Improved water quality highlights $750 million project

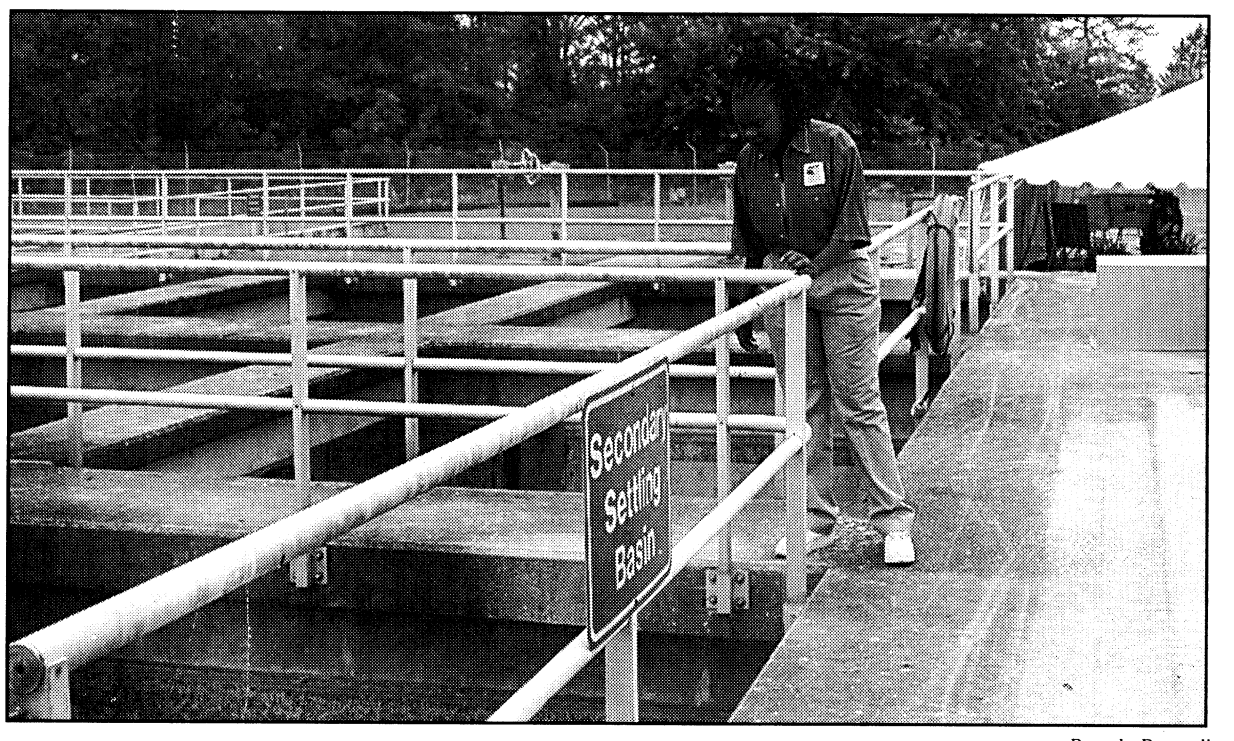
THE BAYONET
Brenda Donnell

Fort Benning and Columbus Water Works officials opened a new pumping station on Dixie Road May 29, part of a $750 million project to meet the demands of a larger population created by the 2005 Base Realignment and Closure Commission reorganization.

Col. Keith Lovejoy, garrison commander, said planned construction projects for BRAC require the infrastructure to be in place, including utilities such as water.

Columbus Water Works has provided water services to the post since 2004 and established operating procedures for quick response to emergencies, improving the reliability of the water and wastewater systems and repairing and replacing pipes.

"I couldn't be any happier with the relationship we have with Columbus Water Works, right now," Lovejoy said. "We work closely together, and if we have any issues, we talk about it."



The 50-year water project provides higher quality drinking water, a more sustainable source of water from the Chattahoochee River, more consistent water pressure and more reliable, sustainable wastewater conveyance and treatment, said Columbus Water Works officials.

Previously, the water on Fort Benning came from Upatoi Creek, and the water quality was not as good, said Don Allen, Jordan, Jones and Goulding, Inc. president and CEO. The wastewater plant, built in the 1940s, was at the end of its useful life, and the distribution system wasn't operating efficiently.

This project solved all of the issues, providing better tasting water, stable pressure and reliability, he said.

Brenda Donnell

Latoya Moore, Columbus Water Works purchasing inventory specialist, looks into an old, unused settling basin May 29 at the Fort Benning treatment plant after the grand opening of a new pumping station. Through a $750 million, 50-year contract, Columbus Water Works now provides drinking water and waste water conveyance and treatment for post residents.

Hostage negotiation training prepares agents in case of crisis

THE BAYONET
Cheryl Rodewig

Fort Benning has three more trained hostage negotiators after the hostage negotiation course May 19-23 at the old minimall on Main Post.

The course began with classes on negotiation methods, teamwork and personality disorders and ended with a staged hostage situation, which students responded to as a real threat.

"Fort Benning will be ready," said instructor Deborah McMahon, who teaches the course nationwide using scenarios based on actual hostage cases.

Minor details are changed, but much is kept the same to increase the authenticity of the situation.

Since the scenario was based on real circumstances, the story, suspect and other aspects were very complex, said Timothy Parker, a criminal investigator with the 86th Military Police Detachment.

Parker and two other criminal investigators graduated from the course May 23 along with 26 students from various agencies, including local police departments and the FBI.

An installation is required to have at least one trained negotiator, but more is better, said Maj. Brian Heverly, operations officer for the Criminal Investigation Division Battalion. A tactical team, called in the event of a hostage crisis, is made up of four or five individuals.

Although only the primary (the person on the phone with the hostage taker) has to be certified, a well-trained team is the most effective.

Since the training seminar was held here, Soldiers had the opportunity to work with local law enforcement agencies, as they might in a real crisis situation, Heverly said.

It's also helpful to have recently trained negotiators in case of multiple incidents or an off-post situation involving military personnel, he said.

The staged hostage crisis used for the course centered around a Soldier's husband named Billy Wells, played by a special agent, who had told the MPs that his house was wired with explosives. Students struggled to get information from Wells while responding to his demands and trying to keep him calm.

"It was a bit stressful, surprisingly, even knowing it was an exercise," Parker said. "These situations are going to be very taxing mentally and physically."

Some incidents can last for several hours, Parker said. The training situation he dealt with lasted for five hours, but no matter how long it takes, the important thing is achieving a peaceful resolution.

"Nobody gets hurt: that's our goal," he said.

Soldier: One of oldest to graduate Airborne school

encourage other NCOs to volunteer also, but when none did, he kept his hand up. Mendoza was skeptical.

"He said, 'Are you sure?' I said yes, and he said, 'Then we're going to make it happen.' That was just the beginning," Mercado said.

At the advice of Mendoza, Mercado doubled up on his training for the physical fitness exam, which would be administered the first day of Airborne School.

"I did double the amount because I didn't know what to expect," Mercado said. That included 125 pushups a day every other day for four weeks and running five miles three times a week and two miles twice a week.

Mercado said he runs to clear his mind. He completed the two-mile test run for Airborne in 15 minutes and 15 seconds.

"I just took it one day at a time," Mercado said of the three-week course. "It is something that you have to dig deep down for. You can come here and be in good condition, but it's a training that is totally different from other physical fitness training in the Army. Parachute training has to be different because it involves a lot of stamina. It involves looking inside yourself not only physically but mentally. It is something that you have to pull out of your gut and when you think you can't go forward anymore you continue to go forward.

"There is no such thing here as 'I can't.' That does not exist. It's 'I can' and 'I will.'"

Mercado said the only thing that could have stopped him from graduating was himself.

"My age to me wasn't a factor," he said. "The only factor that I kept thinking about was fear, and if I could conquer the fear I could conquer anything."

According to regulations, Mercado said, he only has six more years, but he plans to spend as long as he can in the Army fulfilling his mission.

Teacher: Talks about award, philosophy, goals

"Being a teacher is so powerful," she said. "What you say to children they remember the rest of their lives. It has become the most important thing I do to make sure what I say is honest, supportive and encouraging and never — ever — discouraging, negative or harmful."

Although Del Gobbo teaches art, her goal is not to make her children draw or paint better but to think better.

"I feel my job is to take students, wherever they are in their development, and just sort of scoot them a little bit farther along, not to make them into artists. I'm much more concerned that they are good thinkers."

Del Gobbo said what she teaches extends beyond an art lesson, whether it's the use of measurements, comparing and contrasting items or just interacting with peers.

About 400 students, pre-kindergarten through fifth grade, pass through her doors every year.

"When you have that many children pass through the school, you touch a lot of lives," she said. "You come in and you do your job, and you do the best job you can. And all you can do is just pray that you have touched somebody along the line and helped them go in the right direction."

Although few former students come back to the school after they move away, when someone does "it can carry you for many years," Del Gobbo said.

She remembers one young man, now in the Army, who visited a few years ago.

"He didn't talk about the wonderful things I had said or the way I had changed his life, but he did say he has the clay sculptures that he made in third and fourth grade," Del Gobbo said.

For Del Gobbo, that was enough.

"I think one of the most important things about any art class is that every child leaves the room feeling absolutely thrilled with what they have in their hands," she said.

When she hears that students are mailing their artwork to parents in Iraq or Afghanistan, Del Gobbo knows she has reached her goal of teaching confidence and success. And that matters more than an award.

"If they're proud enough of what they do to share that with a deployed parent, that's sort of the highest honor there is," she said.

Del Gobbo will go on to compete with the Department of Defense Education Activity schools worldwide for Teacher of the Year this September.

Manny joins 500 club

Boston Red Sox outfielder Manny Ramirez hit his 500th home run May 31 at Camden Yards in Baltimore, Md. Ramirez is the 24th player in Major League Baseball history to do so. He hit the dinger off right-hander Chad Bradford.

Along with joining the 500 club, Ramirez has the distinction of being fourth in career batting average, with a .312, behind only Ted Williams, Babe Ruth and Jimmie Foxx.

French Open finals

Though it doesn't have the appeal of the U.S. Open or Wimbledon, the French Open concludes this weekend. The women's final will be shown live at 9 a.m. Saturday and the men's final at 9 a.m. Sunday. Both finals will broadcast on NBC.

Rivalry revisited

Meeting for the 12th time, the Boston Celtics will take on the Los Angeles Lakers in the NBA finals that began Wednesday. Game two will broadcast at 8:30 p.m. Sunday, game three at 8:30 p.m. Tuesday and game four at 8:30 p.m. Thursday. All games will be on ABC.

College baseball regionals begin

ESPN, ESPN2 and ESPNU will broadcast the men's NCAA baseball world series beginning today. Game one of four super regionals begins today at noon on ESPN and continues throughout the day. Game one of four more super regionals begins at noon Saturday and also continues through the day.

Busch wins yet again

Kyle Busch won his fourth race of the season in the Best Buy 400 at Dover International Speedway June 1. He seems to be unbeatable since his switch from Hendrick Motorsports to Joe Gibbs Racing during the offseason.

Busch plans to run in the Craftsman Truck Series at Texas Motor Speedway tonight, the Nationwide Series Saturday night in Nashville, Tenn., and the Sprint Cup race at Pocono Sunday.

The Sprint Cup Series will race at Pocono Raceway in the Pocono 500 at 1:15 p.m. Sunday. Don't forget, coverage has now moved to TNT for the next six races.

Owens gets new contract

Wide receiver Terrell Owens inked a new contract with the Dallas Cowboys Monday, making him one of the highest paid wide receivers in the NFL. The four-year contract is worth $34 million.

He will receive $12.9 million just to sign, with $13 million guaranteed.

Owens led the NFC in the last two seasons with 28 touchdown receptions.

Reverse Sprint Triathlon Saturday

THE BAYONET
Mitchell Thomas IV

The Reverse Sprint Triathlon will kick off Saturday at 8 a.m. at the Main Post Bowling Center. The three-event race consists of a 5K run, a 20K bike ride, and a 550-meter swim.

Although there were only 75 participants registered Monday, Lori Smith, the fitness director for Family and Morale, Welfare and Recreation said she is anticipating the numbers to double.

Smith said racers should focus on heavy fluid intake before the event. Water stations will be available throughout the race.

There are six individual divisions and four team categories.

José Solis Jr., a member of the Solis Warriors team, which finished first in the family division and third overall last year, said his team has been more focused on training this year.

The team, consisting of Solis Jr., his sister, Loraine, and his father Maj. José Solis Sr., will have a new addition this year. Capt. Victor Torres will replace Jose Sr., who is deployed in Iraq.

Participants can register until 8 p.m. today at El Zapata restaurant on post. The cost is $20 for individuals and $30 for teams. Participants can also register on the day of the race in the bowling center parking lot from 6:30 to 7:30 a.m. The cost on race day is $25 for individuals and $35 for teams.

For more information, call Smith at 706-545-4300.

Jacob Stimson smacks a base hit during game one of the WTC-11th Engineers preseason softball championship. WTC won the tournament after beating the Engineers 15-5 in game two.

THE BAYONET

The Warrior Training Center defeated the Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 11th Engineer Battalion, 15-5, in the second of two championship games Monday at Gowdy Field. The Engineers played two elimination games before facing WTC in the championship.

In the first inning, WTC led 1-0 as both teams' defense limited hits.

The Engineers' Brett Bridges brought home a runner in the third, with a sacrifice fly. In the bottom of the inning, WTC's Paul Smith loaded the bases with a single into the gap, and William Paul followed with a line scoring two runs. WTC finished the inning scoring five runs.

In the sixth, the Engineers scored three more runs to take their first lead.

The Engineers continued their momentum in the seventh bringing in two more runs. In the bottom of the inning, they retired WTC after Paul Owen made a diving catch, robbing a potential base hit for the final out. The Engineers, who were playing out of the losers bracket, won the game 14-9, forcing a second and deciding game.

Gas prices are high, fun isn't far

Catfish games can be low cost, close to home

BAYONET CORRESPONDENT
Erin A. Nash

With the price of a gallon of gas going up seemingly every day, many families are looking for fun and cheap outings.

I've found a great time for everyone, and it's easy on the wallet and just a short drive from anywhere in the general vicinity of Columbus.

My husband, my son and I attended a Columbus Catfish game Saturday night at Golden Park in Columbus. The Catfish are a Class A affiliate of Major League Baseball's Tampa Bay Rays.

My son is 8 years old and plays baseball through Child and Youth Services. He watches the Boston Red Sox with us every night in our living room, but I wanted him to get a taste of live action.

We were greeted pleasantly at the ticket office and were able to ask for seats where we wanted them. The best part is that our field box tickets were only $3.50 a piece, since military ID cardholders are given a 50 percent discount.

We bought a program and then bought soft pretzels and three drinks. All together, it cost more than our tickets, but it's still cheaper than any major league ballpark prices.

The promotion of the night was a free thermal mug to the first 500 in attendance. I love anything free, but once I sat down and started looking at my mug, realized it was probably a promotion left over from last season, since the 2007 schedule was printed on it. Inside was a coupon for a local chain restaurant, but it had expired last June.

I'm probably one of the few who noticed this, and since it was free, I'm not going to complain. The mugs have already been put to good use in the Nash household.

All the seats have a great view in Golden Park, and sitting alongside the visitors' dugout was awesome. My son brought his baseball glove, hoping to snag a foul ball. He didn't, but toward the end of the game (the Catfish lost to the Greenville Drive) a pitcher in the dugout whistled to my son and tossed him a ball. I could see my son's eyes light up in gratitude.

That made the whole night worth it, seeing the joy my son got from a simple baseball.

For some reason, I always seem to have a Sharpie marker in my purse, so I dug it out and gave it to my son, who had hopes of getting an autograph from any of the players. His patience paid off at the end of the game, when an outfielder signed it for him. He even chose to try to get an autograph instead of running the bases, which kids can do after every game on Saturdays and Sundays.

The Catfish have beautiful grounds and have some sort of entertainment between innings, including sumo wrestling and a chance to win a pizza from Domino's.

The Catfish also have really great promotions, including Military Appreciation Night June 14, and Father's Day June 15, where fathers and their children can play catch in the outfield after the game.

June 21 includes bobblehead night and Bark in the Park, where you can take your dog to enjoy some baseball.

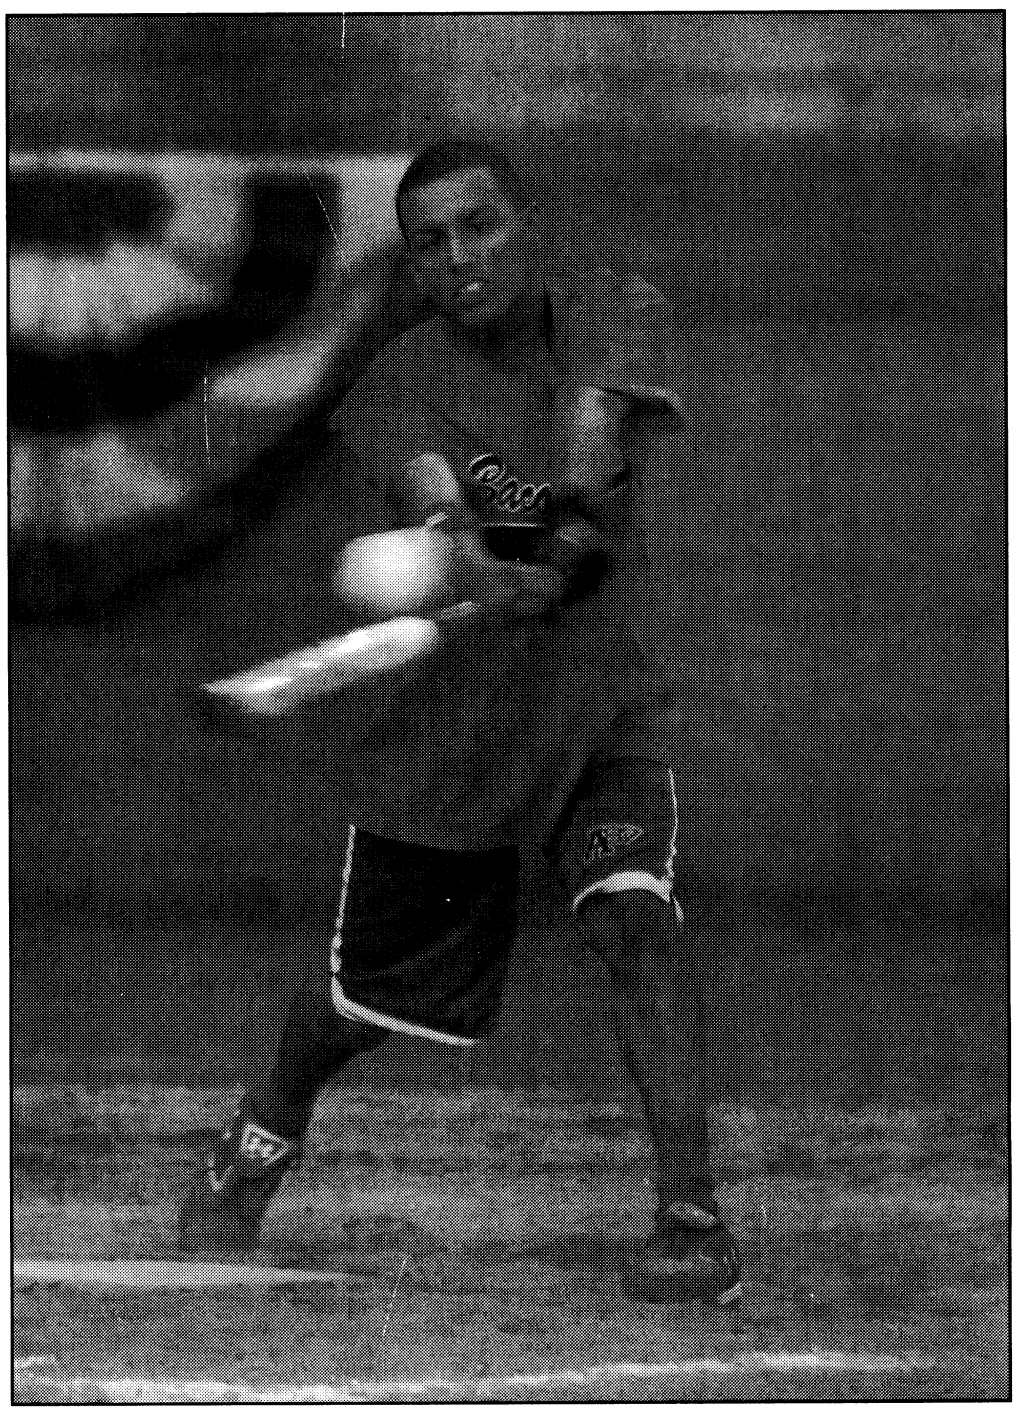
Shooter wins gold in Milan

Medalist will represent U.S. in Beijing

USA SHOOTING
Mary Beth Vorwerk

On the final day of competition at the 2008 ISSF Rifle/Pistol World Cup in Milan, Italy, 2004 Olympic gold medalist Matt Emmons took home the bronze medal in the Men's 50 Meter Prone Rifle event.

Emmons, who will represent the U.S. on the 2008 Olympic team in Beijing in both Prone Rifle and 3-Position Rifle, claimed the bronze after a close struggle against his 2008 U.S. Olympic teammate Maj. Michael E. Anti of the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit of Fort Benning, Ga., a three-time Olympian and the 2004 silver medalist in 3-Position.



Emmons and Anti both entered the final with a qualification score of 595, and had very strong performances, but Emmons closed the final with two shots of 10.8 and 10.4 points, finishing in third place with a final score of 103.8 and an overall score of 698.8 points.

"I am quite satisfied (with) my performances here in Milan," said Emmons right before lining up for the final match. "I made it into the three rifle finals, I am there, so that's a good indicator in this moment."

Anti finished in fifth place with a final score of 103.0 and a total score of 698.0, right behind Jury Sukhorukov of Ukraine, who took fourth place with a total of 698.1 points.

Denmark's Torben Grimmel won today's 50 Meter Rifle Prone event, shooting the highest overall score of 701.3 points. Toshikazu Yamashita of Japan followed him in second with 699.3 points.

11th Engineers' Andrew Bracero belts out one of his base hits during the second inning of championship game one. Bracero scored three runs in the game.

During the second inning, Todd Toomey scored one of WTC's five runs with a homer over the fence. WTC held the Engineers scoreless in the inning.

Owen was brought home with a base hit to score the Engineers' first point of the game.

In the fourth, WTC scored three more runs, giving them an 8-1 advantage.

In the final inning, WTC punished the notably fatigued Engineers. WTC's coach Mathew Graham scored after hitting a triple down the line.

Graham scored two runs and hit two triples in the second game. WTC finished the seventh posting seven more runs to make the score 15-2.

"We had been hitting in every game of the preseason until the first game of this championship," Graham said. "We knew we had to change that."

With one last chance in the bottom of the seventh, the Engineers brought in three runs with only one out.

The Engineers' pitcher Chris Atkinson gambled and was tagged out trying to steal second base. Graham fielded the final out to finish the game.

"(WTC) got the sticks going in the second game," Atkinson said. "We made some key errors and they made a lot of great plays. They just played better than us."

The intramural softball regular season began Tuesday. Games will be played at Gowdy and Knappenberger Field.

FORT BENNING'S ANNUAL REVERSE SPRINT TRIATHLON
8 A.M. SATURDAY AT THE MAIN POST BOWLING CENTER

Soldier finds success in boxing ring

THE BAYONET
Mitchell Thomas IV

Staff Sgt. Kevin Smith said he grew up fighting to survive. For the last 18 years, he's fought for pride.

Smith, an instructor at Fort Benning's Combatives School, is hoping to make his professional boxing debut next year.

"Boxing has taught me a lot of what I know about myself," Smith said. "I love to fight, and boxing allows me to fight in a positive way."

He has won gold medals in the All-Army and All-Armed Forces championships and was a quarter finalist in the USA Nationals as an amateur welterweight ranked No. 11 in the nation.

Smith has been around boxing his entire life. He learned to fight while living with his uncle, Anthony Mallard, who was a professional fighter in the '80s.

"Being around my uncle, I had to learn to stick up for myself," Smith said. "If I went running from a fight, I'd get a whooping from him. I had to have a fighter's mentality."

Raised in the projects of Dallas, he was faced with the harsh realities of the streets on a daily basis. Smith was a temperamental kid who resorted to fighting as a means to solve conflict.

"I was never a troublemaker, but it didn't take much to make me mad," Smith said. "I'm not a big talker. It didn't matter if it was one or two guys, I'm the type to hit first and ask questions later."

Smith learned to channel his aggressions at the local Boys Club where he had his first organized fights.

Smith's gained a reputation on the football field in high school. He was the star receiver and cornerback on his high school team and earned a scholarship to the University of Houston. But Smith lost his scholarship and ended up at a junior college.

"I never was into school all that much, but after losing my scholarship, I knew after that, I had to do something."

In 1993, Smith enlisted in the Army and was first assigned in Germany. It wasn't long before his company got wind of his quick fists.

"I was barely able to put down my duffle bag before I was put in a van and shipped off to box," Smith said.

Over the next three years, Smith faced opponents in various countries, including Germany, England and Czechoslovakia. In 1996, while stationed at Fort Hood, Texas, he won the San Antonio Golden Gloves Championship and was runner up in the Texas Gloves Championships in Waco.

In 2001, he had his best year as an amateur winning the All-Army, All-Armed Forces and competing in the USA Nationals. Later that year, he moved from Fort Bragg to Fort Benning.

But in 2003, his career was on hold again after being deployed to Iraq. After returning nine months later, he was deployed again in 2005 and was injured after a vehicle-born IED exploded lodging shrapnel in his back.

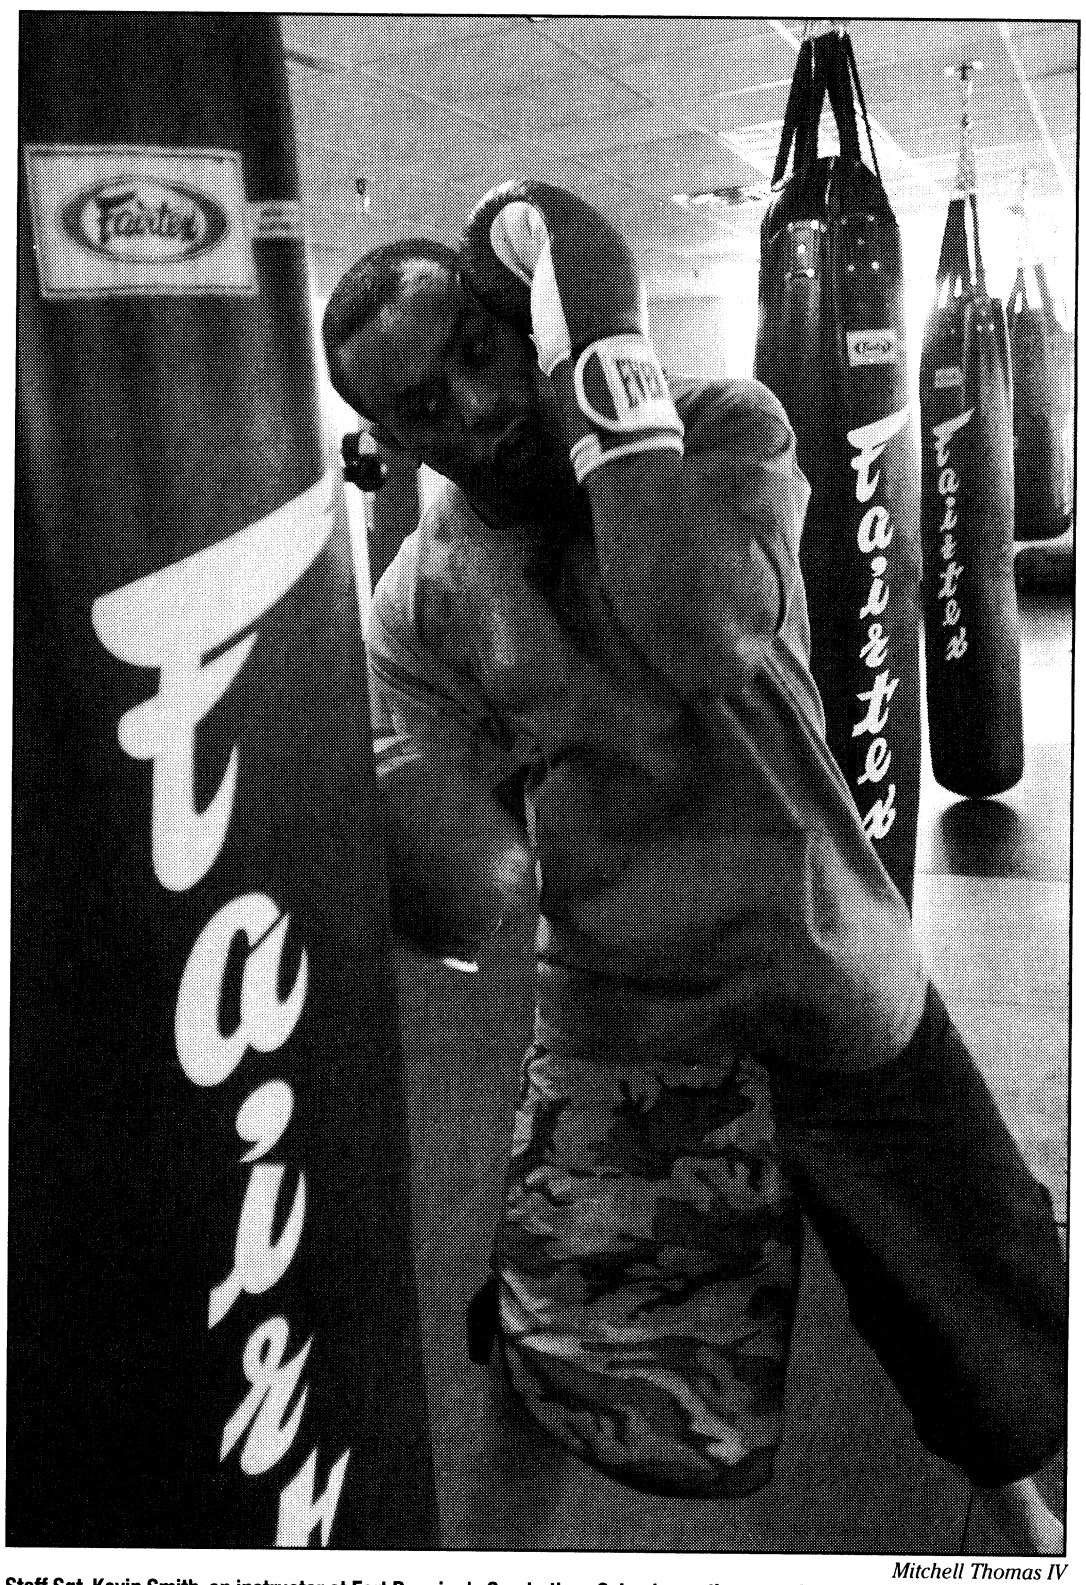
After returning to Fort Benning, he began his boxing training again at Blazers Gym in Columbus. Master Sgt. Lewis Fletcher, NCOIC of the Combatives School, learned of Smith's talent and recruited him into the combatives program three months ago.

"He has professionalism and tenacity," Fletcher said. "In order to be a great fighter, you have to have heart, and he has it. His level is so high, and he's completely focused on the task to seek and destroy his opponent."

Smith said being a Soldier has helped him in the ring and on the mat.

"Boxing taught me discipline, and I became an even more disciplined boxer after I became a Soldier," Smith said. "Boxing and the military have helped me control my temper and channel my energy inside the ring instead of outside."

Fletcher is currently scouting promotion for Smith's pro debut.

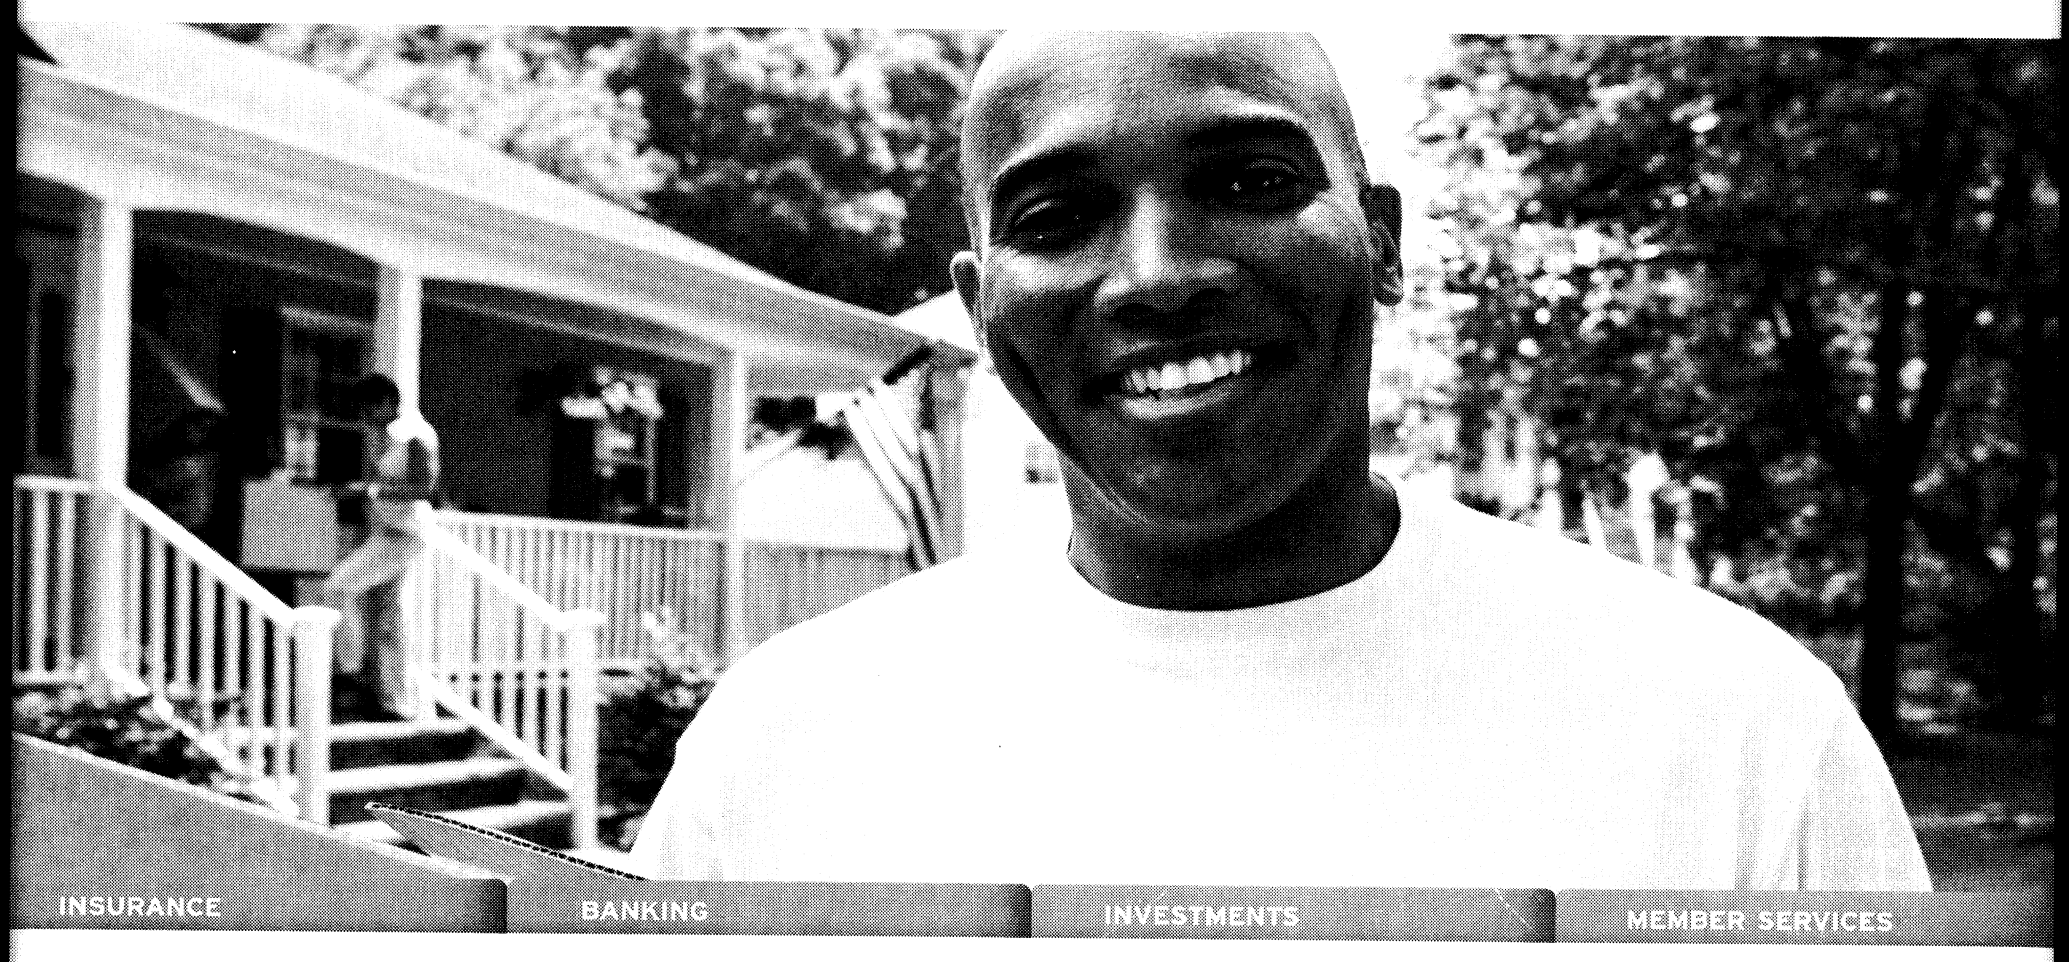


At 36, Smith, the father of two, understands the difficulty of turning pro, but said he is equipped to meet the challenge.

"I never took a lot of punishment as a fighter, and when I spar, I can hang with the best of them, even the pros here on post," Smith said. "The younger opponents may have speed, but my experience is what will carry me."

Smith's main motivation for turning pro is to make his 4-year-old son, Kevin Jr., proud.

"Going pro is my dream, but I just want my son to grow up knowing that his father did something special," Smith said.



"Although he's too young to know it now, I want him to be proud of what I've done."

FIT FACTS

MWR FITNESS DIRECTOR
Lori Smith

This week's topic is blood pressure, an issue that we hear all the time, but may not quite understand.

What is it? What does it mean to have high or low blood pressure? How do I know what my blood pressure is? How do I make sure my blood pressure is in a good range?

First — a general overview of blood pressure. Everybody has and needs blood pressure. Without it, blood can't circulate through the body. And without blood, organs can't get the oxygen and food they need to work.

So it's important to know about blood pressure and how to keep it within a healthy level.

Normal blood pressure falls within a range; it's not one set of numbers. When the heart beats, it pumps blood to the arteries and creates pressure in them. This pressure results from two forces.

The first force is created as blood pumps into the arteries and through the circulatory system: systolic pressure. The second is created as the arteries resist the blood flow: diastolic pressure.

If you're healthy, your arteries are muscular and elastic. They stretch when your heart pumps blood through them. How much they stretch depends on how much force the blood exerts.

In general, most hearts beat about 60 to 80 times a minute. Your blood pressure rises with each heartbeat and falls when your heart relaxes between beats.

Your blood pressure can change from minute to minute based on your environment and what's happening (like when the boss is yelling at you), but it should normally be less than 120 (systolic)/80 (diastolic) mm Hg (millimeters of mercury) for an adult.

Now I know what you're asking — how do I find out what my blood pressure is?

A blood pressure test is quick and painless. It can be done in a doctor's office, fitness center, pharmacy or at home with your own equipment.

Blood pressure is measured using a medical instrument called a sphygmomanometer. If you ever see me, never ask me how to pronounce that.

Basically a rubber cuff is wrapped around your upper arm and inflated. When the cuff is inflated, it compresses a large artery in your arm, momentarily stopping the blood flow.

Next, air in the cuff is released, and the person measuring the blood pressure listens with a stethoscope.

When the blood starts to pulse through the artery, it makes a sound. Sounds continue to be heard until pressure in the artery exceeds the pressure in the cuff.

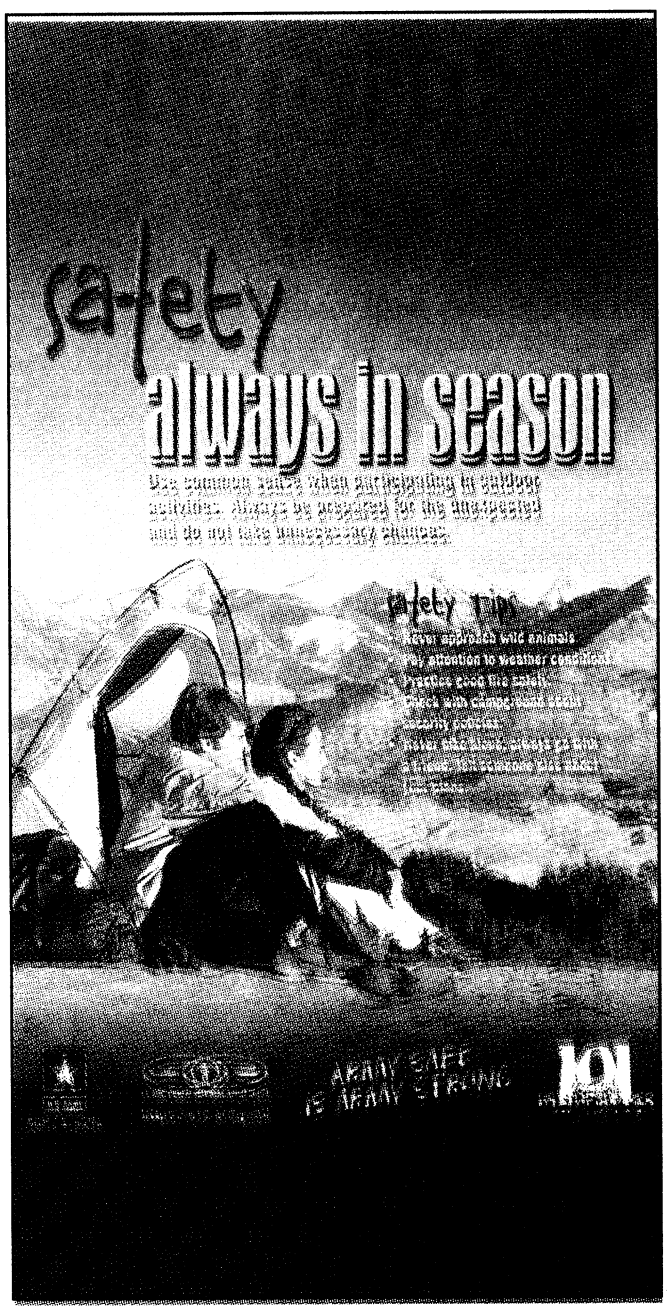
The person listens and watches the gauge, then records two measurements.

Systolic pressure is the pressure of the blood flow when the heart beats (the pressure when the first sound is heard).

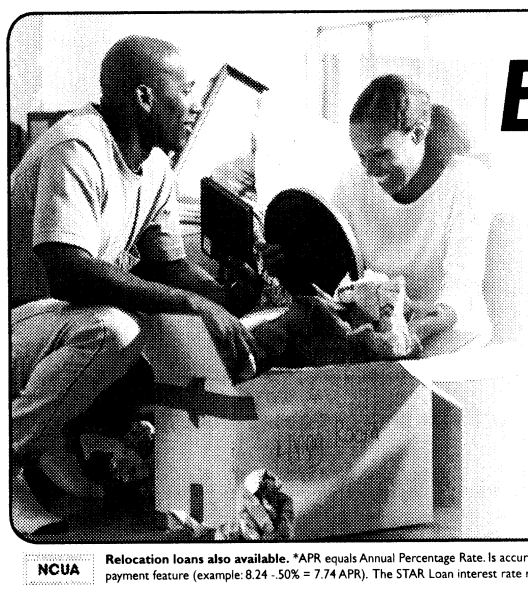
Diastolic pressure is the pressure between heartbeats (the pressure when the last sound is heard).

Blood pressure is measured in millimeters of mercury, which is abbreviated as mm Hg. Recommended blood pressure is typically when the systolic pressure is less than 120 and the diastolic pressure is less than 80.

It's best to have a professional take your blood pressure and explain when you fall in the recommended blood pressure levels.



Once you find your blood pressure, it's important to keep it in a good range. High blood pressure is a lifelong disease. It can usually be controlled but not cured.



Follow the tips below and by doing this, and controlling your blood pressure, you will lower your risk of illnesses like stroke, heart attack, heart failure and kidney disease. These tips are simple, and I know you have heard them from me before:

- Reduce the fat (particularly saturated fat) and salt in your diet.
- Lose weight and get regular physical activity.
- Quit smoking.

Well — I hope you guys found this helpful and able to keep you on that path of a healthy and happy lifestyle. Keep reading for more healthy tips.

By the way, I finished my first triathlon and wow — what a great experience. Next week I am going to write about that, so don't miss it.

Fishermen 'fly' at Callaway

Micthell Thomas IV

Eric Cook tries to perfect his motion during one of the Fly Fishing Federation's Southeastern Conclave's casting workshops. Cook has been fly fishing for 30 years.

'Casting isn't as easy as it looks'

THE BAYONET
Mitchell Thomas IV

Callaway Gardens hosted the 18th annual Fly Fishing Federation Southeastern Conclave May 30-31.

Fly-fishing experts, including 13-time World Casting Champion Steve Rajeff, taught more than 300 beginners and experienced casters a variety of casting and fishing techniques.

"Casting isn't as easy as it looks," said Ronnie Skinner, a fly fishing beginner from Cartersville, Ga.

Retired Chief Warrant Officer Roy Olinger, a fly fishing instructor at Callaway for the past eight years, said fly fishermen use a weighted line, which helps cast the line more accurately, while a conventional fisherman uses weighted lures.

Eric Cook, a fly fisherman with 30 years of experience, said he enjoys the challenges of the sport.

"There's a lot of technique involved, and you have to think about what you're doing," Cook said. "You have to pay attention to detail. It's a more enjoyable way to fish when you learn the intricacies involved in it."

Retired Chief Warrant Officer Ken Griffin and a group of volunteer instructors conduct fly fishing demonstrations for children during the monthly Family Fishing Night at Russ Pond and Pool.

He is also the founder of Fly Fishing for Vets, an organization that sponsors free fly fishing excursions for wounded Soldiers and their families.

For more information on Family Fishing Nights and Fly Fishing for Vets, call Darlene Hines at 706-545-9636.

Border Patrol
Protect America...and secure your future.

Are you interested in a job with wide-open spaces and opportunities to match?

As a Border Patrol Agent, your primary focus would be to work in tandem with your U.S. Customs and Border Protection partners to prevent terrorists and terrorist weapons from entering the United States. Border Patrol Agents also detect and prevent the smuggling and unlawful entry of undocumented aliens into the United States, and apprehend those people found to be in violation of the immigration laws. Also, due to the increase in drug smuggling operations, the Border Patrol is the primary drug-interdicting agency along the land border between the ports of entry.

We are looking for physically fit men and women who want the ever-changing missions we offer and have the intelligence and courage to handle the responsibility. If this is you, then accept the challenge!

Summer safety

Rachel L. Watkins

Marlona Batea, 7, relaxes in the Smith Fitness Center swimming pool. "I'm going to spend most of my time at the pool this summer," she said.

Safe Kids to host safety events

THE BAYONET
Rachel L. Watkins

Summer has arrived and for children, that may mean spending more time outside. "Whether it's boating, swimming, or biking, the kids should practice safety," said Christy Hubbard, director of Safe Kids, Columbus.

Safe Kids will have a bike rodeo, life jacket giveaway and a water safety program for children ages 4 to 14 and their parents.

The bike rodeo is from noon to 3 p.m. Saturday at the Columbus Library on Macon Road. It will include free helmets on a first-come, first-served basis, helmet fittings, a safety obstacle course and a bike tune-up area.

There will be a life jacket giveaway from 5 to 7 p.m. June 13 at the Lake Oliver Marina and another one from noon to 2 p.m. June 14 at Lake Harding at the Department of Natural Resources boat ramp. Attendees can get a life jacket fitting and water safety information including emergency procedures while boating. The giveaway is on a first-come, first-served basis.

USO to open June 14

THE BAYONET
Cheryl Rodewig

A United Service Organizations center will open in Columbus June 14. Located at 3662 Victory Drive, the USO will be available for service members and their families.

The center will include a meeting area, a lounge with a flat screen TV, a fully equipped kitchen and a computer lab, said Reggie Richards, general manager of the Suburban Extended Stay Hotel, which adjoins to the USO.

Free coffee, snacks and phone cards will also be available for visitors. During office hours, staff members can answer questions, give directions or provide resources like maps and travel guides.

The USO's motto, "Until they all come home," will be honored in true red, white and blue spirit at this USO Columbus, Richards said.

"When they walk in the doors, they will be greeted with those special welcome home faces," she said. "We want them to feel like they have come home, even if it's only for a few hours."

The grand opening next week will feature live music, barbecue for the troops, free food and tours of the new USO. During the ceremony, Maj. Gen. Walter Wojdakowski, Fort Benning's commanding general, as well as other guests, will speak. A historic marker for Victory Drive will be unveiled at the end of the ceremony.

Victory Drive was named to honor the U.S. military victory in World War II, so this marker underscores the close ties between the installation and the city, Richards said.

The festivities are scheduled for June 14, she said, since that is Flag Day and the anniversary of the Army.

For more information about the USO or the opening event, call Richards at 706-325-9111.

Fallen Soldier awarded citizenship

3RD HBCT PUBLIC AFFAIRS
Spc. Ben Hutto

Sgt. Dayne Dhanoolal, who was killed by an improvised explosive device during a route clearing operation east of Baghdad in March, was awarded U.S. citizenship during a ceremony at the 2nd Battalion, 69th Armor Regiment's headquarters May 28. Originally from Trinidad, Dhanoolal worked to become a U.S. citizen before and during his deployment.

"It was really important," said Dhanoolal's wife, Kynesha. "This is something my husband had been working on for a while. It takes a long time to get your citizenship, and I'm glad that it's finally happening."

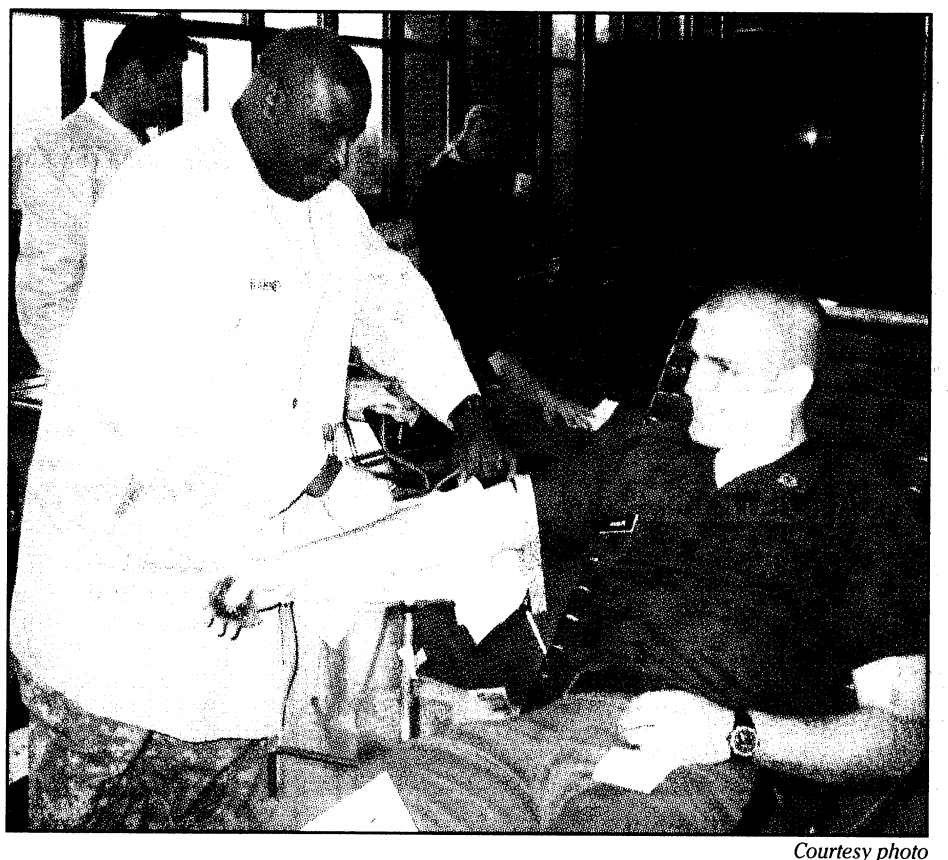
Kynesha accepted the plaque from Denise Frazier, the district director of the Department of Homeland Security's U.S. Citizenship and Immigrations Services, on her late husband's behalf.

"It is important we recognize the bravery and sacrifice of this individual," Frazier said. "What better way to recognize that than to give him our ultimate honor as a nation, citizenship?"

Frazier said service members are receiving top priority for their citizenship before deploying in the nation's defense.

Post needs blood donations

THE BAYONET
Brenda Donnell



Fort Benning's Blood Donor Center staff hopes to bring awareness about the need for safe blood worldwide to the Fort Benning community June 12 as they celebrate World Blood Donor Day.

They will host a blood drive from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. and give away T-shirts, coffee mugs and coupons for free meals at the Sand Hill China Wok, said Guy Harrigan, Blood Donor Center recruiter.

Capt. Harry McDonald, Center director, said World Blood Donor Day is a good opportunity for people to give blood and understand the need for donations.

About one in 10 patients need blood for treatment of accidents, cancer or surgery, but only 10 percent of eligible U.S. citizens donate annually, according to the Association of Donor Recruitment Professionals and the American Association of Blood Banks.

Patients' needs vary, McDonald said. Some patients may require as many as 60 units of blood, so one or two blood drives may serve only one person. Another patient may only need a few units of blood.

At the same time, one unit of blood can be used in many ways, McDonald said. Depending on patients' illnesses or injuries, one person's donation can help multiple patients, because each unit is broken into three components — plasma, red blood cells and cryoprecipitate.

The post blood center opened in February on Sand Hill and is currently in a temporary building behind the China Wok. In fiscal 2010, a new facility is planned and will be located adjacent to Winder Medical Clinic.

McDonald said they collect about 1,200 blood units per month, but the goal is 2,000 blood units per month. Their primary mission is to support the East and West Armed Services Whole Blood Processing Laboratories' inventories, which is reserved for large commands,

Independence Day event set for June 28

THE BAYONET
Cheryl Rodewig

The Fort Benning Independence Day celebration will start at 3 p.m. June 28 at York Field, next to Infantry Hall. The event is free and open to the public and includes live music, children's activities, food for sale and a professional fireworks display at the end of the evening.

"It's the most impressive fireworks show in town," said Shannon Poole, marketing director for Family and Morale, Welfare and Recreation.

The fireworks, accompanied by patriotic music, are scheduled after dark, but a rock wall, giant inflatables and demonstrations by the 197th Infantry Brigade, Silver Wings and the Rangers' SPIES and FRIES are scheduled throughout the afternoon.

The Commodores will headline the celebration. Country singers Gary Nichols and Katie Rae Davis will also perform.

New this year, Ultimate Fighting Championship and mixed martial arts fighters will present demonstrations of fighting techniques. They will also lead self-defense and boxing classes at Smith Fitness Center, Poole said.

The celebration not only commemorates the Fourth of July, Poole said, it also pays tribute to the hard work and sacrifices of Soldiers, past and present, who ensure this nation's independence., and it's also a fun day out.

Admission is free. Kids' wristbands cost $7 and are good for unlimited play on the inflatables. For more information call 706-545-4499.

CATHOLIC EDUCATION

Faith Formation is 10:40 a.m. to noon every Sunday at Faith Middle School. Classes are available for adults and children 3 and older. Adults are asked to choose from three classes: Scripture Study, the Vatican II and the Faith Revolution. Confirmation classes and Youth Ministry are held on the first and third Sunday of each month at the Follow Me Chapel.

A Youth Mass will be at 6 p.m. the last Sunday of each month at the Follow Me Chapel.

For those inquiring about the Catholic faith, the Rite of Christian Initiation for Adults is at 6:30 p.m. Thursdays at the Follow Me Chapel.

A Baptism Preparation Class for parents wishing to have their child baptized in the Catholic Church will be held every other month. Please call for the schedule. The class is mandatory prior to the child receiving the Sacrament of Baptism.

To register for a class or to volunteer with the Religious Ed program, call 706-545-0045.

REUNIONS

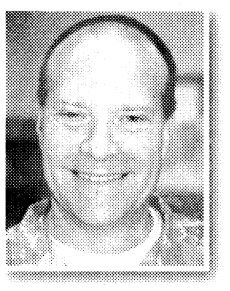
The deployment's over, it's time to change 'battle' skills

The transition from battlefront to home front requires new skills

CHAPLAIN FAMILY LIFE CENTER
Chaplain (Maj.) Richard Garvey

Way to go Soldiers and way to go families. You've survived 15 months worth of deployment, and you've joined the ranks of a very elite club: America's combat veterans and the loved ones who've supported them through one of life's greatest challenges.

So few have served sacrificially the way that you have, and you can walk proud the rest of your life as you tell your children and your grandchildren what you did when the country called.



Bless you for your service.

This is part four in a series of articles designed to help each and every Soldier or spouse who's in the midst of the joys and the challenges of redeployment back to Fort Benning.

First, we talked about the huge amount of resources and agencies that are at your disposal to make the homecoming all you want it to be.

Second, we talked about managing and communicating your expectations with those around you, while being prepared for fluctuations in your emotions now that you are home.

Last week, we discussed the powerful image that your Soldier has not lived life on a different continent, but on a different planet. Things there are so unlike things here.

This week, I want to take a look at the important "battle mind" skills that got you or your Soldier to war and back and how those skills must transition from the battlefront to the home front.

The very skills that helped you or your Soldier win the war there, on that planet, are not necessarily the same skills that are going to help you or your Soldier win the war on this planet.

B = Buddies versus withdrawal. On that planet, only your buddies understand you and you trusted only them.

On this planet, you may be tempted to think no one understands, and you may withdraw from the very people who love you most.

The new skill you need is the ability to stretch yourself to share what you can when you can and find new buddies and new bonds to win the war on the home front after winning the war on the battlefront.

A = Accountability versus hyper-control. On that planet controlling your "stuff" (weapon, nods, etc.) was vital and demanded.

On this planet, you may get impatient with people who rearrange the order you've established. Sometimes you may feel as if people around you don't have the same intensity or focus that you do.

The new skill is learning to yield control instead of seize control and operate with some slack instead of zero-tolerance.

T = Targeted aggression versus inappropriate aggression. On that planet, anger can work for you — aggression can keep you safe, sharp and alive.

Here, anger can work against you — aggression can hurt you and those you love irreparably.

The new skill is learning that nothing is lethal here. No one's going to kill you, so power down and walk away. Cool off and regroup to talk things out verbally rather than fight things out physically.

T = Tactically aware versus hyper-vigilant. On that planet, you always had to be "on" — super safe, super aware.

On this planet, that may cause you to lose sleep, have nightmares or feel anxiety in the midst of crowds.

The new skill is letting your heart believe what your head already realizes: there are no dragons lurking on this planet.

Relaxation through praying, playing and staying connected is a great antidote that other Soldiers who've "been there, done that" recommend.

L = Lethally armed versus locked and loaded at home. On that planet, your weapon and its ammo were essential tools.

On this planet, being locked and loaded has more potential for bad than good.

The new skill is to resist the temptation to lean on the wrong tool for the wrong situation. Talk, not tanks, is what works best on this planet.

Here, you need to turn to words instead of weapons to work through any problems.

E = Emotional control versus anger and detachment. On that planet, having a hard shell was necessary for survival.

However, on this planet, expressing anger instead of love, coolness instead of warmth or detachment instead of connection won't get you what you want.

The new skill is developing yourself into a person who makes a good friend: caring, kind and someone others can talk with to feel good about themselves.

Next week we'll cover the mind in battle mind, but until then, enjoy being home and know that there is help all around you.

The Chaplain Family Life Center is available to Soldiers, couples and families and offers caring, confidential counseling. Confidential appointments can be made by calling 706-545-1760.

Remember, we're proud of you; we're here for you.

A swinging summer

Jocelyn Walton, 6, swings at Camp Courage, which started this week at Benning Pre-school. Throughout the summer, children will play basketball, do arts and crafts, skate, swim, and visit Callaway Gardens.

Jalon Richmond, 7, swings from the monkey bars at Benning Pre-school. "I'm having fun and I'm glad it's finally summer," he said.

Program: Teaches water safety at pool

The water safety program is from 9 a.m. to 12 p.m. June 18 and July 9 at Psalmond Road Recreation Center Pool in Midland, Ga. Topics covered will be water safety education and practice in and around the pool. There will be free swimming from noon to 7 p.m. for participants. Recreation identification and registration is required for this event.

According to the Safe Kids Web site, "more children (ages) 1 to 14 die from accidents such as motor vehicle crashes, fires, drowning, poisoning and falls than any other cause."

Hopefully these events will prevent accidents from happening and educate the parents and children on what is safe, Hubbard said.

A parent or guardian must accompany each child.

For more information or directions, go to www. Safekidscolumbusga.com or call 706-321-6183.

Donor Day: Focuses on safe blood

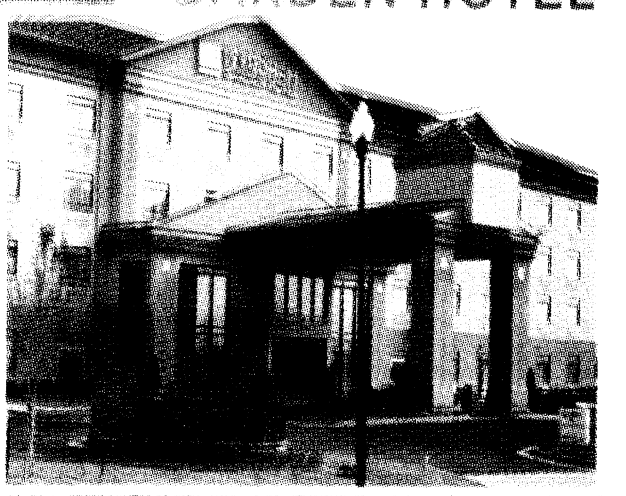
such as CENTCOM, and overseas sites, such as Iraq and Afghanistan, McDonald said.



Their secondary mission is to support the Southeast Regional Medical Command, providing blood to Fort Benning and other posts and to other blood donor centers in the region, McDonald said.

Harrigan said since February, they have hosted about 50 blood drives, targeting post units and the post community.

To learn more about the Armed Services Blood Program, visit www. militarylifeblood.dod.mil. To find out where other local blood drives will be hosted, visit www.militarylifeforce.com and enter the local zip code. To talk to someone at the post Blood Donor Center, call 706-544-9427 or 808-722-4704.

Westville offers 1850s experience

THE BAYONET
Rachel L. Watkins

Can you imagine living in a world where a clothes washer was a board and a bucket, and a mattress was held up by ropes (instead of springs) which had to be tightened with a bed key when they became loose?

This is how people lived in the 1850s.

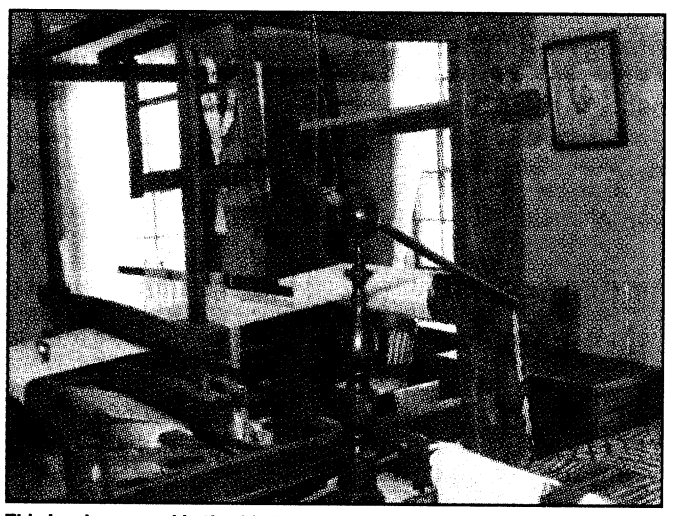
For all of you history buffs, a step into another era is only 40 miles from Fort Benning. Westville, located in Lumpkin, Ga., is an 1850s town where visitors can taste food from a dutch oven, dip candles, look at artifacts and buildings from the 1850s, and hear what life was like for men and women more than 150 years ago.

The museum, which is the largest outdoor museum in Georgia, spans 25 acres and includes a blacksmith, cotton gin, pottery house, barn and cotton plantation houses.

A neglected museum, originally located in Jonesboro, Ga., was where Col. John Word West started the Fair of 1850, a display of historic buildings and craft demonstrations, in 1932. After West died, his collection was purchased and moved to Lumpkin to create a living history museum to show what life was like before the Civil War. The board of trustees raised funds to add buildings and artifacts to the collection. The town was named in honor of West.

My favorite part was seeing how the food was made. The cooking methods in the 1850s are a lot different than what we have today. The cook used a fireplace ledge and coals on top of a cast iron pot to cook.

Things I take for granted, like candles, were made by hand. The candle maker said it took 100 dips of wax to make just one candle.



If you want to see the whole town, set aside at least two hours. It might be a good idea to bring suncreen too. If you get hungry, there is a restaurant that serves hot dogs, chips and drinks. After the tour, visitors can purchase a candle or pottery piece that was made at Westville.

Admission prices are $10 for adults and $4 for children in kindergarten through 12th grade. Military and senior tickets are $8. The museum is open from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.Tuesday to Saturday. For more information, call 888-733-1850 or go to www.westville.org.

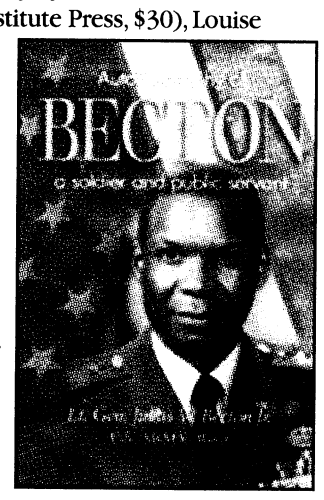
Rhonda Williams, a candle maker at Westville, demonstrates how to dip candles in a pot of beeswax. It takes 100 dips to make one candle. In the 1850s, women were expected to tend the garden, take care of the children, cook, clean, do laundry, shop and make homemade soap and candles.

This is a loom used in the 1850s to weave cloth from thread. Linen, cotton and wool could be woven with it. The loom can be found in the Moye house which includes summer and winter parlors. Allen Moye, who built the house, served as Randall County sheriff and a member of the Georgia House and Senate in the 1930s. This is one of the many artifacts at Westville. Other sites include the McDonald House, a two-room house expanded to accommodate nine people. Edward McDonald became wealthy after his cotton warehouse was busy because of the railroad in Cuthbert, Ga. The house also includes gardens, a kitchen and smokehouse.



Norma Lopez, who represents the 1850s woman, shows Kelsey Griffin, 4, how to form a biscuit at the Harris Farmhouse. The biscuits were cooked in a cast iron pot surrounded by coals from the fireplace.

BOOK REVIEW

Becton shares his journey as combat commander, civil servant

BAYONET CORRESPONDENT
Don DeNevi

In an endearing, poignant, four-paragraph foreword to her husband's Becton:An Autobiography of A Soldier and Public Servant (Naval Institute Press, $30), Louise Thorton Becton concludes simply, "I believe he is a natural born leader."

Like courage and integrity, true leadership is indefinable, its roots inexplicable. A random gift of nature? Hardly. Inherited? Maybe. More likely, it is a quality emanating from psychological health, nurtured early on by kind, loving parents conscious of fostering an intrinsic value system. Later when coupled with years of solid soldiering, the impulse to plan and guide flows naturally.

Whatever leadership is, Julius W. Becton Jr. has it, and in abundance, as so amply demonstrated in the lieutenant general's 350-page memoir chronicling his experiences and achievements as a combat commander, government leader and public administrator. Framed in the affection of his intimates while quietly reflecting his own strong gifts — zeal for America and the Army, an innocent pictorial eye and shy kindness — the autobiography becomes a luminous testament of dedication and devotion.

Published in cooperation with the Association of the U.S.Army, the book begins by describing in an easy narrative style what it was like growing up in Bryn Mawr, a Philadelphia suburb, during the late 1920s and 1930s. Born in 1926 to Julius W. Becton Sr., a janitor, and Rose Inez Becton, a domestic worker, he was "blessed" in receiving all the strength he would need to face the rigors of being a future chief during an age of Jim Crow. He highlights his teenage love of football and track, how he met the love of his life (going on 63 years now), Louise Thorton, and what it was like entering a segregated Army Air Corps Enlisted Reserves in the summer of 1943 at the age of 17 and the U.S.Army the following year.

What follows are Becton's four decades of service, including what led up to being commissioned a second lieutenant and fighting with distinction in Korea. In 1951 he was integrated into the regular army. Later he held combat commands in the 101st Airborne Division in Vietnam, commanding the legendary 1st Cavalry Division in 1975 and 1976. Two years later, Becton was promoted lieutenant general in command of the U.S.VII Corps in Germany and deputy commander of Training and Doctrine Command and the Army inspector of Training before retiring in 1983.

Equally interesting is what he did following his retirement. In 1984 Becton turned his attention to international disaster assistance, emergency management and public education. That same year, he was invited to join the Reagan administration as director of the Office of Foreign Disaster Assistance for the Agency for International Development. Later, he was CEO of American Coastal Industries, as well as president of Prairie View A&M University.

Perhaps Becton's toughest challenge during his entire career was serving as the superintendent and CEO of the Public School System in the District of Columbia between 1996 and 2000.

"I was absolutely appalled at the high school dropout rate — something that concerns me to this day," he writes. "In 1995, only 53 percent who entered high school in the ninth grade actually graduated four years later. I was absolutely determined to do something about it. I knew how good the schools could be because my children had attended them. My plan was to make DCPS exemplary by 2000." Unfortunately, things didn't work out for a many reasons he had no control over.

In 2007, he was honored with the George Catlett Marshall Medal, the highest award presented by the Association of the U.S.Army for being an outstanding role model.

Opening Today
KUNG FU PANDA

When threatened by a gang of snow leopards, the jungle animals call upon an inept panda (voice of Jack Black) to become a kung fu master and save the Valley of Peace.

The animated movie also stars Dustin Hoffman, Jackie Chan, Ian McShane, Lucy Liu, Angelina Jolie, David Cross and Seth Rogen.

YOU DON'T MESS WITH THE ZOHAN

Zohan (Adam Sandler), an Israeli commando, fakes his own death in order to pursue his dream: becoming a hairstylist in New York. He romances his clients by giving them "special services" in the back room. However, he is eventually recognized and risks losing his newfound life and career.

You Don't Mess With Zohan is rated PG-13 for crude and sexual content, language and nudity.

Also Playing
SEX AND THE CITY

Carrie (Sarah Jessica Parker), Samantha (Kim Cattrall), Charlotte (Kristin Davis) and Miranda (Cynthia Nixon) continue their adventures in Manhattan four years after the series ended.

Sex and the City is rated R for sexual content, nudity and language.

THE STRANGERS

Three mysterious strangers terrorize a young couple (Liv Tyler and Scott Speedman) in a remote house after they return from a wedding.

The Strangers is rated R for violence, terror and language.

INDIANA JONES AND THE KINGDOM OF THE CRYSTAL SKULL

THE CHRONICLES OF NARNIA: PRINCE CASPIAN

One year later, the kings and queens of Narnia find themselves back in Narnia, only to discover that more than 1,300 years have passed in Narnian time.

During their absence, Narnia has been conquered by the Telmarines and is now under the control of the evil King Miraz (Sergio Castellitto). The four children will soon meet Narnia's rightful heir to the throne, Prince Caspian (Ben Barnes), who has been forced into hiding as his uncle Miraz plots to kill him. The Narnians embark to find Aslan, rescue Narnia and restore the land.

SPEED RACER

Born to race cars, Speed Racer's (Emile Hirsch) only real competition is the memory of the brother he idolized — the legendary Rex Racer, whose death in a race has left behind a legacy that Speed is driven to fulfill. When Speed turns down a lucrative and tempting offer from Royalton Industries, he infuriates the company's maniacal owner.

The only way for Speed to save his family's business and the sport he loves is to win the death-defying, cross-country rally known as The Crucible.

Speed Racer is PG for action, violence, language and smoking.

Zohan (Adam Sandler), an Israeli commando, fakes his own death to become a hairstylist in New York. You Don't Mess With Zohan opens in theaters today.

WHAT HAPPENS IN VEGAS

Two people (Cameron Diaz and Ashton Kutcher) discover they've gotten married following a night of debauchery in Vegas, with one of them winning a jackpot after playing the other's quarter.

The pair tries to undermine each other and get their hands on the money, falling in love along the way.

What Happens in Vegas is rated PG-13 for sexual and crude content, language and a drug reference.

THE FALL

She strikes up a friendship with a bedridden man who captivates her with a whimsical story that removes her far from the hospital doldrums into the exotic landscapes of her imagination.

Making sure he keeps the girl interested in the story, he interweaves her family and people she likes from the hospital into his tale.

Happy Birthday

Fort Benning will celebrate the Army's 233rd birthday — which is Saturday — at 4 p.m. today in Classroom 6 at Infantry Hall. The community is invited to attend the event, which will include the cutting of a birthday cake by the youngest and oldest active duty Soldiers serving on Fort Benning. The post commander, Maj. Gen. Walter Wojdakowski, will be the guest speaker.

Bill and Annette Phelps, their three daughters and nine grandchildren watched as Soldiers from 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment, drove Bradley fighting vehicles on Front Avenue in Columbus June 5.

Their daughter, Beth Lee, and her three sons traveled from Marietta, Ga., to watch the drive-bys, which were part of a test conducted by the Fort Benning Soldier Battle Lab.

"My sons really wanted to see them, because they are interested in the military and new technology," Lee said.

Local residents lined Front Avenue from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. as two Bradleys, an M-2 A3 and a prototype, made several trips along the route.

Maj. Shane Sims, chief of the Futures Branch, said the event was part of a monthlong experiment to assess how cameras will affect the way Soldiers operate vehicles.

Soldiers have adopted a closed-hatch posture in theater, and camera systems similar to the ones tested by the Soldier Battle Lab will help them see in their vehicles' blind spots, he said.

During the experiment, they used the M-2 A3 and the prototype in an area with a lot of traffic, people and tall buildings, which couldn't be replicated on Fort Benning, Sims said.

"We wanted to learn how relying on cameras is different from relying on your eyesight and senses," he said.

"Normally, the Soldiers operate from the hatch so they can see, hear and smell what is on the battlefield or around the vehicle. We wanted to see how cameras affect the way they operate vehicles."

The Soldier Battle Lab will conduct several more experiments with other camera systems throughout the next year, Sims said.

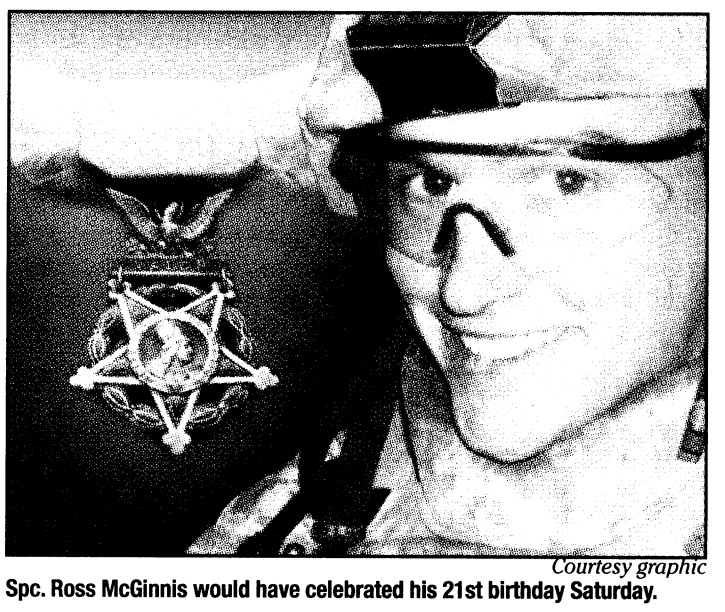
Take five to fill out survey

THE BAYONET
Bridgett Siter



It's Friday the 13th, your lucky day.

Today, you get to have your say about post housing. Officials are conducting a survey, actually a "Housing Market Analysis and Military Personnel Survey," to determine housing needs on Fort Benning. All military personnel living on or off post, single and married, are encouraged to participate.

Responses to the survey, which typically takes about five minutes to complete, are critical in planning for post housing needs, said Raul Brown, a housing management specialist with the Residential Communities Initiative. And yes, they can even impact the Basic Allowance for Housing.

Today is the final day of the survey. Log on to https://survey.rdniehaus.com, use the name "Benning" and the password "housing." Note there is no "www" in the address. The username is not case sensitive, but the password is.

Those who do not have Internet access will find computers available at Building 280 on Transportation Street. For more information, call 706-545-0667.

With the Army's 233rd birthday, Benning celebrates the transformation to the Maneuver Center of Excellence

COMMANDING GENERAL
Maj. Gen. Walter Wojdakowski

Brave American men and women have answered the call of their nation, donned the uniform of a Soldier, and gallantly served as protectors of America's freedom since the establishment of the U.S. Army on June 14, 1775. Over the past 233 years, the Army has met whatever enemy threats that have existed. Likewise, meeting the challenges of the future has required Soldiers and leaders to evolve to meet the challenges of our enemy as well as incorporate new technology into our tactics.

In 1918, the U.S. Army established Camp Benning to provide training for instructors preparing Infantry Soldiers for participation in WWI. During WWII, Fort Benning completed its transformation to the Infantry Center and grew into a permanent installation with billeting for roughly 4,000 officers and 95,000 enlisted Soldiers.

In 1931, the U.S. Army saw the future of Armor on the battlefield and established a small force of Mechanized Cavalry at, then, Camp Knox to evaluate its potential. One year later, Camp Knox was transformed into a permanent garrison and re-designated Fort Knox. By 1936, Fort Knox became the U.S. Army Center for Mechanization Tactics and Doctrine.

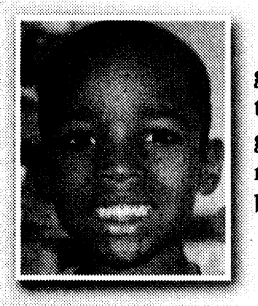
As we celebrate the Army's birthday this year, we should also celebrate the birth of the Maneuver Center of Excellence (MCOE). Since Allied forces first used tanks on the battlefield in WWI, the Infantry and Armor branches have shared a close heritage, One Force-One Fight. Combining the Infantry School and Armor School into the Maneuver Center of Excellence is a logical step as the Army transforms into a modular expeditionary force. The MCOE collocates the Infantry and Armor branches at Fort Benning, but the integrity of the branches remains unchanged. Maneuver is not a branch but is a function that requires the Infantry and Armor to work together to develop doctrine and training standards for the battlefield of tomorrow.

The MCOE enables Training and Doctrine Command to complete its mission of training Soldiers for combat. The collocation of Infantry and Armor at one location will accomplish the following:

- Provide the Nation with the world's best trained Infantry and Armor Soldiers and adaptive leaders imbued with the Warrior Ethos;
- Provide a Power Projection Platform capable of deploying and redeploying Soldiers, Civilians, and units anywhere in the world on short notice;
- Define required capabilities for Infantry and Armor to meet the needs of the future force.

As we celebrate the 233rd birthday of the Army, we look forward and embrace the future of the Army. The birth of the MCOE will have vast impacts on the evolution of the Army and Fort Benning.

By 2011, the MCOE will bring an additional 32,000 military personnel, Civilian employees, Family members, contractors, retirees, and military students to the Fort Benning supported population. With this growth, an anticipated $2.9 billion worth of construction is expected on Fort Benning during the next four to five years, including training barracks, dining facilities, fitness centers, chapels, weapons ranges, classrooms, and maintenance facilities.



This growth will provide the Army with a world-class training facility unlike anything before to develop adaptive Warriors and leaders ready to meet the challenges of tomorrow.

Happy Birthday Warriors! Follow Me!

OPINION

VARIOUS VOICES

What would you get the Army for its birthday?

I would go to Sam's Club and give them a birthday cake, because they might like it. I'm going to get them 10 birthday candles — I mean, I'm going to get them 11 birthday candles.

— Marcus Thorne, 4

I would probably save up a lot of my allowance (to) make their uniforms better, because they probably get hot in them in the summer.

— Gabby Mueller, 8

A jet. They could all go inside it and ride in it, so they could use it to jump out of with parachutes.

— Anna Decker, 9

If I could, I would get it some kind of program that would make you invisible, because then the enemy wouldn't be able to see them.

— Charlie Casares, 8

Lots of flowers, because flowers are pretty.

— Hannah Garner, 6

Army's birthday opportunity to say thanks

THE BAYONET
Jennifer Gunn

I used to be good at remembering birthdays and anniversaries. During the first three years after I moved away from home, I religiously sent handpicked greeting cards to each of my family and friends. But when I moved back to Georgia, I stopped. Cold turkey. Go figure. Being closer to my loved ones made it easier for me to forget all about hassling with cards and letters to mark birthdays and other special occasions. I became too busy — or complacent — to be bothered with it, thinking that those special people would always be there whether I sent a card or not. And that's sad.

Sometimes, I feel, folks think about the Army this way, only in reverse, or even not at all. It's easy to be thankful for our nation's Army during times like the days and months following 9/11. History is filled with moments like these: Pearl Harbor, the bombing of the U.S. Embassy in Kenya and in Oklahoma City and the attack on the USS Cole, to name just a few. In those moments, Americans saw the kinds of horrific acts our nation does not tolerate as a way of life.

We think a lot about the sacrifices our Soldiers make during times of deployment, but we forget their service as soon as they're safe at home. Let's face it, it's easy to become complacent about this thing we call the U.S. Army when all is relatively well in our little corner of the world.

But June 14 is the day we celebrate as the birth of our Army. This afternoon, we'll cut a cake to celebrate the occasion. There'll be a speech and many on post will attend the event. But after the fanfare and celebration, what will we take with us? I'd like to offer a suggestion. We should remember where our Army has been, what it has accomplished and the selfless services our Soldiers continue to give our country — and each of us — every day. Our Army is truly the strength of this nation.

When I think about our motto, Army Strong, I can't help but think about the values our Army holds dear. One in particular stands out to me: personal courage. Personal courage often leads to sacrifice.

Take Spc. Ross McGinnis, who posthumously received the Medal of Honor this month for purposefully falling on a grenade in Iraq in 2006, saving the lives of four Soldiers. In a statement, his father, Tom McGinnis, said, "One moment he was responsible for defending the rear of the convoy from enemy fire; the next moment he held the lives of four of his friends in his hands. The choice for Ross was simple, but simple does not mean easy."

Those who have worn our nation's uniform don't often take the easy road. And what's so impressive about this — that is their choice. Today's Soldiers, like those who have gone before them, choose the path of freedom, liberty and justice; and it takes personal courage and sacrifice to walk these roads. Not all sacrifices mean losing one's life; some mean long separations, some mean pulling extra duty hours, some mean missing birthdays and anniversaries and many other things that make life sweeter.

As far as the Army's birthday goes, any day a parent or a spouse sends their son, daughter, husband or wife off to basic training, they are giving the Army a gift. Each time a Soldier says, "Send me, I will go," he or she is giving the Army and the country it fights for a gift. And every day those Soldiers stand on point, whether here at home or in the farthest reaches of the world, they and the Army are giving us the gift of freedom. Although freedom is not free — its cost is measurable in the lives and sacrifices of Army Soldiers past and present — neither is it something that can be repaid. It is a gift to be enjoyed and not taken for granted.

This week in Fort Benning history

1934

- Hardaway Construction Company of Columbus started work on a new bridge spanning the Upatoi Creek. It was expected to be completed by May 1, 1935.
- The PX opened a barber shop and beauty parlor in the south stand of Doughboy Stadium. "Telephone 631 to secure an appointment for permanent waving."

1967

- The post commander, Maj. Gen. Robert York, reminded Fort Benning residents that they were responsible for making sure their "dependents" behaved, and they should be particularly diligent now that daylight saving time gave youngsters more time to get into mischief.
- "She has blonde hair and a set of the most piercing blue eyes ever set above a pug nose," a Bayonet reporter said of 18-year-old Niva Cronk, who would relinquish her Teen Queen of Fort Benning title at the post's annual July 4 beauty pageant.
- Two Fort Benning boys unearthed sea shells and fish vertebrae estimated to be at least 83 million years old.

The boys first discovered six shark teeth while digging in the clay bed of a stream that flows into the Upatoi Creek. They took their finds to a local museum curator who said the items were part of the Eutaw Formation.

- The 7th Battalion, 18th Artillery, fired their first 105 mm Howitzer this week.

The weapon had been used in Vietnam. A 50-foot extension was used on the gun's lanyard for the first shot as a safety precaution since many of the Howitzers sent from Vietnam hadn't been fired in years.

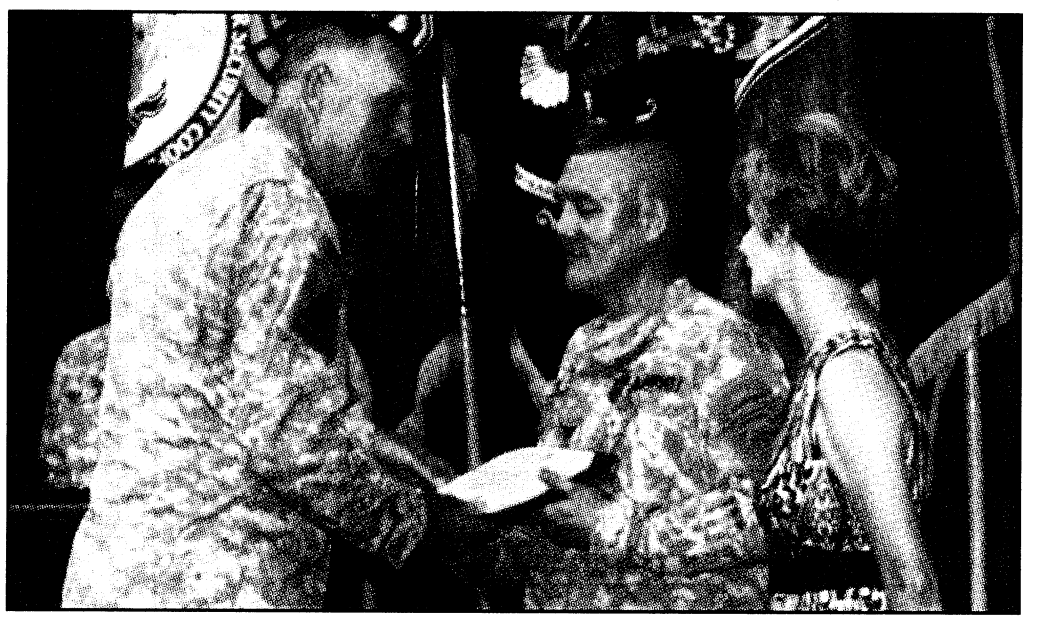
New chief of staff takes charge Monday

THE BAYONET
Brenda Donnell

The Fort Benning community welcomed the new chief of staff, Col. Charles W. Durr Jr., Monday and bid farewell to Col. David H. Ling during a ceremony at Infantry Hall.



Durr

Durr, who has more than 25 years of active-duty experience, arrived here after serving as the executive officer to the commander of NATO's International Security Assistance Force in Kabul, Afghanistan.

Durr's assignment as the 50th U.S. Army Infantry Center chief of staff is not his first assignment here. He was the director of Combat Developments and commanded 2nd Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment, and the 192nd Infantry Brigade.

"He has the pulse on what is happening downrange, and that is very important to us as primary supporters in this Global War on Terrorism," said Maj. Gen. Walter Wojdakowski, U.S. Army Infantry Center and Fort Benning commanding officer.

Durr said he was excited to be back at Fort Benning where many of the Soldiers he saw in Afghanistan were trained.

"It's great to be home," he said.

Ling will serve as the Iraqi field team commander in an upcoming deployment with the Joint Improvised Explosive Device Defeat Organization.

Ling began his military career when he was recruited to play football for the Navy. However, after visiting West Point, where they handed him a rifle, Ling decided to join the Army and never thought about doing anything else, Wojdakowski said.

Ling had an eventful assignment due to the post's support of the Soldiers and units fighting the Global War on Terror and changes in anticipation of the 2005 Base Realignment and Closure Commission reorganization, Wojdakowski said.

Wojdakowski said Ling is one of the finest men anyone has ever known, and he executed his duties as a true professional.

"You have given your heart and soul to the (tri)communities, and you are extremely well respected," he said.

Wojdakowski also thanked Ling's wife, Joyce, who was a kindergarten teacher at White Elementary School for three years, Santa's Castle senior advisor and the chairperson for the installation monthly CARE meetings.

Ling thanked Wojdakowski, Fort Benning Soldiers and civilians and tricommunity members, and said Fort Benning was a special place to serve.

"Whether you are a general officer, a colonel or a private, this community embraces you because you are a Soldier," he said. "It is for all other communities around our Army to emulate."

Soldiers get procedural change for security clearance questionnaires

ARMY NEWS SERVICE

WASHINGTON — When filling out security-clearance questionnaires, Soldiers have been told to answer "no" to receiving mental-health consultation if it was counseling strictly to deal with stress from combat or related to marital, family or grief issues.

A message sent to Army activities worldwide June 5 directs personnel to answer no under certain circumstances to question 21 on Standard Form 86, the Questionnaire for National Security Positions.

The question asks: "In the last seven years, have you consulted with a mental-health professional or consulted with another health-care provider about a mental health condition?"

If the treatment was not court-ordered and was not the result of violence, then Soldiers or Army Civilian employees should simply answer no to receiving care to help them adjust after returning from service in a combat zone, according to the message to "all Army activities."

The ALARACT message guidance is an interim measure, Army G2 security division officials said, until an updated SF 82 can be printed with new wording for question 21.

The old wording was having a negative impact on the willingness of many Soldiers to seek mental-health treatment for post-traumatic stress disorder and other problems, according Army leaders. The message states that unit commanders reported the problem last year and the Army's investigator general looked into the issue.

"To correct this adverse perception and encourage Soldiers/Civilians to seek needed mental-health treatment, the (Secretary of Defense) directed immediate implementation of the revised language for Q21," the message reads. "The revision now excludes counseling related to marital, family or grief issues and counseling for adjustments from service in a military combat environment."

Chief of Staff of the Army Gen. George Casey Jr. sent out a message to the field May 1 explaining the need to reduce the stigma to seeking mental-health assistance.

"We need to strongly encourage all of our leaders and Soldiers to seek professional help to address all health-related concerns, whether mental or physical," he said in the "CSA Sends" message. Casey told commanders that they should inform their troops that "seeking mental health counseling will not adversely impact Soldiers/Civilians' eligibility in obtaining or retaining a security clearance."

Changing the wording on the security questionnaire is just part of the Army's current campaign to reduce the stigma of seeking mental-health treatment, officials said. The Army initially pressed to drop question 21 altogether, according to G2 officials. Instead, Office of Personnel Management officials agreed to change the wording on the next printing of SF 86.

The next edition of SF 86 will reflect the revised language for question 21 directed by the secretary of Defense: "In the last seven years, have you consulted with a health-care professional regarding an emotional or mental-health condition or were you hospitalized for such a condition?"

If Soldiers answer "yes," they should indicate who conducted the treatment and/or counseling and sign the authorization for release of medical information, according to the current message to all Army activities.

Bridgett Siter

Maj. Breck Paris addresses guests at the Warrior Training Center change of command ceremony May 28.

Warrior Training Center changes command

THE BAYONET
Bridgett Siter

When Maj. Breck Paris first laid eyes on the Warrior Training Center in Harmony Church four years ago, it centered on nothing more than a weed-infested parking lot and a couple of derelict buildings tucked back in the scrub pines off Rosell Road. Its mission: To host the National Guard Pre-Ranger Course.

In August 2006, Paris took charge of the camp and started "livin' the dream."

"From the first day, I realized what a special place this is," he said. "Time flies when you're having fun, and to tell you the truth, it has been fun. And an awful lot has changed."

Since 2004, the Guard has poured more than $6 million into the 45-acre site, known as Camp Butler, for the construction of two barracks, three company training areas, an obstacle course and a PT field. When Paris took command, his cadre numbered no more than 25. Now, with 75 on staff and another 25 slated to join soon, the WTC hosts Pre-Ranger, Light Leader, Air Assault, Pathfinder, Combatives, Master Gunner and Bradley Crew Evaluator courses.

Nearly 4,000 service members from the National Guard, sister services and foreign armies pass through its gates each year. And the WTC fields 20 mobile training teams annually to reach service members in the field.

Harris

"We have extraordinary people here doing extraordinary things. That's the one thing that hasn't changed — the world class training the men here provide America's sons and daughters," Paris said May 28 as he prepared to relinquish command of the WTC to Lt. Col. Robert Harris.

The change of command ceremony marked a major milestone for the WTC, said Col. Jerry Wood, the National Guard's Special Assistant to the Commanding General at Fort Benning. Paris' assignment two years ago was considered a temporary measure — a "bridge," Wood called it — until such a time as the growth and scope of the WTC mission could warrant the lieutenant colonel slot.

"Judge for yourself. Does it look like (Paris) considered his responsibilities anything but a full-time mission?" Wood said after noting the changes wrought under Paris' command, particularly the advent of Pathfinder mobile training team.

With the National Guard's less than 10 percent fill rate on pathfinder-coded slots, the MTTs will "go a great distance in closing the gap."

In his new position, Paris "will go far, but not too far," Wood said. Paris will join him in Infantry Hall as his deputy.

Harris returns to Fort Benning, where he served as the chief of the Training Development Division's Operations Branch and the deputy to Wood's predecessor in the SACG office, before deploying to Iraq with the 29th Brigade Combat Team in 2004. Since 2006, he has served as the National Guard Bureau's Operations Division's Budget and Plans officer.

The Texas native said he's anxious to lead a unit known for its dedication to training.

"Your reputation is awesome," Harris told the men gathered to welcome him to Camp Butler. "You are known across the Army, not just the Guard. And I know you are the bedrock of the Warrior Training Center.

"I'm ready and I'm committed to serving you," he said.

Lt. Col. Anthony L. Benitez takes the 1st Battalion, 50th Infantry Regiment, flag from Col. Casey P. Haskins, 198th Infantry Brigade commander June 4.

Benitez takes charge of 1st Bn., 50th Inf. Regt.

THE BAYONET
Brenda Donnell

Lt. Col. Anthony L. Benitez took command of 1st Battalion, 50th Infantry Regiment, from Lt. Col. Paul G. Humphreys June 4 at Kanell Field. Humphreys was promoted to colonel later that day.

Col. Casey P. Haskins, 198th Infantry Brigade commander, said Benitez was his sounding board for the last year as the 198th deputy commanding officer and is a man full of common sense, compassion and humanity.

Humphreys

"He knows what is exactly right and has great instincts," Casey said. "He has all of the intestinal fortitude and courage to do what is right."

Benitez said he was proud of the brigade staff's accomplishments during his assignment as DCO, which included changes to training.

"Their efforts have ensured the success of outcomes-based training and significant improvements in our marksmanship and combat lifesaving programs," he said.

Benitez said he is looking forward to mentoring and developing his company commanders during his command.

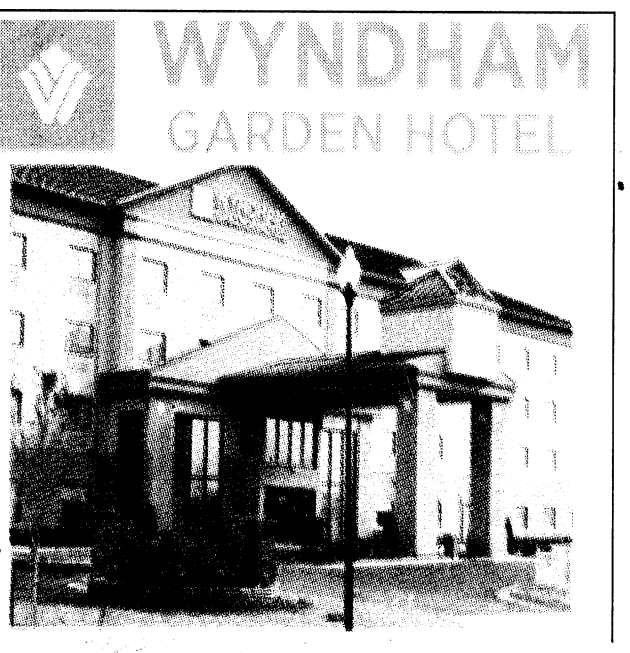
"I hope they leave the battalion with the tools to be successful throughout their careers, whether it be military or civilian," he said.

Humphreys will assume duties as the director of the Office of Infantry Proponency at Fort Benning.

Casey said it was his privilege to serve with Humphreys, and during his assignment as commander, Humphreys never made decisions based on his own preferences or comfort. He always made decisions based on what was best for the Army and the Soldiers' and their families, Casey said.

Humphreys' two years were marked by changes to training, and it wasn't an easy ride, but Humphreys handled it well, Casey said.

"Mostly what I will remember about (Humphreys) is the passion and deep humanity," Casey said.



Humphreys became the 1st Bn., 50th Inf. Regt., commander in 2006. He said he is convinced training is now better, standards are tougher and the Soldiers graduating are better prepared to join operational units.

"The credit goes to the company cadre who assumed the difficult responsibilities of the planning, coordination, resourcing and execution that two years ago wasn't even conceivable," he said.

209th MPs take 'friends' to combat

THE BAYONET
Rachel L. Watkins

"When you deploy with a dog, you get to take a friend," said Staff Sgt. Raymond Richardson, who has been deployed to Iraq and Afghanistan with his German shepherd, Ardy.

Military working dogs are used to find explosives, narcotics and insurgents.

They save a lot of U.S. coalition lives, said Richardson, whose dog kept him company while deployed.

Handlers are responsible for the care of their dogs, which are not considered "pets." Working dogs are considered Soldiers.

Richardson said the secret to reaching a dog's potential is lots of training.

Training includes an obstacle course to test the dog's agility and movement.

The dogs also get training in a scouting exercise, where a mock "bad guy" will hide in the forest.

The dog has to find that "bad guy" on scent, sound or sight. After finding the "bad guy" the dog is rewarded with a congratulations and a bite on the bite arm, a plastic and cloth arm cover the "bad guy" wears so they don't get bitten.

"Once you realize what your dog can do, there is really no limit," Richardson said.

The dog and handler are required to find hidden sodium chlorate or potassium chlorate, ingredients used in explosives.

"I think a lot of people underestimate what military working dogs can do," Richardson said. "Humans have 2 million sensors in their noses, where as the average German shepherd has 225 million sensors."

To make sure the dog won't be aggressive toward his handler in combat, the handler shoots a gun with blanks so the dog will get used to the handler firing shots without attacking him.

Before the dogs even come to Fort Benning, they are put through the dog training section at Eglin Air Force Base, Fla.

They run security, conduct raids, look for IEDs and narcotics and look for insurgents.

"In order to be a handler, you have to have a lot of patience, commitment, responsibility and a desire to do it," said Sgt. John Darnell, who tested for dog handler certification this week with his dog, Arka, 4.

He said all the long hours and training will pay off when he gets his certification.

Shadow, a 6-year-old male Belgian malinois military working dog with the 209th Military Police Detachment, died from a blood clot during a scouting training exercise April 2 at Fort Benning.

"Losing Shadow was like losing my best friend," said Sgt. Michael Gmitter, Shadow's first and only dog handler.

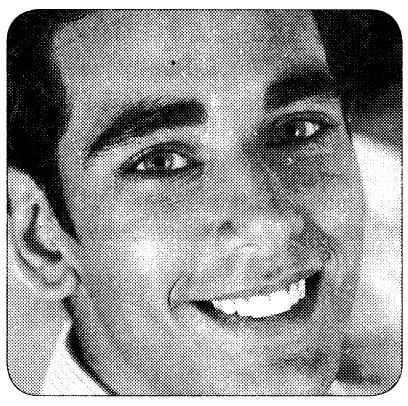
Gmitter and Shadow deployed to Iraq for a year, where they were in charge of direct support of the 2nd Brigade, 2nd Infantry Division, and 4th Brigade, 10th Mountain Division. The team was in charge of inspecting vehicles at the Forward Operating Base in Rustamiyah, Iraq, and searching facilities for IEDs.

"Every building we entered, every street we walked down and every district in eastern Baghdad, Shadow was right beside me," Gmitter said.

There was no kennel for Shadow in Iraq. He slept in the same room as Gmitter. Every time Gmitter went to his desk, Shadow sat next to him. Every time he went to sleep, Shadow curled up by his feet.

"You get this inseparable bond with the dog after spending so much time together," Gmitter said. "It's like having your best friend there the whole year."

He said there isn't a day that goes by that he doesn't think of Shadow. "I miss his personality — he was so smart. And he had an aptitude for learning that was unmatched. I couldn't have gotten through the deployment with any other dog. Shadow is irreplaceable."



A memorial service was held for Shadow May 22 at the War Dog Memorial where Gmitter was presented with an urn and shadow box with pictures of him and Shadow.

MoH: Awarded to Soldier for heroism in Iraq

Army through the Delayed Entry Program in 2004. He wasn't a troublemaker, but neither was he interested in school. He never made the honor roll or played sports. But his teachers said he made his mark in ways that were uniquely Ross.

"He stood out," said Franki Sheatz, McGinnis's French teacher at Keystone High School. "A lot of times it was because of his wit or because he was trying to get away with something. He never did any more or less than a lot of the other kids, (but) he was charming."

McGinnis's decision to join the military sparked a change in him, his father said.

"He said he wanted join the Army, and we accepted that," Tom McGinnis said. "It was an opportunity for him to get the kind of education he wanted. He was going to be trained, and that would help him stay on the right path."

The younger McGinnis aspired to be an automotive technician. The Army was a means to that end — he could serve his country and receive an education that would prepare him for a future career.

McGinnis left his rural Pennsylvania town for Fort Benning within days of graduating from high school, just before his 18th birthday.

He took to the training with enthusiasm, said his mother, Romayne.

"He really liked the physical part of it, (and) he was really excited about the weapons training," she said. "In Boy Scouts, they went to a shooting range once, and he really liked that. So it didn't surprise me when he said he wanted to go with the gunner position."

Soldier among civilians

McGinnis finished his training and headed home to Knox, Pa., on leave.

"He looked so much taller. I think it was the uniform really," Romayne said. "But it was, 'Yes, ma'am,' and, 'No, ma'am." There was definitely that (Army) attitude."

Tom said he found the changes in his son surprising.

"I don't know if I ever knew anyone like that before, especially my own son," he said. "He had learned and grown quite a bit."

Former teachers say McGinnis had matured. Erik Sundling taught McGinnis in the 12th grade. Back then, he said, Ross put all his efforts into that which he was interested in. Anything else warranted no effort at all.

"He came back and he was the 100-percent Ross. He was very proud to wear that uniform," Sundling said.

McGinnis's first assignment would take him to Germany, and from there he'd deploy to Iraq. His mother worried when he left.

"I told him, 'Be safe. Think before you act.' Any parent would say that, I'm sure. We thought he was coming back," she said.

Soldier's Soldier

McGinnis joined C Company, 1st Battalion, 26th Infantry Regiment, in November 2005 as the company was preparing to deploy. Retired Staff Sgt. Ian Newland said he immediately became part of the team.

"His humor made him stand out. He was a comedian," said Newland, a squad leader with 1st Platoon at the time. "You could be having the worst day in the field, and Ross would come in a room and everybody would be laughing within three minutes.

"I have this image of him, even today. We were in Germany and he was up on a .50-cal gunning," Newland said. "We had been doing a convoy for probably eight hours. I was in the vehicle behind him, and he turned around and smiled. His teeth were covered in dirt, but he's just still smiling ear to ear. That right there was just him."

His leaders said McGinnis was also a top-notch Soldier.

"I had roughly 190 Soldiers in my command. There were certain Soldiers who stood out. McGinnis was definitely one of them," said Maj. Michael Baka, who commanded C Company. "His platoon sergeant picked him to serve as the machine gunner on his humvee, which speaks highly of his performance."

McGinnis excelled in weaponry, marksmanship and physical training, Newland said. He was a "born leader," who knew how to read and react to different Soldiers in various situations.

"People responded to him, and he knew how to respond to personalities. That is one of the hardest traits to build as a leader. He had that naturally," Newland said.

Adamiyah

C Co. arrived in Outpost Apache in Adamiyah, a northeast section of Baghdad on Aug. 4, 2006. It was an area steeped in sectarian violence. Insurgent attacks, sniper fire, grenade contact and IEDs were part of daily life in Adamiyah.

Two months into the deployment, after C Co. had already lost two of its Soldiers, the battalion fought a five-hour battle against insurgents who attacked the outpost.

McGinnis had a way of taking the focus off the tragedies.

"He was constantly motivating and positive all the time, and that really helped the platoon a lot," Newland said. "We were getting pretty depressed. But Ross, he knew how to take our attention off of that — all of us — from senior leaders to your private Joe. He knew how to respond."

That fateful day

Dec. 4, 2006, McGinnis's platoon was gearing up to patrol the streets of Adamiyah. Insurgents had been lobbing grenades at vehicles on patrols, and in response the platoon had honed it's reaction skills through a series of training scenarios Newland likened to fire drills.

Soon after they left the outpost, they took a main road just south of the Abu Hanifah. The platoon sergeant's vehicle was last in line, and McGinnis sat in the gunner strap, .50-cal at the ready, facing backward to ensure rear security.

As the sixth vehicle made the left turn, an insurgent threw a grenade from a rooftop nearby. McGinnis tried to deflect it, but failed. When it entered the vehicle behind him, McGinnis yelled "Grenade!"

According to survivors, McGinnis stood up and prepared to jump from the vehicle.

"That is what the machine gunner is supposed to do," Baka said. "He's supposed to announce the grenade, give a fair amount of time for people in the vehicle to react, and then he's supposed to save himself. No one would have blamed him if he did that, because that is what he was trained to do."

McGinnis saw the grenade on the radio mount behind him and realized the others didn't see it — they were combat-locked in the humvee and couldn't escape. He pushed the gunner strap from beneath him and laid back on the grenade. It detonated, and McGinnis died instantly.

Several other Soldiers were wounded, some severely, but all would survive.

"The driver and truck commander would have been killed if that blast had taken full effect," Baka said.

Newland, who was medically retired because of his injuries, saved himself when McGinnis called that warning. He threw his arm over his face, and that arm took the brunt of the blast, though he also sustained face and leg injuries.

"By all means I should have died that day. He gave me a life that he can't have now," Newland said.

"There isn't a single day or hour that goes by that I don't take in everything — the smell of my daughter's hair, the smile my son gives me, the touch of my wife's hand just driving in the car. Those are things people take for granted. I appreciate them all over again, every day, every hour, because of what Ross did."

Magnitude of his sacrifice

"The first time it came full magnitude for me was when we were loading his body onto the helicopter," said Baka, who led his men in a prayer as they prepared to send McGinnis home to his family.

"McGinnis is the definition of hero," Baka said. "From this day forward, if anyone ever asks me to define the word 'hero,' I'll tell them the story of Spc. Ross McGinnis and the actions he took that day to save four of his brothers."

A regular guy

Tom McGinnis is still adjusting to the fact that his son has received the Medal of Honor.

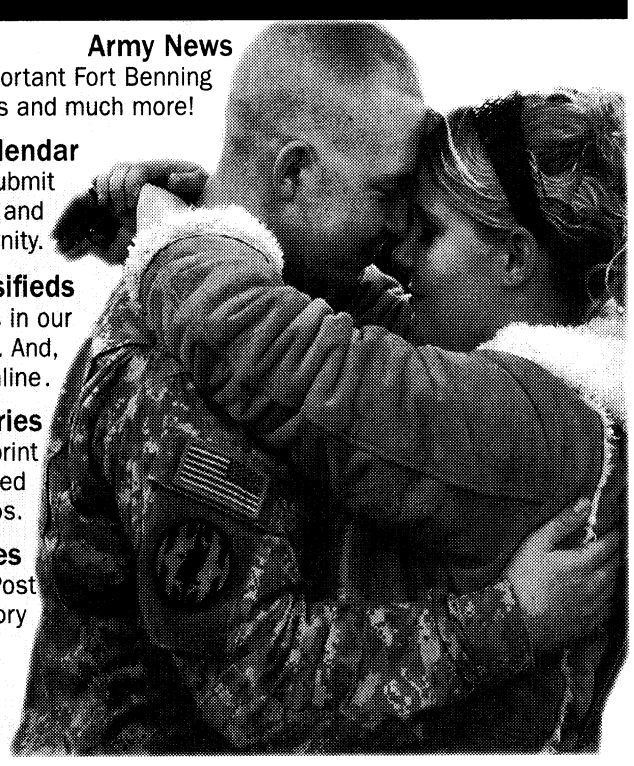
"I never pictured what a Medal of Honor winner is supposed to look like, but I guess I would think of somebody like a John Wayne character — macho and tough and fear is nothing," he said. "But of course, that's not anywhere close to what my son was like.

"Although he had very little fear in him, he wasn't a tough, macho type of person. He was just like you and me," Tom said.

Those who knew McGinnis best before he joined the Army said he was a regular guy who came through for his friends when it mattered.

Remembering Ross McGinnis

His brothers in arms said the best way to honor McGinnis is to live every day with purpose.



"I think for me to thank him is to do everything I can to live my life to the fullest," Newland said. "If he can have courage like that, if he can give up his 19-year-old life, I can live the rest of my life to every day's fullest."

The McGinnis family still wrestles with wounds that haven't healed. Tom and Romayne remember their son as an average kid who found purpose and direction as he became a young man.

"I've had people ask me if I'd like a book or a movie written about him, and I say, 'No.' They would have to write so much into this to make it readable or viewable that Ross wouldn't even be in there," Tom said. "He was just an ordinary person who, when it came time, did the right thing, and that's the most important thing to remember about him."

Editor's note: This story was written from videotaped interviews. Sgt. 1st Class Pete Mayes and Staff Sgt. Ray Flores of Soldiers Radio and Television conducted the interviews.

In 1972, he graduated from Ranger School. He served with the 1st and 2nd battalions of the 75th Infantry Ranger. At Fort Lewis, Wash., he served as the NCOIC of the Ranger Indoctrination Program.

In 1984, he was one of the first to be assigned to Ranger Regimental Headquarters. After serving as command sergeant major at battalion, brigade and division levels, Conrad was named the command sergeant major of Fort Benning in 1994. He retired in 1996, after serving more than 34 years.

Elwood L. Dorman

Dorman was born in 1924 in Snyder County, Pa. He left high school to enter the Army in 1943.

He participated in the Allied invasion of Normandy, where he earned a Silver Star, with the 5th Ranger Infantry Battalion. Dorman suffered a foot injury during the seige of Brest and was sent to the hospital in England for rehabilitation. He was honorably discharged in 1945.

Dorman is a member of the Ranger Battalions Association World War II, The RBA Alva Miller South East Chapter and the Ranger Regiment Association.

He has served in office for the Alva Miller Chapter and Veterans of Foreign Wars, and is a member of the American Legion.

Gen. John R. Galvin

Galvin was born in Wakefield, Mass., in 1929. He enlisted in the National Guard 182nd Infantry Regimental Combat Team where he served as a medic. He entered the United States Military Academy in 1950.

After attending the Infantry Officer Basic Course, Airborne School, and Ranger School, he was assigned to the 65th Infantry Regimental Combat Team as an instructor in the NCO Academy.

Subsequently, he was assigned as a platoon leader and company executive officer, assistant Post S-2 and S-3 and later Post S-2 and S-3, U.S. Army Antilles Command. Gakvin also served as an advisor to the Escuela de Lanceros, the Colombian Army Ranger School before being assigned to the 101st Airborne Division.

He held a series of commands, including commander-in-chief of the Southern Command in Panama, and the Supreme Allied commander, Europe/commander-in-chief, United States European Command, Supreme Headquarters Allied Powers Europe.

After retirement, he was assigned to the United States Military Academy as Olin Distinguished Professor of National Security.

In 1993, he was appointed U.S. State Department ambassador to assist with negotiations in Bosnia. In 1994 he joined Mershon Center at the Ohio State University.

In 1995, he became the dean of the Fletcher School of Law and Diplomacy at Tufts University where he served until 2000. While on active duty, he served two years in Vietnam, 14 years in Europe, and five years in Latin America.

Col. James Holland

Holland entered the Army in 1939. He served during three wars in his 28 years of service. In 1944, he joined Merrill's Marauders in the capture of Mytkyiana, Burma.

He received the Silver Star in WWII when he braved machine gun fire to rescue a comrade.

He received a second Silver Star during the Korean Campaign when he and another Soldier crossed the 38th Parallel to rescue six Soldiers who were pinned down by the Chinese.

As the last man to retreat cross the Han River, he took down the flag at the US Embassy in Seoul and presented it to the ambassador. He served in Germany and Thailand and was called out of retirement to serve in Vietnam, where he was seriously wounded again.

Lt. Gen. Lawson W. Magruder III

Magruder, distinguished military graduate of the University of Texas at Austin, was commissioned in 1969. He served with the 82nd Airborne Division and the 23rd Infantry Division in Vietnam. He was the first B Company commander in the 2nd Battalion, 75th Infantry Rangers.

Magruder also served with the 9th Infantry Division, the U.S. Total Army Personnel Command, the 172nd Light Infantry Brigade, U.S. Army Infantry School, the 25th Infantry Division (Light), and the U.S. Pacific Command.

He commanded the Joint Readiness Training Center, U.S. Army South and Joint Task Force Panama and the 10th Mountain Division.

Magruder was also deputy chief of staff for Operations, and the deputy commanding general and chief of staff of U.S. Army Forces Command.

He retired Sept. 1, 2001. Since retirement, Magruder has held various positions in the security and leader development arenas. As vice president for National Security Programs for Battelle Memorial Institute, he helped form its Office for Homeland Security.

He also served as the executive director for the University of Texas at San Antonio's Institute for the Protection of American Communities and the associate vice president for Research Alliances.

Maj. Gordon W. Meanley

Meanley was born in Knoxville, Tenn., in 1928. He joined the Army in 1946 and served for 30 years. At the outbreak of the Korean War, he volunteered to serve with the 1st Airborne Ranger Infantry Company, fighting with that unit until he was wounded in February 1951 while on patrol behind Communist Chinese lines.

Meanley served tours with the Military Assistance Advisory Groups in Iran and Thailand.

In 1966 (then) Sgt. Maj. Meanley was commissioned as a captain and served with the 508th Parachute Infantry Regiment. In Vietnam, he served as an advisor to the Army of South Vietnam and on his return to the U.S., commanded the parachute training company at Fort Benning.

Reverting to the rank of sergeant major, he served three tours at the Ranger camp at Eglin Air Force Base, Florida. Before his retirement, Meanley was promoted to the rank of major.

Sgt. Maj. Frank O. Moore

Moore served in the Marine Corps from 1951 to 1954 and saw combat in the Korean War. After being discharged from the Marines, he joined the Army. He served with the 503rd Airborne Infantry Regiment, the 77th Special Forces Group Airborne and the 82nd Airborne Division. He served as a HALO instructor with the 1st Battalion, 508th Airborne Infantry.

In June 1965 the 1st Battalion, 508th Airborne Infantry, deployed to the Dominican Republic. When his platoon leader was killed and his platoon sergeant wounded, Moore took charge of his platoon under heavy fire. When one of his men was wounded, Moore retrieved him under heavy fire. Moore single handedly capture seven rebels. He was awarded the Silver Star.

Moore served with the 4th Training Student Battalion (Airborne School), the 503rd Airborne Infantry, 173rd Airborne Brigade, and the 20th Infantry Airborne in Vietnam. He helped train teams to conduct reconnaissance and surveillance, prisoner snatches, ambushes and raids against the North Vietnamese and Viet Cong units. Moore returned to Vietnam in 1970 for his fourth time in combat.

Later, he was assigned to the 3rd Ranger Company and was the honor graduate of Ranger School at the age of 38. Moore also served as the sergeant major of the 14th Company, NCO Leadership Courses and the chief instructor sergeant major for the Department of Instruction at the Infantry School from April 1975 through July 1976. He was the sergeant major of the U.S. Army Northern Warfare Training Center before his retirement in 1981.

1st Sgt. Douglas M. Perry

Perry was born in 1941 in North Georgia. In 1959, he enlisted in the Army. After graduating from Ranger School (as the enlisted honor graduate), he attended the Jungle Warfare School in the Panama Canal Zone. Perry served nine years as a Ranger instructor, and he served in Vietnam as a combat Ranger.

Perry was assigned to the 7th Infantry Division's Counter-Guerilla Warfare School in Korea. The school's mission was to train rifle companies in Ranger techniques and counter insurgency.

In 1966, he deployed to Vietnam as a Ranger advisor. He served tours with two of the most decorated combat units in Vietnam, the 42nd and 44th Vietnamese Ranger Battalions. Perry was assigned to the U.S. Army Alaska Command in 1970 with the 6th Battalion, 9th Infantry. The unit conducted airborne and field operations in temperatures as much as 50 degrees below zero.

Perry's last assignment was with the 14th Company TSB at Fort Benning.

Maj. Gen. John Carpenter Raaen Jr.

Raaen was born at Fort Benning in 1922. He graduated from the United States Military Academy in 1943. After Engineer School, he joined the 55th Armored Engineer Battalion, 10th Armored Division. Then he was assigned to the 5th Ranger Infantry Battalion.

In 1944, as company commander, he participated in the assault on Omaha Beach in Normandy, where he earned a Silver Star and Combat Infantryman Badge. He fought with the battalion through the Brittany Campaign, across France and finally into the Saar Valley where he was injured in 1944. In 1945, he was appointed as an instructor in the Department of Ordnance at the Unites States Military Academy.

After the Command and General Staff College, he became executive officer, Eighth Army Ordnance Section in Korea and in the following year assumed command of the 83rd Ordnance Battalion (Ammunition).

Later he served on the Ordnance Board at Aberdeen Proving Ground and the Military Liaison Committee to the Atomic Energy Commission. In West Berlin, he served as ordnance officer, Assistant Chief of Staff, G-1, and deputy chief of staff of the Berlin Brigade.

In 1965 he was assigned to command the U.S. Army Ammunition Depot at Miesau, Germany. He returned to the U.S. to command the Army Research Office. In 1967 he was transferred to Aberdeen Proving Ground where he became commander of the Army Material Command's three central laboratories located there. In 1969, he was assigned to Headquarters, United States Army Vietnam.

In December 1969 he became the director of Ammunition, Office of the Deputy Chief of Staff for Logistics.

He took command of Headquarters Army Mobility Command in 1971 and was promoted to major general the following year. He commanded Headquarters Army Weapons Command, Rock Island, Ill., and later the U.S. Army Armament Command. In 1975, he became the deputy director for the Defense Supply Agency, and in 1976, assumed command of the Defense Fuel Supply Center. He retired in 1979.

Capt. Ellis E. Reed

Reed was born in 1925 in Newark, N.J. After his junior year of high school, he joined the Army.

He participated with the 5th Ranger Infantry Battalion in the Atlantic Sea Wall invasion.

Reed's awards and decorations include the Silver Star; the Bronze Star; 5th Battalion Purple Heart; Brest Combat Infantry Badge; Arrowhead Beach Landing; four Battle Stars; two Presidential Unit Citations; French Cruix DeGuere with Silver Gilt Star. Upon return to the US, Reed joined the Active Army Reserves, 78th Division Training, and served as the captain of the S3, 3rd Brigade Armor.

He retired in 1969 with 20 years of service.

Col. John W. Ripley

John Walter Ripley was born in 1939 in Radford, Va. He served 35 years with the Marines. He served one year of enlisted service before entering the Naval Academy. In 1962, he was commissioned a second lieutenant and assigned duty with Marine Detachment, USS Independence.

In 1965, he completed the US Army Airborne Course, Jumpmaster course, Navy SCUBA School and the Ranger Course. He deployed to Vietnam in 1966, where his company saw extensive action in the area of Dong Ha, Co Tien, Khe Sanh and the "Rock Pile."

Ripley was wounded in action on four occasions and was forced to evacuate and recover from his wounds. He returned to command his company until the end of tour.

Ripley returned to Vietnam in 1971 and served as senior advisor to the 3rd Vietnamese Marine Battalion. Ripley was at Dong Ha during the 1972 North Vietnamese Easter Invasion, where he earned the Navy Cross.

After Vietnam, Ripley served in a number of positions, including the European Division, the U.S. Naval Academy and the 3rd Marine Expeditionary Force in Japan. He commanded the 2nd Marines, the Regimental Landing Team 2 and the Navy-Marine Corps ROTC Unit at Virginia Military Institute.

Sgt. Maj. Ramon Rodriguez

Rodriguez was born in 1943 in Long Beach, Calif. He enlisted after the eleventh grade and graduated from Airborne School at 17. He volunteered for duty in Vietnam and was assigned to the 101st Airborne Division and later the 5th Special Forces Group.

After the Special Forces Intel School, he was the distinguished honor graduate of the Ranger Course.

He attended Special Forces SCUBA School, Pathfinder School, Russian language courses. He was then assigned to a SCUBA detachment for the 3rd Battalion, 7th Special Forces Group in Panama.

His SCUBA team was responsible for rescue operations from the Northern part of Central America to the Southern part of South America.

They also built a Ranger School in Honduras.

Later, Rodriguez was assigned to the 2nd Battalion, 75th Rangers, and the Presidio of San Francisco. Rodriguez retired in 1984. He is currently the Chairman of Veterans Affairs Commission for the County of Los Angeles.

Robert Scully

Scully fought in the Korea War. Honorably discharged from the New Jersey National Guard, he volunteered for the U.S. Army in 1946 in Jersey City, N.J. After glider and jump school, he served with the 11th Airborne Division in Japan.

While in the 82nd Airborne Division, he volunteered for Ranger training. In 1950, he was assigned to the 3rd Airborne Ranger Company and sent to Korea in 1951.

While clearing the village of Kantongyon, Scully's platoon was crossing the open terraced rice paddies and came under heavy mortar and machine gun fire from a well defended enemy hill.

When the radio operator was wounded, Scully continued the assault with the radio on his back.

He saved the life of another Ranger too badly wounded to defend himself. Scully killed the Chinese and advised a medic of the Ranger's location. Starting up the hill, he gave his rifle to a Ranger whose weapon was damaged.

Later he located a carbine in time to save another wounded Soldier about to be killed by two Chinese soldiers. Scully killed one of the enemy soldiers and captured the other. He brought the prisoner under fire across 1,500 yards of open rice paddies and turned him over to a tank crew in the center of the valley.

Scully was wounded by a mortar round on the final objective and refused evacuation. He was awarded the Silver Star and the Purple Heart for his gallantry in action.

Col. Leo V. Strausbaugh

Strausbaugh was born in 1920 in Hillsboro, Ill. He joined the Army in 1942.

He was selected to attend OCS and assigned to a mule pack battery with 75 millimeter howitzers.

In December 1942, he was reassigned to the 98th Field Artillery Battalion and shipped oversea to join Merrill's Marauders in 1944. He trained as a Ranger in the mountains and jungles of New Guinea.

On October 18 1944, two days prior to the main invasion, Strausbaugh and his company landed on Homonhon Island, then moved to Suluan to take out a Japanese held lighthouse used to signal enemy ships and send radio messages.

When the troops leading the initial assault became trapped in the lighthouse and surrounded by Japanese, Strausbaugh led 35 Rangers to the lighthouse, eliminated the Japanese threat and rescued the troops.

In January 1945, the invasion force moved into the Lingayen Gulf in preparation for the invasion of Luzon.

The Rangers secured the island of Santiago, then moved onto Luzon.

Strausbaugh was awarded the Bronze Star for leading B Company 30 miles beyond 6th Division front lines to locate Japanese positions. In June 1945, Leo's B Company helped take the town of Aparri from the Japanese.

They traveled more than 400 miles, positioned themselves on the Cagayan River, gathered intelligence, took Aparri and proceeded to secure the air strip south of Aparri just prior to a jump by a battalion of paratroopers from the 11th Airborne.

Strausbaugh's Rangers pushed south and made contact with elements of the 37th Division which closed the gap, dividing the Japanese forces and giving the Americans control of the west side of the valley. The dropping of two atom bombs on Japan eliminated the need for that invasion.

Strausbaugh served in the U.S. Army Reserve for 28 years and served as the director of Instruction for the 5038th USAR School, 102nd Ozark Division, for five years.

Cadet Jamie Kuhn looks up to check with an instructor before firing the MK-19 grenade launcher Wednesday on Coolidge Left Range. The live-fire exercise also included TOW missiles and .50-caliber machine guns. It was the culmination of the nine-day training, said Staff Sgt. Landon Becker, a cadet instructor. Cadets graduated after the exercise Wednesday.

Cadets graduate from Anti-Armor Leader Course

Eighteen cadets from West Point graduated from the Anti-Armor Leader Course on Fort Benning Wednesday after a live-fire exercise on Harmony Church.

The cadets went through nine days of training leading up to this exercise, said Staff Sgt. Landon Becker, 2nd Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment, who instructed the cadets during the course.

"They actually got more hands-on experience than they did classroom experience, which makes a better training environment," he said.

The cadets fired .50-caliber machine guns, MK-19 grenade launchers and tube launched, optically tracked, wire-guided missiles.

"The TOW missiles will engage and destroy anything out there on the battlefield today," Becker said.

Cadet Thomas Comer, a rising junior, said firing the TOW was like nothing he had ever done before, even a little scary at first.

"You step up to the weapon, and you're a little bit unsure of its capabilities — you only get so much understanding of the intricacies of it when you're training on a computer simulation," he said. "To have a TOW missile go off right next to your head and then kill something about 1,100 meters away, it's a pretty powerful experience. You can't really train for the back blast, that kind of feeling, unless you do it, so that the first time it surprises you isn't when it's a life or death situation."

> — Cadet Thomas Comer

Comer said this kind of training will make him more effective in combat and as a Soldier, whether he works with an anti-tank company or elsewhere in the Army, Comer said.

Even talking with enlisted personnel about their training, deployments and other experiences is a great opportunity, he said.

Other cadets will be visiting Fort Benning throughout the summer to complete courses required for graduation from West Point, said Capt. Timothy Chess, assistant operations officer of the 197th Infantry Brigade, which oversees the training.

Twenty-five cadets in the Mechanized Leader Course receive their certificates of completion upon graduation today. Cadets enrolled in the Stryker Leader Course will graduate next Friday.

"Many of these cadets may never see a Stryker or a Bradley again, so this training gives them an outlook into the regular Army before they graduate," Chess said.

"No matter what branch they go into — aviation, signal corps, engineers — they all work in and around the Infantry, supporting it, so they need to have a perspective and an understanding of the capabilities of the Infantry and its equipment."

That understanding helps the different branches work together more effectively, he said, so the Army can complete its mission.

Cadets formed into six three-man crews, which usually would include a driver, gunner and NCOIC, to launch the fire tube launched, optically tracked, wire-guided missiles from the top of two humvees. "It's always a little scary at first, but it was also a lot of fun," said Cadet Thomas Comer after firing the missile.

While Soldiers are in the RVS, Master Sgt. Scott Runyon and Dennis Rusnak watch the operation from the forward operating base. The routes used are actual route in Baghdad. Runyon uses the simulator to evaluate how the Soldiers' progress.

Imagine being able to train for a convoy operation in Iraq while still at Fort Benning. Soldiers can do that now because four uparmored humvees were added to the post's arsenal of reconfigurable vehicle simulators.

The new simulator consists of a humvee enclosed in a room with a 360-degree view of screens and projectors. Soldiers navigate a virtual battlefield, encountering bombed buses, pedestrians and IEDs.

From the humvee, they can communicate with the "forward operating base," a room nearby where the commander watches the virtual convoy operation and gives orders.

The routes used are actual routes in Baghdad. They can be adapted to meet the unit's needs.

"The terrains, buildings and features in the simulator are similar to combat," said Sgt. John Minter, with the CONUS Replacement Center, who has served in Iraq. "It helps the Soldiers who haven't been deployed get a feel for what they should look for in combat."

And it helps them improve their combat skills before going to combat, said Charles Parrish, training development specialist, Close Combat Tactical Trainer Simulations Branch, Directorate of Operations and Training.

The trainer can hold up to a crew of five Soldiers, including a vehicle commander, driver, two crewmembers, and a gunner. Soldiers can dismount the vehicle to fight insurgents with M-4s.

Each uparmored vehicle can be linked to other vehicles to simulate a convoy operation and communications are through a digital system. Soldiers have after action reviews following the training exercise so they can identify and fix problems.

Master Sgt. Scott Runyon, a master trainer with CRC, said the simulator was a good refresher for his Soldiers because they are Inactive Ready Reserve who will soon go to National Guard units that will deploy.

He uses the simulator as an evaluation tool to see how the Soldiers progress and to see if the cadre is teaching effectively. The reconfigurable vehicle simulators join the Bradleys, Strykers and humvee simulators.

They are used by most posts that have mechanized units, to simulate a convoy operation in Iraq. The simulator reduces training costs of ammunition, fuel and vehicle maintenance, said John Solomon, training development specialist.

Congressman Sanford D. Bishop Jr. and Janet W. Davis, president and CEO of The Infantry Center (TIC) Federal Credit Union, cut the ribbon for the credit union's grand re-opening Monday. The credit union originated at Fort Benning in 1956, and this branch, located at 2786 Eckel Street, first opened 20 years later.

Sun Devils capture WCWS

Arizona State routed Texas A&M June 3 in two games to win the Women's College World Series in NCAA softball. It is the Sun Devil's first title. The University of Arizona won the previous two years but was defeated early in the tournament.

Big Brown didn't win

Big Brown didn't win the Triple Crown. Saturday he finished dead last in the Belmont Stakes, which is the third leg of the Triple Crown.

Big Brown went into Belmont with a record of 5-0 and his trainer guaranteed the win.

Much speculation was tossed around as to why he "ran out of gas," but nothing has come out.

French Open results

The men played their finals June 8. Rafael Nadal easily beat Roger Federer, who was ranked number one for a record 227 weeks in a row, in straight sets. Nadal won his fourth straight French Open title.

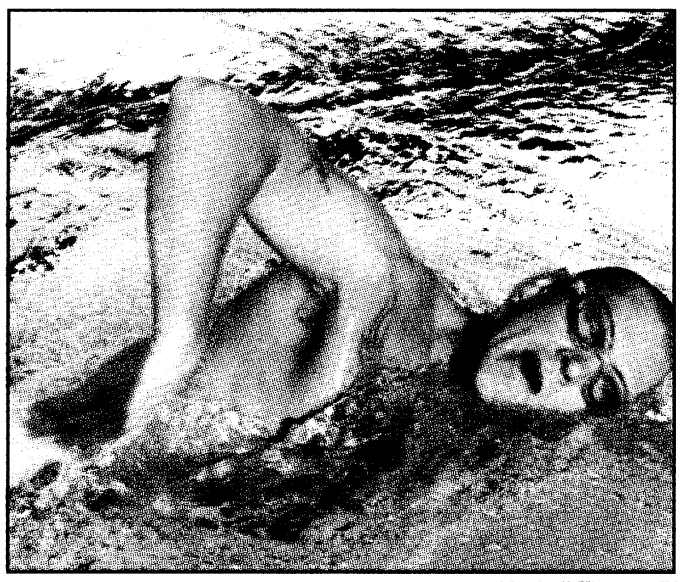
Kahne wins from pole

Kasey Kahne won the pole and the NASCAR Sprint Cup race at Pocono June 8. Jimmie Johnson led for most of the laps early in the race, but had a bad pit strategy and lost many spots.

Kahne's win moved him up from 14th in points to ninth. Kyle Busch finished last after clipping Jamie McMurray and hitting the wall.

This week's race is the LifeLock 400 from Michigan International Speedway. Coverage begins at 12:30 p.m. Sunday on TNT.

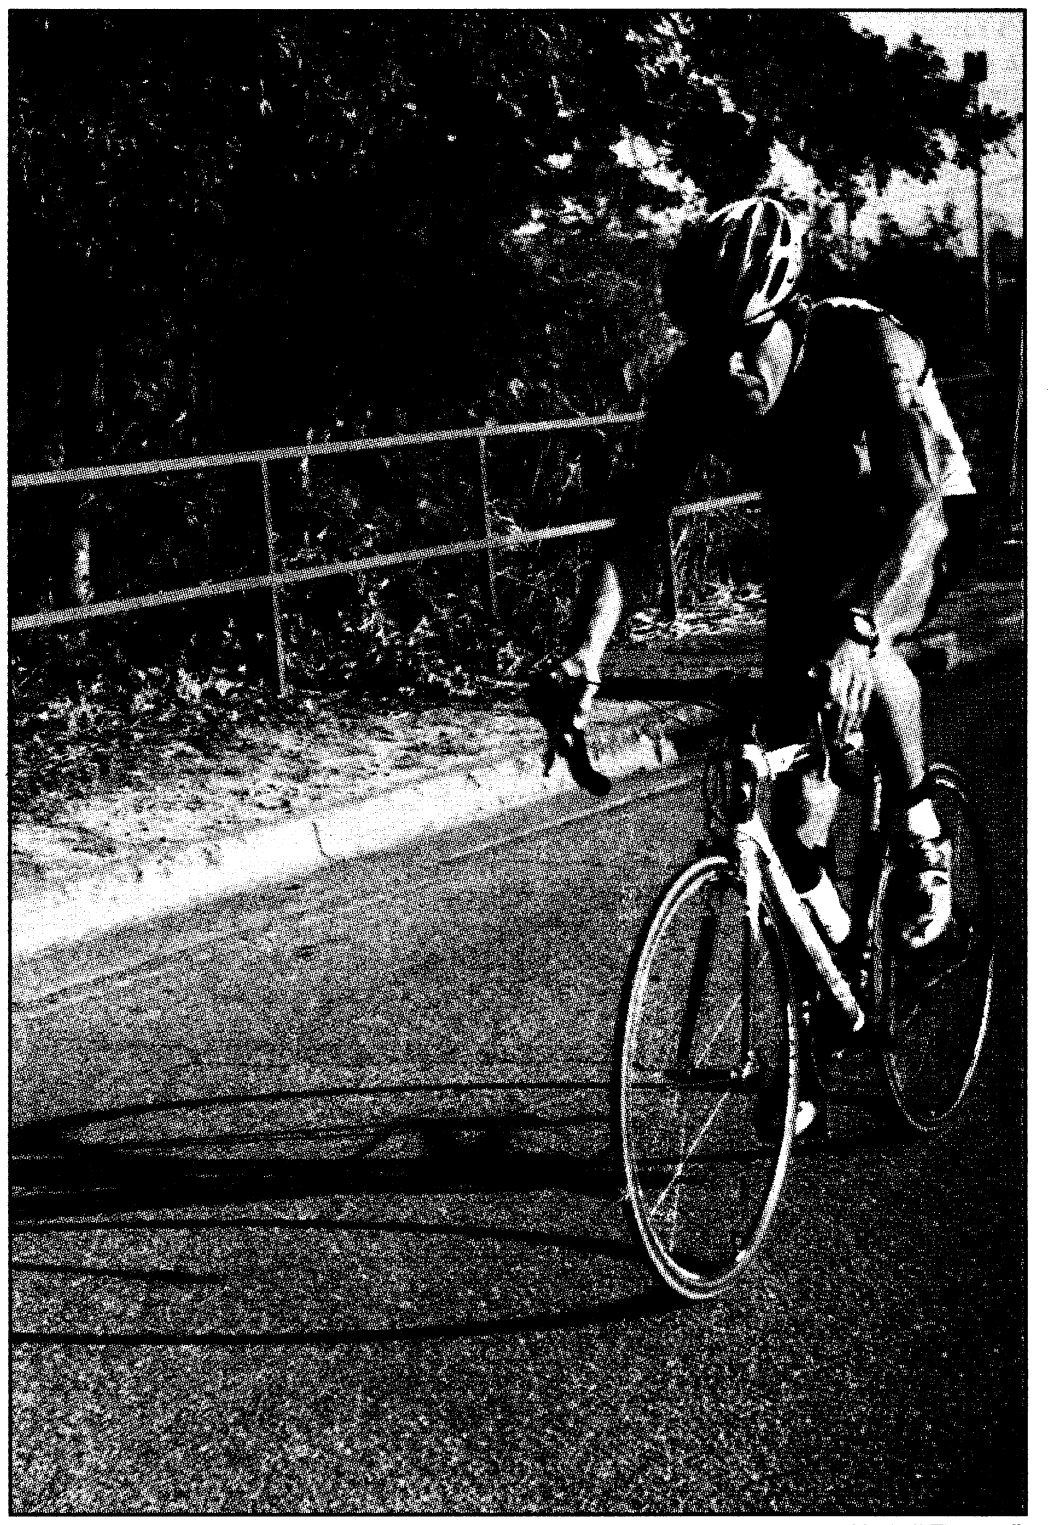
Farewell, Jim



Perhaps one of the best sportscasters ever, Jim McKay, died of natural causes at age 86 June 7. McKay was host of ABC's Wide World of Sports for more than 40 years. He also had the unfortunate job of telling Americans about the tragedy at the 1972 Olympics in Munich, Germany, where Palestinian terrorists kidnapped and killed 11 Israeli athletes.

McKay was one of a kind and will be missed.

Red Wings win Stanley Cup



I thought I was a huge sports fan until I found out the Detroit Red Wings had won the Stanley Cup through a commercial for Sports Illustrated magazine. Oops, my bad.

The Red Wings won their 11th title June 4 in six games over the Pittsburgh Penguins. Maybe I need to watch more SportsCenter.

At the start of the race, Sgt. 1st Class Shannon Swords wasn't sure he would be able to finish. Last month, he didn't even know if he would compete. Three months after tearing his calf muscle, Swords won his second Reverse Sprint Triathlon Saturday on Main Post. He was one of 115 participants competing in the three-event race.

Swords registered the morning of the race and finished in a time of one hour, one minute and point nine seconds — more than a minute and a half faster than his time last year and nearly four minutes ahead of the second place.

CYS to hold tryouts for off post football team

THE BAYONET
Mitchell Thomas IV

Child and Youth Services will hold tryouts for an off-post tackle football team during their football camp Tuesday through Thursday on Main Post. The team will be for boys ages 11 to 13.

CYS sports specialist Linda Laine said they hope to field at least 25 players.

The tryouts will focus on basic skills, including timed sprints, throwing and catching drills and agility tests. Coaches will have tryouts for individual positions before the start of the season.

Last season, 11-to 13-year-olds participated in the off post league because of low participation numbers on post, Laine said. With an increase in CYS sports participation, registration for football is expected to follow suit, Laine said.

Registration will begin in August. Players must also be registered with Columbus Youth Football to participate off post.

Practices for both CYS teams and the select team will be held on post prior to the season's opener in September. Players will be provided jerseys, helmets and pads. Games will be played in Columbus, with the exception of undetermined home games to be held on post. The Columbus Youth Football begins league play in September. For more information, call 706-545-3582.

AMU Soldier competes in third Olympic games

Mitchell Thomas IV

Spc. Glenn Eller will be competing in the Double Trap event during the Olympic Games in Beijing in August. This will be Eller's third Olympic appearance.

THE BAYONET

Twice Spc. Walton Glenn Eller III reached his goal of competing in the Olympics. But Eller said his journey won't be complete until he reaches the medal stand.

On Aug. 12 in Beijing Eller will compete in his third Olympics shooting in the Double Trap event. The 26-year-old is currently ranked No. 1 in the world in the Double Trap.

"I love this sport," Eller said. "It has allowed me to travel and do so many things that many never get the opportunity to do. It's great to compete doing something I enjoy and that I'm good at."

Eller began shooting sporting clays for fun with his father at the age of 8. He competed in junior and adult divisions until he was 14.

While watching his friend Richard Faulds, a world-class Double Trap shooter, compete in the 1996 Olympics in Atlanta, Eller became interested in the sport.

"I said to myself, 'Hey, I can do

"This event is always so awesome," Swords said. "All year, I'm around guys who gear up for this race, and to win again feels great."

Swords said finishing the run in 15:59, his best time in three years of the event, came as a surprise.

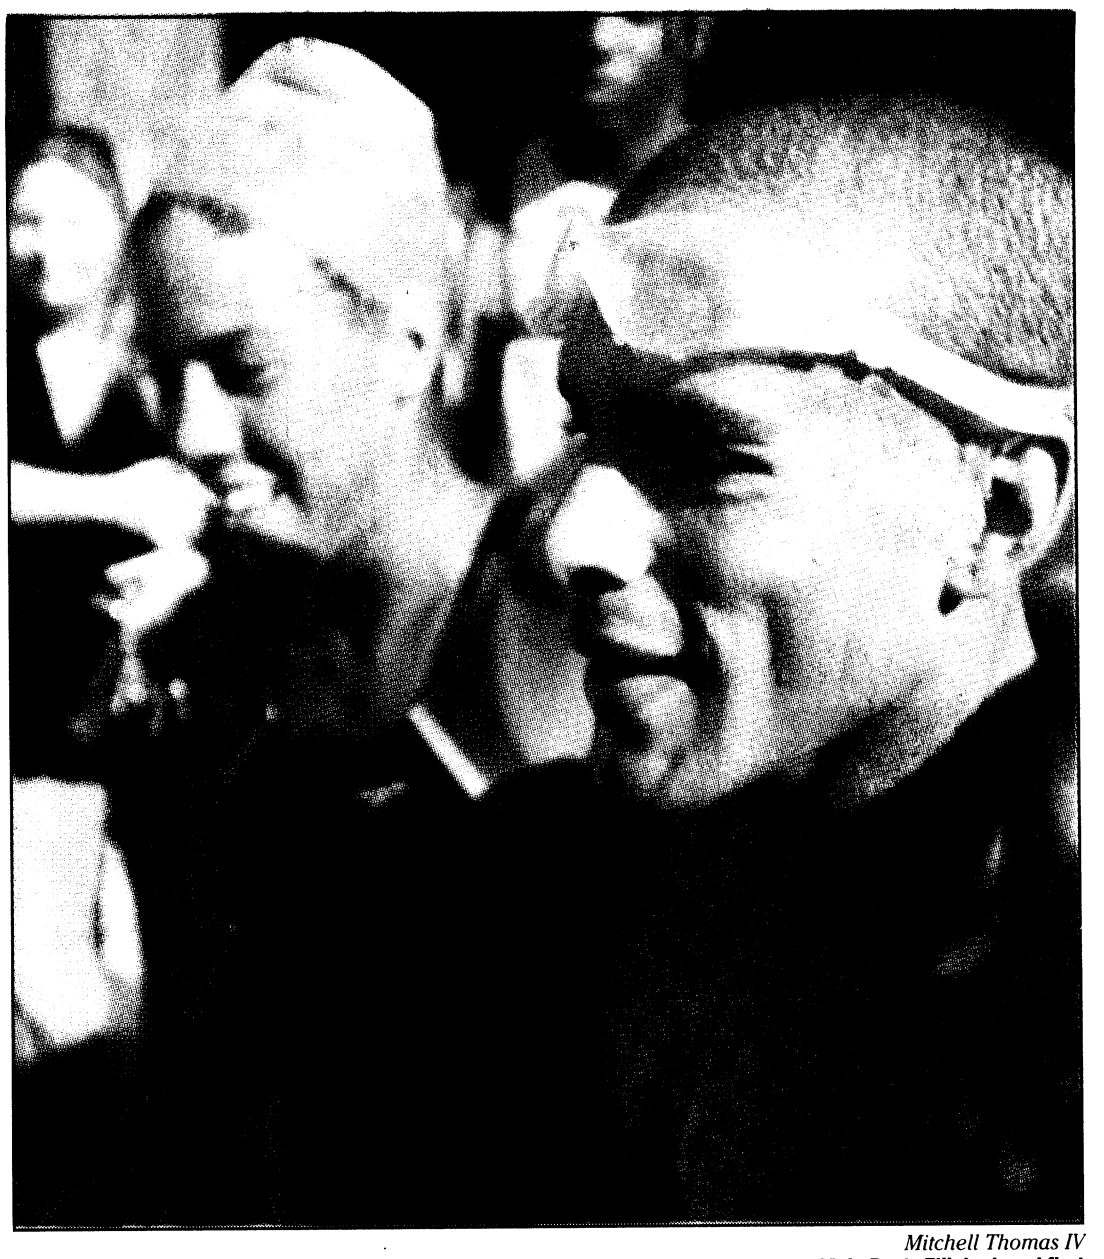
"I have no idea how I did that," he said, "I haven't been running enough to post a good time, but I've been biking three times as much as last year. I just came in with the idea of getting through the run, but it was the easiest part. It just didn't hurt."

National Guard Spc. Evan Elijah said this year's triathlon was "for redemption." After failing to finish last year because of a hamstring injury, Elijah finished first in the 30-to 39-year-old division and third overall with a time of 1:05:41.

He wasn't planning to compete in this year's triathlon. Elijah, who was training for this year's Army Ten-Miler, was told a few weeks ago he couldn't compete in the Ten-Miler because his National Guard unit wasn't activated.

"I didn't know what to expect because I hadn't been doing much biking at all," Elijah said. "I did better than I thought I would do, and next year I'm going to win it. You can put that in The Bayonet."

Alexandra Bagget, a civilian and first-time competitor, won the female competition with a time of 1:18:51. This was Bagget's first triathlon win.



"I like this event because swimming last helps with the heat," said Bagget, who has competed in triathlons for four years. "It feels great to beat all of those guys."

Jose Solis Jr. helped lead his team, the Borinqueneers, to first place in the mixed team category. Solis Jr. also ran the entire race as an individual, placing fourth in the 19-to 29-year-old category.

Last year, two members of the Borinqueneers, Solis Jr. and his sister Loraine, raced alongside their father, Maj. Jose Solis Sr., a cyclist who competed in the Pan American games. Solis Sr., who is currently deployed in Iraq was replaced by Capt. Victor Torres, who finished a minute behind Solis Sr.'s time last year.

"It was an honor for them to ask me to replace their dad in this event," Torres said. "I've known the family for a long time, and I knew the world-class athlete that Jose Sr. is. These were really big shoes to fill."

Soldier: Will compete in Double Trap event Aug. 12

Spc. Glenn Eller won gold in the World Cup and World Championships in 2003. Last year he won gold in the World Cup and World Cup Finals and set three national records in the Pan American Games' spring selection match.

that. How hard can it be?'" Eller said. "When you watch someone who's good, it looks really easy. It's a lot harder than it looks."

A few days after the games, Eller tried double trap for the first time.

"Sporting clays isn't in the Olympics, and the Olympics was a goal of mine," Eller said. "It was an easy decision to switch."

But Eller's transition from sporting clays wasn't easy. He struggled initially because of the speed of the sport.

The following year Eller improved. He won his first DoubleTrap contest at the World Championships' spring selection match at Fort Benning, taking the junior title. He missed making the finals by one target.

Two years later, he tied for second place, making the Men's World Championship team, and has been on the team for nine years.

In 2003, Eller won gold in the World Cup and World Championships.

He earned spots in the 2000 and 2004 Olympics.

But Eller said his Olympic finishes were difficult to swallow. He finished 12th in 2000 and 17th in 2004.

"When you work for four years, and you know you're at the top of your game, it hurts when you put up a performance that's subpar," he said. "You feel like those four years are down the drain."

Soon after the 2004 games, Eller embarked on a different path.

His friend and 2000 Olympic teammate Staff Sgt. Bill Keever, suggested that Eller join the Army and the Army Marksmanship Unit's Double Trap team. Eller enlisted in 2006.

Last year, he had his best season in Double Trap, winning gold in the World Cup and World Cup Finals. He set three national records with 149 out of 150 targets, 294 out of 300 targets and 343 out of 350 in the Pan American Games' spring selection match. Eller also won the Olympic qualifier with a 10-target lead over third place.

In this year's games, Eller will compete against his teammate Spc. Jeffrey Holguin, who is ranked No. 9 in the world.

"He would do just about anything for me and I'd do the same for him. But when we compete against each other, it's all for one," Holgiun said.

Eller said being a Soldier has helped him become a more structured and disciplined shooter.

"In the first Olympics, I was over prepared," he said. "I knew it so well that I could do it with my eyes closed, but when I opened my eyes, I struggled. In 2004, I was under prepared, and it was worse. If I'm shooting great one day and my head isn't in it, I don't need it. But If I struggle with my technique, I have to bring my head into it to make up for it. The mind and body have to complement each other."

Although Eller is honored to represent his country and the Army in the Olympics, he said, he isn't satisfied with simply "making it."

"Just being a part of it all is an honor, but when you are a part of it as a competitor, you want to win," Eller said. "They say the Olympic motto is that it's not all about winning — it's about taking part. I feel you can take part and win at the same time."

ECompany, 1st Battalion (Airborne), 507th Parachute Infantry Regiment, earned its first win of the intramural softball regular season Monday at Gowdy Field.

E Co. came from behind to defeat the CONUS Replacement Center Team A, 8-7. Both teams have a record of 1-1.

CRC had its best inning in the first, scoring three runs, including a single by Dan Brown, which brought in Norman Perez.

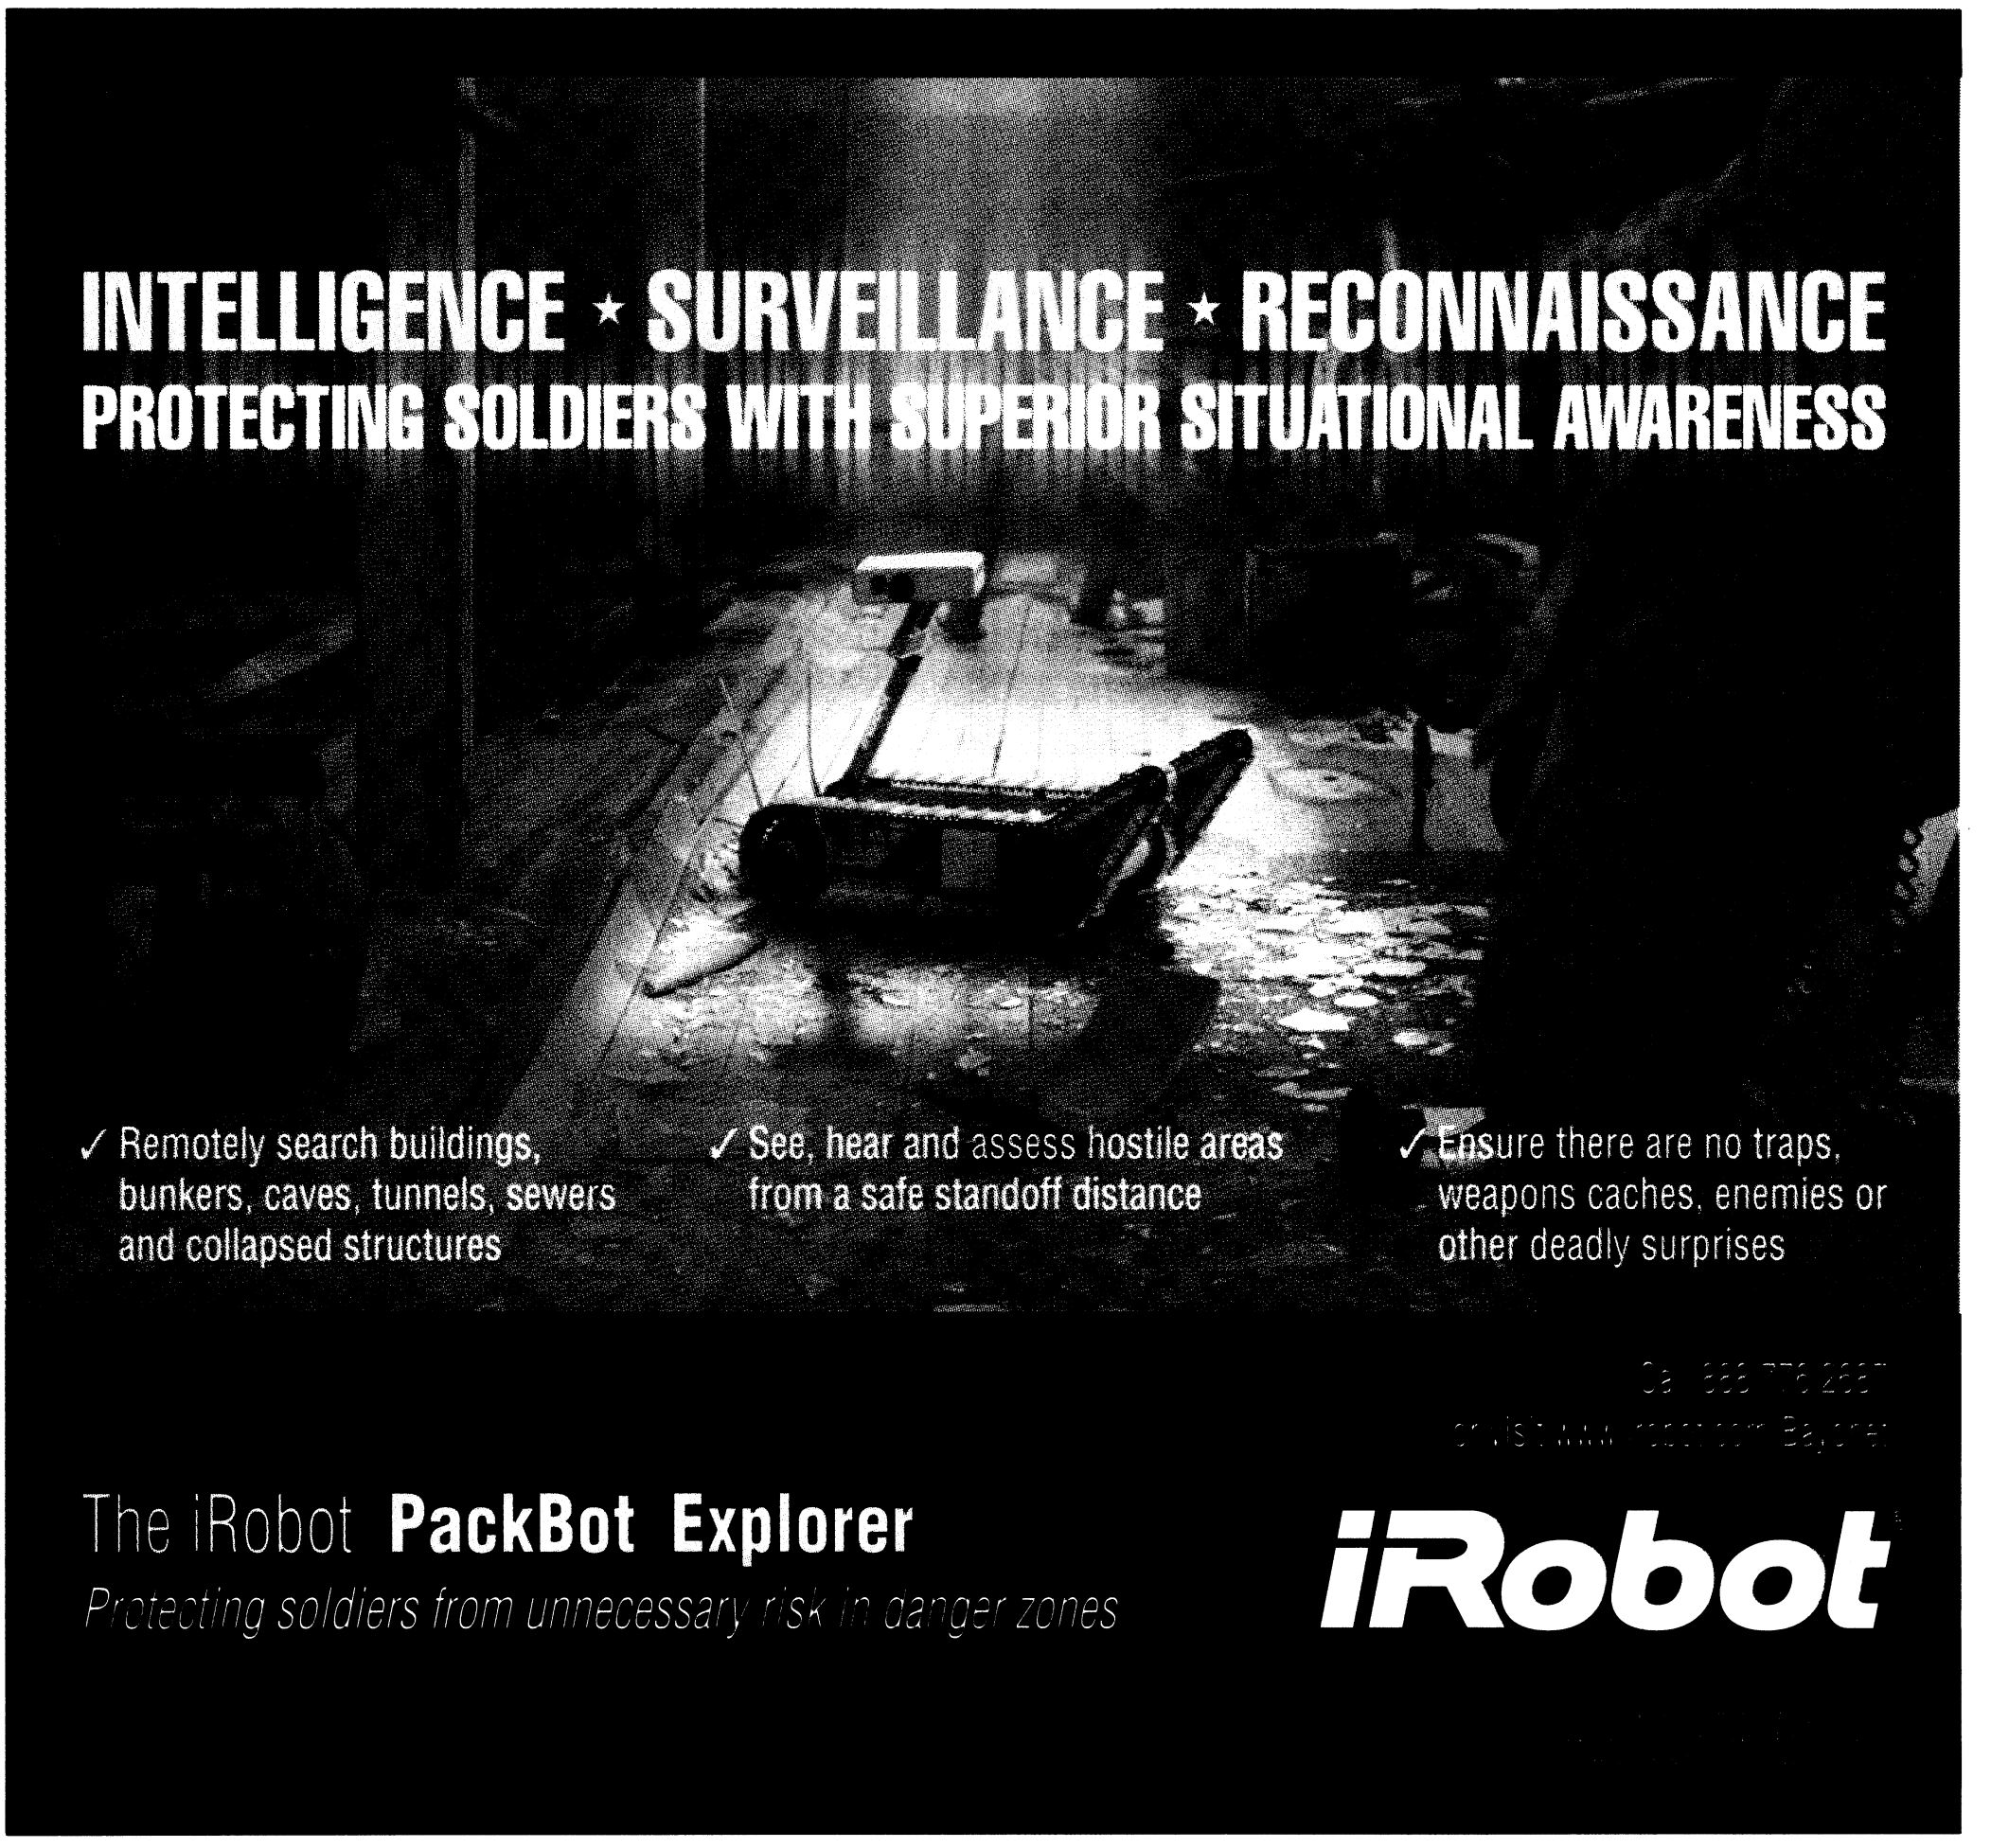
Both teams scored two runs, making the score 5-2 in favor of CRC.

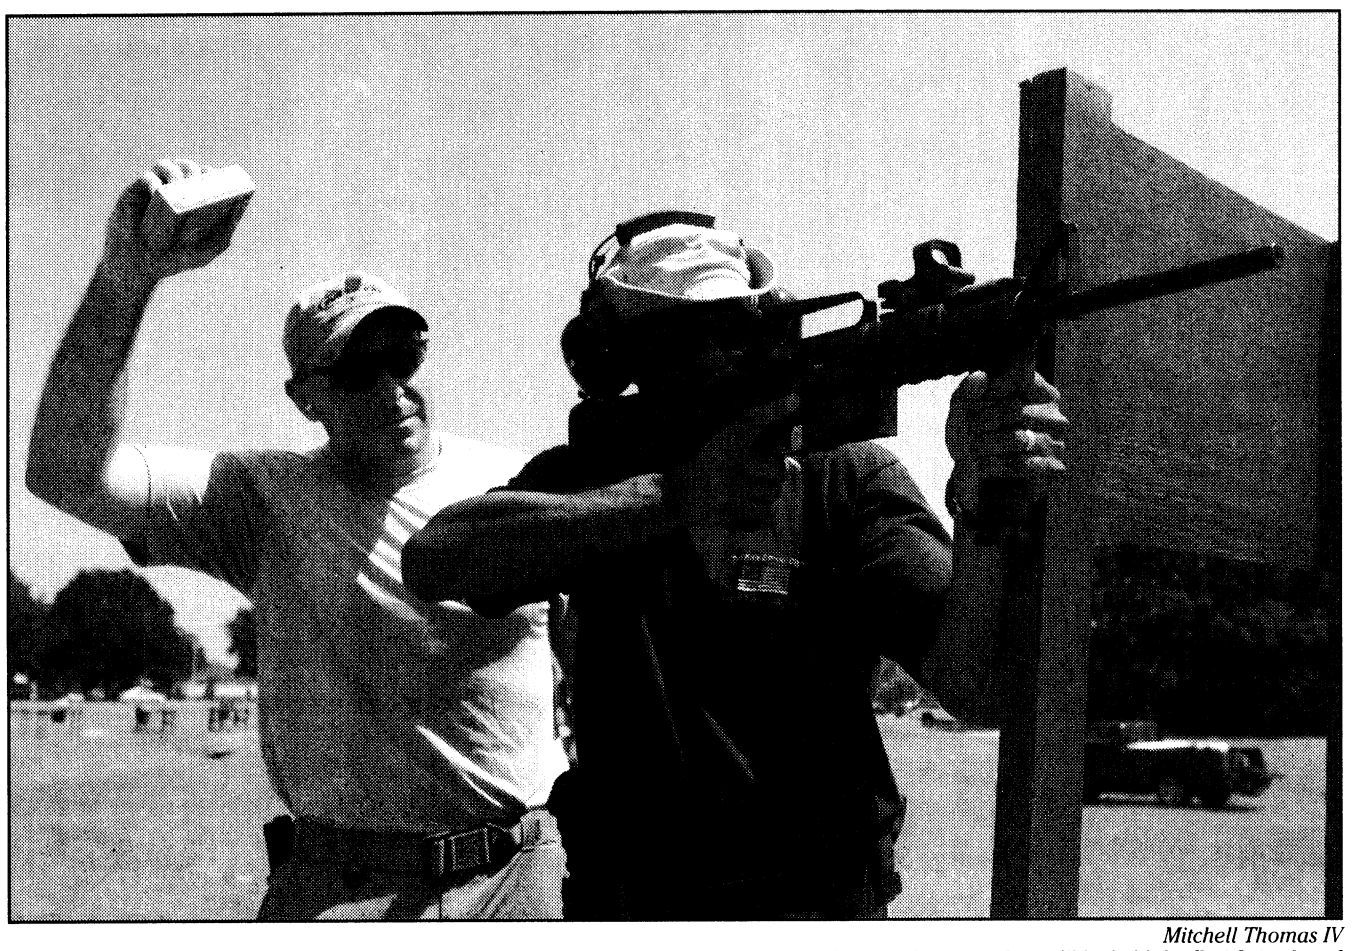
In the fourth, CRC's Anthony Creech ripped an in-the-park home run to deep left scoring the teams only run of the inning.

In the bottom of the inning, E Co.'s Jeffrey Livingston drove a double down the first base line. Two at-bats later, Livingston was brought in with another double to give his team their only score of the inning. Livingston led his team with two singles, a double and a run scored.



After a run by CRC in the top of the fifth, E Co. capitalized on several CRC fielding errors in the bottom of the inning. They scored three runs, which cut CRC's lead down to one.

CRC's defense struggled in the bottom of the sixth inning. Tankersly hit a blooper, which bounced off a fielder's glove, resulting in a single. Jazmani Medina scored after James Bacas doubled following another CRC fielding error.



E Co. scored two runs in the inning to take their first lead.

In the top of the seventh, CRC's Joe Columbus led off with a base hit. But E Co.'s defense closed out the inning and the game with three straight putouts.

Intramural softball games are played Mondays, Tuesdays and Wednesdays at Gowdy and Knappenberger Fields beginning at 6 p.m. For more information, call Willie Spann at 706-984-1994.

Rifle and pistol club held weekend trial matches

Mitchell Thomas IV

Lt. Col. Regan Carr takes aim at a target as Odin Toomey times him. The close quarter rifle and pistol matches will be held the first Saturday of every month from July through September.

THE BAYONET
Mitchell Thomas IV

The Fort Benning Rifle and Pistol Club tested a new target and scoring system Sunday at Shelton Range on Main Post.

"We were kind of like guinea pigs for this new system," said Lt. Col. Regan Carr, who has been a member of the club for two years. "I'm right-handed, but some of the targets require you to use your off hand or off shoulder, which can help make you more proficient." The off hand and shoulder refers to the non-dominant hand and shoulder.

The firearms allowed during the matches are limited to stock pistols and military regulated rifles including AK-47s and AR-15s and M-4s shot at targets of 25-yards or less.

Match director, retired Sgt. 1st Class Jim Graham, said shooters must balance speed and accuracy to be successful on the new course.

"Shooting faster is better, but you can't shoot fast and sloppy," Graham said. "Accuracy is the key."

Graham said the matches help develop the Soldier's weapon proficiency in urban combat situations.

"These guys are training for what they have to do for real," Graham said. "Most of the guys out here have been deployed numerous times, and my personal objective is making these Soldiers the best they can be. That's what this is all about."

Night matches will be held the first Saturday of July, August and September. Each match will begin with a safety run at 6:30 p.m., followed by the competition at nightfall. For more information, call Graham at 706-689-3371.

AMU Soldiers compete in national pistol and rifle matches

U.S. ARMY MARKSMANSHIP UNIT
Accessions Support Brigade

Soldiers of the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit have scored some major victories recently.

FIT FACTS

MWR FITNESS DIRECTOR
Lori Smith

This week I want to share my experience of participating in my very first Triathlon. This was a very strenuous, mentally testing, tiring, but wonderful event. I would recommend training for a triathlon to anyone. But if you need a little more convincing, then read on.

I started training for my triathlon in January. For the first three and a half months, my training consisted of looking at my bike thinking I should go for a ride, checking the temperature outside thinking it was too cold to run and looking on line for cute triathlon outfits. It finally clicked in late April that I had actually signed up for a triathlon that would take place in May. So I started running and swimming. I started biking about three weeks before the event and rode about 50 miles total.

Here is my first piece of advice — train more. If you sign up for an event like this, ride your bike more. The seat takes some time to get used to.

Overall I did well. The event was in Panama City, Fla. I splurged and rented a condo with a balcony overlooking the ocean. I figured it would help calm my nerves. It did after the event was over.

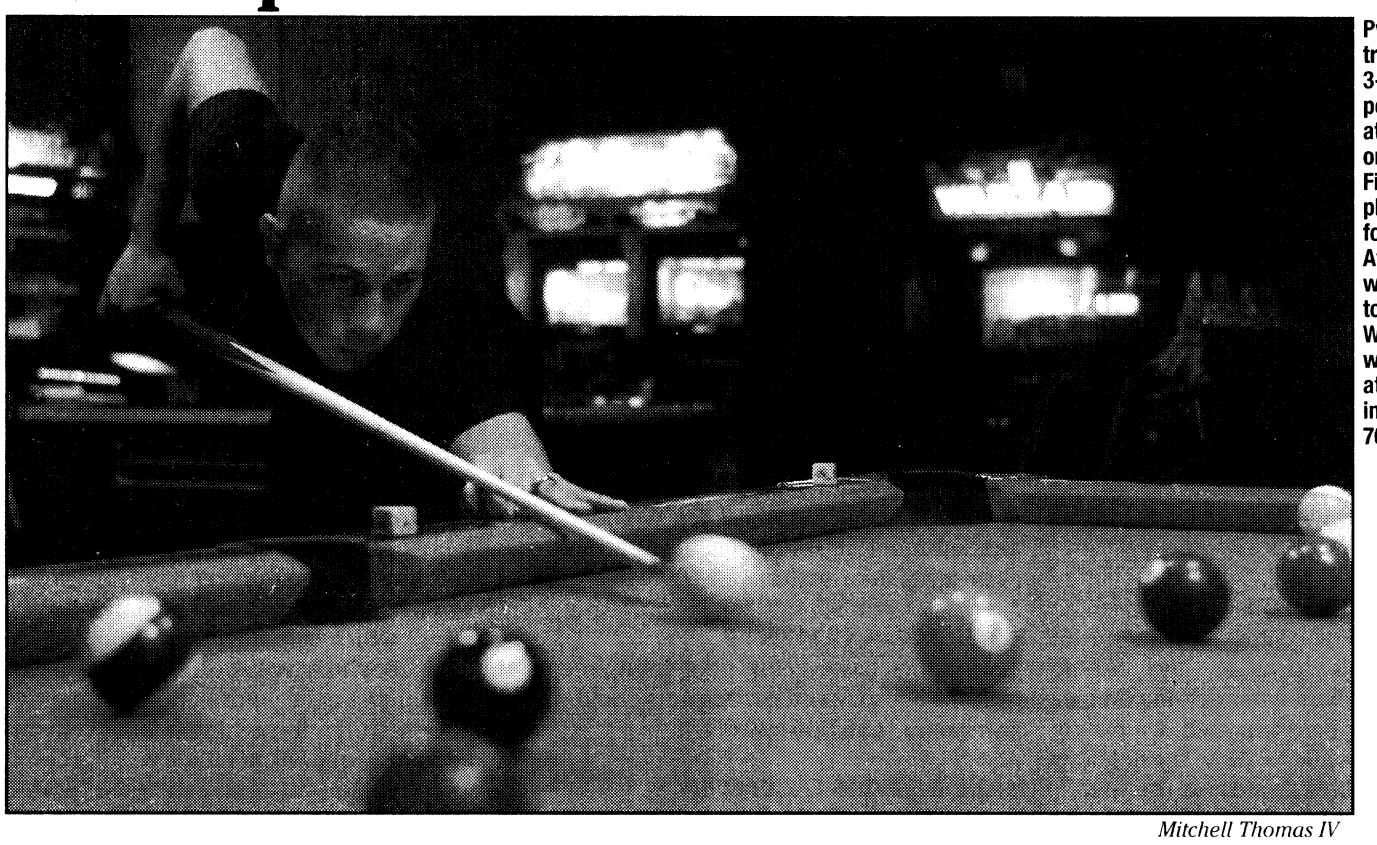
I signed up for this event with two other good friends, and we promised we would motivate each other through it. I also had several of my best friends come to Panama City for moral support.

The day before the event, we all had a really nice dinner and watched sting rays play in the waves as the sun set over the ocean. Saturday morning we got up, feeling pretty good. We road our bikes to the event and started setting up our equipment in the transition area. This was a typical triathlon — an ocean swim, bike ride and a run. They began calling the racers to the starting line and we began walking to the ocean. The closer I got to the ocean, the more my heart began to beat. I had only practiced swimming in a pool with no other swimmers around me.

As I and 200 other people prepared to run into the waters of the gulf, the starting gun went off. As I started running, I began saying to myself, "what the heck were you thinking?"

One of my friends is gone like a fish in water. I looked back at my other friend and mouthed good luck before my head went under, and I started swimming.

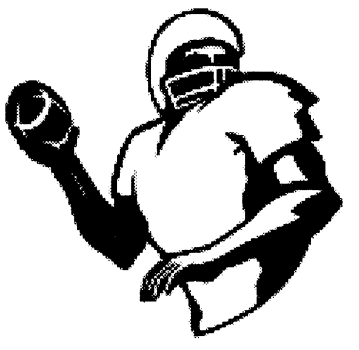
After about 15 very long minutes of ingesting lots of salt water, I found myself back on the beach headed to the transition area. I met my friends in the transition area, and we grabbed our bikes to start riding. The bike ride was long and hot and it tested my mind. We finished it in about an hour.



We got back to the transition area, put our bikes up, grabbed some water and started running. With my legs feeling like they weighed 100 pounds each, I was hot, tired and just wanted to stop for some fried shrimp and a cold beer. But I had two very good friends pushing me forward. I had to run and walk the last 3 miles, but the three of us finished, to the cheers of other friends waiting for us at the finish line.

After the race, we went back to the condo, popped a cold beverage and toasted our success. I never felt better.

I learned three things on this adventure:



- I need to train more for the next triathlon, which is July 2.
- You don't have to be a swimsuit model to compete and complete a fitness event.
- You can do anything with the love and support of good friends. I want to thank all my friends who helped me along. You guys are the best. And to all of you reading this thinking you can never do a triathlon — believe me, yes, you can.

Protect America...and secure your future.

Wide-Open Spaces

Are you interested in a job with wide-open spaces and opportunities to match?

As a Border Patrol Agent, your primary focus would be to work in tandem with your U.S. Customs and Border Protection partners to prevent terrorists and terrorist weapons from entering the United States. Border Patrol Agents also detect and prevent the smuggling and unlawful entry of undocumented aliens into the United States, and apprehend those people found to be in violation of the immigration laws. Also, due to the increase in drug smuggling operations, the Border Patrol is the primary drug-interdicting agency along the land border between the ports of entry.

We are looking for physically fit men and women who want the ever-changing missions we offer and have the intelligence and courage to handle the responsibility. If this is you, then accept the challenge!

EAR TAGS

Auburn University is conducting a study of the feral pigs on Fort Benning to understand their population size, reproductive rates, movement patterns and food habits. This information will help determine what impacts feral pigs have on habitat, wildlife populations and military training.

Pig hunters, please report the ear tag number, ear tag color, date harvested and general location of harvest to the Conservation Branch.

Several pigs have been fitted with radio-tracking collars to help us determine habitat use. Please attempt to identify and avoid harvesting collared pigs.

If a collared pig is harvested or found, please return the collar to Conservation Branch, First Division Road, Building 5884, Harmony Church.

For more information, call 706-544-7079, 706-544-7516 or 707-544-7319.

$40 BOUNTY FOR FERAL PIGS

The Conservation Branch of the Fort Benning is offering a $40 bounty to hunters who harvest feral pigs on post.

Licensed hunters, including active duty Soldiers, retirees and civilians that harvest pigs, will be paid after turning in the pig's tail. A data sheet must accompany the tail when collecting funds.

Tails and sheets are turned in at the Building 5884 on Tuesdays from noon to 2 p.m. and on the last Friday of every month from noon to 2 p.m.

For more information, call Toon at 706-536-6021.

ALL-ARMY SPORTS

The Department of the Army Sports Office has an online application for the All-Army Sports Program. Go to www.armymwr.com and select the Recreation and the Army Sport link. Soldiers can go directly to armysports.cfsc.army.mil.

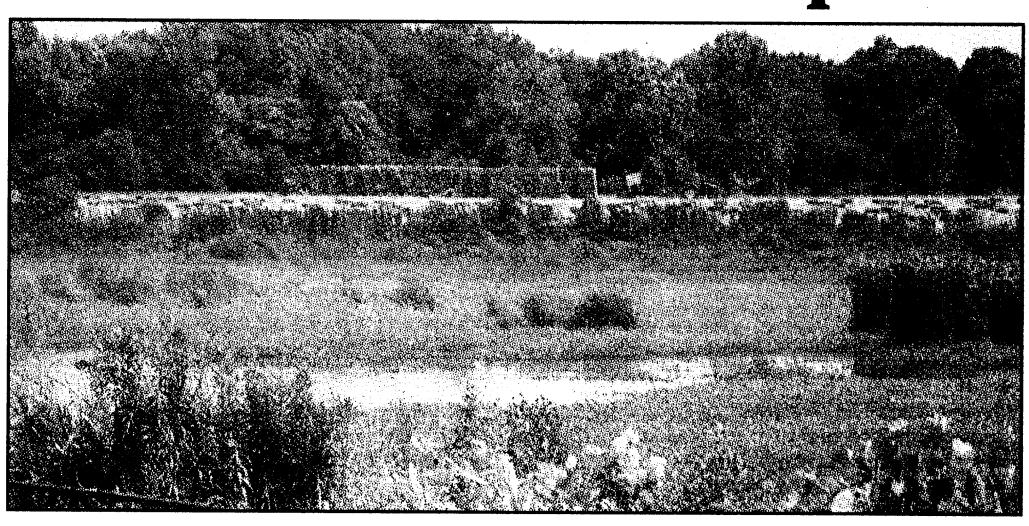
Columbus Water Works to reduce carbon footprint

THE BAYONET
Brenda Donnell

Columbus Water Works, which supplies Fort Benning's drinking water and manages its waste, will reduce their carbon footprint by next summer through a new process they developed which could save the nation $300 million to $1.4 billion.

Cliff Arnett, senior vice president and director of Division of Operations and Technical Services at Columbus Water Works, said they patented a class-A biosolids digestion process, called Columbus Biosolids Flow-Through Thermophilic Treatment, and the patent was donated to the Water Environment Research Foundation so it will be available to other public systems at no charge.



"It is cutting-edge, one-of-a-kind technology," Arnett said. "There are similar projects around the country, but none like ours."

Arnett said the other biosolids projects are more like pasteurization. Some take as long as 24 hours, but the CBFT3 process takes about 30 minutes.

Columbus Water Works is converting their old mesophilic digesters at the South Columbus Water Resource Facility into thermophilic digesters, which destroy pathogens at higher temperatures in less time. Mesophilic digesters cook waste at body temperature and take about 17 days to process the waste into biosolids.

Post child development centers celebrate Army's birthday

Birthday book teaches about Army history

THE BAYONET
Cheryl Rodewig

In honor of the Army's 233rd anniversary June 14, Army Youth Services created a children's book to distribute to child development centers worldwide. The book, Happy Birthday U.S. Army, was the focal point of Army birthday celebrations this week at post CDCs.

This 23-page illustrated story covers Army history and diversity, the strength of the Army family and why the Army celebrates its birthday, all from the perspective of a young boy.

"It really is a history lesson put into words a child can understand," said Sarah Hertig, Army Family Covenant coordinator.

Children had themed activities all week in preparation for the Army's upcoming birthday, Hertig said. They could read the book, make crafts, dress up, sing the birthday song and eat birthday cake.

Vacation Bible School's Power Lab teaches about God

Children learn through crafts, skits

THE BAYONET
Cheryl Rodewig

"I really like it; I think I'll be here tomorrow," said Ryan Crabbe, an 8-year-old who attended Vacation Bible School Monday at Faith Middle School.

More than 160 children, from ages 3 to 11, were registered for VBS this week. On some days, closer to 200 showed up.

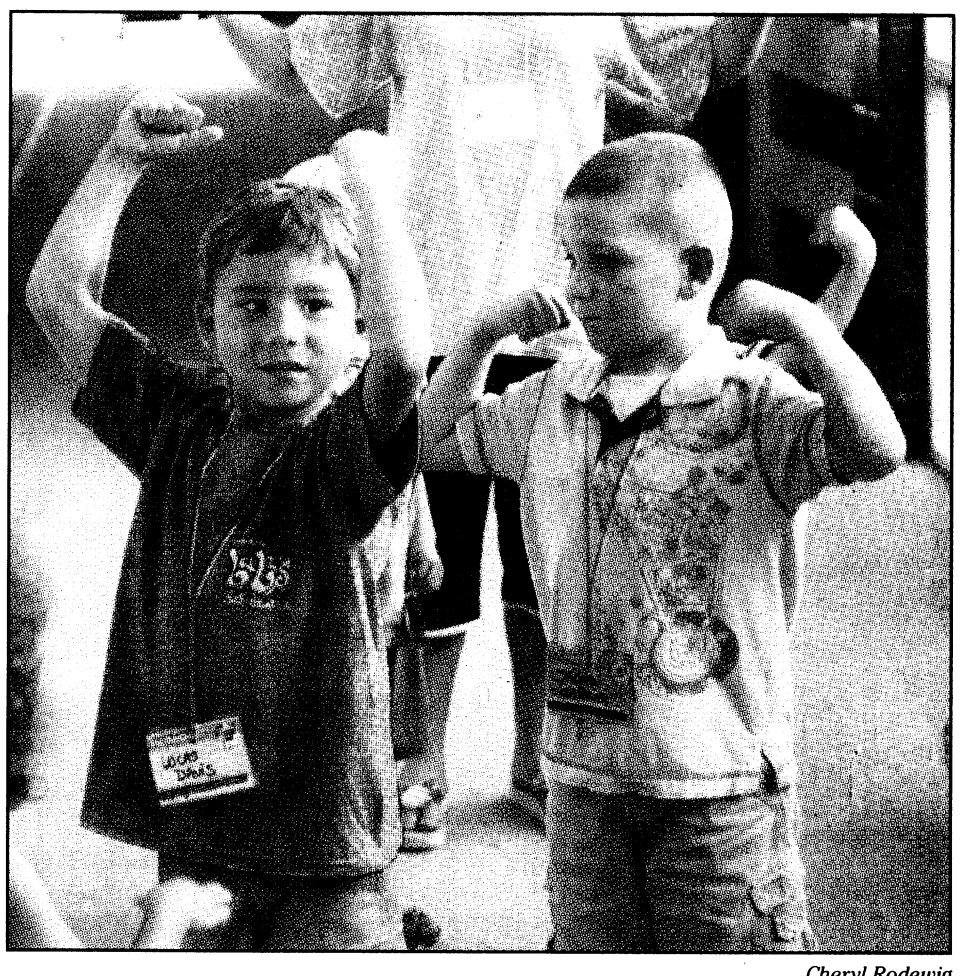
Ryan said he liked the Bible story about the 10 men with leprosy who had "spots on them." He said he learned he could be thankful "because God helps us."

The theme for this year's VBS is Power Lab, with kids learning what God gives them the power to do.

Every day, children learn a different thing they can do. A cartoon "Bible buddy" goes along with each day.

Bible buddies help everyone remember the Bible points, said Rachel Houston, 10, who made a test-tube keychain during craft time to hold all her Bible buddies.

"I like how we have so much fun," she said. "I think it's just fun to learn about all this stuff … thankfulness, Jesus, singing songs."



Besides the crafts, songs and Bible stories, kids watched skits, played games, had snacks and learned about science in the "lab."

Muriel Gregory, volunteer VBS coordinator, said planning the activities and getting everything ready kept her busy while her husband, Capt. Eric Gregory, was deployed. She has never organized VBS on post before, but she was glad to help.

"It's a lot of fun — as a volunteer and as a participant," she said.

Don't let insects Bug You

THE BAYONET
Rachel L. Watkins

Summer is here and that means more insects.

Soldiers may encounter a number of bugs in the field including, ticks, fire ants, mosquitoes, bees, wasps, scorpions, black widows and beetles.

There are several ways to prevent insect bites, said Dr. (Maj.) Laura Pacha, chief of Preventive Medicine. She recommends each unit implement the Department of Defense insect repellent system that includes treating uniforms with permethrin, an insecticide, and using DEET on exposed skin. DEET lasts 6 to 12 hours, depending on weather.

"Permethrin and DEET prevent the bites so you aren't faced with secondary skin infections or even the annoyance of bug bites and the diseases and other problems they can cause," she said.

Treating uniforms prevents more than 90 percent of insect bites, Pacha said.

Permethrin in a spray form lasts six washes. In a "soak" form, it lasts up to 50 washes. It is available at every troop medical clinic on post.

Soldiers in combat are required to wear pre-treated permethrin uniforms to reduce the chance of contracting disease, Pacha said. Sand flies carry leishmaniasis, a disease caused by protozoan parasites, and mosquitoes carry the West Nile virus, malaria and yellow fever.

Pacha said Soldiers should also avoid bodies of stagnant water, because they are often breeding grounds for mosquitoes.

The Force Health Protection Task also recommends these steps to prevent insect bites:

•Use a bed net while sleeping and don't wear perfume, cologne or shaving cream in the field.

•Always check for bugs on your body after being in the field.

Also watch for:

•Black widow spiders: Usually found in wood and brush piles and in dark corners of sheds, garages and houses. The spider is jet black or dark brown with a red-orange hourglass mark on the underside of the abdomen.

•Brown recluse spiders: These spiders live in dark areas. They live beneath flat rocks, under loose bark and in decaying logs.

•Ticks: These are parasitic. They attach to skin and feed on animals and people. They live in grass, shrubs and woodland habitats. Check body frequently for ticks. If tick is found, immediately remove with fine tweezers. Grasp the tick as close to skin as possible and gently pull straight out. Wash bite area and apply antiseptic.

VOTE
2008 General Election

As the Army's Senior Service Voting Representative, I strongly encourage you to participate and cast your vote in the 2008 General Election. Voting is the essence of our democracy and one of our most fundamental Constitutional rights. Our elected officials have very important jobs; the good news is, you have a voice in who is elected to do them...if you vote. You can exercise your right to vote by completing the Federal Post Card Application (FPCA Standard Form 76) or complying with the ballot request procedures enacted by the state in which you vote. The FPCA Standard Form 76, or other request, should be mailed or sent electronically as soon as possible. You should then receive your absentee ballot as requested. The Federal Voting Assistance Program has been working with the states to allow ballots to be submitted and received electronically. Check with your Unit Voting Assistance Officer (UVAO) for your state requirements.

Mailing guidelines differ from state to state; therefore, we recommend you check your state's guidelines by contacting your UVAO, or by visiting the Army Voting Assistance Program website at www.vote.army.mil. It is imperative that you complete and send in your ballot immediately to ensure it is received by your hometown local election officials no later than your state's deadline. If you are an overseas voter and have not received your regular absentee ballot 30-45 days prior to your state's deadline, you should complete a Federal Write-in Absentee Ballot (FWAB) and send it to your local election official. If you later receive your absentee ballot, you should also complete and send it in for processing.

The 2008 General Election is quickly approaching, so please don't wait until the very last minute to register or send in your absentee ballot.

BE SMART. DO YOUR PART. VOTE!

REUBEN D. JONES
Brigadier General, USA
The Adjutant General

Benning Buddies offers fun for tots

Program includes music, art

THE BAYONET

Benning Buddies, a program that offers water play, music, art and crafts and story time for 2- to 4-year-olds, is open for enrollment.

Gymnastics is also included in activities. Every Monday and Tuesday, Benning Buddies walk to the Child Youth Services building for gymnastics class, where they do the bunny hop, bear walks, frog leaps and somersaults with Ann Brown, the instructor.

Gymnastics helps the children's balance and eye and hand coordination skills, she said.

"Benning Buddies gives the children a chance to learn how to interact and share with other children so when they get to school, they'll be prepared," said Tracy McMillan, director at Tot Town Child Development Center. The program also teaches the children how to respond to adults, she said.

Each week has different themes. This week was Father's Day, and the next week is music and movement, the children will make maracas and kazoos and sing.

Classes are offered in the morning from 9:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. and from 1:30 to 4:30 p.m. The waiting list for the morning class was so long Tot Town decided to open another class to accommodate everyone, McMillan said.

Children can be enrolled for Tuesday and Thursday classes or Monday, Wednesday and Friday classes or all days.

Registration for Benning Buddies is free and open all summer.

The cost of the program is based on the gross annual household income. To register for Benning Buddies, go to Central Registration, Building 359, Ingersoll Street, or call 706-545-2079.

For more information on Benning Buddies, call Tot Town Child Development Center at 706-689-8698 or go to www.benningmwr.com/CYSbenningbuddies31905.htm.

3rd HBCT honors spouses

3RD HBCT PUBLIC AFFAIRS
Spc. Ben Hutto

The leaders of the 3rd Heavy Brigade Combat Team honored 12 family readiness group leaders in a ceremony held behind the brigade's headquarters at Kelley Hill, June 1.

Col. Wayne W. Grigsby, Jr., the commander of the 3rd HBCT, praised the members of the FRG for their efforts during the brigade's recent 14-month deployment to Iraq.

"By now, with all the times we've deployed, we think all you've done is just what spouses do, but that is not the case," he said. "(Spouses) don't have to do any of this. That is why we are here today to honor what they have done."

Grigsby said it was this group that allowed the Sledgehammer Soldiers to focus on their jobs by taking care of everything back home. He thanked the FRG leaders for treating every spouse and family member of the 3rd HBCT with dignity and respect, regardless of the Soldier's rank.

"I think we all know how hard it is to be a junior-enlisted spouse. I would be remiss if I didn't thank everyone down to the lowest ranking private's spouse for everything they did for their Soldier and their family while we were gone," he said.

Grigsby cited many examples of how the spouses of the 3rd HBCT took on the challenge of having a deployed Soldier, from teacher's conferences that many attended alone, care packages that were sent to spouses and other Soldiers in the brigade and the volunteer work many FRGs took on to help support the community.

"All of these were important reasons why we were successful over in Iraq," Grigsby said. "I want to thank all of you for taking care of our most important resource, our Soldiers. We are nothing without our families. They are the foundation of everything we do."

Fathers have many responsibilities at home

USAIC CHAPLAINS OFFICE
Chaplain (Lt. Col.) Joel Funk

Since Sunday is Father's Day, let's take a look at some of the responsibilities of the father in the home.

Probably the most helpful passage in the New Testament is found in Ephesians 5:21 through 6:24. To save space and time, I'll summarize.

The husband is to teach his children to honor their mother by honoring her himself in his own relationship with her. He is to model how honor behaves in relation to her. He is to love his wife as Christ loved the church and died for it. By teaching and example, he is to lead her into holiness and mutual righteous living through the Word of God.

Indeed, he is to love his wife as he loves his own body. He is to cherish and protect his wife and to assume responsibility for providing both for her needs and for those of the children.

I believe the protection a father should give goes beyond the merely physical. He is to protect his wife spiritually, emotionally and psychologically. Naturally this includes encouragement and affirmation, but especially in listening carefully to his wife, responding to her, and as verse 21 suggests, being willing to yield to her wisdom when it is obviously better than his own.

It is interesting that at the beginning of Ephesians 6 that marvelous home-honoring fifth commandment is applied to children — "Honor your father and mother" — but then the further responsibility of the father is spelled out in these words:

"Fathers, do not exasperate your children; instead fathers bring them up in the training and instruction of the Lord" (verse 4, NIV).

In a society where men have passed off their spiritual and educational responsibilities either on their wives or, if they attend, a Sunday school, this should be very enlightening for some fathers. It is the father who is responsible for the spiritual, educational, emotional and psychological well-being of his children.

This is not to say that the wife doesn't share this amazing responsibility, for he certainly cannot do it alone. But he is the one who will finally answer to God for seeing the job is done.

While the father is carefully warned in this passage against exasperating his children, in Colossians 3:21, he is cautioned not to embitter them or they will become discouraged.

The way to avoid these problems is really quite simple. Just make sure that you give as many affirmations and encouragements and compliments as you do corrections.

Most important of all, remember that there is nothing a father can substitute for time spent with his children. I don't mean just being in their general vicinity, but holding direct contact and conversation with them.

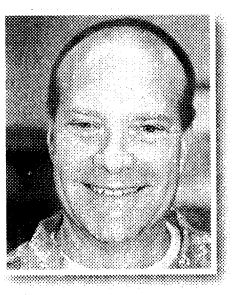
Most of us seem to be too busy succeeding at things of lesser importance than this job that God has given to us. I think it was back in the early '70s that a popular song entitled "The Cat's in the Cradle" by Harry Chapin came out. Looking back now, it seems rather strange that this song would come out of the era of the worst youth rebellion America has ever seen.

The point it makes is instantly recognizable. Children grow up so quickly. Give fatherhood your best, and give it right now:

"And the cat's in the cradle and the silver spoon,
Little boy blue and the man in the moon.
When you comin' home, son?'
I don't know when, but we'll get together then;
Dad, we're gonna have a good time then."

REUNIONS
New skills ease transition from theater to home life

CHAPLAIN FAMILY LIFE CENTER
Chaplain (Maj.) Richard Garvey



Last week we took a look at the battle mind skills that got you or your Soldier to war and back and how those skills must transition from the battlefront to the home front in order to have a great reunion.

To quickly review, B = buddies versus withdrawal. You need to share with others and build new bonds on the home front after winning the war on the battle front. A = accountability versus hyper-control. The new skill is to yield control instead of using a zero-tolerance, controlling approach.

T = targeted aggression versus inappropriate aggression. Nothing is lethal here, so "power down" and walk away.

T = tactically aware versus hyper-vigilant. Relax and let your heart believe what you already know: there are no dragons lurking on this planet.

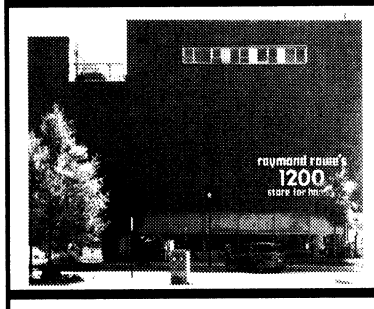
L = lethally armed versus locked and loaded at home. The new skill is to rely on words, not weapons, to settle disputes.

E = emotional control versus anger and detachment. You can open yourself up now. Be a good friend — someone others can talk with.

This week let's continue with part five of this series and cover the rest of the battle mind skills.

M = mission operational security versus secretiveness. On that planet, opsec kept people alive. Here, secrecy can kill relationships. The new skill is to recognize that openness and honesty in personal relationships are just as critical as opsec is in military warfare.

I = individual responsibility versus guilt. There, taking responsibility is at the heart of good soldiering and mission accomplishment. Here, inappropriate guilt can make life a nightmare. Loss is the hardest challenge of war. Honor any losses you've experienced by "learning and living" — learn what you should from what you've been through, and then live the life that those who are gone would be proud of. All you can do is all you can do, and all you can do is enough.



N = no road rules versus law and order. On deployment, defensive driving was necessary and encouraged for your survival. On this planet, law and order is the rule. Shift from offensive to defensive driving and control any anger or aggression.

D = discipline versus conflict. On that planet, extreme discipline and following orders guaranteed mission success. Military discipline applied to family situations usually just leads to frustration and hurt. The new skill is learning that requests work better than demands, and flexibility creates a better relationship.

Want more help on transitioning from the battlefront to the home front? There's the Welcome Home Reintegration Book for every Soldier. All this and much more is available to our spouses and loved ones on Fort Benning. Remember, there is a host of helping agencies, including our counseling center, the Chaplain Family Life Center, which offers caring, confidential counseling to Soldiers, couples and families. Confidential appointments can be made by calling 706545-1760.

We're proud of you, and we're here for you.

Process: Cost effective, environmentally friendly reduced, so they are saving about $3 million by constructing 22,000-gallon tanks instead of 1-million gallon tanks.

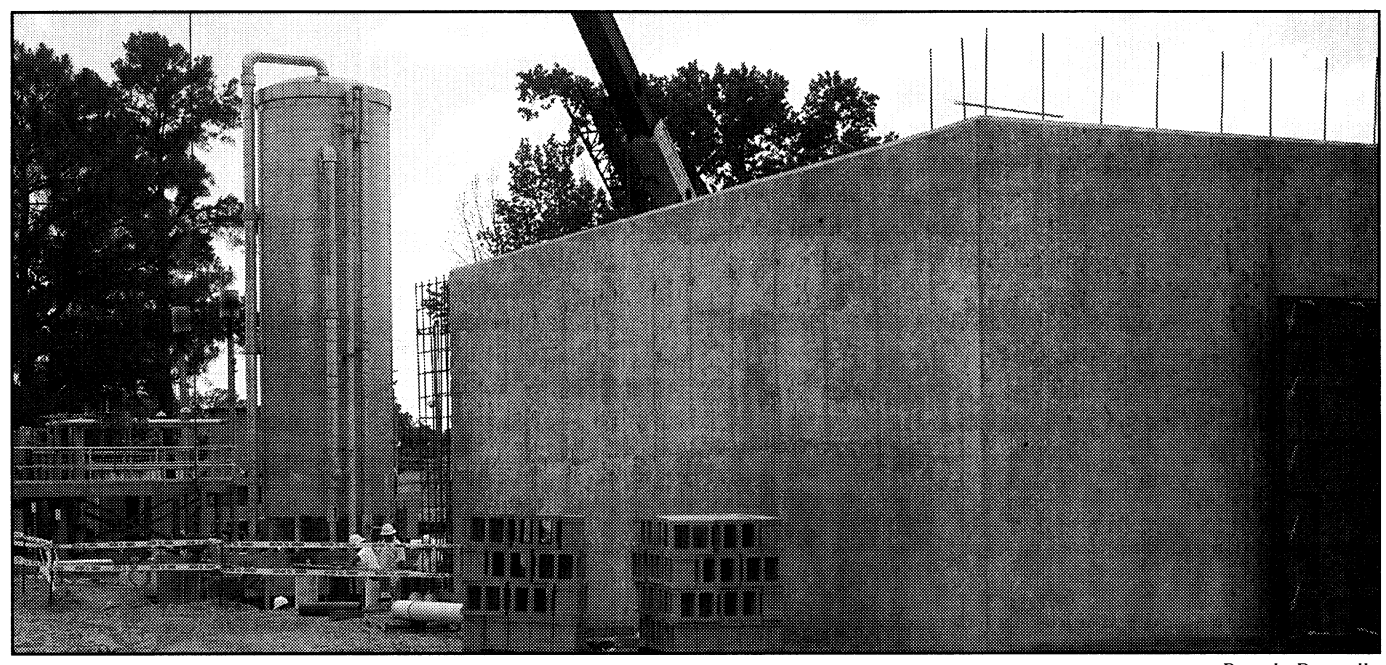
In another nod to green, methane gas produced by the CBFT3 process will be used to heat the digesters and generate electrical power to run the wastewater plant, saving about $600,000 to $800,000 per year, Arnett said. Using the methane gas in this way will also reduce air emissions, and all of this means savings to their customers.

In the past 15 years, Arnett said, they looked at several options to create a sustainable biosolids program to ensure they disposed of them in environmentally friendly and economical ways.

The new process was first discussed in 1999 when Columbus Water Works was having problems with their mesophilic digesters, which produce class B biosolids, so they consulted with Brown and Caldwell, an engineering firm, Arnett said.



They learned that Brown and Caldwell had an idea that could help Columbus Water Works produce class-A biosolids.

From that idea and through research conducted by the University of North Carolina's Department of Health and Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute, Columbus Water Works and Brown and Caldwell developed the CBFT3 process, which can produce class-A biosolids in 30 minutes using a plug-flow reactor, he said. As an added margin of safety, he said they will hold the biosolids in the digester about six days.

Biosolids can be used on farms to fertilize fields, but the EPA has different rules for different biosolids classes. Class A biosolids have no detectable levels of pathogens and can be used without restrictions in small quantities, but are subject to buffer requirements when used in bulk, according to the EPA Web site.

Class B biosolids are treated but still contain detectable levels of pathogens. Because of this, there are buffer requirements, and public access and crop harvesting restrictions.

Columbus Water Works use the Class B biosolids they currently produce on farmland they own in South Columbus, where they grow winter wheat and millet as hay crops.

Brenda Donnell

Construction work is ongoing at Columbus Water Works' South Columbus Water Resource Facility, where they treat wastewater. Columbus Water Works, which supplies Fort Benning's drinking water and manages its waste, will reduce their carbon footprint by next summer through a new process they developed which could save the nation $300 million to $1.4 billion.

Kids: Attend VBS, learn from teens stations during the afternoon. Gregory said that many of the kids look up to those teen leaders during the week.

Although making a decision for Christ is one of the goals of VBS, she said, just being around other Christians and learning about God is a good thing.

"There's always something to learn," Gregory said. "The most important thing to me is that people know being a Christian is fun and not a drag. It's fun, and we need to let the kids have fun with it."

And that's what VBS does, she said.

Book: All about Army

Each child enrolled in a post child care program took home a book, one of more than 60,000 copies printed Armywide.

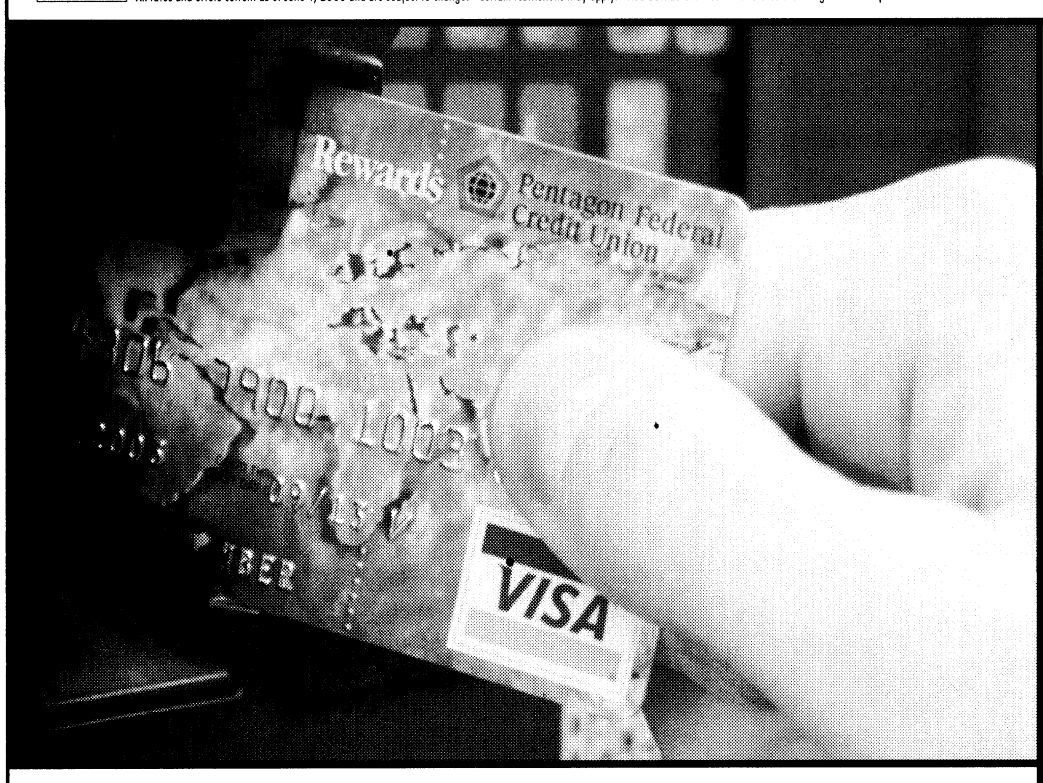
About 1,200 copies were distributed to Fort Benning children Wednesday.

Sgt. Latrisha Maddox read the story to 2- to 5-year-olds Tuesday at the Main Post CDC.

Maddox said children need to understand why their moms and dads sometimes go away and what the Army is all about.

"A lot of their parents are in the military," she said. "They need to know all that we've been through and how far we've come to celebrate the freedom that we have now."

It's important to start young when teaching these concepts, said Maddox, who has been deployed three times. It's something she wants her own daughter, now only 15 months old, to understand one day.



"The Army is older than me — super old," said five-year-old Ashari Sams after Maddox read her the book. Ashari said she liked the story, especially when she "blowed out the candles on the cake in the book."

The culmination of the week-long activities is today, as parents are invited to join their children at CDCs for an Army birthday party.

"The Army is our family, and we're going to celebrate its birthday in a big way," Hertig said.

Celebrate the Army birthday at 4 p.m. today in Infantry Hall

Blueberries ready for pies

THE BAYONET
Rachel L. Watkins

I picked strawberries for the first time when I was 7. My grandma took me, and I was so excited about carefully picking the fruits without damaging the plants.

I still remember the sticky feeling of the fruit juice trickling down my chin and my sisters teasing me about my stained shirt.

Fruit picking is a family tradition and last weekend, I made my fiancé, Bryan, go with me to pick blueberries in Pine Mountain, Ga., at A & J Farms, which is about a 30-minute drive from Fort Benning.

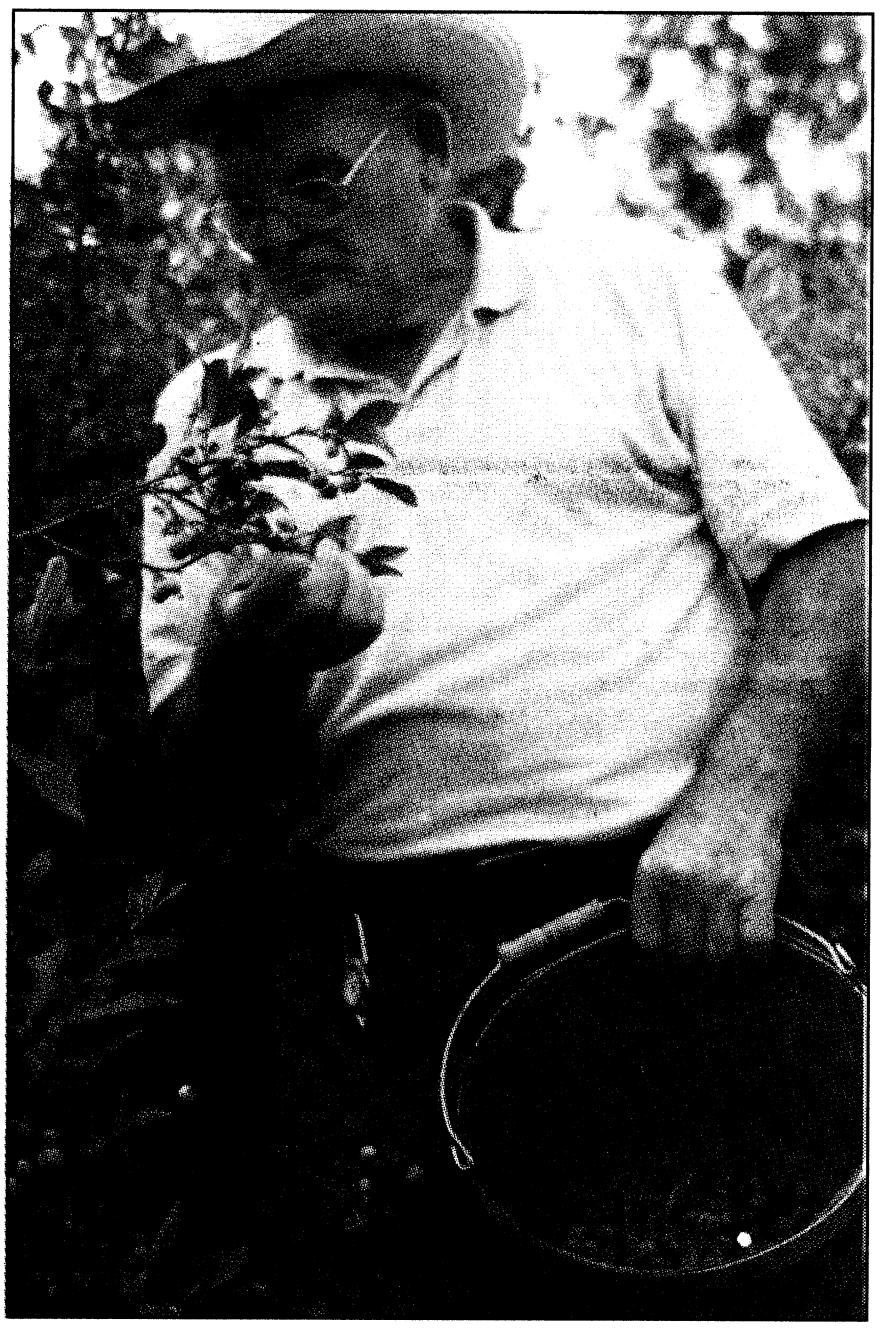
Blueberries are easy to grow, Jack said, because nature does most of the work.

"I just have to water and add fertilizer," he said.

"We like what we do because it's fun," said Anne, who also teaches classes about blueberries at her church.

Bryan had fun too, although at first he thought it would be boring.

When we got there, the Storys gave us a gallon bucket and told us to "eat all you want while picking," since the berries are pesticide free.



If you ask, Jack will tell you where to find the plumpest berries of the bunch.

To store your blueberries, Anne said it's best to put unwashed blueberries in a plastic freezer bag to freeze them.

See Blueberries, D5

Anne's favorite Blueberry Crunch Cake

10 ounces canned crushed pineapple
3 cups fresh or frozen blueberries (1 pound package)
3/4 to 1 cup of sugar or a little more if you want it sweeter
1 box yellow cake mix
1 stick butter or margarine melted
1 cup chopped pecans
3/4 cup sugar
Ice cream (optional)

1. Lightly grease one 9 by 13-inch pan or baking dish and spread the crushed undrained pineapple over the bottom of the pan.
2. Add the layer of blueberries.
3. Add sugar and 1/4 to 1/2 cup of water.
4. Sprinkle dry cake mix over the top of fruit. Then drizzle melted butter over the layer of dry cake mix.
5. Top with pecans.
6. For a crunch glaze, sprinkle the remaining 1/4 cup of sugar on top.
6. Bake at 350 degrees for 45 to 50 minutes. After the cake has cooled for 25 minutes take a spoon and cut through the cake in several places so the juices come up.
7. Top with ice cream if desired.

Retired Col. Jack Story picks blueberries on his farm near Pine Mountain, Ga. He and his wife, Anne started farming blueberries in 1993. When visitors come to pick the berries, the Storys will give them a one or two gallon bucket and tell them to "eat all you want while picking," since the berries are pesticide free.

GEORGIA STATE PARKS & HISTORIC SITES

ATLANTA — Georgia State Parks & Historic Sites is launching Get Outdoors Georgia (GO Georgia) a new multi-year initiative to help every Georgian rediscover the great outdoors. GO Georgia kicks off with a Free Day in the Parks Saturday. Admission to all of Georgia's 63 state parks and historic sites will be free for every visitor. The initiative invites visitors, especially families and children, to take part in family-friendly, nature-based outdoor recreation in the beautiful surroundings of Georgia's state parks and historic sites.

"It's time to reintroduce people to the great outdoors and Father's Day Weekend is the perfect weekend to kick things off," said Sally Winchester, marketing and communications manager of Georgia State Parks & Historic Sites. "The beginning of summer is a natural time to get outside with friends and family to explore the amazing and diverse treasures within our state parks and historic sites." The Free Day in the Parks Saturday will include special activities at most parks and is made possible by support from The Coca-Cola Company.

The GO Georgia launch coincides with National Great Outdoors Month. Gov. Sonny Perdue announced the GO Georgia program June 2 at Skidaway Island State Park in Savannah, and declared by proclamation that June is "Georgia Great Outdoors Month." Noting that almost every Georgia resident lives within 50 miles — or less than an hour's drive — from at least one of the state's 63 state parks and historic sites, it's easier than ever for Georgians to find local activities, events and vacations close by.

The 63 sites include 45 state parks, three state historic parks and 15 historic sites, stretching from the Blue Ridge Mountains to the Colonial Coast. Together, the parks and sites offer a variety of geography and history, including mountains, canyons, forests, fields, marshes, waterfalls, lakes, swamps, rivers, battlefields, historic homes and Native American settlements.

For more information, visit www.GetOutdoorsGeorgia.org, www.GeorigiaStateParks.org or call 800-864-7275.

Editor's note: Free Day in the Parks is not valid at Stone Mountain, Lake Lanier Islands, Jekyll Island or Chattahoochee River NRA because these are not state parks operated by Georgia's Department of Natural Resources.

BOOK REVIEW

Wreck diving off N.J. coast focus of book

BAYONET CORRESPONDENT
Maj. Matthew Archambault

When people have questions, they often look to others for answers. Children look to their parents. Students ask their teachers. Soldiers emulate their NCOs. Each is an expert in his own right. What happens though when the expert's answers do not satisfy the questions? Robert Kurson chronicles a real-life example in Shadow Divers when, in 1991, divers found a mysterious wreck off the New Jersey coast that experts said shouldn't be there.

Some may think there is no mystery about a wreck off the New Jersey coast. It's probably a garbage barge. And so thought the divers sent out to investigate the sonar contact lying in more than 200 feet of water and surrounded by strong currents. What they discovered began a six year journey that took three lives, baffled the experts and added a new chapter in history.

Shadow Divers takes readers inside the world of wreck diving. Kurson immerses the reader in the environment so thoroughly you can feel the rock of the boat, smell its diesel engines and hear the splash of the waves. This is an environment Soldiers will find familiar, not superficially, but at its core. Wreck diving is right out of a Greek tragedy. Man finds himself at odds not only with himself, his equipment and his fellow divers, but also with his environment. A thousand things can kill the wreck diver even when he doesn't make a mistake.

Despite these perils, Bill Nagle, John Chatterton and Richie Kohler splash into the water searching for answers. These men are as different as they are the same.

Nagle is the pioneer. He mentors Chatterton and Kohler in an unforgiving sport. Chatterton is the heir apparent. His innate intelligence and bearing creates a professional aura in the sport all divers respect. Kohler contrasts Chatterton with his part-cowboy and part-historian style. These men attain their fascinating dimensions through Kurson's thorough research and interviews. This is how Shadow Divers grows beyond a simple adventure story into a compelling human drama spanning 60 years.

The nature of their conquest requires Kurson to conjecture in places and here it tends to drag. However this speciousness exists not only for the reader; it exists for Nagle, Chatterton and Kohler, but it is part of the mystery. This mystery and Kurson's style draws the reader through Shadow Divers cheering for these divers and cheering for a former enemy.

Shadow Divers is a gripping tale. It made heroes of its survivors, Chatterton and Kohler, who co-host The History Channel's Deepsea Divers. Shadow Divers is Robert Kurson's first book. He is a philosopher turned lawyer who currently serves as a contributing editor for Esquire magazine.

Opening Today
THE INCREDIBLE HULK

Scientist Bruce Banner (Edward Norton) hunts for a cure to the gamma radiation that poisoned his cells and unleashes the rage within him. Living in the shadows, cut off from the life he knew and the woman he loves, Banner struggles to avoid the pursuit of his nemesis, General Thaddeus "Thunderbolt" Ross (William Hurt).

As all three tangle with the secrets of the Hulk's creation, they are confronted with a new adversary known as The Abomination, whose strength even exceeds the Hulk's. To stop it, the scientist must make the choice to accept the peaceful life of Bruce Banner, or find heroism in the creature he holds inside.

This film is rated PG-13 for violence and suggestive content.

THE HAPPENING

A family is on the run from a inexplicable and unstoppable event that threatens not only humankind, but the most basic human instinct of them all, survival. Starring Mike Wahlberg as Eliot Moore.

Also Playing
KUNG FU PANDA

When threatened by a gang of snow leopards, the jungle animals call upon an inept panda (voice of Jack Black) to become a kung fu master and save the Valley of Peace.

The animated movie also stars Dustin Hoffman, Jackie Chan, Ian McShane, Lucy Liu, Angelina Jolie, David Cross, and Seth Rogen.

YOU DON'T MESS WITH THE ZOHAN

He romances his clients by giving them "special services" in the back room. However, he is eventually recognized, and risks losing his newfound life and career.

SEX AND THE CITY

Carrie (Sarah Jessica Parker), Samantha (Kim Cattrall), Charlotte (Kristin Davis) and Miranda (Cynthia Nixon) continue their adventures as they live their lives in Manhattan four years after the series ended.

This film is rated R for sexual content, nudity and language.

THE STRANGERS

Three mysterious strangers terrorize a young couple (Liv Tyler and Scott Speedman) in a remote house after they return from a wedding.

This film is rated R for violence, terror and language.

INDIANA JONES AND THE KINGDOM OF THE CRYSTAL SKULL

THE CHRONICLES OF NARNIA: PRINCE CASPIAN

One year later, the kings and queens of Narnia find themselves back in Narnia, only to discover that more than 1,300 years have passed in Narnian time. During their absence, Narnia has been conquered by the Telmarines and is now under the control of the evil King Miraz (Sergio Castellitto). The four children soon meet Narnia's rightful heir to the throne, Prince Caspian (Ben Barnes), who has been forced into hiding as his uncle Miraz plots to kill him. With the help of a mouse, a badger and a Black Dwarf, the Narnians embark to find Aslan, rescue Narnia and restore the land.

SPEED RACER

Born to race cars, Speed Racer's (Emile Hirsch) only real competition is the memory of the brother he idolized — the legendary Rex Racer, whose death in a race has left behind a legacy that Speed is driven to fulfill.

When Speed turns down a lucrative and tempting offer from Royalton Industries, he infuriates the company's maniacal owner and discovers some of the biggest races are being fixed. The only way for Speed to save his family's business and the sport he loves is to win the death-defying, cross-country rally known as The Crucible.

This film is rated PG for action, violence, language and smoking.

WHAT HAPPENS IN VEGAS

Two people (Cameron Diaz and Ashton Kutcher) discover they've gotten married following a night of debauchery in Vegas, with one of them winning a jackpot after playing the other's quarter. The pair tries to undermine each other and get their hands on the money, falling in love along the way.

THE FALL

In Los Angeles, circa 1920s, a little immigrant girl (Catinca Untaru) finds herself in a hospital recovering from a fall. She strikes up a friendship with a bedridden man who captivates her with a whimsical story that removes her far from the hospital doldrums into the exotic landscapes of her imagination.

Making sure he keeps the girl interested in the story he interweaves her family and people she likes from the hospital into his tale.

IRON MAN

Tony Stark (Robert Downey Jr.) is a billionaire industrialist and genius inventor who is kidnapped and forced to build a devastating weapon. Instead, using his intelligence and ingenuity, Tony builds a high-tech suit of armor and escapes captivity. When he uncovers a plot with global implications, he dons his powerful armor and vows to protect the world as Iron Man.

This film is rated PG-13 for sequences of sci-fi action and violence and suggestive content.

MADE OF HONOR

Tom Bailey (Patrick Dempsey) is in love with his best friend Claire (Michelle Monaghan). But Tom has a fear of commitment and refuses to admit that he should propose to Claire before she finds a less procrastinating suitor. When Colin (Kevin McKidd), a rich Scotsman asks Claire for her hand in marriage, Tom must witness her unquestioned happiness up close and personal — because she's chosen him to be her maid of honor.

SON OF RAMBOW

In 1980's Britain, young Will Proudfoot (Bill Milner) is raised in isolation among The Brethren, a religious sect in which music and TV are strictly forbidden.

When Will encounters his first movie, a pirated copy of Rambo: First Blood, his imagination is blown wide open. Now, Will sets out to join forces with school bully Lee Carter (Will Poulter) to make their own action epic, devising wildly creative stunts and elaborate schemes for creating a movie of non-stop thrills while hiding from The Brethren.

When school popularity finally descends on Will and Lee in the form of the super-cool French exchange student Didier (Jules Sitruk), their new friendship and precious film are pushed to the breaking point.

HAROLD AND KUMAR ESCAPE FROM GUANTANAMO BAY

Harold and Kumar (John Cho and Kal Penn) decide to pursue Maria (Paula Garces), the girl Harold likes, to Amsterdam. However, an overzealous airline passenger mistakes Kumar for a terrorist, and the plane is diverted as the duo get stuck in a case of mistaken identity.

DECEPTION

A New York accounting consultant, Jonathan McQuarry (Ewan McGregor) meets a charismatic, womanizing lawyer, Wyatt Bose (Hugh Jackman) who personifies everything he wants to be. But in the mysterious sex club he is introduced into, he soon becomes the prime suspect in a woman's disappearance and a multi-million dollar heist.

FORGETTING SARAH MARSHALL

STREET KINGS

Tom Ludlow (Keanu Reeves), a veteran LAPD detective, sets out to discover the killers of his former partner, Detective Terrance Washington. Ludlow's supervisor, Captain Wander (Forest Whitaker), must keep him within the confines of the law and out of the clutches of Internal Affairs Captain Biggs (Hugh Laurie). Ludlow teams up with a young homicide detective to track Washington's killers through Los Angeles and bring them to justice.

This film is rated R for violence and language.

Needing to pay for his M.I.T. tuition, the brilliant Ben Campbell (Jim Sturgess) joins a group of the school's gifted students, led by math professor Micky Rosa (Kevin Spacey), which counts cards at blackjack each weekend in Vegas.

STOP-LOSS

Decorated Iraq war hero Sgt. Brandon King (Ryan Phillippe) returns to his Texas hometown following his tour of duty. Alongside Steve Shriver (Channing Tatum), King tries to adapt to civilian life.

When the Army orders him back to Iraq, it upends his world, testing the bonds of family and friendship, the limits of love and the value of honor.

Stop-Loss is rated R for violence and language.

Blueberries: Ready for harvest

When you are ready to use them, spread them out on a cookie sheet to let them thaw.

A gallon bucket of blueberries costs $9, and a paper sack to hold the berries is provided. Active-duty military get a $2 discount with ID. And for those berries the Storys have picked, a gallon is $17. The farm is open from dawn to dusk.

The Storys will also have muscadines in August.

To get to the farm, take exit 30, Hopewell Church Road, on I-185. Turn right off the exit. Go about 5.5 miles until you come to a four-way stop. Take a left at the stop sign on to Hamilton Pleasant Grove Road.

For more information call the Storys at 706-663-8352.

Other places to pick fruits or vegetables

Randle Farms LLC:

I went here last year. There are plenty of blueberries to go around. A gallon of blueberries is $10 if you pick them, $24 per gallon if they do.

The farm also offers eggs, grass-fed lamb and pork, tomatoes, onions, green beans and sweet potatoes. They are open from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m. Monday to Saturday and from 7 a.m. to 6 p.m. Sundays at 9215 Lee Road 54 (Society Hill Road), Auburn, Ala.

For more information, call 334-749-1073 or go to www.randlefarms.com.

2-J Pic n Pay:

At the end of June, you can pick butter beans, and at the end of July, butter peas for 50 cents per pound. They are open from dawn to 11 a.m. and 4 p.m. to 7 p.m. Wednesday to Saturday at 1296 Lee Road 047, Opelika, Ala.

For more information, call 334-745-0494.

Wach Farm:

Wach Farm will be open for business starting June 27. Blueberries are $10 per gallon. They are open from 8 a.m. to 1 p.m. and 3 p.m. to 7 p.m. Monday to Saturday at 9748 Estes Road, Macon, Ga.

For information, call 478-994-1120.

Rachel L. Watkins

Taylor Elkins, 6, picks blueberries. "I'm gonna have blueberry pancakes when I get home," she said, as she popped a blueberry in her mouth. A & J Farms, a you pick'em farm, is only about a 30-minute drive from Fort Benning. A gallon of blueberries is $9. For active-duty military personnel, it is $7.

Age has its privileges.

When Maj. Gen. Walter Wojdakowski pondered the best way to carve up the post's Army birthday cake, he deferred to the captain on his left, 63-year-old Freddie Odomes.

"How should we do it? Should we stab it?" Wojdakowski asked.

"Yes, sir. Messy's good," replied Odomes, Fort Benning's oldest Soldier, who returned to active duty, to serve with the Warrior Transition Battalion 20 years after retiring from the Army.

Wojdakowski and Odomes were joined by the post's youngest Soldier, 17-year-old Pvt. Joe Schilling, a basic trainee who had to get his mother's permission to enlist, and the Infantry School's Command Sgt. Maj. Matt Walker.

The foursome, with two World War I bayonets between them, cut the cake at a celebration June 13, one day before the Army's 233rd birthday.

Across Fort Benning, the Army birthday was celebrated all week long. The post's child development centers hosted birthday parties and invited parents to join the celebration, which included readings of Happy Birthday U.S. Army, a children's book written especially for the occasion and distributed to 1,200 post schoolchildren.

Soldiers test new grenade confidence clip

THE BAYONET
Brenda Donnell

Soldiers from the 988th Military Police Company helped Fort Benning's Soldier Battle Lab evaluate a grenade device Tuesday that will give Soldiers more confidence when carrying M-67 hand grenades.

The "confidence clip" fits onto the grenade fuse to prevent the pull ring from being accidentally removed, said Tom Coradeschi, a chief systems engineer at Picatinny Arsenal, N.J., where the device was developed. It was created so Soldiers won't use items like tape to hold the "spoon" in place if the pull ring is removed.

Development was completed in March, said Jason DeVenezia, a fuse engineer at Picatinny Arsenal.

This is the first time the confidence clip has been used by Soldiers, and it is performing as expected, he said.

"We are making some subtle changes to the next phase of the design, and the testing revealed some improvements we can make that will make it better for the Soldiers," he said.

Soldiers are already taught to twist and pull the ring, and there is no change in functionality, DeVenezia said. It's all in the technique.

At the end of the evaluation this week, additional feedback about the confidence clip will be gathered to help the engineers during the next design phase.

Officials open USO on Victory Drive

A new United Service Organizations center opened at 3662 Victory Drive Saturday.

"What a great day to be an American and to participate in this historic event: the re-entry of the USO after more than 40 years to Columbus, Georgia," said retired Maj. Gen. Jerry White, chairman of the advisory board for United Service Organizations, Columbus, Saturday at the grand opening of the USO on Victory Drive.

"We need to show Soldiers that we care, that we appreciate them and that they matter," he said. "This facility is a place where Soldiers and families can come and relax, read magazines, watch some TV and spend time together. It's a quiet place where Soldiers can just be sons and daughters."

Families and Soldiers who visit the USO will have a range of services available to them. They can call home or surf the Web. There are snacks, a kitchen, a meeting area and a staff to answer questions and provide directions — all free of charge to service members and their families.

Staff Sgt. Charles Thornton, D Company, 2nd Battalion, 58th Infantry Regiment, said a USO can make all the difference in a Soldier's day.

"I was in the airport one time, and I needed to make a phone call to my parents. I didn't have any phone cards or a cell phone, so I used the phone in the USO," Thornton said. "It wasn't much, but at that time, it was a lot."

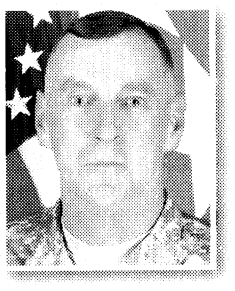
Cheryl Rodewig

USO chairman Mike Watson, Maj. Gen. Walter Wojdakowski, Fort Benning's commanding general, USO president Mary Lou Austin, Congressman Sanford Bishop and retired Maj. Gen. Jerry White cut the ribbon to the new USO center on Victory Drive in Columbus Saturday at the grand opening.

Thornton said this was the first time he had ever seen a USO outside of an airport.

"It looks really nice," he said. "I haven't been here too long, but I think it's going to be a good thing for the city and the Soldiers. I think it shows growth. (For someone), it will be a home away from home."

Pfc. Amanda Williams, 690th Medical Company, said she looks forward to spending time in the USO.



"There's free Internet, cable, a gazebo in the back with nice shade — I think this can bring the Soldiers back to Victory Drive," Williams said.

COMMANDER'S COLUMN

Although FMWRC's name has changed, Army's commitment to caring for people hasn't

COMMANDING GENERAL
Maj. Gen. Walter Wojdakowski

For 233 years the U.S. Army has been the strength of our great nation. The Continental Congress on June 14, 1775, voted to take action against the British to defend freedom. This forged the basis of today's Army.

Since 1775, each branch of our modern Army has been implemented as the need for specific expertise became apparent — the Adjutant General's Corps, Finance Corps, Quartermaster Corps, the Army Medical Department, the Chaplaincy and so on.

Recognizing the importance of stress-reducing services that foster strong esprit de corps, the Army created the Morale Division in 1940. It was part of the Adjutant General's Office and had its roots in the battlefields of World War I. Decades later, this division became the Special Services. This year, it was renamed the Family and Morale, Welfare and Recreation Command (FMWRC).

Like FMWRC's new name, a lot has changed in our Army during the last 233 years. But what has not changed is our commitment to Soldiers and their Families; morale plays a big part in that commitment.

With a comprehensive network of support and leisure services designed to enhance the lives of all Soldiers, their Families, civilian employees, military retirees and other eligible participants, the FMWRC significantly contributes to the Army's quality of life with child and youth services, sports programs, recreation and leisure activities, personal financial, business and social services, community programs, and top name entertainment opportunities.

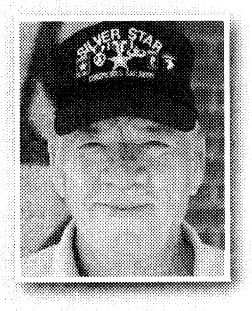
FMWRC is proof of the Army's commitment to caring for the people who serve and stand ready to defend the nation. The recent Army-wide signing of the Army Family Covenant is further demonstration of the importance of providing quality programs and services to every member of our Army Family.

From the very beginning of our history, it is our Army that forged the foundation that set in motion the great experiment of democracy. Millions of Americans through the generations have put forth tremendous effort and self-sacrifice to keep alive the ideals of life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness.

During this season of celebration for the birth of our Army and our nation, we should give thanks to all our brave Soldiers who have stood up to the terrorists whose aim is to destroy freedom.

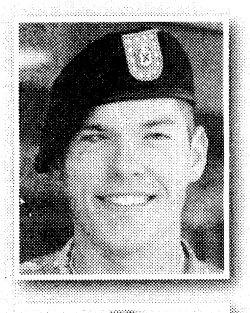
On June 28, Fort Benning will celebrate our Nation's 232nd birthday with our annual Independence Day Celebration on York Field. DFMWR will provide top-notch entertainment, activities and fireworks for everyone. I hope you will come and enjoy this event honoring the official beginning of our country. See you there!

OPINION



VARIOUS VOICES

How do you measure wealth?



I think just your level of happiness. I consider myself wealthy because I have three beautiful, healthy children. Wealth isn't measured in money. It's just your level of satisfaction.

— Staff Sgt. Jade Chiara, 203rd Brigade Support Battalion

I really measure wealth in the satisfaction of life much more than money. I think if you're satisfied with life, you don't worry about the money so much. You don't have as much stress, so consequently you live a happier life.

— Retired Maj. John Hubbard

I think being wealthy is having friends and family, because no one can take that away. No matter how much you have, to me, you can survive as long as you have love.

— Spc. Cory Smith Warrior Transition Battalion

Wealth doesn't always have to do with money. You feel rich by the people and the things you have around you.

— 1st Lt. Aminah Johnson 70th Troop Command

Wealth is an immeasurable thing that you have. It's anything that you can look at that gives you pleasure or joy in life. In my own life, I have a family that loves me dearly, and I love them equally. That's wealth.

— 2nd Lt. Ebrima Camara 3rd Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment

I measure wealth with good health, dental and vision insurance, being able to support yourself well financially. And by that I mean planned vacations, supporting your family, and of course, having money to pay your bills.

— Retired Sgt. 1st Class Wheeler Stephens

We're rich, you know what I mean?

THE BAYONET
Bridgett Siter

My friend Paul Voorhees — maybe you know him as Ranger Joe — tells the story of a little boy who approached him after he, Paul, had donated field day T-shirts for all the students at the boy's school on post.

"You must be really rich or have a lot of money," the little boy said.

Paul's story reminds me of the time I boarded an airplane with my daughter, who was 12 at the time, for a trip to an international film festival in Hollywood, where Brittney and a handful of her classmates would receive a first-place trophy for a video they had filmed about training on Fort Benning.

An awful lot of people worked very hard to raise funds to get those kids to Hollywood. We baked cookies and hosted yard sales and knocked on doors to plead for support, but it looked like we'd never raise enough money in time to register and book flights. Then a couple of anonymous donors stepped in and anted up big bucks for the cause.

As we buckled up and prepared for take-off, Brittney reached over and grabbed my hand, all nervous and giddy with excitement.

"Mom," she said. "We're rich. You know what I mean?"

Yeah, I knew exactly what she meant.

Brittney knew how hard we'd struggled to raise that money. And she knew an awful lot of good people had contributed their time and money — people who stood to gain nothing from it, other than the satisfaction of knowing these children would (and they did) have a once-in-a-lifetime experience. She figured out at a very early age that true and lasting wealth can not be measured in money.

Today, on the occasion of my husband's retirement from the Army, I'm reminded just how rich we are. I doubt we'll ever sock away enough money to make the taxman do the happy dance, but we're rich indeed, if one measures wealth in friendship and experience.

We've traveled to places I never dreamed I'd get to see back when Tom and I set out on this grand adventure — and quite a few places I didn't know existed. Were it not for Uncle Sam, I would never have climbed the Eiffel Tower, soaked my toes in the surf off Waikiki, or sampled fried green tomatoes at the Possum Trot in Seale, Ala.

We've met more real heroes than you could shake a stick at, and we count some of them as friends. Imagine that. Try to wrap your mind around the fact that you, if you live near an Army post, bump elbows with more heroes in the course of a week than most people meet in a lifetime. Real heroes, I mean. People like Basil Plumley and Ernie Savage and Ralph Puckett and Bob Nett. I could go on and on.

Along the way, our family has grown. When Tom and I set up housekeeping at Fort Drum, N.Y., 22 years ago, we figured to add a few place settings over the next few years. Now, we six Siters have extended family members all across the globe. Hundreds of Army brothers and sisters. I thank God for them and thank God I don't have to feed them.

At a time like this — wartime, I mean — I don't want to imply that the Army life is an easy life. We could spend hours talking about the tough times. But today, I'm counting my treasures and looking forward to accumulating more, because I'm rich, if you know what I mean.

1925

• Mrs. Charles Roberts brought together a group of women who, like herself, were daughters of Army personnel, to form the Army Daughters, an organization focused on charitable works. One of the Army Daughters' first order of business was a rummage sale. Thrift Shops found at most every Army installation today are a direct result of that sale, which raised money for welfare programs for Army families.

1949

• The post's new Rock of the Marne, the 3rd Infantry Division, paraded for Maj. Gen. P.W. Clarkson. It was the first review for the unit, which was organized at Fort Benning just six months earlier.

1952

• The local Army Daughters organization donated an automatic resuscitator for infants, patterned along the lines of an iron lung, to the post hospital. The machine, the only one of its kind in the Southeast, made the hospital's OB ward the best equipped ward in this area.

• During the celebration of the Army's 176th birthday, it was reported that the National Guard's 201st Armored Field Artillery Battalion, activated recently at Fort Benning, was the "only living descendent" of the original eight companies that first formed the Army on June 14, 1775. The 201st was the only unit to display both Union and Confederate streamers in its battle flag for participation in both sides of the Civil War.

• A recent report showed that Fort Benning claimed the highest off post traffic fatality rate in the Third Army. Of the 32 Soldiers killed in off post vehicle accidents this year, 13 were stationed at Fort Benning. The reason for the problem, one official speculated, was the Infantryman's tendency to drive too fast, drive after drinking and drive great distances with little rest.

• A former soldier of the German Panzer Division, Pvt. Helmut Ullman, was attending Airborne School at Fort Benning. As a corporal with the Panzers eight years earlier, Ullman had been taken captive by paratroopers of the 82nd Airborne Division near Arnhem, Holland.

He was later freed by the Germans and continued to fight with the Panzer Division until he was captured again by the Canadians. He was sent first to England, then to Scotland where he was put to work with other POWs on a farm.

Eventually he was put on an immigration quota and sent to the U.S., where he lived with his cousin until he joined the Army in 1951. Ullman served with the 82nd Airborne Division.

3rd HBCT Soldiers readjust to life back home

3RD HEAVY BRIGADE COMBAT TEAM
Spc. Ben Hutto

After spending 14 months in Iraq conducting combat operations, Soldiers from the 3rd Heavy Brigade Combat Team are ready for some much needed rest and relaxation.

For some Soldiers, getting there will be a challenge in and of itself.

"Combat affects every Soldier differently," said 1st Sgt. Louis Francis, rear-detachment command sergeant major, 3rd HBCT. "We need to reassure them they aren't in this alone."

In order to do this, every returning Soldier of the brigade completes 10 days of reintegration training to help them and their families readjust to life back home.

"These ten days will cover everything," Francis said. "Many Soldiers look at these classes like the brigade is trying to take time away from them and their families, but they are important. We are trying to look after our Soldiers and identify any potential problems or help correct any existing problems that our Soldiers are going through. The last thing anyone wants is for one of our Sledgehammer Soldiers to hurt themselves or others."

Soldiers will attend classes on family enrichment, mental health, post traumatic stress disorder, safety and finances. They will also attend health screenings to ensure they have not developed any new problems during their deployment.

Francis admitted that reintegration was handled much differently after his previous redeployments with the 3rd HBCT in 2003 and 2005.

The change, he said, has been for the better.

"Now, we have people ready 24/7 to help Soldiers with any of their issues. We are more aware of issues now ... the Army has always wanted to ensure their Soldiers were taken care of."

Sgt. Derrion Richardson, a fire-support specialist for the 3rd HBCT, understands the purpose of the training and thinks it will help the Soldiers that need it.

"The Army gives us a lot of resources," he said.

"No one can say that the Army hasn't tried to reach out and help (Soldiers) because it has. It is all a matter of letting the Army help you and letting it know what your needs are."

Francis admits that hasn't always been easy for Soldiers.

"Getting guys to step forward and ask for help was a huge issue for us after Operation Iraqi Freedom I and III," he said. "Many came forward, but there were a countless number of Soldiers who did not come forward because they were afraid. They were afraid they would be forced to leave the Army. They were afraid that their peers and their companies would ostracize them. A lot of times Soldiers got into a 'suck it up and drive on' mentality and didn't address their problems. That not only hurt them and their families, it hurt the Army."

> "A lot of times Soldiers got into a 'suck it up and drive on' mentality and didn't address their problems. That not only hurt them and their families, it hurt the Army."
> — 1st Sgt. Louis Francis

Francis said he doesn't want that to happen this time.

"I want Soldiers to get help with whatever it is they are going through," he said.

"We aren't here to ostracize anyone. We are not trying to kick anyone out. We want to help Soldiers deal with their problems and get them combat effective again," Francis said.

Francis said in the past, there was a lack of understanding on a lot of issues that led to misinformation, but the reintegration training should help make this issue clear.

"I believe we need to get past the point that we care about what others think, he said.

"You would not ask a Soldier with a bullet wound to 'drive on.' That Soldier obviously needs help."

PTSD and traumatic brain injury are war injuries and should be treated like any physical injury would be, Francis said. "Just because they can't be seen doesn't make them any less real."

Chaplain (Lt. Col.) Thomas Waynick, the director of the U.S.Army Family Life Training Program, said Soldiers with families need to understand they are coming back to a different environment than the one they have just spent 14 months in.

It takes time for Soldiers and their families to readjust to living with one another, he said.

"Army life can be stressful, but Army Families, when given the right tools and resources, can be very resilient," he said. "The challenge, of course, is getting used to a redeployed military environment. What was functional down range, may not be functional back home."

Waynick pointed to the many resources the Army provides for Soldiers to use. Chaplains, Military One Source, social workers and Army Community Services are all places Soldiers and their families can turn to if they need help.

Francis said asking for help is the most important thing a Soldier can do.

"Rank is immaterial," he said. "While it is important we look after our Soldiers, it is more important that we look after ourselves. If we aren't able to take care of ourselves, how can we as leaders, effectively take care of our Soldiers? We need to set the example."

Phishing scam targets families of fallen Soldiers

ARMY NEWS

WASHINGTON — A "phishing scam" targeting the families of fallen Soldiers reportedly has con artists promising compensation in exchange for information that might aid them in identity theft.

The scam artist pretends to be from the Defense Finance and Accounting Office or the Army Human Resources Command, according to an Army G3 Information Paper.

The families of deceased Soldiers are informed that they are entitled to monetary compensation in excess of $12 million that will be available to them in one week of responding to the request for additional information.

The families are instructed to provide sensitive personal information, such as social security number, date of birth, address and other facts about the deceased Soldier.

They are instructed to either visit the Army Human Resources Command offices in Alexandria, Va., or e-mail the information to an overseas Yahoo account.

Angela Sykes, an operations security officer with Army G3, said that the scammers reportedly get the name of fallen Soldiers from the Web, then either call or e-mail families with the same last name in the Soldier's hometown.

"We sent word to all the OPSEC program managers ... and asked them to disseminate the information to their personnel," Sykes said.

The Army Human Resources Command asked that the field be advised of the phishing scam after the Casualty and Mortuary Affairs Operations Center learned what was happening.

The Army Installation Management Command was notified of the scam, along with the Family, Morale Welfare and Recreation Command. These commands then alerted Family Readiness Group liaisons to further distribute the information.

Combat Readiness Center offers tips for sharing the road to motorcyclists

U.S. ARMY COMBAT READINESS/SAFETY CENTER
Bob Van Elsberg

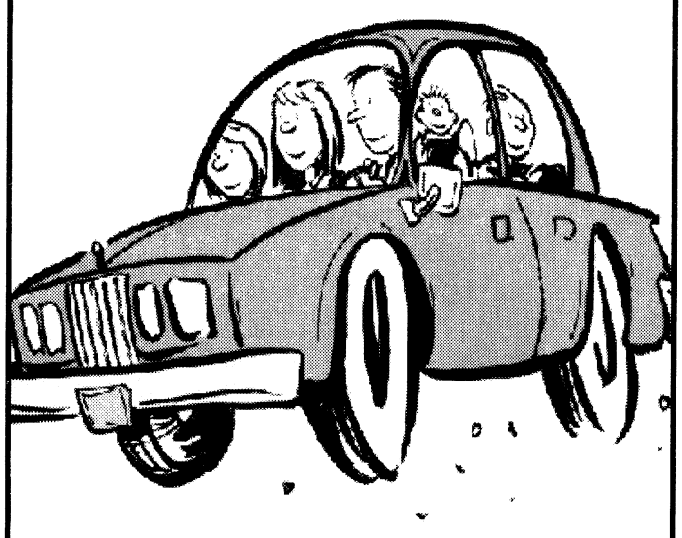
FORT RUCKER, Ala. — The Army remains steadfast in its commitment to foster an environment of responsible motorcycle riding by providing Soldiers the education and tools to help prevent accidents and stay safe on the road.

One aspect of motorcycle safety, however, is often beyond riders' control.

"We teach Soldiers the skills to ride safely and tell them what to wear to protect themselves physically but, unfortunately, we cannot protect them from distracted or inattentive motorists," said Lt. Col. Roy Templin, driving task force chief, U.S. Army Combat Readiness/Safety Center.

National Highway Traffic Safety Administration statistics indicate motorcycle fatalities nationwide have more than doubled during the last 10 years. According to the Motorcycle Safety Foundation, more than half of all fatal motorcycle accidents involve another vehicle. Most of the time, the motorist, not the motorcyclist is at fault.

To help educate non-motorcyclists, the MSF developed www.forcardrivers.com, a Web site designed for motorists to enhance traffic safety. The site offers tips and provides video downloads about sharing the highway.



"This information helps build motorcycle awareness among the non-riding community and emphasizes the importance of sharing the road," said Templin. "Teaching drivers to be more aware of motorcycle traffic is as important as Soldiers practicing safe riding skills and will ultimately save lives."

Fort Benning challenges JROTC cadets

More than 200 cadets from local schools attended the Junior Leaders Cadet Camp May 28 to June 2 on Fort Benning. They tackled the Warrior Training Center obstacle course, the rock wall at Smith Fitness Center, the rope bridge and the 34-foot jump towers.

Eagle Tower, a 55-foot climb, proved a challenge for several cadets.

"Thank you, Jesus, I made it," said Erica Jones as she arrived safely on the ground after rappelling down the tower.

Jones, who has been in JROTC for two years, said she was afraid of heights, but after she climbed up the ladder, the rest of the challenge was comparatively easy.

Safety was paramount during the weeklong camp, with a different safety slogan for each day. For May 27, it was "Think twice, you only live once."

They graduated Friday after conquering the obstacle course on Malvesti Field, Eagle Tower and other challenges.

Soldiers from the Ranger Training Brigade assisted the cadets during exercises.

Cadets scale the cargo net on Malvesti Field as part of the JROTC camp experience. More than 370 cadets from Atlanta area schools attended the weeklong camp June 9 to 13 on Fort Benning.

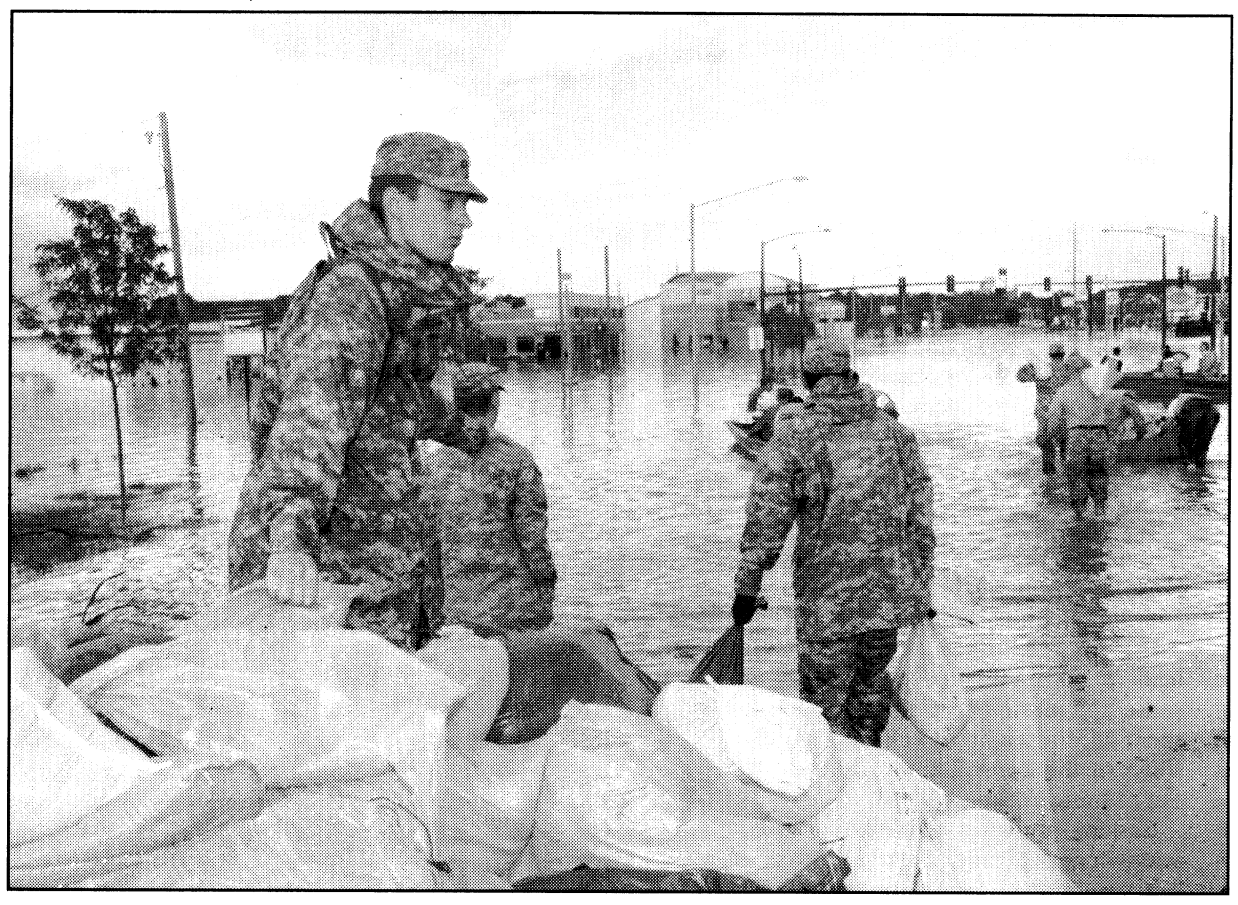
National Guard fight rising Mississippi flooding

ARMY NEWS SERVICE

ARLINGTON, Va. — National Guard troops in Illinois and Missouri continued sandbagging operations along the Mississippi River this week in an effort to thwart the cresting floodwaters heading south from Iowa.



More than 80 of Iowa's 99 counties have been declared state disaster areas and more than 4,000 National Guard Soldiers and Airmen have been activated there for flood response. Additional Soldiers are being redirected from other annual training missions in Iowa, officials said, to assist with flood operations.

About 300 Soldiers are assisting in sandbagging and security of the power station in Burlington, Iowa. In Des Moines, about 40 Airmen are providing security near the Birdland levee break, and in Cedar County, Soldiers are helping to secure bridges. About 150 troops are assisting the Cedar Rapids Police Department with security, traffic control points and traffic patrols.

Soldiers are providing emergency water distribution to residents in Columbus Junction and other Iowa towns. Troops are providing drinking water to Mercy Hospital in Iowa City and hauling fuel to University Hospital there which has been on auxiliary power for several days.

Chinook helicopters are being used to move water pumps as Soldiers continue to pile sandbags in a number of cities, including Fort Madison, Iowa City and Kingston.

Soldiers are using sandbags in an effort to protect the Iowa City water treatment plant and critical electrical substations in Iowa City, Coralville and Hills. About 50 Soldiers are assisting in sandbagging of the water treatment facility in Keokuk, Iowa.

Spc. Chad D. Nelson

The Illinois and Missouri rivers flow into the Mississippi just north of St. Louis. Unlike 1993, flooding on those rivers has not been as high as the record set 15 years ago. St. Louis floodwaters are expected to crest at 39.4 feet on Friday, which is about 10 feet below the record set in 1993.

In Illinois, 400 Soldiers and Airmen were mobilized over the weekend to work on the levees north and south of Quincy, Ill. About 100 Air National Guard personnel from the 183rd Fighter Wing in Springfield, Ill., the 182nd Airlift Wing in Peoria and the 126th Air Refueling Wing from Scott Air Force Base, Ill., were mobilized on Sunday and directed to the Sny Island Levee, which stretches for more than 50 miles in Adams and Pike counties.

Soldiers and Airmen were expected to fill 500,000 sandbags Monday as they helped fortify levees along a 15-mile stretch on their side of the swollen Mississippi near Quincy.

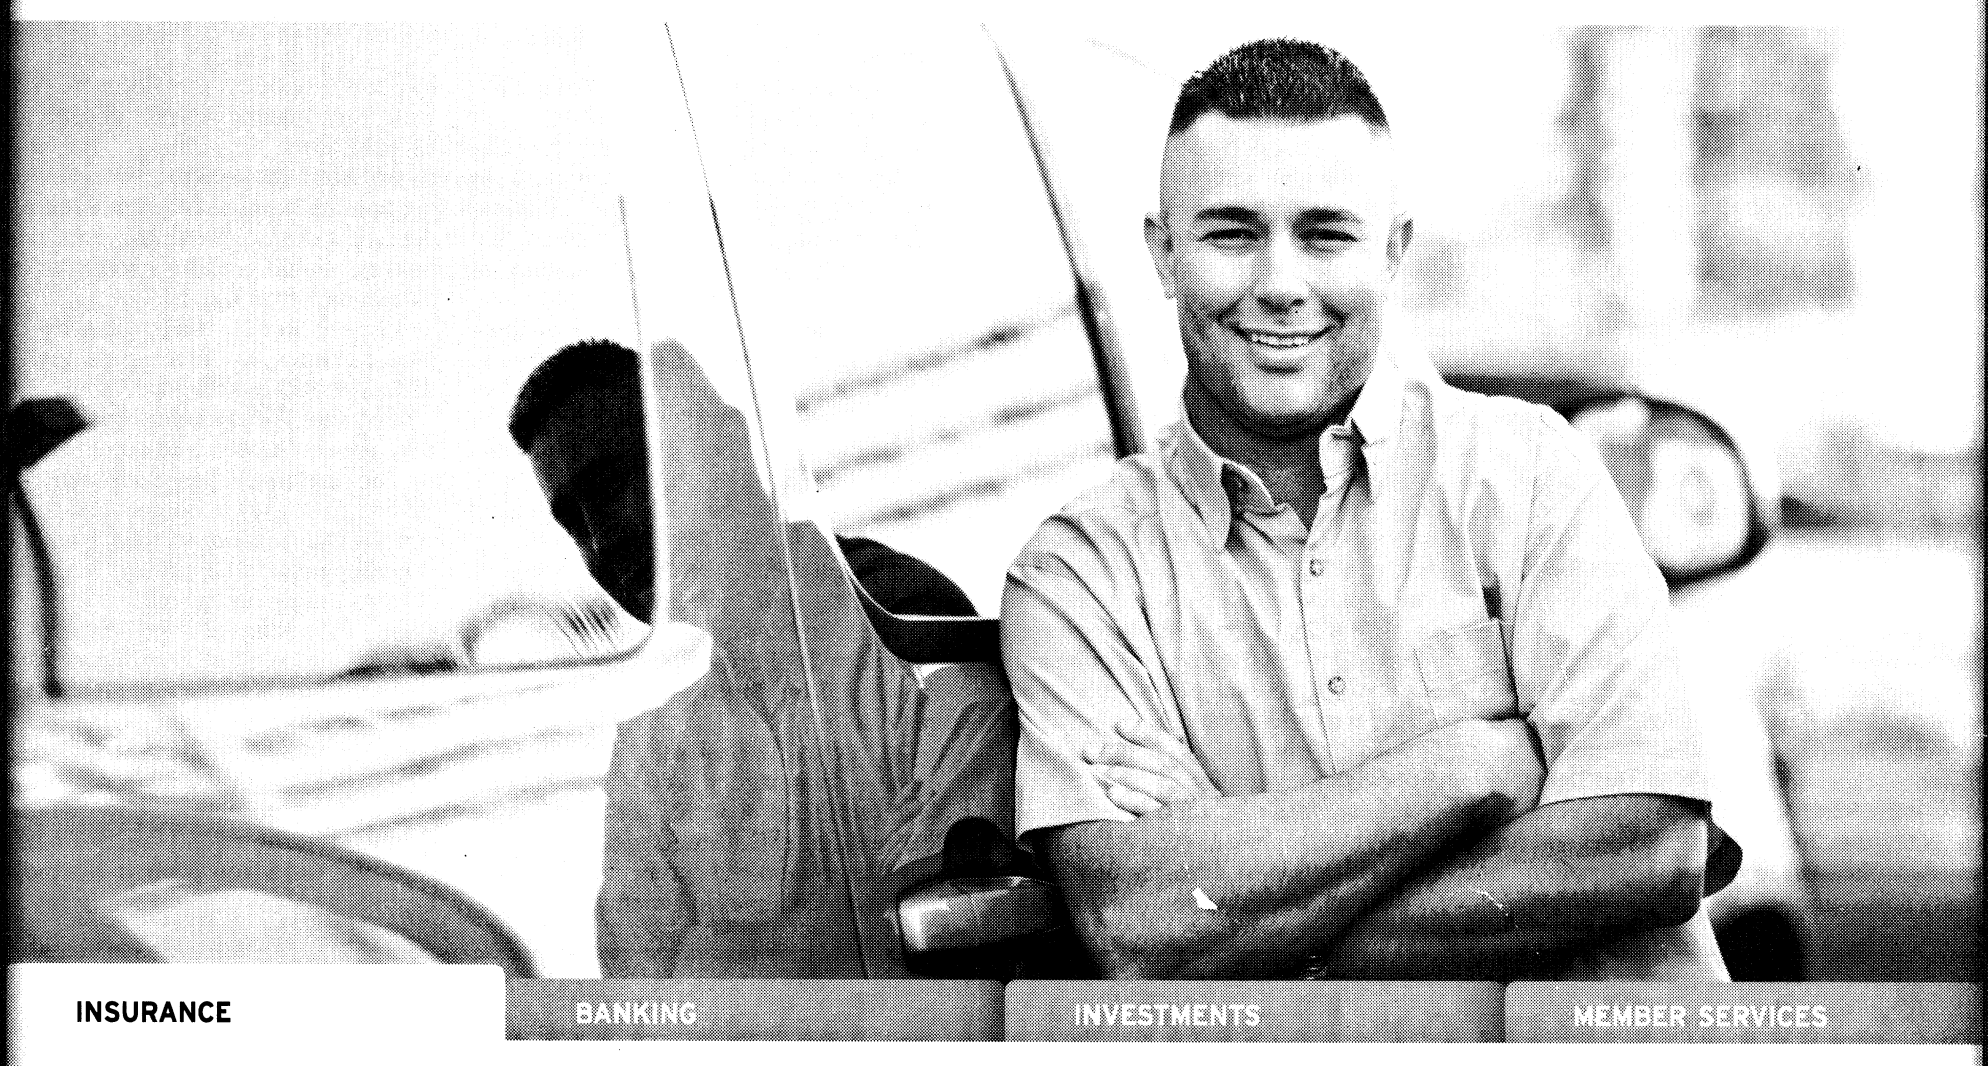
"Guardsmen are working with local volunteers, Illinois Emergency Management Agency personnel, local authorities and other state agencies making heroic efforts to protect critical infrastructures and lives," said Maj. Gen. William Enyart, the adjutant general of the Illinois National Guard. "(We) have the full support of the governor, state legislators and federal officials in coping with the largest flood since the record-breaking flood of 1993."

Enyart said more National Guard troops are available if needed. Illinois Gov. Rod Blagojevich has declared 15 Illinois counties as disaster areas.

"We're at a very critical juncture in the fight against the Mighty Mississippi, and I am committed to providing every possible state resource we can to help protect these threatened communities," Blagojevich said. "In addition to our many National Guard troops and other personnel and assets already in the region, I am encouraging my state agency directors to allow their employees who are certified as American Red Cross volunteers to help out during this emergency. We all need to pull together and help our fellow Illinoisans during their time of great need."

In Missouri, about 200 Soldiers are monitoring the levees in Canton and West Quincy and sandbagging in Canton, Hannibal and Clarksville. Liaison officers are also working with officials in Clark, Lewis, Marion, Ralls, Pike and Lincoln counties.

Missouri National Guard units supporting the flood response efforts include the 1438th Engineer Company (Bridge) from Macon and Kirksville, the 1138th Transportation Company from Jefferson Barracks and Centertown, the 835th Combat Sustainment Support Battalion from Jefferson City and the 70th Troop Command and the 1035th Maintenance Company, both from Jefferson Barracks.



"The Missouri National Guard has a trained, disciplined force ready to meet the challenge of the rising waters," said Maj. Gen. King Sidwell, adjutant general of the Missouri National Guard.

These mobilizations are a result of an executive order signed by Missouri Gov. Matt Blunt on Wednesday. The troops will remain on duty until released by local authorities and the governor.

"We remain engaged with local officials along the river working to anticipate future needs," Spicer said.

Editor's note: Lt. Col. Ellen G. Krenke of the National Guard Bureau was a major contributor to this report, along with a news release from the Iowa National Guard.

198th Infantry Brigade leadership changes

THE BAYONET
Brenda Donnell

Col. Daniel A. Kessler, an Iraq veteran and youth basketball and baseball coach, took command of the 198th Infantry Brigade, from Col. Casey P. Haskins Tuesday on Kanell Field.

Haskins

"Kessler is well versed in training and is an outstanding Soldier," said Maj. Gen. Walter Wojdakowski, Fort Benning's commanding general. "I can't think of a better person to continue the transformation training occurring on Sand Hill."

Kessler said the six Infantry regiments on the field, including basic trainees, represented the best the Army and the nation has to offer, and he was humbled and honored to become the commander.

Kessler previously served as director of Combined Arms and Tactics Directorate at Fort Benning. There, he said he supervised the planning for the Maneuver Center of Excellence transition and CATD's move to another building; supervised the development of the Brigade Commander Development Course; and supervised the execution of the Infantry Pre-Command Course, development of doctrine and collective training development, operations in the Donovan Library and the publication of Infantry Magazine.

Haskins will assume duties as director of Military Instruction at the U.S. Military Academy at West Point this summer.

Wojdakowski said while assigned as 198th Inf. Bde. commander, Haskins updated Infantry one station unit training and helped spread the outcomes-based training methodology to other areas on Fort Benning and throughout TRADOC, and he said the Army will be forever indebted to Haskins for this accomplishment.

Haskins improved existing leader training initiatives and created new initiatives, developed a new basic rifle marksmanship program and initiated medical first responder training, Wojdakowski said.

"This seeps through all the training here, and that is a credit to the outcomes-based outlook that Colonel Haskins has perfected here on Sand Hill," he said.

Haskins said he had a group of leaders with initiative and common sense and all he had to do was "point them in the right direction, remove some of the constraints ... and stand out of the way."

Haskins grew up in Arvada, Colo., Waldwick, N.J., and Bellevue, Wash., but has lived at Fort Benning longer than anywhere else, having served five assignments here.

Each assignment, he said, "gets better than the last time."

He has been married for 23 years to the former Esther Inman of Renton, Wash.

The Haskins have two sons, Joshua, 20, a machinegunner in 2nd Battalion, 325th Airborne Infantry Regiment, 82nd Airborne Division, Fort Bragg, N.C., and Aaron, 18, who recently finished his first (plebe) year at West Point.

Brenda Donnell

Col. Daniel A. Kessler takes the brigade flag from Maj. Gen. Walter Wojdakowski, U.S. Army Infantry Center and Fort Benning commanding general, during the 198th Infantry Brigade change of command ceremony Tuesday at Kanell Field. Kessler replaces Col. Casey P. Haskins, who will become the director of military instruction at the U.S. Military Academy at West Point this summer.

2/58 welcomes commander

THE BAYONET
Brenda Donnell

As a 5-year-old child, Rich Timmons was "running around Fort Benning" during his father's assignment as the operations officer for 1st Battalion, 58th Infantry Regiment.

Timmons

Timmons said his 5-year-old son, Robert, will be the one running around the post, now, and he called it an interesting parallel to his life.

"It's like a homecoming," he said.

Timmons' last assignment was with the command group at U.S. Army Forces Command, at Fort McPherson, Ga. Prior to that, he was squadron operations officer and executive officer for 10th Mountain Division, Fort Drum, N.Y. He was also a brigade operations officer for the 10th Mtn. Div. during a deployment to Afghanistan, where he said he felt he was "making a difference."

Timmons said he also wants to make a difference as a commander on Sand Hill.

"I am looking forward to making an impact on these young Soldiers (who) have volunteered in a time in which our nation is in a conflict ... knowing full well they are going to deploy," Timmons said. "I want to create an environment where the drill sergeants can do their job, and the organization can continue to succeed."

Col. Casey P. Haskins, 198th Infantry Brigade commander, said Timmons has an extensive background mostly in the light Infantry with 82nd Airborne Division, Fort Bragg, N.C., the 2nd Infantry Division in Korea and the 101st Airborne Division (Assault), Fort Campbell, Ky. He also served in the First Army, Fort Jackson, S.C.

Sheffield

"He is going to take this battalion on, and there will be changes ... all in the right direction, and I regret only that I will not have the opportunity to serve with this outstanding commander and his family," said Haskins who ended his command of the 198th Tuesday.

Sheffield's next assignment is with the Center of Special Operations at U.S. Special Operations Command, MacDill Air Force Base in Tampa, Fla.

Haskins said Sheffield has the best sense of balance between work and personal life of anyone he knows and manages to have fun at everything he does.

He said leadership is not only demonstrated from the top down, but it also rises from the lower ranks to higher ranks.

"I have been inspired again and again by Colonel Sheffield, and many times he seemed to sense when I was dispirited or frustrated, and he would cheer me up," Haskins said. "He is one of my favorite people, and this place will be very different when he leaves."

Sheffield thanked Haskins for his leadership, mentorship and counsel, and he also thanked his battalion leaders, friends and family.

Sheffield said serving on Fort Benning was a great privilege, and the community was a great place where he said he forged relationships with civilian employees and community members. He said the command climate allowed commanders to "train Soldiers the way they should be trained."

"It's not an environment of check the box, attendance equals training or (one with) a plethora of e-mails ... about statistics," Sheffield said. "It's one that rewards initiative and gets officers and noncommissioned officers excited about coming to work."

New leader takes 1/19

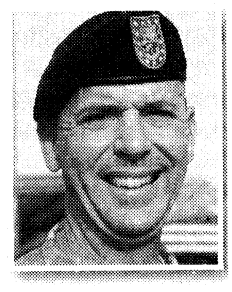
A Soldier, who married his Desert Storm pen pal, became the commander of 1st Battalion, 19th Infantry Regiment, Monday at Kanell Field.

Lt. Col. David C. Beachman took charge of the unit from Lt. Col. Christopher D. Reed during the morning ceremony.

Beachman

This is not his first assignment at Fort Benning with the battalion. Beachman served as battalion operations officer, company executive officer and company commander earlier in his career.



He also served in Korea; Fort Drum, N.Y.; Fort Polk, La.; and Fort Campbell, Ky.

Before returning to Fort Benning in January, Beachman was assigned to U.S. Army North at Fort Sam Houston, Texas, serving as executive officer to the commanding general and as an operations officer in the G3, Readiness.

Beachman said he was proud to assist the CG in executing the transformation of the Fifth U.S. Army to the U.S. Army North (Fifth Army), the Army Service Component Command to the U.S. Northern Command.

Beachman said he is looking forward to serving the leaders and families of 1st Bn., 19th Inf. Regt., which maintains a reputation of "producing competent, confident and disciplined Infantry Soldiers, instilled with the warrior ethos and Army values who are able to join units worldwide in stride."

Col. Casey P. Haskins, 198th Infantry Brigade commander, said since January, Beachman has worked with U.S. Army Infantry Center G-3, Director of Operations and Training, on the future ranges of the Maneuver Center of Excellence.

Reed

"I've been very impressed with his confidence, his character and with his obvious talent and enthusiasm for this job," Haskins said.

Reed's next assignment will be as a brigade embedded training team chief in Afghanistan.

Haskins said the training new Soldiers receive today is vastly superior to the training of their predecessors two years ago because of Reed, who possesses a combination of "heroism, stubbornness, confidence and sheer hard work."

Haskins said Reed's greatest accomplishment during his assignment was implementing battlefield first responder training, a mission he fulfilled with "breathtaking results," despite a lack of equipment or training. He said he chose Reed to lead the introduction of the training because he knew Reed would develop a thorough training plan, and the training would transfer quickly to other battalions, which it did.

"Chris Reed had exactly the characteristics to drive it through and make it work," Haskins said.

Reed said Fort Benning was a fantastic environment in which to command.

"The initiatives you have started are already paying off in combat and ... thank you for the freedom to train Soldiers the way they need to be trained," Reed said to Haskins during his speech.

He also thanked the civilians and Soldiers he worked with, especially the drill sergeants who he said go about their duties without fanfare, staying late and instilling values into the new Soldiers.

"I thank you drill sergeants, and remember, you never know what will sprout or grow twenty years from now from the seeds you planted at Sand Hill," he said.

Infantry Center Band stays busy throughout year

THE BAYONET
Rachel L. Watkins

When is the busiest season for the Infantry Center Band?

"There is never a slow season," said Chief Warrant Officer Fred Catchings, commanding officer and bandmaster.

The 36 Soldiers who make up the Infantry Center Band play at graduations on Sand Hill, Infantry Basic Officer Leadership Course and Officer Candidate School. They also perform at changes of command, redeployments, OCS senior status reviews, memorial services and the Best Ranger Competition award ceremony.

They tour Florida annually, perform a Christmas concert in Columbus and play in parades, including the annual Rose Parade in Thomasville, Ga. The band performs more than 500 times per year.

When the Infantry Center Band isn't performing, they are busy with training, rehearsals and office duties.

Staff Sgt. Frank Briscoe said he loves his job.

"I like that we represent our country and the Army," he said.

Briscoe has played trumpet with the Army for 10 years and with the Infantry Center Band since October 2006.

Before coming here, he was stationed at Fort McPherson, Ga., and in Heidelberg, Germany, where he said his favorite performances were at the Kremlin in Moscow and a tour through Hungary and Poland.

"Music breaks language barriers," he said. "I noticed that when I went to foreign countries and played."

Sgt. Crystal Downs, flute player, said there's no typical day in the band, but she wouldn't change her job.

"We are playing for the Soldiers who go out there and fight, and I feel that is special," she said.

AAFES' sales increase, Soldiers, families benefit

THE BAYONET
Cheryl Rodewig

New shopping facilities on post have increased sales for the Army and Air Force Exchange Service.

Direct sales are up 25 percent compared with this time last year, and they should continue to rise in the coming months, said Ken Brewington, the general manager of AAFES for Fort Benning.

Sales for fiscal 2007, which ended in January, were down from 2006 because of troop deployment, he said, but they picked up after the new PX opened on Marne Road.

Other new stores have helped, too, he said, including the mini mall on Kelley Hill, shoppettes on Dixie and Custer roads, the coffee shop in the hospital and the furniture store on Main Post.

New construction at installations worldwide is paid for through retained earnings and accumulated depreciation. AAFES has an aggressive construction program at Fort Benning, investing $51.2 million over the last 30 months in construction and renovations.

A $1.9 million troop store on Harmony Church is planned for next year.

AAFES earnings that don't fund construction and renovation of stores on post go to Directorate of Family and Morale, Welfare and Recreation programs, Brewington said.

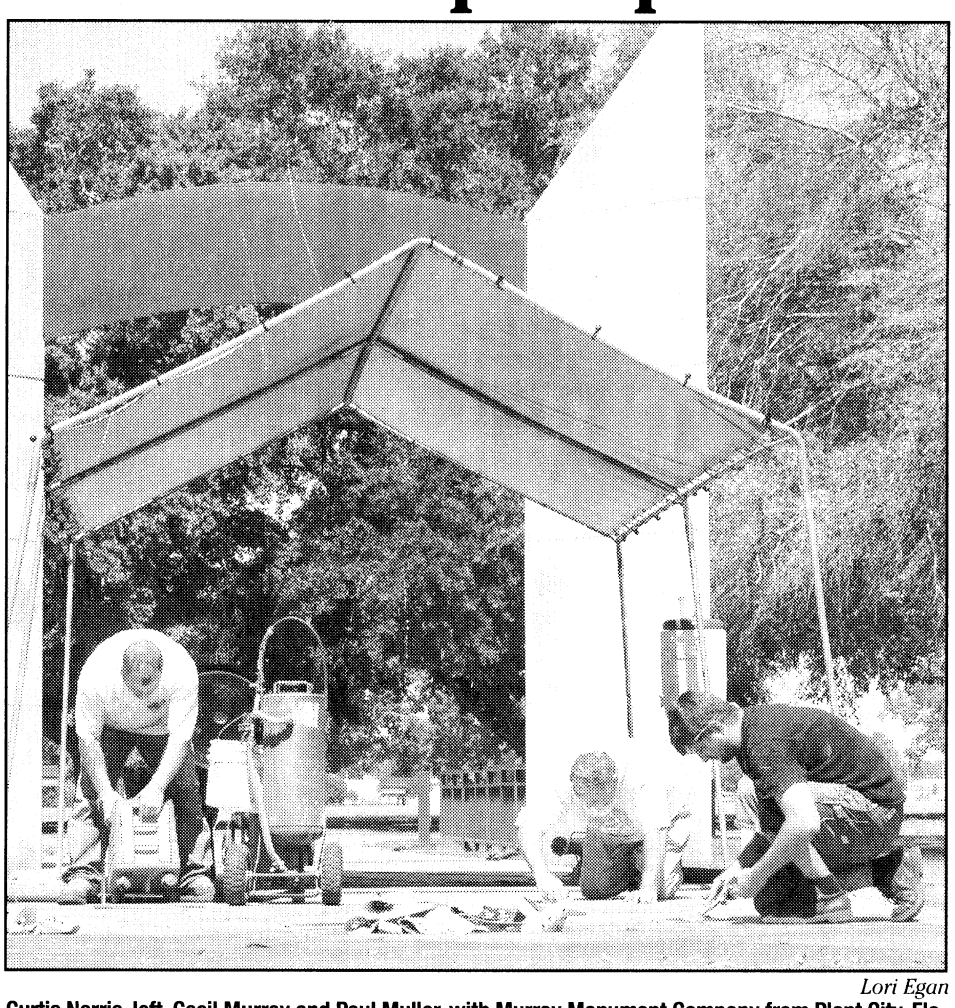
"They help improve the quality of life for the Soldiers and their families," he said. "It all goes back to the military community."

About $2.18 million was given to DFMWR last year, said Al Gelineau, the organization's director. An agreement between the Army and AAFES sets the dividend at 0.4 percent of sales and concession income, 80 percent of pay telephone income and 100 percent of Class Six direct operating results, since the telephones and Class Six stores were formerly operated by DFMWR.

Gelineau said there has been a $952 increase on average monthly for January to May of this year compared with the same period of 2007.

There is a two-month backlag between when sales are made and when the money is distributed to DFMWR, said Paula Cline, financial analyst with AAFES headquarters.

DFMWR will receive the dividend for May on July 1.



DFMWR can also expect more money next month from the Class Six store. Since the Class Six previously located across from the Burger King on Main Post was moved inside the new PX, overhead costs increased, which means less money for DFMWR, said John Cass, DFMWR financial analyst for the southeast region. AAFES headquarters has agreed to reimburse the difference in funds to Fort Benning's DFMWR by July.

Gelineau said the dividend money helps replace equipment as needed.

"Whether it's jet skis in Destin, Florida, pontoon boats at Uchee Creek or equipment at the golf course, we want to keep those assets as new and up-to-date as possible," he said. "Our improvement plan is part and parcel to our customer satisfaction. If you have an old, dilapidated golf cart, and it breaks down after nine holes of golf, that's terrible. This dividend back to MWR is critical."

As sales continue to improve, there should be more money coming into DFMWR, which ultimately helps them provide quality products to Soldiers and their families, and that's what's important, Gelineau said.

Memorial upkeep

Lori Egan

Curtis Norris, left, Cecil Murray and Paul Muller, with Murray Monument Company from Plant City, Fla., clean, scrape and sandblast the granite at the Ranger Memorial Monday. Murray said they come to Fort Benning annually to add names. This year, the 2008 Ranger Hall of Fame inductees were added to the granite wall at the back of the memorial and 216 names were engraved into the tiles. Names are being added to the flame-finish granite tiles because the gray tiles are filled. The weekend rains delayed the process, Murray said, because granite is porous and needs to be dry before it can be engraved.

USO: Provides 'safe haven'

"I was asking when I first got here where the USO was, so I think it's really, really good that it's here now. It has been a long time coming."

Hours haven't been determined yet for the new center, which is still awaiting a full-time volunteer staff. After the center is fully staffed, there will be activities and special events for Soldiers and families.

"I will volunteer here, because it's my way of paying Soldiers back for everything they do," said Rosie Coss, wife of Capt. Olegario Coss Jr.

"This USO will mean a lot to the people who come here to see their loved ones," she said. "There are Soldiers here temporarily for training or transitioning with no one to lean on. During their transition period, there are usually long waiting periods when the USO would be very beneficial — at least providing a place to rest and snack without additional fees."

Rosie said she and her husband have used USOs in the past, always with good experiences.

"It has been our safe haven," she said.

Vertical engineer company moves to Fort Benning

THE BAYONET
Rachel L. Watkins

Think vertically.

The 11th Engineer Battalion welcomed a new "vertical" company Monday, the first of its kind here in more than a decade. The 60th Engineer Company (Vertical Engineer Construction) will help build "up" Fort Benning as it transitions to the Maneuver Center of Excellence. The company's 60 Soldiers will construct headquarters, sleeping quarters and offices among other things.

The company, which moved here from Fort Knox, Ky., joins the 11th Eng. Bn.'s horizontal company, the 63rd Engineer Company, which is responsible for infrastructure projects such as road repairs and clearing areas for combat roads and trails.

Capt. Daniel Andrews, commander of the 60th Eng. Co., said horizontal and vertical companies complement each other. The 60th Eng. Co., which includes carpenters, masons, plumbers and electricians, has previously deployed to Iraq and Afghanistan. There they filled craters where IEDs could be hidden and built forward operating bases and sleeping structures. Andrews said he and his Soldiers also learned a lot of "horizontal engineering" skills from horizontal companies.

Soldiers' training at Fort Benning will reap the benefits of the company's presence, said Lt. Col. Paul Owen, 11th Engineer Battalion commander. The company can improve training for other Soldiers while honing their own skills.

"The 60th is excited and ready to join your ranks and become your teammates," Andrews said to Soldiers of the 11th Eng. Bn.

Celtics win in 6

The Boston Celtics clobbered the L.A. Lakers, 131-92, to win game six and the NBA Championships. Paul Pierce, part of the Celtics' "big three" won MVP honors.

Tiger wins in sudden death

Tiger Woods birdied the last hole of the regular competition Sunday to force an 18-hole playoff with 45-year-old Rocco Mediate, who was ranked 158th in the world going into the Open.

Those 18 holes weren't enough. Tiger again birdied on the 18th hole to force sudden death. Tiger birdied on the hole and Mediate bogeyed.

It was Tiger's 65th career victory, and he passed Ben Hogan on the all-time major win list.

And if that's not enough, Tiger played the tournament with two stress fractures and a torn ACL.

Middle-of-the-night firings

New York Mets fans woke up Tuesday to find out that manager Willie Randolph, along with pitching coach Rick Peterson and first base coach Tom Nieto were fired during a news conference at 3:15 a.m. Nothing like getting your walking papers in the middle of the night.

Just a day earlier, the Seattle Mariners fired general manager Bill Bavasi. The Mariners have had the worst record in the major leagues for most of the season.

Junior wins, finally

Though he got lucky with a final lap caution, Dale Earnhardt Jr. ended his 76-race winless drought and coasted in on fumes at Michigan International Speedway June 15.

A lot of pressure was put on Junior when he changed from Dale Earnhardt Inc. to drive for Hendrick Motorsports in the offseason. Junior finally got the chance to prove he is a good driver, not just because of his last name.

Walker victim of apparent robbery

Wide receiver for the Oakland Raiders, Javon Walker, was found unconscious on a Las Vegas street Monday. Police said he was the victim of an apparent robbery, and was taken to a hospital with significant injuries.

Walker was released by the Denver Broncos in February and picked up by the Raiders for a six-year, $55 million deal.

Let's hope he's able to rebound quickly.

Youth basketball team goes to nationals

The Kings, a traveling basketball team made up of 10- to 11-year-old Fort Benning boys, will compete in the Youth Basketball of America National Tournament June 28-July 5 in Orlando, Fla. The Kings are ranked No. 9 in the nation.

After the wrap of the Child Youth Services basketball season in January, retired 1st Sgt. Paul Horton and assistant coach Capt. Karl Ivey fielded a competitive 11-player travel team to play weekly throughout the state.

The team has competed in four championship games this season. They placed third in a tournament in Marietta, Ga., their best finish yet.

The team has funded their trips out of pocket and even practiced on Horton's driveway because of limited practice facilities.

"We have access to the YMCA, but most of the kids live at Fort Benning," Horton said. Now the team is using the CYS gym.

The Army shooters dominated the competition taking first place in all but four individual matches and first and second in all but one of the team events. AMU shooter Staff Sgt. James Henderson won 15 matches including the Interservice Individual Championship and the Centerfire Individual Championship.

Staff Sgt. Robert Park, also of the AMU, won six individual matches including the .22-caliber Warm-Up Aggregate Match, Combat Pistol Match 31 and the Combat Pistol Overall Championship.

Third time's a charm

Daryl Szarenski will compete in his third Olympics

THE BAYONET
Mitchell Thomas IV

Sgt. 1st Class Daryl Szarenski will make his third appearance in the Olympics in Beijing in August competing as the AMU's only International Pistol shooter.

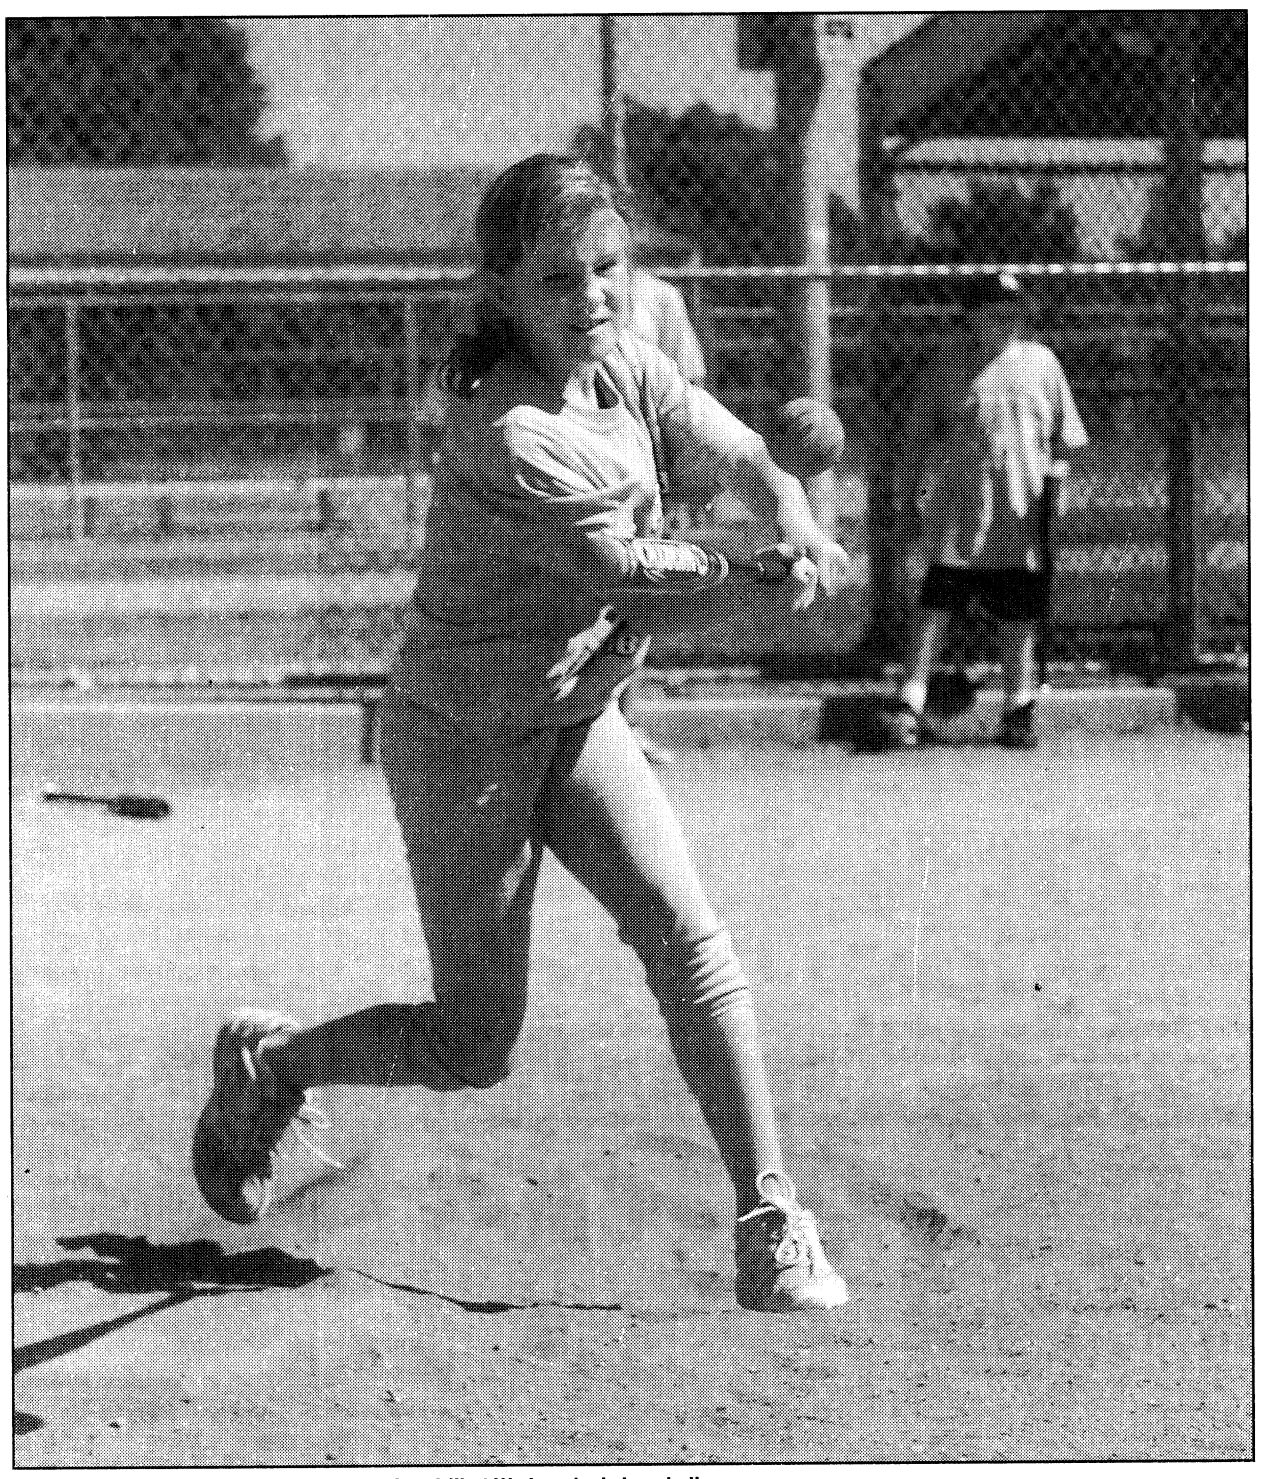
"If you have a chance to be the greatest in the world at something, you have to go after it," Szarenski said. "I have that chance, and to be able to go after it again makes all the time I've put into it worth it."

Szarenski, 40, won the World Cup in 1998 in International Pistol. He came in fourth in the World championships in 1998 and sixth in 2002.

"Szarenski is an awesome athlete and he's a good example for other athletes to emulate," said Ray Arredondo, coach of the International Pistol team. "He encourages shooters to be their best. He's dedicated to the sport and always wants to help increase our pool of shooters. He's a great guy all around."

Szarenski learned his craft as a rifle shooter. He began shooting at the age of 11 alongside his four older brothers. His father, a hunter and a former Marine, introduced Szarenski to the sport.

"My dad just wanted us to be good marksmen," Szarenski said. "But when I started winning, he knew I had something going."



As a sophomore in high school, he competed in his first Junior Olympics, then he joined the shooting team at Tennessee Tech University as a walk-on. After earning a scholarship on the school's rifle team in 1988, Szarenski won gold in the Junior Olympics. The following year, he

MWR FITNESS DIRECTOR
Lori Smith

Let's discuss the brain. Sometimes we forget that the brain is the most powerful muscle we have, and we need to take care of it just like we do the body.

The brain controls everything that happens in your body. It's packed with tiny, fragile cells that are easily damaged by free radicals, too much alcohol, raging blood sugar and cloying cholesterol — the same things that make your cardiovascular system run ineffectively.

The problem is that your brain does not recover from these abuses as quickly as your heart. The good news is, just like your body, you can take very good care of your brain by the food you eat. Below are some tips on how to eat to get smart.

Fill up on antioxidants — Antioxidants basically go to battle with all of those damaging free radicals that can prematurely age the delicate cells in the brain.

Try to eat fruits with intense colors like blue, red and green. Blueberries have been shown to help reverse memory loss. A few other great options to add to your diet are strawberries, cooked spinach and carrots.

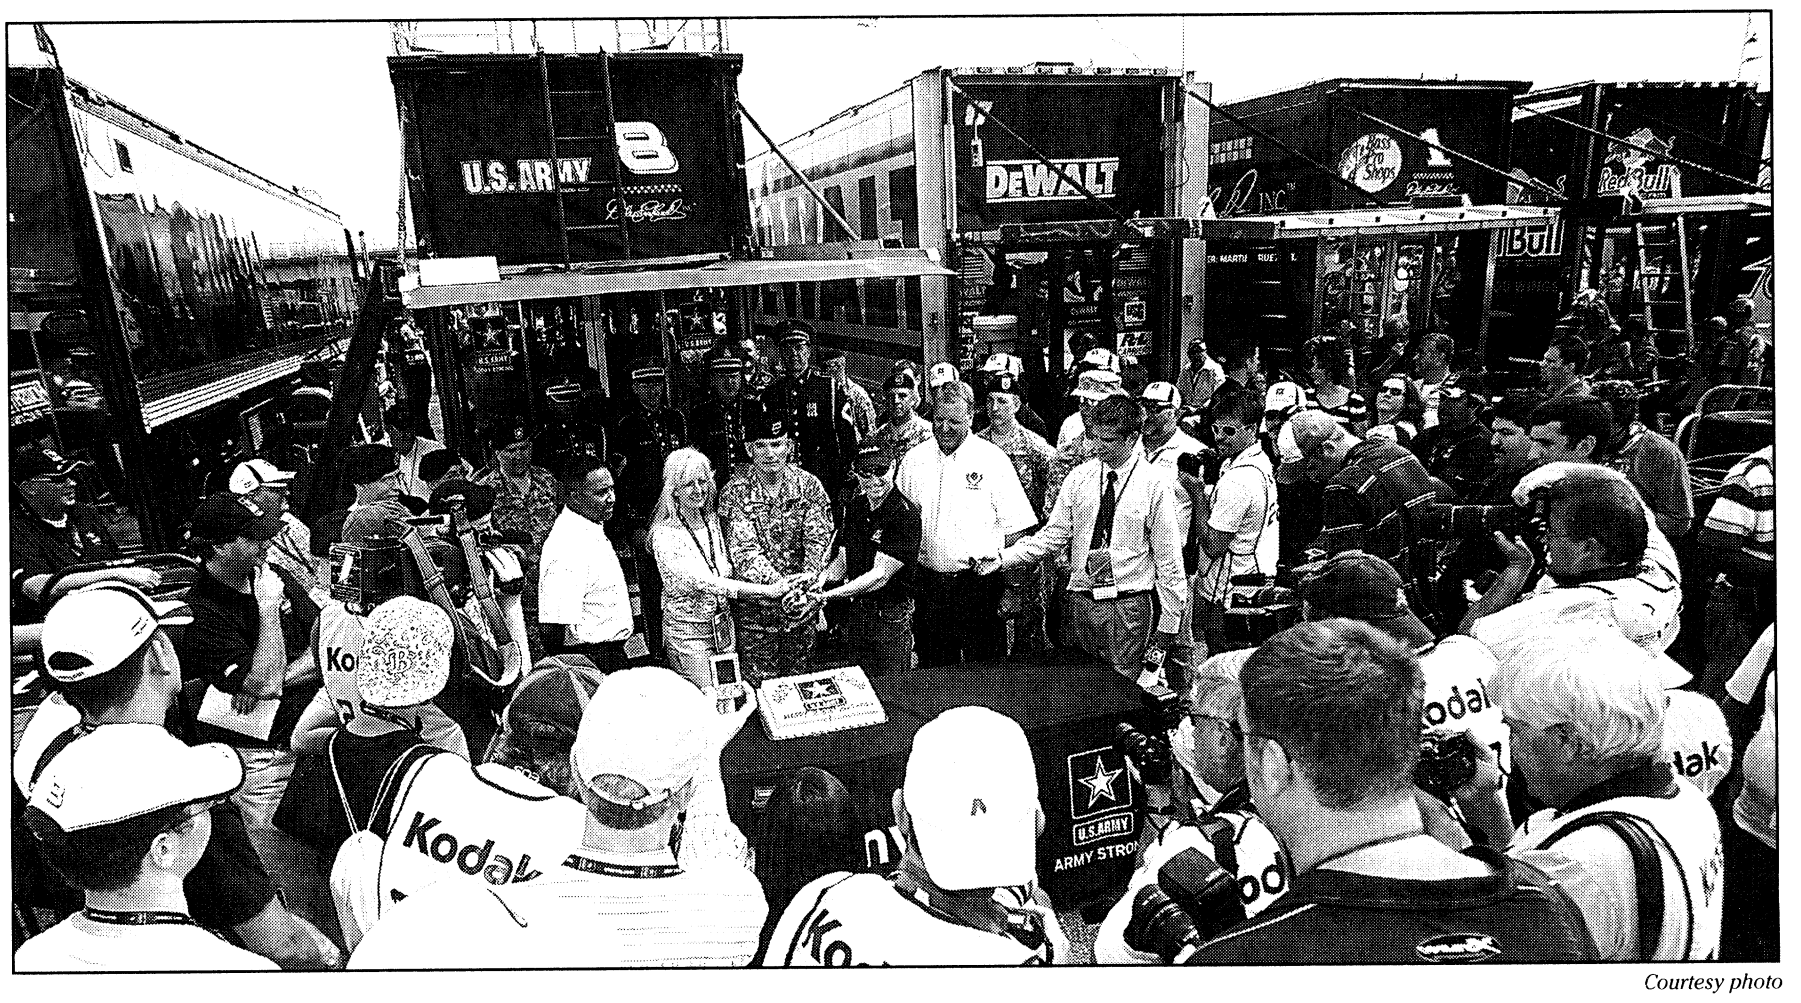
Vitamin B12 has been shown to help protect your neurons (these are the specialized cells that carry messages to and from the brain). B12 is found naturally in animal products but many people older than the age of 50 lose the ability to absorb natural B12 from food. If this is the case, the Institute of Medicine recommends getting B12 from either a multivitamin or fortified cereal.

Folate is necessary for the production and maintenance of new cells. This is especially important during periods of rapid cell division and growth such as infancy and pregnancy. Folate is needed to make DNA and RNA, the building blocks of cells. It also helps prevent changes to DNA that may lead to cancer. Both adults and children need folate to make normal red blood cells and prevent anemia. You can get folate by eating leafy greens such as spinach and turnip greens. Dry beans and peas, fortified cereals and grain products, and some fruits and vegetables are also rich food sources of folate. You can take a multivitamin, too, which is also a good way to get your dose of B12.

Vitamin D is found in food, but also can be made in your body after exposure to ultraviolet rays from the sun. Vitamin D exists in several forms, each with a different activity. The major biologic function of vitamin D is to maintain normal blood levels of calcium and phosphorus. Vitamin D aids in the absorption of calcium, helping to form and maintain strong bones.

But remember, before you start taking anything new, it's best to consult your physician.

There have been studies that have shown a connection between Alzheimer's and low levels of Vitamin D. Fortified foods are the major dietary sources of vitamin D. One cup of vitamin D fortified milk supplies about one-fourth of the estimated daily need for this vitamin for adults. Although milk is fortified with vitamin D, dairy products made from milk such as cheese, yogurt and ice cream are generally not fortified with vitamin D. So drink your milk.



Exposure to sunlight — Sunlight is another important source of vitamin D. Ultraviolet rays from sunlight trigger vitamin D synthesis in the skin. But before you go running outside, remember my article about sun damage and use caution.

A sunscreen with a protection factor of more than eight will block UV rays that produce vitamin D, but you still need to use sunscreen. Try getting your sunlight in stretches of 10 to 15 minutes or at dawn or dusk.

So go pick up some fruits, spinach and milk and have a great weekend. And no you can't blame your lack of vitamin B12 for forgetting to clean up the house this weekend, or turning in that work that was due Friday afternoon.

Remember, stay happy and stay healthy.

NASCAR officials help Army celebrate birthday

Team: Goes to nationals with sense of competition

Horton said the challenge of playing off post gives the players a greater sense of competition.

"Playing off post is a completely different game," Horton said. "It's great when you play on post for three months, but to really be good, you have to play year-round. It's kind of like when you don't fire an M-16 for a while, you lose some skills."

In April, the team sent tapes of one of their games to several of the players' fathers who were deployed at the time. The 3rd HBCT's Capt. Jefferey Crawford, whose sons Ju'Wan and Jac Quan play on the team, said the tape gave him a morale boost.

"To see my sons in action always makes me proud," said Crawford, who returned from Iraq in May.

But basketball isn't all the kids learn. The Kings organization also focuses on academics through tutoring and mentoring sessions and building a relationship with God by holding weekly Bible study.

Tillery said the program's aim is to build the kids' character on and off the court.

"These kids have to learn about discipline, academics and personal development," Tillery said. "Strong character comes before basketball always."

Szarenski: to make third appearance at Olympics

"My coaches used to tell me pistol shooting helps rifle shooting," Szarenski said. "After I started shooting good with the pistol, the coach wanted me to shoot both."

In 1989, he won the Junior Olympics in pistol and was the first shooter to be named an All-American in rifle and pistol in nearly 30 years.

Two years later, Szarenski joined the Army.

"I always wanted to be on the AMU team," Szarenski said. "My brother was a gunsmith here, and my oldest brother was an All-American at West Point.

"It's kind of like going to New York — If you can make it in the AMU, you can make it anywhere."

But in 1996, Szarenski didn't make it. During the final Olympic Trial in Atlanta, he missed his first shot at the Olympics after dismal weather conditions affected his match.

"That match was very depressing," Szarenski said. "To this day, I know I should have been on that team. It was hard to get over, but it motivated me. In 2000, I said to myself there was no way I wasn't going to make the team."

Szarenski placed 25th in the 2002 Olympics. Four years later, he finished 13th — five points out of the final and eight points behind the first place shooter.

"To come in 13th sounds like a failure, but I missed the final by two shots," he said. "It was tough to lose, but to shoot so close to the big dogs is something I can now appreciate."

This year, Szarenski believes he's having his best season as a pistol shooter.

In April, he placed third in the World Cup in Beijing against the same competitors he will face in August.

Szarenski said he has improved by targeting his strengths as opposed to his weaknesses.

"For years, I used come to the range and I wouldn't be done until I was knee deep in brass," Szarenski said. "But now, I've learned to shoot quality not quantity. In the Olympics, you don't shoot until you run out of ammo. You have to do it in 60 shots."

Szarenski said the Army is the primary reason he has excelled at shooting.

"I love the discipline and structure of the military," he said. "All the guys here are world champions and Olympic champions, and they expect you to be a champion as well. There's a winning atmosphere around here, and if you're not here to win, go somewhere else."

Szarenski said he won't be satisfied with anything less than a medal in Beijing.

"I have no desire to just be an Olympian," Szarenski said.

"If I had a crystal ball and it said I would be an 'also ran' again, I would turn my spot over to somebody else."

If he doesn't win, Szarenski said he would consider competing again in 2012.

"As long as I keep going up, I'll keep going, but if I see myself going downhill for a long period of time, it will be time to hang it up," he said. "If I was to come in fifth and I feel like 'man, I had that one,' why would I give up now?"

AMU shooters: dominate interservice championship

on the Air Force team, said AMU shooters help improve the competency of shooters throughout the military.

"It's a privilege to shoot with the best competitors in the world," said McCormick, who's stationed at the Pentagon and has been competing in interservice matches for the last six years. "The AMU produces Olympians and national champions regularly, and training with them helps raise the level of marksmanship among all the services."

First time competitor Staff Sgt. John Frost, a Marine stationed at the Marine Corps Air Station in Miramar, Calif., said the match gave him competition experience.

"The more you compete on this level, the more you move up and reach your competitive goals," Frost said. "This is the highest level, and I'm going to take back what I've learned to be more competitive next year.

McCormick said he enjoys the camaraderie among the services.

"There is a level of friendship among shooters that transcends rank and services," he said. "Its friendly competition out here, but there's professional respect and courtesy. Its just a great bunch of folks that really appreciate and enjoy this sport."

Park said helping prepare Soldiers for combat is the main objective of the competition.

"It was great to get the individual wins, but it's all about advancing marksmanship of all Soldiers," said Park. "We teach Soldiers how to react when a situation presents itself. Shots on target matter, and if we can get the Soldiers to be faster and better prepared, we've done our job."

Bridgett Siter

Retired Col. Bob Nett celebrated his 86th birthday at the VFW on Victory Drive June 13. Nett and his wife, Frances, pictured here cutting the birthday cake, were joined by a number of friends and representatives from Fort Benning and the local community. Nett received the Medal of Honor Feb. 8, 1946, for his actions as a company commander during the American advance into the heart of Leyte, Philippines, in 1944. In January of 2007, the USO awarded him the Spirit of Hope award.

Post preps for annual Independence Day celebration June 28

The Commodores will headline the annual Independence Day celebration, a post tradition for more than 15 years.

It's the Directorate of Family and Morale, Welfare and Recreation's "biggest event of the year," drawing as many as 12,000 people to York Field in front of Infantry Hall, said Shannon Poole, marketing director for DFMWR.

The festivities will kick off at 3 p.m. June 28 and end after a large fireworks display set to patriotic music, which will begin after the last performance of the evening.

People come from all around just for the fireworks show, Poole said. Although the concert and fireworks are the grand finale and not to be missed, there are activities throughout the day — something for everyone, Poole said.

Kids can jump, slide, bounce and joust on more than 20 inflatables for only $7 or make arts and crafts, courtesy of Sayers Memorial Library.

Picnic foods, including hotdogs, hamburgers and funnel cakes, will be on sale from 3 to 10:30 p.m.

Visitors are invited to bring their lawn chairs and blankets to spread out on the lawn.

At 6 p.m., the concerts begin, featuring country singer Katie Rae Davis followed by Southern rock artist Gary Nichols and the headlining act, the Commodores.

Besides the food, fun and music, there will be several military demonstrations, making this celebration just a little bit different from one you might see off post, Poole said.

Army recruiting duty offers challenges, rewards

THE BAYONET
Cheryl Rodewig

Sgt. 1st Class Dwayne Spates said he provides the strength of the Army. As a recruiter working in Columbus, he finds future Soldiers in high schools, colleges and at the recruiting station.

Spates

"Without recruiters, the Army can't continue to sustain itself, so recruiting is a vital part of the Army's mission," Spates said.

Spates used to provide a very different kind of strength to the Army when he worked on Main Post as a technical engineer. Working with people, he said, is a completely different matter.

"It requires a lot of effort. You're dealing with people's lives, and they're actually ready to get their lives started or turned in a different direction, so it can be challenging," said Spates, who started recruiting three and a half years ago in New Orleans. After Hurricane Katrina, he relocated to Columbus, where his wife and two children live.

"It's much easier recruiting here in Columbus than it is in New Orleans," he said, "largely because we have a lot of people who understand the Army a little bit more."

Most Columbus residents know something about Fort Benning and the Soldiers there, Spates said, which makes the decision to join the Army easier for recruits, "regardless of what's going on in the world, because they understand the security of being in the military."

For people who don't know about the military, Spates said he enjoys explaining what the Army does and what the Army can do. Finding people who may be interested is hard but has its rewards, like when a Soldier returns to thank the recruiter years later.

Spates will continue recruiting until fall of next year. For him, recruiting was an easy fit because of his outgoing personality, he said.

For Sgt. 1st Class Kimberly Klingbiel, who finished her training and started recruiting last year, it was difficult at first to speak in public and approach strangers.

Klingbiel

"It's very challenging," she said. "You get rejected on a daily basis. You really have to have a backbone for this job.

At the same time, I had done two back-to-back deployments, and I really wanted to take a break, and this assignment offers that opportunity."

After passing training and completing the six-month new recruiter program, successful recruiters are given the option to continue recruiting or return to their duty station. Klingbiel and Spates were selected by their branch managers for the job, but after training, they both agreed to stay on.

"It really depends on how you set your mind and how you focus," Spates said. "Part of your duty is to do whatever job you've been asked to do. As long as I'm out doing my job and talking to individuals, I'm providing my little piece of the puzzle that will enable the Army to maintain its mission."

Klingbiel wanted to stay at least until she earned her gold badge, signifying the number of contracts she has put in.

"So I said I'm going to tough it out. I didn't want to come out here for six months and say, 'OK, I don't like it; I quit.' I wanted to complete the assignment I was given," she said.

Klingbiel has her badge and expects her ring, the next level for a recruiter, any week now.

"It's a real tough job, that first step right there, finding someone who qualifies to join the Army and who wants to," she said.

But if someone wants to qualify, she can help that person meet the goal. In one instance, she exercised with an applicant who was 30 pounds over the weight limit.

"I was putting a lot of my personal time in with her," Klingbiel said. "We ended up working off those 30 pounds, and she passed basic training."

Klingbiel continued to stay in touch, motivating the new Soldier during basic and AIT.

"Recruiters are Soldiers too," she said. "We're not asking you to do anything we haven't done."

Volunteer recruiters are guaranteed one of their nine recruiting battalions of choice. Most recruiting assignments last about three years, but Soldiers can serve as a recruiter for a two-week period after returning from a deployment through the Special Recruiter Assistance Program. They can also serve as hometown recruiters or as civilian recruiters after retiring from the Army.

People who refer someone not in their immediate family to join the military will receive a $2,000 bonus.

For information, call the Post Retention Office at 706-545-7387. For more information about recruiting or related programs, call 502-626-0215 or visit the Web site at www.2k.army.mil.

Teen volunteer gives $10,000 award to post organization that supports youth services

THE BAYONET
Cheryl Rodewig

When most teenagers would be relaxing before their senior year of high school, Al'Shondra Harris was working hard on a project that would eventually mean $10,000 for post Youth Services programs.

"It started off because I was going for my Girl Scout Gold Award," said 18-year-old Al'Shondra, the daughter of former Fort Benning Soldiers. "You have to make a project that will affect your community."

After hearing students talk about how expensive prom attire was, Al'Shondra decided to collect prom gowns for girls who, because of financial difficulty, wouldn't be able to buy one of their own.

"The first dresses came from my closet," she said.

After that, she started looking for them everywhere. She visited department stores and independently owned businesses; she asked family, friends, church members and recent graduates. By prom season, she had more than 150 dresses, and shoes, handbags, and hair and makeup coupons.

"This took a lot of hours. Now that it's over, I feel happy that I was able to help as many girls as I did," said Al'Shondra, who made prom night special for 20 girls from eight local high schools.

But that's not all. Keystone Club teen advisor Lori A'mor submitted an essay to the Taco Bell Foundation for Teens about Al'Shondra's work. Al'Shondra was selected as a national winner. The foundation awarded her $10,000 to donate to a charity of her choice. She immediately thought of Fort Benning.

"Al'Shondra had the opportunity to give the money to the charity of her choice, and her choice was to give it back to the Soldiers and their families," said Quintella Thorn, director of Youth Services, who received the $10,000 check June 11 at the Taco Bell on Victory Drive.

"That was very, very special to us," she said. "It means what we're giving out, we're getting back."

Thorn said the donation will allow them to improve programming for Army youth, which in turn will draw more children and teens.

Since membership in Youth Services programs spikes during the summer months, this money couldn't have come at a better time, Thorn said. Summer activities, like field trips, university visits and apprenticeship programs, help prepare students at a young age for success in life.

Al'Shondra said she chose the Soldiers and Families Support Organization to thank Soldiers and the families who support them. She has been in Army child and youth services programs since she was 3. They have helped her develop leadership skills, she said.

"I knew this was the perfect organization to give to," Al'Shondra said. "It has really helped me, and I'm hoping with this money, they'll be able to create more activities that will help others like me, too."

Al'Shondra heads to Howard University in Washington, D.C., this fall for college, but with her mom's help, she plans to keep the charity running next year, expanding it to include homecomings, military balls and other formal events for teens.

Cheryl Rodewig

Al'Shondra Harris, 18, was a 2008 finalist for the Taco Bell Foundation for Teens' Teen Hero Award. She received $10,000 to donate to the charity of her choice. Al'Shondra said she chose the Soldiers and Families Support Organization on Fort Benning to thank Soldiers and their families. She is a member of the Keystone Club, a teen club on post that has helped develop leadership skills.

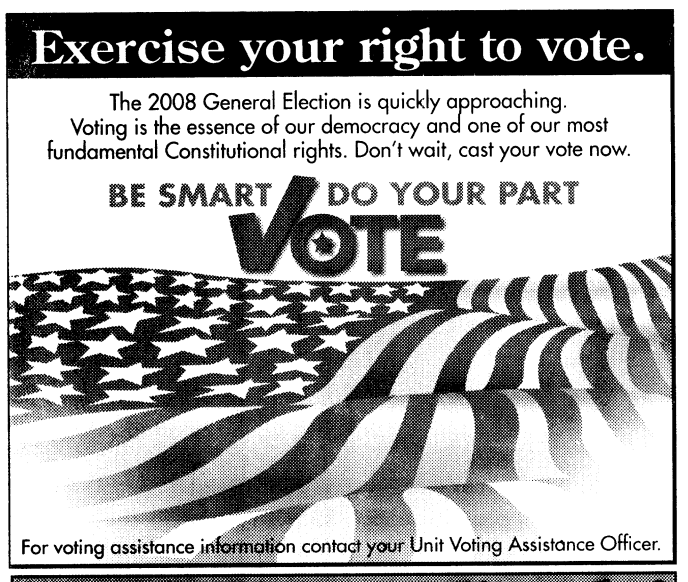
ASK THE JUDGE



OFFICE OF STAFF JUDGE ADVOCATE
Anthony Tempesta

Q: Another Soldier told me that I can deduct the cost of my haircuts, since the Army requires me to keep my hair short. Is this true?

A: No, it is not true. This incorrect belief has been around for years, and no amount of effort to stamp it out has proved completely successful. The confusion comes from the fact that certain — repeat, certain — unreimbursed employee business expenses can be listed on Schedule A, using Form 2106, as itemized deductions. Under certain circumstances, for example, the cost of work-related education may be deductible. The cost of cutting one's hair, however, even if the military has a mandatory standard regarding hair length, is considered a personal expense and is not considered a deductible business expense.

This question comes up frequently every tax year, along with the question of whether the cost of buying military uniforms is deductible. The answer regarding military uniforms is more complicated, although generally speaking their cost is not deductible. Individuals with questions regarding this issue or any other tax issue should contact the Fort Benning Tax Center and speak to a tax professional.

The Tax Center will be open July 8-11 to help Soldiers who've returned from deployment file their taxes. For more information, call 706-545-3281.

Wilson Elementary provides movies, craft days

THE BAYONET
Rachel L. Watkins

Have fun with the family for free. Wilson Elementary School will host movie and craft days in the school gymnasium throughout the summer following free lunches at the school.

There will be a showing of Dumbo at 1 p.m. Wednesday. There will be concessions, priced less than $2, including popcorn, soda, candy and nachos.

The family night activities started last summer. Nearly 100 people attended.

"We started these because it gives the children a chance to meet with their friends and the adults a chance to meet other families," said Renee Guidry, president of Wilson's Parent Teacher Organization. "With redeployments and families moving in to Fort Benning, this will be a chance for new families to see what our school looks like."

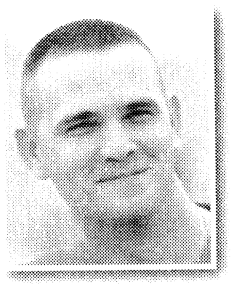
She said it also gives families a chance to get out of the house and spend quality time together.

Children can bring blankets and pillows, and chairs will be available at Wilson. The event is open to all military families.

The craft and movie days will run at 1 p.m. every Wednesday until August except July 2-16 when the school will be closed for cleaning. The next movie, Lady and the Tramp, will be shown at 1 p.m. July 23.

A schedule of events for the rest of the summer will be announced. No reservations are required.

Guidry is looking forward to a bigger crowd than last year. Wilson Elementary is located at 112 Lavoie Ave. For more information, call Guidry at 706-687-6792.



Orientation opens doors for Benning newcomers

THE BAYONET
Cheryl Rodewig

"As a military spouse, I know what it feels like to go to a new post and not know where anything is. (Newcomers associations) helped me to be independent. So that's what our program tries to do."

— Christina Daily, Relocation Readiness program manager

"It's reassuring to me that if my family had come, there would be people to help them out and show them around."

— Spc. Jason Simmons

"A lot of people complain that there's nothing to do here. If they take advantage of this tour, they'll get an opportunity to see a plethora of things to do in the area ... that are reasonably priced and family oriented."

— Djuana Washington, Family Readiness support assistant

It's PCS season, and Fort Benning is ready with the Newcomer Family Orientation. The program is available year-round, but during the summer, there are always more participants, said Christina Daily, Relocation Readiness program manager.

The orientation allows visitors to meet with representatives from several post organizations, including MEDDAC, Omega World Travel and Army Community Service, that will help them get to know the community they live in. It includes a bus tour of Fort Benning and Columbus.

Spc. Jason Simmons transferred with the 60th Engineer Vertical Company from Fort Knox, Ky. After two weeks on post, he attended the orientation.

Simmons said he "needed a refresher" after being away from Fort Benning for four years.

Even in four years, there were plenty of new things to learn about, he said, including the gym and the new PX. He recommended that other Soldiers new to post take the tour as well.

"The staff was very knowledgeable, very helpful," he said. "It's reassuring to me that if my family had come, there would be people to help them out and show them around."

Djuana Washington, Family Readiness support assistant for the 203rd Brigade Support Battalion, also attended Friday's orientation.

"I thought it would be a good opportunity to experience the briefing firsthand and be able to advise my incoming families on what to expect," Washington said. Her report was favorable.

"It's definitely good information for them to have," she said. "I had a couple family members with me who aren't new to post, and even they got some new information."

This orientation is for everyone with questions, Daily said, whether they have been here for two weeks or were here two years ago.

With the revitalization in Columbus and the incoming Armor School, something is always different, she said. The goal of the orientation and tour is to help people feel at home at Fort Benning.

"As a military spouse, I know what it feels like to go to a new post and not know where anything is," she said. "So I always took advantage of the newcomers (associations) at any of the installations that I went to. It just helped me get more connected with the community. I felt more confident if I had to be out on my own. If my husband was deployed or out in the field, I knew where things were. It helped me to be independent. So that's what our program tries to do."

The tour of Columbus includes the Convention and Visitors Bureau, the naval museum, the Coca-Cola Space Science Center, Ma Rainey's house and several other attractions.

"A lot of people complain that there's nothing to do here," Washington said. "If they take advantage of this tour, they'll get an opportunity to see a plethora of things to do in the area — Columbus, Fort Benning and Phenix City — that are reasonably priced and family oriented."

The program is free and open to all Soldiers, families and civilians new to post. Child care is provided at Tot Town, but reservations are required.

The next orientation will be at the Benning Club July 11. Orientations last from 8 a.m. to about 2 p.m. the second Friday of every month except December. Breakfast and lunch are included.

For more information, call Daily at 706-545-0403 or 706-545-4485.

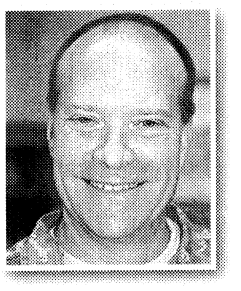
CHAPLAIN FAMILY LIFE CENTER
Chaplain (Maj.) Richard Garvey



"I've won at war, but I think I'm losing at love." That's what the Soldier said as he sat across the table and rolled a pencil under his fingertip.

"I just don't understand how I could be so good at what the Army asks of me, but so jacked up when it comes to my love life now that I'm back home ... what do I do?"

War is full of challenges — both for those who leave to fight it, as well as for those who stay to fight it. One of the most precarious times on a combat patrol is when you re-enter friendly lines.

We can so easily be mistaken for the enemy and shot at by friendly forces, but it is the password that allows us to identify ourselves as friendly and avoid friendly fire.

Relationships are a lot like a combat patrol after being away for a long period of time, a little precarious when we "re-enter friendly lines."

How do we make sure that we are as successful back home in peace as we were while deployed in war?

You may want to try the A-B-C approach that others who've gone before you have successfully used.

A — Adjust your attitude. Ask yourself these questions: Are my expectations too high — are they realistic or idealistic? Am I expecting to mostly give or take now that I'm back home? Am I willing to meet my mate's needs first, ahead of my own? You both have sacrificed and suffered hardships; remember it is not a competition to see who had it worse.

B — Bring home your best. During your first week at home, use this advice from others who've successfully navigated redeployments by asking if you will commit to 10 compliments and little-to-no criticism in your first days at home. Will you ask your loved ones daily for one week, "What could I do to make our day together a '10' for you? What do you need from me right now?"

C — Call your own couple's conference. Now that the 10 day reintegration training is complete, it is a good idea to set some time aside to quietly, positively ask, "What three things, specifically, do you most need from me in order to make this first month home together successful?"

Here are some other guidelines recommended by Soldiers and spouses who've survived what you are going through:

• Don't criticize. Cut each other some slack. Both of you have changed to varying degrees.

• Don't play first sergeant or assume command once home. Go easy.

• Avoid over-scheduling. Quiet and rest after the initial rush is helpful.

• Resist the urge to go on a spending spree; celebrate inexpensively.

• Be patient and encouraging. Readjusting can take anywhere from a couple of weeks to a couple of months.

• Seize the opportunity to grow together spiritually. Couples who pray together, stay together.

As always, know that the Family Life Center team is only a phone call away to help you with individual and family coaching at 706-545-1760.

If you need some help or just need to talk, give us a call. We are here to help you with your journey through life. We're proud of all the Army Team — especially those of you reuniting after your efforts in Iraq. God loves you, and so do we.

Join the club: Many have doubted God's ability to take care of us

But don't let doubt steal faith

1ST BATTALION, 50TH INFANTRY REGIMENT
Chaplain (Capt.) Douglas D. Gibson

Have you ever doubted God? Have you ever reached the point where you doubted God's ability to take care of you or whether or not he loves you? Join the club. All the great fathers of the faith had that same problem and if you have questioned God or his ability to act in your life, then you are a normal Christian.

Abraham was called by God to go into a land of milk and honey. Abraham raised his hand and said, "I will," but along the road to the promise land he made some very serious blunders.

He doubted God's ability to protect and take care of him. When things looked bad he often depended upon self, and at one point, he even gave his wife to another man. He said, I will tell the king that you're my sister and no harm will come to either of us because you're a beautiful woman.

In my book that is about as low as a man can go. To give your wife to another man for self preservation is very bad, but before this king could sin, God spoke in a dream and Abraham was spared the embarrassment of sin.

Moses, another great father of the faith, had issues of doubt as well. As Moses was tending sheep for his father-in law, he went upon the mountain called Herb. Mount Herb was called the mountain of God. When he got close he encountered God, and God laid out a plan for him to deliver his people from the bondage of slavery in Egypt.

Moses doubted God's ability to use him and came up with many excuses why God should find another man.

Now, let's look at this more closely. God is speaking to Moses from a burning bush that never burns away and he has an excuse or two about being God's man. I tell you this, if God were to reveal himself in an unconsumed burning bush to me, that would be a great sign and a great calling.

But not Moses. He said, "Send Aaron, my brother. He is more qualified and is obviously a better man for this hero stuff than me."

Let us look at John the Baptist. John from his mother's womb knew his purpose in life was to be the forerunner for the Messiah. Several years before Jesus revealed his mission in life, John was out in the wilderness eating locusts and honey, and as people came near he would preach the good news and baptize those who would repent of their sin. He was a regular Billy Graham. He would preach, people would repent, and then he would baptize.

John was so bold he once called the religious leaders vipers and even went to the governor and told him he was sinning by marrying his brother's wife. The latter got him prison time.

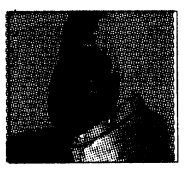
It was in prison that John began to doubt if Jesus was whom John proclaimed months ago when he baptized Jesus saying, "I am not even worthy to loosen His sandals." As Jesus came out of the water the Spirit of God lit upon him as a dove.

John showed his human weakness while in prison by doubting and sent his disciples to find out if Jesus was the One. Jesus had not come as he had anticipated, purging the land of the Roman Empire and setting himself up as the God-proclaimed King of Israel.

Abraham doubted but kept to his calling and God eventually was able to teach him that he could trust God in all things.

Moses doubted but stayed faithful to his calling and learned that he didn't need Aaron as he thought; God through him was good enough.

John the Baptist was beheaded for his faith but after hearing these words, "The blind receive their sight, the lame walk, those who have leprosy are cured, the deaf hear, the dead are raised to life and the good news is preached to the poor ..." (Matthew 11:4 NIV), doubt was vanished.



Every Christian has had doubt. It is how they handled that doubt that has made a difference.

Abraham continued to the promise land. Moses led without waver and John sent out a search party. Jesus says, "He who knocks the door will be open, and he who seeks will find."

Do not let doubt steal your faith, seek, look and you will find God is always faithful.

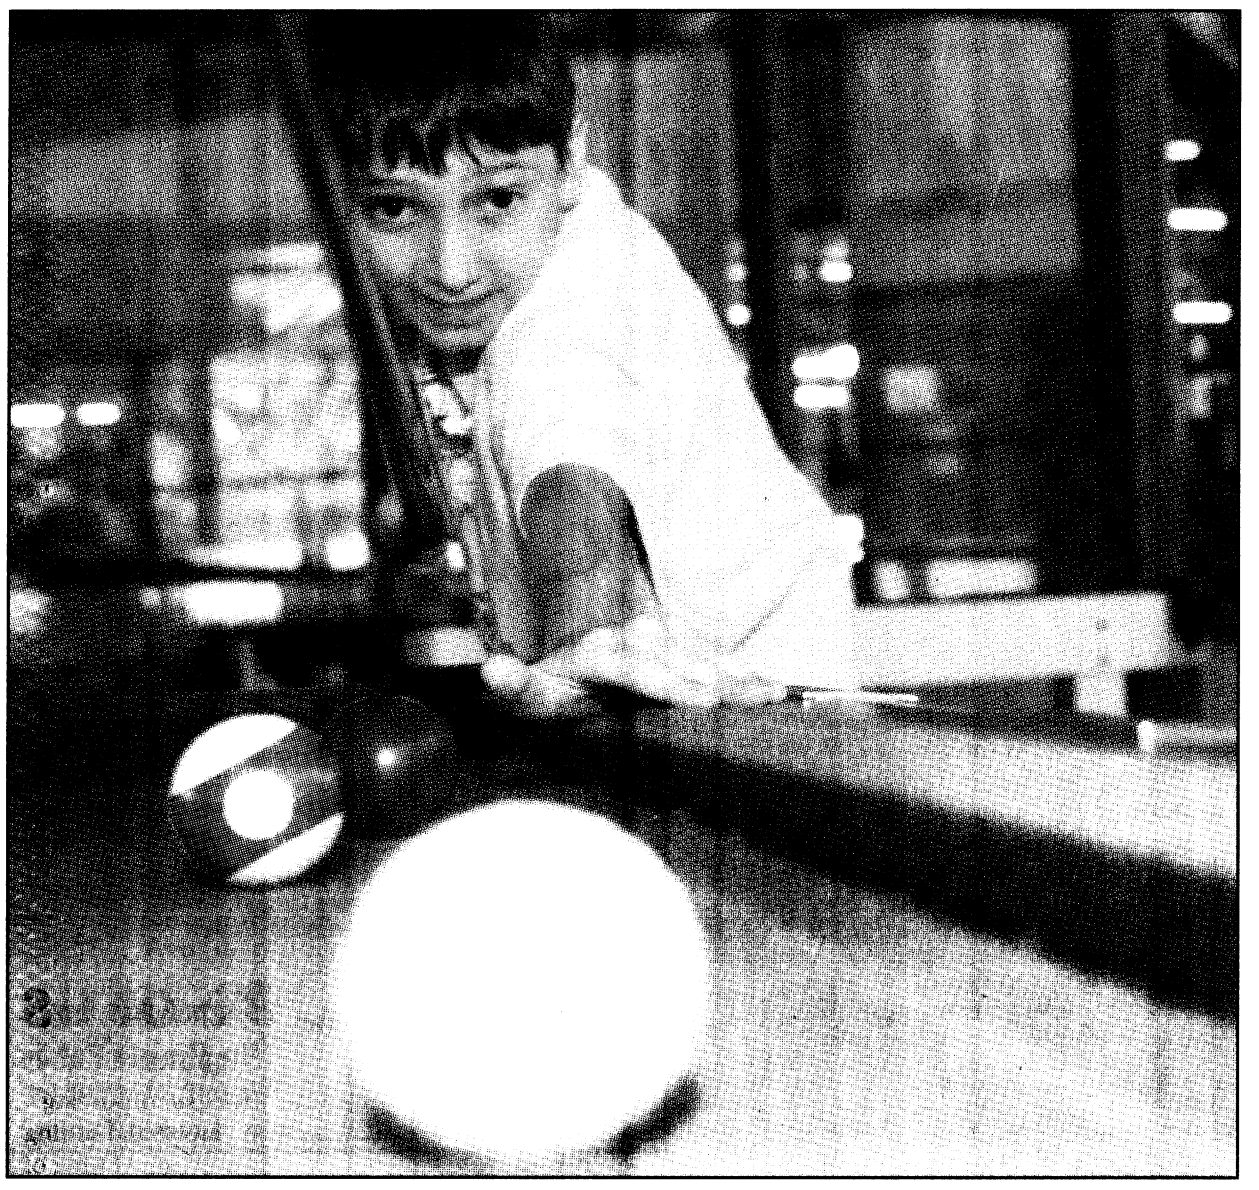
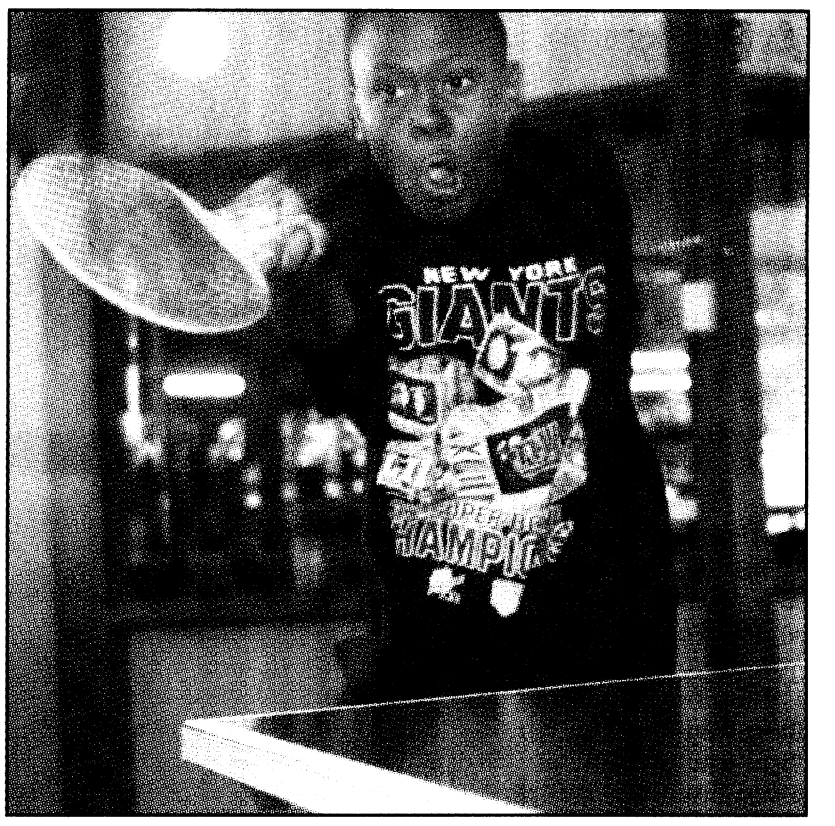
EFFECTIVE 1JUL08

Rules for designating Death Gratuity entitlements on the DD Form 93, Record of Emergency data will change effective 1 July 2008.



-On or after 1 July 2008, a Soldier may designate between 1 to 10 persons to receive all or a portion of the $100,000 death gratuity payment. Soldiers must designate amounts payable in 10% ($10,000) increments.



-Effective 1 July 2008, the Army must notify the Soldier's spouse in writing whenever a Soldier designates a person other than the spouse to receive all or a portion of the $100,000 death gratuity entitlements. Therefore, if a married Soldier designates another person in addition to or in place of the spouse after 1 July 2008, a letter will be prepared and mailed to the Soldier's spouse indicating the Soldier has made a change in his/her death gratuity benefits.

-The Army reminds Soldiers that they may place any useful information in block 13 of the DD93 Form for other info that is useful in the Casualty next of kin notification process such as next of kin language barriers; existence/location of a will; medical attendant power of attorney. At a minimum, this block will contain the PADD or person authorized direct disposition of a Soldier's remains in the event of death and can only be one of the following: spouse, a blood relative of legal age, or an adult relative.

Contact your Battalion S1 or Human Resources Directorate for more information.

Child Youth Services

Kids score big on fun

Seventh-grader Jalen Fuss, left, concentrates as he lines up his shot. "I'm so glad it's summer, because I don't have to do homework," he said. Fuss plans to spend most of his summer skateboarding.

Eighth-grader Jerry Ellis, above, leans in to hit the ping pong ball over the net.

Between the dance program and a slew of summer activities, the children in the Middle School and Teen program will be busy. Children registered at Child and Youth Services will swim, skate, picnic and visit Six Flags, the movies and an arcade.

To register for CYS Middle School and Teen activities, go to Central Registration, Building 359, Ingersoll Street, or call 706-545-2079.

For more information about the activities, call 706-545-3070 or go to www.benningmwr.com/CYSmiddleschoolandteen31905.htm.

Military couple group offers chance to meet others

Support group helps families learn from others' experiences

THE BAYONET
Rachel L. Watkins

Every Saturday, Jenn and Aaron Griffin go to the Cascade Hills Baptist Church in Columbus to attend a military couples support group.

"I like coming to the group because other military families can empathize or sympathize with what you're going through," said Aaron, a second lieutenant with 203rd Brigade Support Battalion on Kelley Hill.

At meetings, members talk about books, play games, read scripture, pray and talk about life. On Saturday, the group talked about acts of service, quality time and affirmation of love.

This is a spiritual outlet for military couples outside of the support groups on post, said Lorien Deverse, class leader.

Jenn said there may even be things that others can teach her and Aaron.

"Other couples have been through stuff that we haven't been through, or they know what we are going through, so they can give us insight on how to deal with situations," she said.

When the Griffins were stationed in Germany, and Aaron was deployed with the 1st Squadron, 1st Cavalry, Jenn said the thing that kept her the strongest during the deployment was having other Army wives to ask advice.

A newcomer to Fort Benning, Melissa Carpenter, attended the meeting.

"I came here because it is an opportunity to meet other military families and to get out of the house," she said. It's also convenient, just a few miles from her house.

Her husband, Spc. Matt Carpenter, is in basic training right now, so she will be happy to have extra help learning her way around Columbus, Melissa said.

celebration, the Silver Wings will drop in, and the Rangers will swoop in with their SPIES and FRIES demonstration. The 197th Infantry Brigade will set up static displays, so visitors can get a closer look at a variety of military devices.

The displays will be very hands-on, with everything from sniper rifles to Strykers and Bradleys, said Jim Shoemaker, Outdoor Recreation manager.

"And these Soldiers who will be out there know everything you could possibly ask them about this equipment," Shoemaker said.

"They're the top-of-the-line guys," he said.

In light of the mixed martial arts influence on the Army combatives program, this year's event will feature MMA and Ultimate Fighting Championship demonstrations. Mike Van Arsdale, former coach of the All-Army Wrestling Team, and other fighters will meet with the public and sign autographs at 7:30 p.m. June 27 at Smith Fitness Center. They will demonstrate techniques and lead boxing and self-defense classes June 28 and 29 at the fitness center.

Parking will be available at Infantry Hall and by the Airborne Walk.

People coming from off post to attend the celebration will not need a visitor's pass at access control points but will need to show ID. Admission is free and open to the public.

Columbus Catfish

Catch 'em while you can

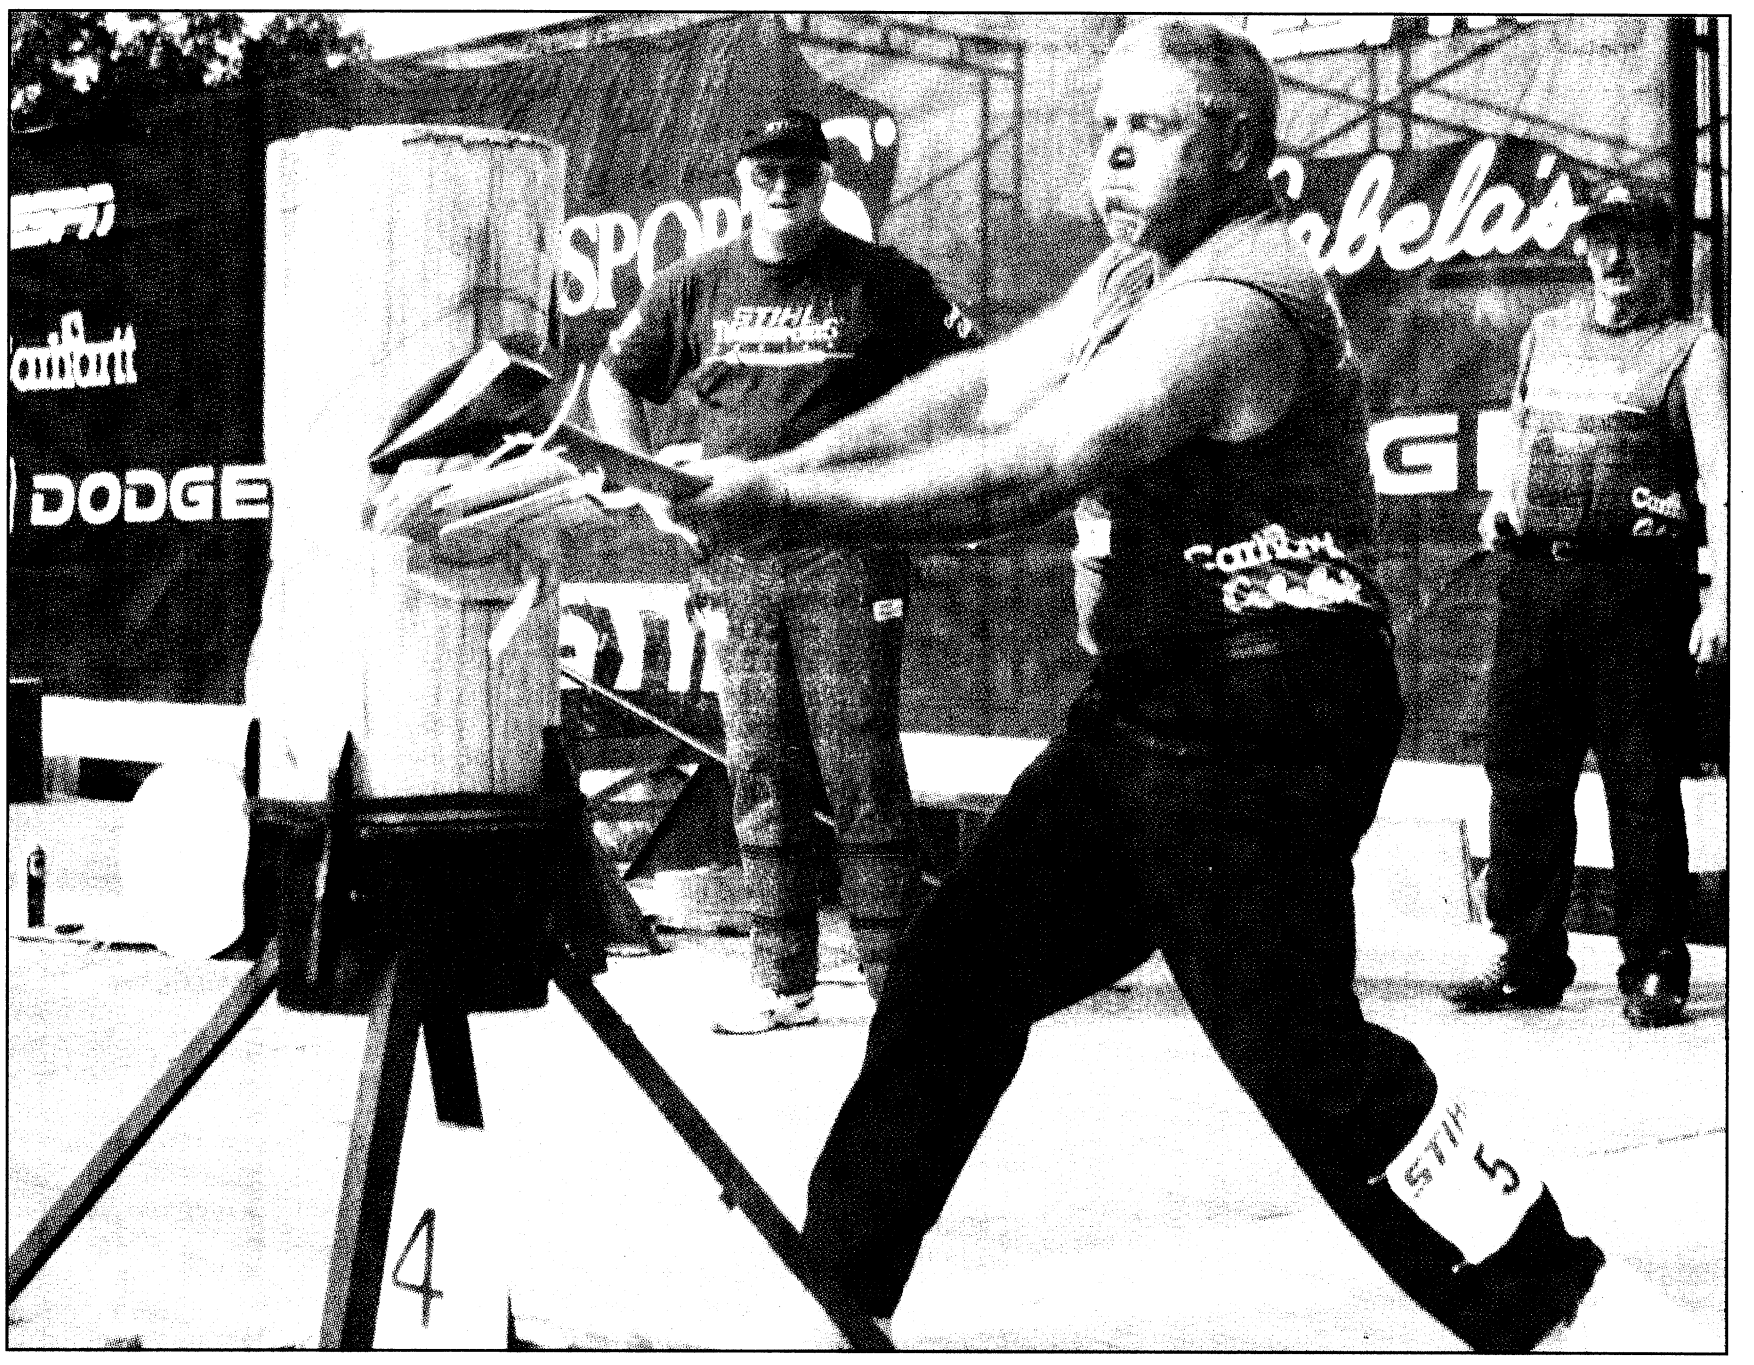
THE BAYONET
Rachel L. Watkins

If you are looking for an outdoor activity, a Columbus Catfish baseball game is sure to be a hit. The stadium is a 20-minute drive from Fort Benning on Victory Drive, which won't take too much from your gas tank.

The Columbus Catfish, affiliated with the Tampa Bay Devil Rays, are a class A team in the Southern Atlantic Division. The Catfish just finished the first half of their season and are in seventh place with a record of 27-43. Among the players are Reid Fronk who has 6 home runs, 35 RBIs and a batting average of .237. Pitcher Alexander Cobb has 57 strikeouts and his earned run average is 2.07.

The Catfish play the Charleston Riverdogs at 7 p.m. today which is the second of three Columbus Catfish Baseball Card Promo Pack giveaways sponsored by Arby's. This set features Catfish starters Fronk, Shawn O'Malley and Omar Luna.

After the game, there will be fireworks.

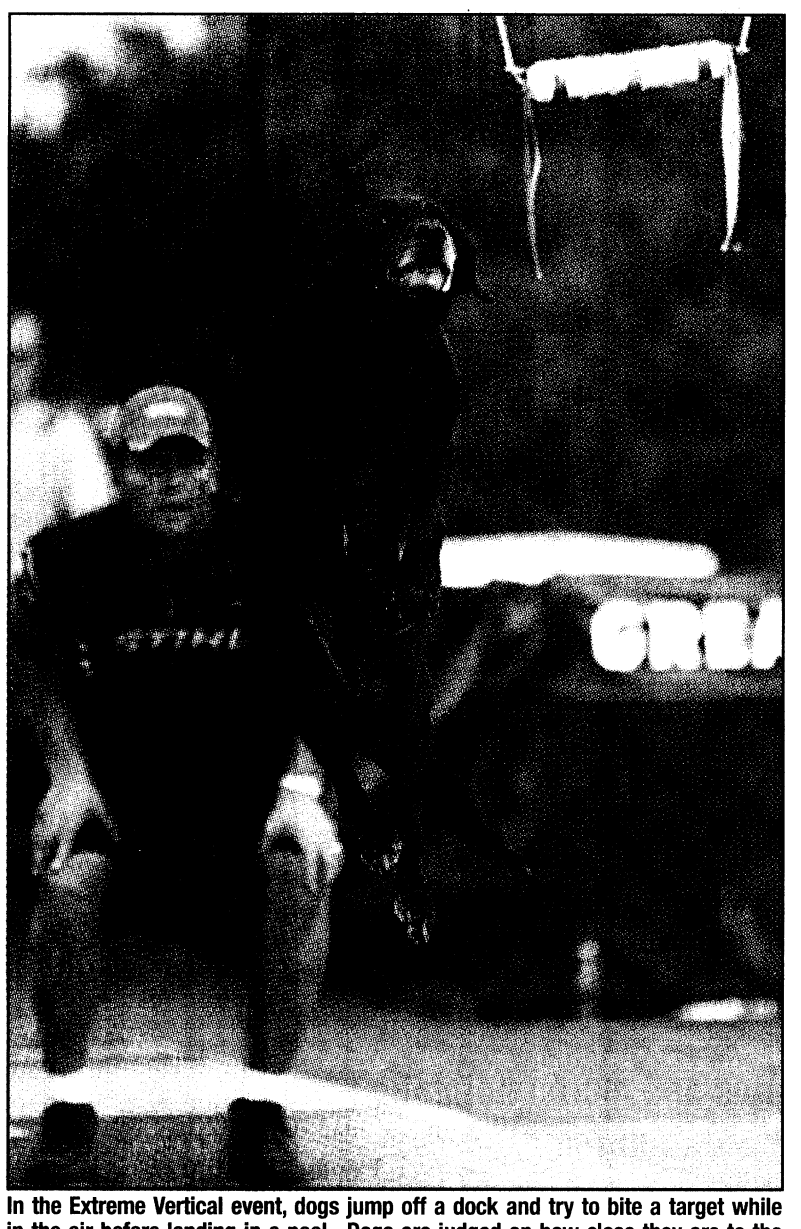


In the third game of the four-game series against the RiverDogs, fans can take their dogs to the Saturday game for "Bark in the Park." With the $3 "pooch pass" you and your dog can sit and watch all the Catfish action. Fans can dress up their dogs with sunglasses, dresses, jackets and shirts. The Muscogee County Humane Society will be there with pets looking for homes.

The Catfish will also be giving away prizes that include free grooming, free boarding and doggy treats from Petland. The Catfish will also be holding a bobble head night, where the first 300 fans will receive a bobble head doll.

The tickets are $5 per person or $2.50 for military. Be sure to bring military identification. The park also offers season tickets for the skybox. Or families can get the value pack, valid only on Saturdays and Sundays, which includes four tickets, four soft drinks, four hot dogs and a souvenir program for $25. More tickets can be added to the value pack and cost $5 each. There are also discounts for groups of more than 20 people.

You might want to bring a seat pillow and a glove to catch foul balls, but you can't take coolers, food or drinks into the park.



For more information, to order tickets, get a seating chart or read history about the team, go to www.columbuscatfish.com, or call 706-571-8866.

Harry Burnsworth competes in the standing block event, a part of the Stihl Timbersports competition. In the standing block event, participants attempt to cut a 12- to 14-inch log in two as quickly as possible. They must finish cutting the wood from the opposite side they began. The Stihl Timbersports competition will make a stop in Columbus for the Aflac Outdoor Games. Columbus is one of eight stops on the tour.

Stamina, tool skill to be tested during games

In the Extreme Vertical event, dogs jump off a dock and try to bite a target while in the air before landing in a pool. Dogs are judged on how close they are to the target.

The Aflac Outdoor Games will come to Columbus for the first time June 27-29 at South Commons.

"We want to give families a chance to get out and have a good time in the outdoors," said Warner Neal, president of Outdoor Events, a company in Columbus that created the Aflac Outdoor Games.

The Stihl Timbersports competition, part of the outdoor games, has never come to Columbus but has traveled to colleges around the nation including University of Florida, Haywood Community College, N.C., University of New Hampshire, and University of Montana. Columbus is one of eight stops on the tour. The competition will be taped and aired on ESPN and ESPNU.

Contestants, on a collegiate or professional level, will hack away at wood and be judged on strength, endurance, stamina, tool skill and agility. There are different categories — hot saw, stock saw, underhand chop and standing chop. In the hot saw event, each participant has to make three cuts, each less than six inches, from a 19-inch thick log as quickly as they can. In the standing block event, participants attempt to cut a 12- to 14-inch log in two as quickly as possible. They must finish cutting the wood from the opposite side they began.

Other activities include a barbecue contest, dog relays and face painting and inflatables for the kids.

Dock Dogs, a national competition shown on the Outdoor Channel, will be a part of the event. Dogs will jump from a platform into a pool. They will be judged on how far and how high they jump. The competition will be open to professional and local dog trainers.

There will also be a dog obstacle course, where dogs will play fly ball. In this sport, dog teams race through an obstacle course of four hurdles and a fly ball box. To pass the course, each dog must clear all of the hurdles, release the ball from the fly ball box and carry it while jumping every hurdle to the finish line. Dogs are judged on combined course time and penalties.

Drinks, food, coolers and dogs aren't allowed at the event. Advance tickets are $10 for adults and $5 for children younger than 12 years old. Children younger than 5 will get into the event for free.

Advance tickets for military are $5. To order advance tickets, go to www.aflacoutdoorgames.com, call 706-660-1996, or go to any local Piggly Wiggly store. At the gate, tickets are $15 for adults and the cost for military adults is $10 per person.

New natural history exhibition reveals the impact of soil on life

SMITHSONIAN MUSEUM

Washington, D.C. — There are more living creatures in a shovel-full of soil than human beings on the planet, yet more is known about the dark side of the moon than about soil. These are just a couple of the fascinating facts visitors can learn from the new temporary exhibition "Dig It! The Secrets of Soil," when it opens July 19 at the Smithsonian's National Museum of Natural History.

The 5,000-square-foot exhibition reveals the complex world of soil and how this hidden ecosystem supports nearly every form of life on Earth. The exhibition is sponsored by the Soil Science Society of America and the Nutrients for Life Foundation, which is underwritten by The Fertilizer Institute.

"Dig It!" includes interactive displays, hands-on models, videos and soil samples. Curious visitors will get the dirt on this little-known subject through audiovisual and interactive components, from a set of interactive soil stratigraphy blocks to a crime scene investigation video focusing on the processes of decay to a computer kiosk where visitors can learn about their state soil.

Visitors can also explore soil found in their own backyard and in obscure locations, with 54 soil samples representing each U.S. state and territory and the District of Columbia, as well as soil maps and touchable soil models from around the world. In doing so, visitors will discover a world teaming with life. In fact, so many organisms contribute to the health of soil that scientists have not even named them all.

"This is the most ambitious exhibition ever dedicated to soil, a resource as important to life on Earth as water and air," said Patrick Megonigal, soil scientist for the

GET SMART

Maxwell Smart (Steve Carell) is on a mission to thwart the latest plot for world domination by the evil crime syndicate known as KAOS. When the headquarters of U.S. spy agency Control is attacked and the identities of its agents compromised, the Chief (Alan Arkin) has no choice but to promote his ever-eager analyst Maxwell Smart, who has always dreamt of working in the field alongside stalwart superstar Agent 23 (Dwayne "The Rock" Johnson). Smart is partnered instead with the only other agent whose identity has not been compromised: the lovely-but-lethal veteran Agent 99 (Anne Hathaway).

This film is rated PG-13 for rude humor, action violence and language.

Tracy Bennett

Anne Hathaway stars as Agent 99 and Steve Carell stars as Maxwell Smart in the action comedy Get Smart.

THE LOVE GURU

Pitka (Mike Myers) is an American who was left at the gates of an ashram in India as a child and raised by gurus. He moves back to the U.S. to seek fame and fortune in the world of self-help and spirituality.

His unorthodox methods are tested when he must settle a rift between Toronto Maple Leafs star hockey player Darren Roanoke (Romany Malco) and his estranged wife. After the split, Roanoke's wife starts dating L.A. Kings star Jacques Grande (Justin Timberlake) out of revenge, sending her husband into a major professional skid — to the horror of the teams' owner Jane Bullard (Jessica Alba) and Coach Cherkov (Verne Troyer).

This film is rated PG-13 for crude and sexual content, language, comic violence and drug references.

Also Playing

THE INCREDIBLE HULK

Scientist Bruce Banner (Edward Norton) hunts for a cure to the gamma radiation that poisoned his cells and unleashes the rage within him. Living in the shadows, cut off from the life he knew and the woman he loves, Banner struggles to avoid the pursuit of his nemesis, General Thaddeus "Thunderbolt" Ross (William Hurt).

As all three tangle with the secrets of the Hulk's creation, they are confronted with a new adversary known as The Abomination, whose strength even exceeds the Hulk's. To stop it, the scientist must make the choice to accept the peaceful life of Bruce Banner, or find heroism in the creature he holds inside.

This film is rated PG-13 for violence and suggestive content.

THE HAPPENING

A family is on the run from an inexplicable and unstoppable event that threatens not only humankind, but the most basic human instinct of them all, survival. Mike Wahlberg stars as Eliot Moore.

This film is rated R for violent and disturbing images.

KUNG FU PANDA

When threatened by a gang of snow leopards, the jungle animals call upon an inept panda (Jack Black) to become a kung fu master and save the Valley of Peace.

The animated movie also stars Dustin Hoffman, Jackie Chan, Ian McShane, Lucy Liu, Angelina Jolie, David Cross and Seth Rogen.

SEX AND THE CITY

Carrie (Sarah Jessica Parker), Samantha (Kim Cattrall), Charlotte (Kristin Davis) and Miranda (Cynthia Nixon) continue their adventures as they live their lives in Manhattan four years after the series ended.

This film is rated R for sexual content, nudity and language.

YOU DON'T MESS WITH THE ZOHAN

He romances his clients by giving them "special services" in the back room. However, he is eventually recognized and risks losing his newfound life and career.

This film is rated PG-13 for crude and sexual content, language and nudity.

THE STRANGERS

Three mysterious strangers terrorize a young couple (Liv Tyler and Scott Speedman) in a remote house after they return from a wedding.

This film is rated R for violence, terror and language.

INDIANA JONES AND THE KINGDOM OF THE CRYSTAL SKULL

THE CHRONICLES OF NARNIA: PRINCE CASPIAN

One year later, the kings and queens of Narnia find themselves back in Narnia, only to discover that more than 1,300 years have passed in Narnian time. During their absence, Narnia has been conquered by the Telmarines and is now under the control of the evil King Miraz (Sergio Castellitto).

The four children soon meet Narnia's rightful heir to the throne, Prince Caspian (Ben Barnes), who has been forced into hiding as his uncle Miraz plots to kill him. With the help of a mouse, a badger and a Black Dwarf, the Narnians embark to find Aslan, rescue Narnia and restore the land.

SPEED RACER

Born to race cars, Speed Racer's (Emile Hirsch) only real competition is the memory of the brother he idolized — the legendary Rex Racer, whose death in a race has left behind a legacy that Speed is driven to fulfill.

When Speed turns down a lucrative and tempting offer from Royalton Industries, he infuriates the company's maniacal owner and discovers some of the biggest races are being fixed. The only way for Speed to save his family's business and the sport he loves is to win the death-defying, cross-country rally known as The Crucible.

This film is rated PG for action, violence, language and smoking.

WHAT HAPPENS IN VEGAS

Two people (Cameron Diaz and Ashton Kutcher) discover they've gotten married following a night of debauchery in Vegas, with one of them winning a jackpot after playing the other's quarter. The pair tries to undermine each other and get their hands on the money, falling in love along the way.

This film is rated PG-13 for sexual and crude content, language and a drug reference.

IRON MAN

Tony Stark (Robert Downey Jr.) is a billionaire industrialist and genius inventor who is kidnapped and forced to build a devastating weapon. Instead, using his intelligence and ingenuity, Tony builds a high-tech suit of armor and escapes captivity. When he uncovers a plot with global implications, he dons his powerful armor and vows to protect the world as Iron Man.

This film is rated PG-13 for sequences of sci-fi action and violence and suggestive content.

MADE OF HONOR

Tom Bailey (Patrick Dempsey) is in love with his best friend Claire (Michelle Monaghan). But Tom has a fear of commitment and refuses to admit that he should propose to Claire before she finds a less procrastinating suitor. When Colin (Kevin McKidd), a rich Scotsman asks Claire for her hand in marriage, Tom must witness her unquestioned happiness up close and personal — because she's chosen him to be her maid of honor.

This film is rated PG-13 for sexual content and language.

SON OF RAMBOW

In 1980's Britain, young Will Proudfoot (Bill Milner) is raised in isolation among The Brethren, a religious sect in which music and TV are strictly forbidden.

When Will encounters his first movie, a pirated copy of Rambo: First Blood, his imagination is blown wide open. Now, Will sets out to join forces with school bully Lee Carter (Will Poulter) to make their own action epic, devising wildly creative stunts and elaborate schemes for creating a movie of non-stop thrills while hiding from The Brethren.

When school popularity finally descends on Will and Lee in the form of the super-cool French exchange student Didier (Jules Sitruk), their new friendship and precious film are pushed to the breaking point.

STREET KINGS

Tom Ludlow (Keanu Reeves), a veteran LAPD detective, sets out to discover the killers of his former partner, Detective Terrance Washington. Ludlow's supervisor, Captain Wander (Forest Whitaker), must keep him within the confines of the law and out of the clutches of Internal Affairs Captain Biggs (Hugh Laurie). Ludlow teams up with a young homicide detective to track Washington's killers through Los Angeles and bring them to justice.

This film is rated R for violence and language.

Needing to pay for his M.I.T. tuition, the brilliant Ben Campbell (Jim Sturgess) joins a group of the school's gifted students, led by math professor Micky Rosa (Kevin Spacey), which counts cards at blackjack each weekend in Vegas.

STOP-LOSS

Decorated Iraq war hero Sgt. Brandon King (Ryan Phillippe) returns to his Texas hometown following his tour of duty. Alongside Steve Shriver (Channing Tatum), King tries to adapt to civilian life.

When the Army orders him back to Iraq, it upends his world, testing the bonds of family and friendship, the limits of love and the value of honor.

This film is rated R for violence and language.

Smithsonian Environmental Research Center, which is located in Maryland near the Chesapeake Bay. Megonigal is the exhibition's lead curator.

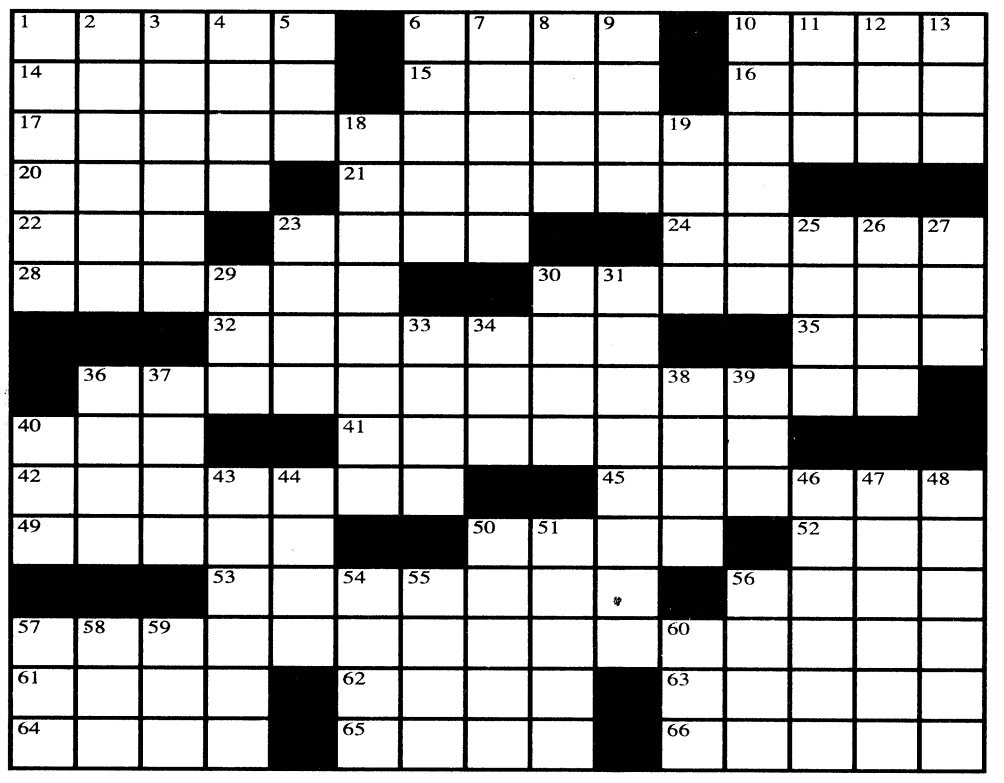
"Dig It!" shows how every type of soil is unique. Visitors can observe the way water moves through different soils in tumbler tubes containing sand, silt, clay and loam. The flow of water through soil can affect minerals and gases and all life that depends on soil. Soil color tells fascinating stories about mineral compositions and soil formation or history. "Dig It!" color cards help visitors to unveil the stories behind soil samples.

Visitors also can get in touch with their inner detective and learn about the soil food web in the "Matters of Life and Death Theater."

"The mission of this exhibition to educate millions about the importance of soils truly aligns with the Soil Science Society of America's own purpose of advancing soils as being fundamental to life," said SSSA President Gary A. Peterson. "Soil has an impact on climate change and our carbon footprint, among other important environmental issues."

After examining soil close up, exhibition visitors can step back and see the "big picture" with a world map and interactive stations that present the connection between soil and global systems.

Models demonstrate the roles of soil around the house and the formation of soil in commercial and residential construction, dams, playing fields, neighborhoods, roads and in food production. A video explains soil's role as a "secret ingredient" in such household goods as medicines, food, wine, textiles, paint, cosmetics and pottery.



"The exhibition paints a remarkable picture of soils and their role as a reservoir of life," said Ford West, The Fertilizer Institute and Nutrients for Life Foundation president. "Preserving the health of soils around the globe is critical to our ability to produce nutritious foods for future generations."

Following its showing at the National Museum of Natural History, "Dig It!" will travel to 10 museums across the country through 2013 under the auspices of the Smithsonian Institution Traveling Exhibition Service.

For more information about the traveling exhibition, visit www.sites.si.edu/soils. Additional information about "Dig It! The Secrets of Soil" is available at http://forces.si.edu/soils.

The National Museum of Natural History, located at 10th Street and Constitution Avenue N.W., Washington, D.C., welcomed more than 7 million visitors in 2007. The museum is open daily from 10 a.m. to 7:30 p.m. through Aug. 31 and from 10 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. thereafter. Admission is free. More information about the museum is available at www.mnh.si.edu.

This week's solution

There's no place like USA.gov.

Have you ever wondered how the Wizard of Oz seemed to know everything? Well, the secret's out and it's USA.gov. You can find everything from student loans to government auctions and government benefits to, well, almost anything. So go to the official source of federal and state government information, USA.gov. It can make you as all-knowing as the Wizard of Oz.

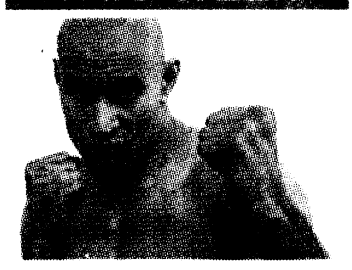
"Hydrate, hydrate, hydrate. And beer doesn't count."



That's Ron Douglass' message to Fort Benning residents as they head into a weekend full of activity, including ball tournaments and the annual Independence Day celebration.

Douglass, of the post Safety Office, warned about the dangers of overexposure to the sun and the heat. Don't assume "out of the sun means out of danger," he said. "Make sure you're drinking lots of water or fluids with electrolytes."

Douglass urged residents to leave their pets at home when they head outside this weekend and to dress themselves — and especially their children — in light colored, loose fitting clothes. Also, slather on the sunscreen frequently and take rest breaks.

"It's only going to get hotter," he said. "You've got to plan accordingly."

Post set for Independence celebration

THE BAYONET

Continuing a long-standing tradition of getting a jump on July 4th, Fort Benning will kick off its annual Independence Day celebration at 3 p.m. Saturday on York Field in front of Infantry Hall. The public is invited.

The Commodores will headline the event, minus Lionel Richie and pretty much all the originals. They'll take the stage after country music star Katie Rae Davis and Southern rock's Gary Nichols. The concerts will start at 6 p.m.

More than 12,000 people are expected to attend the event, including thousands of basic training Soldiers from Sand Hill. Visitors are encouraged to brings blankets or lawn chairs. Plan to pack a picnic or take advantage of the various food vendors on site.

For $7, children can purchase a wristband that will give them unlimited admission to more than 20 inflatables and activities. Sayers Library will sponsor a craft station.

The fireworks show will start shortly after dark.

For Benning couple, AMU is a way of life

Ten years ago, Janet Cruz did the same.

Then they married each other.

Now Staff Sgt. Adam and Sgt. 1st Class Janet Sokolowski serve together with the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit.

"It's priceless, serving here together," Janet said. "This is the place to be. If you want to surround yourself with positive people, to set goals and make a difference in the lives of Soldiers, this is the place to be. It's a way of life. And doing this together, Adam and me — it just makes it even better."

Janet graduated from a North Miami high school in 1993 and headed straight to a recruiter. The Marines would keep her out of trouble, she figured. She spent more than four years with the Corps, where she learned to handle a rifle with relative ease. She enjoyed it, but she didn't get to shoot much. Not nearly enough.

Sgt. 1st Class Janet and Staff Sgt. Adam Sokolowski serve together at the Army Marksmanship Unit. Janet is the only female active-duty Soldier wearing the President's Hundred tab, an award presented to the top 100 shooters in the President's Pistol and Rifle matches. Adam recently took third at the International Service Pistol Championship. He started shooting with his non-dominant left hand after developing tendonitis in his right.

So she changed her plan.

In 1998, she enlisted in the Army and joined the 3rd Corps in Fort Hood, Texas. She begged a spot on the AMU's Developmental Shooter Program, which gives Soldiers a chance to train and try out, so to speak, for a position at the marksmanship unit.

Adam grew up in Pennsylvania shooting with his father. He spent summers with the world's best shooters, including Soldiers from the AMU, at the Small Arms Firing School in Camp Perry, Ohio. At 17, he was a junior high master shooter at the top of his game.

If Adam hoped to compete professionally — and he did — AMU was the only way to go. Everybody said so, including his older brother, a Marine.

Today, Adam serves as an instructor-shooter with the AMU's

NCOA's 'best dining facility on post' competes for regional award

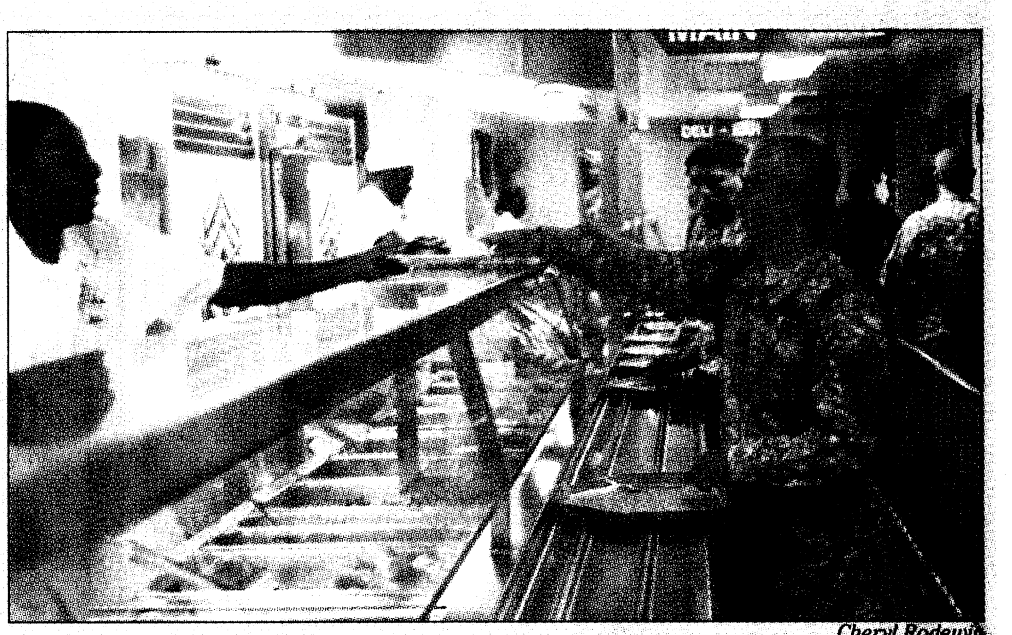
The NCOA Dining Facility on Main Post will compete in the Philip A. Connelly Awards Program, an Armywide competition which recognizes culinary excellence.



The Henry Caro Non-Commissioned Officer Academy Dining Facility was named the best dining facility on post for the second year in a row in April. Last year, it ranked in the top eight Armywide.

"This is a significant achievement for anyone in the food services industry, and I'm very proud of that facility," said Command Sgt. Maj. Zoltan James, commandant for the NCO Academy. "Nutrition is key to your capability to be a professional, effective Soldier in training. If you're not fed right, you're not going to have the energy or endurance and strength requirements, especially if it's combat-related skills out there in the field."

A dining facility also builds morale, James said. For many Soldiers, it's "almost like a home away from home."

Mission remains same despite name changes

COMMANDING GENERAL
Maj. Gen. Walter Wojdakowski

One of the changes planned for the Maneuver Center of Excellence (MCOE) is the reorganization of the Combined Arms and Tactics Directorate — or CATD for short. CATD will split into two different departments, the Directorate of Training and Directorate of Training and Doctrine. The new Directorate of Training (DOT) will include the Tactics Instruction Division for the Maneuver Captains Career Course and the Combined Arms Integration Division. In addition, the Doctrine and Collective Training Division, currently in CATD, will be incorporated into the new Directorate of Training and Doctrine (DOTD). While this seems like the end of CATD, it is simply another chapter in the long history of what is often referred to as the "brain of the Infantry School."

When the Infantry School moved from Fort Sill to Camp Benning in 1918, the two primary missions were company-grade Infantry officer education and the development of small unit Infantry tactics. The new training camp was established to incorporate lessons learned from the battlefields of World War I. The Army needed updated tactics, manuals, and instruction for junior Infantry leaders to deal with the new pistols, rifles, automatic rifles, grenades, mortars, trench artillery, maps with grid lines in meters, camouflage, mechanization, field telephones, poison gas, flare pistols, barbed wire, messenger pigeons, and many more revolutionary tools and techniques recently introduced on the modern combined arms battlefield. While the Great War ended within a few weeks of the school moving to Camp Benning, the basic needs of the Infantry Branch remained the same.

What was referred to as the Tactics Department for more than 90 years is now the Infantry Library (now known as the Donovan Technical Library) and Infantry Magazine. The library began its collection in 1907 with a founding donation of 50 books from Maj. Gen. Arthur MacArthur, the father of Gen. Douglas MacArthur. Today the Infantry Library has a respected collection of reference books for students and it also houses the Infantry Archives. Over the years the Tactics Department, together with the National Infantry Association, published the Infantry Journal, the Mailing List, and the Infantry Magazine, together with hundreds of training circulars and bulletins as an outreach to Infantrymen stationed around the world.

While instruction offered by CATD was solely for officers for nearly 50 years, this changed with the establishment of the Non-Commissioned Officers Candidate Course (NCOCC) in 1967. Known throughout the Army as "Shake-and-Bake" sergeants, or "Instant NCOs," these NCO candidates received training in the first official U.S. Army courses for sergeants in the Continental United States. After a rigorous training program, in many ways similar to Officers Candidate School, the new sergeants arrived in Vietnam to lead fire teams, squads, and sometimes platoons in combat. The experience of these wartime schools led to the establishment of the Non-Commissioned Officer Education System after the Vietnam War and the Henry Caro Non-Commissioned Officer Academy that operates at Fort Benning today.

What CATD is best known for is instruction; the education of leaders from squad leader through brigade commander. To teach a variety of courses from Mortar Leader, through Ethics, to Engineer Demolition, the instructors in CATD are selected from the best the U.S. Infantry, other Army branches, and other services have to offer. In fact, two of the instructors in CATD are usually Infantry officers of the British and Australian armies and the top CATD Non-Commissioned Officer is traditionally an Australian infantry sergeant major.

While the name of the instruction and doctrine department at the Infantry School changes each generation or so, the basic mission performed by CATD and its ancestors has not. Leaders from the U.S. Army Infantry and other disciplines receive the finest preparation in the world from CATD to take and hold ground, and to kill or capture our nation's enemies.

OPINION

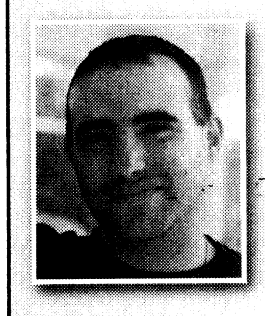
How do you prepare to cast an educated vote?

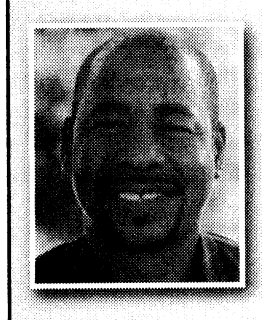


You just have to check into it first. You have to make sure you know what you're voting for. You don't just cast your vote without knowing who you're voting for. That's like going into the store without knowing what you want.

— Candice Burke, Family member

In my opinion, you have to look at both candidates, listen to the issues and make a decision off that. I don't think at this point you can say, "I'm a democrat, so I'll vote democrat," or "I'm a republican, so I'll vote republican." You need to choose the candidate able to handle the country's problems. And that's in any election.

— Sgt. Byron Anderson, MEDDAC



I do research on the candidates because you have to sort through all the campaign spin. They spin everything, and you have to search for the kernel of truth at the center of each of their statements.

— Cpl. Russ Snyder, 718th Engineer Company

Just think about it. I would research and make sure I know what I'm talking about before I jump to conclusions.

— Pvt. Ashley Parnell Warrior Transition Battalion

I listen to the candidates to hear what their views are. I might read up on certain issues. I would just sum everything up — what I've read and heard — and then go from there. You have to do research on a person you're going to make in charge, especially when it's the whole country.

— Retired Staff Sgt. Ronald K. Stokes Sr.

Because hope is not a strategy

THE BAYONET

Mckenzie got up before the sun, crawled into my bed and tapped me on the shoulder.

"Hey Mom, you think we can go to the pool today?"

"Kenzie, baby, the pool doesn't open for hours. Ask me later," I mumbled.

I was standing at the coffee pot half an hour "later," when Mckenzie brought me the paper. That's a trick she learned from her older siblings.

"It looks like it's going to be a good day to go to the pool," she said. "Can we go?"

"Hmm. We'll see," I said. That's a trick I learned from my mom. It never works.

At 8, she came out of the bathroom wearing a bathing suit that belonged to her sister.

"You think Brittney will mind if I wear this when we go to the pool?" she asked.

At 8:30, she passed me in the hallway carrying a towel under each arm.

"I'll put these in the car," she said. "So we'll be ready to go when you're ready to go. To the pool, I mean."

At 9, she started pacing by the door and heaving great dramatic sighs.

"What's up with Kenzie?" her brother asked when he finally crawled out of his cave.

"She's hoping to go to the swimming pool," I said.

That stopped her in her tracks.

"I'm not hoping to go to the pool. Can't you see I'm begging?" she cried.

Mckenzie hit on something most kids learn early on: Hope is not a strategy. It won't get you an extra helping of dessert. For that, you have to eat your veggies. It won't get you an increase in allowance. For that, you have to accept more responsibility around the house. And it won't get you to the swimming pool on Saturday. For that, you have to beg.

Just the other day I was eavesdropping on a conversation between two Soldiers seated at the table next to me in my favorite coffee shop in Columbus. My bad. One Soldier said to the other Soldier: "I haven't decided if I'll vote, but I sure hope we get someone in who can straighten out this mess."

Now I don't know which mess she was talking about — the price of gasoline, tainted tomatoes, terrorism? Maybe the lack of good service in my favorite coffee shop? Whatever. But I don't put a lot of faith in her hope for a better tomorrow if she hasn't decided to vote.

Hope won't put gas in your tank. It won't cure cancer, reduce crime, stamp out hunger or make those unwanted pounds and inches disappear. And it sure as heck won't solve "this mess," however you define it.

I can't think of another organization that lets you, the employee, have a say in selecting your boss. The next president of the United States will be your boss, your commander-in-chief. And you'll help decide just who it will be — by your vote or your abstention. It's your right to abstain. It's your civic duty to vote.

And if it's not your duty to educate yourself before casting said vote, it's surely a moral imperative. Voting for the sake of voting, with no real understanding of the candidate's stand on the issues that are important to you, is really no better than abstention. We call that voting along party lines, and contrary to popular thought, it's not particularly righteous.

Please vote. And please do your homework before you vote. Change the channel on your TV or the radio and listen to opposing viewpoints, read newspapers to your left and right. Do a Google search about the issues that concern you. To cast an educated vote, you've got to get beyond the headlines and easily manipulated poll numbers. Ignore the mudslinging.

You've heard it said before that countless brave men and women put their lives on the line to secure your right to vote. I sure hope you'll do 'em proud.

Please don't make me beg.

Captain receives first Puckett Leadership Award

Tracey A. Bailey

Retired Col. Ralph Puckett congratulates Capt. John Bata, Regimental Special Troops Battalion, after Bata received the Col. Ralph Puckett Leadership Award June 19. Seven junior grade officers competed for the award in weapons qualification, land nav and hands-on common task training such as weapons assembly, radio communications, and nuclear biological testing.

75TH RANGER REGIMENT
PUBLIC AFFAIRS
Tracy A. Bailey

The 75th Ranger Regiment announced the winner of the Col. Ralph Puckett Leadership Award competition at a ceremony June 19.

Capt. John Bata, Regimental Special Troops Battalion, won the award. Seven junior grade officers, who exemplify the values, ideals and character of the regiment, participated in the competition.

The competition tested core Ranger skills and the ability to think through tactical or complex problems in demanding circumstances and generate successful options.

"It is a huge privilege and honor to be associated with anything with Col. Puckett's name on it," Bata said.

"He is an outstanding leader and mentor, and I am humbled to be the first to receive this award."

The award was created to recognize junior officers who have demonstrated a "take charge leadership" in demanding circumstances where their personal actions have clearly made a difference in the outcome of events, said Col. Richard D. Clarke, commander of the 75th Ranger Regiment.

And the Pucket Leadership Award will honor the retired colonel's legacy, Clarke said.

"Colonel Puckett exemplified that persona when he interviewed to be an officer in the Korean War of a Ranger Company that was being newly formed. Instead of being selected to fill a platoon leader position of the company executive officer, (then) Lieutenant Puckett was chosen as the company commander.

"He was placed in charge of a newly formed company and had to take charge, leading them into combat, in some incredibly tough fighting. Much like we expect our Ranger platoon leaders to do today," Clarke said.

"(Puckett) was omnipresent," Clarke said. "He always had some incredible advice on how to improve.

"Everyone got better the minute Colonel Puckett walked into the room, "Clarke said in an interview when Puckett stepped down as the honorary colonel. "They stood taller, moved faster and trained harder. When he was around, you wanted to be all that you could be."

Three Col. Ralph Puckett Leadership Awards are presented to outstanding officers on Fort Benning.

In addition to the 75th Ranger Regiment, an award is presented to the officer honor graduate at the U.S. Army Ranger Course. The recipient of this award has performed successfully in each leadership position, did not have to repeat any phase of Ranger School and was acclaimed by his peers.

The third Col. Ralph Puckett Leadership Award is presented to the officer who displays exceptional leadership in the Maneuver Captains Career Course.

75TH RANGER REGIMENT

The 75th Ranger Regiment announced the winners of the NCO and Soldier of the Year competition during a ceremony at Fort Benning June 19.

Staff Sgt. William Israel, a Ranger Indoctrination Program instructor from the Regimental Special Troops Battalion was named NCO of the Year, and Spc. Barrett Kauling, a radio and communications security repairer, from 3rd Battalion was named Soldier of the Year.

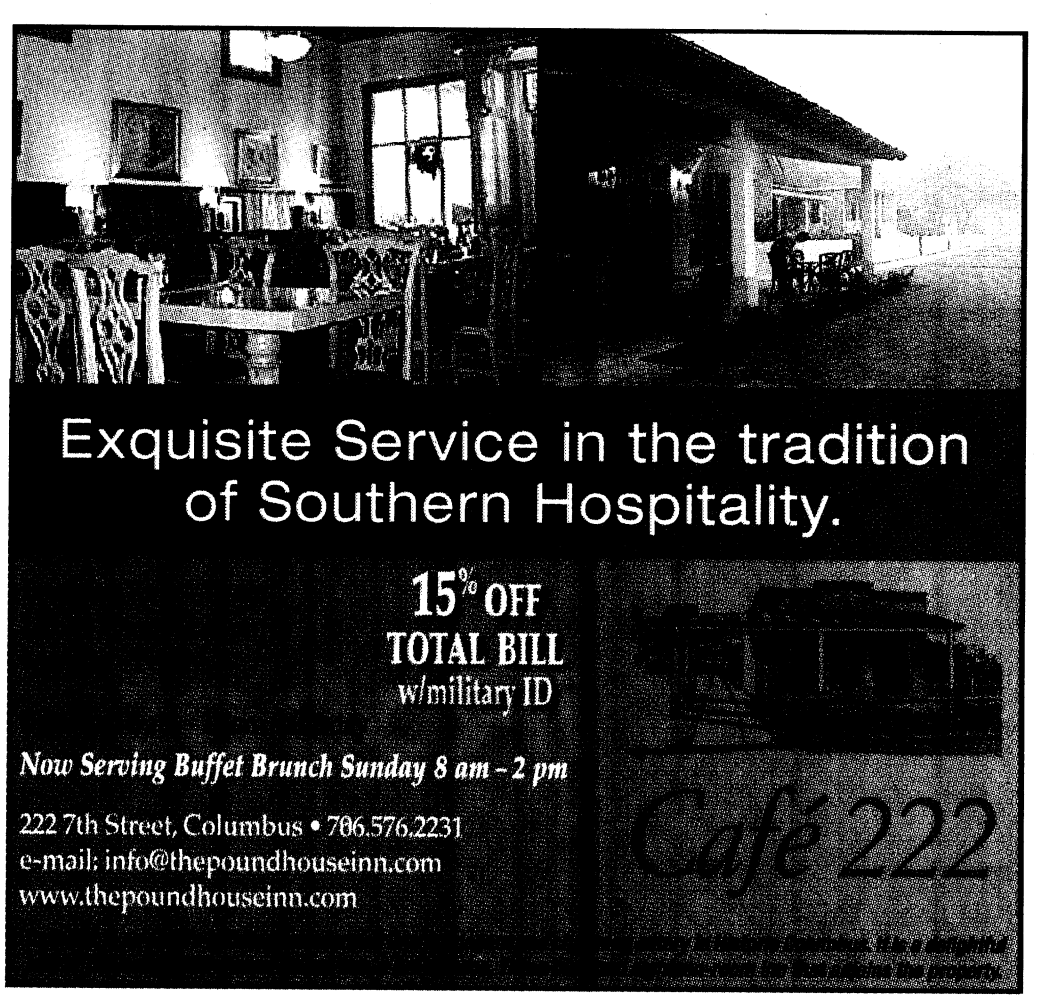
Kauling

The Rangers competed in seven warrior task challenges including physical fitness, land navigation, weapons fire, hands-on warrior skill testing and a written essay and oral board.

Each event had a points value assigned and the NCO and Soldier with the most points at the end of the competition earned the respective titles.

Israel, a native of Bigfork, Mont., said the most challenging part of the competition was working the radio and communications portion of the warrior task challenges and the oral board.

"During normal operations, I usually hand over communications to the commo guy," Israel said. "And for the oral board, I really had to be on top of my game. It was tough."



Israel said that this was a great experience for him and has made him a better, more professional NCO.

"I am honored to have won this competition. If every NCO in the Regiment had competed, I'm not sure I would have won," Israel said.

Kauling, who is from Ruther Glen, Va., said he never expected to go this far and is extremely honored.

"The toughest part was knowing that a lot of people were counting on me to win, and I had a responsibility to my battalion to uphold," Kauling said.

Kauling did his best at the oral board. "I took my time and kept my focus. The oral board was the best that I've done on any board."

Official praises proposed education benefits

AMERICAN FORCES PRESS SERVICE
John J. Kruzel

WASHINGTON — A Defense Department spokesman said a proposed GI Bill allowing service members to transfer their education benefits to family members passed the first round of congressional voting. However, he said there is concern that a possible provision of the bill could hurt the department's efforts to retain service members.

The U.S. House of Representatives passed a version of the bill last week that would provide military members a more generous education package, which for the first time could be passed to family members if troops opt not to use it themselves.

"The No. 1 priority of this department was that any enhanced benefit coming out of the Congress provide for the ability for service members to transfer any unused benefit to their family members," Pentagon Press Secretary Geoff Morrell said during a Pentagon news conference Wednesday.

But while the Defense Department is pleased the House version incorporates transferability, Morrell said, officials have voiced concern that the amount of time before the benefits become available — after 36 months of service — may hurt retention rates.

"That — we've said from the beginning — we believe, is too soon," Morrell said. "But if that's the way the Congress ultimately chooses to go ... we will work with it."

The bill will next appear before the Senate, where it must receive approval before being enacted.

Meanwhile, the Defense Department intends to study what effects the bill would have on military retention if it passes in its present form, Morrell said.

"If we find that it's having an adverse affect on retention, we're going to have to figure out other ways to entice men and women in uniform to stay in the service," he said.

Morrell suggested that bigger financial bonuses for re-enlistment could be offered if service members become "lured out" of uniform by taking advantage of the new package, which would double the education benefit from about $9,000 to about $18,000 per year and kick in during the first enlistment.

Defense, Education secretaries sign military child education pact

AMERICAN FORCES PRESS SERVICE
Gerry J. Gilmore

WASHINGTON — Deputy Defense Secretary Gordon England and Deputy Education Secretary Raymond Simon signed a memorandum of understanding between their agencies at the Pentagon Wednesday that addresses the quality of education and the unique challenges faced by children of military families.

Hundreds of thousands of students in military families will be affected by moves caused by recent Base Realignment and Closure Act decisions and the relocation of military units from overseas bases to stateside installations as part of global defense posture realignment moves, England said.

Children of U.S. military members who have sacrificed so much for the nation "deserve to have to a good education," England said during his remarks before the signing ceremony.

"And so we have an obligation, both as a department and as a nation, to make sure not just the children of our military, but all of the children in the United States of America get absolutely the finest education that they can," the deputy defense secretary said.

The failure to provide a good education for America's children could result in the forfeiture of the United States' premier position in the world, England said, as well as the loss of freedom for its citizens.

"So, I'm an extraordinary strong proponent of anything we do to improve the education of our children, especially the children of our military," England said.

The memo of understanding generally defines how the Defense and Education departments will work together with local educational organizations to strengthen and expand school-based efforts to ease student transitions and help military students develop academic skills and coping strategies during parents' military deployments.

Simon hailed the agreement, noting that its implementation will "honor the sacrifice that these families make every day."

The agreement supports defense and education department efforts to:

•Promote and enhance policies that will improve military children's education and overall well-being.

•Advance the quality of educational opportunities for all military children.

•Provide research-based academic, social-emotional and behavioral supports to facilitate seamless transitions for military children.

•Provide leadership and advocacy programs to help military students cope with issues surrounding deployments.

•Support foreign language education, including programs for strategic languages.

•Explore legislative options to address transition issues for military students.

•Extend opportunities for student learning through support of online, virtual and other research-based teaching models.

•Provide research-based teacher and administrator professional development programs.

•Forge effective partnerships with local schools and districts.

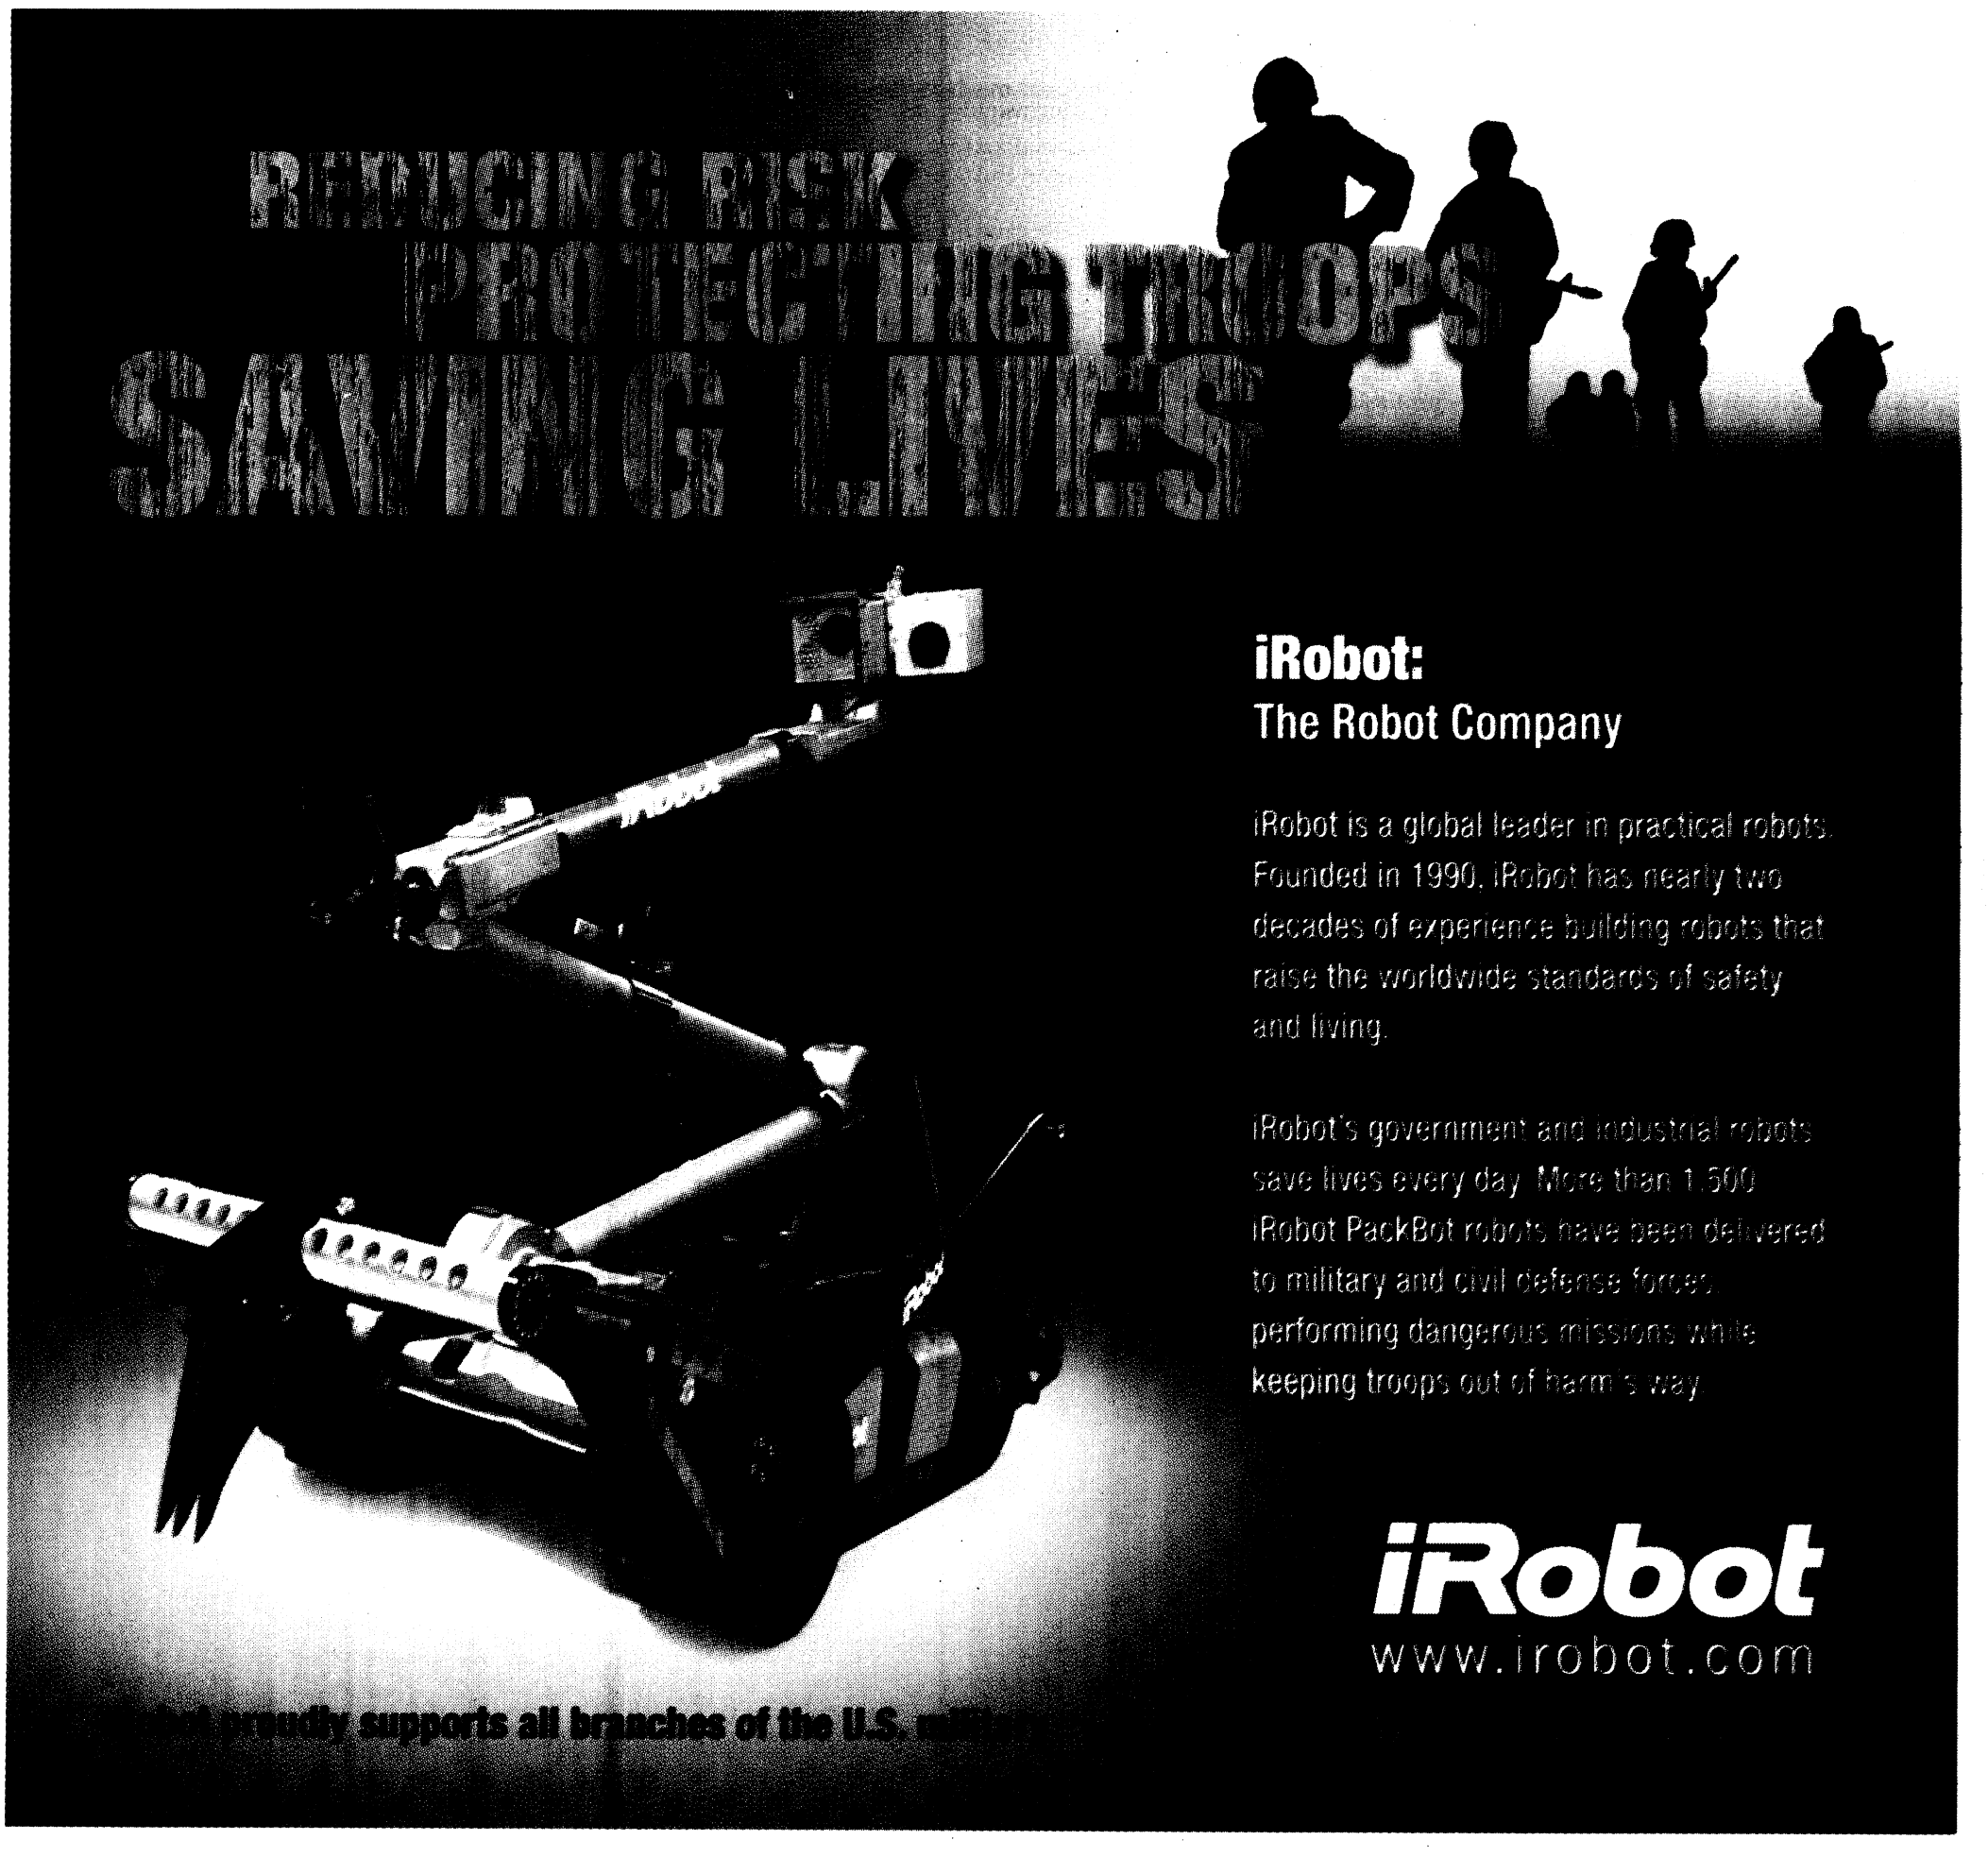
•Coordinate Defense Department and Education Department impact aid programs.

•Communicate with military families and organizations to show appreciation for their contributions.

•Increase awareness of resources and tools available from the Education and Defense departments.

Congress has provided financial assistance to local school districts through the impact aid program since 1950.

Current legislation provides financial assistance to school districts with concentrations of children residing on military bases who have parents in the military.



Military families that reside in government-provided quarters do not pay local property taxes, a portion of which are used to manage and operate public schools.

More than 1.1 million students who belong to active duty and reserve-component military families are expected to benefit from activities outlined in the agreement.

Air Force Tech. Sgt. Michael J. Naquin, a security forces noncommissioned officer posted at Bolling Air Force Base, and his 6-year-old son, Aaron, were among several military families personally greeted by England and Simon at signing ceremony.

"Progress is being made, and it is nice that our two communities can come together as one," Naquin said of the bi-departmental education agreement. "It is one less worry, not having to worry about the education my children are getting," he said.

A special panel will now begin work to implement the initiatives, David S.C. Chu, undersecretary of defense for personnel and readiness, said.

White House nominates first female for fourth star

ARMY NEWS SERVICE
Elizabeth M. Lorge

WASHINGTON — President George W. Bush has nominated the new deputy commanding general of Army Materiel Command for the rank of four-star general and the top slot at AMC.

If her nomination is confirmed by the U.S. Senate, Lt. Gen. Ann E. Dunwoody, who became AMC's 43rd deputy commanding general June 17, will become the first woman in U.S. military history to gain a fourth star.

"Lt. Gen. Dunwoody's leadership, character and career have best prepared her to lead the Army Materiel Command," said Secretary of the Army Pete Geren. "She will bring 33 years of experience to over 56 thousand Soldiers, DA Civilians, and their families in 40 states and 50 countries as she serves as the next commanding general of Army Materiel Command."

"This is an important day for the Dunwoody family, the military and the nation," said Gen. George W. Casey, chief of staff of the Army. "Lt. Gen. Dunwoody's nomination not only underscores her significant contributions and success throughout 33 years of service, but also shows the level of possible opportunity in our Army's diverse, quality all-volunteer force. Our nation will continue to benefit from Lt. Gen. Dunwoody's leadership as the Army continues to build strength from our diversity."

Firsts are nothing new to Dunwoody, who is AMC's first female deputy. She was also the first woman to hold her last job as the deputy chief of staff of the Army for G-4 (Logistics), and to command the U.S. Army Combined Arms Support Command and Fort Lee, Va. As the G-4, she was responsible for ensuring that warfighters had the necessary supplies and services, and that logisticians had the tools and equipment necessary to deliver those supplies and services to Soldiers around the globe.

> "I grew up in a family that didn't know what glass ceilings were. This nomination only reaffirms what I have known to be true about the military throughout my career ... that the doors continue to open for men and women in uniform."
> — Lt. Gen. Ann Dunwoody

As the commander of the Military Surface Deployment and Distribution Command at Scott Air Force Base, Ill., from 2002-2004, Dunwoody supported the largest deployment and redeployment of U.S. forces since World War II.

She has also commanded the 407th Supply and Transportation Battalion of the 82nd Airborne Division, Fort Bragg, N.C.; the 10th Mountain Division Support Command, Fort Drum, N.Y.; and the 1st Corps Support Command at Fort Bragg. In this capacity, she deployed the Log Task Force in support of Operation Enduring Freedom in 2001 and stood up the Joint Logistics Command in Uzbekistan in support of Combined Joint Task Force-180.

Dunwoody also deployed during the first Gulf War with the 82nd as the Division Parachute officer from September 1990 to March 1991.

She received a direct commission as a second lieutenant after graduating from the State University of New York at Cortland in 1975. She has graduate degrees in national resource strategy and logistics management. Her family has a long tradition of military service, including her great grandfather, grandfather, father, brother, sister, niece and husband.

"I am very honored but also very humbled today with this announcement," said Dunwoody. "I grew up in a family that didn't know what glass ceilings were. This nomination only reaffirms what I have known to be true about the military throughout my career ... that the doors continue to open for men and women in uniform. My focus right now is to be the best deputy I can be."

Dunwoody would take over as AMC's commanding general from Gen. Benjamin S. Griffin, who has served in the position since 2004.

As commanding general, she would oversee AMC headquarters' move to Huntsville, Ala., from Fort Belvoir, Va., under the 2005 Base Realignment and Closure Act. Advance teams have already arrived in Huntsville, and the process is expected to be complete in September 2011.

The Army's first female general officers were promoted on June 11, 1970 when Secretary of the Army Stanley Resor promoted both Col. Anna Mae Hays, chief of the Army Nurse Corps, and Col. Elizabeth P. Hoisington, director of the Women's Army Corps, to brigadier general.

Today, 57 active-duty women and 47 female reservists wear stars on their shoulders in the armed forces. Moreover, roughly 194,000 women make up 14 percent of all active duty forces. Since Sept. 11, 2001, more than 193,400 women have deployed in support of U.S. operations.

Editor's note: An Army press release and reports from John J. Kruzel, of the American Forces Press Service, and Melissa Bohan, from the AMC Office of Public and Congressional Affairs, contributed to this report.

Secretary of Defense Robert M. Gates announced Wednesday that the president has nominated Army Maj. Gen. David M. Rodriguez for appointment to the rank of lieutenant general and assignment as senior military assistant to the secretary of Defense, Washington, D.C. Rodriguez is currently serving as commanding general, 82nd Airborne Division, Fort Bragg, N.C. He was Fort Benning's deputy commanding general and assistant commandant from October 2000 to June 2002.

Shoplifters cost AAFES, Fort Benning Soldiers money

THE BAYONET
Rachel L. Watkins

Shoplifters — 7,635 of them — stole goods from Army and Air Force Exchange Services around the world last year.

They stole video games, designer perfumes and purses, high-dollar electronics, clothing and over-the-counter medications.

Many, if not most, of them were family members between the ages of 12 and 18, said Ken Brewington, general manager for AAFES at Fort Benning.

"A lot of times it is peer pressure," he said. "Either their peers dare them or they need to fit in a specific group or there are items they think will make them appear cool."

Most shoplifters don't set out to steal, Brewington said. They act on impulse. In fact, most of the shoplifters who get caught have enough money to buy the items they stole.

Detective Clarence Rambo, chief of Military Police Investigations at Fort Benning, said shoplifters are typically thrill seekers.

Children take more chances than adults when it comes to shoplifting, he said.

The punishment for a thrill can be pretty hefty. It can include six to 12 months probation, jail time and a fine of $250 to $750.

Plus, by law, AAFES can charge shoplifters an administrative fee up to $200. It's even possible to incur a felony charge if more than $1,000 of merchandise is stolen.

Under Article 15 of the Uniform Code of Military Justice, if a Soldier is caught stealing, his commander can enforce non-judicial punishment. Punishments vary but can include reducing rank, suspension from duty, confinement, extra duties and a pay cut.

Shoplifting affects everyone, Brewington said. Money lost from AAFES is money that would be going to the Directorate of Family and Morale, Welfare and Recreation.

AAFES keeps a close watch for shoplifters. They have a camera system, security system and what Brewington calls "shoplifter deterrent" — employees in sales areas. There is also a team of loss prevention associates at Fort Benning who monitor cameras, look for shoplifters and dress like shoppers to catch shoplifters.

Ticks threat to Soldiers

U.S. ARMY CENTER FOR HEALTH PROMOTION AND PREVENTIVE MEDICINE
Mary Katherine Murphy

Tick-borne illnesses present a serious health threat that also can jeopardize operational readiness. In the United States, the threat is especially strong in late spring and summer.

"Ticks are ranked second among arthropods at causing life-threatening and debilitating human disease," according to Ellen Stromdahl, an entomologist at the Army Center for Health Promotion and Preventive Medicine, Aberdeen Proving Ground, Md. (Arthropods include insects, spiders and centipedes, as well as some other segmented creatures.).

Studies and surveys of Soldiers involved in deployment or training repeatedly indicate that ticks impede performance due to discomfort, distraction, bites or sickness, Stromdahl said. She added that Soldiers may leave their posts, change routes or locations, or abandon their cover, all because ticks are present.

"Soldiers think of everything but ticks when they are going into battle or training," she said. "At those times, they have more important situations to deal with."

However, Soldiers ignore potential tick bites at their peril.

"Different tick species transmit different pathogens [disease-causing agents]," Stromdahl said. The DOD Human Test Kit Program, which she leads, has analyzed ticks taken from Soldiers' bodies and found tick species that cause Lyme disease, babesiosis (an infection resembling malaria), ehrlichiosis (which can cause fever, kidney failure, seizures and other medical conditions), Rocky Mountain spotted fever and other potentially serious diseases. The effects of tick bites are usually treatable; however, long-term effects to joints, the heart and the nervous system can occur. Left untreated, some tick-borne diseases can be fatal.

Initial symptoms of tick bites include headache, fatigue, rash, nausea and fever.

All ticks love humid areas with lots of brush, frequently found on military installations where Soldiers train and work. Many military installations also have large, undeveloped areas populated with deer and other animals that serve as hosts for ticks, Stromdahl said.

Deer make the perfect hosts for adult deer ticks (which cause Lyme disease) to feed and mate. This makes any site with a large deer population a high risk area for ticks and the spread of Lyme disease. CHPPM entomologists have found that about 20 percent of the deer ticks they have tested were infected with Lyme disease.

There are some simple precautions that Soldiers can take while training or working in a tick-infested area to decrease their risk of being infected, Stromdahl said. These include wearing a permethrin-treated uniform, putting DEET on all exposed skin, sleeping under a permethrin-treated bed net, and wearing their uniform with sleeves down and pants tucked into boots to act as a physical barrier. (Civilians and family members should take similar precautions, and wear light-colored, tucked-in clothing.)

If despite these protective measures Soldiers find a tick attached to them, the DOD Human Tick Test Kit Program can help. Stromdahl and the staff of CHPPM's Entomological Sciences Program can test and identify whether a tick is infected with any of eight different diseases at no cost to the Soldier. Soldiers may contact the program through their military medical care provider. The Tick Test Kit Program averages two to three thousand ticks from all over the country each year. Currently the program only accepts ticks from inside the United States.

Even with the help of the testing program, Soldiers training and living on installations with an environment that supports ticks must remain vigilant in protecting their health, Stromdahl advised.

For more information about ticks, visit the CHPPM Entomological Sciences Program on the Web at http://chppm-www.apgea.army.mil/ento/.

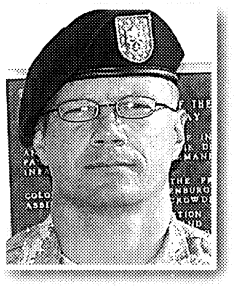
New commander takes over 1st Bn., 11th Inf. Regt.

THE BAYONET
Brenda Donnell

Bottcher

Soldiers from 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment, welcomed a new commander Monday during a change of command ceremony on York Field.



Lt. Col. David W. Bottcher took charge of the battalion from Lt. Col. Michael J. Shinners.

Bottcher said it was an honor and privilege to return to 1st Bn., 11th Inf. Regt., and lead an organization responsible for training and preparing the Army's newest officers for the challenges they will face in the not-so-distant future.

Col. Terry L. Sellers, 199th Infantry Brigade commander, said Bottcher observed the battalion from his last assignment as commander of the Stryker/Bradley New Equipment Training Company, 1st Bn., 29th Inf. Regt. (Stryker/Mechanized), at Fort Benning.

He said it is Bottcher's turn to assume the mantle of leadership at BOLC II, sustain what has been built, improve his fighting position and continue to train and certify leaders for the Army.

During his career, Bottcher served with 1st Bn., 22nd Inf. Regt., at Fort Drum, N.Y., deploying in support of Operation Andrew to Homestead, Fla., and Operation Restore/Continue Hope in Somalia; 5th Bn., 20th Inf. Regt., (Republic of Korea), and C Company, 2nd Bn., 9th Inf. Regt. (Manchus), 2nd Inf. Division; the National Training Center; and 1st Bn., 327th Inf. Regt., 101st Airborne Div. (Assault), Fort Campbell, Ky., deploying to Iraq twice.

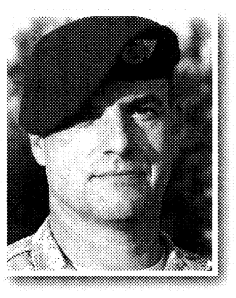
Shinners

Bottcher and his wife, Donna, have a daughter, Sydney.

Shinners will serve as the deputy commander of the 3rd Brigade Combat Team, 82nd Airborne Division, at Fort Bragg, N.C.

Sellers said Shinners developed the BOLC II program into what it is today, turning out "acculturated, experienced junior officers of every branch."

"They are going out doing great things in places like Afghanistan, Iraq ... wherever the Army is deployed ... and that is because of the training and leadership of Mike Shinners," he said.



Shinners thanked his leadership, cadre, family and friends. He said all the accolades about the battalion were due to the professionalism of the Soldiers assigned there.

Shinners and his wife Karla, have a son, Timothy, and a daughter, Kelly.

Lt. Col. Jon A. Ring took charge of 1st Battalion (Airborne), 507th Parachute Infantry Regiment, Wednesday from Lt. Col. Jay L. Peterson at Airborne Walk on Eubanks Field.

Peterson

Ring said he is looking forward to working with the battalion's Soldiers and living the "paratrooper life."

"I hope to provide the right example and to instill the paratrooper spirit in every Soldier, Sailor, Airman, Marine and allied Soldier who comes through our outfit," he said.

The Dutton, Mich., native said he calls Fort Benning home, because he has spent most of his adult life here.

He enlisted in the Army as an Infantryman in 1986, and after being commissioned as an officer, attended the Infantry Officer Basic, Ranger and Pathfinder courses here. Ring was a senior platoon trainer at 2nd Battalion (IOBC), 11th Infantry Regiment, and was later reassigned to 3rd Brigade (Mechanized), 3rd Infantry Division. His most recent assignment on post was as the deputy commanding officer of the Ranger Training Brigade.

Ring also served with several units in the 10th Mountain Division, Fort Drum, N.Y.

He is a graduate of the Infantry Officer Basic and Advanced courses and the Command and General Staff College. He was an exchange officer in the United Kingdom, and while serving there as the commanding officer of A Company, 2nd Battalion, the Parachute Regiment, British Army, he completed a tour in Operation Telic (Iraqi Freedom).

Having commanded three different companies, Ring said he is proudest of the accomplishments of the Soldiers, NCOs and officers he worked with.

"Each company was unique, but the challenges of command and seeing each team perform to their potential has been a source of continuous pride," he said.

Peterson will assume duties as the deputy commander of the 3rd Brigade, 10th Mountain Division, upon his departure.

Col. Terry L. Sellers, 199th Infantry Brigade commander, said Peterson is the poster child of the American paratrooper who maintained a superlative safety record and significantly improved the graduation rates of basic Airborne, Pathfinder and Jumpmaster Schools by his mentorship and leadership.

"The standards remained unchanged," Sellers said. "The difference was in the professionalism of his cadre, instructors and riggers."

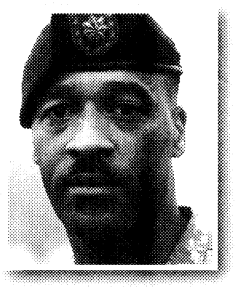
CRC welcomes new commander

THE BAYONET
Brenda Donnell



Lt. Col. Twanda E. Young, a South Carolina native, took command of the CONUS Replacement Center Battalion from Lt. Col. Donald E. Williams Monday on York Field.

Col. Gregory C. Kane, 197th Infantry Brigade, said Young is well prepared to assume command of the CRC.

Young

"She is intimately familiar with the deployment support business and is ready to sustain the great mission support that CRC provides to the Global War on Terrorism," he said.

"The opportunity to command at this critical time in our nation's history is any officer's dream," Young said. "The CRC is strategically critical to the war fight."

Williams

Young's last assignment was as the mobilization plans and policy officer for Headquarters, Department of the Army, Military Personnel Management Directorate, Operations Division, at the Pentagon.

While there, she redesigned the Army's Personnel Policy Guidance; co-authored the revision of the 2007 Individual Ready Reserve screening criteria; enhanced the U.S. Army Reserve and National Guard's ability to meet Department of the Army's requirements to deploy at mission required strength; and was intimately involved in providing recommendations to the Secretary of Defense on the Army's views of expectation management and utilization and management concepts that impact the transformation of IRR Soldiers into warfighters in the Global War on Terrorism.

Young said Williams left her with well-trained, disciplined Soldiers who are mission focused, and she will commit her energy, focus and drive to ensure they remain that way.

Young is married to Tracy Young, and they have two daughters, Lea and Tyra.

Williams' next assignment is with the U.S. Army Reserve Command headquarters at Fort McPherson, Ga.

Kane said Williams' no-nonsense and commonsense approach to all missions and his extraordinary people skills allowed him to forge a world-class organization "that treats every person who comes to the CRC as if they are the only VIP around."

Williams thanked the command and his staff, and said Young is taking over a unit that is like a championship football team.

"All you have to do is stand in the pocket and deliver the ball," he said to Young.

Service Pistol Team. That's how he met Janet.

The Developmental Shooter Program partners students with AMU shooters for three months of intensive marksmanship training. Janet was partnered with Adam, and when she was invited to join the Service Pistol Team, it wasn't long before the two knew they wanted to date. So she transferred to the international team to avoid a conflict of interest. Soon after, they made plans to marry.

In 2004, she moved to AMU Headquarters, where she serves as the operations and training NCO. In so many ways, her job hasn't changed.

"It's all about training Soldiers," she said. "Most people, when they think AMU, they think about the Olympics or Nationals. They think it's all about competing. I don't think people know we spend most of our time training Soldiers to be better marksmen. We know how important they are. We want to keep them trained."

AMU Soldiers are instructors first, competitive shooters second, Adam said. He competes about three months out of the year and spends the rest of the time training shooters here and on the road. The AMU frequently fields mobile training teams.

"Most shooters gain experience through trial and error. At AMU, we eliminate the need for years and years of trial and error, because we focus on the fundamentals," he said. "We can take a relative newcomer trained at AMU and put him up against a guy who's been shooting for ten years, and the new shooter will do better every time."

Were it not for a solid grasp of the fundamentals, Adam would have had to sacrifice his career last year when he developed a rare form of tendonitis in his right hand — his shooting hand. After suffering through the end of the competitive "season," he decided to give it a go with his left hand. That meant shooting with his non-dominant hand and eye.

He spent hours each day working with weights to build strength in his left arm, and he often covered his right eye with tape to force himself to rely on the other.

"I had to shift everything — my hand, my eye and my whole way of thinking. I had to get it out of my head that using my left hand was awkward," he said. "My goal was to get back to where I was before, only using the opposite hand."

The hard work, the headaches and the sore muscles paid off recently, when Adam scored his personal best during practice. Earlier this month, he took third place in the Interservice Pistol Championship. Last year, he took fourth place in the same competition.

"I cherish that third place more than anything else I've ever won," he said. "It means I'm on my way."

The Sokolowskis, who have two children, said they consider themselves lucky to be working together, to make their careers doing just what they love.

But their greatest satisfaction comes from helping Soldiers train for combat.

"No amount of awards will give you that pride you feel when a Soldier comes up to you after he's been to Iraq and he says, 'Thank you. Because of the training my platoon received with the AMU, all of us made it back alive.'"

Bridgett.Siter@us.army.mil

AMU 101

The Sokolowskis served together on the Service Pistol Team, one of six teams that represent the Army Marksmanship Unit at competitions around the world.

AMU shooters have won 21 Olympic medals, 48 individual world championships and 23 World Military Team Championships.

Six AMU shooters will compete in the Olympics in Beijing this summer.

AMU Soldiers compete about three months out of the year. They spend the rest of their time training Soldiers and civilians on the fundamentals of shooting. The mission of the AMU, which was founded in 1956 by President Eisenhower, is to raise the standard of marksmanship proficiency and combat readiness throughout the Army.

The unit also has a Custom Firearms Shop, where gunsmiths develop and test weapons and ammunitions.

serves Soldiers from the Warriors Leader Course, basic and advanced NCO courses, Basic Officer Course and Maneuver Captains Career Course.

"You have Soldiers all over the installation who can pick and choose where they're going, and there are a lot of Soldiers choosing to go to that dining facility based upon the quality of service they provide," James said. "They know when they walk in they are getting a class act product with the food there and that's why they keep coming back."

It all starts with the food, said Ronald Jenkins, the dining facility manager.

"This chow hall is second to none right here. We're always trying to keep pace with a lot of contemporary trends that go on out in the civilian world," he said, "so when we eat out, we like to bring that into the military environment. We create dishes here that are in line with what they're eating when they're at home or when they take their families out."

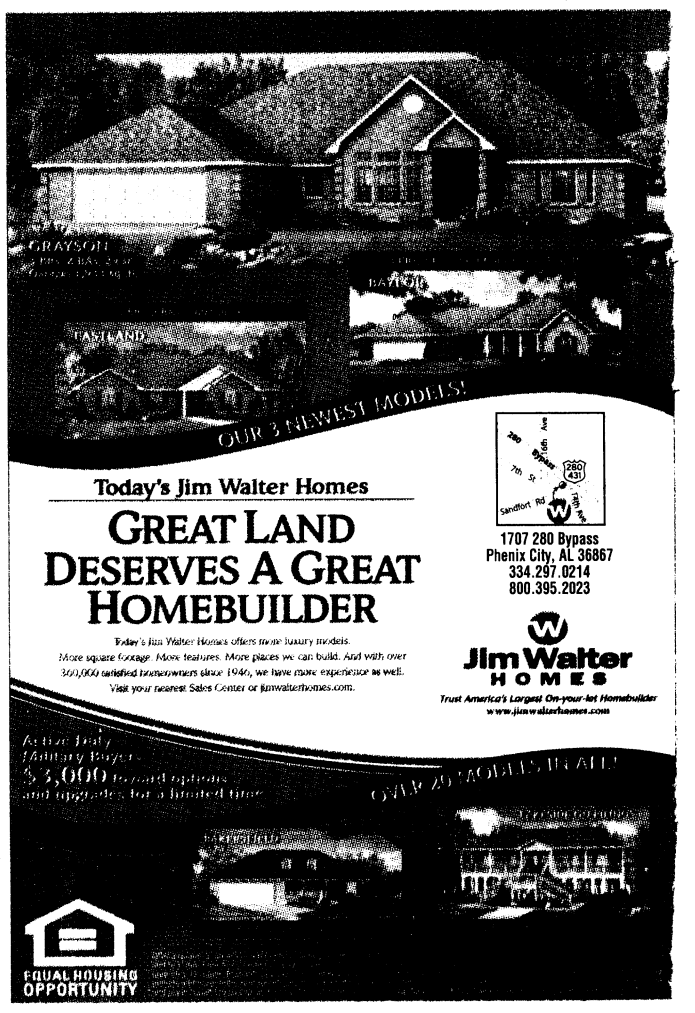
Jenkins is involved in every meal, from selecting the food to overseeing the presentation. He plans the menu a week in advance. It always includes a variety of dishes that make for well-balanced meals.

"It's a challenge, but it's a rewarding challenge," he said. "When you think of something infinite, that's food. It's something people have to have all the time, all throughout the day. Regardless of whatever circumstances they have or whatever the weather conditions are, people have to eat. So this is ongoing; it constantly evolves and constantly keeps you busy."

The NCOA facility still serves chili mac, an Army staple, but they make it a delicacy — something a little different for the Soldiers to enjoy, Jenkins said. He also has signature dishes, such as chicken Marsala and cheese tortellini.

The variety Jenkins brings to the menu is an aspect Soldiers particularly enjoy.

"In my opinion, this is one of the better chow halls I have eaten in since joining the Army," said Maj. Fred Pasquale. "They do better with their menus. A lot of the other dining facilities have the same thing week in and week out. (Here), they usually have a good variety, and the food tastes better."



Pasquale, who eats there twice a week, said he also appreciates the friendly smiles of the men and women who work there.

"It's a warm atmosphere," he said. "Every time I come in, they're nice. They seem dedicated to serving Soldiers."

It's not about meeting standards but exceeding them, and having something creative or extra — like quality customer service or even the décor — to draw people in, Jenkins said.

"We feed a lot of senior military personnel," he said. "Basically, if you don't put a good meal out there or you don't put anything interesting out there, and they don't like it, they won't eat it. You're only as good as your last meal, but at the end of the day if all the Soldiers are happy and satisfied, we're satisfied."

Officials offer safey tips for cell phone users

THE BAYONET
Rachel L. Watkins

A recent e-mail circulating throughout the country warns cell phone users they risk electrocution if they use their phone while it's plugged into an electrical outlet. Not so, according to www.snopes.com. Although the careless use of cell phones does pose a number of dangers, electrocution is not one of them.

The very real dangers of careless cell phone use include:

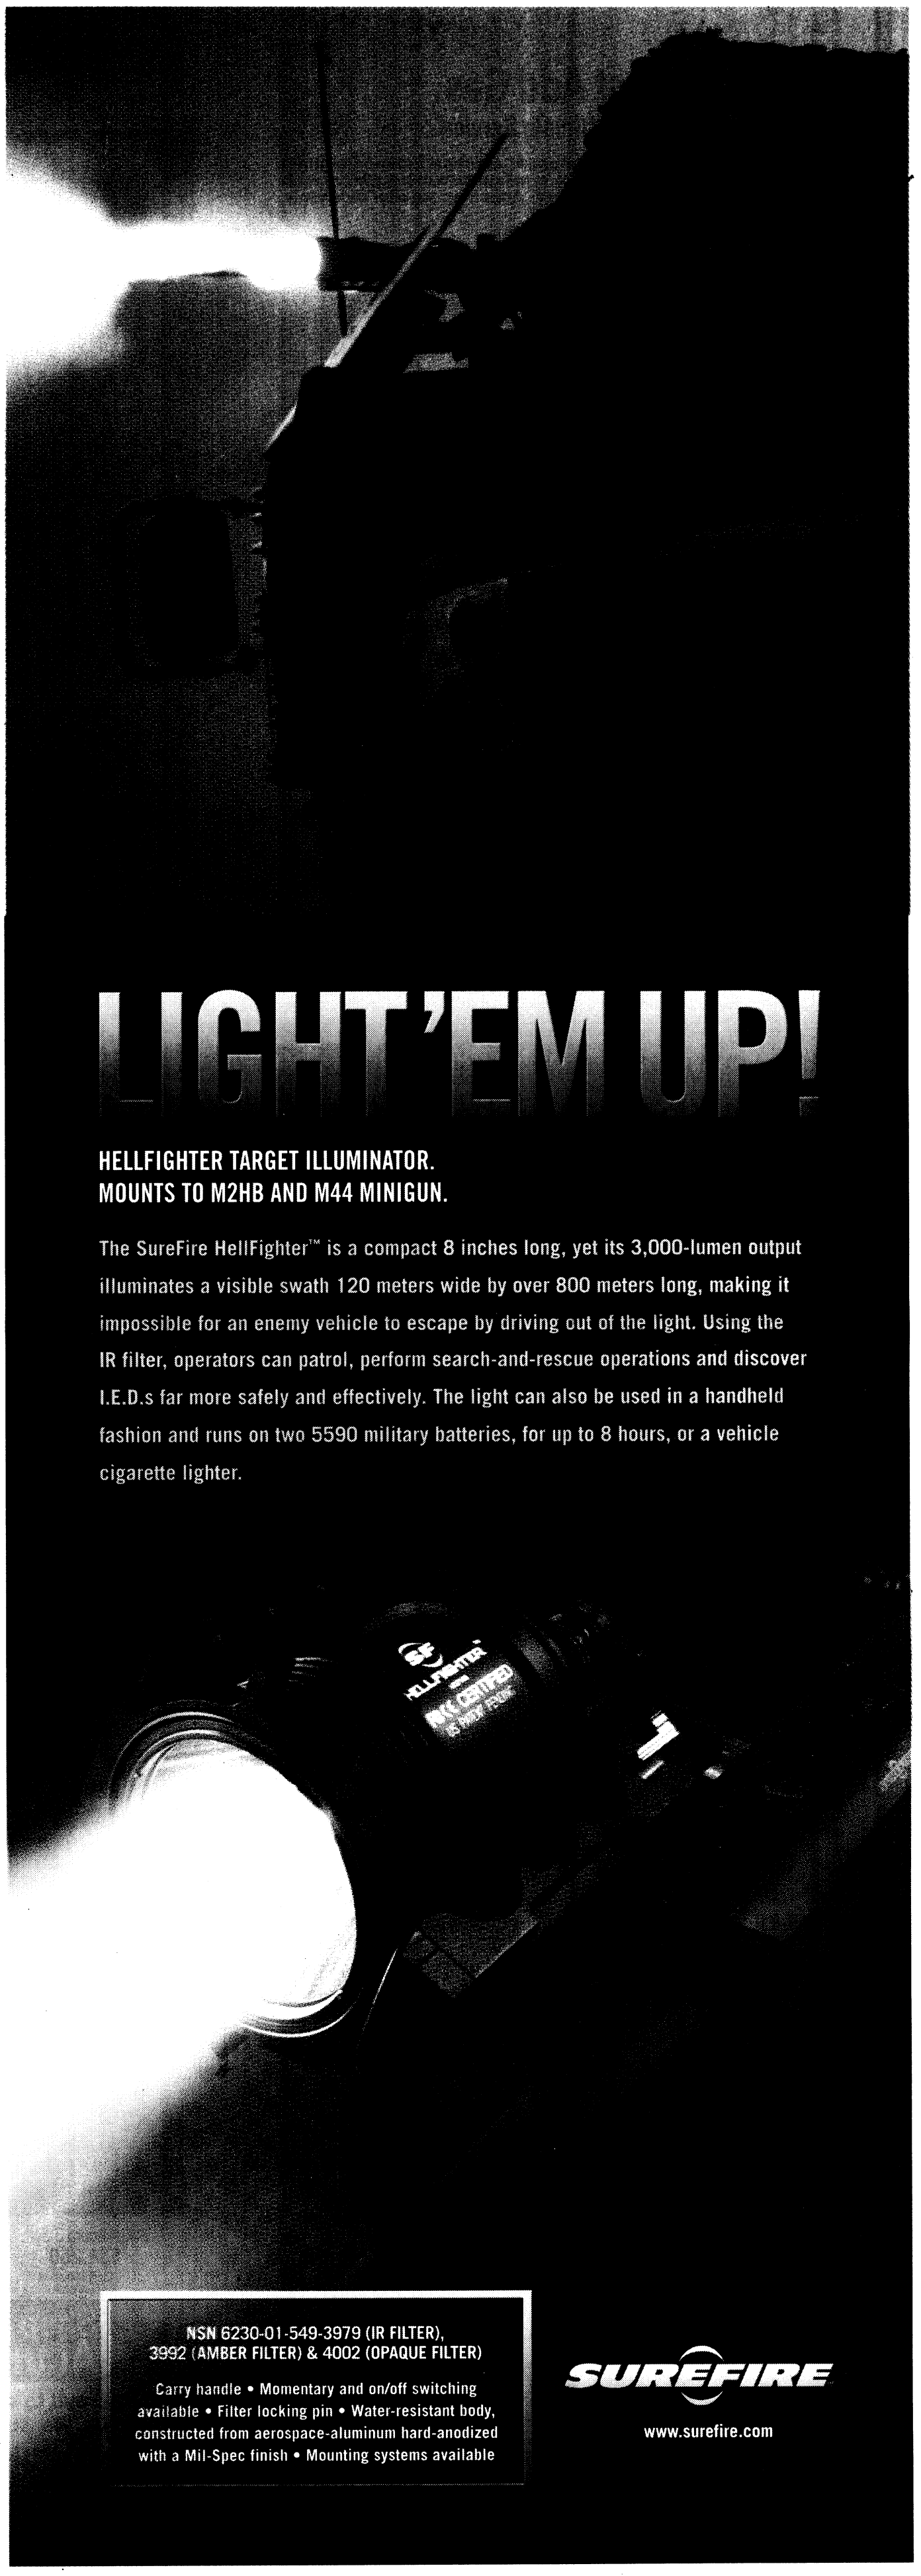
•Faulty batteries causing a cell phone to catch fire. Between 2003 and 2004, federal safety officials received 83 reports of cell phone batteries catching fire because of faulty batteries or chargers. To prevent this, officials said, don't expose battery to extreme temperatures. Don't drop the battery, especially when fully charged. If a person purchases a phone and battery separately, he should make sure the items are compatible.



•Impaired driving that could cause accidents. A study from the University of Utah showed that motorists who talk on handheld or hands-free cellular phones are as impaired as drunken drivers with a blood alcohol level of .08 percent. Gutierrez suggests pulling over if a call must be made and always watch for other drivers who might be distracted.

Drivers on Fort Benning are only allowed to use hands-free cell phones.

For more information on cell phone safety, go to www.cellphonesafety.org.

BENCH NOTES

ERIN A. NASH

Driver dies

Funny Car driver Scott Kalitta, 46, died June 21 when his car burst into flames and crashed during the final round of qualifying at the Old Bridge Township Raceway Park in Englishtown, N.J. Kalitta was the 1994 and 1995 Top Fuel season champion.

Busch proves dominance

Kyle Busch is unstoppable. It seems like he can win any NASCAR race, at any kind of track. He proved that June 22 at Infineon Raceway in Sonoma, Calif. Infineon is a 1.99-mile track, with twists and turn that tests a driver's mettle and talent.

Busch seems a lock for the Sprint Cup trophy if he can continue his consistency on the track.

This week's race is the Lenox Industrial Tools 301 from New Hampshire Motor Speedway begins with coverage at 12:30 p.m. Sunday on TNT.

Tiger out for season

Just two days after battling back to win the U.S. Open, Tiger Woods announced his golf season was over. Woods admitted to playing for almost 10 months with a torn ligament in his left knee, and that he had a double stress fracture in his left leg he suffered two weeks before the Open.

Woods had surgery that will keep him off the golf course for the rest of the season.

I hate to say it, but I won't be as quick to watch golf with Tiger out. There's just not the same spark without him.

Wimbledon begins

My favorite tennis tournament of the year began Monday and runs through July 6. It's Wimbledon, of course, straight from England. Even if you're not a tennis fan, Wimbledon is a must-see.

Every competitor brings his A-game, because a Wimbledon win is among the most prestigious.

NBC and ESPN will broadcast matches.

Shaq rips Kobe

In a video posted on a gossip Web site, Shaquille O'Neal "raps" about former teammate Kobe Bryant. Shaq, who now plays with the Phoenix Suns, raps about the Laker, "Kobe couldn't do without me." He's referring to the criticism of Bryant after the Lakers lost the NBA championship to the Celtics.

Olympic B-Ball team

The U.S. basketball team headed for the Olympics in Beijing in August was announced Monday and includes big names like Carmelo Anthony, Kobe Bryant, LeBron James, Jason Kidd and Dwyane Wade.

I have a good feeling about the team.

Post schedules fourth qualifier for Ten-Miler

Lack of participation may put post out of the running

THE BAYONET
Mitchell Thomas IV

There will be a fourth and final qualifier for the Army Ten Miler July 19.

Three previous qualifiers failed to generate enough competition to field a team, said Ken Wetherill, sports and fitness director for the Directorate of Family and Morale, Welfare and Recreation.

The Army Ten Miler will be held Oct. 4 in Washington, D.C.

In the third qualifier, held June 21, there were eight competitors — the most of any qualifier so far. None of the racers finished in the times required to make the team. Wetherill is looking for male runners who can finish in less than 60 minutes and female runners who can finish in less than 70 minutes.

"There are a lot of drill sergeants and 3rd Brigade Soldiers in great shape, but a lot of them just don't have the time to train for this event," Wetherill said.

"It can be a bit of a challenge, fielding a competitive team."

Lori Smith, fitness director for DFMWR, said the qualifiers are more challenging than the actual race, because temperatures will be much milder in October.

The qualifier is open to all active-duty Soldiers.

For more information, call Smith at 706-545-4300 or lori.smith6@us.army.mil.

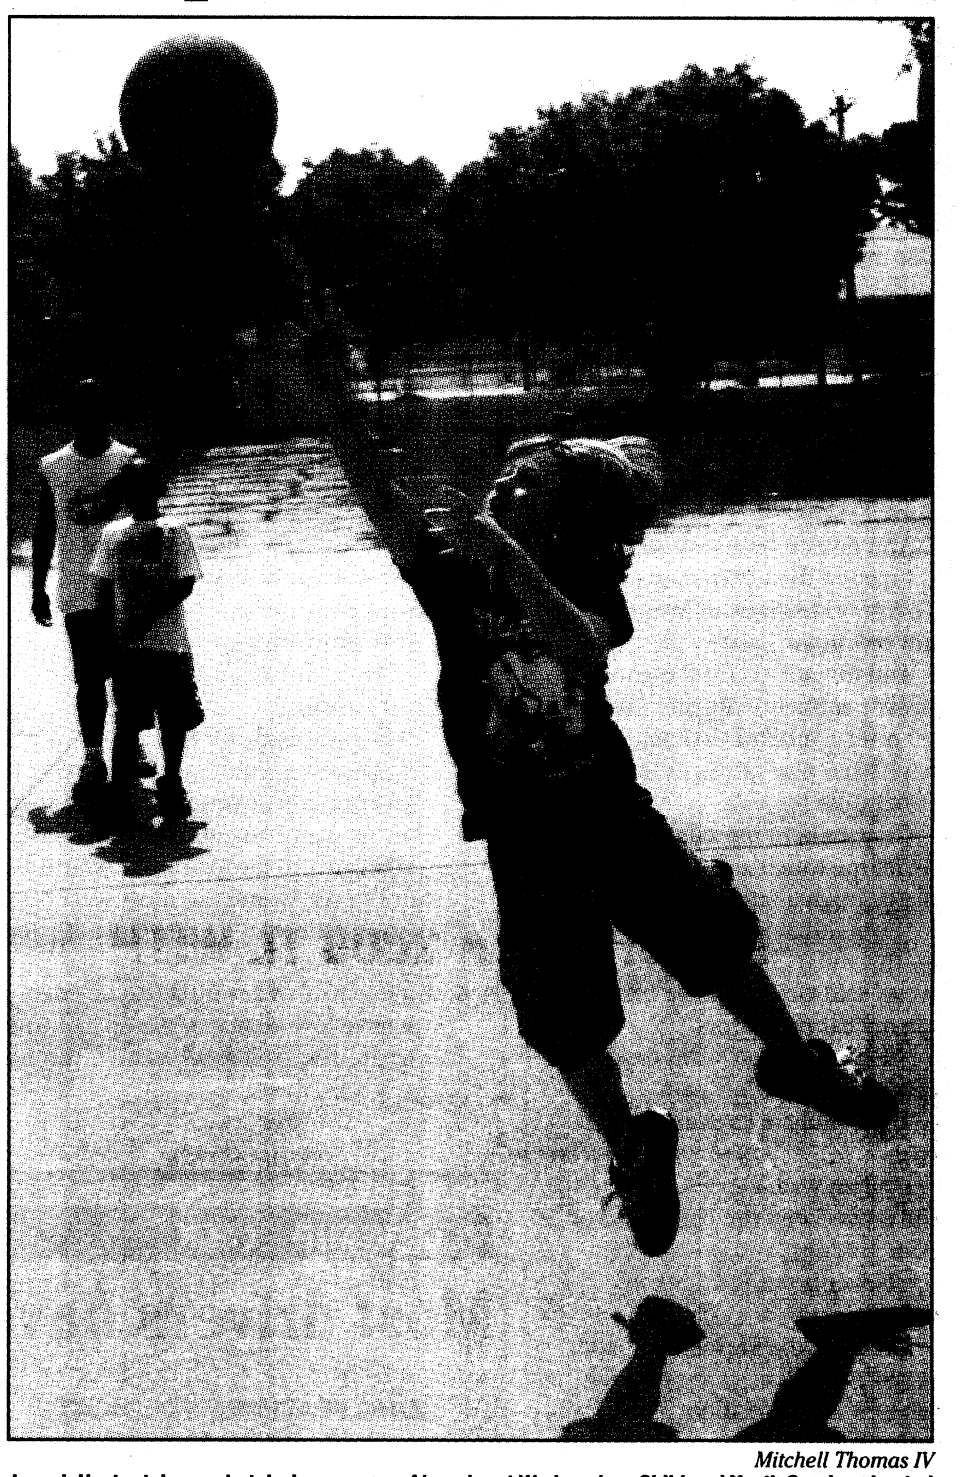
Former Fort Benning Soldier returns today

THE BAYONET

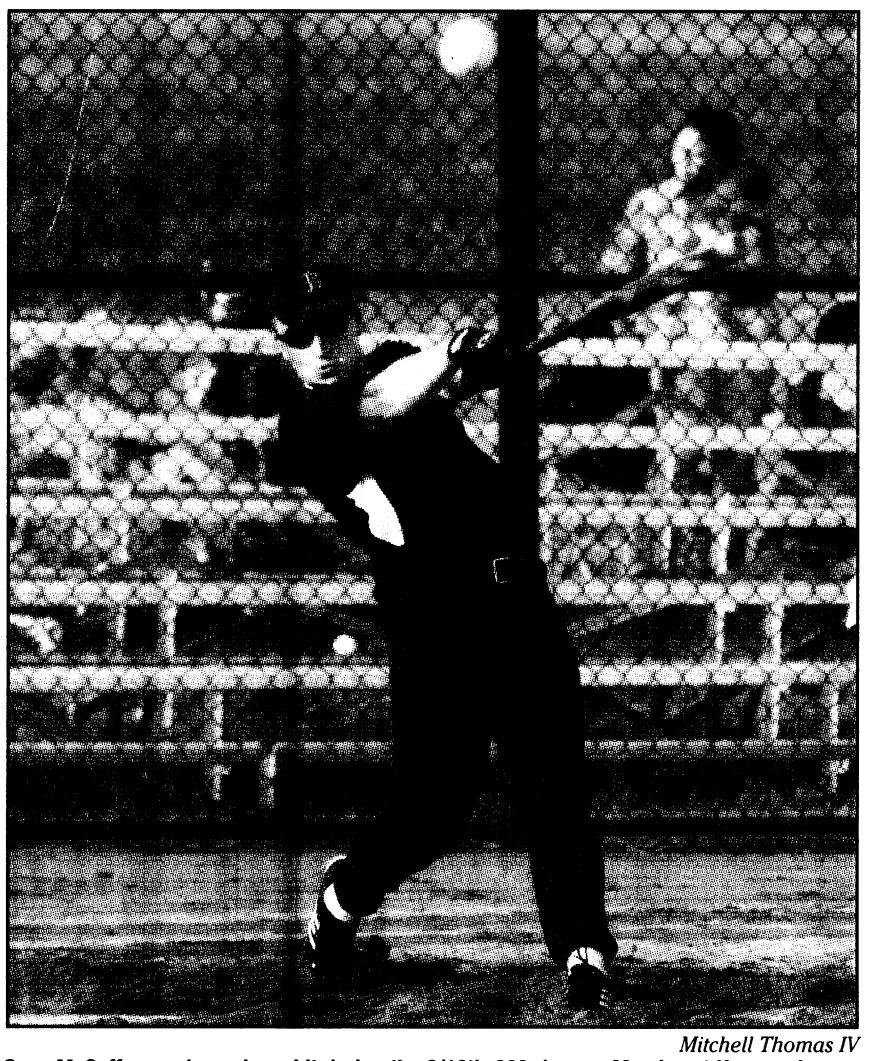
Professionals from the world of mixed-martial arts and boxing will be at Smith Fitness Center today, Saturday and Sunday. Mike Van Arsdale, Joey Villasenor, Holly Holm and Michelle Waterson will greet fans, sign autographs and participate in three days of classes and demonstrations.

Mike Van Arsdale is a former UFC fighter. Van Arsdale, who retired from MMA with a professional record of eight wins and five losses, went through basic training in 1998 at Fort Benning and graduated Officer Candidate School in 2001.



"I spent a lot of time at Benning, so it feels like coming back home," Van Arsdale said.

The fighters will hold a meet-and-greet from 7:30 to 9 p.m. Friday. They will teach a women's self-defense class from 9 to 11 a.m. Saturday.



They will also host a mixed-martial arts and boxing seminar from 1 to 3 p.m. followed by another meet-and-greet at 4 p.m. at York Field. There will be another self-defense class and a demonstration from 9 to 11 a.m. Sunday at Smith Fitness Center.

THE BAYONET

The 233rd Heavy Equipment Transportation Company gave the 2nd Battalion, 19th Infantry Regiment, their first loss of the season Monday at Knappenberger Field.

The 24-17 win gave 233rd a record of 5-0.

The 233rd had a strong first inning. Greg Miller crushed a shot over the wall for the team's first home run of the season.

A few batters later, Johnny Cobb sent another over the fence. The 233rd finished the inning with 14 runs, including three home runs.

The 2/19 finished the bottom of the inning with a single run, but in the bottom of the second, they bounced back.

They scored on a bases-loaded walk and finished the inning with eight runs, making the score 18-10.

After leaving 233rd scoreless in the third, the 2/19 narrowed the gap in the fourth.

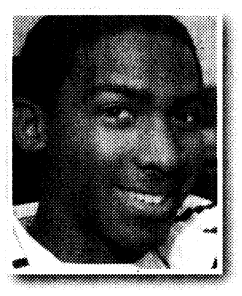
Robert Colon brought in two runs with a triple. Travis Fondrk followed by legging out an in-the-park home run.

The 2/19th ended the inning with five runs, cutting the lead to four.

In the top of the fifth, 233rd regained momentum. Cobb brought in a run with a double. Derrick Ross belted a shot but was robbed of a base hit when an outfielder slid to make the catch.

On the same play, Cobb bowled over the catcher at home plate. The umpires gave 233rd the run after ruling that the catcher blocked the plate.

After three quick outs in the bottom of the inning, the game was called for time.



"It was all about the sticks tonight," Miller said. "We've been getting a lot of batting practice. If we get some fielding time in, we'll be even better."

So I'm not quite home on the range

THE BAYONET
Corey McCoy

"Steady, keep steady" is the phrase that keeps repeating in my mind. My eyes are focused, and I'm in my own world.

I hear the faint voice of John Hart, the range safety officer — "hold your breath, and take your time."

I take a deep breath and hold, but my mind is racing.

Guns have played a vital part in this nation's history. But not my history — I've never shot before in my life.

It's 10 a.m. Saturday. I'm on Shelton Range. And I'm going to shoot as if my life and my country depended on it.

The gun of choice — the bolt action .22-caliber Winchester rifle, provided by the Fort Benning Rifle and Pistol Club. It's a perfect gun for beginner shooters — it's lightweight, easy to maneuver, and has about as much recoil as a Red Ryder BB gun. I can do this, no problem.

Calm, steady and slow. Easy does it. I pull the trigger.

And missed by a long shot.

I missed the entire target. Thank God American lives do not rest in my hands.

And thank God for the good people at Shelton Range. Like John Hart and Jim Graham, who have been part of the Rifle and Pistol Club forever.

Graham kept me safe. Before he let me touch a gun, he put me through a safety drill.

"Eyes and ears are needed on this range, as in eye and ear wear," said Graham as he handed me my ear protectors.

"Yeah, you don't want dead ears like mine," Hart said.

Then Graham explained the rules.

• When walking to and from the range, keep the barrel end of your gun up,

• Never point your gun up range, and

• Yell out the words, "Hot" and "Cold," so others shooter know when it is safe to shoot and when it's not.

"This club has been open since 1951," Graham said. "Safety has never been a problem."

Hart said he wears a safety vest whenever he's on the range.

"I like to stick out like a sore thumb," he said. However, the vest isn't required unless you are going to be more than a 100 yards down range.

Hart handed me a safety vest and said, "You're gonna have fun."

And did I!

We set my target at 50 feet, waited for the "Hot" signal, and then I fired off my rounds. It wasn't until my fifth round of bullets that I noticed how much I had shot.

It was an all-around fun experience I think anyone can enjoy and everyone should try. I personally recommend that every boy, girl, woman and man try it at least once.

Shelton Range is open for Army and civilian use, and you can go out and shoot between noon and 7 p.m. during the summer, noon to sundown during the winter, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturdays and noon to 5 p.m. Sundays.

Yearly membership is $65 for officers, civilians, staff sergeants and above, $55 for junior enlisted and $35 for all ROTC cadets.

Go out to the range and have a nice day. Happy shooting!

Fort Benning will host the intramural softball All-Star games at 6 p.m. Monday at Gowdy Field. The teams will play in a best of three series.

Each of the 24 teams will select at least one player to field two 17-player teams.

There will also be a USSSA Military State Softball Championship Tournament beginning at 8 a.m. Saturday at Gowdy and Knappenberger.

Six teams from Fort Benning, Fort Gordon, Ga., and Warner Robins Air Force Base, Ga., will play in the round-robin tournament.

The tournament will be divided into two pools of teams. Teams will play at least four games.

The top teams will advance to a double elimination playoff with the best team from each pool playing in the championship. The playoffs will begin at 1 p.m.

FIT FACTS

MWR FITNESS DIRECTOR
Lori Smith

This week I want to talk about one of my true loves — shoes. That's right, I love shoes. If I could just find a date who would take me shoe shopping, I think I would be in love, but I digress.

This week, I want to talk about how important having and finding the right pair of athletic shoes is.

A good pair of correct-fitting athletic shoes can be your best friend. But a bad, ill-fitting pair can be your worst enemy. Choosing the wrong shoe for your foot can lead to shin splints and pain in the knees, hips, back and feet.

Your feet are the foundation of your whole body, and if they are not supported with a good pair of shoes, you can have big problems from your feet up to your neck. If your foot is too cramped in your shoes, the joints will not be allowed to progress through their natural movements. This can create abnormal stress on the joints, ankles, knees and hips.

But if your foot moves around too much, there will not be enough support. Excessive movement can lead to calluses, injuries or degenerative changes over time.

Shoes are made for just about every type of feet. There's a technique you can try to know what type of feet you have. Wet one foot, step on a brown paper bag and trace the footprint.

You can also try looking at your last pair of shoes to see where the most wear is. If your footprint shows the entire sole of your foot with little or no arch on the inside, or your shoes show lots of wear on the inside edge, it means you have low arches or flat feet or you tend to over pronate (roll feet inward). You need to look for shoes with a motion controlled feature and maximum support.

If your footprint shows only a portion of your forefoot and heel, your shoes wear mostly on the outside edge meaning you have a high arch and tend to under pronate (roll feet outward). You need to look for a cushioned shoe with a soft midsole.

If you find you have a pretty distinct curve along the inside of you footprint, or your shoes wear uniformly then you have a neutral arch and need a good mix of cushioning and support. Most staff in shoe stores can help you find the correct shoe for your foot. Here are a few other tips to help with your shoe shopping:

• Shop toward the end of the day. Feet tend to swell during the day, as well as while you're exercising. Find shoes that fit your feet when they are at their largest.

• Shoes should feel comfortable right away. Don't fall prey to the "they will break in" theory. Use the rule of thumb. There should be about three-eighths to one-half inch between the front of your big toe and the end of the shoe (about a thumb's width).

• Don't make your shoes multitask. Walking shoes are stiffer, and running shoes are more flexible with extra cushioning to handle greater impact. Don't buy running shoes to play basketball in.

• Know when to replace your shoes. The best way to judge this is to go by how your shoes look and feel. Once the back of the soles are worn out or the shoes feel uncomfortable or less supportive, it's time to take those feet shopping.

• Look for stores that will give you a discount for bringing in your old shoes. Several companies are recycling shoe rubber and turning it into playground foundation. Check with local stores to see if they will do the same.

I hope this was helpful. Take care of your feet, and they will take care of you. Lace up those shoes and come out this weekend and celebrate the Fourth of July a week early with DFMWR. There will be lots to do and a great fireworks show, so see you out there.

Long Drive contest set for Aug. 13

THE BAYONET
Rachel L. Watkins

Active duty and retirees from all branches of the military will go the distance at the Family and Morale, Welfare and Recreation Long Drive Championship, presented by 7UP, from 4 to 8 p.m. Aug. 13 at the Fort Benning Golf Course.

"This is a chance for golfers to show off their skills," said George Cliff, golf business manager and director of golf at Fort Benning. "The long drive is about speed and power and strength."

Golfers will each get six shots. A global positioning system will measure distances, but judges will be present to verify. them

The first through third prizes are pro shop gift certificates from $50 to $300.

One winner from Fort Benning's competition will move to the second stage of the competition and compete in Fort Meade, Md., against competitors from 10 installations across the eastern United States.

Two winners from that competition will win an all-expense-paid trip to Mesquite, Nev., to compete in the Re/MAX World Long Drive Championship against four competitors from the Western United States, Korean and European zones. The champion will receive $10,000.

The average golfer hits about 250 yards, Cliff said.

Nearly 30 golfers participated on post last year. There is no limit on the number of participants for the Fort Benning championship. The registration fee is $10 the day of the event. Spectators are welcome.

Most drivers have occasionally forgotten parking brake

KING FEATURES SYNDICATE
Tom and Ray Magliozzi

Dear Tom and Ray:

Twice now, I have left a late-evening rehearsal without releasing the parking brake on my 2007 Toyota Corolla Matrix and driven 10 miles home (50 mph on the freeway most of the way) before discovering my ridiculous error.

Please tell me what horrible things I have done to my car. I love this car, and I really don't want to confess to anyone what I have done!

You're my only hope for advice — scathing though it may be.

Gratefully yours,

– Amy

RAY: You've been drinking too many glasses of Mateus during rehearsal, Amy.

TOM: Don't feel bad about the parking brake. I've done this myself.

Fortunately, it was always on a customer's car!

RAY: It's possible that you've done some damage, Amy, but we can't tell without inspecting the rear brakes.

So, you're going to have to go to the confessional at your local dealership, close the curtain and spill everything to your service adviser.

TOM: Don't worry, he's heard much worse.

RAY: What you did was the equivalent of driving with your foot pressed partway down on the brake pedal — but only for the rear brakes.

Depending upon how firmly your parking brake was applied while you drove (clearly not that firmly, if you were able to drive on the freeway at 50 mph), you could have overheated those rear brakes.

TOM: If they did overheat, you could have cracked your brake shoe linings or even warped the brake drums.

But I doubt it.

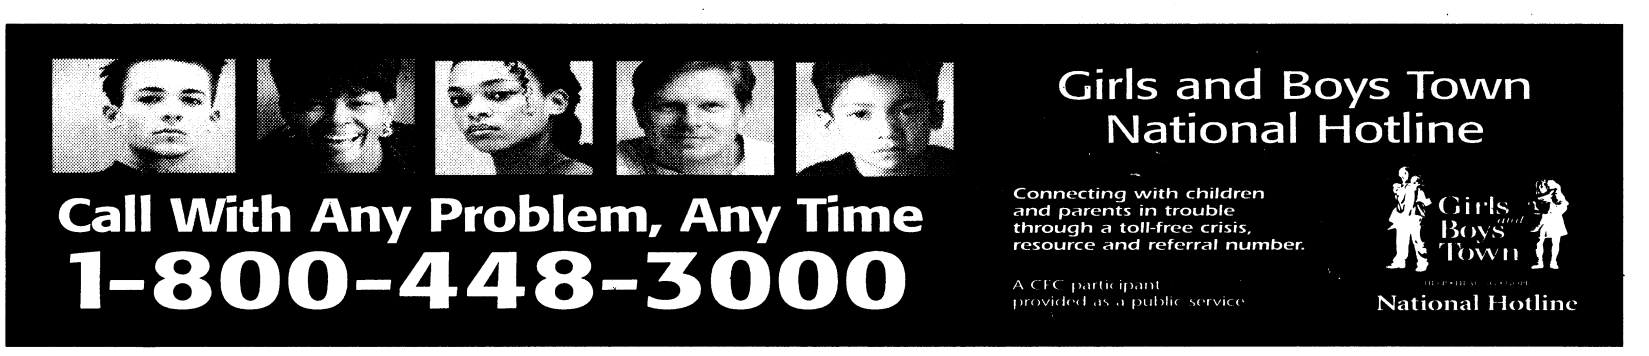
The range of what this might cost you runs from nothing to about $150 if you need shoes, to $350 if you need your drums replaced, too.

TOM: But here's a surefire way to prevent this in the future: Apply the parking brake more firmly. How firmly?

Try this: Put the car in drive with your foot on the brake pedal.

RAY: Do this on an open driveway, where you have some room to move, not in front of your prized African tulips or your freshly painted garage door.

TOM: Right. With the car in drive and your foot on the brake, pull up the parking brake and take your foot off the brake pedal. The car shouldn't move.



If it does, pull up harder on the hand brake and try again. Not only should the car stay perfectly still, but if you step on the gas and try to drive it away, you should feel a discernible drag on the car, like something is wrong.

RAY: If you can't get to that point, your parking brake might not be working properly, and you should have it looked at.

TOM: But once you find that spot, where it's hard to drive away — that's how hard you should apply the parking brake every time you park the car.

RAY: If you do that, there are two benefits — the parking brake will be sure to do its job and prevent the car from rolling away if it ever slips out of gear, and it'll keep you from driving home with the parking brake engaged, because even you will notice that something's wrong, Amy.

Good luck.

Army Olympians compete with pedestrians at Times Square recruiting station

ARMY NEWS SERVICE
Liz Miklya, Weber Shandwick

NEW YORK, N.Y. — Army athletes hosted a fitness challenge June 18 at the Times Square Recruiting Station, kicking off the road to the 2008 Summer Olympic Games in Beijing.

The team of 11 Soldiers competed against Americans and tourists from around the world in contests of speed, strength and endurance. The Olympians faced off with the public in race-walking, push-up and jump-rope challenges.

The event featured three-time Olympian Staff Sgt. Libby Callahan, a 23-year U.S. Army Reserve Soldier, who will earn the distinction of the oldest U.S. female Olympian ever to compete at age 56. She stands a chance of becoming the oldest female Olympic medalist ever at the Summer Games.

"It's an honor to represent the country I am proud to serve," said Callahan, who will compete in the women's sports pistol event at the Summer Games. "The Army has not only provided me with the training and opportunities to succeed, it has given me the encouragement I need to go for the gold at the Olympics."

U.S. Army Marksman Maj. Michael Anti was also recognized at the event. Anti will make his fourth Olympic appearance at the Beijing Games. After earning a silver medal in the prone rifle event at the 2004 Games, Anti purchased a silver Corvette. He said his goal is to upgrade to a new gold model to match the medal he hopes to earn at the 2008 Games.

Staff Sgt. Dremiel Byers - Wrestling; Sgt. 1st Class Christopher Downs - Boxing; 1st Lt. Nathaniel Garcia - Track and Field; Sgt. John Nunn - Race Walking; Sgt. 1st Class Jason Parker-Air Rifle and Three-Position Rifle; Sgt. 1st Class Daryl Szarenski — Men's 50-Meter Free Pistol; Pfc. Vincent Hancock — Skeet; Spc. Jeffrey Holguin — Double Trap; Spc. Walton Glenn Eller III — Double Trap.

"We coach elite-level athletes who already have a high level of discipline from their Army experience." said Capt. Dominic Black, commander of the Army's World Class Athlete Program. "By providing these athletes with the best training, coaching, equipment and overall support, the Army is preparing them for victory at the Olympics and beyond."

The Soldiers, including track and field athletes, world-class wrestlers, marksmen and more, are the latest in a storied line of 644 Army athletes that have participated in the Games since 1948.

The Army's WCAP is comprised of Soldier-athletes in a variety of sports who demonstrate the potential to qualify for the U.S. Olympic Team.

Soldiers who apply to the program must have recently attained a high national ranking or placed high at a major national or international event. Soldiers in the WCAP have earned 131 Olympic medals since 1948.

The Army Marksmanship Unit, which is sending six shooters to Beijing, has gained worldwide respect by winning hundreds of individual and team national shooting titles, more than 40 World Championships and 21 Olympic medals. Since the AMU was established in 1956, its shooters have won more than half of all medals earned by U.S. shooters.

Staff Sgt. Dremiel Byers defeats U.S. Army World Class Athlete Program teammate Spc. Tim Taylor in the finals of the 264.5-pound Greco-Roman division of the 2008 U.S. Olympic Team Trials for Wrestling June 15 at the University of Nevada, Las Vegas' Thomas and Mack Center. Byers won the best-of-three series, 2-1, and earned a berth in the Summer Olympics, scheduled for Aug. 8-24 in Beijing.

WCAP wrestler earns berth in Olympics

LAS VEGAS — Staff Sgt. Dremiel Byers secured an Olympic berth by defeating U.S. Army World Class Athlete Program teammate Spc. Timothy Taylor in the Greco-Roman heavyweight finals of the U.S. Olympic Team Trials for Wrestling June 15.

Three other Soldiers reached the finals of their respective weight classes but fell short of earning spots on the U.S. Olympic Team during the three-day tournament at the University of Nevada, Las Vegas' Thomas & Mack Center.

Byers, the 2002 Greco-Roman heavyweight World champion, defeated Taylor in their first match, 1-1, 4-0, but lost the second bout of their best-of-three series, 2-5, 2-1, 1-1.

"Taylor is pretty good at being a wall when he wants to," said Byers, 33, a native of Kings Mountain, N.C., who is stationed at Fort Carson, Colo., where he trains daily with Taylor. "I really don't have any tricks for him. He knows what I'm going to do every time.

"He's a fast learner, a quick study, and his body's coming together. That first match, I saw it. And in that second match, I really saw it — this guy is coming and he's defending hard. I knew it was time to take it up a notch and do what I'm supposed to do."

Taylor is a 2007 Armed Forces champion who finished second in the U.S. Nationals and third in the U.S. World Team Trials last year.

In the decisive third match, Byers dominated the first period, 4-0. In the second period, he scored five points with a high-amplitude throw of Taylor that ended the match and tournament in dramatic fashion.

"I just felt that if I worked my under hooks it would pay off, and right there in a clutch moment, it paid off — just like I had hoped," said Byers, who was interviewed mat side by his former training partner and archrival, MSNBC color analyst Rulon Gardner, who earned Olympic gold at the 2000 Sydney Games and bronze in the 2004 Athens Games. "It's been a long road. It's been a real long road. Some of it was luck and a lot of it was hard work. I'm very fortunate to be here right now. I think life starts now."

Byers thanked a long list of supporters — including All-Army coach Staff Sgt. Shon Lewis — who helped him along the way.

Byers plans to fulfill the promise of winning an Olympic medal for his late grandfather, Theodore, in Beijing in August.

"He probably would have asked me why I lost that one match," said Byers, who won his spot on the Olympic team on Father's Day. "Coming out that tunnel, and every time I looked up, I said: 'I know you're watching. I know you're watching.' I wish he could be here."

Taylor made sure Soldiers would be represented on the U.S. Olympic Team by reaching the 264.5-pound finals against Byers with a 3-0, 0-3, 1-1 victory over Russ Davie of New York Athletic Club.

"I knew whoever won the first period was winning the match, regardless of what happened," said Taylor, 25. "I had to get the first period — got the first period. Tried to stand up in the second period and he kept me down, so I just stopped moving. Third period, same situation: if I don't get turned, I win. Coach has been always saying that you have to have heart with 30 seconds left to win the match."

Taylor is the proud, new father of 11-week-old Makyla Aleece Taylor.

"Being Father's Day, I was thinking about her. Reached down, thought about her, stood up — and once I stood up, there was no way he was getting a point," he said.

Soldiers compete in Olympic Trials

FMWRC PUBLIC AFFAIRS
Tim Hipps

Several other Soldiers competed gamely in the Olympic Trials.

WCAP Spc. Aaron Sieracki wrestled through longtime nemesis Jacob Clark, a former Marine, and WCAP teammate Sgt. Brad Ahearn, who grappled with a broken hand, before losing 6-0, 3-0 in the 84-kilogram Greco-Roman finals to New York Athletic Club's Brad Vering, a two-time Olympian and four-time World Team member.

"I wrestled well, overall. I just wish I had stepped it up a little more for the finals," Sieracki said. "I just made a couple of mistakes, and if you make a mistake here, it's going to cost you."

Nothing stung Sieracki, however, quite like seeing his older brother, Keith, leave his boots on the mat, signaling the end of a brilliant Army wrestling career.

"Wow, that's tough to talk about," said Aaron, who buried his head in his sweatshirt to absorb the tears of disbelief. "He's the one who drove me. He's why I'm where I'm at. I can't believe he's retiring. It just won't be the same without him."

Staff Sgt. Keith Sieracki, an Olympic Trials winner in 2000 and 2004, lost to NYAC's Cheney Haight in the 74-kilogram Greco finale of the challenge tournament.

Walking off the mat for the final time gave Sieracki a bittersweet sense of relief.

"I was hoping to do it at the Olympics, but I knew this was my last go-around," Keith said. "If you don't have the fire, mentally, it's hard — you're on auto-pilot. I gave it everything I had. I just didn't have anything left.

"Don't get me wrong, I wanted to make the Olympic team, but when it's all said and done, I've been in the top two (in the United States) for the last 13 years.

"The Army has given me the opportunity to wrestle this long. I can't say enough good things about the Army. I never in my life thought I would get such a privilege. I get to be a Soldier and I get to wrestle for the Army and honor these guys. It's amazing."

Sieracki lost his 2000 Olympic spot in a legal battle with Matt Lindland, who Keith defeated on the mat in the U.S. Olympic Trials at Reunion Arena in Dallas.

He also made the 2004 team that failed to qualify the weight class for the Athens Games.

"Yep, I'm (the answer to) a trivia question," said Sieracki, 36, an 18-year Army veteran who will be remembered as a two-time U.S. Olympic Team member who never graced a mat in the Games. "But now the pressure is gone. I'm so tired of carrying that weight on my shoulders of hearing 'this is your year.'"

WCAP Staff Sgt. Glenn Garrison made it to the 60-kilogram Greco-Roman finals but lost back-to-back matches to NYAC's Joe Betterman.

"I feel like I wrestled good in my last match — thought I took it to him," said Garrison, 34, a five-time Armed Forces champion from Portland, Ore. "In my first match, I made a couple of mistakes that really cost me. I just didn't come out hard enough."

WCAP Pfc. Jeremiah Davis finished third in the same weight class with a 6-4, 6-0 consolation victory over C.C. Fisher.

WCAP Spc. Faruk Sahin, 32, a two-time Turkish national champion, lost 2-3, 7-5, 3-0 to Minnesota Storm's Jake Deitchler in the 66-kilogram Greco finals.

Sahin was leading 5-0 in the second period before the bottom fell out.

"I guess I wasn't pumped up enough to win, but that was a great match," Sahin said. "He just goes, goes, goes, goes — that's his advantage, but I did my best. I'm happy with my performance. Now, I'll get ready for the CISM World Championships."

En route to his Olympic Trials finale, Sahin eliminated 2004 Olympian and All-Army teammate Sgt. Oscar Wood from the challenge tournament semifinals.

This was Cooper's second retirement from the sport.

"I left my shoes out there four years ago at this same tournament," said Cooper, who then was wrestling for the Marines. "I just have too many injuries. My body can't hold up any more. I've been doing this for a long time. Guys are just younger and stronger. I just can't compete at that level any more. That's not the way I wanted to go out, but I have no excuses. I had a good career.

Cooper said he began wrestling at age 5.

"It's time to let it go," Cooper said.

"I have a bunch of surgeries I've got to get. My body was really telling me four years ago to let it go, but I have no complaints. I'd do it all over again. I gave it my best, but I want to be able to walk after all this is over."

Lewis, a 13-time Armed Forces champion on the mat, paid Cooper an ultimate compliment.

"We went at it several times and I always had the utmost respect for him because he was one of the only guys I knew in the United States who could stop my gut wrench," Lewis said.

Women's Freestyle:

Three Soldiers competed in the women's freestyle tournament

Sunkist Kids' 17-year-old Tatiana Padilla pinned WCAP 1st Lt. Leigh Jaynes with 14 seconds remaining in a 55-kilogram freestyle semifinal.

"I just made a technical error," Jaynes said. "You need to be on your game at all times, and she stuck me in the last 20 seconds. It's heartbreaking, but she's a fighter and I knew better to tie up with somebody who didn't have anything to lose at that point."

In the same weight class, 2nd Lt. Tina George, a two-time World silver medalist and seven-time U.S. World Team member, lost to Gator Wrestling Club's Sally Roberts in the semifinals before wrestling back to take third place with a consolation victory over GWC's Sharon Jacobson.

WCAP Sgt. Iris Smith, a 2005 World champion and four-time U.S. Nationals champ, lost 1-0, 0-2, 3-0 in the women's 72-kilo challenge tournament semis to NYAC's Kristie Marano, a two-time World champ and nine-time World medalist (the most among U.S. women).

Marano prevailed with a takedown in the final 20 seconds of the match.

"Iris definitely had the momentum going and Kristie was tired," Lewis said.

"That takedown really was a tough one for me. I expect my world champions to get it done, but when you lose, you can't say anything but we've got to get better."

"My body is getting stronger and so is my walk with the Lord. I guess they go hand-in-hand."

— Adriane Stone

Army spouse overcomes adversity, sets sights on Olympics

ARMY NEWS SERVICE
Molly Hayden

MILILANI, Hawaii — In the sultry, harmonious melody of the blues, Eric Clapton once sang, "Nobody knows you when you're down and out."

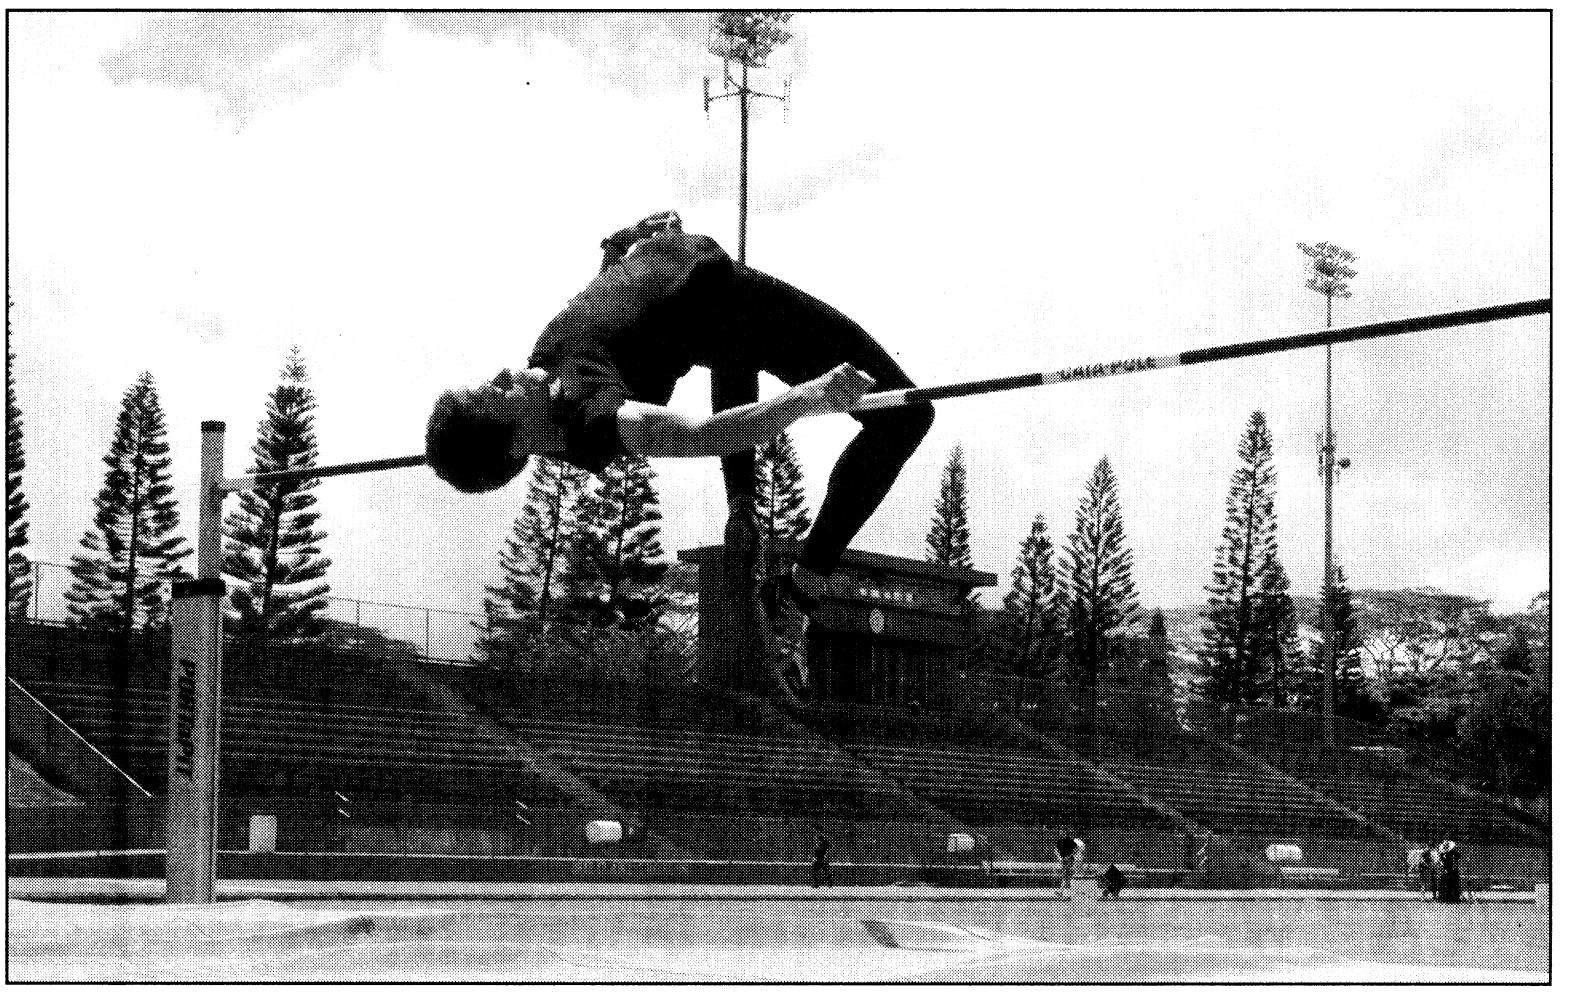
Adriane Stone knows this feeling firsthand.

Less than two years ago, Stone was at the lowest point in her life. She was alone.

Once a budding high school track and field star ranked 10th in the nation in the high jump in 1996, as well as a 2000 U.S. Olympic track and field trials finalist, Stone turned her back on her dream when her father passed away.

"He was my inspiration," said Stone. "When he was gone, I stopped believing in God and myself."

For the next seven years, Stone drifted through an uncertain life raising a family and living her mere existence paraded with alcohol, smoking, drugs and constant partying.



"I drank to wash away the fears of the life I was living," said Stone. "I was obese, unhealthy and depressed."

Her daily routine followed an all-too-predicable course of juggling her children's needs around her own addictions.

"I woke up a few months later and realized my life was spinning out of control," she said. "I put all my strength in the Lord to break the cycle I was on, and he spoke to me."

Stone said she was called out of "retirement" through spirituality and knew she had to regain her previous accomplishments in track and field.

Molly Hayden, U.S. Army Garrison-Hawaii Public Affairs

Adriane Stone leaps over the high jump crossbar during a practice session at Mililani High School. After a seven-year hiatus, Stone is back in form, recently qualifying for the U.S. Olympic track and field trials.

Within the first month of sobriety, Stone lost 30 pounds and began training. She has since dropped 80 pounds and trains everyday.

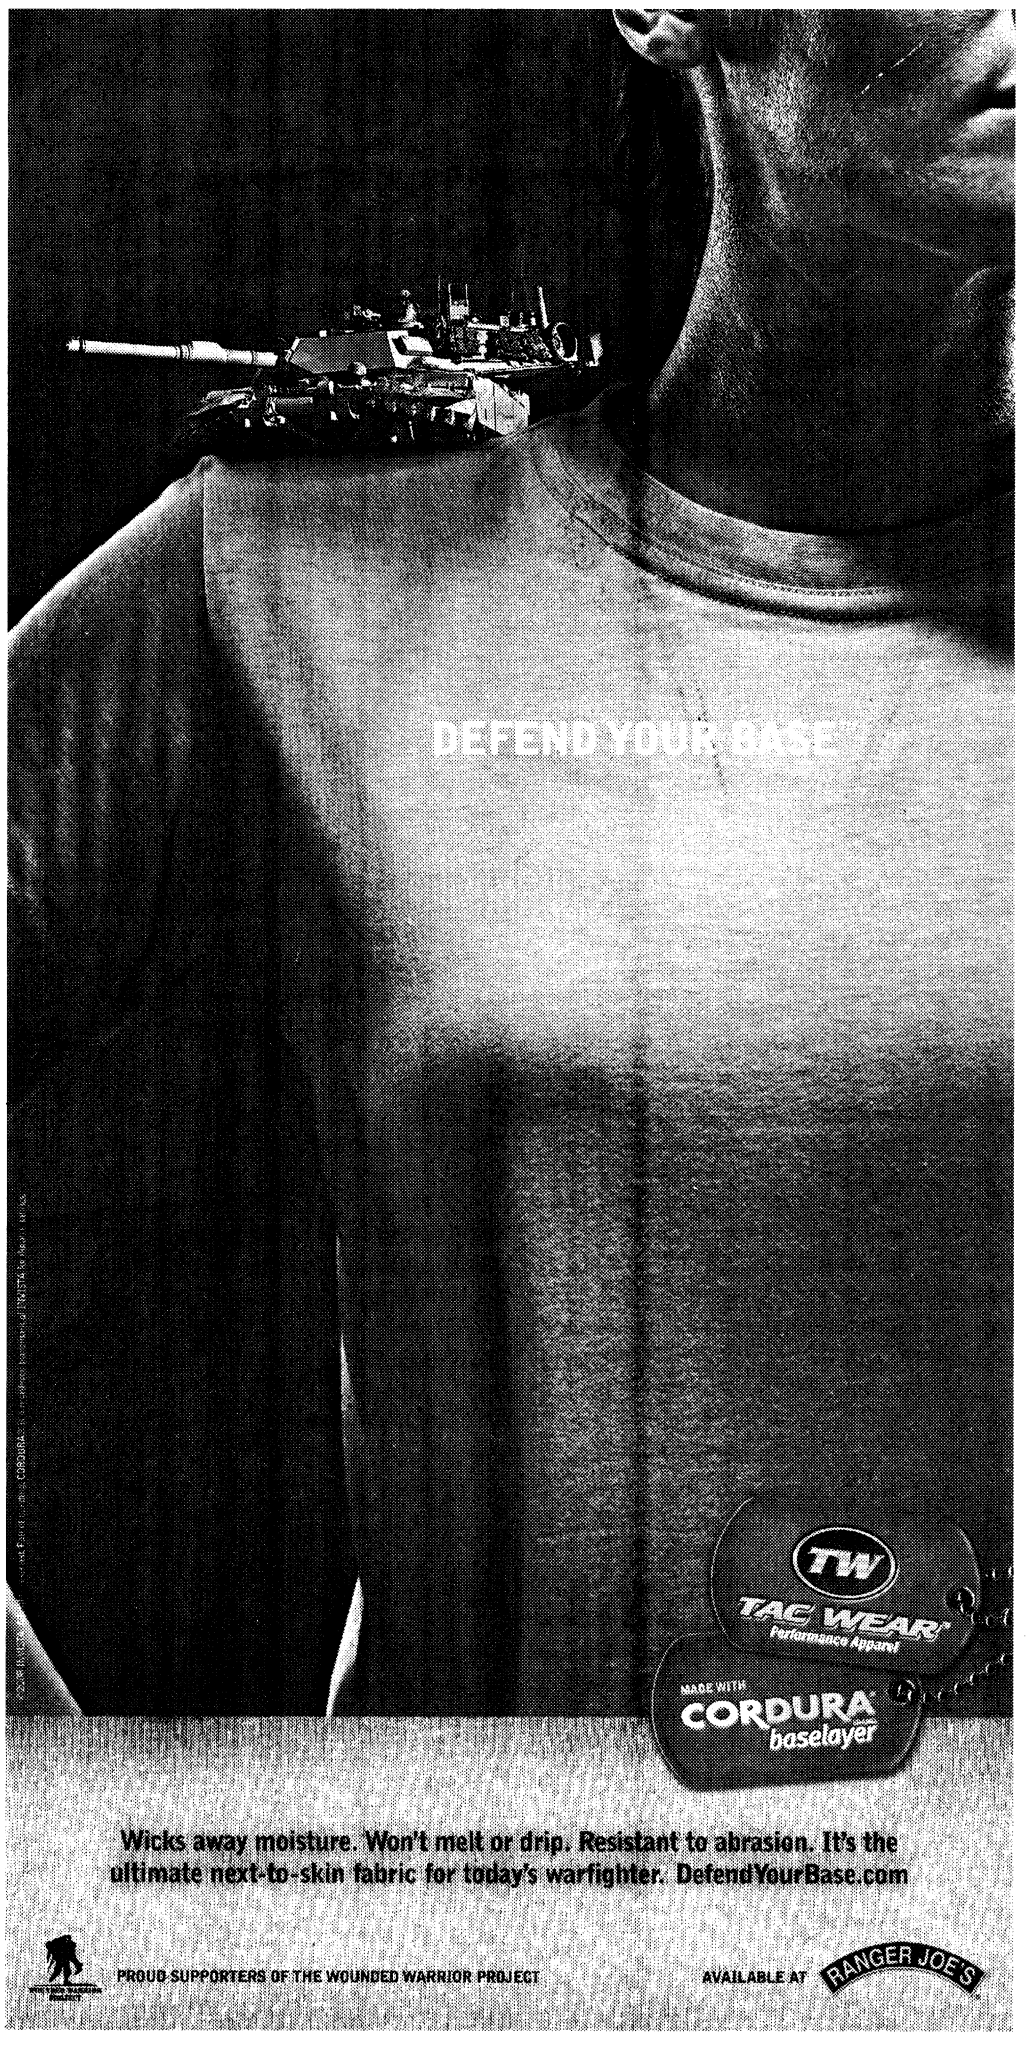
Stone took her first leap over the high jump crossbar in seven years Jan. 12.

"I was once defeated by my own life," she said. "But there is hope in hopeless situations."

A few months later, Stone cleared six feet, meeting the "B" standard during the Sunset Meet at Cooke Field and qualified for the U.S. Olympic track and field trials for the second time around.

Hopes of bringing home the gold rest on her performance at the U.S. Olympic track and field trials in Eugene, Ore. She is scheduled to jump at 7:15 p.m. Monday.

The USA network will broadcast the trials.



The top three finishers in each event, along with three alternates, will qualify for Olympic competition in Beijing, China.

The 28-year-old also passes on her skills to the Trojan high jumpers at Mililani High School as the head high jump coach in exchange for use of the facilities.

"I'm jumping a lot higher since coach (Stone) started here," said sophomore Andrew Longboy. "It's nice to have someone who can explain and show you what you need to do."

With the support of her family, community and faith in God, Stone has overcome many adversities and continues to strive, she said.

"My body is getting stronger and so is my walk with the Lord," Stone said. "I guess they go hand-in-hand."

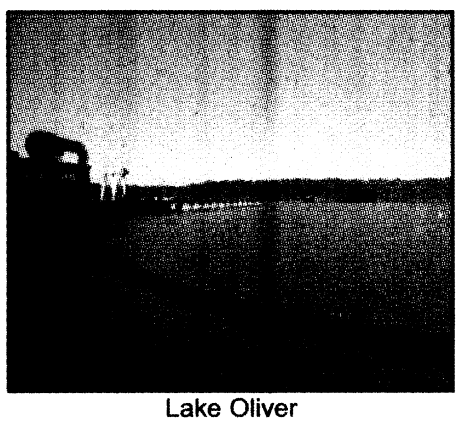
2007 Water Quality Report for Fort Benning, Georgia

SOURCE OF WATER



Fort Benning received its water from a surface water source, the Upatoi Creek, a tributary stream to the Chattahoochee River. Water was withdrawn under permit #GA2150002 from Upatoi Creek until March 8, 2007.

Upatoi Creek

Since March 8, 2007 Fort Benning received its water from another surface water source, the Chattahoochee River. Water is withdrawn from Lake Oliver under permit # GA2150000 at a point just above the dam.

This provides both Columbus and Fort Benning with a safe and dependable supply of water.

Lake Oliver

Dear Customer,

We are pleased to present our third annual water quality report for drinking water in Fort Benning. As you will see in this report, the drinking water supplied has met or exceeded all EPA and state drinking water standards.

In March 2007 the Fort Benning Water Treatment Plant was closed and Fort Benning started receiving water from the Columbus Water Resource Facility therefore you will find laboratory data, source water information and the source water assessments for both Fort Benning and Columbus.

As scientists learn more about our environment and the effect of contaminant's on human health, new standards will continue to be set for the treatment of drinking water. Columbus Water Works will continue to use the best available technology in order to be able to meet future standards.

Billy G. Turner,
President of Columbus Water Works

ENSURING THE SAFETY OF YOUR DRINKING WATER

The sources of drinking water (both tap and bottled water) include rivers, lakes, streams, ponds, reservoirs, springs, and wells. As water travels over the surface of the land or through the ground, it dissolves naturally-occurring minerals and, in some cases, radioactive material, and can pick up substances resulting from the presence of animals or from human activity.

Contaminants that may be present in source water include:

Microbial - such as viruses and bacteria which may come from human, agricultural or wildlife sources.

Inorganic - such as salts and metals, which can be natural, from stormwater runoff, industrial or domestic wastewater discharges, oil and gas production, mining or farming.

Pesticides and herbicides - which may come from agricultural, stormwater runoff or residential uses.

Organic chemical - which may come from industrial or domestic processes, stormwater runoff, and septic systems.

Radioactive - which can be naturally-occurring or the result of mining or other human activities.

In order to ensure that tap water is safe to drink, the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) prescribes regulations which limit the amount of certain contaminants in water provided by public water systems.The Food and Drug Administration (FDA) regulations establish limits for contaminants in bottled water which must provide the same protection for public health.

This report includes data collected between January 1, 2007 and December 31, 2007

Important Drinking Water Definitions

Term	Definition
AL	Action Level (AL): The concentration of a contaminant which, if exceeded, triggers treatment or other requirements which a water system must follow.
MCL	Maximum Contaminant Level (MCL): The highest level of a contaminant that is allowed in drinking water. MCLs are set as close to the MCLGs as feasible using the best available treatment technology.
MCLG	Maximum Contaminant Level Goal (MCLG): The level of a contaminant in drinking water below which there is no known or expected risk to health. MCLGs allow for a margin of safety.
MRDL	Maximum Residual Disinfectant Level (MRDL): The highest level of a disinfectant allowed in drinking water. There is convincing evidence that addition of a disinfectant is necessary for control of microbial contaminants.
MRDLG	Maximum Residual Disinfectant Level Goal (MRDLG): The level of a drinking water disinfectant below which there is no known or expected risk to health. MRDLGs do not reflect the benefits of the use of disinfectants to control microbial contamination.
NA	Not Applicable
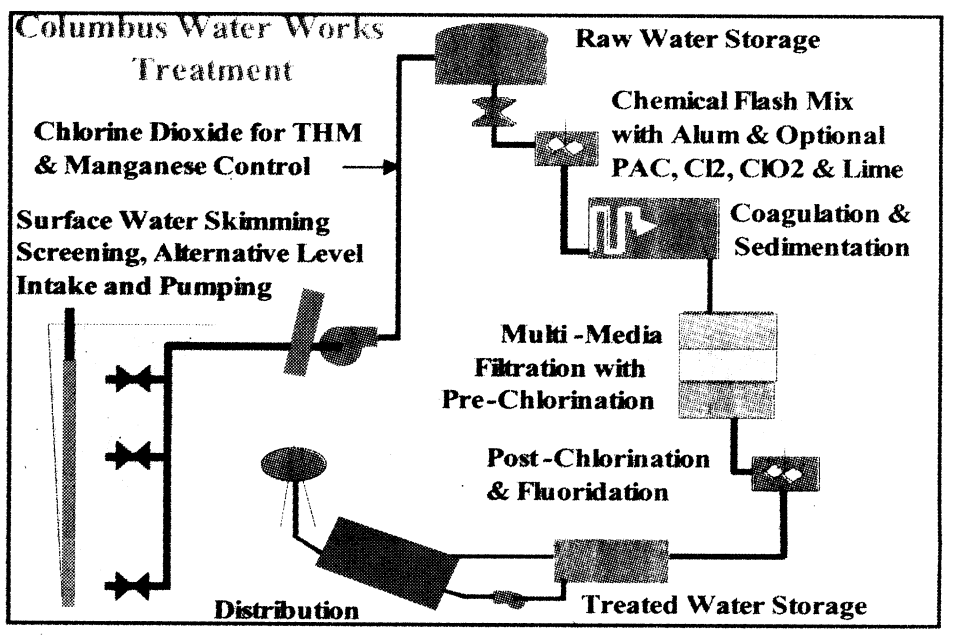
ppm	parts per million: One part substance per million parts water (or milligrams per liter).
ppb	parts per billion: One part substance per billion parts water (or micrograms per liter).
TT	Treatment Technique (TT): A required process intended to reduce the level of a contaminant in drinking water.
≤	less than or equal to
≥	greater than or equal to
(a)	Fluoride is added in treatment to bring the natural level to the EPA optimum of 1 part per million.
(b)	Turbidity is a measure of the cloudiness of water. We monitor turbidity because it is a good indicator of water quality and the effectiveness of our filtration system.
(c)	This level is based on a system-wide 4-quarter running average of several samples, as required by EPA testing protocol.
(d)	Water from the treatment plant does not contain lead or copper. However under EPA test protocol, water is tested at the tap. Tap tests show that where a customer may have lead-soldered copper pipes, the water is not corrosive. This means the amount of lead or copper absorbed by the water is limited to safe levels. Flushing the line before drinking will ensure your safety.

Information About Lead in Drinking Water

If present, elevated levels of lead can cause serious health problems, especially for pregnant women and young children. Lead in drinking water is primarily from materials and components associated with service lines and home plumbing. Columbus Water Works is responsible for providing high quality drinking water, but cannot control the variety of materials used in plumbing components. When your water has been sitting for several hours, you can minimize the potential for lead exposure by flushing your tap for 30 seconds to 2 minutes before using water for drinking or cooking. If you are concerned about lead in your water, you may wish to have your water tested. Information on lead in drinking water, testing methods, and steps you can take to minimize exposure is available from the Safe Drinking Water Hotline or at http://www.epa.gov/safewater/lead.



Drinking water, including bottled water, may reasonably be expected to contain at least small amounts of some contaminants. The presence of contaminants does not necessarily indicate that water poses a health risk. More information about contaminants and potential health effects can be obtained by calling the EPA's Safe Drinking Water Hotline (1-800-426-4791).

What is Cryptosporidium?

Cryptosporidium is a protozoan parasite too small to be seen without a microscope. It is common in surface waters (lakes and rivers), especially when these waters contain a high amount of sewage or animal waste. Cryptosporidium can cause symptoms that include diarrhea, nausea, stomach cramps or all three. Because many other conditions can produce these same symptoms, a special laboratory test is needed to find out whether Cryptosporidium is the cause. Samples of both untreated and treated water from our system have been sent to outside laboratories which are set up for Cryptosporidium testing. It may be assumed that Cryptosporidium may be found in all source water. Cryptosporidium has never been found in the drinking water that goes to your tap.

TREATMENT PROCESS

Alum is added to the water taken from the river to cause the finely divided mud particles to clump together so that the mud and other particles will settle to the bottom of the settling tanks by gravity. The clear water is then filtered and disinfected with chlorine to make the water biologically safe. The pH is adjusted by adding lime to make the water non-corrosive, and fluoride is added to help prevent dental cavities.

Source Water Assessment Plan (SWAP):

During 2007, Fort Benning received its water from two surface water sources. From January 1 through March 8, 2007 the source water was the Upatoi Creek. From March 9 through December 31, 2007 the source water was from Lake Oliver on the Chattahoochee River. This is because Fort Benning began receiving it's drinking water from Columbus Water Works. Each source water has a source water assessment plan and both are presented below:

In the Spring of 2003, Fort Benning completed a Source Water Assessment Plan (SWAP) for the Fort Benning water treatment plant. The source water is the Upatoi Creek and the Upatoi Creek watershed above the source water intake. The SWAP is required by the Safe Drinking Water Act and Georgia Drinking Water Rules. The purpose of the Plan is to identify potential sources of contamination throughout the watershed, and determine the risk (susceptibility) that the sources pose to the Fort Benning water supply intake. The kinds of facilities, from where substances could be released to the Creek and make their way to the water intake, include gas stations in surrounding counties, Fort Benning sanitary sewer lift stations and pipelines, commercial carriers on paved roads, Fort Benning motorpools, CSX and Norfolk Southern Railroads, a Kelley Hill drum disposal site, and a salvage operation in Chattahoochee County. A complete list of all 81 potential Pollution Sources (PPS), their substances of concern, and the assessment methods is in the SWAP. Based on the assessment, the overall susceptibility of the drinking water supply intake is rated High.

Columbus Water Works completed a Source Water Assessment Plan (SWAP) in March 2001. The purpose of the Plan is to identify potential sources of contamination throughout the watershed, and determine the risk (susceptibility) that the sources pose to the Columbus water supply intake. The source water for Columbus is the Chattahoochee River and the Chattahoochee River watershed above the source water intake. Water sources were rated on their susceptibility to becoming polluted, such as proximity to major roadways (fuel/chemical spills), railways and agricultural runoff. Some sources from where substances could be released to the river and make their way to the water intake, include a marina with fuel station, sewer lift stations and pipelines, commercial and industrial areas, residential lawns and a golf course. Based on the assessment, the overall susceptibility of the drinking water supply intake is rated LOW. A complete list of all potential Pollution Sources (PPS), their substances of concern, and the assessment methods is in the SWAP. For more information on SWAP contact William Kent, Environmental Compliance Manager at (706) 649 - 3490 or wkent@cwwga.org.

COMMUNITY

Who's new to the Fort Benning community? C2

WWW.THEBAYONET.COM

According to Prevent Blindness America, the three types of fireworks that keep emergency rooms busy are bottle rockets, firecrackers and sparklers. Bottle rockets and firecrackers can fly in any direction before exploding, and sparklers burn at temperatures hot enough to melt gold. So be careful.

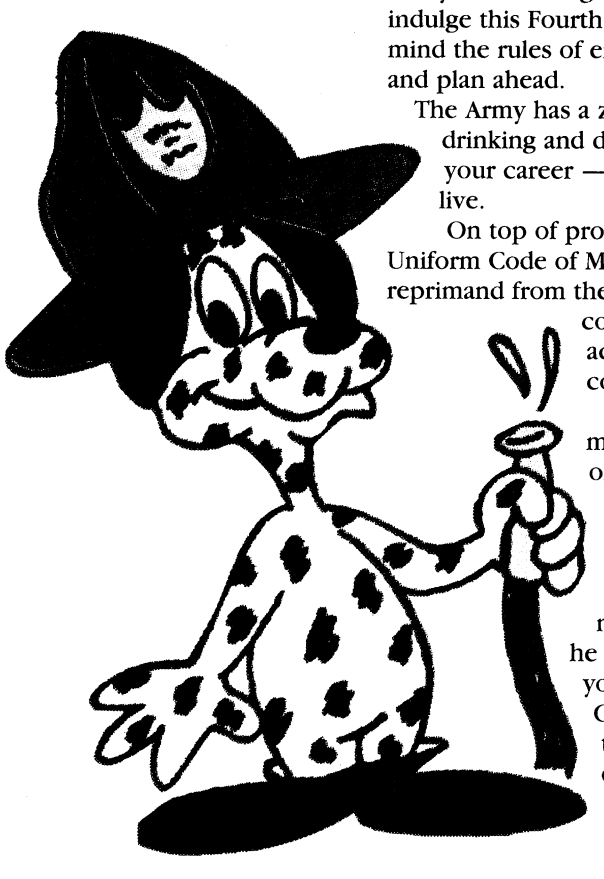
Independence Day fun:

How NOT to blow yourself up, get arrested, crack your skull open, put an eye out or set your dog on fire

THE BAYONET

Yep. It's that time of year again. Old Glory marks 232 years of independence July 4, and most of Fort Benning will have a nice, long four-day weekend to celebrate.

The landscape of any celebration can be spotted with dangers like exploding grills, driving fatigue, alcohol-induced stupors, fireworks mishaps and a wide range of other accidents.



One way to avoid having this year's Independence Day festivities take an ugly turn is to always put safety first.

It may seem ridiculous to conduct a risk assessment on your precious time off, but it doesn't take much, just a little common sense and some practical planning, to avoid trouble, said retired Command Sgt. Maj. Mike Kelso.

If you are of legal drinking age and plan to indulge this Fourth of July weekend, keep in mind the rules of engagement for alcohol use and plan ahead.

The Army has a zero-tolerance policy for drinking and driving that could cost you your career — if you are lucky enough to live.

On top of prosecution under the Uniform Code of Military Justice and a letter of reprimand from the commanding general, you could face up to an $800 fine, according to the recorder's court.

Capt. Kevin Pelley, the military police operations officer in charge 2004-2005, said drinking and driving is a serious offense and isn't taken lightly.

"Our mission is safety, not to ruin Soldiers' fun..." he said. "Have a plan before you even start drinking. Give your keys up before the alcohol sets in, get a dependable designated driver, have phone numbers for your chain of command and staff duty, and check with your unit and find out if they have a fund for paying for cab rides if you find you shouldn't be driving."

Alcohol-related accidents accounted for 17,448 deaths in 2001, according to the National Highway and Traffic Safety Administration.

Don't let yourself, your passengers or the innocent family you plow into become a statistic. Call Safety Cab at 706-527-7248, call a friend or just sit tight and sober up, but don't sit in your car.

"Sitting in your car while intoxicated, with or without the keys in the ignition, still constitutes a DUI," Pelley said.

Mixing fatigue and driving can be just as dangerous as drinking and driving, said Regis Beighley, the former post safety manager.

"Even if you are using stimulants containing caffeine, and you are sleep-deprived, you are still likely to have 'micro-sleeps,'" he said. "These are brief naps lasting only four or five seconds. At 55 mph, you travel more than 100 yards — that's plenty of time to kill you."

He said no matter how well you think you can drive without enough sleep, the dangers are real.

"A drowsy driver doesn't process information as fast or as accurately as an alert driver and is unable to react quickly enough to avoid most collisions," Beighley said. "Drowsiness also narrows a driver's field of vision, so that objects or people at the side of the road cannot be seen until it is too late."

If you decide to brave the holiday traffic, buckle up in your car. Seat belt use increases the chance of survival in an accident by 50 percent, according to the NHTSA, and it saves you the trouble of getting a $15 ticket.

Roadway accidents aren't the only way to cut your holiday weekend short.

Grill accidents account for more than 60 deaths and hundreds of injuries each year, according to the U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission. Almost all those accidents are attributed to user error.

Gas grill accidents can be avoided by following simple rules, like properly maintaining gas grill hoses and tanks, protecting tubing from grease drippings, storing tanks in an upright, cool location and following manufacturer's instructions for use, according to the USCPS's Web site. Take 15 minutes and do a quick check of your gear to ensure that when you hit that ignition button you aren't lighting up everything within a 20-foot radius.

Charcoal grills are generally safer than gas versions, but can be just as deadly if used improperly, according to the Web site.

Burning charcoal emits carbon monoxide, a colorless, odorless gas responsible for more than 20 grilling deaths a year. To avoid carbon monoxide poisoning, never use any grill inside a building, tent, vehicle or other structure where air circulation is compromised.

Using flammable liquids to accelerate the lighting of stubborn charcoal is another sure way to cause a flare-up and raise the risk of an emergency room visit for second- and third-degree burns.

Never use gasoline, acetone or any other highly flammable substance, other than lighter fluid, which is specifically marketed for that use.

Fireworks are yet another way to take a few layers of skin off, lose a finger or put an eye out. So if you live in Alabama or are traveling to a state where fireworks are permitted, follow common sense rules for use.

According to the National Council on Fireworks Safety, fireworks should never be lit while being held and should never be used to destroy bottles, cans or any other possible shrapnel-producing container.

A container of water or a hose should always be readily available to put out contact fires caused by fireworks, the council says.

Roman candles and similar types of fireworks should never be fired at people, animals, cars, homes, brush or anything that can be damaged by contact with a 700-degree projectile.

A reminder: Fireworks for personal use on Fort Benning are prohibited by U.S. Army Infantry Center Policy 210-5, Chapter 3-14.

Use of fireworks in these areas constitutes a crime, and you can be ticketed and fined more than $75, according to a Columbus Recorder's Court official.

The kids will probably be out, scampering around in full force for the holiday, too, so remember to make sure the little ones are supervised outside, in the pool and at large gatherings.

This Independence Day weekend can be a great time to reconnect with family and friends in the spirit of freedom and patriotism, but use your head, make sure that you put safety first and avoid a holiday disaster that could leave you blind, dead or unemployed.

Steering committee completes 10 AFAP issues

Enlisted promotion points submission, leave accrual among issues completed

FMWRC PUBLIC AFFAIRS
Margaret McKenzie

ALEXANDRIA, Va. — Ten of the 25 issues submitted to the General Officers Steering Committee through the Army Family Action Plan process were listed as completed at the GOSC conference June 5.

The issues completed or resolved were: dental services for retirees overseas; nonsubsidized reserve component group health and dental insurance; reserve component retired pay; leave accrual; enlisted promotion points submission; temporary lodging for single service members with partial custody/visitation; shortage of professional marriage and professional counselors; staffing to support the physical disability evaluation system; Army Community Service manpower and funding; and funding for the exceptional family member program respite care.

Six issues were deemed unattainable, and there were nine issues that remain active and will continue to be worked toward resolution. (See sidebar for details.)

Most of the issues were reflective of the mobilization and deployment operational tempo, Army Transformation and the Army's commitment to provide a better quality of life for military members and their families.

In his opening remarks, Secretary of the Army Pete Geren thanked everyone for the work they do to support the AFAP process.

"This is a critical time in the life of the Army," Geren said. "The contributions that you are all making are shaping our Army so that it works for the entire Army Family. I want to thank you very much for all you've done and look forward to continuing to work with you to advance your initiatives.

"This process is detailed and occasionally tedious," Geren said. "But this is the type of effort that's necessary in order to work through these issues and make them work for Soldiers' families."

He went on to thank the vice chief of staff of the Army and his wife, Gen. Richard and Vicky Cody, for the contributions they have made to the health of Army Families as part of the initiative to improve Army quality of life.

"Our Army could not have two greater champions for Soldiers and families than you and Vicky, so thank you for your extraordinary work and leadership," he said.

This is the eighth and last AFAP conference that Cody will chair. Under his watch, 53 issues have been completed, resulting in nine legislative changes, 21 DOD or Army policy changes, and 22 improved programs or services.

Some of the changes that the AFAP GOSC closed while Cody was the chair include: separate dental and vision insurance options for civilian employees; the implementation of family readiness support assistants to the battalion level, Armywide; access to military installations for family care plan providers; and expansion of education benefits for surviving spouses, to name just a few.

Cody also saw the inclusion of the Army Teen Panel and Wounded Warriors as active participants in the Army Family Action Plan process.

"You all have been great scouts on behalf of our families and our Soldiers and our civilians, active, guard and reserve, during a very historic time for our Army," Cody said. "Six years at war with an all volunteer force — those of us who came in during the Vietnam War scratched our heads and said, 'An all volunteer Army?' but look at where we've come.

"I do believe, and I've stated many times in testimony, that the center of gravity of this Global War on Terrorism is our ability to retain the all volunteer force," he said.

"Never in the history of our country have so many people been dependent on so few, and asked so few to carry such a heavy rucksack. That rucksack goes not just to the Soldier in the field but also to the family members who have now supported two, three, and four combat tours. What you do here is lighten that rucksack. You'll be 8,000 miles away from the combat zone, but your contributions here may be some of the most important things we do to sustain this all volunteer force."

He said that everything that goes on with the AFAP has a direct contribution to sustaining the strength of this force. Almost all of the programs are geared towards providing a better quality of life for Soldiers, families, and civilians; to maintain the strength of the Army.

"We say the Army is the strength of this nation," Cody said.

"It will only remain strong as long as we have young men and women and families that will support those who make the decision to defend this country. Our soldiers deployed in combat need to know that their families are being well taken care of. They don't need to be burdened and worried about anything other than focusing on their mission. So by providing programs that they have confidence in is really providing the strength that we have. Your work is very, very important."

Jeffrey J. Mellinger, Command Sergeant Major for Army Material Command praised the process of taking the issues raised by Soldiers and their Families to senior leaders for resolution.

"This process is absolutely critical," said Mellinger.

"It raises the concerns and issues and from our Army Family. It lets those voices be heard. Sometimes Soldiers don't always get a voice, they figure out how to make it work and just go on with it.

"However, AFAP allows us to raise concerns to the levels of our leadership that we wouldn't ordinarily get a venue with. Really, this gets the voice of that brand new spouse, the brand new private or the new lieutenant heard at national levels. Not every issue makes it here, but at the end of the day, this is an awesome process."

The Family and Morale, Welfare and Recreation Command in Alexandria, Va., oversees the Army Family Action Plan program and sustains and maintains the ongoing AFAP process. In its 25th year of giving a voice to issues affecting Soldiers and families and the civilians who serve, AFAP addresses real time concerns and continues to re-examine programs and processes and recommend changes that are flexible, responsive and timely to the needs of Soldiers and families.

Empowering Soldiers and families through the AFAP process will continue to raise the bar for Army standards of living. Tailoring the AFAP process to the unique requirement of the Army National Guard and the U.S. Army Reserve will create real-time solutions for concerns that their Soldiers and families face, as well.

"Of all the things I've been associated with," Cody said, "this AFAP process, and what you've been able to do, has been probably the most rewarding for me professionally in the last four or five years. You make a difference for the people that count, so God bless you all."

The next GOSC meeting, conducted concurrently with the worldwide AFAP conference, is scheduled for Jan. 27, 2009 in Alexandria, Va.

The 10 issues considered resolved or completed were:

•Dental services for retirees overseas: The Tricare Retiree Dental Plan contract was re-awarded to Delta Dental for an additional five years and will become effective on Oct. 1, 2008. The new contract authorizes retirees living outside the Continental United States to enroll in the dental plan.

•Nonsubsidized reserve component group health and dental insurance: The National Defense Authorization Act for fiscal year 2005 established the Tricare Reserve Select program, a shared premium-based health care benefit for National Guard and Reserve members and their Families.

This act required military members to agree to serve for the coverage selection period. The coverage had a three tiered payment scale. The NDAA for fiscal year 2007 eliminated the tier levels, the requirement for annual service agreements and extended the TRS benefits to Selected Reserve members and their Families. The program, implemented October 2007, requires that members enrolled in the TRS must continue to serve in the Selected Reserve.

•Reserve component retired pay: Reserve component retired Soldiers do not receive retirement pay until age 60. The 2008 National Defense Authorization Act allows for early or retired pay benefits for Reserve component Soldiers based on the amount of time spent mobilized in support of contingency operations. Section 647 of the ACT describes the new Reserve Soldier retirement benefit program and eligibility.

•Leave accrual: Effective Oct. 1, 2008 the National Defense Authorization Act allows an increase in annual leave carryover to 75 days from 60 days. On Jan. 1, 2011 leave carryover reverts back to 60 days. Special leave accrual rules were also amended for Soldiers deployed to hostile fire/imminent danger areas, allowing them to retain leave for four fiscal years instead of three. Also, Soldiers serving in support of a contingency may retain earned leave for two years instead of one.

•Enlisted promotion points submission: A new automated system was initiated Oct., 2007 that allows Soldiers to update limited aspects of their promotion points as points are earned using the Army Knowledge Online portal. The self-service DA Form 3355 eliminates the requirement to accumulate 20 promotion points prior to an evaluation. Soldiers are now being considered for promotion based on the accumulation of all points as they are earned.

•Temporary lodging for single service members with partial custody/visitation: Service members with partial custody can now make lodging reservations up to 10 days in advance for visiting dependants. Before, there was a zero day advance reservation if service members who live in barracks had dependants visiting. The other services have agreed with this recommendation and the policy was signed and became effective in May.

•Shortage of professional marriage and professional counselors: The number of marriage and Family therapists in under-served areas increased to 46 in the U.S. and 14 overseas. Based on utilization data, modifications to staffing locations will be made if needed.

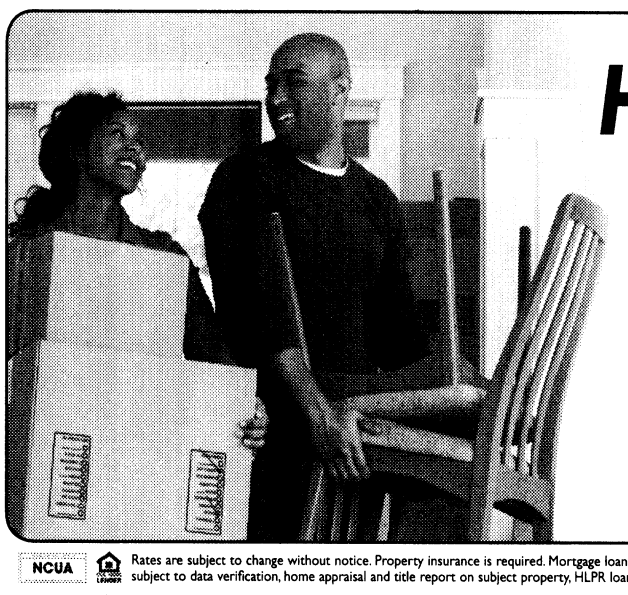
•Staffing to support the physical disability evaluation system: Work is being done to provide hiring actions to support warrior transition units and physical evaluation board liaison officers within medical treatment facilities. This issue is being addressed in the Army Medical Action Plan and will be monitored by the Surgeon General's Office of Warrior Care and Transition and is no longer considered an AFAP action.

•Army Community Service manpower and funding: ACS received funding of $33.6 million to cover staffing shortages of 477 positions. Global War on Terrorism funds are being used in fiscal year 2008 and supplemental funding is included for positions in fiscal year 2009. The United States Army Manpower Analysis Agency approved the ACS staffing models and the Installation Management Command has provided authorizations and funding for all ACS positions according to USAMAA staffing guidelines.

•Funding for the exceptional family member program respite care: Family and Morale Welfare and Recreation Command received funding of $8.2 million for respite care for Families with exceptional Family members. Of the $8.2 million, $6 million has already been used for respite care in 2008.

The six issues determined to be unattainable were:

•Tricare dental benefits enhancement.
•Tricare coverage for school requirement enrollment physicals.
•Emergency relief for reserve component.
•Mortgage relief for mobilized reserve component service members.
•Running shoe allowance.
•Employment opportunities for military affiliated youth.



The nine issues that remain active and will continue to be worked toward resolution include:

•Army wellness centers.
•Completion of the deployment cycle support program by individual returnees.
•Funding for barracks sustainment, restoration, and modernization.
•Comprehensive behavioral health program for children.
•Medical care access for non-dependant caregivers for severely wounded Soldiers.
•Federal hiring process for wounded warriors.
•Traumatic service members' group life insurance for post traumatic stress disorder, traumatic brain injury and uniplegia.
•Operations security training for family members.

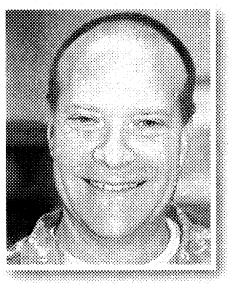
Deal with anger through prayer, play, communication

CHAPLAIN FAMILY LIFE CENTER
Chaplain (Maj.) Richard Garvey

He stared at his shoes and tried not to let his frustration show.



He'd survived Iraq. He'd made it home. He has a supportive wife. He has two beautiful children. He's got tax free money in the bank. He's got a stable career with Uncle Sam.

And yet he's angry ... very, very angry. And he just doesn't know why.

The kids haven't done anything that kids haven't done thousands of times before, yet he goes off like an IED: sudden, scary, shaking.

His wife tries her best to soothe the storm that's in him, yet that just seems to make the cauldron boil even more until he snaps and she sobs.

Well-meaning friends ask how he's doing and even that just seems to exaggerate the gap between where he's been and where he is and where everybody else has been and where everybody else seems to be. And he's angry ... very, very angry. And he just doesn't know why.

For some, homecoming is nothing but banners and blessings. But for others, homecoming can be a bit of a cruel puzzle.

Take the Soldier who says, "I know I should be happy. I know I should, but I'm not. I mean, I'm glad to be back, but it's like I'm not all the way back here. A big part of me is still there; and the part of me that's here has a very thin skin. Stuff just sets me off, and I don't know why."

Oddly enough, anger is a fairly common emotion associated with coming home. It usually unpacks its bags within just a few days of joy.

What do you do when anger rears its ugly head? How do you handle the unexpected twins of agitation and frustration when they won't take no for an answer? Well, take some tips from warriors who have gone before you and try these three steps.

1. Pray — For many Soldiers, if not most, prayer was a key component in making it through a year of combat. And that same skill that got you from day-to-day "there" with all its dangers and perils is the same skill that can help you from day-to-day "here."

There's no better way to deal with the anger that's going on inside of you than by accessing a bigger power that's outside of you.

Try this question with God: "God, help me out here. What's really at the root of this anger that's brewing in me?"

2. Play — But don't just pray, go ahead and play. Lots of Soldiers I talk to feel as if their "tank" has run dry. They don't just need recreation, they need re-creation as their tanks are filled back to capacity.

What is something you've enjoyed in the past that you'd like to enjoy again? What gives you energy when you do it? If you had all the time and money in the world, what would you do anyway, just because you get such a kick out of it? Ease the anger by finding a constructive, not destructive, way to play.

3. Stay — Stay connected. Sometimes it's easy to feel as if nobody else understands exactly what you've been through. And guess what, they don't. They'll understand even less if you don't share your experiences, thoughts and feelings with them.

Ask yourself this question, "If I were in their shoes, what would be most helpful for me to share with them to help them understand what I'm feeling?

Do you need any personal coaching with praying, playing or staying connected with those you love?

Call the Chaplain Family Life Center, which offers caring, confidential counseling to Soldiers, couples, and families, at 706-545-1760.

Our caring staff is here to help with your journey.

OFFICE OF THE STAFF JUDGE ADVOCATE
Kate A. Suh

To become a citizen, certain requirements and qualifications must be met. These include good moral character, knowledge of the English language, knowledge of U.S. government and history and allegiance to the U.S. Constitution. Eligible members of the U.S.Armed Forces are exempt from other citizenship requirements, including residency and physical presence in the United States. Members who have served during peacetime may be eligible for citizenship if they have served honorably for at least one year, obtained lawful permanent resident status and meet other qualifications.

Veterans of past wars and conflicts are also eligible for citizenship. Aliens who have served honorably on active duty in the U.S. Armed Forces or as a member of the Selected Ready Reserve on or after Sept. 11, 2001, can apply for immediate citizenship. Posthumous citizenship is available for active-duty military personnel who die while serving in the U.S. Armed Forces.

Each military installation has a designated POC to assist with filing the military naturalization application packet. The Legal Assistance Division, Office of the Staff Judge Advocate has staff that can advise and refer Soldiers on citizenship matters. Eligible clients are encouraged to contact the LAD, OSJA, located at Building 5, 6970 Vibbert Ave., to schedule an appointment. The LAD can also be reached by telephone at 706-545-3281. Anyone interested may also obtain more information from the following Internet address: www.uscis.gov/files/article/MilitaryBrochurev7.pdf.

Need to file taxes?

The Tax Center will be open July 8-11 to help Soldiers who've returned from deployment file their taxes.

For more information, call 706-545-3281.

Home Safety Council offers tips to reduce accidents

FIRSTALERT.COM

AURORA, Ill. — With schools out for the summer, many families will be spending more time at home. The increased time and activities at home can also increase the chance of being injured, something experienced by one out of every four families, according to a recent Home Safety Council survey.

To help families reduce accidents and injuries at home, First Alert and the Home Safety Council are working together to urge families to take stock of their home safety plans.

"Now is an ideal time for families to spend a few hours together to prepare their homes inside and outside for a fun and family-oriented summer," said Debbie Hanson, director of external affairs at First Alert. "Reviewing potential risks with every member of our family and taking proper precautions through a room-by-room safety audit will increase your knowledge and reduce the risk of serious injury."

The Home Safety Council Safety Survey finds that nearly half (46 percent) of respondents have not taken any action to prevent the leading causes of home injury.

The Home Safety Council and First Alert suggest the following easy-to-follow tips that can help keep family members, friends and loved ones safe this summer:

Fire Safety & Escape Planning

- Install smoke alarms in every bedroom and on every level of the home.
- Test smoke alarms at least once a month.
- Change the batteries in smoke alarms at least once a year or when the low-battery signal chirps.
- Never remove batteries from smoke alarms, unless replacing them with fresh ones. Otherwise, it is easy to forget to replace them, leaving you unprotected from fire.
- Keep a fire extinguisher in your kitchen and near other areas where a fire could occur, such as in a workshop, garage or near the grill.
- Create and practice a home escape plan at least twice a year, making sure everyone is involved — from kids to grandparents.

Poison Prevention

- Install carbon monoxide alarms on every level and outside each sleeping area.
- Never operate fossil fuel burning appliances, such as a gas grill, indoors or in the garage — even with the garage door open.
- Inspect the pilot lights on natural gas appliances to ensure the flame is blue. When a flame is mostly yellow in color, it is likely producing carbon monoxide.
- Clean out the lint and debris that may build up in the clothes dryer vent that leads to the outside of the house.
- Never leave an automobile running in a garage, even with the garage door open.

Home Security

- Keep doors and windows locked and don't forget the garage and shed.
- Make sure locks are functioning properly and that everyone inside the home can open them.
- Keep bushes and shrubs trimmed under windows so burglars can't hide.
- Don't leave equipment, tools, bikes or toys in the yard.
- Cancel mail and newspaper delivery while on vacation.

Backyard & Garage

- Designate the grilling area a "no play zone," keeping kids and pets well away until equipment is completely cool.
- Check grill connections, such as fuel lines, for leaks and never operate the grill closer than three feet from the home, trees, shrubs or other objects.
- Keep children away from pools, ponds or ditches.
- Tie down outdoor furniture and equipment prior to severe storms to help prevent debris from taking flight.

"Conducting a home safety audit can help identify potential danger areas of the home and where to properly place safety and security equipment for maximum protection," said Meri-K Appy, president of the Home Safety Council. "It also gives homeowners the opportunity to prepare in advance for emergencies and develop appropriate escape and preparedness plans to reduce the threat of accidents and injuries."

Corn toss 'family fun'

THE BAYONET
Cheryl Rodewig

It's the most fun you'll ever have with a bag of corn.

Cornhole, often called corn toss, may have originated in 14th-century Germany, according to the American Cornhole Association, but it has become a southern tradition.

The goal is to get the bag in the hole, for three points, or on the platform, for one point. Contestants usually play to 21 with throws in the hole and on the board canceling out opponents' points, but any number can be used.

It may seem like child's play, but corn toss is more challenging than it looks. A hole cut into a slanted board 30 feet away might appear like an easy target for a corn bag, but too much strength or too little finesse will make the bag stop short of the goal or send it sliding off the board entirely.

1st Sgt. Billy Paul, A Company, Warrior Training Center, has been practicing his corn toss technique for a year now. He loved it from the start.

"I went to a cookout where they were playing it and saw that it was something fun for the whole family, so I built my own the next day," he said. "I made the boards in the morning, and we were out playing that afternoon."

Paul, whose board is decorated in blue and gold in honor of the Michigan Wolverines, suggested making your own board and painting it to personalize it.

Boards and bags are available online in regular and collapsible styles, but it's easy to design your own. The materials for the board and two legs cost Paul less than $30, and his wife sewed the corn bags. Though it may not be true to the spirit of the game, beans can be used in place of corn kernels.

Games are often played in teams, and with enough people, a tournament can start in no time. As to who can play, that's "anybody who enjoys outdoor picnics and family fun," said Sgt. 1st Class Bobby Hicks, logistics NCO for the Ranger Training Brigade,

THE BAYONET
Rachel L. Watkins

In 1909 Helen Plane, president of the Daughters of the Confederacy, wanted to pay tribute to Gen. Robert E. Lee, so she spearheaded a campaign to have a monument carved into a mountain made of stone. President Jefferson Davis and Lt. Gen. Thomas Stonewall Jackson were added later. The monument spans 3.5 acres and cuts 40 feet deep into a massive rock face at Stone Mountain Park, Ga. The mountain is the world's largest free-standing piece of exposed granite. The park is about two and a half hours northeast of Fort Benning.

I grew up on the outskirts of Atlanta and going to Stone Mountain Park has been a family tradition since I was 8 years old.

Last weekend, I took my fiancé Bryan camping there. But before we got there, Bryan wanted to know why we were driving two and a half hours to sleep outside by a big rock mountain. Tradition!

At the end of the weekend, he was happy because there was more to do than just camp and look at the carving.

Stone Mountain is the kind of place where visitors can get their fix of nature and

BOOK REVIEW

American heroes remembered in three books

BAYONET CORRESPONDENT
Don DeNevi

Three exceptionally well-written Army biographies have arrived in recent weeks focusing much needed attention upon some long-forgotten American heroes.

In Pershing (Palgrave Macmillan, $22), author Jim Lacey, an analyst at the Institute for Defense Analyses who wrote "Takedown" and "Fresh From the Fight," explores with care and clarity the often contradictory personality of a man who rose from the ranks of Indian fighter to five star general.

Considered by some as our nation's greatest military leader of the twentieth century, John J. Pershing planned, developed and led a 2-million man Army in defending the critical Meuse-Argonne, thereby turning the tide of World War I. With a cogent foreword from Gen. Wesley K. Clark, the 200-page softcover is a model of concise, fast-moving writing which holds the interest of layman and serious military buff alike.

Equally readable for its narrative style is author Alan Axelrod's Bradley (Palgrave Macmillan, $22). Nicknamed "The G.I. General" by the media during World War II because of his deep interpersonal relationships with not only his immediate staffs but also the troops he commanded, Omar Bradley rose through the ranks to command the U.S. 12th Army Group and its 1.3 million servicemen.

In late 1943 and early 1944, Bradley was one of the instrumental forces in planning the Normandy invasion, setting the stage for Nazi Germany's unconditional surrender. Axelrod, who authored Business Week's bestseller "Patton In Leadership" and Palgrave Macmillan's "Patton," exhibits a thorough acquaintance with his subject, offering readers dozens of illuminative sketches on the heart and soul of America's least valued (and last) five star general.

In Bill Mauldin — A Life Up Front (W.W. Norton, $28), Todd DePastino paints a vivid portrait of one of the world's most popular war cartoonists. For the hundreds of thousands of enlisted men in World War II, to say nothing of the countless civilians on the homefront, the comments of Willie and Joe, two iconic characters depicting the plight of ordinary tired and dreary foot Soliders, were the sources of endless snickers and chuckles as they bravely fought, rested and ridiculed the hypocrisy of the military's top brass.

Courtesy photo

Angelina Jolie stars as Fox in Wanted. The movie, which opens today, also features Morgan Freeman and James McAvoy.

WALL-E

After hundreds of lonely years of doing what he was built for, Wall-E (short for Waste Allocation Load Lifter Earth-Class) discovers a new purpose in life (besides collecting knick-knacks) when he meets a sleek search robot named Eve who realizes that Wall-E has stumbled upon the key to the planet's future.

She races back to space to report her findings to the humans (who have been awaiting word that it is safe to return home).

Wall-E is rated G.

WANTED

Wes (James McAvoy) is a 25-year-old disaffected, cube-dwelling drone and disengaged slacker. His boss chews him out hourly, his girlfriend ignores him and his life plods on interminably. There is little for Wes to do but while away the days and die in his slow, clock-punching rut — until he meets a woman named Fox (Angelina Jolie). Morgan Freeman is Sloan.

Wanted is rated R for bloody violence throughout, pervasive language and sexuality.

ALSO PLAYING

GET SMART

Maxwell Smart (Steve Carell) is on a mission to thwart the latest plot for world domination by the evil crime syndicate known as KAOS. When the headquarters of U.S. spy agency Control is attacked and the identities of its agents compromised, the Chief (Alan Arkin) has no choice but to promote his ever-eager analyst Maxwell Smart, who has always dreamt of working in the field alongside stalwart superstar Agent 23 (Dwayne "The Rock" Johnson). Smart is partnered instead with the only other agent whose identity has not been compromised: the lovely-but-lethal veteran Agent 99 (Anne Hathaway).

Get Smart is rated PG-13 for rude humor, action violence and language.

THE LOVE GURU

Pitka (Mike Myers) is an American who was left at the gates of an ashram in India as a child and raised by gurus. He moves back to the U.S. to seek fame and fortune in the world of self-help and spirituality.

His unorthodox methods are tested when he must settle a rift between Toronto Maple Leafs star hockey player Darren Roanoke (Romany Malco) and his estranged wife.

After the split, Roanoke's wife starts dating L.A. Kings star Jacques Grande (Justin Timberlake) out of revenge, sending her husband into a major professional skid — to the horror of the teams' owner Jane Bullard (Jessica Alba) and Coach Cherkov (Verne Troyer).

The Love Guru is rated PG-13 for crude and sexual content, language, comic violence and drug references.

THE INCREDIBLE HULK

Scientist Bruce Banner (Edward Norton) hunts for a cure to the gamma radiation that poisoned his cells and unleashes the rage within him. Living in the shadows, cut off from the life he knew and the woman he loves, Banner struggles to avoid the pursuit of his nemesis, General Thaddeus "Thunderbolt" Ross (William Hurt).

As all three tangle with the secrets of the Hulk's creation, they are confronted with a new adversary known as The Abomination, whose strength even exceeds the Hulk's. To stop it, the scientist must make the choice to accept the peaceful life of Bruce Banner, or find heroism in the creature he holds inside.

The Incredible Hulk is rated PG-13 for violence and suggestive content.

THE HAPPENING

A family is on the run from an inexplicable and unstoppable event that threatens not only humankind, but the most basic human instinct of them all, survival. Mike Wahlberg stars as Eliot Moore.

The Happening is rated R for violent and disturbing images.

KUNG FU PANDA

When threatened by a gang of snow leopards, the jungle animals call upon an inept panda (Jack Black) to become a kung fu master and save the Valley of Peace.

The animated movie also stars Dustin Hoffman, Jackie Chan, Ian McShane, Lucy Liu, Angelina Jolie, David Cross and Seth Rogen.

SEX AND THE CITY

Carrie (Sarah Jessica Parker), Samantha (Kim Cattrall), Charlotte (Kristin Davis) and Miranda (Cynthia Nixon) continue their adventures as they live their lives in Manhattan four years after the series ended.

Sex and the City is rated R for sexual content, nudity and language.

YOU DON'T MESS WITH THE ZOHAN

He romances his clients by giving them "special services" in the back room. However, he is eventually recognized and risks losing his newfound life and career.

This film is rated PG-13 for crude and sexual content, language and nudity.

THE STRANGERS

Three mysterious strangers terrorize a young couple (Liv Tyler and Scott Speedman) in a remote house after they return from a wedding.

The Strangers is rated R for violence, terror and language.

INDIANA JONES AND THE KINGDOM OF THE CRYSTAL SKULL

THE CHRONICLES OF NARNIA: PRINCE CASPIAN

One year later, the kings and queens of Narnia find themselves back in Narnia, only to discover that more than 1,300 years have passed in Narnian time. During their absence, Narnia has been conquered by the Telmarines and is now under the control of the evil King Miraz (Sergio Castellitto).

The four children soon meet Narnia's rightful heir to the throne, Prince Caspian (Ben Barnes), who has been forced into hiding as his uncle Miraz plots to kill him. With the help of a mouse, a badger and a Black Dwarf, the Narnians embark to find Aslan, rescue Narnia and restore the land.

This film is rated PG for action and violence.

SPEED RACER

Born to race cars, Speed Racer's (Emile Hirsch) only real competition is the memory of the brother he idolized — the legendary Rex Racer, whose death in a race has left behind a legacy that Speed is driven to fulfill.

When Speed turns down a lucrative and tempting offer from Royalton Industries, he infuriates the company's maniacal owner and discovers some of the biggest races are being fixed. The only way for Speed to save his family's business and the sport he loves is to win the death-defying, cross-country rally known as The Crucible.

Speed Racer is rated PG for action, violence, language and smoking.

WHAT HAPPENS IN VEGAS

Two people (Cameron Diaz and Ashton Kutcher) discover they've gotten married following a night of debauchery in Vegas, with one of them winning a jackpot after playing the other's quarter. The pair tries to undermine each other and get their hands on the money, falling in love along the way.

This film is rated PG-13 for sexual and crude content, language and a drug reference.

IRON MAN

Tony Stark (Robert Downey Jr.) is a billionaire industrialist and genius inventor who is kidnapped and forced to build a devastating weapon. Instead, using his intelligence and ingenuity, Tony builds a high-tech suit of armor and escapes captivity. When he uncovers a plot with global implications, he dons his powerful armor and vows to protect the world as Iron Man.

Iron Man is rated PG-13 for sequences of sci-fi action and violence.

MADE OF HONOR

Tom Bailey (Patrick Dempsey) is in love with his best friend Claire (Michelle Monaghan). But Tom has a fear of commitment and refuses to admit that he should propose to Claire before she finds a less procrastinating suitor.

When Colin (Kevin McKidd), a rich Scotsman asks Claire for her hand in marriage, Tom must witness her unquestioned happiness up close and personal — because she's chosen him to be her maid of honor.

STREET KINGS

Tom Ludlow (Keanu Reeves), a veteran LAPD detective, sets out to discover the killers of his former partner, Detective Terrance Washington. Ludlow's supervisor, Captain Wander (Forest Whitaker), must keep him within the confines of the law and out of the clutches of Internal Affairs Captain Biggs (Hugh Laurie). Ludlow teams up with a young homicide detective to track Washington's killers through Los Angeles and bring them to justice.

This film is rated R for violence and language.

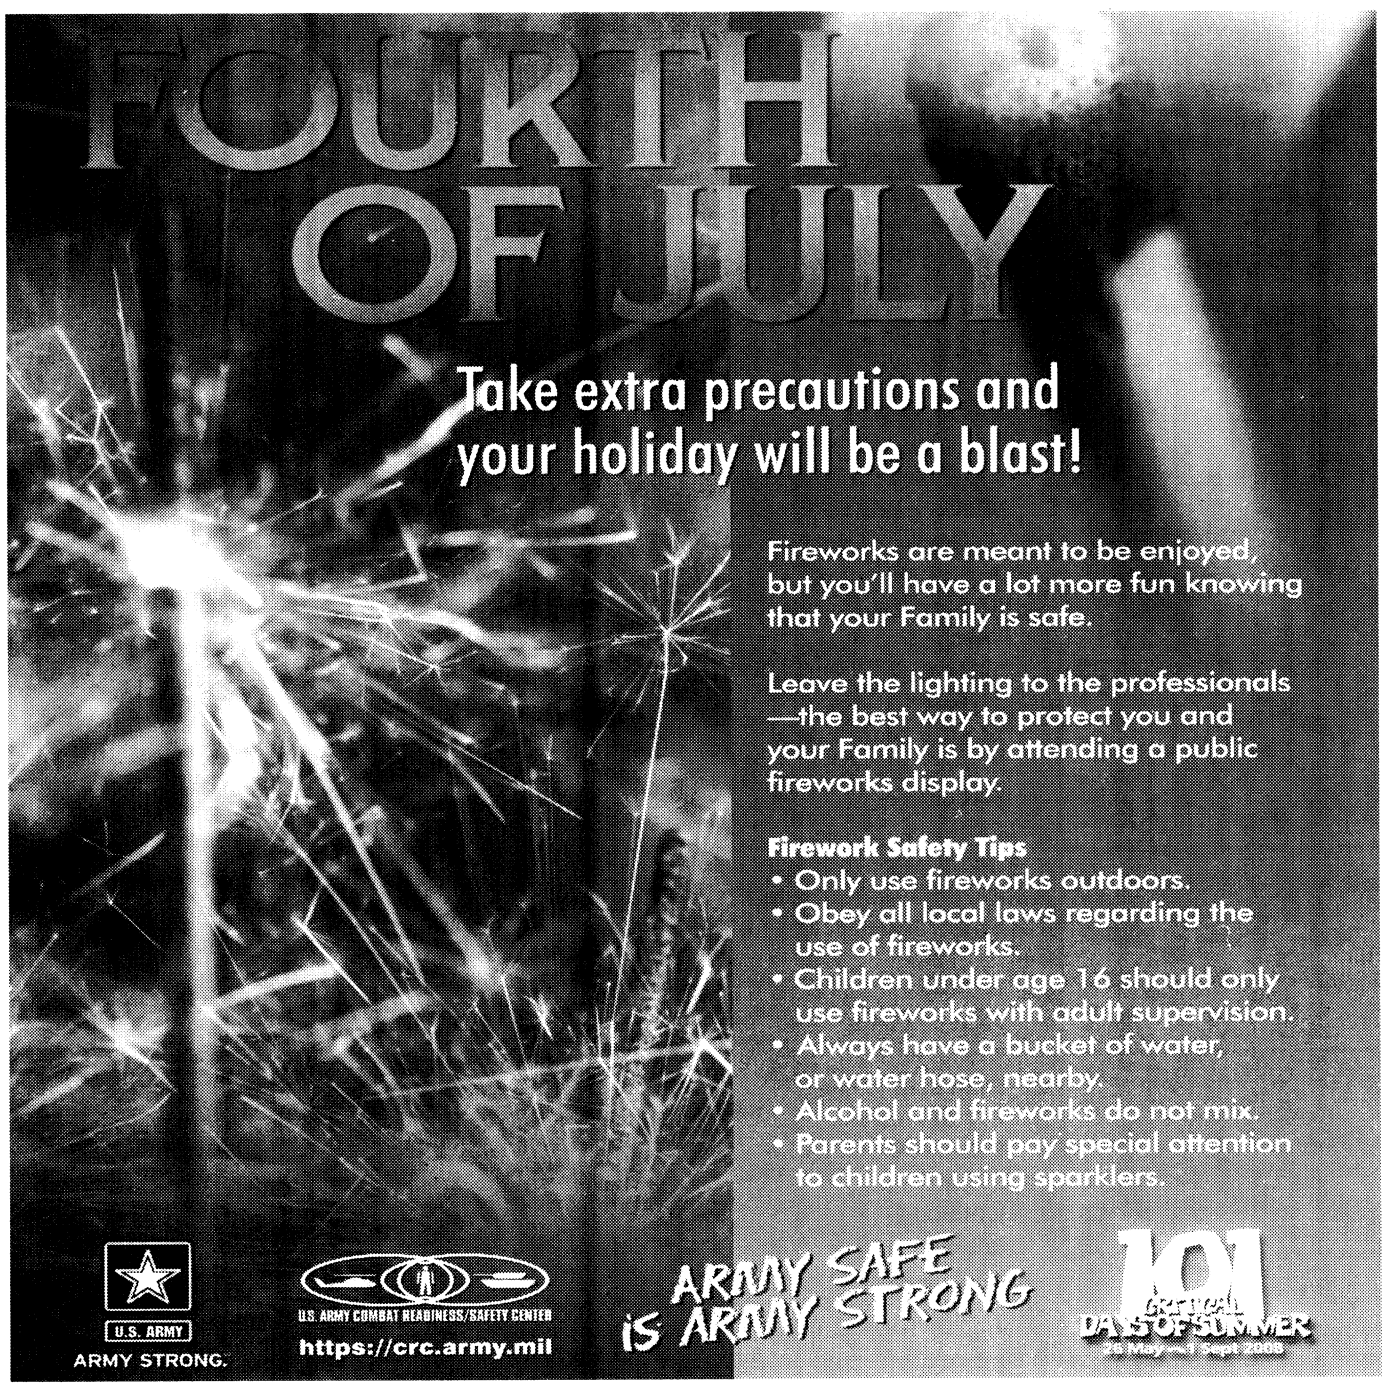
The Commodores to perform at Independence Day celebration

THE BAYONET
Rachel L. Watkins

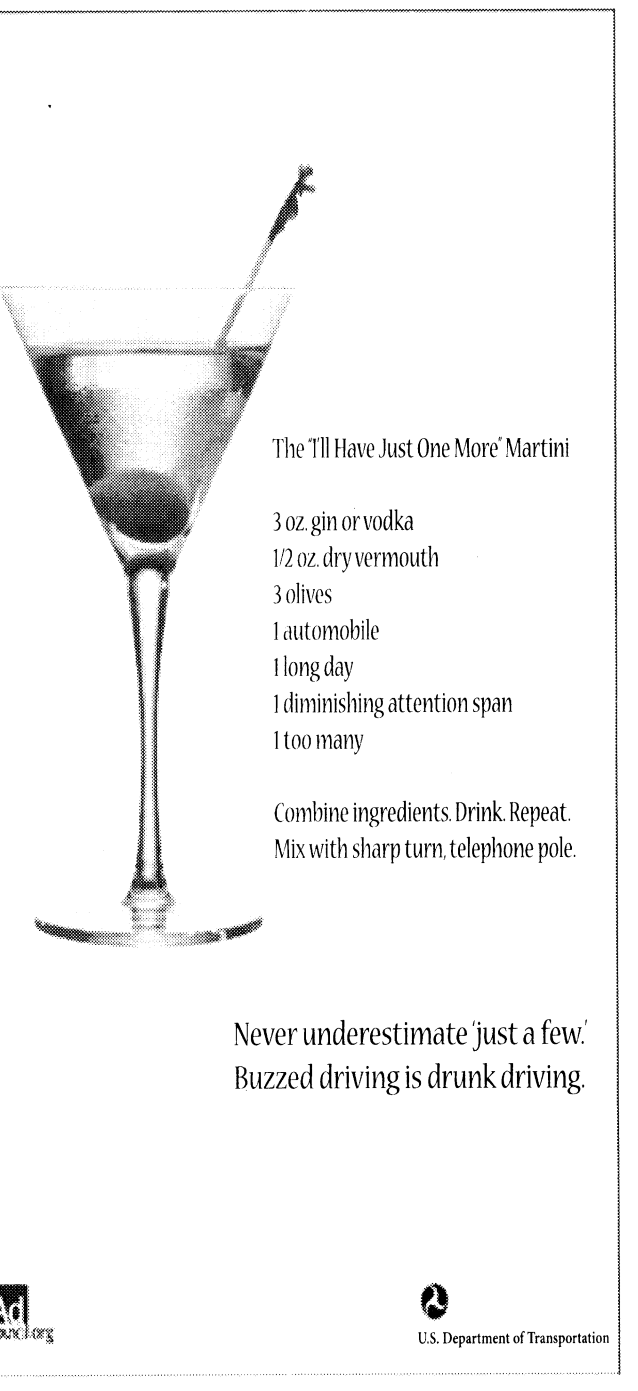
Fort Benning's largest celebration of the year will start at 3 p.m. Saturday on York Field. The annual Independence Day celebration will include performances by the Commodores, known for their hits Brick House, Machine Gun, Say Yeah, Fancy Dancer and Too Hot to Trot.

"It's not every day you get to see legends of Motown for free," said Shannon Poole, marketing director for the Directorate of Family and Morale, Welfare and Recreation.

The Commodores met at Tuskegee Institute in 1968 and signed with Motown in 1971 after they opened for the Jackson 5. In 1986, they made the charts with Goin' to the Bank.



The Commodores won a Grammy for best R & B performance by a duo or group with vocals with Nightshift.



The former six-person group, which once included Lionel Richie, is now three — Walter "Clyde" Orange, William "WAK" King and J.D.Nicholas.

The Commodores will perform after the 6 p.m. performance of country singer Katie Rae Davis and Southern rock artist Gary Nichols. Other activities include a SPIES and FRIES demonstrations from the Rangers, demonstrations by Mixed Martial Arts and Ultimate Fighting Championship fighters, and a fireworks show. The children can have unlimited play on inflatables for $7 or make arts and crafts. Attendees are encouraged to bring blankets and chairs, Poole said.

Admission is free, and the event is open to the public. If coming from off post, visitors are not required to stop at the visitor's center, but they must show identification at the gate. Parking will be available at Infantry Hall and by the Airborne Walk. If it rains, the event will still take place but the fireworks show will be postponed until Sunday.

For more information, directions or a schedule of events, go to http://benningmwr.com/index31905.htm or call 706-545-4499.

Georgia's historic sites offer holiday celebrations

More than fireworks celebrate Independence Day at forts, presidential retreats, plantations

GEORGIA STATE PARKS & HISTORIC SITES

ATLANTA — One of America's original 13 colonies offers 13 historic sites and five historic parks for families to experience this Fourth of July with sights and sounds from yesteryear.

This holiday weekend, Georgia's historic sites will celebrate the birth of our nation with festivities that include canon and musket firings, blacksmithing, historical games, arts, crafts, food, guided tours and more.

"Heading to a historic site for the Fourth gives families a chance to experience the day from a whole new perspective," said Sally Winchester, marketing and communications manager for Georgia State Parks and Historic Sites.

"You can almost step back in time when you hear the cannons or muskets, when you visit a Victorian home, walk through a battlefield or listen to the story of the country's first gold rush," she said. "We're thankful to be able to share our nation's history — our history — through these amazing sites."

Located throughout the state, Georgia's historic sites are categorized into six themes for the celebration, each from a different time in the state's history: Native American, plantations, Civil War, unique homes, coastal forts and colonial Georgia, and gold rush.

The Fourth of July celebration at the Dahlonega Gold Museum Historic Site in Dahlonega, Ga., will include a formal flag raising, patriotic speeches, Appalachian music, arts and crafts, food, skits, a parade and a fireworks show at dark.

The celebration at Fort McAllister Historic Park in Richmond Hill, Ga., will celebrate with the troops of Fort McAllister. Cannon firings, musket firings, blacksmithing and historical games will last throughout the afternoon.

The Independence Day Colonial Fair at Fort Morris Historic Site in Midway, Ga., will have colonial games and contests, colonial music, musket and cannon firings and more. Prizes will be awarded to all participants. The day is sponsored by the City of Flemington, Ga.

The Ol' Time Fourth at Jarrell Plantation Historic Site in Juliette, Ga., will feature a noon reading of the Declaration of Independence, followed by a three-legged race, sack race, egg toss and tug-of-war. Demonstrations of traditional crafts and skills will be ongoing throughout the program.

The program invites Georgians, especially families and children, to take part in family-friendly, nature-based, healthy outdoor recreation in the beautiful, secure surroundings of Georgia's state parks and historic sites. More information can be found online at www.GetOutdoorsGeorgia.org or by calling 800-864-7275.

Stone Mountain: Offers demonstrations, laser show

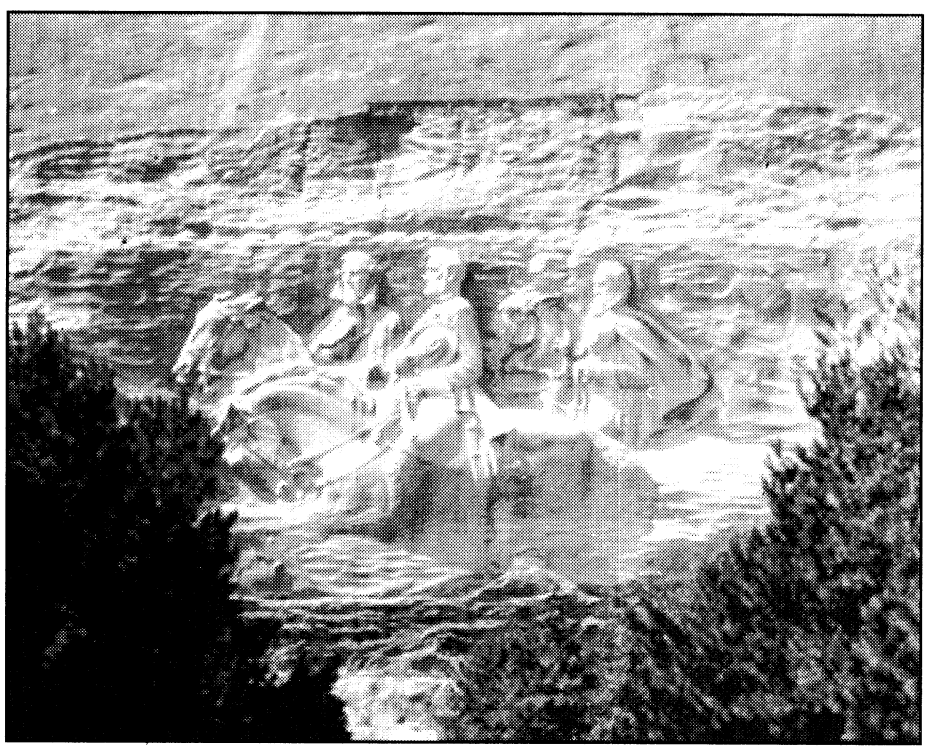
When I was a youngster, my family would take blankets and sit with hundreds of other people by the mountain under the summer sky and watch the laser light show spectacular projected on the carving. I love it just as much now as I did when I was a child. My favorite part of the show was when Lee, Davis and Jackson were outlined with lasers so it looked like they were riding off the carving. New songs have been added to the show but some songs, including Georgia on My Mind and Devil Went Down to Georgia, are still in it. The show starts at 9:30 p.m. daily and runs until Aug. 10.



After that, the schedule varies. Be sure to get there early to get the best seats.

My trip wasn't complete until I rode to the top of the mountain and had a drink and a pretzel at the snack bar (a tradition for me and my sisters). Mountain visitors can enjoy the view from the park at the foot of the mountain or ride the Summit sky ride to the 1,683-foot summit. On a clear day, you can see beyond Atlanta to the Appalachian Mountains.

The newest $1 million addition to the park is for people who like climbing. Sky Hike is a four-level obstacle course including balance beams and wooden bridges. For a more relaxing ride, visitors can hop on a 1940s locomotive train and listen to a narration of what life used to be like when trains were the main mode of transportation and the history of trains. The train ride is five miles around the mountain. I like the ride because it gives riders a chance to enjoy nature.

Despite burning my fingers on a propane lantern and getting a few bug bites, the trip was a great time to experience attractions and sit by the fire, eat s'mores and have good conversation without the interruption of televisions. It proved to be a great weekend getaway from Columbus.

From the park, you can take a shuttle to the attractions. The cost for an adventure pass, which includes most of the attractions, is $25 for adults, $22 for military and $20 for children ages 3 to 11. The parking fee is $10 on holidays and $8 every other day. For more information, directions or a list of attractions, go to www.stonemountainpark.com or call 800-401-2407.

In 1909 Helen Plane, president of the Daughters of the Confederacy, wanted to pay tribute to Gen. Robert E. Lee, so she spearheaded a campaign to have a monument carved into a mountain made of stone. President Jefferson Davis, and Lt. Gen. Thomas Stonewall Jackson were added later. The monument cuts 40 feet into a massive rock face at Stone Mountain Park.

Biographies: Tell trials, tribulations of war leaders

Illustrated with some 90 of Mauldin's best cartoons and featuring a number of rare photographs, the 250 page hardcover presents in depth for the first time the tormented, yet always creative, mind of the man behind the drawings. As a freelance cartoonist, Mauldin joined the Arizona National Guard, which eventually led to his placement in the 45th Division at Fort Sill, Okla. There, he honed his skill for the 45th Division News where his early cartoons of Infantrymen laid the foundation for "dogfaces" Willie and Joe.

After he arrived in Italy in 1944 and flooded Stars and Stripes with daily cartoons, his fame was sealed. Mauldin's numerous run-ins with military officials, including Patton who once threatened to "throw his ass in jail for undermining morale," didn't prevent President Roosevelt, and Ike himself, from savoring the poignant humor that so many of our fighting men relished. Bill Mauldin came home in 1945 as the most famous enlisted man in the U.S. Army.

Smoothly written, smoothly readable, Pershing, Bradley and Bill Mauldin — A Life Up Front are good summer fare — light, instructional and thoroughly enjoyable. Indeed, all three should be compulsory reading for those seriously devoted to lives of great war leaders, their trials and tribulations, whether they be five star generals or simple cartoonists.

"People will assume it's just some backward, hillbilly, trailer park game, but it's one of those things where if you don't play it, you'll never understand it."

Cornhole: Levels playing field for all ages, skill levels

who started playing a year and a half ago.

"It's like a safe version of horseshoes," he said. "You're not going to poke your eye out. It definitely levels the playing field because all you have to do is be able to throw it.

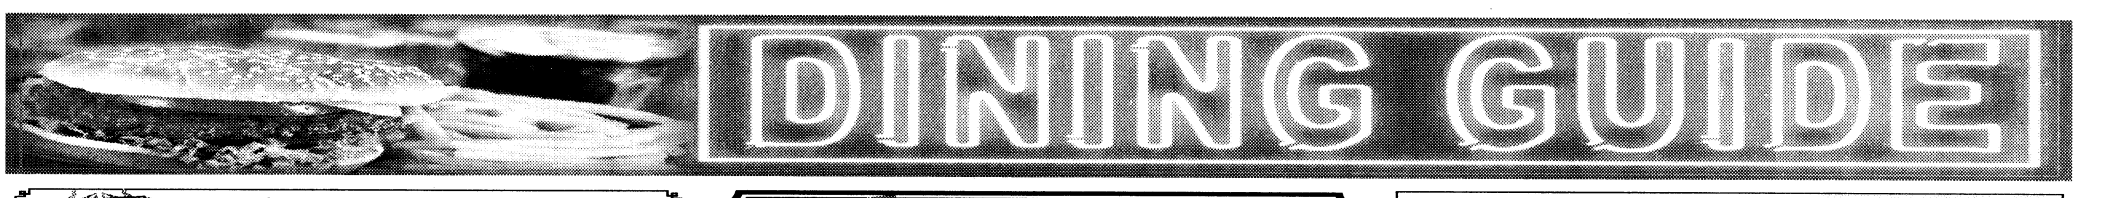
"It's easy to set up, easy to do, easy to play — one of those things where everybody can play, young and old alike, but it still gives room for competition and camaraderie. It's addictive."

Hicks said corn toss boards can be seen in the back of pick-up trucks, ready for any tailgate, and even tucked away behind some training facilities on post.

"If you peek around different units, you'll probably find some cornhole tables," he said, "because those Soldiers have to get their competitive edge."

Paul said he hasn't fully developed his own "competitive edge," but he did offer some pointers.

"It's not a hard game, but I wouldn't say it's easy. There's some skill to it," he said. "You have to throw it at the right level or it'll slide right off the back. You have to find your mark and make the same throw again and again, but once you get the feel of it, you can make it every time."



Although corn toss is a deceptively simple game, it quickly becomes a really competitive sport, complete with champions and impassioned rivalry.

Paul and Hicks agreed that half the fun of corn toss is the competitive teasing that always accompanies the game — especially when you accidentally knock someone else's corn bag into the hole.

"Anytime you have something like this, it brings everyone together," Paul said. "It's just a lot of fun."

Whether taking part in a five-hour tournament or playing with his 3- and 4-year-old children, who "could play all day," Hicks said he enjoys the casual, low-stress pastime, but it's hard to explain what makes it so appealing.

"People will assume it's just some backward, hillbilly, trailer park game, but it's one of those things where if you don't play it, you'll never understand it," Hicks said. "It is what it is, and it's fun. Try it; you'll enjoy it."

Be smart when it comes to spending

THE BAYONET
Rachel L. Watkins

Upon redeployment, Soldiers may have combat, separation and hazardous duty pay saved up.

If this is the case, spend wisely, said retired Capt. Jeffrey Saeli, regional manager and military banking vice president for CB&T at Fort Benning.

Soldiers can get into financial trouble when they come home, because while deployed, they are getting "used to living at a higher than normal wage," Saeli said.

"Now that they have come back, those additional pays and the tax advantage of not being taxed has fallen away and the effect is a net reduction of disposable income," he said.

Saeli offered some tips on being smart when it comes to money:

• Make a budget — before making any big purchases, sit down and figure out how much you can afford to spend.

• Before making a big purchase, talk to your parents or spouse about it because it affects them too.

• Seek advice — talk to your banker. He can evaluate a motor vehicle and other big purchases. The banker can help determine what the best method of payment would be depending on your credit history, income level and collateral and proposed down payment.

• Balance need versus want — if purchasing a car, think about the maintenance, gas, insurance and car payment.

• If buying a vehicle, research the market for the type of car you want.

You can use www.kbb.com or www.nadaguides.com look up the vehicle identification number to see if the vehicle has been in any accidents or is stolen or research the price of a new or used car.

The most important thing is that the purchaser should have all the facts and compare all financing options before making a decision, Saeli said.

Independence Day celebration: 'Biggest event of the year'

THE BAYONET
Cheryl Rodewig

The Commodores will headline the annual Independence Day celebration, a post tradition for more than 15 years. It's the Directorate of Family and Morale, Welfare and Recreation's "biggest event of the year," drawing as many as 12,000 people to York Field in front of Infantry Hall, said Shannon Poole, marketing director for DFMWR.

The festivities will kick off at 3 p.m. June 28 and end after a large fireworks display set to patriotic music, which will begin after the last performance of the evening.

"People come from all around just for the fireworks show," Poole said.

Although the concert and fireworks are the grand finale and not to be missed, there are activities throughout the day — something for everyone, Poole said.

Kids can jump, slide, bounce and joust on more than 20 inflatables for only $7 or make arts and crafts, courtesy of Sayers Memorial Library.

Picnic foods, including hotdogs, hamburgers and funnel cakes, will be on sale from 3 to 10:30 p.m.

Visitors are invited to bring their lawn chairs and blankets to spread out on the lawn.

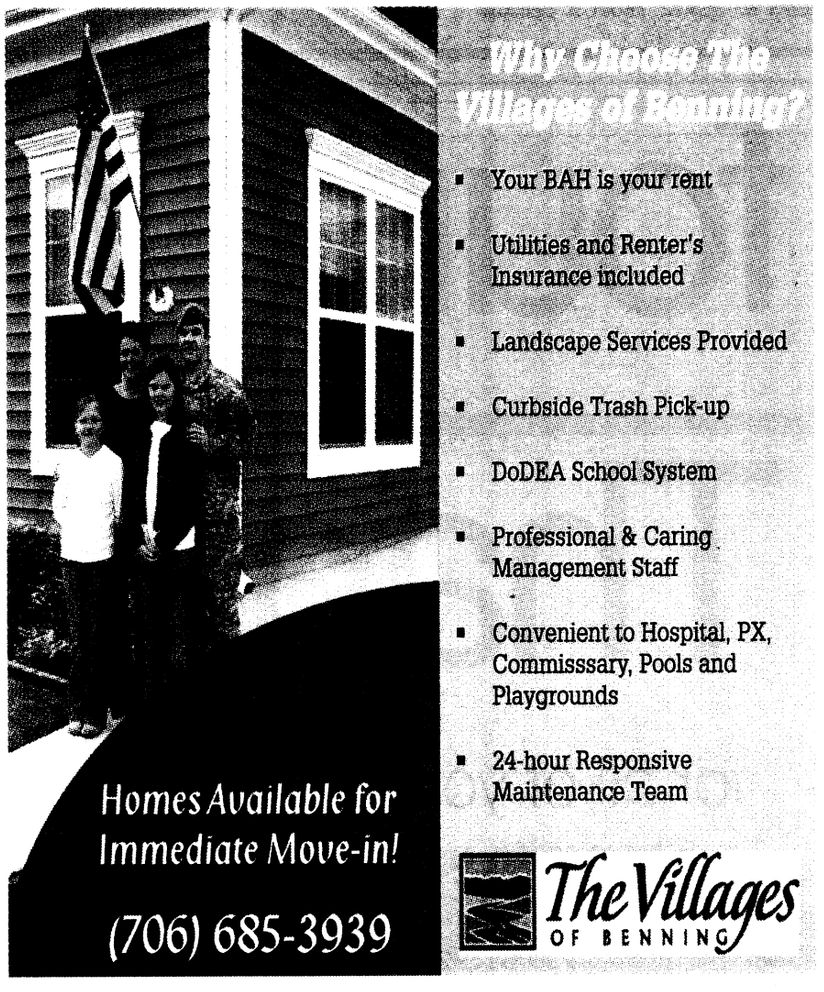
At 6 p.m., the concerts begin, featuring country singer Katie Rae Davis followed by Southern rock artist Gary Nichols and the headlining act, the Commodores.

Besides the food, fun and music, there will be several military demonstrations, making this celebration just a little bit different from one you might see off post, Poole said.

Basic training Soldiers from the 192nd and 198th brigades will attend the celebration, the Silver Wings will drop in, and the Rangers will swoop in with their SPIES and FRIES demonstration. The 197th Infantry Brigade will set up static displays, so visitors can get a closer look at a variety of military devices.

The displays will be very hands-on, with everything from sniper rifles to Strykers and Bradleys, said Jim Shoemaker, Outdoor Recreation manager.

"And these Soldiers who will be out there know everything you could possibly ask them about this equipment," Shoemaker said. "They're the top-of-the-line guys."



In light of the mixed martial arts influence on the Army combatives program, this year's event will feature MMA and Ultimate Fighting Championship demonstrations. Mike Van Arsdale, former coach of the All-Army Wrestling Team, and other fighters will meet with the public and sign autographs at 7:30 p.m. June 27 at Smith Fitness Center. They will demonstrate techniques and lead boxing and self-defense classes June 28 and 29 at the fitness center.

There will be signs for parking at Infantry Hall and by the Airborne Walk. People coming from off post to attend the celebration will not need a visitor's pass at the access control points but will need to show ID. Admission is free and open to the public.

For more information, call Poole at 706-545-4499.

Event scheduled to welcome post's redeploying Soldiers

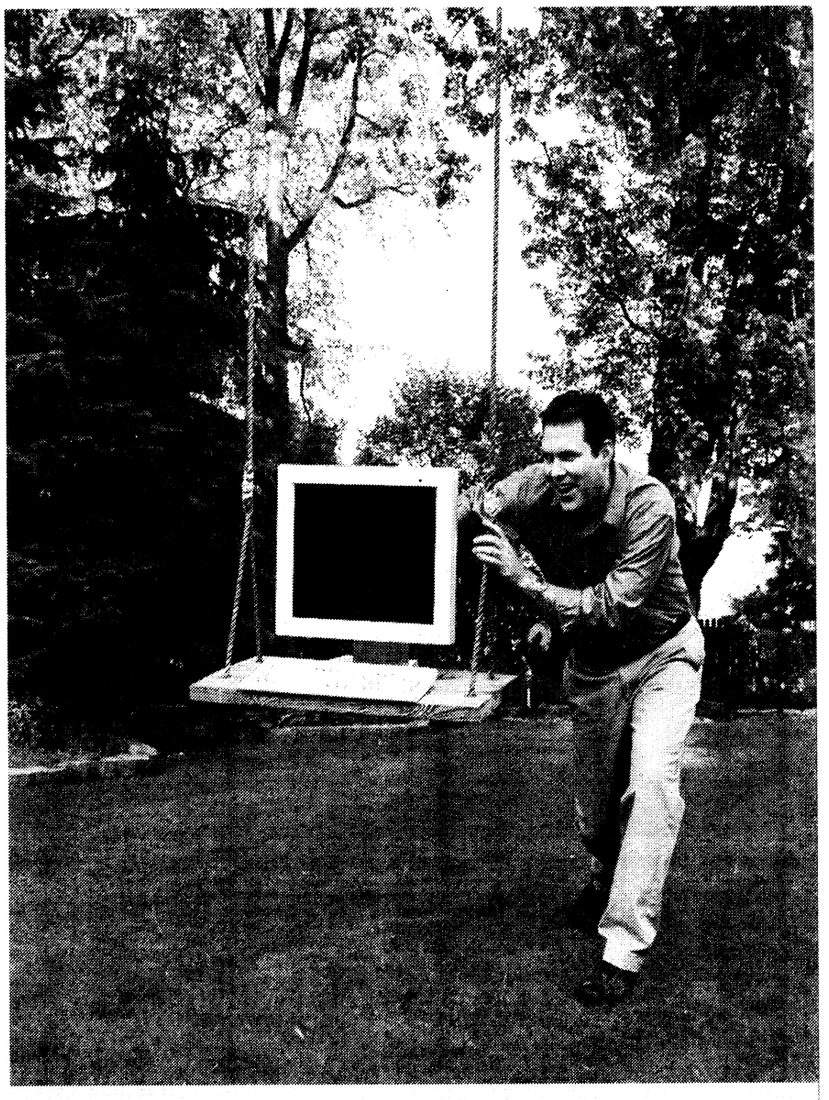
THE BAYONET
Cheryl Rodewig

Fort Benning will celebrate Soldier and Family Appreciation Day Aug. 1 at York Field in front of Infantry Hall.

It's a welcome home for all Soldiers who redeployed within the last 15 months, said Shannon Poole, marketing director for the Directorate of Family and Morale, Welfare and Recreation. "It's also to thank the families for the sacrifices they've made while their Soldiers were serving our country."

The celebration will kick off at 5 p.m. with entertainment and free food and drinks, including hot dogs, hamburgers, chicken and pizza.

There will be concerts throughout the afternoon, headlined by country music singer Miranda Lambert. Eve 6, an alternative rock group, and Kimberley Locke, a pop and rhythm and blues artist, will also perform.



Giveaways will include a truck, a motorcycle and a big-screen TV, just to name a few. Children can play on the inflatables, play video games, climb the rock wall, visit the petting zoo or make crafts.

At the close of the evening, around 10:30 p.m., there will be a fireworks show "as spectacular as our Independence Day fireworks," Poole said.

This day is "basically a big thank you and a welcome home," she said.

The celebration is open to all active-duty Soldiers and their families.

Center helps transitioning warriors, families

Soldier and Family Assistance Center complement transition unit missions

THE BAYONET
Brenda Donnell

American service members have been fighting the Global War on Terrorism since Sept. 11, 2001, with thousands killed and injured.

Warriors in transition — who were wounded in the Global War on Terrorism or those who have injuries or health problems — and their family members are receiving needed services from Fort Benning's Soldier and Family Assistance Center.

Dr. William Dave Clark, facility director, said the creation of Warrior Transition Units has helped wounded, injured and ill warriors, who may have felt ostracized in the past, feel like they are still an important part of the Army.

He said Soldier and Family Assistance Centers exist to support the mission of Warrior Transition Units by directly providing services to transitioning warriors and their family members or referring them to a wide range of services on Fort Benning, in the local community and in their home states.

Fort Benning's Soldier and Family Assistance Center is across the street from the Warrior Transition Battalion offices and next to the battalion barracks, so the services available at the Soldier and Family Assistance Center are convenient for the transitioning warriors.

Tony Toliver, Outreach Program coordinator, said the staff provides Army Career and Alumni Program services, pastoral services, financial counseling, social services coordination, educational assistance, transportation and more.

If it's not available at the facility, Toliver said they refer Soldiers and family members to outside sources that help with pay issues, legal advice, Veterans Administration benefits and entitlements, career and educational matters such as internship opportunities in different career fields and available scholarships, and more, Toliver said.

To ensure they get the help they need, the information referral and follow-up coordinator works individually with each Soldier or family member, Toliver said.

Besides the services offered, the Soldier and Family Assistance Center has amenities like a full child-care facility, a kitchen, a TV and lounge area, a computer lab with 10 computers, a fax machine and a copier. All are available to transitioning warriors and family members, whether they want to relax, eat or conduct additional business while they are there.

The Soldier and Family Assistance Center welcomes monetary donations and donations of facilities, such as the use of vacation homes by transitioning Soldiers and their families. Other suggested types of donations include trips or tickets to amusement parks, concerts and sporting events.

For more information about services and assistance provided to transitioning warriors and their families, call 706-544-1160 or visit http://benningmwr.com/ACSsfac31905.htm.

Tips to help you manage stress

• GET UP EARLIER to allow yourself more time before starting the day's work.

• PRIORITIZE activities that are truly critical and pace yourself accordingly.

• PAUSE before you begin your work day to notice what kind of day it is going to be. Plan accordingly.

• BE REALISTIC and kind to yourself when making your "to do" list each day.

• TAKE LUNCH OR BREAKS away from your work area, avoid rushing through your meal or break, and don't talk about work.

• Spend your LEISURE TIME with enthusiastic, upbeat friends. Since many of your friends will be in the same position as you, be enthusiastic and upbeat with them.

• REST quietly for five minutes during the day or take brief walks periodically.

• SAY "NO" when you need to.

• ASK for help when you need it, whether it's time away from the children, a counseling session, or a vacation.

• FOCUS on immediate or short-term goals that are attainable.

• RECEIVE APPRECIATION that is due. Accept praise and thank yous.

• TAKE CARE OF YOURSELF when you are down and out — play your favorite song, see a movie, or give up on the housework for the evening.

• ANALYZE YOUR MOODS, energy and time. Are you down at certain times of the day, week or month? Do you have more energy in the mornings or the evenings? Plan and prepare activities accordingly.

• USE RELAXATION, meditation, music, religion nature, or your favorite activity to reenergize yourself.

• PAY ATTENTION to your diet, sleep, exercise and general health. Seek a doctor's help if necessary.

• VOLUNTEER. Helping others is good medicine for the soul and spirit and to fill empty days. Call the Red Cross or ACS for volunteer opportunities.

Fatigued driving comparable to drunken driving

Army officials offer Travel Risk Planning System to combat growing problem of driver-fatigue related accidents

U.S. ARMY COMBAT READINESS/ SAFETY CENTER

Driving while fatigued may be just as dangerous as driving intoxicated researchers believe, prompting Army and nationwide awareness on the perils of fatigued driving.

According to the National Sleep Foundation, many Americans are too tired to drive.

In a recent NSF poll, 36 percent of participants admitted to nodding off or falling asleep while driving. Fatigued drivers endanger not only themselves but everyone on the road.

"Although there is no quick roadside test that determines fatigue levels, research shows that 24 hours without sleep is comparable to a BAC (Blood Alcohol Content) of .10 which is legally intoxicated in all of the United States and most of Europe," said Dr. Patricia LeDuc, U.S. Army Combat Readiness/ Safety Center Human Factors Task Force director.

The National Highway Traffic Safety Administration estimates there are 100,000 sleep-related crashes in the United States every year, with 1550 fatalities and 71,000 injuries.

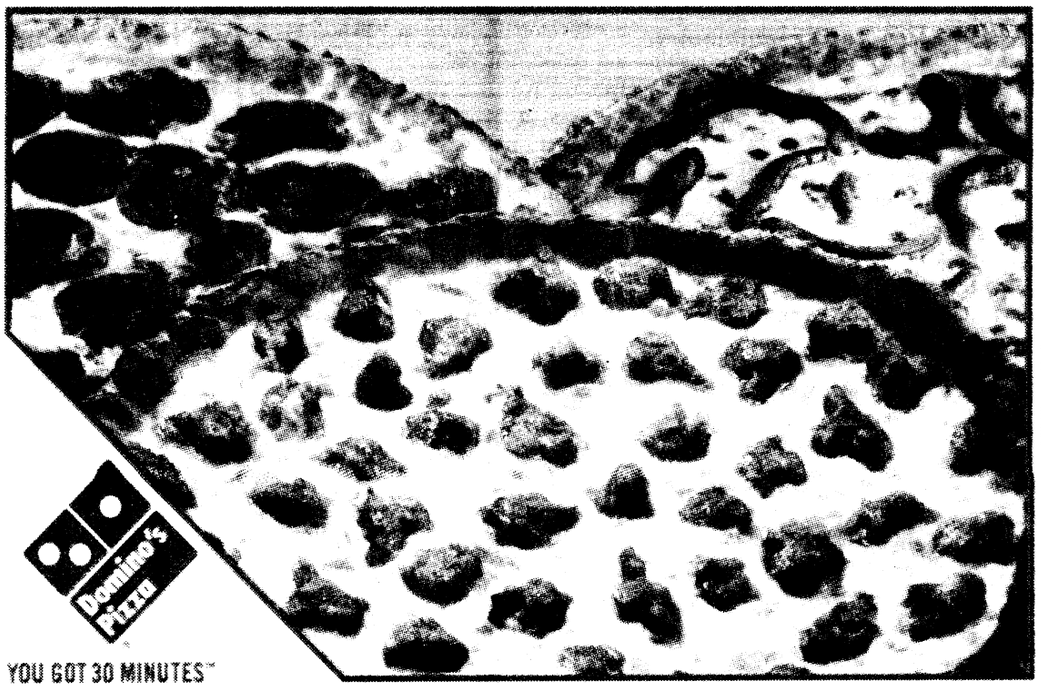
Three have occurred to date in fiscal 2008, and Army safety officials remain committed to reducing the number of fatigue-related accidents through engaged leadership, awareness and Army initiatives.

"The Travel Risk Planning System helps drivers and their supervisors identify risks involved in driving long distances with too little sleep, insufficient rest breaks and even while driving at night," said Derek A. Kovacsy, USACRC Automated Risk Assessment Tools program manager. "TRiPS also recommends ways to manage these risks which the user can select to reduce their overall risk level."

"There are several warning signs of fatigue; however, individuals often don't understand them or worse yet, choose to ignore them," LeDuc said.

"Falling asleep against your will ("micro" sleeps), irritability, depression, giddiness, are all indicators."



An individual's decision-making ability, complex planning processes, productivity, attention, ability to handle stress, and reaction time can all be compromised.

They may also have a tendency to increase risk-taking, be more forgetful and exhibit errors in judgment, all which can increase the likelihood of having an accident.

Taking precautions before a road trip may prevent an unnecessary accident. Not driving alone, avoiding long drives at night, taking frequent breaks and getting a good night's sleep are tips that can help Soldiers, their families and civilians fight fatigued driving.

For more information on preventing fatigued and drowsy driving, visit www.nhtsa.gov and www.drowsydriving.org. Visit https://crc.army.mil for topics covered during the 101 Critical Days of Summer safety campaign.

Family Advocacy resources available for Army Families

FAP offers help, relief for Soldiers, families experiencing problems after redeployment

FAMILY ADVOCACY PROGRAM

Fort Benning's Family Advocacy Program addresses issues related to mistreatment of Soldiers, family members and intimate partners.

Rebecca Welch, the program manager, said the focus of the Family Advocacy Program (FAP) is to contribute to a healthy life for all Fort Benning Soldiers and their families.

All Soldiers and family members have a right to live without fear in their own homes, Welch said. FAP provides training to help educate families and directs them to services to help them meet their needs before an incident occurs or a problem arises.

When families seek help, or when a problem is identified, the FAP can refer them to appropriate programs on and off the installation to address the crisis situation.

To strengthen families, Welch and the FAP encourages voluntary self-referral through education and awareness programs.

"It is easier to prevent abuse than to repair the damage" it causes, she said.

FAP offers a variety of programs designed to help Soldiers and families, including:

Respite child care

Respite care is temporary child care to relieve parental stress and provide a nurturing, developmentally appropriate environment.

Respite care is usually provided to families when both the Soldier and his or her spouse attend parenting classes or counseling, when families are stressed because of a problem or when they are participating in a treatment program.

Safety education for children

FAP provides sensible guidance on personal safety and child sexual abuse prevention for children, their parents, and youth and child care staff.

Developed by FAP, the training emphasizes the important supervisory and protective roles of adults and community members who interact with children.

School counselors coordinate with the FAP manager to conduct the classes on a continuous basis.

Command education

Fort Benning commanders at all levels are briefed on the nature of spouse and child abuse, the means to prevent domestic violence, FAP policies and procedures, resources available on post and off, command responsibilities in identifying, reporting, coordination, rehabilitation, their administrative or judicial options, and the 72-hour separation policy.

Community education

FAP offers education programs designed to promote awareness and support within the military community and encourage early referral when problems arise.

FAP presence is available for unit organization days, parent teacher organizations, family readiness groups, health fairs, etc.

The program includes special emphasis dates and events throughout the year, such as Child Abuse Prevention Month, the Month of the Military Child and Domestic Violence Awareness Month.

Crisis intervention

Crisis intervention is available to Soldiers and family members during emergency situations related to family issues, marital conflict, abandoned Soldier or spouse, etc.

To contact an advocate during duty hours, call 706-545-4013 or 706-545-7594. A 24-hour hotline is available at 706-327-3999.

Victim advocacy

FAP advocates provide support and information to victims of domestic violence, male or female, so they can make positive choices for themselves and their children.

To speak to an advocate, call Theresa Sanchez or Eleanor Bentson at 706-545-4013 or 706-545-7594.

New parent support program

FAP offers support for new parents to help them hone their parenting skills and link them with community resources on and off the installation.

They help parents create and maintain a safe home that fosters open communication.

For more information on programs for new parents, call Glorian Chehade at 760-545-9358 or Sherry Daniels at 706-626-2599.

First Steps

First Steps volunteers provide emotional support, parenting education, referrals to community resources and follow-up contact to parents with newborns, helping them develop healthy family relationships and reduce the risk of child abuse or neglect.

Each mom who delivers at Martin Army Community Hospital receives a tote bag with a First Steps calendar, nursery rhyme cassette for baby, a 101 Ways to Praise Your Child magnet, and other great items.

Trained volunteers are assigned to work with new parents for up to a year after the baby is born.

For more information, call First Steps coordinator Carolyn Harris at 706-544-2020.

Spouse abuse shelters

A 24-hour temporary residential facility is available for abuse victims under FAP contract at the Russell County, Ala., Shelter and the Columbus Hope Harbour Shelter.

These shelters offer a safe, temporary place for spouse abuse victims and their children to stay while they seek a long-term solution to the problems they face as a family.

At the shelters, victims will find emotional support, counseling and community services, such as legal, medical and financial assistance.

Sexual assault

This crime of sexual assault is defined as intentional sexual contact, characterized by the use of force, physical threat or the abuse of authority, or when the victim does not or can not consent.

Sexual assault can happen to men, women and children of all ages.

The FAP ensures that victims of sexual assault are protected and treated with dignity, fairness and respect.

Victim advocates provide emotional support for the victim and the victim's family, information on personal safety and available resources.

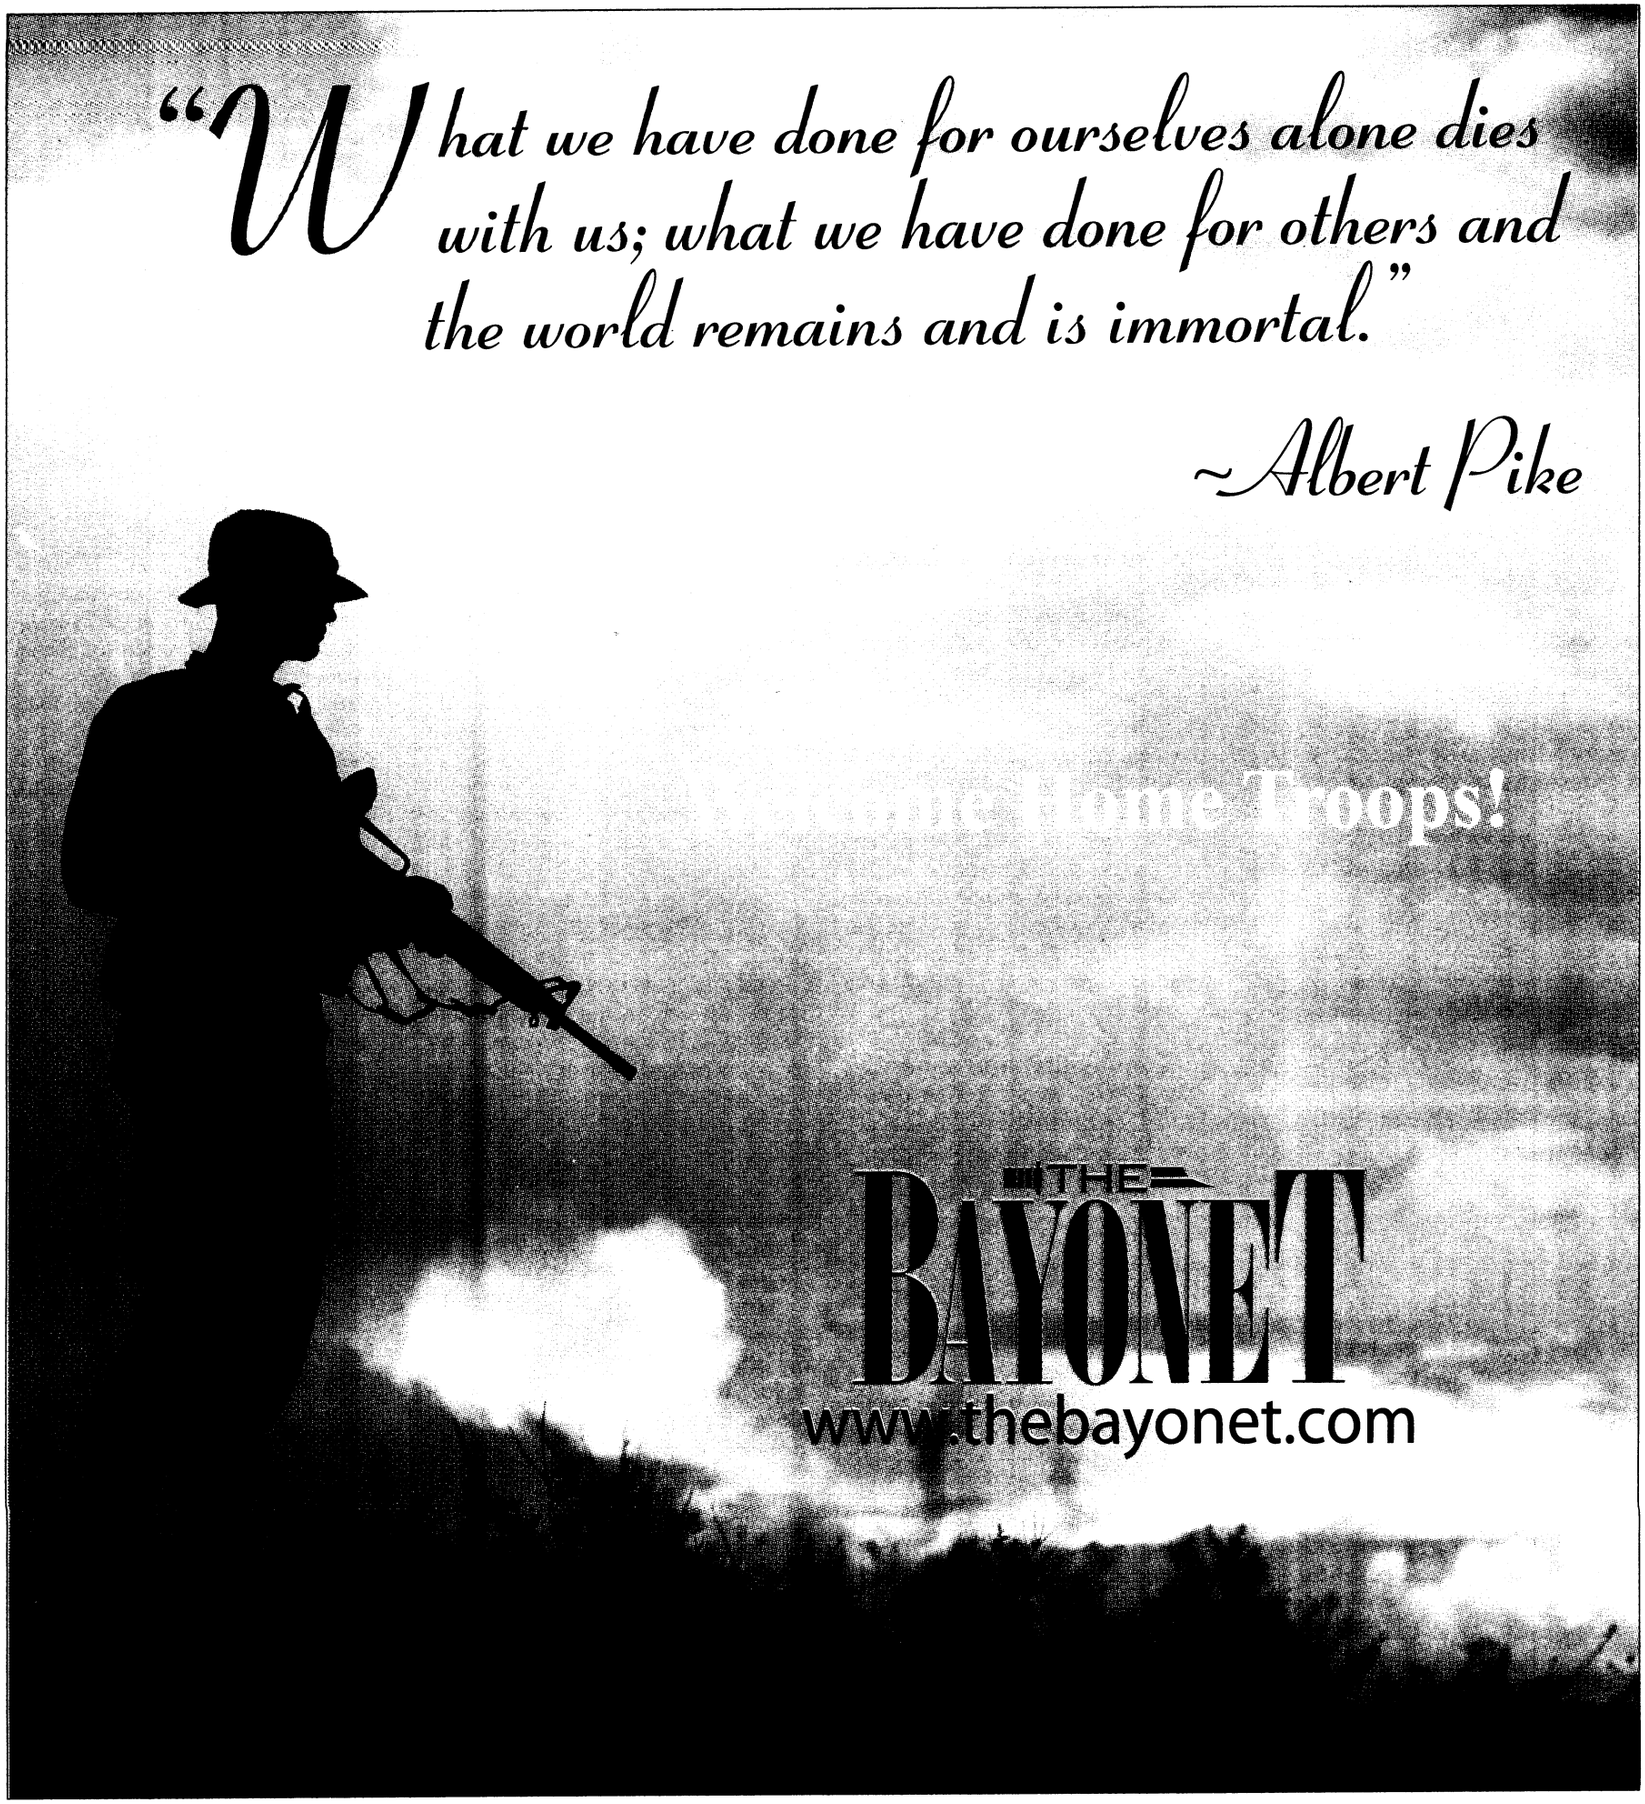
There is also a 24-hour hotline available at 706-566-7393.

Troop education

Mandatory classes are provided annually to all Fort Benning military personnel on the dynamics of spouse and child abuse, the availability of treatment services on and off post, and the Army's policies on family violence.

Units should ensure their Soldiers are trained annually.



The point of contact for troop education is Terry Frye. Call 706-545-6957.

Social Work Services

FAP Social Work Service provides treatment groups and classes.

A crisis worker is available during duty hours at 706-545-1661.

An on-call worker is available after duty hours through the Martin Army Community Hospital Emergency Room at 706-544-1502 or 706-545-1123.

Motorcycle Safety Inspection Checklist

T-CLOCS

T-CLOCS was developed by the Motorcycle Safety Foundation to assist motorcycle drivers in completing a comprehensive pre-ride (or pre-purchase) inspection of a motorcycle. T-CLOCS is easily memorized and very useful. The individual letters stand for the specific areas to be checked. This T-CLOCS inspection should be conducted at least twice a year to ensure safe riding.

	Item	Check	Look for	Check off
Tires & Wheels	Tires	Condition	Tread depth, wear, sidewalls, evenly seated, bulges, embedded objects	Front/Rear

Financial Readiness Program can help ease Soldier, family money issues after redeployment

THE BAYONET

The Financial Readiness Program offers Soldiers and family members a number of services designed to help them take charge of their money and make their money work for them.

Unfortunately, not nearly enough people take advantage of all the FRP has to offer, said program manager Ann Pratcher.

"Most don't come in until (their finances) are ready to be on life support, rather than at the first headache," Pratcher said. The sooner people seek help, the more good they can do for them.

With Soldiers coming home from deployment, the average paycheck is going to drop anywhere from $700 to $1,000.

If spouses have been living on that extra money, Pratcher said families will have to make adjustments to add the Soldier back into the budget mix where things like groceries, gas and other expenses are concerned.

And when additional debts have accrued, redeployment means a reduced amount of money to deal with the debts.

"If you saved, that's great," she said. "But you need to sit down and make a plan. Figure out what you want that money to do for you and prioritize the list."

She cautions people not to go out and spend all the money they have saved — and especially not to spend it on down payments on large items, because then there are still the monthly payments to deal with.

One of the biggest pitfalls is a new car purchase.

"Buy smart," Pratcher said. "Do your research. Don't finance at the dealership. And if you have some cash, only use a portion of it as a down payment."

For information about the Financial Readiness Program, call 706-545-7517 or 706-545-4043

And for those who haven't yet filed their taxes, that's something that needs to be dealt with as well.

"Please don't go to the sharks," she said. "The tax assistance office is also available and it's free. There are so many horrible predatory lenders out there." (The Tax Center will be open July 8-11. Call the center at 706-545-3281.)

She's seen Soldiers get charged more than $200 for a $5,000 refund because they weren't willing to wait the seven to 10 days to file electronically and wait for the direct deposit.

"That's almost 400 percent interest," she said. "They're charging you interest on your money, because when you file with them and get it immediately, they're loaning it to you."

If a Soldier, or spouse, has an inkling that the finances are not in good shape, Pratcher said, start by figuring out just how bad it is. Potential clients should do a "reality check" and figure out exactly what it takes to realistically run the household — the monthly bills and expenses like phone, cable, utilities, food, and clothing.

Then, she said, take a look at the debt — car and credit card payments, student loans or other loans.

Those in charge of the finances need to look at what the Soldier's pay is going to be when they redeploy and figure out what money will be left to pay debt after taking care of household expenses.

"Where you feel the squeeze is when the debt payment takes more than 20 percent of after-tax pay," Pratcher said. "And people who think they're in good shape are at the 30 to 40 percent. They're already overextended."

A typical client, she said, is carrying a 40 to 60 percent debt load.

"If you're accustomed to spending and having certain things and now you're in a jam, you're going to have to shut yourself down until you get back on track," she said.

"Sometimes the cold-turkey approach is the only way."

But, for some, she said, admitting you need help is the hardest part. At the FRP, those who come in get help from financial counselors accredited by the Association for Financial Counseling and Planning Education.

The FRP holds intake sessions at 8:15 a.m. every Monday (except holidays) in Building 2625 in Soldiers' Plaza. After the intake, clients receive a list of documents they'll need to bring to their first appointment — all bills, bank statements, contracts, Leave and Earnings Statements, checkbook and check register.

Pratcher said some clients are not necessarily comfortable sharing all that information, but by having all the documents, there's no guessing.

And in all her years of experience, she's only had one client come in with financial problems who kept an actual checking account journal.

Those planning to get married, divorced, have a baby, leave the Army, retire, buy a house or a car are the people the FRP can help, Pratcher said.

"If it has to do with money, that's what we do," she said. "We can set up spending plans, plans for those starting to save or invest. We can review any contract — before you sign it."

Military Spouses
TAKE CHARGE OF YOUR FUTURE

Did you know that if you are the spouse of an active duty serviceman or woman stationed at Ft. Benning, you may be eligible for a military spouse Career Advancement Account that could give you up to $3000 (renewable for one year) to cover tuition and other expenses associated with earning a certificate, diploma or two-year college degree.

Each recipient of a CAA mil spouse grant may select from a local post-secondary institution, on-line accredited college or a private training provider on Georgia's approved eligible service provider list.

With a credential in hand, a military spouse can pursue a career that adapts to frequent household moves, and at the same time respond to the needs of today's job market.

Spouses can choose careers in the following areas:

- Business Administration
- Education
- Finance
- Healthcare
- Homeland Security
- Hospitality
- Human Resources
- Information Technology
- Industrial Construction

In addition to earning a post-secondary credential, spouses may also earn a portable Georgia Work Ready Certificate to help stand out in today's changing job market. To find out how to earn a certificate visit www.gaworkready.org.

Post agencies are here to help

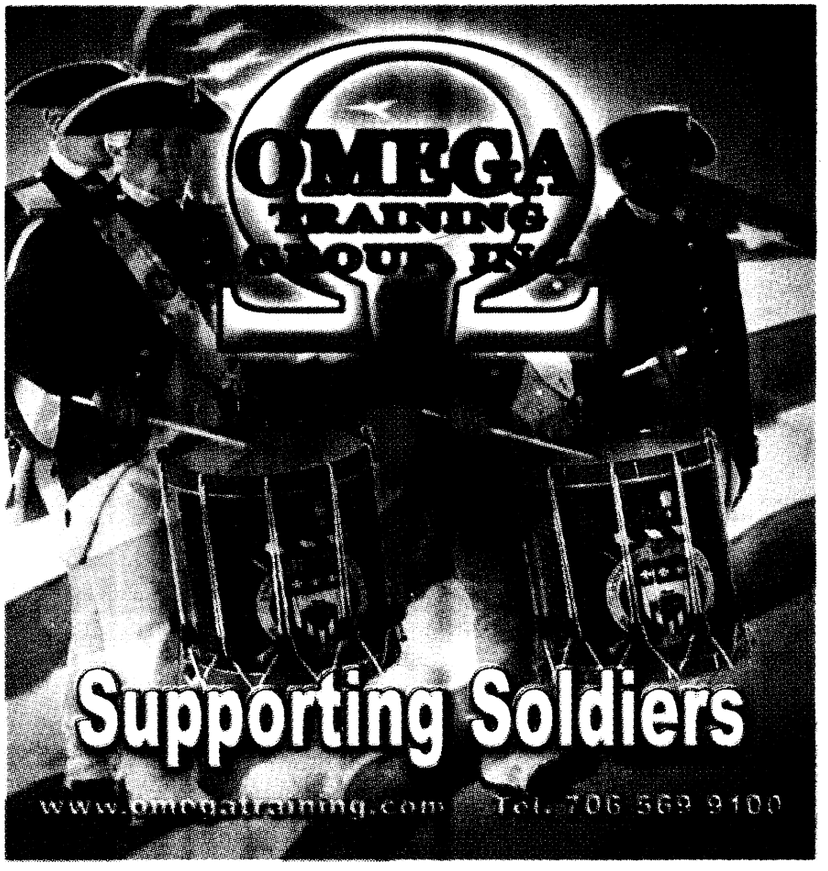
No family should deal with the stress of reintegrating alone. Fort Benning offers services to help ease the transition.

"Reunions can be stressful or they can be joyful," said Rebecca Welch, ACS Family Advocacy Program manager. Most homecomings, Welch said, will be a little of both.

When a Soldier comes home, things will not be the same as when he or she left. Returning Soldiers and their families may be overwhelmed with the changes that have taken place during the deployment. This is to be expected, because change is inevitable when experiences are so vastly different.

"It'll be just like dating all over again," Welch said. "Couples will have to get to know each other again, and (there can be) tension."

To rebuild a relationship, Welch said, there has to be communication, and partners should avoid what she called "the blame game."



"The Soldier has been fighting a war, and the spouse has been back here running the household," she said. "It's hard on everyone, and everyone has made sacrifices. Coming forward for help is the first step in taking control of the situation."

Post agencies offer help. The Family Advocacy Program provides crisis intervention, respite care, parental stress relief program, victim advocacy, new parent support program, marriage retreats and educational materials. Other resources include a Financial Readiness Program, Army Emergency Relief, counseling by the Chaplaincy and Social Work Services.

"We are one big team here at Fort Benning, and we have a lot out there to help get our families through this transition," Welch said. "Even though a community has good services, things can go wrong unless people reach out for help."

Welch said family members and Soldiers can call for help 24 hours a day, seven days a week. Contact the helpline at 706-327-3999. For more information, call the Family Advocacy Program at 706-545-4013.

Five phases of reunion

1. PRE-ENTRY takes place during the few days before your reunion. You're working long hours to ensure equipment has been turned in and that your work is caught up before going home. Things to expect in this phase include:
Fantasies
Excitement
Work
Planning
Thoughts

2. REUNION takes place during your immediate meeting and a few days after your arrival. This is a time of courtship, relearning, intimacy, and a happy time or honeymoon.
THIS IS NOT THE TIME TO ADDRESS PROBLEMS.
It is a time for understanding. Things to expect in this phase include:
Physical changes
Courting again
Social events
Immediate excitement
Pride in each other
Intimacy and sex
Fatigue and a readiness to relax
Spending time with children
Needing time and space

3. DISRUPTION. As problems surface, expectations of a "normal" family life recede. Things to expect in this phase include:
Independence challenges
Children issues (changes and growth)
Routine changes
Financial questions
General differences
Thought changes
Trust issues
Control issues
Hard times stories
Unresolved problems and issues
Jealousy issues
Decision making challenges

4. COMMUNICATION is a time of renegotiating new routines, reconnecting, and redefining family roles. New rules will be established.
Things to expect in this phase include:
Renegotiation
Trust
Reconnection
Acceptance
New rules

5. NORMAL. This phase is attained once you're back to the normal family routine of sharing, growing, experiencing the ups and downs, happiness, and sadness of a family. Things to expect in this phase include:
Established routines
Acceptance of change
Personal growth

Families first, safety always: Engagement kit empowers Army Families

U.S. ARMY COMBAT READINESS/ SAFETY CENTER

Army officials are empowering family members to take an active role in implementing safety practices to protect their loved ones returning home from deployments.

The Army recognizes that Army Families are a powerful group, capable of positively influencing how Soldiers and family members think. The Army's new Family Engagement Kit raises awareness of the leading indicators in accidents while passing along the "what" and "how" of best practices. Armed with these new tools, family members are afforded active involvement in their Soldiers' safety.

The U.S. Army Combat Readiness/ Safety Center study of accident and associated statistics, indicates when Soldiers return from a deployment or controlled environment, the rigors and oversight provided by leaders is diminished.

During fiscal 2007, 186 Soldiers died within one year of returning from deployments. Approximately 30 percent of the deaths occurred within the first 30 days of post-deployment and 63 percent within the first six months. Of the 186 fatalities, 145 involved privately owned vehicles during off-duty hours.

Army safety officials are convinced that oversight, control and structure are beneficial to achieve an accident-free environment. The USACRC's collective challenge is to formulate tools that target safety and risk management as a "way of life" for application when Soldiers are off duty.

"As leaders, we know that direct engagement with our Soldiers makes a positive difference in their safety," said Brig. Gen. Bill Forrester, director of Army safety and commanding general of the USACRC. "No one knows Soldiers better than their families, and there are few organizations better positioned than families to influence Soldiers to make safer choices and take fewer risks."

Forrester added that the USACRC believes it is extremely difficult to look a spouse or child in the eye and tell them you are not going to wear your helmet or a seat belt because you don't care enough to stay alive for them.

"The Family Engagement Kit features tools that family members can use to engage their loved ones in best safety practices in order to help protect them," said Forrester. "Many take very little time or effort, and the payoff is huge."

In all, the kit includes six tools for post-deployment best practices. One such tool is the Travel Risk Planning System, better known as TRiPS. The aim of TRiPS is to reduce the risk of accidents when traveling by POV.

Another potentially life-saving tool included in the kit is the Motorcycle/ ATV Agreement. This tool encourages families and their Soldiers to discuss the hazards and safety measures associated with riding motorcycles or all-terrain vehicles.

These Web-based tools are self-explanatory, self-supporting with PowerPoint briefs containing associated talking points.

The Army's goal is to put these tools into the hands and empower Army Family Team Building trainers, family readiness group leaders, brigade-level safety professionals, BOSS leaders, parents, and individual family members to keep our Army team safe, Forrester added.

Families are encouraged to embrace the Family Engagement Kit as another tool supporting one common desire — safer Soldiers and families.

"Family involvement is essential, so I ask for engagement with your loved one," Forrester said. "With your help, we can better protect our nation's most precious assets — our Soldiers."

For more information about the Family Engagement Kit, visit the USACRC Web site at https://crc.army.mil/familyengagement.

The deployment i$ over!

Now what?

Financial Readiness offers classes for units and family readiness groups to help Soldiers and their families deal with financial issues. Financial counselors will bring this training to you. To schedule a class, call 706-545-7517 or 706-545-4043.

Getting reacquainted

1. Identify and define the problem or conflict. What is really the problem? What exactly is wrong?
Identify the problem without assigning blame or attacking persons. Be aware of the feelings and needs of all those involved.

2. Brainstorm for possible solutions. Express and record all ideas as fast as you think of them. No judgment or discussion is allowed during brainstorming — BE CREATIVE!

3. Evaluate the alternatives. Look at the consequences of each possible solution. Work together to find a solution acceptable to all. Give and take is necessary for a win-win solution.

4. Choose the best solution. Mutual agreement and commitment are necessary.

5. Implement the solution. Decide when and how to evaluate needed changes, delegation of tasks, and time frames for completion.

6. Assess the results with a follow-up evaluation.
Is the situation better or worse?
If it's better, do you want to continue?
If it's worse, look at another possible solution discussed during your brainstorming session and implement it. Be persistent until the problem is resolved.

It pays to know how to fight fair

Learn how to resolve differences without damaging your marriage

THE BAYONET
Bridgett Siter

The honeymoon is over. The majority of Kelley Hill Soldiers are back home and back at work after redeploying from Iraq and taking three or four weeks of block leave. Now comes the hard part for many Soldiers and their spouses who will strive to establish some sense of normalcy once again.

It's often easier said than done.

When one spouse has been absent for a year and the other has established a routine, developed a healthy sense of independence, or grown fond of controlling the remote, the weeks or months following the homecoming honeymoon period can be fraught with tension. The homefront can become a minefield where words are the weapons.

All couples face conflict at some point. The trick is to learn to fight fair. Fair fighting leads to healthy resolution, which can actually strengthen a relationship. It builds a strong platform for dealing with issues down the road.

Fighting dirty has the same effect, with different results. Once a couple establishes a pattern of fighting dirty, it's a hard habit to break. What's worse, dirty fighting fosters resentment, and resentment, left to fester, will poison every aspect of the relationship.

The following is a list of fair-fighting tactics gleaned from a variety of sources, including Gary Smalley's Making Love Last Forever, and Tommy Nelson's The 16 Nevers of Marriage:

•Smalley says the future of a marriage hinges on dealing with the past. If there were problems in the marriage that were not resolved before the Soldier's deployment, they will eventually manifest in one way or another again.

The honeymoon period, when couples are still experiencing the joy of reconciliation, when they're feeling good about their marriage, is a good time to talk about the past, before new issues arise. If dirty fighting was a problem before the deployment, make an appointment with a counselor or chaplain to help you address old business without slipping into old patterns.

•Forget about changing your spouse. It's not going to happen. But you'll get surprising results if you change the way you react to your partner's behavior. Impossible, you say? He makes you so mad?

Smalley quotes Stephen Covey, who describes people as reactive or proactive. Reactive people allow others to rob them of their quality of life. They blame their unhappiness on others or on circumstances.

Proactive people accept responsibility for their own lives. Happiness, they believe, is a choice. They typically take the initiative to seek help when their marriage faces serious problems.

•On the contrary, be willing to change. Smalley uses the sinking of the Titanic metaphorically to describe a marriage spiraling out of control. There are always warnings. If you value your marriage, take a serious look at your behavior and make reasonable changes to resolve conflict.

Don't expect your relationship to be 50-50. In a perfect world, it would be so. In a not-so-perfect world at war, the military marriage can become a tug-of-war, with both spouses willing to meet halfway and not an inch more. Be willing to give a little more.

•Keeping score? If you're dredging up old grievances, it's high time you resolve them. If old hurts keep coming up, you must talk about them — again and again and again — until you can forgive and forget.

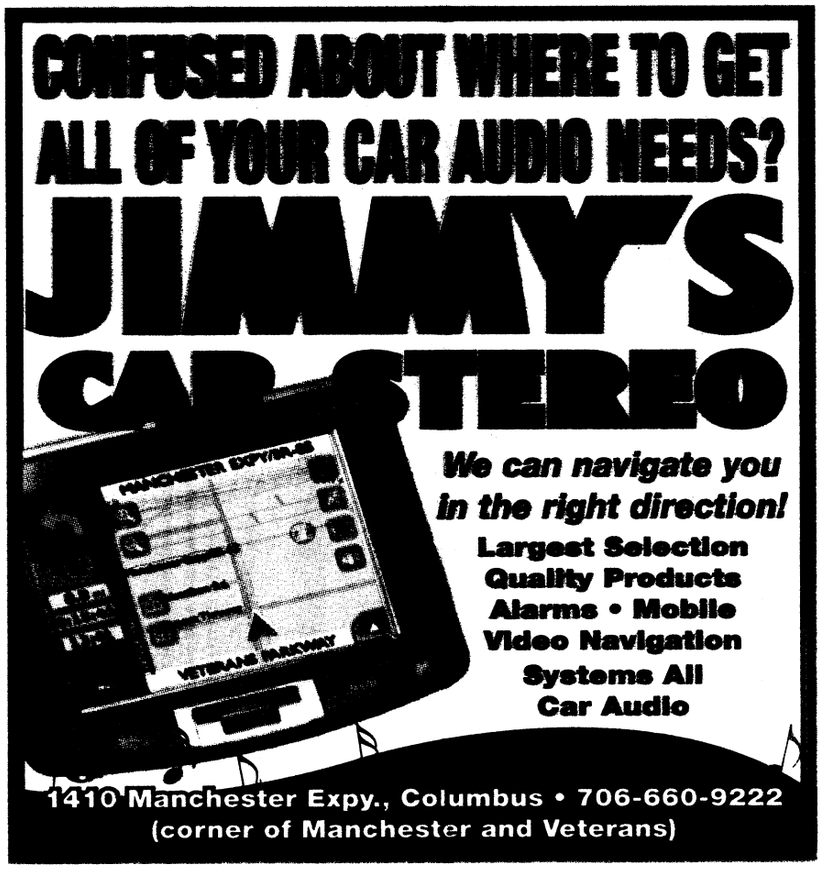
However, if old wounds trigger angry outbursts, resolve not to speak to your spouse about them until you've made a thorough list. Describe each grievance in detail and write a letter to your spouse, as long as it need be, pouring out your hurt, anger and disappointments. Spew all you want.

When you're finished, rewrite it, starting each sentence with "I." I was shocked when you invited your mother to accompany us on our honeymoon. I tried to tell you it wasn't a good idea. I'm still angry about that. I think about it a lot when I get mad at you. I can't seem to let it go. I can't forget it, but I want to forget it, and I want our marriage to work.

You can allow your spouse to read the letter or you can shred it. Or you can sit down with your spouse after you've completed this exercise and address each grievance together. He or she may be shocked to find you're still hurting about issues they'd long forgotten about. Convey your feelings calmly, and be willing to forgive and forget.

•Of course, hurts would never come back to haunt if they were dealt with immediately. Anger, like everything else, needs rest to grow. The old saying, "Don't let the sun set on your anger," is timeless wisdom.

The scenario above would never arise if each issue was dealt with immediately. Use the letter exercise if you need to, or simply hash it out with your partner until its resolved.



•Nelson points out that it's not only what you say but how you say it that matters when confronting an issue that might provoke a heated argument. Take a time out and weigh your words carefully. Make a conscious effort to speak to your partner with respect. An angry, belittling or snide tone will only exacerbate the problem.

•Never confront each other publicly. Keep issues between the two of you and your counselor or chaplain. Don't argue in front of the kids or the in-laws or ask them to take sides.

To avoid these pitfalls altogether, save your fights for when you're alone, perhaps after the kids are in bed. If possible, go for a drive or a walk, so you can speak privately.

•And while we're on the subject of family, leave them out of it altogether,

See Fighting, E23

Fighting: Fair can lead to stronger relationship

Don't use words that insult your partner and/or his family (i.e. You're just like your father!) Dragging other people or other issues into the fight only creates problems.

•Never say "never" or "always." You never help with the kids. You're always late for supper. That's probably not true, and now's not a good time to exaggerate the problem.

It simply sets the standard for what follows. Try the same "I" tactic mentioned earlier. Personalize each sentence. I'm getting frustrated trying to get these kids to bed by myself. I wish you would help me. I'll watch TV with you when we're done.

•Ban expletives and name-calling from your conversation. Besides being a sign of a weak mind, these behaviors can cause an argument to heat up faster than anything, except ...

Save your discussions for a time when you're not drinking. If it's hard to find a time when you're not drinking, alcohol may be the problem.

•Avoid hysterics. Don't shout, don't pound the table, shake your fists or stomp out of the room.

•When you're right, you know you're right, and your partner finally concedes, take the moral high road. If he or she comes around to your way of thinking after much debate, it can be difficult to "drop it" suddenly.

Do it anyway. No one really wins a fight if either spouse walks away with hurt feelings.

•On the flip side, be willing to admit when you're wrong. Let's say your partner points out that you haven't fixed the leaky faucet that you promised to fix six weeks ago.

Don't get defensive, don't counterattack and don't make excuses. "You're right. I'm sorry," will diffuse an argument quicker than anything. Then fix the faucet.

A promise is a promise. End of argument.

• Don't disregard your partner's feelings. If he or she says you, as a couple, have a problem, listen carefully and respect his or her feelings. Yes, it's possible that he or she is "picking a fight" over a trivial matter.

If that's the case, you can bet there's a more serious underlying problem. Find it.

• Pick your time. Don't fight when you're tired. It's hard to be rational when you're exhausted.

• If you know a fight is imminent, but you haven't broached the subject yet, find a quiet place to evaluate the situation carefully.

Think about what you'll say and how he or she will respond. Will the argument become heated? Is it possible that either of you will become verbally or physically abusive?

Yes, you must confront any issue that threatens your marriage, but you must do it with a counselor or chaplain if abuse is a possibility.

If you learn to fight fair, you'll have no reason to fear conflict. They're inevitable, but they can actually lead to a stronger, more healthy relationship. If that's not happening, it's time to schedule an appointment with a qualified marriage counselor.

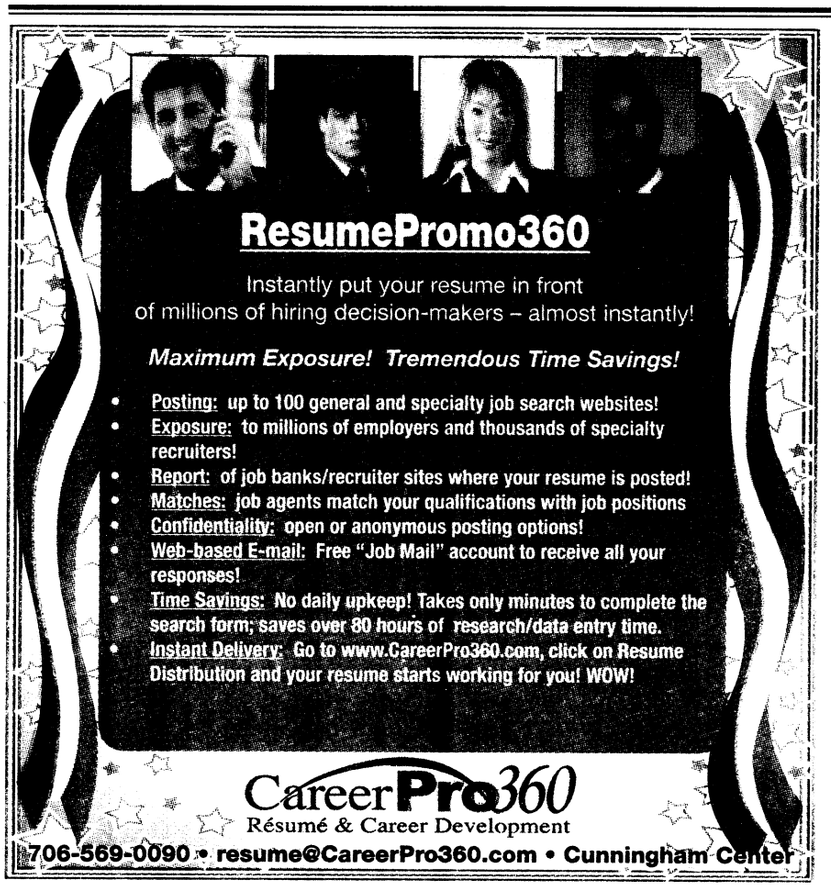
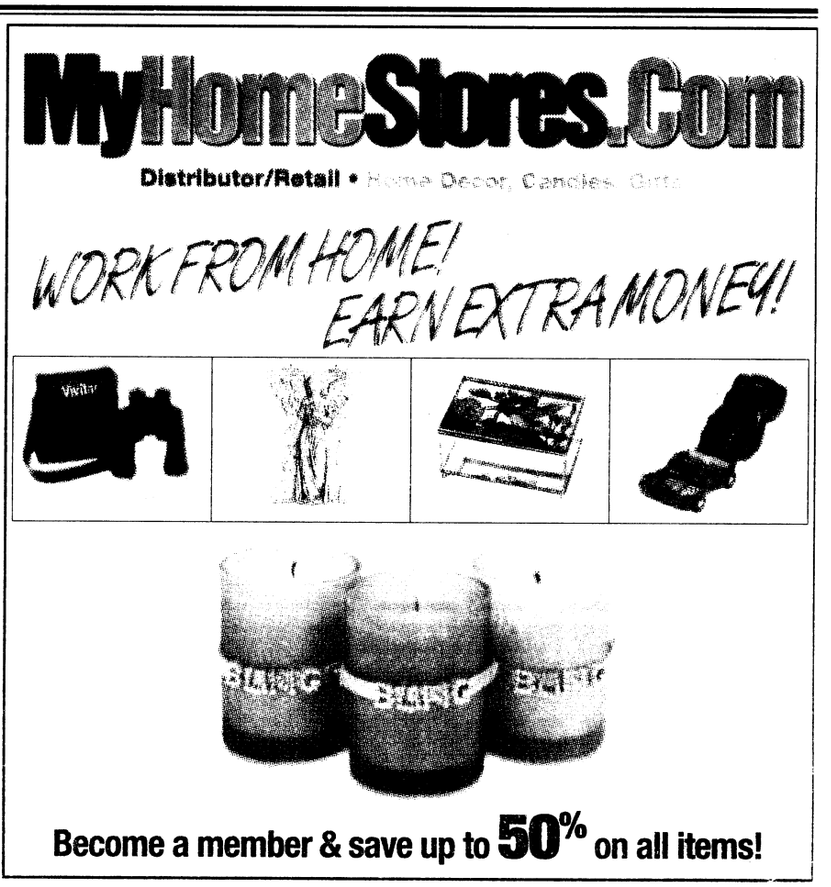
Coping with stress and post traumatic stress disorder

Military families experience a tremendous amount of pride for contributing to the nation's defense. They also enjoy many rich, new experiences. However, pressures and frustrations can also result because of the separation caused by deployment. Included among them are: Family financial problems, separation from family and friends, single parenting problems, constant adjustment to varying duty schedules, frequent relocation, career changes and retirement.

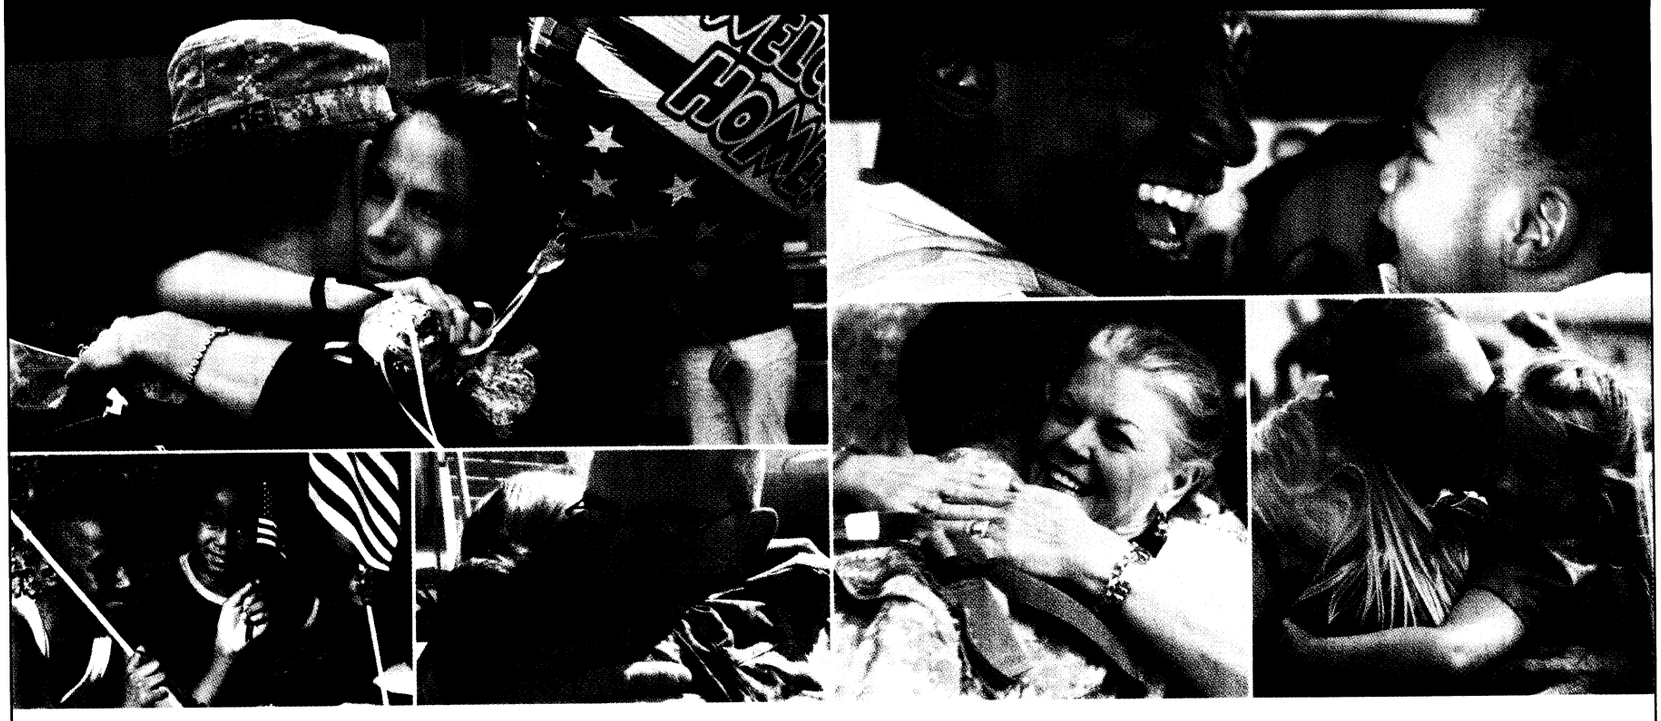


Children may try to take advantage of possible new freedoms. A stable home life is important for their psychological adjustment. Consistent rules, a consistent household schedule, and a special time set aside for families are important to minimizing the stress of a parent's absence.



Symptoms of post traumatic stress disorder may include:

- Depression — chronic numb or flat feeling.
- Isolation — feeling withdrawn from family and friends.
- Alienation — absence of meaningful contact with others.
- Avoidance of feelings —inability to feel or express feelings.
- Rage — bouts of unexplained anger; may be internal or acted out.
- Anxiety — unexplained nervousness, tension, or hyper alert feelings.
- Sleep disturbances — insomnia or nightmares.
- Intrusive thoughts — recollections of traumatic experiences that appear for no apparent reason.
- Startle responses — unusual, involuntary reactions to loud noises.



PTSD probably won't go away on its own. It needs to be treated.

If you or your spouse experience four or more of these symptoms regularly, seek professional help through Family Advocacy Program (706-545-4013), Chaplains Family Life Center (706-545-1760), or Social Work Service (706-545-1661).
