"The Club" team has grown to over 50 members, but because the developer's technology is shared across most projects in the company ("Project Gotham Racing," etc), it's hard to give an exact figure on how many have worked on the game over the lifetime of the project. "In terms of the make-up of the team, we've got people from lots of Bizarre projects," says Davies.

"Some guys worked on 'PGR3,' and various people have come in over the life of 'The Club' who have worked on a variety of other top class games and projects. We also have several really strong relationships externally with some incredibly talented people. Art fans might recognize the name John Wallin, who produced the game's environment concept art—and was also heavily involved in a couple of small hits called 'Gears of War' and 'Harry Potter.'"

Likewise, comic enthusiasts will be familiar with the game's aforementioned writer Gordon Rennie, who has had numerous tales published in famed British comic anthology "2000 A.D."

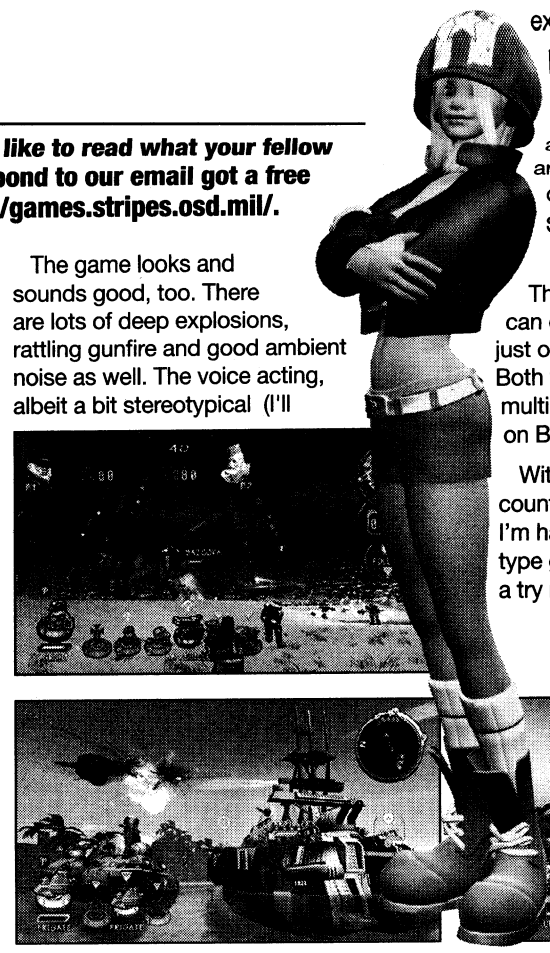
Battalion Wars ii for Wii



Branson

Two great forces battle across the face of Old Xylvania. Lord Ferrok and the Iron Legion wash over the free lands leaving death and destruction in their wake. Rising to challenge Lord Ferrok, the Solar Empire uses a secret doomsday weapon as a last resort—totally destroying the dark lord and his armies. Lifetimes later, a new leader, Kaiser Vlad, will launch his own bid for global conquest. OK! That's enough rhetoric and back-story, let's get to the game.

Battalion Wars ii (note the cool use of the Wii lowercase ii's) is a blast. Once you get past the very basic tutorial level, the fun kicks in. You start off as the Solar Empire and, as the game progresses, you can unlock five other nations to fight with. Each nation has eight Infantry types, five ground vehicles, three Air units and five Naval transports. Your forces are controlled using the Wiimote and nunchuk controllers in a sort-of, quasi -RTS/ third-person-shooter fashion. Sounds weird, right? It is and takes a bit to get the hang of. You control your assigned soldiers RTS style and yourself in "third person." Once you get used to the button commands and the troop abilities—you'll be stomping those nasty Anglos back to the Stone Age.

Let's jump on the graphics and the nuts and gears of BWii. As far as the look and polish of the game—it's on par with most of the better looking GameCube games. Yes, I said "GameCube." If you've played Super Mario Galaxy you'll see the Wii can pump out some amazing visuals and BWii just looks good—not great—just good. Your troops are kind-of cartoony and a bit on the blocky side with sparse animation. Also, most of the environments lack detail and seem a tad flat. Don't get me wrong, the look works great and doesn't detract from the overall game itself.

The game looks and sounds good, too. There are lots of deep explosions, rattling gunfire and good ambient noise as well. The voice acting, albeit a bit stereotypical (I'll explain in a minute...), is pretty good to boot. The Solar Empire guys are obviously Asian and sound way Asian. The Anglos are pigeon-holed in as British and it shows as well. I mean these guys are all "bangers & mash... pip-pip and cheerio." It's definitely on the corny side, but I can live with it.

One more thing: Online multiplayer! This is a rare treat on the Wii indeed. You can either swap friend codes (uggghh) or just opt for random battles with strangers. Both work great with little or no lag. No local multiplayer? What gives? Maybe we'll get it on Battalion Wars 3.

With 20 single-player missions and six countries to play as, BWii delivers in spades. I'm having a blast and I usually don't like RTS type games. Hmmmm... maybe I'll give C&C a try next!

BWii: Cure for Insomnia?

Michael and Missy

OK, maybe it's just because we are adults (we use the term loosely; we may be grown up but we are far from mature), but to be flat out honest, this game was horrible. We started by keeping a detailed list about game play and graphics, but after the second round we were bored to death and had to quit.

My husband and I hated the fact that you could only play this game multi-player on the net. We were looking forward to the Wii standard of absurdly strange mini-games and it broke us to be disappointed by our friends at Nintendo. I was truly hoping for a tanks military game similar to the mini-games on the little classic known as "Conker's Bad Fur Day." We do not have the Internet hooked up to our Wii, so our review may be a little biased.

The graphics on the mini-movies is clear, bright and interesting. The mini-movies content, however, is dull and run of the mill. After 20 minutes of movies and no game play we became a little bit angry, then that subsided, and we just felt very, very, sleepy.

The story line is not catching or engaging, and it leaves you frantically trying to find a magical button to skip forward. All we wanted to do was make the monotone female stop barking at us to "Use the joystick to move forward!"

This game may be OK for older kids, because there aren't any bloody mutilated bodies mindlessly thrown all over a battlefield or tossed around aimlessly for a "Mature" rating. There is a lot of blowing things up. Tanks, bunkers and "bad guys" are all the normal "army guy" thing to attack, and that should be expected in a military game. The controls may be difficult for a smaller child to understand, and there is a lot of hand/eye coordination involved.

BWii may be a great tool for insomniacs; it should help them fall asleep in a few minutes. I also wouldn't doubt if this game ends up on the clearance rack in record time, so save yourself the money and buy it in a bundle in a few months.

Shoot 'Em Up BWii Style

Boland

Battalion Wars II is set on an island and you control a single soldier who eventually grows into a small Army. You must follow a predetermined path where waypoints are identified by yellow stars that float in the air. You will battle people, helicopters, unexploded ordnance and lots of tanks. The game is your basic shoot 'em up kind of a game without much need for strategy or skill. Even the most uncoordinated person could play this game.

But in the end, Battalion Wars II for the Wii was just okay. Being in a combat zone, I did not have much time to play before my review deadline; however, I did play through the first cinematic feature and was easily victorious. I found that the story line was decent but was hoping for more game then story. The time it took to load all of the cinematic parts made the wait not necessarily worth it. I guess it depends if you like to hang around for all the load time.

The controls were fairly simple to use; however, I had an extremely difficult time moving the soldier's head to find the targets. It seemed as though I was always running sideways or backwards. That increased my frustration with playing the game. In the end, I just ran around trying to lock on to anything I could and shoot until the enemy was destroyed.

The artificial intelligence of the enemy was not very sophisticated and left a lot to be desired. I found that although the enemy was shooting at me from all sides with tanks, missiles and small arms fire, I was able to stand in the center of it all and not get a scratch. Conversely, as soon as I locked on and shot the enemy, they were destroyed. Tanks and helicopters took a few more shots but in the end I was able to destroy everything without losing my soldier.

The game does give you other soldiers to command. This was a good feature; however, it was not easy to pick and choose who to send on what mission. In the end, I just selected them all and sent them in to destroy the bad guys. I also just held down the fire button and ran the gauntlet. Both of these techniques worked well and led me to victory.

Overall, I would not recommend this game for anyone. It was too complex for the young user and it left a lot to be desired for the more mature audience. If you have the fifty bucks to spend, then have at it. Otherwise, stick with the Wii golf or bowling; those games make the Wii a fun time for all.

There Ain't Nothin' Like A Game

It's Valentine's Day, when thoughts turn to winning and wooing, pursuit and passion, love and conquering. So naturally we're thinking games here. What else? It seemed appropriate to take this opportunity to wax poetic about our game loves.

In the first category, we have "The Haiku." The haiku is a traditional Japanese poetic form known for its brevity. It is composed of three lines, with the first and third line having five syllables and the second line having seven.

"Duty Calls" the game;
with digital death it reigns.
Enslaved, we play on.

OK, not very upbeat for Valentine's Day… so we offered a second category:

"The Limerick." The story goes that this little poem was first composed by soldiers returning to the Irish town of Limerick from France, sometime in the 18th Century.

A limerick is five lines and does not actually have to be obscene. It's just that many of them are; which may also be related to how they came into being. The first two lines rhyme with the last line and the third and fourth line rhyme with one another.

One night as I gamed in my socks
I'd unlocked nearly all of the locks
So imagine my wrath
When that "red circle of death"
Suddenly lit up my Xbox!

Well, that's not too romantic either. And we were thinking about making the third category "The Sonnet," but figured no one would want to take time away from gaming to write a 14-line lyric poem.

So instead we went with "Blank Verse," which is pretty free form, since it has a rhythm but no rhyme. Which is definitely an improvement over having no rhyme or reason.

Something like this:

The screen blinks on and suddenly I am alive.
To plot, to play, to give strategy its measure.
This is pleasure I can feel only in the presence of Samus.

So Happy Valentine's from us to you, dear readers, and to all the games we've known and loved.

God of War: Chains of Olympus

Publisher: SCEA
Genre: Action
ESRB: Mature 17+
March 4

One of the criticisms often leveled at the PSP is that it is just a smaller version of the PS2. That may make PSP owners reluctant to pick up ports of console games, but when it comes to delivering the thunderous action of "God of War," it's a blessing rather than a curse.

We got our hands on an all-new level in Ready at Dawn's "God of War" prequel and Kratos' next adventure is getting ready to raise the bar for handheld action games. In the words of Ready at Dawn's director of production Marc Turndorf, "We try not to compare ourselves to other PSP games. We're just trying to make a great 'God of War' game."

The story takes place before the original "God of War," but after Kratos has become the Ghost of Sparta. In this period, he was a servant to Olympus, doing the gods' dirty work on Earth. The plot setup may be different, but the gameplay is strikingly familiar. The layout and feel of the controls are remarkably similar to the PS2 games, and even improved in the case of using magic. Instead of selecting a type of magic with the D-pad, the "R" button acts as a shift trigger, enabling the use of magic with the face buttons. In other words, if you hold "R" and press "triangle," Kratos will unleash one kind of magic. But if you press "circle," he will use another. Afterwards, you can just release "R" and go back to swinging your blades.

It looks like the only hang-up with this revised control scheme could be overworking the two shoulder buttons. Independently, "L" and "R" are the block buttons. However, since the PSP doesn't have a second analog stick, you need to hold both "L" and "R" while flicking the nub in order to dive away from attacks. Add to that the fact that "L" is used to initiate power attacks (which can't be interrupted by blocking) and "R" is for casting magic, and sometimes Kratos isn't doing exactly what you want. For the most part, though, the build we played was responsive and fluid.

Most of the basic moves and combos from "God of War II" have found their way back into Kratos arsenal. In the cases where it wouldn't make sense to have the exact same ability (like magic or the Golden Fleece), a similar mechanic has been substituted. The Sun Shield, found in Helios' Temple, can parry attacks if pressed at the right moment. You'll also encounter a new selection of spells. We played a boss fight against the Persian King, and after his grisly defeat (Kratos crushes his skull by repeatedly hitting it with a treasure chest), we earned the fiery Efreet magic.

The full version of "Chains of Olympus" isn't hitting until March, but you can get a taste of the action right now with a demo disc. If you don't believe the "God of War" experience can be faithfully moved to handheld, you may find yourself reevaluating that stance.

Secret Agent Clank

Publisher: SCEA
Genre: Action
ESRB: Pending
Q1

Developer High Impact Games is back after its successful run on "Ratchet & Clank: Size Matters" to make an entirely Clank-focused adventure. Taking place after "Size Matters" and before "Ratchet & Clank Future," this latest iteration finds our furry hero Ratchet wrongly locked up for crimes he didn't commit. His mechanical sidekick Clank dons his secret agent persona, previously seen in "Up Your Arsenal," and sets out to clear his friend's good name.

"When ideas were being proposed for a new Ratchet and Clank, PSP game we saw a lot of potential in the Agent Clank character," writer Oliver Wade says. "Having a secret agent for the main character allows for a lot of cool gadgets, weapons and gameplay."

Gadgets in Clank's stash include cufflink minibombs and a "Tie-A-Rang" that can be tossed at enemies or used to chop suspension ropes and clear out blocked passages.

As part of his new clandestine identity, Clank will use timed button-press sequences to slide past traps and alarms. In one scene we saw him backflip, limbo, and break-dance through a particularly intricate laser grid. These sequences will also be implemented in stealth takedowns.

"A button combo will display on screen and (if you) get the timing right, Clank unleashes a combo of kung-fu moves," environmental artist Dallas Robinson says. "It's better than the Vulcan death grip! Clank can also use timing to shake his groove thing on the dance floor to impress the ladies."

February 26

"Insecticide" is a hard-boiled, fast-shooting detective game set in a festering future city where bugs have evolved as the planet's dominant race. A murder at the powerful Nectarola soft-drink company leads police from the Insecticide Squad on a bug hunt through the city's seedy underbelly, and into a mystery of epic proportions.

Join Detective Chrys Liszt and partner Roachy Caruthers on the case as they become entangled in a web of crime in this third-person shooter/detective game. It's an action-adventure in the truest sense of the word, immersing players in cinematic combat levels, as well as a story-based detective investigation. Use Chrys' unique insect abilities, a range of creative bug weaponry, and old-fashioned street smarts to solve the case and uncover a shocking secret, ultimately bringing the mighty boot of justice down hard on the city's infestation of crime.

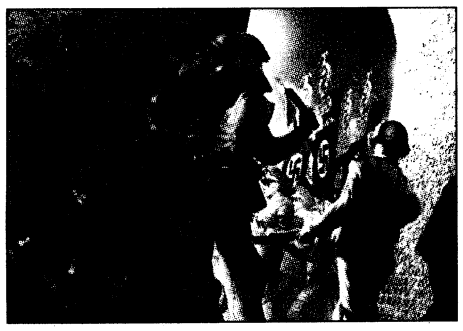
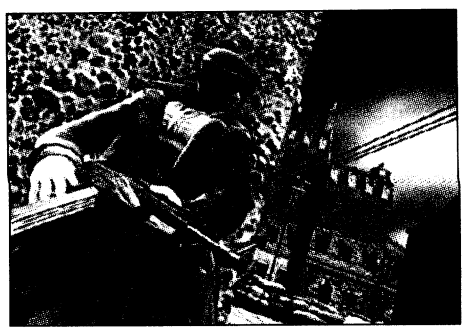
GAMER's Hot List



Saboteur

Publisher: Electronic Arts
Genre: Action
ESRB: Pending
Spring 2008

"Saboteur" tells the tale of Sean Devlin, an Irish race car driver in the '40s, who is based loosely on a real character from the time. He's brash, stubborn and reckless in everything from his car racing to his interactions with the opposite sex.



It's at least some of these tendencies that get him in trouble with a couple of Nazi car racers who run in the same circles, and it's not long before Sean finds himself embroiled in the French Resistance.

The gameplay that ensues is a melding of platforming, stealth, shooting and open-world exploration. However, despite Sean's background, the game really doesn't have a central racing component. While cars and other vehicles play a part, they'll mostly be used to get Sean where he needs to go, which may end up being some pretty far-flung locations. The game depicts a huge area of the French countryside including, among other things, the entirety of Paris. Sean's missions of sabotage will take him throughout this vast sweep of land, wandering freely through a totally open world. He'll drive through the streets and take to the rooftops, clamber over chimneys and slide down clotheslines.

One of the coolest features of the game is how Sean's actions will turn the world from black and white into color as he inspires the people and energizes them with his acts of defiance. Commonly, the tasks that help to enliven the surrounding area involve taking out Nazi installations and running like hell. The team sums up their mission style succinctly: Quiet in, loud out. Through disguises, stolen papers, and plain, old-fashioned sneaking, Sean will make his way into a secure location. Act suspiciously, and the guards will react accordingly, raising the alarm and calling for reinforcements. A more carefully planned entry means Sean won't have to deal with the backlash until after he blows up that supply train he is after.

"The Last Remnant" represents Square Enix's attempt to create a new property to stand beside its "Final Fantasy," "Dragon Quest" and "Kingdom Hearts" franchises.

A handful of unconventional steps are being taken with the development of "The Last Remnant." It will be multiplatform from day one, and utilize Epic's "Unreal Engine 3."

Also, instead of using a traditional, individual-based battle system, "The Last Remnant" will have conflicts that occur on a larger scale. Players will issue commands to groups rather than individual characters as armies clash on battlefields with up to 70 units.

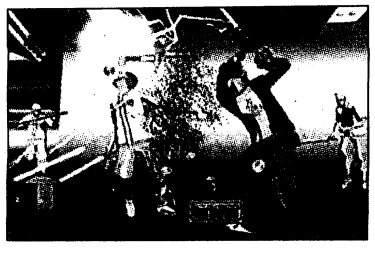
No More Heroes

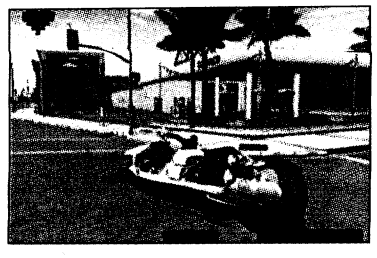
Publisher: Ubisoft
Genre: Action
ESRB: Mature 17+
Available Now

The next project from Goichi Suda's Grasshopper Manufacture, "No More Heroes," is poised to be another pleasant departure from the norm, though with a focus on gameplay that many felt "Killer 7" lacked.

Players control aspiring assassin Travis Touchdown, a resident of the fictional town of Santa Destroy. In order to climb the ranks, Travis needs to take down 10 other assassins using his favorite weapon: an energy sword. In fact, the prominence of swordplay in "No More Heroes" is why the game is a Wii exclusive.



While the words "sword" and "Wii" immediately trigger notions of arm-flailing gameplay, Suda deliberately took a different approach to how players direct Travis' actions. The "A" button slashes the katana and the nunchuk handles movement, though certain moves and sequences will rely on using motion and positioning of the remote.



The bizarre cocktail of violence, style, and off-beat humor makes "No More Heroes" one of the titles to keep on your radar.

Thankfully, you won't have to stay on the lookout very long; you and Travis Touchdown will be slicing things up in February.

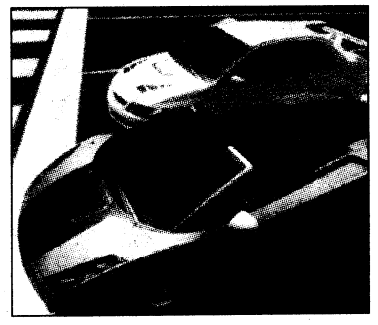
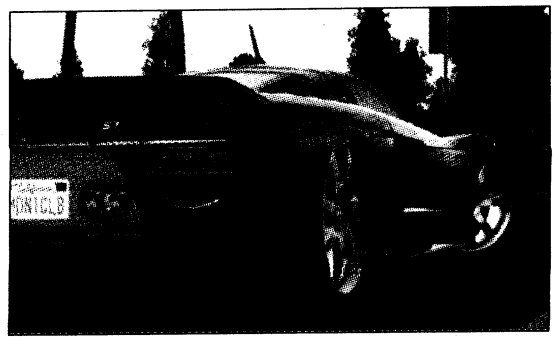
Midnight Club: Los Angeles



Publisher: Rockstar Games
Genre: Racing
ESRB: Pending
Spring 2008

In "Midnight Club: Los Angeles," the Rock San Diego team is focused on creating one massive urban area.

This focus allows for a new level of detail that, even at this stage, is quite striking. The city while not an accurate representation of LA attempts to capture the flavor of the city without all the tight corners and bottleneck traffic that would detract from the racing experience.



Although the entire city is open to you from the outset, you'll have to unlock events, cars and customization options with "Reputation," which serves as the game's currency. Unlike past games, this means you can have access to everything "MC: LA" has to offer without actually winning every event, as Reputation is awarded not just for coming in first. For example, you might get 150 points for winning an easy race, but 300 for finishing third in a difficult event. In this way, the team hopes that more people will get to see more of the experience, without having to compromise the difficulty of the higher-end events.

Rockstar won't confirm exact numbers, but expect more cars and more ways to customize them than ever before. We did get a chance to see at least two hot rides the Mustang 1969 Boss 302 and the much-coveted Lamborghini Gallardo and were pleased that, despite all the graphical horsepower being given to creating a detailed cityscape, the cars look absolutely gorgeous. In fact, Rockstar claims that most cars top 100,000 polygons, mainly because the interiors are now fully rendered. More impressively, they're fully customizable, so if you've always wanted red stitching on your leather seats, you'll be able to do it in the game.

Publisher: THQ

Genre: Action

With its similarities to "Grand Theft Auto," it would be easy to dismiss the "Saints Row" series as an also-ran.

But the first game in the series delivered several exciting features that set it apart from the pack in everything from its flexible combat mechanic to the hilarious activities available throughout the city, like throwing yourself in front of cars for insurance money. If our early impressions are accurate, the sequel is looking to expand the insanity even further with deeper customization, wilder situations, and a darker, more compelling storyline.

"Saints Row 2" picks up right where the last game left off. Your main character has been left for dead, and starts back on the road to recovery by striking back at those who conspired against him.

As anybody who has played the first game knows, the titular Saints are an integral part of the city of Stillwater. Consequently, the new game takes that original city, dramatically revises its existing layout, and adds on a swath of new areas. This widely expanded cityscape is traversable in a new range of vehicles as well.

The original game prided itself on customization tools, and this new installment of the franchise is no different. If anything, the ability to make the game your own is more of a focus, starting with your own character (which can be female this time around). From dressing like a complete fool to creating some freak of nature, anything is an option. New weapons like the "satchel charge" can deliver that classic moment of arming a car before your victim gets in, only to remotely detonate once he arrives. A new rocket launcher can be aimed after firing—imagine the possibilities. Finally, the laugh-inducing activities return, albeit with some new variations. Consider for a moment the beauty of surfing the top of speeding cars, or perhaps a marksmanship test built around nailing the most crotch shots on passersby. Silly, perhaps—but almost certainly amusing. And we can only assume the laughs will be amplified by the inclusion of both competitive and cooperative online play with friends.

With its over-the-top gameplay, online multiplayer, and expanded game world, "Saints Row 2" has all the ingredients to set it apart in an otherwise too-familiar genre. We can't help but be excited about the potential results.

Burnout Paradise

Publisher: Electronic Arts

Genre: Racing

ESRB: Everyone 10+

Available Now

We're all for open-world playgrounds, but "Paradise" has us wondering if that formula is the right choice for the frantic "Burnout" franchise. That's not to say that the game is in bad shape—far from it. After an extensive hands-on play session of a near-final game build, we noticed loads of cool new ideas that make this installment bigger than ever before. Simultaneously, the need to wrap everything around the open-world concept has left some gaping holes in the otherwise solid gameplay.

The most important element of "Burnout" is definitely intact—the intense sense of speed and out-of-control action. In particular, the physics modeling of crashes looks phenomenal, from the way cars flip and corkscrew down the road after a nasty collision to the remarkable metal deformation when slamming into a wall.

We were more than a little sad to see that Criterion has dropped the traditional "crash" mode in favor of a more generic "showtime" mode in order to fit with the open-world idea. Here, players can start a crash at any point on the street, which sends them bouncing down the road trying to hit as many cars as possible. It's a lot of fun, but we miss the specified medal goals of preset events.

Individual races frequently start in the middle of the city and send you zooming off to one of eight far edges of the map. While these races are as explosive as ever, they often mean you'll need to drive all the way back down into the city to find your next big event.

March 11

Break out the nightlight, drop to your knees and pray that you don't dream about "Condemned 2: Bloodshot."

After working our way through the first level of a demo, we can tell you that it makes the first game look like a picnic on a sunny day. It's shaping up to be one of the most terrifying and cerebral experiences in gaming.

In the year that followed since former FBI forensics investigator Ethan Thomas' life went to hell, he's become an emotional wreck, and the only solace he can find is in a bottle. Rather than simply having his dependency on alcohol magically disappear when gameplay commences, you'll see Ethan struggle with the shakes when he tries to hold a firearm steady, and he may even start seeing things that aren't really there. Monolith is going to great lengths to make this character feel real, and it will be interesting to see how his character develops as this story unfolds.

Battlefield: Bad Company

Publisher: Electronic Arts

Genre: Shooter

ESRB: Pending

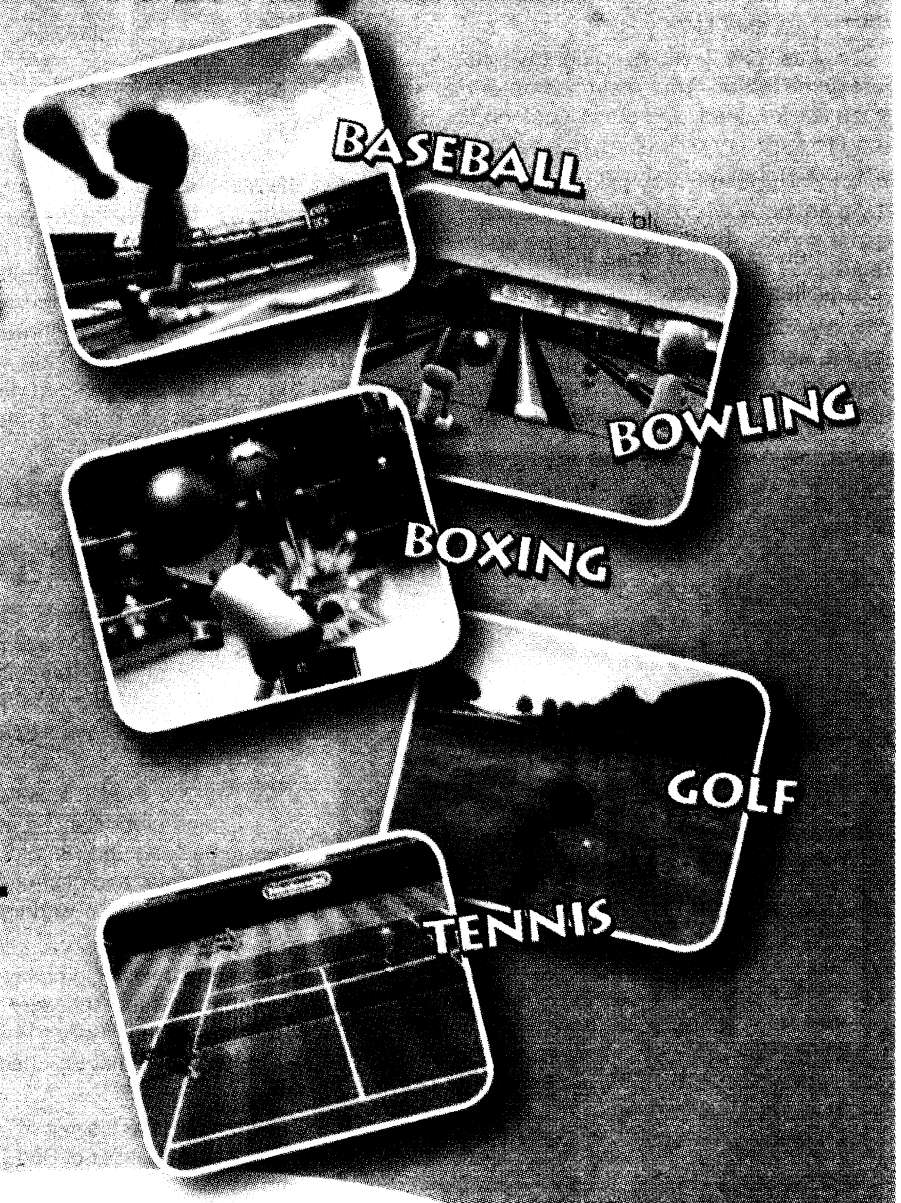
March 28

"Battlefield: Bad Company" long ago passed its original Spring 2007 release date. But all of the extra work seems to be paying off.

Digital Illusions CE's proprietary Frostbite engine looks to be living up to its promise with impressive detail and destruction alike—especially for an open-world game.

Story details are finally starting to emerge about "Bad Company." Sure, we know the game is inspired by movies like "Three Kings" and "Kelly's Heroes," but we haven't really met the characters until now.

Players will take the role of Preston, the greenest member of Bad Company, who basically gets bossed around by the others. Sarge is close to retiring from the military, Haggard is good with explosives, and Sweetwater is the brains. Commanders have sent the squad to their inevitable deaths in a war with Russia and a Middle East coalition. Rather than accept their fate, the squad goes AWOL in search of hidden caches of gold on a sprawling battlefield that spans miles and miles.



In a recent gameplay demo, we saw Preston and company hop into a Humvee and book it to a military checkpoint. While he could have thinned the enemy ranks with a sniper rifle or run in with guns blazing, Preston instead pulled out a radio that had been previously stolen from the enemy. With a quick rattling off of coordinates, we soon had the enemy launching a mortar strike against its own forces. As he stormed the panicked base, the main road through the center looked to be the sole dangerous option. But thanks to the destructible environments he was able to tunnel through buildings, blowing holes through the walls with a grenade launcher.

Get set to compete in MWR's Wii Warrior Challenge

Stripes GAMER is excited about being the sponsor for U.S. Army MWR's Wii Warrior Challenge, to be held at 25 MWR locations around the world beginning in March. Competition will be centered on the Wii Sports games (baseball, bowling, boxing, golf and tennis), with a winner in each individual sport plus one "pentathlon" winner who competes in all sports and scores highest overall.

Introduced with the Wii console in November 2006, Wii Sports zoomed up the popularity charts to delight young and old alike. Graphically, the games look like old-style 8-bit games—only they're fully 3D and therefore a lot more lifelike. Central to the experience is the Wiimote, a 360-degree motion-sensitive controller that lets players swing, swat and throw very much as they would if they were playing the sport itself. On top of being fun to play, the action is a lot of fun to watch.

For those who have not yet experienced Wii joy, each tournament location will offer open Wii practice sessions beginning about two weeks before the Wii Warrior Challenge gets underway.

Of course it's all good fun—but what can you WIN? The answer to that is: some über cool stuff.

Each of the 25 locations hosting the Wii Warrior Challenge will award the following prizes:

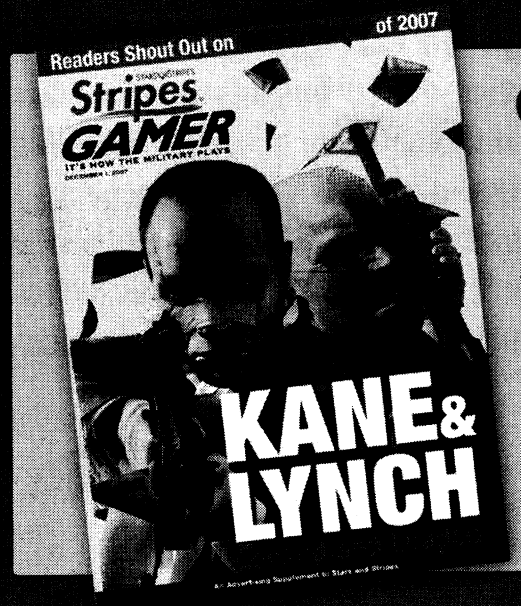
- Rebounder Mini Trampoline w/ support bar (one)
- Mio sport watch w/ heart monitor (two)
- $75 Nike Gift Card (one)
- RipStik Caster Board (one)

In addition to these prizes, players in the Wii Warrior Challenge can aim for one of the three shots at the Grand Prize level:

First: Wii Prize Bundle (includes Wii console)

Second: Flip Video camera

Third: Custom Nike Gift Certificate



For more information, visit www.mwrpromotions.com

Actual prizes may vary in model and/or color from images shown here.
Contestants must be 18 and over. No purchase necessary.

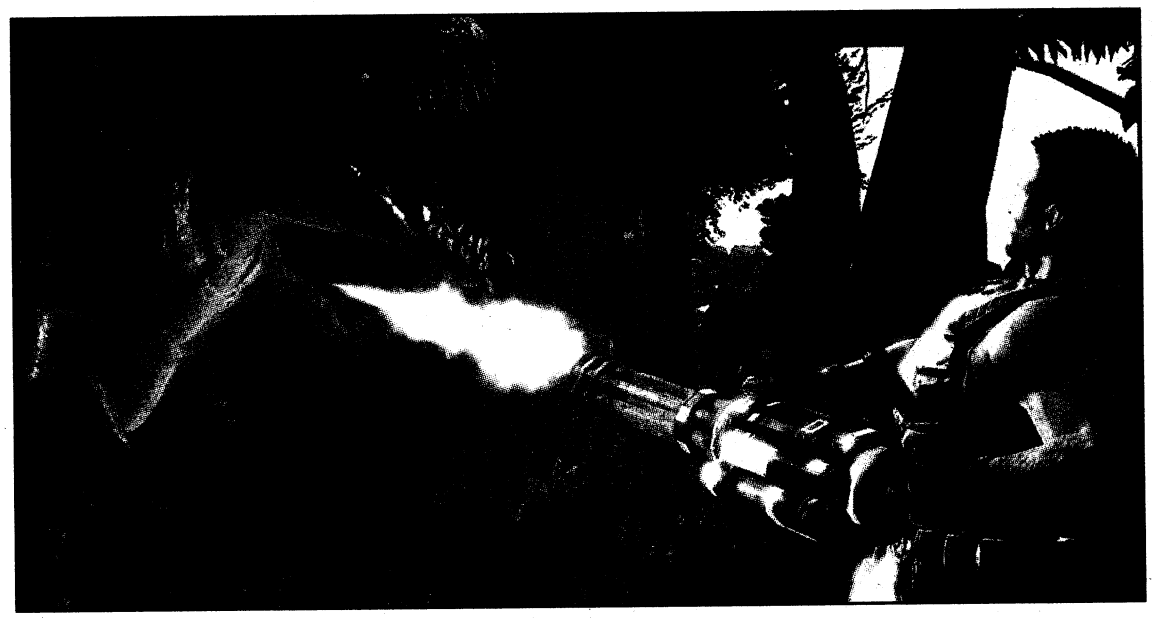
Turok and Roll

Just Add Dinosaurs

Ahh, Acclaim.

Any and everyone who played videogames in the 1980s knew it as the publisher that never ran into a license it didn't like. Remember "Space Jam," "Batman Forever," and "Revolution X: Music is the Weapon" (the Aerosmith shooting game)? All Acclaim. And the list goes on. Much of what they published was, for lack of a better term, shovelware.



But it wasn't all bad. One of the franchises to survive Acclaim's bankruptcy was "Turok: The Dinosaur Hunter"—one of the first console-based first-person shooters, and something of a revelation at the time of its release. After four games of declining quality for the Nintendo 64, followed by one disappointing rendition for current-gen consoles ("Turok: Evolution"), the franchise certainly found itself following a rocky road despite its notably auspicious start. But now it's set to make a comeback, courtesy of publisher Touchstone, and first-time developer Propaganda Games. After a year of concepting, another two of production, and over 100 developers working on the project, it's almost finished. Which begs an initial question: How did a game with so much history end up in the hands of a developer with virtually no history whatsoever?

"It really came from the fact that there are a ton of Turok fans here at Propaganda," says Joel Manners, Game Director at Propaganda. "When we heard that Touchstone was looking at the possibility of making a new Turok game, we jumped at the opportunity. The team created a pitch for the re-imagining of the franchise, and that pitch is essentially the heart of what the game is today."

But where does that heart lie—what, exactly, is "the essential Turok"? Unsurprisingly, Manners has done quite a bit of thinking about the subject.

"The original games were classic, and were a big part of establishing the shooter genre on consoles," he says. "When we started re-imagining Turok for next-generation platforms, we wanted to bring the best elements from the original games and build a new experience and story around them. Dinosaurs are critical to that core experience, as is the experience of exploring a dark and mysterious world, and obviously playing as a Native American hero named Turok."

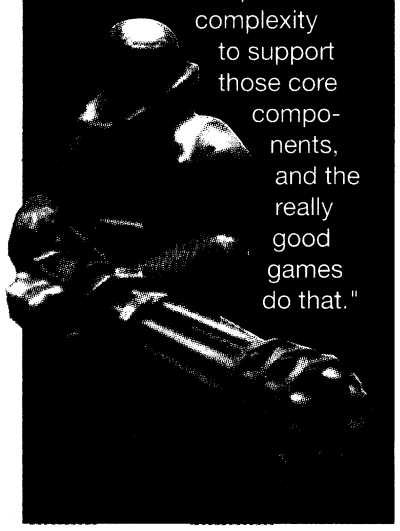
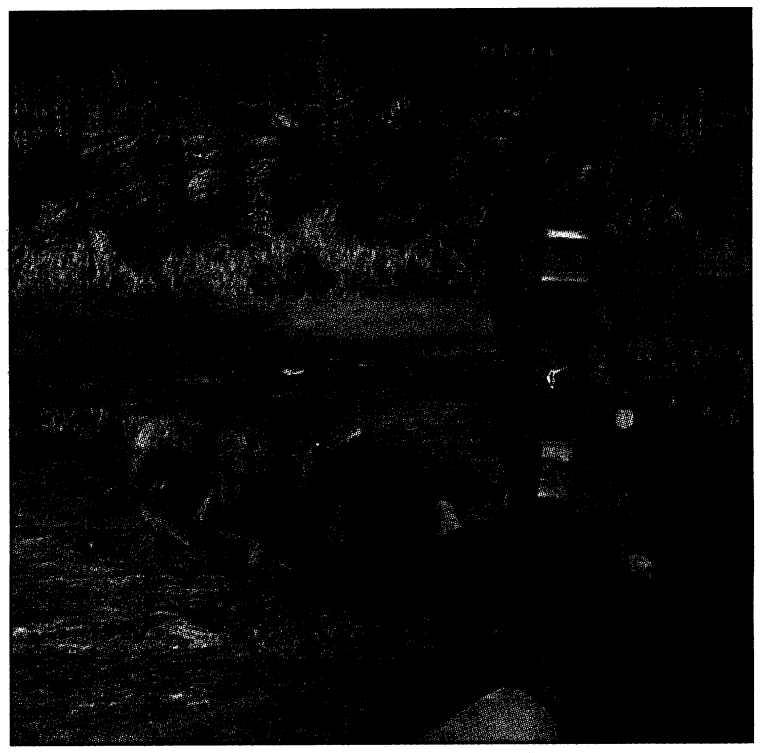
Joel Manners,
Game Director of Propaganda

And, well, there you have it. Commence shooting.

Set 200 years in the future, the game's main character is Joseph Turok, a former black ops commando who is now part of an elite military team. That team faces the double challenge of completing its mission while surviving a rather hostile alien world, filled with nasty, man-eating predators. The dinosaurs themselves don't choose sides—all they care about is food, whether it be your enemies, any one of the game's smaller dinosaurs, or, well, you. This in itself opens up much in terms of gameplay possibilities, as you'll be going at it alone or cooperating with a teammate... and even using the dinosaurs to do your bidding.





What they've been playing

While it doesn't tell the whole story, you can often tell a lot about developers by the games they're playing. Here's where Manners' gamehead is at: "Most recently I've been playing a lot of 'Call of Duty 4' multi-player, which I think is fantastic, and a lot of 'Mass Effect,' which I love for the feeling of wide-open and deep story-telling."

But Manners isn't limited to the newest games on the market.

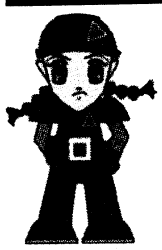
"I personally feel like you can take a lot of inspiration from classic games," he says. "They often had to present really compelling game-play with really simple mechanics and graphics, so they are much more pure and easy to understand. But the critical thing you have to learn from modern games is that it's essential to blend those simple systems together into a much more complex and dynamic package. You have the opportunity to add depth and complexity to support those core components, and the really good games do that."

"As you move through the world it is really important that you remember that the dinosaurs are real predators, that they will go after you, your companions, your enemies, and even each other," says Manners. "It can really pay off if you can lure them out of your way or onto your enemies, and it can be a disaster if you forget about them during an attack. You can go quietly, picking off your enemy from concealment, or go guns blazing. Sometimes you are the hunter, and sometimes the prey."

When pressed to pick one element, Manners says he's most proud of the game's close-quarters combat—what with its awesome knife-kills and mauling sequences.

"Turok already stands apart because of our relentless dinosaurs and the dynamic AI, but with the addition of knife-kills, it really brings home the primitive struggle and rawness of the fight for survival, hunter versus hunted," says Manners. "In reality, consciously switching to a knife when facing down a 500 lb. slavering raptor is insanity. Who in his right mind would do that, unless he has a rock-solid faith in his abilities to face off against nature, no matter what's thrown at him? We're rewarding the player who displays that skill by providing beautifully animated third-person viewpoints of these knife-kills that are quick and seamlessly blend into the overall game experience." Add to that the sheer ferocity of a dinosaur mauling sequence, where you're smashed to the ground and forced to fend off jaws and claws using your knife, fists, and boots, and you have a melee experience that's pretty damn intense.

Making full use of the latest Unreal engine, the game's graphics are definitely impressive. Lush jungles are juxtaposed with hyper-modern weaponry and technology, all glazed in a shiny coat of (virtual) paint. The team took much of its inspiration from movies like Predator, Aliens, 28 Days Later, and Pitch Black. "We loved the focus on gritty reality-based worlds," says Manners—"even when the story was science fiction. And the feeling that the heroes could be predator or prey, often switching at a moment's notice."



And the film references are apt: "Our biggest challenge was to create a game where the AI actors—the dinosaurs, your companions, the enemy soldiers—all behave and respond to what is going on around them believably," says Manners. "We had a lot of fun creating that kind of an open environment, but we needed every last erg of next-gen power to run it." When asked about the rush of film directors getting involved with game production, Manners sees many significant parallels. "In some ways it's very similar—a movie director is creating a visual medium for telling a story. He's taking a screenplay and the talents of his actors and crew and creating the visual and aural experience for the audience through his creative focus. In games we are doing something very similar, but in our case we are creating an interactive story, where the player is a critical part of the creation process. It's as if we also have a screenplay and actors and sets and score, but we also have an audience who wants to direct the story in lots of different ways."

While it certainly has its fair share of competition—plenty of FPS-addicts are still stuck on "Halo 3," "Call of Duty 4," and even "Crysis" on PC—Turok is looking like the best title in the series since back when "64-bit" was the buzzword of the day. The graphics are striking, the ideas are smart, and the feel of the weapons is solid. Of course, whether it has the necessary ingredients for a classic FPS (namely superb level design and pacing) remains to be seen. But it does have one thing that none of those other games have… and that's dinosaurs.

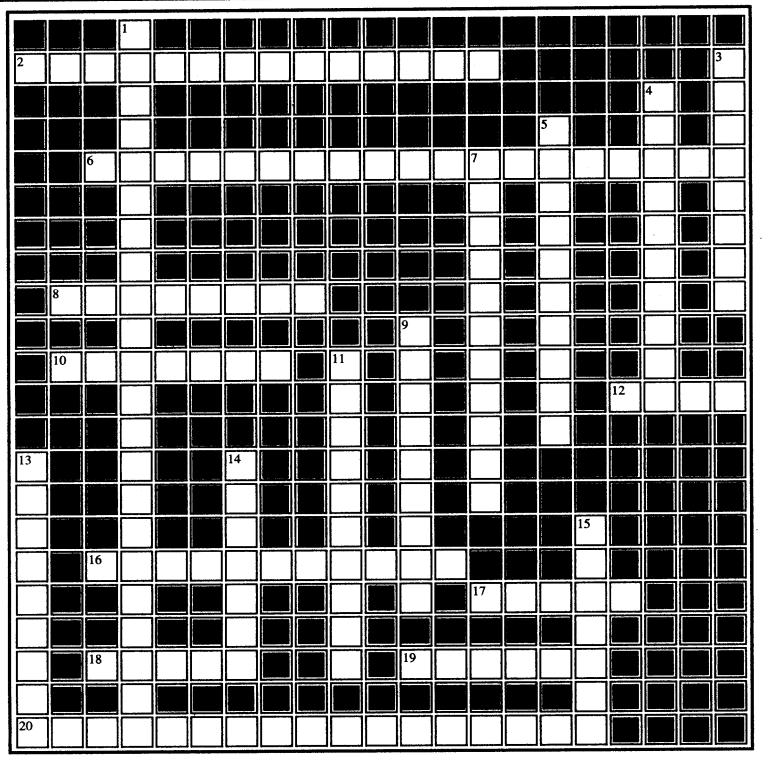
Anime,
For Guitar Hero, how do you do hammer-ons and pull-offs?

WWEbulldog



Well? instead of strumming each note normally, hit the strummer for the first note then finger the other frets.

Hammer on? When a set of notes starts off low and ends high, you would strum the first note normally, but then hammer the high notes.

NEWS

CES: the "other" show

We all know how cool the video game industry is, and we're well versed in "our" annual gathering at E3; but there is another show which garners just a bit of attention—the annual Consumer Electronics Show (CES). Over the past few years, there has been a steady infusion of technology onto the show floor as it relates to gaming.

GAMER descended on Las Vegas once again this year and wanted to share a few of our finds. While not all directly game related, we all share the same technophile gene, so before diving in, a few quick facts about CES.

Exhibit space covers more than 1.7 million sq.ft., or about 35 football fields. To REALLY "do the show," it would take about 2.5 years to meet individually with each of CES's 2,700 exhibitors. Content and entertainment executives: 12,000 come to the show, which is more than two years' worth of feature film releases in theaters worldwide. And to top it off, 32,320 hamburgers were consumed at the this year's event, enough to feed one person a burger a day for more than 88 years. Starting to get a sense of why attendees usually depart Las Vegas as a throng of zombies?

Euricase

Euricase is the developer behind the one of this year's most ingenious products which provides an added layer of applicability or utility for our deployed readers.

Try this on: You love this girl and it's time to pop the big question and present the ring. But you are nervous. You want your wedding proposal to be perfect, memorable – and successful. If only you had rehearsed more. If only your best performance had been recorded and made into a movie. Yes! A message so romantic that your sweetheart swoons every time she watches it. And she watches it a lot.

With the help of a gorgeous ring box that mates jewelry and technology, you can now personalize and perfect your amorous intentions—before the big moment. Developed by Euri, Inc., a California-based firm, the elegant ring box is a veritable light show of devoted love. Open it and you'll find a brilliant 2-inch LCD screen that displays a video or slide show (choose from a selection of prerecorded messages or upload your very own video greeting), any of which can be downloaded via a USB port.

The ring—yes, let's not forget the ring—is set in the finest velvet or leather, which is surrounded by soft-hued perimeter lighting. Many colors are available for the setting and lighting.

The Euricase ring box also makes it possible for soldiers, and long-distance lovers to be home for the holidays—even when they can't be. It's truly the next best thing to being there when being there is really important.

If you're planning on popping the question soon (say Valentine's Day?) get in touch with us ASAP because we have five (5) of these beauties to give away to get you started (or give you the nerve). Send to games@stripes.com with "Euricase" in the subject line.

Sleek Audio SA6 Earphones

Sleek's tagline "Find Your Audio Fingerprint" is probably one of the most fitting descriptive phrases to accompany the SA6. Amidst the hustle and bustle of CES, I was approached by a Sleek Audio representative, and by the end of our discussion all that I could say was, "Thank you for finding me".

The trial experience with these earphones was nothing short of breathtaking—and this was direct from the box, without any adjustments for my own personal preferences (or, believe it or not, ear canal shape). As one would expect, a trade show floor is filled with lights, sounds and booming base from displays as far as the eye can see. It took about 15 seconds for the effect to take place; all I heard was the music in a form that I trust the recording artist envisioned—pure.

Everyone hears differently; music that seems perfectly balanced to one person may seem bass-heavy to another. It all depends on the individual ear (and remember, you have two) of the person listening, as the diameter and depth of the ear canal determine the unique acoustics of each ear. This feat is accomplished with interchangeable treble and bass ports so that users can directly manipulate frequency response to match their own fingerprint (or "earprint"). Visit www.sleek-audio.com and check these out. But, really, hearing is believing.

The amazing team at Sleek has generously offered a few pairs for America's finest to try and let us know what you think. Let us know at games@stripes.com and include "Audio Fingerprint" in your subject line.

Massage Mouse MXP II

After a very long day of carrying around bag upon bag of literature and developing a serious case of "tradeshow shoulder," I stumbled across a booth that promised to help ease my bone-tired body. I watched a few demonstrations out of curiosity and finally decided to give it a go. That was all it took.

Basically, the MXP II is a sleek "iPod-ish" looking gadget that helps simulate the traditional Chinese massage (TuiNa) sensations. Very simply the massage pads are connected to the main unit much the same way as you would plug your headphones into an MP3 player. The pads can be placed anywhere on the body that are especially fatigued. Recommended massage points include the upper shoulders, the spine, arms, lower back, thighs and abs.

The user controls the intensity of the massage experience, which goes from a tapping sensation all the way up to a muscle "grabbing" feeling. Users can gradually adjust the intensity to a level which is comfortable for their experience. Personally, I started out a little cautious, but after five minutes gradually increased the intensity to achieve the full "grabbing" sensation. After 15 minutes, the drooping shoulder felt relieved, while later on that evening, the aching was unnoticeable.

Judge for yourself, but I would venture to guess that a few of our faithful readers have spent hours on their computers or consoles where this just might relieve the stress of any fixed position activity. And think of the applications for Wii! Check them out at www.hi-dow.com. Or shoot us an email at games@stripes.com with subject line "Mouse" as our friends at Hi-Dow have offered up a few units to hear what you think.

Find the right game

The video gaming universe is exploding. It's a whole new world for people who are still thinking of checking out the big games from late 2007. That's why we've made this primer on the top titles.

Rock Band

WHO WANTS IT? Non-musicians who've longed to join a band.

While one player sings into the microphone, another plays a toy guitar, and a third bangs on the drums (a fourth can buy an extra guitar and join the fun). It's like Simon Says – when a color comes on screen, hit the drum or squeeze the guitar button that matches the color, while the vocalist sings, karaoke-style. If everyone does it in rhythm, you'll score points and advance from playing smoky bars to sold-out arenas.

RATING: E, for everyone

Call of Duty 4: Modern Warfare

WHO WANTS IT? Military/news junkies who want to save the world.

The "Call of Duty" series reached legendary status as a World War II-based combat game. Now, the action shifts to the present and to fictionalized events of a world gripped in terror told from the perspectives of a U.S. Marine and a British SAS soldier. The single-player mode is way too short, so get this only if you plan to play with buddies who are in your living room or online.

PRICE: $60; PlayStation 3, Xbox 360

RATING: M, for gamers 17 and older

The Orange Box

WHO WANTS IT? Adventuresome types who wonder what all the "Half-Life" fuss is about. No orange box, just five really good, inventive games from Valve: "Half-Life 2" and its sequels, "Half-Life 2: Episode One"; "Half-Life 2: Episode Two," in which Dr. Gordon Freeman and his crowbar must rescue the world from the fate he has caused; "Portal," an ingenious puzzle game that spirits you around the "Half-Life" world; and "Team Fortress 2," a good revival of the game that started multiplayer play (but don't expect "Halo 3.")

PRICE: $60; PlayStation 3, Xbox 360

RATING: M, for gamers 17 and older

Super Mario Galaxy

WHO WANTS IT? Puzzle lovers who like to be active.

Once again Mario has to rescue Princess Peach from Bowser's clutches, but this time Nintendo takes him into outer space. Wiggling and waving the Wii remote feels like second nature as you bounce baddies in this simply beautiful game for young and old alike.

PRICE: $50; Nintendo Wii

Halo 3

WHO WANTS IT? Straight-shooters who can be competitive and cooperative.

Tired of getting killed online by smirking 13-year-olds? This game shows you replays of the battle you just completed, so you can learn from your mistakes and turn the tables. Few things beat going online to play 26th Century paintball against players from across the globe.

PRICE: $60; Xbox 360

RATING: M, for gamers 17 and older

Ninja Gaiden Sigma

WHO WANTS IT? Anyone who grew up playing fighting games in the arcades.

It's a bloody, button-mashing frenzy, but don't hold that against this title from Tecmo. Never mind the story. This game is about pressing the right combination of buttons to artfully dispatch a menacing ninja as others close in. It's old-school fun.

PRICE: $60; PlayStation 3

RATING: M, for gamers 17 and older

Guitar Hero III: Legends of Rock

WHO WANTS IT? Expert air guitar fiends.

Its predecessors had more whimsical charm, but "GH III" has a way bigger song list. Today's radio hits will be golden oldies by the time you master this game.

RATING: E, for everyone

Mass Effect

WHO WANTS IT? Analytical types who can think several steps ahead.

Bioware's long-awaited game stumbles in a couple of places – could your computer-controlled companions be more accident-prone? – but as a futuristic role-playing game built on moral choices, "Mass Effect" makes you think on your feet.

PRICE: $60; Xbox 360

RATING: E, for everyone

Skate

WHO WANTS IT? Skateboarders who grind everything but their teeth.

A challenging skateboarding game that uses the controller's right stick to pull off combos like a real-world rider. Your patience, persistence and practice will be rewarded with some smooth moves.

PRICE: $60; PlayStation 3, Xbox 360

RATING: E, for everyone

Bioshock

WHO WANTS IT? Mystery lovers who think first, shoot second.

An intelligent game that's more about outwitting the game's enemies than blowing them up (though the game is gory). What's the deal with this strange underwater utopia created by an eccentric business titan? Test your wits to find out.

PRICE: $60; Xbox 360

RATING: M, for gamers 17 and older

Zack and Wiki: Quest for Barbaros' Treasure

WHO WANTS IT? The curious and whimsical kid in all of us.

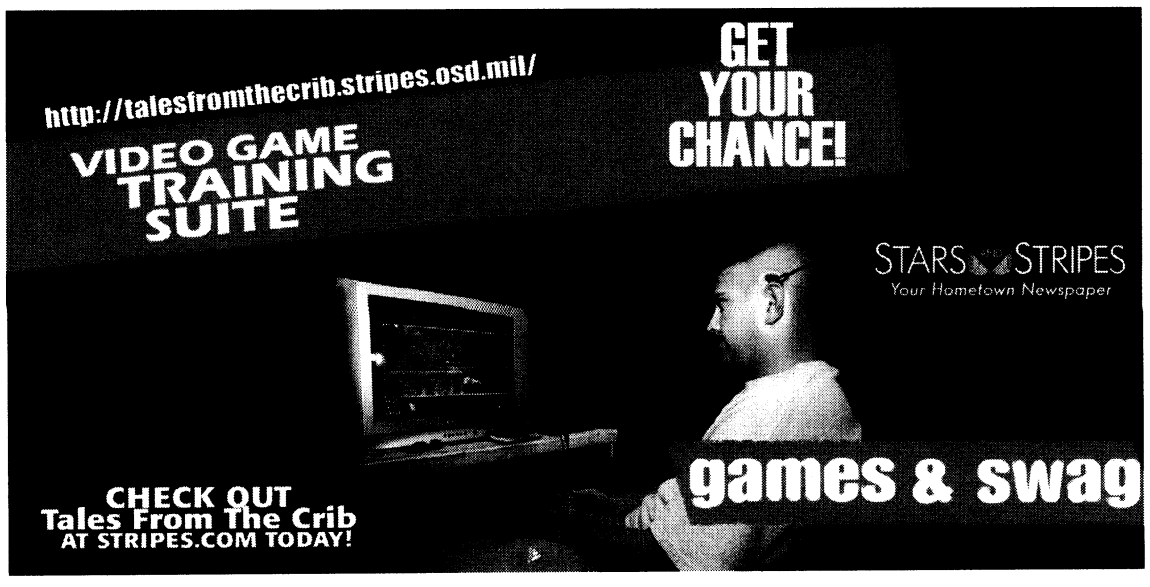
Use your Wii remote as a saw, a hammer, a bell or other tools to help a young pirate wannabe become the world's baddest buccaneer. Cartoony, but it's a game everyone can enjoy.

PRICE: $50; Nintendo Wii

RATING: E, for everyone

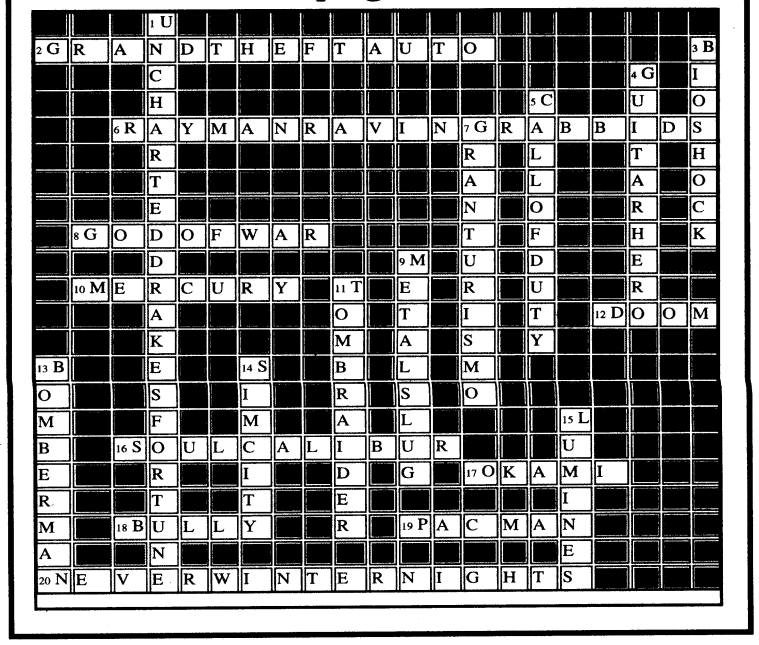
Resident Evil 4: Wii Edition

WHO WANTS IT? Trigger-happy horror lovers.



Fending off zombies has never been more fun than in this bleak nightmare-scape shoot-'em-up. Using the Wii remote and the Nunchuck controller, you take on wave after wave of the undead. Scary fun.

PRICE: $50; Nintendo Wii



RATING: M, for gamers 17 and older

"It's really no big deal to him. All his heroes wear capes," Miles said of his 7-year-old son, Nathan Miles, pictured here reacting to a comment about his father. Miles, who graduated from West Point in 1980, is pictured at right after being promoted Feb. 22 to brigadier general.

Miles beats the odds again

Of the 8,055 officers commissioned with Miles in 1980, only 38 are brigadier generals

THE BAYONET

There are more than 507,000 Soldiers serving in the Army, according to the latest Army census, and only 153 brigadier generals — 154 as of Feb. 22, when Fort Benning's second in command, Lloyd "Milo" Miles received his first star.

The 1980 West Point grad is one of only 38 general officers from the 8,055 commissioned that year.

Miles insisted his success was the result of "so many people ... making me look good." He attended a basic training graduation on Sand Hill before his own ceremony at the Benning Club, Miles said, to remind himself that "this promotion is not about me. It's about them."

"General Patton said the rank an officer wears on his shoulder is a symbol of his servitude to his men. I really do believe that. It's not about how high up the ladder you can go," he said. "It really is about how much service you can provide those men and women who serve under you and how you can make their lives just a little bit better."

The 49-year-old Army brat, the fifth of eight children born to a career NCO, knew he wanted to be an Army officer when he was 8 years old.

After his leg was blown off in a training accident in 1996, it looked for a time like Miles' Army days were numbered. He spent a year at Walter Reed before returning to active duty.

He's since led a brigade into combat and climbed Machu Picchu, where sits the remains of the legendary Lost City of the Incas, in Peru. That, Miles said, is his greatest accomplishment.

Brenda Donnell

Her husband, Spc. Mosco Evans, a cook at the 598th Maintenance Company dining facility, was taken by surprise and was short on cash.

He tried several places for loans, but was turned down until he sought help from Army Emergency Relief. They loaned him money "on the spot" to pay for food and funeral arrangements.

"In a time of need, when you need it most, they're there for you," Evans said.

He recommends other Soldiers use AER and that they donate during the campaign because "they never know when they'll need them."

AER provided $2.5 million to Fort Benning active duty Soldiers, retirees, Family members and widows(ers) last year, said Lionel Grant, AER officer, Army Community Services.

Operation Gratitude addresses needs of individual Soldier

"So many times I've asked young people why they joined the military. And so many times I hear, 'Because I had nothing, and I had no one.' If they go into a war zone, and they think nobody cares, how do they find the strength to come home?"

— Carolyn Blashek

THE BAYONET
Bridgett Siter

When terrorists attacked on Sept. 11, 2001, Carolyn Blashek tried to enlist in the military, but no one would have her. Though the maximum age requirement kept creeping up, from 38 to 40 to 42, Blashek's age kept creeping up, too. So the Encino, Calif., attorney, wife and mother, volunteered at a USO airport lounge in Los Angeles.

There, in March 2003, she met a distraught Soldier who was headed back to combat after returning to the states to bury his mother. The Soldier wanted to speak to a chaplain, but none was available. With just minutes left before departure, he poured his heart out to Blashek.

With his mother gone, the Soldier had no one left who might care if he should be hurt or killed in combat. His only child had died and his wife had divorced him.

"I don't think I'm coming home this time, and it really doesn't matter. No one would even care," he said.

Blashek tried to encourage the Soldier, whose name she never knew. But there was very little she could say or do, and he was just as dejected when he left that lounge as he was when he walked into it. She often wonders about him.

Use caution during this time of growth and progress

COMMANDING GENERAL
Maj. Gen. Walter Wojdakowski

March will be a month of transition for Fort Benning and the surrounding communities, and with all the upcoming changes, it is important to remember safety.

As many of you have heard or read, the Army is going through a transformation. At Fort Benning, we are taking giant steps toward our own transformation.

We have already put forth a lot of resources and manpower just in the planning and preparation phases for the relocation of the Armor Center and School from Fort Knox, Ky., to Fort Benning and the future home of Maneuver Center of Excellence.

This is a major undertaking, and now that we have broken ground for a new Armor training brigade, our transformation projects will intensify.

Since I took command more than two years ago, I have been looking forward to these changes. They include the construction of infrastructure, ranges, roads, and bridges, which is all exciting but may unfortunately cause some disruptions and frustrations in our day-to-day activities. For example, the construction will most likely cause rerouting and changes to traffic patterns and some traffic delays.

There's no easy way around it; change is on the way! And change — even change for the better — can be hard. Having said that, I can assure you we will do everything necessary to minimize any adverse impact on Fort Benning and the surrounding communities.

We will keep you informed on construction projects, on changes to traffic patterns, and we will ensure that hazards are clearly marked.

Our goal is mission accomplishment while keeping you and your Families safe. My advice to you is, if at all possible, avoid construction sites and locations prone to traffic congestion and delays.

Keep informed by reading The Bayonet and watching Fort Benning TV, and plan your routes accordingly. When necessary, change your driving times.

Most of all, I ask you to slow down, expect traffic delays, and be patient. An impatient driver can quickly become an aggressive driver.

An aggressive driver may take unnecessary risks, which all too often may result in a traffic accident. And, one accident is one too many.

In addition to new roads, other construction projects such as buildings, bridges, and firing ranges will be in progress. Keep in mind that any construction area can be dangerous to those who are not supposed to be there. Parents, it is important for you to tell your children of the potential hazards associated with construction sites.

Instruct them to stay away from these areas and to avoid contact with any construction equipment. I also expect all adults to set the example in this.

No matter what the task, on the road to work, on the job, or at home, safety must be foremost in our minds and paramount in our actions.

Beanie Babies: Unlikely super heroes

THE BAYONET
Bridgett Siter

I owe you an apology, those of you who stood in line for hours and wasted all that money on Beanie Babies. I laughed at you. That wasn't nice.

I laughed at you for standing in line for hours to ante up $50 for a neon, tie-dyed and not particularly cute beanbag (with appendages), and another ten spot for a clear, plastic "showcase" to keep it in, so it wouldn't get dusty or damaged or, heaven forbid, have it's Ty tag ripped off (and therefore be rendered worthless) by a clueless kid who thought it was a toy.

Hmm, now that I think about it, it's still darn funny. What were you thinking?

I'm not the sharpest kid in class, but I recognized that whole Beanie Baby phenomenon for what it was, namely a stroke of marketing genius and a colossal waste of money. Someone should conduct a study now, 10 years after the height of the frenzy, to see just how many people actually made a return on their investments — how many cashed in their collection to fund their kid's college education.

Your Beanie Babies are worthless, if you measure worth in dollar value. But just recently, I learned something that should have you dragging them down from the attic in no time flat.

While interviewing Carolyn Blashek, the founder of Operation Gratitude — you can meet her on A1 — I rifled through a care package she'd brought along to show me just what she's sending to Soldiers in Iraq and Afghanistan. The snacks and toiletries and magazines and videos made sense. But the Beanie Baby?

Maybe she detected censure in my reaction. Maybe it was the way I plucked the itty-bitty teddy out by his toe and tossed him aside to see what lay beneath.

Whatever the reason, Carolyn stopped what she was doing to tell me about a letter she received from a Soldier in Iraq, one of the 300,000 service members who have benefited from Operation Gratitude. He thanked her for the gifts, all of them, but the stuffed animal in particular. The Soldiers he served with had all distributed their Beanies to local children, who were so grateful they offered up the whereabouts of local insurgents.

The gift of a toy — and not a particularly good one, says me — won their hearts and may very well have saved not a few lives.

So who's laughing now? Not me. I admit you were right, and I was wrong, and Beanie Babies are priceless.

Clear out your collection and send them all to Carolyn at www.operationgratitude.com.

This week in Fort Benning history

• An article headlined "Phantom Rider Desires Automobiles" put forth the possibility that a number of recent car crashes on Fort Benning Road were perhaps caused by a ghost.

According to post legend, a headless horseman on a big black charger was frequently spotted riding down Fort Benning Road toward Torch Hill. He was believed to be the spirit of a British colonel, presumably Col. John Tate, killed during the American Revolution and buried on Fort Benning.

• An anonymous writer — a veteran of the "Old Army" — bemoaned the state of the Infantry.

"While we still believe our Soldiers have the stuff in them, we are sad in the thought that they will soon become effeminate unless strenuous measures are taken," he wrote.

The cause of concern? The recent announcement that modern conveniences, including potato peelers and meat grinders, had been acquired for post mess halls.

According to The Bayonet, one month's worth of overseas mail to Soldiers, Sailors and Marines had taken up precious cargo space the equivalent to three 11,000-ton Liberty Ships. V Mail would help lighten the load.

"Mail enhances morale, sure, but we can all help alleviate this trying load on the critical shipping space needed to send ammunition and food," the author said. "When writing your pal, your brother, Dad or uncle in service abroad, take advantage of the government's V Mail. It's faster, safer and every bit as private as ordinary mail. No one will see the letter but the censor, and he sees ALL mail."

• "Pants, like faithful pooches and homing pigeons, have a way of traveling hundreds of miles to rejoin their owners," The Bayonet article began.

Lt. John N. Pederson turned in a pair of olive drab trousers at Camp Grant, Ill. They were too tight around the waist.

Months later, at Fort Benning, where Pederson was studying communications, he was proud to say those trousers now fit quite nicely. Somehow, they had traveled from post to post, and they were once again issued to the same Soldier, who recognized his faithful pants by his own Social Security number printed inside the waistband.

1969

• The post newspaper introduced Sgt. Maj. James Gray, a 23-year veteran assigned to the 197th Infantry Brigade. Gray had been a sergeant major for 18 years.

How was that possible?

The former Reserve captain had resigned his commission after three years and returned to active duty as an enlisted Soldier.

• Though records by the Beatles and Glen Cambell were the top sellers at the post exchange, Rhythm and Blues was, overall, the most popular music on post, according to vendors on post.

AER: Helps members of military community in need emergency leave for deaths, illnesses and other Family emergencies, auto repairs, moving into quarters, Soldiers who were returning to active duty but not yet receiving pay and more, he said.

The campaign continues through April 30. All unit representatives will receive packets with all necessary paperwork for cash contributions or allotments Monday at the kick off, Grant said.

Grant said in the last few years, he has noticed an increase in assistance to spouses due to deployments and unforeseen emergencies.

AER also provides assistance to retirees' widows(ers), Grant said. Once retirees die, their pay is stopped. AER can provide interim financial assistance until the survivors start receiving benefits. Assistance is provided in the form of grants.

AER provides more assistance to Army widow(ers) than other military aid organizations which concentrate on assisting active-duty service members, Grant said.

Soldiers are not the only people who can donate, Grant said. Retirees can also give to AER. A letter from Col. Keith Lovejoy, garrison commander, was forwarded to retirees advising them of the campaign and asking for contributions.

"There are quite a few retirees who tell me they didn't know they were eligible," Grant said. "We do our fair share of assisting retirees. For example, I just had a retiree who had an engine go out on his (wife's) car ... so they came in and got assistance."

Although most of the money provided must be paid back, Grant said, there is no interest charged on repayments. AER also provides grants to Soldiers, depending on their situations. Everything is determined on a case-by-case basis, he said.

"AER is here to help people," he said. "We're here to figure out the best way we can provide a service to them."

Facts about Army Emergency Relief

•Provided $2.5 million to Fort Benning Soldiers and their Families in 2007.
•Provided more than $70 million Armywide to almost 64,000 Soldiers and their Families in 2007.

Financial assistance may be provided in the form of:

•An interest free loan, normally repaid over 12 to 24 months;
•An outright grant when repayment would cause hardship; or,
•A combination interest-free loan and grant when repayment of the full amount of assistance would cause hardship.
•In all cases the form of assistance is determined by the Soldier's individual circumstances.

Program: Has provided more than 300,000 care packages

If Blashek could see that Soldier now, she could tell him that his life did indeed matter. He spurred her to action, and as a result, more than 300,000 Soldiers, Sailors, Airmen and Marines have received a package from Blashek's Operation Gratitude.

Shortly after that airport encounter, Blashek solicited donations locally and started mailing care packages addressed to individual service members in combat. The key was to make sure each package was labeled with someone's name.

"They're not 'to any service member.' We make sure they are addressed specifically to an individual, because the whole point of this is to convey to them, every one of them, that they matter. This is a message that the American people really care about you and support you," said Blashek, whose living room enterprise exploded into a multi-million dollar, nonprofit endeavor that has attracted support from across the country.

Operation Gratitude has been endorsed by celebrities, such as Ben Affleck, and military heroes, including retired Lt. Gen. Hal Moore. Newspapers and magazines across the country have reported on Operation Gratitude, and Blashek has been lauded as a hero by CNN and Family Circle Magazine. Scout groups, churches and civic organizations conduct fundraisers and collect books, DVDs, toiletries, snacks and games for the cause, and various corporate donors have also joined the efforts. Postage, which runs nearly $9 a box, is paid through donations.

Now, thousands of volunteers meet regularly at a National Guard armory in Van Nuys, Calif., to pack the boxes that will be shipped overseas during the organization's two annual mailing campaigns. The Patriotic Drive starts in May, and the Holiday Drive starts in November.

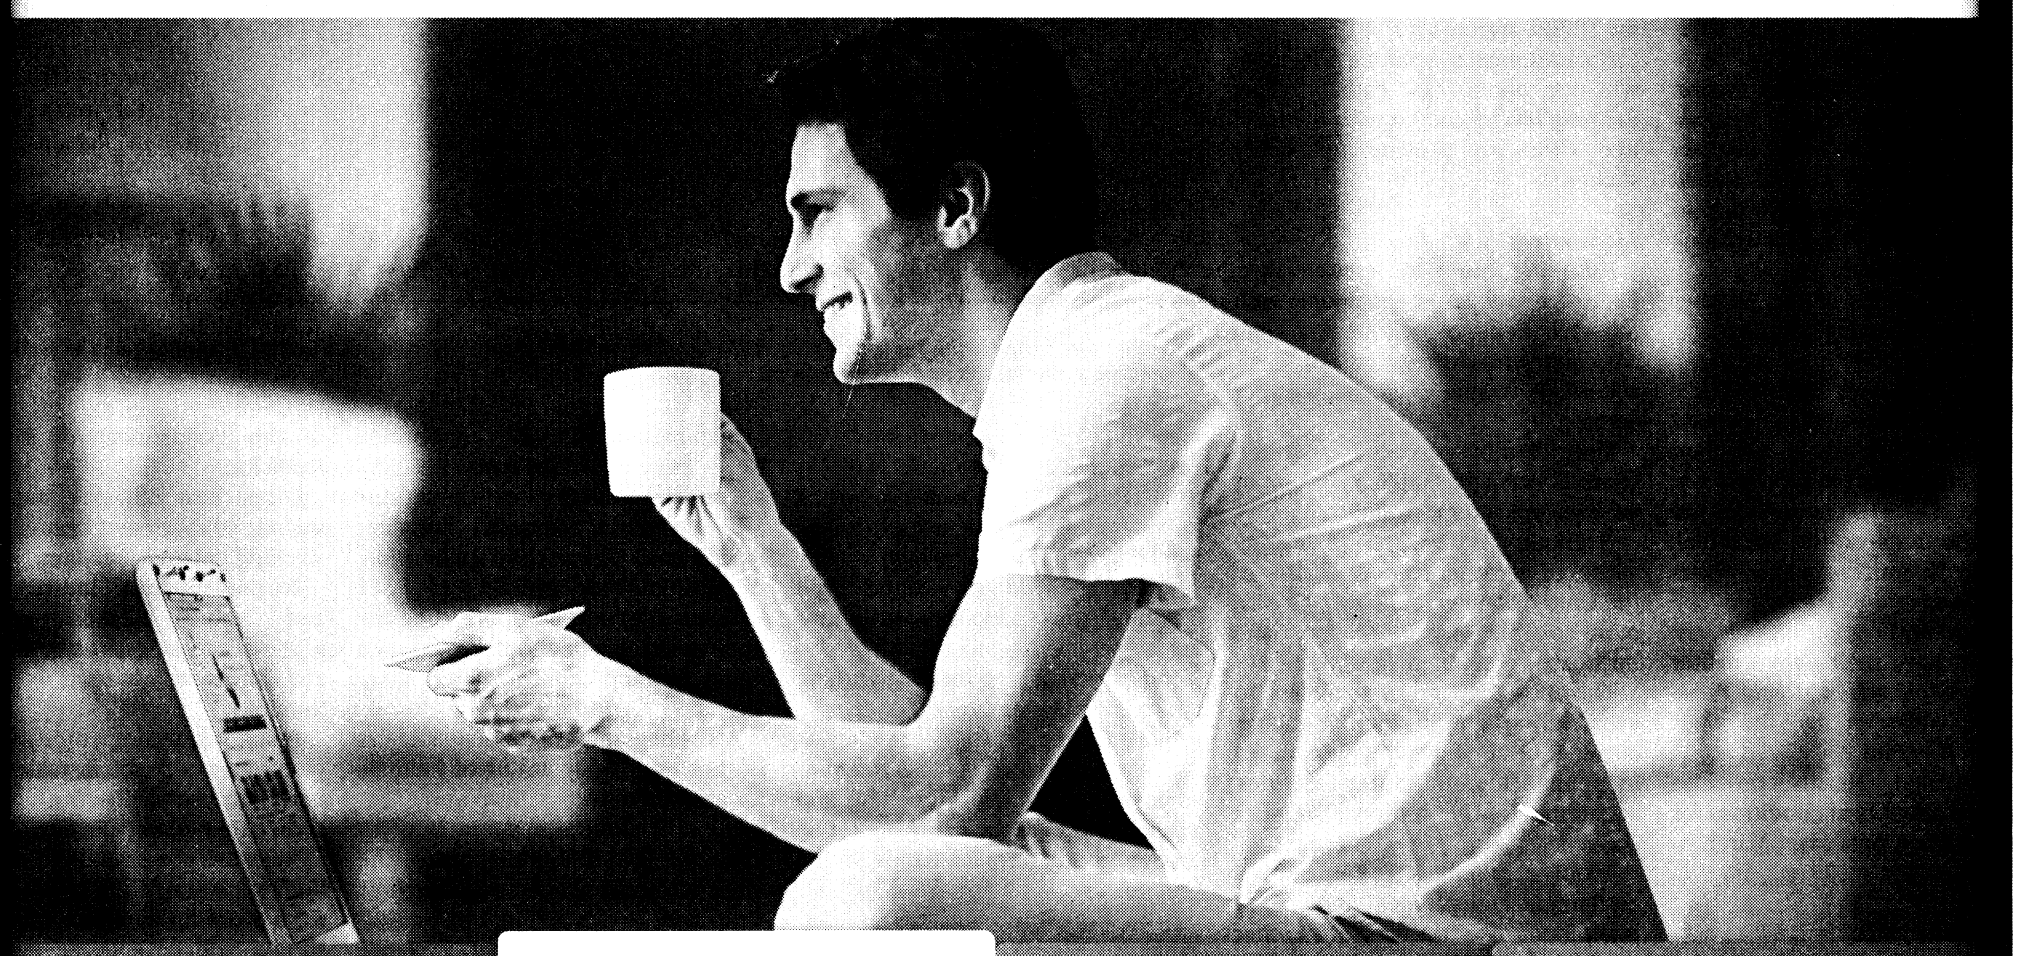
Moore was one of those volunteers in the fall. The 86-year-old retired cavalry commander donated 70,000 books, titled A General's Spiritual Journey, to Operation Gratitude. The book, authored by Toby Warren, offers snapshots of the experiences that shaped Moore into what Warren calls "a spiritual giant."

Blashek and Moore met after she read the book and requested copies for the care packages. Moore flew to California to participate in the Holiday Drive at the armory, where 600 volunteers manned an "assembly line" packaging operation.

"I've never seen, except on a battlefield, a place of such organized confusion," he said last week, when he sat down with Blashek at Fort Benning to discuss Operation Gratitude.

It is a massive undertaking, Blashek said. So much so, that a number of volunteers, including retired Soldiers and engineers, devote much of their time to streamlining the process, so that volunteers can increase their hourly output. Presently, they package, wrap and address between 1,500 and 1,800 boxes each hour.

And every last one of them is still addressed to an individual, just as they were when Blashek started this project. That's one detail she's not willing to concede.



Blashek tells of an e-mail from a Soldier who was estranged from his Family and contemplating suicide until he received his Operation Gratitude package. It was the name on the address label that did it. Until that day, the only mail he had received was addressed "to any service person," and that's exactly how he felt, nameless and insignificant.

He started to cry when he saw that care package, with his name on the label and a letter inside, the Soldier told Blashek. Over the next month, he sought counseling and reconciled with his Family.

"So many times I've asked young people why they joined the military," Blashek said. "And so many times I hear, 'Because I had nothing, and I had no one.' If they go into a war zone, and they think nobody cares, how do they find the strength to come home?"

Blashek said it is always a challenge to reach the commanders who supply lists of names of Soldier in their units. She can be reached at cblashek@aol.com or through the organization's Web site, www.operationgratitude.com. There you'll also find a list of items needed for care packages and a number of ways to contribute.

This tornado was photographed last year near Enterprise, Ala. Tornadoes are one of the weather conditions that can affect Fort Benning training. Other weather conditions that affect training are lightning and high temperatures.

Extreme weather can affect Fort Benning training

Tornadoes, thunderstorm activity, high temperatures hamper operations

THE BAYONET
Brenda Donnell

Tornadoes have been a concern for Georgia and Alabama residents in recent weeks, and more severe weather is expected as March approaches.

Some of the weather that affects Fort Benning includes tornadoes, lightning and heat, said Jeff Gould, site manager at the Fort Benning Weather Station.

Twisters are a concern because of their potential for devastation, Gould said, but heat and lightning affect Fort Benning's major effort — training Soldiers.

"There is a lot of outdoor training here," he said. "In the summer months, thunderstorm activity and high temperatures impact operations and are a major concern for post leadership."

Post warning systems

The Fort Benning Weather Station provides staff and tactical weather support to The U.S. Army Infantry Center, Lawson Army Airfield and all Fort Benning agencies, according to USAIC Regulation 115-1, Fort Benning Weather Support Plan.

One of the duties of the Weather Station is disseminating warnings and advisories to the IOC.

The IOC staff, with the assistance of the Staff Duty NCO, contact key leadership using a program called Propage, warning e-mails are distributed and VHF radio calls are made to the units via the 2-Star Net, said Jeffrey W. Shuck, chief, G3 Plans and Operations.

All units and organizations are required to have their own weather plans as well, Shuck said, and these plans are overseen by the Staff Inspection Program.

Environmental Health provides information about heat conditions for units training on post from March to October.

Tornadoes

A tornado swept through the tricommunity Feb. 17 damaging businesses and leaving people homeless in portions of Georgia and Alabama.

Although no one was killed this time, last year, one senior citizen and eight high school students lost their lives in the March 1 tornado that devastated parts of Enterprise, Ala., near Fort Rucker, Ala.

The same storm destroyed and damaged many businesses and homes in portions of Columbus. Fort Benning was relatively unscathed.

Actions prescribed for post personnel during tornado warnings depend on the situation, Shuck said. In most cases, units and organizations "shelter in place" by moving to a centrally located room, without windows, in their building.

However, exceptions exist, he said. There are a number of re-locatable buildings on post adjacent to permanent structures. Personnel should move to permanent structures during tornado warnings.

For residents on post, the NOAA National Weather Service advises all Families to have a plan in case of a tornado. People inside homes should seek shelter in bathrooms, because the structure in a bathroom is stronger than other parts of a building, Gould said. For even more protection, he advises people to get into the bathtub and cover themselves with a mattress.

Shelters are available on post. Empty barracks space is used first, and then large buildings such as gyms and schools are used.

Shelters are open to active-duty Soldiers and their Families who are in the DEERS system.

For additional evacuating personnel who are not in that category, Fort Benning has partnered with the local Red Cross to provide temporary shelter.

Lightning

Lightning can also wreak havoc. Eighty-five percent of the people who reported being struck by lightning are children and men, ages 10 to 35, according to the National Weather Service.

More than 50 percent of weather-related, in-flight military aircraft mishaps are caused by lightning.

"Lightning is the second leading cause of weather-related deaths in the United States, Gould said. "It kills more people than tornadoes and hurricanes combined."

The most dangerous activities to avoid during lightning include golfing, farming or any activity conducted in open fields and water activities, according to the National Weather Service.

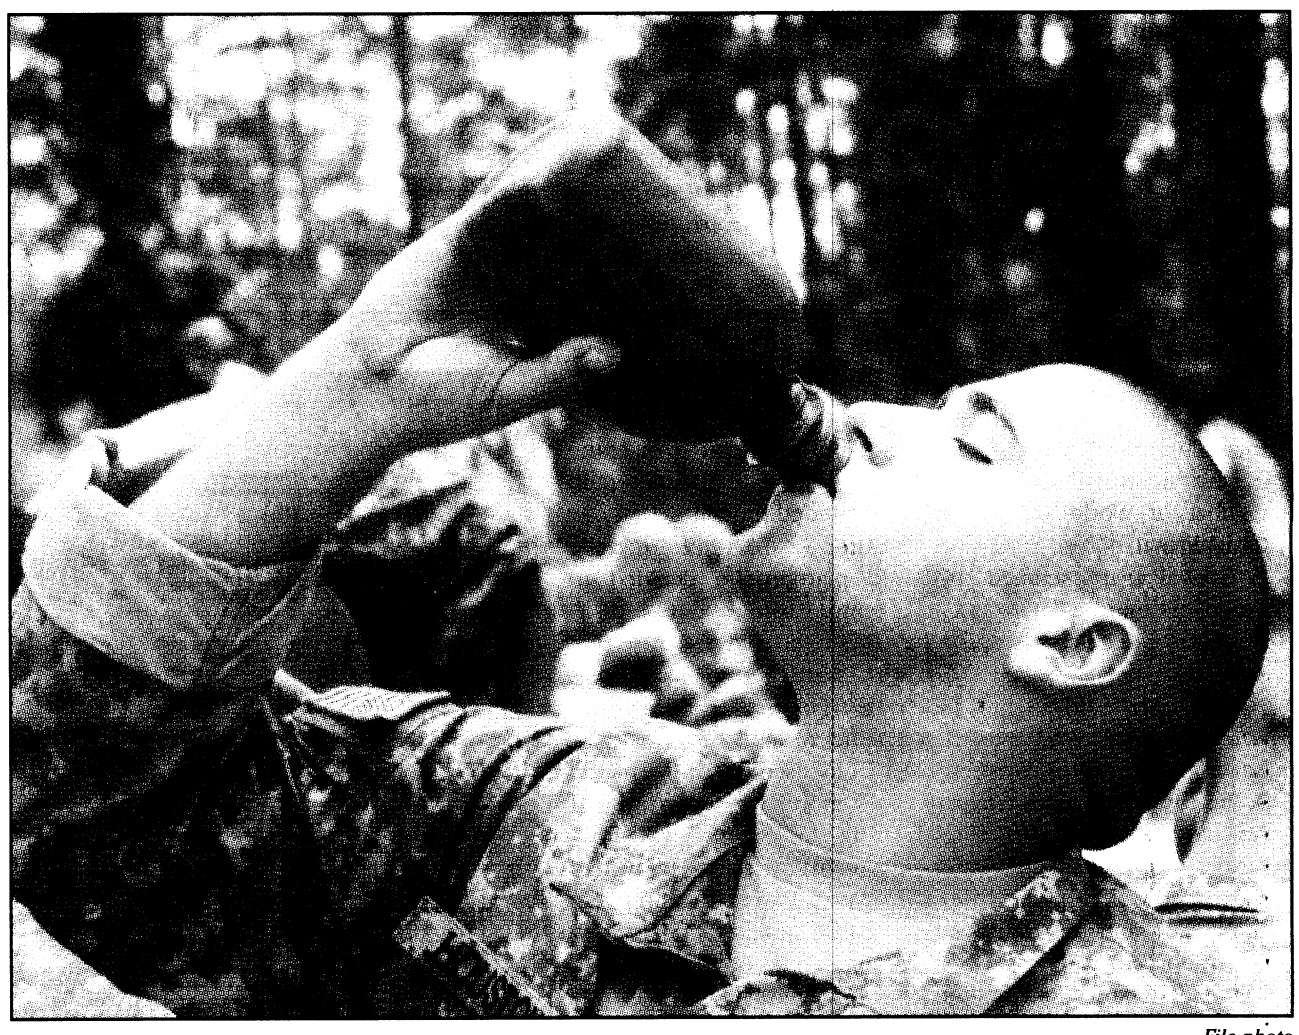
Avoid trees, radios and associated equipment, telephones and heavy equipment like tractors and other machinery. Most strikes occur between June and August from 2 to 6 p.m.

Leaders can prepare for lightning by checking weather forecasts and watching for signs of approaching storms.

Rainfall is not an indicator of lightning, which can occur ahead of precipitation.

The most common military tactical activities that Soldiers are participating in when struck by lightning are using field phones, electrical equipment, computers, switchboards and radios.

The following advice is recommended for Soldiers if the threat of lightning is imminent:



• Avoid high places, hilltops, isolated trees, open spaces, ponds, lakes, oceans, deep standing water, wire and electrical equipment.

• Ground all equipment, such as Kevlar helmets, rucksacks, weapons, knives, radios and any other metal or electrical equipment.

• Move to lower ground until lightning stops or further instructions are issued.

Indicators of a possible lightning strike are hair standing on end and a tingling feeling.

Crouch with feet as close together as possible, with heels touching, and place hands over the ears. Do not lie on the ground or place hands on the ground.

Heat is one of the extreme weather conditions that affect training on Fort Benning. A good rule of thumb for consuming water is drinking enough so urination occurs every hour to hour and a half.

Heat

Georgia and Alabama are known for hot weather, but last year, the area experienced a drought and above-normal temperatures in June that were the highest since 1986, according to the National Weather Service.

Maj. Joseph Reap, operations officer, 192nd Infantry Brigade, said heat injuries can occur any time throughout the year, however.

"We evacuated a couple of Soldiers in January and February," he said. "The effects on the body are the same no matter what date it is, so the cadre is always looking one or two days ahead at the weather ... to make sure they have the right protective gear available and ... procedures are in place, because Soldiers can overheat in 75 degrees or less."

Acclimatization is important, Reap said. Initial-entry Soldiers spend about five to seven days at 30th Adjutant General Battalion (Reception) where they spend most of their time indoors.

When they are outdoors, they are kept in the shade and drink enough water to keep them hydrated, Reap said.

At the beginning of training, Soldiers do not wear body armor or helmets for about two weeks, Reap said.

All drill sergeants know how to calculate the heat index using the wet bulb globe temperature method, Reap said.

At every training event, a WBGT device must be present, and personnel watch it throughout the day and update it hourly.

Other units can call Environmental Health at 706-545-4679 to get the latest heat condition from March to October.

Readings are taken every hour from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. during that time. More information about the heat index can be found in USAIC Regulation 40-14, Prevention of Heat Injury.

Several heat illnesses and conditions can be the result of high temperatures.

Soldiers could get heat cramps, heat exhaustion or heat stroke and hyponatremia, a condition where too much salt is excreted through perspiration and replaced only by water, said Maj. Laura Pacha, chief of the Department of Preventive Medicine.

Other heat illnesses and injuries include sunburn and heat edema, the swelling of hands and feet.

To prevent heat illnesses, Soldiers and leaders should encourage acclimatization, especially if Soldiers and others are not used to Georgia's humidity.

Pacha said some people think they won't have a problem with the heat here, because they've been to Iraq or some other desert climate.

"Because the humidity keeps your body's natural cooling mechanisms from working as effectively as they should, you have to be even more diligent about taking cool showers and giving your body a chance to dump all the heat it has accumulated," she said.

Other tips include working in the shade as much as possible, taking frequent breaks, going indoors with air conditioning, staying hydrated, eating all meals and rescheduling activities for a cooler time of day, she said.

A good rule of thumb for consuming water is drinking enough so urination occurs every hour to hour and a half.

Adjusting clothing helps also, Pacha said. Wear light, loose clothing that allows air to reach the body.

"Adapting your activities to the heat is not a sign of weakness, but a sign of smarts and is Army Strong," Pacha said.

Officials say vehicles on post must be 'clean'

Obscene bumper stickers, ornaments are not allowed on post

THE BAYONET
Cheryl Rodewig

Common sense and courtesy are guidelines to follow in most things, including what to display on vehicles on post.

According to Army Regulation 600-20, military personnel and federal employees may not display obscene or inflammatory content on any vehicle on an Army installation.

"I have always heard that there is no way to teach people good taste. This is true with respect to vehicles, because we all have seen many inappropriate things displayed on vehicles," said Col. Lyle Cayce, the Fort Benning Staff Judge Advocate.

"For example, I saw a pick-up truck that had what one might call 'appendages' dangling from the trailer hitch. Some people might laugh and think this was clever, but many others, including parents with young children, are offended by the display."

The regulation applies specifically to federal workers and Soldiers, but Military Police can ask anyone displaying offensive items on their vehicle to remove them. Items may include distasteful ornaments hanging from the rearview mirror or trailer hitch, stickers with curse words or other vulgar language, or inappropriate images posted on car bumpers or motorcycle helmets.

The installation commander has not only the authority but also the obligation to protect post residents and visitors from obscene content, said Richard Gordon, chief of Administrative and Civil Law on Fort Benning.

"I lived on Fort Benning for three years, and I certainly wouldn't want my children to have to be exposed to obscene or insulting ... materials or bumper stickers like that," he said.

Political bumper stickers, like those supporting a certain candidate, are allowed on post as long as there is nothing defamatory regarding another individual, Gordon said.

> "I have always heard that there is no way to teach people good taste. This is true with respect to vehicles, because we have all seen many inappropriate things displayed on vehicles."
>
> — Col. Lyle Cayce, Fort Benning Staff Judge Advocate

If anyone does complain about offensive content on vehicles, post authorities will investigate to resolve the problem.

"Ultimately, the installation commander must ensure that the installation is a good environment for all who live and work here," Cayce said.

"If a bumper sticker or other material displayed on a vehicle is offensive, the installation commander can lawfully direct a person to remove the offending material. If the person refuses, then the commander can prevent the person from driving the vehicle on post. This authority is part of the commander's inherent responsibility to ensure good order and discipline and does not violate anyone's right to freedom of speech."

For more information, call Gordon at 706-545-1130.

First Sioux awarded MoH

Master Sgt. Woodrow Wilson Keeble will be awarded the Medal of Honor posthumously Monday.

WASHINGTON – During the final allied offensive of the Korean War, Master Sgt. Woodrow Wilson Keeble risked his life to save his fellow Soldiers. Almost six decades later and 26 years after his death, Keeble will be the first full-blooded Sioux Indian to receive the Medal of Honor.

The White House announced that Keeble will receive the Medal of Honor posthumously Monday.

Keeble is one of the most decorated Soldiers in North Dakota history. He was born in 1917 in Waubay, S.D., on the Sisseton-Wahpeton Sioux Reservation.

In 1942, he joined the North Dakota National Guard, and in October that year, found himself embroiled in some of the fiercest hand-to-hand combat of World War II on Guadalcanal.

"Guadalcanal seemed to be on his mind a lot," Russell Hawkins, Keeble's stepson, said.

"His fellow Soldiers said he had to fight a lot of hand-to-hand fights with the Japanese, so he saw their faces. Every now and then he would get a far-away look in his eyes, and I knew he was thinking about those men and the things he had to do."

At Henderson Field on the South Pacific Island, Keeble served with Company I, 164th Infantry, the first Army unit on Guadalcanal.

"I heard stories from James Fenelon, who served with him there, and he would talk about how the men of the 164th rallied around this full-blooded Sioux Indian whose accuracy with the Browning Automatic Rifle was unparalleled," Hawkins said.

"It was said he would go in front of patrols and kill enemies before his unit would get there."

Keeble was a seasoned, 34-year-old master sergeant serving with the 19th Infantry Regiment, 24th Division.

According to eyewitness accounts, while serving in the vicinity of the Kumsong River in 1951, Keeble voluntarily took responsibility for three platoons in successive assaults upon the Chinese who held a hill. All three charges were repulsed, and the company suffered heavy casualties. Trenches filled with enemy soldiers and fortified by three pillboxes containing machine guns and additional men surrounded the hill.

"He once told a relative that the fourth attempt he was either going to take them out or die trying," Hawkins said. "Woody used to tell people he was more concerned about losing his men than about losing his own life. He pushed his own life to the limit. He wasn't willing to put his fellow Soldiers' lives on the line."

Armed with grenades and his rifle, Keeble crawled to an area 50 yards from the ridgeline, flanked the left pillbox and used grenades and rifle fire to eliminate it.

After returning to the company's first line of defense, Keeble worked his way to the opposite side of the ridgeline and took out the right pillbox with grenades. Then he lobbed a grenade into the back entrance of the middle pillbox and eliminated it.

Hawkins said one eyewitness told him the enemy directed its entire arsenal at Keeble during his assault. After he killed the machine gunners, Keeble ordered his men to advance and secure the hill.

Keeble was wounded at least five times by fragmentation and concussion grenades.

For more information, call 706-544-8251.

Army releases new field manual for operations

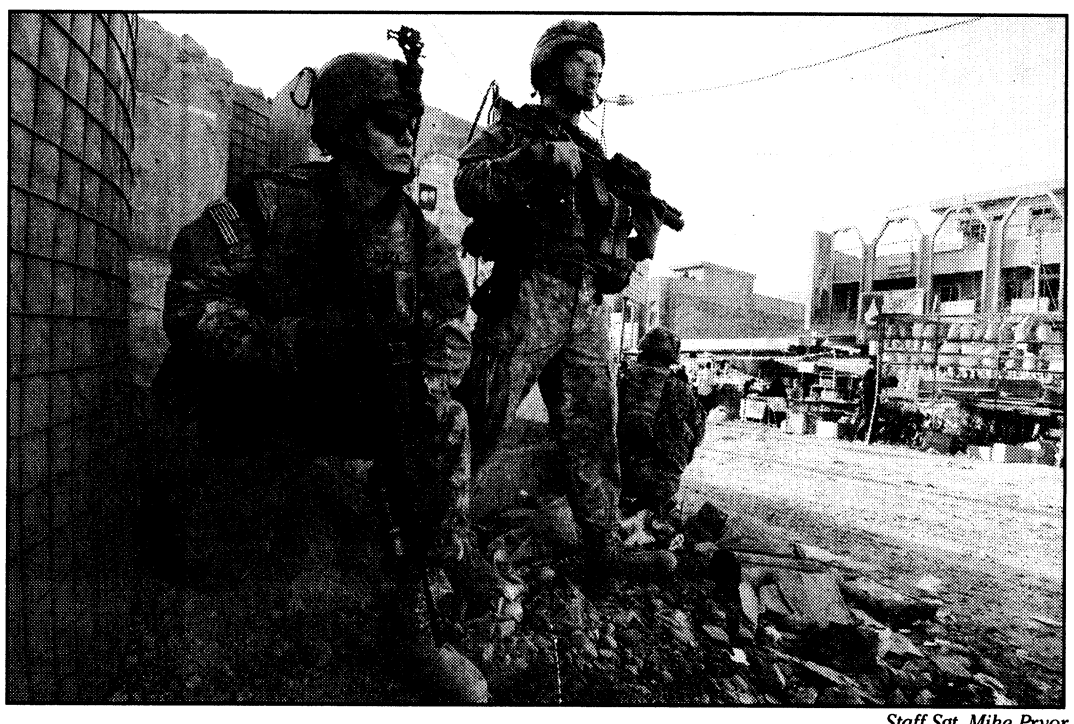
ARMY NEWS SERVICE
John Harlow

FORT LEAVENWORTH, Kan. – The Army's new field manual for operations, FM 3-0, brings the first major update of Army capstone doctrine since the terrorist attacks of 9/11.

"This change in operational doctrine is designed to ensure that our Soldiers have the very best tools, training and leadership they need to succeed," said Lt. Gen. William B. Caldwell IV, commanding general of the United States Army Combined Arms Center at Fort Leavenworth, Kan.

Gen. William S. Wallace, commanding general of the U.S. Army Training and Doctrine Command, is scheduled to release the 15th edition of the field manual this month.

"Today's Army is about half the size it was in 1970, but the U.S. military's involvement around the world has tripled since the collapse of the former Soviet Union," Wallace said in the foreword to the TRADOC information pamphlet for FM 3-0. "The next several decades, according to many security experts, will be an era of persistent conflict that will generate continuing deployments for our Army."



"We must emphasize doctrine as the driver for change," said Army Chief of Staff Gen. George W. Casey Jr. "You can't cement change in the organization until you adapt the institutions. That change begins with doctrine."

The rise of transnational terrorist networks, religious radicalism, ethnic genocide, sectarian violence, criminal networks and failing nation-states all imperil the United States and its national interests.

"A tremendous amount of change in FM 3-0 has come from lessons learned in Iraq and Afghanistan," said Caldwell. "It was important for us to go back and take those lessons that we have learned over time and incorporate them into our doctrine, training and leader development."

Changes in the operations manual include:
- the operational concept and the operational environment,
- the stability operations construct,
- the information-operations construct,
- warfighting functions,
- the spectrum of conflict,
- defeat and stability mechanisms, and
- joint interdependence and modular forces.

FM 3-0 institutionalizes simultaneous offensive, defensive and stability or civil-support operations as the core of the Army's doctrine. The concept of full-spectrum operations, first introduced in the 2001 manual, still represents a major shift in Army doctrine — forces must be able to address the civil situation at all times, combining tactical tasks affecting noncombatants with tactical tasks directed against the enemy.

Staff Sgt. Mike Pryor

Pfc. Jacob Jonza, left, and Sgt. Daniel Grime of 2nd Battalion, 325th Airborne Infantry Regiment, provide security for their platoon during a patrol in Baghdad's Sha'ab neighborhood Jan. 15. Stability operations is elevated to the same level as offense and defense in the new FM 3-0.

Caldwell said FM 3-0 is revolutionary. The four specific points in the manual he called revolutionary are:
- the importance of stability operations is elevated to co-equal with combat (offensive and defensive operations),
- the critical nature and influence of information on operations,
- an operational concept that drives initiative, embraces risk and focuses on creating opportunities to achieve decisive results, and
- the critical role of the commander in full-spectrum operations, bridging battle command and operational art in leveraging the experience, knowledge and intuition of the commander.

Stability operations are viewed as important as offensive and defensive operations in the new operations manual.

"Whatever we do and wherever we go in the world today, fundamentally, the operations are going to be conducted among the people," said Lt. Col. Steve Leonard, chief, Operational Level Doctrine, Combined Arms Doctrine Directorate, and one of the lead authors of FM 3-0.

"The operations are going to be focused on the well-being and the future of the populations we are operating in. The lesson that we all brought home was that the mission we completed was a little bit different than the mission we set out to do. We all had a much greater appreciation of the importance of stability operations and the need to integrate stability operations with the traditional combat operations that the Army performs."

Winning battles and engagements is important but not decisive by itself; shaping the civil situation in concert with other government agencies, international organizations, civil authorities and multinational forces will be just as important to campaign success, according to the new FM.

The new operations manual institutionalizes the need for cultural awareness, which is critical to understanding populations and their perceptions to reduce friction and prevent misunderstanding, thereby improving a force's ability to accomplish its mission.

Soldiers and leaders must master information. To the people, perception is reality. Altering perceptions requires accurate, truthful information presented in a way that accounts for how people absorb and interpret information with messages that have broad appeal and acceptance.

"We have come to recognize that in the 21st Century, the information domain is a critical component," said Caldwell. "It is how you perform information operations, how you perform psychological operations, how we take and embed and link all of these together while we are performing non-lethal forms of stability operations. This is a major change and one of our key elements of combat power."

The new operations manual asks leaders to embrace risk, focus on creating opportunities to achieve decisive results and take initiative. With Soldiers fighting door-to-door one minute and rebuilding schools the next, they have to be able to adapt and make the right decisions in any given situation.

"We're not teaching Soldiers what to think in the school and centers; we're teaching them how to think, how to think critically and how to think creatively," said Caldwell. "There is no way that we can properly prepare Soldiers for the challenges and diversity of the threats they will face on the battlefield today. They are too diverse.

"The asymmetrical threats are absolutely unpredictable and will continue to be in the 21st-century battlefield. Therefore, we must ground Soldiers in the principles and the art of creative and critical thinking. That has been what we are pushing back into the school houses."

FM 3-0 brings a philosophical shift of how Soldiers and commanders are empowered to complete their mission and adapt to their surroundings.

"This manual moves away from the focus of the '90s which was more on process, science and technology," said Leonard.

"It emphasizes the human dimension of command and leadership. One that focuses instead on the commander as a leader who draws on experience, intuition, knowledge and the human aspect of what leadership is about. When this is applied in an operation, it provides the flexibility, adaptability and creativity that are necessary to operate in what we recognize as a fundamentally dynamic and volatile operational environment."

The Army's senior leadership have been hands-on with the creation and writing of FM 3-0.

"This manual was shaped by the senior leaders of our Army," said Leonard. "It has the flavor of combat. It has the experience of mid-grade officers who can communicate between the senior and junior leaders and noncommissioned officers," he said.

"With a manual of this importance, we made sure that what we presented to the force was something that rings true from that new Soldier coming off the street, to the most senior leader in the Army, the chief of staff."

BENCH NOTES

MITCHELL THOMAS IV

Edwards wins Auto Club

Carl Edwards came from behind to win the Auto Club 500 Monday. This is Edwards' eighth cup victory.

Although the race was rain delayed, Edwards charged out of third place, finishing ahead of Jimmie Johnson and Jeff Gordon. Great.

Bush hides from hearing

New Orleans Saints' stud Reggie Bush skipped out on his deposition hearing Monday.

Bush is being sued by Lloyd Lake, a sports marketer who claims Bush received $291,000 in cash and gifts during his sophomore and junior year. Bush settled out of court last year with Michael Michaels, Lake's former partner, who supposedly allowed Bush's parents to live rent-free in a home in San Diego.

"I can't stand stuff like this. Bush settled out of court with Lake's partner. Now Lake wants a piece of the action. If Bush was on the lake, he should get punished, but so should Lake for illegally assisting him while in college.

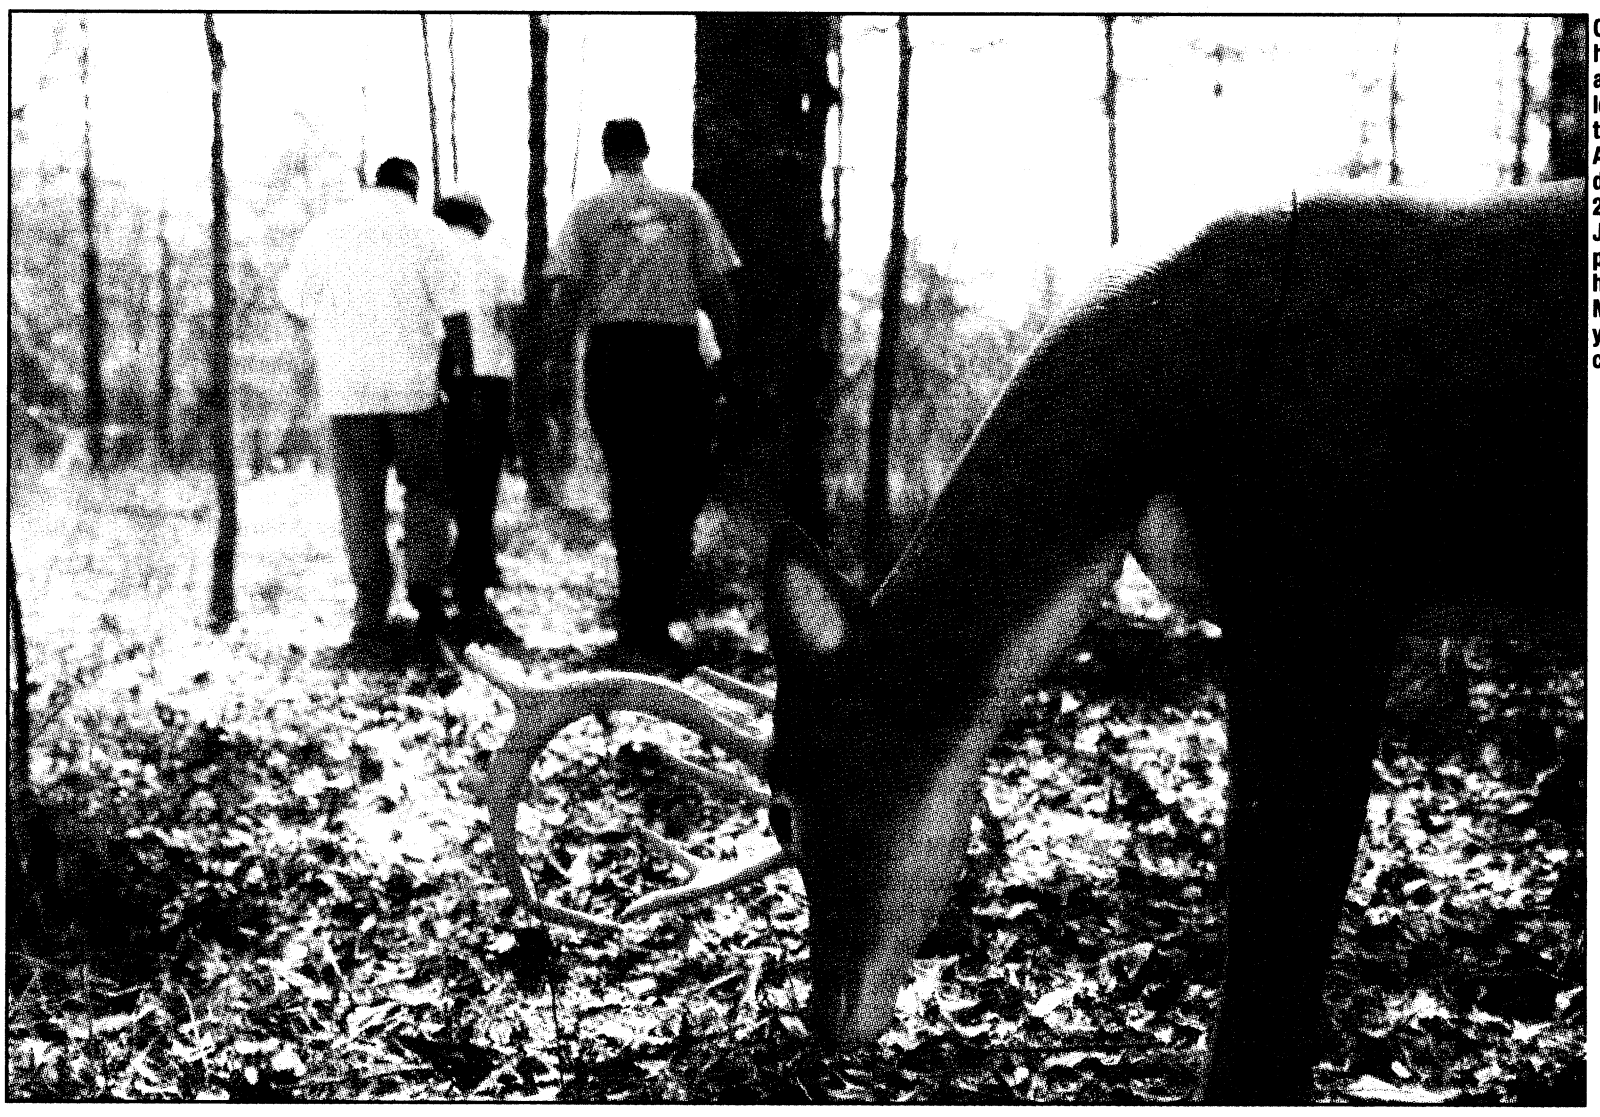
As for Bush not showing up to his deposition, I'm not surprised. He hasn't shown up in the NFL yet either.

Tiger Pounces again

Tiger Woods grabbed his 63rd career victory Sunday, winning the Accenture Match Play Championship. Woods passed Arnold Palmer on the fourth all-time list with this win.

I think it's safe to say that Tiger is the most dominant athlete in the world.

Since he's the man, he needs to speak out on how some of these trophies look. The one he won in Dubai was ridiculous, but this one's nearly as bad. It looked like a wheel-thrown urn.



Jewelers duel over Clemens

Jeweler Marshall Ansen is suing a rival jeweler for $5.1 million after he allegedly blocked the sale of a 2.5 karat pink diamond ring to Yankees' pitcher Roger Clemens.

Ansen claims jeweler Charles Krypell made malicious and false statements to Clemens, who was purchasing the ring for his wife. Supposedly, Krypell told Clemens that Ansen, who quoted a price of $750,000, would make a "killing" for that ring.

This story is "killing" me. If people could make money off being hated on, we all would be rich.

Well, good thing for Clemens he held on to the cash, because he'll need it for his legal fees. I'm sure a cubic zirconia will do just fine. It's the thought that counts.

Archers get last shot before state qualifier

Eighty-five archers competed Feb. 24 in the Uchee Creek Archery Club's last shoot before the state qualifier next month.

The youngest was 10-year-old John Michael Jeffries, who joined the club with his father last month. With 100 wooded acres, six competition lanes and 20 three-dimensional targets, the MWR club has a lot more to offer than John Michael was used to.

"We have two targets in our backyard. This is a lot more," the Phenix City fourth-grader said. "I was kind of scared at first, because there are a lot of adults, but when I started (shooting) it was just fun."

John Michael accompanied his father, Chris Jeffries, younger brother Spencer, 6, who said he'll be ready to compete next month, and veteran club members Orlando and CeCe Valentin.

"Archery is for everybody," Toon said. "We have all ages and whole Families here — moms, dads, kids. We have active duty, retirees, Civilians. Some of them hunt, some of them don't. Anyone can participate."

Archery equipment is available on loan at the Uchee Creek Country Store. For more information about the club, call Toon at 706-536-6021.

Retired Master Sgt. Keith Tilton has had a lifelong love for cars, particularly antique ones.

Tilton entered his 1930 Model A Ford, one of his three vintage vehicles in the 15th annual Jordan Vocational High School Champion Auto Show Feb. 23. There were 137 participants and nearly 2,500 spectators.

Tim Vinson, chairman of the auto show, said participation was down due to weather, but the quality of the entrants' vehicles was as good as he's seen.

The show featured 40 automobile classes and categories ranging from antique cars to military vehicles. Vinson said the Antique Class 7, which Tilton entered, had one of the strongest showings this year.

Tilton has competed in each of the previous 14 Jordan car shows. The 84-year-old veteran of World War II, Korea and Vietnam, considers himself an automobile purist and has avoided customization and restoration of his Model A to preserve its original condition.

"(Customized cars) are beautiful, but that's just not my bag," Tilton said. "I like to keep them the way they belong. There isn't a thing on this car that Henry Ford himself didn't approve of."

Although many vehicles in the show were factory originals, Freddie Blanton, takes pride in the restoration process. Blanton, who has restored more than 30 cars, won Best of

HARVEST REPORTING

Hunters are reminded that all deer, turkeys, hogs, doves, squirrels and quail harvested on Fort Benning must be reported using the TELTRACK Hunter Control System by calling 706-545-8387 and selecting menu item number 4.

FERAL PIG BOUNTY

The bounty for feral pigs killed on post is $40 until March 12. Authorized Fort Benning hunters must take the tail of the pig, enclosed in a ziplock bag, with an attached data sheet to the Conservation Branch, Building 5883, between 1 and 3 p.m. on Tuesdays or the last Friday of the month.

For more information about the hunt, the data sheet or the bounty, call 706-545-7978.

EAR TAGS

Auburn University is conducting a study of the feral pigs on Fort Benning to understand their population size, reproductive rates, movement patterns and food habits.

This information will help determine what impacts feral pigs have on habitat, wildlife populations and military training.

Pig hunters, please report the ear tag number, ear tag color, date harvested and general location of harvest to the Conservation Branch. Several pigs have been fitted with radio-tracking collars to help determine habitat use.

Please attempt to identify and avoid harvesting collared pigs. If a collared pig is harvested or found, please return the collar to Conservation Branch, First Division Road, Building 5884, Harmony Church.

For more information, call 706-544-7079, 706-544-7516 or 707-544-7319.

Faith hosts tourney

Faith's Derrick Boykins knocked down a pair of free throws in the first half of the Faith Basketball Tournament championship game. The boys' team defeated Mother Mary Mission, 48-42, and the girls' team defeated Mother Mary Mission, 27-10. Both teams finished the season 9-1.

THE BAYONET

Faith Middle School's boys and girls basketball teams wrapped up their seasons by winning their own tournament Saturday.

The boys' team edged out Mother Mary Mission, 48-42, after being down at the half.

"At halftime, I told the guys they weren't executing," said coach Roy Bolar. "But they came back out and responded with intensity to get the win,"

The girls' team beat Mother Mary Mission, 27-10.

The teams had a mirror season. They both won their tournament, had records of 9-1 and lost to the same school.

After losing their first game this year, the boys rebounded with newfound energy, Bolar said.

"The team remembered that loss all year," he said.

"It showed them they have to work harder in practice and never doubt the opposing team,"

The girls, who had a turnaround season from last year, remained undefeated until the last game of the regular season.

"Once they lost, they stepped up to play the way they knew how," said coach Larry Addy. "They knew they had to bring their best in the tournament."

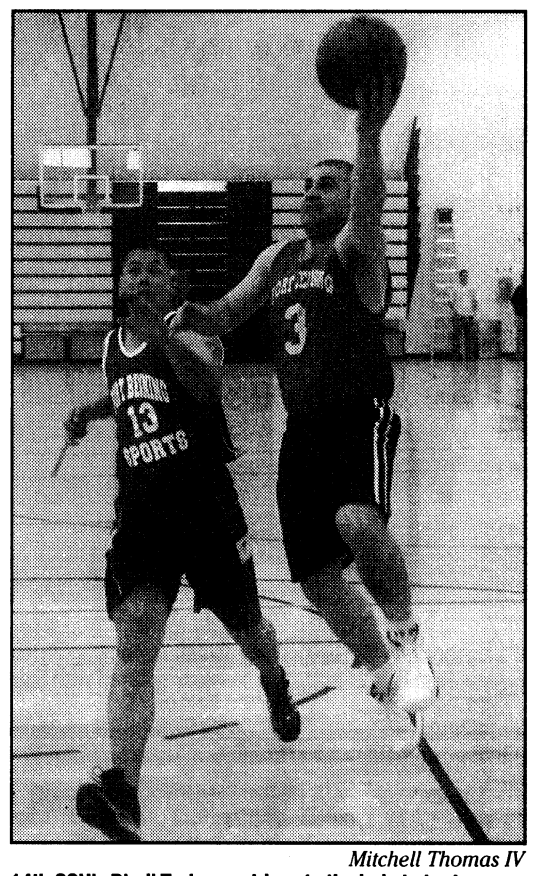
BOLC II blows through 14th CSH to stay perfect

THE BAYONET
Mitchell Thomas IV

The Basic Officer Leader Course II team continued their undefeated streak, knocking off 14th Combat Support Hospital, 58-41, Monday at Smith Fitness Center. BOLC improved their record to 10-0.

Both teams got off to a rocky start, missing easy buckets in the lane. But BOLC jumped out to an 11-4 lead when Marshall Jackson created scoring opportunities off the dribble. Late in the half, 14th CSH's Jonas Johnson cut BOLC's lead down to two points with a crafty move inside. With 1:30 to go, 14th CSH took their first lead, but it was short lived. Jackson scored again to give BOLC a 23-20 lead with 17 seconds left in the half.



"We have to spread the floor better and take advantage of our bench," Jackson said. "If we run them up and down the court, we can get them tired. We'll come out in the second half a lot better."

Jackson, one of three BOLC players selected to the All-Army team, scored a team high of 14 points.

BOLC lived up to Jackson's prediction by playing more cohesively in the second. Early in the half, Mario Clatter, another All-Army player, knocked down a three-pointer from the wing to give BOLC a 14-point lead. 14th CSH blew their opportunities to get back into the game by missing high percentage shots and committing turnovers.

Late in the second half, 14th CSH went on a 6-0 run to cut down a 19-point lead by BOLC.

Mitchell Thomas IV
14th CSH's Bhail Turkezee drives to the hole to try to score over the defender. 14th CSH fell to BOLC, 58-41 Monday. BOLC remains undefeated at 10-0.

"Coach told us to start running a bit more, and we switched to a zone defense to get more rebounds and steals," said Clatter, who is confident the BOLC team will remain solid after he, Jackson and Isaac Miller take leave to play All-Army.

"Our team has really sound basketball players, and I think they have a good chance of winning it all," he said.

Three Spencer students sign

THE BAYONET
Mitchell Thomas IV

Spencer High School capped off a memorable turnaround football season by honoring three seniors who helped make it possible.

Mark O'Neal, Derrick Walker and Cory Jacobs all signed letters of intent during the NCAA Annual Signing Day Feb. 6. All three seniors received full athletic scholarships to Albany State University in Albany, Ga.

The team's head coach, Oliver Davis, who led the team to a 5-5 regular season, Spencer's best record in the last decade, spoke about the students' achievements.

"I am very proud of these kids because they made a heck of an accomplishment in a short period of time," Davis said.

Mark O'Neal Jr., a former Fort Benning resident, said the day was four years in the making.

"I've been waiting for this since my freshman year, and Albany State is where I wanted to go," O'Neal Jr. said.

O'Neal Jr.'s dad, retired Sgt. 1st Class Mark O'Neal Sr., a civilian police officer on post, believes his son will be a positive addition to the Albany State roster.

"He has athletic ability, size and most importantly determination," O'Neal Sr. said. "He has a true love for the game which will carry him in college."

O'Neal Jr. said Davis' positive attitude and direction was the key to the team's .500 season and has inspired him to do the same at the next level.

Davis said he expects the bond between the three seniors will continue at Albany State.

"The opportunity they all received will enhance their chances for success," Davis said.

"And because they are all going to the same school, they will be able to push each other the same way they did here."

UFC legend visits Fort Benning

THE BAYONET
Mitchell Thomas IV

UFC legend and WWE former Intercontinental Champion Ken Shamrock made appearances at the new combatives school on Main Post Feb. 21 and 22. Shamrock sparred with Soldiers and Civilians at the school and gave demonstrations.

"To be in the ring 10 minutes as his practice dummy was great," said Kevin Jordan, a combatives student. "To have that type of support from one of the legends of the sport says a lot."

Shamrock made the trip to Fort Benning to see his son-in-law graduate from basic training Friday.

"He was thinking about going to college to play sports because he's an athletic guy, but he decided to use that athleticism in the Army," Shamrock said. "I'm proud of him."

Shamrock, who had a brief stint in the Marines, understands dedication. After a successful high school wrestling and football career, he was a junior college All-American in football. His career was cut short because of his size.

"I had the heart, desire and I was good enough," Shamrock said. "But even with the power and quickness that I had, on paper they wouldn't take a 5 feet, 11 inches linebacker."

His desire led him to a sport that made him famous. In the early '90s, Shamrock became one of the founding fathers of mixed martial arts.

After honing his skills in Japan, he helped introduce ground attacks and submissions to American fighters, which eventually became part of the sport's standard.

Within his first two years as a UFC fighter, he was crowned the first UFC Superfight champion in 1995.

In 1996, Shamrock became a professional wrestler. He was used to his MMA style and found the transition into entertainment wrestling difficult.

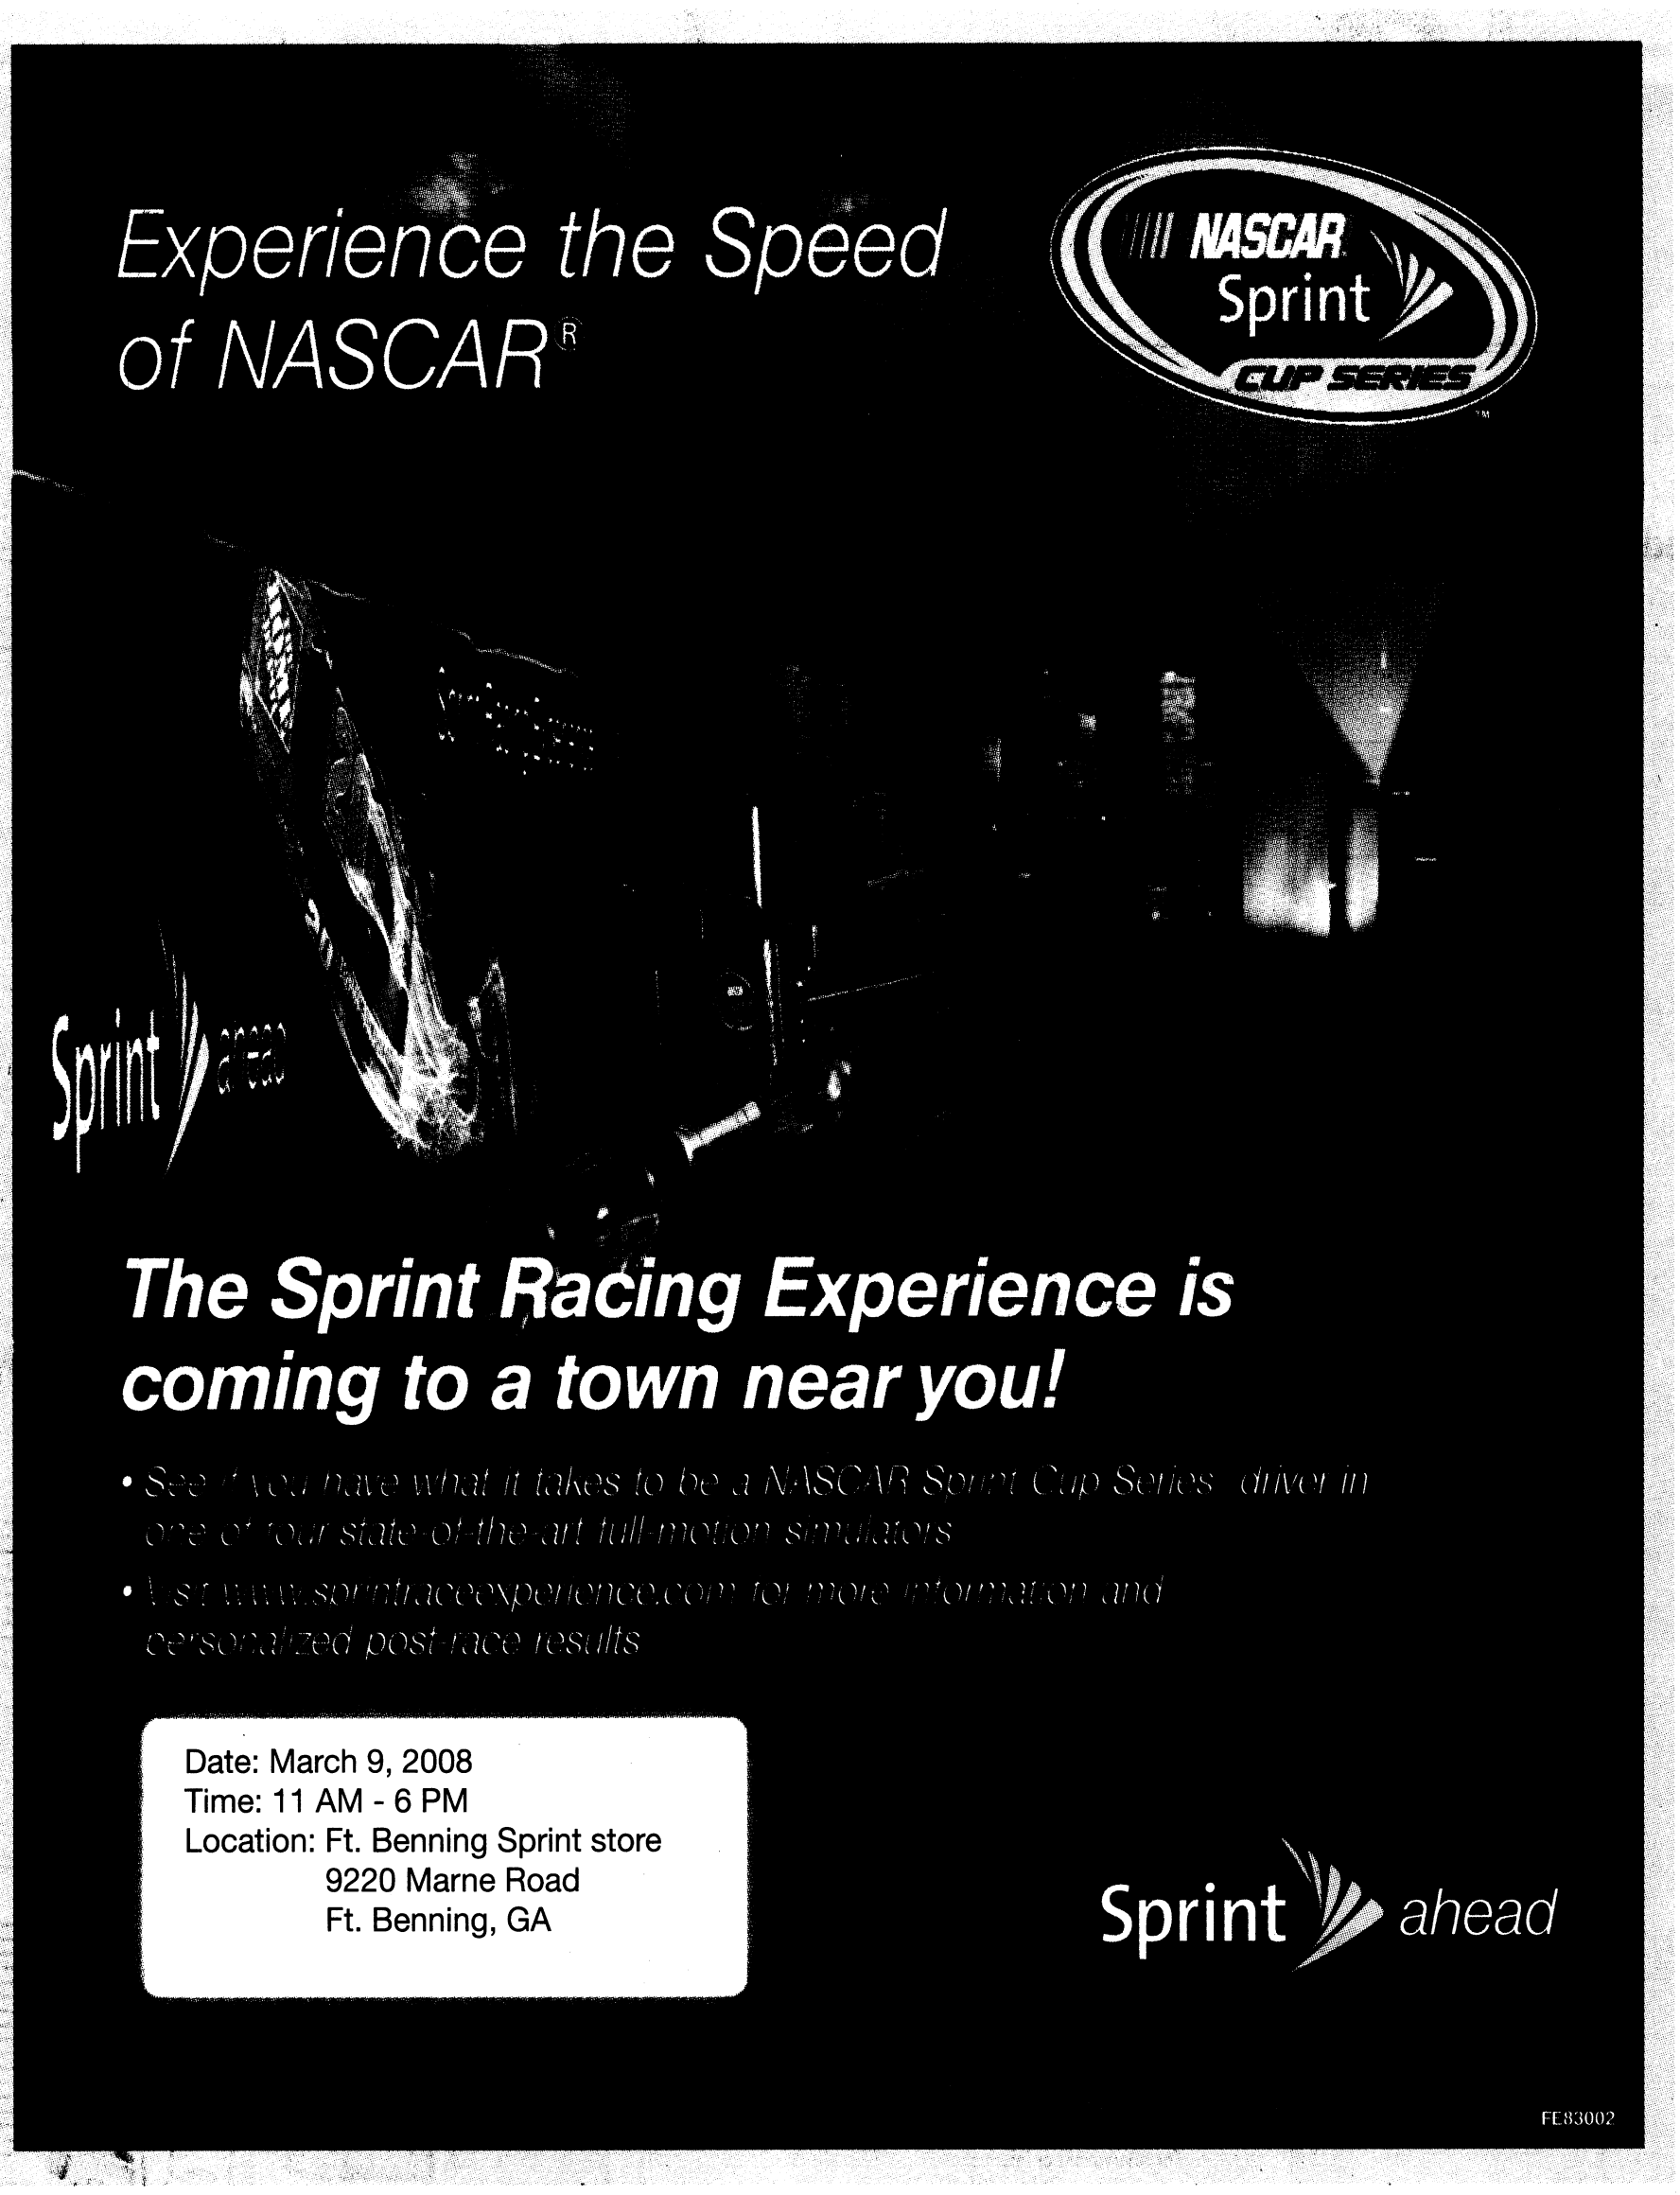
"It was hard to win the trust of the guys I went against," Shamrock said. "I'm a world champion, and I knew I could beat them, but I wanted a good match even if I had to pretend to get beaten up. I let the veteran guys teach me how to sell to the crowd."

Shamrock, who credited WWF legend Brett "The Hitman" Hart with smoothing his transition, went on to become the WWF Intercontinental Champion, World Tag Team Champion alongside Big Boss Man, and the Heavyweight Champion in the National Wrestling Alliance. In 1999, he retired from pro wrestling to resume his MMA career.

Although Shamrock is years older than the fighters at the top of the MMA world, he is still one the most recognized fighters in the sport.

"The reason why I still do it is because I love it," Shamrock said. "The day I want to stop doing what I do is the day I decide to get old. I'm not ready to get old."

Shamrock is the head trainer of the Lion's Den, a training camp for mixed martial artists. He recently opened a camp in Augusta, Ga. He has also traveled to numerous military posts to give demonstrations.



"Shamrock has always been a great guy," said Staff Sgt. Brandon Brewer, an instructor in the combatives school. "The fact that he's here shows his respect for the Soldiers, and it's great to meet a fighter I admire."

But Shamrock said he admires the dedication of Soldiers.

"To be separated from your Family and put everything on the line to go out and defend your country takes courage," he said.

"That type of individual stands out above anybody."

FIT FACTS

MWR FITNESS DIRECTOR
Lori Smith

Are you happy?

It's Friday, so I am sure you're feeling better than you were on Monday, but are you happy?

Overall good health involves more than just physical health. It involves mental and emotional health as well.

Before I go any further I want to tell you how I came up with this week's Fit Facts.

Last weekend, I was walking at Cooper Creek with my best four-legged friend — or rather she was walking me. I was walking and thinking about what I should write about this week. I thought maybe outdoor activities in the community, swimming as exercise or heart health.

And as I was walking, minding my own business, someone passed me and said, "Good morning," and smiled.

Now I am one to talk to just about anyone, and I normally do in the grocery line, but I always get that "watch out for the crazy lady" look.

Here was this nice older lady, who seemed very happy, saying good morning to me for no reason and it made me stop and think.

Why don't we do this more often?

Why are we not as friendly and nice to people we don't know, just for the sake of being nice?

Happiness is the key. People who are happy give away happiness, and it spreads.

That's when I thought about Fit Facts again. I have never pointed out in this column that being healthy is as much about being mentally healthy as it is about physical health.

I think so often we can get caught up in our day-to-day life that we never stop and look at our happiness and think about how we can increase it.

I found a great quote from Gandhi that reads: "Happiness is when what you think, what you say and what you do are in harmony."

I think we all could stand to stop and think about what we are thinking, saying and doing. Every day, we have events that happen in our lives, good or bad, but it's not the event itself that determines our happiness, it's how we react and respond to them that makes the difference.

Try to have a positive outlook in all events in your life.

Maintaining a positive, forward-looking attitude is good for your health. Studies have shown that happy people are much less likely to have heart attacks than those who are unhappy or depressed.

But how do I have that positive outlook or find that happiness?

Well, I cannot tell you how to find happiness. That's up to you. But below is a list of factors that lead to happiness for most people.

This list was gathered from numerous studies, and you will notice that the list has nothing to do with money or power.

- High self esteem — feeling good and positive about yourself and seeing yourself as valuable.
- Satisfying love relationships — a good marriage, close friends or a great pet.
- Positive thinking and optimism — expecting good things, being outgoing, looking for the good qualities in people and situations.
- Sleep and rest — getting enough sleep, taking time for yourself, balancing work and play.
- Physical activity — being physically active every day, like letting your dog take you for a walk
- Meaningful work — having a job or career you like or volunteering your time in ways that are important to you.

This week, I encourage everyone to try one thing — say, "Hello," "Good morning" or "Thank you" to someone who is not expecting it or to someone who appears to be having a really bad day.

I promise it will make someone's day, and the people you speak to may carry that with them and pay it forward.

Try looking at a bad situation in a way that is positive, or determine how you can make it positive.

You may be surprised how it affects you. Happiness breeds happiness.

One last quote I want you to think about, this one from Helen Keller: "When one door of happiness closes, another door opens, but often we look so long at the closed door that we do not see the one which has been opened for us."

Keep your eyes open for the opened doors — and keep reading Fit Facts. Have a great weekend, and thank you for reading.

Tom and Ray say today's engines easily go past 100,000 miles

KING FEATURES SYNDICATE
Tom and Ray Magliozzi

Dear Tom and Ray,

I was looking for a second car. I wanted a classic. For some reason, I said something about a 1992 car with 180,000 miles on it. My stepbrother said, "You know that engine has been rebuilt, don't you." That started the debate. He claims most engines are ready for the junkyard after 100,000 miles. I tell him that since 1990, I'm guessing, engines are made so much better than the '50s and '60s, and it's not surprising to see a car get 200,000 miles or more. He claims that would be rare. He also claims that he will never lose this argument, because if new cars are good for 200,000 miles, a dealership would give you a warranty for that long. I know I'm right.

How can I prove him wrong, though?

— Josh

Tom: Well, you're more right than he is, Josh. The only flaw in your argument is your use of the term "classic" and "1992" in the same sentence.

Ray: Here's the story. Back in the 1950s, if someone got 100,000 miles out of a car, it was cause for celebration.

Tom: And today, everybody gets 100,000 miles out of a car. If they don't, they're writing to us claiming that they'll never buy another (fill in the blank) as long as they live.

Ray: And while your stepbrother is right that 200,000 is rare, it's a lot less rare than it used to be. And 100,000 to 150,000 miles is not rare at all. It's pretty much expected.

Tom: And warranties are longer. Back in the' 50s, you typically got a 12-month warranty on a new car. Now, Hyundai, Kia and Mitsubishi offer 10-year power-train warranties, and Chrysler recently announced a limited lifetime warranty. So as long as those companies don't go belly up first from fixing every body else's engines, you're pretty much guaranteed a good, long engine life.

Ray: So there is more confidence in the longevity of engines and transmissions. And I would attribute it to several factors. Better manufacturing is certainly one.

But I think the biggest factor is better lubricants. Detergent oils came on the scene back in the '60s, and they've been improved continuously ever since.

That means metal parts run longer without grinding each other to death.

And that's really the key to long engine life.

Tom: So tell your stepbrother that he was wrong on two counts — his argument, and that he would never lose this argument.

Stop the madness. You can stop driving like a knucklehead, and you'll help your car in the process.

Show: Nets $7,500 for Jordan High

Show for the second year in a row in Class 12 for his fully restored '63 Chevrolet Biscayne,

"This is a hobby for me," Blanton said. "It's a lot like golf, because it provides relaxation, and it's just something I love doing for myself."

Although Tilton, who was also stationed at Fort Benning, has won first place in this show previously with his 1950 Plymouth Sport Coupe, his Model A is his "pride and joy."

"I just enter this show for fun," he said.

"Some of the other Model As had slicker paint jobs, but I'm proud of mine as it is."

Vinson said the car show has become a local favorite.

"The bottom line is it's just good clean community fun," Vinson said. "You get to look at new and old vehicles and appreciate all the work that's put into them."

The event raised nearly $7,500, which will fund activities for the students at Jordan, including vocational competitions like SkillsUSA.

Have a say in the election

THE BAYONET
Rachel L. Watkins

"Although voters don't directly vote for the President, they still have power in the election," said Dr. Thomas Dolan, Political Science Chairman at Columbus State University.

The voting process is hard for people to understand, Dolan said. When they cast a ballot, they are actually voting for a group of state representatives who are members of the electoral college. The electoral college directly elects the president.

Dolan said the "power of the people" comes in choosing which representatives will elect the president.

Each state gets a certain number of electoral votes based on their population, he said. For example, Alaska, with a population of 683,000, has three electors who vote for president. Compare that to Georgia, which has a population of 9.5 million residents and 15 electors in the college. At one time, each state had the same number of electoral votes, and electors were chosen by legislature.

"Our forefathers didn't trust the mass of voters, so they designed the Constitution so senators were elected by the people as the state defined 'the people'," said Dr. William Chappell, Political Science professor at Columbus State University. Now, people can vote for representatives of the electoral college, but they still can't directly vote for the president.

Some people wonder if the system can be changed.

"The electoral college can be changed, but smaller states wouldn't want it changed because the electoral college gives them more weight in the election," Dolan said.

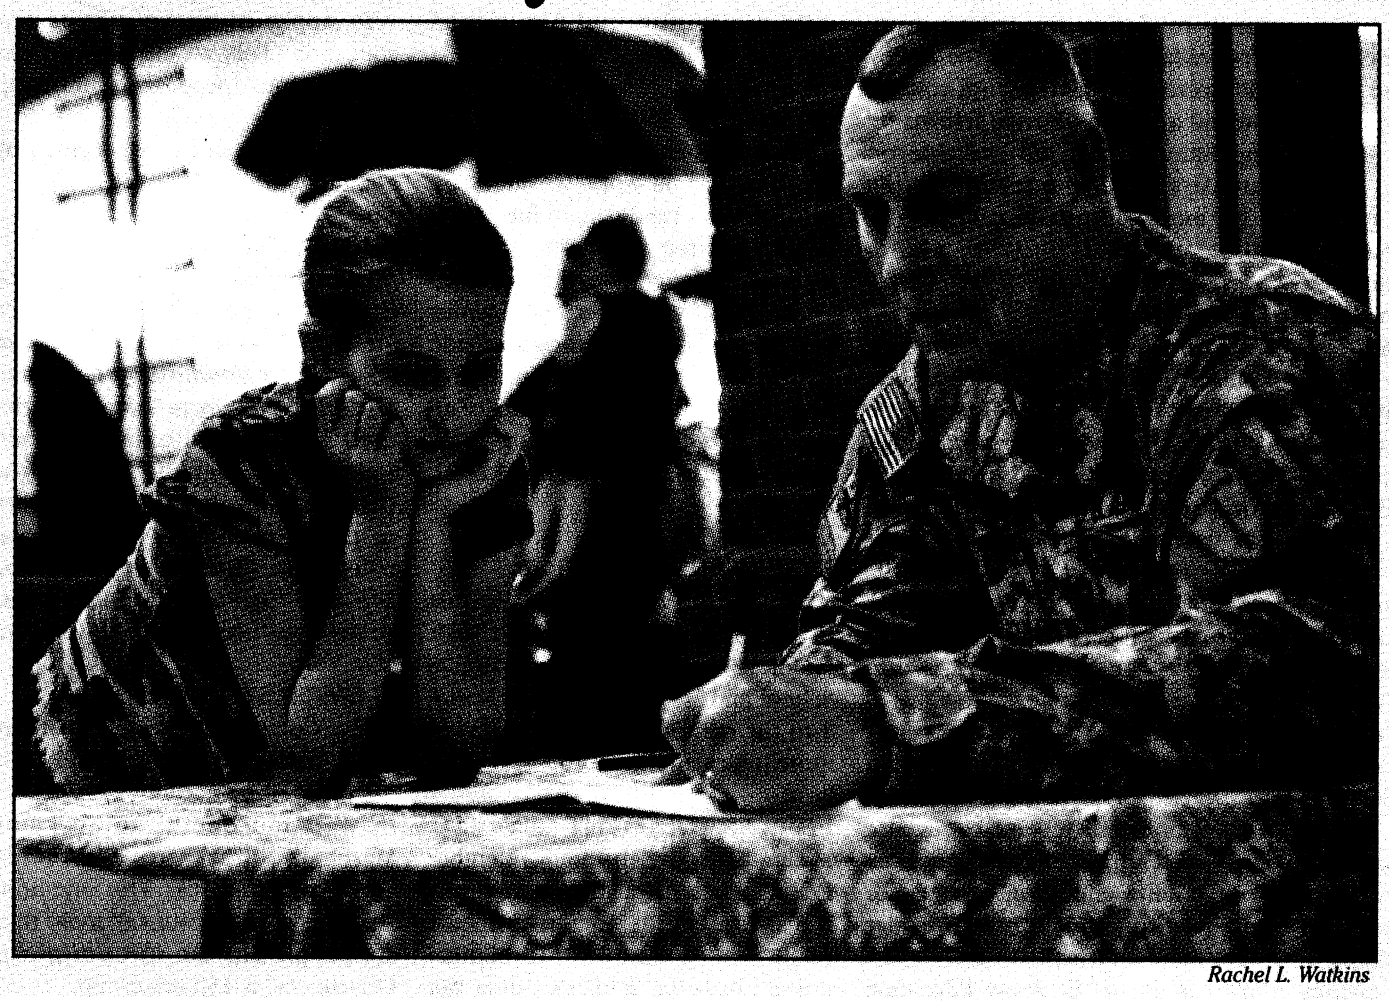
To change the electoral college system, the Constitution would have to be amended, Chappell said.

Dolan thinks it's important that everyone votes in all elections.

"It's better to have an indirect say in the election than no say at all," he said.

Every American is allowed to vote at the age of 18, but do they? Historically, voters between ages 18 to 24 do not. Chappell predicted that will change this year.

"People in their early 20s tend to be interested in things other than social security and healthcare," Chappell said. "But, if a candidate starts talking about scholarships, college students are more likely to vote."



Chappell also said it may be a little more work for military overseas to fill out an absentee ballot than go to the polls, but it's worth it because the outcome of the election has a direct impact on Soldiers.

Fort Benning's voting assistance center offers voter registration forms and information relevant to the election process. The building is located at 2620 in Soldiers' Plaza. For more information, call 706-545-1876.

Tell me a story

Rachel L. Watkins

Maj. Gen. Walter Wojdakowski was the guest reader at Tell Me a Story, hosted by the Military Childhood Education Coalition, Sunday at the Coca-Cola Space Science Center. Fort Benning's commanding general read Night Catch, by Brenda Ehrmantraut, the story of a Soldier and his son who play catch with the stars from Iraq to America.
"Any way that we can get children excited about reading, which this program does, is good for their future," Wojdakowski said.
After two readings, Wojdakowski talked with Families and signed books. Each Family received a copy of Night Catch, donated by the Directorate of Morale, Welfare, and Recreation and Army School Liaison services.
The next Tell Me a Story event, scheduled for May 3 at Riverside, will feature How to Bake an American Pie, by Karma Wilson.

White Elementary celebrates Arbor Day

THE BAYONET
Rachel L. Watkins

They help us breathe, but we tear them down every day to make room for shopping centers and subdivisions. What are they? Trees.

"Humans are polluting and cutting down trees, so Arbor Day is a way to give back to the earth," said Natalie Lemay, a fifth grader at White Elementary, where students celebrated Arbor Day by planting trees last week.

Six oak trees were planted at the school. The trees were grown from acorns media specialist Owen Ditchfield collected from his yard. In his 21 years at White, Ditchfield has planted 100 trees, including red maples, pines, crape myrtles and oak trees. He has watched some trees die and others flourish.

"If we teach the children about planting trees at a young age, they will carry what they learned into adulthood," Ditchfield said.

Evelyn Braman, fifth-grade teacher, said she hopes the children will remember Ditchfield's trees and plant their own at home.

National Arbor Day is actually in April but because of Georgia's weather, trees must be planted in February. The national holiday was started in Nebraska in 1872 by J. Sterling Morton.

For more information about trees, go to www.arborday.org.

Did you know?

According to the U.S. Department of Agriculture, one acre of forest absorbs six tons of carbon dioxide and emits four tons of oxygen in a year, enough for 18 people.

Landscaping with trees can reduce air conditioning costs by as much as 50 percent.

ASK THE JUDGE

OFFICE OF STAFF JUDGE ADVOCATE
Capt. Benjamin W. Hillner

Q: What do I need to do to receive a payment as part of the new economic stimulus package?

A: In May, the Treasury will begin sending payments to roughly 130 million individuals as part of an economic stimulus package. Individuals will have to file a tax return to receive the payment, even if they are not required to file.

Payments will range from $300 for single filers to $600 for individuals filing jointly, with an additional $300 for each qualifying child.

To receive the stimulus payment, individuals must have at least $3,000 of earned income (wages, tips, salaries, etc).

If an individual does not have $3,000 of earned income because their only source of income is non-taxable social security or VA benefits, they may claim these non-taxable benefits on either line 20a of Form 1040 or line 14a of Form 1040A to receive the payment.

Individuals who fall into this category should mail their returns to the IRS and write the words 'stimulus payment' across the top of their tax return.

In addition to the income requirement, individuals must have a valid Social Security Number to receive the payment. Individuals with Taxpayer Identification Numbers or Adoption Identification Numbers do not qualify for the payment.

The stimulus payment is subject to certain limitations. For single taxpayers, the stimulus payment will be reduced by 5 percent of the amount of their income that exceeds $75,000. For taxpayers filing jointly, the payment will be reduced by 5 percent of the amount of income that exceeds $150,000.

Taxpayers with questions about stimulus payment should visit the Fort Benning Tax Center, in Building 1678, behind the Follow Me Chapel.

The Tax Center is open on a walk-in basis from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Mondays, Tuesdays, Wednesdays and Fridays, and from 10:30 a.m. to 6 p.m. Thursdays.

Iraqi helps Soldier's widow find peace

BAYONET CORRESPONDENT
Frederick M. "Bud" Rupel

The following names have been changed to protect the anonymity of the individuals involved.

Tracey is a 21-year-old widow whose husband was killed in action in Afghanistan. Ali is a pastor of a church in the heart of Baghdad who suffered imprisonment during the tyrannical rule of Saddam Hussein. Their lives were forever changed after Sept. 11, 2001.

They met in a church far from the Persian Gulf. Both needed to meet each other for reasons only they understood. Bitterness was a constant theme in Tracey's life. Her husband died for what? She was angry that the love of her life died so early in their marriage and left her a widow with a 2-year-old son.

No amount of life insurance could buy her peace of mind and free her from the bitterness she felt for the people in Iraq and Afghanistan. Her 27-year-old husband died there protecting their freedom. No one from either country had contacted her to send their condolences and say "thank-you."

She told no one about the bitterness — it was her secret. But God knew, and he knew she needed healing, or it would grow and completely rob her of joy.

Ali wanted to say thank you. After Iraq was liberated, he was released from prison and his church began to grow and thrive in the heart of Baghdad. Since then, members of Ali's congregation have died at the hands of extremists.

Each day, while traveling in the U.S., he calls his wife to see if their children made it home safely. Ali still lives with fear. Roadside bombs have exploded right outside his church.

But Ali is determined to live his faith out publicly while he still can. Yet, until a "chance" meeting with Tracey, he never had the opportunity to say thank you to one whose life had so been affected by the war.

Ali told his audience how grateful he is to America for liberating his country. His joy was contagious, and his passion for ministry challenged this preacher man. How very little I suffer because of my faith. I was humbled.

When Ali was through, Tracey waited in line to speak to him. I was there as she spoke to Ali, but I could not hear the conversation.

As Tracey began speaking, I could see the tears well up in Ali's eyes.

He embraced her and both sobbed. Something good was happening, something holy — something beautiful.

Tracey finished her conversation, turned to me and said, "Pastor Bud, I came tonight with so much bitterness, and after hearing Ali speak and express his gratitude, I felt God taking all that bitterness out of my life. When I spoke with Ali and told him my story, all he could do is weep and say thank you."

I have no doubt in my heart that God arranged for this meeting. You can say it happened by chance, but you'll never convince me that it was. Tracey and Ali's lives were changed that night, and each walked away with a deeper appreciation for the sacrifices that were made in securing the freedom of an oppressed people and our nation's security. One was set free from a bitterness that was destroying her, and the other finally got a chance to say a thank you he so desperately needed to say.

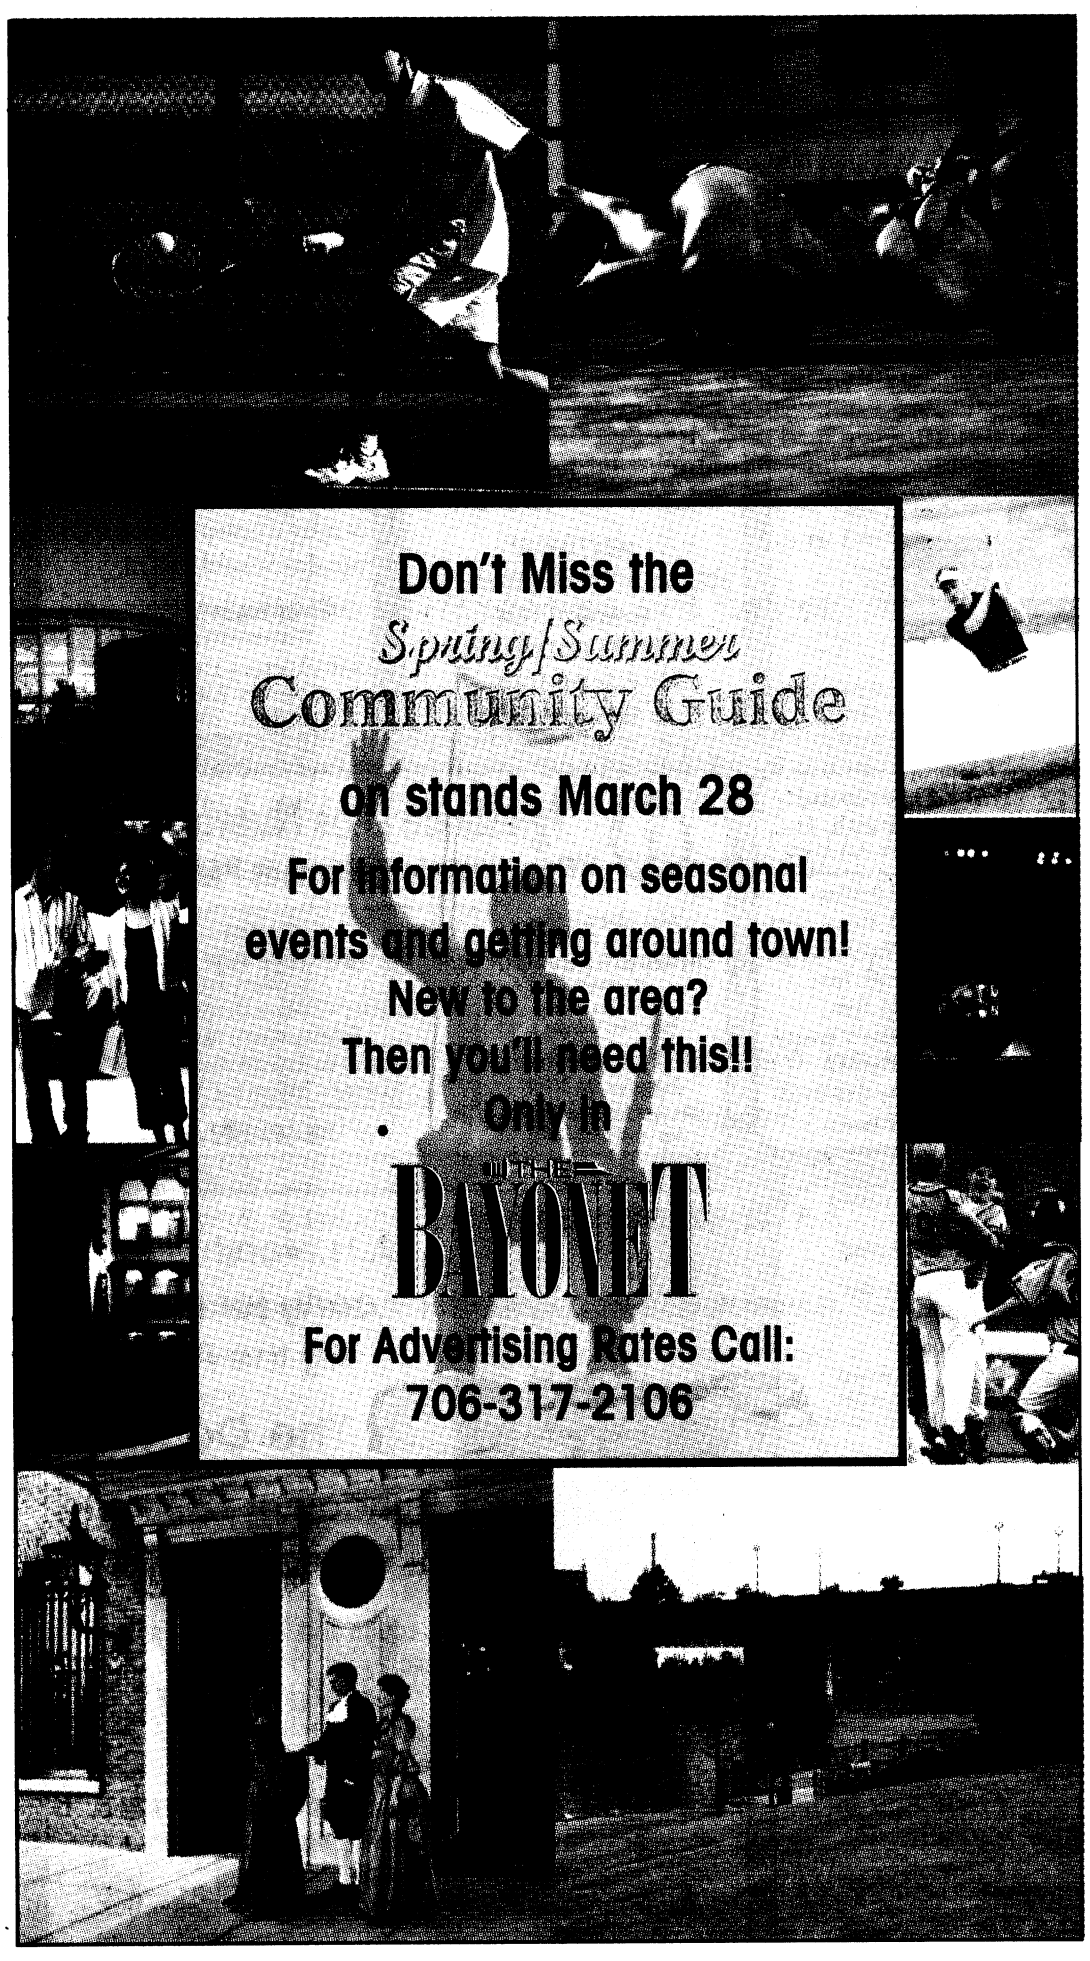
God bless Tracey. God bless Ali.

Editor's note: Bud Rupel is a retired major and former Army chaplain. He now serves on the pastoral staff at Evangel Temple.

Relationships impact every aspect of life

CHAPLAIN FAMILY LIFE CENTER
Chaplain (Maj.) Rory Rodriquez

Have you considered how relationships affect you in your day-to-day living? Relationships are powerful influences in your life. You may have some wonderful relationships, and then again you may be in a destructive relationship. Both positive and negative relationships will affect your soul and will manifest in your body, your thoughts, your feelings and your words.



There are different kinds of relationships. Some may be purely physical with very little emotional attachment involved. Some are highly emotional. Some are dull and some are exciting. There may be relationships you want out of or relationships you want to start over.

Ask yourself: What can I do about my relationship to make it better?

Well, you can't go wrong by implementing this:

- If you have wronged someone, let them know about it. Doing this may restore your broken relationship.
- Be authentic, be open, be real, be honest.
- Be complimentary. You will be amazed how you will be received.
- Take time to listen and to understand. Put the other first and your second.
- Realize that healthy relationships are what you really need.
- Strive to improve your present relationships. It will take work.

I hope you have a great relationship with someone. To have a great relationship is a blessing in life. I hope you take the time to go out and start a relationship and build upon it. You may have a friend, or a lover for life. You are welcome to the Family Life Center if you think you need some help in your relationships.

Green genes

THE BAYONET
Cheryl Rodewig

In today's fast-paced world of handheld computers and drive-thrus, it seems like we are always looking for ways to save time. Energy drinks are a quick-fix. Conveniently bottled for an on-the-go lifestyle, they are supposed to provide the power you need for a particularly hectic day. With names like "Full Throttle" and "Rockstar," these drinks are marketed especially toward busy young adults. Think of the college student pulling an all-nighter or the career-minded individual juggling obligations at work and home.

I have always been suspicious of energy drinks. With ingredients like glucuronolactone, inositol and ginkgo biloba leaf, you don't really know what you're drinking without a medical degree — or a plethora of Google searches.

Many of the ingredients in energy drinks are believed to work together to increase energy levels in the body. For example, the signature ingredient in Red Bull, the amino acid taurine, increases the volume of blood expelled per heartbeat when consumed with caffeine.

Drinks like Monster Energy contain guarana, an African herb with caffeine-like effects. However, there is limited research available about how these extracts work in the body and when combined with other nutrients. Some ingredients, like theobromine, may even have physiological properties.

Quickly metabolized by the body, refined sugar is a guaranteed energy boost. It's usually the second ingredient (after carbonated water), and many cans contain more than 30 grams per serving.

The quantity of caffeine, the other main energy-enhancer, is not always listed on the can. Eighty milligrams, as much as a cup of coffee, is common, but some drinks contain much more. The energy drink Cocaine, back on shelves earlier this month after a year of controversy, contains 280 milligrams — three and a half times as much as Red Bull.

Caffeine is a stimulant and should be consumed in moderation. As a diuretic, it can contribute to dehydration if not consumed with plenty of water. That's why energy drinks should be avoided during exercise.

They should also never be mixed with alcohol. Since they reduce some of the side effects, like fatigue and headaches, people may end up drinking more alcohol without realizing that their blood alcohol concentration is high.

Disclaimers are listed on some energy drinks stating that the drinks are not appropriate for children, those who react negatively to caffeine or women who are pregnant or nursing. However, the guideline applies to all energy drinks, whether the packaging has a warning on it or not.

With all of this to consider, it's safer to rely on food and sleep as ways to reenergize your body. If you're staying up late, have a whole fruit smoothie. The sugars in the fruit will give you a prolonged burst of energy without making you drowsy later.

On days when you're running from one place to the next, take some protein with you. Whether it's chicken salad, almonds or a bean burrito, the food will give you nutrition and energy.

Energy drinks are products of clever marketing. Toss them out and grab a bottle of water and a sandwich. At least you know what you're getting.

THE BAYONET
Bridgett Siter

If turkey calling isn't the strangest sight you'll ever see, it surely holds a respectable spot in the top 10.

The concept of turkey calling, like turkey hunting, requires the caller to lure the tom with calls similar to those females, or hens, make during the spring mating season.

It's actually a natural contradiction, since hens typically chase toms. But, hey, unnatural behavior seems to be the norm, if that's possible, at turkey calling competitions.

Callers are an uninhibited lot, boldly performing their bizarre song and dance for an audience that seldom includes turkeys.

They preen and strut and sway. They bob and weave and lurch. They cackle and gobble and coax from their hand-held instruments of seduction a medley of strange skin-curling screeches, not unlike that of a fingernail on a chalkboard. All in an attempt to woo an imaginary bird, or at least convince a panel of judges that — in the event there actually was a wild turkey nearby — theirs is the serenade most likely to succeed.

"It's a blast, and it is humorous. We like to cut up," said Lamar Fussell, the 1984 turkey calling world champion, and a retired Fort Benning fire chief.

"We like to show the audience what goes on out there in the woods. It's fun to watch, but it can give you a headache."

Fussell is a veteran of the annual Peach State Classic, hosted by the Rivercity Gobbler's Chapter of the National Wild Turkey Federation.

The event, which takes place March 6 at the firemen's annex on Lynch Road in Columbus, draws callers of all ages and expertise from across the Southeast, more than 50 in all.

They use various contraptions — tools of the trade — including a diaphragm inserted in the mouth, hand-held boxes that emit noise when the lid is twisted back and forth, and "scrapes," rubbing devices which rely on friction.

And they will be judged in five classes; Poult (baby turkey), for children 7 and younger; Juniors, 15 and younger; Hunters, amateur callers; Friction, which relies solely on hand-held devices; and Open, the professionals like Fussell, men who once simply considered turkey calling a means to an end.

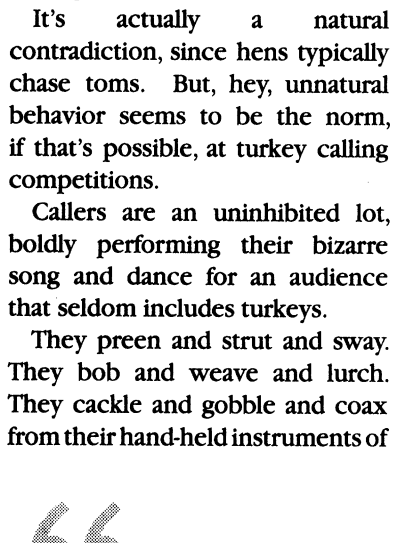
The "calling of the turkeys," like the running of the bulls, has evolved into a sport in and of itself and is often more lucrative than that which spawned it. Champion callers can bag thousands of dollars in regional competitions.

The wild movements of the wild turkey caller is entertaining, Fussell said, but it actually serves a purpose other than that. Serious callers quickly overcome stagefright, and most tend to embellish for the audience's sake.

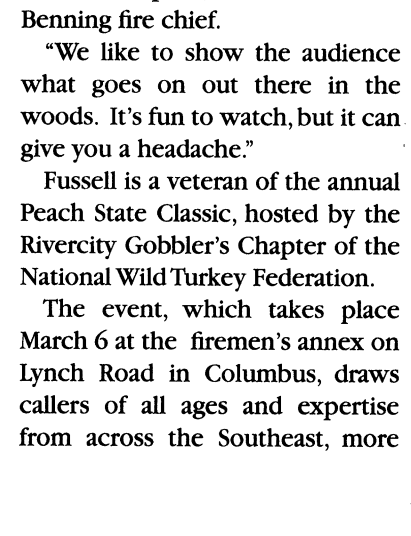
"The judges sit on the other side of that curtain, maybe with their eyes closed, listening to your call and trying to picture a turkey," he said. "You've got to make it as realistic as possible, and the more you can improve on the movement and the call and the rhythm, the better.

"Turkeys move, so if you want to simulate the sound of a turkey, you better make the sound move."

Guests can bag a few prizes of their own at the competition Thursday, which starts at 6 p.m. The $5 admission fee covers the cost of door prize registration. Typically, very few people go home empty handed.



Were that not the case, the cost of admission would still be bargain, considering just how much wet-your-pants fun it is to watch those competitors.



It is, in a word, wild.

For more information about the Peach State Classic, call 706-681-4549.

Turkey calling methods are as varied as the sounds they produce, and many include full-body turkey struts. Pictured here, callers practice the conservative "cup," as they wait their turn on stage.

Jeff Murphy practices turkey calling, using a slate and striker, between rounds of a turkey calling competition in 2004. Proceeds from the contest benefit the local firefighters' association.

Festival set for spring

THE BAYONET
Cheryl Rodewig

A new outdoor community festival is coming to the Chattahoochee Valley this spring. Broadway SpringFest, a Family event, will be hosted on Broadway in uptown Columbus from 7 to 10 p.m. April 25 and 10 a.m. to 7 p.m. April 26.

This event continues the tradition begun by the Historic Columbus Foundation many years ago with Riverfest, said Peter Bowden, president of the Columbus Convention and Visitors Bureau, which heads up SpringFest.

Unlike Riverfest, SpringFest is free to the community. Through partnerships with organizations like UPTown Columbus, the RiverCenter and Columbus State University, it will feature local and regional talent, including musicians, artists, cooks, craft makers, authors and more.

There will be blues performances in the tradition of local legend Ma Rainey Friday night.

Saturday night, the RiverCenter will host local music group Cowboy Crush in Bill Heard Theatre. Tickets are $25 for all seats.

There will be a variety of food and activities available and games and crafts for children both days.

Alcohol, pets and coolers are not allowed.

To register for updates about the event, go to www.broadwayspringfest.com. For more information, call 706-322-1613.

RESTAURANT REVIEW

Fountain City now at two locations

THE BAYONET
Rachel L. Watkins

Fountain City Coffee has two locations, one in downtown Columbus and one on Airport Thruway. They have the same drinks and food but different atmospheres. Downtown, you'll find the kind of atmosphere one expects there, near the CSU dorms, the RiverCenter and clubs. The other Fountain City is at The Landings, which is full of interesting and unique shops.

Even though coffee makes me bounce off the walls, I drink it every now and then. When I need a coffee fix, I go to Fountain City. If you aren't a coffee fan, there are other drinks that might appeal, including fruit smoothies, hot chocolate, Italian sodas and hot tea. The banana berry smoothie is tasty — you can get a medium for $4. Or try the Chai Tea, spiced tea with honey and, if you like, milk.

Frozen espresso drinks are my favorite. I like the Milky Way frozen drink because it tastes just like the candy bar. It's $4 for a medium. Other flavors include mint mocha, Mounds, Oreo, Snickers, white chocolate raspberry cloud and chocolate cherry cordial. These frozen treats can be made with decaf or without espresso.

Hot and iced espresso drinks include Almond Joy, mimosa mocha, turtle treat and caramel latte. Prices are $4 to $5.50.

Fountain City also offers paninis, soups, salads, sandwiches and breakfast sandwiches. For $6.55, you can get a panini and a bag of chips. The Campagnolo, with grilled chicken, red peppers, provolone cheese and pesto mayonnaise, is my favorite.

Or try the Italiano — salami, pepperoni, provolone cheese, red peppers and greek dressing. Vegetarians may prefer the portabella panini, with grilled portabellas, tomatoes, feta and provolone cheese and pesto mayonnaise.

For breakfast, you can build your own panini. Choose the type of bread, meat and cheese and add an egg if you want. Prices for breakfast sandwiches vary.

For dessert, Fountain City offers a variety of cookies, cakes and pies. Dessert selections vary each day.

The Airport Thruway location also offers a drive through.

Hours at the Airport Thruway location are 6:30 a.m. to 8 p.m. Monday through Thursday, 6:30 a.m. to 9 p.m. Friday, 8 a.m. to 9 p.m. Saturday and 9 a.m. to 7 p.m. Sunday. Hours at the downtown location are from 6:30 a.m. to 10:30 p.m. Monday to Thursday, 6:30 a.m. to 1 a.m. Friday, 8 a.m. to 1 a.m. Saturday, and 9 a.m. to 8 p.m. Sunday.

For more information, go to www.fountaincity.com or call the 2523 Airport Thruway location at 706-507-0181 or the 1007 Broadway location at 706-494-6659.

OPENING TODAY

THE OTHER BOLEYN GIRL

Sisters Anne and Mary Boleyn (Natalie Portman and Scarlett Johansson) are driven by their father and uncle to advance the family's status by courting the affections of the King of England (Eric Bana).

Leaving behind their country life, the girls are thrust into the dangerous world of court life where a rivalry develops between Anne and Mary for the love of the king.

Initially, Mary wins King Henry's favor and becomes his mistress, but the conniving Anne, determined to become Queen of England, edges aside both her sister and Henry's wife, Queen Katherine of Aragon (Ana Torrent).

PENELOPE

Penelope Wilhern (Christina Ricci), born to wealthy socialites, is afflicted by the Wilhern spell that can only be broken when she finds love. Hidden away in her family's estate, she meets a string of suitors in her parents' attempt to break the curse. Each eligible bachelor is enamored with Penelope and her sizable dowry until her curse is revealed.

Lemon (Peter Dinklage), an eager tabloid reporter wants a photograph of the mysterious Penelope and hires Max (James McAvoy) to pose as a prospective suitor to get the shot. The handsome, down-on-his-luck gambler finds himself falling for Penelope, so, not wanting to disappoint her, he decides to disappear. When Penelope breaks free from her family, she finds friendship and her own identity.

SEMI-PRO

Jackie Moon (Will Ferrell) is a one-hit wonder who used the profits from the success of his chart-topping song Love Me Sexy to achieve his dream of owning a basketball team. But Moon's franchise, the Flint Michigan Tropics, is the worst team in the league and in danger of folding when the ABA announces its plans to merge with the NBA. If they want to survive, Jackie and the Tropics must do the seemingly impossible: win.

Semi-Pro is rated R for language and sexual content.

ALSO PLAYING

THERE WILL BE BLOOD

On the frontier of California's turn-of-the-century petroleum boom, Daniel Plainview (Daniel Day-Lewis) transforms himself from a down-and-out silver miner into a self-made oil tycoon. When Plainview gets a mysterious tip that there's a little town out West with lots of oil, he heads with his son to take his chances in Little Boston.

In this town, where the main excitement centers around the holy roller church of charismatic preacher Eli Sunday (Paul Dano), Plainview makes his lucky strike.

But as the well raises his fortune, nothing remains the same as conflicts escalate and every human value is corrupted by deception and oil.

There Will Be Blood is rated R for violence.

VANTAGE POINT

Thomas Barnes (Dennis Quaid) and Kent Taylor (Matthew Fox) are Secret Service agents assigned to protect President Ashton (William Hurt) at a landmark summit in Spain.

When the president is shot moments after his arrival, chaos ensues. Witnesses like American tourist Howard Lewis (Forest Whitaker) and American TV news producer Rex Brooks (Sigourney Weaver) have different viewpoints which will reveal shocking ulterior motives and eventually, the truth about the assassin.

BE KIND, REWIND

Because of the magnetic field he creates, Jerry (Jack Black), a junkyard worker, accidentally erases all of the videotapes in a local video store where his best friend Mike (Dante "Mos Def" Smith) works.

Worried the mishap will cost Mike his job, the friends team up to keep the store's only loyal customer — a little old lady — from realizing what has happened by recreating and re-filming every movie she decides to rent, from Back to the Future to The Lion King.

WITLESS PROTECTION

While patrolling his town, sheriff Larry (Larry the Cable Guy) witnesses a beautiful woman, Madeleine (Ivana Milicevic), being held against her will by four black-suited men. Wanting to save the day, Larry kidnaps her, only to learn that Madeleine is a key witness in a Chicago crime case and her captors are FBI agents assigned to protect her.

Larry, who suspects the agents are crooked, forces Madeleine on a harebrained trip to Chicago to solve the case himself. Together, they face FBI agents, quack doctors and Chicago high society.

CHARLIE BARTLETT

Charlie Bartlett (Anton Yelchin) becomes an underground shrink at his public school, listening to the private confessions of his schoolmates and handing out the pills he's proffered from his own psychiatric sessions.

But when Charlie falls for the daughter (Kat Dennings) of the school principal, his fledgling practice begins to unravel.

DEFINITELY, MAYBE

Will (Ryan Reynolds), a Manhattan dad in the middle of a divorce, is questioned by his daughter, 10-year-old Maya (Abigail Breslin), about his life before his marriage.

For Maya, Will recounts the history of his romantic relationships with three very different women, changing their names so Maya has to guess who he finally marries. Is her mother Will's college sweetheart Emily, his best friend April or the free-spirited Summer?

As Maya puts together the pieces, she begins to understand that love is not as simple as it seems.

JUMPER

He discovers this gift has existed for centuries and finds himself in a war that has been raging for thousands of years between "Jumpers" and those who have sworn to kill them.

Jumpers is rated PG-13 for violence, language and sexuality.

We're keeping our Eye on Excellence

You keep yours on the weather

In this week's Bayonet, you will notice a couple of changes we hope you'll appreciate.

On this page, we typically print a weekend weather forecast culled from an online news service on Thursday, which is frequently wrong by the weekend. Such is the nature of weather, pardon the pun. So, we've decided to drop the weather forecast.

We are also excited to introduce a new feature in our Community section titled Eye on Excellence. Here we'll tell you about the people in our community who are making a name for themselves at school, at work, in the field, in sports, theater, business — you name it. This week on C5, in our first Eye on Excellence, you'll meet a middle schooler, a high schooler, a West Pointer and a Fort Benning Soldier — all of them stellar representatives of the Fort Benning Family.

Soldiers with the 197th Infantry Brigade dismount a Bradley fighting vehicle during Feb. 28's HOTEX, or hands-on training exercise, at Red Cloud Range. The Soldiers demonstrated Infantry capabilities including Strykers, .50 cals, and M-16 rifles. The HOTEX is an opportunity for colonels and lieutenant colonels to get training before they become commanders of battalions and brigades, said Sgt. 1st Class Estevan Castillo, 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment. He said it was also a good time for Soldiers to learn about the latest equipment.

When Luis Tejada immigrated from Guatemala to the U.S. 20 years ago, he knew little about the country he would one day serve.

Now, through the Army Medical Service Corps Direct Commissioning Program, Staff Sgt. Tejada will become a second lieutenant clinical laboratory officer, one of only nine people Armywide chosen for the position this year.

Tejada's first sergeant said Tejada was chosen based on his abilities and his work ethic to fill a needed position in the Army, which currently faces a shortage of medical technologists.

Soldiers test for Expert Infantryman Badge

THE BAYONET
Rachel L. Watkins

Fort Benning Soldiers — more than 140 in all — traveled down Good Luck Road at Harmony Church to see if they had what it takes to earn an Expert Infantryman Badge this week.

The annual event lasted three days and included 35 stations and 26 lanes, where the Soldiers were tested on first aid, weapons proficiency, map reading and radio communications. Tasks included performing first aid to a bleeding extremity, preparing an ASIP radio for operation, employing and recovering an M-18 A1 claymore mine, decontaminating themselves and equipment and identifying and throwing hand grenades.

Participants could fail no more than three events and no single event twice to earn the EIB. Historically, less than 50 percent succeed on their first go-round.

Pfc. John McKinney failed last year — he lost his mind and blanked out, he said.

Monday, on his first day of testing, McKinney made it past what is considered the most difficult station, the hand grenade throw.

"The EIB shows you know what you're doing and you are an expert at what you do," said McKinney, who calls it the "Earned Infantry Badge." That's what sets it apart from the Combat Infantry Badge, he said.

CIBs are presented to officers, warrant officers and Soldiers — ranks colonel and below — who are in active ground combat and assigned as Infantry or special forces.

Some participants were first timers, like Staff Sgt. Thomas Hollen, who has wanted an EIB since he was a private. Three deployments delayed him.

"I'mnervous,becauseIamoutofmygrid square," said Hollen, who said he wants

Brig. Gen. Lloyd Miles, Fort Benning's second in command, encouraged post leaders to spread the word about the Army Emergency Relief program during the annual campaign kick-off Monday at Infantry Hall. Miles, one of eight children born to a career NCO, said a program like AER would have helped tremendously when his Family's only car broke down. Contributing to AER is "one way Soldiers can help Soldiers on a personal level," Miles said. Last year, $2.5 million was used to help Fort Benning Soldiers, retirees and Family members. The campaign runs until April 30. To contribute, call 706-545-2536.

NATIONAL ALCOHOL SCREENING DAY

Former athlete to share story with community

THE BAYONET
Brenda Donnell

Dan Davis had an opportunity many athletes only dream about: The Kansas City Chiefs recruited him when he was 20 years old, but his professional NFL career was derailed by a drinking problem that began when he was 14.

Davis said he drank alcohol to celebrate his victories, but kept his alcohol problem hidden as he grew older and his high school and college football career were highlighted.

"I was always bailed out because I was an athlete," Davis said in a Feb. 29 telephone interview.

Later, with his career in ruins, he sought solace in drugs.

"Addiction is an abyss — it's an emotional roller coaster," said Davis, a recovering addict, who travels the world speaking out against drug and alcohol abuse.

He will speak at Fort Benning Tuesday and Wednesday in conjunction with National Alcohol Screening Day, sponsored by the Fort Benning Alcohol Substance Abuse Program, 192nd Infantry

COMMANDER'S COLUMN

Identifying potential risks and emergency preparation reduces disaster uncertainty

COMMANDING GENERAL
Maj. Gen. Walter Wojdakowski

Preparing for emergencies is not an everyday subject of conversation. But, at Fort Benning we perform rigorous training, and every day our Soldiers and trainers are involved in serious exercises that have the potential for accidents.

Many factors affect our ability to train safely. This is why an essential part of our training is risk management, that is, identifying potential hazards and preparing for them in the event they do occur.

Our leaders and trainers are empowered to make critical decisions to safeguard our most valuable resource, the Soldier. To do this, these leaders remain mindful of changing conditions in the training environment that may put our Soldiers at risk. Decisions made during emergencies incorporate the lessons learned during training, man-down drills and rehearsals.

While we are constantly preparing for emergencies centered on training, we also have a responsibility to prepare for emergencies that affect our community and our neighbors. Last year we witnessed firsthand the need for disaster preparation after tornadoes devastated parts of Columbus and our nearby communities.

Being prepared for an emergency includes everything from installation-level plans to individual plans we each should have for our own home. Similar to the way we rehearse for emergencies during training exercises, each of us should rehearse for emergencies with our Families.

Here are a few tips:

• Be aware of the hazards that may strike.

• Put together a Family plan and use it. Discuss with your loved ones what you would do if Family members are not home when a warning is issued. Also have a plan for how you will communicate during an emergency. Discuss where to find insurance papers or other vital information, and address special considerations like what to do about pets.

• Prepare a disaster supplies kit. This means having food, water and other supplies in sufficient quantity to last for at least three days.

As we continue to move toward the merger of the Infantry and Armor Centers, we must keep risk management foremost in our thoughts and anticipate additional risks and potential emergencies that may occur.

Unfortunately, looking to a future of change also means there will be a certain amount of risk involved in the steps we take to bring those changes to fruition. The leadership of this installation will take the necessary steps to ensure the safety of Soldiers, their Families and our Army Civilians. But everyone must do their part.

Preparing for emergencies should be part of our daily lives. We must guard against complacency in our approach to training Soldiers and assisting Families. Emergency procedures must be relevant and timely. The well-being of our Fort Benning community is too important not to take this seriously. Plan ahead. Stay informed. Be ready no matter what comes.

It was only a headache, turned out to be a nightmare

USAIC PUBLIC AFFAIRS OFFICE
Michelle L. Gordon

I hate going to the doctor. I will do anything to avoid going. So, when my mother-in-law said she was going to the doctor because of frequent headaches, I dismissed it as hypochondria. I get headaches all the time. My husband tells me I need to drink more water. Isn't water listed as an ingredient in Diet Dr. Pepper?

A few days later, my mother-in-law went to the doctor for an MRI, and the doctor told her he saw "something." We started to worry a bit, but surely it couldn't be anything bad. We saw her a week ago, and she seemed fine.

Sure enough, they determined it's a tumor. Again, we worried, but surely it wasn't malignant. They performed a biopsy — it's an extremely aggressive form of cancer and she has been given 12 to 14 months to live. How did this happen?

A couple of weeks ago, she was a seemingly healthy, 54-year-old nurse who liked to paddle around the Gulf of Mexico in a kayak, and now she's scheduling chemotherapy and radiation.

A couple of weeks ago, she attended her granddaughter's first birthday party. Now, she's told she probably won't live to see her granddaughter start kindergarten.

A couple of weeks ago, she was the only surviving child of two people in their late 80s who have already lost one daughter to cancer. A couple of weeks ago, she was having frequent headaches, and I was rolling my eyes.

It goes to show you can't take anything for granted when it comes to your health. It may be a minor pain or a little bump, but it's worth spending your time in the doctor's office to gain peace of mind.

If the tumor had gone unchecked, my mother-in-law would have died in three months, the doctor said. At least now she has more than a year to spend time with family and friends.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Reader has decal woes

I understand frayed and expired post decals need to be replaced.

I don't understand why a faded decal that is not expired or frayed must be replaced.

My post decal is faded but not expired, and I was told to get a new tag. I don't think very much thought has been put into this new policy.

Here are some points to consider:

1. If we are pulled over by the MPs, I believe they identify by license plate. If the vehicle is registered on post, the database should be able to verify that the decal is valid.

2. Are the guards at the gate really identifying us by the numbers on our post decal, or are they looking at the month and year of expiration?

3. I see this as wasted time in adding additional resources to work at vehicle registration and the cost of replacing the DoD stickers.

— Robert Ito

DES response

The reason we require the decals to be legible is to validate that the vehicle has been approved to have access to post. If they have a decal, they have met all of the requirements to access post, such as a valid driver's license, insurance and vehicle registration.

If these items have been validated, someone will receive a decal that allows them access to post. If the decal is faded and is unreadable, then one cannot verify that the vehicle is valid to enter post.

The gate guards are not using the decals to identify a person, they are using them to validate that the vehicle itself is acceptable to enter post.

If a person does not have a decal, they must have a temporary vehicle pass. The driver's license, insurance and vehicle registration are required to receive a temporary pass, also. All three parts to the decal must be legible to verify that the vehicle has access to post. If the MPs have to identify a vehicle, they can use the license plates, VIN numbers as well as the decals.

That is just one of the reasons to have a valid decal. We did go through a bad batch of decals that faded easier than others, and we have rectified that situation and have new decals that do not fade as quickly.

Money is not as much of a factor in the bigger scheme. If all vehicles have valid decals, we can be sure the vehicles have been checked for all requirements to be able to properly access post.

• The rules governing the use of cameras on post were tightened. The Infantry Center commander issued a general order prohibiting any person from operating or possessing a camera without written permission from him.

• The Fort Benning Vocational School was set to open this month for its second semester. Enrollment was expected to exceed 800. Fort Benning personnel could register for classes in photography, plastics, music and more. They could earn their high school diploma or a vocational certificate.

• In a letter to the post newspaper, an officer candidate insisted OCS training was no less rigorous since the end of the war. Sure, the course was now six months long, instead of 90 days, but "it is still as rough and rugged as ever," he said. In fact, the responsibilities of a young officer were greater than ever, what with the Army no longer emphasizing the need for combat leaders, the author insisted. Young officers were now expected to train recruits and lead troops engaged in occupation.

"In the hand of our junior officers rests a tremendous responsibility," he wrote. "They and they alone may determine whether the United States will win the peace as successfully as their predecessors won the war."

• In the ads: "Easter is almost here — the beginning of the most popular Kodak season." McCollums Studio in Columbus offered a pre-season inspection.

• The Army began implementing a number of organizational and functional changes consistent with the Goldwater-Nichols Department of Defense Reorganization Act of 1986. A Bayonet article said the reorganization, including a 15 percent reduction in the number of general officers assigned to Army headquarters, was marked by "some of the most dramatic changes since 1947."

Army Secretary John O. Marsh Jr. said the changes would streamline Army management processes, reduce the size of management headquarters and redistribute personnel to field commands.

Soldiers more than understand full-spectrum operations, Cody tells AUSA audience

ARMY NEWS SERVICE
C. Todd Lopez

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. — The Army's new operations manual, FM 3-0, defines full- spectrum operations and includes stability operations as part of the Army's core mission.

During a session at the Association of the United States Army's Institute of Land Warfare Winter Symposium and Exposition, Vice Chief of Staff of the Army Gen. Richard A. Cody said Soldiers are already applying in theater what is contained in that field manual.

From development of the Stryker Brigade Combat Teams — to the development, application and refinement of counterinsurgency operations — the Army is a leader in full-spectrum operations, the general said.

"The Army has lead the joint force into the 21st century and wields full-spectrum operations against traditional and irregular threats in complex environments," Cody said.

"If you read FM 3-0, the operational lessons learned will leap off the page at you. But they are not lessons learned unless they are applied," he said. "Having just returned from theater, I can say unequivocally, our Soldiers and our leaders don't just get full-spectrum operations, they are damn good at it."

During his visit to Iraq and Afghanistan, the general said he had the opportunity to re-enlist some 300 Soldiers, hand out hundreds of coins; and pin on silver stars, combat infantryman badges, combat action badges and combat medical badges.

Above all, he said, he was impressed with Soldiers' selflessness.

"These Soldiers told me their stories," he said. "And every Soldier's story was deeply impressive. But if I could paraphrase them, they talked about their buddies more than they talked about themselves. They talked about the heroics of their partners and how much they trusted each other."

The general visited Iraq and Afghanistan, he said, to inspire Soldiers and to boost morale. It was he, however, who was inspired by the Soldiers, he said.

"These young Soldiers will never know, not just how proud I was of them, but how much I wanted to join them," he said. "I went to Iraq and Afghanistan to check on the troops and to inspire them, but they inspired me.

"They bear this difficult mission for all of us, make incredible personal sacrifices, and witness friends and buddies getting wounded. They do it because they love this nation. They do it because they believe in this mission — they see the big picture — and they know the importance of victory for this nation and for this world."

The general said he asks himself daily if he is doing all he can to support Soldiers and their families, and if he is showing the same moral courage that he saw daily in Soldiers in Iraq and Afghanistan.

"The answer to those questions must be yes," he said. "Then, I ask myself, 'Am I living my life as an American who is worthy of the sacrifices of our young Soldiers.'"

Citizens of Salman Pak, al Lej celebrate reopening of al Lej road

3RD HEAVY BRIGADE COMBAT TEAM
Staff Sgt. Sean Riley

FORWARD OPERATING BASE HAMMER, Iraq — Residents of Salman Pak and al Lej breathed a collective sigh of relief Feb. 29 as more than 150 Sons of Iraq, Iraqi Security Forces and Coalition forces leaders met to celebrate the reopening of the al Lej road, the main thoroughfare connecting Salman Pak and al Lej.

The road had been closed to civilians after a vehicle-borne improvised explosive device detonated at a traffic checkpoint, killing seven Iraqi National policemen in May.

Since construction began more than two weeks ago on Combat Outpost Carver, home to B Company, 1st Battalion, 15th Infantry Regiment, Soldiers had been assessing local needs. Their number one concern: reopen the road to Salman Pak.

Coalition leaders, local ISF and SoI members, began working together on a plan to restore and improve Checkpoint 600, where the attack occurred and set the conditions for safe movement of civilians along the road.

Local leaders hope the checkpoint and road reopening will bring more people to the area.

"We have reopened the city of Salman Pak to Dura'iya, Kanasa, and al Lej — the whole Mada'in Qada can now move freely," said Brig. Gen. Aamir, the 1st Brigade, 1st National Police commander, following the road's ribbon-cutting ceremony.

Sheik Ali Hussein, the SoI leader for Salman Pak and al Bawi, opened his home for a luncheon attended by the more than 150 guests after the ceremony.

"We are finally to the point where we can come to an event and see Sunni and Shia sheiks working together to secure their country," said Command Sgt. Maj. Mark Moore, 1st Battalion, 15th Infantry Regiment.

Medal of Honor recipient inducted into Pentagon's Hall of Heroes Tuesday

ARMY NEWS SERVICE
John J. Kruzel

Carrie McLeroy

Gen. Richard A. Cody, Army vice chief of staff, talks about Master Sgt. Woodrow Wilson Keeble's life and service during the Hall of Heroes induction ceremony at the Pentagon Tuesday. Keeble earned the Medal of Honor posthumously for his acts of bravery during the final allied offensive of the Korean War. His family was on hand to receive the medal on Keeble's behalf.

WASHINGTON — The Defense Department posthumously inducted Army Master Sgt. Woodrow Keeble into its Hall of Heroes Tuesday, a day after President Bush bestowed the Medal of Honor on the Korean War hero.

Keeble is the first full-blooded Sioux Indian to receive the nation's highest military award.

Almost six decades after the gallant actions that earned him the nation's highest military award, and 26 years after his death, his relatives unveiled his name during a ceremony at the Pentagon.

He joins 131 other veterans to receive the Medal of Honor for combat valor in the Korean War.

He was recommended for the medal by every surviving member of his unit at the time, but "administrative errors" and "bureaucratic processes" delayed the honor, said Gen. Richard A. Cody, the Army's Vice Chief of Staff, who praised Bush for "setting the record straight."

"Over 300 million Americans are free today because ... (Keeble) fought bravely with honor and humility to defend this country and his fellow citizens," Cody told the audience gathered for the ceremony. "The personal courage and selfless service of Master Sgt. Keeble lives on in the Soldiers that have succeeded him."

Calling it an honor to salute the master sergeant, to whom he referred as "Woody," Cody held his straightened right hand to his brow in a sign of deference to Keeble, a veteran of both World War II and the Korean War.

When war broke out in Korea, Keeble was a 34-year-old master sergeant serving with the 24th Infantry Division's 1st Platoon, G Company, 19th Infantry Regiment.

He'd joined the North Dakota National Guard in 1942 and already had earned the first of his four Purple Hearts and his first Bronze Star for actions on Guadalcanal.

Keeble volunteered to go to Korea, saying that "somebody has to teach these young kids how to fight," Cody said.

The division was serving in central Korea in October 1951 when it was called to take a series of mountains protecting a major enemy supply in the town of Kumsong.

Operation Nomad-Polar, known as the "Big Push," was the last major United Nations offensive of the war.

U.S. casualties mounted as enemy soldiers barraged them, fortified by three pillboxes containing machine guns during ferocious fighting over a six-day span.

Keeble, with 83 grenade fragments in his body, defied the medics and took matters into his own hands. On Oct. 20, 1951, he charged the hill solo.

"Woody knew the enemy machine guns in the heavily-fortified pillboxes were the problem. He resolved, 'I'm going to take them out or die trying,'" Cody said.

Armed only with grenades and his Browning automatic rifle, he shimmied across the ridge, single-handedly eliminating one pillbox after another as he dodged a barrage of enemy fire.

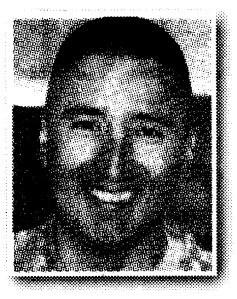
Only after Keeble had taken out all three pillboxes and killed the machine gunners did he order his troops to advance and secure the hill.

Army Secretary Pete Geren said Keeble was known on the battlefield for his resolve and tenacity in the face of danger and adversity.

"The safest place to be was right next to Woody," said Geren, quoting a WWII veteran who fought alongside Keeble.

Deputy Defense Secretary Gordon England told the audience that Keeble's heroism and sacrifice reminds Americans of the high price of freedom.

"Woodrow Keeble showed us — again and again on desperate battlefields from the home he loved, first in the Pacific and then in Korea — the very best we can be," he said.



"America needs its heroes, needs men like Woodrow Keeble — we need their service, and perhaps most of all, we need their example."

Tejada: To receive commission

"I think he's the right person," said 1st Sgt. Michael Oliver, of F Company, 2nd Battalion, 54th Infantry Regiment. "He's probably one of the most competent NCOs in this battalion, (and) he has the potential to excel at whatever he does."

When Tejada moved to the U.S., he couldn't speak any English. He never pictured himself as a Soldier, but after a recruiter visited his college, Tejada joined the National Guard. After three years, he transitioned to the Active Army.

"I liked wearing the uniform," he said. "I wanted to be a Soldier."

Since joining the Army, Tejada's goal has been to become a medical officer. In the direct commissioning program, Tejada competed against more than 200 civilians and military personnel for his position. His qualifications, including a bachelor's degree in medical technology and science studies, his work history and his medical certification, came before a board of officers for review before he was selected as one of the best qualified candidates.

After he receives his commission next week, Tejada will transfer to Fort Sam Houston, Texas, to complete the Officer Basic Course. Upon graduation, he will be stationed in Korea, where he will head a platoon in the 16th Medical Logistics Battalion. Tejada said he plans to pursue a master's degree in microbiology in a few years.

"I don't have words to mention all the people who have helped me, but it's a lot of people ... Their leadership has been great," Tejada said. "This is a very exciting experience. It's something I've always wanted to do, and I think it's the best choice I have made."

Master Sgt. Dennis Williams, the site NCO, said the EIB is the mark of a professional.

Things have changed since he earned his in 1993. Weapons and radio systems are different now.

"The testing is tailored to whatever is going on in the Army," he said. It evolves based on military weapons, training and tactics.

Lost military ID cards provide opportunity for identity theft

THE BAYONET
Brenda Donnell

Post officials urge the community to protect their military ID cards. Annually, about 10 million U.S. consumers have their identity stolen, according to the Federal Trade Commission.

ID cards contain personal information that should be protected, and information such as names and Social Security numbers can lead to identity theft, said Detective Clarence Rambo, chief of Investigations, Directorate of Emergency Services. This information can be used to obtain goods and services by fraudulent means and will cause the person whose information is used to incur financial losses that could have been prevented through proper security or prompt reporting.

Thieves can open bank accounts, steal money from checking and savings accounts, obtain credit cards, forge documents and more — all in the name of the victim who is often unaware of the fraudulent activity, according to the FTC.

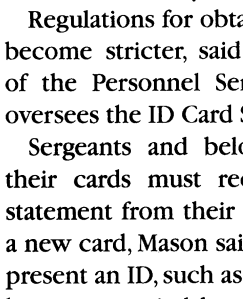
Regulations for obtaining ID cards have become stricter, said Irma Mason, chief of the Personnel Services Branch who oversees the ID Card Section.

Sergeants and below who have lost their cards must receive a counseling statement from their first sergeant to get a new card, Mason said. All Soldiers' must present an ID, such as a driver's license or be accompanied by a Soldier from their unit who can vouch for them.

Family members must be accompanied by their sponsor or have a power of attorney. They must also provide two forms of photo-identification, such as driver's licenses; ID cards issued by federal, state or local government agencies; and U.S. passports. Original Social Security cards and birth certificates are also acceptable forms of identification.

All documents must be original or certified. For a complete list of proper photo-identification and more information, contact the ID Card Office, Building 2638 in Soldiers' Plaza.

If someone does have their identity stolen from loss or theft, they should first file a police report, which provides documentation, said Capt. Benjamin Hillner, legal assistance attorney.



Next, the post legal office can help victims draft a sworn statement, which can be notarized, to dispute any claims of debt against them, he said.

Those who think their ID card was stolen should contact the MPs at 706-545-5222 or go to the MP Station at Building 215 on Wold Avenue.

Those who have lost their ID card should report to the ID Card Section and apply for a new one. Although appointments are not mandatory at this time, it is highly suggested that customers call for one. Those with appointments have priority over walk-ins. In the near future, the ID card office will operate on an appointment system. Only emergencies will be seen without an appointment. To make an appointment, call 706-545-4068 or 706-545-9085.

Brigade, 197th Infantry Brigade and the Western Hemisphere Institute for Security Cooperation.

Davis said he wants Soldiers to understand there are healthier ways to deal with stress than drinking alcohol or taking drugs.

During his presentation, called "B.A.M: It's Your Choice," Davis will recount the horrors of growing up addicted, explain how his athleticism set him up for special privileges that compounded his problem and what led to his recovery.

Col. Gregory Kane, 197th Inf. Bde. commander, said a lot of Soldiers emulate and idolize professional sports figures, and Davis' message is timely and relevant.

"I think Dan's message will resonate with our younger Soldiers, since he doesn't fit the stereotypical drug addict," Kane said. "He was a professional sports figure at the top of his game, and in today's culture, he had 'it made.' I think it will really help to undercut the sense of immortality that most young people have, and especially, our Soldiers."

National Alcohol Screening Day is designed to help Soldiers, Civilians and Family members consider their own behavior and make changes, said Yvonne Wilbanks, alcohol and drug control officer, Army Substance Abuse Program.

"Since the screening is anonymous, it provides the person with an honest look at his drinking behaviors," she said. "Everyone has an opportunity to decide 'how much alcohol is too much?'"

In addition, helping professionals will be available to talk with anyone at all of the sites where Davis will speak if they choose, Wilbanks said. ASAP also provides referral information.

Col. Michael Coss, 192nd Inf. Bde., commander, said substance abuse has no place in the military, and Soldiers must avoid it to maintain readiness.

"There are alternatives to addictions, and there are many treatment options available to help addicts," Coss said. "Life is about choices. You have to persevere and make the right ones no matter the cost. For a Soldier, our readiness and freedoms depend on it."

Davis will speak at:

- 1 p.m. Tuesday at Infantry Hall, Building 4 in Marshall Auditorium
- 1 p.m. Wednesday at Pratt Hall, Building 35 in the WHINSEC Auditorium
- 6 p.m. Wednesday on Sand Hill at Pomeroy Field

For information and to register, call ASAP at 706-545-7027 or 706-545-1138. Alcohol screening forms will be available.

The 74th Engineer Company, from Fort Hood, Texas, stationed at Balad Air Base, recovers a Mabey Johnson bridge elevated several feet above the surface of the old Rustimiyah Bridge, covering a large blast hole left from a vehicle-borne improvised explosive device last May. Iraqi National Police, with the 3rd Battalion, 3rd Brigade, 1st NP Division, and Soldiers from D Company, 1st Battalion, 15th Infantry Regiment, currently attached to the 3rd Squadron, 1st Cavalry Regiment, provided security for the recovery of the bridge Feb. 28.

Engineers remove temporary bridge

3RD HEAVY BRIGADE COMBAT TEAM
Staff Sgt. Sean Riley

FORWARD OPERATING BASE HAMMER, Iraq — The rusty remains of a temporary steel bridge were removed from over the Diyala River Feb. 28 after the opening of the new Rustimiyah Bridge.

The 74th Engineer Company, from Fort Hood, Texas, stationed at Balad Air Base, recovered a prefabricated Mabey Johnson bridge which was elevated several feet above the surface of the old Rustimiyah bridge. The structure was a temporary solution to a hole from a vehicle-borne improvised explosive device blast last May.

In less than a year, the government of Iraq funded and constructed a new land bridge to span the river, connecting Jisr Diyala and Baghdad. It was opened for public use after a ceremony and a parade Feb. 22.

The temporary Mabey Johnson bridge was falling into disrepair from frequent use by citizens and local residents.

Iraqi National Police with 3rd Battalion, 3rd Brigade, 1st NP Division, and U.S. Soldiers from D Company, 1st Battalion, 15th Infantry Regiment, currently attached to the 3rd Squadron, 1st Cavalry Regiment, provided security while the engineer company removed the bridge.

"The Rustimiyah Bridge site is a prime example of the Iraqi government and security progress made in just one year," said 1st Lt. Timothy Eng, 3rd Sqd., 1st Cav. Regt., squadron engineer.

The 3rd Bn., 3rd Bde., 1st NP Div., took charge of the security of the bridge with little assistance from members of 3rd Sqd., 1st Cav. Regt.

Capt. Damond Davis, fire support officer for 3rd Sqd., 1st Cav. Regt., was impressed by the professionalism and confidence the NP demonstrated while securing the site.

"Ten months ago, when we worked with the National Police, we were constantly coaching," Davis said. "Now, it feels more like working with a fellow Soldier when we conduct operations with them; they have made great gains."

The 3rd Bn., 3rd Bde., 1st NP Div., under Col. Emad, has garnered significant public support from the local populace in just one year.

Eng said the gains in support are due, in large part, to Col. Emad's leadership.

"(Col. Emad's) ability to work with Sons of Iraq leaders has proven to be invaluable to provide the best possible security for the citizens of Iraq," Eng said.

The NP recently provided security while new Jisr Diyala SoI checkpoints were established, said Eng.

"The Jisr Diyala Joint Security Site enables the NP to work in close quarters with the Sons of Iraq representatives to plan missions and provide immediate assistance to local citizens who come in with their needs," Eng said.

"All of these factors provided a solid foundation to conduct the joint security operations at the Rustimiyah Bridge."

Congressional staffers tour WHINSEC

Officials learn more about what institute teaches military students

WHINSEC
Grace A. Florez

Eighteen staffers from Congress took a plane to Fort Benning to learn about the fundamental democratic and human rights skills that the Western Hemisphere Institute for Security Cooperation teaches to international military students and explore the training students from different nations of the Western Hemisphere encounter every day in the U.S.

The staffers' day began with two briefings — one about the institute by Col. Gilberto Perez and the second on the Democracy and Human Rights Program by Dr. Tony Raimondo.

Afterward, staffers toured the institute, located at Ridgway Hall.

By visiting the departments, staffers gained a better idea of the tasks that WHINSEC carries out daily.

This visitation day is one of several occasions in which staffers from Congress participate in discussions about the institute.

Following the tour, the representatives went to Building 1700, an educational center. About 12 of them demonstrated their shooting skills at the Engagement Skill Trainer, a marksmanship simulator that allows students to coordinate fire, zero-in weapons and apply international laws to real life scenarios.

By using a variety of weapons at the EST — rifles, pistols, machine guns and rocket launchers — international students learn the limits of the use of force. The final event took place at WHINSEC's simulated drug lab.

BENCH NOTES

MITCHELL THOMAS IV

Favre hangs it up

The future Hall of Famer holds the record for most touchdowns, with 442, and the most consecutive starts for a quarterback, with 253. He was named league MVP three times and led the Packers to a Super Bowl win in 1997.

I don't know if I've ever seen a quarterback who threw the ball harder and seemed to have more fun at what he did than Brett. He is a class act, and he will be missed.

Now he can sport his grey hair the right way — at home with his family. Great career, old man.

Edwards loses lead

Carl Edwards wasn't able to celebrate long. Edwards, who captured his second straight victory at the Sprint Cup UAW-Dodge 400 in Las Vegas Sunday, was penalized 100 points plus 10 bonus points Wednesday for a failed inspection.

NASCAR officials discovered the motorist relining from his oil tank cap.

Edwards has now lost his point lead in the Sprint Cup. Allegedly, removing the cover can create an airflow, which increases the cars downforce by 10 percent. Wow. Is that why my car was faster after someone stole my gas cap?

Kobe drops 52

Kobe Bryant scored a season high 52 points for the Lakers Sunday in a 108-104 overtime victory over the Dallas Mavericks. It was the 22nd time he scored more than 50 points.

The Lakers, who have emerged as the team to beat in the West, look unstoppable with Pau Gasol in the lineup. Gasol is taking a lot of the pressure off Kobe, although Bryant's 52 points wouldn't suggest it.

I'm starting to think these guys will win it all. They have an excellent starting line and bench, and they have the best player in the game at the helm.

For more about all the NBA's recent blockbuster trades, read my commentary on B2. It's good for you.

Federer falls again

The usually dominant Roger Federer lost his second straight match Monday in the first round of the Dubai Tennis Championships. Andy Murray pulled the upset on Federer, beating him in three sets.

Federer, who has won in Dubai four times in the last five years, has lost to Murray twice in the last two years.

Twice in a row? It looks like his dominance is taking a bit of a hit. But this guy isn't ranked No. 1 for nothing. I feel for the guy he plays next.

"You can't be weak mentally — it won't work. You have to put everything you have into those six minutes."

DeNova takes state, keeps his eyes on Olympics

BAYONET CORRESPONDENT
Erin A. Nash

It was the 1996 Olympics that did it for Joe DeNova. The 4-year-old was captivated by the sport of wrestling.

At the time, the DeNova Family was stationed at Fort Lewis, Wash. Joe started wrestling at a nearby club.

"I loved it right off the bat," said Joe, the son of Sharon and Master Sgt. Bill DeNova, who wrestled in high school.

"My parents never pushed me to stick with wrestling. It was what I wanted to do. I also played baseball, soccer and football, but I've stuck with wrestling," the 15-year-old Columbus High sophomore said.

The DeNovas moved to Fort Benning when Joe was in the sixth grade. He wrestled in Fayette County until Child and Youth Services started a wrestling program on post. He joined in seventh grade and stayed with it until he started high school.

What has kept DeNova with the sport so long?

"I like how demanding it is. You can't be weak mentally — it won't work," he said. "You have to put everything you have into those six minutes."

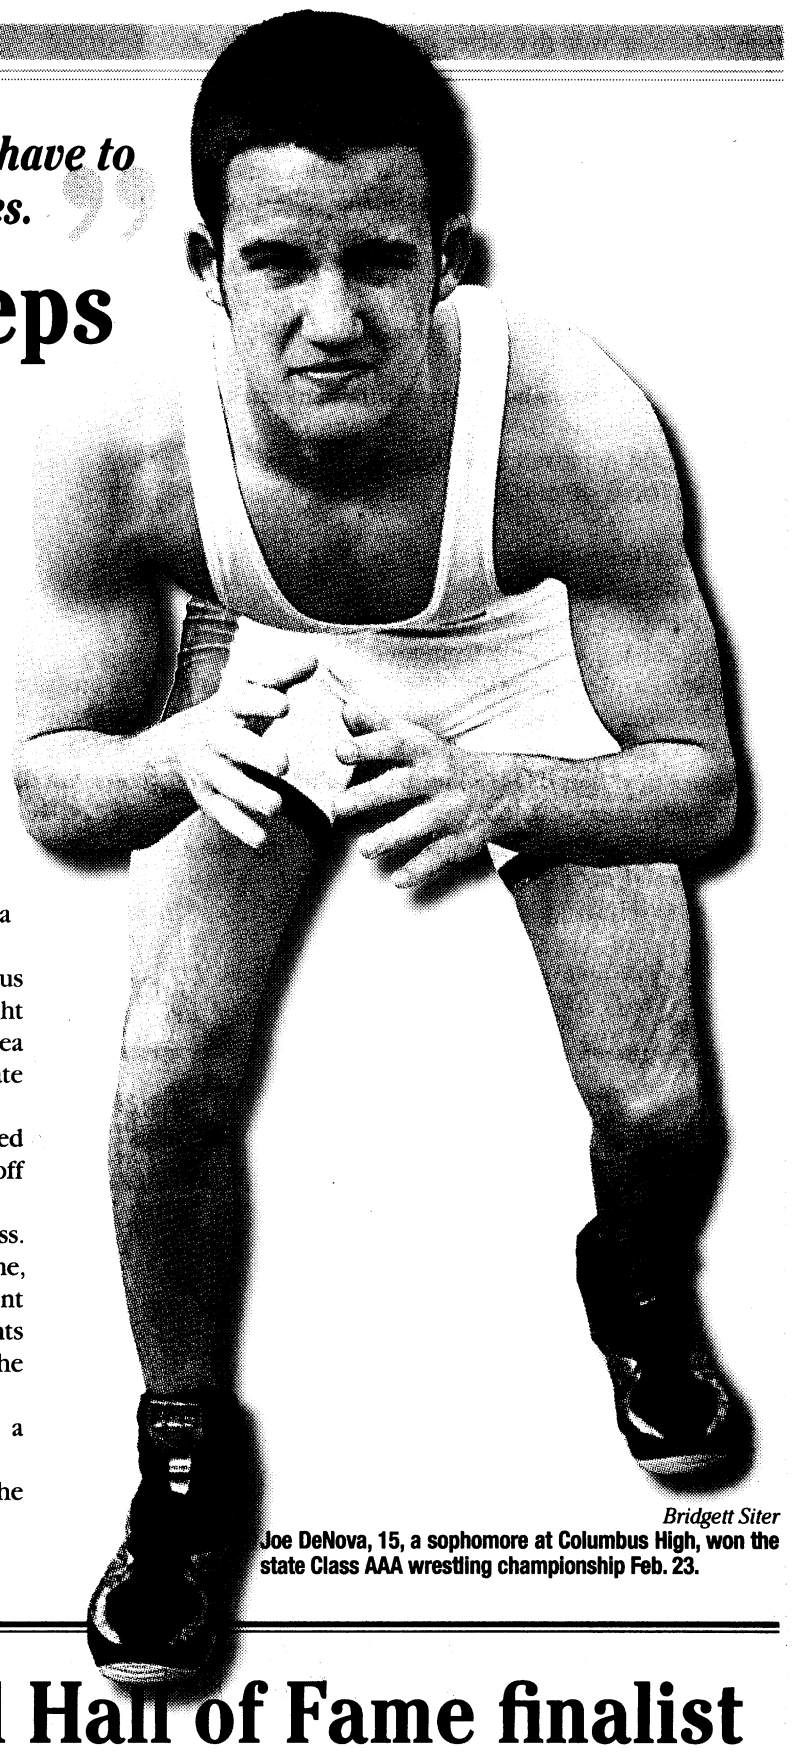
Joe said the sport has taught him not to give up on things because they're hard.

"It doesn't come easy to everyone," he said. "It's a one-person sport, and you can't blame anyone else if you lose. How well you do depends on how hard you work."

Sharon describes her son as "a well-rounded kid — kind, intelligent, strong, athletic and sensitive."

"Wrestling has taught him a lot of discipline," she said. "He knows you have to work hard for what you want. It has built his character and is a big part of who he is today."

After placing first in the Columbus championships in the 125-pound weight class in February and first in the area championships, Joe earned his first state title in Class AAA Feb. 23.



"I was so excited," he said. "I worked hard all season, and to know it paid off was amazing."

Joe credits his parents for his success.

"They've done so much for me, including the countless hours spent driving me to practice and tournaments and the money they spent on gear," he said.

Joe said he hopes to compete at a Division I college. And after that?

"My dream is to wrestle in the Olympics," he said.

Bridgett Siter

First Olympic shooter named Hall of Fame finalist

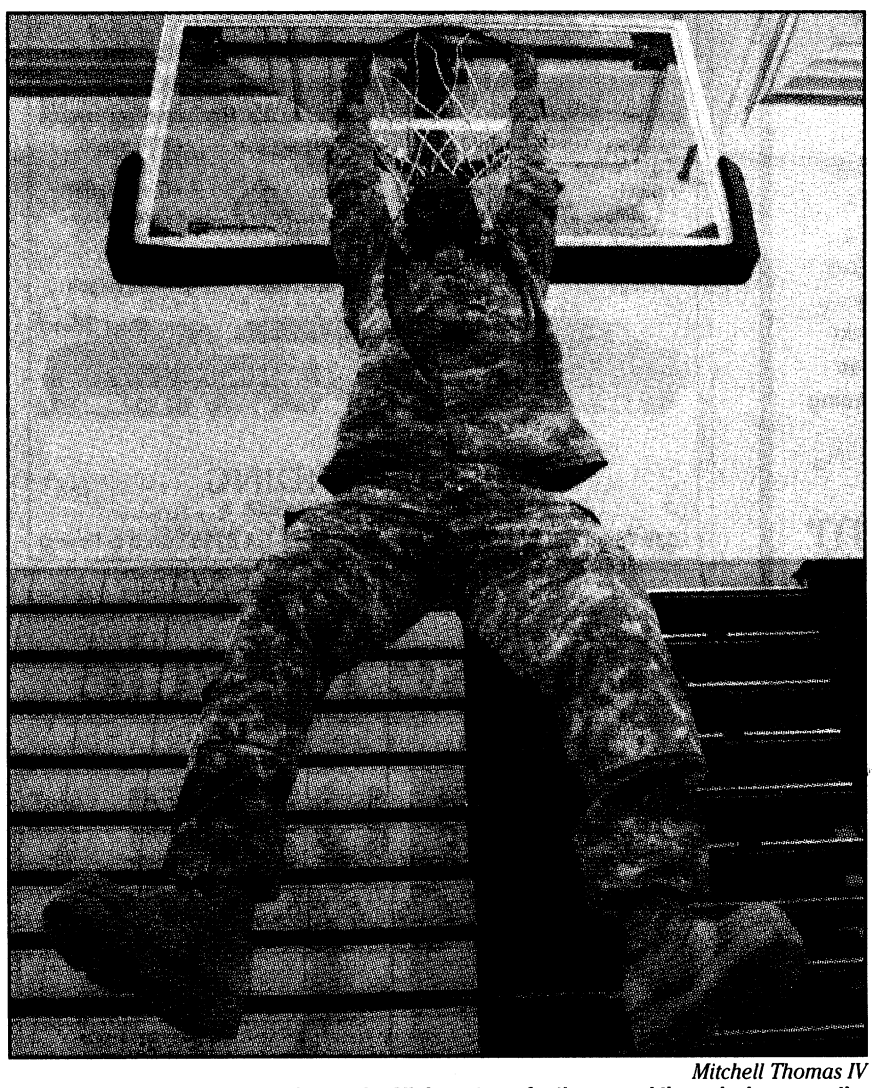
"Lones Wigger was my role model and the reason I joined the Army. As a youngster, I was inspired by him to set high goals, and he opened my eyes to the fact that the Army can help us achieve our goals."

— Lt. Col. Robert Harbison

A former U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit shooter is a finalist for the 2008 U.S. Olympic Hall of Fame. He is the first Olympic shooter ever selected as a finalist.



Retired Lt. Col. Lones W. Wigger Jr. was selected to four U.S. Olympic Teams and won three Olympic medals.

During his shooting career, Wigger won 111 medals — 65 Gold, 38 Silver and eight Bronze — and set 29 world records in international competition, more than any other shooter in the world.

Wigger is a member of the USA Shooting Hall of Fame, the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit Hall of Fame and was also honored in 1996 by the USOC as a Golden Olympian.

Wigger, 70, of Colorado Springs, Colo., is among the 18 individual Olympian Hall of Fame finalists announced by the USOC. He is a two-tour Vietnam Veteran and spent 25 years on active duty.

2nd Lt. Marshall Jackson is playing on the All-Army team for the second time. Jackson was the team's leader in assists and steals last year.

BOLC II players go All-Army

THE BAYONET
Mitchell Thomas IV

Fort Benning sent two Soldiers from the Basic Officers Leadership Course II to represent the Army on the hardwood.

2nd Lt. Marshall Jackson and 2nd Lt. Mario Claytor, two members of the undefeated BOLC II intramural team, shipped off Feb. 28 to join 20 other Soldiers picked to play for the All-Army basketball team.

The team will travel to various posts around the country to compete against community, semi-pro and post teams. They will also compete against teams from the sister services.

It's the second season with All-Army for Jackson, who played basketball at West Point.

Last season, he led the All-Army team in scoring, assists and steals and helped the team place third. He was also selected to the All-Armed Forces team, which is made up of the best players in the military.

Jackson said basketball has made him a better person and Soldier.

"I've loved this game since my dad put the ball in my crib," he said. "I've played every other sport at some level, but there's just something about basketball. It has taught me about teamwork, attitude and being a man."

After his All-Army assignment, Jackson will serve at Fort Sam Houston, Texas.

Claytor will be making his third appearance on the All-Army team. At 38, and the oldest player on the team, Claytor said he has as an advantage.

"I bring a bit of knowledge to the game, and I can act as another coach on the court," he said.

Claytor said he grew up playing basketball in Radford, Va.

"It was the main thing that kept me out of trouble, and it was a big part of what gave me discipline," he said.

He played two years at Hartnell Junior College, a season at Western Carolina and his senior year at the University of Hawaii at Hilo.

Wigger: Competed in Olympics three times

As a member of the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit, he competed at the 1964 Olympic Games in Tokyo, the 1968 Olympic Games in Mexico and the 1972 Olympic Games in Munich, where he won a combined two Gold Medals and one Silver Medal. He also qualified for the 1980 Olympic Team.

Wigger also competed on five Pan-American Games teams, where he won five Silver and 13 Gold medals. At the 1982, 1978, 1974 and 1970 World Championships, Wigger won 12 medals — two Gold, six Silver and four Bronze.

He started shooting with his father in Montana. He was a four-time All-American at Montana State College and enrolled in Army ROTC. He joined the Army in 1960 and after his basic course was assigned to the Army Marksmanship Unit.

Wigger shot for the USAMU International Rifle Team until 1967.

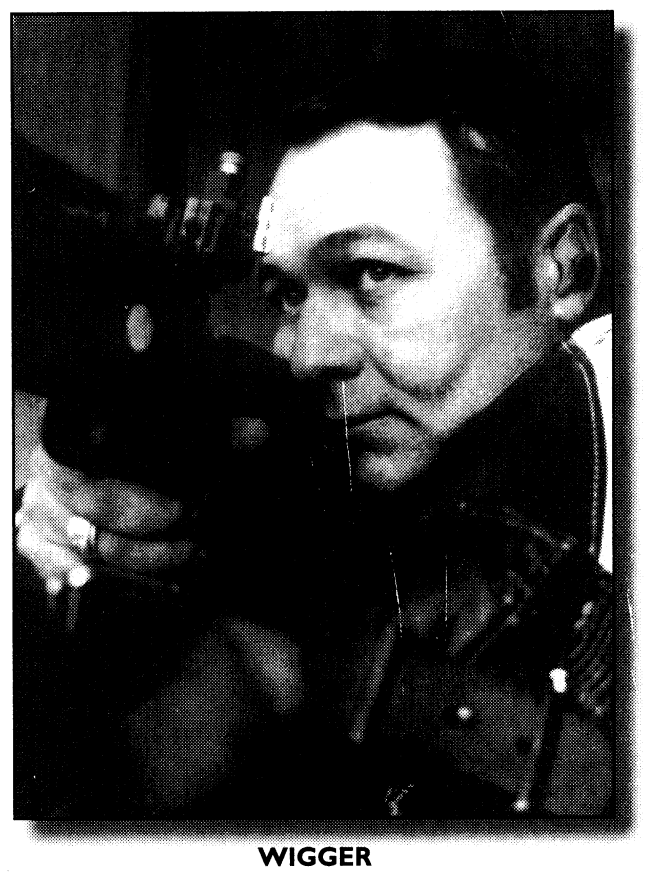
After a tour in Vietnam, he returned to the Marksmanship Unit and shot until 1970.

Wigger again deployed to Vietnam and served as the officer in charge of the 23rd Infantry Division Sniper School.

He then returned to the USAMU in 1972 and stayed until his retirement in 1987.

After he retired from the Army, Wigger served as the director of the U.S. Shooting Team until 1992.

He now is a member of the USA Shooting Staff as a coach and representative and works as a match director.



"Lones Wigger was my role model and the reason I joined the Army," said USAMU International Rifle shooter and 1996 Olympian Lt. Col. Robert E. Harbison.

"As a youngster, I was inspired by him to set high goals, and he opened my eyes to the fact that the Army can help us achieve our goals. I encourage everyone to vote for him."

The U.S. Olympic Committee announced Feb. 27 the finalists for the U.S. Olympic Hall of Fame Class of 2008 and invited the public to vote online at www.USOlympicHallofFame.com to determine who will comprise the next class of inductees.

USOC Hall of Fame voting continues through March 28.

Six individual Olympians, one Olympic team and one Paralympian, along with a coach, a veteran and a special contributor, will be honored during the U.S. Olympic Hall of Fame Induction Ceremony Presented by Allstate.

AMU marksmen score big

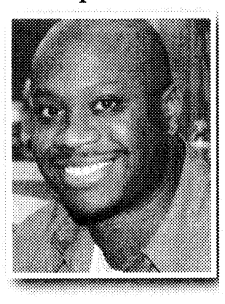
• USA Shooting Three-Times Rapid Fire Pistol Match, Fort Benning, Feb. 15 to 17 — USAMU international pistol shooter Pfc. Brad A. Balsley won the match.

He beat five-time Olympian John T. McNally by nearly 10 points and set a new Junior National Record. USAMU's Staff Sgt. John C. Ennis finished third.

• Barbados Open, Christ Church, Barbados, Jan. 17 to 20 —Shotgun shooter Sgt. 1st Class Shawn C. Dulohery won the Skeet Match, followed by Pfc. Vincent C. Hancock in second place.



• Hill Country Shooting Sports Center Trap Matches, Kerrville, Texas, Jan. 6 to 14 — Shotgun shooter Sgt. Matthew T. Wallace took second place in the Olympic-style Trap Match and Staff Sgt. Richard R. Hadden was third.

Trade madness

THE BAYONET
Mitchell Thomas IV

I've been thinking of the NBA's trade madness, and was trying to decide which team got the most out of it.

First off, I think the Shaq-Marion deal is a bust. At present, the Miami Heat is no better than it was and neither are the Suns. Shaq's numbers are down in just about every category but rebounds. On the other hand, Shawn Marion is flourishing in the Heat's system. Too bad the team is just as bad as it was before the move. I've said this before, the Suns were fools to let Marion get away. Being stingy with their budget is going to bite them in the seat when the playoffs roll around. They might as well hang it up, because the Lakers are going to roll over everyone.

Speaking of the Lakers, the best trade of the year — possibly this century — was the acquisition of Pau Gasol for relatively nothing. Gasol has gelled with the Laker style of play like he's been there for years, and he's only getting better. Kobe Bryant seems to be having the time of his life now that he has a scorer who can take some of the pressure off him.

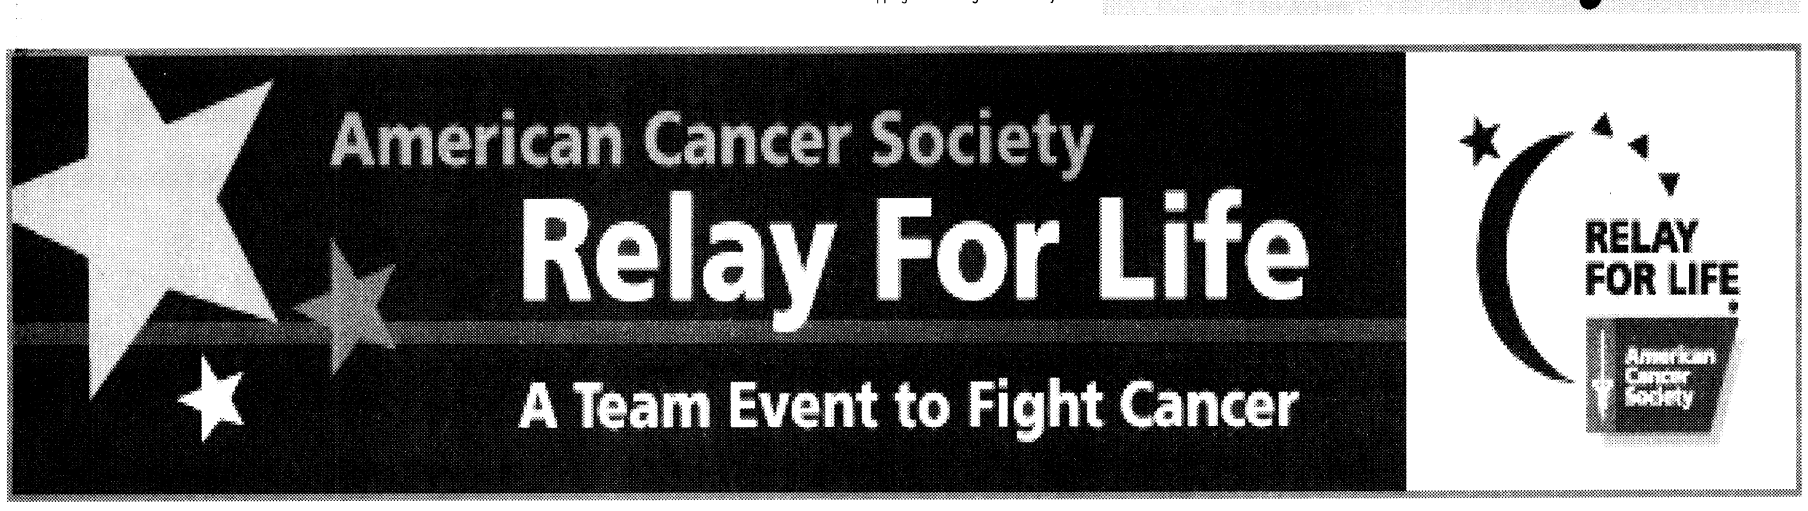
More importantly, with Gasol, the team has the inside presence they've desperately needed. And when their true center, Andrew Bynum comes back, the team will almost be a bully.

I also like the trade between the Houston Rockets and the New Orleans Hornets. The Hornets picked up Bonzi Wells and point guard Mike James. Wow. This one is a bonus for the Hornets, who are surprisingly one of the best teams in the league. The Mike James addition makes the biggest difference. James could be a starter on most any team in the league, and now he's backing up Chris Paul, who should be the MVP this year. And although Bonzi Wells has struggled in recent years, he is a proven scorer and will add to their offense. Maybe the change of venue and a down home po' boy might do him a world of good.

I'm still not too thrilled about the trade of Jason Kidd for the entire Mavericks' future. The Mavs released one of their key players with third-year man Devin Harris, who has having his finest season before the trade.

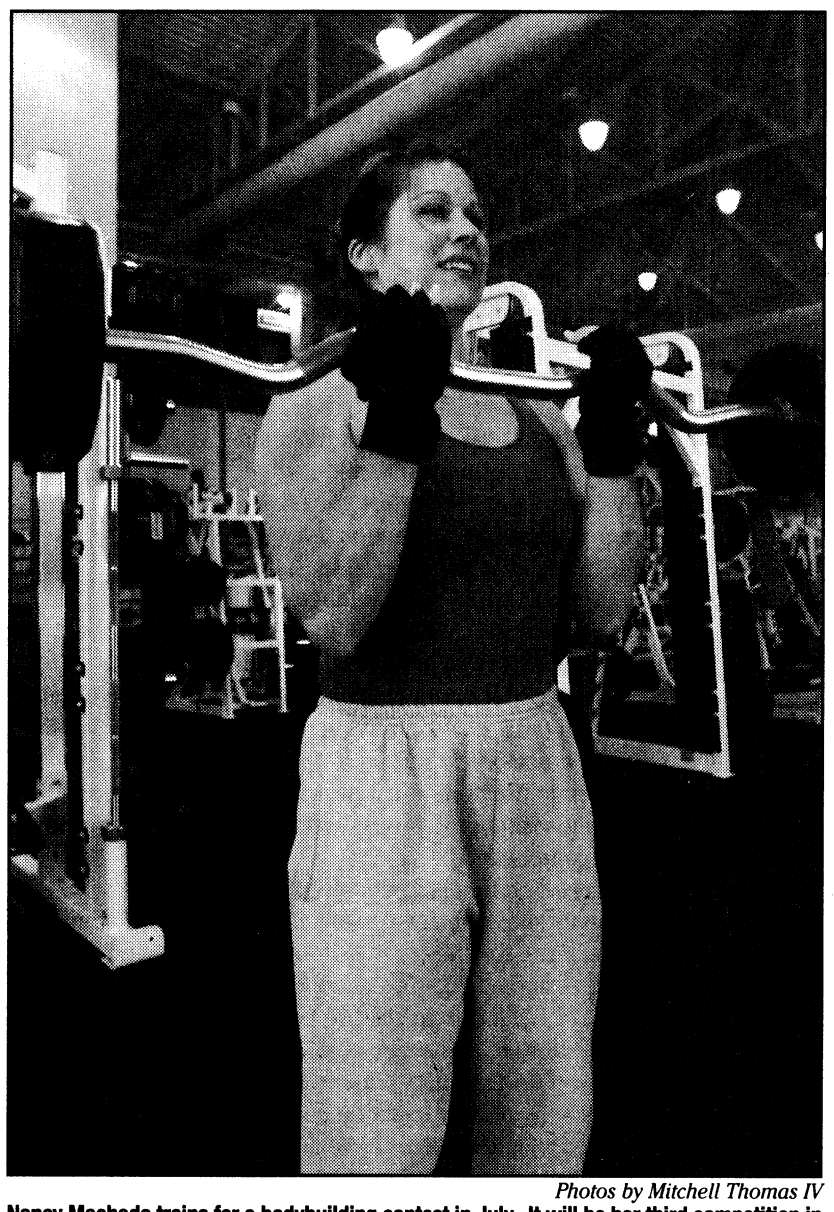
Don't get me wrong, Kidd is arguably the best point guard to play the game since Magic Johnson. But Kidd, who will be 35 soon, doesn't have enough left in the tank to warrant such a move. It seems like owner Mark Cuban was looking for the quick, "win now" trade. And it won't work because there's not enough time for the team to mesh.

As for the Cleveland Cavaliers big trade, LeBron James has finally gotten his much-needed support. The addition of quick point guard Delonte West will allow James to be more dimensional. Also, adding "Big" Ben Wallace to the mix makes them stronger on the front line. The Cavs lost Larry Hughes and Drew Gooden, but so what? Neither Hughes nor Gooden fit the Cavs' system and both are proving to be better on the Chicago Bulls.



I must say, the trades this year were fierce, and if the teams that benefited the most make things happen in the playoffs, each move will prove worth it.

We'll soon see.



Personal trainer changes her life through bodybuilding

Photos by Mitchell Thomas IV

Nancy Machado trains for a bodybuilding contest in July. It will be her third competition in five years.

THE BAYONET
Mitchell Thomas IV

Nancy Machado, a personal trainer at Smith Fitness Center and a competitive bodybuilder, wants to be an inspiration for all who doubt their abilities.

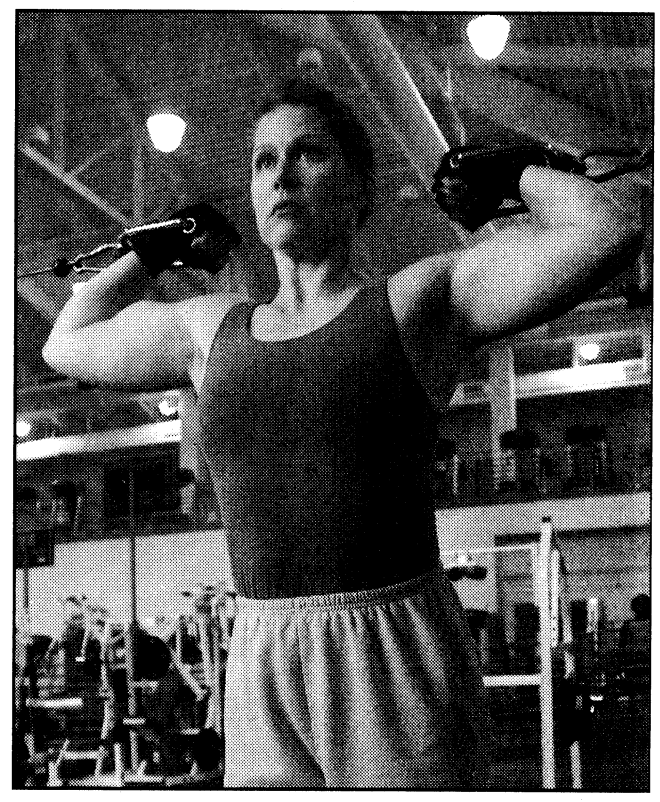
As an overweight child, Machado was teased and ridiculed. It took its toll on her confidence.

"I was never into sports, I wasn't picked to play in school, and I never did physical activities all that much," she said.

In high school Machado tried crash diets, fasting and hypnosis. Her lack of confidence only increased after an abusive marriage. After leaving the marriage, she reached a physical, mental and spiritual turning point and began taking control of her life.

In 1991, Machado did a one-year stint in the Army and was introduced to vigorous physical activity. She also met her current husband, 1st Sgt. Bruce Machado, and earned a degree in business. But she still had issues with weight.

With two kids and a deployed husband, Machado began to fight back. After having her second child, a neighbor introduced her to natural bodybuilding.



After training for several years, she entered her first competition in 2003 and placed second. She followed with a first-place finish two years later.

But it wasn't until 2006, when Machado became a certified trainer, that she found her niche. She now has nearly a dozen clients.

"When I first saw her, I knew by the way she looked and carried herself that she was the type of person I wanted training me," said James Jolly, one of Machado's clients. "When I ask questions, I get answers back. She lives it and does it on a daily basis, so you know she has the knowledge."

Machado said she gets far more from her clients that they get from her.

"I take my relationship with my clients very personal," she said. "I feel my journey to find my own health and fitness led me to train people who need it."

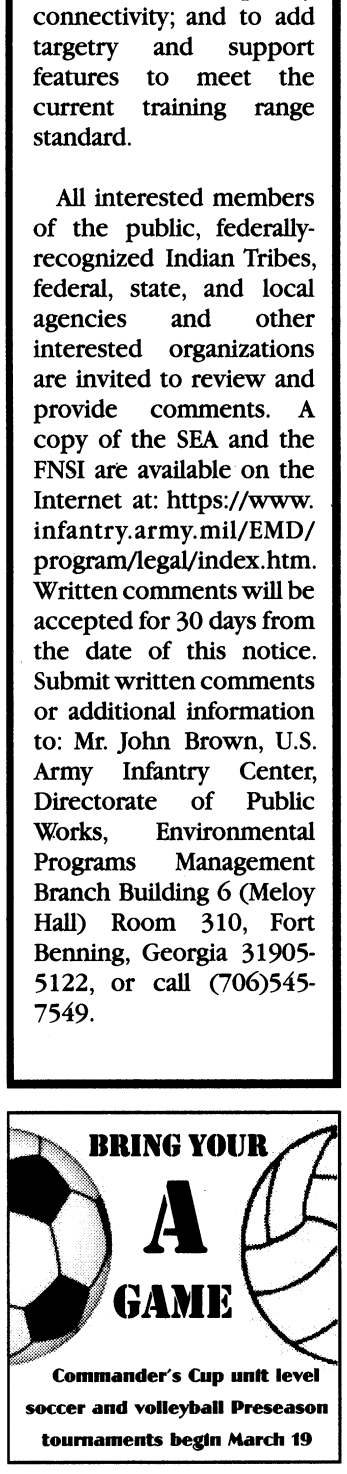
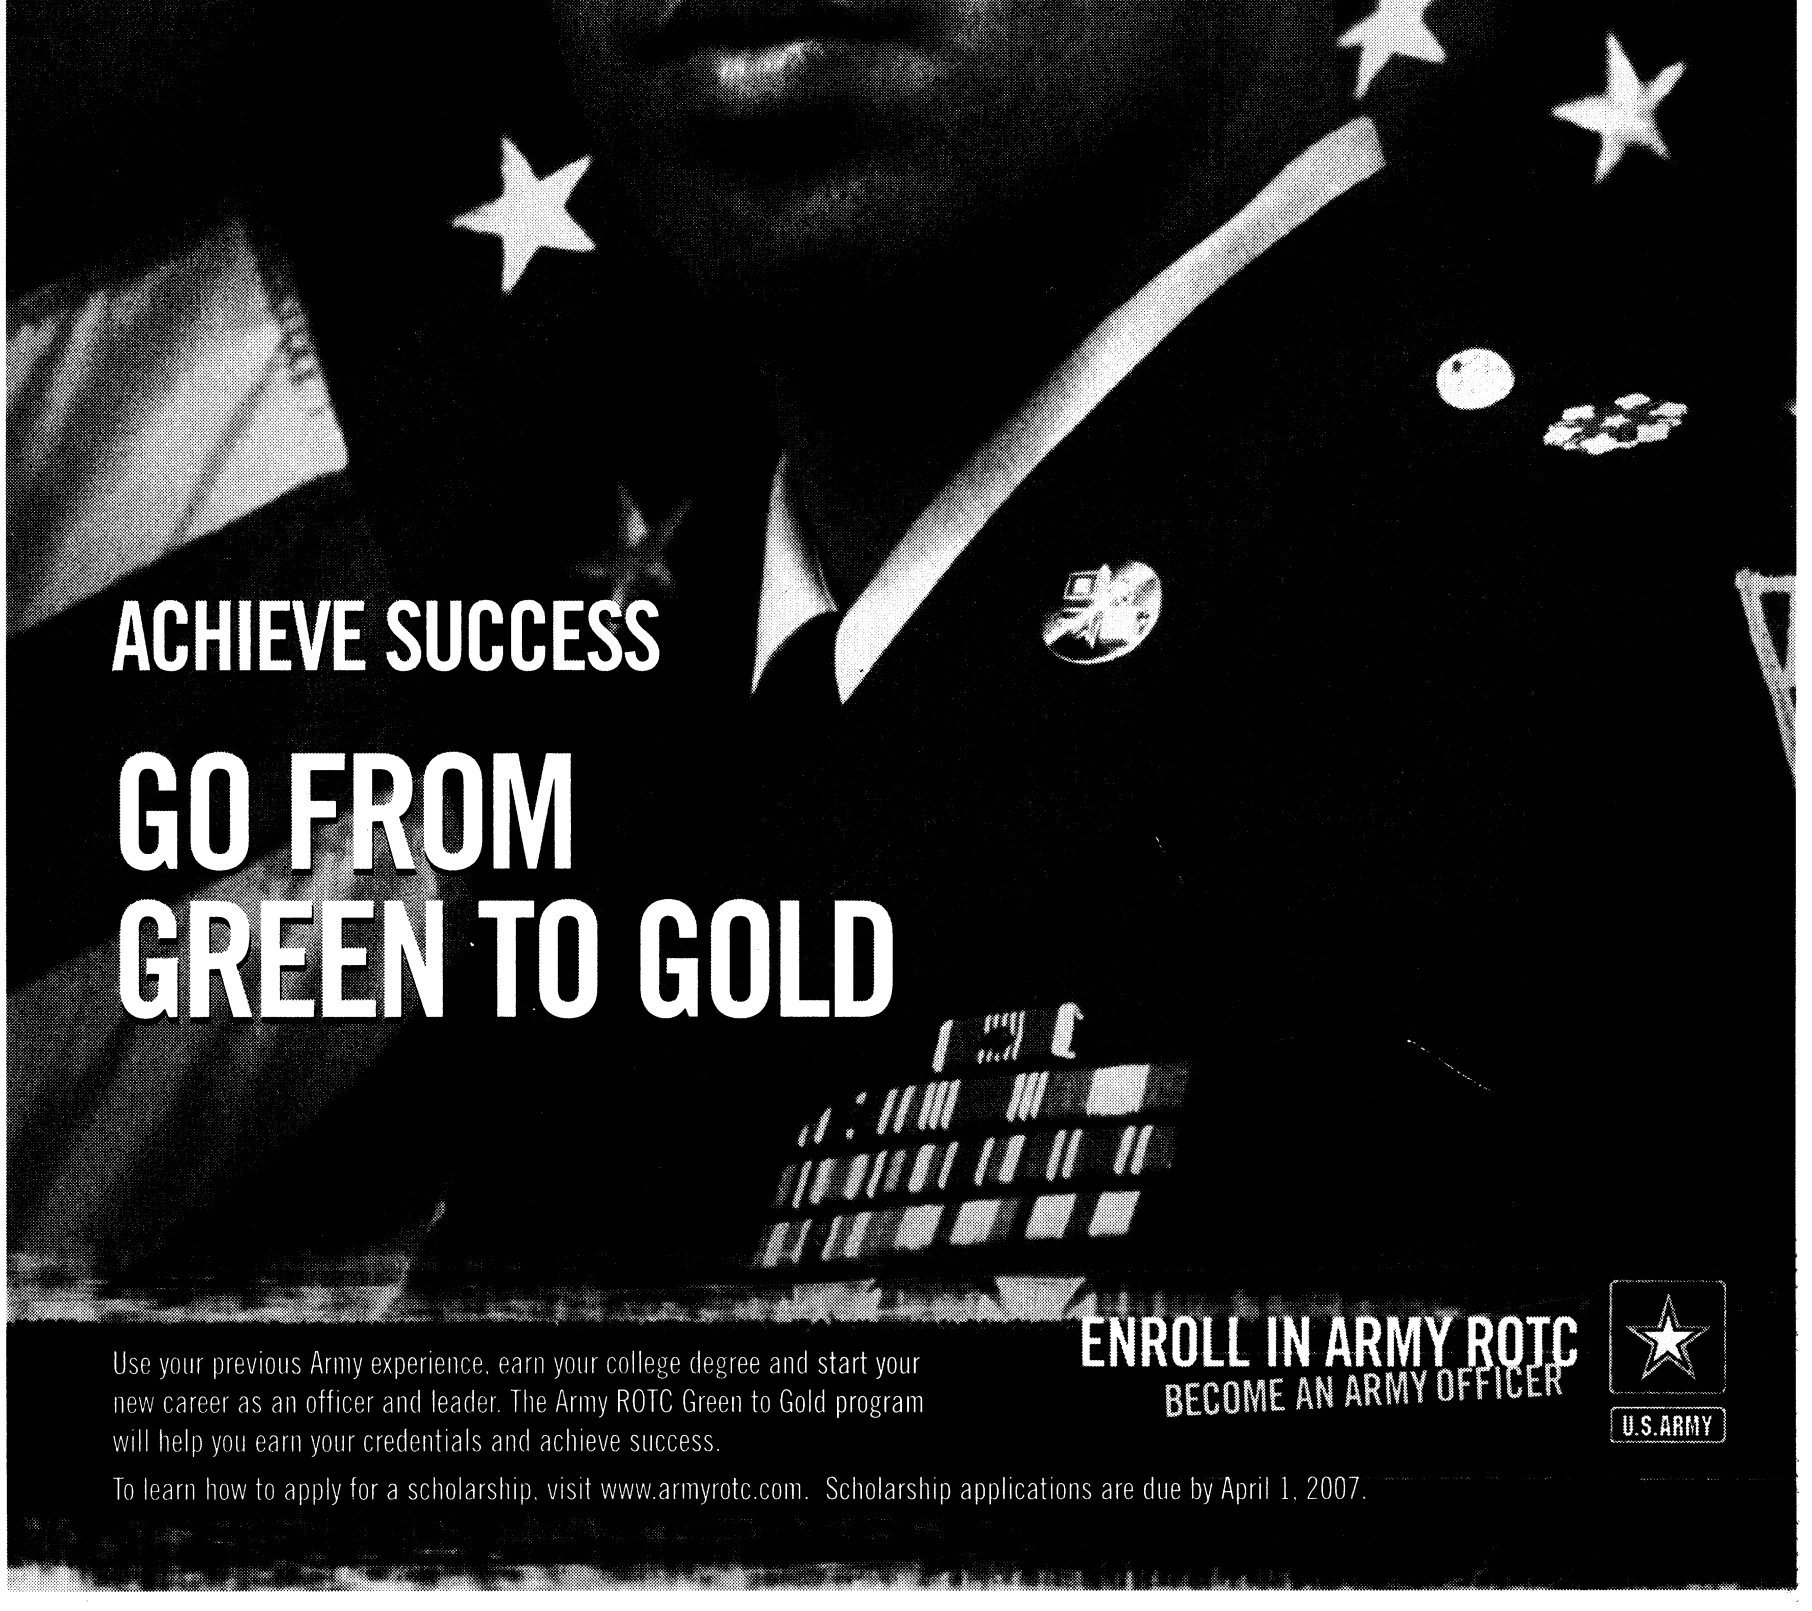
Machado will compete in the Supernatural Bodybuilding Federation Southern Open in Suwanee, Ga., in July.

"After I won (in 2005), I felt like one of the characters from Revenge of the Nerds," she said. "Even people who are chubby or ridiculed in any way can rise above and win."

Machado said having a positive attitude makes all the difference when trying to make changes in diet, exercise and life.



"People always have their stories and their excuses, but whatever goal you have, you've just got to want it bad enough," she said. "You can overcome anything when you make up your mind that your going to get it done."



PUBLIC NOTICE

Draft Finding of No Significant Impact (FNSI), and Final Supplemental Environmental Assessment (SEA) for the Digital Multi-Purpose Range Complex (DMPRC) Vegetation Removal and Range Modifications at Fort Benning.

The U.S. Army prepared a SEA to supplement the 2004 Final Environmental Impact Statement for the DMPRC. The potential environmental effects of vegetation removal and range modifications for the DMPRC are addressed. The proposed action is to remove additional vegetation to achieve adequate line of site and radio frequency connectivity; and to add targetry and support features to meet the current training range standard.

All interested members of the public, federally-recognized Indian Tribes, federal, state, and local agencies and other interested organizations are invited to review and provide comments. A copy of the SEA and the FNSI are available on the Internet at: https://www.infantry.army.mil/EMD/program/legal/index.htm. Written comments will be accepted for 30 days from the date of this notice. Submit written comments or additional information to: Mr. John Brown, U.S. Army Infantry Center, Directorate of Public Works, Environmental Programs Management Branch Building 6 (Meloy Hall) Room 310, Fort Benning, Georgia 31905-5122, or call (706)545-7549.

FIT FACTS

DFMWR FITNESS DIRECTOR
Lori Smith

This week, I want to talk about issues addressed on customer comment cards at the different fitness centers on post. I hope to answer a few questions people have concerning a variety of issues.

• Missing dumbbells at Audie Murphy: Typically we have sets of dumbbells at the fitness centers. Audie Murphy had a set of number 35 dumbbells until several months ago, when apparently it took the same trip many of our towels take.

Because of the cost of one dumbbell — $400 — it took some time to get the order placed. It has been ordered and should arrive in the next week.

• Weight room etiquette: I got a few comment cards on cell phone use while in the gym and wanted to go over general weight room etiquette.

Take a second to read the Fitness Center Rules posted at all our facilities. These fitness centers are used by a number of people with different interests, beliefs, workout rituals, routines and personalities. The rules try to establish a happy median for everyone.

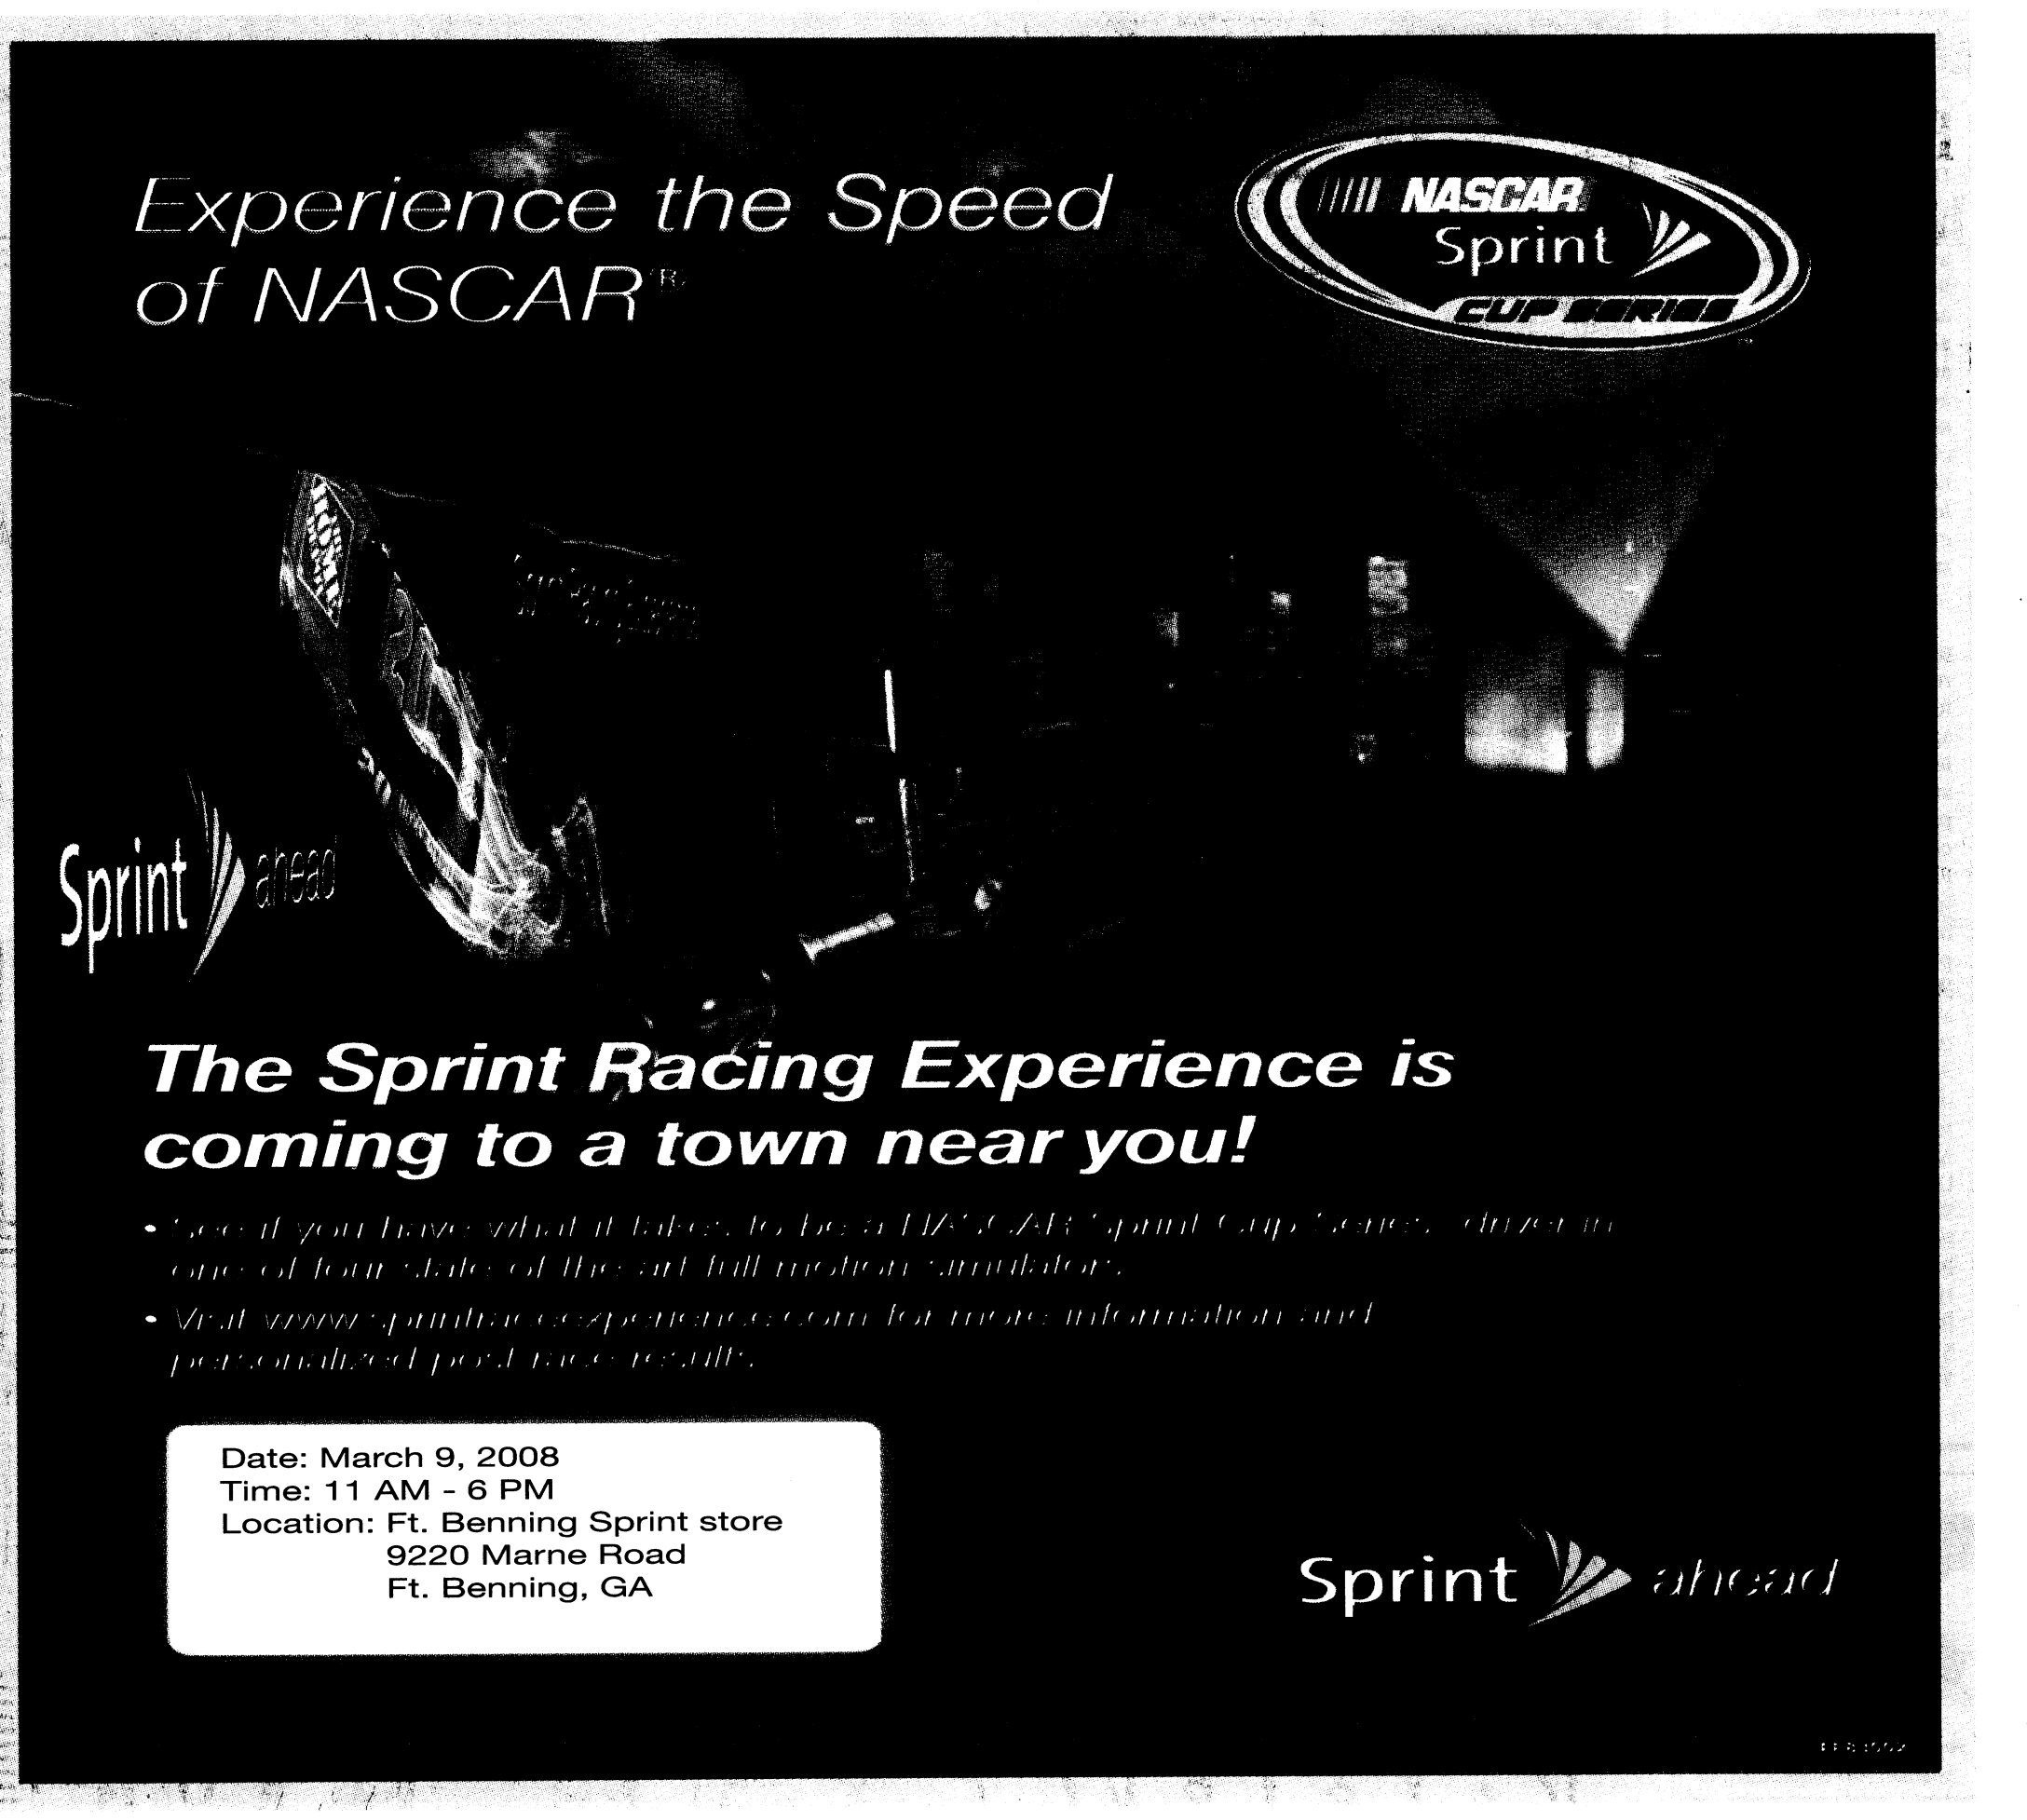
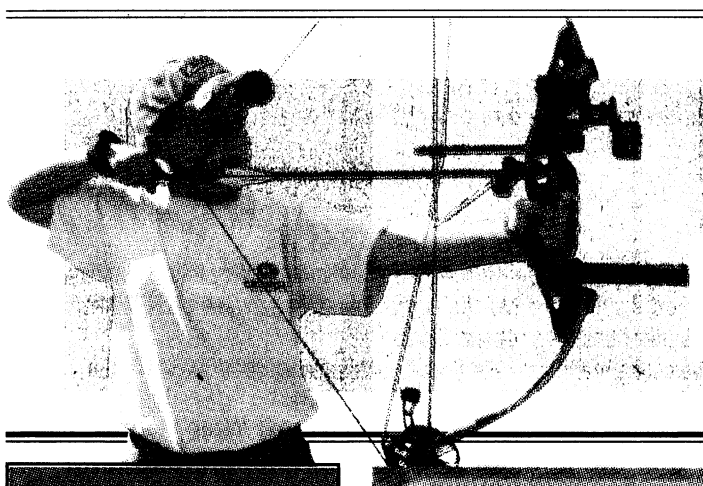
• General comments: We have received several comments speaking very highly of our facilities. I want to say thank you for these cards. It means a great deal to hear that we're actually doing a good job.

Some of the jobs that have to be done at the facilities are not pleasant, and a nice comment is always welcome. Thank you for letting us know when we do a good job.



Thanks for all your input on comment cards. We try very hard to meet the needs of everyone here on post, but are also held to certain limitations. Your understanding of these and your patience is very much appreciated. The pats on the back are also welcome.



I also want to remind everyone of a few things we have coming up in Sports, Fitness and Aquatics. Commander's Cup Soccer and Volleyball registration is coming up Wednesday. A coaches meeting will be held from noon to 1 p.m. at Doughboy Stadium.

For more information, please call Willie Spann at 706-984-1994.

Also, it's time to start training for this year's Fort Benning Reverse Sprint Triathlon, which will be held June 7. Registration will begin May 1. For more information, contact me at lori.smith6@us.army.mil

Thank you for reading. Remember to stay healthy and have a great weekend.

Fun for the whole family

SPORT BRIEFS

ON POST

ARMY FAMILY COVENANT BENEFITS

Families of deployed Soldiers who qualify for the Army Family Covenant card will have registration fees waived for Outdoor Rec trips and activities and half off their Benning Club membership during their Soldiers' deployment.

The cards are issued through unit FRSA and FRG liaisons.

FERAL PIG BOUNTY

The bounty for feral pigs killed on post is $40 until Wednesday. Authorized Fort Benning hunters must take the tail of the pig, enclosed in a ziplock bag, with an attached data sheet to the Conservation Branch, Building 5883, between 1 and 3 p.m. on Tuesdays or the last Friday of the month. For more information about the hunt, the data sheet or the bounty, call 706-545-7978.

YOUTH BASEBALL REGISTRATION

Child and Youth Services baseball registration, for ages 4 to 15, will be March 18 through April 12 at Central Registration, Building 359. Register to win for a getaway to Uchee Creek. CYS is looking for volunteer coaches. Training is included and registration fees for one child are waived. For more information or to make an appointment between 2 and 4 p.m., call 706-545-1853.

COMMANDER'S CUP SOCCER, VOLLEYBALL

Commander's Cup unit level soccer and volleyball leagues will form soon. Preseason tournaments will begin March 19.

For more information, call 706-984-1994.

CG GOLF SCRAMBLE

The next CG Golf Scramble will start at 8 a.m. March 27 at the Fort Benning Golf Course. The cost is $25 if paid early and $30 on the day of the event. The fee covers the cost of the cart, two mulligans, food and prizes.

For more information, call 706-687-1940.

WATERCRAFT AND BOAT SAFETY

A Personal Watercraft & Boater Safety Course will be held March 29 in Classroom 51, Infantry Hall. The free course will provide information on legal requirements, navigation rules, preventing personal watercraft and boating accidents, and new boating laws.

Each participant will receive a Boater Safety Book and a certificate from the Georgia Department of Natural Resources. There will be a boat inspection available after the course. Class is limited to 24 participants.

Register by March 26. Call 706-545-9636.

FAMILY FISHING NIGHT AT RUSS POND

Outdoor Recreation will hold a family fishing night at 6 p.m. April 15 at Russ Pond and Pool. There will be a fly fishing demonstration by Fly Fishing for Vets. Outdoor rec will provide fishing poles and bait at no cost.

The event is free and open to the public.

For more information, call 706-545-9636.

REVERSE SPRINT TRIATHLON

The annual Reverse Sprint Triathlon will be held June 7. Individuals and teams of all ages and gender are encouraged to compete in the 5K run, 20K bike race and 550M swim.

Registration will begin in May. For more information, call 706-527-2393.

HARVEST REPORTING

Hunters are reminded that all deer, turkeys, hogs, doves, squirrels and quail harvested on Fort Benning must be reported using the TELTRACK Hunter Control System by calling 706-545-8387 and selecting menu item number 4.

EAR TAGS

Auburn University is conducting a study of the feral pigs on Fort Benning to understand their population size, reproductive rates, movement patterns and food habits.

This information will help determine what impacts feral pigs have on habitat, wildlife populations and military training.

Pig hunters, please report the ear tag number, ear tag color, date harvested and general location of harvest to the Conservation Branch. Several pigs have been fitted with radio-tracking collars to help us determine habitat use.

Please attempt to identify and avoid harvesting collared pigs. If a collared pig is harvested or found, please return the collar to Conservation Branch, First Division Road, Building 5884, Harmony Church.

For more information, call 706-544-7079, 706-544-7516 or 707-544-7319.

Shop supplies taking toll on reader's repair costs

KING FEATURES SYNDICATE
Tom and Ray Magliozzi

Dear Tom and Ray,

What are shop supplies? I thought it was old rags and sprays to clean or lube. My recent visit to a dealer's garage cost me $22.56 for shop supplies. My total bill was $297.81. If I take my car to a dealer for repairs three times a month, that will cost me a lot for supplies. Do I have to pay it? Is it a tip?

— Carol

Ray: The term "shop supplies" generally refers to things like solvents, cleaners, small quantities of fluids, rags, the servicing of the parts-cleaning machine, and the disposal of waste old and other environmentally toxic materials.

Tom: It's all stuff that does have to be paid for. But shops have different ways of dealing with it.

Ray: In our shop, we actually track the shop supplies that are used for a particular job and itemize them on the bill. So you might see a charge for brake cleaner, or for topping off your power-steering fluid or antifreeze.

Tom: The problem is, we have a relatively small shop. And when you have a dealership, with 20 bays going and a hundred customers a day, it's difficult to keep track of that stuff on a job-by-job basis.

It becomes a bookkeeping nightmare. Then you'd have to add a bookkeeping charge to every bill, which wouldn't make you very happy either, Carol

Ray: So in many cases, a shop will simply bury that stuff in the labor rate and charge $90 an hour instead of $85. And that's fair.

They tell you up front that this is the cost of doing business with them.

Tom: But other shops choose not to do that, probably for competitive reasons. They don't want their labor rates to be higher than other shops in the area.

So in those cases, they often charge a percentage of the repair cost for "shop supplies." That's what happened in your case.

Ray: We don't particularly care for that approach, because then you may come in for a job like a window regulator, which requires no shop supplies — no rags, no cleaners, no solvents — and you still end up paying seven or eight percent of your bill for supplies.

Tom: And somebody who gets a brake job, which uses a lot of supplies, essentially gets his job subsidized by you.

Ray: But like I said, it's very hard for large shops to keep track of this stuff individually. So I would prefer that it either be included in the hourly labor rate or made clear from the outset that there is a certain percentage surcharge on each bill to cover these costs.

At least that way you know what to expect up front and can make your decision accordingly.

Why do unmitigated cheapskates like Tom continue to buy nothing but old clunkers? Find out by ordering How to Buy a Great Used Car: Secrets Only Your Mechanic Knows. Send $4.95, check or money order, to Used Car, PO Box 536475, Orlando, Fl., 32853-6475.

Army wrestlers match world's best in Dave Shultz Memorial

ARMY NEWS SERVICE
Walt Johnson

Army wrestlers earned two silver medals and a bronze in the 2008 Dave Schultz Memorial International wrestling competition at the U.S. Olympic Training Center in February.

Dremiel Byers and Keith Sieracki earned silver medals, and Iris Smith earned a bronze medal in competition in an Olympic-style event.

The tournament drew many of the athletes who will represent their countries in the Olympics this year.

Sieracki said he was excited to be a part of the event.

"This is a good time for me, because it gives my fellow Soldiers, Family and other people a chance to see me wrestle.

"I am always ready to wrestle, but I get a little extra adrenaline when I can perform in town," Sieracki said.

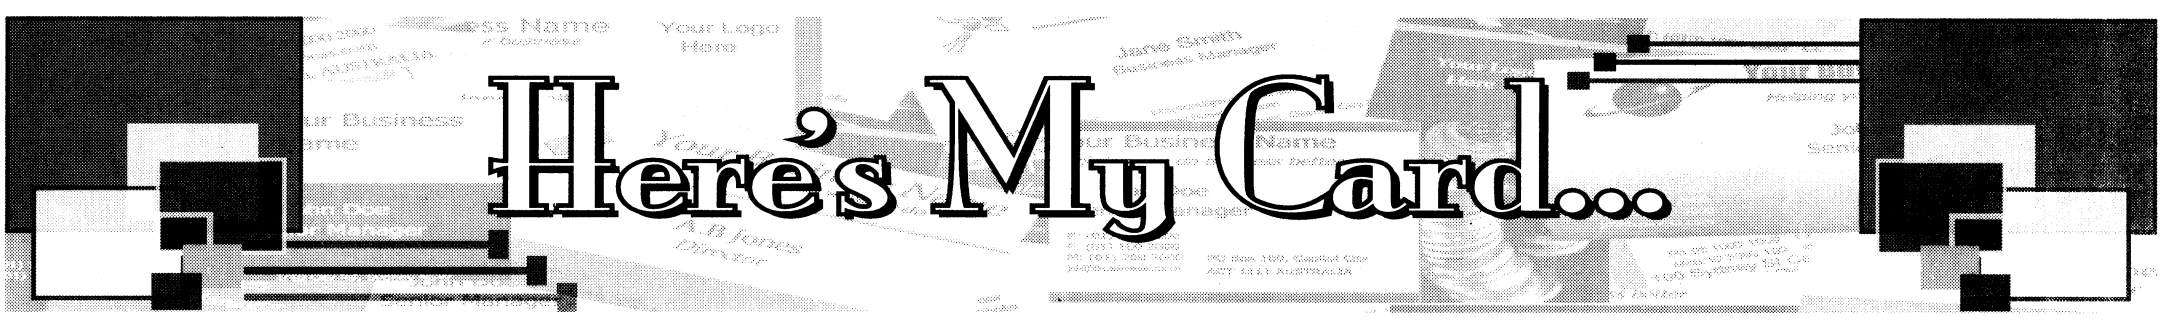
In the semis, he sprained his medial collateral ligament and went into his contest against the Cuban world champion with only one good leg.

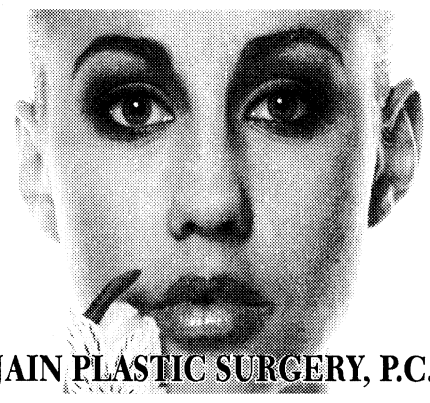
Byers said he never thought about not competing against the Cuban, because "this is my home turf."



"I will try to defend my home turf the best I can, even if it could mean suffering a career-ending injury," he said.

Byers lost a close decision to the Cuban champion but would not let the injured leg be an excuse.

He said he looks forward to competing against him and other wrestlers in the future.



"I hate that I lost to him, but I know one thing — it is going to be different the next time we meet," Byers said.

The next time they meet could be in Beijing for the Olympics.

Green genes

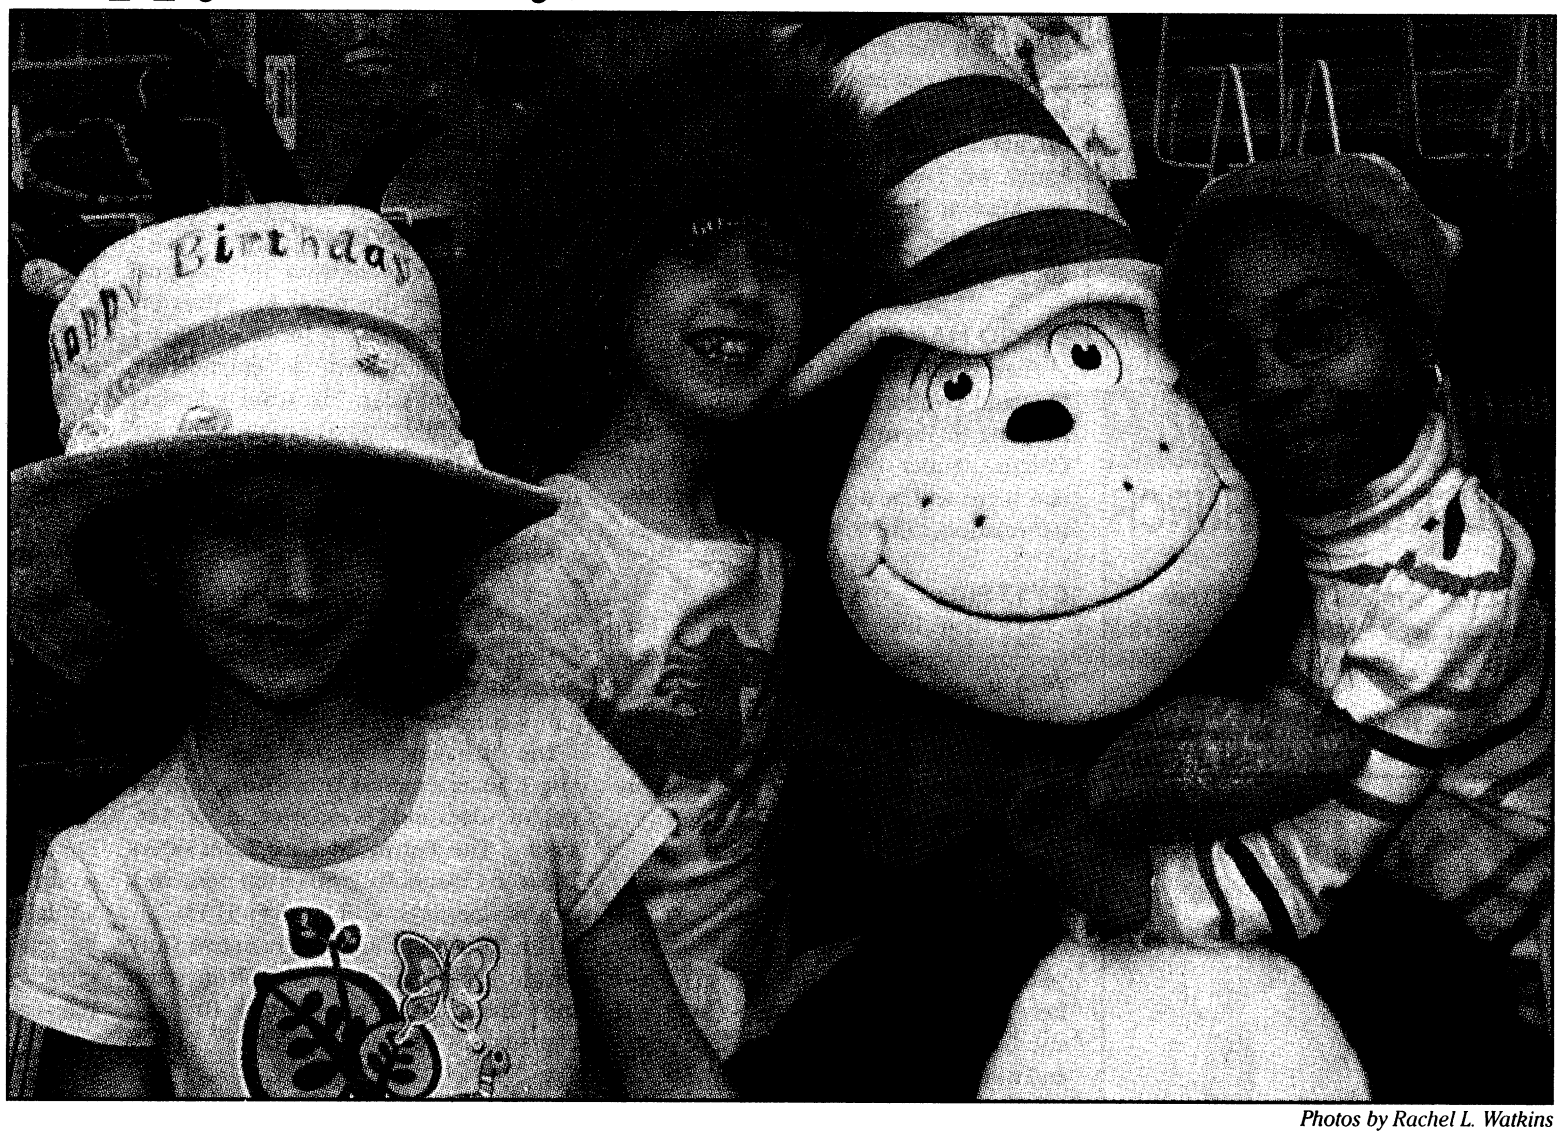
Our bodies naturally crave sugars and fats, but for those of us watching our diets, we can't always give in to what tastes good. A common complaint about healthy foods is that they are just too bland. Potato chips, with their artificial flavors, oil, salt and maltodextrin, put a plain potato to shame. The key is compromise: to add flavor without adding an excess of calories. Many healthy foods, though dull at first bite, deserve a second chance.



Brown rice is a good place to start. It's unprocessed and contains about four times the amount of fiber as white rice, extra protein and vitamins. Brown rice can taste boring by itself, so spice it up with diced peppers and onions or garlic, lemon and sesame seed oil. Baked in milk and enhanced with cinnamon, raisins, honey and nuts, brown rice makes tasty rice pudding, a great alternative to a richer dessert. Or just mix some brown rice with your white rice when you're cooking. One part brown to three parts white works well. That way, you still get some of the fiber without drastically altering the flavor of your meal.

Another unpopular power food is cabbage, rich in antioxidants and vitamin C. Research has shown that including cabbage as a staple in your diet can increase your defenses against illnesses like cancer and heart disease. So you think it tastes worse than grass? Try coleslaw made with low-fat salad dressing or a yogurt-based sauce instead of high-fat mayonnaise. Cabbage also makes a great addition to soup or vegetable quiche and can always be added to your salad for extra crunch.

Sometimes, healthy food isn't bland. Sometimes, it has a distinctive flavor that you just don't enjoy. Sometimes, it tastes like celery, and I hate celery. This wonderful food is high in potassium and fiber and, after digestion, is calorie-free. I used to dip it in all natural peanut butter and choke it down, but that left me eating more peanut butter than celery. How could I get more of it in my diet? I was stumped. Then, I started adding small amounts of it to various meals — a quarter cup in a vegetable soup or half a stalk in some rice. Now I use it in many dishes.

You don't have to eat foods you absolutely detest, but you can still sneak some of your less favorite health foods onto your plate. Think of foods as an orchestra — the different elements blend smoothly. A snare drum (or broccoli) doesn't necessarily need a solo piece. In the same vein, the woodwind section (cake, anyone?) shouldn't take center stage just because it sounds good. Meals will be more fun and have more variety if you embrace all the food groups.

Happy birthday, Dr. Seuss

Emily Kolasheski, Katie Bunch and Abriana Bell, second-graders at White Elementary, participate in activities in honor of Dr. Seuss' birthday this week. The celebration included silly sock day, hat day, wear something green day, mismatched shoes day and pajama day. All of the dress-up days corresponded with books by Dr. Seuss, including Fox in Socks, Green Eggs and Ham and Cat in the Hat.

Post schools celebrate Seuss

"I like Dr. Seuss because he's funny, and my imagination opens up when I read his books," said Abriana Bell, second-grader at White Elementary.

Dr. Seuss's birthday was Monday and schools around post celebrated with costumes, readings and making Oobleck, gushy, green goo from Bartholomew and the Oobleck. Some schools had silly sock day, pajama day wear all green day, and wear a funny hat day. Partners in Education read Dr. Seuss stories to classes.

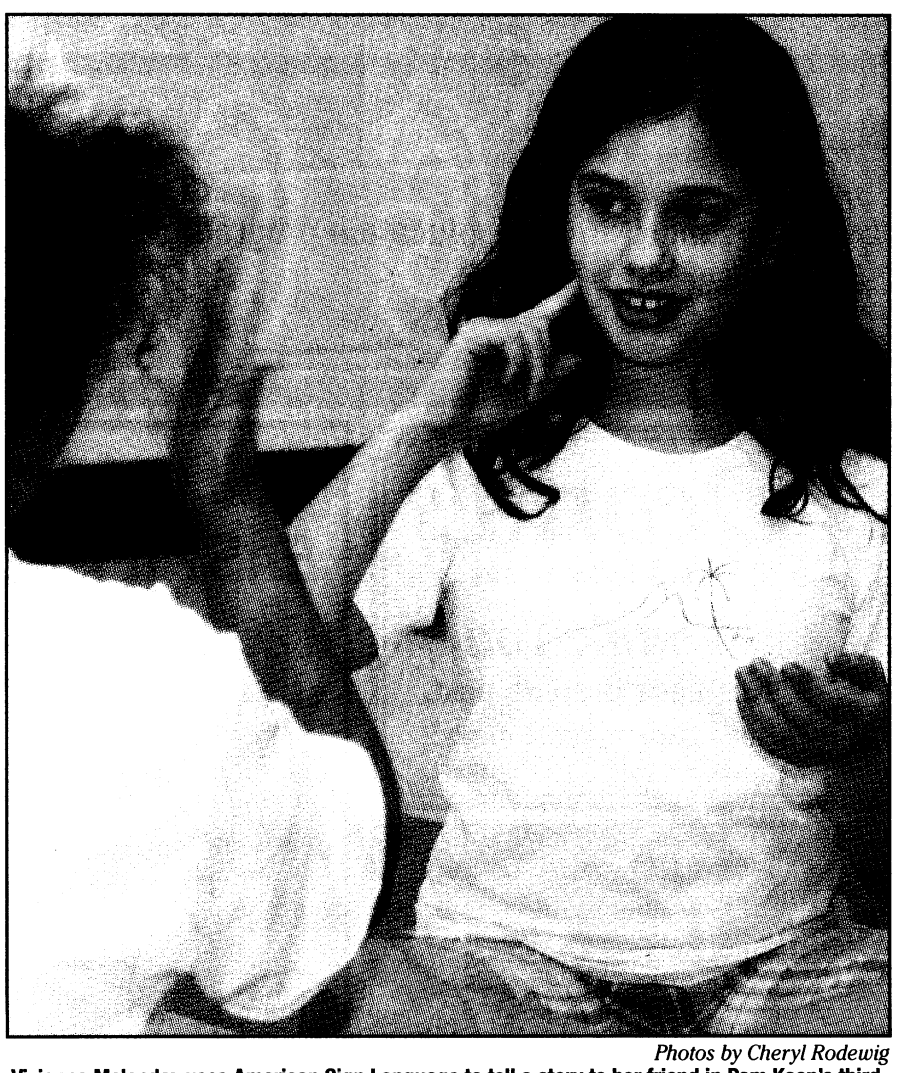
The celebration was a part of the National Education Association's Read Across America, an initiative to encourage children to read more books.

Barbara Culwell and Susie Reynold's second-grade classes at Dexter Elementary made oobleck before hearing assistant teacher Jenni Barnes read Bartholomew and the Oobleck. The oobleck, made from cornstarch, water and green food coloring, was incorporated into the children's science class.



"I think any time the children are able to participate hands-on, it is more meaningful to them than if they just read the book," said Culwell, who said she hopes the activities and readings motivate children to go to the library and check out books.

Students learn 'secret language'

A classroom full of children talking to each other is usually more than just a little noisy, but in Pam Koon's class at Dexter Elementary School, several students can talk at the same time without making a sound. They speak American Sign Language.

Koon began teaching her P.E. students sign language about 15 years ago while taking classes at Columbus Tech to learn the language.

"So as I would learn, I would come to school and sign a little bit. And they loved it, so it just grew and grew from there," she said.

"I work with gross motor (skills) in P.E., and I don't do much with the fine motor skills, so I've tried to incorporate sign language … to work on the

CAA GRANTS

CAA provides up to $3,000 per year for two years for spouses to complete post-secondary training at any of Georgia's two-year community or technical college. Spouses must have one year remaining at Fort Benning, and two years remaining on current enlistments.

Soldiers must be privates to sergeants, or second lieutenants to captains.

The grant can also be used for training that will lead to a state-approved credential or license such as an approved certificate from a continuing education program or approved education service provider. For more information, call 706-545-7397 or go to the Army Education Center at Building 2602, Soldiers' Plaza.

FREE TRANSPORTATION

Free transportation will be available to students from Spencer and Faith Middle School to the CYS Middle School and Teen Center from now to the end of the school year.

For more information, call 706-545-3070.

EFMP ENROLLMENT

The Exceptional Family Member Program has mandatory enrollment for special needs Family members. Enrollment doesn't hurt the Soldier's career but assists military personnel in considering medical and educational needs of the Family member in the assignment process.

Enrollment is necessary if the spouse or child meets the following criteria: asthma, a current or past mental health diagnosis, a high-risk pregnancy, cancer (past or present), attention deficit disorder or diabetes. For resource information and referrals, call 706-545-5521.

People are hurting; What are you going to do about it?

CHAPLAIN FAMILY LIFE CENTER
Chaplain (Maj.) Rory Rodriquez

Behold, I say unto you, Lift up your eyes, and look on the fields; for they are white already to harvest" (John 4:35). Jesus spoke those words while teaching his disciples the principle of sowing and reaping in relation to the hurts, pain and worry that life brings.

Have you ever watched people at the mall? Have a seat for awhile, watch and listen. What do you see and hear? If we see and listen with a pure, focused heart, what are people saying?

When Jesus told his disciples to lift up your eyes, I think he was saying, "look at what is really going on, look at the people as souls, look at the hearts, see how many people are hurting." Then he said, "What are you going to do about it?" and "There is a lot of work to do, but what will you do now that you see."

I hope you will give your eyes, your ears and your heart in truth to be that special person in someone else's life. This unselfish act will be rewarded.

Parents must establish rules the whole Family can live with

BAYONET CORRESPONDENT
Frederick M. "Bud" Rupel

"You may be the first sergeant, but I'm not one of your privates. I'm 17 years old, and I think the rules around here need to change!" Sound familiar?

Families need rules, and without them, chaos reigns. For the most part, Family rules reflect Family values. Adults set the rules. George Daub, founder of Family Wellness Associates, said, "Often situations that are hard to handle are hard because we have two or more values in conflict. We struggle as we try to remain true to all of them in any particular situation."

Those values we bring to our Family are usually those we grew up with. One spouse's values may not reflect those of the other. It then becomes paramount that both parents develop a value system for their own Family, a system that is spoken and lived out daily.

Doub goes on to say, "Parents need to know their values, they need to speak from them as they crop up in everyday situations, and they need to practice them. If you preach abstinence to your teen, and drink to excess yourself, your message is 'drink.'"

The task of making Family rules is not easy, but the parent has a lot more life experience to draw upon than a child does. If you leave the task of making rules up to children, be prepared for disaster.

As children grow older it becomes very important that they be included in the rule-making. While I don't approve of the attitude of the fictitious 17-year-old at the beginning of this article, I see a lot of truth in what he said.

When a child is 6, the rules were rather straightforward: you can play in the yard. At 17, the rules need to change as needs change. By including older children in the rule-making process you will soon discover them to be much more cooperative.

Editor's note: Bud Rupel is a retired major and former Army chaplain. He now serves on the pastoral staff at Evangel Temple in Columbus.

ASK THE JUDGE

OFFICE OF STAFF JUDGE ADVOCATE
Capt. Benjamin W. Hillner

Q: Should I itemize or take the standard deduction on my federal income tax return?

A: Taxpayers should itemize on their federal income tax return if their total allowable deductions are more than their standard deduction.

This tax season, standard deduction amounts are as follows: Single: $5,350; Married Filing Separately, $5,350; Head of Household or Qualifying Widow(er) with Dependent Child, $7,850; Married Filing Jointly, $10,700. The standard deduction amounts differ for those taxpayers who are over age 65 or blind.

Typically, itemizing deductions makes the most sense for taxpayers who pay large amounts of home mortgage interest, property taxes, casualty losses or who make significant charitable contributions.

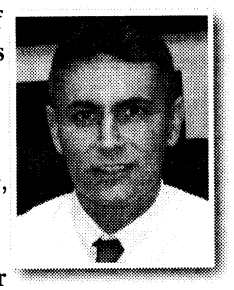
Taxpayers may also deduct medical expenses provided that their deductible expenses are more than 7.5 percent of their adjusted gross income, or AGI. Deductible medical and dental expenses include the costs of treatment of disease, expenses to alleviate or prevent an illness and transportation to medical care.

For more information, contact the Fort Benning Tax Center at 706-545-4267. The tax center, located in Building 1678 behind the Follow Me Chapel, is open on a walk-in basis from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Mondays, Tuesdays, Wednesdays and Fridays, and from 10:30 a.m. to 6 p.m. Thursdays.

Assess housing market before buying

BAYONET CORRESPONDENT
Jeff Saeli

By now, you've probably already heard the words "sub-prime mortgage crisis." The sub-prime crisis is part of a larger crisis in banking, where certain banks made mortgage loans to people who shouldn't have qualified, often under terms that all but guaranteed the borrower would have to sell the house, refinance the loan or face default. Now, those borrowers are unable to sell or refinance because both the housing and credit markets have changed in fundamental ways.



To make matters worse, after making the loans, the banks grouped collections of loans together and sold them as securities. Many of those loans are failing to perform, and so the securities upon which they are based are failing as well.

This is the cause of some of the recent changes in the credit markets. Consumers are not blame free: many bought houses with the intent of selling them after a short time for a profit. By treating houses as commodities, they helped artificially create demand, which inflated prices and hence supply, and now that this artificial demand is gone, prices are falling.

I'd like to discuss a couple of myths and offer some points to ponder for those who own or are contemplating purchasing a home in this historic declining market.

Myth 1: Real estate always goes up. Status: False. If recent events in the housing market don't convince you of this, then perhaps the numbers will. Bloomberg.com reported that the median price of a single-family home has fallen 5.1 percent, reflecting a national trend. Conditions in certain markets are much worse. In the Northeast, prices have fallen 10 percent from a year ago, in the West, almost 12 percent. In some places, where appreciation was out of control, prices have fallen almost 50 percent.

The historical average annual price appreciation for real estate is 1.8 percent in inflation adjusted terms, 6 percent in nominal terms. Not a good number if your reason for purchasing is to "invest."

Myth 2: If you're renting, you're "paying someone else's mortgage." Status: True, but irrelevant. The decision to rent or buy should not be based on an emotional factor like whether or not you'll pay someone else's mortgage. Housing costs, whether rented or purchased, should be calculated over the life of your tenancy as renter or owner. Maintenance, taxes and lifestyle costs — like that gym membership you don't need to purchase if your complex has a fitness center — and exit costs should all be considered.

Locally, housing costs roughly $90 (for older housing) to $130 (for new housing) per square foot. A new 1,600-square-foot house costs about $208,000 before closing costs. Assuming no money down and closing costs paid by the seller, this means a $1,240 mortgage payment at a fixed 6 percent, before taxes and insurance, which will raise the payment to about $1,400 per month. Your cost for three years: $50,400.

A three-year tenancy in this home grosses a gain of $19,600 in home value, assuming a 3 percent annual appreciation. From this, subtract the realtor's 6 percent fee of $13,656, closing costs of about $3,500 which the seller (now you) typically pays, and your profit is reduced to $2,444, which you walk away with. We'll forgo calculating maintenance and lifestyle costs.

The same square footage in an apartment can be had for about $900 per month — $32,400 for three years. The monthly savings of $500 per month can be invested, let's say at 3 percent to keep things even. At the end of three years, when you pocket your $2,444 profit, your neighbor, the renter, who has been socking away $500 per month, now has $18,857 in accumulated savings and interest. This is what he walks away with.

Myth 3: It won't happen here. Many regions consider themselves immune from significant fluctuations in housing prices. A few are temporarily correct. Why temporarily? Because regional housing prices are based on a number of factors, only one of which is local supply and demand. Also impacting prices are jobs, interest rates, desirability of the location and other long term trends such as fuel prices, population demographics and materials costs.

The historical price-to-median-income ratio for the last 30 years is 2.8 percent. This means that the median home price has consistently been 2.8 times median income. If the ratio in your area (divide the median home price by the median wage) is significantly higher, you may be in a bubble.

For example, in 2005 the median home price in San Francisco was $726,700, median salary was $57,496, and the ratio, 12.64. This means people were buying houses valued at $750,000 on an income of less than $60,000 per year.

Buying a home is an important financial decision. Do your research first and visit your banker to learn how much you can afford. Understand your timeline and how selling too soon can cause you to lose money.

These are turbulent times in the housing markets, and we haven't weathered the last of the storms yet.

Signing: Lets children perform, teach hands," said Koon, who introduces younger ages to the alphabet, numbers and other simple words. Older children learn to tell stories and carry on conversations through signs.

Students who have learned several signs also perform songs for Parent Teacher Organization programs and at other special events.

Third-grader Emma Holloway started learning sign language in kindergarten.

"You can talk to deaf people and learn new signs," she said. "And when we can't talk, we talk to our friends in sign language, so we don't get in trouble."

Holloway said she might even teach sign language some day, since she's already started teaching her parents and sister.

Using sign language outside of the classroom is key, Koon said.

"If you don't use it, you lose it," she said.

But Koon said she sees students sign to her all the time, and not just in class.

They'll sign from across the lunchroom when it's crowded and loud or make a point of saying "I love you" or "Good morning" with sign, Koon said. As one child put it, it's "a secret language" few people know, and that makes it special.

Eye on Excellence

The following is a list of people from the Fort Benning community who have excelled and deserve notice.

• West Point freshman Terrell Anthony, a former Fort Benning Family member, dethroned Jarod Taylor, West Point's second-highest ranking cadet and the two-time winner of the Brigade Boxing Open, Saturday.

• Veronica Elizabeth McEnroe, a seventh-grader at Faith Middle School, will attend the People to People World Leadership Forum in Washington D.C. March 24-30.

She was chosen based on her grades, civic involvement and leadership potential.

Veronica will earn high school credit while studying leadership and touring various historic sites and monuments in D.C.

• Staff Sgt. Maxient J. Michel, of the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit, captured the Open Title at the 10th annual Florida Open Feb. 8-10 at the Universal Shooting Academy. Michel beat 93 shooters, including a three-time world champion.

It was the second time Michel took top honors in what many consider one of the most challenging matches on the Practical Shooting schedule. He took first in 2002.

Michel has finished in the top five in his last six appearances at the Florida Open.

• Fort Benning TV's Nate Snook, Jennifer Gunn and Ron Andruss took first and second place in the Local Television Newscast category of the 2007 Keith L. Ware Broadcast Journalism Competition for the Southeast Region.

First place was awarded to the TV crew for the Oct. 29 episode of Around Your Army and second place for the Oct. 15 episode of the same show.

Their work will now be judged at Army level.

• Chattahoochee County High School took first place in the small school division of the Georgia State Academic Decathlon Feb. 23 in Duluth.

Cory McCoy, a sophomore and the son of Sgt. 1st Class Kurundi Smith, earned a gold medal in the speech division.

• Jackie DeNova, a goalkeeper for the Ole Miss Women's Soccer team and the daughter of Master Sgt. William and Sharon DeNova, was back in the game March 1, more than a year after suffering severe injuries in a car crash.

DeNova was scored on only once in the Rebel's two games Saturday. They defeated the University of Alabama at Birmingham and fell to Oklahoma State.

• Fort Benning's Morgan McGray was inducted into the Western Kentucky University Alpha Epsilon Delta Pre-Health Professions Honor Society.

RESTAURANT REVIEW

Gus's

THE BAYONET
Rachel L. Watkins

The flavor of Victory Drive is the same as the 1960s — it's lined with motels, clubs and restaurants. Over the years, these places have changed names time and again. But one name has stayed the same — Gus's Drive-in and Restaurant.

The restaurant, surrounded by fast-food establishments, sits across from Baker Middle School.

Although you no longer receive your food curbside at Gus's from servers on rollerskates, it's is still a fun place to go. There's even a jukebox in the dining room.

If you're new to the joint, they'll say, "Come back tomorrow, ya' hear?" They have delicious food, including fried chicken, shrimp, hamburgers, and country fried steak.

I recommend the fried chicken. It's crispy and juicy with a peppery kick. It is some of the best fried chicken I have had at a restaurant. If you want something simple, the ham and cheese sandwich gives you a bang for your buck.

Sides include fries, macaroni and cheese and coleslaw. The coleslaw is cold, crispy and sweet.

If you're still hungry, banana pudding or lemon pie are some of the desserts available. Prices range from $6 to $8 for a meal.

The restaurant, at 3498 Victory Drive, is open from 10 a.m. to 10 p.m. weekdays, and 10 a.m. to 11:30 p.m. and noon to 10 p.m. on Sundays.

For more information, call 706-687-5770.

Carousel at the Springer

June is bustin' out all over.
The saplin's are bustin' out with sap!
Love, he's found my brother, Junior,
And my sister's even loonier,
And my Ma is gettin' kittenish with Pap!

THE BAYONET
Cheryl Rodewig

It may be only March, but June is bustin' out all over at the Springer Opera House's Mainstage Theatre with the Rogers and Hammerstein musical Carousel.

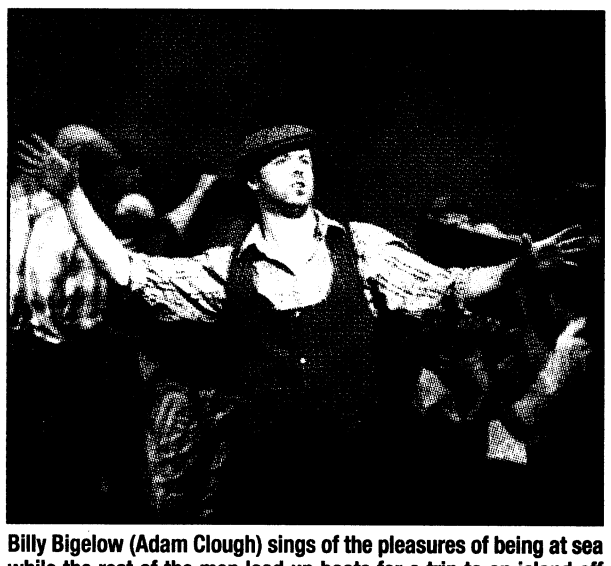
Set in late 19th-century New England, the play centers around handsome but rough Billy Bigelow (Adam Clough), a carnival barker who falls in love with innocent Julie Jordan (Tala Al-Khudhairi).

Their love is no easy happily-ever-after. When the young couple find themselves facing domestic and financial hardships, Billy makes a desperate attempt to get his hands on some money, setting in motion a fateful chain of events. Both a heart-searing tragedy and a heartwarming romance, Carousel has more than one unexpected turn, ultimately teaching about the capacity of love.

Set against the music of a live orchestra, the songs highlight the many varying moods of the drama, from the poignant duet If I Loved You to the merry Mister Snow to Soliloquy, superbly sung by baritone Adam Clough. Besides delightful choreography, the show features a ballet and a beautifully performed waltz.

Touches of comedy and colorful scenery contrast with the deeper pathos of the main plot. Kimberly Faith Hickman, playing the demure millworker Carrie Pipperidge, and Brad Arnholt, as upright Enoch Snow, provide enjoyable comic relief, and their romance illustrates the lighter side of love. The Snow children are particularly charming, lined in a row from tallest to shortest.



Photos by Scooter MacMillan
Sarah Lorenzen and Brad Arnholt point out the beautiful lights at the carnival to Danielle Lorentz in the opening scene of Carousel. Tickets are two-for-one for military personnel today and March 14.

For this production of Carousel, the Springer has partnered with Hope Harbour, the Columbus Alliance for Battered Women. A Hope Harbour representative will be available to answer questions and hand out information in the lobby during all shows.

Carousel will play through March 15 at the Springer, 103 10th Street, Columbus. Showtimes are 7:30 p.m. Thursdays through Saturdays and 2:30 p.m. Sundays. Tickets are $32 to $35 and are two-for-one for military personnel today and March 14.

For more information or to purchase tickets, call 706-327-3688, go to www.springeroperahouse.com or visit the box office. Hours are from 10 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Monday through Friday and two hours prior to showtime.

The box office opens two hours prior to show time for will call and ticket sales for that evening's performance at the window.

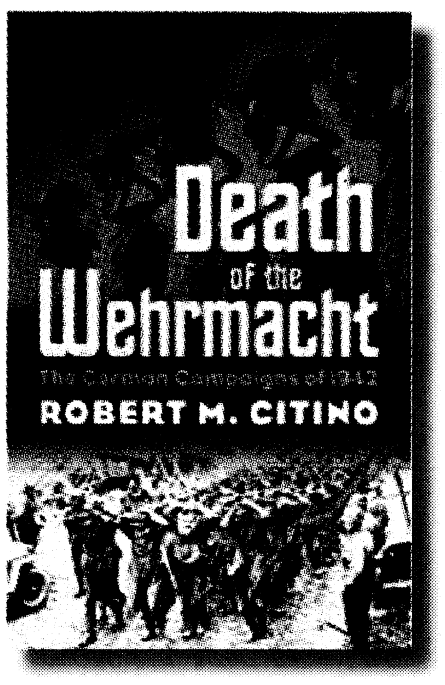
Billy Bigelow (Adam Clough) sings of the pleasures of being at sea while the rest of the men load up boats for a trip to an island off the coast of Maine for a clambake in the Springer's production of Carousel, running through March 15.

BOOK REVIEW

Author discusses German military tactics in World War II

BAYONET CORRESPONDENT
Maj. Matthew Archambault

History often seems like a foregone conclusion as we look back on events from comfortable armchairs surrounded by books, maps and other records from those events. People could've only made one decision. Fate drove them to act in this manner. It could only happen one way.



It appears very final, yet a recurring urge to ask "why" keeps us coming back for more. Military campaigns get plenty of this analysis and second guessing. In addition to asking "why" historians, professional and amateur alike, also ask "what if."

From today's point of view, prospects of a German victory at the onset of 1942 were quite dim. Professor Robert Citino doesn't ask what if. He only asks why in his book Death of the Wehrmacht, but he does it by providing a new approach for looking at that decisive year during World War II.

Citino, a professor of European history at Eastern Michigan University, intends for this book to be the sequel to his previous book The German War of War: From the Thirty Years' War to the Third Reich. It begins with a review of 1941's early successes. Citino uses these campaigns in the Balkans, Greece and Barbarossa to establish the Wehrmacht's culture and their operational motif.

Most American officers, when asked about the German way of war, will spout "Auftragstaktik" (mission tactics), which is only one hue of the German martial tapestry. Citino fills in the other shades when he casts back 200 years and more to Frederick the Great, Bluecher and others. This illustrates the Wehrmacht's true threads of continuity, which are the concentric battle, the offensive spirit and the autonomy of the subordinate commander in the field. This is Bewegungskrieg (movement warfare). This is more than tradition. This is their culture. This is the basis of their expectations for themselves and nary has an officer rising to the rank of general or field marshall disappointed.

As well as 1941 began for the Wehrmacht, it ended with their first defeat and a push back from Moscow. After establishing this foundation, Citino launches into 1942, albeit not in chronological order. Rather, he focuses on the North African campaign and the Eastern Front alternatively. This technique can create a degree of confusion about what might be happening concurrently, but it's necessary to isolate the campaign at hand and the decisions made therein.

Throughout each segment, Citino reinforces decisions and Wehrmacht actions with Prussian precedent. This shows German military singularities in light of their long history, and suddenly "World War II hard chargers like Guderian and Manstein look less unusual."

One of the great strengths of this book is Citino's approach. He refuses to ask "what if." Nothing we do today can make the Germans complete their lunge for Moscow or to abandon the quest for Tobruk. Citino only asks why and then reviews the facts, the decisions, the odds and the outcomes. Well researched, he uses excerpts from the Wehrmacht's professional journal Militaer-Wochenblatt throughout the text to reinforce what the military establishment was thinking at the time. He eschews even post-war memoirs to the diaries made at the time. The only way he could've made this text stronger is by using more maps and sketches.

After presenting such a strong case, Citino's conclusions douse the reader like a cold bucket of water. He postulates in the introduction that the inherent problem is the very German way of war, Bewegungskrieg. They are too decentralized, aggressive and single-minded on the concentric battle. He wants to clarify, however, how much blame Hitler warrants vice the Wehrmacht leadership or if these systemic factors are in fact the culprit. Flash forward 300 pages as 1942 comes to a close, the Wehrmacht is broken on the Eastern Front, Paulus' 6th Army is captured and the Panzerarmee withdraws across North Africa. Staying within the context of the book it seems apparent, at least to this reader, by Citino's own evidence that Germany failed for two reasons. First, they failed to implement a coherent strategy to any theater, let alone a grand strategy for the entire war. For all intents and purposes, the Germans won wars when they tied their operational successes to a strategic goal. Reference the Wars of 1866 and 1870 as an example. Their method of war, Bewegungskrieg, is but a tool to be applied to a plan. Citino's presentation makes it obvious there was no plan to end

10,000 B.C.

In a remote mountain tribe, the young hunter, D'Leh (Steven Strait), has found his heart's passion, the beautiful Evolet (Camilla Belle).

When a band of mysterious warlords raid his village and kidnap Evolet, D'Leh is forced to lead a small group of hunters to pursue the warlords.

The unlikely band of warriors battle saber-tooth tigers and prehistoric predators and even uncover a lost civilization.

Ultimately, they must take their stand in another empire against a powerful god who has enslaved their people.

THE BANK JOB

A car dealer with a dodgy past and new family, Terry (Jason Statham) has always avoided scams. But when Martine (Saffron Burrows), a beautiful model from his old neighborhood, offers him a lead on a foolproof bank hit on London's Baker Street, Terry recognizes the opportunity of a lifetime. Martine targets a roomful of safe deposit boxes worth millions in cash and jewelry, but Terry and his crew don't realize the boxes also contain a treasure trove of dirty secrets. The secrets thrust them into a web of corruption spanning London's criminal underworld, the highest echelons of the British government and the Royal Family itself.

The Bank Job is rated R for sexual content, nudity, violence and language.

COLLEGE ROAD TRIP

Melanie (Raven-Symoné) is looking forward to taking her first step towards independence when she plans a road trip to check out prospective universities.

However, when her imposing police-chief dad (Martin Lawrence) insists on escorting her instead, she soon finds her dream trip turning into a nightmare. Even as dad and daughter bicker and careen from one disaster to the next, they discover something about the value of family bonds.

College Road Trip is rated G.

MISS PETTIGREW LIVES FOR A DAY

In 1939 London, Miss Guinevere Pettigrew (Frances McDormand) is a middle-aged governess who finds herself unfairly dismissed from her job. Without severance pay, Miss Pettigrew seizes the day, intercepting an employment assignment as a "social secretary." Arriving at a penthouse apartment for the interview, Miss Pettigrew is catapulted into the glamorous world of American actress and singer Delysia Lafosse (Amy Adams). Miss Pettigrew finds herself swept into a heady high-society milieu. She tries to help her new friend Delysia navigate a love life and career, complicated by the three men in Delysia's orbit.

Miss Pettigrew herself is blushingly drawn to the gallant Joe (Ciaran Hinds), a successful designer engaged to haughty fashion maven Edythe (Shirley Henderson), who senses that the new secretary may be out of her element and schemes to undermine her.

In 10,000 B.C., a young hunter (Steven Strait) finds his beloved (Camilla Belle) kidnapped by mysterious warlords and goes on an epic journey to save her.

Also Playing
THE OTHER BOLEYN GIRL

Sisters Anne and Mary Boleyn (Natalie Portman and Scarlett Johansson) are driven by their father and uncle to advance the family's status by courting the affections of the King of England (Eric Bana).

The girls are thrust into the world of court life where a rivalry develops between Anne and Mary for the love of the king. Initially, Mary wins King Henry's favor and becomes his mistress, but the conniving Anne, determined to become Queen of England, edges aside both her sister and Henry's wife, Queen Katherine of Aragon (Ana Torrent).

PENELOPE

Penelope Wilhern (Christina Ricci), is under a spell, which can only be broken when she finds love. She meets a string of suitors, each enamored with her sizable dowry until they learn of her curse. Lemon (Peter Dinklage), a tabloid reporter, hires Max (James McAvoy) to pose as a prospective suitor to get a photo of Penelope. Max finds himself falling for Penelope and not wanting to disappoint her. When Penelope breaks free from her family, she finds her own identity.

SEMI-PRO

Jackie Moon (Will Ferrell) is a one-hit wonder who used the profits from the success of his chart-topping song "Love Me Sexy" to achieve his dream of owning a basketball team. But Moon's franchise, the Flint Michigan Tropics, is the worst team in the league and in danger of folding when the ABA announces plans to merge with the NBA.

THERE WILL BE BLOOD

During California's turn-of-the-century petroleum boom, Daniel Plainview (Daniel Day-Lewis) becomes an oil tycoon. When Plainview gets a tip that there's a town out West with lots of oil, he heads with his son to take his chances in Little Boston, where the main excitement centers around the charismatic preacher Eli Sunday (Paul Dano), Plainview makes his lucky strike. But as the well raises his fortune, nothing remains the same as conflicts escalate and every human value is corrupted by deception and oil.

There Will Be Blood is rated R for violence.

VANTAGE POINT

Thomas Barnes (Dennis Quaid) and Kent Taylor (Matthew Fox) are Secret Service agents assigned to protect President Ashton (William Hurt) at a landmark summit in Spain.

When the president is shot, chaos ensues. Witnesses like an American tourist (Forest Whitaker) and a TV producer (Sigourney Weaver) have different viewpoints which reveal surprising ulterior motives.

BE KIND, PLEASE REWIND

Because of the magnetic field he creates, Jerry (Jack Black), a junkyard worker, accidentally erases all of the videotapes in a local video store where his best friend Mike (Dante "Mos Def" Smith) works. Worried the mishap will cost Mike his job, the friends team up to keep the store's only loyal customer, an eldery lady, from realizing what has happened by refilming every movie she rents, from Back to the Future to The Lion King.

Be Kind Rewind is rated PG-13 for sexual references.

WITLESS PROTECTION

Sheriff Larry (Larry the Cable Guy) witnesses a beautiful woman, Madeleine (Ivana Milicevic), being held against her will by four men. Wanting to save the day, Larry kidnaps her, only to learn that Madeleine is actually a key witness in a high-stakes Chicago crime case and her captors are FBI agents.

Larry, who suspects the agents are crooked, forces Madeleine on a harebrained trip to Chicago to solve the case himself.

CHARLIE BARTLETT

When Charlie Bartlett (Anton Yelchin) discovers that the kids at his public school, outcasts and popular alike, are in desperate need, his entrepreneurial spirit takes over. An underground shrink, Charlie listens to the confessions of his schoolmates and hands out pills he's proffered from his own psych sessions. When Charlie falls for the daughter (Kat Dennings) of the principal, his fledgling practice begins to unravel.

Military tactics: discussed in author's sequel

the war, regardless of the operational successes, which is instead an indictment on the political policy and the German High Command.

Second, they failed because materially they could not continue to fight their way of war. It's difficult to fight a war of maneuver when there is no fuel in your tanks or your infantry is completely demobilized for the lack of vehicles. Citino seems to refuse this idea based on the fact that the Wehrmacht continued to pull successes against larger odds throughout the year (and for the rest of the war).

Materiel advantages are a considerable factor in warfare, especially in the aggregate. The fact that the Wehrmacht never had a clear intelligence picture of their enemies on any front would seem to indicate there were larger issues than a system of warfare.

Citino cites this early and repeatedly throughout the text, which continues to make their late successes in 1942 all the more remarkable, but again he writes this off to a failure in their military culture.

A discussion on Clausewitz toward the end of the book makes the conclusion all the more confusing. Regardless, Death of the Wehrmacht is an excellent book. Its live-in-the-moment technique is refreshing for military history.

Senior captains and field-grade officers will find this book an enriching experience.

This book would be useful for generating discussion and providing lessons on the operational art.

Infantry Museum closes to public

Rachel L. Watkins

Frank Hanner, National Infantry Museum director and curator, closes the museum's door to the public Friday.

Staff starts packing collection for move to new museum, which will open next March

THE BAYONET
Rachel L. Watkins

Frank Hanner locked the doors of the National Infantry Museum at 4:30 p.m. Friday for the last time. The doors at Baltzell Avenue are closed to the public so museum staff can prepare to move to the new museum, which is scheduled to open in March 2009.

Since 1977, the museum has been housed in one of the oldest buildings on Main Post, the former post hospital, which was built in 1925. Hanner, director and curator at the National Infantry Museum, said he is excited about the new museum but is saddened to leave such a historical building.

"Soldiers who were taking their physicals, coming back from the battlefields — wounded in Korea and World War II — convalesced in this building," said Hanner, who has worked at the museum since 1981, longer than all his colleagues.

Talking to the veterans is Hanner's fondest memory at the museum, he said.

"Veterans deserve our undying gratitude for what they have given to the country. They have laid out in the cold, they have been out in the heat of the summers, yet they have always come through for us," he said.

Air performances, vintage aircraft, classic automobiles and a carnival are some of the activities planned for the Thunder in the Valley Air Show from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday and Sunday at the Columbus Metropolitan Airport.

A classic car show is new this year, said Phaedra Childers, marketing coordinator. It will feature nearly 50 automobiles including a 1927 Pierce Arrow, one of only about 20 built, five Packards, a Ford Model A, a British Austin Healey, cars from the 1930s and 1950s and more.

Some of the aircraft and performers appearing are Greg Poe in his Faegen MX-2; Tim Weber in his Extra 300S, a mid-wing, composite aerobatic aircraft; Fowler "Big Dog" Cary's Lockheed T-33A "Thunderbird;" a T-28 and a T-6, World War II trainers with 600 horsepower engines; a 1937 Stagger Wing biplane; and many others. Benning TV to air Top Sniper

Jennifer Gunn

Fort Benning TV's special presentation of the Military Channel's Top Sniper: The International Sniper Competition is now airing courtesy of The Military Channel, Comcast and the Fort Benning Public Affairs Office. Viewers on post can watch this hourlong special during weeknight prime time hours: 9 p.m. and 11 p.m.; and at various other times throughout the day.

Top Sniper is based on the 2007 International Sniper Competition, a weeklong event conducted at Fort Benning each year, in which the best snipers teams in the world are invited to compete. The program takes you inside the competition day-by-day, explaining each event and how it translates to the modern battlefield.

"(Snipers) are a very valuable tool to the commanders on our battlefield today, very demoralizing, very lethal," said Lt. Col. David Chase, commander of 2nd Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment, 197th Infantry Brigade, in the show.

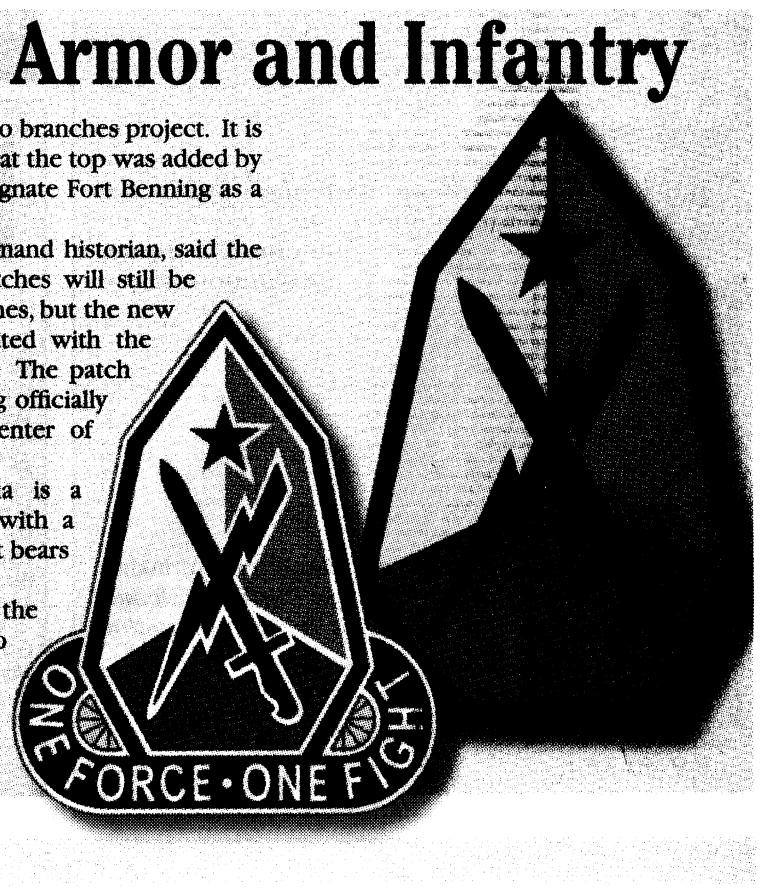
MCOE patch represents both Armor and Infantry

THE BAYONET
Cheryl Rodewig

When Fort Benning becomes the Maneuver Center of Excellence, many Soldiers here will no longer wear the Follow Me patch. The Institute of Heraldry solicited design submissions for a new patch, and Chaplain (Col.) Glenn Davis, post chaplain, created the winning Shoulder Sleeve Insignia.

Davis combined aspects of the Armor and Infantry patches to create the MCOE patch. The shape, for example, is an inversion of the Follow Me shield. It represents a spearhead and is reminiscent of the triangular shape of the Armor patch.

"We talk about being the point of the spear, at the front of the battle engaged in combat," Davis said, "so the Armor and Infantry colors make up the tip of that spear."

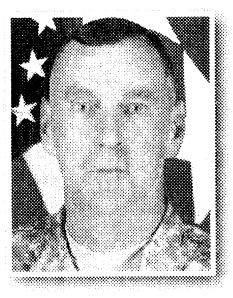


The lightning bolt, symbolizing the power and speed of the Armor branch, and the Infantry bayonet are crossed in the center of the patch. Davis said his goal was to capture the history and honor of both branches.

The five-sided section at the bottom of the patch signifies the Pentagon, from which the two branches project. It is red to symbolize sacrifice. A star at the top was added by The Institute of Heraldry to designate Fort Benning as a center of excellence.

David Stieghan, the post command historian, said the original Infantry and Armor patches will still be worn by Soldiers of those branches, but the new patch will identify those affiliated with the Maneuver Center of Excellence. The patch will be worn when Fort Benning officially transitions to the Maneuver Center of Excellence.

The Distinctive Unit Insignia is a replica of the shoulder patch with a curved tank track at the base that bears the motto "One force, one fight."



"In four words, it sums up the combined mission of the two branches," Stieghan said. "They're still separate, but they have one function in combat, and that is to support each other in battle."

COMMANDER'S COLUMN

Force protection is everyone's business

COMMANDING GENERAL
Maj. Gen. Walter Wojdakowski

As the U.S.Army Infantry Center transitions to the Maneuver Center of Excellence, a new era in Fort Benning's proud history is unfolding before our very eyes.

The many Soldiers, DA Civilians, contractors and Family members who live and work on post all share in this exciting time.

The anticipated growth and subsequent mission increase are creating a stir of activity on the installation and in the local community. And, as I've said before, new growth and challenges go hand-in-hand.

One important challenge of the MCOE is force protection — that is — ensuring the security of people, information, equipment, and facilities.

It involves elements from law enforcement, intelligence services, and physical security.

To meet the increased need for force protection during and after our transition, additional units and staff will be assigned to Fort Benning to augment the services our current personnel provide.

At the forefront of the force protection effort is the Force Protection Branch, part of the Directorate of Plans, Training and Mobilization. These are the people who will review plans for the construction projects set to take place, and ensure they comply with antiterrorism standards.

They will see to it that measures are taken to keep our Soldiers, Civilians and Family members as safe as possible by checking for structural elements like minimal stand-off distances for blast mitigation and limited access bollards around building perimeters.

Another aspect of force protection is antiterrorism training. The numbers of people requiring annual Level I Antiterrorism and Area of Responsibility training for those Soldiers and DA Civilians traveling outside the United States, its possessions or territories, will increase accordingly.

It's a good idea to be sure you have been trained on both of these measures, after all, they are each mandatory by DoD and DA policies.

Level II Antiterrorism training will be available for persons assigned to duties as Antiterrorism Officers at the battalion and brigade levels.

Perhaps the most visible of the challenges ahead will be changes in procedures at our access control points. As we transition, we will grow.

With that growth comes an increase in the normal comings and goings we experience on post daily. There will be more Family days, more graduations and more postwide celebrations; and with those, more traffic.

State-of-the-art access control points in the Harmony Church area and the completion of the new parade field behind the new National Infantry Museum will address many of these challenges.

All those who live, work and play on Fort Benning can rest assured that while they may not be aware of all the changes taking place, they know there are many people working tirelessly behind the scenes every day to ensure their safety. Coordinated efforts are continuing with all the Fort Benning staff to ensure a safe and timely transition.

But you, too, can be a force multiplier of these efforts by being patient with the changes and remaining vigilant. No one person can be everywhere at once, so we must each do our part to look out for ourselves and each other.

If you see something that looks suspicious, report it to your supervisor. Your cooperation can help us face these challenges as one force with one fight.

Drinking and driving?

USAIC PUBLIC AFFAIRS OFFICE
Anthony C. O'Bryant

There are 34.7 million U.S. residents who claim Irish ancestry. But every year on March 17, we're all Irish — every last one of us. I even have a tattoo on my arm that says I'm Irish, but I haven't eaten any corned beef and cabbage lately.

In true American form, we have taken the holiday and applied our commercial touches to it, and now we have a day most folks love celebrating; they just don't know why they are actually celebrating it.

St. Patrick's Day is a beloved celebration of Irish culture. It dates back to St. Patrick's religious feast day and the anniversary of his death in the fifth century.

When St. Patrick was 16, he was kidnapped by Irish raiders and taken to Ireland where he spent six years in captivity.

During this time, he became a devout Christian. After he escaped, he studied religion in Britain and returned to Ireland as a missionary.

Obviously, St. Patrick's Day always falls during the Lenten season. Irish families would attend church in the morning and celebrate in the afternoon with traditional meal of Irish bacon and cabbage, because the Lenten prohibitions were waived, according to History.com.

The first St. Patrick's Day parade wasn't held in Ireland, but in New York City in 1762.

If I were to give a lifetime achievement award to a holiday, it would be St. Paddy's Day. From pinching to parades to pub crawls, the Irish culture is celebrated in nearly every city in America, and it is just a great time.

The holiday captures the energy beginning to emerge as people break out of their winter doldrums and hibernations.

The day adds to the momentum started by the recent time change and follows the warming light of the sun to steam roll our good vibrations and spirits into spring.

So if you are old enough to go out and tip a few, no doubt you'll find plenty of opportunity to celebrate locally. Use your head for something other than sporting a green hat, my friend. Think before you drink. Who's got the car keys? Who's your designated driver? Who's got the number of the cab company?

I sure hate to rain on your St. Paddy's Day parade, but drinking and driving is illegal around these parts, and dangerous to boot. So, round up a few friends, raise a toast to the Irish and split the cab fare home.

Post's response to terrorism to be tested

THE BAYONET
Cheryl Rodewig

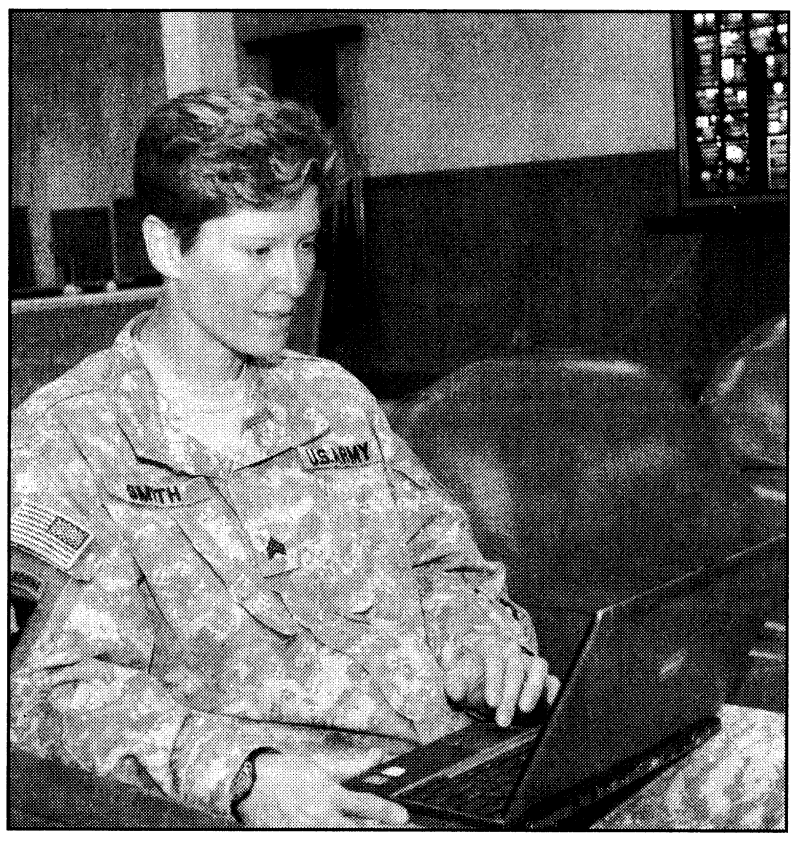
Bayonet Thrust, the annual exercise designed to gauge Fort Benning's response to terrorism, is put to the test Wednesday.

It's a force protection exercise to validate Fort Benning's antiterrorism consequence management and response plans and any deficiencies in the plans, said Timothy Price, Fort Benning antiterrorism officer.

"We have force protection exercises to measure and adjust our capabilities, so in the event of a real threat, we know we're ready," said Monica Manganaro, Director of Communication and Media Relations.

The exercise is installationwide, but the major population areas, such as Main Post, housing, the PX and commissary, will not be affected. The only entrance to post that will be closed during part of the exercise is the access control point on Custer Road, adjacent to McGraw Village.

"This ACP will be closed to add realism to the exercise, but at the same time, it will have minimal impact on traffic," Manganaro said.



"Every organization in the Army conducts rehearsals," said Jeffrey Shuck, chief of Plans and Operations. "They are the strength and the backbone of a good operation. There is always stress and confusion during contingencies, and the more that you rehearse, the more automatic responses become."

The exercise, which started in January, happens in three phases.

"All the pieces we rehearsed in January and February, we'll implement Wednesday," Price said. "After 9/11, we have to be prepared to detect, deter or protect. Soldiers, Civilians, Family members — it's our job to protect them."

An after action review will be held to assess areas of strength and weakness, including ways to improve for next year.

CRC offers wireless network services

Cheryl Rodewig

Sgt. Jamie Smith uses her laptop to access the new wireless network available at CRC. "Wireless definitely has an advantage over dial up," Smith said, "especially with the long lines for the desktops during peak hours." Wireless access costs $3.95 per hour, $9.95 per day and $24.95 per week. Richard Martin, Community Recreation Division chief, said the Day Room on Harmony Church may eventually have laptops available for check out, so that people without laptops can use the wireless as well. Desktop access, which has changed from dial up to fiber optics, is free of charge.

The CONUS Replacement Center is now wireless. The Day Room and the barracks on Harmony Church have been wireless since March 5.

This means faster computers and less restricted Internet access for users, said Richard Martin, Community Recreation Division chief.

Martin said they decided to go wireless after receiving complaints about the rec center through Interactive Customer Evaluation System comment cards, which let customers rate different post services and organizations.

"That user group is very important to us, and their voice was heard," Martin said.

Capt. Travis Hedman, who has been at CRC for three weeks in preparation for deployment, said he saw the transition to wireless and is glad of the change.

"You can do pretty much anything with the wireless that you can do at home," he said. "I come over here because there's desk space. I have both Windows Messenger and Skype that I've used here to talk to my friends and Family."

Hedman said logging on requires only a wireless card, which most laptops have built in, and a credit or debit card. Since the laptops are run through a separate network, users are not restricted from accessing any specific Web sites, such as MySpace or AOL e-mail, or programs like Skype.

Wireless access costs $3.95 per hour, $9.95 per day and $24.95 per week. Instructions will prompt users through the login process, which includes creating a username and entering payment information.

Hedman said using the wireless is convenient, especially during busy hours when there is a wait for the desktop computers.

"They have a limited number of computers in here, and for those of us that have laptops, we can go online any time," he said.

For those who prefer the desktops, available free of charge, they now use fiber optics, an upgrade from dial up, which helps them run faster and more efficiently, Martin said.

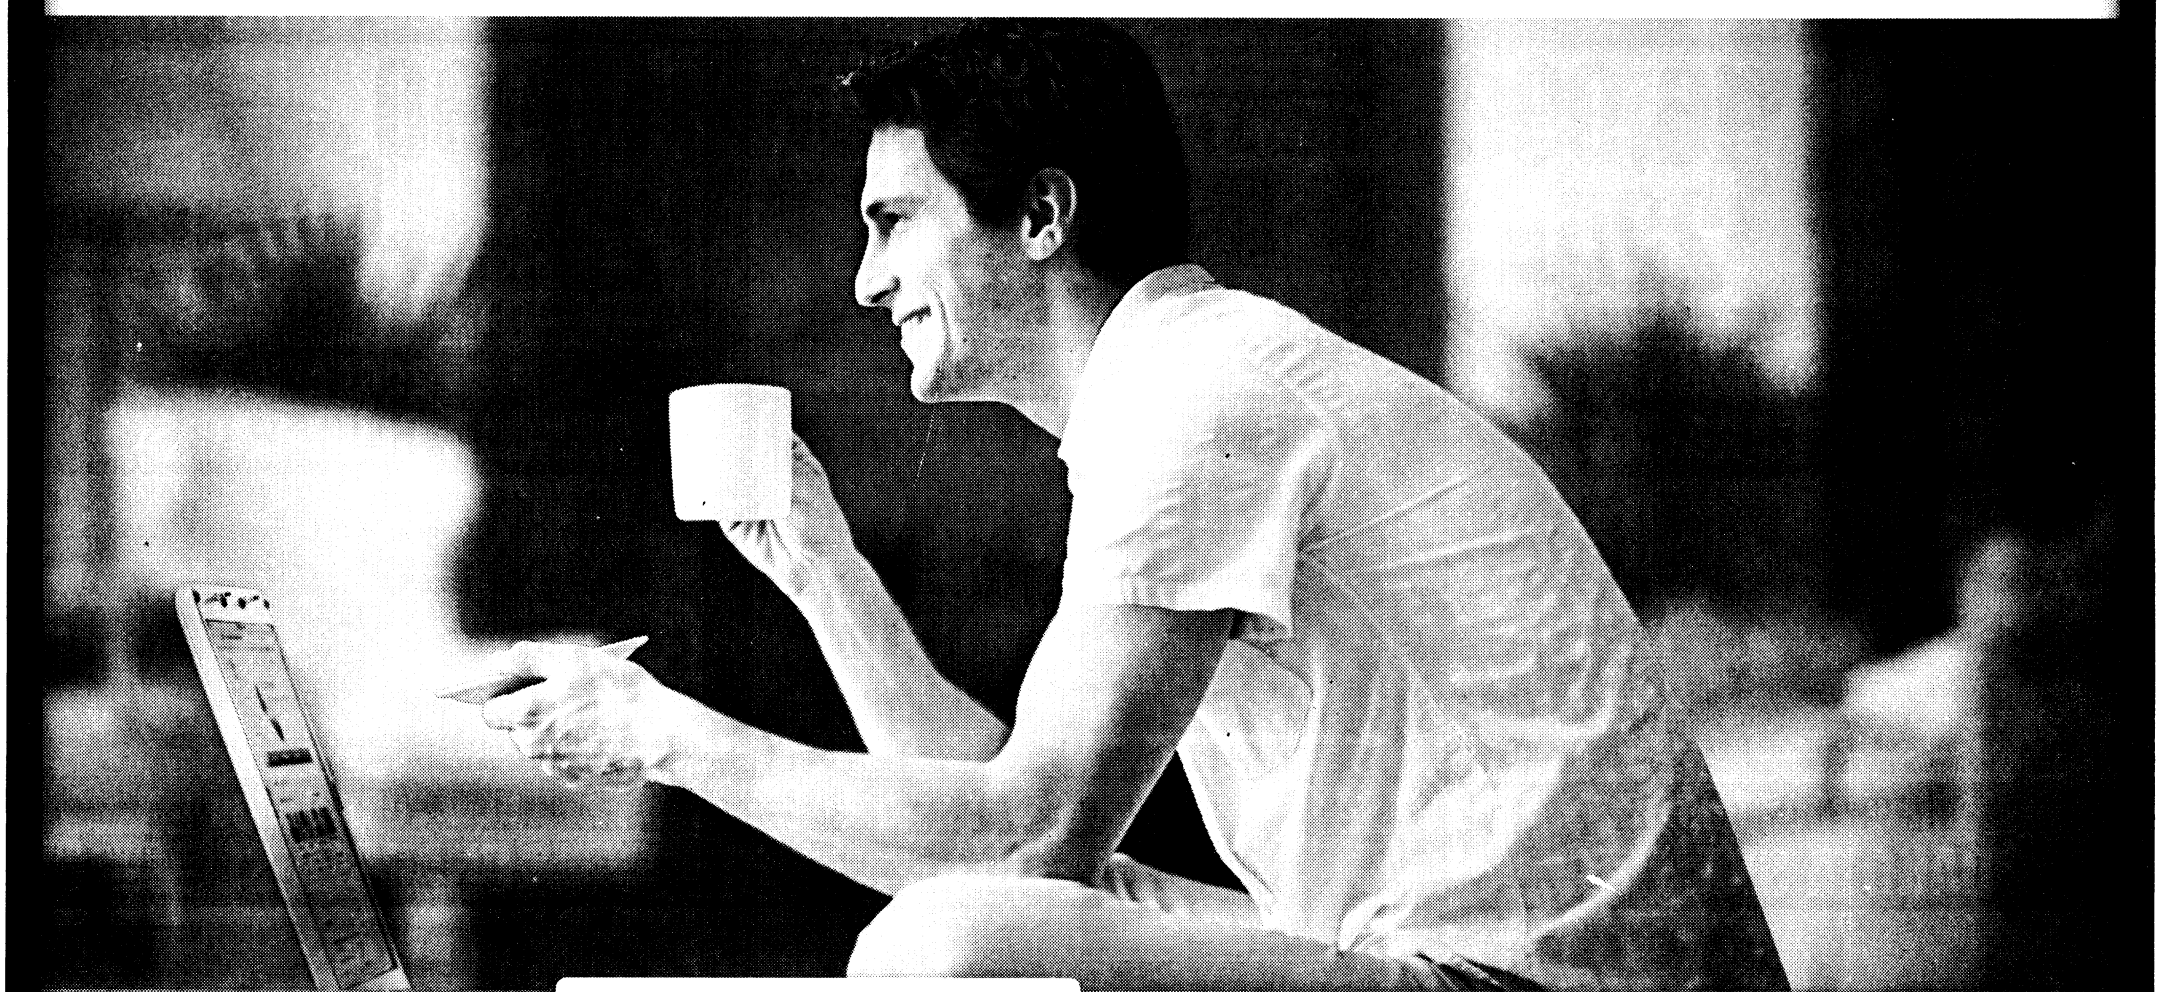
Martin said the Day Room may eventually have laptops available for check out, so that people without laptops can use the wireless as well.

Fort Benning to celebrate Women's History Month

THE BAYONET
Brenda Donnell

Mara Adamitz Scrupe, environmentally and socially attuned artist and professor at Columbus State University, will be the guest speaker at Fort Benning's Women's History Month luncheon from 11:30 to 1 p.m. March 20 at the Benning Club.

Sgt. 1st Class Michelle Fonseca, equal opportunity advisor, said Scrupe was chosen in honor of this year's theme, "Women's Art: Women's Vision," which celebrates the originality, beauty, imagination and multiple dimensions of women's lives.



Scrupe creates projects for museums, arboretums, landscapes and public spaces. Some of her recent projects include commissions for the 10th International Unfringed Festival in Limerick, Ireland; I Bienal Internacional de Arts al Aire Libre in Caracas, Venezuela; The Johns Hopkins University in Baltimore; Harvard University School of Landscape Architecture in Cambridge, Mass.; and the Savannah College of Art and Design.

Nancy Engel, actress, director, performance coach and public speaker, will portray Edna Ferber, singing songs and reciting from Ferber's writings. Ferber was called the greatest woman novelist of her day by the New York Times. She wrote numerous books, including Show Boat, about a girl's life on the Mississippi River, which was adapted as a musical comedy on Broadway and three movies. Another of her books, Giant, a story of life in Texas, starring Elizabeth Taylor, Rock Hudson and James Dean, was adapted for the cinema.

Lloyd Elementary School students will sing and recite quotes of famous women artists.

Women's History Month is in March and ensures the history of American women is recognized and celebrated in schools, workplaces and communities nationwide, according to the National Women's History Project.

LEGALLY, WE CANNOT SAY YOU CAN USE IT IN A DUST STORM.

These days, every piece of equipment is designed for the conditions of the environment. You should expect no less from your laptop. That's why the Panasonic Toughbook® 30 was developed to withstand the harsh desert conditions the US Army often finds itself in. It's fully-rugged with a magnesium alloy case and vibration- and shock-resistant. It's also equipped with a moisture- and dust-resistant LCD, keyboard and touchpad. You'll also appreciate the dust-resistant hinges, sealed port covers and a pre-installed replaceable screen film for touchscreen protection. It's MIL-STD-810F-tested for toughness, so it's always reliable. Even if you never use it in a storm, it's good to know that you can if you need to.

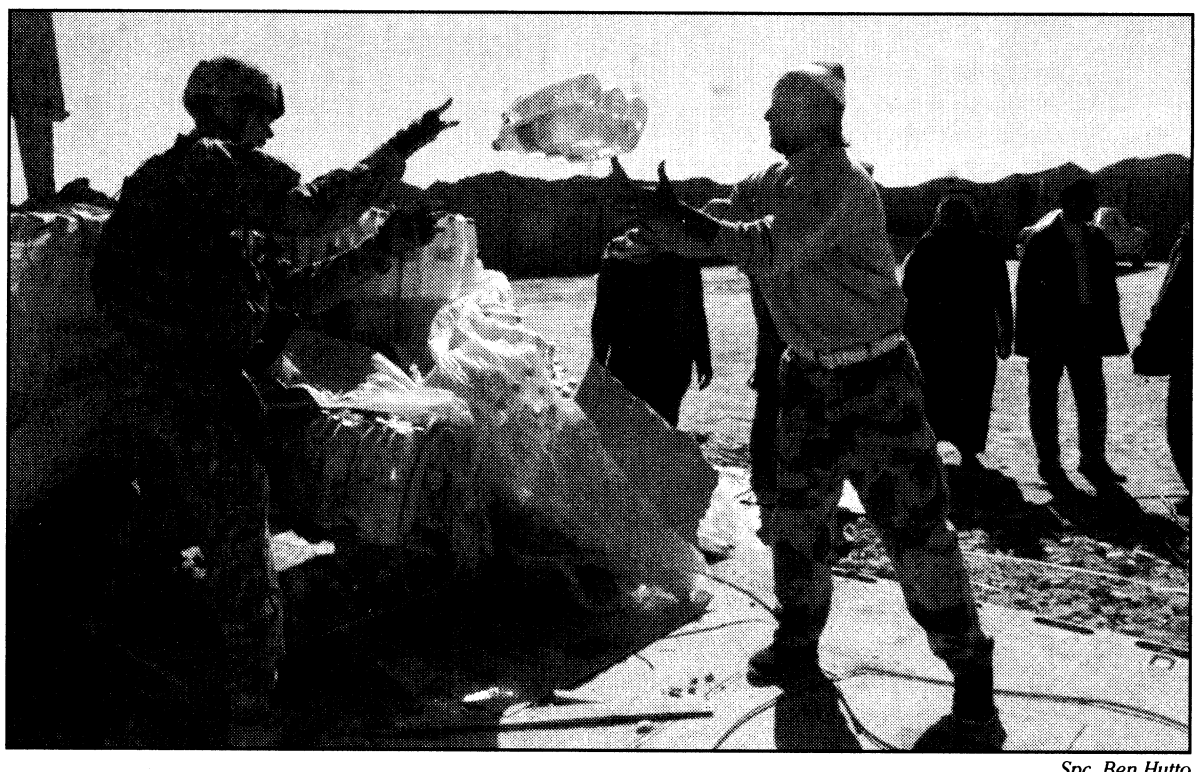
Soldiers bring water to the people of Narhwan

3RD HEAVY BRIGADE COMBAT TEAM
Spc. Ben Hutto

FORWARD OPERATING BASE HAMMER, Iraq — Soldiers from the 3rd Heavy Brigade Combat Team delivered 240 cases of bottled water to the Sons of Iraq headquarters in Narhwan, a town east of Baghdad, March 5.



"Water is very important here," said Sgt. Lucas Walrod, a squad leader in B Troop, 3rd Squadron, 1st Cavalry Regiment, currently attached to the 1st Battalion, 10th Field Artillery.

"There is a shortage of potable water here so it is greatly appreciated when we deliver it," he said. "It is one of the main ways we help the community."

The water will be distributed by the SoI to town residents. Walrod pointed out that the SoI will play a key role by doing so. In previous operations, B Troop distributed the water themselves, but many citizens were unable to attend the water drops.

"We deliver it here and Sheik Kasum (the leader of the Narhwan SoI) hands it out to the people who need it," Walrod said. "The Sons of Iraq have an unbiased system of getting it out to all the people here ... They are really good at it because they are from here and know the people they are helping. Having the Sons of Iraq deliver it also adds to their legitimacy here. The people can actually see that the group is here to help them when they do things like deliver water."

Kasum said he uses 40 different agents to identify needy families and distribute food to them. The agents use a ration card system to ensure that each family is getting the amount they require and to limit people from stockpiling more than they need.

Spc. Ben Hutto

Spc. Justin Brock, a scout in B Troop, 3rd Squadron, 1st Cavalry Regiment, helps members of the Sons of Iraq of Narhwan unload drinking water, provided by the 3rd Heavy Brigade Combat Team for the citizens of Narhwan, at their headquarters March 5.

According to Soldiers, the roads in Narhwan are secure because of the performance of the SoI and goodwill brought about by projects like water and food drops.

"I get a good feeling coming down here because the routes are secure," said 1st Lt. Jose Mendoza, a platoon leader from G Company, 203rd Brigade Support Battalion, currently attached to 1st Bn., 10th Field Artillery.

"I have not been shot at or hit by an IED (improvised explosive device) this entire deployment," he said. "I credit the clearance teams and Soldiers for making sure the routes are secure, but the Sons of Iraq checkpoints have played a big part in the security of the roads here as well. They have been doing a good job and are working with us."

Soldiers detain 2

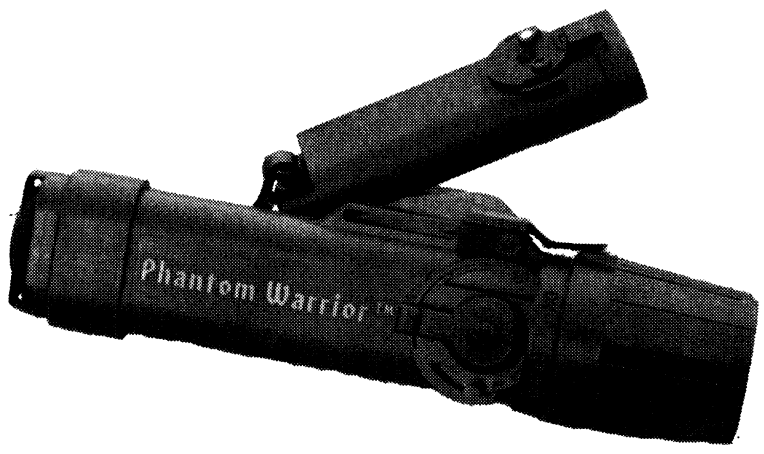
3RD HEAVY BRIGADE COMBAT TEAM
Spc. Ben Hutto

FOB HAMMER, Iraq — Soldiers conducted a nighttime air assault mission in Kanasa, a small village south of Salman Pak Feb. 28.

The Soldiers, assigned to B Company, 1st Battalion, 15th Infantry Regiment, cleared six houses and detained two individuals for questioning.

"The purpose of the mission was to capture or kill any enemy combatants we came across and continue to secure the area around (Combat Outpost) Carver," said 1st Lt. Ivan Eno, a platoon leader in B Co.

"All of our guys, right down to the lowest level, understood our intent and scheme and executed it accordingly."



The area south of Salman Pak had been an extremist safe haven. It is sparsely populated and has many places to hide or seek refuge.

"There are a lot of abandoned houses and farms down there for extremists to take refuge in," Eno said.

988th Military Police Company prepares for Iraq

THE BAYONET
Rachel L. Watkins

Soldiers from the 988th Military Police Company are deploying to Iraq this fall, so predeployment training is on their agenda.

At Victor Training area Tuesday, 988th MP Company reacted to an enemy contact, an IED strike, and set up a road block and searched vehicles for suspicious activity.

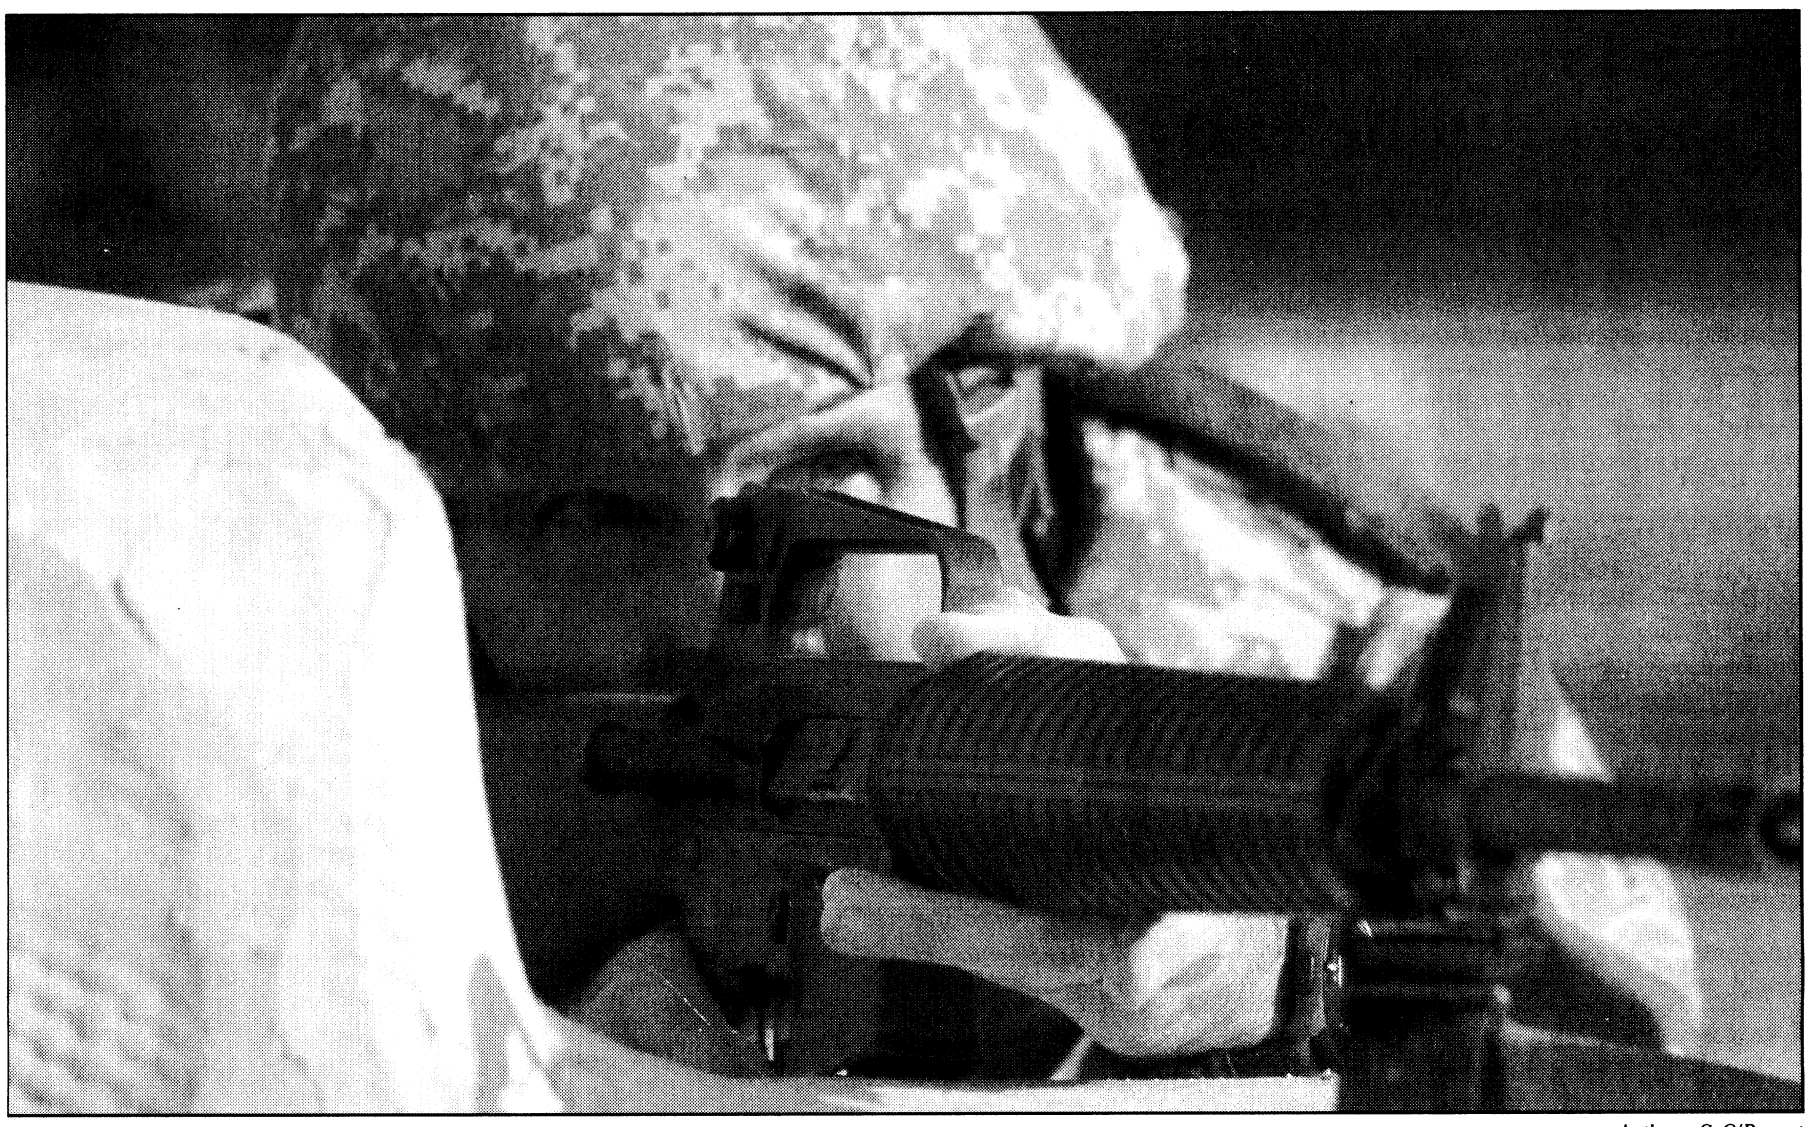
"This is good training — especially for the new guys — to get prepared for what could possibly happen in Iraq," said Staff Sgt. Marlo Brayboy, squad leader. Brayboy was hit by an IED when he deployed with the 988th MP Company in December, 2005. Training is what helped him through that situation, he said, and using technology allows Soldiers to get a better realization for what might happen.

The IED simulator, a non-pyrotechnic mechanism powered by carbon dioxide that ejects a smoke-like substance, helps the training become more realistic, he said. It was first used at Fort Benning about a year ago.

Soldiers also conducted a convoy operation in a humvee where they ran into obstacles such as an IED, a 155-artillery round, insurgents and a road block.

The vehicle searches included looking for anything suspicious — old parts on a new car, new parts on an old car, checking fluids to make sure they aren't flammable and checking hood weight.

"The more training we do, the better prepared we will be in Iraq," Pvt. Zach Parker said.



"They can't train enough," said Staff Sgt. Jimmy Wathen, one of the site NCOs. "We never know what kind of tasks we'll encounter when we get to Iraq, so we are training these Soldiers to be experts at everything."

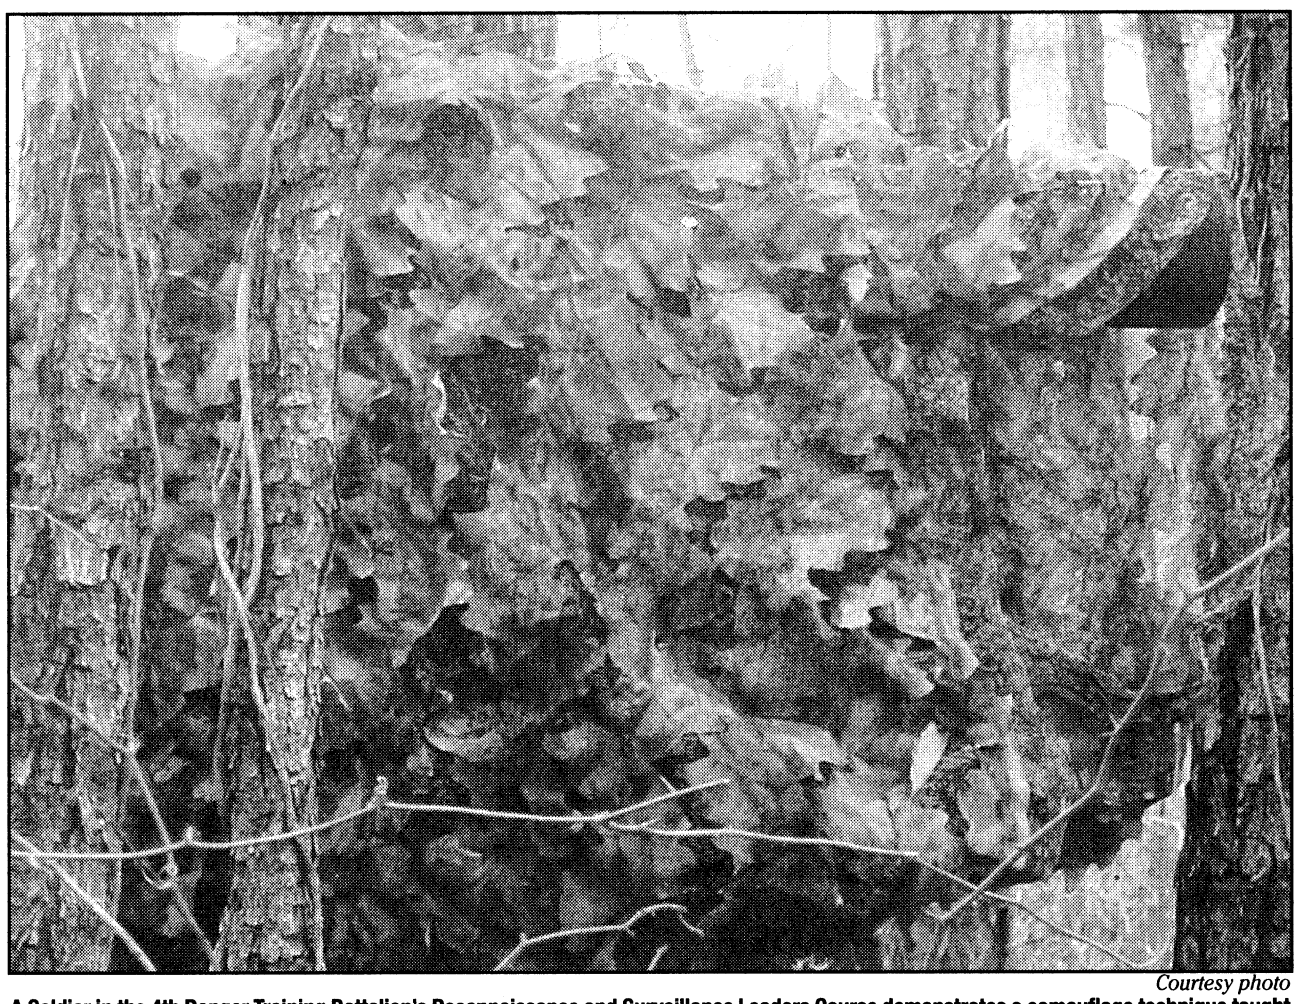
4th RTB teaches reconnaissance, surveillance course



4TH RANGER TRAINING BATTALION
Capt. Matthew Strand

When most Soldiers think of the 4th Ranger Training Battalion, the first thing that comes to their minds is the 61 days of Ranger School spread across Georgia and Florida. Few people realize the 4th RTB is also home to the Reconnaissance and Surveillance Leaders Course.

Originally established in 1986 as the Long Range Surveillance Leaders Course, RSLC spent its first 16 years servicing a specialized community consisting of Long Range Surveillance and Special Operations units. In 2002, a change was needed because of the number of reconnaissance units created by modular transformation. The course underwent a revision and was re-named RSLC.

RSLC is 33 days in length and is divided into two phases. Phase I is largely academic with associated practical exercises and situational training exercises. The goal of Phase I is to provide the students all the skills and tools necessary to be successful as reconnaissance leaders. In Phase II, the students learn how to plan reconnaissance operations and then take all the skills they learned in Phase I and put them into practice in an evaluated field training exercise.

The focus of Phase I is on the tactical and technical aspects of being a reconnaissance Soldier. Effective communications is decisive for any reconnaissance mission; therefore RSLC students spend the first three days of the course learning beyond line-of-sight, long range communications skills. During this period of instruction, students learn everything from radio wave propagation and antennae theory to trouble shooting. Students must prove competency in both a written and hands-on communication test, and these skills are consistently re-enforced via a series of communications exercises as the students proceed through the remainder of the course.

A Soldier in the 4th Ranger Training Battalion's Reconnaissance and Surveillance Leaders Course demonstrates a camouflage technique taught in the course. RSLC is a 33-day class divided into two phases. The first phase teaches Soldiers how to plan reconnaissance operations and tests the skills learned in field exercises. It also includes radio wave propagation and antennae theory to trouble shooting and extraction techniques. In Phase II, Soldiers focus on reconnaissance team planning and surveillance operations. The culminating exercise is a seven-day FTX. The end result of the course is a highly trained and skilled leader who is able to execute reconnaissance, surveillance and target acquisition missions, said Maj. Christopher Nyland.

Once students have mastered beyond line-of-sight communications, the training focus shifts to collection, digital photography and reporting. The students are taught not only the technical skills necessary to collect and report, but also how to tactically execute these types of missions in both woodland and urban environments while serving as members of either mounted or dismounted reconnaissance elements.

Additionally during Phase I, students receive instruction on vehicle, equipment and weapon recognition, camouflage, survival, and air insertion and extraction techniques to include Airborne operations, Special Purpose Insertion and Extraction System, and Fast Rope Insertion and Extraction System. Phase I includes a four-day situational training exercise where the students conduct an airborne insertion followed by a mounted urban reconnaissance exercise in downtown Columbus and then conduct dismounted urban and woodland reconnaissance exercises.

RSLC is not only a mentally intense but also a physically demanding course, so students should expect to be challenged regularly, said Maj. Christopher Nyland.

During the first phase of RSLC, students will be tested on their physical fitness, participate in a number of marches and physical training events, and complete a very demanding land navigation course in which each student will walk almost 12 kilometers in seven hours.

Phase I arms the students with all the technical and tactical skills necessary to be successful, Nyland said. As they transition to Phase II they are called upon to put all those learned skills into practical application in an evaluated tactical environment.

Phase II of RSLC focuses on reconnaissance team planning and extended reconnaissance and surveillance operations. The culminating event of RSLC is a seven-day evaluated field training exercise in which each reconnaissance team will be evaluated on planning a mission and their conduct of a variety of reconnaissance and surveillance missions to include zone, area and route reconnaissance, persistent surveillance operations and target acquisition missions using simulated Joint, Indirect and Attack Aviation fires.

The end result is a highly trained and skilled leader who is confident and able to execute reconnaissance, surveillance and target acquisition missions in support of an intelligence collection plan, Nyland said.

With the emphasis today's modular Army places on the role of reconnaissance forces, it is vital that our formations have qualified Soldiers who can locate, identify and report on enemy forces, he said.

The course exists to train the current and future reconnaissance leaders, so the next time you think of the 4th Ranger Training Battalion, think not only about Ranger Training, but also about Reconnaissance and Surveillance Training, he said.

Benning TV: To air Top Sniper show on Fort Benning

"That's what we want our snipers to be, and they are."

Top Sniper: The International Sniper Competition will air on Fort Benning TV throughout March.

"Top Sniper is the first of many productions we will be able to offer our on-post viewers through our partnership with The Military Channel," said Nate Snook, Fort Benning TV producer. In the months ahead, viewers may see the Military Channel's coverage of the Combatives Invitational Tournament and the Best Ranger Competition.

Fort Benning TV is available on post on Time Warner, channel 4. Though Top Sniper will not be available off post, those viewers can watch Fort Benning TV programming at 6:30 a.m. and 6:30 p.m. on Charter's channel 3; Knology's channel 17; MediaCom's channel 12 and on Troy University's Channel on Thursday and Friday evenings. Fort Benning TV's The Benning Report can be seen on the Pentagon Channel at 4:30 p.m. Saturdays and at noon Sundays. Fort Benning TV programming is also available online at www.BenningTV.com.

Viewers are encouraged to visit the Web site and take the viewership survey.

Air show: Starts at 10 a.m. Saturday at Columbus airport

U.S. Army Silver Wings parachute team will drop in.

Other performances include Neal Darnell in the Flash Fire Jet Truck, a fire-breathing, 12,000 horsepower truck. Darnell races airplanes at 350 mph and can speed down a .25-mile drag strip in a little more than six seconds.

Disabled American Veterans members will share their patriotic message, dedicated to the nation's combat-wounded men and women, on the wings of Panchito, a fully restored B-25 Mitchell Bomber. The B-25 was famous for its role in the World War II Doolittle Raid.

Also on display will be military vehicles from all branches, which Childers said was one of the most popular air show exhibitions in 2006.

Another display includes a cutting-edge movie-theater-on-wheels that gives young men and women a peek inside the world of the U.S. Air Force as Airmen fight on overseas battlefields, operate space satellites and more.

The Thunder in the Valley Air Show is a family event for the local community. Other events scheduled are a children's carnival, airplane and helicopter rides, simulators, souvenirs, food and more.

For security reasons, all persons, bags, backpacks and purses will be subject to inspection upon entering the air show. The following items are forbidden: firearms and weapons, coolers, large bags and alcohol.

Gates open at 10 a.m. both days. There will be a pre-show from noon to 1 p.m. each day. Performances are from 1 to 5 p.m.

Tickets are $8 in advance and $10 at the gate. Military tickets are $5.50 through Omega World Travel Agency at Fort Benning. Children 5 and younger can enter free.

Tickets are available from any area Boy Scout, Columbus-area Wachovia Bank Branches, Columbus-area McDonalds and JD Kinders Furniture.

All tickets are good for either one of the two show days, but not for both days. Attendance on both days requires two tickets. For more information, call Don Sharitt at 706-327-2634.

Limited parking is available at the Columbus Metropolitan Airport, and parking is $10.

Free parking is available at Columbus State University at the University Avenue entrance near the Tennis Courts. There is a free shuttle to and from CSU.

Proceeds from the air show support more than 11,000 West Georgia and East Alabama youth.

Museum: Set to open in March 2009 in South Columbus

In a room with dimmed lights and artifacts scattered about, Ed Annable, the registrar and collections manager archives artifacts, researches Medal of Honor recipients and prepares artifacts to go the new museum.

Annable said one of his favorite artifacts is a glass flask with a metal bottom that's engraved with the name of a Soldier in the Civil War.

It will be displayed in the new museum, when it opens in March of 2009.

"The flask is unique because we have very few artifacts that relate to the regular Infantry in the Civil War," he said.

The museum has 44,000 artifacts and only 10 percent were displayed in the old museum.

"If we had 10 buildings the size of the museum, we still wouldn't have enough room to display everything," Hanner said.

The new museum will be more spacious. Compare the old museum, 50,000 square feet, to the new museum, around 185,000 feet.

Until the new museum opens, the staff of nine will pack everything for the move.

The artifacts must be packed according to certain specifications, so they won't get destroyed in the move, Hanner said.

Hanner and his staff will work with different companies to set up exhibits at the new location.

"We plan on making the new museum the best military museum in the United States, if not the world," Hanner said.

BENCH NOTES

Wade out for season

Miami Heat's star guard Dwyane Wade will miss the remainder of the season.

According to Yahoo! Sports, Wade told head coach Pat Riley that his knee was in so much pain it hurt to get out of bed. But Wade still plans on playing with Team USA in the Beijing Olympics.

It should hurt him more to get into bed. The possibility of him having a nightmare of this disastrous season would cause me insomnia.

Walsh in the clear?

Matt Walsh, the former New England Patriots employee, who allegedly video taped opposing teams, is close to reaching an agreement with the National Football League, which will allow him to come forward with information. Since the Spygate scandal involving the Pats and the New York Jets erupted last year, Walsh has been seeking immunity from lawsuits and legal action.

I don't think this situation is Walsh's fault. The Patriots organization as a whole should suffer the consequences.

Busch wins Kobalt 500

Kyle Busch and his Toyota Camry won the Kobalt Tools 500 Sunday in Atlanta. This was the first non-American NASCAR top division victory in more than 50 years.

Busch edged out Tony Stewart by 2.066 second. Busch also won Saturday night's NASCAR Craftsman Truck Series race in Atlanta.

Terrorist plot on plane

The Chinese government reported that Islamic terrorist using suspicious liquids wanted to crash a Chinese passenger plane last week, which the government authorities prevented. This situation causes concern for public safety at the Beijing Olympics in August.

Sun Weide, a spokesman for the Olympic committee, said a security command system is in place and he is confident that the games will go smoothly.

Shamrock has bad luck

Mixed martial arts legend Ken Shamrock, who visited Fort Benning in February, had his Cage Rage debut spoiled by Robert "Buzz" Berry Saturday. Berry TKO'd Shamrock 3:26 into the first round. Shamrock tried to punch with the 37-year-old veteran instead of taking the match to the ground.

Ken told me he was ready to take on street slugger and new MMA pro Kimbo Slice later in the year. Now, I like Shamrock a lot, but there is no way he is going to be able to trade punches with Slice, especially if he struggled with Berry. He better carry a four-leafed clover.

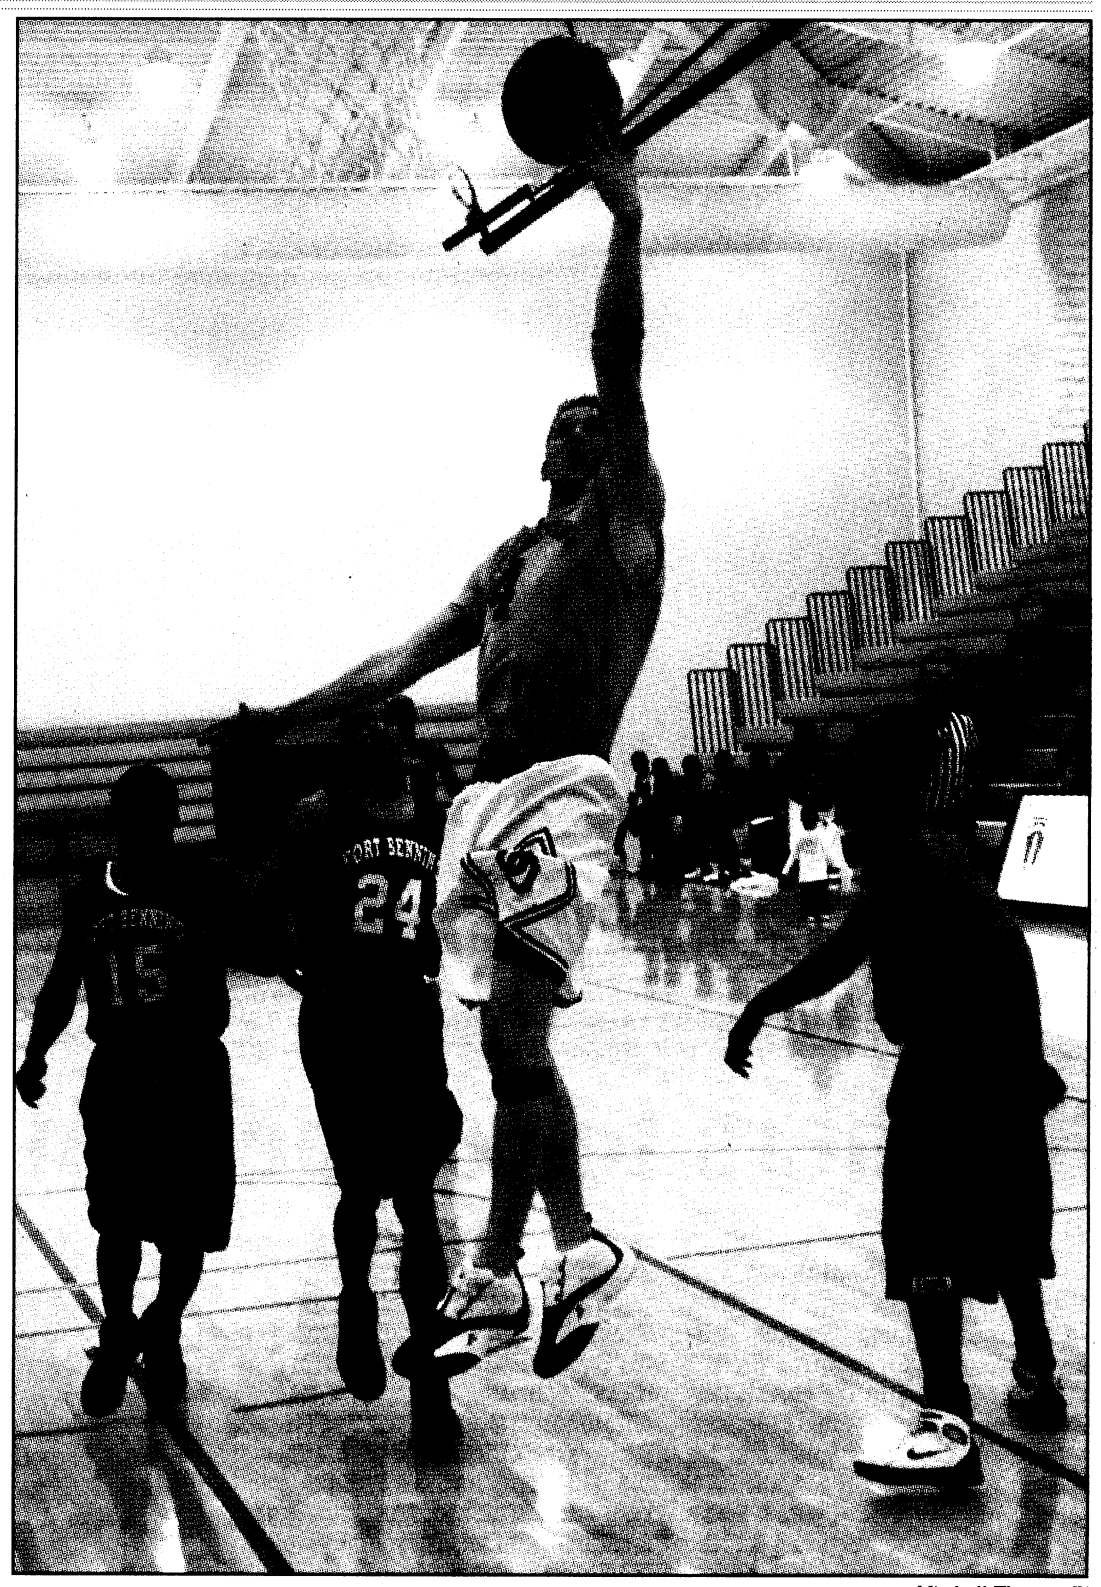
Sand Hill rallied after losing the first game to win two straight, beating Main Post in the intramural basketball All-Star game March 5 at the Smith Fitness Center.



"To get out here with all your peers and to be recommended for the team feels good," said Alexander Johnson of C Company, 3rd Battalion, 47th Infantry Regiment, who played on the Sand Hill team. "It means someone's paying attention to what we're doing well."

Both the Sand Hill and Main Post leagues picked the best players from each of the league's teams to field the All-Star teams.

The Main Post team controlled the tempo in game one, winning 62-49. But Sand Hill came roaring back to dominate in the following two games, winning 54-48 and 64-58

Even though Main Post lost, the camaraderie is what the game is about, said Thomas Long of the Basic Officer Leadership Course II team representing Main Post.

"It's just fun to get out here with the guys across the whole post," Long said. "We always concentrate on training Soldiers to lead the Army. It's nice every once in a while to get out here and throw the ball around."

More than 100 shooters from around the nation are competing in the All-Army Small Arms Championships this week.

The competition consists of active-duty Soldiers, Reserve Soldiers and ROTC cadets from Virginia Tech, Texas Tech, North Georgia College and State University and the U.S. Military Academy. The events feature individual and team rifle and pistol matches including the Gen. George Patton Combat Pistol Team matches.

There are three featured shooting classes — novice, open and pro class. The intent of the matches is to give Soldiers without competition experience a taste of competitive marksmanship," said Staff Sgt. Emil Praslick, coach on the service rifle team for the Army Marksmanship Unit and chief range officer for the competition.

Faith student plays golf for team, God, future

THE BAYONET

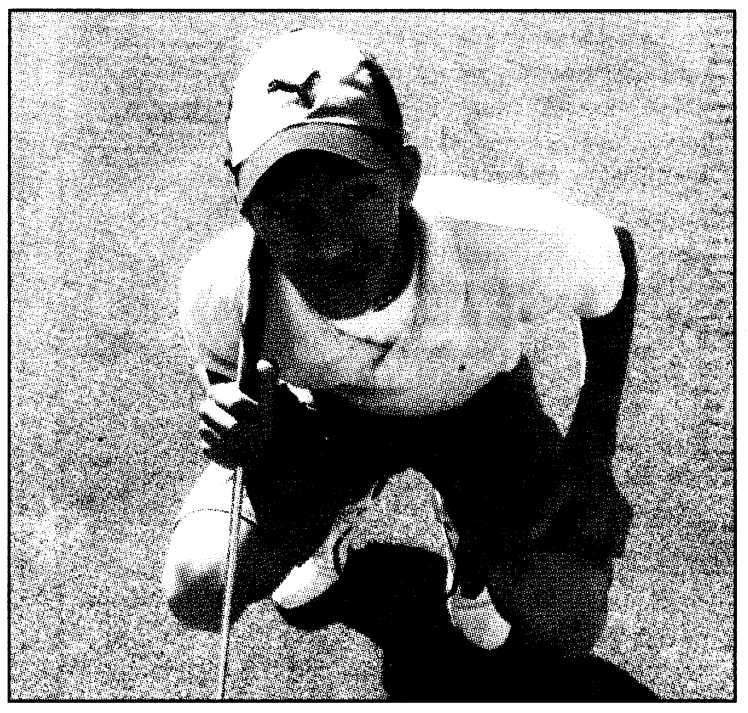
When Zach Caggins was 3 years old, there was nothing he wanted more than to follow his father's footsteps — to the golf course. Zach would cry until his dad, Maj. Elliot Caggins, returned home from playing golf and placed a golf club in Zach's hands. At 13, Zach still hasn't put the club down.

Zach, a seventh-grader and captain of the Faith Middle School golf team, is making a name for himself as one of the best junior golfers in the world. Last year, he was voted player of the year in the area's middle school league and won the Muscogee County Junior Golf Championship with medalist honors. He's played on the national and international level since he was 8.



"Golf is like a puzzle to me," Zach said. "It's a game you can never perfect. I just want to know that I'm constantly getting better."

Although not perfect, Zach is accomplished. He has placed in the top 20 in three of the five years he has competed in the Callaway Junior World Golf Championship.

"It's almost scary the things he can do on the course," Caggins said. "I haven't been able to beat him since he was seven. I won't even play him anymore."

Caggins said he noticed Zach's potential when Zach was 3. He could hit a ball to any spot on demand.

"I like being pushed, and I like pushing myself," said Capt. Jeff Soulé, who will be competing with his brother, Maj. Greg Soulé in this year's Best Ranger Competition. Last year, Jeff and teammate Bobby Hoffnagle placed sixth. Greg, who is an ROTC instructor at James Madison University in Virginia will be competing for the first time. The brothers train together once a month going back and forth between Virginia and Georgia.

Brothers to compete in BRC

THE BAYONET

A Fort Benning Soldier is preparing to compete for the second time in the annual Best Ranger Competition — this time with his brother. Capt. Jeff Soulé and his older brother Maj. Greg Soulé will make up one of the few sibling teams to compete in the 25 years of the competition.

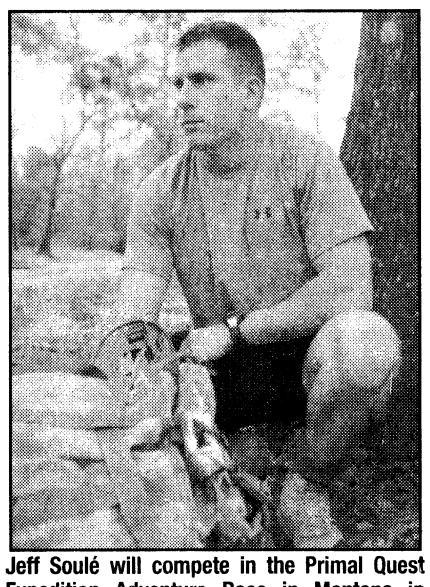
Jeff, who went to Ranger School as well as the Infantry Officer Basic Course in 2003, is assigned to the 4th Ranger Training Battalion. Greg, who finished Ranger School in 1998, is an ROTC instructor at James Madison University in Virginia. The brothers are originally from Baltimore.

"It's great to see him come up in the Army after me. I was Infantry, he was Infantry, I went to Ranger School, he went to Ranger School. Now, he's the guy I'm looking up to," Greg said.

Last year, Jeff and his Ranger buddy, Sgt. 1st Class Bobby Hoffnagle, finished sixth place. Greg, 33 watched his brother and was inspired to compete.

"I've always wanted to do it, but I've never been in a unit that wanted to send a team," Greg said. "This has been in the back of my mind for a long time and seeing my brother do it gave me the buzz to try to finally do it."

Jeff said training for the competition is the most difficult part. He has a seven-day regimen, which includes long runs, rucks, swimming and weight training on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays. He uses the other four days to practice the skill events, including shooting and knot tying. The brothers go back and forth between Georgia and Virginia to train together once a month.



Jeff is no stranger to extreme sports. He was a triathlete in college, but said the events were too "boring." He's been competing in adventure races for three years.

"I like being pushed, and I like pushing myself. The harder the scenario of the event, the more I like it at the end," Jeff said.

Jeff will be part of a four-person team competing in the Primal Quest Expedition Adventure Race in June. The 10-day race, also called the "The World's Most Challenging Endurance Competition," covers 500 miles exceeding 100,000 feet of elevation.

Greg said he feels he and his brother have some advantages over the other Ranger teams.

"It doesn't matter how good a team is. If you bicker back and forth, that will be your downfall," Greg said. Greg said because the two know each other so well, they won't take internal problems during the race personally.

Jeff said partnering with his brother for Best Ranger is a once-in-a-lifetime experience.

"Not many people get to compete in this competition anyway, so to be able to compete in it with my brother is very meaningful," he said "This is something we'll both never forget."

NASCAR makes a fan

'Gentlemen, start your engines'

BAYONET CORRESPONDENT
Maj. Matthew Archambault

When we received orders for Fort Benning I told my wife that humidity, sweet tea and SEC football aside, this was NASCAR country.

I had preconceived notions about NASCAR. Watching cars drive 500 miles in a circle did not seem like anything closely resembling a sport, let alone something I'd spend a day doing.

But Sunday I had an opportunity to attend the Kobalt 500 at the Atlanta Motor Speedway, and remembering some friendly advice that NASCAR events were great entertainment, I acquiesced.

The gates opened at 9 a.m., and it was cold (28 degrees), but there was no snow. We weren't fooled by people charging $20 for parking and we found it free in Weaver Parking lot on the south side of the stadium. A shuttle bus took us to the track, which was nice since we hauled our own food and drinks. There is a size restriction on coolers, but they do not limit the number of appropriately sized containers per group so long as they don't contain glass. Haul all the drinks and sandwiches you want.

This saved money for the most important item needed to enjoy the race, besides a ticket, and that is a scanner. We made the mistake of jumping at the first vendor we found. Our choice was fine, but what we really needed was the video scanner to get the driver's view. Scanners cost between $35 and $50, but there is a military discount.

The SPEED Channel broadcasts live from these events. We knew we were there when we found beautiful girls dancing and tossing SPEED Channel koozies to the crowd.

Former driver Kenny Wallace, a fan favorite, spent every moment, not on camera, signing everything from hats to shirts. The show was informative.

I tripled my previous knowledge, which I had learned watching Days of Thunder and Talladega Nights. For instance, Tony Stewart does not like Goodyear tires and neither does anyone else. I can't say much more about that.

We filed into the stadium 90 minutes prior to the start. We tested our scanners. Country music singer Jason Michael Carroll belted out some songs. John Schneider gave a quick demonstration with his 1969 Dodge Charger (the General Lee) before some sky divers delivered the green flag and they introduced the drivers.

In a demonstration that Georgia is NASCAR country, Gov. Sonny Perdue presented Dale Jarrett (#44, UPS) with a plaque commemorating his retirement. I mentioned the passion the fans feel for this sport and they let the drivers know who they liked and they disliked. The Busch brothers did not draw as much ire as Jimmie Johnson or Carl Edwards. Tony Stewart received mixed reviews and Junior nearly received a standing ovation with the race even starting.

Each sport has its spine-tingling moment. In baseball it's "Play Ball." In NASCAR its "Gentlemen, start your engines." That was awesome. The rumble was fantastic and once they started around the track the whine of the engines was pure exhilaration.

This is the enigma of NASCAR. I watched 43 cars race around a track for nearly four hours and if it weren't for the seven caution flags my bladder might've burst. I didn't want to leave and neither did anyone else. The concessions area, unlike other sports, was nearly vacant during the entire race (thanks also in part to the coolers).

Thank goodness for the scanner headsets we rented. The radio broadcast, which cuts to commercials during the races (the drivers don't pause for any station identification), had some good commentary, but I listened mostly to Junior who was plenty chatty, as was Jeff Gordon (#24, Dupont). I don't think Tony Stewart (#20, Home Depot) said five words the whole race. Junior complained that this was too tight and that was too loose as he dropped back off the lead.

Kasey Kahne (#9, Budweiser) managed to hit the wall, spin out, miss everyone and stay in the race. The crowd roared when Carl Edwards' engine blew with forty laps remaining and Junior made it back to third place behind Kyle Busch (#18, Snickers) and Tony Stewart. Despite his comeback, it wasn't meant to be for Junior as Busch took the checkered flag.

I still don't know what they're tightening or loosening out there or why Goodyear is a less than optimal tire, but I'm going to learn for the next time.

Yes, that's right. I don't know if I'll ever get back to Georgia and the Atlanta Motor Speedway when we PCS in the summer, but from our new home at Fort Leavenworth, the Kansas Speedway is only 30 minutes away.

They'll love the look on your face.

Students participate in sport stacking tournament

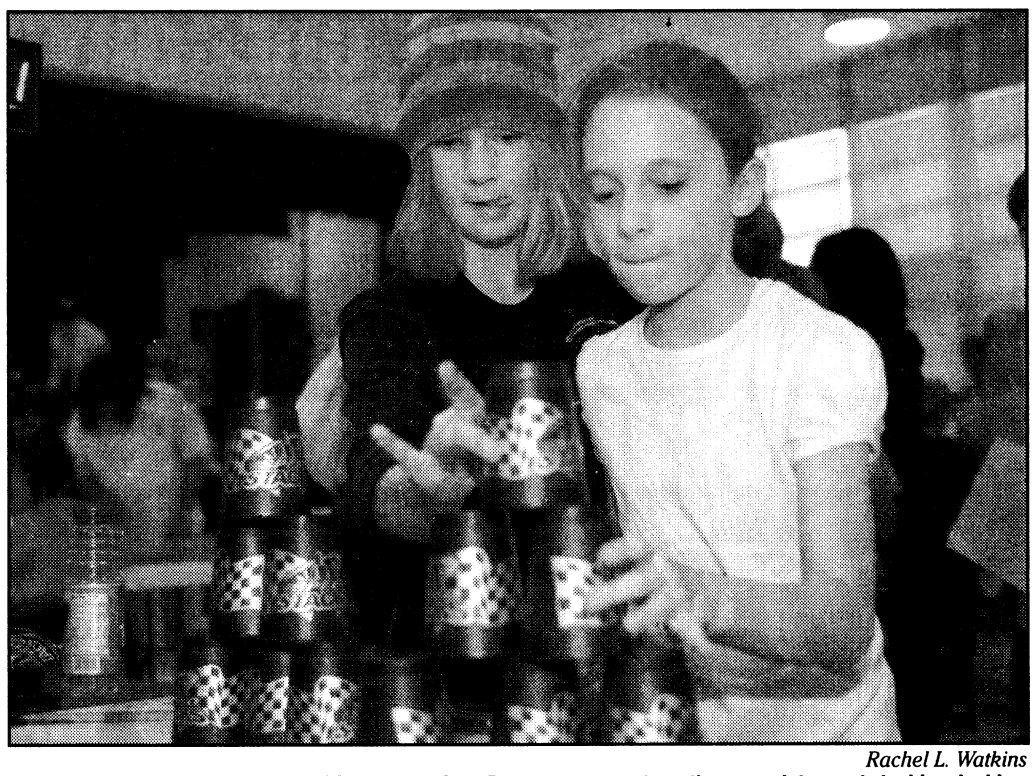
THE BAYONET
Rachel L. Watkins

Students — more than 80 — from Stowers, Dexter and White Elementary Schools met for a monthly sport stacking competition Thursday at White Elementary.

The competition included 3-3-3, 3-6-3, 6-6 and 1-10-1 combinations. The numbers correspond to how many cups are used. For example, in a 3-3-3, three stacks of three cups are formed. Sport stackers competed individually, in doubles, and in teams.

"The doubles are the hardest because you can only use one hand," said Elise Melhado, fifth-grader at Dexter.

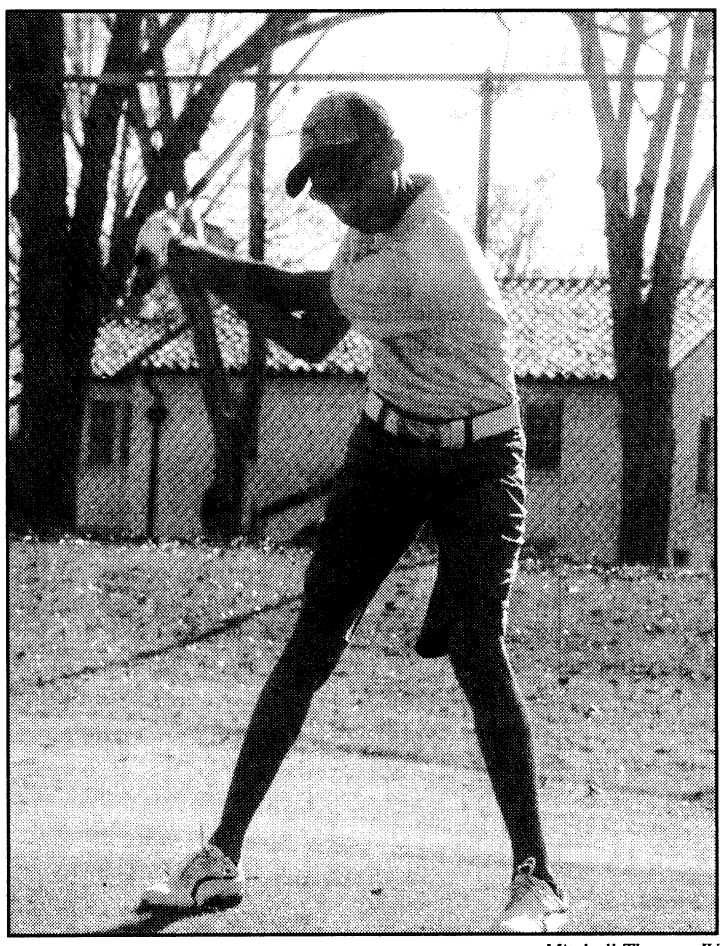
The contestants were judged by students from Faith Middle School, according to rules set by the National Sport Stacking Association.



Joseph Hester, fourth-grader at Stowers, came to the tournament with his flame-covered cups, ready to compete.

"I like competing against others to see if I can beat them," he said. His goal is to beat the person who holds the world record for sport stacking which could take four or five years.

Sport stacking is fun for the children but it is also beneficial, said Anita Smith, coach at White.



"Children have to use both the left and right sides of their brains when sport stacking," she said. "This can help them if they want to play piano or any type of sport where they have to use both hands — like basketball."

There will be a postwide competition April 2.

Rachel L. Watkins
Michaela Hertig and Elise Melhado, fifth-graders from Dexter, concentrate as they complete sport stacking doubles. "The doubles are the hardest because you can only use one hand," Melhado said.

Caggins: Invited to play in Scotland

Mitchell Thomas IV
Zach Caggins has been invited to participate in the U.S. Kids Golf European Championships in Scotland.

"I asked him to hit it to the tree and he could do it," Caggins said. "The first time he used a driver in the backyard, he hit it 80 yards into the woods. You just don't see that at that age."

While stationed at Fort Lewis, Wash., Caggins realized Zach's talent exceeded Caggins' ability to teach him. At 6 years old, Zach received his first golf instructions. A year later he won his first competition.

After moving to Fort Benning in 2003, Zach began taking lessons from Mark Immelman, European PGA teaching professional and coach of Columbus State's golf team. Immelman has been working with Zach for the last five years.

Zach now has a personal trainer and a putting coach to help further his game. He has added 15 yards to his drive within the past six months.

This year, Zach has been invited to participate in the U.S. Kids Golf European Championships in Scotland. Zach has also been selected for the Tiger Woods Junior National Team for the last five years. But his biggest goal this year is to help lead Faith to their first middle school team title.

> "Golf is like a puzzle to me. It's a game you can never perfect. I just want to know that I'm constantly getting better."
>
> — Zach Caggins

Woods is one of Zach's role models and inspirations and Zach is constantly compared to him, Caggins said.

"I take the comparison as a compliment," he said. "Who doesn't admire Tiger? He's a great golfer and a great person. But I want to be my own person. I want to know that one day I can beat Tiger, not be him."

Zach, who eventually wants to attend college and study law or business, said education comes before golf. He currently holds a 3.92 GPA. He wants to one day set up a foundation to provide college scholarships to disadvantaged kids.

"I would never encourage him to go pro before college," Elliot said. "Golf is a very cerebral sport. The stress and the grind of performing every week is too much for a kid. He's still a boy, and he needs to remain one until it's time for him to become a man."

Zach said his faith in God is key to his success as well as his life. This year, he was baptized on Martin Luther King Day in Madison, Miss., at his grandfather's church.

"When I play golf, I don't just play for myself, I play for Jesus," Zach said. "My relationship with God helps me with my everyday life."

FIT FACTS

MWR FITNESS DIRECTOR
Lori Smith

Happy Friday and soon to be St. Patrick's Day. So with that: "May your mornings bring joy, and your evenings bring peace ... May your troubles grow less, as your blessings increase."

OK — enough Irish toast or someone is going to have to pour me a pint. This week, I want to talk about something important to me — self-esteem and loving your body.

I may write Fit Facts, I may be the fitness director, but I will never grace the cover of a fitness magazine, and I am OK with that.

I am not Ms. Fitness, I don't have the perfect diet, I have a short "athletic build" that comes from my mom, and I am a young 37 years old.

But, I am currently training for three triathlons, walking the Mountain Man March in April, (a 26.2 mile ruck march in the mountains), and I am very happy.

I try not to obsess over the extra 5 to 10 pounds I want to lose, the wrinkle I just noticed around my eyes or the gray hairs popping up.

What I try to focus on is looking at the fact that my body still functions very well, and I am a healthy and happy individual.

The problem for most of us seems to be that we look at ourselves from the outside. We notice imperfections first, zero in on them and obsess about them.

We get so focused on what is wrong with our bodies that we forget to remember what is right.

Your body is your home, and it's hard to live in a home you keep trashing.

The next time you treat your body with contempt, stop for a second and think about how lucky you are, and what others who are not as lucky as you, would probably give to have the body you're in.

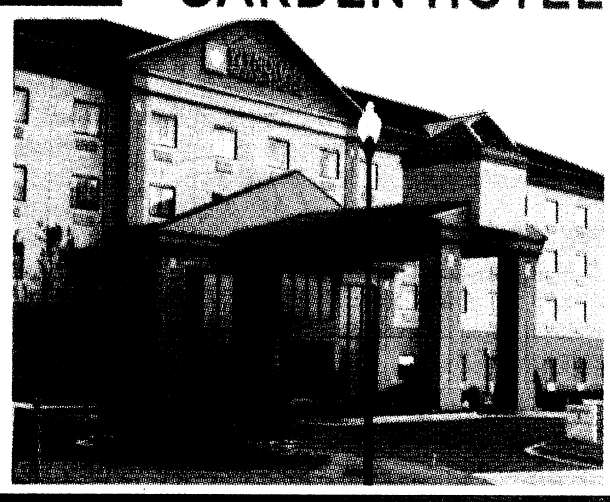
Take a deep breath and think about not being able to do that.

Would you really give up your ability to breathe freely for thinner thighs or less underarm jiggle?

Now, this article does not give you an excuse to not work out, eat right or take care of yourself.

Be healthy, but live your life and love your body. Take the time now to appreciate what you have. What we have is now. If you can't look around now and see the abundance in your life, you won't be able to notice it in five years either, no matter how thin you are.

People ask me how I stay so positive and happy all the time. I tell them first to ask my friends. They know I'm not happy all the time.



Second, I say I love my life and try to enjoy every second of it. I try to find the positive in my life, and when I look around, I am surrounded by good friends and people who care about me. I am healthy and try to stay that way. I enjoy my wine on Fridays and have people I care about, and I love.

I may not grace the cover of a magazine or get asked to pose for Sports Illustrated, but I would never give up all that I have to be 10 pounds lighter.

I hope everyone has a wonderful weekend and St. Pat's Day.

Keep reading Fit Facts.

Training for Reverse Sprint Triathlon begins

THE BAYONET
Mitchell Thomas IV

Now's the time to begin training for the fourth annual Fort Benning Reverse Sprint Triathlon, said Lori Smith, Fitness Director of the Directorate of Family, Morale, Welfare and Recreation. The triathlon is June 7 on Main Post.

The Reverse Sprint Triathlon features three events — a 5K run, a 20K bike ride and a 550-meter swim in the lap pool.

What makes the triathlon stand out is that it is run in reverse order, Smith said.

"Sometimes athletes get tired of the same old thing," Smith said "People want to train for an event that is more diverse and that's why triathlons have gained popularity in recent years."

The age divisions for individual racers include 19 and younger, 20 to 29, 30 to 39, 40 to 49, and 50 and older. There are also several team categories including male, female, mixed male and female, and Family. Smith said the triathlon is ideal for beginners.

Smith offers training tips for each event:

Run: Training should consist of runs that incorporate the distance on race day, speed workouts, and rest days. Begin by running three days a week, with two days for long runs at an easy pace to build endurance and one day that incorporates speed drills. After two weeks, increase the speed of one of the long runs. During the actual race, set a pace so that there is adequate energy for the finish.

Bike: Ride one to two times a week working up to your goal distance. While biking, try to get to one revolution per second, which puts you at 60 rpm. Rather than standing and pushing down, sit, pull up and push down using entire stroke cycle. Use spin instead of force and this will help save knee strength and energy. For first time competitors, there is no need for an expensive bike. Helmets are required during the race. For more information on biking, contact the Outdoor Recreation's Bike Club.

Swim: Competitors should swim at least three times a week, a lap at a time until strength is increased. Competitors can also use a combination of different strokes during the race. Swimming correctly is better than swimming fast. The lifeguards at the Smith Fitness Center can offer swimming assistance.

Registration for the race will begin May 1 and is open to the public. The fee for registration is $20 for individuals and $30 for teams. Payment can be made at the Smith Fitness Center on Main Post.

There will be an award ceremony at El Zapata on Main Post after the race. Awards will be given to the top three male and female overall finishers, top three male and female finishers in each team category.

For more information, call Smith at 706-545-4300.

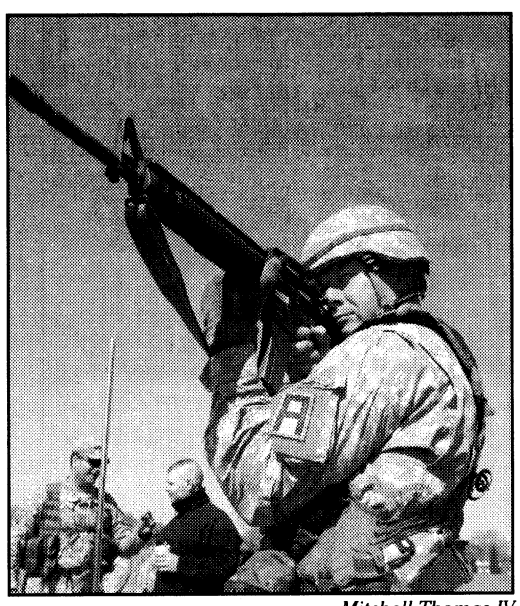
AMU: Holds competition

Continued B1

The week began with a series of classes that focused on marksmanship fundamentals including loading, operation of the weapons and range and zeroing weapons.

Praslick said Soldiers take the knowledge gained from the competition back to their respective units to assist with training.



"When these Soldiers get deployed, they need to know all they can about their weapons so they'll be effective on the battlefield," Praslick said.

For Sgt. 1st Class Dwayne Lewis, who is the chief marksmanship instructor at Camp Bullis, Texas, the All-Army shoot was a return to his former home. Lewis was a pick-up shooter for the AMU for seven years as well as an instructor for Sniper School for two years.

"It's awesome to be back," Lewis said. "I'm seeing a lot of positive changes in the AMU. They have taken these competitions to another level."

"We have great instructors (at Camp Bullis) and we know our material, but this competition gives the guys a chance to actually step up to the firing line and apply what they teach everyday," Lewis said.

Sgt. 1st Class Dwayne Lewis competed in the Chief of Staff of the Army Rifle Match Monday. Lewis is the chief marksmanship instructor at Camp Bullis, Texas

Praslick said the motivation and morale is high among competitors.

"If you're in the Army, odds are you have a competitive spirit," Praslick said.

There will be an award ceremony Saturday at Phillips range in which Lt. Gen. Benjamin Freakly, commander of the Army Accessions Command, is scheduled to speak and present. For more information, call Mike Behnke at 706-545-3877.

Green genes

THE BAYONET
Cheryl Rodewig

There's such a wide variety of greens with flavors ranging from sharp to sweet. If you think you (or a Family member) will never eat greens, think again. These versatile foods can complement almost any recipe. Here's your guide to everything green.

Romaine lettuce: The dark green leaves of romaine are superior to regular iceberg lettuce, with a higher concentration of vitamins A, C and K, potassium and fiber and more than double the antioxidant power. Crunchy and mild, this leaf is great in a fresh salad. Discard leaves that show signs of bruising, since bacteria is more likely to hide there.

Spinach: Spinach works well in salad, soup, casseroles and lasagna, especially baby spinach, which is more tender. If you puree it, the flavor will be almost entirely masked in spaghetti or pizza sauce, though it may make the sauce a duller red (because of the chlorophyll).

Beet greens: These greens have reddish stems and are mild and sweet. Sauté them or add them to soup for added nutritional benefits without compromising flavor. Beet greens contain antioxidants like beta-carotene and lutein and several minerals and vitamins.

Arugula: This leaf has a stronger flavor. Mix it with something mild like romaine lettuce or pair it with a savory meat dish. Arugula doesn't last long in the fridge, so try to eat it within two days.

Bok choy: A member of the cabbage family, bok choy is a mild green associated with improving digestion. These long, pale leaves are a staple of Asian cuisines and work well in stir-fries. For less crunch, steam them for several minutes until the stems are limp.

Collards: Supposed to bring luck if eaten on New Year's Day, these greens do contain plenty of health benefits, including those from folate, manganese and vitamin K. Collards are freshest January through April. The tough leaves become tender after cooking, which takes about 15 minutes.

Many of these vegetables are interchangeable in recipes. They are healthy cooked and raw, since cooking greens releases the carotenoids, making them easier for the body to absorb, but raw leaves contain more vitamin C and fiber.

Choose from frozen and fresh varieties and try to eat at least one serving a day (one cup raw or half a cup cooked). Avoid canned greens, which have added preservatives and sodium. If you choose fresh leaves, wash them thoroughly to remove any dirt. Choose darker leaves for more antioxidant benefits.

No matter how you eat them, steamed, boiled, sautéed or raw, you're getting one of the world's best foods — inexpensive, readily available and incredibly healthy.

Cheryl Rodewig

The commissary carries a variety of leafy green vegetables, ranging from collards, kale and spinach to bok choy, romaine lettuce and turnip greens, in fresh, frozen and canned forms.

Think green for dinner

— Popeye the Sailor Man

THE BAYONET
Cheryl Rodewig

With St. Patrick's Day right around the corner, there's no better time to embrace eating green. Among the world's healthiest foods, leafy greens contain a wealth of nutrients, but that doesn't mean they're a favorite choice for dinner — with children or adults.

"It's very simple: you must eat your spinach," wrote Dr. Steven Pratt in SuperFoods Rx. "Spinach has more demonstrated health benefits than almost any other food. Is this because spinach is really one of the best foods in the world? Yes and no. Yes, because it is an incredibly nutritious food with a stunning roster of benefits. No, only because there may be other foods — particularly other dark green leafy vegetables like kale and collards — that are comparably nutritious."

Leafy greens, including spinach, Swiss chard, mustard and turnip greens, kale and arugula, are grown in cold weather, from early fall to late spring, and are eaten the world over. Low in calories, these greens pack a nutritional wallop, containing minerals like copper, zinc, iron and magnesium, plenty of fiber, antioxidants, vitamins for almost every letter and even some protein.

"The old adage, 'you are what you eat,' that is so true," said Donna Kelly, who facilitated a workshop on preventative medicine for the Fort Benning Women's Conference.

"If you eat well, you're going to feel better and have more energy," she said.

Good nutrition isn't as much about gratifying personal tastes as it is about eating what the body needs. This is especially true when it comes to trying to get children to actually eat greens, instead of rearranging them on their plate.

"I sometimes think that parents forget that they should be promoting what's good for their children, not necessarily catering to what their children like," said Kelly, head nurse of the Martin Army Ob/Gyn clinic. "Infants should be offered vegetables before they are ever offered fruits, so that they can develop a taste for them. If your infant makes a face, it doesn't necessarily mean he doesn't like vegetables. It's an acquired taste."

Even with older children, it's not too late to start. Kelly said she hated spinach when she was 7 — she even spent a night at the dinner table refusing to finish her serving of the food — but now she likes it.

With her own children, Kelly tried a wide variety of greens. When they lived in the Philippines, for example, they ate bok choy. Kelly's son Joshua, a former Fort Benning Ranger, actually liked spinach as a child.

"When he was young he idolized Popeye the Sailor and wanted to eat spinach so that he could have 'muskles' like Popeye," Kelly said.

As it turns out, Popeye and Joshua may have had the right idea.

Leafy greens regulate blood clots and limit inflammation, said Katherine Hines, a dietician at St. Francis Hospital. They can also help prevent osteoporosis and cardiovascular disease.

For those who can't get past the texture of these green leaves, Hines suggested "hiding" them in a vegetable soup or sandwich wrap.

Kelly said her husband, who hates spinach, will eat it in a dip or casserole.

With the varieties of leafy greens, the different ways to serve them and the many healthy reasons for eating them, it is easy being green — at least in the kitchen.

St. Patrick's Pancakes

2 cups flour — 1/4 cup milk
2 eggs — 1 diced zucchini
Half a banana — 2 leaves of beet greens
2 teaspoons baking soda

1. Mix all ingredients in a blender until smooth and thick.
2. Add extra beet greens if desired.
3. Cook green pancakes until lightly browned and sprinkle with cinnamon.

Hidden Veggie Spaghetti

12 ounces tomato paste
15 ounces crushed tomatoes
1 1/2 cup spinach
1 onion, sauteed
1 cup diced carrot
1 tablespoon garlic
Pasta

1. If spinach was frozen, thaw and pat dry.
2. Mix sauce ingredients together. Puree in a blender if desired.
3. Add onion powder and pepper to taste.
4. Toss with pasta and serve.

CAA GRANTS

CAA, an available grant, provides up to $3,000 per year for two years for eligible spouses. Spouses must have a high school diploma, GED or some college, one year remaining at Fort Benning, and two years remaining on current enlistments.

Soldiers must be privates to sergeants, or second lieutenants to captains.

The funds can be used to complete post-secondary training or at any of Georgia's two-year community and technical colleges. The grant can also be used for training that will lead to a state-approved credential or license such as an approved certificate from a continuing education program or approved education service provider.

For more information, call 706-545-7397 or go to the Army Education Center at Building 2602, Soldiers' Plaza.

EFMP ENROLLMENT

The Exceptional Family Member Program has mandatory enrollment for special needs Family members (child or spouse). Enrollment doesn't hurt the Soldier's career but assists military personnel divisions in considering medical and educational needs of the Family member in the assignment process.

Enrollment is necessary if the spouse or child meets the following criteria: asthma, a current or past mental health diagnosis, a high-risk pregnancy, cancer (past or present), attention deficit disorder or diabetes. For resource information and referrals, call 706-545-5521.

PRESCHOOL PROGRAM

Tot Town offers a half-day preschool program from 1:30 to 4:30 p.m. Monday through Friday. For more information, call 706-689-8698.

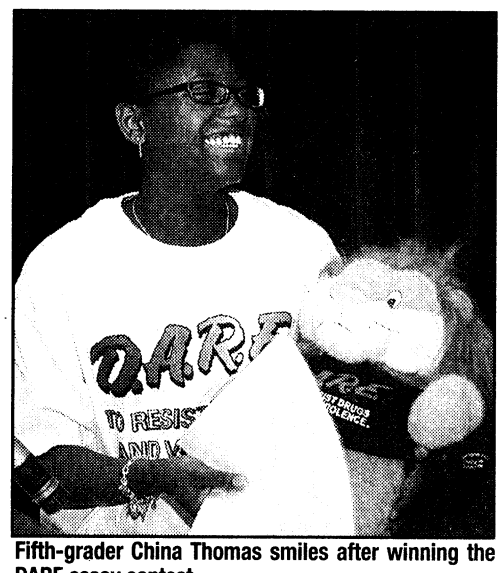
Master Sgt. Gregory Shaw, Special Reaction Team OIC, Department of Emergency Services, and guest speaker at the McBride Elementary School DARE graduation March 7, talks to 29 fifth-graders, teachers and Family members. The DARE program teaches children about the dangers of drugs and alcohol.

DARE teaches students lifelong lessons

THE BAYONET
Brenda Donnell



Twenty-nine McBride Elementary School fifth graders graduated from the Drug Abuse Resistance Education program March 7.

DARE program Officer Mark O'Neal said children are taught about the dangers of alcohol and drugs, including tobacco use.

O'Neal said the information students learn during the DARE program is important in today's world because more than half of Georgia inmates are imprisoned because of drugs.

During the program, O'Neal, a retired sergeant first class, incorporates several methods to keep children interested in what they are learning, such as playing games, watching educational DVDs and role playing.

"They gave us situations and told us to act out the situations," said Tekiyah Jackson, 11, who said role playing was her favorite DARE program activity.

Children said some of the most important things they learned were the causes and effects of drugs, how to say no and how to stay away from drugs.

"If the schools didn't have (the program), then kids like me wouldn't get educated about drugs, and they would be more likely to do them," said Bailey Blocker, 10.

DARE, founded in 1983 in Los Angeles, gives children the skills they need to avoid involvement in drugs, gangs and violence, according to the DARE Web site.

The program is now implemented in 75 percent of the nation's school districts and in more than 43 countries around the world.

DARE is a police officer-led series of classroom lessons that teach children from kindergarten through 12th grade how to resist peer pressure and live productive drug and violence-free lives. The program is designed to be taught by experienced police officers who can answer tough questions.

Hospital to celebrate anniversary

Historical information wanted for April commemoration

THE BAYONET
Rachel L. Watkins

It was 1958 when Martin Army Community Hospital's doors opened. The hospital, which cost $8 million to build, was named after the late Maj. Gen. Joseph I. Martin. At one time the hospital had 500 beds, nurses' barracks and medical tents. Now, there are 70 beds, an office building, new barracks and parking lots where there used to be grass.

It was built to replace the hospital on Baltzell Avenue, which until Friday was the National Infantry Museum. (The staff closed its doors to the public in order to prepare the collection for its move to the new museum, which opens next year.)

Past and present staff will celebrate the hospital's 50th anniversary in April.

George Berry started his job at Martin Army Community Hospital in 1966. After 42 years, Berry, who works in the textile department, said he still enjoys working at the hospital because his coworkers are friendly. Berry remembers when rooms were full of wounded Vietnam Soldiers, and Operation Baby Lift, when 2,000 babies were airlifted from Vietnam during the fall of Saigon and sent to the United States. Some of the babies were taken to Martin Army Community Hospital.

Terry Beckwith, Public Affairs officer at Martin Army Community Hospital, said there are plans to add a $144 million wing to the hospital and expand the intensive care unit and inpatient services.

"The hospital is an integral part of this installation," she said. "We provide health care to 78,000 patients."

Beckwith said with the BRAC influx she is expecting at least another 20,000 patients.

Beckwith hopes to make either a book or pamphlet about the history of Martin Army Community Hospital and she is asking for any mementos, photos or memories people have of the hospital. Historical information about the hospital can be e-mailed to Terry.Beckwith@us.army.mil or sent to: USAMEDDAC Public Affairs Officer, 7950 Martin Loop, Room 106, Fort Benning, GA 31905.

Women's Conference

Brenda Donnell

Michele Bentfeld, left, of Sunday's Ultimate Day Spa, gives Christen Nenking a massage Wednesday during the fifth annual Fort Benning Women's Conference at the Benning Club. Between 320-380 people attended, said Tandi Morris, Women's Conference coordinator. Cynthia Stevens Graubart, who lives in Atlanta, was the guest speaker. Graubart is an author, speaker, former cooking show television producer and the co-author of The One-Armed Cook: Quick and Easy Recipes, Smart Meal Plans and Savvy Advice for New (and not-so-new) Moms. The Women's Conference is planned and executed entirely by enlisted and officer spouse volunteers, Morris said.

Camp needs counselors

THE BAYONET
Cheryl Rodewig

The Muscular Dystrophy Association needs volunteers for Camp Walk 'n' Roll, an annual summer camp designed for kids who have muscular dystrophy.

At the camp in Rutledge, Ga., children like Brandon Rice, a 13-year-old from Fort Benning, have the opportunity to participate in a wide range of activities, from boating to wheelchair soccer, which many of them wouldn't experience otherwise.

"I love having Soldiers as counselors," said Peggy Hood, MDA camp director. "First of all, because I am an Army brat and have a deep love of our military, and secondly, they make great counselors."

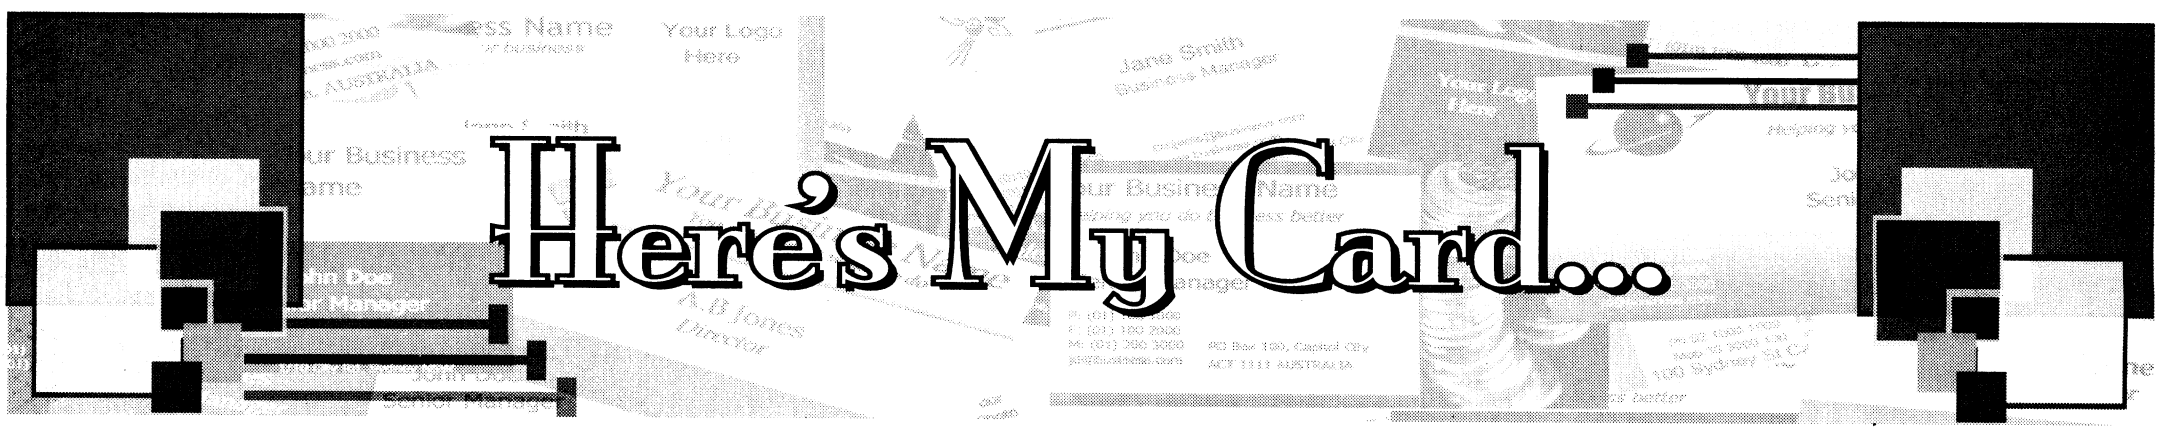
Hood said several Fort Benning Soldiers usually volunteer, but last year was the first time no Soldiers were counselors — and the camp suffered as a result.

Staff Sgt. Billy and Catie Rice, Brandon's parents, want to help get the word out about the need for volunteers. Catie said she will even help fill out and mail forms.

"This is something I am so passionate about, as I have seen Brandon reap the benefits of it for years," Catie said. "I have set a personal goal with Peggy to try and get 36 Soldiers there this year — the most troops who have ever (gone) to camp at once is 35."

Volunteers arrive July 26 for orientation and camp begins the following day, lasting less than a week.

The only requirements are the ability to lift and care for a young person, pass their background check and be ready to have fun with the kids, Hood said.



"It is so eye-opening and heart-touching," she said. "We've had Soldiers reduced to tears by the end of the week because these kids are amazing, and you end up taking away as much as you give."

Brandon keeps in touch with counselors he's met there, Catie said. He starts getting excited about camp in January.

He can't walk anymore or even hold a water bottle, but Brandon can participate in camp activities like fishing, formal dances and swimming.

"Being a Soldier, I've been shot at and everything else, but I don't think my job is nearly as hard as what my son goes through every day," Billy said. "They say that the NCOs are the backbone of the Army and the same goes for the volunteers. Without those volunteers that get the job done, (the camp) wouldn't be there."

The National Civil War Naval Museum displays the remains of CSS Jackson and CSS Chattahoochee and re-creations of ships, such as the USS Hartford. The largest Civil War naval flag exhibit is also located there. Weddings, receptions and other events can be held in the galleries at the museum. Naval re-enactors from around the nation will be at RiverBlast, an annual event open to the public, March 29-30 from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

National Civil War Naval Museum in Port Columbus

History comes alive through displays, graphics, year-round events

THE BAYONET
Brenda Donnell

Columbus Port Authority's National Civil War Naval Museum is an interesting adventure for almost anyone, whether they are interested in the Civil War, the American Navy and Marine Corps or just want to learn more about sea life.

Upon arriving at the museum at 1002 Victory Drive in Columbus, visitors will see the foundation of the CSS Water Witch, a replica of the USS Water Witch, originally built in 1852 for the U.S. Navy.

Although the USS Water Witch was burned in 1864 to prevent its capture, in the coming months, it will be rebuilt by modern fabricators. The new smoke stack, 90-foot masts and the ribs will soon be put in place outside the museum, said Stewart McWhorter, museum director of communications.

Once built, the ship will be open for viewing and educational events. Those who want to be part of the building process, can purchase planks. Information is available on the Web site, which is listed below.

Inside the museum, the hull of the ironclad ram, CSS Jackson, and a 30-foot section of the stern and steam engines from the Confederate gunboat, CSS Chattahoochee, are on display.

There is also a full-scale replica of the ironclad USS Monitor's famous turret and part of its deck with a series of panels illustrating technical details of the Monitor and USS Virginia (Merrimac).

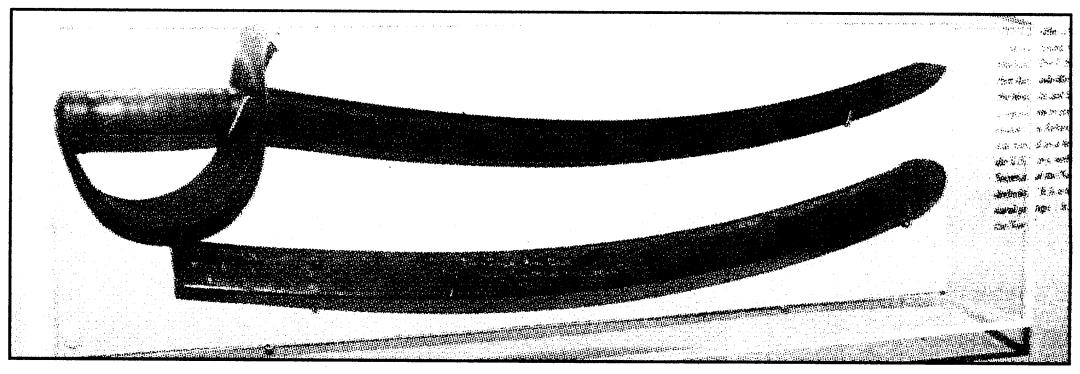
Many artifacts such as weapons, uniforms and other items are also on display.

The museum also hosts many events throughout the year.

RiverBlast features naval re-enactors from around the nation. It is an annual event open to the public and will be March 29-30 from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

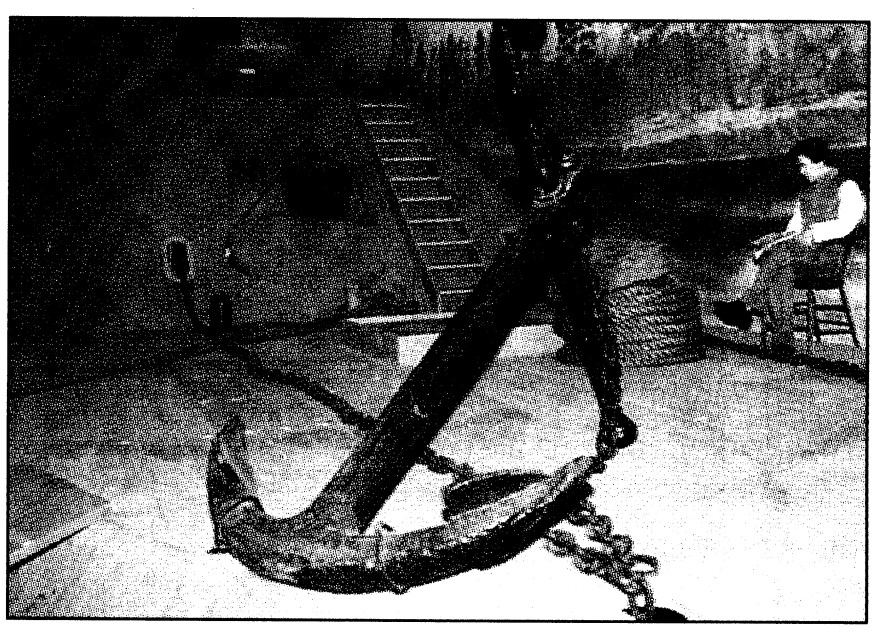
The program this year, School of the Sailor, is for those who are currently in sea-service branches or for those who want to learn more about it.

Hands-on sessions include firing and performing drills on the great gun, an original seven-inch Brook rifle; row training on six-oar cutters; landing party training on the cutters; cutlass and pike drills; making, arming and installing torpedoes; Navy signals; period muster and pay; and bivouac on the banks of the Chattahoochee River.



During the summer months, the museum staff offers "Cool History," open to the public, for a fee. Topics vary each session.

Summer camps are also held at the museum in June and July for children, 9 to 13 years old. Level 1 is from June 16 to 20, Level 2 is from June 23 to 27 and Level 3 is from July 14 to 18.



Activities include cannon and cutlass drills, learning nautical terms and how to use signal flags, life on ships and more. The previous level must be completed to progress to the next level.

The cost is $125 per child, which includes lunch each day and a T-shirt at the end of the camp. Hours are from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. Space is limited in each of the camps, and McWhorter recommends parents call and reserve early.

Other events include Pirates of the Chattahoochee, Victorian Holiday House and a history symposium.

This Confederate naval cutlass was captured by USS Monticello sailors at New Bern, N.C., March 14, 1862, during a joint amphibious attack by Union navy and army forces.

For more information about events or for other questions, visit www.civilwarnavalmuseum.com or call 706-327-9798. The museum is open from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. seven days a week.

BOOK REVIEW

Author provides more information about Battle of the Bulge

BAYONET CORRESPONDENT
Maj. Matthew Archambault

We remember history as we learned it, and we often learn history by way of big names, big ideas and big events. There's the Renaissance, the Age of Enlightenment, Industrial Revolution, The Roaring Twenties and the Great Depression to name a few.

This method serves its purpose, but it also tends to obscure the real stories, the personal stories and the painted dots in the Monet. A case in point is that the Battle of the Bulge and Bastogne are nearly synonymous, yet the German offensive salient involved more than just the men from the 101st. Robert McDonald found there was more to the Bulge than Bastogne, and he provides his discovery in The Hotton Report.

McDonald is also the author of the Wall Street novel The Altar Boy, but it wasn't the financial district that led him to research World War II operations in Belgium — it was his father. He begins The Hotton Report with the revelation his father's letters caused him. Sure, he knew his father had been in World War II, but that's where his knowledge ended. At first, the picture is murky, and the image conjured by the letters and newspaper articles seem contradictory to the image he held of his father. The situation required more attention.

From there, The Hotton Report becomes a thorough account about what happened December 1944 in a little known village. The players involved are the primary reason Hotton is such an obscure name, not its operational importance. Only two men, Maj. Gen. Maurice Rose of the 3rd Armored Division and then-Col. Robert Howze Jr., rise above the fray and make an indelible mark on World War II history. Beyond these two men, the approximately 360 Americans who occupy Hotton were nothing but a hodge-podge of clerks, Signal Corps Soldiers, and headquarters troops. Only 30 had actual combat experience prior to Dec. 20, 1944.

Quartered in different sections of the village and under separate chains of command, they are as unaware of each as they are of the Germans. This turns out to be a blessing and a curse as the ubiquitous fog of war not only confounds them, but also the nearly 2,500 combat-hardened German troops closing in on them.

McDonald does an admirable job of piecing together Hotton's importance in the Allied and Axis schemes of maneuver. He includes pictures of key players at the end of each chapter, which links faces to names and brings the text to life. However, where McDonald succeeds at presenting a well-researched battle, he fails at providing the human element he alluded to in his prologue.

There is background information for some players, but for the most part, the book does not deliver the anticipated revelation about his father. This is an excellent account of a battle little recognized until now. There are numerous lessons for future tactical-level commanders to learn from within The Hotton Report not least among them: unity of command, communication in the chain of command and coordination with those on the left and the right. I also recommend this to anyone touring Belgium. It would make for an excellent staff ride text, but even if you don't make the trek, tab the two maps that illustrate Hotton's area of Belgium and the diagram of Hotton itself. Referencing back to these pages becomes essential to understanding how the action unfolds.

To order a copy of the book, go to http://www.finbarpress.com/thehottonreport.html.

DOOMSDAY

When a pandemic, called the Reaper virus, threatens to wipe out the human race, government authorities quarantine Scotland, where the outbreak is worst.

Years later, the virus resurfaces in London, and Department of Domestic Security Chief Bill Nelson (Bob Hoskins) is shown satellite photos of survivors in the quarantine — meaning there must be a cure.

Nelson and a team of specialists venture into the forsaken land to discover this cure, coming face-to-face with the feral survivors who were deserted years before.

Doomsday is rated R for violence, language, sexual content and nudity.

DR. SEUSS' HORTON HEARS A WHO

The imaginative elephant Horton (Jim Carrey) hears a cry for help coming from the Mayor of Who-ville (Steve Carell), who lives on a tiny speck of dust floating through the air.

Suspecting there may be life on that speck and despite a surrounding community which thinks he has lost his mind, Horton is determined to help.

Horton Hears A Who is rated G.

NEVER BACK DOWN

Jake Tyler (Sean Faris) has recently moved to Orlando, Fla., with his family to support his younger brother's shot at a professional tennis career. Jake was a star athlete on the football team at home, but in this new city he is an outsider.

At the invitation of a flirtatious classmate, Baja (Amber Heard), Jake goes to a party where he is unwittingly pulled into a fight with a bully. He is defeated, but a classmate introduces himself to Jake and tells him about the sport known as mixed martial arts.

Never Back Down is rated PG-13 for thematic material, violence, sexuality, partying and language.

Also Playing
10,000 B.C.

In a remote mountain tribe, the young hunter, D'Leh, has found his heart's passion, the beautiful Evolet.

When a band of mysterious warlords raid his village and kidnap Evolet, D'Leh is forced to lead a small group of hunters to pursue the warlords.

They battle saber-tooth tigers and prehistoric predators and even uncover a lost civilization.

THE BANK JOB

A car dealer with a dodgy past and a new family, Terry (Jason Statham) has always avoided scams. But when Martine (Saffron Burrows), a beautiful model from his old neighborhood, offers him a lead on a foolproof bank hit on London's Baker Street, Terry seizes the opportunity.

Martine targets a roomful of safe deposit boxes worth millions in cash and jewelry, but Terry doesn't realize the boxes also contain a treasure trove of dirty secrets.

The secrets thrust them into a web of corruption spanning London's criminal underworld, the highest echelons of the British government and the Royal Family itself.

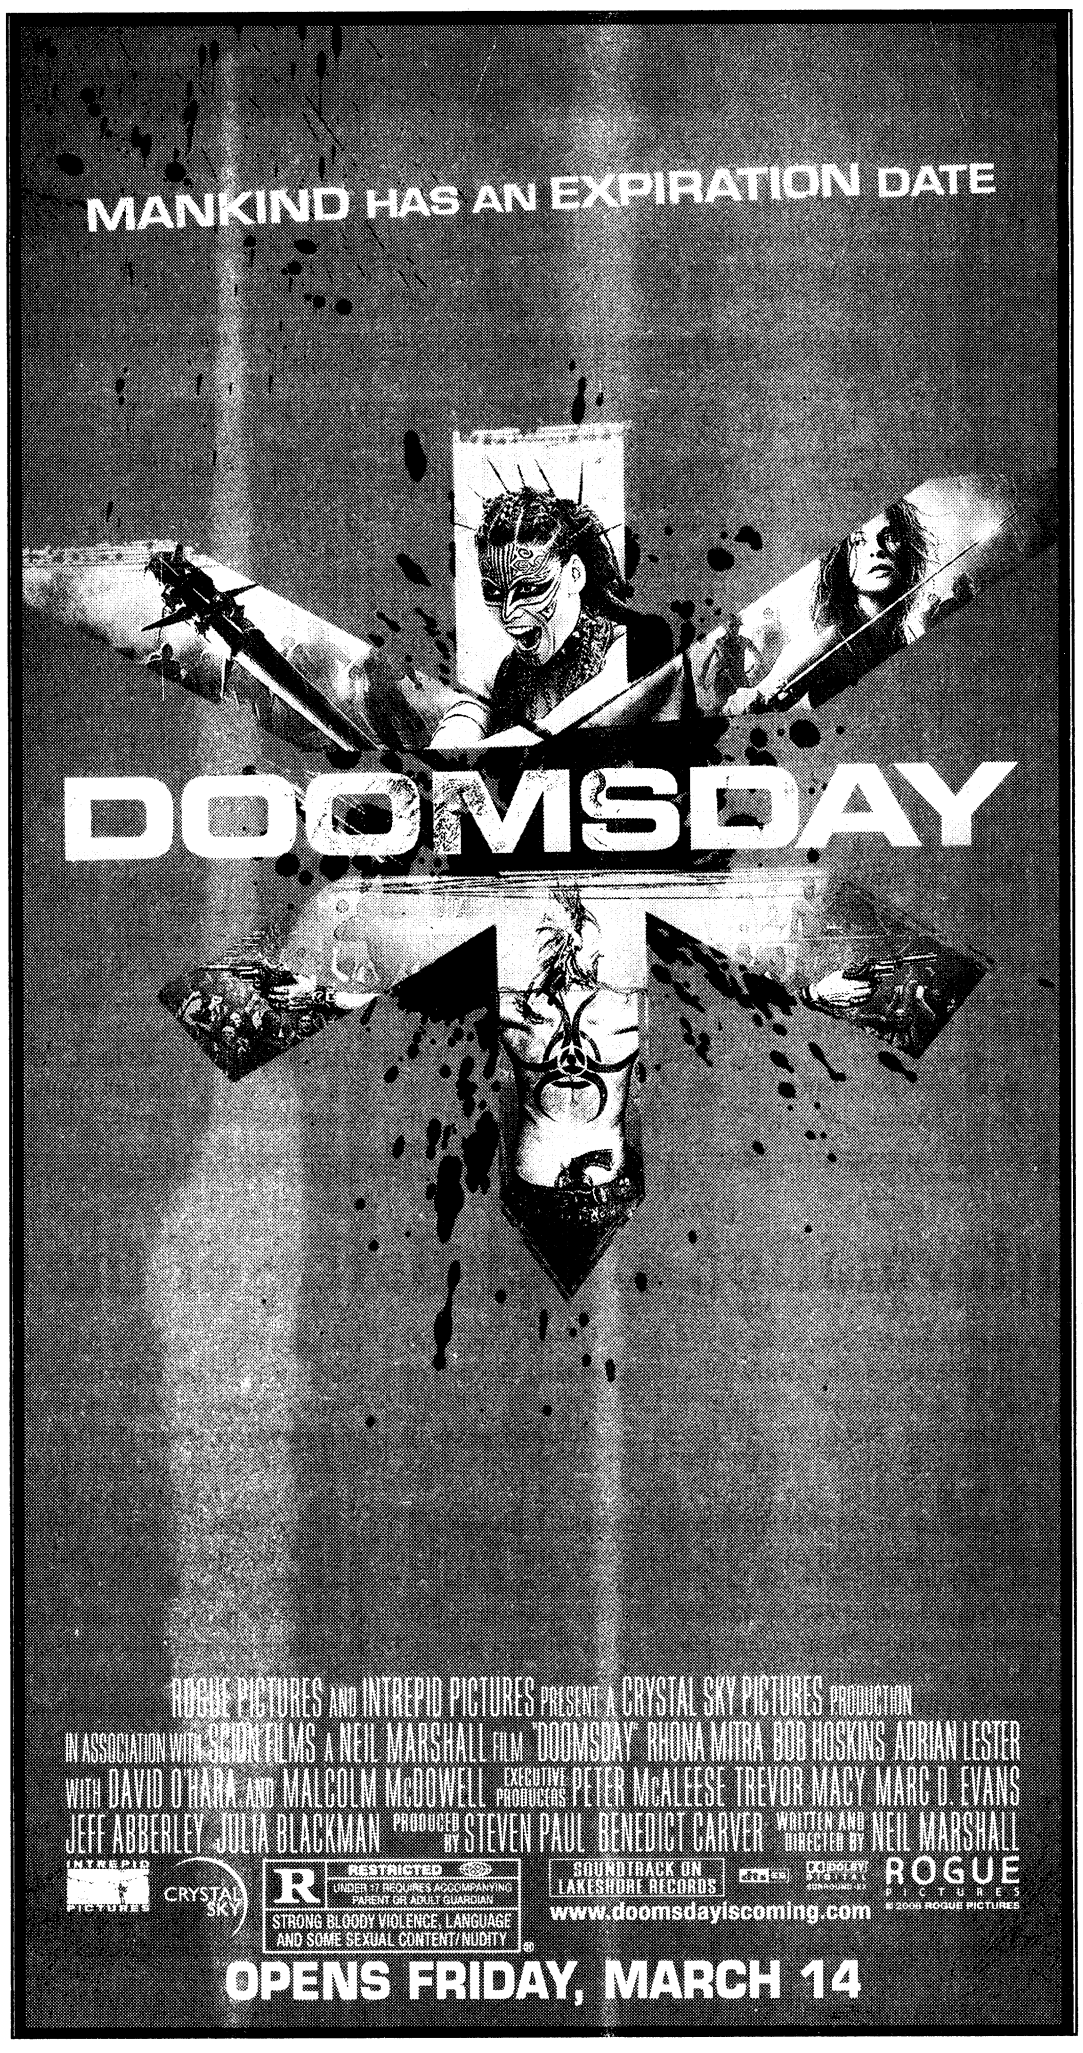
COLLEGE ROAD TRIP

Melanie (Raven-Symoné) is looking forward to taking her first step towards independence when she plans a road trip to check out prospective universities.

However, when her imposing police-chief dad (Martin Lawrence) insists on escorting her instead, she soon finds her dream trip turning into a nightmare. Even as dad and daughter bicker and careen from one disaster to the next, they discover something about the value of family bonds.

College Road Trip is rated G.



THE OTHER BOLEYN GIRL

Sisters Anne and Mary Boleyn (Natalie Portman and Scarlett Johansson) are driven by their father and uncle to advance the family's status by courting the affections of the King of England (Eric Bana).

Leaving their country life, the girls are thrust into the dangerous world of court life, where a rivalry develops between them for the love of the king.

Initially, Mary wins King Henry's favor and becomes his mistress, but the clever and conniving Anne, determined to become Queen of England, edges aside both her sister and Henry's wife, Queen Katherine of Aragon (Ana Torrent).

First there was Jim Rhodes, the World War II veteran who heads up the local Medal of Honor Day ceremony at the Government Center in Columbus.

"Lord, what they went through," said Rhodes, speaking of the five men from Columbus who received the nation's highest military honor. "What can you say? They are our heroes."

Retired Lt. Gen. Bill Caldwell III, who spoke Tuesday on the anniversary of the first National Medal of Honor Day, borrowed from Army regulation limiting the award to one who distinguishes himself "conspicuously by gallantry and intrepidity at the risk of his life above and beyond the call of duty."

"But what does it really, truly represent?" Caldwell said. "Well, it's so important the president awards it. More than 70 percent of those who receive it do so posthumously. The

Drought remains a concern

The drought in the Southeast is not yet over. Despite recent rainfalls in the Chattahoochee Valley, the area still suffers from a moderate drought.

"We had quite a bit of rainfall in February and that helped some, but I wouldn't say we're out of the woods yet," said William Wheaton, assistant site manager for Lawson Army Airfield weather station. "We're about five inches above where we were last year, one inch above the average for this time, but going into the summer is what's going to tell the tale."

Cities farther north, like LaGrange, are in a severe drought, while north Georgia is under extreme drought conditions.

Winter and spring months tend to be wetter than summer and fall, said Dan Darbe, senior meteorologist at the National Weather Service in Peachtree City, Ga., but conditions will likely worsen to some extent as summer approaches.

Wet weather systems have been passing through Georgia, bringing rain with them, every

Hal Moore challenges trainees to grow spiritually

Photos by Bridgett Siter

Basic training Soldiers welcome retired Lt. Gen. Hal Moore to the podium Sunday during the Easter Worship Service on Sand Hill. Nearly 4,000 Soldiers attended the event.

Moore autographs a book for a Soldier after the service. The co-author of We Were Soldiers Once ... and Young, Moore encouraged his audience to "prepare to make the cut," a term he uses often when referring to salvation and eternity. "Do not think for one moment that you can wait until you're my age to know your God," he said.

When he was 10 years old, Matthew Reynolds read retired Lt. Gen. Hal Moore's We Were Soldiers Once ... and Young, a 400-page, blow-by-blow account of the bloody battle between 450 American Soldiers and 2,000 North Vietnamese in the Ia Drang Valley. He's read it three times since.

The author is his "personal hero," said Pvt. Reynolds, who "just about freaked out" when he learned last week that Moore would speak at the Easter Worship Service on Sand Hill.

"It's his tactics on the battlefield. He's one of the greatest military minds ever," said Reynolds, one of nearly 4,000 basic training Soldiers who gathered on Kanell Field to hear 86-year-old Moore speak on a subject far removed from their daily dose of combat tactics and training.

"Are you prepared to make the cut?" he asked them, employing a phrase he uses frequently to refer to salvation. "All of us have the God-given opportunity to qualify in this temporal life on earth for eternal life with God in heaven."

There was no altar call, no tears of repentance or public confessions of faith, but Moore's sermon was drawn to prompt a reaction from the mass

Basic training Soldiers learn to live

"I think one of the main reasons Soldiers get killed in combat is because of lack of knowledge," said Pvt. Branson Tyler, one of 220 Soldiers from the 3rd Battalion, 47th Infantry Regiment, who tested their skills during the company's first field training exercise on Sand Hill Friday.

The training measured basic Soldier skills necessary for combat.

"If a Soldier leaves here doing the right thing, then once he gets on the battlefield, he will feel confident and know how to react in a given situation," said Sgt. 1st Class Anthony White, senior drill sergeant.

After a three-mile foot march, the Soldiers established a 360-degree perimeter and set up tents and shelters for their gear. They dug hasty fighting positions and emplaced claymore mines, among other tasks. After a day of training, they slept in fighting positions, with one in charge of security while the other slept.

Most of the training was new to Spc. Chris Reyes.

"The most challenging aspect has been working as a team, because some learners are visual and some are auditory," he said.

Soldiers will learn basic marksmanship next week, which includes assembling and reassembling an M-16A2. They will graduate in May.

COMMANDER'S COLUMN

197th Infantry Brigade mission directly aids Global War on Terrorism with training support of Infantry skills

COMMANDING GENERAL
Maj. Gen. Walter Wojdakowski

Contributions to the Global War on Terrorism at home are often hard to measure. Most of the time, our Fort Benning Soldiers perform their duties and go about their daily business with little or no fanfare. But, the truth is, our Soldiers have great impact on the Army's mission both here and overseas.

The 197th Infantry Brigade, for example, has tremendous bearing on how our Soldiers fight and win today's war. With more than 1,400 assigned Soldiers, Civilians and contractors, the 197th touches nearly every aspect of our training and wartime missions on the installation. The countless tasks performed by the brigade's three battalions are truly remarkable in all respects and evidence of the great things these Soldiers do can be seen every day.

The brigade trains or supports nearly every course taught on Fort Benning in one way or another. I would venture to say, this unit will ultimately influence each Soldier in the Army during his or her military career. But locally, there are 14,000 Soldiers training on Fort Benning any given day, and I know the 197th touches them.

They cover Blackhawk helicopter support to the Ranger Training Brigade, medical coverage to every Infantry Airborne parachute jump and provide instructor and logistical support to all units on Sand Hill conducting initial entry training for new Soldiers.

The brigade also instructs a number of functional courses at Fort Benning and trains the Army around the world with mobile training teams. Among more than 30 courses taught or led by the brigade are the Bradley Master Gunner Course, the U.S. Army Infantry Mortar Leader Course, the Stryker Leader Course, and schools that fall under the brigade are the U.S. Army Sniper School and the U.S. Army Combatives School. In addition to the instructional missions, the 197th is the proponent for 26 field manuals, training circulars, and special texts covering weapon systems from the 9 mm pistol to the Bradley and Stryker platforms, as well as many other combat critical skills. Many of these products are used by our sister services and some agencies outside the Department of Defense.

Perhaps the most apparent support to the fight is the work done at the Continental United States (CONUS) Replacement Center (CRC), one of three battalions assigned to the 197th Infantry Brigade. The CRC deploys and redeploys approximately 32,000 Soldiers, DA Civilians, and contractors every year. To put that in perspective, that's equivalent to 10 brigade combat teams heading to the fight or coming home. It is truly a remarkable feat!

Clearly this brigade has a diverse and complex mission. The 197th does a tremendous job in training these key and essential skills for the Infantry and the Army. In addition to their daily training missions, the brigade and its assigned battalions execute the Army's annual International Sniper Competition and the Army Combatives Invitational Tournament.

The 197th Infantry Brigade is representative of the dedicated support all of our units give to the Army. I am very proud of all Soldiers, Civilians and contractors for the work they do at Fort Benning to make us Army Strong. The great Soldiers and Civilians of the 197th truly live their motto daily, Forever Forward! Their work directly translates to success on the battlefield. Keep up the good work.

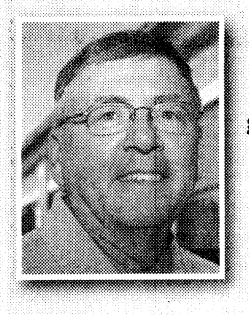
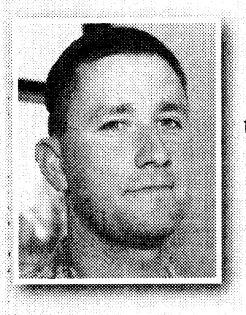
VARIOUS VOICES

Why do you like or dislike text messaging?



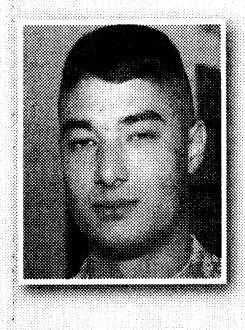
I don't like text messaging because it gives people an excuse not to talk.

— Jessica Troutman, Directorate of Family Morale, Welfare and Recreation



I like the fact that you can have a thought, text it and then send it without having a conversation.

— Leah Lynch, Family member



You have to go through too many gyrations.

— Retired Master Sgt. Edward Wojtowicz,

I like it because it's easier to send a text than to call. It's quicker.

— Sgt. Matthew Pennington, HHC, 197th Infantry Regiment

— 2nd Lt. Jason Didomenico, 42nd Infantry Division, 50th Brigade

I dislike it. I'm old fashioned and prefer the home telephone. I see a lot of people text messaging when they are driving, and that's too much going on while people are driving.

I recently embraced text messaging, although I fought the technology for a long time, because I didn't really see the point. Why take the time to text when you can just as easily call the person? I didn't get it. Then I realized sending short text messages could actually save me time, because I no longer had to go through the usual phone routine before I got my question asked — "How are you? We're good. Yeah, the weather has been unusually warm lately..." Instead, I could type "R we still meeting L8R," much easier.

Though I've just discovered this convenient form of communication, texting isn't a new concept. In fact, short message service was developed by NASA in 1989. It wasn't a widespread phenomenon until the mid-90s. Of course, this rise in use also means a rise in a new dangerous activity.

Texting while driving is the newest form of distracted driving. According to a report released by the University of Utah, texting behind the wheel is 50 percent more dangerous than talking on a cell phone while driving. Perhaps data like this is the reason some states have enacted laws banning the activity. Another poll found that 89 percent of Americans believe texting while driving should be outlawed. However, it also revealed that 57 percent of those surveyed admitted to texting while driving. I know I'm guilty.

So why do we do it if we know it's wrong? Simple, because we live in a perfect world, where nothing can go wrong, and we're invincible. Or so we think. Unfortunately this isn't true. We often forget that when we operate an automobile, we are not only taking our own lives into our hands, but also the lives of those who share the road with us. We have a responsibility to make rational decisions and to concentrate on the road ahead, not worry about trying to save a couple of minutes by responding to a text or answering a call. You never know, that couple of minutes you save may just cost you your life, KWIM?

BAYONET CORRESPONDENT
Erin A. Nash

St. Patrick's Day is one of my favorite holidays. I love to celebrate my Irish heritage and the fact that my name is Erin, which means "Ireland." But this year was different. March 17 was the funeral of my beloved grandfather, Big Daddy.

I had to call my mom to find out why I've been calling my grandfather Big Daddy for the last 33 years. Apparently, in a joking manner, my father told my sister and I to call my grandfather Big Daddy. We did, and it stuck. Big Daddy didn't mind the nickname, but my sister and I were the only ones who could call him that.

His real name was Albert. When I first found out I was pregnant nine years ago, I told my husband if the baby was a boy, his middle name was going to be Albert, no ifs, ands or buts about it. Luckily, I did have a boy, and we named him Addison Albert. Big Daddy always called him Double A.

Big Daddy was the grandparent I always felt closest to. He pulled out my first tooth when I was 6. He and my grandmother took my sister and me on day trips around Massachusetts. I learned a lot of adult words on those trips. I also learned how to sit and enjoy watching golf on TV, not always an easy feat. He was a Boston Red Sox fan, so I was too.

When my Family traveled back to Massachusetts earlier this month, it was a shock to see Big Daddy so frail. He always seemed larger than life to me. I knew it would be the last time I saw him. On March 13, Big Daddy passed away.

Big Daddy was a veteran of World War II who spent time in France and Germany. He put a good fright into me the first time my husband deployed in 2001.

"When is he going to get back?" he asked me. I told him I had no idea.

"Well, I was gone for a couple of years," he told me. Not what I wanted to hear.

Although I was grieving on St. Patrick's Day, I was also celebrating — celebrating the life of a good man, the man who gave me my Irish heritage.

It couldn't have been a more fitting day to remember him.

Post celebrates Women's History Month at March 20 luncheon

Professor Mara Adamitz Scrupe, a professor of art at Columbus State University, spoke at the Fort Benning's Women's History Month luncheon March 20 at the Benning Club.

Scrupe has created many environmentally-conscious art projects, including landscapes; posters; illuminated vegetable forms to address bioengineering and fossil fuel use; and a solar-powered "Hornet's Nest" to depict the overthrow of an abandoned construction site.

Her artwork has been featured in museums, parks, universities and other sites in the U.S., Asia and Europe.

Scrupe talked about how traditional roles helped many generations of women embrace creativity, courage in the face of adversity and making connections in the world.

Scrupe said she is perceived as a role model, but she doesn't think being a leader means giving people orders. It's a constant struggle for most women, she said.

"A lot of the time, it's about kindness, caring, being involved in people's lives, knowing them and caring about who they are, not just in the office, but also personally," she said. "I think women do a pretty good job of that. We balance roles — we like to be seen as assertive and in charge as leaders, which is a bonus, but also a challenge."

Nancy Engel, a professional singer and actor, gave her interpretation of the life and accomplishments of Pulitzer prize-wining novelist, short story writer and playwright, Edna Ferber.

Frank R. Loyd Elementary School children performed The National Anthem and gave oral recitations by famous women in history.

Their interpretation of I'm Every Woman, a 1978 hit single by Chaka Khan that was later recorded in 1992 by Whitney Houston, was a hit with the audience, who laughed and clapped as the children sang and strutted around the stage.

Combatives School opens at new location on Main Post

Combatives School opens at Briant Wells Field House after building undergoes $500,000 in renovations

THE BAYONET
Rachel L. Watkins

"We have to be trained for the last three feet of the fight — that's what combatives is all about," said Matt Larsen, director and founder of the Combatives School. He spoke at the grand opening of the new Combatives School Monday at the former Briant Wells Field House. The building, vacated after Smith Fitness Center opened, has undergone $500,000 in renovations and will be a permanent location for the Combatives School.

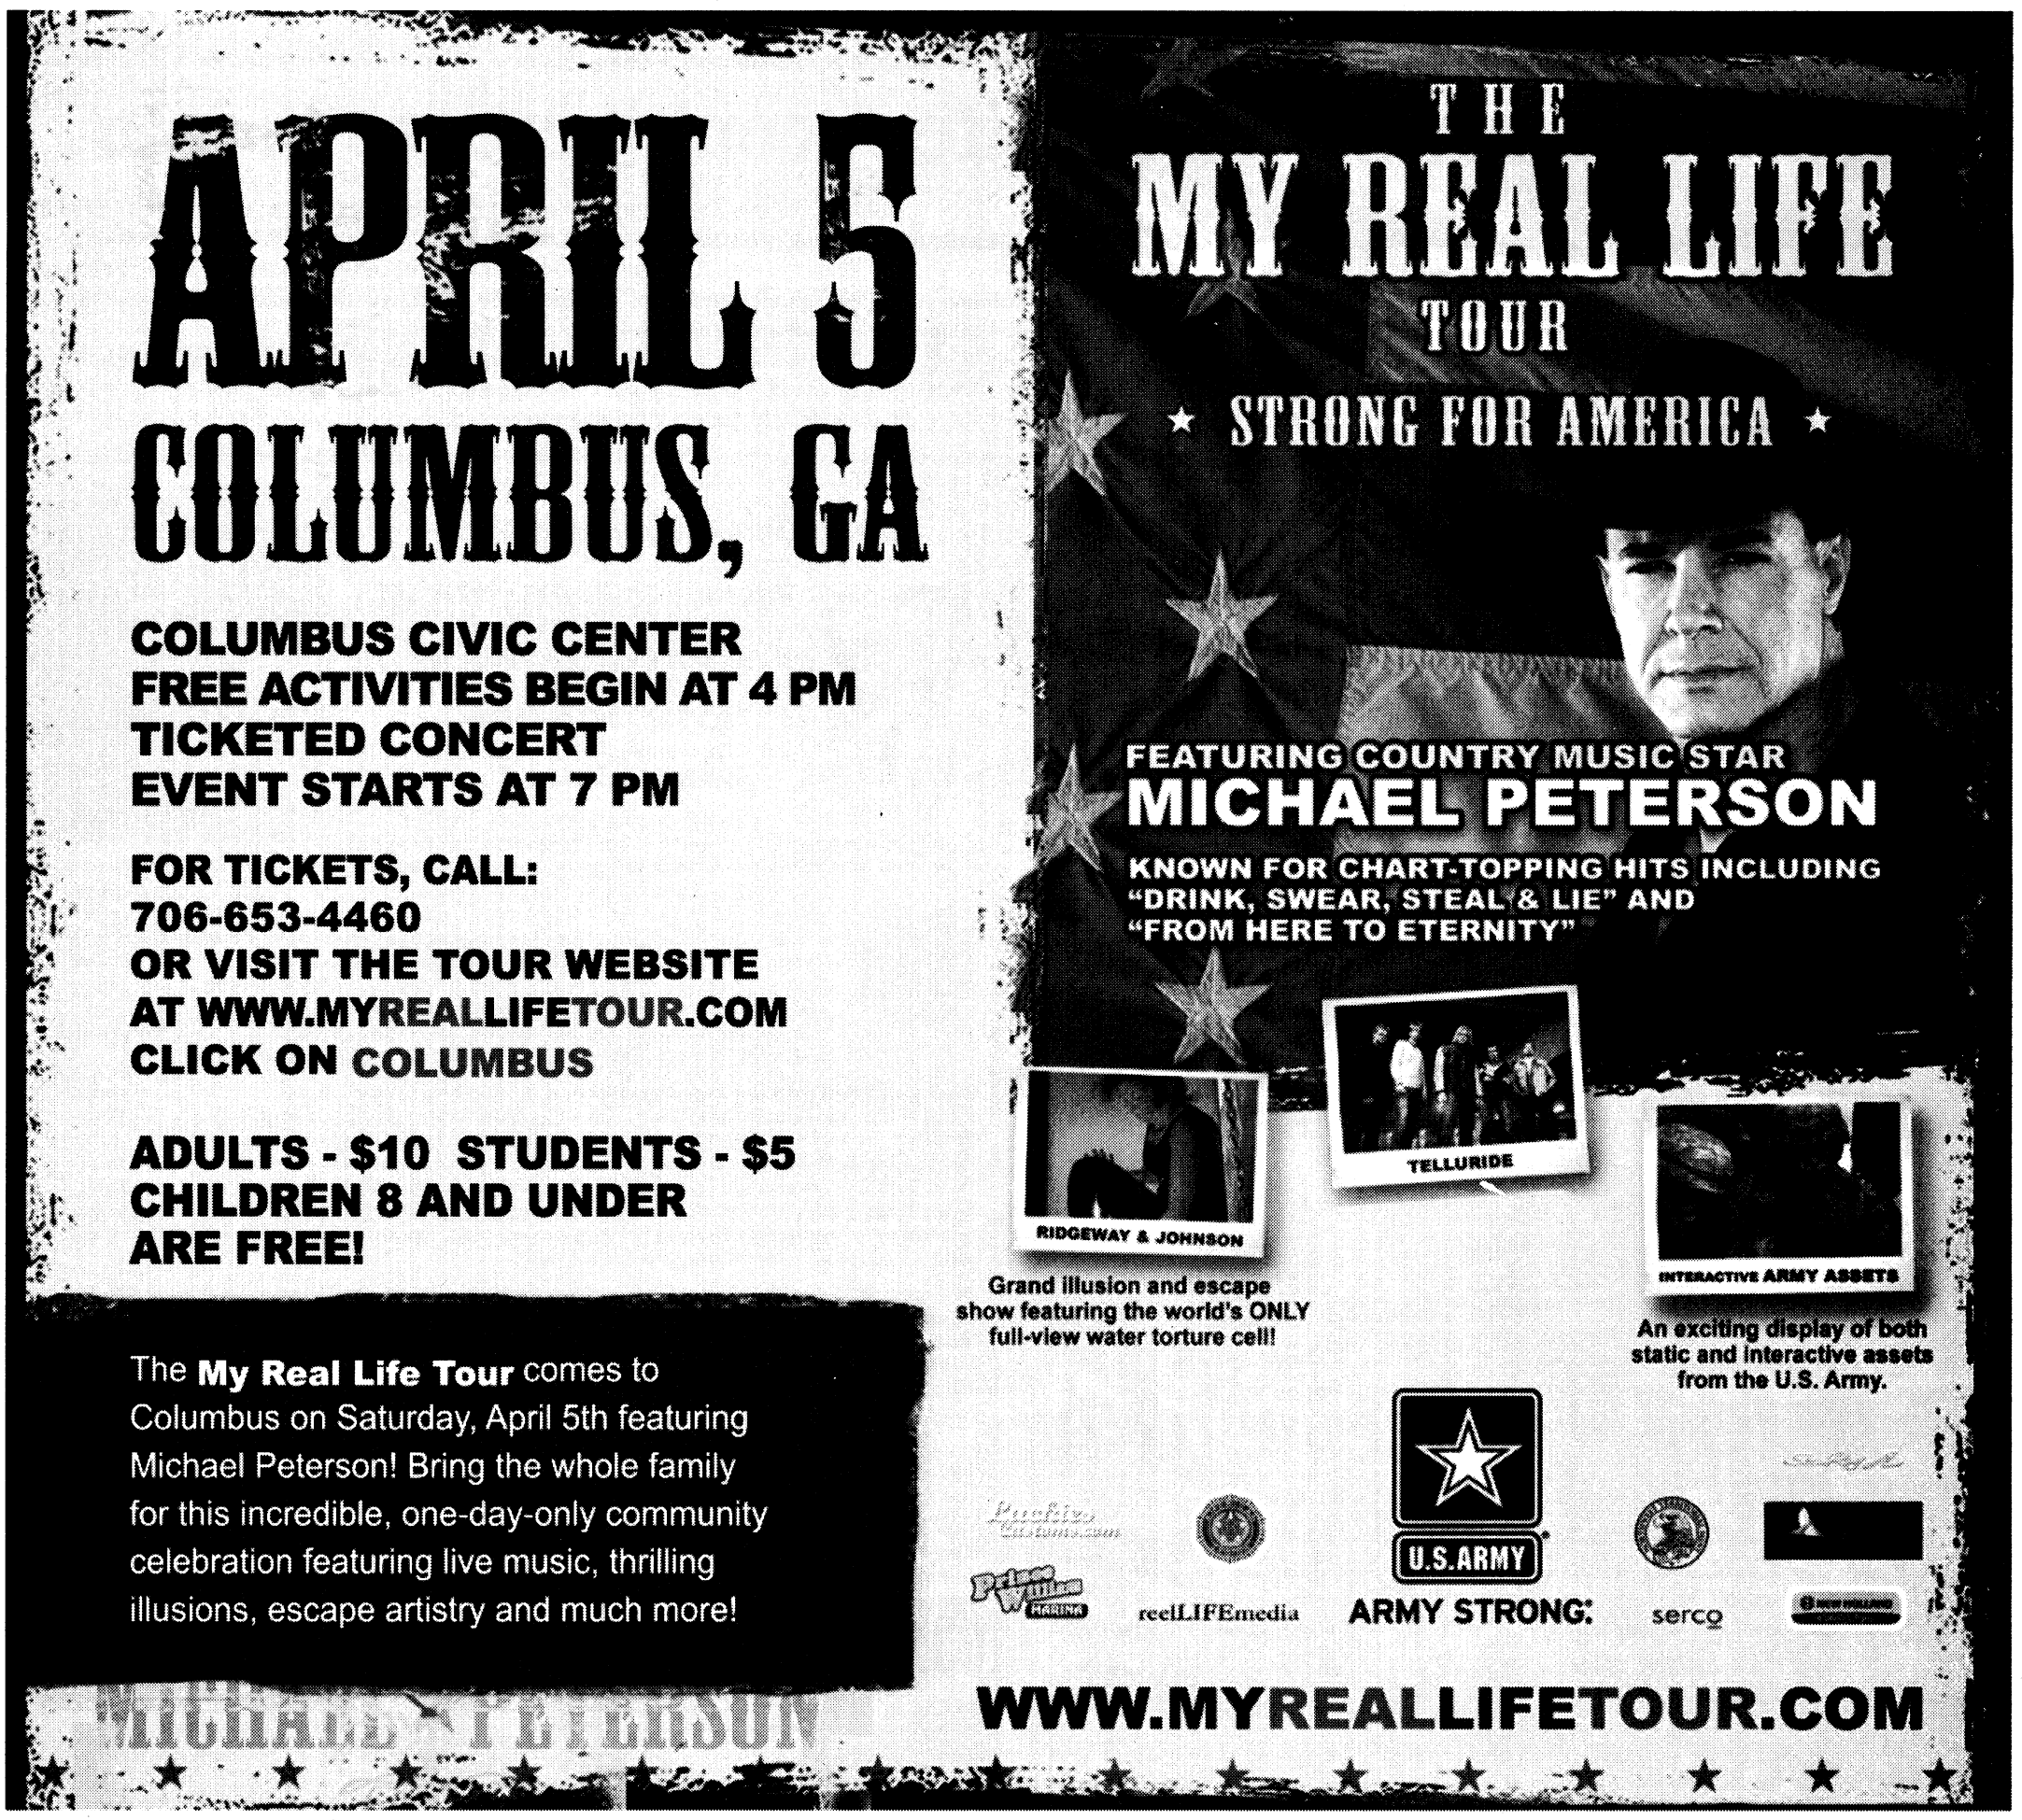
"The renovation shows that the Army is committed to making the Combatives School a permanent school in the Army," Larsen said.

Although combatives doctrines date from the 1860s, it was used during war and forgotten during peacetime, said Larsen, who began training the 2nd Ranger Battalion of Fort Lewis, Wash., on combatives in 1995, when combatives techniques weren't being used by units across the Army. He wrote the combatives field manual in 2001, and combatives training was officially indoctrinated into the Army in 2002.

The combatives program, now part of the 197th Infantry Brigade, was held in a warehouse on post from 2002 until the opening of the new school.

The skills Soldiers learn at the Combatives School will help them survive on the battlefield, Larsen said.

Soldiers at the school learn grappling and striking skills, how to fight with weapons, scenario and ground training.



The new equipment will provide better training, and the building will provide more space, said Staff Sgt. Iako Kalili, instructor at the Combatives School.

The heavy bag room houses about 20 bags, whereas the old building only had room for three. There are also stations to complete punching and kicking combinations, and the room will soon have wrestling dummies.

The new school, 6,000 square feet larger than the old building, was upgraded with other amenities, including a curtain system (it divides one room into four separate areas), padded walls and more office space.

They take what they learn at the Combatives School and teach it to their Soldiers, Kalili said.

of young Soldiers who will likely deploy to Iraq or Afghanistan in the next few months.

"My boots have walked the very ground where you are right now. Being with you reminds me of my final words to my Soldiers before we left for Vietnam," said Moore, who made good on his promise to leave no man behind on the battlefield when he led the 1st Battalion, 7th Cavalry, into combat in 1965.

"I lost not one MIA or POW," Moore said. "I carried my wounded and the dead off the battlefields as some of you will. As I look into your faces, I see their faces.

"Some of you may go down fighting for the person next to you and for America. You may not return home alive. All of us … are faced with the inevitable death of our bodies," said Moore, who buried his wife of 54 years, his "precious Julie," in the Main Post Cemetery in 2004.

Julie Compton Moore is buried next to Sgt. Jack Gell, the A Company radio operator who crawled into enemy fire to retrieve Soldiers killed in the Ia Drang ambush. Moore held Gell in his arms just minutes after the 25-year-old New York native was killed by a machine-gun blast.

Moore frequently travels from his home in Auburn, Ala., to visit the graves of Julie, Gell and a number of other Soldiers killed during three days of relentless combat.

"Soon I shall join them again," he said. "I'm just an old Soldier, increasingly aware that eternity is just around the corner. But I tell you now, do not think for one moment that you can wait until you are my age to know your God.

"Today, this great Easter Sunday, is the only day that you know you have been given. Do not take your life or your God for granted."

Moore's message wasn't all about preparing for the hereafter. He spent considerable time explaining the merits of spiritual maturity in the here and now.

"When I was in the Army, for 32 years, I prayed that God would come into my life so that I might lead and love my Family and my Soldiers well," he said. "After all, Jesus was the first person to put his boots on the ground in the greatest battle the world has ever known — a battle that goes on. I believe he is here fighting that battle with us every day."

Just as they train for combat, Moore said, Soldiers must train themselves to grow spiritually.

"I still ask myself every day: Am I ready to make the cut? Can I do one more thing? And after that, one more thing?" he said.

That was the message that resonated with Reynolds, the 18-year-old Indiana native who will graduate from basic training in three weeks.

"He said 'trust in the Lord.' He said 'don't give up — keep going. There's always one more thing you can do,'" Reynolds said.

"That's what I needed to hear. I'm broke — the ruck march tore me up. But I'm going to keep going. I won't give up."

Even retired Col. Bob Nett had few words to offer on the occasion. The 86-year-old three war combat veteran earned the Medal of Honor in 1944 as a 21-year-old second lieutenant. He's one of only 3,446 service members to receive the medal since it was introduced in the Civil War.

"I feel very fortunate to be honored this way," Nett said. And of the fact that he's one of only 105 surviving recipients, one of only three from Georgia, he said, "I feel very blessed."

An eternal flame burns in front of the Government Center above the markers honoring the five Medal of Honor recipients from Columbus. Nett's name is there alongside Freeman Horner, Charles McGaha, Donald Johnston and Jackson Pharris.

"We're probably the only city in the U.S. that has five Metal of Honor recipients," Caldwell said. "That's a great tribute to the type of Soldiers we train here."

"We're probably the only city in the U.S. that has five Medal of Honor recipients. That's a great tribute to the type of Soldiers we train here."

— retired Lt. Gen. William Caldwell III

Caldwell and Maj. Gen. Walter Wojdakowski, Fort Benning's commanding general, saluted Nett, an honor accorded to a Soldier of lower rank only when that Soldier has earned the Medal of Honor. Wojdakowski called Nett "the father of Officer Candidate School." A building there is named in his honor, and the wheelchair-bound Nett frequently speaks to candidates about the importance of training.

"I am among the thousands who consider him one of my mentors," Wojdakowski said.

The local Gold Star Wives and members of the Women's Auxiliary placed a wreath at the foot of the eternal flame monument, and after the playing of Taps, the Infantry Center Band wrapped up the ceremony with a medley of patriotic songs.

Drought: Still a concern despite recent increase in rain three to five days since the beginning of the year, Darbe said. That has helped make up for some of the rainfall deficits of the previous year.

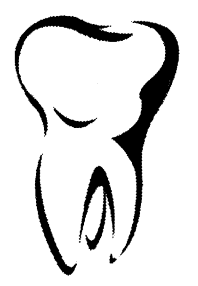
"We still have a long way to go," he said. "Be aware that although we've seen some improvement, the drought is still going to be a factor for this year."

Until drought conditions subside, Wheaton encouraged continued water conservation.

"The biggest thing is to not just let the water run and use only what you need to use," he said.



Water restrictions will be loosened April 1 in expectation of increased watering demand because of evaporation and gardening.

A handheld hose may be used to fill swimming pools and water existing landscape for 25 minutes three days a week between midnight and 10 a.m., said Cliff Arnett, senior vice president of Columbus Water Works.

Homes with even addresses can water Mondays, Wednesdays and Saturdays and those with odd numbers can water Tuesdays, Thursdays and Sundays.

The Army intends to prepare an Environmental Impact Statement (EIS) for managing and accommodating increased training requirements at Fort Benning, Georgia (Maneuver Center of Excellence EIS) related to the growth and realignment of the Army and other transformation initiatives. In order to transform the Army, meet the increased national security and defense requirements of the 21st century, maintain training and operational readiness levels of the force, and preserve a high quality of life for U.S. Soldiers and families, the Army has identified the need to increase its overall size while continuing to restructure its forces in accordance with modular Transformation decisions.

The proposed action is to take necessary actions at Fort Benning to accommodate training requirements related to Base Realignment and Closure (BRAC), Global Defense Posture Realignment (GDPR), Army Modular Force Initiatives (AMF), Grow the Army (GTA), and other related stationing activities. Although Fort Benning itself does not experience permanent force structure growth beyond that analyzed in the BRAC 2005 Realignment and Transformation EIS, it will be required to increase training of transient student loads in order to achieve and maintain the Army end-strength growth. The proposed action will include the construction of additional facilities, training areas, including ranges and maneuver areas, and maintenance areas to support new units and activities.

The Maneuver Center of Excellence EIS will analyze the impact of several alternatives including the No Action Alternative. Alternatives to be examined by the EIS may consist of alternative siting locations within Fort Benning for facility construction projects, new construction only, renovation and use of existing facilities, or a combination of both new construction and use of existing facilities, and usage of alternative land locations or land use intensity within Fort Benning for training activities. The No Action Alternative would accommodate the projected growth in existing facilities.

Initiation of the 30-day public involvement process will be announced in local news media. At that time the public will be invited to participate in scoping activities for the EIS and comments from the public will be considered before any action is taken to implement this proposed action at Fort Benning.

If you have any further questions about the Transformation proposal, you may contact Ms. Monica Manganaro, (706) 545-3438 Fort Benning Public Affairs Office, or Mr. Brandon Cockrell at (706) 545-3210.

Government of Iraq funds al Durai'ya power lines repair

"It is truly great to see Iraqis solving Iraqi problems," said Lt. Col. Jack Marr, 1st Battalion, 15th Infantry Regiment.

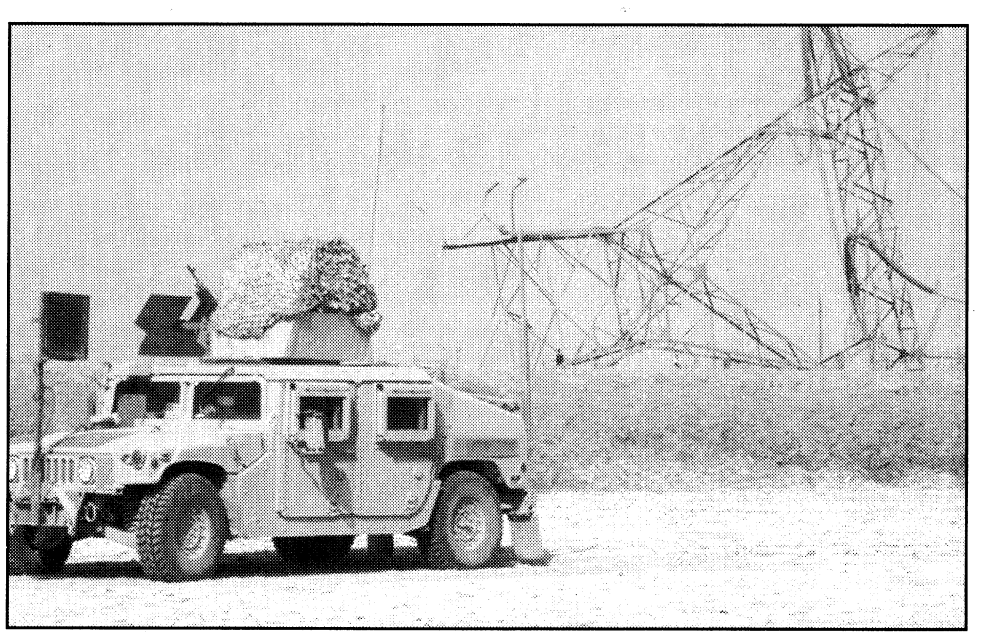
FORWARD OPERATING BASE HAMMER, Iraq — Soldiers of 1st Battalion, 15th Infantry Regiment, working with an Iraqi Ministry of Electricity representative, surveyed several damaged high-tension power line towers near al Durai'ya March 17.



The day prior, Lt. Col. Jack Marr, the battalion commander, met with Iraqi Army leadership, the Iraqi Minister of Electricity and Sheikh Majid, the local Sons of Iraq leader, to discuss repair of the towers.

After surveying the site, the Ministry of Electricity representative agreed the government of Iraq would fund labor for the repairs and security for the laborers would be provided by Sons of Iraq in the area.

"Sheikh Majid agreed to secure the roads with Sons of Iraq while the power lines are being repaired by the Ministry of Electricity," said Maj. John Cushing, operations officer for the battalion.

Marr said assisting the al Durai'ya residents will improve relationships between local leaders, citizens and Iraqi Security Forces.

"It is truly great to see Iraqis solving Iraqi problems," he said.

A 1st Battalion, 15th Infantry Regiment, Humvee sits beside the survey site of damaged high-tension power line towers near al Durai'ya, Iraq, March 17. Leaders of the battalion, a representative of the Iraqi Ministry of Electricity, Iraqi Army leaders and members of the al Durai'ya Sons of Iraq surveyed the damaged towers and set in motion a plan for the Government of Iraq to fund repairs.

Soldiers help rebuild community

3RD HEAVY BRIGADE COMBAT TEAM
Spc. Ben Hutto

FORWARD OPERATING BASE HAMMER, Iraq — Soldiers with 3rd Squadron, 1st Cavalry Regiment, met with Mahmud Jabllawe, leader of the Tuwaitha Sons of Iraq group, to discuss reconstruction, March 21.

Not long ago, Tuwaitha was an al-Qaeda hotbed.

"This place was pretty bad when we first arrived here," said Staff Sgt. Thomas Young, a section sergeant in D Company.

"Al-Qaeda had killed several people in the area," Thomas said. "They were running families out of their homes. We hit so many IEDs (improvised explosive devices) that the route into this area was still considered black 30 days after we cleared it, but that was before the Sons of Iraq checkpoints."

Establishing the SoI in the area was a huge step toward enabling residents to take their village back, he said.

"Those checkpoints helped keep the roads secure after we cleared them and it took off from there," Young said.

As the routes became safer, the battalion conducted several early morning missions that forced most insurgents out of the area and allowed the citizens of Tuwaitha to regroup and return to normalcy.

The day's meeting focused on getting Tuwaitha greater representation at nahia meetings and working with the local leadership council to help Tuwaitha's needs to be presented in a unified voice.

"People are saying things are getting better, but we still have much to do," Jabllawe said, talking about getting civil projects brought to the area. The local pump station is functioning but could be improved, and water purification is still an issue.

Kolasheski said he would talk with the government of Iraq, but Jabllawe must continue to work with the local government to get the projects themselves.

Jabllawe said many of his neighbors were not in favor of reaching out to the Americans.

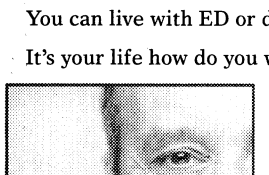
"We were once very scared of you … but I am glad we reached out to you," he said. "All of our people now know that the Soldiers at your bases are good people. You will always be remembered here as brothers."

Iraqis sign up for police force

3RD HEAVY BRIGADE COMBAT TEAM
Spc. Ben Hutto

COMBAT OUTPOST CASHE, Iraq — One hundred and seventy-five Iraqi men waited for their opportunity to join the police force during a recruiting drive at the 3rd Battalion, 1st National Police Brigade headquarters in Tameem, a town southeast of Baghdad, March 22.

Prospective policemen went through a rigid screening process to find the best possible applicants, said 1st Lt. Kurt Cheeseman, the targeting officer for 3rd Squadron, 1st Cavalry Regiment. Men between the ages of 18 and 35 had to bring a national identification card, proof of intermediate education and pass a reading and writing exam, medical screening and physical fitness test. Additionally, the men were registered in the biometrics enrollment system and the Handheld Interagency Identity Detection Equipment System and interviewed by the Mada'in Qada chief of police.



"It is a very thorough process. It is a four-day event, but we have a lot of men who want to be policemen," Cheeseman said.

The event is part of an effort to help fill the Mada'in Qada's police ranks with former members of the Sons of Iraq. There are not yet jobs for all of the applicants, Cheeseman said. "A good thing is," he said, "we will have 100 applicants already processed and ready to be hired when jobs become available."

Maj. David Guthrie, the operations officer for 3-1 Cav. Regt., believes the recruiting drive helps both the SoI and the police force.

"I think it legitimizes both programs," he said. "It will expand the police force with qualified candidates. These are men who have been helping protect their neighborhoods and have proven that they want to help their neighbors. People from the area will have their trust … The Sons of Iraq, in turn, see that the effort they are putting in could lead them to a better job. It really benefits everyone."

BENCH NOTES

MITCHELL THOMAS IV

Dirk goes down

Dallas Mavericks' star player Dirk Nowitzki will be out of the lineup indefinitely after spraining his ankle and knee during Sunday's game against the San Antonio Spurs.

He underwent an MRI Monday and has been fitted with a protective boot.

If Dirk's injury proves to be serious, the Mavericks, who are currently seventh in the Western Conference, will enter the final month of the season fighting to hold on to a playoff spot.

Vick in doghouse again

Former Atlanta Falcons quarterback Michael Vick will begin his Virginia trial for dogfighting charges June 27.

Vick is currently serving a 23-month prison sentence in Leavenworth, Kan., after pleading guilty to a federal dogfighting conspiracy. He will be fighting two state felony counts, which can be punishable for up to five years in prison.

Vick faces an additional 10 years to the two he is serving now. If he is ever allowed to play again, he could be as old as Vinny Testaverde.

Cabrera signs extension

The Detroit Tigers announced Tuesday that third baseman Miguel Cabrera signed a seven-year extension worth a whopping $152.3 million.

According to Yahoo! Sports, Cabrera, who played in the World Series as a rookie with the Florida Marlins in 2003, has only one thing on his mind — capturing a World Series win.

With Cabrera and fellow teammate and former Martin Dontrelle Willis, the Tigers have as good a chance as any team.

Bowyer takes lead

Sharapova shoulders blame

Maria Sharapova pulled out of the Sony Ericsson Open Saturday after reportedly suffering from a shoulder injury. This decision followed her three-set loss to Svetlana Kuznetsova the day before.

Sharpova, who is ranked No. 5, is a two-time finalist in this tournament.

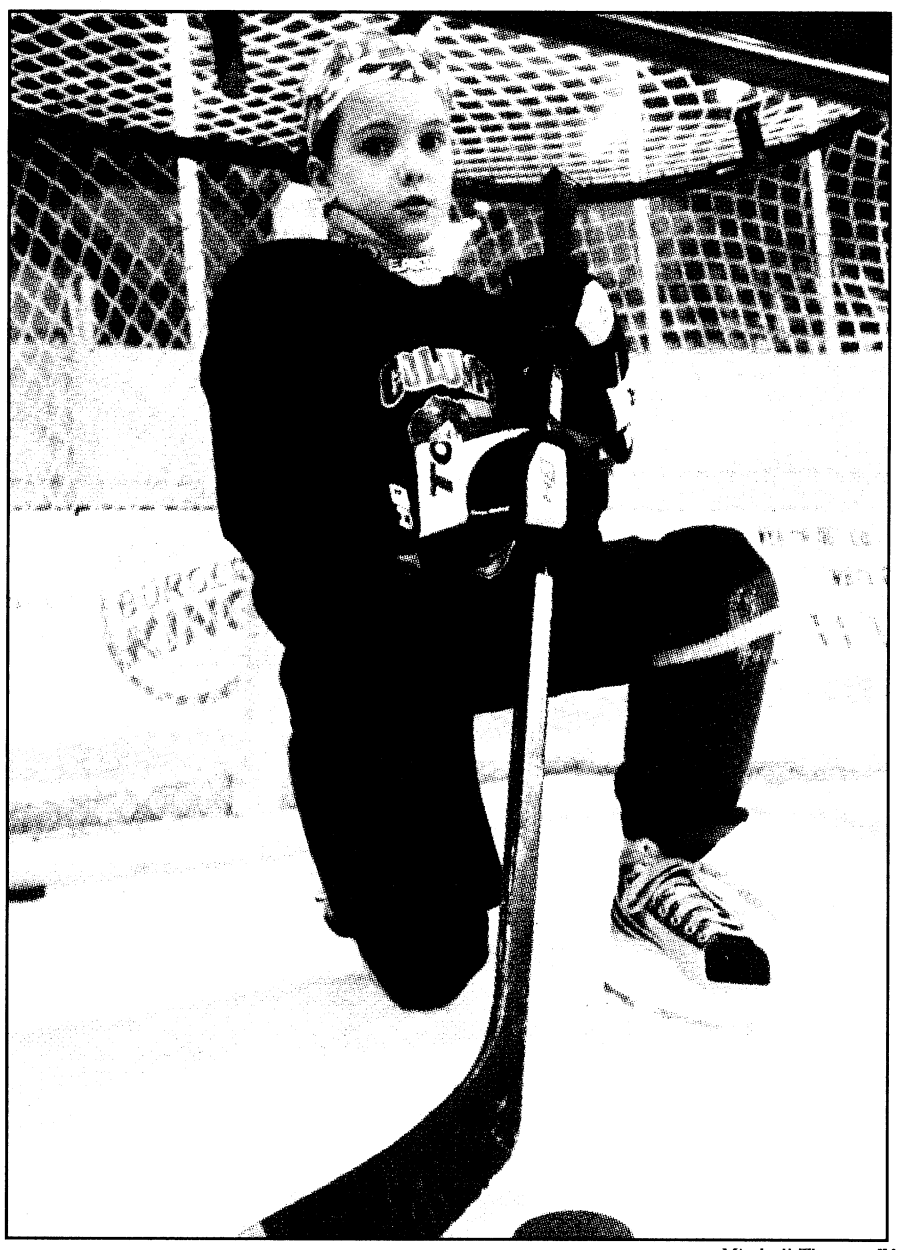
These are two of 40 teams this season — the most the program has ever had, said CYS Sports specialist Dori Wagner.



This season's growth comes after last year when lack of participation canceled a league and delayed others. Historically, soccer has always been the most popular CYS sport, Wagner said.

"I like playing because it helps me calm down so I don't go wild in my house," said John Wilkins, a player on the Green Monsters. "Plus I need the exercise."

Carrie Davis coaches the Purple Dragons and has two sons, Jacob and Elijah, on the team.

"It's just nice to get out and be with them and their friends," Davis said. "It's very rewarding because you get to learn the kids and their personalities. The kids are just awesome."

Soccer games are played 9 a.m. to noon Saturday mornings at French Field. For more information, call Wagner at 706-545-1853.

Hannah Ortman, a defenseman for one of the Squirt League teams in the Columbus Youth Soccer Association, is the only girl on her team.

"Playing hockey gives me a lot of confidence. I hope one day more girls will want to play."

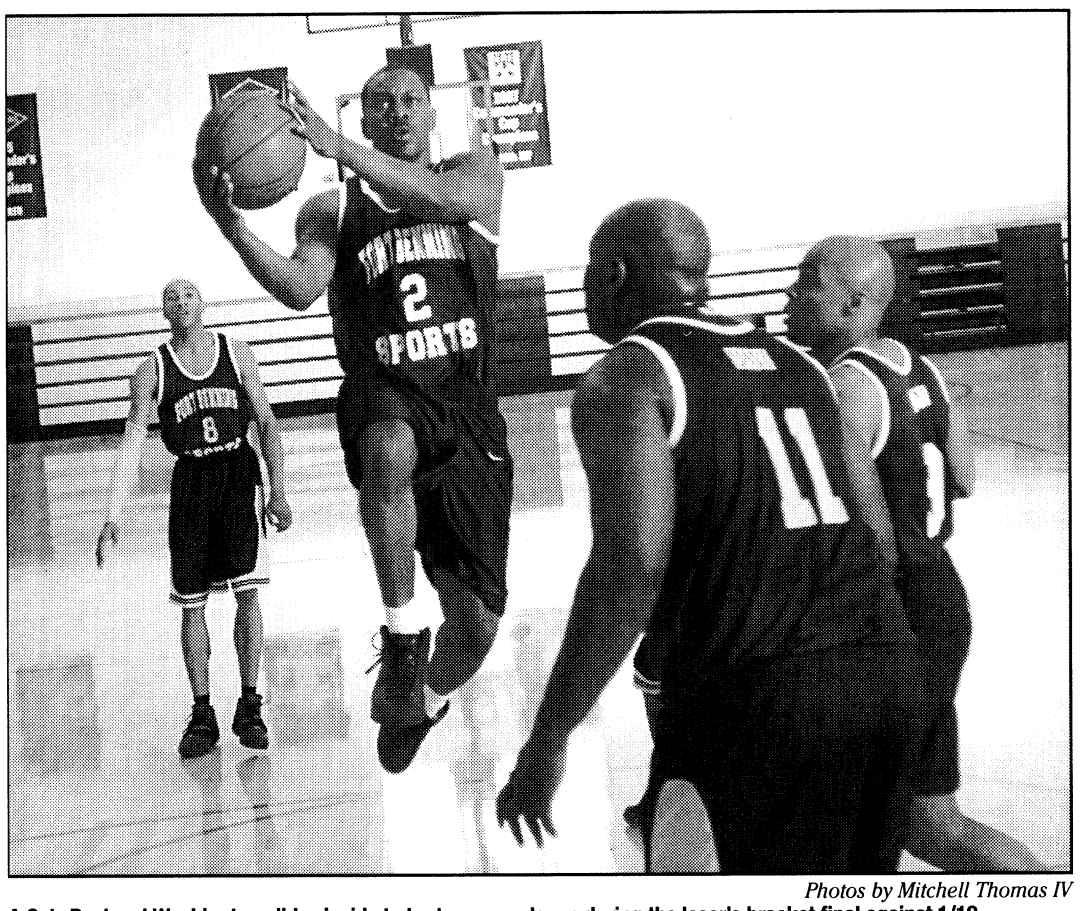
Hannah Ortman, an 8-year-old player in the Columbus Youth Hockey Association, was honored March 21 at a Columbus Cottonmouths' game as the Player of the Game for her performance in a hockey tournament in Pelham, Ala. Hannah is the only female on the Mites Select Team, which won third place in the Pelham tournament.

"Playing hockey gives me a lot of confidence," said Hannah, whose father Sgt. Andrew Ortman, is on his third tour in Iraq. "I hope one day more girls will want to play."

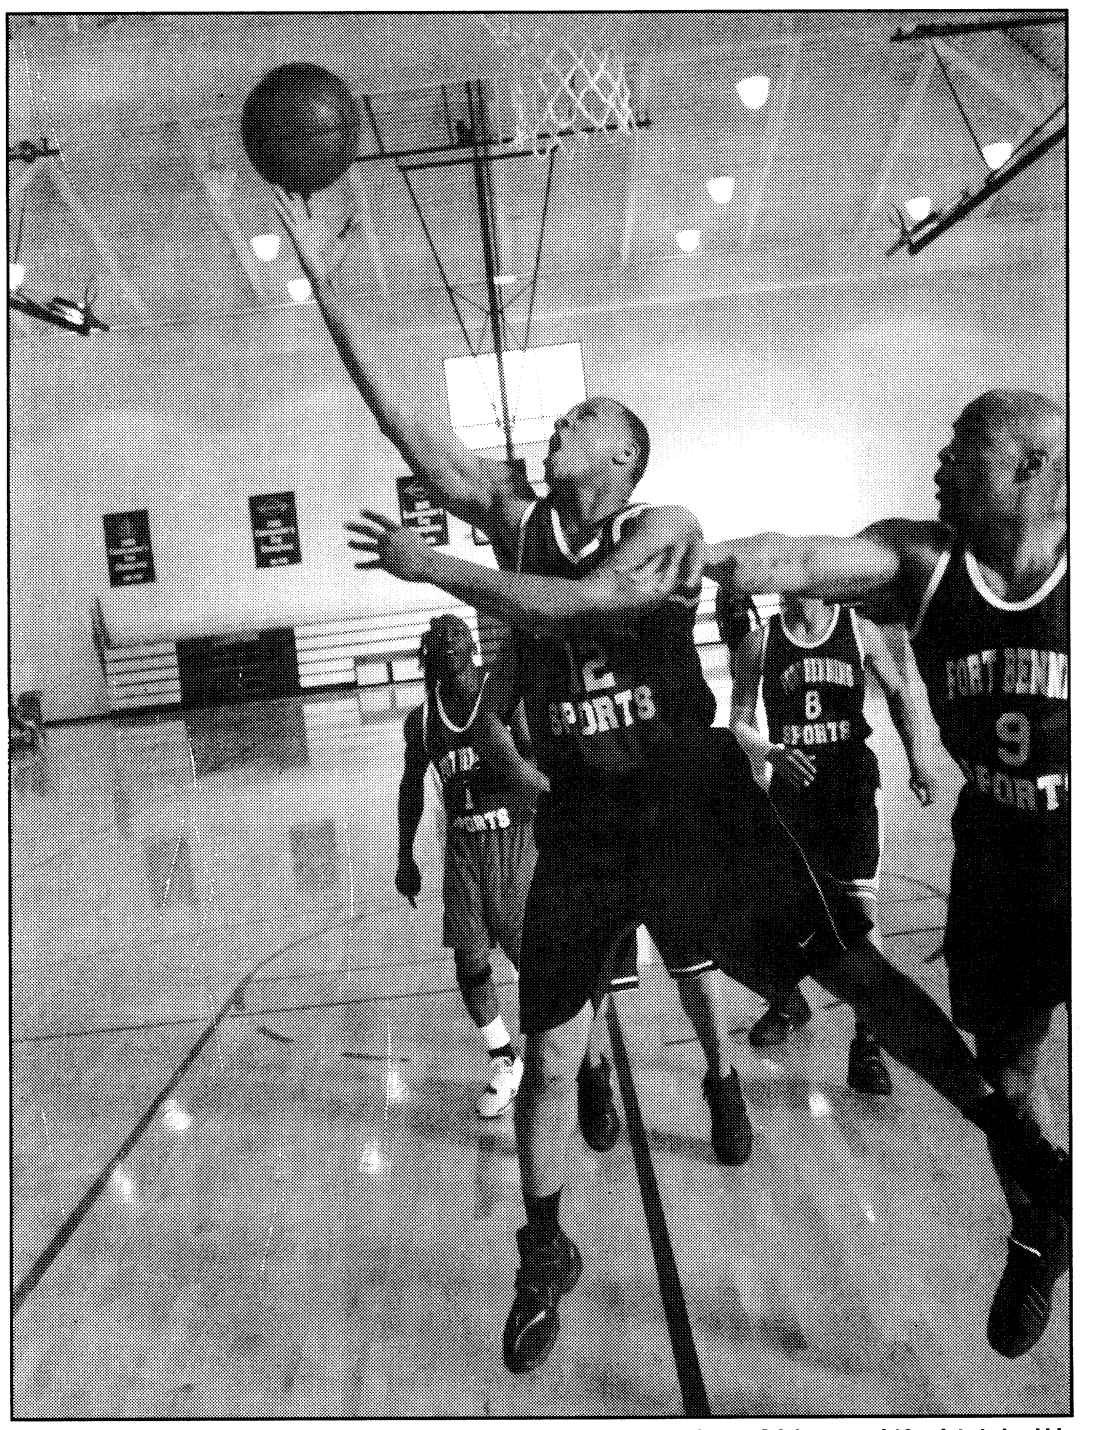
"Hannah is a very physical kid," said Holly Ortman, Hannah's mother. "She likes to get dirty and rough, and hockey proved to be a perfect fit for that extra energy she had."

In her second season, Hannah has developed into one of the best players on her team, said Jim Dress, the coach of the Cross Ice and Mites.

"Hannah is a fantastic player," Dress said. "We call her the 'Hound Dog.' Her speed is remarkable, and her balance is incredible."



Hannah is partially deaf because of ear infections she suffered as a baby. Last year, she was diagnosed with attention deficit hyperactivity disorder after her mother realized she lacked focus in school and showed behavioral problems.



Since learning to play hockey, Hannah's grades have improved significantly, Holly said. It has also improved Hannah's self-esteem.

"Hannah always looked up to her older sister who is an honor student," Holly said. "Because she struggled in school, she always wanted to do something on her own that would make her feel like a success, and hockey proved to be it.

"Sometimes I'm speechless," Holly said. "To see her three years ago and to see where she is today is incredible. She is a totally different little girl, and she has a completely different outlook on life, and a lot of it is because of hockey."

1/19 knocks off A Co., loses to BOLC II in championship

The 1st Battalion, 19th Infantry Regiment, needed to set the pace on both ends of the court to continue its quest for the intramural basketball championship, said 1/19's Buford Grigley.

They did so March 20 when they beat A Company, 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment, 59-51, in the loser's bracket final at Smith Fitness Center.

1/19 went on to face the undefeated Basic Officer's Leadership Course II team for the championship.

1/19 took an early lead in the first half by playing aggressive defense. Offensively, Grigley commanded the post with quick moves inside.

But A Co.'s Jarrod Anderson, the team's leading scorer, went into an offensive frenzy to get his team back in the game. He brought 1/19's lead down to one point midway through the half, making the score 14-13.

Late in the half, Anderson went to work again tying the score, 19-19, with a putback layup. But 1/19's Julian McMillan knocked down a three on the wing, which gave his team a five-point lead at the half.

"We have got to come out and play harder than we did in the first," Anderson said. "We have to find the heart within ourselves and play our hardest."

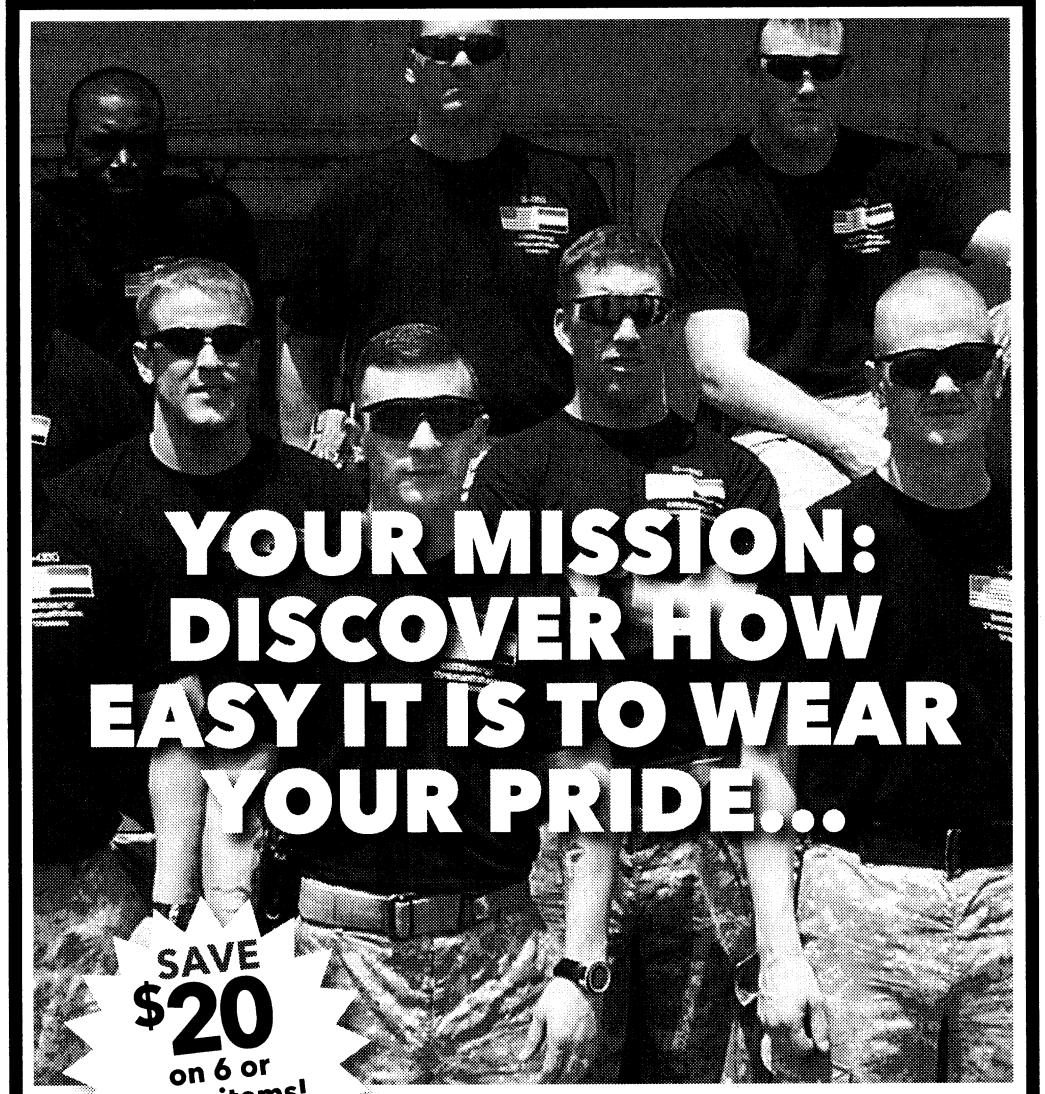
Grigley started off the second half aggressively. He gave his team a seven-point lead with a short jump shot.

1/19's man in the middle, Desmond Williams, gave his team its biggest lead of the night, completing a three-point play by making a layup and converting a free throw.

With two minutes to go in the game, Anderson cut 1/19's lead down to seven with an isolation play from the wing. But Grigley made a heads-up play inside, putting back one of his team's misses to finish the game.

1/19's Buford Grigley gets inside to make an up-and-under layup over the defense. Grigley scored 13 points to lead his team to the championship game against BOLC II.

"In the first couple of playoffs games, we didn't control the tempo," Grigley said. "But we knew tonight we had to set the tone and finish strong."



After the win, 1/19 went on to face the undefeated Basic Officer's Leadership Course II team hoping to get a win and push the series to another game to decide the championship winner.

But BOLC II proved to be too much for the winded 1/19 squad. 1/19 held a 28-25 lead at the half, but gave up a six-point swing to lose the game, 54-51.

Both Grigley and Dannell Bing had 15 points each to lead 1/19. BOLC's Derrick Foster had 17 points to lead all scores and his team to the championship victory.

The chase for the Commander's Cup continues with preseason volleyball and soccer, which began Monday and Tuesday at Smith Fitness Center. For more information, call 706-545-4388.

FIT FACTS

MWR FITNESS DIRECTOR
Lori Smith

This week, I want to talk about MMA, also known as Mixed Martial Arts, as well as self defense classes.

I brought this subject up a few weeks ago asking for feedback from anyone interested. We have gotten some great feedback — all very positive, practically begging us to bring some classes to Fort Benning.

For those of you who don't know, MMA is "a full contact combat sport in which a wide variety of fighting techniques are used, including striking and grappling."

MMA is the recreation counterpart to combatives, which is the Army combative training.

We have noticed several new trends in fitness and many of those trends involve functional fitness which includes different forms of martial arts.

Many of us know that Mixed Martial Arts has grown in popularity. But what can it do for you?

Whether your goal is to compete, learn self-defense, reduce stress, improve cardio or lose weight, taking part in MMA can help you achieve those things.

I spoke to 1st Sgt. Lewis Fletcher, who works with the Army Combatives program here at Fort Benning and is also very involved in the MMA world, about the benefits of MMA classes.

Fletcher explained to me that Soldiers training in the Army Combatives Program have experienced noticeable increases in self-confidence, strength, flexibility, coordination and self-defense skills as a result of their dedication to training.

He also said that training twice a week in MMA will meet the needs of most people who want to develop self-confidence based on physical and mental self-improvement as opposed to how well you perform athletically.

I also spoke to a lady here at Fort Benning who took MMA and self defense classes out west. I would like to share her story.

"Our class was a mixed martial arts class. Mainly karate with kajukenbo which is a little of karate, judo and jujitsu combined into one.

"Before going to the class I had low self esteem. First, it helped me to overcome a lot of 'giants' in my life.

"I was in an abusive relationship with an ex-boyfriend when I was a teenager. This class helped me to release that past hurt and helped me learn techniques that can help me if ever I was attacked on the street.

"I developed self confidence in knowing that if I can throw around a 6-foot-4-inch, 240-pound man, then I can pretty much hold my own. I learned knife and gun techniques if they were ever used in an attack.

"I also learned different combination strikes and kicks to help get away from an attack. I highly recommend anybody young or old, man or woman to go through some sort of self-defense class. I have read several e-mails on how predators are becoming more clever on who and how they will attack. Always keep up your guard. I hope this was of some help to you."

There are many schools around the country that teach MMA techniques and combine those with self-defense classes, which is what we are looking for at Fort Benning.

We are also working with DFMWR Special Events and 1st Sgt. Fletcher in bringing in three or four World Title holders and or World Class Athletes to do a few self-defense classes and MMA seminars in conjunction with the Independence Day Celebrations on June 28 and 29.

So mark you calendar for these dates and join us to see firsthand what MMA is about.

So with this, we are going to push forward in trying to bring these classes and training to Fort Benning for you to participate in.

As we develop these programs, I will begin posting information in the gyms, so keep watching for updates.

Next week I want to address more of the recent comment cards we have gotten, so stay tuned for that. Have a great weekend and keep reading Fit Facts.

Bearings may or may not need to be replaced

KING FEATURES SYNDICATE
Tom and Ray Magliozzi

Dear Tom and Ray:

My brother-in-law, Sam, thinks our wheel bearings are "going bad" on the right rear. My husband James and I don't hear any noises that would suggest a problem. But ever since Sam put the idea into James' head, he's been set on fixing it.

We've done fairly simple repairs ourselves in the past, but I don't think we should do this one, for two reasons: (1) I'm not convinced there's anything wrong, and (2) it's too complicated to perform by ourselves with no experience at all in this area. My question: How do we know if the bearings are "going bad," and should we do it ourselves or take it to a professional?

— Tegan

TOM: You don't tell us what kind of car you have, Tegan. Some cars' wheel bearings are easy to change, and some are just a little less difficult than building a nuclear submarine in your backyard.

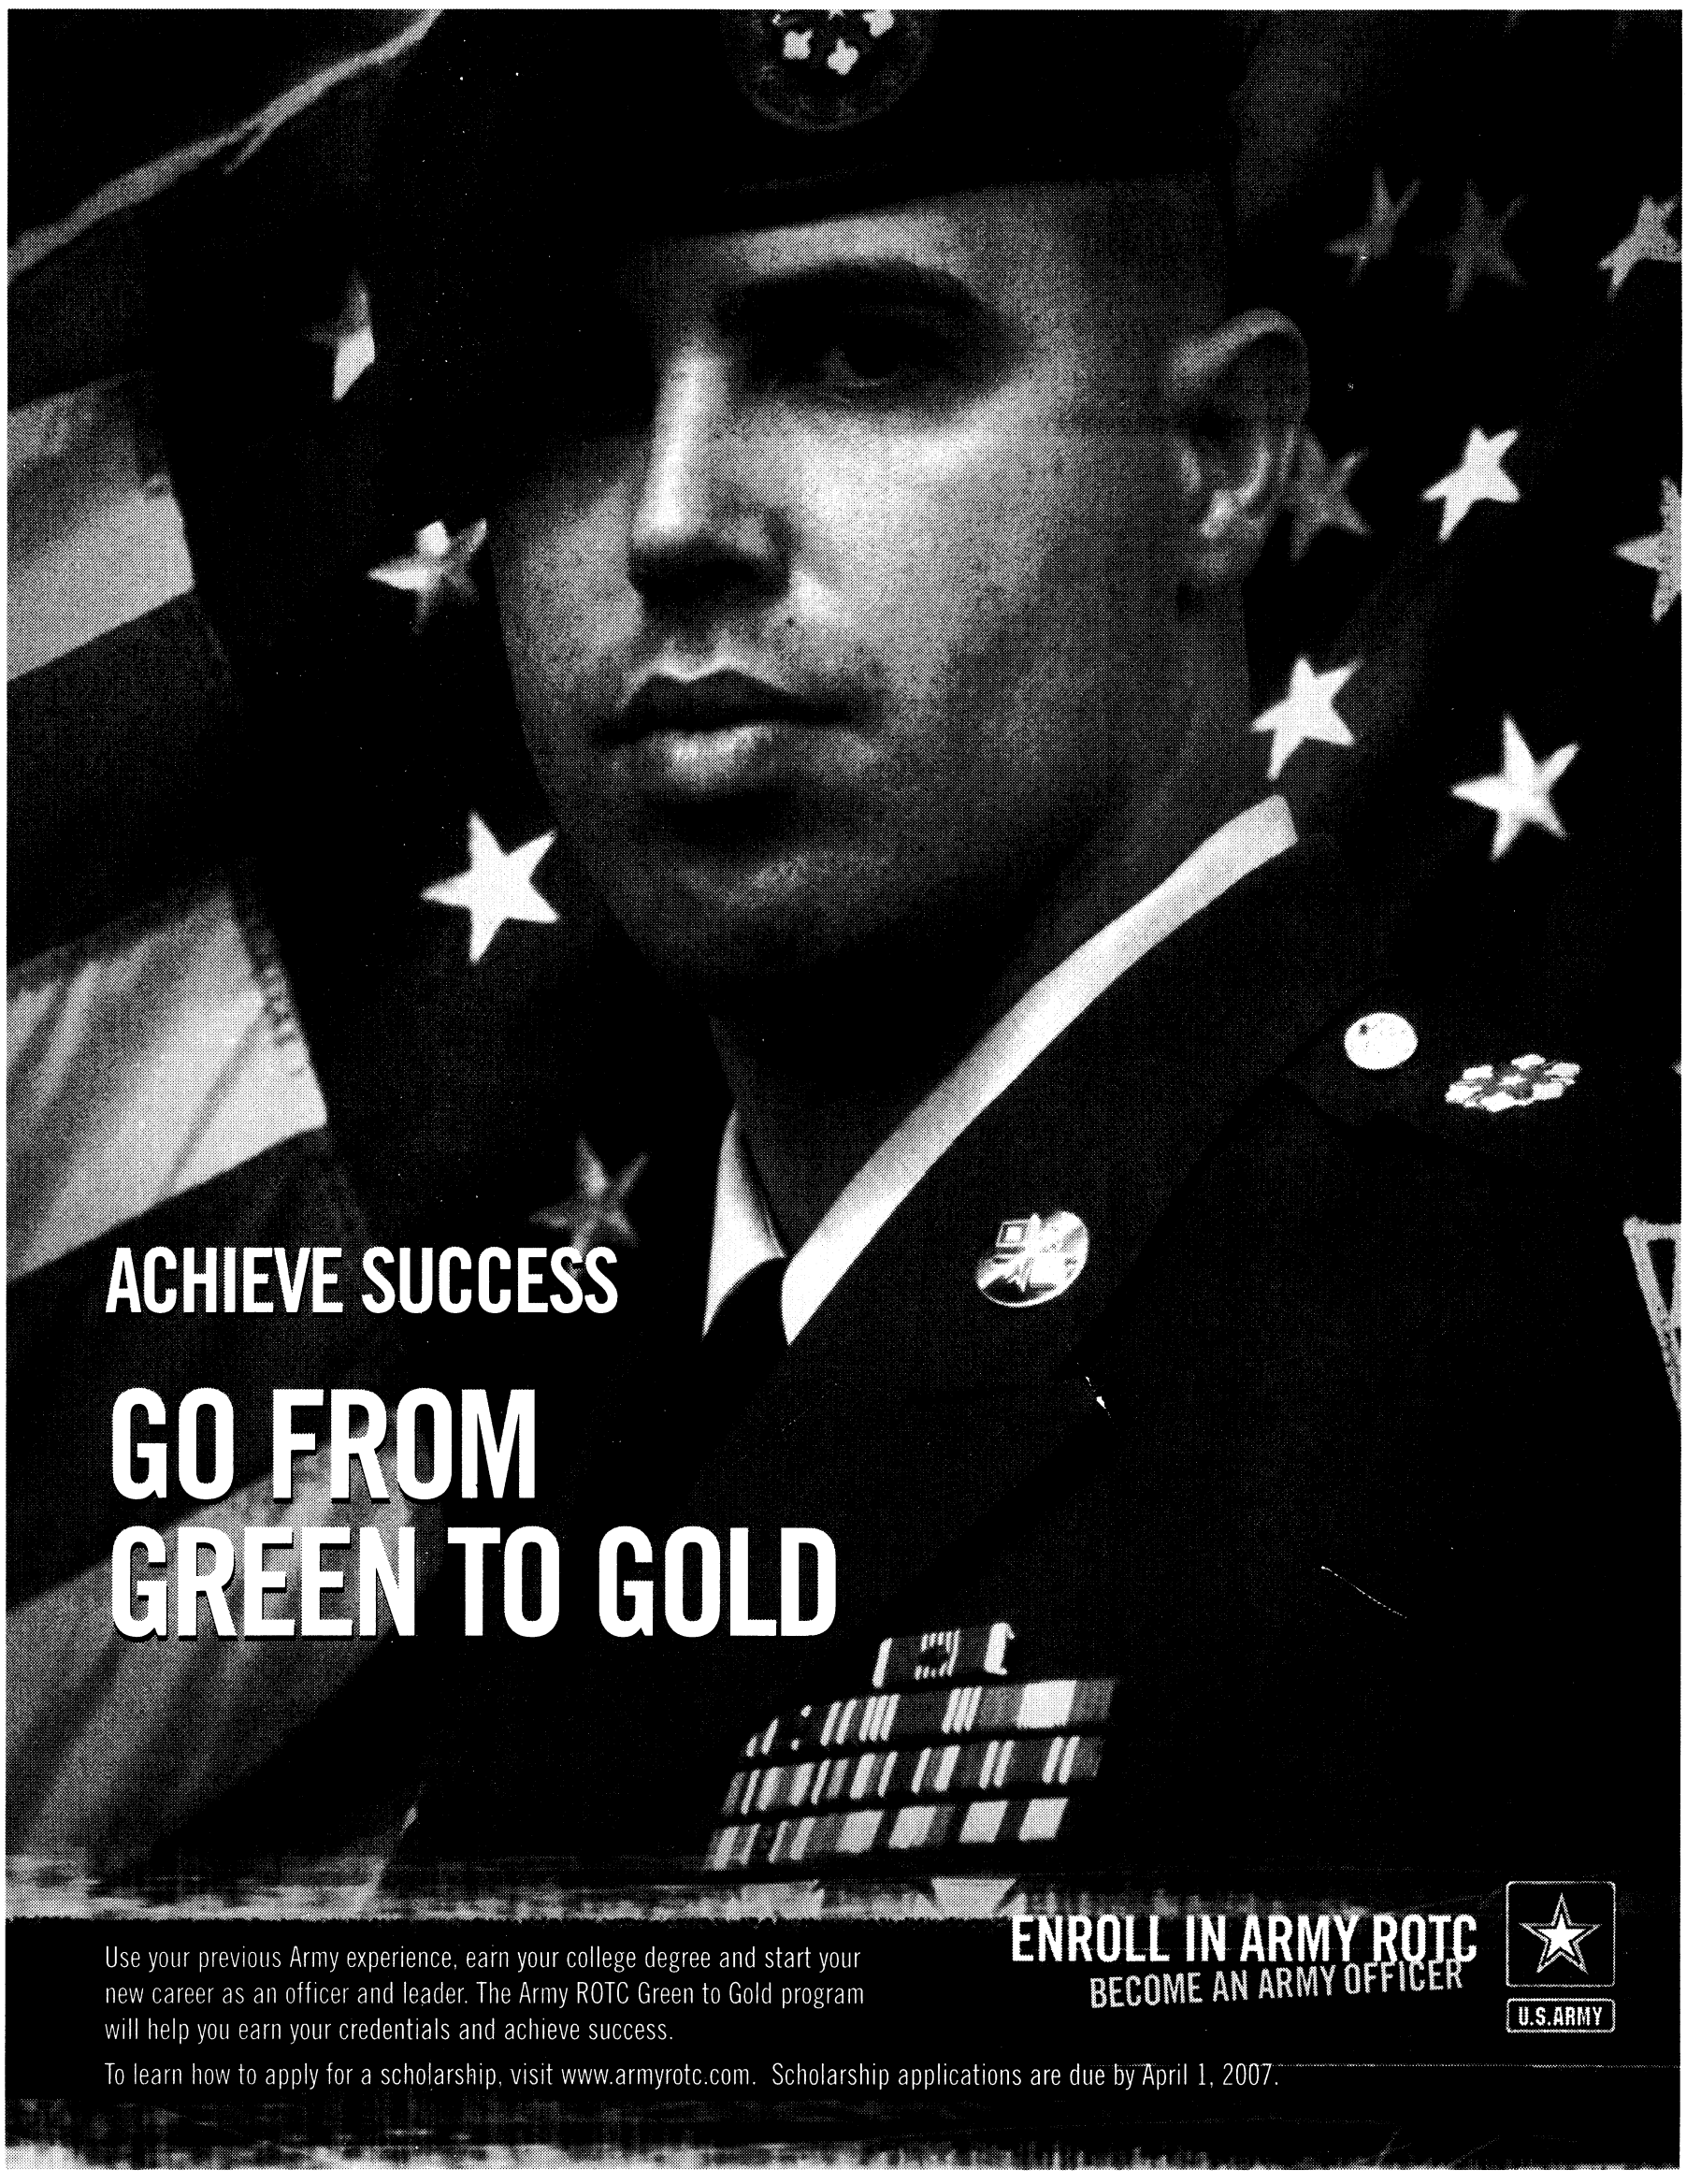
RAY: If you want to tackle it yourself, here's what you'd do: Assuming it's a front-wheel-drive vehicle, jack up the back end of the car. Then, with the engine off and the front wheels chocked, start by spinning the wheel that Sam suspects.

TOM: If a wheel bearing is gone, you almost always can either hear it or feel it. You might hear a slight growling sound. Or, if you hold on to the coil spring for the strut, you can actually feel the vibration of a bad bearing in your hand. It'll feel like there's grit or sand keeping the wheel from spinning smoothly.

RAY: And if you're not sure, you can compare one wheel against the other to see if one is noisier or grittier. If you conclude that one of the bearings is bad, then you can move on to stage two of Sam's diabolical plan to wreck your car — doing the repair yourself.

TOM: Like we said, some cars are easy, and some aren't. Generally speaking, changing a rear wheel bearing on a front-wheel-drive car isn't too bad.

RAY: The problem is that you won't have some of the tools you'll need — like a bearing press.



But you can still do part of the job yourself. You can remove the disc or drum from the rear axle, and take that to a local machine shop and ask them to remove the bearing and replace it. And then put that brake assembly back on the car yourself.

TOM: What's the worst-case scenario? You misdiagnose it and replace a bearing that doesn't need replacing; you get stuck in the middle of the job and need to buy $300 worth of tools you'll never use again; and you do the job wrong and the wheel falls off.

RAY: And what's the best-case scenario? You do it all right and you save 100 bucks. So, given the cost-benefit analysis, I'd lean toward letting a professional handle this.

Child and Youth Services needs baseball

THE BAYONET
Mitchell Thomas IV

The Child and Youth Services baseball league needs coaches. Soldiers, Civilians, Family members and retirees are eligible to coach.

Dori Wagner, CYS sports specialist, said she expects greater youth participation this year. The need for coaches is in high demand because of the expectancy of participation to increase this year, Wagner said. In the first two days of registration last week, six teams were fielded.

"There have been more players in soccer and basketball this year, and baseball is one of our biggest sports," Wagner said.

No experience is necessary to be a coach, Wagner said. Coaches will be certified at Youth Services Building 359 April 19.

Coaches are needed in each of the three CYS baseball sports — T ball for 4- and 5-year-olds, coach pitch baseball for 6- to 8-year-olds and regular baseball for ages 9 to 15.

"Every child out here gets a chance to play, and that is important to kids and their parents," Wagner said.

"You don't have to worry about making the team, you just play."

Registration will continue through April 11. The fee is $40. The season will begin with two weeks of practice from April 21 through May 2. Game play will begin May 3 and continue through June 28.

Games will be played on Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays. For more information, call Wagner at 706-545-1853.

USAMU to host Gunny Challenge, R. Lee 'Gunny' Ermey to visit

U.S. ARMY MARKSMANSHIP UNIT

The Army Marksmanship Unit will host the Old South Regional Classic XII and the Glock Gunny Challenge IV Saturday and Sunday at Krilling Range on Jamestown Road.

R. Lee "Gunny" Ermey, the host of the television show Mail Call that airs on the History Channel, will attend the matches for Glock, the sponsor.

He also starred as Gunnery Sgt. Hartman in the movie Full Metal Jacket in 1987.

The Gunny will sign autographs for spectators and visit with Fort Benning troops while he is here.

The Glock Sport Shooting Foundation conducts more than 20 action shooting matches around the country every year.

Approximately 400 shooters are expected to compete; about 100 of the competitors are Fort Benning Soldiers.

Media are invited to cover the matches but should coordinate with the Fort Benning Public Affairs Office before coming to post. The matches are also open to the public.

"I'd like to invite all GSSF members to attend the Fort Benning match sponsored by Glock Professional and the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit, visit with Gunnery Sgt. R. Lee Ermey and watch some of the best pistol shooters in the world compete in the Fourth annual Gunny Challenge," said Alan Ramsey, GSSF and Training director at Glock Professional.

Registration will be from 8:30 a.m. to 3 p.m. Saturday and 8:30 a.m. to 2 p.m. Sunday.

The Gunny Challenge Match will be conducted at 10 a.m. Sunday.

There will be an armorer on hand to service the participant's Glock pistols.

There will also be a side match that will have the same targets as the Gunny Challenge targets which will allow the participants in the Old South Regional Classic or Gunny Challenge to have some practice time before they shoot.

"We were very pleased to host the Gunny Challenge last year, which was very well attended and successful," said Sgt. 1st Class Aaron L. Hampton, the noncommissioned officer in charge of the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit Action/Combat Shooting Team.

"We look forward to working with Glock Professional again next year and for many years in the future."

For information and directions for the Gunny Challenge, visit: www.gssfonline.com.

USAMU to host final Olympic team trials May 12-22

USA SHOOTING & U.S. ARMY MARKSMANSHIP UNIT

The final 2008 U.S. Olympic Shooting Team Trials will be conducted by USA Shooting May 12 to 22 at the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit's Pool International Shooting Complex and Phillips Range.

Top pistol and small bore rifle shooters from around the United States will be vying for the final nine spots on the 2008 U.S. Olympic Shooting Team. In smallbore rifle, there is one Olympic team spot available for Men's Prone and Men's Three Position (Olympic Gold Medalist Matt Emmons has already secured a spot in both Prone and Three Position) and there are two spots available in Women's Three-Position.

In pistol, there are two Olympic team spots available for Men's Free Pistol and one spot in Men's Rapid Fire Pistol. There are two spots for Women's Sport Pistol.

Besides Emmons, shooters who have made the 2008 U.S. Olympic Shooting Team so far are: USAMU's Sgt. 1st Class Jason A. Parker and U.S. Military Academy Cadet Stephen Scherer in Men's Air Rifle; Emily Caruso in Women's Air Rifle; Jason Turner in Men's Air Pistol; Rebecca Synder in Women's Air Pistol; retired Sgt. 1st Class Bret E. Erickson and Air Force Reserve Maj. Dominic Grazioli in Men's Trap; Corey Cogdell in Women's Trap; USAMU's Pfc. Walton Glenn Eller III and Spc. Jeffrey G. Holguin in Men's Double Trap; Pfc. Vincent C. Hancock of USAMU and Sean McLelland in Men's Skeet; and Kim Rhode in Women's Skeet.

Army jazz band to play

THE BAYONET
Rachel L. Watkins

The Jazz Ambassadors, a part of the U.S. Army Field Band of Washington, D.C., will hold a concert at 7:30 p.m. April 7 at the RiverCenter in Columbus. The 19-member band will play a mixture of big-band swing, bebop, contemporary jazz, popular tunes and Dixieland. Songs include It Had to be You, Blue Moon, Time After Time, Rockin' in Rhythm, and Mango Mangue. Chief Warrant Officer 4 Gordon K. Kippola will conduct the band.

"Music is the universal language," said Sgt. David Bullman, program coordinator. "No matter what someone's language is, music is a commonality."

He said he hopes people gain an appreciation for jazz music.

The band, which is on a 34-day tour throughout Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia and Florida, won't be back to Columbus until 2010.

The concert is free, but tickets are required. Pre-order tickets at the RiverCenter box office at 935 1st Avenue, Columbus. Box office hours are from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m., Monday through Friday, from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. Saturday and one hour before the event. For more information, call the box office at 706-256-3612. For more information about the Jazz Ambassadors, go to www.armyfieldband.com/pages/ensembles/ja.html.

Classics come alive

THE BAYONET
Cheryl Rodewig

Artistic director of the Chattahoochee Shakespeare Company Troy Heard said to give the actors just 20 minutes, and they will change the way you think about classical theater.

Even people who are cynical about classic drama will enjoy the thrill of live theater, which doesn't compare with reading the text in school, Heard said. The actors present the play with a modern flair, editing longer soliloquies when necessary and using creative staging and props to make classic works more accessible to a modern audience.

With tickets at just $15 ($12 for military, seniors and students), community residents can experience the comedy and tragedy of classic theater for the first time or again and again.

ChattShakes is one of the newest theater ensembles in the area. They perform in a variety of venues in West Central Georgia. Their most recent production, William Shakespeare's romance Measure for Measure, was performed in the historic Liberty Theatre in Columbus.

Their rendition of the p[illegible]y, which deals with a second-in-command's d[illegible]ble standard and the scandal it creates in Vienna, brought the tragedy to the forefront and closed the drama in an unusual way, which may surprise even those familiar with the play.

The next performance will be Oscar Wilde's comic masterpiece The Importance of Being Earnest, the final production of ChattShakes' inaugural season. The story centers around two English gentlemen who invent alternate identities to escape the inconveniences of city and country life. With plenty of satire, clever word play and more than one romantic intrigue, The Importance of Being Earnest is great for all ages. The public is invited to the Riverfront Amphitheater, at the corner of Front Avenue and Sixth Street in Columbus, for this light-hearted romp. Theater-goers may bring their dinner to eat on the grounds during the show.

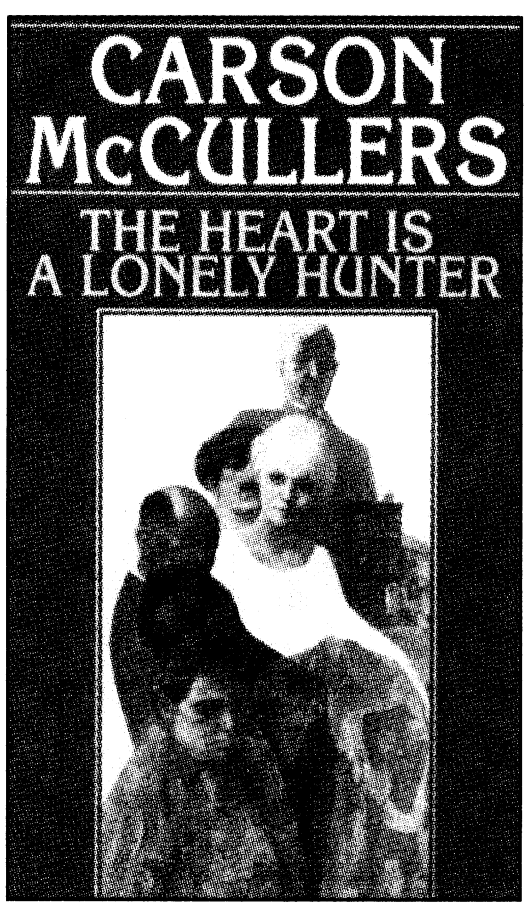
"It's perfect for a springtime picnic outdoors," Heard said. "Instead of dinner and a movie, you can enjoy dinner and live theater."

The nonprofit company plans to bring in guest teaching artists to lead workshops in local schools during the next season.

Part of the ChattShakes mission is to help the community which supports it, Heard said.

Although their current repertoire is classical, the company plans to include contemporary works in upcoming seasons. Until then, they bring the drama of Henrik Isben, Shakespeare and other literary greats to a new generation. Most of the shows are appropriate for the whole family, although some are best for older audiences.

Tickets are available at the door and by calling 702-423-6366. Season passes for $50 are good for any four shows.



The Importance of Being Earnest opens April 3 and closes April 13. Showtimes are 7 p.m. Thursdays through Saturdays and 2 p.m. Saturdays and Sundays.

For more information about the company, call 702-423-6366, e-mail chattshakes@gmail.com or go to www.myspace.com/chattshakes.

BOOK REVIEW

Local author offers window into different time

BAYONET CORRESPONDENT
Maj. Matthew Archambault

Carson McCullers published The Heart is a Lonely Hunter in 1940. She was born in Columbus in 1917 and graduated from Columbus High School.

Imagine a town where its denizens struggle day-to-day for survival. Rations are lean. Entire families, including young children, work so that all may survive. Injustice creates a social rift between two distinct groups within the town. There is no salve or escapism from this malaise beyond the dreams and ideas people can harbor inside their own souls. Is this a foreign country? No, it's our nation 60 years ago, and Carson McCullers captures this epoch in her first novel The Heart is a Lonely Hunter.

There are compelling reasons to read this novel. Perhaps not the first reason, but my own motivation was learning Carson McCullers, née Smith, is a Columbus native.

Born in late 1917 and later graduating from Columbus High School, she lived through the Great Depression in the South and all that entailed. This leads to a second reason for picking up The Heart is a Lonely Hunter. She provides a unique perspective on that era. This is a window into another time and place an ever diminishing number of people have experienced and survived. A widening ocean of time separates us from our greatest generation and but for this novel it would be easier to fly to another country than to witness life as they knew it. This was life sans television, computer and the technologic comforts many today consider to be basic needs.

Finally, while poverty and racial struggles provide an intriguing historical perspective, they are just the backdrop for the human experience, "the endless fluid passage of humanity through endless time," McCullers explores in the novel. This book is about our needs as human beings, as social animals and how extreme plight affects those needs.

McCullers uses five characters to tell her tale. Define them as ne'er-do-wells or misfits; they are, in fact, the everymen of the Depression. They are representative of their struggles — a restaurant proprietor, a black doctor, a laborer and a teenage girl. They each have dreams and a desire to share what they know, their insight, with the people around them, but they only find frustration. Their words fall on deaf ears and they feel alone until they meet John Singer, who is, ironically, a deaf mute. Still, he seems to innately understand each of them.

They begin to separately visit Singer, and over the course of a year the visits increase in frequency. So begins a unique dynamic with Singer at the center of a small universe and these individual (and nearly mutually exclusive) worlds orbiting around him.

McCullers writes in a limited third-person narrative throughout the novel. She focuses each chapter on a single character, which in combination with her narrative method provides for a few surprises as different emergent perspectives clash with reality.

The Heart is a Lonely Hunter is an enjoyable and thought-provoking novel. Similar to Harper Lee's To Kill A Mockingbird, McCuller's novel provides a glimpse into small-town life people today could scarcely comprehend. Yet beyond the historical context people from all walks of life will be able to relate to these characters.

This is not about a certain set of beliefs, the color of your skin or your age. This is not even about being heard. This is about being understood and finding an emotional and intellectual connection.

McCullers published The Heart is a Lonely Hunter in 1940 after marrying a Soldier from Fort Benning and moving away. After struggling with a litany of medical problems, she died in 1967 in Nyack, N.Y. During her life, she published five novels, two plays and 22 short stories.

Today, the Smith-McCullers House Museum stands in tribute to one of Columbus' hometown heroes. Columbus State University maintains the house as part of the Carson McCullers Center for Writers and Musicians as well as for the Marguerite and Lamar Fellowship for Writers.

This fellowship is inspired by McCullers' own experience, and so the Smith/McCullers Fellows reside in a private apartment in Carson McCullers' childhood home, to allow them uninterrupted time and space to dedicate to their work. Tours are available by calling 706-327-1911 or e-mailing mccullerscenter@colstate.edu.

Ben Campbell (Jim Sturgess) is a shy, brilliant M.I.T. student who, needing to pay school tuition, joins a group of the school's most gifted students that heads to Vegas every weekend armed with fake identities and the know-how to turn the odds at blackjack in their favor. With unorthodox math professor and stats genius Micky Rosa (Kevin Spacey) leading the way, they count cards and use a system of signals to beat the casinos big time. Seduced by the money, the Vegas lifestyle and by his teammate, Jill Taylor (Kate Bosworth), Ben begins to push the limits.

The challenge becomes not only keeping the numbers straight, but staying one step ahead of the casinos' menacing enforcer: Cole Williams (Laurence Fishburne).

RUN, FAT BOY, RUN

A charming but oblivious overweight guy (Simon Pegg) leaves his fiancée (Thandie Newton) on their wedding day only to discover years later that he really loves her. To win her back, he must finish a marathon and make her realize that her new handsome, wealthy fiancé (Hank Azaria) is the wrong guy for her.

Run, Fat Boy, Run is rated PG-13 for rude and sexual behavior, nudity, language and smoking.

STOP-LOSS

Decorated Iraq war hero Sgt. Brandon King (Ryan Phillippe) makes a celebrated return to his small Texas hometown following his tour of duty. He tries to resume the life he left behind with the help and support of his family and best friend Steve Shriver (Channing Tatum), who served with him.

Alongside their war-time buddies, Brandon and Steve try to make peace with civilian life. Then, against Brandon's will, the Army orders him back to duty in Iraq. This upends Brandon's entire world. The conflict into which he is thrown tests everything he believes in: the bond of family, the loyalty of friendship, the limits of love and the value of honor.

Stop-Loss is rated R for violence and language.

SUPERHERO MOVIE

After being bitten by a genetically altered dragonfly, high school loser Rick Riker (Drake Bell) develops superhuman abilities like incredible strength and armored skin. He decides to use his new powers for good and becomes a costumed crime fighter known as "The Dragonfly."

However, standing in the way of his destiny is the villainous Lou Landers (Christopher McDonald). After an experiment gone wrong, Lou develops the power to steal a person's life force, and in a dastardly quest for immortality, becomes the super villain, "The Hourglass." With unimaginable strength, unbelievable speed and deeply uncomfortable tights, will The Dragonfly be able to stop the sands of The Hourglass and save the world?

Also Playing

DRILLBIT TAYLOR

Ryan, Wade and Emmit (Troy Gentile, Nate Hartley and David Dorfman) are afraid of bully Filkins (Alex Frost), so they hire Drillbit Taylor (Owen Wilson), a down-on-his luck soldier of fortune who lives a homeless — he likes to say "home-free" — existence on the beach. Taylor enrolls the children in physical and mental training.

SHUTTER

While driving down a mountain road leading to Mt. Fuji, they crash into a woman standing in the middle of the road, who has appeared from nowhere. Upon regaining consciousness, Ben and Jane cannot find the girl. After arriving in Tokyo, the couple notice a white blur appearing on Ben's film. Jane fears it is the dead girl from the road, seeking vengeance for being left to die.

TYLER PERRY'S MEET THE BROWNS

A single mother living in inner city Chicago, Brenda (Angela Bassett) is laid off and struggles to make ends meet. So, when she hears about the death of a father she's never met, Brenda sets off with her children to the Georgia funeral. Nothing prepared her for her father's fun-loving family and the romance she finds.

Tyler Perry's Meet the Browns is rated PG-13 for drug content, language, sexual references, thematic elements and violence.

DOOMSDAY

Years later, the virus resurfaces in London, and Department of Domestic Security Chief Bill Nelson (Bob Hoskins) is shown satellite photos of survivors in the quarantine — meaning there must be a cure. Nelson and his team of specialists venture into the forsaken land to find this cure, coming face to face with the feral survivors who were deserted years before.

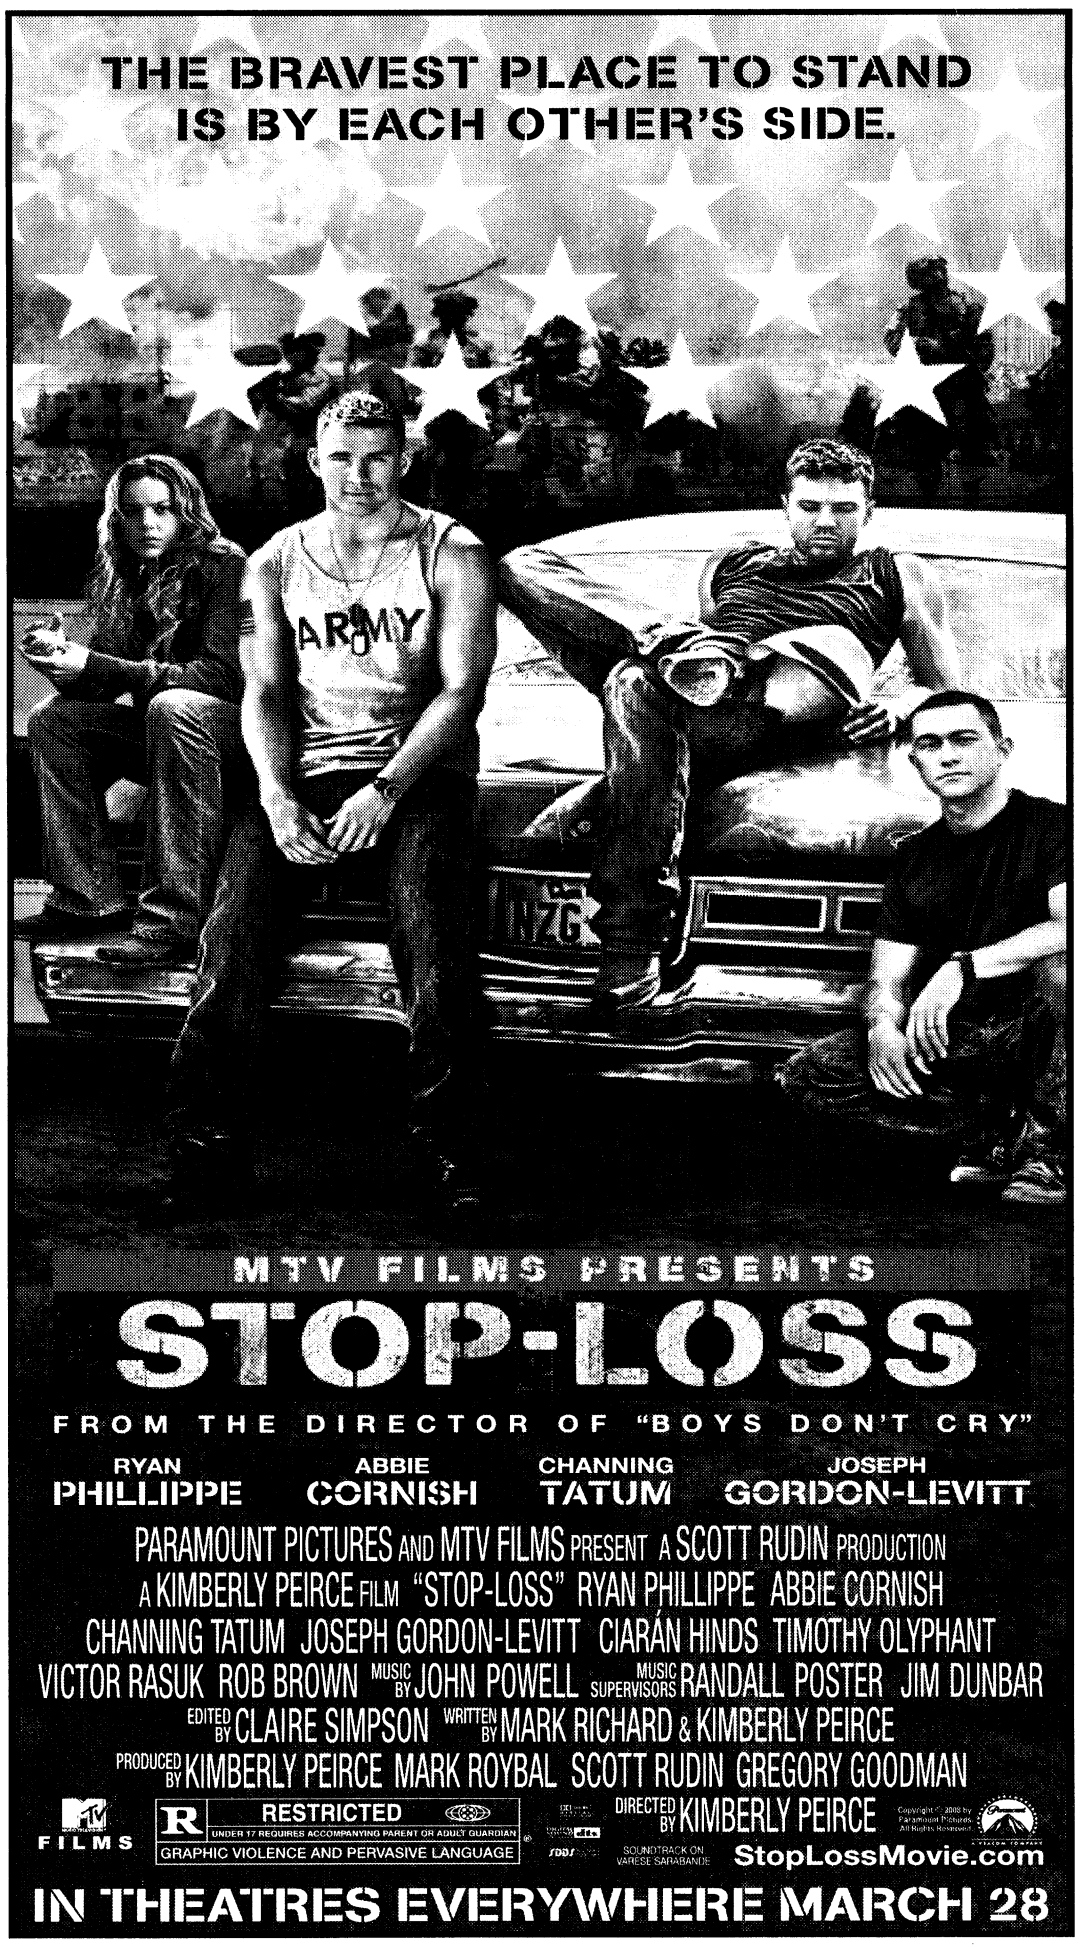
DR. SEUSS' HORTON HEARS A WHO



The elephant Horton (Jim Carrey) hears a cry for help coming from the Mayor of Who-ville (Steve Carell), who lives on a tiny speck of dust floating through the air. Suspecting there may be life on that speck and despite a surrounding community which thinks he's lost his mind, Horton is determined to help.

Horton Hears A Who is rated G.

Job fair set for May

THE BAYONET
Cheryl Rodewig

The Association of the United States Army will host a job fair from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. May 28 at the Benning Club for all Soldiers, Department of the Army Civilians, Family members and the public.

There will be between 150 and 170 companies representing local, national and international employers, said Mark Mills, Fort Benning's Employment Readiness program manager.

Those who plan to attend should bring at least 20 copies of their resume for potential on-site interviews, said Amy Bontrager, employment readiness specialist. Resumes should be clear, legible and no longer than two pages, with the person's name and contact information at the top. A clean layout, including bullet points to list previous job responsibilities, will convey information most efficiently.

"They don't want to read a book," Bontrager said. "They want it straight to the point: what did this person do at previous jobs?"

Besides career and educational experience, job seekers should include volunteer work, internships, membership with a relevant program or committee and their most recent academic accomplishments.

Job readiness involves more than a polished resume, Bontrager said. People should know how to dress for the job, answer interview questions, network and follow up with companies after a preliminary contact. Since many of today's employers post their job openings online, people must network online as well as in person.

The Chattahoochee Valley area is growing as companies move in, so there are an increasing number of job possibilities, Bontrager said.

She said it's important not to feel defeated if it takes a while to find a job, since job searching can be a lengthy and involved process.

"You have to be patient," she said. "Get your resume out there as much as you can and be aggressive."

John Boddie, contractor installation manager of the Army Career and Alumni Program, said there are a variety of resources on post for those looking to transition to another career.

Three-day workshops, provided by Veterans Affairs and the Georgia Department of Labor, helps Soldiers, Civilians and Family members with employment preparation, including interviewing skills, making or updating a resume and how to conduct a job search.

After the workshop, individuals may talk with a career counselor one-on-one at ACAP.

"They need to know how to translate the skills they've learned in the military to the private sector, and that's one of the things we help them do," Boddie said.

Service members already have skills that will help them in a business setting, such as leadership, discipline and organization, Boddie said, but they need to develop additional expertise depending on what position they want.

Mills said anyone planning to transition to another career within three years should attend the job fair to get an idea of what employers in their area of interest are looking for in job candidates, including education and career experience.

For more information about the fair, call 706-545-4043.

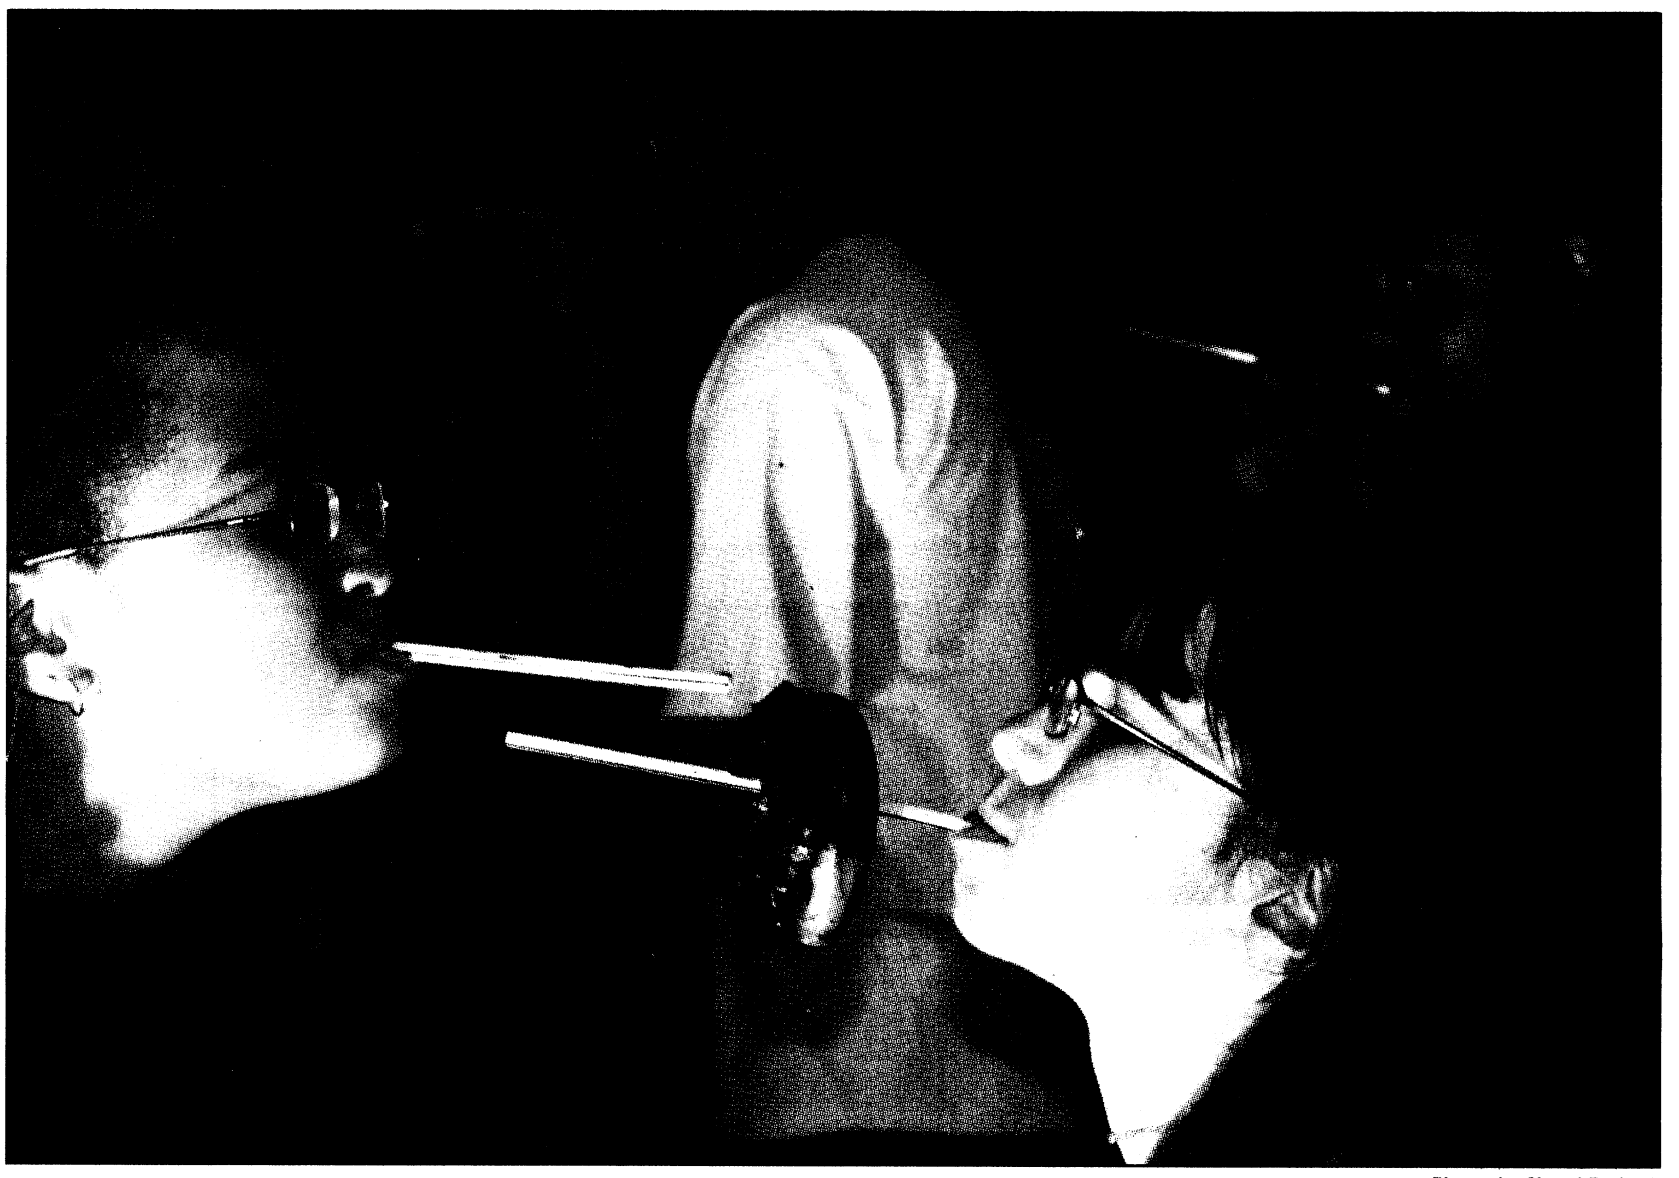
To register online for a workshop, go to https://www.acapexpress.army.mil. The next one will be April 8 through 10.

ACS offers home buying seminar April 24

THE BAYONET
Brenda Donnell

The Army Community Service Center Financial Readiness Program is hosting The Savvy Consumer's Guide to Home Buying from 6 to 8 p.m. April 24 at the Family Unit Network Center, Building 359. The registration deadline is April 17. The seminar will help Soldiers and Families have better insight into buying a home, especially in today's market, said Ann Pratcher, Financial Readiness Program manager.

Georgia ranks among the top 10 states for home repossessions, said Patti Herron, Financial Readiness Program specialist.



Herron said seminar topics will include what to look for in a home, buyers' financial soundness, research and preparation, shopping for a realtor, getting a mortgage and more.

Pratcher said financial management helps Soldiers be smarter consumers. The Financial Readiness Program offers many services and classes, such as debt management, budgeting, insurance, car buying and investment. They also offer a Personal Financial Readiness class for corporals and specialists and below.

"We help Soldiers and their Families live within their incomes," Herron said. "Many people are spending tomorrow's money today, and we want them to be more knowledgeable and understand they have control."

Club Beyond reaches military teens

THE BAYONET
Cheryl Rodewig

Military teens who want to learn about God, serve others or just hang out with friends in a fun, relaxed environment are invited to Club Beyond, a multi-denominational organization for middle- and high-school students living on and off post. Club members participate in a wide range of activities. The most recent of these, the "First Annual Doughnut Olympics," was held at Faith Middle School March 20.

Steve Paquette explains the rules and stratagems of Doughnut Olympics to 30 middle school students March 20.

Brittany Gregory, a seventh-grader, tries to catch a doughnut on a plunger handle during the ring toss portion of the Doughnut Olympics.

"It's fun," said Andres Palomar, an eighth-grader who competed with 30 other middle-schoolers in the Olympics. "My favorite part is to learn about God — things I didn't know before — and also playing games."

Middle-schoolers meet at 5:30 p.m. every other Thursday and high-schoolers meet at 7:30 every Thursday.

"It's kind of cool to just lose some stress after school, because you just have fun and enjoy yourself with all kinds of activities like games and hanging out with friends," said Maken Lane, a sixth-grader and new member.

"I joined the club because I knew it was going to be about God, and I want to be closer to him," she said.

Students can attend club nights Thursday and Bible studies Monday and Wednesday. They also participate in service projects, some nearby and others farther afield.

The last mission trip was to Enterprise, Ala., after a tornado hit the city, said Steve Paquette, community youth director, who has led the club for four years. Kids from Fort Benning, Fort Rucker, Ala., Fort Knox, Ky., and Fort Campbell, Ky., helped reconstruct a high school football field that was torn apart by the tornado.

"Working with military teenagers has been very rewarding for me," Paquette said. "They are a very unique group. I had a middle-school girl at one point who had been to seven different schools. I've had high-school kids who've been to 10 different schools. These kids adapt to change better than any kids I've ever seen before in my life, and they're very open and welcoming of anybody who comes in, because they know that they have to be."

Paquette said being in the club helps teens mature, ultimately helping them make better decisions during the crucial teenage years.

It's good for them to be accountable to other responsible teens and to have a group they can work through issues with, Paquette said. Many kids make new friends here after being at Fort Benning for only a short time.

Logan Dimsdale, a 10th-grader who has been involved in the club a year, was invited to Club Beyond after moving here from Germany. She participated in the summer camp and ski trip, but she remembers the Enterprise service project the most, especially the stories told by the students who had lost eight classmates in the tornado.

"I wouldn't be the person I am now if I hadn't gone there," she said. "Being there, you kind of reflect on yourself, (and) I got saved. I feel better knowing that I have someone — I don't have to worry about the little things. It's the big picture now."

Paquette said he is looking for volunteers to help out with the club. For more information or to volunteer, call 706-681-8948 or visit www.mcym.org.

BAH/Rent Outline

- Your rent amount is your BAH (Basic Allowance for Housing). The Villages of Benning submits a request through MAC (Military Assistance Corp) to receive your BAH via allotment.
- It is the responsibility of the service member to ensure that their BAH has been properly set-up and successfully started by Finance. The Villages of Benning is not responsible for starting your BAH, only your allotment.
- At the time of move-in, your rent is due and will be a pro-rated amount. (ie. SPC Jones moves in on April 15 and pays rent upfront from April 15 through April 30.) If need be, The Villages of Benning will accept a check post-dated for the first day of the following month at time of move-in.
- After move-in, your rent just like your BAH is paid in arrears. (ie. SPC Jones moves in on April 15 and pays pro-rated rent through April 30th. SPC Jones receives his BAH on May 1 through Finance. Rent for May 1- 31 is collected on June 1 and will be paid through the allotment to The Villages of Benning.)
- It is possible that our request for your allotment be rejected. You may check your EOM (End of Month) statement online at My Pay to confirm that we are scheduled to receive your housing allotment at the first of the month. If you see that we are not scheduled to receive your housing allotment, please contact your Management Office immediately for further instruction. (ie. We request SPC Jones' allotment but, due to circumstances outside our control, the allotment is rejected. If this occurs, SPC Jones will receive his BAH, we will not receive the allotment and the money will hit his account. SPC Jones should not spend that money and contact his Neighborhood Management Office immediately to make arrangements to pay his rent by check or money order until the matter is resolved or the allotment can be started.)
- Half of the allotment amount will be deducted from your mid-month pay and held by MAC. MAC is a company that has been contracted by the Department of the Army (not The Villages of Benning) to collect rental payments via allotment and transfer those rental payments to the Partnership. The other half of the allotment will be deducted from your EOM pay and held by MAC. On the first of the following month, MAC transfers the total amount of the allotment to The Villages of Benning.
- At time of move-out, you are responsible for rent through your move-out date. Remember that your rent is paid in arrears, so we will not receive payment for rent owed during your move-out month until the first of the following month. NOTE: The allotment can only be received in its entirety. MAC will not collect partial allotment amounts. At the time we receive your allotment, your move-out rent will be pro-rated. We will only keep a portion of the amount received that is equal to the number of days owed and will issue you a refund that will be mailed to the forwarding address you provide to us at time of move-out. (ie. SPC Jones moves out on June 15 and owes for rent from June 1-15. After we receive his total allotment on the first of July, we must first post his rental payment for days owed in June and then will process his refund. He will receive a refund in the mail, sent to the forwarding address provided to us, for pro-rated from June 16 - June 30.)

NOTE: Any monies owed that are not pertaining to rent (damage charges, lock out fees, etc.) are unable to be paid through the allotment. Those charges must be paid in check or money order form.

If you should have any questions regarding the payment of your rent, please contact your Neighborhood Management Office directly.

Children celebrate spring with egg hunt

DFMWR
Donna Hyatt

Hundreds of children from Fort Benning and the area met at Doughboy Stadium to search for eggs filled with prizes during the annual TIC Spring Eggstravaganza March 15.

Giant inflatables, arts and crafts, balloons, Columbus Lions cheerleaders and giveaways kept the children and their parents busy as Soldiers from the Officer Candidate School scattered thousands of eggs across the football field.

Providing 5,000 plastic eggs, 200 pounds of candy and prizes ranging from iPods to bicycles and almost everything in-between, employees of the TIC Federal Credit Union gave away helium balloons and twisty drinking straws to many.

"This is a wonderful way to give back to the Soldiers," said Vicky Johnson, a TIC Federal Credit Union volunteer. "I'm glad to see all these children having so much fun."

Usually held on the lawn at Riverside, this is the first year the Eggstravaganza was held in Doughboy Stadium, site of numerous farewells and welcome home celebrations since its construction more than 80 years ago.

"The reaction to this new location is mixed," said Linda Laine, Child and Youth Services Sports and Fitness Program Director.

"But the kids are having a wonderful time and that's all that really matters."

"This has to be one of the best events I've ever attended," said Pfc. Patricia Knerr as she watched her daughter scramble across the field.

"Look at all these eggs!"

Q: Why should I file with the TSP, also known as the transportation service provider?

A: There are potential advantages to TSP filing.

The TSP — the carrier, mover or storage company — is now required to provide full replacement value (FRV) coverage for your move, at no cost to you, provided you give timely notice of the damage and file with the TSP within nine months of delivery. Timely notice means giving the TSP written notice of any damaged to or lost items within 75 days of delivery. Use the pink form to provide notice (DD form1840/1840R).

You may be eligible for higher compensation, full replacement value, the cost of a brand new item, if you file with the TSP. Your MCO can only use depreciated value — the market value of a similar used item. This can make a significant difference in the amount of your compensation.

It may be easier for you. In most cases, the TSP is required to obtain and pay for estimates of repair. This may mean less running around.

You retain the safety net of being able to transfer the claim back to your MCO if you are unhappy with the TSP's offer or handling of your claim.

Knight is falling

Sgt. 1st Class Billy VanSoelen with the Army's Golden Knights tandem jumped with AMU's Spc. Matt Sigrist Wednesday in front of Infantry Hall. "I'm the strongest man in world," Sigrist said after landing on York Field. "Army Strong!" The Golden Knights visited Fort Benning to provide "centers of influence" — people who work in entertainment, government, education, and industry — an Army experience to enhance their willingness to support the Army and Accession Command's mission, said Capt. Wayne Wall, the operations officer for the Golden Knights.

Airborne events start Thursday

THE BAYONET
Bridgett Siter

The Airborne Awards ceremony is not so much about the history of the airborne community as it is about the future, said Don Lassen, the World War II veteran who heads up the annual event.

"It's a Family thing. You see generations of airborne (at the ceremony), because airborne is a Family tradition," Lassen said. "You see second generation airborne Soldiers who are bringing their children, because they want their kids to grow up airborne."

More than 200 airborne veterans will descend on Fort Benning Thursday for their 31st reunion, of sorts. The Airborne Awards actually include a number of activities other than the awards ceremony for which its named, a ceremony in which individual airborne associations from around the country are recognized for their contributions.

The formal event is held in Atlanta at the Marriott, where the veterans will meet Wednesday.

Former Jamaican soldier named post Drill Sergeant of the Year

THE BAYONET
Brenda Donnell

"I always wanted to join the U.S. Army because of what it stands for — liberty and justice..."
— Staff Sgt. Terrence Gassop

A former Jamaican soldier was named Fort Benning Drill Sergeant of the Year March 27.

Before Staff Sgt. Terrence Gassop joined the U.S. Army 10 years ago, he was in the Jamaican army for six years. He moved to America in 1995.

"I always wanted to join the U.S. Army because of what it stands for — liberty and freedom — and always coming to the assistance of the weak," Gassop said.

Gassop, who has been assigned to A Company, 2nd Battalion, 47th Infantry Regiment, since June, said winning has given him more confidence in himself.

"It's off the scale. It just makes you feel like you can do anything," the 39-year-old said.

"This is something not too many people have accomplished or will ever accomplish, and it makes me proud."

A Co. 1st Sgt. Donel Hagelin said Gassop is "topnotch — an awesome NCO," because of his experience and professionalism.

"He is one of the NCOs who truly does care about his job," Hagelin said. "He loves coming into work, and he does an awesome job."

Drill sergeants from the 192nd and 198th Infantry Brigades competed March 24 to 27 in various drill movement modules, marksmanship, a physical fitness test, common task skills tests and land navigation. They also took a written test and competed in a board before various Sand Hill sergeants major, said 1st Sgt. Troy Hilderbrand, C Co., 2nd. Bn., 47th Inf. Regt., who organized the event. The winner was determined by a combination of board points and points from the other events.

The competition is a chance to find out who is the best of the best in an extremely demanding environment, Hilderbrand said.

"They are turning civilians into Soldiers, and it's a really tough job," Hilderbrand said.

Gassop will advance to the TRADOC drill sergeant competition in a couple of months.

Reintegration process helps Soldiers adapt after deployment

THE BAYONET
Cheryl Rodewig

After returning with the 92nd Military Police Battalion from his first deployment, Spc. Corwin Atkins said a 10-day reintegration process smoothed the transition from combat to community life.

During reintegration, Soldiers attend workshops on a variety of issues, including finances, health records and safety briefings.

"They remind you you're not at war," Atkins said. "They go over all the things you need to do differently in the States."

"It bridges a gap," said Maj. Michael Johns, executive officer of the 92nd MPs, which returned from a 15-month tour in Iraq Jan. 29. "Just to walk back in the door and start where you stopped is unrealistic."

"Not only your body, but your whole demeanor needs to be acclimated," Johns said. "You may be walking in Columbus and hear a car backfire, which sounds like an explosion, or someone brushes against you and you automatically go into reaction drills, but you're not patrolling

Fort Benning Soldier receives Bronze Star Monday

197th Stryker Bradley instructor honored for bravery under fire in Iraq

THE BAYONET
Bridgett Siter

The Bronze Star Medal is an individual military decoration awarded for acts of bravery, acts of merit or meritorious service. The medal may be awarded for valor, in which case it is accompanied with an attached V.

It was a red-letter year for Sgt. Arthur Moran. In 2005 he became a U.S. citizen and took a bullet for his country in Iraq.

Moran was 15 when his family immigrated to the U.S. in 1991, seeking refuge from the civil war that raged in their native El Salvador. They settled in Illinois, where Arthur joined the Reserves after high school to pay for his college education. Then came 9/11.

"Then I thought it would be better to serve my new country," he said. "I thought it was the right thing to do."

Tuesday, as Moran was awarded the Bronze Star with V Device, his former first sergeant used those same words to describe the 32-year-old Bradley Stryker instructor as "the kind of Soldier every leader wants."

"You could always count on him to do the right thing," said 1st Sgt. Peter Lara, who drove from Fort Jackson, S.C., to pin that star on Moran's collar.

In November 2005, the 2nd Platoon of C Company, 2nd Battalion, 1st Infantry Regiment, responded to a report that Iraqi Police had come under fire from a house in the Al Sukar neighborhood in Mosul. Moran led his squad in an assault, and came under fire immediately. Inside, they encountered a well-orchestrated defense. Insurgents were firing from all directions, Moran said, and they forced him into the kitchen, where his squad was trapped under fire. In a matter of minutes, they were rendered "combat ineffective." Only two squad members escaped injury; Moran took a bullet to his knee.

That's where Lara found him, minutes later, after a Stryker breached the kitchen wall to lay down

COMMANDER'S COLUMN

NCOs perform vital role in today's Army

COMMANDING GENERAL
Maj. Gen. Walter Wojdakowski

In the Army our noncommissioned officers (NCOs) are the guardians of standards, the preservers of our customs and traditions, and the "Backbone of the Army." Just a look at our Army's actions in the contemporary operational environment clearly demonstrates the importance of our NCO Corps.

NCOs have a great impact on the development of Soldiers in our Army. To put this in perspective, consider there is no Soldier walking patrol or standing guard, nor is there a single officer leading a platoon or commanding a unit, who has not been directly influenced by an NCO during training or at home station.

Today, the U.S. Army boasts a professional and well-trained NCO Corps that was forged on the anvils of lessons learned throughout our nation's history. To gain a better understanding of the importance of our NCO Corps we must examine the time period of the Revolutionary War. This was a time when the officers of the Continental Army were simply overwhelmed with the demands of leading on the battlefield, coordinating resources, and training Soldiers. The Army desperately needed effective mid-level leadership, and from this need was born an NCO Corps with established duties and prescribed responsibilities.

Through the integration of the lessons learned from those early years, our Army developed an NCO Corps second to none. Along with advances in training has come a mission of expanded scope and increased responsibilities. NCO's today routinely perform duties once reserved for and performed by officers. Squad Leaders of today lead squads onto battlefields and employ weapon systems that were once controlled by officers. The contemporary operational environment and the technological advances of the past 10 years have reinforced the importance of maintaining a strong and systemically trained Noncommissioned Officer Corps. Our allies and many of our former adversaries have also taken note of the vital role NCOs perform and are moving toward developing a strong Corps of their own. No quick fix can replicate the years of experience our NCO Corps has acquired in a learning process that emphasizes how to think and not what to think.

Soldiers are the Army's most vital asset. As such, their care is entrusted to our noncommissioned officers. From the day a Soldier enlists in the Army until we return him safely to his Family, NCOs train, develop, care, and lead these great Americans. Every aspect of a Soldier's life from the physical, mental, spiritual, personal, and professional is carefully monitored by NCOs. NCOs train and develop our Soldiers ensuring they have all the necessary tools to fight and win on any battlefield.

The NCO Corps performs a vital role in transitioning our young officers into the professional leaders. As an essential element in the officer education system, NCOs train our young officers with realistic training. Using firsthand experience gained in the application of tactics, techniques, and procedures in combat, NCOs ensure continuity in the learning process. This is an essential part of the development of the Officer Corps.

As the transformation of our force continues, our NCOs will continue to lead the Army. I am proud of the work the NCOs at Fort Benning do every day to keep us Army Strong. I challenge you to continue to set the example for others.

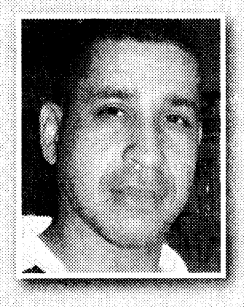
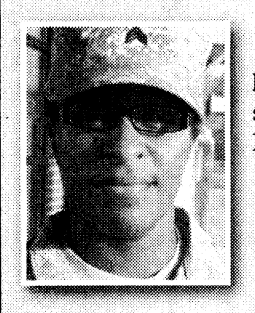
OPINION



VARIOUS VOICES

A recent study shows that people tend to shop longer and spend more money in places that smell sweet, like those that use scented candles. What are your spending "triggers?"



The atmosphere. If they're playing good music and the atmosphere is cool, I'm going to shop.

—Hemi Vyas, Family member

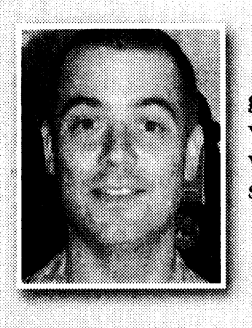
— Master Sgt. Mark Williams, 463rd Aircraft Maintenance Squadron



I have a closet full of shoes, but I keep shopping for them. Clothes or shoes — if I see them in the window, I'll stop and shop.

— Sgt. Tamika Smith, 789th Explosive Ordnance Detachment

For me, it's the store that has stuff for my car. I spend on cleaning and maintenance or anything that has to do with taking care of my car.

— Retired Staff Sgt. Joseph Mann, Columbus

I hate to shop. I go to the store to get strictly what I need, unless I'm with my wife. Then I hold the kids while she tries on clothes. She's my spending trigger.

Who's controlling the cash flow?

THE BAYONET
Bridgett Siter

For 20 years, my husband has been the breadwinner, and I've doled out the dough. I handled the checkbook. I was the one who said no to the plasma TV and yes to four sets of braces. I was the one who served leftovers 223 times last year. I'm not very popular at my house.

So I was thrilled when Tom agreed to take the budget burden off my shoulders. He'll retire soon, so he expects to be around more to handle the responsibility. He's going to be the bad guy when Mckenzie uses her monthly allotment of text messages in 15 days, when Britt wants the top-of-the-line lacrosse stick for $130 because last year's is so last year. He's going to be the one who calculates the cost of gas for three cars and four drivers. He's going to balance the checkbook and lick stamps. I'm relieved. I'm ecstatic. I'm absolutely elated.

Kind of.

Change is seldom easy, even when its change long due. I'm used to being the bad guy. What happens when I'm no longer in charge? What happens when Tom curtails my spending? Whoa Nelly.

Now I know what you're thinking, and I agree — couples should handle the household finances together. But the reality of it is this — you or your spouse will take the lead when it comes to money. You may talk about the budget and make major decisions together, but one of you will handle the drudge work. And though I can't prove it, I'd bet all the spare change in my couch that most of the household bankers on Fort Benning are women.

If I'm right, there stands to be an awful lot of couples dealing with the same situation Tom and I face in just a few weeks when Kelley Hill Soldiers return from Iraq. Potential power struggles.

Perhaps you're one of those who have shouldered the burden for the past 15 months. Have you considered how you'll adapt when it's time to share that burden or relinquish it entirely, if that's your choice? Studies show that couples argue about money more than anything else, and those studies do not account for the unique situation Army Families face, namely the redefining of roles and responsibilities during and after deployments.

I'm not about to pitch advice to you just now on how to resolve these kinds of money matters. Maybe I'll get back to you in a few months. But I do encourage you to keep your eyes open for signs of stress or discord. He may not like the way you spent money while he was away. Maybe he wants to spend all that hazardous duty pay you've been socking away on a Harley. It's time to get help.

Before you make a major purchase you can't agree on — before you let money issues ruin your reunion, get help from a neutral third party.

This week in Fort Benning history

1923

• The Cafeteria of Columbus advertised "our attraction is our food," and as a footnote, "girls will carry your trays."

• The post newspaper reported that the Post Exchange would soon carry a French salad dressing.

"As this is the first French salad dressing that has been put up in bottles in this part of the country ... we feel it is bound to become famous," the reporter wrote.

• The new Rifle Club in Columbus had an indoor range and a high velocity range. Fort Benning Soldiers and maybe even their wives should take advantage of it, a post official said.

"This is something that should be more generally followed out by more of our sportsmen ... Shooting has a call that every red-blooded American likes to head (sic), but there are a great number that hate to exert themselves to go to a proper place to shoot."

• "We're 46, Men, and Hale!" read the headline of a front page article celebrating the birthday of the Infantry School's predecessor, the School of Musketry.

• Cactus Hill, the airborne drop zone at the south end of Lawson Air Force Base, got a face lift. After a number of paratroopers were injured, post officials ordered the clearing of cactus, mesquite bushes and small thorn trees. It took a platoon of Soldiers only 13 hours to clear more than 1,000 square yards.

• A 23-year-old Ranger instructor vowed to "repay" the 23 pints of blood he received from the Red Cross when he was injured in Korea. Cpl. George Redgate figured it would take 69 months to even the account.

• Effective this week, Fort Benning Soldiers would "change over" from winter to summer uniforms, the post commander said. The summer khaki uniform without a tie would be the required Class A duty uniform. Ties would be required after hours.

* 1st Lt. Fae Adams, a former WAC and a World War II veteran, was sworn in as the first woman physician to be commissioned in the Regular Army.

1976

• A little known "big brother" program was being employed on Fort Benning. The program was designed to foster mentoring relationships between active units, in this case the 498th Medical Company, and Reserve units. Eight members of the 145th Medical Detachment out of Dothan Air Force Base, Ala., came to post to learn the latest Nap-of-the-Earth Flight Program.

Post officials increase heat injury prevention training

USAIC PUBLIC AFFAIRS OFFICE
Anthony C. O'Bryant

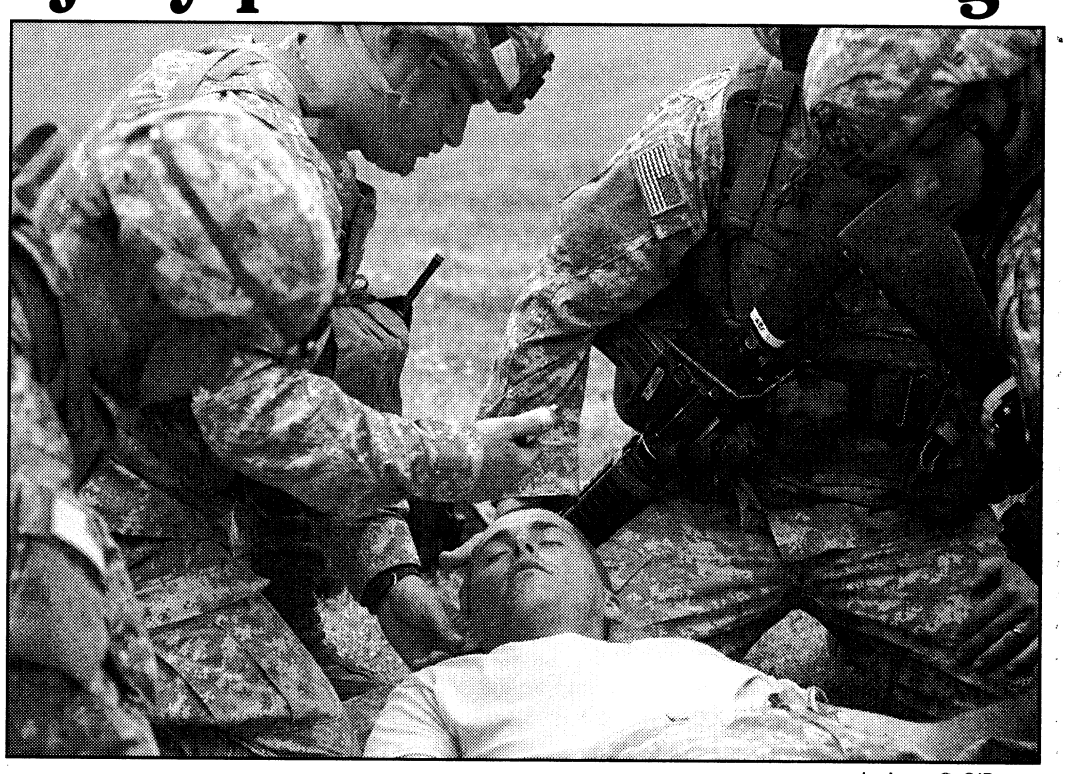
Speaking incoherent gibberish is more than just a symptom of an April fool's day prank; it is also a sign of potentially life-threatening exposure to heat.

That is why Fort Benning officials increased the emphasis on training to prevent heat-related injuries April 1.

According to the Centers for Disease Control, 8,015 deaths were caused by exposure to extreme heat from 1979 to 2003. During this period, more people in this country died from extreme heat than from hurricanes, lightning, tornadoes, floods, and earthquakes combined. Last year, one Fort Benning Soldier died from a heat stroke.

Heat exhaustion is caused by prolonged exposure to high temperatures. Symptoms are dizziness, headache, dry mouth, nausea and muscle cramps. A heat stroke is a potentially deadly situation where the core body temperature is raised and the body is not able to cool it down by sweating.

To prepare for the imminent high heat of summer, the Command Safety Office and Preventive Medicine briefed post commanders on the importance of heat-prevention training during the Combat Readiness Council Tuesday.



Following the briefing, a squad from the 2nd Battalion, 58th Infantry Regiment, demonstrated the quick ice-sheeting actions Soldiers use to help a battle buddy suffering from heat exhaustion or stroke.

"We practice this twice a day, once during physical training and once in the afternoon," said Sgt. 1st Class Jeremy Conway. "April 1 is the big day when we start emphasize more of the training."

They demonstrated the immediate actions taken to lower the core body temperature of a Soldier suffering from heat exhaustion. They used sheets soaked in ice-water, called for an ambulance and administered an IV.

Conway said he has put this training into action more than 30 times in the last three years.

The Combat Readiness Safety Day, May 23, will coincide with many units safety stand down days. The Command Safety Office will sponsor the fair in the Infantry Hall parking lot.

U.S. Coast Guard Auxiliary on post offers boating safety tips

THE BAYONET
Rachel L. Watkins

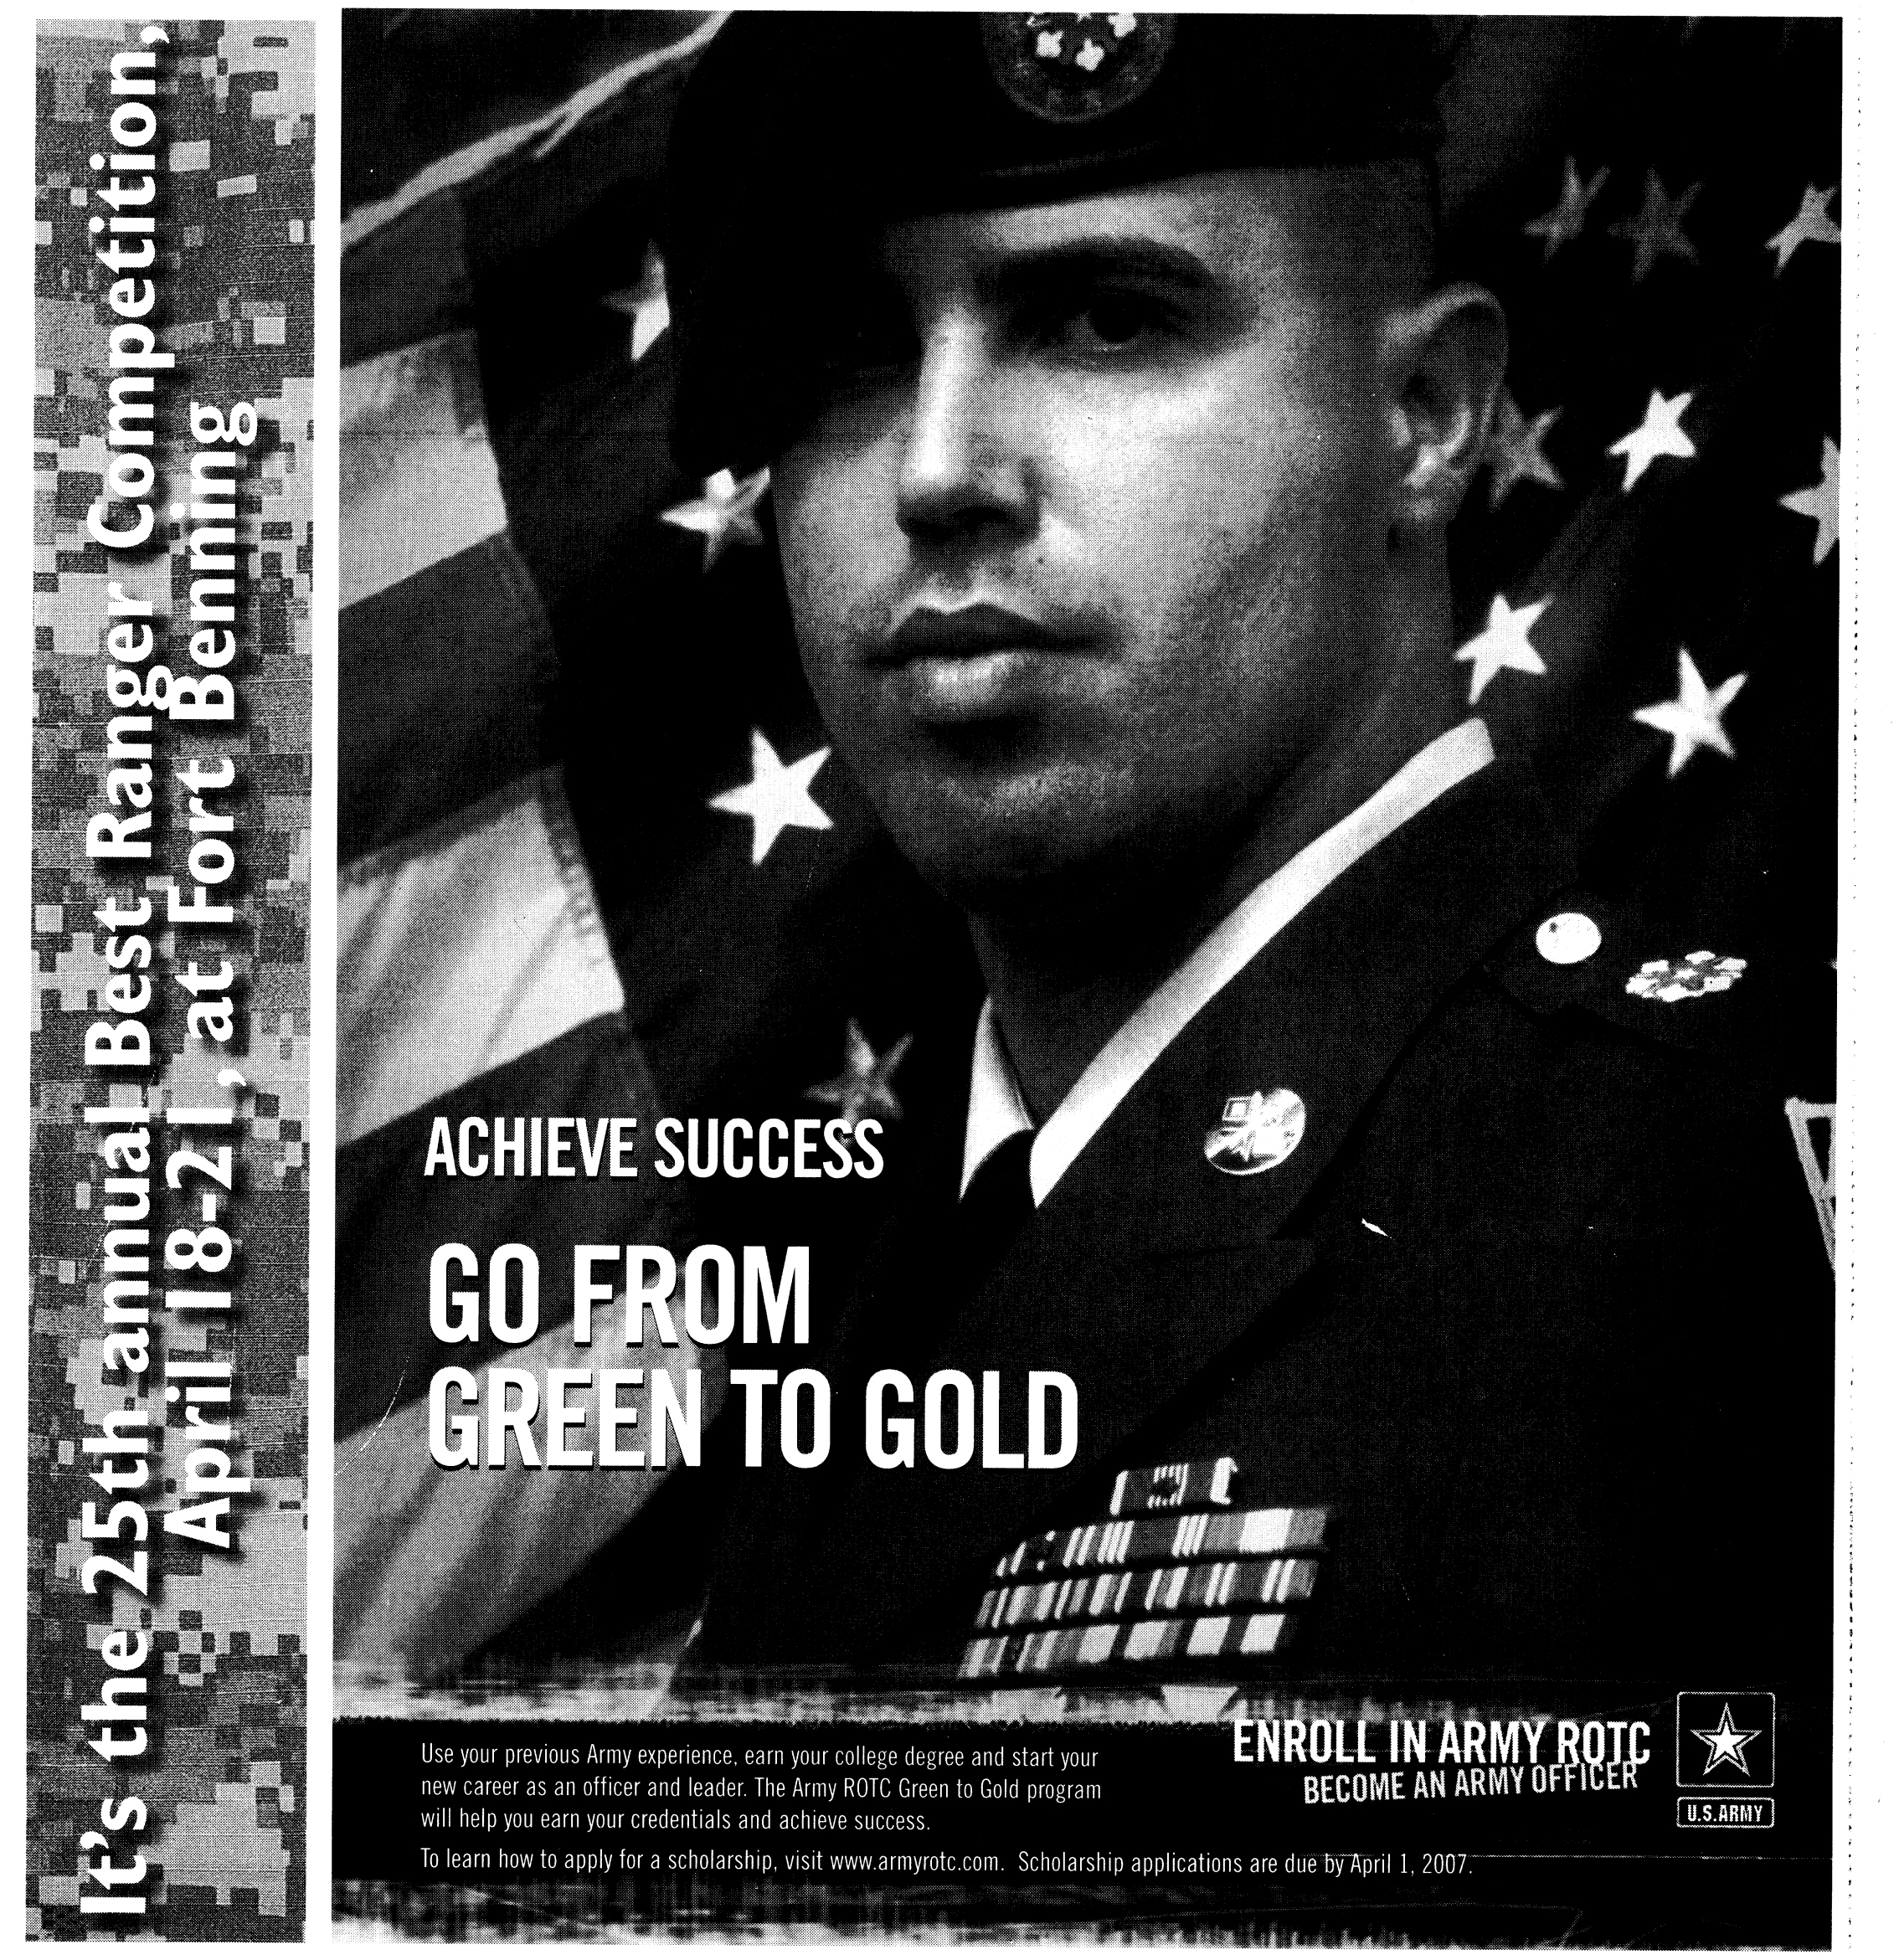
Alcohol is the leading contributing factor in fatal boating accidents, according to the U.S. Coast Guard. The number of drownings and incidents of boating under the influence of alcohol are up, said Lewis Higgins, commander of the Flotilla 81, U.S. Coast Guard Auxiliary of Fort Benning, who conducted a personal watercraft and boat safety seminar Saturday.

Wiggins said it's important to have a designated driver at all times. People who are boating under the influence can be fined up to $5,000 and imprisoned.

While alcohol is a contributing factor to fatal boating accidents, others are caused by lack of knowledge or experience, Wiggins said.

"Most accidents happen because people don't know what to do in the water," Wiggins said. "On highways, you have stop signs, yield signs and yellow lines to tell you which lane to be in. Out on the lake, there is nothing but buoys."

It's also important to not rush the preparation for a boat trip.



"Accidents happen when we are in a rush," said Chetan Sankar of Flotilla 81. 'Take time to make sure the trailer hitch is secure, make a plan, tell passengers what to do in case of an emergency, and have a first aid kit, flares and other essentials onboard in case of an emergency," he said.

In 2006, the latest statistics, two-thirds of all fatal boating accident victims drowned and 90 percent of those victims were not wearing a lifejacket, according to the U.S. Coast Guard.

Higgins said it's important to wear a U.S. Coast Guard-approved lifejacket and make sure it's the right type of life jacket. A type I is used for any type of water. A type II is made for calm inland water where someone can be rescued soon. It's important that children have lifejackets with leg straps, so the life jackets don't fall off them in a water emergency, Wiggins said.

Outdoor Recreation and the U.S. Coast Guard Auxiliary Flotilla 81 will offer another boating and safety class in June where people can learn about what to do in an emergency, what to have onboard and how to understand buoys. For more information on boating safety and statistics, go to www.uscgboating.org.

Soldiers help celebrate opening of secondary school

3RD HEAVY BRIGADE COMBAT TEAM
Spc. Ben Hutto

COMBAT OUTPOST CASHE, Iraq — More than 80 people attended the opening of a new secondary school in Khargulia, a small town east of Baghdad, March 23. Civic leaders, tribal sheikhs, members of the Sons of Iraq, National Police and leaders from 3rd Squadron, 1st Cavalry Regiment, attended the event.

"We have had schools before, but not a secondary school. This is truly a special moment," said Abu Amash, leader of the SoI in Khargulia. He thanked Iraqi Security Forces and the 3rd Heavy Brigade Combat Team for securing Khargulia from extremist forces that controlled the area almost a year ago.

"The security we have now would not have been possible without you. Students in this area will thank you for years to come," he said.

Capt. Troy Thomas, commander of Troop A, 3-1 Cav. Regt., said he was honored to help open the school.

"I hope you all will remember what my Soldiers and I have done here for a long time after we have gone" he said. "I know it has been the dream of the people of this area to have a secondary school. "It is just an honor for me and my men to have helped make this dream happen. The children that attend here will carry this country forward. I hope they will use what they learn at this school to improve their community and country in the future."

The Commander's Emergency Response Program funded the revitalization of the abandoned school, which included the addition of three classrooms, three offices and a bathroom. It will educate 200 young men and women, said Hammed Hussein, a local educator.

"This school will help our children understand and grow. Today is a great day," he said. "We are very thankful for the Americans and all they have done here. They will always have friends here in this area."

2nd Bn., 69th Armor Regt. reintegrates with 3rd HBCT

3RD HEAVY BRIGADE COMBAT TEAM
Sgt. Natalie Rostek

FORWARD OPERATING BASE HAMMER, Iraq — After spending the entire deployment detached from 3rd Heavy Brigade Combat Team, leaders of 2nd Battalion, 69th Armor Regiment, are planning the unit's reintegration into the brigade.

The 2nd Bn., 69th Armor Regt. ,was attached to 2nd Brigade Combat Team, 2nd Infantry Division, out of Fort Carson, Colo., when they deployed in support of Operation Iraqi Freedom in March 2007. The unit resided at Forward Operating Base Rustimiyah in Baghdad, directly across the Diyala River from 3rd HBCT's area of operation.

The 2nd BCT, 2nd Inf. Div., was replaced in December by the 4th Brigade Combat Team, 10th Mountain Division (Light Infantry), from Fort Polk, La.

Maj. Dean Bushnell, executive officer for 2nd Bn., 69th Armor Regt., said the battalion had no difficulty readjusting to the new unit in command.

"Both brigades we worked with did a great job integrating us and made us part of their family," he said.

During their deployment, the unit has conducted 3,494 combat patrols, 605 route clearance missions, 707 combined patrols with members of the Iraqi Security Forces, found 69 improvised explosive devices and explosively formed projectiles, and seized 19 weapons caches as of March 26.

As of March 19, 2nd Bn., 69th Armor Regt. Soldiers had conducted 21 medical operations and 21 medical engagements and assessments. Three hundred and three Soldiers re-enlisted and unit Soldiers earned 1,810 awards.

FOB Rustimiyah is in close proximity to FOB Hammer, where 3rd HBCT headquarters is located.

"We've stayed connected the entire time to the brigade," Bushnell said.

Bushnell said there will be no problems getting the Soldiers of the 2nd Bn., 69th Armor Regt. . reintegrated with the brigade upon their arrival to Fort Benning.

"Even though we were working with a different brigade," he said,"we've always upheld the high Hammer standards."

Officer Candidate School plays a vital role in the Army

THE BAYONET
Cheryl Rodewig

Officer Candidate School gives more than 1,500 Soldiers every year the opportunity to take the first step toward becoming officers in the U.S.Army. The 12-week process includes an obstacle course, combat water survival, warrior basic combat tasks, land navigation and a field leadership exercise, said Maj. Charles Price, OCS executive officer. Platoon leading officers and senior NCOs teach classes on a variety of subjects, from military history and intelligence to leadership and composition.

Retired Maj. Dan Turner, with the Human Research and Engineering Directorate Field Office on Fort Benning, teaches officer candidates combat leadership, where he discusses his participation in the Son Tay Raid in North Vietnam, which earned him the Silver Star. Turner attends several OCS functions, including graduations, and serves as a mentor for the Soldiers.

Cheryl Rodewig
Retired Maj. Dan Turner teaches a class of officer candidates about the Son Tay Raid Friday in Nett Hall.

"OCS teaches you basic combat skills. It teaches you how to be flexible, as we like to say in the military, think on your feet," said Turner, who was inducted into the OCS Hall of Fame in 2006. "These were basic tactics classes, and I used them in Vietnam."

Although OCS has changed some since Turner went through, the school still provides the needed skills for future company commanders.

"I think the biggest thing OCS does is it starts developing your confidence," Turner said. "This is a thin line. You have to be smart enough to recognize that you don't know everything, so you use the expertise available to you, but you also have to be aware that the bottom line is it's going to be your decision, whether in combat, on post or anywhere else. You can delegate authority, but you cannot delegate responsibility."

Turner completed his bachelor's degree at night while commanding a company in the 82nd Airborne Division. The key was time management, a skill he picked up in OCS.

"I've used the things I learned in OCS throughout my life," Turner said. "Some of the things I learned in OCS were very beneficial in the civilian industry also. Everything I've succeeded in during the last 40 years, I could probably attribute to OCS."

Turner said a unique thing about OCS is its ability to produce lieutenants at a rapid rate if needed by adding companies. In the last five years, the school has grown from three to five companies. ROTC and West Point take four years to produce a limited number of officers.

"OCS is the most flexible commissioning system that we have in the Army," Turner said. "That process is unique and it has been successful since 1941."

The OCS Hall of Fame will be April 17 and 18 on Main Post. For more information, call 706-545-5512.

Reintegration: Process helps Soldiers, Families adapt downtown Baghdad anymore. Reintegration makes the Soldiers aware of the process they must go through. We're setting them up for success versus failure."

Atkins said it was hard transitioning from focusing only on the mission to normal life.

"In Iraq, if it has to be done, it has to be done, and you'll push your team until it gets done, but you can't just push your wife. I was in that mindset when I got back," Atkins said.

"I'd work whenever and for however long and expect everyone else to when I was deployed, so I had to slow myself down a lot. Reintegration helps you understand that there will be changes."

The workshops last for about four hours a day. A marriage workshop, open to spouses and mandatory for married Soldiers, helps couples re-adjust after months of separation.

Atkins said it was especially helpful to have his wife attend the workshops, so she could learn about some of the changes they could expect. Many Soldiers find their Families have changed, too, since Family members often fill extra roles during their absence.

"You are a hero coming back," Johns said, "but you also had a hero holding down the home front. Reintegration can help the Soldier understand that."

After the reintegration interval, Soldiers are given block leave for 30 days. Evelyn Livermore, Fort Benning Family Readiness support assistant, said the community has a responsibility to support the Soldiers as they adjust.

"We can sympathize and empathize, but we weren't there; we don't know," she said. "But as a community, we need to embrace our Soldiers and let them know that they are our heroes."

The reintegration period also gives leadership time to watch for any warning signs in Soldiers. Chaplains and substance abuse counselors are available to talk with Soldiers if needed.

Livermore said a new program is in place that will make sure all Soldiers have someone to greet them at the terminal, welcome them back and meet any of their immediate needs. The Family Readiness Office is already planning for the return of the 3rd Heavy Brigade Combat Team, she said, to make sure they have a welcome that helps them successfully transition to life at home.

Soldier: Awarded Bronze Star with V Device Monday

suppressive fire long enough for another squad to assault from the other direction.

"There was a lot going on — a lot I don't even remember," Lara said. "But I remember that look on his face. I'll never forget it."

That look said the situation was dire. Moran couldn't stand, couldn't lead his squad out of the crosshairs and couldn't offer aid to the Soldiers strewn about him.

He propped himself against a wall where he kept a steady barrage of machine gun fire at the enemy and fed ammunition to his Soldiers. He helped stave off the insurgents long enough for the reserve squad to gain the upper hand.

"To me, I was just doing my job," Moran said Tuesday at a ceremony in Infantry Hall. "I wanted to get back in the fight, but I couldn't get up off the floor. My guys were depending on me."

It was Moran's actions under pressure that kept his Soldiers focused on the mission, Lara said. The platoon took 11 casualties and lost one Soldier.

Soon after Moran's unit pulled out of the building, Special Forces went in, looking for the rest of the enemy.

But the insurgents had escaped through an underground tunnel and triggered a remote detonator and blew up the building, killing everyone in it.

One C Company Soldier was awarded the Distinguished Service Cross for his actions that day. Six were awarded Silver Stars, and Moran was the ninth to receive a Bronze Star. A paperwork problem delayed the award.

"It took far too long," Lara said. "I lost sleep nights wondering if he was going to get what he deserves. I'm happy now, because this was the right thing to do."

Ceremony: Set for Thursday

Thursday they'll attend a 10 a.m. Airborne 5000 demonstration at Eubanks Field, followed by a memorial ceremony at the Airborne Walk. Former assistant commander of the 101st Airborne Division retired Maj. Gen. Gerald Bethke will be the guest speaker.

Lassen, who publishes the monthly Static Line newsletter for the airborne community, said he's hearing more and more from younger veterans interested in events like the Airborne Awards.

"And it's a damn good thing, because the World War II guys are dying every day," he said. "It's important we have these younger guys involved for the future of the airborne. 'Cause it's still the airborne that gets things done, you know."

The Thursday event on Fort Benning is free and open to the public.

To reserve a place at the banquet in Atlanta on Friday, call Lassen at 770-478-5301.

Sgt. Walter Craig, U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit service rifle instructor, assists Pvt. Michael Ramirez, a Soldier with A Company, 2nd Battalion, 54th Infantry Regiment, as he fires at Easley Range March 27. Soldiers and their drill sergeants are participating in a test that is combining Asymmetrical Warfare Group combat marksmanship and U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit traditional marksmanship.

OSUT Soldiers participate in marksmanship test

THE BAYONET

Steve Satern, Civilian Marksmanship Program instructor, talks to a Soldier Thursday about his shooting technique.

The 198th Infantry Brigade is partnering with the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit in a test designed to give Soldiers a better marksmanship program.

"In their second day of marksmanship training, they are hitting the target with more accuracy than usual," said Capt. Jeff Marshburn, A Company, 2nd Battalion, 54th Infantry Regiment commander about his one station unit training Soldiers, who were firing from 300 meters at Easley Range Thursday.

The Soldiers and their drill sergeants, in week four of 14, are participating in a test that is combining combat marksmanship and traditional, known-distance marksmanship, said Lt. Col. Christopher S. Forbes.

Drill sergeants learned a different approach to teaching marksmanship from September to December from Asymmetrical Warfare Group instructors.

Now, they are combining that with instruction from four USAMU marksmanship instructors who are being assisted by six Civilian Marksmanship Program instructors. CMP is government-chartered and focuses on youth development through marksmanship.

"What we're doing now is taking the best of AWG and the best of USAMU and coming up with a combined program that teaches Soldiers not only what's the best way to apply marksmanship fundamentals, but also how to handle weapons and apply it to a combat environment," Forbes said.

Sgt. Walter Craig, USAMU service rifle instructor, said there were several advantages of the test training, such as a smaller number of students per instructor and a greater number of rounds going downrange.

The most important advantage for the Soldiers was the immediate feedback about light, temperature and wind — the real world environment, he said.

"I was able to show a student how the impacts were changing on the target as the wind shifted. As we watch them shoot, we are identifying problems before bad habits form," he said. "When they graduate, this group will have the best 300-meter group in the Army, which are distances Soldiers are encountering in (combat zones)."

Forbes said there are multiple layers of the test. Not only are they testing a new marksmanship program for relevance in a combat environment, they hope the Soldiers will learn more quickly. The cadre is also learning better teaching and training techniques.

The new system incorporates firing from behind barriers and from different combat positions and multiple exposures, he said.

Some targets must be hit multiple times just as some enemy combatants may not fall because they have been shot, he said.

"This is very realistic," Forbes said. "There are ample stories from Iraq and Afghanistan, where the round will pass right through the enemy, and he'll continue to fight until you hit a vital organ and kill him."

ACAP helps Soldiers transition to civilian life

THE BAYONET
Brenda Donnell

Master Sgt. Kenneth Oliver, will retire in January after 26 years in the Army. A mortarman the majority of his career, Oliver is now the mortarman course manager guiding other mortarmen through their career progression.

Preparing for his retirement, he attended the Army Career and Alumni Program briefing.

ACAP is where Soldiers learn about Transition Assistance Program workshops; Veterans Administration briefings; career counseling; relocation assistance; job assistance, including how to dress, and interview, and resume preparation; small business assistance; how to apply for a federal job; retirement counseling; job fairs and more.

"(ACAP) has opened thousands of avenues," Oliver said. "It's all because of what ACAP has become. Now, instead of me selling myself, the Army has taken on the role to prepare people."

Since 1992, ACAP has smoothed Soldiers' transitions from Army life to civilian life.

Before then, Soldiers were on their own after leaving military service, said John Boddie, ACAP contract installation manager.

Although pre-separation briefs and completion of DD Forms 2648 or 2648-1 are mandatory, most ACAP services are not mandatory.

Taking advantage of all that ACAP offers is highly recommended, Boddie said.

Counselors with master's degrees perform career counseling, and many are prior service members. Soldiers can use any of the 16 computer workstations to look for jobs, build resumes and more.

There is also a free service offered by the Disabled American Veterans to help Soldiers who need to apply for disabilities.

An on-site representative can conduct or participate in pre-discharge transition assistance briefings, review service medical records and confer with rating specialists, physicians and other discharge processing staff members. For more information about disability assistance, call Kevin Hill at 706-545-2308.

A new online service is ACAP Express for Soldiers who are deployed or who serve in remote locations. Soldiers can register for mandated pre-separation counseling; schedule TAP employment workshops; schedule VA Briefings; schedule other employment assistance training; use ACAP tools to write resumes and cover letters, and more.

For more information about ACAP Express, visit www.acapcenters.army.mil/ACAP_WEB/expressWelcomePage.do, using AKO account information to log onto the site.

Retirees and their Family members will receive assistance for the rest of their lives. Department of Defense Civilians can use ACAP during their employment with the government.

For more information about ACAP services, call 706-545-2309, go to Building 2634 in Soldiers' Plaza or visit www.acapcenters.army.mil and use AKO account information to log in.

BENCH NOTES

ERIN NASH

Final Four make history

For the first time ever, all four number-one seeds in the NCAA have made it to the Final Four, proving my bracket right and busting a lot of others.

Memphis will play UCLA at 6:07 p.m. Saturday, followed by UNC versus Kansas at 8:47 p.m. I've got UNC going against UCLA for the national title, with UNC winning it all. The final game will be Monday at the Alamodome in San Antonio, Texas.

Spring has sprung, bring on the baseball

Although the Red Sox took on the Athletics in Japan in late March, the real regular season began with the Atlanta Braves playing the Washington Nationals in their brand-new ballpark March 30. President George Bush threw out the first pitch. The Nationals won on a walk-off homer by third baseman Ryan Zimmerman, 3-2.

Hamlin wins at home track

Though the race was constantly under the threat of rain, drivers finished the 500 laps and Denny Hamlin came out the victor at the Goody's Cool Orange 500 at Martinsville Speedway. Hamlin is a native of Chesterfield, Va., just 167 miles from Martinsville.

This is the second race of the season that a Toyota has won. This week's Sprint Cup action begins at 1:30 p.m. on Fox for the Samsung 500 from Texas Motor Speedway.

NFL sets season-openers

It's never to early to start thinking about football, even though I'm still bitter about the Patriots' loss to the Giants in the Super Bowl.

The NFL announced kickoff weekend will start with the Giants playing their rivals, the Redskins, Sept. 4. The Sunday night prime-time game will be the Colts versus the Bears. Monday Night Football ties the Packers taking on the Vikings in the first game, and the Raiders playing the Broncos in the late game.

Guess I'll have to settle for the TV

After a quick perusal on www.masters.org, I found that all the tickets to the golf tournament are sold out. I've always wanted to go to Augusta and see it live, but once again I'll settle for watching it on my television.

Early round live coverage begins at 4 p.m. April 10 and 11 on ESPN. Weekend coverage will start at 3:30 p.m. April 12 and 2:30 p.m. April 13 on CBS. It's too easy to say Tiger Woods will win, but I'm not a big gambler and will go with the sure bet.

Banks gets bronzed

Banks, also known as "Mr. Cub," was the first Cub to have his number retired in 1962. Chicago also honored Banks by declaring it "Ernie Banks Day."

Post team to participate in Mountain Man

Tom Siter, Don Vail, Lori Smith, Jesse Taylor and Ken Wetherill will compete in the Mountain Man March Saturday in Gatlinburg, Tenn. The team will hike 26.2 miles through the Smokey Mountains.

Five members from the Department of Family Morale, Welfare and Recreation will participate in the Mountain Man Saturday in Gatlinburg, Tenn. The team includes Ken Wetherill, Lori Smith, Thomas Siter, Don Vail and Jesse Taylor.

"I'm a little nervous, but we're all looking forward to it," Smith said. "We're a tight knit group, and I know this will be a great experience for all of us."

The march honors 1st Lt. Frank B. Walkup IV, who was killed in Iraq June 16 by an IED. The race is sponsored by the University of Tennesee's Army ROTC Ranger Company.

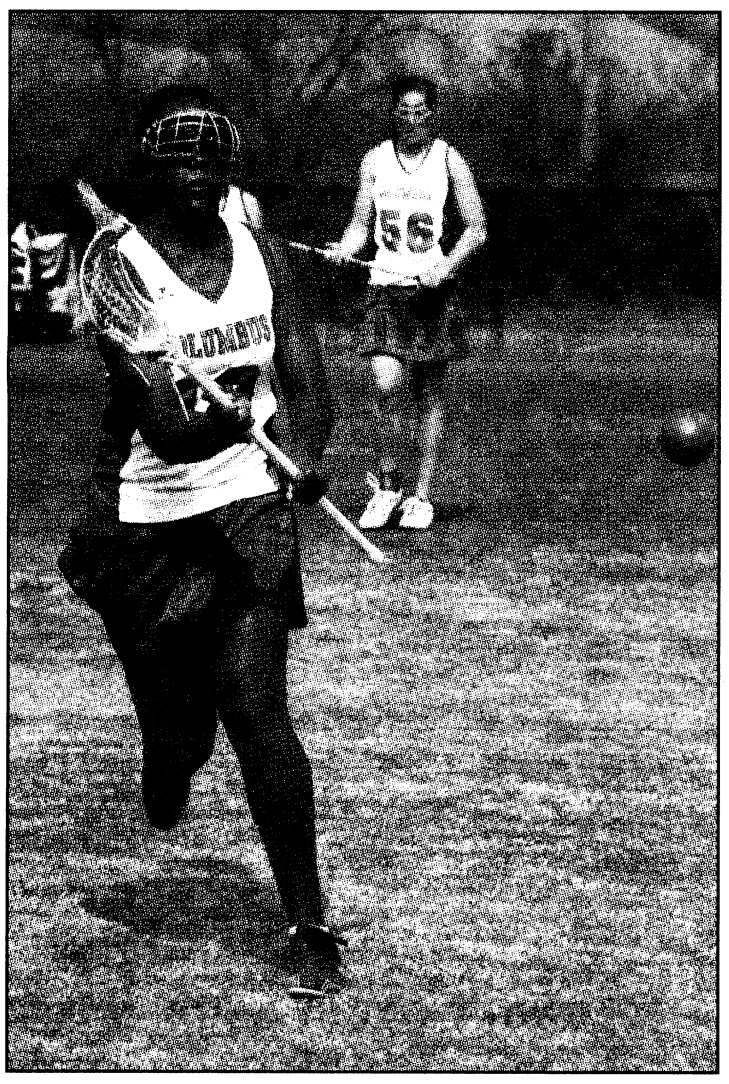
Each five-member team will hike 26.2 miles through the Smokey Mountains. All five members must cross the finish line within 20 seconds of each other.

The DFMWR team will participate in the Civilian Light class. They have been training for a month, doing hikes and road marches from four to 21 miles.

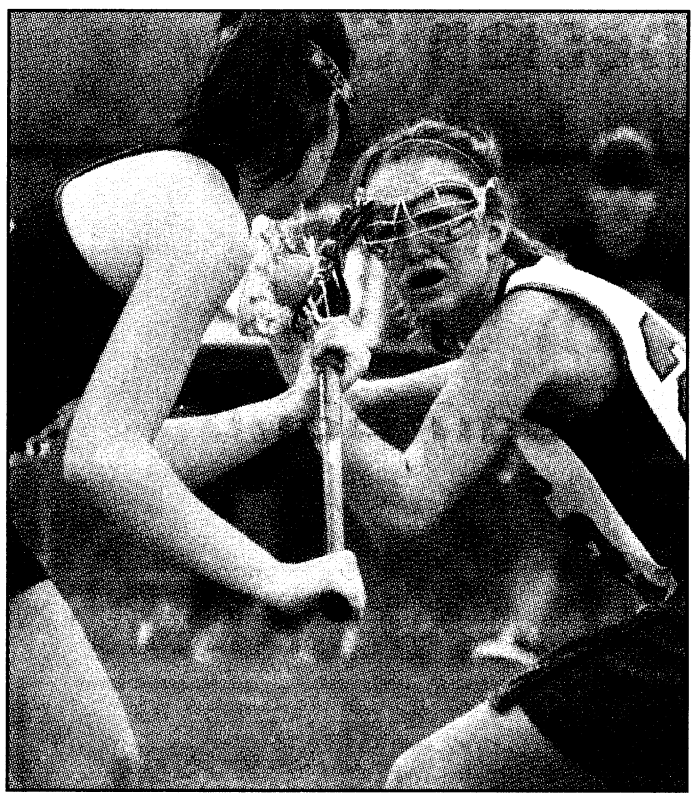
"The training is tough," Siter said. "My knees were shot after my last march, but it feels good after you finish."

Although the race is competitive, the team plans to approach it at a moderate, comfortable pace, Siter said.

"Were definitely not trying to kill ourselves out here. We just plan on having fun and working as a team," he said.



The money raised for this event will support UT ROTC and the Fallen Soldier Relief Fund to help children who have lost a parent in the war.



"There are Soldiers in Iraq doing much more difficult things on a daily basis," Smith said.

"With the help of my teammates, I believe I can do this. It's the least I can do."

Elf Run set for May

THE BAYONET

Santa's Castle of Fort Benning will sponsor the second annual Elf Run Fundraiser 5K race and one-mile Family Fun Run/Walk, Saturday May 17 at Stewart Watson Field.

The race was a huge success last year exceeding expectations with more than 40 families and 90 kids participating, said Happy Garner, president of Santa's Castle.

This year, the 5K race will have no team categories. The race will consist of three individual categories — male, female and children younger than 18.

"A lot of people wanted to enter last year, but they weren't able to get a team together," Garner said. "This change will allow people that want to race by themselves to come out."

Hermandad edges out Libertadores in WHINSEC battle

THE BAYONET
Mitchell Thomas IV

The Hermandad team came from behind to defeat the defending champions, the Libertadores, 2-1, in a winners bracket preseason intramural soccer battle of WHINSEC teams Monday at Doughboy Stadium.

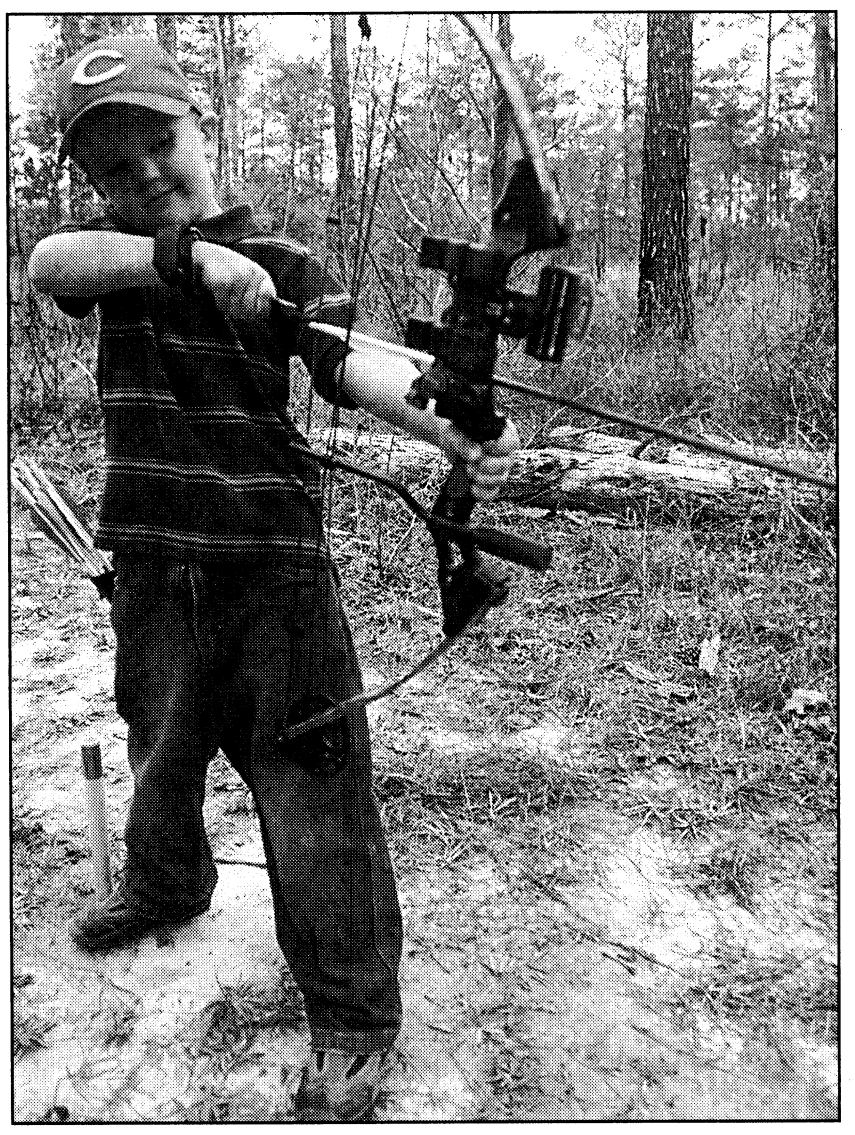
In the first half, both teams balanced each other out with quick attacks and solid defensive.

But in the second half, they asserted themselves offensively. In the first two minutes of the half, the Libertadores' Francis Brissett caught the defense sleeping to score the first goal of the game. Two minutes later, Hermandad's Oswal Sigueñas evened the score.

With less than four minutes to go, Sigeuñas caught the defense sleeping again to score again.

"We were losing all our passes from the beginning of the match," Delgado said. "They (Hermandad) were using the whole field, and we didn't do the same. We have got to use the field more."

Jose Llrrego, the Hermandad goal keeper, made a game-saving stop by blocking a shot headed in by José Rosales in the last minute of the game.



The preseason tournament continues through Tuesday. Games will begin at 6:30 p.m. at Doughboy Stadium.

Uchee Creek archers qualify for state ASA tournament in August

THE BAYONET

Nearly 150 shooters competed in Sunday's Archery Shoot at Uchee Creek. This shoot, the third of the archery season and the first state qualifier, attracted competitors from around the southeast.

Winners in each class qualified for the Archery Shooters Association shoot, which will be at Uchee Creek in August.

Michael Smith, a Soldier in the 4th Ranger Training Battalion who placed third in both the Bow Novice Class in January and the Hunter Class in February, said archery takes him back to his roots.

"This is a big tradition in my Family," said Smith, who has been shooting competitively for 16 years. "My father was a shooter, and his father was shooter. I'm carrying on a legacy."

For Blake Burger, who qualified for the ASA tournament earlier, this shoot was for leisure and practice. Burger has been shooting in the Semi-Pro class for three years after a hiatus that lasted more than a decade.

"I just got burned out with (archery) so I had to take a break," Burger said.

"But after fishing got too expensive, I came back. I just couldn't stay away from it."

Burger, who is currently ranked fifth in the ASA for Shooter of the Year, will be competing in a national shoot in Paris, Texas, this weekend.

58 shooters qualified Sunday for the Archery Shooters Association tournament August 8 through 10 at Uchee Creek. For more information on the shoot or the Uchee Creek Archery Club, call 706-685-3060.

This competition was the first 3D archery experience for Samantha McGregor of Gainesville, Fla.

"I've had a great time," said McGregor who has been shooting for less than a year.

"I've never shot where I didn't know the yardage, so figuring out how to shoot at different distances is challenging."

For more information, call 706-685-3060.

Volleyball: CRC defeats 30th AG

THE BAYONET

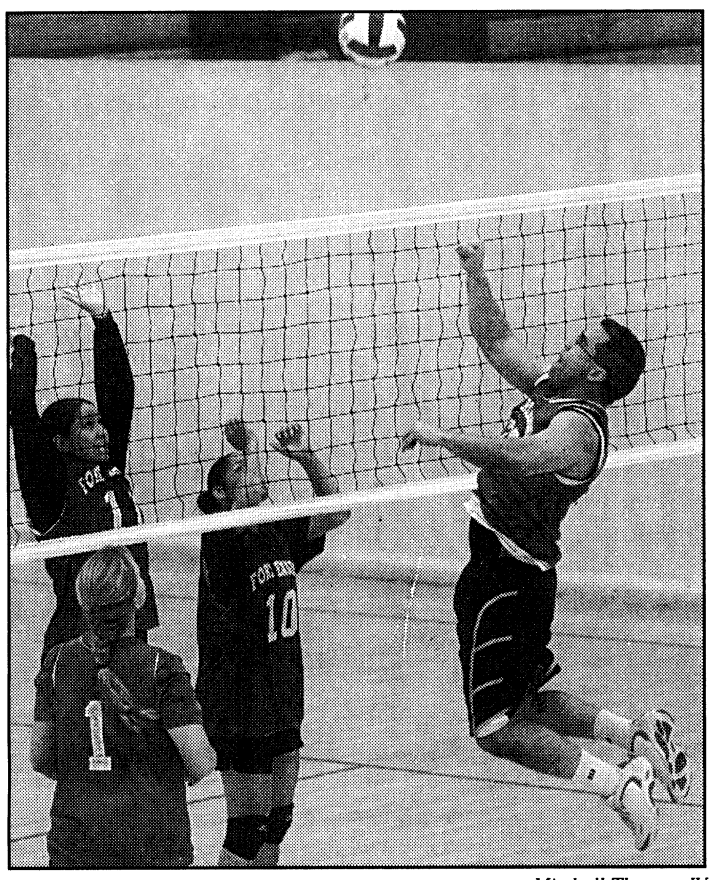
The CONUS Replacement Course beat the 30th Adjutant General twice on the second night of the volleyball preseason tournament March 27 at Smith Fitness Center.



CRC made solid sets and passes at the net. But 30th AG made a brief run, scoring four straight points. CRC's Louis Garcia and Jose Rosario led their team to a 25-20 win in the first game.

30th AG fell to CRC, 25-13.

"We didn't have it together as a team tonight," said 30th AG's Joseph Thomas. "Once we get some practice in, we'll pick it up in the regular season."

FIT FACTS

MWR FITNESS DIRECTOR
Lori Smith

I want to talk about a few comments we have received over the past few weeks.

• Pull-up bars: We have had several requests for pull-up bars in gyms. We do have chin dip stations or gravitons in all our facilities, and we are researching pull up bar stations that will actually last without being mounted to the wall. If you wonder what I mean about "last," go to Smith Fitness Center and look at the punching bag bracket. Apparently someone used it as a pull up station and pulled the whole thing out of the wall.

• Facility feedback: We've had several complements on our facilities, particularly Audie Murphy and Kefurt. We have refinished the basketball and racquetball courts at Audie Murphy, and we had renovations completed at Kefurt several months ago. We are working on new bleachers and saunas. Keep in mind that Audie Murphy was built in 1972 and Kefurt in 1961, so keeping them functional in 2008 can be a chore. But we strive to make these facilities the best we can for our customers. Thank you for noticing and taking the time to let us know.

• Customer complaints about customers: We have received several complaints about customers sitting on equipment and talking on their cell phones. Is this what the world has come to? Who goes to the gym to talk on the phone? Let's take the time we spend at the gym to focus on working out our bodies, not our ears, and try to have respect for other people. If you just must use the phone, please walk away from the gym floor and allow others to work out in an environment free of cell phones.

• Evening aqua aerobics: We've had several requests for aqua aerobics classes in the evening. We now have an instructor. Evening aqua aerobics will run Tuesdays and Thursday from 5:30 to 6:30 p.m.

Try this class and see what a great workout aqua aerobics can be.

Comment cards are very important to us, and we welcome the feedback. We try to do the best we can to accommodate many of the requests we get.

It's also a real benefit to our employees to actually hear they are doing a good job. I was at a facility this week when a customer approached the manager to tell her what a great job she and her staff were doing. The manager's face lit up, and she was obviously very proud of her facility and staff. A pat on the back goes a long way sometimes.

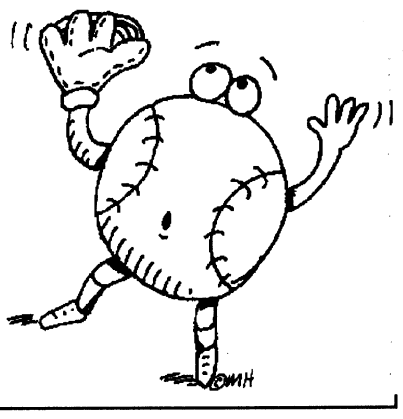
The Army announced its intention to prepare an Environmental Impact Statement (EIS) for managing and accommodating increased training requirements at Fort Benning, Georgia (Maneuver Center of Excellence EIS) in the Federal Register on March 18, 2008. This proposed action is needed to transform the Army, meet the increased national security and defense requirements of the 21st century, maintain training and operational readiness levels of the force, and preserve a high quality of life for U.S. Soldiers and families.

This announcement, on April 2, 2008, initiates the start of the 30-day public involvement process. As part of this process, the Army is holding a scoping meeting at the location below and invites your participation. This meeting will be held in an open house format (meaning there are no formal presentations), and your participation will assist Army representatives identify issues/concerns associated with the proposed action, define the scope of analysis for the EIS, and identify reasonable alternatives and mitigation.

Army representatives, displays, and informational material will be available at the meeting on Tuesday, April 22nd, 2008 from 3 p.m. to 5 p.m. and 6 p.m. to 8 p.m. The meeting will be held at the:



Elizabeth Bradley Turner Center, Founders Hall, Room 141
Columbus State University on the corner of East Lindsey and College Drives

You may submit written comments to:

Mr. John Brent, Fort Benning Directorate of Public Works
Environmental Management Division
Bldg. #6 (Meloy Hall), Room 310, Fort Benning, GA 31905

Although Fort Benning will accept comments throughout the process, we recommend that your scoping comments be sent by May 1, 2008 to ensure equitable consideration in the draft EIS. If you have any further questions about the Transformation proposal, you may contact Ms. Monica Manganaro, (706) 545-3438 Fort Benning Public Affairs Office, or Mr. Brandon Cockrell at (706) 545-3210.

Columbus Catfish hope to repeat last season success

THE BAYONET
Mitchell Thomas IV

The Columbus Catfish hope to be as successful this year as they were last year, when they won the South Atlantic League championship and swept the West Virginia Power.

"We've got a good group of guys, and it's going to be a blast," said Cody Cipriano, the team's starter at second base. This will be Cipriano's first full season with the team after being recruited from the Hudson Valley Renegades of the New York-Penn League.

After wrapping up spring training Sunday, the Catfish began a four-game home series against the Savannah Sand Gnats Thursday.

Most of the players are former Renegades.

"The fact that most of these players know each other should be a tremendous asset," Quatraro said. "We have a great unit this year, and the guys get along well."

Columbus has had a Class A team since 1885. In 1936, the Columbus Red Birds, an affiliate of the St. Louis Cardinals, became the city's first team in a professional farm system. The Red Birds went on to win first place in the South Atlantic League five out of the next 11 seasons.

Although the city has a rich baseball history, the team remains focused on the goal of development.

"Our goal is always to win games and a championship, but our focus is to get these guys to be championship players in the big leagues," Quatraro said. "Unlike the pros, you may have a great team, but you don't know what the other teams have, so we have to play consistent every game.

Henry Wrigley, the team's first baseman, said the Catfish players are looking forward to defending their title.

"We have a group that meshes well," Wrigley said "I think we'll be an exciting team to watch."

The Catfish will have Military Appreciation night against the Charleston RiverDogs June 21 at Golden Park.

Exertainment phenomenon combines fitness and gaming fun

THE BAYONET
Mitchell Thomas IV

Video games have been a part of American culture since the late '70s. But a new phenomenon is sweeping the nation — "exertainment," said Capt. Tim Dunnigan, owner of Play N Trade Video Games at Columbus Park Crossings.

The term exertainment is a hybrid of entertainment and exercise. Extertainment games and systems feature the same competitive gaming involved in typical video games, but it incorporates the use of motion, sometimes the entire body, as opposed to just hands, Dunnigan said.

One of the systems that has pushed this phenomenon is the Nintendo Wii, which was introduced to the U.S. in 2006. Most of the system's games require the use of its unique Wii remote controller, the "Wiimote." The controller duplicates the users arm movement, Dunnigan said

"For example, the Wii allows you to use your exact bowling stance and release. Everything you do happens in the game, and the ball will roll as hard or slow as when you released it, which is what makes it so amazing," Dunningan said.

Lewis Diaz, of Columbus took his son Bailey and daughter Brianna to try the Wii for the first time Sunday.

"I think it's pretty amazing," Diaz said. "We've had just about every gaming system released, but, Brianna couldn't put the Wii down.

The major draw for parents is that the system gives their children physical activity as well as entertainment, Dunnigan said. With titles like Dance Dance Revolution, kids and adults are becoming more active in the comfort of their homes."

"When my kids play Dance Dance Revolutuion, they literally break into a sweat," Diaz said. My 15-year-old son Brandon doesn't have an ounce of fat on him, and when he plays it, his face is red. He has truly been through a workout."

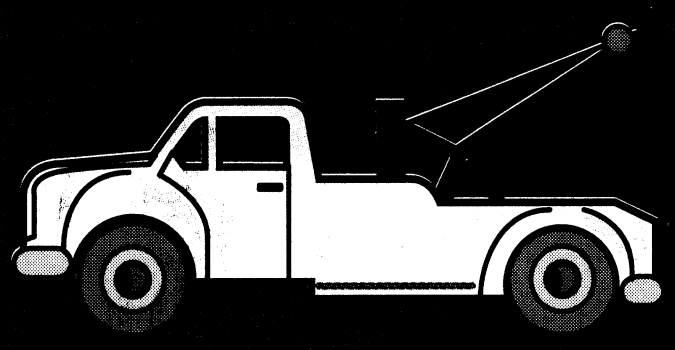
Although systems like Wii provide some physical activity, it shouldn't be used as a substitute for fitness, said Jessica Troutman, a certified personal trainer at Smith Fitness Center.

"It shouldn't be considered an adequate form of exercise," Troutman said. "Exercise has to boost your heart rate up to a moderate degree for at least a 30-minute period. But for a family or child who has little to no physically activity, it is a good starting place."

Another popular trend with gamers around the world is gaming tournaments.

The Directorate of Family Morale, Welfare and Recreation will host a Wii Warrior Challenge Tournament April 14 through 18. Participants will compete in bowling, baseball, tennis, boxing and golf.

There will be a championship round held for the top four competitors in each sport April 26.



Registration is open to any DFMWR authorized patron, including active-duty Soldiers, retirees, DoD Civilians and Family members, 18 and older.

Dunnigan said exertainment is likely to remain the most popular method of gaming in the future.

"Sometimes monotonous gaming can get old. That's why the Wii has created such an amazing buzz," Dunnigan said. "With the exertainment value of the Wii, you don't just sit down. You can't just sit down."

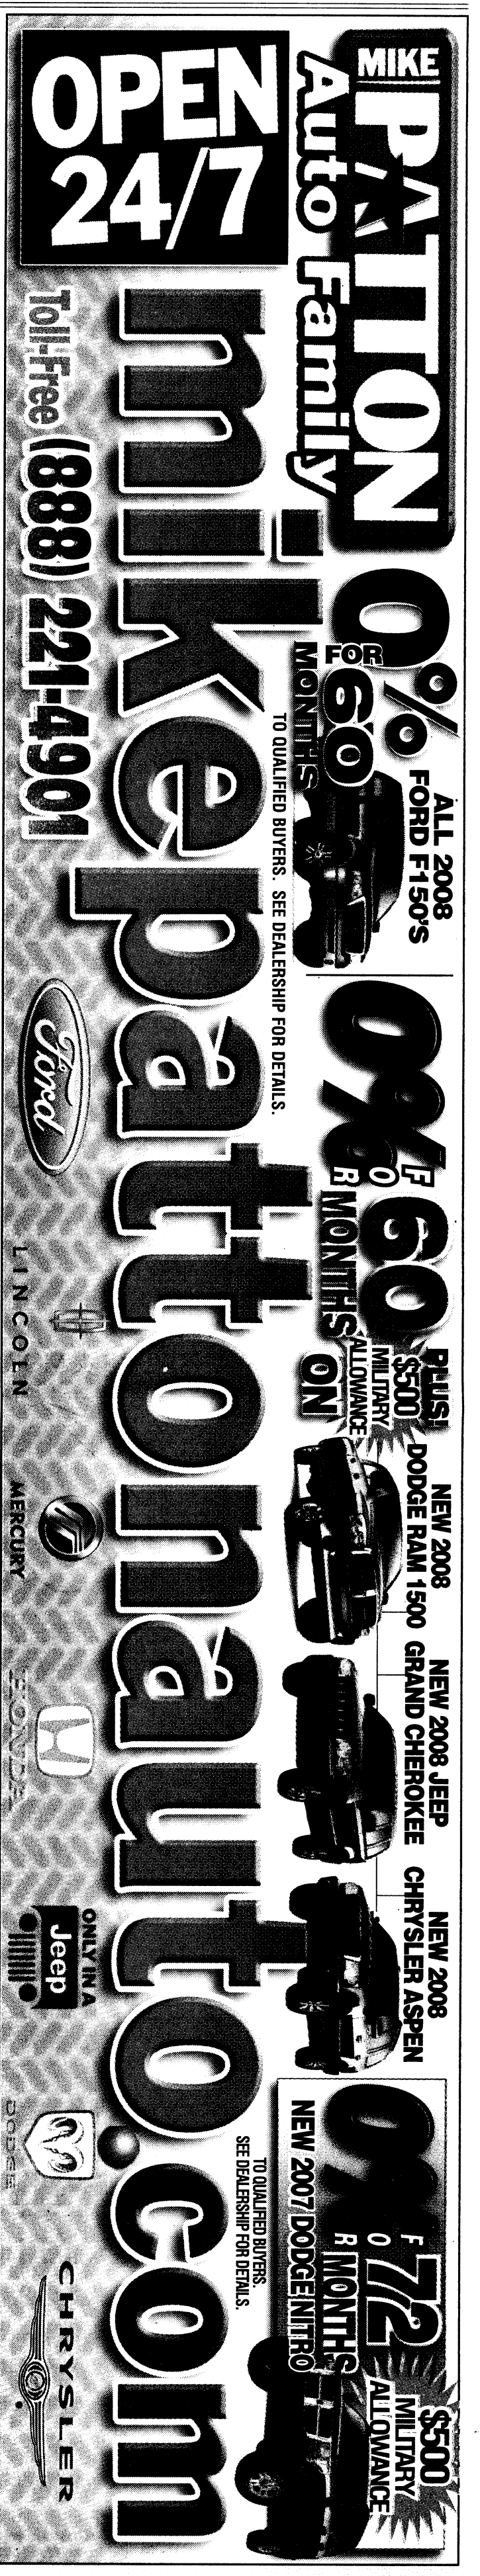
The United States Army Infantry Center, Directorate of Public Works, Environmental Management Division, Fort Benning, Georgia, hereby announces the completion and public availability of the Supplemental Environmental Assessment II (SEA II) and Draft Finding of No Significant Impact (FNSI) concerning the amendment of the Infrastructure Footprint Reduction Program on Fort Benning, Georgia. These documents were prepared pursuant to the National Environmental Policy Act of 1969.

A US Army Training and Doctrine Command memorandum dated 1 November 1996, directed Installations to support the "Winning the Infrastructure War" initiative via implementation of the Infrastructure Footprint Reduction Program. Rather than incur the expense of maintaining outdated or unusable buildings, structures would be demolished and their various functions relocated. The directive was implemented on Fort Benning through the development of the Facility Reduction Program. The Facility Reduction Program is a dynamic initiative, with buildings being added to or deleted from the list in accordance with mission demands.

The Directorate of Public Works (DPW) Master Planning Division revised the Fort Benning Facility Reduction Program list in September 2007, to reflect additions and deletions of buildings deemed to be unaffordable. Environmental Management Division (EMD) has prepared a Supplemental Environmental Assessment II (SEA II) to identify and evaluate the environmental effects of the newly revised list of buildings proposed for demolition. The SEA II evaluates the effects associated with the proposed action on Soils, Vegetation, Water Quality, Wildlife, Socioeconomics, Land Use, Environmental Justice, Cultural Resources, Utilities, Noise, Air Quality, Unexploded Ordnance, Solid Waste/ Pollution Prevention, Hazardous/Toxic Materials/Waste Containment/Disposal, Public Health and Safety, Aesthetics, Protection of Children, and Sustainable Design and Development.



The SEA II and Draft FNSI for the proposed action, dated November 2007, the previous SEA, dated June 2002, and the original EA and FNSI, dated April 1997, are available to the public for a review period of 30 days starting from the first day of publication in "The Columbus Ledger-Enquirer," in accordance with part 1501.4 (e)(1) of Title 40 of the Code of Federal Regulations and Army Regulation 200-2. The SEA II and Draft FNSI are available at https://www.benning.army.mil/EMD/program/legal/index.htm and in hardcopy at the following local repositories; the previous documents are available at Fort Benning Directorate of Public Works, Environmental Management Division.

KING FEATURES SYNDICATE
Tom and Ray Magliozzi

Dear Tom and Ray:
My 1997 Honda Accord has 270,000 miles. It still runs great and doesn't use any oil. There are some problems I could take care of, like a clicking from an axle, struts that are pretty worn out and a pitted windshield. But overall, it runs well. My brother says I should get a new car. He cites safety concerns and says that things like tie rods could break and lead to an accident. Since I'm adopting a 1-year-old child soon, I don't really want to break down anywhere, but I've never been too worried about it before. Anyway, I'm thinking of trying to go to 300,000 miles and then give her up. What do you think?
— Linda

Ray: Ah, the endless mileage contest. I have other customers like you, Linda. You say you just want to get to 300,000. And then when you get there, you'll say, "I just want to get to 325,000." I know your type.

Tom: Me too. You have my full support, Linda. As long as the rust hasn't diminished the structural integrity of the car, the safety stuff can be addressed pretty easily. You take the car to a mechanic you trust, and you ask him to look it over, stem to stern, as if you were thinking of buying it as a used car.

Ray: Once he gives you the full report, you ask him which of the problems are safety-related, and you fix those first. And, by the way, the worn struts and pitted windshield should be on that list.

Tom: You're almost always better off, economically, keeping an old car rather than buying a new one. So if you address any safety issues, you have our blessing to keep driving this heap.

Ray: The primary drawback of an old car like this, aside from its lack of the latest safety features, is that it's not as reliable as a newer car. When you have 270,000 miles on a vehicle, at any moment the fuel pump could have "the big one" and go to join Elizabeth. That would leave you stranded.

Tom: And sure, that could happen with 70,000 miles on the car, or 170,000, too. But the likelihood of breaking down and getting stuck increases with every mile you put on the car. If you travel far from home with a small child, that becomes a consideration.

Ray: Right. If it was just you, it'd be no big deal. You call for help on your cell phone and wait around for a while. But if it's a hot day, and your last diaper is soiled, waiting a couple of hours for AAA to show up could be a grave crisis.

Tom and Ray offer a strategy for everyone who's shopping for a car. Find yours in their pamphlet Should I Buy, Lease, or Steal My Next Car? Send $4.75, check or money order, to Next Car, P.O. Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475. Got a question about cars? Write to Click and Clack at www.cartalk.com.

Elf Run: Funds Santa's Castle

The 5K race will begin at 8 a.m., and the Fun Run/Walk will begin at 8:30 a.m. Parents with young children are also encouraged to bring them for both events, which are stroller friendly. No pets are allowed in the race.

The cost to pre-register for the race is $10 per individual. Families of four or more people can enter the Fun Run/Walk for $30. Those interested in donating without participating can register as a Phantom Runner for $7.

The event will raise money to buy Christmas toys for children of military Families with financial difficulties. Santa's Castle also accepts monetary donations and toys yearround.

"This event shows that people from the surrounding areas truly care about the Soldiers and military Families," Garner said.

Pre-registration applications must be postmarked by May 1. Those late registering can do so by paying an additional $5.

All registered participants will receive a T-shirt. Medals will be awarded to the first, second and third place in each category. All participating children will receive a ribbon. Breakfast will be available after the race. For more information, call 706-685-4422 or e-mail Garner at fortbenningsantascastle@gmail.com.

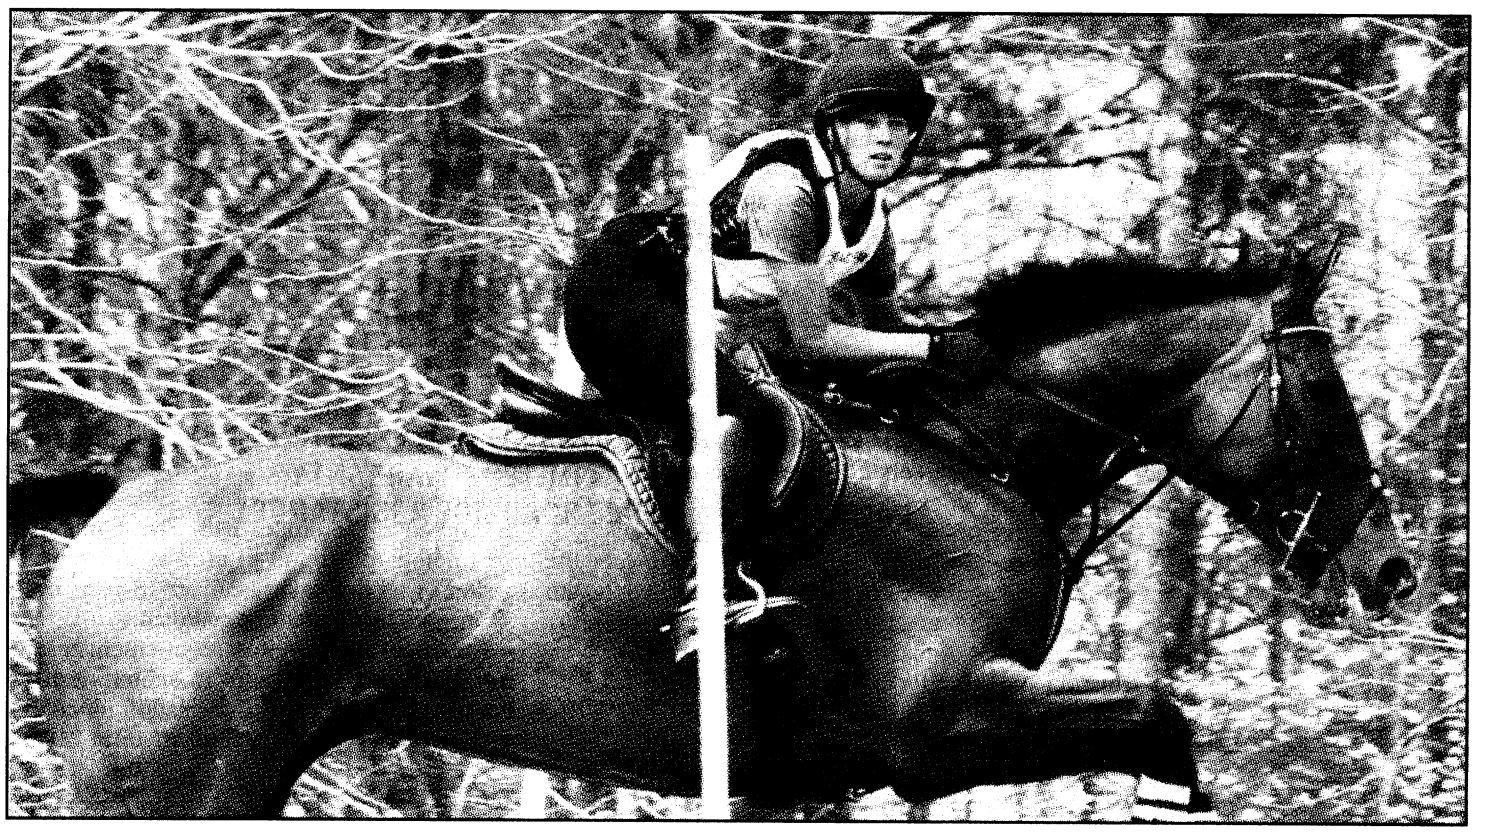
Michaela Waldeck, a junior at Shaw High School, unhooks from the zip line after her descent from a 34-foot tower on Eubanks Field Thursday. "At first I thought, 'Oh my God, I'm going to die,' but then it was OK," Waldeck said.



OOOOOOOMG!

Thirty-five students from 10 area high schools, visited Fort Benning as part of the Youth Leadership Columbus Program. Youth Leadership Columbus is meant to expose high school students to career opportunities and allow them to communicate with key leaders in the community to develop their talents and skills. On Fort Benning, these students spent the day learning what it takes to make good Army leaders. In addition to experiencing the 34-foot towers, they also had lunch at the Warrior Inn Dining Facility.

Ashley Jackson, a junior at Kendrick High School, steps off a 34-foot tower on Eubanks Field March 27. "That really took a lot out of me," said Jackson, after conquering the tower. "But after the drop, I was fine."

Emma Kate Fisher, riding Carlingford's Forever, jumps over a hurdle during the March Horse Trials at Poplar Place Saturday. Volunteers from Wilson Elementary School's Kids Care Club helped make the trials successful, said Diana Lewis, volunteer coordinator at Poplar Place. Mary Hammer, one of the volunteers from Fort Benning, said helping with the trials was a wonderful opportunity to see some great horseback riding in a beautiful place.

Satrin Gumataotao is the wife of a Fort Benning Soldier and mother of four. She works full-time and still finds time to volunteer.

"It makes me feel like I am serving a purpose, helping others," Gumataotao said. "By volunteering, you form a relationship with the community. I have met some truly wonderful people and obtained insight and information I may not have gained if I hadn't had an active role in the community."

Gumataotao volunteers with the Fort Benning Catholic Religious Education and is the point of contact for her Family Readiness Group.

"Every little thing that we do makes a difference in someone's life," she said.

"If you're new to the area, I strongly recommend you volunteer," said Starla Desaussure, the Fort Benning volunteer coordinator. "Take that opportunity to not only learn a new skill but to get to know the place you live."

Volunteers saved Fort Benning $1,720,426.50 in 2006. What did they save the post last year? Find out at the annual USAIC Volunteer Recognition Ceremony and Reception from 4 to 6 p.m. April 29 at Riverside. If it rains, the ceremony will be at the Benning Club. The keynote speaker will be Maj. Gen. Walter Wojdakowski.

Volunteering helps people network, teaches them new skills and can strengthen a resume, and volunteer contacts can serve as references or provide letters of recommendation for job-seekers.

Volunteering is for everyone, regardless of age, work schedule or involvement in the community, Desaussure said.

Gumataotao said some things wouldn't exist without volunteers, like Child and Youth Services sports teams, but even volunteering that doesn't show immediate results is important.

Desaussure said she will work with people's schedules and preferences to find them volunteer positions on or off post.

Parents who need child care during their volunteer hours can contact ACS, which provides free care while a parent volunteers on post.

"We go in thinking that we're giving something to them, but I got so much more from the situations and organizations I've volunteered in than I could ever have given them," Desaussure said.

For more information, call Desaussure at 706-545-3016.

Volunteers needed at Santa's Castle

THE BAYONET
Rachel L. Watkins

The president of Santa's Castle is looking for a volunteer to fill her position when she moves to Fort Knox, Ky., in June.

Happy Garner is looking for a presidential candidate who is outgoing, innovative and friendly, she said. She would like a candidate who is supportive of the military community and enjoys helping others.

Santa's Castle, a nonprofit organization established at Fort Benning in 1986, provides Soldiers with toys for their children at Christmas. Last year, Santa's Castle provided toys to 905 children.

"The most rewarding part of volunteering with Santa's Castle is seeing the children's faces after they have received gifts," she said.

Garner also needs to fill first- and second-vice president positions. The first-vice president oversees fundraising for the organization, and the second-vice president oversees donations.

Volunteers at Santa's Castle are busy year-round stocking shelves, making contacts, receiving donations and setting up fundraisers, Garner said. Santa's Castle always needs volunteers to help Families pick out toys, take inventory and assemble bikes.

Garner has served with Santa's Castle for four years, and she has loved it, she said. She hopes to help start a Santa's Castle at Fort Knox.

For more information on open positions, e-mail garner at happy@clemsontigers.com. For more information about Santa's Castle, go to www.santascastle.org.

BALLROOM DANCING CLASSES

Ballroom classes are held from 10:30 to 11:30 a.m. for women only and 6 to 7 p.m. for groups every Wednesday and Friday at the Kelley Hill Recreation Center. Both courses are $60 a month. Private lessons by appointment only are available on Saturdays for $20 per lesson.

For more information, call 706-544-3079.

CAA GRANTS

CAA, an available grant, provides up to $3,000 per year for two years for eligible spouses. Spouses must have a high school diploma, GED or some college, one year remaining at Fort Benning, and two years remaining on current enlistments.

Soldiers must be privates to sergeants, or second lieutenants to captains.

The funds can be used to complete post-secondary training or at any of Georgia's two-year community and technical colleges. The grant can also be used for training that will lead to a state-approved credential or license such as an approved certificate from a continuing education program or approved education service provider.

For more information, call 706-545-7397 or go to the Army Education Center at Building 2602, Soldiers' Plaza.

EFMP ENROLLMENT

The Exceptional Family Member Program has mandatory enrollment for special needs Family members (child or spouse). Enrollment doesn't hurt the Soldier's career but assists military personnel divisions in considering medical and educational needs of the Family member in the assignment process.

Enrollment is necessary if the spouse or child meets the following criteria: asthma, a current or past mental health diagnosis, a high-risk pregnancy, cancer (past or present), attention deficit disorder or diabetes.

For information and referrals, call 706-545-5521.

PRESCHOOL PROGRAM

Tot Town offers a half-day preschool program from 1:30 to 4:30 p.m. Monday through Friday.

For more information, call 706-689-8698.

Exodus tells story of Passover

197TH INFANTRY BRIGADE
Chaplain (Maj.) Avrohom Horovitz

Passover begins April 19 at sundown and concludes at nightfall April 27. The night before Passover the house and the car are searched for leaven (bread), which should be burnt or sold by the next morning.

The first two days and the last two days of Passover are holy days and work-related activities are not allowed. Work is permitted during the intermediate days.

The story of Passover is told in the book of Exodus. The Jewish people were slaves to the rulers in Egypt for more than two centuries. Moses received a divine call at the burning bush to lead the Jewish people out of bondage.

Ten plagues were visited on the Egyptians. The final one, death of firstborn sons, "passed over" the Jewish homes, and the Egyptian king agreed to let the people go.

With no time to wait for bread to rise, the Jews ate roasted lamb with unleavened bread and bitter herbs — the first observance of Passover.

Moses then led the Jewish people through the Red Sea to Mount Sinai where they received the Torah.

Passover, as the holiday of spring that symbolizes renewal, freedom and deliverance, has always captured the American imagination.

Thomas Jefferson proposed for the U.S. national seal a depiction of the Israelites in the desert, led by a cloud and a pillar of fire (Exodus 13:21). Benjamin Franklin's proposal was Moses lifting his staff, splitting the sea (Exodus 14:16) with the motto "Rebellion against tyrants is obedience to G-d."

Almost a century later, the chorus of the spiritual calling for freedom from slavery began with "Go down, Moses," and ended with "Let my people go."

The Passover Seder, the traditional holiday meal of the first and second nights of the festival, has throughout the ages been a unique opportunity for all members of the family to join together in thanksgiving. The story of the Exodus is retold through songs, prayers and stories.

Each Seder participant symbolically experiences the "bitterness of slavery" by eating the bitter herbs, and feels the joy of being redeemed by drinking four cups of wine and eating a festive meal.

The special biblical precept that is identified with Passover is the eating of Matzah (unleavened bread) and getting rid of all leavened food for the entire eight days of the holiday.

Matzah is called the bread of affliction because it was fed to the Jewish slaves in Egypt. When eaten during the Seder, it brings back memories of the Egyptian experience.

A deeper insight into Matzah is that the flat unleavened bread represents humility, which is the beginning of liberation and spiritual growth. Only a person who can acknowledge his own shortcomings and submit to a higher wisdom can free himself from his own limitations.

May we all be blessed this holiday season to pass over limitations and realize the infinite potential in every aspect of life.

May the Festival of Liberation bring peace and liberation to the entire world, Amen. For information about Passover Services, call 706-545-2289.

Editor's note: Out of reverence, Jewish custom dictates that the "o" not appear in references to the Diety in periodicals. It appears as "G-d."

Focus on uniqueness of self, don't copy crowd

BAYONET CORRESPONDENT
Frederick M. "Bud" Rupel

Former POW, Col. Lee Ellis said, "You are a unique creation so don't compare yourself to someone else. Focus on your talents and passions and use them to accomplish your life purpose and mission."

Being yourself in an organization demanding regimentation is no easy task. You wear the same uniform, react to commands in the same way, do PT in cadence, and march in step. But being a Soldier does not mean giving up on who God created you to be. Of all the billions of people who have ever lived or will live there, is no one exactly like you. No one else posses the same DNA pattern.

Can you still be yourself and be a Soldier? Absolutely. How do I know? The Scriptures declare that you are fearfully and wonderfully made, and that God knows the plans concerning you.

Being a part of a team means working together to accomplish a common goal. Let me encourage you to use your God-given talents as you serve our nation.

I close with these words from President George W. Bush: "Every triumphant achievement, every spark of genius, every act of compassion in the final analysis comes down to the final act of the individual ... Each of us holds the promise of America — each one of us, not just a few— not those of a certain income or neighborhood or skin color or educational level, every single one of us."

Editor's note: Bud Rupel is a retired major and former Army chaplain. He now serves on the pastoral staff at Evangel Temple in Columbus.

Hospital offers tobacco cessation classes

THE BAYONET
Rachel L. Watkins

Staff Sgt. Andrá Spencer started smoking when he was 16, when he found a pack of cigarettes left unattended on a table.

"I wished I would have never started," said Spencer, who smoked for 15 years before he first tried to quit.

Spencer

After attending tobacco cessation classes at Robins Air Force Base in Warner Robins, Ga., while he was on temporary duty, he was smoke free for seven months. Then he picked up a cigarette, thinking he could smoke just one. In no time at all, he was back in the habit.

Spencer moved to Fort Benning in December 2005 and three months later, he enrolled in tobacco cessation classes at Martin Army Community Hospital.

"It really helped to have a support system of other smokers who were trying to quit and the support of my Family," he said. His other motivation was physical training.

On average, it takes patients five attempts to quit smoking or chewing tobacco, said Maj. Barbara Reilly, nurse practitioner at the Internal Medicine Clinic at the hospital.

But Spencer was successful after his second attempt. He has been smoke-free since April 26, 2005. He said PT has become easier since he stopped smoking.

"I remember how good cigarettes taste, but I would never smoke one again," he said.

Reilly said tobacco users who are trying to quit often get discouraged because they don't quit the first time. They should celebrate that they are trying to quit and move forward, she said.

"They just have to be at a point where they are ready to quit," Reilly said.

The best way to quit is cold turkey, Reilly said, but there are other methods, like tapering — where the number of cigarettes smoked in a day is reduced — or postponing — where the routine of smoking is broken. There are also aids, such as pills and patches.

The Internal Medicine Clinic offers tobacco cessation classes. The four-week program is open to all military ID cardholders and Family members. It's from noon to 1 p.m. every Wednesday. New classes start the first Wednesday of each month. For more information on tobacco cessation classes, call 706-544-1244, 706-544-1255 or 706-545-5159.

For more information on quitting, go to www.ucanquit2.org where tobacco users can talk to others who are trying to quit, read success stories and chat with tobacco-cessation coaches.

Did you know?

Cigarette smoking remains the leading preventable cause of death in the United States.

Smoking accounts for about one of every five deaths each year, according to the CDC.

Smoking increases the risk of cardiovascular disease, emphysema, and lung, bladder, esophagus, kidney, pancreatic and cervical cancer.

Ninety percent of smokers start smoking before they are 21 years old, according to the American Lung Association.

Smokeless tobacco contains 28 cancer-causing agents, according to the CDC.

Help available for sexual assault victims

Family Advocacy Program provides resources, assistance

FAMILY ADVOCACY PROGRAM
Eleanor Bentsen

You may have heard it in safety briefings, trainings or incoming briefs: "Sexual assault degrades mission readiness and has no place in our Army."

You may have looked around at your fellow Soldiers and wondered, "I know all of these people. I work with them everyday. Is sexual assault even a problem here?"

Unfortunately, sexual assault is a problem both in the Army and civilian sectors.

The current national statistics state that one in 33 men and one in six women will be sexually assaulted within their lifetime.

Think of all the men and women you know socially and through work, and those numbers start to sound alarming. Fortunately, in the Army, victims of sexual assault do not have to suffer alone through the trauma of being sexually assaulted.

To support victims and prevent future sexual assaults, the Army has created the victim-centered Sexual Assault Prevention and Response Program through the Family Advocacy Program.

Sexual assault is a crime unlike any other. Instead of a material possession being taken away, victims' ability to choose what happens to their bodies is stolen from them.

In order to heal, in addition to seeking help from an advocate, counselor or friend, it is important for victims to feel empowered to take back control of their lives.

One of the ways victims can begin to feel more in control is through educated choices.

In support of this, the Army has created a choice of reporting options for all active duty service members.

If you are sexually assaulted, you now have the choice to make a restricted or unrestricted report.

The difference is, in a restricted report, the service member can seek out medical treatment, counseling and victim advocacy services without triggering an investigation. In an unrestricted report, the victim can receive all the medical and psychological support as well as have an investigation so that the perpetrator can be held accountable.

Whichever choice the victim makes, it is important to get medical attention in case of possible sexually transmitted diseases or possible pregnancy, and to seek out some form of help, whether a victim advocate, a chaplain or a counselor.

To help victims make educated choices and to ensure victims have all the support they need, the Army has created victim advocates.

There are now victim advocates at the Family Advocacy Program as well as Unit Victim Advocates, in every battalion. Victim Advocates work as the victim's voice in the system.

They connect the victim to resources, liaison with agencies around post and command, and accompany the victim through every step of the process, from the medical examination to Court-Martial proceedings, if applicable.

The Family Advocacy Program works to make sure every victim has access to the myriad resources the Army provides and operates a hot line 24/7. The hot line telephone number is 706-566-7393.

Sexual Assault is not only devastating for the victim, it is detrimental to our close community.

The Army takes sexual assault very seriously, and if the victim chooses an unrestricted report will endeavor to hold the offender accountable.

In the last sexual assault case to go to court-martial here at Fort Benning, the perpetrator was sentenced to 42 years of confinement.

Through such successful prosecutions and the SAPRP, Army officials hope that some day there really will be "no sexual assault in our Army."

In addition to being a crime, sexual assault is a traumatic event. If you or someone you know has been sexually assaulted, you are not alone.

The SAPRP is here to help and support you. The SAPRP provides all military victims of sexual assault the resources and support they need to help them through a very difficult time.

At Fort Benning, the SAPRP is under the Family Advocacy Program, directed by Rebecca Welch.

It is located in Building 241, next to the former Infantry Museum.

For more information on the SAPRP, contact Eleanor Bentsen, Sexual Assault Victim Advocate at 706-545-7594.

Veterans give 'history lessons' to McBride students

THE BAYONET
Rachel L. Watkins

"Living textbooks" is what students at McBride Elementary School called the veterans who spoke to them during a monthly veterans program.

With the help from the 192nd Infantry Brigade, the school's Partners in Education, staff arranged for veterans from World War II to now to talk to fourth- and fifth-graders.

"If we don't know about our history, we're in trouble," said Joshua Oakes, a fifth-grader who said it was more fun to learn from the veterans than reading it in a book.

The program teaches the children the importance of history, said Margaret Koger, who teaches gifted classes at McBride. "It also helps to honor those who serve our country."

Students heard five veterans talk about their experiences including reasons for war, conflicts, leaving Family and coming home. It's not just about the past, it's also about understanding the present, said retired Col. Biff Hadden, who spoke at McBride in January.

"This program helps the students understand what their parents are going through and why they are going through it," Hadden said.

To help local boy stricken with life-threatening disease

THE BAYONET
Bridgett Siter

This time last year, Joshua Zalunardo was an active eighth-grader, the MVP of his soccer team and an honor student who was looking forward to his freshman year at Harris County High. When he fell ill, with nausea and dizziness, at a school dance, Josh's doctor assumed he had a virus. A week later, he couldn't walk.

By the time Josh's classmates had started high school in the fall, he was undergoing aggressive treatment for a rare, life-threatening form of cancer called Brain Stem Glioma. The prognosis was bleak, but Josh and his family kept the faith, their friends said.

"He has incredible courage and an incredible sense of humor," said Ursula Wright, a member of Kings Pasture Community Church in Hamilton, Ga., where Josh's father is the pastor.

Since doctors said they had done all that they could do to save Josh, his parents turned to nontraditional medicine. They're footing the cost of experimental treatments that have reduced the size of Josh's tumor by about 40 percent. Their health insurance won't cover the cost of the treatment, which includes, among other things, a daily fistful of supplements and a strictly organic diet, something the whole family has adopted to support Josh. Truly organic food does not come cheaply.

Wright has teamed up with another member of the church, Allisa Adams, to host a fundraiser for the Zalunardos. The two women, avid scrapbookers, hit upon the idea of an all-night "crop." Their "Giving the Gift of Life Fundraiser for Josh" will start at 6 p.m. April 11 and end at 6 p.m. April 12. The event, which will be held at the church, 13377 U.S. Highway 27, costs $34 for each participant. The cost includes three meals.

Aside from the obvious marathon scrapbooking, participants can attend "how to" sessions to learn the latest techniques, Adams said, and veteran scrappers will be on hand to help beginners. A gift basket will be awarded and raffle drawings will be held Saturday. Scrapbook materials will also be sold. All proceeds will go to the Josh Zalunardo fund at Wachovia Bank.

To register for the "Giving the Gift of Life Fundraiser for Josh," call Adams at 706-628-9979 or Wright at 706-582-6040 or 706-580-8778.

Country music singer to appear at Civic Center

THE BAYONET
Brenda Donnell

Singer and songwriter Michael Peterson, a multiple Grammy and Country Music Association award nominee, wants to show how the military can benefit Americans, especially young people.

He also wants to show all citizens how to contribute to the nation through community service, he said.

He will bring his Army-sponsored My Real Life — Strong For America tour to the Columbus Civic Center from 7 to 9 p.m. Saturday, and the event is free to all military I.D. cardholders and their Family members. He will sing many of his hit songs, including From Here to Eternity and Drink, Swear, Steal and Lie.

Peterson has been in Columbus since Monday talking to citizens and teens about ways to volunteer and "the larger purpose the military has for our nation."

"It's not just about getting young people into boots in a time of war," he said. "It's about investing in young people to grow great Americans, whether they wear a uniform or not."

Although Peterson never served in the Army, like many Americans after 9/11, he wanted to do something for his country. This year, he teamed with the Army to give Americans "a different experience with the military than a lot of them have ever had."

During his visit, Peterson talked to students during two appearances at Hardaway and Northside High Schools. Peterson and his colleague, Larry Ransom, created a program called Tag! You're it! to help teenagers think about their direction in life, which was the topic during the high school visits.

On the Tag! You're it! Web site, there are tools that guide teens through a discovery process about who they are now and who they want to be in the future, questions Peterson said he had as he was growing up.

Helping citizens find ways to volunteer is another of Peterson's passions. He created the Web site, MyVolunteerLife.com, which matches Americans of any age with volunteer opportunities. He said the Web site can help people find ways to serve the community by doing what they love.

In addition to Saturday's concert, there will be a free youth event called Communa-Palooza from 4 to 6 p.m. that will feature a wide variety of youth attractions, interactive exhibits and local vendors.

Peterson's concert will include a performance by TelluRide, a country band. Also appearing will be illusionists Ridgeway and Johnson, who will present Criss Angel-style escapes.

Concert tickets are $10 for adults, $5 for those 9 to 20 years old, and children 8 and younger can enter free. For more information about Peterson, visit www.myreallifetour.com.

Ninth Annual Luau set for April 11-12

THE BAYONET
Rachel L. Watkins

Fort Benning's ninth annual luau will be from 4 p.m. to 11 p.m. April 11 and from 11 a.m. to 11 p.m. April 12. The luau is a celebration of Asian-Pacific American Heritage month.

"It's important for people to understand cultures other than their own, because the Army is so diverse," said Sheri Coreano, special events coordinator.

A pig will be roasted in the traditional Hawaiian way, buried and cooked with hot rocks.

There will also be crafts and story time. The second day will kick off with a bicycle rodeo at 10 a.m.

The rodeo will include obstacle courses, safety instruction and a ride around the campground.

About 3,000 people came last year, but DFMWR is hoping for 5,000 to 6,000 this year, Coreano said.

The event is free to the public, but there will be a charge for refreshments. Children can get wristbands for unlimited play on inflatables.

Wristbands are $5 for a one-day unlimited play and $8 for an unlimited play two-day pass. Wristbands are free to all 15:12 cardholders.

Free shuttles will run from After Hours, Kelley Hill Recreation Center and Benning Brewpub to Uchee Creek.

For directions to Uchee Creek, go to http://benningmwr.com/index31905.htm or for more information, call 706-545-2703.

BOOK REVIEW

Ripken shares eight elements of perseverance in Get in the Game

BAYONET CORRESPONDENT
Maj. Matthew Archambault

Major League Baseball's opening day marks the official beginning of spring and rehashes the steroid scandal. President George Bush elected to throw the first pitch to the Washington National's manager at their opening game instead of their catcher Paul Lo Duca (implicated by the Mitchell Report), and some may wonder if baseball will survive this crisis of trust. If history serves as any indication, baseball will endure.

Major League Baseball drew its first professional charter in 1876, and a few scandals have occurred during the ensuing 132 years. Following each travesty that left the game in jeopardy, a rebirth of the sport occurred, led by enigmatic player whose style and courage captured the imagination. George Herman "Babe" Ruth astonished fans with his heroics at the plate and effectively put the Black Sox Scandal into the past.

Likewise after the strike in 1994 canceled the World Series for the first time since 1918, Cal Ripken Jr. reminded everyone that playing ball every day had a greatness of its own. In his latest book, Get in the Game, Ripken expounds on the elements of perseverance and playing every day.

Get in the Game is not an autobiography. It's not even about "The Streak." Rather Ripken's intent is to benefit the reader with his experience and what he sees as eight elements of perseverance that are invaluable to life in or out of baseball. He avoids esoteric discussions, instead using examples from his life and by life, I don't mean when he got to the minors or his first day with the big club.

Ripken starts with his youth and with his dad, years before ever donning a professional uniform. More than anything Ripken's intended message is that a successful life begins with good parents and hard work from day one.

Get in the Game has an unintended message as well, one that baseball fans will recognize. Throughout the book he includes tidbits from Gehrig's life, comparing and contrasting lives and careers separated by sixty years. These demonstrate the threads of continuity not only within the game's long history, but which bind baseball to the fabric of our country. Some people take umbrage with the fact that baseball is our national pastime. It's an arguable point, but what is not arguable is what George Will calls the meritocracy of baseball. Unlike other professional sports requiring size as a prerequisite to survive in the professional arena, baseball requires hard work and dedication. By Ripken's own example he redefined a position usually the domain of smaller and more agile players. Derek Jeter and Alex Rodriquez each credit Cal Ripken Jr. for inspiring them to play shortstop despite their own larger physiques.

This book is for baseball fans, but it is also for the uninitiated. Remember, this is not about baseball. This is about life, and Ripken's lessons are applicable to all walks of life. Get into the mind of a man who just wanted to do what he loved every day and to contribute to his team. Ripken represents a professional athlete children can emulate. Get in the Game makes a great gift for adults and children.

Ripken spent 21 seasons with the Baltimore Orioles, joining their organization straight out of high school and spending three years in their farm system. He retired in 2001 becoming the CEO and President of the Ripken Baseball Group. He's made two trips to Fort Benning. In July 2006, he opened a newly refurbished field across from Faith Middle School. He's penned three other books, The Only Way I Know, Play Baseball the Ripken Way and Parenting Young Athletes the Ripken Way. In 2007, Ripken was elected to the Hall of Fame in Cooperstown, N.Y.

LEATHERHEADS

In 1925, Dodge Connolly (George Clooney) is a brash football hero determined to guide his team to glory. But after the players lose their sponsor and the league faces collapse, Dodge convinces a college football star to join his ragtag ranks. The captain hopes his latest move will help the struggling sport finally capture the country's attention.

Carter Rutherford (John Krasinski) is a handsome, athletic war hero who single-handedly forced multiple German soldiers to surrender in WWI. A cub journalist playing in the big leagues, Lexie (Renee Zellweger) suspects there are holes in Carter's war story, but while she digs, the two teammates start to become serious off-field rivals for her fickle affections.

Dodge must fight to keep his guys together and to get the girl of his dreams. Finding that love and football have a surprisingly similar playbook, he has one maneuver he will save just for the fourth quarter.

Leatherheads is rated PG-13 for language.

Leatherheads* tells the story of the rise of football as a popular sport in America as Dodge Connolly (George Clooney) leads his team to the limelight, despite the interference of a suspicious, pretty newswoman (Renee Zellweger).

NIM'S ISLAND

Anything can happen on Nim's (Abigail Breslin) Island, a magical place ruled by a young girl's imagination. It is an existence that mirrors that of her favorite literary character, Alex Rover (Gerard Butler).

But Alexandra (Jodie Foster), the author of the Rover books, leads a reclusive life in the big city. When Nim's father goes missing from their island, a twist of fate brings her together with Alexandra. Now they must draw courage from their fictional hero, Alex, and find strength in one another to conquer Nim's Island.

THE RUINS

Four American friends (Jonathan Tucker, Jena Malone, Shawn Ashmore and Laura Ramsey) on vacation in Cancun, Mexico, meet a German tourist (Joe Anderson) who persuades them to join his hunt for his younger brother, last seen with his girlfriend near some mysterious ruins. However, once the group arrives at the Mayan ruins, things start to go wrong.

The Ruins is rated R for violence, gruesome images, language, sexuality and nudity.

Also Playing
21

Needing to pay for his M.I.T. tuition, the brilliant Ben Campbell (Jim Sturgess) joins a group of the school's gifted students, led by math professor Micky Rosa (Kevin Spacey), which counts cards at blackjack each weekend in Vegas. Seduced by the money and his teammate, Jill (Kate Bosworth), Ben pushes the limits, staying one step ahead of the casinos' menacing enforcer: Cole Williams (Laurence Fishburne).

RUN, FAT BOY, RUN

A charming but oblivious overweight guy (Simon Pegg) leaves his fiancée (Thandie Newton) on their wedding day only to discover years later that he really loves her. To win her back, he must finish a marathon while making her realize that her new handsome, wealthy fiancé (Hank Azaria) is wrong for her.

Run, Fat Boy, Run is rated PG-13 for rude and sexual behavior, nudity, language and smoking.

STOP-LOSS

Decorated Iraq war hero Sgt. Brandon King (Ryan Phillippe) returns to his Texas hometown following his tour of duty. Alongside Steve Shriver (Channing Tatum), King tries to adapt to civilian life.

When the Army orders him back to Iraq, it upends his world, ultimately testing the bonds of family and friendship, the limits of love and the value of honor.

Stop-Loss is rated R for violence and language.

SUPERHERO MOVIE

After being bitten by a genetically altered dragonfly, high school loser Rick Riker (Drake Bell) develops incredible strength and armored skin. He decides to use his new powers for good and becomes a costumed crime fighter known as "The Dragonfly."

However, Lou Landers (Christopher McDonald) stands in the way. After an experiment gone wrong, Lou develops the power to steal a person's life force and becomes the supervillain, "The Hourglass." With unimaginable strength, unbelievable speed and deeply uncomfortable tights, will The Dragonfly be able to stop the sands of The Hourglass in time?

DRILLBIT TAYLOR

Ryan, Wade and Emmit (Troy Gentile, Nate Hartley and David Dorfman) are excited about their first day of high school until they meet school bully Filkins (Alex Frost). Before they become completely engulfed in Filkins' reign of terror, they seek out some protection by placing an ad in Soldier of Fortune magazine. Their best and cheapest response comes from Drillbit Taylor (Owen Wilson), a down-on-his luck soldier of fortune who lives a homeless — he likes to say "home-free" — existence on the beach. Taylor enrolls the children in physical and mental training.

Reese was a $21-a-month-private in 1940 when he volunteered for the experimental unit, the predecessor to the 501st Parachute Battalion. The annual Airborne Awards Festival, which includes a demonstration by the 1st Battalion (Airborne), 507th Parachute Infantry Regiment, celebrates contributions of airborne Soldiers from all generations, said Don Lassen, the World War II veteran who spearheads the event.

During a typical day, the U.S. Army Infantry School trains nearly 14,000 Soldiers. When the transformation to the Maneuver Center of Excellence is complete in 2011, that number will increase to approximately 23,000.

The number of courses taught will increase from 61 to 92, and the average number of Soldiers trained during a year will increase by 27,000, from 108,000 to 135,000.

Mandated by the 2005 Base Realignment and Closure act, Fort Benning is transforming to the Maneuver Center of Excellence, housing both the Armor and Infantry Schools.

"When we stand up the MCOE in 2011, our Army will be better than it is today, and our formations will retain their dominance on the battlefield," said Don Sando, the director of Capabilities, Integration and Development, during a town-hall meeting March 28.

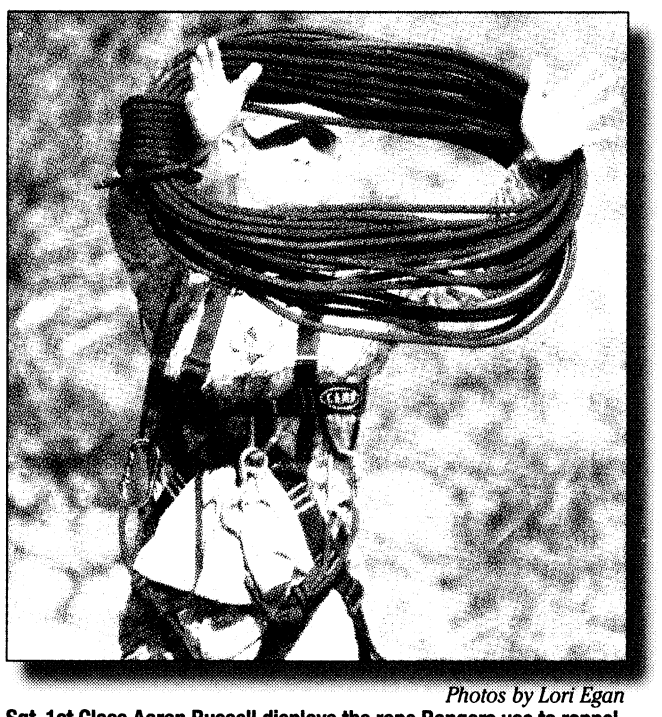
Army Community Covenant signing Thursday

THE BAYONET
Cheryl Rodewig

The Home of the Infantry will lead the way Thursday at the Army Community Covenant Signing, the first of many to take place in military communities worldwide.

"The Community Covenant Signing is a reinforcement of that reliance and that strong relationship we have with the community," said Chuck Walls, Fort Benning deputy garrison commander. "I've been to a lot of different Army posts, and we really do have a good one here in Columbus and Phenix City."

The ceremony will begin at 9 a.m. in the RiverCenter's Legacy Hall. Maj. Gen. Walter Wojdakowski, Fort Benning's commanding general, Columbus Mayor Jim Wetherington and Phenix City Mayor Jeff Hardin will speak.



The goal of the covenant is to recognize the community's role in the lives of Army Families and to strengthen the tie between the local community and the Army, said Lt. Col. Scott Brosch, the project officer for the signing.

Nine individuals will sign the covenant, including community leaders, Wojdakowski, a Soldier and two Family members.

"This is a pretty significant event," Walls said. "A lot of Families live off post, and particularly with the war going on, there is a heavy reliance on the community for support."

"I get a lot of feedback from people who come here for the first time about what a great relationship we have here, and I hope we never take for granted the great support we get from the community," he said. "Having been around here for a while, I don't even think we fully can realize the depth of their support for our Soldiers and Families. That makes it neat to live here."

Next week is the 25th anniversary of the David E. Grange Jr. Best Ranger Competition. About 30 two-man teams will compete for the title April 18 to 20. An awards ceremony will be held at 1 p.m. at the Ranger Memorial on Main Post April 21.

The first event will be at 6 a.m. April 18 at Malvesti Field. BRC competitors test on their skills in land navigation, marksmanship and airborne operations and cover more than 60 miles in 60 hours with no scheduled time to rest.

The most challenging event was the foot march, said Sgt. 1st Class Gerald Nelson, who won the competition with Capt. Corbett McCallum in 2005.

"It was the most mentally and physically challenging, because we had to start it not knowing the distance we had to march or the time we had to complete it," he said.

Historically, 50 percent of the teams are cut from the competition after the foot march.

COMMANDER'S COLUMN

NCO leadership, initiative makes our Army the best

COMMANDING GENERAL
Maj. Gen. Walter Wojdakowski

The Noncommissioned Officer Corps continues to be the backbone of our Army. Our great Army NCOs are the most competent and effective small unit leaders in the world. As a testament to this, almost every foreign delegation that visits Fort Benning requests to visit our Henry Caro Noncommissioned Officer Academy (NCOA). The delegates are always impressed with the high quality and professionalism of our NCO Corps and the institutional training we offer at the academy.

It takes hard work, dedication and a deliberate effort on a daily basis to train and maintain the best NCO Corps in the world, and our NCOA accomplishes these tasks every day.

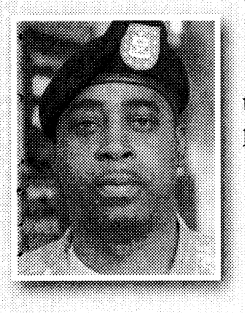
Strong NCO leadership is important because counterinsurgency operations and the contemporary operational environment depend on competent small unit leadership, responsibility, and decision making. This falls directly on the shoulders of our NCO Corps. At the NCO Academy, we are revising NCO professional military education to meet these challenges by introducing more advanced leader education and by preparing NCOs to operate and lead effectively at higher levels of responsibility.

In the Warrior Leader Course (WLC), junior leaders are prepared for their first leadership positions as team or section leaders. This course is changing and adapting to the needs of the operational Army by providing more hands-on, warrior-focused training and leadership skills. WLC now reinforces small arms weapons training, and is grounded in the warrior tasks and drills. We are in the process of moving some traditional basic noncommissioned officer course (BNCOC) content to the WLC, so we can introduce more advanced concepts at the squad level that are relevant to the Global War on Terrorism and lessons learned from our current operations.

BNCOC is restructuring to offer more relevant and advanced content. Whereas BNCOC traditionally focused on preparing sergeants to be squad leaders, some of the focus now is to better prepare them to serve at the platoon level as platoon sergeants. We are migrating selected Advanced Noncommissioned Officer Course (ANCOC) content into BNCOC. Conversely, ANCOC will transform and prepare staff sergeants and sergeants first class not only to serve as platoon sergeants, but as company first sergeants and battle staff NCOs at the battalion and brigade level.

Furthermore, we are making self-study courseware more flexible, adaptive and economical to our training needs. Much of the basic, fundamental content of the Noncommissioned Officer Education System can be available on a personal computer anywhere, anytime. Completing self-study material prior to a resident course allows course time to be spent on more advanced topics and practical exercises to prepare NCOs to perform at a higher level of responsibility. We can devote more resident course time to the demonstration and practical application of concepts, doctrine, tactics, techniques and procedures. Using scenario-based situations filled with ambiguities and unpredictable outcomes will help these Soldiers develop better critical thinking and problem-solving skills.

Institutional training must keep pace with the needs of the force by employing interactive discussion forums and information sharing portals such as the Center for Army Lessons Learned, the Battle Command Knowledge System, and NCO. NET. With these tools, the pace of course revision and change can occur as rapidly as it must.



The NCO Creed reads: "I will exercise initiative by taking appropriate action in the absence of orders." Our NCO Academy is leading the way and setting the standard in their initiatives and has the freedom to experiment in creative, new learning and delivery methods. I am confident that our NCOs will continue to foster excellence, remain the backbone of our Army and will continue to be our most important asset as we transition to the Maneuver Center of Excellence.

It's that time again; grass is somewhere under weeds

THE BAYONET
Lori Egan

Spring's here. I know this not because of the vernal equinox, which was March 20, but because I've tried to start my lawn mower and failed on two separate occasions.

After the first attempt, I bought oil. (Sometime last summer, I found out the lawn mower will not start if there's not enough oil in it. I added more oil and was able to finish the mowing season.)

For most of the winter, the lawn mower stayed sheltered (so to speak).

Then on a beautiful December Saturday, my daughter decided to mow the weeds. Why do weeds grow regardless of the season?

She pushed the lawn mower to what we optimistically call the riding arena, but couldn't keep it running for any length of time.

The lawn mower spent the rest of the winter there until I realized I couldn't see the grass in the front yard because of the weeds.

After filling up the gas tank, I checked the oil, which was low. I removed the air filter, scraped the gunk off, rinsed it with gas and reassembled it. After three or four pulls, it sputtered to life, belched out a black plume of smoke and died.

I kept trying to start it. With each futile attempt, the air became blue and apparently unbreathable because the horses moved far, far away from me. I tried the lawn mower shake — to no avail.

Monday, I talked with several lawn care experts who told me that my mower maintenance was lacking.

Before winter, I should have drained the gas and the oil, hermetically sealed the lawn mower and stored it in an underground vault that can withstand a nuclear blast.

I love to mow the yard, but digging a fallout shelter for my lawn mower to winter in is not my idea of a good time.

Because I am completely rational, I'm blaming my daughter for the mower not working.

She should have left it alone, and American Academy of Pediatrics agrees with me. (Maybe I'm not as rational as I think.)

Anyway, lawn mowers are dangerous. Each year nearly 9,000 teens and children are treated in emergency rooms for injuries incurred by using one.

When I was 12, my brother was mowing the yard and a rock shot from the lawn mower and put a great big hole in my sister's leg.

The American Academy of Pediatrics recommends the following to mitigate accidents (I've been trying to use mitigate in a sentence for several weeks now.):

- Children 12 and younger shouldn't mow the yard. This works for me because mowing the yard is meditative for me, unless it's August.
- Wear sturdy shoes. I like wearing my old Army boots. Sometimes I let the grass get a little high, and who knows what's crawling through the grass.
- Pick up debris instead of mowing over it. It's less mess.
- Always turn off the mower and let the blades stop completely before removing the grass catcher or unclogging the chute.
- And if you're lucky enough to own a riding mower, don't let children ride as passengers. That's an accident waiting to happen.

The War Dog Memorial, which depicts a Soldier from the Vietnam War with his military dog, is the location for the War Dog Memorial Ceremony April 19. The Soldier is half encased in bronze to symbolize his emerging from the unknown to the known.

Ceremony honors dogs, handlers

Military, civilian handlers unite each year on Sacrifice Field to honor canine heroes

THE BAYONET
Cheryl Rodewig

The annual War Dog Memorial Ceremony will be at 10 a.m. April 19 at Sacrifice Field on Main Post.

The ceremony commemorates handlers and their dogs that have served in the military.

There will be people from all branches of service, from different states and different wars, and many of them will bring their dogs, said retired Sgt. 1st Class Jesse Mendez, a Vietnam veteran who worked with the 26th Scout Dog Platoon on Fort Benning.

The ceremony is an annual event, which began in 2000, the same year a monument to all war dogs and their handlers was unveiled on Sacrifice Field.

It is one of only two of its kind in the country and the only one on the East Coast.

Circling the monument are several pedestals representing different units, wars or other groups of military dog teams. Mendez, who retired with Pal, the dog he served with, has helped raise money for each of these pedestals.

Mendez said he knows of several instances during his time in Vietnam when military dogs saved Soldiers' lives. The ceremony honors their sacrifices and helps build camaraderie between all the handlers, he said.

"It's so that we can remember," Mendez said. "We're not going to live forever, and we have to leave something for those who come behind us, so they know what the dogs did, so they know that the dogs were important."

The Infantry Band will play during the ceremony. Mike Lemish, the historian of the Vietnam Dog Handler Association, will be the keynote speaker.

Lemish, author of War Dogs: a History of Loyalty and Heroism, said his goal is to educate the public about the significance of military dogs and their role in protecting our nation.

He became interested in war dogs after working as a handler with search and rescue dogs with his local fire department.

The military used war dogs before World War II, and they are still a crucial part of operations today, Lemish said. In Vietnam, dogs were sentries, scouts and trackers and could detect booby traps, trip wires, mines and more.

At least 10,000 casualties were averted through the use of dogs in the war, Lemish said. Today, the U.S. uses 1,700 dogs worldwide.

"You think of all the technology we have at our disposal, and we still rely on dogs everyday," Lemish said. "They're always there for you. They'll fight for you. They'll stand by your side. They don't care what color you are, what religion you are, if you're rich or poor. They're the most loyal animal we have."

Lemish plans to release his new book, Forever Foreword. Canine Operations in Vietnam, 1960 to 1975, later this year.

For more information about the ceremony, call Cliff Davis at 706-545-9734.

Survivor will speak at Holocaust remembrance ceremony

Days of Remembrance service April 30 at Benning Club

THE BAYONET
Cheryl Rodewig

"The world was asleep when the Holocaust started in 1938 with the Kristallnacht event," said Dr. Mathew Sikorski, a Polish Catholic, who survived nine months of forced labor in a textile factory in Hameln, Germany.

Sikorski and one of the Soldiers who helped liberate him, Dr. Morton Waitzman, will speak at a Holocaust service April 30.

The Days of Remembrance Commemorative Service, hosted by the Fort Benning Equal Opportunity Office, will be from 11:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. at the Benning Club. The theme is Kristallnacht, "the night of the broken glass," so called because of the shattered windows of Jewish stores and synagogues by Nazis.

The Faith Middle School Chorus will perform, and Soldiers will read stories of Holocaust victims, said Sgt. 1st Class Courtney Gray, chairperson for the event.

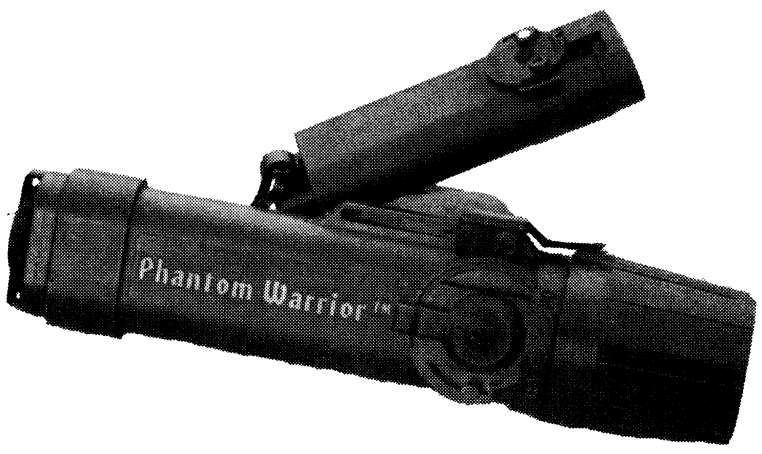
"A lot of people would like to say that the Holocaust didn't happen, when actually it did, and we need to honor the memory of the victims," Gray said. "It's not just a story of destruction and loss; it's a story of extraordinary courage and the strength of the human spirit."

Waitzman, a former Soldier with the 29th Infantry Division, said his Infantry training prepared him to fight, but nothing could have prepared him for the shocking condition of the people he helped free throughout Germany in 1945.

"For many years afterward, I didn't talk about any of this," he said. "But by the 50th anniversary of our landing in Normandy, there were people who were denying it, and we realized that we had to talk about this — our mission is to simply state the truth."

Waitzman and Sikorski met during one of Waitzman's talks in Georgia, and now they both are involved with The Breman Holocaust Museum in Atlanta.

"I feel that there is a great need to educate young and old people about the Holocaust," said Sikorski, whose father died in a concentration camp.



"We need to remember what has happened in the past so that similar circumstances, should they arise in the future, will be opposed by educated and conscious people around the globe."

Tickets for the service are $8.50 and include lunch. They must be purchased by April 23. For more information or tickets, call the Fort Benning Equal Opportunity Office at 706-545-3197.

National Wild Turkey Federation helps fund reforestation

Longleaf pines more durable, make better habitat

THE BAYONET
Cheryl Rodewig

Fort Benning will receive a check later this month for $93,000 from the National Wild Turkey Federation. The money will cover the balance of a $112,500 grant, which paid for 450 acres of longleaf pines planted on post this winter.

Through the Longleaf Legacy program, a partnership between NWTF and the Southern Company, longleaf pines are replanted on public and private lands across the Southeast. The program began in 2003, but this is the first year Fort Benning has benefited from the funds.

The NWTF signed an agreement with post officials in December, pledging to pay for 30 percent of the costs for replanting longleaf pines, said Bob Larimore, Fort Benning's land management branch chief.

"Historically, the area was dominated by longleaf pine and maintained by fire," he said. "When Fort Benning acquired the property, all the longleaf pine were pretty much gone because of farming practices."

Fort Benning plants about 1,000 acres of longleaf pines every year to restore the natural habitat.

"Our objective is to reestablish the longleaf pine ecosystem," Larimore said. "It's much better suited for military training. It's longer lived, it's more fire tolerant, and it's more insect and disease resistant than the current forest because it was the native species here."

The NWTF's contribution allowed Fort Benning to plant more acres than usual, a total of 1,500.

Retired Maj. Bob Fountain, regional field supervisor for the NWTF, said Fort Benning was an ideal location because longleaf pine replanting was already started here, and the installation provides more protection for pines than other public lands.

Longleaf pines create a better habitat for wild animals than other types of pines, Fountain said.

The size of the canopy shades the forest floor, preventing unwanted growth from briars and tangles. Bigger seeds provide better nutrition for improved biodiversity, and hunters can expect to see not only more wild turkeys but also deer, quail and songbirds.

"The return of the wild turkey is probably one of the greatest conservation successes out there," Fountain said. "We have birds back in their original natural habitat throughout the state."

However, Fountain said that does not mean people can stop worrying about conservation efforts.

"We, as humans, have a need to grow as our population grows, but at the same time, we have to leave space for the wild things that must coexist with us," Fountain said.

"Around the country and predominantly in the Southeast, we've gone from about nine million acres of longleaf pine down to about one million acres, and that's habitat for a variety of animals."

Fountain said local chapters, especially the River City Gobblers, helped the NWTF forge working agreements with post officials.

"Their support is what allows us to fund these types of projects," Fountain said.

BRC: Set for April 18-21

"It pays to be a winner," Nelson said. Since he and his partner were in the lead, they were able to rest before the next event.

The competition has many challenges, but the key to winning is training hard and working as a team, said Sgt. Maj. Erik Wilson, who won the competition with Capt. Blaine Reeves in 1993.

Wilson said the events are tailored to what is used in combat situations, which is why some events, like the Prusik climb and the pugel challenge, will not be in this year's competition.

The schedule of events will be released at the start of the competition.

MCOE: Addressed at town-hall meeting

adaptive leaders imbued with the Warrior Ethos; provide a power projection platform capable of deploying and redeploying Soldiers, Civilians and units anywhere on short notice; and, define required capabilities for Infantry and Armor to meet the needs of the future.

The transformation will cost roughly $2.9 billion. That includes new ranges for tank training, roads to get to the training, and barracks to house the Soldiers.

The Residential Communities Initiative is part of the total, along with programmed military construction. The MCOE cost isn't just BRAC related, it's growing the Army and transformation too, said Rick Clapp, a strategic planner with the Maneuver Center Realignment and Coordination Cell.

Projects for the Harmony Church area include initial entry training brigade headquarters ($28 million), trainee barracks complex ($70 million) and another trainee barracks complex that will house two battalions ($120 million). Sand Hill transformation includes two basic combat training battalions moving from Fort Knox, expanding the clinics, building a new chapel and reception battalion.

Kelley Hill is getting new maintenance facilities and another renovated and 3rd Heavy Brigade Combat Team will get new a administration facility.

Changes to Main Post include the I-185 interchange construction and Dixie Road will be widened to four lanes, a new child development center is planned, and Infantry Hall will undergo renovations to become the Maneuver Center of Excellence headquarters building.

Milestones that have been reached include creating the Maneuver Captains Career Course and Maneuver Advanced NCO Course. Currently Soldiers can attend the courses either at Fort Knox or here.

Approval of the Environmental Impact Statement was another milestone; however, there is another MCOE EIS that is underway, Clapp said.

"We hope to complete the MCOE EIS in just 16 months, to avoid any delays in the FY09 projects," he said.

This environmental impact statement will look at significant changes to BRAC projects, newly programmed BRAC projects and grow the Army projects (barracks and ranges). Part of growing the Army is building barracks for the Warriors in Transition during FY 09.

Change is inevitable, but what will never change is Fort Benning's core competencies of supporting the operating force, training Soldiers to fight and win, and determining warfighting capabilities for the future, Sando said.

Seminar teaches Army buyers to find green

THE BAYONET
Cheryl Rodewig

Fort Benning is setting the standard for environmental sustainability in the Army. The Fort Benning Sustainability Office hosted a seminar March 25 to explain what defines environmentally friendly products, so Army buyers can purchase products that are truly "green." This is a pilot program at Fort Benning that will spread throughout the country, said Peter Lukken, Fort Benning sustainability planner, who started the program.

The goal is to better understand what a green product is, Lukken said. "Green" means that manufacturers have taken into account long-term effects — whether or not the products can be recycled, if they will have to be landfilled and how the production processes affect the environment.

"Unfortunately, some manufacturers want to compete in a market that demands green products, but those same companies haven't invested a dime to provide them. They instead resort to creative advertisement," Lukken said.

This type of "greenwashing" often misleads consumers because they don't truly understand sustainability, he said.

"Sustainability is meeting the needs of the present without compromising the needs of the future," said Diane Haworth, sustainability manager of Haworth, Inc., one of the vendors who spoke during the seminar.

Buying green directly supports the Army's mission, said John Wuichet, program manager for green procurement at the U.S. Army Installation Management Command, Southeast Region. For example, a tank with improved fuel efficiency needs fewer gas trucks. That means fewer American lives at stake, since the number of drivers can be reduced. The key is to not only know what the green requirements are, but also to understand how to incorporate them effectively into daily operations, Wuichet said.

The seminar focused on types of certification, green manufacturing practices and how to ask informed questions.

"If you care for the environment and you have purchasing power, the most important tool in your arsenal is the ability to ask good questions," Lukken said. "Know when a manufacturer is indiscriminately using green terminology. And just as important, know the holistic environmental impacts on producing that product."

A company's commitment to being green should be reflected in the process used to make the product and the policies of the business and its suppliers. Sometimes a manufacturer will not want to take back a product that is 100 percent recyclable after it has been used, and the Army has to landfill that product, a costly process, Wuichet said. According to the Georgia Department of Community Affairs, Georgians spend $90 million a year to landfill materials that have a market value of $250 million.

Wuichet said the Army will spend about $2.3 billion on furniture Armywide over the next five years, so it is important to buy with long-term consequences in mind, including a product's recyclable parts, the effect on the environment, efficiency and durability. Although the seminar was a Fort Benning initiative, Wuichet said, he hopes to have similar presentations conducted at other installations in the Southeast.

"Fort Benning has the leadership and the vision, and the region picked up on that," he said.

Soldier dies after vehicle hits IED

THE BAYONET
Brenda Donnell

Sgt. Dayne Darren Dhanoolal, 26, was killed in Baghdad, Iraq, March 31, after the vehicle he was riding in struck an IED.

Dhanoolal was a combat engineer assigned to 2nd Battalion, 69th Armor Regiment, 3rd Heavy Brigade Combat Team. The native of Trinidad and Tobago was due to return home in about two weeks.

His commander, Lt. Col. Troy Perry, said Dhanoolal was the epitome of a noncommissioned officer who was competent, confident and trained his junior Soldiers to standard.

He said the Panther Battalion Soldiers loved him, miss him and will never forget him.

"He had a distinctive broad smile, an infectious smile, that brought out the best in all of us," Perry said. "He was amiable and loved to joke and make everyone laugh. He was a hero under any definition of the word."

His fellow Soldiers paid tribute to Dhanoolal during a memorial service this week in Iraq, said Maj. Joe Sowers, 3rd HBCT, 3rd Infantry Division public affairs officer.

Dhanoolal is survived by his wife Kynesha Dhanoolal, his mother Monica Mary Brown of Killeen, Texas, and his father Sylvon A. Dhanoolal of Saint Joseph, Trinidad and Tobago.

Funeral services for Dhanoolal will be held today in Killeen.

Study focuses on challenges Families face

THE BAYONET
Brenda Donnell

Fort Benning Soldiers and their spouses are asked to volunteer in an Army-approved research study about the challenges Army Families face.

Researchers from the University of Denver's Center for Marital and Family Studies will conduct the Army Marriage Project and will pay 200 couples to participate.

Lt. Col. Thomas Waynick, U.S. Army Family Life Chaplain Training Program director, said couples participating will be helping other Army Families.

Researchers will concentrate on a couples' workshop, PREP for Strong Bonds, to determine if the retreats help Soldiers and their Families, Waynick said. The Chief of Chaplains Office will spend $48 million on couples' retreats this year.

Researchers hope to discover whether PREP for Strong Bonds decreases negative interaction and domestic violence, improves couples' communication and increases Soldiers' perception that the Army cares about them and their Families. They hope to find out whether it increases overall marital happiness and commitment.

The 16-hour workshop will be held at Callaway Gardens in Pine Mountain, Ga.

It will be led by Family Life chaplains who will concentrate on communication, conflict resolution, teamwork, and commitment and friendship in the marriage.

Once selected to be a part of the study, couples will complete questionnaires, said Deborah McCranie, University of Denver's Army Marriage Project coordinator. Half of the couples will participate in the PREP for Strong Bonds workshop, and the others will be part of a control group.

After the workshop, all 200 couples will complete questionnaires every six months for three years, McCranie said. Each questionnaire should take about 60 minutes to fill out, and couples will be paid $100 to $160 for completing them.

Information shared in the questionnaires is confidential and will be used for the research study only and will not be shared with the Army, McCranie said.

Married couples from Fort Campbell, Ky., also volunteered for the study.

Those eligible include active-duty Soldiers and their spouses, assigned to Fort Benning. Soldiers don't have to be assigned to Fort Benning the entire three years, and they must have permission from their chain of command.

This is a first come, first served opportunity. For more information, visit www.armymarriageproject.com, call McCranie at 706-505-7770 or send an e-mail to ampbenning@psy.du.edu.

How does your garden grow?

Seth Allowitz and Ben Sellers shovel soil while their classmates pull weeds. The students will harvest all of the crops before summer.

Students get hands-on experience in the garden

THE BAYONET
Rachel L. Watkins

"Look at how many weeds I pulled," is a common refrain in Kathy Porter's class of 20 second-graders at White Elementary School. When most students are reading books about soil and plants, Porter's class is outside planting, maintaining and harvesting a garden.

Owen Ditchfield, media specialist at White, has been helping classes plant gardens since he started teaching on post in 1978.

"A lot of kids don't have a clue as to where food comes from," Ditchfield said. "Planting a garden helps them understand the importance of farming, sources of food and good nutrition."

The class planted potatoes, carrots, onions, cabbage, lettuce, peas, radishes and strawberries. After the plants are harvested, the students take them home.

"The students are at an impressionable age," Ditchfield said. "If you teach them how to eat healthy now, they will carry it to adulthood."

Lonnie Jackson's legacy

Academy needs volunteers for summer tutorial program

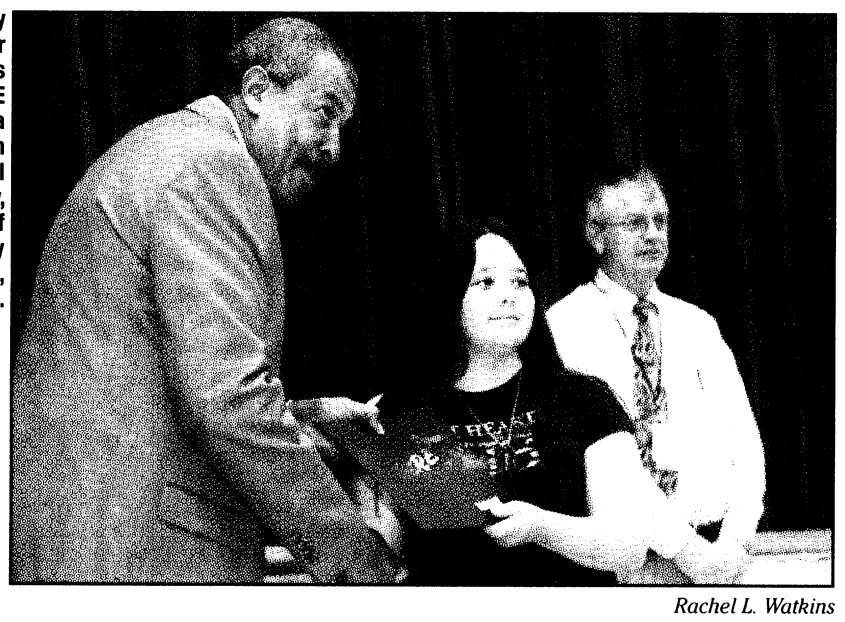
THE BAYONET
Brenda Donnell

Before his death in 2006, retired Sgt. 1st Class Lonnie Jackson influenced more than 24,000 local schoolchildren through tutorial programs he instituted in South Columbus.

Volunteers are needed to teach reading, math and other subjects to children in second through eighth grades during the annual Volunteer Summer Tutorial Program. The program will be held at Lonnie Jackson Academy, 4601 Buena Vista Road in Columbus.

About 300 students are expected to attend the four-week session May 26 to June 20. It is sponsored by Combined Communities of Southeast Columbus, Inc., which was founded in 1983 by the late Lonnie Jackson, a retired sergeant first class. Jackson's daughter, Lonya Jackson-Sarden, said it takes volunteers to provide the manpower for the tutorial program.

"It's an opportunity to help our children, which means helping our future," she said.



Jackson-Sarden said her father wanted to help children succeed. Jackson also developed a citywide voting campaign, another CCSC endeavor, initiated anti-litter and beautification campaigns, including Operation Esprit de Corps, Litter-Free Schools and the MLK Pride Month Clean-Up Drive, and was instrumental in the establishment of the Vietnam Memorial Park in Columbus.

Besides tutors for the volunteer program, aides will also be needed. College students, high school seniors or juniors, parents and others can volunteer. All volunteers are asked to attend an orientation at 11 a.m. May 23 in the Rothschild Cafeteria at the Academy.

Registration is from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. May 20 to 22 in the cafeteria. Classes will be from 8:45 a.m. to 11 a.m. May 26 to June 20.

There will also be a picnic at the Vietnam Veterans Memorial Park from 11 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. June 20 at Lawyers Lane and Buena Vista Road.

For more information, call Jackson-Sarden at 706-315-9844, the office at 706-321-9596 or Lonnie Jackson Academy at 706-317-4791 from 9 a.m. to noon weekdays during the summer session.

"You can get sick or even die if you do drugs," said Tyrieck Smalls, one of 30 fifth-graders who graduated the DARE program Friday at Loyd Elementary. Before graduating, they pledged to be drug, alcohol and smoke free for life.

It's important that the kids learn to "just say no," so if they get in a situation involving drugs, smoking cigarettes or alcohol, they know what to do, said Michael Bellamy, district court judge for Phenix City drug court and speaker at the ceremony.

Bellamy encouraged the children to speak up if their Family members are abusing alcohol, drugs or cigarettes.

The DARE program is in 75 percent of the United States' school districts and in 43 countries of the world.

Phishing e-mail to DFMWR patrons is Army exercise

FAMILY AND MORALE WELFARE AND RECREATION
William Bradner

More than 10,000 Soldiers, Civilians and Family members with military e-mail addresses received an e-mail March 30 promising free tickets to area theme parks, with a link to a Web site that appeared to belong to the Family and Morale, Welfare and Recreation Command.

These e-mails were sent without the knowledge or consent of the Family and Morale, Welfare and Recreation Command or installation DFMWR offices.

These e-mails were "phishing" e-mails developed by the Army Computer Emergency Response Team in a Global Computer Network Defense exercise, Bulwark Defender 08 (BD08) to test the defensive posture of the Army LandWarNet.

FMWRC officials were not alerted to the exercise in advance because the unit "limits the number of trusted agents" in phishing exercises of this type, according to ACERT officials.

FMWRC reacted decisively by informing their patrons that the offer was not legitimate, distributing a press release to media outlets worldwide in an effort to warn as many customers as possible and coordinating through Army legal and information technology offices to have the bogus Web site shut down.

When ACERT officials finally confirmed late Monday the e-mail and Web site were part of the exercise, FMWRC began coordinating with the ACERT to prepare messages and media responses addressing the phishing scam, and more importantly, the breach of trust it represents to MWR customers.

"From the outside looking in, the customer has no way of knowing FMWRC was not involved in this exercise," said Laurie Pugh, public affairs officer for FMWRC. "We have no idea how many of our customers this exercise has alienated."

FMWRC routinely sends e-mail messages to its customers and press releases to installation newspapers, inviting patrons to visit the official Web site to learn about new offers and promotions.

"The Family and MWR Command has spent decades and millions of dollars establishing our brand as one that can be recognized and trusted by Soldiers and Families," Pugh said. "We have yet to determine how much of that trust has been undermined by this exercise."

The e-mail and Web site created by the ACERT were convincing enough to entice more than 3,000 people to click through.

"It's important to be alert to potential phishing attempts," Pugh said. "But it's also important for FMWRC to be able to use e-mail and our Web site as an effective marketing tool."

All legitimate e-mails from FMWRC will come from a .mil address, and links will direct patrons to www.armymwr.com. When in doubt, do not click through the e-mail. Type www.armymwr.com directly into a Web browser and see if the offer is advertised on FMWRC's official Web site. ACERT officials sent a follow-up email to the original 10,000 recipients of the "phishing" email describing the exercise and asserting the e-mail was non-malicious.

Their second e-mail reads, in part: "For those individuals responding to the ACERT phishing attempts, regardless of what you submitted, no personal data was collected or transmitted.

This exercise illustrates how hackers can turn the popularity of a trusted resource such as the MWR Web site against unwitting personnel by using real information and activities openly available on the Internet.

"We apologize for any inconvenience or false hope these e-mails may have caused. As users of Army network and information systems, you play an integral role in the Information Assurance and Network Security posture for the Army. As you know, phishing e-mails are a common method used by hackers to infiltrate Army networks and systems.

"Your ability to identify and respond to phishing attempts is paramount to the defense of critical information systems that make up the Army LandWarNet. Soon, you will receive another e-mail from the ACERT that will provide education on how to identify 'phishing' attempts.

"We appreciate your participation in this exercise. Everyone plays a part in the security of the Army networks and systems.

"It is important for everyone to know the MWR brand can be trusted, so please forward this e-mail to anyone you may have shared the original 'phishing' e-mail with."

For more information about the conduct of the exercise, call the ACERT at 703-706-1113 or William Bradner at william.bradner@fmwrc.army.mil or call 703-681-1548.

CFLs can save money, environment

BAYONET CORRESPONDENT
Ryan Beland

Living in military quarters has its perks. One of the most appealing aspects is not having to deal with monthly utility bills. Unfortunately, this leads many to overlook their energy use — myself included. But as the issue of global warming becomes more and more apparent, it's time that everyone should do their part towards making the earth a more sustainable place for future generations. Today, it's easier than ever.

One simple way to minimize your impact on the environment is by replacing traditional incandescent light bulbs in your home with compact fluorescent lamps, otherwise known as CFLs. I'm sure you've heard of them at one time before and dismissed them as just another "fad," but much research has gone into verifying the claims of the manufacturers. CFLs are not only more energy efficient, but save money and have less of a negative impact on the environment than incandescent bulbs. Compact fluorescent bulbs bearing the government's "Energy Star" label use up to 75 percent less energy than that of a traditional bulb, last 8-10 times longer, and save $30-$59 in energy costs over their lifetime. With the typical home containing 40 or more light sockets, the numbers add up quick.

You may not realize it, but when you turn on a light bulb, you are contributing to the release of carbon dioxide and other greenhouse gases into the atmosphere, leading to global warming. Most of our energy comes from burning coal, which results in harmful pollutants entering the air.

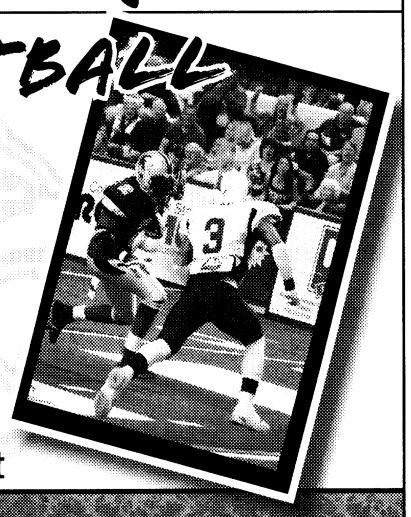
Furthermore, coal costs money, so the more energy we use the higher the power bill. The ultimate goal is to burn less coal by using less electricity. Not to mention that compact fluorescent bulbs last longer than incandescents, which seem to last just long enough for us to forget about having changed them not too long ago.

Replacing old incandescent light bulbs with CFLs is a great way to begin to practice sustainable living. They can be used practically anywhere that incandescents are used and provide good quality light. Instead of the old "cool white" glow that fluorescents used to give off, newer CFLs provide a warm light that can't be distinguished between incandescents. In addition, they don't flicker or hum as in the past and can be found at practically all major retail and hardware stores, including the local AAFES post exchange and commissary. For more information on CFLs and how you can benefit from using them, visit http://www.unfilledspace.com/cfls.

National Healthcare Decisions Day set for Wednesday

OFFICE OF THE STAFF JUDGE ADVOCATE
Michael L. Russo

The Office of the Staff Judge Advocate is participating in the National Healthcare Decisions Day Wednesday to raise awareness about legal health-care issues and promote advance care planning for eligible clients in the community.



The National Healthcare Decisions Day Initiative is a collaborative effort to ensure that all adults with decision-making capacity have the information and opportunity to communicate and document their healthcare decisions.

An Advance Medical Directive, better known as a living will, is a document an individual may use to express his or her desires regarding end-of-life issues. Many people also prepare durable Powers of Attorney, which are a type of power of attorney that normally only takes effect in the event of the maker's incapacity, and are only effective for the period of incapacity.

OSJA staff members will be available on a walk-in basis to discuss, and when appropriate to prepare, such documents Wednesday. For more information, call 706-545-3281.

Who runs the ranch?
You have the power to change those negative thoughts

BAYONET CORRESPONDENT
Frederick M. "Bud" Rupel

I'd be worried if I didn't have anything to worry about. Sound familiar? Anxiety and worry are common sources of trouble in many marriages. Even if only one spouse is the worrier, his or her worrying will have a negative effect on his or her partner.

Worry is destructive. But how can one break out of this destructive pattern? H. Norman Wright, in his book Communication: Key to Your Marriage, outlines some practical steps in overcoming worry.

Don't try to face your troubles on your own. Turning to God is not a cop-out when facing life's troubles. He can provide the best solution. Friends, counselors or clergy can also be a great source of comfort and advice.

Remember, you have a choice of who "runs the ranch." You have the power to change your negative thoughts into positive ones. The apostle Paul said, "Whatsoever things are good, think on these things."

Concentrate on reality. Don't let your thoughts be filled with what might happen. Face your problems square in the face and ask for God's help.

Be honest with yourself and accept your problems. Evaluate the situation. Search for workable solutions and put the solution into action. Once again, always include God in the decision. Worrying about your problems will not make them go away. Taking responsibility paves the way for finding the right solution.

Think in terms of possible solutions. Together, with your spouse, brainstorm ways of overcoming any problem you face. In this process, it is so important to pray and ask God for guidance. Dr. Wright says, "Focus on the solution rather than the problem."

Don't concentrate on things that trouble you. While you cannot always avoid troubling situations, you can stay away from areas that increase your anxiety. There will always be differences of opinion in any marriage. It is best to stay away from areas of personal opinion (i.e. politics) that lead to disagreement.

Accept what can't be changed. Make this prayer of Richard Niebauer's your own: "God grant me the serenity to accept the things I cannot change, courage to change the things I can, and wisdom to know the difference." Don't try to "fix" your spouse. Accept and love him or her the way you want to be loved. Will this guarantee success? No, but I can guarantee you failure if you do not.

Live one day at a time. Learn to enjoy your marriage today. Have fun with your spouse today. There are too many challenges today that require your attention for you to worry about what the future may hold.

Editor's note: Bud Rupel is a retired major and former Army chaplain.

OSC SCHOLARSHIP

These scholarships are available to any Family member of an active-duty or retired Soldier residing in the tricommunity or whose sponsor is attached or assigned to Fort Benning. Applications must be received this month, and awardees will be announced in May. Guidelines and applications are available at the OSC Thrift Shop, A Bit of Benning, Sayers Library and in area high school guidance offices. To have the application e-mailed to you, e-mail thcarlisle@aol.com. For more information, call Nancy Carlisle at 706-685-3212.

PRE-K CLASSES

Child and Youth Services has received funding from the Georgia Department of Early Care and Learning to operate four free Pre-K classrooms for the upcoming school year.

Eighty children will be selected to attend through a lottery. The Pre-K lottery sign-up is now through April 18 from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. in Building 359 on Ingersoll Street.

Children must be 4 years old by Sept. 1 and must live in Georgia. Classes begin in August. A Georgia Pre-K registration form must be returned to CYS during the pre-registration days. Pre-K lottery sign-up forms may be picked up at any CYS facility any time prior to April 18. For more information, contact the Child and Youth Services, Central Registration at 706-545-2079.

VOLUNTEER CEREMONY

The annual USAIC Volunteer Recognition Ceremony and Reception will be from 4 to 6 p.m. April 29 on the lawn at Riverside. If it rains, the event will be held at the Benning Club.

The National Association of Letter Carriers local branch 546 will host a food drive May 10th. All donated items will go to Fort Benning Families in need. To donate, leave nonperishable and canned items at your mailbox, so letter carriers can pick up the items.

SMALL BUSINESS AND HEALTH EXPO

The 2008 Small Business & Health Expo is coming up, May 20, 2008 at the Columbus Convention & Trade Center. With several sponsorship levels to choose from, there's a place for any type of business.

For information on how to get your booth, call 706-596-7005.

COLUMBUS BOTANICAL GARDENS

The Columbus Botanical Gardens is offering a new series of seminars, "Floral Affairs," which gives information on the topic plant. The seminars are for groups of more than six people and are $35 per group. Off site cost is $50 per group plus travel expense for groups outside of Columbus. Each program lasts about one hour. April is orchids and May is daisies. Columbus Botanical Garden is at 3603 Weems Road, Columbus.

For more information or to schedule a presentation, call 706-327-8400.

TROOPS TO TEACHERS

Troops to Teachers provides eligible service members up to $10,000 for becoming public school teachers. Under the Spouses to Teachers Program, military spouses may be reimbursed for the cost of state-required certification tests up to $600.

For more information, call 800-745-0709.

SPORTS & FITNESS

Meet Yamill Collazo B3

BENCH NOTES

ERIN NASH

Jayhawks soar

It looked like Memphis had the NCAA National Championship all wrapped up until they missed three free throws. Kansas guard Mario Chalmers sank a 3-pointer with 2.1 seconds left to tie up the game at the end of regulation.

Kansas dominated in overtime to win, 75-68. Kansas last won the national title 20 years ago. It was an awesome game, especially the last two minutes.

Spiezio pleads guilty

Third baseman and former St. Louis Cardinal Scott Spiezio pleaded guilty to charges of misdemeanor drunken driving and hit and run after an incident in December. Spiezio was accused of crashing his car into a curb and fence, then going to a neighbor's house and punching him in the face. Spiezio, who signed a minor league contract with the Atlanta Braves in March, was put on three years probation, ordered to undergo a three-month alcohol program, attend two Alcoholics Anonymous meetings and perform 80 hours of community service, along with several restitutions toward damage from the crash.

He's lucky the Braves were willing to take him on. Sounds like he might need some anger management classes, too.

Stars shine for Edwards

Although Carl Edwards won the Samsung 500 at Texas Motor Speedway on Sunday, the big talk of the weekend was the crash during qualifying Friday.

Rookie Michael McDowell was entering Turn 1 when he slid up the track, hit the wall and then rolled over eight times. He must have had his guardian angel with him because he got out of the car and walked away without a scratch. McDowell ended up finishing 33rd, not too bad for surviving a horrific crash and making his second Sprint Cup start.

What to watch

I recommend the Yankees and Red Sox matchup this weekend. The fiercest rivalry in baseball will be broadcast on Fox at 3:55 p.m. Saturday and at 8:05 p.m. Sunday on ESPN.

If golf is more your thing, the Super Bowl of golf is underway in Augusta, Ga., through Sunday. I expect Tiger Woods to win, but then again, who expected Zach Johnson to win it all last year? Coverage will begin at 4 p.m. today on ESPN and then jump to CBS for the rest of the tourney.

Torch controversy aflame

People are protesting the Summer Games set to take place in Beijing, because of China's policies toward Tibet. Officials had to snuff out the torch several times in Paris and in San Francisco, protestors scaled the Golden Gate Bridge and hung signs that read "Free Tibet."

I'm all about the right to peacefully assemble, but it just seems there's a better way to do it without putting yourself and others in harm's way. I say let the torch go on it's way and figure out some other way to protest.

75th Rangers vs. WHINSEC

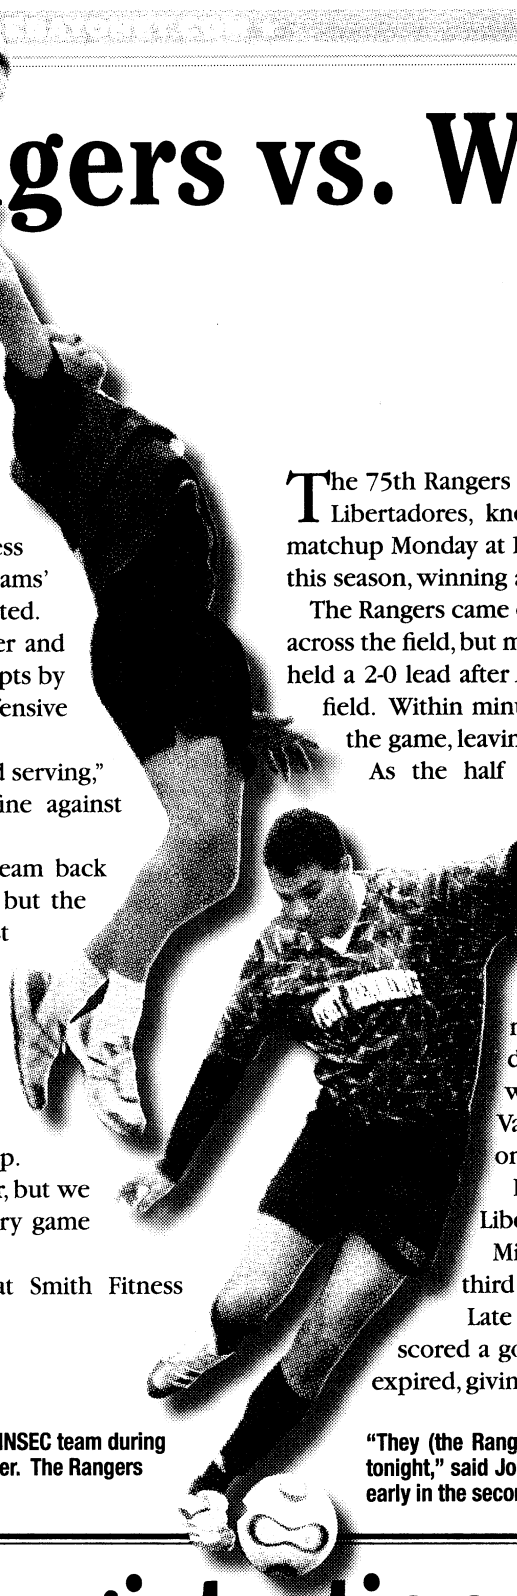
Volleyball

THE BAYONET
Mitchell Thomas IV

The 75th Rangers dominated the WHINSEC Capitanes in two straight games to win the preseason volleyball tournament April 3 at Smith Fitness Center. The 75th defeated WHINSEC in both the teams' preseason meetings and finished the preseason undefeated.

The Rangers gained an early 10-4 lead. Corey Shaffer and Matthew Weybrecht led defensively, roofing spike attempts by WHINSEC. Weybrecht also showed his ability on the offensive end making kills over the top.

"The most important thing out here is the passing and serving," Shaffer said. "If we can maintain that, we will do fine against anyone."



WHINSEC's Orlando Echevarria tried to bring his team back with aggressive serves and spike attempts off of sets, but the Rangers' defense prevailed. The Rangers won the first game, 25-15.

In the second game, WHINSEC got off to a slow start and the Rangers capitalized on WHINSEC's service and passing errors. But WHINSEC's Miguel Meja made an emphatic kill at the net to put his team on the board. The Rangers proved to be too much for WHINSEC, finishing the game with a score of 25-13 to take the championship.

"Volleyball isn't our main sport. We are great at soccer, but we gave our best," said WHINSEC's Milton Mendieta. "Every game we got better, so we're really happy with ourselves."

The volleyball regular season began Wednesday at Smith Fitness Center.

The 75th Rangers' David De La Fuente leaps to make a kill over the WHINSEC team during the first game of the championship match April 3 at Smith Fitness Center. The Rangers dominated winning the first game, 25-15, and the second game, 25-13.

Soccer

THE BAYONET
Mitchell Thomas IV

The 75th Rangers were finally able to defeat their nemesis, the WHINSEC Libertadores, knocking them off, 6-3, in a testy preseason semifinal matchup Monday at Doughboy Stadium. The two teams split their meetings this season, winning a game apiece.

The Rangers came out focused on defense in the first half, made bad passes across the field, but made adjustments quickly. By the middle of the half, they held a 2-0 lead after Anthony Vasquez scored a goal from the middle of the field. Within minutes, Aaron Deporter scored the Rangers' third goal of the game, leaving WHINSEC shut out in the first.

As the half came to a close, players from both teams collided, causing a near scuffle.

"We have got to play a smart game out here," said Cesar Veliz, the Rangers' coach and player. This is our fifth meeting with them in the last two seasons, and we know how tough they are. This is a big rivalry."

Early in the second, the Libertadores made the rivalry more interesting with aggressive offense and tight defense. The Libertadores' Joelson Silva scored a goal, which was followed by another goal by teammate Victor Varela less than 10 seconds later, bringing the score within one point.

Rough play continued in the second half and two Libertadores players went down with minor injuries.

Midway through the half, Vasquez scored his second and third goals of the game to give the Rangers a 5-2 lead.

Late in the half, Libertadores' Jose Bueno, hit paydirt when he scored a goal, to make the score 5-3. But it was too late and time expired, giving the Rangers a hard-fought win.

"They (the Rangers) are a young team and they were stronger and faster than us tonight," said Joelson Silva. Silva scored the first goal for the WHINSEC Libertadores early in the second half.

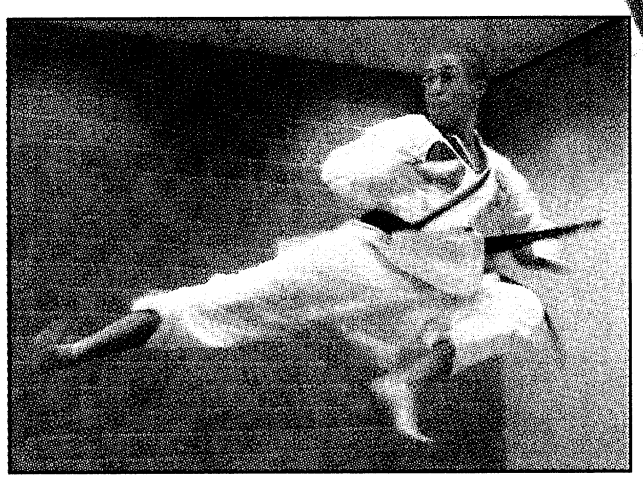
CYS has early registration for fall sports

THE BAYONET
Mitchell Thomas IV

Child and Youth Services is holding early registration for fall football, soccer and cheerleading this month.

Flag football and cheerleading were cancelled last year due to lack of participation. Fall soccer for 7 and older leagues was also canceled.

Dori Wagner, sport specialist for CYS, said early registration should help boost numbers, because many Families travel during the summer months and are unable to sign up during regular registration periods.



Wagner hopes to field enough teams for independent tackle football leagues on post. The tackle football teams last year were a part of Columbus Youth Football.

Flag football will be available for kids 6 to15 years old. Cheerleading is for girls 6 to 15.
The girls cheer for football teams in the same age groups.

Wagner said CYS is also looking for volunteer coaches in each of the sports. Adults interested in coaching can volunteer at anytime. Applications can be filled out during business hours at Youth Services, Building 359. There is no experience necessary to be a coach, Wagner said.

The fee to participate in CYS sports is $40 per sport. For more information, call Wagner at 706-545-1853.

With less than four years of Tae Kwon Do under his black belt, 17-year-old says martial arts has changed his life

'Only your best'

THE BAYONET
Mitchell Thomas IV

Very few people take full advantage of Tae Kwon Do, said Miguel Rodriguez. The 17-year-old Columbus High School senior, said martial arts has shaped him in ways he would have never believed possible.

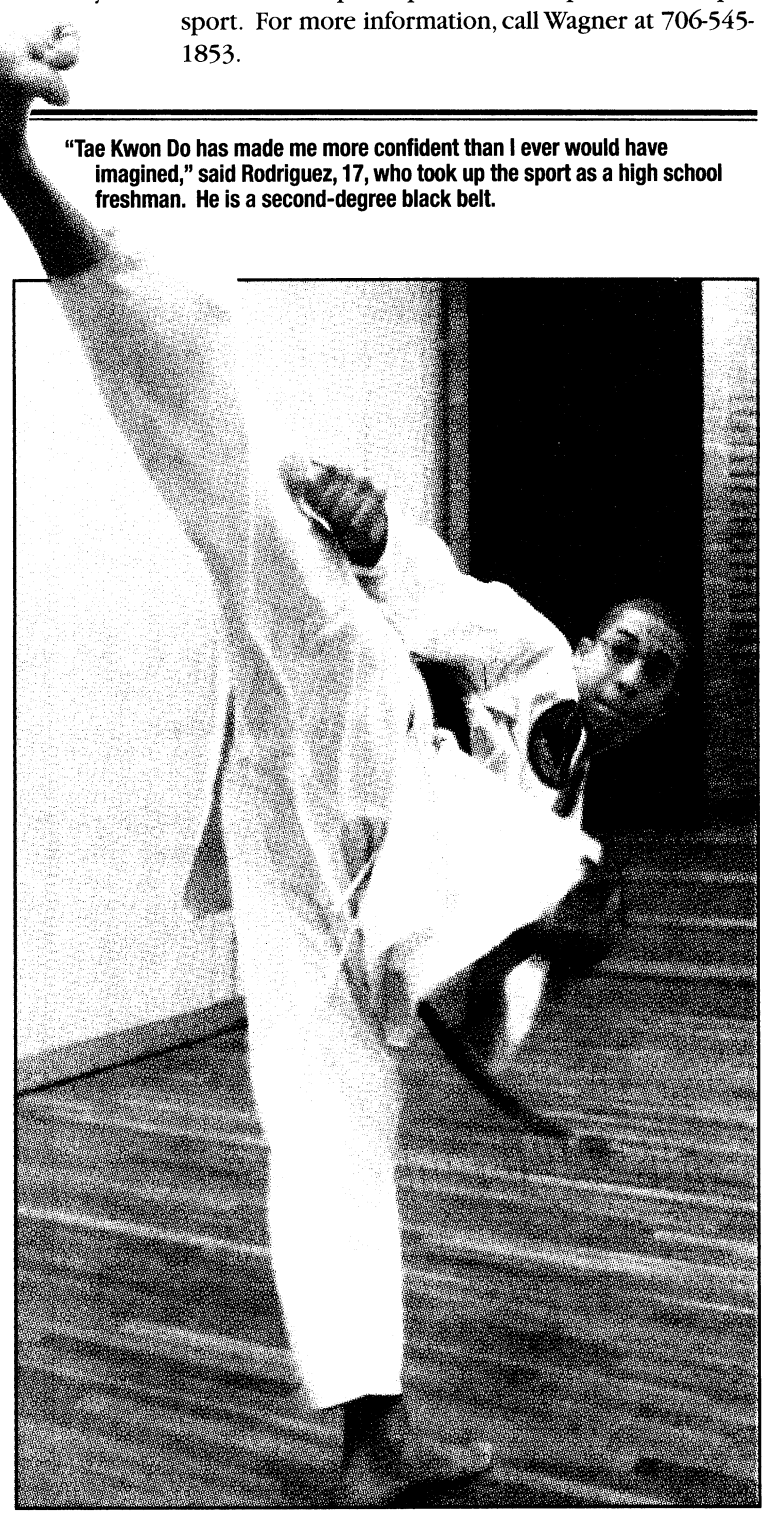
"It has taught me discipline, and I've never been in this good of shape or as flexible as I am now," Rodriguez said. "Tae Kwon Do has made me more confident than I ever would have imagined."

Rodriguez, a second-degree black belt, has been taking Tae Kwon Do for three and a half years and has been teaching the art for two years.

"He doesn't let you slack off," said Johnny Lawler, a 12-year-old student in Rodriguez's advanced Tae Kwon Do class on post. "He makes you do it right."

Rodriguez didn't always do things right. From the age of 7, he had a passion for sports — namely basketball. But as a freshman player at Columbus, his basketball career was cut short because of low grades. Rodriguez knew he needed something else to help him become a more disciplined student.

He decided to take a Tae Kwon Do lesson at his older brother's suggestion. After one lesson, he was hooked and he began taking classes regularly at Fort Benning with Clayton and Barbara Coleman.



"My basketball coaches never really pushed me, but on my first day with Tae Kwon Do, they pushed me immediately," Rodriguez said. "My mindset started to shift, and I immediately wanted to do my best."

But Rodriguez Sr. wasn't convinced yet. He refused to pay for his son's first "belt test" until he was convinced martial arts was more than a passing fancy.

Rodriguez's talent in martial arts developed quickly. He received his black belt in less than two years. He also improved his grades to a 3.8 GPA.

"Tae Kwon Do has made me more confident than I ever would have imagined," said Rodriguez, 17, who took up the sport as a high school freshman. He is a second-degree black belt.

Skating instructor teaches safety, success, service

THE BAYONET
Mitchell Thomas IV

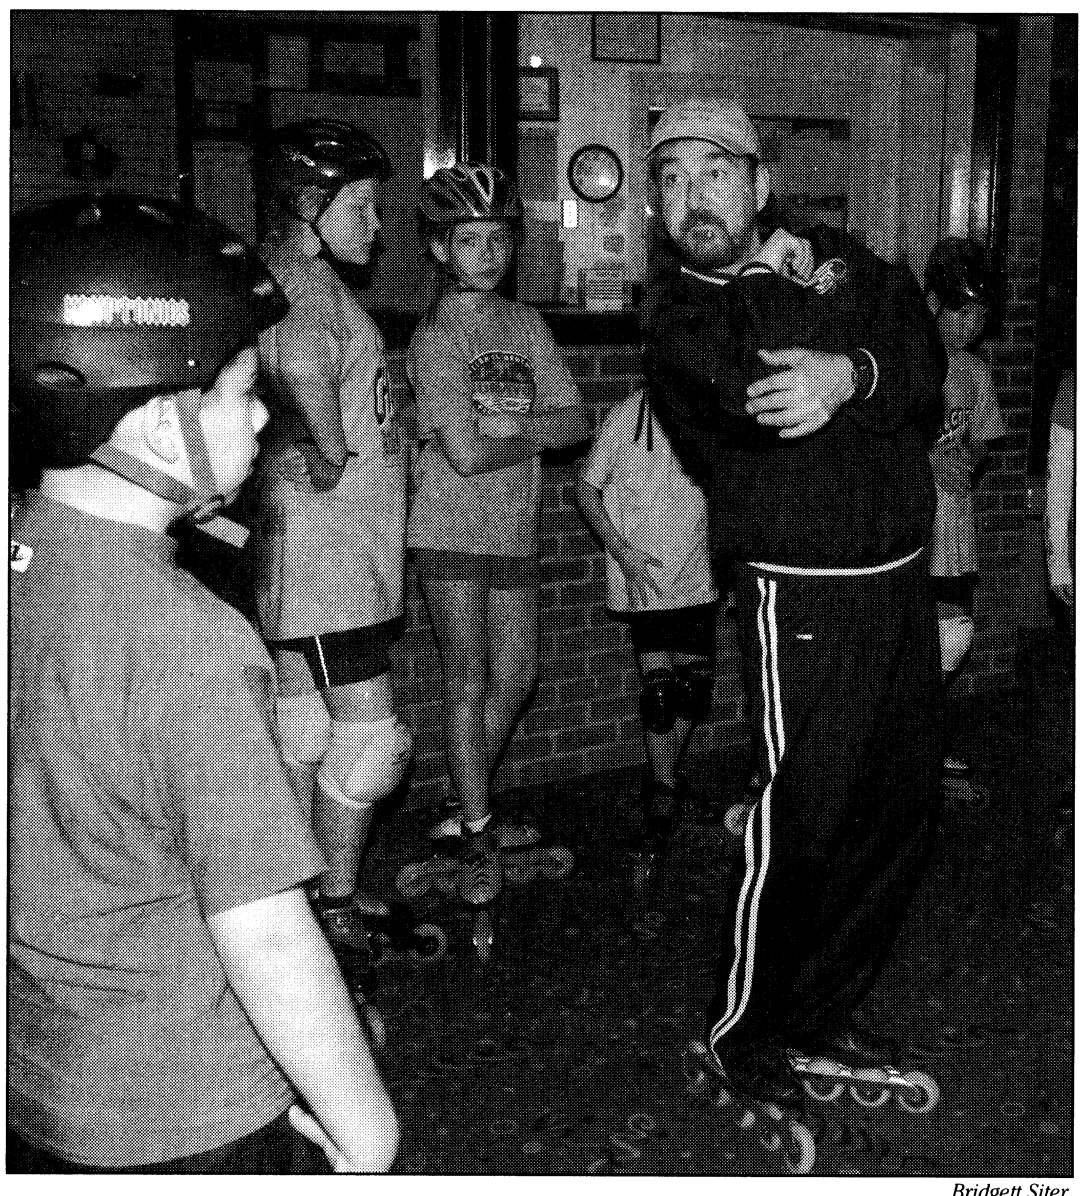
Yamill Collazo didn't plan to teach speed skating. But after 20 years, he realizes it was his fate. Collazo, the instructor for the Grand Tourismo Speed Skating team in Columbus, has made believers out of hundreds of skaters young and old.

"I love doing this," Collazo said. "There's nothing more fulfilling than seeing a group of people believing in themselves and showing a positive attitude and passion about skating."

His team, which competed in the USA Roller Sports National Speed Skating Championship in Lincoln, Neb., last year, consists of nearly 40 skaters from 4 to 60.

Collazo, the information specialist at WHINSEC's John B. Amos Library, began skating at an early age. As an undersized kid, it was the only sport he found success in.

"I tried out for football, basketball and baseball, but I'd never make the teams because I was just too small," Collazo said. "But I felt comfortable at the skating rink, and I got better and better. I always tell my students that skating is one sport where size isn't an issue."



He went on to make two national tournament appearances before the age of 18.

At 31, Collazo returned to skating because his 4-year-old daughter Adrian showed interest in the sport. They began taking classes with David Downing, the founder of GT Speed, in Cummings, Ga., in 1988. A year later, Collazo began teaching in Columbus.

His skaters have made it to nationals each season he's coached. A number of Collazo's skaters have won world championships, including Ryan Cox, one of three racers he's trained, who made the U.S Olympic team in speed ice skating.

Allison Pierce, one of Collazo's students, is ranked No. 1 in the world in the Tiny Tot Division.

"I like him (Collazo) because he's funny and he yells," said 5-year-old Allison, who broke the 100-, 200- and 300-meter records in the 2006 nationals. "It makes me better as a skater."

Bridgett Siter
Yamill Collazo, coach of the Grand Tourismo Speed skate team, teaches beginner skaters how to fall correctly so they don't injure their knees or elbows.

Collazo said he's a boisterous and strict teacher, because he believes in discipline and respect, traits he learned growing up in a military Family. His father served in the Army for 34 years. Yamill served in the Navy for four years.

"The parents of my students understand that I have a different way of teaching, and they have to be comfortable with it," Collazo said. "I speak up, and I expect the kids to do the same."

Collazo said his younger students gain confidence with skating just as he did as a child.

Jimmy Decker, the 6-year-old son of Maj. Carl Decker, has been skating for two years.

"When Jimmy first started, he was afraid of sports and afraid of losing," his mother said. "Now the confidence he's gained translates to the other parts of his life. We love what skating has done for him."

Taylor Nichols, a 15-year-old from Albany, Ga., has been skating for a year and a half. Skating has kept her away from peer pressure and drugs, she said.

"I used to get in trouble a lot because I hung out with the wrong crowd," Nichols said. "But now when friends ask me to go out, I know I have to train. And if I want to get better, I know I need to stay away from the wrong things."

But the main reason for Collazo's "yelling" is safety. He conducts community roller skating safety classes every Saturday at Lambert Skate Center.

"This is a dangerous sport," Collazo said. "These kids are going at 14, 15 and in the fastest cases 20 miles an hour on a 100-mile track in 9.9 seconds. Everyone has to pay attention."

Collazo will host a Safe Kids Coalition safety class Saturday at Lambert Skate Center, children 14 and younger will receive a helmet and the class for free.

Collazo also teaches and mentors coaches throughout the U.S. and other countries including Columbia, El Salvador, Canada and France.

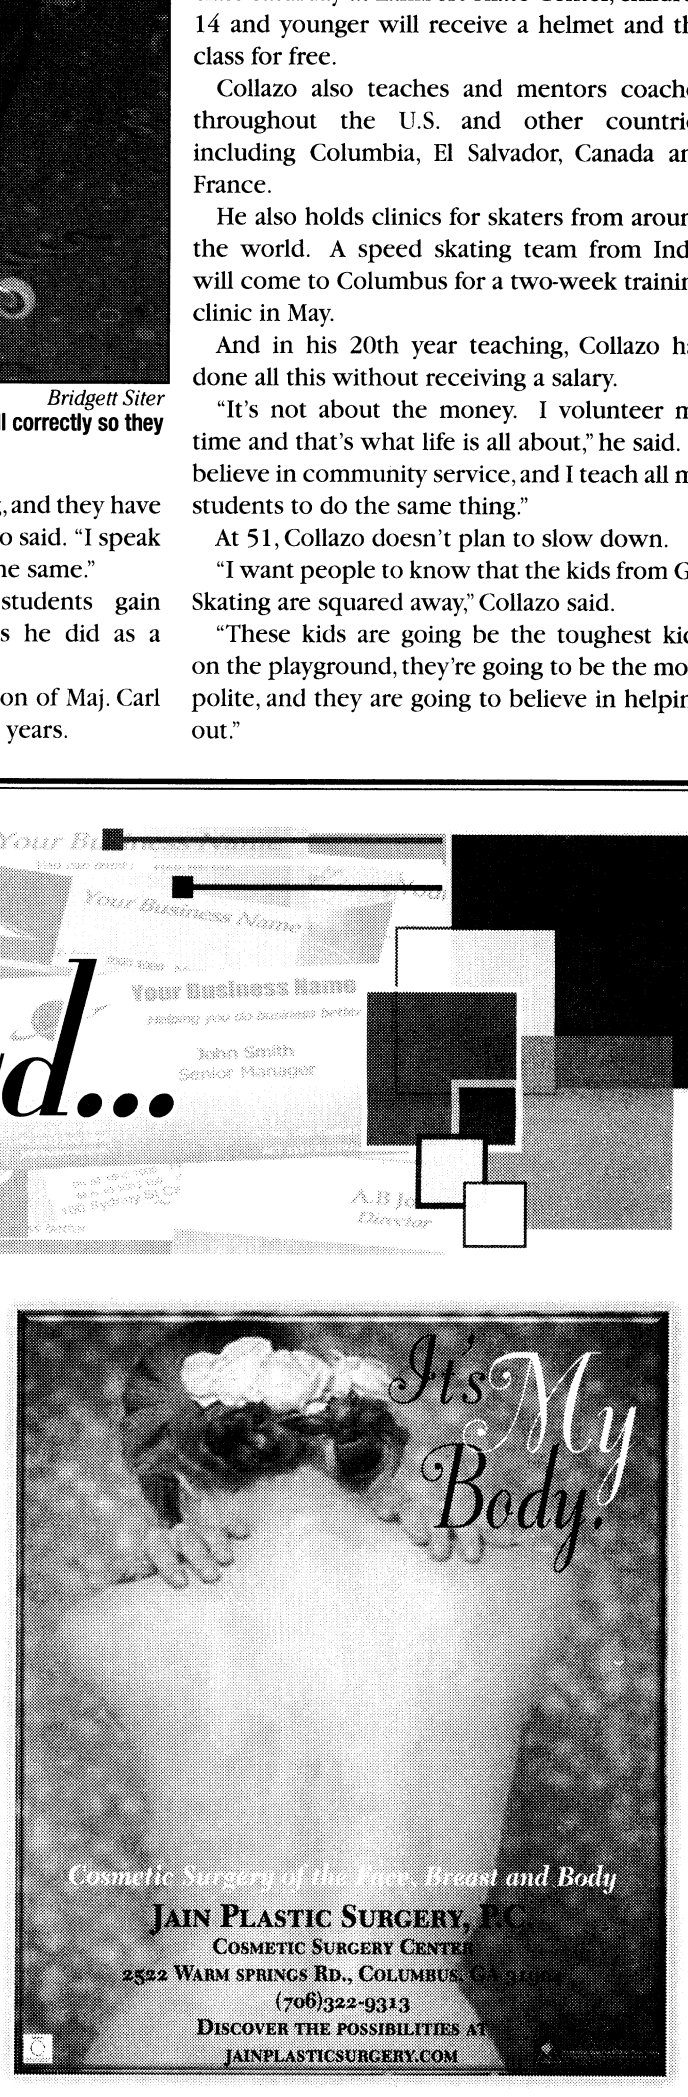
He also holds clinics for skaters from around the world. A speed skating team from India will come to Columbus for a two-week training clinic in May.

And in his 20th year teaching, Collazo has done all this without receiving a salary.

"It's not about the money. I volunteer my time and that's what life is all about," he said. "I believe in community service, and I teach all my students to do the same thing."

At 51, Collazo doesn't plan to slow down.

"I want people to know that the kids from GT Skating are squared away," Collazo said.



"These kids are going be the toughest kids on the playground, they're going to be the most polite, and they are going to believe in helping out."

Jesse Taylor and Tom Siter Jr. are pictured here with the "trophy" they earned Saturday at the Mountain Man March in Gatlinburg, Tenn. Taylor, Siter and their teammates, Lori Smith, Ken Wetherill and Don Vail, took first place in the civilian category of the event, a 26.2-mile race through the Smoky Mountains. Together, Taylor and Siter were the fifth to cross the finish line out of more than 100 competitors. The Mountain Man was sponsored by the University of Tennessee's JROTC Ranger Company.

Miguel Rodriguez has taught Tae Kwon Do to Fort Benning kids for two years. He has been teaching at Tae Kwon Do Plus in Columbus for nearly a year.

Teen: Teaches Tae Kwon Do on Fort Benning

Rodriguez has competed in numerous tournaments and took second place in both forms and sparring in a 2007 tournament.

He has taught school-age kids at Fort Benning for the last two years and was hired last year by Monika Bishop, owner of Tae Kwon Do Plus in Columbus.

"Miguel has a very good work ethic, and he has all the tools you want in an instructor. He has respect and discipline," Bishop said. "He's a great role model for the kids."

Rodriguez is known for telling his students to give "only your best."

"You can't compare yourself to anyone else. You have to do what you can do to the best of your ability," he said. "You should never quit until you're sweating, feeling like you're about to pass out and have reached that level where you say, 'This is it, I've done my best.'"

Rodriguez said he adheres to the seven tenets of Tae Kwon Do — honor, courtesy, integrity, perseverance, self-control, courage and community.

At the end of the month, Rodriguez will test to become a certified instructor, which will allow him to own a school or manage a club.

Although Rodriguez plans to study Tae Kwon Do for the rest of his life, he doesn't see it as a career path. He plans to attend college and study psychology.

"This isn't my plan in life," Rodriguez said. "I want to help people in other ways. Helping people is what makes me feel good inside."

Rodriguez said his belief in God, support from Family, help from his instructors, and discovery of martial arts made him better man.

"Tae Kwon Do has made me study more, practice more and respect more," Rodriguez said. "If you had seen me four years ago, you would have never seen the person I am today."

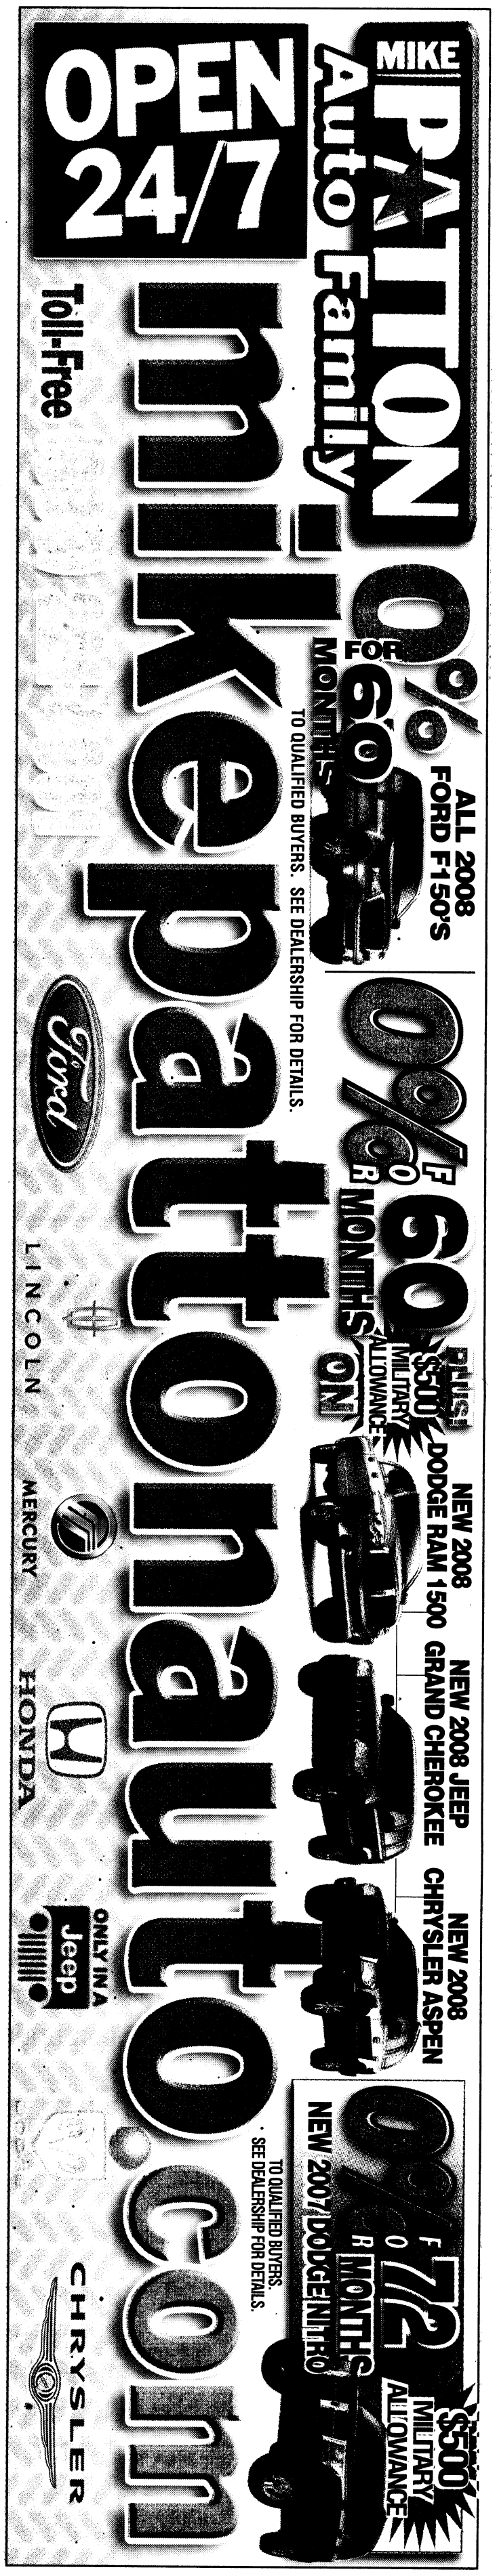
SERVICE CREDIT UNION



For People on the Move

NCUA

*Eligibility determined by credit score. Match+ applies to auto loan terms and restrictions that are consistent with Service Credit Union's (SCU) 60-72 month loan rates. Other loan terms do not apply. If SCU can not beat competitors' APR, we will credit $100 to a qualifying member's SCU account up to 30 days after SCU application, upon the applicant presenting a copy of their signed loan note & disclosure from the competitor. Dealer financing, non-financial loan rates and terms, and the institutions predetermined by the credit union are excluded from this promotion. Offer subject to change without notice. Rate shown is Annual Percentage Rate (APR), accurate as of 4/1/08, and subject to change without notice. The APR reflects a .35% reduction for direct deposit and automatic payment (example: 4.24 APR less .35% = 3.89%) Example: A $15,000 auto loan with a rate of 3.89% APR for 60 months: Monthly payment is approximately $275.51. Total finance charge is approximately $1530.34. Offer available on new, used, or current SCU auto loans qualify for additional funds of $2,500 or more.

Tom and Ray say parking a vehicle with a manual transmission in reverse is a gamble

KING FEATURES SYNDICATE
Tom and Ray Magliozzi

Dear Tom and Ray:

Several years ago, my Ford Ranger coasted out of my driveway at about 2 a.m. and rammed a minivan across the road. (I parked on a very steep driveway.)

I learned to drive on my grandparents' cherry farm and was taught to put everything — tractors, pickups, cars, anything with a standard transmission — into reverse when I parked it, because that would keep it from rolling backward. It seemed to work for many years ... until that night, at least.

My question is: Will putting a vehicle in reverse make it less likely to roll backward down a hill? It seems counterintuitive. When I got to my truck that night, the door was locked and it was in reverse.

— Brendan

Ray: Will parking a manual-transmission car in reverse make it less likely to roll down a hill? Yes. Will it guarantee that the car won't roll down a hill? Absolutely not.

Tom: Whether you put the transmission in a forward or reverse gear makes less difference than the ratio of the gear (the compression in the cylinders will make the engine resist moving in either direction — forward or backward).

You want a high gear ratio in order to give the wheels a mechanical disadvantage. First and reverse have the highest gear ratios.

Ray: By putting the vehicle in gear, you're making a direct mechanical connection between the engine and the wheels. You're making it so the wheels can't turn unless they force the engine to turn.

Tom: So, what you've done, when you put the car in gear and connect the engine to the wheels, is made a bet that the compression inside the cylinders is strong enough to counteract the effect of gravity trying to pull the weight of the car down the hill. And on mild-enough hills, you'll win that bet.

Ray: But you could lose the bet on steep hills — or if your engine's compression is low, or if your clutch is slipping, or if the transmission slips out of gear, or if there's ice on the ground.

Tom: That's why we have this relatively new invention called — pay attention, Brendan — the parking brake.

Ray: Putting a vehicle in gear — even the most mechanically disadvantageous gear — doesn't guarantee that your car won't roll down a hill. So we always suggest that you put the car in first or reverse and apply the parking brake.

Tom: If your Ranger used to hold on that same hill, under all the same conditions, then something may well have changed, and you'll want to have a mechanic check out the condition of the clutch and get a compression test.

But regardless, even when everything else is working perfectly, you still should make a habit of using the parking brake.

Ray: It's good insurance, Brendan. It's why my brother's dates always bring two paper bags with them — one to put over my brother's head, and one for themselves, in case my brother's falls off.

Keep your car on the road and out of the repair shop by ordering Tom and Ray's pamphlet "Ten Ways You May Be Ruining Your Car Without Even Knowing It!"

Send $4.75 (check or money order) to Ruin, P.O. Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475.

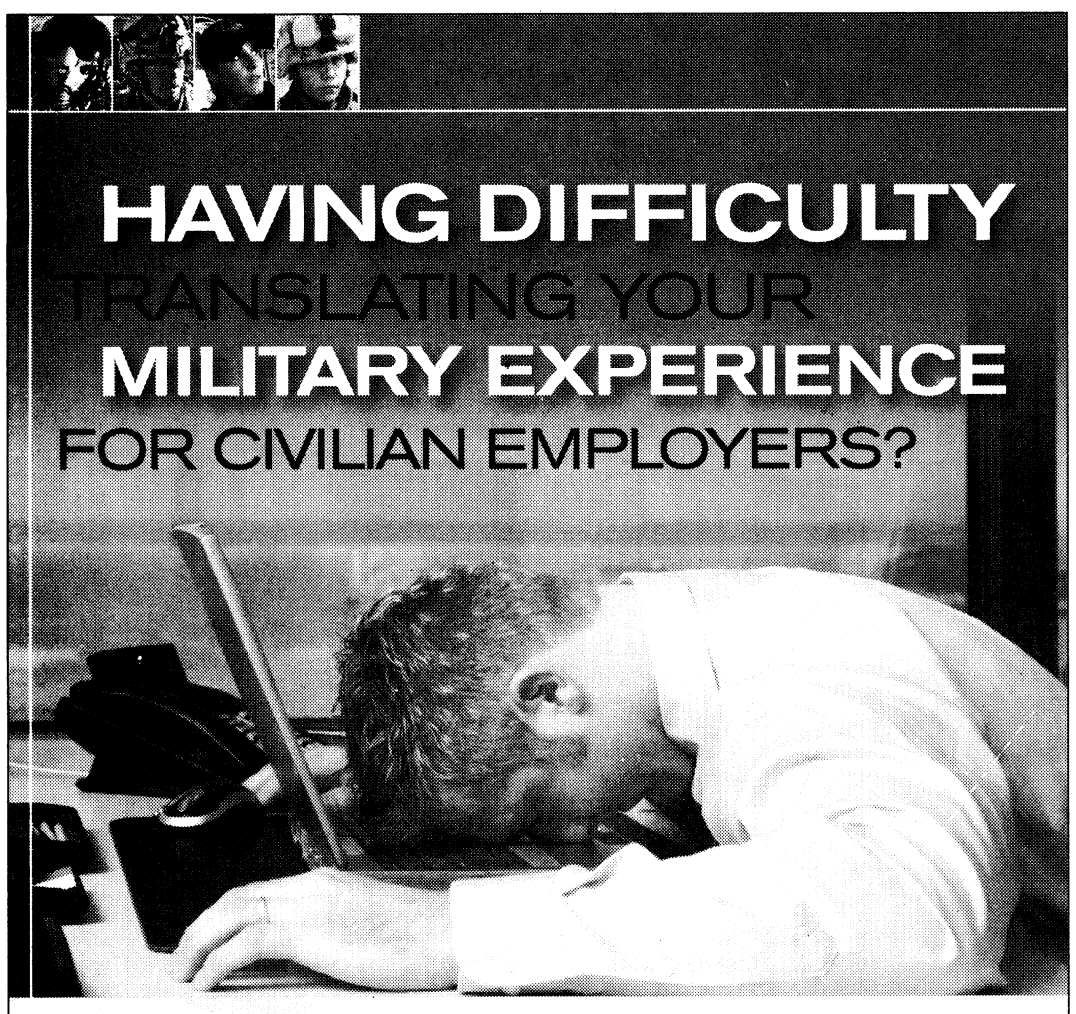
The Army announced its intention to prepare an Environmental Impact Statement (EIS) for managing and accommodating increased training requirements at Fort Benning, Georgia (Maneuver Center of Excellence EIS) in the Federal Register on March 18, 2008. This proposed action is needed to transform the Army, meet the increased national security and defense requirements of the 21st century, maintain training and operational readiness levels of the force, and preserve a high quality of life for U.S. Soldiers and families.

This announcement, on April 2, 2008, initiates the start of the 30-day public involvement process. As part of this process, the Army is holding a scoping meeting at the location below and invites your participation. This meeting will be held in an open house format (meaning there are no formal presentations), and your participation will assist Army representatives identify issues/concerns associated with the proposed action, define the scope of analysis for the EIS, and identify reasonable alternatives and mitigation.



Army representatives, displays, and informational material will be available at the meeting on Tuesday, April 22nd, 2008 from 3 p.m. to 5 p.m. and 6 p.m. to 8 p.m. The meeting will be held at the:

Elizabeth Bradley Turner Center, Founders Hall, Room 141
Columbus State University on the corner of East Lindsey and College Drives

You may submit written comments to:

Mr. John Brent, Fort Benning Directorate of Public Works
Environmental Management Division
Bldg. #6 (Meloy Hall), Room 310, Fort Benning, GA 31905

Although Fort Benning will accept comments throughout the process, we recommend that your scoping comments be sent by May 1, 2008 to ensure equitable consideration in the draft EIS. If you have any further questions about the Transformation proposal, you may contact Ms. Monica Manganaro, (706) 545-3438 Fort Benning Public Affairs Office, or Mr. Brandon Cockrell at (706) 545-3210.

Wild things

Oxbow will host spring bird walks the first Saturday of the month at 9 a.m. for those 7 and older. The hourlong walks are led by experienced birders, who will discuss ways to attract and recognize different birds. Oxbow provides field guides and binoculars, or participants can bring their own.

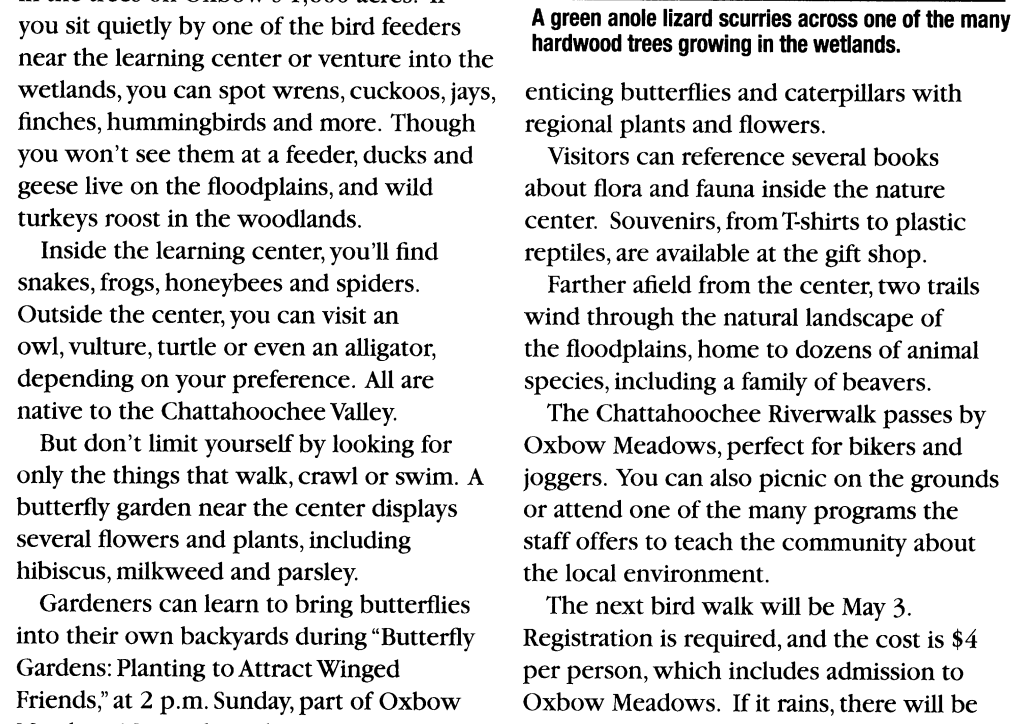
A vocal and colorful variety of birds nest in the trees on Oxbow's 1,600 acres. If you sit quietly by one of the bird feeders near the learning center or venture into the wetlands, you can spot wrens, cuckoos, jays, finches, hummingbirds and more. Though you won't see them at a feeder, ducks and geese live on the floodplains, and wild turkeys roost in the woodlands.

Inside the learning center, you'll find snakes, frogs, honeybees and spiders. Outside the center, you can visit an owl, vulture, turtle or even an alligator, depending on your preference. All are native to the Chattahoochee Valley.

But don't limit yourself by looking for only the things that walk, crawl or swim. A butterfly garden near the center displays several flowers and plants, including hibiscus, milkweed and parsley.

Gardeners can learn to bring butterflies into their own backyards during "Butterfly Gardens: Planting to Attract Winged Friends," at 2 p.m. Sunday, part of Oxbow Meadows' Second Sunday Series. Taught by a master gardener, the program costs $2 per person and covers easy techniques for enticing butterflies and caterpillars with regional plants and flowers.

A green anole lizard scurries across one of the many hardwood trees growing in the wetlands.



Visitors can reference several books about flora and fauna inside the nature center. Souvenirs, from T-shirts to plastic reptiles, are available at the gift shop.

Farther afield from the center, two trails wind through the natural landscape of the floodplains, home to dozens of animal species, including a family of beavers.

The Chattahoochee Riverwalk passes by Oxbow Meadows, perfect for bikers and joggers. You can also picnic on the grounds or attend one of the many programs the staff offers to teach the community about the local environment.

The next bird walk will be May 3. Registration is required, and the cost is $4 per person, which includes admission to Oxbow Meadows. If it rains, there will be an indoor program. General admission to Oxbow is a $1 donation.

For more information, call 706-687-4090.

The African spur-thighed tortoise is the only non-native species at Oxbow. Gopher tortoises and box turtles live outside the center and several aquatic turtles, including an alligator snapping turtle, live inside.

A screech owl perches on a branch inside its cage at Oxbow Meadows' environmental learning center. Other birds on display at Oxbow Meadows include the barred owl, great horned owl, black vulture and red-tailed hawk. The center is located at 3535 South Lumpkin Road, near the South Lumpkin Road gate to Fort Benning.

Fishing night set for Tuesday

THE BAYONET
Rachel L. Watkins

It's time to get those fishing poles and bait ready for the Family fishing night from 6 to 8 p.m. Tuesday at Russ Pond.

"It's a great time for Families to get out and spend some quality time together," said Darlene Hines, outdoor recreation specialist of the Directorate of Family Morale, Welfare and Recreation.

Don't have a reel, rod or bait? Outdoor Recreation will supply equipment and bait for free, but in order to get a rod or reel, it must be reserved by Monday. To reserve equipment, call Hines at 706-545-9636.

Fly Fishing for Vets will host fly fishing demonstrations. Board games are available for those who don't want to fish.

Outdoor Rec will sponsor Family fishing nights once a month. The next one is from 6 to 8 p.m. May 13.

For directions to Russ Pond, go to www.benningmwr.com/odradmin.htm.

Warm Springs preserves Roosevelt's legacy

THE BAYONET
Rachel Houston

The lure of a reported cure for polio in the mineral-filled pools in Warm Springs, Ga., first drew the attention of one of the U.S.'s most memorable presidents, Franklin Delano Roosevelt.

FDR visited the town in 1924, almost a decade before he became president and three years after he developed polio. Though he didn't find a miracle cure, he did find relief and benefit from swimming in the 88-degree waters.

The natural spring water that flows out of the earth at Warm Springs is rich in minerals, which make people float easily in the pools.

FDR was enchanted by the area, and while running for the presidency in 1932, he built a small six-room cottage on the side of Pine Mountain that became known as the Little White House.

Step through the doorway of one room in the museum and you step into a 1930s kitchen with an authentic 1930s radio playing FDR's fireside chats.

Then step into the Little White House and see the home almost exactly as it looked during FDR's time there. The estate includes guest and servants' quarters and a bump gate that opened when bumped by the front of a car.

FDR was having his portrait painted in the house when he had a massive stroke and collapsed in 1945. The resulting "Unfinished Portrait" hangs in the museum at the historic site, and the artist, Madame Elizabeth Shoumatoff, finished a second painting from memory and photos, entitled the "Finished Portrait," that also hangs in the museum.

On the grounds are little green posts used by a company of Marines who guarded the estate while the president visited. The Marines always preceeded the president, and when the townspeople saw the Marines come into town, they knew the president was coming.

FDR visited his neighbors frequently while in Warm Springs, and his experiences with the people were influential in the development of New Deal policies, such as the Rural Electrification Administration and Civilian Conservation Corps.

The president also founded the Roosevelt-Warm Springs Institute for Rehabilitation, and a small museum at the pools tells of the institute's history. The pools and museum are located about a mile from the Little White House.

A bronze statue of FDR is located at Dowdell's Knob in the F. D. Roosevelt State Park, the president's favorite picnic spot. The statue, which is the first depicting the president with his leg braces visible, was unveiled April 12, 2007, the 62nd anniversary of his death.

The Little White House is located just south of Warm Springs, about 40 miles from Columbus. To get there, take 85 (Manchester Expressway) north and follow the signs to the historic site. Admission ranges from $4 to $7. For more information, go to the Web site or call 706-655-5870.

This weekend in Warm Springs

The U.S. Army Infantry Center Band and the U.S. Marine Corps Color Guard will perform at 1:30 p.m. Saturday on the 63rd anniversary of FDR's death.

The Spring Fling Saturday and Sunday will feature arts, crafts, antiques, food and a children's area. There will be a parade at 11 a.m. Saturday.

Opening Today
PROM NIGHT

Donna's (Brittany Snow) senior prom is supposed to be the best night of her life, but a dark secret returns from the past to haunt her and her friends in the form of a vengeful killer on their prom night.

Prom Night is rated PG-13 for violence, terror, sexual material, underage drinking and language.

STREET KINGS

Tom Ludlow (Keanu Reeves), a veteran LAPD detective, sets out to discover the killers of his former partner, Detective Terrance Washington. Ludlow's supervisor, Captain Wander (Forest Whitaker), must keep him within the confines of the law and out of the clutches of Internal Affairs Captain Biggs (Hugh Laurie). Ludlow teams up with a young homicide detective to track Washington's killers through Los Angeles and bring them to justice.

Street Kings is rated R for violence and language.

Also Playing
LEATHERHEADS

In 1925, Dodge Connolly (George Clooney) is a brash football hero determined to guide his team to glory. But when the league faces collapse, Dodge convinces a college football star, the handsome, athletic war hero Carter Rutherford (John Krasinski) to join his ragtag ranks.

Meanwhile, journalist Lexie (Renee Zellweger), suspects there are holes in Carter's war story, but while she digs, the two teammates start to become serious rivals for her fickle affections.

Dodge must fight to keep his guys together and to get the girl of his dreams, while bringing the sport he loves to the country's attention.

Leatherheads is rated PG-13 for language.

NIM'S ISLAND

Anything can happen on Nim's (Abigail Breslin) Island, a magical place ruled by a young girl's imagination. It is an existence that mirrors that of her favorite literary character, Alex Rover (Gerard Butler).

But Alexandra (Jodie Foster), the author of the Rover books, leads a reclusive life in the big city. When Nim's father goes missing from their island, a twist of fate brings her together with Alexandra. Now, they must draw courage from their fictional hero to conquer Nim's Island.

THE RUINS

Four American friends (Jonathan Tucker, Jena Malone, Shawn Ashmore and Laura Ramsey) on vacation in Cancun, Mexico, meet a German tourist (Joe Anderson) who persuades them to join his hunt for his younger brother, last seen with his girlfriend near some mysterious ruins. However, once the group arrives at the Mayan ruins, things start to go wrong.

The Ruins is rated R for violence, gruesome images, language, sexuality and nudity.

Needing to pay for his M.I.T. tuition, the brilliant Ben Campbell (Jim Sturgess) joins a group of the school's gifted students, led by math professor Micky Rosa (Kevin Spacey), which counts cards at blackjack each weekend in Vegas. Seduced by the money and his teammate, Jill (Kate Bosworth), Ben pushes the limits, staying one step ahead of the casinos' menacing enforcer: Cole Williams (Laurence Fishburne).

RUN, FAT BOY, RUN

A charming but oblivious overweight guy (Simon Pegg) leaves his fiancée (Thandie Newton) on their wedding day only to discover years later that he really loves her. To win her back, he must finish a marathon while making her realize that her new handsome, wealthy fiancé (Hank Azaria) is wrong for her.

Run, Fat Boy, Run is rated PG-13 for rude and sexual behavior, nudity, language and smoking.

STOP-LOSS

Decorated Iraq war hero Sgt. Brandon King (Ryan Phillippe) returns to his Texas hometown following his tour of duty. Alongside Steve Shriver (Channing Tatum), King tries to adapt to civilian life.

When the Army orders him back to Iraq, it upends his world, testing the bonds of family and friendship, the limits of love and the value of honor.

Stop-Loss is rated R for violence and language.

SUPERHERO MOVIE

After being bitten by a genetically altered dragonfly, high school loser Rick Riker (Drake Bell) develops incredible strength and armored skin. Riker becomes a costumed crime fighter known as "The Dragonfly."

However, Lou Landers (Christopher McDonald) stands in the way. After an experiment gone wrong, Lou develops the power to steal a person's life force and becomes the villain, "The Hourglass." With unimaginable strength, unbelievable speed and deeply uncomfortable tights, will Riker be able to stop Landers in time?

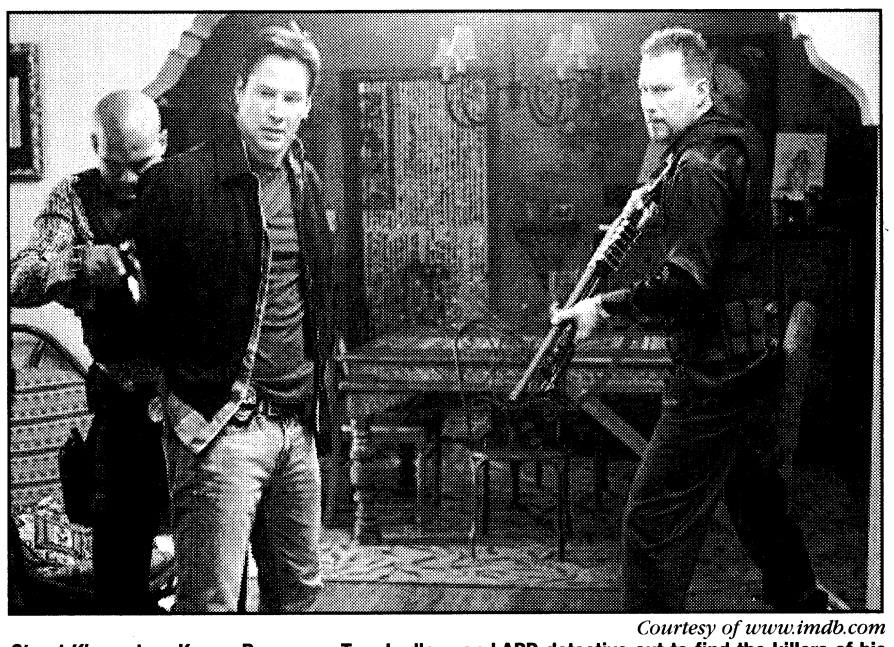
DRILLBIT TAYLOR



Ryan, Wade and Emmit (Troy Gentile, Nate Hartley and David Dorfman) are excited about their first day of high school until they meet school bully Filkins (Alex Frost). Before they become completely engulfed in Filkins' reign of terror, they seek out some protection by placing an ad in Soldier of Fortune magazine. Their best and cheapest response comes from Drillbit Taylor (Owen Wilson), a down-on-his luck soldier of fortune who lives a homeless — he likes to say "home-free" — existence on the beach. Taylor enrolls the children in physical and mental training.

SHUTTER

Photographer Ben (Joshua Jackson) and his new wife Jane (Rachel Taylor) thought Ben's new assignment, a fashion shoot in Tokyo, would be a working honeymoon. While driving down a mountain road leading to Mt. Fuji, they crash into a woman standing in the middle of the road. Upon regaining consciousness, the couple cannot find any trace of the girl, but strange white blurs begin to appear on Ben's photos after he arrives in Tokyo, and Jane suspects it is the ghost of the girl, angry at being left to die.
