Trinidad, who has only lost two fights in his career, hasn't fought since he got slapped around by Ronald "Winky" Wright in 2005.

Hopefully, I don't know what to say about this one. Both fighters were great in their hey-day, but both have lost more than a step. But I'd give it to Jones in 10 – minutes that is.

'Jelly' jams on and off the field

Jervelous "Jelly" Drisdom helped lead Carver to an undefeated 15-0 season. Drisdom and the Tigers won the Class AAA State Championship over Cairo last month. Drisdom has been offered a full scholarship from Miles College in Birmingham, Ala.

Senior believes in power of family, friends, God

Jervelous Drisdom sat on the sideline in the final minutes of Carver's Class AAA State Championship game against Cairo.

Down by three points, Carver and Cairo fans watched nervously as Carver's quarterback Deron Furr rolled out of the pocket to make a play. But Drisdom was far from nervous as he watched his best friend go to work.

Furr led an awe-inspiring drive, eventually scoring the game-winning touchdown, just as he did against Chamblee the week before.

"I was excited, but at the same time, I was calm," Drisdom said. "When you have an athlete like Deron, you always know he'll make big plays."

Drisdom's trademark "cool" demeanor is well-known among his peers. Better known as "Jelly" to family and friends, he was taught at an early age by his mother, Shirlonda Lewis, to be "calm and collected" at all times.

As a senior, and one of the leaders on the Carver team that went undefeated this season, Drisdom is a role model and an inspiration, said his coach, Dell McGhee.

"He's a mature guy, and he relates to the coaches in that manner," said head coach McGhee. "He helps the kids not as mature as him get to a higher level."

This season, Drisdom amassed 35 tackles, three sacks, two force fumbles and a fumble recovery while floating between each of the defensive line positions. Surprisingly, Drisdom is relatively new to the game.

Lady Panthers reach for team identity

Chattco ladies are 2-1 in regional play

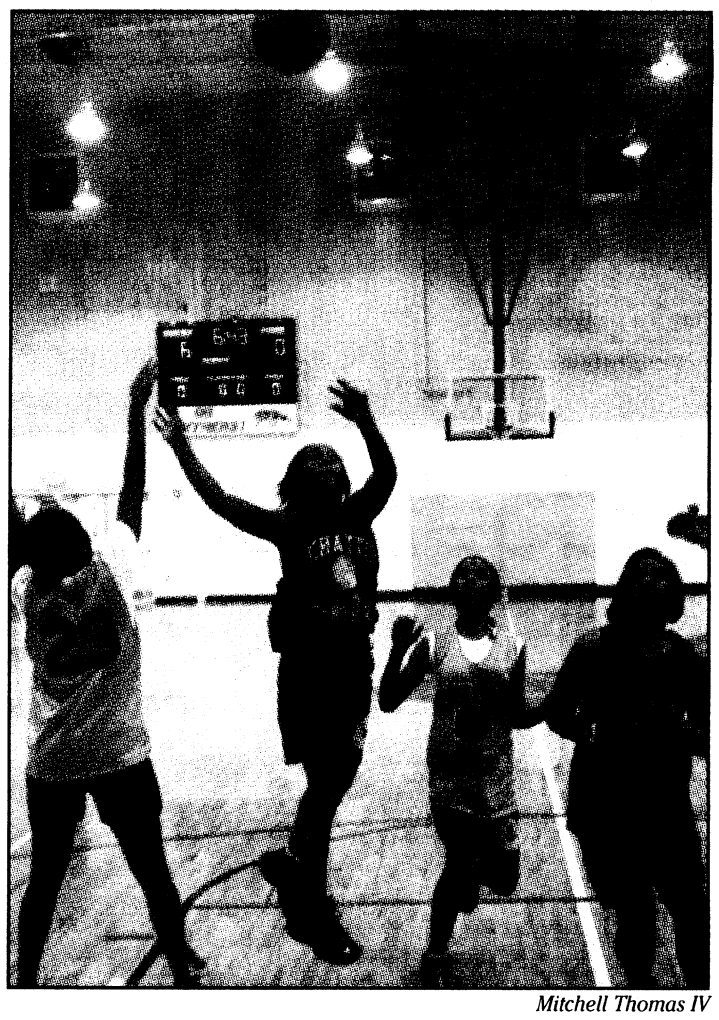
THE BAYONET
Mitchell Thomas IV

One of the most often sayings in the game of basketball is "Defense wins championships."

But the lady Panthers are looking to produce more on the scoreboard.

The Chattahoochee County girls team who have overcome numerous obstacles, have won three of their last four games since starting regional play.

This change has come after a rocky start. The girls lost each of their games in outer league before their consolation win in the Panther's Holiday Shoot Out last month.



The team has had frequent turnover in coaching in the school's three year history, and it has taken a toll on the program, said head coach Jay Cox.

"We're right where I thought we would be. Actually, we're a bit ahead, Cox said.

In the offseason, a new head coach was hired after Cox took over as assistant superintendant. But Cox was asked to return to his duties the week following Thanksgiving as the girls new coach was relocated.

"To take over as coach, incorporate an all new system four weeks into the season can be tough on anyone," Cox said. "The girls team has had at least one coach per

Shooters gear up for archery season at Uchee Creek

Monthly archery competitions kick off Jan. 27 at Uchee Creek

THE BAYONET
Mitchell Thomas IV

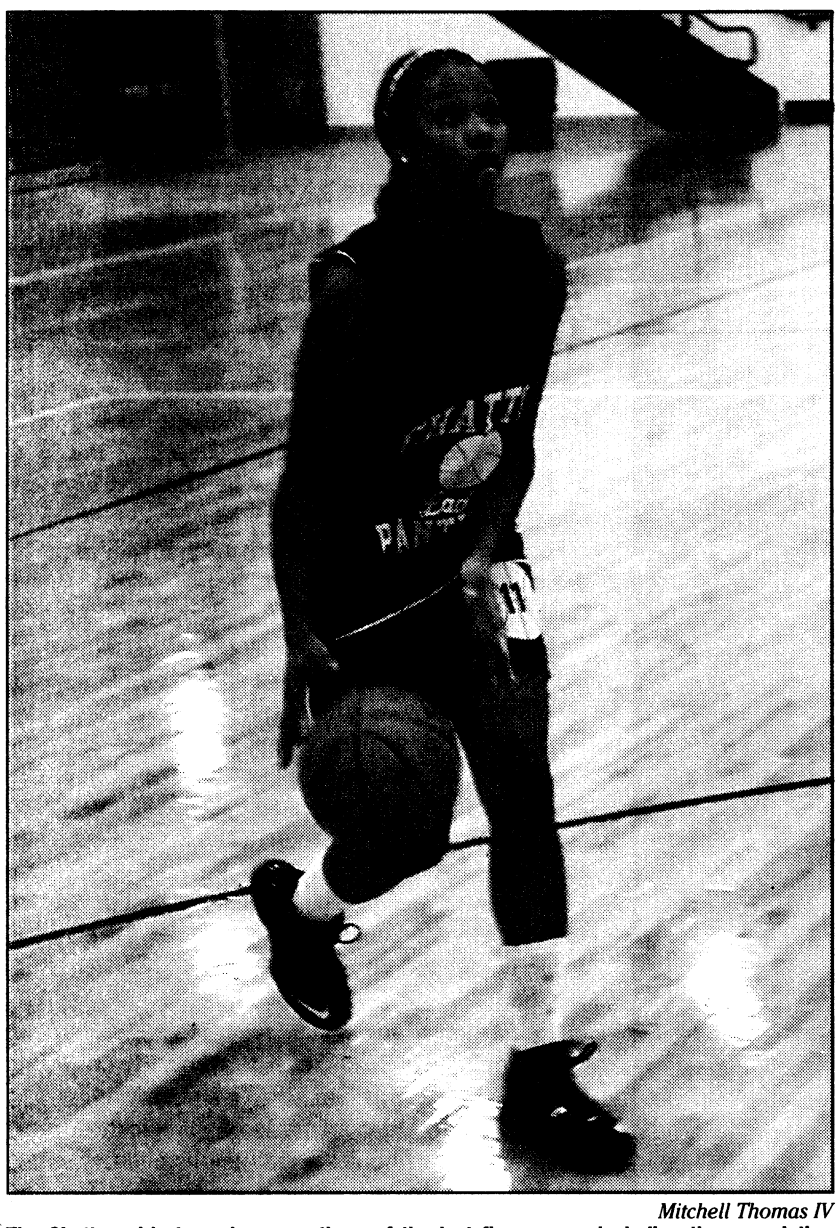
With the conclusion of the hunting season in Georgia and Alabama quickly arriving, hunters are looking forward to taking aim in archery.

The Archery Club at Uchee Creek Camp Ground will hold its first shoot Jan. 27.

"Shooters are ready to go," said Cliff Hughes, manager at Uchee Creek Campground and Marina. "They're already out here practicing and getting time in."

The Archery complex features 100 acres of competition targets and 10 acres of zero range target bags.

There are more than 200 archery club members, half civilian and half military, ages 5 and older.



Competitions, which are held monthly, are broken into skill category and age groups. Cash prizes and trophies are awarded to winners in each category.

• 100 Acres of 3D competition targets
• 10 Acres of zero range bags
• Nearly 200 members military and civilian
• Annual membership fee is $10

In August, Uchee Creek hosts the annual Archery Shooters Association competition. Last year, there were more than 2,000 competitors from around the nation.

The archery range is open from sunup to sundown seven days a week and is open to members and non-members.

For more information, contact Hughes or Angie McCulogh at 706-545-2063 year which isn't consistent.

Immediately upon Cox's return, he incorporated a camp-style practice regimen, which focused on 90 minutes of drills, changing the focus every three minutes.

"We focus on fundamentals at least 75 percent of the time we practice," Cox said.

"They need the reps, they need the shots and they need the touches. If they practice something once and don't return back to it for a week, then it doesn't get burned in the muscle memory."

Cox, who is a self-professed defensive-minded coach, said the team's initial struggle was on the offensive end, particularly with layups and easy shots.

"We played solid defense making turnovers, but if you can't capitalize, it means nothing, Cox said. "If you don't make layups, you're not going to win."

But after a holiday break full of intense practicing and the start of regional play, the girls are starting to come into their own.

In their first regional game, they beat a strong Stewart-Quitman team on the road.

"We are trying to be a multi-dimensional team playing five in and out. We're extremely talented, but our basketball skills have to match our athleticism."

— Jay Cox, head coach of the Chattco Lady Panthers

"We had a 20-point lead at one point in the game, and that showed great signs for us, said Cox who coached at Stewart-Quitman for three years.

But Cox feels the team's greatest play was in a loss Saturday to Taylor County, who was the region's best team last season.

"That was our best game in terms of execution," Cox said. "We kept it close in the first half, and I liked what I saw overall," Cox said.

As the season progresses, players like Brandy Oatts and Georgeeshia Emby will be counted on to bring their offensive talents.

Ryan Rogers, who is averaging nearly 10 points, 15 rebounds and four blocks, and Noelapoomaikala "Pooh" Conley, who provides energy and hustle, will be major factors on defense.

"Things are coming easier now," said freshman player Akeyvya Jones, "but as a team, we need to get our shots to fall,"

For the team to fully improve, Cox is depending on the entire team to continue with their current attitude and direction.

"We are trying to be a multi-dimensional team, playing five in and five out," Cox said. "We're extremely talented, but our basketball skills have to match our athleticism."

Regardless of the outcome this year, the girls team, with all but three players returning, will begin with a strong summer camp and plan to be on top of their game next season.

"This is the fun part of my job, and if the kids don't fire me, I'll be right back next year," Cox said. "Hopefully, we can work hard and our system can be perfected."

FSC wins opening night thriller over 2/58

THE BAYONET
Mitchell Thomas IV

The FSC, wearing red jerseys, started off the intramural regular season the same way they did in the preseason tournament. Red hot. The number-two-ranked Forward Support Company, 11th Engineer Battalion, knocked off a strong 2nd Battalion, 58 Infantry Regiment, team in a close 52-47 game Monday on the opening night of the intramural regular season.

FSC got off to an early lead after 2/58 turned the ball over and gave up a few easy buckets in the opening minutes.

Marcus Thomas got an easy score inside, giving FSC a 6-0 lead.

2/58 answered back with their first score but it was immediately followed by a wide open three-pointer by Rodney Roberts who finished the game with nine points.

2/58's big men got into a groove with five minutes into the half. Justin Milam tipped back one of his team's missed shots, and Jermaine Trevillion scored a bucket on the inside, which cut the FSC lead down to one.

With 10 minutes to go in the half, FSC caught fire again scoring on the interior and showing solid ball movement from point guard Gayland Moore Jr.

2/58's athletic guard Jason Carmona came off the bench giving his team a much-needed lift with assists to the lane for scores.

After FSC was whistled for a violation, Carmona shot two free throws to cut FSC's lead back down to one.

With three minutes to go, Carmona found Jeremiah Parker wide open in the corner to knock down a shot giving 2/58 the lead. 2/58 finished the half with a 19-15 lead seeming to have the mental edge.

"We're up four points and haven't even done anything yet," said Carmona who missed the majority of the preseason after breaking his foot. "When we get some type of cohesion going it's a wrap."

Carmona spoke a bit too soon. After he started of the second half with 2/58's first basket, the team made a string of turnovers. Gayland Moore capitalized by getting into the lane for back-to-back buckets.

Marcus Thomas, who said the team needed to play more uptempo in the second, followed with an put back bucket to give FSC their first lead in more with less than five minutes played in the half.

But Parker had other ideas. He knocked down a three pointer from the wing to tie the game, 28-28.

Moore made another great defensive play picking off Carmona as he made an ill-advised pass on the break.

Then Moore hosted a one-man show as he scored three times on four straight turnovers by the 2/58 offense giving FSC a commanding 42-30 lead.

"We saw that they were throwing bad passes and making bad decisions with the ball, we got inside and took advantage," said Moore, who led all scores with 15 points.

Milam gave 2/58 a bit of hope after knocking down a turnaround jumper and drawing a foul to cut the lead back down to single digits.

With eight minutes to go, FSC began milking the clock in the half court to prevent a 2/58 comeback. Carmona got a friendly rim to knock down on of a pair of back-to-back threes, which cut FSC's lead down to five points. Milam muscled inside to make another bucket cutting the lead to three, which gave the 2/58 fans hope.

With 3:05 to go, Trevillian made another strong play inside to cut FSC's lead down to one.

With 2/58 needing a defensive stop to take the lead, they blew their chance giving up four offensive rebounds in one FSC possession.

2/58 began fouling intentionally in hopes of stopping the clock in the final minutes, but FSC held them off with smart ball control.

"If we push the ball and play defense, and we'll be fine," said Moore. "We need to do the same things that made us successful in the preseason."

Jelly: Uses football as tool

He had never played organized football until his freshman year.

He was given a full scholarship to Pacelli, where he began honing his skills as a freshman defensive end. He quickly earned a spot as a starter in his sophomore year.

"I've always wanted to play football, but when I went to Faith Middle School, I couldn't do it, because they have no football team," Drisdom said. "The coach at Pacelli told me I had some size, and if I came out they would train me and give me a chance to play."

Drisdom, whose size blossomed to 5'11, 250 pounds, transferred to the public school system in his junior year and was assigned to Carver.

Going into his junior campaign, he was invited to the MSL/Adidas combine in Atlanta where he placed 19th in the Elite 22.

In both years as a starter at Carver, he helped lead the team on and off the field with a blend of athletic talent and spiritual guidance.

"He's a quiet leader," McGhee said, "He's not a very outspoken type of person, but when he speaks, he speaks volumes."

Jelly' spoke volumes when he gave a speech at the Georgia Dome before the semifinal game in which the team made a miraculous comeback in the final quarter.

> "I always told my teammates if you put God first, everything else will fall in line."
> — Jervelous Drisdom

"I told them we're a team of destiny," Drisdom said. "I knew we were headed toward greatness, and if we believed in each other and in God, we would pull through."

Although Lewis is proud of her son's athletic achievements, she is most thrilled with his success as a student and as a developing young man.

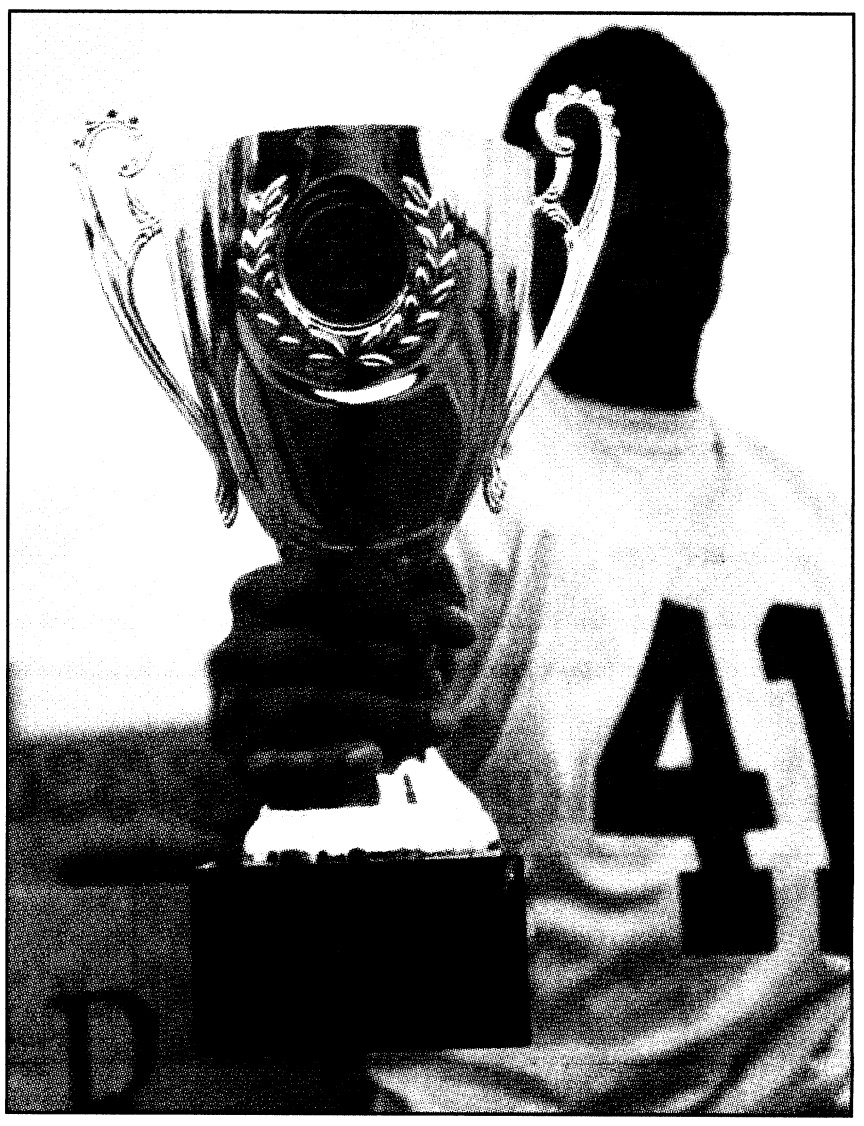
"I had him at a young age, and a lot of people wrote me off, but I persevered and somehow perseverance carried over to him," said Lewis who works as an administrative assistant to the director of Combat Developments on post. "His accomplishments are so much more than football. He has overcome so many obstacles to be who he is."

Drisdom is an active member of Future Business leaders of America and finished his junior year as an honor student. He also has a perfect attendance record throughout high school. Drisdom was offered a full scholarship to Miles College in Birmingham, Ala.

As much as Drisdom loves the game, football is not his primary goal.

"I plan on playing college football, but I'm using football to get me through school," he said. "If I'm blessed to play in the NFL, of course, I'll do it, but I have to be ready to do something else."

That something else is becoming a psychologist.



"Words are powerful, and I feel if I can help change somebody's life, then that's really cool," he said.

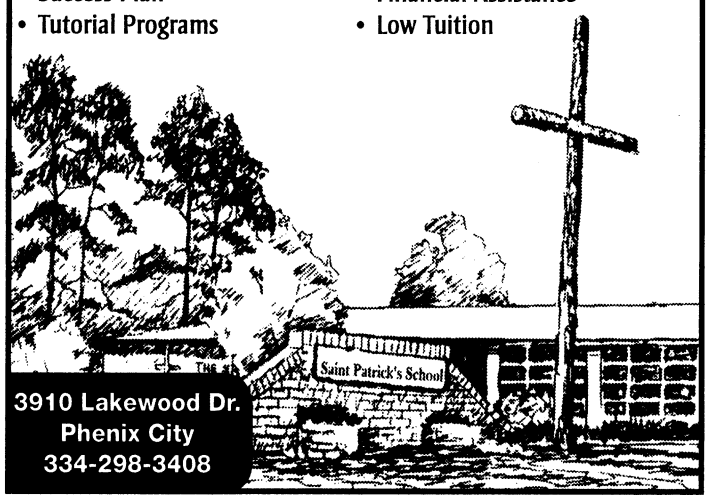
As for his experience with Carver, he appreciates the value of the team's history-making run.

"It's tremendous feeling," he said. "It feels great to be a part of such a great program. We aren't just players on the field, we interact as friends and family on and off the field."

Drisdom is also confident that he and the other seniors will be leaving the team in good hands with the younger players.

"I was always told my teammates, if you put God first, everything else will fall in line," Drisdom said.

Mitchell Thomas IV



"It has been an unbelievable experience being a part of such a tight-knit team," said Jervelous Drisdom who proudly hoists Carver's State Championship trophy. "We're all good friends and we believed in each other and overcame all the adversity."

The A Company, 2nd Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment, played a solid game from the perimeter, beating Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 3rd Battalion, 330th Infantry Regiment, Wednesday night, 38-29, in the Smith Fitness Center gymnasium.

Both teams came out shooting the ball early. A Co.'s Travis Ping started off hot, hitting a few jumpers from the outside to help give his team an early lead.

Jermaine Jones showed a burst of energy late in the first half, diving for loose balls and blocking shots on the defensive side.

But Ping kept his team in it with crisp passes and shots on the inside.

"We came out playing sloppy at the beginning of the half, but we started to pull it together," Ping said. "As soon as we were able to figure out what works against their defense, we were able to pull it together."

In the second half, A Co.'s team cohesion showed. They created a bigger lead, playing a half court offense, which slowed the pace down.

Although 3/330th were able to keep it close, A Co. proved to be too much in the closing minutes.

"We didn't have too many players on our team, but we showed a lot tonight sticking together," said Juan Ruynoso. "We were fortunate to have seven guys out here tonight, and we gave a good effort."

Do I dig the wrong game?

THE BAYONET
Mitchell Thomas IV

I typically watch Sportscenter every night, and the other day, I heard college football analyst and legendary QB Kirk Herbstreit say that the bowl games had been boring up until the BCS National Championships.

Honestly, I wouldn't know.

For those who don't already know, I am not a big NCAA football fan. And believe me, I've tried on more levels than one to get into it.

I watched a brief portion of the LSU-OSU game and enjoyed it fairly well. But soon the inevitable took over, and I lost interest. The last time I really enjoyed a national championship was the USC-Texas game featuring the up and coming talents of Reggie Bush and Vince Young.

Every year around August, I swear that this will be the year I will keep up with college football. Then slowly but surely, my interest returns to the realms of the NFL. I think there are several reasons for this.

The first is that there are far too many teams in Division 1 football to get to know any of them well. There are only 32 teams in the NFL, and I know the ins and outs of each and every one of them, as if I was a pro scout.

And don't even think about getting acquainted with any of the vast amount of college players. Yes, I know Troy McFadden, but that's only because of his chase for the Heisman. I get to know the favorites for the draft only after hearing the experts break down their highs and lows.

I constantly hear the comments about real sports fans loving college sports far more than the pros.

"It's so much purer in the college game," "They're playing for all the right reasons," they say.

That much I agree with. These kids are fighting for the level that I enjoy so much, and you can see the passion.

But with me, there is just something about the main stage.

I can't stand the Patriots, but I'm kind of rooting for them now. I also enjoy an underdog story like what happened with the New Orleans Saints last year.

Now, I know there are some great college stories and huge upsets that make the game so interesting to the fans.

But I've come to the conclusion that the reason I like the pros so much is because of my lack of favoring any one team on any level in any sport.

Most college fans are born into being Hoosiers or War Eagles fanatics, and if you even thought of cheering for another team in that household, you would be disowned and possibly beheaded.

With the exception of the '80s Lakers and '90s Bulls, I've never been a favorite team kind of guy. I barely even cared about teams at my college. And when I tell people this, I've seen borderline anger in their faces.

But what I do love is a good game. I love to know what the players are about, and being that I'm so thorough with my stats, the college game would drain everything in me to keep up. This is the reason why there are no college fantasy sports because it's far too saturated, and drafting would be impossible without the hand holding of experts.

Plus there is no way I would dedicate my entire weekend to football, and I don't see giving up Sunday anytime soon.

In the NFL, I pretty much already know who's going to be good or garbage before the start of the year. The twists and turns are interesting in the pro game too. Only in the pros will you get the antics of a Terrell Owens or Pac-man Jones to either laugh at or become disgusted with. Maybe it's the old-school WWF and NWA fan in me that loves the drama.

To me, not having a favorite team preserves what is most important — the game. I agree that the college level is pure, and that fact alone should make me a fan. But unfortunately, I've never been able to get over the hump of seeing the greatest steroid users, dog-fighters, and DUI'ers duke it out. Forget Friday Night Lights, I'm all about the Sunday soap opera.

FIT FACTS

MWR FITNESS DIRECTOR
Lori Smith

Happy New Year. This article brings lots of good wishes for you this new year, along with some advice for sticking to those resolutions you made at midnight. I myself made quite a few that I plan on sticking to this year. The big one for me was to actually train, enter, compete in and finish my first triathlon. So, when you see me running or swimming or biking, be kind and give me a thumbs up. I have a feeling I am going to need it.

Now it's two Fridays after New Years, and all the resolutions you were planning probably started Jan. 7 giving yourself one more weekend to get off the couch and out of the food coma and into a healthy lifestyle. Well, over the next few weeks I want to give you some ways and ideas to help keep you on track for a healthy lifestyle. Each week for the next few weeks, I will be asking you some questions, giving some tips on ways to stay motivated, good recipes to break up the diets and fun exercise to keep you motivated to work out. I would also like for you guys to send me e-mails and let me know how you're doing. Tell me the goals you have set and how you are doing along the way, and what you are doing to stay motivated. Maybe your advice can help others with their goals.

My first piece of advice is to streamline your resolutions. Pick one thing, versus so many, and make it a priority. For example, my goal is to compete in a triathlon, but I don't plan on starting to run, bike and swim on Jan. 7. My goal is to start slowly and begin with running (my weakness) first. Once I get into a routine of running, I am going to add a day of swimming, then two days of swimming and so on. You don't need to meet all your goals by the end of January. Enacting small and feasible changes may make it easier to incorporate them into your busy lifestyle and may help keep you focused.

Another example of streamlining your goals would be if your resolution is to work out more. If so, incorporate some type of fitness into your weekly routine. Try taking the stairs at work, walking during lunch or taking a trip to the gym maybe three days versus five days. Once you feel comfortable with these and they fit into your routine, add to it, such as working out more, adding a healthy diet or taking that extra aerobic class. You have all year to work on these goals — give yourself time to accomplish them.

Let me know what you are working toward this year, and let's help each other. Good luck and keep reading for more tips and ideas, and remember, 2008 will be great. E-mail me at lori.smith6@us.army.mil.

Behavior analyst Jade Lewis and Peyton Nelson concentrate as they draw Snoopy. Lewis comes to Nelson's home to help him with behavior, communication and social skills.

Fort Benning Family learns about autism daily

THE BAYONET
Rachel L. Watkins

Karen and Maj. Bill Nelson were stationed in Korea when they first noticed something different about their son, Peyton, who was 17 months old. Peyton didn't want to answer questions when asked.

"His verbal skills were not up to note with his other skills," said Bill. "We just thought he would talk when he wanted to."

The Nelsons took Peyton to a developmental pediatrician who recommended early intervention services and then took him to a hospital in Hawaii for medical testing.

It wasn't until they moved to Fort Campbell, Ky., nearly two years later, that Peyton was diagnosed with autism spectrum disorder.

Autism is a group of disabilities that affect the brain, and impacts behavior, communication, learning and social interaction. There is no cure for autism. One in 150 people in the United States has autism and one in 70 people in the military have autism, said Gwen Martin, clinical director of the Southeast Regional Autism Center.

Signs of autism vary but can include loss of language or social skills, poor eye contact, no smiling, no babbling, no pointing or meaningful gestures by the age of 1, and no two-word phrases by 2 years.

Karen said she didn't notice signs of autism before Peyton was 2.

"Autism is different from other disorders," said Martin. "With Down syndrome, you can look and tell there is something else going on, but with autism, you can't look at a person and tell that there is a disorder or disability. Sometimes it makes it hard on parents."

"When we are in public, people think Peyton has a behavior problem," Karen said. "They say he needs to be punished for his behavior — it doesn't work that way. He really has to know what the behavior is before it can be corrected."

In August, behavior analyst Jade Lewis from the May Institute started working with Peyton, who is now 7.

She comes to the Nelson's home nine to 10 hours a week and works with him on behavior, communication and social skills. The Nelsons have seen a change in their son's behavior since Lewis started working with him.

"Peyton makes more eye contact and is more responsive to our requests," Karen said. Before Lewis came, Peyton threw tantrums and seldom made eye contact.

"I think the most frustrating thing for Peyton is

Post book clubs always welcome new members

Cheryl Rodewig
Karen Mueller discusses the book Water for Elephants, which will be featured at the next meeting of the Let's Talk Books club Jan. 23.

THE BAYONET
Cheryl Rodewig

These is My Words was not a book Karen Mueller would have read, were it not recommended by a friend. Now she's glad she did.

"It was the first book I read with the club," she said.

"It had all kinds of emotions. I laughed out loud; I cried. It was just a great story."

The Benning Book Club was founded a year ago and meets one Friday a month at Sayers Memorial Library.

It starts at 10 a.m. and ends whenever discussion about the book is over, said Ericka Loze-Hudson, director of the Donovan Library.

Members take turns hosting the meeting each month, and the hostess provides refreshments and chooses the book. It can be classic, fiction, nonfiction, modern — anything.

Mueller said she joined the club to rediscover reading.

"I used to be in a book club several years ago," she said. "It's nice to have the suggestions of what to read. We've read books that I never would have picked up had somebody not chosen them."

This month's book is The Zookeeper's Wife: A War Story by Diane Ackerman.

The discussion will be Jan. 25, but Mueller said people can come even if they haven't completed the book.

"Whether you love or hate the book, come and discuss it," Loze-Hudson said. "Come and meet new faces along with new books."

It's a networking opportunity for people who like to see other points of view and even debate different opinions, said Nancy Walstrom, assistant manager of Sayers library.

Let's Talk Books is another networking opportunity.

The book club meets from 11:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. one Wednesday every month at Sayers Library. People are encouraged to attend even if they can't stay the whole time.

This book club is still in the organizational process, so people are encouraged to come just to get more information or share their opinions.

Library staff provide book reviews and occasionally ask questions to fuel discussion, and the library provides drink refreshments.

The next meeting will be on Jan. 23, and the book Water for Elephants, by Sarah Gruen, is available at the library.

For younger audiences, the American Girls Book Club meets at 6:30 p.m. the first Wednesday of the month.

The library furnishes snacks, and Barnes & Nobles provides a facilitator, Diane Whitehurst, who leads discussions about different American Girls books, chosen in advance.

The books are geared toward girls ages 9 through 12, but the club is open to anyone, and parents are encouraged to attend, Walstrom said. The book chosen for the Feb. 6 meeting is Meet Josephina.

For more information about any of the clubs, contact the library at 706-545-7141.

Hours are from 11 a.m. to 8 p.m. Monday through Thursday and 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Saturday and Sunday.

Having accurate destination important for GPS, life

CHAPLAIN FAMILY LIFE CENTER
Chaplain (Maj.) Stanley Arnold

I received a GPS for Christmas. My wife battled the after-Thanksgiving-sales mob to get it for me. I was totally surprised with the gift, although I am usually pretty oblivious to gifts and surprises. I fired it up on Christmas in time for a new family tradition — eating at a Chinese restaurant. Some might recognize this from the movie A Christmas Story. Amazingly, the GPS was accurate at getting us to the wrong location! Right on cue, the friendly female voice told me turn after turn, but I failed to put in the correct destination. It had done its job. I had failed to give it the accurate address. I felt unfulfilled. There was an emptiness, a missing piece in our lives. (Luckily we knew exactly where the restaurant was. The food was great.)

Knowing the correct destination is not just important when traveling in your car. Life requires an accurate destination. Marriage requires an accurate destination. Parenting requires an accurate destination. If we don't know where we are going in life, marriage or parenting, we are sure to end up somewhere we don't want to be. And we will experience lots of frustration and emptiness along the way. For many, we don't know what fulfilling and meaningful life, marriages and parenting looks like. We did not see it in our homes growing up, and we have not seen it up close and personal in our communities. We lack examples to imitate. We don't have a pattern to follow.

Of course, we Americans have many ways of trying to get somewhere without knowing where we are going. We sense an emptiness in ourselves and we reach out to food, clothing, cars, houses, hobbies, casual sexual relationships, alcohol, painkillers, career, prestige, rank, likeability, family, children, thrills. You get the picture. These are all destinations. We think that if we just get enough of (you fill in the blank), we will be satisfied. Of course, when we get there, we are not satisfied, and we move on to the next destination.

As we traveled home from our Chinese food I veered off course on purpose just to see what would happen. Since I had put an accurate destination into the system, the friendly voice automatically charted my course home. The system knew I had made a different turn than the one originally planned and got me back on course because I had given it an accurate destination. That accurate destination was the key to my success.

We are born like a GPS system without an accurate destination. We wander from point-to-point, not realizing we are getting nowhere. But there is a solution. We can have an accurate destination in life, marriage and parenting. We can be assured that in the end, we will arrive at our destination, a fulfilling, meaningful destination. That is really what Christmas is about. A destination dropped into history.

If you are feeling like you are wandering through life, marriage or parenting, stop by the Family Life Center. We have helped thousands of individuals and families to help chart a course for fulfilling and meaningful lives, marriages and families. We can help you discover the destination.

CAREER ADVANCEMENT ACCOUNTS

CAA, an available grant, provides up to $3,000 per year for two years for eligible spouses. Spouses must have a high school diploma, GED or some college, one year remaining at Fort Benning, and two years remaining on current enlistment.

Soldiers must be in pay grades E-1 to E-5 or O-1 to O-3.

The funds can be used to complete post-secondary training of any of Georgia's two-year community and technical colleges. Or the grant can be used for training that will lead to a state approved credential or license such as an approved certificate from a continuing education program or approved education service provider.

For more information, call 706-545-7397 or go to the Army Education Center at Building 2602 Soldiers' Plaza.

EFMP ENROLLMENT

The Exceptional Family Member Program has mandatory enrollment for special needs Family members (child or spouse).

Enrollment doesn't hurt the Soldier's career but assists military personnel divisions in considering medical and educational needs of the Family member in the assignment process.

Enrollment is necessary if the spouse or child meets the following criteria: asthma, a current or past mental health diagnosis, a high-risk pregnancy, cancer (past or present), attention deficit disorder or diabetes.

For resource information and referrals, call 706-545-5521.

CITIZENSHIP CLASSES

The International Wives Club and Army Community Service will sponsor citizenship classes this month one evening a week for six weeks in Building 2624, Soldiers' Plaza.

For more information, call 706-687-6471 or 706-545-0403.

TRIP TO FORT STEWART FOR TEENS

Teens are invited to Fort Stewart, Ga., Jan. 19 and 20. Activities are planned at Savannah Mall, Fire Mountain restaurant, Star Castle Entertainment Center and the movie theater. The first 45 who register can go.

For more information, call 706-545-3070.

The CYS Teen Center is holding a free pajama dance with a live DJ from 8 to 11 p.m. Jan. 25 at the Teen Center, Building 1056 on McIver Street.

For more information, call 706-545-3070.

SCHOLARSHIPS FOR MILITARY CHILDREN

Applications for the Defense Commissary Agency's 2008 scholarships are available at commissaries worldwide.

The $1,500 scholarships are available to unmarried children under the age of 21 (23 if enrolled in school) of military active-duty, retired, Guard and Reserve service members. In order to be eligible, the applicant and his sponsor must be enrolled in the DEERS database and they must have a current ID card.

The applicant must be planning to attend or already attending an accredited college or university full time in the fall of 2008 or enrolled in a program of studies designed to transfer directly into a four-year program. Applicants are required to write an essay.

At least one scholarship will be awarded at each commissary, and the deadline for application is Feb. 20.

For more information, go to www.militaryscholar.org.

WOMEN'S CONFERENCE

Fort Benning's annual Women's Conference will be March 12 at the Benning Club. The conference, open to the first 300 people who register, will include a continental breakfast and catered lunch, several one-hour workshops, and a guest speaker.

Free child care is available, but space is limited.

The $18 registration fee will be waived for all 15:12 cardholders. Registration is now until Feb. 29.

Look for registration forms at the Benning Club, Bit of Benning, the Subway at Afterhours, the PX Mall and DMWR Headquarters on Eckel Avenue.

Don't avoid conflict, learn to 'fight successfully'

BAYONET CORRESPONDENT
Frederick M. "Bud" Rupel

Conflict — expect it in every marriage. However, when many people think about having a disagreement with their spouse, it often brings up uncomfortable feelings: yelling, name calling, throwing objects, even hitting.

One husband told me, "I avoid conflict at any cost." Avoiding conflict can only lead to more conflict, because the issues never get addressed, let alone resolved.

There are far too many couples who fail to work out their problems just because they are afraid of conflict. Dr. Howard Markman, director of the University of Denver's Center for Marital and Family Studies, made the observation that husbands are the ones most prone to avoiding conflict.

John Gottman put it this way, "In a sea of conflict, women swim and men sink."

The good news is that it does not have to be that way. While you may not always get what you want, you and your spouse can learn ways to be with one another so that you each get most of what you want and need. This may mean facing the possibility of starting a fight.

There are those couples who have learned to fight successfully simply by following some simple rules:

1. Listen as well as talk.
2. Give and take.
3. Look for solutions not a personal victory.
4. Paraphrase what your spouse is telling you to let them know you've heard them correctly.
5. Call a time out when things get heated or you become stuck.
6. No verbal, emotional or physical abuse.
7. Don't let the sun go down on your anger.
8. Encourage your spouse to say what he or she wants.

Do not get discouraged when you have a conflict with your spouse. Instead, keep talking and listening to each other and look for areas of agreement.

Above all else, don't let conflicts build up, deal with them while they are still small.

Editor's note: Bud Rupel is a retired major and former Army chaplain. He now serves on the pastoral staff at Evangel Temple in Columbus.

Keep pets warm and dry this winter

THE BAYONET
Rachel Houston

It's about 70 degrees outside as I sit here writing, but nonetheless, it is winter. And just a few days ago there was frost covering the ground and my car's windshield. When the cold weather hits, it is important to remember our pets and their safety.

When the temperature drops overnight, pets shouldn't be left out in the cold. Watch the weather forecast or log onto Weather.com for up-to-date weather predictions. In Georgia, the temperature can be in the 70s one day and in the 30s the next night.

If your pets will be outside in cooler temperatures, make sure they have shelter. Provide a draft-free doghouse with clean, dry bedding. The Humane Society recommends elevating the shelter a few inches and turning it away from the wind.

Outdoor cats may seek warmth under cars when there is no shelter provided. If you see cats in your yard or neighborhood, you may want to check under your car before starting it in the morning, suggested the American Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals.

Check water bowls several times a day. A few days ago, our Great Dane spent a good 10 minutes licking the frozen water in his bowl outside before I realized he had no fresh water out there. You may be surprised how easily the water will freeze, even when it doesn't seem that cold out.

Outdoor pets will probably need more food during the winter to keep themselves warm, so up your pet's food intake a bit in the winter months. Talk with your vet for specific food recommendations.

Also make sure your outdoor pets are current on vaccinations and medications. Pets' immune systems have to work harder in cold weather, so provide them with all the help you can give them in staying healthy.

Outdoor pets may get chapped paw pads or noses, so check for cracks or sores, especially if there has been several days of frost or any frozen precipitation. Also, outdoor pets should never be shaved or clipped in winter. Let your pet's hair grow through the colder months and brush it to keep mats from forming.

You can still bathe your pet in the winter. Just don't let it go outside until its coat is thoroughly dry.

Also, young and old pets, as well as those with health problems, have a harder time keeping themselves warm in cold weather. These pets shouldn't be left outside for more than a few minutes unless they're being supervised. Keep in mind that it can be harder to housebreak puppies in the winter when they may have no interest in being outside, according to the ASPCA.

Luckily, we don't have to deal with severe winter weather in this climate, but that doesn't mean it never gets cold enough to negatively affect our pets. It does, but it's easy to take a little time and ensure they stay warm and dry.

Butter-free lifestyle could improve overall health

THE BAYONET
Cheryl Rodewig

Butter makes it better, I've heard. I admit buttered breads and treats are delicious, but what about the health costs?

Essentially an animal fat, butter raises cholesterol and is high in saturated fats, which can clog arteries and lead to a host of other health problems.

Butter substitutes aren't much better. The most popular of these, margarine, is made from vegetable oils, which are usually hydrogenated and have a high trans-fat content. The Food and Drug Administration links trans-fatty acids to heart disease because they can cause the body to produce more cholesterol.

Some manufacturers now produce margarine that is lower in trans-fats, but the fact remains that butter and margarine generally have the same number of calories and are both concentrated forms of saturated fat.

The American Heart Association recommends we limit our intake of saturated and trans-fats to less than 10 percent of our daily caloric intake.

Try embracing a butter- and margarine-free lifestyle. I have, and I've found I don't miss the stuff at all.

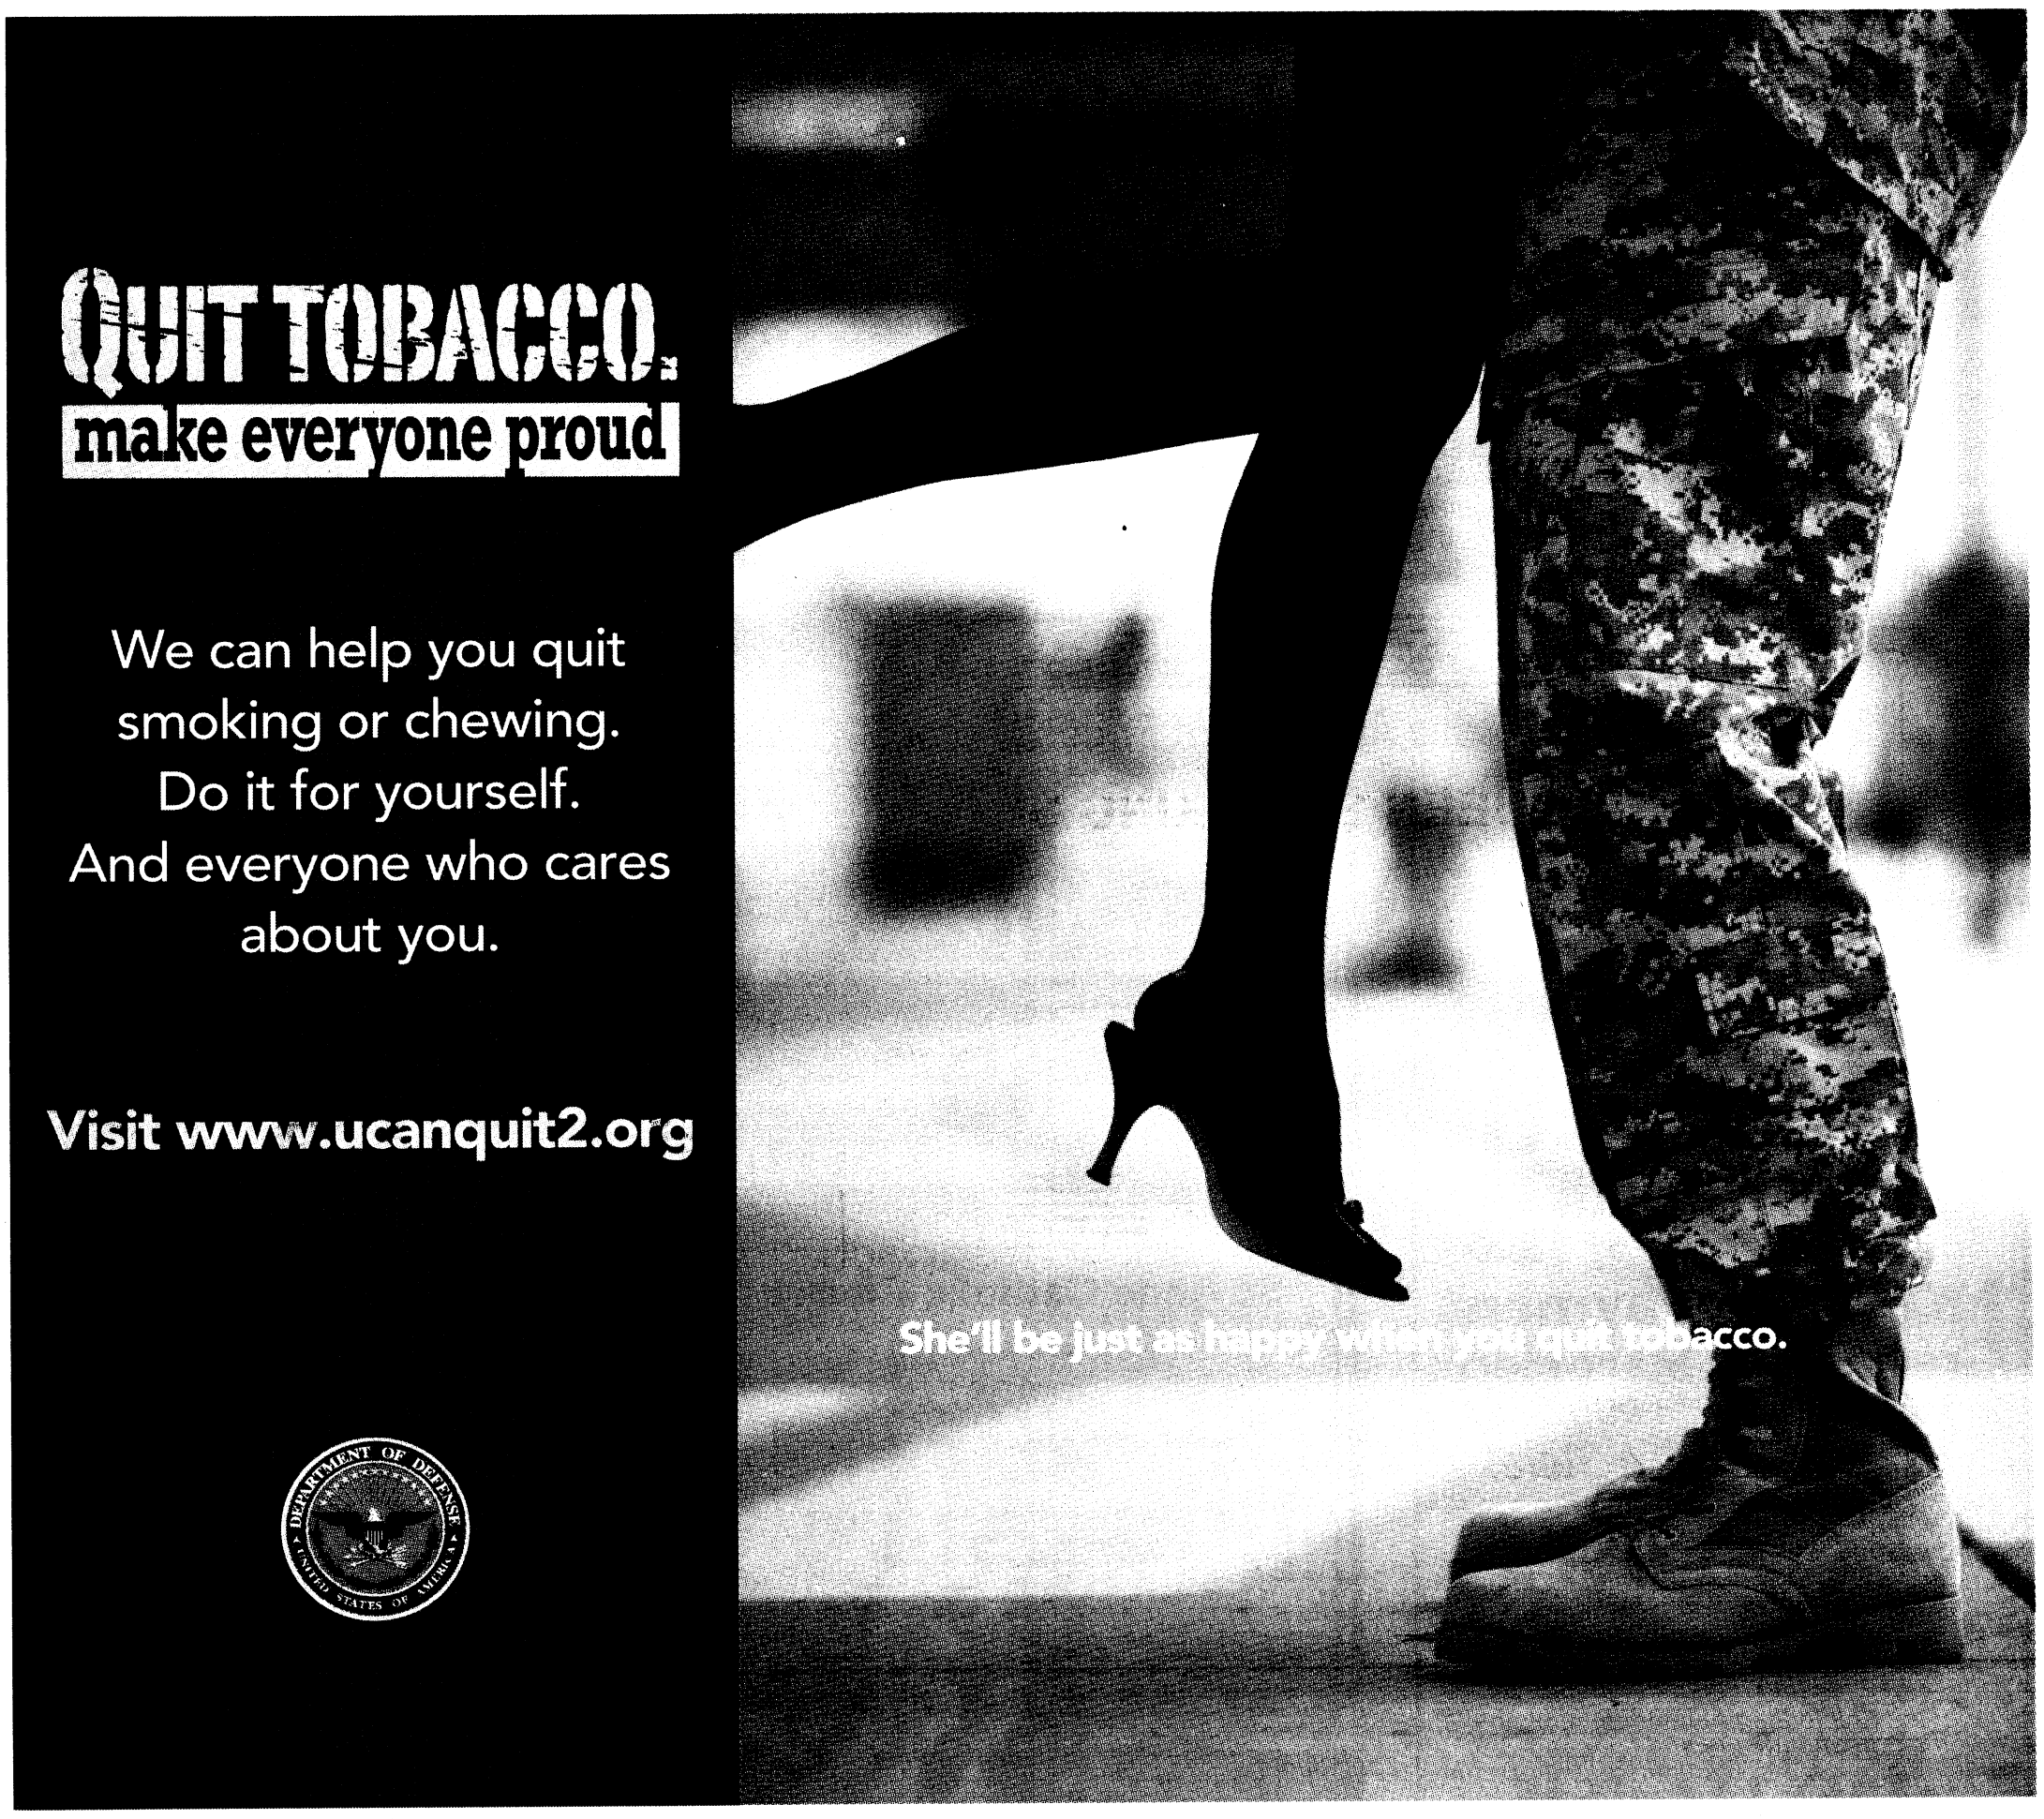
My secret is olive oil. Mediterraneans have been using it for centuries and have lower rates of heart disease and diabetes as a result.

Just like many nuts, olive oil contains monounsaturated fat. This essential ingredient has high density lipoproteins, which actually carry cholesterol away from the arteries.

Research also suggests that the polyphenols in olive oil can act as antioxidants.

Unlike margarine and vegetable oil, olive oil has not been hydrogenated. In fact, freshly pressed olive oil is edible without any processing at all.

Extra virgin olive oil is the healthiest choice. It contains no more than 0.8 percent acidity and has the most antioxidant benefits.



Available at commissaries and grocery stores, this oil can be used to replace butter or margarine. The key is replacement. Vegetables or potatoes sautéed in olive oil don't need any butter. I particularly enjoy dipping fresh breads in a mixture of olive oil and spices.

Like all foods, however, olive oil must be consumed in moderation. Two tablespoons a day should suffice.

In other instances where you would use butter or margarine, try doing without. When macaroni and cheese recipes call for margarine, I've never missed it. The milk and cheese provide enough creaminess. And for breakfast, syrup adds plenty of richness to waffles and pancakes without butter.

When toasted or fresh, breads are delicious plain, and even if you add some fruit spread or a slice of provolone, the addition will have more nutritive value than a butter substitute.

Try going without that buttery flavor for two weeks. You may find you don't even notice a difference, but rest assured, your heart and your health will.

Baby

Time to pack for trip to hospital

THE BAYONET
Rachel Houston

While all you really need to take to the hospital for your baby's delivery is you, there are some items that can make your experience a little better and put your mind at ease. It's a good idea to put together a hospital bag a few weeks before your due date so that you aren't scrambling when you go into labor.

The most important item you'll need to take with you is a car seat that has been properly installed.

Whether you buy an infant car seat, which looks like a carrier and comes out of the car, or a convertible seat approved for infants, make sure it is in your car when you head to the hospital. Most hospitals will not allow parents to take an infant home without one.

Start gathering items you may want at the hospital about three to four weeks before your due date. You may want to pack two bags — one for items you and your husband will need right away and another for the baby and your going home outfit. Leave the second bag in the car — there will be plenty of time for someone to get the second bag when it is needed.

Ask your doctor and nurse what items they recommend you bring. Many hospitals provide all the items your baby will need in his or her first few days aside from an outfit to wear home. Make sure it is appropriate for the weather, and bring an extra blanket if you'll be giving birth in the winter.

Some clothing items you may want to pack are socks to wear in the delivery room, something to wear during delivery if you don't want to wear a hospital gown, nightgowns for after delivery, nursing bras, slippers, shower shoes, a robe, several pairs of underwear, an outfit to wear home from the hospital and a change of clothes for your husband. You'll probably still be wearing maternity clothes for a little while after delivery, so choose a loose, comfortable outfit to go home in.

Other items to consider are pillows, your insurance card, an item to use as a focal point, lip balm, a book or magazine, a brush, toothbrush, toothpaste, soap, shampoo and conditioner, a ponytail holder and a snack for after delivery.

Some items that may come in handy for your husband or labor coach are a portable DVD player and DVDs, books, magazines, iPod or other music player, change or cash for food, a watch with a second hand, a tennis ball or other item to massage your back during labor, a camera and cell phone or change to make phone calls.

You probably won't be able to pack everything right away, so keep a list of items left to pack, which my husband calls a "deficiency list," near the bags. Use the list I've provided as a starting point and personalize it for your own wishes and needs.

covers housing, education, child care, employment and deployment.

"The 15:12 card offers a lot of discounts and social outlets for Families and it's a great chance for Families to take advantages of services we offer on post," said Sarah Hertig, director of SKIESUnlimited.

15:12 cards are available to spouses of deployed Soldiers and children 18 and younger whose parent is deployed.

Donlin received her card in October, and she has taken advantage of several free services and discounts since.

She enrolled her sons, Seth and Jack, into gymnastics. The class, which costs $70 a month, was free with her 15:12 card.

Seth's two-day preschool is discounted 20 percent. In the summer, Donlin's daughter, Elise, will receive free swim lessons.

"The 15:12 card has given me a little extra spending money and made it a little more fun to participate in things because we are doing things I would have done anyway," said Donlin, whose husband is on his third deployment.

"From the first to the third deployment, I have seen great strides taken from Fort Benning and the Army to offer support and assistance to Families," Brenda said.

For more information, people can contact their family readiness group leader.

Autism: May be treatable

that he can't communicate what he wants or needs to us," Karen said.

After implementing a strict schedule, Peyton has improved, Lewis said.

He attends lifestyle classes at Loyd Elementary every weekday which teach him social, behavior and communication skills. He goes to bed by 8 p.m.

Lewis is teaching Peyton how to behave calmly when getting a haircut or going to the dentist. He is learning how to tie his shoes. Most parents take these tasks for granted, but Peyton hates them, Bill said.

"Without Jade helping with strategies, we would feel like we were on the outside looking in," he said. "She helps us with things we don't know how to do."

"Peyton is one of my most interesting kids, and he is so intelligent," Lewis said.

"I can see him going really far as he comes out of his shell more and is open to the world and other people."

Signs of autism spectrum disorders:

- No babbling, pointing or meaningful gestures by the age of 1
- No one-word communications by 16 months
- No two-word phrases by 2 years
- Loss of language or social skills
- Poor eye contact
- Inability to play appropriately with toys
- Unusual attachment to one particular toy or object
- No smiling
- Apparent lack or response to sounds or voices and name being called

There is no cure, but there is help:

RESTAURANT REVIEW

The Deli Cafe at Meritage

Restaurant offers big-city dining experience

THE BAYONET
Rachel L. Watkins

The Deli Café at Meritage looks like a restaurant one might find in a bigger city, but it is nestled in a small village on 13th Street in Columbus, surrounded by artsy stores and another restaurant.

The atmosphere of Meritage is welcoming with brightly painted red and yellow walls and the smell of coffee. Coffee cups and art line shelves.

The Deli Café at Meritage offers panini sandwiches, wraps, salads and soups.

The Caravaggio panini, for $7.95, with salami, pepperoni, spicy capicolla, olives, sun-dried tomatoes, tomato, Auriccio provolone and Grigorrio dressing on a ciabatta loaf, is delicious.

It comes with your choice of side: house chips (these are delicious), pasta salad, poppy seed coleslaw or baked potato salad.

Or get a black and blue salad for $8.95. It's a Caesar salad with garlic pecorino cheese croutons, bacon, oven-roasted tomatoes, blackened filet mignon, blue cheese crumbles and house Caesar dressing.

Or try the Carlo Carlo for $8.25. It's Pancetta, smoked turkey, tomato, portabella mushroom and Roman style artichokes on a ciabatta loaf with one side dish.

Vegetarians have options too. The house salad is $7.25 for a full order and $4.25 for half.

It is mixed greens, candied pecans, mandarin oranges, grape tomatoes topped with a creamy coconut citrus vinaigrette.

There are plenty of paninis that are meat-free, including the De Chirico, which will set you back $7.50.

It's fresh spinach leaves, sun-dried tomatoes, mozzarella cheese, Aurricio provolone cheese, fresh pesto, and olive oil served on ciabatta bread.

I had the Parmesan tomato soup. It's cream-based and tasty. You can get a cup of it for $3.

If you don't like tomato soup, try the French onion soup with crostini and mozzarella cheese for $3 a cup.

If you want to sample a little bit of everything, get the trio combo for $12.95. This includes a panini, salad and soup.

The Deli Café at Meritage is open Monday through Saturday from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m.

They offer take-out and catering. The restaurant is located at 1350 13th Street.

For more information, call 706-327-0707 or go to www.meritagecafe.net.

International Marketplace has a model airplane museum, with 300 planes on display in addition to many other activities. The marketplace is less than 10 miles from Fort Benning.

International Market offers diversity

Antiques mall, museums available for visitors to browse

THE BAYONET
Rachel L. Watkins

It all started with a newspaper ad: "Model airplanes for sale."

Allen Woodall Jr. purchased 300 model airplanes from the widow of a test pilot and plane collector and opened a museum in Columbus.

Woodall's International Marketplace is less than 10 miles from Fort Benning, and includes the model airplane museum, a petroleum and gas museum and an antiques mall in a building spanning 43,000 square feet, located at 318 10th Ave., formerly the Columbus Farmers' Market.

The Gas and Petroleum museum is filled with old Coca-Cola signs, gas pumps, gas globes, gas signs and air pumps.

Out of everything Woodall collects, he said the gas and petroleum items are among his favorites.

He became interested in collecting gas and petroleum items after he collected antique cars.

In the antiques mall, visitors can find just about anything including hats, dishes, dressers, chairs, figurines, glasses, rugs and signs. A few of my favorites were a barber chair, an antique Coke machine, an antique peanut machine and a chair made of metal, license plates and wire.

The International Marketplace is still in the process of moving other museums to the building.

Plans include a pottery museum of Southern Stoneware, with pottery from all over the Southern region of the United States, a lunch box museum that has more than 2,000 lunchboxes and is recognized by the Smithsonian Museum, and Empire City, which is a model city made of hand-painted and hand-carved wood that would have the world's highest skyline if it were a life-sized city.

The pottery and lunchbox museum and Empire City are expected to open to the public by March 1. The gas and petroleum and model airplane museums and antiques mall are currently open to the public and admission is free.

For more information, call 706-653-6240 or go to www.internationalmarketplace.us.

Chasing Villa offers insight into Mexican expedition

BAYONET CORRESPONDENT
Maj. Matthew Archambault

People like to say that history often repeats itself, and while that may be true to a degree, it never repeats itself in exactly the same way. There are always nuances differing in each circumstance, which makes the study of history — and military history in particular — so fascinating. One text from yesteryear that foreshadows the trials and tribulations of today, but is replete with its own nuances, is retired Col. Frank Tompkins' Chasing Villa: The Last Campaign of the U.S. Cavalry.

The U. S. Army has been dealing with guerrilla warfare and foreign incursions long before 2001. Chasing Villa is a look at one of the footnotes of our military history. Tompkins wrote this after retiring from the Army, and Chasing Villa found its way to bookshelves in 1934. Don't let that date scare you, though. Tompkins writes with aplomb, and despite the archaic typesetting, the book is an easy and intriguing read.

Military professionals at every level should read this book. Much of what we know about the Mexican Punitive Expedition concerns a young Lt. George S. Patton, serving as an aide-de-camp to Brig. Gen. John Pershing. This text, while covering Patton's exploits, includes a holistic view of the campaign, and our Army during a time of change. While primarily dealing with "the last cavalry" campaign, it is not hard to extract parallels to our conflicts today.

Tompkins offers insights into the difficulty of navigating and chasing bandits from sea level to altitudes of 8,000 feet and a range of 300 miles into the Mexican interior with little logistical support. There was no proliferation of maps. Commanders at every level had to coerce information from locals, follow their instincts and keep a wary eye on the Mexican military.

Tompkins reinforces, time and again, the temerity of the old cavalry officer, "who had learned every phase of Indian warfare in the hard school of our western frontier, where a soldier was taught to consider his horse first and himself last, ... and furthermore these officers were true to the cavalry tradition: once on the trail stick to it until the quarry is run to earth."

Tompkins was a squadron commander during this campaign, but the text is not solely from his experience. He includes diary excerpts from officers and Soldiers in various subordinate commands. These insights take today's military professional, who already has a context in his mind about such operations, right into the cavalry's camp. It is not easy to imagine the weather and isolation they felt.

Chasing Villa moves in chronological order. It starts with a background on the Mexican crisis. Tompkins does not hesitate to give his opinion on President Wilson and American foreign policy, but he does so with the aid of official letters and memorandums. As the book moves through the Columbus incident to the campaign and its conclusion, this technique infuses the book with a verisimilitude that supports the text as more than an opinion paper.

Some of the true gems that Tompkins raises are his unique professional interjections. He critiques the new saddle used by the cavalry at the time. One of the appendices offers an after-action review which includes the need to have cash on hand to pay locals for supplies, the type of horses suitable for such terrain and the need for a new saber. There is also a discussion on the first use of automobiles in military operations. All of these serve to outweigh the presentation of the book, which is in the original 1934 type.

Read Chasing Villa to discover some of the nuances that beset the U.S. Army in March of 1916. Gain insight into the organization and conduct of the last campaign of not only the cavalry, but the old frontier Army. If you want a real treat, the original hard bound edition is in the Donovan Library.

OPENING TODAY

THE PIRATES WHO DON'T DO ANYTHING: A VEGGIETALES MOVIE

Three misfits, Elliot (Mike Nawrocki), Sedgewick (Phil Vischer) and George (Phil Vischer), are busboys at the Pieces of Ate Dinner Theater who dream of starring on stage.

Things change when a mysterious ball drops from the sky and lands at their feet.

The artifact sets in motion a series of events that drags the friends back to the 17th century where these "pirates who don't do anything" must each face their fears, becoming unlikely heroes in a battle to rescue a royal family from an evil tyrant and themselves from living the life of common couch potatoes.

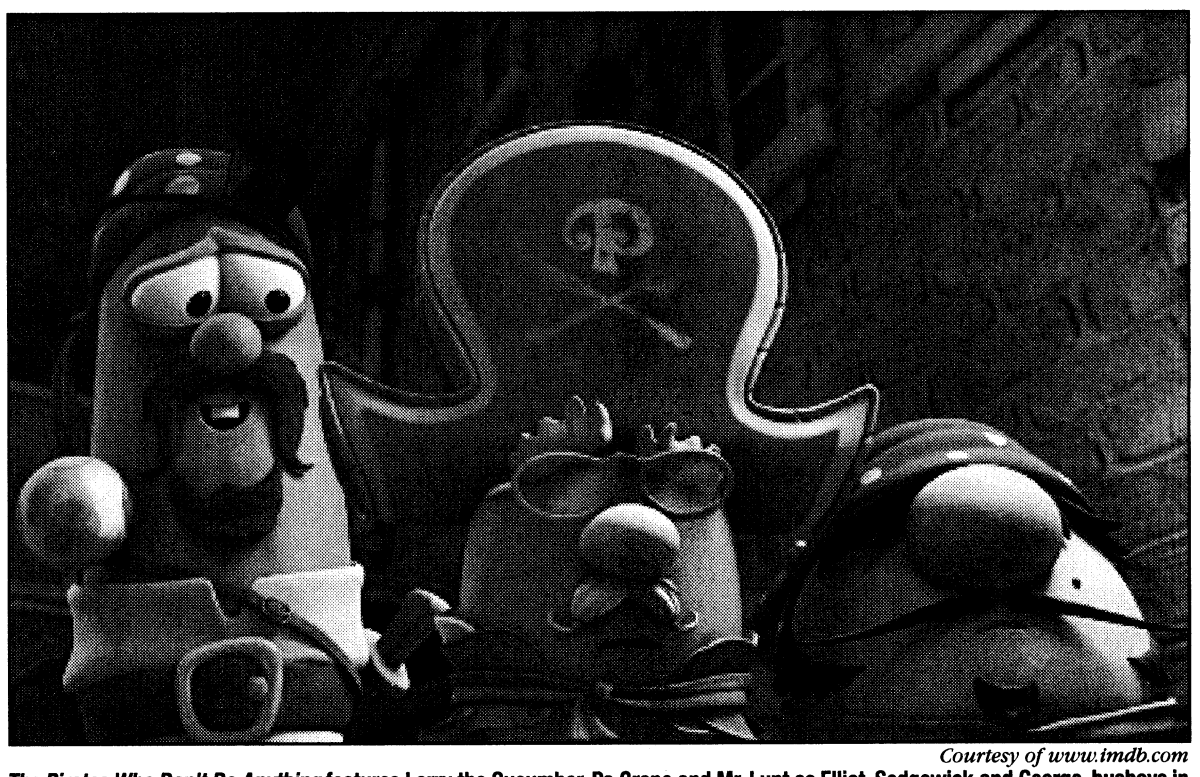
The Pirates Who Don't Do Anything: A VeggieTales Movie is rated G.

THE BUCKET LIST

Years ago, Carter Chambers' (Morgan Freeman) philosophy professor suggested that his students compose a bucket list: a collection of all the things they wanted to do before they kicked the bucket, but now, after marriage, children and a 46-year job as an auto mechanic, Carter has all but forgotten his list.

Corporate billionaire Edward Cole (Jack Nicholson), meanwhile, is too busy making money to think about what he really wants in life.

When the two men find themselves sharing a hospital room, they decide to check out of the hospital and hit the road together.



From the Taj Mahal to the Serengeti, the finest restaurants to the seediest tattoo parlors, the cockpit of vintage race cars to the open door of a prop plane, they check off items on their list and become true friends along the way.

The Bucket List is rated PG-13 for language and a sexual reference.

FIRST SUNDAY

Durell (Ice Cube) and LeeJohn (Tracy Morgan) are best friends and bumbling petty criminals. When Durell learns that his ex-girlfriend plans to move to another state with their son, unless they can get her $17,000 to pay off a debt, they come up with a desperate scheme to rob their neighborhood church.

But when they discover someone has beaten them to the money, they are forced to spend the night in the presence of the Lord and his followers and end up getting a lot more than they bargained for.

The Pirates Who Don't Do Anything features Larry the Cucumber, Pa Grape and Mr. Lunt as Elliot, Sedgewick and George, busboys in a dinner theater who find adventure when they travel back in time and learn that they, too, can be heroes in this family comedy.

First Sunday is rated PG-13 for language, sexual humor and drug references.

IN THE NAME OF THE KING: A DUNGEON SIEGE TALE

An evil army rampages across what was a peaceful world, destroying everything in its path, to conquer the mighty Castle Ebb and vanquish the king.

Amidst the war between the evil Gallian (Ray Liotta) and the ruling King Konreid (Burt Reynolds), a once simple family man named Farmer (Jason Statham) sets out to find his kidnapped wife, Solana (Claire Forlani), and avenge the death of his son, who was killed by animal warriors called Krugs.

In the Name of the King: A Dungeon Siege Tale is rated PG-13 for battle sequence.

THE ORPHANAGE

Laura spent the happiest years of her childhood in a seaside orphanage. Now, thirty years later, she returns with her husband Carlos and Simon, their 7-year-old son, to restore and reopen the long abandoned orphanage as a home for disabled children.

The new home and mysterious surroundings awaken Simon's imagination, and he starts to spin a web of fantastic tales.

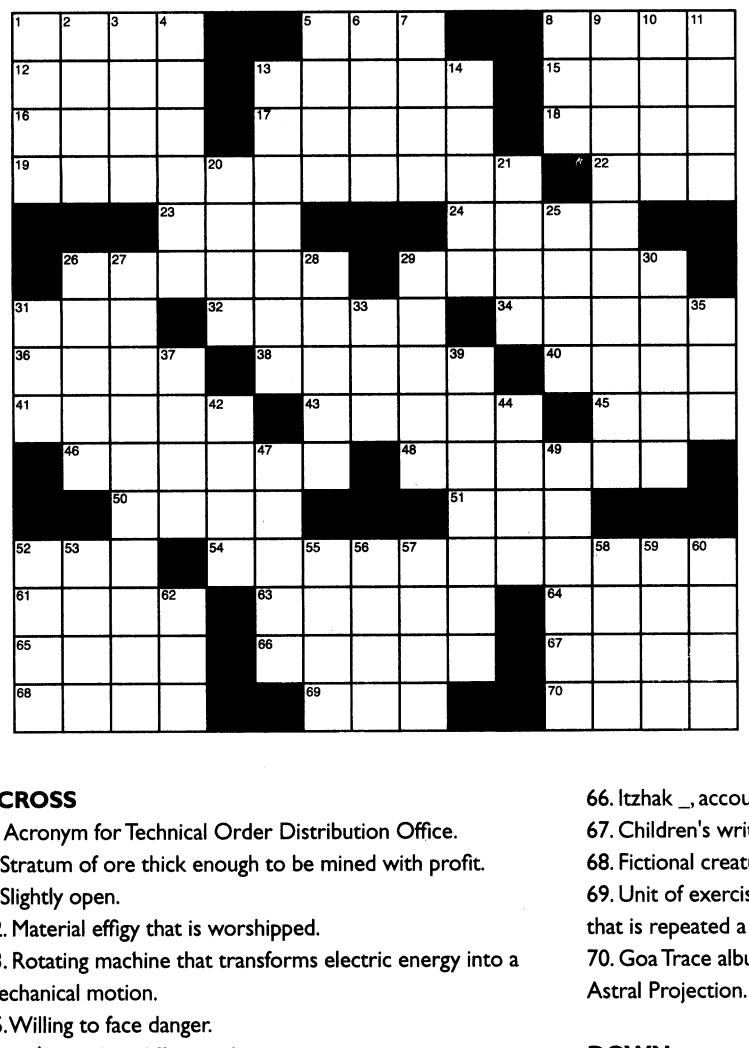
Carlos believes Simon is making everything up for attention, but Laura becomes convinced that something terrible is lurking in the old house.

The Orphanage is rated R for disturbing content.

ALSO PLAYING

ONE MISSED CALL

Beth Raymond (Shannyn Sossamon) is traumatized when she witnesses the gruesome deaths of two friends just days apart.



She knows both of them received cell phone messages days before they died that were recordings of their last moments.

The police think Beth is delusional. Only Detective Jack Andrews (Edward Burns), whose own sister was killed in a freak accident that bears a strange similarity to the deaths of Beth's friends, believes her.

Together, Jack and Beth work to unravel the mystery behind the calls, but then Beth receives a missed call.

One Missed Call is rated PG-13 for violence, terror, frightening images, sexual material and thematic elements.

92nd Military Police Battalion returns

MPs trained Iraqi police during 15 months in Iraq

THE BAYONET
Bridgett Siter

Fifteen months seems like forever when you're 6 years old and waiting for someone you love to return from war. So what's 15 minutes more?

At a quarter after midnight Sunday, hordes of friends and Families stood and waited anxiously for the Soldiers of the 92nd Military Police Battalion to enter Freedom Hall at Lawson Army Airfield, where their plane, which had been delayed and diverted from Maine to Texas, had touched down a half hour before. They'd march through that door very soon.

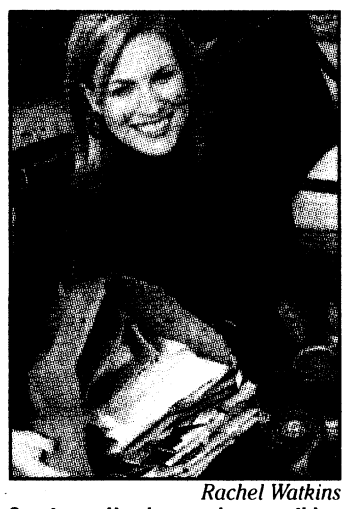
Hmm, any minute now.

Six-year-old Te'a Russ was as anxious as anybody to see her favorite Aunt Tee, Warrant Officer Vivical Grate. But she made good use of the wait. She practiced cartwheels.

The Louisiana first-grader, who started first grade and learned to read while her aunt was away, said Aunt Tee "is going to be proud that I'm very smart."

Grate was one of 69 Soldiers to return from 15 months in Iraq, where the unit, led by Col. Leonard Cosby and Command Sgt. Maj. Patrick Dawson, supported a variety of line companies responsible for training members of the Iraqi police and providing security in the Anbar Province.

The 92nd was stationed at Camp Liberty in a volatile area of Baghdad.



"You've been a part of one of the most difficult combat missions in the history of our nation," said Fort Benning's deputy commander, Col. Lloyd Miles, who spoke briefly to the Soldiers

Meet our Hometown Hero

Puckett was the captain of his West Point boxing team.

THE BAYONET

The inscription on Ralph Puckett's West Point class ring reads "Air Force." By the summer of his senior year at the academy, it was a done deal; Puckett would accept an Air Force commission and fulfill his dream of becoming a fighter pilot.

Naturally, he looked forward to visiting five Air Force installations with his classmates that summer, as West Point senior cadets did every year. Along the way, they'd also pay at visit to Fort Bragg, N.C.

Five Air Force bases and one Army post — ironically, the odds were stacked against the Air Force. The 82nd Airborne so impressed Puckett he changed his mind about the Air Force.

"Those paratroopers were the most impressive thing I'd ever seen," he said.

"They were perfect. I wanted to be just like them."

But Puckett was committed to the Air Force, and only one thing would keep him out. Aviators must have perfect vision.

He failed the eye exam.

"I never, ever regretted it. The Infantry was always my second choice, and I never regretted it," he said.

Retired Col. Ralph Puckett is this month's Hometown Hero. See C4.

AVOID STICKER SHOCK

Auto decal requirements will be updated Feb. 1

THE BAYONET
Cheryl Rodewig

Vehicles without a legible, current DoD decal on the front window will be unable to enter post starting Feb. 1.

Officers at access control points must be able to read the decal to identify the vehicle, said Capt. Jessica Blaisdell, Fort Benning criminal intelligence officer. Faded, frayed or expired stickers must be replaced. Security officers at the access control points began passing out letters Wednesday to explain the requirements.

Motorists may experience a temporary delay at the gates, and there will be longer lines at the vehicle registration center, Blaisdell said.

Jim Webster, Fort Benning's vehicle registration supervisor, said he will increase staffing at the registration center as needed. Drivers getting new decals should have their license, current registration and insurance and ID card with them to help the process move quickly.

"The goal is to get folks to do this before we have to start turning them around," Webster said.

The vehicle registration center, Building 2672, is located on Benning Road across from the cemetery and is open from 7:30 a.m. to 5:50 p.m.

Fort Benning community members heard Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.'s speech I Have a Dream Jan. 17 in Marshall Auditorium during a commemorative service in King's honor.

Spivey Green, a supply technician from C Company, 3rd Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment, recited a portion of King's speech, which he first heard when he was 8. He has been performing it for 12 years.

"The reason I still do the speech is simply because it still applies today, which really boils down to 'treating folks fairly,'" Green said.

Col. Keith Lovejoy, garrison commander, said King served as the conscience for the nation, and his words continue to inspire courage, humility and compassion.

"Much like Dr. King, our Soldiers are fighting every day so that others may live in a world where they are not judged by the color of their skin nor their religious beliefs, but for the content of their character," Lovejoy said.

Lovejoy introduced the guest speaker, Ken Hudson, as someone who is

COMMANDER'S COLUMN

Fort Benning trains combat ready leaders to win the Global War on Terrorism

COMMANDING GENERAL
Maj. Gen. Walter Wojdakowski

The U.S. Army Infantry Center and the 192nd Infantry Brigade provide trained and ready combat leaders and Soldiers to win the Global War on Terrorism. To produce the most confident and capable Soldiers and leaders possible, we have improved our training techniques, equipment and facilities. These improvements help our leaders use innovative approaches in planning, resourcing and executing tough, realistic training. Our growing and adaptive organization is perfectly postured to meet the emerging challenges of the current and future conflicts even as we transition Fort Benning into the Maneuver Center of Excellence.

Our leaders incorporate many important training innovations in the virtual environment to improve the quality and realism of training. The training battalions link a robust cultural awareness program that gives Soldiers critical skills such as Arabic number identification and basic Arabic communications phrases with realistic virtual training using the Engagement Skills Trainer (EST) 2000 and the Virtual Interactive Combat Environment (VICE) trainer.

The sophistication and realism provided by merging these training systems into virtual reality optimizes the training benefit to Soldiers and leaders. It improves their confidence, awareness of the contemporary operational environment (COE), and technical competence while maximizing the use of available time and resources. Following this instruction, Soldiers and leaders are better prepared to meet the challenges they face during subsequent live-fire training.

Improving Basic Rifle Marksmanship instruction has also improved Soldiers' confidence and weapons handling skills. Linked with the range improvements recently made at Pierce, Malone MOUT, and Babin ranges for Buddy Team and Convoy Live Fire training, our leaders have enhanced training realism dramatically. This gives each Soldier the opportunity to experience complex challenges before facing combat for the first time.

The Warrior Tasks and Battle Drills continue to be the standards, goals, and benchmarks by which we measure progress. How well Soldiers perform is a direct reflection of how well our leaders train them. It is our leaders, having adapted to the challenges of the current conflict, who continue to plan, resource, execute and evaluate this training to ensure combat readiness. Our leader development programs focus on improving training management and giving leaders the skills and confidence needed to teach and execute innovative training.

These current training methods have moved us away from an assembly line mass production type environment to one focused on achieving the required outcomes of a combat ready Soldier and leader. Innovation in our Army relies on a core of key leaders who embrace and implement a strong vision for change. We have that vision in the 192nd Infantry Brigade and at the future Maneuver Center of Excellence. We will continue to foster innovative trainers who are the determined and competent caretakers of our Army's future. I am proud of you for what you do every day to make this innovative training happen on Fort Benning.

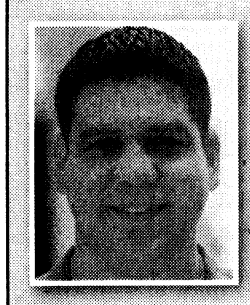
OPINION

VARIOUS VOICES

What is the most interesting thing you know about Fort Benning?

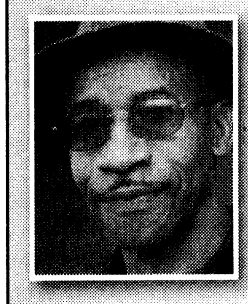


They have the Infantry Warfighting Conference. That's very interesting. A bunch of vendors show up here, and they all set up booths, and you can see all the latest products.

— Senior Officer Candidate Nathan McEwen
3rd Battalion (OSC), 11th Infantry Regiment

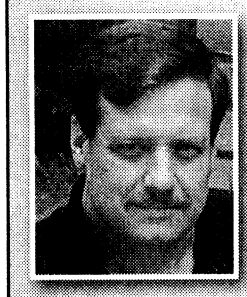
I think it's neat that they used to have polo fields. They had so many horses, so they had regular polo matches. I found that out when I was looking through the old Bayonets.

— Teri Boscia
Donovan Research Library reference librarian



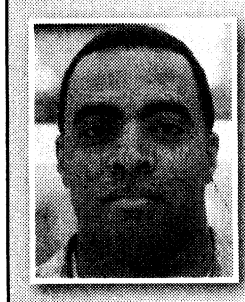
The jump towers, because they're something you can see from anywhere. It looks exciting. Hopefully, I'll jump from them within a month.

— 2nd Lt. Jorg Damiani
2nd Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment



What I think is really unique is the work that the CONUS Replacement Center does. All the people who get deployed from here, go through there. They have a huge mission, and they get it done.

— Sgt. 1st Class Cynthia Salinas-Skahan
CONUS Replacement Center



All the extra things you can do. For example, the archery ranges, all the hunting and fishing that you have, bowling, the physical fitness center where you can work out and swim: things like that. It's really great.

— Jerry Fields
retired sergeant first class

There are a lot of interesting, trivial things about Fort Benning. We had a train that connected us with the Chattahoochee Valley and Columbus. It ran from the end of World War I to the end of World War II, and one of those original trains is over at the museum.

— David Stieghan
Infantry Branch Historian

The movie We Were Soldiers was filmed here. I watched the movie, and when I saw the jump towers, I recognized the location. A lot of times military movies are filmed at Fort Benning, and you don't know until you see the jump towers in the background.

— Sgt. 1st Class Rodrick Hodges
6th Ranger Training Battalion

American Soldier remains nation's ultimate weapon

ARMY NEWS SERVICE
Lt. Col. Christopher S. Vanek

Now in its seventh year, the Global War on Terrorism is producing a new generation of American Soldiers.

These Soldiers are the first in two generations to know nothing but continuous conflict.

They face alternating tours of combat operations against vicious, elusive foes, and hectic periods of refit and training to prepare for the next deployment.

Events in the rural farming district surrounding the city of Hawijah in northern Iraq are typical of the environment these Soldiers are molded by.

The norm here has been characterized by daily attacks against Coalition Forces, Iraqi Security Forces, Government of Iraq employees, and any citizen that stands in the way of an Islamic State of Iraq.

In a district riddled with violence, another generation of American Soldiers are proving their ability to adapt and succeed.

Capt. Jon Anderson is among the vanguard of this new generation of American Soldiers.

He began his training in the Army's Reserve Officer Training Corps. Upon commissioning in the spring of 2003, Anderson completed a series of Infantry training courses, culminating with the rigorous U.S. Army Ranger School.

Now entering his fifth year of active-duty service, Anderson finds himself on a second combat deployment of more than a year. On this tour, he commands 100 young men of D Company, 1st Battalion, 87th Infantry, and has responsibility for security across 300 square miles of towns, farms, open desert and mountains.

It is in this obscure place that Anderson has epitomized the best attributes of his peers. His psyche impressed by the loss of his own first commander, Capt. Joel Cahill, in an IED attack in 2005, one could understand if Anderson focused his efforts completely on lethal destruction of the insurgency in his area of responsibility.

Instead, he has balanced his efforts between combating insurgents and restoring hope to the civilian population.

Recently, he devoted his personal efforts to help the mayor of Riyahd — the largest town in his area of operations — to get prosthesis for a leg lost years ago to an improvised explosive device.

This humanitarian act was a clear contrast with those of the insurgents who had attempted to assassinate the mayor.

It is this ever-changing blend of charity toward the innocent, and toughness in the face of the enemies that hide among them, that Anderson has mastered.

While the formative professional experiences of Anderson and his peers differ from the previous generation of serving officers, there remains a strong thread of continuity with the Army's oldest traditions.

Foremost among those is a determination to never accept defeat on the battlefield. This coupled with a magnanimity that has allowed this nation to turn bitter conflict into a sustainable and just peace before.

These qualities are what will continue to make American Soldiers the ultimate instrument of their nation's power to sustain its own cherished values and extend its benefits to others.

Editor's note: Lt. Col. Christopher S. Vanek commands the 1st Battalion, 87th Regiment of the 1st Brigade, 10th Mountain Division.

This week in Fort Benning history

1931

•Uncle Frank Smith, a colored tenant living on a farm near the eastern boundary of the post, was pictured in the newspaper with a forked stick.

Smith was noted throughout the local countryside as a "water witch." Local farmers called on Smith to find hidden veins of water when their wells ran dry.

How did he do it? According to the news account, Smith held the forked stick, a divining rod, of sorts, above his head and walked slowly. When he approached an underground water source, the stick would twist and point downward.

A skeptical Capt. Wild Bill Tuttle, Fort Benning's provost marshal, challenged Smith to prove himself. Smith did him one better. He took Tuttle and another Soldier, an engineer, out for a demonstration and gave each man a shot at the "witch stick."

Sure enough, it worked.

Try as they might, neither man could control the stick. But when it plunged toward the ground, they found water under the surface.

• One Soldier was killed when a twister wreaked havoc on Fort Benning Sunday night. Damage to the post was estimated at $100,000. Hundreds of trees were toppled and several homes damaged.

Some retirees and Family members of active duty service members can receive free eye exams every two years, and others can get free yearly exams, said Joan Herman, chief of managed care at Martin Army Community Hospital.

All Tricare Prime enrollees, 3 years and older, can receive a free exam, including screening for visual acuity and glaucoma, every two years.

These exams can be important for a patient's overall health as well as their eyesight, said Maj. Vasilios P. Lazo, chief of Ophthalmology at Martin Army Community Hospital.

By looking into the back of the eye, ophthalmologists can pick up on medical illnesses like high blood pressure, certain cancers and other autoimmune diseases and glaucoma, he said.

Brenda Donnell
Gilberto Drummonds, a retiree, has his eyes examined Wednesday by Maj. Vasilios P. Lazo, an ophthalmologist at Martin Army Community Hospital.

Glaucoma is the second leading cause of blindness in the world, according to the World Health Organization.

Checking for glaucoma is important to everyone because anyone can get it.

However, diabetics are at higher risk for the disease. Diabetics who are covered by Tricare Prime can receive one comprehensive eye exam yearly.

Lazos said diabetes affects small blood vessels, including the ones in the back of the eyes as well as the kidneys and heart.

Screening diabetics annually can help ophthalmologists find out if a patient has glaucoma, which can lead to blindness.

In addition to the exams for adults, infants covered by Tricare Prime are eligible for one free eye and vision screening during routine exams at birth and 6 months. They include screening for visual acuity, ocular alignment and red reflex, and an external examination for ocular abnormalities.

Tricare Standard and Extra don't cover these free eye exams for Family members or retirees. Tricare is a health care program for active-duty and retired service members and their Family members. For more information about the eye exams, call the Martin Army Community Hospital benefits advisors at 706-544-1347.

Army to retire BDUs April 30

ARMY NEWS SERVICE
Elizabeth M. Lorge

WASHINGTON — The Army's Deputy Chief of Staff for G-1 (Personnel) announced this month that the final wear-out date for the Army Battle Dress Uniform and Desert Battle Dress Uniform will be April 30.

The Army began phasing out the woodland and desert-pattered uniforms in 2004, with the debut of the digital-patterned Army Combat Uniform.

"Our Army is always looking to improve on everything we do, both on and off the battlefield," said Sgt. Maj. Katrina L. Easley, uniform policy sergeant major at G-1. "We took a look the combat usability of what was once a good uniform, and based upon feedback from the field, decided to improve it and fix the many problems reported. There were at least 20 changes made and the result is the current ACU.

"Response has been fantastic. Soldiers have adapted well to the new uniform, and they tell us they truly appreciate the improvements that were made. This uniform was designed by Soldiers for Soldiers."

All brown T-shirts, black combat boots and green and black jungle boots, woodland and desert-camouflage caps, olive-drab-green name and U.S. Army tapes, subdued-olive-green shoulder-sleeve insignias and the black rigger belt and web belt with open-faced black buckle will also become obsolete April 30.

Active-duty and reserve-component Soldiers can continue to wear the black-knit cap and the black micro-fleece-knit cap with the cold-weather woodland-camouflage field jacket until Sept. 30.

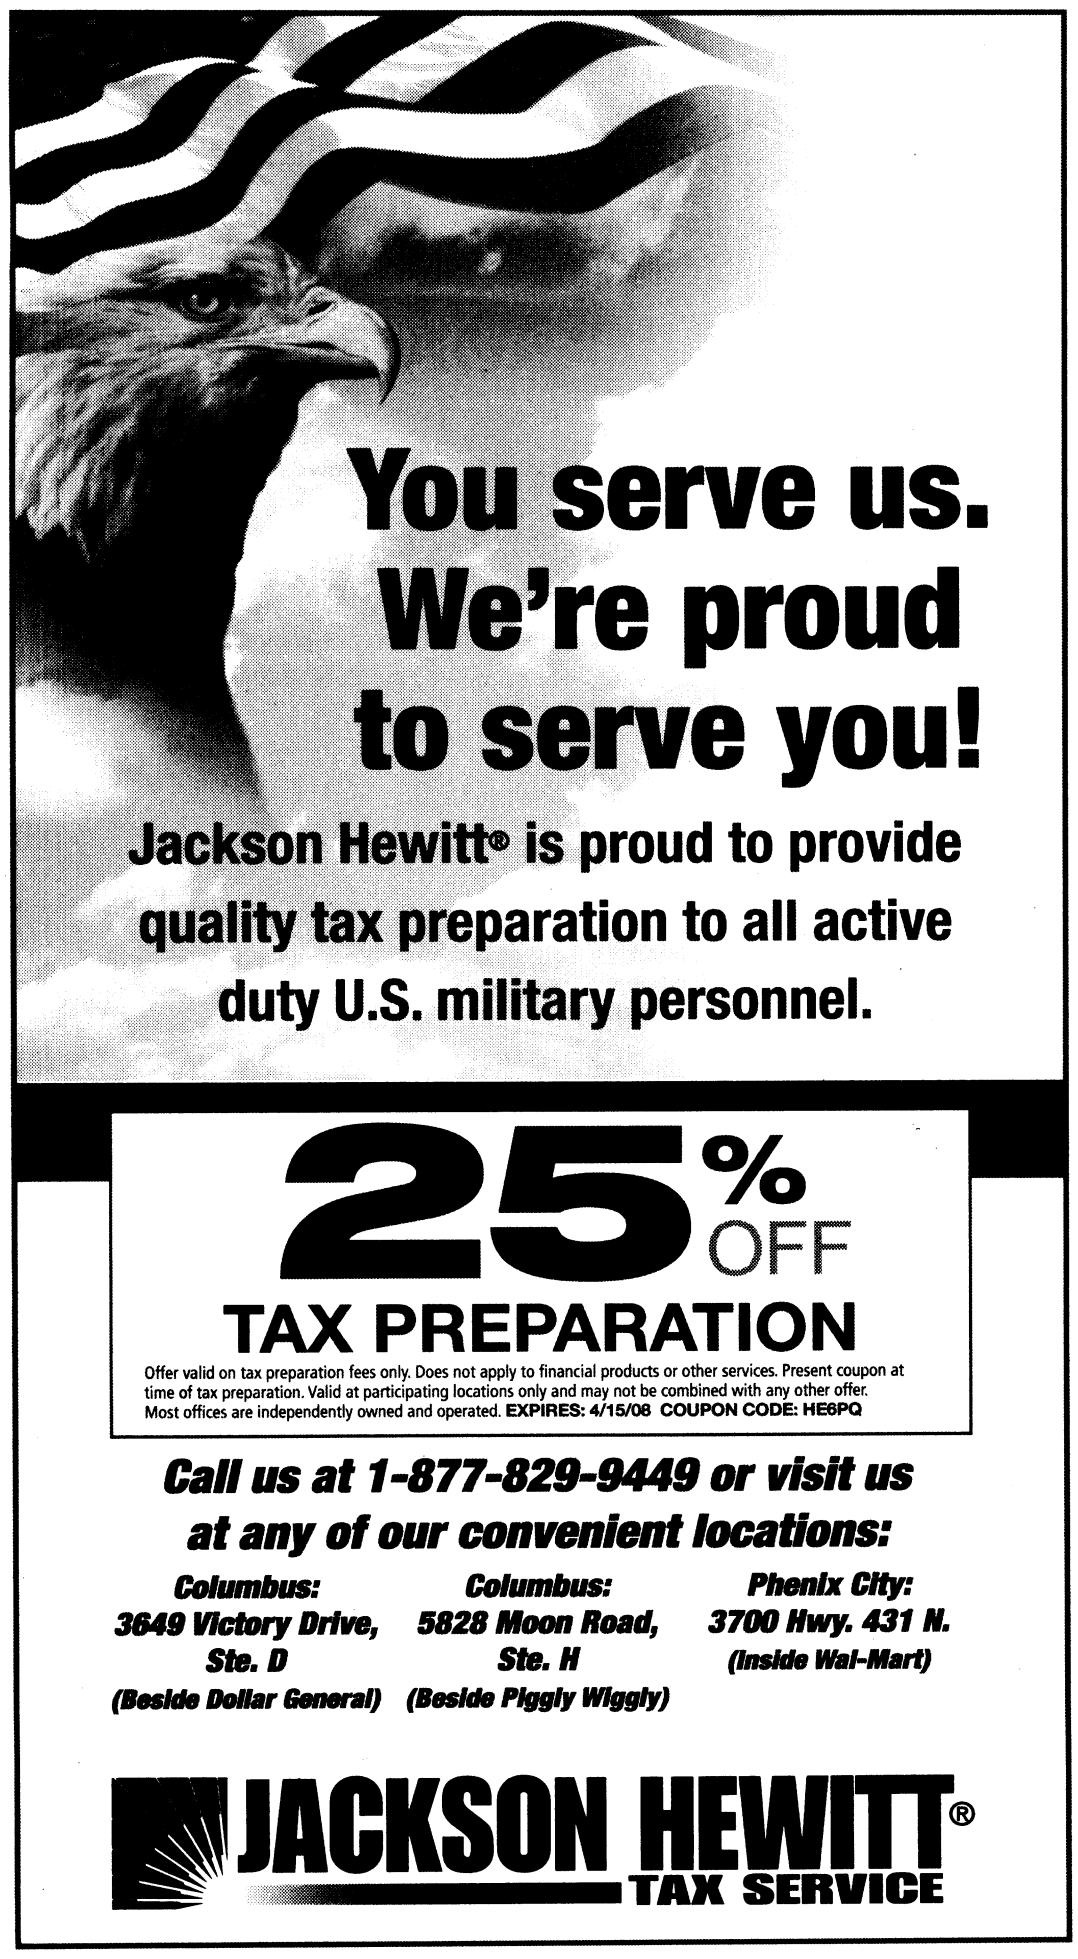
For the Army Reserve Officer Training Corps, the wear-out date for these items is April 9.

Cataract surgery may now be available for retirees

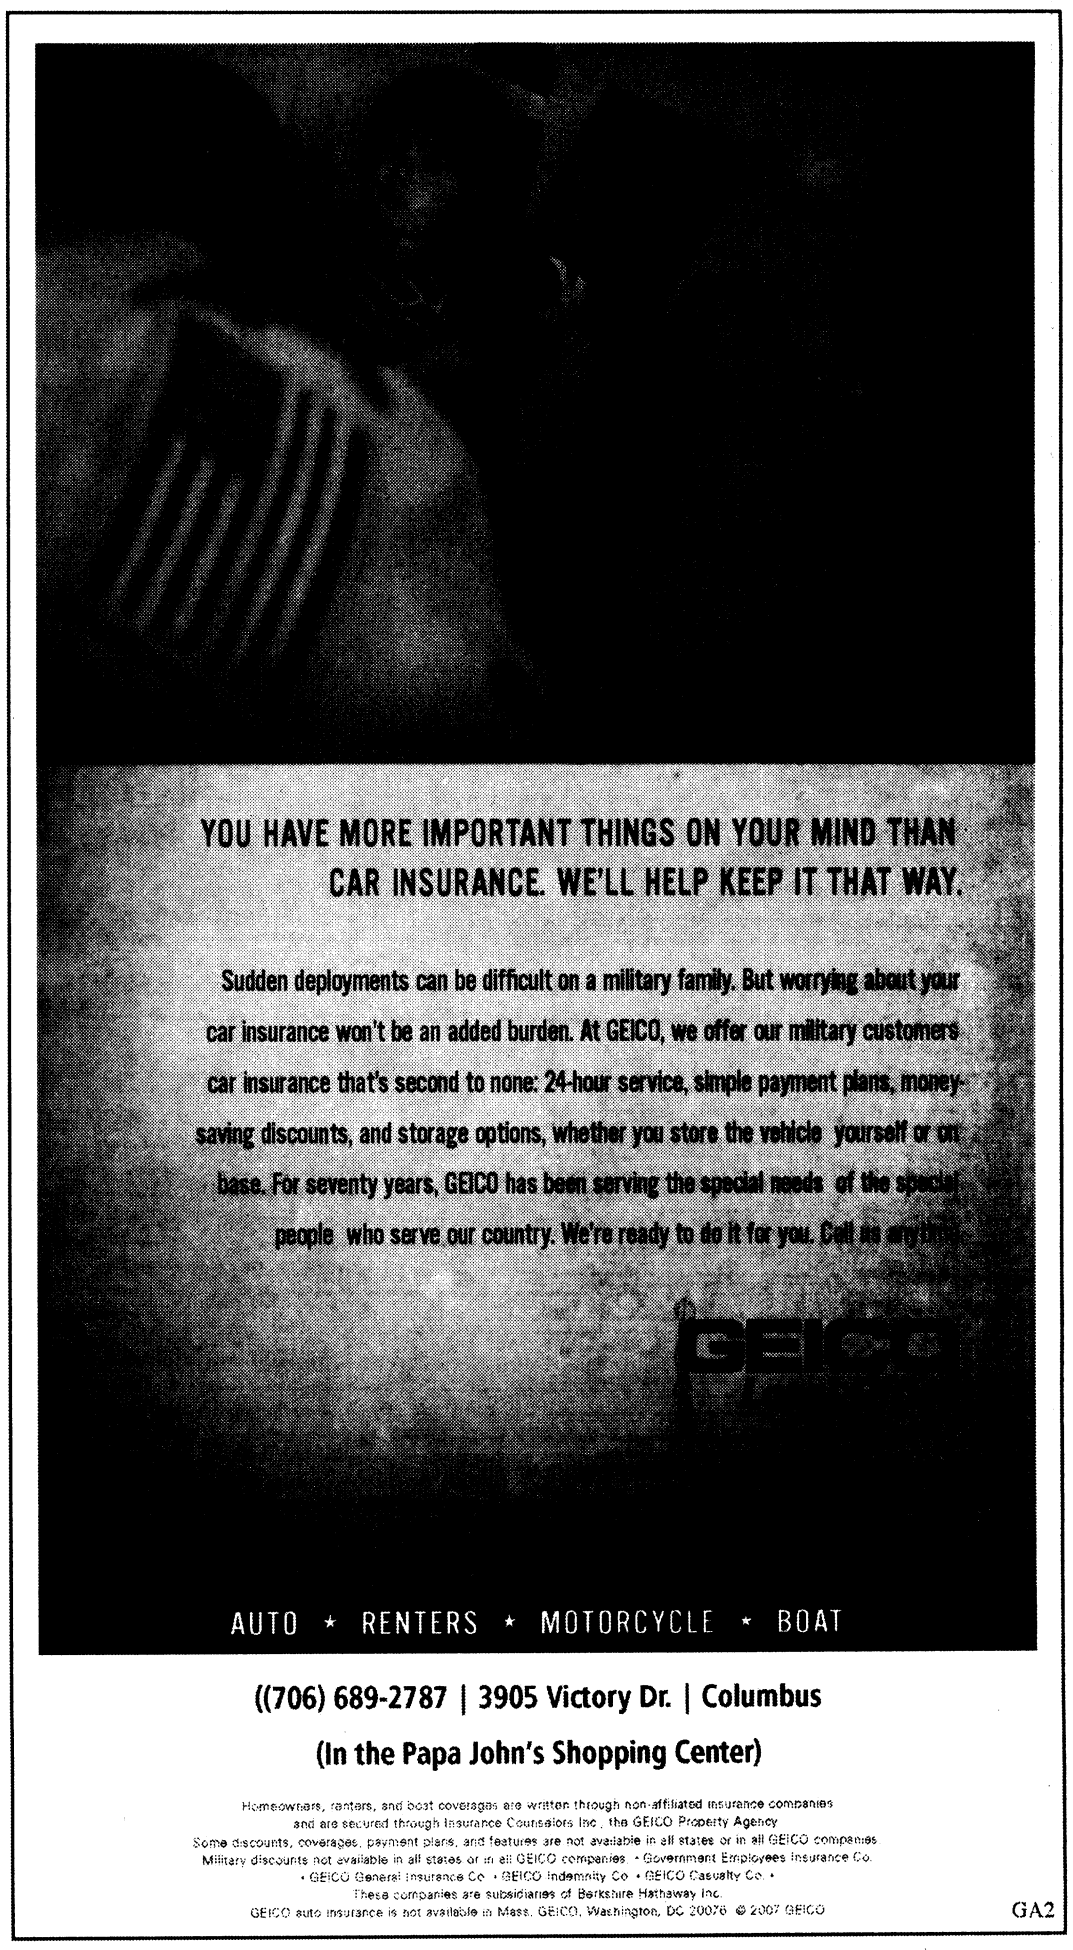
THE BAYONET
Brenda Donnell

Cataracts can be surgically corrected by ophthalmologists at Martin Army Community Hospital, said Maj. Vasilios P. Lazos, chief of Ophthalmology. Retirees, on a space available basis, are among the Tricare beneficiaries who can be evaluated and receive surgery.

The beneficiary must have a referral from his PCM to an Ophthalmologist for treatment, said Joan Herman, chief of Managed Care at Martin Army Community Hospital.



"Retirees have always been allowed to come into our clinic and be evaluated for cataracts," Lazos said. "Retirees can have their eyes evaluated for cataracts, and if they do have cataracts that are visually significant, they can have them surgically evaluated and surgically treated (here)."



Lazos and the other ophthalmologist at the hospital, Maj. Won I. Kim, have cutting-edge cataract technology available to them.

"We offer pretty much anything civilian providers can offer in terms of (prosthetic) lenses," he said. "We have the latest in lens equipment and phacoemulsification equipment for removing cataracts."

Phacoemulsification is the most common cataract surgery available, according to the Eye Surgery Education Council. It allows the surgery to be performed through a very small incision in the cornea, which means less discomfort to the patient and makes recovery faster.

Prosthetic lenses that help correct astigmatisms can be implanted after cataracts are removed, Lazos said. Other lenses can give both sharp distance and can focus somewhat up close, he said. In the past, when a prosthetic lens was inserted, the patient could only have it focused for distance or up close, so most people ended up with glasses after surgery, especially for reading small print. This lens acts similar to the patient's lens before cataract surgery.

Taxpayers crowd post Tax Center on opening day

Soldiers, retirees can save money at post Tax Center

THE BAYONET
Brenda Donnell

There were already more than a dozen Soldiers, retirees and Family members waiting to file their tax returns Wednesday at 9 a.m. as post officials held a ceremony to open Fort Benning's Tax Center.

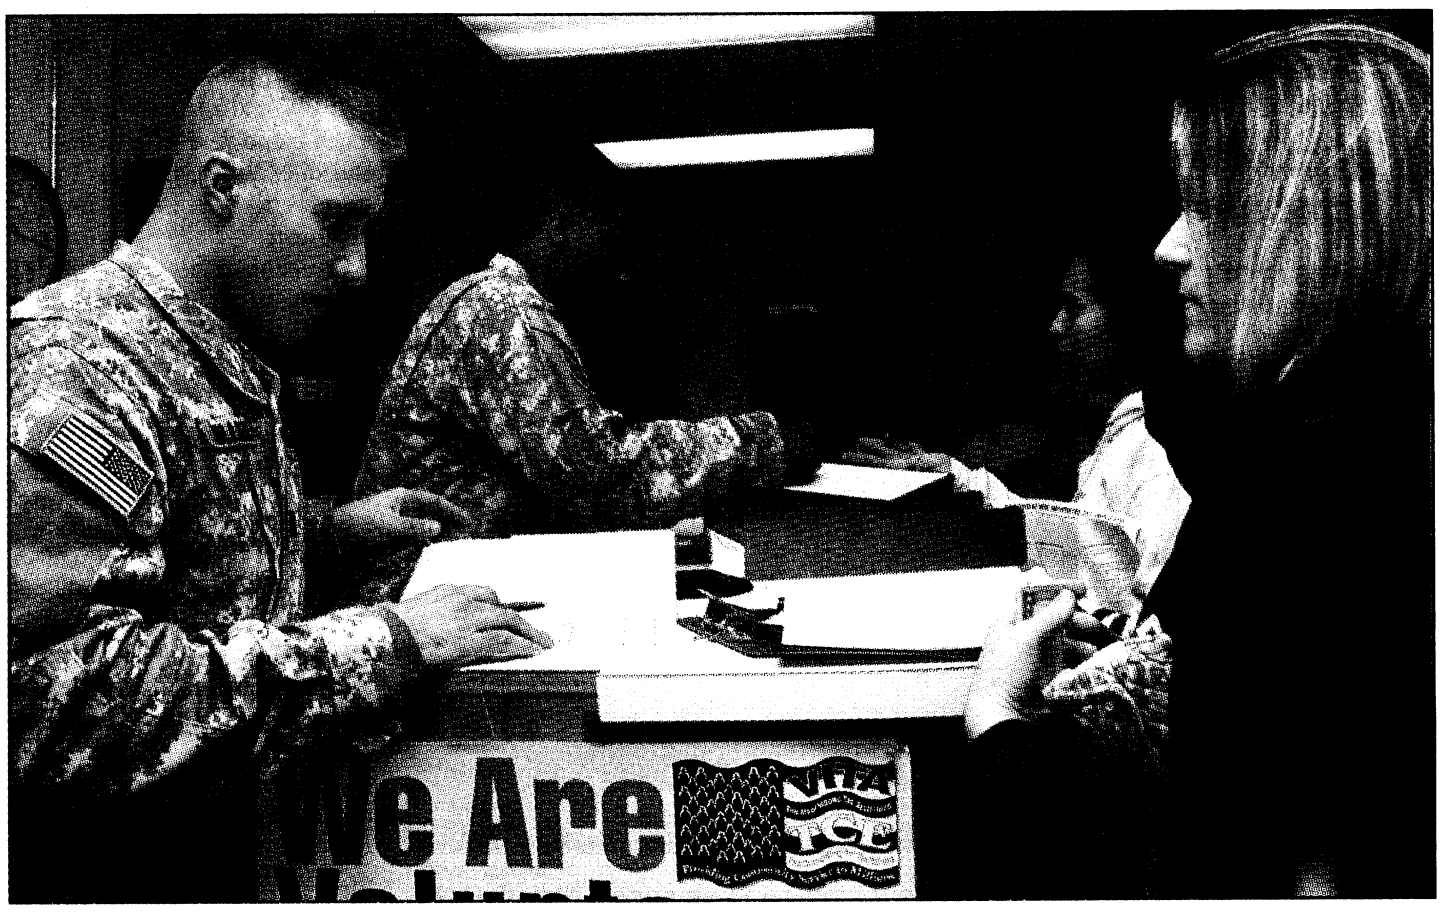
Maj. Charles and Kelly Price said they use the Tax Center because of the ease and convenience, and it's free. They have had their taxes prepared at post tax centers for the last nine years.

Others had different reasons for using the Tax Center.

"The main reason we come is that it's a safe way to file taxes rather than putting your personal information in the mail," said Regina Price, who is married to a veteran. "It's the safest way to file, and the quickest way to get your refund."

Capt. Benjamin Hillner, Tax Center officer-in-charge, said Soldiers risk time and money patronizing off-post establishments that advertise quick returns, because some of the services are the equivalent of high-interest loans.

"We provide a quality, fast refund service," he said. "We can get your refund quicker than most of the places off post."



This year, clients may receive refunds even faster than last year, because tax preparers will be using a completely paperless filing system.

"Last year, clients had to sign a signature page that had to be forwarded to the IRS, which may have delayed turn around time, somewhat," Hillner said. "This year, everything is done electronically, so returns should be received as fast as ten days to two weeks, on average."

However, turn around time depends on the client and the complexity of his return, Hillner said.

About 20 tax preparers will be on hand every day, Hillner said. Half are Soldiers and half are Department of Emergency Services civilians, all temporarily assigned to the Tax Center.

Taxpayers should bring all tax documents, including W-2s, 1098 and 1099 forms; military identification cards; social security cards; and one voided check per return for direct deposit.

Brenda Donnell

Capt. Benjamin Hillner, Tax Center OiC, left, and Sgt. 1st Class Carlton Glenn, Tax Center NCOIC, assist customers Wednesday at the Tax Center. The center opened to a crowd of more than a dozen people.

Clients will be seen on a first-come, first-served basis. Office hours are Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Friday from 8:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. and from 10:30 to 6 p.m. on Thursdays. The office is closed weekends. Hours may be extended as the deadline nears. The Tax Office is located in Building 1678, Room G131 in the Garrison Activity Center behind the Follow Me Chapel on Ingersoll Street. For more information, call 706-545-4267.

Recycling: Centers posted around Fort Benning

manager at Fort Benning.

Head makes weekly trips to the recycling trailers on post where she recycles glass (clear, brown, green), plastic, newspaper, paper, cardboard packaging and aluminum and soup cans.

Head's interest in recycling started when her first child, Peyton, was born in 2006. After thinking about how many baby jars and diapers she would be discarding, she decided to start.

When she started, there was curbside service, but it was replaced with recycling trailers throughout post.

Instead of increasing expenses for Fort Benning residents, the curbside service was stopped and recycling trailers were placed throughout post, Morpeth said.

The curbside service was costing Fort Benning $200,000 a year, Morpeth said.

There are currently five locations around post that have recycling trailers: the driver registration parking lot, the Soldiers' Plaza parking lot, the Infantry Museum parking lot on 1st Division Road, the Gowdy Field parking lot and behind Building 8 on Indianhead Road. Morpeth said she hopes to add more trailers in Kelley Hill, Sand Hill and by Infantry Hall.

> "If everybody could just put a little in the recycling bin, it would add up to a lot."
> — Courtney Head

Head said it takes more effort to go to the trailers than the curbside service, but she said it's worth it. She hopes to teach her 1-year-old about recycling when he is old enough to learn.

Recycling at Fort Benning

There are recycle trailers at five locations around post: the driver registration parking lot: the Soldiers' Plaza parking lot, the Infantry Museum parking lot on 1st Division Road, the Gowdy Field parking lot and behind Building 8 on Indianhead Road.

Items that can be recycled at Fort Benning include:

- Glass — clear, brown or green
- Plastic — plastic items contain a number surrounded by a recycle sign. Fort Benning will accept numbers 1 to 6. The lower the number is, the better.

These items include laundry or dish detergent containers, bleach, milk, shampoo, conditioner and motor oil containers, cooking oil bottles, coffee containers, soda and water bottles, grocery and sandwich bags, diapers and syrup bottles.

- Newspapers
- Aluminum and tin cans, including soda, soup, vegetable and fruit cans.
- Paper and cardboard boxes, including cardboard boxes, magazines, and computer paper.

before they were released to join their Families. "I know you've seen some horrible things. But remember, the horrors don't tell the whole story.

"You changed Iraq for the better, and you have been changed yourself," Miles said.

Capt. Kevin Pelley, who commands the battalion's Headquarters Detachment, said the Soldiers would participate in seven days of redeployment training before being released for 30 days of leave.

"That does two things," Pelley said. It gives us, as leaders, a chance to ... get in touch with each of them on a personal level and make sure they're readjusting to life back here. We can offer help if they need it through any one of the many resources the Army and Fort Benning have to help them adjust and reaclimate.

"Then comes block leave," he said. "We make sure they get up to 30 days to decompress, without any military duties or responsibilities."

Before the Soldiers were released Sunday to join their Families, they paused to honor Cpl. Michelle Ring, 24, who died July 5 from wounds she suffered during a mortar attack. The Tennessee native and mother of two was the battalion's only fatality.

dedicated to making a difference in the lives of others.

Hudson was one of the first two black National Basketball Association referees from 1968 to 1972. He was also an executive with Coca-Cola for 22 years and is an inspirational speaker and longtime youth mentor.

Hudson recalled hearing King speak at his college graduation from Central State University in Ohio, and meeting King in Boston during a march. He said King left an impression on him that will last his lifetime.

"To see where we have come, from that point in time, has been very meaningful and tells us we're on the right road, and I'm excited about what the future has to offer," he said.

It was Hudson's first visit to a military installation, and he said he was proud to speak to service members.

"You, too, are called to make sacrifices, to be away from your Families, spouses, children and parents for long periods of time as you make the world safe for democracy," he said. "Just as Dr. King's fight called for extraordinary personal courage, you, too, must be courageous."

Also during the observance, Faith Middle School Drama Club members presented a skit to the crowd, and the Faith Middle School Chorus performed the national anthem and Lift Every Voice and Sing.

Soldiers with suicidal thoughts can find help on post

Counseling available through military or free, private sessions

THE BAYONET
Brenda Donnell

In a report released this summer, officials said 99 Soldiers took their own lives in 2006, the highest number of suicides in the Army since 1980.

The report was compiled by the Suicide Risk Management and Surveillance Office at Madigan Army Medical Center, Fort Lewis, Wash.

Reasons for the suicides ranged from financial problems to previous mental illnesses, according to the information provided by units throughout the Army. Participation in direct combat and failed marital relationships were other reported reasons.

Regardless of why someone contemplates suicide, there are options available at Fort Benning for Soldiers and leaders seeking help.

Chaplains are on call 24 hours a day, seven days a week, and the Office of the Chief of Chaplains policy guarantees absolute confidentiality, said Chaplain (Lt. Col.) Thomas Waynick, U.S. Army Family Life Chaplain Training Program director.

The chaplain's role is to assist and intervene, and intervention at the time of contemplation is very important, Waynick said, because most people just want someone to talk to who can help them through that period of depression.

"The reality is if they are coming to talk to you, there is a part of them that wants to live, and we work with that part," Waynick said. "Even the strongest person, given the right circumstances, can lose hope, and we need to be there for each other in those times when things seem hopeless."

However, treatment is left to health care professionals who assess and treat, he said.

At Martin Army Community Hospital, most patients who want to talk about suicidal feelings are referred by primary care providers or request an appointment themselves, said Maj. Melissa A. Messina, a psychiatrist and chief of the Department of Behavioral Health. Occasionally, under certain circumstances, a commander may refer a Soldier for a mental health evaluation.

Those who attempt suicide and are taken to Martin Army Community Hospital are evaluated to ensure their immediate medical needs are met. After that, counseling services are arranged, either on an outpatient or inpatient basis, or both, depending on the situation.

Patient privacy and confidentiality are of utmost importance to the Department of Behavioral Health staff, Messina said.

Only under very strict circumstances will a mental health provider speak with a Soldier's commander without the Soldier's consent, and this is generally only if there is an immediate concern for a suicidal act, she said.

Some of the counseling services available at the hospital are only available to active duty members, said Messina. However, if Family members or retirees need services that hospital staff are unable to provide, a referral will be made to the local Tricare network.

Yvonne Wilbanks, Fort Benning installation suicide prevention manager, said Fort Benning has a Suicide Prevention Task Force that includes Messina; garrison Chaplain (Lt. Col.) Ronald Smith; Rebecca Welch, Family Advocacy manager; Jim Ozley, safety specialist; Lt. Col. Willard Moore, Department of Emergency Services commander; a CID representative and Wilbanks.

The task force, a subcommittee of the Human Resource Council, was appointed by Col. Keith Lovejoy, garrison commander.

Members assists in suicide prevention efforts, she said. They also meet when there is a suspected Soldier suicide to assist the unit dealing with the tragedy, and they review the incident for lessons learned.

"Fort Benning has many people willing to help our Soldiers, Family members and civilians with their problems," Wilbanks said. "We need to continue to remember that seeking help is a sign of strength rather than weakness."

The post program was recognized last year by a special Department of the Army Inspector General inspection as the best program in the Army, said Wilbanks, who offers classes for units to help Soldiers recognize suicidal behaviors and know how to help.

Wilbanks said officials include suicide prevention as one of the staff inspection programs, insuring a standardized approach to suicide prevention, and Fort Benning leaders have implemented comprehensive suicide prevention plans.

Suicide prevention cards are available in bulk for units and can be picked up at Building 241 on Baltzell Avenue. The cards are also given to Soldiers during newcomer briefings, she said.

Australian Open

Roger Federer advanced to the Australian Open semifinals with a 7-5, 7-6 (5), 6-4 victory over James Blake Wednesday. Federer is attempting to win the Australian Open for the third straight year. Federer, 26, will play Novak Djokovic, 20, Friday in the semifinals. And the winner of that match will meet Jo-Wilfried Tsonga in the finals. Tsonga, ranked 38, dominated second-ranked Rafael Nadal in Thursday's semifinal, 6-2, 6-3, 6-2.

In the women's semifinals, No. 3 Jelena Jankovic lost to fifth-ranked Maria Sharapova, 6-3, 6-1. And fourth-ranked Ana Ivanovic lost the first eight games of her match against Daniela Hantuchova before winning, 0-6, 6-3, 6-4. Ivanovic plays Sharapova for the Grand Slam title.

PGA caddie hit by taxi

PGA Tour caddie Steve Duplantis, 35, was killed early Wednesday while crossing a street in Del Mar, Calif. He stepped off a center median and into the path of a taxi, according to the San Diego Sheriff's Department. Duplantis was working the Buick Invitational for Eric Axley. He caddied for Jim Furyk, Rich Beem and Tommy Armour III.

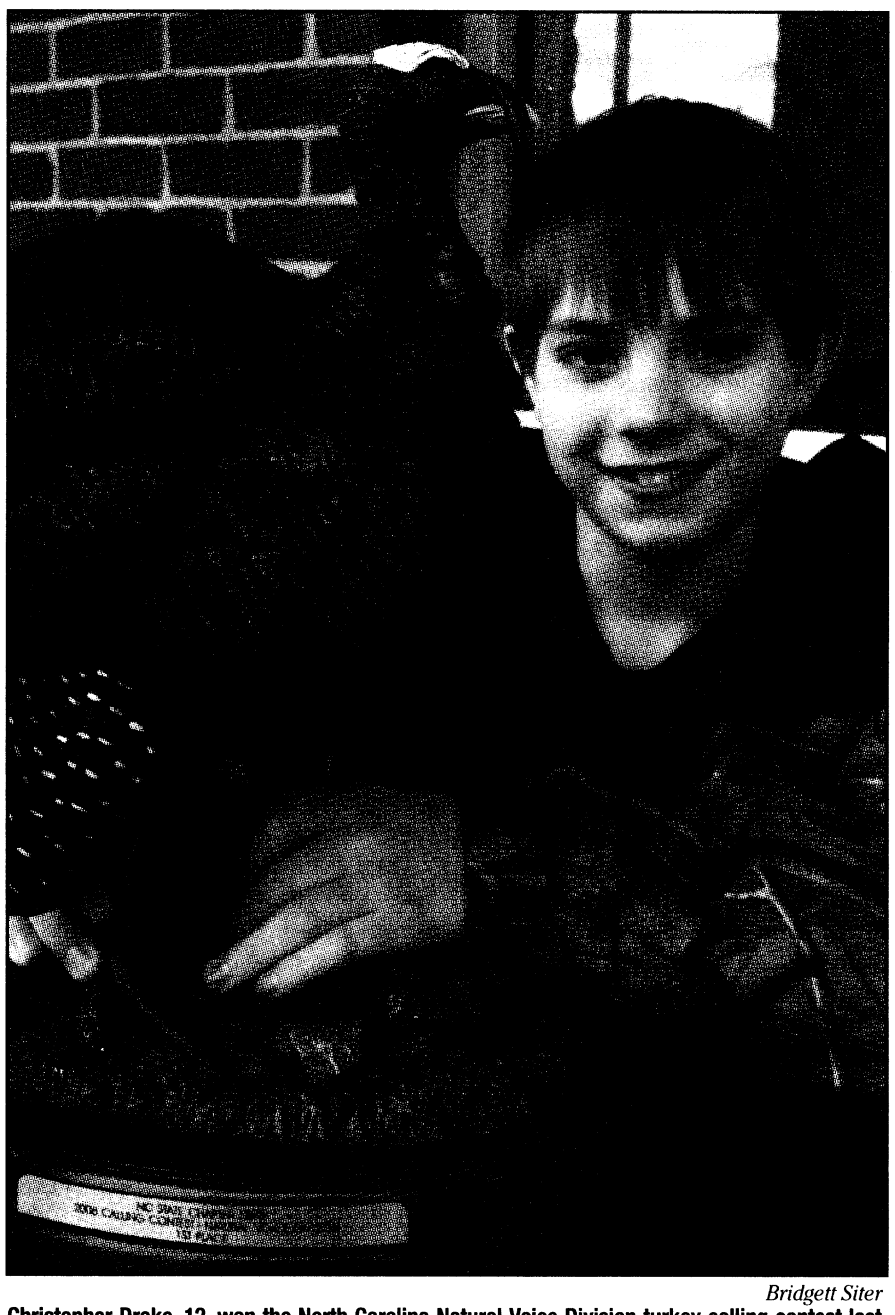
Speaking of the Buick Invitational, Tiger Woods started his past two seasons with wins there.

Falcons fire head coach

Any improvement in the Atlanta Falcons' roster can't hurt and hiring Mike Smith, the Jacksonville Jaguars defensive coordinator, as head coach after Bobby Petrino bailed is an improvement. This is Smith's first head-coaching job. The Jaguars finished 12th in total defense this season, and it seems the Falcons need a defense.

Barry Bonds wants charges dismissed

Barry Bonds was indicted for perjury and obstruction of justice after he told a grand jury that he did not knowingly use performance-enhancing drugs. Now he wants a federal judge to dismiss the perjury charges against him. Bonds' lawyers filed a motion in San Francisco federal court to dismiss the case or streamline the indictment, which cites 19 different instances of Bonds' alleged lying but only charges him with four counts of perjury and one count of obstruction.



Former NBA ref could get 25 years in prison

And in other sports news, former NBA referee Tim Donaghy is scheduled for sentencing April 18. Donaghy pleaded guilty to conspiracy to commit wire fraud and transmitting betting information across state lines. He faces up to 25 years in prison and a fine that could be $500,000.

Local boy wins turkey calling title

Local family makes calling — and winning — a wholesome tradition

THE BAYONET
Bridgett Siter

Bridgett Siter
Christopher Drake, 12, won the North Carolina Natural Voice Division turkey calling contest last weekend. Drake, the son of a Fort Benning fireman, competed against eight adults to win the title.

The experts say an individual's propensity for addiction may be genetic.

Capt. Tom Drake, of the Fort Benning Fire Department, swears turkey hunting is as addictive as any drug he's never tried, and competitive turkey calling, well it runs in his bloodline.

Just recently, his son, 12-year-old Christopher Drake, captured his third state turkey calling title. This one, the 2008 North Carolina State competition, pitted him against nine other competitors — eight of them adults — in the natural voice division.

The win puts the youngest Drake, a third-generation competitor, in a class by himself, his father said.

"This one's big. Huge. I know I couldn't do it," said Tom, who won the Georgia State calling championship three times. "My dad's got a better track record than mine, and he couldn't do it either."

Yep, Chris's grandfather is local calling legend Joe Drake, a world champion caller with a string of titles to his credit.

Calling typically involves hand-held devices called rubs or diaphragms that fit inside the mouth. It's a skill one hones through practice, Tom said. But his son's talent for natural voice calling is part gift, part skill.

Chris was attending competitions with his father and grandfather before he could walk and talk. There was never any doubt he'd take to calling. His grandfather fashioned him a diaphragm when he started competing at 6. At 7, he gave it up, because natural calling came naturally.

"But I practice all the time, anywhere and everywhere. It takes a lot of concentration, but mostly it's practice," said Chris, a sixth grader in Harris County.

Like most boys his age, Chris has diverse interests. He like's to play baseball and plans to wrestle, like his older brother Thomas, who competes at Harris County High School.

But calling is his passion, second only to hunting, and it's a passion most of his friends can't relate to.

Their response, should he try to impress them with the yelp of a fly down hen?

"They're like 'huh?' They don't get it," he said.

And that's OK, because Chris suffers no shortage of company when it's time to head to the woods at 4 a.m. on Saturday. Most all the Drakes are hunters, male and female alike.

Tom said hunting is a family legacy, and one that pays dividends beyond the occasional trophy buck or 11 and a half inch gobbler like Chris has mounted on his bedroom wall.

"It's addicting, like cocaine, but it's good for you," he said. "When I was in high school, I wasn't drinking and running the streets; I was getting out of bed early Saturday morning to go hunting with my dad. We'd go out and have a good time together, just cut up and have fun.

"I'm close to my dad and my boys are close to me because we hunt together. Your best buddies are your hunting buddies."

Chris is just as enthusiastic, if not as effusive. Turkey, deer, squirrel dove — "If it moves in the woods, he'll hunt it," his father said.

"I don't always kill something, but it's always exciting," Chris said. "Some mornings you just go out there and they're moving, and it's just great to listen. It's a great feeling."

Bayonet readers can see Chris compete at the Peach state Classic March 6, starting at 6 p.m. at the Firefighters Association Building on Lynch Road in Columbus. The $5 admission will include door prize registration.

Turkey time

For the seasoned turkey talker and the curious, there are a number of shows, competitions and banquets scheduled throughout this area. Proceeds from many of them will benefit the National Wildlife Turkey Federation, which supports Fort Benning's wildlife program by supplying funds annually for planting and seeding projects.

- Feb. 1 — The Mulberry Gobblers chapter of the NWTF will host a banquet at Butts Mill Farm in Pine Mountain, Ga. For ticket information, call 706-325-5585.
- Feb. 8-10 — The Georgia Wildlife Federation's annual Great Outdoors Show comes to Atlanta and Perry, Ga., on the same weekend.

For more information, go to www.gwf.org.

- For information about the Turkey Oak Strutters' Banquet in Buena Vista, Ga., call 229-649-2267.
- Feb. 21-24 — The NWTF's 32nd annual Convention and Sport Show will be held at the Georgia World Congress Center in Atlanta.

The show will include 545 vendors booths, calling contests, seminars, youth activities and a salute to military veterans.

Admission is $10 for adults, and children 12 and younger get in free. For more information, call 800-THE-NWTF or visit www.nwtf.org.

- Feb. 26 and March 4 — Local calling expert Joe Drake, who has held the national champion turkey caller title eight times, will host a free, two-day seminar on calling skills and ethics at the Uchee Creek Lodge, from 6 to 9 p.m. both days. Refreshments will be available.
- March 6 — The Peach State Classic calling contest will start at 6 p.m. at the Firefighters Association Building on Lynch Road in Columbus. The $5 admission will include door prize registration. For more information, call 706-681-4549.
- March 18 — The NWTF will host a banquet in LaGrange, Ga. For details, call 706-882-7650.

March 20 — The River City Gobblers will host a banquet at the FOP Lodge in Columbus.

The event will include many door prizes and drawings for guns. For more information, call 706-761-3404.

Recruiter can take a 'buck' and that's no 'bull'

ARMY NEWS SERVICE
Becky Shadowens

DENVER — Eight seconds may not seem like a long span of time — unless you are riding a 2,000-pound tornado with horns — then it feels like an eternity.

That's how Staff Sgt. David Green, an Army recruiter in Denver and a professional bull rider in three associations, describes the rodeo experience for him in a nutshell.

"The most exciting moment for me is every time I step over the chute gate," he said.

Even after bull riding for eight years, his favorite part is the feeling he gets right before he nods for the gate to open.

"After that, you hold on tight and make sure you don't slap the bull with your free hand for eight seconds," Green said.

While a wild bull is a wild bull no matter where you ride it, the most exciting chapter of Green's rodeo career has just opened as he prepares for his first Professional Bull Riders association rodeo — the Salina Invitational Discovery Tour in Salina, Kan., as an Army-sponsored rider.

"This is it," he said. "This is what I've been dreaming of my whole life."

Green has ridden in more than 30 rodeos and also currently rides for the Colorado Professional Rodeo Association and the Professional Team Bull Riders.

"The only awards I have won are a few bucks," he said — although it's hard to tell which kind of 'buck' he is referring to.

And a price he paid was having his forearm break in half during one ride.

"The bull jumped on his front end and I leaned over...when I did my arm went down on my thigh and I snapped it in half," he said. "The doctors had to put a rod through the middle of it and a screw on each end."

But, being a Soldier, he didn't let that get in his way.

"He's one of the craziest people I know," said Staff Sgt. Jerome Davis, a recruiter who works with Green and has been to several of his rides. "You see what they go through, and it's wild."

Being a Soldier also helps Green with bull riding "because all the physical training we do helps to us stay in shape and keeps us flexible," he said.

The camaraderie of being in the Army has spurred him on too.

"My company and station have raised money for me to ride in a couple of events so people around our area can see that the Army does have a rodeo team," he said.

A couple of Soldiers in Green's station in Denver on the Auraria Campus go out of their way to make it to all of his events, he said — "others just say I'm crazy."

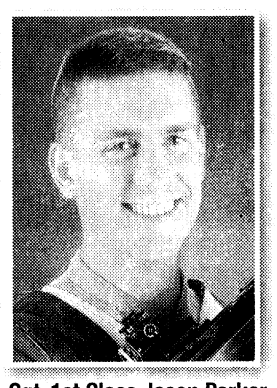
AMU sets sights on 2008 Olympics

U.S. ARMY MARKSMANSHIP UNIT
Paula J. Randall

With only 204 days before the Olympics, the sports world now turns its focus to the Summer Olympic Games, which will be conducted in Beijing, China, in August.

Eight Soldiers of the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit returned from the Athens Olympics in 2004 with memories, memorabilia and a medal, and there are eight USAMU Soldiers who will be vying for a spot on the 2008 U.S. Olympic Airgun Shooting Team.

There will be four male rifle shooters, two female rifle shooters and two male pistol shooters.



USA Shooting, the national governing body for Olympic Shooting Sports in the United States, will be conducting the Airgun Olympic Selection Matches March 1 to 3 at the Olympic Training Center in Colorado Springs, Colo., in order to fill five slots on the 2008 U.S. Shooting

Sgt. 1st Class Jason A. Parker, 33, and Sgt. 1st Class Daryl L. Szarenski, 39, each competed in his second Olympics in 2004.

"The Olympic competition experience gave me the confidence to shoot good scores anywhere in the world," Parker said.

"The highlight was making the Olympic finals and the Opening Ceremony was a wonderful experience — all of the U.S. athletes were excited to walk into the stadium. Becoming an Olympian had been a dream of mine since I was a teenager, and the Army gave me everything I needed to attain this goal. I couldn't be where I am today without the Army and the Army Marksmanship Unit; they provided every resource I needed to be where I'm at."

Parker said he tells young people who want to make it to the Olympics that they can acheive their dream by making a plan and sticking to it, as long as they are disciplined and work diligently.

Sgt. 1st Class Jason Parker

"Becoming an Olympian had been a dream of mine since I was a teenager, and the Army gave me everything I needed to attain this goal."
— Sgt. 1st Class Jason Parker

"It is better to compete and lose than to be afraid of losing and never trying."
— Sgt. 1st Class Daryl Szarenski

Sgt. 1st Class Daryl Szarenski

"I will train harder and smarter to be at my peak performance at the 2008 Olympics," Parker said.

Parker, an Infantryman from Omaha, Neb., finished in fifth place in Air Rifle in the 2000 Olympics, barely missing a medal by seven-tenths of a point, and ended up in eighth place overall in Air Rifle in 2004 — less than three points away from a medal.

The Soldier and his wife, Andrea, live in Fortson, Ga., with their two sons, Tommy and Wyatt.

Szarenski, of Saginaw, Mich., took 13th place in Air Pistol in 2004. He competed in something other than Air Pistol in the 2000 Olympics.

Despite his disappointing finish in 2004, Szarenski has plans for this year's Olympics.

"It is better to compete and lose than to be afraid of losing and never trying," Szarenski said.

But now, the Infantryman said he is solely focused on winning the elusive Olympic Gold Medal.

Szarenski and his wife, Amy, a former USAMU international pistol shooter, live in Seale, Ala., with their two children, Hannah and Luke.

Other USAMU Soldiers who will be competing in the Airgun Olympic Trials are 1st Lt. Lucas F. Leinberger of Linn, Mo., Sgt. Henry L. Gray of Belgrade, Mont., and Spc. David R. Sprecher of Tarpon Springs, Fla., competing in Men's Air Rifle.

Sgt. Kelly A. Dove of Comer, Ga., and Spc. Nicole N. Cooper of Kearney, N.J., will compete in Women's Air Rifle. Sgt. 1st Class Thomas A. Rose of Central Point, Ore., will compete in Men's Air Pistol.

The trials will consist of three days of Air Rifle and Air Pistol competitions followed by a finals shot by the top eight shooters.

The Olympic Team selection will be based upon the aggregate of the scores from the three courses of fire and the two highest finals.

The rest of the U.S. Shooting Team will be selected at upcoming selection matches.

The Fort Benning selection match will be May 12 to 22. It will cover Three Position Rifle, Men's Prone Rifle, Men's Free Pistol, Women's Sport Pistol and Men's Rapid Fire Pistol.

An earlier selection match will be March 8 to 16 in Kerrville, Texas, for Men's and Women's Trap and Skeet and Men's Double Trap.

Formed in 1956 by President Dwight D. Eisenhower to raise the standards of marksmanship throughout the U.S. Army, the Army Marksmanship Unit is assigned to the Accessions Support Brigade of the U.S. Army Accessions Command.

The Marksmanship Unit trains its Soldiers to win competitions and enhances combat readiness through train-the-trainer clinics, research and development.

For more information on the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit, contact the USAMU Public Affairs Office at 706-545-5436 or Paula.Randall@usaac.army.mil, or visit www.USAMU.com.

USA Shooting is recognized by the U.S. Olympic Committee and the International Shooting Sport Federation as the national governing body for the Olympic and international shooting sports in the United States.

FIT FACTS

Ways to stay motivated

MWR FITNESS DIRECTOR
Lori Smith

Week four of the New Year, and I hope this article still finds everyone feeling good, and staying on track with your healthy New Year.

If you feel like you're beginning to lose sight of your goal, getting a little bored with your routine, and needing some motivation, then read on.

This week I am going to talk about ways to make your workout something to look forward to, rather than a chore.

• Add variety.

Vary how often or the way you do an exercise.

For example, if you always do bench presses using barbells, try doing it with dumbbells instead.

If you always walk on the treadmill, try an elliptical or stair machine instead.

• Find a partner.

Having a workout partner makes your training sessions more fun, safe and intense.

It also makes you more accountable to show up at the gym and stick to your workout.

Make sure you find a partner who has the same interests and goals as you do — someone who will motivate you to work hard, not hit the ice cream store after your workout.

• Fight discouragement.

If once in a long while you miss a workout because you stayed up too late with friends watching the Super Bowl, accept your choice and enjoy it, don't feel guilty.

This sense of failure can make it harder to get yourself back on track.

Focus on how much progress you have made so far, not on how far you have to go.

• Expect and prepare for the occasional plateaus.

Reaching a plateau is a normal part of working out.

Make sure you are adding variety to your sets, repetitions and order of your workout.

Continually search for new ways to make your routine fun and exciting.

• Schedule your workout.

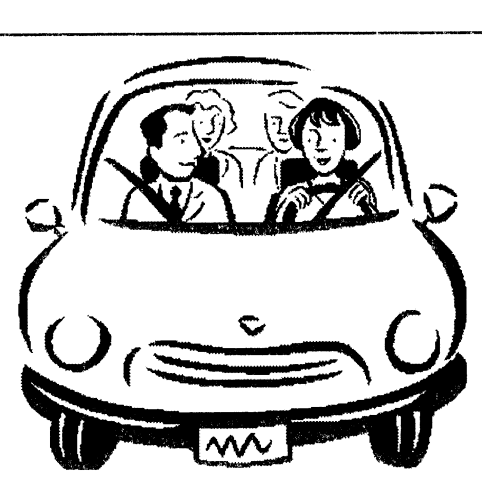
If you always exercise on the same days at the same time, your routine will become a fixture in your life, not a whim. And not going to the gym will feel unnatural.

Once you make exercise a part of your busy, daily schedule — which will be a challenge — you will find it's easier to go to the gym rather than drive by it.

I know exercising can be frustrating and tedious at times.

However, it's important to try to find fun ways to changes your routine to keep moving and keep motivated.

When you begin achieving great results, the excitement you experience will make the change well worth the effort. Action creates motivation.



Good luck, keep working hard, and keep reading Fit Facts.

AMU to host All-Army Small Arms Championships March 6-18

Open to all Soldiers register by Feb. 16

U.S. ARMY MARKSMANSHIP UNIT
Paula J. Randall

The U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit will host the 2007 Army Rifle and Pistol Championships in conjunction with the U.S. Army Infantry Center from March 6 to 15 and the U.S. Army Long-Range Championships March 16 to 18.

Training and competitions are open to all Soldiers of all Army components, of any rank, with of any military occupational specialty, including West Point and college ROTC cadets. Approximately 200 Soldiers are expected to compete.

Soldiers will fire both the M-16 rifle and M-9 pistol in helmet and load-bearing equipment from 25 to 500 yards with the M-16 and 7 to 25 yards with the M-9. Teams from battalion-level compete for unit recognition and team awards.

All Soldiers will receive advance marksmanship instruction and training materials to conduct Train-the-Trainer clinics on return to their home station. The U.S. Army Long-Range Championships will provide M-24 long-range shooting training from 600 to 1,000 yards.

Soldiers will compete in separate Novice, Open and Pro divisions based on their competition experience. The USAMU has a limited number of weapons available for Soldiers and cadets who do not have assigned weapons.

"The All-Army is an advanced combat marksmanship training event and competition," said USAMU Chief of Competition Michael J. Behnke. "The All-Army Matches are designed to raise the shooting proficiency of Soldiers and units across the Army by teaching advanced combat marksmanship techniques using issue rifles and pistols."

At the matches, coaches and NCOICs of the U.S. Army Rifle and Pistol Teams, Army Reserve, and All-Guard Teams will scout, identify and invite selected Soldiers to compete at the Interservice Championships and the National Matches.

The All-Army Matches consist of Small Arms Firing Schools, the Secretary of the Army Matches, Chief of Staff of the Army Matches, Sergeant Major of the Army Team Matches, Excellence-in-Competition Matches and special combat matches.

Champions will be awarded All-Army Trophies and Excellence-in-Competition Marksmanship Badges, which are permanent-wear Army awards as described in Army Regulation 600-22 and are above the standard marksman, sharpshooter and expert qualification badges. Among the awards are the Secretary of the Army Trophy M-1 Garand Rifle, Drill Sergeant Champion Award and scholarships for eligible cadets.

Schedule of events

Fort Benning Pistol Championships set

Register today for competition

U.S. ARMY MARKSMANSHIP UNIT
Paula J. Randall

The U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit will host the Fort Benning Combat Pistol Championship Feb. 8 to 10 at Phillips and Parks ranges. No pistol shooting experience is necessary and the competition is free.

All Soldiers — regular Army or Reserve or National Guard on active duty who are assigned or attached to Fort Benning — are eligible to compete; personnel can be of any military occupational specialty and rank. Army ROTC cadets and cadre from Georgia and Alabama schools are also eligible.

The Excellence in Competition Match is open to all U.S. Soldiers.

Plaques will be awarded to first-, second- and third-place finishers and there will be categories for both novice and open shooters.

Guest speaker Maj. Gen. Walter Wojdakowski, Fort Benning commanding general, is scheduled to present the top awards.

"The match is designed as advanced marksmanship training and competition," said USAMU Chief of Competition Michael J. Behnke. "The skills and techniques taught in the classes and the practical application during the match is designed to make Soldiers better marksmen. At the same time, the intent is for Soldiers to take what they learn back to their units and pass it on to others."

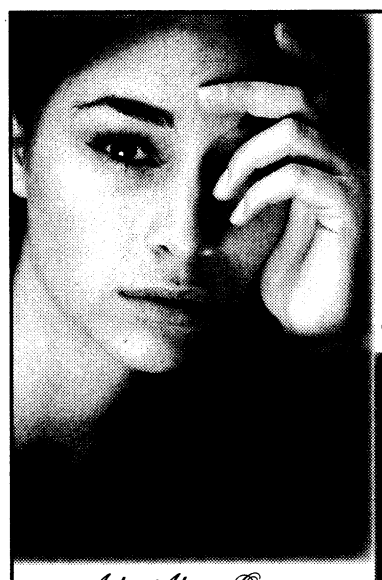
The schedule of events is as follows:

Feb. 8
- 1 to 5 p.m., In-processing at Parks Range.

Feb. 9
- 8 to 11 a.m., Opening remarks and train-the-trainer classes at Infantry Hall, Room 1A
- 11:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m., Commanding General's Pistol Match, individual pistol match, Match #217, at Parks Range
- 1:45 to 3:45 p.m., Excellence in Competition Match, individual pistol match, Match #221, at Parks Range

Feb. 10
- 9 to 11 a.m., Command Sergeant Major's Match, team pistol match, Match #209, at Parks Range
- 1 p.m., Awards Ceremony, Phillips Range.

The winner of the Fort Benning Service Pistol Championship will be the Soldier with the highest individual aggregate of Matches 217 plus 221. The Service Pistol Champion will receive a picture plaque of the Commanding General's Cup on which his or her name will be engraved.



USAMU pistol shooters will provide training for all competitors and all Soldiers will receive Certificates of Training. Participants will compete with the M-9 or M-11 pistol. The Marksmanship Unit has a limited number of pistols available for Soldiers who do not have assigned weapons; ammunition will be provided by USAMU.

Team representatives should fax a letter of intent with a squad/team roster, listing all competitors to Clarence Fedrick at 706-545-6252 or e-mail Clarence.Fedrick@usarec.army.mil by Jan. 25. A copy of the program, schedule and registration forms are available on the USAMU Web site at www.USAMU.com.

1. Fort Benning threw out a Texas-size welcome mat for a distinguished visitor Jan. 11. Who was it?

2. Officials from the National Infantry Foundation placed the first artifact in the unfinished museum June 1. What was it?

3. Fort Benning Eagle Scout Ian Walker spearheaded efforts to open this popular facility on the site of a former softball field on Main Post. What is it?

4. He was the first Soldier to earn a Medal of Honor in the Global War on Terrorism. In June, Fort Benning dedicated a new facility in his honor. Who was he, and what is the building?

5. "A whole different world" is how one post resident described his community, the first to be built on Fort Benning under the Residential Communities Initiative. Where does he live?

6. He has a highway named after him and a building on Fort Benning. In January, this war hero was presented the USO's Spirit of Hope Award, which is bestowed upon those who carry out Bob Hope's mission to support the men and women of America's armed forces. Who is he?

7. They were an unusual pair, by Best Ranger standards, and they stole the show when they nabbed 13th place at the 24th annual event. Who were they, and what was their relationship?

8. Promises, promises. Post officials pledged to make "quality of life" issues a top priority. What was the name of the document they signed Oct. 31?

9. It took nine days and $900 to make, and Debra Scott Russell hopes it helps her make it into the World Book of Records. Russell shared her masterpiece with Fort Benning in May. What was it?

Is this tire salesman trying to snow reader?

KING FEATURES SYNDICATE
Tom and Ray Magliozzi

Dear Tom and Ray,

I have a 2004 Mazda Miata (with rear-wheel drive). Most companies advise me that I need to put snow tires on all four wheels. Is this true for my rear-wheel-drive Miata? Or is this true only for front-wheel-drive cars?

— Mark

Ray: I understand why you're suspicious, Mark. I mean, here's a guy who sells tires for a living advising you to buy four tires instead of two tires. Sounds fishy, right?

Tom: But it is better to put four snow tires on your car, whether it's front-, rear- or all-wheel drive. In the old days, we used to put only two snow tires on cars, which went on the driven wheels — the rear wheels, in your case.

The idea was that the tires would help you get started and "go" in the snow. Makes sense, right?

Ray: Then people came to a funny realization.

That it's also good to be able to "turn" and "stop" in the snow. That's why four snow tires are better.

Tom: It's also a little better to have four of the same tires when there's no snow on the ground. Your handling will be more predictable, particularly in an emergency.

Ray: And many all-wheel-drive vehicles require you to have four identical tires in order to protect the differentials.

Tom: So if money is a serious issue, you can go with two snows. You won't do any mechanical damage to your Miata.

But when you're sliding on packed snow into, or under, the tailgate of a Ford Expedition, you might wish you had sprung for the other two tires.

Keep your car on the road and out of the repair shop by ordering Tom and Ray's pamphlet Ten Ways You May Be Ruining Your Car Without Even Knowing It!

Send $4.75 (check or money order) to Ruin, P.O. Box 536475, Orlando, FL. 32853-6475.

Housing center opens on Main Post

THE BAYONET
Rachel L. Watkins

Fort Benning's new housing welcome center is open at 601 Lumpkin Road.

The center is part of the Residential Communities Initiative, a 10-year, $612 million project, which includes demolishing 2,110 houses, constructing 2,377 homes and renovating 1,560 historic and non-historic homes around post and at Camp Merrill in Dahlonega, Ga., home to the 5th Ranger Training Battalion. The RCI project began in January 2006.

All leasing operations and home assignments for the Villages of Benning will be housed at the center, which is where the East Main Post management office is located. The welcome center was designed to look like the other historic buildings on post.

The center has a playroom, a playground and a pool. The center is open weekdays from 8:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. For more information, go to www.benningfamilyhousing.com, or call 706-685-3939.

DeCA deadline approaches

THE BAYONET
Cheryl Rodewig

Children of military Families can qualify for a $1,500 scholarship through the Scholarships for Military Children program. The deadline for 2008 applications is Feb. 20.

Every commissary with a qualified applicant is guaranteed at least one scholarship, said Gary Hensley, store director of the Fort Benning commissary.

"I'd like to get a lot of applications this year," he said. "The more applications we get, the more scholarships we get."

Applicants must be unmarried children, younger than 23, of active-duty, Reserve, Guard or retired military personnel, who are enrolled or planning to enroll full-time in an undergraduate program. The scholarship is merit-based and includes an essay.

Hensley said the recipients impress him with their community involvement and their well-written essays. Many of them keep in touch throughout college and when they graduate.

"We get cards and notes from them," Hensley said.

Hensley's most recent letter arrived this month from Clyde Murphy, last year's scholarship winner and a student at the University of Georgia studying physics and Spanish.

"I would, once again, like to thank you for selecting me as one of the scholarship recipients," Murphy wrote in his letter. "I have not taken college lightly."

Murphy attached a grade report to show his hard work: all As and Bs.

Pick up an application at the Fort Benning commissary on Marne Road. For information, go to www.militaryscholar.org.

Dexter gathers socks for wounded warriors

Donations being accepted for Soldiers in Warrior Transition Battalion

THE BAYONET
Cheryl Rodewig

What started at Dexter Elementary as a Christmas "sock drive" for wounded warriors is still going strong weeks later.

"It's like Christmas in January," said April Smith, who delivered 130 pairs of socks to the Warrior Transition Battalion Tuesday morning.

April and her husband, Capt. Charles Smith, learned of the drive from their 6-year-old son, Jakob, a first-grader at Dexter.

The Smiths sent a flyer to their hometown of Sycamore, Ill., requesting a donation.

"I was just hoping for a couple of pairs of socks, and then it grew," April said.

"The donation was so large we couldn't fit it into the cab of our truck."

The Sycamore Veterans Memorial Home raised $100 and shipped the package of socks to Fort Benning. By the time they arrived, however, the drive had grown to include toiletries, books, movies and more.

Cheryl Rodewig
Jakob Smith, a first-grader at Dexter Elementary, opens a box of 130 socks, collected as part of the Socks for Soldiers drive.

"We got in contact with the wounded Soldiers, and they said they also needed other things, so then we just added those in," said Deitra Stroebel, president of the Parent Teacher Organization, which hosts an annual drive.

Proceeds usually go to a charity in Columbus, but this year, the PTO decided to give back to Fort Benning, Stroebel said.

Students at Dexter enjoyed collecting donations and delivering them to the Soldiers.

"We went to the store, and we picked out some socks that the Soldiers could use and some movies they could watch," said Nick Hunter, a fourth-grader at Dexter. "I liked doing it because I got to help out some of the Soldiers that were hurt."

The Warrior Transition Battalion, located on Main Post, helps wounded Soldiers transition back to active duty or civilian life.

"I'm glad it was our local Soldiers," April said. "I think that's important. The warriors and their Families to whom these socks are going are in our hearts, and they are our heroes."

To donate items to the Warrior Transition Battalion, call 706-544-5304 or 706-544-4888.

Special needs playground opens on Main Post

THE BAYONET
Rachel L. Watkins

Fabienne Trivino has physical limitations. The 7-year-old has a hard time balancing and sometimes struggles to walk. She has trisomy nine, a chromosomal disorder.

Now Fabienne has a new special needs playground to play on, across from Faith Middle School, near the Follow Me Chapel on Main Post.

The playground is designed for children who are wheelchair bound or have mental or physical challenges, said Marsha Collins, manager of the Exceptional Family Member Program. It has a wheelchair ramp, a tic-tac-toe board, two slides and several swings designed to accommodate a variety of special needs. There are also lily pods and tires.

"We have been stationed at five installations, and this is the first special needs playground I have seen," said Fabienne's mom, Michelle Trivino.

She said the playground will also be a great place to network with other parents who have children with special needs.

Rachel L. Watkins
Staff Sgt. Eddie Trivino helps his daughter, Fabienne, 7, reach for the monkey bars at the new special needs playground on post. The playground has a wheelchair ramp, a tic-tac-toe board, two slides and several swings designed to accommodate a variety of special needs.

Trivino said she feels less stressed when she takes Fabienne to the new playground because she doesn't worry as much about her daughter getting hurt.

"Some children can't swing on a regular playground because they need back support," she said. "At this playground, that's not a problem."

When the weather gets warmer, Collins hopes the special needs support groups around post will meet at the playground.

Green genes
Four small meals give body better energy

THE BAYONET
Cheryl Rodewig

The average daily American diet includes three large meals, but that's not the way to optimal health, according to the World Health Organization, which suggests smaller but more frequent meals to provide the body with a steadier supply of energy.

They will also help regulate insulin levels, which can be a factor in weight gain. Because you'll be less hungry at each meal, you'll be less likely to overeat.

Here's how you can make time to eat less — more.

Start with breakfast. Multitask if necessary. Eat while you're reading the newspaper, enjoying your morning cup of coffee or talking with your children before school, or replace minutes lost by pressing the snooze button with a nutritious meal.

If your morning schedule allows too little time for a sit-down meal, make a smoothie or breakfast sandwich the night before that you can grab on the go, or plan a meal you can prepare quickly in the morning. Either way, make sure the first meal of the day is balanced. Start off right with fresh produce or whole grains.

Eat an early and late lunch, perhaps around 11 a.m. and 2 p.m. If you pack a lunch, eat half in the morning and half later. If you eat out, just save half of whatever you buy for the later meal. If you don't have the time for two "mini-meals," work in a healthy mid-morning and mid-afternoon snack and reduce your lunch size accordingly. Apples, yogurt, trail mix and carrots work well.

Keep snacks that won't perish easily, like bananas or nuts, in your desk, your car or wherever you will need them, in case you forget or don't have time to bring something with you that day.

Once at home, make sure your final meal of the day isn't later than three hours before you go to bed, so your body has time to use the energy.

If everyone else in your house is still eating three mega-meals, feel free to sit down to lunch and dinner with the Family, just be aware that you shouldn't eat as much at one sitting.

Take smaller portions and try to eat more of a food group you might be missing out on that day, such as vegetables or whole grains.

The key is to always base your meals on hunger, not traditional meal times.

I eat breakfast, two light lunches, an afternoon snack and dinner most days, but if I'm not hungry, I cut out the snack.

Some days you may take home part of your lunch, because you weren't hungry for it, or you might have a second breakfast if you're hungry at 9:30 that morning.

That's the way it should be. Your body will develop its own pattern of eating, usually based on your metabolism.

However, if you are used to eating on average one large meal per day, you will need to allow your body time to adapt to more frequent meals. As you make one meal smaller, you should be hungrier at other times throughout the day.

Establish an eating pattern that doesn't leave you starving before any one meal, and see if a second, light lunch won't cure that mid-afternoon slump.

History class ah-ha moment bears repeating

CHAPLAIN FAMILY LIFE CENTER
Chaplain (Maj.) Scott Crossfield

The first day I walked into my seventh-grade history class, I saw over the chalk board a sign which said, "Those who forget the past are condemned to repeat it." That sign really made me think. It is hard to have an ah-ha moment as a seventh-grader, but I had one that day.

Those words were forever etched in my mind. I found something deep and provocative that could be useful in my life..

As a Family Life chaplain, this message is relevant as I help Families try to understand where they're coming from and where they want to go. Most of the people who come to our center have done well in life, but they have found themselves stuck in some way and they need a little help to move forward. That is where that quote becomes useful.

One of the best tools we use for clients is called a genogram, which is like a family tree with more depth. We list siblings, parents, in-laws and out-laws, but we also annotate factors that make their Family unique — the good, the bad and the ugly.

Sometimes it is very hard for people to discuss some aspects of their Family, like alcoholism or abuse, but they find it is insightful and freeing to get it all out there. Once we have a clearer view of what their Family looks like, we begin to look for patterns of behavior from one generation to another.

It is amazing to see how powerful an influence our Families can have on us years down the road. Many people realize this when they reflect on their actions and see how alike they are to their parents.

There is a side in all of us that wants to forget the bad and painful memories of the past. However, this may cause us to resurrect those same behaviors in our own lives without even knowing it.

Once we have helped someone identify an undesired pattern or behavior, we can explore ways to stop it or minimize its impact. It is like a doctor trying to remove cancer — he can not remove a tumor until he has identified and isolated it. It is the same way with problems in your life. Look to the past, identify what it is that is causing you pain and then deal with it.

If you or someone you know is "stuck" with a problem, there is help at the Family Life Center in Soldiers' Plaza. You can get the confidential help you need. Life is too short to continue repeating that bad past. For more information, call 706-545-1760.

'New Year for trees' pays tribute to environment

197TH INFANTRY BRIGADE
Chaplain (Maj.) Avrohom Horovitz

Editor's note: Out of reverence, Jewish custom dictates that the letter "o" not appear in references to the deity in periodicals. It appears as "G-d."

Jews celebrated the New Year for trees Tuesday. Known in Hebrew as Tu Bishevat (the 15th day of the month of Shevat), it is the Jewish Arbor Day. This is when the sap begins to rise and new fruit starts to grow on trees.

In the Scriptures, trees have great significance. Moses heard G-d speak to him through a bramble bush that blazed with fire but was not consumed (Exodus 3:2).

From this we learn that no place on earth, not even the lowliest of plants, lacks the Almighty's presence.

Trees are an example of the great value the Bible places on the environment.

In Deuteronomy (20:19) the law states that when soldiers need wood for a battle, they should not destroy fruit-bearing trees.

The Midrash (book of biblical exegesis written more than 15 centuries ago) states, "When the holy One blessed be he created Adam, he showed him all the trees of Eden and said to him, look at my works, see how beautiful and excellent they are! I created them all for your sake. Make sure that you do not spoil and destroy my world."

Adam and Eve were banished from the garden because they ate from the tree of knowledge (Genesis 3).

The Holy Scriptures themselves are called the "Tree of Life," offering "length of days for those who grasp her." (Proverbs 3:16-18).

It is the custom to eat at least 15 types of fruit on this day. Some eat 30 types of fruit to thank the Creator for every day of the month.

The fruit should include the special fruits of the Holy Land, as stated in Deuteronomy (8:8-10): "Grapes, figs, pomegranates, olives and dates ... You will eat and you will be satisfied, and bless your Almighty G-d for the good land that he gave you."

May G-d bless us all with a Happy New Year and a healthy environment, as it is written in Ezekiel (47:12), "Along the stream will grow every fruit tree, their leaves will not wither nor their fruits fail they will ripen every month. For its waters will come from the Sanctuary, so its fruit will be for food and its leaves for healing."

Amen.

MEET OUR HOMETOWN HERO

Ralph Puckett Jr. was born Dec. 8, 1926, in Tifton, Ga., to Ralph Sr. and Clara Stedman Puckett. The second of three children, Puckett idolized his father.

"He never did say much, never preached," said Puckett, who was "Junior" to the folks in Tifton. "It was the way he lived; he taught by example, and my single, strongest goal was to make my daddy proud."

The elder Puckett owned and operated three businesses. He sold insurance by day and spent most evenings working alongside his employees at the Puckett wholesale grocery or gristmill. He packaged and delivered groceries and shoveled corn into the mill, sacked it and trucked it off to market.

"He wouldn't ask anybody to do anything he wouldn't do. Ralph got that from his father," said Jeannie Puckett, who is married to the younger Puckett.

He also inherited his father's work ethic. Puckett became an entrepreneur at 12, when he set up shop outside his cousin's filling station, selling cigarettes and sodas from an icebox. When business was slow, his cousin sent him into town to collect payments from delinquent customers.

At 14, Puckett was working weekends and summers in the warehouse alongside his father. When the Japanese attacked Pearl Harbor, he was two days shy of 15 and desperate to join the fight. That was the year he earned his pilot's license and set his sights on becoming a flying ace.

At 16, Puckett graduated from high school and enrolled in Georgia Tech. Just two weeks after his 17th birthday, on Dec. 23, 1943, he enlisted in the Army Air Corps Reserve.

"I couldn't wait to join. The war with Japan had been going on two years, and I felt that I ought to be part of that. It was my duty," he said.

Though his 17-year-old son was joining an Army at war, Puckett's father didn't discourage him.

"He always said I should make up my own mind. Daddy never told me what to do, but he always told me to do the right thing," Puckett said. "To this day, he still has an influence on me. It's always about doing the right thing."

Ralph Puckett Sr. died in 1968, 10 days after his son returned from Vietnam.

We proudly salute our Hometown Heroes

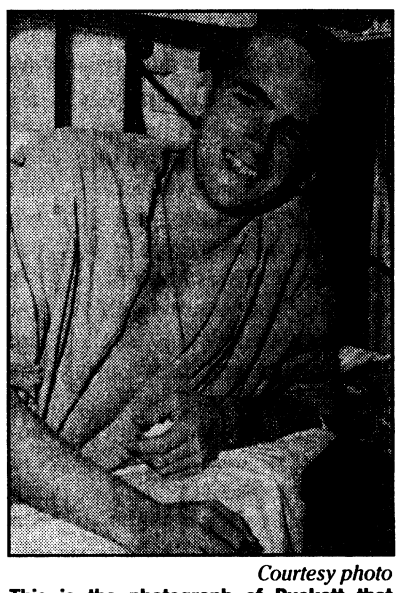
A man of good fortune



Do you have the guts and brains to be an Infantry platoon leader? That's the question I asked myself. I wondered if I had what it took to measure up. I've wondered that plenty of times ever since.

— Retired Col. Ralph Puckett

With two Distinguished Service Crosses, two Silver Stars, three Legions of Merit, two Bronze Stars, five Purple Hearts and many more commendations, Puckett is one of the Army's most decorated Soldiers.

In the spring of 1944, the year before Ralph Puckett entered West Point, the Allies engaged in a costly series of battles in an attempt to break through the Winter Line and seize Rome. More than 54,000 Allies and 20,000 Germans were killed or wounded in the Liri Valley.

Footage from the battles was so graphic, the War Department refused to release it to the public.

But Puckett saw it. And it made him wonder.

"Do you have the guts and brains to be an Infantry platoon leader? That's the question I asked myself," he said. "I wondered if I had what it took to measure up. I've wondered that plenty of times ever since."

In 1950, a year after Puckett graduated from West Point, the nation was at war in Korea, and 2nd Lt. Puckett was sent to Japan, where he learned of plans to activate the first Ranger company since World War II. Puckett wanted to be a part of it, any part of it — squad leader, rifleman, anything.

The colonel responsible for staffing the company liked what he saw in Puckett, and though he'd set out to put a captain in charge, he followed his instinct and made the young Georgian company commander, with one stipulation: Puckett could not recruit trained riflemen, since the Army was already struggling to keep the fighting forces supplied with qualified Infantrymen in Korea.

Puckett had surprisingly little trouble scrounging volunteers from the rear — mechanics, clerks and cooks anxious for adventure and mostly uninitiated in matters of combat. He trained them rigorously, and in November 1950, after a number of successful operations, he took his 52 Rangers on a deadly mission.

They took the objective, Hill 205 overlooking the Chongchon River, and dug into the frozen ground to establish a defense. Puckett arranged for artillery support. Shortly after dark, hordes of Chinese began attacking in waves, one right after another. The Americans held them off time and again, but they were drastically outnumbered and taking casualties.

At 2:45 a.m., as the Chinese launched a sixth assault, Puckett's call for fire support went unanswered. Two mortar shells landed in his command post, mangling Puckett and killing his West Point classmate in the foxhole beside him.

Realizing they were overwhelmed and running out of time, Puckett ordered his men to withdraw and leave him behind. With two injured feet, he would slow their progress.

Two of his Rangers returned for Puckett just as the Chinese reached their positions. They dragged Puckett down the hill under fire and to the safety of a waiting tank.

In all, 19 of Puckett's 52 Rangers survived the night.

Puckett, who would be awarded a Distinguished Service Cross for his actions, was shipped to Fort Benning to recuperate at Martin Army Community Hospital, where he'd spend nearly a year undergoing a number of operations to save his right foot.

Confined to a bed, Puckett grew bored quickly, so he didn't mind humoring another Soldier, a psychiatric patient who fancied himself a fortune-teller. The Soldier read Puckett's palm and predicted he'd soon meet two girls, a blond and a brunette. "You'll marry one of them," the Soldier said, though he couldn't determine which one.

The Columbus newspaper ran a photo of Puckett and his story in December. His seventh-grade English teacher, now teaching typing at Columbus High, spied his photo and showed it to her students.

"I suspect he's lonely," she told 17-year-old Jeannie Martin, and she urged the girl to visit Puckett over the Christmas break.

"Nice girls didn't go to Fort Benning to see Soldiers," Jeannie said. "I had no intention of doing that."

Then a friend, home from college for the holiday, begged Jeannie to accompany her to Fort Benning to visit a young man she'd dated once before he'd left for Korea. Jeannie agreed, as long as her friend would return the favor and go with her to visit the "cute young man" in the newspaper photograph.

It turned out, they were one and the same, those two young men, and when pretty, blond Jeannie walked into the hospital room with her brunette friend, Puckett's father, Ralph Sr. said, "One of you two is going to marry my son."

Nearly two years later, Ralph and Jeannie were married.

Puckett returned to active duty in 1951 with the Ranger Department. He spent a year organizing a ranger school in Colombia, served with the Special Forces in Germany and the 101st Airborne Division in Vietnam, where he commanded three battalions.

During the Tet offensive, he commanded the 101st's 1st Brigade.

Puckett was awarded a second Distinguished Service Cross after rescuing two wounded Soldiers during an intense mortar barrage.

About a month later, he earned a Silver Star after sustaining injuries when the enemy infiltrated his defensive perimeter and lobbed a grenade into the tactical command post. Puckett staggered to his feet, reorganized a perimeter defense and refused medical evacuation until all his injured Soldiers were extracted, and the attack had been thwarted.

Before his retirement in 1971, Puckett was awarded another Silver Star, two Bronze Stars, three Legions of Merit, five Purple Hearts and dozens more — enough medals and accolades to earn him a place among the Army's most decorated Soldiers.

But his greatest rewards were never to be found on the battlefield, Puckett said. Jeannie gave him that which he prizes most: his Family. The couple's three children gave them six grandchildren.

Jeannie is his hero, Puckett said. "She gave meaning to much of my life. Without her, I'd be nothing."

After retiring from the Army in 1971, Puckett founded Discovery, a program designed to help people discover their inner strengths through extreme adventures like rock climbing and wilderness survival.

Twelve years ago, he was named the 75th Ranger Regiment's honorary colonel. He called it "the best assignment ever," one that allowed him to mentor young Rangers.

He influenced — "animated," as one Ranger put it — thousands and thousands of Soldiers.

Puckett celebrated his 79th birthday with the Rangers in Afghanistan. Later, he would visit with them in Iraq.

Last week, Puckett relinquished his responsibilities to a new honorary commander. At 81, he said, he's no longer up to the job.

"Saying goodbye is the toughest job I ever had," he said, tougher in some ways than combat.

Puckett left his Rangers with Words of a Warrior, A Professional Soldier's Notebook, a collection of essays on leadership and lessons learned, which was released last month.

Now, he said, he'll have time to finish his memoirs, a project he started for his grandchildren years ago.

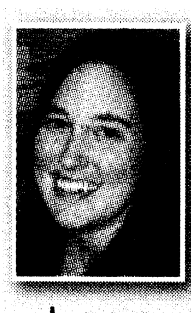
RESTAURANT REVIEW



Cafe 222

THE BAYONET
Rachel L. Watkins

I love imagining how buildings were decorated in the past. But at Café 222, I don't have to imagine.

The restaurant, a shotgun house dating from the 1890s, is decked out in classy décor in 1890s style.

What was once a butcher shop and a grocery store was transformed into a café when Mamie and Garry Pound opened it in 1998, three years after they opened the Rothschild-Pound House Inn. Gary, an artist, put his own special touch on the restaurant.

In next week's edition of The Bayonet, Rachel Watkins will review Golden Donut.

The light green chairs with intricate designs, book shelves, skylights, music, the red and green tile ceiling and the flowered carpet made me feel like I stepped out of present day and time-warped into the 1890s.

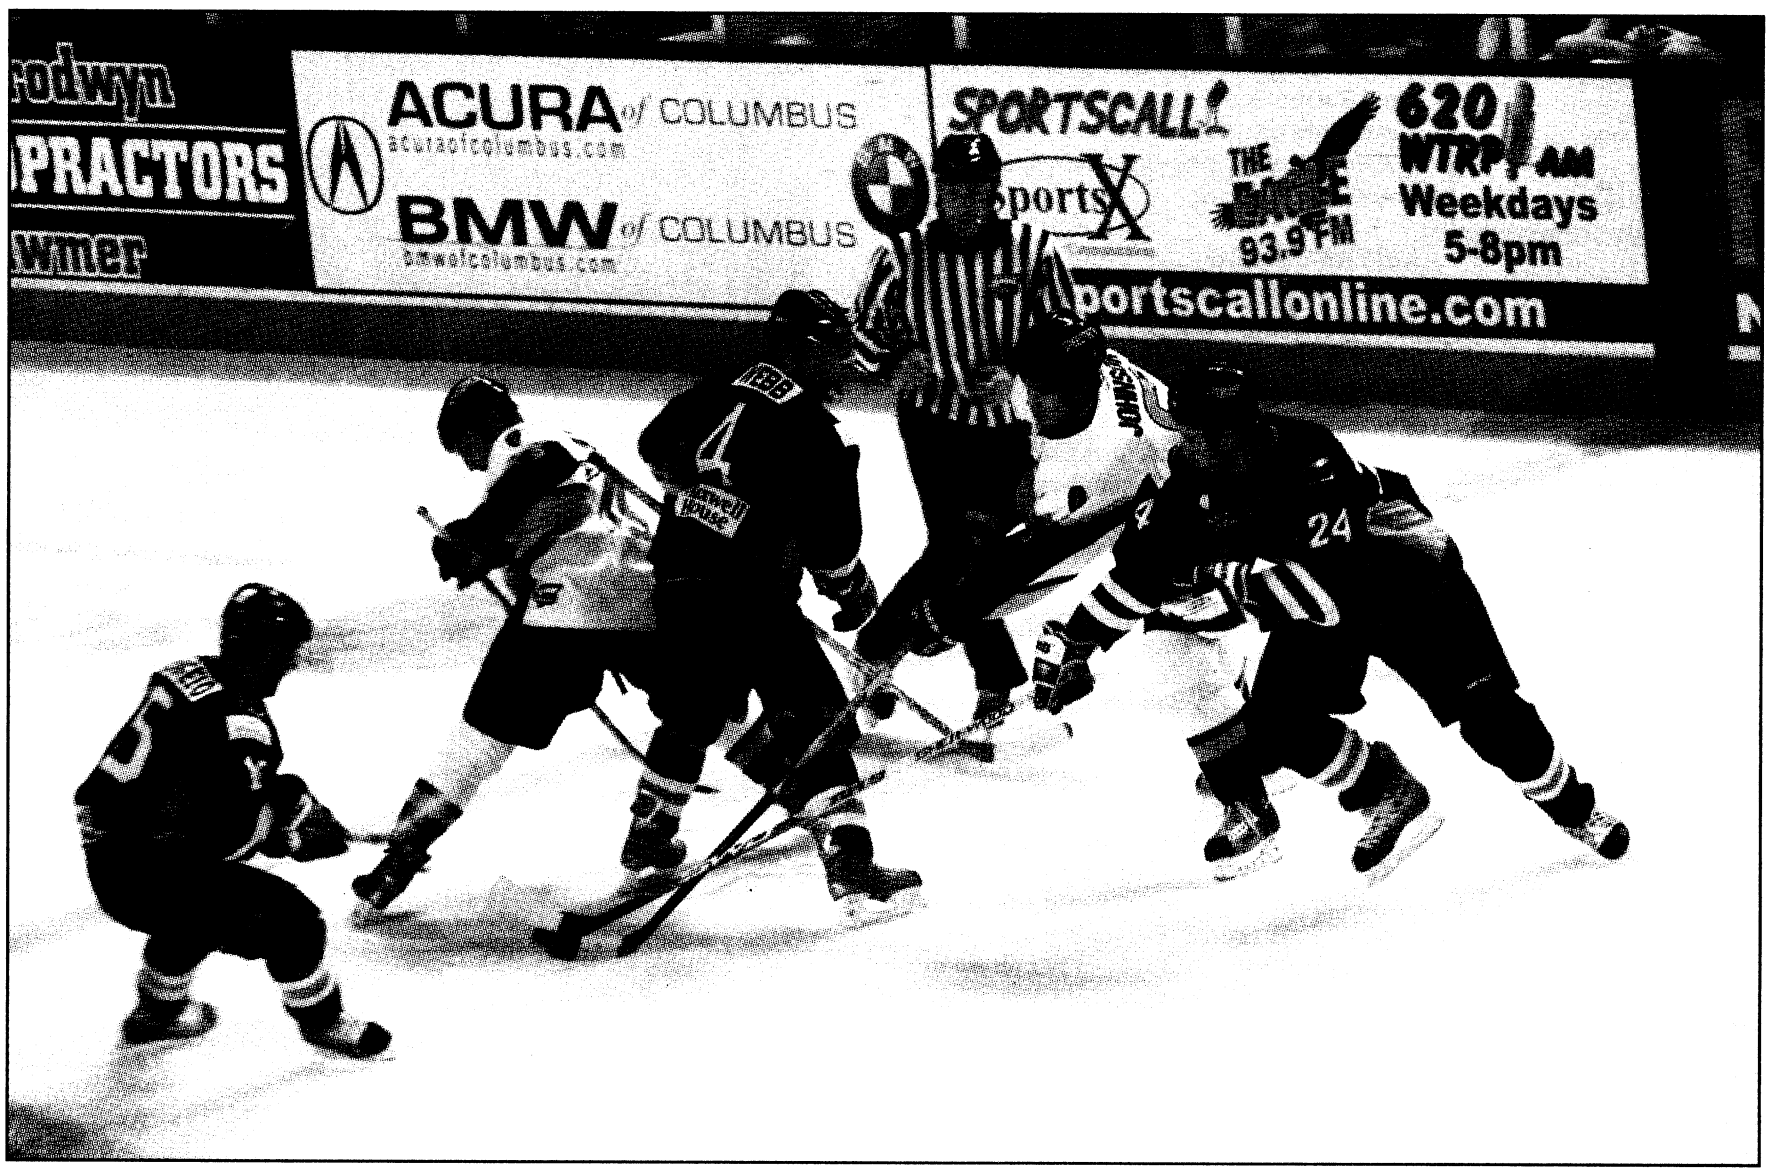
The food at Café 222 is Southern cooking, buffet style.

What's great about Café 222 is that there are different menu items every day, with the exception of fried chicken, which is offered daily.

The menu includes Coca-Cola ham, collard greens, cheese grits, meatloaf, fish, skillet corn bread and chicken pot pie.

Desserts include blackberry, apple, strawberry, or peach cobbler, caramel cake and ice cream.

Get seconds if you aren't full after the first round of food. The buffet is $9.95. Dessert will set you back a buck and a quarter.



Breakfast is also an option. Breakfast items include waffles, sausage biscuits, pancakes, home fries, omelets and eggs benedict. Breakfast is not buffet style. Prices range from around $2 to $10.

Breakfast is 7 to 11 a.m. weekdays and 8 to 11 a.m. on weekends.

Lunch is 11 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. weekdays only. There is a 10 percent discount for military, seniors and students. Café 222 offers takeout and catering.

The restaurant is located at 222 7th Street. Reservations can be made, but are not required.

To make a reservation or for more information, call 706-322-4075.

The Columbus Cottonmouths offer discounts on tickets for military ID card holders. For more information, visit www.cottonmouths.com.

Columbus Cottonmouths Hockey

THE BAYONET
Rachel L. Watkins

"Let's go Snakes," the crowd roars. The arena is dark as the fans wait for the Columbus Cottonmouths to skate onto the ice. Music reverberates throughout the arena and fog rolls over the ice.

When the spotlights hit the floor, the crowd goes wild. The Cottonmouths dig their skates into the ice and make a grand entrance.

During games, the crowd cheers and boos, whichever is appropriate at the time.

When a fight occurs, some fans stand up and applaud. They pound their fists on the Plexiglas barrier surrounding the arena as hockey players are pushed against it.

The Snake experience is very interactive.

The Cottonmouths play at the Columbus Civic Center, which is only about 10 miles from Fort Benning.

And all the action isn't on the ice.

Boomer, the Cottonmouths' mascot, roams the crowd, visiting with children and adults. Occasionally, Boomer will grab a woman's hand and plant a wet one on it. Luckily for Boomer, my boyfriend wasn't there or there could've been a fight in the stands.

Other entertainment includes a hockey puck toss. People buy a puck for a buck, and from their seats, they throw the pucks at a bucket out on the ice. Whoever gets a puck in the bucket is eligible for a prize.

There is also a remote control blimp that drops discounts for local establishments to the audience.

Of course, food and drinks are available, including ice cream, hot dogs, cotton candy, pretzels, peanuts and nachos.

You might want to bring a jacket. The seats closer to the ice are a little cooler than the upper level seats.

Games last about two hours.

Ticket prices range from $11 to $21. Military and college students can get $3 off $11 tickets when a valid ID is shown.

There are discounts for groups of more than 10 people. Parking is free. The next game is at 7:30 p.m. today. The Columbus Civic Center is located at 400 4th Street.

For a schedule or more information, visit www.cottonmouths.com or call 706-571-0086.

BOOK REVIEW

Infantry Association sponsors book about Army Infantry

Book is newest in a series of coffee-table books saluting the Army

NATIONAL INFANTRY ASSOCIATION

The National Infantry Association announces availability, in all major retail book outlets and on their Web sites, of the latest in a series of military history coffee-table books.

From the 1775 battle-at Lexington Green to the Global War on Terrorism, this book profiles the courageous history of the American Infantry Soldier.

Written by an outstanding team, including historians and retired Army officers, and with retired Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White (former Fort Benning commander and current President of the National Infantry Association) as senior editor, U.S. Army Infantry presents stories of the Infantry experience as well as the legendary heroes in its ranks.

Essays on the Infantry's history and today's Soldiers focus in particular on the people who fight the battles. Full-color and vintage photography, portraits, recruiting posters and historically inspired paintings breathe life into these stories.

Local contributors include retired Col. Ralph Puckett, retired Col. Bob Simpson, and Richard Hyatt.

Retired Gen. Colin Powell wrote the foreword and said, "This is the only book I know that encompasses the entire experience of an American Infantryman — from training to combat to home life."

The book is sponsored by the National Infantry Association, published by Rizzoli International and distributed by Random House.

MEET THE SPARTANS

This spoof satirizes action movies like 300 and You Got Served.

Meet the Spartans stars Sean Maguire, Carmen Electra, Kevin Sorbo and Ken Davitian.

Meet the Spartans is rated PG-13 for sexual content, language and violence.

RAMBO

John Rambo (Sylvester Stallone) has retreated to northern Thailand to live a solitary, peaceful life in the mountains and jungles. A group of human rights missionaries search him out and ask him to guide them into Burma to deliver medical supplies.

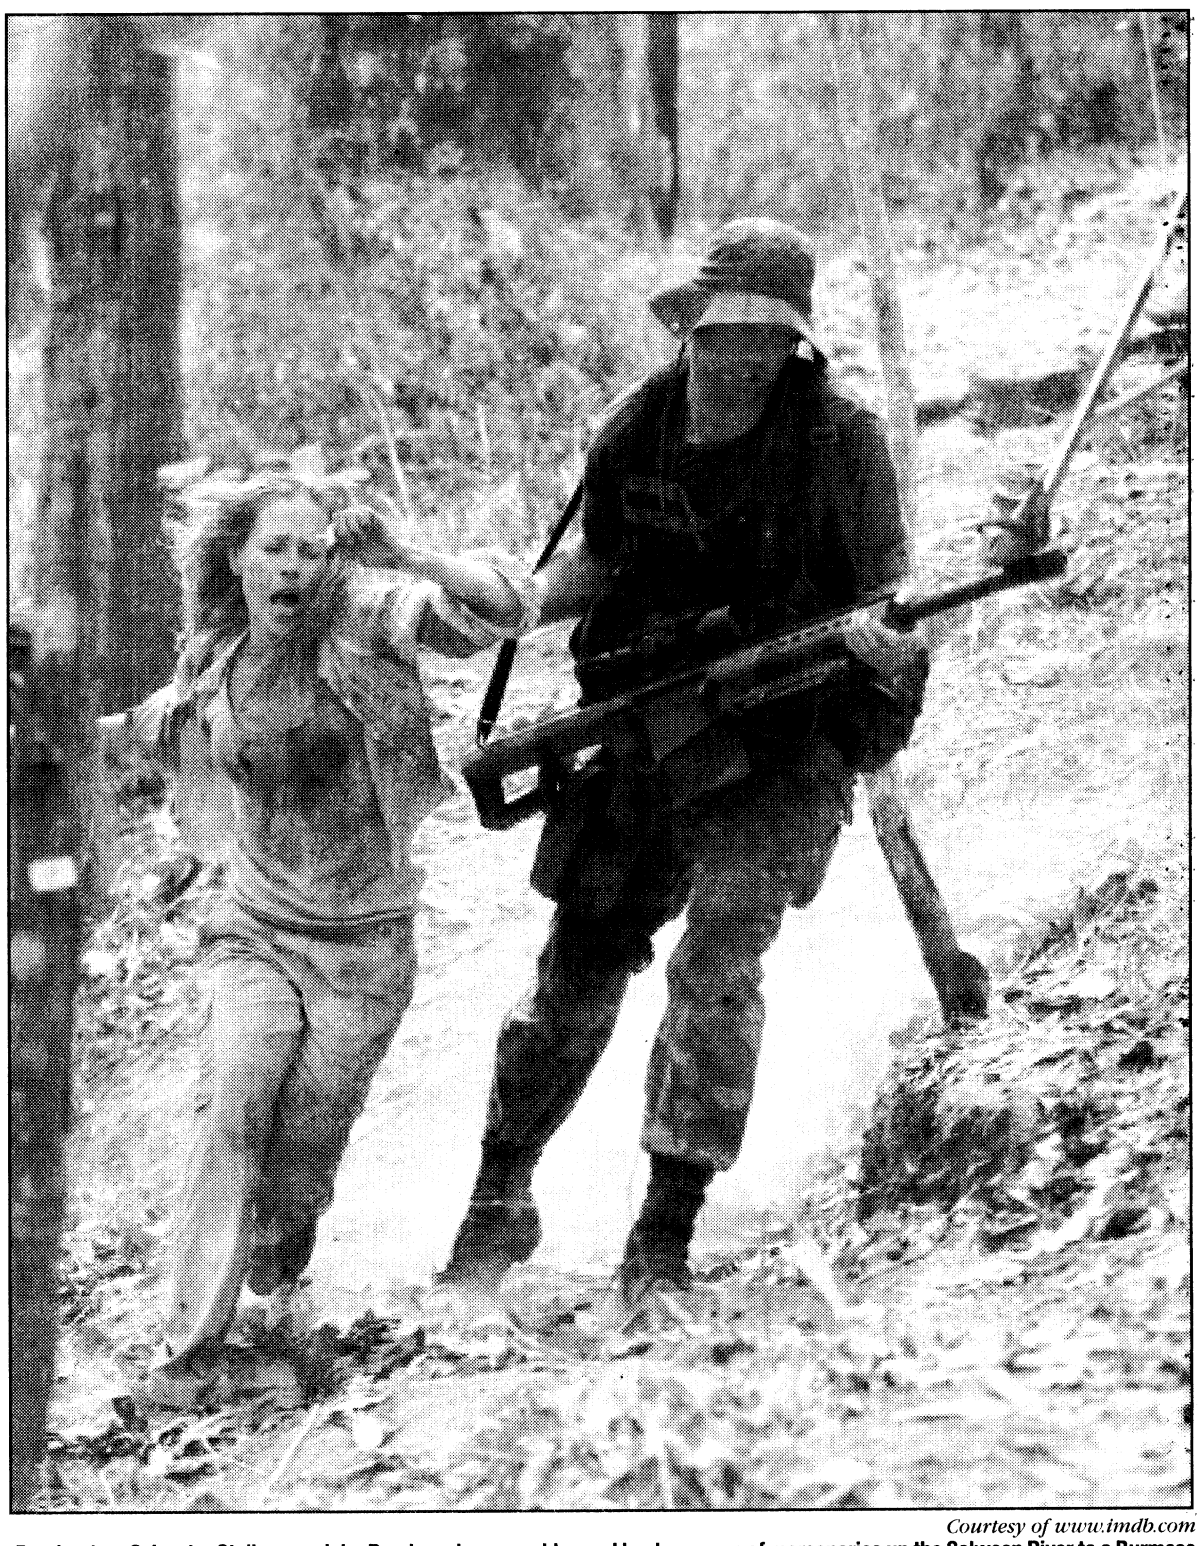
When the aid workers are captured by the Burmese army, Rambo decides to venture alone into the war zone to rescue them.

Rambo is rated R for violence, sexual assaults, grisly images and language.

UNTRACEABLE

Special Agent Jennifer Marsh (Diane Lane) and her team of FBI agents must try to track down an internet predator who posts videos of his graphic murders on his own Web site. The more hits his site gets, the faster and more violently he makes his victims die. As the game becomes personal, Marsh and her team must hurry to track down the murderer who is virtually untraceable.

Untraceable is rated R for violence and language.



HOW SHE MOVE

A gifted student, Raya Green (Rutina Wesley), is forced to leave her prestigious private school and return to her old neighborhood when her parents can no longer afford her tuition, following the tragic death of her sister.

Determined to return to her private school, Seaton, Raya endures life at the local high school, suffering the bitterness of her old friends. Soon, however, she finds herself drawn back into the world of step dancing.

When Raya realizes she could win prize money at a competition which would let her return to Seaton, she convinces Bishop (Dwain Murphy) to let her join his crew, the Jane Street Junta, and begins her struggle to win and to escape.

How She Move is rated PG-13 for drug content, suggestive material and language.

Rambo stars Sylvester Stallone as John Rambo, who assembles and leads a group of mercenaries up the Salween River to a Burmese village where a group of Christian aid workers allegedly went missing.

ALSO PLAYING

MAD MONEY

Bridget Cardigan (Diane Keaton) is on the verge of losing her upper middle class lifestyle when her husband is downsized from his job. She seeks work and ends up as janitor at the Federal Reserve Bank.

There, Bridget befriends Nina (Queen Latifah) and Jackie (Katie Holmes). The three women plan to smuggle soon-to-be destroyed money out of the secure Reserve, but a minor misstep alerts the authorities, and they must stay one step ahead of the law.

Mad Money is rated PG-13 for sexual material, language and drug references.

27 DRESSES

Jane (Katherine Heigl) has been a bridesmaid 27 times, but her own happy ending is nowhere in sight. When her younger sister captures the heart of Jane's boss (James Marsden), with whom she is secretly in love, Jane begins to reexamine her lifestyle.

27 Dresses is rated PG-13 for language, innuendo and sexuality.

CLOVERFIELD

Five young New Yorkers throw their friend a going-away party the night a giant monster descends upon the city.

Told from the point of view of their video camera, the film is a document of their attempt to survive the most surreal, horrifying event of their lives.

Cloverfield stars Lizzy Caplan, Jessica Lucas, T.J. Miller, Michael Stahl-David and Mike Vogel.

Cloverfield is rated PG-13 for violence, terror and disturbing images.

THE BUCKET LIST

When 46-year auto mechanic Carter Chambers (Morgan Freeman) and corporate billionaire Edward Cole (Jack Nicholson) find themselves sharing a hospital room, they decide to check out of the hospital.

From the Taj Mahal to the Serengeti, the two men check off items on their "bucket list" and become true friends in the process.

The Bucket List is rated PG-13 for language and a sexual reference.

THE PIRATES WHO DON'T DO ANYTHING: A VEGGIETALES MOVIE

Three misfits, Elliot (Mike Nawrocki), Sedgewick (Phil Vischer) and George (Phil Vischer), are busboys who dream of doing something bigger.

When a mysterious ball drops from the sky, it sets in motion a series of events that drags the friends back to the 17th century where they become unlikely heroes in a battle to rescue a royal family from an evil tyrant.

The Pirates Who Don't Do Anything: A VeggieTales Movie is rated G.

THE ORPHANAGE

Laura (Belén Rueda) plans to restore and reopen her childhood orphanage as a home for disabled children.

When her 7-year-old son starts spinning fantastic tales, Laura begins to realize that something terrible is lurking in the old house.

The Orphanage is rated R for disturbing content.

FIRST SUNDAY

Durell (Ice Cube) and LeeJohn (Tracy Morgan) are best friends and bumbling petty criminals. When Durell learns that his ex-girlfriend plans to move to another state with their son, unless they can get her $17,000, they plan to rob their neighborhood church.

But when they discover someone has beaten them to the money, they are forced to spend the night in the presence of the Lord and end up getting a lot more than they bargained for.

First Sunday is rated PG-13 for language, sexual humor and drug references.

IN THE NAME OF THE KING: A DUNGEON SIEGE TALE

As the war between the evil Gallian (Ray Liotta) and the ruling King Konreid (Burt Reynolds) rages, a once simple family man named Farmer (Jason Statham) sets out to find his kidnapped wife, Solana (Claire Forlani), and avenge the death of his son, who was killed by animal warriors called Krugs.

In the Name of the King: A Dungeon Siege Tale is rated PG-13 for battle sequence.

ONE MISSED CALL

Beth Raymond (Shannyn Sossamon) knows her two friends received cell phone messages days before they died that were recordings of their last moments.

Only Detective Jack Andrews (Edward Burns), whose own sister was killed in a freak accident that bears a strange similarity to the deaths of Beth's friends, believes her.

The pair work to unravel the mystery, but then Beth receives a missed call.

One Missed Call is rated PG-13 for violence, terror, frightening images, sexual material and thematic elements.

JUNO

When Juno (Ellen Page) finds out she is pregnant by her classmate Bleeker (Michael Cera), she is faced with difficult decisions.

With the help of her friend Leah (Olivia Thirlby), Juno finds her unborn child a perfect set of parents: an affluent suburban couple longing to adopt.

Juno is rated PG-13 for thematic material, sexual content and language.

ATONEMENT

In 1935, 13-year-old writer Briony Tallis (Saoirse Ronan) falls for Robbie Turner (James McAvoy), the educated son of the family's housekeeper. But since he loves Briony's older sister Cecilia (Kiera Knightley), she falsely accuses him of a crime.

Cecilia and Robbie declare their love, but he is arrested, and Briony continues to seek forgiveness for her childhood misdeed.

Atonement is rated R for images, language and sexuality.

CHARLIE WILSON'S WAR

Charlie Wilson (Tom Hanks), an alcoholic womanizer and Texas congressman, persuades the CIA to train and arm resistance fighters in Afghanistan to fend off the Soviet Union. With the help of rogue CIA agent, Gust Avrakotos (Philip Seymour Hoffman), the two men turn the Afghan freedom-fighters into a force that brought the Red Army to a stalemate.

Charlie Wilson's War is rated R for language, nudity, sexual content and drug use.

Phone card donations

Michelle L. Gordon

Roger Hewitt, right, Vice President of AUSA Chattahoochee Valley/Fort Benning Chapter presented Dr. William Dave Clark, director of the Fort Benning Soldier and Family Assistance Center, 1,000 phone cards to be distributed to Fort Benning's wounded warriors. The cards were donated by a defense contractor to the Association of the U.S. Army. "We just wanted to be able to ease their pain and recognize their service," Hewitt said.

Hospital awardee

His experience may save their lives

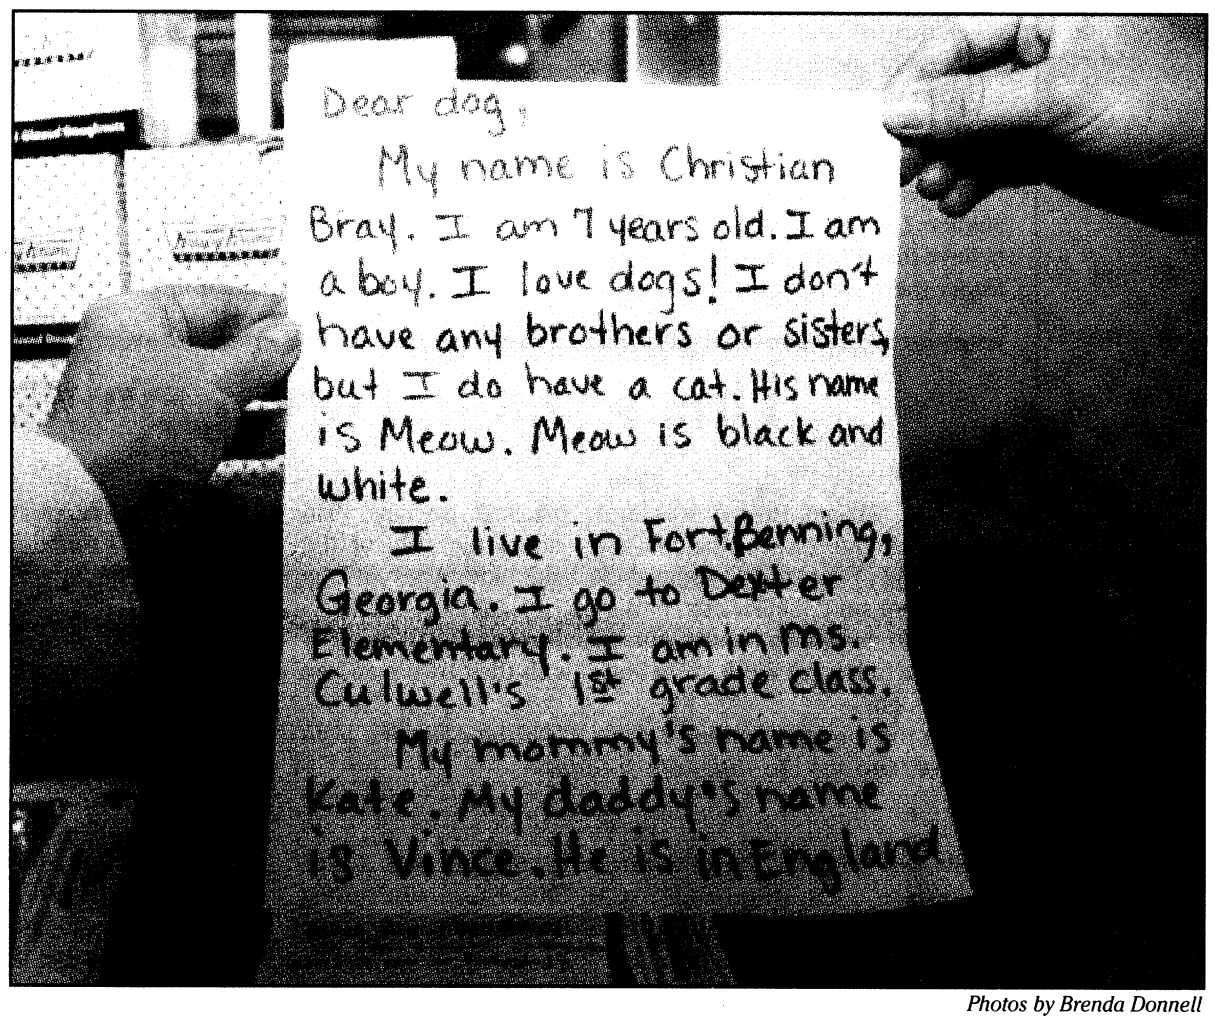
A former Sand Hill Soldier returned to his basic training unit Wednesday with a message for trainees: Pay attention.



Pfc. Chris Parish is assigned to the Warrior Transition Battalion, where he receives therapy for the severe wounds he suffered to his left leg in Iraq last summer. The 25-year old Oklahoma native credits his battle buddy, Pfc. Jesse Garza, with saving his life. Garza's combat lifesaver training prior to his deployment with the 3rd Brigade Combat Team in March "kicked in" when he needed it most, Parish said.

"If he hadn't paid attention during training, I wouldn't be standing here today. He pulled me out of that humvee. He applied a pressure dressing. He applied a tourniquet just like he was supposed to," Parish told the Soldiers of C Company, 2nd Battalion, 54th Infantry Regiment, who are in their third week of training, a week dedicated to combat lifesaving skills.

When Parish attended basic training in September 2006, the curriculum included only the very basic first aid training. If time permitted, Soldiers hoped Katherine Bray will soon be able to sleep at night, something she said she hasn't done for about six years.

"Christian has seizures at night, and when he has them he can't move or talk, so there's no way for him to tell us what's going on," said Bray about her son who is 7. This means she or her husband, Capt. Vincent Bray, who is attending school in England, must stay with their son during the night.

Bray will be able to sleep in her own bed this spring, because Christian will have a new companion to keep him safe and warn his parents of an emergency.

"Today is life changing for our Family," Bray said at a Jan. 24 ceremony at the post commissary, where Christian was recognized as a recipient of a Canine Assistants dog, which was donated by

New ammo improves breaching

M-1030 minimizes ricochet hazards

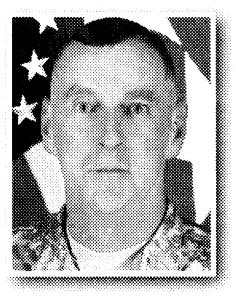
Soldiers Armywide will soon have better shotgun ammunition to open locked wooden doors during urban ballistic breaching operations.

Units are needed to field the ammo, said John Amick, senior analyst at the Directorate of Combat Developments.

Amick said he wants units Armywide to know more about the breaching cartridges so they will start using them. The M-1030 ammunition will be fielded here and abroad.

"Soldiers should ask to requisition (the M-1030 cartridge), and when they get ready for training, they should want to use this because it's better," he said.

The M-1030 anti-materiel cartridge, used for breaching only, minimizes ricochet hazards currently associated with buckshot and has been in the works for about five years, Amick said. Existing shotgun-ballistic breaching uses buckshot cartridges that are not designed for breaching.



Buckshot contains small metal balls that, when fired at an object like a lock, are supposed to defeat the locking mechanism on a door, Amick said. If done incorrectly, wood or metal fragments can

COMMANDER'S COLUMN

Benning's mission is to train to standard while managing the installation's natural resources

COMMANDING GENERAL
Maj. Gen. Walter Wojdakowski

The Army's primary mission is to defend the United States — its people, its land and its heritage. We, at Fort Benning, take this duty seriously — training adaptive leaders and Soldiers to win the Global War on Terrorism while managing the natural resources on our installation.

Our 184,000 acres aren't only the future home of the Maneuver Center of Excellence but home to a longleaf pine ecosystem with its endangered red-cockaded woodpecker, the gopher tortoise and the relict trillium.

As we move through the Base Realignment and Closure process, we will continue to be environmental stewards. In December, the Record of Decision for our Environmental Impact Statement (EIS) was published in the Federal Register. This completed the process which validated the environmental and socioeconomic impact of moving the Armor School from Fort Knox, Ky., to Fort Benning.

Although that statement is complete, it's important that we don't lose sight of our responsibility as stewards of the environment.

As we build the new Armor School facilities, ranges, and training areas, our plan is to contain and minimize the impact of this construction on the environment.

Every Soldier plays a vital role in the protection and stewardship of our natural resources. A good indicator of a unit's tactical proficiency is to monitor "trash discipline." Units that practice good "trash discipline" not only preserve our ecosystems but also deny the enemy vital information about their size, equipment, morale and combat efficiency. We train as we fight and therefore must leave our training areas with little or no trace that we have been there.

Our Army is committed to providing relevant and ready land power capabilities to the combatant commanders. We train Soldiers, grow leaders and forge them into cohesive units through tough, realistic training in a multitude of climates and conditions. Sustaining our diverse environmental resources is a critical component of maintaining Soldier readiness.

To sustain the future Army, we must implement effective policies and practices that safeguard the environment and our quality of life in a manner our nation expects.

Sustainability promises to be the method to ensure training lands and ranges continue to exist. This mission-oriented approach to preserve our natural resources is everyone's responsibility.

Our Army core values inspire us to act with integrity, to do what is right legally and morally, and that includes taking care of our environment.

Follow Me!

Remain focused on Soldier safety

U.S. ARMY COMBAT READINESS/ SAFETY CENTER
Brig. Gen. William H. Forrester

When I see young Soldiers at airports, returning from deployments to the loving arms of their Families, I swell with pride. I wonder if these Soldiers were prepared to travel and, more importantly, if they're prepared for what waits them.

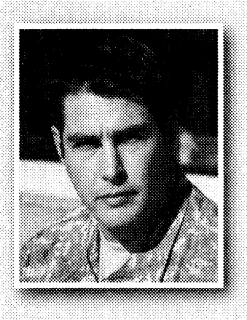
I believe Soldiers are best cared for when they are in the company of fellow Soldiers. I believe the best supervision a Soldier can have is in the unit, where there is compassionate, professional leadership to watch and protect.

Knowing that 40 to 50 percent of the Soldiers I see are en route to theater, I believe that where there is an engaged leader, these Soldiers are protected.

We learned from our initial entry there are two ironclad priorities in military operations that are engrained in us: mission accomplishment and the welfare of our Soldiers.

These priorities are as applicable in war as in peace. The honor of ownership and the responsibilities pertaining to the well being of those in our ranks lies with us. Within our formations, our Soldiers have battle buddies, NCOs and officers who attempt to ensure they make it home safely from their deployment. However, I contemplated who at home serves as guardian? The answer is simple — you, I and Family members. As we build relationships with our Soldiers, we understand what makes them tick.

Use tools such as the Leader's Accident Risk Assessment of Subordinates and Accident Risk Assessment for Individuals to help identify individuals in your formations who might be at risk for an accident. Both assessments can be found on the USACRC Web site at https://crc.army.mil.



You can mitigate risk factors if you are aware risk exists, and the chain of command can help. As leaders, knowing your Soldiers is key to protecting them.

As an Army having fought for six-plus years, daily executing warriors task and drills, we can't allow ourselves to think our only enemy is the one we engage on battlefields.

As informed and engaged leaders, we must remain focused on keeping our Soldiers safe with the same vigor we execute on the battlefield. I am proud of your Herculean efforts in protecting our Soldiers on both battlefronts, home and abroad.

This week in Fort Benning history

1928

•Capt. William Hutson was more practical, perhaps, than romantic. After escorting his sister down the aisle of the Protestant Chapel, he decided to take advantage of the decorations, the minister, the music and the guests.

He and his willing fiancee, Miss Mae Parent, who were set to wed the following week, went ahead with their own wedding at midnight.

• At the movies: Shooting Girons, Cheating Cheaters, High School Hero and The Valley of the Giants.

1935

•It was probably the only time a Studebaker won a race anywhere. But this one, Lt. C.H. Studebaker, was riding Applejack when he took first place in a jumping contest at the Fort Benning Horseshow Bowl.

• A Benning Herald reporter tipped his hat to an unidentified lady, the wife of a Soldier, who was known for her extensive collection of parking tickets.

The young woman had taken to carrying a bright red parking citation wherever she went. When she parked, as she was inclined — wherever and for as long as she pleased — she posted the ticket on her windshield. MPs who spotted her illegally parked car assumed someone else had already cited her.

•The Department of Experiment was testing five new mess hall tables on Fort Benning. Previously, mess tables were made of soft woods and left unvarnished. They had to be scrubbed constantly.

After the Great War, Army officials decided mess hall maintainance was labor intensive and costly. The oak tables were treated with a water-proof finish and easily cleaned.

• In the Benning Herald Social Notes: Skippy Jones celebrated his second birthday with a party. The table "was beautiful, with pink snapdragons and pink candles." Poor Skippy.

•Bayonet readers were encouraged to "Be Thrifty in 1950, Go Greyhound!" A roundtrip ticket to Los Angeles sold for $73.25.

•A new ruling by the Army and Air Force made it mandatory for shoppers at post exchange facilities to carry a "purchase permit," a forerunner of the ID cards used today. Soldiers and their spouses were issued "unlimited privilege card." Veterans were issued "limited privilege cards," which restricted them from purchasing uniforms. Civilian employees were issued a "special privilege card" which gave them access to post snack bars and cafeterias.

•Long before it was "The Best Army Installation in the World," Fort Benning was known as "America's most complete Army post," according to The Bayonet.

The article, written in response to a civilian's request to visit the post, insisted that Fort Benning "belongs to the people."

"It is open to anyone, regardless of race or color," the author said. "We should be delighted to show you and your friends what we do here."

He went so far as to offer visitors full access.

"Should you wish to examine the men's living quarters, that can be arranged," he said. "Should you wish to visit that which is closest to a woman's heart — the kitchen — you may do so."

•A recent pay increase resulted in less take-home for a number of Soldiers, including one master sergeant who lived on post with his wife and two children. With the pay increase, a number of benefits and allowances were also adjusted. A decrease in his government quarters occupancy allowance meant the master sergeant's pay was reduced $22, from $267.30 a month to $245.30.

All Soldiers affected adversely by the new pay policies were given the opportunity to seperate from the service.

M-1030: Designed to have less collateral damage

ricochet and injure the shooter or anyone who is nearby, possibly inflicting serious or fatal wounds.

Using buckshot can also cause "blow through," which means the shot penetrates the object fired at, he said. When Soldiers shoot completely through a door, they could wound or kill anyone on the other side, including civilians.

M-1030 cartridges, composed of steel powder suspended in paraffin wax, are designed to defeat padlock hasps, and deadbolts, knobs and hinges on wooden doors without having the collateral effects and fratricide issues of buckshot, Amick said.

The need for better breaching solutions was identified during the 2000 MOUT Advanced Concept Technology Demonstration, Amick said. Officials at the U.S. Infantry School were the combat developers of the M-1030 cartridges and wrote the requirement document for them.

Full materiel release of the M-1030 12-gauge shotgun breaching cartridge was approved in late 2007.

The cartridges were tested at Fort Benning using Winchester M-100 shotguns. They were also tested in the XM26 Modular Accessory Shotgun System as part of product qualification testing at Aberdeen Proving Grounds, Md.

The M-1030 is a Soldier Enhancement Program, which uses commercial off-the-shelf technology, said R. Ned DeWitt, Program Manager-Crew Served Weapons product director, Picatinny Arsenal, N.J.

SEP, established by the Program Executive Office Soldier, fields equipment for a tactical environment that is worn, carried or consumed by the individual Soldier.

M-1030 cartridges can also be used in Mossberg 500 and 590 shotguns and Remington 870 shotguns.

Dogs: Trained to assist people who have disabilities

the Milk-Bone Canine Heroes Program.

Christian said he was happy to get a dog to help him as he stood next to Maddux, one of the Canine Assistants ambassador dogs.

Canine Assistants dogs are trained to physically assist their recipients by opening and closing doors, pushing and pulling wheelchairs, turning lights on and off and retrieving dropped items. They can even pluck a single facial tissue from the box and take it to their owner.

Dogs learn 90 commands, but many are taught special commands that assist their recipients with their individual needs, including those who have seizures, said Frances Rosemeyer, Canine Assistants representative.

"This is really amazing for our Family and for Christian, because we want Christian to be independent ... and this dog is really going to enable him to do that," Bray said.

Training lasts from 18 months to two years before the dogs meet their new owners. Christian and his mother will attend a two-week camp in May, where Christian will be "chosen" by his new assistant.

"The dogs actually pick the person, and then the person specifically works with that dog for the next week and a half," said Judy Moore, Canine Assistants recipient services coordinator.

Canine Assistants, a nonprofit organization, was founded in 1991. They train golden retrievers and Labradors for people with physical disabilities, seizure disorders and other special needs.

The organization breeds their own dogs and begins training them when they are about 2 weeks old, Rosemeyer said.

Canine Assistants has about 900 dogs placed with recipients.

Milk-Bones partnered with DeCA as part of the nationwide Milk-Bone Canine Heroes program that helps sponsor Canine Assistant service dogs.

"This is the 55th dog we have presented to a military Family," said J.D. Fenessy, Del Monte and Milk-Bone national sales director. "We've been involved with (the Canine Assistants program) since about 1994."

Canine Assistants sponsorship includes purchasing the dog, extensive training for the dog and the recipient and lifelong veterinary services totaling more than $12,500. For more information about Canine Assistants, visit www.canineassistants.org.

Parish: Urges Soldiers to stay focused on training to attend the Combat Lifesaver Course when they reached their first duty station.

Parish went from basic to Airborne School and on to Kelley Hill, where he was sent immediately for a month of predeployment training at the National Training Center in California in January. When his unit returned to Fort Benning in February, they packed their bags for Iraq.

In June, while returning to Outpost Cahill from a routine patrol, Parish's four-vehicle convoy was attacked. The 6 foot, 1 inch, 230-pound gunner was knocked unconscious briefly, then woke to find his leg covered in blood where shrapnel had pierced his thigh. Three blasts to the body armor covering his torso left him fighting for breath.

In less than five minutes, the 5 foot, 9 inch, 180-pound Garza had ripped the tattered canopy from the humvee and hefted Parish out through the top. He dragged him to safety, stemmed the flow of blood and applied a tourniquet. A medevac chopper arrived in minutes.

"The whole thing happened that fast," said Parish, who spent 30 days in the hospital and underwent 10 operations. "I was losing blood fast. If it hadn't been for Garza, I would have bled out."

Today's basic trainees are apt to deploy just as quickly as Parish did after they reach their first duty stations. But they'll go better prepared, he said, because they receive more extensive training. Since June, Sand Hill Soldiers have received battlefield first responder training, which covers almost everything in the Combat Lifesaver curriculum. They learn to do chest decompressions, initiate IVs and control bleeding, among other things.

"The only difference is they don't get a certificate," said Capt. Ray Windmiller, the battalion executive officer, who invited Parish to speak to the Soldiers Wednesday.

Windmiller said the young Soldier's story will likely give the new Soldiers something they would only get otherwise through combat experience.

"Confidence. They'll learn to trust their training and their equipment and their battle buddies as they gain more experience," he said. "But having him share his experience will drive home the importance of this training."

Indeed, Parish challenged the Soldiers to put their faith in their basic training experience. They must learn to "trust their training, trust their equipment and trust their drill sergeants," he said.

And they must have confidence in their battle buddies.

"Look at the Soldier on your left or right. You didn't know him a few weeks ago. I'd only known Garza 90 days when he saved my life," Parish said. "Trust your battle buddy. Make sure he stays awake and pays attention to training. He may save your life some day."

U.S. uses biometrics technology to fight insurgents

Lesson learned from law enforcement helps U.S. forces in Iraq

THE BAYONET
Brenda Donnell

The Army and Marine Corps are using existing law enforcement technology to fight insurgents in Iraq, said Ed Nelson, a military analyst with Fort Benning's Lessons Learned Integration Cell, known as L2I.

Soldiers and Marines are using biometrics to enroll people in a Department of Defense database to track criminals and suspects, Nelson said.

Biometrics are measurable biological and behavioral characteristics that can be used for automated recognition. Traits recorded and studied include fingerprints, DNA, facial structure, retina patterns, voice characteristics, odor, gait and signature. Biometrics are difficult to counterfeit and nearly impossible to falsify.

"By using biometrics, the Army is using a lesson learned from law enforcement to fight insurgents," Nelson said. "In the future, the Army should note this success and use lessons learned that are applicable to a particular situation regardless of the source of the lesson."

Law enforcement officials routinely collect data about criminals and suspects and enter the information into the National Crime Information Center, an FBI database, Nelson said. Other organizations that use biometrics are the Social Security Administration and state motor vehicle departments that provide data about people, whether they have criminal records or not.

Learning from these agencies, DoD began using a database called the Biometric System for Access, or BISA, in 2004, after a dining facility in Mosul was bombed, Nelson said.

Since then, more than 350,000 sets of fingerprints, photos and retina scans have been collected from contracted employees and Iraqis who have been enrolled in the BISA database. The database grows at the rate of 4,000 to 5,000 records per week, he said.

The information is used to link a person, not just a name, to biometrics, which provides identification of third country nationals, according to the Center for Army Lessons Learned. BISA also provides other intelligence and an accessible and searchable database, allows identification at the tactical level for raids and checkpoints and provides information for criminal prosecution.

Records collected by U.S. forces can also be compared against the FBI fingerprint database.

Soldiers and Marines use two systems to enroll people into BISA, said Jerry Jackson, senior systems analyst for the Deputy Chief of Staff office, Army G-2. They are the Biometric Automated Toolset and the Handheld Interagency Identity Detection Equipment.

BAT is a combination of commercial off-the-shelf systems that collects fingerprints and facial and iris images that are stored in a laptop computer. The information is then downloaded to BISA.

HIIDE is a device about the size of a digital camera that captures iris and facial images and fingerprints and then downloads the data to BAT, according to a University of Military Intelligence "Note to the Field" from December 2006.

For more information about biometrics or to submit a request for information about other subjects, contact the Lessons Learned Integration office at 706-545-4704 or visit the U.S. Army Infantry Center Web site and click on Lessons Learned Integration (L2I) Cell.

Veteran takes Army knowledge to the classroom

THE BAYONET
Rachel L. Watkins

After 22 years in the Army, retired Staff Sgt. William Great pursued a bachelor's degree in political science with the intention of becoming a lawyer. But a substitute teaching job during college led him in a different direction.

"I found I really had a connection with children," said Great, who joined the Troops to Teachers Program in August of 2006.

Troops to Teachers is a federally funded program that reimburses qualified active-duty, National Guard and Reserve Soldiers who become public school teachers.

The Troops to Teachers program provides a $10,000 bonus to those who teach at a high-needs school and up to $5,000 for teacher certification. Program participants are allowed to pick the subject and grade they want to teach, but they are required to serve as a teacher for at least three years.

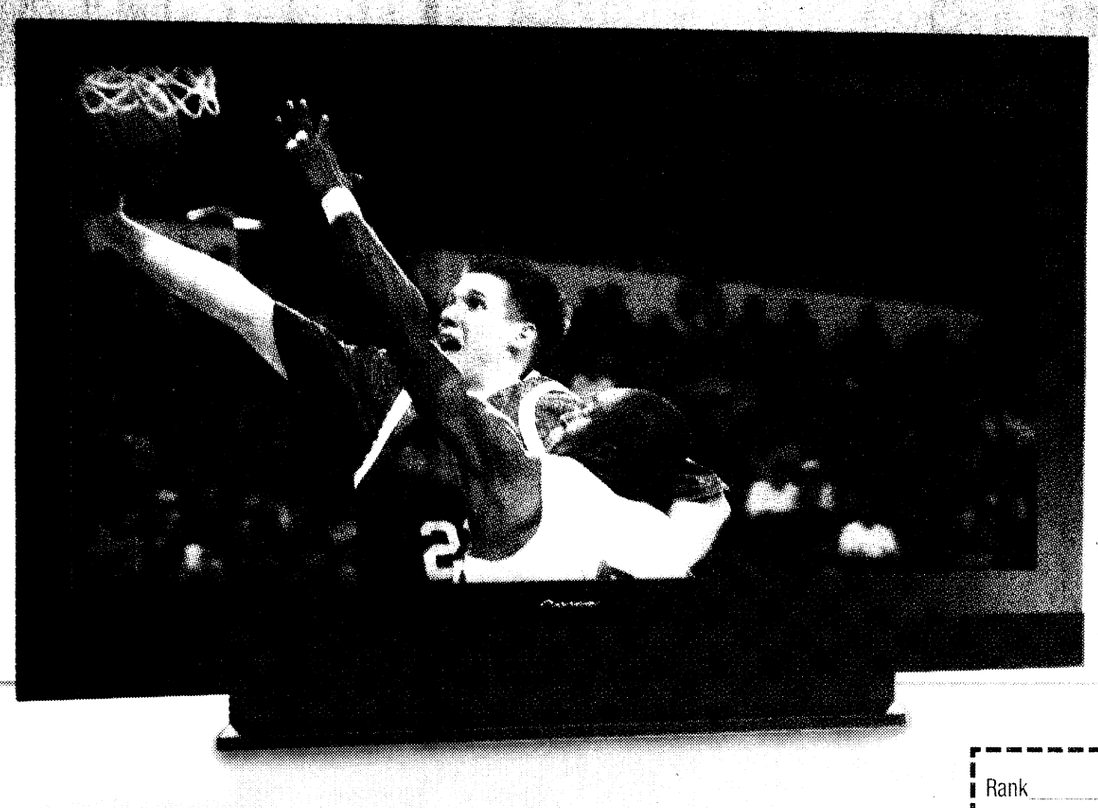
Great is a resource teacher at Dimon Elementary Magnet Academy in Columbus where he teaches kindergarten through fifth grade.

"Studies have proven that military veterans make great teachers," said Bill Kirkland, program manager for Georgia Troops to Teachers. "They have many life lessons to teach."

Great incorporates what he learned in the Army into his classroom. When he started teaching, he didn't know how he would format a schedule, so he used the training format he used in the Army. Great said the classroom and the Army environment have similarities.

"Teamwork, self-discipline, punctuality and respect are all important in the classroom, just as they are in the Army," Great said.

Great said Troops to Teachers has helped tremendously with finances. He is working toward a teaching certification with a specialty in special education and general curriculum.



Since 1994, Troops to Teachers has helped 11,000 veterans become public school teachers nationwide. More than 650 teachers from the program have been hired in Georgia.

For more information about Troops to Teachers, Kirkland will be available to answer questions at 9:30 a.m. Tuesday at Infantry Hall, Room 21a, or call him at 800-745-0709, or go to www.tttga.net.

Cooperation between locals improves region

3RD HBCT PUBLIC AFFAIRS
Sgt. Natalie Rostek

FORWARD OPERATING BASE HAMMER, Iraq — Coalition Forces and local Iraqi Security Force leaders from Al Jadida, Iraq, met Jan. 22 at the Al Muthana Joint Security Station to discuss local security.

Lt. Col. Troy Perry, commander of the 2nd Battalion, 69th Armor Regiment, and Capt. David Preston, company commander for B Company, 1st Battalion, 504 Parachute Infantry Regiment, attended the meeting.

It's been a long road, but improvements in security and economics have been incredible, Preston said.

"The improvement has been pretty impressive from when we first got here," he said. "The problem was communication. The neighborhood council was not communicating with the Iraqi army and police."

Preston said his unit initiated the change when they convinced community and ISF leaders to attend meetings.

"Now the meetings are Iraqi-led and we are just here to support," Preston said.

Col. Ahmed, Iraqi police station chief of Al Jadida, said the purpose of the meetings was to discuss all issues, both good and bad.

"We bring it all to the table," Ahmed said through a translator.

Because of this, Perry and Preston agree, Al Jadida has shown significant improvement, beginning with security and now economic growth.

1st Lt. John Burns said he has seen a tremendous decrease in violence since assuming duties as a platoon leader for D Company, 2-69th AR, and has supportive evidence.

Preston said the ISF is having a positive influence on the local population, building confidence in the Iraqi army and police.

"They are conducting joint patrols," he said. "They do career days at local schools where they talk to the children about the Iraqi army and the police. This gives the locals a positive image of the Iraqi Security Forces that they don't always get."

The positive outcome did not come easy and there is still a long road ahead, Perry said.

"Coalition Forces do combined patrols with the ISF," he said. "They try to spend nine straight hours a week training and operating with them. They do medical training, weapons training, and training on how to clear and search buildings."

In addition to the ISF, Burns said another group is protecting and securing communities.

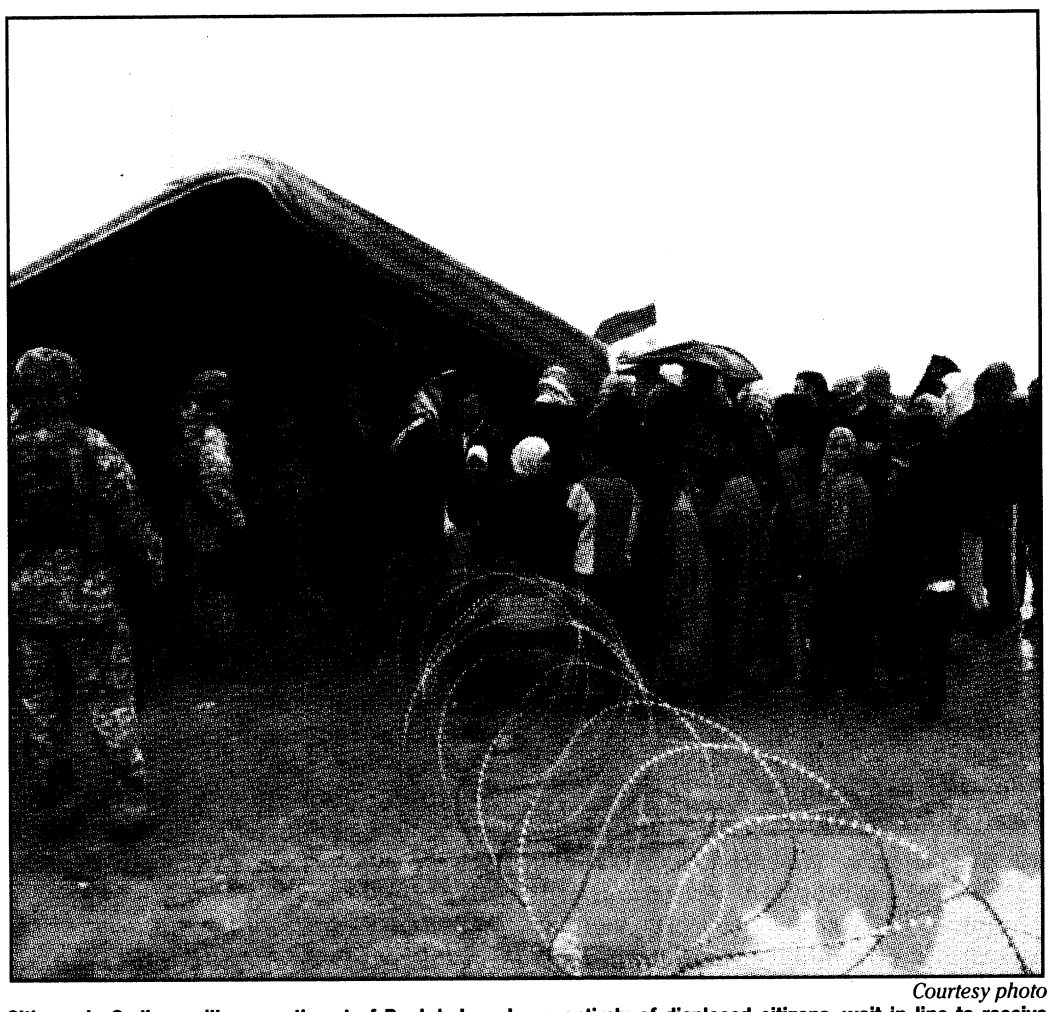
"The Concerned Local Citizens have been going for about a month," Burns said. " They trained about a month or two before that ... They work at checkpoints and the ISF is training them to search vehicles. They are all working toward the same goal."

It is that goal that is creating confidence among locals toward their army and police, said Maj. Faik, a company commander with 2nd Battalion, 1st Brigade, 11th Iraqi Army Division.

Preston said the neighborhood council and the ISF also work hand-in-hand. When the Iraqi army receives a tip about an IED, council chairmen accompany the Iraqi Soldiers to the IED site.

"This builds confidence in the ISF and CF," Preston said. "The combined patrols. It makes them feel more secure."

1st Sgt. Kenneth Kempke, D Company, 2-69th AR, said cooperation is the key to improved security and the economy.



"The country will go the way the economy goes," he said. "The people will gravitate toward those who give them security, money and abilities."

"We see more people on the streets, more kids on the playground, more traffic, more vendors," Preston said.

Their Iraqi Security Force counterparts agree.

"People are going to the markets and parks now," Ahmed said.

Ahmed said more stores were opening and residents were spending money at the stores.

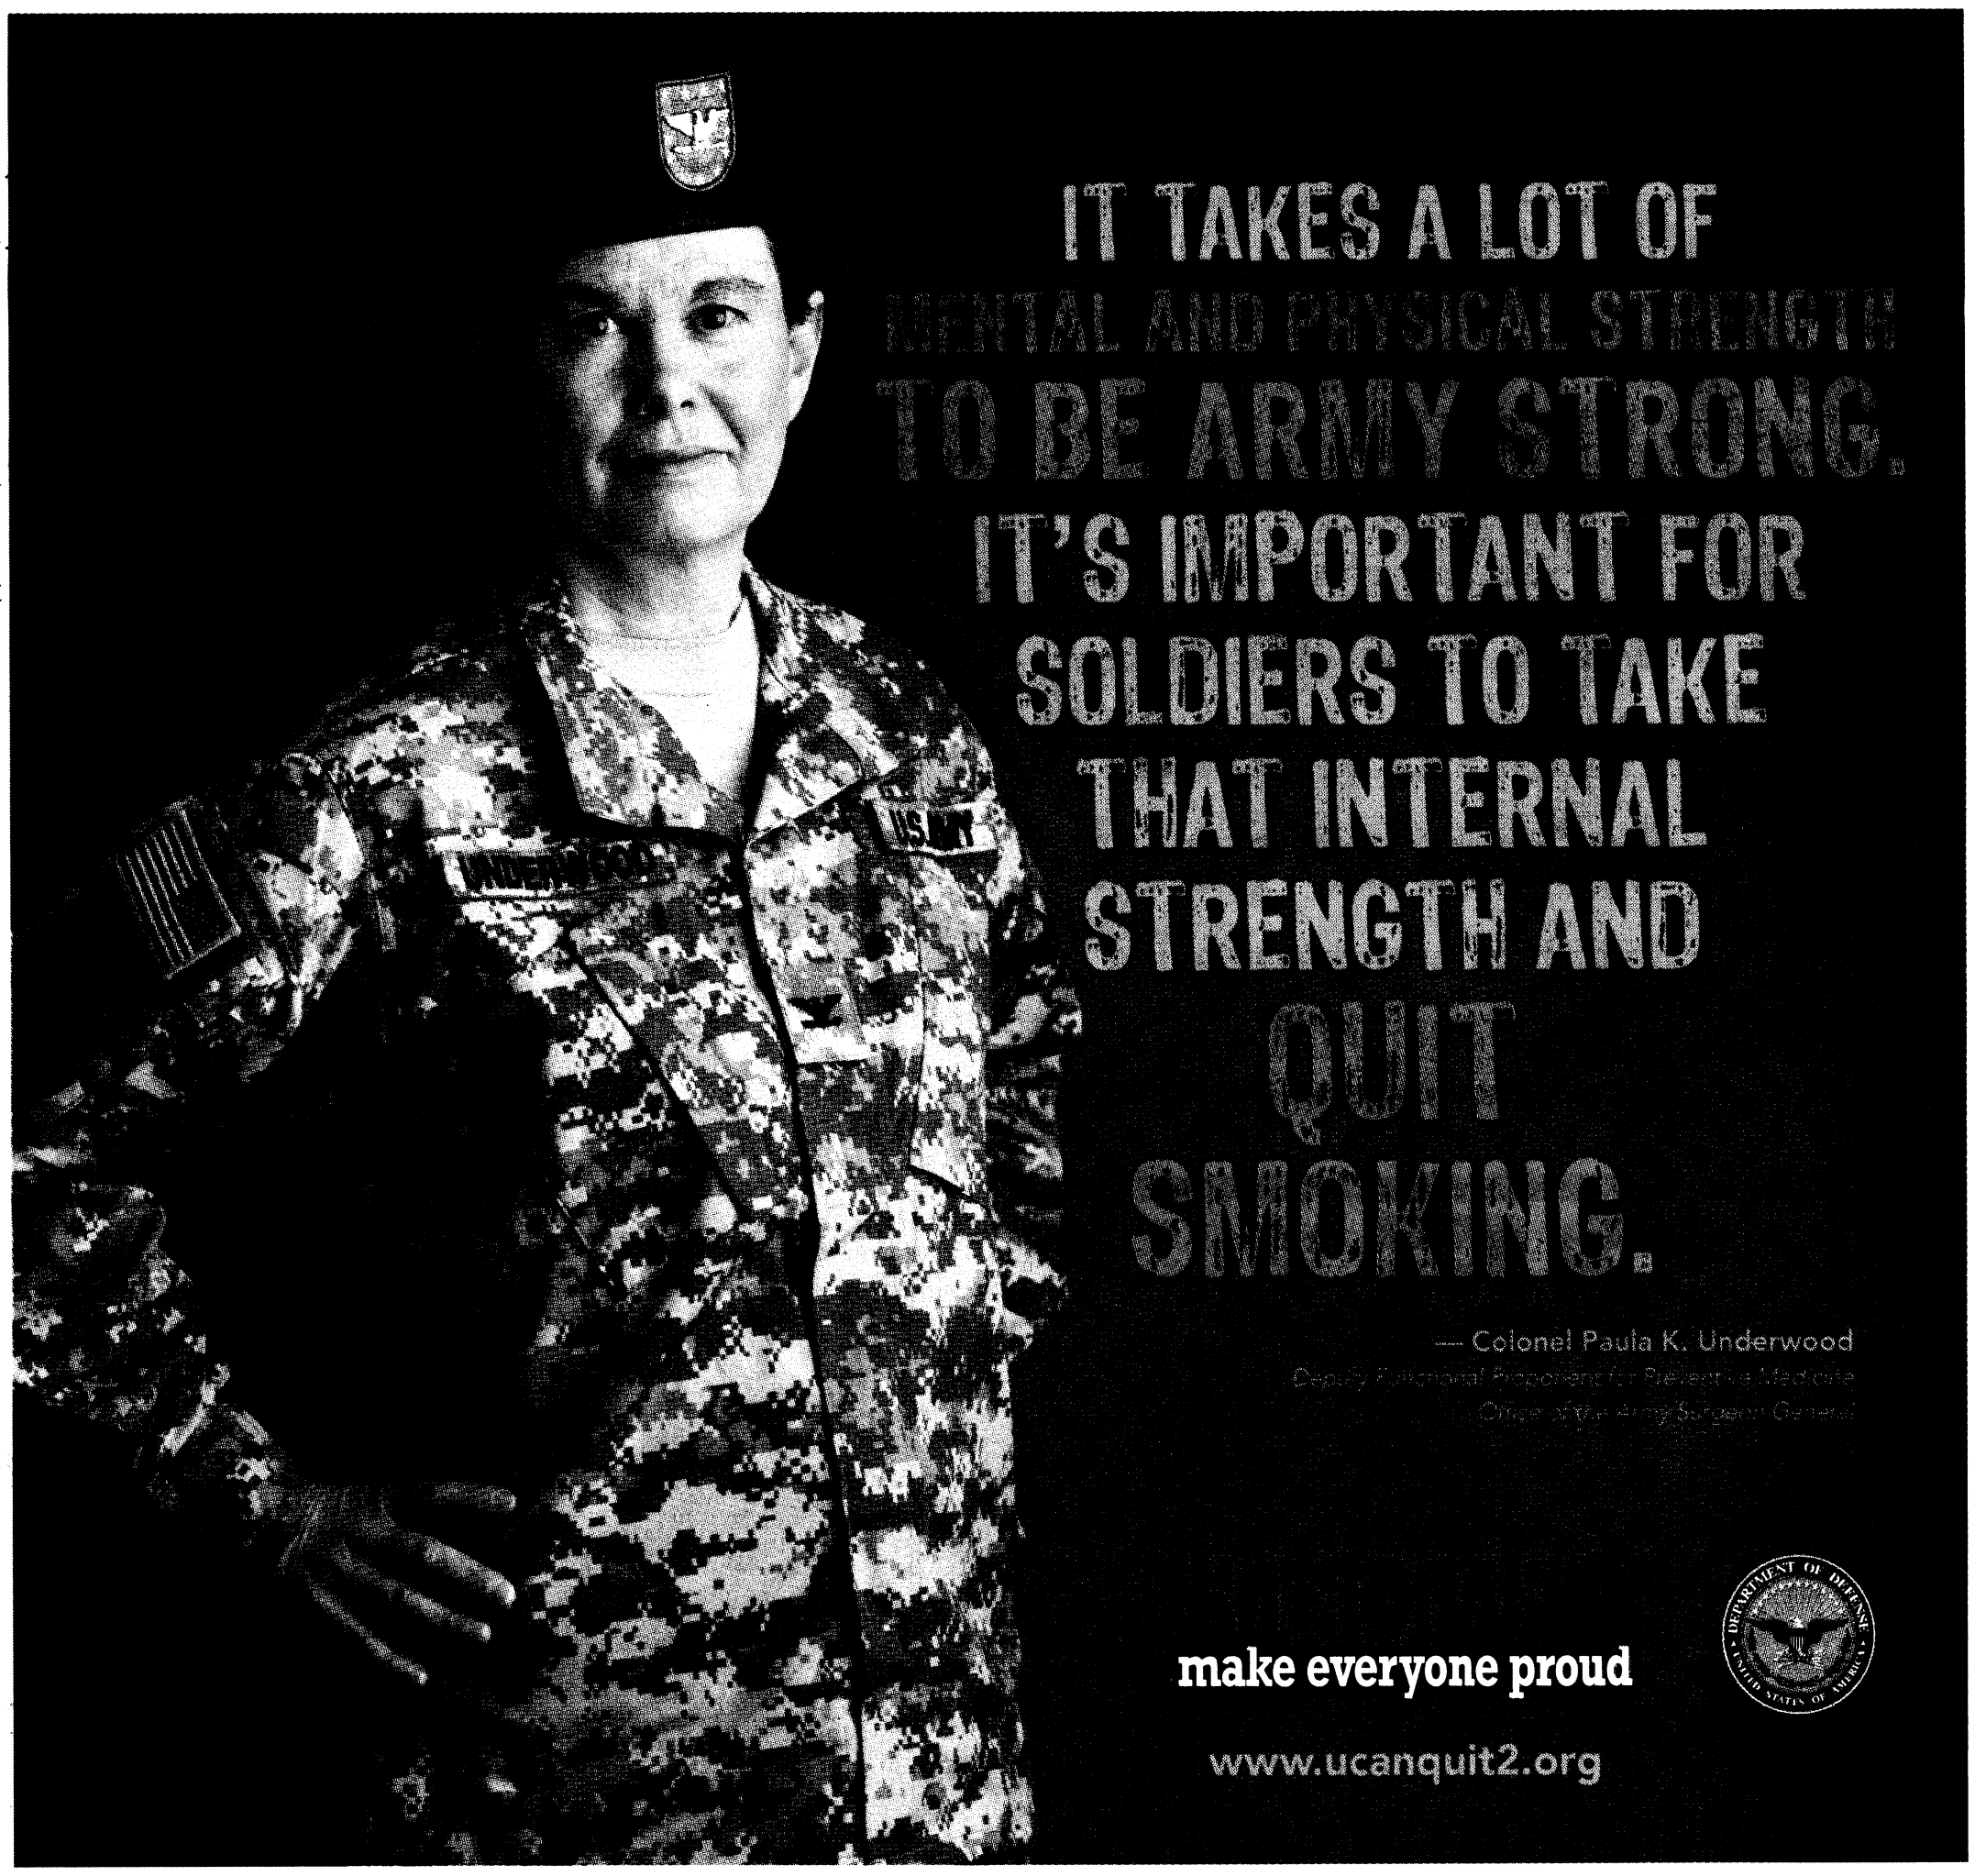
Citizens in Sadiq, a village southeast of Baghdad made up entirely of displaced citizens, wait in line to receive medical attention from medics from A Battery, 1st Battalion, 10th Field Artillery, Jan. 23.

Unit provides health care to displaced citizens

3RD HBCT PUBLIC AFFAIRS
Spc. Ben Hutto



FORWARD OPERATING BASE HAMMER, Iraq — Soldiers assigned to A Battery, 1st Battalion, 10th Field Artillery, assisted by Concerned Local Citizens from Sabbah Nissan, provided medical assistance to 125 people in Sadiq, a village southeast of Baghdad, Jan. 23.

The village consists entirely of displaced citizens from Diyala Province.

"The medical operation provided essential medical care for the citizens of Sadiq," said 1st Lt. Eddie Wright, from Sanford, Fla., the medical officer for 1-10 FA.

A Battery has been working with the Sabbah Nissan council to provide water, food, school supplies and medical assistance to 11 villages near FOB Hammer.

"It feels really good helping the Iraqis," said Spc. Brandon Stoval, from Oklahoma City, Okla.

Dogs deploy to help Soldiers deal with stress

VetDogs donates two service dogs to medical unit in Iraq

U.S. ARMY MEDICAL COMMAND
Jerry Harben

> The dogs' presence in the unit areas will help build unit morale and cohesion. The animals will build empathy and foster compassion, which are essential components for healing.
> — Maj. Stacie M. Caswell

Soldiers in Iraq have some new best friends. Budge and Boe, two black Labrador retrievers, have enlisted to help Soldiers deal with mental-health issues in combat.

The dogs were donated to the Army by VetDogs, an organization that provides service animals for disabled veterans.

Staff Sgt. Mike Calaway and Staff Sgt. Jack Greene spent the second week of December in New York learning to work with the dogs. Calaway and Greene are occupational therapy assistants with the 85th Medical Detachment (Combat Stress Control), which provides behavioral-health support for Soldiers in Iraq.

"The therapy dogs are an innovative approach to establishing working relationships with command and assist in developing rapport with Soldiers," Maj. Stacie M. Caswell, commander of the 85th, said in an email from Iraq.

"The dogs' presence in the unit areas will help build unit morale and cohesion. The animals will build empathy and foster compassion, which are essential components for healing."

The dogs have been trained by Mike Sergeant of VetDogs to work despite loud noises or other distractions and not to socialize with people who may be afraid or disinterested.

"The dogs are obedience trained. If a Soldier does not want to interact with the dog, all he has to do is raise his hand, and the dog will turn away," Sergeant said.

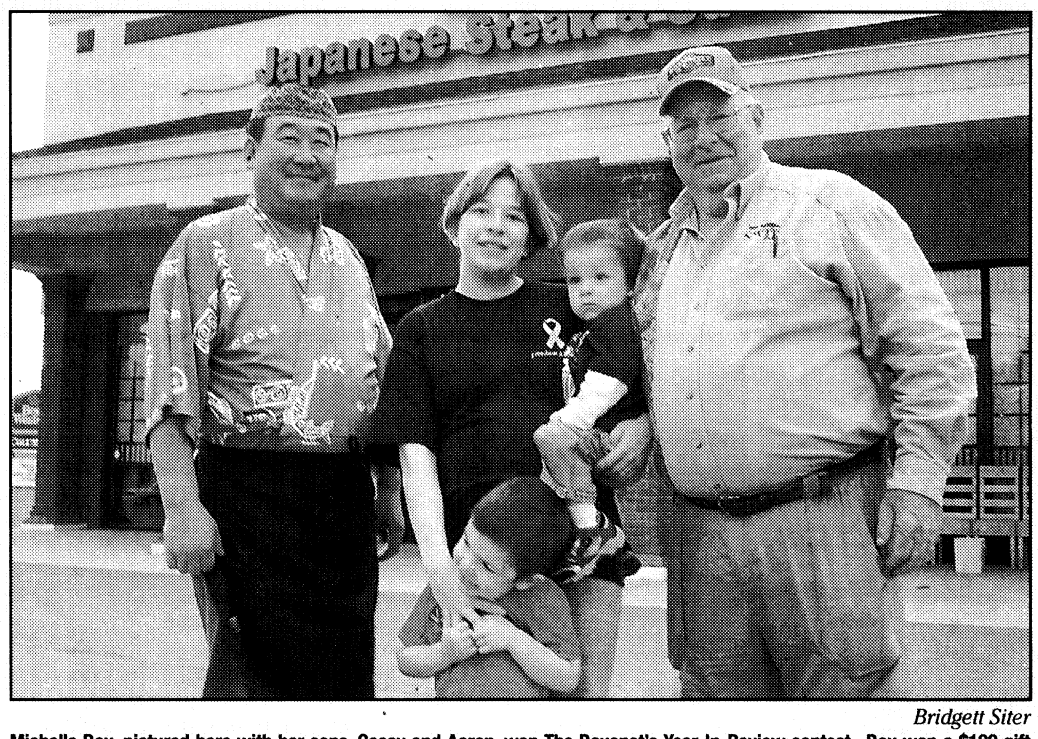
Calaway and Greene have learned basic dog-handling skills.

"We are starting to form a bond with the dogs. We are learning basic commands and how to handle the dogs when there are distractions around," Greene said.

Dogs and other animals are used in hospital settings for various forms of therapy, and to assist people who are blind or disabled. VetDogs has previously donated dogs to Walter Reed Army Medical Center in Washington, D.C., for such programs.

Military working dogs are used in military deployments for such missions as guard patrols and bomb detection.

This will be the first time dogs have been used to facilitate mental-health therapy in a combat environment.



"Research has shown that the use of therapy dogs helps to reduce stress and anxiety levels and increases the feeling of safety of patients participating in traditional therapeutic behavior health groups," Caswell said.

"It is known by common experience that when the (military police) or (explosive ordnance disposal) teams bring dogs into groups of Soldiers experiencing stressors on the battlefield that these groups will open up: they respond to the dogs with smiles and become more talkative," she said.

When the 85th finishes its tour and returns to the U.S. next spring, Budge and Boe will stay with the 528th Medical Detachment (Combat Stress Control).

When the therapy dogs are unable to perform their mission, they will redeploy. They may be transferred to a medical facility and continue their therapy service. They may be returned to VetDogs, or they can be adopted by a service member, Caswell said.

BENCH NOTES

MITCHELL THOMAS IV

Woods is Good

Mr. Woods does it again. Tiger blew through the field to win the Buick Invitational Sunday with a 21 under 71 and eight shot victory. It was the ninth time in his career that he has won by that margin or more.

Although he bogied three straight holes en route to his third straight PGA win, many are expecting him to better his 2000 campaign, in which he had nine major wins.

I tell you, this guy may be the most dominant athlete in the world. The name Tiger says it all, especially with those teeth of his.

Brady is a go

After a week of media frenzy, Tom Brady appears to be ready. The Pats' QB, who was seen wearing a cowboy-boot sized ankle brace and holding a bouquet of flowers, acknowledged the injury but said it won't affect his game come Sunday.

In my opinion, there was never anything wrong with Brady. This was a scheme cooked up by coach Bill Belichick to gain a mental edge. Even if he was injured, the Pats' reserves could knock off New York. Believe me, the flowers were for the Giants. They will be buried very soon.

Warriors want Webber

The Golden State Warriors have acquired forward Chris Webber to help round out their young squad.

Webber, who hasn't played since last season, will be reuniting with the same team and coach he played for in his rookie season. Although he and coach Don Nelson were oil and water back in the day, I think this might be a good fit for the aged vet.

Hopefully C-Webb won't be such a baby and play to his potential. Too bad it's 14 years too late.

Damon honored

Yankees' lead-off hitter Johnny Damon was honored for his work with wounded Soldiers during the 86th annual New York baseball writers' dinner.

Damon, whose father was a career Army officer, is the national spokesperson for the Wounded Warrior Project, which provides assistance to service members wounded in Iraq and Afghanistan.

It's cool to see his effort acknowledged. Hats off to Damon.

Shaq gets snubbed?

The Miami Heat's aging center Shaquille O'Neal is in danger of ending his All-Star streak. O'Neal, who would set an NBA record with 15 straight appearances, has been dealing with countless injuries, including a sore hip that doesn't seem to be improving.

Although the Diesel plans to serve out the final two years of his contract, I really think this should be his swan song. When you have hip problems, you know you're too old.

Wounded warrior says hunting heals

THE BAYONET
Bridgett Siter

1st Lt. Kyle Burns has celebrated a number of milestones in the process of recovering from the severe wounds he suffered in Afghanistan in June 2006, when his vehicle was hit by three RPGs.

There was the moment he learned that, yes, he could stay in the Army. Through the Army's Wounded Warrior Program, Burns would be "rehabbed" back to fighting health at Fort Benning's Warrior Transition Battalion.

There was his first run, something doctors once said he'd never again be able to do. He's had to accept that he's moving at a slower pace, but that's OK for now.

And there was a red-letter day in the winter of 2006 when he went hunting with his father.

In a word — and not a word the 33-year-old Infantryman is particularly comfortable with — that was an "emotional" day.

"I had a passion for hunting, and it didn't look like I'd ever be able to do it again," Burns said. "I made that my goal, to be able to go out and walk in the woods. Just to get out there.

"So when I did, yeah, it was kind of emotional. I didn't get a deer, and it didn't matter a bit."

Burns enlisted 15 years ago after graduating from high school in Syracuse, N.Y., where he spent many a weekend in the woods with his father and brother. Hunting was their "thing," Burns said, and from a

SBIC falls 66-50 to A Co., 1st/29th

Game gets personal with former player on opposing team

THE BAYONET
Mitchell Thomas IV

The reigning intramural basketball champs, SBIC, wanted to prove they were fine without former teammate Jarrod Anderson. They couldn't do it.

The Stryker Bradley Instructional Company, 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment, lost to A Company, 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment, Anderson's new team, by 16 points Monday at Smith Fitness Center.

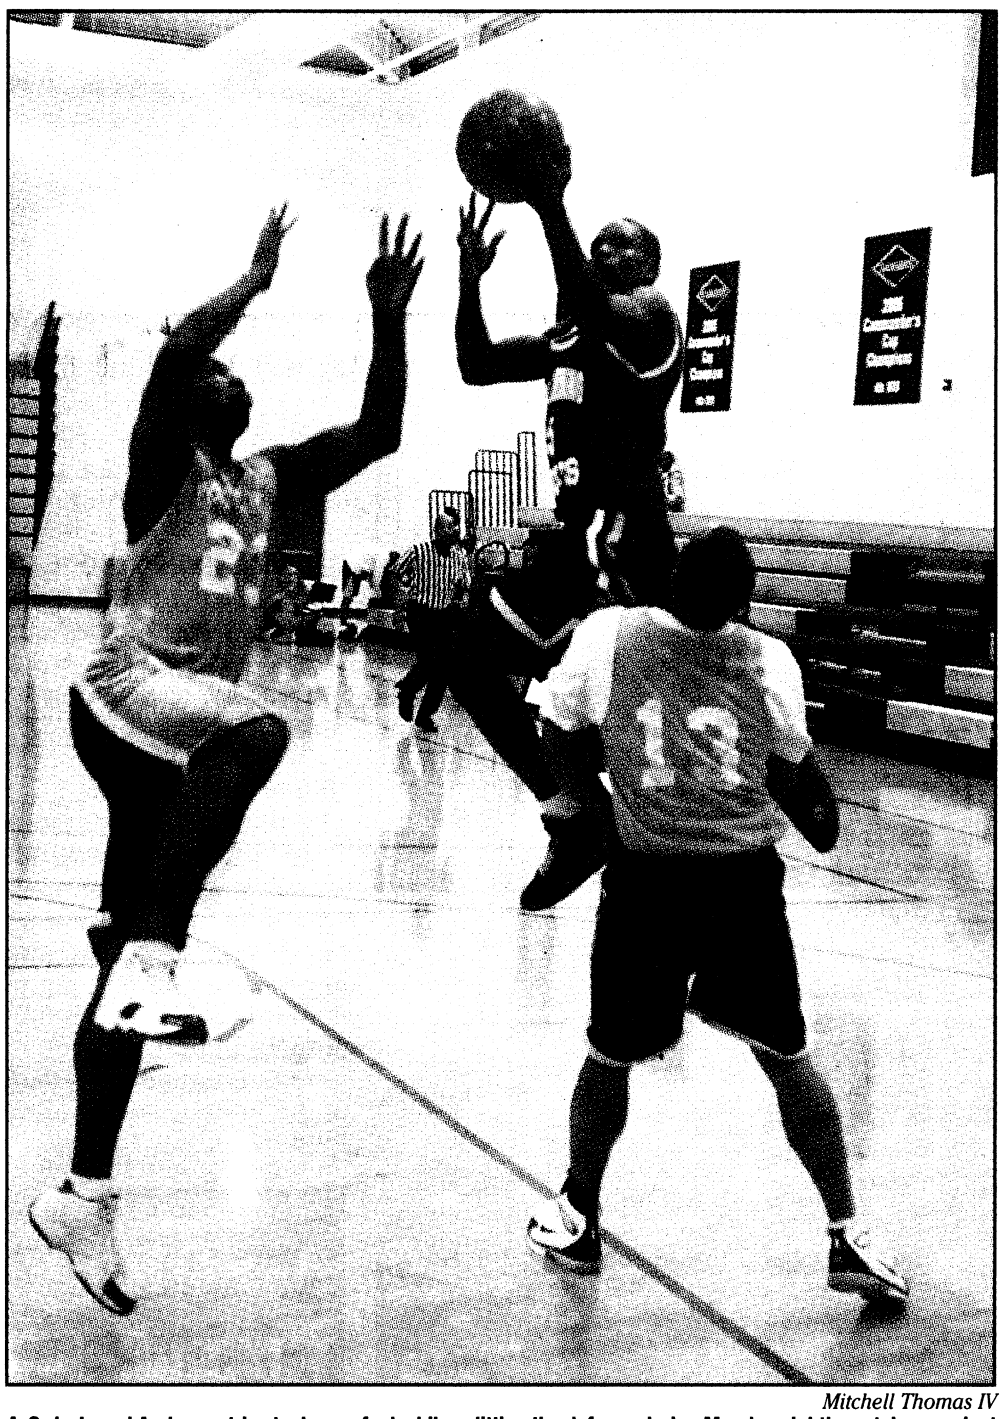
Both teams came out trading buckets. But James Manning and Anderson quickly gave A Co. the momentum after swishing consecutive three-pointers.

Although SBIC tied the game midway through the half, A Co. went on another tear and took a 27-20 lead before halftime.

"We have got to cut down turnovers, play better defense, and the offense will continue to come to us," said A Co.'s Stefan McGraw.

McGraw set his plan in motion, drawing a charge on the first play of the second half.

Star guard Lanny Wilson played solid in the second half after a cold start in the first, giving SBIC a 37-35 lead, their first of the game, with a teardrop floater in the paint.



But the second half proved to be the Anderson show. He went on a scoring frenzy, hitting shots from the perimeter and on the inside. With less than three minutes to go, Anderson supplied the finishing touch with one of his signature dunks on the break.

"I tried to take it easy early in the game, but my old team started taking the game personally," said Anderson, who finished the game with 16 points.

In the other Main Post league game, the 75th Rangers came up just short of the 92nd MPs, 32-34.

In the Sand Hill league, the 1st Battalion, 19th Infantry Regiment, knocked off the 30th Adjutant General, 64-57, and the Forward Support Company, 11th Engineers Battalion, edged out 598th Maintenance, 40-37.

Both Main Post and Sand Hill leagues will continue play Monday at 6 p.m. at the Smith Fitness Center gymnasium.

Mitchell Thomas IV

A-Co.'s Jarrod Anderson tries to draw a foul while splitting the defense during Monday night's matchup against his former SBIC team. Anderson scored 16 points to help lead his team to a 16-point victory.

New York Giants need a miracle, or at least defense

THE BAYONET
Mitchell Thomas IV

Well, we're two days away from the big game. Whatever. This Super Bowl is going to be as dull as the last three. The Patriots versus the Giants is about as even a matchup as the Bad News Bears against the '61 Yankees.

We all knew New England would be here. They have a blueprint, whether it's on the level or not, for every team in the game. With their record breaking season on the line, I think it's safe to say that this one's a wrap. But since the Giants are labeled a pro team, I have to give them the benefit of the doubt.

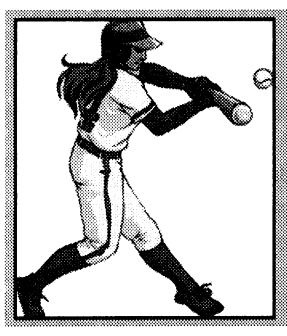
Don't take me too seriously. I'm just giving my NY boys a bit of tough love. Believe it or not, they are a pretty sound team. Here are some things I think the Giants must do to avoid causing a Times Square riot.

First and foremost, the Giants' defense is the Obi-Wan Kenobi of this game, the team's only hope. The G-men have been able to apply a steady amount of pressure to quarterbacks all season. But because of a top-notch New England offensive line, Tom Brady hasn't been on his tail much at all this season.

This will have to change Sunday. The defense is going to have to pound Brady and his highly publicized ankle as much as they can. The Giants' Osi Umeniyora has had no problem coming off the edge to put QBs in the dirt, and he's going to have to match his six-sack affair with Donovan McNabb earlier this season.

The Pats have also shown scarcity in their running game this year, which the Giants are well equipped to stop. But the Giants are extremely weak in deep coverage. They will contend with the best set of wide-outs in the league, including an angry Randy Moss, who is fresh off a career year and an assault accusation.

The Giants have a decent secondary unit led by Gibril Wilson, but they have been banged up all season. There's no doubt that Brady will be airing it out early. If they play timid on routes, I guarantee they will be paying the price all night.



And for Pete's sake, please double team Moss. Watch a tape of any Pats game this season. Playing single coverage on this guy is the biggest mistake they could make. If I were coach Coughlin, I would allow Wes Welker, Jabar Gaffney and Donte Stallworth to beat me downfield before I would let Moss get a single catch. On second thought, Welker might be as bad a problem as Moss. He is an inside threat, much like a tight end, so the Giants safeties and linebackers are going to have to key in on him.

As for offense, Eli Manning is going to have to channel his big brother to stand a chance, and I don't mean the lame, commercialized Peyton Manning we saw this season. Eli showed signs of brilliance recently, but in the last few years, he has folded when it counted most. Also, during the Giants' playoff run, they have depended far less on the passing game.

This isn't going to work against the Pats. At least 50 percent of the offense is going to have to come in the form of passes. It isn't an impossible feat. At nearly 9 feet tall, Plaxico Burress can make catches over anyone, even more so than Moss. And their second option, veteran Amani Toomer, is no slouch either.

His only problem is that he seems to have forgotten that catching the ball actually requires hands. He's had more drops in the last two weeks than in his last two years. The Giants also have virtually no tight end presence with Jeremy Shockey out with injury. As for their running game, "The Football Frankenstein" Brandon Jacobs is going to have to continue flattening first level defenders, but it won't come easy with the Pats' D line. What Jacobs makes up for in size, he lacks in durability. This cat is more flimsy than a college goal post.

As for the Pats, well, don't change a thing. Whatever illegal tapes they have of the Giants I'm sure will come in handy. It's safe to say that the '72 Dolphins have been toasted for the last time as the only undefeated Super Bowl winning team; that is, unless Don Shula can pull a Bugs Bunny and drop an ACME anvil on Brady's ankle before the coin toss. We need something to make this sorry bill worth watching. That's all folks!

Archery club on point in first competition of season

THE BAYONET
Mitchell Thomas IV

The Uchee Creek Archery Club hosted it's first local shoot of the season at the Uchee Creek Camp Ground and Marina at Fort Benning Sunday.

The club's new president, Bobby Toon, is eager to spread word of the club to even more Soldiers and civilians.

"So many people go out to Callaway or to Atlanta not knowing that there is a club here," Toon said. "We have the best range in the southeast right here, and the more people know about it, the more they can enjoy it."

The range consists of zero range bags from 20 to 50 yards, two practice 3-D courses and three actual 3-D courses on more than 100 acres of land.

Nearly 60 shooters, including many new members, participated in events for men and women of all ages and shooting levels.

In the Open classes, Blake Burger took first place, in Open A/B with a score of 214 and Jonathan Ferreira, won the Open C class with a score of 196.

In the Women's Classes, Sheila Boone won the Women's Open with a 129 and Orlando Valentine won the women's Hunter division with a 130.

Moise Hernandez took the Men's Hunter Class with 202, Ray Miller won the Bow Novice division with a score of 206, Jake Cliette won the Young Adult class with a score of 183 and Christopher Westlake won the Eagle Class with a score of 60.

The range is open daily for practice. Membership fees are $15 a year or $3 a day. Members can check out equipment, including bows and arrows, on a first come, first served basis.

For more information, call the Uchee Creek Country Store at 706-685-3060.

Program: Gives wounded Soldiers a chance to hunt again

grown-up perspective, he realizes that hunting with his father helped shape his character. It kept him out of trouble in high school, and it gave him a healthy respect for wildlife.

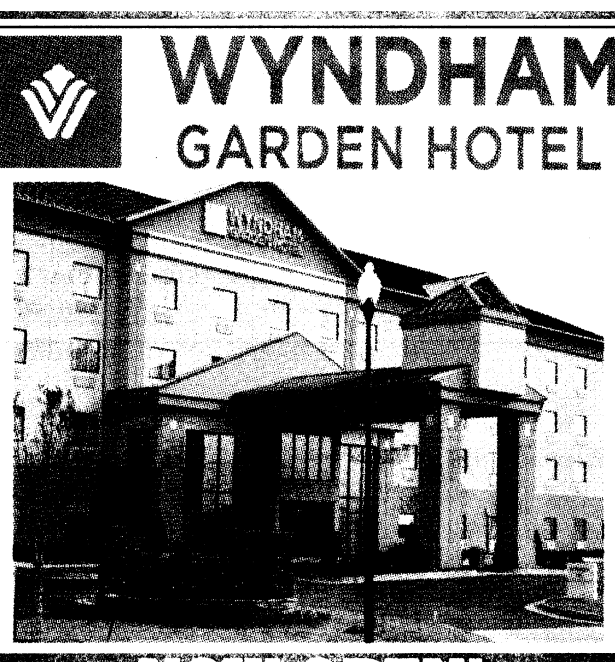
And now, after suffering severe head trauma, nerve damage and injuries to his neck and back, Burns said hunting helps him look to the future with hope. He believes hunting helps heal, and he's putting his theory to the test. While assigned to the Warrior Transition Battalion, Soldiers are required to seek tasking, a part-time job somewhere on post with flexible hours to accommodate therapy and training. Burns has teamed with local hunting legend Bill Brickner to help disabled veterans and wounded warriors hunt on Fort Benning.

Brickner has been assisting veterans for two years, using a Huntmaster Bud-Lift, a two-man hydraulic stand, donated by the Paralyzed Veterans Association. Since mid-season — that is, deer season — Burns has been helping wounded Soldiers, like himself, who were wounded in combat in Iraq and Afghanistan.

"It's not about the kill," he said. "The whole point is to connect with someone who's going through what you're going through or someone who's been there."

Burns said he's seen the profound impact this program can have on Soldiers. Another member of the Warrior Transition Battalion, whose name Burns prefers not to reveal, is struggling with post traumatic stress after being wounded in Iraq. When sleeping pills were no longer effective, he turned to alcohol. Then he started using drugs.

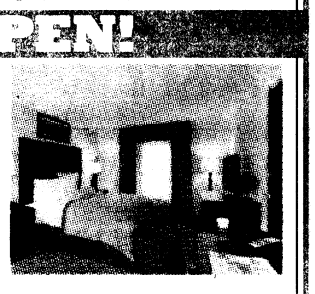
"He was getting in a lot of trouble. He just couldn't cope," Burns said. "He's getting out of the Army now, but he's doing a lot better. He said of all the things he tried, it was hunting that helped him the most."



"You can't really put it in words, what hunting means to someone who loves to hunt," he said. "But that pretty much says it all. That makes what we're doing here all worthwhile."

Brickner said he's seen similar results in chair-bound veterans who think their hunting days are over. With the lift, which accommodates wheelchairs, aging vets have been given opportunities they cherish. And that's what drives Brickner's efforts to spread the word about the program.

"Unless you've been there, you don't really understand what something like this means to someone who loves to hunt but thinks he can't do it anymore," he said.



For more information about hunting opportunities for disabled veterans or wounded warriors, contact Burns at Kyle.Burns@us.army.mil, or call Brickner at 706-681-4549.

FIT FACTS

MWR FITNESS DIRECTOR
Lori Smith

This week I am going to change things up a bit and talk about comment cards — why they are important and what happens once we get them. This idea came when I was approached by a patron asking about some questions on comment cards he had submitted. He suggested that I add this section to my article, occasionally, because many patrons may have the same questions.

So, you will start seeing some of the comments we receive and how we are addressing any concerns, community "wants" or a very welcome "thank you" for the good ones we receive. Comment cards play a very important part in our day-to-day business, as well as our future business.

Customers' comment cards give us the chance to hear about things we just may not see. The next time you have a question, please fill out a blue comment card or use one of the ICE terminals to send us your thoughts and opinions.

We have received a few comment cards about towels not being available at high-use times. The perception is we may not be washing and restocking fast enough for the demand.

The reality is, we are restocking our towel supply at Smith Fitness Center frequently, but patrons don't return a large quantity of towels. We are asking (and soon you will see a poster) that everyone please return towels after your workout, so there will be plenty for everyone.

Remember one thing, "comment" does not always mean bad. Our staff truly appreciates when people say "good job," too.

The great gas-tank debate

KING FEATURES SYNDICATE
Tom and Ray Magliozzi

Dear Tom and Ray,

I am having a debate with co-workers about whether filling your gas tank halfway is more or less efficient than filling your gas tank completely. What is the most efficient way to fill a tank? Does the weight of a full tank affect the mileage? Does gas evaporate more quickly when the tank is half-full?

I need your help to decide this debate and to decide the most efficient way to fill a gas tank. Thank you.

— Ian

Ray: I take it you're worried about the weight of the gasoline, Ian.

You think that a full tank of gas weighs more, and therefore reduces your mileage. And by filling up only halfway, you'll have a lighter car and get more miles per gallon.

Tom: The answer is, that's true. I mean, sure, theoretically, if your 3,000-pound car is 50 or 60 pounds lighter, you'll get slightly better mileage.

In fact, manufacturers spend all kinds of money taking ounces of weight out of various car parts.

Ray: Right. And there's no fuel lost to evaporation, because the fuel system in a modern car is a closed system.

Tom: But if you fill your tank only halfway, there's another major fuel loss. That's the fuel you use driving around looking for a gas station twice as often.

And that could easily wipe out any small savings you get from making your car lighter.

Ray: Plus, where do you stop? If you're really determined to reduce the weight of your vehicle, shouldn't you always relieve yourself before driving, because otherwise you'll be carrying around that extra weight, too?

Tom: And shouldn't you shave your head to remove the weight of your hair? And your chest and legs, too?

Ray: And don't forget your back.

Tom: Then you'd also need to always drive nude. Especially in the winter, when those heavy woolen overcoats are murder on your mpg, Ian. Think about it.

FIT FACTS

MWR FITNESS DIRECTOR
Lori Smith

This week I am going to change things up a bit and talk about comment cards — why they are important and what happens once we get them. This idea came when I was approached by a patron asking about some questions on comment cards he had submitted. He suggested that I add this section to my article, occasionally, because many patrons may have the same questions.

So, you will start seeing some of the comments we receive and how we are addressing any concerns, community "wants" or a very welcome "thank you" for the good ones we receive. Comment cards play a very important part in our day-to-day business, as well as our future business.

Customers' comment cards give us the chance to hear about things we just may not see. The next time you have a question, please fill out a blue comment card or use one of the ICE terminals to send us your thoughts and opinions.

We have received a few comment cards about towels not being available at high-use times. The perception is we may not be washing and restocking fast enough for the demand.

The reality is, we are restocking our towel supply at Smith Fitness Center frequently, but patrons don't return a large quantity of towels. We are asking (and soon you will see a poster) that everyone please return towels after your workout, so there will be plenty for everyone.

Remember one thing, "comment" does not always mean bad. Our staff truly appreciates when people say "good job," too.

The great gas-tank debate

KING FEATURES SYNDICATE
Tom and Ray Magliozzi

Dear Tom and Ray,

I am having a debate with co-workers about whether filling your gas tank halfway is more or less efficient than filling your gas tank completely. What is the most efficient way to fill a tank? Does the weight of a full tank affect the mileage? Does gas evaporate more quickly when the tank is half-full?

I need your help to decide this debate and to decide the most efficient way to fill a gas tank. Thank you.

— Ian

Ray: I take it you're worried about the weight of the gasoline, Ian.

You think that a full tank of gas weighs more, and therefore reduces your mileage. And by filling up only halfway, you'll have a lighter car and get more miles per gallon.

Tom: The answer is, that's true. I mean, sure, theoretically, if your 3,000-pound car is 50 or 60 pounds lighter, you'll get slightly better mileage.

In fact, manufacturers spend all kinds of money taking ounces of weight out of various car parts.

Ray: Right. And there's no fuel lost to evaporation, because the fuel system in a modern car is a closed system.

Tom: But if you fill your tank only halfway, there's another major fuel loss. That's the fuel you use driving around looking for a gas station twice as often.

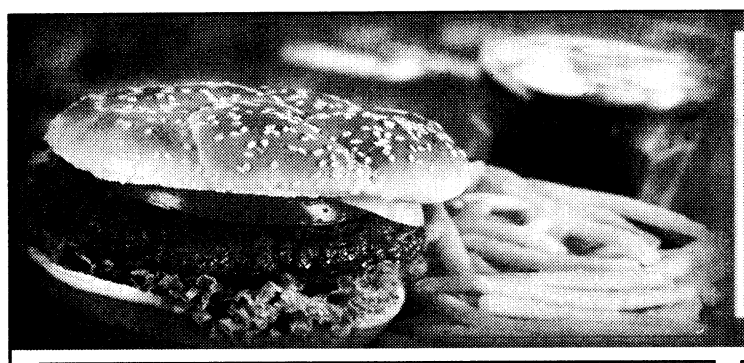
And that could easily wipe out any small savings you get from making your car lighter.

Ray: Plus, where do you stop? If you're really determined to reduce the weight of your vehicle, shouldn't you always relieve yourself before driving, because otherwise you'll be carrying around that extra weight, too?

Tom: And shouldn't you shave your head to remove the weight of your hair? And your chest and legs, too?

Ray: And don't forget your back.

Tom: Then you'd also need to always drive nude. Especially in the winter, when those heavy woolen overcoats are murder on your mpg, Ian. Think about it.



* * *

Keep your car on the road and out of the repair shop by ordering Tom and Ray's pamphlet Ten Ways You May Be Ruining Your Car Without Even Knowing It! Send $4.75 (check or money order) to Ruin, P.O. Box 536475, Orlando, Fl. 32853-6475.

Win a dream home

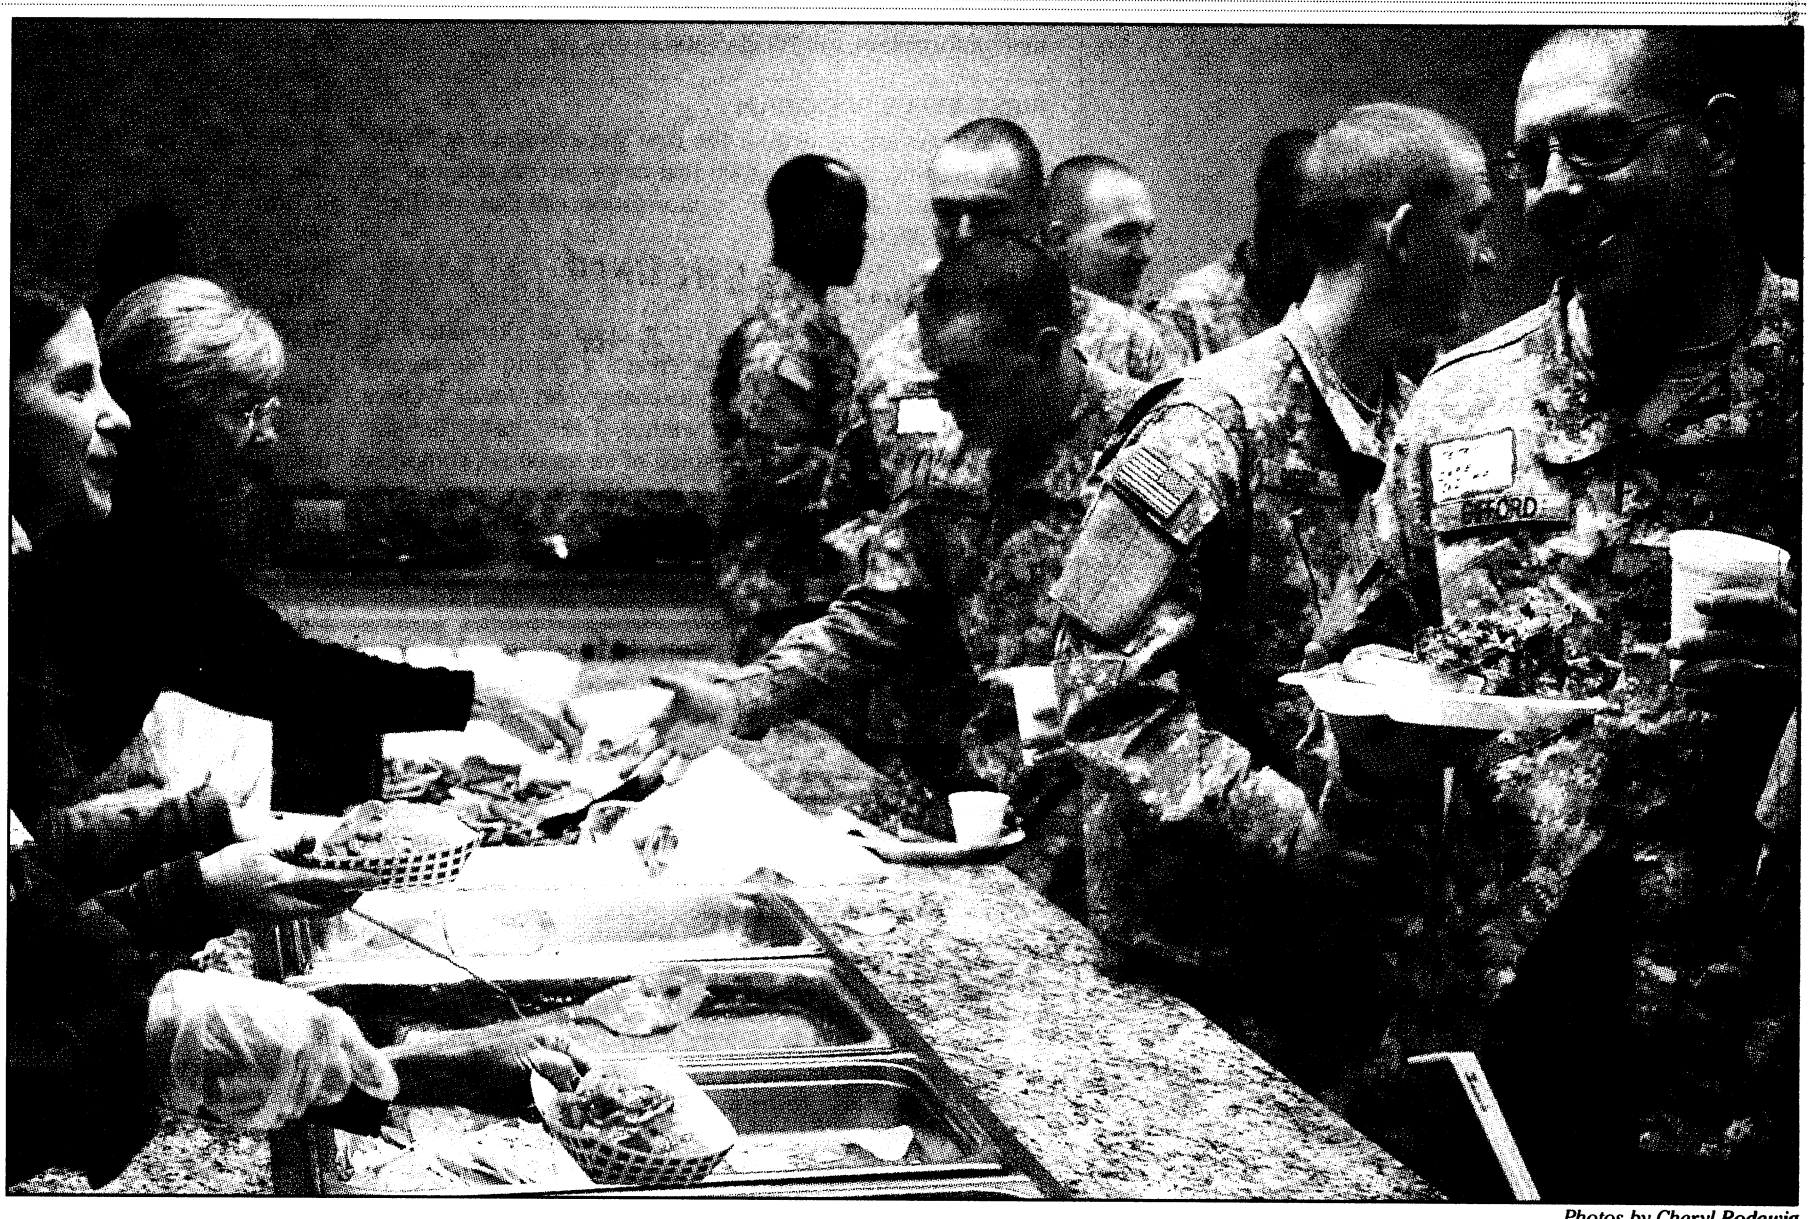
THE BAYONET
Rachel L. Watkins

Staff Sgt. Joe Torriero was at Wachovia Bank in January 2006 when he saw an ad for the St. Jude Dream Home fundraiser.

"It was only $100, and it would go to a good cause even if I didn't win," Torriero said.

The fundraiser is an annual event sponsored by St. Jude's Children's Research Hospital. which provides free medical services for children diagnosed with cancer and other diseases. All proceeds go to St. Jude. The grand prize is a house.

Three months after his purchase, on April Fools Day, Torriero and his wife, Kate, were at their friends' house in the same neighborhood as the dream home when Joe got a call informing him that he had won the grand prize, a house valued at $305,000.



At first, the Torrieros thought it was a joke.

"This fundraiser is a wonderful way for people to help children in need," said Mark Cantrell, chairman of the Columbus giveaway.

Last year, Columbus, Phenix City and surrounding areas raised $800,000 to benefit St. Jude. Over the past seven years, the fundraiser has generated $4 million, Cantrell said. This year, the 4,200-square-foot home, valued at $550,000, is on a 3.3 acre lot in Upatoi, Ga., in a gated community. It has four bedrooms, five bathrooms, granite countertops, stainless steel appliances and indoor and outdoor fireplaces.

There are 9,000 tickets available for purchase at any Wachovia Bank in Columbus or Action Buildings location. Call 1-800-383-9844 or go to www.st.judedreamhome.org. Those who reserve tickets before Feb. 28 will be in a drawing to win 12 $100 Piggly Wiggly gift certificates.

Second place prize is a Nissan Versa and third place is a 1.09 carat diamond. The drawing will be at 3 p.m. April 19 on WTVM.

Volunteers and church members serve Fort Benning basic trainees pizza, nachos, cookies and banana splits Saturday during St. Luke United Methodist Church's Operation Appreciation.

Operation Appreciation
Thanks goes both ways

THE BAYONET
Cheryl Rodewig

Two years ago, in the middle of the night, Staff Sgt. Adam Haden happened upon two American Soldiers in Kuwait who were remembering a church they had visited when they were stationed at Fort Benning during basic training.

Haden, a member of St. Luke United Methodist Church, recognized the name of his church and still marvels over the chance encounter.

"That's all they were talking about," he said.

St. Luke opened its doors again Saturday for the first Operation Appreciation of the year, inviting basic trainees to sing, eat, talk and unwind with each other and church volunteers.

They played basketball in the church gym, watched ESPN on a large screen TV and used members' cell phones and church phones to call home.

Attending the event motivated everyone — it's a reward, said Pfc. Andrew Broadbent, who spent several minutes talking with his parents in California at Saturday's Operation Appreciation.

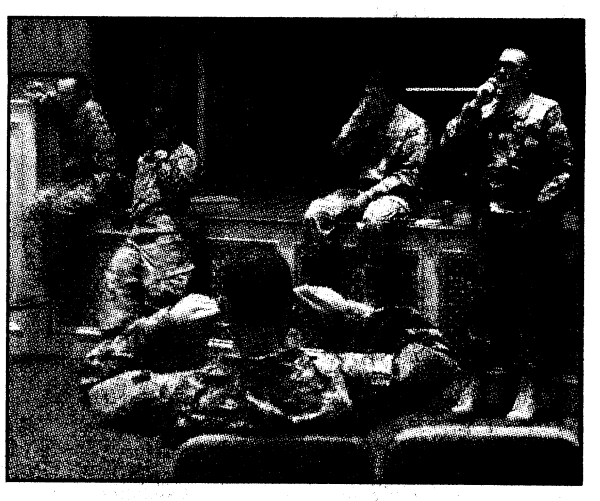
"Personally, I'll be in a better mood for the next week because of this," he said. "When you get to call home, you can't stop smiling for a couple hours, and that makes the next days just fly by."

Broadbent said the dinner of pizza, nachos, banana splits and cookies was "real food," though probably not best for training.

Approximately 80 Soldiers attended the event, which began with music and a message from a pastor and closed with prayer. Volunteers circled around the Soldiers to pray for them.

The program started nine years ago as a way to reach out to basic trainees on Fort Benning.

"We do Operation Appreciation because, first of all, we appreciate the Soldiers and what they do," said Sandra Henry, minister of adult education. "It's an outreach program.



"We're just grateful we can touch these young men's lives and show them God's love."

Several Soldiers who have attended in the past keep in touch through letters, Henry said.

Others come back, when they're stationed again at Fort Benning, to visit the church and volunteer at the appreciation nights.

"It's really wonderful to know that people appreciate you, and just the way we've been treated is amazing," said Pfc. Ryan Reneer, who graduated from basic training Thursday.

"It's been a real nice break from the stress," he said. "It's nice to be in a relaxed environment and just be able to enjoy each other and have a good time."

After music, a message and dinner, Soldiers call home on cell phones borrowed from church members and volunteers.

Fort Benning's Keystone Club: 'We all come together as one'

THE BAYONET
Cheryl Rodewig

More than 30 teenagers gathered Friday night at the Youth Center on Main Post for a Pajama Dance Party, the most recent event hosted by the Keystone Club.

The club is a teen leadership group that organizes socials and community service projects for military teens, whether they live on or off post, said Lori Amor, club advisor of the local chapter of Keystone for four years.

"These teens are under a lot of pressure. They're under pressure of sex, they're under pressure of drugs, they're under pressure of alcohol, they're under pressure of succeeding in high school — and that's what they're faced with daily," Amor said. "All of them have different things they have to deal with in their schools, and then you know they have the military life. So, they come here, and they get a structured place, but they also get a little bit of freedom to be the teens that they are. If they need to talk, they have a place they can do that."

The club also helps make the transition smoother for teens who are new to post.

"It helped with meeting new people," said Antoinette Dent, who joined the club after moving to Fort Benning last August. "Basically, that's what we do: we bring in new people, and we all come together as one. Once somebody enters the club, we treat him as Family."

Keystone members help new students get to know their school and community. They also spread the word about the club in their neighborhoods. Dent said the club is trying to recruit more teens to become involved in Keystone.

"It's a safe environment for kids to hang out, have fun and be themselves," she said.

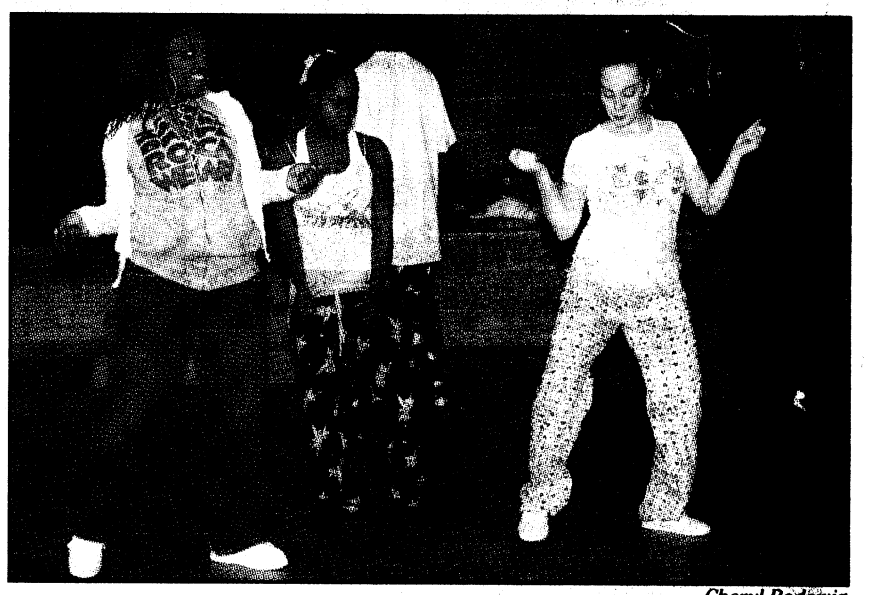
Most importantly, perhaps, the club lets military teens talk about being military teens, creating what Dent called "an instant bond."

"We get so close," said Nayasia Coleman, a senior and the teen advisor, who oversees weekly meetings. "I can't talk to one of my friends who goes to Shaw about my dad being deployed because her dad comes home every day. I think they don't understand the hardship with one of your parents or both of your parents being gone."

Children of deployed parents can attend the club's weekend trips free of charge through the Army Family Covenant if they are 15:12 cardholders. Other children pay $10.

The club recently returned from a lock-in at Fort Stewart, Ga., where they won first place in a basketball game. They also hold workshops to help teens learn about finances and potential careers.

"It's a good opportunity. You get to give back to the community. You even get to travel," said Brittany Hawkins, club president.



Hawkins said she plans to include the hours she's volunteered through the club on her college applications.

The club's next community project is to paint a room in the Men's Transitional House in Columbus. The completed room will be called the Fort Benning room.

Through the club mission of reaching out to the community, Amor said she has seen teens develop Army values as they build character and emerge as leaders.

"You start out one kind of person, and then you leave a different kind of person," said Coleman, a member for four years.

The club's next social will be a Super Bowl party Sunday. A Valentine dance will be Feb. 9. For more information, call 706-545-3070 or 706-545-7945.

Homeschooled children who are eligible to participate in Child and Youth Services activities can now take art instruction and technology classes with CYS staff. Technology classes meet Tuesday from 1 to 2 p.m., and art classes will meet Thursdays from 10 to 11 a.m starting in January. Space is limited. For more information, call 706-545-3062.

FIRST STEPS PROGRAM

Volunteers are needed for the First Steps Program at Martin Army Hospital. It is a program that helps parents adapt to life after having a child. For more information, call Carolyn Harris at 706-544-2020.

AAFES VIDEO CONTEST

AAFES will hold a video contest open to all military ID cardholders. Contestants must create a 30 to 60 second commercial about their military exchange and Morale, Welfare and Recreation benefits. The winner of the "It's My Benefit" contest will have his or her choice of an Apple G5 computer with software or a $2,000 online shopping spree.

Runners-up will receive a $1,000 and $500 online shopping spree. Entries must be received by Feb. 15. Go to www.aafes.com/Patriot_Family/videocontest.asp.

FLU VACCINES AT FORT BENNING

Martin Army Community Hospital has vaccines available.

Clinics and times are as follows:

•Family Medicine Clinic and Internal Medicine Clinic — 8:30 to 11 a.m. and 1 to 3 p.m. Monday to Friday.

•Pediatric Clinic — 7:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. Monday to Friday by appointment only. Call 706-544-2273 to schedule an appointment.

For more information, call 706-544-2041.

BALLROOM DANCING CLASSES

Ballroom classes are held from 10:30 to 11:30 a.m. for ladies only and 6 to 7 p.m. for groups every Wednesday and Friday at the Kelley Hill Recreation Center. Both courses are $60 a month. Private lessons by appointment only are available on Saturdays for $20 per lesson.

For more information, call 706-544-3079.

CAREER ADVANCEMENT ACCOUNTS

CAA, an available grant, provides up to $3,000 per year for two years to eligible spouses. Spouses must have a high school diploma, GED or some college, one year remaining at Fort Benning, and two years remaining on current enlistment. Soldiers must be privates to sergeants or second lieutenants to captains.

The funds can be used to complete post-secondary training at any of Georgia's two-year community and technical colleges. Or the grant can be used for training that will lead to a state approved credential or license such as an approved certificate from a continuing education program or approved education service provider.

For more information, call 706-545-7397 or go to the Army Education Center at Building 2602, Soldiers' Plaza.

EFMP ENROLLMENT

The Exceptional Family Member Program has mandatory enrollment for special needs Family members (child or spouse). Enrollment doesn't hurt the Soldier's career but assists military personnel divisions in considering medical and educational needs of the Family member in the assignment process.

Enrollment is necessary if the spouse or child meets the following criteria: asthma, a current or past mental health diagnosis, a high-risk pregnancy, cancer (past or present), attention deficit disorder or diabetes.

For resource information and referrals, call 706-545-5521.

CITIZENSHIP CLASSES

The International Wives Club and Army Community Service will sponsor citizenship classes one evening a week for six weeks in Building 2624, Soldiers' Plaza.

For more information, call 706-687-6471 or 706-545-0403.

SCHOLARSHIPS FOR MILITARY CHILDREN

Applications for the Defense Commissary Agency's 2008 scholarships are available at commissaries worldwide. The $1,500 scholarships are available to unmarried children under the age of 21 (23 if enrolled in school) of active-duty, retired, Guard and Reserve service members.

The applicant and his sponsor must be enrolled in the DEERS database and must have a current ID card. The applicant must plan to attend an accredited college or university full time in the fall of 2008 or be enrolled in a program of studies designed to transfer directly into a four-year program.

Applicants are required to write an essay. At least one scholarship will be awarded at each commissary. The deadline for application is Feb. 20. For more information, go to www.militaryscholar.org.

WOMEN'S CONFERENCE

Fort Benning's annual Women's Conference will be March 12 at the Benning Club. The conference, open to the first 300 people who register, will include breakfast and lunch, several one-hour workshops, and a guest speaker. Free child care is available, but space is limited.

The $18 registration fee will be waived for all 15:12 cardholders. Register before Feb. 29 at the Benning Club, Bit of Benning, the Subway at Afterhours, the PX Mall and MWR Headquarters on Eckel Avenue.

For more information, e-mail fbwc2008@aol.com or go to www.benningmwr.com.

Take a lesson from David when you face a giant problem

BAYONET CORRESPONDENT
Frederick M. "Bud" Rupel

We love it when underdogs win the day, when they beat the odds and defeat the "giant." That's why the '68 Jets, the '69 Mets and the 1980 U.S. Olympic hockey team became legends. We love successful "underdog" stories.

But we don't like being the underdog. We like seeing people overcome tremendous obstacles; we just don't like facing them ourselves.

There is a story in the Bible of a young man who found himself in such a situation. Of course, you know the story of David and Goliath. Israel was at war with its arch enemy the Philistines, who had a secret weapon, the giant Goliath. He was challenging the Israelites to fight him, and Israel was frozen in fear.

That is what giants do to us. We try to make our lives as smooth as possible. We try to control every detail, and then a crisis comes along and reminds us how completely helpless we can become.

Back to David. In the midst of the crisis, David arrived on the scene, summed up the situation and saw fear in the hearts of his fellow Israelites. And what is David's response? "Who is this creep and how does he come off taunting the armies of the living God?" He put the crisis into proper perspective. We can learn a lot from his example. God is bigger than any problem we'll ever face.

David, a teenage shepherd, was about to take on Israel's enemy when his fellow Israelites, his team, began to criticize him. That should not come as a surprise to anyone who wants to accomplish something worthwhile. Critics believe the worst about those who dare face problems head-on. David refused to be discouraged by the criticism. He would not give up his dream of defeating Goliath.

When David went to battle with Goliath, it was obvious he was a man to be taken seriously. Goliath began hurling insults at him — "Am I a dog that you come after me with a stick?" David refused to be to be intimidated and responded, "You come after me with sword and spear and battle-ax. I come at you in the name of God-of-the-Angel-Armies." He gave credit where credit was due, "The battle belongs to God — he's handing you to us on a platter." (The Message Bible) Can you say Hooah?

How do you speak to your giants? Are you intimidated, or do you dare speak words that express your faith and confidence in God? Never forget the battle belongs to the Lord. Imagine how your attitude toward challenges would change if you believed those words.

You need fear the battle no more. You can approach crises with calm assurance; you can laugh in the face of the intimidator, because you know the battle is the Lord's.

Editor's note: Bud Rupel is a retired major and former Army chaplain. He now serves on the pastoral staff at Evangel Temple.

Is it really labor?

THE BAYONET
Rachel Houston

In the last few weeks of pregnancy, waiting on labor can consume your thoughts and feelings. With each new pain or tightening you think, "Could this be labor?"

Our bodies prepare for labor with "practice contractions" called Braxton-Hicks contractions. These are usually a painless tightening of your uterus, which you may be able to feel with your hand. They can be felt as a hardening of your belly.

Along with Braxton-Hicks can come false labor contractions, which are irregular and unpredictable.

They may come at changing intervals and stop for hours or days at a time. These contractions can be painful and may seem like true labor to a pregnant woman, according to Your Pregnancy Week by Week.

False contractions may cause pain in various parts of your body, including the lower abdomen, back or groin.

The contractions can come on quickly and disappear just as fast. Women may be able to stop the contractions by taking pain relievers, changing activities and drinking a lot of water.

True labor contractions will have a regularity to them. They increase in duration, strength and frequency over time.

The pain of the true contraction is usually felt first at the top of the uterus, and it spreads over the whole uterus, through the lower back and into the pelvis, according to the book.

Each woman will experience them a little differently, and they could be described as similar to menstrual cramps or like waves or digestive cramps.

Over time, the true contractions will come closer and closer together, and there will be nothing you can do to stop them.

Walking may increase the strength or intensity of true contractions, while it will stop false labor contractions.

To determine if you're having false or true labor, try timing the contractions and ask yourself a few questions:

Are the contractions increasing in intensity over time? Are they coming more frequently? Does getting up and walking or relaxing cause them to stop?

False labor and Braxton-Hicks can be felt as early as the second trimester and are common in the third trimester, according to WebMD.com. However, not all women will experience them.

For more information, go to www.WebMD.com and talk with your doctor.

Editor's note: It's a boy! The Bayonet's Baby Steps columnist Rachel Houston gave birth to an 8 pound, 8 ounce baby boy Monday. Rachel and her husband Anthony welcome Anthony Tyson Houston.

Green genes
Yogurt is a great health food

THE BAYONET
Cheryl Rodewig

The process of making yogurt may not sound appetizing. It is made from fermented milk that has been pasteurized to get rid of all potentially harmful bacteria.

Certain bacterial cultures develop during fermentation, and the yogurt slowly thickens. The result is not only creamy and delicious but also a true health food.

Packed with protein, calcium, zinc, potassium, B vitamins and other nutrients, nonfat yogurt is also low in calories; a half cup weighs in at only 65 calories.

But yogurt's biggest claim to fame comes from the microorganisms that grow during fermentation. That's right, bacteria.

For those who are lactose intolerant — meaning they can't digest the sugar lactose — the cultures in yogurt actually produce the enzyme needed to digest this carbohydrate. But even people who aren't lactose intolerant can benefit from live bacterial cultures.

Our intestines already contain "friendly" bacteria, also called probiotics, to help digest food. As we get older, we sometimes produce less of these microorganisms. Foods that still contain live bacteria, like some yogurts, are said to help the body, especially as it ages.

Although, it is generally accepted that these cultures are good for us, the Food and Drug Administration has not officially sanctioned the correlation between active cultures and good health, owing to a lack of adequate clinical research.

This may be why the yogurt company Dannon is now the subject of a class action lawsuit.

Last week, Dannon was charged with leading a false advertising campaign concerning its products DanActive and Activia. Both claim to have added health benefits because of the live and active cultures they contain.

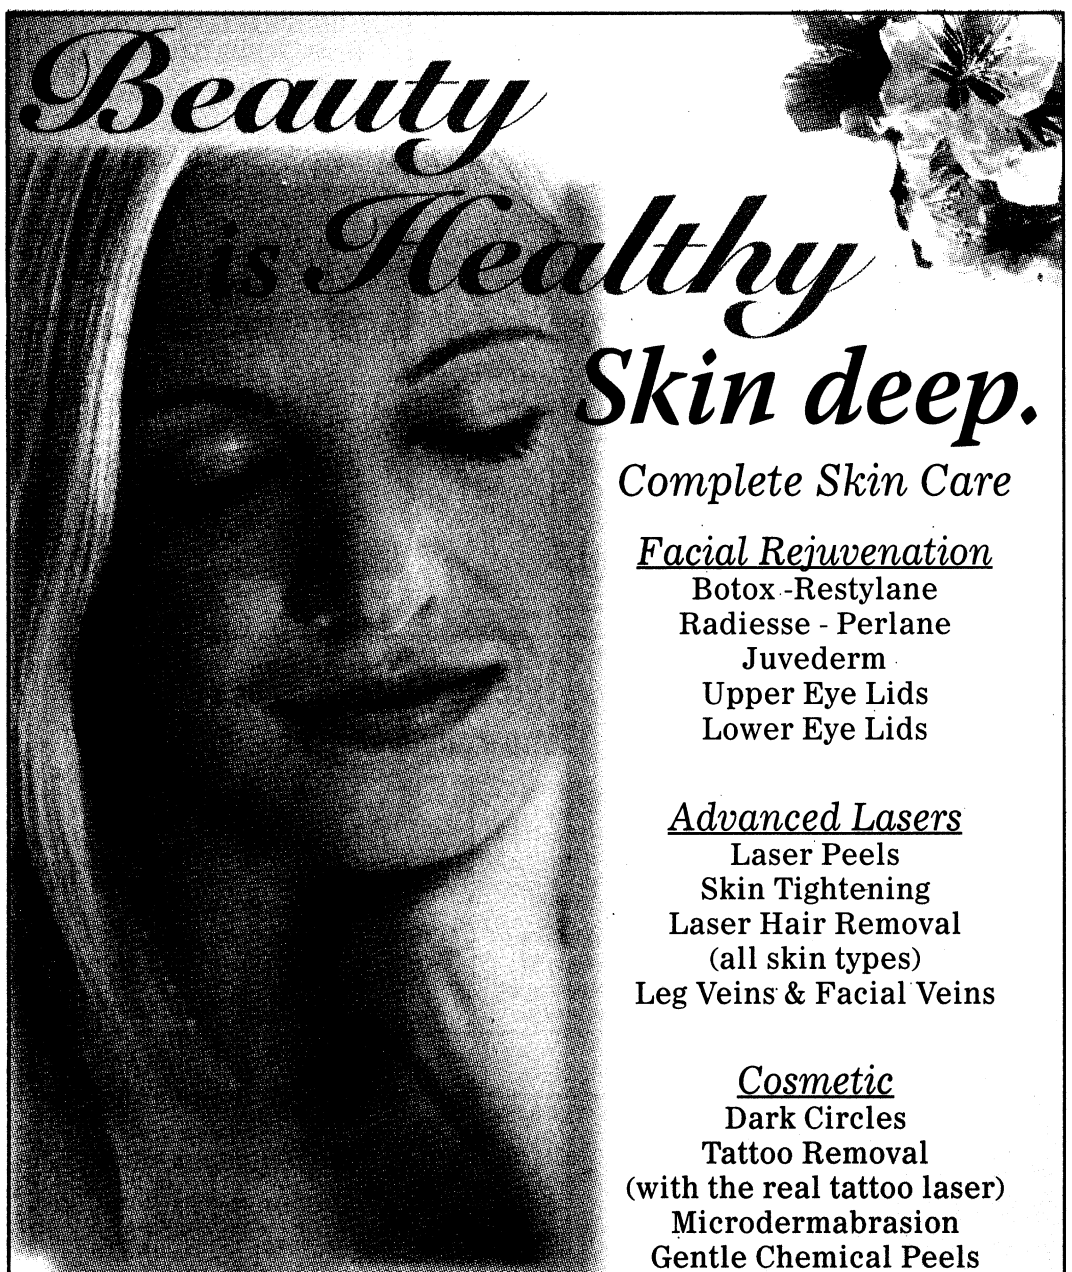
DanActive yogurt contains the bacteria Lactopacillus casei, said to help strengthen the body's immune system. Activia contains a specific strain of Bifidobacterium that Dannon researchers say helps digestion because it arrives in the colon as a living culture.

Although probiotics are generally believed to aid digestion and possibly even boost the body's natural defenses, more research is needed to verify just how helpful these cultures are. If you want probiotic benefits, look for the National Yogurt Association's "Live and Active Cultures" seal.

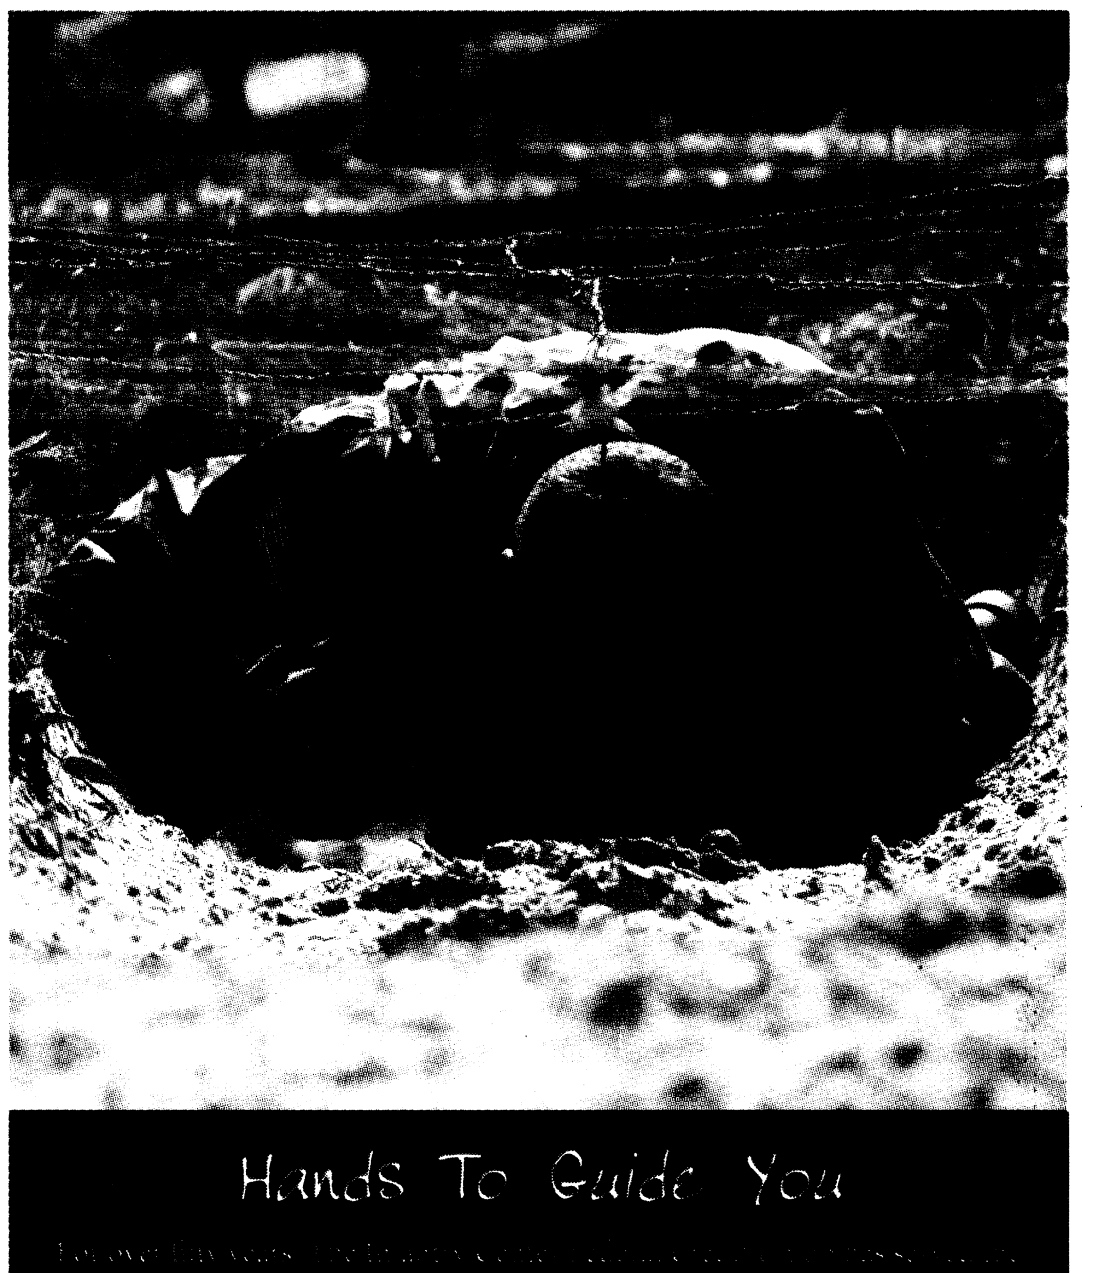
Although all yogurt is made with active cultures, as mandated by the FDA, some yogurt is heat-treated, which kills the bacteria and therefore decreases potential health benefits.

Either way, yogurt is still a wonderful health food. Not only does it contain plenty of vitamins, minerals and probiotics, but it's also versatile.

Use a dollop of yogurt in your smoothie or as a thickener in pot pies.



Yogurt can also be substituted for less healthy dairy products. Use it to replace butter when baking biscuits, sour cream in veggie dips and mayonnaise in chicken salad.



The fat content of the yogurt is based on the fattiness of the milk from which it is made. Choose low-fat or nonfat yogurt for all the benefits of yogurt without the added calories.

Watch out for sugars, too. Often, manufacturers will sweeten fat-free yogurt or use artificial sweeteners. Stay away from both as much as possible. Instead, add fruit, honey or sugar at home. The same goes for frozen yogurt. Make sure the first or second ingredient isn't corn syrup.

Make your own frozen yogurt milkshakes by mixing yogurt, milk and sweetened fruit or dark chocolate and stirring it as it freezes.

Try to use yogurt in your next soup, bread, dessert or dip, and you'll see how easy it is to enjoy this delicious, everyday health food.

RESTAURANT REVIEW

Golden Donut

THE BAYONET
Rachel L. Watkins

Doughnuts are sugary fried treats I can't resist, no matter how hard I try. There's nothing else like 'em. Sure they're not the healthiest food, but they're so darn good.

In next week's edition of The Bayonet, Elsie Jackson will review Pho Vy.

There is a coffee bar in Columbus, Golden Donut, that serves up some of the best doughnuts in town.

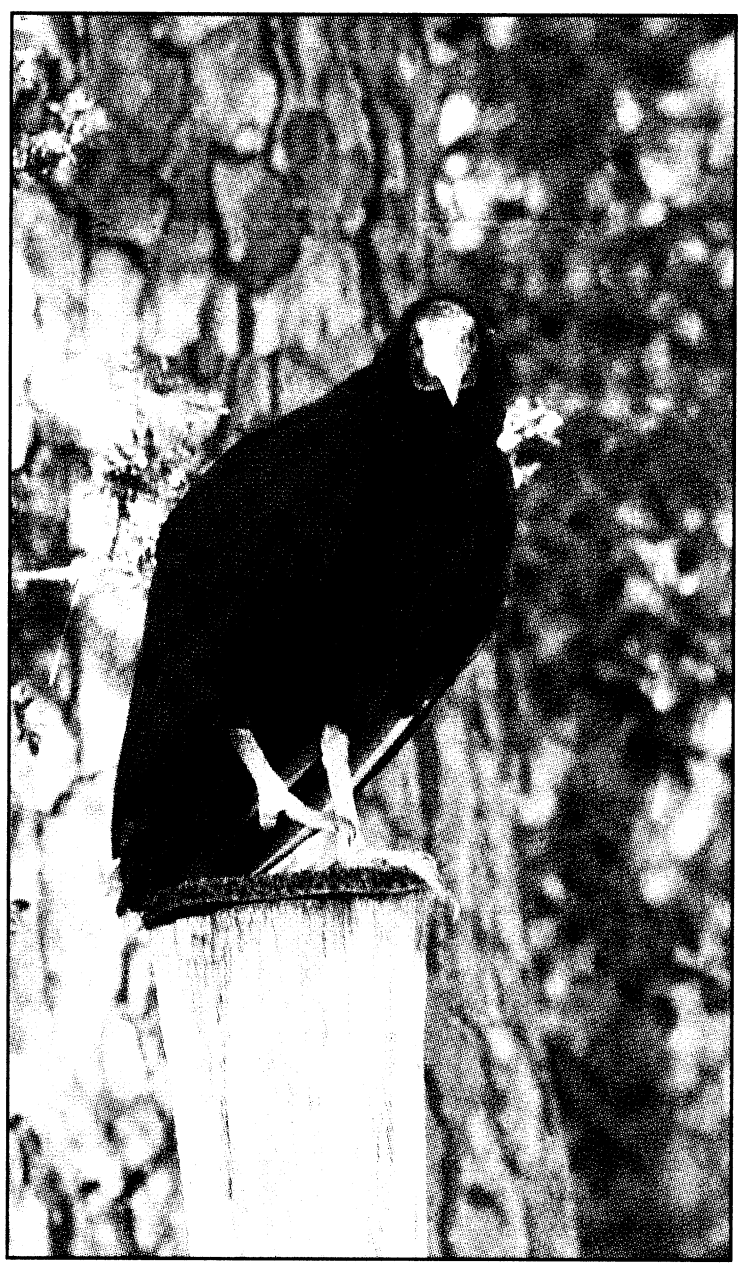
Owner Don Baker is at work at 5 a.m. every weekday to help make doughnuts. He bought the business in 1989.

The restaurant is fun with its smiling doughnut mascot, bright yellow swivel chairs, coffee bar and two full cases of doughnuts, including chocolate and vanilla iced cake donuts, apple fritters, cinnamon rolls and glazed, lemon, blueberry, strawberry, raspberry and cream-filled doughnuts, and my favorite, custard-filled donuts with chocolate icing.

You can get a dozen doughnuts for about $5. Drinks are available, starting at about a buck.

Right now, Baker is offering a $2.99 special, which includes two doughnuts, two sausage biscuits and a coffee.

Golden Donut accepts takeout orders and a drive through is available.



The restaurant also has fundraising opportunities. Churches, individuals, schools and organizations can buy large quantities of doughnuts at a discount price. Golden Donut is located at 625 Manchester Expressway, and the restaurant is open 24 hours a day, seven days a week.

For more information, call 706-660-8783 or go to www.goldendonut.com.

A thousand butterflies from 50 species are found at Callaway Gardens' Cecil B. Day Butterfly Center. The butterflies come from all over the globe, including Southeast Asia, North, Central, and South America and Africa.

This vulture is one of the birds of prey featured at Callaway Gardens. Bald eagles, red-tailed hawks and great horned owls are also found there.

Birds of prey also found at Callaway Gardens

THE BAYONET
Rachel L. Watkins

I didn't know that butterflies' eyes have thousands of lenses or the male flies over the female as part of a mating ritual.

Before leaving the Cecil B. Day Butterfly Center at Callaway Gardens in Pine Mountain, you might learn something about butterflies you didn't know before.

A thousand butterflies from 50 species flutter about in a tropical environment. I have never seen so many in one place at one time. The butterflies are from all over the globe, including Southeast Asia, North, Central, and South America and Africa. They range in color from blue, black and brown to pink, orange, white and yellow.

You can walk through the conservatory and watch the butterflies or sit on one of the benches and observe from there.

Butterflies are the most active at 10 a.m. to 2 p.m., which is not a good time to catch great photos. If you want close-ups, go before or after these hours.

The center has a waterfall, tropical plants and even talking parrots that whistle catcalls and say hello.

The conservatory is made of 850 panes of glass and stays at a warm and humid 84 degrees, so wear something lighter than a sweater when you go.

Birds of Prey

Butterflies aren't the only things flying at Callaway. The outdoor Birds of Prey show features different birds including a black vulture, a bald eagle, a red-tailed hawk and great horned owl.

Usually, three birds are shown at each show, but right now, because of construction on birdhouses, only one is being shown.

Show times are Monday through Friday at 12:20 p.m. and Saturday and Sunday at 12:30 p.m. and 2 p.m.

Admission to Callaway Gardens is $13 for adults and $6.50 for children 6 to 12. Admission is free for children younger than 6. Military discounts are available at $10 for adults and $5 for children. Group discounts are available.

The cost of admission will get you into the butterfly center and also a discovery center, vegetable garden, a horticulture center, bicycle trail and daily programs.

You can take I-185 or the scenic route, Highway 27, to get there. For more information or to buy tickets, go to www.callawaygardens.com or call 800-Callaway.

BOOK REVIEW

Book explores how music relates to human nature

BAYONET CORRESPONDENT
Maj. Matthew Archambault

It's in your house and at your workplace. It's in the stores where you shop and at the movie theater. It's in your car while you drive, and it's probably in your alarm clock. It's in your cell phone. It's music, and it is everywhere. Music accompanies you throughout your day, every day. We use it to compliment our moods, to influence them, to relieve stress, to lift us out of our sadness or to celebrate a great day. Daniel J. Levitin's new book This is Your Brain on Music explores this relationship with music.

Levitin is neuroscientist at McGill University in Montreal, Quebec, but don't let his job title scare you. Levitin is a Johnny-come-lately smart guy. He spent the first part of his life working as a session musician, sound engineer, and as a record producer before he donned this foreboding sobriquet, and he did not forget where he came from when he wrote this book. He maintains generally rudimentary English throughout, but that doesn't mean that words like cerebellum, neurons and amygdala don't make repeated appearances. Levitin makes good use of analogies and familiar examples to help the reader swallow these otherwise complex concepts.

This accomplishes his purpose to provide the layperson with an understanding about music and how it relates to our human natures.

Levitin structures This is Your Brain on Music specifically to facilitate this purpose. He begins with a lengthy dissection of music itself, looking at timbre, rhythm, pitch, tempo, contour, loudness and reverberation. These are the atoms of music and with this foundation Levitin discusses melodies and harmonies, music's molecules.

This is all easily digestible. In the middle chapters Levitin begins his in-depth look at the brain. This is a holistic exploration of memory, learning and mental

OPENING TODAY

THE EYE

Sydney Wells (Jessica Alba) is an accomplished concert violinist who has been blind since a childhood tragedy.

When Sydney undergoes a double corneal transplant, her sight is restored, but her happiness is short-lived as unexplainable shadowy and frightening images start to haunt her.

As Sydney's family and friends begin to doubt her sanity, Sydney is soon convinced that her anonymous eye donor has somehow opened the door to a terrifying world only she can now see.

The Eye is rated PG-13 for violence, terror and disturbing content.

HANNAH MONTANA AND MILEY CYRUS: BEST OF BOTH WORLDS CONCERT

Fourteen-year-old singing sensation, Miley Cyrus, appears in concert at several venues on her 2007 54-city tour. She performs as both a solo artist and as her popular television character, Hannah Montana.

Hannah Montana and Miley Cyrus is rated G.

OVER HER DEAD BODY

Devastated when his fiancee Kate (Eva Longoria Parker) is killed on their wedding day, Henry (Paul Rudd) reluctantly agrees to consult a psychic named Ashley (Lake Bell) at the urging of his sister Chloe (Lindsay Sloane).

Despite his skepticism over her psychic abilities, Henry finds himself falling hard for Ashley, and she, for him. But then Ashley find herself being haunted by Kate's ghost, who considers it her heavenly duty to break up Henry and Ashley's fledgling romance, if it's the last thing she does.

Over Her Dead Body is rated PG-13 for sexual content and language.

STRANGE WILDERNESS

After the beloved TV host of the popular wildlife show "Strange Wilderness" dies, his son Peter Gaulke (Steve Zahn) takes over the series.

Under the leadership of Pete, ratings fall until the show is about to be cancelled, and Pete and his filmmaking partner Fred Wolf (Allen Covert) realize they have to come up with "something big" to save the series

They set off to Ecuador to find Bigfoot's secret cave, but disasters, including flesh-eating fish and murderous natives, beset their journey.

Strange Wilderness is rated R for language, drug use, crude and sexual humor.

ALSO PLAYING

MEET THE SPARTANS

This spoof satirizes action movies like 300 and You Got Served. Meet the Spartans stars Sean Maguire, Carmen Electra, Kevin Sorbo and Ken Davitian.

Meet the Spartans is rated PG-13 for sexual content, language and violence.

Over Her Dead Body stars Eva Longoria Parker as Kate, Henry's (Paul Rudd) dead fiancee who won't let him move on, even when he falls for psychic Ashley (Lake Bell), who Kate begins to haunt.

RAMBO

Though John Rambo (Sylvester Stallone) has retreated to Thailand to live a peaceful life in the mountains and jungles, a group of human rights missionaries seek him out to ask him to guide them into Burma to deliver medical supplies.

When the aid workers are captured by the Burmese army, Rambo decides to venture alone into the war zone to rescue them.

Rambo is rated R for violence, sexual assaults, grisly images and language.

UNTRACEABLE

Special Agent Jennifer Marsh (Diane Lane) and her team of FBI agents must try to track down an Internet predator who posts videos of his graphic murders on his own Web site.

The more hits his site gets, the faster and more violently he makes his victims die. As the game becomes personal, Marsh and her team must quickly track down the murderer who is virtually untraceable.

Untraceable is rated R for violence and language.

Music: Worth read

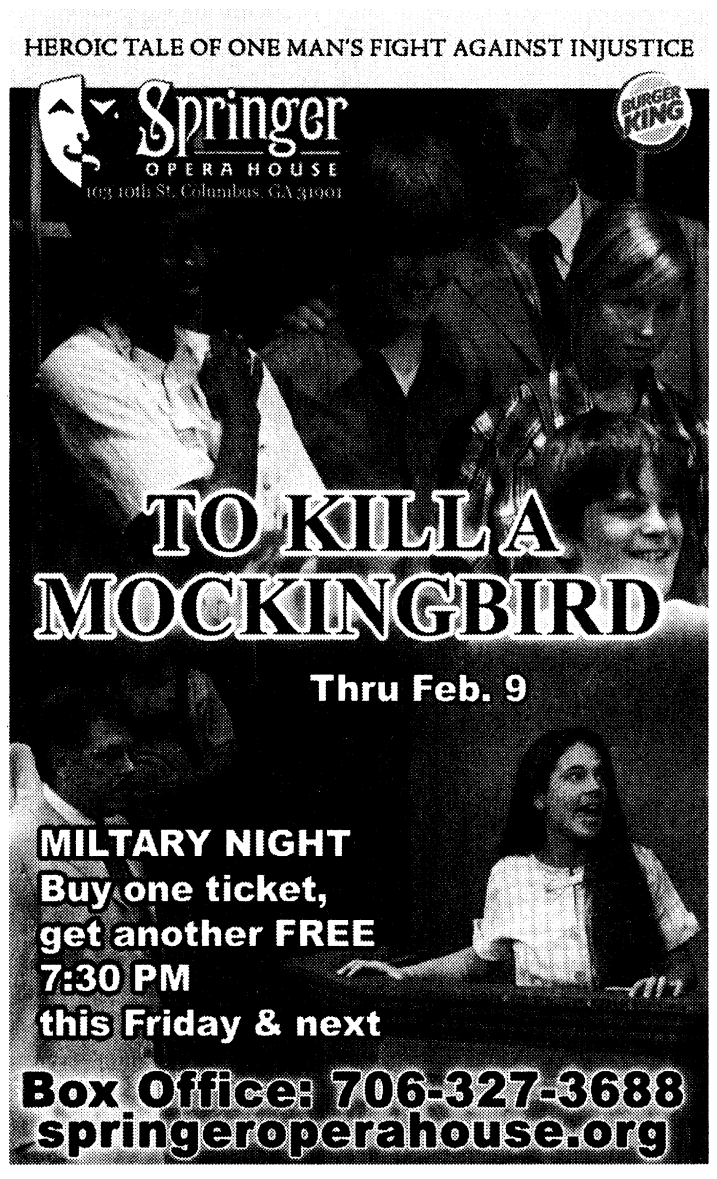
development. Levitin continues this theme to the end, when he asks what it takes to be a musician and why we like what we like. Remember his idea about music and the layperson. This is not just about the genes. This is about exposure and the answer to the question, "How do you get to Carnegie Hall?"



Perspective is everything in this book, particularly in relation to the mind. Levitin makes a great distinction between the mind and the brain. The former he classifies as an almost ethereal existence inhabiting more than just the space between our ears, while the latter he likens to computer hardware. Many of these topics are specifically rewarding if you have children, infants or teenagers in various stages of their own development.

This book is daunting and a challenge to read, not for a lack of interest, but for the concepts involved. If you only read books to get from the first page to the last page, this isn't for you.

This is Your Brain on Music requires thought and contemplation. Levitin builds his book from start to finish so if you don't grasp the concepts presented early, you might get lost by the end of the book.

The only criticism for this text is that it ends flat and without a satisfying wrap-up of his conclusions. His last chapter about the evolutionary nature of music leaves the book with an open-ended feeling.

Conclusion or no conclusion, Levitin accomplishes his goals. This is Your Brain on Music will enhance your appreciation of not only the music you listen to, but music as an entity in your life. If this journey is exhausting, it is also worthwhile, as the very mind you are reading about gets stretched to new dimensions.

Officials break 'hallowed ground'

Construction begins for Armor School basic combat training barracks

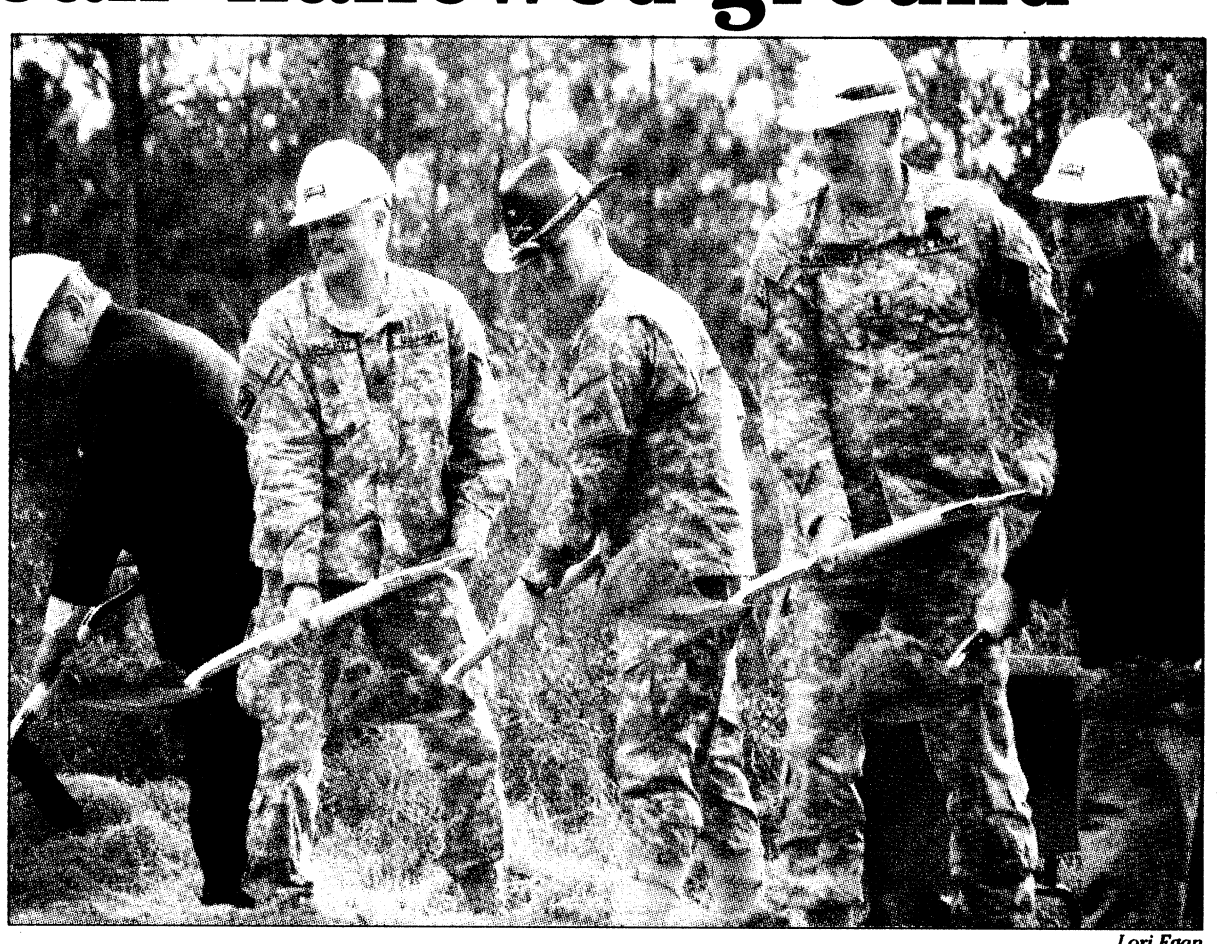
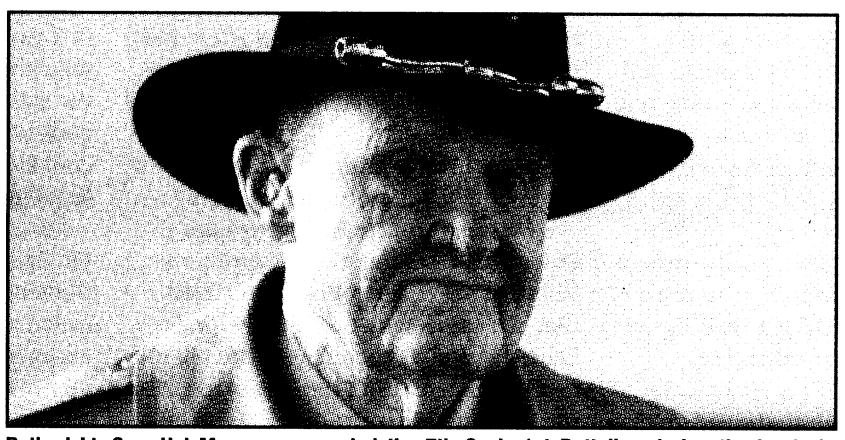
The Armor barracks complex groundbreaking at Harmony Church Tuesday was a historic event for the Army because it signifies Fort Benning's transition to the Maneuver Center of Excellence and the colocation of Infantry and Armor training.



The significance of the day was not lost on 18-year-old Pvt. Nicolas Torres, who helped set up the tents and hand out programs for the ceremony.

"It's historic and makes me proud I enlisted as an Infantryman," he said. "We're on the battlefield with tankers and now we'll be training with them. It really is one force — one fight."

Both the Infantry and Armor chiefs spoke about working as a combined arms team.



"As an Infantryman with many years in the Army, I will never go on any battlefield again without some tanks to support me," said Maj. Gen. Walter Wojdakowski, Fort Benning's commanding general, "to bail me out … to provide the shock effect and the thunderbolt action a tank provides.

On the occasion of his 86th birthday, retired Lt. Gen. Hal Moore had a sobering thought to share with well-wishers Wednesday at a surprise party hosted by post chaplains.

"We should all think of the shortness of this life, the nothingness of this world and the greatness of heaven," he said, taking liberty with the words of Pope Clement XI.

BOD officials discuss growth

USAIC PUBLIC AFFAIRS OFFICE
Anthony C. O'Bryant

Officials discussed Fort Benning's population growth, expecting the increase to begin around July 2009, during the year's first Maneuver Center of Excellence Board of Directors meeting Monday through Wednesday. The BOD consists of the senior leadership from forts Benning and Knox, Ky., who meet quarterly to plan the Armor School's move to Fort Benning and its transition to the Maneuver Center of Excellence.

Planning for the nearly 30,000-population increase to Fort Benning during the next few years includes quality of life issues, said Gary Jones, with Valley Partnership, which serves a trade area of 600,000 people in 16 counties in a 45-mile radius around Fort Benning.

Sky Soldiers plan memorial on museum grounds

THE BAYONET
Bridgett Siter

What do all the veteran Sky Soldiers of the 173rd Airborne Brigade have in common? For a short time, every last one of them called Fort Benning home.

Here they trained at the Airborne School before joining their comrades in Okinawa in 1963, where the unit served as the quick reaction force for the Pacific Command.

Here they trained before leading the first ground combat assault into South Vietnam in 1965. And again before conducting the only mass combat parachute jump there two years later.

Here they trained before making the largest mass combat jump since World War II, when the Sky Soldiers of the 173rd out of Vicenza, Italy, secured a key airfield in Northern Iraq and opened that front for the U.S. forces who took Baghdad in 2003.

That makes the grounds of the new National Infantry Museum a fitting site for a memorial to the 1,800 Sky Soldiers killed in Vietnam and the 17 who died in Iraq and Afghanistan, said Larry Sanchez, the vice president of the 173rd Airborne Brigade National Memorial Foundation.

COMMANDER'S COLUMN

Fort Benning's 10-year plan for recreation included an environmental impact survey

COMMANDING GENERAL
Maj. Gen. Walter Wojdakowski

Two years ago the Southeast Regional Office of the Army Installation Management Agency surveyed Fort Benning's outdoor recreational facilities and developed a 10-year plan to build new facilities and restore existing ones on post.

Before the first spade of dirt was turned, consideration was given to the possible environmental impact of these changes.

Restoration was started on historic Russ Pond and Pool, and Kings Pond is being developed into a more accessible recreational area with a primitive campsite, playground, boat launch, fishing pier and latrine. We will expand the buffer zone from the tank ranges surrounding King's Pond.

This year, we start the construction of the French, Blue and Green Sports Complex. Soon traffic on Yeager Avenue between the Blue and Green fields will be limited to pedestrians and service vehicles only, and the portion of Zuckerman Road between the existing fields will be removed to create additional green space.

The new complex will have eight regulation youth soccer and football fields with irrigation systems, a shaded outdoor playground, restrooms, a picnic area with a pavilion, another dog park, a second playground and a paved walking trail.

Parking areas to accommodate more than 400 vehicles are planned, which will increase safety for the residents of the surrounding neighborhoods.

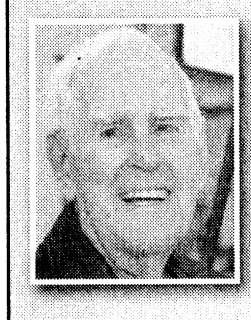
Wetherby Field will also be improved this year. Construction on permanent facilities to accommodate outdoor concerts and special events will begin soon. In addition to a covered stage, production facility and storage building, the access road will be improved. A new restroom and concession area will be built, and access to the Wetherby portage for canoe and kayak trips down the Chattahoochee River is planned.

A walking trail that begins at the pedestrian underpass to Sand Hill will provide safer access to Wetherby Field for our Soldiers training on Sand Hill.

Other immediate improvements on post include the installation of rugby and flag football fields inside the one-mile track of Stewart Field in front of Infantry Hall.

As for the walking trails at the French, Blue and Green Complex and Wetherby Field, eventually they will tie in with the rest of the trails to create a network all across Fort Benning for walkers, runners and bicycle riders to safely enjoy the great outdoors.

From the beginning, our environmentally forward 27-hole golf course and the award-winning Uchee Creek Campground and Marina — a haven for hunters, campers, archers, fishermen and hikers — were designed to complement the native habitat.



Fort Benning is an environmentally unique place. It is our goal to make it easy for everyone on post to enjoy the great outdoors without harming its natural beauty.

Wagon tale

It all started in a big, red grocery getter

THE BAYONET
Bridgett Siter

My first car was a tank. Actually it was a station wagon, if you must be literal, a 1973 Pontiac Catalina, like the salad dressing. But driving it was a lot like driving a tank. Actually, driving it was a lot like what I imagine it would be like to drive a tank. If you must be literal.

And it wasn't really my station wagon. (Geez, when did you get to be such a stickler?) It belonged to my mom or dad. I'm not sure whose name was on the title — who "won" it in the divorce — but we drove it, my sisters and I, all six of us. Not at once.

The big, red beast was nearly 10 years old when I got my license and my turn in the driver's seat. My friends, who drove cute little Pacers and Datsuns and Escorts, nicknamed my wagon "the grocery getter." To be fair, it did get an awful lot of groceries from Kroger's to the red, brick ranch on Elva Drive, but I was a tad bit defensive about the name. It wasn't cool, and being cool seemed really important at that time.

The only cool station wagons in the world were the ones with faux wood paneling, four bald tires and a couple of banana boards peaking over the tailgate. Those wagons transcended cool. Those wagons lived in Florida, not Indiana.

My big red wagon was more behemoth than bohemian. It was nothing more than a low-riding SUV two decades before anyone knew what an SUV was. So naturally it guzzled gas. It ate my allowance going back and forth to school all week. But come Friday nights, my cool-conscious friends always offered to drive their cute little Pacers and Datsuns and Escorts. I rode shotgun and saved my money for PacMan.

I'm not given to romanticizing automobiles, not even my first. Sure, I remember it fondly, but unlike Lara's Datsun or Rob's Pacer or my brother's Chevy Malibu named Betsy, which left him in a snow bank one night with a black eye and a broken heart, the big red grocery getter wasn't the sort of machine to elicit emotional attachment. Since I'm not the sort of gal to expend that kind of emotion on a chunk of metal, we made a good pair, the beast and me.

We parted ways when I left for college and my younger sister inherited the driver's seat. A short time later, I bought a '77 Dodge Aspen, which was good on gas, easy on the eye and almost cool. It served me well for a few years, then I traded it in on a spanking-new car, something really small with a hatchback, I think.

After that, I drove a sporty-looking two-door, still small enough to drive cheap. It was cool, but I didn't care. I kept it until I needed room for babies.

A four-door sedan got me through the first two, then I traded "up" for a minivan, which was the evolutionary link between the station wagon and the SUV. It wasn't cool, but I didn't care. It carried four very cool kids to soccer practice and an awful lot of groceries from the commissary.

I drove it for nearly 10 years, long enough to frighten my children into thinking they might inherit it. They called it a tank. But they're prone to exaggeration.

• "Cross Fingers, Knock on Wood," the headline read. As of Feb. 12, there had been no traffic fatalities on post since Dec. 24. By this time the year before, there had already been six deaths as the result of traffic accidents.

• A Bayonet article encouraged readers to take advantage of an on-post laundry service. For a $3-a-month payroll deduction, GIs could get four bundles of laundry — up to 25 pieces per bundle — picked up, washed, pressed and delivered. "Put Your Duds in Army Suds," the headline read.

1976

• On Feb. 10, the 34th Medical Battalion's Race Relations Section observed Black History Month by erecting a headstone on the grave of Thomas "Blind Tom" Wiggins, a Columbus-born musician who gained world aclaim before his death in 1908.

Wiggins, born poor and blind, the son of a local slave, was a self-taught musical genius who played for royalty all over Europe.

• A new Army policy made it mandatory for female officers to take individual weapons training just like their male counterparts.

• The Fort Benning Rod and Gun Club closed its doors after a final business meeting. Though membership numbered 1,800, only a handful were using it. Army regulation required the club to be self supporting, but with an extended period of low use, funds were exhausted by the end of January.

• 2nd Lt. Dale Conner saved the life of Spc. Arthur McCann after McCann suffered an allergic reaction to a bee sting and crashed his car into a tree. Conner administered mouth-to-mouth resuscitation until help arrived.

• The more things change, the more they stay the same. Martin Army Hospital opened more parking areas to relieve congestion.

• Members of the Officers Wives' Club and the NCO Wives' Club were very busy this week, what with macrame and ceramics classes, an art auction, the ceremonial opening of new restroom facilities and a very important business meeting. "If you care about your club, please come," the calendar read. Next week, OWC members could learn to make bean bag chairs.

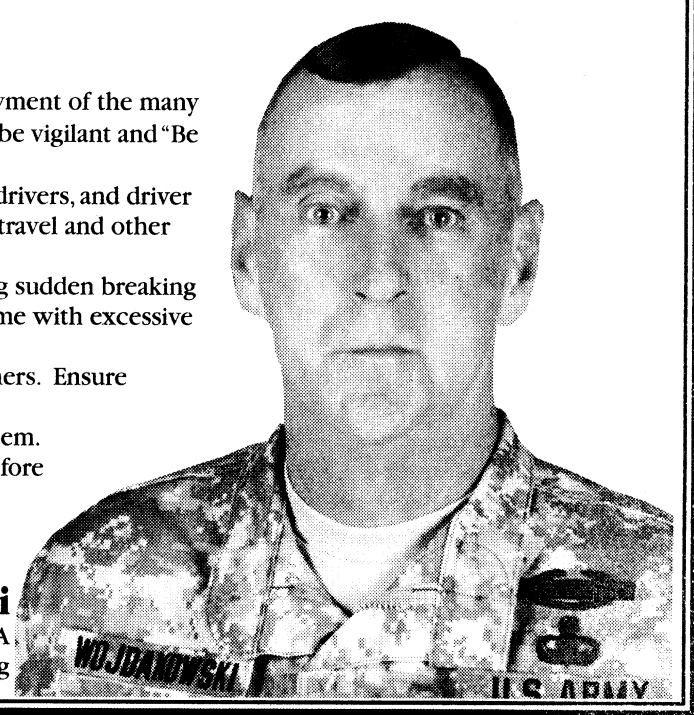
Presidents Day marks another extended holiday weekend, affording us an excellent opportunity for relaxation and the enjoyment of the many recreational areas and activities available on and off post. Whatever your plans, at home or on the road, I ask each of you to be vigilant and "Be Safe" by making the right decisions.

Because holiday periods are usually associated with increased travel, you should anticipate increased holiday traffic, aggressive drivers, and driver fatigue. This is the time of year, inclement weather can cause adverse driving conditions. I urge each of you to plan your holiday travel and other activities in advance. Be safety conscious and consider these precautionary measures:

• Stay alert and be prepared to react to adverse road or weather conditions. Avoid skidding by slowing down gradually, avoiding sudden breaking or rapid acceleration. Heed weather warnings, observe traffic controls and be prepared for delays. Do not compensate for lost time with excessive speed.



• Drive with headlights on during periods of limited visibility. Just because you can see, does not mean you can be seen by others. Ensure everyone is buckled in and children are properly secured with the appropriate child safety system. Don't drink and drive.

• For your personal safety and security, I you to maintain awareness of your surroundings, travel in pairs, and use the buddy system. Maintain a close watch over small children at all times. Avoid unlit areas at night and check inside your vehicle, front and back, before getting in.

Prior planning, hazard awareness and enforcement of standards are essential to accident prevention. I solicit the support of leaders at all echelons to ensure our Soldiers, Civilian employees, and their Families return safely.

Keep up the good work and enjoy your holiday, Be Army Strong and Be Safe.

Fort Benning celebrates Black History Month

THE BAYONET
Brenda Donnell

Fort Benning celebrated Black History Month Wednesday at the Benning Club.

Guest speaker retired Lt. Col. Reginald L. Pugh Sr., president and CEO of the Urban League of Greater Columbus, said it's important to recognize not only Black History, but other events that celebrate the nation's heritage

"The more we know about one another, the easier it is to understand one another and work together for common causes," Pugh said.

He said Americans need to continue to work to ensure all citizens can live the American dream.

Pugh spoke about the late Dr. Carter G. Woodson, an educator and historian, who was instrumental in establishing Black History month in 1926 to bring awareness of the contributions of African-Americans throughout American history.

Woodson also founded the Association for the Study of Afro-American Life and History in 1915.

The theme of Black History Month, "Carter G. Woodson and the Origins of Multiculturalism," highlights the multiculturalism and its origins in the struggles of African-Americans to have their contributions recognized by American society, wrote Maj. Gen. Walter Wojdakowski in a proclamation dated Jan. 3.

Abby Davis, chief of Administrative Service at Martin Army Community Hospital said she is passionate about celebrating black history.

"You need to know your history in order to know where you're going," she said.

During the event, Sgt. Gloria Jackson, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 192nd Infantry Brigade, sang The Star Spangled Banner; the PJS Music Group performed two selections; Anita Newsome performed a praise dance; and Paulette Montgomery, 11th Engineer Battalion, recited a poem, The Price for Freedom.

BAGHDAD — Soldiers of 3rd Squadron, 1st Cavalry Regiment, conducted an operation with Iraqi National Police Feb. 7 in the village of al Bata'a, north of Patrol Base Assassin. They accompanied policemen and members of the Sons of Iraq from al Bata'a patrolling the area.

"Combined operations with Iraqi Security Forces in the lead builds confidence in the government and the Iraqi Security Forces' ability to provide coordinated security for the populace," said 1st. Lt. Jeff Ritter, chemical and projects officer, 3rd Sqn., 1st Cav. Regt.

Soldiers and policemen cleared 55 structures of weapons and munitions. They also entered 35 individuals into the Handheld Interagency Identity Detection Equipment System, a database used by law enforcement agencies to help identify criminals. The 3rd Heavy Brigade Combat Team uses the system to quickly identify and catalogue persons of interest during continuing operations in the Mada'in Qada.

"Soldiers responded quickly and decisively to enemy movement. Their actions have provided a safe environment for the citizens of the Mada'in Qada," said Capt. Darrell Melton, commander of C Troop.

173rd: Plans to break ground on memorial in July

"It's perfect. It's the perfect place. The 173rd doesn't have a home, a place we can go and meditate and pray and remember. Fort Benning is what we all have in common, so we couldn't ask for a better situation," said Sanchez, who has lived in Atlanta since he was medically retired from the Army in 1978, 12 years after his first tour with the Sky Soldiers in Vietnam.

Sanchez expects to break ground on the new memorial in July near the Walk of Honor in Heritage Park, part of the museum complex, which is set to open later this year. He's excited about the prospect of thousands and thousands of young Infantry and Armor graduates who'll parade across the graduation field each year. They'll learn something about the unit's illustrious history.

The 173rd was constituted in 1917 at Camp Pike, Ark., as an Infantry brigade in the 87th Division. After a tour in France in 1918, the unit was demobilized, reconstituted, deactivated and reactivated again and again until World War II, when the unit saw action in three European campaigns as part of the 87th Reconnaissance Troop. After the war, the 173rd was put on Reserve status and again deactivated in 1951.

In 1963, the 173rd was chartered as a quick reaction force in Okinawa, where the unit trained extensively making mass parachute jumps and earned the nickname "Tien Bien," loosely translated "Sky Soldiers," from the Nationalist Chinese paratroopers.

After leading the ground assault into Vietnam in 1965, Sky Soldiers saw more than six years of continuous combat. It was there on Nov. 8, 1965, in War Zone D, that a 19-year-old Niles Harris was shot twice in the leg when his platoon and several others were vastly outnumbered in the fight for Hill 65.

Forty-eight Americans died that day, including 30 from Harris's platoon. He was one of only five survivors.

Harris's story was chronicled in The 8th of September, a song released in 2006 by the country music duo Big & Rich at a benefit concert in Atlanta for the 173rd. They used the song and a documentary they filmed with Harris in Vietnam as a springboard to raise funds for the memorial.

To date, $550,000 has been raised. Another $100,000 is needed.

The memorial will be circular, with the unit's crest, a wing and a sword, at its center. The names of Sky Soldiers killed in combat will be inscribed on markers circling the crest, including the names of 13 Medal of Honor recipients.

Don Michael's name will be there. The Alabama native's name is already inscribed at the Pentagon, at a memorial in Indianapolis and another on the USS Yorktown.

But this one will be different, somehow more special, his sister said.

Sharon Goens was only 10 when her brother enlisted the day after his 18th birthday. Michael, the oldest of five and the only boy, took his sisters swimming the day before he shipped out to basic training.

"He was just the best brother ever. That's what I remember. Of course, I didn't comprehend what a great Soldier he was until later on," said Sharon, who was 12 when her brother was posthumously awarded the Medal of Honor.

The 19-year-old specialist was killed on April 8, 1967, when his platoon was pinned under fire during patrol. Realizing his Soldiers were outnumbered, Michael tried twice, unsuccessfully, to destroy the enemy bunker with grenades.

On his third approach, Michael was attacked by an enemy soldier in a concealed position. Michael killed his assailant with his rifle, destroyed the bunker and chased the enemy as they retreated.

When his comrades caught up with him, they found Michael mortally wounded.

Now his sister, Sharon, is the only non-veteran member of the 173rd Airborne Brigade National Memorial Foundation. She looks forward to the groundbreaking ceremony, where she expects to reconnect with a number of her brother's Sky Soldier comrades.

"To be honest, even though his name is on several memorials, this one is more special," she said.

"It means a little bit more, because it's all about him and his friends, about those who didn't make it home and those who did somehow. It honors them all in every way, and that's something they haven't had. I don't think many people really know the story of the 173rd."

Moore: Donates 70,000 copies of book to Soldiers

friends and associates and Soldiers. The former commander of the 1st Battalion, 7th Cavalry, makes it his business, as he has since graduating from West Point in 1945, to prepare Soldiers for combat.

But these days, he's taking a different approach. He's addressing their need to prepare for the very real possibility that they won't return from combat.

"I realize we're on this earth just this long," he said, and he snapped his fingers. "There's a higher power involved in all this activity. I'm convinced of it."

> "There's a higher power involved in all this activity. I'm convinced of it."
> — Retired Lt. Gen. Hal Moore

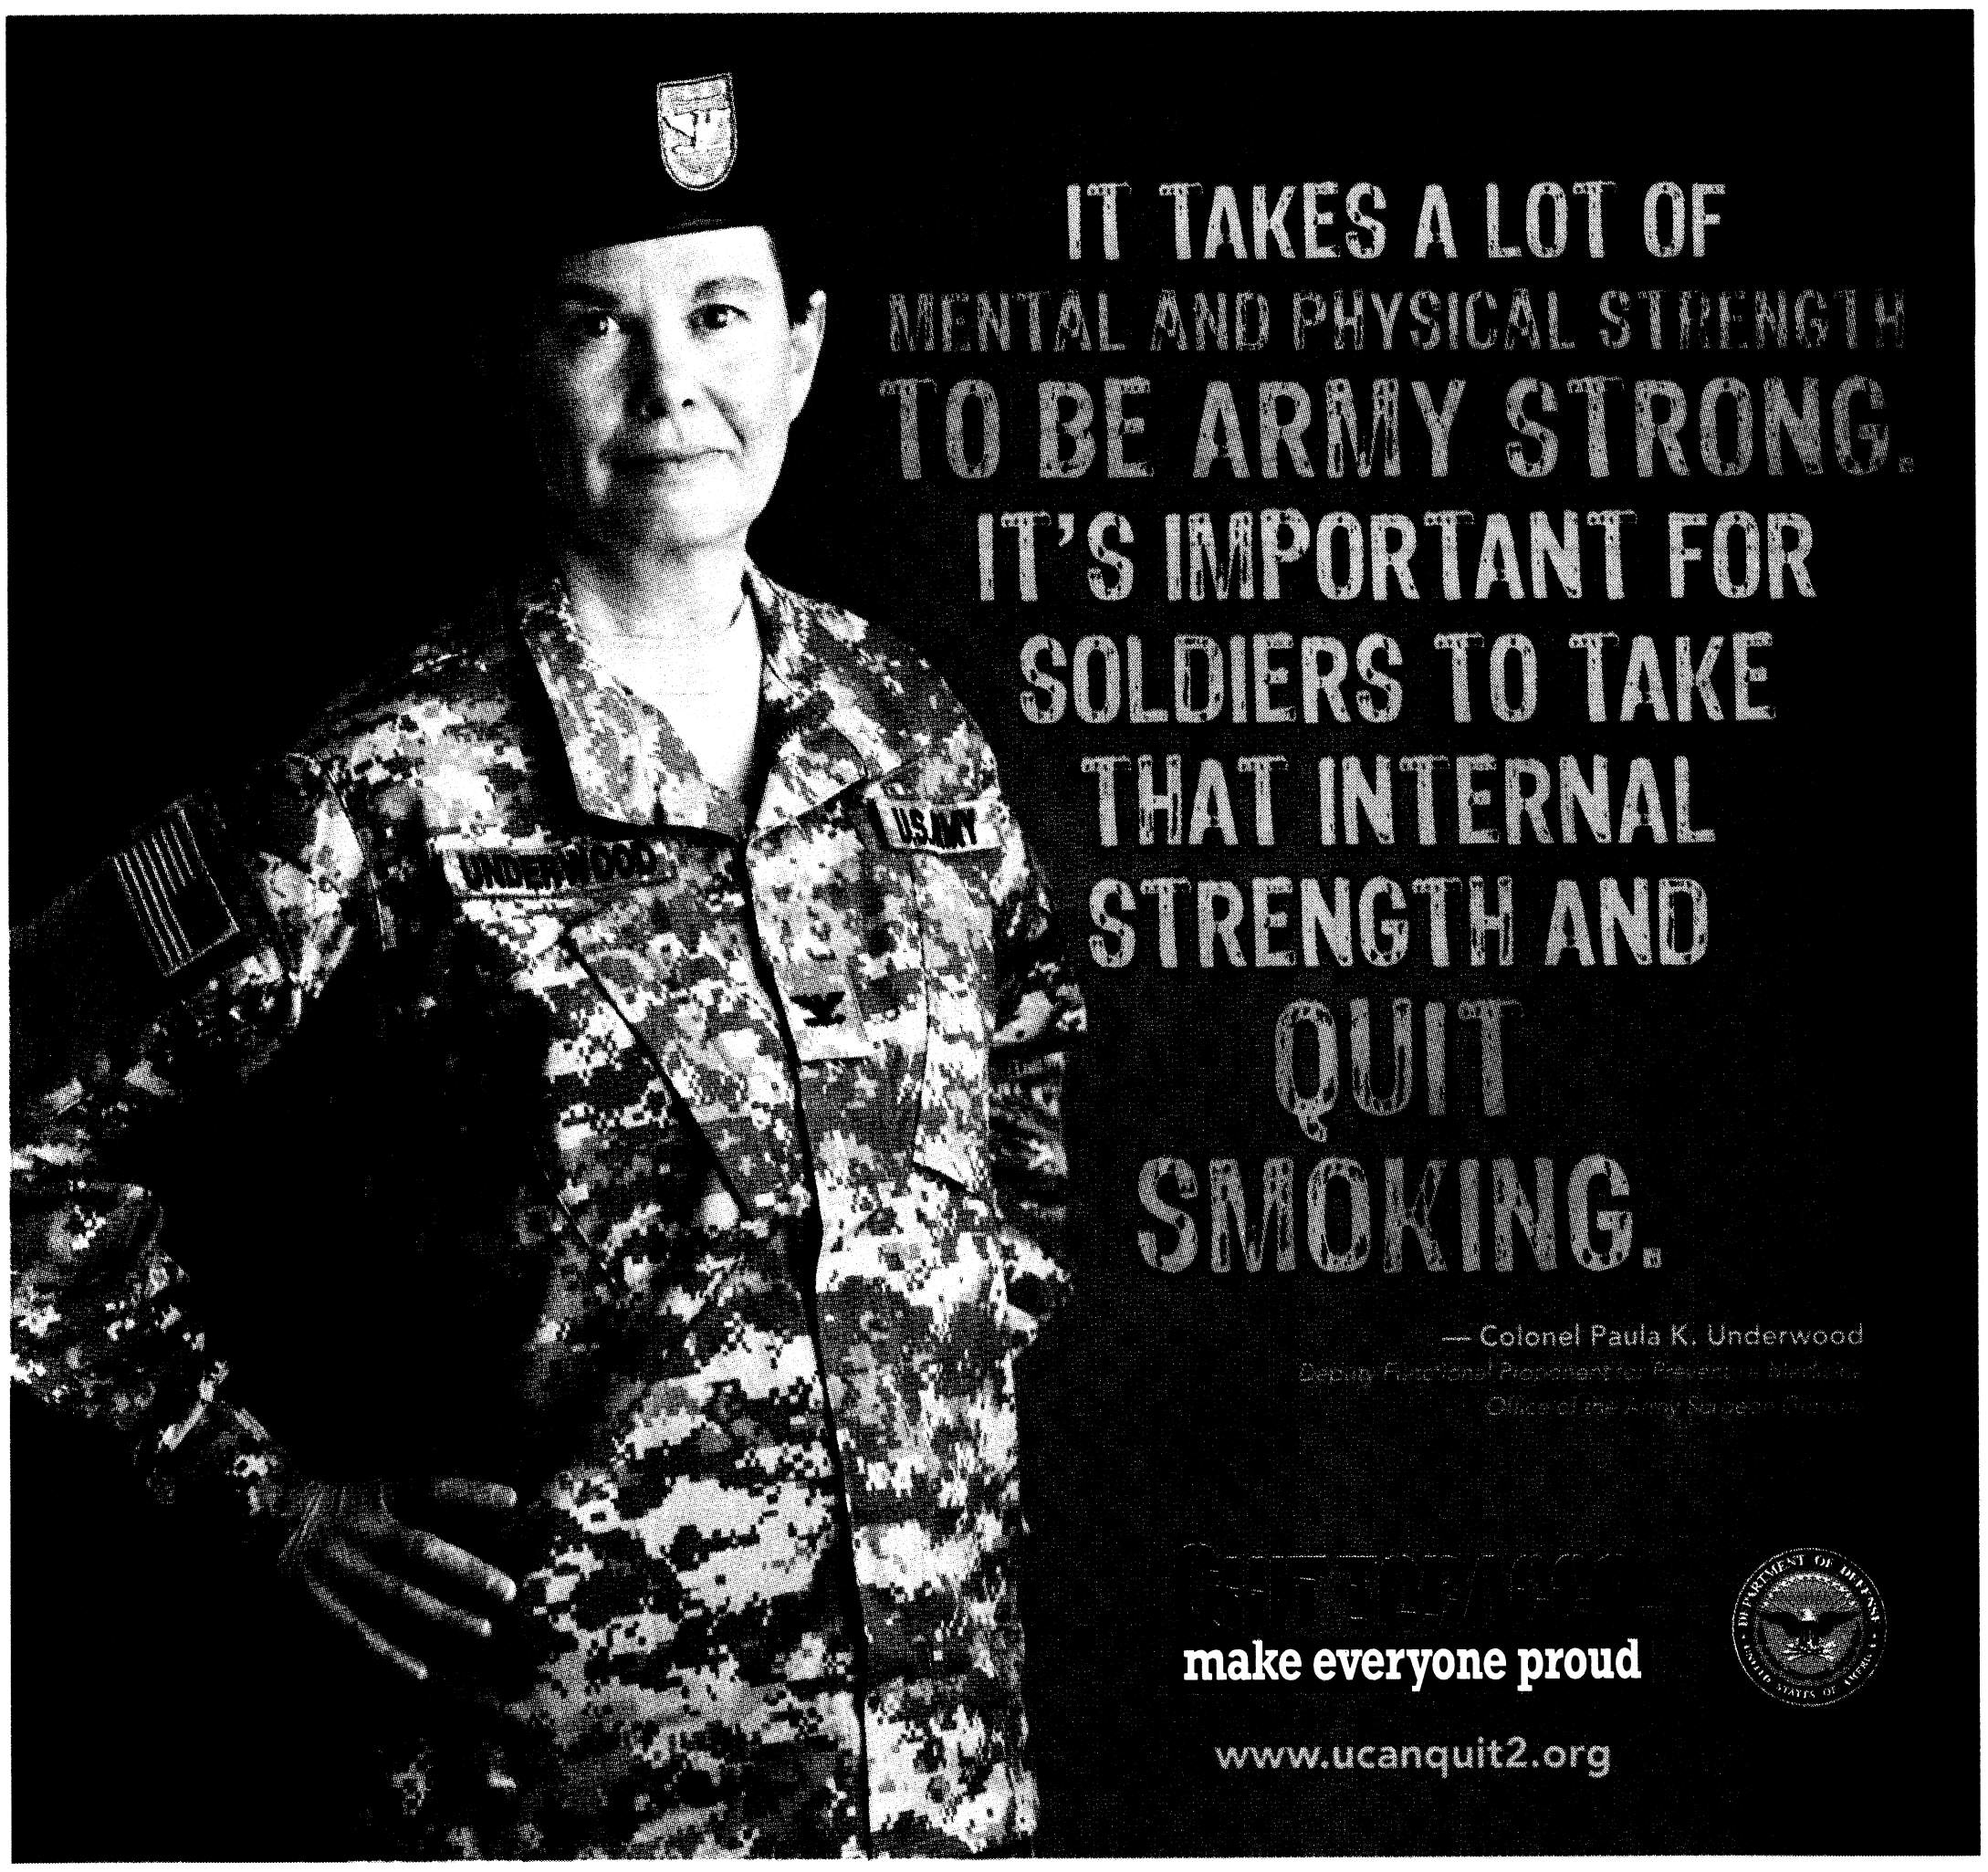
Moore signed copies of A General's Spiritual Journey during his visit. He has donated 70,000 copies of the book to troops in Iraq and Afghanistan. He plans to donate another 10,000 to Fort Benning chaplains who will distribute them to Soldiers training here, Soldiers who will likely see combat very soon.

Moore did not write the book. No doubt he could have; he co-authored We Were Soldiers Once ... and Young, an account of the first major battle in Vietnam in the bloody Ia Drang "Valley of Death." Randall Wallace made the book into a movie and cast Mel Gibson in the role of Lt. Col. Hal Moore.

That book and the movie frequently alluded to Moore's faith within the context of combat. In A General's Spiritual Journey, his friend and companion, Toby Warren, chronicles Moore's spiritual growth through personal observances and accounts relayed to him by Moore. He includes many references to Moore's beloved wife, Julie Compton Moore, who died in 2004 in their 54th year of marriage.



Moore visited his wife's grave at the Main Post Cemetery during his visit Wednesday. The couple called Fort Benning home more than once during his 32-year career.

He and Julie lived on Miller Loop for a time, just down the street from the home that was used in the filming of the movie. A son was born at Martin Army Hospital. His headquarters building still stands on Kelley Hill.

"This is still home," Moore said.

Proceeds from the sale of A General's Spiritual Journey will be donated to charity. For more information or to purchase a copy, visit www.AGeneralsSpiritualJourney.com.

MCOE: To train combined arms team on Fort Benning

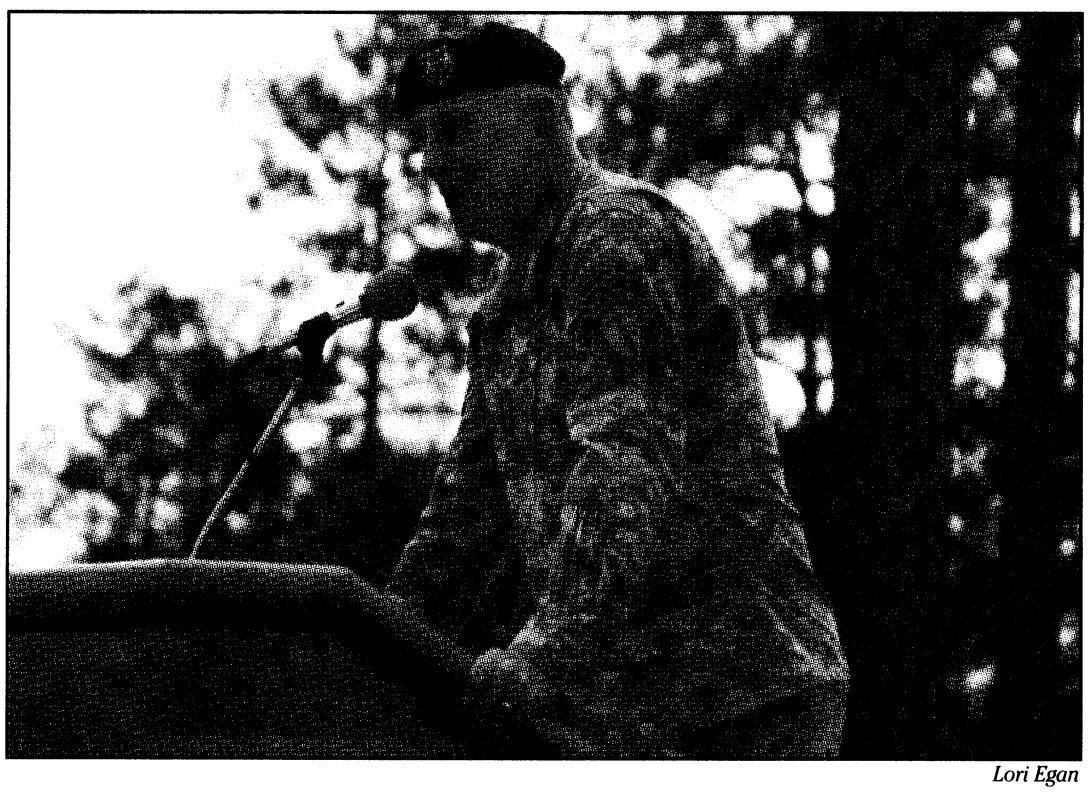
"We are a combined arms team," he said. "It's about time we started training our Infantry and Armor Soldiers together."

Wojdakowski said he's looked forward to this day since taking command two and half years ago.

Mandated by the 2005 Base Realignment and Closure, the Armor School's move to Fort Benning started with joint classes. Captains in both the Infantry and Armor branches attend the Maneuver Captain Career Course, at both installations. Infantry, Armor, Cavalry and Mortar NCOs learn from each other in the same classrooms.

The barracks complex is the first of more than 100 MCOE-related construction projects, which are expected to take 10 years and more than $3 billion to complete.



"Today we are not only transforming the geography of Georgia, but we're also transforming the very relationship of our two branches, and the way we train the sons and daughters of America to defend our nation," said Brig. Gen. Donald Campbell, who took command of the Armor School and Fort Knox, Ky., last month.

But the idea of training together is not new, he said.

"The concept of a combined maneuver center has been debated ever since the Armor force was created," Campbell said. "It is finally being resourced through BRAC law, and it will be the single biggest investment in our mounted training since World War II."

Retired Maj. Gen. Ken Leuer, who was Fort Benning's commanding general from 1987-88, said the transition to the Maneuver School of Excellence was progress for the combined arms team.

"It's amazing how far the Army has advanced," Torres said.

Lori Egan

Maj. Gen. Walter Wojdakowski, Fort Benning's commanding general, said the installation will see a lot of construction during the next three years with the groundbreaking of the barracks complex for Armor basic training and the infrastructure for the Maneuver Center of Excellence started. Motor pools, ranges and roads need to be built to accomodate the Armor School's move from Fort Knox, Ky. It will cost nearly $3 billion and take 10 years to complete almost 100 MCOE-related construction projects.

BOD: Discusses Armor move, MCOE issues

Jones discussed housing, education, employment opportunities the Chattahoochee Valley has to offer during the briefing.

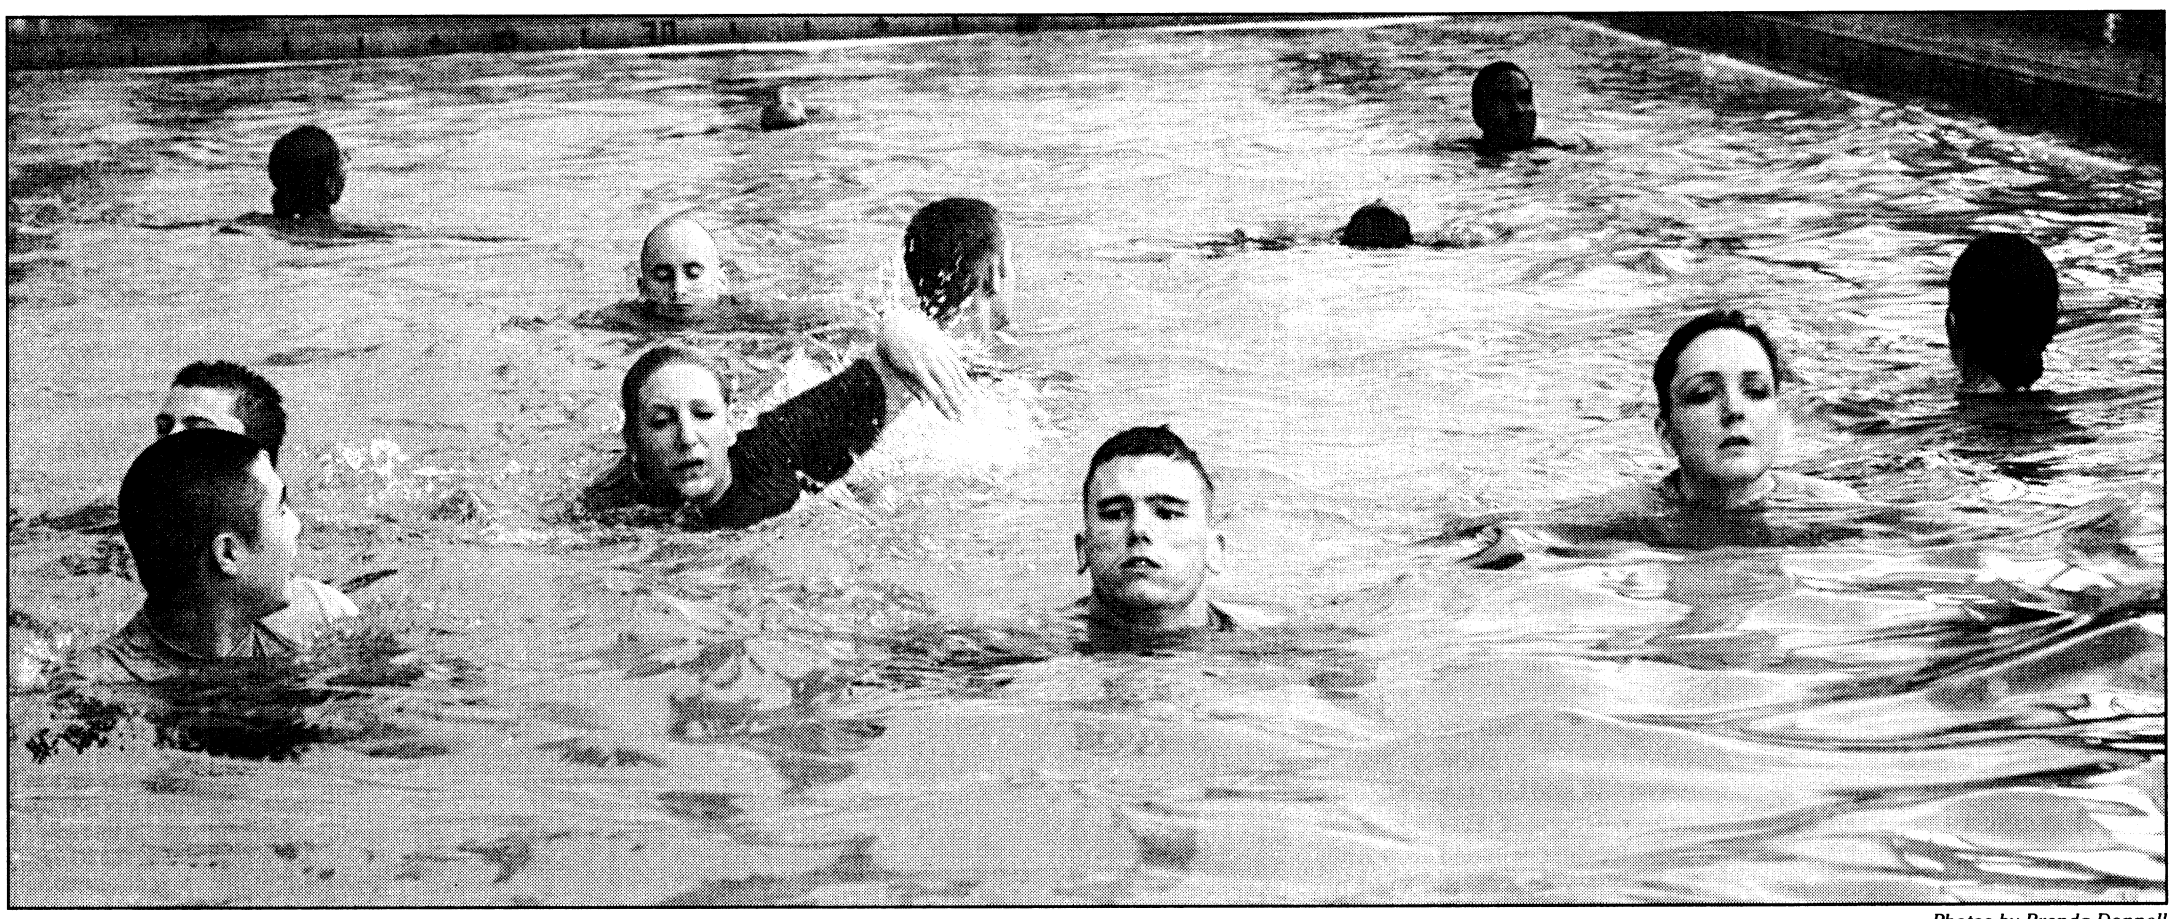
He said surrounding counties are preparing for the influx. Officials have allocated 7,250 land lots, but that number will likely increase.

The briefing included the options available for school-age children in the counties surrounding the installation — nearly 50 elementary schools, 20 middle schools and 15 high schools. Students have more than 15 choices for higher education in the Chattahoochee Valley region, including Columbus State, Auburn, Albany State, Beacon and Troy universities.

Columbus is home to more corporate headquarters than any other city in Georgia outside of Atlanta, including Synovus Corporation, Synovus Financial, Columbus Bank and Trust, Total Service Systems, AFLAC and Carmike Cinemas. The National Infantry Museum, Port Columbus National Civil Naval and Franklin Delano Roosevelt museums are all within a short driving distance from post.

Local leaders are working extensively with forts Benning and Knox leadership to ensure a smooth transition for newcomers, Jones said.

The Valley Partnership, in cooperation with Army leadership, conducted a town hall at Fort Knox earlier this month. More are scheduled for the summer. They will focus on quality of life issues to assist the movement of the Armor employees and their Families, Jones said.



The two-day town hall will include three sessions each day with presentations from the Directorate of Morale, Recreation and Welfare, with representatives from schools, real estate, banking, religious organizations, Department of Labor, civilian personnel system and housing participating.

Columbus State University ROTC cadets use various swimming styles to stay afloat during a 10-minute water-treading test Feb. 8 at Briant Wells Field House. They also had to swim 15-meters and jump from a 15-meter tower in load bearing vests, carrying mock M-16 rifles.

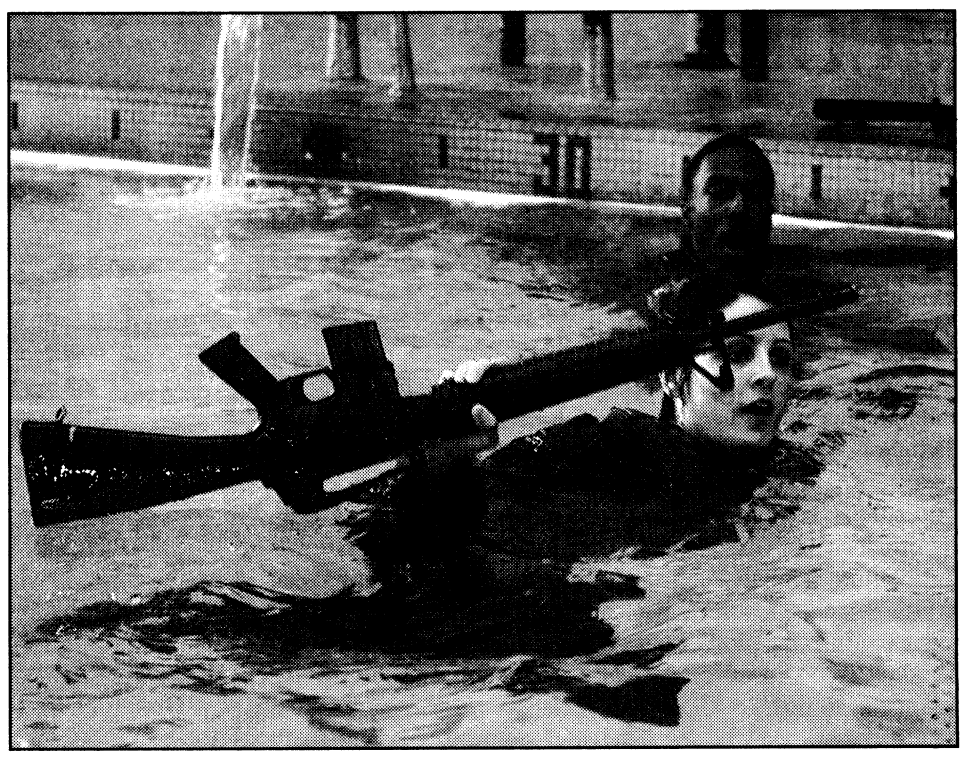
Columbus State University ROTC cadets took the plunge Feb. 8 at the Briant Wells Field House swimming pool during the Combat Water Survival Test.

Cadets swam 15 meters and jumped from three and 15 meters in combat gear with mock M-16 rifles.

Other swim events included treading water. Cadets had to stay afloat for 10 minutes without touching the bottom or sides while moving forward.

Then, they were required to tread water for five minutes while staying upright.

Maj. Laura Darby, an ROTC cadet, said passing swim testing is important for the cadets, especially those who will become Army officers and deploy to Iraq.



"They could find themselves in a situation where they are in the water, and they need to collect themselves, be calm and … get to land," she said.

Lt. Col. Mark L. Ridley, Military Science professor and ROTC commander, said cadets have to pass the CWST and the swim test to be commissioned.

Ridley said cadets in leadership roles conducted the testing at the pool and were gaining valuable leadership experience.

"They get to taste (leadership) firsthand," he said.

"They get to watch things happen, see things go wrong. Without jeopardizing training, we let them work through those problems."

Cadet Leah Briscoe completes the 15-meter swim during combat swimming safety testing.

Darby said the most important experience she is getting from ROTC is leadership opportunities.

"When cadets do sign a contract when they leave here, they will be leading Soldiers, and right now, we're a nation at war, so it's important for them to get as much hands-on training as they can," said Darby, who hopes to become a medevac pilot.

Ridley said CSU's ROTC program is thriving.

Since he arrived there in May 2006, the unit's numbers have doubled from about 30 to 61 cadets, and they have added two full-time, active-duty Soldiers to their cadre.

For more information about CSU's ROTC program, call Ridley at 706-568-2455.

Canadian sniper candidates train at Fort Benning

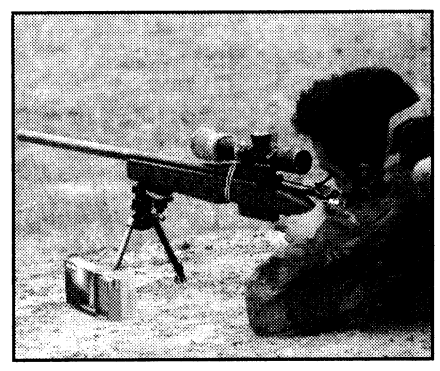
A Canadian sniper candidate peers through the lens of his gun during a stalking exercise Feb. 7. Lt. Vincent Lussier, course commander, said most sniper candidates who fail their training will fail during stalking, which requires snipers to remain camouflaged, sight their target and fire a blank shot without being detected by instructors acting as enemy observers.

THE BAYONET
Cheryl Rodewig

Eighteen Canadian snipers arrived at Fort Benning Jan. 19 to train in preparation for deployment to Afghanistan.

The Canadian army requested to do a sniper training course at Fort Benning because the weather here is better suited for the training than in Canada during this time of year, said Sgt. Maj. Thomas Milliken, Fort Benning's liaison with the Canadian snipers.



Lt. Vincent Lussier, the course commander of the 2nd Battalion, Royal 22nd Regiment, said the snipers were training nearly every day on Harmony Church ranges and fields.

American and Canadian snipers share techniques, which helps training improve for everyone, Lussier said.

The training exercises include judging distances, camouflage and shooting targets. The exercises simulate situations that may arise on the battlefield.

Part of the reconnaissance platoon, snipers go in front of the main body of infantry companies, Lussier said. Their tasks include target acquisition, material destruction or area reconnaissance.

Lussier said most sniper candidates fail their training during stalking, which requires snipers to remain undetected by instructors acting as enemy observers.

A sniper takes aim at a target 600 meters away Feb. 4 during an observation exercise.

The candidates must crawl several yards, choose a position and engage their target without being seen. The Fort Benning fields have more vegetation and trees than the snipers are used to, which can help hide them but also block their line of vision.

"Stalking is all about practicing our field tactics," said a Canadian sniper, who was first to complete the stalking exercise Feb. 7. "I looked at what was around me, (and) I got a good position."

The sniper said "I worked my spot" by cutting branches, remaining in the shadows and identifying potential obstacles.

The snipers return to Canada Feb. 29 to complete their training. Candidates who pass their exams will deploy to Afghanistan at the beginning of next year.

Vanpoolers commute for free

Program will help drivers save gas, reduce vehicle mileage

THE BAYONET
Cheryl Rodewig

"Fort Benning is hooked up and signed up," said Peter Lukken, Fort Benning's sustainability planner who heads the post's vanpool program, part of an Army initiative to reduce emissions.

Starting in March, the Army will distribute coupons to DoD employees and service members who commute to Fort Benning with a vanpool, Lukken said.

The driver of each van will collect the coupons, turn them in at the end of the month and receive a voucher that pays for the cost of the rented van, with gas included.

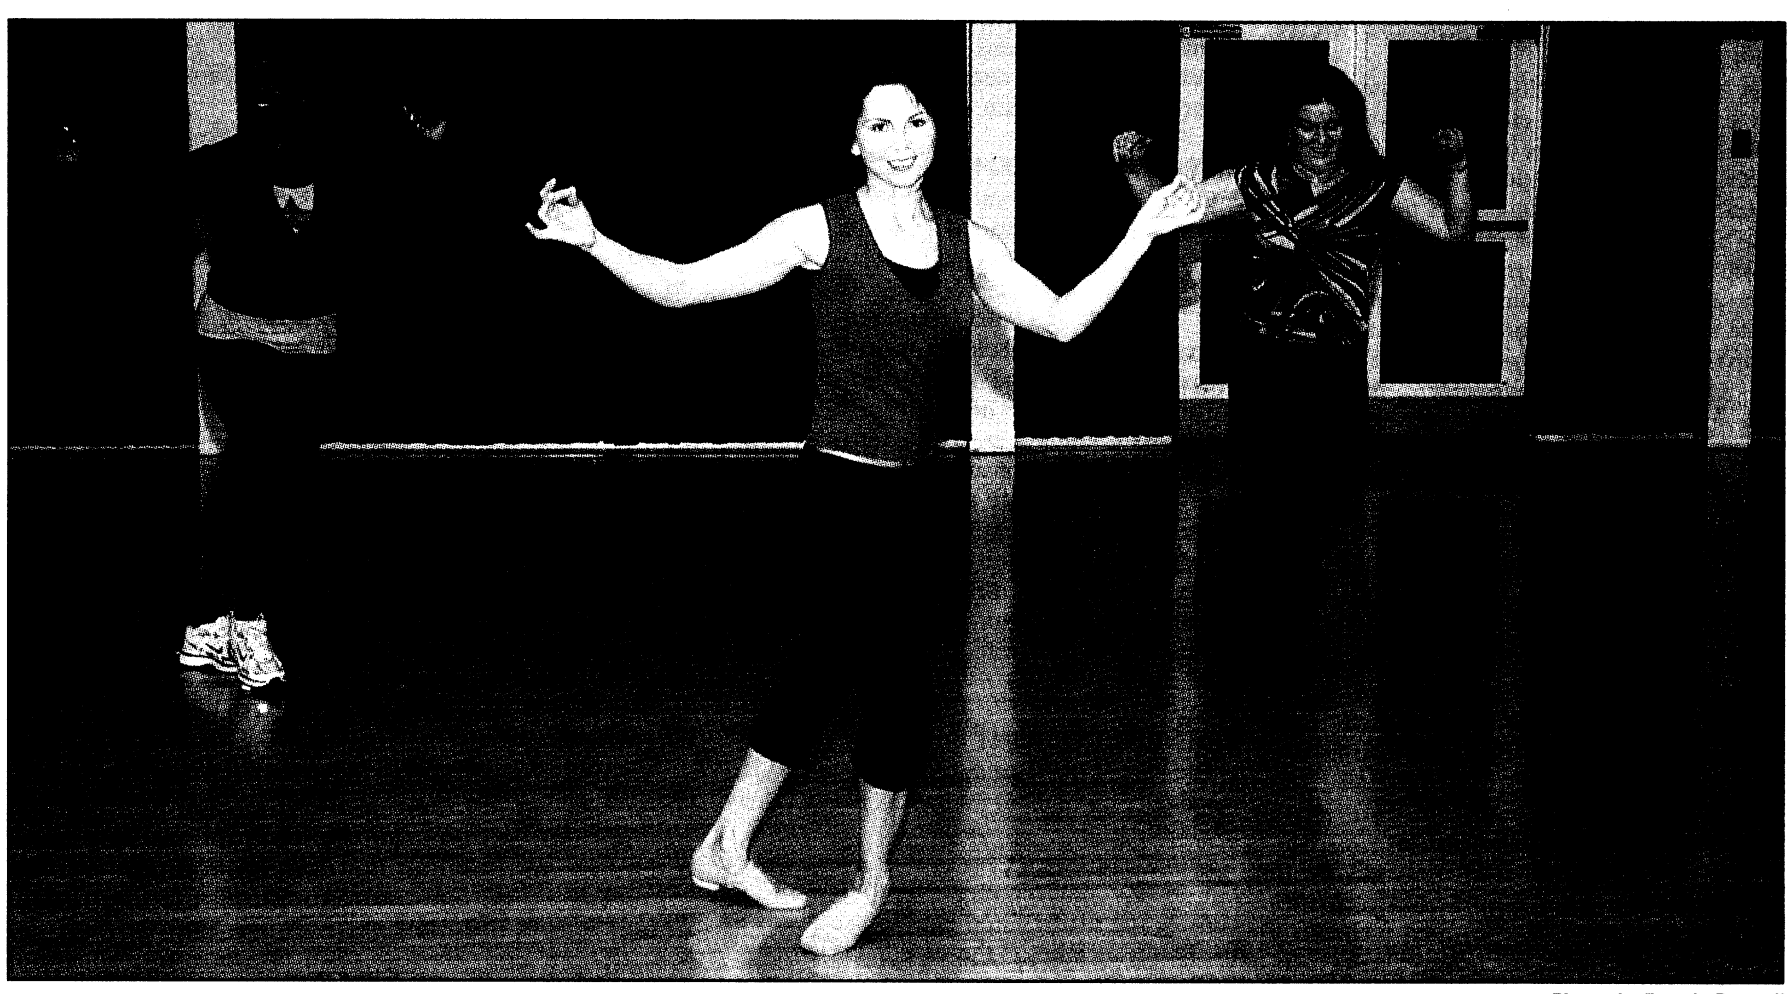
"We'll commute back and forth for free," said retired 1st Sgt. Darrel Sullivan, instructional systems specialist, who began driving a vanpool to Fort Benning Monday.

"I drive a truck and you're talking about $65 to $70 a week in gas," Sullivan said.

Sullivan said he will also save money by reducing wear and tear on the vehicle, and his truck won't need as many oil changes or new tires and tire rotations. He is saving on insurance, too — his premium was reduced by 15 percent.

Besides financial savings, fewer cars on the road means fewer emissions and less traffic congestion on post.

Currently, the vanpool comes from Harris County and stops once in Columbus and three times on Main Post.



Sullivan said his vanpool accommodates a 7:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. work schedule, but he hopes that other drivers and riders will become involved in the program to accommodate a variety of times and locations.

"You'll have routes coming in from everywhere — Phenix City, maybe from Cusseta. This is going to grow," Sullivan said.

For those who worry about not having a ride home during an emergency, Sullivan said, the Guaranteed Ride Home program provides "a little insurance."

Anyone who uses a commute alternative, like a vanpool, can register by calling 187-RIDEFIND (877-433-3463) and will be allowed five unscheduled rides home each year through the use of a rental car, provided free of charge for 24 hours. Eco-friendly commuters are also eligible for monthly cash prizes through the Clean Air Campaign.

Sullivan said the van can seat 15 people, and there are three more spots available. To join the current vanpool, contact Sullivan at 706-544-9230. To receive a list of potential vanpool partners or for more information, visit www.logyourcommute.com/FortBenning or call 678-244-7705.

Since Dancing With the Stars debuted on TV, many people have become interested in ballroom dancing. Those living and working on Fort Benning can learn the samba, swing and other dances by attending classes, led by Katrina Volgina, at the Kelley Hill Recreation Center.

Volgina, who is from Russia and is married to a Soldier, has been dancing since she was 5 and competed in the Asian Games in Beijing, China, in 1998. She has a master's degree in Russian education from the Khabarovsk State Institute of Physical Culture in Russia. She taught dance to adults in Russia and to children in China. She also taught competitors of the Hong Kong Dancing With the Stars program.

Here, Volgina teaches international ballroom dances, like the tango and foxtrot, and many Latin dances such as merengue, rumba and the cha-cha. She said individual lessons concentrate on a particular dance for a routine or for a special occasion, such as a wedding, while group lessons are more of a workout. The group lessons consist of a warm-up, basic steps and instructions for different dances.

"It's an alternative to exercises, like running. It wakes up other muscles," said 2nd Lt. Trecia Sutton, who attends group classes.

Katherine Haynes, a Family member who always wanted to learn Latin dances, said Volgina uses a lot of core training during the group lessons, which helps them work their stomach muscles while moving their hips.

Volgina will host a ballroom dancing open house March 7 at the Benning Club. She and her partner will demonstrate rumba and swing dances and teach basic steps. For more information about the open house, call the Benning Club at 706-682-0642. She will also teach a workshop at the Women's Conference March 12 at the Benning Club. Visit 222.benningmwr.com for information about the conference.

Ballroom dancing classes for ladies only are 10:30 to 11:30 a.m. Wednesdays and Fridays. Group lessons, no partners needed, are from 6 to 7 p.m. Wednesdays and Fridays, and private lessons, appointment only, are Saturdays. All classes are conducted at the Kelley Hill Recreation Center. For more information about classes, call Volgina at 706-761-0932.

Women's Conference set for Feb. 29

THE BAYONET
Cheryl Rodewig

Fort Benning's annual Women's Conference is March 12. Registration deadline is Feb. 29.

"We're going to have all sorts of surprises," said Wesley Clifton, marketing chairperson for the conference. "It will be a day of fun, learning and fellowship with other women."

The conference, from 7:45 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. at the Benning Club, is open to all DoD cardholders. The $18 registration fee includes a continental breakfast, lunch, door prizes, a tote filled with coupons, magazines and other treats, admission to several workshops and all conference materials. The fee is waived for Family members of a deployed Soldier who are 15:12 cardholders.

Clifton said this will be the fourth conference she has attended.

"I'd never seen anything like it on an Army installation. It was such a fabulous experience," she said. "If you're coming onto post, this is a great way to meet new people. You'll get to try something new that you may not have known about before."

The theme for the conference is "Feed Your Dreams, Nourish Your Soul." Cynthia Stevens Graubart, co-author of The One Armed Cook, will be the guest speaker.

Workshops include pottery, scrapbooking, financial planning, gardening, wine tasting, hairstyling, automotives and more.

Free child care is available on a first come, first-served basis. Registration for the conference and child care forms are available at the Benning Club, Bit of Benning, the PX, and the Directorate of Morale, Welfare and Recreation headquarters.

Those interested may submit photographs showing how they feed their dreams and nourish their souls. Photos will be used for a slideshow. To send in photographs, e-mail fbwcslideshow@yahoo.com.

For child care related questions, call 706-478-4064. For more information about the conference, visit www.benningmwr.com or e-mail fbwc2008@aol.com.

Esther Haskins shops at the Fort Benning commissary. "When you add in the cost of gas and the sales tax, a 5 percent surcharge for the commissary is nothing. Shopping here is a better deal, better quality, especially on meat."

Commissary offers various benefits

THE BAYONET
Lori Egan

Sometimes the best-kept secrets are out in the open — like the commissary.

Soldiers who shop at the commissary can save an enormous amount of money because everything is sold at cost plus a 5 percent surcharge, said Gary Hensley, store director. Taxpayer subsidies pay employee salaries.

"Overall, if you look at prices, you can save about 30 percent. That's a lot of money, especially in today's struggling economy," Hensley said.

But that's not the only reason to shop at the commissary.

"This is the quickest, easiest supermarket to check out of," he said.

Hensley is able to watch the lines from his desk at the back of the commissary. When there are a lot of people waiting to check out, management mobilizes, he said, opening more registers.

There are 22 registers in the store, and everybody who works in the building is trained to run one, he said.

"We try to keep enough registers open to keep the line down," Hensley said. "I've asked people how long they've been in line, and the longest they've waited is 10 to 12 minutes."

DECA SCHOLARSHIPS

Applications for the Defense Commissary Agency's 2008 scholarships are available at commissaries worldwide. The $1,500 scholarships are available to unmarried children under the age of 21 (23 if enrolled in school) of military active-duty, retired, Guard and Reserve service members.

In order to be eligible, the applicant and his sponsor must be enrolled in the DEERS database, and must have a current ID card. The applicant must be planning to attend or already attending an accredited college or university full time in the fall of 2008 or enrolled in a program of studies designed to transfer directly into a four-year program. Applicants are required to write an essay. At least one scholarship will be awarded at each commissary, and the deadline for application is Wednesday For more information, go to www.militaryscholar.org.

CLASSES AT MARTIN ARMY

BALLROOM DANCING CLASSES

Ballroom classes are held from 10:30 to 11:30 a.m. for ladies only and 6 to 7 p.m. for groups every Wednesday and Friday at the Kelley Hill Recreation Center. Both courses are $60 a month. Private lessons by appointment only are available on Saturdays for $20 per lesson.

For more information, call 706-544-3079.

CAREER ADVANCEMENT ACCOUNTS

CAA, an available grant, provides up to $3,000 per year for two years for eligible spouses. Spouses must have a high school diploma, GED or some college, one year remaining at Fort Benning, and two years remaining on current enlistment. Soldiers must be privates to sergeants, or second lieutenants to captains.

The funds can be used to complete post-secondary training at any of Georgia's two-year community and technical colleges or for training that will lead to a state approved credential or license such as an approved certificate from a continuing education program or approved education service provider.

For more information, call 706-545-7397 or go to the Army Education Center at Building 2602, Soldiers' Plaza.

EFMP ENROLLMENT

The Exceptional Family Member Program has mandatory enrollment for special needs Family members (child or spouse).

Enrollment doesn't hurt the Soldier's career but assists military personnel divisions in considering medical and educational needs of the Family member in the assignment process.

Enrollment is necessary if the spouse or child meets the following criteria: asthma, a current or past mental health diagnosis, a high-risk pregnancy, cancer (past or present), attention deficit disorder or diabetes. For resource information and referrals, call 706-545-5521.

CITIZENSHIP CLASSES

The International Wives Club and Army Community Service is sponsoring citizenship classes one evening a week for six weeks, Building 2624, Soldiers' Plaza.

For more information, call 706-687-6471 or 706-545-0403.

WOMEN'S CONFERENCE

Fort Benning's annual Women's Conference will be March 12 at the Benning Club. The conference, themed "Feed Your Dreams, Nourish Your Soul," is open to the first 300 people who register, will include a continental breakfast and catered lunch, several one-hour workshops, and a guest speaker. Free child care is available but space is limited.

The $18 registration fee will be waived for all 15:12 cardholders. Registration is now through Feb. 29. Look for registration forms at the Benning Club, Bit of Benning, the Subway at Afterhours, the PX Mall and MWR Headquarters on Eckel Avenue.

For more information, e-mail fbwc2008@aol.com or go to www.benningmwr.com.

SPRING EGGSTRAVAGANZA

The annual Spring Eggstravaganza will start at 10 a.m. March 15 at Doughboy Stadium.

The event will include egg hunts for children up to 10 years old. There will also be free games, inflatables, door prizes and a visit from the Easter Bunny. For more information, call 706-545-1853.

Make your marriage not just good, but 'very good'

BAYONET CORRESPONDENT
Frederick M. "Bud" Rupel

For many people, marriage simply does not work. In the eyes of some it is a subtle form of slavery. To children whose lives have been wrecked because of divorce, it is often viewed with fear and anger. For many young people, marriage is outdated, something to be avoided by simply "just living together without all that baggage" it brings.

In answer to the Biblical perspective, "It is not good that man should live alone," thousands would reply, "I would rather be alone than risk marriage." For many, God's word about marriage as an answer to loneliness seems to be fantasy.

Marriage is supposed to be a joyful and good relation. In fact, God intended for marriage to be "very good." However, the "goodness" of marriage has been so distorted that many find it offensive. We seem never to accept God's goodness to us or receive his gifts.

Elizabeth Achtemeier, in her book The Committed Marriage, has this to say to couples whose marriages are floundering: "One thing is certain. God still holds out the gracious invitation to us to take advantage of His mercy. He intended for us to live in a "very good" creation, and we corrupted that goodness. Yet even now He extends to us the possibility of wholeness and joy. Our marital unions can be made good again, our dreadful disruptions can be cured. There is no limit to the inexhaustible working of God's desire for our abundant life."

When a couple make their marriage vows, they are making a commitment to the marriage. However, 50 percent of all marriages end in divorce. For a marriage to be a committed marriage, it needs to be a total commitment. In effect, the couple is saying to each other: "I will be with you, no matter what. I believe that our marriage can work, I want it to work, and I will do my part to make it work."

Is such a commitment possible or should couples only commit themselves to each other as long as they love each other? I believe that such a commitment is possible, especially so when the couple is committed to God. When a couple keeps God as top priority in their marriage, there is no problem so great that God is not greater still.

To know the rich blessings marriage can bring, a couple must commit themselves without reservation to each other and to the Lord. Marriage ... who needs it? Those men and women who desire to experience the joy that comes from becoming one, separate yet wonderfully united in gratitude, joy and love.

Editor's note: Bud Rupel is a retired major and former Army chaplain. He now serves on the pastoral staff at Evangel Temple in Columbus.

Green genes

THE BAYONET
Cheryl Rodewig

While trying to be health conscious, it's easy to get wrapped up in what we eat, how much we exercise and total calories consumed and burned every day, but we may be overlooking one of the most important aspects of our diets — what we drink.

About two thirds of the human body is made up of water, and although we can last a few weeks without food, we can go only three days without water.

This essential liquid plays several important roles in our bodies. It aids digestion, cushions joints, keeps muscles flexible and flushes toxins from the liver.

It can even help our appearance. Soft, elastic skin and shiny hair are signs of a well hydrated body. Water also helps the body maintain a healthy weight because it regulates the metabolism, so drinking plenty of water is key for those who want to lose weight.

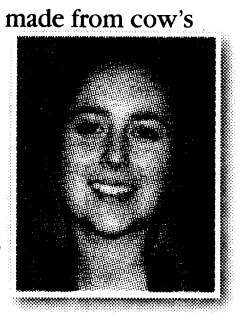
It can help keep us from overeating, too. More than a third of Americans chronically mistake thirst for hunger, so we may eat something moist, like ice cream, when actually what our bodies crave is water. In fact, by the time you feel thirsty, you're already dehydrated, and a drop of 1 or 2 percent in water levels in the body can trigger symptoms like mental fatigue, light-headedness and fuzzy memory.

Health experts suggest we drink about one ounce of water for every two pounds of our total weight. Drink an extra glass during hot weather, after exercising or when you're sick. On average, most people need at least 64 ounces of water a day. But most Americans don't drink nearly enough — about 75 percent suffer from dehydration.

Diuretics contribute to the problem. According to the Rudd Institute, the average American drinks 53 gallons of soft drinks a year. Since soda is a diuretic, it actually decreases water levels in the body. With each cup we drink, we need to drink an extra cup of water just to break even. So that may mean 53 extra gallons of water for some people.

If you're looking to make the transition from other beverages to water, it's easier now than ever. Carrying water bottles is increasingly common. Inexpensive water filters are readily available if you want to purify your own water at home.

There are many ways to get more water into your day. Try replacing a glass of orange juice with a whole orange and eight ounces of water. Instead of a cup of coffee at work, take a water bottle with you and fill it up at the water fountain. When you go out to eat, you can save a lot of money by ordering only water, and your drink won't add to your calories for that meal.



If you start replacing other drinks with water, you can make the switch in a matter of months, and I promise, you'll be healthier for it.

Baby Steps

Some infants thrive on formula

THE BAYONET
Rachel Houston

Last week, I wrote about the benefits of breast-feeding for infants, and there are many. However, some parents find breast-feeding doesn't work in their situation. In many cases, formula works best.

Formula is often made from cow's milk and fortified with a variety of beneficial ingredients. There are other options, though, including formulas based on soy and hydrolysate.

Formula tends to keep babies satisfied longer, because it is more difficult to digest than breast milk. This often makes for fewer feedings each day. It is also easier to monitor a baby's food intake when bottle feeding.

Women who bottle-feed have more freedom and don't need to be at baby's side day and night, since nearly anyone can feed a baby a bottle. This allows for an easier transition back to work for working moms.

Bottle-feeding can also ease some of the demands placed on a new mother by allowing other people to help care for the baby. A new mom in desperate need of sleep can ask her husband, mom or other family member to take overnight feedings.

The physical demands on a new mom can also be lessened if she doesn't produce breast milk. It allows mom to not have to watch her diet so closely and have an alcoholic drink with dinner without having to worry about the alcohol getting to her baby.

One very enticing benefit to formula feeding is the bond it allows the baby to develop with his or her father and any other family member who routinely handles feedings, including older siblings. However, breast-feeding mothers can pump milk for dad to feed. It just may not be as easy and convenient as formula.

Mothers who opt for formula may go back to their pre-pregnancy wardrobe quicker, because they don't have to worry about shirts or dresses that accommodate breast-feeding. Formula is also beneficial to modest moms who aren't comfortable nursing in public.

Mothers who bottle feed have fewer restrictions on birth control methods, as some contraceptives aren't safe to take while breast-feeding.

There are some reasons why women can't or shouldn't breast-feed. Women with debilitating illnesses, such as heart or kidney disease, may not be able to breast-feed.

Other candidates for formula feeding are women with serious infections, such as HIV, women on medications that pass into breast milk and are unsafe for baby, women who work with hazardous chemicals, women who have damage to the nerve supply to the nipple from injury or surgery, babies with a metabolic disorder and babies with a cleft lip or palate.

In some cases, women may choose both breast-feeding and formula feeding.

In any case, you, your doctor and a lactation consultant can come up with the right feeding situation for you and your baby.

Shoppers: Find bargains, variety, convenience at commissary

Shopping at the commissary is a benefit for service members, retired veterans and their Families.

"If I could, I would shop here. It's quicker, faster and certainly cheaper," Hensley said.

Llace Noel, who has shopped at the commissary for about two months, said she once stopped at a store in town for a couple of items.

"I won't do that again," she said. "I spent a lot more than I bargained."

Variety is another reason to shop at the commissary, Hensley said.

"Our customers come from all over the world and expect the brands they're familiar with, so our variety is enormous," he said.

Another reason to shop at the commissary is the sidewalk sales, said retired Master Sgt. Clemont Remington, who lives in Smiths Station, Ala.

"The sidewalk sales are good deals," he said.

Remington started shopping at the commissary when he lived on Fort Benning and advised his Soldiers to do the same.

"'This is your benefit' I told them. 'It's convenient. Use it,'" he said.

RESTAURANT REVIEW

Boss Hog's

THE BAYONET
Rachel L. Watkins

Calling all barbecue lovers, there is a restaurant in Columbus you should check out. The atmosphere at Boss Hog's is fun, and the barbecue sauce has a tangy kick that will make your tongue tingle.

This is a great place to kick back, eat and watch sports on TV. Outside seating is also available.

The owner, David Bone, named it after a character from his favorite TV show, Dukes of Hazzard. Boss Hog's offers a variety of barbecue, including ribs, pork and beef, and it comes any way you want it — chipped, chopped or sliced.

Next week in The Bayonet, Rachel will review Buckhead Grill.

There are four sauces — medium, mild, hot — which are mustard vinegar-based sauces, and there is also a mayonnaise-based sauce. The vinegar is what gives the sauce a little kick.

I tried the small pork barbecue plate, which comes with Texas toast and coleslaw for $4.99. It was plenty of food for me. Medium and large portions are available.

The General Lee is a sandwich with barbecue chipped beef, mild sauce, pickles, and it's topped with cheese and homemade barbecue stew. It'll set you back about four bucks.

Or try the Q-tater, barbecue pork on a king potato, for $5.49. Barbecue sandwiches are only 97 cents.

The $4.99 lunch special, barbecue with two sides, is served between 11 a.m. and 2 p.m. Sides include barbecue beans, Brunswick stew, collard greens, coleslaw and potato salad. All-you-can-eat chicken is served from 5 to 8:30 p.m. Wednesday nights.

Boss Hog's also offers brownies for dessert. Bone said he hopes to sell grilled doughnuts topped with ice cream soon.

Hours are 10:30 a.m. to 7:30 p.m. weekdays and 10:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday. Boss Hog's is located at 4524 17th Ave.

For more information, call 706-507-1740.

This elephant is one of the many animals painted on the walls in the black light miniature golf area. Miniature golf is $5 per person or three people for $10.

Zoo City USA

Entertainment center offer amusements, including go-karts, pinball, arcade games

THE BAYONET
Rachel L. Watkins

I'll admit it. Although I am in my 20s, my first love — aside from Saturday morning cartoons — is games. I'm a game geek. I've found a good place to get my game on at Zoo City USA, which opened in Columbus two weeks ago.

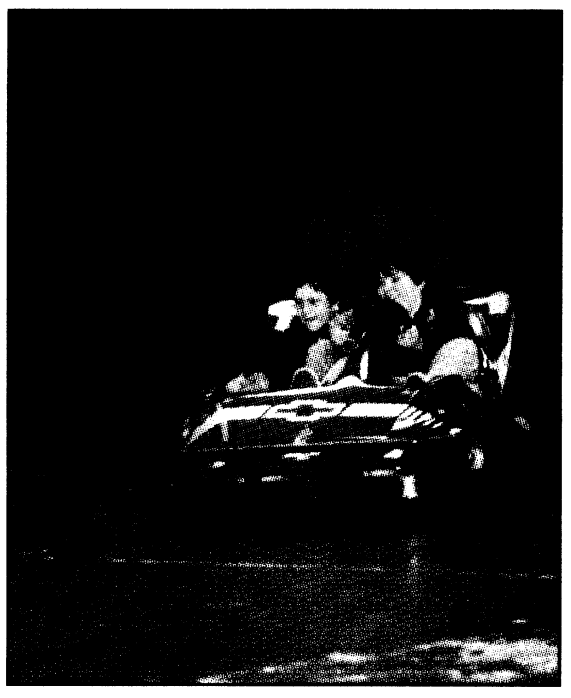
Zoo City USA has two indoor go-kart tracks, black light miniature golf, pool tables, air hockey, pin ball, skee ball and plenty of arcade games.

Other amusement places in town are geared toward children, but this place is for any age. It could be a fun date night or night out with friends or family.

The entertainment center is located about 15 miles from Fort Benning, at 2301 Airport Thruway, behind Stevie B's Pizza.

As far as games go, they have just about everything, including game show, boxing, fighting, driving, basketball and coin games. Game tokens are 20 for $5, 40 for $10 and 100 for $20. Depending on what game you play, you will get tickets you can turn in for prizes.

It is exciting that Columbus has an indoor go-kart track. The go-karts, which reach up to 30 mph, are electric, which means no gas fumes. Those who don't want to ride can watch at the observation window. Right now, the pro track is open. Riders must be at least 4 feet, 6 inches. The junior track, built for children, will open in March. The cost for a go-kart ride is $7.50 for the pro track. The youth rides on the junior track will be $5 per child.



Golf isn't usually my thing, but I enjoyed the blacklight mini golf. The walls were painted with cheetahs, elephants and gorillas in a jungle scene. The course is short but fun and costs $5 per person or $10 for three players.

If you want to do more than one activity, purchase a combo ticket. You can get two rides on the pro track and two mini golf tickets for $20. Or you get 10 rides on the adult track for $60.

There is a hangout, The Hub, if you want to sit and talk with others or surf the Internet. There is also a playroom for the little ones and a puppet show. A snack bar is also available.

Hours are 11 a.m. to 10 p.m. Tuesday through Thursday, 10 a.m. to midnight Friday and Saturday, and from 1 to 10 p.m. Sunday.

For more information, call 706-507-9661.

The electric go-karts, powered by four car batteries each, are fast and fun and can reach up to 30 mph. The track is indoors.

BAYONET CORRESPONDENT
Maj. Matthew Archambault

People often take for granted that which is closest to them. As Fort Benning denizens at the Home of the Infantry, many take for granted the history of our storied branch and its indelible role in our nation's existence and survival. U.S. Army Infantry, a coffee table book, now available through the National Infantry Association, commemorates the story of the Infantryman.

Coffee table books are by definition unwieldy and not the usual tome one includes in a serious professional reading collection. U.S. Army Infantry represents more than just a book to put on display. This book represents the American Infantryman's heritage. This is the Infantryman's yearbook.

Cleverly designed to mirror the future National Infantry Museum, U.S. Army Infantry opens, like the Museum will, where the Infantryman's journey ends, with the last 100 yards. This is the distinguishing aspect of the Infantry compared to his uniformed brethren. We all might ride in helicopters, roll in vehicles and jump from the sky, but only a select few occupy the point of the spear. Only the Infantryman gains a candid and intimate knowledge of his nation's adversaries. This is arguably the most important section of the book and while it might not be the lion's share, it sets the tone for the journey to follow.

U.S. Army Infantry takes the reader through a history of the Infantry, which, not surprisingly, is really the history of our nation. Though formally instituted on June 14, 1775, just like the Army, our Infantry's heritage actually extends back still further.

This history is interesting and easy to read albeit abridged. It covers the French and Indian Wars through the resettlement of Native Americans until today's operations in Iraq and Afghanistan.

Artwork and photography bring the words to life throughout each section. Sub-sections highlight specific battles, insignia, certain units and medals.

No one knows better than the Infantry that the fight is won not only on the battlefield, but also on the home front. After concluding the history of the Infantry the book explores the Army Family through the generations.

The remaining chapters touch base upon Fort Benning itself, future technologies and our more famous alumni to include those who have become president and earned Medals of Honor. Most of these men have either ranges or buildings dedicated in their honor. Pvt. Rodger Young, discussed in these pages, finds his immortalization in the Robert Heinlein book Starship Troopers.

Perhaps not as renowned, but no less distinguished are the Infantrymen and historians that write the articles in this book. Some like Richard Hyatt and retired Cols. Ralph Puckett and Robert Simpson reside right here in Columbus. Others like retired Lt. Gens. Michael Spigelmire and Tom Fields return often enough to the Home of the Infantry that their faces never lose familiarity.

Together these Infantry icons weave a tapestry depicting the sine curve progression of the American Infantry over the last 200 years. Understanding the long view provides comfort. There is comfort in knowing that guerrilla warfare is not new. It comes and goes just like large formation, high intensity conflicts.

We haven't always fought battles like World War II. Before that we hunted Pancho Villa and suppressed the Philippine Insurrection. Appreciation of this fact is inspiring.

It is inspiring to know that we are at just another point on that sine curve, and that this book is not a finished product. Infantrymen continue to write more pages everyday and perhaps tomorrow there will be another line in a book that reads, "To the everlasting glory of the Infantry shines the name of..."

This is not a research book. I would not recommend it to anyone with the sole purpose of exploring a singular event. This is an inspirational book. This is where you come for motivation.

This is the book you open to share your profession with the uninitiated. I recommend this book if you want to breathe the Infantry air filled with a cordite haze and vibrating from the concussion of shells.

If you still have your high school or college annual on your shelf and you're an Infantryman, U.S. Army Infantry should be sitting somewhere nearby.

OPENING TODAY

DEFINITELY, MAYBE

Will (Ryan Reynolds), a Manhattan dad in the middle of a divorce, is questioned by his daughter, 10-year-old Maya (Abigail Breslin), about his life before his marriage. For Maya, Will recounts the history of his romantic relationships with three very different women, changing their names so Maya has to guess who he finally marries.

Is her mother Emily, Will's college sweetheart, April, his longtime best friend, or Summer, the free-spirited journalist? As Maya puts together the pieces, she begins to understand that love is not as simple as it seems.

Definitely, Maybe is rated PG-13 for sexual content, language and smoking.

JUMPER

A genetic anomaly allows a young man (Hayden Christensen) to teleport himself anywhere. He soon finds himself in a war that has been raging for thousands of years between "Jumpers" and those who have sworn to kill them.

Jumpers is rated PG-13 for violence, language and sexuality.

STEP UP 2 THE STREETS

When street dancer Andie (Briana Evigan) arrives at the elite Maryland School of the Arts, she finds herself fighting to fit in while trying to hold onto her old life. When she joins forces with the school's hottest dancer, Chase (Robert Hoffman), to form a crew of classmate outcasts to compete in Baltimore's underground dance battle "The Streets," she finds a way to live her dream while building a bridge between her two separate worlds.

Step Up 2 the Streets is rated PG-13 for language, suggestive material and violence.

THE SPIDERWICK CHRONICLES

Peculiar things start to happen the moment twins Jared and Simon Grace (Freddie Highmore) and their sister Mallory (Sarah Bolger) leave New York with their mom and move into the secluded old house owned by their great- great uncle Arthur Spiderwick.

Unable to explain the odd occurrences, the family blames Jared, but when the three children investigate further, they uncover the fantastic truth of the Spiderwick estate and the creatures that inhabit it.

The Spiderwick Chronicles is rated PG for scary action, violence, peril and thematic elements.

GEORGE A. ROMERO'S DIARY OF THE DEAD

Jason Creed (Joshua Close) and a crew of college filmmakers are in the Pennsylvania woods making a no-budget horror film when they hear the news that the dead have started returning to life. Led by Jason's girlfriend, Debra (Michelle Morgan), they try to return home, but there is no escape. As his friends die and the government fails to control the crisis, Jason steadily documents the true-life horrors, ending up taking refuge in a fortress that turns out to be a trap.

George A. Romero's Diary of the Dead is rated R for violence, gore and language.

ME & YOU, US, FOREVER

A 47-year-old Christian man (Michael Blain-Rozgay), on the other side of an unwanted divorce, reminisces about his old high school girlfriend and first love of 30 years ago and wants to see her again.

Me & You, Us, Forever is rated PG for thematic elements.

ALSO PLAYING

FOOL'S GOLD

Obsessed with finding a treasure called the Queen's Dowry, Ben "Finn" Finnegan (Matthew McConaughey) convinces his estranged wife, Tess (Kate Hudson), who now works aboard a yacht owned by billionaire Nigel Honeycutt (Donald Sutherland) and Nigel himself to join him in the quest. But they are not the only ones after the treasure. Moe Fitch (Ray Winstone) has also set out to claim the prize.

Fool's Gold is rated PG-13 for violence, sexual material, nudity and language.

WELCOME HOME ROSCOE JENKINS

Self-help guru RJ Stevens (Martin Lawrence) has countless fans, a TV-star fiancee and money to burn.

But when he returns to Georgia for his parents' 50th wedding anniversary, RJ finds he may be a superstar in L.A., but he's just one of the guys at home.

Welcome Home Roscoe Jenkins is rated PG-13 for crude and sexual content, language and drug references.

THE EYE

Blind since childhood, Sydney Wells (Jessica Alba) regains her sight after a double corneal transplant.

As unexplainable images start to haunt her, she becomes convinced that her anonymous eye donor has somehow opened the door to a terrifying world only she can now see.

The Eye is rated PG-13 for violence, terror and disturbing content.

OVER HER DEAD BODY

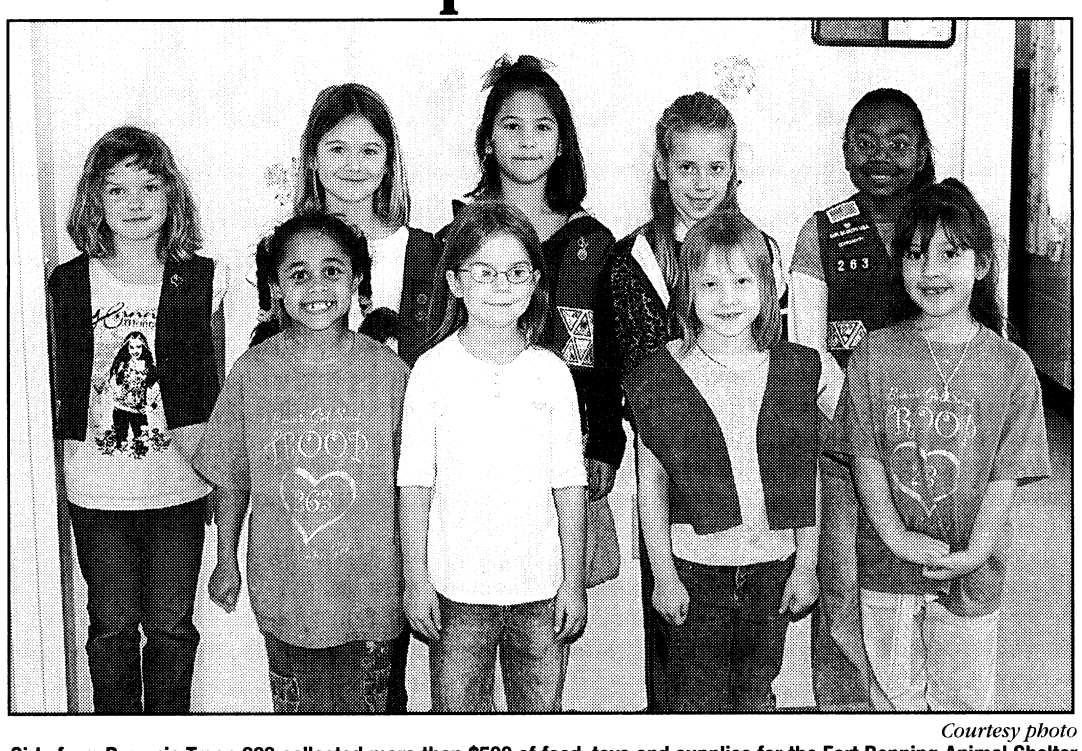
Devastated when his fiancee Kate (Eva Longoria Parker) is killed on their wedding day, Henry (Paul Rudd) consults a psychic, Ashley (Lake Bell), and the two fall in love. But then Kate's ghost begins haunting Ashley, determined to break up the romance.

Over Her Dead Body is rated PG-13 for sexual content and language.

RAMBO

John Rambo (Sylvester Stallone) has retreated to northern Thailand to live a peaceful life in the mountains.

When a group of human rights missionaries ask him to guide them into Burma to deliver medical supplies and then are captured by the Burmese army, Rambo decides to venture alone into the war zone to rescue them.



Rambo is rated R for violence, sexual assaults, grisly images and language.

BENCH NOTES

MITCHELL THOMAS IV

Good Knight Bobby

After a stellar career at Indiana and a brief stint at Texas Tech, coach Bobby Knight called it quits last week. He relinquished his position to his son, Pat, who was an assistant.

Knight, who appeared on the Tonight Show with Jay Leno Monday wearing a referee's shirt, left the door open for returning to coaching.

Bobby should let it go. As controversial as he's been and as many kids as he's slapped up, he needs to let his career end on a good note. But he better watch wearing that ref's shirt. He might get confused and choke himself.

Clemens on the Hill

Roger Clemens testified on Capitol Hill Wednesday during a congressional hearing about the Mitchell Report.

Clemens fumbled through his statements, which contradicted those of his former trainer Brian McNamee who testified against him. McNamee alleged that he injected Clemens at least 16 times.

Even though this animal like a witch hunt, I still think the Rocket is gonna get off scot-free. Poor Barry.

NASCAR gets nasty

NASCAR placed drivers Tony Stewart and Kurt Busch on a six-race probation.

The suspension stems from an altercation the two drivers had after a practice last week, which spilled over into a NASCAR official's trailer. NASCAR claims the on-track portion of the bout was the real issue.

Wow, this sounds more like UFC than NASCAR. This is one race I wish I had seen. Not.

Big Tuna rids stench

Big Tuna, Bill Parcells, plans to get all the stench out of the Dolphins' locker room. Parcells, the new VP of football operations, made a nine-player cut, including the release of injury-prone OG Trent Green.

Parcells is trying to send a message, and I don't blame him. After a one-win season and a six-season playoff lapse, they need to change the team's name and convert to World League until they prove otherwise.

Like father, like son

Julio Cesar Chavez Jr. defeated Jose Celaya in an eight-round TKO Saturday to capture the WBC Continental Super Welterweight title.

Chavez Jr., who improved his undefeated record to 35-0-1, is the oldest son of three-time champ Julio Cesar Chavez.

It looks like sonny-boy is on his way to bright future. Let's just hope he doesn't need five hits like his pops. He looked like a busted packet of ketchup after that fight with Oscar De la Hoya.

Kids kick it in martial arts classes

SKIESUnlimited Tae Kwon Do gives kids discipline, confidence

Jose Mortenson lands a kick, as Hannah Mishkoff tries to block during a sparring match in the SKIESUnlimited advanced Tae Kwon Do class. Kids, ages 6 to 17, learn techniques and skills to help build confidence and self-esteem.

Amelia Diaz, mother of 10-year-old Leslie Diaz, noticed a change in her daughter over the last two years.

"She used to be a really shy and would always want to cling to mommy," Amelia said. "Now she has really come out of her shell."

Amelia said much of Leslie's change is because of Tae Kwon Do.

Fifty-four students, ages 6 to 17, are taking Tae Kwon Do with hopes of achieving those same benefits, said Bob Ford, the senior instructor in the SKIESUnlimited Tae Kwon Do program.

"A big part of Tae Kwon Do is sounding off in class, and a lot of the shy kids start off uncomfortable with it," Ford said.

"But I tell them the importance of speaking up with pride. Now a lot of the shy kids speak the loudest."

But the Tae Kwon Do students do more than sound off. They also learn martial arts skills, including kicks, punches and proper stances, while the more advanced levels focus on mid-air and spinning kicks, defense skills and sparring. The classes are divided into beginning white and yellow belts, intermediate green and blue belts, and the advanced brown through black belts.

The kids are encouraged to learn at their own pace and are tested every six weeks for belt advancement.

Ford, who has been teaching Tae Kwon Do on post for the past year, said developing discipline and self-confidence in the kids is his goal.

Although Amelia and her husband, Staff Sgt. Felix Diaz, taught 10-year-old Leslie discipline at an early age, they have noticed Tae Kwon Do has helped develop her social skills among peers.

"As a military Family, we have always taught respect, but Tae Kwon Do has helped her learn to respect other kids as well," Amelia said.

Ford said the discipline and confidence learned in Tae Kwon Do also reaches outside of the classroom.

"I've had many parents tell me that their kids are better in school because of it," Ford said. "They're just so much more sure of themselves."

Ford said another important part of Tae Kwon Do is practice and repetition — the key to self-defense.

"We want these kids to do the things they learn in the classes over and over so they would automatically react correctly and hold their own if they were ever attacked," she said.

Ford also emphasizes the difference between learning proper defensive tactics and bullying.

"I'm really strict about the kids using what

Annual Champion Auto Show set for Feb. 23

THE BAYONET
Mitchell Thomas IV

Jordan Vocational High School is preparing for the 15th annual Champion Auto Show Feb. 23 at 3200 Howard Ave. in Columbus.

The show is the school's largest annual fundraiser, said event chairman Tim Vinson.

"It has become an extremely popular tradition in the area," Vinson said.

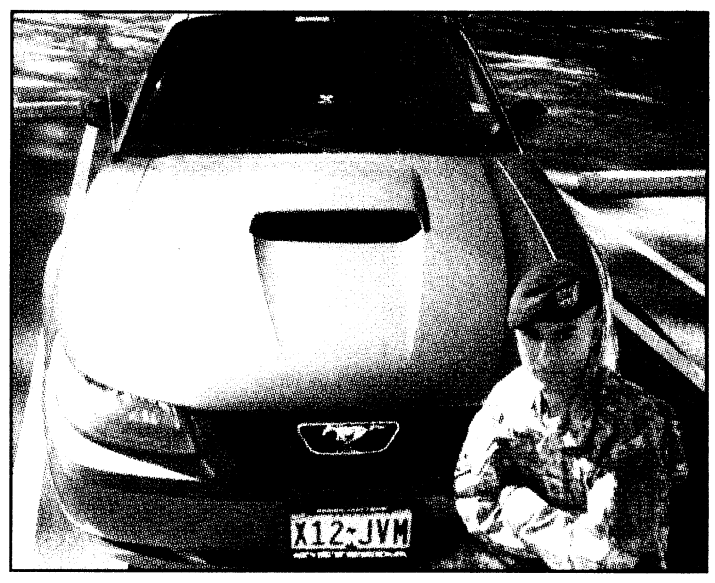
"It's a fun-filled day for the school and the spectators."

The event, which had 170 entrants last year, will feature 40 automobile classes for judging. Classes include Corvette, street rods, Mustangs, Mopar, modified trucks, muscle cars and many more.

There is also a student class in which students from any school can enter.

"The kids really get into it," Vinson said. "They get their cars all cleaned and looking good, and they get encouragement by car enthusiasts. It's really good for the students"

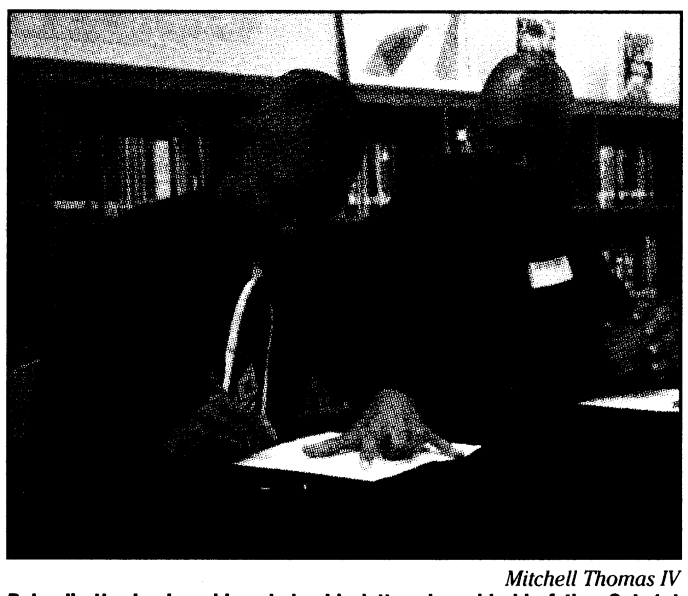
Staff Sgt. Jaime Garza plans to enter his 2003 Ford Mustang in the show. Garza said he is pleased to be involved in an event that benefits students.



"If I could place in my class, that would work well for me, but what's most important is what this event helps do for the school," he said.

The money raised will fund activities for the students at Jordan, including vocational competitions like SkillsUSA.

The fee for pre-registration $15 and must be received by Feb. 22.



Registration on the day of the event is from 8 to 11 a.m. The fee is $20. Judging for categories begins at 9 a.m.

For more information, call Vinson at 706-748-2827.

Five Chattco seniors sign athletic scholarships

Delandis Harris signs his scholarship letter alongside his father Sgt. 1st Class James Drummond. Harris will attend Fort Valley State University.

THE BAYONET

On Feb. 6, Chattahoochee County High School made history in the small town of Cusseta.

Chattco, which has only been open four years, held its first Signing Day for five senior football players.

Octavuis Staton, Delandis Harris, Lester Jones, Quin Jones and Kelvonte Jones received athletic scholarships. Staton, Gibson and Quin and Kelvonte Jones signed letters of intent to Albany State University, and Harris signed to rival school, Fort Valley State University.

"I really feel honored, and I thank God for blessing me all the way to this point," Harris said. "The feeling is overwhelming right now."

An emotional Josh Kemp, head coach of the football team, reflected on the team's progress.

He said the five players, four who had never played organized ball until high school, set the tone for their success with a strong work ethic.

"In all the years I've coached these five boys, none of them have missed a practice, and to me that says it all," Kemp said. "These kids have worked hard and done everything I've asked them to do, and this day is a testament to that."

Staton, who was recruited by numerous schools, chose Albany State primarily to be around his friends and teammates. The former Fort Benning resident is the first to go to college in his Family.

"The coaching staff talked to me and encouraged me to do things I didn't think I could do," Staton said. "I owe it all to them."

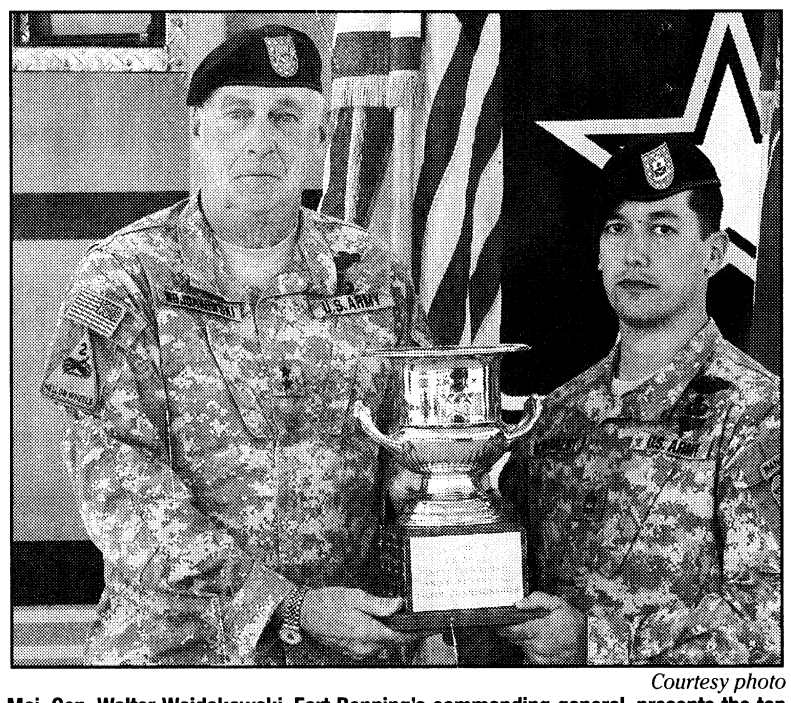
Sniper instructor wins Pistol Championship

U.S. ARMY MARKSMANSHIP UNIT
Paula J. Randall

A Sniper School instructor beat 64 other shooters to win the Fort Benning Commanding General's Cup Pistol Trophy Feb. 10.



Sgt. 1st Class Jared N. Van Aalst of C Company, 2nd Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment, won the Fort Benning Service Pistol Championship. 1st Sgt. Timothy Kubik of A Co., 1st Bn., 19th Inf. Regt., took second place overall and Staff Sgt. Stephen Collins of B Co., 1st Bn., 11th Inf Regt., was third.

Van Aalst won the Fort Benning Pistol Championship by having the highest individual aggregate of the Commanding General's Pistol Match and the Excellence in Competition Match. Van Aalst won the Commanding General's Pistol Match, followed by Army Reservists Staff Sgt. Mark Ness and Sgt. 1st Class Hubert Townsend of the Small Arms Readiness Group in second and third. ROTC Cadet Michael Smolucha of North Georgia College and State University was the winner in the Novice Division; Cadet Henry Markham of North Georgia College was second and Cadet Tyler Schexnayder of Auburn University was third.

Sgt. 1st Class Jason M. St. John of the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit won the Excellence in Competition Open Division. Sgt. 1st Class Eric Leid, a North Georgia College ROTC instructor, took second place, and Collins was third. Smolucha won the Novice Division followed by Cadet Garrett Estes and Cadet Thomas Barth of Auburn in second and third.

The North Georgia College ROTC Team won the Command Sergeant Major Pistol Team Match; shooters were Cadets Christopher Lee, Benjamin Lynde, Markham and Smolucha.

The team from the 19th Infantry Regiment finished second; firing members were Sgt. 1st Class Jeremiah Ross, Staff Sgt. Marty Rowe, Staff Sgt. Cameron Cook and Kubik. In third place was the Auburn Team of Maj. Richard Locke and Cadets Steven Kornegay, Barth and Estes.

Maj. Gen. Walter Wojdakowski, Fort Benning's commanding general, presents the top award to Sgt. 1st Class Jared N. Van Aalst of C Company, 2nd Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment, who won the Fort Benning Service Pistol Championship.

Maj. Gen. Walter Wojdakowski, Fort Benning's commanding general, presented the top awards.

"On the battlefield, that pistol is the only thing standing between you and the enemy," Wojdakowski told the competitors.

"I hope this competition has helped you hone your skills. You have to be a world-class shooter to be a world-class Soldier and a world-class leader."

Turkey calling champ to hold seminars at Uchee Creek

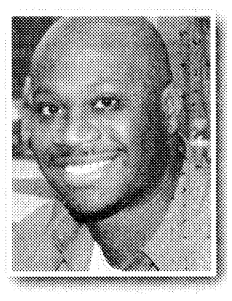
Joe Drake, champion turkey caller, will be hosting turkey-calling seminars at Uchee Creek Lodge Feb. 26 and March 4.

Drake, the winner of three turkey calling national championships and eight Georgia state titles, will provide instruction on how to use a variety of turkey calls and hunting techniques.

"This year, I want to talk about the ethical way to harvest a turkey as well as ways of showing courtesy to fellow hunters," Drake said.

This year he will also show DVDs of callers around the nation giving examples of the various styles.



The seminars are free to the public. Refreshments will be available for purchase.

For more information, contact Drake at 706-660-0501.

Shaq walks into Sun

THE BAYONET
Mitchell Thomas IV

It's time to turn my attention to basketball, and what better way to start than two of the biggest blockbuster trades of the season.

The despicable Miami Heat team, desperate for anything positive, made an unprecedented decision. They traded aging mammoth Shaquille O'Neal to the Phoenix Suns for Sean Marion and Marcus Banks.

Before I get to the Diesel, let me speak about Phoenix's side of the trade first. It has been heavily reported that Marion, a four-time All-Star, who happens to be one of my favorite players, was terribly unhappy with the Suns. He has been the third option behind Steve Nash and Amare Stoudemire for several years. More importantly, the Suns refused to grant him a contract extension during this past off-season, which he (and I) felt he deserved.

Their entire approach concerning Marion the last few years has been idiotic. He has been the most consistent threat on the team for the last eight seasons. Marion is a game changer on both sides of the ball. Also, he isn't injury-prone like Stoudemire.

On the other hand, the Suns are in a bit of a win-lose situation. They get a guy in Shaq who will do what they are obviously most concerned with — bringing in dollars. It doesn't matter how old Shaq is, he is a financial bonus, and he will be until he retires. Also, they get a guy who is battle tested and a proven winner. It doesn't matter if Shaq gets the ball or not, he alters games in a way no man has done in my lifetime. His presence in the paint will remain as fierce as ever.

What I'm not sure of is how Shaq will fit into the Phoenix offense. The bulk of the team's playbook is based on uptempo transition play, and the rest are designed plays for Stoudemire, which was another of Marion's problems.

Shaq hasn't been in a fast-paced offense in years, and he will be hard pressed to adjust anytime soon, especially with his ailing hip. Also, how will he defer to Stoudemire? Shaq has never been greedy, but what type of offensive production can we expect from a player who is in the middle of the worst season in his career?

Another plus for the Suns is that Stoudemire, who has played center for the last several years, will move to his natural position at power forward.

As for the Heat, I'm not sure if even Michael Jordan in his prime could revitalize that broken squad. Marion will add versatility on offense and hustle on defense, but they now have a deficiency in front court after getting rid of Shaq.

On the other side of the map, the Lakers made a great move picking up forward-center Pau Gasol from the Memphis Grizzlies for virtually nothing. All they had to give up was a few draft picks and Kwame Brown, whose been a bum since his entrance into the league.

This is what the team needed in order to turn the corner, and once injured center Andrew Bynum returns, they could have the most complete team in all of basketball.

As for the Grizzlies, well, who cares? It isn't worth a single keystroke to discuss their problems.

BIKE TRIP

Outdoor Rec will sponsor a bike trip to the Silver Comet Trail in March. For more information, call 706-545-9636.

ARMY FAMILY COVENANT BENEFITS

Families of deployed Soldiers who qualify through the Army Family Covenant for the 15:12 card will have registration fees waived for Outdoor Rec trips and activities and half off their Benning Club membership during their Soldiers' deployment.

The cards are issued through unit FRSA and FRG liaisons.

WOMEN'S SOFTBALL

The Fort Benning women's slow-pitch softball team will hold tryouts at 6 p.m. Wednesday and Thursday at Gowdy Stadium.

Tryouts are open to active-duty service members, Family members and DoD Civilians 18 years or older.

For more information e-mail kathryn.m.walker@us.army.mil or call 706-763-9165.

FORT BENNING SOFTBALL

The Fort Benning Men's Softball team will hold tryouts for the 2008 season at 9 a.m. Feb. 23 and March 1. Tryouts will be held at Gowdy Field. Candidates must be active-duty service members (of any service) assigned to Fort Benning.

For more information, call 706-575-8960.

HARVEST REPORTING

Hunters are reminded that all deer, turkeys, hogs, doves, squirrels and quail harvested on Fort Benning must be reported using the TELTRACK Hunter Control System by calling 706-545-8387 and selecting menu item number 4.

FERAL PIG BOUNTY

The bounty for feral pigs killed on post is $40 until March 12. Authorized Fort Benning hunters must take the tail of the pig, enclosed in a plastic storage bag, with an attached data sheet to the Conservation Branch, Building 5883, between 1 and 3 p.m. on Tuesdays or the last Friday of the month.

For more information about the hunt, the data sheet or the bounty, call 706-545-7978.

EAR TAGS

Auburn University is conducting a study of the feral pigs on Fort Benning to understand their population size, reproductive rates, movement patterns and food habits.

This information will help determine what impacts feral pigs have on habitat, wildlife populations and military training.

Pig hunters, please report the ear tag number, ear tag color, date harvested and general location of harvest to the Conservation Branch. Several pigs have been fitted with radio-tracking collars to help us determine habitat use.

Please attempt to identify and avoid harvesting collared pigs. If a collared pig is harvested or found, please return the collar to Conservation Branch, First Division Road, Building 5884, Harmony Church. For more information, call 706-544-7079, 706-544-7516 or 707-544-7319.

FIT FACTS

DMWR FITNESS

Lori Smith

This week, I want to address probably one of the biggest misunderstandings we have at our fitness centers — the age policy. We get numerous customer comment cards concerning this, so I want to explain it a bit further and give some helpful tips and ideas on activities you and your kids can do to build a healthy lifestyle together.

The age policy is actually a DA policy that comes out of the AR 251-1. The policy is put in place for the safety and protection of everyone, and is an essential component of the Army risk management practices. The full policy can be found at Smith Fitness Center on a poster behind the front counter or in any of the bulletin boards around the gym.

The policy states that children 12 years old and younger are not allowed in the cardiovascular, strength, sauna and steam rooms or the Jacuzzi at any time. As Family members, children 16 years old and younger must be actively participating in the same activity and under direct supervision of a parent or guardian.

To put this a little more simply, if you have children ages 13 to 16, they can use the cardio and strength area, but the parent must be actively participating in the same activity and have their child under constant supervision. If your children are 12 or younger, they are not allowed in the areas mentioned above, but you can use the basketball gym or pool together. But again, they must be in direct and constant supervision.

Now, one thing I know is on everyone's mind, and I hear this a great deal, is the problem of childhood obesity. Even though I work in adult fitness, my mission with this article is to provide information that can help the entire Fort Benning community.

So I want to give you some ideas on ways you can be physically active inside and outside the fitness centers and create some habits that will last a lifetime.

When most of us think about exercise, we think about working out in the gym on a treadmill or lifting weights. But for children, exercise means playing and being physically active. There are three elements of fitness: endurance, strength and flexibility. You should always encourage your kids to do a variety of activities, so they can work on all three elements.

• Endurance: This is developed when someone regularly engages in aerobic activity, which then improves the body's ability to deliver oxygen to all the cells. Some examples of aerobic activity are playing basketball, swimming, tennis, walking, playing soccer, biking or in-line skating. All of these activities can be done here on Fort Benning. You can even play basketball or swim with your child at Smith.

• Strength: Improving strength does not always means lifting weights. For some children, lifting weights can be helpful, but most kids don't need formal weight training to be strong. Push ups, stomach crunches, and pull-ups all help build strong muscles. Another activity you can do at Smith is rock climb. Climbing helps build endurance and strength and can be done with parents. Just make sure you don't have your kids belaying for you.

• Flexibility: Stretching exercises help muscles and joints to bend and move easily through their full range of motion. There are several SKIESUnlimited classes offered such as dance and martial arts that offer opportunities to work on flexibility. There are also a number of child exercise videos that are available that you and your child can do as well.

Even though you may not be able to get on a treadmill with your 11-year-old, there are still lots of activities to help you stay fit. Just remember to embrace a healthier lifestyle for yourself, so you'll be a positive role model for your Family. Think about how to incorporate activity into daily routines, or find fun ways to stay active with your kids.

Next week, I will be addressing several comment cards in my article I think everyone will be interested in.

Tae Kwon Do: Teaches discipline

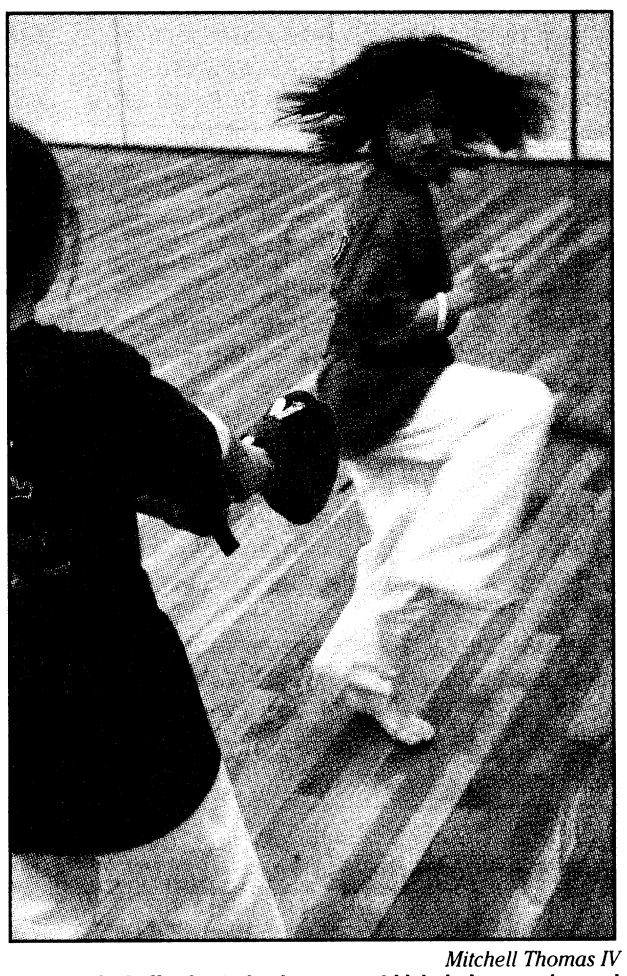
they learn in the right way," Ford said, "If I find out they are using Tae Kwon Do to start fights, they're going to have to talk to me."

Once a student is registered with the International Tae Kwon Do Association, they are eligible to compete in regional and national tournaments. Last year, Leslie received a Spirit Award during a national tournament in Birmingham, Ala.

But learning the skills is more important to Leslie than winning in tournaments.

"I just want to get better at it," Leslie said. "It's kind of hard at first, but you learn."

Leslie's success in the program has rubbed off on the rest of her Family as well. Her younger daughter, Brittney recently began taking class. Amelia and Felix have also joined a Tae Kwon Do school.



"At first we didn't know how to a part of helping them," said Amelia, who is now a green belt. "We knew this would allow us to be a part of their learning and it's a way we can keep fit as a Family."

At 50 years old, Ford, who began seven years ago alongside his own daughter, said Tae Kwon Do has been key to his well-being and exuberance.

"When I'm around these kids, I feel young." he said. "My flexibility is good, and most of the times I don't feel my age. These kids keep me young, and I'm proof that it's never too late to learn."

Classes are held Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays at the Youth Services Center. Advanced classes meet from 5:30 to 6:15 p.m., intermediate classes are from 6:15 to 7 p.m. and beginning classes are from 7 to 7:45 p.m.

For more information, call Sarah Hertig at 706-545-0522.

Weather challenges Walking Club members

Members can participate in Walk Georgia program this spring

THE BAYONET

Mitchell Thomas IV

Outdoor Recreation specialist Darlene Hines hopes to boost membership in the Walking Club at Fort Benning.

"Walking is the easiest thing in the world to do, and I'm so surprised that people don't take advantage of it," Hines said."

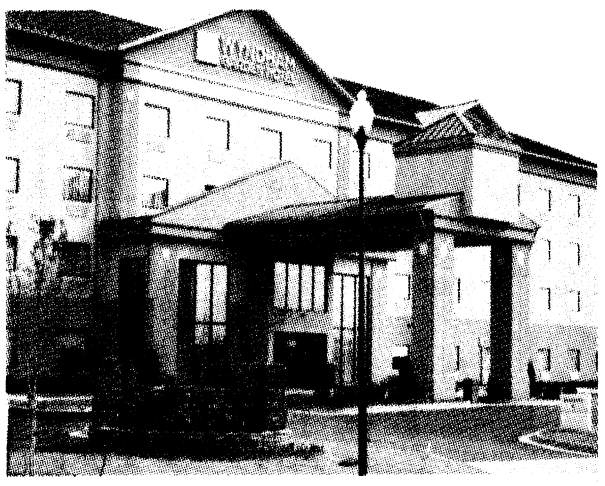
Hines said the walking club, which meets Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays, has had issues with consistent membership, mostly because of weather.

The club stopped meeting in the summer because of extreme heat. It started up again in October at the Follow Me Fitness Trail, the club's third walking location, to provide a greater challenge.

"The area is shaded, and the course is rigid, which prevents the boredom of a track," Hines said.

But now that the weather is cold, membership has dropped again.

"People don't want to contend with difficult weather," Hines said. "It's always a challenge in that department."



Once the weather permits, Hines plans to start a walking team to participate in local and statewide events, including the Walk Georgia program, where participants tally their total daily physical activities and translate them into miles.

"This type of thing gives members something to shoot for," Hines said "It becomes like a contest, and people tend to gravitate toward things like that."

The Walking Club meets Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays at 11:30 a.m. For more information, contact Hines at 706-545-9636.

For information on the Walk Georgia Program, visit www.walkgeorgia.org.

President's Challenge offers variety to keep participants motivated

THE BAYONET
Rachel L. Watkins

"Exercise is a lifestyle," said Sheryl Creek, a civilian who works at Fort Benning.

If she misses her exercise, Creek said, she feels cheated. During her lunch break, she goes to the gym for a "pick-me-up" that gives her more energy and puts her in a cheerful mood the rest of the day.

Last year, Creek signed up for the President's Challenge, a year-round program that rewards exercisers with certificates and medals.

There are three levels in the President's Challenge for adults: the Active Lifestyle Program is for people who are active less than 30 minutes a day five days a week; the Presidential Champions Program is for people who exercise at least an hour a day; and Advanced Performance Presidential Champions Program is for people who work out more than an hour a day.

Participants join groups with friends and family and compare with others' exercise activity. The challenge also has exercise programs for children, teens and seniors.

This year, about 4 million people nationwide are participating in the President's Challenge, said Brendon Hale, assistant director of the program.

Creek is in the Advanced Performance Presidential Champions Program. She has earned a silver medal and is working toward gold. She enjoys pre-core, step class and weight training at Smith Fitness Center, skating and biking. In the summer, she likes kayaking, wake boarding and water skiing.

In addition to the year-round programs, there is a national challenge, which will be March 20 to May 15.

"The National Challenge is a great way to make a change in exercising habits," Hale said.

Hale said people can use the national challenge as a starting point and continue tracking exercise with the President's Challenge.

Participants can register for the National President's Challenge starting March 1.

For more information, go to www.presidentschallenge.org.

Seniors: Sign to rival Georgia schools

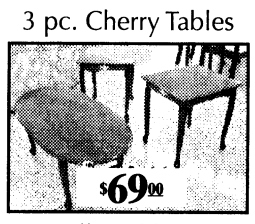
feels that his son will bring versatility on the field and humility as a first year athlete.

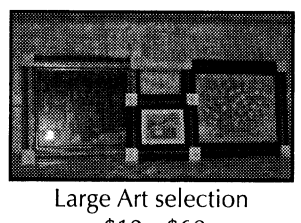
"As a parent, the one thing you look for is for your child to continue his education," said Staton, who was stationed at Fort Benning from 1997 to 2000. "This is a historic event for the school, and to be one of the first to sign with a university is a huge accomplishment."

Harris, also a Fort Benning resident, is looking forward to going head-to-head with his former teammates next year during the Fountain City Classic in Columbus, which features Albany State and Fort Valley State.

"I'm going to bring it on the field, but right after the game, we'll be right back to friends," Harris said.

Kemp said he is confident the kids will do well in college.





"It's always hard when you lose a senior class, and these boys have been the only senior class we've ever known," Kemp said. "There is a tremendous amount of pride in knowing that these boys will move forward, and while they will be missed, their legacy will continue at this school."

Reader offers advice for surviving water immersion

KING FEATURES SYNDICATE
Tom and Ray Magliozzi

Dear Tom and Ray,

You recently answered a question about what to do if your car goes into the water. You asked if any of your readers had personal experience in this matter. I do.

Here's my story. On June 17, 2006, I accidentally drove my car into a river on the eastern shore of Maryland. I was taking a "spirited" drive, and in the dark I didn't realize that it dead-ended into the Chester River. I landed about 30 feet out.

My landing was very smooth. The water cushioned the blow. I did have my seat belt on, but the air bags did not activate. I instinctively opened my window, unbuckled my seat belt, kicked off my shoes, climbed through the window and swam to safety.

When I got to shore, I realized that I was in my bare feet seven miles from the nearest town. My car had sunk to the bottom in about four feet of water, but the lights were still on (under water) and the top of the car was still exposed. I waded back to the car and climbed in to find my shoes, wallet and briefcase.

While I was sitting chest deep in water in the passenger seat putting my shoes on, the window that I had climbed in automatically closed, trapping me in the car. I remember hearing the locks all click shut. Obviously, the electrical system was shorting out. I tried to open the windows and doors, but they wouldn't budge.

Then I climbed into the back seat and began kicking the rear driver's-side window. I kicked as hard as I could, but the window wouldn't break. Totally exhausted, I gave up, assuming that it was my time to die. I said a short prayer.

A few seconds later, the rear window that I had been kicking automatically went down about 8 inches. I was able to squeeze my head and chest through the opening, but when my knee hit the top of the window, it shattered. Apparently, once the window is down even a little bit, you can break it. When it's completely closed, the frame supports it and makes it almost impossible to break.

Since my accident, I have done exhaustive research on water immersion in an auto, entrapment and escape. I've interviewed many experts and combined their knowledge with my own personal experience to try to educate the public on how to escape a sinking car.

I've learned that there is one critical mistake some people make that costs them their lives. They remain in the car with the windows closed, thinking the car will float long enough for the rescue squad to save them. This is a deadly mistake. It takes at least 20 minutes (usually longer) for a rescue squad to arrive. The car sinks long before they get there.

I must say that your article in the newspaper gave some of the best advice I have heard for escaping a sinking car. You are correct in saying that the key to surviving a water-immersion accident is to open the window and get out as quickly as possible.

Here are my five steps to surviving a water-immersion accident:

(1) Try to stay calm. (2) Open the window. (3) Unbuckle your seat belt. (4) Climb through the window. (5) Swim to safety.

The only preventative actions you can take (other than trying to steer away from the water) are to wear a seat belt and to keep an auto-escape tool such as a LifeHammer or ResQMe in your car. These allow you to cut a jammed seat belt and shatter a car window in an emergency.

— Archie

Tom: OK, everybody got that? Open the window, escape from the car and do not go back for your wallet, your shoes or your Steely Dan CDs.

Ray: I don't know about your smooth landing, Archie, but the last time I was on a water flume at an amusement park, I got a wedgie that took me two weeks to dislodge. So, how smooth your water landing is probably depends on your speed and angle of entry. A seat belt is an absolute must, so you're not knocked unconscious.

Tom: Thanks for sharing your story, Archie. If anyone wants to read our original advice in its entirety, you can find our previous columns at www.cartalk.com.

Miles gets star

THE BAYONET
Bridgett Siter

He's been to the mountaintop, and he's been through the valley, so when Col. Lloyd Miles pins on a star today, he'll keep it in perspective.

"I really am very humbled by the honor. It's nothing I've done. It's so much that others have done to help me get to this point," Miles said of his promotion to brigadier general — a rank less than 1 percent of all Army officers attain. "I think it has a lot to do with timing … luck … but a good portion of it has to be the support of Family and friends and the grace of God.

"And no officer attains this rank without so many Soldiers and noncommissioned officers and officers who really kind of pulled him along and lifted him up. It's not so much what you do personally. It's the wind they put to your sails. That's really what it's all about," he said.

Miles, Fort Benning's second in command, said not much will change after his promotion. He'll go right back to work doing just what he's done since he took the position last summer. It's a job he relishes.

"If you're not actually deployed in the fight as an Infantryman, the next best place to be is where you're training the next generation of Infantrymen for the fight," he said. "Here at Fort Benning, we do that at all levels, from privates to young officers. We have a great opportunity to touch so many lives and portions and parts of the Army as they pass through Fort Benning on a daily basis. It's exciting."

If he was to hazard a guess as to what it was — aside from luck and God and Family and Soldiers — that might have earned him the job and the star, Miles supposed it was his experience. In 27 years of service, the 49-year-old West Point grad has served with every major geographic combative command in the Army. He's served in Latin America, Asia, the Middle East and Europe. He led the 2nd Brigade Combat Team in Iraq and served as the director of Joint Operations at the War College in Carlisle Barracks, Pa.

Though he's served in tactical units most of his career, Miles said his success wasn't built on military strategy.

"I believe it's 90 percent people and 10 percent tactics," he said. "You can learn tactics. It's the other side

Sando retires, takes oath as MCOE's first SES appointee

Former director of Infantry Futures becomes Civilian equivalent of a general officer

THE BAYONET
Lori Egan

As Fort Benning transforms into the Maneuver Center of Excellence, the first Senior Executive Service appointee took the oath of office Feb. 15, minutes after his retirement from the active Army.

Col. Don Sando, who retired after 26 years of Army life, became the installation's first SES, the Civilian equivalent of a general officer.

Maj. Gen. Walter Wojdakowski, commanding general, described Sando as one of the most prolific, productive and knowledgeable individuals in the Futures business.

"This is the first significant Maneuver Center of Excellence job we are filling," Wojdakowski said. "And over the course of the next couple of years, regardless of what his job description says, he's going to build that organization — where we're going to join Armor and Infantry in the Futures business."

As the director of the Infantry Futures Group, Sando was responsible for the operations of the Directorate of Combat Developments, Soldier Battle Lab, Office of Infantry Proponency, and three TRADOC Capability Managers.

362nd Engineers construct bridge over Chattahoochee

Cheryl Rodewig

Soldiers with 2nd Platoon, 362nd Engineer Company, trained on bridging a river Feb. 14. The Soldiers deployed a 440-foot bridge across the Chattahoochee River.

THE BAYONET
Cheryl Rodewig

"The Infantryman has to breach the doors; we breach the rivers," said Pvt. Charlie Fernandez, who helped construct his first full closure bridge during a training exercise Feb. 14.

The 2nd Platoon, 362nd Engineer Company, built a 440-foot bridge consisting of 20 interior bays and two ramps that linked to form a full closure over the Chattahoochee River.

"One of the biggest obstacles of the maneuver commander is going to be a river, because he can't get his forces across, so we're here to facilitate his movement to battle to wherever he needs to go," said Sgt. 1st Class Mitchell Doss.

Doss said when the engineers create full closures, they build half of the bridge on each shore and then swing the two halves together.

The result is called a ribbon bridge, since it floats as trucks drive on it.

The first bay was launched into the water at 4 p.m. After sunset, Soldiers continued launching and linking bays in the dark.

They finished the exercise at 8 p.m. by disassembling the bridge and retrieving the bays.

The training exercise was designed to bring newer Soldiers up to speed with the rest of the battalion.

Pvt. Genai Foster worked on several bridges when she was in Iraq. Many were used for medical evacuations.

"The good thing about this bridge is that you can put it up pretty fast, and you don't have to keep monitoring it," she said.

Although bridges are typically built to span water, engineers sometimes build them over rough terrain or, as in one case, over a bridge that had been damaged in an explosion, Foster said.

Fort Benning Soldier helps interpreter move to U.S.

The tables have turned for one Fort Benning Soldier and the Iraqi national who served as his interpreter two years ago. These days, Maj. Britton Yount is interpreting American customs and mores for Ammar Mahdi Hadi, the man who helped him survive a year in Iraq embedded with that country's fledgling national police forces in 2005.

Hadi fled his homeland two weeks ago to remove his family from the increasing danger they faced from loyalists bent on retaliating against anyone caught aiding coalition forces. COMMANDER'S COLUMN

Fort Benning's Best Ranger Competition highlights warrior training, excellence

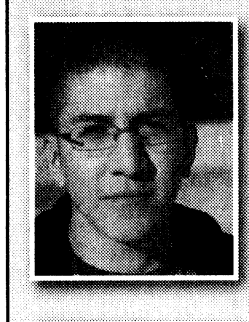
COMMANDING GENERAL
Maj. Gen. Walter Wojdakowski

In April, Fort Benning and the Ranger Training Brigade will host the 25th annual Lt. Gen. David E. Grange Jr. Best Ranger Competition. The top Ranger-qualified Soldiers from across the Army and sister services will descend on Camp Rogers and Camp Darby to compete for the right to be called the Best Ranger team. Though these Rangers will compete in two-man teams, they represent divisions, brigades, regiments, and ultimately the entire Army.

The competition has undergone constant change, but the objective remains the same — to test Rangers on contemporary tasks and skills while placing them under strenuous physical conditions. This year's Best Rangers will prove themselves in marksmanship, airborne and waterborne operations, first aid tasks, weapons and equipment proficiency, and numerous tasks requiring endurance and agility. The competition showcases the skills, leadership, and tenacity that enables an Infantryman to shoot, move, and communicate.

We use events like Best Ranger to identify and celebrate those of our profession who excel above all others. In fact, this recognition is one of the factors that differentiate a job from a profession. Other professions have competitions and awards to recognize achievement and inspire the profession to greater heights. The Pulitzer Prize is our nation's highest honor for print journalism, literary achievement and musical composition, and Olympic Medals are awarded to the world's best athletes. Arguably the world's most famous award, the Nobel Prize, recognizes the most prestigious endeavors including medicine, physics, chemistry, economics, literature and the pursuit of peace. Though the Best Ranger Competition is not as internationally recognizable as the Nobel Prize or the Olympic Medal, it is no less prestigious.

To compete in the Best Ranger Competition, a Soldier must have successfully completed the Ranger Course. Of the average 285 Soldiers, Sailors, Airmen, and foreign service personnel who begin the rigorous Ranger Course, approximately 50 percent will successfully complete the 62 days and earn the right to wear the Ranger Tab. This is obviously an impressive accomplishment, but it is highlighted even more when you look at the men who accept the Best Ranger challenge. They will come from all corners of the military, including the 75th Ranger Regiment, the U.S. Army Special Forces, Navy SEALs, Marines, Air Force combat controllers and the best officers and Soldiers from each Army division.



Soldiers should take pride in the accomplishments of our Best Ranger competitors. These competitors are the embodiment of the drive and determination all Soldiers should have. Come and watch the competition April 18-21.

Coincidence an eagle chose to circle the church in Alexandria, Va.?

USAIC PUBLIC AFFAIRS OFFICE
Elsie Jackson

Was it a coincidence that he chose that day to circle the church?

Alexandria, Va., is hardly the first place a bird watcher would pick to look for eagles. But as the congregation left the Sunday service, the day after my father-in-law's passing, they saw one lazily circling overhead.

A woman of Native American descent dashed back in to urge the stragglers to come out and look. "Harry's up there," she cried.

According to what is destined to become Family legend, the bird wasn't seen again in the days immediately following the death of retired Col. Harry Jackson Sr.

But some days later, as Family and friends began assembling to salute Harry, the eagle came back.

For several afternoons prior to the service, the church staff saw him soaring over the little church on a hill. Not hunting, just making sure he was seen. Or perhaps he was keeping watch.

You read about how the "greatest generation" is falling away at a rate of 1,500 a day, but until your own link with them is shattered, it doesn't really hit home.

A veteran of three wars, my father-in-law was defenseless in his last campaign against an enemy that broke him physically.

He fought the cancer with all of what little he had left.

When the tide of the battle turned against him, he began to drift toward one last patch of high ground, and then softly faded into it.

I like to think that the first souls to greet him were the grown daughter and the three infants he lost on this side, with his brothers and old battle buddies close behind. What a reunion they must be having.

His wife of 60 years put together a shadow box to display some of his awards and decorations. She had to wait until he had passed to do it — he would never have stood for it while he was alive.

His nieces and nephews asked me about them, and I pointed out the ones I recognized.

This week in Fort Benning history

1928

• The 29th Infantry celebrated its 27th or 28th anniversary — the Infantry School News printed a discrepancy throughout its special anniversary edition.

The 29th, "the only war strength Infantry unit of the service," had moved to Fort Benning in 1919. Just recently, the post construction quartermaser had received the go-ahead to fund $465,000 for the completion of the 29th's new barrack building. The horse shoe-shaped cuartel would be one of the largest and finest buildings in the Army.

• At the movies: Gentlemen Prefer Blondes, Old Ironsides and The College Widow, a comedy about the Atwater College football team. After a 25-year losing streak, the school president's job was in jeopardy, so his daughter "took the bull by the horns" and recruited a football team "by her own personal charm." She had them all fighting for the school and for her affection.

• A new Post Office was opened on Vibbert Street across from the Main post Fire Station between Hall and Ingersoll streets. During the holiday season of 1942, Fort Benning's 45 postal employees had handled one million pieces of outgoing mail.

• Land lease issues threatened airborne training. Russell County farmers agreed to allow Fort Benning paratroopers to continue to train on their land temporarily until a reasonable lease arrangement could be reached for the use of their fields for jumps.

An emergency meeting was called when the previous lease expired Feb. 15.

1976

• The article was titled "Trainers twist Tankers' turrets," and one might assume it was a sports report of some kind. Not so. "Tank-busters" from Fort Benning's new 1st AIT Brigade took all five top honor graduate slots at the graduation ceremonies of Drill Sergeant Class 76-4 at the U.S. Army Drill Sergeant School at Fort Knox, Ky.

Corrections

In the Feb. 8 edition of The Bayonet, we misspelled Holly Petraeus's name and missidentified Sgt. 1st Class Jason Henke in the photograph on A1. Also, the RiverCity BMX Track and Bike Shop was identified as a club. It is not. We apologize for the errors and any inconveniences we may have caused.

Former Iraq Corps commander leads IED defeat effort

AMERICAN FORCES PRESS SERVICE
Donna Miles

WASHINGTON — With roadside bomb attacks down in Iraq and Afghanistan, the director of the Joint Improvised Explosive Device Defeat Organization said today he's committed to keeping the Defense Department focused on the threat.

A proposed $3.45 billion budget for JIEDDO in fiscal 2009 demonstrates broad support for overcoming the weapons responsible for the vast majority of U.S. combat deaths, Army Lt. Gen. Thomas F. Metz said.

Metz attributed the drop in IED attacks in Iraq to a variety of factors: the troop surge that pushed enemy forces out of Baghdad; more Iraqis stepping forward to cooperate; the introduction of mine-resistant, ambush-protected vehicles in theater; and other successful counter-IED initiatives.

But Metz, who served as commander of Multinational Corps Iraq from 2003 to 2004, said he's far from declaring victory over IEDs.

When he looks at IED trends, he sees success. But he also sees signs of the huge capability the enemy has put on the battlefield.

"He has lost some of the capacity, but he still has capacity," Metz said. "So I do not want to take my eye off of IEDs, because I want to keep this casualty rate as low as possible. In my mind, the only metric that is the valid metric is less loss of life, limb, eyesight and serious burns."

Metz inherited "a pretty solid foundation on which to build" from JIEDDO's former director, retired Gen. Montgomery C. Meigs. Metz said he's continuing Meig's approach to the IED challenge: attack the network, defeat the device and train the force.

"We have attacked the device and will continue to attack the device and use the technology and innovation of our great nation to continue to figure out ways to destroy the device that's killing 60 percent of our Soldiers," he said.

Metz cited a laundry list of initiatives that are contributing to that end, from miniature robots to jammers to advanced intelligence, surveillance and reconnaissance systems. But technology alone can't overcome IEDs. Metz said defeating IEDs requires attacking IEDs at their source.

Army to launch new program for wounded warriors care, transition

ARMY NEWS SERVICE
Elizabeth M. Lorge

WASHINGTON —The Army is ready to launch a new phase in caring for wounded warriors, the assistant surgeon general for warrior care and transition told Soldiers and Army Civilians during an Army Leader Forum at the Pentagon Tuesday.

Brig. Gen. Mike Tucker announced that the Comprehensive Care Plan is scheduled to begin March 1. The program will include educational, vocational and life-skills development, leadership and mentoring, relationship coaching and behavior-health treatment in addition to medical treatment and physical and occupational therapy.

Also as of March 1, Soldiers in Warrior Transition Units will not be allowed to waste time playing video games or watching cartoons during duty hours. They are still Soldiers in the Army, Tucker said, and their one mission is to heal: to go to their appointments, take their medications and now participate in cognitive-enhancing activities or a structured-work program, if able.

"We want them to return to duty or return to be a citizen in society and be successful and be proud of their service," he said. "We have to allow them to achieve all they can be and provide them the structure at a time in their lives when they need it the most."

The WTU return-to-duty rate is over 70 percent he added. Eighty-eight percent of those Soldiers are between the ranks of corporal or specialist and sergeant first class, an incredible amount of experience, Tucker said. The Army hasn't denied one continued-on-active-duty applicant since the beginning of the war.

To ensure they make their appointments and take medications, each Soldier in the Army's 35 WTUs has a squad leader, a nurse-case manager, and a primary care manager, who communicate frequently. Squad leaders and other WTU cadre receive training on leading wounded Soldiers. They're there to help Soldiers with orders, pay, housing concerns — any logistics problems.

All of this is part of the Army's crusade to break down the bureaucracy that the Washington Post exposed in February 2007. Outdated regulations, dwindling resources, fewer hospitals and an unprecedented-survival rate created what Tucker calls a "perfect storm" that no one knew existed.

He still faces the bureaucracy head-on, often encountering problems no one could have foreseen, like the injured Soldier who was initially told he was no longer entitled to his re-enlistment bonus.

Tucker said the problem was immediately fixed, and while Army employees may have been following a regulation to the letter, it's more important for them to stop and say, "Wait a minute, this doesn't seem right. Let me talk to my boss."

"Well, the Soldiers at Fort Bragg don't want to come to the WTU because they can't wear their maroon beret. 'Why can't they?' Because Army Regulation says they can't. 'But why can't they? Is it legal, moral and ethical?' Well, not really. 'Well, make your folks aware that they can now wear it,'" he said.

"Some Soldiers said 'I don't want to go there because I can't wear my patch. I want to wear the 101st patch. I'm a 10th Mountain Climb to Glory Soldier. I don't want to lose my identity. 'Is that part of making them feel good? Is that part of healing? They can wear their patch now.

"Now we've authorized Soldiers to go back to their unit, even if it's in an over-strength status. We're busting bureaucracy on the side of healing. If it makes you feel better, that's fine."

Wounded warriors who decide to leave the Army now have 90 days to transition to Veterans Affairs, and Army representatives help walk them through the process and introduce them to VA, making sure they know what their benefits are. Soldiers will receive their first check from the VA on the first day of the next month after they've transitioned.

To further smooth the process between Army and VA, Tucker's executive officer, Dr. (Lt. Col.) Marie Dominguez, is going to serve as a special advisor to VA Secretary James Peake. Tucker will also have a special advisor from the VA.

"This is profound. So we're starting to focus on the VA and get some more traction with them because we want to carry this continuum of care onto them," he said.

conducting experiments to validate maneuver capabilities to support Army, joint, interagency and multinational organizations.

Members of the Senior Executive Service serve in key positions just below presidential appointees, according to the Office of Personnel Management Web site, www.opm.gov. They translate the political agenda into reality.

Sando said it was a special day for his Family. Although they no longer live in "subsidized government housing," he and his wife, Paula, will continue to serve Soldiers and their Families, to be part of the excitement and anticipation of the Maneuver Center of Excellence and continue to serve at Fort Benning, the best Army community to live and serve.

President George W. Bush, in a certificate of appreciation, thanked Sando for helping "maintain the security of the nation during a critical time in its history with a devotion to duty and a spirit of sacrifice in keeping with the proud traditions of military service.

"Your commitment and dedication have been an inspiration for those who will follow in your footsteps."

Command sergeant major visits son at re-enlistment

Father, son reunite in Iraq for the first time in two years

3RD HEAVY BRIGADE COMBAT TEAM
Sgt. Natalie Rostek

COMBAT OUTPOST CAHILL, Iraq — Command Sgt. Maj. Mike Watkins had not seen his son since the younger Watkins joined the Army more than two years ago.

Spc. Christopher Watkins, a computer systems automation specialist with 1st Battalion, 15th Infantry Regiment, is on his first deployment.

He raised his right hand and committed to serve six more years in the Army during a ceremony Feb. 13 at COP Cahill.

His father flew from Forward Operating Base Mahmudiyah, south of Baghdad, to witness his son's re-enlistment.

Mike Watkins is serving in the 3rd Battalion, 320th Field Artillery, 3rd Brigade Combat Team as the unit's command sergeant major.

He is on his third deployment.

"I'm very proud of my son," Mike said. "He made his own decision to re-enlist."

The senior Watkins has served in the military for 29 years.

When asked where he and his son were from, he jokingly replied, "We're from the United States Army."

The father-son duo hails from Fayetteville, N.C., However, Mike's home of record is Hollywood, Fla., and his son was born in Ideroberstien, Germany.

Putting aside a $75,000 college scholarship, Christopher decided to join the Army and follow in his father's footsteps.

"College just wasn't looking so good to me," he said. "And really, I had always wanted to serve."

Christopher said a college degree is still in his plans.

The 21-year-old said he will use the Army's assistance to get a degree in criminal justice.

He is striving to join the noncommissioned officer ranks as a short-term goal; his long-term goal is to serve at least 20 years in the Army.

Sgt. Natalie Rosek

Command Sgt. Maj. Mike Watkins, 3rd Battalion, 320th Field Artillery, 3rd Brigade, 101st Airborne Division (Air Assault) command sergeant major, shakes hands with his son, Spc. Christopher Watkins, 1st Battalion, 15th Infantry Regiment, after the junior Watkins re-enlisted Feb. 13 at Combat Outpost Cahill, Iraq.

"About 1 percent of the U.S. population has the honor and privilege to don this uniform," Mike said.

"I give the same respect to a Soldier who comes in, does his three years then gets out, as I do the Soldier who does 20 years and retires.

"If the Army is not for that person, I don't want him to stay," he said. "But if he raised his right hand and does his three years honorably, you couldn't ask for anything more."

Search leads to seizure of second explosives cache in three days

3RD HEAVY BRIGADE COMBAT TEAM
Maj. Joe Sowers

BAGHDAD — Soldiers from C Troop, 3rd Squadron, 1st Cavalry Regiment, seized a cache of explosivelyformed penetrators Feb. 10 near Jurf Nadaf, a village east of Baghdad. The cache was the second seizure of munitions in the village by C Troop within a 72-hour period.

"Finding caches like this saves Soldier and civilian lives, and that is an important part of what we do," said Sgt. Kenneth Storts, a cavalry scout with C Troop.

The cache contained five EFPs, three rocket-propelled grenades, 28 grenades and various materials commonly used in the making of roadside bombs.

Soldiers were searching an abandoned home when Spc. Ronald Gardner found an infrared sensor, which is often used to trigger EFPs.

During a search of the surrounding fields and nearby buildings, they discovered the cache. C Troop seized a similar cache Feb. 8 in Jurf Nadaf containing 13 EFPs and various munitions.

Iraqi: Interpreter starts new life with friends in Columbus

three years as an interpreter, he was pressing his luck.

"People were starting to get suspicious. If they recognize I love Americans, we would not be safe," he said. "I want better for my daughter. I wish for her that she does not live in that bloody world."

Hadi moved to Columbus where he, his wife, Ragada Ali Makki, and their 8-month-old daughter are staying with Yount, his wife, Ashley, and their 5-month-old son. Even as they struggle to overcome the challenges of a foreign cultural and the language barrier, they are learning to appreciate freedoms that were once incomprehensible. Just last week, Yount said, during a late night visit to Wal-Mart, Hadi marveled at the liberties he's enjoying for the first time.

"He used to carry a weapon everywhere he went. He was talking about how peaceful it was to be able to go out like that, especially in the middle of the night, and not have to worry," said Yount, who serves as the operations officer for the 198th Infantry Brigade.

In Iraq, Yount served with five other Americans on a new Special Forces Police Transition Team. It was their job to advise elements of the old Iraqi army as they transitioned to a national police force.

The Americans worked with four interpreters selected from a pool of candidates.

"It was like picking teams for dodge ball," Yount said. "I didn't know anything about them, and I didn't speak Arabic and they didn't speak English very well."

Hadi, who had learned a modicum of English in college, gave up his teaching job to become an interpreter, a more lucrative position, to earn money for his mother to have heart surgery.

"That's the kind of guy he is," Yount said. "And that's why I picked him."

They were constant companions, the four of them — Yount, Hadi and their weapons. Interpreters weren't supposed to carry weapons, but Hadi did. With only 10 members on their team and traveling throughout Iraq in three humvees, it was prudent to take advantage of Hadi's marksman skills. He had spent 18 months with the Republican Guard before signing on as an interpreter.

But it was his native insight and his situational awareness, more than his military prowess, that made Hadi an invaluable asset to the team and to Yount in particular. The two worked side-by-side and slept side-by-side for a year. And on one occasion, the trim 29-year-old Iraqi shoved the 38-year-old brawny Yount out of the path of a sniper's bullet.

Yount shared his culture with Hadi, mostly through stories about life back home. He fascinated the Iraqis by "calling turkeys" — communicating with the wild birds that strut freely through the streets there.

"He talked to the turkeys, and they talked back," Hadi said with a laugh. "We said 'Who is this man that talks to the animals? He must be a prophet.'"

And, Yount told Hadi, "If we were back in Georgia, we wouldn't be dodging IEDs."

That was enough to make the young Iraqi dream of moving to the states. But it was only a dream. When Yount redeployed, there were no programs in place to relocate interpreters. Hadi married in 2006 and continued his work for another two years, staying in touch with his "American brother" by e-mail mostly.

Last year, President Bush enacted the Special Immigration Program for Iraqis like Hadi, whose lives were endangered by their loyalty to coalition forces. After navigating a bureaucratic maze and a number of paperwork snafus, Hadi and his family sold all their belongings and flew to America with their meager savings and three suitcases.

Hadi elected to take a new name when he entered the country. He chose "Russell," an ode to actor Russell Crowe, who starred in Hadi's favorite movie, Gladiator.

Crowe is one of Hadi's two heroes. The other?

"George Bush. I like him so much. I wish for a picture with him, too."

Though Hadi has had a job offer in Arizona, he hopes to stay in Columbus close to Yount. For now, he's working with a construction crew.

Ragada isn't faring as well as her husband. At 23, she's a traditional Muslim who speaks no English and desperately misses her mother. But "she's watching Ashley like a science experiment," Yount said, and she's slowly learning how to operate the washing machine, the microwave — even the shower curtain presented a challenge at first.

"It's a different life, very new to her," Hadi said. "But she knows we cannot go back. Maybe in ten years, or twenty. We wish to see our families again. I wish to see my mother."

Yount's co-workers and friends have donated baby items for Hadi's daughter and gift certificates to help them collect housewares. Those who want to help can contact Yount at james.b.yount@us.army.mil.

Miles: Climbed mountains to get to where he is of the equation you have to put your heart into."

Miles has had a heart for the military since he was 8. The fifth of eight children and the son of a career NCO, he set his sights on the officer corps after watching a string of West Pointers march across his TV screen.

"I wanted to be one of those guys. I wanted to be a cadet," he said.

At the academy, Miles focused on one thing — getting through the academy. As a lieutenant, he focused on "not being relieved as a lieutenant." And so it went, until just recently, after commanding a brigade, when Miles realized he just might make general.

"It's always been about doing the job, focusing on what it was I had to do at that rank — not getting to the next one," he said. "I can't say (making) general was my lifelong dream."

He had one, though, a lifelong dream. He found it between the pages of a geography book in a story about the Lost City of the Incas, perched atop Peru's Machu Picchu.

"You know how people ask, 'If there's one place you'd like to see before you die, what would it be?' For me, it was Machu Picchu," Miles said.

He found a kindred spirit in another young officer who shared his dream. They met during the Infantry Officer Basic Course.

"It was amazing that here was another Infantryman who had the same aspiration," Miles said. "We put a lot of energy into getting there, but the plan was pretty simple. When we got to the top, we'd have a cup of coffee. That was it, a cup of joe on Machu Picchu."

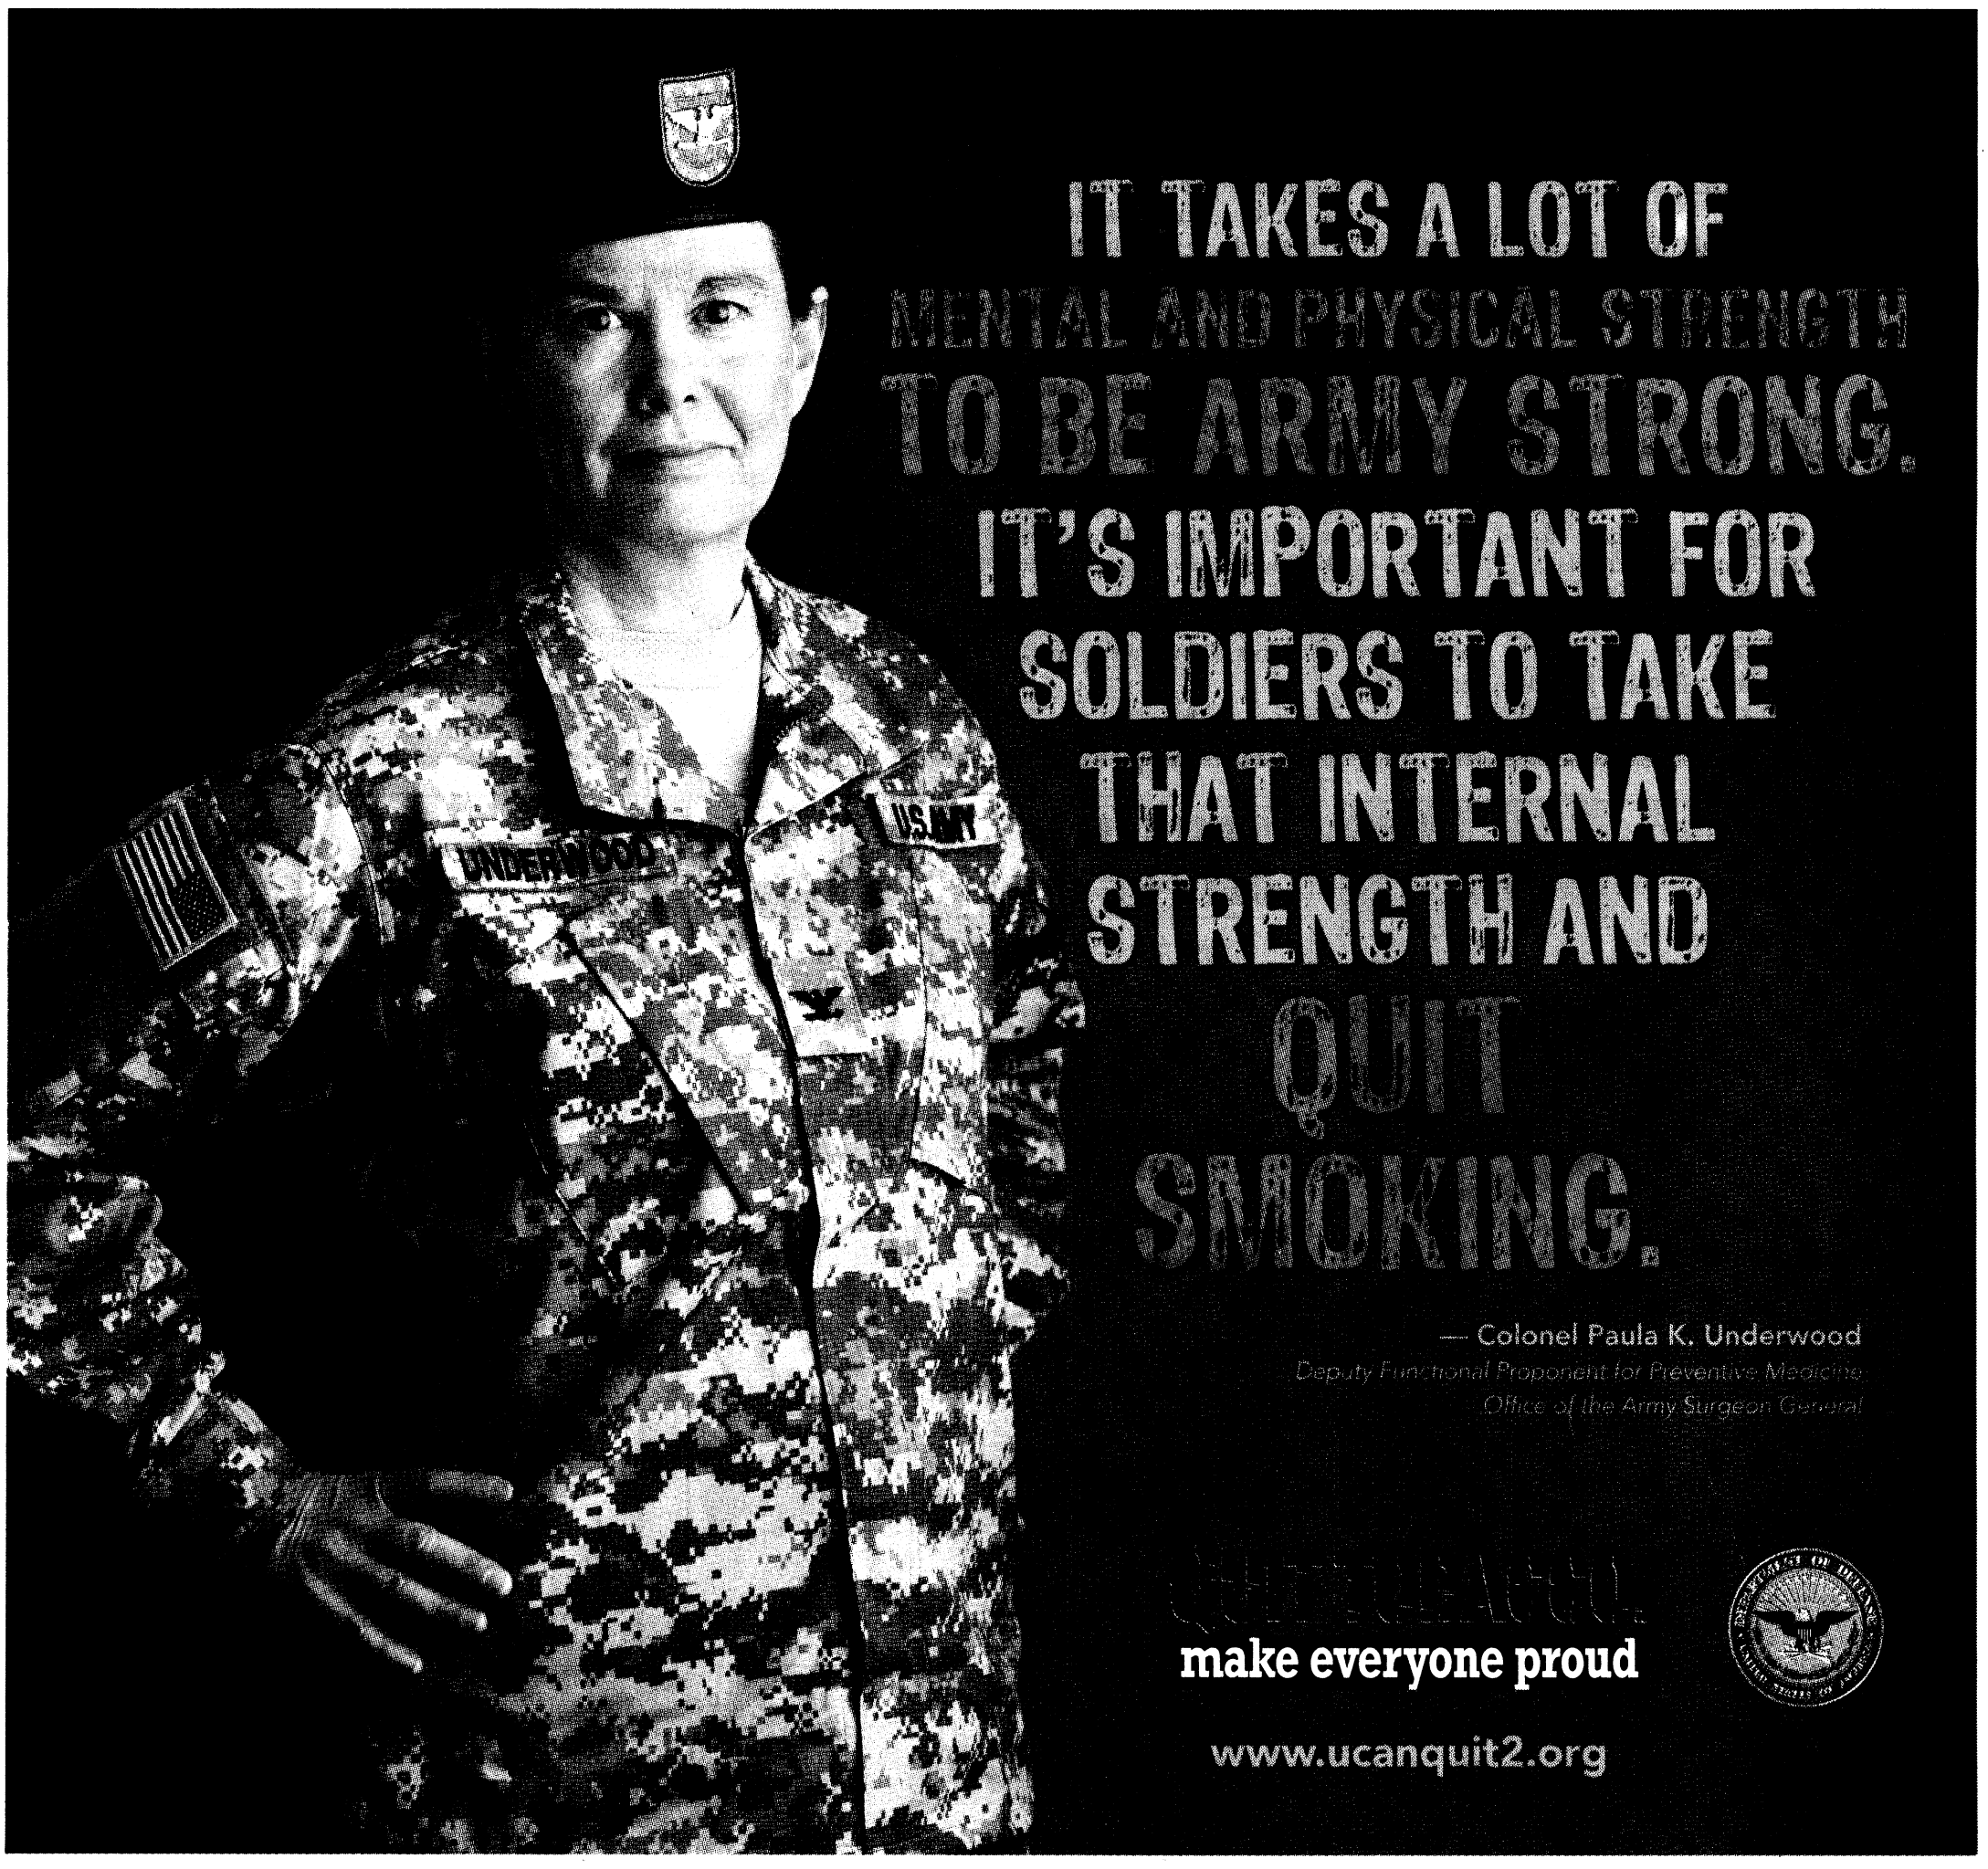
When the State Department banned excursions into that volatile region of Peru, the two put their plans on hold. Less than a year later, Miles' friend was killed in a training accident.

Miles kept his dream alive for more than a decade. But when he lost his leg in a training accident in 1996, he doubted for a time whether he'd see his dream or his career to fruition.

"That was a critical time. I was probably at my lowest," he said. "I spent a year in Walter Reed, wondering what it was I was going to do, not just with the military, but on a daily basis."

Through the support of Family and friends, he healed and returned to active duty. Since the accident, he's married, had a child, led troops into combat and climbed to the top of Michu Picchu, where he drank a toast of coffee to his friend.

Now, he said, he hopes his experience can help other wounded warriors.



"I want to help them realize what's available for them, that they don't have to give up on the military simply because they're an amputee," he said. "I know, early on, nothing seems possible. You just wonder how to get by every day. A lot goes through your head. But there are a lot of programs out there for them now. The challenge is getting the word out."

But just for today, Miles will concentrate on the job at hand — getting through all the fanfare associated with a career milestone very few officers enjoy.

The job, he'll enjoy. The fanfare, not so much.

"It's a lot of to-do about something I think is pretty small really," he said. "I don't like people making a fuss over me. But I do look forward to having the opportunity to thank so many people who had a hand in getting me here."

Miles, his wife, Betsy, and their son, Nathan, will welcome Family members and friends from across the country in a ceremony at 11:30 a.m. at the Benning Club.

The Fort Benning Army Community Service Relocation Readiness Program has services to help Soldiers, Family members and DoD Civilians continuously prepare for transition to new duty stations or civilian life.

Some of the services are the Lending Closet and Relocation Counseling.

For more information, call 706-545-7517 or 706-545-4043.

GIVE OPINIONS ON ICE

The Interactive Customer Evaluation System is a program directive initiated by the Department of Defense that allows customers within Fort Benning, and DoD wide, to rate the services received from installation organizations. Customers can log onto the ICE system and evaluate the services provided anywhere on post.

Visit the ICE Web site, http://ice.disa.mil, pick out the installation or agency of interest, choose the desired organization, and fill out the customer evaluation questions.

The manager of the specific organization receives the comments that are submitted and feedback will be returned upon request of the customer.

ICE terminals are conveniently located in high volume customer service areas around Fort Benning.

OFFICIAL PHOTOS

Soldiers who need DA photos should go to the Training and Auidovisual Services Center from 7:45 to 11:30 a.m. Monday to Wednesday.

Anyone who needs passport, visa or international citizenship photos can go from 7:45 to 11:30 a.m. Thursdays.

Everyone must have copies of orders, messages and 1056 passport request forms for family members.

Those requesting passport photos must wear civilian attire, and men must wear collared shirts. T-shirts worn by others must be plain with no logos.

These TASC services are available at Building 130 on Morrison St. for more information, call 545-1381

FIND LOST BAGGAGE

Military members who have deployed or redeployed overseas, and are still waiting on footlocker, duffle bag, or parcel to arrive can inquire about or claim mail that has yet to arrive and was sent more than 60 days from the date of mailing.

Military members and their Families can now contact the Military Postal Service Agency at mpsa-mrc@hqda.mil.

Include the following details in the-mail to MPSA:

- contact phone number,
- e-mail address, rank,
- first and last name
- mailing address,
- return address,
- any insured, certified, registered or confirmation number
- date of mailing
- type of container used for mailing,
- a detailed description of the container contents
- any additional information, such as distinctive marking, that could be used to help identify items.

Once the information is received, MPSA will contact the service member to positively identify the owner and ship the item to the recipient should it be found.

SEXUAL ASSAULT

CID is looking for a male wanted for questioning concerning a sexual assault in the Custer Terrace housing area.

He is possibly a Hispanic or a light-toned black man with short-cropped hair (possibly a military cut), no facial hair, 5 feet 6 six inches to 5 feet 9 inches tall, weighing approximately 140 to 160 pounds.

He was last seen about 12:30 to 1 a.m. July 22 in the Custer Terrace housing area, wearing dark, baggy pants and a dark T-shirt.

Anyone with knowledge of the incident is encouraged to come forward.

Those who do not wish to be identified will be briefed about options to maintain their confidentiality.

Contact Special Agent Jeremy McCormick at the U.S. Army CID office at 706-545-4477 or 706-577-4074 or the Military Police desk at 706-545-5222.

INTERNET AVAILABLE

Computers with Internet access are available in Classroom 20B at Infantry Hall and are open to all CAC card holders.

There is a one-time registration process. A copier with fax and scanner is also available. Users may make as many as 15 copies, and faxing is for official use only.

Downloading must be made to government-issued thumb drives.

TESTING CENTER

The Army Education Testing Center services Soldiers, Family members and DoD Civilians.

The Army Personnel Testing Program has standardized tests to determine eligibility for specialized training, including language proficiency testing.

Aptitude tests, certification, DANTES testing and college examinations are available.

For more information and to schedule an exam, call 706-545-3708 or 706-545-2911 or visit them on the first floor of Building 2612 in Soldiers' Plaza.

They are open from 8 a.m. to noon and from 1 to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday.

PTSD STUDY

Military members are wanted for Emory University's Trauma and Anxiety Recovery Program.

The study is focusing on service members who have returned from Iraq and have post traumatic stress disorder.

Those interested should call 404-712-8300 or e-mail Feea Leifker at fleifke@emory.edu.

Visit www.psychiatry.emory.edu/PROGRAMS/Trauma/index.htm for more information.

ARMY EMERGENCY RELIEF

A nonprofit organization, Army Emergency Relief provides emergency financial assistance to Soldiers, retirees and their Family members during crisis situations.

AER funds made available to commanders are not limited and are constrained only by the requirement of a valid need.

The AER assistance program is conducted primarily within the Army structure by major commanders, their installation and organization commanders and their subordinate commanders through AER sections. For more information, call 706-545-2536.

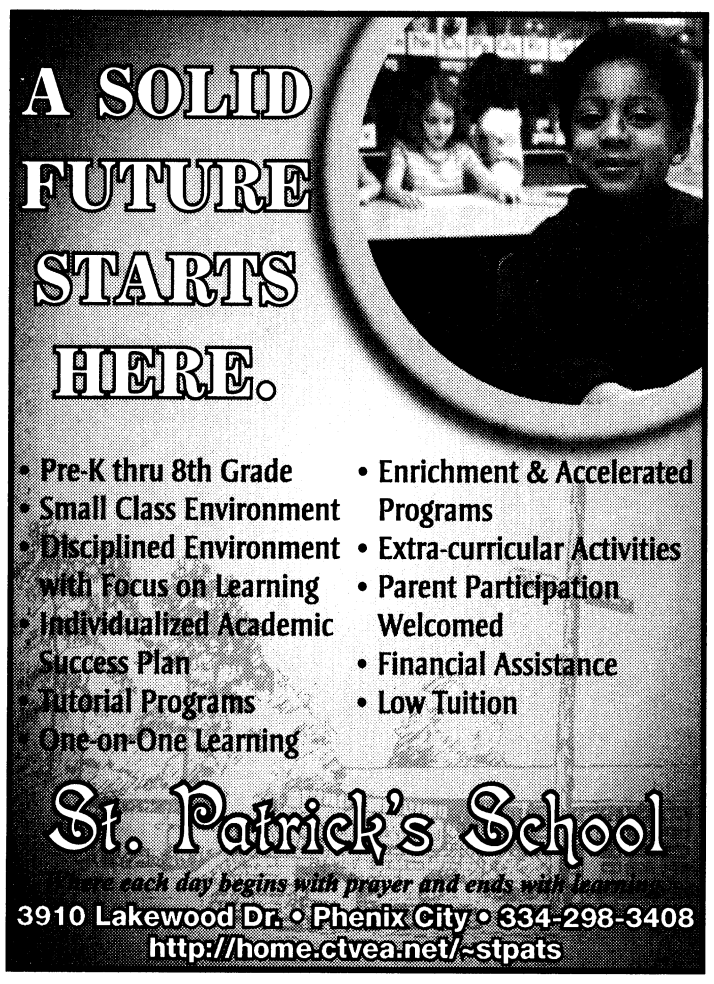
ONLINE RE-ENLISTMENT

The U.S. Army has created an online tool to provide Soldiers with personal re-enlistment stories and information about re-enlisting.

The Web site is www.redwoodeditor.com/content/Army/reenlist_epk.

AUDIE MURPHY CLUB

The Audie Murphy Club, comprised of the top 2 percent of Army NCOs, was established to recognize leadership excellence and overall potential of NCOs.



To be eligible, corporals through sergeants first class must have no UCMJ actions and be recommended by their chain of command.

The club meets the second Tuesday of each month at the Sand Hill Recreation Center from 11:30 a.m. to 1 p.m.

For more information, call 706-544-8251.

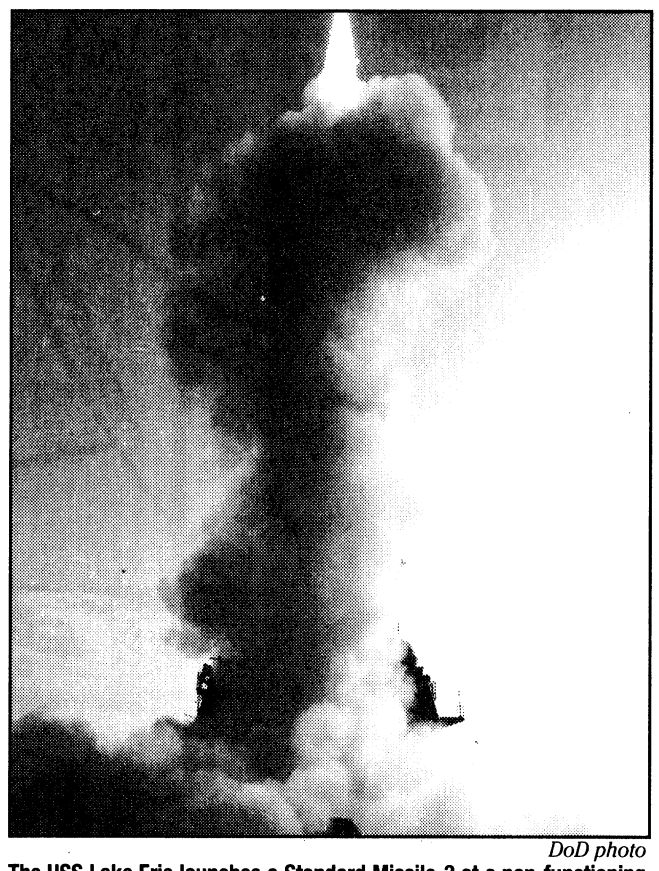
Navy missile takes out satellite

AMERICAN FORCES PRESS SERVICE

WASHINGTON — A network of land-, air-, sea- and spaced-based sensors confirms that the U.S. military intercepted a non-functioning National Reconnaissance Office satellite, which was in its final orbit before entering the earth's atmosphere, defense officials announced Thursday.



At approximately 10:26 p.m. Wednesday, a U.S. Navy AEGIS warship, the USS Lake Erie fired a single modified tactical Standard Missile-3, hitting the satellite approximately 153 miles over the Pacific Ocean as it traveled in space at more than 17,000 mph. USS Decatur and USS Russell were also part of the task force.

The objective was to rupture the fuel tank to dissipate the approximately 1,000 pounds of hydrazine, a hazardous fuel that could pose a danger to people on earth.

Confirmation that the fuel tank has been fragmented should be available within 24 hours.

Due to the relatively low altitude of the satellite at the time of the engagement, debris will begin to re-enter the earth's atmosphere immediately.

Nearly all of the debris will burn up on re-entry within 48 hours, and the remaining debris should re-enter within 40 days.

Bases planned for Africa

AMERICAN FORCES PRESS SERVICE
Donna Miles

WASHINGTON — The United States stood up U.S. Africa Command to provide military assistance to African nations, not as a springboard to opening new military bases there, President Bush said during his visit to Ghana.

Speaking at a media availability in Accra with Ghana's President John Kufuor, Bush emphasized that the United States has no plans to establish new bases on the continent.

"I know there's rumors in Ghana: 'All Bush is coming to do is try to convince you to put a big military base here,'" the president said. "That's baloney. Or as we say in Texas, that's bull."

Bush, in Ghana for the fourth stop in his five-nation African trip, sought to put the rumors to rest.

"I want to dispel the notion that, all of a sudden, America is bringing all kinds of military to Africa. It's just simply not true," he said.

"The whole purpose of AFRICOM is to help leaders deal with African problems."

Bush directed the creation of AFRICOM in February 2007. It began initial operations in October with Army Gen. William E. "Kip" Ward as its first commander.

The command structure, with both Defense and State department representation, reflects AFRICOM's unique mission.

Ward has two deputies: Navy Vice Adm. Robert T. Moeller is deputy for military operations, and U.S. Ambassador Mary Carlin Yates is deputy for civil-military activities.

"This is a unique command structure for America," Bush said.

"It is a command structure that is aiming to help provide military assistance to African nations, so African nations are more capable of dealing with Africa's conflicts, like peacekeeping training."

The AFRICOM headquarters is at Kelley Barracks, in Stuttgart, Germany. The United States could eventually open an AFRICOM office somewhere in Africa, but hasn't yet made that decision, Bush said.

Walter Reed's Warrior Clinic opens Feb. 15

Facility represents new focus for Soldier's primary care

ARMY NEWS SERVICE
Elizabeth M. Lorge

WASHINGTON — Secretary of the Army Pete Geren and Vice Chief of Staff of the Army Gen. Richard Cody were at Walter Reed Army Medical Center Feb. 15 for the opening of the hospital's Warrior Clinic.

The only clinic of its kind in the Army, it actually began treating patients in October, and administers to about 686 outpatient Soldiers assigned to the Warrior Transition Brigade at Walter Reed, said Col. Patricia D. Horoho, commander of the Walter Reed Health Care System.

It represents a new focus on providing primary care at WRAMC, she said, and not just specialized tertiary care.

A larger example of the 35 Warrior Transition Units across the Army, the WTB consists of three companies.

The centerpiece of the WTU or WTB is the triad: squad leader, nurse-case manager and primary-care manager.

Each company has its own primary-care doctor (one for every 200 Soldiers) who can get to know the Soldiers, which officials said was critical for continuity of care. To further ensure that Soldiers' needs are met, there is a squad leader for every 12 Soldiers.

Each room in the barracks has high-speed Internet so Soldiers can attend classes online, said Sgt. 1st Class Eliseo Torres. Part of his job is making sure his Soldiers are aware of educational and career-building activities at WRAMC.

The Army's goal, explained WTB Commander Col. Terrence J. McKenrick, is to give warriors a better chance of getting back into the force — WRAMC's return to duty rate is over 50 percent — or a better transition to the Department of Veterans Affairs.

Under the pilot program, the military branch determines if a service member is fit for duty and the VA determines the disability rating, said Col. Maria Mayorga, director.

Instead of long delays complained of previously, VA benefits will now start the first day of the calendar month following separation.

BENCH NOTES

Newman wins Daytona

Ryan Newman took home the spoils winning the 50th Daytona 500 Saturday.

This was the first Daytona win for Roger Penske and the Penske Racing team, which has won 14 Indianapolis 500s.

Newman deserves a big round of applause. Sorry, my hand hurts.

Pettitte apologizes

New York Yankees pitcher Andy Pettitte apologized Monday for using HGH and snitching on teammate Roger Clemens.

Although the Yankees have welcomed Pettitte back for spring training, it's tough to say whether he and Clemens will be able to mend their friendship.

Whether Clemens is guilty or not, it was weak of Pettitte to throw his name in. But I'm not surprised because Andy boy even threw his dad's name into the mix saying dad gave him the syringes. Never trust a man that snitches on his pops.

Moose gets hacked

Veteran receiver Muhsin Muhammad was cut from the Chicago Bears Monday after three lackluster seasons.

The two-time Pro Bowler, who made his mark in Carolina, posted only 12 touchdowns during his tenure. Muhammed is in the twilight of his career. He turns 35 in May.

Muhammad may be old, but I guarantee you, he'll find a home somewhere.

Now if only the Bears can fix the rest of their problems. I think cutting the rest of the offense would be a good starting point.

No more Kidd'n?

After a week of talk, Jason Kidd should finally ink his dream deal. The Nets' legendary point guard is headed to the Dallas Mavericks. The initial deal was blocked after Mavericks' Devean George used his contract's veto rights. The Mavericks are now sending five players, including retired forward Keith Van Horn, for Kidd, Maurice Ager and Malik Allen. Keith Van Horn? Dallas got Kidd for a potential star, three bums and a redraw. I want to be Dallas' owner Mark Cuban when I grow up.

Taylor loses again

Kelly Pavlik defeated Jermain Taylor by unanimous decision Saturday in a non-title super middleweight fight. Pavlik improved his undefeated record to 33-0. This is Taylor's second loss to Pavlik in less than five months.

What in the world was Taylor thinking fighting this guy so quickly after being knocked out the first time. Smart boxers barely fight twice a year. It's obvious Taylor lost more than the fight the first time around.

Former chief of staff starts JROTC program, leads rifle team to success

Retired Col. Lonnie Vona believes in challenges. Three years ago, he took a challenge and has built an entire JROTC program, including its rifle team, from the ground up.

Vona served as Fort Benning's chief of staff before retiring in 2002. After moving back to his home of Tampa, Fla., he wanted to continue his military career, but in a different way. He wanted to do it by teaching high school students.

Within two weeks of his move, he landed a job as the senior Army officer at Hillsborough High School, the oldest and most historic JROTC program in the state.

But Vona wanted to build his own program. Three years later, he got his chance in a little known town in Florida called Lithia. Vona accepted a new job as the senior officer at Newsome High School.

Sixers pull off clutch win in season finale

Although the 10- to-12-year-old Blazers lost their last game of the season, coach Calvin Flint said they played their best game all year. The Sixers knocked off the Blazers, 24-23, in a nail-biter season finale. Child and Youth Services held the final games Saturday.

The Blazers took control of the first half on both sides of the ball. Siblings Jake and Joe Maynard held together the offense, knocking down open shots from the perimeter. But Sixers coach Paul Horton knew his team had more.

"I told the team during halftime that they needed to talk to themselves, not to me," Horton said. "I didn't want them to come out and do warm-ups. I wanted them to think about where they were at and where they needed to go."

After being down the entire first half by double digits, the Sixers came out in the second a new team. They mounted a come back in the third quarter, but they nearly lost their chance to take the lead with two missed foul shots. Thomas Brittain Jr. grabbed an offensive rebound and banked a layup to give the Sixers their first lead of the game.

"I guess it was just good timing," Brittain said. "All I heard after I made the shot was the crowd cheering."

Johnathon Tragakis, left, fights for a loose ball from Joseph Simmons during the second half of the Blazers-Sixers game.

After a missed shot by the Blazers, the Sixers ran the game clock to clinch the win.

"This was a tough loss for us, but I can't complain at all," Flint said. "The kids gave 100 percent and that's what matters. I'm very pleased with this season."

Local boy helps carry out Soldier's wish

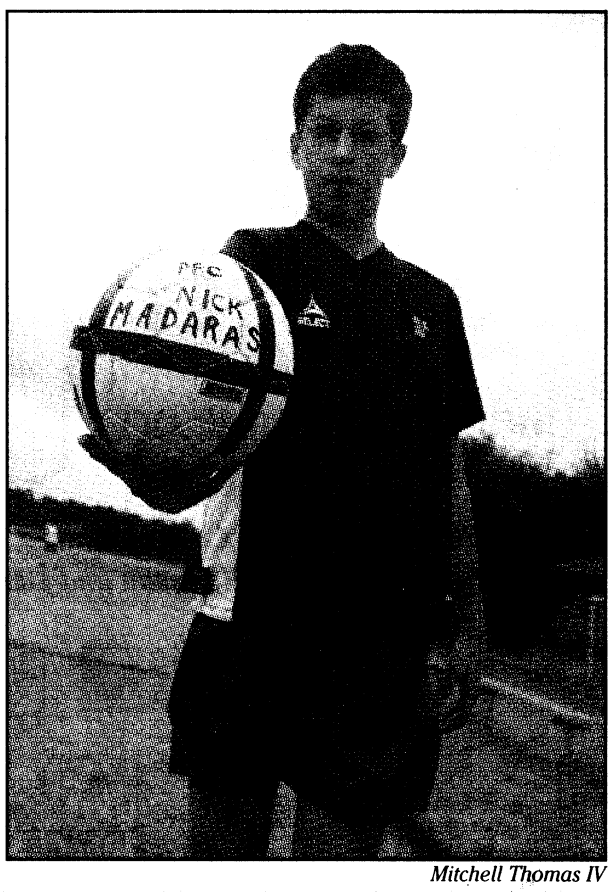
Pfc. Nick Madaras is "still working his magic" nearly two years after his death. That's how his father, Bill Madaras, described the success of a program, created in Nick's memory, to send soccer balls to children in Iraq.

Before Nick was killed by a roadside bomb, the 19-year-old had started collecting balls for Iraqi kids who played in the streets of Baquba, using bags of tin cans in lieu of balls.

Nick grew up playing soccer in Wilford, Conn. He was passionate about the sport, his father said. While home on leave two months before his death, Nick and Bill rounded up as many soccer balls as they could find with plans for Bill to ship them to his son in Iraq. But the balls never made it.

Another Wilford resident learned of Nick's mission before his death, and he made it his own. Ken Dartley, a former Fort Benning Soldier, launched the Kick for Nick project in the weeks after Nick's death, and to date, he's shipped nearly 2,000 soccer balls, each with Nick's name printed on it, to Iraq.

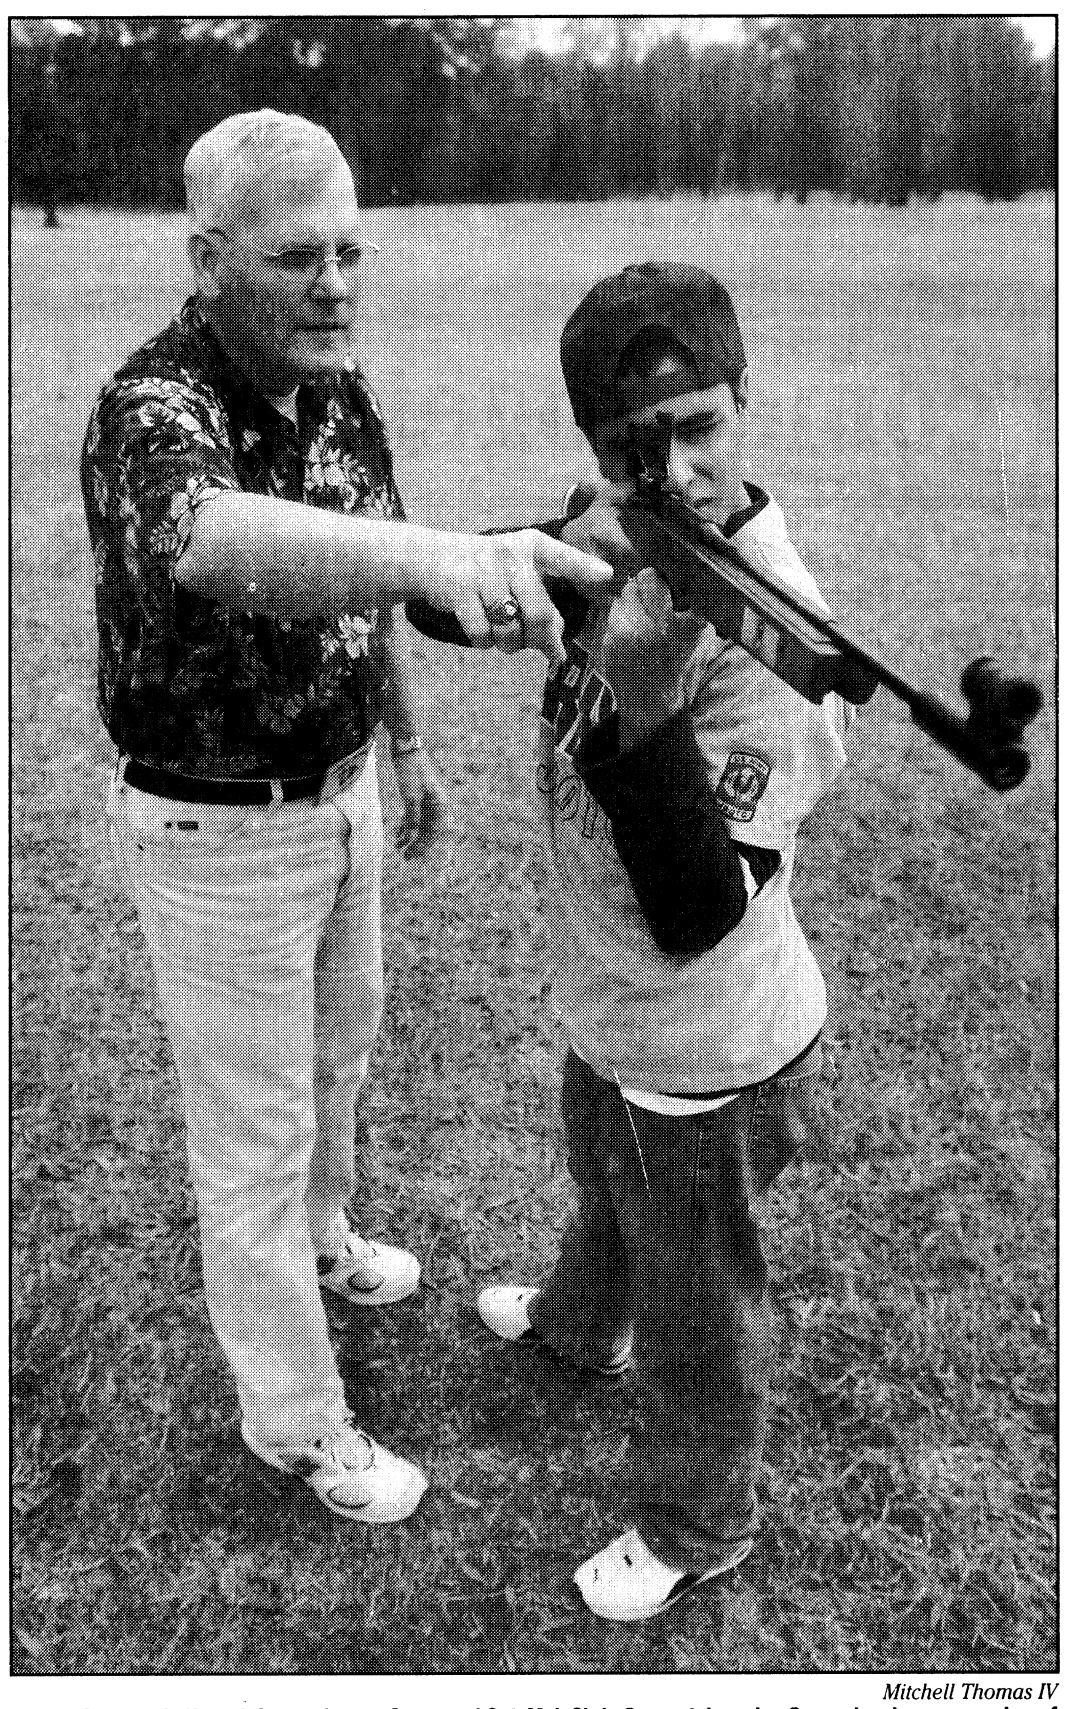


Joe Hird was watching ESPN's SportsCenter last month, when he learned about the project. The 13-year-old soccer player, the son of retired Lt. Col. Paul and Julie Hird, decided to make Kick for Nick a community service project for his church.

March 8, opening day of the Columbus Youth Soccer season, Joe will begin collecting soccer balls in a shopping cart at the Woodruff Soccer Complex. He is also requesting donations through local school soccer teams.

Dartley said kids like Joe are keeping Nick's vision alive.

"The best thing about this program is that it is from children to children," he said. "That's why we like accepting used soccer balls. There can be connection between the children here and the children in Iraq. When you have a connection between children, you really have something going."



Hird will collect new and used soccer balls throughout the soccer season. To donate, call 706-888-9322. For more information, visit ww.kickfornick.com.

Vona: Returns to Benning with JROTC cadets

Mitchell Thomas IV

Retired Col. Lonnie Vona, left, watches as Command Sgt. Maj. Chris Correa takes aim. Correa has been a member of the rifle team for two years.

"I had a guaranteed job where I was (in Tampa), and I could have taken no risks and just coasted," Vona said. "But the challenge of starting my own program and doing things my way appealed to me."

But Vona's challenge had obstacles. He said the initial difficulty was recruiting. After targeting upcoming freshman at nearby middle schools, he attracted 60 interested kids. He soon found that the students were largely interested in the program's extra-curricular activities — namely the rifle team.

Vona, the coach of the rifle team, watched his squad compete in the Eastern Regional Qualifiers Feb. 15 at Pool Shooting Complex on Main Post.

The rifle team is ranked fourth in the state and has placed first in five out of six meets this season.

"We've done well this year, and I believe we will continue to get better," said Brad Varnadoe, a junior and one of the charter members of the rifle team. "We owe so much of our success to the colonel."

Command Sgt. Maj. Chris Correa, who joined JROTC for P.E. credit, dedicated himself to the rifle team and said it changed his life.

"Personally I thought I have A.D.D., so learning patience was a big adjustment for me," Correa said. "But the discipline I've learned in the program has made me a better person and student."

Correa, who is one of the team's top shooters, will attend the University of South Florida in the fall.

Vona said the rifle team allows shooters to be themselves and develop their own approaches to success.

"What I like most is that it (the rifle team) is quantifiable," Vona said. "You shoot a match, you get a score. You don't have to worry if your hat is crooked or if you stood the wrong way."

The team, which finished seventh in the Eastern Regional match, doesn't have a shooting range at the school. They convert a classroom before every practice. They use standard Daisy 853 rifles, a big difference from the modified CO2 rifles most schools use.

"They called us old fashioned," said 1st Lt. Samantha Dias, the team's captain. "Some of the shooters were wondering why we had to pump our guns, but hey, that's what we have to do."

Vona said the obstacles make their accomplishments more worthwhile.

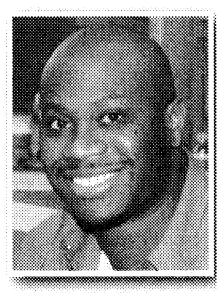
"When we come to matches, some teams look at our stuff and laugh, because they have this fancy equipment," he said. "But our success says a lot about our team."

Dias said the team has also built a strong bond.

"We all are very close knit, not just on the rifle team, but the entire program," she said. "We understand what each other goes through, and we all help push each other to be better."

The students feel that Vona's dedication and "down to earth" attitude is the key to the program's success.

"Colonel Vona has helped so much in terms of shooting and everyday life," Correa said. "He has given us the opportunity to lead, and I feel I'm more prepared for the future."



Vona said it's the students that make the program possible.

"This has been a banner year for us, and these kids are proof that practice can make perfect," he said.

Kick for Nick honors a real hero

THE BAYONET
Mitchell Thomas IV

One of my fondest and most embarrassing memories as a child was playing soccer when I was 5. I was awful. The one game I played, I chased the ball back and forth to get nowhere. I had absolutely no clue what I was doing.

To this day, I don't watch soccer, I don't love it, and I definitely don't play it.

But I do respect it — now more than ever.

My editor gave me a flier last week about a kid here in town named Joe Hird who is doing a project to honor a fallen Soldier. It seemed like a good story.

I found an ESPN clip online showing the story of the bravery and spirit of Pfc. Nick Madaras, a 19 year-old Soldier who was killed in Iraq by an IED. It was extremely moving and inspirational.

I remember vividly how his father cried while telling the reporter about his beloved son. It was difficult to watch.

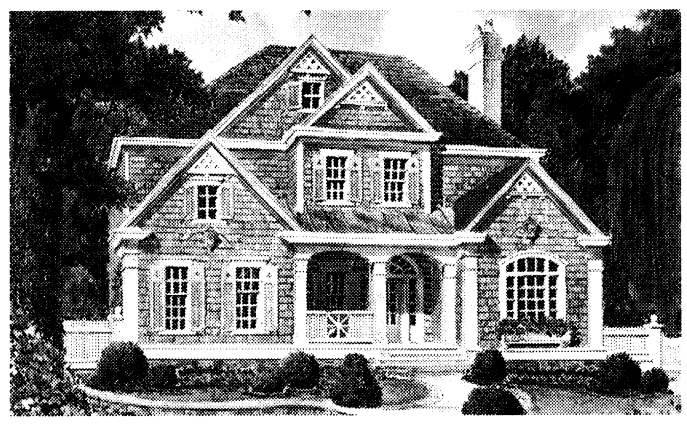
I knew the story would be one that the public would find interest in. What I didn't know is what would happen to me.

After interviewing Joe and his mother, Julie, I knew there was a difficult call I had to make - the most difficult I've made since starting this job.

Monday afternoon, I reluctantly called Nick's father, Bill, and reluctantly asked him a few questions about his son and the Kick for Nick Program. He graciously answered every questions I asked — but in a faint whisper.

Bill told me about a kid he knew who had only one wish for his birthday — to collect balls in honor of Nick. Bill could no longer hold back his emotions, and I could barely finish the interview. I choked back my own tears as I held my tape recorder in one hand and the phone in the other, feeling a connection to this man and his son.

I never was a fan of soccer, but to know that this sport meant so much to Nick, I realized the power of belief, the power of sports and the power of love. Nick loved soccer. He loved it so much that before he died he wanted to give balls to children in the very country where our Soldiers serve. Nick was selfless. The program has reached far beyond Nick's hometown of Wilford, Conn., were it started.



The program has touched many people and it will soon be alive in Columbus. I commend Joe and his mother for wanting to help fulfill Nick's wish. The tricommunity has a high regard for soccer, and there's no doubt that the Hirds will reach their goal — Nick's goal.

But who I truly respect is Nick. When he enlisted in the military, he made the decision that something in the world was bigger than himself. But Nick also believed in the satisfaction of giving children hope.

All I remember about soccer was chasing a ball. Nick did more than chase a ball or his dream, and Kick for Nick is proof that the dream is now destiny.

Families of deployed Soldiers who qualify for the Army Family Covenant card will have registration fees waived for Outdoor Rec trips and activities and half off their Benning Club membership during their Soldiers' deployment.

The cards are issued through unit FRSA and FRG liaisons.

FORT BENNING SOFTBALL

The Fort Benning Men's Softball team will hold tryouts for the 2008 season at 9 a.m. Saturday and March 1. Tryouts will be held at Gowdy Field. Candidates must be active-duty service members (of any service) assigned to Fort Benning.

For more information, call 706-575-8960.

COMMANDER'S CUP SOCCER, VOLLEYBALL

Commander's Cup unit level soccer and volleyball leagues will form soon. Coaches must bring their alpha rosters or AAA-162 to the first meeting March 12 at Smith Fitness Center.

Preseason tournaments will begin March 19. For more information, call 706-984-1994.

REVERSE TRIATHLON

The annual Reverse Sprint triathlon will be held June 7. Individuals and teams of all ages and gender are encouraged to compete in the 5K run, 20K bike race and 550M swim.

Registration will begin in May. For more information, call 706-527-2393.

HARVEST REPORTING

Hunters are reminded that all deer, turkeys, hogs, doves, squirrels and quail harvested on Fort Benning must be reported using the TELTRACK Hunter Control System by calling 706-545-8387 and selecting menu item number 4.

FERAL PIG BOUNTY

The bounty for feral pigs killed on post is $40 until March 12. Authorized Fort Benning hunters must take the tail of the pig, enclosed in a Ziplock bag, with an attached data sheet to the Conservation Branch, Building 5883, between 1 and 3 p.m. on Tuesdays or the last Friday of the month.

For more information about the hunt, the data sheet or the bounty, call 706-545-7978.

EAR TAGS

Auburn University is conducting a study of the feral pigs on Fort Benning to understand their population size, reproductive rates, movement patterns and food habits.

This information will help determine what impacts feral pigs have on habitat, wildlife populations and military training.

Pig hunters, please report the ear tag number, ear tag color, date harvested and general location of harvest to the Conservation Branch. Several pigs have been fitted with radio-tracking collars to help us determine habitat use.

Please attempt to identify and avoid harvesting collared pigs. If a collared pig is harvested or found, please return the collar to Conservation Branch, First Division Road, Building 5884, Harmony Church.

For more information, call 706-544-7079, 706-544-7516 or 707-544-7319.

ROCK WALL

The Smith Fitness Center rock wall is open from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m. weekdays and from opening to a half hour before closing time on weekends. Certified instructors will help you get started.

MASSAGE SESSIONS

The Smith Fitness Center offers 30-, 60- and 90-minute massage sessions by appointment only. Prices range from $35 to $85 for deep tissue, pregnancy, hot stone or therapeutic massages. Sessions are available from 8 a.m. to 7:15 p.m. Monday through Friday and 9:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. on weekends.

For more information, call 706-545-7128.

ALL-ARMY SPORTS PROGRAM

The Department of the Army Sports Office has an online application for the All-Army Sports Program. Go to www.armymwr.com and select the Recreation and the Army Sport link. Soldiers can go directly to armysports.cfsc.army.mil.

Those interested in applying can visit Smith Fitness Center and talk to Ken Wetherill or Lori Smith before submitting applications.

For more information, call 706-545-4300.

CANOE, KAYAK THE HOOCH

Four-hour, self-guided float trips from the old Fort Benning Marina to Uchee Creek are held from 8 a.m. to 2 p.m. Saturdays.

The cost is $15, which must be paid in full, and includes canoe or kayak rental, paddles and transportation.

Reservations are required by Thursday before the trip. Waivers are required for each participant.

For more information, call Outdoor Recreation at 706-545-9636.

TURKEY CALLING

Local calling expert Joe Drake, who has held the national champion turkey calling title eight times, will host a free, two-day seminar on calling skills and ethics at the Uchee Creek Lodge, from 6 to 9 p.m. Tuesday and March 4. Refreshments will be available.

MWR DOG PARK

Four-legged athletes will get a good workout and make new friends at the MWR Dog Park on Main Post at the intersection of Carpenter and Edwards streets.

All dogs must be registered at the Fort Benning Vet Treatment Facility. To register, call 706-545-4444. All dogs must make sure their humans clean up after them.

For more information and a list of the Dog Park rules, visit www.benningmwr.com/odr.

GOLF PUNCH CARD

The Fort Benning Golf Course is offering a punch card. Pre-pay for five rounds of golf at the weekday rate and play seven rounds any time, including weekends.

Rates are based on rank. The cost is $45 for sergeants and below and $75 for staff sergeants and above. For more information, call 706-687-1940.

BUY A BRICK

You can purchase a personalized brick to be placed on the wall of the bridge at Number Nine on the new Patton Nine course.

A personalized brick also makes a great gift or a memorial for a loved one.

Bricks can be purchased for $30 and can include three lines of text with up to 17 characters per line. For more information, drop by the golf course or call 706-687-1940.

Swimmers use Styrofoam noodles while exercising during Seniors' Water Aerobics class. Water provides buoyancy that protects against joint, muscle and bone injuries. It also provides 12 times the resistance of air because the added resistance provides a more challenging workout.

Seniors' water aerobics classes benefit all ages

Maureen Orr, Thersia Reinhart and Robert Montgomery share a laugh Feb. 12 during Seniors' Water Aerobics.

THE BAYONET
Brenda Donnell

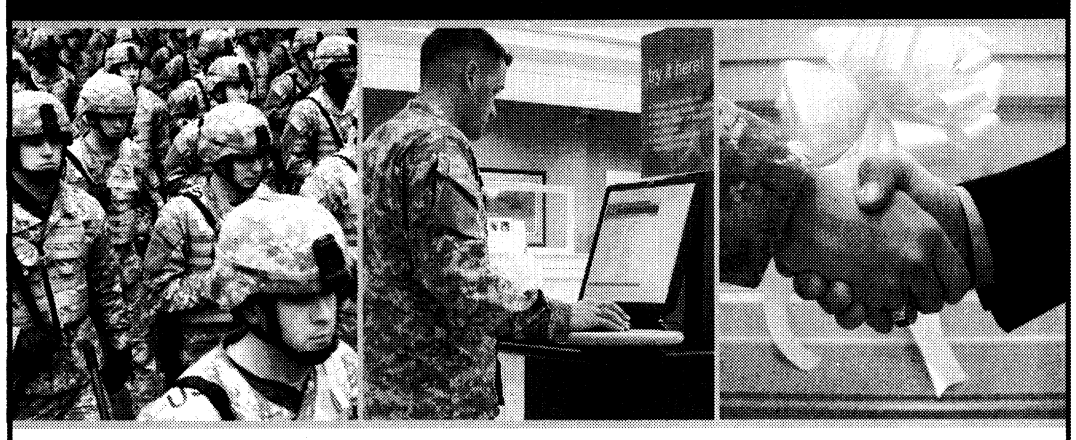
Retired Sgt. 1st Class Jeff Gibson was diagnosed in 1994 with a disease called sarcoidosis that affects his lungs, making it hard for him to breath.

Since 2007, the 49-year-old has been taking anabolic steroids, which caused him to gain weight.

His friend, retired Master Sgt. Robert Montgomery, 64, who attends Seniors' Water Aerobics, suggested Gibson try the classes. Since he began about two months ago, Gibson has lost about 20 pounds.

Montgomery, who also retired from the police department, has lost about 30 pounds since he began classes in November. Before beginning, Montgomery's doctor told him his blood sugar was high, but it is now normal.

"I attribute it to (water aerobics)," Montgomery said. "I couldn't run 20 meters, and I can now run a 10 minute 33 second mile on the treadmill. For anybody out there who is out of shape and wants to get in shape, water aerobics is the way to go."



Head lifeguard and water aerobics instructor Kisa Kowalewski combines strength training with low-impact aerobics during the classes in the shallow pool at Smith Fitness Center.

Water provides buoyancy that protects against joint, muscle and bones injuries, according to the Cooper Aerobics Center Web site. Water also provides 12 times the resistance of air because the added resistance provides a more challenging workout.

So, she initiated the seniors' class in November and has between 20 to 30 participants. Most are between 50 to 80 years old, with two seniors who are in their early 90s, but people as young as 45 can attend the classes.

Seniors' Water Aerobics are from 10 to 11 a.m. Tuesdays and Thursdays. For those who want a harder workout, Aqua Aerobics hours are 9 to 10 a.m. Monday, Wednesday and Friday, and 12 to 1 p.m. Tuesday and Thursday. For more information, call 706-545-5709 or 706-545-6933.

FIT FACTS

MWR FITNESS DIRECTOR
Lori Smith

Below are a few of the more common concerns we see addressed on comment cards at Smith Fitness Center.

• Functional fitness equipment: There have been a slew of requests for functional fitness training equipment. We recently installed new equipment, like Kettle Balls, which isn't a Department of the Army standard and not included in our funding. We used income generated through aerobics classes, massage therapy, personal training and Smoothie King sales to purchase these things.

• Hot tub: Let me apologize for how long it took to get the hot tub repaired. The issues were many and complex, not really good reading for a Friday morning, but all parts, pieces and equipment were under warranty, so it's up and running again. There are processes we have to go through to get items repaired, so just be patient with us. I promise we don't just sit on things.

• Parking: With more than 2,500 people visiting Smith each day, this has become an issue. We received many comments about the lack of available parking, especially during PT.

We do have a parking lot addition project under way. Once this is complete, there will be ample parking for everyone.

• Aqua Aerobics: I have read several comment cards requesting additional Aqua Aerobics classes during lunch and some in the evening.

I am working on a contract for an Aqua Aerobics instructor who can work evenings. Finding instructors who can teach evening classes has always been a big challenge.

I hope evening aqua aerobic classes will start in April. The issue I run in to with lunchtime classes is lap swimming, and lack of space for running both programs. I can't close off the lap pool from the lap swimmers every day. I would get more comment cards!

So, we are trying two lunchtime classes in the leisure pool, along with the existing lunchtime classes held in the lap pool. We are testing this to see how it works before we add it to the class offerings.

Now I have a request for readers. I would like to hear feedback or interest in a Mixed Martial Arts / Self Defense training class we are considering. We have the opportunity to have a veteran UFC fighter conduct training classes within our fitness centers.

We still have some hurdles to clear before the go ahead, but I would like to know how many people are interested in this.

It would be set up the same way as our other contractor-based classes so there will be a fee, and this would take a little time, but we have had a few folks approach us on this and now we have the opportunity.

Post Prayer Breakfast set for Feb. 29

THE BAYONET
Brenda Donnell

Chaplain (Col.) Richard B. Garrison, TRADOC command chaplain at Fort Monroe, Va., will speak at the annual Prayer Breakfast at 7:30 a.m. Feb. 29 at the Benning Club.

Since his appointment as an Army chaplain in 1981, Garrison has served at Army posts throughout the United States, including two assignments at Fort Benning, and in Germany and Korea.

"Whether he refers to climbing Mount McKinley or running marathons, Chaplain Garrison always has something interesting and inspirational to say," said Chaplain (Maj.) Doug Hoover, a U.S. Army Family Life Chaplain Training Program resident.

Hoover expects 300 to 400 people to attend. The breakfast brings together people of various spiritual backgrounds for fellowship, encouragement and prayer, he said. There is no cost, but tickets are required, with a suggested donation of $6 for enlisted personnel and $8 for NCOs and officers.

For more information, visit unit chaplains or call 706-545-2289.

First Steps reaches out to new parents

THE BAYONET
Cheryl Rodewig

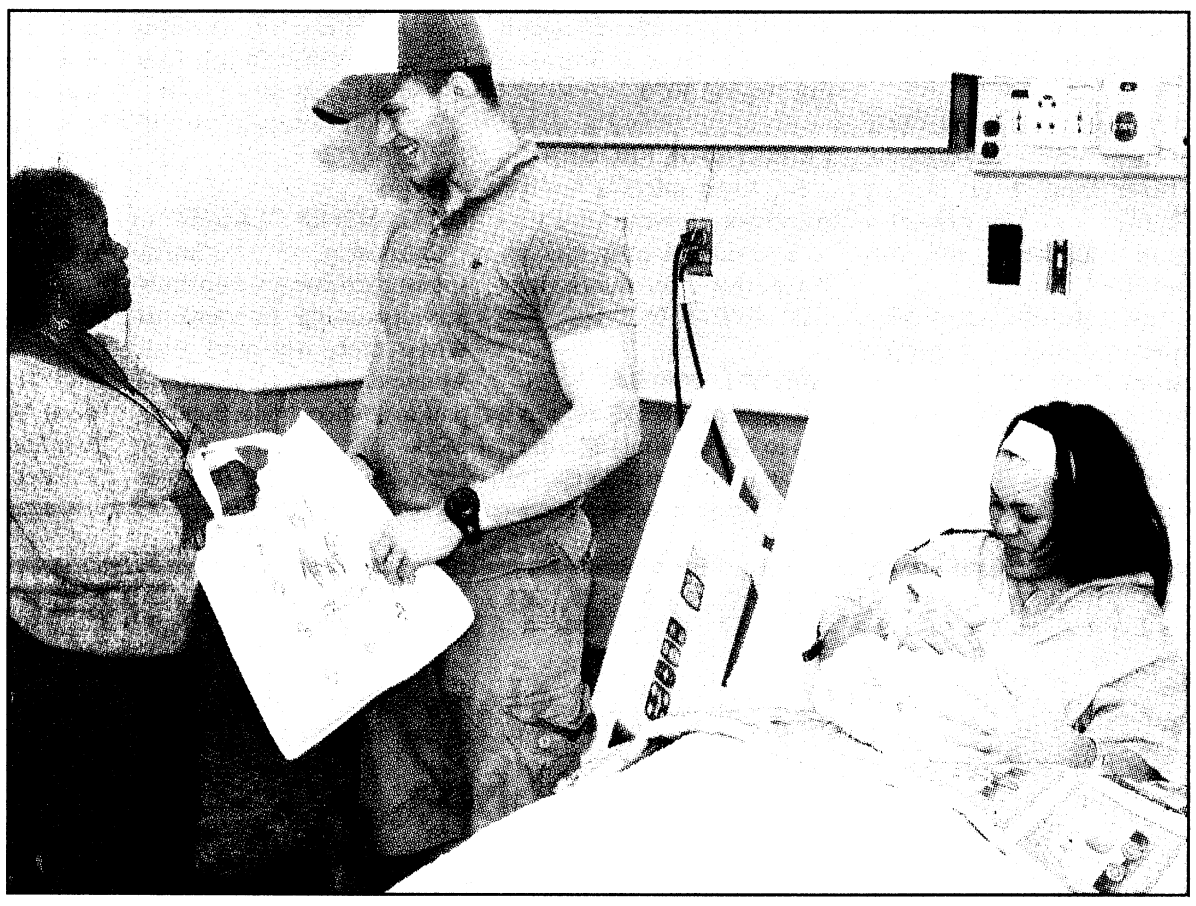
Kristina Sockwell had her first child, Jonathon, early in the morning Feb. 13, just a few minutes after midnight. With her husband Spc. Jonathon Sockwell returning to Iraq Monday, Kristina signed up for the First Steps program, which provides information, contacts and valuable resources during the first three months after a child's birth.

"Moms need security blankets, too," Jonathon said.

Kristina and Jonathon agreed that the support system would help while he was deployed.

"It's kind of a comfort factor because you know you're going to have someone there to answer your questions and to talk to if you need it ... someone who's already been through it," Kristina said. "I'm pretty sure that up the road I'm going to have serious questions."

A Family Advocacy program, First Steps is free for military ID cardholders. It is open to all parents, whether they are having their first or fifth child and provides information on topics ranging from colic and breast-feeding to postpartum depression and general infant care.



The Sockwells received a handmade quilt for their infant and a tote filled with brochures, booklets, a calendar of things to expect during the first year and a developmental planner for birth through 5 years.

"Babies don't come with an instruction manual, but they do come with the First Steps program," said Carolyn Harris, First Steps coordinator. "It's my job to empower the parents with the knowledge they need to raise their child in a positive and healthy environment."

Volunteers are available by phone and e-mail to answer questions. They also meet with every parent who has a baby at Martin Army Community Hospital. The Sockwells heard about the program through volunteer Sherry Daniels, who met with them the day Jonathon was born.

To reach more parents, Harris said she needs volunteers who want to help the program continue to grow. Men or women, 18 or older, can assist parents after they have a child with meetings and follow-up phone calls.

For more information about the program or to volunteer, call 706-544-2020.

Experts warn against mixing alcohol, medication

THE BAYONET
Brenda Donnell

Mixing antidepressants with alcohol increases the drugs' sedative effects and can impair mental skills required for driving.

Mixing alcohol and prescription drugs produces a dangerous cocktail that can cause convulsions, liver damage, gastric bleeding and death.

Alcohol and medications should never be combined at any time, said Capt. Carrie Keyes, officer in charge of the In-Patient Pharmacy at Martin Army Community Hospital. When alcohol and medications are metabolized, their interaction can cause an increase in side effects, such as drowsiness, vomiting, headaches and nausea.

Lt. Col. George Bryan, commander of the Warrior Training Battalion, continually cautions the Soldiers in his unit about what could happen if they drink while taking prescription drugs because most of them are on medications.

Combining alcohol and prescription medications has occurred at other installations with bad results, said Bryan, who includes this topic during a brief, given by pharmacy personnel like Keyes, to all WTB service members.

Keyes said most people don't think they will ever have problems that result from combining alcohol and drugs, but it happened to a friend of hers.

"(My friend) was rushed to the emergency room and (had a tube inserted) because he stopped breathing and was unresponsive," she said.

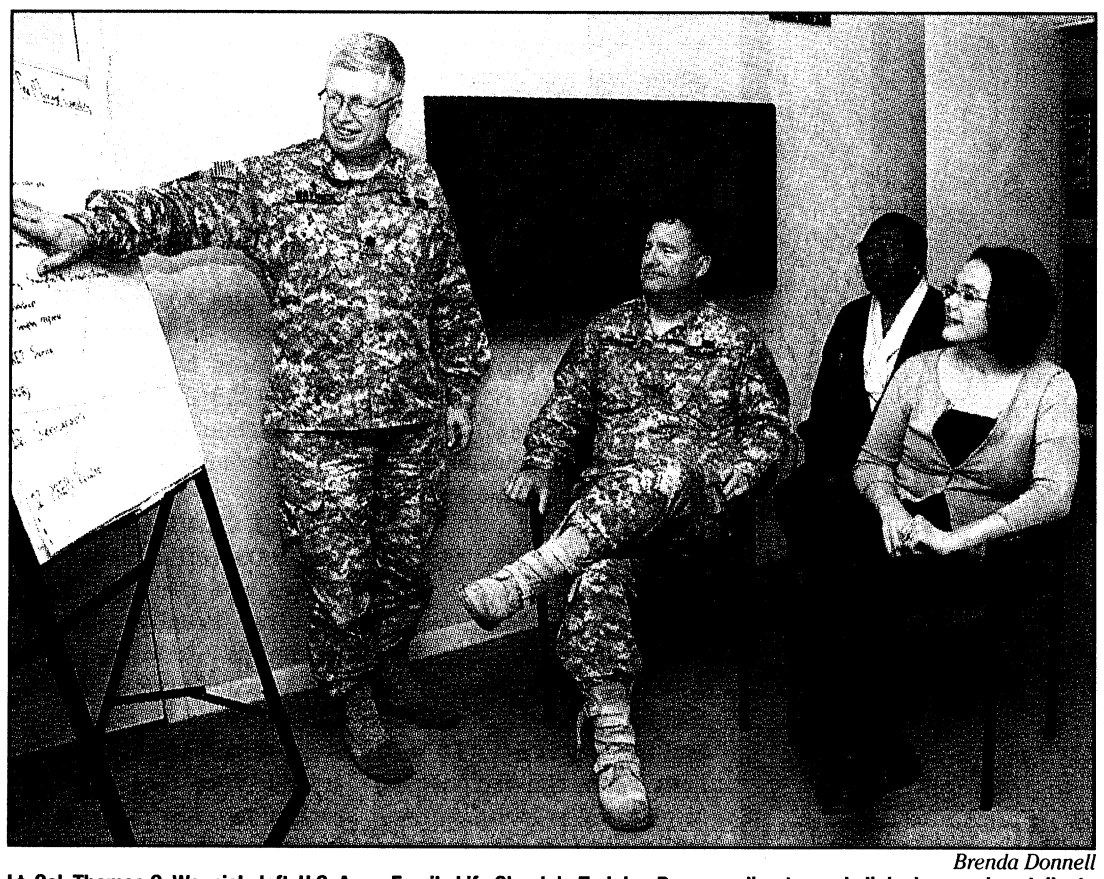
Luckily, her friend survived.

All kinds of drugs, from sedatives to aspirin, can be dangerous when combined with alcoholic drinks.

Benzodiazepines are a type of sedatives or tranquilizers. Dalmane, a benzodiazepine, used to treat sleeping disorders and other conditions, can impair a person's ability to drive when ingested with alcohol, Keyes said. Even when the alcohol is consumed hours after the Dalmane, the mixture can cause serious problems for the patient.

Common pain relievers are Vicodin and Percocet. Narcotic pain relievers, prescribed for moderate to severe pain, include morphine and codeine, she said. The combination of these medications and alcohol enhances the sedative effect of both, which can cause dangerous side effects such as respiratory depression and possible overdoses, Keyes said.

Antidepressants mixed with alcohol increases the drugs' sedative effects and can impair mental skills required for driving. Drinking beer or wine while taking antidepressants can cause a chemical reaction that can produce a dangerous rise in blood pressure, Keyes said..



The results of combining other drugs with alcohol can also produce deadly effects, such as severe bleeding. Warfarin, also known as Coumadin, is an anticoagulant which prevents the formation of blood clots by decreasing the blood's ability to clot. Acute alcohol consumption allows Warfarin to circulate more in the body, increasing the patient's risk for life-threatening hemorrhages, Keyes said.

Yet, it's not only prescription drugs that can cause problems when combined with alcohol. Even over-the counter medications mixed with alcohol can be deadly.

Tylenol, taken after alcohol has been metabolized, can cause life-threatening liver damage, and Keyes said one of the messages here is don't ever take Tylenol for a hangover.

Aspirin and other non-prescription drugs such as naproxen cause gastric bleeding and inhibit blood from clotting, and alcohol increases these effects, Keyes said. Aspirin can also heighten the effects of alcohol.

No matter what type of medication patients are taking, Keyes said, they should never take it with alcohol. For more information, patients should talk to their doctors or pharmacists about the drugs they have been prescribed and read the information provided.

Lt. Col. Thomas C. Waynick, left, U.S. Army Family Life Chaplain Training Program director and clinical supervisor, talks to Chaplain (Maj.) Jeff Botford, Laura Lowe and Nicole Chacin, all resident counselors. In addition to counseling clients, all residents receive three hours of group training and one hour of individual training per week.

Family Life Chaplains train at Fort Benning

THE BAYONET
Brenda Donnell

Lt. Col. Thomas C. Waynick was a member of an Air Force Family when he was growing up. He saw, firsthand, many of the issues that affect combat veterans and their Families. His father served in Vietnam.

These days, as the director and clinical supervisor for the U.S. Army Family Life Chaplain Training Program at Fort Benning, he is helping other service members and Families deal with many of the same issues.

"This is a dream come true for me," Waynick said. "It's very rewarding to think I can help Families deal with issues that our Family dealt with when I was growing up."

Fort Benning is one of two posts where chaplains train to become licensed Family and marriage therapists, and the training residents conduct their clinical work at the Family Life Chaplain facility in Soldiers' Plaza counseling Soldiers of all ranks and Family members.

Residents talk to clients about issues that include communication and trust, infidelity, post-traumatic stress disorder, parenting problems, deployment issues for children, depression, stress, anger, pornography addiction and more.

"We are one of the many helping agencies for Army Families, and we have a good relationship with helping professionals on and off post," Waynick said.

Those include Alcohol and Substance Abuse Program and Family Advocacy Program staff and psychiatric caregivers at Martin Army Community Hospital on post and social workers and Bradley Center staff off post.

Respect can make many relationships more fulfilling

At work and at home, respect helps people feel valued

CHAPLAIN FAMILY LIFE CENTER
Chaplain (Maj.) Terry E. Romine

Respect is such an important part of every relationship. Many people will quickly and wholeheartedly agree with that statement.

When someone respects another person, how can you tell? There are several signs for different relationships.

When children respect their parents, the parents certainly know it. They might say things like "Yes, Sir" or "No, Ma'am," or they might keep their room clean, mind their manners and not talk back. They may do what they are supposed to do without being told, like taking out the trash or doing their homework.

Parents should respect their children, too. Children are not little servants to be bossed or controlled. They are young people, in various stages of development, who need to be loved, held, talked to, read to and played with. All of these things are forms of respect, which will give each child the room and security to grow and mature into an adult who knows how to show respect in return.

Parents, in this way, can get the respect they want, deserve and expect. Give respect first.

What does respect among spouses look like? It might include never embarrassing your spouse in front of your friends or either set of parents.

Some husbands might include the traditional things that wives do at home, such as cooking, cleaning, laundry, etc. Some wives might include the traditional things husbands do, like fixing the car or mowing the lawn. Many spouses would include more personal relationship things.

It might be a worthy use of time to discuss what would happen in your relationship if each of you felt respected by the other.

Ask yourself this question, "If I truly respect my spouse, what can I do to make sure he or she knows it?" Next, follow that question up with the same question for your spouse, "How can I make sure you know that I respect you?"

What about respect in the workplace? Should subordinates respect their leaders and bosses? Of course. They should do their job well, without hesitation or complaint and be thankful for the job.

In short, subordinates should be enthusiastic about their job. Showing respect involves everyday interaction including common courtesies. Respect also involves not doing things that demonstrate disdain or contempt such as rolling one's eyes, which can be interpreted as disrespectful.

What about the bosses and leaders respecting the subordinates? Should the officer respect the NCO? Should the NCO respect the junior Soldier? What should that respect look like?

Leaders and bosses can show respect toward their subordinates by letting them know that they are making valuable contributions to the organization by listening to their ideas and considering what they have to say.

There are some things to avoid such as yelling, cursing or name calling, which are disrespectful and always counterproductive.

When a leader lets subordinates know they have been heard, they will know their boss respects them. Remember when you were the subordinate. Treat your subordinate like you wish you had been treated.

Even now you are still a subordinate; treat your subordinates like you wish your boss would treat you. A leader can only be as successful as his or her subordinates. A leader's job is to respect subordinates enough to serve them and make them successful. When they are successful, you will be a great boss and a great leader.

If you have difficulty with issues of respect in your Family or workplace, let the chaplains and counselors at the Chaplain Family Life Training Center assist.

We are located at Building 2606 in Soldiers' Plaza. For an appointment, call 706- 545-1760.

Program: Helps chaplains help Soldiers

Many Soldiers think the only way to maintain anonymity when they need counseling is to get help from civilian therapists and resources like Military OneSource, Waynick said. Yet, one of the advantages of seeking counseling from chaplains is complete confidentiality.

"If a Soldier comes here, we can't tell the chain of command he has been here unless the Soldier releases that information," said Waynick, who has been the program director for four years.

Another advantage in talking with chaplains is that they know the Army culture, and all of the chaplains in the program have been deployed to war zones, he said. Also, because it's a training center, many cases are handled by a team, so there are more people to help find solutions.

Maj. Jeff Voyles, deputy of the Fort Benning program who will take over Waynick's position next year, said the counseling process invites people to take off their masks and get in touch with who they really are.

"I see the power of what we do and how it changed my own life, and I think I have seen that effect on others," Voyles said. "Human interaction, when it's very genuine, is very powerful."

Soldiers who train as Family Life chaplains are career officers with at least 10 years of counseling experience and have master's degrees in divinity. During the program, they train to eventually earn a second master's degree in marriage and family counseling from Columbus State University. Residents also receive additional supervision from the Pastoral Institute in Columbus.

"We put them through a great secular program at CSU, but we don't want them to lose their identity as clergy," Waynick said. "The supervision (from the Pastoral Institute) is focused on integration of spirituality and their work, so they don't just become secular counselors."

Waynick said he spends a lot of time supervising the residents, and Voyles said one of the reasons he applied for the program was the chance to interact with other chaplains as a supervisor.

"I get to sit down weekly with four or five residents and get to know them, and I don't see any other position (in the chaplaincy) where you have that kind of interaction," Voyles said.

The U.S. Army Family Life Chaplain Training Program was initiated at the end of the Vietnam War to help Soldiers with combat and Family issues. The other training program is at Fort Hood, Texas, and the Army recently received approval to expand the program, so a third training center will be opened in the future, Waynick said.

Fourteen counselors are available at the Fort Benning facility. Waynick said they prefer that clients make appointments, and counselors can usually see them within one to two days after they call. To make an appointment, call 706-545-1760.

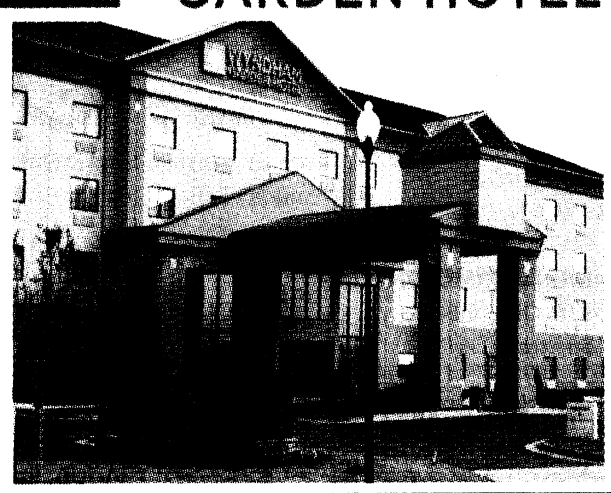
Fiber is good for you. You know that. But here's what you may not know: the American Dietetic Association suggests we consume around 30 grams of fiber every day, but the average American consumes well below half that amount.

Fiber is a calorie-free nutrient, essentially roughage made from the cell walls of plants. Though it can't be digested, it still plays crucial roles in the body.

Soluble fiber, which can dissolve in water, binds with molecules in the body. It can lower cholesterol, moderate blood sugar levels and help the body absorb nutrients. Insoluble fiber moves wastes through the intestines and helps prevent constipation. A combination of both is important.

Fiber can reduce the risk of heart disease and cancer. It also helps prevent obesity, since fiber-rich foods fill you up more than processed foods.



To get more fiber, eat more fruits, vegetables and beans, which also contain a wealth of vitamins and minerals. Whole grains are another good source of fiber. A good rule of thumb for bread and cereal is to buy it only if it has at least three grams of fiber. Fewer grams means it has been over-processed.

Fiber can be found in many foods we eat every day, but we sometimes get rid of it unintentionally. Potato and apple skins are filled with fiber, so don't throw them away. Raw vegetables like carrots and celery are fibrous, too, but cooking them reduces the fiber to carbohydrates.

If you do cook your vegetables, sauté or steam them lightly, instead of boiling them, to preserve more nutrients. Season the final dish with basil or sesame seeds for an extra dose of fiber.

Eating more fiber doesn't have to mean a piece of bread that feels and tastes like cardboard. Enjoy oatmeal with raisins, spinach-stuffed shiitake mushrooms, bran cereal sprinkled with flaxseed or a sweet potato, garnished with cinnamon, almonds and raspberries, and you'll be enjoying fiber, too.

Be prepared for a dental emergency

AMERICAN DENTAL ASSOCIATION

Are you prepared for a dental emergency?

Every day, thousands of dental emergencies, from injuries to an abscessed tooth. Knowing what to do can lessen the pain and save a tooth that might otherwise be lost.

Keep your dentist's phone number, including an emergency after-hours number, near the phone.

Here are some tips to help you cope until you can get to the dentist:

• Toothache: Rinse the mouth with warm water and gently use dental floss or an interdental cleaner to remove food or debris that may be caught between the teeth. Never put aspirin or any other painkiller against the gums near the aching tooth. This could burn gum tissue. If the toothache persists, see the dentist.

• Knocked-out (avulsed) tooth: Try to find the tooth. Hold the tooth by the crown and rinse the root in water. Don't scrub it or remove any attached tissue fragments.

If possible, gently insert and hold the tooth in its socket while you head to the dentist. If that's not possible, put the tooth in a cup of milk and take it to the dentist. Time is critical for successful reimplantation, so try to get to your dentist immediately.

• Broken tooth: Rinse your mouth with warm water and use a cold compresses on the outside of the cheek to help reduce the swelling.

• Tongue or lip bites or wounds: Clean the area gently with a clean cloth and apply cold compresses to reduce any swelling. If the bleeding can't be controlled, go to a hospital emergency room or clinic. You may be able to reduce bleeding from the tongue by using gauze to put pressure on the wound.

• Objects caught between teeth: Try to gently remove the object with dental floss. Never use a sharp instrument to remove any object stuck between your teeth.

If you can't dislodge the object with floss, contact your dentist.

• Possible broken jaw: Apply cold compresses to control swelling. Get to the hospital emergency room immediately.

Sipping, snacking and tooth decay

Now more than ever, kids are faced with a massive array of food choices, from fresh produce to sugar-laden processed convenience meals and snack foods.

What children eat and when they eat it may affect not only their general health but also their oral health.

Americans are consuming foods and drinks high in sugar and starches more often and in larger portions than ever before. It's clear that junk foods and drinks have replaced nutritious beverages and foods as the staple in many diets.

For example, the average teenage boy in the U.S. consumes 81 gallons of soft drinks each year. A steady diet of sugary foods and drinks can ruin teeth.

Common activities may contribute to the tendency toward tooth decay. These include "grazing" habitually on foods with minimal nutritional value and frequently sipping on sugary drinks.

When sugar is consumed over and over again in large amounts, the harmful effect on teeth can be dramatic. Sugar on teeth provides food for bacteria, which produce acid. The acid in turn can eat away the enamel on teeth.

Almost all foods have some type of sugar that cannot and should not be eliminated from our diets. Many of these foods contain important nutrients.

But there is a risk for tooth decay from a diet high in sugars and starches. Starches can be found in everything from bread to pretzels to salad dressing, so read labels and plan carefully for a balanced, nutritious diet.

Reduce the risk of tooth decay

Sugary foods and drinks should be consumed with meals. Saliva production increases during meals and helps neutralize acid production and rinse food particles from the mouth.

Limit between-meal snacks, and if your child chews gum, make it sugarless. Chewing sugarless gum after eating can help wash out food and decay-producing acid.

Monitor their beverage consumption. Instead of soft drinks all day, children should also choose water and low-fat milk.

Help your children develop good brushing and flossing habits and schedule regular dental visits.

Sippy cups

As soon as teeth appear in the mouth, decay can occur. One of the risk factors for early childhood caries (also called baby bottle tooth decay or nursing mouth syndrome) is frequent and prolonged exposure of a baby's teeth to liquids, such as fruit juice, milk or formula, which all contain sugar.

Tooth decay can occur when a baby is put to bed with a bottle. Infants should finish their naptime or bedtime bottle before going to bed.

Because decay can destroy the teeth of an infant or young child, you should encourage your children to drink from a cup by their first birthdays.

Many training cups, also called sippy or tippy cups, are available in stores. Many are "no spill" cups, which are essentially baby bottles in disguise. Cups with valves do not allow your child to sip, which defeats the purpose of using a training cup.

Don't let your child carry the training cup around. Toddlers are often unsteady on their feet. They take an unnecessary risk if they try to walk and drink at the same time. Falling while drinking from a cup can injure the mouth.

A training cup should be used temporarily. Once your child has learned how to sip, the training cup has achieved its purpose.

The American Dental Association says it's beneficial for the first dental visit to be within six months of the appearance of the first tooth, and no later than the child's first birthday.

RESTAURANT REVIEW

Buckhead Grill

THE BAYONET
Rachel L. Watkins

If you're looking for a place with a cozy vibe and good food, Buckhead Grill is it.

While waiting for a table, you can chill in an area with big comfy couches, candles and a TV that plays concert music.

Next week in The Bayonet, Rachel will review Fountain City Coffee.

Or you can get a drink at the bar. The lounge area has an intimate setting with candlelit tables and a fireplace. The bar is more upbeat, and the dining room has a laid-back feel to it.

Buckhead's menu includes soup, salads, sandwiches and chicken and steak entrees.

For an appetizer, I had the Maytag Blue Cheese Chips, homemade fried chips with melted blue cheese drizzled on top, and it was absolutely delicious. It costs about eight bucks. If you're not a blue cheese fan, try the crab and artichoke dip for $8. It's served with crostinis brushed with herbed olive oil.

There are many choices for dinner. If you are looking to spend around $9 to $12 a plate, get a sandwich. I had the chargrilled chicken sandwich, which comes with a pickle and fries — it was filling and tasty. It'll cost about $8. For $13 to $25, get the seafood, chicken or steak. The Buckhead Burgundy 16-ounce ribeye, for $23.99, is seasoned and topped with shallots and light burgundy wine au jus. It comes with a salad and a side, which could be fries, creamed spinach casserole, roasted vegetables, garlic mashed potatoes, roasted tomatoes or herbed grits. The chicken picatta, for $16, is sautéed chicken medallions, butter, white wine, with a lemon caper sauce. It also comes with a salad and a side. Vegetarians can get the Buckhead vegetarian blue plate for $11. It includes four sides.

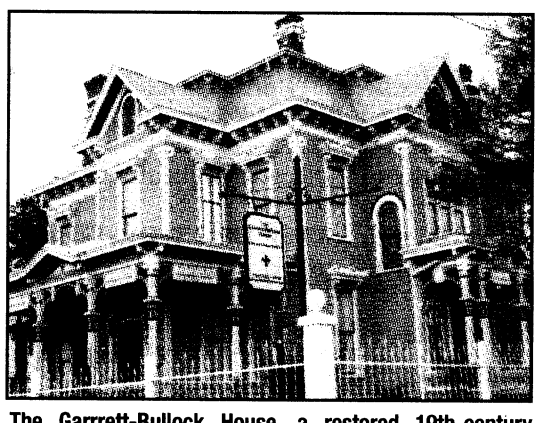
Desserts are also available, including seven-layer carrot cake, pecan pie and apple pie. This is a popular restaurant, so be prepared for a wait. Local musicians play Friday and Saturday nights. The dining room is open 5 to 10 p.m. seven days a week. The lounge is open at 5 p.m. Wednesday to Sunday and closes when it stops getting busy. The restaurant is located at 5010 Armour Road. For more information, call 706-571-9995.

Detective Jack Hades (Adam Archer) interrogates the Colonel's French maid Dominique LeDustier (Haley Rice), who scoffs at his questions.

Murder mystery theater

THE BAYONET
Cheryl Rodewig

The Columbus Mystery Theatre, a new theater company, and the Garrett-Bullock House, a special events facility in uptown Columbus, have joined forces to create a murder mystery dinner theater, an evening complete with thrilling surprises, fine cuisine and laughter.



Similar to Agatha's in Atlanta, the dinner theater uses audience participation to tell the story. Two actors play a variety of roles, and audience members fill in the rest of the cast as witnesses and suspects — one or more may even be a murderer.

The current show, An Inheritance of Murder, blends improv, comedy and murder mystery to provide a truly unique experience. The plot centers around the passing of the wealthy Col. Klaus Von Strudel and the mystery surrounding his will.

Written by local residents Kate and JJ Musgrove, the script includes humorous allusions to the tricommunity that audience members will enjoy.

Doors open around 6:15 p.m. for guests to check in, mingle and enjoy hors d'oeuvre. After 6:30, the actors will begin passing out speaking parts for those who are interested, and the show begins shortly after 7 p.m. Late seating is not available until after Act I, so be sure to arrive promptly.

Following Act I, the salad will be served. The main course follows Act II, and during dessert after Act III, audience members can guess the murderer's identity.

The Garrett-Bullock House, a restored 19th-century building and home to the Columbus Mystery Theatre, is located at the corner of Second Avenue and 14th Street in uptown Columbus.

"Whodunit" is revealed during the fourth and final act. The names of audience members who made correct accusations are put into a drawing, and the winner receives a prize.

The dinner is catered by Kimble's Food By Design, and the menu varies from night to night.

Shows will be today, Saturday, Feb. 29 and March 1. Tickets are $35 and limited to adults only. The show is rated PG-13 for adult humor.

Attire is casual, but feel free to dress as a character from your favorite mystery.

The Garrett-Bullock House is located on the corner of Second Avenue and 14th Street at 1402 Second Ave. Theater-goers may tour the 19th-century home prior to the show.

For more information about the house, visit www.garrettbullockhouse.com.

For dinner theater reservations, call 706-536-4054. For more information, e-mail info@columbusmysterytheatre.org or visit www.ctetheatre.org.

BOOK REVIEW

Personal history details NCO candidate program during Vietnam

BAYONET CORRESPONDENT
Maj. Matthew Archambault

War is inherently a human endeavor, and it is the human story that people find the most intriguing. It seems paradoxical that military history comes under considerable fire for being drudgery to read. In some cases this is true.

Fault for this often lies with the author rather than the subject material. They focus too much on unit designations, terrain descriptions and planning minutiae. These are really abstractions to anyone not present at the battle described. The Shake 'n Bake Sergeant by Jerry S. Horton looks at war on the human level. This is his personal account of the Vietnam War in 1969.

There are idiosyncrasies readers should be aware of when reading personal accounts. They are myopic by nature and tend to overreach by generalizing their experience, hence the reason why truth is called the first casualty of war.

It was just such an injustice that spurned Horton to pick up his pen. He wanted to set the record straight about the Noncommissioned Officer Candidate program after reading just such a personal account that slighted his alma mater.

For those who do not know, the Noncommissioned Officer Candidate program took Soldiers, fresh from basic training and advanced Infantry training, with as little as three months experience, and ran them through a 12-week program. "Take a bag, drop in one green Soldier, a copy of UCMJ, and a few ideas from some Brass in Washington who thinks he knows what Vietnam is all about. Shake 'em up. Bake 'em up. Thirty days later yuh've got it … an instant sergeant."

Horton's tale will resonate with many Soldiers, Infantrymen in particular, as he describes his journey into manhood. While this might not be an epic tale in the style of Joseph Campbell's The Hero With a Thousand Faces, Horton's journey contains the familiar shades and hues, friendship, struggle and sacrifice, which mark any mythology.

His style is terse. He avoids flowery language, aphorisms and parables to convey his experience. "What I have concluded is that no words can really describe the reality of it all." Anyone having gone to touch the elephant will know this to be true.

From start to finish, Horton's journey to A Company, 1st Battalion, 8th Infantry in the 4th Infantry Division and his three months in Vietnam reads almost like a journal entry. Beyond his style, he accomplishes this by including excerpts from his letters in each chapter. This, the human dimension, makes the story all the more compelling.

For Horton's part, looking back on events 30 years in his past, he reflects no more upon his experience and the role he played in the Plei Trap Valley than to say thanks to the men that saved his life. There is little to detract from the text.

He keeps his scope small, on exactly what he knew and what he experienced. He does not attempt to lambaste Army or U.S. policy. As advised by his friends, "set it straight and it will come out that way." Horton does just this, and he avoids the traps mentioned beforehand about personal accounts.

I recommend this book to cadets and junior leaders. Horton provides plenty of leadership examples throughout, but The Shake 'n Bake Sergeant is a great story for anyone who has been in combat, is going to combat or knows someone who's been in combat.

Horton will sign copies of this book on Feb. 27th in the Donovan Library, Infantry Hall.

OPENING TODAY
VANTAGE POINT

Thomas Barnes (Dennis Quaid) and Kent Taylor (Matthew Fox) are Secret Service agents assigned to protect President Ashton (William Hurt) at a landmark summit in Spain.

When the president is shot moments after his arrival, chaos ensues. In the crowd is Howard Lewis (Forest Whitaker), an American tourist who thinks he's captured the shooter on his camcorder while videotaping the event. Also there is American TV news producer Rex Brooks (Sigourney Weaver), relaying the historic event to TV viewers worldwide. As they and others reveal their stories, it becomes apparent that shocking motivations lurk just beneath the surface.

Vantage Point is rated PG-13 for violence, action, disturbing images and language.

BE KIND, PLEASE REWIND

Jerry (Jack Black), a junkyard worker, attempts to sabotage a power plant that he believes is melting his brain. But when his plan goes awry, the magnetic field that he creates accidentally erases all of the videotapes in a local video store where his best friend Mike (Dante "Mos Def" Smith) works.

Worried the mishap will cost Mike his job, the friends team up to keep the store's only loyal customer — a little old lady with a tenuous grasp on reality — from realizing what has happened by recreating and re-filming every movie that she decides to rent. From Back to the Future to The Lion King, Jerry and Mike become the biggest stars in their neighborhood by starring in the biggest movies ever made.

Be Kind Rewind is rated PG-13 for some sexual references.

WITLESS PROTECTION

During a routine day spent patrolling his small town, sheriff Larry (Larry the Cable Guy) witnesses a beautiful woman, Madeleine (Ivana Milicevic), being held against her will by four mysterious, black-suited men. Recognizing the opportunity to save the day, Larry kidnaps her, only to learn that Madeleine is actually a key witness in a high-stakes Chicago crime case and her captors are FBI agents assigned to protect her.

Madeleine is furious, but Larry, who rightly suspects the agents are crooked and Madeleine is in danger, forces her on a harebrained trip to Chicago to solve the case himself. Together, the mismatched duo must grapple with angry FBI agents, quack doctors and Chicago high society.

Witless Protection is rated PG-13 for crude and sex-related humor.

CHARLIE BARTLETT

When Charlie Bartlett (Anton Yelchin) discovers that the kids at his public school, outcasts and popular alike, are secretly in desperate need, his entrepreneurial spirit takes over.

Becoming an underground shrink, Charlie listens to the private confessions of his schoolmates and hands out the pills he's proffered from his own psychiatric sessions. Then, Charlie falls for the daughter (Kat Dennings) of the school principal and his fledgling practice begins to unravel.

Charlie Bartlett is rated R for language, drug content and nudity.

ALSO PLAYING DEFINITELY, MAYBE

Will (Ryan Reynolds), a Manhattan dad in the middle of a divorce, is questioned by his daughter, 10-year-old Maya (Abigail Breslin), about his life before his marriage.

Will's story begins in 1992, as a young, aspiring politician who moves to New York to work on the presidential campaign. For Maya, Will recounts the history of his romantic relationships with three very different women, changing their names so Maya has to guess who he finally marries.

Is her mother Will's college sweetheart Emily, his best friend April or the free-spirited journalist Summer?

As Maya puts together the pieces, she begins to understand that love is not as simple as it seems.

Definitely, Maybe is rated PG-13 for sexual content, language and smoking.

JUMPER

A genetic anomaly allows a young man (Hayden Christensen) to teleport himself anywhere.

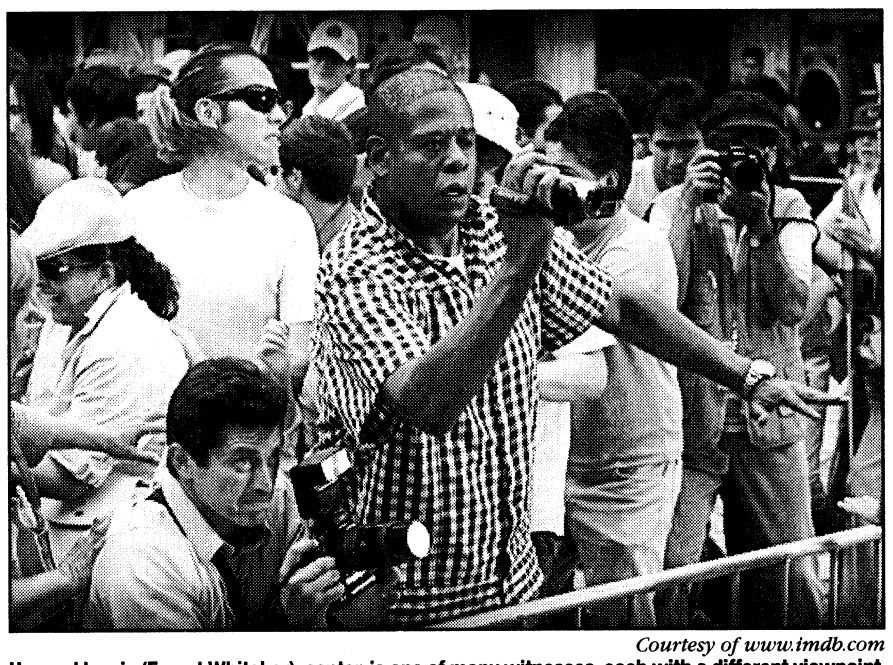
He discovers this gift has existed for centuries and finds himself in a war that has been raging for thousands of years between "Jumpers" and those who have sworn to kill them.

Jumpers is rated PG-13 for violence, language and sexuality.

THE SPIDERWICK CHRONICLES

Strange things happen when twins Jared and Simon Grace (Freddie Highmore) and their sister Mallory (Sarah Bolger) leave New York with their mom and move into the secluded old house owned by their great, great uncle Arthur Spiderwick.

Unable to explain the happenings, the three children investigate what's really going on, they uncover the fantastic truth of the Spiderwick estate and the creatures that inhabit it.



The Spiderwick Chronicles is rated PG for scary action, violence, peril and thematic elements.

STEP UP 2 THE STREETS

When street dancer Andie (Briana Evigan) arrives at the elite Maryland School of the Arts, she finds herself fighting to fit in while trying to hold onto her old life.

When she joins forces with the school's hottest dancer, Chase (Robert Hoffman), to form a crew of classmate outcasts to compete in Baltimore's underground dance battle "The Streets," she finds a way to live her dream while building a bridge between her two separate worlds.

Step Up 2 the Streets is rated PG-13 for language, suggestive material and violence.

GEORGE A. ROMERO'S DIARY OF THE DEAD

Jason Creed (Joshua Close) and a crew of college filmmakers are in the Pennsylvania woods making a horror film when they hear the terrifying news that the dead have started returning to life. Led by Jason's girlfriend, Debra (Michelle Morgan), they try to return home, but there is no escape.

As his friends die and the government fails to control the crisis, Jason steadily documents the true-life horrors, taking refuge with the remains of his crew in a fortress that turns out to be a trap.

George A. Romero's Diary of the Dead is rated R for violence, gore and language.

FOOL'S GOLD

Obsessed with finding the Queen's Dowry — 40 chests of treasure lost at sea in 1715, Ben "Finn" Finnegan (Matthew McConaughey) has lost everything he has, including his wife Tess (Kate Hudson), who now works aboard a yacht owned by billionaire Nigel Honeycutt (Donald Sutherland).

When Finn discovers a clue to the treasure, he convinces Nigel and his daughter (Alexis Dziena), to join him in the quest. But they are not the only ones. — Moe Fitch (Ray Winstone) has also set out to claim the prize.

Fool's Gold is rated PG-13 for violence, sexual material, nudity and language.

WELCOME HOME ROSCOE JENKINS

Leaving behind his southern roots, self-help guru RJ Stevens (Martin Lawrence) has countless fans, a TV-star fiancee and money to burn.

After his parents request that he come home for their 50th wedding anniversary, RJ heads to Georgia to find that he may be a superstar in L.A., but he's just one of the guys at home.

Welcome Home Roscoe Jenkins is rated PG-13 for crude and sexual content, language and drug references.

THE EYE

Blind since childhood, Sydney Wells (Jessica Alba) regains her sight after a double corneal transplant.

But her happiness is short-lived as unexplainable images start to haunt her, and she becomes convinced that her anonymous eye donor has somehow opened the door to a terrifying world only she can now see.

The Eye is rated PG-13 for violence, terror and disturbing content.

RAMBO

John Rambo (Sylvester Stallone) has retreated to northern Thailand to live a peaceful life in the mountains.

When a group of human rights missionaries ask him to guide them into Burma to deliver medical supplies and then are captured by the Burmese army, Rambo decides to venture alone into the war zone to rescue them.

Rambo is rated R for violence, sexual assaults, grisly images and language.

MEET THE SPARTANS

This spoof satirizes action movies like 300 and You Got Served.

Meet the Spartans stars Sean Maguire, Carmen Electra, Kevin Sorbo and Ken Davitian.

Meet the Spartans is rated PG-13 for sexual content, language and violence.

27 DRESSES

Idealistic and selfless, Jane (Katherine Heigl) makes a perfect bridesmaid, but her own happy ending is nowhere in sight. When her sister Tess captures the heart of Jane's boss (James Marsden), with whom she is secretly in love, Jane begins to reexamine her lifestyle.

27 Dresses is rated PG-13 for language, innuendo and sexuality.

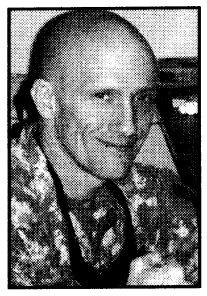
Tales from the Crib

"Tales from the Crib" is our attempt to instill hope in the hearts of the game deficient in the military. Stripes GAMER gives you an excellent chance to win games, swag, online training, and occasionally some bigger prize in the shape of hardware. Your tales of game-less woe will reverberate around the world – we'll post them online.

We pick new winners every two months. And we've given away hundreds of games and dozens of one-of-a-kind swag items. So, share your pain and tell us know how badly you need game stuff.



Thanks to Game Institute, one of you would-be game developers will get a free training package worth $1,300.

Gamers win because they keep on playing! Visit online at http://talesfromthecrib.stripes.osd.mil and tell us where it hurts!

Greetings Fan-Troops!

From snowflakes, to hearts and shamrocks, Stripes GAMER is back for 2008. Thanks to you and your button-mashing digits, we look forward to another year of serving the most excellent gamers in the stratosphere. GAMER has a lot in store in the coming months, and we're counting on you to spread the word. Did someone say "interactivity"?

First things first. This time of year is usually when the industry takes a little breather after the hectic fall/holiday season and developer dudes are busy scheming to come up with the next blockbuster. Not so fast—we've found several notable titles that deserve a closer look.

Among those, the newest release from Disney Interactive, "Turok," caught our attention and GAMER goes one-on-one with minds behind the quasi-paleontological charged futuristic thriller. We know, you're thinking "Disney?" Oh yeah! Although "Turok" unfolds 200 years in the future, the game manages to exploit the most primitive struggle and rawness of the fight for survival—hunter versus hunted.

Since we're all about bigger and badder this year, and in a somewhat primal mood, GAMER also puts its pledge card in for Sega's "The Club" (although, once you're in, there really is only one way out and it ain't pretty). Imagine a new blood sport controlled by a group of insanely wealthy group of influentials who'd rather not dirty their hands but enjoy the thrill of the hunt. Think of the Romans and the Coliseum—what better entertainment for the elite than a good blood-letting?

As always, look for the "win it" symbol above and see what you walk away with this month.

Play safe and work well with others!

Where All the Wiis Went

Nintendo Donates Wiis—Stars and Stripes Puts Them in the Field

Since their introduction in November 2006, Nintendo's Wii game consoles have been notoriously difficult to get, even in the United States.

Overseas at military bases, the systems can sell out even before they hit the shelves. At the same time, Wii started making the news for its potential as a tool in the rehabilitation of various injuries. One of those stories was first investigated by Stars and Stripes early in June, 2007, reported from Landstuhl Regional Medical Center. Landstuhl is usually the first stop for wounded servicemembers coming out of Iraq or Afghanistan.

In early fall, Nintendo surprised Stripes GAMER with a donation of 10 Wii game consoles, no strings attached. Stars and Stripes decided that at least half of these needed to go overseas, including downrange, and all but a few should go to hospitals.

On November 5, 2007, Stars and Stripes donated a Wii game console to the Warrior in Transition Battalion (WTB), located at the Brooke Army Medical Center in San Antonio, Texas. The battalion provides quality of care for "Warriors in Transition" (active duty and reserve) and their dependents.

Also on the Brooke Army Medical Center campus is the Center for the Intrepid, a $50 million state-of-the-art rehabilitation center for amputees and burn victims that was funded completely through donations. To read Stars and Stripes series online, please visit: Center for the Intrepid.

http://www.stripes.com/article.asp?section=104&article=58139&archive=true

On hand to receive the Wii from Stars and Stripes Acting Publisher Max Lederer were Lt.Col. Myers and Sgt.Maj. Acuña, Commander and Command Sergeant Major respectively, of the Warrior Transition Battalion. Conversation turned to the articles that Stars and Stripes broke about a possible therapeutic use of Wii consoles for members of the military recovering from injuries in Germany.

Copies of these articles were handed out, with Lt.Col. Myers and Sgt.Maj. Acuña showing keen interest. Max Lederer also pointed out that Stripes GAMER, a Stars and Stripes publication for and by members of the military who enjoy gaming as a pastime has opened up doors to interact with manufacturers of gaming equipment and software. Copies of Stripes GAMER were also handed around. Because of Stripes GAMER, Stars and Stripes has established relationships with many of the game industry developers and manufacturers. Part of the presentation included providing information about the Wii and not only its popularity but also about its potential use for rehabilitation from injuries.

Lt.Col. Myers and Sgt.Maj. Acuña said they had ordered, in anticipation of the Wii, a large (60") flat TV screen for the Day Room where they are expecting to house the Wii.

On November 13, 2007, Acting Publisher Max D. Lederer Jr. presented a Wii to Capt. Milinda Benitez and Gy.Sgt. Michael Moseman, USMC, at the National Naval Medical Center in Bethesda, MD.

Capt. Benitez expressed the hope that the Wii would prove useful in part because of its popularity not only with players but also with spectators. She explained that many injuries tend to leave the wounded feeling withdrawn; a game that can draw them out would be preferable to a single-player system that might increase a sense of isolation. She added that, in addition to helping restore function to hands and arms, the Wii could prove helpful in rehabilitating those with traumatic brain injuries (TBIs), usually the result of proximity to violent explosions.

In early December 2007, Stars and Stripes marketing manager for Europe, Matt Bush, traveled with Air Force Lt. Col. Stephen O'Connor, Stars and Stripes commander, first to Balad Air Base in Iraq and then to Camp Victory at Baghdad International Airport, to donate four Wii game consoles. The first three went to the Air Force Theater Hospital at Balad.

Lt. Col. O'Connor presented the game systems on December 7, 2007, saying, "Please accept this donation as a gesture of appreciation for the men and women working and recovering at the Air Force Theater Hospital."

Stars and Stripes Acting Publisher Max Lederer (left) and SGM Richard Acuña, Command Sergeant Major of Brooke Army Medical Center Warrior Transition Battalion, San Antonio, TX, shake hands as Lederer present the Wii game console donated by Nintendo.

Patrick Storms, Air Force Colonel and Hospital Commander, accepted the three Wiis, stating, "We are very proud of our mission and our new facility. Support like this makes things that much better for those in recovery." Col. Storms went on to say that he could envision benefits of these systems, beyond their recreational use.

"The neat thing about these systems is that they actually respond to physical input. That should certainly provide therapeutic benefits to patients in recovery," Col. Storms said.

Not all of Stars and Stripes' donations in Iraq went to medical facilities, however. On December 8, Stars and Stripes donated a Nintendo Wii to MNC-I MWR operations at Camp Victory. This system will then be forwarded on to a worthy, game-deficient forward operating base (FOB) somewhere in theater.

Regarding the donations in Iraq, Marketing Manager Matt Bush said, "Since 1942, the mission of Stars and Stripes has been to positively affect morale by delivering news and information to servicemembers deployed overseas. These donations are an extension of our efforts to keep spirits up while folks are away from those closest to them."

Of the three remaining units from Nintendo's initial donation, two are headed for Landstuhl Regional Medical Center. The last one is slated for donation to Annapolis Naval Academy and that process is underway.

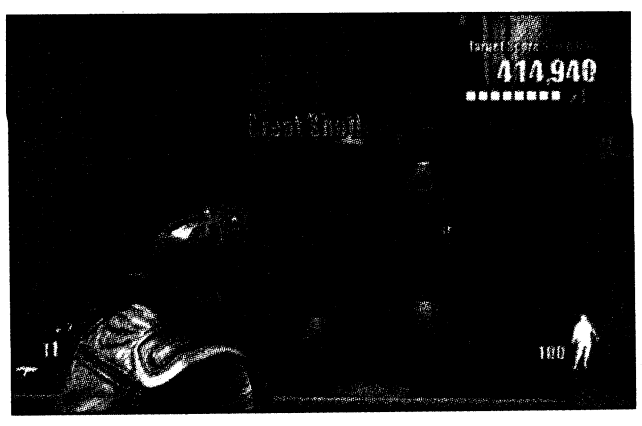
Join THE CLUB
and Shoot Like It's A Race
"The Club" is not your average first-person shooter. In fact, it's not even a first-person shooter—the whole thing takes place from a third-person perspective—but it borrows many elements from more traditional FPS-type affairs. It's a mystery wrapped in an enigma wrapped in a puzzle—all enveloped in one of the most straightforward shooters you've played in ages. Allow us to explain.

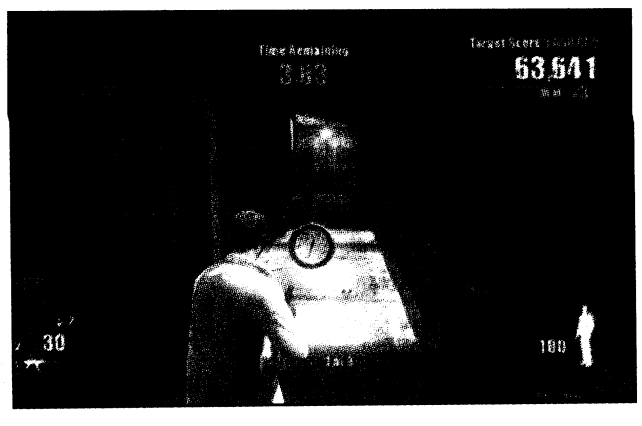
"'The Club' was initially a gameplay-led idea," says Bizarre's Nick Davies. "We wanted to create a shooter that was fun to play over and over again rather than a story-led, 'play through once and forget' type of game. In addition, we wanted something that took some of the classic ideas of scoring and leaderboards and added it into a 'next gen' shooting game."

So, essentially, the team started work on the game without anything resembling a story or any characters. Instead, they focused purely on the gameplay experience—quite the opposite of how the majority of game concepts materialize, but a notion the team wanted to pursue regardless. "It was only when our writer, Gordon Rennie [of "Killzone" and "Rogue Trooper" fame] got involved that we started to create the world and characters that made 'The Club' what it is now," says Davies.

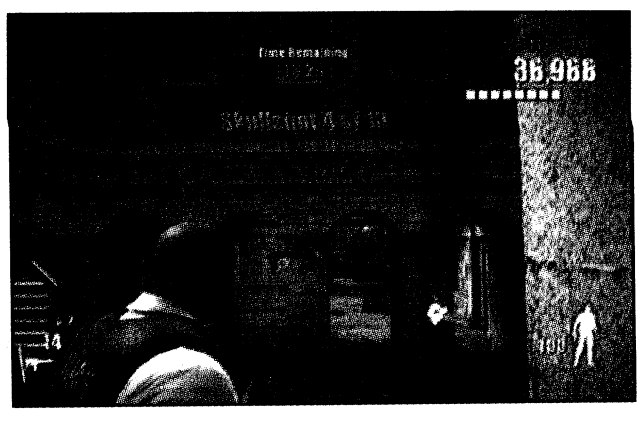
So what, exactly, is the Club now? Well, for one thing it's an altogether free-wheeling affair—that is, without the literal (or, rather, virtual) wheels that developer Bizarre Creations has become so well known for. Remember, these are the guys who have been churning out the "Project Gotham Racing" series—every single one of them, since the days of Sega Dreamcast—and now they're applying much of what they've learned to the gun-tacular shooter genre.



To put it rather directly, players step into the bloody boots of a modern-day cast of killers, forced "to fight for their lives in an underground blood sport controlled by the faceless, obscenely wealthy, influential elite." And that's about as far as the story goes, for now—indeed, this is much more "Counter-Strike" than "Halo 3". More "Space Invaders" than "F.E.A.R." And even, perhaps, more "Project Gotham Racing" than any of the above. By drawing from their experience on the "PGR" series, the team has quite well mastered the notion of "Just one more go."



For one thing, the game places a huge emphasis on style. It's about perfecting your run through a level and changing the way you play to squeeze out more and more score by killing enemies in a different order, or taking that shot from a different angle than you usually do, or perhaps using a metal plate to ricochet bullets to score higher for the kill. Like the "PGR" series (with its "kudos" system), the game rewards the player for much more than sheer speed or brute force. It wants you to play with kill with panache, and that's all part of the fun.



"'The Club' is a shooting game with a racing mentality," says Davies. "I know that may sound weird, but think of it like this: Every enemy in 'The Club' is a corner, and how you take down those enemies is the same as how you take corners in a racing game. It's about killing as quickly and effectively as possible, and it's about exploring the way in which you play the levels and honing your performance through them to attain the best score possible." It's a new take on two of the oldest genres in the medium—shooters and racing games—and it's an exciting prospect for that reason if none other.

"This is a game built up around scoring from the start; the levels are like playing the best bits from an action movie—very short, intense and sweet—and there are huge explosive set pieces and over-the-top effects," says Davies. Even in single-player play, you're comparing your scores to people all over the world; likewise, there's a host of multiplayer game modes that let you to shoot the living daylights out of your friends.

With the exception of some prototypes that didn't make it to become "full games," "The Club" is quite different from anything Davies has worked on before. "Our inspiration has been taken from genres which I don't think you'd expect," he says. "Skate boarding games [think "Tony Hawk's Pro Skater"], old school shooters

Frontlines: Fuel of War

Publisher: THQ
Genre: Shooter
ESRB: Teen
Q2

Not too far in the future, global natural resources are on the brink of depletion. As our economies and our way of life tumble into chaos, the superpowers clash to gain control. Set in a fictional future based upon the headlines of today, "Fuel of War" brings players into the world's next great war.

As society succumbs to a worldwide energy crisis, a new global depression takes hold. Amidst this desperate backdrop, two superpower alliances emerge. Join the battle on the frontlines of tomorrow as the Western Coalition (U.S./E.U.) or the Red Star Alliance (Russia/China). The game sets the stage with each alliance having combined their military research and budgets, and the result is tomorrow's weapons, today: over 60 next-gen vehicles and weapons inspired by military designs for the near future. This includes remote controlled drones, gun cams, and next-generation counter-measures systems, all of which are player-controllable.

The PIXEL

An Exhibition of the Art of the Video Game

"Into the Pixel" is the world's only curated art exhibition that brings together the worlds of traditional fine art and digital art to explore and celebrate the video game. Each year, a jury of world-class museum curators, cutting-edge gallery owners, and interactive entertainment industry experts evaluate and select the art to be featured in the collection, choosing from a field of game art submitted from all over the world. Now in its fourth year, "Into the Pixel" has established itself as the annual opportunity for computer and video game artists to receive critical review of their creative achievements by both peers in the digital art world and renowned fine art experts. The program is a joint effort of the Entertainment Software Association, the Academy of Interactive Arts & Sciences, and the Prints & Drawings Council of LACMA.

and beat-'em-up games, and our own beloved PGR series have all inspired 'The Club'." Oh, and remember the perennially popular "Geometry Wars: Retro Evolved" on Xbox Live Arcade? That was also the work of Bizarre Creations—and may we be so bold as to suggest it was an inspiration as well.

Like the cars in "PGR," each character in "The Club" has a slightly different feel in terms of how they handle certain weapons, both in terms of speed and accuracy. They all have their own back stories—some are involved for financial gain, others out of lack of choice, and still others for sheer, simple, completely insane bloodlust (two of the characters will be locked at the start of the game). Environments range from elegant English manor houses to the backstreets of Venice (Italy, not California), to shipwrecked ocean liners.

Though not apparent at first glance, the graphics are also a bit different than what you're used to. "It's something easier to see from screenshots or from playing the game when you get your hands on it," says Davies. "We started with many different art styles on the table, but in the end we went for the gritty 'film noir' style over all the others. We're well known for making good-looking games like 'PGR4,' and we've transferred those skills across to 'The Club'," he adds. Indeed, the game has a gritty but decidedly "arcade-y" look to it—one befitting its publisher, the legendary arcade manufacturer Sega. "The Club" has style, both inside and out.

But at its core, this is not a game about story. It's not a game about character. It's a game about killing the most dudes in the shortest period of time with the most style. It's got four-player split-screen action, and as many as eight players can go at it online in a range of multiplayer modes.

"The pace of the game is probably the stand out aspect that people pick up on," says Davies. "It's not a game where you creep around corners or use a lot of cover—it's very much an action game, more akin to the kind of action you would get from an Arnie or a Bruce Willis action film: big explosions, loud guns, lots of shooting and a load of fun." Get your ticket early—we recommend sitting somewhere in the first few rows.
